President addresses economy

WASHINGTON—Americans are not quitters, and the country can overcome the difficulties facing it, President Barack Obama said Tuesday in his first speech before a joint session of Congress.

In a speech mainly dedicated to the economic crisis facing the world, the president also honored the nation's men and women in uniform, vowing to increase the size of the Army and Marine Corps, raise military pay and provide the medical care veterans deserve.

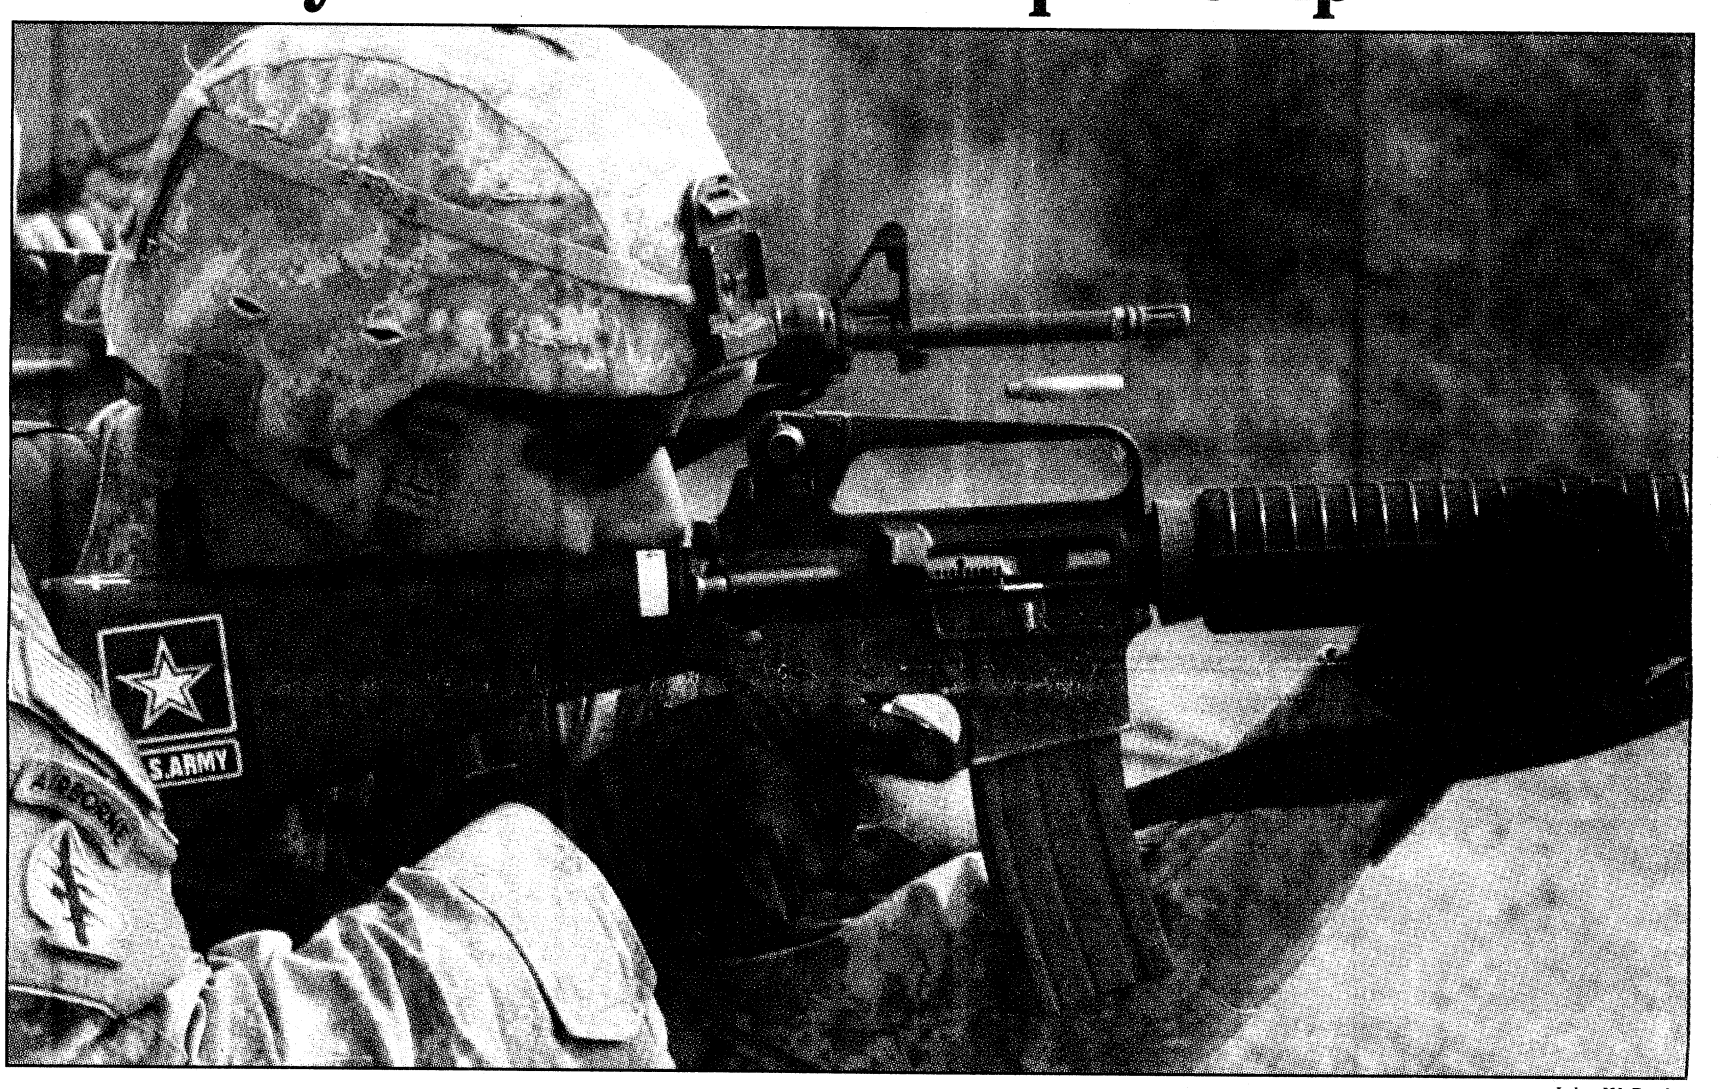

While not formally a State of the Union Address, the speech had all the trappings. Service members and veterans from the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan were among the guests sitting with first lady Michelle Obama.

The troops received a standing ovation from both houses of Congress when the president said Americans are united in sending them one message: "We honor your service, we are inspired by your sacrifice and you have our unyielding support."

Obama vowed that the budget he will send to Congress in the next few days would include the full cost of fighting in Iraq and Afghanistan.

This week, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit conducted the All-Army Small Arms Championships, while hosting the commander of the Lebanese Army, GEN Jean T. Kahwagi.

Kahwagi stopped by AMU to view weapons testing. During Kahwagi's visit to Fort Benning, he toured the Henry Caro NCO Academy to learn about the U.S. Army's professional NCO Corps, watching Soldiers in the Warrior Leaders Course and Advanced Leaders Course train. Included on the visit was Airborne training and watching Infantry Basic Officer Leaders Course Soldiers conduct machine gun training.

This wasn't the general's first visit to Fort Benning. He attended the Infantry Officer Basic Course in 1980.

AER helps community in emergencies

THE BAYONET

If there's a way to assist a Soldier, staff at Fort Benning's Army Emergency Relief will find it.

AER, a private nonprofit organization that provides Soldiers and family members with emergency financial relief, gives out millions of dollars each year for emergencies such as overdue rent, car repair and emergency travel for illness or death in the family. In 2008, AER provided $2.9 million in assistance to 2,365 cases on Fort Benning, a 32 percent monetary increase over 2007.

"We're here to assist them," said Donna Carter, AER specialist. "It's an organization they know they can come to and get the assistance and be able to correct any financial issues they're having."

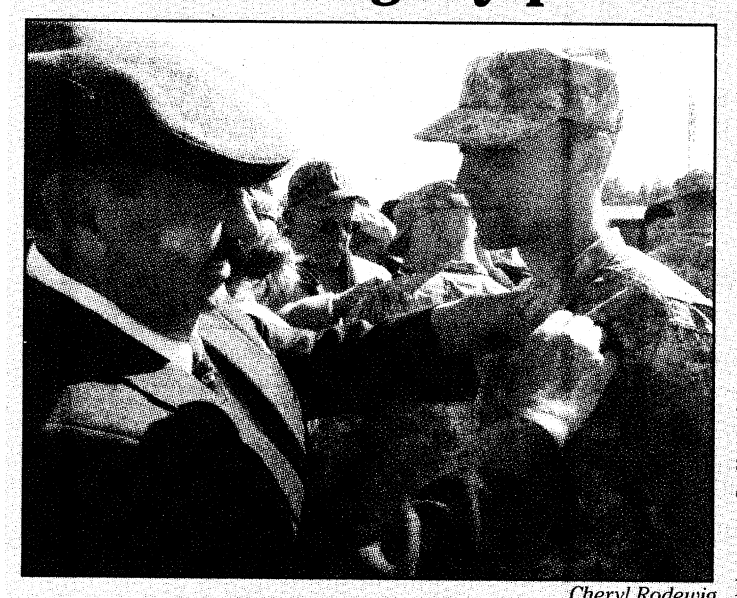

Active-duty and retired Soldiers, family members and surviving spouses or orphans of Soldiers who died while on active duty or after retiring are all eligible to receive AER assistance, with assistance being provided in the form of either an interest-free loan or a grant, depending on the Soldier's financial situation. Spouses of deployed Soldiers who have power of attorney may apply for assistance on the Soldier's behalf. An AER

Airborne legacy passed from grandfather to grandson

Darrell Branstetter, a former paratrooper, pins wings on his grandson, PFC Christopher Mullen, a certified pilot who enlisted in the Army in September.

PFC Christopher Mullen grew up with "about a million" Airborne stories. When he graduated from Airborne School Friday, he reminisced about some of the anecdotes his grandfather, Darrell Branstetter, a former Fort Benning paratrooper, told him when he was younger.

Knowing the paratrooper history in his family made him proud, Mullen said.

"It was encouraging … gave me something to live up to," said the 22-year-old Soldier, who enlisted in September, "looking for a challenge."

The real challenge of being a paratrooper lies in "the moments before the jump," he said. "It tests your courage. It's a confidence builder. You feel like you can do more."

Branstetter said he was certain his grandson would excel in the military.

"I'm very proud of him," he said. "He's a quality person. I believe that one of these days after he completes all this training, he will be a good candidate to become an officer."

The keynote speaker for the graduation, Branstetter earned his wings in 1950. He joined the Army while still in college, responding to a plea from President Harry Truman.

"He said we had serious problems with the communists in Korea, and it was a threat to our nation, and we needed to defend the spread of communism wherever it was in the world," he said. "I decided that it was a patriotic duty that I should put myself in a position to help

Children's obesity: we're all responsible

David W. Kuhns Sr.
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

American children are getting fat — and no one wants to accept the blame.

National Nutrition Month is a good time to do a little self examination. Maybe it's our parenting that is at fault.

I was digging through a box of old mementoes a few weeks ago and came upon a stack of class photographs from my grade school days. It was a long time ago, I admit, but childhood was childhood, even under the Eisenhower administration.

The class size was about the same as you would see today; the teachers looked about the way they would today; but the children in the pictures were different — they looked thin. Of the 30 or so classmates in each picture, only one or two looked a bit on the chunky side. Fat was definitely unusual.

Contrast that to what you see on any school playground now. From my unscientific observation of my son's classes as he was growing up, it seemed that a majority of the kids had a significant extra bulge or two, and many obviously suffered from what the doctors would call clinical obesity.

The experts agree, too. Childhood obesity is frequently cited as a major health concern. Overweight children usually grow into overweight adults. That might bode well for those investing in cardiac clinics, but it is certainly going to be a problem for everyone else.

But, why are our children getting fat? Everyone has a pile of answers at hand, but no one wants to accept part of the blame.

You know what I am talking about. You have heard it all.

They watch too much television. That might be true, but I was part of the first great TV generation, and we were the thin guys.

The Internet and computer games take up too much time. That is probably true, too. But I have read that gaming and computer time is usually a trade off with time in front of the television, so that doesn't seem to be the one, true cause.

I think the real reason is us — the parents.

Who stocks the refrigerators? We do. Back in the day, having a "bottle of pop" was a special treat. Now most households buy sodas by the case. It is a rare fridge that doesn't have a good supply chilled and waiting. And it is usually the kids who drink the stuff.

Fast food was another treat in the days of thin kids. I was recently told that families that eat two or more meals at fast food restaurants a week are almost guaranteed to have overweight children. How about you?

But the most important cause of overweight children, I think, is that parents don't make them play any more.

When adults want to lose weight, they are told to reduce the calorie intake and increase the calories burned — diet and exercise. It is no different for our children.

I grew up in Oregon, part of the rain belt. But my dad insisted I get outside every day. Many were the rainy Saturdays I was ordered outside to "get some fresh air." When I complained about the weather I was told to put on a rain jacket. My friends' dads were the same way. We didn't melt, and we usually ended up having fun.

In good weather we never considered staying indoors. We rode bikes for miles through the countryside. We played ball at the park. We roamed through the woods and fields outside town. We were busy and active — every day.

That's the way childhood ought to be.

But parents not only don't make their children get out of the house, they often won't let them head out and roam the way we did.

How did we get this way? The fears and distractions of today's parents are the subject for another commentary. But we need to change.

We owe it to our children to keep them from growing into the obese generation. We should take a hint from my dad — part of the "greatest generation" — and kick the kids outdoors to "get some fresh air."

They'll thank us when they grow up.

YOU can help prevent suicide

Name withheld on request
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

The worst taste in the world is the gunpowder residue at the business end of a shotgun. Not so much because of the taste itself, but the reason why you're tasting it.

My now ex-wife and I had filed for divorce two days earlier and a loaded shotgun in my mouth was the best solution I could devise to express my deep sadness.

Whether sheer clumsiness, divine intervention or an unconscious moment of self-preservation, I lived despite pulling the trigger.

I was blessed — my little finger received the hammer strike instead of the firing pin — sparing my life.

That was nine years ago.

Today, I'm blessed by a closer relationship with God and a wonderful family.

I'd lie if I said I haven't thought about taking my life since that cold November morning.

Some bad news in the middle of a deployment to Iraq led me down the familiar path of suicidal thoughts. Fortunately, I had a great team of Soldiers by my side who knew me well and knew something wasn't right. Between them and the nearest chaplain, I was able to talk through my feelings, my thoughts and my options.

Ultimately, taking your own life should never be an option on the table, no exceptions.

Unfortunately, 143 Soldiers made the wrong choice in 2008, which works out to a rate of 20.2 suicides per 100,000 Soldiers and is the highest number since 1980 when the Army began tracking the figure. It's also higher than the national suicide rate — 19.2 per 100,000 people.

In response to a growing rate of suicide, the Army began using the ACE Suicide Intervention Program in 2008.

The acronym ACE stands for:

Ask your buddy — Have the courage to ask the question, but stay calm, and non-judgmental. Ask the question directly, e.g. Are you thinking of killing yourself?

Care for your buddy — Remove any means of self-injury. Control the situation in a calm way; force would only escalate the situation. And actively listen to your friend's concerns.

Escort — Never leave your friend alone, and escort him to the chain of command, a chaplain or a health-care provider. Get him help.

Well before this program Soldiers across the force were doing just that. I'm proof positive that this method helps save lives. My friends knew me best and started asking questions — made sure I didn't do anything stupid and got me help.

Soldiers have many places to turn if they feel they've run out of options.

In the garrisons, Soldiers can find a chaplain. Family Life chaplains are trained counselors who work with Soldiers on a wide range of issues. Go to Army Community Service, where Military and Family Life Consultants can help. Personnel at the local medical center can also get you to a counselor.

When deployed, go to a medic, an aid station or a chaplain.

The best advice I can give to anyone who thinks they have run out of options — start talking. The more trusted people you talk to the better your chances of getting help and the better your chances for survival.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Readers respond to cake ministry

You recently published an article about Free Cakes For Kids.

We are a nonprofit ministry that reaches out to families in need to provide birthday cakes for children who may not otherwise have one.

As an Army mom and sister and also sister to a former Marine, I have always held our military in high esteem. If possible, I am even prouder.

When you wrote about this unique program to reach children in need, our military community did as it always has. The selfless women and men that serve our country everyday, answered yet another call for help.

I am inspired and humbled by the response from the Fort Benning family. Already they have sprung into action, and cakes are going out to children in your area.

I hope as you go to other duty stations, you will take this program with you, so we may continue to reach as many children as we can.

God bless you for all you do.

Gates to take comprehensive approach to end stop-loss

Jim Garamone
AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Ending the military's so-called "stop-loss" program is a priority for Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates, a senior official said Monday. The stop-loss program is the involuntary extension of active duty beyond a service member's expiration of term of service, or ETS. The program is in place to make sure units deploy with all positions filled. Service members with an ETS or retirement date that would occur while a unit is deployed can be "stop-lossed" — or extended — until the end of the deployment.

Gates

This is an issue that the services have had to deal with since the beginning of the conflicts in Afghanistan and Iraq, Pentagon spokesman Bryan Whitman said.

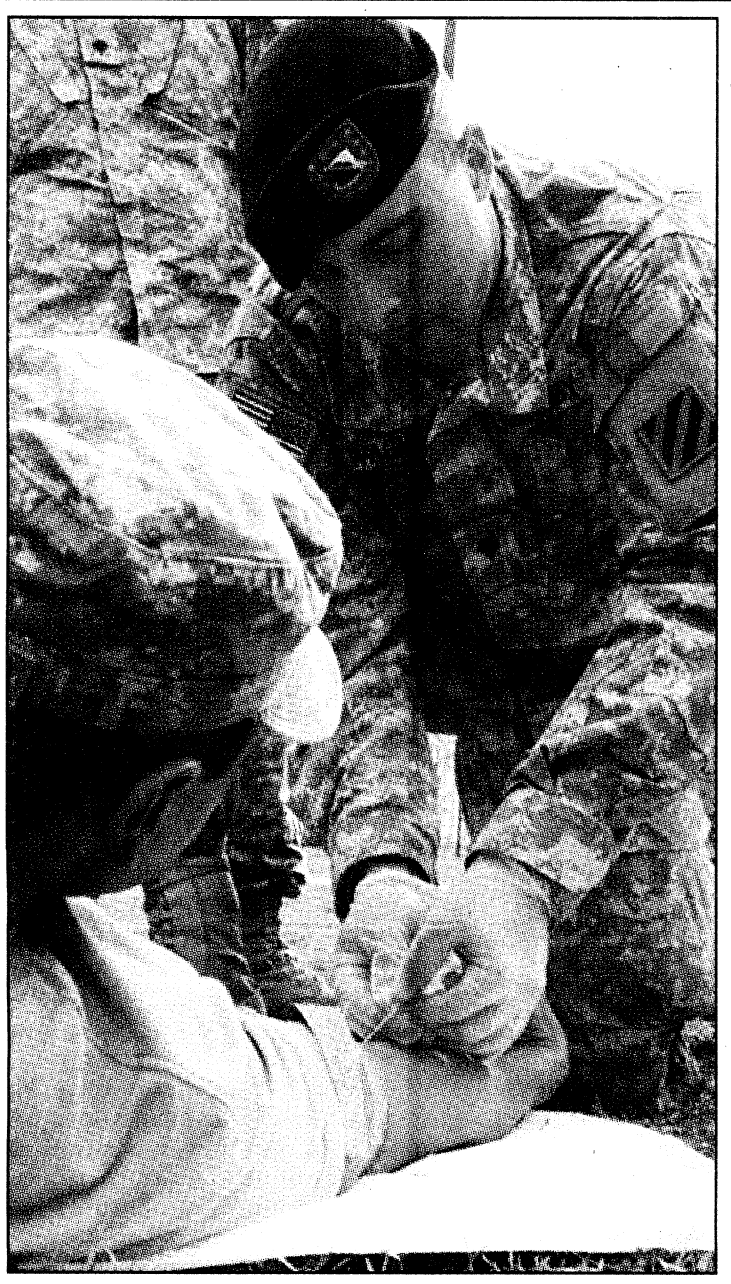

Currently, only the Army is using the provision, with about 13,200 Soldiers involuntarily extended.

"The goal here ... is to move as rapidly as possible to end stop-loss altogether," Whitman said. "It is the secretary's desire to take a comprehensive approach to ending this, which includes using the additional authorization Congress has given the department to be able to grant a special pay to those Soldiers that are affected by stop-loss."

The congressional initiative funds a special pay of $500 per month to stop-lossed service members.

"The department appreciates the authority as well as the flexibility to compensate service members that are affected by stop-loss," Whitman said. "But the goal here is to end stop-loss altogether as rapidly as possible."

Army officials will brief Gates on the program later this week, he said.

"Having a capability to evaluate a casualty, determine the appropriate treatment and administering treatment is crucial to saving a Soldier's life in combat," said SGT Matthew McIvor, a combat lifesaver instructor, to 24 cavalry scouts attending combat lifesaver training Feb. 18 on Kelley Hill.

The scouts listened as a 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team NCO talked about his combat experiences, his training, and how important it was during missions in Iraq. As he spoke, many students nodded their heads in agreement.

In a combat situation, scouts will perform reconnaissance ahead of the battalion, reporting back directly to the commander to help make decisions on the battlefield, said 1LT Bradley J. Ortman, the scout platoon leader.

"We are the battalion's eyes and ears," he said.

The Soldiers are assigned to the only scout platoon in the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment.

"We are expected to do all of the things Infantry Soldiers do, plus we have Bradley Fighting Vehicles and humvees, so we can operate as a light or heavy unit," Ortman said.

McIvor designed the class to be combat oriented. One-third of the group hasn't deployed yet, Ortman said, so the class is important so Soldiers can continue their mission in the event of an injury.

Airborne: 'Stands out in the military' defend this country."

Branstetter enlisted exactly 30 days after Truman's speech, a waiting period imposed by his father who wanted him to finish school.

Stationed with the 11th Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., Branstetter was not happy to still be stateside.

"I wanted to be a paratrooper and get into combat," he said. "I volunteered to go to Korea. Well, then they sent me to Fort Benning."

At Fort Benning, Branstetter served as an Airborne instructor, rigger and jumpmaster but never as a deployed Soldier. He recalls winning a spot jump contest May 15, 1952. His prize? "A three-day pass and $10 bill," he said.

As a civilian, Branstetter stayed active with sky diving, a more comfortable hobby than the combat jump training from World War II planes, where each jump was a "shock," he said. "Especially those old C46s and C47s ... you would feel the wind. It would wrinkle the skin on your face. (But) to me, it's enjoyable. I'd jump today if the Army would let me."

Over the years, much has stayed the same in the Airborne world, Branstetter said, although the pay has increased from the monthly $62.50 he remembers. Fort Benning is still teaching a diverse group of service members, and paratroopers still go through a rigorous training program.

"I think the paratrooper stands out in the military as having accomplished training for combat that no other unit in the military has," he said. "These people are willing to risk their lives in jumping and exposing themselves to enemy fire as they descend from an aircraft in flight to confront the enemy. It takes a lot of discipline to follow through with the training they've been given at Airborne School."

Branstetter said he feels confident Mullen has that discipline, which will carry him through his next assignments, including special forces training and a possible deployment to Afghanistan.

Although Branstetter has pinned thousands of Airborne graduates during his time in the Army, pinning his grandson was a "highlight," he said.

"It gives you a sense that you have instilled in your children and grandchildren a patriotic need to defend this country," he said. "Very few people have a grandson who follows in their footsteps. It makes you feel special."

SFC Tchaka Cain practices a kick with SFC Maurice Tucker Tuesday at the Briant Wells Fieldhouse while cameraman Arik Dashevsky and producer Jim Schaefer capture it on film for the Pentagon Channel's documentary series, RECON. The episode will be available online at the Pentagon Channel Web site and as a podcast on iTunes. The show will also run throughout the month of June after it premiers June 1 at 2 p.m. EST on the Pentagon Channel.

RECON show goes hand-to-hand with combatives

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Lights, camera, action — post combatives students will share their training with the nation this summer. Representatives from the Pentagon Channel visited Fort Benning this week to film the final days of the Level III combatives course.

The segment will air as part of the RECON documentary program June 1.

"The object of the program is to reflect the experience of what it's like to be in the service today ... to make the audience feel something of what it would be like if they were doing the same thing, and to make them appreciate why people are doing it," said Jim Schaefer, the Pentagon Channel producer.

Watching the combatives Tuesday in Briant Wells Fieldhouse, Schaefer said he was impressed.

"This class and cadre reflect the dedication and hard work of so many I've seen in five years of covering military subjects around the country," he said. "It's refreshing to know there are people willing to sweat and strain to enhance their military skills as much as this group of Soldiers."

SSG Anitra Randall, a cook by trade, said she chose to learn this advanced level of combatives because she will feel safer during future deployments when she doesn't have her weapon by her side.

"I feel more confident," she said. "That was the whole reason for me coming here. I've learned more defensive moves. If you know you're rough and tough, it's a great thing to do."

SSG Timothy Simmons, a drill sergeant on Sand Hill, came to the school so he could teach Level I combatives to basic trainees. To teach the first level, he has to be certified at the third, he said.

The course has been challenging, Simmons said.

"You have to push yourself," he said. "From day one, you go over all your Level I tasks and then if you're not motivated, you do a bunch of push ups. It's rigorous. It's continuous. You get in shape."

After Simmons leaves his post as drill sergeant, he plans to pass on his combatives training to his squad and team leaders.

"It's important," he said. "They need to be able to fight on the battlefield with weapons, hands or anything. I know a lot more ways to choke people out, make them hurt — that will make me more proficient on the battlefield. If my Soldiers are having problems or I'm having problems with a weapon, I'll be able to better protect myself and protect my Soldiers. This stuff really works."

Level III covers the widest range of fighting techniques of all the combatives levels, said SFC Todd Roeder, NCOIC for the training.

"It covers everything ... kickboxing, jujitsu, boxing, sanshou, stick fighting, close quarters combat. It's just a broad aspect of everything put into one class," he said. "We're teaching (students) every aspect of what they need to know to survive. It prepares them to handle any situation. Rather than just knowing wrestling or just knowing boxing, it broadens their mind to all different styles of fighting."

The training is very realistic, Roeder said.

Difficult, real-world training means better preparation for battle, he said.

After following the training Tuesday, Schaefer said he could tell the students weren't taking it easy.

"It certainly looks like it's a smoker," he said.

"I'm sure we'll get lots of strenuous activity, a lot of straining faces and panting lungs. You get the sense that it really has toughened and honed the discipline in the people who have gotten this far."

Viewers can get close to the training by watching the show — "as close to it as you can without actually getting smacked upside the head yourself," Schaefer said. They can also get to know some of the students and learn about the background of combatives techniques.

The episode will premier at 2 p.m. June 1 on the Pentagon Channel and will run at other times throughout the month. It will also be available online at www.pentagonchannel.mil and as a free podcast on iTunes.

AER: Offers bank loans, flexible hours for Soldiers representative evaluates each case individually.

AER assistance offers several advantages over traditional bank loans, including faster turnaround time, said Lionel Grant, AER director.

"With high interest rates off post, some Soldiers may have additional hardship paying off a loan," he said. "We don't do credit checks either, and with most of our cases, if a Soldier has an appointment, within an hour they can leave here with assistance."

Thanks to a reciprocal agreement, Soldiers who are away from their home installation and need assistance can go to the emergency relief office of any other branch of service, as well as any branch of the American Red Cross.

AER staff give personal attention to each case, Carter said.

"It happens on a regular basis that, due to missions or training, Soldiers don't always get over here before we close, so we make sure we're available even after hours to assist them," she said. "There have been times where a captain brought over a Soldier at 4:30 p.m. when we were closed, and I stayed here until 6 p.m. making sure they were OK."

To apply for assistance, Soldiers can go to the AER office with a completed DA Form 1103, or to their commander or first sergeant, who can approve requests of up to $1,000 under the Commander's Referral Program.

"With a regular AER loan, they have to get a statement in writing showing a need, but with the Commander's Referral Program, the only documentation we need is the commander's signature," Carter said.

There are several situations in which AER is not authorized to provide assistance, including credit card debt and debt consolidation. Grant recommends Soldiers contact AER if they are unsure whether a request will be granted.

In addition to emergency assistance, AER offers several scholarship programs for spouses and children of Soldiers. The Stateside Spouse Education Assistance Program and its overseas equivalent provide funds to spouses pursuing an undergraduate education, while the MG James Ursano Scholarship Fund aids children of Soldiers. Information and applications are available on the AER Web site.

AER will hold its annual fundraising campaign from March 1 through May 15. Fort Benning's campaign goal is $250,000, but planners hope to exceed that number.

"We exceeded it last year," Grant said. "And we're hoping that we go much further this year. This is the only time of year we solicit funds from service members."

Donations can be made at the AER office or through unit representatives. Grant encourages Soldiers and family members to donate through their unit.

"AER provides a service that you just can't replace," said Carter, who is organizing the campaign. "There's nowhere else that you can get a no-interest loan. With the contributions, it makes it so that we can continue doing it."

AER is located in Building 2624 in Soldier's Plaza. The office is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. For more information, call 706-545-2536, 706-545-4043 or 706-545-7517, or visit http://www.benningmwr.com/ACSEmergency31905.htm.

Budget: Signifies new way forward for defense

"For seven years, we have been a nation at war. No longer will we hide its price," he said. "We are now carefully reviewing our policies in both wars, and I will soon announce a way forward in Iraq that leaves Iraq to its people and responsibly ends this war," Obama said.

He also noted some of the choices that must be made in that budget. "We'll eliminate the no-bid contracts that have wasted billions in Iraq, and reform our defense budget so that we're not paying for Cold War-era weapons systems we don't use," he said.

Obama mentioned the strategic reviews of the conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan. He said he will soon announce the results of the review of the Iraq conflict and will soon announce a way forward "that leaves Iraq to its people and responsibly ends this war."

The president also said that his administration will consult with friends and allies to "forge a new and comprehensive strategy for Afghanistan and Pakistan to defeat al Qaeda and combat extremism. Because I will not allow terrorists to plot against the American people from safe havens half a world away."

The budget will also contain money to reduce the strain on the military — particularly the Army and Marine Corps. The budget calls for more Soldiers and Marines. "And to keep our sacred trust with those who serve, we will raise their pay, and give our veterans the expanded health care and benefits that they have earned," he said.

American values are the country's best weapons, Obama said. "There is no force in the world more powerful than the example of America," he said. "That is why I have ordered the closing of the detention center at Guantanamo Bay, and will seek swift and certain justice for captured terrorists.

"Because living our values doesn't make us weaker, it makes us safer and it makes us stronger," he said. "And that is why I can stand here tonight and say without exception or equivocation that the United States of America does not torture. We can make that commitment here tonight."

America will reach out to allies and friends in the weeks and months ahead, Obama said.

"We know that America cannot meet the threats of this century alone, but the world cannot meet them without America," he said. "We cannot shun the negotiating table, nor ignore the foes or forces that could do us harm. We are instead called to move forward with the sense of confidence and candor that serious times demand."

Obama promised progress in securing a peace between Israel and its neighbors and he promised to be vigilant against the new threats of this new century. He said the country must be prepared to take on terrorism and guard against pandemic disease and cyber threats. The United States must also address the crushing poverty that is often the root cause of extremism.

"To meet the challenges of the 21st century — from terrorism to nuclear proliferation; from pandemic disease to cyber threats to crushing poverty — we will strengthen old alliances, forge new ones, and use all elements of our national power. We will strengthen old alliances, forge new ones and use all elements of our national power," he said.

The budget he will submit is more than simply numbers on a page or laundry lists of programs. "I see this document differently. I see it as a vision for America — as a blueprint for our future," he said.

Ceremony set for Tuesday kicks off Year of the NCO

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's NCO Corps will take center stage during a ceremony to kick off the Year of the NCO Tuesday at Marshall Auditorium.

"It will be an opportunity for civilians to learn more about the role of NCOs and gain a greater appreciation of what they do, and for Soldiers to see the responsibility that goes with the rank," said SGM Agnes Bennett-Green, ceremony organizer.

More than 70 sergeants and corporals promoted in January and February will be inducted into the NCO Corps during the ceremony. They will also take the NCO charge and the NCO creed, affirming that they accept the responsibility of becoming an NCO and leading other Soldiers.

The Year of the NCO is an Armywide initiative that aims to enhance NCOs' mental and physical fitness, education and training, leadership development and pride in service.The ceremony is the first of many events on Fort Benning that will recognize NCOs in 2009.

"People say NCOs are the backbone of our Army, and it's true," Bennett-Green said.

A junior-enlisted Soldier will recite The Soldier's Request, a poem written by SGM Frank M. McMahon. In the poem, a junior-enlisted Soldier asks an NCO to dutifully carry out his responsibilities so that he, too, may one day become an NCO.

The ceremony will allow junior enlisted Soldiers in attendance to gain a better understanding of the seriousness of becoming an NCO, Bennett-Green said.

"I would think that for any Soldier, their goal should be to become an NCO," she said.

Planning ahead key to safety during tornado season

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Tornadoes ripped through nearby Taylor and Randolph counties Feb. 18. Winds ranged from 65 to 90 miles an hour. Columbus wasn't hit by a tornado, but remained under a tornado watch until around 11 p.m.

SFC(R) Michelle Fonseca was at her north Columbus home watching TV Feb. 18 when she saw the tornado watch pop up on the bottom of the screen.

Fonseca

"When I heard about the tornado watch, I was really scared and all I could think of was the safety of my kids," Fonseca said. "I talked to my kids about the tornado watch and we came downstairs, ready to take cover in case anything happened."

She packed a bag of clothes and toiletries too.

Fonseca said she is paranoid when the weather gets bad or the emergency sirens go off because of what happened to her about two years ago.

Fonseca arrived home from work around 6 p.m. March 1, 2007 and had a few minutes to gather her 3-year-old daughter,Alysha, and 15-year-old son, Dominique, and run to a first level bathroom at her house during a tornado that ripped through her neighborhood.

"I heard what sounded like a train and the house started shaking, so I took my son and daughter and ran to the bathroom to take cover," she said.

A few minutes later, the windows in her house blew out and the fence outside was leveled.

Fonseca's 17-year-old daughter, Tatiana, was at a basketball game at Columbus State University, but Tatiana called Fonseca to say she was safe.

In the aftermath of the tornado, Fonseca's windows were blown out and her roof was "badly damaged." The Fonseca family lived at a hotel for a month, while contractors replaced windows, carpet, furniture, roof shingles, fencing and vinyl siding.

"I wasn't prepared when that tornado came, but I am now. I keep an emergency kit in the bathroom just in case anything happens again," Fonseca said.

"If a tornado is going to happen, it'll happen. The best thing a family can do is be prepared for it as much as possible," she said.

During a tornado warning, families should plan where to meet and have an emergency kit prepared in the location they will seek shelter, Fonseca said. Every family should stay informed during any inclement weather by watching it on TV, checking online or listening to it on a battery-operated radio.

"Tornadoes are unpredictable — you never know where they will hit," said SFC(R) Karl Nagel, the post Ready Army spokesperson.

Emergency kits should have items including water, food, a flashlight, batteries, a cell phone, first aid kit and prescription medicine needed to sustain life, he said. It should be enough to last three days.

An emergency plan should include the contact phone number of someone out of state, and all family members should know where to meet in an emergency.

In Georgia, tornado season usually begins in March, but it's early this year. The drastic change in temperatures over the past month is a contribution to the early tornado season, said Air Force MSG(R) Bill Wheaton, assistant site manager of Fort Benning Weather Operations at Lawson Army Airfield.

The tornado season usually lasts until July or August, which means there will be more tornado watches and warnings.

Most people don't know the difference between tornado watches and warnings, Wheaton said.

"The average person doesn't hear 'tornado watch' or 'tornado warning.' What they hear is 'tornado,'" he said. "It's important to know the difference. A watch just means looking at all of the parameters we have, there is a potential for inclement weather to happen and a warning means a tornado is imminent."

A watch is sent out a couple of hours before inclement weather is expected to hit and a warning is sent out 30 minutes before a tornado is expected to strike land.

A watch and warning are determined by weather technicians who look at the stability of the atmosphere and winds, among other evaluation factors, Wheaton said.

In a tornado warning, people in a vehicle or mobile home should go to the lowest floor of a nearby building. If in a house or in a small building, they should go to a basement. If there isn't a basement, they should seek shelter in a closet or hallway away from corners, windows, doors and outside walls with windows remaining closed. If outside, they should lie in a ditch and take cover.

Basic training Soldiers test limits in gas chamber

Caroline Gotler

Soldiers from C Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, recover after leaving the Brittin Range gas chamber during training Wednesday. The gas causes runny noses, watery eyes and a burning sensation but has no lasting ill effects.

> "You may have thought (the chamber) was your limit, but once you make it through, you realize you can do more. So if you don't think you can make it when you're in Iraq, just think back on this — you didn't think you'd be able to make it through, but you did."

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

The gas chamber at Brittin Range goes by many names — house of horrors, confidence chamber, chamber of horrors — but no matter what Soldiers call it, they all pass through its walls during Basic Training.

Soldiers in C Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, emerged from the gas chamber with runny noses, watery eyes and burning throats during training Wednesday.

The goal of the training is to teach Soldiers how to react to chemical and biological weapons and to help them gain confidence in their equipment, said SSG Terrance Vaughn, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, a gas chamber instructor.

"We try to instill in them that even though we don't have this type of threat all the time, Soldiers could run across something suspicious in Iraq or Afghanistan, like a chlorine bomb, and they need to know how to react," Vaughn said.

Soldiers enter the chamber with their gas masks on, then remove them for approximately one minute and recite their name and the last four digits of their social security number. The gas causes a burning sensation but has no lasting ill effects. After Soldiers come out of the chamber, they run laps with their arms out, which helps expose their skin to the air and remove any traces of the contaminant.

The exercise gives Soldiers an idea of the symptoms they would experience in an attack of nerve gas or other biological agent, Vaughn said.

"Taking their masks off inside shows them that in the event of a chemical or biological attack, they should have their mask on," he said. "It allows them to gain confidence in their mask."

For many Soldiers, the experience was not as bad as they had anticipated.

"It was definitely a lot better than I thought it was going to be," said PVT Jeremy Dozier. "At least 10 of my friends have gone through the military and they've talked about the gas chamber. I thought it was going to be a hellish experience, but if you can keep calm and do what they tell you to do, you'll be all right."

"I expected worse," said PFC Christopher Thomas. "They call it the house of horror for a reason. I thought I was going to come out with everything running out of me, and that I would get sick. I didn't. It just burned and I couldn't see very well."

Teamwork was key in getting through the gas chamber successfully, said PFC Randy Novack.

"After you take your mask off the second time to come out, you've got to hold onto your buddy in front of you," he said. "It's your buddy who's going to guide you out."

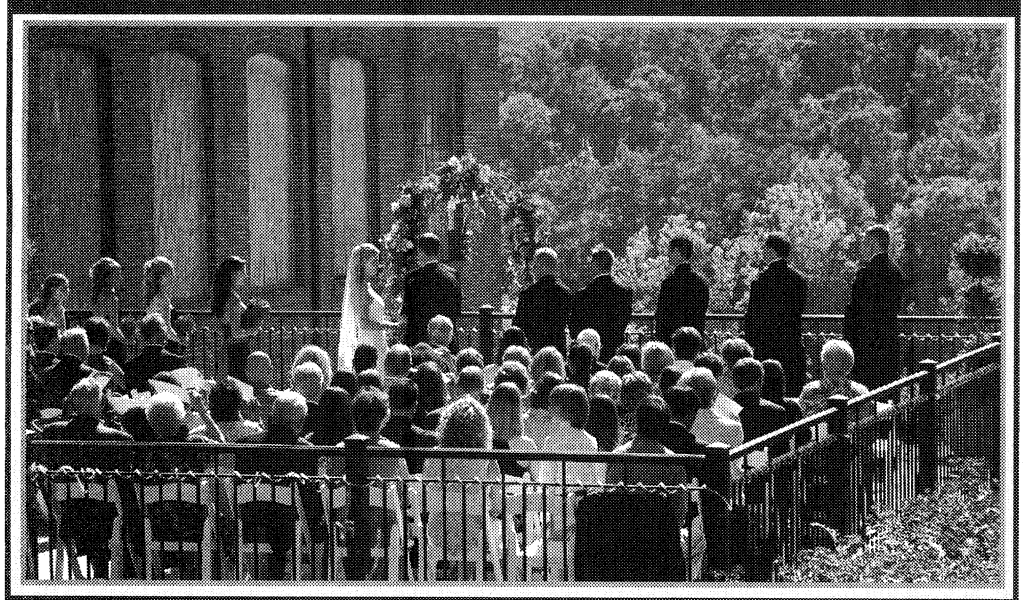

For PV2 Justin Bruce, the training was an opportunity to push himself to new limits and to gain strength for the future.

"You may have thought (the chamber) was your limit, but once you make it through, you realize you can do more," he said. "So if you don't think you can make it when you're in Iraq, just think back on this — you didn't think you'd be able to make it through, but you did."

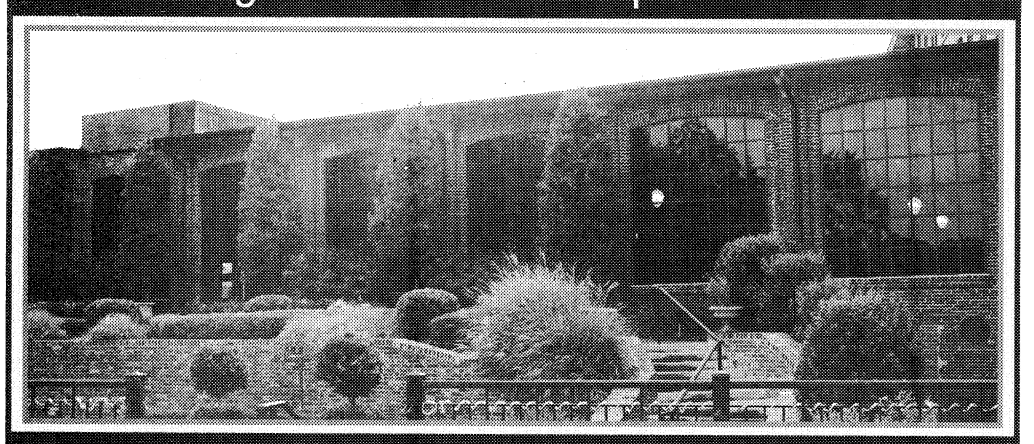

The gas chamber training played an important role in preparing the Soldiers for situations they will encounter after Basic Training, Dozier said.

"Here they're tough on you," he said. "But, when you're out in Iraq or Afghanistan, you've got to act quickly and proficiently, and that's what they teach you to do. Everything you do here, it teaches you for the real thing, because that's what we signed up to do — we signed up to serve this country at war."

STOP SEXUAL ASSAULT! DON'T BE A BYSTANDER!

If you saw a fellow Soldier being sexually assaulted—would you do something? Would you intervene, call for help, phone the military police...or avert your gaze, speed up your footsteps, and pretend it never happened?

There are indicators that Soldiers should watch for so they can be a good bystander:

- Inappropriate touching or disregarding set boundaries
- Suggestive remarks
- Inappropriate intimacy
- Attempts to isolate someone
- Pressuring someone to drink
- Violent behaviors
- Targeting someone who is visibly impaired

For additional information, please contact Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy and Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Program Manager, at (706) 545-0892 or Michelle Fonseca, Sexual Assault Response Coordinator (SARC) at (706) 545-8740. Soldiers may call the Fort Benning Sexual Assault Response Line 24 hours a day/7 days a week at (706) 566-7393.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Digging even deeper...

Just two days after a press conference in which Yankees' third baseman Alex Rodriguez elusively answered reporters' questions, a report surfaced linking A-Rod to disgraced trainer Angel Presinal.

Presinal was banned from major league clubhouses in 2001 and admitted to working with Rodriguez during the years (2001-2003) A-Rod admitted to using performance-enhancing drugs.

Although Rodriguez seems to want to put this all behind him, it doesn't seem like it's going to be that easy for him.

College upsets

It's getting down to the wire for NCAA men's basketball, and it's still looking like the championship will be up for grabs.

Maryland upset No. 3 North Carolina and Texas beat No. 2 Oklahoma Feb. 21. Both Maryland and Texas are unranked teams.

He's back!

It just hasn't been the same without Tiger Woods. It was like watching fishing without Kevin Van Dam — just not right.

Tiger is back, though, much to the relief of many. He will play in the Accenture Match Play Championship that began Wednesday and runs through Sunday. Let's hope he's healed up from his knee surgery and defends his Match Play Championship win from last year.

Kenseth repeats

Maybe he felt he had something to prove after winning a rain-shortened Daytona 500 last week. Whatever it was, Matt Kenseth proved his mettle and won the Auto Club 500 Feb. 22 at Fontana, Calif.

Jeff Gordon finished second, followed by Kyle Busch in third, Greg Biffle in fourth and Kurt Busch rounded out the top five.

NASCAR heads to Las Vegas Motor Speedway for the Shelby 427 Sunday. Start time is scheduled from 4:45 p.m. on Fox.

Harrison asks for release

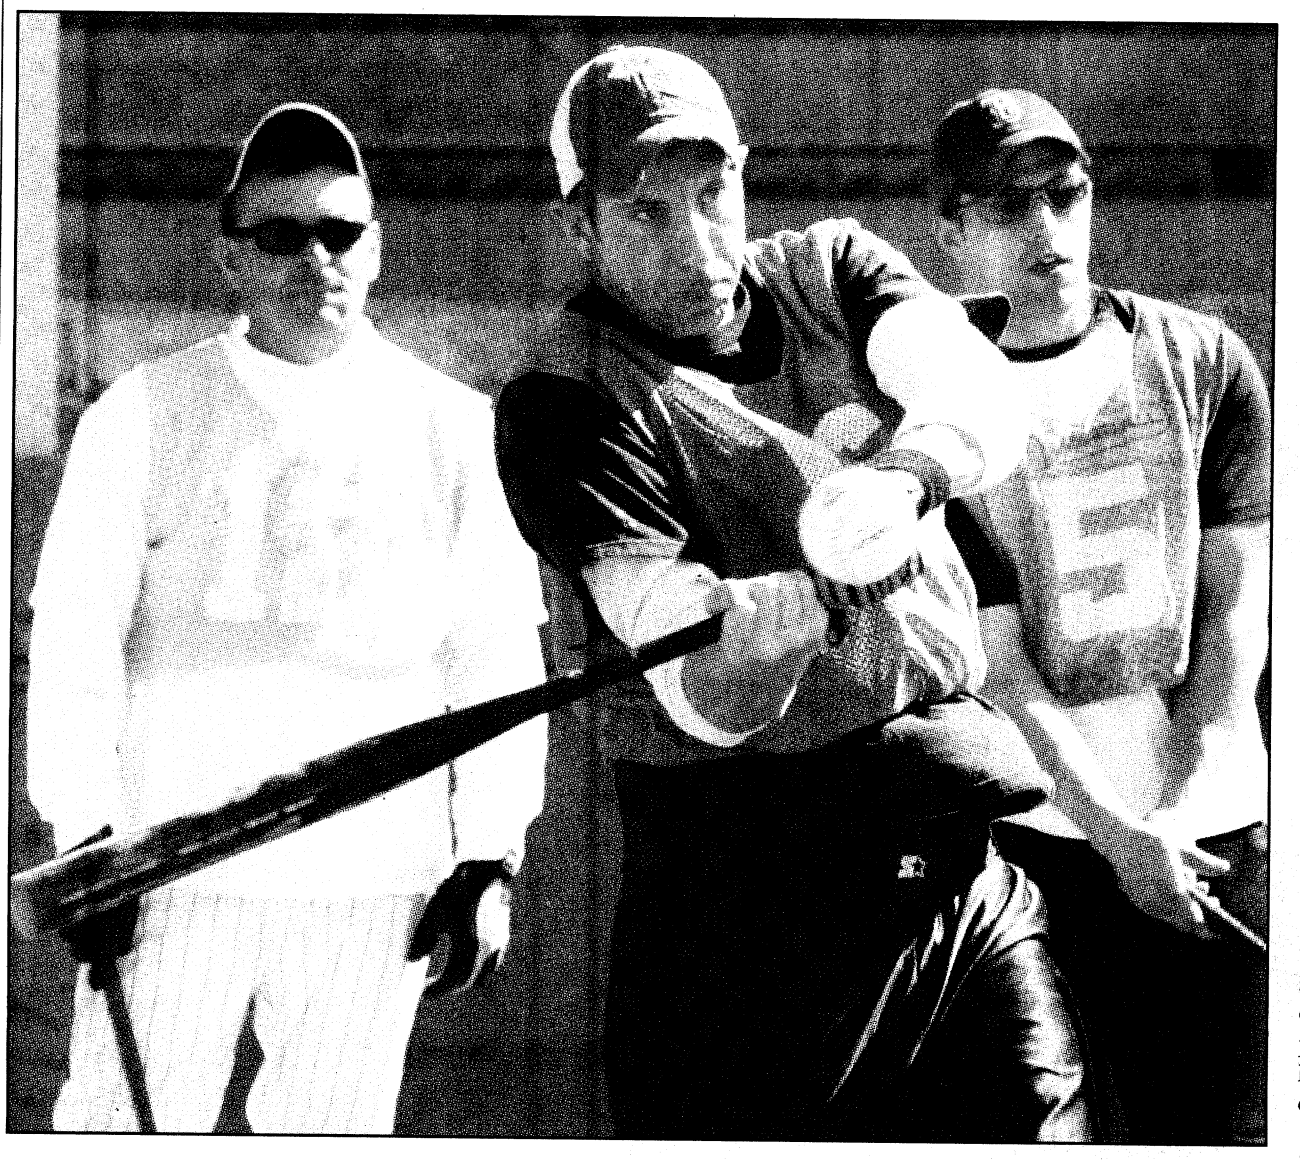

Refusing to take a $4 million pay cut, Indianapolis Colts' wide receiver Marvin Harrison asked the team to be released Feb. 22.

Harrison, who is 36 years old, ranks number two in the NFL in career receptions and sets up as a dynamic duo with quarterback Peyton Manning.

Local wrestler repeats title

Congratulations to Harris County High School junior Joe DeNova, who won his second straight state wrestling title Feb. 21 at Gwinnett Arena. DeNova wrestled at 130 pounds in Class AAAA

Post team looking for a 'few good men'

Coach Tom Siter is looking for a few good men. Actually, he is looking for a few good softball players to shore up this year's post softball team.

With one of the two scheduled tryout days out of the way, Siter said he is pleased with what he saw Saturday at Gowdy Field.

"I was pretty impressed with most of their abilities," Siter said. "In years past we had between 40 and 50 each tryout day, but the difference (this year) is the level of competitiveness and their knowledge of softball."

Siter, his assistant coaches and returning veterans evaluated the 18 post softball team hopefuls, which he said more than half have considerably serious softball backgrounds.

"What I mean by serious softball is they have played tournament level ball and not just company level ball."

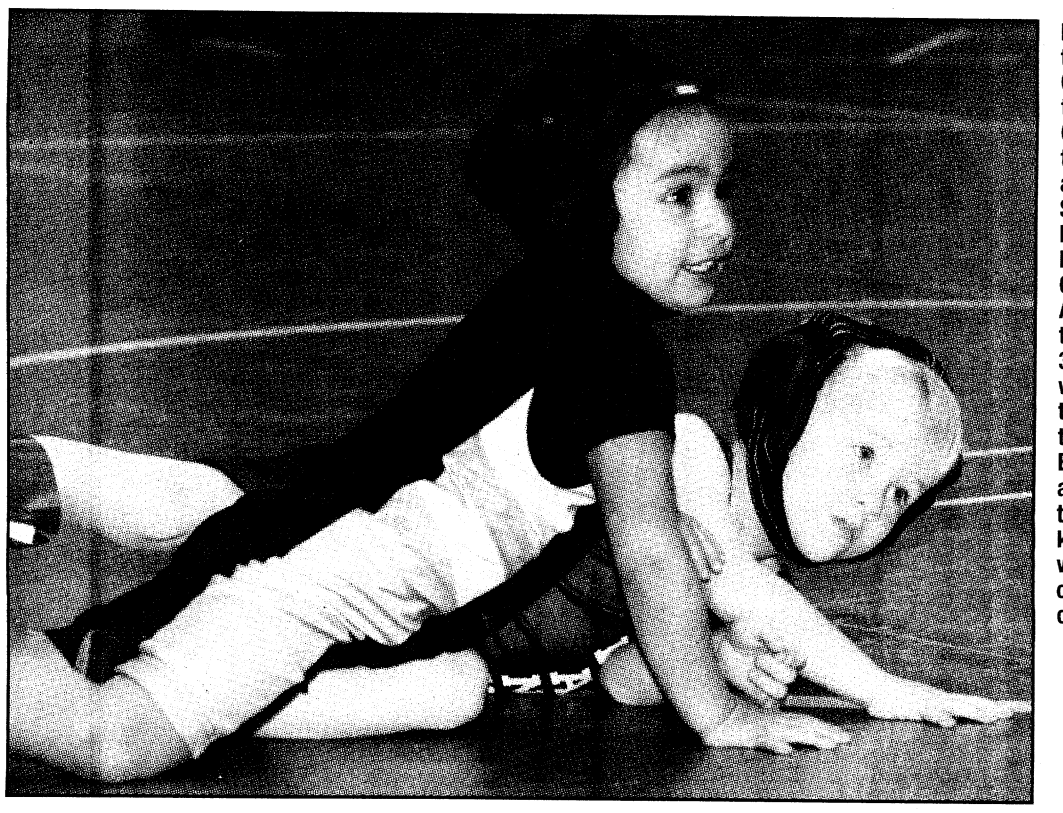

For those who make the team, tournament level softball is an important experience to have, Siter said.

"We will play in about 14 or 15 tournaments across Georgia, Alabama and Florida during the duration of the year," he said. "And, we will play in the spring and the fall in the league in downtown Columbus. So, commitment to the team is very key."

While playing winning softball is important to Siter, so is the way his team will represent Fort Benning

Lilly Alvarez has the advantage over Cole Cashman temporarily, but Cashman finished the match with a 13-1 win in Saturday's Fort Benning Black Knight Invitational. Cashman and Alvarez competed in the 6-and-younger, 39-and-under weight division. The tournament was the first time Fort Benning has hosted an invitational tournament of its kind. Look at next week's edition for complete tournament coverage.

For the love of the sport

FORT LEWIS, Wash. — Sometimes, you don't realize how much you love something until that something is gone.

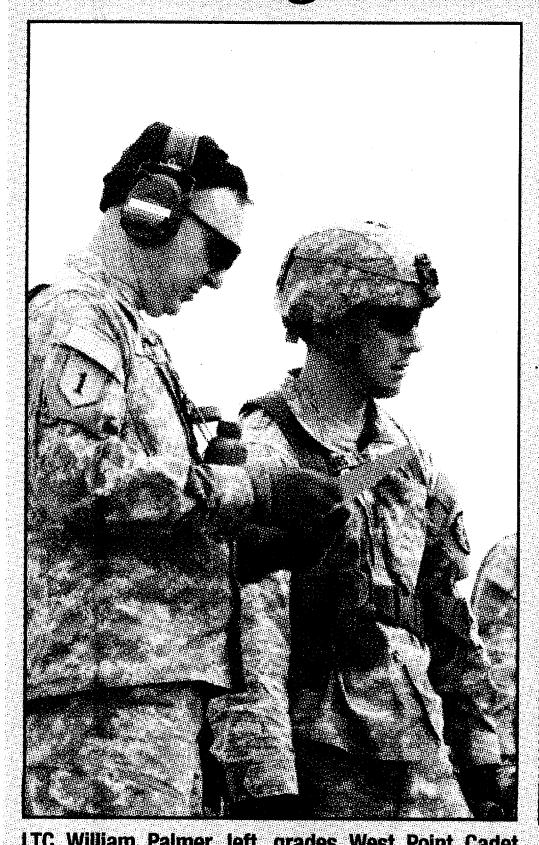

Just ask Brett Favre or Michael Jordan; giving up a sport you've known and loved your entire life is not easy to do. Once you leave it, there's an empty hole left in its stead.

Some athletes have made successful returns to their beloved games (Jordan won three championships after his first return to the NBA) and some realized they should have just stayed at home (Favre led the NFL in interceptions thrown with 22 in 2008).

Shooting for the Excellence-in-Competition Badge

"At the sound of the horn you have 90 seconds" — a familiar preamble to competitors Tuesday at McAndrews Range during the Service Rifle portion of the 2009 Army Rifle and Pistol Championships.

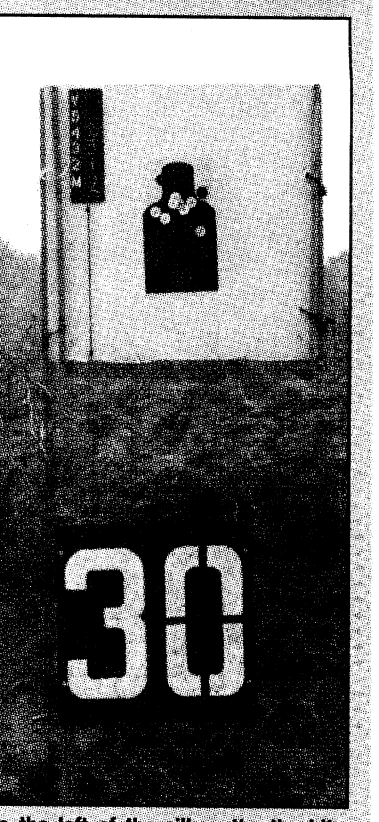

At the sounding of the horn, West Point Cadet Trevor Graves, in full load-bearing equipment and rifle in hand, and LTC William Palmer hustle 100 yards to the next firing point. Graves engages his target while Palmer observes, scores the hits, and then it's off to the next firing point.

two of the competitors vying for the coveted Excellence-in-Competition Marksmanship Badge during the seven-day championships.

Although he was not completely satisfied with his shooting on Tuesday, Graves said he was glad to have the opportunity.

"Today was not my best day," he said. "But, anytime you can put rounds downrange for free you have to be appreciative. There are five of us here and so far the team is No. 1 and we hope to keep it that way."

Graves, a competitor from last year, said he did much better last year but has learned a lot from the U.S. Army Marksmanship instructors.

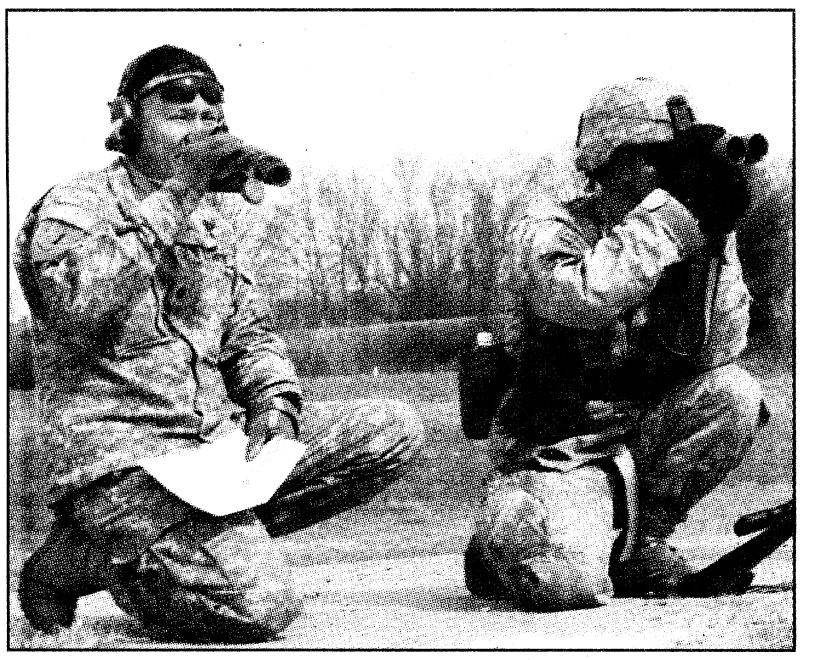

"I came here last year, but I have learned a whole lot this time," he said. "They are very knowledgeable and have had a lot of good things to say. They know a lot of tricks of the trade ... like the MOA (Minute of Angle) and how the front sight post is. I didn't know that, and now I do."

Graves' spotter and grader, Palmer, has also been here before and has been involved with high-powered shooting for 18 years with the National Guard.

"This is my fourth All-Army, and I think that says it all — it's All-Army," Palmer said.

With three All-Army competitions under his belt, Palmer said, it hasn't become routine.

"They changed the courses of fire this year," he said. "And, while the fundamentals of shooting never change, this is something new and different. They have changed the ranges and what you are shooting at various stages and a brand new target which is very difficult."

John W. Peeler

LTC William Palmer, left, and West Point Cadet Trevor Graves check the target downrange to count the number of hits and points scored from one of the firing locations Tuesday during the service rifle 2009 Army Rifle and Pistol Championships.

His assessment of the competition — "There is some heavy dingers in there," he said. "Dinger, that is the shooter word for someone who can really get the rounds downrange. But, there is a good mix across the board, from those who are having their first experience with it to those who have been doing it a while."

In his role as a grader and spotter, Palmer made sure Graves shot the correct number of rounds at each yard line within the time limit and recorded the score.

"The fact is that it is a competition, you're not supposed to be coaching them and you can't help direct him while he is shooting," he said. "But, after he finishes shooting I always try, as part of the learning process, to say 'OK, here is what you are doing wrong, what did you have on your sights, what did you do when you broke this, did you check and see how much time you had left on this rapid fire so you could have spaced some things out maybe,' so that everybody learns, because if you're not learning you are wasting time down here.'"

Although Palmer is a veteran of the event, he said learning something new is a part of the process every time.

"I learn something every time I shoot," he said. "I shoot probably once a week back home, and again, I am chasing my Distinguished Marksmanship Badge and am about halfway there. I have been working on it quite a while, but I have finally gotten high enough where I can devote a little more time to it, and the family is understanding enough that they are letting me out to do some more fun things."

Following the competition, Graves will return to West Point, where a physics test awaits him and Palmer will return to Washington state as a member of the Washington National Guard.

The 2009 Army Rifle and Pistol Championships conclude Saturday.

MLB, confidence and trust broken

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Major League Baseball has bigger problems now that Alex Rodriguez has admitted using steroids — how to handle the other 103 names on the same list A-Rod was on.

Federal authorities are in possession of the 104-name list, and while attorneys argue why they should be able to use all the names on the list rather than just the 10 they were searching for in the BALCO investigation, the players on the list must be wondering if they should fess up or remain silent.

I have mixed feelings on how the discovery of A-Rod's steroid use came to light, but using steroids is wrong, and he knew it.

In a supposedly confidential survey, or screening, all 104 names on the list took the screening with a guarantee of confidentiality, but that may be out the window depending on a court ruling concerning legal searches.

Federal authorities argue that while they were only searching for information on the 10 names in the BALCO case, those 10 names were contained on a computer list with the other 94 names, thus they had the right to the entire list. MLB attorneys argue otherwise.

So, what should those other players on the list do? Should they come out on their own and admit they use steroids? Or, should they remain silent and hope the court sides with their right to confidentiality?

If they are smart, they will come out and admit their steroid use before the court decides for them. I would rather have that option in my own hands as a player rather than someone else.

A-Rod didn't have that choice — his name was leaked. I am not taking his side, but how would you feel if information you were told was confidential was leaked to someone who had no reason to have the information? I would be more than just a little upset — it is the principle of the matter and an ethical violation of trust.

People make mistakes and A-Rod is no different. I think he should be given a second chance, but with a caveat.

Because baseball is a great deal about statistics when a player reaches the end of his career, I feel the numbers A-Rod put up while on steroids should be deducted from his personal statistics.

No asterisk, just reduce his finals numbers during those years.

Why? Because if he is a great player, he will still put up the numbers and the record books of baseball will reflect true records, and not records earmarked by an asterisk. Putting a name in the record books with an asterisk diminishes the true record holder and gives standing to someone undeserving.

While the A-Rod and BALCO 10 situation will not go away anytime soon, baseball fans can only hope that the damage that has been done with steroid use only tarnishes the players' reputations, and not the game itself.

It is said that baseball is bigger than the players — I guess we will see.

MEDDAC sends 598th to losers bracket

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

MEDDAC overcame a second-half comeback bid from the 598th Maintenance Company Tuesday in the second round of the post intramural basketball tournament at SFC Paul R. Smith Fitness Center, taking a 56-47 victory and advancing to the quarterfinals.

"Just two more games and we are in the championship," MEDDAC coach James Johnson said.

MEDDAC got off to a quick start getting four 3-pointers from Raymond Wilhelm in the early going of the game. At the halfway mark of the first half, MEDDAC held a commanding 20-9 lead with solid shooting from the outside and a defense that kept 598th from penetrating the key and having to rely on long shots.

By the end of the first half, 598th cut the deficit to 12 points and trailed 32-30 to close out the first half.

MEDDAC's offense suffered a lull in the opening minutes of the second half, and Johnson could be heard from the bench instructing his players.

"Let's push it down their throats ... now let's go," he said. "Keep playing and don't give up on it (the play).

But, the 598th scored eight unanswered points to pull to within five points with 4:30 remaining in the game, and inched closer with two minutes remaining cutting the lead to 49-45.

While the 598th controlled the offensive and defensive boards for most of the second half, MEDDAC made adjustments in the final minute of the game to seal the 56-47 victory.

"I knew this team (598th) was going to give us a run for our money," Johnson said. "The first half we went to our shooters ... I can always count on Wilhelm, he is a good shooter. We got him some shots in the first half, but in the second half he didn't get any looks."

Although Johnson said he was happy with the victory, he admits his team could have done better in rebounding.

"We didn't do a very good job boxing out on the boards and I talked to the big players about getting a good posit on under the basket," he said.

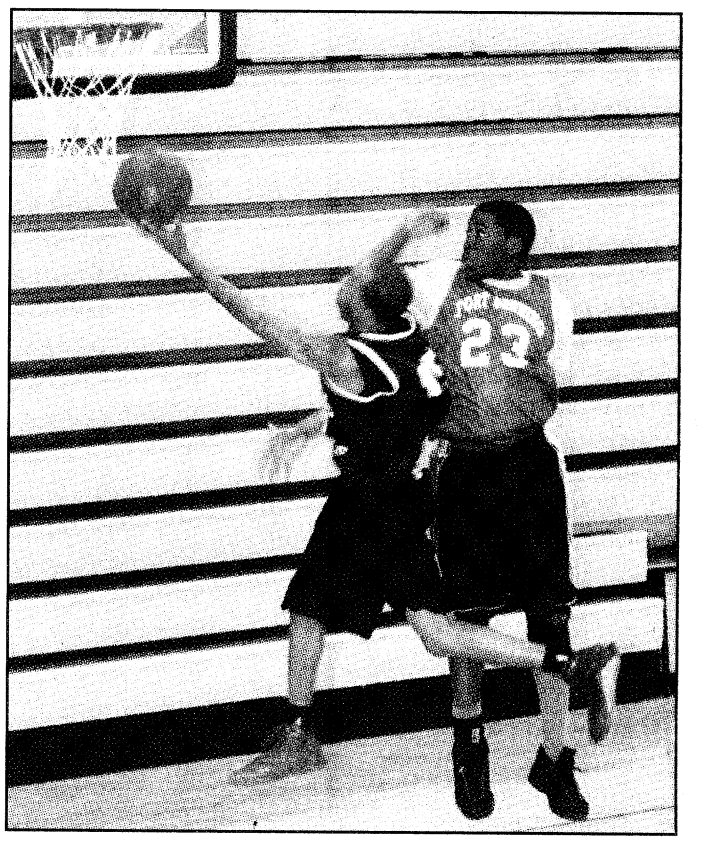

One of the team's keys to success in the game was getting off to a quick start, and finishing strong, Johnson said.

"They came out flat and we didn't and that kind of helped us out," he said. "We started out in a 2-3 zone but since their shooters weren't making the shots we sunk down into a 3-2 zone and protected the perimeter better.

"Coming down the stretch though ... the last two minutes of the game, that is where you make your money and that is what we did."

Leading MEDDAC in scoring was Christopher Thomas with 18 points while the leading scorer for the 598th was Clarence Washington with 14 points.

Scoring: 598th, Washington (14), Loving (9), Stephen (8), Jones (6), Duncan (4), King (3), Williams (3); MEDDAC, Thomas (18), Wilhelm (13), Stevenson (12), Moak (7), Hawks (4), Early (2).

John W. Peeler
MEDDAC's Christopher Thomas goes up in the air past 598th's Clarence Washington for the basket. Thomas scored 13 points in the second half to lead MEDDAC to victory.

Softball: Post team to make final roster cuts Monday

while doing so.

"It's about representing Fort Benning and Army core values both on and off the field," he said. "And, we have done that the past three years, and I tell you we have gotten nothing but positive feedback about our conduct at tournaments and the downtown league."

Veterans from last year's team did not participate in the tryouts, but Siter says that does not mean they have an automatic spot on this year's team.

"The only thing that being a veteran guarantees them is not having to get out there and try out," he said. "I have all their statistics from last year ... I know all their abilities from out there on the ball field, so just because they are not having to be out there and try out, that doesn't mean on Monday they will have a position on the team. We are taking the top 30, and on March 1 we are taking the top 30 out of here.

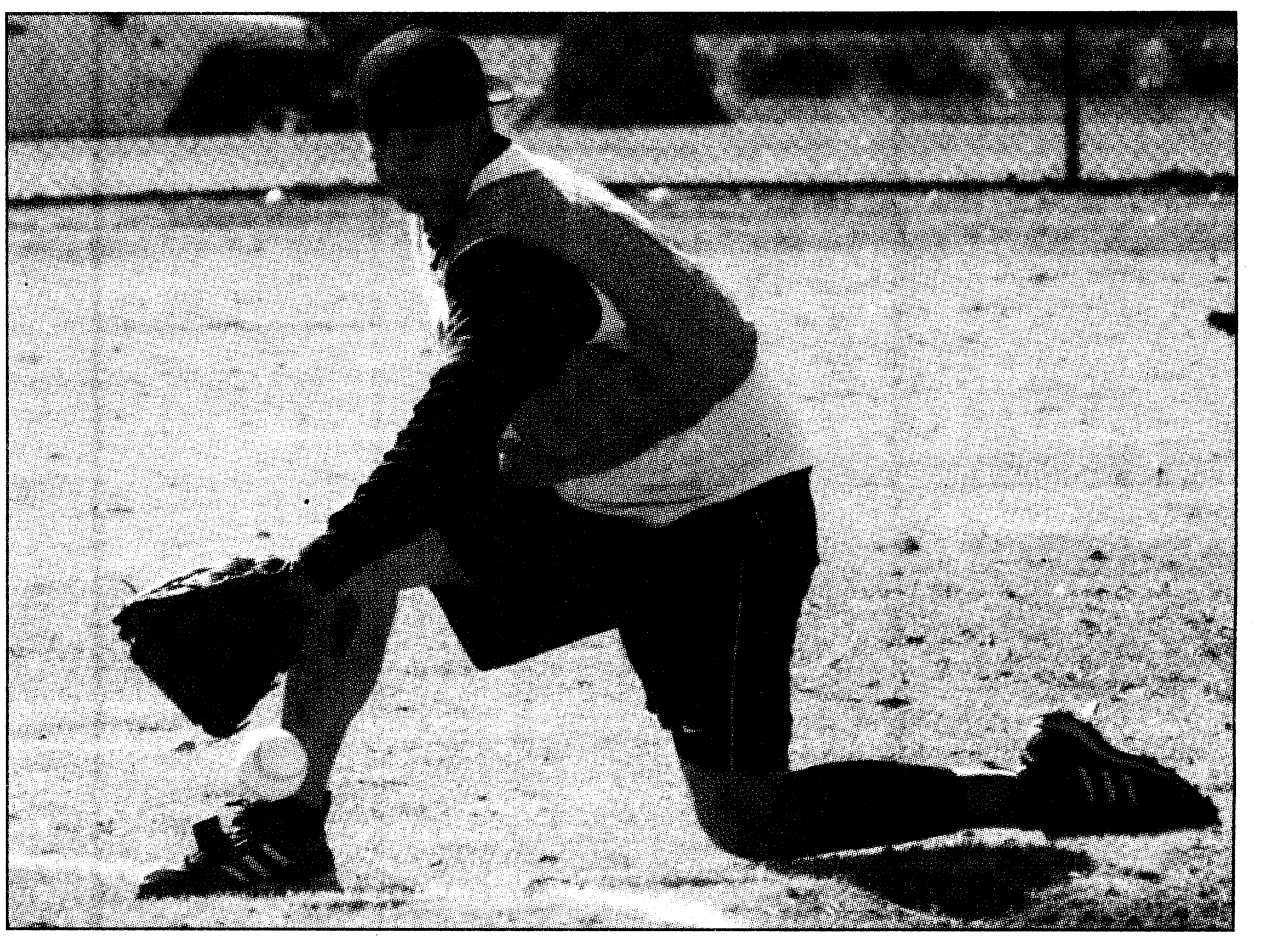

"After this Saturday's practice last year's team will hit a little batting practice and shag some balls and I will be able to see where they are at and what kind of work they did during the off-season."

About 13 or 14 positions will be filled from this year's crop of post team hopefuls, Siter said, and players have one more Saturday to make an impression on the coach.

"Those who tried out last Saturday don't have to come back and try out again, but it behooves them to," he said. "We already have an evaluation on each of them now, but if they had a bad day, they may want to come back out and try and do better."

Siter said he expects around 20 players to come out during the next round of tryouts, and although Saturday is the last day to try out, those who come to Fort Benning during the season won't necessarily have to wait to next season to get the opportunity to play.

"Soldiers who PCS to Fort Benning during the season will be eligible to come and try out and we will take a look at them," he said. "We are here for the Soldier and are here to give that Soldier the opportunity any time. Any Soldier who comes to Fort Benning between now, and through even October and November is eligible, but there is still an evaluation process. All they have to do is give me a call and earn their way on the team."

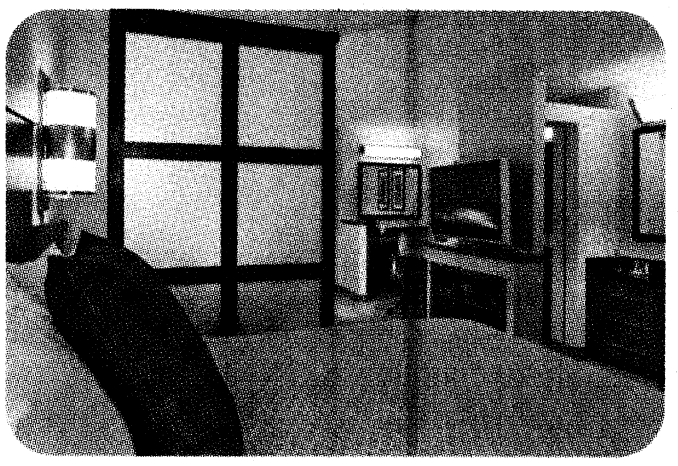

John Peeler

Return: Grappler aims for All-Army wrestling team

state freestyle and Greco-Roman wrestling state champion and a sergeant with 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry Regiment, hopes his return to the mat is more Jordan-esque than Favre-like.

Preece, who quit wrestling after his first year at the College of Mount St. Joseph in Cincinnati, Ohio, is currently attempting a comeback of his own at the All-Army wrestling trial camp at Fort Carson, Colo.

The Marysville, Ohio, native began wrestling at the age of six when a friend introduced him to the sport that he lived and breathed until college.

But after his collegiate freshman year, Preece decided he had had enough of wrestling and wanted a change.

"I enjoyed (wrestling), but it was to that point where I was that person who didn't want to work out every day so I just threw it to the curbside and just went on with my life," said the 23 year old. "I felt like I was getting burned out, I didn't want to be there. I just felt like I had been doing this my whole life and I just don't feel like doing it anymore, so I got out. "I just wanted to leave Ohio and find something different."

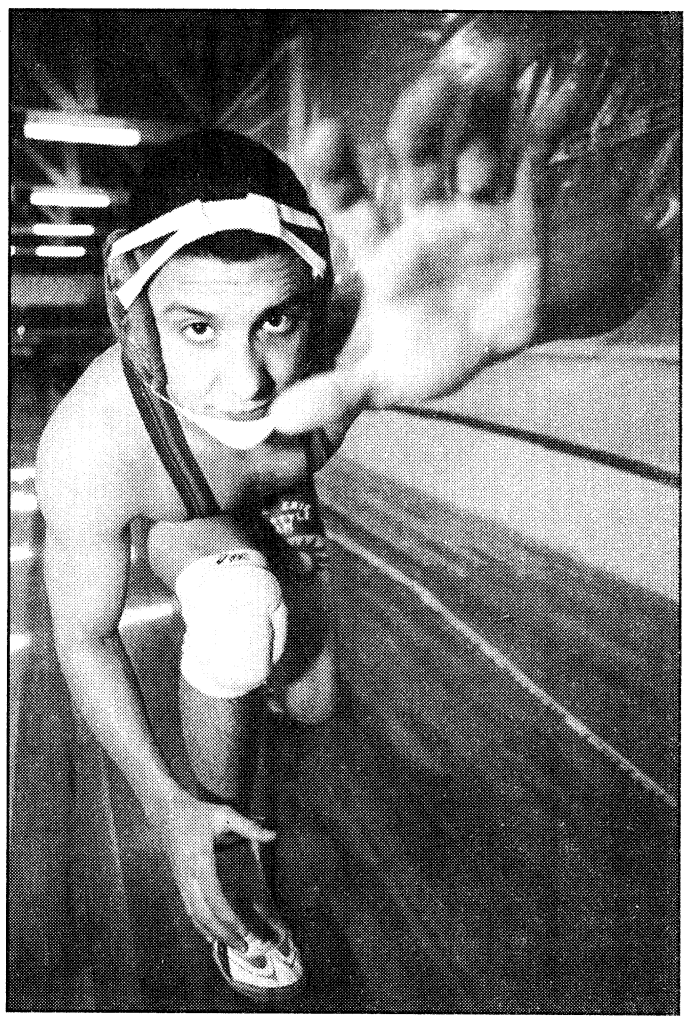

That "something different" was the Army. Preece had joined the Army Reserves right out of high school, so he simply went active duty and wound up at Fort Lewis. He deployed with his 4th Brigade unit as part of the 2007 "surge" in Iraq where he suffered hearing loss in his right ear when his Stryker was hit by an IED.

It was when he returned home to Ohio after a 15-month deployment that Preece got his first taste of wrestling since leaving the Mount St. Joseph campus.

"My dad had actually signed me up for (a wrestling tournament)," said Preece, who weighs around 160 pounds, but wrestles at 132 pounds. "No one showed up in my age bracket so they threw a couple high schoolers at me.

"One ... was a state runner up and the other dude outweighed me, he was a 189 pounder, and he placed at state. So these guys were good, or whatever. And I ended up destroying both of them. I pinned the one, and I beat the other one by points."

This success rekindled a desire to once again compete in the sport that had defined him until he became a Soldier. "I just missed it. There was just a void," Preece said. "Wrestling was my life for the bigger portion of my life and so just not having it ... I needed it back."

Phil Sussman

Michael Preece poses at Fort Lewis, Wash., before leaving for the 2009 All-Army Trial Camp at Fort Carson, Colo. Preece will compete for a spot on the All-Army wrestling team.

His competing for a spot on the All-Army squad is the realization of a goal he made for himself as a senior in high school.

"(Wrestling is) actually how the recruiter got me," Preece said. "He came in to one of my practices in high school and said, 'You know, you can wrestle for the Army.' That was the goal, but then when I got in, one thing (led to) another, kind of a snowball effect and the next thing I know I was in Iraq."

Once he made the decision to pursue a spot on the All-Army team, Preece needed to find a tournament to compete in that, if he did well enough, would earn him an invitation to try out for the team. Luckily for him, the 2008 Fort Lewis Intramural Wrestling Championships were precisely that type of tournament. Preece said heading into the Fort Lewis tournament that "There was a lot of weight on my shoulders. (I was) thinking, 'If I don't make it now, when is my next chance going to be? I might not have another one.'"

Preece received his invitation to Colorado after he defeated Jeffrey Myers for the 145.5-pound title. He said being a Soldier has helped him as a wrestler, but wrestling has more so helped him be a better Soldier.

"Wrestling instills a lot of self discipline," he said. "(When) you need to not eat that second cheeseburger when you're losing weight or to actually go and workout when you need to. So I think that helps me a lot as a Soldier to move up the ranks quickly because I had this self-discipline instilled in me when I was really young. So when I came into the military, I already had the self-discipline I needed to do my job."

From an early age, with his mom and dad, to now with his wife, Preece has always had support from his family to pursue his passion on the mat.

With his goal within reach, Preece said if he doesn't make the All-Army team, it will not be for a lack of effort.

"I'm just going to keep working out everyday," said Preece who hopes to eventually retire from the Army and then coach high school wrestling. "Even if they release us early, I'm probably just going to go to the gym and keep working out because this is the ultimate goal of a wrestler is to be at this level of wrestling. I'm just going to give it all that I've got and in the end, hope they select me."

Home Alone to help kids stay safe

Although Macaulay Culkin's character in the movie Home Alone manages to stay safe and sound when he's accidentally left home by himself, making sure children in the real world stay home alone safely takes planning. That's why Fort Benning Directorate of Emergency Services has developed the Home Alone program.

Pinewood Derby races test mettle

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

As shouts of "Go!" rang out in a crowded showroom lobby, more than 100 Cub Scouts and parents cheered as miniature wooden cars raced each other down a metal track Saturday during the 2009 Muskogee District Pinewood Derby Championships at Rob Doll Nissan. The championships were an opportunity for Scouts representing packs in nine counties and Fort Benning to test their racing mettle.

"The goal of Pinewood Derby is for Scouts to gain a sense of accomplishment and personal achievement by doing as much work on the car by themselves as they can," said Lt. Col. Jeffrey Knudson, Fort Benning Marine Corps Detachment, Tiger Den leader for Fort Benning's Pack 27.

Scouts make their Pinewood Derby cars from a block of wood they receive in a kit. Cars must meet specific size and weight requirements, and may be powered only by gravity.

While Scouts receive help using power tools from parents or other adults, the boys take pride in racing creations that are uniquely theirs.

Eight-year-old Ben Sellers of Pack 27 said he was proud of the work he had done on his car.

"All my dad really had to help me with was putting on the wheels," he said.

For Joseph Zollinger, who took third place, the championships were a chance to improve on his performance from the previous year.

"I think I'm doing a bit better than last year," he said. "My car last year was painted different and shaped different."

Jakob Smith, of Pack 27, said he invested several weekends' time in constructing his car.

"My dad helped me with the sawing," he said. "The hardest part was holding onto the block of wood while we sawed it."

While making Pinewood Derby cars was a memorable father-son bonding experience for many of the scouts, not all of them had parents available to help. That's why Sellers, in keeping with the Cub Scout Promise to "help other people," reached out to a fellow Scout whose father was out of town before the derby.

"My friend's dad was gone then, so he came over and we helped him build his car," he said.

Sellers said he was happy to be able to participate in Pinewood Derby, regardless of how he finished.

Racing in Pinewood Derby gives scouts a sense of pride and memories that can last a lifetime, Knudson said.

"My older son has kept his Pinewood Derby cars and still loves them because he made them," he said. "If a parent does all the work on a car, then all the Scout will remember is winning or losing. But if the Scout does a lot of the work, he thinks 'I made that. It may not have been the fastest, but I made it and it still went faster than some of the other cars.' And that's what we want the Scouts to get out of it."

Chief of Chaplains suggests talking to God

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The answer to mental, physical and emotional struggles is hope in God, said Chaplain (MG) Douglas Carver, Army Chief of Chaplains, the guest speaker at the Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast Friday at the Benning Conference Center.

"Hope is eager expectation ... hope is a confident outlook, a certainty of a good rapport, looking forward with a positive mindset. It's knowing in your mind that help is on the way," he said. "What does hope do for us? It brings light into sickness. It brings sanity to the mentally disturbed and ill. It brings peace in crisis."

Carver

Putting hope only in people may bring disappointment, but God will never disappoint and never stops loving, Carver said.

"Even though the times change, circumstances change, the scripture says God makes all things capable at this time (of war and peace)," he said.

Speaker inspires Faith with his trusty 'Handy'-cap

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Although Bob Mortimer has lost both his legs and his left arm, he says he has only one handicap — a blue baseball cap with the word "handy" emblazoned over the brim. Mortimer, a motivational speaker, wore his "handicap" Tuesday when he shared his story with Faith Middle School students.

Mortimer encouraged students to cast off the limitations they put on themselves and to help others fulfill their potential.

"Handicaps are the things you put on yourself to keep you from being your best," he said. "And until you learn how to take those handicaps off, you're never going to be able to be exactly who you're meant to be."

Mortimer lost his limbs at 21. He and his brother left a party where they had been drinking and using drugs, and when their car went off the road, they got out and began walking. What Mortimer didn't realize was that the car had knocked over a power pole. He walked into a downed power line, and more than 12,000 volts of electricity went through his body.

"We walked away from the car unharmed, and sometimes that's the most dangerous thing you can do," he said. "Because every time we got away with it, we became more confident, more bold, and took greater chances."

Even after recovering, Mortimer did not change his partying ways until he met his wife four years later.

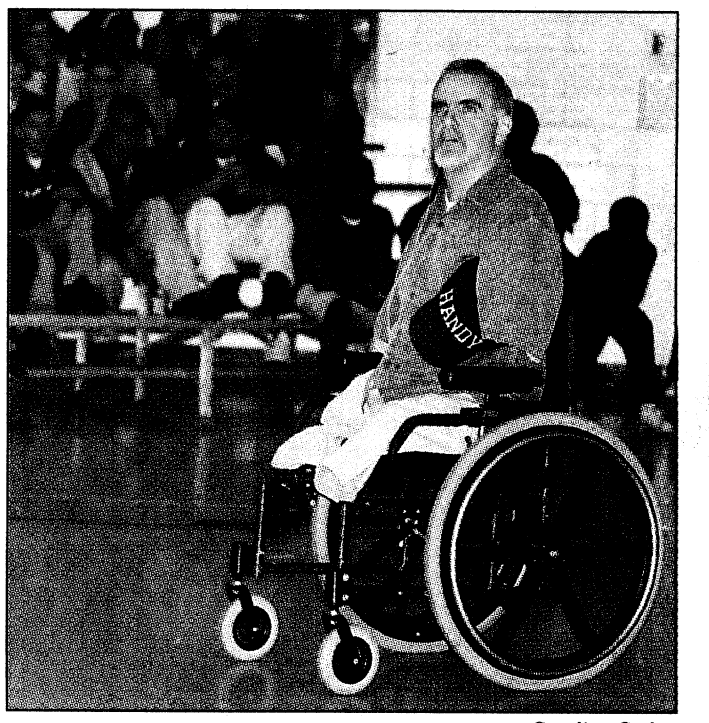

"Instead of having courage, I chickened out and went back to the alcohol and drugs," he said. "Four years later, I met a strong friend who made me realize I did have handicaps, but it wasn't my legs or my arm — it was my attitude. Six months after that, I married that strong friend and we've been married for 28 years."

For eighth-grader Andrew Kessler, Mortimer's talk taught him about the importance of accepting flaws, both in oneself and in others.

"You should accept the person you are and don't let anything slow you down in life," he said.

Mortimer hoped his talk would inspire students to make changes in their lives.

"What I really hope is that they come away motivated enough to change their own behavior," he said. "To look at themselves and really be able to honestly say, 'There may be one or two of these (negative) things that I've allowed into my life that are really going to keep me from fulfilling my potential,' and I hope they will begin to address that."

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief Master Sgt. Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations. Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

Financial planner offers advice for tough times

Lance D. Davis
ARNEWS

WASHINGTON — If financial hardships have Army families singing the blues, maybe some advice from certified financial planner June Walbert might change their tune.

Walbert's first recommendation is to eliminate consumer debt.

"Consumer debt is the number one stumbling block I see people have when it comes to reaching their financial goals," she said.

Some may say "tell me something I don't know" or "I want to eliminate my consumer debt, but times are hard."

A lot of people are facing hardships and Walbert recommends notifying financial institutions when difficulties arise. She also opposes the use of debt consolidation and management programs seen in ads or heard about over the air.

"They really can't do as much for you as you can do for yourself," Walbert said. "It won't cost you any money to pick up the phone and call to ask for a lower interest rate."

Instead of consolidating debt, Walbert says pay credit cards off one at a time. Start with the highest interest rate debt first, paying it down and eventually off, while making minimum payments on the rest until paying off the last card with the lowest interest rate.

During tax season, Walbert encourages deducting anything possible. Soldiers can deduct expenses from uniforms, professional journals and associations.

The more listed in deductions; the more saved in taxes, Walbert said.

She suggested looking at the bottom line of the 1040 to determine whether it makes sense to deduct a traditional IRA contribution or contribute to a Roth IRA. The traditional IRA contribution has IRS mandated income-phase-out limits.

"You get tax relief now but pay taxes later on down the line in retirement."

Walbert's preference is to make a Roth IRA contribution instead. That is taxable money now and any of the growth it experiences over the decades is withdrawn tax free during retirement with income-phase-out limits as well, she said.

Soldiers deployed overseas earning tax-free combat pay can also deposit tax-free pay in a Roth IRA, Walbert said.

"That means tax free in tax free out and that is sweet, sweet."

Homeowners' deductible items include mortgage interest as well as property taxes.

For everyone's cash flow in the service, Walbert said there should be a priority list: paying off consumer debt, building a savings account with at least three months of living expenses and investments such as retirement plans.

As a financial planner, the number one question she gets asked these days because the nation is in a declining market is "should I continue to invest for my future?"

"The answer is a resounding yes, especially for those long-term goals," she said. "Soldiers should definitely be investing because stocks right now are very inexpensive."

Army families should watch where they shop and take advantage of the benefits the military offers such as the commissary and the post exchange, Walbert said.

"You really do save money."

She recommended putting together a spending record so Soldiers and their families know where their money is going and can develop an action plan to avoid or eliminate debt.

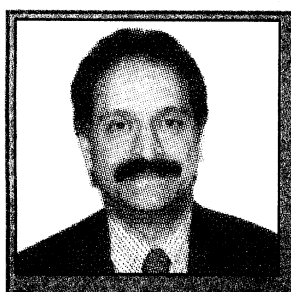

Army families will be less likely to go ahead and charge those cards back up again because that pain of paying them off will still be in their minds, she said.

Editors note: June Walbert is a certified financial planner with USAA with more than 17 years of experience in the military and presently serves as a lieutenant colonel in the Army Reserve.

Girl Scouts go global on Thinking Day

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

More than 75 Fort Benning Girl Scouts visited a dozen countries Saturday -- and it only took three hours at Dexter Elementary School.

It was part of Thinking Day, an annual event for Girl Scouts worldwide. Scouts set up displays about a variety of countries, from Egypt to Panama. Displays included photographs and samples of the languages, currency and the general favorite, food.

Some of the food was good, said 8-year-old Galadriel Burrell, who "learned a lot" by sampling the different flavors and looking at the displays.

"It was awesome that we went to all these different countries and learned about each one," she said. "It was cool that we didn't have to go on a plane and go all the way around the world. That would cost a lot of money."

Even for Girl Scouts who had attended Thinking Day before, there were new countries and new things to learn.

"It's something that you don't see every day," said 12-year-old Jana Hobbs, who attended last year. "You get to see pictures, flags, the different clothes they wear. You get to smell and taste the food. It feels like you went to the place. It seems like you stay there for a day, not an hour or two hours, because of how much they show you and how much you learn about it."

Children had an opportunity to learn from people who lived in different countries.

Wearing a hambok, a traditional Korean dress, Sara Sawyer showed Scouts some of the items she had picked up in Korea while her husband was stationed there.

Finding out about other nations helps kids realize how much they have in common with people across the globe, Sawyer said.

"Every culture has connections," she said. "It's important for children to make connections from their culture to another culture ... to see that we have more similarities than differences. It's all about harmony. It's a world community, a global marketplace."

In the spirit of community, girls exchanged handmade pins that represented their country. At the end of the day, every girl had a pin from each of the 12 countries.

Girls on post can travel "Girl Scout style" next year by joining a troop. Contact Shannon Moon, Fort Benning Girl Scouts director, at 706-610-5524.

Program: Prepares kids to stay home alone safely

will focus on increasing fire safety awareness, helping parents and children develop better communication and trust, and helping them evaluate whether a child is ready to stay home alone.

Home Alone was introduced to the Fort Benning community through information sessions this week.

"We want parents and kids to attend the sessions together," said Richard Baker, Fort Benning fire inspector and Home Alone organizer. "That way, parents can go home and teach the lessons to their kids, and kids will be able to see where their parents are coming from."

At the information sessions, families received a handbook with fire safety and first-aid tips, as well as the five steps of the program's ALONE acronym for ensuring a safe stay alone: Assess if you are ready, Learn about safety, Organize your home, Negotiate the terms and Evaluate. It also included a contract for parents and children to sign outlining behavior and safety expectations.

There isn't a single right age for leaving a child home alone, Baker said. Some factors parents should consider when deciding whether to leave a child home alone include maturity level, time of day and length of time the child will be home alone, whether there are trusted neighbors nearby, and how easy or difficult it is for the child to reach a parent at work.

"You have to know your own kid," he said. "Do they do their homework when asked? Do they do their chores? Do they have to be asked numerous times?"

For children's safety, it essential families create a fire safety plan before leaving a child home alone, said Arthur Simmons, chief of Fort Benning Fire Department.

"Having a fire safety plan can almost guarantee folks will get out of a fire without getting hurt," he said.

Although parents need to establish ground rules for activities that could pose safety risks, such as cooking, it is ultimately the child's responsibility to follow those rules while home alone, Baker said. If a child does not follow the rules, he encourages parents to re-evaluate whether the child should stay home alone.

"Being left home alone is a privilege, not a right," he said.

A Home Alone information session will be held from 9 to 11 a.m. Saturday at the Patton Village community center. For more information, call Richard J. Baker Jr. at 706-604-2237 or e-mail richard.j.baker@us.army.mil.

Prayer: Is about conversations with God

times when God won't answer when you want him to, but he will answer. Carver encouraged the audience to ask God questions.

"It's good for us to cry up those questions (to God) like 'why?' And 'Lord, where are you?' because that begins a conversation with God. And that is what prayer is all about. We have a conversation with everybody else. But are you conversing with the Lord and asking him the questions?" he said.

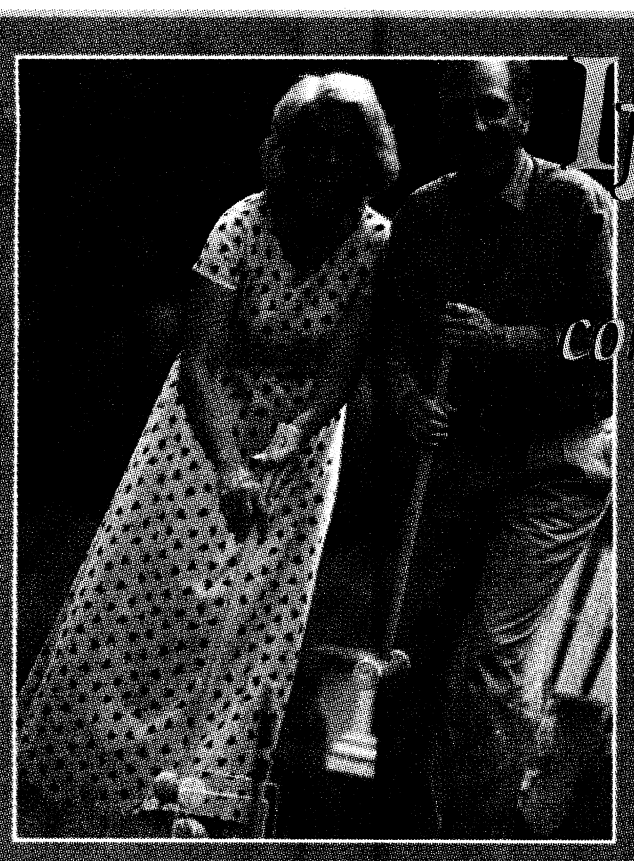

Carver emphasized the importance of having hope in God and praying for the Fort Benning community, the nation and the world.

The future of the nation depends upon one thing — the favor of God, said Chaplain (COL) Scott Davis.

"Hopefully this (event) will inspire you today and every day to take a moment to pray for our nation," Davis said.

Roman Catholic, Jewish, Protestant Christian and Muslim chaplains prayed for the nation and the military. The National Prayer Breakfast, originally called the Presidential Prayer Breakfast, has been celebrated — by individuals, the president and cabinet members — around the nation every February for 56 years.

FEMA grant helps Fort Mitchell fire department

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Thanks to a Federal Emergency Management Agency grant, the Fort Mitchell, Ala., Volunteer Fire Department has received new equipment, making the department the most technologically advanced in Russell County.

"If it hadn't been for the grant, we would be in dire straits," said Bob Franklin, fire chief.

The fire department, which has an annual operating budget of $30,000, was in desperate need of new equipment to help it meet National Fire Protection Association standards for 2009, Franklin said.

The $128,000 grant allowed the fire department to purchase an air compressor, 18 self-contained breathing apparatuses, or portable air tanks, and a wireless computer system that links a fire fighter's air tank, helmet and breathing gear to a laptop console in the fire truck.

Prior to receiving the new equipment in mid-February, the department owned only seven Self Contained Breathing Apparatuses for a force of 29 volunteer firefighters. The tanks were 15 years old and did not meet the newest NFPA standards, which meant firefighters' lives could be in danger, Franklin said.

"We just had to hope no one got hurt," he said.

The new equipment will also increase firefighters' safety through a more advanced version of the personal accountability safety system, tracking devices firefighters wear into a fire. Once a firefighter swipes his key card to sign into his PASS device, it tracks his movement, air tank level and pressure, and the ambient temperature around him. Firefighters in the truck can monitor their colleagues' movement inside a fire on the laptop, and can send a warning to their PASS devices to get out of a fire if necessary.

The new gear is easier to operate thanks to simplified buttons that allow firefighters to put on their breathing gear more easily in a fire, said fire captain SSG Kevin Duquette, Warrior Transition Battalion.

"With a normal (breathing) regulator, we'd have to turn it, find the hole and turn it a quarter turn," he said. "With this one, I turn it and then click it into place with one finger."

Duquette, who has served with the Fort Mitchell fire department for more than a year, received the Veterans of Foreign Wars national award for firefighter of the year in mid-February.

The new equipment will greatly improve firefighters' effectiveness, Franklin said.

"When we only owned seven air packs before, we could only have two or three people inside a fire at a time because of the 'two in, two out' rule," he said. "What this new equipment does is give us the ability to do an interior attack on a fire instead of waiting outside for the fire to come to us. If you can get inside a fire, you can prevent a lot more damage."

The fire department's new air compressor, which can fill three portable air storage tanks, or cascade tanks, at once, will save it a lot of time and energy, Duquette said.

"Before, we would have to go to Phenix City to fill them, and since they're really heavy, it would take a lot of guys to lift and transport them," he said. "And now we can fill them right here."

Although the grant and the new equipment will be a great help to the fire department, it is still in need of financial support, Franklin said.

"We had to match 5 percent of the grant, or nearly $6,000, and that ate up 20 percent of our budget," he said. "We'd like for people to call their politicians and let them know they want fire protection services."

California Soldiers loosen up with therapy dog

Boe gives Soldiers sense of home

1LT Caleb Christians
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

CONTINGENCY OPERATING BASE SPEICHER, Iraq — Soldiers from 1st Battalion, 185th Armor Regiment, California Army National Guard, pet and hug their stress away with a little help from "SFC Boe."

Boe is a 4-year-old English Labrador retriever, donated to the Army by the Guide Dog Foundation, through the America's Vet Dogs project. She lives on Speicher and works as a therapy dog.

Boe accompanies CPT Cecelia Najera, an occupational therapist with the 528th Medical Detachment. Boe, who holds the honorary rank of sergeant first class, makes the rounds visiting the different units that reside on the base.

"Her purpose is to bring Soldiers a reminder of home and offer a sense of comfort and well being," Najera said.

The use of animals for therapeutic purposes goes as far back as 1699 with the English philosopher John Locke suggesting the importance of children interacting with animals.

The U.S. military began pushing for the use of therapy dogs in 1919 after success with "shell-shocked" Soldiers.

Today, therapy dogs fall under the category of animal-assisted therapy. Such animals are used as both physical and psychological therapy. Psychological benefits include the reduction of stress and anxiety, and the overall improvement of morale. On the physical side, therapy increases range of motion, strength and balance, and minimizes the need for preoperative medication.

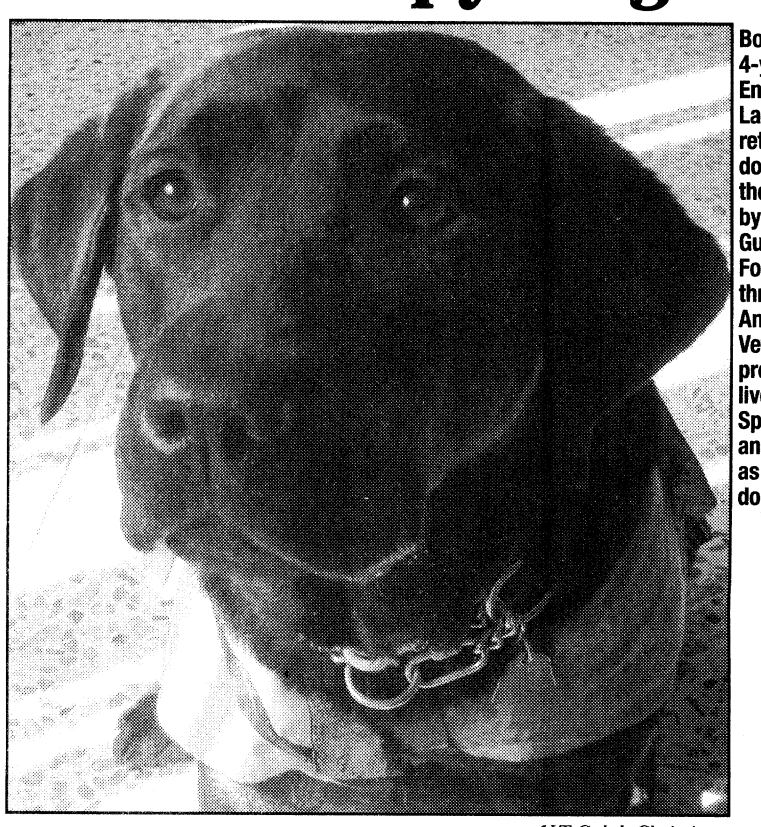

The interaction between animals and humans has only been recently explored in the academic realm. In 1984, Harvard biologist Dr. Ed Wilson wrote Biophilia: The Human Bond With Other Species. Today, it is not uncommon to see therapy animals roaming the halls of nursing homes.

For Soldiers of 1st Bn., 185th Armor Regt., Boe provides a distraction from everyday life at Speicher.

"It's fun to have her around," said PFC Stephen Driedger.

CPL Matt Brown said that spending time with Boe helped him unwind.

"Petting Boe is very relaxing," Brown said. "And it's nice throwing her dog treats."

Want your children to learn responsibility? Start early

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Last week, I introduced behavioral therapist James Lehman and how he has six steps to help parents teach children to be responsible and grow to be responsible members of society. Here are three:

• Start as early as possible: As early as you can in your child's life, make them take responsibility for the things with which they're involved. For instance, have your child pick up his toys before he goes to bed. If he has a hard time concentrating on that because he's young, get down on the floor and pick them up with him. But don't do it for him. Even if you pick up one and he picks up one, he learns to take care of his responsibilities.

I think you should give kids alarm clocks early in life. This helps them learn the responsibility of setting the clock at night, waking up and shutting it off. This teaches them at a young age that they're individuals and have individual responsibilities.

• Identify responsibilities and use responsible language: When your child completes a task, tell him, "Nice way to follow through on your responsibility," or "I like the way you took care of that responsibility." Use language like that. Tell the child he has met his responsibility — the more you identify responsibility, the more conscious your child becomes of it.

It's important for children to understand they're getting rewarded for completing their responsibility, not for being cute, loveable or chummy. The earlier you connect the reward to the responsibility, the more clearly that becomes associated in your child's mind.

• The Power of Example: It's important as a parent to meet your own responsibilities consistently, and to label it. You can say, "My responsibility is to go to work and I'm doing it today." If your child asks, "Where are you going, Mommy?" Say, "I'm going to work. That's my responsibility." The idea is modeling the right behavior. You're a prime example. As a parent, when you tell your child you're going to do something, it becomes your responsibility to do it. So, don't make promises you can't keep. Be a prime example to your child when meeting responsibilities and be sure to use that language.

• Teach and Coach Responsibility: I think it's important to explain to children what responsibility means. "Responsibilities are like commitments or promises — they're the things you have to do, the things that are your job, and the things you're involved in, where other people are depending on you. So if you play with your toys, it's your responsibility to put them away." Or "If you make a sandwich, it's your responsibility to put the dishes in the dishwasher."

Coach your child into meeting their responsibilities. It's very important kids be coached and not just lectured to. A coach doesn't just go out and shoot the basketball shots. During the course of the game he says, "Great shot. Good shot. No, you gotta try harder. Do it this way." And he coaches instead of criticizes. In the same way, I think it's important to coach kids about their responsibilities.

By the way, criticism has a place in life. But in this situation with kids, it only makes them defensive when you start to scold them about something that didn't get done right.

Stay tuned for the last three steps. For more information, call at 706-545-1760 or stop by 2606 Dixie Road in Soldiers' Plaza.

Let God anchor your soul, find source of true hope

Chaplain (CPT) Mark Miller
2ND BATTALION, 54TH INFANTRY REGIMENT

Remember the old advertisement for milk? It proclaimed the health benefits of drinking milk, of making it an everyday part of your life. Milk, it said, does a body good.

I know how good real milk can be, especially with Oreo cookies or a peanut butter and jelly sandwich. I have to admit, though, milk has disappointed me. Particularly that milk you get on deployments; you know, that pre-packaged long-shelf-life stuff that has no resemblance to real milk. When I drank it, it disappointed me. But when I returned home to a nice, cold refreshing glass of milk from a cow I was reminded why I like the real thing so much.

My wife sometimes buys a "healthy" sausage substitute. Even our cat won't eat that, much less our kids. And there's the coffee substitute — "instant" coffee. Coffee is made to be brewed, not instantly created from a cup of flavored crystals dissolved in hot water. A substitute for anything is just not as good as the real deal.

It's true that we often try to fill our lives with things that disappoint us. Instead of eating healthy and exercising, we embrace fad diets and order pills that are supposed to burn away the fat in 30 days. Instead of working through problems when they arise, we pretend they don't exist until they become a crisis. Instead of seeking help when there is a crisis, we think we are capable of handling it on our own, and often try to do so, only to find out that there is no substitute for a good friend and quality advice. It's easy to disappoint yourself, and even easier to disappoint others.

When disappointment comes, then comes the degradation of hope. And when hope is lost, there is truly a problem.

It's been said that when hope is lost, all is lost. There is simply no substitute for hope. You either have it or you don't.

Hope has been described as an anchor for the soul. One time when I was fishing on a river, I found a really great spot where I knew there were fish. I wanted to stay there. However, the river's current kept pulling me away from that spot. I was constantly drifting away and had to use the trolling motor to get back into position to catch fish. Then it dawned on me to drop my anchor. It was amazing how much easier it was to stay where I wanted to be. I needed that anchor. I've discovered there are many places in life where I need an anchor also. When the current of life pulls us away from the hope we have and threatens to wash us away downstream, we need a steadfast anchor.

Finding that anchor can be the issue.

There's a lot written about hope. Go to any self-help section in a book store and you'll find a plethora. Here's a couple bits of insight from the No. 1 best seller of all time — the Bible.

Paul writes to Timothy: "This is a trustworthy saying that deserves full acceptance ... that we have put our hope in the living God." And David writes in the Psalm: "No one whose hope is in you (God) will ever be put to shame."

Both Paul and David disappointed other people, but their source of hope never disappointed either one of them. The letter to the Hebrews declares: "Let us hold unswervingly to the hope we profess, for he who promised is faithful." I think your experience will validate that there is no substitute for true hope.

The question is, where will you turn to find the real deal? Consider your faith. Milk comes from cows. Maybe it's time to ask where true hope comes from.

My Field of Screens opened Valentine's Day weekend with the romantic films P.S. I Love You and The Notebook. A business venture started by four Alabama friends, Field of Screens relies on customer feedback for future movie selection. The owners also welcome constructive criticism, event ideas and questions via their Web site at www.myfieldofscreens.com or www.myspace.com/fieldofscreens. Unless there is severe weather, the drive-in theater is open every Friday and Saturday.

Get the big picture in bygone style

At 6 feet, 4 inches, Ryan Steff stands next to the movie screen, which measures roughly 28 feet tall and 42 feet wide. The lot has space for more than 100 cars, but the screen is visible from each location. Strings of lights illuminate the five rows where moviegoers can park.

THE BAYONET

Saturday night — a drive-in movie and big bowl of popcorn to share with my sweetheart, just like I remember it.

Wait, no. That's not right at all. Drive-in movie theaters reached their heyday back in the '50s, and I didn't reach my first birthday until 1987. With DVDs and megaplex theaters the order of the day, I had never even seen, let alone visited, a drive-in.

But something about last Saturday made me feel nostalgic. Underneath the stars — which were unfortunately hidden behind clouds — I sat in my car, tuned my radio to 87.9 FM and turned my eyes to the big screen in front of me. It was a date night borrowed from my grandparents and one to remember for a long time to come.

Field of Screens opened two weeks ago, just in time for Valentine's Day, when the theater packed in more than 60 cars. With five rows, you'll have a good seat anywhere in the "house." Someone will be there with a flashlight to direct you to your spot, even if you come late.

Located off of Lee Road 179 in Salem, Ala., this double feature theater lets the public pick the movies by votes tallied on the Web site: www.myfieldofscreens.com. The first movie begins at 8 p.m. EST and the second usually around 10:30 p.m. EST, following a brief intermission. Gates open at 7 p.m. EST.

Before each film, you can enjoy old-time favorites like Mighty Mouse and The Three Stooges. Concessions are available at prices more reasonable than their indoor theater counterparts. It costs around a buck for a drink or a box of candy. Or you can bring your own snacks, even a late dinner, to munch on during the movie.

Ticket prices are per person, not per car: $7 for adults and $3 for children ages 12 and younger. By popular demand, movie selections for today and Saturday are Happy Feet and The Astronaut Farmer. You have the option of staying for both films or coming just for one.

To suggest a movie, get directions or learn about the founders of Field of Screens, visit www.myfieldofscreens.com or www.myspace.com/fieldofscreens.

But what they don't know is that they've entered the domain of Jason Voorhees, a killer who haunts Crystal Lake armed with a machete.

CONFESSIONS OF A SHOPAHOLIC

Rebecca Bloomwood lives in New York City and has a growing problem — she's hopelessly addicted to shopping and drowning in a sea of debt.

Rebecca dreams of working for a top fashion magazine, but can't quite get her foot in the door until she lands a job as an advice columnist for a new financial magazine published by the same company. For As Low As $49

In one day, local Columbus dealer must eliminate Millions of Dollars worth of pre-owned vehicles.

Columbus, GA
Saturday, February 28, 2009 Carl Gregory on Victory Drive is holding its biggest pre-owned super sale in the history of the company.
Saturday, February 28, 2009, they plan to eliminate their entire pre-owned inventory by means of a

"Eliminator Sale,"

During this one-day event, every pre-owned vehicle will be offered for Incredible low prices - including vehicles for only $49.

Why price them so low? Jay Webb, Used Car Manager at Carl Gregory on Victory Drive, offers this explanation for this unprecedented sale. "We've already had record sales in our new car department this year, and we're overstocked with trade-ins. Then we've added a big inventory of factory program cars and some real bargains we've gotten at the auction. So, now we're over-loaded with inventory. It's that simple." Webb adds, "Our goal is to reduce the amount of our overall inventory to a more manageable number, and to do that, we've got to price this inventory ridiculously low. Expect cars to be marked with incredible prices."

Webb further added, "The community has shown us great support throughout the years, and we're very grateful. We would rather give these great deals to the customer than unload these vehicles at the auction. We believe that people will not only enjoy getting a great deal, they'll also have a lot of fun doing it. Imagine the excitement of being able to buy a vehicle for just $49. Not $49 down, $49 flat."

Almost 200 pre-owned cars, trucks, vans & SUV's are available for this huge event. "We absolutely must reduce our pre-owned inventory at all costs; so customers can expect these vehicles to be sold at incredible low prices," he stated. "We truly will have a vehicle for everyone's budget."

These vehicles are available at this price, Saturday, February 28, 2009, at Carl Gregory on Victory Drive, in Columbus, GA. Special arrangements have been made for a record number of customers, with event parking clearly marked.

According to Kevin Bragg, General Sales Manager at Carl Gregory on Victory Drive, here's how the $49 "Eliminator Sale" works: Saturday, February 28, 2009, precisely at 9:45 am, the gates will be opened so that customers may inspect the vehicles. When the $49 "Eliminator Sale" begins at 10:00 am, whoever is sitting behind the wheel of the vehicle will have the first chance to purchase the vehicle at the "Eliminator Sale" price. Prices will be marked one time to the "Rock Bottom" price, including vehicles for only $49. This "Eliminator Sale" is not for auto dealers, employees of the dealership, and its affiliates, are not permitted to participate. Carl Gregory on Victory Drive has arranged for special finance and credit analysts to be on hand. If you've had trouble in the past securing auto credit, don't count yourself out. If you'll bring your current payroll stub and your driver's license, chances are we can arrange your financing.

The "Eliminator Sale" will be the biggest event we've ever had," stated Bragg.

Customers are required to come early and register for entry to this incredible sale. Registration to participate begins at 8:00 AM. "We expect a record number of people to leave with great vehicles at unheard-of, low prices."

"If you've been waiting for a great deal on a great pre-owned vehicle, your wait is over. The $49 "Eliminator Sale" will be held Saturday, February 28, 2009. You'll have the perfect opportunity to get a quality vehicle at a substantial savings while we drastically reduce our inventory." The

President orders 12,000 troops to Afghanistan

Jim Garamone
AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama has ordered a Marine expeditionary brigade and an Army Stryker brigade combat team — totaling 12,000 Soldiers and Marines — to Afghanistan.

Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates signed the orders Tuesday. The Soldiers are part of the 2nd Infantry Division's 5th Stryker Brigade Combat Team based at Fort Lewis, Wash., and the Marines serve with the 2nd Marine Expeditionary Brigade from Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Of the 12,000, 4,000 are Soldiers and the remaining 8,000 are Marines. Both units will deploy later this spring.

This is the president's first deployment decision.

"There is no more solemn duty as president than the decision to deploy our armed forces into harm's way," Obama said in a written statement released by the White House. "I do it today mindful that the situation in Afghanistan

Fire suppression technology was demonstrated on Kelley Hill Feb. 11. The demonstration showcased products designed to extinguish fire, be environmentally safe and return the burning material back to the ambient temperature in moments.

The fire suppression agent and thermal protective system were designed to increase Soldier's effectiveness and lifesaving options in a combat situation, said Andrew M. Allen, with Global Safety Labs, Inc.

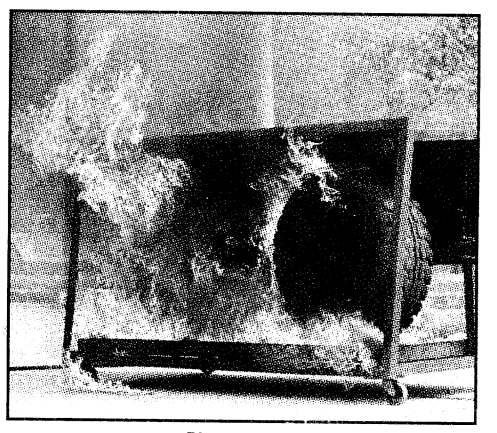

"Anything that is going to provide additional safety is worth looking at," said LTC Kenneth J. Harvey, commander of 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment. "This brigade was hard hit by fire-related deaths during the last deployment."

The demonstration included a humvee, complete with mannequins in Army Combat Uniforms, set on fire using propane bombs. The installed suppression system extinguished the blaze in moments, with no visible damage to the vehicle.

Representatives displayed a fire-resistant cloth designed for mission specific clothing, such as flight suits and protective garments. After repeated blasts with a propane torch, the material showed little to no effects from the heat.

Demonstrators also coated themselves with the product and put a torch to their skin in an effort to prove their product's effectiveness.

"Overall there are some valuable applications here for keeping Soldiers safer and increasing mission effectiveness," Harvey said.

Sustainability conference set for April 7-8

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The public is invited to learn about current and upcoming green technology at the Bridging the GAPS conference April 7-8 at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center. Sponsored by the Georgia Alabama Partnership for Sustainability and Fort Benning, the event is free of charge.

The conference is modeled after a sustainability conference initiated by Fort Carson, Colo., in 2003, said Peter Lukken, Fort Benning's sustainability planner.

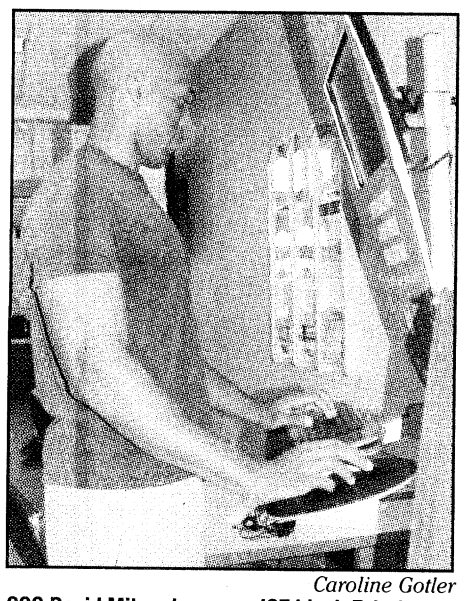

Similarly, this conference is designed to become an annual event that will keep business, military and community leaders in the region up-to-date with advances in green technology, he said.

"We need to share what's out there with environmental energy," Lukken said. "One big partnership in sustainability, that's basically what this is. The latest energy and environmental technologies change so rapidly that you really have to stay abreast of what's out there and what's coming on board. This (conference) allows us to exchange ideas, look at the latest technologies and also compare notes on what we're all doing."

Fort Benning customer service representatives want your 2 cents.

Interactive Customer Evaluation, an Armywide program that has been in place at Fort Benning since 2003, offers customer satisfaction surveys for 275 services on Fort Benning. More services will be added to ICE in the future, said Bernard Goss, Fort Benning customer service officer.

ICE aims to provide a customer service rating for each service on post, Goss said.

Customers can take ICE surveys at the ICE Web site or at the 20 ICE kiosks on post. Feedback from surveys goes directly to the program's director or designated representative. To receive a response within 72 hours, customers can choose the "feedback requested" option on the survey.

"(Staff) look at whether it would be a change that's viable to make their program better overall," Goss said. "Or if it's something they can't implement at that time, they'll keep a record of it and let the individual know."

Based on overwhelmingly negative ICE customer feedback, the post ID card section changed its appointment system in January to eliminate non-emergency walk-ins. Since the new system was implemented, customer satisfaction has increased from 82 percent to 97 percent.

"ICE has been very, very, very important to us," said Irma Mason, chief of Fort Benning's personnel services branch. "Without the customer complaints, we would probably still be where we were before."

BOLC II platoon mentor named Reserve Officer of the Year

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

For CPT Curt Owens, serving in the Army Reserve is about just that: service.

"It's been rewarding because it's a way to serve the country, specifically during these times when we're relying so heavily on our Army. I love doing it," said Owens, who was named the Army Reserve Outstanding Junior Officer of the Year Feb. 1.

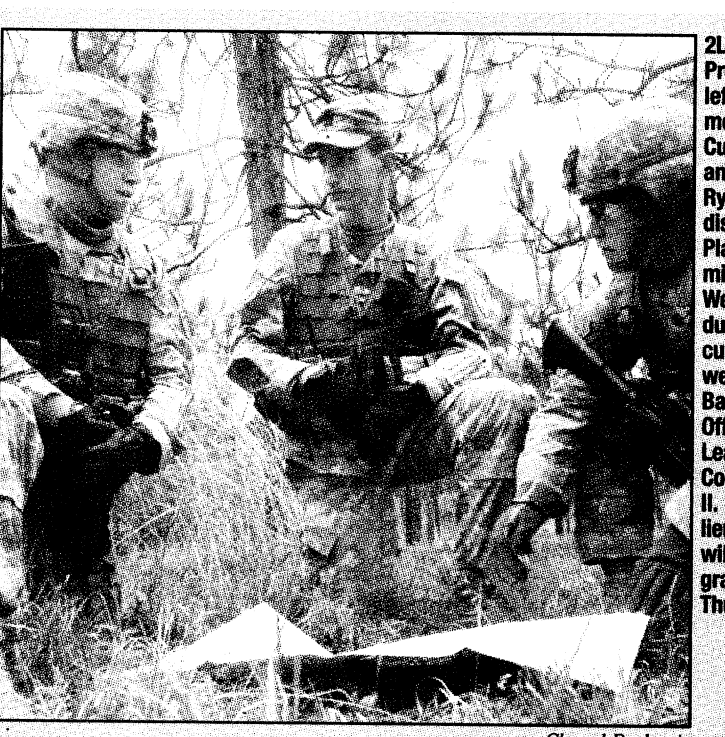

Owens joined the Reserve in 1992.

"I had gone to college for a year and needed a little more structured environment, so I enlisted," he said. "My grades didn't reflect someone who was ready to excel academically at the college level."

With plans for business already on the horizon, Owens chose the Reserve so he could pursue a civilian career. Now, he is a co-owner of a software firm that develops applications for law enforcement.

"The Reserve prides itself on being citizen-Soldiers, and that's kind of how I see myself, to serve when my country calls and then

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Priorities key to all we do at Fort Benning

MG MICHAEL BARBERO
Commanding General

It has been just over 90 days since I took command here and want to say that Linda and I absolutely love being part of this world-class community. From our great Soldiers, Families and Civilians we have working here, to the unbelievable relationship we share with our partners in the Chattahoochee Valley Region, Fort Benning is a wonderful place to live and serve.

Last week I took the opportunity to bring junior and senior leaders from across Fort Benning to discuss some of my initial observations and the command priorities. Our priorities go to the core of all that we do here.

There are four priorities that I have. At the United States Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning we will:

• Fully Support an Army at War

We are charged to provide trained, adaptive and ready leaders and Soldiers for our Army at war.

We will support the needs of the operating force with tailored courses, training and mobile training teams. We will also support our deploying units with training resources and deployment support and, at the same time, provide first class support to their families.

• Prepare for the Future

Our priority here is to build the Maneuver Center of Excellence and fully integrate the Armor School on time and to standard. With the large population increase we will grow and improve our post facilities to continue to provide world-class opportunities for our Soldiers and Families. As we work the MCOE transition, we also have to ensure that equipping our Soldiers and enabling our Soldiers with the latest technologies remains our number one priority and a priority program for the Army.

• Enhance the Quality of Life for our Soldiers and Army Families

We're going to make the Army Family Covenant a reality — we're working to develop and execute an action plan to achieve the goals of the Covenant. We also want to ensure excellence in Army housing, for all of our individual Soldiers and Army Families. Providing our leaders time for professional and personal development is also key. We want to return better trained leaders to the operating force.

• Operate in a Command Climate of Teamwork, Discipline and Standards, Safety and Empowered Leadership

We will work to strengthen the team of teams that exists across Fort Benning with leaders, at all levels, who understand that leadership is a team sport. Our goal is to develop Soldiers who set the standard across the Army for being disciplined. We also want to be recognized as the doctrinal and tactical experts in the Army. We want leaders across the Army to say, "Call Fort Benning and ask the experts how to do this." Continually attracting and recruiting the best Civilians, NCOs and Officers to serve here is also key.

Safety of our Soldiers is a concern to me. We've had too many fatalities and injuries here as a result of accidents.

I firmly believe that accidents are almost always the result of a failure in leadership or an act of indiscipline.

The leader's job is to build Soldiers who are self-disciplined and who will do the right thing when the chain of command is not present.

We need to train Soldiers on how to eliminate hazards to themselves and our Army Families. Soldiers must also be responsible for their battle buddy and be ready to intervene when their battle buddy is about to do something reckless or harmful.

Overall, our leaders, Soldiers and Civilians are all doing a great job. We have a very talented group of leaders, Soldiers and Civilians here.

What we do here is critical to the Army at war and, therefore, it is vitally important that we focus on our key priorities. Accordingly, we'll soon be hanging posters around post that reinforce our mission and priorities.

We are entering a period of change, uncertainty and a continued high op tempo — both the Army and Fort Benning. For us to be successful, we must all "give way" together.

We need to continually ask ourselves, "What have we done for a Fort Benning Soldier today?"

How do you define 'green'

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

What does being green mean to you?

When the "go green" wave hit a few years back, I didn't catch on. My heart doesn't lie in sympathy with the whales, I can't work up a tear, hardly a frown, for a tree, and I shop at Wal-Mart … using plastic bags.

But as I've looked further into the environmental movement, I've realized I share much in common with its most avid supporters. Using our resources wisely means eliminating waste and saving money, and that means more resources available for the future.

Going green — or "sustainable," a word I learned here on Fort Benning — is all about planning ahead. Sustainable materials can be used in building. These are products that can be recycled and won't mar our landscape 20 years down the road. Other green technology saves money by harvesting natural resources, like the sun and rainwater, to our benefit. And eco-friendly habits like taking shorter showers, carpooling to work and turning off lights translate directly into cheaper water, gas and power bills.

So many of these ideas are in place on post. We have a DoD-sponsored van pool and clean commuter rewards through the Clean Air Campaign. The post also uses some electrical vehicles, which produce no air pollution.

Infantry Hall is going to get a complete makeover this year that will bring it in line with the 21st century. We'll be looking at recycling bins on every floor, solar cells on the roof and an advanced rainwater harvesting system.

Fort Benning is blessed with a healthy long leaf pine population, home to the red-cockaded woodpecker, an endangered species. As the installation expands with the incoming Armor School, these pines are being protected wherever possible.

Fort Benning has also been instrumental, more than once, in providing a site to test green technology. This kind of research lets us continue to look for new and smarter ways to use our resources.

The sustainable showcase in Infantry Hall is a testament to that effort. In those offices, you will find chairs, tables and carpet made from recycled materials. Not only that, but many of the products are manufactured in an environmentally responsible way, limiting chemical use in the construction process and planning for the future of the pieces, which can be recycled again.

The point is, you don't have to give up paper towels, but don't grab three when half of one will do. If you're like me, you'll use a quarter, one-eighth, just to limit waste.

My husband and I installed a lamp in one room where the lighting in place used a lot of energy. We wash clothes in cold water to save on heating. We buy whole ingredients, like apples and carrots, to save on packaging. We also keep the thermostat off whenever possible — though I gave in for about two weeks this January when temperatures dropped.

We recycle our cell phones. We reuse water bottles. We open curtains for light. We bike to the library.

So what does green really mean? Get your hands out from around that tree and put them to work instead using resources efficiently.

For the big picture on going green, read about the sustainability conference on A1.

TO ADVERTISE IN THE BAYONET, CALL 706-576-6239

1st Bn., 329th Inf., leaves post, 1st Bn., 330th Inf., arrives

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

LTC Richard Unda, the commander of the 1st Battalion, 329th Infantry Regiment, 198th Infantry Brigade, rolled up and cased the battalion's colors at a change of authority ceremony Tuesday at Kanell Field.

Of the more than 100 Soldiers in the unit, 38 will demobilize and return home. The rest have volunteered to stay at Fort Benning with the new command, the 1st Bn., 330th Inf. Regt., from Fort Wayne, Ind., which is attached to the 198th Inf. Bde.

The 1st Bn., 329th Inf. Regt., assigned to Fort Benning in March 2008, completed 13 training cycles, including one station unit training, split operations and basic combat training, and graduated more than 2,600 Soldiers. The 1st Bn., 329th Inf. Regt., will return to its headquarters in Bloomington, Ind.

Their efforts ensured Soldiers were prepared to deploy and fight in the Global War on Terrorism, said COL Daniel Kessler, commander of the 198th Inf. Bde.

"Their dedication and excellence and detail to training Infantrymen will have a lasting impact on our Army for many years to come," he said.

LTC David Tate, commander of the 1st Bn., 330th Inf. Regt., said the battalion looks forward to supporting the brigade's wartime mission.

"We accept the challenge of establishing a safe environment that adheres to Army standards," he said. "These young Soldiers are part of the Army Family and we will ensure these future Infantrymen will be able to meet the challenges the future holds.

The 1st Bn., 330th Inf. Regt., which includes five companies, will begin their first cycle Friday.

Better education benefits on horizon for Soldiers, families

C. Todd Lopez
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A full ride to college is on the way for qualified Soldiers and veterans. The "Post-9/11 Veteran's Education Assistance Act Of 2008," sometimes called the "Post-9/11 G.I. Bill," paves the way for thousands of qualified Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, Marines and military veterans to get a complete four-year degree at no cost to themselves.

Soldiers and veterans can begin applying for benefits under the Post-9/11 G.I. Bill beginning Aug. 1. Benefits from the program can be paid out for a total of 36 months. Under a typical degree program, where students attend school for nine months at a time and are then off during the summer months, the plan would allow veterans to get a four-year degree while attending school in residence.

"We've moved from a program that pays in essence a flat rate to individuals, to a program that is based on what it is actually costing an individual to go to college," said Keith Wilson, director of education services for Veteran's Affairs.

Under the Montgomery G.I. Bill program, the VA sent out individual checks to recipients, and recipients used the money any way they saw fit: for tuition, housing, food, etc., Wilson said. But the payment was not based on how much their tuition cost.

The new program changes all that. The Post-9/11 G.I. Bill, Wilson said, pays for tuition by sending payments directly to the school. It pays for student housing by sending a payment to the student with an additional payment for books and supplies going directly to the student.

With the Post-9/11 G.I. Bill, a Soldier may be entitled to tuition payments equal to the cost of the most expensive public, undergraduate, in-state tuition and fees in his or her home state. For instance: a student learns that the most expensive public state school in the state of their home of record costs $1,250 for a semester of courses. If the student opts to attend a private school instead, that school will receive up to $1,250 a semester for tuition.

Tuition is not the only benefit extended to potential college-goers. For students attending school more than half the time, the Post-9/11 G.I. Bill also pays housing costs, up to a rate equivalent to the Basic Allowance for Housing rate for an E-5 with dependents in the ZIP code where the school is located.

If a student attends school in Charlotte, N.C, for instance, the BAH rate in the area for an E-5 with dependants is $1,179. The student would then receive that much money for rent each month — even if he or she has no dependents.

Soldiers on active duty may tap in to the Post-9/11 G.I. Bill and apply benefits toward tuition, books and supplies. However, active-duty Soldiers are not entitled to receive the housing allowance from the program.

Students are entitled to a yearly stipend of up to $1,000 to cover the cost of books and supplies, and students from highly rural areas who are transferring to a school may also be entitled to a one-time payment of $500.

Perhaps one of the best-known benefits of the Post-9/11 G.I. Bill is the ability to transfer the benefits to one's dependents.

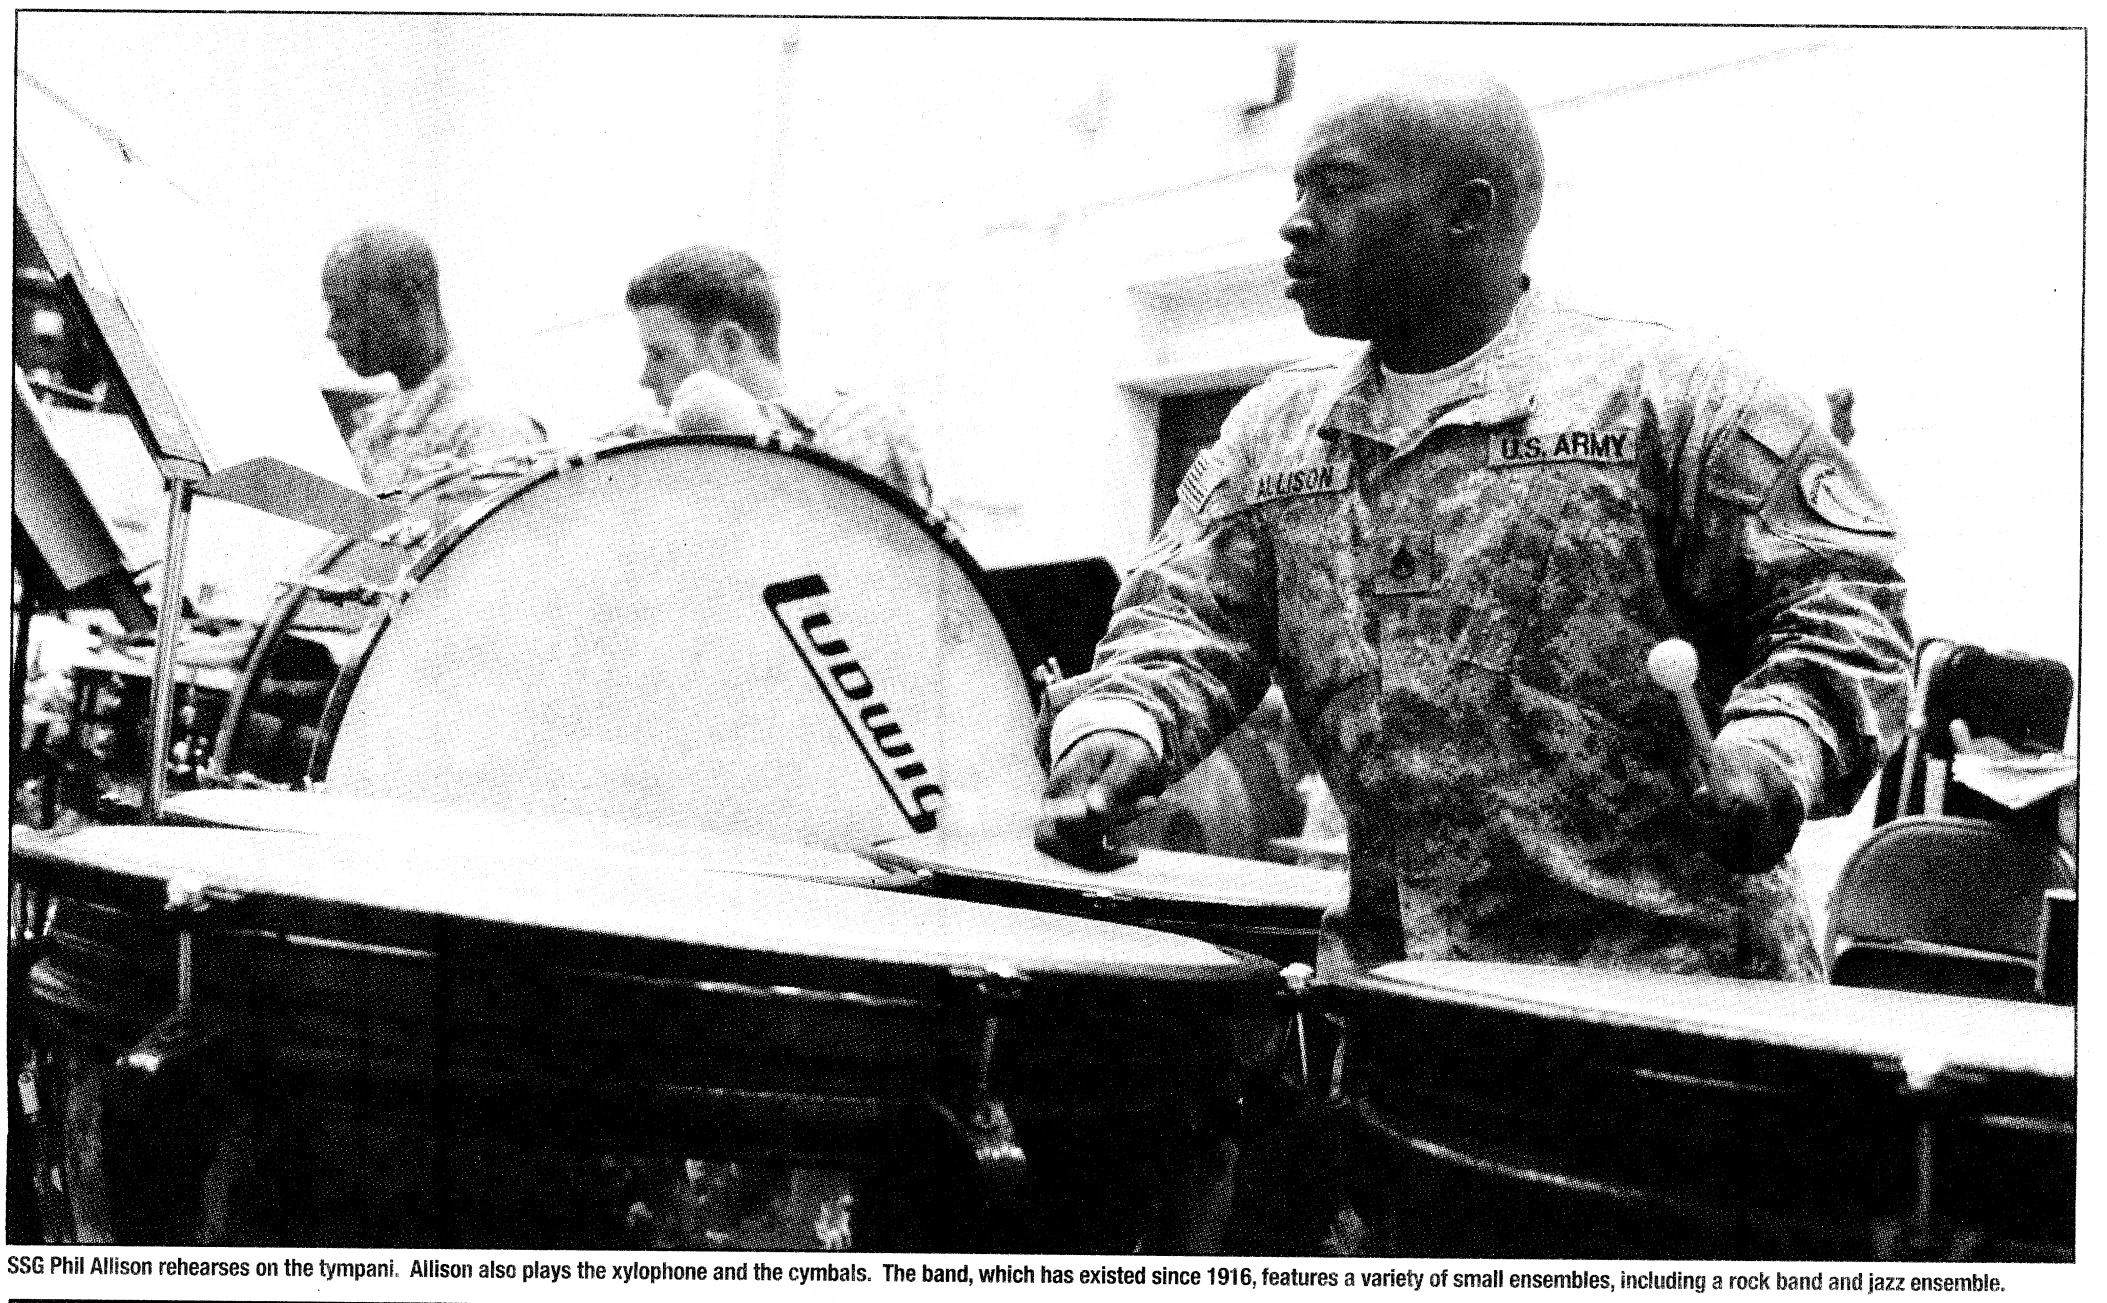

"For a lot of folks, that's a key issue," Wilson said of the change. "That section of the bill was specifically designed as a retention tool. And it is set up for those individuals who have served six years in the Armed Forces and agree to serve an additional period of service after Aug. 1, 2009."

The details of who may transfer benefits to their family members, however, are being set by the military services, not the Veterans Administration. That policy has not yet been determined.

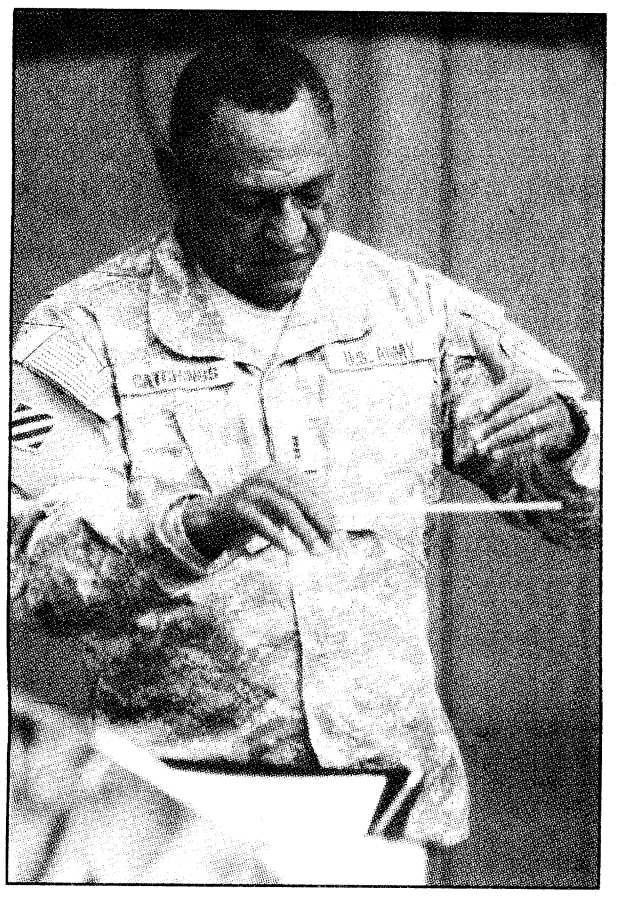

Unlike the MGIB, which required Soldiers to pay up to $1,200 to participate, the Post-9/11 G.I. Bill requires no such payment. All Soldiers who served after Sept. 11, 2001 may qualify for some or all of the benefits, depending on how long they served. Additionally, the program also serves National Guard and Reserve servicemembers, depending on how much time they were mobilized for active duty.

"There are different tiers of benefit payment, depending on how much active service you have," Wilson said, "How many months of active service you have after 9/11. The lowest level is for those that have between 90 days and six months of active service after 9/11."

Band serves Benning through music

"Serving the nation through music" is the motto of the U.S. Army Bands, and the members of Fort Benning's U.S. Army Infantry Center Band aim to do just that each and every day.

If you've ever attended a graduation, retirement ceremony or formal dinner on Fort Benning, chances are you've heard the Infantry Center Band play. And, while they may not be the featured Soldiers, the band members put in long hours behind the scenes to help the spotlight shine more brightly on those who are in the limelight.

"This is not just a regular 9 to 5 job," said SPC Joseph Buzzard, a saxophonist. "We play all the time, and when we're not playing, we're rehearsing for the next gig or concert that we're going to do."

An average day for a band member begins with PT in the morning and ends whenever the band's last job is over, which is sometimes late in the evening, Buzzard said.

"We usually have gigs every day, at night and on the weekends," he said.

Since the band is a self-sufficient unit, office work is also a regular part of a band member's day.

"We do double duty," said SSG Aaron Richardson, a trumpet player. "Between playing and getting our office work done, we keep a full day's schedule."

Because the band is in such high demand, rehearsal time can sometimes be cut short to accommodate extra ceremonies in the band's schedule. Musicians must be proficient enough to perform music well that they may not be very familiar with, said CW4 Fred Catchings, band commander.

"Our schedule is centered around jobs we have to do and everything else comes after that," he said. "Sometimes they must play a piece they haven't rehearsed, and that's why good sight reading skills are essential to an Army band."

Musicians are accepted into the band through auditions that are usually arranged through a local recruiter or band liaison before enlistment, Catchings said.

"They go through the same enlistment process as anybody else," he said. "My criteria as a musician are how well they execute rhythms and tone quality, if they have a mature sound and how well they take a piece of music they've never seen before and execute it."

The most challenging part of being a band member is preparing unfamiliar music with musicians from a wide variety of musical backgrounds, Buzzard said.

"A lot of people come in playing maybe one style of music, whereas we have to play all kinds of styles," he said. "We play marching music, symphonic music and jazz, so it's pretty diverse."

Being able to motivate and inspire Soldiers and families is the most rewarding part of playing in the band, said SFC Scott Weaver, a clarinetist.

"I think one of the most rewarding things that we do is play all the basic training and Officer Candidate School graduations because we get all the family members there," he said. "For some of them, it might be their first time seeing a military ceremony. When their son or daughter graduates and they get to see this big ceremony, that's rewarding."

"I think we help inspire patriotism," Richardson said. "When the band's out on the field for a ceremony, it just adds that extra touch and special flair, and really helps make the ceremony a special occasion."

CONUS Replacement Center keeps focus on readiness

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Each week approximately 400 Soldiers and civilians from around the world come to Fort Benning to prepare for deployment at the CONUS Replacement Center. The CRC, located at Harmony Church, has been the Army's one-stop shop for deployment and redeployment readiness for non-unit related personnel since the Fort Bliss, Texas CRC closed in 2007.

"A unit might be in theater and have a specific need — a medical doctor or a lawyer for example, and so they request a certain MOS," said MAJ Rufino Herrera, security officer for the CRC. "We help maintain the force in the field by providing individuals to critical areas of operation."

Soldiers of all ranks and other military branches, from multiple units, as well as contractors and Department of Defense Civilians, pass through the CRC before deploying for non-unit related missions and before redeploying to their home station.

The CRC trains personnel for deployment through a weeklong training cycle that ensures they are prepared mentally and physically, and are processed through the proper administrative channels, Herrera said.

Training cycles begin Saturday with reception of newly arrived personnel and end Thursday evening before personnel deploy each Friday. Each day of the training week is dedicated to a specific area of readiness, including administrative preparations, medical exam, theater-specific training and weapons instruction.

"Each part is equally important because we're sending someone out there who is medically and administratively qualified," said MAJ Michael Vivian, CRC operations officer. "We teach and familiarize them on things like first aid and weapons qualifications that could save their lives."

Though the CRC has shifted its focus to Iraq and Afghanistan since the Global War on Terrorism began, it still deploys personnel to more than 35 different countries, including Cuba, Germany and Kuwait, Herrera said.

The CRC will continue evolving its training programs to meet the theater commanders' changing needs to achieve mission success, Vivian said.

"We'll continue to evolve in the future as the situations progress in the theaters," he said. "The CRC is at the forefront of taking those changes and implementing them."

Caldwell offers three ways to fuel Army change

General outlines 21st-century challenges

Lance D. Davis
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON – LTG William B. Caldwell IV, commanding general of the U.S. Army Combined Arms Center and of Fort Leavenworth, Kan., introduced three mechanisms Wednesday to help fuel change in the Army.

Caldwell addressed an audience of Army leaders, retirees, congressional staffers and members of the press at the Association of the United States Army's Institute of Land Warfare breakfast in Arlington, Va., with his presentation "A Comprehensive Approach to Leader Development and Education for our Army."

In order to change the Army, Caldwell advocated first the development of agile and adaptive leaders, then a comprehensive approach to operations and lastly a culture of engagement with the media.

"We must be a lean, agile and rapidly adaptive force with the endurance and knockout power to take on and defeat any opponent, regardless of weight class," Caldwell said.

By carefully studying his adversaries, the middleweight can easily move between weight classes and defeat any opponent, Caldwell said.

"Just as with that middleweight fighter, our Army needs to be equally versatile, equally decisive and equally lethal," Caldwell said.

Teaching students to be creative, critical thinkers; increasing participation in the Command and General Staff College's Interagency Exchange Program; and the stand up of the new Army Physical Fitness Readiness Institute were ways Caldwell explained the Army could form these "agile and adaptive" leaders.

Caldwell's second idea called the Army to forge a comprehensive approach to operations.

"We have to evolve beyond our traditional model of command and control and embrace a more comprehensive model of collaboration, coordination and cooperation in order to overcome the enormous challenges of the 21st century," he said.

"You can think of this as trying to apply an industrial-age solution to an information-age problem, but we must look for an information-age solution."

According to the general, the comprehensive approach offers that solution.

Caldwell explained that the Combined Arms Center is already actively working toward this approach. Field Manual 3-07, Stability Operations, released in October, institutionalizes the comprehensive approach.

With the final mechanism of change, Caldwell emphasized the importance of the Army's leaders fostering a culture of engagement.

"We must strengthen their ability to communicate in a wide variety of media, including print, radio, TV, blogs, public speaking, Twitter and written publications," Caldwell said. "Fostering this culture of engagement will help us as an Army better tell the incredible stories of the American Soldier and their families."

Caldwell told members of the audience that with their help, the Army will fuel the critical change it needs.

Benning clinics help Soldiers make most of R&R

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

For deployed Soldiers on R&R, every minute at home is precious, and the staff at Fort Benning's medical facilities aim to help Soldiers make the most of that time.

"Our goal is to provide world-class health care for each service member commensurate with the sacrifices they make for our nation," said Tony Thomas, public affairs and marketing assistant at Martin Army Community Hospital.

For SFC Jonathan McClure, on R&R from deployment in Afghanistan with the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, receiving timely service at Love Dental Clinic and the hospital allowed him to devote more time to family and friends.

"The quality of service was just awesome," he said. "Even though I'm deployed, they bent over backward to assist me."

During his 14-day leave, McClure needed exams for several medical conditions, including replacing a hearing aid and glasses. Thanks to the speed with which McClure was able to obtain appointments, he was able to accomplish all of the necessary exams within several days.

McClure said his hearing aid was reordered the same day he went to the MACH ENT clinic.

McClure, who is attached to Task Force Phoenix, said completing his medical exams at Fort Benning will greatly contribute to the success of his mission.

"I had a tooth that was disintegrating, and if I wasn't able to take care of it here at home, I'd have to leave my team for four or five days to travel across Afghanistan to get the care I needed," he said. "Because my team is so small, doing without one person affects our mission. The service I got here prevents me from having to leave my team."

SFC Erica Williams, NCOIC of Love Dental Clinic, recommends Soldiers in need of care come to the clinic's daily sick call as their first course of action.

"We see all our sick call patients, and from there we treat them on a case-by-case basis," she said.

Staff at Love Dental Clinic always do their best to provide timely, high-quality care to Soldiers on R&R, Williams said.

"We do everything we can to help out those who are on deployed status because we realize the importance of what they're doing," she said. "If they call us and explain they're only here for a certain time, we'll try our best to fit them. We realize that service can be a little hard to obtain down range. We certainly recognize the sacrifice they're making."

Loss of units in Europe would affect 'partnership capacity'

C. Todd Lopez
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The scheduled loss of two heavy brigades from U.S. Army European Command could hinder the command's ability to continue building partnerships on the continent.

GEN Carter F. Ham, commanding general, U.S. Army Europe and Seventh Army, said losing those two brigades would impact USAREUR capabilities.

"I have recommended to my operational boss (GEN Bantz J. Craddock, U.S. European Command) that we revisit those decisions and it is my estimation that in order to accomplish the mission we have that we need a different force posture in Europe than is currently proposed," Ham said.

The Army in Europe is now about 42,000 men and women. By 2013 or 2014, Ham said, the plan is to reduce to about 32,000. That Army would be based on two brigade combat teams: one Stryker and one Airborne. Two heavy brigade combat teams are scheduled to leave Europe in 2012-2013.

Right now, Ham said, no decision has been made to reverse the move of those two units out of Europe. He is preparing for their loss, but the longer the Army goes toward moving those forces out of Europe, the harder it will be and the more costly it will be to keep them were the decision to be reversed.

The loss of the two brigades, including the 2nd Brigade, 1st Infantry Division in Schweinfurt, Germany, and the 2nd Brigade, 1st Armored Division, based in Baumholder, coupled with demand for forces in Iraq and Afghanistan staying at current levels, will hinder

NCOs to head to Capitol Hill

Elizabeth M. Collins
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Senior NCOs are eligible to join officers and Army Civilians on Capitol Hill in the Army Congressional Fellowship Program and the Army Congressional Orientation Program, the Army's chief of Legislative Liaison said in an interview last week.

MG Bernie Champoux announced that in honor of the Year of the NCO, two senior NCOs have been selected to take part in the yearlong fellows program and work in Congressional and Senate offices as part of their staffs.

"The intent of the program is to expose members of the uniformed services in active, Guard and Reserve (positions), and certain civilians, to allow them to have an opportunity to understand how Congress works and bring that appreciation and understanding back to the Army," said Champoux.

"It's not just in recognition of the Year of the Noncommissioned Officer, because this program will extend beyond the year … But in conjunction with that, part of what we do is that we're the face of America's Army in Congress. We can't think of a better opportunity than to have those noncommissioned officers (help Congress) understand Soldiers, Soldier-family issues," he said.

The yearlong program involves a competitive selection and board process and rates a permanent change of station to Washington. Soldiers incur a service obligation and a two-year utilization assignment. Officials at the Office of the Chief of Legislative Liaison are still trying to determine the best follow-on assignments for NCOs, but say they are also adding senior NCO positions to their House and Senate Liaison Divisions, which would be good options.

In contrast, ACOP lasts only for 89 days and is primarily to familiarize Soldiers and civilians on the Army staff in the National Capital Region with how Congress works. Soldiers don't incur additional requirements, and return to their regular duties at the end of the three months. Two senior NCOs can participate in this program each quarter.

In both cases, Soldiers must participate in an orientation — months for the fellows program, a week for ACOP. They must also prepare civilian resumes and actually interview with congressmen and senators before joining a member's staff.

From that point until the end of the fellowship, Soldiers work for those members. They wear civilian clothes and may do anything from writing legislation to attending hearings to responding to constituents' concerns. They may even act as a military expert for the member.

"Members of Congress and staff overwhelmingly interact with senior officers, primarily general officers," said Champoux. "Officers and NCOs have different roles and responsibilities and it's critically important that they have an appreciation for what a noncommissioned officer is as the backbone of the Army, the kind of character and capability and leadership skills that they possess and why those are so important in running the Army. Everyone will tell you that the difference between our Army, which is the best Army in the world, and other armies, is the strength of our noncommissioned officer corps."

Senior NCOs who are interested in the fellows program should contact their assignments NCO at Human Resources Command. COL John Leggieri, the program's manager, said HRC will send out a message announcing the fiscal 2011 program in March. Interested Soldiers can forward their packets and a board will meet in October to make selections. Right now, there are two NCO slots out of 25 positions, but Champoux said he hopes to expand this number.

The Financial Star

Credit card companies are crunched.
Your bank is bailing.
But we're still serving you.

Economic hardships due to our current recession are hitting nearly everyone. Of course those with money in the stock market have felt its effects, but people are feeling the pain in other ways as well.

Many are now saddled with adjustable-rate mortgages that have adjusted to rates and payments they simply cannot afford. Many have found that they couldn't afford to purchase their home in the first place, and that's done is keeping mum on specific decisions, but say they're just trying to avoid loss.

There are however unintended consequences to the credit card companies' actions. Having their limits cut gives consumers less available credit, which alters their credit-to-debt ratio and results in lower FICO scores. Like the woman we spoke to, many good customers are being adversely affected by these new credit card terms.

As the military banking division of MidCountry Bank, Pioneer Services not only helps the credit challenged, but also offers special low rates to those with strong credit. Our Premier Military Loan provides fixed rates as low as 9.95% APR*, and our proprietary credit scoring model allows us to assist those with less-than-perfect credit. So if you're active-duty or career-retired military, we may be able to help with a quick, no-hassle personal loan for up to $10,000.

Requiring customers to make an appointment ahead of time has helped to eliminate excessively long wait times, as well as to avoid confusion over hours the ID card section closes for missions, Mason said.

"People didn't know when we would be closed because the word didn't get out far," Mason said. "Now, with appointment-only, we shouldn't have anyone coming here when we're closed and wasting their time. We've gotten very positive feedback."

The ID card section also received more staff and offers an online portal for making appointments, both of which have contributed to improving customer service, Mason said.

SFC Paul R. Smith Fitness Center is also making changes based on ICE feedback. In response to numerous customer requests for longer hours of operation, the fitness center will operate 24 hours a day from March through September. If feedback is positive, the fitness center will change its hours permanently.

ICE offers several advantages over the paper comment cards available at the fitness center, said Jim Shoemaker, chief of the Directorate of Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation's community recreation division.

"It's quicker and more efficient than the comment cards," he said. "As soon as the customer hits 'send,' it's at our headquarters and can be sent to several different managers and directors at once. It's a good way to identify trends."

"I think ICE has met a need because customers finally realized they have a voice," Goss said.

Officer: Exemplifies citizen-Soldier

return to my civilian business," he said.

His country has called him twice so far in his career — once to Iraq for a 15-month deployment and most recently to Fort Benning as a platoon mentor in A Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

"I was excited about (this assignment)," Owens said. "I'm an Infantryman. I knew whatever assignment I had here would be challenging and rewarding."

After reporting to Basic Officer Leadership Course II eight months ago, Owen found the assignment lined up with his expectations.

"The mission here is vitally important. We're training and equipping today's front leaders to be successful on the battlefield," Owens said. "It's challenging because we have a wide range of backgrounds among our students. They come from different commissioning sources; they have different levels of experience and different military occupation specialties. The challenging part is to get them all up to a basic Soldier level. Lieutenants trained here will take over platoons out there fighting and winning these conflicts every day. So really, we're talking about providing these officers with survivability and lethality on the battlefield."

As a platoon mentor, Owens counsels and oversees training for the lieutenants in 4th Platoon, often in a "big brother" capacity, said Owens' company commander CPT Dennis Marshall.

"He teaches, coaches and mentors the lieutenants as they go through the seven-week leadership course here," he said. "He gives them a true measure of their leadership ability. He's someone for them to look up to and say, 'Hey, I want to be like him someday.'"

Marshall said he wasn't surprised when Owens was honored with the Major General Strom Thurmond Outstanding Army Junior Officer Award.

"I've known him since 2000," Marshall said. "We went to Infantry Officer Basic together, and it doesn't surprise me in the least that he won it. It's indicative of leadership traits he showed as a lieutenant in the Infantry Officer Basic Course. When he was in a leadership position, you knew he was in charge. Others don't always show those dynamics of leadership at that early stage in their career."

Owens leads by example, Marshall said. That's what it all comes down to.

"You have to have leaders who are willing to lead from the front," he said. "There are some tough choices being made out there, and your leadership — your moral and physical courage — is going to come into play in the decisions you make in theaters of war."

When not mobilized to serve overseas or on post, Owens also leads in his home community of Tallahassee, Fla. He has volunteered with his kids' schools, a scholarship foundation and local sports teams.

That's part of being a true citizen-Soldier, Owens said, making better communities and a better Army.

"When you talk about making a better Army, the Army Reserve and the National Guard have played a huge part in this war effort," he said. "My family and I have committed to serving as long as I can."

Troops: Include enabler forces

and Pakistan demands urgent attention and swift action."

The president's decision is for up to 17,000 service members to deploy. The 5,000 other Soldiers and Marines are "enabler forces," Defense Department officials said. These troops generally deploy in smaller units and cover such necessary capabilities as engineers, command and control, communication, intelligence and military police.

The deployment partially fulfills the request that Army GEN David D. McKiernan made upon taking command in Afghanistan last year. McKiernan is the commander of NATO's International Security Assistance Force and U.S. Forces Afghanistan.

"General McKiernan's request is months old, and the fact that we are going to responsibly drawdown our forces in Iraq allows us the flexibility to increase our presence in Afghanistan," the president said.

Both units had been slated to deploy to Iraq. They will be based in Regional Command South, Defense Department officials said.

Obama called the Taliban and al Qaeda in Afghanistan resurgent, and said the groups threaten America from safe havens along the Pakistani-Afghan border.

There are 38,000 U.S. troops currently in Afghanistan and about 19,000 other troops from 42 different countries.

"This reinforcement will contribute to the security of the Afghan people and to stability in Afghanistan," Obama said. "I recognize the extraordinary strain that this deployment places on our troops and military families. I honor their service and will give them the support they need."

The president said the situation in Afghanistan is deteriorating. The deployment is aimed at stabilizing the country. The 10th Mountain Division's 3rd Brigade Combat Team was the most recent reinforcement to Afghanistan.

The Fort Drum, N.Y.-based unit has begun operations in Regional Command East.

In addition, the 82nd Airborne Division's Combat Aviation Brigade based at Fort Bragg, N.C., will deploy to Afghanistan later this spring. Aviation assets are needed in the rough terrain of Afghanistan.

McKiernan has asked for another brigade combat team, or its equivalent.

The White House is conducting a strategic review of the situation in Afghanistan.

"This troop increase does not predispose the results of that strategic review," Obama said.

"Instead, it will further enable our team to put together a comprehensive strategy that will employ all elements of our national power to fulfill achievable goals in Afghanistan."

The president said any move the United States makes will be done in consultation with friends and allies.

GAPS: Free to public

Assistant Secretary of the Army Tad Davis will kick off the two-day conference. After that, people will divide into breakout sessions geared toward their interests, Lukken said.

Four tracks are available: green building, environmental resources, military programs and education.

Green building will focus on technology used in houses, such as geothermal piping, carbon neutral carpet, rainwater harvesting and solar cells, said Lynn Deaton, a strategic planner on post who will head up the track.

In this track, people will have the opportunity to take Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design classes to help them prepare for the LEED certification test.

Environmental resources will be geared toward projects with a broader scope like the Clean Air Campaign, watershed management and pollution prevention, Deaton said, while the military and education tracks will highlight advances on post and in universities.

There will also be 60 to 80 exhibitors showcasing sustainable technology.

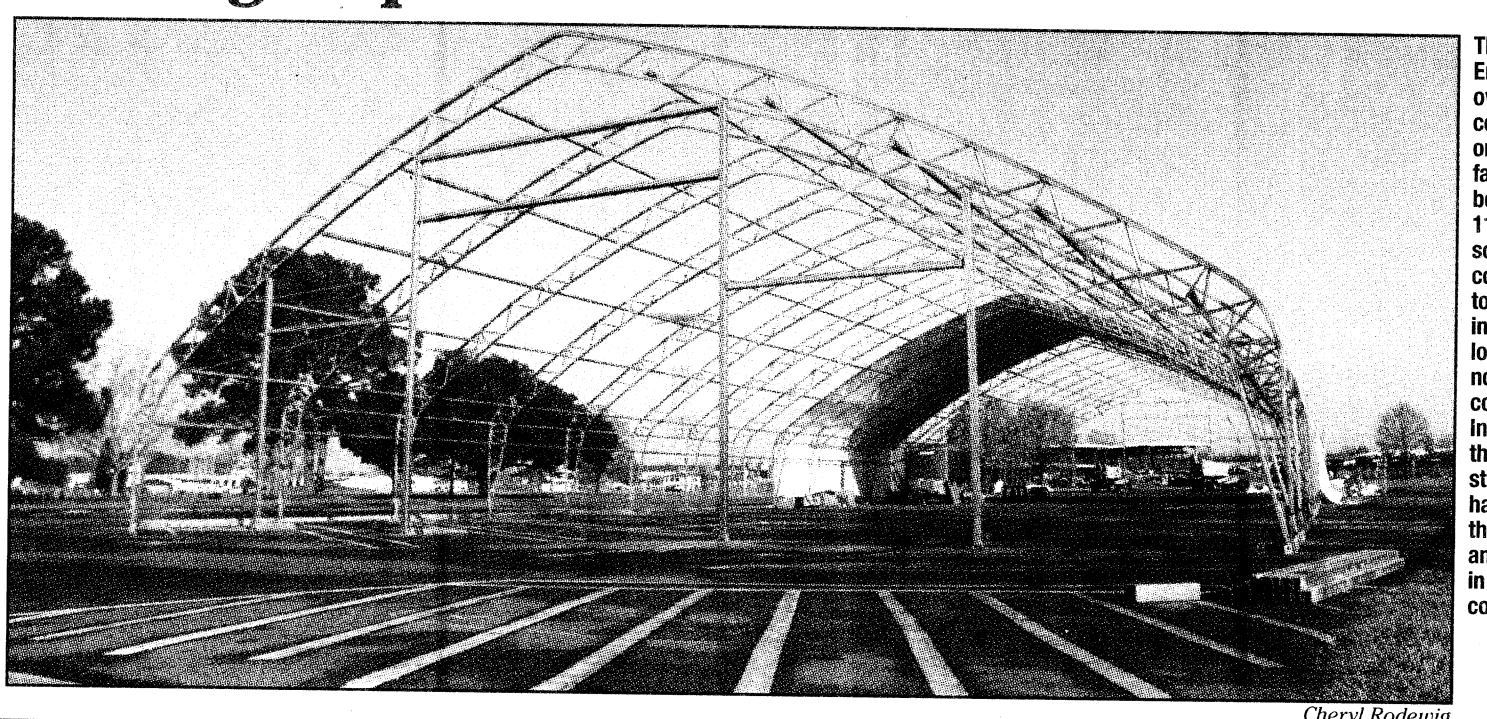

Even though sustainable has become a buzz word of late, it's a practical concept that can benefit local and regional industry, Deaton said.

"Sustainability really means something that's going to sustain, something that's going to last longer," she said. "I interpret 'green' directly as efficiency. How can you make something more efficient or use it more intelligently so that given the same resources, you're able to do more work or produce more results? And that's exactly what technology does."

The deadline to register is March 31. Tickets are limited to the first 350 registrants. Breakfast begins at 7:30 a.m. both days and the conference starts at 9 a.m. Lunch is included April 7.

Storage space

Cheryl Rodewig

The Corps of Engineers is overseeing construction on this storage facility, which began Feb. 11 and is scheduled for completion today. Located in a parking lot on the northeast corner of Infantry Hall, the movable structure will have five walk-through doors and four drive-in doors when completed.

Larger plaza planned for Infantry Hall

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

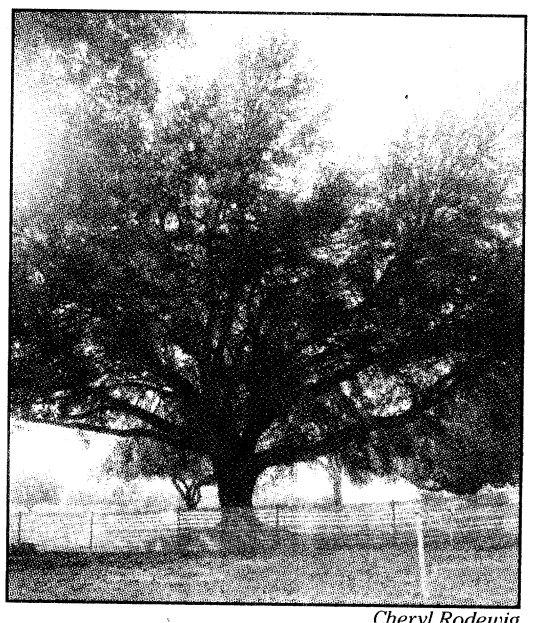

In preparation for the transition to the Maneuver Center of Excellence, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will expand the plaza in front of Infantry Hall. Karker Avenue, which currently runs in front of Infantry Hall, will be removed, and Holtz and Chesney streets, perpendicular to Karker Avenue, will feed into the east and west parking lots, respectively, through a slight curve.

That slight curvature keeps the road a minimum of 82 feet away from the building; that's an Army standard, said LTC(R) Alan Bugg, resident engineer with the Corps of Engineers.

It's all about force protection, he said. When the road moves farther away from the building, there will be more of a barrier between the street and the front entrance. The protective posts, or bollards, currently in front of Infantry Hall will be removed.

During some of the construction, the Follow Me statue and Army vehicles on display will be temporarily moved to Building 35, headquarters of the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation. The plaza, which will be lined in red bricks and include a fountain, will not cut into York Field.

Construction will not affect the Ranger Memorial site, Bugg said. However, two magnolia trees in front of Infantry Hall will have to be cut down to make way for the new alignment of the two roads. A live oak tree on the southeast corner of the building will remain.

Cheryl Rodewig

An orange "tree guard" marks this 100-year-old oak, so it will not be cut down during construction.

"Given the choice between two magnolia trees that take about 20 years to grow versus an oak tree at least 100 years old, it's an easy choice," Bugg said.

Before any construction project, engineers do an environmental impact study to make sure the animal habitat and other factors won't be aversely affected.

Sometimes trees have to be cut down, Bugg said, but being prepared for the Armor School's move to Fort Benning is important.

"That's a decision Congress made, so it's our job to make that happen," he said. "And it's also our job to make the least impact on the environment that we can, and that's absolutely what we try to do."

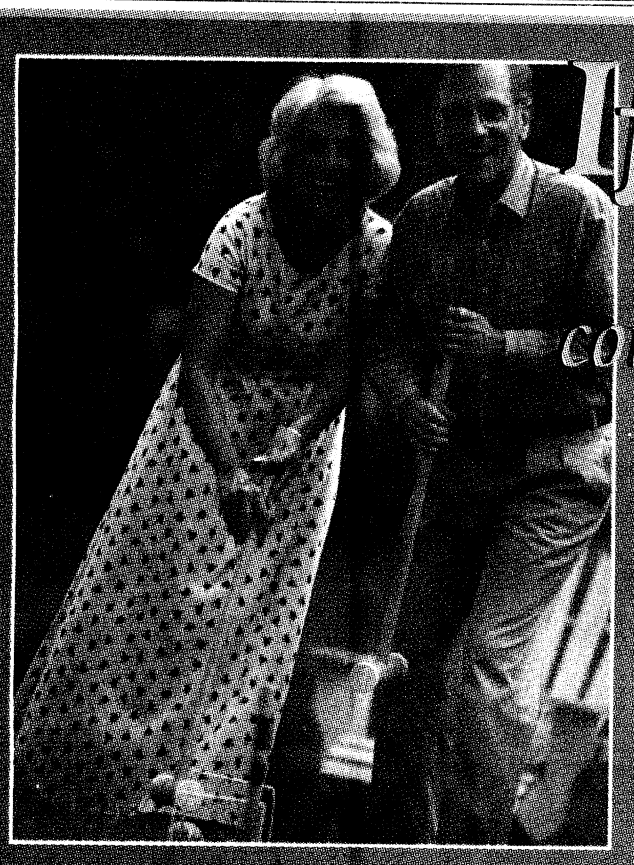

For construction related to BRAC, the environment is a priority, said Steve Davis, vice president of System Services and Engineering for Columbus Water Works, which manages the water and sewer infrastructure on post.

Whenever possible, they try to avoid cutting down trees, especially pines which are critical to the survival of the endangered red-cockaded woodpecker, Davis said.

"As long as we're working on Fort Benning, we try to minimize the environmental impact," he said. "You can balance development with the environment, and we look for that balance. It takes good planning and good implementation, and we do our best to do that."

Davis said there are currently 12 construction projects underway, mainly on Sand Hill and Harmony Church, and four other major ones are currently being planned.

Construction on the streets and plaza by Infantry Hall will not be completed until October next year.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Kenseth wins Daytona

After a crash that affected a lot of the front-runners in the Daytona 500 Feb. 15, the rains came and drew the red flag, then officials called the race over, making Roush-Fenway driver Matt Kenseth the official winner.

Kevin Harvick finished second, followed by A.J. Allmendinger in third.

NASCAR heads to Southern California for the race at Fontana. Race time is 5 p.m. Sunday and will be shown on Fox.

Suns fire Porter

The Phoenix Suns fired coach Terry Porter just four months into the season. Assistant coach Alvin Gentry takes over for Porter.

Gentry said the team needs to revert to the play that brought out the best in two-time league MVP Steven Nash.

Porter becomes the eighth team to fire a coach in the NBA this season.

Phelps escapes charges

The sheriff of Richland County, S.C., decided not press drug charges against Olympic swimmer Michael Phelps after photos of him with drug paraphernalia surfaced recently.

Although Phelps doesn't need to worry about formal charges, he did lose the endorsement of Kellogg's and several other companies are still weighing their options as to their future with the 14-time gold medalist.

Jags cuts Taylor

The Jacksonville Jaguars cut Fred Taylor, their all-time leading rusher, Feb. 16 after 11 seasons with the team. Taylor just turned 33 in January, which I guess makes him "too old" for the Jags.

Taylor had wanted to retire with the team. Hopefully a good team will pick him up.

West pounds East

The NBA All-Star game was easy for the West. The All-Stars from the West beat the East All-Stars, 146-119, Feb. 15 in Phoenix. Kobe Bryant scored 27 points, leading all scorers.

Bryant and Shaquille O'Neal were given co-MVP honors.

Magennis wins Fort Benning Pick 12

Football season is finally over and CPT Stephen Magennis walked away with the top honor among local prognosticators in the Pick 12 competition.

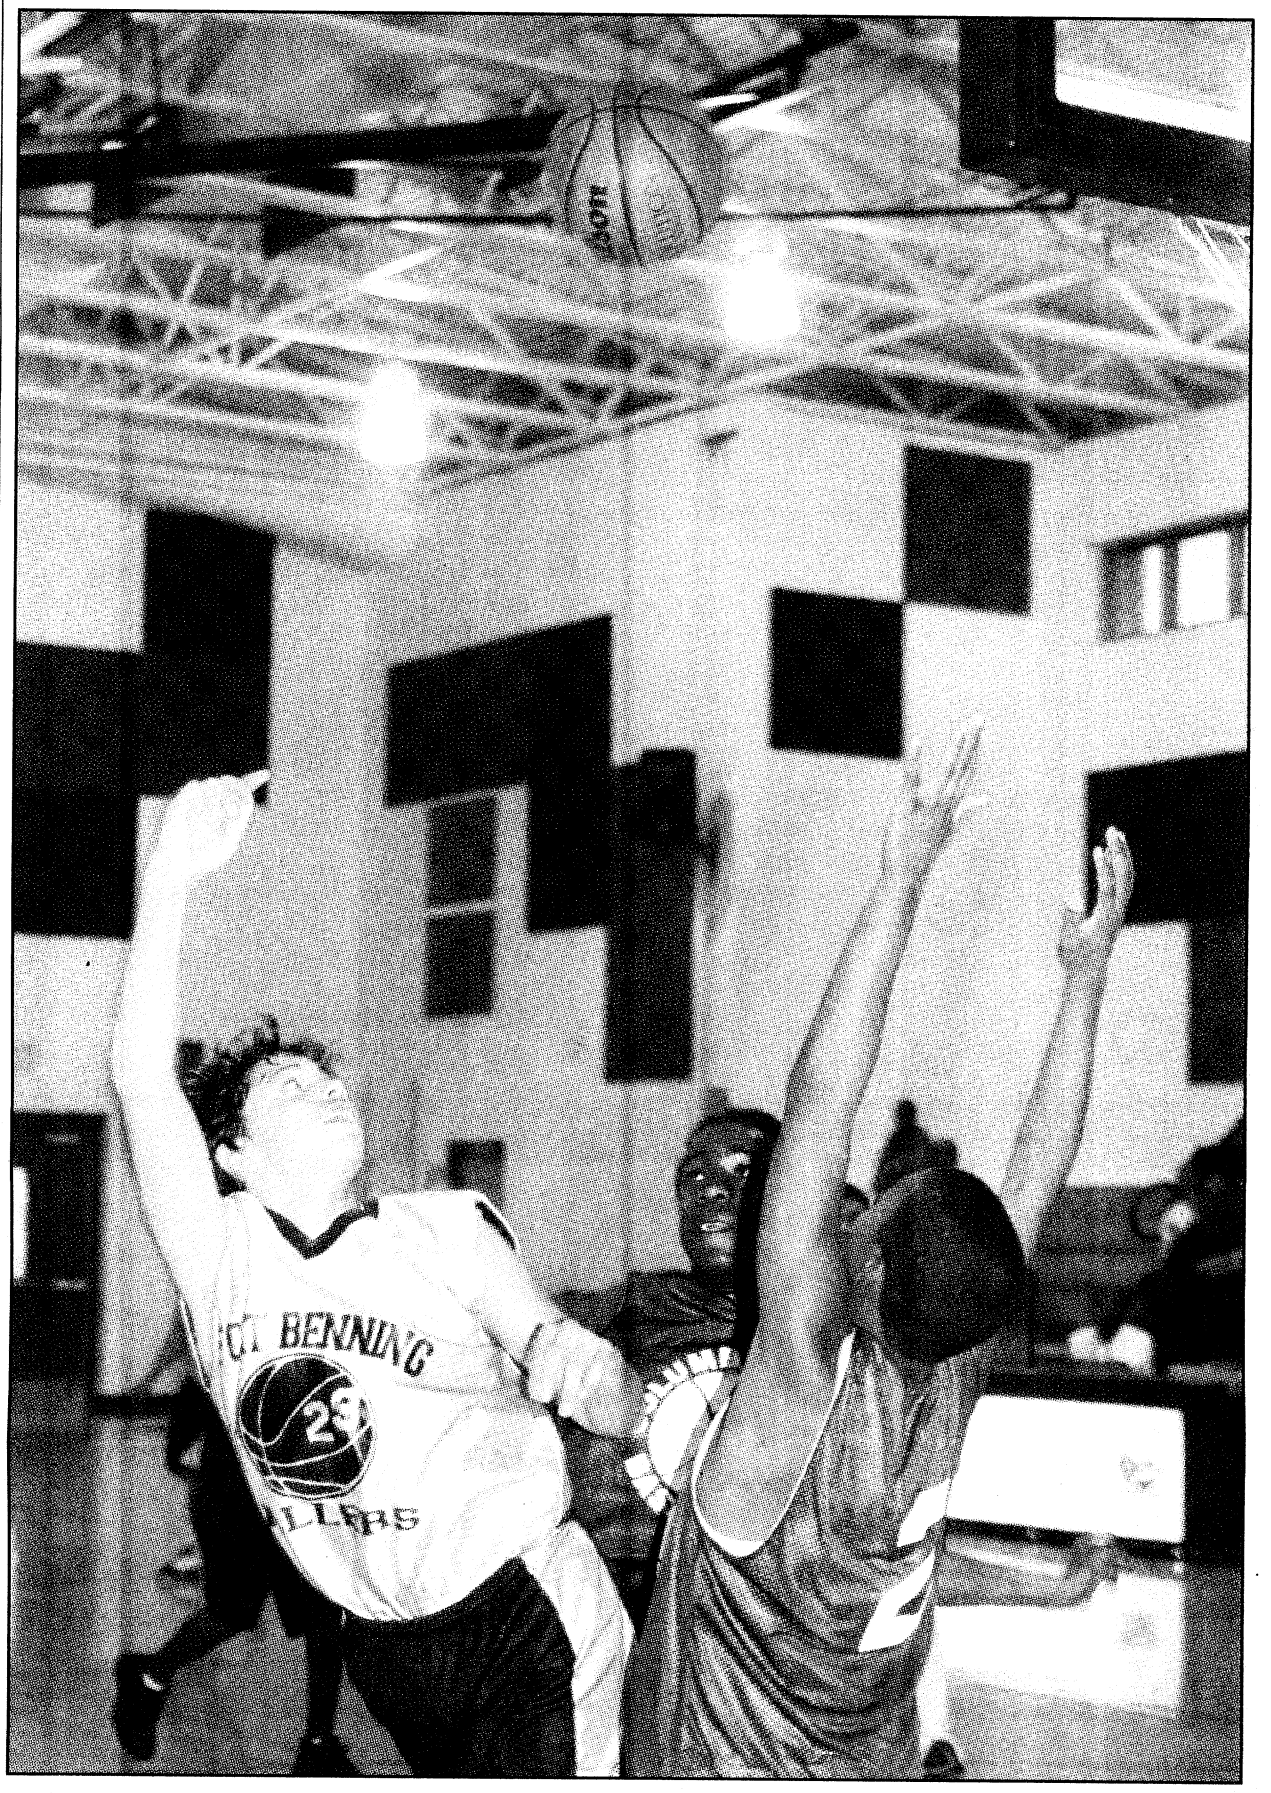

Magennis was the only participant to top 60 percent in his picks with a 118-73 record.

The battle for second, third and fourth place was closely contested between Carl Pignato, Lori Egan and Michelle Gordon, with Pignato holding on for second at 113-78.

Two games separated Egan and Gordon with Egan finishing in third at 110-81 while Gordon took fourth place at 108-83.

Rounding out the bottom two were Corey McCoy from Chattahoochee County High School in fifth at 103-88 and SFC Brandon Barnett at 99-92, in sixth place.

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

In a battle for bragging rights in the 13- to 14-year-old Columbus Youth Basketball league, the CYB 29th Street came out on top besting the Fort Benning Ballers, 57-37, Saturday at Frank D. Chester Park.

The Ballers got off to a rocky start in the first period as 29th Street racked up 13 points, while holding the Ballers to one basket. Both teams battled back and forth in the second quarter, but by halftime, 29th Street had a 17-point lead over the Ballers, 31-14.

The Ballers' defense stiffened while the offense scored 10 points in the third period to close to 37-24.

With less than four minutes left in the final period, the Ballers came within six points of tying 29th Street, but 29th Street's offense got on a hot streak scoring 20 points in the final period, sealing a 57-37 victory for 29th Street.

"I thought we would come back in the fourth quarter, but we didn't," said Baller Shawn Tandarich, who scored seven points. "We started to play sloppy and had some bad passes. I think that's what cost us the game."

Ballers' coach Paul Horton said he thought nerves were a big factor in the game.

"The guys got butterflies playing in a hostile environment, but that's what being on a travel team is about — being able to play in different places," he said. "We didn't win, but we still proved we can compete at this level."

This is the first year the Ballers have competed in the Columbus Youth Basketball league. The Ballers finished in second place in the 13- and 14-year-old CYB league at 6-2, with both losses coming at the hands of 29th Street.

Scoring: Ballers, Garcia (11), D. Davis (8), Tandarich (7), Young (5), Barrientes (2), Wilcox (2), Huell (2). 29th Street, Borders (15), Smith (15), Billingsley (13), Bonner (8), Pitts (4), Brown (3).

WNBA player, Hardaway coach speak at banquet

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

"She's so tall and I'm so short," said 11-year-old Jacquan Crawford as he looked at 6-foot-7-inch Washington Mystics basketball player Gillian Goring. "It's neat to meet an WNBA player — I have never met one before."

Goring was one of two guest speakers at the Child, Youth and School Services basketball banquet Saturday at the Benning Conference Center. Goring's sister and brother-in-law, Debra and 2LT Dermont Thomas, are stationed at Fort Benning with their son, Nigel. Goring came to post to visit her family and was asked to be a surprise guest speaker at the banquet.

She comes from a family where 6-foot is the norm rather than the exception.

Her mother is 6-foot-2 and her father is 6-foot-4. She also has two brothers who top the 6-foot mark at 6-foot-6 and 6-foot-9.

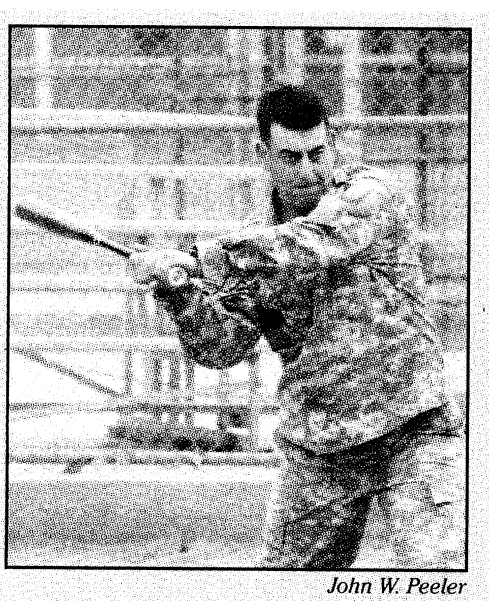

The 25-year-old has played in the WNBA for a year and was raised in Trinidad. At 13, she played with Trinidad's under 19 national team and at 14, was nominated for Trinidad's sports woman of the year and served as a junior ambassador for her country.

Goring who attended the University of Arkansas, was the National Junior College Athletic Association's All-American as a sophomore and has been featured in ESPN The Magazine. After transferring to North Carolina State University, she was named the MVP in the 2005-2006 season. She was one of only two players in North Carolina State history that stood 6-foot-7-inches. She was selected in the third round by the Washington Mystics in April of 2007.

"Her appearance at the banquet is a pleasant surprise," said 13-year-old Zachary Garcia. "It's really neat to think that she made it big. It motivates me to get better at basketball."

Her message to the children was to have a positive attitude no matter what, and take one day at a time.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

From the backyard to the diamond

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Eduardo Ramos has been coaching baseball for five years, but this will be his first year coaching at Fort Benning and his first season at Faith Middle School.

Ramos got into coaching after seeing that kids needed something to do, and that there was a lack of someone to teach them.

"In the beginning there were a lot of kids not doing anything so I picked up some backyard ball and just began coaching there," Ramos said. "There is always a lack of coaches, so I began volunteering so the kids would have something to do."

His philosophy is simple: Keeping a proper state of mind.

"Learning sportsmanship, learning the game and not being satisfied with knowing what you know right now," he said. "But, expanding that knowledge that you have right now."

A-Rod steps to the proverbial plate, whiffs

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Every morning I tune in to ESPN and listen while I surf the Web for sports related news of the day.

Wednesday, the digital airwaves were inundated with the Alex Rodriguez steroid story and his not-so-forthcoming admission.

Along with the funny, yet catchy headlines like "A-Roid," and a photo of A-Rod alongside a barbeque grill with the headline "Have a seat," indicating he is truly on the hot seat — this saga is truly sad.

I believe having a public relations professional to step in to do damage control for an athlete does more damage than it does good.

Rodriguez, following his press conference, will now have to deal with not only the steroid problem, he will have to deal with people not believing he was totally forthcoming.

Why? Because the substance he claims to have taken that caused him to test positive is not a substance medical personnel can seem to identify — so, the story continues.

Maybe A-Rod is being totally honest with the media and his fans, but anyone who watched the press conference has to be left wondering. Yes, he admitted using a performance-enhancing drug, but other details are sketchy at best.

So, why are we at the point in professional sports where athletes feel the need to use drugs to play their sport? One word — money.

Looking back at some of the baseball legends like Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Hank Aaron, it would be hard to believe they needed performance-enhancing drugs to accomplish what they did in the sport. Both Ruth and Cobb may have had other socially unacceptable behaviors, but those behaviors never gave them any advantage in accomplishing what they did in the game. Pete Rose is another baseball great who comes to mind, but he may never see his bust in the hall of fame because of his betting on baseball.

Time may change the way people look at what Rose did, but how will society treat the A-Rod's of today's game? Only time will tell.

In my mind, A-Rod finally coming out and admitting he used performance-enhancing drugs is not even an admirable step in attempting to reclaim any semblance of his stardom — not as long as he continues to partially come clean.

While A-Rod figures out how long it takes to tell the complete truth, his status as possibly one of the greats in baseball will diminish because now he is being looked at as not just someone who used drugs, but as someone who cannot be trusted to be honest.

Using performance-enhancing drugs is bad, but so is being dishonest. Both may keep him from eventually seeing his bust in the hall of fame.

All-Army Small Arms Championships begin Saturday

USAMU

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will host the 2009 Army Rifle and Pistol Championships in conjunction with the U.S. Army Infantry Center from Saturday to Feb. 28.

Training and competitions are open to all Soldiers of all Army components, of any rank, with any military occupational specialty, including West Point and college ROTC cadets.

"The All-Army is an advanced combat marksmanship training event and competition," in accordance with Army regulation 350-66, said USAMU Commander LTC Frank Muggeo.

All Soldiers will fire both the M-16 rifle and M-9 pistol in helmet and load-bearing equipment (body armor optional) from 25- to 500-yards with the M-16 and 7- to 35-yards with the M-9. Teams from battalion-level compete for unit recognition and team awards. All Soldiers will receive advanced marksmanship instruction and training materials to conduct Train-the-Trainer clinics on return to their home station. The long-range portion will provide M-24 long-range shooting training from 800- to 1,000-yards.

Soldiers will compete in separate Cadet, Novice, Open and Pro classes based on their competition experience. The USAMU has a limited number of M16, M9, and M24 weapons available for Soldiers and cadets who do not have assigned weapons.

"This is an excellent vehicle for those Soldiers and units reorganized into brigade combat teams and reconnaissance battalions who do not hold MOS 11 (Infantry) or 18 (Special Forces) and cannot attend the U.S. Army Sniper School," Muggeo said.

"The All-Army Matches are designed to raise the shooting proficiency of Soldiers and units across the Army by teaching advanced combat marksmanship techniques using issue rifles and pistols," Muggeo continued. All soldiers will be issued a certificate of training at the completion of the championship.

At the matches, coaches and noncommissioned officers in charge of the U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Teams, will scout, identify and invite selected Soldiers to compete at the Interservice Championships and the national matches. Soldiers selected to represent the Active Army are funded by the USAMU.

The All-Army Matches consist of Small Arms Firing Schools, Excellence-in-Competition matches and special combined arms combat matches. Champions will be awarded All-Army trophies and Excellence-in-Competition Marksmanship Badges, which are permanent-wear Army awards as described in Army Regulation 600-22. These badges are above the standard marksman, sharpshooter and expert qualification badges. The most coveted awards, Muggeo said, are Secretary of the Army Trophy M-1 Garand Rifles. There are special category awards and trophies also for High Drill Sergeant, High Novice and High Enlisted Soldier, Guard, and Reserve (E1-E4). There are $6,000 scholarships available to eligible Cadets enrolled in an Army ROTC program.

For additional information, registration and match bulletin visit the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Web site at www.usamu.com or contact Michael Behnke, the USAMU chief of competitions, at (706) 545-7841 or michael.behnke@usaac.army.

Learn to talk turkey March 3

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

There's a lot to talking turkey and now's the time to prepare.

Turkey season begins March 21, and there's no better time than the present "to fine-tune all your calls, pattern your gun, even get into shape," said local turkey hunter MSG(R) Bill Brickner. "Like baseball players go out and practice before the game season, that's what we do. We learn mating calls, proper setting up of decoys, how to set up a blind and shoot out of it. There's a lot to hunting a turkey."

People young and old, experienced or not, can learn more at the turkey calling seminar at 6 p.m. March 3 at the Uchee Creek Lodge.

The workshop will focus specifically on calling techniques, safety and proper sportsmanship related to turkey hunting, said Joe Drake, a professional turkey caller who will lead the event.

Winner of eight state championships, three national and one world title, Drake will share some of his expertise and work one-on-one with participants to perfect their calling technique.

It will be a good opportunity for people to find out more about the sport, said Brickner, who enjoys both the relaxing aspect and the challenge of hunting.

"You're out there when the first spring flowers come out, when the woods wake up," he said. "You'll hear the whippoorwill, the hoot owl and the crow. And the turkey, he doesn't want to be left out, so he gobbles. He wants to be the loudest."

"It's a completely different art from hunting a deer. You have to be able to adapt to a lot of different circumstances."

Not the least of these "circumstances," turkeys can hear five times better and see up to 20 times better than humans.

Drake will answer questions and offer tips related to turkey hunting. He will also cover more than 10 calls, including "location calls" like the owl and crow, which often set a turkey gobbling.

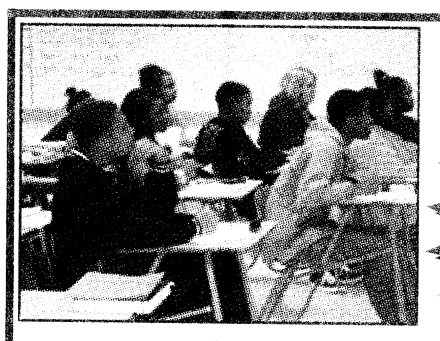

They're keyed up because of the mating season, Drake said. Sometimes Soldiers doing cadence nearby or a distant cannon fire will make a turkey gobble, and once he gobbles, a hunter can start tracking him.

With his dad formerly in the Army Marksmanship Unit, Drake said he grew up fishing and hunting on post.

There's a great turkey population here, said Drake, who hosts the yearly calling seminars as a way of doing something nice in return for all the Soldiers do and have done for him.

Drake will also host a turkey calling contest, Peach State Classic, at 5 p.m. March 12 at the Columbus Firefighters Association building in Midland, Ga. The public is invited to enter or come and watch. All proceeds benefit local charities.

For more information, call Drake at 706-660-0501 or Brickner at 706-563-0189. To register for the turkey hunting seminar, visit Outdoor Recreation, Building 1707, or call 706-545-7978 by March 2.

Newman struggles in Army debut at Daytona

By Tim Hipps
ARNEWS

Ryan Newman drives the No. 39 U.S. Army Chevrolet to a 36th-place finish with teammate and car owner Tony Stewart, No. 14, in tow during the 51st running of the Daytona 500 Feb. 15. Scott Speed drives the No. 82 Red Bull Toyota on the high side. Stewart finished eighth.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Misfortune more than rained on Ryan Newman's parade as the defending race champion finished 36th in the Daytona 500 Feb. 15 while making his debut in the No. 39 U.S. Army Racing Chevrolet.

After wrecks claimed Newman's primary and backup cars during a Gatorade Duel 150 Thursday and Daytona 500 practice Saturday, the U.S. Army Racing Team driver had to climb behind the wheel of team owner Tony Stewart's Bud Shootout backup car for Sunday's 51st running of the great American race.

To make matters worse, Newman's spin on Saturday, caused by a blown right rear tire, collected drafting partner Stewart's primary car and forced the boss into a backup ride for Sunday's race, forcing both drivers to start from the rear of the 43-car field.

"The right rear tire exploded in the middle of (turns) one and two," Newman said. "It gave me 100 yards of signs that it might. It started with the very, very slightest vibration. I was getting ready to come in and it was too late. It was just unfortunate. We took out my teammate.

"It is a bad situation. I don't really want to be in it. It is hard to talk about. We will do what we can with this U.S. Army Chevrolet."

Newman's troubles actually began during practice on Wednesday that forced his team to change engines, which cost him a starting spot in the front row of the second Gatorade Duel 150-mile qualifying race for the Daytona 500. He again was relegated to the rear of the field.

"It's just been a tough week for the U.S. Army Team," Newman said. "We had multiple issues to deal with, including two wrecks before we even started today's race. But this is the Soldiers' team and we'll come back fighting even harder next week."

During the Gatorade Duel, Newman got three wide and tried to make a pass on the low side but was bumped from behind by David Reutimann's No. 00 Toyota, which sent Newman's car spinning directly into the outside wall.

"Wrong place, wrong time," Newman said after retreating from trackside, where he gestured toward Reutimann after climbing from the mangled car. "The U.S. Army Chevrolet was good. We were making our way to the front and taking our time. I was patient the whole race.

"Reutimann is a good name for him because he roots the man right out of the way and bounced me right up into the wall and that was the end of our day."

Newman was not injured, but the Army team had to work overtime to get the backup car ready. Two days later, they were forced to prepare a third car, from which little was expected.

"This will exemplify what it means to be U.S. Army strong," Newman said.

In the Daytona 500 on Sunday, Newman, who had tire problems throughout the week, pitted to change the right front during the first caution of the race after Aric Arimola spun the No. 8 Chevrolet on Lap 9. During another pit stop on Lap 71, Newman's crew had jack issues that left him two laps down.

"We were patient in the beginning because we needed to get a feel for the car and the track," Newman said. "We were pretty good until we had to come in for a loose wheel. Then we had a miscue on pit road. We fell two laps down and it was a struggle from that point on."

On lap 125, Dale Earnhardt Jr. got into the back of Brian Vickers, who blocked him below the yellow line, igniting a melee that collected 10 cars. Newman shot through the wreckage unscathed and looked like he might have a fighting chance to gain a lap.

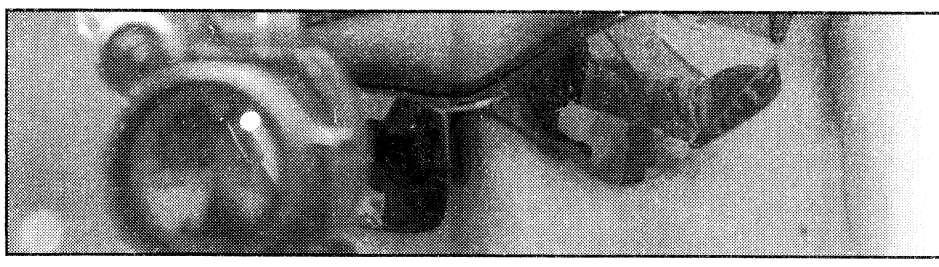

"That's the first wreck I missed this week," Newman joked over the radio to his crew.

Five laps later, Newman was drafting Earnhardt's rear bumper on the inside line alongside the frontrunners in a desperate effort to get a lap back, but their pursuit was futile as the impending rain quickly approached the 2.5-mile tri-oval.

"The rain obviously hurt us because we needed more time if we were going to get those laps back," Newman said. "We knew we had our backs to the wall, but still felt we could have a good run today. The guys worked hard to get this car ready in a short time. I am so proud of them."

Newman also tipped his cap to Matt Kenseth, who won the rain-shortened race.

"I want to congratulate Matt Kenseth," Newman said. "He's a good friend and I am happy for him. I know what he's feeling right now."

One hundred forty-one — it's the number of service members from Georgia who made the ultimate sacrifice for their country in 2008, and it's a number Stephen Durling wants Georgians to remember.

Durling is one of the driving forces behind the Fallen Heroes of Georgia 10K, 5K and 1K Fun Run, set for March 28 in Hoschton, Ga. Durling, a firefighter with the Hall County, Ga., Fire Department, said he was inspired to launch the race after attending a memorial ceremony at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., in 2006.

"It's not just the fallen service member; it's the kid who's lost a parent and parents who have lost a son or daughter," he said. "There are a lot of people affected by the loss of a Soldier, and we wanted to let them know they're not forgotten."

Proceeds from the race will go to Operation One Voice, a police- and firefighter-led nonprofit organization that provides aid and services to families of fallen and injured Special Forces and special operations forces service members. Some of the organization's projects include free flights to transport service members and families to medical visits, a program to provide iPods to deployed service members and a partnership with Georgia lumber companies to build wheelchair ramps.

"We've got to stand up for these guys," said Bill Stevens, CEO of Operation One Voice and lieutenant with the Duluth, Ga., police department. "Let's think about our Soldiers and what they're doing every day."

Signs will be placed along the race route with each of the 141 service members' name, rank, unit, branch of service, hometown, age and date of death.

"People might think 141 signs isn't much, but when you see a continuous line of signs I believe it will be very eye opening and emotional," Durling said.

The race T-shirt will be unique and meaningful because it does not feature any sponsors and lists the 141 "fallen heroes" on the back, Durling said.

"Sponsors were asking to put their company names on the T-shirt," he said. "And I said 'No, I can't muddy it up with restaurants on a shirt with the names of the fallen on it.'"

"It would be nice if we could hold the number of names on the shirt to 141, but unfortunately that's unrealistic," Stevens said. "At the run, I want people to have a good time, but I also want the community to understand the importance of the 141 lives."

Durling aims to register at least 500 runners and plans to continue the race in the future.

"What would be great would be if my run could inspire people to do things for Soldiers on their own, whether sending care packages or starting an organization like Operation One Voice," he said. "Freedom isn't free, and I'm going to try to get as many people to understand that as possible."

Goring: Speaking from experience

"There have been many hurdles throughout my career, including injuries, but a positive attitude helped me get through it," she said. "If there are hurdles, keep pushing through and everything will get better."

Hardaway High School coach Kendall Mills, who has coached the Auburn University Lady Tigers team, also spoke at the banquet.

Mills was born in Tuskeegee, Ala., and raised in Opelika, Ala., and worked in the USA 1996 Atlanta summer Olympic Games.

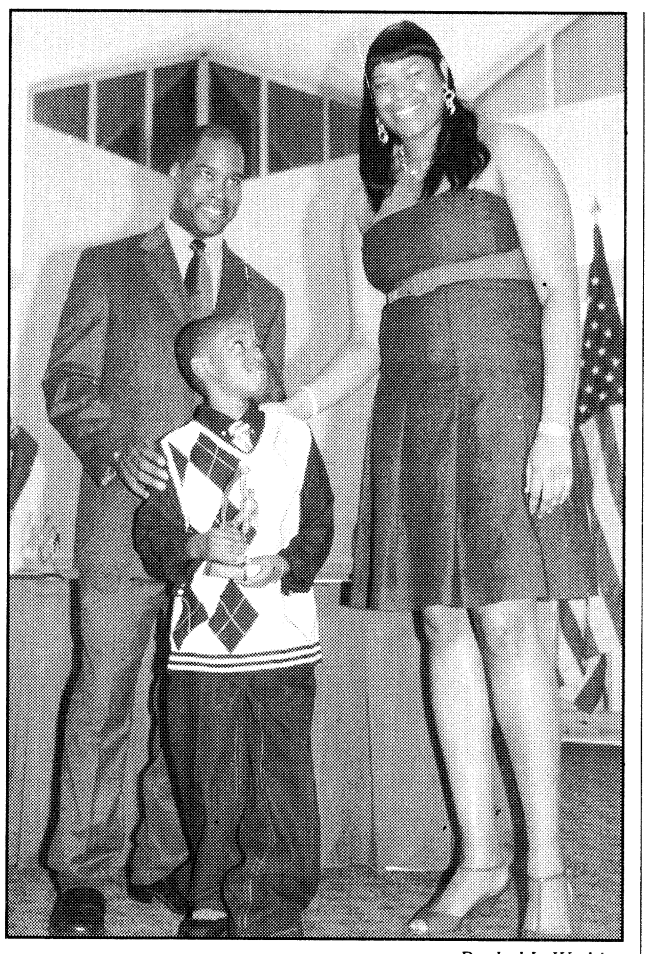

His message to the children: Work just as hard in the classroom as on the court.

"Athletics are just as important as academics," he said. "Control your attitude — if you can't do that, you won't be successful," he said. "Be aware of the way you react to things. Have a positive mind and body. And most importantly, work hard."

Mills emphasized athletes should have a back-up plan and not rely on just athletics.

"In college I decided I was too short to make it to the NBA — I realized that when a coach cut me from Auburn University. I said 'what am I going to do?'" he said. "So I became a manager for the women's team at Auburn. I learned basketball and how to get back on track when I thought it was the end of the road."

The banquet officially concluded the Child, Youth and School Services basketball season for 2009.

Ramos: Hitting life's curve balls

keys Ramos said were important to building a successful team.

"It is important to move on after you make a mistake," Ramos said. "It is just like life, you have curve balls that are thrown at you all the time — you may miss them, but you still have to go back up to the batters box."

Ramos draws similarities between playing the game of baseball and life and hopes he can teach his players that what they learn playing the game can be applied in life, as well.

"Some kids have never seen a curve ball before, and they don't know how to react to it," he said. "It's the same in life and living life on life's terms, just like making adjustments on the field. They learn they can achieve it."

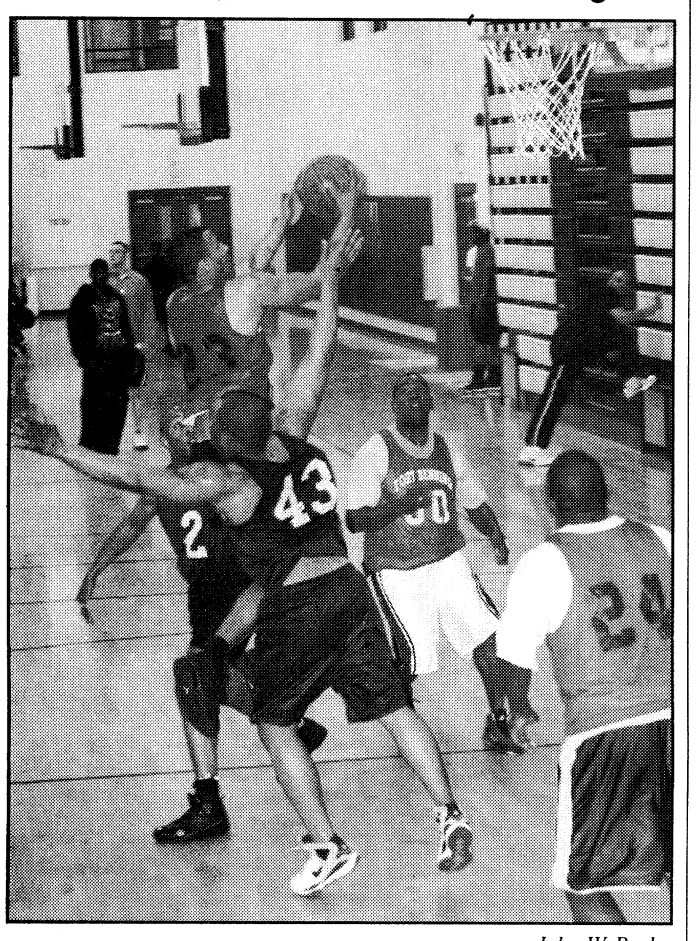

Ramos said about 30 players tried out for 15 spots on this year's middle school team. Ramos realizes that the players who did not make the cut faced disappointment, but should not give up.

"At this age it gets pretty competitive ... it's part of life," he said. "There are going to be cuts, there are going to be disappointments. Once again, they should never give up and keep pushing forward to that goal of making the team next year."

For the players he will coach, and for the players who didn't make the team this year, Ramos reiterates his main philosophy as a coach.

"Keep the proper state of mind," he said. "Go out there and get what you want ... go out there and earn it."

Retired SGM shares his 'piece of history'

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

SGM(R) Ellis Dandy remembers when Columbus was segregated. He remembers drinking out of segregated water fountains and sitting in the back of buses and restaurants. He remembers attending segregated schools up until high school.

"I stand before you today as a man who grew up a ... snot-nosed little black boy who was born in 1942 and grew up in Columbus in a three-room shack my family called home," he said. "Never in my wildest dreams did I envision I would be able to do all the things I have done in my life."

Dandy

Dandy, the post equal employment opportunity manager, told his "black history story" to 400 Soldiers and civilians who attended the Black History Month luncheon Feb. 12 at the Benning Conference Center.

Dandy graduated from high school in 1960 and joined the Army. In 25 years of service, his career included an assignment in Germany, two combat tours in Vietnam and his last assignment was as the Army's sergeant major for equal opportunity.

Throughout the years, he faced many prejudices, he said, but with the help of God and prayer, was able to get through it.

Dandy said everyone has a story to tell and each story becomes a piece of history. It is important to

Attendees can learn Latin dances, belly dancing at Conference's workshops

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

For something different, try Zumba, a cardio workout with Latin dance influences.

"It changes your mood," said Jackie Miller, a family member who has learned how to salsa, sashay and swing her hips at the Cardio Dance class at the SFC Paul R. Smith Fitness Center.

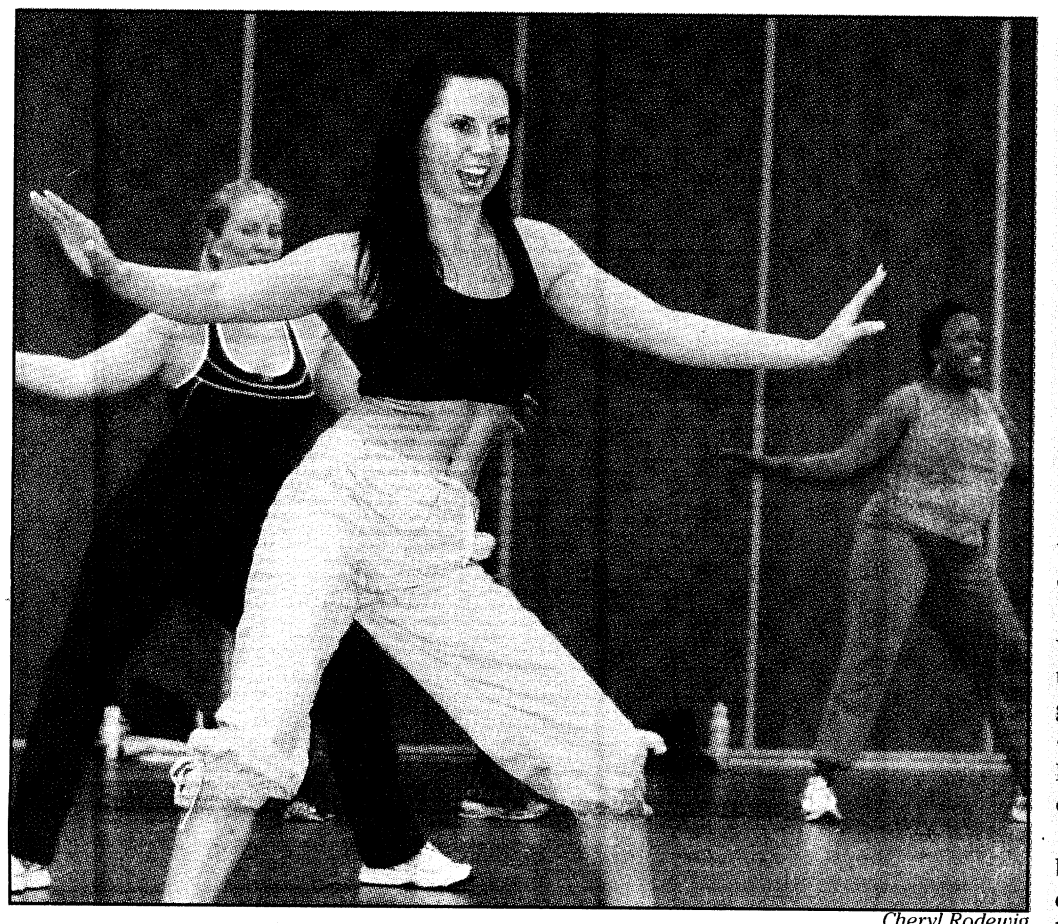

"You just get a happy feeling — body, mind, soul," she said. "I love the music, the rhythm of dances of different cultures and moving body parts you haven't moved. It's an awakening."

Led by Katrina Volgina, the class meets Tuesdays and Thursdays from noon to 12:45 p.m. Volgina also teaches belly dancing Mondays and Wednesdays at the fitness center. She will share both dance styles at the Fort Benning Women's Conference March 11.

People who sign up for a dance workshop at the conference will get a good workout, said Volgina, who has been teaching dance since she was 16.

Volgina taught Hong Kong Dancing with the Star competitors and competed in the 1998 Asian Games before moving from Russia to the states when her husband relocated to Fort Benning in 2007.

When she began teaching on post, she had only two students who regularly attended her ballroom dance class at the Kelley Hill Rec Center. Now, she teaches a variety of classes and her students number between 50 and 70 a week.

Cheryl Rodewig
Katrina Volgina leads a Cardio Dance class Tuesday at the Smith Fitness Center. The workout incorporates Zumba, a mixture of several Latin-inspired dances, and ballroom dancing.

The rumor that "you have to know how to dance" before taking a class or trying the dance workshop is not true, Volgina said.

"For me, the exciting part is just to dance. The music keeps you going," she said. "If I can dance, they can dance. I was not born like this. It doesn't matter if you can't dance, if you can. If you have one leg, two legs, three legs, I do not care. Show up, be yourself, move with the music. I want them to have the same passion I have to dance. And I think it works."

The Zumba workshop will offer a solid cardio workout with some ballroom dance techniques thrown in, Volgina said.

The belly dance workshop, which Volgina sometimes refers to as a "My Hips Don't Lie" class, focuses on developing and toning the abs.

"It makes you sweat, and you don't really realize it," said Monita Alcantara, who has been attending Volgina's belly dance and Zumba classes since she PCSed here two weeks ago.

"It's a great workout," she said. "An hour goes by, but you're having so much fun."

Belly dance is her favorite, she said.

"It's challenging," she said. "It's different from just running on the treadmill or lifting weights. It doesn't matter if you're a beginner or you've done it before or you know how to move your body, it gives you something new each time you go. You learn how to move your body in ways you never thought possible. You get more flexible and more coordinated. It's like, whoa."

Women who want "whoa" can sign up for one of Volgina's workshops at the conference. There will also be classes on cake decorating, career planning, automotives and accessories.

Space is limited, so register now at http://benningmwr.com/WomensConference.htm.

The conference is from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Benning Conference Center. The $20 fee includes a continental breakfast, catered lunch and conference materials.

For more information, visit the Web sit or call 706-689-7134.

Sculptor to lead workshop

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Less than 100 slots remain for the 2009 Fort Benning Women's Conference. That means less than 100 chances to sign up for the many diverse workshops available at the conference.

"Seeing different classes we have available — wine tasting, belly dancing, gardening, automotives — I'm excited," said Renee Peterson, secretary for the conference.

Although Peterson will be busy coordinating details the day of the conference, she knows at least one workshop she would definitely attend if she could: the sculpting class.

She's never tried her hand at the craft before, but after seeing Deborah Steinmetz, who will lead the class, create such "elaborate pieces," she wants to try, she said.

"Watching her work, you can tell no matter what piece she's doing, she's putting her heart and soul into it," said Peterson, who buys occasional sculptures from Steinmetz to display at home or work or to give as a gift.

Steinmetz discovered the inexpensive hobby less than two years ago, right before her husband deployed to Iraq.

While he was gone, it gave her something relaxing and

Web site designed for gifts

One-stop shop for giving to Army

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Americans have demonstrated an overwhelming generosity in their desire to support the Army, its Soldiers and its families, according to a statement from the Office of the Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of the Army on the Gifts to the Army Web site. The site was designed as a one-stop shop for information about giving to Army installations and Soldier and family programs, and it provides a centralized portal for making donations to the Army online.

"It was designed to provide a resource for people who want to contribute," said Donna Hyatt, a marketing specialist with Fort Benning's Directorate of Family, Morale Welfare and Recreation.

Since the start of the Global War on Terrorism, there has been a marked increase in public interest in helping Soldiers and families, said Debra Addison, DFMWR chief of mass support management division. For many people who want to donate but are unsure how to do it, the Gifts to the Army Web site provides that link.

"The bottom line is that donations can help improve quality of life for Soldiers and families," Addison said. "Even small donations can help."

The Gifts to the Army Web site allows donors to designate specific installations and programs to receive their gift, including overseas installations. They can also give to specific programs within FMWR, such as an installation's Family Readiness Groups or child development programs. If donors do not specify where they would like their money to go, the Army Gift Program Coordinator and FMWR Command allocate it to installations and programs as needed, Addison said.

"In the past, donations programs such as a trip to the Fantasy in Lights Christmas light display at

WNBA player donates money for D.C. trip

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

When Ketia Swanier created the Ketia 4 Kidz Foundation in 2008, her goal was to motivate children of active-duty service members. And now, students at Faith Middle School are reaping the benefits of her generosity.

In a ceremony at the Faith Middle School library Friday, Swanier presented the school's chapter of the National Junior Honor Society with $1,000 donation from her foundation that will help fund a three-day trip to Washington, D.C., for 15 honor students.

"I'm overwhelmed," said Bridgette Colburn, NJHS sponsor. "This is wonderful what Ketia's doing for us. We're very grateful. Her donation will really make it more accessible for these military families to be able to send their child on this trip."

Swanier

Swanier is a point guard for the WNBA Connecticut Suns and a graduate of Columbus High School. She spent part of her childhood in Columbus while her parents, both retired first sergeants, were stationed at Fort Benning. Swanier said she chose Faith as the first recipient of funds from her foundation because she wanted to give back to the community she was part of during her childhood. She thanked the Faith Middle School students and staff for supporting her and her foundation.

"It's really exciting to help these kids, cause I've been there," she said.

The trip, set for April, will be a way for students to experience firsthand how our country's leadership functions, Colburn said.

"I want my NJHS students to be leaders in their school, their community and hopefully someday in their country," she said. "The learning objective is for them to really see the system in progress and to realize that there's a process that goes on here in the country. I want them to see that the people who are there in Washington, D.C., didn't just get there — they had to work to get there."

Reed Hundertmark, a seventh-grade NJHS student who will attend the trip, said the experience would be especially memorable for him because it would be made possible by a fellow child of Army parents.

"Ketia's an Army brat like us and her goal is to help people, so that makes her a role model," he said. "I've never been to Washington, D.C., so I think it will be a really neat experience to see the nation's history."

For seventh-grader Benjamin Gardner, the trip will be a valuable chance to revisit the capital with his classmates.

"Thank you to Ketia for making it possible," he said.

Callaway Gardens," she said.

Though the Fort Benning DFMWR accepts in-kind donations, Addison cautions contributors to make sure DFMWR will be able to accept them.

"Items in large volume, such as a donation of furniture or a truckload of clothing, can be difficult for us to distribute," she said. "In that case, we'll refer them to a private organization."

While most individuals give cash donations, some have donated items such as vacation time at a Florida time share resort.

Since the Army cannot accept cash gifts for individual Soldiers and families, donors will be referred to organizations such as the Red Cross and Army Emergency Relief. When sending care packages to Soldiers overseas, Addison urges donors to make sure they are not too heavy or large to be delivered.

All donations made to the Gifts to the Army program are tax-deductible. To donate, visit www.https://webtrac.mwr.army.mil/donate/ or http://giftstoarmy.mil. For more information, call DFMWR at 706-545-4060 or 706-545-3328.

Sculptor: Uses hearts to stay with conference theme comforting to do — "a way for me to work out the stress of the day," she said. She even mailed him a couple small pieces to remind him of her.

Sculptures make great gifts, Steinmetz said. They can also serve practical purposes, such as a candle holder, book end or cake topper.

"The possibilities are endless," she said.

In keeping with the theme of the conference, "Big Hearts, Great Ideas," participants in the workshop will sculpt a heart that they can personalize to their taste.

"I think there will be a lot of reminiscing," Steinmetz said. "It's a new medium that a lot of people haven't tried. It's so much like Play-Doh. And then they'll have a souvenir to take home with them. Each piece will be one of a kind."

No matter what people think, this class is not just for artists, Steinmetz said.

"If you can roll a ball in your hands, you can make something. It's so simple," she said. "You won't need anything but your hands. It's just a chance to sit down and play. And it's neat to watch something come out of a two-inch block and to turn it into whatever your heart desires. It's almost magic."

Conference attendees will also get a chance to hear from artist Sandy Clough, keynote speaker for the event. Based in Georgia, Clough will share about her creative process and how it can apply to others given individuals' unique talents.

The conference will also include the opportunity to shop from on-site vendors and several door prizes including overnight hotel stays and aerial tour of Columbus.

Dandy: Know ancestors of others talk about history, he said, because people can learn from it.

Dandy said people should know who their ancestors are, but also the ancestors of others.

"I think the main problem in America is that we know so little about each other," he said. "As a result of this lack of knowledge, we have a tendency to fear each other, at least those who may be different than we are. Even though we live, work and play and socialize together, we somehow remain apart."

SFC Shaneeka Davis, of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, U.S. Army Infantry Center, who attended the luncheon, said every day, progress is being made.

"We, as blacks, should remember where we come from and where we are, because even though some people feel there is not a lot of change, there has been a lot of change," she said.

The luncheon included performances by Kendrick High School's choir, poetry and drama clubs. The choir sang Lift Every Voice and Sing and Somebody's Calling My Name.

Hand-me-up Clothing Room opens at Wilson School

Clothing room open to all Fort Benning military families

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Cathy McMullen was at her house in Peachtree City, Ga., a month after the Iraq War began trying to think of a way to help military families. That's when she called a friend at Fort Benning to see how she could help. By Easter, she had collected donations to fill 2,000 baskets to be sent to children at Fort Benning schools.

What she thought would be a one-time project turned into an organization, Embracing Military Families. McMullen collects new and gently used books, toys, school supplies, clothing and stuffed animals and gives them to military families at Fort Benning.

In 2008, she raised donations for 10 Fort Benning families at Christmastime. Now she takes items to Wilson Elementary School to the Hand-me-up Clothing Room, which opened this month.

"I love to help people — it's a good feeling," McMullen said. "I want to do something for the children. I want them to know I appreciate their sacrifice."

She said some people don't realize children have to sacrifice a lot when their parents are deployed.

"Soldiers and their families sacrifice so much for this country and it's important we recognize that," said McMullen, whose husband is a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel and whose son served a tour of duty in Iraq when he was in the Army.

"We have been wanting to open a clothing room but haven't had donations of clothes, but thanks to Embracing Military Families, we were able to do it," said Evelyn Montgomery, guidance counselor at Wilson. "The opening of the room is timely — especially with the economy how it is. It affects us all somehow," she said.

McMullen said she is always seeking new or gently used donations. Donations can be sent to 202 Panstone Drive, Peachtree City, Ga., 30269 or for more information about donating, call McMullen at 770-487-0672.

Military families can pick up items at the Hand-me-up Clothing Room at Wilson Elementary from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday to Friday after signing in at the front office.

For more information, call Montgomery at 706-545-7335 or e-mail her at evelyn.montgomery@am.dodea.edu.

Exercise caution when online

Sensitive information not OK for blogs

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

While blogs and personal Web pages can be a great way to keep in touch with friends and family, discretion is key when posting information about the military, said Fort Benning Internet safety authorities.

"We don't want people to stop posting, but we want them to be very, very aware of what they are posting," said Michael Hawkins, Fort Benning's installation operations security officer. "You always have some adversary out there trying to ping those Web sites to take advantage of that information to use against us."

Information about deployment dates, mission locations and the number of personnel in a unit should not be posted, Hawkins said.

"On the Internet, you have people trying to catch e-mails going back and forth between Soldiers and family members," he said. "We have possible adversaries who could take that information and pass it on to terrorists who could research the movement of a unit. (Posting sensitive information) gives the adversary more opportunity to possibly pose a threatening incident or action against our service members or our allies."

Family members should make sure not to disclose a Soldier's unit or to identify units preparing to deploy, Hawkins said.

"It's OK to say a Soldier is going to Iraq or Afghanistan as long as you don't disclose their specific location or identify their unit," he said.

Holly Gifford, director of Fort Benning's Army Community Service, recommends exercising the same caution online as when speaking to a stranger face-to-face.

"If you were talking to the person next to you in line at the grocery store, you wouldn't know who that person was," she said. "Online, there are a lot of people out there who portray themselves as someone other than who they really are. You need to know who it is you're communicating with before you start sharing information like that."

Personal identifying information, such as social security numbers, e-mail addresses, telephone numbers and addresses should never be posted online.

Deployed Soldiers should be careful not to post photographs online that could reveal their location, Hawkins said.

According to Army regulations, Soldiers and Department of the Army Civilians and contractors who release unauthorized information are subject to punitive action ranging from court-martial to leave without pay.

While firewalls, passwords and other security measures are important, they are not foolproof and discretion is the best way to avoid releasing sensitive information, Hawkins said.

"Even with firewalls and security measures, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," he said. "If you control initially what type of information you do put out, you can prevent the issue of firewalls being broken."

Native American Basketry from the Lauren Rogers Museum of Art

FEBRUARY 8 – JUNE 14, 2009

This exhibition of nearly 45 baskets from the Lauren Rogers Museum of Art's collection includes examples from various southeastern North American tribes. Included are bowls, burden baskets, fancy baskets, baby baskets, bags, trays, hats, miniatures and gathering baskets. Each weaver, most of whom were women, was influenced by her tribe's weaving traditions as well as the locally available weaving and dying materials. Thus, woven objects are expressive of both the weaver's personal identity and cultural affiliation.

This exhibition is made possible by the support of the Columbus Museum Guild.

Parents, hold children accountable for responsibilities

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Do you have children, those little blessings from God? Do you ever wonder how those little blessings can become so difficult? Aren't children like pets? They are so cute and cuddly when they are young, and then they grow up.

Have you ever wondered why teens and young adults never take responsibility for their own actions? An article by James Lehman, a behavioral therapist, can help us understand our children and their avoidance of responsibility and what we can do about it.

He says that responsibility slides off kids like water slides off a duck's back. Think of kids as being coated with Teflon, and nothing sticks — that's how they relate to responsibility.

Kids are born with no responsibilities, and everything they do is by instinct. They cry when they're hungry or in pain, they go to the bathroom when they need to. There's really no responsibility there; it's all instinct.

The idea that you are responsible for things is not inborn. Responsibility comes with coaching and training — it doesn't just happen by itself.

Do parents simply forget to teach responsibility? Every parent I've ever met, no matter what other qualities they had, knew enough to tell their kids to wash and get dressed, that it was time to go to school or clean their room. But it's not about saying the words; it's about how parents react when their child doesn't wash or go to school or clean his room. In other words, parents don't always promote accountability, and that's where the flaw is.

You have to hold kids accountable for not meeting their responsibilities. Being held accountable requires the parent to make the consequence for not meeting the responsibility less pleasant than if the child had completed the task in the first place. And the act of being held accountable promotes a willingness to meet the responsibilities next time.

Many parents either don't hold their kids accountable or don't follow through on the consequences once they set them, which promotes more irresponsibility.

The child learns excuses, lies and justifications work in his effort not to take responsibility for his behavior. He learns things don't have to be earned, and that society, as represented by his parents, doesn't follow through. Despite the lack of accountability kids see in rock stars, politicians or actors, for most of us, our nose is kept to the grindstone, both inside and outside of work. So it's vital to teach kids how to be responsible and follow through, and if they don't, hold them accountable.

But how can you do it effectively? Well, I will reveal James Lehman's 6 ways to Teach Responsibility to your children in upcoming articles. Stay tuned.

Are you struggling with your children and responsibility? Or maybe even you or your spouse is struggling with some challenging issue. Parenting? Marriage issues? Family issues? Reconnecting after deployment?

The Chaplain Family Life Center is here for you and your family. Give us a call and make an appointment today by calling 706-545-1760 or stop by our office located in Soldiers' Plaza at 2606 Dixie Road.

God knows your 'load limit,' draw on his strength for help

Chaplain (LTC) Joel Funk
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Most of us in the military have had the experience of wearing LBE at one time or another and some more than others.

I can recall several times how Soldiers (including myself) have complained about wearing the LBE because it was so uncomfortable, especially when we had to manipulate it to fit around the parachute during an airborne jump. Yet, the LBE served a purpose.

As the name describes, it is "load bearing equipment" to carry the weight of some of issued items to reduce the strain on the Soldier from carrying this load. I'm sure there was some thought into the design to make the LBE as practical and even comfortable as possible, and especially to provide the best means available to bear the load of the Soldier's gear.

Yet, there is a load limit a Soldier can bear, even with an LBE. I recall seeing "load limit" signs on highways, bridges and places like elevators. They're there because too much strain can cause a lot of damage or collapse. Engineers have determined the exact amount of stress these things can safely withstand. The warning signs are posted to tell us not to exceed the maximum load.

Human beings also have their "load limits," and they vary from person to person. Some people can withstand the pressure of trials and temptation better than others, yet everyone has a breaking point and can only take so much. There are times when circumstances and other people seem to be pushing us beyond what we can bear.

But God knows our limits and has promised never to allow any difficulties to enter our lives that exceed our strength and ability to endure. This is especially true when we're enticed by sin. First Corinthians 10:13 tells us that "God is faithful, who will not allow you to be tempted beyond what you are able." So when trials and temptations press down on you, remember that God knows your load limit, your ability to stand up under life's pressures.

Draw on his strength, because no temptation will be greater than that.

Preserving Georgia's bygone days

Bethlehem Baptist Church Colored School, in the Pine Mountain community in Harris County, Ga., is one of only 42 remaining one-room schoolhouses in Georgia. The school, which served students in first through eighth grades, is a rare example of an intact school building from the turn of the century. It had no electricity or indoor lighting, and the only source of heat was a coal-burning stove. The school was in use until 1952, when the state of Georgia consolidated many rural African-American schools into new buildings. Because African-American schools in rural areas received very little public funding, the school was mainly supported by Bethlehem Baptist Church and by community members, who used whatever materials available to construct it. The sides of its front steps are made from electric wire poles removed during New Deal construction projects of the 1930s, and the entire structure sits on hand-piled stacks of cinder blocks and stone. In December, the school was listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

One-room schoolhouse captures slice of time

Bethlehem Baptist Church Colored School contains many of its original furnishings, including this wall fixture which may have been used to hold chalk and other school supplies. Many details about the school are unclear because there are no written records.

Though the Bethlehem Baptist Church Colored School has fallen into disrepair, it still bears traces of its past students. On the back of school bench (above), children's drawings and carved initials are visible.

THE BAYONET

Finding one's way to Bethlehem Baptist Church Colored School in Harris County, Ga., takes determination and patience — qualities displayed by the students and teachers who walked for miles to the rough-hewn wood building to teach and learn in extremely harsh conditions. On the school's makeshift blackboard — a rectangle of black paint on the wall — and on the backs of its benches, the drawings and carved initials of past students are still visible.The school is not on a paved road, nor on any maps, but Willie and Gloria Brown aim to change that.

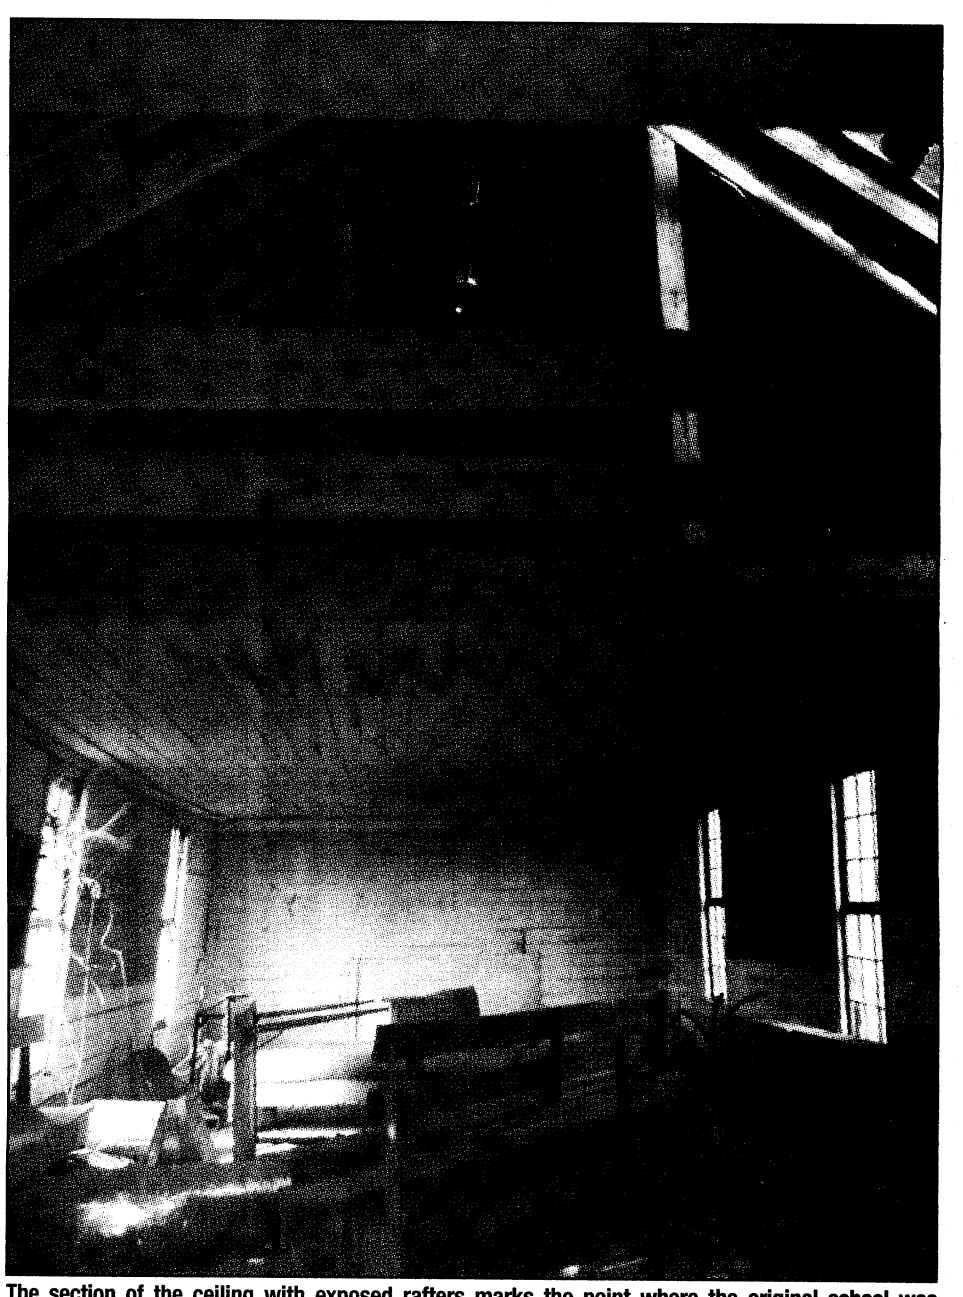

The Browns, deacons in Bethlehem Baptist Church, which owns the school, are tireless proponents of the need to preserve the school.

For students and teachers at the Bethlehem school, each day was a struggle, Willie said. "Now, people take it for granted that their education is just supposed to be given to them," he said. "The whole idea is to preserve that moment in history, when you had to work extra hard just to get a minimum education."

The Browns' goal is to restore the school to its appearance at the turn of the century, and to make it accessible to the public.

In December, the school was placed on the National Register of Historic Places as one of only 42 existing one-room schoolhouses in Georgia. Though the exact date of the school's construction is unclear, it was first mentioned in the Harris County Board of Education minutes in 1901. The building had no plumbing or electricity, and the only source of heat was a coal-burning stove.The school was in use until 1952, when the state of Georgia consolidated many African-American schools into new buildings as part of an attempt to circumvent the growing desegregation trend.

It is not known how many students attended classes at the Bethlehem school, but it is certain they went without many of the books and materials provided to white schools. Funding for the school, which housed students in grades one through eight, came largely from Bethlehem Baptist Church and community members.

The section of the ceiling with exposed rafters marks the point where the original school was expanded. The exact dates of the school's construction and expansion is unknown, though the first written mention of the building was in 1901. The exposed rafters were never covered, possibly because builders anticipated the 1951 bond issue that led to the school's closing the following year.

Self-reliance and resourcefulness is reflected in the school's building materials. Its roof and floor supports are made from rough logs, parts of which tree bark is still visible.

The front steps are constructed from electric wire poles removed during New Deal construction projects of the 1930s, and the entire structure is supported off the ground by hand-stacked piles of stone.

The need to take action to preserve the school is urgent, Gloria said. Since the Browns began efforts to preserve the school, some of the surrounding trees have been removed, exposing the building to the elements and causing it to deteriorate more rapidly.

"We definitely need all the support we can get, and quick," she said. "We've got to move a little faster than what we've been doing to make sure it's still there."

For more information, or to get involved with preservation efforts, call Willie and Gloria Brown at 706-563-4519.

CSC offers scholarships to students

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Community Spouses' Club runs Bit of Benning and the Fort Benning Thrift Shop not to make money but give it away, said Lynn Hughes of Community Spouses' Club.

"We aren't here to make a profit," she said. "We are here to help the community."

All the profits made from the Thrift Shop and 70 percent of Bit of Benning profits go toward scholarships and welfare grants, Hughes said.

Profits from the club's annual tour of homes, tree and wreath auction, Benning Bazaar and membership dues also go to the scholarship and welfare grant fund, she said.

Rachel Sengstacke, a nursing major at Columbus State University, received a $600 CSC scholarship in 2007 to cover some of her expenses in the 2008-2009 school year.

"The CSC scholarship was such a big help," she said. "I used it to pay for books and tuition."

Her plan was to get as many scholarships as she could, she said, so her parents didn't have to pay for her college.

"Any scholarship I get is such a blessing," she said. "The cost of books can add up, so every little bit helps."

Mom bakes B-day cakes for children

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"It started about a year and a half ago with one little girl who'd never had a birthday cake," said Toni Poulos, co-founder with her husband George Poulos of Free Cakes for Kids.

This little girl was with the Poulos family as a foster child for less than a month before her eighth birthday rolled around. In preparation for the big day, Toni got to work on a "very girly" heart-shaped triple-layer cake with white rosebuds and a ballerina on top.

"After dinner, we brought out the cake expecting to see a smile, and she just broke out in tears," Toni said. "It was heartbreaking. She didn't think she deserved anything so pretty. In that instant, I just knew this is what I was meant to do. The next day, I got going on it.

"That little girl touched us so much that we knew we had to do something about it, because if there is one, surely there are more. I've been amazed (to see) children as old as 15 get their first birthday cake with Free Cakes for Kids. Every child should have a

Post vet facility to offer surgeries

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning Veterinary Treatment Facility has closed its Stray Animal Adoption Facility. The contract was put up for bid and awarded to the Tri-County Animal Rescue in Butler, Ga., in January. Any stray animals caught on post will be transported to the Tri-County Animal Rescue the next day.

"They will handle all return-to-owner cases, along with adopting other stray animals captured on post," said CPT Jacob Barnoski, OIC for the Fort Benning vet facility.

Barnoski said he is confident that Tri-County will do an exceptional job in caring for the strays caught on post.

"For us at Vet Services, this transition has opened some doors," he said. "We no longer have a population of animals to perform spays and neuters on at the time of adoption. This means we will now start offering spays and neuters for privately owned animals."

Beginning Monday, military ID cardholders can schedule their pet to be spayed or neutered.

Taking a bite out of dental decay

Rachel L. Watkins
Cathy Hatfield, the post community health hygienist, checks first-grader William Atwood's teeth Feb. 5 at Dexter Elementary School. Students around post will receive dental screenings as part of National Children's Dental Health Month, which has been observed each February since 1949. All Fort Benning students will be screened by the end of February.

Girl Scout cookie sales up 3 percent

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Almost 1,100 cases of Girl Scout cookies — 12 boxes in each case — were unloaded Wednesday morning at the Girl Scout Hut on Main Post. With an average of 15 cookies per box, volunteers sorted more than 190,000 cookies for delivery.

"That's a lot of cookies," said Linse Wood, service unit cookie manager for post Girl Scouts, who was dubbed "Cookie Empress" by fellow volunteers.

Cookies are the biggest fundraiser of the year, she said. Sales are up 3 percent from last year, and that's only the pre-ordered boxes.

Girl Scouts start pre-selling cookies in January by going door to door and networking with family and friends. In February, booth sales begin.

The Girl Scouts have already pre-sold almost 13,000 boxes — about the same number of boxes sold for both January and February last year, Wood said. That puts the Scouts well on their way to reaching their goal of 15,000 boxes sold.

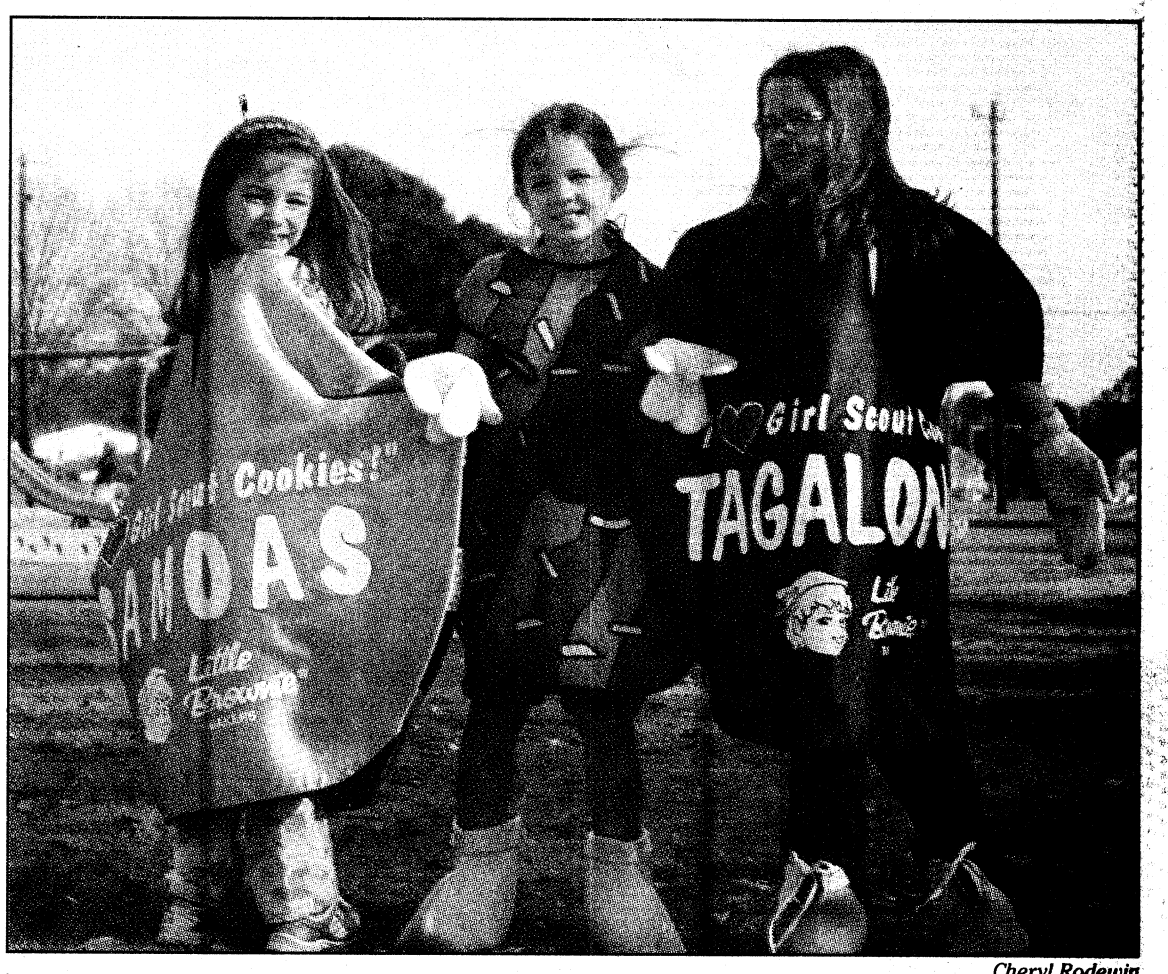

Shannon Moon, the local Girl Scouts director, said she has already heard a lot of requests for the much-loved confections.

"'When are the cookies coming? When are the cookies coming?' You would think we were Santa Claus," she said.

Girls learn financial responsibility, organization and other life skills from the sales, and the profits let them experience some "out-of-the-box" events, Moon said. In the past, girls have chosen skiing, theme parks, camping trips and even visiting the birthplace of Juliette Gordon Low, founder of Girl Scouts, in Savannah, Ga.

"It can be anything the girls choose," she said. "They get to put their minds together and decide what they want to do, how much it will cost, make a goal and make it happen."

For 7-year-old Jade Effinger, a Brownie in Troop 50012, cookie sales mean going to camp and seeing Disney on Ice.

Cheryl Rodewig
Six-year-old Katherine Carter, left, 7-year-old Tatum Brown and 8-year-old Tess Brown dress up as Girl Scout cookies. The Scouts will be selling Tagalongs, Samoas, Thin Mints, Do-Si-Dos and more through the end of February.

"We can get prizes ... meet people. We can do fun activities with our troop," she said.

Jade was the top seller last year with 542 boxes. This year, she's already pre-sold 150 boxes.

Her sales pitch — "Would you like to buy some Girl Scout cookies? They're really delicious" — sometimes includes information she memorizes from the back of cookie boxes.

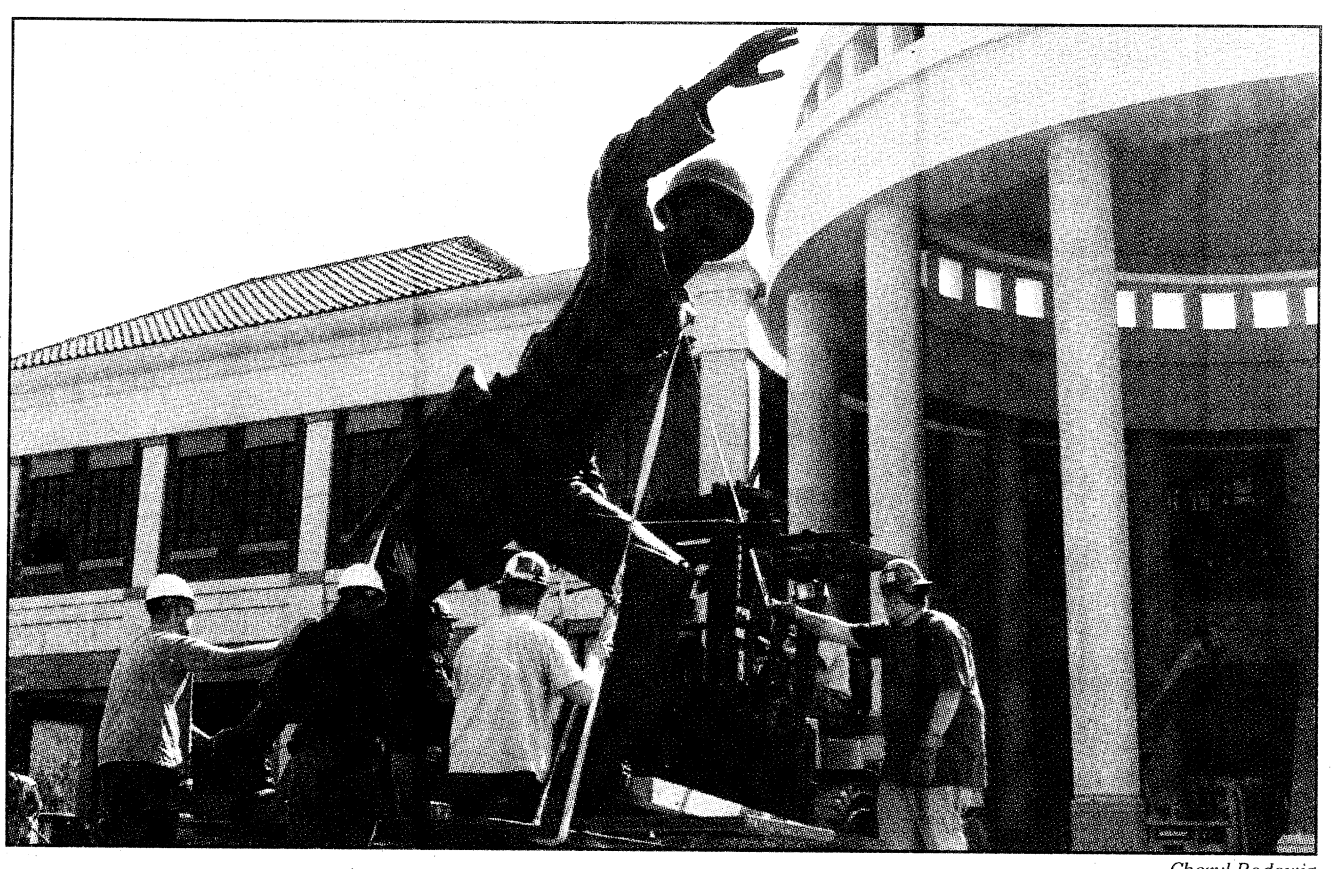

For a wavering potential customer, she knows to recommend the most popular choices: Thin Mints and Samoas. She also suggests the new Dulce de Leche cookies, even though they are "funny sounding."

It's the active participation of girls like Jade that has put cookie sales on the rise, Wood said, even though the number of Girl Scouts on post, currently at 155, has decreased since last year.

The Daisies, Girl Scouts in kindergarten and first grade, are also involved in selling cookies for the first time.

And for those who can't resist a 5-year-old's

Workers move the original Follow Me statue to the front of the National Infantry Museum Tuesday.

Museum opening delayed til June

Jessica Todd
BAYONET CORRESPONDENT

Because of time constraints, the grand opening of parts of the National Infantry Museum will be delayed until June — more than two months later than expected.

"It's merely an issue of time, nothing else," said Cyndy Cerbin, director of Communications for the National Infantry Foundation. "We would rather wait and focus on the quality, rather than open before it is ready."

The museum will have a partial grand opening March 19 in conjunction with the graduation of B Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment.

After the graduation, officials with National Infantry Museum will hold a sacred soil ceremony — they will spread the soil collected from Infantry battle fields from around the world on to the parade ground.

"The ceremony will be very emotional, because it will give the Soldiers graduating a tangible connection to the legacy that they've just joined," Cerbin said.

On March 19 everything except the artifacts gallery will be open. This includes an IMAX theater, a restaurant, and a gift shop that will be open to the entire Fort Benning and Columbus areas.

Located right outside the post, the museum is easily accessible to the public.

The entire museum will be opened some time in June. A date will be set once scheduling is complete with guest speaker, Colin Powell.

The National Infantry Museum, although an awesome place for history buffs, offers more than just artifacts.

"This isn't a museum of things, but a museum of stories," Cerbin said. During a tour of the artifacts, you aren't just looking at random items, you are learning the story of the Soldiers involved in these battles, she said.

The galleries are set up so that instead of just looking and reading, you can be a part of the history. One gallery in particular, the Cold War Gallery, is a glass-enclosed room that recreates not only scenes from Vietnam, but the temperature and other conditions to make you feel like you are there.

The museum also includes a gallery called the Last 100 Yards. A play off of the Infantry idea that "the Infantry will own the last 100 yards of every battle," the gallery offers 100 yards of vignettes from battles from past to present.

There is also a family support gallery, in which the families of the Soldiers are honored for the sacrifices they make. There is also a costume room where kids can try on different uniforms and enjoy themselves.

"Let's face it, the female is the one making the plans, so if it's not something she's interested in, chances are the family won't come," Cerbin said of trying to make the museum fun for the whole family.

Honor Infantry Soldiers in 2009

MG(R) Jerry A. White
NATIONAL INFANTRY FOUNDATION

I resolve to honor the American Infantry Soldier in 2009, and I hope you will join me.

It's a promise we hardly had to make 12 months ago when these admirable young people were all over the news. Indeed, every year is comprised of what journalists call "story arcs." A topic becomes all the rage for a few months and dominates opinion pages, blogs, magazine covers and TV news programs.

The beginning of 2008 marked the first anniversary of President Bush's "surge," in which five additional combat brigades were sent to Iraq. That development helped make the American Soldier the first story arc of that year. There was reporting on combat missions, video of fire fights, blog posts from the front and dozens of stories about tearful reunions with family and friends back home as tours of duty concluded. For a while, the nation was clearly attentive to the dedication and courage of the military men and women devoted to protecting and projecting American ideals.

Then the arc faded. It always does. The presidential primaries experienced their own surge, and the spotlight of national focus moved on to other things. But the Soldiers kept fighting and sacrificing in a manner fitting a long and proud tradition.

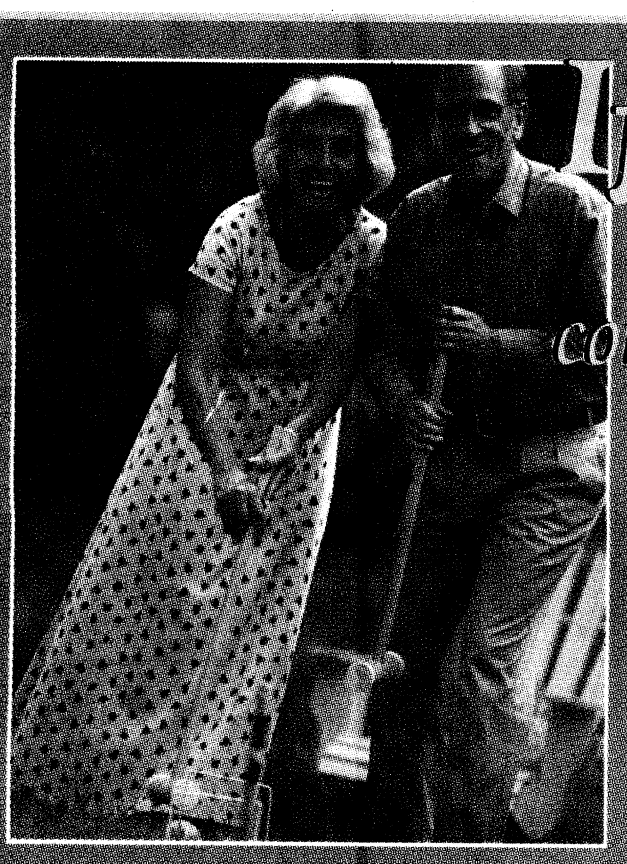

George Orwell wrote, "People sleep peaceably in their beds at night only because rough men stand ready to do violence on their behalf."

In spite of instances of extremely resilient personal character, the valor of the U.S. Army Infantryman has often gone unrecognized. Recognizing them is all the more important when you take into account that 80 percent of U.S. armed forces casualties have been from the Infantry.

More than half of the 3,467 Medals of Honor awarded since the Civil War have gone to Infantrymen. No war in the history of the world has been won without Infantry. Regardless of the remarkable advances in military hardware, armor, tactics, intelligence and weapons technology, the foot Soldier has endured as the simply indispensable element of every winning force.

There are individual war heroes, of course, but perhaps the greatest collective hero is the Infantry itself — the legions of anonymous patriots whom history does not record, but whose commitment is crucial to the achievements of our country. We can all commit ourselves to acknowledging the contributions of these brave souls who have given their youth, intelligence, devotion, and sometimes their very lives to the progress and propagation of America.

So this year, mount a flag in your yard, cook a meal for the family of a serving Soldier, thank a veteran in your neighborhood and be visibly appreciative and proud of our fighting forces.

Vet facility: Will maintain a 'good standard of care'

Surgeries are on a first-come, first-served basis and cannot be scheduled more than two weeks in advance. The vet facility will perform its first surgery March 2. Other surgeries will be offered on case-by-case basis.

"The goal we have at Vet Services is to try and say 'Yes' while maintaining a good standard of care," Barnoski said. "What that means is if we can serve you, we will do our best with our time and resources. Give us a try. You may be surprised at the services we offer, and we will try to save you money by doing as much as we can before we refer you off post."

To surrender pets, people should contact a local adoption facility. To report a stray, call Animal Control at 706-545-5222. For information about surgery pricing, to schedule an appointment or for more information, call the vet facility at 706-545-4444. The office is located on 10th Mountain Division Road and is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

plea to buy cookies but can't eat the cookies either, not to worry, Wood said.

The Cookies from Home service project lets people buy cookies to send overseas. The shipping is free, so there is no added charge, and the donation benefits both Girl Scouts and the service members who receive the gifts, Wood said.

"They were so excited to get Girl Scout cookies," said Wood, recalling a group of Soldiers that she sent cookies to last year. "It's just a little piece of home. It says, 'Here you go; we're thinking of you.'"

Girl Scout cookies are special, something a lot of people can relate to, said Moon, who remembers pulling cookie boxes behind her in a wagon to sell to neighbors, just like her own daughters do now.

"It's nostalgic," she said. "It brings them back to a place when they were little, because the cookies have been around so long. And they're not just getting cookies; they are supporting an organization."

Girl Scouts will be selling cookies at the PX, the commissary, Dixie and Custer road shoppettes and the shoppette on Ingersoll Street from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

To join Girl Scouts or get involved as a volunteer, call Moon at 706-610-5524. For more information, visit www.gshg.org.

Cake baker: Looking for recipients, volunteers

special cake and know they are worth our time, effort and commitment."

So that's what the Pouloses set out to do — help as many kids as possible with one simple thing: a birthday cake. First, they contacted friends, schools and churches with their idea. They put flyers in laundromats and post offices in their hometown of Trenton, Ga. Then they launched a Web site, www.freecakesforkids.com.

"The response was just amazing," Toni said. "We have volunteers from all walks of life. Most of our volunteers have never had any professional classes. They give from the heart."

In a little over a year, the volunteer base has grown to more than 400 people in four countries. The number of cakes Toni bakes has grown, too. She used to bake only for her family — about 10 cakes a year. Now, she sometimes does more than 20 a week, hitting the 500 mark a little over a year after the program started.

An Army mom and former military wife, Toni knows how difficult it can be making ends meet. With her daughter, SPC Sharon Stradling, currently stationed at Fort Benning, she wanted to reach out to the military community that does so much for society as whole, she said.

Anyone who needs a cake or wants to volunteer can reach her via the Web site or by calling 706-657-2390. People looking for cakes can check online to find a baker in their area or contact Toni to be matched with someone, if possible. Volunteers are mentored as they begin baking, and they can do as little or as much as they want, Toni said.

9-year-old Brandon stands next to his Spiderman birthday cake that Toni Poulos made as part of her Free Cakes for Kids program.

"The way we look at it is that one cake a month is one child's life that's been touched, so there's no such thing as too small of a commitment," she said. "It's a unique volunteer opportunity, and it's so simple … a birthday cake, something we really never give a second thought to."

For many families, Toni said, it's a decision between a birthday cake and a present, sometimes even buying groceries.

"Everybody needs a hand at some point in their life," she said. "That's what we are. We're a family helping families. And we get back far more than we ever give. Just to see the little faces light up and the look of relief on parents' faces. We're blessed to be part of such a positive, happy thing."

Toni said the best part of volunteering is seeing the look on kids' faces when they receive their first cake.

Some of those children are the "inspiration that keeps me going," she said. Children like Brandon.

"His mother had already told him there would be no money for a gift or a cake," Toni said. "He was such a brave little guy about it. He told his mom, 'That's OK.'"

Just days before Brandon's ninth birthday, his mom heard of Free Cakes for Kids, and Brandon had a Spiderman cake all his own.

When he saw it, he loved it, Toni said. "His eyes just got huge. 'Is this mine? It's really mine? Do I really get to take it home with me?' He must have asked me close to 10 times if he really could take it home. Just looking at his eyes and the way his whole face lit up, I will always remember him. That's why you do it. And that's what makes it worth the sacrifice.

"Someone once asked me, 'How can you afford to do this?' And the only thing I could think of is, now that I've seen the need, I've seen the children, I can't afford not to do it."

Scholarships: Available to military family members

In 2007, the CSC gave out $13,000 in scholarships. Hughes said CSC hopes to give that much out this year.

The scholarships are available to family members of active-duty or retired Soldiers who live in the tricommunity. CSC is now accepting applications for the 2009-2010 school year and applicants can be traditional or continuing education students. Each applicant is required to write an essay. Applicants can pick up applications at a Bit of Benning, the Fort Benning Thrift Shop, Sayers Library, any area school guidance office or by going online to www.fortbenningosc.org. Scholarship applications must be postmarked by April 3. CSC also offers welfare grants for organizations including American Red Cross and women's shelters. The deadline to apply for welfare grants is March 30. To get an application or for more information, go to the CSC Web site, www.fortbenningosc.org,

MOAA offers $1,000 grants

Scholarships available to children of active-duty service members

MOAA

Alexandria, Va. — The Military Officers Association of America, (MOAA) is offering base and post scholarships again this year in the form of grants of $1,000 each to 25 dependent children of active-duty personnel. The base and post scholarship is one of several MOAA education programs designed to help finance higher education for college-bound or current undergraduate students.

To be eligible, a student must be younger than age 24, working for a first undergraduate degree, and a dependent child of an active-duty service member — enlisted, warrant officer, or officer — in the United States Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard, Public Health Service, or National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. This includes members of the drilling Reserves and National Guard.

Grant recipients will be randomly selected by MOAA from applicants within each of the seven services. There are no need-based criteria, no GPA minimums, no essays and no fees. MOAA membership is not a requirement. Students can easily apply by completing the on-line application located on the MOAA Web site, www.MOAA.org/education.

Follow the instructions for the multipurpose scholarship application. Applications must be received by noon, March 2. Semi-finalists will be notified by e-mail and the self-check on the Web site by mid-March. Winners will be notified in May.

MOAA's scholarship grants and zero-interest loans are currently helping more than 1,600 uniformed services dependents to meet their college expenses.

First rule on getting out of a financial hole: stop digging

Jeff Saeli
BAYONET CORRESPONDENT

Several weeks ago, I introduced the topic of surviving the recession. By now, you should have prepared a budget, a schedule of debt, and a schedule of assets. Taken together, these documents should tell you what you make, what you spend, what you have and what you owe.

Recall, also, the definition of 'survival': "...coming through the recession without major financial disruption (such as bankruptcy), loss of significant assets (such as a home or investment portfolio), and without destroying your personal credit rating..."

If your employment is stable (and for most service members it is), your income exceeds your expenses, you own most of what you have, carry a burden of debt that is easily manageable, and you have some savings, you really don't need to do much to survive. Sound money management and steady employment will mean you may even be able to take advantage of the recession by purchasing needed items at a discount, as retailers attempt to shed inventory.

If, however, you face an income shock - the loss of one or more jobs in the household, the devaluation of a portfolio upon which you depend for income (like a 401K), a pay cut, reduced hours, etc, then you've got to make some hard choices.

What I'll next say may apply in part or in whole to your particular situation, but even those who have been unaffected by this recession can benefit from this advice.

Remember the first rule of getting out of a hole: stop digging. Put away or destroy your credit cards, swear off of borrowing and move to a strictly cash basis. It's okay to use credit cards as a form of money, but not as a source of money.

Establish priorities for your income. First, pay for shelter, food, and utilities. Then make debt payments. Then make lifestyle payments. Lifestyle payments are those things you like to have, but don't have to have, like cable television, or pizza on Friday night. Learn the difference between needs and wants.

Identify opportunities for savings. Reduce driving on weekends by going out only once, for everything you need. Be a geek and compare those little labels in the commissary that tell you the price per ounce and buy accordingly. Shop at Goodwill, or only during sales, or not at all if you can avoid it. Invite friends over instead of going out. Pack a lunch and re-use the baggies: they're washable. Walk places. Learn to like oatmeal.

Make do with what you have. This is not the time to upgrade. Buy new tires instead of a new car. Patch your jeans. Hand clothing down from child to child, and parent to teen. Be careful with your drinking glasses. Be of value to your employer, and hold onto your job.

Save money. Save your change in a can, and every week take it to the bank. Start with a dollar a day, if you have to, but learn the habit of not spending all your money every time you have some. I'm not going to get into the whole 'six month's worth of variable and fixed expenses,' although that should be your ultimate goal. For now, just start putting some money back. If you receive a tax refund this year, put most or all of it in the bank.

Take a close look at what you own and what you owe. Consider adjusting your debt — for example, paying off debt with home equity, to take advantage of a lower interest rate and tax deductibility. Pay off what you can, attacking small debts first, then large debts in order of highest interest first.

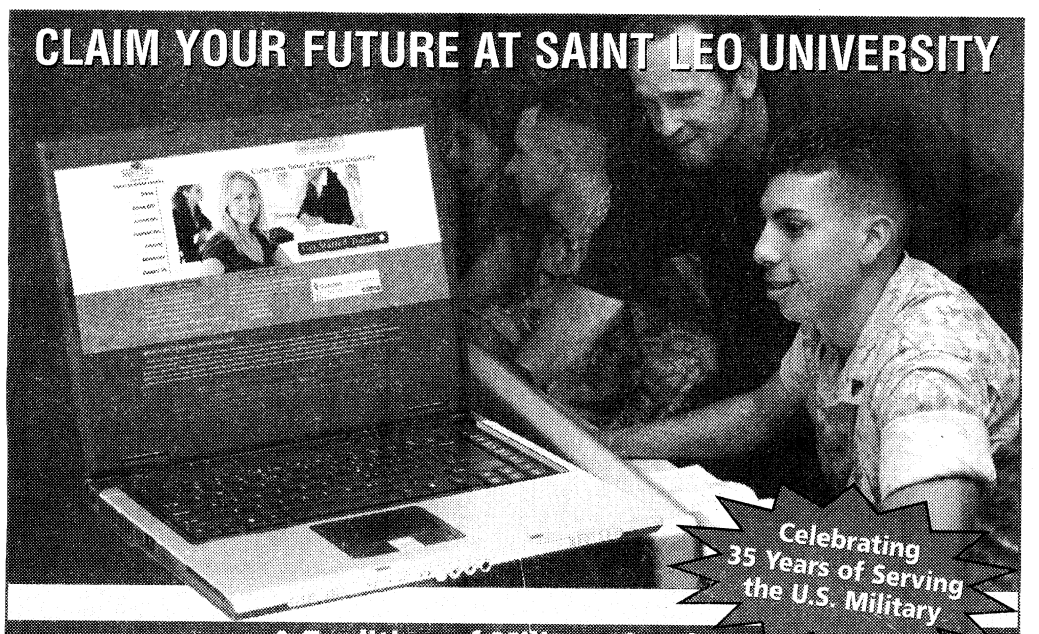

Believe that it's going to get better, but understand that it may get worse before it does get better, and that it may take longer than you think. Adjust your lifestyle with the rest of your life as your planning horizon. You can always spend later what you save today, but you can never save later what you spend today.

We are in a major, long-lived recession that has so far resisted all attempts to reverse it, and is still showing signs of deepening. As individuals, as a nation, and as a world, we are going to have to live differently for some time to come.

On the bright side, the whole world is in this with you, and a new, more frugal attitude is emerging, so you won't seem a nerd if your clothing isn't the latest style, your cell phone is last year's model, or if you bring your lunch to work.

The next newcomer's orientation and bus tour is from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Feb. 27 at Building 9608 on 1st Cavalry Division Road in Bouton Heights. The orientation is for Soldiers, families and civilians new to the Fort Benning and Columbus area and includes tours of Fort Benning and Columbus. Child care is available for free with reservations. To register, or for more information, call 706-545-0403.

Willingness to be small can make one great

Chaplain (MAJ) Sandy McLean
WARRIOR TRANSITION BATTALION

What makes someone great? To many, greatness has to do with castles and titles and positions. If that is the case, none are great in God's sight.

People tend to align themselves with power because power tends, at least in this world, to go along with greatness. But God would have us align ourselves in another way altogether. God says that if you want to be great, then you have to be small. But, these days nobody wants to be small.

Some people get bigger on the outside, but smaller on the inside. Those are the people God can use. But, some get big on the outside and big on the inside too. They expand inside, swell up with pride. They are always looking for ways to make themselves look greater.

Saying, "I am the greatest, I shook up the world," like Muhammad Ali is not the kind of greatness God calls us to. God invites you to be a mover and shaker in your own right.

The prophet Joel spoke about the coming of the Holy Spirit. Dreams of heaven and visions of rapture are possible through the power you already have in the Holy Spirit, the one God offers freely and without price.

Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? People like Martin Luther King Jr. who are willing to empty themselves so they can be filled with the things of God.

Who is the greatest in the kingdom of God? Certainly not those whose not so hidden agendas reflect only their own selfish ambitions. Certainly not those who seek to align themselves with power so they may appear powerful. I think those who humble themselves like children before the awesome majesty that is God are greatest.

Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? Those whose small hearts have great love for the Lord and those the Lord loves. Those who in their weakness, use God's strength to do all things, hope all things, believe all things, endure all things.

We have a new president. Indications are he will be a good one, if not a great one, if, as I have suggested to you, he abandons himself, empties himself of his stuff and allows God to fill him. If he, arguably the most powerful man on earth, humbles himself like a little child and submits to the awesome moving and shaking of almighty God, we will all be blessed by it.

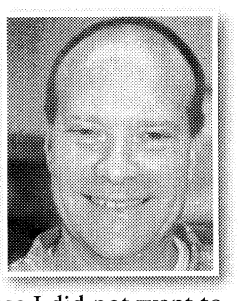

You and I have an opportunity to pray for the president as he exercises his office.

Pray he humbles himself. Pray he listens to God's counsel before anyone else's. Pray he places the best interests of the people before any special interests, and pray that he is moved and shook in such a way that the gifts and talents that are in him, spill over to bless this nation and the world and that God gets the glory.

Now, wouldn't that be great?

For Valentine's Day, tell your mate what you want

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Across the country, candy, flowers and gifts are exchanged between loved ones, all in the name of St. Valentine. According to the Greeting Card Association, an estimated 1 billion Valentine cards are sent each year, making Valentine's Day the second most important holiday of the year for sending cards. So if you have not already bought yours, this is your last minute reminder.

Do not do what I did when I was newly married. I thought that for a gift to be really special, you had to give it when the recipient did not expect it. So what did I do? I didn't allow the card companies to dictate when I would and would not buy my wife a card.

That strategy did not work out to my benefit. When every other spouse received a card, box of chocolates or flowers — my wife did not get anything because I did not want to conform to the norm.

My wife has helped me to understand some important life lessons. The first is knowing what you want. She knew she wanted to be recognized and honored on Valentine's Day. While she would still love me even if I did not recognize this day, it would mean more to her if I did.

You would be surprised how many spouses complain their husband or wife is not doing what they would like them to do. When I ask them what they want, they often say they don't know. And if you don't know what you want, how is your spouse supposed to know? So, know what you want. Take some time and think about what you want in your relationship.

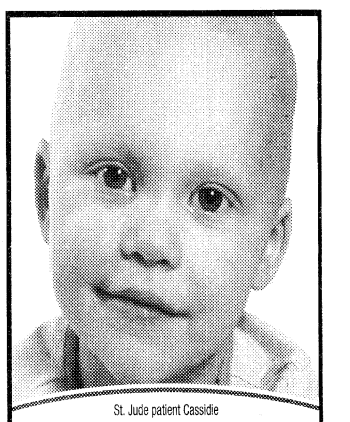

The second step is to ask for what you want. My wife knew what she wanted and told me. She recognized I was not a mind reader. If I was going to get the message, she needed to send it.

So many times, a spouse wants his or her need or desire fulfilled and waits in disappointment because they did not share their desire with their mate. You have to communicate. No one is a mind reader. When you communicate with your spouse, he or she can meet your needs. Do not be afraid to ask for what you want in a loving and honoring manner. Saying gently, "Honey, I would enjoy going out for dinner with you on Valentine's Day," can change the mood and direction of that conversation and the evening.

The last step is getting what you want. It worked for my wife. I have learned from my past Valentine's Day mistake. At the least, I buy my wife a card on special days. We may go out to dinner, but I make it a point to acknowledge the day and my love for her. It meets her needs and it is good for us as a couple. So, know what you want, ask for it and you'll get it. It is a winning situation for both of you. Your spouse feels good knowing he or she met your need, and you feel good having your needs met.

Are things not so romantic in your relationship right now? If you are struggling with tension in your marriage and would like help, give us a call at 706-545-1760.

Our pastoral staff is ready to help you with your journey. Call or stop by our office at 2606 Dixie Road.

REMEMBER: NO MEANS NO!

Know how to reduce the risk of becoming a sexual assault offender:

- Remember: sexual assault is a crime. You will be held responsible for your actions.
- Ensure that your partner consents to sexual activity. You must have consent from your partner before you can legally engage in sexual activity. If someone is passed out, unconscious, or asleep from alcohol, drugs, or fatigue, they are legally unable to give their consent.
- Ensure a potential partner is of legal age. Ignorance is no excuse.
- Communicate your expectations to a potential partner. Misunderstandings and lack of communication, especially between people who don't know each other very well, can lead to dangerous and career-threatening situations.
- Avoid using drugs or excessive alcohol. People under the influence of alcohol or drugs often have different memories of how an event occurs.
- Remember that NO MEANS NO even if the other person:
  - o Says yes, but changes his or her mind
  - o Has been kissing you or "making out" with you
  - o Has had sex with you before
  - o Has been drinking alcohol
  - o Wears provocative clothing.

If you're not sure how your partner feels about your actions, ask the question! Remember: No means No.

For additional information, please contact Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy and Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Program Manager, at (706) 545-0892 or Michelle Fonseca, Sexual Assault Response Coordinator (SARC) at (706) 545-8740. Soldiers may call the Fort Benning Sexual Assault Response Line 24 hours a day/7 days a week at (706) 566-7393.

The March of Dimes is saving babies...

After the March of Dimes defeated polio in the 1950s, we turned our attention to preventing birth defects and other threats to infant health. Today, we're fighting premature birth — the leading cause of newborn death. Half a million babies are born too soon every year. We're working to find out why ... and how premature birth can be prevented.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

A-Rod admits PED use

After a report came out that New York Yankees' third baseman Alex Rodriguez tested positive for performance enhancing drugs in 2003, he admitted that he did use PEDs from 2001-2003.

Rodriguez gave an exclusive sit-down interview to ESPN's Peter Gammons to answer those allegations in which he said he felt enormous pressure when he got to Texas to play for the Rangers in 2001.

Somehow I'm not very shocked. It sullies the name of baseball that much more and makes me wonder if there will be the "asterisk" talk like so many tag Barry Bonds with.

NFC wins Pro Bowl

Though he was on the losing team in the Super Bowl, Cardinals' wide receiver Larry Fitzgerald was on the winning team, the NFC, Feb. 8 in Honolulu, Hawaii, for the Pro Bowl.

The NFC beat the AFC, 30-21, and Fitzgerald scored two touchdowns and the Bowl MVP.

NASCAR fires up

The first race of the season, the Daytona 500, begins on Fox at 3:30 p.m. Sunday. Martin Truex Jr. secured the top starting spot, followed by veteran Mark Martin. The start of any sporting season is always an exciting time, and this is no different for NASCAR. The Daytona 500 is anyone's race to win, and the finishes are almost always a guaranteed breath holder.

On Feb. 7, Kevin Harvick came from behind to win the Budweiser Shootout at Daytona. Jamie McMurray finished second, followed by Tony Stewart.

All-Star Weekend

NBA players get a brief respite from regular game play with this weekend's All-Star Weekend in Phoenix. Saturday night will showcase the 3-point shootout, Skills Challenge, H-O-R-S-E and the Slam Dunk Contest, which is always a must-see.

The All-Star Game will be at 8 p.m. Sunday on TNT. Starters from the East include Dwyane Wade, Allen Iverson and Kevin Garnett. West starters include Kobe Bryant, Tim Duncan and Yao Ming.

Woods' welcomes cub

Tiger Woods broadened his brood when his wife, Elin, gave birth to a baby boy Feb. 8. They named him Charlie Axel Woods. Charlie joins big sister Sam Alexis, who was born in June of 2007.

Congratulations to the Woods family.

Faith wins tournament championship

Lady Warrior Bears defeat Lady Lions 47-31

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Faith Middle School Lady Warrior Bears and the St. Luke Lady Lions battled for first place at the Fort Benning Follow Me Basketball Tournament Saturday at Faith with the Lady Warrior Bears coming away with a 47-31 win — and the tournament championship.

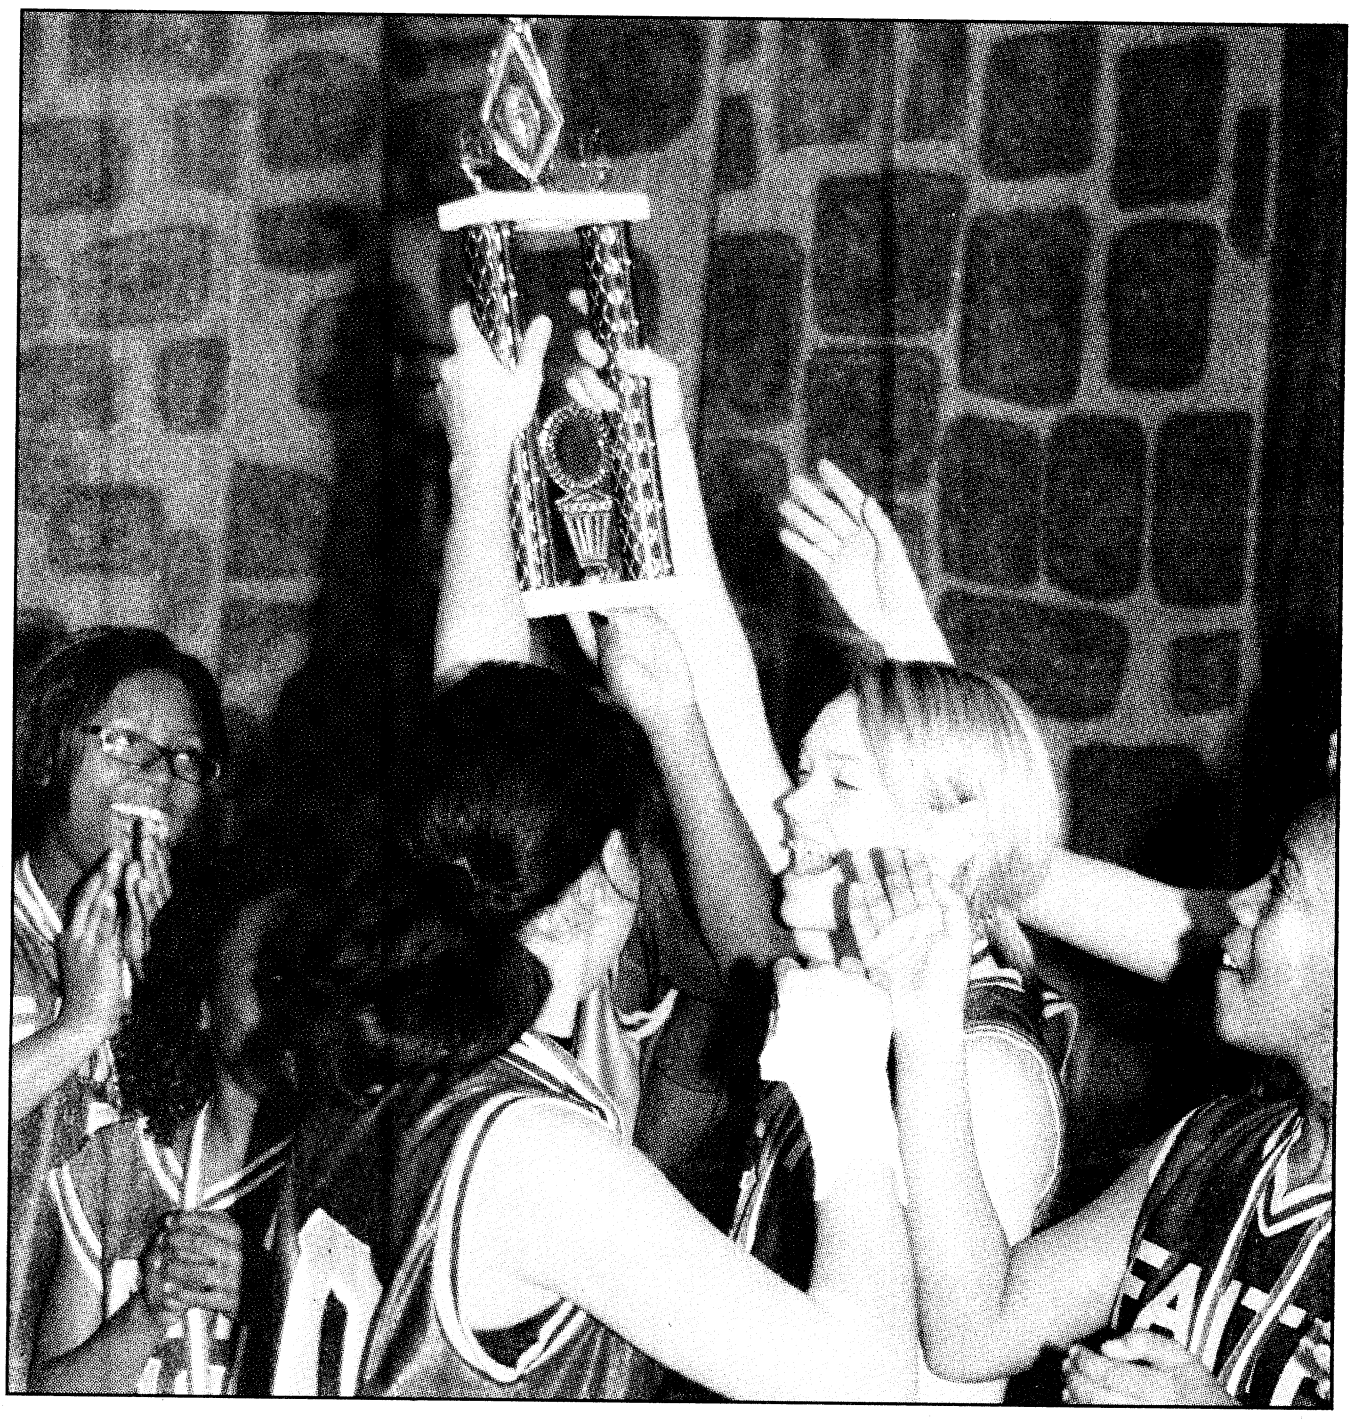

Lady Warrior Bear Kelsey Taylor put up the first points on the scoreboard for Faith with a basket in the first minute of the game. And at the end of the first period, the Lady Warrior Bears led, 11-5.

The Lady Lions came back in the second quarter outscoring the Lady Warrior Bears 12-6 to tie the game at the half.

"At halftime, I told the girls we have to score points. I told them not to worry about what the other team was playing on defense, let's just play our style of defense of basketball — get them down the court and press," said coach Larry Addy.

In the first minute of the third period, Taylor scored two points, but the lead was short-lived when the Lady Lions answered back with a basket to tie the score at 19. By the end

Warrior Bears defeat Knights 56-35

Faith wins championship over Calvary Christian

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Faith Middle School Warrior Bears closed out the basketball season defeating Calvary Christian School Knights 56-35 Saturday winning the Fort Benning Follow Me Basketball Tournament at Faith.

Both teams battled back and forth for points but by the end of the first period, Warrior Bears led, 22-13.

The Warrior Bears' defense held the Knights scoreless until the 3:30 mark in the second period. The Knights' offense was unable to overcome the Warrior Bears' 14-point lead, 36-22.

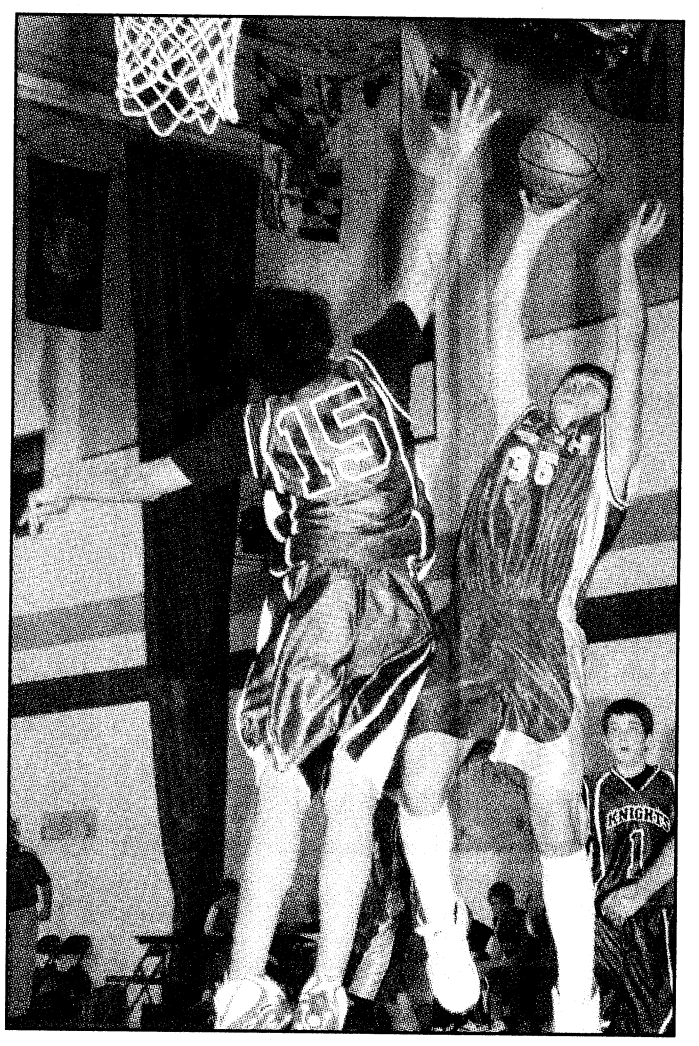

"At halftime, I told them to keep their concentration and we weren't doing well. We missed a lot of layups and that's just a concentration thing. There were a couple of instances where we were not rotating well on defense in our 2-3 zone," said Warrior Bear coach Roy Bolar.

In the third period, the Knights fell further behind the Warrior Bears after being outscored 11-9 and entered the fourth quarter trailing, 47-31.

The Warrior Bears sealed the 56-35 victory with nine points in the final quarter while limiting the Knights to four points.

"I had a conversation with the team Friday about focus and I think that really helped this game," Bolar said. "We had a good team effort with kids consistently contributing to the game. Maybe not all of them scored, but

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Using life experiences on the court

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

For Paul Horton, "coach" is what his players call him, but it's not a title he relishes in front of his name.

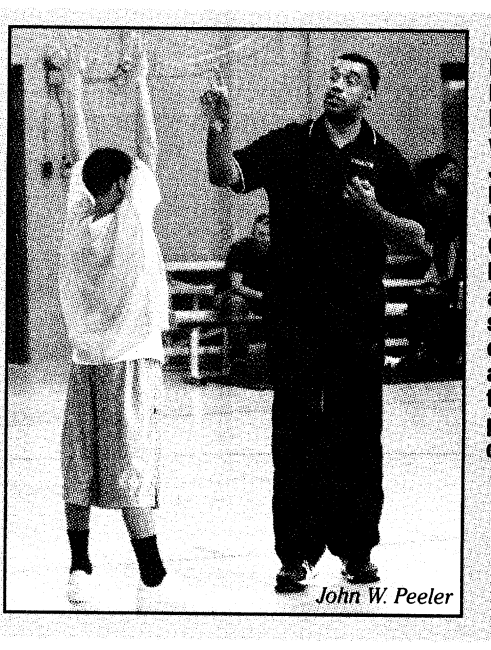

"I don't really consider myself a coach," Horton said. "I consider myself a manager. I can manage anything on the floor, but I can't teach somebody something who is not willing to learn."

Horton has been managing youth basketball teams on post since 1992 when he first arrived at Fort Benning. Although he did not have any children at the time, he volunteered. Horton has been around basketball his entire life, he said.

"I played in high school and a little in college," Horton said. "Everywhere I have been I have always played. I have played on post teams that won the post championship here twice with NCOA and the last time with ITB."

Horton, the nephew of MLB Detroit Tigers great Willie Horton, has been around

See Horton, B2

John W. Peeler

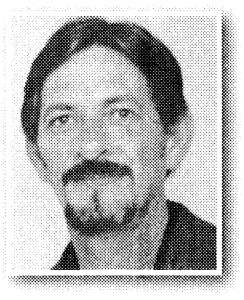

Coach Paul Horton has been in the locker room with Michael Jordan, played basketball with Shaquille O'Neal when he was a kid, and now takes some of his life experiences and passes them on to his players on the court.

Everyone is a coach

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Coaching a child in a sport is something tangible. You watch them grow as an athlete and if you are lucky, they go on to become a star.

But, we all are coaches in one respect or another.

I would not be where I am at today if it weren't for former Bayonet editor Agatha Hudson Debrow — she coached me in the fundamentals of the newspaper industry. It was because of her coaching that I moved from being a reporter to a sports editor and today, the team leader of The Bayonet, back where I began my newspaper career.

Never being much for catch phrases, I feel I must use one in this instance — she trained the trainer — me.

Many years after I left The Bayonet, I had the opportunity to pass along the knowledge I gained from coach Debrow, to a brand new intern while working at the Times-Courier in Ellijay, Ga. The intern, Elizabeth Green, was a bright-eyed, English major who wanted to be a photojournalist.

My good friend Al Summers, news editor for the Times-Courier, and I took her under our wings and taught her what it took to become a newspaper person — we became her coaches.

She later became the editor of the weekly Catoosa County News and Monday she will begin her new job as the general manager of the bi-weekly Calhoun Times — at age 25.

Between Summers and me, suffice it to say we both feel like we have just won the Super Bowl. In essence, we were her coaches and are proud of her accomplishments.

But, her success did not begin with Summers or me; it began with those who coached us. For me, that was coach Debrow. Now, Green will have her own team to mold — and coach, and I know she will do a fine job because of the coaches who passed their knowledge through Summers and me, down the line to her.

I am sure my mentor, coach Debrow, didn't have any idea how many newspaper people her coaching of me would affect. I have trained a few journalists who continue to carry forward the things she taught me about being in newspapers, and now Green will carry a part of coach Debrow's knowledge forward to those she will mentor.

Somewhere, there is a coach passing on the knowledge you passed to them when you were their coach. Whether it was on a field of play, or something they've learned from you about life.

Everyone is someone's coach in one respect or another, and maybe … just maybe, if you are lucky, you will be able to look back and feel like you have just won the Super Bowl — because someone you coached will became a star.

Coach wisely. Coaching trees branch out — you never know how big your tree will grow.

Championship: Faith girls win end of season tourney of the quarter, the Lady Warrior Bears held a five-point lead, 27-22.

The Lady Warrior Bears continued their scoring streak, outscoring the Lady Lions 20-9 to seal the 47-31 victory.

"We did a pretty good job. We didn't do well in the first half, but we stepped our game up in the second half and I think all of our hard work paid off," Taylor said.

"The first half was a little tougher than I thought it was going to be. I told the girls if we got the other team down early we would have an easy game, but at halftime, the score was tied," Addy said. "We came out and the second half and were able to change up the game."

The tournament was the last game of the season for both teams. The Lady Warrior Bears finish the season with a 10-3 record.

Scoring: Faith: Taylor (17), Maier (10), Ramseur (6), Addy (5), Houston (4), Griner (2), Grant (2), Jones (1). St. Luke: Weaver (17), Mize (7), Burbrink (3), Wynn (3), Hatcher (1).

professional athletes and has witnessed some of the attributes needed to achieve success. Horton incorporates those experiences, along with his military background, into his approach to managing.

"It's all about approach," Horton said. "I have been in the dressing room with Michael Jordan, I played ball with Shaquille O'Neal when he was a kid in Germany. And in the military we have Army values … the 'yes sir, no sir,. You would be surprised how people respond to that."

A common sense approach to managing and support to, and from, the parents is essential to his coaching style, he said.

"I can't tell a kid that if he misses practice he can't play," Horton said. "Kids this age can't drive. And, by the same token if the parents say 'coach he isn't doing well in school' then I support them and say 'then he doesn't need to be out here.'"

Horton uses goal setting with his teams like playing for the middle school team or high school team, and although he admits not every player will make it, he emphasizes they should do something positive in life.

"I tell them to do something positive in life," he said. "To do the right thing and be respectable and they will be successful in life. As a man, I tell them they will get older, the may loose their hair and their face may wrinkle but their eyes will never change, so they should hold their head up, look a man in the eyes and be respectable."

Horton has more than the fundamentals of basketball he passes on to his players; he passes on some of the fundamentals of life.

"We can sit out here and practice all day, but I tell them if they are not going to come out here and give me 100 percent all the time, then don't come out here," Horton said. "It's about finishing in everything you do."

With his team in the Columbus Youth Basketball league championship, Horton says the credit goes to his players.

"Players win games, coaches are the ones who lose it," he said. "This team is in the championship because they have heart, they have pride and they care. It is all those kids … it's not me.

Horton approaches coaching, or managing as he puts it, with a saying passed on to him by his father. It is why he coaches.

"Something my father told me and reiterated to me throughout my life is 'You can tell how tall a man is by how low he will kneel to help a child.'"

Newman third fastest in Daytona 500 Pole Day

David Ferroni
U.S. ARMY RACING

Ryan Newman posted the third fastest lap among 56 Sprint Cup drivers in Sunday's Pole Day qualifying for the Daytona 500. That's the good news.

The unfortunate news is that the U.S. Army driver out of the Stewart-Haas Racing camp just missed being locked into the front row for next week's running of the Daytona 500. Pole Day only sets the front row for the 500 and the starting positions for Thursday's Gatorade Duel 150-mile qualifying races.

Newman will start second in the second 150-mile qualifier. The finishing positions of the 150s will set the remaining starting field for the 500.

Newman's No. 39 U.S. Army Chevrolet Impala SS toured the 2.5-mile oval at Daytona International Speedway in 47.929 seconds at 187.778 miles-per-hour, missing the outside pole by one-hundredth of a second.

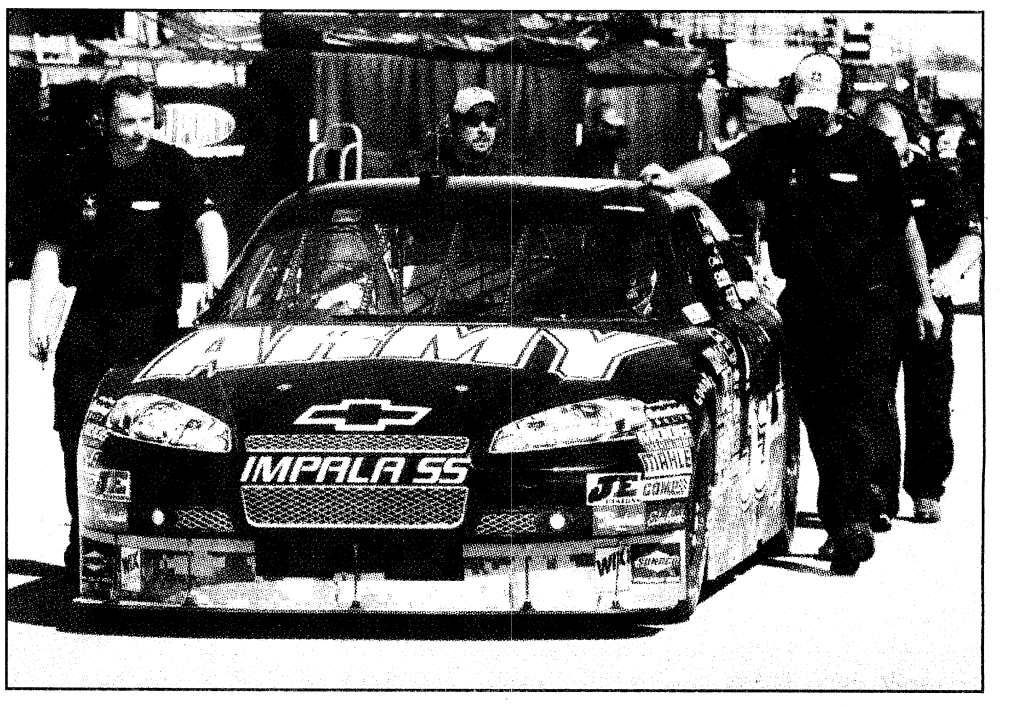

Capturing the front-row starting positions were pole-sitter Martin Truex (47.872 at 188.001) and Mark Martin (47.919 at 187.817).

"We came off the truck fast," noted Newman. "We were fifth fastest yesterday in practice and beat a couple of good guys today that we didn't beat yesterday. I am really proud of the effort these guys are putting in on this U.S. Army Chevrolet. Tony Gibson (crew chief), Tony Stewart (team owner) and all the people back at the shop who have put a lot of hard work in during the off season to make this happen."

"We are trying to represent a million Soldiers and make them proud," added Newman. "This is a good start."

Stewart, who recorded the 10th fastest speed (187.336) in his No. 14 Chevy, said he was proud of both teams.

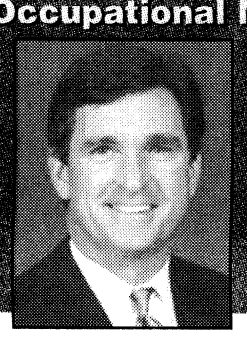

"I am really happy for all my guys on the Old Spice/Office Depot team and the U.S. Army team with Ryan," said Stewart. "Just proud of (competition director) Bobby Hutchens and crew chiefs Tony Gibson and Darian Grubb and all the guys on these crews. They have just done an unbelievable job in such a short amount of time."

Strength and conditioning: How hard CORE are you?

Joanne Cain
USAT LEVEL I TRIATHLON COACH

Abs, six pack, washboard, gut, belly, stomach, or core what ever you want to call them — these are the muscles that are designed to perform one main task — to shorten the distance between your sternum, or breastbone, and your pelvis. The only way to do this is to bend your spine in the lower back region. In short, any exercise which makes you move your sternum toward your pelvis or your pelvis toward your sternum is good. To do this safely, the lower back should be slightly rounded, not arched. In general, when exercising the abs, try to maintain the natural arch of your lower back. The lower back will round slightly as you perform the exercises. Don't fret about pressing your back into the ground.

For many, sit-ups have been the traditional exercise of choice. Standard sit-ups use the hip flexor muscles (the psoas). This muscle's major action is to pull the thighs closer to the torso or cause the body to sit up. Because of this, sit-ups primarily engage the psoas muscle rather than the abdominal muscle. However, more importantly, they grind the vertebrae in the lower back forcing it into an exaggerated arch.

Nearly every movement in daily living or athletics involves the use of the abdominal, oblique, and erector muscles. These muscles provide strength and power to movements and are the muscular connection between the upper and lower body. In addition, the core muscles place a large role in balance and transverse (side to side) movement. As a result, there is a tremendous amount of stress placed on these muscles, therefore the stronger they are, the more stability and strength they can provide. Thus, they need to be overloaded and challenged. If these muscles are unable to support the stress placed on them, injury will likely occur.

There are many ways to challenge the core muscles. However, the goal is to build strength and endurance not simply pure muscular endurance. Therefore, if you can complete 10 repetitions without a challenge try more difficult variations. Try some of the following exercises to get your "abs of steel."

•Plank: The plank works your entire core and upper- and lower-body muscles. Lie down on your stomach. Lift your body off the floor with your forearms (elbows at 90 degrees) and your toes. Keep your body in a straight position (without arching your back) and hold for 30 seconds to one minute. Lift one foot in the air for added difficulty.

•Russian Twists: Sit back on a decline bench, back extension machine or on the floor, place your hands behind your ears. Hold your torso at a 45 degree angle to the floor. Twist your upper body as far as you can to the right. Hold for a second then twist as far as you can to the left.

•Exercise Ball Crunch: Lie face-up with the ball resting under your mid/lower back. Cross your arms over the chest or place them behind your head. Contract your abs to lift your torso off the ball, pulling the bottom of your rib cage down toward your hips. As you curl up, keep the ball stable (you shouldn't roll). Lower the back down, getting a stretch in the abs, and repeat for 12 to 16 reps.

Ballers defeat Bulldogs

THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning Ballers were one of two Fort Benning teams to make it to the playoffs in the Columbus Youth Basketball league. And the Ballers advanced to the league championship by defeating the CYB Bulldogs, 41-32, Saturday at the Northside Recreation Center. The Ballers are one of 36 teams from the tricommunity in the league. Both teams battled back and forth in the first period with the Ballers taking an 8-5 lead. By halftime, the Ballers increased their lead to 22-13.

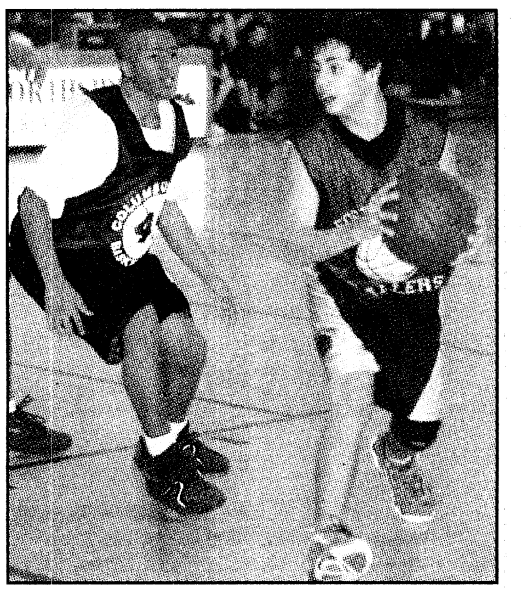

While the Ballers' defense limited the Bulldogs six points offensively, the Ballers offense put up 10 points in the period to take a 32-19 lead at the end of the third quarter.

In the final quarter, the Bulldogs attempted to close the gap outscoring the Ballers 13-10, but when the final buzzer sounded, the Ballers advanced to the championship game with a 41-32 victory.

"We started the game out slow, but we were able to get the win," said Ballers' coach Paul Horton.

"Great passing, defensive skills, rebounds and good free throws — that and teamwork is what helped us win the game," said Baller Detarian Davis. "I'm nervous about the championship game, but I'm ready," he said. "I think we'll do great."

The second-ranked Ballers will play top-ranked 29th Street in the Columbus Parks and Recreation championship at 4 p.m. Saturday at Frank D. Chester Park for bragging rights as the best 13- and 14-year-old team in the league.

defensively, the kids came in and held down a good team."

Warrior Bear Sean Tandarich said he has noticed a difference in the team since the beginning of the season.

"I think we work together better as a team than we did at the beginning of the season — we pass the ball more now," he said. "This win is the perfect way to close out the season."

The steamboat Rebecca Everingham took passengers and cargo from the banks of the Chattahoochee River in Columbus to Apalachicola, Fla., from 1880 to 1884 until it caught fire after cotton bales burned on board. The Rebecca Everingham exhibit at the Columbus Museum features steamboat artifacts and photos, and will run until July 5.

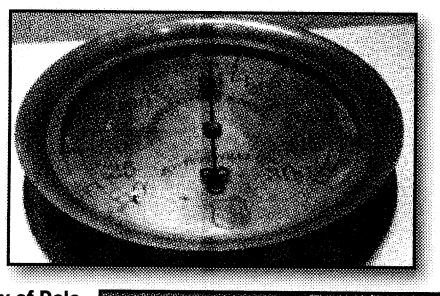

Columbus Museum offers look into city's past

This 1950s television is on display at the Columbus Museum. Other artifacts at the museum include an 1880s vacuum cleaner, a 1928 broadcast microphone and radio, a World War I gas mask and case, and a cotton gin and a loom.

This is a sign that would have hung in the Rebecca Everingham.

This steam gauge was used on a steamboat similar to the Rebecca Everingham, and is part of the Columbus Museum's Rebecca Everingham exhibition.

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

I could spend all day at the Columbus Museum. It's one of the first places I went when I moved to Columbus in 2001. Admission is free and there is always something new to learn. Friday, I went to see the Rebecca Everingham exhibition and was amazed by how much I enjoyed it. Honestly, I have never been big on learning about steamboats, but it was really interesting.

It's neat to think back to a time when the Chattahoochee River was full of the daily hustle and bustle of steamboats and passengers.

In the late 1800s, it was not uncommon to see steamboats full of cotton bales, supplies and passengers traveling on the Chattahoochee River. One steamboat, which was known as the most luxurious for its time, according to the Columbus Enquirer Sun, was the Rebecca Everingham, which could carry 120 passengers and up to 1,000 bales of cotton.

Cabin passengers paid $8 to ride on the Everingham and had their own rooms and food in the dining room. Deck passengers, who stayed on the same deck where the cargo was stored, paid half the price and had to bring their own food. Some brought fuel wood for a discount on their fare.

The steamboat, named after the wife of COL William M. Wadley, traveled from Columbus to Apalachicola, Fla., from 1880 to 1884 until it burned when cotton bales on the steamboat caught fire.

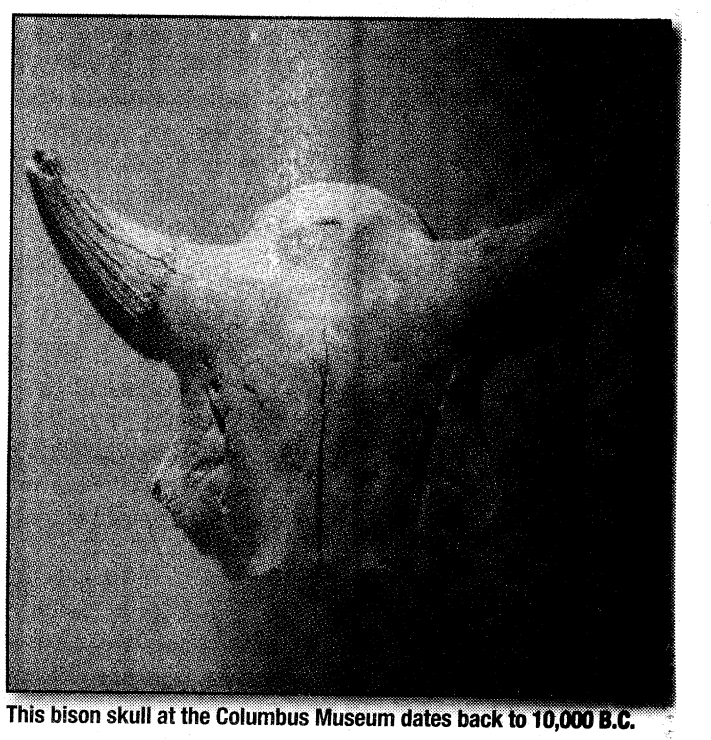

Although the steamboat doesn't exist anymore, photos, a lithograph and steamboat artifacts still do. They are on display at the Columbus Museum until July 5.

The exhibition also includes photos and artifacts from other steamboats that once traveled the Chattahoochee River. My favorite artifact is the whistle believed to be from the Everingham. It dates back about 129 years.

There are artifacts at the museum that date from 20,000 B.C. through the Civil War. Some of my favorites are an 1880s vacuum cleaner, a 1950s TV, a World War I gas mask and case, a bison skull dating back to 10,000 B.C. and art such as hand blown glass.

The museum also has displays where people can see what the inside of an Army tent looked like in the Korean War, what a Columbus mill looked like in the late 20th century and what a one-room schoolhouse looked like in the Civil War. Each display is furnished with period furniture and machines.

Admission to the museum is free. Hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday and from 1 p.m. to 5.p.m. Sundays. For more information, call 706-748-2562 or go to www.columbusmuseum.com.

This bison skull at the Columbus Museum dates back to 10,000 B.C.

These red lantern lights were used as running lights on the port side of a steamboat from the same time period as the Rebecca Everingham, a steamboat considered one of the most luxurious of its time. Before the invention of electricity, candles were one of the main sources of light on a steamboat, and the Columbus Museum features several candle holders used on steamboats in its Rebecca Everingham exhibit. Other artifacts on display in the exhibit include a drink cooler, an iron door, an iron cargo dolly and a steamboat whistle. The exhibit is free and open to the public.

This display of Dale Chihuly's hand-blown glass collection features a boat from Finland filled with Chihuly's glass. Chihuly, born in 1941, first made boats filled with glass in his Chihuly Over Finland Project in 1995. He hung glass chandeliers from trees and bridges on the banks of the Nuutajarvi River and placed some of the glass sculptures in the water. Children would pick up the glass sculptures and put them in rowboats. Later, Chihuly started put the glass pieces in rowboats owned by townspeople.

Newlywed Meganann Whistman wasn't thinking about the Super Bowl when she drove from her family's home in Jacksonville, Fla., to Fort Benning Sunday. And 15-year-old Kyle Anderson wasn't thinking about driving his family's SUV through the mountains of northwest Georgia to Freedom Hall. They were thinking about their Soldiers in the 24th Ordnance Company whose 15-month deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom was coming to an end.

Snow and ice in Germany delayed the Soldiers' return by four hours, enough time for Dakota Anderson, 14, to put the finishing touches on a poster for her sister and for Whistman's dad to print the driving directions to Lawson Army Airfield.

But for Christina Burrell and her six children, "It's the longest day ever. The kids are bouncing off the walls."

Lead Free Slug helps eliminate lead pollution

Soldiers tested the new M-855 Lead Free Slug or ammunition in December on Fort Benning.

The rounds are more environmentally friendly than previous ones, said Jeremy Reed, a project officer with the Maneuver Battle Lab.

"We shoot M-855; that's the standard round. It's a copper-jacketed lead penetrator," Reed said. "The aim for the new ammunition is to be lead-free. It's already been tested and flies the same way with the same trajectory. Here, we're basically doing a form fits function experiment, putting the ammunition in the Soldiers' hands to see if they can perform their necessary tasks and note any characteristics in comparison of the two ammunition types."

Soldiers tested the ammunition with different weapons, including the M-16 A-2 and A-4, and M-249. At the end of each day, they reported their findings.

So far, survey feedback shows the performance of the two rounds is the same, Reed said.

Museum ships Higgins boat for restoration

It took a crane, a forklift and a crew of six people to move a 7.5-ton Higgins boat onto a flatbed truck Jan. 28 at the National Infantry Museum storage facility.

The Higgins boat, owned by the National Infantry Museum, is on its way to a historic preservationist's shop in Woodstock, Ga., to be restored.

Higgins boats, invented by Andrew Jackson Higgins of Columbus, Neb., were used as landing crafts in World War II and Korea and could carry about 30 Soldiers in full combat gear and one vehicle such as a Jeep.

Measuring 36 feet long and 11 feet wide, the Higgins boat is made of plywood. Some of the battles the Higgins boats were used include D-Day and the Battle of Inchon.

"These boats were easy and cheap to build back in World War II and Korea," said Mike Criscillis, interim

Army pulls body armor despite safety assertion

C. Todd Lopez
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Army is collecting more than 16,000 sets of body armor ballistic inserts, even though it considers those inserts to be fully capable of doing the job they were designed to do.

The action involves 16,413 sets of Enhanced Small Arms Protective Insert plates, or 32,826 plates in total, a mere 1.68 percent of the Army's total inventory of 1.9 million ESAPI plates.

The results of "first article tests" on the effectiveness of three designs of ballistic inserts — the M3D2S2, MP2S2, and M4D2 designs — are being questioned by the Department of Defense Inspector General. However, both the Army, who conducted the tests, and the office of the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation, who independently assessed and verified the results, disagree with the DoD IG's report.

DUI, 100 percent preventable

If life were a sporting event, looking up on the scoreboard and seeing your team with a big zero wouldn't be a good thing, but in the world of alcohol education and prevention the number zero is a desired number.

"We set our goal at zero," said Yvonne Wilbanks, alcohol and drug control officer with the Army Substance Abuse Program Division of the Directorate of Human Resources at Fort Benning. "The reason we are focusing on preventing DUIs is because if we can prevent DUIs we can prevent Soldier deaths associated with drinking and driving," she said.

More than a million people are charged with DUI in the United States yearly, she said, which is about one in every 130 Americans.

"We set our goal at zero because a DUI is something that can be prevented 100 percent of the time," Wilbanks said. "We have had many programs over the years, some more successful than others, and one of those that has been successful has been the Breath Scan Pilot Program."

Covenant re-signing reaffirms support to Soldiers, families

MG Michael Barbero
COMMANDING GENERAL

Taking care of our Army Families is a top priority, and we reaffirmed our commitment to our Soldiers and their families by re-signing the Army Family Covenant recently at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

We all know that we owe a tremendous debt to our Army Families. We know that our families bear a very heavy burden in support of their Soldier.

Our Soldiers are able to focus on the fight and accomplish the mission armed with the confidence that their families are well cared for at home. We are committed to ensuring our support to our families is world class, and we, at Fort Benning, will follow through on this commitment.

But how do we repay our Army Families for the support they provide to our Soldiers and the nation? We listen and take every opportunity to enhance their quality of life on Fort Benning.

For example, our community voiced a need for expanded child care services for our great Army children. Our response is the nearly complete, state-of-the-art Child, Youth and School-Age Services building on Main Post. It should be open by this summer. Construction has started on a 15,000-square-foot building in McGraw Village for SKIES Unlimited and a new child development center will be built in Indianhead Village. These new facilities will provide a safe and fun learning environment for our children — a benefit that builds strong Army Families.

However, our commitment to Army Families doesn't stop there; new homes are being built all over the installation. Part of the Residential Communities Initiative, McGraw and Patton Villages feature some of the best housing available in the Army. These homes are all electric and feature low-flow water fixtures, which saves millions of gallons of water a year. The neighborhood community centers have swimming pools, fitness equipment and are wired for changing computer technology. These amenities foster the cohesiveness of Army Families, whether it's a pool party celebrating a 6-year-old's birthday or a Guitar Hero challenge.

While we have accomplished all of this, and while we have signed this Army Family Covenant, there is much more work to be done!

We will execute an action plan and we will stay focused on making the goals of this Covenant a reality.

We will always strive to keep Fort Benning the best Army installation in the world, and ensure our Families receive the best support in the world.

Murray needs a forever home

Elsie Jackson
USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

Oh, Murray. I hope you've found your forever home.

I first saw him sitting in a crate labeled "Murray" at PetSmart one weekend more than a month ago, surrounded by other dogs and cats in need of a family to call their own.

Long on leg but still small enough to fit in a home of any size, I was surprised to see him there week after week. He sported a terrier's wash-and-wear coat in honey brown and had a gentle eye. A handsome fellow, he was nothing less than a smaller version of Orphan Annie's Sandy, complete with a grizzled Van Dyke beard.

There's a lot to be said for adopting a grown dog like Murray. There are no surprises about his size. You know what kind of grooming you're facing. No teething issues to contend with. And where a growing puppy would need three or four meals a day, a dog like Murray would be satisfied with one or two. At his age, housebreaking Murray, if he wasn't already, would be a snap. He was clearly comfortable in a crate, so confinement to one area of a house wouldn't be an issue for him.

When a more excitable dog next to him took off on a barking bender, Murray joined in, but a verbal reprimand from one of the shelters volunteers stopped him short. Hmm, I thought. He has some manners. Probably already walks on a leash well, too. He would be ever so grateful for a good home and "Faithful" would be his middle name.

And yet he was overlooked, every weekend for at least a month, by prospective families who only had eyes for the puppies around him.

"Oh! I want this one!" I turned to see a young woman cuddling a squirming armful of 8-week-old fuzz ball with feet like snowshoes.

"This one loves me the best. Did you see how it pushed all the others out of the way to get to me first?"

I hope you like wearing dog hair, I thought to myself, because that is going to be a heavy, double coat if I ever saw one. And a lot of it. Make sure you buy a good dog brush and a lint roller on your way out.

Her husband asked if the puppy was a boy or girl. Without looking, I put my money on "boy." It was, too, and not just any boy. Unless I missed my guess, it was the alpha male for that litter, just what every young (and pregnant) woman needs.

He hadn't pushed his way to the front to get to the young woman. He had bullied his way past his littermates to get what he wanted, and they had let him. They recognized him as the dominant member of their litter/pack.

Raising any puppy, but especially a large alpha puppy, requires a firm, but gentle hand and is best accomplished through a lot of training. All of which requires lots of time and energy, something that most very pregnant women and new moms are short on.

I briefly considered suggesting to the couple that they put Bigfoot on the floor on his back, holding him there gently with a hand on his chest while counting slowly to ten. It puts the dog into a submissive position and as a general rule, the puppy that squirms briefly and then waits quietly to be released will be more biddable than the one that argues with you.

But they had clearly made their choice and I wish them well. By my calculations, that puppy will be hitting his stride as a very large adolescent at about the same time they are welcoming their new baby home.

Murray watched the proceedings, his head sinking lower and lower.

I tried to figure out a way to fit him into our pack of four, and couldn't justify bringing him in. But it was tempting.

Tempting enough that I started telling people in the office who might be looking for a dog about him. Tempting enough that I swore that I wasn't setting foot in PetSmart on a weekend again. But on Sunday afternoon, I did.

I didn't see Murray among the adoptables. I hope that after at least a month of hanging out at PetSmart, some lucky family took him home. I hope that he has a new little corner of the world, and, no longer an orphan, he is a star.

Soldiers from the 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, loaded into humvees for a week of wheeled-gunnery qualifications that started Jan. 22.

Crews took their vehicles through the driving course as the gunner engaged and eliminated targets.

The focus is on the crew's proficiency and the gunner's ability to identify targets and put steel on to targets to terminate them, said SSG Daniel Malubag, a truck commander with B Company.

"My main focus is to take charge of the truck and make sure my crew is doing the right thing out there," he said.

SGT Basilio Medina has been a gunner for three years before joining Malubag's crew.

"We just want to come out here, do good as a crew and qualify," Medina said.

"The night fire is usually the most challenging because you are shooting through night optics," said Malubag. "I'm learning techniques from my TC, (how he is) working with the driver, helping me as the gunner," he said.

"Hopefully someday I will become a TC and have my own crew. Hopefully I can teach the skills I have learned and keep it going to make the Army better."

director at the National Infantry Museum.

The National Infantry Museum's boat has never been in war, but it was used by the Navy to train Sailors in the Great Lakes in Michigan. It's been used for re-enactments, and was also used to take D-Day Museum visitors on the Mississippi River in New Orleans.

This particular Higgins boat has seen a lot of weather damage, and the wood is rotting, said Tom Bailey, historic preservationist. The restoration will include injecting epoxy resin in the wood, painting the boat back to its original color and repainting the red bottom.

The landing craft will be back at Fort Benning in September. There won't be enough room for it at the new National Infantry Museum, Criscillis said, but it will be on display for special museum events.

There aren't many Higgins boats around, Criscillis said. Preserving the Higgins boat is key because it helps younger generations understand the past.

3rd HBCT Soldiers conduct Islam familiarity program

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The office of the Brigade Judge Advocate General of 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team sponsored an Islamic Culture brief Jan. 22 at the 3rd HBCT's headquarters on Kelley Hill.

Dawud Salahuddin Bin Pearson, the contracted imam for Fort Benning and former Soldier with 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Division, spoke to Soldiers about a variety of topics and misconceptions about his religion.

"I think classes like these are a good way to separate fact from fiction and inform people about what Islam is really about," Bin Pearson said.

Soldiers were encouraged to ask questions throughout the event to clear up misconceptions between Islam and Middle Eastern culture.

"Islam is the most misunderstood religion on earth," Bin Pearson said. "While it is the fastest growing, it is also very misunderstood."

Part of the reason for the misunderstanding, Bin Pearson said, is the various sects of Islam.

"There are a lot more sects than just Sunni and Shia," he said. "Each sect has different practices and outlooks."

Bin Pearson was also quick to dispel the notion that Islam and terrorism were related.

"Terrorism existed long before Islam," he said. "Moderate Islam has been speaking out against terrorism for 1,400 years. The killing of innocent people goes against all of Islam's teaching. While we would have to label some Muslims as terrorists, in a general sense, we can't."

Soldiers walked away from the class much more informed about Arabic culture, Islam and the distinction between the two.

"I think this class was a wonderful opportunity for the Soldiers who have deployed, as well as the ones who have not yet," said MAJ Michael Banks, the 3rd HBCT's Brigade Judge Advocate.

"We are all products of our environment and our culture," he said.

"For our Soldiers to go over to the Middle East, they need to understand the Islamic piece and we need to dispel the stereotypes that we've heard or been exposed to by the media."

PVT Chad Clark shoots an azimuth during Land Nav 2 training Monday on Uniform 1.

SGT Chet Devooght shows basic trainees how to calculate degrees with a compass.

1/19 learns land nav

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"We just have our compasses, our protractors and our training," said SPC Rahul Bose, before heading to the woods to apply land navigation techniques.

Bose was one of 220 Soldiers in E Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, who conducted land navigation for the first time Monday on Sand Hill. Along with compasses and protractors, the basic trainees received maps of the 2,000-square-meter area that included details of the terrain. They had three hours to find three of five points indicated on their maps.

"This is their first time actually going out and doing a practical exercise," said SFC Jamie Dylong, a drill sergeant with E Co.

Soldiers practiced land navigation on different ranges for three days, including night land navigation Wednesday.

"It's a basic Soldier skill. You need to be able to navigate from one point to another, without using GPS," Dylong said. "It takes perseverance. If they get lost, they have to keep on trying to find the point. If they don't get it on the first try, we send them right back out."

In a class Jan. 31, Soldiers learned how to calculate degrees, read six- and eight-digit grid coordinates and recognize different types of terrain, part of the "basic fundamentals," said PVT John Crowder.

"That way, we can move on to much able to apply."

learning more advanced ways of land navigation," he said, "eventually moving on to GPS, which makes it easier, but it has to be rooted in the basics before you move on to more advanced technology."

Equipment could break down, so it's important to be prepared; that's what the training is all about, Bose said.

"This is a major event in our training where we have to put together everything we've learned and work as a team," he said. "You have to be able to push through mentally and push yourself through physically.

"When you're put in a situation, you have to be able to find out where you are. Yes, you're going to be given certain places to be, (but) you might get lost and end up 10 clicks away. Out in the field, land navigation is pretty much the bread and butter of being a Soldier."

Teams of four to five Soldiers could use terrain association or dead reckoning to find their points. The first method uses roads and other features marked on the map; the second requires Soldiers to try to walk a straight line through the woods.

PV2 Andrew Peralez used dead reckoning. While counting his paces to estimate distance, he walked straight, alternating to the left then the right to avoid shrubs and trees.

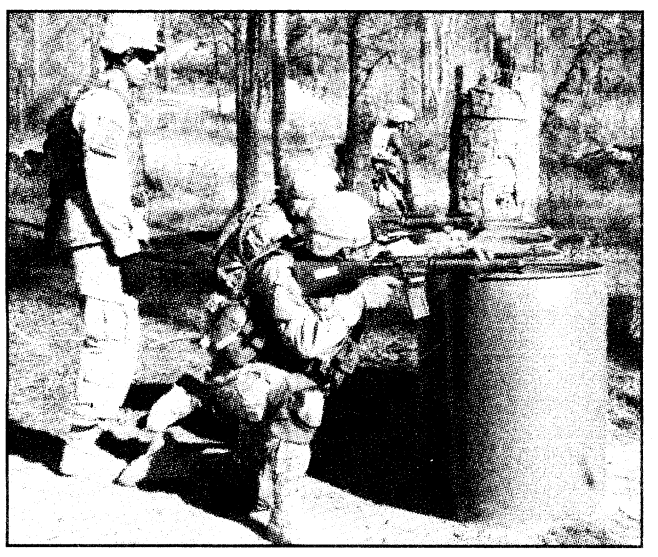

"When you're actually doing it hands-on you realize just how much error you're bound to make," he said. "(But) I think we're doing well. We're all ending up at the same location. Everything we've learned, we're pretty

Basic training Soldiers complete first convoy live fire

PVT Andrew Lazor looks at his teammate, PVT Josh Martine, after administering a tourniquet Friday on Babin Range. The first-responder task was one of several graded parts of the convoy live fire, a first for basic trainees in B Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment. The exercise also included shooting at pop-up targets, throwing a training grenade and dismounting a truck.

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

For more than 200 Soldiers in their seventh week of basic training, completing a convoy live fire Friday and Saturday on Babin Range was a major accomplishment.

It was a culminating event for B Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, 192nd Infantry Brigade, said company commander CPT Cary Gates.

The Soldiers qualified with their weapons Jan. 21, but this was the first time they would use live rounds while moving on a field with pop-up targets, he said.

The training encompassed many of the techniques trainees had rehearsed before.

"They use movements they've learned throughout the cycle ... marksmanship, buddy team movements, how to dismount a vehicle, communication, weapons handling, emergency reloading. The most important thing they take away from this is that they are confident at shooting, moving and communicating in the tasks they've been trained (to do) up to this point, everything from marksmanship to first aid," Gates said.

In teams of two, Soldiers covered the range, shooting from behind obstacles and performing at least one battlefield first-responder task. They had one minute to apply a pressure dressing and a tourniquet on a "wounded" comrade. Drill sergeants graded the Soldiers as they moved through the 20-minute course.

The best way to learn is to practice, said 3rd Bn., 47th Inf. Regt., commander, LTC John Lightner.

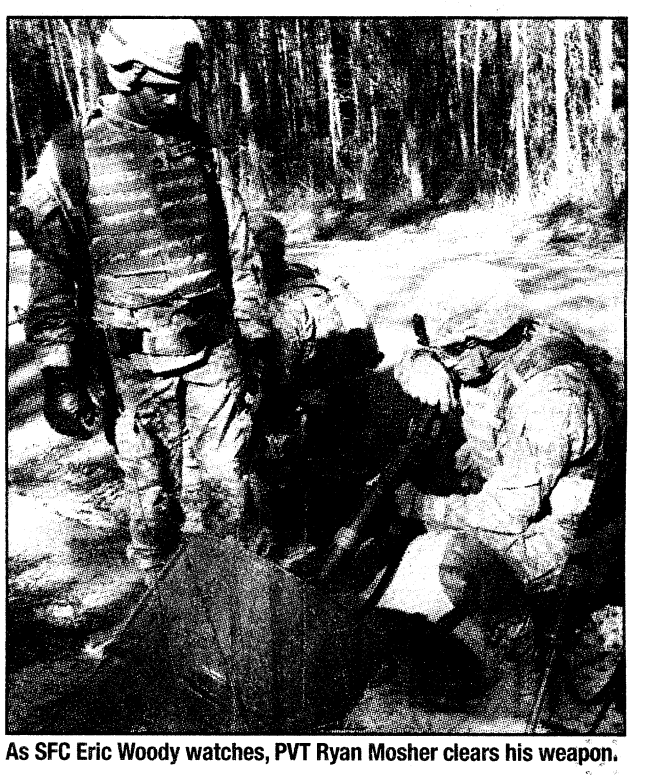

A key part of this training is these Soldiers understand weapon safety, Lightner said. They must know the four rules: treat all weapons as if they were loaded, never let your muzzle cover anything you're not willing to destroy, keep your finger off the trigger until your sights are on the target and be sure of your target, both what is in line and beyond your target.

Each team went through the exercise twice, first with blank rounds then live.

For SPC Anthony Joyce, it was "an overwhelming experience."

"It's kind of chaotic," he said. "I can only imagine if rounds were being shot at me. It's very eye-opening to realize the seriousness of the situation. Reality really sinks in. It's not the movies anymore. It's not like a video game. There's no save or reload or restart the game. You have one time. And if you don't follow your training ... that's it."

If he could do the exercise again, Joyce said he would conserve his ammunition, much of which he spent while headed to the range on the back of a truck.

"Unlike the movies, when you're moving on a truck, you really can't shoot anything," he said. "So I realize now the point of saving my ammunition. I ran out of all my ammunition almost by the time we dismounted. If that really happened and I was out of ammo, then I'd be out of luck."

For PFC Miguel Martillo, the hardest part of the exercise was shooting and moving at the same time, but the drill sergeants and instructors had prepared him with the exercises and class work that led up to the live fire, he said.

"They taught us everything, like first aid, how to work our weapons, how to clean them, how to load them, all the mechanics of a weapon. Paying attention there helped us out here," he said.

Martillo and Joyce both said they gained confidence from the training event.

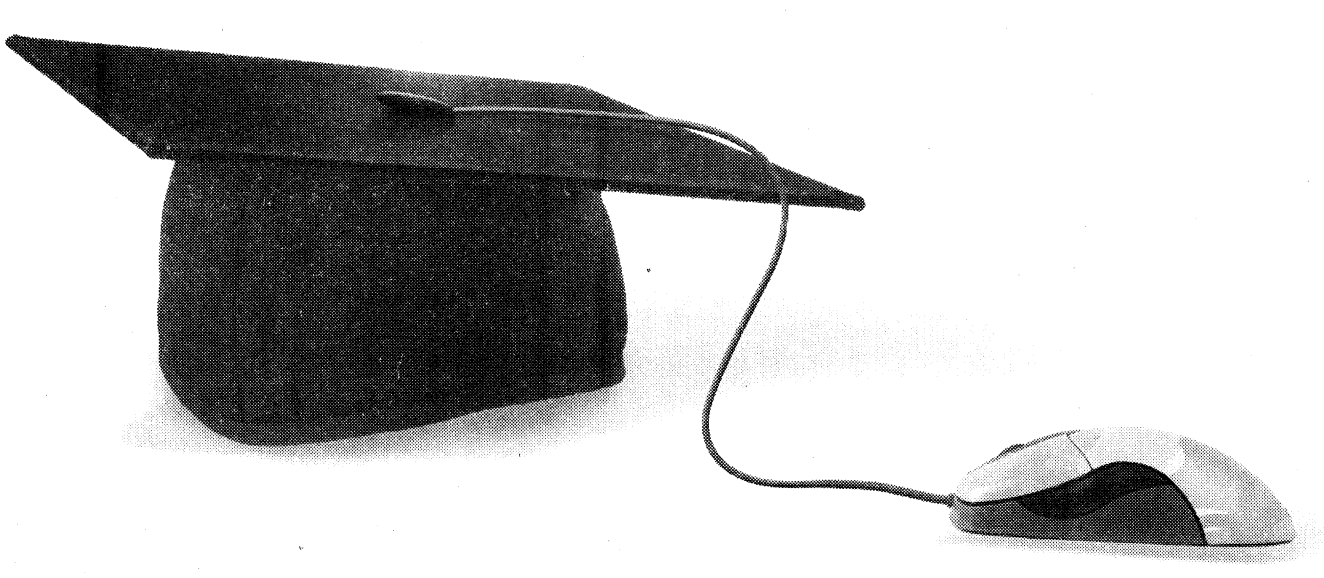

"Today's training showed us all that we're a little bit closer to being real Soldiers than we might have thought this morning," said Joyce, who will head to Officer Candidate School after graduation. "It builds a lot of confidence. Being able to know that I can put my weapon on safe, not flag anybody, shoot at targets, do first aid and bound from point to point, I know that my training's almost complete."

The Soldiers are slated to graduate Feb. 26.

Basic Officer Leader Course II instructors completed the Instructor Certification Program Friday. The 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, cadre completed several exercises during the past two months that they will have to demonstrate to BOLC II lieutenants who arrive this month.

Their final exercise was a live fire on Booker Range Jan. 28 and 29.

"What we're trying to teach is to lead from the front," said CPT Craig Weisser, OIC for the event. "That's what we're out here doing. Instead of just reading the manuals, we're actually doing it to standard, so we can show people how to do it properly."

Weisser said he has seen dramatic improvements in C and D companies, the last two companies to complete the three-week program.

"You can't overlook the basics," he said. "It's important to constantly revisit them whether it's a young NCO or an experienced senior sergeant. It can't be undervalued."

Before the instructors completed the live fire, cadre leadership conducted a demonstration, which included explanations of the movements of each person in the four-man team.

SSG Arrie Thomas clears a "room," which is simulated with strips of white tape to define walls.

"The best units in the Army don't have secret techniques, they're just really good at the fundamentals," said 1LT Chris Beauregard, who watched the demonstration Jan. 28.

Much of the training in the ICP focused on operations at the squad and team level.

"If you don't understand how a team works and you don't understand how a squad works, then you won't understand how your platoon works," Beauregard said. "The natural building block of BOLC II is learning the team and squad levels. When they get to BOLC III, they'll learn platoon level and be able to take over the platoons."

BOLC II instructors come from a variety of backgrounds. There are dental techs, mechanics, truck drivers and others in this program who are not proficient in basic Infantry tasks, said LTC David Bottcher, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, commander.

The ICP standardizes the instructors' learning, he said.

"Where in the past, maybe a couple combat arms sergeants were the prime trainers of 30 or 40 lieutenants, now I have six highly trained sergeants," Bottcher said. "Regardless of MOS, they are all trained to the same standard (and) understand the fundamentals of the training that we're doing."

SSG Gordon Welles, whose background is with the signal branch, has never completed a live fire with clearing rooms and identifying targets like the one he completed last week. Now that he has, he feels more confident, he said.

"I feel more knowledgeable about things like room clearing, sectors of fire, weapon safety and communication," Welles said. "When I came here, I found out how much I lacked. It's not as common for a signal person to regularly engage in close quarter combat training. Now I'm ready for my next assignment — ready to go."

Bottcher said he expects another full-scale ICP to run in about year, but smaller programs to keep instructors up-to-date will happen throughout the year.

Editor's Note: This is the final installment in a three-part series about the Instructor Certification Program.

Green ammo: To be phased into use during fiscal year traditional M-855 rounds, the kind used most frequently in the Army, said John Amick, ammunition project officer with the Maneuver Ammunition Systems. They will be phased in over time, beginning this fiscal year.

Research to replace lead bullets has been ongoing in the Army for more than 10 years, he said. Within the past two years, researchers developed other alternatives to lead, and less expensive than tungsten, a former "lead-free" alternative.

First tested at Picatinny Arsenal in New Jersey, the new round nearly eliminates the less potential hazards associated with lead pollution.

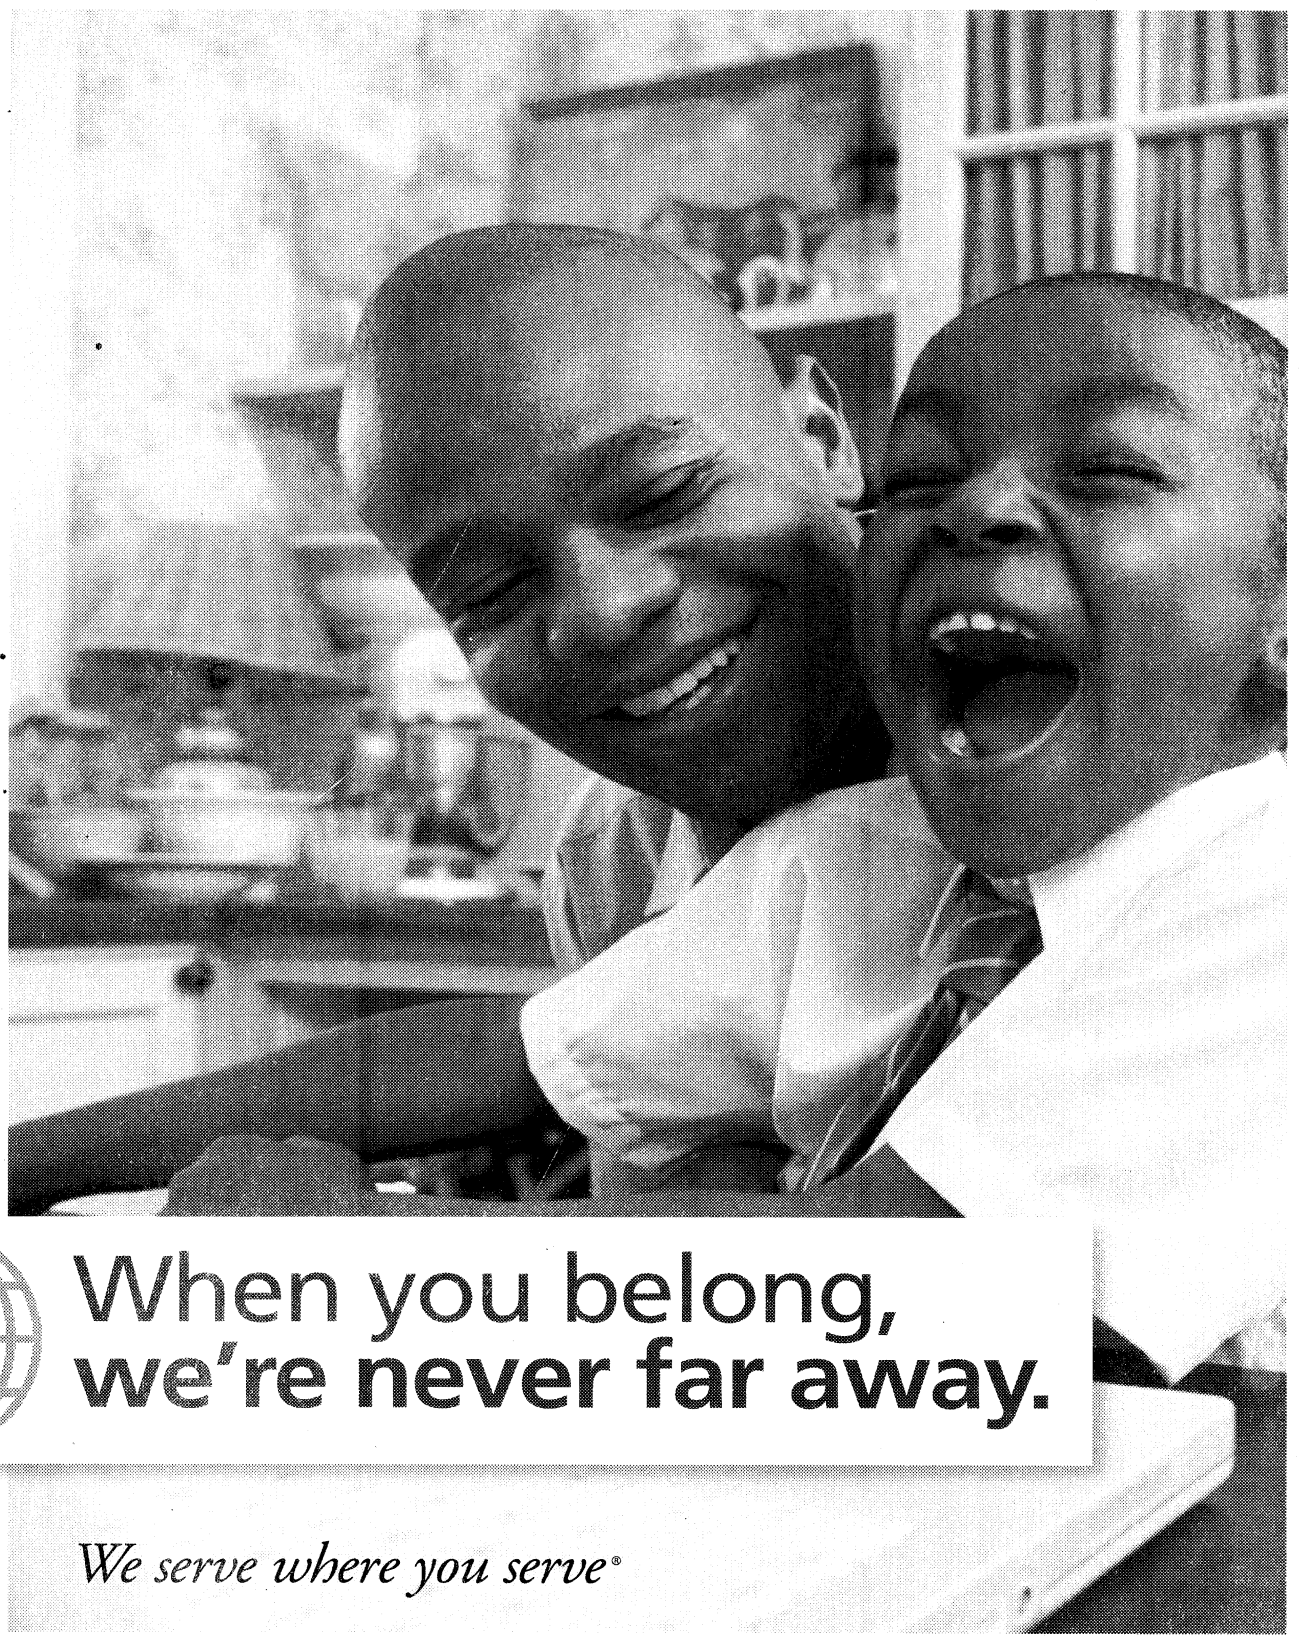

Lead is harmful when deposited into the ground in large quantities, Amick said. From the ground, it can seep into the water supply and become a potential health hazard for anyone who drinks it.

With the green ammunition, the military is investing in the future, Amick said.

"The idea is to be a responsible environmental steward ... while balancing performance and cost," he said. "We want to ensure our Soldiers do not lose any of the current capabilities they have in their ammunition systems while providing a more environmentally friendly round. We've estimated that the green ammunition program will preclude the introduction of about 2,000 metric tons of lead from the environment every year."

The testing concluded Dec. 12. The rounds will begin fielding this spring.

Admiral concerned about health of armed forces

Linda D. Kozaryn
AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — As the nation enters its eighth year of war, the military's highest-ranking officer says he is concerned about the health of the armed forces. He wants to ensure the country takes care of its men and women in uniform.

"We are asking an extraordinary amount from them, and they are giving it in ways that are so, so very special," ADM Mike Mullen, 17th chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said Monday at Grove City College, Pa., delivering the 2008-2009 Pew Memorial Lecture.

"We have asked our young men and women to deploy in ways they never could have imagined — active duty, reserve and Guard — and they have stood up to the challenge," he said. Yet multiple deployments of 12 to 15 months, he said have taken a toll on service members and their families.

"I was with 500 Soldiers not too long ago, many of whom had just gotten back from Iraq, and I asked them how many deployments they had been on," Mullen said. "Forty to 50 percent of the Soldiers in the room at an all-hands call had just completed their fourth deployment. That is not much time at home; that is not much time raising kids; that is not much time just taking a break."

The chairman said he finds the force "incredibly resilient, and at the same time, very pressed."

"We need to pay attention to the entirety of our people and their families and the programs which support them in order to make sure that they are well-positioned for the future," Mullen said.

The totality of that support, he said, will determine whether or not they remain in the military.

Life-long support is especially important for wounded service members, their families, and the families of those who have made the ultimate sacrifice. "We are a wealthy enough country, even in these financially difficult times, to make sure they are taken care of and their needs are met for the rest of their lives," he said, drawing applause from the estimated 700 Grove City College students and guests.

The chairman said a community-based approach is needed to provide support, because the Defense Department and the Veterans Affairs Department can't do it all.

"It's really DoD, the VA and literally communities throughout the country reaching out and touching these people to make sure their needs are met," he said.

Mullen pointed out that the Army's suicide rate now exceeds the national norm. He said suicide is a huge challenge that military leaders are focused on to find near-term and long-term solutions.

"Part of it has got to be the pressure of these constant deployments into combat, where young individuals ... whose lives change forever see things and do things they had never imagined," the chairman said. "We have got to be able to support those individuals in ways that, in some cases, we haven't quite figured out yet."

In a speech at the Reserve Officers Association earlier in the day, Mullen said there is a need to double the amount of "dwell time," or time a service member spends at home.

"Right now, for the most part on the active side, you're home about as long as you've been deployed," he said. "We have the goal on the reserve and Guard sides to be one year out, five years back. We're clearly not there."

Identifying troops suffering from post-traumatic stress is another challenge facing the military, Mullen said.

"I've been told by enough young Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Marines that they just check the block and move through [the health assessment], because they know if they check the wrong block, they're not going to be able to go home," the chairman told the reserve officers.

He said the stigma associated with post-traumatic stress still is significant, and military leaders need to work to eliminate people's unwillingness to seek help. They have to figure out a way to get every single person, not just those who raise their hand, to go through a meaningful assessment for post-traumatic stress disorder, Mullen said.

For example, he said, Soldiers coming back from a horrendous combat tour get out and fly home. They've been through hell. Things have affected them in ways that they can't even see. They've seen buddies die, and they have the nightmares that go with it. Now, the structure the military provided is gone. They may or may not have family there to support them. They're alone.

"Right now, we only track individuals for 120 days when they get out," Mullen said. "We've got to have a tracking system that stays in touch with individuals so they know where the life lines are. It needs to be transparent and seamless so that we make sure we can support individuals who have sacrificed so much."

While the military has come a long way and understands post-traumatic stress better than a few years ago, he said, there's still a long way to go.

"I am 100 percent convinced that no matter what happens, if we get it right for our people and our families, we'll be able to continue to sustain and develop a military second to none," he said.

Body armor: Examined by DoD Inspector General

Director, Operational Test and Evaluation," said BG Peter N. Fuller, of Program Executive Officer, Soldier and commanding general of the Soldier Systems Center.

"DOT&E examined the Army's testing of the armor plates referred to in the IG report and determined that the plates passed the tests," he said. "In clear, unequivocal language, DOT&E declared that 'the three designs meet the performance specification in place at the time of each test.'"

Because there is disagreement between the DoD IG and DOT&E — both offices of the Department of Defense — about the effectiveness of the ballistic inserts, Secretary of the Army Pete Geren has asked the deputy secretary of Defense to adjudicate the opposing viewpoints.

The Army maintains the ballistic inserts issued to Soldiers are effective, and do in fact provide protection for Soldiers who wear them. However, in order to ensure Soldiers maintain confidence in the body armor issued to them, the Army has agreed to collect the plates until the issue is further reviewed.

"Based on DOT&E's evaluation of the testing, the Army considers the armor plates in question to be safe," Fuller said. "Nonetheless, out of an abundance of caution, the plates are being collected to ensure continued confidence in the Army's commitment to the safety of our Soldiers.

In the DoD IG report dated Jan. 29, the IG says testing on some of the inserts was not properly conducted.

"First article testing for Army Contract 0040 (W91CRB-04-D-0040) was not consistently conducted or scored in accordance with contract terms, conditions, and specifications," the report reads. "Consequently, we believe three of the eight ballistic insert designs that passed first article testing actually failed."

The DoD IG's conclusion does not mean the inserts are unsafe, however.

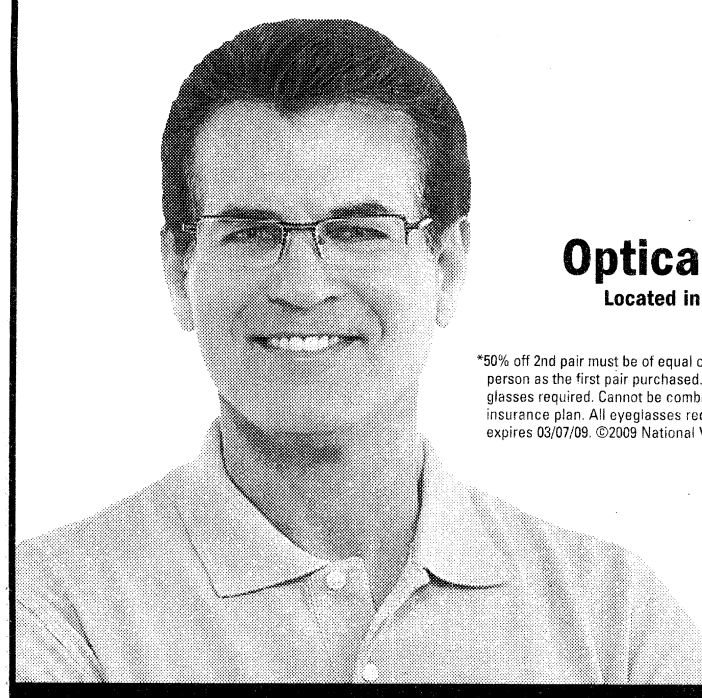

"We did not review the safety of the ballistic inserts," the report read. "Therefore, we did not determine whether these inserts provide the protection intended."

What the IG's report did, however, is question the reliability of testing on the inserts — in effect discrediting both the results of the tests conducted by the Army, and independent assessment and verification of those tests by DOT&E.

"As a result, the Army does not have assurance that all inserts purchased under Contract 0040 provide the level of protection required by the contract," the report reads.

The Army actually conducted tests on 21 body armor designs, concluding that eight passed and 13 failed. The DoD IG's report disputes that finding, saying an additional three of the designs that received passes by the Army should have also failed.

Unit: Supports bases, camps

It was SGT Isaac Burrell's second deployment; his first was with the National Guard.

"Being on post has made this deployment easier," she said. "My oldest was in preK for the first one, he was the only child with a deployed parent in his class. Here the kids with deployed parents meet weekly with the school counselor — making cards to send their parents.

"And now they can't wait to play Legos with him."

Six-year-old Jaylin Boulan didn't know his mother was one of the Soldiers returning. SPC Jeanice Boulan told him she'd be home for Valentine's Day. Surprises run in the family. Her brother told Boulan he couldn't meet the flight. But he was there when the flight landed, she said.

The 85 Soldiers in 3rd, 4th and 5th platoons deployed in November 2007 and ran multiple ammunition supply points throughout Iraq. They supported camps Liberty, Al Asad, TQ and Forward Operating Base Adder with more than 1 million short tons of ammunition, said CPT Kendra Keiser, the public affairs officer for the 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion, which supports the 24th Ordnance Company on Fort Benning.

ASAP: Provides tools to address DUIs

BAC. Although the legal limit in Georgia is .08 BAC a person can still be charged with a DUI if they are in an accident, exhibit unsafe driving or are under the age of 21, said Oskar Schlomer, ASAP prevention coordinator.

In addition, Wilbanks said if the person is under 21 and not legally able to purchase or drink alcohol, they can be charged with a DUI with a .02 BAC. Also, someone over the age of 21 can be charged as a drunken driver with a BAC of .05 if they are involved in an accident.

"If someone cannot pass the Breath Scan, they shouldn't be driving," Schlomer said. "We just tell Soldiers don't drive and don't be a statistic."

The device is simple to use and comes with instructions inside, in case you forget, he said.

"To operate it, just remember the acronym CBS which stands for crush, blow and shake," Schlomer said. "If the powder inside changes to any color other than yellow, they are above a .04 BAC and shouldn't drive. Every Soldier assigned to Fort Benning gets these at the Newcomers Briefing and every time we do a presentation we pass them out."

In addition to passing out the Breath Scan devices, Wilbanks said another focus of the program is to educate Soldiers on responsible drinking.

"So many of the Soldiers here are young and they think the goal of drinking is to get intoxicated," said Denise Stephens, risk reduction coordinator. "We are not saying don't drink because that is unrealistic, but to do it responsibly."

Stephens and Derek Ferrell, also a risk reduction coordinator, employ the 00013 philosophy in teaching soldiers to drink responsibly and how to walk through the process of drinking responsibly.

The 00013 philosophy is printed on a credit-sized card and is passed out during newcomers briefings and other venue's.

"00013 stands for zero drinking under 21, zero drinking on duty, zero drinking and driving, one drink per hour and three drinks maximum per day, and also no drinking while taking medication," Stephens said.

Ferrell said another important part of prevention is identifying high-risk behavior, which he does by administering the Unit Risk Inventory. The survey is completely anonymous and assists leaders in assessing the command environment for units about to deploy.

"We understand that a lot of different behaviors contribute to drinking and driving like stress and financial problems," he said.

"Ultimately, the goal is to provide the commander with tools to address all of those and obviously drinking and driving is one of those. This is in addition to passing out the Breath Scan devices and the cards, and you would be surprised how many of those we pass out."

Other prevention tools passed out during newcomers briefings and training classes include suicide prevention cards, Military One Source cards, That Guy cards and other media designed to address drinking and other high-risk behaviors.

April 16, ASAP will present the Siran Stacy Story as a part of Alcohol Awareness Month. Stacy played for the University of Alabama from 1989-1991 and was an All-SEC athlete. On Nov. 19, 2007 Stacy and his family were involved in a car accident hit by a vehicle driven by a drunk driver. Stacy's wife and four of Stacy's children were killed in the accident. Stacy will recount the story of the accident and the effect it has had on his life following the tragic deaths of his wife and children.

It's not often Fort Benning Soldiers get to play a direct role in protecting the president, but for two MPs assigned to the rare mission, defending the new commander-in-chief was all in a day's work.

SGT Deanna Bickford, 209th MP Detachment, and her dog Devyl returned to Fort Benning Jan. 23 after completing a mission that comes along just once every four years — serving at a presidential inauguration. For four days, Bickford and Devyl, a seven-year-old, 80-pound German shepherd, were assigned to security checkpoints in Washington, D.C., during Barack Obama's inauguration.

"It was hectic," Bickford said. "Controlled chaos is pretty much what it was."

The mission's biggest challenge was navigating and controlling the sheer number of people attending the inaugural events, but Devyl handled it quite well, Bickford said.

"Luckily for me, my dog has been doing this a lot longer than I have," she said. "He's been overseas, so you could say he's a seasoned dog."

To prepare for the mission, Bickford and Devyl added additional practice in searching vehicles and luggage to their daily training routine, which includes an obedience obstacle course.

Bickford said she was surprised and pleased when she found out she and Devyl would be going to the inauguration.

"I never imagined I'd be there," she said. "We lucked out. It was a good opportunity for us."

Devyl was chosen for the mission from among the 15 other dogs at Fort Benning's military working dog kennel because he was the best qualified for the job, said SFC Andrew Fountain, kennel master.

"We evaluate the working dogs … we go off of the dog's records and the training that they had in the last three months," he said. "We got the word about the mission about two weeks in advance, and we knew exactly who we were going to send."

Overall, the mission went well and had no major setbacks, Bickford said.

"We didn't get any complaints. Nobody was afraid of the dog."

Even though the pair did not get to see the president, the inauguration mission was the most exciting secret service mission they've completed, Bickford said.

"I think I've pretty much topped out with that one," she said.

Bickford said she is looking forward to future missions with Devyl.

"If and when a deployment comes up, that's the next thing on our plate, unless something like this pops up," she said. "Missions are coming down for us every day, and you never know what's going to happen."

BENCH NOTES

JOHN W. PEELER

Steelers make Super Bowl history

The Pittsburgh Steelers won Super Bowl XLII, 27-23, over the Arizona Cardinals Feb. 1 at Raymond James Stadium in Tampa Bay, Fla.

The Steelers now have six Super Bowl titles, the most in NFL history.

Steelers' wide receiver Santonio Holmes was named the game MVP.

I thought the game was over after the first half, but was impressed with the Cardinals' near comeback. Kurt Warner and Larry Fitzgerald looked good, but it wasn't enough for the win.

At least the Cardinals won the coin toss, which GEN David Petraeus tossed.

Poll jinx

It seems as soon as a new number one men's college basketball team is named, they lose a game and the top spot.

This week UConn is ranked number one in the ESPN/USA Today's coaches' poll, followed by Oklahoma, Duke, North Carolina and Pittsburgh.

So far this season, the rankings have completed a so-called "full house" — three teams from one conference and two from another.

March Madness is right around the corner and it's shaping up to be a great one.

Phelps is a dope

Swimmer Michael Phelps, who won a record eight gold medals at the Beijing Summer Olympics last year, has admitted that a picture of him smoking marijuana in the British tabloid News of the World is a real photo, and that his actions were a "regrettable" behavior and "bad judgment."

Phelps, 23, also had a drunken driving charge at age 19, not long after the 2004 Summer Olympics. I'm sorely disappointed in him and hope he gets his act together.

Nadal, Williams win

Serena Williams won her 10th Grand Slam Jan. 31 at the Australia Open, routing Dinara Safina 6-0, 6-3.

In the men's tourney, Rafael Nadal became the first Spaniard to win the men's open, beating Roger Federer in a five-set final Feb. 1.

NASCAR returns

With football over and baseball still two months away, it's time to fire up the NASCAR engines.

The season begins with the Budweiser Shootout. The race is not worth any points, but gives fans a chance to check out their driver and how they're running.

The Shootout will be broadcast at 8 p.m. Saturday on Fox. The points season begins in earnest with the Daytona 500 at 3 p.m. Feb. 15 on Fox.

Battle for first ends in 1/10 victory

D Co., 2/29 fights back in final minutes, but come up short in 53-51 loss

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Two teams battled for first place in League 3 Intramural basketball action, but only one team would be able to claim they were the best. The difference between being the best and second place — two points.

D Company's, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, comeback bid fell just short late in the final half as the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment, held on to win the game and claim the top spot in the league, 53-51. With the victory, 1/10 remains undefeated at 6-0.

Both teams battled back and forth for supremacy in the first half, but with seven minutes remaining in the first half, 1/10 led, 22-18. Although 2/29 attempted to overtake 1/10, by the end of the first half, 1/10 held a slim 31-27 lead.

"We talked about clamping down defensively at halftime," said Jewell Brock, 1/10 coach.

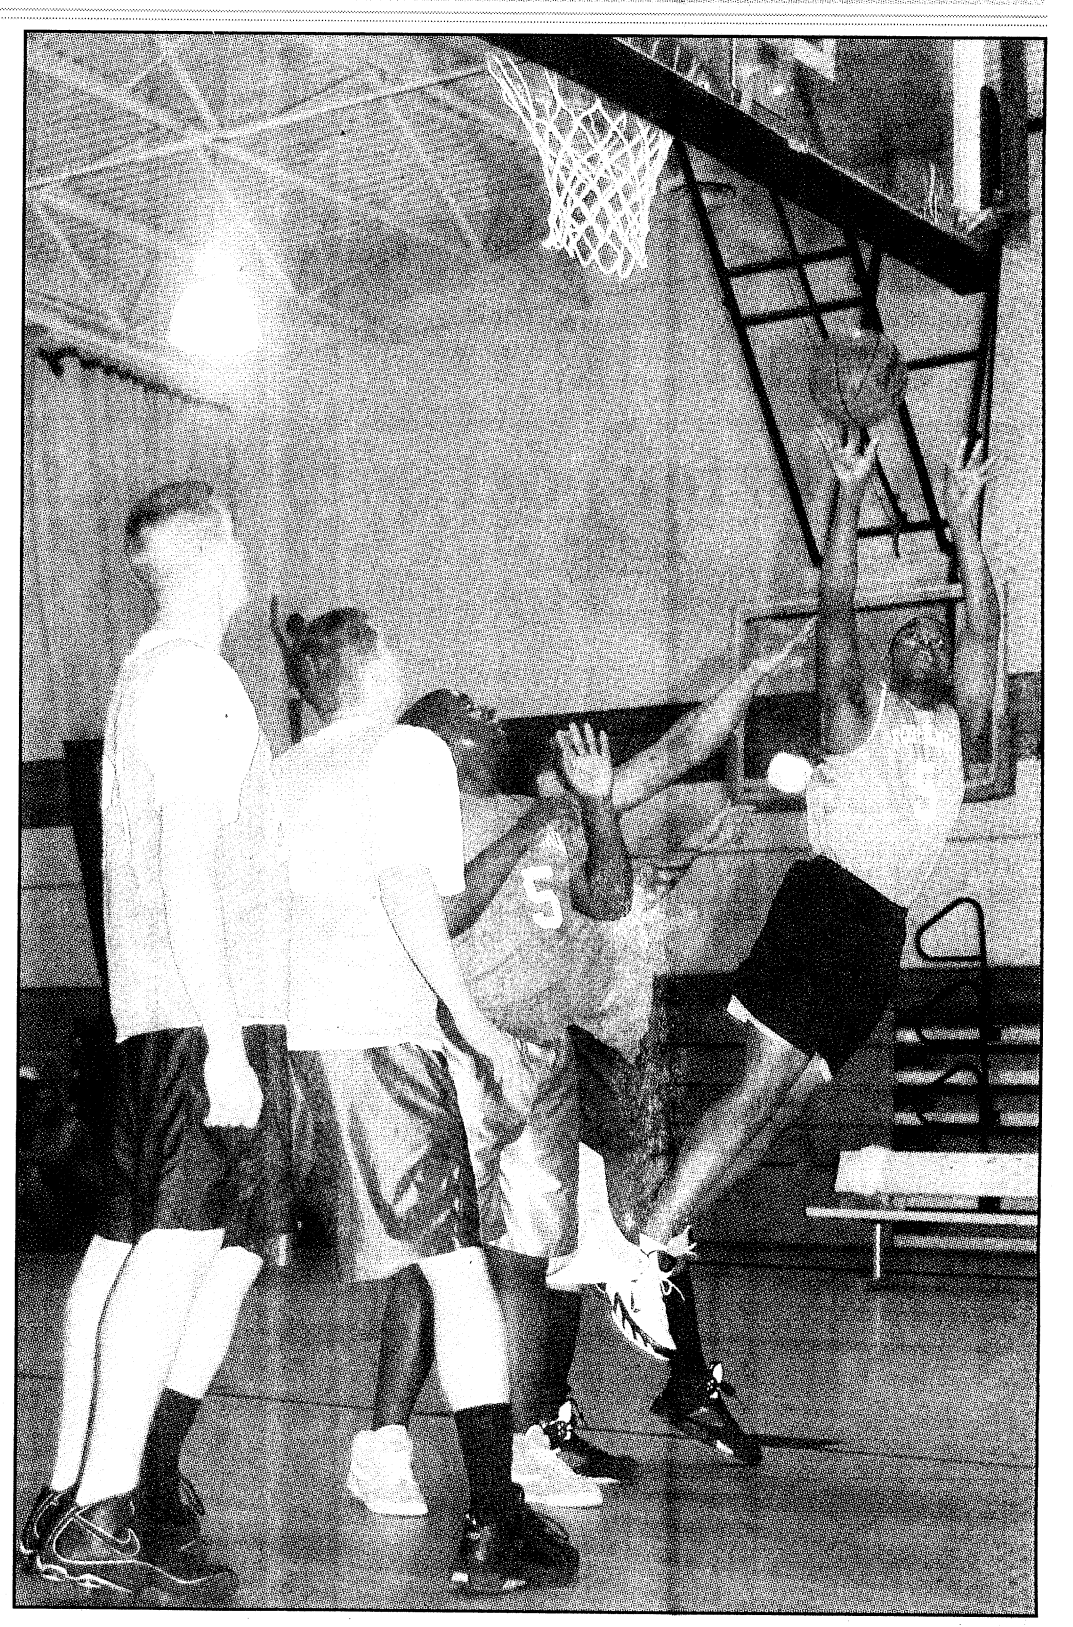

With three minutes remaining in the second half, 2/29 fell from a four-point deficit to a six-point deficit, while 1/10 put 19 points on the board to lead, 50-44.

Trailing 53-49, Brett Macy of 2/29 went 2-for-2 from the free-throw line to pull to within two points of 1/10, but the Cannoneers of 1/10 held off the last minute comeback for a 53-51 win.

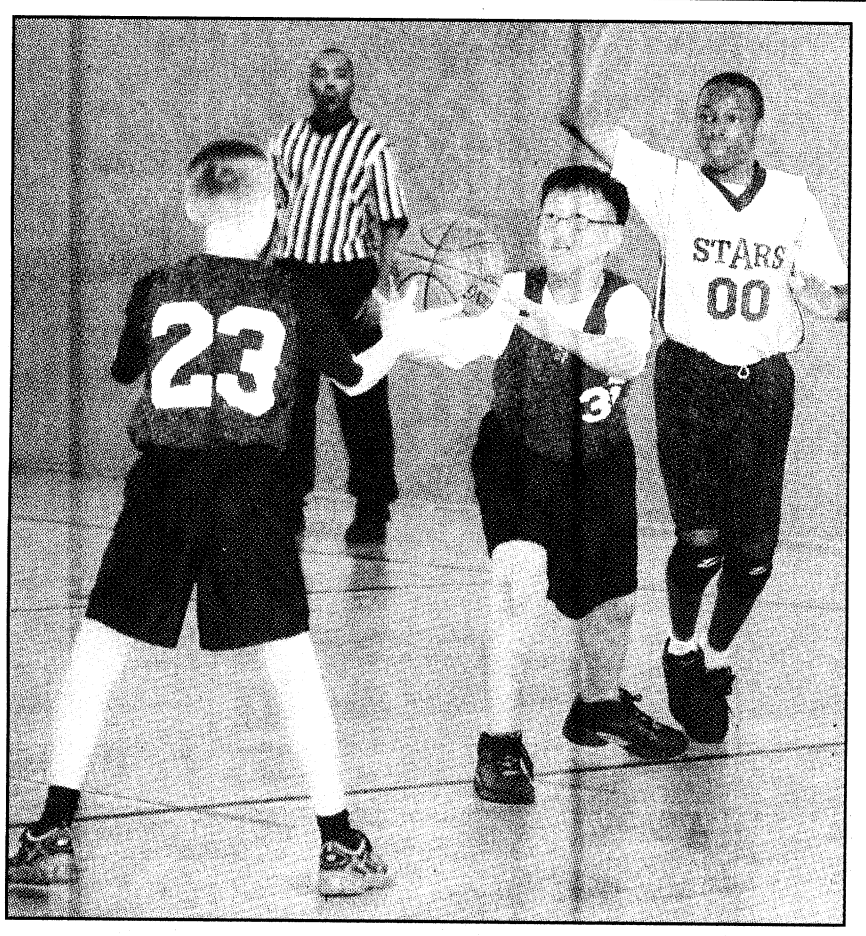

"I think this was a well-played game and we had a great team effort to get this win," Brock said.

"We had a good mix of free throws, 3-pointers and inside work and we had a good hustle," said Edson Gordon 1/10 forward. "Staying focused and keeping our mind in the game is what helped us win the game."

Scoring: 1-10 FA: Brock, (13), Gordon, (12), Battle (11), Dereese (9), Parker (7); D Co. 2-29: Hollaway (13), Macy (12), Mulkey (10), Haney (8), Hankins (8).

Tide pulls out victory in final two minutes

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

After a fast-paced tug of war, the Tide defeated the Stars, 32- 23, Saturday in the 11- to 13-year-old division of Child Youth and School Services basketball.

The Tide dominated the beginning of the first quarter, scoring a basket and controlling the boards for the first four minutes of the game. Then, the Stars broke their defense and scored a basket, bringing the score to 4-2. After a seesaw struggle, the Tide, led by Ian Kessler's 7 points, closed out the first quarter leading the Stars, 7-6.

The Stars took an 8-7 lead early in the second quarter and held off the Tide for most of the period, controlling the boards while shutting down the Tide's offense. But, by the end of the half, the Tide broke through and pulled ahead with baskets from Andrew Kessler and D.J. Dockery to lead the Stars, 15-8.

In the third quarter, the Tide started off in control of the ball, scoring a basket and two free throws to extend their lead to 19-8. The Stars made a strong offensive bid, led by baskets from Kristopher Bethel, and a basket and a free throw made by Trevor Crookston. The Stars scored 11 points, but couldn't overcome the Tide's lead. Despite a last-minute basket at the buzzer, the Stars trailed 22-19 at the end of the period.

The Stars scored the first basket of the final period, and the Tide followed with two baskets, to lead the Stars, 27-22, with two minutes left in the game. After a flurry of points in the final two minutes, the Tide clinched a 32-23 win.

"We played exceptional defense today," said Calvin Flint, Tide coach. "They kept their cool. They slowed down when they had to. Our pressure was tough the whole game and I think that's how we pulled it out."

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Learning the game as she goes

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

"I saw the need for volunteer coaches, so I started volunteering," said 9- to -10-year-old CYS coach Tammy Donahue. Four years later, Donahue finds herself on the basketball court, coaching a sport she admits she has had to learn along the way.

"I knew absolutely nothing about basketball," she said. "I read all the books they (CYS) had and I have asked a lot of questions this year."

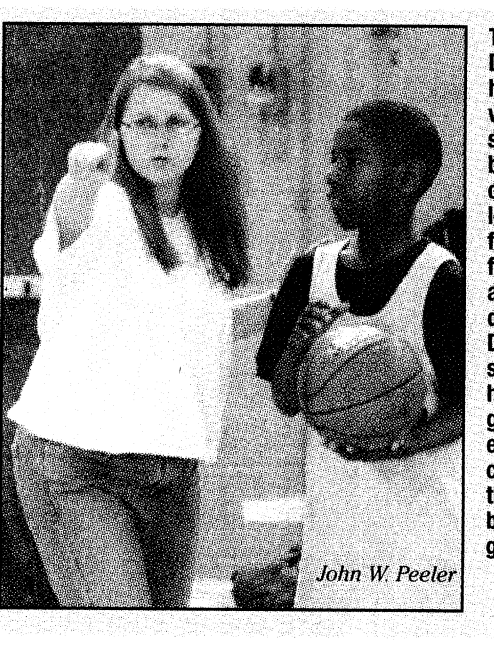

Donahue said she began volunteering in Killeen, Texas, as a coach in soccer while at Fort Hood, when her son was 5 years old.

"I saw the need for coaches, and I was going to be at practice anyhow, so I started volunteering," Donahue said. "It just became a passion for me."

Donahue keeps her approach to coaching very simple. Teach the fundamentals, have fun and build self-esteem and confidence.

"I teach the kids the basics and build on the fundamentals of the sport and I think that, in turn, also builds their confidence in their self," she said. "It is satisfying to see the kids have that glow about them when they have done something right."

Building and teaching teamwork is one area Donahue stresses from the first day of practice.

"I said we have 10 players on the team, so at the next practice you owe me 10 laps," she said. "But, for every teammate you can name, including your own name, I will take away one of those laps. And, that just teaches them they are a part of the team and teaches them their teammates names.

"We also have passing drills so each player learns to count on their teammate when they pass the ball, and that also teaches them they are a team."

While teaching the fundamentals of the game is important to Donahue, she said an understanding of the game not only had to be tailored to the age group, but sometimes to the individual player.

"I have some that I can tell to do something and they say 'OK coach,' then I have others who you can take the next step up and say, 'this is why we do that,'" Donahue said. "Really you just have to look at every individual child."

When the season is over Donahue said she wants everyone to feel like they have contributed to the game and feel important.

"I want them to all feel good about the game and basketball in general and hope they will really consider playing again in a team sport," she said. "I want them to say they had fun, enjoyed it and that I was a good coach regardless of whether we won or lost."

So, what is next for the coach who has taught herself the sport of soccer and basketball?

"Well, my son has said he wanted to play baseball," she said. "So, we will see."

Tryouts for post softball team set

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

If you think you have what it takes to play on a post-level softball team, an opportunity to prove it is just around the corner.

Coach Tom Siter will be conducting tryouts Feb. 21 and 28 on Gowdy Field at 10 a.m. for the 2009 men's slow pitch season and is looking for the best players to fill two 15-player teams.

"This is a great opportunity to play at a very competitive level," Siter said. "We are looking for serious players who can play against 'A' level ball clubs."

Siter said it was important for prospective players to realize they would still be required to perform their normal duties and that playing for the team was not a special duty assignment, but the rewards could include playing in the Military World Series.

"Last year, the team qualified for the Military World Series and placed fifth," he said. "This year, we will have two teams and both of the teams should finish better than that."

To be considered for the team players must be available a minimum of two nights per week during April, May and June, be available a minimum of two weekends per month from May to July, available all weekends in August and be available two nights per week during September and October.

"We will be playing in Columbus during the spring and fall and will participate in two tournaments," Siter said. "The play will be very competitive and players wanting to try out should have a considerable amount of softball experience."

For more information call Siter at 706-757-8960 or e-mail at thomas.siter@us.army.mil.

Athletes on pedestals routinely fall off

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Just when you believe an athlete comes along who really gets it, it's not long before you realize they don't really "get it" after all.

What do I mean by "gets it?" An athlete who realizes their athletic accomplishments puts them among an elite class of people, and as such, must act accordingly.

With that status and celebrity comes a responsibility — a responsibility to those who idolize them and aspire to be like them.

Eight-time Olympic gold medal swimmer Michael Phelps has failed those who have put him on a pedestal, idolize him and aspire to be like him by getting caught smoking marijuana.

At 23, we should expect Phelps to make mistakes simply because, face it, 23-year-old young adults make mistakes — I know I made plenty of mistakes at 23, but not of this magnitude. I couldn't afford to, I was busy serving my county.

Normally, a transgression like this could be overlooked to some extent, after all he is just 23, but he is an eight-time Olympic gold medalist and kids look up to him.

But, this is not his first run in with substance abuse.

Shortly after winning six gold medals in the 2004 Olympics, Phelps was arrested for drunken driving. At 19, his "youthful mistake" was overlooked by many. Now, many wish to overlook this "youthful mistake."

A recent Headline News poll showed 76 percent of those polled thought Phelps should not suffer any ill effects of his "youthful mistake," nor should those who endorse him renege on their deals.

I have often heard the saying "fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me," well, I have been fooled once by Phelps "youthful mistakes," but I won't be fooled twice.

If I were the parent of a young swimmer, I would think twice before buying my child a replica Phelps Speedo or any other swimming product he endorsed.

Phelps has provided parents around the world with the perfect opportunity to remind their kids that athletes they see on television, pages of magazines or billboard advertisements are not always the best role models.

Role models are best found among those you know well and a lot closer to home than a television, magazine or billboard.

Will Phelps be able to recover from his latest run in with the law? Only time will tell, but I hope so.

Hailed as one of the best athletes ever, Phelps was put on a pedestal, but his athletic accomplishments didn't prevent him from falling off — at least not with me.

While many may still say he is the greatest athlete ever, for now, in my book I will put an asterisk by his name and take a wait and see attitude.

Outlaws defeat 2/29

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The 203rd Brigade Support Battalion's Outlaws took on the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, Jan. 29 at the Smith Fitness Center coming away with a 46-37 victory moving their record to 4-1 in league play.

2/29 dominated offensively in the first half, hitting four 3-point shots from Kowan Heileman, Mike Jones, Juan DeJesus and David McMillian.

Forward John Clinard led the team in scoring during the first half with eight points while Outlaw John Ewing kept the first half close with a team-high seven points.

The Outlaws went 7-for-8 from the free-throw line while going foul free during the first half, but they still trailed at the half 26-23.

"The most important thing is getting those free throws — we shot at least 80 percent," said Outlaws coach Anthony Gordon.

At the half, acting 2/29 coach Charles Winter said he wanted his team to maintain a tough defense, but the Outlaws came out in the second half to tie the game at 27-27, continuing to increase their lead.

Ewing added to his point total with 13 points in the half as the Outlaws outscored 2/29, 23-10, in the period cruising to a 46-37 win.

"Basically in the second half, we just got a little bit more aggressive," Gordon said. "We picked up the defense, pressured the ball and allowed them to make mistakes. It was a consolidated effort of five personnel on the court playing together."

The game was the fourth win for 203rd BSB out of five games this season. Even though they are doing well, they can't rest on their laurels, said Outlaw forward Kumasi Cooper.

"We're going to need some more practice," he said. "Practice makes perfect. Watch out for the Outlaws."

For 2/29 it's back to practice. With a relatively new team, the players still need to build cohesion and get used to each other, Clinard said.

"This game went like every other game we've played," he said. "The first half, we play really well. For some reason we can't put two halves together."

To win, we need better teamwork, Clinard said.

"Every team we've played, we can beat," he said. "The talent on our team is just as good as any talent out there. Once we get that meshed out, we'll be all right."

Youth-friendly fitness center helps families stay fit together

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's Family Fitness Center opened Monday in the martial arts room of the Benning Conference Center. It features youth-friendly exercise equipment and, unlike Benning's other fitness facilities, allows children as young as 10 to use the facilities, as long as they are accompanied by a parent or guardian.

The fitness center's aim is to provide a place for parents to share a healthy, active lifestyle with their children, said Jessica Troutman, Family Fitness Center facility manager.

"We're encouraging the parents to exercise with their child," she said. "We really want the parents who come here with their children not to just sit and watch."

The fitness center features a variety of cardiovascular and resistance equipment that meets Department of the Army requirements for youth exercise safety.

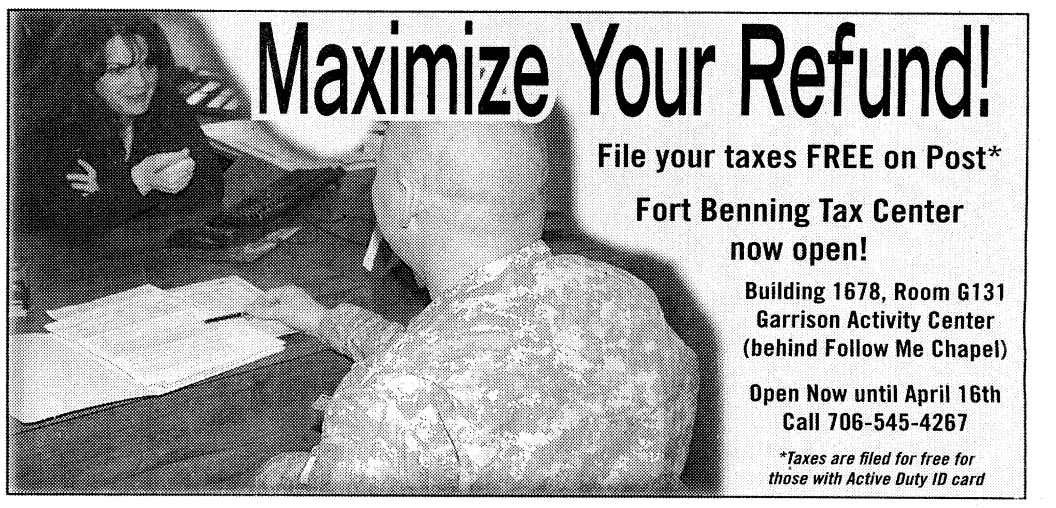

"The equipment there is specifically built to be used by younger children," said Shannon Beck, Directorate of Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation marketing director. "It is safer and has modifications such as no open holes where children can accidentally stick their fingers."

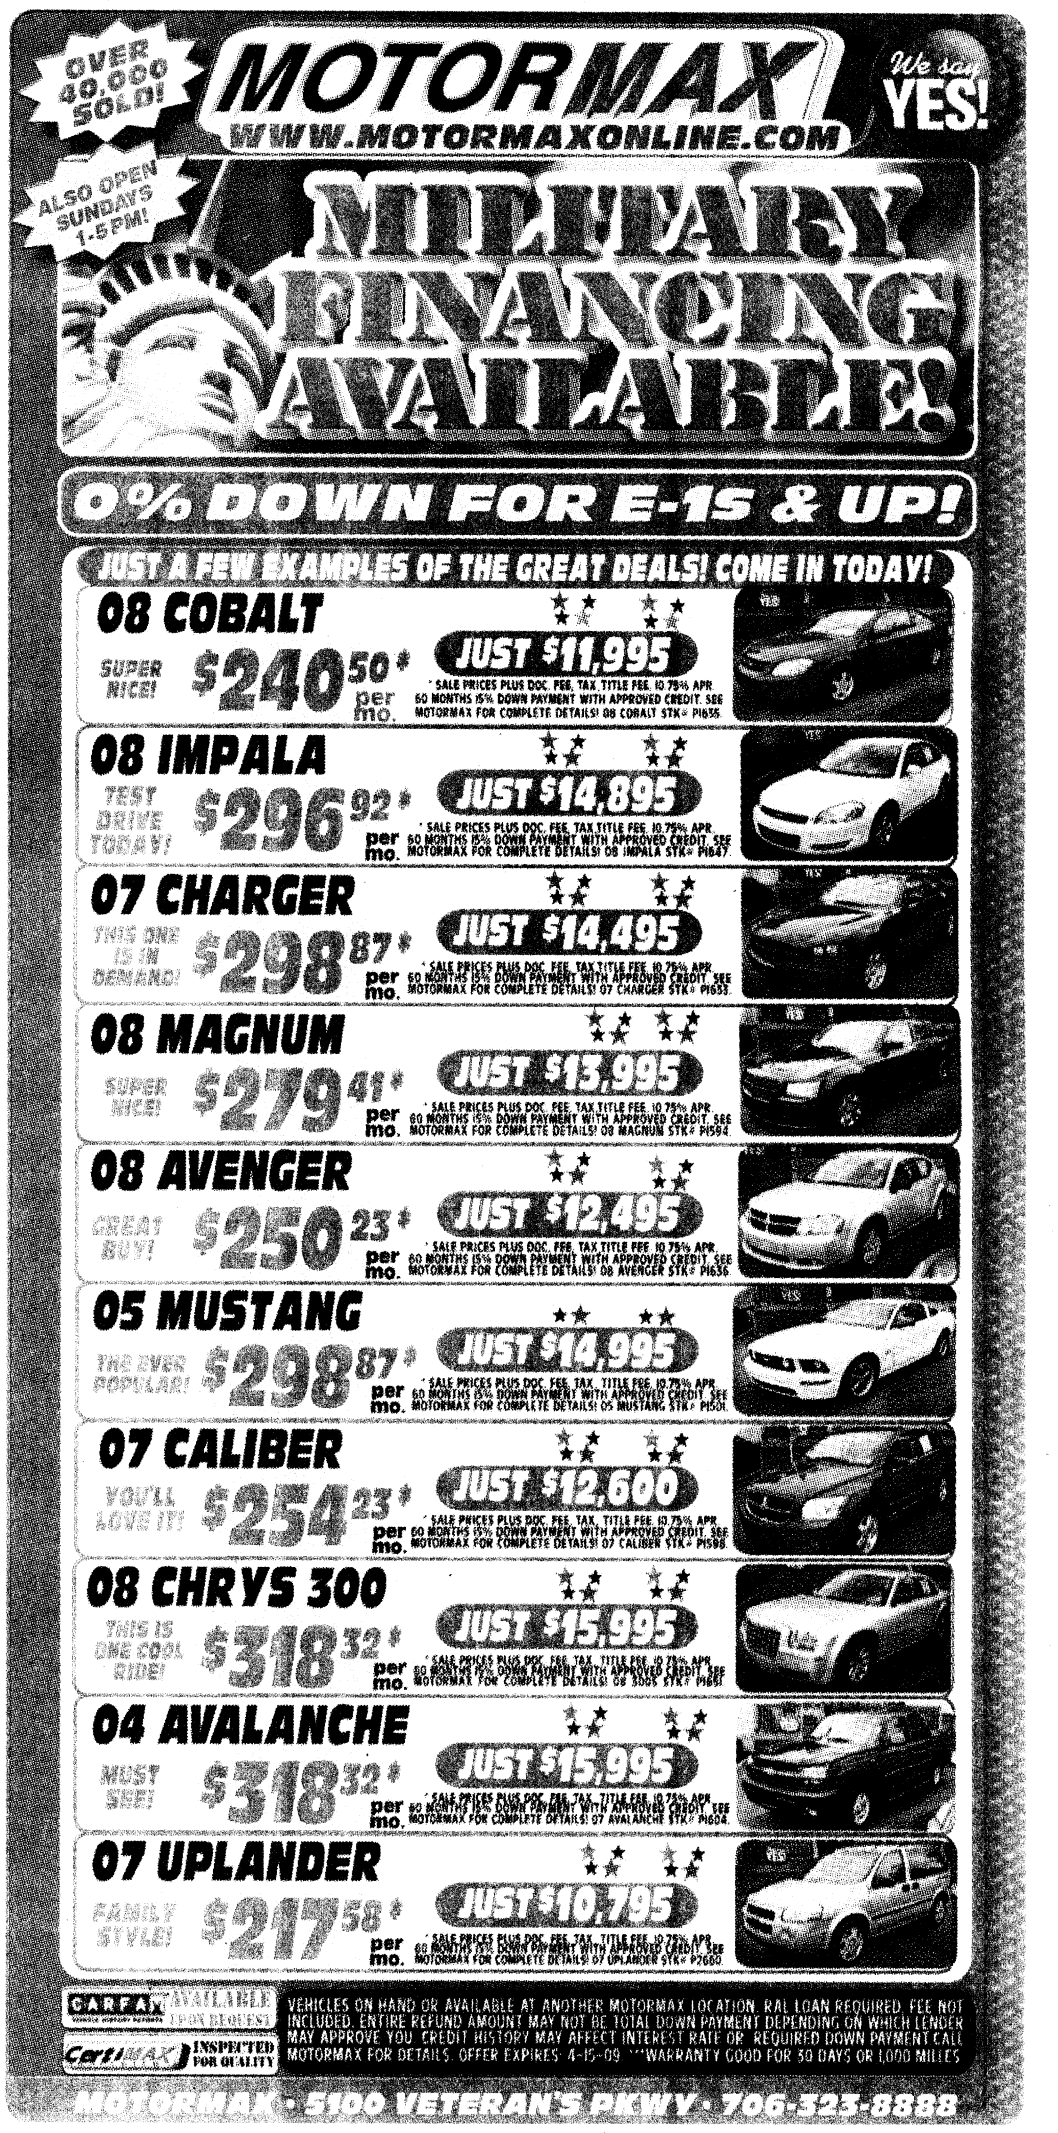

Staff members are on hand at all times to answer questions about fitness and nutrition, and to teach children how to properly use the equipment. The center also has computers available where kids can access the Web site of the President's Challenge Physical Activity and Fitness Awards Program, which may help motivate some children to stay active, Troutman said.

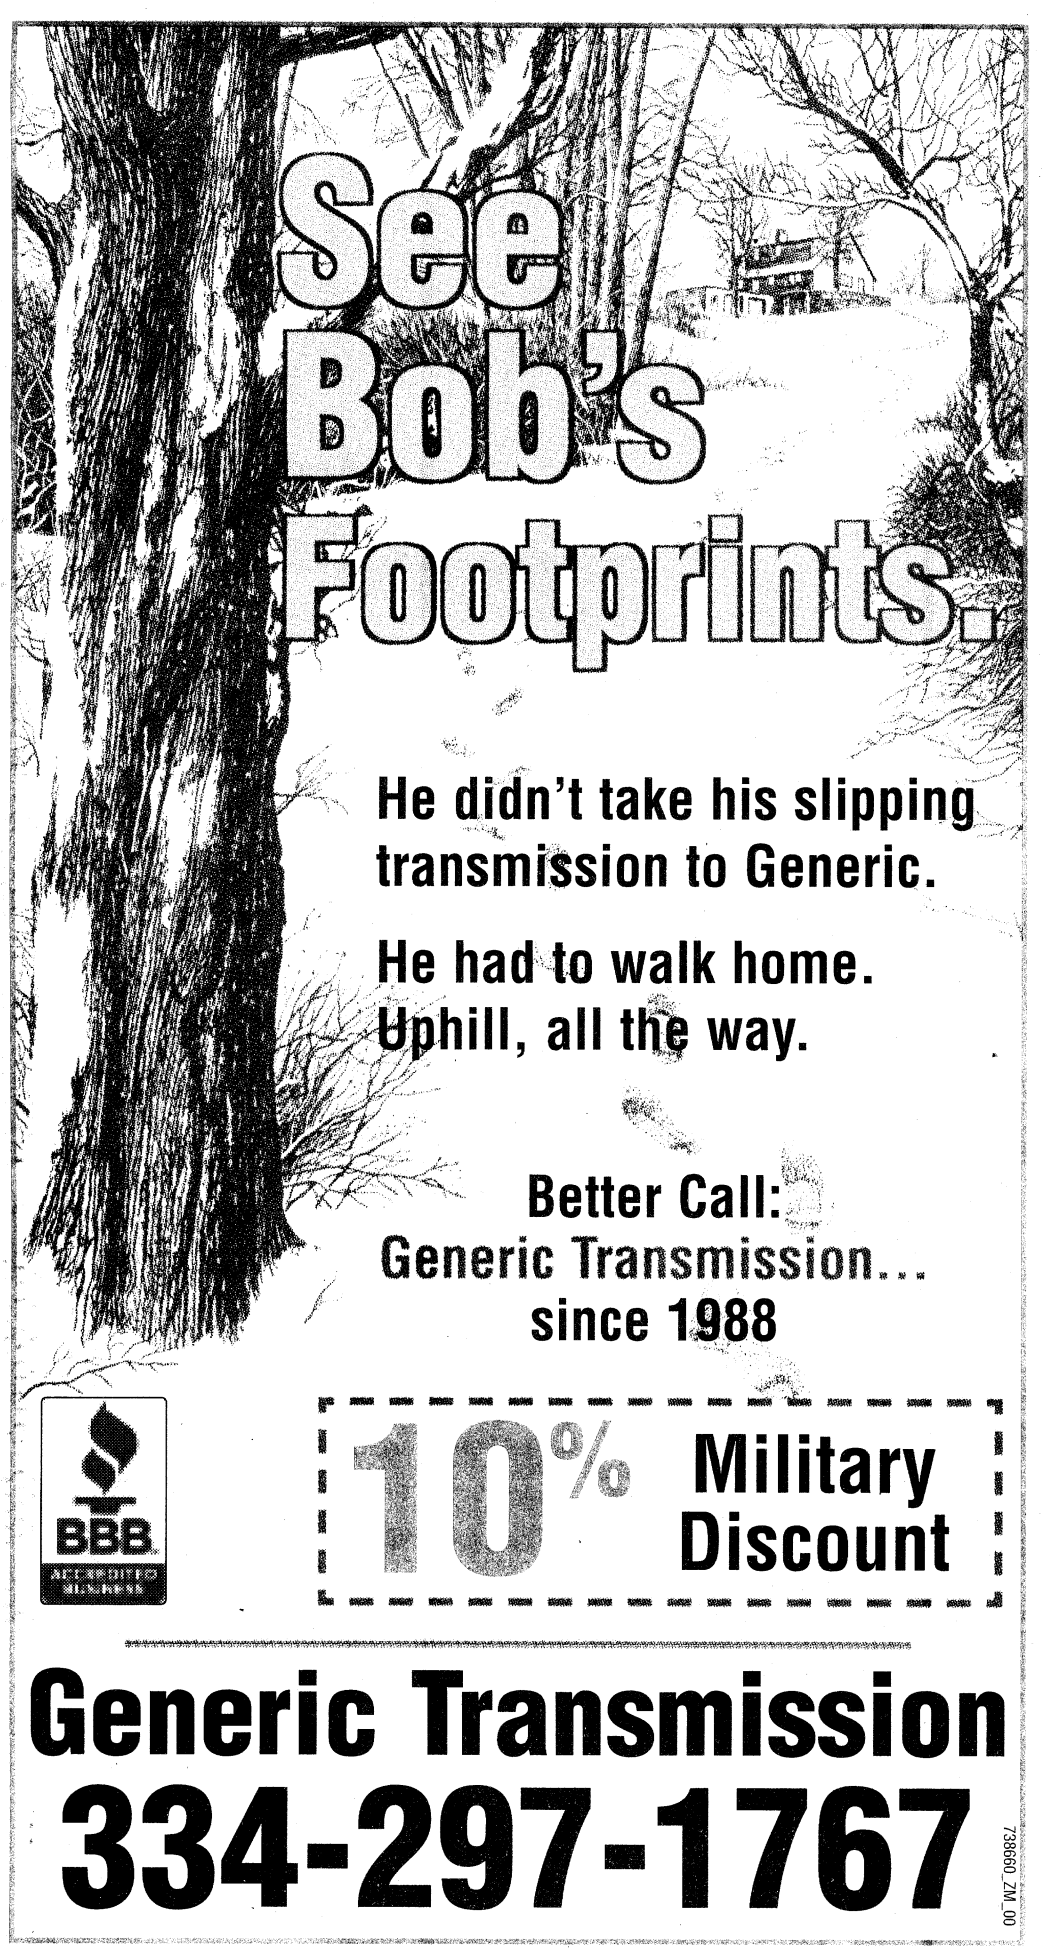

"As they reach different points within the program, they can win T-shirts, medals, certificates and other awards," she said.

All families wishing to use the fitness center must first complete a short orientation with the staff on the equipment. The staff will answer any questions they may have, Troutman said.

The Family Fitness Center is open Monday through Friday from 2 to 8 p.m.

Students stack their way to top, compete in tournament

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Students from Dexter, Stowers and Wilson elementary schools kept their eyes locked on neon and flame-covered plastic cups as they stacked towers of them at the monthly sport stacking tournament Jan. 29 at Wilson Elementary.

Sport stacking was created in the early 1980s by an elementary school teacher and spread nationally in 1998. Sport stackers race the clock and others to see if they can get the fastest time stacking different combinations of cups including towers of three, six and 10 cups. In the doubles relay, each stacker uses one hand to complete three combinations together. Stackers are judged on speed and accuracy.

"Sport stacking is all about getting the fastest time without fumbling," said Dexter Elementary fifth-grader Nathan Haddix, who has sport stacked for three years.

Haddix started sport stacking after his friends introduced him to it.

"My favorite part about sport stacking is trying to see how fast I can go without fumbling — it's challenging," he said.

Stowers Elementary fifth-grader B.J. Knight has been sport stacking for two years.

"Sometimes, it's hard to get the cups to stay right where you want them. It takes a lot of concentration to get it right."

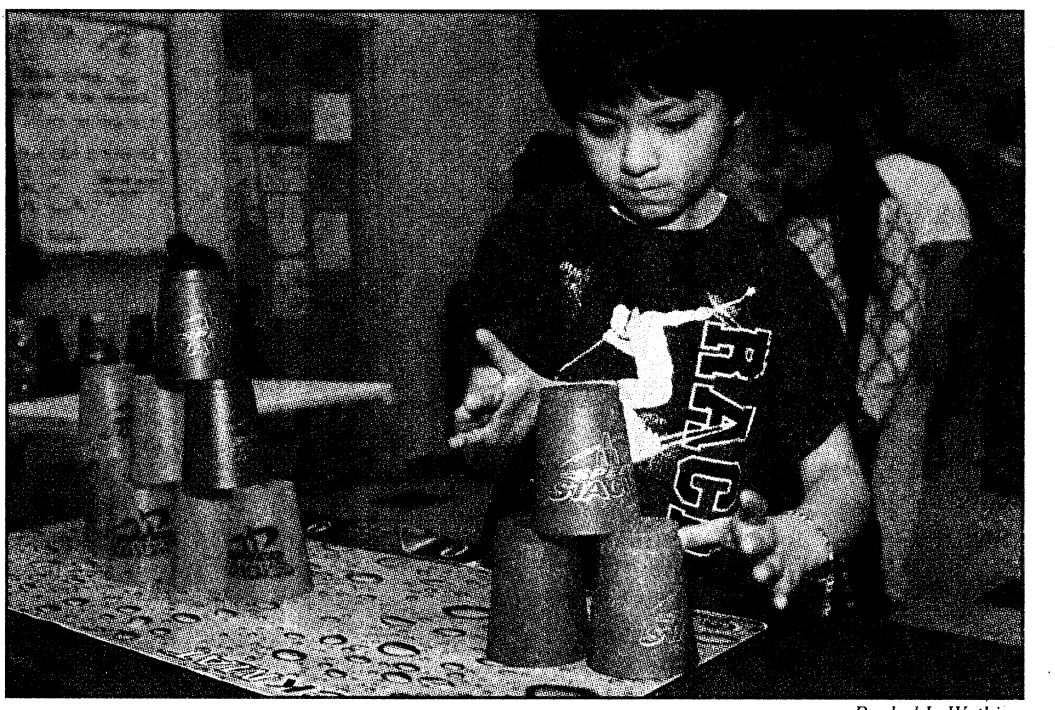

Sport stacking is not only fun for the children, but it's a learning tool too, said Pam Koon, Dexter Elementary PE teacher.

"The sport works both the right and left sides of the brain," Koon said. "Anytime you cross the midline of the brain, it actually makes you smarter."

It's also good for hand-eye coordination and sequencing, she said.

More than 20,000 schools worldwide have sport stacking programs in their PE curriculum, according to www.speedstacks.com.

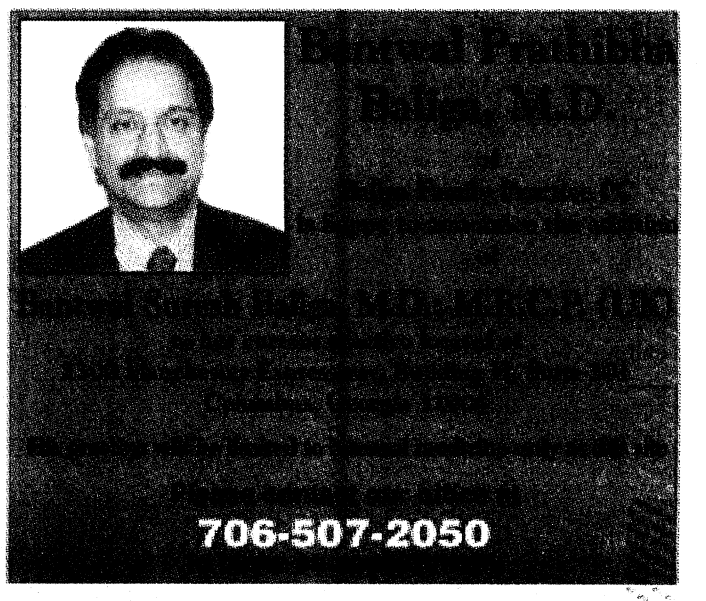

Sport stacking teams from Dexter, Stowers and Wilson elementary will prepare to compete in a postwide tournament in April.

Rachel L. Watkins
Third-grader Cameron Jimenez concentrates as he stacks a 3-6-3 combination at a sport stacking tournament at Wilson Elementary School. Stackers were timed on speed and accuracy. After stacking, the competitors hit the hand symbols on the mat to stop the time.

If you think this is too much excitement for one year...
Consider a fixed annuity.
Fixed annuities aren't flashy. In the past, nobody talked about them at cocktail parties. They were often upstaged by the more exciting mutual funds or stocks. But that was the past. Today, fixed annuities, with their underlying minimum guarantees, are looking more attractive to consumers, and people who own fixed annuities as part of a comprehensive financial plan are breathing a collective sigh of relief. After all, why take all the risk?
Call today to learn more.

Fixed annuities may not be suitable for all. You should consult a licensed insurance agent regarding your financial objectives and unique situation to help determine if a fixed annuity is right for you. Please make sure that you review thoroughly all marketing materials, specimen contracts, buyer's guides, and forms related to the annuity to ensure that it meets your short- and long-term financial situation and liquidity needs.
Withdrawals may be subject to income tax, and a 10% federal income tax penalty may apply to withdrawals before age 591/2. Additionally, certain charges (referred to as surrender charges) may apply if you withdraw more than the penalty-free amount in a year.
Fixed annuities guarantee a minimum interest rate on all or a percentage of each contribution over the life of your contract, less any withdrawals and/ or deductions and early surrender charges. Guarantees are based on the claims-paying ability of the insurer.

Rifle championships train better teachers

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Training was the focus when 49 Soldiers and cadets competed in the Fort Benning Rifle Championships Jan. 28 to 30 at Easley Range.

The competition, open to all Fort Benning Soldiers and cadets from North Georgia College and State University, was an opportunity for participants to gain valuable training they can share with other Soldiers, said SFC Janet Sokolowksi, Army Marksmanship Unit operations officer.

"Basically, we want to teach people who are going to go back and teach other people," she said. "It's a force multiplier."

Participants received classroom instruction in rifle marksmanship, as well as instruction at Easley Range in positions training, dry firing and zeroing. Each Soldier received a training certificate worth promotion points, and all participants received CDs of their classroom lessons and "pro tips," helpful hints from experienced AMU marksmen.

The CDs, which give Soldiers a concrete point of reference, are part of AMU's focus on helping produce Soldiers who are better able to train others, Sokolowski said.

"In the Army, it happens all the time," she said. "You might be called on to teach something (like rifle marksmanship) and here you have a CD and you're ready to go."

During the final day of the championships, participants shot from five distances, ranging from 25 to 400 yards, in positions designed to simulate conditions they might encounter in combat.

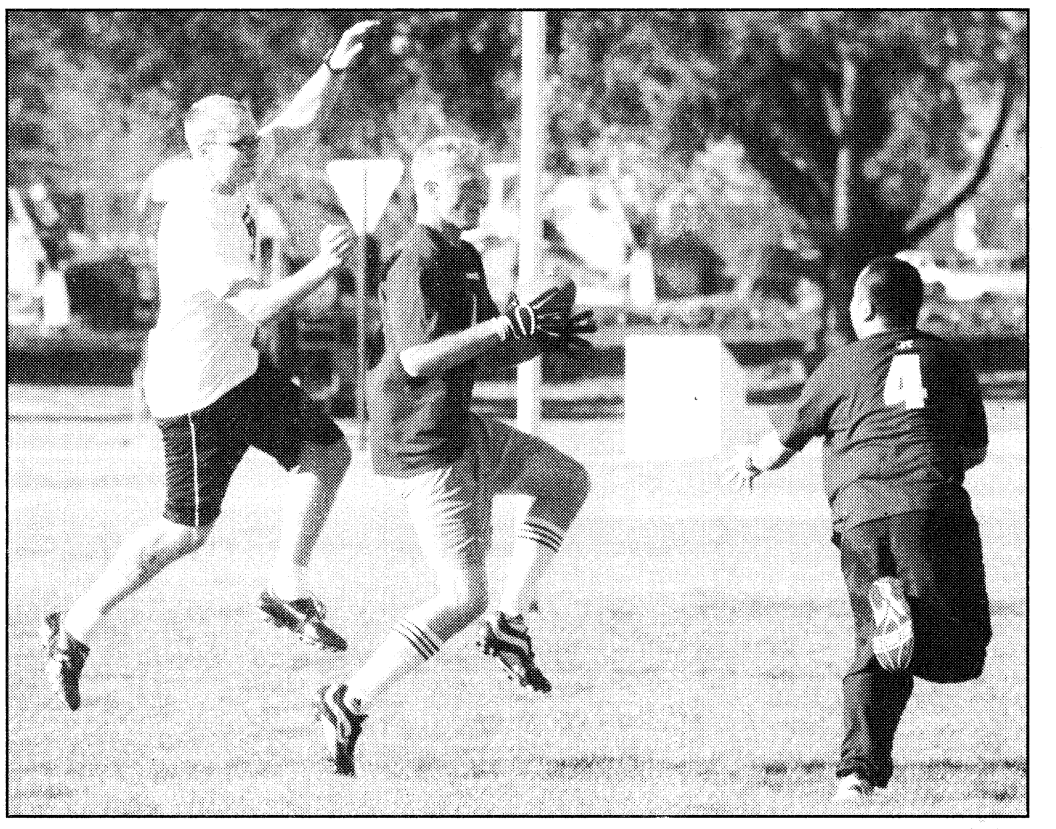

"It simulates having to move upon seeing the enemy and finding a covered and concealed position and then engaging the target," said SFC Emil Praslick, military coach of AMU's service rifle team. "Very rarely are you in a static position when the enemy presents itself."

For many participants, the championship was a way to gain valuable marksmanship training time.

"We're getting ready to deploy again in October, so I just wanted to get more trigger time," said SPC Broc Hornaday, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment.

"Not many cadets get an opportunity to shoot as much as we do," said Cadet Caitlyn French. "I know that once I'm an officer it will help me stand out above my peers or at least be at the same level as them with shooting. It's just a great way to improve your skills and see how you rate against the rest of the competition."

Touchdown passes fly in MCCC football game

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

The touchdown passes were flying when Soldiers in the Maneuver Captain's Career Course met Jan. 29 on Stewart Watson Field to play football. The games were part of the MCCC's Ultimate Football League, created by its students to foster a sense of camaraderie and esprit de corps.

"It's a blast," said CPT Jake Owens. "It helps break up a long week of schoolwork."

Each of the course's 10 seminars, or course sections, play against each other once a week in a conference playoff system with the top two teams facing off in the Mega Bowl March 27. The Jan. 29 games were part of the Australia Bowls, in which eight teams participated. The Australia Bowls marked the second week of play for the league.

"This is taken pretty seriously," Owens said. "Some of the guys have put up posters around the classrooms with power rankings, and we've even got a Web site going."

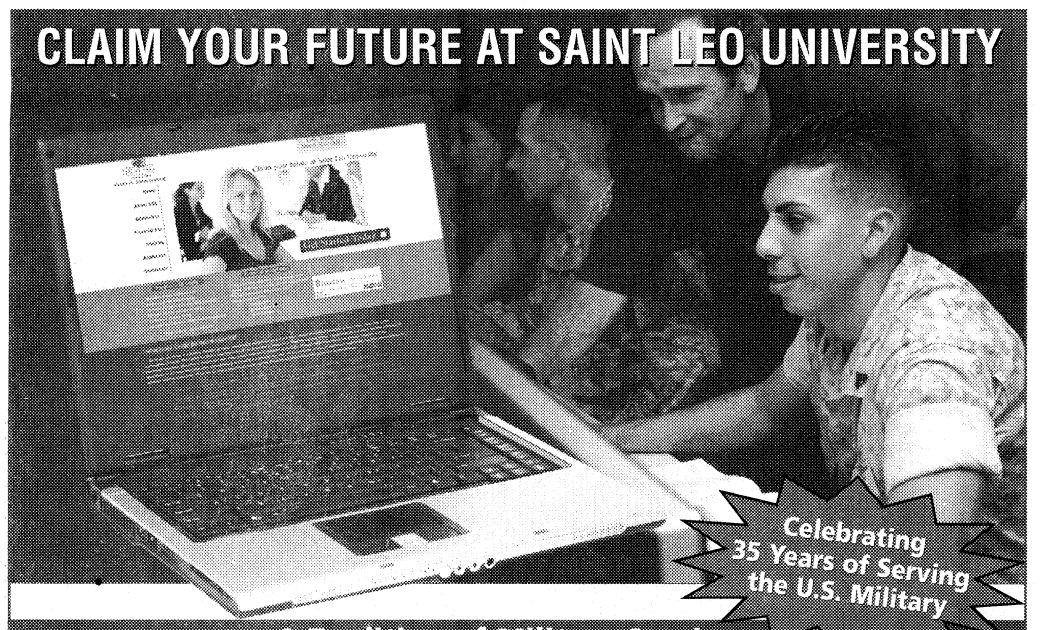

Competition among students is key in building teamwork between Soldiers who come to the MCCC with varying backgrounds and experiences in the Army, said MAJ Mike Reber, an instructor.

"It's a good way to break the ice and build esprit de corps," he said.

Though the winning teams will not get official recognition from the Army or from a sports league, they play hard, CPT Matt Adamczyk said.

"Bragging rights are on the line," he said.

Post to observe National Prayer Breakfast Feb. 20

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

During World War II, the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives and President Dwight Eisenhower met for the first Presidential Prayer Breakfast — that was 56 years ago. Later named the National Prayer Breakfast, U.S. presidents, and others including members of the cabinet, the Supreme Court and Congress have been meeting for the breakfast every year in February.

"This breakfast is a way for people to focus on God and pray for the nation," said Chaplain (COL) Scott Davis. "The prosperity of the country really rests in the favor of God."

Fort Benning will observe the National Prayer Breakfast at 7:30 a.m. Feb. 20 at the Benning Conference Center.

The speaker, Chaplain (MG) Doug Carver, Army Chief of Chaplains, a native of Rome, Ga., has served as a chaplain in Iraq, and deputy command chaplain in Heidelberg, Germany.

Tickets are on sale now and the suggested donation for enlisted Soldiers is $6 and $8 for NCOs and officers. There are about 300 tickets available and they will be sold on a first come, first served basis. See your unit chaplain for tickets. For more information, call 706-545-2289.

Fort Benning Girl Scouts met at the Fort Benning Automotive Skills Center to learn how to change oil, check fluids and how to look for leaks. It was the last part of earning their Car Sense badge.

Girl Scouts brave 'slimy' motor oil, tire changing to earn badge

"Yuck," Fort Benning Girl Scouts said as they had their first encounter with touching car oil. Girls described it as "slimy" and "gross." They each took turns pouring oil in a vehicle Jan. 27 at the Fort Benning Automotive Skills Center. Learning how to change oil and a flat tire, among other car tasks, was their final lesson in earning their Car Sense badge.

"That tire was heavy — I was putting it on really hoping that it wasn't going to fall off," said Adriana Embus, 13. "It was a

Students prepare for 21st-century world with new initiative

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"We've got to change the way we approach teaching our students — our students are just not the same as they used to be," said Julie Pelletier, information specialist at Loyd Elementary, who has been meeting with other school leaders since late summer to talk about ways to enhance student learning.

This shift in teaching depends on "Lead the Learning" teams, which include an information specialist and education technologist from each of the 11 schools in the Georgia and Alabama Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary Schools district. The team meets regularly to discuss techniques and tools they will later pass on to teachers in their schools.

"They are going to enhance their knowledge of teaching and learning," said Dr. Dell McMullen, district superintendent.

"The job of schools is dramatically different than it has been in the past, even five to 10 years ago," she said. "And we have to make dramatic changes to ensure that our students have the 21st-century skills they need.

"It's about teaching and learning the standards that are going to prepare our students. They need to be able to think creatively, solve problems, innovate, design, make oral presentations and interact with a variety of tools with people all over the world. It's not about the technology, (but) the technology is being used to improve the teaching and learning."

McMullen said she was confident that school leaders and teachers would make the transition smoothly to the benefit of the students.

"We're very much on the cutting edge. Nowhere else is this kind of initiative being implemented," she said. "Our goal is that every one of our classrooms is a true 21st century place of learning for every child."

The Lead the Learning initiative is still in its early stages, but there has been promising growth, said education specialist Beth Holmes, who works with the Lead the Learning teams to introduce the new teaching methods.

One of the goals for the new classroom is to be much more student-directed and

Soldiers and civilians learn techniques to help them de-stress

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Soldiers and civilians attending the Army Substance Abuse Program's How to Stress Proof Your Life seminar paused, breathed deeply and closed their eyes Jan. 29 in Infantry Hall. The deep-breathing exercise was one of many ways attendees learned to decrease and manage the stress in their lives.

"My ultimate goal is people will leave here and be happier and have some techniques to make their lives more pleasurable and enjoyable," said Yvonne Wilbanks, alcohol and drug control officer, who coordinated the event.

Guest speakers presented advice on building better relationships, handling difficult times and living a healthy lifestyle, focusing on the key areas of each topic that affect Soldiers and Army community members.

Cliff Bennett, a family counselor and former pastor, discussed ways to gain freedom from painful past memories and experiences that can cause lingering stress.

"I think the main thing for people to remember is that life is lived out of the heart, not out of the brain," he said. "Wounds we have in our heart and things we experience bend our personalities and hold us hostage, and if we don't deal with those, we're going to continue to have struggle after struggle with the same issues."

Harold McRae, a therapist specializing in psychotherapy and addiction counseling, spoke about ways to identify and deal with post traumatic stress syndrome, an issue

See Stress, C4

Tips for stress-proofing your life:

1. Breathe. When we are stressed, one of our first reactions is to tense our bodies and hold our breath. Spending as little as one minute breathing deeply with your eyes closed can immediately reduce your stress level.

2. Heal past hurts in your life. Many relationship problems stem from issues that were unresolved before the relationship began. Taking time to address them can help ensure these issues don't spill over into your relationship.

3. Eat a healthy diet. An unhealthy diet can exacerbate the effects of stress, which in turn can weaken the immune system, making the body more vulnerable to sickness and less able to handle stress.

4. Educate yourself on how to handle difficult times. Understanding the causes, symptoms and effects of disorders such as PTSD can help eliminate confusion.

5. Avoid turning to harmful behaviors to deal with stress. They can contribute to the development of alcoholism, obesity and drug addiction.

CHILDREN'S DENTAL MONTH

DENTAC offers tips to maintain oral health, reduce tooth decay

DENTAC

Many parents across the country issue a common refrain at dinnertime — You'd better eat that — it's good for you.

There's another favorite in the parental arsenal of dietary admonitions — Don't eat that — it'll rot your teeth!

Children are faced with a bewildering array of food choices — from fresh produce to sugar-laden processed convenience meals and snack foods. What children eat and when they eat it may affect not only their general health but also their oral health.

Americans are consuming foods and drinks high in sugar and starches more often and in larger portions than ever before. It's clear that junk foods and drinks gradually have replaced nutritious beverages and foods for many people.

For example, the average teenage boy in the U.S. consumes 81 gallons of soft drinks each year. Alarmingly, a steady diet of sugary foods and drinks can ruin teeth, especially among those who snack throughout the day.

Common activities may contribute to the tendency toward tooth decay. These include "grazing" habitually on foods with minimal nutritional value, and frequently sipping on sugary drinks.

When sugar is consumed over and over again in large, often hidden amounts, the harmful effect on teeth can be dramatic. Sugar on teeth provides food for bacteria, which produce acid. The acid in turn can eat away the enamel on teeth. Almost all foods have some type of sugar that cannot and should not be eliminated from our diets. Many of these foods contain important nutrients and add enjoyment to eating. But there is a risk for tooth decay from a diet high in sugars and starches.

Starches can be found in everything from bread to pretzels to salad dressing, so read labels and plan carefully for a balanced, nutritious diet for you and your kids.

Reduce your children's risk of tooth decay. Sugary foods and drinks should be consumed with meals. Saliva production Increases during meals and helps neutralize acid production and rinse food particles from the mouth.

Limit between-meal snacks. If kids crave a snack, offer them nutritious foods. If your kids chew gum, make it sugarless. Chewing sugarless gum after eating can increase saliva flow and help wash out food and decay-producing acid.

Monitor beverage consumption — instead of soft drinks all day, children should also choose water and low-fat milk.

Help your children develop good brushing and flossing habits.

Schedule regular dental visits.

Dodge decay, ditch sippy cups

DENTAC

As soon as teeth appear in the mouth, decay can occur. One of the risk factors for early childhood caries (sometimes called baby bottle tooth decay or nursing mouth syndrome) is frequent and prolonged exposure of a baby's teeth to liquids, such as fruit juice, milk or formula, which all contain sugar. Tooth decay can occur when a baby is put to bed with a bottle. Infants should finish their naptime or bedtime bottle before going to bed. Because decay can destroy the teeth of an infant or young child, you should encourage your children to drink from a cup by their first birthday. Many training cups, also called sippy or tippy cups, are available in stores. Many are "no spill" cups, which are essentially baby bottles in disguise. "No spill" cups include a valve beneath the spout to stop spills. However, cups with valves do not allow your child to sip. Instead the child gets liquid by sucking on the cup, much like a baby bottle. This practice defeats the purpose of using a training cup, as it prevents the child from learning to sip. Don't let your child carry the training cup around. Toddlers are often unsteady on their feet. They take an unnecessary risk if they try to walk and drink at the same time. Falling while drinking from a cup has the potential to injure the mouth. A training cup should be used temporarily. Once your child has learned how to sip, the training cup has achieved its purpose. It can and should be set aside when no longer needed.

Tips:

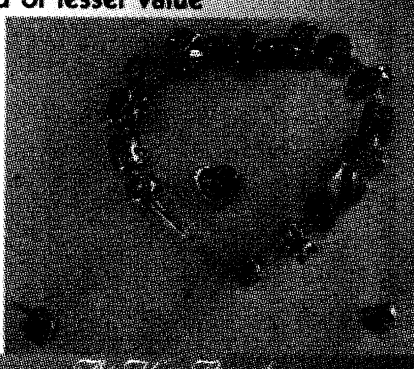

For sipping success, carefully choose and use a training cup. As the first birthday approaches, encourage your child to drink from a cup. As this changeover from baby bottle to training cup takes place, be very careful:

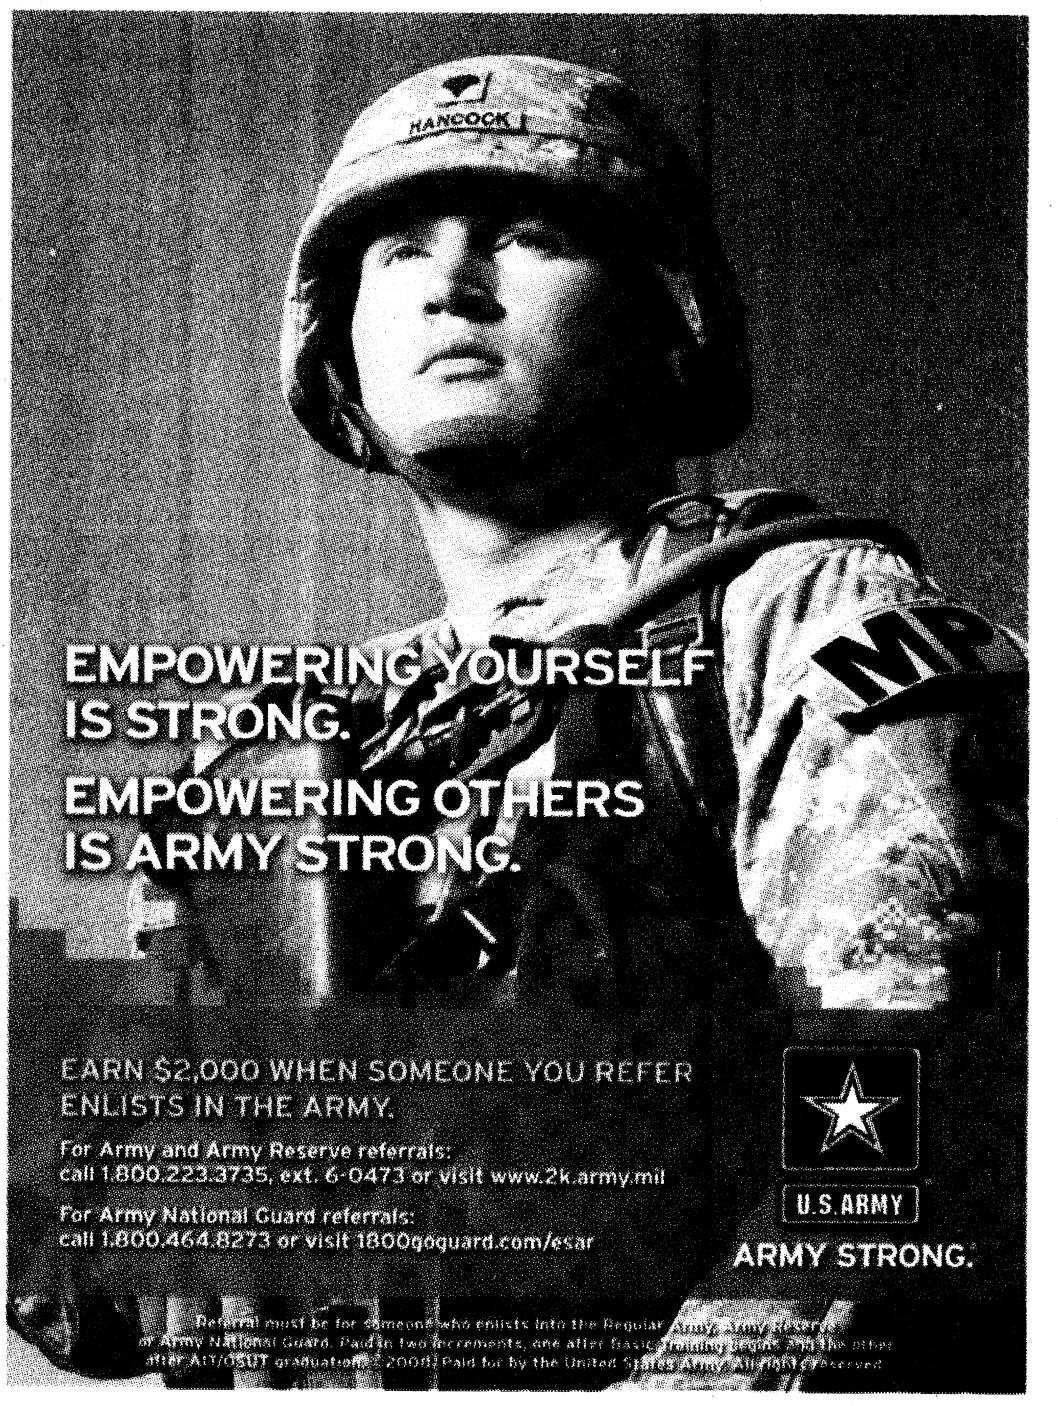

- what kind of training cup you choose
- what goes into the cup
- how frequently your child sips from it
- that your child does not carry the cup around

Talk to your dentist for more information. If your child has not had a dental examination, schedule a "well baby checkup" for his or her teeth. The American Dental Association says that it is beneficial for the first dental visit to occur within six months of the appearance of the first tooth, and no later than the child's first birthday.

Army programs educate to prevent abuse

Family Advocacy, others combine efforts against domestic violence

Jessica Todd
BAYONET CORRESPONDENT

One in four women will experience domestic violence during her lifetime. Out in the public, on any given day, you are bound to be among victims of domestic violence.

Military posts are not immune to the violence. The high-stress nature of the military, including isolation from family and friends, constant relocations and deployments, create a unique situation for a higher risk of violence to occur, said Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy and Sexual Assault Program manager.

There are organizations within the Army trying to educate, prevent, and provide treatment to those affected. The Department of Defense established the Family Advocacy Program in 1984 to be a support program for Soldiers and their families.

"There are two sides to Family Advocacy — prevention and education and treatment," Welch said. "These programs are designed to educate people to prevent potential violence that may otherwise occur."

These programs include violence intervention, a new parent support called First Steps, crisis intervention, safety education for children, as well as many others.

As well as having several options for family members, FAP also provides the required troop and command education for Soldiers. Mandatory training about the dynamics of spouse and child abuse, including information about the services, is provided on an annual basis to all military personnel.

Many women fail to report the abuse because of how it may affect the Soldier's career, Welch said. Victims on post have many options available to them and should seek services and know their available resources. They have the option of restricted and unrestricted reporting. If they elect restricted reporting, only the victim advocate will know about their case and the victim can still receive counseling and medical attention. "There is nothing worse than being in an unhealthy relationship, when you don't have to be," Welch said.

"Not only do victims have the military police on their side, the Soldier's commander can mandate treatment or other solutions," Welch said.

The military police, the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, the Chaplain Family Life Center, and organizations in Columbus work together against domestic violence.

"For it (FAP) to really work, we have to work as one big team, all agencies on post together, forming partnerships to allow us to do more," Welch said.

Not having a job and no way to support a family is a common reason that many women stay in abusive relationships. In response to this, Congress established Transitional Compensation in 1994 to help victims financially after they are separated from the abuser.

"Many women don't have a job, or have the education behind them to be OK after leaving someone they have depended so much on," said Cenneta Gunn, victim and witness liaison at the Office of Staff Judge Advocate.

Payments are made to the victim for themselves and children from the time the help is needed until the time the Soldier had left in the Army is up, Gunn said. The victims are entitled to the same benefits they had while in the Army, for how ever many years the Soldier had left in the service before being separated.

When the abuse is substantiated enough to warrant separation from the military or a court-martial, Gunn is called. She acts as a total support system for the victim, giving any advice and support throughout the court dates, and even well into years later. The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate offers legal advice and aid to victims.

Whether emotional or physical, the devastation of being in an abusive relationship can be too much to handle, Welch said. Fortunately, there are more and more options available for victims of domestic violence.

"With all that there is to offer, there is no reason not to make your situation better," said Welch. "Even though it's a scary situation, it's important for people to know that any one can make it, you just have to want it."

In her 20 years at the Family Advocacy Program, she has been able to set up many partnerships and contracts with the post as well as the women's shelter in Columbus and Phenix City. She is also a co-founder of a Child Abuse and Domestic Violence training conference that focuses on preventing child abuse and domestic violence, which occurs about every two years.

"If we are going to work together, I feel that it is important that we train together," Welch says of the organizations that she works with in her effort to help those affected by Domestic Violence.

In Columbus, Hope Harbour, a women's shelter, in addition to serving six counties, extends their services into Fort Benning.

"We have a very close relationship with the organizations on post; however, we would like to have a more visible presence in the Benning community," said Diane Sinkule, Hope Harbour Executive Director. Many of the clients they work with at Hope Harbour are part of the Fort Benning Community. They also have a contract with the Family Advocacy Program for space in the shelter.

Scouts: Study automotives hands-on

Twelve-year-old Katherine Staudenraus and 13-year-old Adriana Embus laugh as they try to make a tire even before screwing in lug nuts as instructor Michael Grantham watches Jan. 27 at the Fort Benning Automotive Skills Center. The Girl Scouts took 15 hours to earn their Car Sense badge.

new experience to change a tire. I have watched my dad but I had never done it before."

Eleven-year-old Jackie Sandoval said she is going to take what she learned about changing oil and a tire and help her family. Instead of watching her parents change a flat tire, she will help change it.

"Learning about cars is really interesting — I didn't know a car could be so much work," she said.

In addition to changing a flat tire and changing the oil, the girls learned how to check the transmission fluid, check for leaks and how to pop the hood. The girls saw what the underside of a minivan looks like while it was on a lift.

The badge took 15 hours to complete and included researching the cost of cars, gas and insurance and talking with policemen about laws.

"It's important for the girls to be well-rounded in arts, math, science, sports and fitness and even in practical tasks like changing oil and a flat tire — that's the goal of this badge," said Shannon Moon, troop leader.

"It's also a way for them to be self-sufficient."

The car repair knowledge is something the girls can use throughout their lives, said instructor Allen Singleton.

"It's good they are learning it at a young age, so when they start driving, they will be prepared if something goes wrong," Singleton said. "Now that they know how to do maintenance checks, they can check for problems before they become bad problems."

Knowledge is important, Singleton said, because it can also prevent the girls from getting taken advantage of when it comes to cars.

he said is often misunderstood.

"People think it's an emotional problem," he said. "But it's not just an emotional problem, it's a brain problem. It's below the level of thinking. The brain doesn't realize that it's safe to come out of survival mode."

When dealing with a person suffering from PTSD, it's important to realize that the person's symptoms are not his or her fault, McRae said.

"They've numbed themselves out, and their spouses and people around them can turn that into personal issues rather than understanding they're struggling with a stress disorder response," he said. "That's why the education is so important."

PFC Jeremie Smith, with the 199th Infantry Brigade, said he planned on taking what he learned back to Soldiers he works with.

"I want to let them know that there are simple things we can do, like educating ourselves, to get through these things," he said. "We're one Army. When one of us succeeds, all of us succeed. It's important that we share what we learn with other people because we're in the same environment. If one of us doesn't do well because of stress, then that's a reflection on all of us as a whole."

project-based, Holmes said.

"We want more explorative type of learning," said Sherri McKendree, education technologist at Loyd. "The students learn by doing. They use creative thinking instead of just answering questions, making lists and quoting information back. They're having to problem solve."

For example, students at Loyd used a tool available at www.xtranormal.com to make a miniature movie about their New Year's resolutions.

"So if you think about project-based learning, and the students have a goal like identifying their New Year's resolutions, then that project culminates in an Xtranormal video," Holmes said. "But you can see what all that would involve if the child has to come up with the ideas, create a script and decide who's going to input the information. You have students playing different kinds of roles and working in teams."

Similar projects have also been in place at other schools, she said. At Dexter Elementary, students planted an outdoor garden and are collecting data on an interactive spreadsheet. At McBride, they created an online "Wiki space" and are communicating with students in DDESS and around the world.

Although the focus is not on technology, teaching kids the right way to use the Internet and other tools is critical, Holmes said.

Some older students have e-mail accounts, powered by the Gaggle Network, which block spam and can be monitored by teachers and used for project communication.

"It's electronic, and it's the world that these kids live in," Holmes said. "They'll always communicate via the Web, and it's giving them the opportunity to learn to do that appropriately."

"The Web has applications and tools for all age levels," she said.

Students in Katherine Walker's kindergarten class at Loyd made an online cartoon greeting card at www.acapela.tv that they sent as a class to their parents. Walker learned about the Web site from the Lead the Learning team and used it the next day, letting her students work as a group and write their messages before e-mailing parents the card.

"And she started immediately getting responses back from the parents," McKendree said. "They had gone on this site and made a cartoon also and sent it back to the class, and the kids were just thrilled. That was one of the simplest ones, but it excited me because somebody jumped on it."

"It's a start," she said.

If parents have any questions about Lead the Learning, McMullen encourages them to contact the school where their child attends.

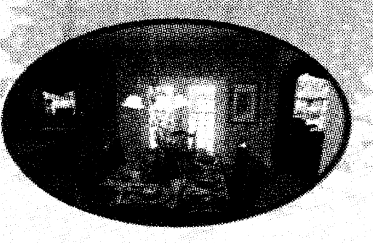

Editor's note: This is the final installment in a two-part series about Lead the Learning.

ASK THE JUDGE

Web site targets Soldiers

Capt. Timothy S. Dean
OFFICE OF THE STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE

Q: A Web site claiming to offer inexpensive computers, laptops and career training in Microsoft Office and Web design is targeting Soldiers. The Web site, www.armyedcenter.com, offers computers preloaded with career training software as a bundle package. The Web site does not have any apparent connection to the Army other than the Web site address. How can this happen?

A: How it works — the online application requires Soldiers to submit personal information and specific military information, including official documentation, such as Leave and Earning Statement, to verify that the buyer is an active or retired Soldier. The product costs approximately $3,500 with the only authorized method of payment by allotment from the Soldier's pay that will be taken out over a two-year period. The Web site claims to help Soldiers repair their bad credit history by issuing them a low cost "student loan."

The company makes money because the computers actually cost around $500 and therefore the company stands to make a profit of approximately $3,000 at the expense of the Soldier. The Soldier has two years to make payments on the computer, which means the Soldier is offered a $500 product and charged an interest rate of approximately 340 percent.

Furthermore, by giving personal information to the company, the Soldiers are vulnerable to other marketing schemes and solicitations because the armyedcenter.com can sell the Soldier's information.

The same marketing tactic has been used by other companies to defraud people into increasing their credit score through the purchase of low-cost computers. Although it has yet to be proven whether www.armyedcenter.com is a legitimate company, it has striking similarities to companies that have been found to defraud customers and have been court ordered to give refunds.

To avoid becoming a target, remember, if a deal is too good to be true then it probably is. If you are unsure as to whether an advertisement is legitimate, make an appointment with a Legal Assistance officer from the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate for help. If you have been a target, do not give out any personal or military information. Delete and ignore all e-mails and advertisements seeking information. If you have already bought the services, make an appointment with a Legal Assistance officer. If you are interested in the career training offered in one of the advertisements, keep in mind that these services are already available to all active Soldiers, retired Soldiers and DA civilians at no cost from Army E-Learning. For the latest program news and information, go to the Army's E-Learning Web page on AKO; http://www.us.army.mil; "My Education" under "Self-Service," then select Army E-Learning Portal Page.

AFAP delegate presents 16 issues to senior leadership

Rob McIlvaine
FMWRC PUBLIC AFFAIRS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Delgates from around the world winnowed down hundreds of suggestions at the 2009 Army Family Action Plan conference to recommend senior leaders address 16 new issues. Of those 16, five were chosen as the most important, and the General Office Steering Committee will begin addressing them during their next meeting.

The top five issues are:

Bereavement Permissive Temporary Duty

A military leave category for bereavement does not exist. Multiple permissive TDY categories exist but none authorizes non-chargeable bereavement leave. Soldiers take chargeable leave or a pass in the event of the death of an immediate family member. Responsibilities associated with the death of a family member may require more time than accrued leave or a pass. Insufficient time for grieving the loss of a family member and administering responsibilities impacts the Soldier and family's ability to mourn and recover from a traumatic loss.

The recommendation sent forward to Army leadership was to establish a permissive TDY category for bereavement.

Official Photographs for Soldiers

Official photographs are not required for all Soldiers. The Army only requires an official DA photograph at certain grade levels. In the event of a Soldier's death, there is no official photograph available to the media that provides a professional head and shoulder view of the Soldier with individual achievements. Personal photos have been used in the media to identify Soldiers, and inappropriate or grainy photos do not accurately reflect the professionalism of the Army or the Soldier. Having an official photograph on file for all Soldiers would ensure Soldiers are portrayed in a dignified and respectful manner.

The recommendation sent to Army leadership is to mandate a professional-quality official or semi-official head and shoulder photograph for all Soldiers.

Secure, Accessible Storage for Soldiers in Barracks

A significant number of Soldiers residing in barracks lack sufficient secure, accessible storage for their Organizational Clothing and Individual Equipment (OCIE) and personal items. The quantity and size of required issue items has increased dramatically because of personal safety items issued for deployments. Though newly constructed billets include accessible storage areas, the vast majority of existing barracks still lack this essential capability. Lack of sufficient secure accessible storage outside the Soldiers' authorized living space negatively affects their quality of life by forcing them to live in overcrowded conditions.

The AFAP delegates recommended to Army leadership that the garrisons provide secure, accessible storage space for Soldiers' OCIE in a location separate from living space.

Shortages of Medical Providers in Military Treatment Facilities

Demand for health care exceeds provider availability in MTFs. The Army's projected growth will increase this demand. Statutes limit salaries, incentives and contracts, limiting the effective recruiting and retention of medical providers. The lack of providers affects timeliness of medical services, and impacts Soldier medical readiness and the health of Family members and retirees.

The recommendations to Army leadership were to expedite staffing of military, civilian, and contracted medical providers to support prioritized needs as identified by the MTF Commander, and to implement new strategies for recruiting and retaining medical providers for MTFs.

Availability of Standardized Respite Care for Wounded Warrior Caregivers

Standardized respite care is not available to all Wounded Warrior caregivers.

The lack of availability exists because of inconsistencies in areas such as: information, reimbursement, policy, personnel and location. Caregivers of Wounded Warriors commonly suffer burn-out and compassion fatigue. A Soldier's ability to sustain activities of daily living is directly associated with the well-being of the caregiver. The lack of availability of standardized respite care for these caregivers jeopardizes the caregiver's stability and negatively affects the recovery of her Soldier.

AFAP delegates forwarded a recommendation to Army leadership to provide uniform availability of standardized respite care to all caregivers of Wounded Warriors.

The Army staff will identify the actions and plans necessary to determine how these issues are resolved, and ensure those actions take place if it can. AFAP issues require an average of three years to resolve.

Many require policy changes at the Department of the Army or Department of Defense level, and some issues require legislative changes in order to come to a resolution.

The GOSC meets two times a year to review the progress and status of current AFAP issues.

Foundation for courageous life has 4 layers

CH (LTC) Lyn Stike
DEPUTY GARRISON CHAPLAIN

In his book, One Crowded Hour, Tim Bowden describes an incident that happened in Borneo during the confrontation between Malaysia and Indonesia back in 1964.

It seems that a group of Gurkhas from Nepal were asked to jump from transport planes into combat against the Indonesians. They could have rejected the request since they lacked training as paratroopers.

Normally, the Gurkhas agreed to anything, but on this occasion they rejected the proposal. But the next day one of their NCOs sought out the British officer who had made the request and said the Gurkhas would be prepared to jump under certain conditions.

They would jump if the land was reasonably marshy and soft, because they were inexperienced in falling. The British officer assured them that the drop zone would almost certainly be over jungle, so that seemed right.

The Gurkhas also wanted the plane to fly as slowly as possible and no more than 100 feet high. The British officer pointed out that the planes always flew slowly when dropping troops, but to jump from 100 feet was impossible because the parachutes wouldn't open in time from that height.

"Oh," the Gurkhas NCO said, "that's all right, then. We'll jump with parachutes anywhere. You didn't mention parachutes before!'"

Physical courage requires us to put aside our doubts and fears and do what is demanded of us. We all face fear when we are threatened; however, the victory goes to those who have developed the capacity to win. The foundation for a courageous life has four layers.

Physical courage requires us to put aside our doubts and fears and perform. We all experience fear when challenged with new tasks. Fear has the ability to freeze us from responding instinctively. If we are to live courageous lives we must develop a firm foundation. This foundation is composed of numerous elements.

The first brick is realistic training and practical experience. Our parents began the process early in our development. They taught us how to ride our first bike. In many cases, this was painful.

We fell down many times until we learned how to keep our balance on the two wheels. It wasn't long until we didn't think about falling and just pedaled our way down the road. In high school we found out that we could stand in the batter's box and face the pitcher even when we weren't sure of his pitching control.

Training exposes us to the reality of the task. The more we practice the more we gain the confidence to overcome the fear that besets us. Parents must be willing to train their children. It demands time, patience and consistency.

The second brick is commitment. Our heart must be in the task set before us. How many times have we watched professional athletes with all the talent and "potential" fail to succeed because their heart wasn't in the game? When Soldiers believe in their mission they give all to the effort. Leaders must communicate the mission in a language that inspires the troops.

Faith cements the bricks together. Faith has been defined as "the substance of things hope for and the evidence of things not seen." When Soldiers take ownership of the mission they believe they can win. They may not have all the answers but they have the confidence that they can overcome the challenges and are willing to sacrifice everything for the cause

Henry Van Dyke once prayed:

"Renew the courage that prevails
The steady faith that never fails
And makes us stand in every fight
Firm as a fortress to defend the right."

May God — who is our fortress — help you stand firm today in upholding the sacred right of human freedom-just as those who have served before us have done.

Accept anger as way to find causes behind arguments

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

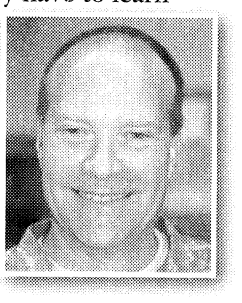

How many times have you tried to talk to your spouse about something and it ended up an all-out war? Was it different when you were dating?

Remember how nice he was — calling all the time, listening to your every whim? Remember how she was —gazing into your eyes, listening to every word you spoke? When you had a disagreement it used to be, "Oh, that's OK; I don't mind." How do you handle your problems, now? I hope with the same love, respect and honor you did when you were dating.

When we date, we suppress our anger for fear the other might get mad and leave. We tend to lose some of that fear once we marry.

If bickering punctuates your days, if arguments escalate until you're both shouting things you'll regret, or if you too often smile through gritted teeth while your stomach is churning, then maybe these few rules will help your marriage.

Before any couple can even begin to solve their problems, they have to learn how to use their anger constructively. Anger is not sin. The Bible says, "Be angry and do not sin." You may recall even Jesus was angry and used his anger constructively. Use your anger to explore the underlying causes of your disagreements, and you'll find ways to address both of your needs.

1. Acknowledge it's OK to be angry. Many people grow up believing it's bad to express negative feelings, but there are times when anger is legitimate. It's not a license to say whatever we want, but it's OK to express the cause of our anger without hurting or saying something damaging to others. When you express your anger in a constructive manner it will strengthen your relationship.

2. Understand it is OK to disagree. I have been married for more than 28 years and believe me, my wife and I still do not agree on everything. But when we disagree, it's not okay to attack each other, cuss, scream or threaten divorce. As individuals, we will have differences which may trigger conflict.

3. Never use sensitive or confidential information as a weapon in an argument. Your spouse has trusted you by sharing such sensitive information. To now turn it into a weapon for your cause will damage the trust your spouse has placed in you. It may also shut down future opportunities of intimate conversation and emotional security.

4. Avoid withdrawal until both can agree on a conclusion. Walking out without a joint conclusion can be very painful and cause future problems. Agree to table the discussion until a later time when you both can talk.

5. Listen with your spouse in mind. Everyone has their own thoughts and feelings. You will lose an uphill battle if you try and argue about your spouse's feelings. Try to hear how your spouse feels. There is no right way to feel. You honor your mate by listening without judging. Listen and let them know you are listening by paraphrasing what you heard, and inquire more about what you don't understand. Make the effort to hear what is troubling your partner and show genuine care for their emotional experience.

Historic Walking Trail more than a walk in park

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Even though Phil the groundhog predicted six more weeks of winter this week, temperatures should soon be warm enough at Fort Benning to make exploring its Historic Walking Trail a walk in the park.

The Fort Benning Historic Walking Trail begins at the former site of the National Infantry Museum and winds through Main Post. Along the way, 29 sites with historic markers tell the history of Fort Benning.

The buildings at the start of the trail were built in 1923 and served as Fort Benning's first hospital. During World War II and the Korean War, the hospital treated wounded veterans, and during the Vietnam War, Soldiers preparing to deploy passed their physical exams there. When Martin Army Community Hospital opened in 1958, the complex became an outpatient clinic, and closed in 1975.

Farther down the trail, the Kashita Town Monument marks the place where a Creek Indian town once stood, and a Chinese arch stands as a reminder of the 15th Infantry Regiment's role in protecting villagers during the 1924 Chinese Civil War.

Head down Lumpkin Road from the Chinese Arch, and you'll see Riverside, the commanding general's home and the only stop on the trail on the National Register of Historic Places.

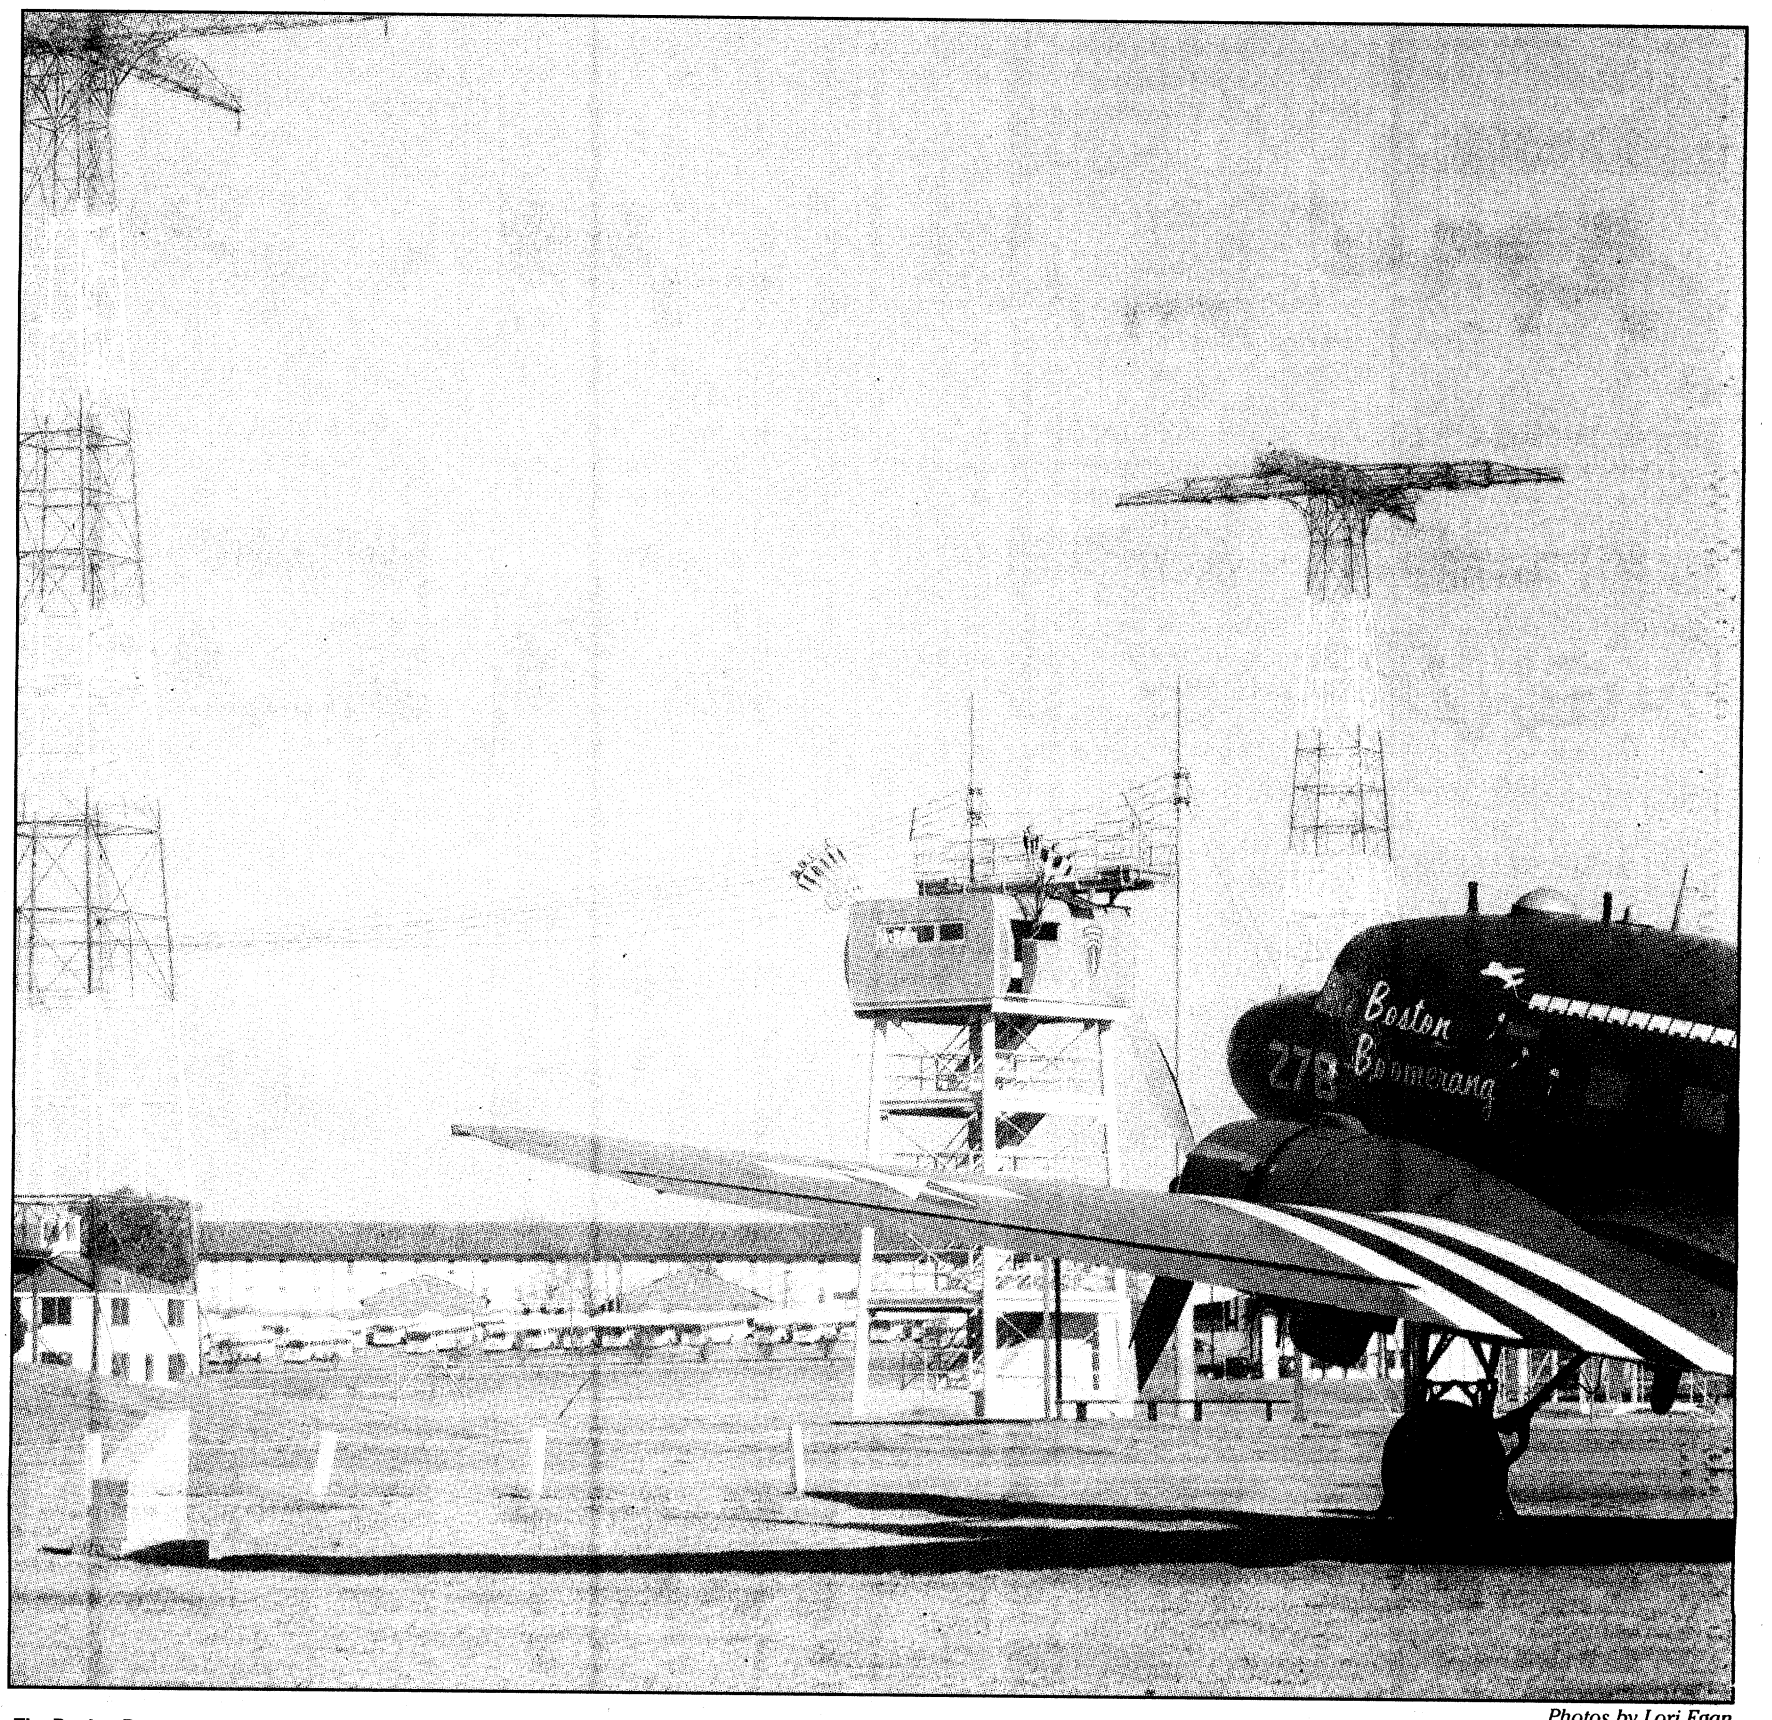

The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, next to Riverside, is one of Fort Benning's oldest buildings. It was built in 1915 and served a creamery when the Busseys owned the property. It was the post headquarters until Building 35 opened in 1934.

One of Fort Benning's most visible landmarks, the Airborne jump towers, were built in 1941 and are part of the Airborne Training Area, another stop along the trail. The Airborne Walk in front of Eubanks Field has 28 monuments dedicated to Airborne units of the past, present and future. A monument bearing the names of the original Airborne test platoon members stands in the center of the walk.

The Ranger Memorial, on Holtz Street, honors the spirit and accomplishments of all U.S.Army Rangers. On its granite walkway, stones engraved with the names of past Rangers provide a way for their memory to live on.

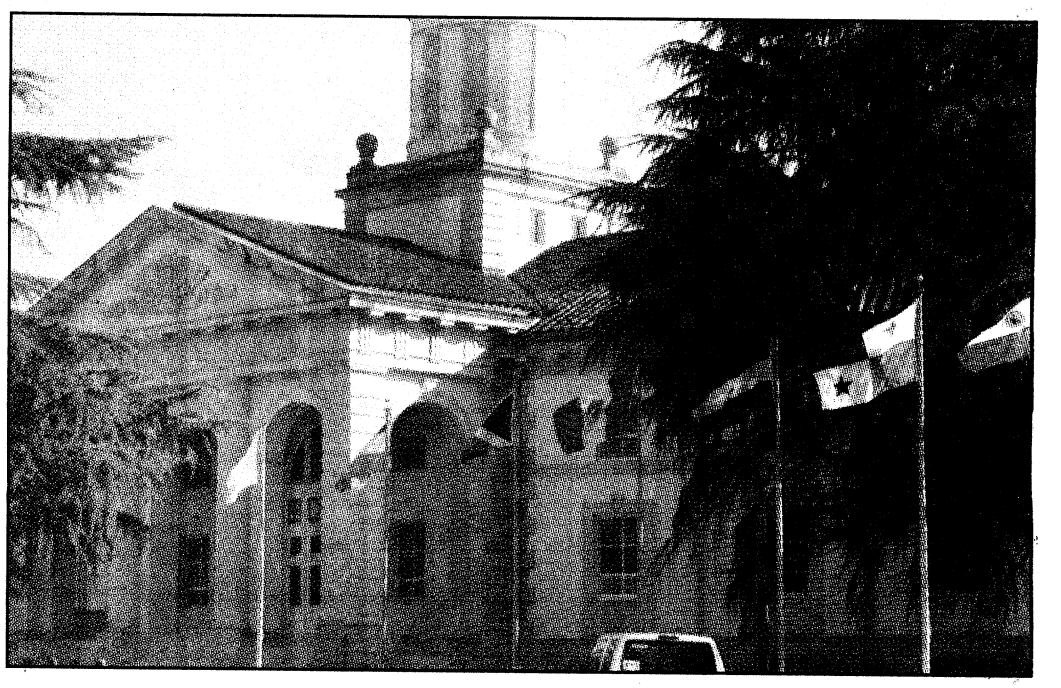

Past Lawson Army Airfield, a marker commemorates the site where Lower Creek Indians operated a ferry across the Chattahoochee River for several years in the late 1820s. It was the site of the first Army floating bridge and is still used for floating bridge training today.

For more information, call the Infantry Museum at 706-545-2958.

Photos by Lori Egan

The Boston Boomerang, a restored fighter plane, is on display at the Airborne Training Area. The training area is one of 29 sites along the Fort Benning Historic Walking Trail, which begins at the former site of the National Infantry Museum and ends near Lawson Army Airfield. Historical markers tell visitors the role of each site in Fort Benning's history, and include sites dating from the first half of the 19th century.

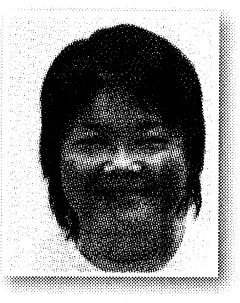

Ridgway Hall, also known as Building 35, is No. 8 on Fort Benning's Historic Trails. Built in 1935 for approximately $500,000, it served as the Infantry School and headquarters building until 1964 when the current Infantry Hall opened. Ridgway Hall will house the Infantry Center command group and various staff offices when Building 4 undergoes renovation to become the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

'Good food, cheap' at Burt's Butcher Shoppe and Eatery

Elsie Jackson
USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

In 25 words or less, there ain't nothing fancy about the place.

For starters, to get to the "dining room" you have to walk around customers clustered at the meat case in the butcher shop. And if the wind is blowing right, you can tell what's cooking in the smoker without having to ask.

But if you aren't above straightforward cooking at a place that's a candidate for "Diners, Drive-ins and Dives" visit Burt's Butcher Shoppe and Eatery at 2932 Warm Springs Road, near where it intersects East Lindsey Drive, spittin' distance from Peachtree Mall.

Steaks, chops (it is part of a butcher shop, after all), and chicken lead the menu. Leave your vegan friends at home. Burt's serves meat, grilled or fried, sometimes smothered in gravy (like the hamburger steak) or barbecued.

Don't overlook the daily special. One favorite is the chicken kabob, strung with chunks of chicken breast, fresh slices of onion and bell pepper and broiled. I had it one day, served with two sides and a slab of Texas toast and it set me back $6.

I had a little salad as one of my two side dishes, but chose fried pickles for the second to balance out the healthy salad. Served straight from the fryer with ranch dressing they were crunchy and savory. And with apologies to my future cardiologist, I enjoyed them way more than I did the salad. And doc? The fried green tomatoes at Burt's are delicious too.

I've also had the beef kabob there. And don't say I didn't warn you. If you think "rare" is grilled on the outside and practically raw on the inside then you, Burt's cook and I see eye to eye. The beef kabob special is light years better than the rather ordinary beef tips on rice. Served on a bed of overcooked rice, the watery gravy's "secret" (and only) ingredient is almost too much of a popular onion soup mix.

And just another reason to stick with the sandwiches and cooked-to-order grilled and fried meals. I've heard enough about the Blackhawk wings that I'll be trying them next.

Burt's portions are generous and their prices affordable. Sandwiches (no sides) are $2.50 to $6. A full lunch with two sides will cost you $5 to $10. Dinners are a little higher, but still an affordable $5 to $15.

Make no mistake about it — the meals at Burt's feature meat. The food is basic, cooked to order and delivered to you by a wait staff that knows everybody's name (as long as you answer to "honey," "sweetie" or "dear"). You can have a real meal here for about what you'd spend at a fast food place. And yes, I have had better steaks, but not at Burt's prices.

So there you have it. No tablecloths, no candles, no fine china. The lighting is subdued if you are sitting under a fixture with a blown bulb or someone has forgotten to flip a switch. Meals are served on plates that may or may not match, augmented with Styrofoam cups and it's all set on furniture recycled from two or three diners.

"Pristine" is not at the top of the list of descriptors I would use for Burt's. At the top would be "good food, cheap," "can't beat the prices" and "leave your vegan friends at home."

Burt's is open Tuesday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. For more information, call 706-653-0677.

OPENING TODAY

HE'S JUST NOT THAT INTO YOU

A group of 20- and 30-somethings in Baltimore navigate their various relationships. Gigi searches for a man who will call when he says he will, but Alex advises her to stop sitting by the phone. Beth wants to get married and wonders if she should call it off with her longtime boyfriend Neil, who sees nothing wrong with their unmarried life. Janine is unsure whether she can trust her husband, Ben, who can't trust himself around Anna. Anna, meanwhile, can't decide between a married man and Conor, who can't get over the fact that he can't have her. And Mary, who has found a whole network of loving, supportive men, just needs to find one who's straight.

He's Just Not That Into You stars Drew Barrymore, Jennifer Anniston, Scarlett Johansson, Ben Affleck and Jennifer Connelly. It's rated PG-13 for language and sexual content.

CORALINE

When 11-year-old Coraline Jones moves from Michigan to Oregon with her parents, she becomes convinced that her new home can provide nothing to interest her. With her parents distracted by work, she explores her house and finds a secret passageway that leads to an alternate version of her life.

At first, her parallel reality seems like a much better version of her real life. But when her visit turns dangerous, Coraline must use all of her determination and bravery to get back home and save her family.

Coraline features the voices of Dakota Fanning, Teri Hatcher, Dawn French and Jennifer Saunders. It is rated PG for thematic elements, images, language and humor.

THE PINK PANTHER 2

Bumbling detective Inspector Clouseau is sent on a vacation to France by Chief Inspector Charles Dryfus, only to discover the vacation was a plot to make him leave the country. Benning renews family covenant

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Post leaders renewed their commitment to supporting families during the Army Family Covenant Re-Signing ceremony at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Jan. 23.

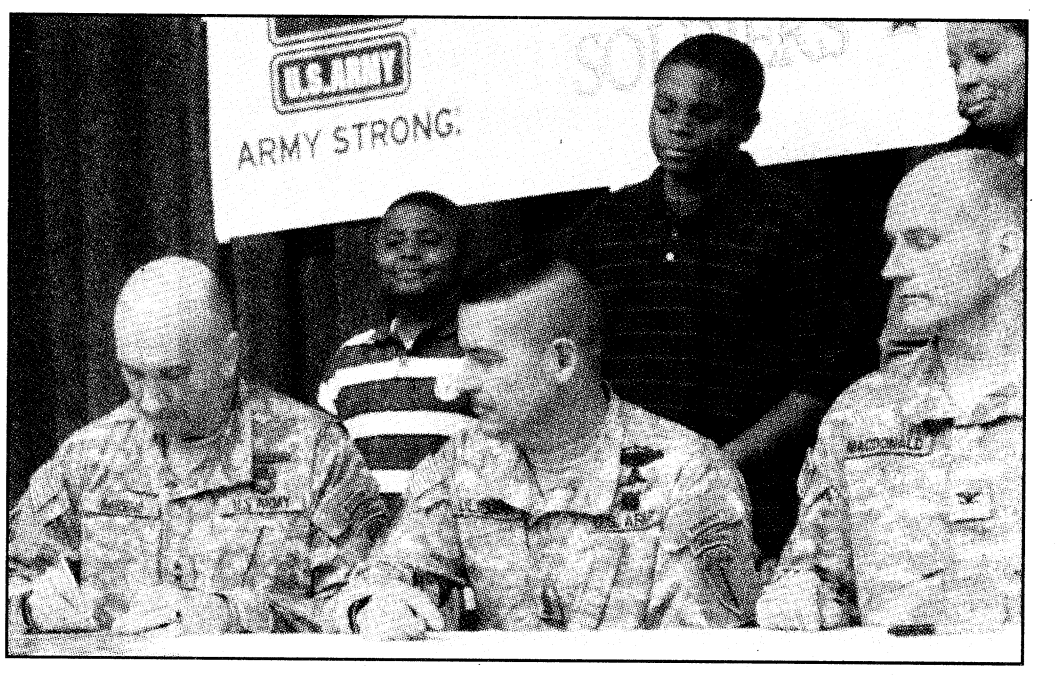

"The debt our nation owes our military families can never be fully repaid," said Commanding General MG Michael Barbero. "However, the Army Family Covenant is at least a small down payment toward that goal."

The covenant, which was established in 2007, outlines the Army's recognition of the sacrifices Army families make, its commitment to providing Soldiers and families with a high quality of life, a supportive environment, and to building a partnership with them, and its commitment to improving family readiness.

At Fort Benning, the covenant's effects are visible through increased support and funding of child care and Army Community Service programs, said COL Thomas Macdonald, garrison commander.

"The list of benefits made possible because of the Army Family Covenant goes on and on, but I assure you, this is only the Dempsey, Training and Doctrine commander, addresses Soldiers with A Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Wednesday during a break from advanced rifle marksmanship training on Malone 7. This was Dempsey's first visit to Fort Benning since he took command Dec. 8. While here, Dempsey viewed Maneuver Center of Excellence and BRAC construction projects, observed Soldiers with 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, conduct urban operations training at Cashe Town, observed IBOLC students conduct a live fire exercise, visited the Ranger Training Brigade and met with captains in the Maneuver Captains Career Course.

Military ready to send troops, Gates

Jim Garamone
AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

Afghanistan poses the greatest military challenge to the United States today, and President Barack Obama has made that country a top priority for the Defense Department, Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates told the Senate Armed Services Committee Tuesday.

With an improving situation in Iraq, the U.S. military is in a position to address Army Gen. David D. McKiernan's stated requirements for additional troops, Gates said. McKiernan is the commander of NATO's International Security Assistance Force and U.S. Forces Afghanistan.

If Obama decides to send additional troops to the country, "we could have two of those brigades there probably by late spring, and potentially a third by mid-summer," Gates said.

Soldiers from the 10th Mountain Division's 3rd Brigade Combat Team were rerouted from Iraq to Afghanistan in the fall, and are taking up positions in eastern Afghanistan.

Editor's note: Sgt. Amber Robinson, 10th Mountain Division's 3rd Brigade Combat Team public affairs office, contributed to this article.

Family tradition continues with OSUT graduation

SPC Robert S. Hunter, E Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, joined his family's tradition of service to the United States when he graduated one station unit training Jan. 16. On hand to share the occasion were Hunter's father, Duncan L. Hunter, a former California Congressman and Airborne Ranger, and Hunter's brother, Duncan D. Hunter, a current California Congressman and Marine Reservist. Robert's father was also the graduation's guest speaker.

Robert, whose grandfather served in WWII with the Marine Corps, said the day's events represented the fulfillment of a sense of duty and an obligation to carry on a family tradition.

"My dad and my brother were a pretty big influence on me to join," he said. "I definitely felt like I needed to serve my country and keep the military tradition going in the family."

It wasn't the first time a Hunter family son carried on a tradition established

Post officials break ground for new reception station

On a hill already cleared of Georgia pines and bulldozers pushing and piling the red clay dirt into mounds, post officials had the official groundbreaking ceremony for the 30th Adjutant General Battalion's new headquarters and reception station Jan. 21.

Part of Fort Benning's transformation to the Maneuver Center of Excellence, the 199,000-square-foot reception building will be the first stop for the expected 42,000 initial entry Soldiers who will train here annually, including Armor and Cavalry Soldiers, when it opens in 2011. OPINION

Before you go any further you need to back up

Michelle L. Gordon
USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

When was the last time you bought film or had to pay for pictures of people with their eyes closed? I'm sure it's been awhile. For me it's been about six years. My first digital camera was 1.3 megapixels and it took terrible pictures, at least by today's standards, but at the time I thought it was great. I was fascinated with downloading my own photos and actually choosing which ones I wanted to print. No longer did I have to pay for pictures that were too dark or unflattering. Now I could take out red-eye and crop as needed.

However, the ease of digital photography became a problem for me because as time went on, I found myself actually printing fewer and fewer pictures. Now it's a rarity for me to order prints. I know I need to do so, but the motivation is gone. With film you have to print the photos to see how they turn out, but now I can immediately see the images on my camera and manipulate them on my computer so I tend to procrastinate on the printing.

These days, if you want to see recent pictures of my daughter I'll reach for my computer rather than our family album or I'll hand you my camera and let you scroll through them, too easy. In fact, I didn't print pictures for almost a year, but after constant nagging from my husband, I sent more than 600 pictures to be developed in September. Good thing he was persistent, because my hard drive crashed last weekend.

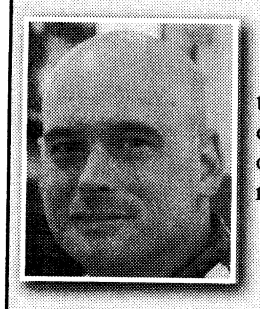

I knew it wasn't good when I couldn't start the computer in safe mode. I took it to a local computer store, and after spending all day trying to extract information, they called to tell me I could pick up my "paper weight." My heart sank. All of my pictures were gone. Sure I had an external hard drive, but I rarely used it. I hadn't plugged it into the computer in nearly five months. The guy at the computer store took pity on me and said he had one more program he could try, but he couldn't promise anything. After two days of crossed fingers and prayer I got a call saying everything was recovered. The program found all of my information and he had placed it, along with a new hard drive, in my laptop.

I feel pretty fortunate that my story had a happy ending, and the lesson I learned is far more valuable than the $235 I paid for computer service.

Technology is awesome, but it does fail, so if you truly want to preserve your memories forever you need to back up … and print.

VARIOUS VOICES

What is the most important computer file you've ever lost?

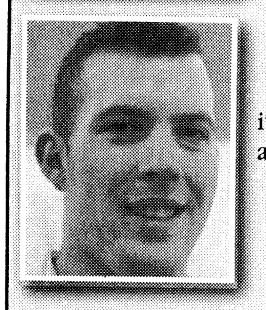

I've lost my counseling statements due to the fact that we cannot use our thumb drives on post anymore. Now I've got to pull them off the Web sites to download them again, and manually enter all the information.

— SGT Kevin Clay, 11th Engineer Battalion

I lost the personal data of about 30 Soldiers. The whole system crashed and I wasn't able to recover it from the computer, but I had backed it up.

— SFC Flournoy Perry, HHC USAIC

I lost a 12-page paper in college. I didn't save it before my computer shut off on me. It took a good five or six hours to redo it.

— 2LT Michael Marano, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

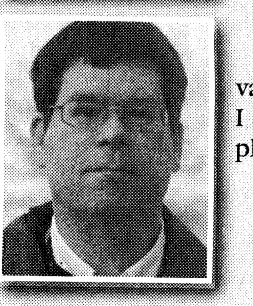

All of our baby photos were on an external hard drive and the power supply went bad. We're working with the manufacturer right now to retrieve them.

— 2LT Jeffrey Scott Doyle, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

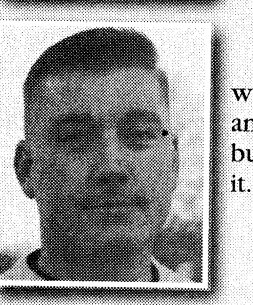

(I lost) the data on the Soldier Readiness Processing for Soldiers' eyeglasses. They were deploying and needed glasses before they deployed.

— Cristina Ramirez, Fort Benning Optical Lab

(I lost) travel photos that I had saved from various trips. When I was assigned to NATO, I was traveling a lot in Europe. Some of the photos were still on my camera.

— LTC(R) John Campbell, Directorate of Logistics

Probably my graduate school thesis that wasn't backed up onto an external hard drive and was erased. Fortunately, I had a paper copy, but it was a lot of typing to sit down and redo it.

— Capt. Charles Anklam, Marine Detachment

Fear of needles doesn't matter when it comes to helping Soldiers

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

When I say I hate needles, I'm not exaggerating. The last time I gave blood, the technician stuck me with a needle in the right arm and nothing came out. She moved to the left arm and I passed out.

A technician and a doctor helped me to a bed. The result of this experience was two small vials of blood used for tests.

Although my experience with giving blood has not been stellar, when I saw the sign in Infantry Hall that read donate blood today — with an arrow pointing down the hall — I had to give. Sponsored by the Armed Forces Blood Program, the blood is shipped overseas and used to treat wounded Soldiers. It's also used at hospitals, including Martin Army Hospital and Walter Reed Medical Center.

I want to help Soldiers because they protect our nation's freedoms and sacrifice so much for the country. If a pint of blood is a way to help, I am willing to do it.

I realized my fear of needles doesn't matter. If the technicians have to squeeze the blood from my limp body to get a pint of it, it doesn't matter. What does matter is that I am helping those who need blood, including wounded Soldiers. The next time I can donate blood is March 19. I guarantee I will be donating again.

2009 is the Year of the NCO

David W. Kuhns Sr.
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

It's harder to list the qualities of a good noncommissioned officer than you might think. But everyone who has been in the Army can name NCOs they think are great.

NCOs are the leaders who most directly affect our lives in uniform. Whether you are a commissioned officer looking back on a platoon sergeant, first sergeant or command sergeant major who served as a guide, right hand or confessor; or you are an NCO yourself, looking back at the sergeants who kicked you when you needed it, steered you when they could, taught you the right way to do it, and finally turned you loose to do it all yourself, Army careers are often shaped by the NCOs met along the way.

I spent 24 years in uniform. But two NCOs stand out for the influence they had on my own development. They were as different as night and day in many ways, but shared the values of true professionals.

SFC Johnny Hughes was my first section chief. My initial assignment in the Army was at Fort Wainwright, Alaska, in the fire direction and control section of the only artillery battery on the post.

SFC Hughes taught me to be a Soldier. He was a quiet, soft-spoken guy — about as far as you could get from the yelling, swearing, tobacco-chewing NCO the movies had taught me to expect.

But, without all the bluster and noise, SFC Hughes demanded and got the best out of every Soldier in the section.

He knew everything we did — right and wrong — and praised or corrected on the spot. And he could do anything. Whether it was showing us how to set a rabbit snare in the snowy woods with strands of commo wire, or a shortcut to computing meteorological corrections for the guns, Hughes did everything better, faster, smarter and easier than any of us thought was possible.

If there was one lesson I took from him, it was that good NCOs have to be the absolute masters of everything their troops are asked to do.

After I left the Artillery as a young sergeant, I was assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division headquarters. There I met CSM Douglas B. Hayes, the division's top NCO.

His face will always come to mind when I think of great NCOs.

CSM Hayes was not a young man. But, on the wrong side of 50, he was still one of the toughest Soldiers in the division — "hard as woodpecker lips," as one of my friends would say.

CSM Hayes ran with a different line unit every morning. He then spent the day visiting training, wandering through motor pools, stopping by mess halls … He was everywhere.

The general commanded the division, but there was no doubt who the face of the command team was. Hayes might not have met every Soldier in the 1st Cav., but I bet he came pretty close. Everyone knew who he was.

There was nothing mild-mannered about CSM Hayes. I overheard him provide some pretty colorful "guidance" to individuals who failed to perform to the standards the commanding general set. But I also saw him spend hours of his own time fixing problems for individual Soldiers when he learned their battalion command sergeants major had run into obstacles they couldn't surmount.

For all his gruff exterior and intimidating aura, CSM Doug Hayes taught me that the needs of every single Soldier are important to the performance of even the largest units.

There are lots of other Johnny Hughes and Doug Hayes NCOs in uniform today. They are the ones who set the pace, enforce the standards, get the mission done and do everything to ensure no Soldier is left behind. It may be hard to list what makes them great — but we know them when we see them.

George said repeating the drill was key. "When they get into an actual conflict, then they've been through it so much that their bodies will eventually start moving. It becomes like a sixth sense to them," he said.

Outcome-based training helps Soldiers become 'adaptive thinkers'

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Outcome-based training began last year on Sand Hill when Army leadership developed five outcomes they wanted to see in every basic training Soldier: a self-disciplined, adaptive thinker able to solve problems; a confident, accountable, mentally agile Soldier; a proud, committed team member who lives the Warrior Ethos; a master of critical combat skills; and a Soldier physically, mentally, spiritually and emotionally ready to fight.

"This is what we want a Soldier to be," said CPT Edward Boland, operations officer for 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, 192nd Infantry Brigade.

"In current conflicts, leadership happens at all levels," he said. "There are no more enemy lines. Anyone can be in a situation without their leadership. The basic Soldier on the battlefield has to think about his actions much more and consider their repercussions. You have to have an agile thinker who can think of more ways to complete the mission, considering the local populace and the rules of engagement."

Outcome-based training was in practice this week on Sand Hill for 210 Soldiers in C Company, 2nd Bn., 47th Inf. Regt. The basic trainees worked on buddy team tactics Monday and Tuesday on Malone 3.

All five outcomes in this type of training lead to the same goal of having a more adaptable Soldier, said CPT Curtis Minor, the company commander.

For the buddy team tactics exercise, the Soldiers were not told where to take cover, only to advance down the lane. After making their decisions, they had to be able to explain their choices.

"It's a different fight, so we need different Soldiers," Minor said. "The contemporary operating environment is very fluid. You have to be on your toes to see things like IEDs. Even at the lowest level, Soldiers are making huge decisions. We're teaching them to be thinkers, willing to make good decisions and not be told every move to make."

This exercise is the first time the Soldiers, slated to graduate Feb. 26, have had to maneuver and shoot at the same time, Minor said. Working together, one of the six outcomes, is critical, because one team must offer cover while the other advances.

PV2 Brian Hiers said he learned not only how to work as a team but also to trust his teammates and leaders.

"It's a new experience, so you can't avoid being a little scared," he said. "You're a little nervous at first. You get a little shaky. You depend on the person in front of you, kind of following their lead. But there are instructors out here who have a lot of experience, so that helps to calm us down a lot. The training builds confidence in us as well."

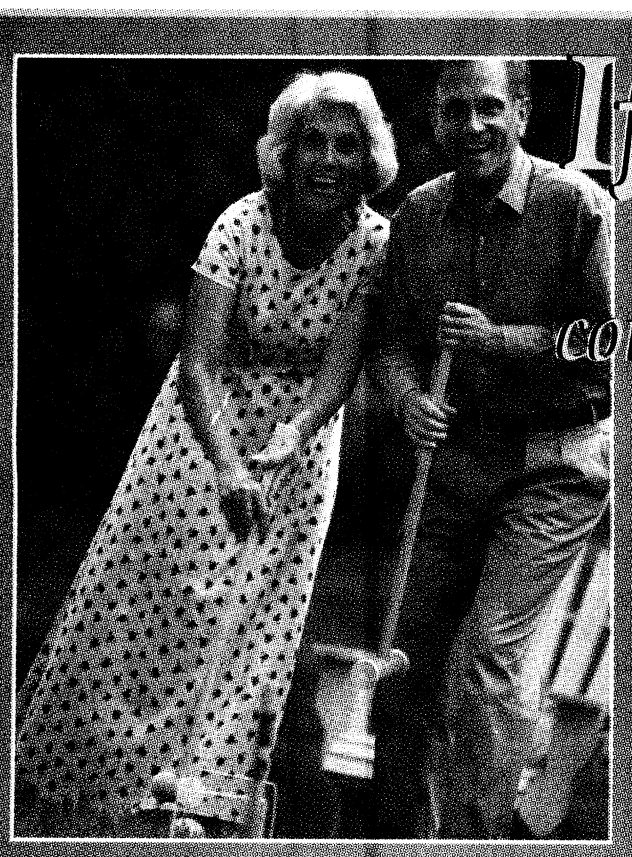

Hiers said he feels better prepared for his next exercise and future combat situations.

That's the goal of the training, Minor said, to help Soldiers be ready to deploy and be successful in combat.

"We're not building robots," he said. "We're building adaptive thinkers. We teach them to shoot, move, communicate and medicate. We reinforce those every week, because it's something they have to be ready to do. They could deploy within 90 days."

For PFC Nicholas Laughlin, the reinforcement and repetition has been helpful.

"These types of exercises turn us into thinking Soldiers," he said. "(It) becomes muscle memory. Then we can think about tactics, how to move, where to move. We can focus on the objective."

"Every Soldier, whether deploying or not, should attend training like this. You don't have rollover accidents only in theater. There have been people unfortunately killed in training accidents because of rollovers. I would suggest that everybody go through this type of training at least once."

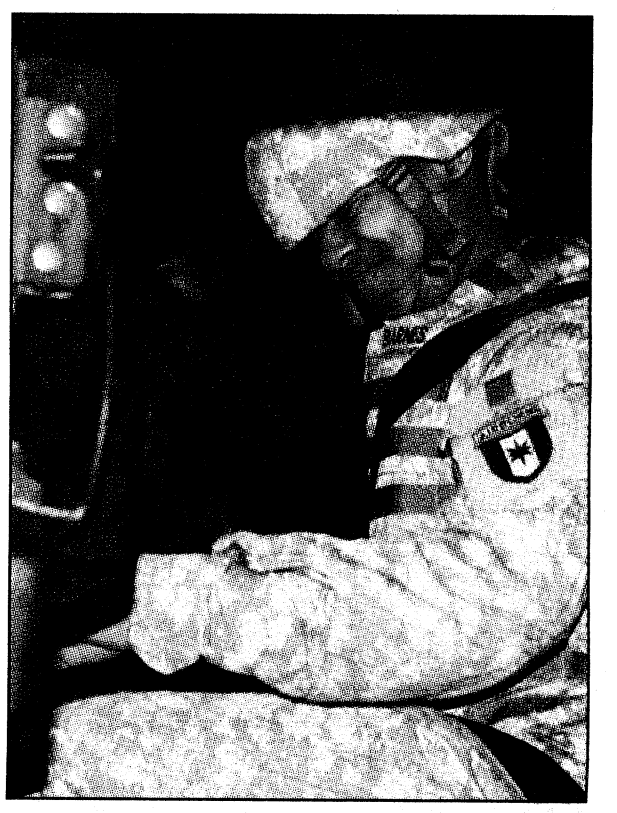

— SGT James Staley, 14th CSH instructor

SGT James Staley, an instructor with the 14th CSH, lifts PFC Ricky Barnes, 14th CSH, out of an upside down simulation vehicle Wednesday. The training helps Soldiers have confidence in themselves and their safety equipment, said Staley, who has participated in several rollover simulations.

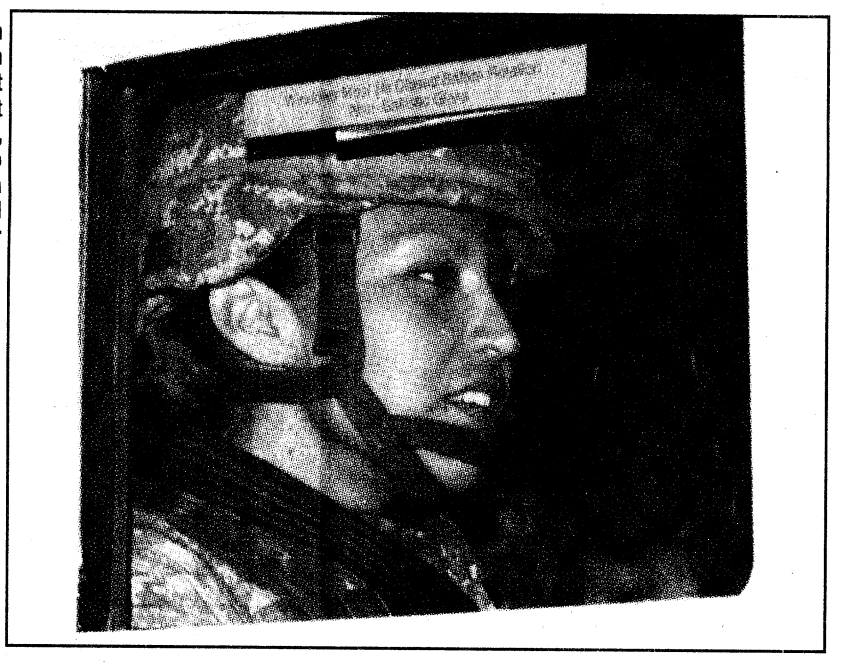

SGT Christopher King talks to the Soldiers inside the vehicle as he watches them on a screen. Instructors and onlookers could see and hear everything that went on inside the vehicles.

PFC Ricky Barnes struggles to shut the humvee's door firmly after securing his safety belt. The doors are heavy, said SPC Laura Peck, who had never been in a vehicle with "hard doors" until the training exercise Wednesday.

14th CSH completes rollover simulation training

SSG Davina White, 14th Combat Support Hospital, prepares to undergo a simulated rollover during training Wednesday on Harmony Church.

SPC Monica Doberson secures the gunner's restraining system before participating in a rollover.

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

More than 200 Soldiers in the 14th Combat Support Hospital will complete rollover training this week. Through the use of simulation machines, the training imitates a humvee rollover accident on both dry land and in water.

"What they are going to learn from this is to be familiar with the feeling of a rollover," said SSG Eliezer Silva, an instructor with 14th CSH. "It is not to take the fear out of them, but it is to prepare them in the future to be deployed. As medics, they might go on convoys, so we need to have everybody trained up to the same speed."

From outside the machines, instructors could hear and see everything that the five people inside went through as the humvee tilted, rocked and spun a full 360 degrees.

The experience was "completely disorienting," said SPC Laura Peck, who had never been through a rollover simulation before.

"The way you view things is distorted. It's kind of scary," she said. "When I went over, I sort of did a summersault (to) face my seat. ... Then I turned thinking the door handle would be on my right side when it was on my left.

"Your equilibrium is turned around. Things go through your mind — 'Is my seat belt going to hold me? Am I going to come crashing up into the ceiling?' You have to think about your surroundings. You have to orientate yourself right after you take that seat belt off."

Peck said she is better prepared for "the unexpected" surprise of a rollover after the exercise.

"I feel confident that they know what to do," Silva said. "(This training) builds that confidence to let them know, 'I can handle this. If I do come into this situation, I'll be able to control myself and get out of it alive.'

"It's all about preparation for deployment. The more the Soldiers know of this, the better the team will work as a unit. If everybody knows what to do as a whole, they can get it down and save more lives. They work as a team in there."

During the training, Soldiers learned to notify other passengers of the rollover and a door opening by shouting the words "rollover" and "door."

After disengaging the locks and attempting to open their own doors, Soldiers exit through the nearest open door.

PFC Ricky Barnes couldn't open his door the first time, but he "got out all right" in spite of it.

"I probably wasn't applying enough pressure to the combat lock. Upside down, it's completely different," he said. "I couldn't just pull down; I had to push up. My knees were on my chest. I couldn't actually push as hard as I wanted to. The second time, I figured it out and I pushed harder and I got out my door."

Staying calm through the entire process can be difficult, said Barnes, who got his foot stuck the second time around, but everyone should know what to do in a rollover situation, regardless of military occupation specialty.

"You're all trained to do the same thing and that's to serve your country," he said. "You could be a cook and still have to be a gunner somewhere. And if you're the gunner, you're going to roll over some time — hopefully not, but if you do it's better to be trained beforehand than getting it there in combat. Now that we have the training, we all know what we have to do. Simulated or not, this is as real as you're going to get."

Covenant: 'Means a lot to me'

beginning," he said.

For many Fort Benning family members attending the ceremony, the covenant represents the continuation of a promise.

"The covenant means a lot to me," Bernice Huell said. "My husband's been in the military for 29 years, so being a part of the community and the services they offer has been a real enhancement to my family."

Cissy Romo, who attended her first covenant ceremony, said she was impressed with what she saw and heard.

"We just arrived here from Fort Bliss about three weeks ago, and so I haven't really gone out yet to see a lot of stuff," she said. "But there's a lot of resources out there, and that's something new because a lot of installations don't have that."

One key way families can support each other during deployments and difficult times is through strong communication, said Shannon Beck, marketing director for the Directorate of Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"It's very important for them to stay connected with people that are in the same situation," she said. "The family readiness groups are great sources for inspiration and support and information."

Al Gelineau, director of FMWR, encourages family members to take advantage of its programs.

"We provide a lot of Saturday respite care where moms can go when their husbands are deployed ... they can go out and get a break from the kids," he said. "There are a host of other programs as well as recreation like golf, bowling and fitness that can help reduce the stress that families have.

"It all revolves around retention and readiness, and I think the Army understands that the way to keep Soldiers in the Army is to satisfy the families."

Hunter family: Continues with service by an earlier generation. When Robert's father, Duncan L. Hunter, retired from Congress in 2008 after serving 14 consecutive terms as representative of California's 52nd Congressional District, Robert's brother, Duncan D. Hunter, was elected to fill the seat.

For Duncan D. Hunter, seeing his younger brother graduate OSUT brought a tradition full circle.

"My father came through here 40 years ago, and now my little brother is here," he said. "I was surprised he didn't join the Marine Corps, but I was happy. I'm just honored to have him serve in the Army."

For Duncan L. Hunter, his son's graduation was an opportunity to revisit the post where he received his commission through Officer Candidate School 40 years earlier.

"It's great to be here with my sons," he said. "I had a great time when I was at Fort Benning, and it's kind of nostalgic to come back. It's bringing back wonderful memories."

One of the reasons Robert chose the Army as a way to serve his country was to have the opportunity to serve in the same capacity as his father, he said.

"My dad was an Airborne Ranger, and I want to follow in his footsteps," he said.

Robert's follow-on assignment at Airborne School will give him an opportunity to begin following his father's training. Robert said he is looking forward to deploying in the future.

"Just serving my country, that's my main goal," he said.

Project: Will 'influence American Soldier'

said COL Michael Coss, 192nd Infantry Brigade commander.

Now, about 30,000 basic combat and one unit station training Soldiers process through Johnston Hall annually.

Johnston Hall is named for Medal of Honor recipient Spc. Donald Johnston, who was killed in action during the Vietnam War and is buried in the Fort Benning Cemetery.

For more than 25 years, Johnston Hall has served as Fort Benning's first impression for more than 800,000 Soldiers whose pork chop sideburns, Afros, mullets and goatees had their last hurrah, said LTC Neal McIntyre, the battalion's commander. It is where recruits get ID cards, uniforms and haircuts.

Once the project reaches mission complete, McIntyre said, the Soldiers will have two new barracks, a rubberized all-weather track to conduct daily physical training and a 75,000 square-foot dining facility.

The $51 million project is more than just bricks and mortar, said George Condoyiannis, area engineer with the Army Corps of Engineers. The finished project will directly influence the American Soldier.

BOLC II cadre take part in squad maneuver live fire

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Basic Officer Leader Course II instructors conducted a series of squad maneuver live fires last week as part of the Instructor Certification Program, an annual responsibility for the cadre in 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

"Our next cycle, we're going to start demonstrating squad live fires. We never used to do that," said CPT Evan Isaac, who acted as squad leader during a live fire Jan. 23. "We just taught them how to do it, and they ran through it on their own. Now, we're going to demonstrate to every class that comes through; we're going to show them the proper way to do it, what it should look like, and that's why we're out here to do this training."

Isaac said the training let them learn new techniques while reinforcing key concepts like the need to fight a fight and not a plan.

"You're going to come up with a plan and you're going to spend lots of time on it," he said. "It's going to be detailed ... cover a whole bunch of contingencies. But as soon as you leave your base, something happens to change the plan every time. You have to be able to react to your environment."

CSM Michael Ferrusi, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., command sergeant major, emphasized the importance of fighting the fight, team leader responsibility and initiative during the after-action review. The instruction is critical, he said, because the proficiency of the cadre directly corresponds to the competency of their students.

"Having the right cadre who are physically and mentally fit and are proficient at the warrior tasks and battle drills is important," Ferrusi said. "Future company battalion, brigade, division commanders — half of all Army officers — come through our doors. The other half go through our sister battalion (1st Battalion, 22nd Field Artillery) at Fort Sill, Okla.

"So we see half of all the future leaders of the Army. The quality of the cadre and the leaders we have here has to be commensurate with the experience level that is required to ensure success for the future of the Army."

To show the instructors how to conduct a live fire, battalion leadership led a demonstration Jan. 22 on Griswold Range.

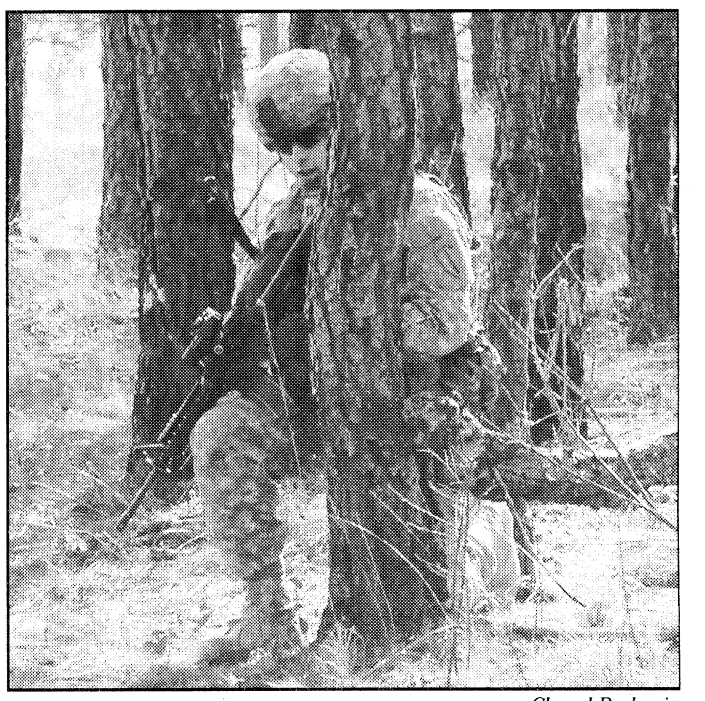

"This is a bread-and-butter Infantry battle drill that we train our students in as part of the certification program," said LTC David Bottcher, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. commander. "We are building the foundation for our cadre across all their experience levels, so they can execute this confidently (and) proficiently."

This is the first time the battalion instructors have completed a certification program of this depth and magnitude, said Bottcher, who developed the program with Ferrusi in response to a need they saw in the battalion.

"We teach all 17 branches of lieutenants — over 50 percent are non-combat arms," Bottcher said. "The cadre need to be interchangeable, regardless of gender, military occupation specialty or branch."

The training was helpful, said SSG Billy Hendrix, D Company, who hadn't completed a squad maneuver live fire in more than three years.

The last ICP he went through was more about "touching bases" to get everyone on the same page, Hendrix said. This ICP is more in-depth, focused on "honing back in on your skills, retuning, refining."

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Super Bowl XLIII

The biggest Sunday of the year is finally here — Super Bowl Sunday. The Pittsburgh Steelers will take on the Arizona Cardinals with kickoff scheduled for 6:28 p.m. on NBC.

I'm going to root for the Cardinals, since I don't have a dog in this fight, and am really looking forward to some funny new commercials. Bruce Springsteen is the halftime entertainment.

N.C. State loses coach

Hall of Fame women's basketball coach Kay Yow, 66, died Jan. 24 after a long battle with breast cancer.

Yow won more than 700 games and was the N.C. State coach for 34 seasons. She was also the coach of the U.S. Olympic women's team in 1988 that won a gold medal.

East wins in shootout

After five minutes of overtime failed to produce a winner in an 11-11 tie, the NHL All-Star Game went into a shootout.

Washington Capitals' left wing Alex Ovechkin produced the game-winning goal to help the Eastern Conference garner the win over the Western Conference Jan. 25 in Montreal.

Duke earns top spot

For the third consecutive week, there's a new number one in the ESPN/USA Today coaches poll. Duke's Blue Devils received 30 of 31 first-place votes to push former number one Wake Forest to fourth. Coming in second is Connecticut, followed by Pittsburgh in third and Oklahoma rounds out the top five.

Duke's record was 18-1 when voting took place.

Torre disrespects Yanks

Dodger manager Joe Torre, who coached the New York Yankees for 12 seasons, co-authored a book called The Yankee Years, due out Tuesday, in which he talks down everything Yankee.

The most intriguing is Torre's recollection of third baseman Alex Rodriguez's joining of the team in 2004. Torre said people in the clubhouse, including teammates, called Rodriguez 'A-Fraud' behind his back.

While not a Yankees fan, I am a Torre fan, and think the book would be a very interesting read.

If you really care...

In what might make for interesting television, Dallas Cowboys' wide receiver Terrell Owens will star in a reality show this summer on VH1.

The show will showcase what life is like for him off the field. Maybe T.O. will finally show a humble side to his personality, but I'm not holding my breath.

Soldiers give Cottonmouths assist

Basic trainees attend Columbus Cottonmouths game during Soldier Appreciation Night

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Basic trainees — around 2,000 of them — made their way to the Columbus Civic Center Friday night for military appreciation night at the Columbus Cottonmouths hockey game.

As Soldiers and hockey players stretched an American flag across the ice, the rink reverberated with Toby Keith's song, American Soldier. Then the Infantry Center Band played the National Anthem while Soldiers stood at attention and the crowd stood as all eyes were focused on the flag.

"U.S.A!" Soldiers chanted as the flag was removed from the rink by Soldiers.

The crowd cheered as two Rangers from the 4th Ranger Training Brigade made their entrance to the ice by rappelling from the ceiling.

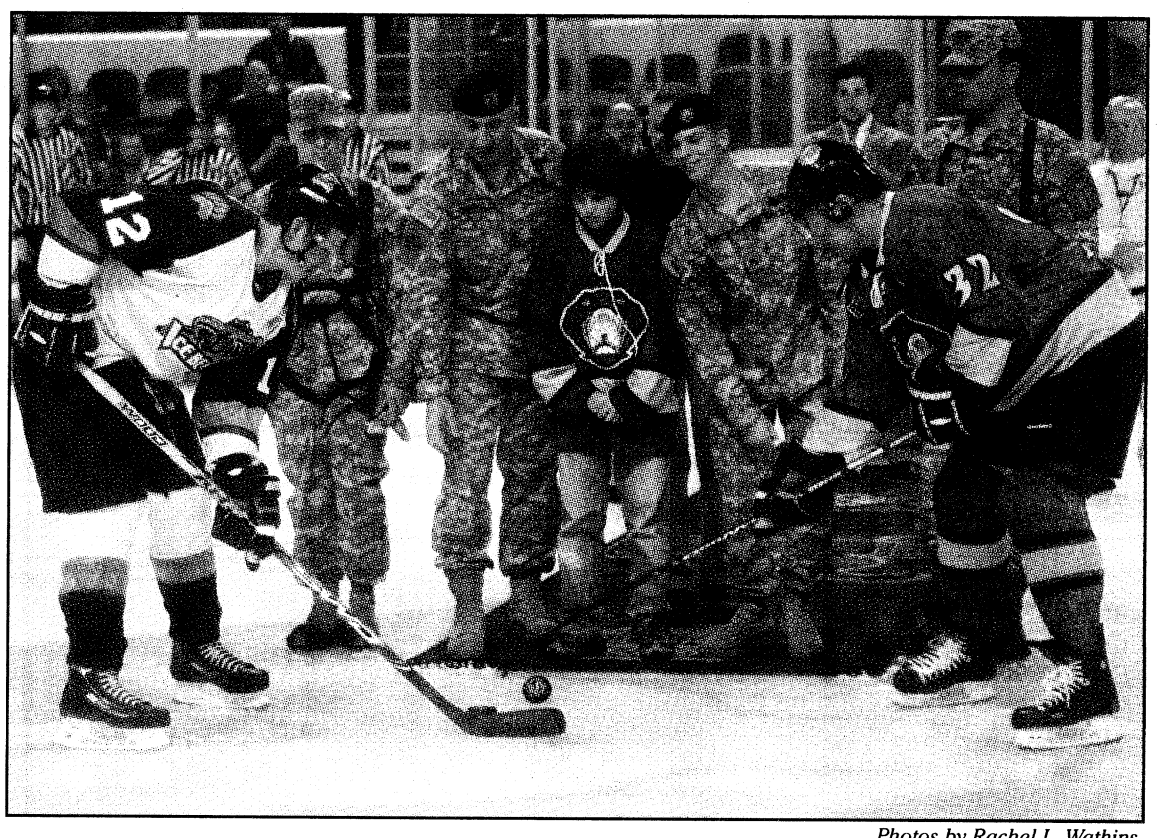

Fort Benning's Commanding General MG Michael Barbero and SGT David Wilkins of C Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, Soldier of the Quarter, dropped ceremonial hockey pucks on the ice to begin the game.

The night was free for basic trainees because TIC Federal Credit Union donated 2,000 tickets to the game.

SPC Matt Fruth of the 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, said the outing was a welcome event and a surprise following his long weeks of training.

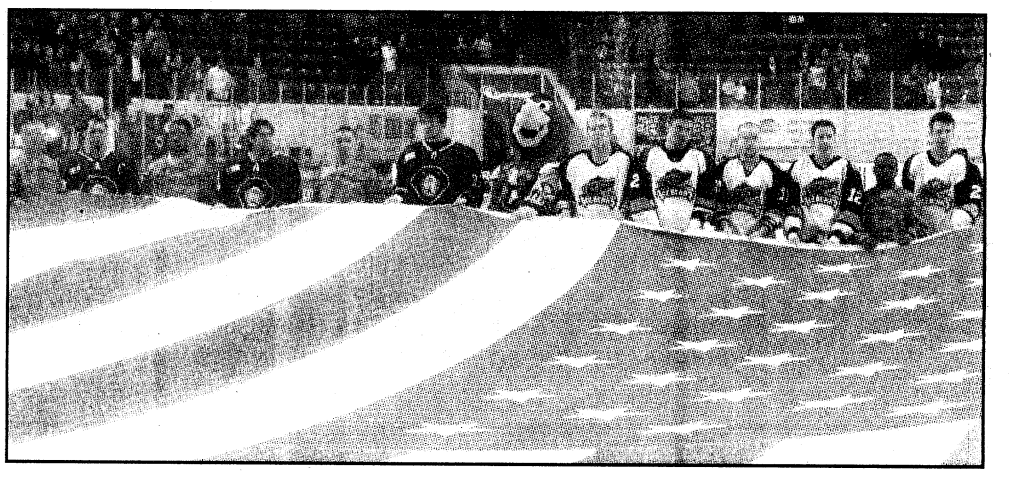

"A night out on the town is the perfect way to end basic training," he said. "It was good to hear everyone cheering for us when the announcer recognized us — I definitely feel appreciated."

The Columbus Cottonmouths didn't disappoint the crowd defeating the Knoxville Ice Bears, 3-2.

1/10 out shoots D 2/58 after sluggish start

John W. Peeler

Rodney Thompson of 1/10 found his way past the D 2/58 defense in the first half to attempt a layup in the 1/10 win Monday night at the Paul R. Smith Fitness Center. 1/10 overcame a sluggish 11-5 halftime lead to win the game 43-31. With the win, 1/10 moved their record to 5-0 in league play.

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Neither the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, nor D Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, came out with guns blazing Monday at the SFC Paul R. Smith gym, but when the smoke cleared 1/10 came out with a 43-31 win in intramural basketball play.

In the opening 20 minutes both teams moved the ball up and down the court freely, but by the close of the first half had scored a total of 16 points between the teams with 1/10 out in front, 11-5.

"We really hadn't had time to practice because we just got in from the field and only got here about five minutes before the game," said 1/10 coach Terrance Robinson. "I just told them we just have to keep playing and keep pressing in the second half."

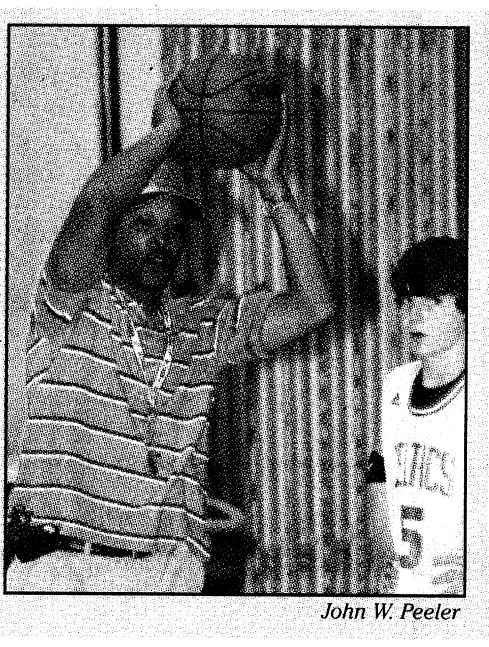

In the first eight minutes of the second half, 1/10 more than doubled their output from the first half and led, 26-13. 1/10 continued putting the pressure on D 2/58 with their fast-break offense while controlling the offensive and defensive boards en route to a 43-31 victory.

"In the second half we just pushed the ball down the court," Robinson said. "We are a speed team and we really don't have an inside game. On the boards, we basically we put two guys down low and boxed them out — just fundamental basketball."

With the win 1/10 remained unbeaten at 5-0 in league play.

Leading the scoring for 1/10 was Jewell Brock with 14 points while Jermaine Trevilion led D 2/58 with 12 points.

Scoring: 1/10, Brock (14), Parker (10), Deresse (6), Mcintyre (6), Nettles (5), Robinson (2); D 2/58, Trevilion (14), Millam (7), Boyd (4), Russel (4), Cary (2).

Fort Benning coach Calvin Flint, who volunteers as a coach in basketball, football, baseball and soccer, has spent 24 years teaching kids to excel through sports. "The teamwork, the self-esteem, the camaraderie and being a part of something — that is ultimately it, for me," he said..

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach finds success outside lines

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

From far away lands such as South Korea to the far northwest of Washington and points in between, Calvin Flint has spent 24 years passing along athletic and life skills to the many kids his path has crossed as a volunteer coach.

Flint currently volunteers his time as a basketball coach with the 11- to 13-year-old CYS Tide team and only sees the upside from his time as a volunteer coach in basketball, football, baseball and soccer.

"I really can't say that I have ever seen a downside any place or in any sport I have coached," Flint said. "But, the really high point is being able to see a kid grasp what you are trying to teach them based on the sport and also with life as in becoming a team player — understanding that sports are just games."

Flint said that while coaching has always been challenging, there are other aspects of athletics that are just as important as winning.

Lady Warrior Bears defeat Lady Knights, 37-2

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

After jumping out to a quick 10-0 lead in the first minutes of the first quarter, the Faith Middle School Lady Warrior Bears cruised to a 37-2 win over the Stewart County Lady Knights at home Saturday. The victory moved the Lady Warrior Bears record to 7-2.

The Lady Warrior Bears won in convincing fashion shutting out the Lady Knights until the 5:10 mark in the fourth period when Laquesha Cradic scored the only goal for the Lady Knights preventing a shutout.

"We played a 2-3 zone and wanted to press them in the first half," coach Larry Addy said. "We had active hands and were moving on our feet really well."

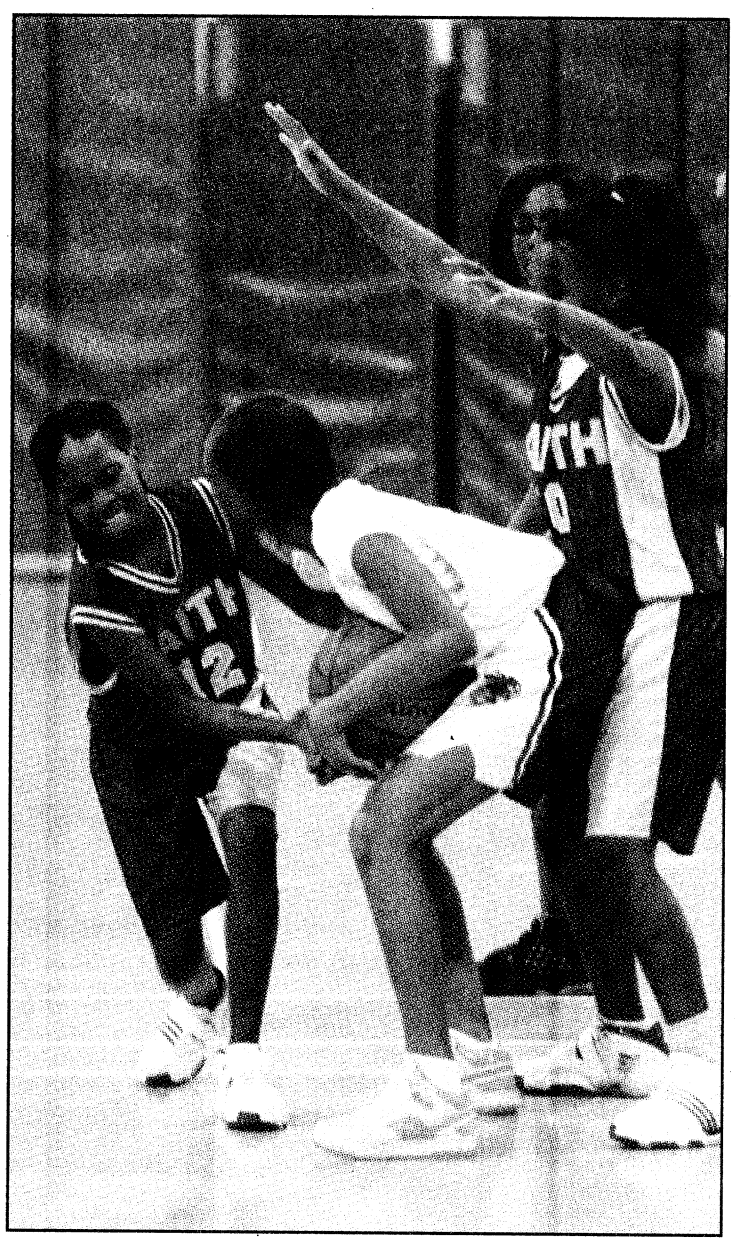

A lot of players got on the court and for some it was their first time scoring, he said.

"They understand now that if they pay attention in practice and shoot the ball well, we can score some points," Addy said.

Leading the Lady Warrior Bears in scoring was Nikki Maier with a game-high 15 points.

The Lady Warrior Bears will have their end of the year tournament Feb. 5 to 7 at the Faith Middle School gym.

Scoring: Stewart County, Cradic (2); Faith, Maier (15), Ramseur (10), Addy (4), Grant (4), Griner (2), Jones (2).

Sometimes when you win, you lose and vice versa

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Much has been made in the national media over coach Micah Grimes and the Covenant School 100-0 win over Dallas Academy Jan. 13.

So much so, the Texas high school basketball coach was fired and the public feeding frenzy in the aftermath appear to want the Covenant School to voluntarily forfeit the game.

While no one has come out and said he was fired because of the score of the game, or because he refused to apologize for the lopsided loss, the bottom line is he is no longer the coach of the team.

Many criticize the coach for "running up the score," continuing to have players shoot 3-pointers and so on, but upon evaluation of the reported facts, the story line doesn't appear to hold up.

While it may be a travesty a school lost 100-0, the original article in the Dallas News did not focus on the lopsided win but more about how a team on the losing end of the score never stopped fighting and never gave up on the game.

The controversy over the game and the ensuing media blitz steamrolled after the story was picked up by the national media and turned from an article about a team not giving up and made it into an issue on unsportsmanlike play and how the winning team should be ashamed and apologetic for winning.

Is the coach the only one who is culpable here? Not in my opinion.

In a press release from coach Grimes, he defended his position and after reading it, I asked what else could he have done differently?

According to his press release, the game began like any other normal high school basketball game.

The coach opened with a full-court press and within three minutes, the team had a 25-point lead.

Realizing the game may get out of hand, the coach began substituting his three players on the bench and went to a zone defense to allow the other team the ability to move the ball down the court into scoring range and the coach intentionally slowed the game down on offense to allow the clock to run. At halftime the score was 59-0. It was downhill from there.

As for the 3-pointers? The box score shows four during the game, three in the first period and one in the third period. So much for the "continuing to shoot 3-pointers in the fourth quarter" theory.

According to the coaches' press release even players who were not known for scoring, scored. What should a coach do in a situation like the one coach Grimes encountered? Lay down? Roll over? In my opinion the coach did everything he could do to allow Dallas Academy the opportunity to score, yet he paid the price with his job by doing what high school coaches are paid to do — win games.

I believe the system failed the coach, teams and players in this case.

There wasn't a running clock rule in place for these two private schools and there wasn't a mercy rule in place to prevent an unnecessary blowout — maybe now these two rules will be implemented.

I believe the coach did everything he could within his power to prevent a blowout and even in losing his job, taught his players something very valuable — to stand up for what you believe in and not back down from your beliefs because of outside pressure. Some things, like a job, are not worth sacrificing your integrity, values and beliefs.

Warrior Bears fall to Knights, 54-41

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

After winning seven of eight games, the Faith Middle School Warrior Bears basketball team ran up against a roadblock in their one-loss season losing to the Stewart County Knights, 54-41.

Stewart County used a quick-pass offense and a smooth-flowing transition game to jump out to an 11-2 first-quarter lead.

Both teams offenses struggled in the first minute-and-a-half of the second quarter with the Knights scoring the only points in that span to lead, 13-2. By the 2 minute mark, the Knights built a 12-point lead and went into the half leading 31-15.

Following halftime, the Knights offense kept the pressure on, building a 37-15 lead over the Warrior Bears with two minutes remaining in the quarter. By the end of the quarter, the Knights led 40-15 on the strength of their defense and Warrior Bear turnovers.

But, the Warrior Bears would not go down in defeat easily. In the first two minutes of the final quarter, the Warrior Bears ran off a series of 10 consecutive points beginning with back-to-back 3-pointers from Shawn Tandarich and James Young to pull to within 16 points at 41-25.

Young hit another three-point shot with 3:18 remaining in the game to edge the Warrior Bears closer at 41-30. Eighteen seconds later Zach Garcia made a spectacular behind-the-head, no-look basket to pull the Warrior Bears to within 9-points.

In the final two minutes of the game the Knights found their offensive rhythm outscoring the Warrior Bears, 10-9, to take the 54-41 win.

"We seemed a little tight today," coach Roy Bolar said. "They were bigger than us and their size hurt us but that is no excuse."

The size factor really showed in the rebounding, he said.

"They controlled the boards for most of the game and if you give them four or five shots at the basket it is kind of hard to come out on top," Bolar said. "If we would have 'boxed out' we would have been OK, but we didn't execute."

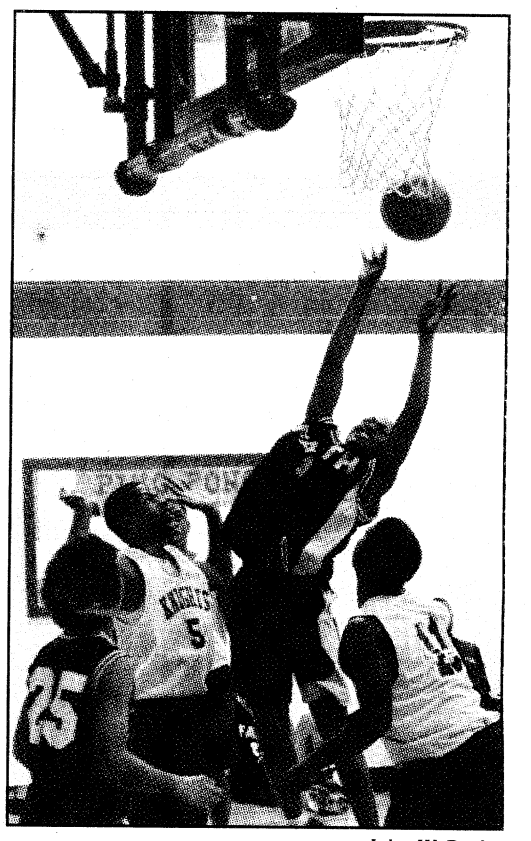

The Warrior Bears were able to put points on the scoreboard in the fourth period due to a personnel adjustment, Bolar said.

"We put in some shooters and got some 3-pointers that helped us get back on track," Bolar said. "We needed that 'shot in the arm,' and when the offense stepped up, the defense stepped up, as well. We also missed a lot of free throws and you just can't do that against a team this good.

"This is the kind of competition we want our kids to play against and we can only get better because of it."

Markis Boyd had a game-high 17 points for the Knights and Young led the scoring for the Warrior Bears with 10 points.

Scoring: Stewart County, Boyd (17), Hamilton (14), Bridges (11), Jenkins (10) Harvey (2); Faith, Young (10), Garcia (6), Romo (6), Davis (5), Carter (4), Tandarich (3), Wilcox (3), Barrientes (2), Gardner (2).

"The intent is to teach the kids the basics of the sport and ultimately to be a better teammate and person," Flint said.

Flint's views on how his team plays and practices together reach far outside the painted lines of the basketball court in his philosophical view of part of what his job is as a volunteer coach.

"Ultimately, my goal is for a group of kids from different backgrounds to be able to play together and learn together and become good friends and hopefully one day be good providers in their communities," he said. "The teamwork, the self-esteem, the camaraderie and being a part of something — that is ultimately it, for me. I really don't care about the wins and losses, and it would be nice to win, but at all costs, no."

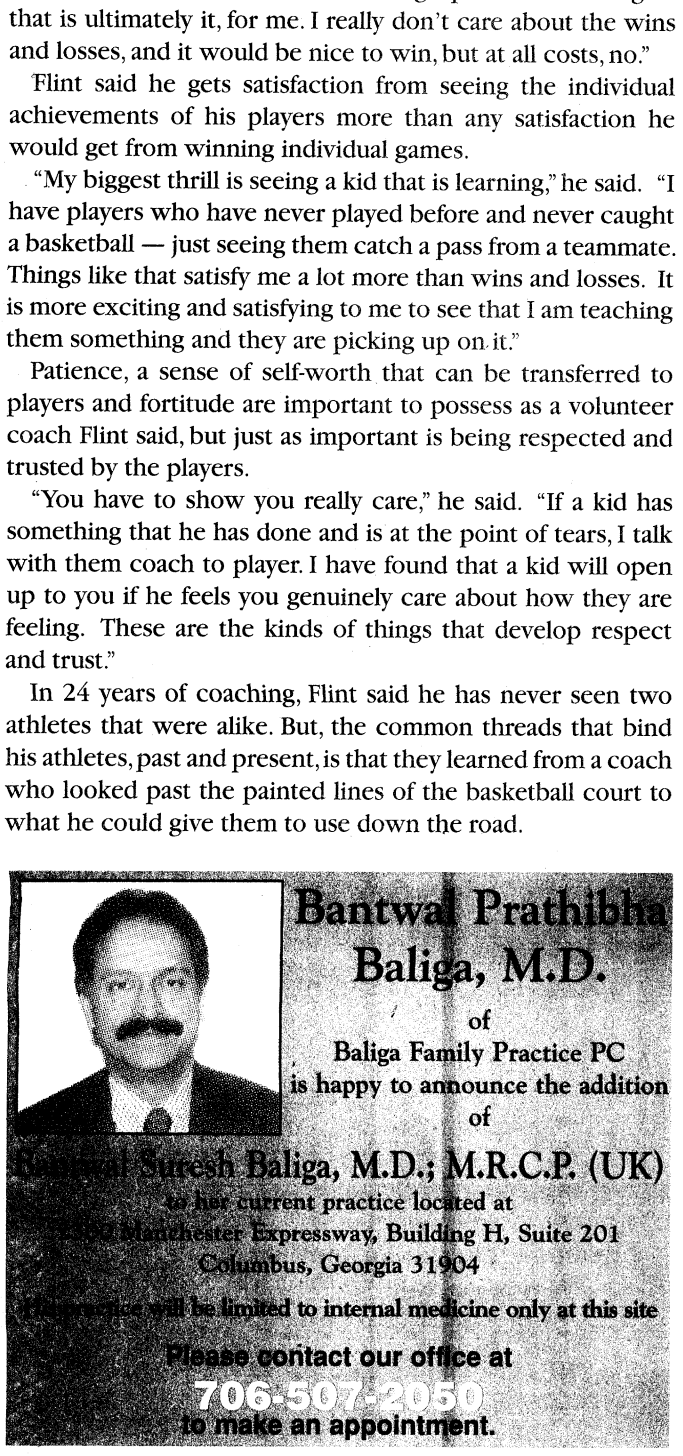

Flint said he gets satisfaction from seeing the individual achievements of his players more than any satisfaction he would get from winning individual games.

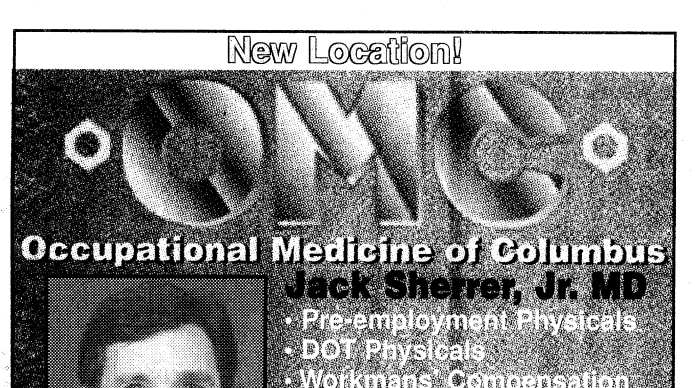

"My biggest thrill is seeing a kid that is learning," he said. "I have players who have never played before and never caught a basketball — just seeing them catch a pass from a teammate. Things like that satisfy me a lot more than wins and losses. It is more exciting and satisfying to me to see that I am teaching them something and they are picking up on it."

Patience, a sense of self-worth that can be transferred to players and fortitude are important to possess as a volunteer coach Flint said, but just as important is being respected and trusted by the players.

"You have to show you really care," he said. "If a kid has something that he has done and is at the point of tears, I talk with them coach to player. I have found that a kid will open up to you if he feels you genuinely care about how they are feeling. These are the kinds of things that develop respect and trust."

In 24 years of coaching, Flint said he has never seen two athletes that were alike. But, the common threads that bind his athletes, past and present, is that they learned from a coach who looked past the painted lines of the basketball court to what he could give them to use down the road.

Columbus Junior Snakes host hockey tournament

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Youth hockey teams from Columbus, Tennessee and Alabama met Saturday at the Columbus Civic Center for the Southern Youth Travel Hockey League tournament. The Columbus Junior Snakes, Mite A travel team, competed against the Pelham Panthers falling short, 6-0.

Nine-year-old Junior Snake Hannah Davis, whose nickname is the "Enforcer," and has been playing hockey for three years, saw extensive playing time during the game.

"I love hockey," she said. "It's challenging and it takes a lot of concentration. You have to really know your stuff."

Hannah said she likes being on the traveling hockey team because she gets to meet children from other cities.

"I think we could have played better, but I tried my hardest and that's what matters," Davis said.

The focus for this age group is learning the fundamentals of hockey, coach Don Belisle said.

"It's about getting the kids interested in hockey and showing them how to skate, shoot and pass and getting them to understand a basic knowledge of the game," he said.

Belisle said the score isn't what matters at this stage in hockey, improvement is.

"I have seen so much improvement in the kids' confidence, speed and agility, and I am proud of them," Belisle said.

The 7- and 8-year old travel team is a new addition to the Columbus Hockey Association, Belisle said. The team played their first game in October.

"This is a huge step for Columbus," Belisle said. "Columbus has never had a travel hockey team for this age group."

The Junior Snakes, Mite A travel team, will take on the same teams Feb. 7 and 8 in Huntsville, Ala.

Ballers roll past Tide

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

It was a low scoring affair in the first quarter of the 11- to 13-year-old Child Youth and School Services basketball game Saturday, but the Ballers got rolling in the second quarter en route to a 45-15 win over the Tide.

Following a 1-1 first quarter, the Ballers began hitting the basket with 20 points in the second quarter, led by Caleb Davis' 7 points, to take a 21-4 lead.

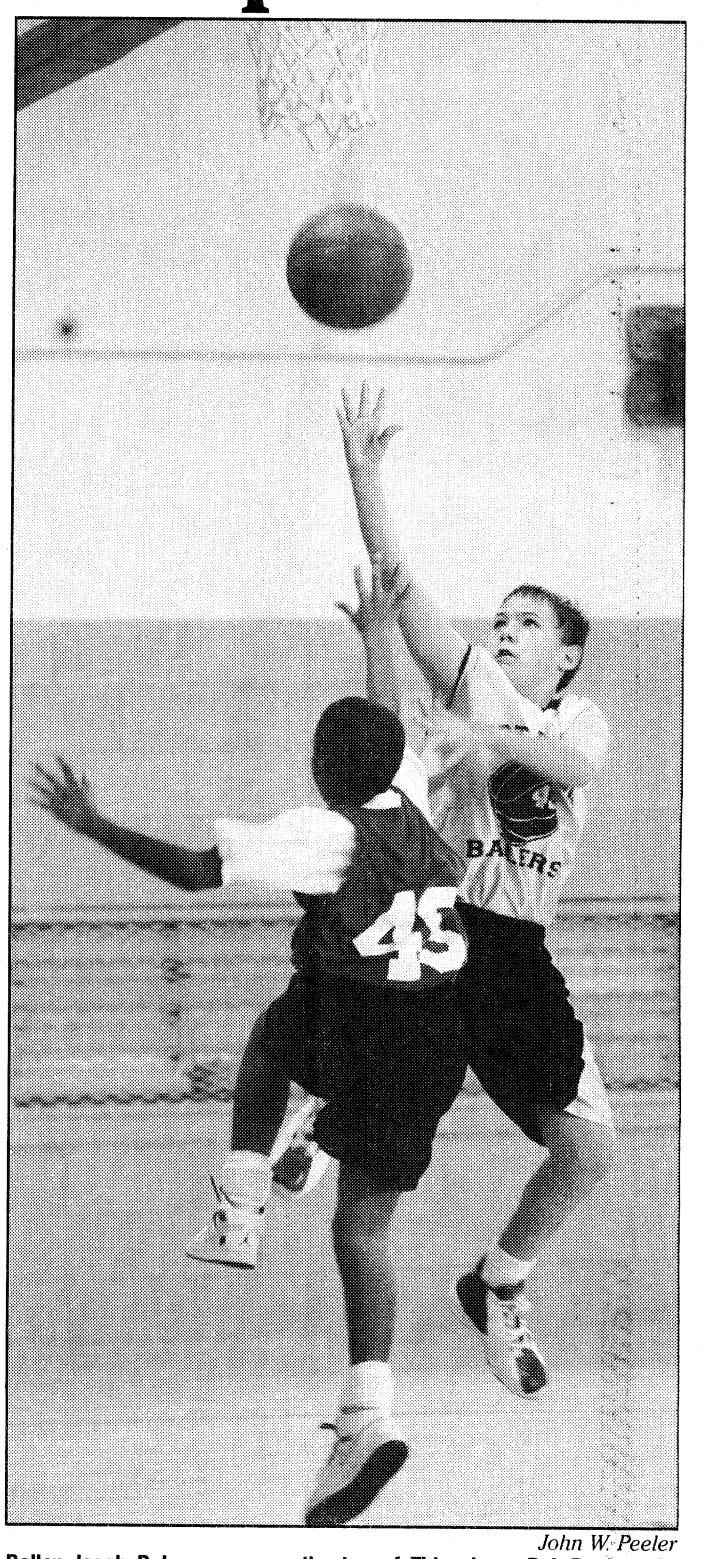

The Tide defense was able to slow down the Ballers offense in the third quarter while picking up 6 points on offense, but at the end of the quarter the Ballers were still on top 33-10.

In the fourth period the Ballers duplicated their third period 12-point total finishing on the winning end of the 45-15 game.

"Defensively, we played tough and gave them one-shot opportunities," coach Karl Ivey said. "Offensively, we were able to push the ball down the floor. I just wanted the kids to work on the fundamentals during the game and have fun."

Davis led the Ballers in scoring with a game-high 12 points and Nick Hunter led the Tide with 5 points.

Scoring: Tide, Hunter (5), Dockery (2), Flint (2), A. Kessler (2), I. Kessler (2), Suarez (2); Ballers, Davis (12), Ivey (10), Crawford (9), Young (6), Roberts (4), Bolar (3), Paige (1).

STOP SEXUAL ASSAULT! DON'T BE A BYSTANDER!

If you saw a fellow Soldier being sexually assaulted—would you do something? Would you intervene, call for help, phone the military police...or avert your gaze, speed up your footsteps, and pretend it never happened?

There are indicators that Soldiers should watch for so they can be a good bystander:

- Inappropriate touching or disregarding set boundaries
- Suggestive remarks
- Inappropriate intimacy
- Attempts to isolate someone
- Pressuring someone to drink
- Violent behaviors
- Targeting someone who is visibly impaired

For additional information, please contact Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy and Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Program Manager, at (706) 545-0892 or Michelle Fonseca, Sexual Assault Response Coordinator (SARC) at (706) 545-8740. Soldiers may call the Fort Benning Sexual Assault Response Line 24 hours a day/7 days a week at (706) 566-7393.

No adverse environmental impacts were identified in the EA and a Finding of No Significant Impact (FNSI) has been prepared.

The Final EA and FNSI will be available for review beginning on January 26, 2009 at the libraries listed below.

PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURATION

'It was pretty cool'

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"It was pretty cool — and cold," said 14-year-old Charles Durr III, one of more than a million people crowded into the National Mall Jan. 20 for the presidential inauguration.

Son of Fort Benning's chief of staff, COL Charles Durr, he traveled to the nation's capital with several other teens as part of the National Young Leaders Conference. Leading up to the inauguration, the group listened to speakers such as former Secretary of State GEN(R) Colin Powell, Archbishop Desmond Tutu and former Vice President Al Gore and attended the pre-inauguration concert Jan. 18.

On the big day, Charles crowded into the National Mall, near the National Museum of Natural History, for his glimpse of history.

"I couldn't really see much, but I watched it on the jumbotrons," he said. "Watching the inauguration, watching all the people who were there, hearing the speech President Obama gave, it was really an amazing moment for me. I saw everything up close and personal. I saw all of the surrounding area. I saw all the people cheering.

"I was actually there."

Part of the experience was the wintry temperatures — 4 degrees below freezing — a first for Charles, who said he had never been that cold before. Despite the weather, however, the trip was well worth it, Charles said.

"I was just very proud to be a part of it, and I hope in four years' time, I can go back," he said. "I'm going to remember this for the rest of my life. I would say to anyone who would want to go in the near future to go at any cost. It's a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

Those were the same words 16-year-old Morgan Reilly, daughter of SFC John Moon, used to describe the experience: "once-in-a-lifetime."

Morgan attended the ceremony with a group of Columbus High School students who signed up to go last summer. It was her first time touring the capital and visiting its several monuments and museums.

Everything, including the cold, high costs and crowds, was "so different from down here," she said, but that's part of the reason it will be hard to forget.

Black History Month luncheon set for Feb. 12

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Equal Opportunity Office at Fort Benning is gearing up for their most attended event of the year — the Black History Month luncheon, said SFC Edward Dingle, equal opportunity advisor for the 192nd and 198th Infantry Brigades.

The observance, celebrated across the nation in February, will be from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Feb. 12 at the Fort Benning Conference and Catering Center.

Dandy

"History is an important part of every heritage," Dingle said. "You can't change the future if you don't know where you came from."

The luncheon, themed "The Quest for Black Citizenship in the Americas," will include performances by the Kendrick High School choir, poetry and drama club.

African art and historic mementos from the Columbus Black History Museum will be on display, and there will be a slideshow featuring famous sports figures, stars and political figures that have been a part of black history, Dingle said.

SGM(R) Ellis Dandy, the Equal Opportunity manager at Fort Benning, will be the guest speaker. Dandy completed 25 years of military service and worked at the Pentagon as the Army's sergeant major for equal opportunity.

"History shows us where we were, what we did and why we did it," Dandy said. "It helps us so we don't make the same mistake twice — it's a learning tool," Dandy said.

Those interested in attending can purchase tickets from the Equal Opportunity Office at 6480 Indianhead Road, Building 2509, or through unit Equal Opportunity advisors. Tickets are $8.50 per person and must be purchased by Thursday.

For more information, call 706-545-6665.

Schools stay current with Lead the Learning

Districtwide initiative promotes teamwork, critical thinking

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning schools are preparing students for life in the 21st century.

Education specialist Beth Holmes is working with leaders in the Georgia and Alabama Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary Schools to upgrade the way students learn in a global, digital world. As part of the Lead the Learning initiative, Holmes meets with information specialists and education technologists monthly to explore strategies to help students gain a deeper knowledge of math, science, language arts and other core subjects.

"Lead the Learning is about helping teachers better prepare students for life and work in the 21st century," said Holmes, who has worked in educational professional development for almost 30 years.

Classroom learning will still have the same high academic standards as before, said Joyce Jones, district education technologist, but the teaching methods will shift to stress learning through teamwork, problem solving, innovation, creativity and communication.

"Technology is certainly part of that, because we use the tools technology provides," Jones said, "but it's more about critical thinking. We have to teach them the skills to learn. They're going to be lifetime learners of many, many skills sets for many, many jobs. The mission of Lead the Learning is to help get our students ready for this."

Cheryl Rodewig
Sherri McKendree, left, education technologist at Loyd Elementary, Julie Pelletier, information specialist at Loyd, Dr. Dell McMullen, district superintendent, and Beth Holmes, education specialist, look at Classroom XXI, an online portal that Lead the Learning teams use to collaborate and share ideas. "We are learning so much from each other," said Holmes, who works with the teams to develop strategies for teaching kids in a 21st-century world.

After the education technologists and information specialists learn the new teaching methods, they will pass the methods on to students and teachers in the 11 schools represented in the Georgia and Alabama district.

Columbus volunteers sew 'comfort' for Soldiers

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Columbus State University will host a sew-a-thon from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Feb. 7 to benefit Sew Much Comfort, a non-profit organization that provides custom-made adaptive clothing to injured veterans.

Sue Simoncini, the event organizer and a sewing instructor with CSU's continuing education program, said she was inspired to organize the sew-a-thon after meeting military families.

"I'm fairly new to Columbus, and I never knew any military families before I came here," she said. "I wanted to help, but because I'm not in a military family I didn't know how to do that. When I heard about Sew Much Comfort, I thought it sounded really cool."

Sew Much Comfort helps improve the quality of life for wounded veterans by giving them a way to wear street clothes during their recovery instead of hospital gowns or other clothing that makes them stand out, Simoncini said.

"Before this organization, a lot of wounded were living in hospital gowns," she said. While Sew Much Comfort provides many types of clothing, the sew-a-thon will focus on adapting T-shirts by ripping out the side seams and replacing them with hidden Velcro strips. The event will be organized in assembly line style stations, and no sewing experience is necessary to volunteer, Simoncini said.

Simoncini's goal is to have 100 volunteers at the event, which will allow them to create 200 customized T-shirts. If the sew-a-thon is a success, more events will take place in the future, she said.

"We've already got another one planned for the fall, and if these two go well, we'll make it an ongoing event," she said.

CSU staff are excited to be able to give back to the community, said Kristin Barker, CSU's Continuing Education marketing manager.

"When you see spouses and children of people going off to war, that affects them and since they're part of our community, it affects us too," she said. "As soon as Sue suggested it, we were all on board."

Volunteers are encouraged to give as much of their time as they can, and monetary donations are also welcome, Barker said.

For more information, or to volunteer or make a donation, call 706-568-2316 or visit www.conted.colstate.edu or www.sewmuchcomfort.org.

Inauguration: 'So intense'

"It seems like there's so much to tell," Morgan said. "Honestly, I've never been that cold that long before. And I've never seen that many people in one place. They were very excited. You could tell there was great energy. Everybody was so intense that as soon as (Obama) walked out, they just all started cheering and screaming. I'll always remember it."

From her position in the crowd, standing somewhere near the middle of the Mall, Morgan couldn't make out President Obama and others on the stage, but the next day at the White House, she caught a glance of him as he waved to passersby from his limousine.

Even though Morgan watched the inauguration on the screens like many others, being there in person is better than seeing it on TV at home, she said.

"It's kind of difficult to put into words," she said. "You get to see the whole thing right in front of you ... experience it firsthand. A lot of people will never get to do that. I was just very lucky."

Morgan said she was glad she could attend the historic election of the first African-American president. She and her classmates were happy just to be "along for the ride" during such an important national event.

"We were really excited, because we realized we're part of history; we get to be here for this," Morgan said. "Years from now, we'll be telling our kids and our grandkids, we were here watching the 44th president be inaugurated. It's one of those things you're proud of."

Initiative: Uses real-world problems to encourage student learning

Holmes said she expects to see excited and motivated students who are eager to learn about issues that matter to them.

"Using topics that are relevant to students makes learning more effective," she said.

"Today's students are very interested in a math project that calculates monthly cell phone and text messaging costs," Holmes said. "They are highly motivated to write a persuasive essay explaining how they might handle the responsibility of owning a cell phone — particularly if the audience is a parent. Modern students are intrigued by real-world problems like pure water scarcity. They enjoy interacting with peers across the globe to explore ways to reduce water scarcity through conservation.

"The important thing is for students to become enthusiastic about the topics they study and how they learn."

This type of relevant learning makes school more challenging and more engaging, Holmes said. Students develop life skills like leadership, responsibility, accountability and collaboration as they work together on projects they care about.

"These attributes feed the students' own sense of initiative, self-worth and productivity," she said. "It's a positive learning cycle."

> "The important thing is for students to become enthusiastic about the topics they study and how they learn. ... As schools become more focused on 21st-century practices, the students' opportunities to learn, perform and achieve will increase, but it will happen over time and as a process."
> — Beth Holmes, education specialist

Holmes said she is impressed by the progress of the Lead the Learning teams.

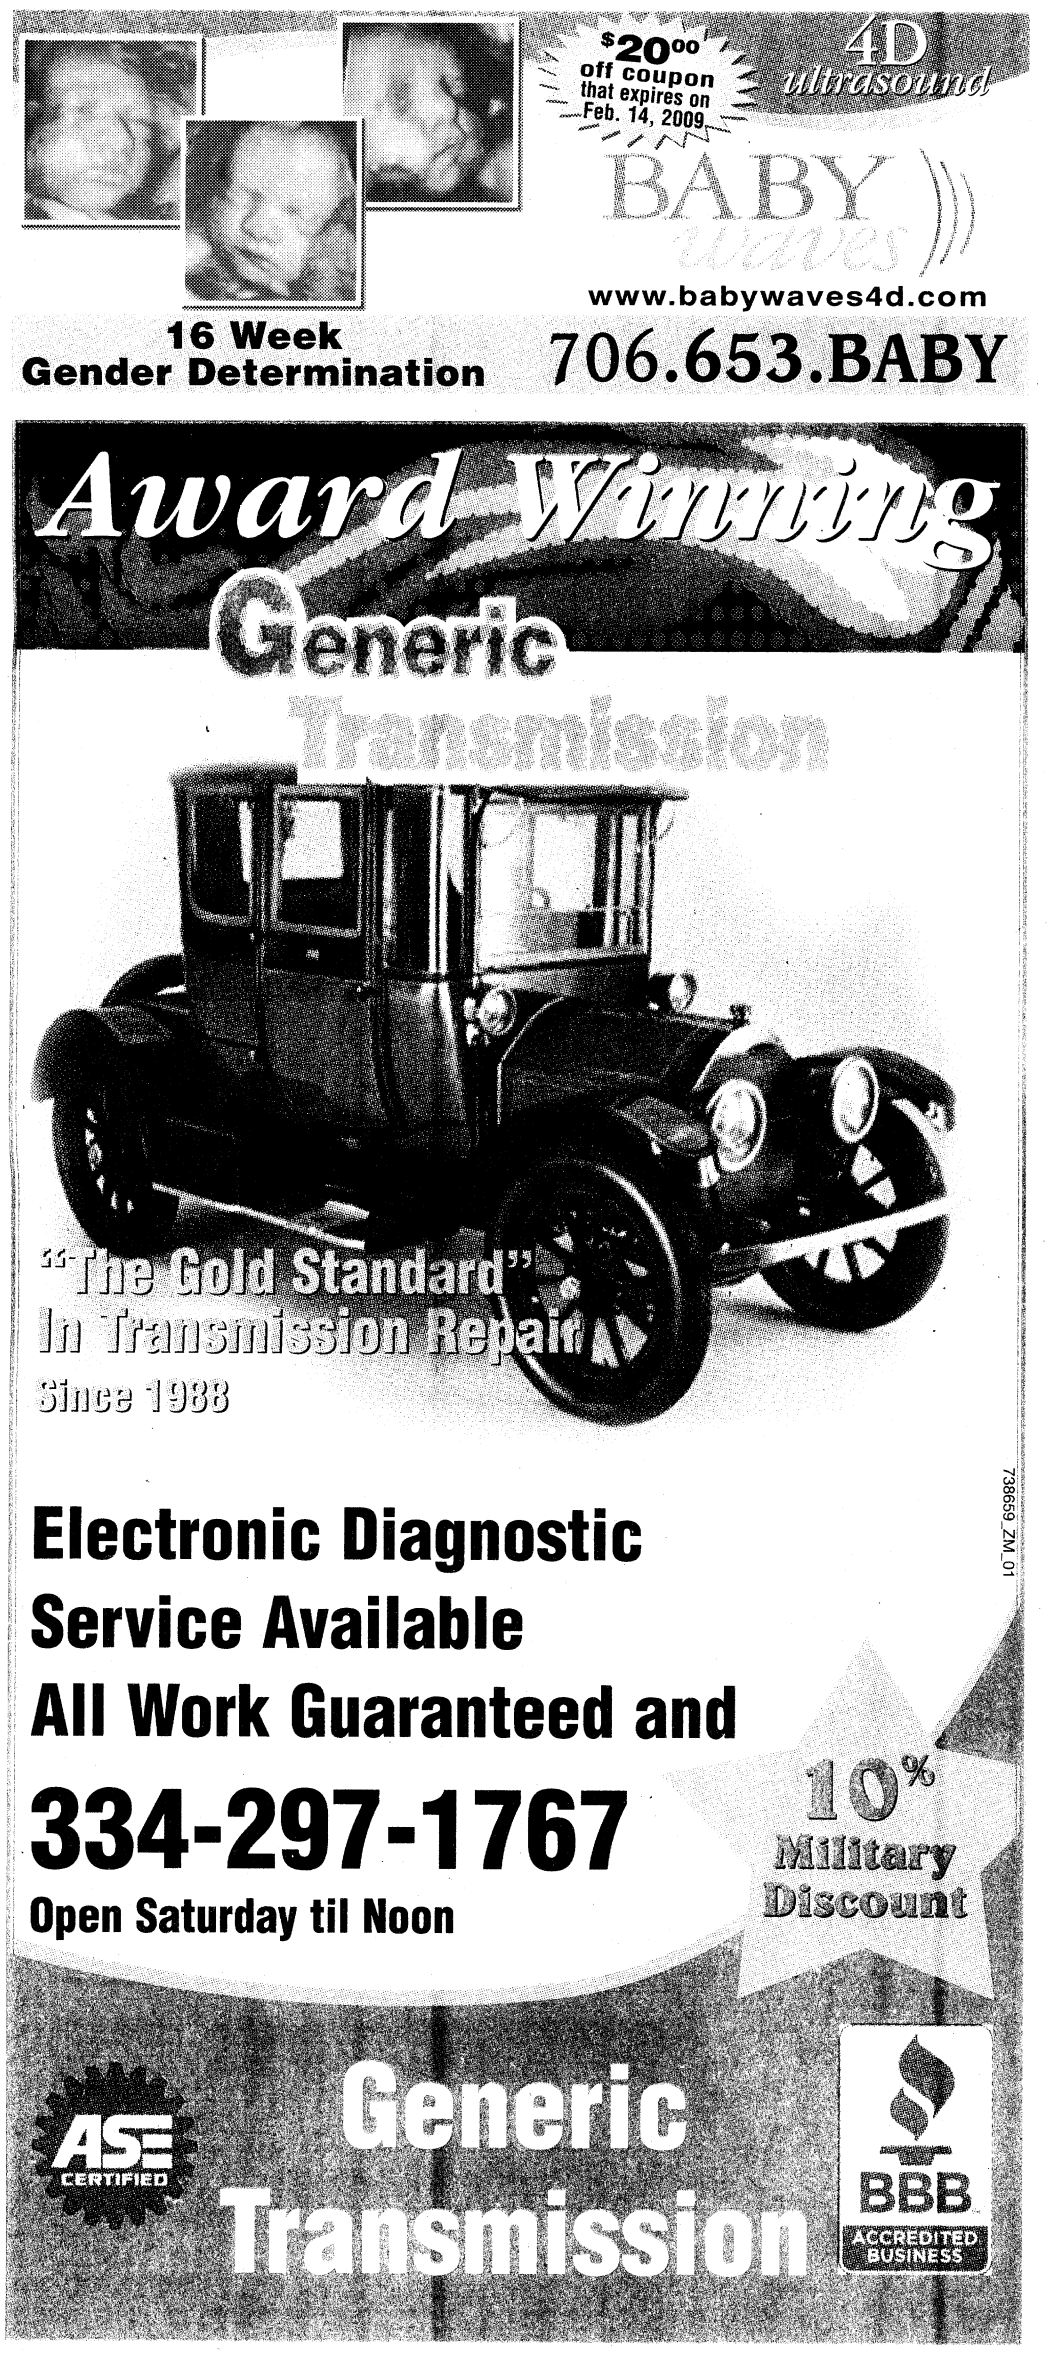

"Transforming the way teachers teach and how students learn is not something that happens overnight," she said. "The school system is taking concrete steps to improve quality services for students. As schools become more focused on 21st century practices, the students' opportunities to learn, perform and achieve will increase, but it will happen over time and as a process."

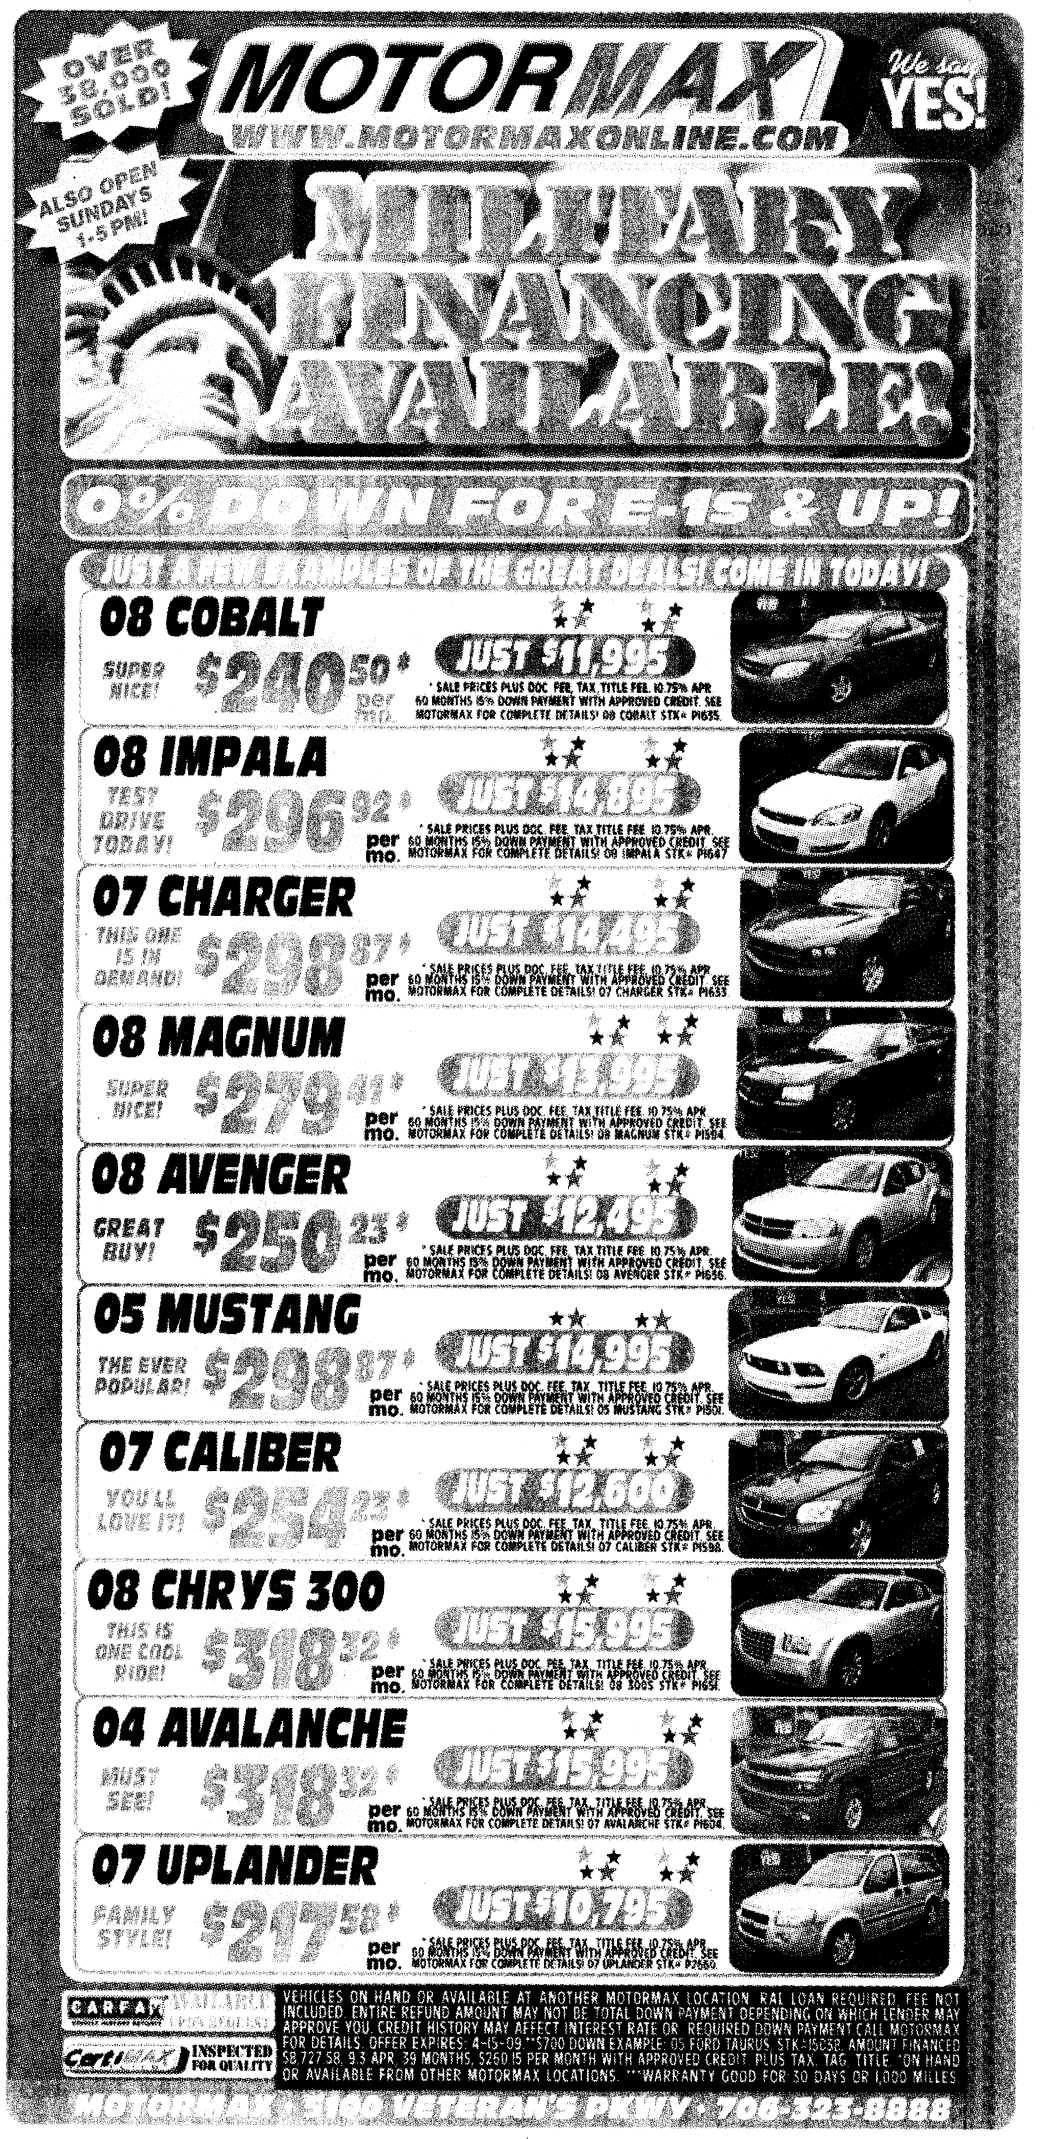

Dell McMullen, the district superintendent, said she feels confident the teachers will adapt well to the new techniques.

"We have fantastic teachers in the Georigia and Alabama district," she said. "They are committed to continued professional learning, and they are eager to try any new approach that will support our students and their learning."

Parents are encouraged to get involved in classroom learning, Jones said. To get involved or for more information, parents should call the office of the school their child attends.

Editor's note: This is the first installment in a two-part series about the Lead the Learning initiative.

What's your time worth?

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

A man came home from work late, tired and irritated, to find his 5-year-old son waiting for him at the door.

"Daddy, may I ask you a question?"

"Yeah sure, what it is?" replied the man.

"Daddy, how much do you make an hour?"

"That's none of your business son. Why do you ask such a thing?" the man said angrily.

"I just want to know. Please tell me, how much do you make an hour?"

"If you must know, I make $50 an hour."

"Oh," the little boy said, his head down. "Daddy, may I please borrow $25?"

The father was furious. "If the only reason you asked that is so you can borrow some money to buy a silly toy or some other nonsense, then you march yourself straight to your room and go to bed. Think about why you are being so selfish. I don't work hard everyday for such childish frivolities."

The little boy went to his room and shut the door. The man sat down and started to get even angrier — how dare he ask such questions only to get some money? After about an hour, the man calmed down. Maybe there was something he really needed to buy with that $25 and he really didn't ask for money very often.

The man went to his son's room and opened the door.

"Are you asleep, son?" he asked.

"No Daddy, I'm awake."

"I've been thinking, maybe I was too hard on you earlier. It's been a long day and I took out my aggravation on you. Here's the $25 you asked for."

The little boy sat straight up, smiling. "Oh, thank you Daddy!" he yelled. Then, reaching under his pillow he pulled out some crumpled up bills. The man saw that the boy already had money, and started to get angry again. The little boy slowly counted out his money, and then looked up at his father.

"Why do you want more money if you already have some?" the father grumbled. "Because I didn't have enough, but now I do. Daddy, I have $50. Can I buy an hour of your time? Please come home early tomorrow. I would like to have dinner with you." The father was crushed. He put his arms around his little son, and he begged for his forgiveness.

This is a reminder to all of you working so hard. We should not let time slip through our fingers without having spent some time with those who really matter to us — those close to our hearts. Remember to share that $50 (you fill in the value) worth of your time with someone you love. If we die tomorrow, the Army or company that you work for could easily replace you in a matter of hours. But the family and friends we leave behind will feel the loss for the rest of their lives.

A friend sent this story to me and I thought it is an important message that we all need to hear from time to time to help us keep on the proper compass course of life. Do not take your loved ones for granted. And remember, no one on their deathbed has ever said, I wished I spent more time at work. It is always, I wished I spent more time with loved ones.

How are you spending your time? I understand we sacrifice a great deal in our service to the country, but when we have time do we invest it wisely? The number one cause of divorce is growing apart. Growing apart is often mismanaged time in our lives. Do not let the important ones in your life fall by the wayside, use your time, an unrecoverable resource, wisely.

I hope in this new year you can make some changes that will enhance your life. If you are having some struggles in your marriage or family life, we would be happy to help at the Chaplain Family Life Center. For more information, call the Chaplain Family Life Center at 706-545-1760 or stop by 2606 Dixie Road in Soldiers' Plaza.

THE BAYONET
JANUARY 30, 2009

Can you pick 'em?

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS

They make us laugh; they make us cry. They enrage or inspire; they unite or divide. They inform and entertain, and once again it's time to find out who does all this best — in the movies.

The 81st annual Academy Awards are Feb. 22.The Oscars are presented by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences to recognize the excellence of film industry professionals including directors, actors, writers and more. The nominations are in and The Bayonet wants you to decide who will take home the little golden guy.

Falling only one short of the all-time record for nominations shared by All About Eve (1950) and Titanic (1997),T*he Curious Case of Benjamin Button* (13 nominations) is sure to take home a few statues. Along with their Golden Globe and Screen Actor's Guild awards success, Slumdog Millionaire and Milk will probably net some gold as well. As for the rest, it's up to the Academy and you.

Just fill out the ballot on this page with your choice in each of the categories and send it to us. Those who make the cut, according to the Academy, of course, will be entered into a drawing to win Carmike Cinema coupon books courtesy of The Bayonet along with our contract manager. First prize is worth $75, second prize is $50 and third prize is $25.

All entries should arrive in our office — Room 606, Infantry Hall — by noon Feb. 20. Winners will be notified by Feb. 24. One entry per person, please.

To learn more about the nominated films, visit www.oscars.com. You can watch the Oscars live at 8 p.m., Feb. 22 on ABC.

But when the show breaks for the night, police arrest him on suspicion of cheating.

Desperate to prove his innocence, Jamal tells the story of his life in the slum where he and his brother grew up, of their adventures together on the road, of encounters with local gangs, and of Latika, the girl he loved and lost.

Each chapter of his story reveals the key to the answer to one of the game show's questions. Intrigued by Jamal's story, the jaded police inspector begins to wonder what a young man with no apparent desire for riches is doing on a game show. REVOLUTIONARY ROAD

Frank and April, a married couple in the 1950s, have always seen themselves as special and different, ready and willing to live their lives based on higher ideals. As soon as they move into their new house on Revolutionary Road, they proudly declare their independence from the suburban inertia that surrounds them and determine never to be trapped by the social confines of their era. Yet for all their charm, beauty and irreverence, the Wheelers find themselves becoming exactly what they didn't expect — a good man with a routine job whose nerve has gone missing; a less-than-happy homemaker starving for fulfillment and passion; an American family with lost dreams, like any other. Driven to change their fates, April hatches an audacious plan to start all over again, to leave the comforts of Connecticut behind for the great unknown of Paris.

But when the plan is put in motion, each spouse is pushed to extremes — one to escape whatever the cost, the other to save all that they have, no matter the compromises.

Troops have ball at inaugural event

C. Todd Lopez
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, Airmen and military spouses attended the Commander-in-Chief Ball, Tuesday, at the National Building Museum in Washington, D.C.

The ball was one of 10 attended by President Barack Obama and Vice President Joe Biden. Obama's address to attendees at the ball was the first time he was able to directly address such a large audience of military members as president. For service members, it was the first time they had been directly addressed by their new commander in chief.

"It is wonderful to be surrounded by some of the very best and bravest Americans," Obama said. "Know that as president I will have no greater honor or responsibility than serving as your commander in chief."

The president said that even while attendees at the ball were enjoying an evening of festivities, there were members of the U.S. military around the world that were in harm's way. He also said service and sacrifice are not limited to those in uniform.

"Every time a service member deploys, there is an empty seat at the table back home — and a family that has to bear an extra burden," the president said. "That's why Michelle has spent so much time in the last few months working with our military families. That's why tonight, we don't just salute our troops, we salute the military family that has earned the

THE BAYONET

The Chief of Staff Army Award for Maintenance Excellence was awarded to the Maintenance Branch of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, for the second consecutive year. It was selected for the honor from among 32 other maintenance branches.

The award is extremely difficult to win, but the teamwork and dedication of the branch's staff made it possible, said MSG Keith Strain.

"With a lot of Soldiers preparing for deployment, leaving, or having other things going on, a lot of the time it's difficult to have the personnel to get everything done," he said. "But we wanted to win it. We all got together and decided to push and make sure we win this thing."

"Everybody came together as one, Soldiers and civilians," said PFC Christopher Torres.

The award recipient was determined by a panel that visited the branch for one week and performed surprise inspections of vehicles and paperwork. It evaluated each Army maintenance branch on the quality of their records, their readiness and how well they meet deadlines.

"We made sure that if a tank

Train the Trainer offers fundamental marksmanship skills 'refresher'

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Instructors for the Basic Officer Leadership Course II will complete a three-week instructor certification program this month. This "Train the Trainer" program is designed for Soldiers in C and D companies, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, who will be instructing lieutenants who enter BOLC II in February.

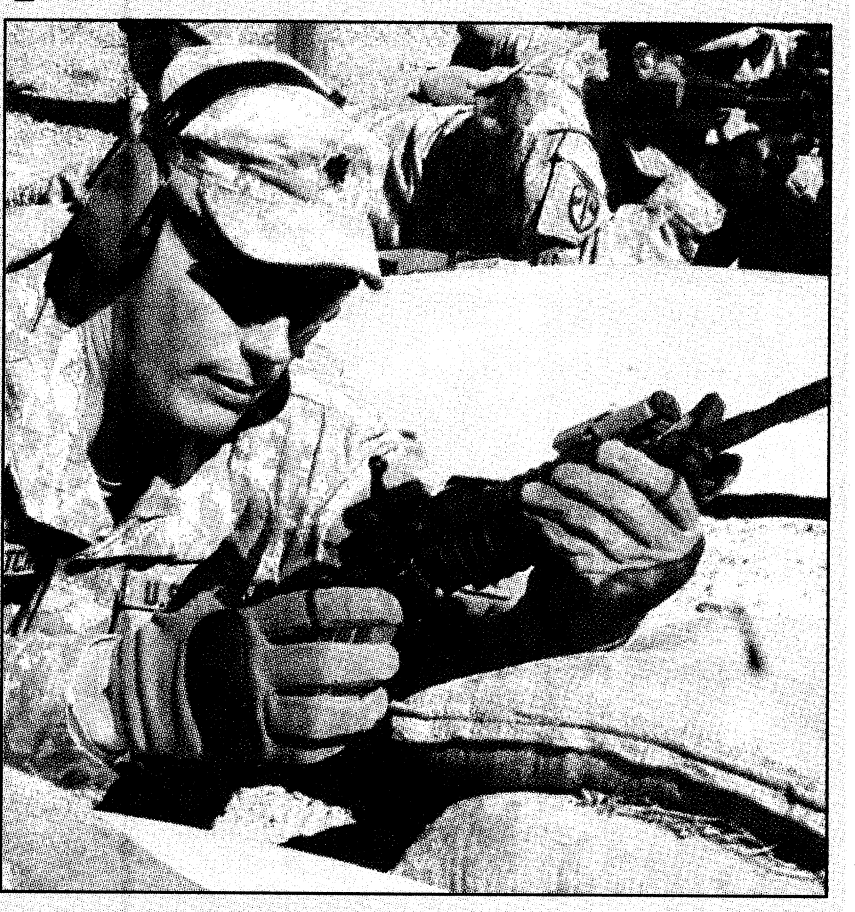

"What we're basically doing is getting everyone on the same plane, all speaking the same language," said CPT Erik Kjonnerod, OIC during the training.

Because BOLC II instructors come from a variety of backgrounds, the program ensures the students will learn "the right doctrine and the right information," Kjonnerod said. "So, when they get to their unit, they're that much smarter, that much more prepared for their next assignment, which could be Iraq or Afghanistan."

Training kicked off Jan. 12 with a focus on marksmanship.

"Everyone needs to be able to properly employ their weapon system,

Post pilots program

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning is the first Army installation to pilot a revised version of the Advanced Rifle Marksmanship training program.

The program features changes intended to expose Soldiers in basic training to a shooting environment that more closely resembles the conditions they will encounter in Iraq and Afghanistan, said CPT Ogo Obele, assistant operations officer for the 198th Infantry Brigade.

"While the old ARM program focused on shooting from the foxhole and prone positions, now Soldiers are going to be shooting from kneeling positions and from behind barricades," he said.

Changes have been made to the way Soldiers engage targets also. Instead of engaging all targets presented on the range, Soldiers must now distinguish between targets representing enemy combatants and civilians.

"We're teaching the Soldiers to use the environment around them," said SSG Mitchell Finn, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment. "We want them to think and be able to assess what they're firing at."

The new ARM program was developed through a joint effort between the training and operations officers of the 198th and 192nd Infantry Brigades, and has been in use for more than a year. All companies in the brigades are participating in the new ARM program to varying extents, and six companies are participating in a study of the effectiveness of the new program. The study will be submitted to TRADOC for further consideration of whether the new ARM program will be implemented outside Fort Benning.

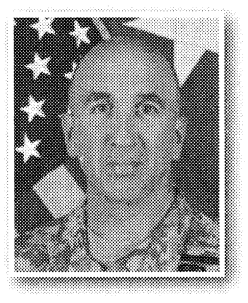

"The study will produce concrete data that shows

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

What have you done for Benning Solders today?

MG Michael Barbero
COMMANDING GENERAL

Last week I had the opportunity to preside over the annual DFMWR Sponsorship Recognition Ceremony and was extremely impressed by the generous help our partners in the Chattahoochee Valley Region provided us last year.

In in-kind and cash donations, more than $250,000 of goods and services were provided to our Soldiers and their families. That is an incredible amount of generosity and I am continually reminded at events like this of the special relationship that we share with our tremendously supportive local community.

It all boils down to a common denominator — Soldiers and their families.

We do a great job here of supporting our Soldiers and their families. Fort Benning is a first-class environment for support and our people benefit from that. We also are known across the Army for training the world's best Infantryman and leaders.

Around post in many high-traffic areas, we have recently begun hanging posters titled "What have you done for this Fort Benning Soldier today?" and "What have you done for this Fort Benning Solder and Family today?"

Hopefully, these posters will act as a little daily reminder about our most important responsibilities — to provide the best training we can for the world's finest Soldiers, and to provide the best care for them and their Families.

While the leadership and organizations on Fort Benning are known for the world-class support that they provide to our Soldiers and Army Families, it is good to be reminded once in a while that we are never too busy to ensure that the quality of life for our Soldiers and Army Families must match the quality of their service to our Army and our Nation.

We owe it to these great young men and women, who volunteered to serve our nation, to provide them everything they can possibly need to prepare them for their role in the operational Army.

Hopefully, when you see the poster of a hard-working Soldier and family, it will make this obligation a little more personal.

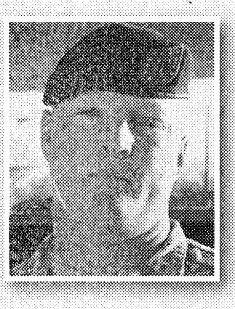

We are seeing significant growth as we integrate the Armor School and build the Maneuver Center of Excellence and there are many things changing on Fort Benning. However, several things will not change: the unwavering support we receive from our neighbors in the Chattahoochee Valley Region, and our commitment to provide the best training for our Soldiers and leaders and the best possible quality of life for our Soldiers, Army Families, retirees, and civilians.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES

If you could give your younger self one piece of advice, what would it be?

Stay in school. Get as much education as you can. Education is always important. If I had to do it all over again, I would have stayed in school. I had some college, but I didn't finish.

— SSG Robert Trainum
USAIC

I would say, "Don't focus on boys." Focus more on sports and education. I had crushes from afar that would distract me in class. And I wanted to hang out more with my friends. I should have exposed myself to more events and opportunities — like sports, chess club, debate club.

— SFC Erika Dacus
13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion

Listen to your parents always, because they're usually right. Mine generally hit the nail on the head.

— Robert Ponder
Windjammer Cable

For me, it would be to be active at a younger age — in middle school. I compare the shape I was in then to what I am now, and I'm better off now, not only physically, but also mentally.

— 2LT Charles West
1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

I would say, "Wait to get married." Don't jump into it so quickly. There are a lot of things you can accomplish — like going to school, seeing the world, having fun without jumping into it right away. And someone might not be the one and you jumped into it too quickly and then before you know it, it can be over. Marriage is a big decision.

Six ways not to get into college

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Spring isn't quite in the air, but college applications are — rustling in the hands of high school seniors everywhere. While seniors fill out these weighty documents, many juniors will start the planning process this semester.

There are plenty of ways, however, not to get into college, if you should choose — ways less obvious than forgetting to write your name on the SAT or insulting the dean. They'll even help you avoid potential scholarships. Here are six. Follow them if you want to thwart your college prospects.

6. Post pictures of yourself passed out on Facebook. College admissions counselors like to party, too. If they're browsing the Web or doing a little background research, they just may catch that picture of you drunk on your MySpace or Xanga.

Do you greet your online buddies with strings of profanity? Have you uploaded a video of yourself doing anything illegal? Make the admin folks worry that's the attitude you'll bring to their college, and it'll make them think twice.

5. Slack off during your senior year. It's the last time you ever can, right? Take all easy classes, skip school as much as possible and let your grades slide. Make sure anyone looking at your transcript can see evidence of a drop in your academic commitment. They won't want to take the risk of inviting you to fail at their university.

4. Plagiarize. This one also works for getting kicked out of college. Academic dishonesty is taken very seriously at the post-secondary level. Try using a snippet of a published article in your admission's essay or just let someone else write the entire thing. Colleges can look at samples of your writing, like the essay portion of the SAT, and compare it with the text you submitted. When they figure out the words you wrote weren't yours, you'll be barred from the school — and that's a guarantee.

3. Ignore all advice about how to prepare for college. If you know where your guidance counselor's office is, forget it. Don't worry about what your parents, teachers and other leaders say, even though they've been through the process. When they suggest applying to more than one college or taking statistics instead of study hall, disregard. Chart your own course in direct opposition to theirs and you'll land on the opposite side from them: without a degree.

2. Don't take the SAT or ACT too seriously. Numbers can't define you. Avoid all prep classes for these important tests, and stay up all night the evening before. That score may be one of the first things a college admin counselor sees. If you don't usually test well, don't put extra effort into your schoolwork. An average SAT score may be balanced out with glowing recommendations, involvement in clubs and good grades. Don't shine there, either, and you're safely excluded.

1. Most importantly, wait. Show no initiative in looking for scholarships or loans, visiting campuses or filling out applications. Let each month pass and so will the deadlines — all of them. Outstanding students with great resumes will not get into college if they continually put it off.

But if you think a two-year or four-year degree might help get you where you want to go in life, plan ahead. Listen to the advice of others. Present a positive image of yourself on your application, online, to your teachers and everywhere.

As someone who graduated from high school less than five years ago, this all is fresh in my mind. I remember trying to find ways to show leadership, commitment and excellence. I remember trying to think about college and "the future" as a freshman and sophomore when many of my friends didn't want to bog themselves down.

The important thing? Don't get too stressed, but know that the real world does come. It's pretty soon after you turn 18. "Adult" things like plans, gainful employment and grocery bills will likely be a part of your life, too.

So look ahead. Squint if you have to. It's there. And there are people here and now who want to help you prepare for it. On post, call school liaison officer Tawanna Brown at 706-545-3062 for questions about your academic plans and where you're headed; off post, talk with your school's guidance counselor.

Or don't.

This week in Fort Benning history

1931

•Uncle Frank Smith, a colored tenant living on a farm near the eastern boundary of the post, was pictured in the newspaper with a forked stick.

Smith was noted throughout the local countryside as a "water witch." Local farmers called on Smith to find hidden veins of water when their wells ran dry.

How did he do it? According to the news account, Smith held the forked stick, a divining rod, of sorts, above his head and walked slowly. When he approached an underground water source, the stick would twist and point downward.

A skeptical Capt. Wild Bill Tuttle, Fort Benning's provost marshal, challenged Smith to prove himself. Smith did him one better. He took Tuttle and another Soldier, an engineer, out for a demonstration and gave each man a shot at the "witch stick."

Sure enough, it worked.

Try as they might, neither man could control the stick. But when it plunged toward the ground, they found water under the surface.

1943

• One Soldier was killed when a twister wreaked havoc on Fort Benning Sunday night. Damage to the post was estimated at $100,000. Hundreds of trees were toppled and several homes damaged.

A friend writes: "The economy is in the toilet, most of us didn't need the government to tell us we're in a recession. What steps can we take to survive?"

First, let's understand the terms recession, savings and credit. Technically, a recession is a reduction in the gross domestic product that continues for two or more quarters. The GDP may be thought of as everything (goods and services) everyone in the country, working together, produces. A recession is a slowing of the business cycle; this means Americans collectively produced less. Savings (of which few Americans have any) is the retention of a portion of the goods (or cash equivalents) produced in a given period and set aside for later consumption. Credit is the use today, by borrowing, of resources we expect to produce in the future. Recessions mean lost jobs and wages as businesses produce less and fewer workers are needed, leading to layoffs. Layoffs are followed by reduced spending as people have less money to spend, leading to businesses producing less; leading to …you get the idea. This sort of activity left unchecked can result in a downward (deflationary) cycle, and if it gets bad enough, to an economic depression.

A recession is like a poor harvest when you're a farmer. You worked just as hard as ever, but drought, disease, or sudden storms made your harvest smaller than expected. You have less to survive the winter, unless you have some savings — a store of wheat or corn for tough times — or you can use credit — borrowing to pay your bills and eat until next year's harvest.

The current recession began because we used too many of tomorrow's resources yesterday and today, and didn't save enough of yesterday's resources for tomorrow (too much credit and too few savings). Tomorrow has now arrived, we have no savings, and we can't borrow anymore.

Next, let's discuss survival. It's unlikely your literal survival will be in jeopardy. More likely is that you'll face financial hardship, especially if your occupation is in a distressed economic sector, such as automobile manufacturing. Even if you don't face the loss of a job within your household, inflation and falling wages can mean reduced purchasing power.

We'll define surviving the recession to mean coming through the recession without major financial disruption (such as bankruptcy), loss of significant assets (such as a home or investment portfolio), and without destroying your personal credit rating due to unpaid accounts, repetitive slow payment, or collections.

It's first necessary to conduct an analysis of your situation by preparing a budget of actual expenses and income. It is a critical step. It's like determining the cause of car trouble before attempting repairs. To not do it is worse than pointless; it borders on the stupid.

Your budget should detail, to the nearest dollar, every bit of income and every expense you have in a given month, for a full year. Don't forget to program in irregular expenses such as oil changes, tuition, and vacation costs; and small costs such as lunches, haircuts, and snacks.

You'll also want to create a schedule of debt — how much you owe, to whom, the payment frequency, and interest rate; and a schedule of assets (things you own). By this I do not mean personal property (such as electronics, clothing, etc.), but rather bank accounts, savings bonds, vehicles, your house, etc.

Now that you have a picture of your financial situation, you can make observations. For example, do you spend more than you make, or do you have a comfortable cushion of income? Do you have assets, such as savings bonds, that you can convert to cash if needed? Do you have an extra car you could sell, thereby saving the maintenance, licensing, fueling, and insurance expenses? How many cars does your family really need, anyway?

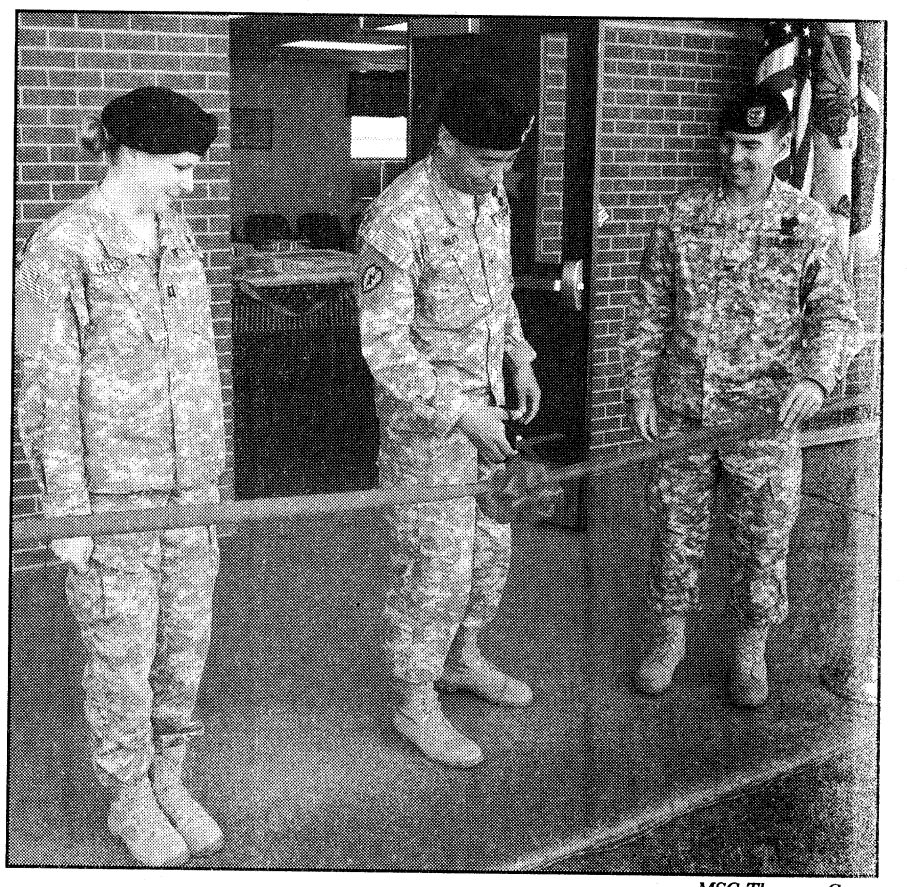

How much do you spend on meals at restaurants? How much on clothing, alcohol, gadgets, cable television, cell phones? Tally these expenses on a monthly and annual basis. In our next segment, we'll talk about how to use these observations to make decisions that will allow us to survive the recession.

Like the farmer with a failed crop, in a recession we must get by with less. Learning to do so is painful for many people, but many people also find that living frugally is a satisfying way of life, and the resultant savings provide additional satisfaction and a sense of security.

Surviving a recession — especially this recession — means re-learning the lessons our grandparents learned in the 1930s. It will mean re-learning the difference between necessities (must have now — food), needs (must have at some point — new clothing) and wants (nice to have, but can be done without — that new car).

After low crawling across the field, Soldiers in B Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, run forward until the drill sergeant tells them to drop.

Soldiers learn discipline, teamwork in 'crawl stage'

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

More than 200 Soldiers in B Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, 192nd Infantry Brigade, went to the field for the first time Jan. 9-10. After a night of land navigation and sleeping in the woods, the company focused on basic soldiering skills, such as conducting security, weapon safety and Infantry movements, Saturday.

These Soldiers joined basic training four weeks ago, but half that time was spent on a two-week break for the holidays, so this is their first opportunity to actually be in the field, said SSG Daniel Weinstock, a drill sergeant with B Co.

Until now, they have been on obstacle courses and studying marksmanship and first aid.

"This is where it begins … the crawl stage," said CPT Cary Gates, company commander. "If you don't get the basics, you're really putting yourself at risk when you go into combat.

"In operations in Iraq and Afghanistan, it doesn't matter what your military occupation specialty is. They're going to be on the road. They could be out there and be hit by an IED. They may have to do route security. Even though their job may not be combat arms, every Soldier needs to be fully capable and trained in all these basic warrior tasks. It's just individual survivability."

During the field training exercise, the Soldiers rotated through three training stations where they learned how to throw a grenade, move from cover to cover with a buddy and high and low crawl. To learn how to throw a grenade, Soldiers tossed a training grenade toward a metal can. If it hit, they succeeded. If not, they would learn for next time. At the other two stations, Soldiers learned to move together, in pairs and as a group.

If you did it wrong, the drill sergeants were sure to let you know, said PFC Vincent Kretlow, 2nd Platoon.

"They correct you, and they have you do it the right way," he said. "(Like) not sticking your head up when you're low crawling. They've been in combat situations. They're only telling us this to help keep us alive. It teaches discipline. I think that's the main thing they're trying to instill. Discipline keeps me moving."

If discipline was foremost Saturday, teamwork was a close second. Soldiers had to cooperate to set up a bivouac site and area perimeter and complete other tasks as assigned.

"How to work as a team, that's pretty much the basic theme here," said SPC Clay Wardlaw, 1st Platoon. "You really need to pay attention to (the training) to make sure you do it right, especially when your life or somebody else's is on the line. One mistake could cost more than your life. It's all about the team."

Wardlaw said the exercise gave him a good idea of what would be expected next time he was out in the field.

"Don't get distracted; make sure I'm doing what I'm told when I'm told; keep (my) head in the game — it's only going to get harder from here," he said.

The next field exercise, which builds on skills learned in this exercise, begins Friday. The Soldiers are slated to graduate Feb. 26.

Soldiers test mental, physical endurance

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

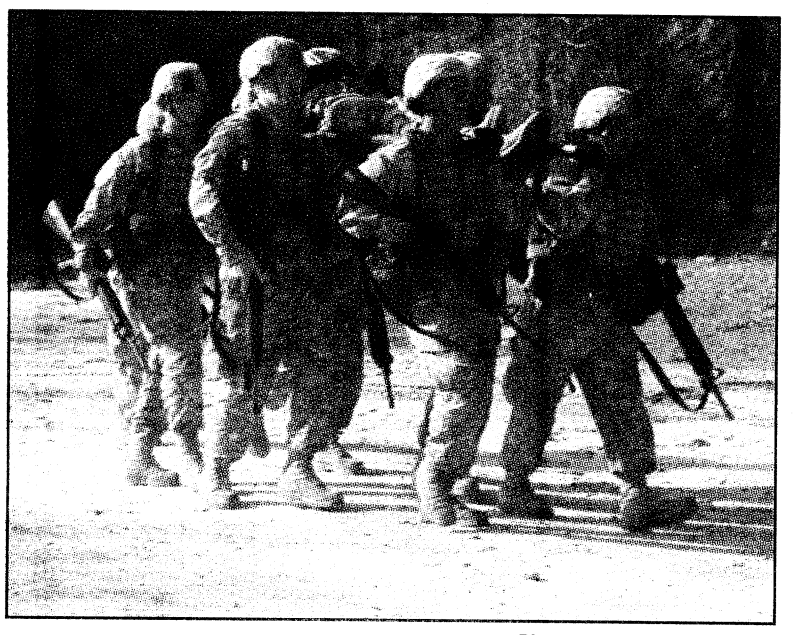

Soldiers ran to Malone Range 2 at Sand Hill Jan. 12 covered in sweat and dirt carrying litters with mock casualties. After two miles of carrying mock casualties, the training wasn't over. The platoon had to run in place while four Soldiers performed IV sticks. From there, Soldiers went to the range and in pairs, had to take out 44 targets with M-16s.

C Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment completed the battle march and shoot event in their eleventh week of training.

"This is a way to assess the Soldiers' ability to keep a cool head in a stressful situation," said SSG Billy Kelly, a drill sergeant.

Although the Soldiers completed these tasks separately in training, it's important they see the connection between them, said Kelly, who has completed tours in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"A lot of times, Soldiers don't associate one training event with another. They assume whenever I shoot, I only have to shoot. When in actuality, everything happens at once in combat," Kelly said. "You'll be walking around a couple of hours. All of a sudden, you'll be getting shot at. You are using your battle drills, and then someone is wounded and you have to treat them."

The Soldiers have to be ready for any situation at any time, Kelly said.

The key to the training is teamwork and physical and mental endurance, said PVT Ryan Wentz.

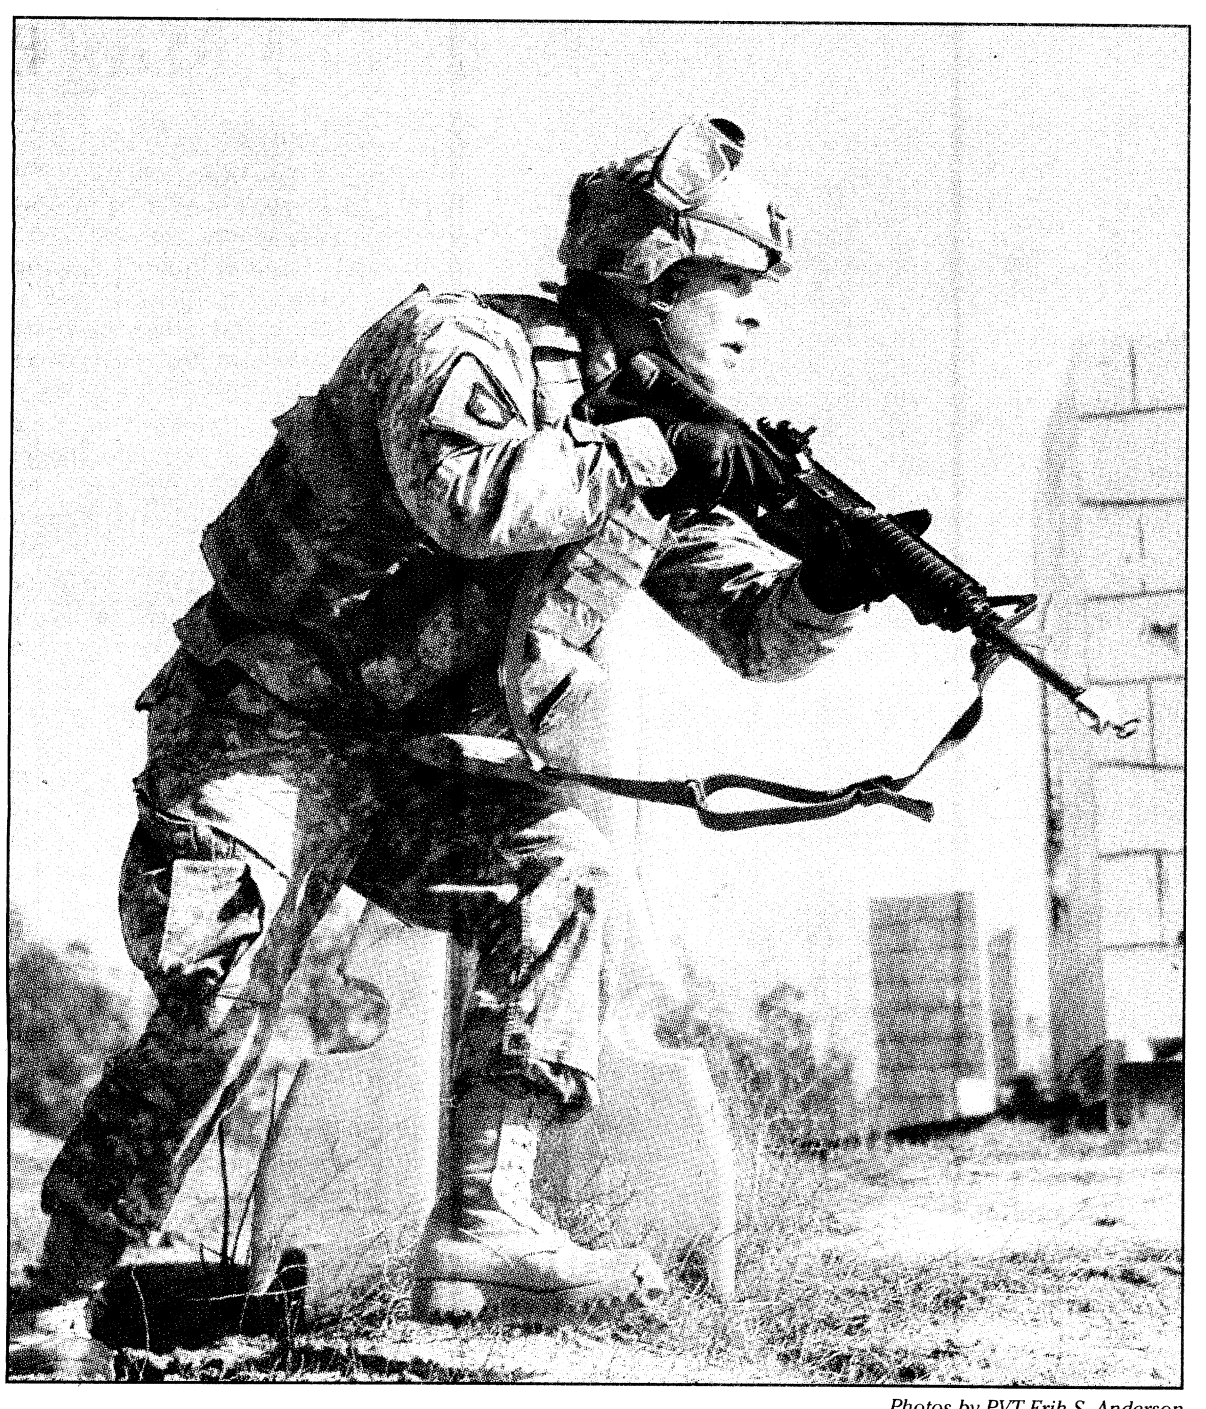

"You have to be able to trust your teammates no matter what and you have to work together as a team to get the litter up the hill, moving in synch with each other," he said.

The most important lesson PVT Daniel Rohe learned, he said, was to execute the tasks quickly, but efficiently.

"It's nerve racking to do an IV stick right after completing a litter carry, but as long as you keep a cool head, and think through the steps one at a time, you will be successful," he said.

PVT Mark Hill and PVT Daniel Rohe give an IV stick to PVT Jerry McKenzie as SSG Billy Kelly, drill sergeant, watches. New year means more training for A 2/69

PVT Erik S. Anderson
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Soldiers of A Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, started 2009 on the ranges and training fields of Kelley Hill.

Beginning the first week after holiday leave, the company began stepping up their training schedule in preparation for the brigade's mission readiness exercise at the National Training Center.

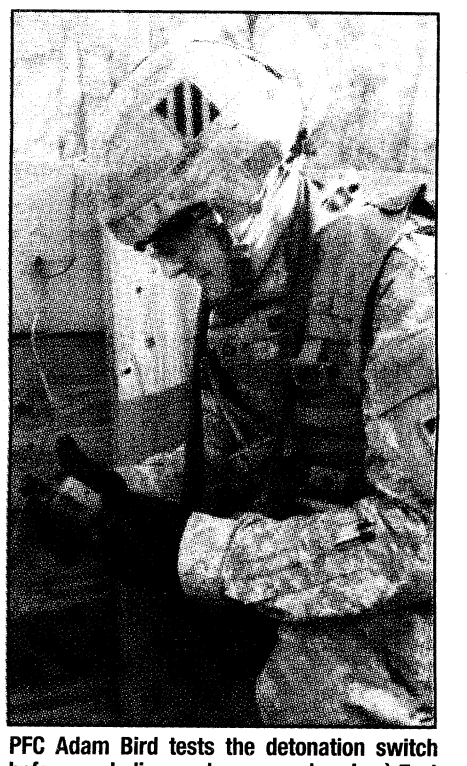

The Soldiers have thrown grenades, detonated claymore mines and practiced movement techniques. Upcoming training will include squad, platoon and company level training.

"Everything up to the new year we were focused on individual training," said CPT George Chigi, commander of A Company. "Now we are training teams, squadrons and platoons."

On the range, three- or four-man teams move around obstacles toward their objective, shooting targets and covering each other's movements with suppressive fire.

"The purpose of today's training is to ramp up to our squad level live fire exercise," said SSG Richard Kroll, squad leader, 1st Squad, 1st Platoon.

Kroll said these skills are perishable and need to be practiced and honed year after year.

PFC Adam Bird tests the detonation switch before exploding a claymore mine Jan. 7 at the Malone Range complex on post. Bird is a Soldier of A Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team. A company used the range as part of their training schedule for 2009, preparing for the National Training Center.

"It is important to develop good habits now in order to make better Soldiers," Chigi said.

"All of the training leads up to Hammer Focus and the National Training Center," Chigi said. "After the National Training Center, we will be certified to go to war."

President: Speaks to service members, families respect of a grateful nation."

The president told the service members he is grateful for the work they do for the United States and they have the support of his administration.

"Going forward, you will have our support and our respect," he said. "You will have a great secretary of Defense in Bob Gates, you will have a great secretary of Veterans Affairs in General Eric Shinseki. And every single day that I am in the White House, I will try to serve you as well as you are serving the United States of America."

During his time at the ball, the president also spoke via teleconference to Afghanistan with Soldiers deployed from the Illinois National Guard's 33rd Infantry Brigade Combat Team. He told those Soldiers he was proud of their service.

Program: Helps Soldiers learn 'better techniques' and the base weapon system for every Soldier in the United States Army is the M-4 or M-16 rifle," Kjonnerod said. "If a supply sergeant is driving on the road in a convoy and is ambushed, he needs to know how to properly employ his M-4. He's got to zero it on tight, so he can knock down that enemy with one shot."

More than 60 instructors tested their skills Jan. 13 on Roosevelt Range. Several ROTC instructors also took part in the weeklong course to better prepare their cadets for the Army.

Representatives from the Army Marksmanship Unit were on hand to assist the Soldiers and offer guidance.

"Instead of pulling a trigger like pushing a button, it's better to be smooth on the trigger," said SSG Tobie Tomlinson, AMU. "If you 'get on' the trigger, you might pull it to the right, if you're right-handed."

Tomlinson demonstrated proper ways to hold the weapon to deliver a steady shot and suggested tips to avoid "getting on" or jerking the trigger.

For SSG Christian Rehm, the instruction was helpful.

"I recently returned from Iraq, so the last time we actually zeroed and qualified was two years ago," Rehm said. "My problem I learned is that I'm always focusing on the target, and I should be focusing on my front sight."

Soldiers shot from kneeling and prone positions. The small targets represented a person 300 meters away.

"It's really a refresher," said MAJ Tiffiney Dimery after her turn to shoot. "I've learned some better techniques on how to fire an M-4, how to get a better sight picture. I feel more confident now that I had the class and I'm out here doing this training."

Dimery learned for the first time how to work with a laser attached to the M-68 close combat optic, which gave her a more accurate shot. Her training would make her a better instructor, she said.

"It is important that we as leaders go through this training, so we'll know exactly how to train our students when they come through," she said. "They are the future leaders of the United States Army."

MAJ Everett Bogle checks his shot group.

New version: To produce more effective Soldiers that this training is as effective, less effective, or more effective than what we were doing previously," Obele said. "Hopefully it will have some impact on how Soldiers are trained."

Input from NCOs who are veterans of Iraq and Afghanistan was key to developing the program, said Finn, a combat veteran who contributed to the development process.

"We took an assessment of what was being taught in training and what Soldiers used in theater, and we noticed there was a gap," he said. "What we have created here is meant to meet that gap."

The goal of revising the ARM program is to produce more confident Soldiers who are more effective in combat, Obele said.

"The end state of the strategy is to create a more confident Soldier who's capable of thinking, who's capable of taking in a whole situation," he said. "A Soldier who can say, 'I have a crowd here … but I'm not going to engage the entire crowd, I'm going to shift my focus and engage the target on that roof.' And that's the product that we're trying to create — a more circumspect and smarter Soldier, and a more effective Soldier."

came in, we got it in the shop by the proper time," Strain said. "We also updated our inspection sheets and files, and made sure our records were squared away."

The branch has a 98 percent readiness rate, which means that nearly all of its fleet, from tanks to humvees to trucks, is ready to operate at a given time, Strain said.

The branch will continue to uphold its standards of excellence, Strain said.

"Once we won it last year, we just maintained it," he said. "Once you set the standard, just maintain it and you should have no problem."

CUSTER ROAD CLOSURE

Courtesy graphic

The Custer Road east bound entrance ramp onto U.S. Highway 27 and U.S. Highway 280 will be closed from 8 a.m. on Feb. 2 to 5 p.m. Feb. 17. The purpose of the closure is to install a new utility manhole. Alternate routes around the closure include Lindsey Creek to U.S. Highway 27 and U.S. Highway 280, or 1st Division Road to the highway at Harmony Church. Detours will be clearly marked.

BUENA VISTA ACP OPEN

The Buena Vista Road access control point is open. Soldiers and civilians with a Fort Benning decal and proper identification can use the ACP, which provides access to Sand Hill, Kelley Hill, Harmony Church and all points north. The hours of operation are 5 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

BEST SAPPER COMPETITION

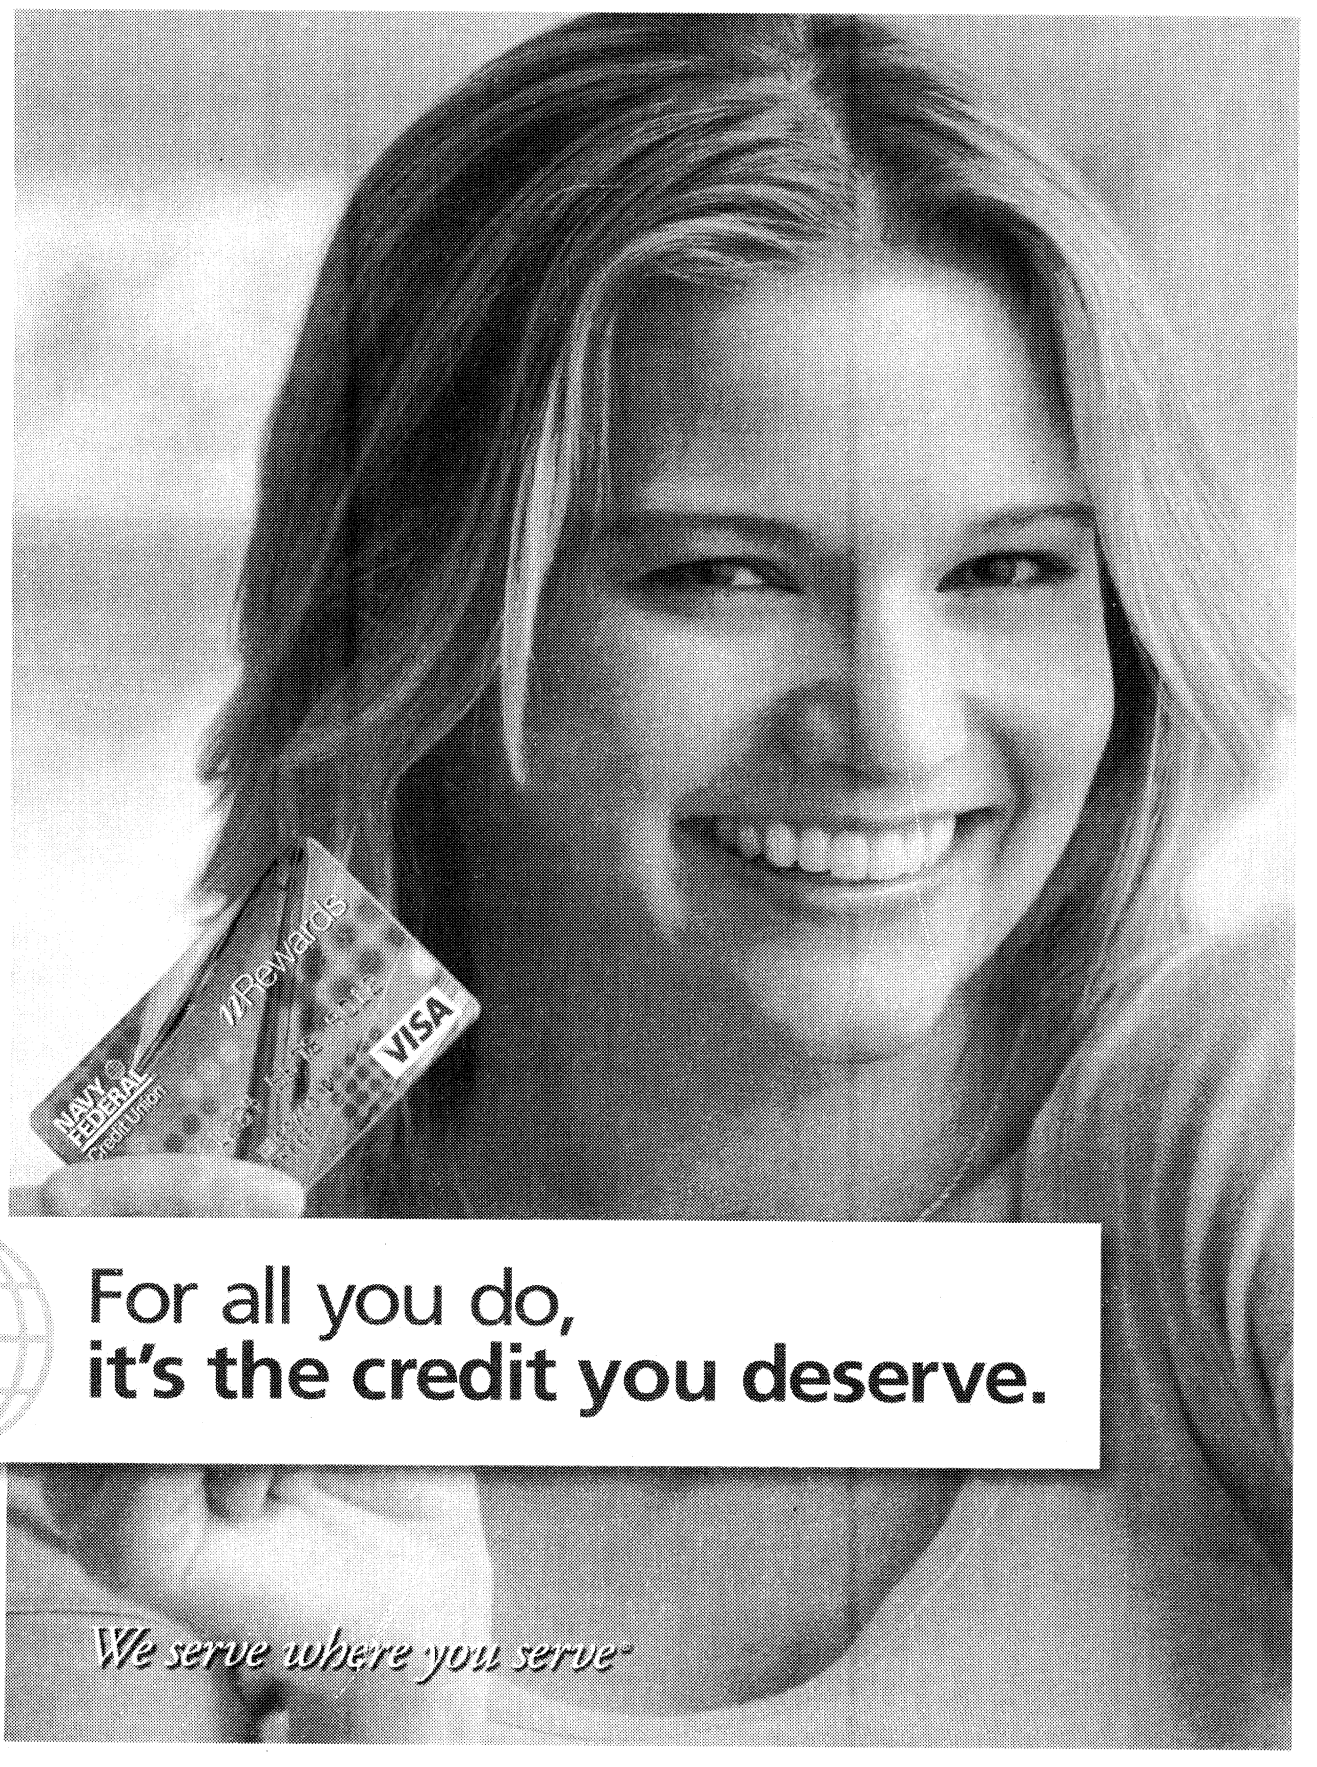

Service members who think they've got what it takes to be the next "Best Sapper" now have the chance to show the Army what they're made of.

The competition, sponsored by the U.S. Army Engineer School's Sapper Leader Course and held in the rugged Ozark Mountains at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., is scheduled for April 20-22. Events will be disclosed on the Sapper's Web site, http://www.wood.army.mil/sapper/BSC/home.html, at a later date. To register, e-mail competitor's names and biography forms no later than April 1 to sean.m.carroll@conus.army.mil or submit requests at http://www.wood.army.mil/sapper/BSC/home.html.

CUSTOMER EVALUATION SYSTEM

Rate services you receive from organizations on post or anywhere in the world via the Interactive Customer Evaluation system.

Log onto the ICE Web site at http://ice.disa.mil, pick out the installation and service of interest and complete the online customer comment card, which will be sent for action directly to the organization rated. Those who leave their contact information will receive a response from the organization. ICE kiosks are located in customer service areas around Fort Benning or comments can be submitted from any computer using the Web site.

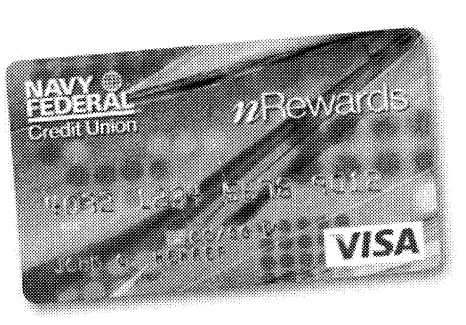

It takes more than a flashy introductory rate to be the best. It takes dependability and character. Navy Federal *n*Rewards® lives up to that reputation—just like the people who carry it.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Steelers, Cards head to Super Bowl

The Arizona Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Eagles, 32-25, to win the NFC Championship Jan. 18. Later in the day, the Pittsburgh Steelers beat the Baltimore Ravens, 23-14, winning the AFC Championship.

Super Bowl XLIII will be broadcast at 6 p.m. Feb. 1 on NBC.

I'm pulling for the Cardinals, since it's their first trip to the big game, but I think the Steelers have the experience to win it all.

McGahee to recover

It was a scary few minutes during the AFC Championship game when Ravens' running back Willis McGahee took a helmet-to-helmet hit with Steelers' safety Ryan Clark, and was lying still on the field.

It is reported doctors told McGahee Jan. 19 that he will make a full recovery.

Even though it was a rough hit, it was legal, since Clark led with his shoulder.

Jets get a coach

After firing Eric Mangini at the end of the season, the New York Jets found a new coach in Rex Ryan, who was employed as the Baltimore Ravens' defensive coordinator.

The Jets announced the hiring of 46-year-old Ryan Jan. 19.

Wake Forest rises to top

In men's college basketball rankings, Wake Forest, who at the time of ranking was 16-0, nabbed the number one spot in the AP Top 25 poll.

Pittsburgh, who was previously ranked first, dropped to fourth. Duke rose from third to second, followed by Connecticut at third. North Carolina rounds out the top five.

Tennis, anyone?

If tennis is your thing, the Australian Open is in full swing through Feb. 1. Check local listings for complete coverage.

Novak Djokovic is the reigning champion, although Rafael Nadal is the top-seeded male in the tourney.

Hockey stars come out

The NHL All-Star game will be at 6 p.m. Sunday on the Versus channel.

Even if hockey's not your favorite, maybe the Honda NHL Superskills program at 7 p.m. Saturday on Versus is more your thing.

Some of the players in the All-Star game include Sidney Crosby, Carey Price and Mike Komisarek.

Pick 12 update

Results from the final Pick 12 standings will be published following the completion of the Pro Bowl game.

Stay tuned to see who won.

Military bobsledders dominate 4-man event at U.S. National Championships

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. — Military athletes displayed the past, present and future of USA Bobsledding at the 2009 Four-man U.S. National Bobsled Championships Jan. 10 and 11 at the Olympic Sports Complex.

Former and current U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program drivers swept the top three spots and an Air Force WCAP pilot finished fifth at the site of the 1932 and 1980 Winter Olympic Games.

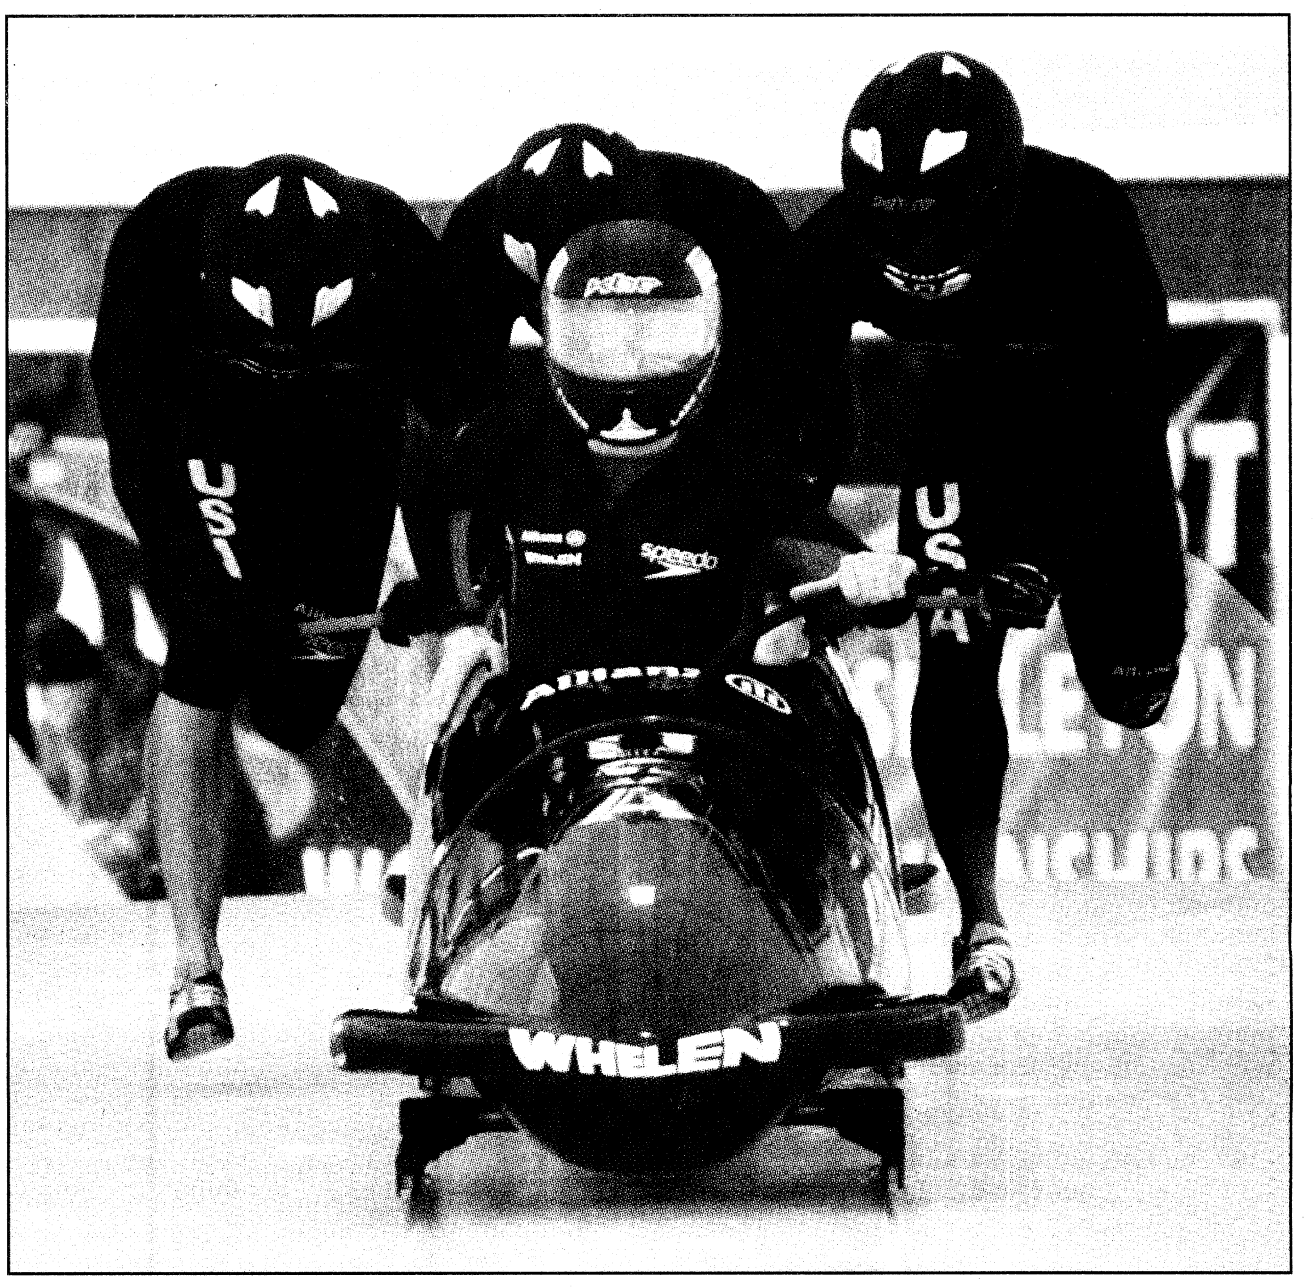

Steven Holcomb, a former member of the U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program, teamed with Justin Olsen, Steve Mesler and Curt Tomasevicz to win the four-man championship with a four-heat cumulative time of 3:37.09 seconds on the 1-mile track.

WCAP PFC John Napier and teammates Jessie Beckom III, Jamie Moriarty and Cory Butner finished second in 3:38:66. Former WCAP SGT Mike Kohn of the Army National Guard Outstanding Athlete Program teamed with Rocky Lanz, Jacob Miller and Nick Cunningham to finish third in 3:39.81. Air Force SSgt Michael Bradley finished fifth in 3:42.72, with Avian Jordan, Ben Fogel and Derek Kresser aboard his red sled.

Holcomb and Napier will compete for Team USA at the 2009 World Bobsled Championships Feb. 20 through March 1 in Lake Placid.

Father, son share competitive cycling challenges

Rachel L. Watkins
Jose Solis Jr. and Maj. Jose Solis climb Cardiac Hill by Lawson Army Airfield. They train together six days a week, 20 hours.

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Cycling is a family affair at the Solis residence. MAJ Jose Solis started competitively cycling when he was 14. When he joined the Army, he took a 16-year break but picked it back up while stationed at Fort Buchanan, Puerto Rico. He's been doing it ever since.

Solis, an instructor at the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, even took a bike and trainer to Iraq when he deployed with the 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion. But he left his racing bike at home, where his son Jose Jr., used it to train for Fort Benning's Reverse Sprint Triathlon.

The year before, the Solis family competed as a team. His father biked, his sister swam and Jose ran; but for the 2008 triathlon, Jose not only ran on his family's team, he competed as an individual, too.

"By the time I got to the end, I was exhausted and relieved to finish the race," Solis Jr. said.

After the triathlon, Jose got a phone call.

"My dad called. He was so excited I finished it," Jose said.

When Solis returned from his 15-month deployment, the two started training together, cycling six days a week, 20 hours a week.

Their training includes climbing hills, flat land and mountains. On an average weekend, they bike about 75 to 200 miles in Columbus, Fort Benning and Pine Mountain, Ga. Both are training for races. Jose is training for the Tundra Time Trial Feb. 14 in Hiram, Ga., and Solis is training for the Vuelta Al Tachira, a three-day race in March in Venezuela and Columbia. Both are training for the Georgia Cup Series, which is Feb. 28 through Sept. 12.

Solis said his son has come a long way since he started last summer.

"I am sometimes scared I won't be able to keep up with him now," Solis said. "He's strong and fast and he's really good at cycling."

Both Solises said the key to successful training is to have someone to train with.

"We push each other. If my dad doesn't want to train I push him and vice versa," Jose said.

Coaches spotlight: Former grappler teaches life lessons

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

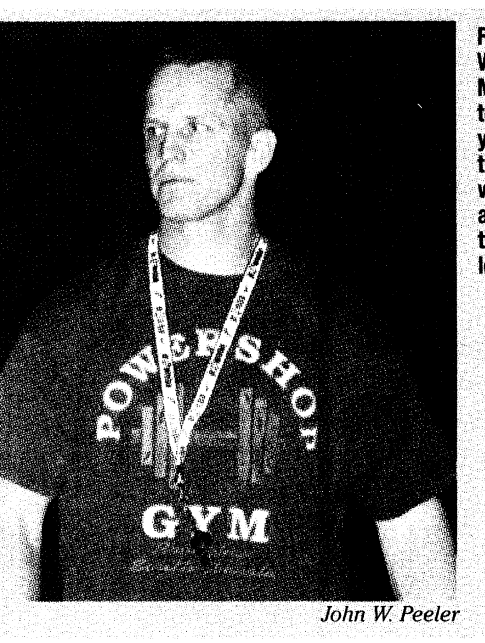

Mark Suich wrestled in high school and last year brought his experience in wrestling and coaching to the Fort Benning wrestling team.

"I have been involved with youth wrestling for five or six years," Suich said. "I started at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, with a team there and then with a team at Fort Drum, New York. I came in here at about the half-year mark and have been with the team the whole year this year."

While Suich emphasizes conditioning drills and the technical aspects of wrestling, he is also concerned about what a wrestler takes away from the program, he said.

"I think wrestling is probably the toughest sport there is and it's a tough world," Suich said. "A guy who has wrestled is going to be more mentally tough down the road, and I think someone who sticks with it as a wrestler will have that to go back to no matter what he does or where he goes."

FIT FACTS

Lori Smith
MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR

It is that time of year and everyone has set resolutions and goals and is trying to stick to them — with weight loss among the top resolutions for people.

So I was thinking about how to help people stick to their resolutions, then like magic, I got an e-mail helping me decide what to write.

Maybe instead of setting New Year resolutions, we should try changing habits. Habits, good or bad, make you who you are, but the key is controlling them. If you know how to change your habits, then even a small effort can create big changes, which can result in an improved quality of life.

Below are a few tips to help get you started in that direction!

•One habit for 30 days — Try to focus on one change for 30 days. I have tried this before and it really does work. If you can get through the first month of working out daily, you will form a new kind of habit and find that your day is not complete without it.

•Use a trigger — A trigger is a short ritual you perform before a habit. If you wanted to wake up earlier, this might mean jumping out of bed as soon as you hear the sound of your alarm. If you wanted to stop smoking, this could be snapping your fingers every time you feel the urge for a cigarette (I know, like it's that easy). A trigger helps condition a new pattern more consistently.

•Balance feedback — The difference between long-term change and giving up on day 31 is the balance of feedback. If your change creates more pain in your life than joy, it is going to be hard to stick to. Don't go to the gym if you hate it. Find diets, exercise, financial plans and work routines that are fun to follow and support your life that you enjoy.

•"But" to kill bad thoughts — Anytime you feel yourself thinking negatively about yourself, use the word "but" and point out positive aspects. "I'm really no good at running — 'but' — if I keep at it and walk first, I can probably improve."

•30, 90, 365 — Most habits go through a series of checkpoints in terms of conditioning. The first is at 30 days. Here it doesn't require a lot of willpower to continue your habit, but you may encounter problems that might offset it. At 90 days any change you might have should be neutral and keeping with your habit is no more difficult than breaking it. At one year, it is generally harder not to keep the habit than to continue with it. Be patient and run habits through the three checkpoints to make them stick.

•Keep it simple — Your change should involve one or two rules, not a dozen. Exercising once per day for at least 30 minutes is easier to follow than exercising Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays with yoga the first day and mountain biking the third day, except when it is raining in which case you will do … Simple rules create habits, complex rules create headaches.

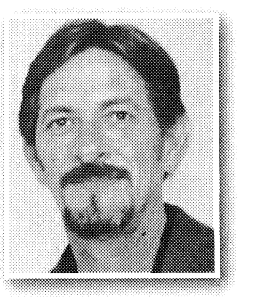

•Consistency is key — The point of a habit is that it doesn't require thought. Variety may be the spice of life, but it doesn't create habits. Make sure your habit is as consistent as possible and is repeated every day for 30 days. This will ensure a new habit is drilled in, instead of multiple habits loosely conditioned.

Make good habits, and they will make your quality of life better. Make bad ones, and they can make life much harder. Try to set some good habits and use the techniques above to make them stick.

Games are won on the field, not on paper

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

"Tonight, we celebrate. Tomorrow, the work begins," said President Barack Obama at one of the 10 inaugural balls he attended over the past couple of days.

The phrase is not an uncommon one to anyone who has coached sports before, and I bet the coaches of the Arizona Cardinals and Pittsburgh Steelers said something similar to their teams following their wins last week in the NFC and AFC championship games.

I know in my 12 years of coaching I said the same thing to my team after every win.

Why? Because no matter how good you are, or how good you think you are, there are always things that you can improve on.

Being the best, and staying on top, requires a lot of hard work. Winners constantly seek ways to get better and those who lose work hard to find ways to win.

It's all about not resting on your laurels or letting past losses get in the way of finding a way to win — every day presents an opportunity to be a winner.

Over the years, I have seen and coached teams on both sides of the coin — the favored, and the underdog.

But, guess what? Athletic games are not played on paper, and neither is the biggest game of all — life.

Many do not see the correlation between sports and life, but the two are almost identical.

Without a plan, missteps are almost certain. Without proper preparation, obstacles are hard to overcome. Without hard work, dreams may go unrealized.

Without a doubt, sports have been one of the biggest blessings in my life.

I have been fortunate to see sports from many angles. I have been a player, a spectator, a coach, the parent of an athlete, and a writer and photographer of sports so I have run the gamut, so to speak.

At every turn, sports and the lessons taught by being involved in sports have intertwined with the bigger game — life.

How closely do sports and life go hand-in-hand? Close enough that the Rooney family, owners of the Pittsburgh Steelers, presented President Obama with the game ball from the AFC championship game.

So, I was not surprised to hear President Obama utter the words coaches use frequently to their team following a victory, "Tonight, we celebrate. Tomorrow, the work begins," because in essence, President Obama will be our coach for the next four years.

Let's hope he brings home a championship.

Wrestling: Coaching athletes to succeed past life on the mat

With more than 60 kids on the team, communication is key with the parents, he said.

"Staying connected with the parents is especially important when you are dealing with such a large program," he said. "You want to make sure the parents know how to sign their kids up for tournaments and how to get a U.S.A. wrestling card and all of that. We want to make sure they have a positive experience so they will want to come back for more."

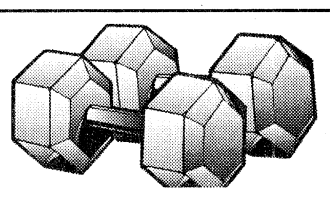

Whether it is on the mat or in life, Suich says he tries to draw on what the kids are experiencing and relate it to something they can understand in today's terms.

"The biggest thing though is trying to stay current with the terminology of the teenager or the younger kid so we can relate to them," he said. "In any kind of coaching that is probably significant. Look at Joe Paterno, he probably changed his stripes several times over the years, yet he is still relevant and gets his message across to his team. It's the same thing we try to do.

"A lot of the lessons are really started on the mat. Kids will ask what they can do to win, and I tell them 'here is the cost to win,' the same is true with academics. You have a lot of kids who want to go to college and you have mental and physical toughness, but it all starts with discipline … you're going to have to do a little more work to be successful whether it is academic or a physical achievement."

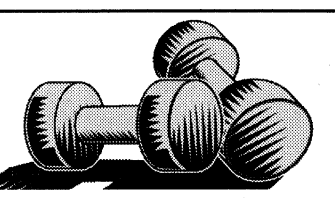

From a high school grappler wrestling in weight classes ranging from 105- to 132-pounds to the gym where he instructs 60 future wrestlers, Suich says he hopes his wrestlers learn more than moves on the mat.

"It is a great thing when you see the light finally turn on all at once, he said. Hopefully, down the road these kids will have done pretty well in whatever it might be. It might not be in wrestling, but hopefully in life."

Nationals: A step forward in the pursuit of a World Championship good enough, I'm here, and I made it free and clear. I've made the World Championships, so I'm really happy."

One week earlier, Napier also qualified for the World Championships by winning the national two-man crown.

"He's no longer little John Napier, the junior bobsledder," said Holcomb, 28, of Park City, Utah. "He's coming around. He was national champion last week, which is cool, and he finished second today, so he's on the World Championship Team again, which is huge.

Army WCAP and Team USA bobsled coach SGT Bill Tavares has helped Napier develop for the past decade.

"I've worked with him since he was 12," said Tavares, who also lives in Lake Placid. "Right now, he's an up-and-coming driver. He's our future. We expect big things from him. He probably has great stuff in him for 2014 and even 2018 because he's so young, and he's still having fun."

Napier credits the military for keeping him on the bobsled tracks to success.

"I reached the point in my career the last few years where I just couldn't go any farther because, financially, this sport is the second-most expensive Olympic sport there is, next to equestrian riding," he said. "The runners alone — the blades we slide on — are $5,000 to $10,000 a pair and I usually purchase two new sets a year because sets of runners go faster on different tracks under different conditions, different temperatures, on different days.

"It's a really expensive sport with all the traveling, and shipping big, heavy equipment around. I joined the Army and was able to be accepted into the World Class Athlete Program, which has helped me out and got me here where I'm at."

The stories of Holcomb and Kohn somewhat resemble Napier's, much like muffled echoes in the Adirondack Mountains snow.

"There's no way I would've been able to support myself and the things that I've done without the backing of such a huge team, a huge family," Holcomb said of serving seven years in the Army World Class Athlete Program. "I'm proud of my country and I have a lot of respect for our Soldiers. It's an honor to represent them."

Kohn spent eight years in the Army World Class Athlete Program before joining the National Guard Outstanding Athlete Program.

"In the off-season, we do a lot of recruiting events, talking to schools, going to NASCAR races or whatever other events we might do to promote the Guard as a Soldier and an athlete," said Kohn, 36, of Chantilly, Va. "It's a fair balance between the two. They ask us for roughly three or four days every two or three weeks to do a recruiting mission. It cuts into your training schedule a little bit, but at the end of the day, the support that you get from them financially is unmatched really with any other sponsor."

"It's a great program. I'm thankful to be in the Guard, thankful to be an athlete. Yeah, I'm at the end of my career, but I've got a year to go and then I'll probably give back to the National Guard when I'm done with this in some other capacity. I'm halfway to retirement, believe it or not."

Bradley, 24, of Hill Air Force Base, Utah, made an unsuccessful two-year run at making the 2006 U.S. Olympic Team before deploying to Iraq. Now he's back in the sled and pointed toward Vancouver for the 2010 Winter Olympics.

"Being off the ice for two years set us back a little bit, but this season is an eye-opener of what I need to be doing to get to the next level and get back to where I was when I went back into the Air Force," Bradley said. "We're going to try and do everything we can to get as close to the Olympic Team as we can. Next season will be our big season to come out for the team trials and see where we go from there. This season is just kind of a mark of where we need to be and what we need to do during the off-season."

A native of Philadelphia, Bradley moved to Rhode Island and began bobsledding at age 12. Six years later, he competed on the America's Cup circuit. In 2004, he stepped up to the Europa Cup.

"My main goal and my final goal would be to make the U.S. Olympic Team," he said. "Right now we're just taking the steps we've got to take to get there and climbing up the ladder, little by little."

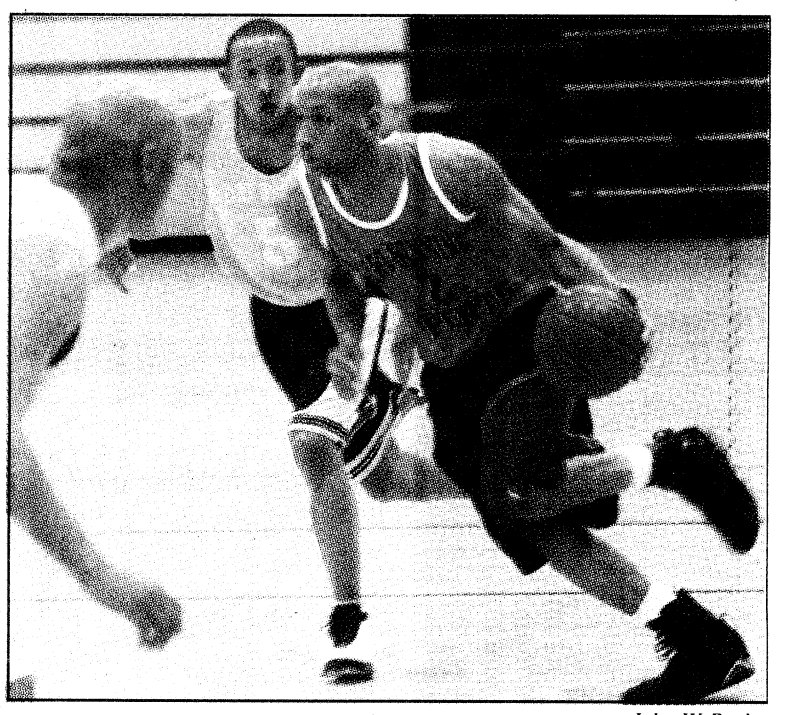

But now, Holcomb and Napier are firmly planted in Team USA driver's seats.

"Last year was my first World Championships in Altenburg, Germany," Napier said. "This will be my second one, so I'm hoping on my home track that I can better it. I'm hoping to podium."

Holcomb, who finished fourth in both the two-man and four-man World Cup standings last season, is stoked to have the World Championships on U.S. ice.

"It's very exciting," Holcomb said of Lake Placid playing host to the rest of the world. "The United States hasn't won a World Championship medal in 60 years or something, and this is going to be one of our best chances because this track is difficult, it's fast, it's intimidating. They'll only get six runs to figure it out, and we've probably had 12 or 15 already in these past two weeks."

THE BAYONET

Al Johnson of the 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, put up 24 first-half points at the SFC Paul R. Smith gym Wednesday to lead the team to a 57-44 victory over A Company, 203rd Brigade Support Battalion.

3/47 led the game for most of the seesaw first half by taking advantage of their quick-break offense. 203rd's only lead of the first half came at the 10 minute mark, but 3/47 quickly regained the lead at 33-28 going into the half.

"We weren't getting a lot of pressure on them in the first half, so I told the team we were going to have to step in and pressure them more," said Shicana Morant, head coach for 3/47.

The 203rd kept the game close early in the second half, but by the 8-minute mark 3/47 began pulling away increasing their lead to 10 points. The 203rd began controlling the offensive and defensive boards while Johnson added 10 more points in the second half to secure a 57-44 win for 3/47.

"Johnson is our go-to guy," Morant said. "And, we were able to get pressure on them and press them in the second half to pull out the win."

With the victory 3/47 moved their record to 3-0 in league play.

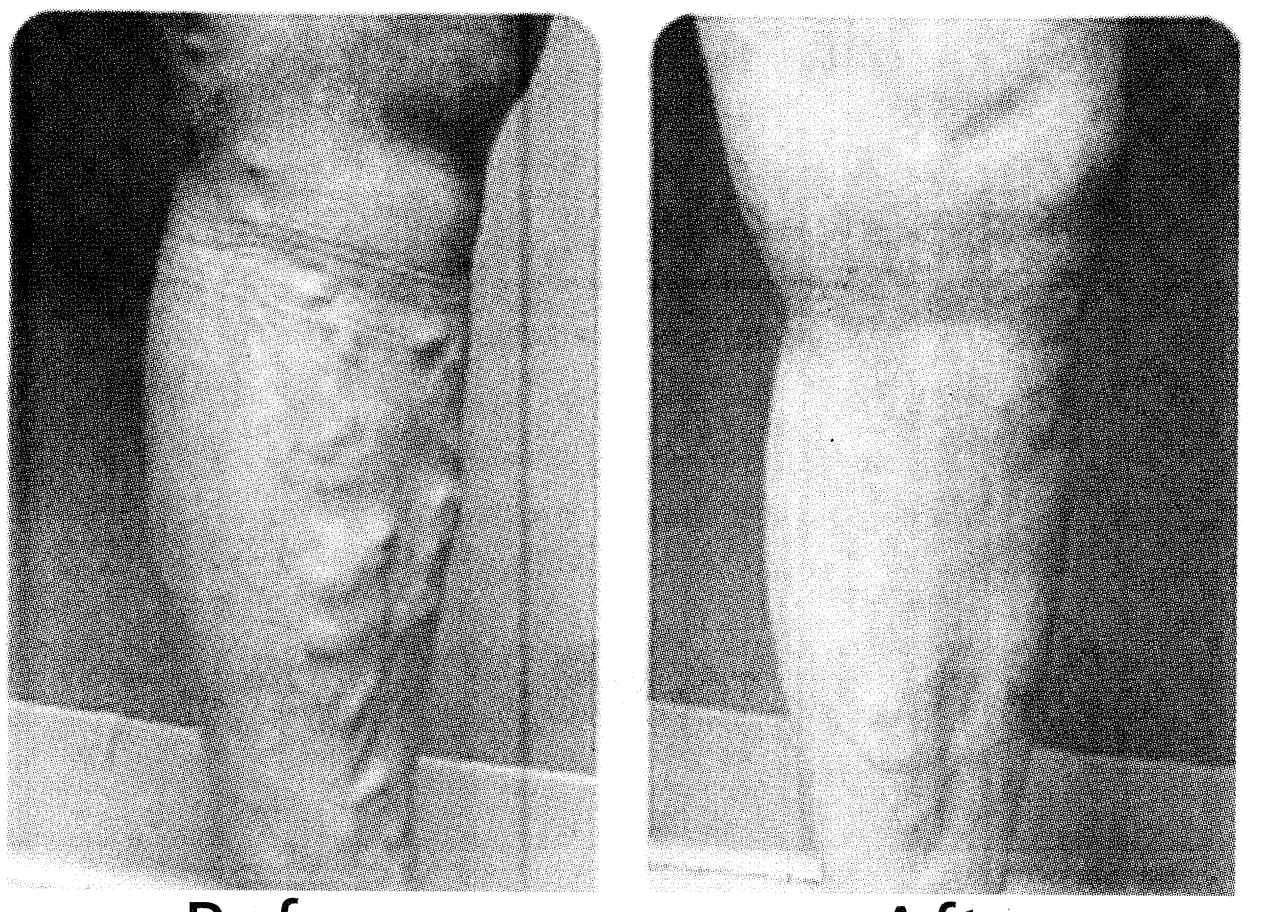

Al Johnson led the game in scoring with 34 points for 3/47 and Ray Johnson was the leading scorer for the 203rd with 16 points.

Scoring: 3/47, A. Johnson (34), Rice (6), Griffith (3), Cox (2), Farella (2), Henry (2), Mullyn (2), Myers (2), Pierce (2), White (2); A 203, R. Johnson (16), Ewing (10), Anthony (8), Hurdle (5), Pope (3), Blackman (2), Cooper (2).

Russ Pond, Pool get 'major face-lift'

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Russ Pond and Pool closed Jan. 5 and will be closed until April because it's getting a major face-lift, said Darlene Hines, outdoor recreation specialist with the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"Russ Pond and Pool was the place to be years ago. We're trying to make it that place again," Hines said.

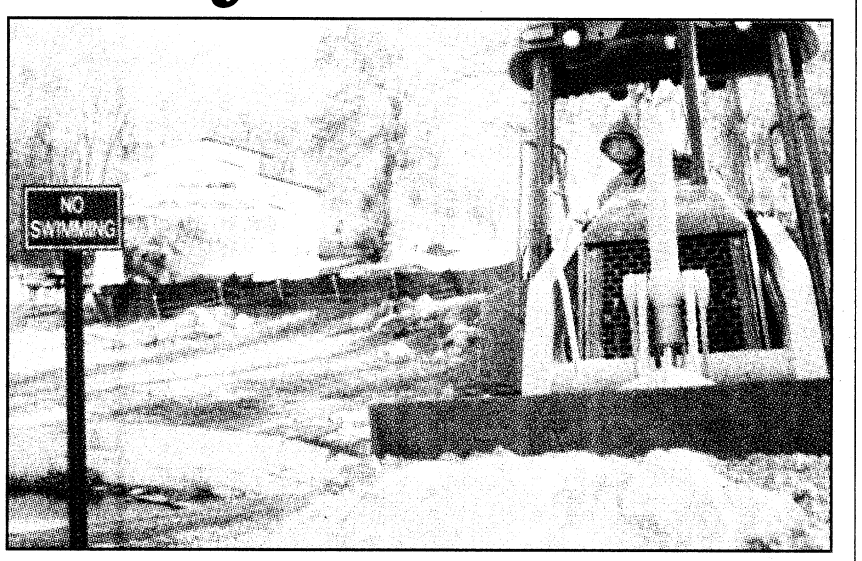

Russ Pool used to be a swimming pool with a bathing house and beach area. It was the first and — at one time — the only pool at Fort Benning. The pool was built in the era of Doughboy Stadium and Gowdy Field.

Although the pool is not used for swimming anymore, the new additions will make it a modern and fun place for families to enjoy the outdoors, Hines said.

New additions include a pavilion, gazebos, map kiosk, paved parking areas, a walking trail connecting the pool to the pond and to the Riverwalk, picnic tables, grills, a sandbox and horseshoe pits. The project will also include reinforcing the pool walls and walkways around the pool.

The $750,000 renovation was in response to a comprehensive Leisure Needs Assessment survey in 2005. DA Civilians, retirees and on- and off-post residents took the survey and requested more green space and picnic areas and shelters for recreational use. Russ Pond and Pool was one of the 12 recreational areas identified from the results of the survey.

"I hope after these renovations are done, more families will come out and spend time together in the beautiful outdoors," Hines said.

The pool is home to the annual children's fishing rodeo and family fishing nights, but Hines said she would like to see more programs at the pool.

Girl Scouts need volunteers

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Rachel Wilkins was about 7 years old and a Brownie in Girl Scouts when she knew she wanted to be her daughter's troop leader someday. Now, five kids later, her wish has came true.

"It was a surprise to me. I wasn't necessarily prepared, but I jumped in. And it worked," Wilkins said.

Wilkins meets with her troop of 14 girls about three times a month, fitting the meetings and trips around her schedule. When her husband was deployed, volunteering was a great way to keep her mind off the deployment and stay busy, she said.

Men and women volunteer with deployed spouses, full-time jobs, children and other commitments, Wilkins said, but the important thing is that anyone can find a way to help.

People often PCS, leaving troop leader and co-leader positions vacant. There is also a need for team leaders, who meet with other adults once a month to help coordinate Scout activities.

Right now, many parents are pulling double duty, said Wilkins, who leads Troop 50291 and serves as the public relations chair.

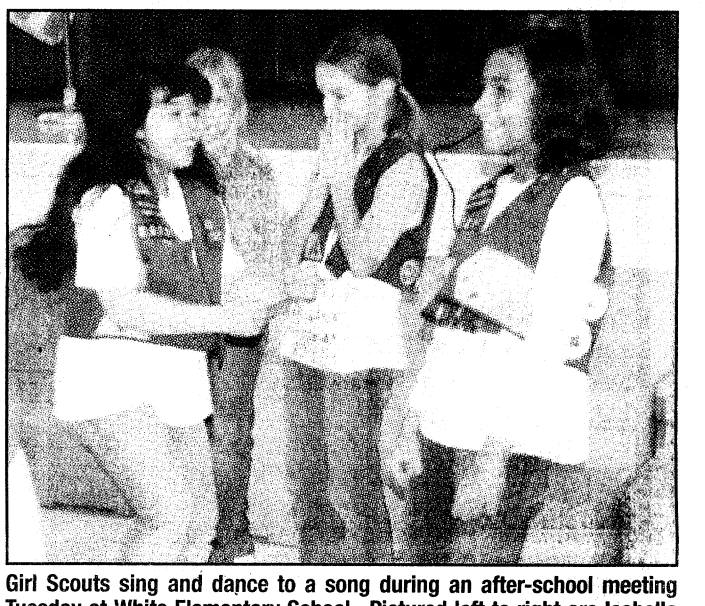

No matter how a person gets involved, volunteering is a rewarding experience, Wilkins said.

"Just working with the girls is probably the most important aspect to me," she said. "They're excited to learn. They're easily inspired. They're eager to be leaders, and it's fun to capture that at an early age because you're building future leaders."

That's one of the things Christine Walrath said she loves about Girl Scouts. Her daughter, 8-year-old Isabella, is in her second year as a Girl Scout.

Principles she learns at home, like leadership,

Junior year time to start college application process

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

High school students planning to attend college should start the process some time during their junior year, said Jean Flowers, a consultant with the College Resource Center in Columbus.

"It gives you enough time to visit colleges, plan your testing schedules, focus on your grades, develop a resume and research scholarships," Flowers said. "Have a plan for how to get where you want to go."

A plan can be as simple as a timeline that includes key dates, such as when to take the SAT or ACT and application deadlines for a few favorite schools, she said.

Flowers suggests starting with a list of about five colleges based first on the student's interests and second on geographical location. The list should include a few "safeties" and at least one "reach."

A "safety" is a school where the probability of acceptance for the student is high. A "reach" is one that may be harder for the student to get into.

When choosing a school, be sure to do plenty of research, Flowers said. Consider the special programs they offer, the size of the school and aid packages available.

Students can visit the campus, spend a night in the dorm, eat in the cafeteria and tour the town. Sometimes they can even sit in on a class.

But, finding the right college is only part of the process. Making the right decisions during high school is equally important, Flowers said. Don't post evidence of any antics on Facebook or MySpace. Instead, cultivate skills college counselors will want to see on the application.

"Get involved in the community," Flowers said. "They want to see who can work with all kinds of people. They are looking at the whole picture. It's not just high SAT or ACT scores, though that's important. It's a holistic approach — What can (you) bring to the college? They want to accept a student who will succeed at their college."

If a student has made mistakes, like suspension or a DUI, they should be honest on the application. It might even be a good topic for the application essay, Flowers said.

"A lot of schools don't require a personal interview," she said. "The essay is your voice, so if you can express yourself, that's important. That's how they know you. And the essay takes time."

Flowers advises brainstorming in a quiet place. Parents can help with ideas and proofreading, but they should never write any part of the essay. That could get the child barred from acceptance for plagiarism.

The role for parents is support — "be encouraging and be willing to listen," Flowers said.

Laura Walker, who has already been through the process once with her oldest child, said it's important not to get too stressed about the college application process.

"You want to make the right choice, but nothing's set in stone for four years. You can always transfer," Walker said.

Walker plans to spend some of her weekends and the upcoming spring break with her son Ian to visit colleges and attend college fairs. In the fall, Ian will apply to his top choices, so by spring, he can choose among those that accept him.

Early action allows students to apply without signing a contract.

Scholarship deadlines approach this semester

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

More than half of all undergraduates receive some sort of aid from grants, loans, work study or other scholarships, during their college career, according to the National Center for Education Statistics. For full-time students, there has been an upward trend during the past two decades of aid awarded.

If high school students hope to receive aid, they usually need to apply by the fall of their senior year, said Jean Flowers, consultant with the College Resource Center in Columbus.

That means now is the time to start looking, she said.

Students typically receive the greatest portion of financial aid from the institution they attend, so look there first, Flowers said.

"If the aid package isn't enough, don't be afraid to let them know," she said. "It never hurts to ask, 'Is there anymore you can do?'"

Students can also apply for the Free Application for Federal Student Aid to receive need-based federal aid. The application is available online at www.fafsa.ed.gov. People may apply before they do their taxes and update the information after they file their taxes.

No matter how much the parents make annually, it's a good idea to apply, Flowers said. They may own a business, have kids already in college or other qualifications that would allow their child to receive aid.

For merit-based aid in Georgia, the HOPE scholarship provides free tuition for eligible students in state with a minimum 3.0 GPA.

Volunteers needed to preserve veterans' legacies

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

As a child, Jeff Beabout loved to hear his great-uncle tell him stories about the Navy. When he was 8, he asked Santa for a tape recorder to record the stories. He listened to them every night before he went to bed.

"Veterans have so many stories and experiences to share — it's important their legacies live on."

In October 2007, the 31-year-old Beabout launched a Web site to tell those stories, www.veterandvdproject.com. On the site, there is a place to volunteer.

1LT Robert Strawley, the executive officer of the Warrior Transition Battalion, is one of the volunteers.

Strawley, who owns a video editing business, edits a DVD every weekend.

"It's such an inspiration to watch these interviews," he said. "I have so much admiration and respect for veterans — it's so amazing to see how WWII vets did so much with so little technology."

Already 20 volunteers have interviewed 300 veterans and edited the DVDs but Beabot said more volunteers are needed.

"It's important to capture the stories while we still can," Strawley said. "Everyone has a story to tell, whether they were sitting behind a typewriter or sitting in a foxhole."

For more information, go to www.veterandvdproject.com or call Beabout at 205-663-8700.

10 tips to help you lose weight

LTC Karen E. Hawkins
DECA

FORT LEE, Va. — Another new year is here and many of us want to lose a few pounds or try to get in shape. There are many diets out there that promise to help you lose the weight, yet not all are safe. To lose weight gradually and keep it off, here are 10 tried and true tips that you can live with while losing weight and getting in shape.

1. Go slowly. Set a realistic goal for weight loss and write it down. Losing 2 to no more than 3 pounds a week is generally recommended by the experts. Remember how long it took to gain the weight? Give yourself time to lose it gradually and you are more likely to keep it off as you change your lifestyle habits.

2. Be active. Calories in, calories out or what you eat is what you get. This means be active. Go walking, swimming, jogging, bicycling or even dancing — an activity you enjoy — to burn those calories. The key is to make physical activity a part of your everyday life.

3. Go small. Use the small plate and small bowl at meals instead of the large ones. It is too easy to eat too much when you use a big dinner plate or a large bowl, especially for that nighttime ice cream.

4. Eat fiber. Aim for 25 to 35 grams of fiber a day. Fiber fills you up and helps you feel full for a long time between meals. Easy ways to get more fiber include eating cereal for breakfast that has 10 or more grams of fiber per serving; eating a pear or an apple for a snack; adding beans to your meals, soups, and salads; and adding a few nuts as a snack or on a salad.

5. Eat protein. Do not skimp on protein; this includes chicken, fish, turkey, lean beef and pork. It also includes dairy foods like skim milk, yogurt, low-fat cheeses, beans and nuts, all found in your commissary at savings of 30 percent or more. The average person needs 0.8 grams protein per kilogram body weight, about 60 to 90 grams of protein a day.

6. Watch those servings. Portion control, portion control, portion control. A serving that is bigger than your fist is probably too much to eat — unless it's vegetables, which is the next tip.

7. Eat your veggies. Eat vegetables at lunch and dinner. Portions are not so important here. In fact, eating vegetables is a good place to cheat if you need to. Make sure to fill up half your plate at meals with vegetables. The fiber, water content and nutrients in vegetables help the body lose weight. Fresh, canned or frozen veggies are all great choices. Avoid sauces, though, as they add many extra calories.

8. Eat your fruit. Fresh, canned or frozen: they all make great snacks and a nice desert. Dried fruit is OK, too, as long as you control the portion sizes.

9. Get support. Get support from your family and friends to stay on track with your weight loss. How about creating your own biggest losers contest and invite others to join? Support goes a long way with weight loss.

10. Celebrate your success. Give yourself a pat on the back and more as you continue to lose weight. It's no easy task. As you reach a weight loss goal, how about something special to reward yourself? Make it something that you really can enjoy like a new outfit, season tickets for your favorite sport, a special vacation. You decide what it is and write it down with your goal.

Nutrition tip: Use fat-free milk instead of whole cream in your coffee to save calories every day and lose up to 10 pounds a year.

Loss prevention technology at PX prevents shoplifting

Ixis Leon
AAFES

AAFES uses the latest in loss prevention technology to prevent shoplifting. Manufacturers can place tags inside the packaging of many items to reduce shoplifting, and some tags sound an alarm if someone attempts to remove them without the proper device.

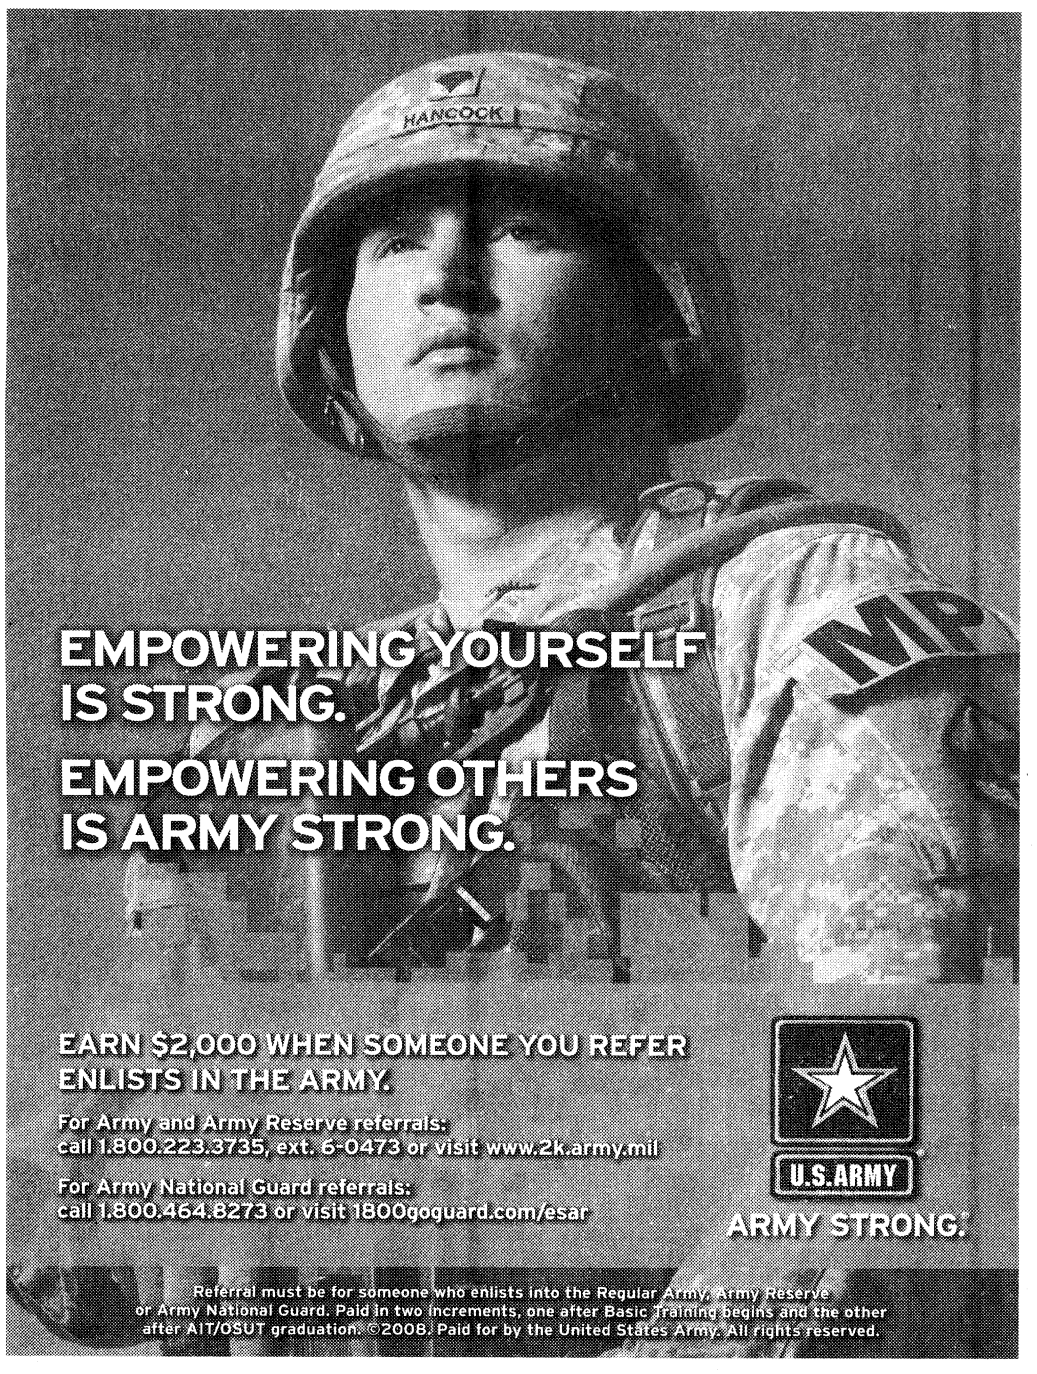

Products are also monitored by a video surveillance system that can coordinate the movement of up to 110 strategically placed closed-circuit cameras.

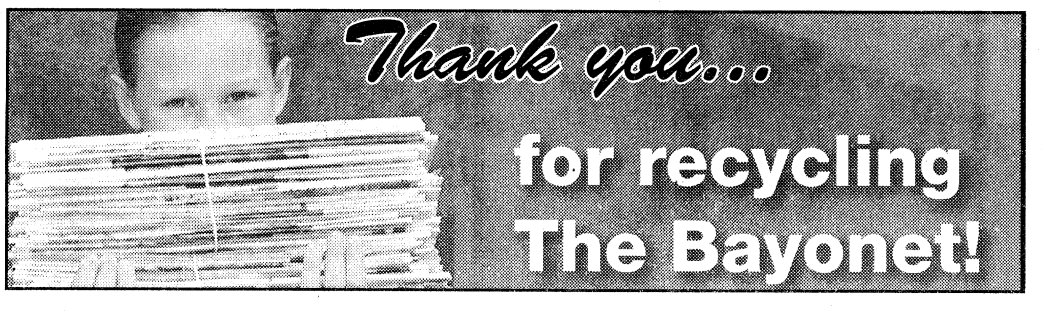

When shoplifting is suspected, AAFES associates turn the issue over to local law enforcement. Visible reminders like security tags and camera systems not only deter criminal behavior, but also identify and document it, said Ken Brewington, general manager of the Fort Benning PX.

"Activities that diminish exchange shoppers' return on investment negatively impact military families' quality of life," said Brewington.

"Fortunately, our team is leveraging the latest crime fighting tools available to further strengthen the exchange benefit Soldiers and their families have come to depend on."

Post celebrates MLK Day, civil rights progress

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

For those who attended the annual Martin Luther King Jr. commemorative service Jan. 15, it was a time to celebrate. On the 80th anniversary of MLK's birth, Soldiers, family members and civilians of diverse races and backgrounds gathered in Marshall Auditorium to honor the life and work of the leader of the civil rights movement. Songs like We Come a Long Way played before the service, setting the tone for the ceremony.

America has come a long way, said guest speak Dr. Ann Hardman, author, bishop of a local church and founder of The Impact Center.

In light of the inauguration, it is clear that MLK's efforts for equality were not in vain, she said, but those efforts must continue.

"We can all celebrate and say that there has been momentum," Hardman said. "(But) celebration is an active word. It is more than a one-day event where we come together and reflect. We reflect on what was done — the price that was paid for us to have the liberty that we have now — and then we move from that point and we say, 'I must take action.' That celebrates the life of Dr. King everyday."

Many listeners echoed her enthusiasm throughout her speech with spontaneous applause and words of affirmation. One of these was 74-year-old Marie Snipes, a former Army wife and member of Hardman's church.

"It was just good. I wanted to stand up on my feet through the whole ceremony," she said.

Snipes said America has come a long way — a "really long way." During her youth in rural Alabama and later Columbus, segregation, discrimination and inequality were everywhere.

"You had to go in the back doors," she said. "You had the white fountain and the colored fountain and the black bathrooms and the white bathrooms. It used to be black schools and white schools. When we moved to Columbus, we had to ride in the back of the bus. We had one seat, and if that seat got filled up, we had to stand. That was the way it was."

Snipes remembers seeing MLK on TV as he led marches protesting segregation.

"He was a dynamic man. I just loved his personality and what he stood for. I always believed in that man," she said. "I used to tell my children, 'He's paving the way for you all. Things are going to be better when y'all grow up. It won't be like it was when I was growing up. It's going to be different.' And I used to tell my children — I don't know why — 'One day we're going to have a black president,' and I said, 'I hope I'll be living to see it.'"

Snipes laughed, remembering how her children called to remind her of her words and that she's alive to see her idea fulfilled.

"It's good to see how things have progressed. I just look around and it seems like they're flowing so beautifully; they just look good combined all together," said Snipes of the Soldiers she saw on Fort Benning last week.

Progress will continue, Hardman said, if people keep working together to strive for equality.

"We can leave our children an inheritance," she said. "We can show them the way, so that when we're dead and gone, our next generation will celebrate Dr. Martin Luther King not just in memory but in actions.

"I am seeing progress. And the reason we see progress is because people are not just reminiscing over the action of one man, but we are taking action as many men, like the one man did, and we'll change our world."

President Barack Obama called for a "new era of responsibility" in his inauguration speech, and the Fort Benning community will focus on taking responsibility for personal finances from Feb. 22 to March 9 during Military Saves Week.

Banks, military and government services, and civilian organizations will join forces for a campaign to encourage military families to set money aside for personal savings. The week is part of the ongoing Department of Defense Financial Readiness Campaign and the national America Saves campaign.

"The whole idea behind it is to get people to make a commitment to building wealth," said Ann Pratcher, Financial Readiness Program manager. "We want people to set a specific savings goal, whether it is paying down debt or committing to starting to save. It's very timely because it ties in with what President Obama has been saying about making a commitment."

The Financial Readiness Program will offer classes during Military Saves Week on topics including money management, savings and car buying.

At the Fort Benning Columbus Bank and Trust branch, literature about Military Saves Week will be available in addition to the bankers who are always on hand to discuss creating a savings plan.

For first-time savers, the best approach is to start small, said Jeff Saeli, regional manager of military banking for Columbus Bank and Trust said.

"I encourage people to start with $10 or $20 per paycheck," he said. "Often, when people decide to become savers, they'll put so much money aside that they decide they can't do without it, and then withdraw it. You really have to commit to not taking out your savings."

Bonuses and other one-time payments are an exception, Saeli said.

"For those, I would take about 75 percent and set it aside, and spend the other 25 percent," he said.

A fund for short-term emergencies is one of the most important ways to begin saving, Saeli said.

An important consideration for military families creating a savings plan is to make sure they can access their savings when they relocate, Saeli said.

"If you bank with a small local bank, make sure you can access your account," he said.

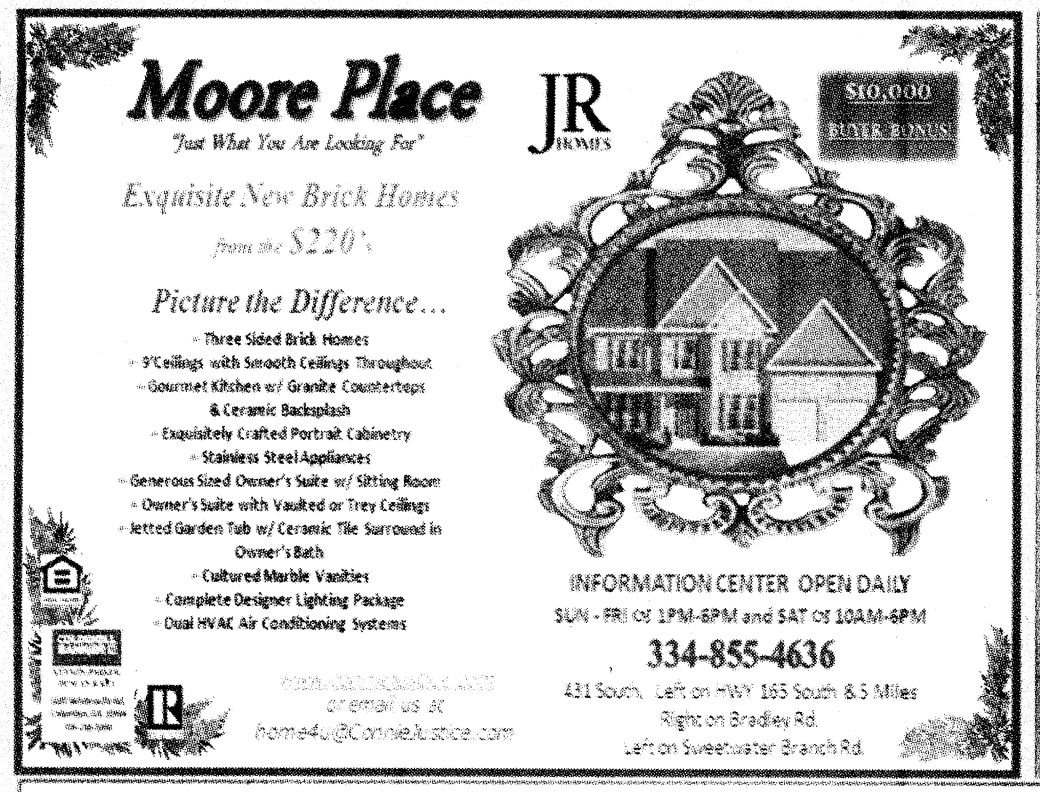

Any steps taken toward saving are important, Pratcher said.

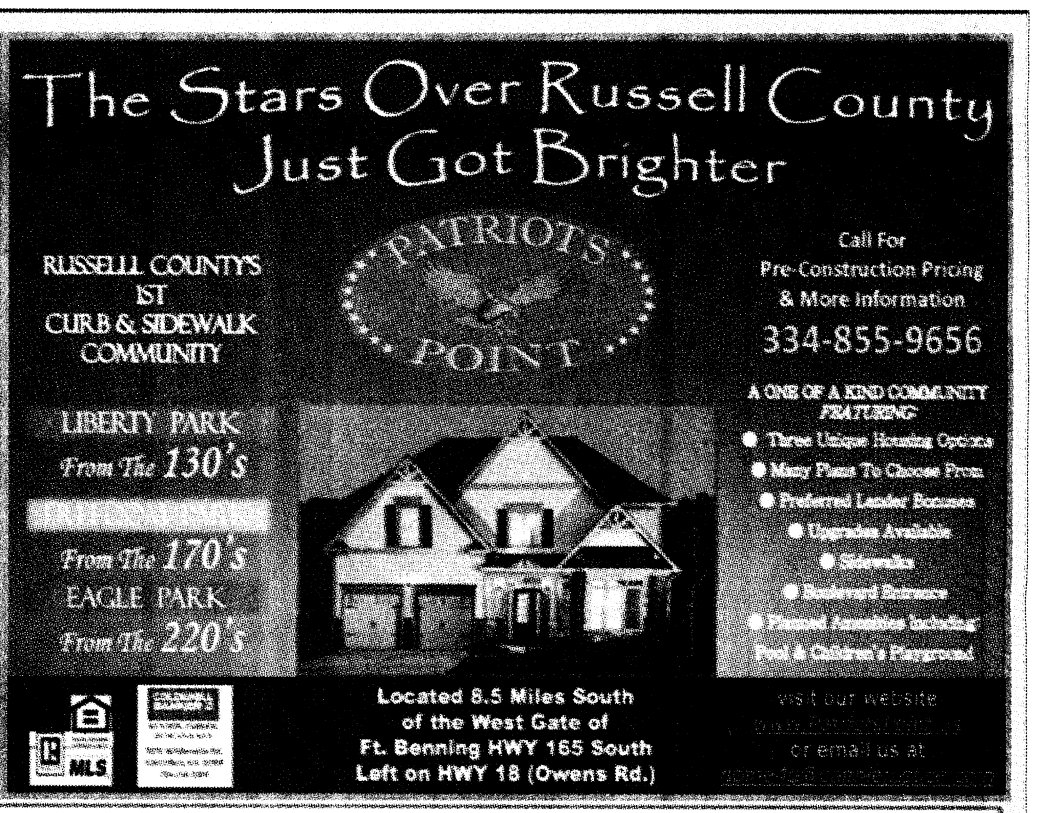

"Whether it's in the form of saving change, going out to eat one time less a week ... they can take that difference that they saved and either put it into some sort of savings or apply it to paying down debt," she said.

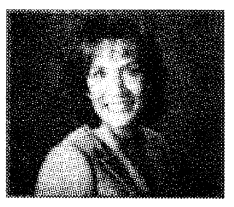

Saeli emphasized the importance of having an ongoing savings plan to protect against unforeseen circumstances.

"Saving isn't something you do once a year, it's something you should do on an ongoing basis."

3rd HBCT holds first FRG meeting of the year

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team held their first Family Readiness Group meeting of 2009, Jan. 15 at the recreation center at Kelley Hill, .

Representatives from the FRGs of each battalion gathered to review the brigade's training schedule and to listen to several speakers from various family advocacy groups.

COL Peter Jones, the commander of the 3rd HBCT, stressed the importance of the FRGs and their importance to the Soldiers of the brigade.

"Our pace is picking up, as most of you are seeing right now," he said. "The purpose of our FRGs is to build a core of caring individuals who can help increase our combat effectiveness by allowing our Soldiers to concentrate on their jobs and not look back to see what is going on at home."

Jones encouraged FRG leaders to look at the training calendar and look for ways to prevent potential problems.

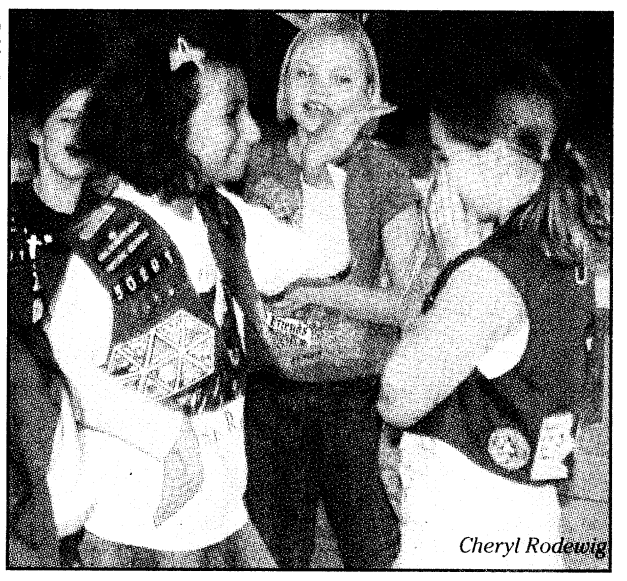

"I want you to think about what that calendar means to you as leaders and consider how it will affect the families of this brigade," he said. "We have a lot of families that are new to the military and we need to help them by curbing expectations that are unrealistic."

Jones explained that as the brigade's training tempo picks up, 3rd HBCT Soldiers will be spending more time away from home getting ready for their next deployment.

"There will be periods where wives will not be able to get in touch with their spouses when we are out in the field," he said. "That is just the reality of what we do. It is my hope that our FRGs will be able to step up and help one another when those times arise."

Representatives from Army Community Services, Operation Home Front and Family Life spoke with spouses about the services they offer and how 3rd HBCT families can prepare for their Soldiers upcoming deployment.

The next FRG round-up will be held April 8.

Kate Wilkins, 8, dances in front of Lauren Litz, 8, while 9-year-old Rebekah Jacobs looks on. "I love Girl Scouts," Kate said. "It's one of my favorite things to do — selling Girl Scout cookies, making crafts, field trips, earning patches. And I get to make new friends. Kate said she likes having her mom as a volunteer because she gets to spend time with her.

cooperation and generosity, are reinforced in Girl Scouts, Walrath said.

"What I noticed since she's been in Girl Scouts is that she's able to look beyond herself," Walrath said. "She has learned the spirit of volunteerism at an early age. She has learned to think of how her actions can have positive benefits for others. That's going to help her so much later on in life."

Isabella said she loves being in Girl Scouts, where she learns teamwork and how to help others. All the other girls and the adult volunteers are her friends, she said.

To be a friend to a group of Girl Scouts or to mentor other leaders, call the director, Shannon Moon, at 706-610-5524. Commitments of about a year, with summers off, are typical, but mid-year and summer-only positions are also available.

"Like Juliette Gordon Low, founder of Girl Scouts, said, 'Scouting rises within you and inspires you to put forth your best,'" Wilkins said. "That still applies to me. To be friendly and helpful, to try and make the world a better place, that's part of being a person in this world."

College: Requires preparation

Flowers said. Early decision, however, is a binding option that means a student who is accepted must attend the college.

Early acceptance means less stress during the student's senior year, Walker said.

For students in their senior year, it's not too late. They can apply to a college with a later deadline and transfer to another university after a year or two, she said.

Parents going through the process for the first time — take heart, Walker said.

"The first one is tough, but after that, it gets easier," she said. "And it will set you up for success if you have other children."

For help with college, call school liaison officer Tawanna Brown at 706-545-3062 or talk to the school counselor. For an appointment at the CRC, call 706-660-6899. For information on colleges in state, visit www.gacollege411.org.

Scholarships: Available online

Students can also look at scholarships available through local businesses or charities, a parent's employment or their religious organization.

The more specific the scholarship, the better, said Laura Walker, who helped her oldest daughter, Devon, find a home at Georgia Southern last year.

Walker heard from another military spouse about a special scholarship available for children of Rangers. Devon applied and received the scholarship.

"A lot of organizations provide scholarships, but sometimes no one applies for them," Walker said. "A narrower focus is definitely an advantage. That way you're not competing with every other junior who wants to go to college."

John W. Peeler
Applications must be filled out on time.

For her oldest son, Ian, now a junior, she is looking at a possible ROTC scholarship.

Military children should also consider the commissary scholarship and the Community Spouses Club scholarship. The commissary scholarship can be downloaded from www.militaryscholar.org or picked up at the local commissary. CSC scholarship information is online at www.fortbenningosc.org.

The Army Emergency Relief Education Assistance Program provides aid for dependents of active-duty or retired Soldiers. More information is available at www.aerhq.org/education.asp.

Walker also suggests visiting www.fastweb.com and typing in all affiliations. Results will be limited based on a person's background, test scores, school and work connections and other factors.

To be eligible for as many scholarships as possible, students should try to improve their test scores and get involved in other organizations, such as local charities, school clubs or leadership groups.

Students should also consider classes to help them prepare for the SAT or ACT, Flowers said.

Planning ahead makes it less stressful later on, she said.

around Fort Benning," said Beanie Ford, RCI Liaison officer. "And, it gives them a chance to find out what events are going on around the community."

Representatives from the garrison command staff, Residential Communities Initiative, Directorate of Emergency Services, AAFES, Defense Commissary Agency, the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation and other post leaders will be at the meetings to address any concerns residents have and talk about what's going on in the community including concerts and events.

All Fort Benning residents are welcome to attend and they just need to show up, Ford said. The meetings will end by 8 p.m.

Daily habits of happy marriage

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Have you ever wondered what the couple who seems so happy in their marriage does? You know the couple — they look into each other's eyes and talk with each other. They laugh and have fun together. And they are not newlyweds.

Someone said when he is in a restaurant, he can always tell newlyweds or dating couples from those who have been married a long time. He said the newlyweds are the ones who are looking at each other and talking while the old married couple looks around at every one else and don't talk. If this is true, it is a sad commentary on our relationships. One daily habit we need is to talk with our spouse. I am not referring to the "necessary communication" most people use when they get into a rut. Asking what's for dinner or what time will you be home from work is not talking. Happily married couples typically say their relationships work better when they can sit down and talk one-on-one, like thinking, feeling adults. But who's got time for that?

Marriage expert John Gottman says couples need the "magic five hours," which is to spend five hours a week talking — and the five hours is spread over the course of a seven-day week. It breaks down like this: two important times in your daily life is when you depart for work and when you return each day. Before you walk out the door, make sure you spend at least two minutes with each other. Give each other a kiss, a hug and talk for a few minutes. Two minutes five times a week equals 10 minutes. When you come home, take 20 minutes to debrief with each other and re-establish your love connection. Twenty minutes times five days a week equals 100 minutes. You are almost at two hours and you did nothing but come and go.

Next, you can fill your mate's emotional love tank in just 10 minutes a day. During this time, build your friendship, express your love and fondness, your appreciation and admiration toward your spouse. Ten minutes a day for seven days equals 70 minutes. Are you keeping up with the math? Ten minutes in the mornings, 100 minutes in the evenings, 70 minutes over the course of the week and we are at 180 minutes, the equivalent of three hours. That leaves two hours to get to the magic five. This is accomplished with a weekly date of at least two hours. Now you don't have to go out, although you probably get more points by getting away from the house, especially if your spouse is a stay at home mom or dad. Keep in mind the date should allow for communication. While watching a movie may be enjoyable, it does not count. You need to tack on two more hours doing something else.

Fulfill this plan with good, effective communication — without criticizing and tearing each other down — but focus on fondness and admiration, and you are on your way to a lifelong relationship. If feel like you or your relationship is in a rut, maybe you could use a marriage tune-up. If so, call the Chaplain's Family Life Center at 706-545-1760 or stop by 2606 Dixie Road in Soldiers' Plaza.

'Super' food for a bowl game

Michelle L. Gordon
USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

When football season kicked-off back in September not many people predicted the Arizona Cardinals would be making an appearance in Super Bowl XLIII. Now 20 weeks and nearly 270 games later, the so-called underdogs are preparing to take on six-time Super Bowl contenders, the Pittsburgh Steelers. So even if you still can't spell Roethlisberger or you don't know Kurt Warner from Kurt Russell, one thing is certain — it's party time. However, whether you watch the game for the football or the commercials, you probably don't want to spend half the night in the kitchen. But before you pick-up the phone to order take-out, take a look at these PAO football favorites that are not only delicious, but also deceptively easy. We may not know football, but we know food.

SLUMDOG MILLIONAIRE

Jamal Malik, an 18 year-old orphan from the slums of Mumbai, is about to experience the biggest day of his life. With the whole nation watching, he is just one question away from winning 20 million rupees on India's "Who Wants To Be A Millionaire?" But when the show breaks for the night, police arrest him on suspicion of cheating?

Desperate to prove his innocence, Jamal tells the story of his life in the slum where he and his brother grew up, of their adventures together on the road, of encounters with local gangs, and of Latika, the girl he loved and lost.

Each chapter of his story reveals the key to the answer to one of the game show's questions. Intrigued by Jamal's story, the jaded police inspector begins to wonder what a young man with no apparent desire for riches is doing on a game show. Yet for all their charm, beauty and irreverence, the Wheelers find themselves becoming exactly what they didn't expect — a good man with a routine job whose nerve has gone missing; a less-than-happy homemaker starving for fulfillment and passion; an American family with lost dreams, like any other. Driven to change their fates, April hatches an audacious plan to start all over again, to leave the comforts of Connecticut behind for the great unknown of Paris.

Prevention is key to safe motorcycle riding

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Preventative measures can go a long way in ensuring motorcycle riders' safety, Fort Benning motorcycle safety class instructors said.

"Protect yourself as much as possible by wearing proper gear," said Mike Snapp, motorcycle safety class instructor. "It's one of the most important things you can do when you ride."

On post, all riders must wear a Department of Transportation-approved helmet, full-fingered gloves, shatter-resistant eyewear, a shirt with long sleeves, long pants, sturdy shoes that cover the whole foot and a reflective vest or jacket. Soldiers must also wear the required gear when riding off-post.

Motorcycle riders should check that their tires are in good condition and have proper air pressure, as well as checking their cables and making sure that the motorcycle's engine is in good mechanical condition, said Wesley Lee, a motorcycle safety class instructor.

All vehicles on post must be registered with the Military Police Vehicle Registration Division, in Building 315. Anyone riding a motorcycle on post must take a motorcycle safety class before they can register their vehicle. Classes are offered once a week from

Welcome to Fort Benning

Adriane Mandakunis' first experience in the Army was when she arrived at Fort Benning in September.

"It was little intimidating when I first came here. My husband was in OCS and I had two children and didn't know anyone or where anything was. And I didn't know what anyone was saying — military language is a lot different."

She had much to do, she said. She had to enroll the children in school, learn her way around and learn the military lingo, among other things.

After hearing about the Fort Benning newcomer's orientation, Mandakunis thought it would be a good idea to go.

The newcomer's orientation, open to everyone, gives newcomers a chance to learn their way around post, talk to post organizations, meet new people and learn local history, said Christina Daily, relocation readiness program manager at Army Community Service.

During the orientation, participants can talk to different representatives from Fort Benning Schools, Army Family Team Building, MEDDAC, DENTAC, on and off post housing, Child Youth and School Services, and others.

Participants are given a guided tour of Fort Benning and Columbus, the PX, commissary, monuments, and local attractions like the Liberty Theatre, the National Civil War Museum and the Pemberton house.

"This is an Army family. We want everyone new to post to feel welcome," Daily said. "We don't have all the answers, but we can find the answers if we don't know them."

By going to the orientation, Mandakunis learned about the Army Family Team Building program. The program consists of four levels including classes on Army acronyms, custom courtesies, time management skills, crisis coping and leadership skills.

Mandakunis is now a volunteer instructor for AFTB, because she learned so much from the class.

Captains train as company commanders

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The Maneuver Captains Career Course and Infantry Basic Officer Leadership Course collaborated Jan. 5-9 to create a unique training experience for both groups. Two captains from MCCC, Josh Powers and Jon Lum, were assigned to lead IBOLC Soldiers in a scenario-driven exercise. As the captains learned to be company commanders, the lieutenants learned to be platoon leaders.

It was a good opportunity to work together to improve training, said CPT Mariano Wecer, company commander for A Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

IBOLC students have a chance to hear from someone beside their regular leadership, Wecer said. When they hear "an outsider" say the same thing, it reinforces what they've been taught.

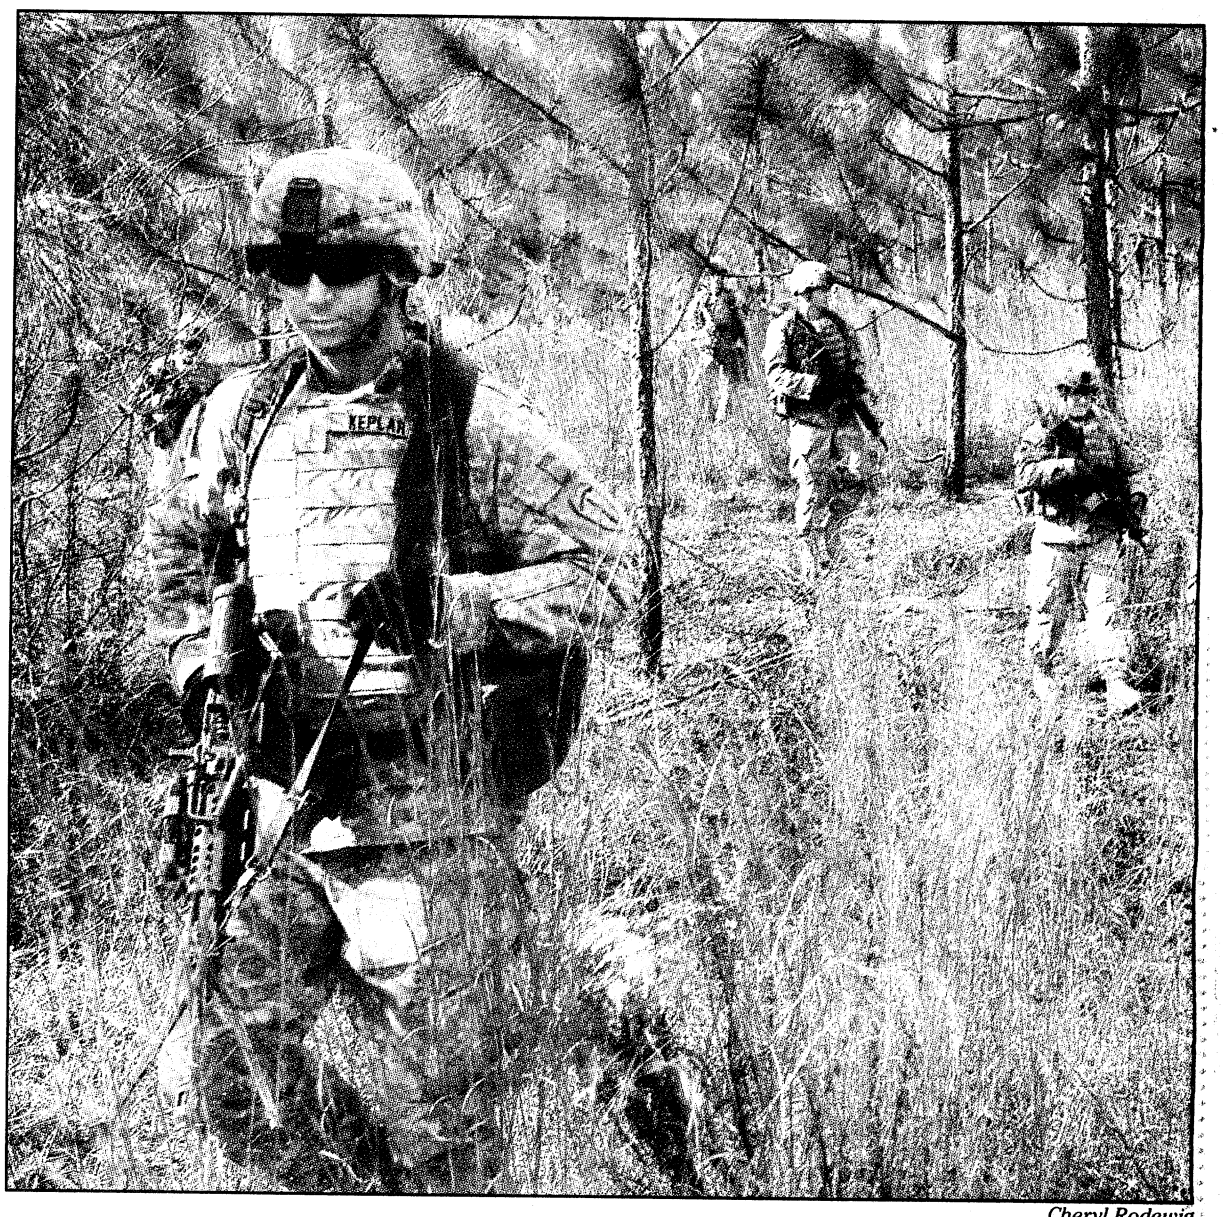

During the scenario, Soldiers conducted mainly non-kinetic operations, leading patrols and cooperating with residents of Al Mobil, a peaceful Iraqi village nearby. In return for the Soldiers' help with security, villagers offered information about insurgent movements.

2LT Graham Markiewicz, the platoon leader Jan. 7, said interacting with the captains was helpful.

"They're really taking us under their wing, showing us a lot of what they learned as platoon leaders, how to run a forward operating base, how to interact with Soldiers. I've learned so much," he said. "But the more I learn, I realize how much more there is to learn."

Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps preps for inauguration

SSG Michael J. Carden
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The largest U.S. Army fife and drum corps ever assembled will take part in President-elect Barack Obama's inauguration Tuesday.

Nearly 60 fifers, buglers and drummers of the Army's Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps will march from the Capitol to the White House near the front of the inaugural parade procession. The group normally performs with around 25 musicians, 33 at most, for an event of this scale, said SGM Gregory J. Rock, the corps' senior enlisted member with more than 20 years in the unit.

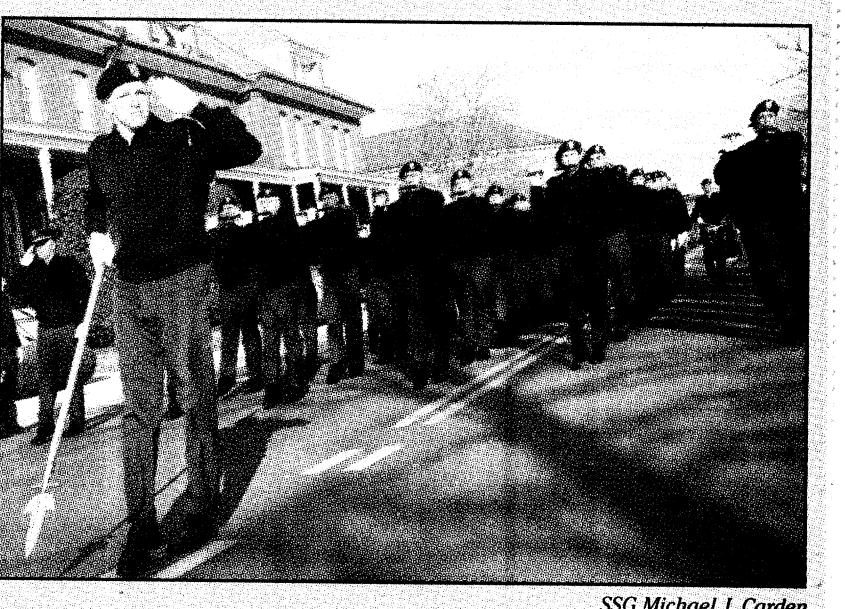

Since mid-December, the corps has been rehearsing the difficulties of marching and staying in step in a larger-than-usual ensemble. Several times each week, often in rain and cold, the corps forms up to march from its headquarters building about a mile down Sheridan Avenue on Fort Myer, Va., said Rock, who's preparing for his sixth inaugural parade.

The increased size of the performing ensemble is a coincidence, despite the magnitude of attention Obama's inauguration has drawn, Rock said.

More of the corps' musicians are available to perform than usual, and the unit is taking advantage of its healthiness, he said.

Rock said the inaugural parade is just another event for his busy musicians, who perform an average of 500 events each year. Each performance is conducted at the highest possible standard, regardless of the event's perceived importance.

"Everyone talks about this particular inauguration being history, but we look at all of the inaugurations as a huge part of history, because when and where else in the history of the world do you have this much power transitioning peacefully, ever?" he said. "So if you think about that in the large scheme of things, you're making history every time."

SSG Michael J. Carden
MSG Russell Smith, head drum major with the 3rd U.S. Infantry Regiment's Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps, leads the formation down Sheridan Avenue, Jan. 9, on Fort Myer, Va., in preparation for President-elect Barack Obama's inaugural parade Jan. 20.

Since the corps's creation in 1960 as part of the 3rd U.S. Infantry Regiment at Fort Myer, the Army's Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps has participated in every presidential inauguration since John F. Kennedy's in 1961.

Army apologizes for letters sent to families

Lindy Kyzer
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Army Adjutant General, BG Reuben Jones, joined bloggers and online journalists Jan. 8, to discuss the error on some 7,000 letters sent to family members who lost Soldiers in the war on terror.

The letters did not contain a by-name salutation for recipients, but instead contained the placeholder greeting of "Dear John Doe."

The letters were printed and sent by a contractor in late December 2008 to inform families of private organizations offering services and assistance. Jones expressed his disappointment in the error and the deep concern of his team for the recipients.

"I can tell you, I know our pain isn't what our family members' pain is about receiving this, but I have a team of dedicated young Americans who are on a first-name basis with many of these survivors, and they feel this hurt just as bad," Jones said. "But they are marching on because they know that their intent was to connect with them and provide them information on the generosity of our nation that has come to the Army."

Jones did not go into the details of who made the mistake, but said that contracting officials would look into the error. For Jones and his team, the focus now is on the families. Each family is receiving a letter of apology from Chief of Staff of the Army GEN George W. Casey Jr.

"We work hard to build trust and a relationship with our families so they know that they're still part of this Army team," Jones said. "They have been strong families for this strong Army."

The letters were sent as a part of the Survivor Outreach Services program, where the families of fallen Soldiers receive regular correspondence and contact with Army representatives.

The program was launched in February 2008, and continues to grow in order to build a closer, better bond with spouses and family members, according to Jones.

"Survivors are part of that family for as long as they desire," Jones said. "We will give that support to them, day in, day out. One part of our covenant, our warrior ethos, says we will never leave a fallen comrade. We expand that to say that we will never leave a family behind either."

The program doesn't just reach out to families but also provides them a means of reaching out to the Army with their needs and suggestions.

"We continue to connect with our families, receive their comments and feedback on what we can do better," said Jones. "This is a program where we say, tell us what else we can do."

The misprinted letter, a part of regular SOS outreach to families, included links to dozens of organizations offering services and assistance to the families of fallen Soldiers.

For a listing of the organizations, visit https://www.hrc.army.mil/site/Active/TAGD/CMAOC/ALTFCM/programs.htm.

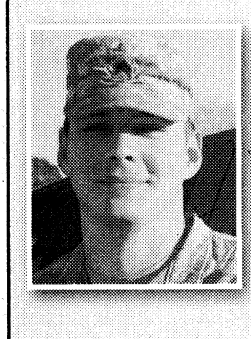

VARIOUS VOICES

Where will you be at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday?

If I'm at home, I'll be looking at the inauguration all the way through. I don't want to miss anything. He's our first black president. This is history. MLK said it in his speech a long time ago, that we are going to come together, black and white. This is the most exciting thing that's happened since I've been alive.

— Prestine Ratcliffe

I'll be at lunch, but we do have a TV in the conference room of javelin school. If we can, we'll watch the inauguration, just to see it, because it's big this year. It's historical.

— SGT Ty Jenkins
2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

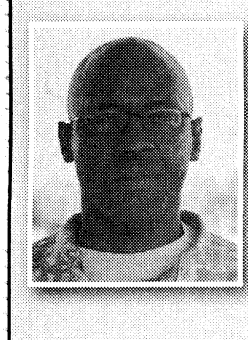

That's lunchtime. We definitely will watch it. We don't have a TV in our office, but we could go to the rec center. It's a big highlight, so we have to. It may be crowded, but the Soldiers will see it — the new commander in chief.

— MSG Rosalinda D'Arcy
203rd Brigade Support Battalion

It's the inauguration. I'll be calling my wife; we'll be talking about it. I'll be looking at it on TV. I'll be at work, but I'm sure everyone in the office will be getting a glimpse of it.

— Patrick Usher
Transportation services for 641st Mobilization Troop Command

I'll be watching the inauguration with my wife at home while we're having lunch. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity. This is historic — one of the most historic moments we've had in a long time.

Does Obama's inauguration accomplish Dr. King's dream?

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

When Barack Obama gave a speech Aug. 28, 2008, accepting the Democratic Party's nomination for president of the United States, he wasn't the only American leader to have made a memorable speech on that date. Forty-five years earlier, on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. delivered his iconic "I have a dream" speech.

It's rare that two such historic events collide, and it's about to happen again. This month, Barack Obama will be sworn in as our 44th president the day after the 80th anniversary of King's birth.

Are the stars aligning to bring the two men together, or is it something more than that?

Since Obama won the Democratic nomination, speculation has run rampant in the media and around dinner tables on what the election of America's first African-American president would mean for King's legacy. Some have wondered whether Obama's election spells the end of discrimination in the United States. Will programs like affirmative action still be necessary? Can we sit back and rest on our laurels?

For many, Obama's election represents the culmination of King's dream. Certainly, King's work paved the way for Obama, and the two will be forever entwined in history as pioneers in breaking down barriers in America.

We've clearly made a lot of progress since King's day — public places such as restaurants are no longer segregated, and children of different backgrounds sit side by side in public schools.

But the world is imperfect, and inequality and prejudice still exist.

King's vision was not just about integrating busses and schools, but about fighting all forms of injustice everywhere.

"Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere," King wrote from a prison cell in 1963.

And as long as injustice exists, we still have work to do.

Don't be that guy

If you've ever been carried home from a bar by your friends, read on. If you've ever greeted the suggestion to "open a tab" as an all you can drink challenge, read on. If you've ever been the center of attention, because you passed out in the center of the dance floor, definitely read on.

Some lessons are best learned through tough and memorable consequences — those we experience or witness. When it comes to the downside of excessive drinking, that's definitely the case. Now any man or woman in military service has undoubtedly endured countless lectures, speeches and warnings about binge drinking, drunk driving and other alcohol-induced bad behavior. However, no education I've ever experienced drives the point home like four simple words — "Don't Be That Guy."

Those, my friends, are words to live by. We've all been out on the town and seen That Guy making a jerk of himself (or herself, because girls can definitely be That Guy too). Sometimes we laugh at him, but it ceases to be funny when That Guy wrecks your evening by acting like a meathead, or getting you kicked out of the bar, or starting a fight you have to finish, or ruining your hook-up, or getting arrested, or bleeding in your car, or smashing your TV, or puking on your shoes, or ... well, you get the point.

The beauty of "Don't Be That Guy" is that it's open-ended advice — it covers a million possibilities.

It's also not judgmental. It isn't saying don't drink, or don't have a few beers with your buddies, or don't go out and let loose a little. It simply means don't overdo it, don't lose control, don't be an idiot.

I've seen some That Guy behavior in the Army, but I've also seen it from frat boys, businessmen, the girl next door, and even my relatives. Poor judgment knows no bounds. The trick is to avoid it, and learning from others' mistakes can really help.

What are some reasons not to be That Guy? Here are a few to consider:

- Because teeth look better in your mouth.
- Because puking through your nose hurts.
- Because STD does not stand for "So Totally Drunk."
- Because insurance doesn't cover stupidity.
- Because "I don't remember" is not an excuse that holds up in court.

Another big reason not to be That Guy is because he is often considered "fair game" for ridicule or drunk-shaming. Having a girl throw a beer in your face is a bummer, but in the world of That Guy, you may be getting off easy — especially if you pick the wrong place to pass out. Have you ever seen a dude with one eyebrow shaved off or duct-taped to a flagpole? Try explaining those naked pictures of you on the Internet to your girlfriend, or worse, your mom.

So, if you want to keep your friends, your reputation, your money, your teeth, your dignity, and other stuff you value, do yourself a favor and just Don't Be That Guy. Words to live by, for sure.

173rd Brigade Combat Team takes on airborne school

Soldiers will go through airborne school in 11 days

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Soldiers — 300 of them — from the 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team, stationed in Schweinfurt and Bamberg, Germany, and Vicenza, Italy, took a 10-hour flight to attend Airborne School at Fort Benning.

"Every Soldier you see around the U.S. Army with parachute wings came to Airborne School at Fort Benning," said 1SG Troy Babin, the 173rd Airborne Bde. Combat Team liaison. "This is the birthplace of the paratrooper. This is where generations and generations of paratroopers have trained — it's tradition."

There are closer airborne schools to the 173rd, including the German and Italian airborne schools, but those schools can't hold the capacity of students Fort Benning can handle, Babin said.

After the Army added units to the former 173rd Brigade in 2006, it was re-flagged as the 173rd Brigade Combat Team. A year after it was re-flagged, the brigade deployed to Afghanistan for a 15-month tour. But when the brigade redeployed, not all Soldiers were airborne qualified, Babin said. That's why the 173rd is at Fort Benning.

The Soldiers will go through the same tasks as an airborne class at Fort Benning except instead of three five-day sessions with rest in between, the Soldiers will go through 11 days of training without rest.

In the first segment, the Soldiers jumped from a mock C-130 door and from the 34-foot tower. They had to jump six times off the 34-foot tower.

In the second segment, the Soldiers will learn how to land properly and what to do if something goes wrong in the sky. Soldiers have to complete one successful jump from the 250-foot tower. For those who pass, the last segment includes five jumps from a C-130 aircraft including a night jump and jumps with and without combat gear. If the Soldiers successfully pass, they earn their wings.

The class for the brigade is more intense than a regular class, said instructor SFC Bobby Scott, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

"Soldiers have less time to recover from injuries, bruises and wear and tear on their ligaments," Scott said. "Due to jet lag, the weather difference and elevation difference, it's a lot to process mentally and physically."

SGT Joshua Frederich was excited about going to Airborne School.

"I was here three years ago for basic training. I would see students jumping off the towers and would always think that's motivation, that's what I want to do some day," Frederich said. "I'm lucky to get a chance to do this.

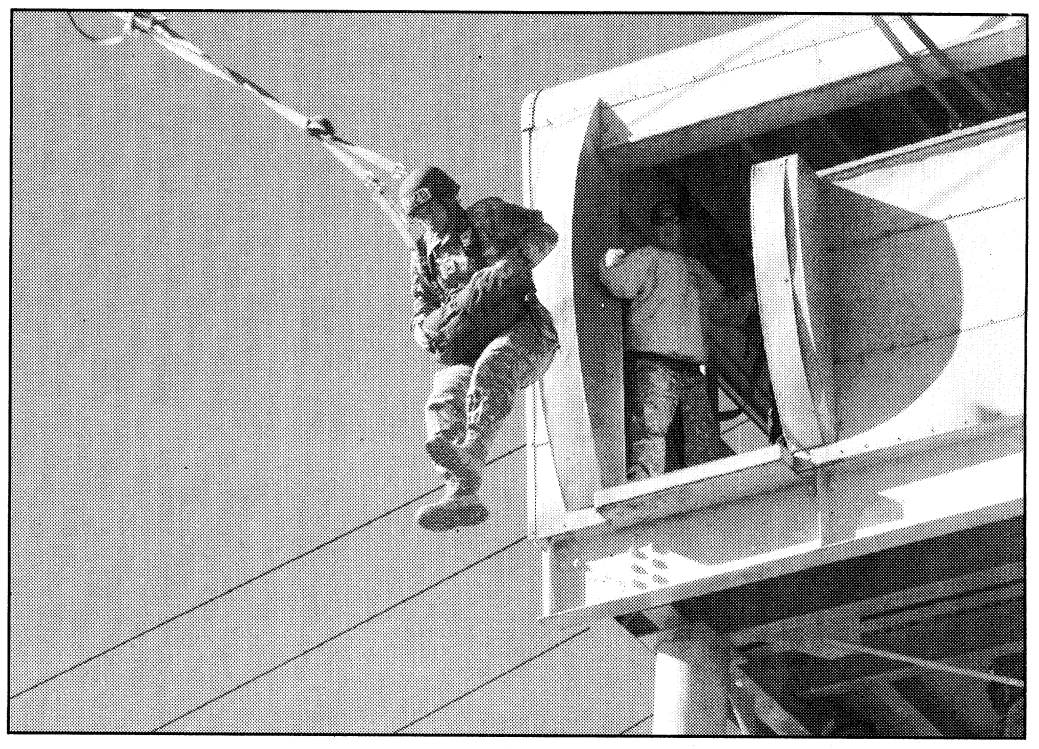

"I was in absolute terror, I didn't look down," Frederich said about his first jump from the 34-foot tower. "I didn't dare look down. I yelled my roster number and name and went down."

Sgt. Angel Thurston said she hesitated to zip down the 34-foot tower.

"I'm afraid of heights," she said. "I looked down, and I think that's why I hesitated."

"I've learned you can do anything you want. It's mental. As long as you get over that, and don't get psyched out, you'll be fine," she said.

Those who pass all three segments of the class will graduate Wednesday.

SGT Joshua Frederich jumps from the 34-foot tower Friday at Mann Field. Soldiers from the 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team took a 10-hour flight to attend Airborne School at Fort Benning. The training includes jumping off the 34-foot tower, jumping from the 250-foot tower and from a C-130. The 173rd will complete Airborne School in 11 days with no rest in between segments.

Scenario: Lets Soldiers train in 'authentic' setting graduated Wednesday, will deploy as platoon leaders within six months. Similarly, Powers and Lum will both be company commanders before the year is out.

"I've never really had the experience to maneuver an Infantry company by myself, so this is a great experience for me to get my feet wet without doing it in combat," said Powers, who deploys to Afghanistan this winter.

Powers said the exercise taught him to focus on the big picture and allow the other leaders to follow his guidance.

The scenario was "authentic," said Lum, who has deployed before.

It put into play what they have been studying in the captains career course for the past five months, he said.

"It's pretty neat to put into practice … taking all information that has been given to you in a short amount of time and making it feasible as well as understandable to junior leaders," Lum said. "It's a good experience for us to get out of the classroom, to interact with people. We're learning a lot."

With the information gathered from a visit to Al Mobil, the Soldiers were able to root out an enemy cell of seven insurgents Jan. 7.

Overall, the operation was successful, said Powers, who will graduate with Lum and the other MCCC students Feb. 25.

CPT Josh Powers meets with two sheiks during the training exercise Jan. 7. On the left is a Sunni sheik with his interpreter, and on the right is a Shia sheik from Al Mobil and 1LT Matthew Lynch, who assisted with the meeting. The two sheiks were "sworn enemies," Powers said. "This is the first time that they had ever met face to face."

Motorcyclists: 'Can never be too good at safety'

January to March and twice a week the rest of the year. The two-day course is divided into one day of classroom instruction and one day of riding instruction.

"Motorcycles are very dangerous, and they should be handled with care," said 2LT Mike Cabanas, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, who participated in the riding instruction part of the class Tuesday. "You can never be too good at safety."

Motorcycle safety isn't just in the hands of motorcycle riders, Snapp said. Drivers in cars must also do their part to keep Benning's roads safe.

"Car drivers need to realize that motorcycles have just as much right to be on the road as they do," he said. "Give them their space and let them be on the road."

Even seasoned riders can learn from the motorcycle safety class, said Cabenas, who has been riding for more than 10 years.

"There's always something new to learn about being on the road," he said.

The motorcycle safety class is free, and each class can accommodate 12 students. To register, or for more information, call 706-545-0893 or visit https://airs.imi.org.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Florida reigns supreme

Quarterback Tim Tebow led the Florida Gators to their second national title in three years Jan. 8 at Dolphin Stadium in Miami. The Gators beat the Oklahoma Sooners, 24-14.

Tebow, who won the Heisman Trophy last season, outplayed this season's Heisman winner, Sooner QB Sam Bradford.

Way to go, Gators.

AFC, NFC playoffs

This weekend will determine who will go to Super Bowl XLII Feb. 1.

The Philadelphia Eagles will play the Arizona Cardinals at the University of Phoenix Stadium at 3 p.m. Sunday. Coverage will be on FOX.

The Baltimore Ravens will take on the Pittsburgh Steelers at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at Heinz Field. Coverage will be on CBS.

I'd love to see an Eagles-Steelers match-up, if only for the people of Pennsylvania.

Dungy retires

Indianapolis Colts' head coach Tony Dungy announced his retirement Jan. 12. Dungy will live in Tampa and work with a myriad of ministry outreach programs that includes helping troubled youths and prison inmates.

Dungy spent six years in Tampa Bay and seven in Indy as head coach. He finishes an illustrious career with 148 career wins under his belt, which puts him at 19th overall in the record books.

Associate coach Jim Caldwell will replace Dungy.

Henderson, Rice elected to HOF

Rickey Henderson made it into the baseball Hall of Fame Jan. 12 on the first ballot; Jim Rice made it by the skin of his teeth on the 15th and final try.

Henderson is the career leader in runs scored and stolen bases. He garnered 94.8 percent of the vote. The Baseball Writers' Association of America are the voters, and potential inductees must get at least 75 percent to get into the HOF.

Once again, disgraced player Mark McGwire, living under a cloud of suspicion for steroid use, failed to even get near the 75 percent needed, only receiving 21.9 percent of the votes.

Jury convenes in Clemens case

A federal grand jury convened Jan. 12 in Washington, D.C., to determine whether or not pitcher Roger Clemens lied under oath when he testified that he had never taken performance-enhancing drugs.

Brian McNamee, Clemens' former personal trainer, is expected to testify or be interviewed by an attorney and FBI agents.

Road Dawgs put game on cruise control

104th Transportation rolls past Renegades 60-48

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

The Road Dawgs of the 104th Transportation Company throttled down a late second half comeback bid from the Renegades of Forward Support Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, to take a 60-48 win over the Renegades in the SFC Paul R. Smith Fitness Center Tuesday.

"For a minute we got a little rattled and they came back on us in the second half," coach Roddrick Burns said. "But, we started slowing down and working together and were able to pull out the victory."

After jumping out to a 7-4 lead early in the first half, the Renegades fell behind 20-13 with eight minutes remaining in the first half.

The Road Dawgs fast-break offense and dominating rebounding game gave the Dawgs a 24-16 lead with three minutes left in the first half but the Renegades battled back to close the gap to 26-22 at the half.

Coming out of the break, the Road Dawgs picked up where they left off in the first half jumping out to a seven-point lead. At the 14-minute mark, the Dawgs led the Renegades 35-24, but with eight minutes remaining in the game, the momentum shifted as the Renegades began a comeback.

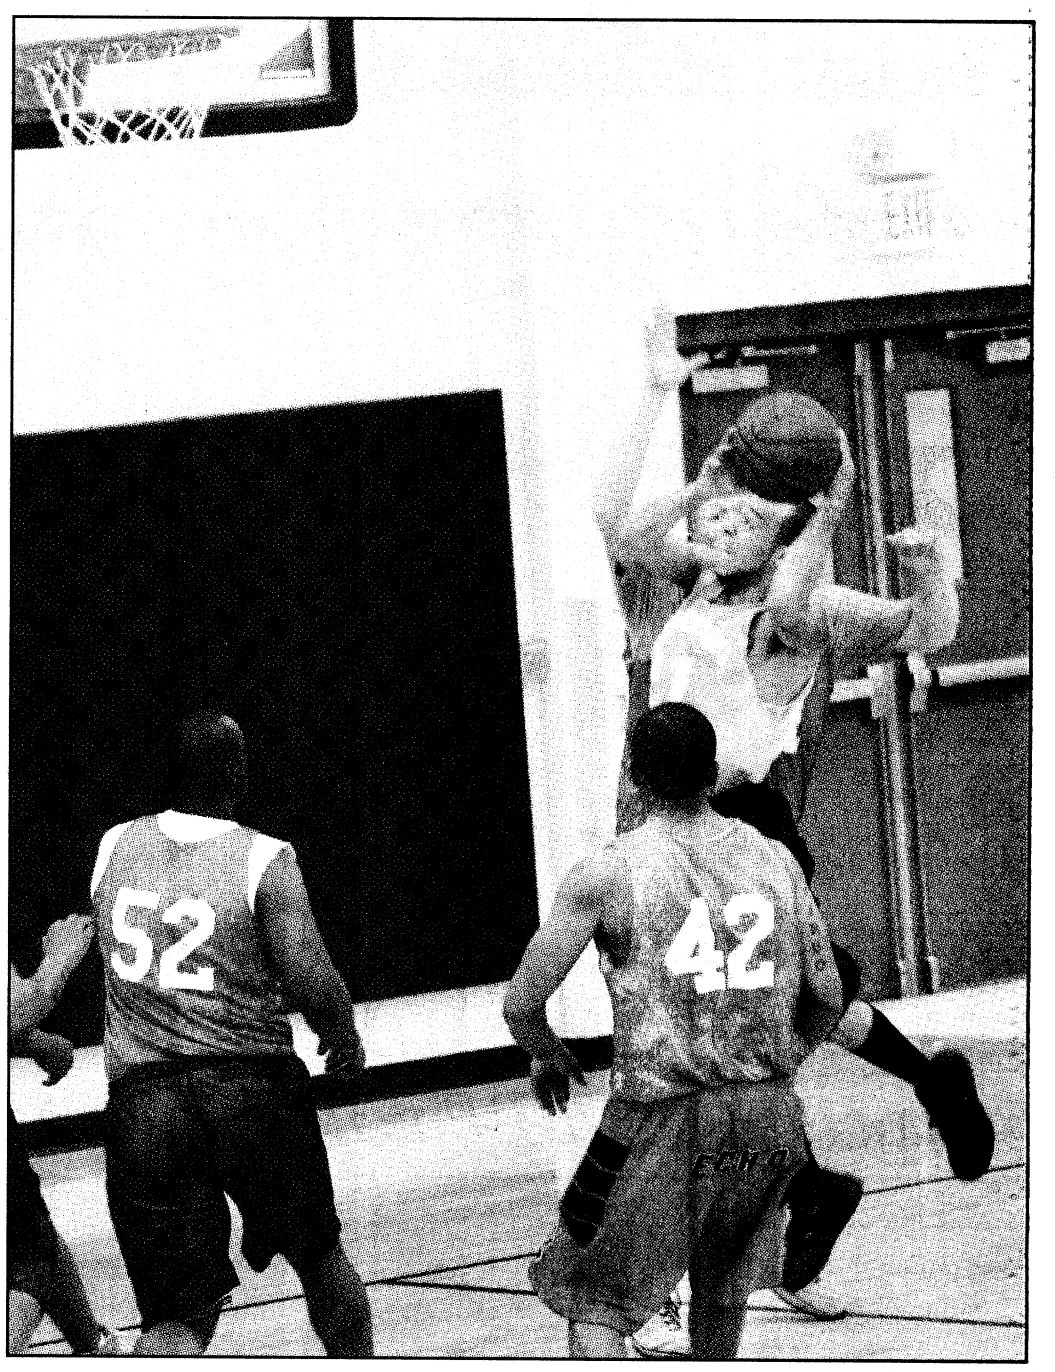

With 1:11 remaining on the clock the Renegades battled back pulling to within three points of the Road Dawgs, 51-48, but the Road Dawgs scored the final nine points of the game with five points coming off of a technical foul and ejection from the game of Renegade Victor Berry. Road Dawg Chad Gomm made the Renegades pay by hitting 5 of 6 from the free-throw line to take win. The victory evened the Road Dawgs record at 1-1.

Burns said the game almost wasn't played and it seemed to motivate his team.

"There was a mix up in the schedule and the players really wanted to play," Burns said. "So, the team really played with their heart today, and that was the difference in the game."

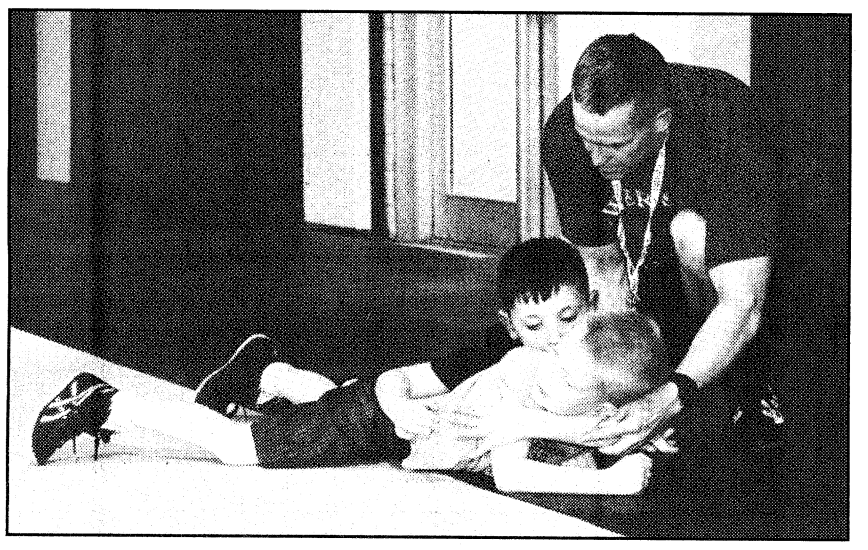

Burns said his team faced both zone and man-to-man

More than 60 grapplers will leave their sweat on the mats three days a week at the Briant Wells Field House in preparation for the upcoming Fort Benning youth wrestling season.

Head coach Mark Suich and his staff of eight coaches is busy preparing wrestlers, ages 4 to 14, to compete in six scheduled tournaments and other additional local tournaments with Pacelli, Brookstone, East Columbus and LaGrange.

"We spend a lot of time on conditioning, probably half the program, and on drills and combination moves," Suich said.

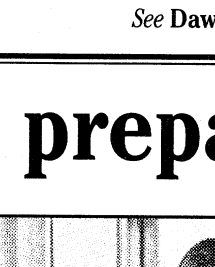

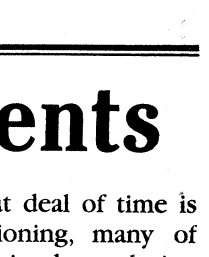

Although a great deal of time is spent on conditioning, many of the wrestlers stay in shape during the summer by competing in other sports, he said.

"Most of the kids are multi-sport athletes and a couple more are committed to wrestling so they come in in pretty good condition," Suich said. "There are a couple more of the serious wrestlers, and you generally see that when they get to seventh or eighth grade ... they generally spend most of the summer conditioning or going to tournaments to get experience, so conditioning is at a pretty decent level."

With so many wrestlers, practice sessions are separated into two defense from the Renegades and had to make some adjustments in their offensive scheme at halftime and during the game.

"At one point they were in a 3-2 zone so we had to work the ball a little more and keep passing until someone got open," he said. "When they went to a man defense, we got a little rattled and that is something we have to work on. They also pressed us at times and we have to work on that too. But, the guys held it together for the win."

Calvin Brown led the Road Dawgs in scoring with 23 points and Shawn Morris led the Renegades with 12 points.

Scoring: Renegades, Morris (12), Brown (10), Clay (10), Dillon (9), Knight (4), Berry (3); Road Dawgs, Brown (23), Gomm (18), Cradie (10), Barnhill (4), Wakefield (3), Kastenbaun (2).

A new level of prognostication

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

True National Football League followers, especially those who watch the NFL on FOX, are accustomed to seeing the antics, impersonations, and listening to the jabs and prognostication of comedian Frank Caliendo.

Caliendo lightens the show with his weekly skits while poking fun at hosts of the show who provide the statistical analysis and commentary on the games of the week.

In true Caliendo form, I thought I would provide a little insight on The Bayonet's own set of prognosticators, the Pick 12 crew who have graced the front page of the sports section for 16 weeks — after all, they are open game since they are celebrities in their own right.

He sure has a great smile, doesn't he, that CPT Stephen Magennis. With a winning percentage as good as at least one playoff team, Minnesota, I think he should spell his last name differently — how about ManGenius?

But, sir, one word of advice ... don't come into The Bayonet on a deadline day, beating your chest about winning and no one being able to catch you. Last year's winners' cage is empty because they were taken to the Atlanta Zoo and deposited with the rest of the chest-beating gorillas — I am not sure of that persons current status.

Carl Pignato? Carl really gets into his football, but no matter how much he seems to analyze games he still has to come in the office three or four times to be talked into a pick — or does he try to be talked out of a pick? I haven't figured out which.

Mostly, though, I believe he might be training for CIA or something similar because he is always attempting to find out the teams everyone else picked. Nice try Carl, but you might not be suited for undercover work, but only the Shadow knows.

Although Lori Egan's winning percentage is close to the winning percentage of the Philadelphia Eagles, she doesn't have a chance to finish the season as the top prognosticator. Why? Well, it all comes down to style with her. The teams with the neat helmet logos or teams sporting the right colors of uniforms have let her down this season — all the way down to third place in the standings.

Someone told me she had made a bet earlier in the season that if the Broncos, her favorite helmet logo, did not make the playoffs she would cut her hair. I am not sure if the rumor is true — all I know is that her hair is short now.

Michelle Gordon is a huge Alabama fan — just ask her. Does she take her opportunity to makes picks every week seriously? Oh, yes! She even took a copy of The Bayonet on vacation last year so she could keep up with her picks — that is dedication. With the college football season over, I thought I would give my input into one last college game for the picks of the week — Texas versus The Nation. Michelle didn't like the selection, but she was not the only one who didn't like the addition. For her, maybe it is because a Texas team finished above Alabama in the final standings — sorry, but I have some cheese to go with that whine.

Finally, there is Corey McCoy and SFC Brandon Barnett. I can't say if I ever physically saw them or not, but with their records maybe they didn't want to show their faces in public — good choice.

All kidding aside, I have enjoyed looking at their picks each week, and have often talked about who they picked from time to time — they are a great bunch.

Again, in true Caliendo form, I will make my own predictions for this week. I'll take Texas over The Nation, the South over the North, the East over the West, the Steelers over the Ravens, and my upset special — Caliendo always has an upset special — the Cardinals over the Eagles.

Wrestling: Learning the right moves groups that allow coaches to interact with the different ages of participants.

"We have two groups and two sets of coaches who simultaneously run a first or second year program for the smaller kids on one half of the gym, and on the other half of the gym we do the more advanced wrestlers who have been wrestling more than two years, and that is a different set of coaches," he said.

The Fort Benning team learns folkstyle wrestling, which is also referred to as the scholastic style or traditional style of wrestling as opposed to freestyle or Greco-Roman, he said.

A wrestler's age or weight is not a problem, said Suich, who has wrestlers as young as 4 years old with weights as little as 35 pounds and an eighth-grader who weights up to 170 pounds.

"It is quite a range of size and experience levels," Suich said. "We use basically the same weights as most of the tournaments use and there is literally weight classes at about every five pounds. You'll probably have 10 to 12 weight classes for each age group, and with the local tournaments we usually can match them up pretty well. We are able to get everyone in a weight class to where they are evenly matched up."

Although the team will compete in six larger tournaments, Suich said the local tournaments are just as valuable for the wrestlers on the team.

"Especially for the first-year kids who have never tried it. It's a much smaller venue, but it's still getting out there by themselves and wrestling for the first time in front of a small crowd versus when we go to Atlanta and have thousands of people," Suich said. "In a local tournament we are able to get the kids at least two matches, and sometime three matches in a couple of hours.

"That's what it is all about, getting them out there and getting some mat time."

Yellow Jackets sting Knights

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

After a slow start in the first quarter, the Yellow Jackets pulled ahead of the Benning Knights in the 9- to 10-year-old division of CYS basketball Jan. 10 at Audie Murphy Gym to win 14-11. The game was moved to Audie Murphy gym because of cleaning and maintenance in its originally scheduled location at the CYS gym.

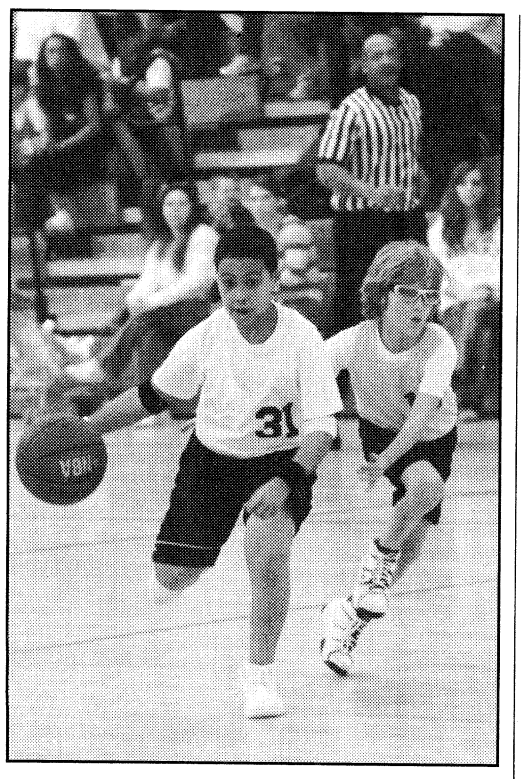

The Knights controlled the tempo of the game in the first quarter with two goals, to lead the Yellow Jackets 4-0. But, after two goals and a free throw in the second quarter, the Yellow Jackets made a comeback, closing the gap to 7-5 at the half with the Knights leading by two points.

The Yellow Jackets dominated the third period, cruising past the Knights with a series of goals early on. Yellow Jacket Caleb Johnson scored two goals, and Sam Reynolds made a goal and a free throw.

With the score 12-7, the Yellow Jackets moved into the final quarter with a five-point lead. The Knights put up a final offensive bid, with Elijah Davis and Jalen Davis each scoring goals, but couldn't overcome the Yellow Jackets. With one minute left in the game, the Yellow Jackets scored a free throw, propelling them to a 14-11 win over the Knights.

"They were a little thrown off in the first quarter by the fact that it was a different gym than what they were used to," said Tammy Donahue, Yellow Jackets coach. "But then they realized that it was still basketball, and they were able to come back."

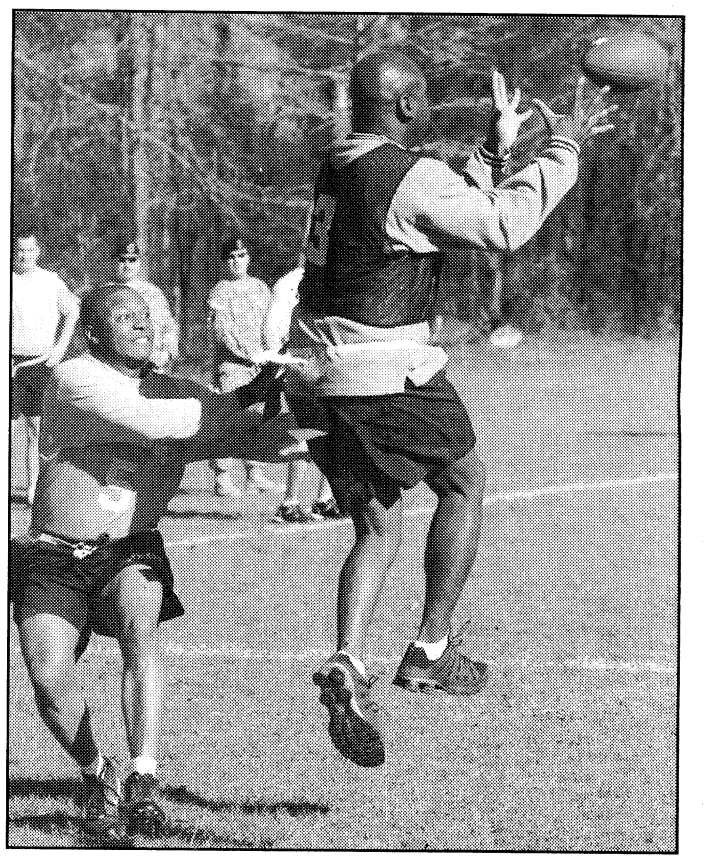

"We're still working on our passing," said Knights coach Jonathon Schmidt. "It's gonna take practice, but we're out here to have fun."

Kelley Hill senior leadership squares off

PUBLIC AFFAIRS

PVT Erik S. Anderson
MAJ Marcus Jackson, communications officer of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, attempts to pull the flag of a player from the senior noncommissioned officer football team during a game Jan. 8 in the game between the senior officers and noncommissioned officers of the 3rd HBCT. The game ended in a 7-7 tie.

Two competitive flag football teams, both comprised of 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division Soldiers, squared off Jan. 8 on Kelley Hill.

This is the third meeting between the teams comprised of senior officers and senior noncommissioned officers.

Prior to the game, MAJ Rhett Griner, 3rd HBCT fire support officer and head coach of the officer's team, offered no comment when asked about his team's record.

CSM Dan Huell, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, 3rd HBCT, and head coach of the NCO team, offered a different outlook.

"We own this game," he said. "The enlisted side leads 2-0 (in the series)."

Despite Huell's confidence in his team's ability, Griner remained optimistic.

"I like our chances in this game," said Griner before the game. "Last time they had a bigger team. But, this year we have a larger talent pool, and we actually practiced. It's kind of a new concept for us.

"I just know they will be out coached," he added with a laugh.

Huell planned to keep to the basics, adding they haven't had a chance to practice.

"I heard they were practicing during a time I was told was off-limits for sports, but I'm not worried," he said with a grin.

Although the game is competitive, the coaches kept it in perspective.

"We don't measure the game by points," Griner said. "We measure by (pain medication), and I predict they will have to use more than we will."

A first-time referee offered his thoughts on the outcome of the game.

"It's going to be 36-18 with the officers winning, and six ankles going out today," said CPT Isaac Henderson, commander of Company B, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, 3rd HBCT.

After the trash-talking ended and the dust settled on the field, the final score was a 7-7 tie after ten minutes of overtime.

"We, as humans, want to win," Huell said. "But this is one of those events that really brings out a lot of fun."

"Competition is good," Griner said. "But this event really builds camaraderie and esprit de corps among the senior leadership of the brigade. It's nice to see people outside of our usual work atmosphere."

Local Soldier prepares for All Army tryouts

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Reggie Kennedy "hungers" to play basketball. His goal? To play at the top level — All-Army basketball.

"The first thing I did Jan. 1 was submit the application online ... about 8 o'clock that morning," said the 6-foot-3-inch staff sergeant.

For the past 7 years — his entire Army career — Kennedy was in a deployable unit, 2nd Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, at Fort Stewart, Ga., which spent three tours in Iraq. He played on the post team, though, improving his game every year. After PCSing to Fort Benning in August, he joined the intramural team for his unit, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, as a small forward.

"He hungered to go play," said CPT Keithner Tucker, Kennedy's company commander. "I think he's an excellent basketball player — great ball handling skills, great shooting, and I think his court awareness is what has set him apart. He has the mental toughness to play on the All-Army team. He understands his other teammates on the floor, their strengths and weaknesses. Floor leadership, a lot of players don't have that."

It's hard enough to make the post team, Tucker said, but the All-Army team "is about as tough as you're going to get. He has to be able to shake off a bad night and get up the next day and be able to perform and play in a leadership role. Not anybody can do this. He has that commitment."

Kennedy trains hard for the tryouts, which he hopes to take part in this April on Fort Benning.

"I've been trying to do this ever since I got in the Army. I'm really excited about this," he said. "I work out every day. When I get off work, I go to the gym and lift weights and shoot around for about two to three hours, trying to get ready. I'm competing with 100 other people for that position, so I work out every day hard as I can so I can be better than the other person."

Kennedy balances his basketball duties, such as traveling with the post team to other installations, working out and playing most of his Saturdays, with those that are even more important.

"God, family, work, then it's basketball. Without those, you can't do anything," he said.

The 26-year-old husband and father spends as much time as he can with his 3-year-old son RJ.

"He comes to my basketball practices. I bring him with me to the games. He's always with me everywhere I go," Kennedy said.

If his son picks up basketball like his dad, Kennedy hopes the game will help teach him character skills, like dedication, "the dedication to strive to be the best," and teamwork.

"Without teamwork, you can't accomplish anything," he said. "You have to be able to work well with others."

Teamwork is especially important in a unit, and Kennedy fits in well, said his platoon sergeant, SFC Charles Edwards.

"He has a positive outlook," Edwards said. "His attitude reflects to the Soldiers. They look up to him. If I give him a task, he does it, and there are a lot of times that I don't have to tell him to do something. He has the initiative to make it happen. He's one of the guys I can count without me having to be around to make something happen."

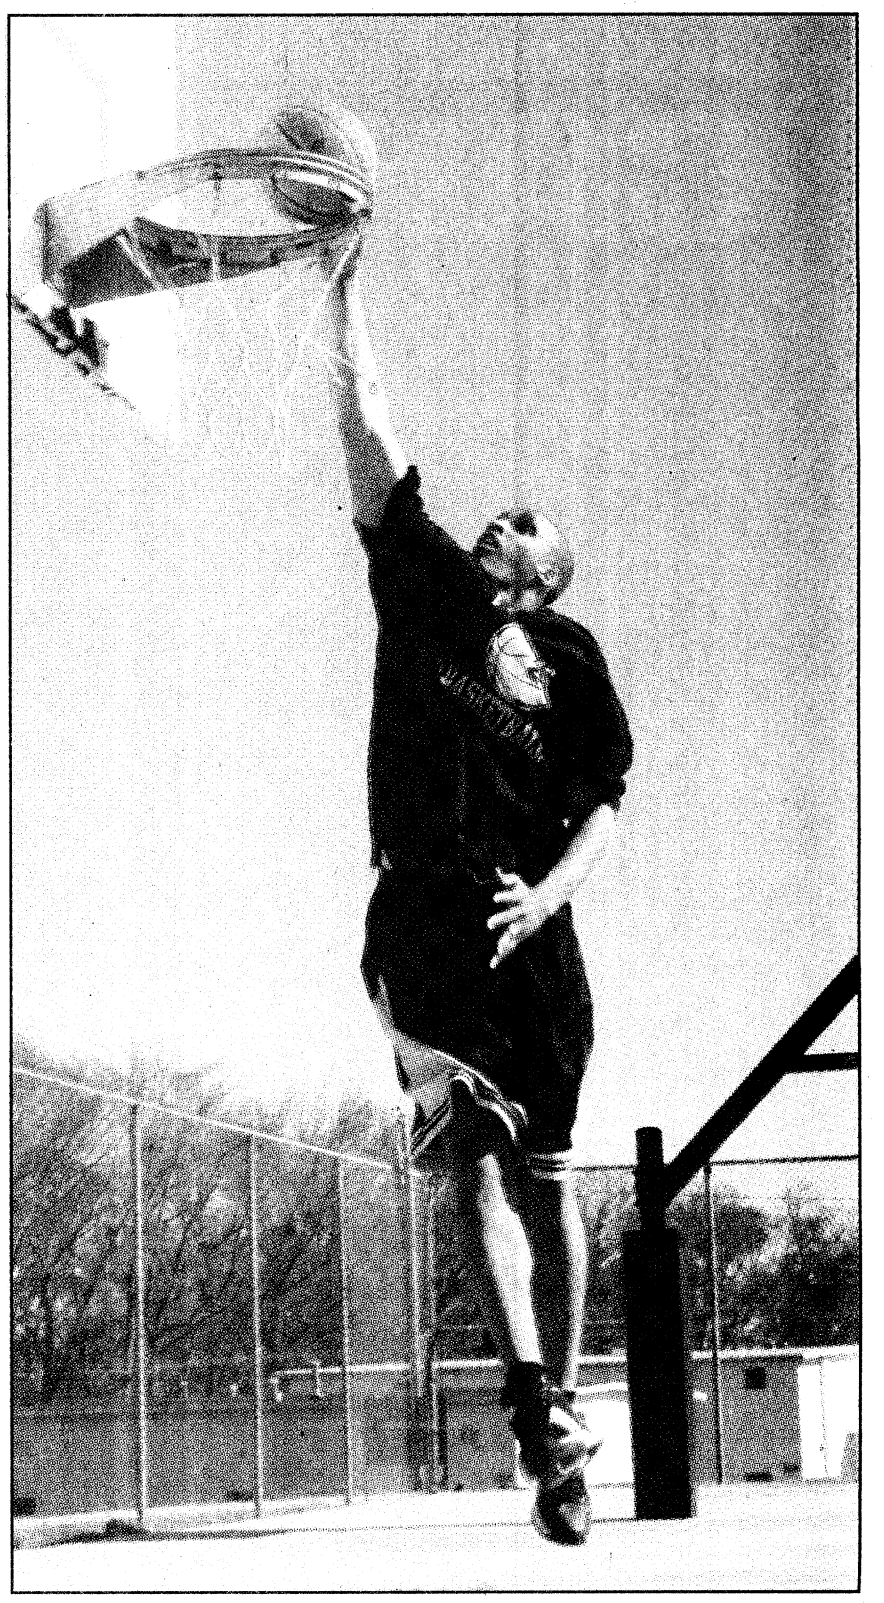

Chosen for the leadership and cooperation he has shown in his unit, Kennedy was selected in November as the equal opportunity representative for his company. He hopes he is well on his way to being a top NCO, he said.

"Since I've been in the Army, I always knew I wanted to be a first sergeant ... the best NCO I can be," Kennedy said. "In everything I do, I want to be the best. Well, playing All-Army basketball is the highest thing you do in basketball. I can't say it in words. It's just so exciting to me."

Kennedy remembers playing basketball with his dad while growing up and later in middle school and high school. He's been competitive all his life and still is today, he said.

"I just like going at it," he said. "If we're down by 30 points, I'm still the hardest player playing out there on the court. If we're winning by 30 points, I'm still playing as hard as if we were down by 30. I care. If I'm on that court, I'm going to give 110 percent — never slack off."

While waiting to hear back about his application for the All-Army basketball tryouts, Kennedy continues his daily practices and NCO duties, hoping to see his hoop dreams of the last 8 years fulfilled.

Cheryl Rodewig
SSG Reggie Kennedy plays as a small forward for the B Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, intramural basketball team. Kennedy, who applied for the All-Army basketball tryouts Jan. 1, hopes to advance to the "highest" level in basketball.

For As Low As $49

In one day, local Columbus dealer must eliminate Millions of Dollars worth of pre-owned vehicles.

Columbus, GA

Saturday, January 17, 2009 Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex is holding its biggest pre-owned super sale in the history of the company. Saturday, January 17, 2009, they plan to eliminate their entire pre-owned inventory by means of a

$49

"Eliminator Sale,"

During this one-day event, every pre-owned vehicle will be offered for Incredible low prices - including vehicles for only $49.

Why price them so low? Mark Wilson and Jim Hayes, Used Car Managers at Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex, offer this explanation for this unprecedented sale. "We've already had record sales in our new car department this year, and we're overstocked with trade-ins. Then we've added a big inventory of factory program cars and some real bargains we've gotten at the auction. So, now we're over-loaded with inventory. It's that simple." Wilson adds, "Our goal is to reduce the amount of our overall inventory to a more manageable number, and to do that, we've got to price this inventory ridiculously low. Expect cars to be marked with incredible prices."

Hayes further added, "The community has shown us great support throughout the years, and we're very grateful. We would rather give these great deals to the customer than unload these vehicles at the auction. We believe that people will not only enjoy getting a great deal, they'll also have a lot of fun doing it. Imagine the excitement of being able to buy a vehicle for just $49. Not $49 down, $49 flat."

Almost 200 pre-owned cars, trucks, vans & SUV's are available for this huge event. "We absolutely must reduce our pre-owned inventory at all costs; so customers can expect these vehicles to be sold at incredible low prices," he stated. "We truly will have a vehicle for everyone's budget."

These vehicles are available at this price, Saturday, January 17, 2009, at Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex, in Columbus, GA. Special arrangements have been made for a record number of customers, with event parking clearly marked.

According to Randy Askew, General Sales Manager at Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex, here's how the $49 "Eliminator Sale" works: Saturday, January 17, 2009, precisely at 9:45 am, the gates will be opened so that customers may inspect the vehicles. When the $49 "Eliminator Sale" begins at 10:00 am, whoever is sitting behind the wheel of the vehicle will have the first chance to purchase the vehicle at the "Eliminator Sale" price. Prices will be marked one time to the "Rock Bottom" price, including vehicles for only $49. This "Eliminator Sale" is not for auto dealers, employees of the dealership, and its affiliates, are not permitted to participate. Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex has arranged for special finance and credit analysts to be on hand. If you've had trouble in the past securing auto credit, don't count yourself out. If you'll bring your current payroll stub and your driver's license, chances are we can arrange your financing.

The "Eliminator Sale" will be the biggest event we've ever had," stated Askew.

Customers are required to come early and register for entry to this incredible sale. Registration to participate begins at 8:00 AM. "We expect a record number of people to leave with great vehicles at unheard-of, low prices."

"If you've been waiting for a great deal on a great pre-owned vehicle, your wait is over. The $49 "Eliminator Sale" will be held Saturday, January 17, 2009. You'll have the perfect opportunity to get a quality vehicle at a substantial savings while we drastically reduce our inventory." The

$49

"Eliminator Sale,"

will be held Saturday, January 17, 2009 only at Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex.

Only one $49 vehicle per family, please. Questions may be directed to any sales consultant at (706)-568-4900.

Women's Conference set for March 11

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Save the date — the post's annual Women's Conference is scheduled for March 11 at the Fort Benning Catering and Conferencing Center.

This year's theme, "Big Hearts, Great Ideas," reflects the many contributions women have made over the years and encourages women to continue to use their skills to benefit themselves and their community, said Heather Gillespie, marketing liaison for the event.

"It's just to bring women together to share ideas," she said. "It's a lot of fun — like being together with 200 of your girlfriends. You get to have breakfast, lunch, hear a great guest speaker (and) attend the workshops. There's a wide variety of classes: something for everybody."

Women can register for four classes, choosing among topics ranging from financial management and wine tasting to belly dancing and how to put romance back in your marriage. During breaks, participants can spend time with friends or shop on location from a variety of vendors selling cookware, jewelry, crafts and other items.

In keeping with the theme, the guest speaker, Georgia-based artist Sandy Clough, will talk about her creative process.

"She will also share how we can tap into our creativity (to) benefit ourselves and others," said Pat Davis, the conference coordinator.

Davis, who attended the conference last year, said she was looking forward to the event as a day to relax, spend time with friends and learn something new without having to travel to an expensive conference site.

The workshops are always interesting, said Davis, who still uses recipes that she picked up in last year's cooking class.

The classes are especially helpful to military families who move frequently and are always needing to learn new skills and adapt to new situations, she said.

The conference begins at 8:30 a.m. and ends at 3:30 p.m. Child care opens at 7:30 a.m. and closes at 4:30 p.m.

Davis encourages everyone to take advantage of the one-day registration from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Jan. 24 at the early registration kiosk inside the PX, especially if you have children. Child care is free, but space is limited.

General registration opens Jan. 26 and ends Feb. 25. During this time, forms will be available around post at MWR facilities, the Thrift Shop, Bit of Benning and online. They must be handed or mailed in to MWR headquarters, located on Eckel Avenue, by Feb. 25. Enrollment is limited to the first 300 military ID cardholders who register.

The $20 fee, due at time of registration, includes a continental breakfast, catered lunch and conference materials. Refunds will be made only if the conference enrollment or child care limit is reached.

Davis said they are still accepting applications for instructors to lead workshops or volunteers to help as assistants during the conference.

For more information or to download a workshop application, visit http://benningmwr.com/WomensConference.htm, or contact Pat Davis at 706-689-7134 or womensconference@benningmwr.com. The Web site will be updated regularly with new information.

Crafters raise money for Soldiers, families

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Paper crafters, stampers and scrapbookers are invited to a local "crop" to work on their hobby and raise money for a good cause with "Scrapping for Soldiers," from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at Wynnbrook Baptist Church, 500 River Knoll Way, Columbus.

Hosted by two Fort Benning Army wives, Beth Kingston and Angie Witte, the event will raise money for Operation Phone Home, a nonprofit organization that keeps deployed Soldiers in contact with loved ones by providing phone cards.

Kingston and Witte chose Operation Phone Home because they know the importance of staying in touch during deployment. The crop lets people help military families and have fun at the same time by preserving their family's memories, they said.

A $35 registration fee includes lunch, snacks, goodie bags, door prizes and crafting space. Guidance from more experienced scrapbookers and on-site shopping will also be available.

The crop is for everyone, men and women, military and civilian and all skill levels of Faith Middle student wins school poster contest

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Faith Middle School seventh-grader Janele Robicheaux loves to create art.

"It's a way to express myself on paper," she said. "I think I probably have 2,000 pieces of art from over the years — mom can't fit them all in one box."

Robicheaux added one more piece of art, a contest winner, to her collection. She took first place out of 20 entries in the school's Dream of Peace poster contest, sponsored by the Lions Club.

"I can't believe I won at my school. I was pretty surprised when I heard that because I have never won an art contest before," she said.

The theme for the contest was "Peace Begins With Me."

Although the peace starts with Robicheaux, she said it's important to spread it to others.

In her drawing, a girl in a park stands with a thought bubble over head, showing war on one side and peace on the other, she said. The girl in the thought bubble uses peace "superpowers" to spread peace to everyone, she said.

Gloria Loar, Faith art teacher, said what set Robicheaux's poster apart from others was that she put a lot of thought into the theme and was successful in portraying it in her art in a personal way.

Robicheaux's dad is in Iraq and she said she'll be excited to see him when he comes home.

Rachel L. Watkins
Faith Middle School art teacher Gloria Loar watches as seventh-grader Janele Robicheaux draw. Robicheaux took first place out of 20 entries in the school's Dream of Peace poster contest, sponsored by the Lions Club.

"I think she subconsciously realized it takes strong people to have peace convictions," Loar said.

Robicheaux has spent every Wednesday for the past two months working on the drawing.

"She put so much time into it," Loar said. "She's very meticulous and she takes her time doing it — It's a testament to how serious she is about her work."

Janele was honored at a luncheon Tuesday at the St. Luke Ministry Center where she received a savings bond and a ribbon.

The poster will be sent to the district competition where Robicheaux's art will be judged against one student from each participating middle school in Muscogee County School District.

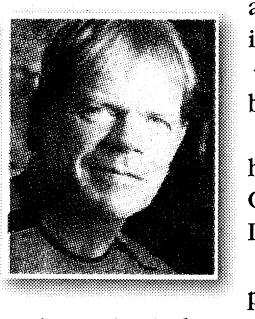

Former wrestler Lex Luger to share lessons learned

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Former professional wrestling star Lex Luger will visit Victory Baptist Church at 2 p.m. Jan. 31 to speak about his experiences with drug abuse, his born-again Christian faith and his outlook on life.

"He'll be giving a testimony of his life, to let people out there know what he went through," said Sean O'Malley, Victory Baptist's Spanish pastor.

Steve Baskin, Luger's pastor at Western Hills Baptist Church in Kennesaw, Ga., described the former wrestler's transformation.

The 49-year old Luger, who rose to fame in the mid-1980s defeating professional wrestlers such as Hulk Hogan, abused steroids, alcohol and recreational drugs. A turning point in his life came in 2006, when Luger went to jail for a parole violation and met Baskin, a chaplain in the jail.

The two formed a friendship and Baskin became a major influence in Luger's life.

Part of the appeal of Luger's story is that he was an unlikely candidate for a born-again Christian, said Baskin, who will appear with Luger at Victory Baptist.

"Some people would say he'd be the last person to do what he's doing now," Baskin

Expert lists top four food mistakes during pregnancy

Heather Blazier
MCG HEALTH SYSTEM

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Women obsess over their bodies all the time, but never more than during pregnancy.

Am I gaining enough weight? Am I gaining too much weight? What foods should I eat? What's off limits?

These are some of the most common questions women have. And with so much to be concerned about, it's easy to make mistakes.

Below are the four most common food mistakes (and solutions!) for women during pregnancy.

Mistake No. 1: I'm pregnant, so I can eat whatever I want.

Let's face it, pregnancy is a time when your waistline goes places you never even dreamed. Unfortunately, that still doesn't mean you should eat whatever strikes your fancy.

A healthy, balanced diet ensures that your growing child receives the proper nutrients, and you'd be surprised at how little you need to make up those extra calories. In fact, during the first trimester, no extra calories are needed, while during the second and third trimesters, only an extra 300 calories per day are recommended. An extra cup of yogurt and another serving of cereal fulfills that requirement nicely.

Mistake No. 2: I'm pregnant, but I want to make sure that I can still fit into my skinny jeans right after I give birth.

On average, mothers should gain about 25 to 35 extra pounds while pregnant. Only about 10 pounds of that goes into fat stores to help support delivery and breast-feeding. The rest is the weight of the baby, amniotic fluid, blood supply and other physical changes to your body necessary for the baby's growth. Despite society's focus on thin bodies, overly restricting your calories is not healthy when you are pregnant.

Listen to your body, and instead provide good nutrients to yourself and your child in the form of fruits, vegetables, dairy and protein.

Mistake No. 3: I eat a well-balanced diet, so I don't need to take anything extra.

Even if you think you eat the best diet in the world, you should cover yourself and your baby by taking additional vitamins. Those extra vitamins just help enhance what you're already doing, and in some cases, are necessary. For example, if you experience morning sickness during your pregnancy, it's likely you aren't eating enough to provide those extra nutrients to your baby. The most important nutrients during pregnancy are calcium, protein, iron, magnesium, zinc and folate.

Folate, a B vitamin, is particularly important in the first two weeks of pregnancy to help prevent neural tube defects, so take folate in your diet (through leafy greens, fortified cereals, fortified orange juice or through vitamins) if there is any possibility that you will become pregnant. Your doctor can talk to you about prenatal vitamins that will provide these and other nutrients necessary for healthy growth and development.

Mistake No. 4: I'm craving sushi tonight so I'm going to go for it. You should listen to your body, right?

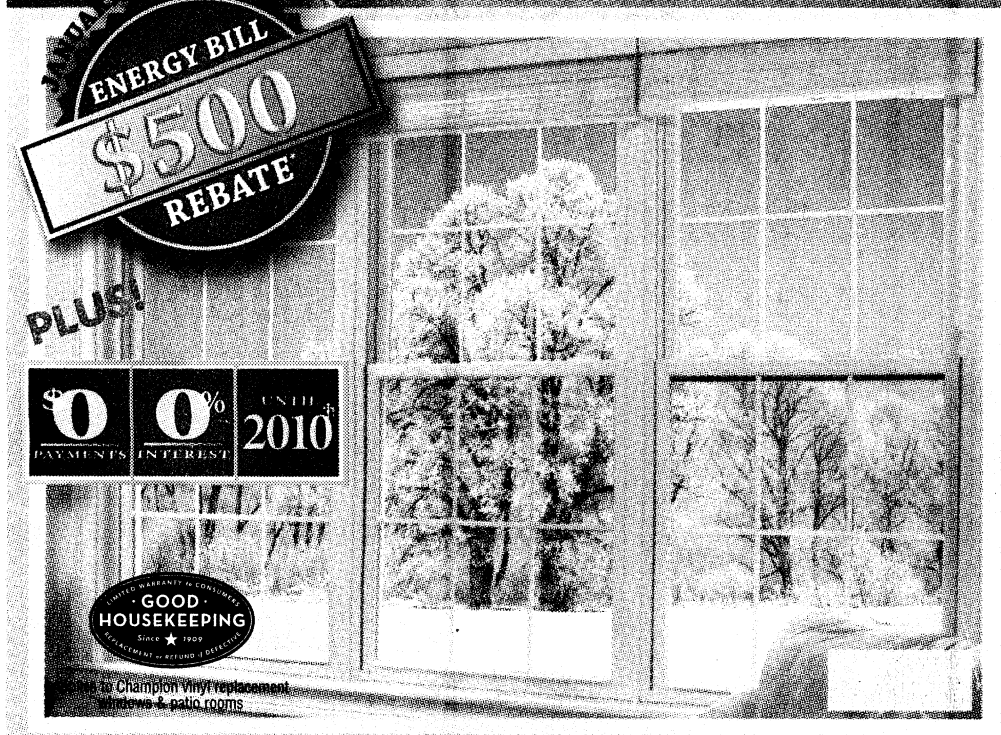

Safe food handling is especially important during pregnancy because your immune system is compromised. Sushi, unpasteurized milk and cheeses, and rare meats should be avoided. Cook all foods to the proper temperature, reheat leftovers to 165 degrees before eating (this includes precooked foods like hot dogs and lunch meat), and make sure you thoroughly wash all raw fruits and vegetables.

It's always a good idea to avoid fish high in mercury, such as king mackerel and swordfish, although fish low in mercury may be eaten in moderation. Coffee, chocolate and sweeteners may also be taken in moderation. If you have questions, talk to your doctor about what is appropriate, and remember, your best guide is the food pyramid.

When you're pregnant, your body goes through amazing changes. By taking in the right fuel, you can make sure it runs efficiently — and makes a successful delivery.

Dietitian suggests adding one positive fitness change at a time

Chris Halagarda
DEFENSE COMMISSARY AGENCY

FORT LEE, Va. — I love the quote, "A year from now, you'll wish you started today."

What do you wish you could have started a year ago?

For many folks, New Year's means yet another resolution to start an exercise program, eat healthy and lose weight.

If this rings true to you, try making a small change to your lifestyle in 2009 that, although it won't put you on the cover of a fitness magazine, will help you feel better, look better, function better and make you healthier.

One of the first things I like to suggest to folks is to add to your diet. Don't get preoccupied with what you can't have, but focus instead on what you can have. Remember, you can find all of the following items in your local commissary at savings of 30 percent or more. Start by adding one or two of these ideas to your diet or lifestyle:

• Add fruits and vegetables. Promise yourself you will eat five servings of fruit and vegetables every day. By filling up on the extra fiber and water, you should eat less food the rest of the day and hopefully lose weight. Worst case is that you don't lose weight, but you will be much healthier because of all the additional vitamins and minerals in fruit and veggies.

• Drink tea. Green, black, flavored, any kind of tea. Teas are loaded with antioxidants, flavonoids, vitamins and minerals and may help prevent tumors and promote weight loss. Much more research needs to be done to pinpoint all the benefits of tea drinking, but there are very few downsides to drinking it.

• Spice it up! Don't let a meal go by without sprinkling some type of herb or spice on it. Sprinkle cinnamon on oatmeal; garlic powder on salads; paprika on hummus; chili powder, onion, pepper, dry mustard and cayenne into chili. Don't hesitate to try new spices. There are so many great flavors with so much nutritive value and best of all they don't have many or any calories. Every time you go to the commissary, try a new spice.

• Drink more water. Aim for about half your body weight in fluid ounces each day. If you weigh 120 pounds you should consume about 60 fluid ounces of water per day. Keep in mind, water-dense foods such as fruits and vegetables will contribute to this total and high levels of physical activity will increase daily fluid needs above this amount.

• Add calcium. Aim for 1,000-1,200 milligrams of calcium each day. This is equivalent to three to four, 8-ounce cups of milk, preferably low-fat milk, each day. Not only will calcium help keep bones and teeth strong, but it may also help with weight loss. Dietary supplements may provide some benefit, but try to reap the rewards of low-fat milk's muscle-building protein and health-promoting vitamin D. Don't like milk? Try low-fat yogurt, soy milk or low-fat cheese to get more calcium.

• Add steps. Get a pedometer and shoot for 10,000 steps a day or, for a more practical approach, record how many steps you take each day for seven days.

Divide that total by seven and try to go above and beyond that number each day.

For example, if you average 5,000 steps a day, try to reach 5,500 steps every day of the following week, then 6,000 steps the next week. Ultimately, you want to achieve and maintain 10,000 steps each day.

For more information about making healthy choices, visit Ask the Dietitian on http://www.commissaries.com and post your questions on the DeCA Dietitian Forum.

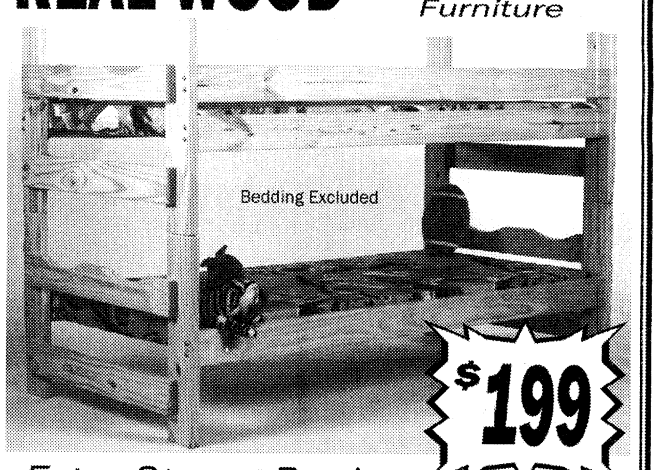

Be sure to look for other useful information in the Dietitian's Voice archive. Sign up with the DeCA Dietitian on www.twitter.com and get messages sent to your cell phone today.

crafting, Kingston said.

"This is actually the perfect place to come if you're a new (to scrapbooking) and want to try it but are intimidated," she said. "We're both bringing our tools, so if you don't have a trimmer, we'll have one you can borrow. Just bring your pictures and we'll take care of the rest."

There will be plenty of "newbies" there learning for the first time how to record their memories, said Kingston, who has chronicled with pictures and journaling the many places she has lived in her seven years as a military wife.

As a mother of four, Witte uses scrapbooking as a budget-friendly way to document her kids' growth.

"Don't let your babies grow up to be JPEGs," she said. "People want to see pictures."

Whether you come to "get away" from the daily grind, make heavily embellished pages or construct simple, streamlined greeting cards, everyone will have the chance to make new friends and learn new techniques, Witte said.

To register, contact Kingston at 706-604-8989 or aintshecrafty@gmail.com or Witte at 334-298-1734 or love2getyouorganized@yahoo.com.

People are welcome to register when they arrive or to stop by during the day to shop. Participants receive a $5 credit for the on-site store for each referral.

Luger: To speak about his spiritual transformation said. "He didn't have any concept or need for Christianity before."

Luger's talk will aim to reach a broad audience, O'Malley said.

"He appeals to everybody across the board because he doesn't come across as a religious guy," O' Malley said. "Even with all the stuff he owned, he still didn't have any peace in his life until he became a Christian."

Luger stands out from other celebrities who claim to be born-again because he practices the values he talks about, O'Malley said.

"A lot of celebrities talk about being born again, but you don't see the changes in their lives," he said. "They may go to church, but outside of it, their lives are no different. The difference between Luger and them is that he's not just talking about being a Christian, he's actually living the life."

The event is free and open to the public. No registration is necessary.

However, the church is offering front row seats, a photo opportunity with Luger and a Bible autographed by Luger to the first five active-duty military families to contact O'Malley.

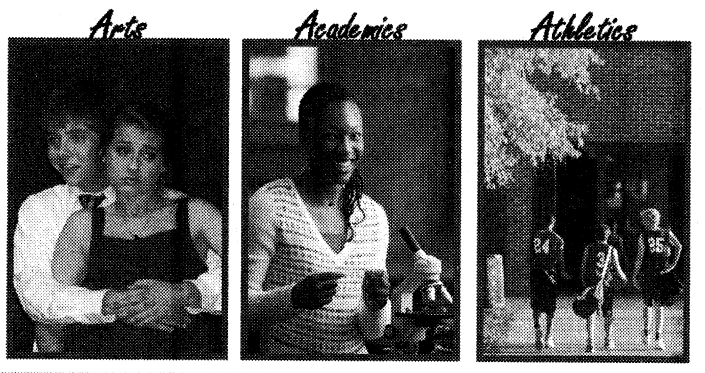

Families should bring their own cameras for photos with Luger.

For more information, call O'Malley at 706-405-8134.

Pools closed for two weeks, Smith Fitness Center pool open

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning pools, including the Briant Wells pool and the Smith Fitness Center pool, closed during the holidays because of a safety issue with the drains.

In December 2007, Congress passed the Virginia Graeme Baker Pool and Spa Safety Act. It requires all drain covers are certified by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, American National Standards Institute and includes safety measures to prevent entrapment and death. And unblockable drains, ones that can't be blocked by swimmers, need to be installed.

The act is named after Virginia Baker who is the granddaughter of former U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III. She died because she was entrapped in a drain in an inground spa in 2002.

All public pools had one year after December 2007 to comply.

Since every public pool in the nation had to comply, parts for pools were on back order, said Jim Shoemaker, Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation's Outdoor Recreation manager.

With a few parts and certification from the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Smith Fitness Center pool is open. However, Briant Wells is open only for training until early February. There are different requirements for training and recreational use, Shoemaker said.

As for the other pools around post and one at Destin, Fla., custom parts are being made and those pools will be in compliance with the new act before the summer season.

Cyberspace secrets can create marital suspicion

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

I love the Army's holiday schedule during December and January. Christmas is filled with exciting secrets. These secrets are non-destructive and fun, because the goal is to surprise our loved ones positively. We want to bring joy and happiness to them. However, secrets in general are not a good or healthy in relationships. Secrets lead to trust issues. In today's cyber world, there is cyber danger all around. I cannot tell you how many arguments and fights begin over the cell phone, the Internet and e-mail messages.

Is there anything wrong with having one or all of these? Not if you can afford them. They are great tools for keeping connected and informed. But how they are used can determine their outcome. Secrets in these areas should be warning signs to you. Ever walk into a room and someone click off the computer screen. Sure you have, we all have, but if it is a pattern, this may be a warning sign of something more. Does your spouse guard their cell phone, keep it fervently locked or is it open and available for inspection? Do you or your spouse have secret e-mail accounts? Do you have access to all accounts and passwords?

Too many times, trouble finds its way into a relationship through one of these means. When a spouse uses a chat room, behind the mask of mysterious creativity, discussing topics reserved for a spouse that can be trouble. The thrill and excitement entice you into deeper conversations that now become guarded. You add passwords to protect privacy. And if questioned, you attack with, "Don't you trust me?" You talk about your rights, your privilege and your freedoms. But this is not about your rights and freedoms. When you entered into a relationship with your spouse, you entered into a covenant relationship. You entered into a partnership. The Bible puts it like this, "the two shall become one."

When you share information, when you are open, honest and do not keep secrets you build trust you invest in your relationship by removing doubt and suspicion. When you allow deceit to enter in, it begins to be a cancer that grows and eats away at your relationship. Soon, if allowed to continue, your focus is on the fantasy and not your relationship. More distance comes between you and your spouse. You are walking down the path of marital destruction. Your relationship would be better if you took the time spent in dealing with the fantasies and invested that time into your marriage. Remember, sin always promises what it cannot deliver. The excitement of a fantasy is only for a short time and then you have to face reality. Remember the covenant vows you made. All the couples I have counseled married for life, not to divorce. If you have the warning signs of secrets in your relationship, talk with one of our counselors. To make an appointment, go to Chaplains Family Life Center in Soldiers' Plaza or call 706-545-1760.

Discover God's true gift this year

Chaplain (MAJ) David Lile
3RD HBCT

The holiday season already seems ages gone. Our house is back to normal — no more tree and holiday lighting. Our gifts have been brought to life or are comfortably in early retirement. In my faith tradition, the greatest gift we received receives similar treatment. At best, it has created "new life" and at worst, disregarded.

Thus it is quite appropriate the church celebrates this season, by dedicating a whole other season to the remembrance of the gift that God brings to the world.

We call this season, Epiphany. It is the celebration of God's personal involvement in our lives. The motif of light is the essential facet of our celebration, from the Magi's guiding star "light" to the effect of God's transforming "son" light for our present existence. Light is celebrated in lives seeking truth. Light is also maligned in lives maneuvering in darkness. I am vaguely reminded of this every time I open a dark closet in the house or a CONNEX and surprise the insect and rodent inhabitants therein. Light shines. Light exposes. Light threatens.

There are two great challenges though with God's gift. First, as is popularly known, the "wise men" came to pay homage to the gift, with gifts of "gold, frankincense and myrrh" (Matthew 2:11). We often confuse this homage as something we are due as well.

Second, as mentioned earlier many of our gifts of toys and clothes have already been neglected or discarded, the same is true with God's gift.

We often hear the statement, "I wish for a second coming." Come, Lord Jesus. God's response, "what have we done with the first?" We are warned not to calculate further (Matthew 25:13). We always want an installment on another gift without fully understanding and using the gift that we actually have now.

May God bless each of you in this new year of life as well as personal and communal discovery of the true "gift."

Civil Rights leader's life remembered

Martin Luther King Jr. National Historic Site offers "unique experience"

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

The two-story Victorian-style home at 501 Auburn Avenue, in Atlanta's Sweet Auburn neighborhood may be similar in style to its neighbors, but it has a distinguishing claim to fame: Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. spent the first 12 years of his life there.

Today, the Martin Luther King Jr. National Historic Site, a two-block area of Sweet Auburn, is preserved by the National Park Service to allow visitors to explore the places that shaped a civil rights icon.

"Everyone will glean a unique experience from visiting the site," said Saudia Muwwakkil, public affairs officer for the site. "It's just a short drive from Fort Benning, and it's worthwhile to connect that moment in our nation's history with experiences that people are encountering today."

In addition to taking a park ranger-led tour of King's birth home, visitors can explore interactive exhibits at the visitor center, view the grave of Martin Luther King Jr. and Coretta Scott King and stand in molded concrete footprints of civil rights leaders on the International Civil Rights Walk of Fame. Some of King's personal belongings, including a Bible, a bottle of cologne, a suitcase, and King's Nobel Peace Prize, are on display at his grave site.

Most of the homes in the historic site's two city blocks have been restored to their 1930s appearances, and many are still occupied today.

"These two blocks are just a snapshot of how vibrant this community was," said Faye Walmsley, chief of interpretation, education and cultural resources management for the site.

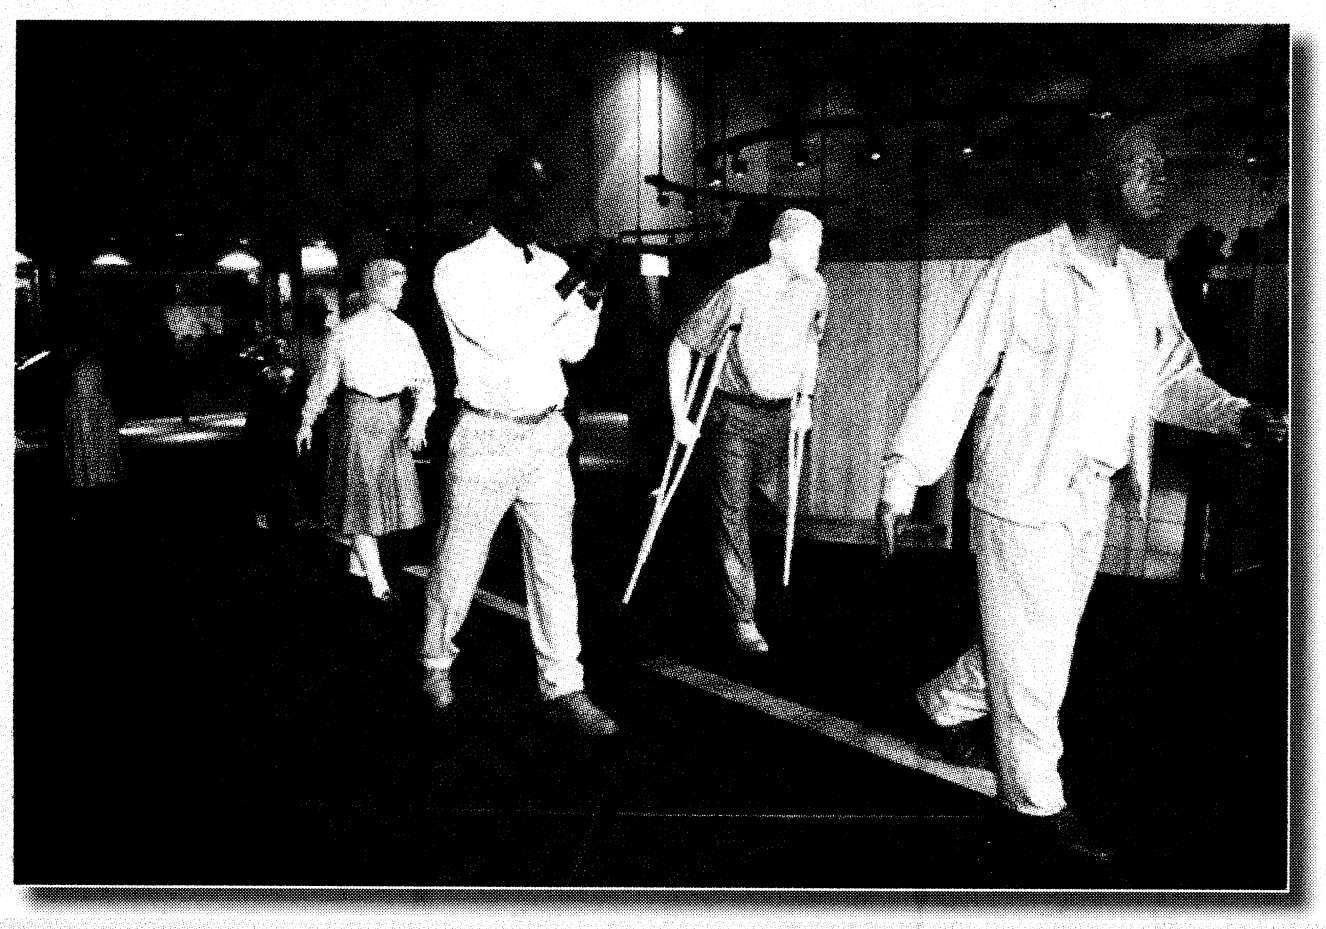

The guided tour of King's birth home begins at Fire Station 6, the first fire station in Atlanta to be integrated in the mid-1960s.

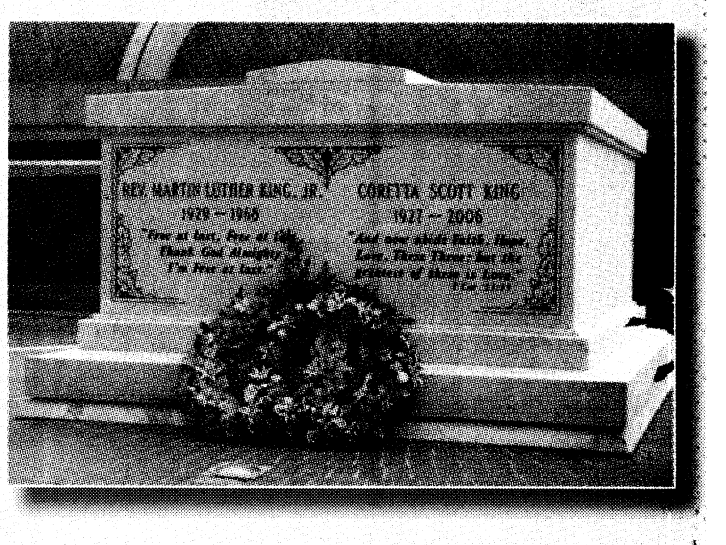

"When you go on a tour of the home, you see that it's not a home of stuff, but a home of family, responsibility, love, and togetherness," Faye Walmsley said. "That's how people connect to the place."

Less than two blocks away from the fire station is Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King, his father and his grandfather served as pastors. The church is currently closed for restoration and will reopen in the fall, when it will have been restored to its 1960s appearance, when King was its pastor.

"Because of Dr. King's background and how he was raised, he learned a sense of duty, a sense of justice, and an obligation to do the right thing," Walmsley said. "Everyone can connect with that, especially our visitors from Fort Benning."

The site is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day except Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day. Admission and tours are free. In order to preserve the historic integrity of King's birth home, tours are limited to 15 people, and are first come, first served. For more information, call 404-331-5190 or visit www.nps.gov/malu.

GRAN TORINO

Walt Kowalski (Clint Eastwood) is a widower, grumpy, tough-minded, borderline-hateful, unhappy old man who can't get along with either his kids or his neighbors. The Korean War veteran's prize possession is a 1973 Gran Torino he keeps in cherry condition. When his neighbor Tao, a young Hmong teenager, tries to steal the car, Kowalski sets out to reform the youth. Drawn into the life of Tao's family, Kowalski is soon taking steps to protect them from neighborhood gangs.

The resourceful kids stumble upon an abandoned hotel and using Bruce's mechanical talents, transform it into a magical dog-paradise for Friday — and eventually for all Friday's friends. When barking dogs make the neighbors suspicious, Andi and Bruce use every invention they have to avoid anyone discovering "who let the dogs in."

Casey is plagued by a ghost during the day and by horrible dreams at night. With the help of Sendak, her best friend Romy and her boyfriend Mark, Beldon must shut a doorway opened beyond our world by someone who was never born.

It stars Gary Oldman, Odette Yustman, Cam Gigandet, Jane Alexander and Meagan Good. The Unborn is rated PG-13 for violence and terror, images, thematic material and language and sexual references.

NOT EASILY BROKEN

Clarice's high-powered career is put on hold while she recovers with the help of her physical therapist Julie, whose son is coached by Dave in Little League. But, during her recovery, Clarice and Dave's marriage issues are thrown into the spotlight.

Over the years, Clarice became blind to Dave's needs as she pursued her own dreams, and now Clarice worries that her constant criticism of Dave has pushed him away — possibly into Julie's arms. Now, they must face the questions of whether they are really meant to be together, and if so, how to fight for what they have.

Not Easily Broken stars Morris Chestnut, Cannon Jay, Eddie Cibrian, Kwame Boateng and Maeve Quinlan. It's rated PG-13 for sexual references and thematic elements.

MARLEY AND ME

Journalist John Grogan gets a dog for his wife Jenny as a warm-up to having kids. Little does he realize their new puppy would turn out to be the "worst dog in the world." BEDTIME STORIES

Skeeter Bronson, a hotel handyman, finds his life turned upside down when his sister is laid off, leaving Skeeter to watch her two children while she travels for job interviews. The kids insist Skeeter tell them bedtime stories. Much to Skeeter's shock, they seem to come true! The only problem is, the kids seem to be the ones controlling which magical events happen in real life.

Bedtime Stories stars Adam Sandler, Courtney Cox and Keri Russell. It's rated PG for rude humor and language.

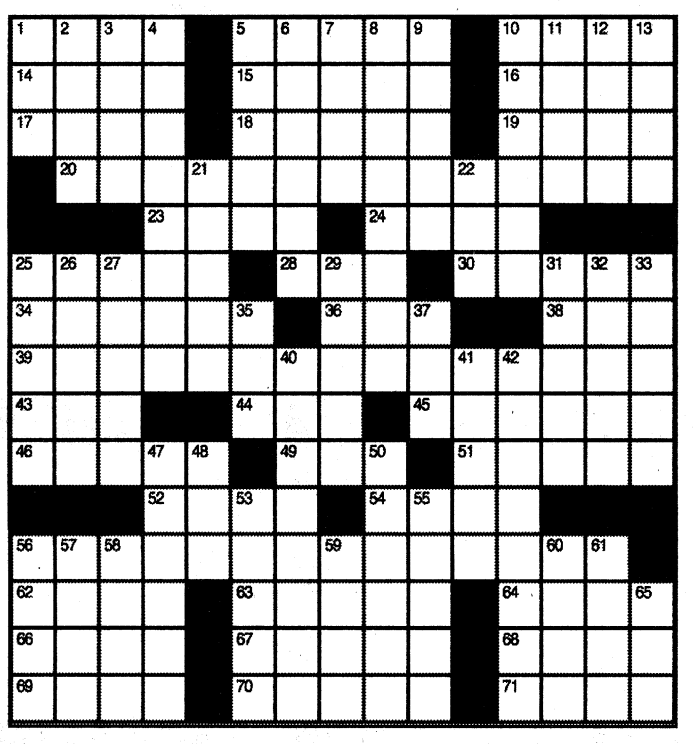

THE CURIOUS CASE OF BENJAMIN BUTTON

When Benjamin Button is born in New Orleans in 1918, no one expects him to live very long. A doctor declares his body to be like that of a man in his eighties.

As Benjamin gets older, he defies predictions, seeming to become younger and stronger. He survives to attend school and fight in a war, continuing to baffle everyone he meets. As his body gradually grows younger, he learns about the timeless nature of love.

The film, starring Brad Pitt and Cate Blanchett, is based on a story by F. Scott Fitzgerald, which was inspired by the Mark Twain quote, "Life would be infinitely happier if we could only be born at the age of eighty and gradually approach eighteen." It's rated PG-13 for war violence, sexual content, language and smoking.

Soldiers spend Christmas with R&R C1

Paper's focus remains telling Army story

Jennifer S. Gunn
USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Today marks the first edition of The Bayonet published with a new contract manager, the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer.

Those of you who read this announcement in the L-E on Christmas Day may have wondered how things would change for The Bayonet. But if you take a look in this edition, you'll see that not much has changed for you, our readers. Our focus is still telling the Soldier and Army Family story at Fort Benning. That is most important and that will never change.

Any changes or inconveniences you do experience because of our transition should be seamless at best and minimal at worst.

As with any new management situation, we had to say goodbye to some folks. Since 2006 we have worked with Landmark Military Newspapers of Norfolk, Va., to bring you each edition of The Bayonet. We are grateful for the many positive influences this company has brought to our paper and the kind and talented professionals we worked with during the past two years. They will be missed.

Everyone to show ID at ACPs

Procedure change starts Jan. 31, delays may occur

THE BAYONET

Beginning Jan. 31, all occupants of vehicles entering Fort Benning must present a valid ID card.

It used to be that drivers with DoD cards could "vouch" for the rest of their passengers when driving onto post, said CPT Joseph LaBranche, Provost Marshal Operations officer for Fort Benning.

Now, each passenger must have a valid state or federal photo ID card, such as a driver's license, passport or DoD ID card, to present at one of the nine access control points.

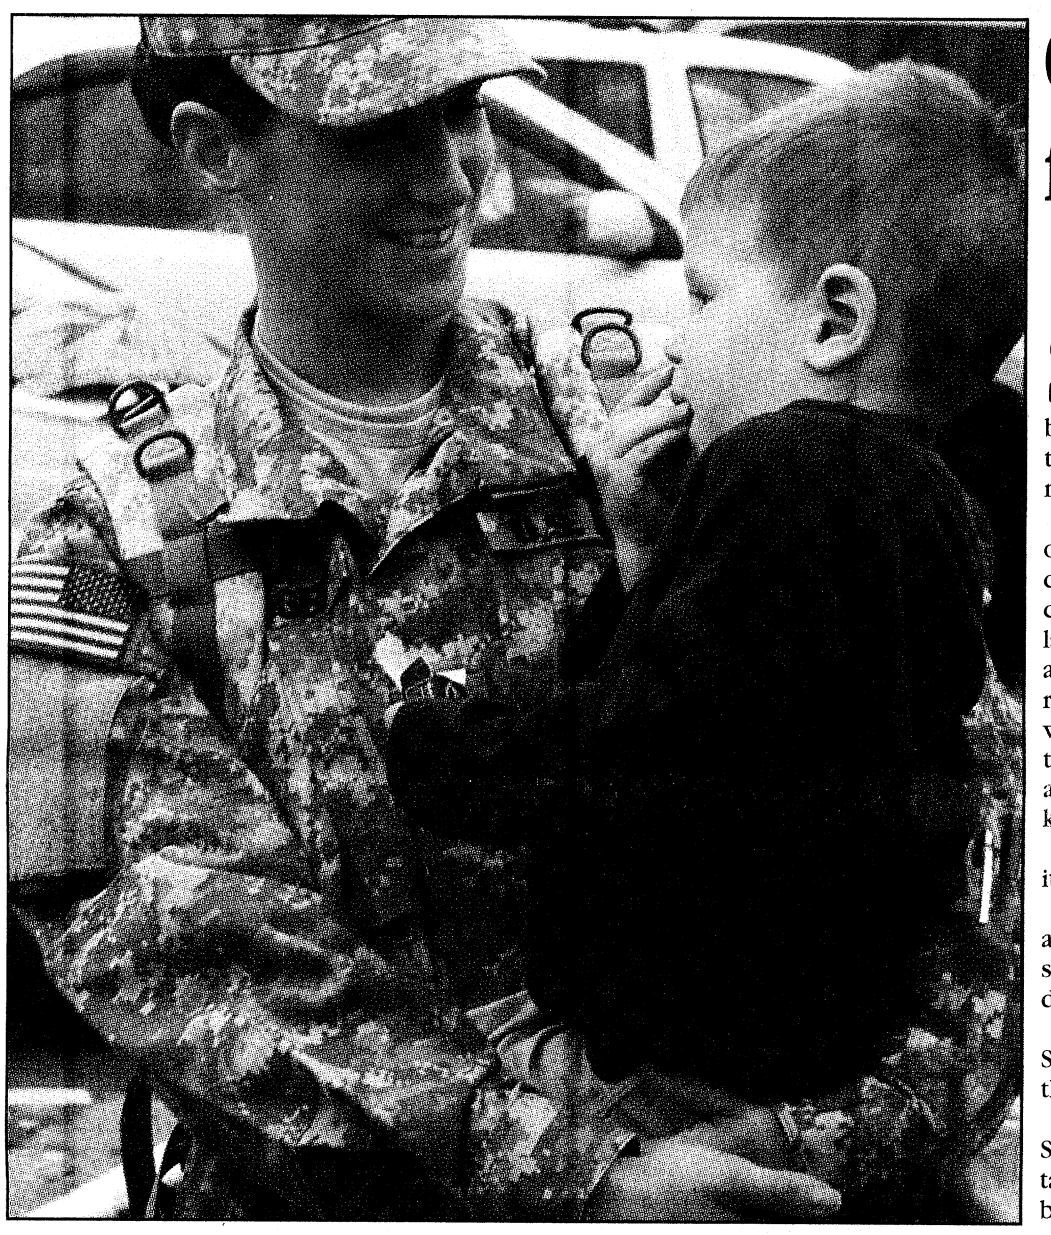

Those who do not have a valid ID will be redirected to the closest visitor center on Benning Boulevard or I-185 to be vouched onto the installation, LaBranche said.

To be vouched, a person must be signed on by a DoD ID cardholder from a hosting unit, he said. Examples of a hosting unit include a member of the rear detachment vouching for a family member of a deployed Soldier or unit representative vouching for a relative attending a graduation on post.

The change will bring Fort Benning in line with other installations, and most importantly, with DoD guidance, said LTC Kevin Clarke, director of Emergency Services.

"We're not eliminating people who are already allowed on the installation," he said. "It's an open installation, so anyone with a valid ID and a purpose for being here is allowed on.

690th deploys for Iraqi mission

THE BAYONET

Sixty-two Soldiers in the 690th Medical Company (Ground Ambulance) were honored during a farewell ceremony Dec. 30 in Marshall Auditorium, three days before deploying to Iraq for a 12-month tour. While there, they will accompany other units on patrols, providing medical support and ground evacuation.

"We are celebrating the preparedness and the readiness of the 690th Ground Ambulance Medical Company to deploy to Iraq to do their duty," said COL David Fulbright, commander of the 14th Combat Support Hospital. "The last six months, they have completed a very extensive and arduous go-to-war training plan. It's training that is required to ensure that when they go down range they will be safe, that they will react the right way whenever things happen, that they are prepared to do their mission and to do it well, that they know the terrain and they know how to act in all situations."

Fulbright said he was confident the unit would perform its duty well.

"Anyone who is sent to combat is there for a reason, and yours is to care and transport the sick and injured," he said. "And all of you are more than ready and qualified to do your job."

Company commander CPT Tamara Edwards said her Soldiers were "ready and anxious to get started" after all their preparation.

"Leaders, go above and beyond when taking care of Soldiers," she said. "Soldiers, go above and beyond when taking care of your battle buddy. Families, go above and beyond when supporting your Soldiers, because believe it or not, this has a direct effect on our company's success."

Soldiers, civilians get pay increase

C. Todd Lopez
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — There'll be something extra in everybody's paycheck come January.

Active-duty personnel will draw an across-the-board 3.9 percent pay raise beginning Jan. 1. A sergeant with five years of service, for instance, will see an increase in monthly base salary of about $88 dollars. A captain with nine years of service would see nearly $200 per month extra. Pay raises aren't limited to military personnel, however. Civilian employees under both the General Schedule and National Security Personnel System pay plans are also receiving pay raises.

Civilians under the GS system get an across-the-board pay raise of 2.9 percent in 2009. Civilians under the NSPS pay system will see an increase of 1.74 percent and can earn additional performance-based salary increases through the NSPS "pay pool" process.

Additionally, all civilian employees rate a locality pay, which is based on the cost-of-living in their employment market. Locality pay rates for 2009 range from about 13.86 percent to 34.35 percent of an employee's base pay.

Airborne legacy passed down through four generations

THE BAYONET

1LT Nick Conley, one of more than 460 students in B Company, 1st Battalion, 507th (Parachute) Infantry Regiment, graduated from Airborne School Dec. 18, 2008. When the time came for him to receive his wings, it represented both three weeks of intensive training for Conley and more than 65 years of tradition for his family.

"It's indescribable … fantastic; it's tradition," said SFC(R) Brunk J. Conley, who traveled from his home in Oregon to Fort Benning to help pin the wings on his grandson.

The 65-year-old paratrooper earned his wings at Fort Bragg, N.C., in 1961, just 20 years after his father and 21 years before his son did the same at Fort Benning.

That makes Nick Conley number four in a line of Airborne Soldiers dating back to 1941 and the earliest days of the paratrooper.

Named by his father (who took a fancy to the surname of farmhand George Brunk), Brunk Winston Conley jumped into Normandy and Holland during World War II.

Those were among the first combat jumps ever made, said his son, who inherited both the family name and the love of all things

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

2009 named Year of the NCO by Army officials

"The goal of the corps of NCOs, whose duty is the day-to-day business of running the Army so that the officer corps has time to command it, is to continue to improve our Army at every turn. We want to leave it better than we found it. Regardless of the kind of unit you're in, it ought to be an "elite" outfit, because its NCO can make it one."

— SMA William G. Bainbridge
5th Sergeant Major of the Army

We announce 2009 as the Year of the NCO. During this year, we will accelerate previously approved strategic NCO development initiatives that enhance training, education, capability and utilization of our NCO Corps. We will showcase the NCO story for the Army and the American people to honor the sacrifices and celebrate the contributions of the NCO Corps, past and present.

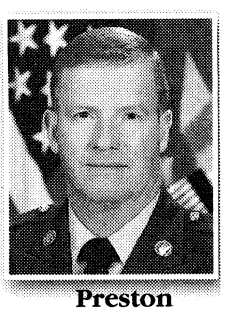

Geren

Today's NCO operates autonomously, with confidence and competence. We empower and trust our NCOs like no other army in the world. In fact, many of the world's armies are looking at our NCO Corps as a model for their own as they recognize the vital roles NCOs play in our Army.

Casey

Our NCOs lead the way in education, in training, in discipline. They share their strength of character with every Soldier they lead, every officer the serve, and every civilian they support.

NCOs are the keepers of our standards. From the recruiting station to basic training to combat zones; civil affairs to medicine to logistics; natural disaster assistance to graveside attendance at Arlington; whether Active, Guard or Reserve, our NCOs take the lead. Hence the phrase, Sergeant take the lead!

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES

Who has been the most influential NCO in your career?

SFC Sylvia Ackins, the first NCO I ever had. She trained me on the job that I do: supply. It's a lot to learn, a lot of different aspects. She taught me everything I know (and) motivated me. She's the best NCO I ever had, and I would love to be someone like her.

— SSG Davida Hill
Warrior Transition Battalion

CSM Wells. He is currently the sergeant major of West Point. He was my first sergeant, and his professionalism and impartiality made him an inspirational leader. He's calm under stressful situations — that's something to emulate. I draw from experiences I had with him to apply the right type of leadership to the right situations.

— SFC Robert Nerkowski
Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate

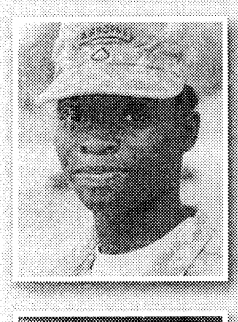

I would say SGT Dulaney, because when I was getting ready to become an NCO, he mentored me a lot. He showed me the right way — how to take care of Soldiers. I thank him for that.

— SSG Hester Bennett
598th Maintenance Company

One of my old first sergeants, 1SG Saverino, showed me the things I needed to do to get ready for the promotion board. He took the time to read my records. He personally rented a van and loaded eight of us in there and drove from Fort Polk, La., to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. I probably wouldn't have done it on my own.

— SFC(R) Patrick Ryan
Columbus

NCOs have a big influence. Everything you need to know, you ask them, and most of the time, they have the answers. Like my squad leader, SGT Wesman, if I'm confused about something in the Army, he shows me the right way. He's just been a good Soldier.

— PFC Opeoluwa Adegoke
1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment

SGT Willet. He challenges me. If he's teaching me something, and I can't get it right, he doesn't do it for me. He teaches me how. He's always there if I need help — someone I can look up to. I know he'll be there to back me up.

— PFC William Labor
11th Engineer Battalion

SSG Tommy Norris. I was a young Army firefighter, and he just took me under his wing. He showed me how to do the paperwork, easier techniques to get the job done ... standard guidance. It made it a lot easier, knowing someone was there to say, "do it this way, don't do it that way."

Army careers begin with NCOs

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

When I learned 2009 was designated the Year of the NCO I thought back to my years as an NCO, NCOs I served with and the NCOs who guided me along the path of becoming a better leader.

I served with many good NCOs during my career, but one NCO stood out in my mind for many reasons — he was the epitome of the kind of NCO I wanted to be.

Strange, you never forget the person who had the greatest influence on your professional career.

In 1978 I received orders for my first permanent change of station — an overseas tour of duty to Germany.

As a young SP4 with barely 18 months under my belt, I had no idea what to expect. I was leaving a tube artillery battery for a Pershing missile unit in a foreign country with a new chain of command — it was like starting all over again.

After arriving at the battalion headquarters, I was taken to my unit and introduced to, or should say reported to, my new first sergeant, 1SG Herbert S. Henson.

He reminded me of my father, how I remember him when he was alive and in the Army — crew cut and all.

His demeanor was strictly business, his uniform highly starched and his boots were like glass — just what you would expect of someone called "Top."

During my new Soldier briefing, I was never in doubt of what would be expected from me, nor did I ever doubt who the leader of the NCO corps was in my new unit — I gained immediate confidence that I would be led by the best.

Henson led by example and he expected his NCOs or those aspiring to be an NCO to do so as well. He expected you to always look like a Soldier and be tactically and technically proficient.

Aside from Soldier skills, he had a way of instilling the other qualities needed to be a successful NCO and he never overlooked the opportunity to get his message across — there was always a message of being a better NCO and person in everything he said and did, even if it was sending you to the mess hall to peel potatoes.

From across the parade field, more than 100 yards long, he could spot a Soldier needing a haircut and you could hear him letting that Soldier know at the top of his lungs. He reinforced the idea that an NCO was an NCO all the time, not to just his Soldiers but to all Soldiers and making on-the-spot corrections was a duty of the NCO. He preached having the courage to do the right thing. He accepted nothing less than being responsible and accountable for your actions and the actions of the Soldiers under you.

He expected a disciplined unit, but there were times when he let you know he was human. He had a knack of knowing when his Soldiers needed a little bit of levity and usually concluded the morning formation with some kind of saying we all thought was funny, although he always said it with a straight face.

When we were sent to a 24-hour nuclear response site for 90 days, we'd get movie reels to watch during our down times and on one occasion, Henson refused to send the movies back to the battalion until all of his Soldiers had the opportunity to watch them. Needless to say he was called on the carpet back at the battalion garrison to answer for that.

He practiced what he preached — he made a decision, accepted responsibility for it and had the courage to stand up for it — and his Soldiers.

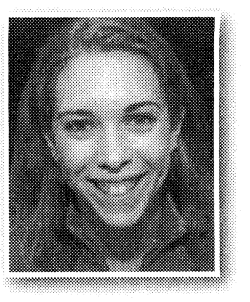

What I learned from him during my two years in his unit carried me through my successful 20-plus years in the Army and beyond, and I am glad my first stripes were earned under him.

I believe every successful NCO has had an NCO during their career who has given them guidance and helped them down the path to being what an NCO truly is — the backbone of the Army.

Catching inauguration fever

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Here's a quick experiment: go online to the Google Web site and type in "inauguration tickets." Then, try to count the number of Web sites selling them. Did it take you longer than five seconds?

In just over two months since the general election, countless vendors and Web sites have cropped up promising to help you get a front row seat at what's become the world's hottest ticket. Everyone, it seems, wants a piece of history in action, and there are plenty of people ready to make a buck to help you.

For starters, QVC , the television shopping network, will be on hand in Washington, D.C., selling coins, stamps, jewelry, handbags and other items that it's deemed indispensable to history-minded revelers. If you'd like to attend the swearing-in ceremony, get your checkbook ready, because tickets are fetching record prices online. According to CNN's Web site, one site is selling them for more than $20,000. And, if you are lucky enough to score a ticket, be prepared to shell out even more money for a hotel room. The Ritz-Carlton and other Washington hotels are offering inauguration weekend packages ranging from several hundred to tens of thousands of dollars.

In all the hype surrounding Barack Obama's inauguration, it's easy to lose track of why this event is so important in the first place, and it has nothing to do with luxury hotel packages or handbags. Presidential inaugurations are about welcoming a new commander-in-chief. They're a time for reflecting on where our country has been and where it will go in the future. The swearing-in ceremony is a solemn occasion where our new president takes an oath to protect and defend our country as well as he can, and that's hardly something to take lightly.

So when you're watching Barack Obama take the oath of office Jan. 20, take a moment to reflect on the fact that you're witnessing history. And if you absolutely must have a keepsake to commemorate the occasion, please, don't spend too much, and steer clear of an online auction's $8,999.99 Obama diamond pendant.

43-year-old earns Ranger Tab

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

SSG Sanghak Lee, A company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, wanted to go to Ranger School ever since he joined the Army more than 10 years ago. He realized his dream when he graduated Dec. 12, but Lee's achievement was made more remarkable by another factor — his age. Lee is 43 years old, the oldest Soldier to graduate Ranger School in 2008.

"I never think about my age," he said. "I always felt young. I'm just a regular Soldier."

Lee applied for Ranger school in 2003, but was unable to attend because his unit was deploying to Iraq.

"After that, I always thought about Ranger school," he said. "When my platoon leader asked me this year if I wanted to go, I said yes without hesitation."

Lee, who has never scored lower than 300 on a PT test, prepared for the physical demands of Ranger School by doing daily ruck sack marches in the weeks leading up to his school date. He credits his wife and friends with keeping him motivated.

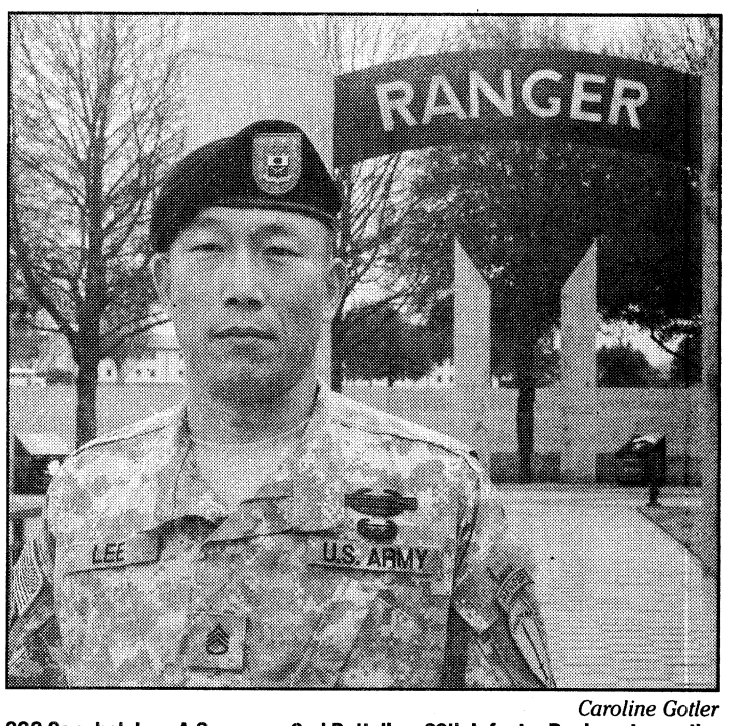

"I couldn't have done it by myself," he said. "My wife would follow me, walking or jogging, while I marched, and my buddy, SSG James Serina, did road marching with me every Thursday morning.

"You can't finish Ranger school by yourself. You have to have teamwork 100 percent."

Lee's emphasis on teamwork is representative of his values and how he lives his life, Serina said.

"He's a quiet professional, dedicated and knowledgeable," he said. "Everything you'd want an Infantry Soldier and a Ranger to be. He's definitely the kind of guy I'd like to deploy with."

Lee said he is looking forward to sharing his training with younger Soldiers.

Fort Benning helps meet Army retention mission

Lori Egan

"I love being in the Army; I love my job," said SGT Karen Oxendine, who re-enlisted for five years Dec. 17. Commanding General MG Michael Barbero administered the oath of re-enlistment to the first Soldier he met at Fort Benning.

Oxendine is the steward for Marshall House, where distinguished visitors stay while on post.

Oxendine impressed the general with her professionalism, maturity and the way she conducted business, he said.

"When we have very important visitors stay at Fort Benning, this is the Soldier they see first and last," Barbero said. "We have to have the best there; it's an important job."

Oxendine, who has deployed to Iraq twice with the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team and once with the 2nd Battalion, 44th Air Defense Artillery, re-enlisted for a year's stabilization and an $11,000 bonus, which was about $7,500 after taxes.

Lori Egan
MG Michael Barbero, the commanding general of Fort Benning, shakes hands with SGT Karen Oxendine after administering the oath of re-enlistment.

"My family loves it here," said the mother of five. "They like their schools and they like being in a military environment."

In fiscal 2008, the active Army exceeded its retention mission, finishing the year at 114 percent. SGM Anita Childs, Fort Benning's command career counselor, said the reasons Soldiers re-enlist fall into three categories — financial, career and patriotism.

"With today's economy, with so many families in need, having a steady paycheck is a blessing," Oxendine said. "I'm grateful for my job."

Some of the financial incentives for Soldiers include bonuses and tax-free income while deployed, she said. Currently the Army has a very robust Selective Re-enlistment Bonus Program with more than 100 military occupation specialties eligible for bonuses.

Most re-enlistment options and bonus entitlements have prerequisites, so Soldiers should talk with their career counselor to determine eligibility, Childs said.

Career enhancement is another retention incentive, she said.

The opportunity for a different MOS, skill identifier or an assignment a Soldier believes will provide a better opportunity for promotion or future civilian employment are all reasons Soldiers give for re-enlisting, Childs said.

With her third re-enlistment, Oxendine said she plans to submit an enlisted aide packet.

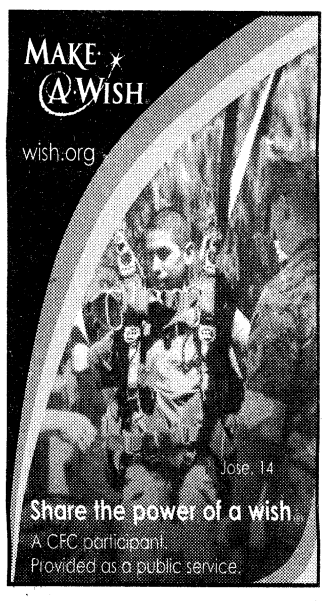

"I enjoy what I do," she said. "I love being an NCO — taking care of Soldiers. This is my career."

Soldiers also re-enlist out of patriotism and loyalty to their comrades, Childs said.

"A lot of Soldiers have told me they can't allow their friends to deploy without them," she said.

"They feel a sense of obligation to their units and comrades."

Naval Sea Cadets train on Fort Benning

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

More than 60 recruits for the Naval Sea Cadet Corps completed their first confidence course Dec. 29 on Main Post. Tackling the obstacle course was one of the many requirements for the cadets, aged 12 to 18, during their weeklong training.

The nine-day training period is the first step for these new cadets, said LCDR Don Farrimond, executive officer for the training contingent.

"We jam pack into that nine days all kinds of basic training information: a lot of marching, a lot of understanding chain of command, different grades and ranks. It's not a cake walk," Farrimond said. "From my perspective, we're not trying to teach them to be Soldiers or Sailors per se, but it certainly is an opportunity to learn leadership, self-respect … the basics."

Cadets are under no obligation to join the military, said WO Philip Winslett, commanding officer of the Columbus Ironclad Division, which hosted the training.

Training they receive here, like the confidence course, teamwork exercises and class work, can be used in all walks of life, Winslett said.

"We want to challenge them and get them to realize they are capable of doing things that they may not have thought they could have done," he said.

Cadets traveled from across the country, some as far away as New York and Colorado, to attend the camp. Hannah Wulfsburg, a recruit of three months, drove 13 hours from Texas Dec. 25.

Although the training was hard and would take up most of her holiday break, she is glad to be part the program, she said.

Wulfsburg doesn't plan to join the military, but she knows demonstrating leadership and commitment in the corps can lead to scholarships for college.

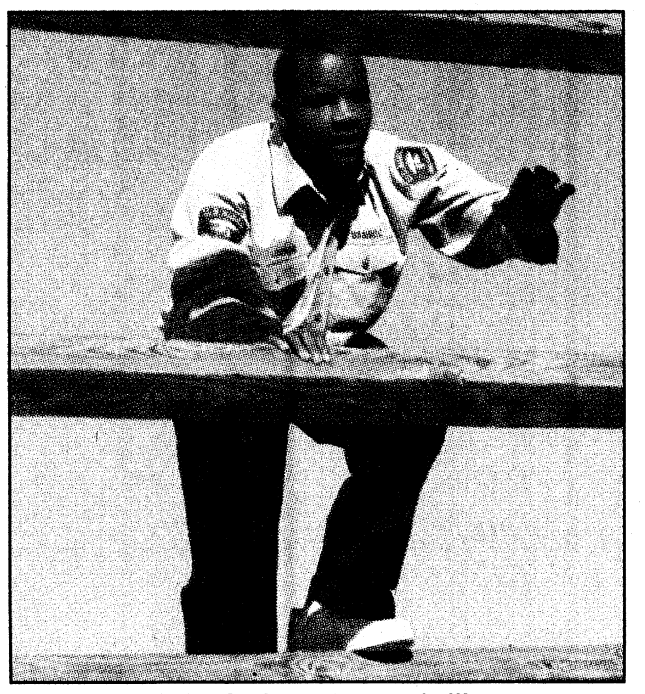

With plans to study medicine and become a doctor, she needs all the help from scholarships she can get, she said.

"It's going to be worth it," Wulfsburg said. "Like when we're doing PT, what you have to remember is pain is temporary, but success and accomplishment last you a lifetime."

For most of the new recruits, the hardest obstacles were the tall ones.

"I felt nervous, but my teammates cheering me on made me feel better. I knew I wouldn't fall if I had my teammates underneath me," said Jeremy Boyce after conquering the Weaver.

Boyce said he was proud he mastered the obstacle,

Mario Leepow reaches for the next rung on the Weaver.

but he owed it to his team.

"As a squad, we were going to do this together, so I'm not going to let my squad down even though I'm afraid of heights," he said. "Teamwork, camaraderie, that's what we're learning. If you can't work as a team, then you're not going to get anything done."

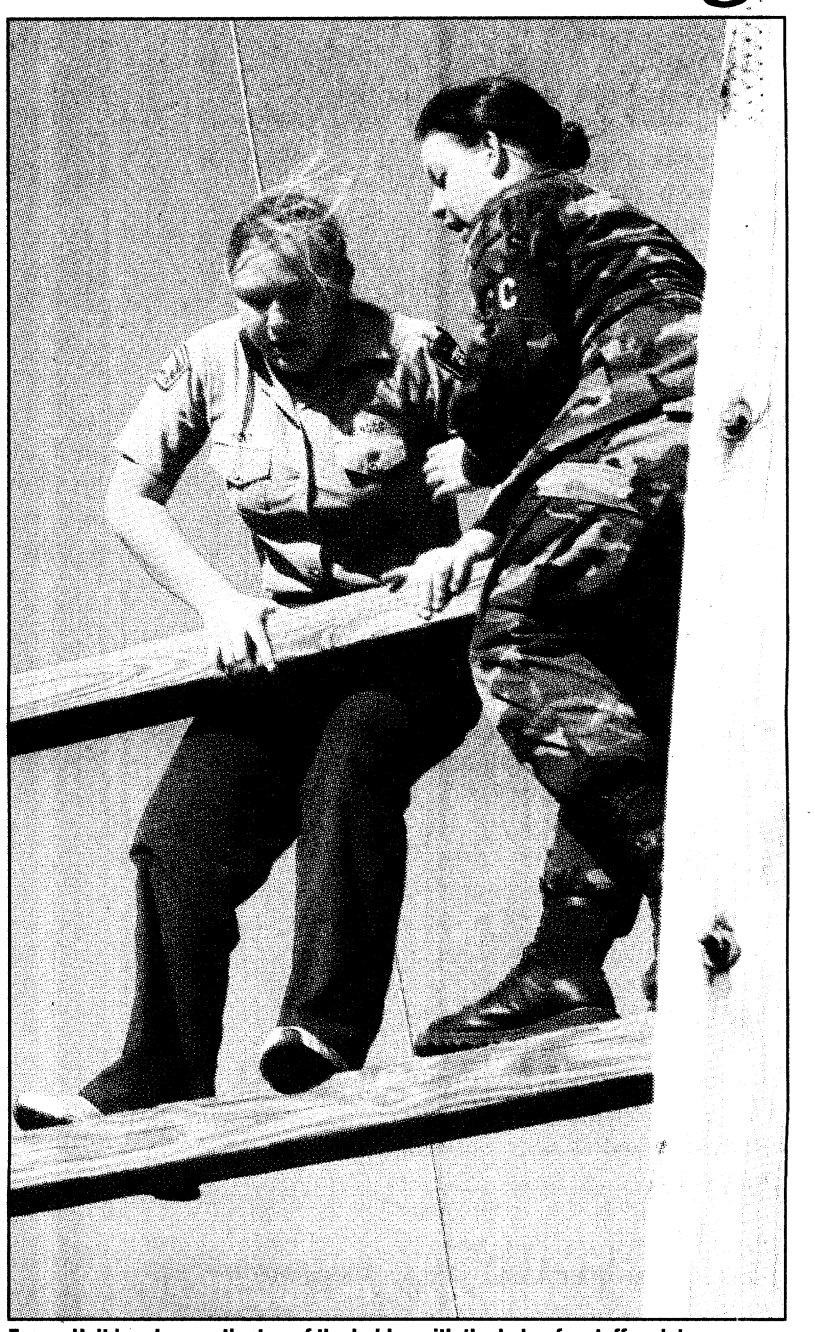

Several staff cadets who had been in the program longer and already completed recruit training helped them through the obstacles. The staff cadets joined their squad in finishing each obstacle, many of which were timed events.

The way to lead is not on the sidelines but "right there" with the recruits, PO3 Deborah Brown said.

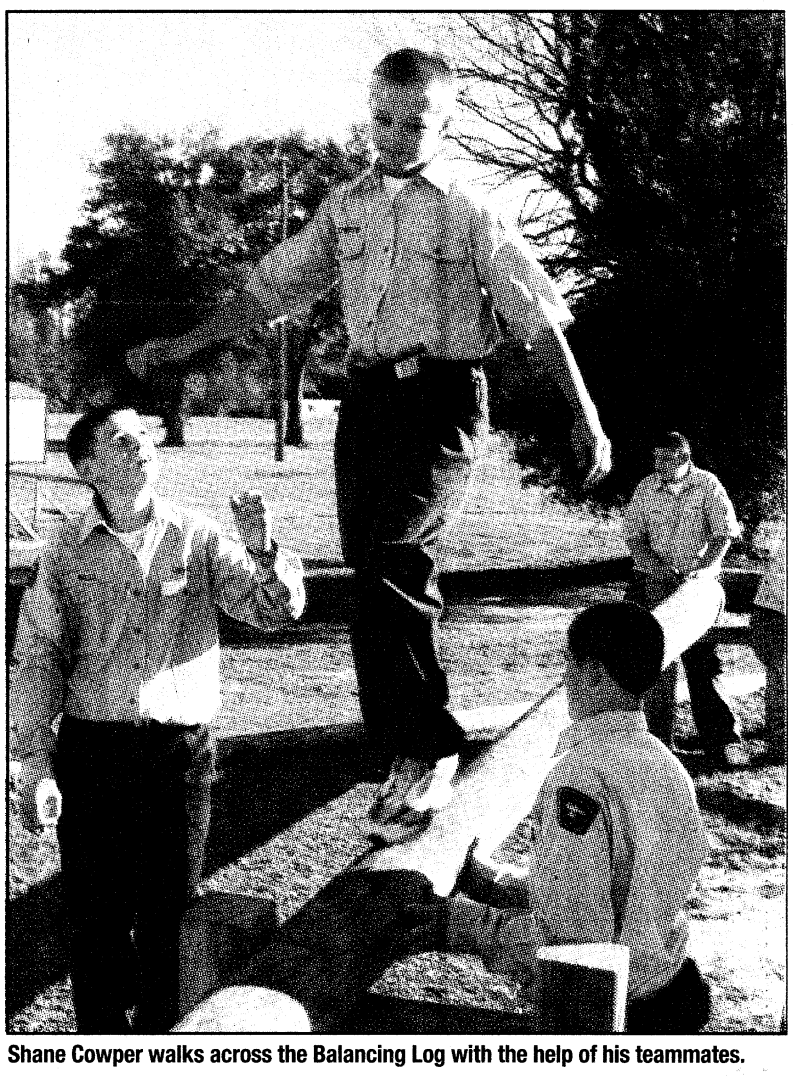

"We're here to train them to become better petty officers in the future," Brown said, "not just holler at them. You show them what to do and you do it with them."

During the week, students completed the Leadership Reaction Course, swim qualifications, a rock wall climb, and self-defense and fire fighting training. They also took classes on drug awareness, health and hygiene, military history and first aid. They graduated Saturday, advancing from seamen recruits to seamen apprentices.

For more information about the program, contact Winslett at 334-790-3370, visit the local Columbus Ironclad Division's Web site, www.ironcladdivision.com, or go to the National Web site, www.seacadets.org.

SGT Richard Powell, 203rd Brigade Support Battalion, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, unloads razor wire at the Tactical Operations Center field exercise on Kelley Hill Dec. 2. The exercise, which was designed to improve field readiness and prepare Soldiers for problems that may arise in a deployment, lasted from Nov. 30 to Dec. 11.

Exercise tests readiness

PVT Erik S. Anderson
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Soldiers from the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, participated in a field readiness exercise starting Nov. 30, continuing through Dec. 11 at Artillery Field on Kelley Hill.

The exercise involves elements from the 3rd HBCT working together and setting up a fully functional Tactical Operation Center.

PFC Shera Erickson, Headquarters and Headquarters Troop, 3rd HBCT, understands the significance of the event.

"It's important because we need to sort out the small problems that might arise before or during a deployment," she said.

Erickson understands her tasks as part of the exercise.

"As a signal analyst, we set up our equipment and make sure everything is operational," she said. "Because I'm a private, I do a lot of heavy work: lifting and moving things, putting up tents and doing guard duty."

Erickson isn't the only Soldier that understands the significance of the exercise.

"It's good training," said PVT Colin Wilbur, HHT, 3rd HBCT. "It gets us prepared for deployments."

Operation Iraqi Freedom V was the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team's most recent deployment, and some of the equipment hasn't been used since the team returned to Fort Benning.

"This is the first time operating the equipment since OIF V," said SSG Jonathan Swenson, B Company, 3rd Brigade Special Troops Battalion, 3rd HBCT.

This exercise is a ramp-up to more advanced training, preparing the Soldiers of Kelley Hill for their next deployment.

"The point of this exercise is to rehearse for Hammer Focus," Swenson said.

Besides testing equipment both old and new for proper functionality, the event provides an excellent chance to offer remedial training for operators, said SGT Orlando Sarabia, B Company, 3rd BSTB.

"We are making sure we have proficiency and are able to move at a moment's notice," he said.

Special Forces training builds 'mental toughness'

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Carrying telephone poles, a litter with a mock casualty and ammo cans of varying weights while running unknown distances is part of PT for Soldiers training to join the Special Forces.

"This builds a little mental toughness because the Soldiers don't know how far they are going, how much weight they carry and they don't know when it'll end," said SFC Morgan Campbell, a Special Forces recruiter on main post.

They need the mental toughness to become a Special Forces Soldier, Campbell said.

The process begins at Fort Bragg, N.C., where Soldiers attend Special Forces Assessment and Selection which focuses on physical training and land navigation. They go through 14 days of physical events including hauling a mock casualty unknown distances, run and ruck assessments and completing team events.

After being selected, they PCS to the Special Forces Qualification Course, held at Fort Bragg, which includes improving individual land navigation skills, live fire and small unit tactics training, learning a language, a Survival, Evasion, Resistance and Escape course and unconventional warfare operations.

Once Soldiers pass the qualification course, they have earned their Green Beret and Special Forces Tab.

SSG Constantine Vassilakos is training for the selection process.

"I have always wanted to be in Special Forces," he said. "You have to have a lot of drive and dedication to do it."

> "You are out there on day 12 of a three-day mission, and you just can't throw your hands up and walk away. National security might be at stake. Your support might be six countries over. You gotta have mental fortitude — that is key. And not only do you have to be highly trained and physically tough, you need to be mentally superior and creative and have the ability to be a critical thinker on the spot."
> — SFC Steven Hill, station commander

Vassilakos carries a rucksack of varying weights up to 80 pounds four times a week to prepare him for selection.

Selection is unpredictable and intense, said SGT Jonathan Largura, who passed selection and is training for the course.

"In selection, you might have five minutes to prepare for an event and you show up in ACUs and a ruck and you have no idea what you are doing," Largura said. "It's nerve racking to show up and not know what you are doing because you can't plan mentally or physically."

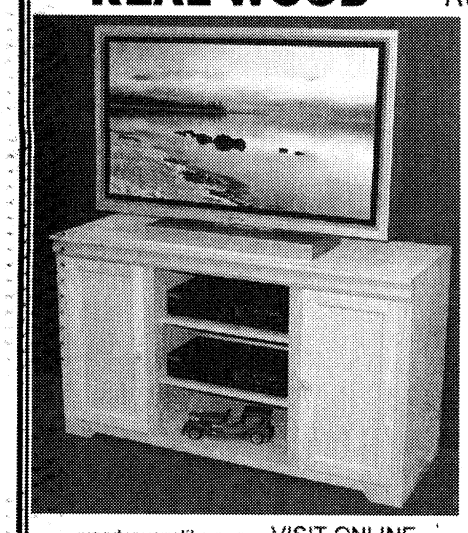

The training is important in missions, too, said SFC Steven Hill, station commander.

"You are out there on day 12 of a three-day mission, and you just can't throw your hands up and walk away. National security might be at stake. Your support might be six countries over. You gotta have mental fortitude — that is key," he said. "And not only do you have to be highly trained and physically tough, you need to be mentally superior and creative and have the ability to be a critical thinker on the spot."

Selection is an arduous process, but with proper train up, an undeterred will and determination and a never quit attitude, most Soldiers will go through the selection process, he said.

"The biggest problem is everyone is looking for measurables — how many pushups or sit-ups do I have to do? How far do I have to run? But what matters the most is the stuff you can't measure — mental capacity. You have to push through that mental wall," he said. "If you can push through that wall, you can do anything."

Family: Keeps tradition

Airborne from his father.

"To me, it was just kind of natural. I wanted to be just like my dad," said the second generation paratrooper, who hoped to join the 101st but was sent to the 82nd Airborne Division instead. "If they'd let me jump today, I'd do it. I always tell people when a plane hits the ground, that's when you get hurt. If you jump out of it, you got a better chance."

CSM Brunk Wesley Conley, the Oregon National Guard command sergeant major, took that chance, following in his father's footsteps and enlisting in the Army at the age of 18 with plans to join the 101st Abn. Div. like his grandfather or the 82nd Abn. Div. like his father. When he found out the former had become an air assault unit and the latter was full, the undeterred Soldier joined the Rangers.

"Joining the Ranger battalion was the best thing that could have ever happened to me," CSM Conley said.

It also gave him the opportunity to be Airborne.

"I like to jump out of airplanes," he said. "Plus, for those adrenaline junkies in life who like to be on the edge of things, it's a pretty exciting lifestyle."

Growing up with Airborne stories, 1LT Conley chose to call that lifestyle his own. After receiving his commission, he attended the Infantry Basic Officer Leadership Course on Fort Benning. While here, he was lucky enough to attend jump school, he said.

"It's something I've always wanted to do," he said. "I grew up with it. When I was little, my grandpa used to tell me stories about my great-grandfather and my dad and him. These were the kinds of lessons I learned: hard work, dedication, leadership."

Like his dad, the younger Conley plans to attend Ranger School. He heads there next year before deploying to Iraq with the 41st Brigade Combat Team in late spring.

1LT Conley said he is proud of his heritage, something he plans to pass on to his own family one day.

Pinning the wings on the youngest paratrooper in the Conley family, both father and grandfather said they were proud of their Soldier.

If the first Conley paratrooper could be here, he would be proud, too, said SFC(R) Conley.

"The only thing that changes in the history of the world is technology," he said. "From 1941 to 2008, it's the same esprit de corps of the paratrooper. It's a challenge, (but) once you jump, it gets in your blood. It's an aura you get around you, a confidence. It's pride."

ACPs: All need to show ID cards

We're just increasing the standard for their proof of identification."

Checking the ID of every person who enters post raises the security of the installation and helps ensure the safety of all those who live and work on post, LaBranche said.

As the new procedure is implemented, drivers may experience delays at the ACPs, especially during peak times.

Clarke advises drivers to prepare for this possibility by having all IDs out in advance to show at the gate, taking alternate routes that may have less traffic and building extra time into their commute.

As before, a valid DoD vehicle decal or vehicle pass must be displayed in the lower corner of the front window on the driver's side for a vehicle to access post. Temporary vehicle passes are available at the visitor center on Benning Boulevard and I-185.

For more information about ID card requirements, call 706-544-9454.

Editor's note: Look for information on Fort Benning's ACPs including a map with the days and times they are open in next week's Bayonet.

HELPFUL HINTS

- All occupants should have ID ready upon approaching ACP.
- Personnel should consider using alternate ACP (with less traffic volume).
- Remind all visitors that an ID is required for accessing Fort Benning (the exception is children younger than 16).

The Bayonet: Keeps Soldier focus

We won't miss any of our staff writers, though, because we were fortunate enough to retain each of them. Therefore, you will still enjoy articles from the reporters that you have come to know and love.

We will also maintain all our current distribution points on and off post. We will have some new carriers delivering the paper in the housing areas, so there may be a few glitches here and there for a few weeks. Please be patient, but feel free to contact us if you experience a problem receiving your weekly paper. We will do our best to correct the situation.

Having met with our new management representative, Jim Daugherty, I am excited for the future of The Bayonet. He is a retired first sergeant and an Army brat, so he knows firsthand the importance of an installation newspaper. A consummate professional in the newspaper business, Daugherty is equally committed to the Public Affairs Office's mission to maintain the quality of reporting and level of customer service you expect from The Bayonet.

"This is Fort Benning's paper," Daugherty told me in our first meeting, "not the L-E's paper. We want to make (this transition) as painless as possible."

The Bayonet is here for you the Solider, you the family member, you the DA Civilian and contractor. If there is ever anything we can include in your paper that will better inform your life at Fort Benning or in the surrounding communities, please let us know. And as we look toward the future, we will keep you up to date on any changes.

690th: Deploys for 12-month mission

Angelika McKenzie said that's what she plans to do: support her husband, PFC Gary McKenzie, and "roll with the punches" during his yearlong tour.

"It's all brand new to me, so it's just staying strong and supporting each other," she said. "Of course, I'm going to be preoccupied with a newborn, so I feel like that's going to help time go fast."

The couple's third child is expected to arrive just days after the deployment. Being a single mom for a year won't be easy, Angelika said, but she knows she can manage by leaning on friends and neighbors and taking it day by day.

After the ceremony, Soldiers were treated to a family readiness group social at the bowling alley before a final holiday — New Year's Day — with their family and friends.

1LT Scheree Winters said she was glad to spend Christmas and New Year's with her husband and 15-month-old son, Malcom.

"Leaving right after the holidays is actually a good thing because we get to enjoy the season, spend time with family; it's a good send-off," she said.

"I'm really excited to go. It's a good group of Soldiers. But I'm also sad to leave my son. He's so young, and it's hard to explain to him."

Her husband, 1LT Nicholas Winters, who is in the National Guard, said he understands the sacrifice his wife is making.

"She's a mom, and she's my wife, and she has a duty to us, but she's also a platoon leader and she's responsible for all of her Soldiers, making sure they return safe. To me, that's more important," he said.

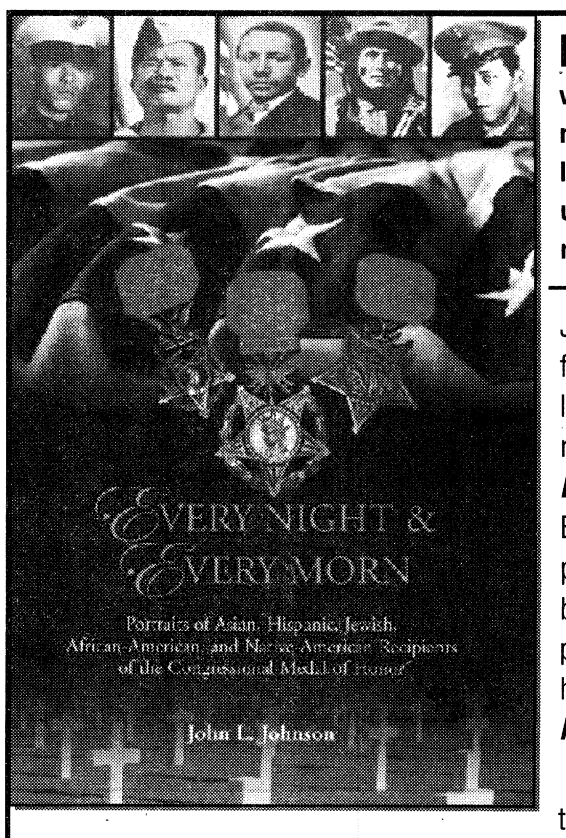

Like 1LT Scheree Winters and PFC Gary McKenzie, most of the Soldiers have never deployed before.

For them especially, this is their time to be part of history, Fulbright said.

"All wars make history. Wars sometimes change regimes, they change borders, the type of government; they can bring prosperity or not, but wars make history," he said. "This is your time. And when you're older and have grandkids, they might sit down and ask you what it was like. If you do your job well, and I know you will, you'll be proud to tell them."

WE ARE HERE!

Ranger Joe's and Tristan Press wish to invite the Ft. Benning military community to attend the lecture and book signing of a unique book on Medal of Honor recipients.

John L. Johnson, an educator and former army officer, will conduct a lecture and booksigning for his most recent book Every Night and Every Morning (title comes from a William Blake poem). His informative and powerful new book is the first and only book ever published that identifies and profiles all known persons of color to have received the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Johnson's unique book reveals that since 1863, when the Medal of Honor was first established during the American Civil War, 87 African Americans, 22 Native Americans, 32 Asian Americans, 40 Hispanic/Latino-Americans, 18 American Jews, and one woman were awarded Medal, our country's highest award for military valor during the time of war.

The main body of the book -- profiles of each recipient -- consists of a photograph, if available; military and biographical data; the actual citation, which describes the action for which the Medal of Honor was awarded, and the most poignant and interesting section of the book, the Epilogue, describes who these recipients were, where they came from, as well as what became of them.

Research for the book also revealed that most of the early Medal of Honor recipients were primarily former slaves or immigrants. Nearly all came from humble backgrounds and entered the military to seek better economic opportunities. Some recipients were outright rascals and scoundrels while in the military, who later redeemed themselves by their heroic actions. Also, a significant number of recipients did not have happy endings. Some died alone and in poverty. Some recipients were murdered and others were lost to history meaning, with little or no information about their lives could be found.

The book should be a "must-read" for all, especially our youth and those of color so they may know the contributions and sacrifices members of their community made in defense of our country.

Children Learn More from Do's than Don'ts
Young children will be better behaved when they know clearly what you expect of them. Instead of just saying, "Don't do that," show and tell your child what you do want him or her to do.
1. Teach your child the steps of the desired behavior. It is unreasonable to expect your child to do something if you haven't taught it to him or her.
2. Have your child describe the behavior back to you. This will tell you whether or not your child understands your expectations.
3. Ask your child to demonstrate the behavior to you. If your child can demonstrate the behavior reasonably well, then you know that it is within the child's abilities.
4. Model the behavior yourself. Children are always watching you and trying to imitate your behavior.

BENCH NOTES

JOHN W. PEELER

Coaches fired

Black Monday came and went following the NFL regular season leaving four coaches without jobs.

The winless Detroit Lions fired coach Rod Marinelli, the Cleveland Browns fired Romeo Crennel, the New York Jets fired Eric Mangini and the Denver Broncos axed coach Mike Shanahan.

Rumors surfaced that former Pittsburgh Steelers coach Bill Cowher was the top candidate for several jobs but Cowher has said he will not coach next year.

Smith wins award

Atlanta Falcons coach Mike Smith edged Tony Sparano of the Miami Dolphins by one vote and was named the Associated Press 2008 Coach of the Year. Both the Falcons and Dolphins rebounded from dismal records in 2007 to make the playoffs this year with both teams losing in the opening round of the playoffs.

Smith is the second Falcon coach to receive the award. Dan Reeves won the award in 1998, the year the Falcons went to the Super Bowl.

Pro Bowl to move?

It is being reported by ESPN the annual NFL Pro Bowl may begin rotating the game to additional sites other than Honolulu, Hawaii beginning in 2010. It is also being reported the game will precede the Super Bowl by one week and will not include players from the AFC and NFC championship teams. The proposed site for the 2010 Pro Bowl is Dolphin Stadium in Miami where the 2010 Super Bowl will also be played.

Former NASCAR Rookie of the Year dies

Sam McQuagg, the 1965 NASCAR Rookie of the Year died Jan. 3 at St. Francis Hospital in Columbus. McQuagg entered his first NASCAR race in 1962 and drove his last race in 1964. His 1965 wreck with Cale Yarborough in the Southern 500 that sent Yarborough tumbling over the guardrail was later used to illustrate the "agony of defeat" on ABC's Wide World of Sports. He won the Firecracker 400 at Daytona International Speedway in 1966. He is survived by his wife, two sons, a daughter and four grandchildren. McQuagg was 73.

Daly suspended

John Daly, the two-time major golf champion, has been suspended from the PGA Tour for six months. This is the second time the tour has suspended Daly. Daly has several incidents throughout the year that caused negative publicity. Daly finished 232nd on the money list and his world ranking has plummeted to No. 736.

Warrior Bears move to 4-0 with victory

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

After getting off to a quick start, the Faith Middle School Warrior Bears basketball team overcame a sluggish third period against the Calvary Christian Knights Tuesday at home cruising to a 51-26 victory. The win moved the Warrior Bears record to 4-0 for the season.

The Warrior Bears quick scoring offense jumped out to an early 15-4 lead in the first period but the Knights fought back in the second period outscoring the Warrior Bears 13-9 to close the gap to 24-17 at the half in favor of the Warrior Bears.

In a low-scoring third quarter, the Knights controlled the tempo of the game pulling to within two points of the Warrior Bears at the 2:30 mark but a quick flurry of points, culminating in a lay up at the buzzer by forward Brett Barrientes kept the Warrior Bears in the lead at the end of the third quarter, 32-23.

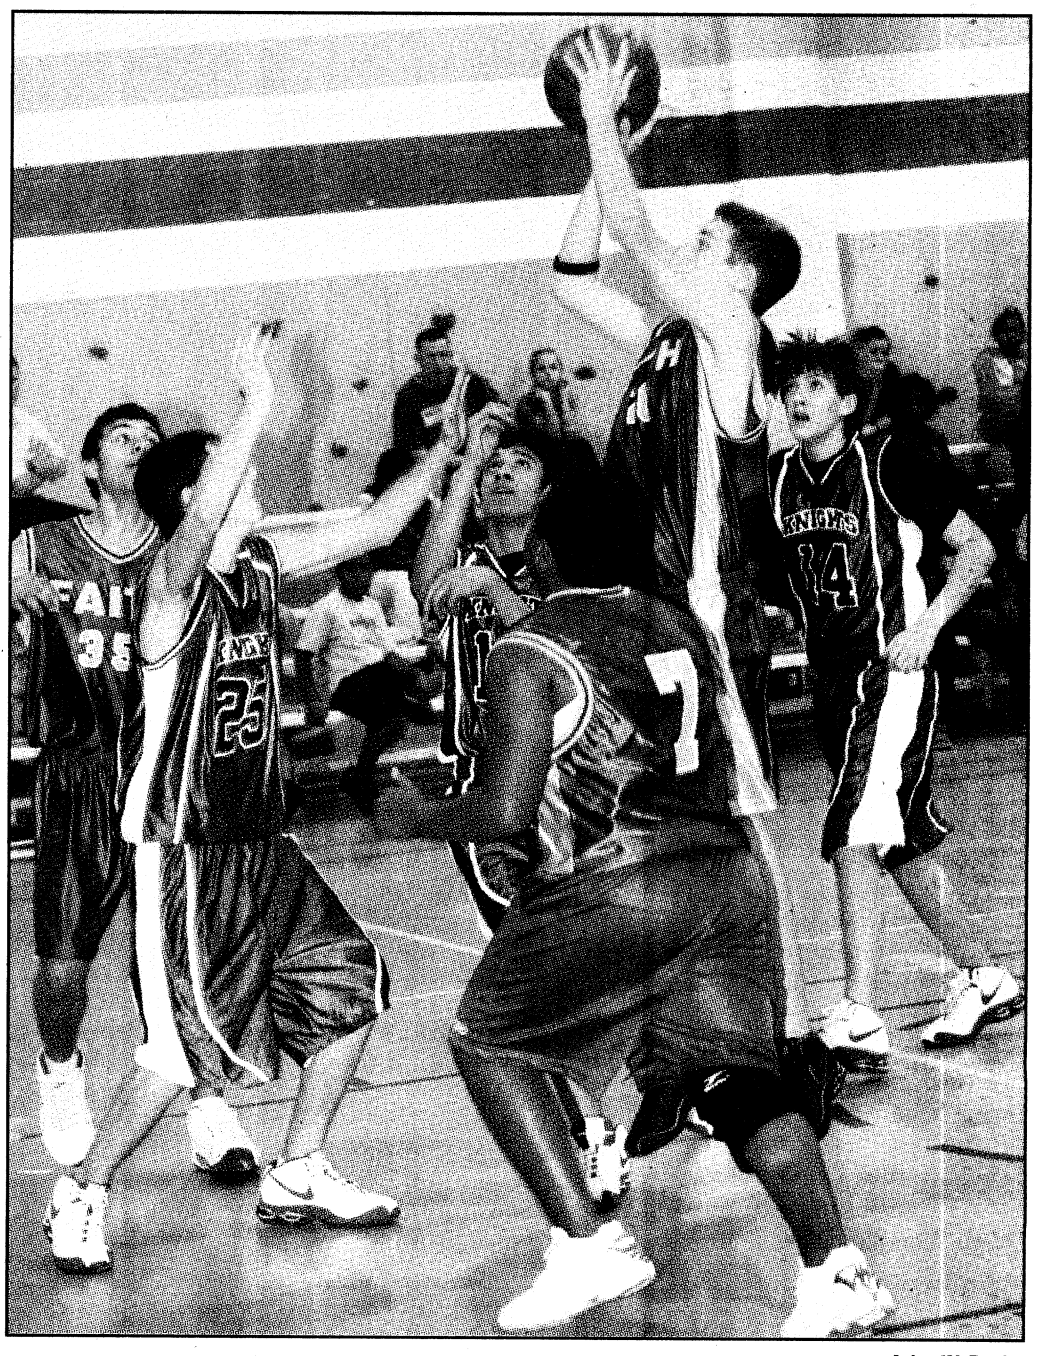

With a nine point lead, the Warrior Bears began controlling the offensive and defensive boards while the defense had key steals in the first minute and a half of the final period to begin to pull away from the Knights. At the three minute mark the Warriors Bears had a comfortable 21 point lead and cruised to a 51-26 win to remain undefeated.

"Although 51-26 might look awfully lopsided it was really pretty tough there in the third quarter," coach Roy Bolar said. "They were a very well coached and disciplined team. We went a little cold there in the third period and we missed shot after shot after shot and they began to heat up a little, but we got back on track.

"We stress defense, and our best offense is our defense. We told the kids between the third and fourth quarter we were not playing defense and you could tell by their faces that they knew it. As our defensive pressure got better, the score got better."

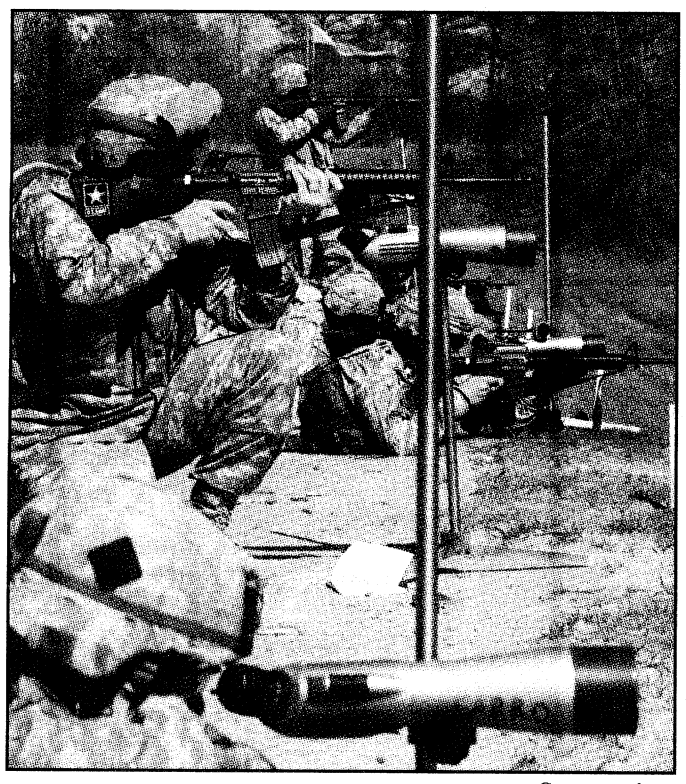

The Warrior Bears had 12 different players put points on the board led by Barrientes with a game-high 15 points. Miguel Avedo led the scoring for the Knights with 12 points.

Scoring: Calvary Christian, Avedo (12), Thomas (7), Carol (4), Mason (3); Faith, Barrientes (15), Garcia (7), Davis (6), Romo (6), Young (5), Gardner (2), Johnson (2), Roberts (2), Talley (2), Tandarich (2), Carter (1), Wilcox (1).

USAMU to showcase 'masters at marksmanship'

The USAMU's All Army Small Arms Championship will take place on Fort Benning from Feb. 21 to 27. Soldiers will shoot for 10 hours each day.

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning will host Soldiers from installations around the world Feb. 21 to 27 during the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's All Army Small Arms Championship. The championship will feature events in pistol, rifle, long-range and multigun shooting, and is open to Soldiers of all ranks from all units.

"What's unique about our championship is that it's a training event," said SFC Aaron Hampton, NCOIC for the multigun competition. "You go through at least 10 hours of instruction."

Each day of competition will include approximately 10 hours of shooting events, followed by weapons maintenance and classroom training. The shooting scenarios, in particular those in the newly-added multigun portion, were created to reflect real-life situations Soldiers might encounter during combat, Hampton said.

"The multigun portion uses the pistol and the rifle in different scenarios," he said. "The Soldiers will be presented with a complex problem that involves obstacles, barricades and moving targets, and based on their skills and what we've taught them, they'll have to resolve that scenario as quickly and accurately as possible."

Emphasis will be on making sure participants have a firm grasp of the fundamentals of shooting, Hampton said.

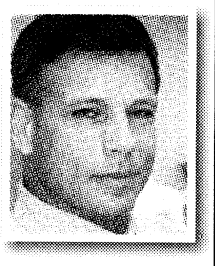

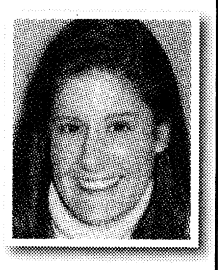

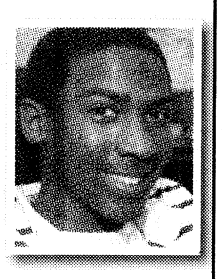

"Because we're masters at marksmanship, we understand that everything revolves around the fundamentals," he said. "Understanding them and executing them properly is what makes a great marksman."

In addition to gaining experience, Soldiers will receive a certificate of training and will be able to earn points toward distinguished rifleman or distinguished pistol shot badges.

"The small arms championship is a very good setting for Soldiers to work toward earning their badges," said Mike Behnke, chief of competitions for AMU. "Anytime an Army service member trains with their service weapon or uses it, they become more lethal, and a better shot."

Chattahoochee County Panthers slash Harris County Tigers, 73-55

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Chattahoochee County High School Panthers' boys basketball team slashed the Harris County High School Tigers (1B-AAAA) 73-55 Friday at home, moving to 9-2 for the season to remain in first place in subregion 2B-A.

The Panthers scored the first three points of the game, but the Tigers answered with two points as both teams fought for control of the scoreboard. The Panthers held an 11-7 lead by the end of the first period.

Despite the Tigers' successful 16-points in the second period, the Panthers still dominated the game, outscoring the Tigers 20-16 in the quarter to lead at the half, 31-23.

At halftime, Panthers coach Bo Oates told his team to "keep cool heads" and keep doing what they were doing.

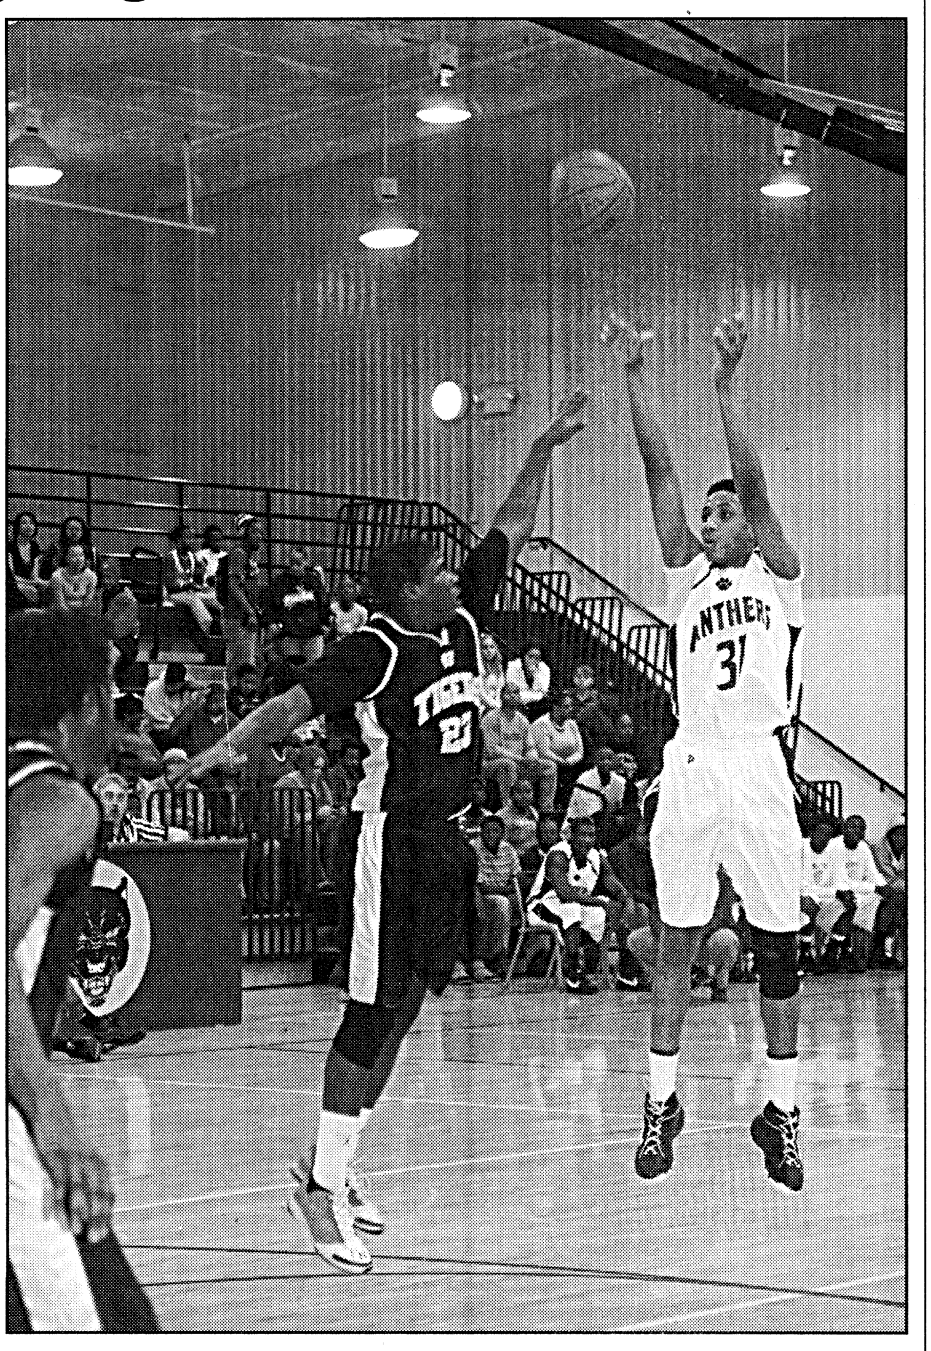

The scoring trend continued after the half with the Panthers outscoring the Tigers, 20-10, to take a 51-33 lead into the final period.

The final period brought an offensive stalemate, with both team scoring 22 points. Although both teams scored the same number of points in the final period, the Panthers ran the scoreboard with a 73-55 victory.

"I think this is the best team effort we have had all season — offensively and defensively," Oates said. "We have come a long way since the beginning of the season,"

"It feels good to win this game, because last time we lost to them," said Panthers forward Johnny Johnson Jr., who scored a team high, 20 points. "We all worked together as a team, stayed focused and concentrated and that's what helped us get the win."

The Panthers took on Stewart-Quitman High School Tuesday, winning 67-63. They will take on Greenville High School today at home.

Call the police, Utes got robbed

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

At press time, the final two college football programs are playing in the Bowl Championship Series finale, and by the time you read this, one more team fans — the fans of the BCS championship loser — will be displaying their displeasure and aggravation toward coaches and players, calls and missed calls by the officials and generally talking about how their team got robbed.

Well, consider yourself lucky to be the fan of a team playing for the national title. How do you think the Utah Utes fans feel now?

With my most humble apologies to my mother, who is a huge Alabama fan, the Utes took the Tide to the woodshed and gave everything Bama had a crimson glow.

In defeating Alabama, the Utes became the only Division I team in a BCS bowl game to finish the season undefeated. Yet, when all is said and done, they will not be the team hoisting the trophy signifying they are the best football team in the country.

Although I am not a Utes fan, I recognize an injustice when I see one.

A few weeks ago, I wrote a commentary saying the BCS system was the best we had and I firmly disagreed with a playoff system primarily due to the risk of injury and their potential to move forward in their profession in National Football League — I am now rethinking my stance.

Injuries will always play a part of the NFL evaluation process when looking at potential players, but coming from a national championship team can also mean big bucks — not to mention the personal gratification from being able to say "at one time, I was the best."

Unfortunately, members of the Utes will not have the opportunity to be crowned as the national champs simply because they do not belong to a BCS school and the thought that non-BCS schools are not deserving of a national championship title.

Never mind the fact Utah beat a then-ranked No. 12 TCU team and a No. 14 ranked BYU team, but they also beat Michigan and an Oregon State team fresh off of a victory over USC who just won the Rose Bowl and now a sound whipping of Alabama, a team that spent the entire month of November ranked No. 1 in the nation.

So, what does a team have to do to be ranked No. 1 in the nation?

I guess you could start by losing a game, say to … Texas, Mississippi, Texas Tech, Florida or Oregon State. Those are the teams the top five ranked teams lost to — that would at least get a team a good start on a one-loss national title.

Next, I believe I would consider transferring the school to a BCS conference. After all, if you aren't in one you will not get a shot at the title.

As a last resort, hire a public relations firm or hack the BCS computer — it is the only way a team from a non-BCS school stands a chance of playing for a national title.

Of course some of this is in jest, but if I were on this year's national championship team I would have to ask myself — are we really the best? I am sure the team that defeated this year's national championship team during the regular season would have something to say about that.

As for the Utes? Well, they may not be the best team in college football but they won every game in the regular season and soundly beat a former No. 1 Alabama team that had a 12-0 regular season.

In my mind I will always wonder if the Utes had what it took to be No. 1 but I will never know simply because they never got the chance to prove it.

USAMU: Championships begin Feb. 21

Participating in the championship will also give Soldiers the tools they need to evaluate their progress and to share what they've learned with their home units, Hampton said.

"They're going to be able to go back and train their Soldiers and let them know which skills they need to develop," he said. "Based on our experience, there's no better way to train than in competition."

The championship has space for 250 Soldiers. Registration is first-come, first-served. Soldiers can preregister by visiting the USAMU web site at http://www.usaac.army.mil/amu/Competitions/competitions.html, or by calling the AMU chief of competitions at 706-545-7841.

Because of limited space for long-range shooting, only 80 Soldiers will be able to compete in the event, which will have its own winner in a championship separate from the other events.

Free housing will be available to participants at Fort Benning Lodging and at various barracks.

For schedule updates, call 706-545-5279.

Lady Panthers defeat Lady Tigers, 44-39

Lady Panthers take on Greenville High School today

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Chattahoochee County High School Lady Panthers' (2B-A) basketball team had a close call against the visiting Harris County High School Lady Tigers (1B-AAAA) after being outplayed for two periods Friday, but were able to score 19 points in the last period, putting them on top, 44-39.

The Lady Panthers took control of the game from the start and had a 10-8 lead at the end of the first period.

In the second quarter, the Lady Tigers gained control and dominated the court, and at the end of the first half, led 21-16.

At half time, Lady Panthers' head coach Jay Cox told the girls to "get physical" and adapt to the game.

The Lady Panthers battled for the lead in the third period, but were unsuccessful, leaving the Lady Tigers in the lead, 31-25. However, the Lady Panthers didn't give up, scoring 19 points in the final period for a 44-39 victory.

Lady Panther Akeyvya Jones led the Lady Panthers in scoring with a team high 17 points. The leading scorer for the Lady Tigers was Ashley Cloutier with 10 points.

"The girls were able to match the physical intensity of the other team," Cox said. "That, and a strong defense is what got us the win."

Sophomore Lady Panther Kamara Riley, who got four rebounds, said teamwork and hustle was what helped the team take the win.

"We came a long way by the end of the game. At first we were slacking, then we just worked hard, made it happen and tried to limit the turnovers and fouls," she said.

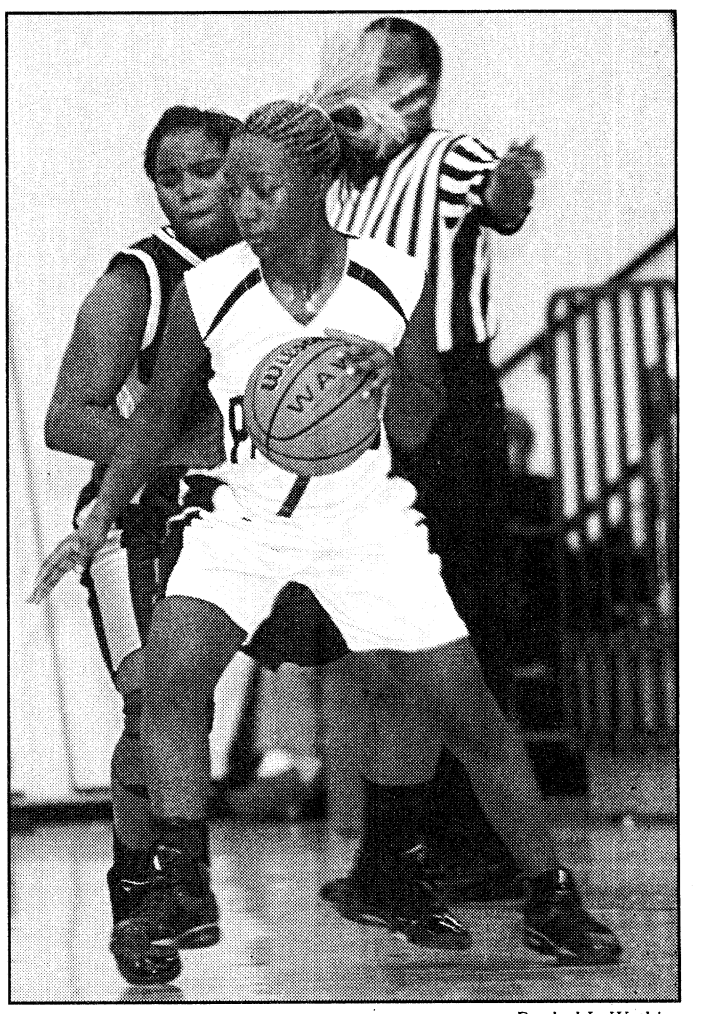

The Lady Panthers took on Stewart-Quitman County High School Tuesday, winning 66-42.

Up next for the Lady Panthers is the Greenville High Patriots. Tip-off is today at 6 p.m.

Lady Warrior Bears fall to Lady Knights

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

After getting off to a 12-7 lead in the first period, the Faith Middle School Lady Warrior Bears basketball team fell behind in the second period Tuesday against the Calvary Christian Lady Knights but could not overcome a scoreless second quarter losing to the Lady Knights 41-35.

Jumping out to a 6-3 lead early in the first quarter, the Lady Warriors held off the Lady Knights late in the period and with two quick baskets in the final seconds of the quarter took a 5-point lead over the Knights.

Faith led for most of the second quarter without scoring a point, but at the three-minute mark the Lady Knights tied the score 12-12 and by the end of the first half held an 8-point, 20-12 lead.

The Lady Warrior Bears got back on track in the third quarter outscoring the Lady Knights 12-9 putting up six points in the final minute-and-a-half, but by the end of the quarter the Lady Warrior Bears still trailed 29-24.

With one six-minute quarter remaining, the Lady Warrior Bears began a comeback attempt and with two minutes remaining in the game trailed the Lady Knights 35-34 but in the final minutes the Lady Knights pulled away with a 41-35 win. The loss drops the Lady Warrior Bears to 2-2.

"I was pleased with the way things started off, but once we went to our press they broke the press and it seemed to give them a little bit of momentum," coach Larry Addy said. "The girls really fought hard to get back in the game, but we got a foul called on us early in the second half and it was pretty much downhill from there. We were in foul trouble for most of each half and they were in double bonus situations for most of the game.

"I think the team was a little sluggish probably because of the Christmas break and coming back off the break was pretty tough and we just have to deal with the cards we are dealt."

At one point the Lady Warrior Bears were down four points and Addy told the team this is where champions are made, he said. Addy hopes the team can get back on a winning track with the next couple of games.

Leading the Lady Warrior Bears in scoring was Nikki Maier with a game-high 20 points and Mary McCarthy led the Lady Knights with 12 points.

Scoring: Calvary Christian, McCarthy (12), Brennan (11), Hitesan (8), Dupree (6), Page (2), Puttman (2); Faith, Maier (20), Taylor (6), Addy (5), Griner (2), Jones (2).

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Several Soldiers have bolstered the United States Bobsled Team for the 2009 World Championships, scheduled for Feb. 20 through March 1 in Lake Placid, N.Y.

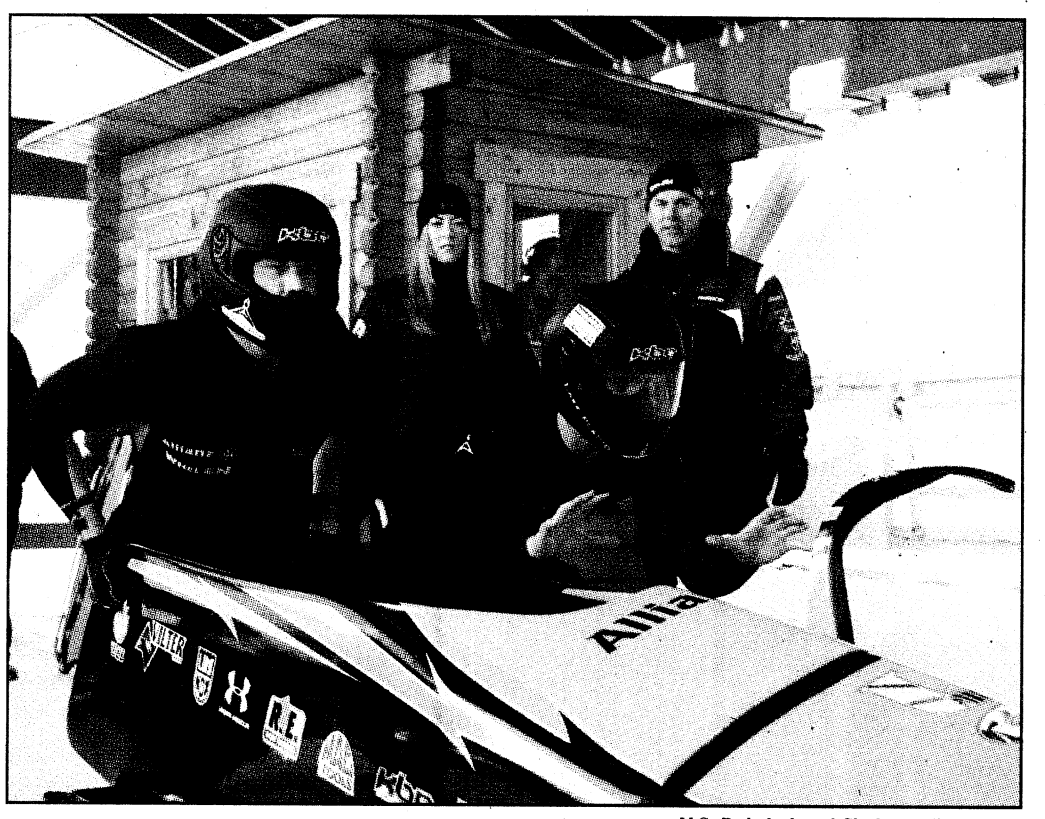

PFC John Napier, a bobsledder in the U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program, teamed with Cory Butner of Yucaipa, Calif., to win the two-man title in the 2009 U.S. Bobsled National Championships Jan. 3-4 at the Olympic Sports Complex in Lake Placid.

Napier, 22, of Lake Placid, drove the sled to a four-heat cumulative time of 3:45.87 over two days to win the national two-man crown by .30 of a second. He will also compete for the four-man national title Jan. 10-11 on his hometown track.

"I was racing against a fierce field of competitors," Napier said. "I only had a tenth-of-a-second lead yesterday, and anything can happen in this sport. I don't take anything for granted, and I knew I had to put down my best runs today to stay in the lead."

SGT Mike Kohn, 36, a former WCAP bobsledder who is now a member of the National Guard Outstanding Athlete Program, finished second in the two-man national championships with a time of 3:46.17.

Former WCAP bobsledder Steven Holcomb, winner of the 2007 Two-man World Cup title, teamed with Curt Tomasevicz to finish third in 3:46.57 in Lake Placid with borrowed equipment. Holcomb was awaiting delivery of his sled from Europe, where he positioned himself third in the early-season World Cup standings.

U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program bobsledder PFC John Napier (right) and Cory Butner (left) get set to push off during one of four heats in the Two-man U.S. National Bobsled Championships in Lake Placid, N.Y. The duo earned a spot in the 2009 World Championships, scheduled for Feb. 20-March 1 in Lake Placid, with a four-heat cumulative winning time of 3:45.87.

"It's tough not having your own equipment," Holcomb said. "The runners I'm borrowing are nicknamed "warms," and they aren't intended for cold ice. On a day like today, where temperatures are flirting with the negative numbers, it's hard to keep the sled straight."

Holcomb, 28, a native of Park City, Utah, who served seven years in the Army National Guard, received a bye into the World Championships by virtue of his third-place finish in the combined world rankings last season.

Kohn and Holcomb will compete in different sleds than Napier in the four-man national championships.

"It would have been nice to have had my own helmet and sled, but it's another day of racing," Holcomb said. "I can't take anything away from these guys because they're sliding well. I'm top three in the world, and these guys are right there with me today, which is testament to the U.S. program."

"It's exciting to see a tight competition like this," said Darrin Steele, chief executive officer of the United States Bobsled Federation. "For us to see American-made sleds that are the best in the world out here competing in the national championships is great. We'll be entering six competitive sleds this February."

Former WCAP bobsledder Shauna Rohbock, 31, a member of the Utah Army National Guard from Park City, pilots the Team USA 1 women's sled on the World Cup circuit and is scheduled to compete in the upcoming World Championships as well.

Rohbock teamed with Valerie Fleming to win a silver medal in the two-woman bobsled event at the 2006 Winter Olympics in Turin, Italy. She also won bronze medals at the 2005 and 2007 World Championships.

The March of Dimes is saving babies...

After the March of Dimes defeated polio in the 1950s, we turned our attention to preventing birth defects and other threats to infant health. Today, we're fighting premature birth — the leading cause of newborn death. Half a million babies are born too soon every year. We're working to find out why ... and how premature birth can be prevented.

Tax Center on Ingersoll to open Jan. 16

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning community will have extra help for the tax season. From Jan. 16 through April 15, the Tax Center will provide free assistance to active-duty Soldiers, spouses and retirees in preparing and filing taxes.

Convenience, savings and reliability are the biggest benefits of using the Tax Center, said CPT Rheanna Felton, Tax Center OIC.

"Last year, taxpayers who used the Tax Center saved an average of $151 in fees they would have paid elsewhere," she said. "And since we file electronically, clients get their refunds within 10 days.

"In the past, some Soldiers have run into problems using tax preparation services that aren't reliable. By coming here, they can avoid a potentially sticky situation if the service they choose isn't trustworthy."

The Tax Center also helps community members by providing them with a convenient on-post location to prepare their taxes, said SFC Ronnie Patrick, Tax Center NCOIC.

"Here there's no charge, and they get a quality service, versus having to go downtown and pay a fee," he said.

Post to celebrate MLK Day

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The annual Martin Luther King Jr. commemorative service will be from 11 a.m. to noon Thursday in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall. The theme for the service is "Remember, celebrate, act: a day on, not a day off."

Established by President Ronald Reagan in 1986, MLK Day falls on the third Monday of January.

It was set aside not only for people to remember and honor Dr. King's efforts in civil rights but also to recognize the need to continue to strive for equality today, said SFC Edward Dingle, NCOIC for the ceremony.

"Don't just sit idly by," he said. "Those opportunities were given for a reason. Those struggles were endured for a reason: so today's generation could excel far beyond what they ever imagined."

MLK Day is a good time to remember not only King but also other key players in the civil rights movement, such as Jessie Jackson, Ralph Abernathy, Rosa Parks and even the U.S. military, Dingle said.

"The military has always been a leader in establishing equal rights for minorities," he said. "That's why it's important for Soldiers to know how integration played a key role in our military's success. And that continues today."

The service will include a performance of Lift Every Voice and Sing by the Faith Middle School Chorus, a skit by the Faith Middle School Drama Club and a recitation of King's speech, I See the Promised Land, by Danny Whitehead.

The guest speaker is Dr. Ann Hardman, author of several books, bishop of Faith Worship Center International in Columbus and founder of The Impact Center, a nonprofit community center.

The ceremony is free and open to the public.

For more information, call Dingle at 706-575-8789 or the Equal Opportunity Office at 706-545-3196 or 706-545-3197.

Bundle of joy

Benning welcomes first baby of 2009

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning community welcomed its first new addition of the year at 6:54 p.m. Jan. 1. Elias Jeremiah White, a 7-pound, 3-ounce baby boy was born to SGT Eldon White, 75th Ranger Regiment, and Mikka White at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Both mother and baby were doing well after delivery, said CPT Scott Osborn, MACH family practice resident, who assisted with their care.

"I'm tired," Mikka said. "He's doing fine, and he doesn't do much crying."

"I'm glad I was here to be here with her," Eldon said.

The Whites said they were surprised to learn their first child was Fort Benning's first baby of 2009.

Because Mikka shared her Dec. 31 due date with another expectant mother at MACH, the Whites hadn't expected Elias to arrive in time to claim the No. 1 spot.

"We figured he'd be maybe No. 2 or No. 3," Mikka said.

"Especially when we realized he was going to come later on in the day, we didn't think he'd be the first baby," Eldon said.

Elias' arrival was formally celebrated with a Jan. 2 ceremony. Senior hospital staff were on hand to congratulate the Whites and to present them with gifts donated by Benning offices.

Among the gifts was a donation from the PX that included a car seat, an umbrella stroller, bedding, a diaper bag, bottles, pacifiers, and a basket of candy. The Whites also received a quilt donated by the Family Advocacy Program.

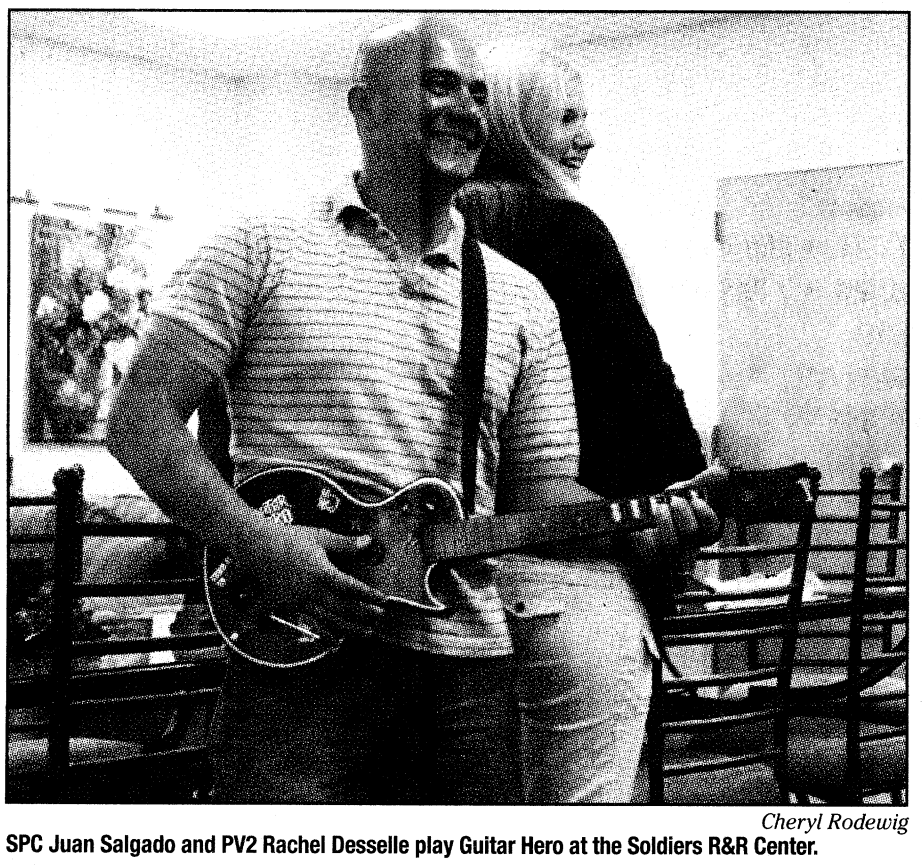

"We're very excited and very proud," Mikka said.

With Elias' birthday falling on New Year's Day, Mikka and Eldon were at first hesitant about whether they would enjoy celebrating two holidays at once. But, they agreed it would be a positive experience.

"If anything, it'll be exciting to have his birthday on New Year's Day," Mikka said.

The Whites, who live in Columbus, said they were looking forward to taking their new bundle of joy home on Jan. 3.

R&R Center gives Soldiers, family members merry Christmas

THE BAYONET

Almost 100 Soldiers and family members with the 11th Engineer Battalion spent Christmas at the Soldiers R&R Center, an entertainment annex of Edgewood Baptist Church made especially for service members and their families.

No one should be away from family on Christmas, said SGT Robert Traxel, 60th Engineer Company, who helped coordinate the event early in December.

"On short notice, it turned into something spectacular," he said. "I know what it's like to be away from family. It really bothered me knowing that there were so many Soldiers not going home to spend time with their families."

Volunteers from Mission Columbus, Valley Rescue Mission and local churches served guests a holiday dinner. Each Soldier and family member took home a journal, a copy of The Purpose Driven Life and free tickets to the hockey game that night. Basketball, video games, books and movies were available for visitors who wanted to hang out after the meal.

"Christmas is a magical time of the season," Traxel said. "It's meant for giving. What better way to give to these Soldiers who aren't able to go home and spend time with their families than by giving them (our) time."

Soldiers also had a chance to become familiar with the center, which includes a gym, kitchen, secure Internet, big screen TV, a washer and dryer, games, ping-pong and foosball tables and a weight room — all free of charge for service members and families.

"This is one of the things that gave Christmas its meaning," said Kerrie Edwards, the center's director. "Christmas is about giving, especially to those who have given so much. This is what we're around for."

PFC Chris Pease, who was born and raised in New York, said the R&R Center helped make his Christmas special.

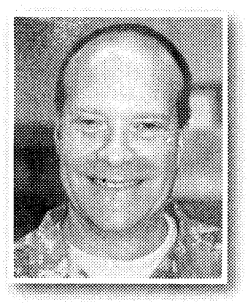

"I love it," he said. "For Soldiers and families who don't really have that much, it's a good opportunity for us to all interact, have some good food and stay close with our Army family if we don't have a chance to be with our original families. We played basketball. We had a good prayer and scripture. After this, I'm going to be able to see my first hockey game. This is great."

Make your 2009 New Year's resolutions SMART

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Where do you stand on New Year's resolutions? There really are only two camps: the "doers" and the "don't-ers."

Some people religiously set out their resolutions each year. They want to have that perfect beach body, to get slim, trim or ripped.

However, if you are honest, you are probably like me. You set a goal to be buff, and you start an exercise and diet plan. Then after about a week, when you do not see the results you want, you feel disappointed. Out goes the plan. Then you think, "Well that was a dumb plan. What was I thinking?" So after many years of this, I have decided maybe it is better not to make resolutions, because then I do not have to fail.

As you think about new beginnings, a new year is a great opportunity to make some changes in your life. But how can you make a resolution work for you?

Here is a plan a fellow chaplain suggested:

Determine whether you are interested or committed. When it comes to breakfast, the chicken (eggs) is interested — the pig (bacon) is committed.

Is this a goal you have truly chosen to make a must-do, or is it more of just a want-to. Don't make a resolution if it doesn't matter to you. Your likelihood of success is in direct proportion to how your goal moves you in your gut. Any easy way to determine whether you're interested or committed is to first do the gut check.

Make SMART resolutions. SMART stands for specific, measurable, attainable, realistic and timely. Specific goals are achieved far more often than vague or general ones. If you're going to achieve it, how will you know when you're halfway there or when you've completed your goal?

Make it measurable. If you want to lose some weight for example, make sure you can achieve it. Don't set a goal to lose 20 pounds in a week, when 1 or 2 pounds is attainable.

Be realistic. I won't make the Mr. Universe finals this year, but I can make it a goal to reduce my body fat by 5 percent, have a date night at least once every two weeks with my wife, or be assistant coach for my daughter's soccer team.

Make your goals timely. What matters to you right now? What must you do right now for the life you want? If it is not important right now, you probably won't do it.

Are you stuck on ideas? Maybe a good New Year's resolution is to pick up the phone and schedule an appointment to come in and see one of our counselors at the Chaplain Family Life Center.

Don't wait any longer for things to get better if you are not trying something different.

Someone said the definition of insanity is doing the same thing and expecting different results. Are you doing the same things? Give us a call at 706-545-1760 and make an appointment today.

Contentment with present is key to happiness

Chaplain (LTC) Tom Wild
198TH INFANTRY BRIGADE

Have you ever dreamed of being in another place or maybe having another occupation? Have you thought, "I wish I lived in ..." or "I could be so happy if I were doing ..."

This happens to me, and I guess this is common. During my leave last month, I did some traveling and saw many people doing a lot of different jobs. Almost all the duties looked somewhat exciting at first glance, but after talking with the folks, I got a fuller picture and realized all jobs have their headaches.

Wherever our place is in life, there are annoyances and drudgeries that go with it. There is no escaping it. Dreaming about escape is a nice getaway for the mind, but that's all it is — a dream or fantasy. The perfect job just isn't there. Real life will have its irritations. There is no getting around it. Paradise is not found here, although I have enjoyed moments in life when heaven's rays have broken through to shine on me.

My time away helped me to see this anew and also showed me how significant it is to have a job or role and be part of a common purpose. I like the feeling of being part of the esprit de corps of our Army. When I talk to those who have retired, the esprit de corps is what they miss the most. There is a partnership we share and a mutual cause where we experience suffering and joy together. Someone said there is nothing that brings people together like a common purpose. I have discovered that to be part of a cause for common good can be one of life's finest gifts.

As we roll into this new year, the joy and peace we experience will be greatly determined by the contentment we have deep inside. Here is a story that illustrates my point:

There was farmer who had lived on the same farm all his life. It was good farm. But with the passing of years, the farmer began to tire of it. He longed for a change — something better. Every day he found a new reason for criticizing some features of the old place. Finally he decided to sell, and listed the farm with a real estate broker who promptly prepared a sales advertisement.

As one might expect, it emphasized all the farm's advantages: ideal location, modern equipment, healthy stock and acres of fertile ground. Before placing the ad in the newspaper, the realtor called the farmer and read the copy to him for his approval. When he had finished, the farmer cried out, "Hold everything! I've changed my mind. I am not going to sell. I've been looking for a place like that all my life."

TV stations to broadcast only in digital Feb. 17

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

On Feb. 17, TV stations in the U.S. will switch from using both analog and digital TV formats to using only digital. Mandated by Congress, the switch will free up airwaves for emergency rescue and other public safety communications.

Consumers will also be able to enjoy better picture and sound quality and a wider range of wireless services in the future as the technology develops, said Mary Diamond, a spokesperson for the Federal Communications Commission.

After Feb. 17, analog TVs will not receive a signal unless they have programming from a paid provider such as cable or satellite TV. Viewers who currently use a rooftop antenna or "rabbit ears" to receive over-the-air signals can subscribe to a paid service or buy a digital television or digital-to-analog converter.

Digital TVs have an internal digital tuner that allows you to continue receiving a free over-the-air signal, Diamond said. If you want to keep your analog TV and still watch the free programs, then the converter box is for you.

Each U.S. household is eligible to receive two coupons, worth $40 each, to go toward purchasing a converter box, available at retailers nationwide.

According to the Web site, www.dtv.gov, analog TVs in stores will be marked with a consumer alert. To distinguish between analog and digital for a TV you already own, look on the TV for labels that read "integrated digital tuner," "digital receiver," "DTV," etc. High definition TVs meet the digital requirements as well but are not required.

Where to go for information:

General inquiries: www.dtv.gov/consumercorner.html
Questions about your TV: electronics store or the manufacturer
Questions about converter boxes: www.dtv2009.gov
Other inquiries or concerns: 888-225-5322.

If the TV is labeled "analog" or "NTSC" without mention of a digital tuner, the set will need a converter box to function properly.

To confirm whether your TV is analog or digital, Diamond suggests contacting a local electronics store or the manufacturer with the model number of the TV.

Businesses, including cable systems are not required to switch to digital. According to the Web site, the mandate affects only full-power broadcasting over public airwaves. However, because of the convenience of digital transmitting, many companies may choose to switch, at which time a converter box or digital TV would be necessary to view the paid programming.

For more information about the converter box, visit www.dtv2009.gov or call 888-388-2009. For other inquiries, visit the Web site and look at the Frequently Asked Questions or call 888-225-5322.

New Year's resolutions can measure up this year

SGT Robert Cooper III
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

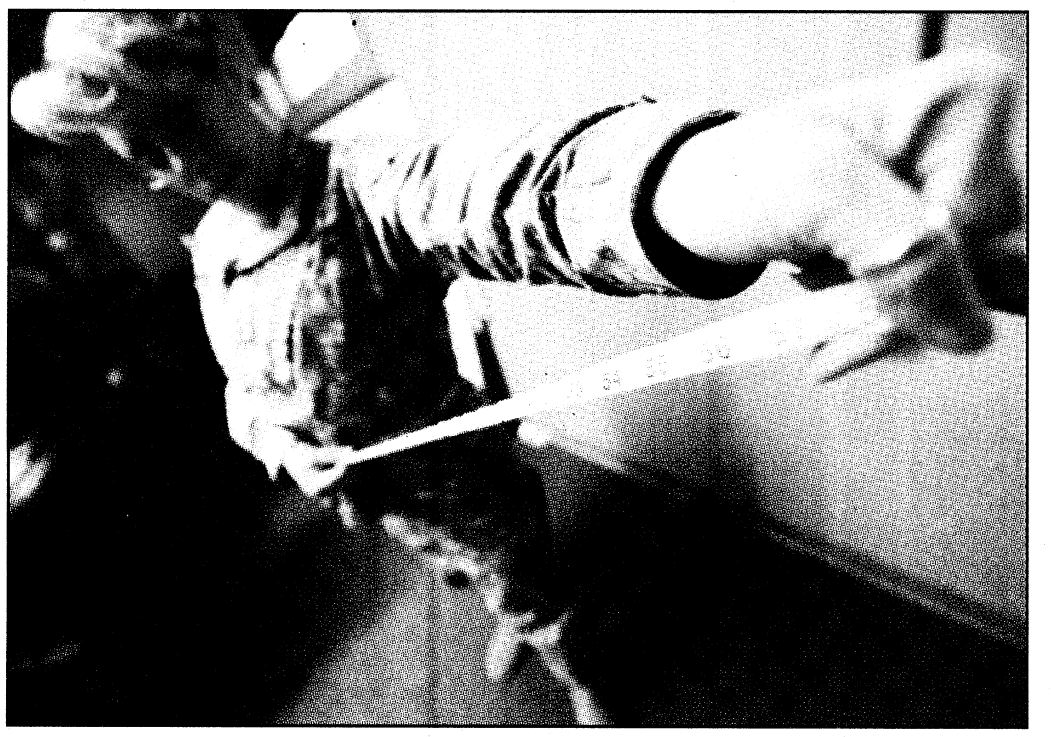

While New Year's resolutions can sometimes seem overwhelming, even cliché, the idea of bettering one's self at the beginning of each year is a cultural and introspective tradition. For members of the U.S. Army, New Year's resolutions reflect a commitment to constantly improve upon each individual's professional and personal goals.

"New Year's Day is the most active-minded holiday, because it is the one where people evaluate their lives, and plan and resolve to take action. Common of all resolutions is that on the first day of the year people take their values more seriously," said LTC Ronald Morris, the deputy commander of Camp Atterbury, Ind., a training site dedicated to training Army National Guard and Reserve Soldiers prior to deployment.

"Soldiers live these values, and commitment to service and country every day, not just New Year's Day," Morris said. "Soldiers know the words loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity, and personal courage. They understand what these values truly mean and what it means to live up to them."

Living up to New Year's resolutions doesn't have to be a lofty goal. Many Americans choose something common to improve on, such as losing weight, becoming active or quitting a bad habit.

"The most common New Year's resolutions are to lose weight and get in shape, spend more quality time with loved ones, quit smoking, get organized, travel more and reduce debt," Morris said. "Experts agree that you should have clear, concise and easy-to-implement ideas in mind. Planning is also important."

Camp Atterbury PAO
Among the more common New Year's resolutions is staying fit and losing weight. Many Soldiers opt to increase their physical fitness in 2009 due to both Army regulations and personal satisfaction.

CPT Matthew McGowen, with the Morale, Welfare and Recreation office here, said that many Soldiers at the beginning of each year resolve to change how they reduce stress in their daily lives.

"It really comes down to stress and what we do to relieve it," McGowen said. "A negative stress reliever, such as smoking or drinking, never improves your overall well-being. Things like exercise and dieting obviously do a better job relieving stress, and you're keeping yourself healthy too."

McGowen recommended a quid pro quo method for developing resolutions.

"Pick something you don't like doing, like smoking, and replace it with something positive," he said. "Every time you have the urge to commit that negative action, immediately do something else. In the case of smoking, try something that will keep your mind occupied, like going for a quick jog or solving a brain teaser."

Getting in shape may be one resolution, but trimming the fat from financial expenses is a huge goal for Americans because of current economics. CPT Michael Dick, a financial officer at Camp Atterbury, said that Americans can resolve to be more responsible with their money while still enjoying the fruits of their labors.

"I still think people should go out to dinner and shop and things like that, but they need to prioritize," he said.

"There's nothing wrong with spending money and having fun, but you have to be responsible. Think about starting a retirement fund. Establish an emergency fund and create a budget. Contribute at least 10 percent of your pay to a savings plans, plus another 10 percent to the emergency fund. That's definitely showing financial discipline."

Dick said that preparedness is a solid resolution for planning for the rest of the years ahead.

"You never know what's to be expected next year, so you have to prepare for any type of curve life throws at you," he said. "If you get into a bind, at least you have a contingency."

Resolving to relieve stress doesn't have to revolve solely around physical or financial fitness, however. Some even resolve to stop making resolutions.

"I'm not making any resolutions, at least, not this year," said MAJ Dave Rader, Camp Atterbury's airfield commander. "I'm looking to improve myself all the time, so I don't need New Year's for that. Improving myself should be constant, not seasonal."

While many resolve to make individual goals, some agree that commitment to others yields the greatest results.

"We need to constantly ask ourselves, 'How can we improve someone's life, at least one per day?'" asked CSM Anthony L. Edwards, the command sergeant major for the 205th Infantry Brigade. "What can we do for each individual Soldier and civilian for the next year? If I had to decide, I would have others resolve to make an impact on at least one new person, civilian or Soldier, everyday."

January is the time for high school seniors to apply for college financial aid for the upcoming school year. Take time now to prepare, and you'll be on your way to financing your education.

Apply online at the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) Web site as early as possible.

To save time, FAFSA recommends that you gather the documents you need, print a FAFSA on the Web worksheet, apply for a personal identification number, check your eligibility for federal student aid and note important deadlines.

Federal financial aid is available for students attending four-year, two-year, public or private, career or trade schools.

The aid is intended to cover school expenses such as tuition, room and board, books and other supplies and transportation. Most students receive the aid because of financial need.

Students can also receive financial aid in the form of grants, loans or work study. Grants include Pell Grants and Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants.

Loans include Federal Stafford Loans (made to students) and PLUS loans (made to parents). There are also direct loans, Perkins Loans and the Federal Family Education Loan. Work-study programs provide jobs, usually on campus, so students can help pay for educational expenses.

To find out about federal financial aid programs and your rights and responsibilities under these programs, read Funding Education Beyond High School: The Guide to Federal Student Aid from the Department of Education.

You also can request a free paper copy by contacting the U.S. Department of Education at 800-4-FED-AID.

The guide is available in English and Spanish. The FAFSA Web site is www.fafsa.ed.gov/index.htm.

The center is located at 3564 Forest Road. It is open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturdays. Snacks are available throughout the day, and a family style dinner is served every night. For Soldiers and families who are interested, devotionals, pastoral counseling and group Bible studies are available during the week.

They will also file taxes for Soldiers who were deployed in 2006 or 2007 and have not yet filed for those years. In order to avoid penalties, Soldiers should file tax returns due during deployment periods as soon as possible, Felton said.

"Soldiers have until three years after returning from deployment to file before they lose the opportunity to claim any refunds," she said. "If they owe money and didn't apply for a filing extension, they can be charged interest and penalties, but should still file to avoid garnishment from the IRS."

Deployed Soldiers can have their spouses file on their behalf if the spouse has a power of attorney that includes taxes or a tax power of attorney. Form 2848, a tax power of attorney, is available at the Tax Center.

Because the center will be open on a walk-in only basis, Felton recommends coming in as far ahead of the April 15 filing deadline as possible.

"We're expecting a lull in February and March," she said. "Toward the end of the tax season, there can be extremely long waits."

The Tax Center will be open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Thursday from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The center is located in Building 1678 on Ingersoll Street.

Trees needed for donation

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Christmas trees still have a use, even after the holidays, said Dorinda Morpeth, waste program manager, Environmental Management Division, Directorate of Public Works. She is collecting trees to be recycled. The trees will be used to create fishing habitats in ponds around Fort Benning and some will be ground into mulch for landscaping.

"We don't need to be throwing trees in a landfill," Morpeth said. "People can recycle them and help the environment at the same time."

It takes an average of seven years to grow a Christmas tree with 25-30 million sold each year, according to the National Christmas Tree Association.

A whole Christmas tree sunk in the water with a cinder block creates a fish habitat that provides food, bacteria and invertebrates and shelter for fish including brim, catfish, crappie and bass, she said.

"This encourages a better ecosystem in a pond," Morpeth said. "When the fish have better food sources, you get bigger, healthier fish, which are easier and more fun to catch."

So far, no trees have been donated. Morpeth needs at least 150 trees to build the fish habitats. After the first 150, the rest of the donated trees will be turned to mulch, which helps the ground around plants retain moisture, she said.

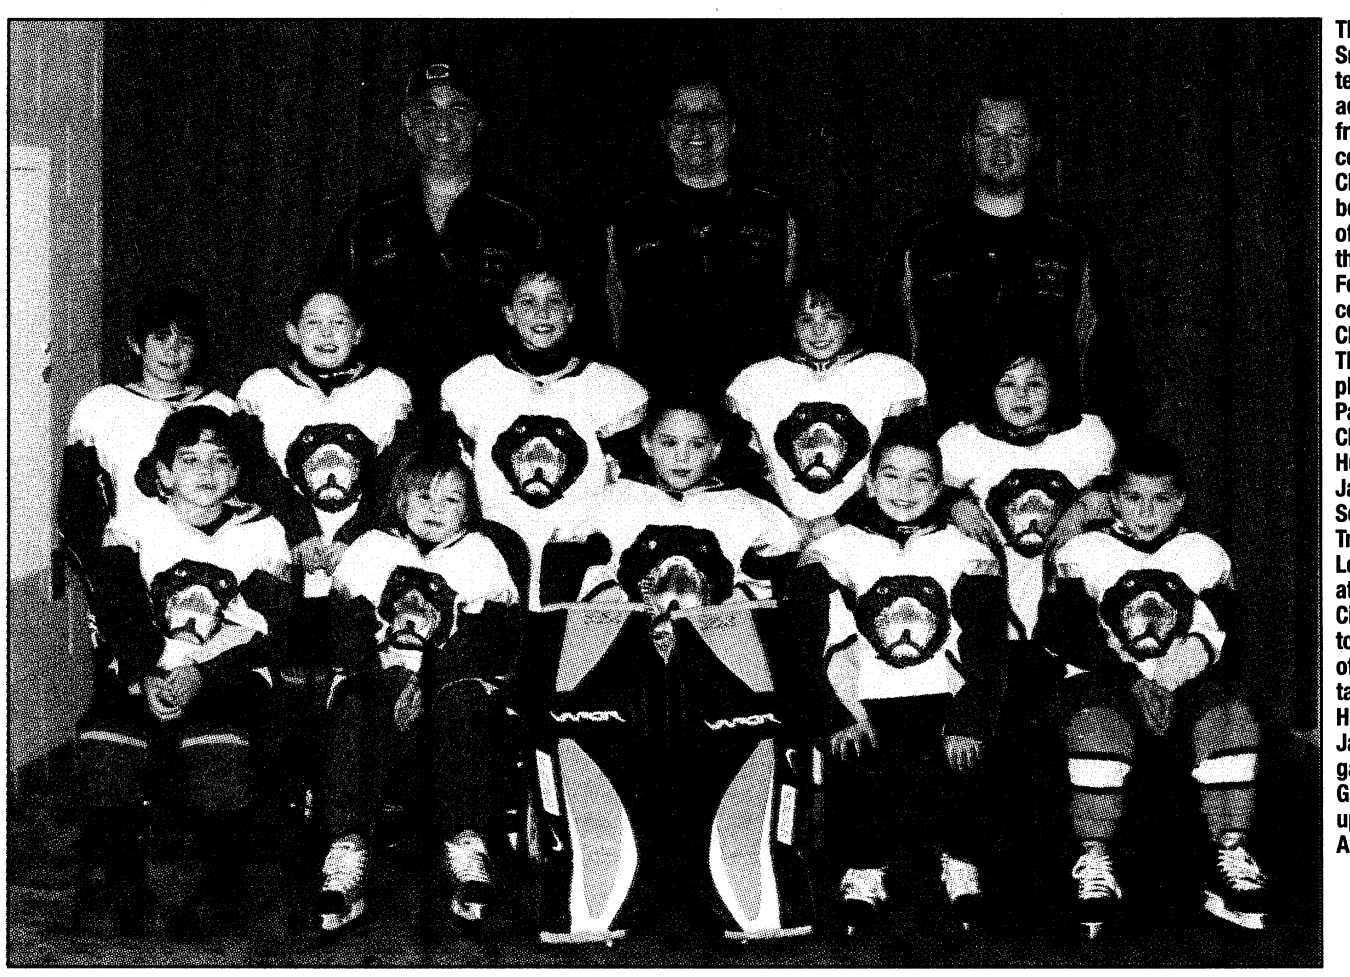

Morpeth said she encourages everyone who has a Christmas tree to donate it because although the tree may not be useful to them, it's a resource that can improve the environment.

On post residents can call their residential office for assistance or call Morpeth at 706-545-5337 to schedule a pick-up. For those who live off post, trees can be dropped off at the recycling center at Harmony Church. The deadline for donating trees is Thursday.

Dresses worn by Mrs. Pemberton are on display in the bedroom. She wore the brown silk dress with red trim on her wedding day in 1853, when she married the future inventor of Coca-Cola, Dr. John Pemberton.

The Pemberton House sits at 11 Seventh Street, Columbus, since its removal from its original address, 1017 Third Ave.

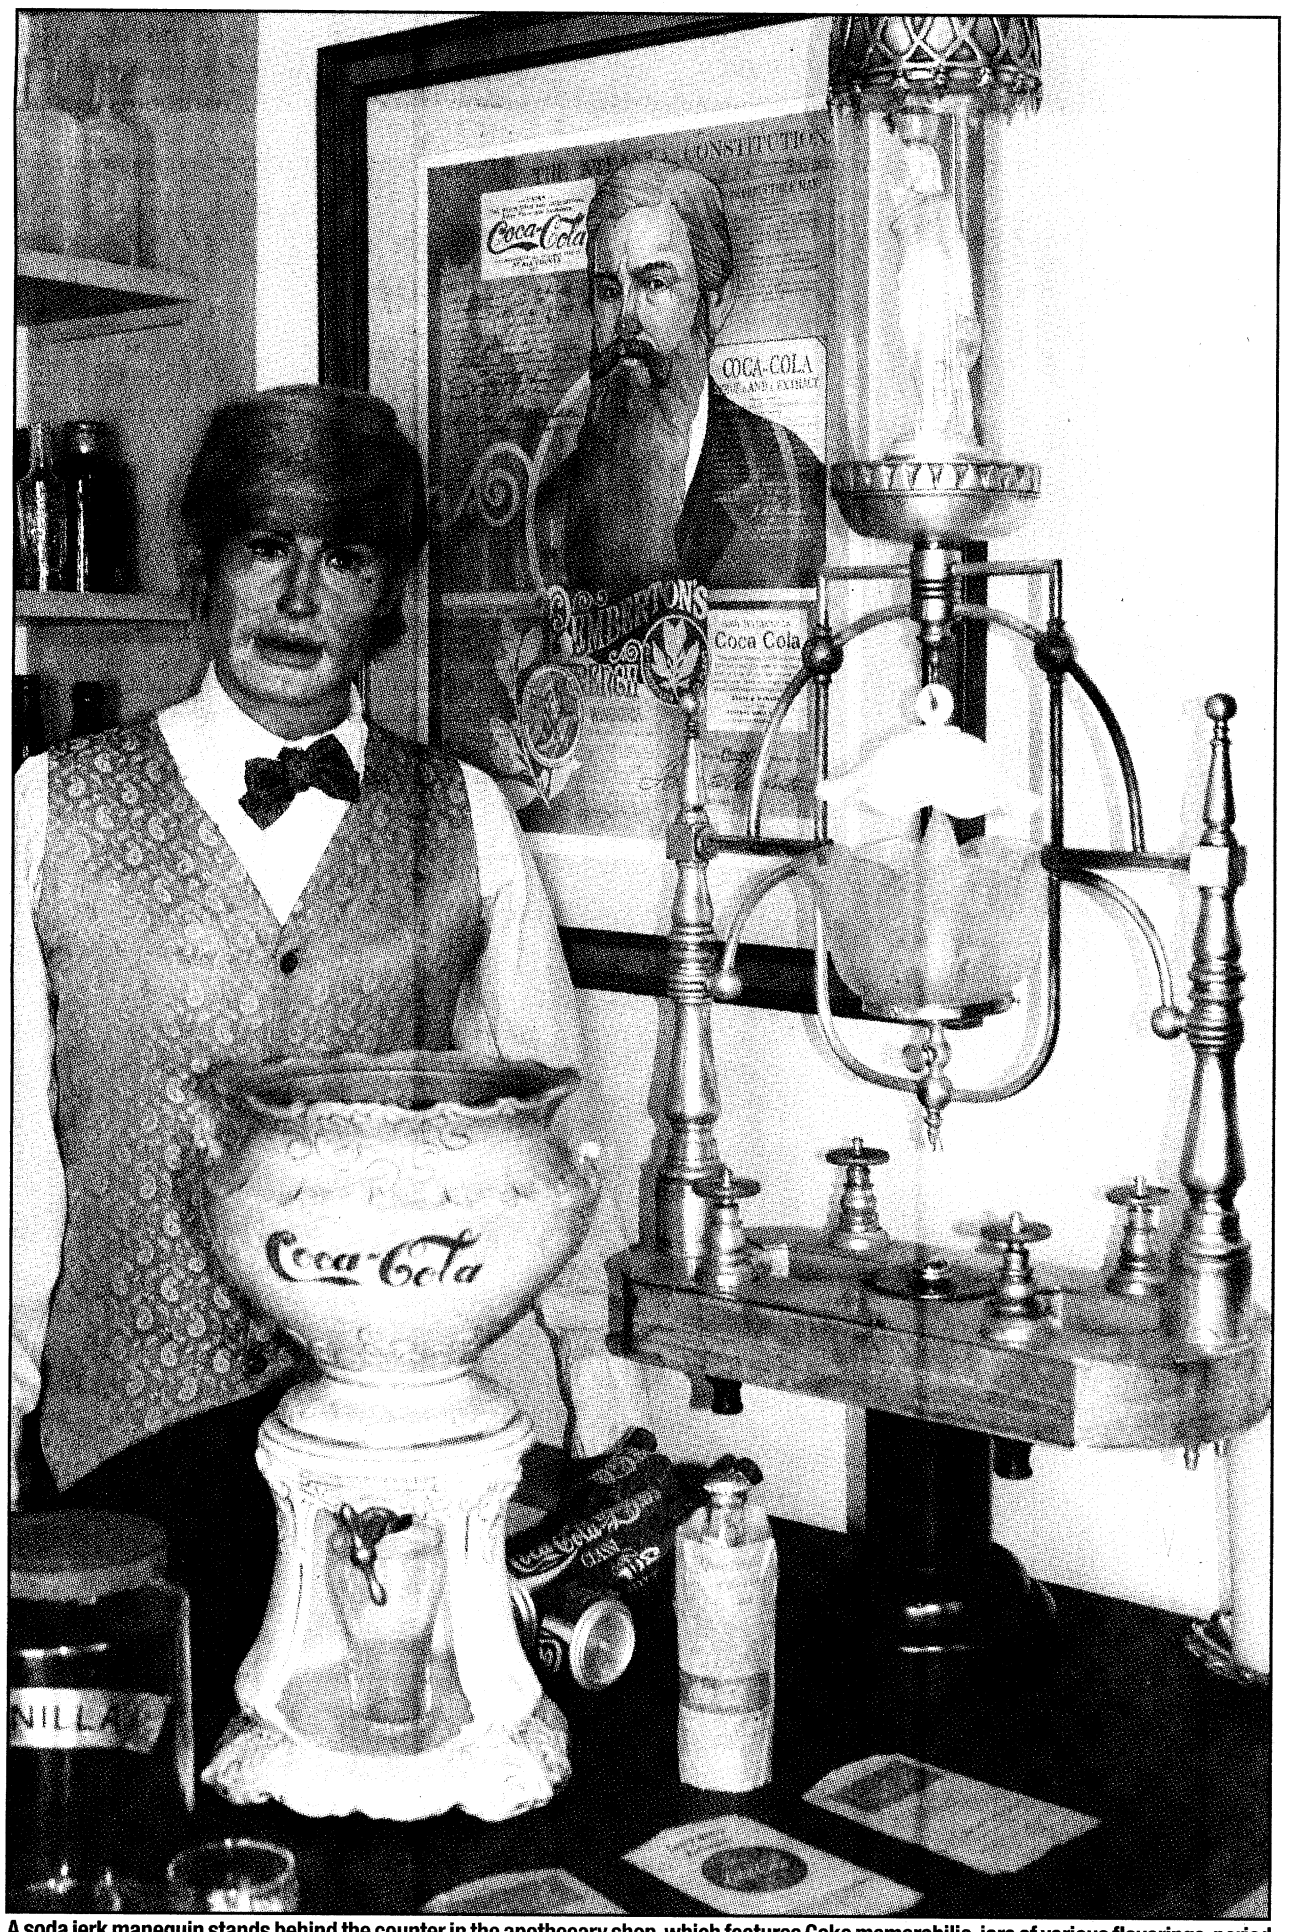

Among the more interesting pieces in the house, an old vaseline cruet set sits on the mantle in the dining room. The glass, used for detection purposes in nuclear plants, is slightly radioactive.

Jars and bottles filled with chemical compounds, herbs, beverages and other substances line the walls of the apothecary shop, which is located in an outbuilding in the backyard of the Pemberton House.

Classic Coca-Cola Inventor's home open for tours

A soda jerk manequin stands behind the counter in the apothecary shop, which features Coke memorabilia, jars of various flavorings, period ads and a "Dalmatian" soda fountain, used by those who didn't want to install the traditional and expensive marble soda fountain.

THE BAYONET

The Pemberton House, a Greek Revival residence located at 11 Seventh Street, Columbus, was once home to Dr. John Pemberton, the renowned creator of the Coca-Cola formula. Several years ago, the Historic Columbus Foundation restored the structure after moving it from its original location at 1017 Third Ave., to its current address.

Inside, you will find an oil portrait of Pemberton, clothing worn by members of the Pemberton family and much of the original furnishings. An apothecary shop located in an outbuilding in the backyard houses Coca-Cola memorabilia, period advertisements and a rare "Dalmatian" soda fountain, one of only two of its kind in the country.

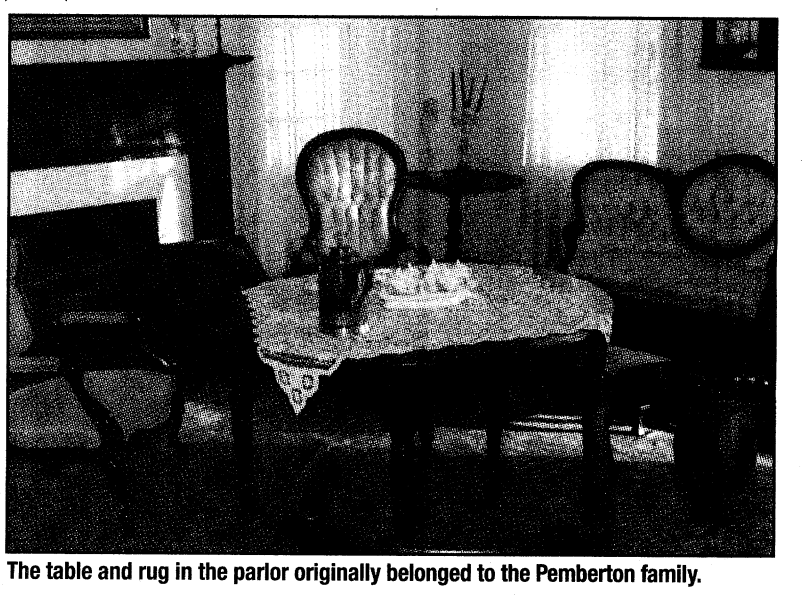

The pharmacist lived in the house with his family between 1855 and 1860 before moving to the country a few miles north of Columbus. The latter residence has been moved to 712 Broadway for preservation.

While in Columbus, Pemberton manufactured a number of medicines, dyes, perfumes and, what would be his fortune — soda pop. He moved to Atlanta in 1870 to expand his business. Sixteen years later, Coca-Cola was on sale for the first time in downtown Atlanta, just 5 cents a glass.

The carbonated beverage has spread to more than 200 countries. It was even the first soft drink consumed in space. About 1.4 billion Coke products are sold a day in flavors ranging from classic to lemon lime to cola green tea.

Although no one knows exactly when Pemberton concocted his famous formula — despite rumors about a three-legged pot in the backyard — as you stroll through his early home, you may get a glimpse at some of his inspiration, or at the least, learn about another side of Coke you never knew.

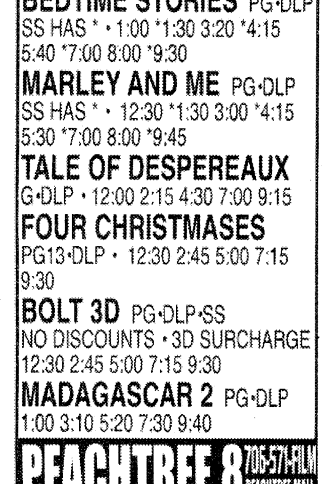

The cottage is included in a tour of five historic homes that begins at 2 p.m. Wednesdays through Saturdays at 708 Broadway. Admission is free for active-duty military and preschool children, $1 for students and $5 for adults. Special group tours are available. For more information, visit www.historiccolumbus.com or call 706-322-0756.

The table and rug in the parlor originally belonged to the Pemberton family.

BRIDE WARS

Lifelong best friends Liv and Emma have been planning every detail of their weddings since childhood. Now, at 26, they're both about to get married at their dream wedding location — New York's Plaza Hotel. But when a clerical error causes their ceremonies to be scheduled on the same day, the friends discover their inner bridezillas as they both struggle to secure the hotel and the date. Will their friendship survive a war for the perfect wedding?

It stars Kate Hudson, Anne Hathaway, Candace Bergen and Kristen Johnston. Bride Wars is rated PG for suggestive content, language and behavior.

THE UNBORN

When Casey Beldon finds herself experiencing strange events, she begins to understand why her mother abandoned her as a child. She turns to the only person who can help her, Rabbi Sendak, and discovers her family has been cursed since Nazi Germany by a creature that can inhabit anyone or anything, and that gets stronger with each possesion.

Casey is plagued by a ghost during the day and by horrible dreams at night. With the help of Sendak, her best friend Romy and her boyfriend Mark, Beldon must shut a doorway opened beyond our world by someone who was never born.

It stars Gary Oldman, Odette Yustman, Cam Gigandet, Jane Alexander and Meagan Good. The Unborn is rated PG-13 for sequences of violence and terror, disturbing images, thematic material and language and sexual references.

NOT EASILY BROKEN

Dave and Clarice Johnson's marriage is tested and their lives disrupted when Clarice is seriously injured in a car accident.

Clarice's high-powered career is put on hold while she recovers with the help of her physical therapist Julie, whose son is coached by Dave in Little League. But, during her recovery, Clarice and Dave's marriage issues are thrown into the spotlight.

Over the years, Clarice became blind to Dave's needs as she pursued her own dreams, and now Clarice worries that her constant criticism of Dave has pushed him away — possibly into Julie's arms. Now, they must face the questions of whether they are really meant to be together, and if so, how to fight for what they have.

Not Easily Broken stars Morris Chestnut, Cannon Jay, Eddie Cibrian, Kwame Boateng and Maeve Quinlan. It's rated PG-13 for sexual references and thematic elements.

ALSO PLAYING

MARLEY AND ME

Journalist John Grogan decides to get a dog for his wife Jenny as a warm-up to having kids. Little does he realize that their new puppy would turn out to be the "worst dog in the world." Marley, named for reggae legend Bob Marley, wreaks havoc and destruction everywhere he goes. Yet, despite his bad behavior, Marley teaches his family about unconditional love.

This true story stars Owen Wilson and Jennifer Aniston. It's rated PG for thematic material and suggestive content and language.

BEDTIME STORIES

Skeeter Bronson, a hotel handyman, finds his life turned upside down when his sister is laid off, leaving Skeeter to watch her two children while she travels for job interviews. The kids insist Skeeter tell them bedtime stories. Much to Skeeter's shock, they seem to come true! The only problem is, the kids seem to be the ones controlling which magical events happen in real life.

Bedtime Stories stars Adam Sandler, Courtney Cox and Keri Russell. It's rated PG for rude humor and language.

THE CURIOUS CASE OF BENJAMIN BUTTON

When Benjamin Button is born in New Orleans in 1918, no one expects him to live very long. A doctor declares his body to be like that of a man in his eighties.

As Benjamin gets older, he defies predictions, seeming to become younger and stronger. He survives to attend school and fight in a war, continuing to baffle everyone he meets. As his body gradually grows younger, he learns about the timeless nature of love.

The film, starring Brad Pitt and Cate Blanchett, is based on a story by F. Scott Fitzgerald, which was inspired by the Mark Twain quote, "Life would be infinitely happier if we could only be born at the age of eighty and gradually approach eighteen." It's rated PG-13 for war violence, sexual content, language and smoking.

YES MAN

Carl Allen says "no" to everything. He's cynical, fearful and stubborn, and avoids new opportunities.

Then, he signs up for a self-help program based on one simple principle: say yes to everything... and anything. At first, unleashing the power of "yes" transforms his life in amazing and unexpected ways, but Carl soon discovers that opening up his life to endless possibilities can have its drawbacks.

Yes Man stars Jim Carrey, Rhys Darby and Bradley Cooper. It's rated PG-13 for sexual humor, language and nudity.

When forces beyond Helen's control treat the extraterrestrial as hostile and deny his request to address the world's leaders, she and her estranged stepson Jacob quickly discover the deadly ramifications of Klaatu's claim that he is a friend to the Earth.

Now Helen must find a way to convince the entity who was sent to destroy the Earth that mankind is worth saving — but it may be too late. The process has begun.

The movie stars Keanu Reeves, Jennifer Connelly, and Kathy Bates. It's rated PG-13 for sci-fi disaster images and violence.

DOUBT

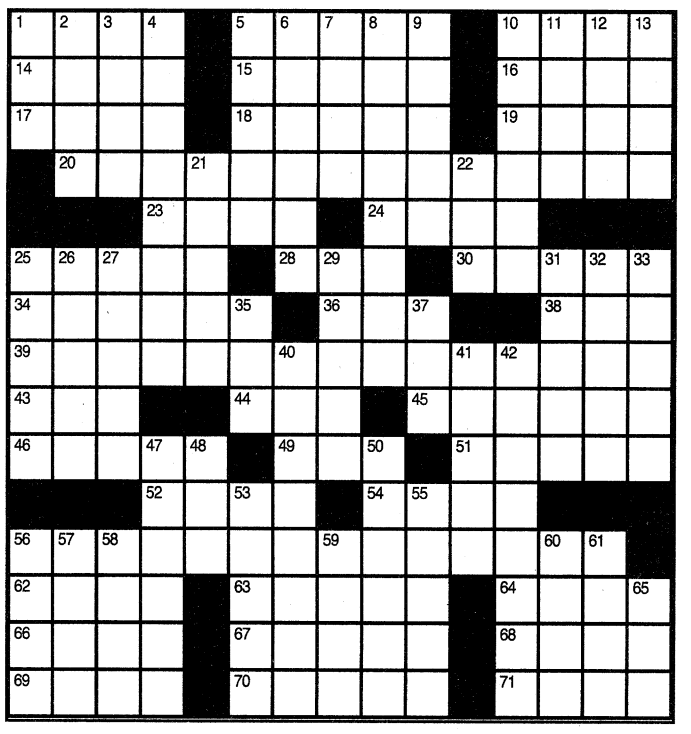

It's 1964, and Christmastime in the Bronx. A vibrant, charismatic priest, Father Flynn, is trying to upend the schools' strict customs which have long been fiercely guarded by Sister Aloysius Beauvier, the iron-gloved principal who believes in the power of fear and discipline.

The winds of political change are sweeping through the community, and the school has just accepted its first black student, Donald Miller. But when Sister James, a hopeful innocent, shares with Sister Aloysius her guilt-inducing suspicion that Father Flynn is paying too much personal attention to Donald, Sister Aloysius sets off on a personal crusade to unearth the truth and to expunge Flynn from the school.

Now, without a shard of proof besides her moral certainty, Sister Aloysius locks into a battle of wills with Father Flynn which threatens to tear apart the community with irrevocable consequence.

Doubt stars Philip Seymour Hoffman, Meryl Streep and Amy Adams. It's rated PG-13 for thematic material.

CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR FOUNDATION

COL(R) Jack Jacobs, a Medal of Honor recipient, will visit Fort Benning next week to speak to several classes, including OCS, Advanced Leader Course and Senior Leaders Course.

Jacobs will autograph his recently published autobiography, If Not Now, When?, and Medal of Honor by Peter Collier, which Jacobs is featured in, from 11:30 a.m. to 12:50 p.m. Thursday at the shoppette in Infantry Hall.

Jacobs, an Infantry officer who spent much of his career at Fort Benning, served two combat tours in Vietnam. He was an advisor to two Vietnamese army units. He is the recipient of two Purple Hearts, three Bronze Stars, two Silver Atars and the Medal of Honor.

After retiring from the Army, Jacobs was an entrepreneur and an investment banker. More recently he is a military analyst for NBC TV and is often seen on MSNBC, CNBC, the Today Show and the Nightly News with Brian Williams. For the past five years, he has been a visiting professor at West Point, teaching a course on the military and the media.

Benning honors NCOs in ceremony

Sergeants, corporals receive promotions

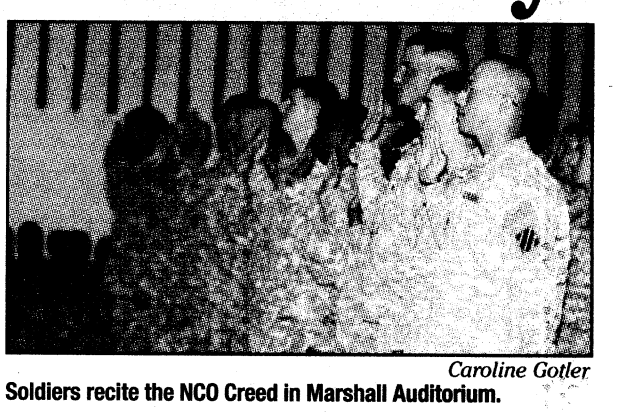

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning honored the "backbone of the Army" when more than 60 newly promoted sergeants and corporals were inducted into the NCO Corps during a ceremony that kicked off the designation of 2009 as the Year of the NCO Tuesday at Marshall Auditorium.

"In every aspect of the Army, it's really NCOs making it happen," said CSM William Ulibarri. "We hold it together through training, and also operationally."

The Year of the NCO has four major objectives: enhance the education of the NCO Corps, enhance NCOs' physical and mental fitness, encourage leadership skills, and launch several "pride in service" initiatives that acknowledge the value of the NCO Corps to the Army and to the nation.

Ranger School: day one

SFC Falemaii Tualamalii, a Ranger student in the "Benning phase" of Ranger School, jumps from a zip line into Victory Pond Monday on Hurley Hill. The obstacle, called the suspension traverse, is 75 feet tall. It was one of four aspects of the Combat Water Survival Assessment, which included the 35-foot-high log walk, the rope drop after the log walk, the suspension traverse and a 15-meter swim where the student jumps into the water with his gear, then sheds it before the swim. The assessment focuses on the service member's ability to negotiate obstacles that deal with height and water. The Rangers won't deal with water-based training again until the "swamp phase" of Ranger School, the last part of the course, which takes place at Camp Rudder, near Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. For more on the Combat Water Survival Assessment, see A4.

MSG earns Airborne wings

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

MSG Gary Qualls will graduate from Airborne School today, just three weeks shy of his 51st birthday.

"I just believe in living a colorful life," said Qualls, public affairs officer for 1st Brigade Combat Team, 82nd Airborne Division. "The Army has let me do some interesting things. I've traveled all over the world. I've done amphibious landings with the Marines. I've flown in Harrier jets. I've washed my clothes in the Euphrates River. I want to be able to tell my grandchildren someday that I jumped out of an airplane."

Qualls was quick to add that he doesn't have any grandchildren yet — his kids are still in high school, but the "Rambo-type, hard-charging" training will be something he'll remember long enough to pass on to the next generation, he said.

For Qualls, the three-week course wasn't without its difficulties.

"It's challenging because you're trying to hang with a bunch of 18- to 21-year-olds. Your body doesn't bounce back as much as it used to," he said. "It really is a different world to me. I'm surprised how well I'm doing it."

Qualls said much of his success in training depended on the support of the cadre and fellow students. As a senior NCO, he is encouraged to always try his best since he is an example to younger students.

Soldier's suicide leaves unanswered questions

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The suicide of SPC Jamie Dalton, an Infantryman in B Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, in 2006 shocked everyone who knew him. Many of the warning signs weren't evident in Dalton's behavior or the things he said to friends.

"I couldn't believe that he had killed himself," said Ronie Dalton, his mother. "It was the last thing I would have ever thought about. I never worried about him ever taking his life."

Soldiers he served with said Dalton was a well-liked, competent Soldier, who was cool under fire and could be depended on.

"If you were in the worst place on earth, he was the guy you wanted beside you," said SSG Robert Butler, one of Dalton's best friends. "As a Soldier, he knew what he was doing. He knew tactics and weapons, he could drive anything, and he was an expert marksman. There was nothing he couldn't do."

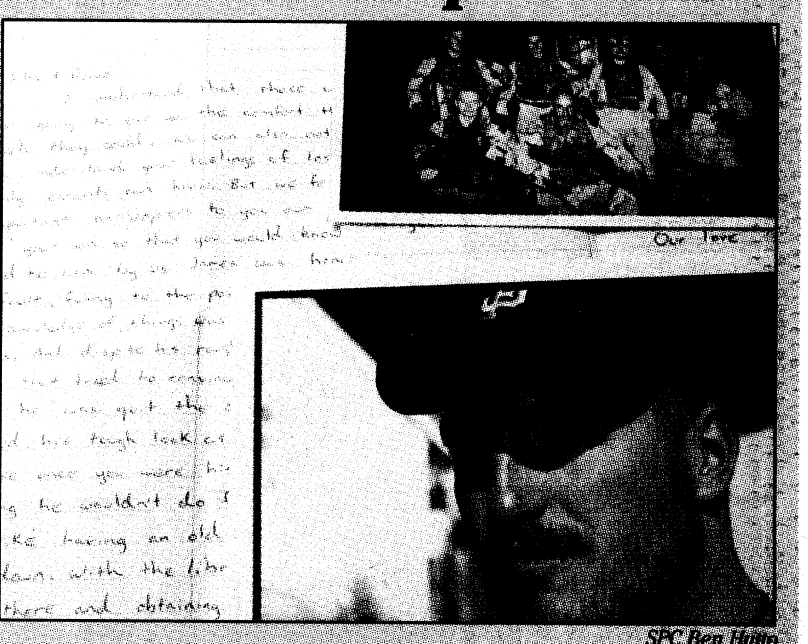

In high school, he was an accomplished student, a national merit scholar and a good athlete, earning a starting position on his high school football team. After high school, Dalton surprised his family by deciding to join the Army.

"He was such an individual we were surprised when he joined the military," his mother said. "He was such a strong-willed person.

"We found that he loved the Army, though. He loved the adventure."

However, Ronie said she saw subtle changes in her son when he returned

Past or present, Fort Benning great place to live

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Since my early childhood I have been associated with Fort Benning in one way or another, and when I am asked where home is I always say, "Columbus and Fort Benning."

I remember playing football on what is now Stewart-Watson Field, living in Indianhead Terrace when the white stucco quarters were for senior NCOs and the red, one-story quarters were for junior officers. I remember eating Thanksgiving dinner in the quads when it was an unspoken mandatory event for senior NCOs and officers.

Many memories — all of them good ones, except for the spanking I got from my mother all the way home from Wilson Elementary School after jumping the chain of command … I had asked her if it was OK to ride my bike, she said "No," then I asked my dad and he said "Yes." Years later I realized she didn't take me the shortest route home. Now and then, I go over to Indianhead Terrace and retrace my steps to remember the lesson.

Even so, one bad memory is not really all that bad considering that was 42 years ago.

Really, it is all of the good memories of Fort Benning that come to mind when I think of the place I call home.

My dad coaching me in youth activities center football, the predecessor to today's CYS&S, going to Theater No. 1 across from Gowdy Field to watch the newest release of a Beatles movie, long before the Wynnsong 10, learning to swim at the Main Post Swimming Pool and picnics at Russ Pool are just a couple of my good memories of Fort Benning.

As a teenager, I still visited Fort Benning to go to the movies now and then and would come out on occasion to practice tennis during the evening at the Officers' Club, now the Benning Conference Center. Although I wasn't an officer's child, the tennis pro graciously let my tennis partner and me practice there after hours.

As a Soldier, Fort Benning was my final duty station before I retired. My children grew up across the street from where I did in the former junior officer quarters. They learned to ride a bike on the same road I got my lesson-learning spanking on. They even crashed on the same corner of the street I used to crash on when I was taught to ride. And, my son played football for me in the youth services football program.

With all the similarities, Fort Benning has grown and the facilities and services are now more abundant.

The one thing that hasn't changed is the "can-do" attitude of the people who work here. Fort Benning is still a great place to live. Time may have changed the landscape, but the quality of life and the helping nature displayed by the tennis pro remains in today's employees.

What do you like about living and working on Fort Benning?

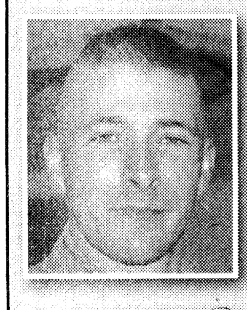

I worked at AAFES for 22 years, and I just like Fort Benning. I like the commissary and the PX. I like being able to go to Martin Army Community Hospital, and being able to shop here. It's convenient.

I love it here. I'm happy to be here. Especially coming from another duty station that was farther away, I'm closer to family. And I love Georgia, I'm from here. I chose to come here, and I'm happy that I'm here.

— SPC Jairus Martin

I've been here since 2006, but I left last year and requested to come back. That's how much I love it here. It's a good post because of the facilities and the people. And now with the Maneuver Center coming, it's going to be even better.

— SSG Eli Lopez
1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

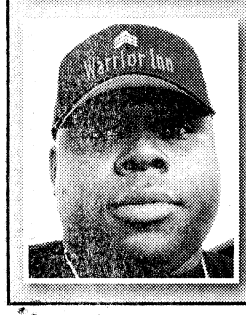

I like the location of Fort Benning. I like the military people, and I like the way the civilians treat the military people. I retired here because I like the post and I'm familiar with it because I spent two tours of active duty here, and I also have family here.

Tune out and plug in to reality

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Here's some food for thought — according to the Norwich Bulletin, a man in Pomfret, Conn., was so absorbed in listening to his iPod that he didn't realize his house was on fire until his alarm company called.

The guy's just lucky the phone rang loud enough for him to hear the call from the alarm company.

Sure, go ahead and laugh. We all think something that ridiculous could never happen to us. We're all a lot more on the ball than that guy, right?

Not necessarily. In the 60s, they said, "Turn on, tune in." Now, it's "Turn on your iPod, plug in your cell phone, and tune out the rest of the world." We've become a society so disconnected from each other and from our surroundings that we literally can't tell when the house is on fire.

How many times have you stood in line behind someone at the grocery store who barely registered the existence of the sales clerk and other customers because they were so busy chattering away on their Bluetooth?

Now think about how many times you've used your cell phone to shoot the breeze in public. We've all been guilty of it at some point. Personal electronics have become so embedded in our daily lives that not answering a ringing cell phone seems like a worse crime than offending those around us.

"What if someone really needs to reach me?" we wonder. "What if it's really important?"

It's at that point, when my cell phone is ringing in public, and I'm debating whether I should answer it, that I stop to think about another question: What did we do before cell phones and BlackBerries? How did we entertain ourselves during those 10-minute walks to the store before iPod came along?

Well for one thing, we didn't fret that an earth-shattering phone call might come in every time we left the house. That's what answering machines were for — returning missed calls from the privacy of our homes and offices when we had enough time to really focus on the conversation. Today, in the era of ultra-abbreviated "txt" messages, the notion seems almost quaint.

And we didn't die of boredom if we had to go more than a few minutes without entertainment. There was a time when sitting on the bus or walking through the mall did not require the use of electronics to keep us entertained. We could find entertainment by looking out the window, or maybe even — brace yourself here — talking to someone next to us.

I'm not saying we all need to give up our cell phones. I'm just as attached to mine as the next person. But it would be nice if we could all be a little more considerate of each other. Think twice about whether it could wait a few minutes. The world isn't going to end if you don't answer your phone, but you could offend those around you if you do.

And when you get home and do decide to talk on the phone, make sure the ringer volume is set to "loud."

Just like that guy in Connecticut, you never know when it could save your life.

Snow? In Georgia? It's magical

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Winter in South Carolina lasts about a month. Snow is unheard of. For school children it is a magical word that means no school. I remember scouting steep hills for snow tubing and locations for snow forts when the rumor of snow began circulating on the local news.

Sure a 10 percent chance of snow isn't likely to happen, but to an 8 year old it might as well be a guarantee and a snow flurry might as well be a blizzard.

I always wanted that winter wonderland we see in the movies. I yearned for the blizzard to cover my farm in a blanket of white powder. I dreamed of snowmen, snow forts, sledding and an endless supply of ammunition for snow ball fights. A week off from school would have been the ultimate bonus.

It never happened. I enjoyed a handful of "snow days" growing up, but the snow was always short-lived. It never seemed to accumulate on anything bigger than a car hood and the sun always melted what little there was.

In short, snow was disappointing for me growing up. I should have gotten over it and realized that snow and the South just don't coexist. God blessed the South with grits and sweet tea. In my mind, snow was what he gave the kids in the mountains of Colorado and up North to balance out the scales of fairness.

But I still dreamed of playing in the snow with my kids. This Sunday, it happened.

It started slowly at first. The flakes started trickling down in the early morning hours, but I held little hope that they would survive in Georgia. I was wishful and excited, but 34 years of disappointment told me not to get my hopes, or those of my two children, up.

The funny thing is that it kept coming down all day. It covered my car, and slowly the whole neighborhood started turning white. Using the brown earth of my front yard as a barometer, I planned my and my son's big moment. We were going to play in the snow.

After lunch, we bundled up and went out to play. As novices, we didn't know what to do, but we tried. Our snowman barely got above my knees, but to my son it might as well have been the most important sculpture of our time. He wanted to make sure every fist of snow was placed in the right spot, the sticks for the arms were the right length and proper clothes were placed on our creation to make him an Army snowman.

Our snow angels weren't pristine as in the movies. Our snow balls were OK. To give my kids credit, what they lacked in aim they made up for in sheer number of throws. When the cold and wetness finally started seeping through our clothes, we called it a day. But what a day. It was one of the few times I can honestly say I was just as excited about something as my kids were. Snow, for us, is that magical.

I called my brother to see if it snowed there. He lives not far from where we grew up. No snow. Some things, unfortunately, never change.

Suicide: Substance abuse may be early warning sign from his second deployment from Iraq and confronted him about it.

She said her son talked about some intense and gruesome things he had seen during his combat tours in very matter-of-fact tones.

"Looking back, I can't believe we thought that what he was saying was normal, but that is how Soldiers cope with things," she said. "They see things that would horrify many of us, but they adjust to it in order to survive. I think it is tough for some people to reintegrate into what most people consider normal.

"I asked him about PTSD (post traumatic stress disorder) because it was a hot topic at the time, but he said he didn't have anything like that," she said. "He thought he might have a little combat stress, however. He said that when he drank he could become really angry or emotional and that he would have to pay attention to it."

Before his second deployment, Dalton was demoted from sergeant to specialist after failing a drug test and transferred from A Company to B Company.

"Being away from Hardrock (A Company) was tough on him," Butler said. "During the next deployment, I know it tore him apart when he learned that some of his brothers had been killed and he wasn't there to protect them."

Aside from a few conversations and off-hand remarks about his wartime experiences, Dalton seemed to be adjusting well when he returned from his second deployment. He went out with his friends and attempted to stay connected with his family. Butler said that Dalton was looking forward to getting his rank restored and returning to A Company.

Which makes the events that happened on April 14, 2006, all the more puzzling and disturbing.

Ronie said Dalton was out with friends that night, and by all accounts, drank too much. Turning down several rides back to Kelley Hill, Dalton took a cab back to his barracks.

After arriving at his room, Dalton went into another Soldier's room to get something to eat. Soldiers who served with him said Dalton frequently did this. He would grab a few things and leave some money on the counter and apologize the next day. Most of them considered it funny and harmless.

"He always knew he could come into my room and take whatever he wanted," said Butler. "What was mine was his. It wasn't a big deal."

That night Dalton entered the room of a Soldier, who had just arrived from basic training and wasn't aware of Dalton's late night habits. He called the military police.

The MPs detained Dalton. Dalton wanted to change clothes before they took him away. The MPs allowed a runner to escort him up to his room.

He changed and grabbed a revolver and returned to the battalion day room with the runner. Dalton showed the weapon and told people to leave. Those who stayed in the room were told to sit on the couch. As they watched, Dalton took his own life.

The event shocked everyone in the brigade.

"When I found out the next morning, I couldn't believe it," Butler said. "I was shocked and hurt. I couldn't explain why it happened."

"He wasn't someone who was bitter or lashing out," Ronie said. "That night something shifted inside him. He wasn't planning on it."

Both recognize that alcohol was one of the factors that caused this tragedy.

"I know if he had been sober that he wouldn't have done it," Butler said.

SPC Ben Hutto

Ronie Dalton, mother of SPC Jamie Dalton, stands in front of a portrait of a tattooed Soldier's arm in her apartment, Feb. 25. Dalton started the Tattoo Project, a compilation of Soldiers' tattoos and the stories behind them, to help honor her son's memory.

"Obviously, there was some trauma in my son," Ronnie said. "Maybe there were some things that were bothering him that weren't evident, even to him. That night, the alcohol was like lighting a match to that straw that was hidden inside him. I also wonder if a part of my son was worn down; if he had just had it."

Butler said he has quit trying to understand why his friend ended his life.

"There is really nothing to figure out," he said. "Who really cares why? It doesn't change anything. There isn't a reason that anyone can give me that will make me understand. I quit searching for reasons why a long time ago."

There isn't a day that goes by that Dalton's family and friends don't wish he was here with them. Ronnie left California to be closer to the side of her son's life he rarely spoke about.

"I moved to Columbus to incorporate who he was into my life," she said. "I wanted his loss to be life affirming. Just because he is gone doesn't mean he still isn't a big part of my life."

Butler said that every suicide brief reminds him of his lost brother.

"It seems like I have a suicide brief once a month and it reopens the wound every time," he said. "I question myself every time. How did I not see it coming if he was so close to me? This guy was so close to me. Did I miss the signs? It's horrible."

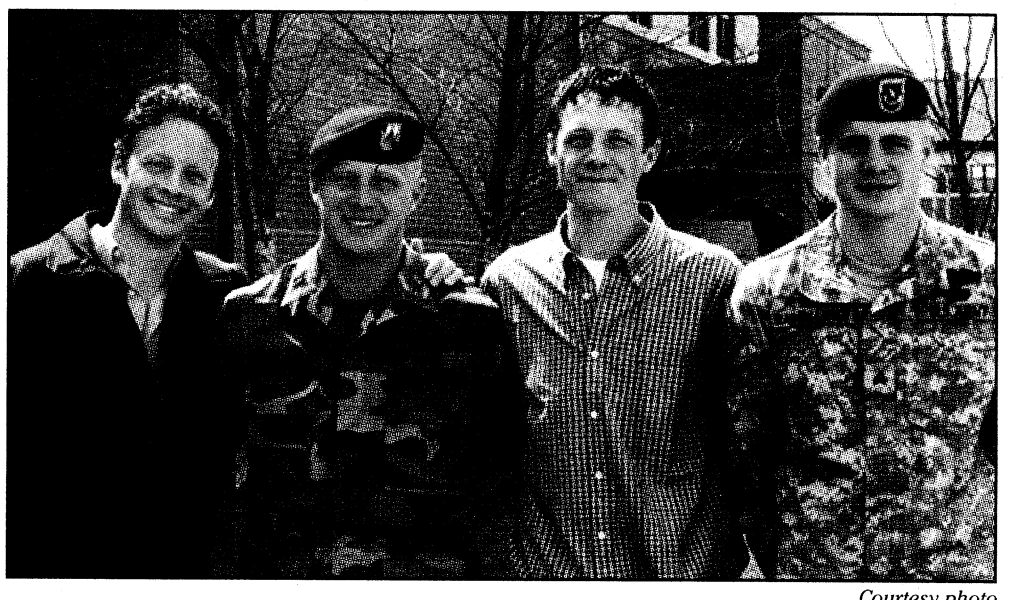

These questions will never be answered because the person who can answer them is gone.

The chaplain of the 3rd HBCT, MAJ David Lile, said that Dalton's suicide was preventable.

"The main part of the tragedy that played out was brought on by alcohol," he said. "Alcohol can numb your sense of reality and make people unable to grasp the fullness of life. Alcohol, like any depressant, doesn't give you an accurate sense of how things really are around you."

Lile said he believes Dalton allowed his problems to overwhelm his decision making that night. He hopes other Soldiers will use the suicide to see that life's problems should not limit their view of its value.

Life is complex," he said. "It's not easy. If we reduce it down to situations, we can lose sight of that. The tragedy of that situation was that SPC Dalton didn't allow his life to be lived out in its fullness."

'SOMEONE'S HEARING THEIR STORY'

Film portrays service members' stories

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Jake Rademacher has seen combat, yet he is not a Soldier. When he set off for Iraq in 2004, he was not armed with an M-16, but with an entirely different type of weapon — a camera.

For six weeks, Rademacher filmed Soldiers and Marines in Iraq in an effort to capture what he calls "my brothers' war" — an unbiased portrayal of the experiences of his two Soldier brothers and other service members in Iraq, and how those experiences affect their families. Brothers at War, the documentary that is the fruit of his labor, will open March 13 in Columbus and five other mostly military markets.

Rademacher said he decided to make the film after his brothers, CPT Isaac Rademacher and SSG Joe Rademacher, who is now a sniper instructor at Fort Benning, returned home from serving together in Iraq with the 1st Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

"I began to feel a distance for the first time between myself and my brothers," Jake said in a statement. "I could see in my brothers' eyes that the distance between what they had experienced and what was portrayed in the news was great, and assumed that this same issue was troubling many other service members. I saw making this film as my way to do something about that."

Jake gained unprecedented access to U.S. and Iraqi combat units. He embedded with four combat units, including Isaac's unit, and followed service members into battle and captured the joys and sorrows of day-to-day life in Iraq.

Making the film bridged gaps in experience and understanding between Jake and his brothers who had served in the Army, and brought them closer, Joe said.

"Isaac and I can have more in-depth conversations with him," he said. "He understands where we are coming from a lot more. He has a better understanding of who we are, and also a better understanding of other Soldiers."

But, the Rademacher family was not always so supportive of Jake's plans.

"When he first proposed the film, we all thought he was out of his mind," Joe said. "We thought it was unrealistic, mainly because it had never been done before."

Once the project gained momentum and Joe learned his brother would be traveling to Iraq, he changed his mind.

"I couldn't believe he would be going over there, I was really happy," Joe said. "I knew he wouldn't be biased at all, that he'd give a fair view of the war, and that it would be a good experience for him to have."

The film also chronicles the changes and sacrifices of those close to Joe and Isaac, in particular Danelle Fields, Joe's fiance, and Jenny Rademacher, Isaac's wife.

Although filming Joe and Danelle's last days together before his deployment was, at times, an unwelcome intrusion, the film ultimately had a positive impact on their relationship, Joe said.

"It gave us a different perspective on each other," he said. "There are some things both of us were saying that we didn't pick up on until we saw it on the big screen."

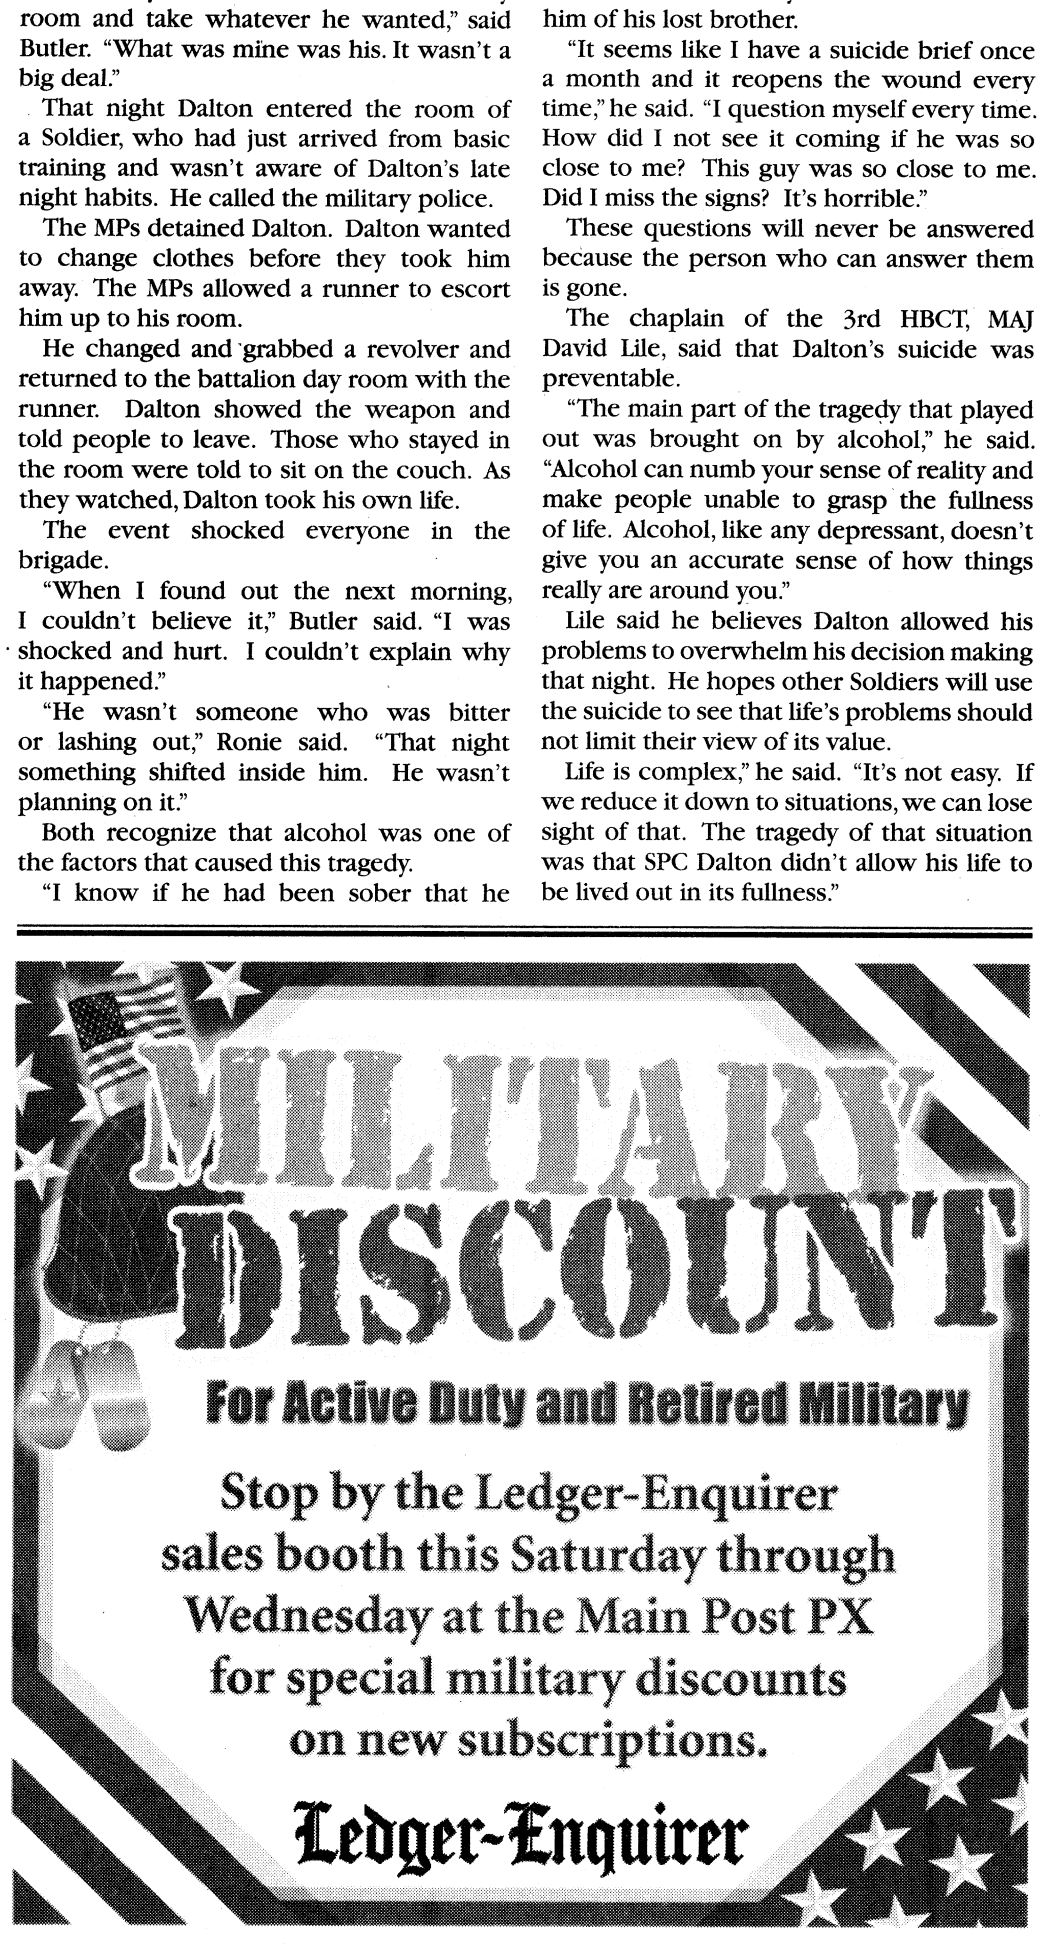

For Isaac and Jenny, Isaac's deployment meant leaving their 2-year-old daughter.

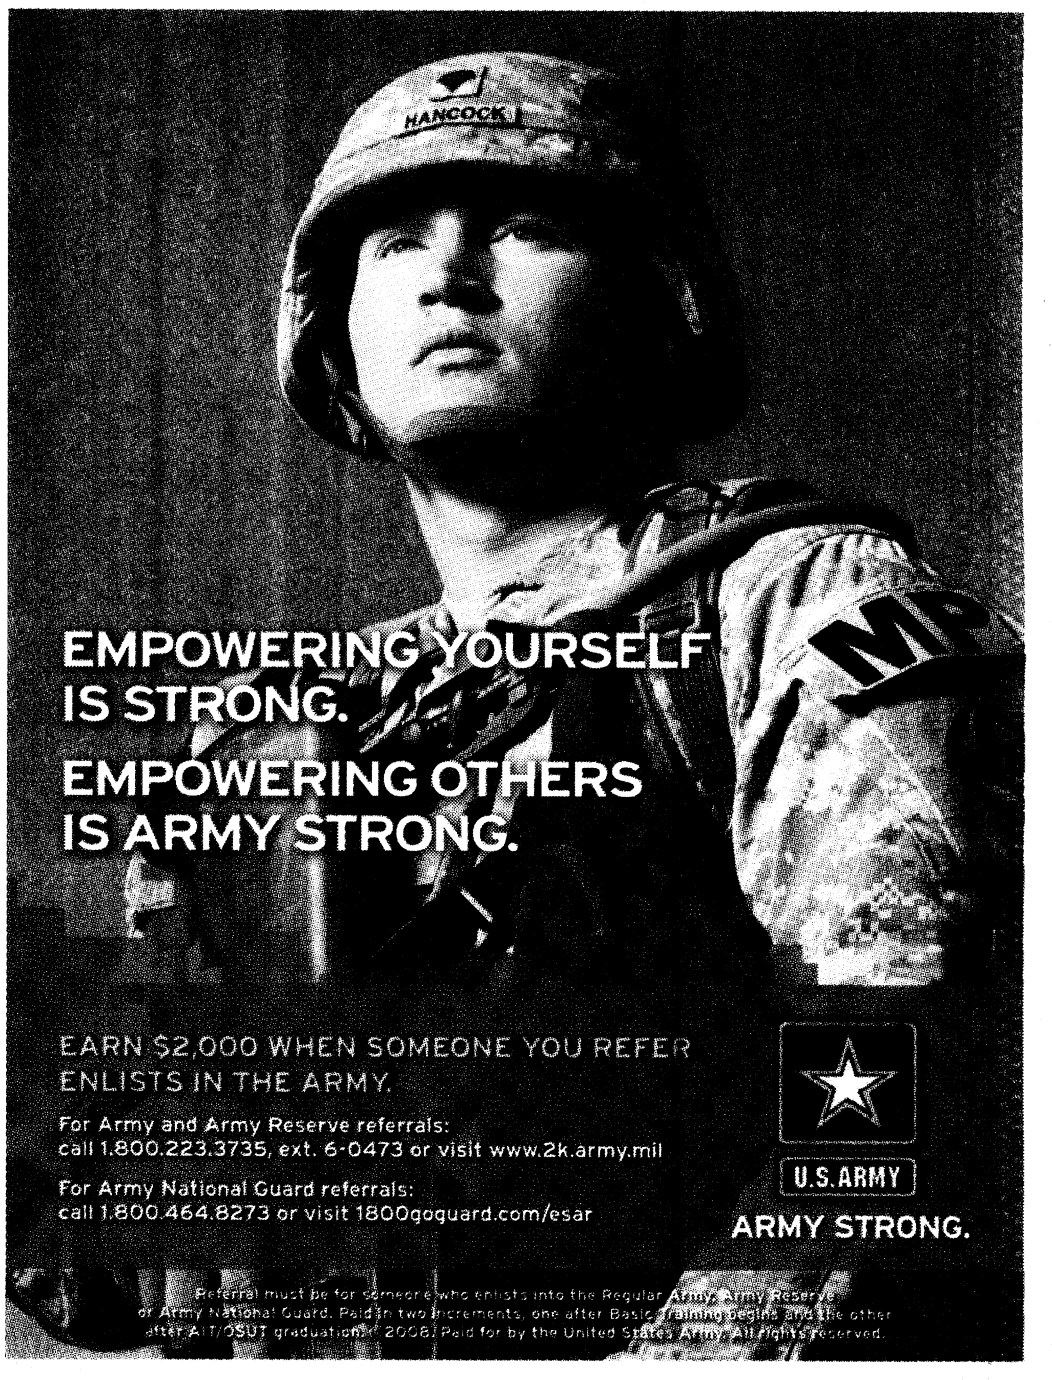

"She may not recognize who I am," Isaac said before leaving. "I'm going to have to go home and reacquaint myself with my own daughter and prove to her that I love her."

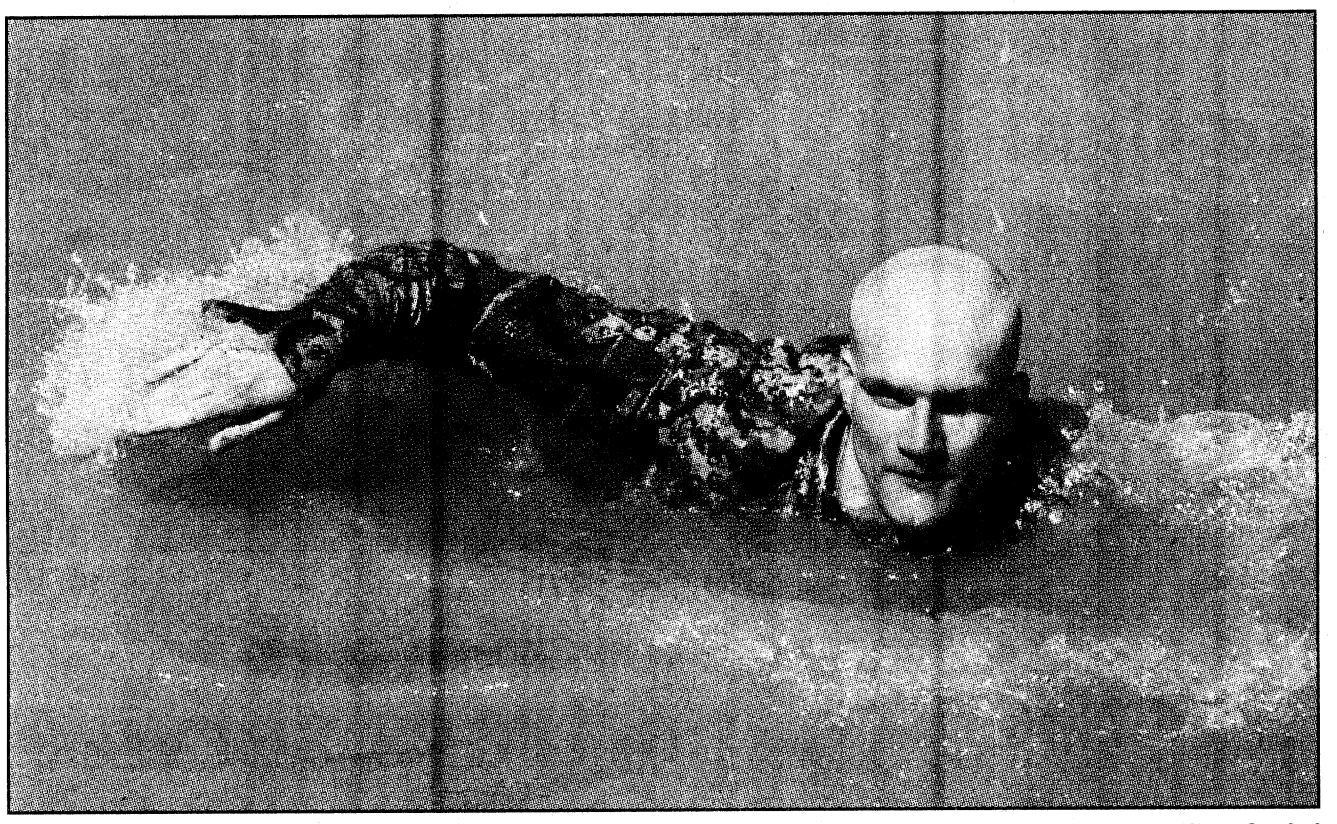

It's exactly those struggles Joe hopes film audiences will relate to.

"Especially at Fort Benning, where there are a lot of drill sergeants and instructors who have been around the Army for a while and been deployed, (the film) will show them that somebody's getting out the story," he said. "Maybe it's not their personal story, but it's a true story and a true portrayal of how the War on Terrorism is going. I think they'll be pleased that someone's hearing their story."

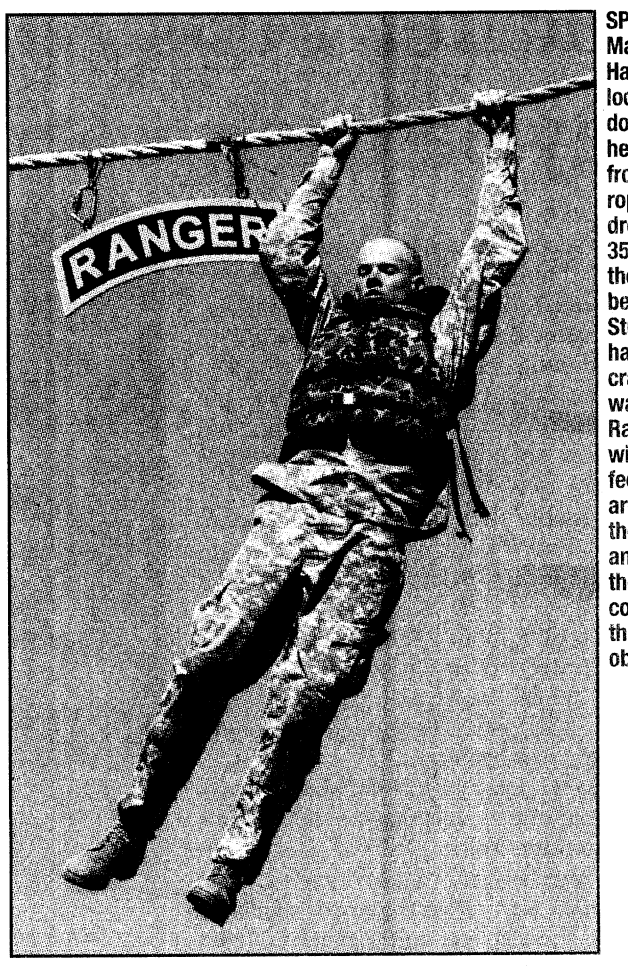

"I began this film for my brother Isaac," Jake said in a statement. "I finished it for the guys I met along the way ... now people can see why I think the best part of my generation is currently serving in Iraq and Afghanistan."

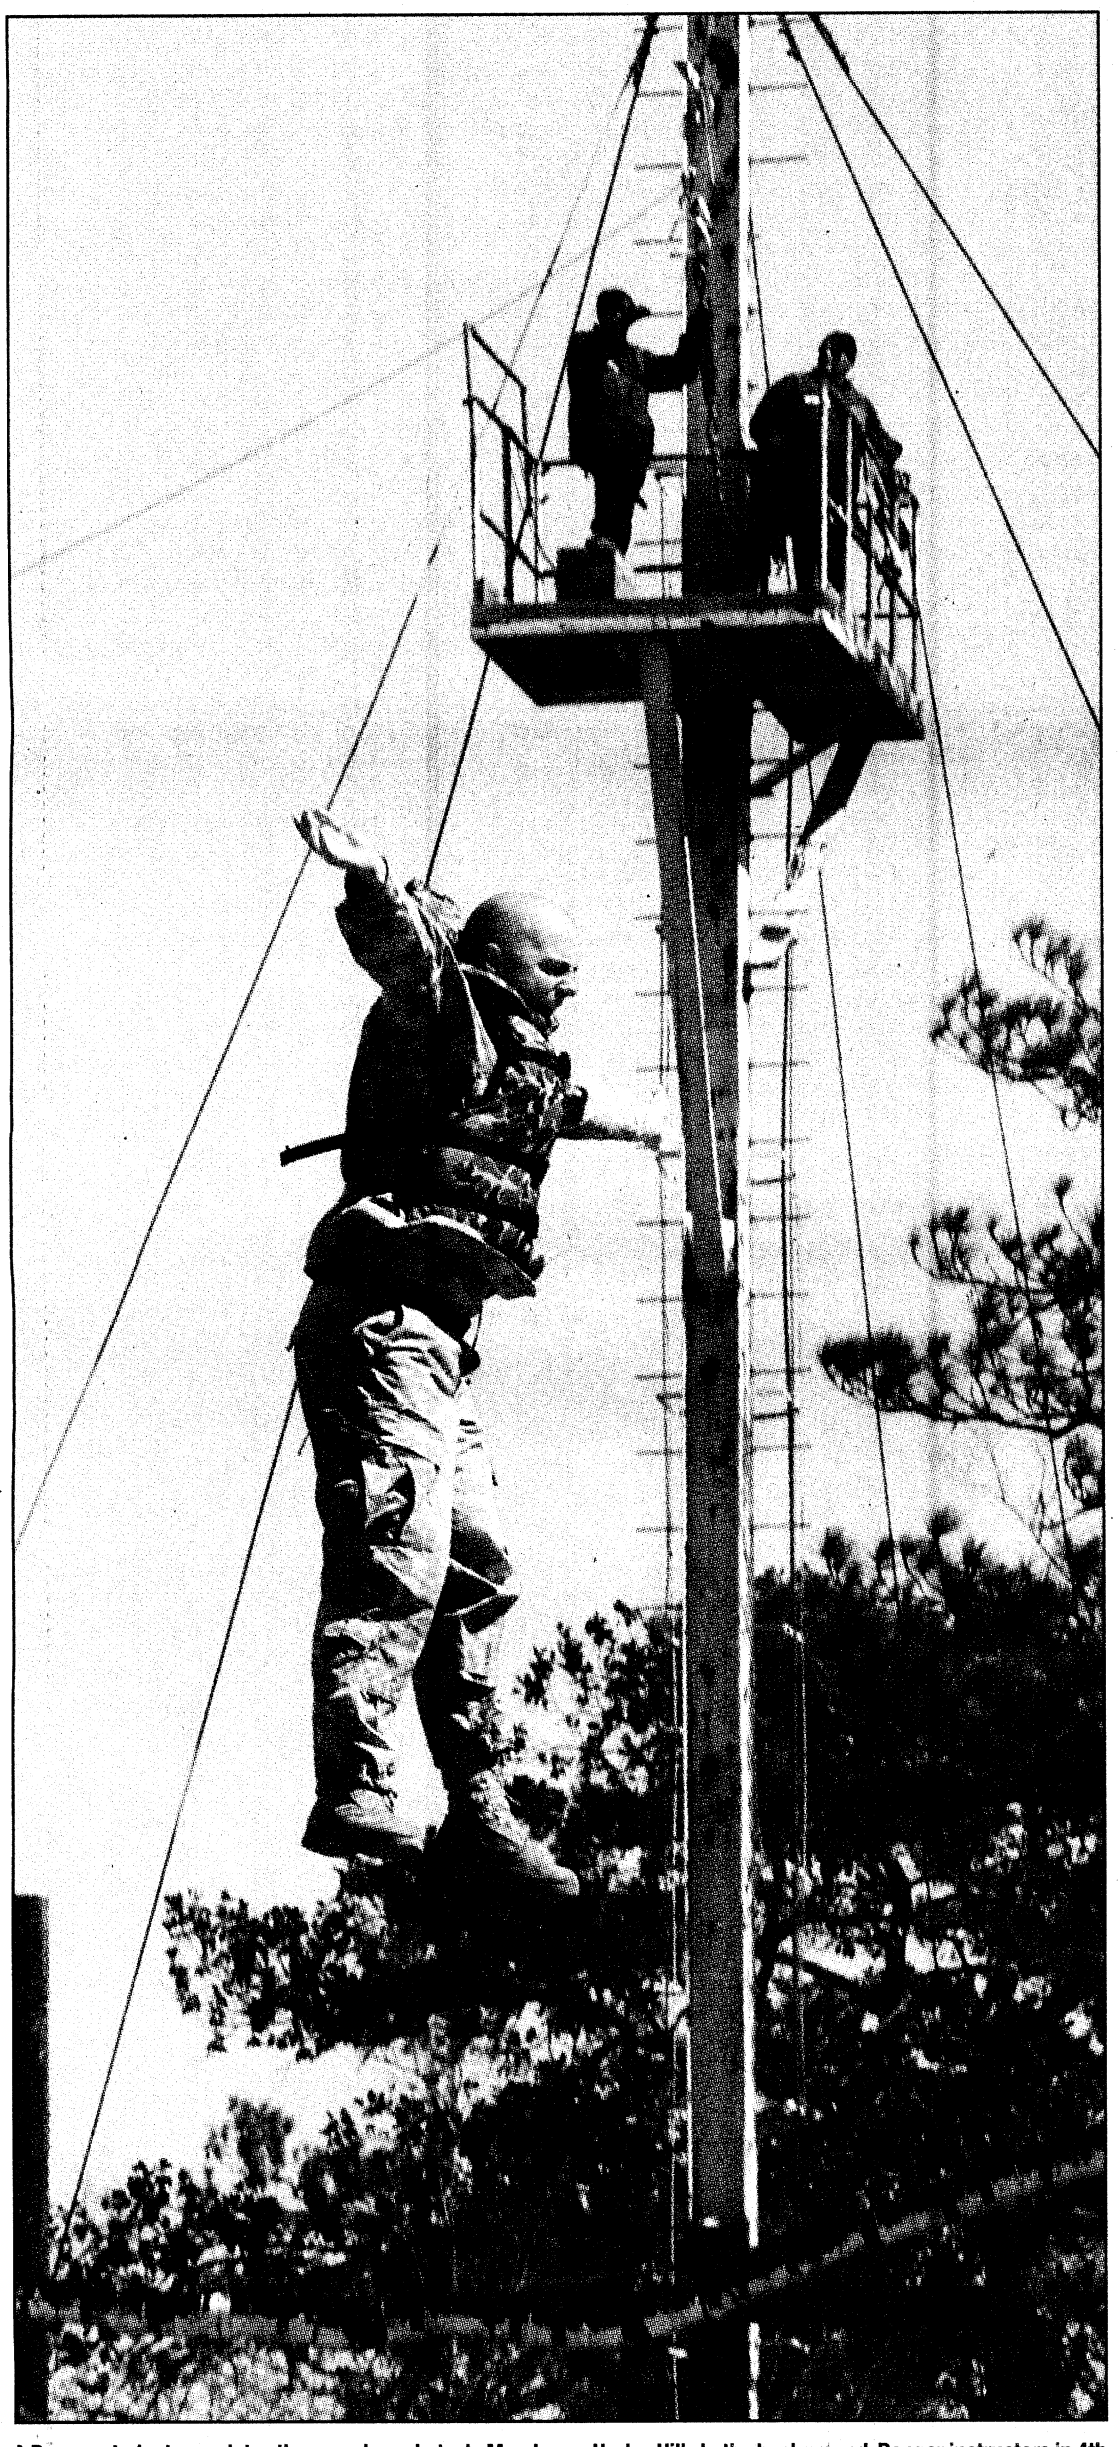

CPT Stuart Chapman finishes a 15-meter swim after dropping his equipment in the water, the final portion of the Combat Water Survival Assessment. Rangers need to be able to ditch their equipment in case any part of it gets caught underneath the water, said CPT Keith Ingram, OIC for the training. The CWSA allows Ranger instructors to assess how well the students negotiate obstacles that are high or that involve water. In the Ranger Creed, it specifically states that Rangers must be able to fulfill their mission wherever they are called, land, sea or air, so dealing with water and heights are part of being a Ranger, Ingram said. The students will conduct Airborne operations Saturday.

SPC Matthew Hammer looks down as he swings from the rope before dropping 35 feet into the water below. Students had to crawl their way to the Ranger tab with their feet hooked around the rope and touch the tab to complete the obstacle.

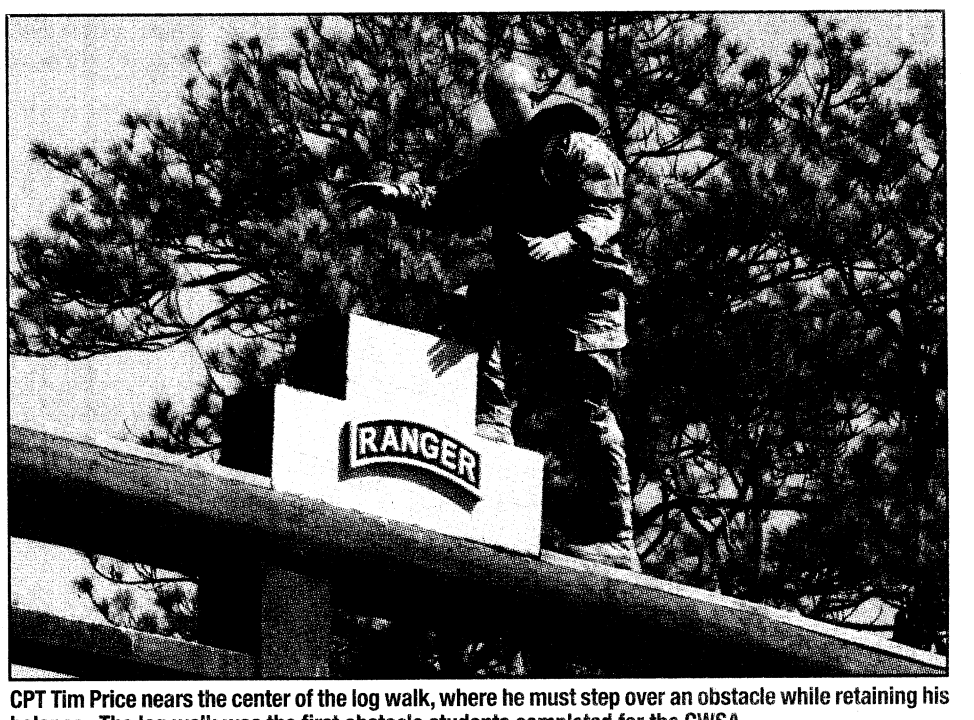

"You'll shake a little bit and your heart speeds up, but one way or another, you're ending up in the water, so you just have to keep putting one foot in front of the other."

It was day one of Ranger School. After 49 push-ups, 59 sit-ups and a five-mile run starting at 5:30 a.m. Monday, Ranger students lined up for their chance to walk across a beam suspended 35 feet in the air. One by one, they walked to the end of the log, dropped into the water and headed to their next climb — this one 75 feet high.

"The height is pretty tremendous," said CPT William Hilton, one of more than 300 students attending Ranger School at Fort Benning.

"I'm not scared of heights, but I respect them," he said. "I wasn't looking forward to this. I don't know what was more intimidating for me, the five-mile run or the Combat Water Survival Assessment … the coldness of it. Now I feel like it's all downhill from here."

Jumping into Victory Pond the day after heavy snowfall wasn't easy, Hilton said, but it was worth it to be a Ranger.

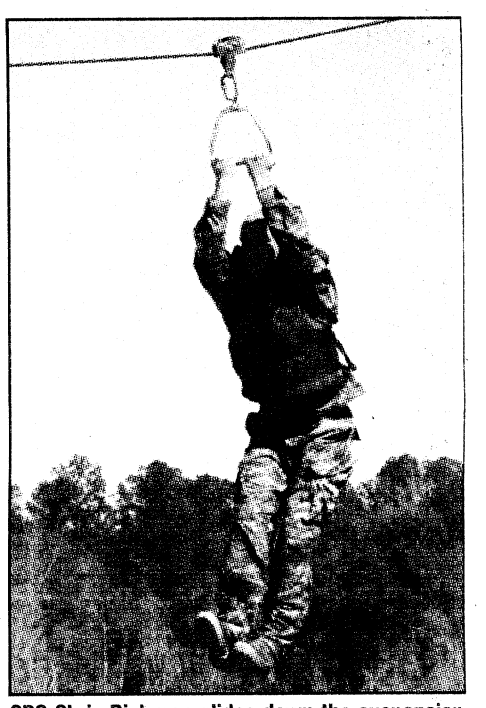

"When I enlisted, it was 'be all you can be,' so I guess, as simple as that sounds, I'm just trying to be all I can be," he said. "I've built upon a new skill set of coping with danger. You go out and do something like this, and you (realize), it's not so bad; I'm not so fragile. I can do this."

The purpose of the exercise was to assess the students' capacity to handle high obstacles while they gained confidence in their abilities.

"It's a challenging event," said CPT Keith Ingram, OIC for the Combat Water Survival Assessment. "It sets a tone for the course. It immediately exposes the student to exhilarating training, and by the nature of the event, builds confidence.

"On a day like today when the water is a bit chilly, it teaches the student that he's able to work in challenging environments and continue to fight on with his Ranger mission. They're mentally tough, so they're not going to let something like a little water deter them from getting the Ranger tab."

Because of the cold, Ranger instructors made sure students were in the water for less than 10 minutes. Warming barrels and a heated tent helped take the chill off as students waited for their next task.

SPC Chris Richman glides down the suspension traverse above Victory Pond.

Although the cold water "shocks the system," the course was more about mental strength than physical endurance, said 2LT Walter Haynes.

"Once you get started, you're fine," he said. "The most important thing is overcoming any sort of hesitation you have on your own. It's not difficult unless you make it difficult in your head."

Although the obstacles increased in height, the course became "less scary" as Haynes moved through it, especially after he completed the log walk, he said.

"When I was standing before starting the traverse, it does get your heart sped up a little bit," he said. "You know you're 35 feet above the water and you're sort of swaying a little. And once the guy starts going down the rope, the vibrations run along the beam. You'll shake a little bit and your heart speeds up, but one way or another, you're ending up in the water, so you just have to keep putting one foot in front of the other."

The students began land navigation Tuesday. After the Benning phase with the 4th Ranger Training Battalion, students will complete the "mountain phase" in Dahlonega, Ga., followed by the "swamp phase" near Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. The entire course is 62 days.

SCAM WARNING FROM CID

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command is warning the Army community of an ongoing Internet scam within popular social networking and dating sites where the criminal poses as a member of the U.S.Army. Scammers create profiles of senior Army officers and non-commissioned officers, to include the use of official photographs, in an attempt to lure unsuspecting persons into revealing personal, banking or financial information.

In their latest attempt, scammers are making contact with potential victims through various social networking sites. After contact, during instant messaging or e-mail correspondence, the scammers ask recipients to cash a check that would help the sender or the sender's family out of a terrible situation.

CID recommends Soldiers, civilians and family members who come across any known suspicious social networking or dating site profile or are solicited in this fashion contact the nearest CID office or e-mail CID at crimetips@conus.army.mil.

German jump wings

PVT Davis Kyllonen of E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, receives his German jump wings from German soldiers SFC Tobias Busse and 1LT Robert Maier. Soldiers from Airborne units around post received their German jump wings Feb. 25 at Fryar Field. Six German soldiers from Division Special Operations in Regensburg, Germany, including three German jumpmasters, arrived Feb. 21 at Fort Benning. While at Fort Benning, the German soldiers completed jumpmaster training, parachuted from a C-130 aircraft with American Soldiers and received their American jump wings.

Qualls: Inspires fellow paratroopers plays a large part in their success, Qualls said.

Certain NCOs stand out in every class, and this cycle, Qualls is one of them, said SSG Alberto Villacorte, an Airborne instructor who works closely with Qualls.

"He's an inspiration for the rest of the students, especially the younger kids," Villacorte said. "He has the experience in life and in the military. They see Master Sergeant Qualls really trying, and they see that he's a good example.

"You can tell who the determined people are. They don't quit. They just keep going. You can tell by the way they conduct themselves. They do what they're told. They don't complain ... the kind of students we prefer to have. I wish that there were a lot more Master Sergeant Qualls in the company as a whole."

In a course that is "80 percent mental," overcoming any fears associated with heights is critical, Villacorte said.

> "You can tell who the determined people are. They don't quit. They just keep going... the kind of student we prefer to have. I wish there were a lot more Master Sergeant Qualls in the company as a whole."
> — SSG Alberto Villacorte

Qualls was nervous about his first jump Tuesday, but the experience will help him in his role back home at Fort Bragg, N.C., he said.

After knowing what it feels like to be suspended 1,250 feet above the ground and then make one decisive leap, trusting in his prayers, training and parachute, Qualls said he has gained a "deeper understanding" of what the Soldiers in the 82nd Abn. Div. go through on a regular basis.

"I was scared, but I was determined. And once I looked up and saw I did have a parachute above me, then I had fun. It was peaceful," Qualls said. "It's good to try new things — that's how you grow. I'm definitely a better person for having overcome my fears and doing it.

"And I lived to tell the tale. I've had an interesting and exciting ride so far in the Army. Who knows what new adventure is around the corner?"

NCOs: Guide, encourage junior Soldiers

Dedicating an entire year to NCOs is important because they do not always receive recognition for their contributions, Ulibarri said.

"A lot of times, we get caught up with what we're doing in our units, and (honoring NCOs) falls by the wayside," he said.

"Having a lot of people from the community at ceremonies like these enhances NCOs' pride," Ulibarri said.

"As for civilians, many of them who work here are prior military, but whether they know much about the military or not, this ceremony should give them a little more information on what it is that NCOs do. And if we can take a whole year to inform the public on what the NCO Corps is and does, we will have come a long way in educating the American public."

In remarks during the ceremony, Ulibarri reminded NCOs of their responsibilities to their Soldiers and urged them to be proactive in taking charge of training.

Following Ulibarri's remarks, SPC Kristen Kelley, Soldier of the first quarter for the 203rd Brigade Support Battalion, recited A Soldier's Request, a poem written by SGM Frank McMahon in which a junior enlisted Soldier outlines his expectations of his NCO.

For SGT James Beyer, 3rd Brigade Special Troops Battalion, being inducted into the NCO Corps meant acknowledging his responsibility to his junior Soldiers.

"I treat all my Soldiers ... with compassion, caring, understanding and also responsibility for their well-being," he said. "Everything I teach them, they're going to teach others in the future."

SGT Ritasha Pugh, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, said becoming an NCO meant mentoring junior Soldiers.

"One of my ways of interacting with them as an NCO is by giving them that extra encouragement and guidance," she said. "Their drill sergeants are trained to (test Soldiers' limits) so they'll be prepared when they deploy, but for me it's just the opposite. I give them that comfort zone and that extra person to talk to."

Before the ceremony concluded, SFC Namu K. Keys, president of the Fort Benning chapter of the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club, led NCOs in the NCO Creed.

"I think it really means something to the Soldiers to be able to stand up and say, 'I am an NCO,'" Ulibarri said.

"I hope the Year of the NCO will enhance their pride in service."

NFL players missing

A fishing boat with two NFL players aboard went missing Feb. 28 off the coast of Florida. Corey Smith, a Detroit Lions free agent, and Marquis Cooper, a linebacker for the Oakland Raiders, were on board, along with former University of South Florida players Will Bleakley and Nick Schuyler.

Schuyler has been rescued, but the other three are still missing at sea. The Coast Guard has called off the search, but friends and family continue searching on their own. Schuyler is in stable condition.

Ramirez turns down offer

Apparently $25 million for one season of baseball wasn't good enough for outfielder Manny Ramirez, who turned down the offer from the Los Angeles Dodgers. He also had the option for a second year at $20 million.

The Dodgers have said they'll "start from scratch" in negotiations with Ramirez and his agent Scott Boras.

Woods loses in second round

Tiger Woods returned to the golf world at the WGC-Accenture Match Play Championship in Arizona Feb. 25 and won his first round, but lost in the second round Feb. 26 to Tim Clark. After his nine-month absence from the sport because of knee surgery, Woods declared his knee was fine and he was pleased with his performance.

Jeff Ogilvy won his second WGC-Accenture Match Play Championship in four years, with a 4-and-3 win over Paul Casey.

Busch wins at hometown track

Though he won the pole position, Kyle Busch started from the back of the pack March 1 at Las Vegas Motor Speedway because of an engine change before the start of the race.

That didn't keep "The Wild Thing" from winning, though. He took the lead with 57 laps to go, then slid back during a round of pit stops. He was then third, behind Clint Bowyer and Jeff Burton, but in true Kyle-style, drove to the front for the win.

The Kobalt Tools 500 from Atlanta Motor Speedway starts with coverage 2:15 p.m. Sunday on Fox.

Cutler refuses talks

Denver Broncos quarterback Jay Cutler is refusing to talk to the team after rumors that the Broncos were in trade talks to get former Patriots' QB Matt Cassel. Cassel was traded to the Kansas City Chiefs over the weekend and Cutler's feelings got hurt.

He said he's going to lay low and he knows for a fact that the Broncos tried to trade him.

Benning grapplers win invitational

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

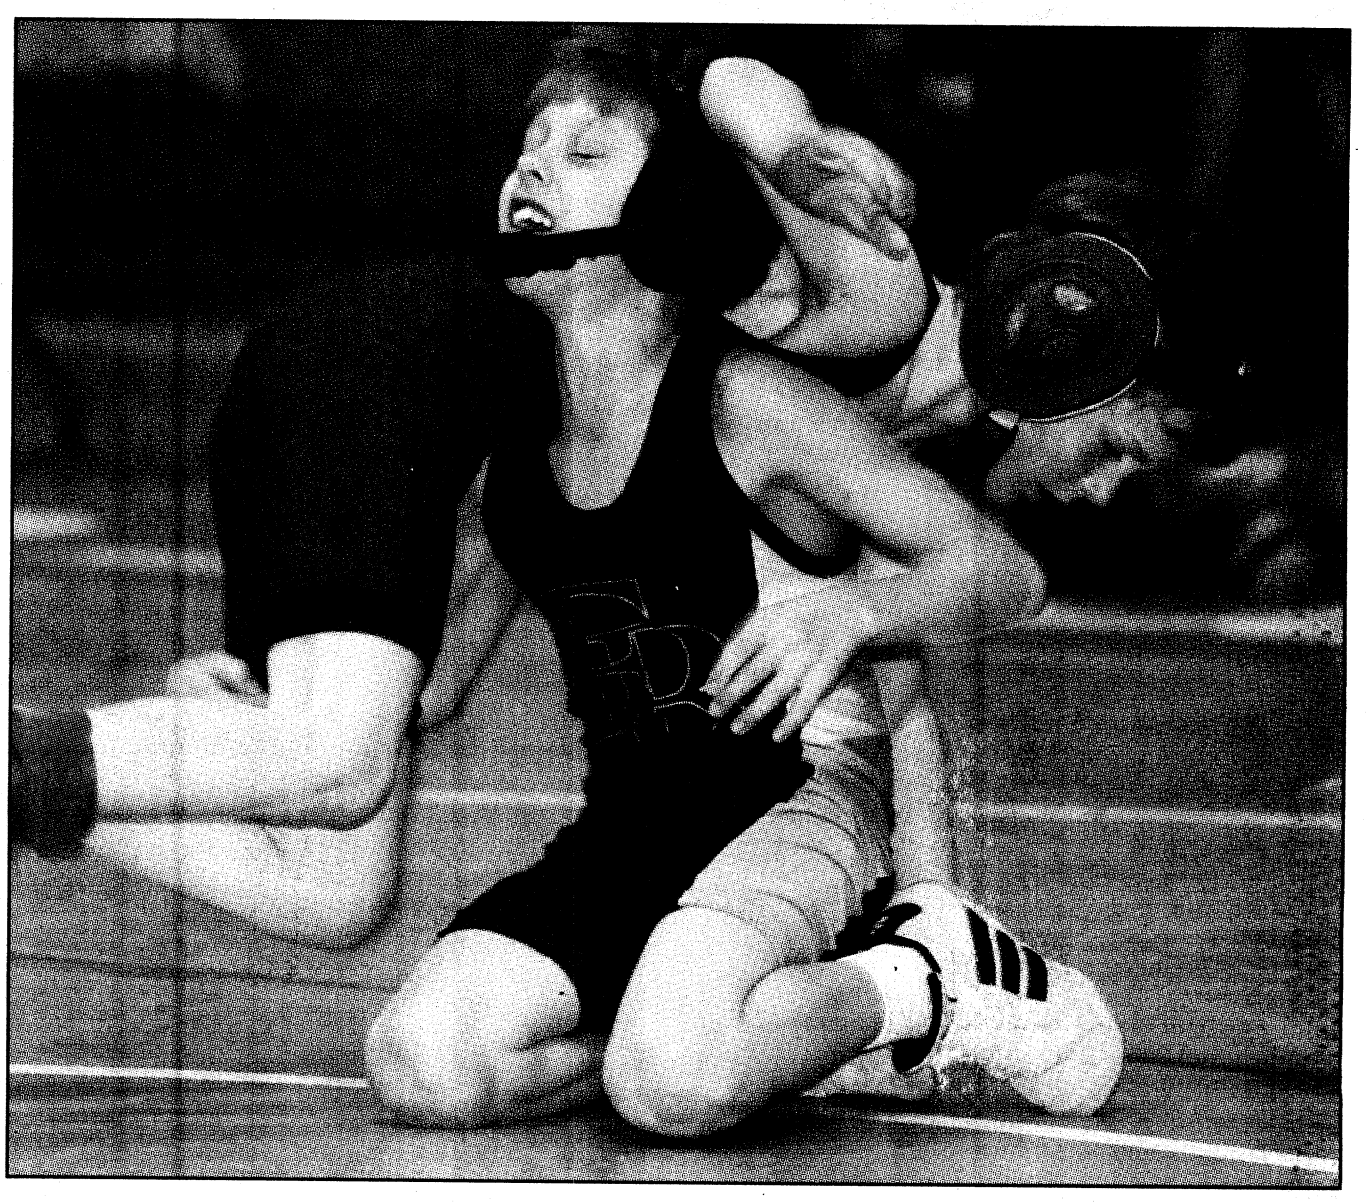

Grapplers from the Fort Benning Wrestling Club took first place in the Fort Benning Invitational Feb. 24 at the Audie Murphy gym besting second place Wynnbrook Christian School by 19 points and placing first in 13 different age and weight divisions.

It was the first tournament for many of the wrestlers, coach and event coordinator Jackson Doan said, with more than 116 wrestlers from across the state participating.

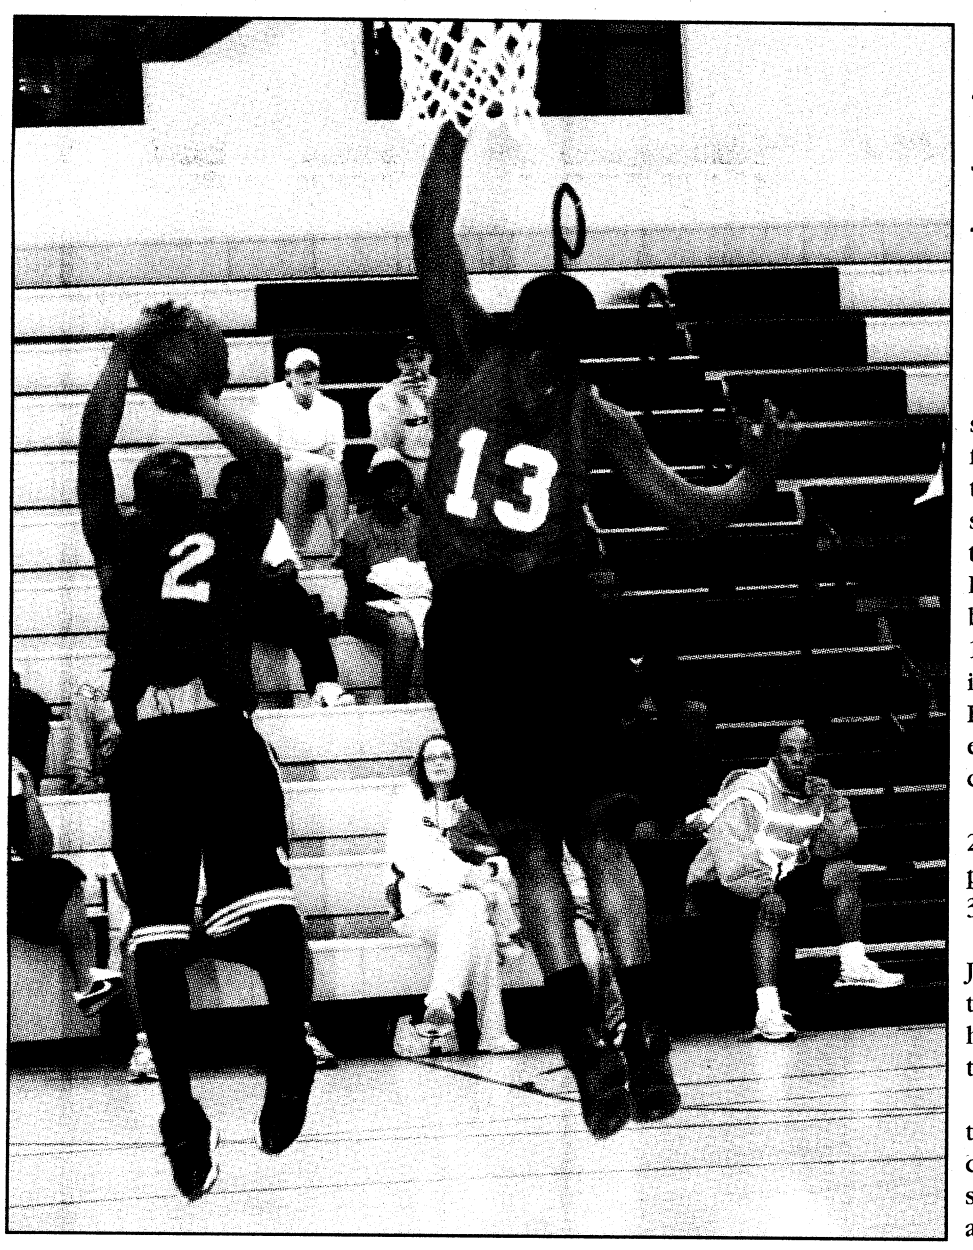

"This task was a huge learning process and was primarily focused on fostering youth wrestling in the southern Georgia area, as well as allowing a majority of wrestlers from the Benning team the opportunity to participate in their first tournament," Doan said. "Feedback is filtering back to me and the word is getting out that our program is legitimate, as far as producing potential wrestling champions. It is very exciting and rewarding all at once."

Wynnbrook, who finished second with 71 points, placed two wrestlers in the top spot in the 6-and-younger division

MEDDAC wins post championship

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Making up for their preseason second-place tournament finish, MEDDAC made sure they didn't fall short in their second championship game of the season Tuesday at the SFC Paul R. Smith Fitness Center by defeating the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, 66-55, in the Fort Benning Intramural Basketball Championship finals, earning MEDDAC the post championship.

MEDDAC trailed at the half 28-23, and pulled to within five points on a Raymond Wilhelm 3-point shot to close out the half.

"It was a real nail-biter," coach James Johnson said. "They took the lead in the first half and we had to really battle to get back in the game in the second half."

With 1/19 already playing in the losers bracket semifinals, coach Johnson told his team to start pushing the ball to take advantage of the wear and tear of playing back-to-back-games.

"I just wanted to keep them (1/19) going because I knew they were getting tired," he said. "So, we just picked the tempo up and once we cut into their lead, we were able to get some quick looks and quick shots in."

After a back-and-forth battle late in the second half, MEDDAC took the lead and never looked back, Johnson said.

Following the game, Johnson explained his feelings on winning the post championship.

"It's a great feeling," he said. "It's humbling as a coach when you coach Soldiers because they have other jobs that they do all the time. The commander and the entire command staff was there for the championship, so it was a great show of support."

MEDDAC came close to missing the championship game, narrowly defeating Combat Support Company, 2nd Bn, 29th Inf. Regt. Monday in the semifinals.

Against 2/29, MEDDAC built a 16-point lead in the first half, but 2/29 mounted a comeback in the second half taking their first lead of the game with four minutes remaining in the game.

CYS&S, advisory board working toward common goal

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

When a parent walks in to the Child, Youth and School Services to register their child for a sports program, the behind-the-scenes work that goes into fielding the programs remains transparent, But, there are a lot of minds and people involved in putting out the best programs available.

"Everything we do is for the kids, and they are our priority," said Linda Laine, director of CYS&S youth sports.

Laine is not alone in keeping up to date with the needs of the installation youth sports programs though. Sports specialist Dorrie Wagner assists her in the day-to-day operations of the various youth programs. In addition, they draw on the experience and on-the-ground advice from their seven-member CYS&S Sports and Fitness Adult Advisory Board.

Laine said having the board is just another tool they have to meet the needs of the community.

"Although Dorrie and I are on the board, we are non-voting members when it comes to recommendations the board makes," Laine said.

The board is represented by a broad spectrum of members including the officer and enlisted ranks, spouses and one single Soldier, she said.

"All of the board members are very involved in making our programs the best," Laine said. "And, although they are also there for problem resolution, there have only been a couple of times in the past few years that they have had to get involved in conflict resolution."

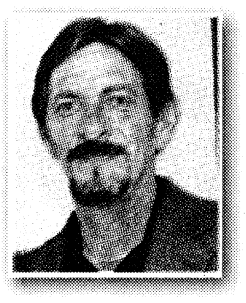

Board members are primarily responsible for acting as a liaison between the community and CYS&S, Laine said, which includes listening to members of the community and recommending changes or additions to the youth sports programs. Board members are also responsible

Lucky to have CYS&S experts

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

In 1990, I was given my first opportunity to volunteer with a youth sports program, and although I had no idea what was in store for me, I wanted to be involved with kids and teaching them a sport from the ground up.

My opportunity to be a volunteer coach came here at Fort Benning. It was also my first encounter with youth sports director Linda Laine and sports specialist Dorrie Wagner.

I remember our first sit-down conversation, and could tell they were trying to get a feel for the kind of a coach I would be and how I would interact with not only the kids, but the parents, as well.

She took a chance on me and I continued coaching at Fort Benning until I moved to North Georgia in 1999.

I never realized just how lucky I was to have had the opportunity to be a youth services volunteer coach, nor did I realize just how lucky the children and parents of Fort Benning were, until I moved and coached elsewhere.

I have seen many civilian youth services programs from all across the Southeast, and without a doubt the parents and children of Fort Benning should count their blessings to have dedicated people like Laine and Wagner running the sports programs.

Sure, there is always room for improvement, and any sports director across the country who says differently about their program would not be totally honest.

One of the first things I realized as a volunteer coach was I could not make everyone happy, but that also taught me that the greater good of the team had to come first.

I know there were times over the years when I probably challenged Laine and Wagner with my "bright ideas," but they were always there to listen and do what they could to make the programs better.

Today, teams play other teams from off post. While I am sure I was not the only one in the 90s who wanted it to happen, it wasn't feasible at the time.

My dream, and the dream of many other coaches to play downtown is a reality today because of youth services' determination to make the programs better.

In my first year of coaching, there weren't enough players to comprise enough teams to play 11-man football — the compromise — we played 8-man football. I believe I learned more in that season of 8-man football than any other season — I learned to coach an unconventional team. We went 8-0 that season.

Did everyone like the decision to play 8-man football? No, but the greater good, the kids at Fort Benning benefited from being able to play.

Tough decisions are not always popular, but they have to be made.

I was glad to come back to Fort Benning and was pleased to see both Laine and Wagner still at youth services. I still pick their collective brains, and continue to throw out my "bright ideas."

With me, nothing has changed about my outlook on youth sports. I believe I can say the same for them, as well. They are still here, still doing whatever they can for the kids of Fort Benning and continue to look at how they can improve on an already great youth sports program.

Fort Benning is lucky to have Laine and Wagner running the youth sports programs, and while the fans may not always agree with the approach or decisions that have to be made for the greater good of the program, not everyone is always going to be happy.

As the character Spock use to say on Star Trek, "The needs of the many outweigh the needs of the one, or the few." It is a saying I take to heart.

It only took me one year as a coach to realize I could not make everyone happy, just like it only took me one year away from here to realize how lucky I was to have had the chance to be a coach for the Fort Benning youth services.

MEDDAC: Crowned post champs

MEDDAC and 2/29 exchanged leads four times during three of the final four minutes of the game and with 10 second remaining, MEDDAC clung to a 2-point lead. With six seconds remaining on the clock, MEDDAC's Wilhelm put the game out of reach for 2/29 going 2-for-2 from the free-throw line to ice the game and move MEDDAC into the championship game.

"In the semifinals, we didn't go back to our main gun Wilhelm, which is our 3-point shooter because he didn't get the looks he got in the first half," coach James Johnson said. "On offense we went to more of a half-court game, which we didn't need to do. We tried to slow the game down to nurse a lead instead of just playing our (kind) our ball."

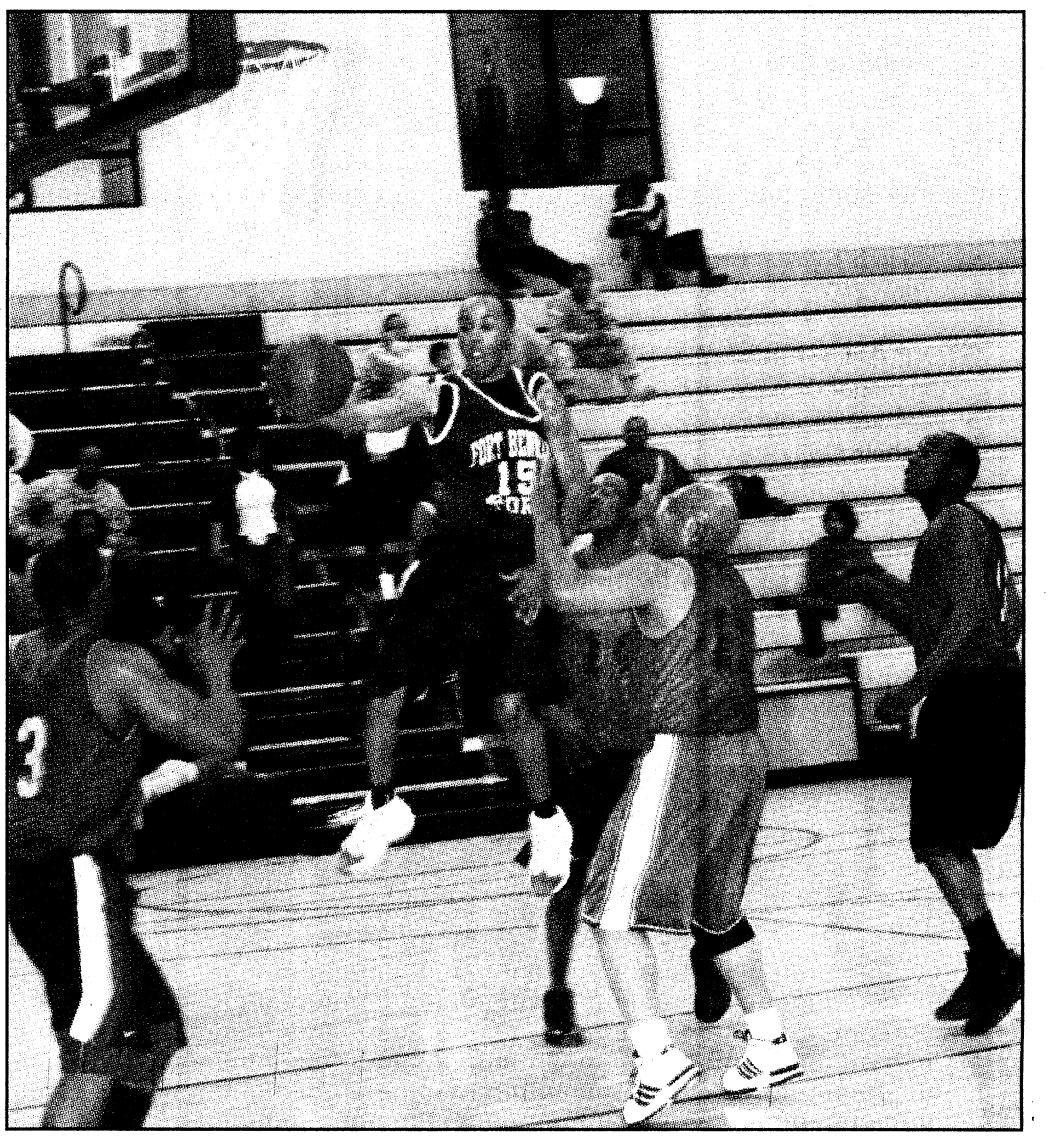

Johnson said he went back to the kind of ball that made them successful during the year in the championship game.

"In the championship game we didn't slow the game down. We pushed the ball all the way till the last tick on the clock."

The strategy worked for Johnson, and when the final buzzer sounded his MEDDAC team walked off the court with the 2009 Fort Benning intramural basketball championship.

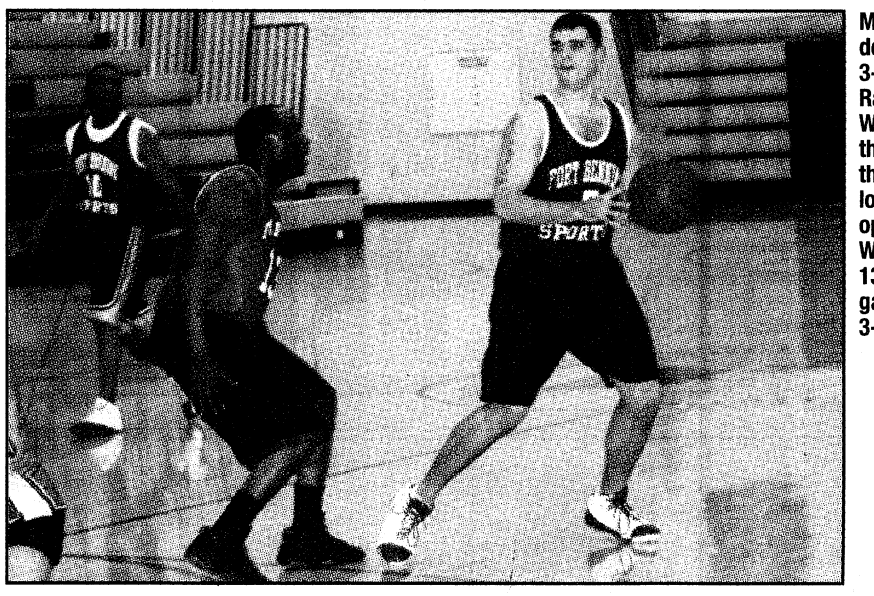

Christopher Thomas led MEDDAC in scoring in both games scoring 19 points in the semifinals and 29 points in the championship game.

The championship game concluded the 2008-2009 Fort Benning intramural basketball season.

MEDDAC's Christopher Thomas takes the ball to the basket and feeds the ball to teammate Dameno Stevenson under the goal. Thomas scored 19 points in MEDDAC's semifinal game and 29 points in the championship game.

MEDDAC's designated 3-point shooter Raymond Wilhelm moves the ball around the key while looking for an open teammate. Wilhelm scored 13 points in the game with three 3-point shots.

Fox Sports South films at Benning

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Fox Sports South, an affiliate of the Fox Sports network, filmed an Atlanta Braves promotional video at Fort Benning Feb. 28.

The camera crew interviewed Soldiers from Kelley Hill, home to the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, Sand Hill, where basic training is conducted, and Main Post, to allow fans to explain the connection between the ball club and the South.

"We are doing a promotional campaign about the Braves for our upcoming season," said Phil Olshanski, a writer and producer for Fox Sports South. "We have been all around the Southeast attempting to capture the flavor of the South and how it ties in with the Braves. The team is unique in that it is a pro baseball team surrounded by seven states without any other professional team to cheer for."

Olshanski said that Fort Benning was the first military post Fox had visited since their campaign started.

"It has been great," he said. "Soldiers are just like civilians, except they do a better job taking orders and following directions."

SFC Rinza Burton, the operations NCOIC of the Brigade Special Troops Battalion's Headquarters and Headquarters' Company, was excited to be a part of the ads.

"I loved it," he said. "The best part about it was that I got an opportunity to support my Braves."

Burton, a lifelong fan of all Atlanta sports teams, is excited about the upcoming season.

"I can't wait for baseball season to get here," he said. "We've got a lot of training coming up, but any game I can run up to Atlanta and attend; I'm there."

in two different weight classes, but had a good showing, Doan said.

"They were very consistent and will develop into a good rival team," he said. "They are a young program and have facilitated a good amount of training with us, and although they didn't have too many first place finishers, they had a strong showing."

Third-place Banks County traveled more than 160 miles to compete in the tournament and came away with two first-place finishers in the 10-and-younger age division.

"This was a very good team that showed aggressive wrestling with a small squad that had some definite contenders for the state qualifier," Doan said. "They were very consistent and if they had more competitors they would have given us a good run."

Doan said the wrestlers endured challenging practices that not only paid off this year, but set the tone for next season, as well.

"Next season all eyes will be on the Black Knights as we step onto the mats to challenge any contenders," Doan said. We will continue to foster all aspects of winning and losing with respect, honor, and dedication."

Saturday, the Fort Benning Black Knights wrestling team took seven of its grapplers to the state qualifier in Carrolton, Ga., with four of its wrestlers qualifying for the state tournament.

Orrin Suich and Corey Myers qualified for the state tournament Saturday in Rome, Ga., in the 14-and-younger, 90-pound weight class finishing in third and fourth place, respectively. Tyler Devova qualified for the state tournament finishing first in the 14-and-younger 140-pound weight class and Thomas Crays will also be making the trip as the first-place finisher in the 14-and-younger 145-pound weight class.

Board: Working for kids

for helping to "get the word out" on CYS&S activities and events.

Board president Terrell Flint said the entire focus of the board is on the kids at Fort Benning.

"We are here for problem resolution and brainstorming and to find better ways to provide sports programs for our children, Flint said. "We have a great relationship with CYS&S and anytime something comes up, we get together, discuss it and vote on it. It is a group effort for the betterment of the kids."

Flint said one of the focuses is on keeping Fort Benning athletes playing in Fort Benning programs.

"We have Soldiers who live on and off post and some take their kids downtown to play, so we are trying to make Fort Benning youth sports one of the better programs so we can keep our athletes playing on post."

Board member Cindy Maynard agrees with Flint.

"Serving on the board, I hope to generate enough interest in CYS&S to keep our talent, some of the best talent here, playing for Fort Benning," she said. "We want to organize teams here to be able to compete against communities outside of Fort Benning ... instead of our players going downtown to play with their teams."

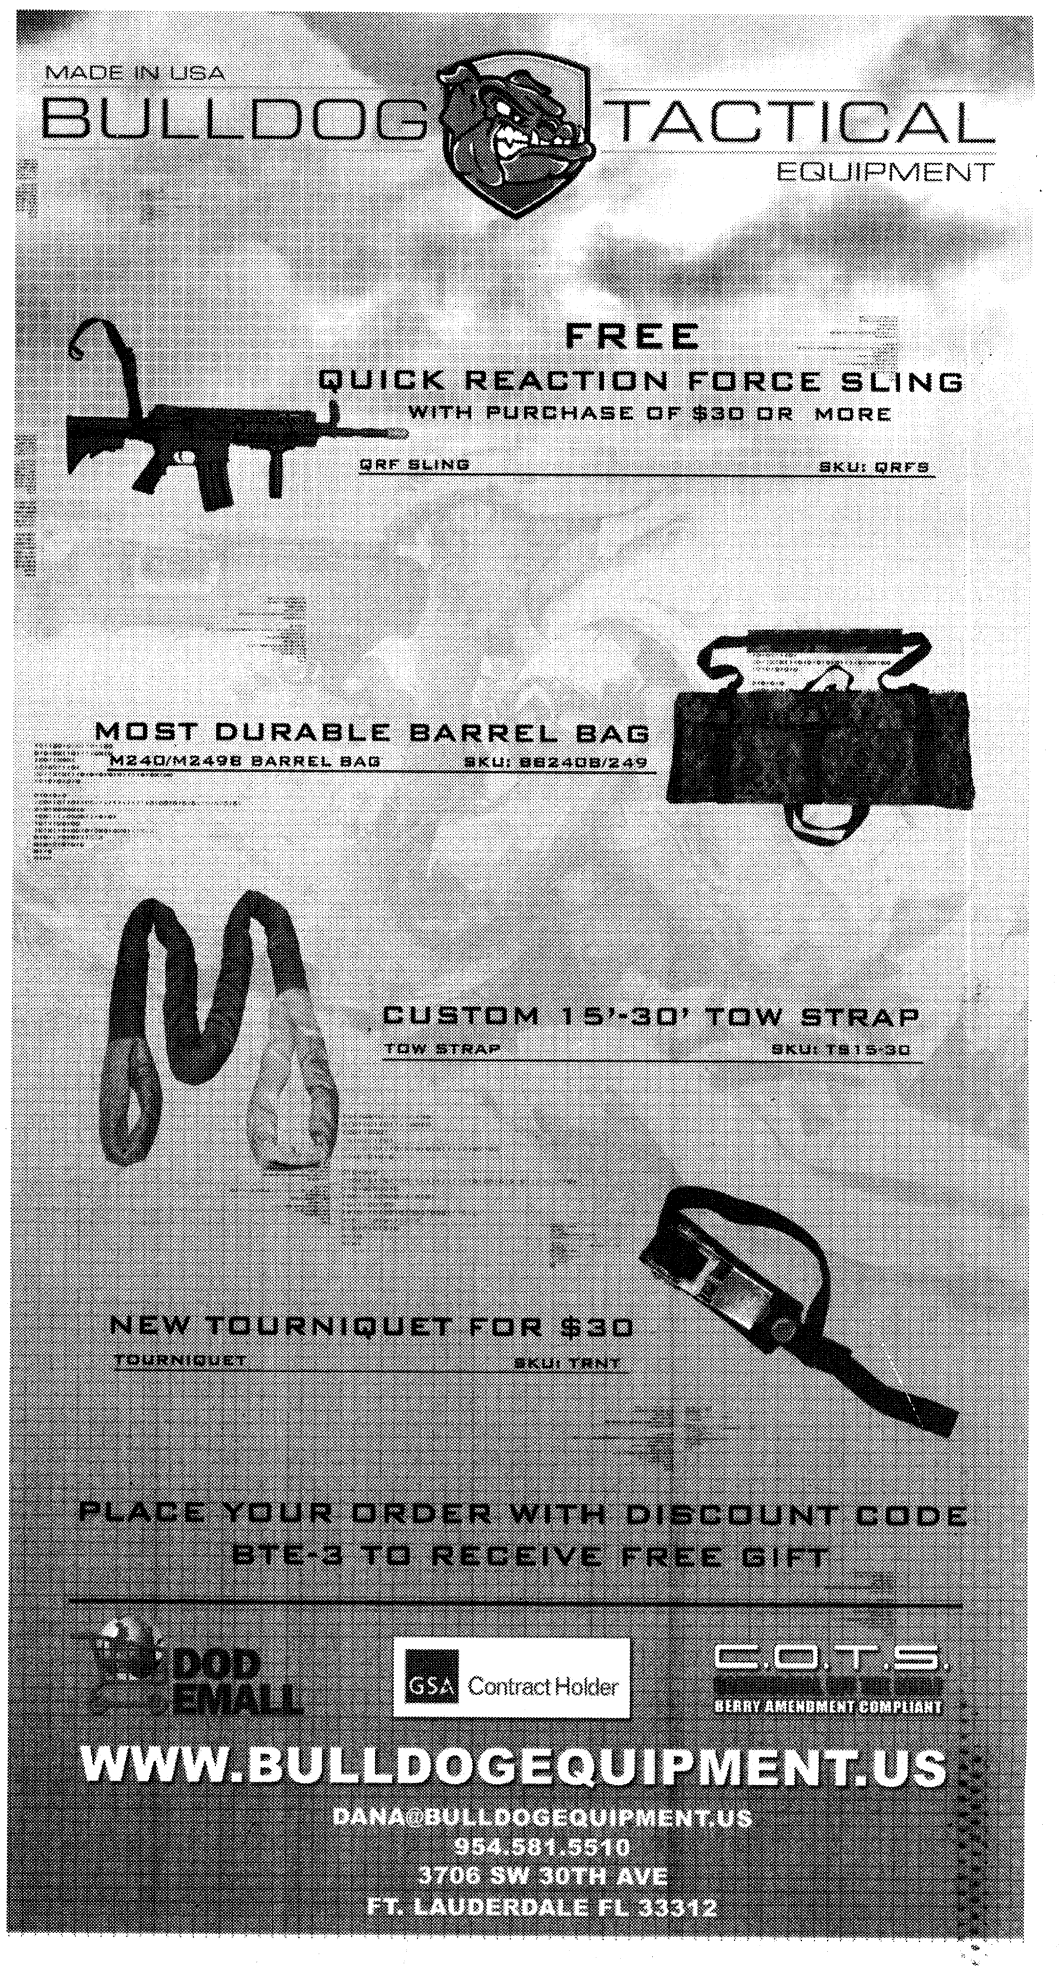

One reason Maynard believes the board serves as a valuable asset for CYS&S is because of the board's makeup.

"I think we have been very effective working with CYS&S," she said. "Our board is made up from different people from different backgrounds and I think that has been crucial to the exchange of ideas. And, CYS&S has been very receptive to our ideas."

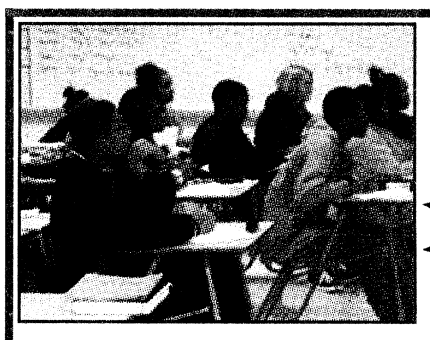

Maynard said a focus of the board is to coordinate Fort Benning youth services with the schedules of the off post teams so the Fort Benning teams are able to play and compete downtown.

"We just want to expand it so there is no reason to take the kids off post," she said. "A lot of these kids on Fort Benning are some of the prized players for teams off post, so we want our kids to play for Fort Benning. CYS&S is more cost effective than playing for teams downtown and it is so much easier for parents. The talent is there, we just have organize it."

In addition to Flint and Maynard, other board members are Vette Ivey, Ed Ramos and Dan Kessler. For more information on the CYS&S Sports Advisory Board and how to contact one of the members, call Laine or Wagner at 706-545-3582.

About 26,000 runners crossed the starting line of the Army Ten Miler last October at the Pentagon.

Ten-Miler to hit 30K

Carol E. Davis
ARNEWS

WASHINGTON — To mark the 25th anniversary of the Army Ten-Miler this fall, the field for the race will be increased to 30,000 runners.

Each year the race has incrementally increased the running field and has maintained a safe, competitive run, said Jim Vandak, director of the Army Ten Miler.

"Since the 2008 race sold out in a record 21 days, we looked at the logistics and felt that we could incrementally increase participation in this year's 25th anniversary race," Vandak said.

The race formally started when the Association of the United States Army joined with the Military District of Washington and got involved with a race that was started by the Pentagon recreation services and the Army Ten-Miler was born, said Vandak.

"We have more than 750 teams from around the world who come out to compete in the race," said Jim Vandak, director of Army Ten-Miler. "A little more than half of those teams are Soldier teams that compete for the Commander's Cup ... in addition to the trophy, they go for the bragging rights too."

Race officials confirmed they will use a wave start to release runners for this year to ensure a safe, competitive race. The expanded size of the race has led to other changes as well. The free, two-day expo preceding the race will move to the D.C. Armory, enabling twice the number of exhibitors and longer packet pick-up hours for runners.

The pasta dinner will move to a larger ballroom at the Gateway Crystal Marriott, thereby adding an additional 300 seats. The race will be held Oct. 4 in Washington, D.C., with the pasta dinner Oct. 3.

"It has a rich tradition of military and civilian runners," said Vandak. "It's the spirit of the Army; it's the spirit of the nation."

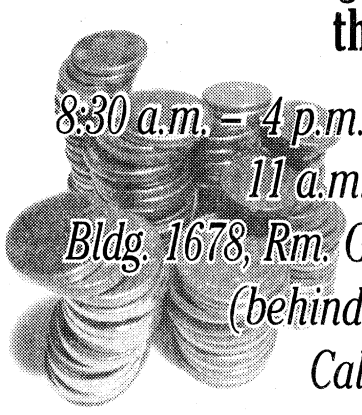

The Army Ten-Miler provides a venue for military and civilians to compete for awards in more than 27 divisions. The race starts and finishes at the Pentagon.

The mission of the Army Ten-Miler is to promote the Army, build esprit de corps, support fitness goals, and enhance community relations. Registration will open April 1 at www.armytenmiler.com.

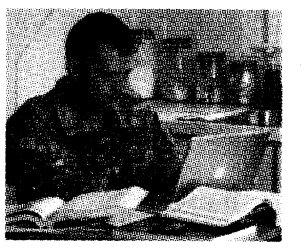

Despite the increased runner field, race official said they expect to sell out by mid-May and encourage runners to sign up early to assure entry.

Aid to military hit by housing market

Carol E. Davis
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Some military families are finding themselves in a precarious situation when it comes to selling their house and relocating, said housing experts.

Some bought their homes at the height of the market and now, because of permanent-change-of-station orders, are trying to sell in today's lower market, said Edmond Hackett, housing management specialist, Fort Belvoir, Va. The good news is that the new economic stimulus package has provisions to help military homeowners and Army Emergency Relief is also helping those hit by the crunch.

"It's a reality in this area and all over, there are a lot of foreclosures and this is affecting our Soldiers too," said Hackett. "Many sellers can now expect to sell below their purchase price."

The flip side of this housing market is that renters are not immune to the effects of foreclosure either.

"In the past couple of months, approximately five Army families

Teachers to help parents, families

Young military families dealing with repeated deployments will have a new resource they can count on, said Tawanna Brown, the post school liaison officer.

That resource is the Parents as Teachers program. Through this initiative, families with children ages 3 and younger can choose to receive regular visits from certified parent educators who will provide age-appropriate information and experience on child rearing.

"For a young family, new to the military, first time away from home, I see this as a great network," Brown said. "It can be overwhelming having a newborn or toddler while your spouse is deployed. Having the parent educator there, it's not something they're going through by themselves."

The educators will offer classes based on the families' needs and requests.

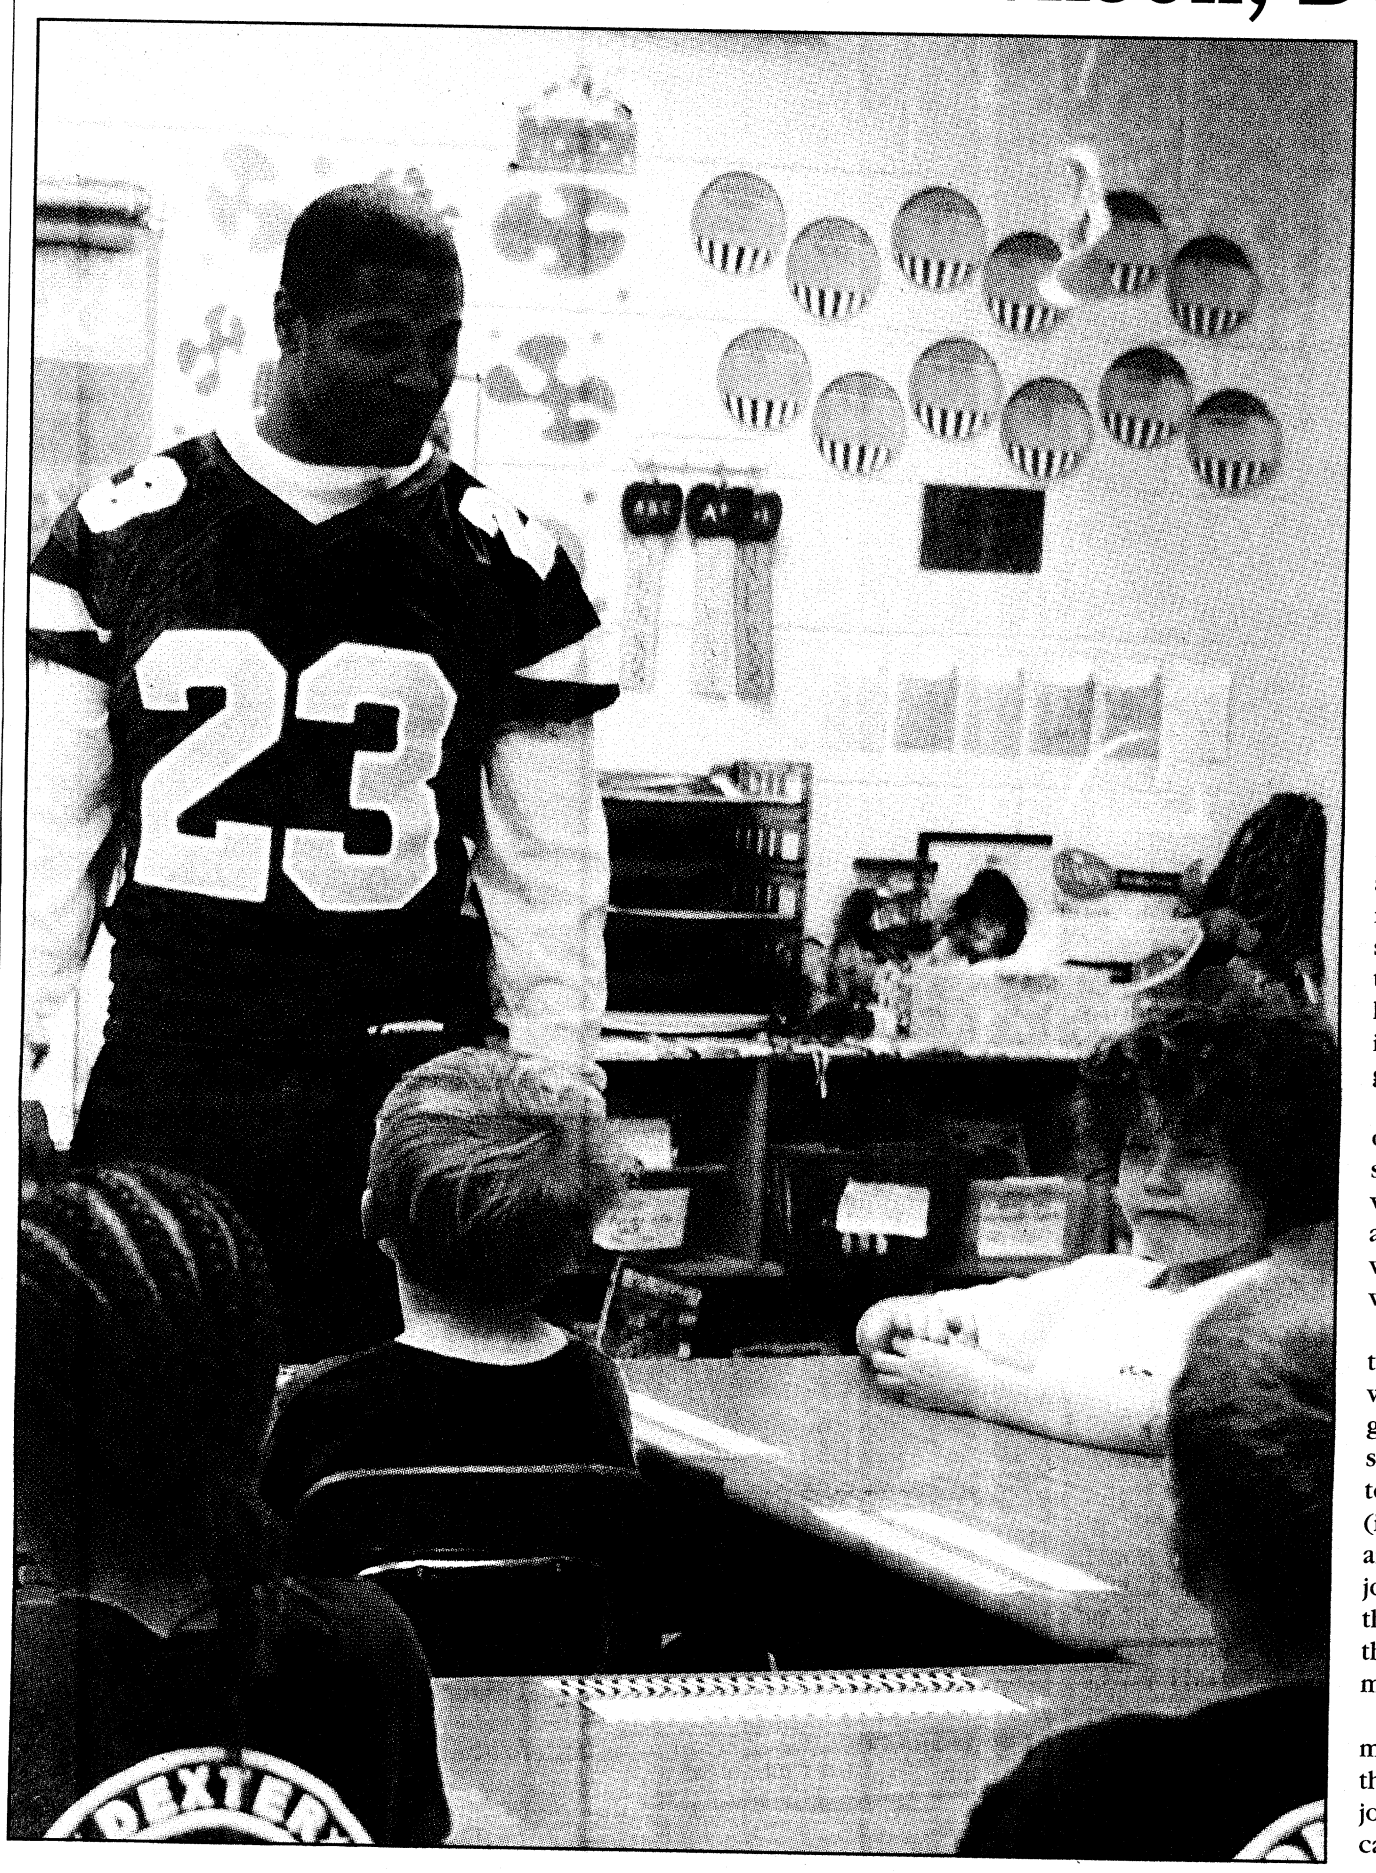

"It could be toilet training, social skills, a variety of challenges the family may be facing," Brown said.

Parents to Teachers will also include play groups for children and meetings for parents to encourage building relationships and sharing information.

Already in place as a pilot initiative at seven other installations, the program came about after research showed families with young children are the most affected by repeat deployments, said Brown, who will head to St. Louis March 22 for a weeklong course about Parent to Teachers.

Columbus Lions visit Wilson, Dexter

Smiles lit up the faces of third-, fourth- and fifth-grade students at Wilson and Dexter schools when Columbus Lions football players visited their classrooms Friday.

"I'd never actually seen a football player before, only on TV," said Andrew Chavez, a fourth-grader at Wilson.

Wide receiver Gerald Gales, defensive lineman Darin Damron, wide receiver Joel Babb and linebacker Ryan Babb shared their experiences with students. They emphasized the importance of setting goals and working hard to achieve them.

"With kids, they believe anything's possible," Damron said. "So that's why I think it's necessary to come into schools and keep telling them they can do it. As long as they keep hearing that you can do it through hard work, they're gonna believe it."

Dr. Renee Mallory, principal of Dexter and Wilson schools, said the Lions' visit was a way of showing students that athletes are regular people who have worked hard to get where they are today.

"For kids who need to learn to dream big and to do their very best, they're looking at guys that have done it," Mallory said. "Since sports figures tend to be sort of idolized, the idea (is to show them) that these are guys who have regular jobs, and yet they are doing this because they enjoy it and they hope to get better and maybe even do it full time."

The Lions spent about 10 minutes in each classroom they visited, sharing anecdotes, joking and relating how they came to play for the Lions.

Fireproof actor talks to wounded vets about marriage

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Soldiers in the Warrior Transition Battalion watched the movie Fireproof and met one of the actors Friday at the Follow Me Chapel on Main Post.

CPT Ken Bevel, who played firefighter Michael Simmons, talked with Soldiers before a showing of the movie, which centers on a firefighter and his wife whose marriage is headed for divorce. Inspired by his father, the husband takes a "dare" to regain the love of his wife.

"We have a heroic population, and we wanted to do what we can for them," said MAJ David Brown, operations officer for the battalion.

Post-traumatic stress disorder and combat stress can be hard on a marriage, Brown said. A movie like Fireproof, which focuses on relationships, is good for both physical and emotional wellbeing.

Before the movie played, Bevel thanked the crowd of wounded warriors and spouses.

"I really deeply appreciate the sacrifices and services each and every one of you have provided for our country," said the Marine of 18 years. "I just want to thank you for allowing me to come up and show the movie. This will bless you. Get your tissue out, because I cried."

Although Bevel had never acted before — except once as a tree in a preschool play — he relied on prayer and patience to play the role. Now he is excited for the opportunity to meet Fort Benning Soldiers and provide them with "another tool in their toolbag" to help in their relationships.

"Family relationships are the foundation of our culture," he said. "All the services always focus on families. This is another one of those tools to help Soldiers … people who leave for nine to 15 months from their spouses and have these extra hardships on their relationships. That's why it's so important to talk with the Soldiers up here because their marriages are worth fighting for."

Filmed in Albany, Ga., by Sherwood Baptist Church, Fireproof reached more than 5 million people in theaters. Although the focus is on marriage, other relationships between coworkers, parents and grown children and friends are explored.

"I thought it was an outstanding movie — something I'm going to have to tell my family and my friends about," said SSG Scheherazade Joyce.

While the movie, which "caught" her in its story, provided some respite from the pain caused by two bulging discs in her neck, it also moved her to tears.

Cheryl Rodewig

"I think we've all gone through everything in that movie, especially me," said Joyce, who married for the second time in August.

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief MSG Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations.

Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

Former pro-baseball player turned Secret Service agent visits Faith

Holtzclaw shares life lessons with AVID students

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Caroline Gotler
Faith Middle School students listen as Secret Service special agent Shawn Holtzclaw speaks about the importance of making good choices.

Shawn Holtzclaw knows a thing or two about the importance of hard work and a positive attitude. It's what he says helped him land two jobs many kids dream about — during the 1990s, playing baseball for the Toronto Blue Jays and now, a Secret Service special agent.

Holtzclaw shared his experiences with Faith Middle School sixth-graders and students in the school's Advancement Via Individual Determination Program Feb. 26.

His goal, he said, was to show students how their attitude and the decisions they make now can affect their lives.

"It's so important to make good decisions now because you don't know what you're going to do down the road," Holtzclaw said. "There were certain things I had to stay out of in order to become a Secret Service agent. I was just glad I was able to overcome some of those negative things early in life."

Holtzclaw's message is especially pertinent to AVID students, said Judy Hight, seventh-grade AVID teacher.

"He's showing the kids that you don't give up, that when you are motivated to do better, you learn from your mistakes and no matter what, you just keep on trying until you become successful," Hight said. "And that's what AVID is — you keep trying, you are successful in the end because you don't give up."

AVID is a nationwide program, as well as in Department of Defense schools in Europe and the Pacific, designed to help middle-performing middle- and high-schoolers prepare for success in college. Students receive instruction in skills such as note taking, time management, and organization, as well as individualized tutoring, and are required to acknowledge responsibility for AVID's extra work when they are accepted into the program. Many AVID students come from families where their parents or other relatives are not college graduates.

"We want them to understand that that does not mean they cannot become college graduates," Hight said. "The goal is that they will attend a four-year university and graduate. There's a lot of commitment in AVID — on the parents' part, on the student's part, and also from the teachers. When all three work together, usually the student will become very successful."

While no high schools in the Columbus area currently offer AVID, approximately 95 percent of all AVID high school graduates enroll in college. Hight said many of her former Faith AVID students say they are planning to go to college.

Like many AVID students, Holtzclaw worked hard to overcome obstacles to achieving his goals. Growing up in a household rife with domestic violence, Holtzclaw said he developed a negative attitude that contributed, in part, to ending his baseball career.

It wasn't until he was a young adult he realized his mistakes and began to take responsibility for them, he said.

"You are going to make mistakes throughout your life, but you don't have to continue to repeat those mistakes and prevent yourself from having a productive life," Holtzclaw said. "Nobody expects you to be perfect, but your teachers and parents all expect you to be successful. You do not have to be a victim of whatever circumstances you face in life."

For seventh-grade AVID student Jacob Bolar, Holtzclaw's message came through loud and clear.

"It takes a lot of education and a lot of lessons to get to where he is in life," Bolar said. "You have to have the will to do something. Your self-confidence and attitude is everything. Even if you don't grow up as the wealthiest kid, you can still come out to be a very good citizen."

"Your attitude is big in your life," said Percy Franklin, a seventh-grade AVID student. "(With the right attitude) you could grow up in a shack house and still become president."

Lions: Focus on goals

of "Hip, hip hooray!" as he entered the room.

"Anything you put your mind to, you can do it right now," he said. "You just need to focus on it, keep it in front of you, keep doing it."

Ryan told students that staying focused on his goals helped him overcome a lapse in his football career and land a spot on the Lions.

"For about a year and a half ... I wasn't able to play because I wasn't picked up by a team," he said. "In my other job, I'm a personal trainer, so I always kept myself around the things of football and around athletes, and they kept me encouraged."

"You've got to get a good education so you can do what you want to do," Babb's brother Joel told students. "The only way you're going to get to that point of being what you want to be in life is by hard work."

Elisabeth Riley, a fourth-grader at Wilson, said the Lions' visit taught her about the value of practice in accomplishing goals.

"I learned that it takes a long time to get something not perfect, but yet good," she said.

For Gales, the chance to affect children in a positive way made his visit worthwhile.

"Any time I can influence a kid, I'm going to take the opportunity to do it," he said. "If I can reach that one kid, I'm excited about that."

Housing: Heed caution before signing, seek SJA aid

have had to deal with losing the homes they were renting when the owners faced foreclosures," said Shawn Walters, housing management specialist, Fort Belvoir. "One good thing for these families is that now the government will move them, that's a big change from the past and is a real help to the families."

An attachment to the Joint Federal Travel Regulations added about five months ago authorizes a local or short-distance move of household goods for service members forced to relocate because the home they were renting is in foreclosure.

Although there are no specific programs to help Soldiers when they are behind in their mortgage, Army Emergency Relief is an avenue for assistance in this tough market, said Dennis Scott, assistant secretary of administration, AER.

"Since the housing market crashed, we are looking at housing differently," he said. "Multiple-home ownership used to be considered a business venture and AER doesn't assistant in that, but now we realize it might be because of an inability to sell in one location."

When applying for assistance at AER, it must be a solution to the problem not a partial fix, Scott said.

"If you need to catch up on your mortgage and once caught up you can continue to pay because of a new job or a raise, that would be a solution. If you have a buyer and need to pay back-payments prior to selling, that would be a solution. These would be good examples of how AER could help," Scott said.

In 2005, AER provided a total of $44 million in assistance; but in 2008, they provided a total of $82.9 million in no-interest loans. The increase is mostly due to the economy, he said.

The president and Congress have not overlooked the unique situation of the Soldier. The new economic stimulus package includes provisions to address service members facing losses in the housing market.

The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 was passed by Congress Feb. 13 and signed into law Feb. 17 by President Barack Obama.

Under the new provision, the government will cover 95 percent of the amount lost when forced to sell. The provision now applies to service members who PCS more than 50 miles outside their current installation and need to sell their homes.

The stimulus package extends the Defense Department's Homeowners Assistance Program by $555 million. Originally HAP was designed to assist Soldiers who face a financial loss when selling a home located in an area where real estate values have declined because of an installation closure or realignment.

The provision does have some limitations. The program only applies to service members who purchased their homes before July 1, 2006, which is roughly the time when the housing market started to decline.

While housing services, AER and Congress have provided some relief and assistance; experts offer caution before entering into any housing contract.

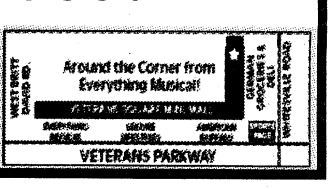

"Pay attention to leases, work with reputable realtors and have the Staff Judge Advocate Office look over all contracts before you sign," Walters said.

Song of praise: Kelley Hill Chapel reopens

Spc. Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The chaplains of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team held worship services Feb. 22 in the Kelley Hill Chapel for the first time in more than two years.

A kick off Celebration of Life concert to rededicate the building with song and praise is 7 p.m. today.

The chapel went through renovations to bring it up to standard since the brigade returned from deployment.

The renovations to the chapel brought the building up to the standards of Fort Benning's fire code, enhanced the look of the sanctuary and improved the sound booth in the building, said SSG Jeremiah Witt, the 3rd HBCT's chaplain's assistant.

The chapel has new carpet in the sanctuary, the pews were refurbished and re-bolted to the floor, new tile and cabinets were put in the social areas, and the old sound booth was replaced with a safer more practical sound booth that the chaplains' assistants can better oversee, Witt said.

The building's first service in two years attracted 20 worshipers.

"I definitely hope that by the time we deploy to NTC (the brigade is scheduled to deploy to the National Training Center in Fort Irwin, Calif., from early July to mid-August) that the congregation will grow," he said. "Over the coming weeks, all of our battalion chaplains will have an opportunity to preach each Sunday."

The senior chaplain of the 3rd HBCT, MAJ David Lile, said the opening of the chapel helps fill the spiritual needs of the 3rd HBCT.

"I think the brigade family needs a dedicated, sacred terrain for their Soldiers," he said. "Our Soldiers and their families have a dedicated place on Kelley Hill to sing and praise together."

SPC Ben Hutto
Chaplain (CPT) Carl Otis, 203rd Brigade Support Battalion, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, leads a song of praise during a worship service at the Kelley Hill Chapel Feb. 22. The service was the first held at the chapel in more than two years.

Educators: provide network for families

"I'm in and out of homes, and I know it can be challenging (for parents)," said Mary Shipp, a training and curriculum specialist with post Family Child Care. "I commend them for the job they do. Children don't come with instructions. This program will be another support system for parents ... another avenue of information to make sure their children are having their developmental needs met."

Shipp will attend the course along with two other parents from Fort Benning who will be certified as parent educators. She will work closely with the parent educators to make sure families are getting the care they need.

Supporting families is an important part of supporting Soldiers, she said.

"The Soldier can't really do his job to the best of his ability unless he knows his family is taken care of," Shipp said. "This is one way we can relieve Soldiers' minds: to know there are people available to give support and encouragement to their families, so they are better able to complete their mission."

For kids, learning responsibility starts with parents

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Over the past two weeks, I've talked about behavioral therapist James Lehman's six steps to help parents teach their children responsibility. Today we conclude with the final two steps:

Accountability: Responsibility should be associated with both rewards and consequences.

It's sometimes helpful for parents to sit with their kids and draw up a list of consequences. How can you hold kids accountable? You can withhold things like electronics. You can assign extra chores or work. You can give them task-oriented consequences. Associate a task with the time the consequence is in play, and at the same time, come up with a list of rewards. We call this a "rewards menu." This shouldn't be limited to spending money or buying things. Does your child like to take walks? Do they like to go to the park? Do they like to play catch? Rewards don't have to be expensive. You just have to use your imagination. For teens, you can let them earn later bedtimes, or more time with their friends. With adolescents, the reward is getting away from you, not being with you.

Tell your kids what you'll do differently: Learning how to meet responsibilities is one of the most important skills kids can acquire when they're young. As they grow older, this learning will snowball and by the time they're adults, they'll have a thorough understanding of the relationship between responsibilities and accountability. When parents decide they're going to start using more responsibility and accountability language when they talk with their kids, they should sit down and clearly state that fact. Calmly explain to your kids individually that you're going to begin pointing out how you expect them to meet responsibilities, and why you feel that's important for them.

With pre-teens and teens, you should have a discussion about why meeting responsibilities is important to success in life. For adults, success could mean a range of things, but to many teenagers and middle schoolers, "not successful" means they're not going to be able to afford an iPod. Explain to them that someday, they will have to provide for themselves all the things you provide for them now, and in order to do that, they will need to meet their responsibilities. Explain the idea with a simple, straightforward talk that tells them why responsibilities are important, and then progresses to the consequences of meeting or not meeting them.

When kids develop personal responsibility, it gives them their best chance to avoid many pitfalls that await them if they're not careful. If they're not aware of what's going on and are ready to take responsible action to deal with it, it makes them less able to deal with problems that surface as they get older. There are those who say you should expect your child to act responsibly. But I say you should require it, even demand it. It's a part of maturing, and it is necessary to learn how to function in an increasingly complex and demanding world.

Are you struggling with your children and responsibility? Or maybe you or your spouse are struggling with some challenging issue. Parenting? Marriage issues? Family issues? Reconnecting after deployment? The Chaplain Family Life Center is here for you and your family. Give us a call and make an appointment today by calling 706-545-1760 or stop by our office at 2606 Dixie Road located in Soldiers' Plaza. We are here to help you with life's journey. Thank you for your service and may God bless you and your family.

Fireproof: Actor emphasizes 'unconditional love'

She married the first time when she was still pretty young, she said. The divorce was hard, but she tries to take lessons learned from the previous relationship to help her in the challenges she faces now.

"I appreciate the actor coming here to speak his words of wisdom," she said. "Seeing it from another perspective and seeing how someone else dealt with it, it just gives you ideas on other avenues of approach to make it work. I feel like I have hope.

"Maybe it's not a matter of this is what God wants you to have, what he doesn't want you to have. Maybe it's just a matter of you finding the right tools to make it work."

As one of those tools, Fireproof is invaluable, said Bevel, who has been married for 12 years.

"This is really critical because it affects the Soldier on the battlefield," he said. "If I know that my family back home is taken care of, and I know that my wife loves me unconditionally, it's easier to fight for my country. But when things are going wrong at home, it's hard for me to focus and concentrate on the mission."

Marriage is struggle for a lot of people in today's society. Many people think "Hey, if it doesn't work out … I'll get someone else," Bevel said, but that shouldn't be the case — it should be unconditional love.

> "The same effort we put in pushing through the objective on the battlefield, we should put into our marriages."
> — Actor and Marine CPT Ken Bevel

"I like to parallel that with being on the battlefield. A Soldier is not going to give up. He's going to continue to push through the objective. And that's the way our marriages should be. The same effort we put in pushing through the objective on the battlefield, we should put into our marriages."

That's the difference between a contract and a commitment, said SGM Jarvis Rosier after watching the movie. "Contracts can be broken; commitments last forever."

Rosier, who has been married for 26 years, said the film was inspirational.

"It's a reminder that marriage is a work in progress," he said. "Like (Bevel) said, there's always something you can work on. I married my high school sweetheart. We've been together for over 30 years. What worked for me 26 years ago in that first year may not work now. When you thought you've tried everything, there's always something you can do better. When you think you've done your best, you can always go a little further."

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

THE BAYONET
MARCH 6, 2009

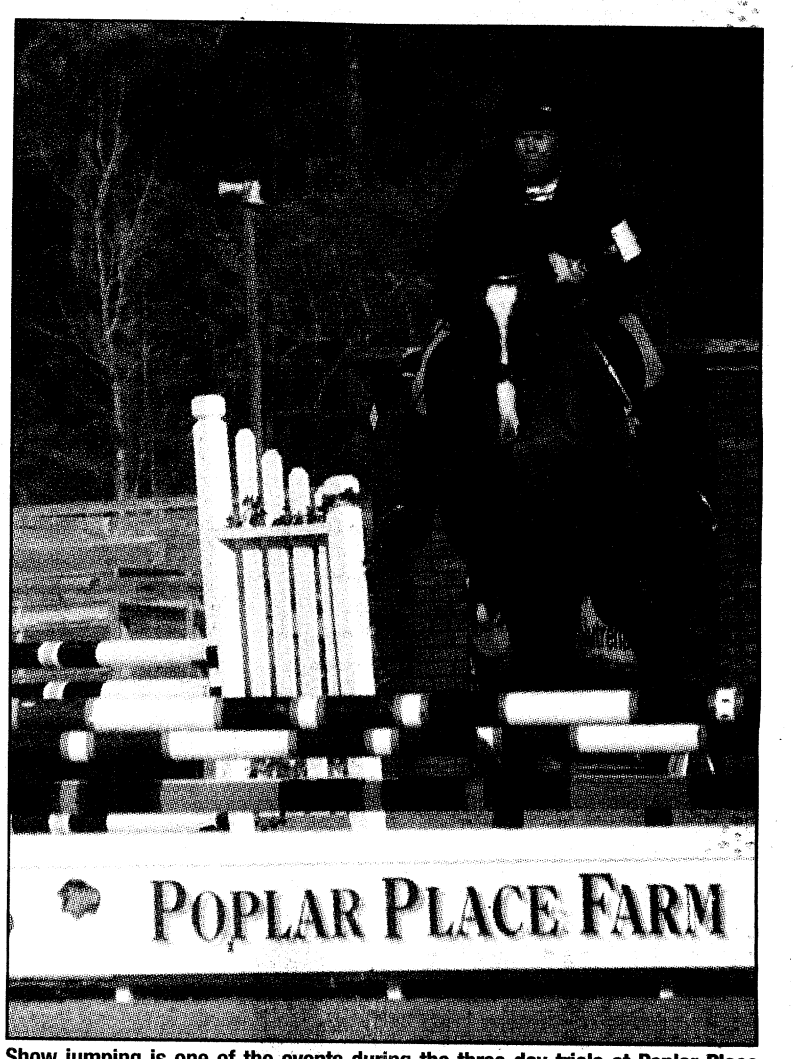

R&R

WWW.THEBAYONET.COM

This horse and rider negotiate a cross country obstacle at the back of the course during the March 2007 Horse Trials. Diana Lewis, who manages the volunteers for the horse shows, said first-time volunteers will be placed with experienced volunteers to learn the ropes. To volunteer, call Lewis at 678-372-6370 or e-mail her at drlewis01@charter.net.

Show jumping is one of the events during the three-day trials at Poplar Place Farm March 27-29.

Horse shows need volunteers

LORI EGAN
The Bayonet

Looking for something to do this weekend? Poplar Place Farm, near Hamilton, Ga., is hosting a schooling show and needs volunteers to scribe for dressage judges and to be gate stewards for both the dressage and show jumping rings. Not sure what this means? Scribes document the judges comments during a dressage competition. And gate stewards open the gates for the horse and rider. Poplar Place Farm is 188-acre equestrian facility approximately 15 miles north of Lowe's on Georgia Highway 27.

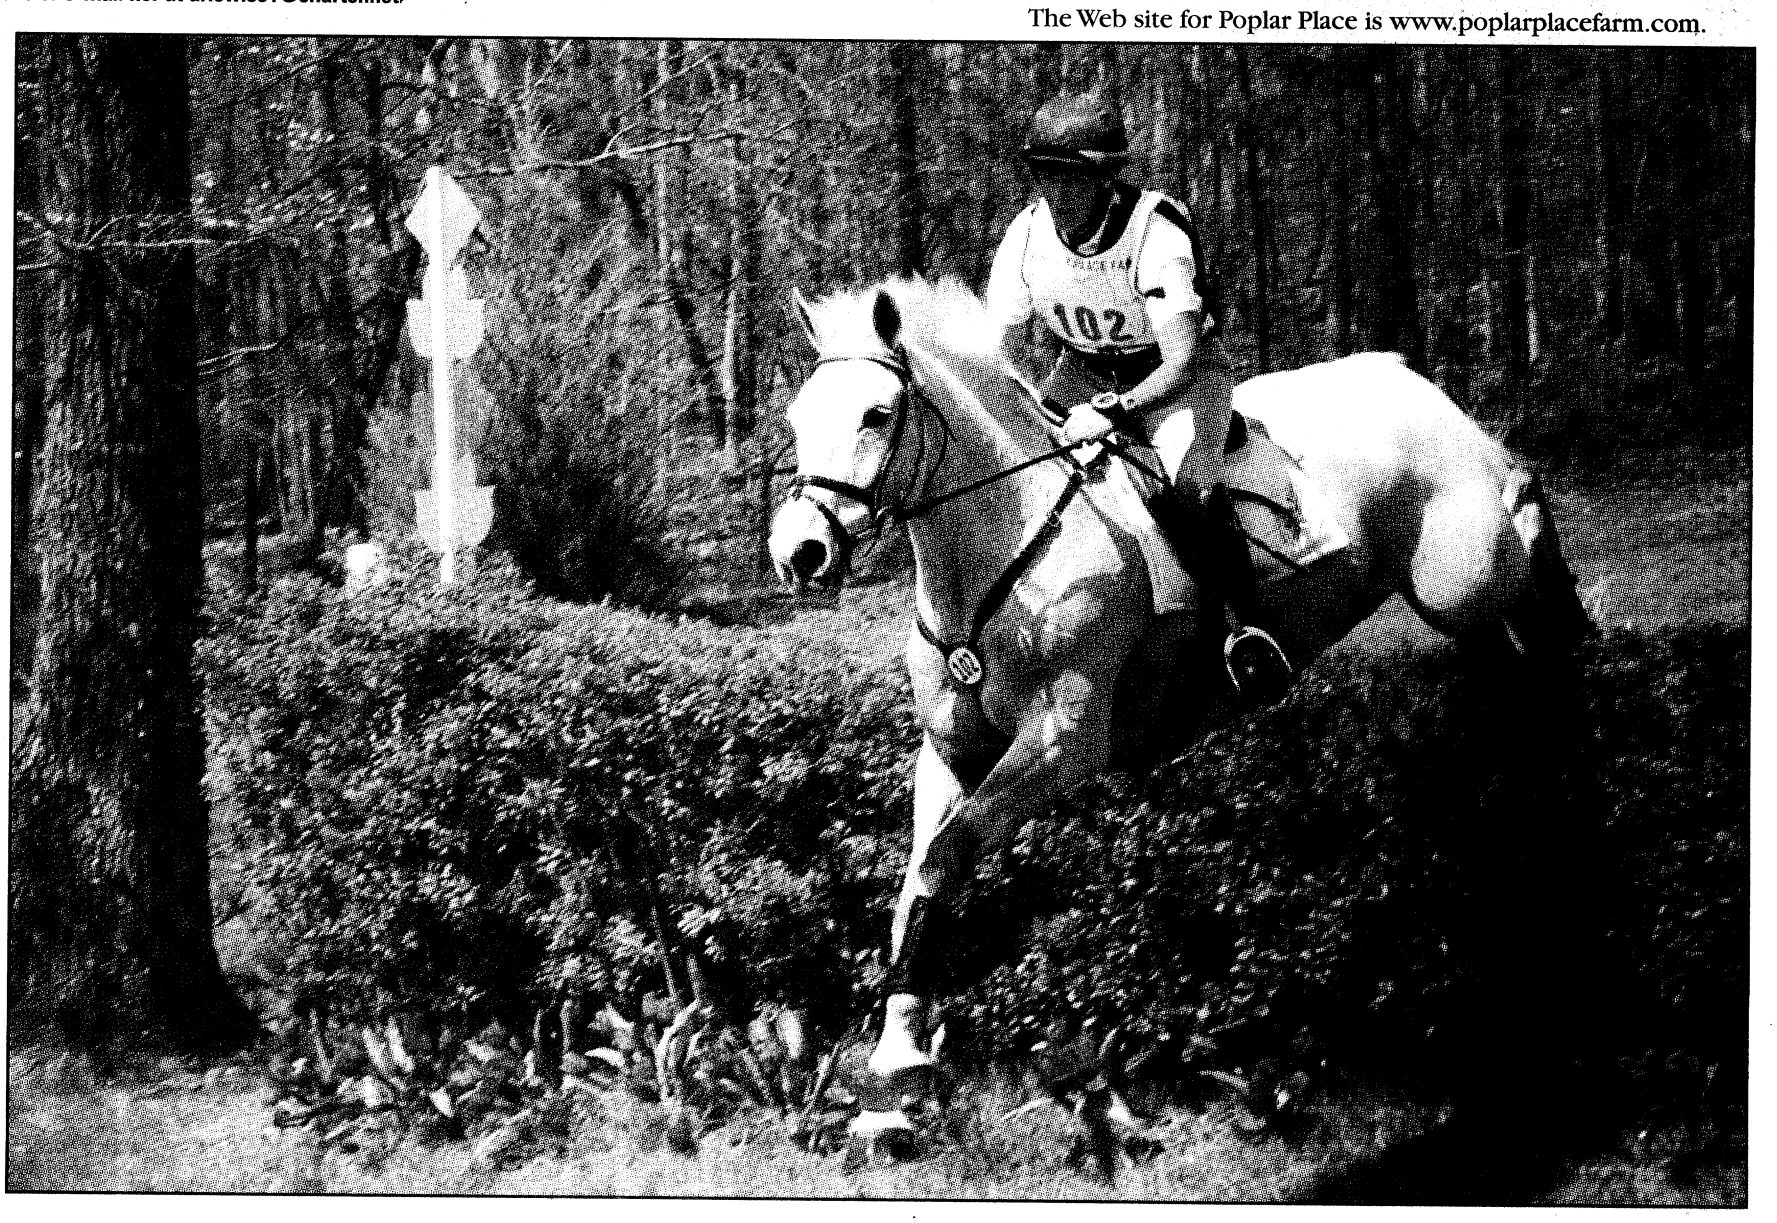

March is a very busy show month at Poplar Place Farm, said Diana Lewis, who manages the volunteers. There's the schooling show this weekend, the following weekend is the first recognized dressage show for the year and then the March Horse Trials are March 27, 28 and 29. The horse trials are a three-day event that features dressage on the first day, followed by cross country and then show jumping.

"Many of our volunteers have Monday through Friday jobs, so staffing on (March 27) can be challenging," she said. "We will need three scribes, warm-up, bit check and in-gate stewards. We will be running Advanced to Beginner Novice on cross country and will need 30 to 40 jump judges on (March 28). I expect it will be a full day as well for show jumping on (March 29). We will need warm-up and gate stewards and jump crew.

"If you have the time, but don't know the details of some of the jobs, just e-mail me and we'll find the right place for you."

For more information, call Lewis at 678-372-6370 or e-mail her at drlewis01@charter.net.

The Web site for Poplar Place is www.poplarplacefarm.com.

Jump judges should plan on arriving early (tentatively 6:30 a.m.) for their jump assignment, coffee and doughnuts and jump judge briefing, said Diana Lewis. Check the weather and bring appropriate attire (coat, rain poncho, sunscreen, etc.). Bring a comfortable chair. If the weather is not favorable, then it is possible vehicles will be allowed on the course. "We hope to have enough volunteers to place at least two at each jump," Lewis said. Poplar Place will offer a schooling show April 4 and a dressage show April 18-19. Volunteers will be needed for these events also. The Web site is www.poplarplacefarm.com.

AER: Soldiers helping Soldiers

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's Army Emergency Relief fundraising campaign kicked off last week.

"AER belongs to the Army Family," said MG Michael Barbero, post commanding general. "This annual campaign is an opportunity for us to help our own.

"AER is one of the best programs we have to meet the financial emergencies of our Soldiers, family members, retirees, widows and orphans — it's also an excellent source of education scholarships for spouses and children of Army personnel."

Last year on Fort Benning, AER provided $2.9 million in assistance to 2,365 cases, a monetary increase of 32 percent over 2007.

If there's a way to assist a Soldier, the staff at Fort Benning's Army Emergency Relief will find it.

"We're here to assist them," said Donna Carter, AER specialist. "It's an organization they know they Progress continues as occupants of Infantry Hall continue to move to other locations because of the building's renovation. The swing space moves are on schedule, said Jay Brown, Fort Benning's BRAC program manager.

The commanding general and his staff will move to Building 35 March 23, and as Ridgway Hall becomes the interim headquarters building, the cannon will be moved and reveille and retreat will occur there. The Follow Me Statue will be removed from in front of Infantry Hall today for placement at Ridgway Hall.

Some occupants of Infantry Hall have already moved.

Donovan Research Library moved to the site of the old post exchange, in Building 9230 on Marne Road. The hours of operation are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. The NCO Academy moved to the site of the old Airborne Shoppette, buildings 1710, 1712, 1713 and 73. The Directorate of Intelligence and Security is now in Building 468 on Ingersoll Street.

More modular buildings arrived this week to house the Directorate of Operations and Training. It's moving to Gardner Field, which is directly behind Meloy Hall.

National Infantry Museum's Soldier Center opens Thursday

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The Soldier Center, part of the new National Infantry Museum at Patriot Park, will open at 5 p.m. Thursday, three months before the museum's grand opening June 19.

The center includes the lobby, gift shop, 292-seat IMAX Theater with a screen five stories high and the Fife and Drum Restaurant, a Revolutionary-themed American bistro.

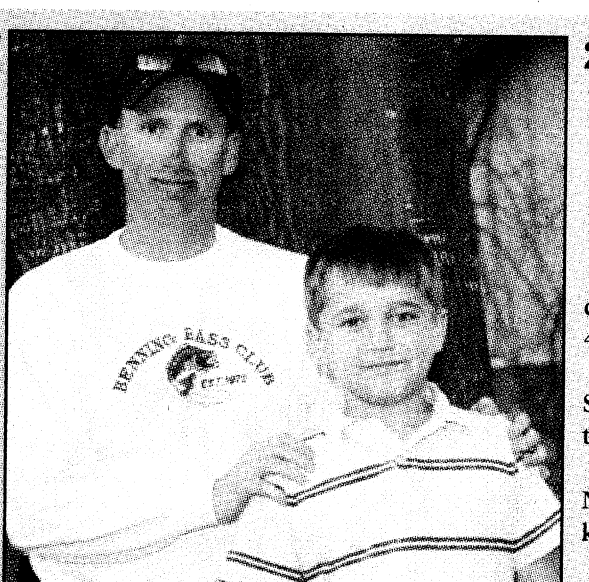

The day will kick off with a Sky Soldier show at 10 a.m. The show is a re-enactment of helicopter air mobile operations in Vietnam. The Sacred Soil Ceremony, narrated by actor Sam Elliott, who played CSM Basil Plumley in the film We Were Soldiers, will follow the aerial

1SG to donate kidney to 10-year-old

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

"Selfless" is how Rebecca Story describes 1SG Corey Myers, C Company, 4th Ranger Training Battalion.

Myers is going to donate a kidney for Story's 10-year-old son, Nicholas. The transplant is scheduled for April.

In 2006, a sports physical revealed Nicholas had an underdeveloped kidney, which stunted his growth.

"When I found out, I was a basket case," his mother said. "I was scared. The doctor told me we had six weeks before he had to go on dialysis.

"I was shocked. Up until that point, I had an absolutely healthy child and I kept thinking 'how come someone didn't see this sooner?' It was so hard to explain the situation to Nicholas and explain to him that he couldn't play football because of it."

The Storys took Nicholas to Children's Healthcare of Atlanta at Egleston. There they found out Nicholas' kidney function was at 27 percent — dialysis would start at 10 percent.

The Storys opted for a kidney

VARIOUS VOICES

This is the second Friday the 13th in two months. What are your superstitions?

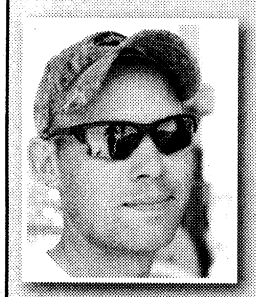

I don't step on cracks in the sidewalk, and if you sweep over someone's foot with a broom I follow the idea that you have to spit on the person's foot. I don't know why, I was just raised that way.

— SPC Melinda Corriete
988th Military Police Company

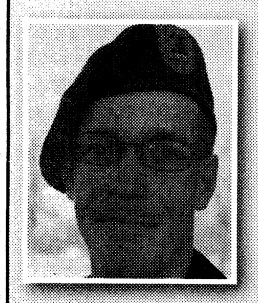

I stay home on Friday the 13th and don't go anywhere except to church. I stayed home last month. This month, I'll be out of town, but I'm not going to be traveling that day.

— Verna Clemons
Retirement Services

If I have what I consider to be a lucky day, I look at how I put my socks on that day and which ones I wore, and then I try to repeat that the next day.

— SSG Todd Pace
Army Marksmanship Unit

I don't like to cross a black cat on Friday the 13th. It was a crummy day when I ran across one on Friday the 13th a couple years ago.

— SPC Andrew Parker
11th Engineer Battalion

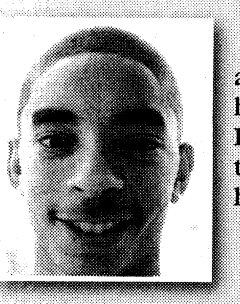

I cut off the neck strap tie from my cap when I was in Iraq, and I wear it around my wrist for good luck. I cut it off during my first deployment and I didn't get hit, and I cut it off again during my second deployment and I didn't get hit, so I wear the strap around my wrist for luck.

— SPC Richard Lantz
11th Engineer Battalion

I'm not superstitious, but I wear my grandmother's ring for good luck. She wore it her entire life, and it was the first ring my grandfather ever gave her when she was 18.

— Jennifer Mabrouk
Family member

My dad's really superstitious about walking under ladders and having umbrellas open in the house. I'm not superstitious, so I do those things all the time. He gets mad if he sees me doing it.

— Nikco Slaughter
SFC Paul R. Smith Fitness Center

Caroline Gotler

Superstitious or just plain crazy?

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

My father can't leave the house without shaking the door handle at least three times to make sure it's locked. At the post office, he's one of those people who have to peer inside the mailbox's drop slot to make sure his letter actually made it in. But he's not as bad as my friend who kisses her hand and touches her car's ceiling when she runs a yellow light, or my fiancé who has to eat his M&Ms in a certain order.

In the past, these practices would have been known as superstitions. Today, they're just labeled as obsessive-compulsive.

Although my mother claims I was afraid of the date Friday the 13th as a kid (I have no recollection of this), I don't consider myself a superstitious person. Walking under a ladder isn't going to ruin my day, and I really don't care whether the number of blue M&Ms in my lunch equals the number of red ones. I can go through a day with a clear mind and a smile on my face, even if I break a mirror, open an umbrella indoors, or spill salt at the table without throwing a handful over my left shoulder to ward off evil spirits. Silliness, if you ask me.

But all this silliness has a real impact. According to an article on the National Geographic Web site, between $800 and $900 million in business is lost each Friday the 13th because of people who are afraid to fly, make purchases, or otherwise go about business as usual. Donald Dossey, founder of the Stress Management and Phobia Institute in Asheville, N.C., estimates Friday the 13th phobia affects between 17 and 21 million Americans. Who knew there were that many paraskevidekatriaphobics out there?

So just where does all this fear come from? According to National Geographic, Friday the 13th got its bad rap from a combination of biblical and mythical references. In a Norse myth, 12 gods were having a dinner party when a 13th god arrived uninvited and shot the god of joy and gladness, causing the Earth to darken. In the Bible, Cain is believed to have slain Abel on Friday the 13th. And according to numerologists, 12, not 13, is considered a "complete" number.

If you have any doubt whether we've managed to put Norse superstitions behind us, just take a look at the elevator buttons next time you're in a tall building. Fear of 13 is so ingrained that it's purposely left out of many buildings. And if you're brave enough to fly on Friday the 13th, chances are you won't leave from the 13th gate, since many airports don't have one.

I've always thought of the practice of skipping from 12 to 14 as more of a Band-Aid than a solution. In reality, the 14th floor is still the 13th floor, but with a more palatable label.

But then again, who am I to judge? After all, I'm the one who hangs out with people who believe in this stuff. And that makes me just as crazy.

Are you missing out on rest of world?

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

I talked myself into it.

Actually, I wrote myself into it. After doing a couple articles for the paper about the International Student Training Detachment and its need for student sponsors, I convinced myself. Maybe hosting a student would be an amazing experience, like other sponsors said it was. Maybe it'd be something I would remember for the rest of my life. What was I missing?

So, last fall I called Mary Renteria with ISTD. Next thing I knew, my husband, James, and I were at a meet-and-greet with people from all over: Norway, Egypt, Sri Lanka, Belize and Romania. The students are here to study military training and tactics with the U.S. Army. A few even brought their families.

Mingling with the crowd, we couldn't help but notice the Kuwaharas. They were the only ones there with kids — a darling 6-month-old baby and a precocious 3-year-old boy.

We chatted for a while. The couple recently arrived from Japan with their two children. They told us about their fondness for Tokyo and how they first met; we told them about how we met and what brought us to Columbus.

Some minor confusion over language wasn't a "barrier" at all, but rather an excuse for candor. We can relate over the simplest things and, as we've gotten to know each other better, keep finding out more and more that we have in common.

No matter what you might think, sponsoring a student isn't hard at all. You don't need to spend a lot of money, and you don't need to have a big house. You just need a little bit of time and, maybe, a spirit of adventure.

We hang out with the family as our schedules permit, sometimes just having dinner and playing a game, sometimes heading farther afield to an attraction in the area. We're also an e-mail or phone call away if they need anything, like recommendations about local businesses or a ride somewhere in town.

The funny thing is, even though we're the ones volunteering, we feel like we're being rewarded far more than the little we give.

We've become friends with two exciting and engaging people. We've learned about a completely different culture that fascinates us, so much so that we hope to visit Japan someday. We've also been introduced to a larger circle of acquaintances that includes students from around the world and many of their hosts.

It's only a commitment of about six months. A new class will be here this May, about the time we'll have to say goodbye to the Kuwahara family. We'll be sad to see them go, but for such a short time, it has made a world of difference in our lives.

That's why I invite you to give hosting a try. I assure you, James and I are as frantically over-scheduled as any other American couple, but we always find time … the way busy people always can find time for friends.

Call Renteria at 706-575-8511 or ISTD commander CPT Jared Ferguson at 706-575-8510 to find out how you can meet some people who will touch your life and charm you, just like the Kuwaharas did for us.

Until you've laughed over the odd taste of another culture's "dessert," until you've visited a foreign town — via Google Earth — with a native tour guide, until you've taught the word "candle" to a wide-eyed little boy who's learning English and seen his delight … well, you really just don't know what you're missing.

AMU shooters take aim at excellence

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Champions live and work right on Fort Benning.

At the Army Marksmanship Unit, which calls itself "Home of Champions," it's not unusual for a Soldier to hold multiple Olympic, national and world titles. In fact, as one of the unit's three missions — to win competitions; to provide research, development and training; and to assist with recruiting and public relations — winning is part of an AMU Soldier's job description.

Since its creation in 1956, AMU members of have won hundreds of individual and team national titles, more than 40 world championships and 23 Olympic medals.

That level of excellence doesn't happen by accident, said Bob Aylward, AMU's executive officer.

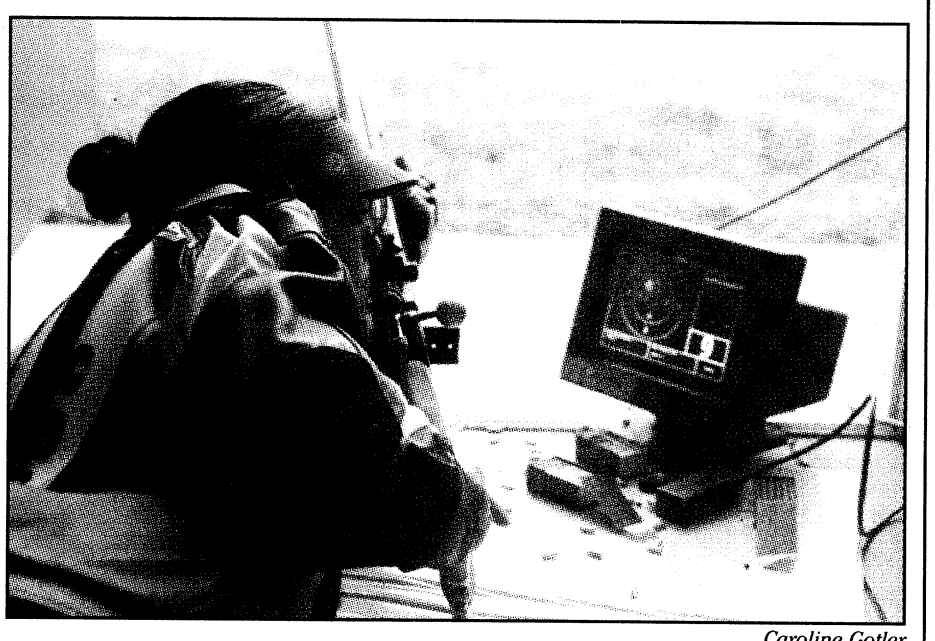

"To make it into AMU, you need to train for several hours a day, about five days a week for about 10 years in order to get up to that level of competition," he said. "Most people here are three- or four-time All-American college athletes. For every 100 people who want to join AMU, there's maybe one spot."

AMU is made up of six teams that specialize in a different event — international rifle, international pistol, service rifle, service pistol, shotgun and action shooting — as well as a staff of Soldiers and Department of the Army Civilians who work in AMU's gun shop and provide administrative support.

Many AMU shooters, like SFC Charles Coffey, NCOIC for the shotgun team, have been practicing the sport for as long as they can remember.

"I started shooting with my father when I was eight years old," he said. "I've been shooting with AMU since 1995. I started out doing service rifle, then moved to service pistol, the gun shop and now shotgun. It's been a great experience and I've learned something new in every discipline I've gotten involved in."

Coffey's work has paid off in the form of numerous awards, including a President's Hundred tab, an honor given to no more than 100 Soldiers and civilians each year who place in the top 10 percent at the President's Rifle and Pistol Match..

Caroline Gotler
SGT Nicole Cooper, member of AMU's international rifle team, checks her shots on a screen

"It's really been a privilege and an honor to be a part of Army marksmanship," Coffey said.

Even though competitive shooting is an individual event, AMU members work together as a team, said SFC Theresa Dewitt, member of the shotgun team. Her credentials include four national records, 10 world championship teams, a spot on the 1996 Olympic shotgun team and a gold medal at the 2008 World Cup in Kerrville, Texas.

"We shoot our individual scores, but at the same time because we train as a team, we help each other out and try to make each other better," she said. "A lot of us have trained together for so long that we can say to someone 'Hey you look like you're leaning pretty far forward, what's up?'"

For Dewitt, challenging herself to improve is a constant motivating factor.

"I think the hardest thing about shooting with AMU is just always trying to do better than last time," she said. "It's never enough to win the last match, because you want to win the next one and you want to shoot better than you did before, and here you have the opportunity to perfect your game."

AMU shooters spend an average three to four hours training each day. The rest of their time is devoted to equipment maintenance, physical training, administrative duties, traveling to and from competitions and training other Soldiers.

"We travel to other installations for training dozens of times each year," Aylward said. "We feel that what we can add to the Army is to provide instruction through world-class teachers, and hopefully leave our Soldiers a little better at marksmanship."

In addition to training champions, AMU also provides the Army with a gun shop staff who is constantly working to anticipate and meet the Army's future weapons needs.

"We want try to think of the answers before the Army even thinks of the question," Aylward said. "When they come to us asking us to develop something, we'll already have it and have tested it."

The opportunity to use top-of-the line equipment and shoot against some of the best marksmen in the world is what drew Dewitt to AMU, she said.

"I wanted to make the Olympic team and the Army was the best way for me to do that," she said.

Although AMU shooters are devoted to their training, their duties to the Army and to their fellow Soldiers remain their first priority, Coffey said.

"We're Soldiers first," he said. "We're ambassadors not only of the sport, but of the Army as well."

75TH RANGER REGIMENT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Eleven Rangers from 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment were honored in a ceremony Feb. 27 for their heroic actions in combat Oct. 4-5, 2008. They were recognized for a deliberate raid mission in Northern Iraq.

Elements of 3rd Bn., operating as part of a joint special operations task force, conducted several weeks of reconnaissance and surveillance prior to the Oct. 4 mission, leading to a series of raids targeting senior leadership for Al Qaeda in Iraq. The mission lasted several hours and resulted in the attack of 15 objectives, the capture of 30 detainees and the deaths of six enemy terrorists.

According to the award's citation, SSG Brett Krueger, a squad leader, led an assault on armed enemy combatants resulting in destruction of enemy fighters, facilitating casualty evacuation and saving the lives of three wounded Rangers. Krueger received a Bronze Star Medal for Valor.

Several Rangers received gold coins on behalf Sweden's government.

Elements of 3rd Bn., deployed to Afghanistan conducted 63 missions killing or capturing 143 enemy insurgent leaders. Elements deployed to Iraq conducted 418 missions, capturing or killing 217 high-value enemies.

The following Rangers were also awarded the Bronze Star Medal for Valor:

SFC Tyson C. Crosby for braving enemy fire from close range and imminent threats from multiple locations, saving the lives of three wounded Rangers.

SFC Paul B. Johnston III for leading an assault and braving heavy enemy fire from close range and imminent threats from multiple locations. He assisted in the evacuation of multiple casualties.

SSG Mark A. Williams led his squad in isolating the target building for an assault on five heavily armed enemy combatants, saving the lives of three wounded Rangers.

CPL Andrew C. Nicol for tactical aggressiveness, selflessness, and discipline.

The following Rangers were awarded the Bronze Star Medal for their actions:

WHINSEC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

For the first time, Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation's Counterdrug Operations Course conducted its river operations training under the guidance of the Navy at the Naval Small Craft Instruction and Technical Training School last week at Stennis Space Center in Mississippi.

"It is not something we can replicate at Fort Benning," said SGM Jaime Garza, WHINSEC Operations sergeant major. "Our Soldiers were at a good level (of training) when they got there, but they improved with every mission."

Previously, the course had incorporated riverine operations in the regular course of instruction using Army assault boats on the Chattahoochee River.

This time, they were on the Pearl River, which forms one of the boundaries of the Space Center.

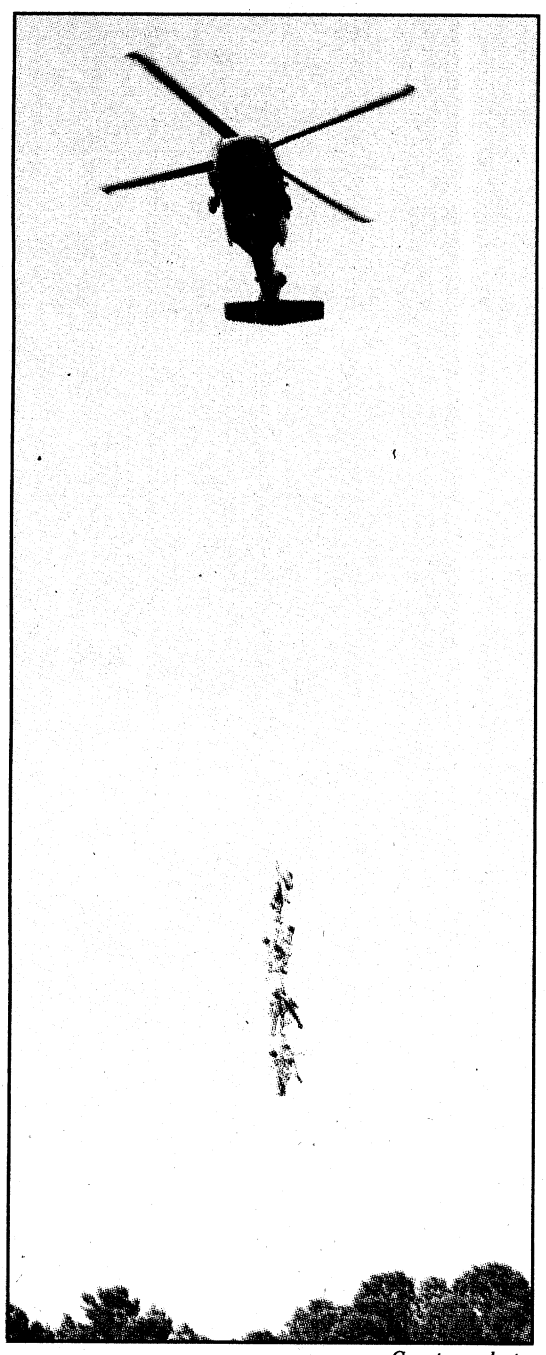

"From NAVSCIATTS's point of view, this was a win-win training event," said CPO José (Fred) Rangel, chief instructor for the training. "We had 23 students from 13 different countries, and they got very realistic training, providing the WHINSEC students the river movement part of their mission. This was the 'pilot' course, or the first time, but it went very smoothly, thanks to the coordination done by WHINSEC sergeants who came down ahead of the class."

"The training went very well because it achieved all the objectives and more," said Colombian National Police SFC Hernan Zambrano, a guest instructor at WHINSEC and on the faculty for the Counterdrug Course. "I would have liked the class to have even more opportunity to plan and practice the riverine part.

"The terrain in Mississippi made the training realistic, and the students liked that. Their motivation brought our training to a new level. Usually, (in the course) we only get to operations at the platoon level; at Stennis, we were able to do a company mission."

The seven-week Counterdrug Operations Course develops expertise among those militaries and law enforcement organizations in the battle against narco-trafficking, focusing on the manufacturing and transporting aspects of that fight. This particular course has 59 students from 10 countries: Belize, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, and Peru.

Recon course teaches leadership, communication

Students in class 12-08 of the Reconnaissance and Surveillance Leaders Course perform Fast Rope Insertion and Extraction training in September. RSLC familiarizes students with FRIES, Special Patrol Insertion and Extraction System and air mobile and airborne operations, as well as operating radio systems and gathering intelligence. The course lasts 26 days and combines field and classroom work.

THE BAYONET

It's not often that Soldiers, Navy Seals and Marines are all on the same team, but at the Reconnaissance and Surveillance Leaders Course, cooperation across military branches is all in a day's work.

RSLC, led by the Ranger Training Brigade, is a 26-day course teaching skills such as observation and reporting, in-depth planning, surveillance site construction, and use of radio and cameras. Training is divided between classroom instruction and hands-on work in the field.

"It's a special set of skills they're not going to get anywhere else in the Army," said CPT Brian Canny, executive officer for D Company, 4th Ranger Training Battalion.

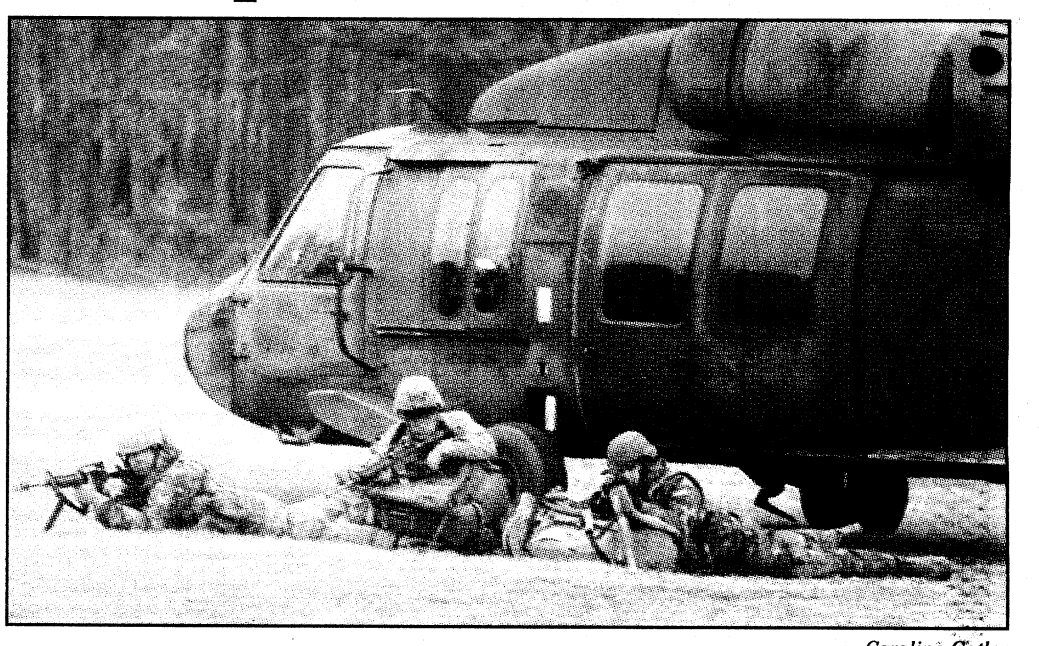

Soldiers in grades E-4 and above in Infantry and Field Artillery units, as well as units that work closely with Infantry and Field Artillery, are eligible to attend, as are service members from other branches involved in reconnaissance and surveillance operations. Soldiers in grade E-3 may apply through a waiver process. While being Airborne or Ranger qualified is not a prerequisite, RSLC students must have a current Ranger physical exam.

After completing RSLC, service members return to their units better able to contribute to intelligence missions at the battalion level, and can teach others what they've learned, Canny said.

"We get a wide spectrum of guys coming in here," he said. "There's a little bit of cross-leveling of experience and information across the branches that everybody's sharing while they're here. So something a guy from Marine Reconnaissance or Navy Seals or Special Forces or Ranger Regiment knows, a guy from the 3rd Infantry Division can also pick up on and take back and share with his unit."

For SSG Eric Henne, 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., training with members of other military branches and branches of the Army was a highlight of the course.

"People ... get all these mind sets in their heads about the Navy or the Marines, but when you all come together, it's like you become that tight team and you form that bond," he said. "You start sharing stories about how you train and do things differently. It makes it so you're not so narrow-minded."

Caroline Gotler

Soldiers take up positions on the ground after returning from FRIES and SPIES training at RSLC March 3.

Navy Ensign Jose Sanchez, Seal Team 3, called RSLC an "eye-opening" experience.

"One of the main reasons why I came was to see how the Army operates," he said. "A lot of things we have in common, but some of the terms are different and that takes a little while to get used to. But once you do, you see things are really similar. Overall, you have kind of the same missions planning and execution processes."

For SPC Travis Kittleson, 82nd Airborne Division, RSLC was an opportunity to gain valuable leadership experience.

"This is a good class for soon-to-be NCOs," he said. "This course is great at teaching leadership skills on top of the recon skills they give you. While we were out in the field, I was a team leader and assistant team leader, so I took control of the patrol and led them myself."

Although Fort Benning is the Army's only RSLC site, other installations can reap its benefits thanks to RSLC's mobile unit training, where teams of RSLC instructors travel to an installation.

"Instead of them having to pay to send all their folks out here, which is probably more cost prohibitive to them, we can go to them," said 1SG Paul Bailey, D Company, 4th Ranger Training Battalion. "We can train almost twice as many guys ... being able to go there and take the course on the road as opposed to them coming here."

RSLC instructors also act as observers and controllers for units training to deploy to Iraq or Afghanistan at the Army's National Training Center and Joint Readiness Training Center.

"Reconnaissance is such a small asset within the Army that a lot of the observers and controllers at NTC and JRTC don't have the experience that we have," Canny said. "So we go in there and get the unit up to speed on reconnaissance assets."

There are nine RSLC classes set for 2009, and RSLC leaders are aiming to fill all of the 82 slots available in each class.

"With the Army focusing more on reconnaissance over the last five years or so, it's a good course for guys to come through and learn those skills," he said.

demonstration.

The ceremony will feature descendents and participants from major American wars who will sprinkle soil from the battlegrounds of Yorktown, Antietam, Soissions, Normandy, Corregidor, Korea, Vietnam and Iraq and Afghanistan, said MG(R) Jerry White, chairman of the National Infantry Museum Foundation.

"When Soldiers graduate, they will walk across the soil where their forefathers fought and many of them died," White said.

The soil will be preserved in glass containers placed in granite pavers on the parade field, south of the museum. All basic training graduations, beginning with B Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, will take place on the parade field at Patriot Park.

The keynote speaker for the graduation will be CSM Marvin Hill, senior enlisted advisor to GEN David Petraeus. After the graduation, graduates and their families are invited to eat lunch on the museum grounds.

Visitors can also tour World War II Street, a replication of a company street from the 1940s.

The area includes the original temporary buildings that Soldiers trained and lived in, said Mike Criscillis, interim director for the National Infantry Museum.

The buildings, some built to last only 15 years to meet mobilization needs, include barracks, a mess hall, a chapel, an orderly room, supply room and the headquarters and sleeping quarters used by GEN George S. Patton before his deployment in 1941 to North Africa.

Younger generations would learn a wealth of information "if the walls could talk," Criscillis said.

In a way, they will. Audio recordings will play in each room. In the barracks, people will hear Soldiers joking and reading letters from home. In the mess hall, they'll be greeted with the din of a lunch in progress and even the smell of food.

"It's what it would be like if you walked into the orderly and the first sergeant and the company commander were discussing training," Criscillis said. "You're going to smell coffee brewing. Everything, except the uniforms, is authentic. (Visitors) will have a different perspective, and it will bring back a lot of memories for the veterans."

A living history docent will conduct guided tours and answer questions.

"It'll be like walking through a company street in the 1940s," White said. "It all ties together. People want to get a feel for the history of their country, and that's the 234-year history of Soldiers. We had Soldiers before we had a country.

"The whole purpose of this project is to educate the American people on the sacrifices of Soldiers and to thank Soldiers for their service. We want people to understand that freedom is not free. Everybody needs to come and see this ... They will come back time and time again."

The films Everest and Mysteries of Egypt will play in the IMAX Theater at 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. respectively. The Dark Knight will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. The Soldier Center will remain open to the public through the museum's official opening in June, when the artifact galleries will be complete.

transplant instead of dialysis and Nicholas was put on a waiting list.

"I was nervous when I first found out I would have to get a transplant because I was wondering how you get the kidney and how they put it in your body," Nicholas said.

A year ago, Myers found out Nicholas needed a transplant. His son is Nicholas' friend.

"I was excited when I found out Jacob's dad was going to donate his kidney — I never thought one of my friend's dads would do that for me," Nicholas said. "I'm so happy for the help."

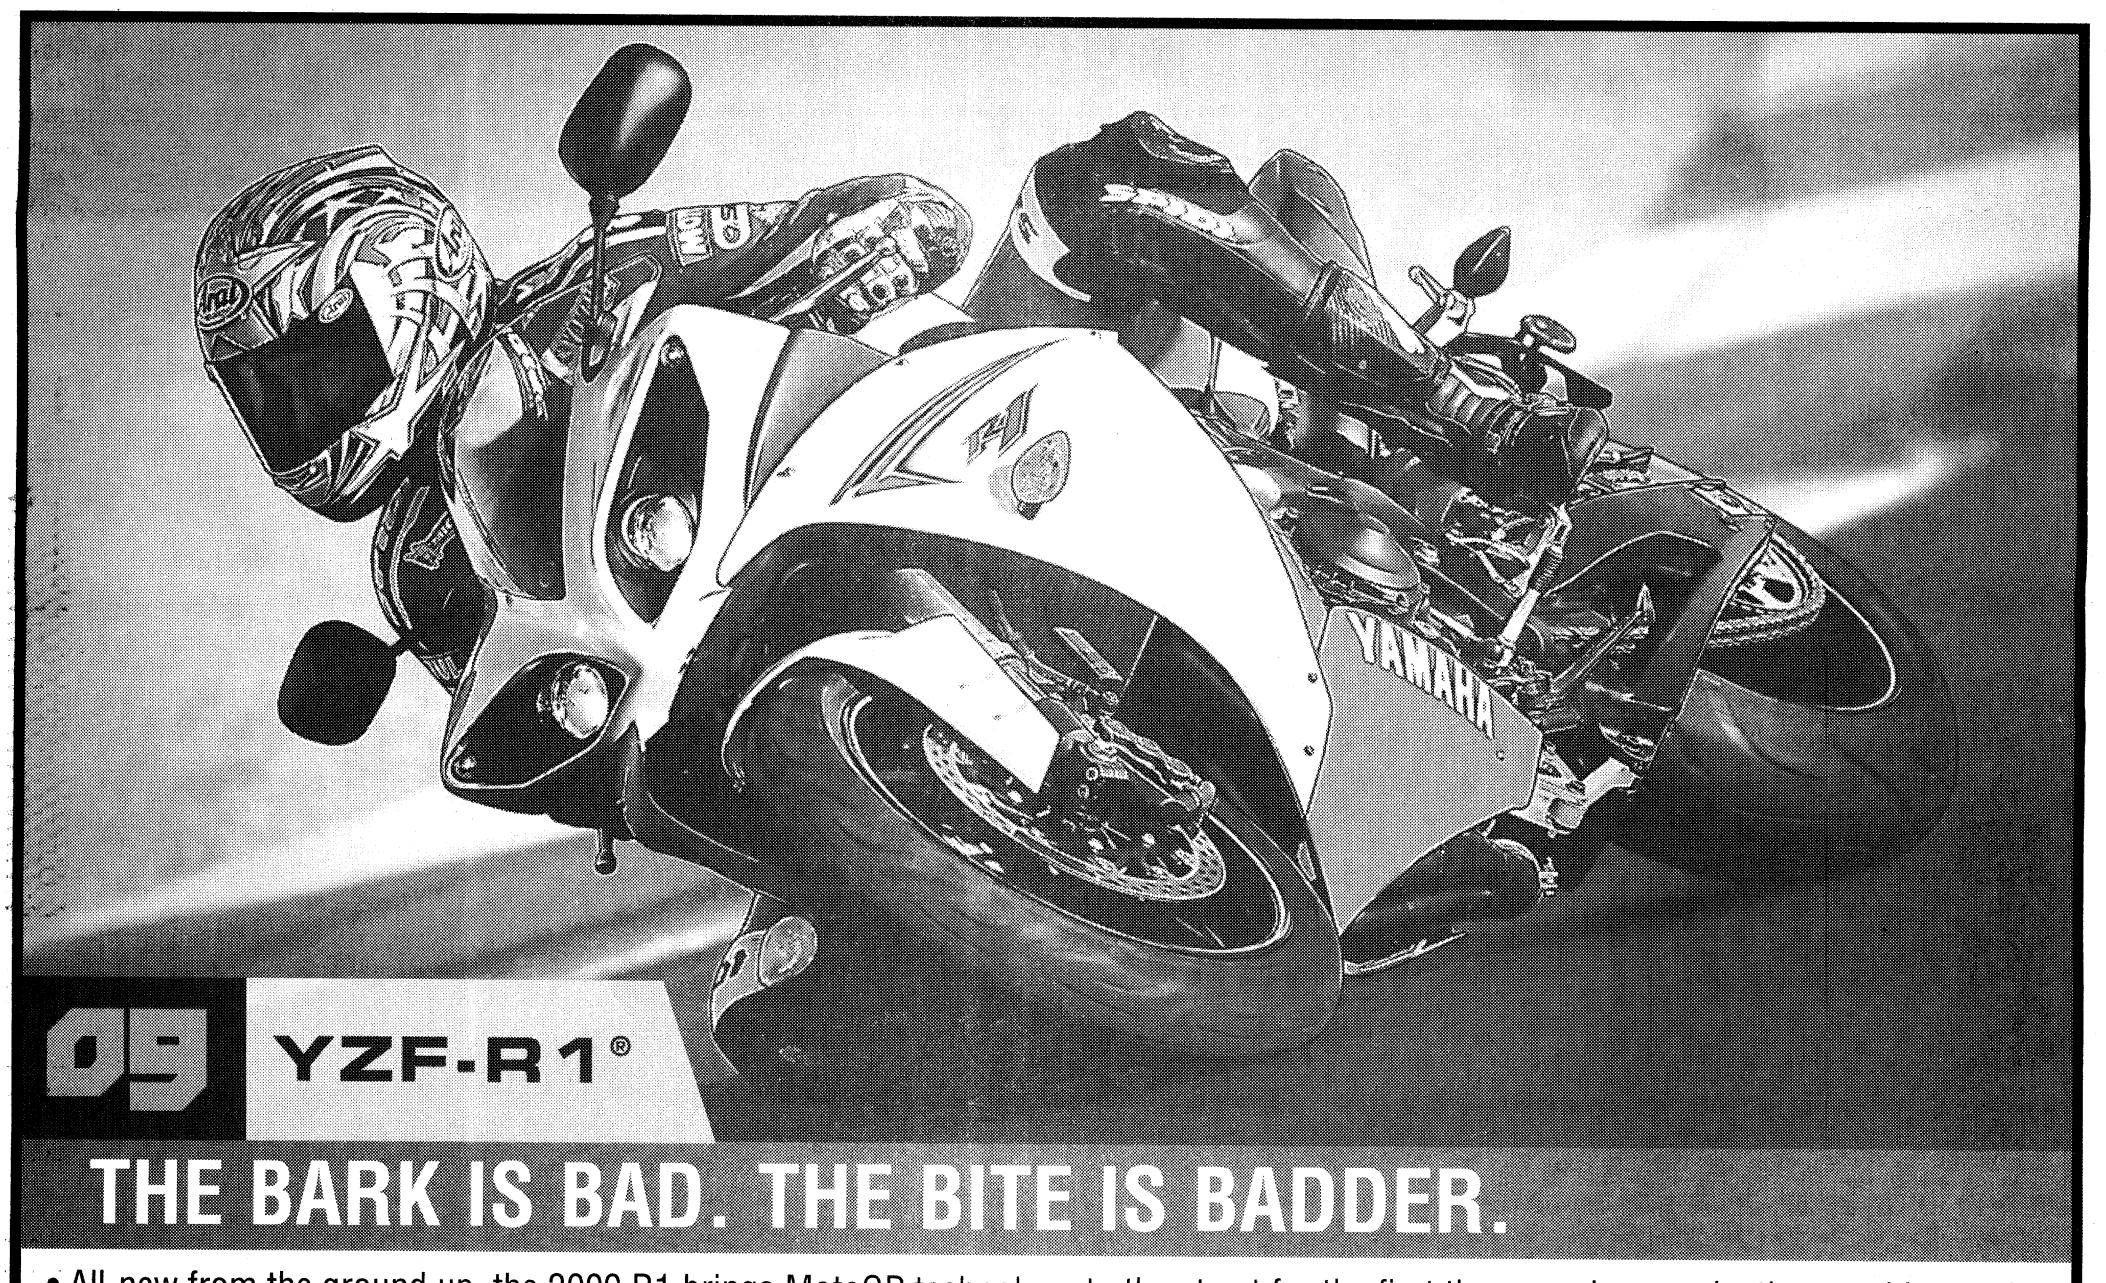

In preparation for the transplant, Nicholas is on a strict diet. He can't have chocolate, bananas, broccoli, high-sodium cereals or peanuts — any foods high in sodium, phosphorous and potassium. After he gets his new kidney, he plans on eating a tuna fish sandwich and tomato soup — food he can't eat right now.

"There will never be enough words to thank (Myers)," she said. "It's one thing to ask people to do something — they feel pressured to do it. But he volunteered. And he acts like it's no big deal. What he is doing is a blessing."

"I want to do this," Myers said. "I have seen a lot of things in my military career. I have seen death. I really didn't want to have to see my son deal with that with Nicholas being his best friend.

"This was an opportunity to do something and help Nick, and let Nick live a normal life."

Chain teaching to follow Army suicide prevention stand down

Gary Sheftick
AMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — An Armywide "stand down" for suicide-prevention training continues through Sunday and it will be followed by chain teaching that must be completed by July 15.

The centerpiece of the stand-down training is an interactive video called "Beyond the Front."

During a Blogger's Roundtable on suicide prevention, Army Vice Chief of Staff GEN Peter W. Chiarelli said the interactive video is "some of the best facilitation for training that I've seen in 36 years in the Army." He said the purpose of the video is to reduce the stigma of seeking help, to teach Soldiers to recognize the warning signs of suicide and how to provide help to a battle buddy.

Commands are scheduling this stand-down training with the video in two- to four-hour blocks during a 30-day window that began Feb. 15. Soldiers watch the interactive video in small groups and make decisions on how to react to the vignettes. Their decisions determine the outcome of the vignettes and ultimately whether the Soldier on the video lives or dies.

It's important for all Soldiers — especially NCOs and junior officers — to be able to offer capable intervention to those at risk, Chiarelli said.

"Unfortunately suicide is touching every segment of our force — Active, Reserve and National Guard; officer and enlisted; deployed and non-deployed, and yet-to-be-deployed," Chiarelli said.

Last fiscal year, 138 Soldiers committed suicide, and five additional cases are still pending confirmation. In January, 12 Soldiers committed suicide with another 12 cases still pending. In February, two Soldiers committed suicide and another 16 cases are still pending confirmation.

"As a Soldier and a leader, I'm deeply saddened every time a Soldier loses his or her life," Chiarelli said, "but it's especially troubling when a Soldier commits suicide."

About a third of those Soldiers were deployed, Chiarelli said. Another third had returned from a deployment, and the last third had never been deployed.

"The rational person might think, the more deployments, the more likely you are to commit suicide," Chiarelli said. "But we saw just the opposite," citing "a certain resiliency" seems to grow in Soldiers who have completed multiple deployments.

Chiarelli announced at the roundtable that a new Suicide Prevention Task Force has been created and will be headed by BG Colleen L. McGuire. The task force will look across multiple disciplines — from personnel to medical — to try and discern the root causes of suicide and synchronize solutions.

There's no single solution to the problem, Chiarelli said, characterizing it as "very, very complicated."

About half of the Soldiers who committed suicide last year had sought treatment from mental health care providers, Chiarelli said. Yet they still committed suicide.

Only 5.4 percent of the suicide victims had been diagnosed with post traumatic stress disorder, said COL Elspeth C. Ritchie, a psychiatrist who serves as director of Strategic Communications for the Army Medical Department. She said 17 percent had problems with substance abuse.

About 60 percent of those who committed suicide had relationship problems, said COL Thomas Languirand of Army G-1. Some also had compounded legal problems, financial problems, or work problems.

Warning signs for suicide

Although there is no one "typical" suicide victim (it can happen to young and old, rich and poor alike), there are some common warning signs. Most people who are feeling depressed or desperate enough to consider suicide give clues to how they're feeling. Some signs to look for are:

Spoken or written threats of suicide. Suicidal people will sometimes say things like, "I wish the pain would go away" or "I would be better off dead." If the person talks about committing suicide or has written notes or letters to that effect, take it very seriously, especially if the person has a history of suicide attempts. Never assume the person "doesn't really mean it."

Reckless or high-risk behavior. Risky actions may include excessive drinking, reckless driving, gambling, Internet addiction, or acting in threatening ways with others.

Withdrawal and loss of interest. No longer enjoying activities that used to be enjoyable, isolating oneself from family or friends, and giving up on personal appearance are all common signs of depression.

Recent important losses. Many people who attempt or commit suicide are facing problems they feel they cannot overcome. These may include a divorce, a break-up in a relationship, moving to a different area, or the death of a loved one.

Major changes in sleep or eating patterns. Excessive fatigue, not being able to sleep, sleeping excessively, and losing one's appetite or overeating are all signs that someone may be suffering from depression.

Obsession with death. Suicidal people sometimes show an unusual interest in death through the books or movies they choose. They may even spend time preparing for death by making out a will, planning their funeral, or making final arrangements. Having decided to die, they may give away prized possessions and show ambivalence about things that were once important to them.

Army stands up task force to prevent suicides

Gary Sheftick
AMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — BG Colleen L. McGuire was selected to head up a new task force to prevent suicides in the Army.

"Suicide is a multi-dimensional problem and as such will take a multi-disciplinary approach to dealing with it," Army Vice Chief of Staff GEN Peter W. Chiarelli said during a Blogger's Roundtable before announcing the new task force.

In keeping with the complexity of the problem, the task force will have members from a range of staff sections and functional areas.

McGuire, who was promoted to brigadier general Dec. 2, is a military police officer who for the past year has served as director of senior leader development for Department of the Army.

"My charter is to truly look ... across all disciplines, so in the end, that leader, that commander can have a menu of tools, of training programs and experts that he can turn to and know how to best employ them," McGuire said.

Her task force will include representation from the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for G-1 (Personnel) and Human Resources Command.

It will have representatives from the Provost Marshal's Office and from the Army Medical Department.

It will also coordinate closely with the Chief of Chaplain's Office and other staff areas, said LTC Leo Ruth, a member of the new task force.

Ruth said the task force will examine all of the Army's recent suicide cases and try to find "commonalities."

"The whole idea ... is to identify a common theme," Ruth said.

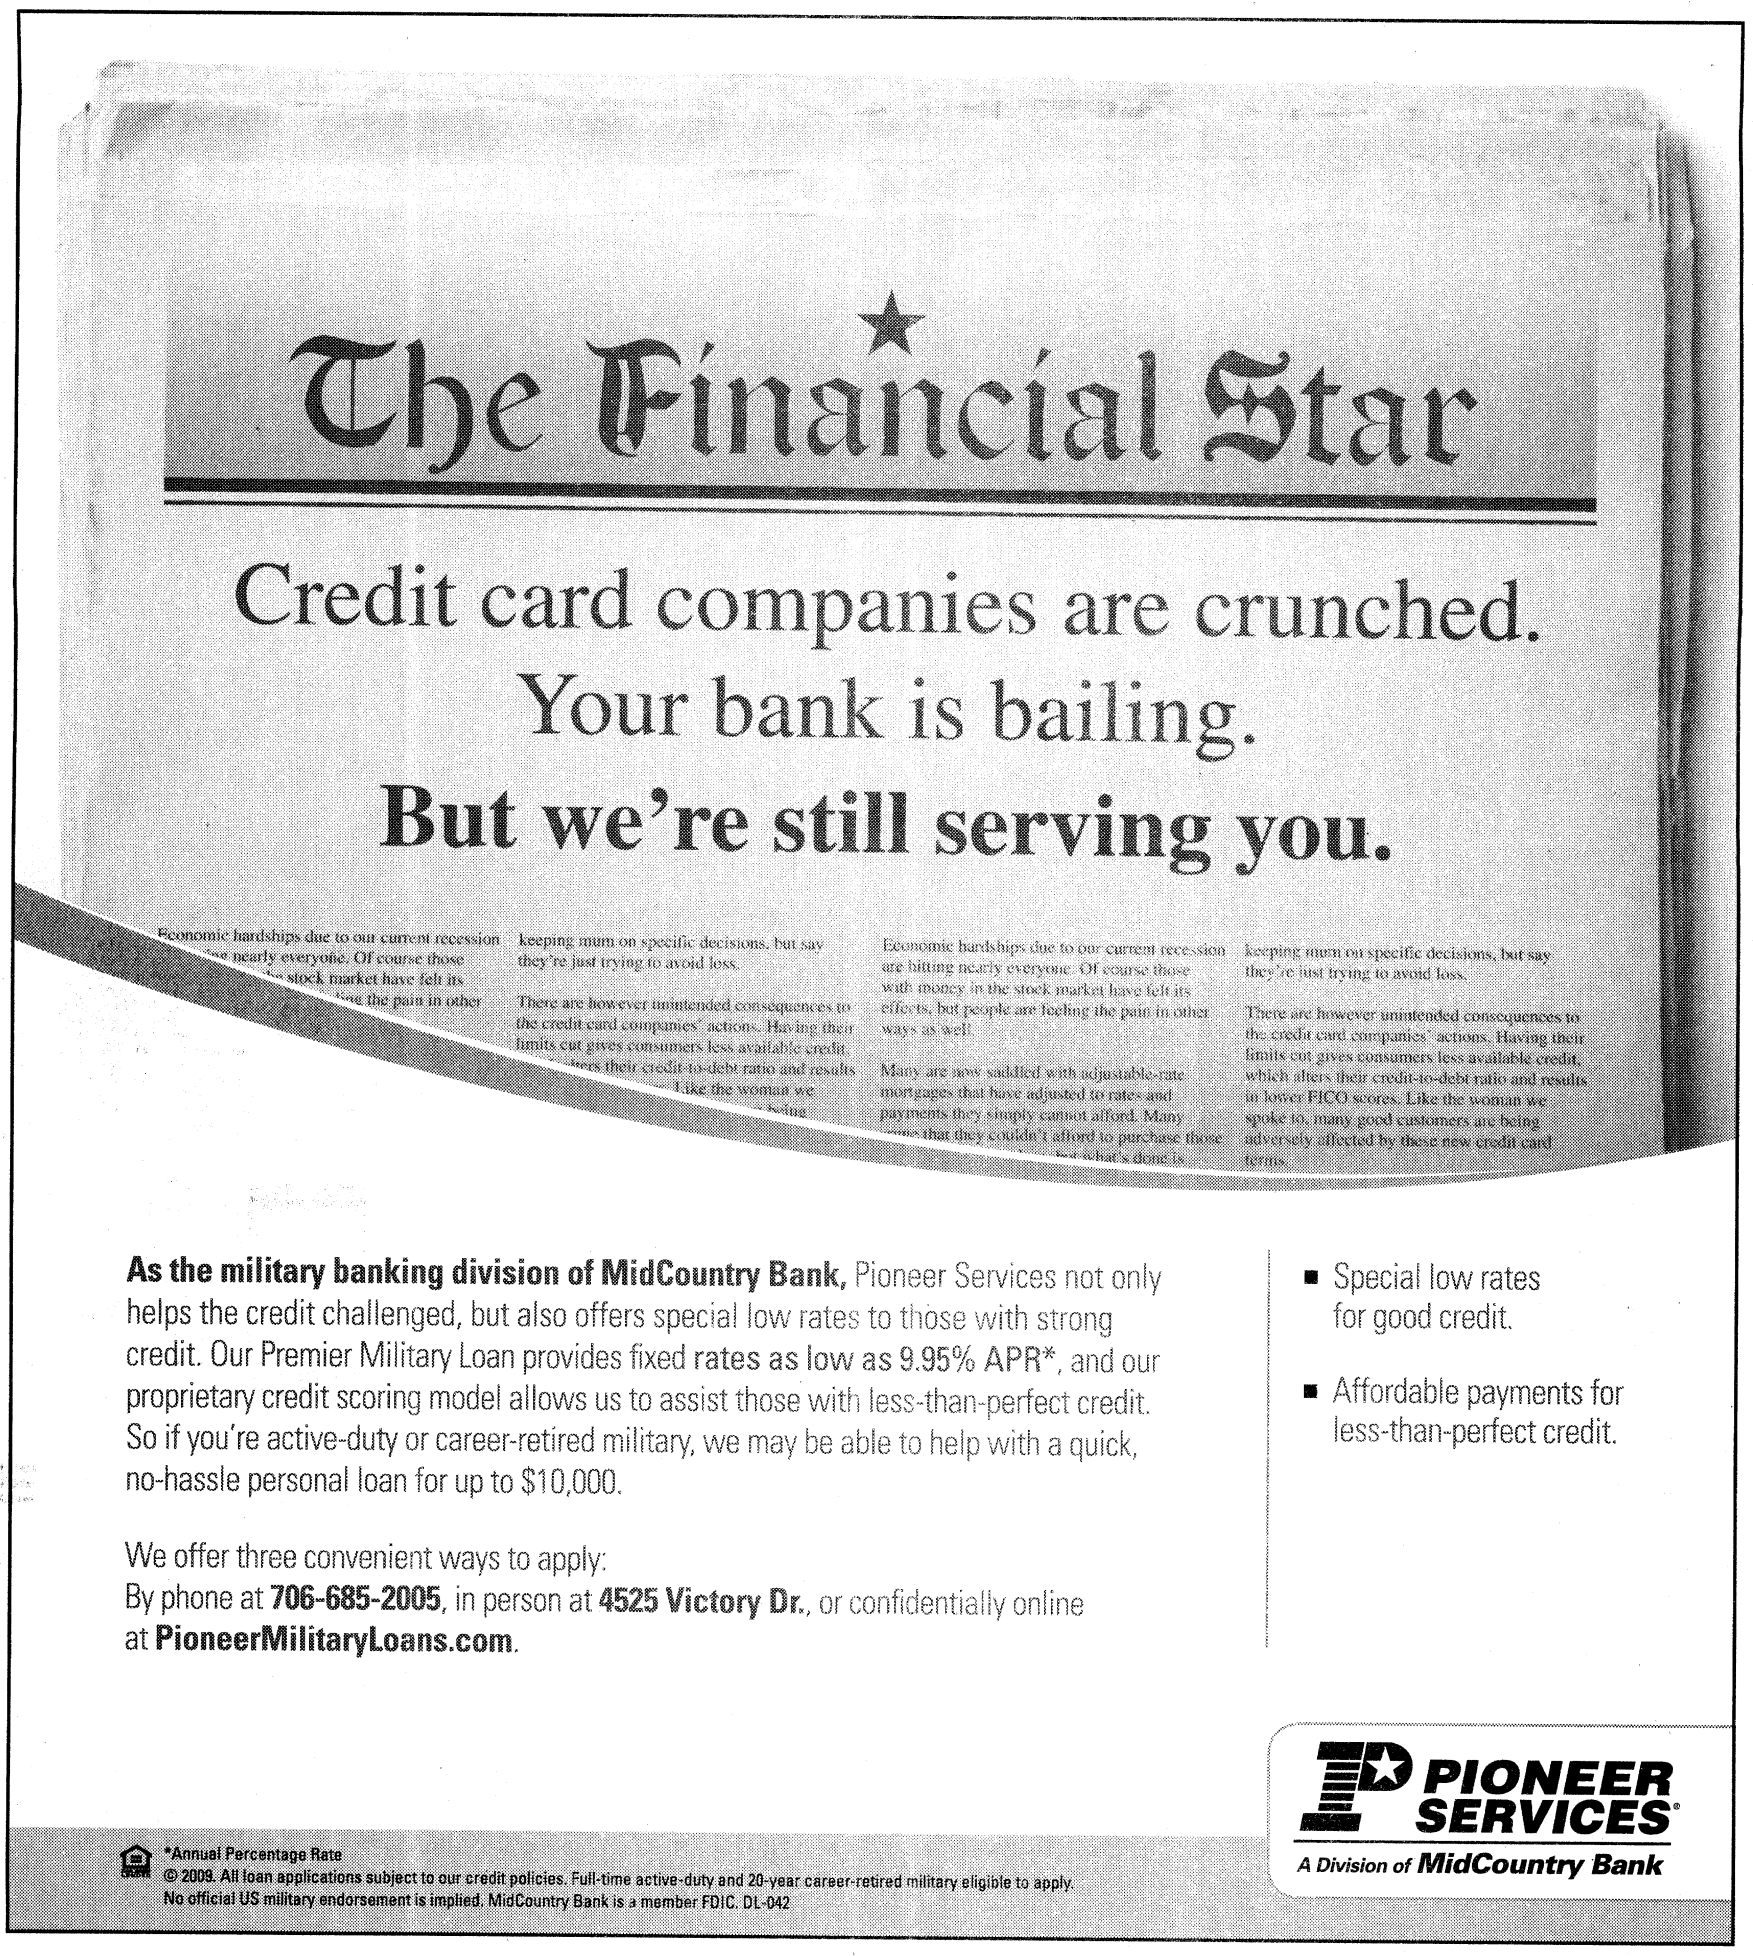

"We may not find a trend," Ruth said, but the task force "owed it to leadership" to examine demographics such as age and deployment history to see if any trends exist.

The task force will report to Secretary of the Army Pete Geren, Ruth said. Its recommendations will first be looked at by a senior officer steering committee.

The ultimate product, he said, will be a Suicide Prevention Campaign Plan.

The task force will only form the genesis of the campaign plan, Ruth said, stressing that the task force is a temporary organization.

The Army has also partnered with the National Institute of Mental Health for a long-range study to determine the causes of suicide in the Army.

This is the parking plan for the east parking lot beginning April 1.

The orange line represents the fences for the first phase of fencing planned for Infantry Hall.

MCOE: Construction on schedule

Construction crews are cutting new roads to access the parking lots adjacent to Infantry Hall. Once the renovation of Infantry Hall is complete, Brown said Karker Street won't exist; there will be a much larger plaza in front of the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

A couple of modular buildings, office space for the renovation crew, take up a portion of the east parking lot and a contractor lay down yard, just north of that, provides a dry storage area for the prefabrication of the heating, ventilation and air conditioning, Brown said.

Fencing was placed prematurely in the east parking lot over the weekend, blocking access, said Randy Richau, a strategic planner with the Maneuver Center Realignment Coordination Cell. It was removed Monday, but part of the parking lot will be fenced April 1, without blocking access. The area is needed for renovation material. The parking plan for April 1 and the phase one fencing plan are pictured above.

During phase one of Infantry Hall's renovation, the tower and the front of the building will be closed; however, the two wings will still be in use.

During the monthly MCOE update, Brown said the $507 million funding for the new hospital is secure and the contract should be awarded in July or August, with a completion date of March 2013. Martin Army Community Hospital is one of the Army's oldest, built in 1957. The Army identified the hospital as the top priority hospital replacement project in the United States because of its age and future requirements, estimating that, eventually, up to 100,000 Soldiers, retirees and family members will use the new hospital.

Other news included information on widening Dixie Road, the volunteer process for Maneuver Center of Excellence-related jobs and BRAC contracting opportunities through fedbizopps.gov.

DIXIE ROAD

Dixie Road will be widened to four lanes, from Lindsay Creek Parkway (I-185) to Sightseeing Road, (just short of Lawson Army Airfield).

"We are waiting for funding and anticipate award by the end of April," Brown said. "This is a design-build project with a 540 day performance period with completion expected for late 2010. According to the Savannah District Corps of Engineers, the physical work won't begin until after the beginning of fiscal 2010."

VOLUNTEER PROCESS

Employees, here and at Fort Knox, Ky., interested in working for the MCOE have completed their surveys of interest, Brown said. Employees who are a direct match will be offered the position. For those without a direct match, there will be panels established to review employee qualifications to make indirect match selections. However, every employee who volunteered for a position will be offered one. Civilian Personnel Online, www.cpol.army.mil, will announce the positions not filled by the volunteer process in June.

BRAC OPPORTUNITIES

Stephen Magner, assistant director with Office of Small Business Programs, Directorate of Contracting, discussed the procedure for finding construction-related jobs and BRAC contracting opportunities, using the Web site www.fedbizopps.gov. To open and view project specifications, register under the vendor portion, he said. When searching for opportunities, type "Fort Benning" in the search engine.

"Fedbizopps is really just marketing," Magner said, "connecting vendors with opportunities."

For more information, call Magner at 706-545-2274.

"There are 450 construction workers per day at the Harmony Church barracks project," Brown said, "with $650 million in construction coming out of the ground. In a couple of months, there will be nearly $1 billion worth of construction ongoing. We are on track to have all courses relocated before BRAC law, Sept. 15, 2011."

The MCOE community updates are open to the public. For more information, call 706-545-4729.

SCAM WARNING FROM CID

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command is warning the Army community of an ongoing Internet scam within popular social networking and dating sites where the criminal poses as a member of the U.S. Army. Scammers create profiles of senior Army officers and non-commissioned officers, to include the use of official photographs, in an attempt to lure unsuspecting persons into revealing personal, banking or financial information.

In their latest attempt, scammers are making contact with potential victims through various social networking sites. After contact, during instant messaging or e-mail correspondence, the scammers ask recipients to cash a check that would help the sender or the sender's family out of a terrible situation.

CID recommends Soldiers, civilians and family members who come across any known suspicious social networking or dating site profile or are solicited in this fashion contact the nearest CID office or e-mail CID at crimetips@conus.army.mil.

AER: Funds help in crisis

can come to and get the assistance and be able to correct any financial issues they're having."

Active-duty and retired Soldiers, family members and surviving spouses or orphans of Soldiers who died while on active duty or after retiring are all eligible to receive AER assistance, with assistance being provided in the form of either an interest-free loan or a grant, depending on the Soldier's financial situation.

Spouses of deployed Soldiers who have power of attorney may apply for assistance on the Soldier's behalf. An AER representative evaluates each case individually.

AER assistance offers several advantages over traditional bank loans, including faster turnaround time, said Lionel Grant, AER director.

"With high interest rates off post, some Soldiers may have additional hardship paying off a loan," he said. "We don't do credit checks either, and with most of our cases, if a Soldier has an appointment, within an hour they can leave here with assistance."

Thanks to a reciprocal agreement, Soldiers who are away from their home installation and need assistance can go to the emergency relief office of any other branch of service, as well as any branch of the American Red Cross.

To apply for assistance, Soldiers can go to the AER office with a completed DA Form 1103, or to their commander or first sergeant, who can approve requests of up to $1,000 under the Commander's Referral Program.

"With a regular AER loan, they have to get a statement in writing showing a need, but with the Commander's Referral Program, the only documentation we need is the commander's signature," Carter said.

There are several situations in which AER is not authorized to provide assistance, including credit card debt and debt consolidation. Grant recommends Soldiers contact AER if they are unsure whether a request will be granted.

The Stateside Spouse Education Assistance Program and its overseas equivalent provide funds to spouses pursuing an undergraduate education, while the MG James Ursano Scholarship Fund aids children of Soldiers. Information and applications are available on the AER Web site.

The annual fundraising campaign goes through May 15 and the goal is $250,000.

"This is the only time of year we solicit funds from service members," Grant said.

Donations can be made at the AER office or through unit representatives.

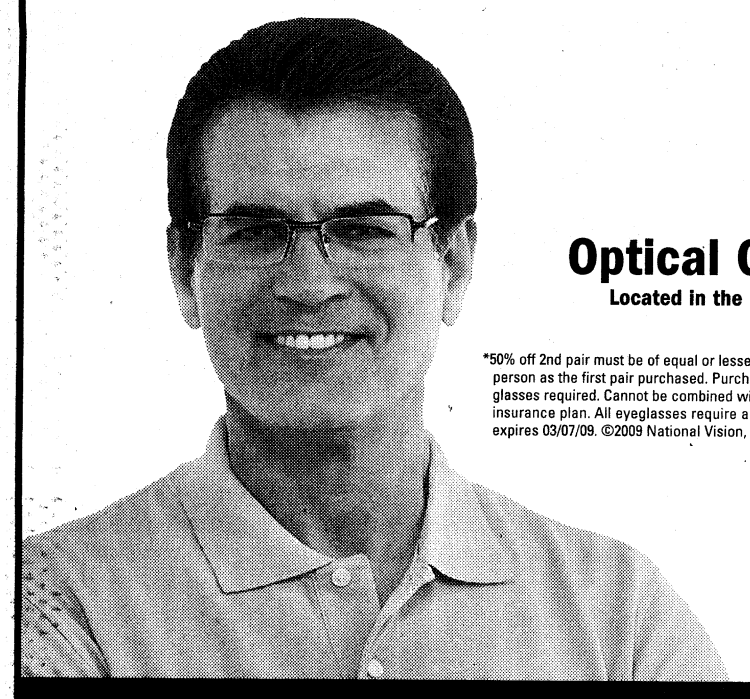

"AER provides a service that you just can't replace," Carter said. "There's nowhere else that you can get a no-interest loan. With the contributions, it makes it so that we can continue doing it."

AER is located in Building 2624 in Soldier's Plaza. The office is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

BENCH NOTES

A-Rod undergoes surgery

New York Yankees' third baseman Alex Rodriguez had successful arthroscopic surgery March 9 to repair a torn labrum in his right hip, fix a small impingement, and seal a cyst.

A-Rod is expected to miss between six to nine weeks. A-Rod opted for the surgery instead of a more invasive one that would have sidelined him for months.

UNC regains top spot

In the newest ESPN/USA Today coaches' poll, North Carolina claimed the top spot, up from No. 2 the prior week after beating Duke for the second time this year.

Pittsburgh ranks second, followed by Memphis at third, Connecticut at fourth and Louisville rounding out the top five.

Busch wins, and it's not Kyle

Though overshadowed by little brother Kyle last season, former NASCAR champion Kurt Busch proved the victor at Atlanta Motor Speedway March 8 in the Kobalt Tools 500.

He led 234 of 300 laps, more than he led all of last season.

Jeff Gordon finished second, followed by Carl Edwards in third.

Gordon leads the Sprint Cup standings, followed closely by Clint Bowyer and Kurt Busch.

NASCAR takes a week off before heading to Bristol March 22.

Barkley does time

Former NBA star Charles Barkley served his three-day sentence at the Tent City jail in Phoenix, Ariz., after being convicted of driving drunk. He was arrested Dec. 31 and pleaded guilty in February to two misdemeanor DUI charges.

Barkley will complete an alcohol treatment plan as part of his sentence.

T.O. wasting no time

Wide receiver Terrell Owens was released by the Dallas Cowboys March 5. Two days later, the often-controversial five-time All-Pro had a one-year, $6.5 million deal with the Buffalo Bills.

Owens started his career with the San Francisco 49ers, then the Philadelphia Eagles, then to the Cowboys, and now the Bills.

World Baseball Classic

If you're like me and love baseball and just can't seem to wait a few more weeks for the official start, you might want to catch some of the World Baseball Classic, now in the second round.

The semifinals and final will be broadcast March 21-23 on ESPN.

Wrestlers place first, second at state

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Two Fort Benning Black Knight youth wrestlers brought the gold and silver back from the Big Kids State Championships Saturday in Roswell, Ga.

Tyler Denova brought home a first-place gold medal in the 14-and-younger, 165-pound weight class winning by an 11-1 technical fall in the finals over Apalachee's Joshua Doman.

"I was real nervous when we shook hands (to start the match)," Denova said. "But once I did that, I just starting thinking about what I was going to do. Then, I got a takedown and just went from there."

This is not Denova's first state title, but he said it doesn't take away from the feeling of winning a championship. Last year, Denova won the state title in the 12-and-younger, 130-pound weight class.

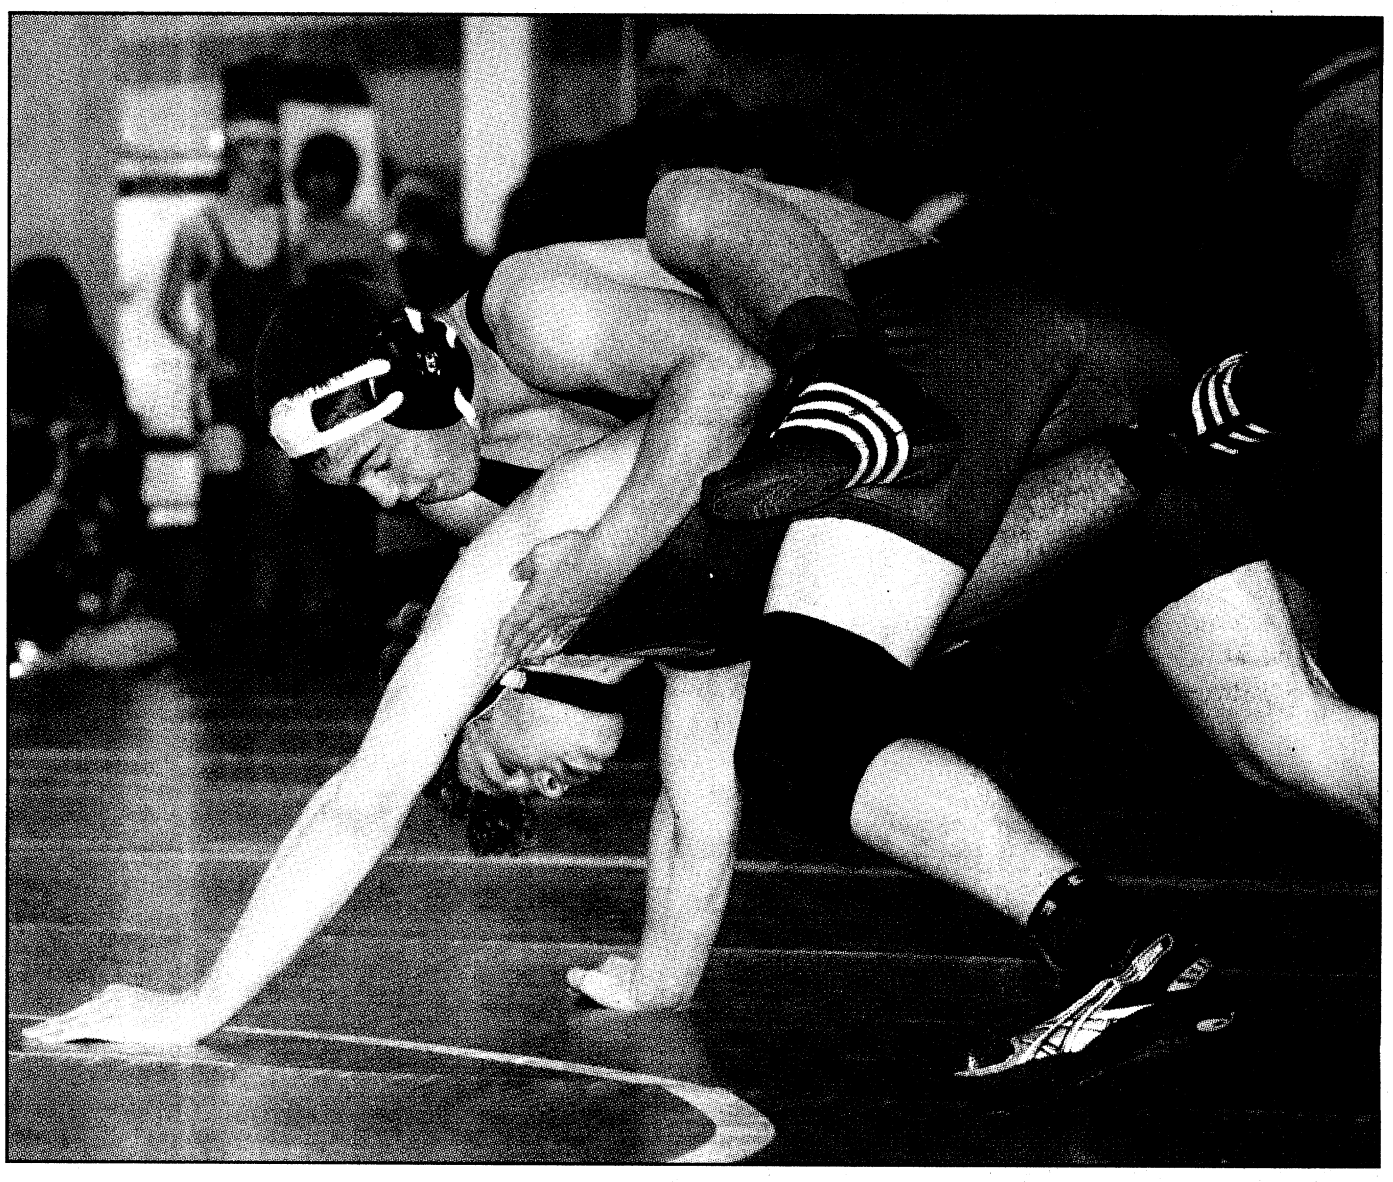

"It feels awesome," he said. "It happened last year, but it never gets old."

Denova made it to the finals by defeating Oconee County's Billy Seward with an 8-5 decision, overcoming a last second push from Seward that had Denova on his back fighting a pin.

"During the match, I didn't feel well most of the time," Denova said. "But, I kept the lead. In the last part of the match I kind of panicked a little when he got me on my back, but I just kept wiggling and bridging up to a position I knew he could not pin me in."

Although Denova was the only Fort Benning wrestler to earn points in the 14-and-younger age group, his first place finish was enough to earn the team 10 points, good enough for 26th place out of 92 teams that qualified wrestlers for the tournament.

Fort Benning takes 2-1 victory in first game

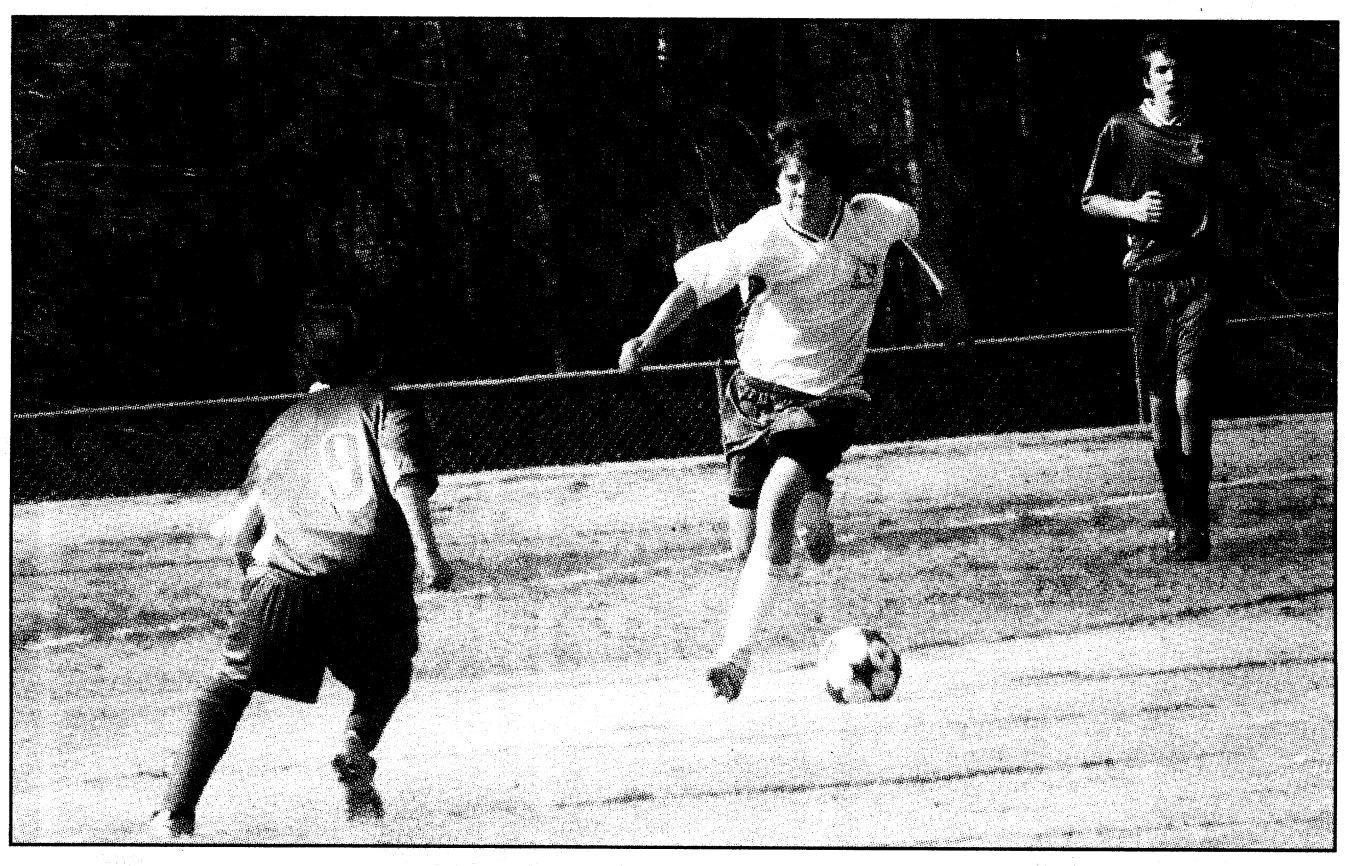

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning 12- to 14-year-old soccer team ousted the Columbus Knights with a 2-1 win Saturday at Woodruff Farm Soccer Complex in Columbus in their first game of the season.

Knights and Fort Benning battled for field position at the beginning of the game, but were unsuccessful at putting the ball in the net. Both teams accumulated several out-of-bounds kicks and fouls in the early going before Columbus' Jeremy Walker broke the stalemate with a goal. Fort Benning answered with a goal from Colin Ryan, to tie the score, 1-1 and closed the first half on a Rodrigo Urrutia goal. With the goal, Fort Benning led, 2-1.

"At halftime, I told the team to keep their heads in the game because the game wasn't over until the referee blew the whistle," Fort Benning coach

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Teaching game, life skills

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Julio Miranda has been coaching soccer as a volunteer for 20 years.

"Soccer is something I know," he said. "I love the game and I love teaching it to kids. The most rewarding part of coaching is seeing a player develop — somebody who at the beginning of the season wasn't so great, but through the practices and games, matures and starts getting self-confidence."

Miranda has taught kids from ages 4 to 14 and now coaches the 12- to 14-year-old Fort Benning team that plays in the Columbus Youth Soccer Club.

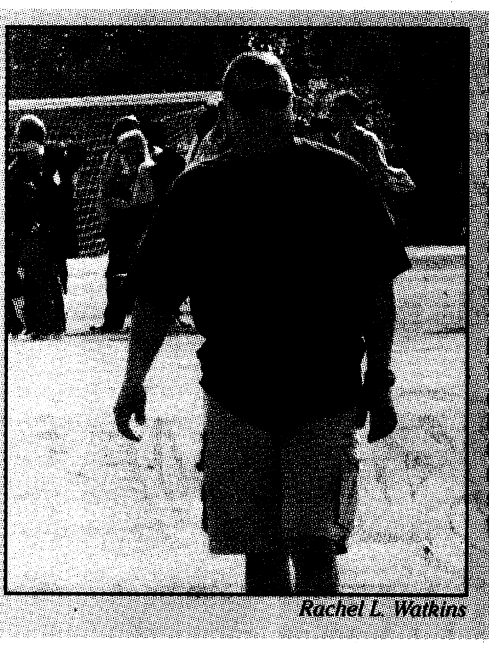

His coaching philosophy is to work hard, and work as a team.

From the goalkeeper who saves the ball to the forwards, every player has a vital role in the game, Miranda said.

"I have had teams where one player tried to do everything. It doesn't work that way. It's not an individual sport — it's about team effort," he said.

Miranda said although teamwork is important, every player has to have a firm

Julio Miranda said."I also told them to watch what their opponents were doing."

Although both teams attempted goals in the final half, neither were able to score, giving Fort Benning a 2-1 victory.

"At the beginning of the game, I told the team 'however your opponent plays, play with the same intensity and don't back down' and they did that," Miranda said. "Most teams here like to run the ball up the middle and shut out plays and I think we stopped that before it even started happening. I'm really proud of the team because they came out and really showed me what they could do."

Fourteen-year-old Fort Benning forward Ryan, who scored the team's first goal, said good passing and crosses were what won the game.

"It feels great to win the first game of the season and I hope we can pull out another win in our next game," he said.

Fort Benning will take on nine teams in the Columbus Youth Soccer Club this season. Their next game will be against Columbus Fire at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Woodruff Farm Soccer Complex.

understanding of the game.

"You have to start with the basics like passing the ball, and go from there," he said.

At the 12- to 14-year-old level, Miranda focuses on refining individual skills and using those skills to the team's benefit.

Miranda said what the kids learn can be applied on and off the field.

"If you play soccer, you have to have a lot of patience because things might not go how you want them to. You have to be able to communicate with your team and you have to trust others. These are all life lessons that the players can use throughout their lives."

Wrestling, 'being the man'

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

"To be the man, you have to beat the man ... Whoo!"

For anyone who is a follower of professional wrestling, those words chime as the catch phrase of only one person — "The Nature Boy," Ric Flair.

I cannot recall how many times I heard him shout those words on television, and in person.

Yes, I was one of those people who followed professional wrestling when I was younger, just not one of the ones who would argue it was real — no offense to those who "know" it is real.

My fascination with wrestling began in high school.with John Lau, a smallish wrestler on the Baker High School wrestling team. I'd say he wrestled in the 103-pound weight class, but time has a way with interfering with some of the smaller details like weight.

Prior to coming to The Bayonet, I had the opportunity to really find out what wrestling was all about by covering the Gilmer County Bobcats. Over the past five years, they won four AAA state titles — two duals titles and two traditional titles.

I learned a lot about wrestling covering the Bobcats, so I felt — at home — Saturday at the Georgia Big Kids State Championships in Roswell, Ga. I saw Tyler Denova, Thomas Crays and Orry Suich represent Fort Benning just as proudly as I had watched the Bobcats represent Gilmer County in previous years.

There is just something about the way amateur wrestlers approach the sport, both physically and mentally.

Wrestling requires a participant to be in top-notch shape and be able to think and move without hesitation, or suffer a loss.

The total time, per match, Denova, Crays and Suich were allotted for victory or loss — four minutes.

In less time than it takes most of us to take a shower, wrestlers can be "hitting the shower" because they lost.

Wrestling is one of the few sports where one mistake can cost a victory. If a wrestler on top gets too high, the next second he can be on his back with his shoulders pinned. Wrestling is not a forgiving sport and no matter how hard a wrestler has worked, and no matter how many points he leads by, it could all be over because of one simple mistake.

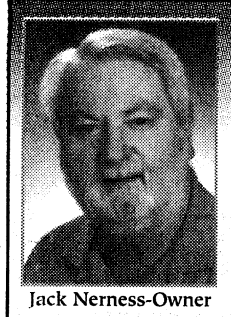

Athletically, wrestlers are asked to give their all — nonstop. With the exception of injury or blood timeouts, the wrestlers at the tournament Saturday went through one two-minute and two one-minute periods. They didn't have a halftime like basketball and football or a seventh-inning stretch like baseball and they didn't have a recovery time between periods. That takes physical conditioning and stamina, and the Fort Benning wrestlers had plenty of both.

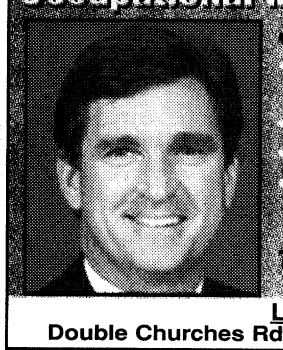

When the match was over, like all wrestlers, they displayed sportsmanship by shaking the hand of their opponent and the hand of their opponents coaches — they won, and lost with dignity and respect.

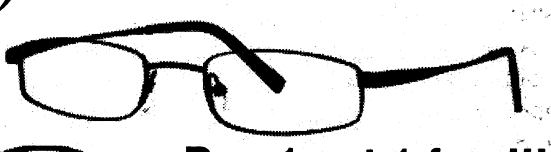

What I saw from the wrestlers from Fort Benning was not uncommon. With a very few exceptions, dignity, respect, courtesy and even a certain amount of camaraderie exists in the amateur wrestling ranks. It is not uncommon to see a wrestler who loses root for the person he just lost to in the next round and it was good to see the same type wrestling traditions instilled in the Fort Benning wrestlers.

Wrestling is a tough, demanding, mentally and physically challenging sport, and although Denova, Crays and Suich are still relatively young, the sky is the limit.

While they may not receive the notoriety 16-time World Heavyweight Wrestling Champion Flair, who was also a state high school wrestling champion in 1966 and 1968, they are on the way to "being the man," ... Whoo!

Gators defeat Battle Sharks, 1-0

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The 9- to 11-year-old Fort Benning Gators kicked off the Child,Youth,School and Services soccer season with a 1-0 victory against the Fort Benning Battle Sharks Saturday at French Field.

The game started at a slow pace, with both teams accumulating several out-of-bound kicks and fouls. The Gators and Battle Sharks battled for goals in the first half, but the defenses remained tight, preventing either team from scoring any goals. Although the Gators and the Battle Sharks were able to drive the ball up and down the field to their respective goals, both remained scoreless at the half.

"At the half, I told the team to hang in there and try their best," said Gators coach Melissa Harvel.

The final half looked promising for the Gators when Jacob Martel attempted a shot on the goal, but the ball went wide left. Both teams racked up fouls and out-of-bounds penalties, but later in the final half, Gators forward Michael Brown scored the only goal of the game sealing the victory for the Gators, 1-0.

"It feels good to get the winning goal," Brown said. "I think what helped us win was our passing and kicking and we all held our positions down. I'm really proud of our team." Harvel said she is looking forward to a great season and is happy about winning the first game.

"I think it was a well-played game by both teams and we played a good defense," Harvel said. "It was just a matter of time before someone scored. They (the Gators) just needed to get their rhythm. Once they found it, we were good."

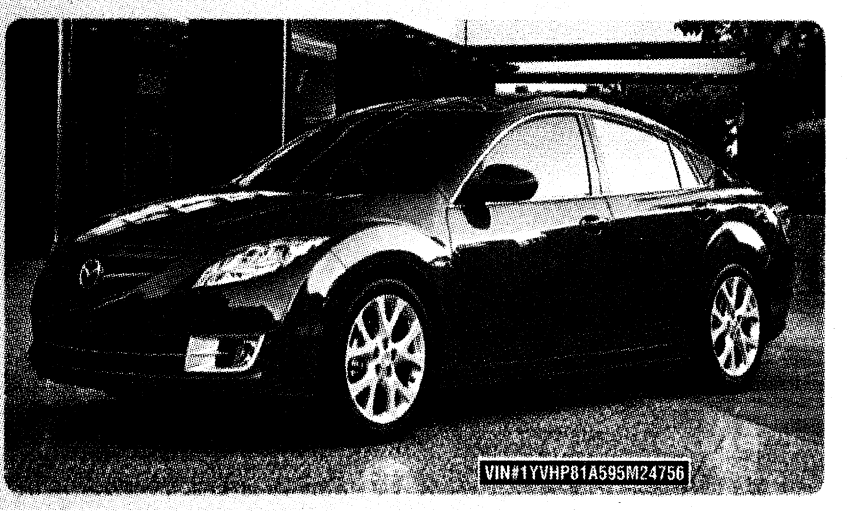

The Gators and Battle Sharks, 9- to 11-year-old coed teams, are two of 32 teams that will compete in the CYS&S soccer league this season. The Gators will take on the Fort Benning Cyclones at 9 a.m. Saturday on French Field.

State: Black Knights move to championship finals

Denova also earned a 5-0 decision over Pope Junior Wrestling Club's Ross Taylor in the quarterfinals after advancing with a first round bye.

Thomas Crays made his way through the 12-and-younger, 160-pound weight class to the championship match earning second place. Crays lost in the finals by pin with 27 seconds remaining in the second period to Mike Kemper from the Pope Junior Wrestling Club.

"It was hard to get into him (Kemper)," Crays said. "He was tall and lanky and I couldn't get a shot on him. He got me to the ground, and I couldn't get out of the bottom."

Things were a little different for Crays from other tournaments he has attended, he said

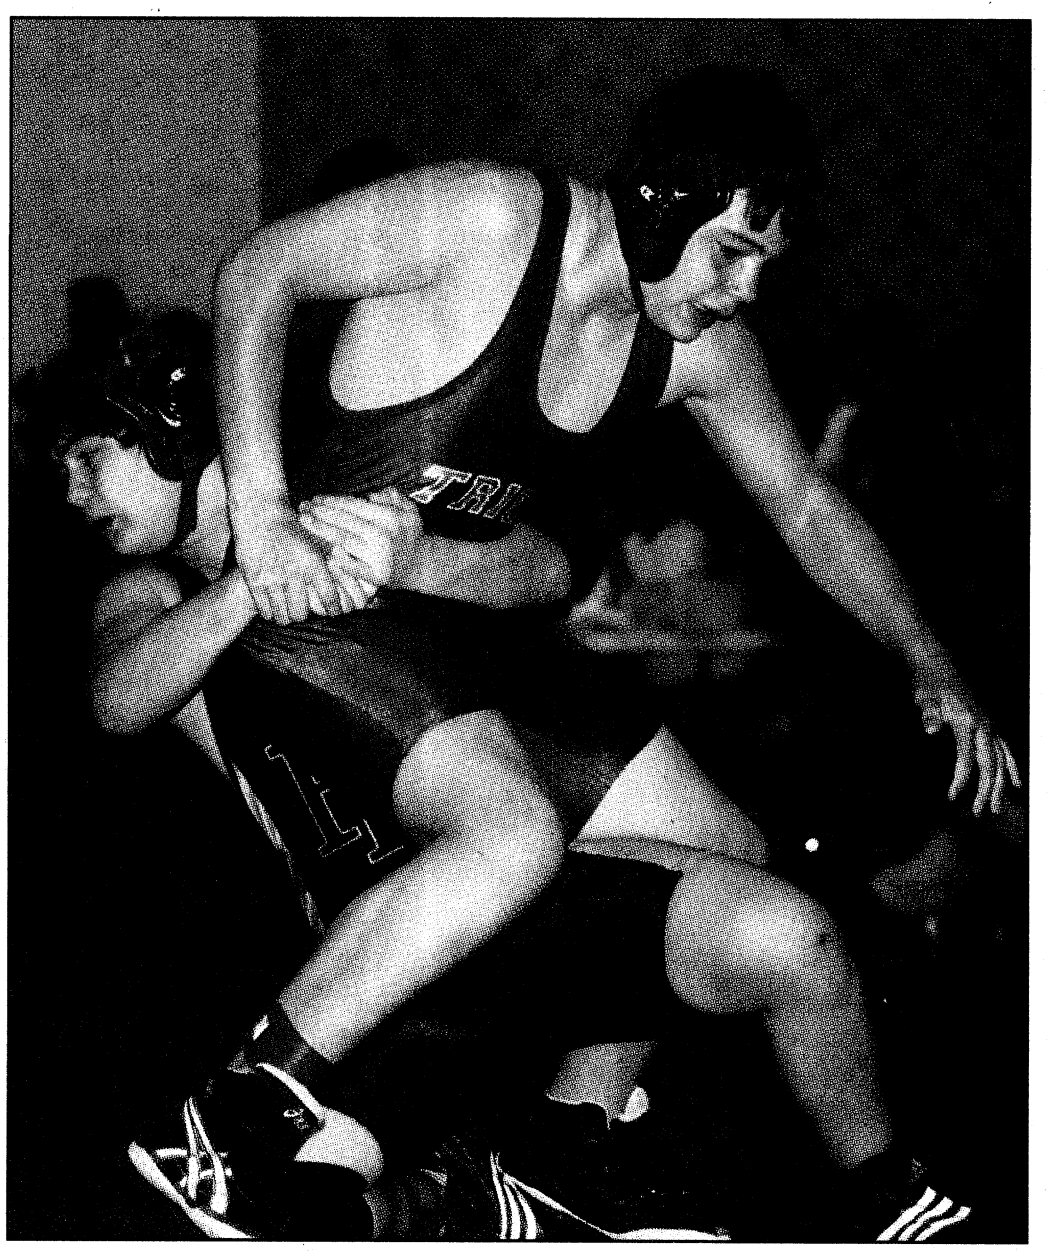

"After the semifinals, I was ready to go for it right there," Crays said. "The wait (until 8:30 p.m.) drained me though. I am used to wrestling straight through, so the long wait made me tired."

Crays moved through the first round and the quarterfinals, winning by pin. In the first round Crays pinned his opponent, Triston Purvine from the Liberty Wrestling Club, with one second remaining in the second period for the victory. In the quarterfinals, Crays recorded his second consecutive pin over Stevie Anthony from the North Forsyth Wrestling Club with 19 seconds remaining in the match.

In his semifinal match, Crays was taken the distance by Hunter Gentry of the Trion Mat Dogs before coming away with a 7-2, complete-match victory.

Crays earned seven points for the Fort Benning Wrestling Club for advancing to the championship match, placing the club in the 24th spot out of 92 teams in the 12-and-younger division.

The Black Knights also had one other wrestler involved in the 14-and-younger age group in the 90-pound weight class. Fort Benning's Orry Suich received a first-round bye and lost his second match in the championship round by technical fall to The Wrestling Academy's Connor Fitzpatrick. Suich received another bye in the consolation round before losing by pin to Team Walton's Dalton Wheeler in the round three consolation match.

Thomas Crays of the Fort Benning Wrestling Club takes down Hunter Gentry from the Trion Dogs in his semifinal match of the Georgia Big Kids State Wrestling Championships. Crays defeated Gentry, 7-2, in the 12-and-younger, 165-pound weight class match.

"I am proud of all of them," coach Mark Suich said. "Tyler won state last year, so we had high hopes for him and he didn't let us down.

"Orry and Thomas were probably the biggest surprises," he said. "I don't think anyone would have expected them to be at state at the beginning of the year. Both of them made moves up in their wrestling and Thomas had a phenomenal year. He worked hard all year."

Fort Benning's Orry Suich (right) took on The Wrestling Academy's Connor Fitzpatrick in his opening match of the Georgia Big Kids State Wrestling Championships, losing the match by technical fall. Suich was one of four Fort Benning wrestlers to qualify for the state tournament. Suich placed third in the state qualifier two weeks ago in the 14-and-younger, 90-pound weight class.

Assistant coach Jason Crays echoed coach Suich's observations.

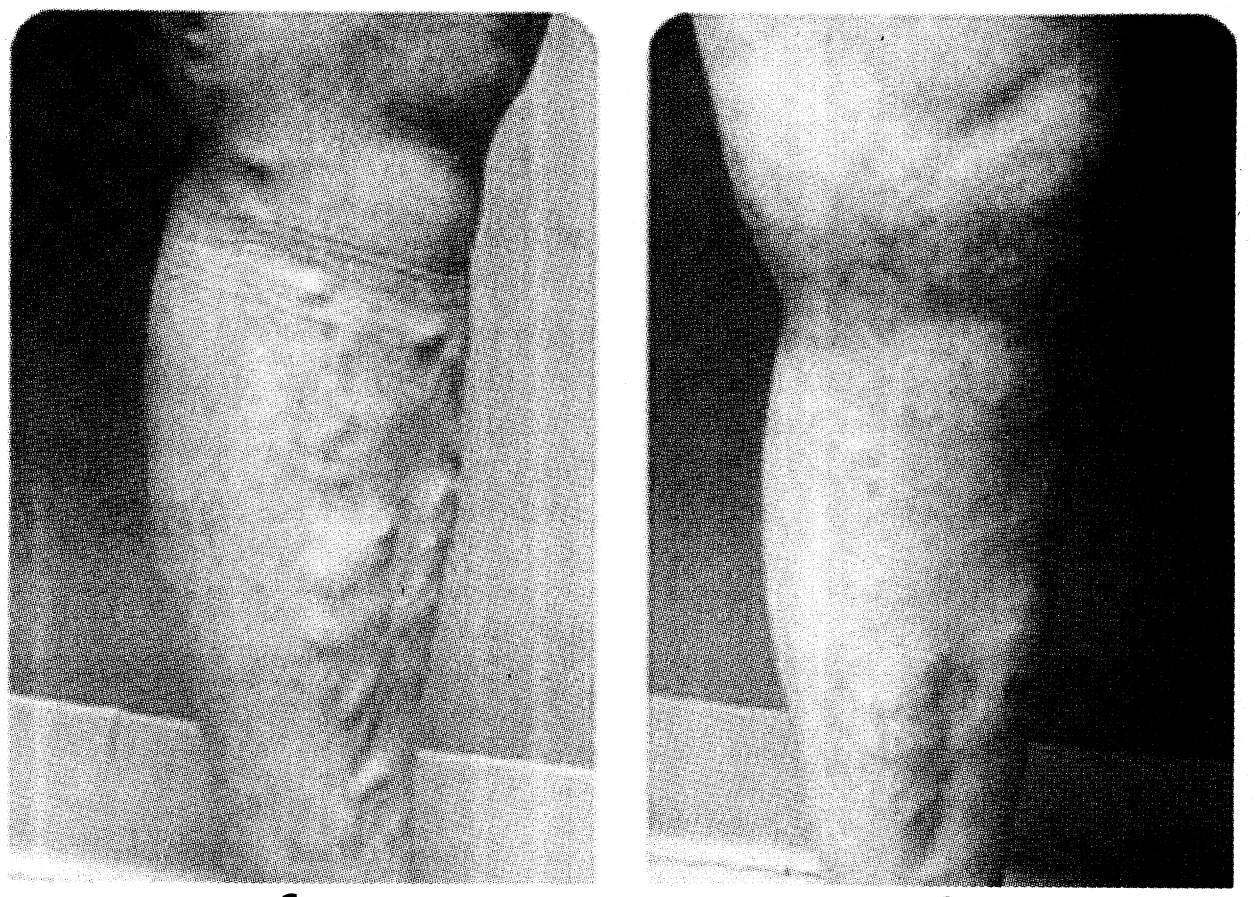

"It was a huge tournament for Tyler," coach Crays said. "He wrestled well in the first match, held on to win in the semifinals, then dominated in the finals. Thomas, in his third year of wrestling, wrestled well all day. The huge layoff between the semifinal and the finals hurt him a little. He has never experienced something like that, but could have wrestled a little better in the finals.

"Orry had a tough draw," he said. "There are a lot of studs in that weight class, but he showed a lot of courage."

Coach Suich said two of the three wrestlers would move on to wrestle at the high school level next year. Denova is expected to wrestle for Harris County High School while the high school Orry Suich attends next year has not been decided.

"All three who made the trip to the state tournament this year showed everyone that the kids at Fort Benning know how to wrestle," he added. "And, we look forward to a successful year next year. Maybe we can get some of the younger kids to the state tournament."

Are You Ready for a Tornado?

Here's what you can do to prepare for such an emergency

Prepare a Home Tornado Plan

- ✔ Pick a place where family members could gather if a tornado is headed your way. It could be your basement or, if there is no basement, a center hallway, bathroom, or closet on the lowest floor. Keep this place uncluttered.
- ✔ If you are in a high-rise building, you may not have enough time to go to the lowest floor. Pick a place in a hallway in the center of the building.

Assemble a Disaster Supplies Kit containing—

- ✔ First aid kit and essential medications.
- ✔ Canned food and can opener.
- ✔ At least three gallons of water per person.
- ✔ Protective clothing, bedding, or sleeping bags.
- ✔ Battery-powered radio, flashlight, and extra batteries.
- ✔ Special items for infant, elderly, or disabled family members.
- ✔ Written instructions on how to turn off electricity, gas, and water if authorities advise you to do so. (Remember, you'll need a professional to turn natural gas service back on.)

Conduct periodic tornado drills so everyone remembers what to do when a tornado is approaching.

Stay tuned for storm warnings

- ✔ Listen to your local radio and TV stations for updated storm information.
- ✔ Know what a tornado WATCH and WARNING means:
  - A tornado WATCH means a tornado is possible in your area.
  - A tornado WARNING means a tornado has been sighted and may be headed for your area. Go to safety immediately.
- ✔ Tornado WATCHES and WARNINGS are issued by county or parish.

When a tornado WATCH is issued—

- ✔ Listen to local radio and TV stations for further updates.
- ✔ Be alert to changing weather conditions. Blowing debris or the sound of an approaching tornado may alert you. Many people say it sounds like a freight train.

When a tornado WARNING is issued—

- ✔ If you are inside, go to the safe place you picked to protect yourself from glass and other flying objects. The tornado may be approaching your area.
- ✔ If you are outside, hurry to the basement of a nearby sturdy building or lie flat in a ditch or low-lying area.
- ✔ If you are in a car or mobile home, get out immediately and head for safety (as above).

After the tornado passes—

- ✔ Watch out for fallen power lines and stay out of the damaged area.
- ✔ Listen to the radio for information and instructions.
- ✔ Use a flashlight to inspect your home for damage.
- ✔ Do not use candles at any time.

THE BAYONET

Webster defines a festival as a time or day of feasting or celebration. But he makes no mention of face painting, balloon animals, barbecue or bluegrass. I can only infer he never visited a springtime festival in the South, but that's no reason you should suffer the same fate. We've got the lowdown on every shindig and jamboree in the area. Mark your calendars, pull out your confetti and little paper noisemakers, and get ready to party outdoors.

Saint Patrick's Festival — It's the longest trip on the list, a three-hour drive from Fort Benning to Dublin, Ga., but it's worth it if you're looking for the luck of the Irish. Celebrating its 44th year, this monthlong festival will continue through March 29. The grand ball, a birdhouse contest and the Miss Emerald City Pageant will be this weekend with a huge Saint Patrick's parade, a leprechaun road race, quilt show and more to come. Visit www.saintpatricksfestival.com for all the details.

Cherry Blossom Festival — The fun begins March 20 in Macon, Ga., with a sea lion show, gala ball and gospel concert, and lasts through March 29. Events are located around town, but most of the entertainment is in Central City Park, where thousands of Yoshino cherry trees flower this time of year. The festival includes a parade, pet fashion show, bed race, hot air balloon rides, free concerts and an international food fair. For a complete listing of dates and times, visit www.cherryblossom.com.

Spring Celebration — Friday is the first day of spring and the first day of Spring Celebration at Callaway Gardens. The celebration continues through April 25 with special workshops, tennis championship games and 20,000 azaleas in bloom, most of them located in the 40-acre Callaway Brothers Azalea Bowl. For admission prices and event times, visit www.callwaygardens.com.

Georgia on My Mind Day — If you want to venture farther from home, visit the Georgia Visitor Center, at exit 12 off I-185, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. March 27 to plan your vacation. This annual event is also a fun day out with the family. Enjoy free hot dogs, popcorn and drinks while looking at more than 20 displays of state attractions, like Wild Animal Safari and Babyland General Hospital. For more information, call 706-649-7455.

Festival by the Lake — Take a step back in time at Florence Marina State Park, Omaha, Ga. From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. March 28, you can watch demonstrations of basket weaving, knife making, candle dipping and other primitive skills. There will also be live music, free drinks, face painting and crafts for the kids. Parking is $3. For more information, call 229-838-4706.

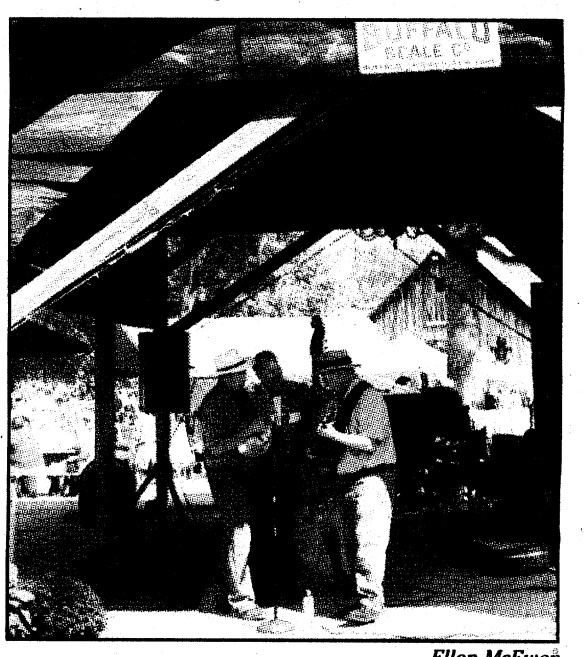

Community Fun Day — Enjoy a free festival close to home. The Russell County Child Advocacy Center will raise awareness about child abuse prevention and safety while putting on an event for the whole family. Look for crafts, games, a dunking booth, moon walk, door prizes and live entertainment, including dance, music and a jump rope competition, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. April 11 in Idle Hour Park, Phenix City. Soldiers from the 789th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Company will show kids how to maneuver robots and put on a bomb suit. The event is free, but a donation, such as crayons, cleaning supplies or paper, is appreciated. To set up a table at the fun day, call 334-297-4962.

He follows his brothers and other Soldiers and Marines on missions and through everyday life in Iraq, and also explores the effects of his brothers' deployment on their families.

Brothers at War is rated R for language and war images.

RACE TO WITCH MOUNTAIN

When Las Vegas cab driver Jack Bruno encounters two teenagers with supernatural powers in his cab, he suddenly finds himself in the middle of an adventure he can't explain. Rumors have circulated for years about a secret place in the Nevada desert, Witch Mountain, which is known for unexplained phenomena and strange sightings. Carpenter Richard Ellsworth harnesses the 12-foot tall bronze Follow Me statue replica Friday at Infantry Hall. The statue was moved on a flatbed truck to Ridgway Hall, Building 35, where most offices are moving by the end of April because of construction. The statue replica, cast from the fiberglass original, has been at Infantry Hall since it was unveiled at an Independence Day ceremony July 1, 2004. The 'Follow Me' statue was modeled after Officer Candidate Eugene Wyles, a 10-year Army veteran.

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Fort Benning's assistant commandant, BG Lloyd "Milo" Miles' next assignment will be as the commanding general of the Coalition Military Assistance Training Team, Multi-National Security Transition Command-Iraq, the Department of Defense announced Wednesday.

Miles has been the post deputy commanding general since September 2007, when he came from the Pentagon where he was the executive officer to the Army's chief of staff.

"(Miles) is uniquely qualified and prepared for this assignment," said MG Michael Barbero, Fort Benning's commanding general. "He is the perfect leader for this challenging and critical assignment."

Miles' mission is to further develop the warfighting skills of the Iraqi military.

"Miles and his wife, Betsy, have made tremendous contributions to the U.S. Infantry Center and the Fort Benning community," Barbero said.

Miles departure date and replacement have not yet been determined.

Top Sniper to air next week

MILITARY CHANNEL

For the past eight years, the U.S. Army's Sniper School at Fort Benning has hosted the International Sniper Competition; where two-man teams compete to earn the coveted title of "top sniper." In this competition, the participants' precision, camouflage, stalking and observational skills are put to the ultimate test. The action-packed events are revealed in the four-part special TOP Sniper 2, premiering Monday, and Tuesday, from 9 to 11 p.m. on the Military Channel.

Eighteen challenging events examine the teams' expertise in long-range shooting, urban combat and covert maneuvering through realistic conflicts and environments.

Bringing together the most elite snipers from around the world, the competition showcases 33 teams from the Army, Marines, and Air Force, and for the first time ever, includes a law enforcement team—a SWAT team from Pittsburgh, Pa. The international field includes representatives from Canada, Denmark, France and Ireland. Since some military teams are comprised of active special forces, the identities of many of the competitors have been

Pavers honor Infantrymen, supporters

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

In three sentences, master mason Roy Saunders summed up his feelings about laying the initial memorial granite pavers alongside Heritage Walk on the east side of the National Infantry Museum.

"I feel very blessed and honored to be a part of this," Saunders said. "I feel like I was chosen by God to do this. A lot of my friends went to Vietnam and didn't come back, and some came back without limbs … they fought for my freedom and made it possible for me to be able to do this."

Although laying the pavers will be an ongoing project, 1,394 pavers have been laid, said Dick Hagan, associate director of development for the museum.

"The walk is 1,000 feet long and can accommodate just under 14,000 pavers," he said "Right now, we are at about 10 percent, but it will be a perpetual thing."

With that many pavers, Saunders said the National Infantry Museum has a system for locating a specific paver.

"The museum will have a kiosk," he said. "All they will have to do is enter the name of the person they are looking for, it will give them the panel number, the row number and the position. Then, all they have to do is go find it."

The 4- by 8-inch granite pavers are a part of the In the Footsteps of Heroes program the National Infantry Museum developed to pay tribute to those who have fought for, and protected, the nation, Hagan said.

The program will honor active duty Soldiers and retired veterans; Infantry, Armor, Airborne, Army, Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard. The project also pays tribute to the wives, parents and children who have supported, loved and sometimes lost loved ones.

The Heritage Walk pavers, which connect the museum and the parade field, have room for three lines of text for purchasers to write inscriptions for their honoree.

Pavers are $250, which is tax deductible and includes a free 2- by 4-inch replica. Orders can be placed online or with a downloadable order form at www.nationalinfantrymuseum.com and brochures are available for mailing. Proceeds will be used to complete construction of the museum.

Soldiers, family members attend film premiere

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

"Thank you."

At the Friday premiere of the documentary film Brothers at War at Carmike 15 Cinemas in Columbus, these two words were spoken often — filmmakers thanked Soldiers for their service, and Soldiers thanked filmmakers for producing a film many of them called an accurate and honest depiction of their experiences in Iraq.

Brothers at War, directed by Jake Rademacher, chronicles his quest to understand what motivates his brothers, Joe and Isaac Rademacher, to serve and deploy with the U.S. Army. Rademacher travels to Iraq, where he embeds with four combat units and gains unprecedented access to their missions and work. He also explores how Joe's and Isaac's deployments affect the families they left behind.

Columbus is one of five largely military markets chosen for Friday's limited release. Jake Rademacher and actor Gary Sinise, the film's executive producer, were on hand at the premiere to greet Soldiers, family members and fans.

'Biggest Loser' wins big

PVT Erik S. Anderson
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

I always hated walking past the trendy shops at the mall on my way to the Big and Tall stores. Shopping was something I avoided at all costs, not because of my natural male disdain for mall consumerism, but because of the difficulty I had finding clothes that fit and having to see what I had become in the mirror.

Three years ago I tipped the scales at an obscene 330 pounds. Walking up two flights of stairs to my 3rd floor office was tiring. Instead of walking two blocks to pick up my mail, I would drive. Eighteen months later I had dropped down to 300 pounds through a random assortment of crash diets and depression. Then I made the decision to join the Army.

After a disheartening trip to my local recruiter and learning exactly how out of shape I was, I realized it was time to get started really turning my life around.

In my quest to join the Army, I had to start out slow, riding my bicycle and walking with a neighbor for a few miles a day. I practiced for the Assessment of Recruit Motivation and Strength test, and in March 2008 I went to the Military Entrance Processing Station in Atlanta.

My recruiter tried to prepare me for the ARMS test, but I wasn't ready for five minutes of stepping up and down 18 inches at 120 beats per minute. Fortunately, I cared enough to pass the test and not pass out, but I had a hard time walking for a while afterward.

I shipped to Basic Combat Training at Fort Jackson, S.C., weighing 285 pounds and had an embarrassing first Army Physical Fitness Test, completing 11 push-ups, 17 sit-ups and running two miles in over 22 minutes, for a score of 36 points. It is important to remember that a passing BCT I score is 150 points, 50 in each event.

BCT was tough, but I enjoyed it. I struggled with my physical abilities, but everything had improved by leaps and bounds at the end of the cycle. The final APFT showed my gains, 56 push-ups, 52 sit-ups and two miles in under 15:30 for a total of 222 points. The scale showed my losses. I had dropped down to a rather svelte 237 pounds, less than when I graduated high school in 1997.

Advanced Individual Training found me putting the pounds back on, and I graduated from the Defense Information School at Fort Meade, Md., weighing 255 pounds. After a month of hometown recruiting assistance in Jamestown, N.Y., with my extended family and some fantastic home cooking, I reported to my first duty station weighing 285 pounds.

I really like the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team as my first home, and I'm not just saying this because someone important and much higher ranking than me might read this. My fellow Soldiers are knowledgeable and make good battle buddies. My chain of command is helpful and they want to see me succeed.

I didn't really give much thought to my physical readiness because I had so many other things to learn, like how Kelley Hill operates, how the Army works, so on and so forth. Everything came crashing down when I failed my APFT in November 2008.

For a few days, I was depressed and really hard on myself. I let my section down, my wife and myself.

SSG Natalie P. Rostek, NCOIC of the brigade public affairs office, and my boss, was supportive. She told me that the most important thing is to not let it get me down. She said I should use this failed APFT to fuel my motivation to better myself.

SGT Rebecka A. Reyes, my first line supervisor, counseled me and laid out a plan to get me in shape and promotable again.

I ran at least six times per week, three of those weekly sessions with Reyes timing me and pushing me in a one-on-one session.

Credit goes to my wife, Melissa, for helping me get my eating habits in check. We dieted and counted calories together, and after two and a half months of diligent work, I took another APFT.

I took more than two minutes off of my run time and passed the APFT. However, when I went to the gym to get my height and weight measured, I was again disappointed.

My body fat calculation showed I was one percent outside of allowable regulations. One of the graders said it best: "Anderson, the Army really hates your body."

This strengthened my resolve.

The hard work finally paid off and my body is now within Army regulations.

This experience has taught me that I need to be conscious of my diet and my workout habits.

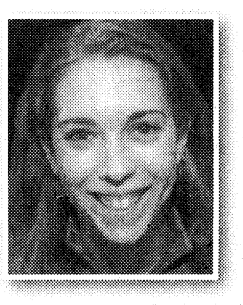

I dropped more than 35 pounds in the past two months. Not by taking pills, starving myself or being unhealthy in any way. I have changed my lifestyle, and will continue to improve myself because of it.

There might be other Soldiers on Kelley Hill or at other installations who have fought or are still fighting the same demons I do everyday. Use the people around you, like your NCOs and your battle buddies, for inspiration and support. Maintain your vigilance and reap the benefits of a better, healthier life.

And just in case you need to find me, the "Biggest Loser" will be at the mall, buying the clothes I used to wish I could wear.

For first-time shooter, AMU teaches more than just aim

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

I am not a gun person. Growing up in a suburban family of musicians and doctors, the closest I ever got to firing a weapon was the staple gun I used to help construct sets for the drama club in high school. So if you'd asked me last year if I could ever imagine the highlight of my week would be shooting with Soldiers who are Olympic champions, I probably would have laughed.

But, that's exactly what I did last week. Thanks to a chance encounter at a gas station, I got to spend half a day visiting several of the Army Marksmanship Unit's ranges, talking with shooters and coaches and trying out some of the weapons myself. It was an eye-opening experience.

Having never fired a weapon, I was wary. In my mind, weapons were for combat and training missions, hunting and self-defense. I had a hard time imagining using them for Olympic competition.

But the AMU shooters and coaches I spoke with immediately put me at ease. The expertise they displayed and the way they simplified the art of shooting for a beginner like me erased any doubts I'd had. As soon as I picked up the .22-caliber rifle I was handed and squeezed the trigger — I was hooked.

I shot several other weapons that day — an air pistol, an air rifle and a 12-gauge shotgun — but the hardest for me by far was the shotgun. AMU's shooters make it look easy, but believe me, it's not. After shooting about 15 rounds of skeet and only hitting one, I had a new appreciation for the incredible amount of skill and dedication it takes to reach AMU's level of competition. When my arm began to get tired after several minutes of shooting at the rifle range earlier that day, I realized my soreness was nothing compared with the dedication of the shooter in the lane next to mine — he would spend the next hour and a half perfecting his aim in a standing position while wearing 10 pounds of gear over his clothes. They don't become champions by chance.

When I left AMU, it was with a tremendous amount of respect for the shooters and a changed perspective on shooting. I realized that shooting is really no different than any other sport. Just like a football or baseball player, a shooter must train for years to develop their game.

Even though I can never hope to get my game up to AMU level, I'd like to think I didn't do too badly for a beginner. I may not be a trained shooter, but at least now I know the basics. And the best part is, this "non-gun" person gets to send home pictures of herself firing away.

COL Judith Lee assumes command of 14th CSH

COL Judith Lee assumed command of the 14th Combat Support Hospital from COL David Fulbright Monday during a change of command ceremony at Freedom Hall.

Lee is the first Army nurse to command a combat support hospital.

"I never really thought it would happen," she said. "It has been a dream of mine to command a combat support hospital. When I found out, I was in total disbelief — what an opportunity."

It's not Lee's first time at Fort Benning. She has served as a nurse practitioner at Martin Army Community Hospital and has served as the chief nurse and executive officer of the 14th Field Hospital.

Other assignments include chief nurse of the 86th Combat Support Hospital in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom and officer in charge at the 44th Medical Command.

COL David Jones, rear detachment commander of the 44th Medical Command, Fort Bragg, N.C., worked with Lee in combat and when she was assigned to the 44th Medical Command. Jones was the reviewing officer for the ceremony.

"I have witnessed in combat and in garrison your tenacity, dedication and compassion," he told Lee. "I have full confidence in your abilities and I know you will serve the unit well while in command. Your career skills and experience are exactly what we are looking for to lead this hospital."

Jones thanked Fulbright for all of his contributions to the unit.

"(COL Fulbright) turned in $2,000 of obsolete equipment, excess broken items... moved all three of the companies, moved the motor pool, renovated the hangar warehouse, deployed two units, restationed a unit and reactivated a new unit. If that's not an Army transformation, I don't know what is," Jones said. "You truly cared about the Soldiers and the job that you did — and it shows."

Fulbright's next assignment is as the command surgeon of the U.S. Army Northern Command at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Brothers: 'Rekindles' reasons why Soldiers joined

"I'm just excited to see the movie," said SSG Alex Marotta, Ranger Training Brigade. Marotta, who was deployed to the same area of Iraq as Joe Rademacher during filming, said he was surprised to learn he makes a brief appearance in the film.

"Apparently I'm helping Jake pack for going out (on a mission)," he said. "I don't know how that's going to affect my perception of the movie, but I'm just looking forward to actually seeing it. I was really happy to find out it's getting this much publicity. You don't see a whole lot of documentaries about the wars, so it's good to see something coming out like this, and with such positive press behind it, too."

A select group of Soldiers and family members viewed a special sneak peek of the film before its first public showing at Carmike 15, and participated in a question and answer session with Jake Rademacher, Sinise and producers David Scantling and Norman S. Powell. For some Soldiers, it was an opportunity to candidly share their own motivation for serving.

> "I think that at the end of the day, Soldiers, Marines, National Guardsmen — all those guys really do want their story told, they just want it told honestly."
> — Jake Rademacher, filmmaker

"I'm probably not just speaking for myself when I say this, but I want to thank you for putting yourself in harm's way to shed some positive light on the subject," said PV2 Carl Parson, Ranger Indoctrination Program, to Rademacher. "Most people don't understand what we're really doing over there ... (the film) helped me kind of rekindle why I joined. I joined initially because I'm from up north and I lost a friend in 9/11 ... it shows a much more uplifting view than what they show on the news."

SSG Joe Rademacher, a sniper instructor at Fort Benning, agreed with Parsons.

"I think one of the biggest problems with the media is they don't understand that we don't want to hear the story from them, we want to hear the story from the Soldiers who are fighting," he said. "And that's what's so different about Jake's film (versus) everything that's been put out about (the war) so far."

For PV2 Gavin Mueller, 198th Infantry Brigade, Brothers at War allowed him to view Iraq through his father's perspective.

"My dad just got back from Iraq, and I didn't really realize how it was over there for him knowing that he has a family back home," Mueller said to Jake Rademacher. "And seeing how your brother (Isaac) was about his daughter and his wife, it made me think that maybe that's how my dad felt when he was over there. Thank you for opening my eyes."

That kind of personal connection to Brothers at War is exactly what its filmmakers were aiming for, said Sinise, who has visited troops in Iraq many times.

"I think (people at Fort Benning) will recognize their own lives in this film," he said. "It's really a film for them. It shows the military side that I see when I go out time after time on base after base and spend time with their families and see the dedication of the people we have serving the country."

Jake Rademacher said he was happy to be able to tell the service members' stories.

"I think that at the end of the day, Soldiers, Marines, National Guardsmen — all those guys really do want their story told, they just want it told honestly," he said. "Put a frame around what's actually happening and send it back to the American people. That was my take."

Sacred soil timeline follows nation's wars

The Continental Army, including citizen militia, stands its ground against British Regulars on the field of battle in this Revolutionary-era re-enactment. The citizen Soldiers, who saw combat before the United States was born, defeated the most powerful army in the world at Yorktown.

1781 - Yorktown

Alexander Hamilton was a military man at heart, said his fifth-generation grandson Douglas Hamilton, who spread the soil of Yorktown, Va. Serving as senior aide-de-camp and confidant to GEN George Washington, Hamilton led three battalions at the Siege of Yorktown in 1781. Specifically, his men captured one of two remaining British strongholds, positioning the Americans and the French to trap Lord Cornwallis' army and prevent all routes of retreat, his grandson said.

"(Alexander) approached everything from a military standpoint, I think, and that is a formula for success," Hamilton said.

Yorktown was the last major land battle of the American Revolutionary War, as the surrender of Cornwallis there prompted the British to eventually negotiate an end to the war.

1862 - Antietam

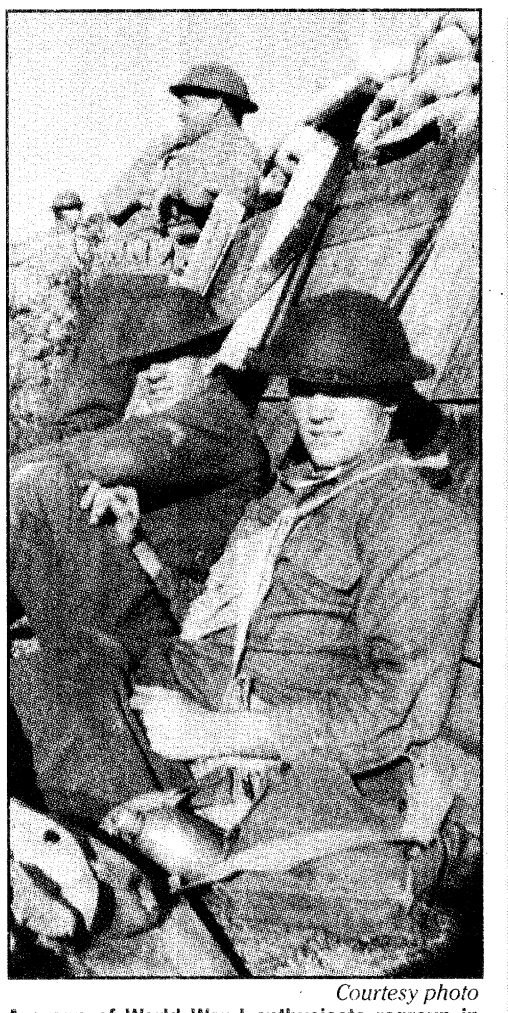

The South fought the North in the American Civil War from 1861 to 1865. More than 625,000 Americans died during the Civil War. The bloodiest, single-day battle in American history took place during the first major fight on Northern soil at Antietam. Among the wounded of Sept. 17, 1862, was PVT Charles Kempthorne, a Union Soldier. His great grandson, former U.S. Secretary of the Interior, and former U.S. senator and Idaho governor, Dirk Kempthorne sprinkled Antietam soil on the parade grounds along with Henry Benning Pease Jr., a descendant of Henry Lewis Benning. Fort Benning's namesake was the Confederate commander at Burnside Bridge where the sacred soil was taken from the Antietam battlefield.

"(Antietam soil) represents a significant military action, in that any time a Soldier fell, it was an American," Kempthorne said. "When Americans put on the uniform and are willing to sacrifice for our country, we must remember that sacrifice."

A group of World War I enthusiasts regroup in the trenches before acting a battle scene. The Doughboys left their homes and farms in an America at peace to be Soldiers in The Great War. The beginning of the First World War was largely fought in trenches but toward the end, Soldiers began to maneuver from their foxholes on to the battlefield. Taking a lesson from the changes in battlefield tactics, the Army recognized the need for a separate and expanded Infantry School. Camp Benning was established in Columbus in October 1918 to train Infantry Soldiers to meet the demands of modern warfare. Although the Armistice was declared one month later, Fort Benning remains the home of the Infantry.

1918 - Soissons

The Battle of Soissons in France in 1918 was waged between American and German troops, resulting in more than 12,000 American casualties. This WWI conflict was where the most decorated American officer of the war, Samuel Parker, would earn the Medal of Honor. Then a second lieutenant, Parker was assigned to the 28th Infantry. He and his men charged through direct enemy rifle and machine gun fire to seize an enemy stronghold that would close a gap between friendly forces. In the process, Parker and his men captured six machine guns and some 40 prisoners.

"He wasn't hesitant to talk about it but he didn't bring it up," said Parker's grandson, Samuel Parker Moss, who spread the soil from his grandfather's battlefield of Soissons, France. Moss explained how Parker said he made it through the gunfire using a method the jackrabbits used back home to avoid becoming the family supper: "Hopping from side to side on his way up to the guns."

Parker's assault continued a second day and he was wounded in the foot. He refused to be evacuated and led his men until the objective was reached, at times crawling on his hands and knees because of his injury. Parker was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the Silver Star Medal and two Purple Hearts.

"(Parker) felt it was a high honor to serve his country," Moss said. "The most important part was leading the people entrusted to him as an officer."

George York, son of SGT Alvin C. York, who also earned the Medal of Honor in France, assisted Moss in spreading the soil from WWI. York led an attack on a German machine gun nest, taking out 38 guns, killing 28 enemy soldiers and capturing 138.

Infantry descendants spread soil of historic battlefields

Soldiers graduating from Infantry and basic combat training here will now walk across some of the same soil their forefathers fought on, said MG(R) Jerry White, chairman of the National Infantry Museum Foundation.

The soil was gathered from historical battlegrounds around the world, including Yorktown, Antietam, Soissons, Normandy, Corregidor, Korea, Vietnam and Iraq and Afghanistan, and was spread on the new parade field at the National Infantry Museum and Soldier Center at Patriot Park Thursday. The "sacred soil" was spread by the descendants of some of America's most decorated Infantrymen.

"What we're honoring is the tradition of service of people who have gone far afield to defend what our country stands for," said Theodore Roosevelt IV, great-grandson of the president who earned the Medal of Honor at San Juan Hill during the Spanish American War and grandson of Theodore Jr. who earned his Medal of Honor on D-Day.

"Our family is part of that tradition," he said. "But the heritage belongs to all Americans."

Following the dedication ceremony, the past was met by the present, as Soldiers from B Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, 198th Infantry Brigade, were the first to graduate on the sacred soil.

"What makes it all so sacred is that the lood of America's finest sons has fertilized hat soil," said CSM Marvin Hill, Multi-National orces, Iraq command sergeant major.

"There are lessons learned, opportunities eized and momentums gained because of he actions of the Infantrymen on those attlefields. Many of those lessons are very pplicable today," he said.

As Hill spoke to the graduates and shared me of these lessons, he told them they e fortunate to have gone through training rrounded by seasoned combat veterans. his will benefit them, he said, because many the graduates will join units preparing or just completing their third or fourth mbat tour since 9/11.

The dedication and graduation also atured a Vietnam-era re-enactment of elicopter air mobile operations.

The Soldier Center, including the museum obby, gift shop, a 292-seat IMAX theater with screen five stories high and the Fife and Drum Restaurant, a Revolutionary-themed merican bistro, also opened to the public hursday. Museum-goers can tour World War I Street, a replication of a company street rom the 1940s.

An American paratrooper boards an aircraft in preparation for a jump into enemy territory. Airborne combat jumps were made in the Pacific, as well as in Europe, during WWII. Pacific jumps were often extremely dangerous. The Soldiers jumping into Corregidor Island did so during daylight at the risk of becoming easy targets for Japanese bullets as well as landing in the ocean. On Corregidor, the Soldiers of the 11th Airborne Division had the mission of eliminating enemy tunnels and bunkers to weaken the enemy's defenses.

1945 - Corregidor

Americans also fought WWII on Pacific soil. In 1942, American forces lost the Battle for Corregidor and Bataan fell to the invading Japanese on Luzon. But the island bastion of Corregidor, with its network of tunnels and fortifications across the entrance to Manila Bay, was essential to the fight. It took three years to get it back, and as long as the island remained in American hands, the Japanese would be denied the use of the Manila Bay. The soil from Corregidor was spread by Kirk Davis, whose father, Charles Davis, earned the Medal of Honor for his actions at Guadalcanal, "America's incredible 'opening act' on the ground in the Pacific Theater of operations," said Davis.

Then a captain, Charles Davis volunteered to carry instructions to leading elements of his battalion caught in a crossfire, dodging Japanese machine gun fire. He delivered the orders, supervised their execution and remained with the trapped elements overnight. The next day, Davis led a charge on a Japanese position armed only with his pistol - his rifle had jammed during his first shot. The capture of this position broke the resistance and helped secure the objective.

"It was his first contact with the enemy," said his son. Although Davis rarely spoke of the incident, when he did, the spotlight was always directed toward others, duty and country, Kirk wrote in his yet unpublished biography of this time in his parent's lives.

"I now believe it is imperative that the extraordinary sacrifices of (Medal of Honor) recipients are made known to future generations so that they understand the precious gifts these individuals gave America so selflessly and unhesitatingly.

"Dad would be the first one to consider it a privilege (to spread Corregidor's soil), because this is for all Soldiers," Kirk said.

1950 to 1953 - Korea

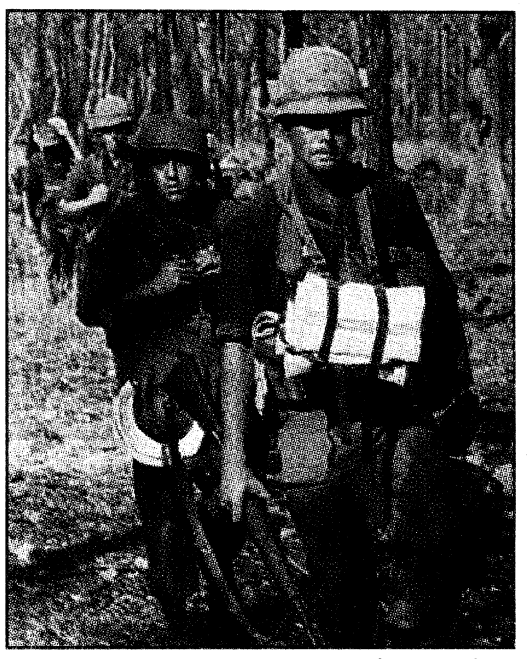

COL Ola Lee Mize and GEN Paik Sun-Yup spread soil from Korea. Mize earned the Medal of Honor for his actions in the defense of Outpost Harry in Korea in 1953. During his actions, he was knocked down by artillery and grenade fire three times, fighting his way to friendly positions that had been overrun. He saved the life of a fellow Soldier, killed 10 enemy fighters and dispersed the remainder during the battle.

Sun-Yup is known for his service during the Korean War. He was the first four-star general in the history of Republic of Korea forces. When the Korean War broke out in 1950, he was assigned to defend Seoul as the 1st Infantry Division's commanding officer, and made significant contributions to the defense of the Pusan perimeter.

1965 to 1975 - Vietnam

The Battle of Ia Drang was one of the first major battles between U.S. forces and the People's Army of Vietnam during the Vietnam War. This two-part battle took place November 1965 at two landing zones in South Vietnam. These battles were depicted in the book, We Were Soldiers Once...and Young, by LTG(R) Hal Moore and journalist Joe Galloway. The first part of the battle, at LZ X-ray, was made into the film, We Were Soldiers. Then LTC Moore and CSM Basil Plumley led the 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry Regiment's charge at X-ray. Both sides suffered heavy losses and both claimed victory. The U.S. lost 234 dead, with 242 wounded. Soil from LZ X-ray was added to the parade field by the 1st Bn., 7th Cav., command team, Moore and Plumley.

SGT David Bougourd, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, deployed from Fort Benning, pries open a door to a warehouse in Jisr Diyala, Iraq, last year as the Soldiers in his platoon provide support. The 1st Bn., 15th Inf. Regt., is known for its most decorated Soldier of WWII, as the "Audie Murphey Battalion." In 2008, more than 250,000 Soldiers deployed to nearly 80 countries worldwide.

2002 to Present - Global War on Terrorism

"The Global War on Terrorism is believed to be a war that our nation, particularly our Soldiers, will be engaged in for a long, long time," said CSM Marvin Hill, the command sergeant major of Multi-National Forces-Iraq, senior enlisted advisor to GEN David Petraeus. The war is being fought to protect U.S. citizens and interests, here and abroad, and to break up terrorist cells around the globe, but most notably in Iraq and Afghanistan. "The battlefields of Iraq and Afghanistan are complex and forever changing," Hill said. "There are many lessons learned and changes to doctrine as a result of how we are able to adapt to the enemy, the situation and the environment."

Many of the Soldiers who graduated Thursday will be assigned to units that will deploy to one of these countries. CSM Hill spread this battle soil.

TOP Sniper 2 explores the science of making quick and accurate shots by examining precision rifle scopes and ballistic calculations. Viewers will see the vital skills necessary for modern urban warfare and follow the competitors as they undergo the stresses of a city-turned-battleground. Competitors test their long-range marksmanship and participate in events that push both their weapons and combat skills to the extreme, including:

• Aerial Shoot: Considered the most difficult marksmanship challenge, competitors shoot from a moving helicopter and try to avoid collateral damage.

• Keep In Memory System: Snipers are responsible for memorizing their targets and, in doing so, improving their target identification skills.

• Counter Sniper: Participants navigate in an urban environment and engage enemy snipers who are mixed in with non-threatening individuals.

• Obstacle Course: One hurdle after another, competitors get their hearts racing by running a quarter mile while carrying two jugs of water, maneuvering through rope courses and crawling through mud pits.

• Cold Bore: This event calculates long-range marksmanship skills in the 600-yard shoot.

• Convoy Live Fire: Competitors have to eliminate threats at long range in this simulated attack upon this convoy.

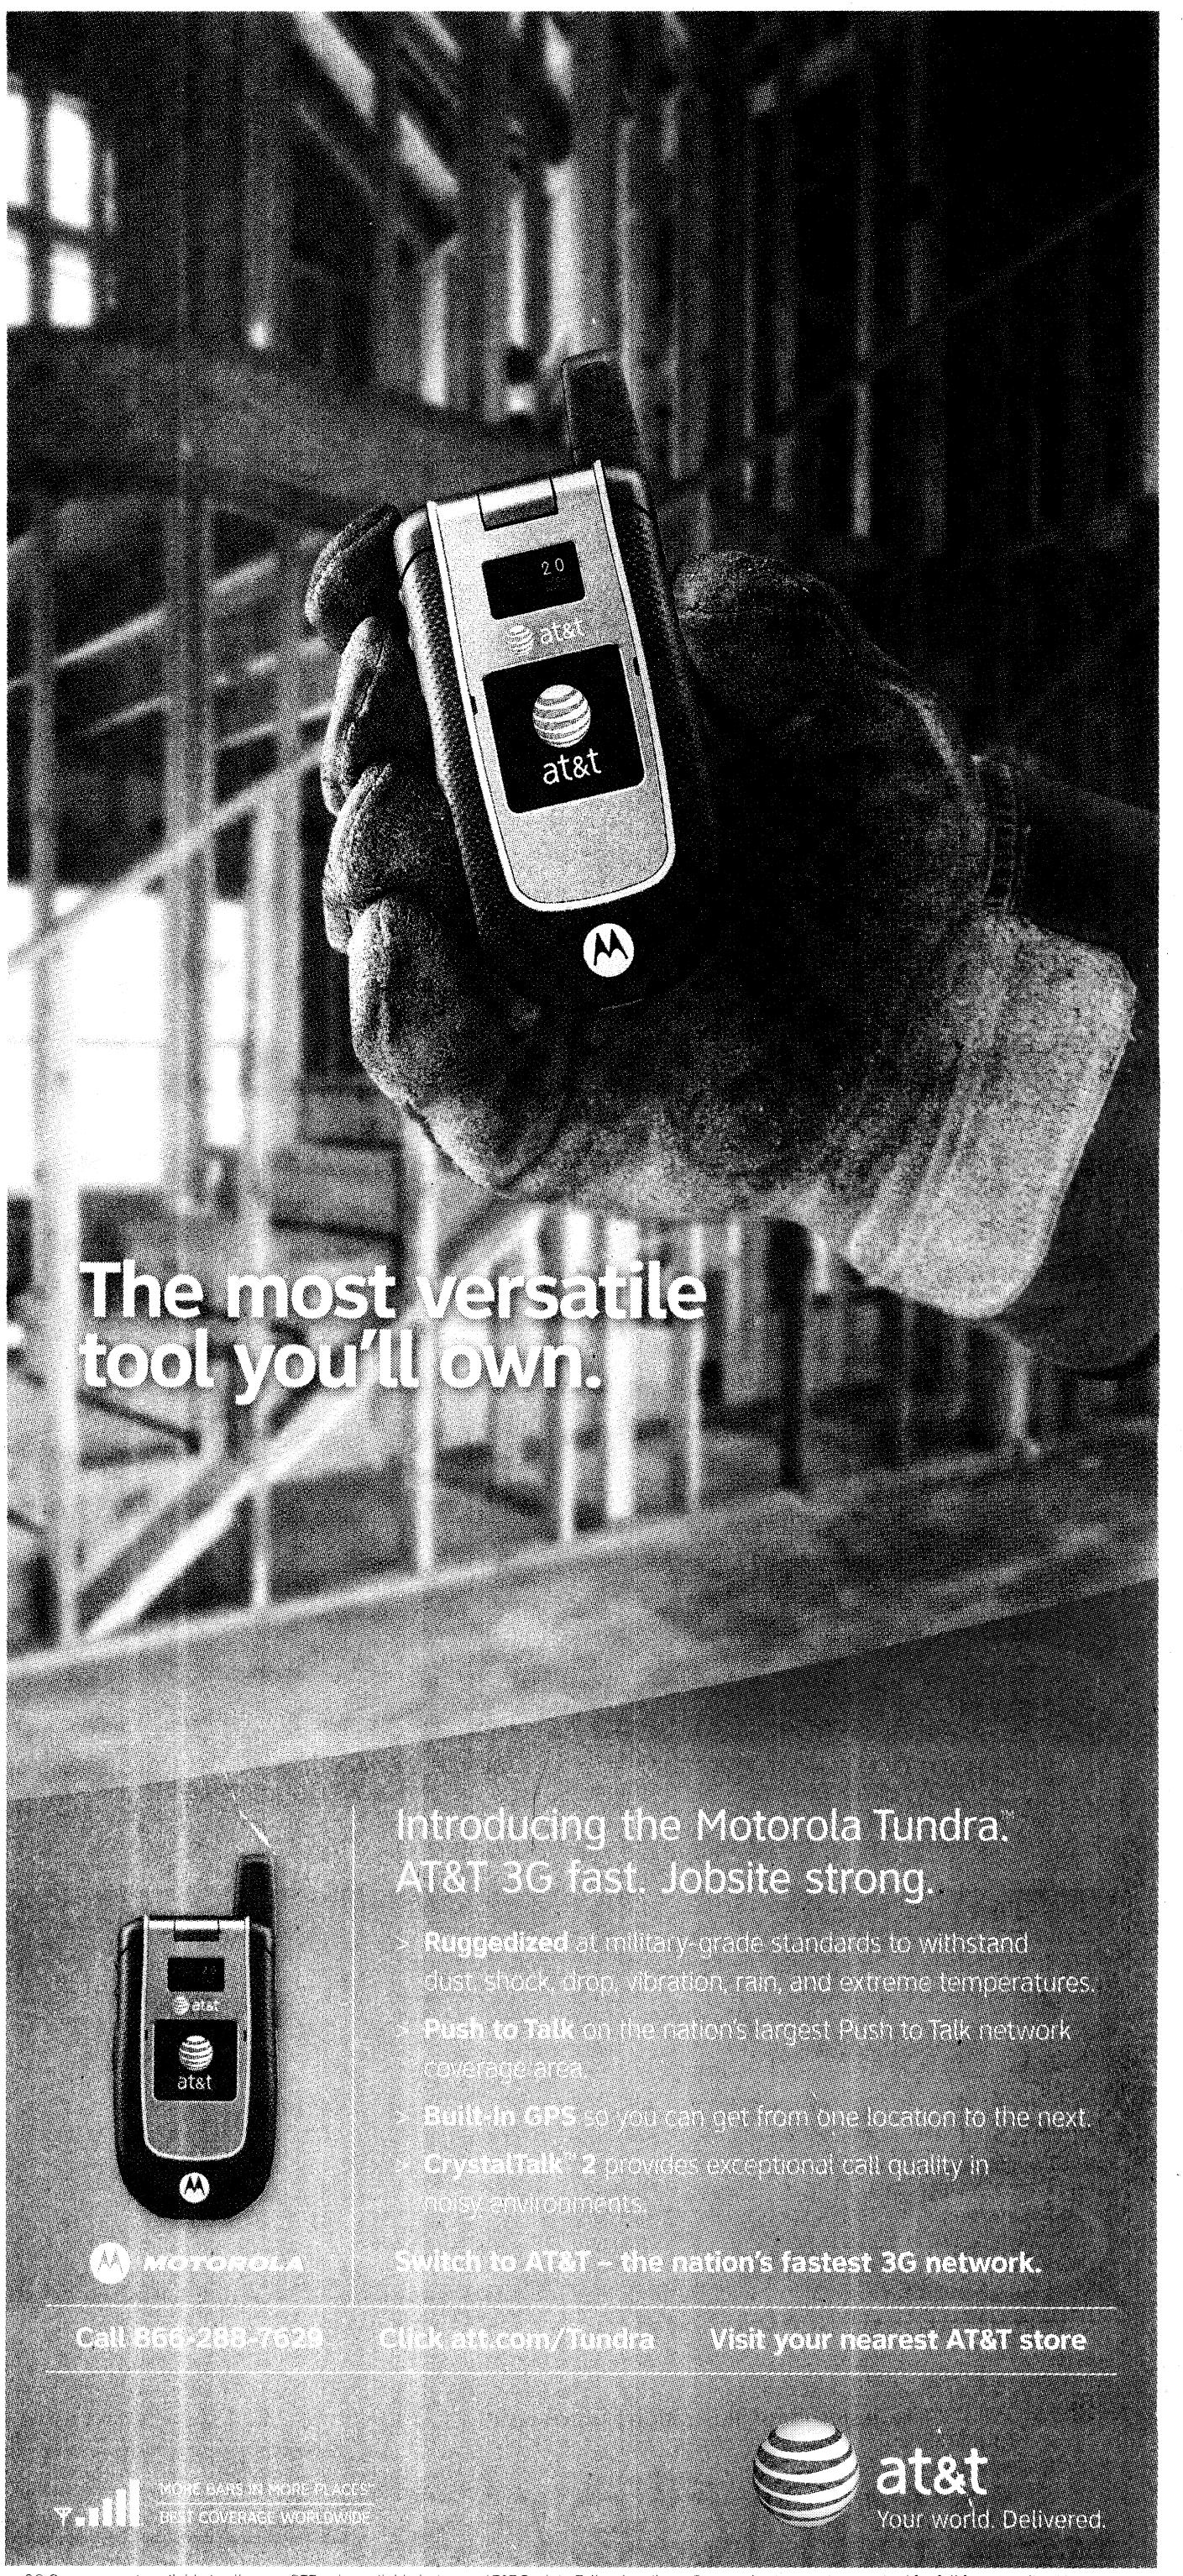

• Night Unknown Distance: Snipers are challenged to place accurate shots in the dark while using night vision equipment.

• Stalk: In the most famous sniper event, competitors are judged on their ability to go undetected in open terrain during broad daylight. In full camouflage, snipers have to move toward their target, while going unseen by the spotters, and place an accurate shot.

BENCH NOTES

USA rallies past Puerto Rico

Team USA came from behind to beat Puerto Rico 6-5 in the World Cup Baseball Classic to advance to the semifinals this weekend. The victory was especially sweet following Saturday's humiliating loss against Puerto Rico that triggered the mercy rule when the USA fell 10 runs behind.

Infielders Chipper Jones and Dustin Pedroia and pitcher Matt Lindstrom are just a few of the players who have been sidelined with injuries. We will see how Team USA adjusts.

NASCAR team announces additions

JR Motorsports will have its own version of a "Dream Team" for the 2009 NASCAR Nationwide Series. The No. 5 team for 2009 will include veteran drivers Ryan Newman, Scott Wimmer and Tony Stewart joining team owner Dale Earnhardt Jr. and all-time series wins leader Mark Martin for the 21-race schedule.

Together, the five account for 91 Nationwide Series victories in 636 starts.

Wimmer will compete in six events in the No. 5 Chevrolet and Newman in four, with Fastenal as the primary sponsor. Dreams do come true.

Federer to get new love

Roger Federer is going to be a father. The second-ranked Swiss tennis player said in a message posted on his Web site that girlfriend Mirka Vavrinec is pregnant with the couple's first child. The baby is due sometime in the summer.

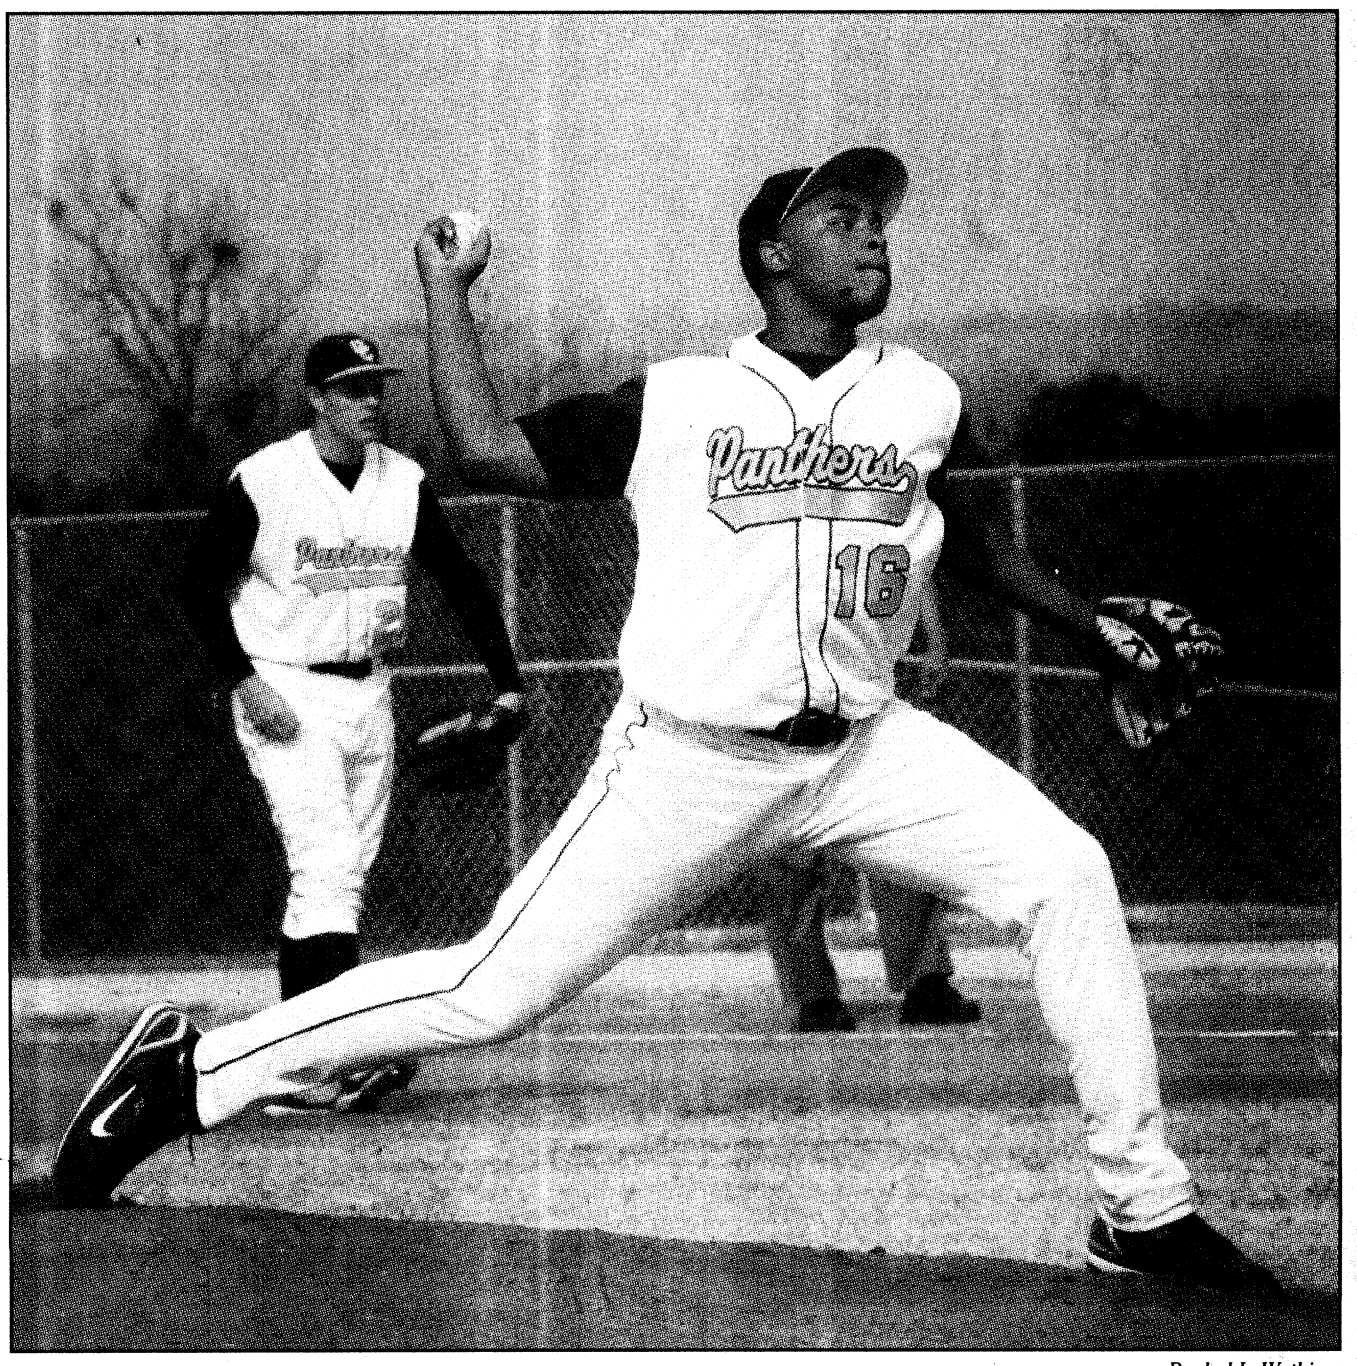

The 13-time Grand Slam champion is in Indian Wells, Calif., for the Masters tournament. Federer is seeded second behind Rafael Nadal at Indian Wells, a tournament he won from 2004-06. He will open against either Marc Gicquel or Simone Bolelli.

Real Madrid wants Beckham

MLS Los Angeles Galaxy star David Beckham, who turns 34 in May, is rumored to be with another team next year if Florentino Perez becomes Real Madrid's next president. Perez and Beckham have history. Perez was the man in charge at Real Madrid when Beckham came to the team from Manchester United in 2003.

Beckham is currently on loan with AC Milan until the end of the season and has said his long-term ambitions remain firmly tied to developing soccer in the U.S. For now, it looks like the L.A. Galaxy and MLS will continue to benefit from Beckham playing in the U.S., but only time will tell.

Chattahoochee County High School Panthers (2B-A) defeated the Greenville High School Patriots (2B-A) at home, 17-0, in a quick outing stopped short by the mercy rule after three innings Friday. It was Chattco's first region game of the season.

Panther Jacovi White pitched a one-hitter and recorded six strikeouts in the win.

White struck out two of the four batters he faced in the top of the first inning, while the defense recorded the third out, catching Patriot Deandre Harris as he attempted to steal third.

The Panthers capitalized on a home run, a two-RBI triple and a two-RBI single in the bottom of the inning.

White opened with a lead-off home run followed by a Gioncarlo Guerrero two-RBI double. Guerrero scored on a Mike Hill RBI and Mike Morgan hit a two-RBI single, scoring Hill and Cedric Wilson.

Hill and the defense worked their magic again in the top of the second inning, allowing one runner on base before sending the Patriot defense back on the field in the bottom of the second inning.

The second inning was another big inning for the Panthers, scoring eight runs, taking a 17-0 lead.

In the top of the final inning,

AMU shooter aims for 2012 Paralympics

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

SSG Josh Olson knows what it means to reinvent yourself. An Infantryman for most of his Army career, Olson never dreamed he would someday be an internationally ranked shooter with the Army's World Class Athlete Program. But, everything changed for Olson after losing his right leg in an attack during his 2003 deployment to Iraq.

"I was going to get out of the military," Olson said. "I was an Infantryman, and I knew I couldn't do that anymore, so I just wanted to get out. Then this opportunity came up and it gave me a renewed sense of duty and honor."

That opportunity was a call from Army Marksmanship Unit recruiters to Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where Olson was undergoing physical therapy. Olson had been participating in a program that provides hunting, fishing and outdoor sports events to recovering Soldiers. When medical center officials asked if any Soldiers were interested in an AMU recruiting trip to Fort Benning, Olson jumped at the chance.

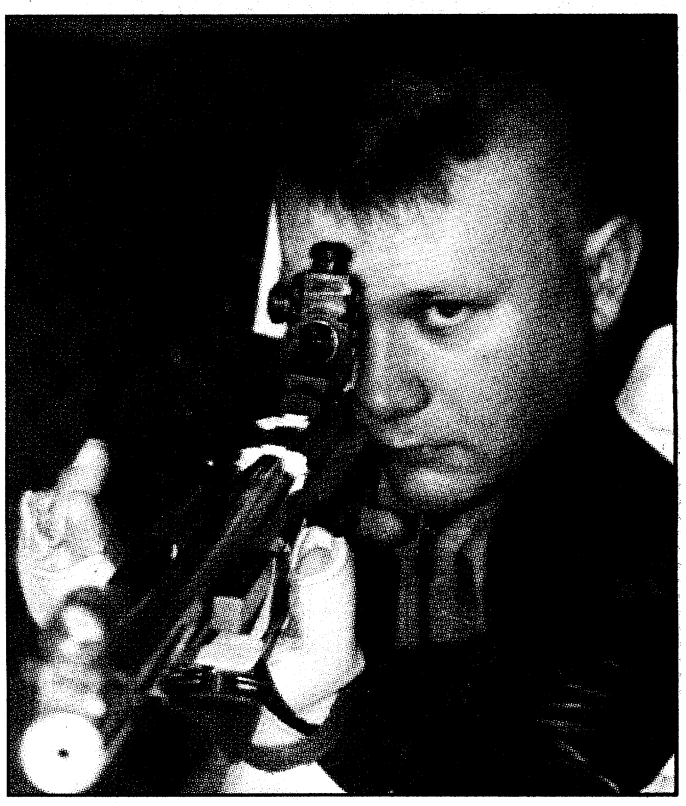

"When I found out I could do this, I was like, 'Yeah, absolutely, let's do it!'" he said. "You can't be in the fight, but you have the opportunity to help Soldiers who are going to fight. So I'm still contributing, just in a different way."

> "I can't represent the U.S. as a deployed Soldier, but now I represent them on a whole new battlefield — the athletic field."
> — SSG Josh Olson

Since joining the AMU international rifle shooting team in 2005, Olson has risen rapidly through the world of shooting, shooting in the 2006 International Paralympics Committee World Championships and the 2007 Oceanic Games, and earning a spot as an alternate on the 2008 Paralympics team. Today, he's aiming for a spot on the U.S. shooting team at the 2012 Paralympics in London.

"As far as he's come in such a short period of time is amazing," said SFC Jason Parker, Olson's AMU teammate. "He came to us with no international shooting experience and in SSG Josh Olson trains with a .22-caliber rifle at Fort Benning in 2008. Olson, a member of the Army Marksmanship Unit's International Rifle team, spends about 15 hours training each week, and participates in between 10 and 15 national and international matches each year. Olson is the only wounded warrior of AMU. Olson is a trained marksmanship instructor, and trains other Soldiers when he's not competing or training.

Cindi Maynard has been a volunteer soccer coach for two years. She coaches because she wants to make a difference in military children's lives and says she is doing so with the 9- to 11-year-old Fort Benning Lizards.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Preparing players for the future

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Whether her team wins or loses, Cindi Maynard's philosophy focuses on one number — 100.

"Give 100 percent positive attitude, 100 percent effort and 100 percent teamwork," she said. "If you enforce those three things from the start of the season, you will have an awesome team."

Maynard has been a volunteer coach with Child, Youth, School and Services for two years. She began coaching because she said she wanted to make a difference in military children's lives. She's coaching the Fort Benning Lizards, a 9- to 11-year-old soccer team this year.

"Military children go through so much and I think sports is a stress reliever for them," she said. "It builds confidence. There are some kids who have never played soccer before and it's amazing to see how much their confidence — in themselves and their skills — improves by the end of the season."

Maynard said she uses positive re-enforcement to motivate the kids.

Chattco: Posts 17-0 win

White struck out Patriot Thomas Sweat before Mike Godfrey hit a single and stole second base. Godfrey had the only hit against White, but the attempt to get back in the game fell short when Harris, who reached first on a walk, was thrown out attempting to steal second.

Panthers coach Danny Burgamy said the team's aggressiveness paid off.

"Their (Patriots) pitching was weak, but we didn't let them dictate the game," he said. "We kept control of it."

Chattco batters had seven walks by the end of the game.

Everyone worked hard for the win, said Panther first baseman Guerrero.

"Out in the field, we had a pretty good defense — we were able to stop them before they got any runs," he said. "And we had good hitting and pitching going on."

Panther second baseman Michael Morgan said he was happy with the win, but he hopes the team can keep the wins going throughout the season.

The Panthers took on the Brookstone School Cougars Tuesday and lost, 17-3. Chattco (1-1, 6-1) is third in the subregion, behind Brookstone School and first place Pacelli High School Vikings. The Panthers will take on the Vikings at 5 p.m. today at Pacelli.

AMU: Olson aims high

three years' time, he was an alternate. We expect him to be up on the medal podium in another three years."

To qualify for the Paralympics, Olson will need to shoot at least three qualifying scores in international matches over the next four years. He expects to have shot at least two by the end of 2009.

Olson's dedication and positive attitude have set an example for the entire unit, Parker said.

"He's always had a positive attitude," Parker said. "That's one of the great things about him. You look at him and sometimes you can see that he's not feeling great, but he's out there putting out 100 percent. He's a great motivator. He's contributed to our mission in every possible way."

Olson said that knowing his AMU teammates are counting on him helps keep him motivated during tough times.

"On days I don't want to get up and come to training and I'm kind of feeling sorry for myself, I think, 'Hey look, there are people counting on you, so you need to get out there and work your butt off,'" he said.

He credits his injury with allowing him to serve and represent his country in new ways.

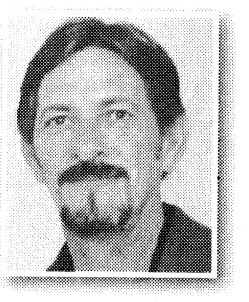

"Without me getting injured, I would have never gotten the opportunity to come here and shoot," he said. "Being wounded might have closed some doors, but it opened others in other places. And this is one of the places it opened up — for me to be able to compete, shoot and train troops and still be contributing to the war effort.

"Being a disabled veteran, to go out and wear U.S.A. on your jacket and to hear them announce you — 'Now shooting for the U.S., Josh Olson' — that's a pretty big deal. I can't represent the U.S. as a deployed Soldier, but now I represent them on a whole new battlefield — the athletic field."

What happened to values like trust, loyalty in NFL?

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

No matter what time of year it is, you can always count on players from the National Football League to give the fans something to talk about.

The latest big news in the NFL surrounds Denver Broncos quarterback Jay Cutler and the trade talks the Broncos brass said never occurred — at least that is what they told Cutler initially.

According to published reports, Cutler is upset the Broncos entertained a three way trade proposal with New England and other teams that would have brought New England backup quarterback Matt Cassel to the Broncos and sent Cutler packing.

There wasn't a trade but pro bowl quarterback Cutler is upset because he was told the conversation never happened, only to find out it did.

Cutler has requested a trade from Denver and has put his two homes near Denver on the market.

Some columnists are calling Cutler a crybaby and saying he should just get over it, citing how football is a business and therefore teams have to do what is best for the team.

While I agree with some aspects of Cutler's critics, his critics are missing some valuable points.

Yes, football is a business, and yes, a team must do what is best for the team, but what about values like honesty, trust and loyalty?

Broncos' management is partly responsible for Cutler's request for a trade. First they tell him there was no talk of a trade, then kind of say there may have been a conversation about a trade, but they only listened to the offer and never intended to trade him — kind of like saying you smoked, but never inhaled.

If I were Cutler, I would be thinking "how can I trust these people, they can't even get their story straight."

The latest spin? Broncos officials said the staff always evaluates every position to make the team better, whether by trading or signing players.

Cutler has every right to be upset. I am sure he feels betrayed.

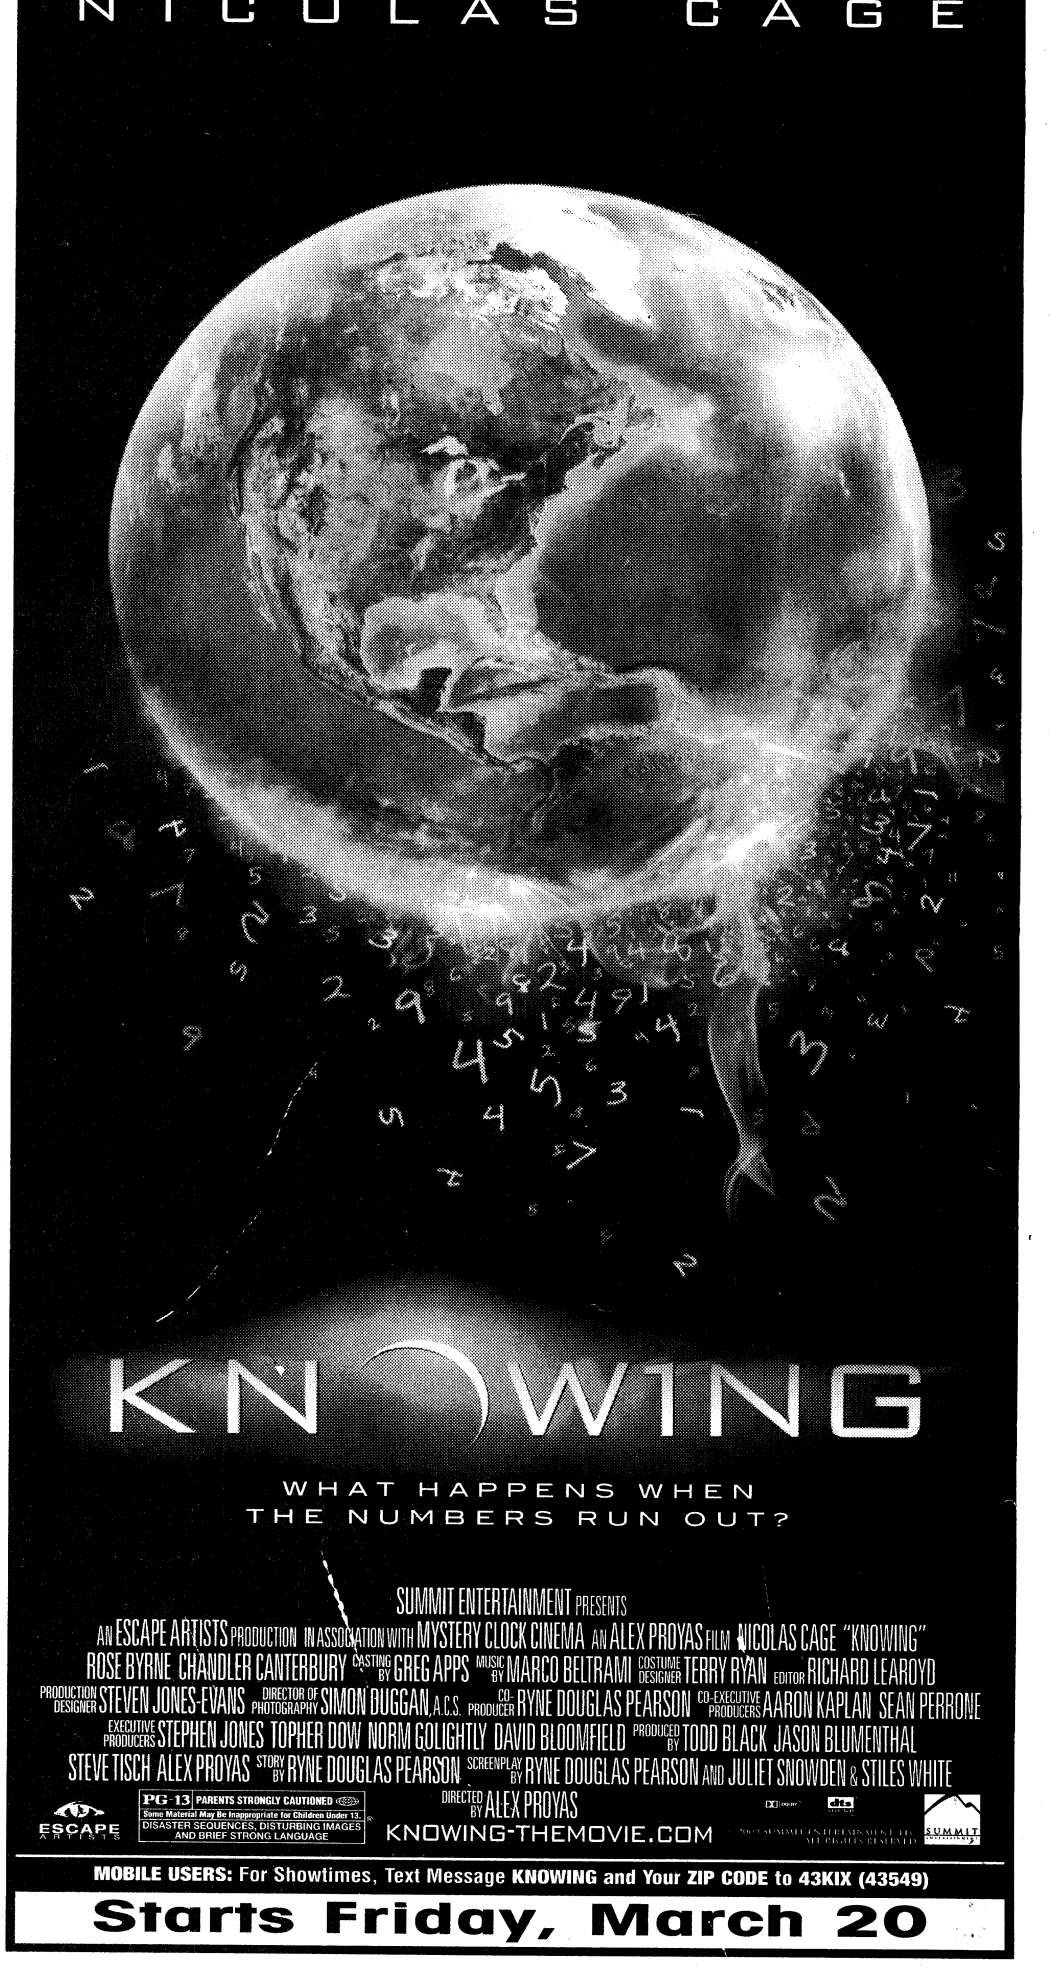

Players are taught certain things from the early beginning of their playing days, from sandlot through high school and college — trust and loyalty, to name a couple.

It would be difficult to work for someone who not only tried to get rid of you, but also was not so honest or forthcoming about it.

While Cutler may still be with the team for now, simply because they have a contract with him, I don't believe he will be with the team much past draft day.

So, who wins and who loses? No one. The Broncos will lose a pro bowl quarterback, and Cutler will be labeled a crybaby. The Bronco fans? They will just move on and support whoever is there next year, but they won't be happy.

Lizards defeat Battle Sharks, 2-0

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Lizards' record is 1-1 after their 2-0 victory over the Battle Sharks Saturday at a soccer game at French Field. The loss dropped the Battle Sharks to 0-2.

The game began with both teams battling for field position, but neither team was successful at putting the ball in the net. The Lizards attempted three goals, but the Battle Sharks' defense held until Lizard Josh Ivanjack broke the stalemate with a direct kick in the net. At the end of the first half, the Lizards led, 1-0.

Both teams racked up out-of-bounds penalties and fouls in the final half and although the Battle Sharks attempted kicks on the goal, they weren't able to score. As the game wound down, Lizard Rebekah Jacobs dribbled the ball toward the net and set up the goal for Lizard Logan Polston to seal the win for the Lizards, 2-0.

"The kids showed a lot of teamwork and they are really starting to use the skills and drills I taught them at practice," Lizards' coach Cindy Maynard said. "We have some awesome goalies and good defenders."

Polston said the game was challenging.

"It was a tough game and the other team had some really good players. I think teamwork is what helped us win the game. We had good passing and kicking," Polston said. "I felt good about scoring a goal because it helped put our team in the lead."

The Lizards will take on the Gators at 9 a.m. Saturday at French Field.

Battle Shark Victor Chabot and Lizard Logan Polston battle for the ball Saturday at French Field. Polston scored a goal with an assist from Lizard Rebekah Jacobs. The Lizards defeated the Battle Sharks, 2-0. The Lizards have a 1-1 record.

Future: Players build confidence

"If I tell one child 'good job' and another child hears, that child will want to hear positive feedback too and will want to improve," she said.

At this age, Maynard focuses on teaching the players their positions and the fundamentals of soccer.

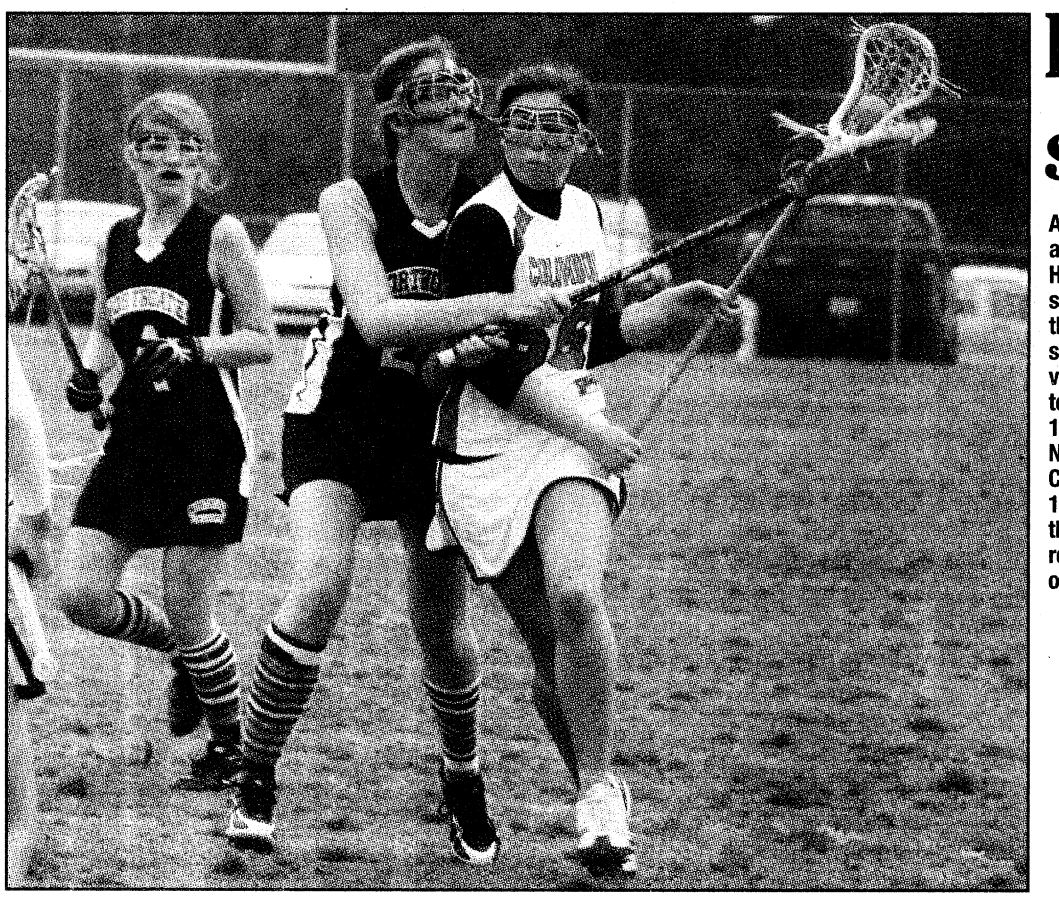

"In some of the younger age groups, a group of kids huddle around the ball, running up and down the field the entire game — that can be tiring," she said. "It's important players learn their positions now so they are prepared for the future."

When the children try out for a middle school team, not every child will get a spot on the team, Maynard said. But she said by the end of this season, she wants the players to feel confident enough in themselves and the game to try out.

It is key children know the basics before middle school because that's the building block for the technical skills children will learn in middle school, she said.

For now, Maynard works on teaching fundamentals and makes sure the players know that 100 percent is expected from all of them.

Engineers volunteer with Habitat for Humanity

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Nineteen Soldiers from the 11th Engineer Battalion helped build several Habitat for Humanity houses last week in south Columbus. They partnered with college students on spring break to provide housing for low-income families at a low, interest-free cost.

"It's a great opportunity to be involved with the Columbus community and for the Soldiers and students to get to know each other," said CPT Vanessa Stolzoff, OIC during the construction.

"If you live in a community, you need to help out and be involved in your community," she said. "It's also great training for the Soldiers. They're not only improving their skills, they're learning to work as a team. They actually get to build from the ground up."

Stolzoff said she enjoyed getting to know the students throughout the week as they worked side by side.

The students, in turn, made friends with the engineers and learned a little bit about the military.

"It's been an amazing experience — the stories they share with us, just getting to know each other. The friendships we've built with the Soldiers this week will last a lifetime," said Kaitlin Mulqueen, a student from Sacred Heart University in Connecticut, who plans to send care

Her husband, SSG Valente Mena, was deployed, and Iris was busy taking nursing classes, being a single parent for their 6-year-old son, "little Val," and helping a friend decorate the walls in her daughter's room.

Students recycle cans for project

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Though Monday was a teacher work day at McBride Elementary School, the 15 students in the school's Woodlands Environmental Protection Club didn't take the day off from learning.

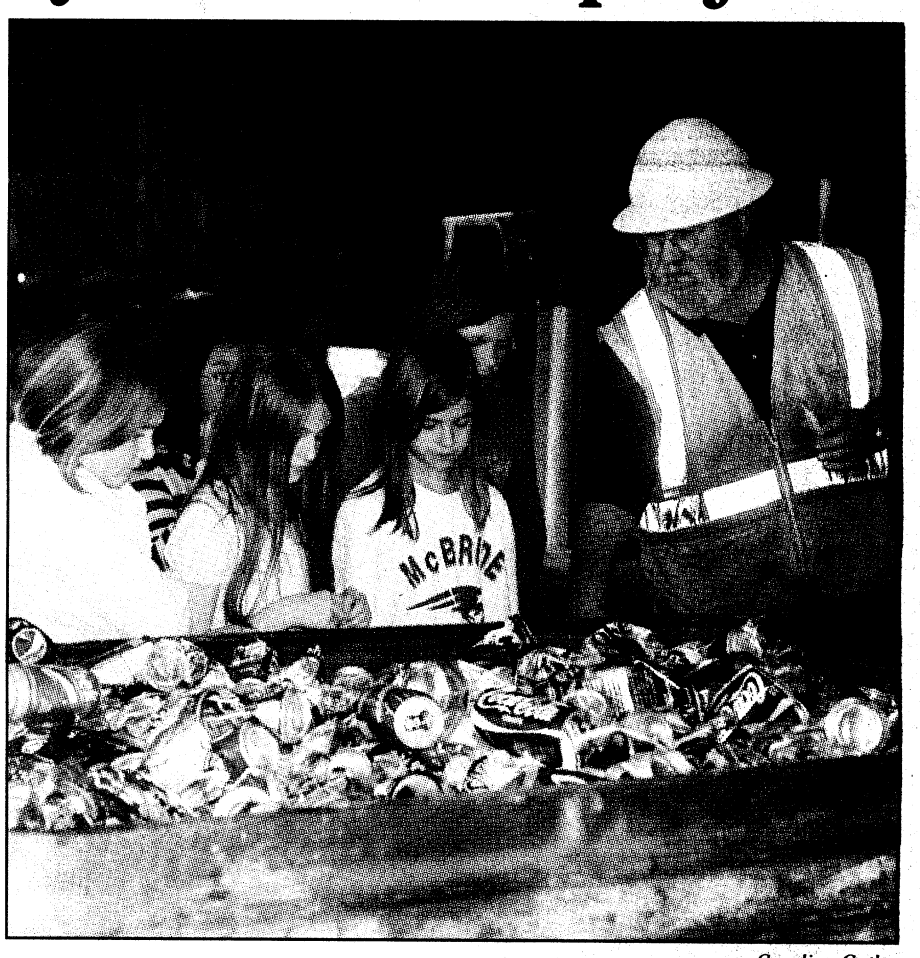

The students visited Ronald McDonald House, where they donated the more than 35,000 soda can pop-tops they had collected since the beginning of the school year to the charity's pop-top recycling program, which generates funds to cover the house's gas, water and electricity bills.

Lisa Harman, club sponsor, said she hoped the field trip would help students connect the club's activities to the world outside the classroom.

"I think this just puts it into perspective for them," she said. "It shows them that we're not just doing this in isolation."

At the Ronald McDonald House, the students met with Beth Mancini, program manager and volunteer coordinator, who explained how the organization provides temporary lodging for families of children who travel to Columbus for specialized medical care.

For third-grader Kyra Burgess, the trip was especially meaningful. Burgess, who was born three months premature, suffered many medical problems as an infant, and her mother,

Faith Middle School students get on board with The Big Read

Cheryl Rodewig
Actor Bill Oberst Jr. recreates one of Mark Twain's lecture stops for Faith Middle School students Tuesday in the school gym. Oberst recited one of Twain's famous ghost stories, The Golden Arm, and an excerpt from Adventures of Huckleberry Finn about Huck's encounter with Colonel Sherman.

'Mark Twain' shares stories, advice with post children

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"It was like I was actually meeting the real Mark Twain — even though he's been dead for a hundred years," said seventh-grader Carlos Griffin after watching actor Bill Oberst Jr. play the part of the 70-year-old author.

Oberst visited Faith Middle School Tuesday as part of The Big Read, a program that encourages people to rediscover literature. He presented a sample of one of Twain's lectures, sharing a ghost story, an excerpt from Adventures of Huckleberry Finn and some words of wisdom, namely to "beware of money fever" and hold onto dreams.

"It's a connection to literature that some kids don't get in life," said Dr. Julio Gonzalez, the school principal. "He had 600 kids captivated with stories. (The Big Read) promotes reading in schools by trying to bring characters in classics back to life. This is a positive way to reach kids you wouldn't otherwise. Some of these kids are fighting reading."

Eighth-grader Jessica Allen said she enjoyed that the show was "interactive."

"It was like he was having a conversation with each of us," she said.

"I liked the story-telling. I feel like he really made (reading) more interesting for us. Reading is like a whole other world. In my mind, I can imagine these things."

The Big Read, sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts, was created in 2006 after an NEA report showed that the reading of literature was rapidly declining across the country, especially with America's youth. This month, Fort Benning and the valley area joined with communities nationwide to celebrate reading with a focus on Twain's classic, The Adventures of Tom Sawyer.

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief MSG Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations.

Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

BOSS volunteers join families at Little Creek Farm

MAY INSTITUTE

Nearly 30 Soldiers with the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program volunteered to help children and families for a day of horseback riding and a cookout at Little Creek Farm in Upatoi, Ga.

The outing was for children and families who receive services from the Southeast Regional Autism Center.

The Center is a program of May Institute, a national nonprofit organization that provides comprehensive, research-based services to children and adults with autism and other developmental disabilities, brain injury, mental illness and other behavioral health care needs.

The outing was a family-friendly extension of the Center's social skills development program for children with autism and other special needs, said Anne Stull, senior behavior therapist at the center.

"These outings give children a chance to interact with others," she said. "They offer the entire family a social opportunity where everyone can relax and have fun."

"The Soldiers loved giving their time to the children," said SGT Zkmain Mahoney, BOSS president. "Being a part of the day was as much a joy for us as we hope it was for the families."

Mahoney said BOSS plans to include the Southeast Regional Autism Center as part of its ongoing community service agenda.

"The day was just awesome," said LaTanya Evans, a parent of two children receiving services at the Center.

For more information about the Southeastern Regional Autism Center, visit www.mayinstitute.org or call 706-571-7771.

Suicide stand down ends with celebrating life

The 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team capped off their suicide stand down day with a Celebration of Life concert at the Kelley Hill Chapel on Fort Benning March 6.

The event, attended by approximately 150 people, featured six different musical groups from the Columbus area.

"Everybody loves to come here and do stuff for the Soldiers," said SGT Jeremy Stewart, the chaplain assistant for 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment. "They look forward to giving back to those of us who sacrifice and do so much for them."

Stewart, who organized the event, was thankful for everyone who attended. More than half of those in attendance were civilians who came out to support the event.

"We often hear that the civilian side supports us (Soldiers) and considers us heroes, but very rarely do we actually get a chance to see it up close," said Chaplain (CPT) Philip Jeon, 1-15 Inf. Regt. "It was wonderful to see all of these different groups, civilians and Soldiers, come together and celebrate the joy and true meaning of life."

Jeon said that the event was a fitting ending to the suicide training Soldiers went through the entire week.

"Tonight is about recognizing the fullness of the life our creator has given us, not just in this world, but for all eternity," he said. "Everyone's life, from the lowest ranking private to the most seasoned veteran, is important. Tonight we recognize that."

Engineers: Help build houses in Columbus packages to the engineers she has met when they deploy.

"It shows that no matter what's going on in the world, people can come together," she said. "We're both here building dreams for a family."

SPC Keith Quevedo, 60th Engineer Company, wasn't thinking about building dreams when he volunteered to help construct the homes.

"I never actually went that deep into it," he said. "I just work. They told us 80 percent of the people had never touched a hammer in their life, so I said, 'Well, let's go train some people.' It's just something you have to do … because it needs to be done."

With electrical and carpentry experience in both the military and civilian sectors, Quevedo hoped he could help the students meet their construction deadline.

He enjoyed the work and the opportunity to show the students the professionalism and competency of the military, he said.

"I'm a Soldier," Quevedo said. "I try to uphold the values, and part of it is dedication, duty, hard work, loyalty to these students, personal courage to get up on that roof — all part of leadership. These guys need my help, so I was going to help out."

Program: Encourages reading

The next event will be a lecture on the comparison between Twain's work and 19th-century American paintings, held at the Columbus Museum at 7 p.m. Thursday.

"The better you read, the better you do in life — financially, spiritually, it's all intertwined," said Henry McCoy, Chattahoochee Valley Libraries program manager. "This program was designed to get people to read."

staying there."

Fourth-graders Jaylene Fernandez and Caroline Tucker said they felt good about helping out Ronald McDonald House.

"I know that I'm helping people that need help," Fernandez said.

"It makes me feel like everyone is being treated equally and nobody is being left out," Tucker said.

Third-grader Clayton Donahue was so impressed with Ronald McDonald House that he would like to return there as a volunteer, he said.

"From Ronald McDonald House, I learned they do a lot to help people, and I think it's a nice place," he said. "I might go there one day to help out."

Next, students visited Schnitzer Steel Industries, a metal recycling center, where they cashed in more than 5,000 soda cans they had collected during an aluminum can drive to mark the 100th day of the school year. The club will use the cash for future school beautification projects. Rodney Starling, non-ferrous manager, showed the students how the cans they donated would be processed through Schnizter's facilities. They watched as the cans traveled up a conveyor belt to be compressed and weighed. The students learned they had collected 115 pounds of aluminum cans and received $39.10.

"Recycling is one of the best things you can do to help the environment," said third-grader Hayley Dralle.

"When I grow up, I want to live in Colorado, so I might join a recycling (club) there," said fifth-grader Jasmine Garcia.

This small replica of the Follow Me Statue, created by Iris Mena, is made entirely from sugar except a thin wire frame and the bayonet, which is a toothpick painted to match the bronze statue.

Cakes: Feature variety of flavors, styles

nearly every day, until one day, near its completion, her friend surprised her with a question.

"She said, 'If you can paint on a wall, can you paint on a cake? My daughter's birthday is coming up, and I want to give her a really nice cake.' Nobody had ever asked me that before," Iris said. "I've played with a lot of mediums — oils, acrylic, water, charcoal, but I hadn't tried sugar. So I did it. I tried it."

Iris said the experiment was "just for fun."

"I wasn't going to do this," she said. "I was going to school to be a nurse, not a cake decorator."

But then the phone calls came in. By word of mouth, people started hearing about Iris's stylish confections, and Funky Monkey Cakes, the family baking business, was born.

"It's a family event every time we do it. It brings the family closer together," said Valente, who bakes and mixes the icing.

Even little Val helps out as "quality control," the taste tester who confirms that a new flavor or cake is ready for the public.

"They taste very good," Val said. "I always want to help baking cakes, you know, because I want to be a baker, because the best thing about cakes is they look pretty."

With the Mena family, customers can have anything from "pretty" to outlandish, like the 16-inch by 12-inch edible WALL-E robot Iris made for her son's birthday, which took 15 hours to build. They can do any size event, from graduations and weddings to farewell ceremonies and parties.

"We welcome challenges," Valente said. "We're out to make people's creative dreams come into life. All they have to do is come up with an idea of what they want, and we'll see what we can do to make that come true. We want the 'Can you do this?'"

Though Iris is passionate about her appetizing artwork, blending flavors like Bavarian cream, raspberry and fudge chocolate is not her favorite part of her job.

"Seeing the expressions on the people's faces, that's the most fun, when they say 'You made that?' And I say, 'Just for you,'" she said. "Their expression is everything to me. I love people. I love serving. If I can meet your needs, then I am excited to help you."

The Menas hope to open up a "cakery" someday after they retire. Until then, they're bringing their confections to Fort Benning and the valley area.

Photos of some of Iris's cakes are featured at the Fort Benning Conference Center. For more pictures, a listing of flavors, customer reviews or ordering information, visit http://funkymonkeycakes.com.

In the journey of life, slow and steady will always win

Chaplain (CPT) Neal K. Hicks
1ST BATTALION (AIRBORNE), 507TH PARACHUTE INFANTRY REGIMENT

One of my favorite Bible stories focuses on the life of Caleb. Caleb was one of 12 spies who went into the Promised Land to recon the area for the impending invasion. When they returned, 10 of the spies said the fight could not be won and the giants who lived in the land would destroy the people. However, Caleb and Joshua believed the direction God had given, and argued to trust God and take the land. Even though Joshua and Caleb trusted the Lord, the people refused to fight. They left the land God had promised them, and the Lord condemned them to wander in the desert for 40 years until all the unfaithful had died.

Caleb, 40 years later, is at the edge of the Promised Land in Joshua 15. He's 85 years old now. His hair is gray, his knees crack when he stands and he has to squint more than ever in order to make out the landscape. Joshua is the general in charge of the army as they came back to the Promised Land. It has been a successful campaign. The victory has been won over most of the land, and Joshua is going to hand the land over to the different tribes. However, there is still a battle to be fought.

In the midst of these events, Caleb approaches Joshua and makes a simple claim. "Forty years ago, I brought back an accurate and honest report. I stuck to my guns, to ally with God, and Moses promised me my inheritance would be the land that I walked on. Give me the hill country. If God goes with me, I will conquer it."

Caleb proves he has the heart of a warrior and a believer when he asks to finish the fight. "Give me the high ground," he says. He wants to take hold of the promise God had given him 40 years earlier. He will not settle for anything less than the full blessing.

There are a few lessons we should take from Caleb's journey of faith. First off, sometimes we suffer because of other people's decisions and not because of anything we did. When he was 40, Caleb was ready to fight, but the people were scared. He spent the next four decades wandering in the desert because of their lack of faith. Have you ever paid for someone else's poor decision? That is a tough row to hoe, as my grandfather used to say. Life can be miserable when we are forced to accept the consequences of others' actions.

Second, faithfulness always pays off. If you trust God, he will always come through for you. The word of God is full of promises that show the character of the Lord. Above all, he is faithful. If you continue to live in faith, God's blessing will come to you. God is never in a hurry, but he's never late either. Dave Ramsey has a great summary of the tortoise and the hare fable. He says, "The tortoise wins every time." God's way may seem slow and cumbersome, but in the end his plan produces the best results and protects you from hurt. Be patient, be faithful and trust in the Lord.

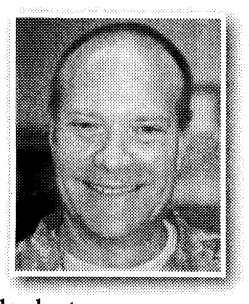

Finally, Caleb's life teaches us a great lesson: fight. Never give up. Never quit. Caleb set his mind to following God despite the obstacles of hurtful and frustrating people. He would not quit. When Joshua shouted God's message "Be strong and courageous for the Lord your God is with you," Caleb yelled back, "Let's go." He was a fighter for the promised life and never a victim of circumstance.

As you set this paper down and get ready to go about your day, you can be certain you will face the same things Caleb faced: stubborn people, uncalled-for circumstances and unfair situations. However, you have a choice on how you will respond to these things. I suggest you focus on being faithful and fighting for what is right. It may not produce the immediate response you would like, but remember: the tortoise always wins.

To understand women's words, men must think twice

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

In previous articles, I have tried to explain how men and women use words differently.

Why? Because we are different — God created us uniquely different, and we love that, most of the time. But sometimes misunderstandings occur. In a humorous look at miscommunication, I will attempt to explain a few concepts that can get a man in trouble with a woman.

Fine: Men, when you hear the word fine from a woman's mouth, it does not mean everything is OK. Fine is the word women use to end an argument when they are right and you need to shut up.

Time: Usually people think time is a component of the measuring system used to sequence events, to compare the durations of events and the intervals between them. For example, when watching a football game, the clock measures out the time in minutes and seconds. So, when a man says the game will be over in five minutes, he means five minutes on the football game clock. For a woman who is getting dressed, five minutes means a half an hour. Men, five minutes is only five minutes if you have just been given five more minutes to watch the game before helping around the house. It is five minutes on the wall clock and not the game clock.

Nothing: Most men have the ability to do nothing. And when a woman asks a man what he is thinking about, and he says nothing, he means nothing. When a woman says nothing, this is the calm before the storm. This nothing means something, and all should be wary. Arguments that begin with nothing usually end with fine.

Go ahead: To a man go ahead is simply permission to do something. Men, when a woman says go ahead, it is not permission to go out with the guys. It is a dare. Don't do it.

Sigh: A sigh is not technically a word, but it's a form of communication. Mark Gungor says when a guy sighs it means life is good, aghhhh. A loud sigh is a non-verbal statement often misunderstood by men. When a woman sighs, it does not mean life is good. A loud sigh means she thinks you are an idiot and wonders why she is wasting her time standing here and arguing with you about nothing (see the meaning of nothing above).

That's OK: These are misunderstood words. To a man, that's OK means all is well, all is forgiven, no harm, no foul. But, that's OK is one of the most dangerous statements a woman can make to a man. That's OK means she wants to think long and hard before deciding how and when to take retribution.

Thanks: An expression of appreciation. And surprisingly men, when a woman says thanks, she is thanking you, do not question, or faint. Just say you're welcome. This is a word that both sexes understand.

Don't worry about it, I got it: is another dangerous statement, meaning this is something a woman has told a man to do more than several times, but is now doing it herself. This results in a man asking what's wrong? To which a woman will respond, nothing.

If you are struggling over nothing and would like to talk to someone, we are here for you. The Chaplain Family Life Center is available. Give us a call and make an appointment today by calling 706-545-1760 or stop by our office at 2606 Dixie Road located in Soldiers' Plaza.

Each of the seven suites at the Plains Historic Inn and Antiques Mall is decorated with a decade theme, starting with the 1920s, when Jimmy Carter was born, through the 80s, pictured here. It was Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter's idea to turn the historic building into a bed and breakfast. The Plains Better Hometown Committee owns and operates it.

Plains Historic Inn and Antiques Mall

A successful travel reporter is the one who crafts her words carefully in describing a place — let's say a quaint bed and breakfast — without overtly endorsing it. Just the facts, no bias.

For example, my editor would never let me get away with a statement such as, "The Plains Historic Inn and Antiques Mall in Plains, Ga., is simply the nicest bed and breakfast I've ever experienced." That's the sort of comment I might write in the guest log on the bedside table of the Presidential Suite of the Plains Historic Inn, and that would be entirely appropriate, but it's not something I would try to pass as responsible journalism. No, sir.

On the other hand, I could share with you comments other guests wrote ("Never have we stayed in a B&B with such nice accommodations …" and "Undoubtedly one of the best places we've ever stayed in … such elegance!") and that would be acceptable only with attribution. That's Basic Journalism 101.

That means a writer naturally inclined to gush about the inn's warm and cozy atmosphere or the hospitality of the staff might struggle to focus on concrete details, such as the exquisite décor. Of course, she wouldn't use a subjective word like exquisite.

A committee that included Rosalynn Carter shopped extensively to find period pieces for the inn. Authenticity does not diminish its luxury.

She would suggest to you that the Plains Historic Inn is unique in that it celebrates the life of Plains' most famous son, former President Jimmy Carter, without venturing into territory rightly reserved for (and preserved by) the National Park Service's Historic Plains Tour. The Plains Inn is not a museum. That's a fact.

And she would tell you, if she was thorough, that the inn occupies the upper floor of a 100-year-old building smack-dab in the middle of Plains, Ga. (population 700 on Sundays, when the kids come home for supper), 45 miles southeast of Fort Benning on Highway 280. Since 1920, the building has been occupied by a furniture store, a mercantile, a bank, a funeral home and a ghost. Naturally. I've never met a respectable B&B without at least one full-time, non-paying guest.

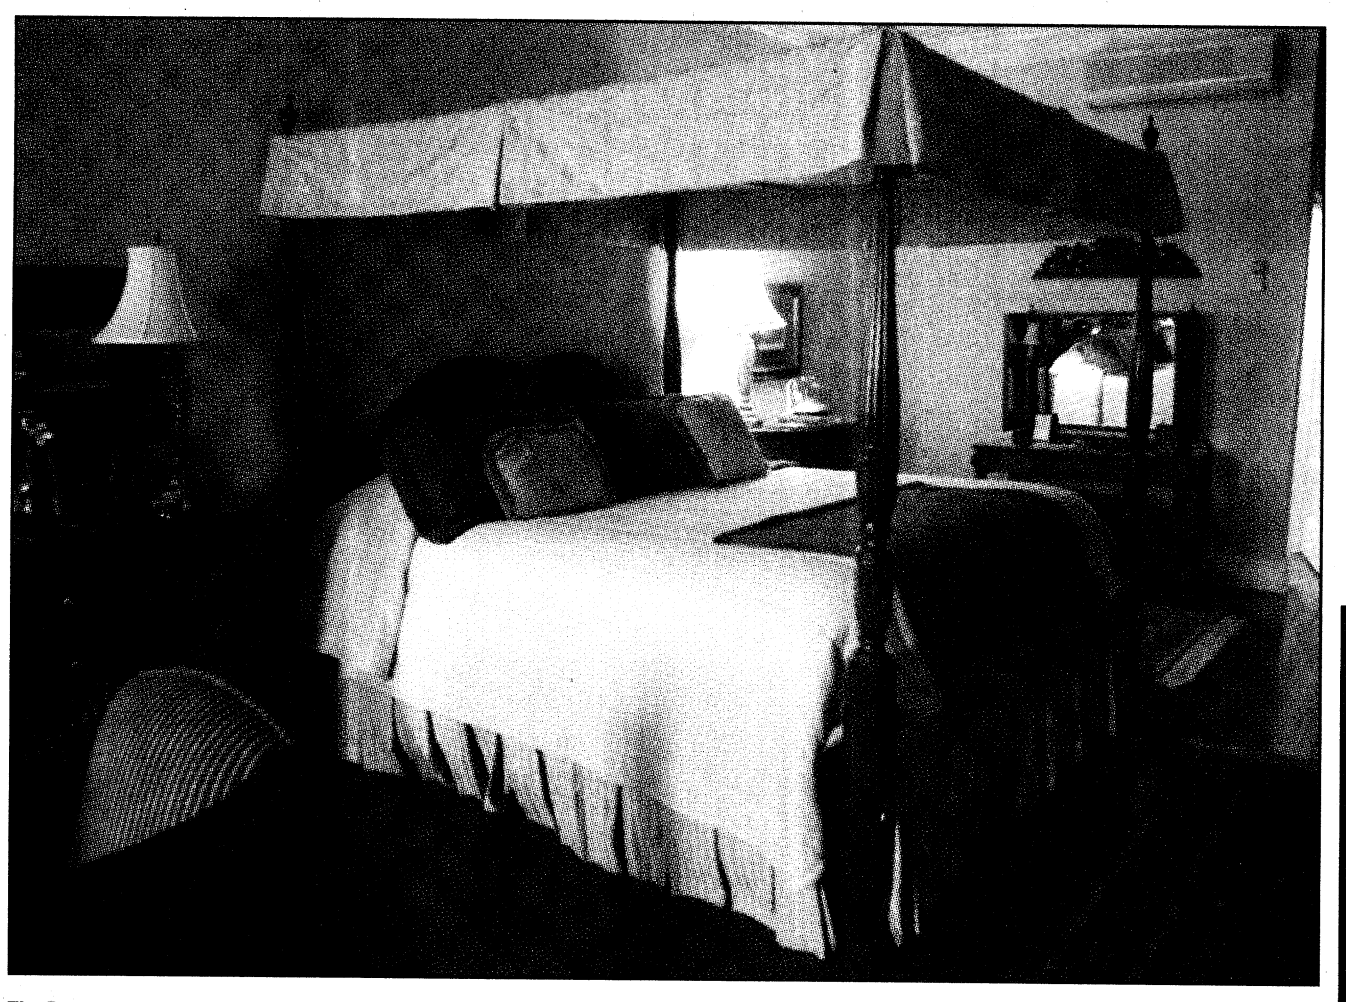

The inn has a spacious common room, with ample seating and kitchen amenities, and seven suites, each themed for a decade (i.e. the 20s Suite, the 30s Suite, etc.), with authentic period pieces and the occasional reproduction, where necessary (such as plumbing fixtures, claw-foot tubs and chain-flush toilets). "Ample" and "hearty" could be construed as subjective, so you should verify this information for yourself.

Guests are encouraged to explore the inn, all the suites — as long as rooms are unoccupied, — and the antiques mall downstairs. All suites have cable TV, a DSL wireless Internet connection and a private bath.

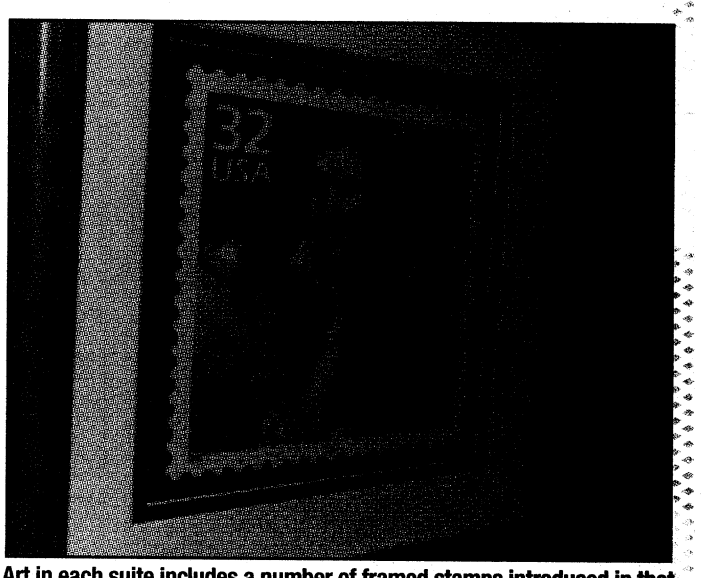

Room rates start at $74.50 every night of the week except Saturday, when they start at $85. The Presidential Suite, — yes, he slept there — is the largest and most elegant, subjectively speaking. It's also the only suite with a king size bed. To sleep where Jimmy Carter slept will set you back $89 on weeknights or $110 on Saturday. Rates include a help-yourself continental breakfast.

Senior citizens receive a 10 percent discount. Service members and military retirees receive a 15 percent discount. Be sure to verify this when you call for a reservation. To reserve a suite, call 229-824-4517. If you're lucky, you'll get your choice of rooms.

To learn more about the inn and Plains, visit www.plainsgeorgia.com. There you will find a schedule of Sunday School services when the former president is teaching. You are invited to attend.

The Presidential Suite, also called the 70s Suite, is the largest and most elegant. It is the only room with a king size bed.

Art in each suite includes a number of framed stamps introduced in that decade. Literature, including magazines and coffee table books, are also true to the era.

Sacred Soil Ceremony

Soil ceremony links past with present

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Two hundred and thirty-four years of Army history converged March 19 on the parade field next to the new National Infantry Museum. Soil from America's major conflicts was scattered on the field by representatives of those efforts — from Douglas Hamilton, fifth generation grandson of Alexander Hamilton who fought in the Revolutionary War, to CSM Marvin Hill, the senior enlisted advisor to GEN David Petraeus.

At the same time, 143 Soldiers graduated from B Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment.

"In order for us to link today's Soldiers with their legendary predecessors, we will seed this beautiful parade field with soil that has been taken from major battles in all of the nation's wars. When these young men march past us, they will literally be walking on the same soil where their forefathers fought and died," said MG(R) Jerry White, chairman of the National Infantry Foundation, before the Soldiers

Officials reset traffic lights on Dixie Road

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning officials have changed how the traffic lights on Dixie Road operate to ease congestion during peak hours.

The light on Dixie Road to Lindsay Creek Parkway, also known as I-185, was reset to remain green for the maximum time of two minutes and 30 seconds. This change allows eastbound traffic, commuters leaving Main Post, to turn left on I-185, easing congestion, said LTC Kevin Clarke, Fort Benning's provost marshal. Opposing traffic at this light will have the green light for approximately 30 seconds.

The traffic light at Dixie and Lumpkin roads, near the Main Post Gas Station, now flashes yellow during peak traffic times, to permit the fastest flow of eastbound traffic, Clarke said.

These changes are in effect from 4 to 6 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, and from 3 to 5 p.m. on Thursdays.

"We realize this is not a perfect solution," Clarke said, "but until the improvement project to expand Dixie Road is completed, this is the best option we have."

Farewell

CWO4(R) Benjamin Reese, a member of the original Parachute Test Platoon, died March 19. He was 92.

In 1940, he volunteered for the test platoon, predecessor of the 501st Parachute Infantry Battalion, earning an extra $21 a month in jump pay. Reese made two combat parachute jumps during World War II. The first was in Normandy on D-Day with the 502nd Parachute Infantry Regiment. The second was during Operation Market Garden.

Reese retired from the Army in 1969 with 30 years and 90 days of service.

This picture of Ben Reese was taken during the Airborne Awards festival in 2008.

Reese is survived by his wife of 66 years, Verne, two sons, Benjamin and COL David Reese, and three grandchildren.

"There's a hole in our hearts. Something's missing," Jim Rhodes told a small group of veterans and family members gathered at the Medal of Honor memorial at the Government Center in Columbus Saturday.

That "something" was the late COL(R) Bob Nett, one of five Medal of Honor recipients who called Columbus home. Nett, who died Oct. 19, was faithful to attend the annual National Medal of Honor Day ceremony.

"We miss him so much," said Rhodes, the World War II veteran who spearheads the ceremony.

COL(R) John House was the guest speaker at the event. House said "something" makes Medal of Honor recipients "just a little bit different."

"Any Soldier who claims he's fearless is one to watch carefully," House said. "But Medal of Honor recipients are the ones who decided to manage their fear."

Columbus State University's ROTC provided the color guard, and Larry Greenlee, of the Columbus Police Department, played Taps on a bugle.

In addition to Nett, the Medal of Honor memorial bears the names of Charles McGaha, Jackson Pharris, Freeman Horner and Donald Johnston.

Test platoon pioneer gets new set of jump wings

Bridget Siter
BAYONET CORRESPONDENT

Peter was standing at the gate early one morning, a couple of hours before dawn, when he felt a tap on his shoulder.

"Morning, Pete." It was Mike.

"Why don't you go grab a cup of coffee? I'll get this one," he said, nodding toward the tall, lanky young man approaching through the clouds, a parachute pack on his back and a set of silver wings on his chest.

"One of yours?" Pete asked.

"Yep, one of mine, but not just any one," Michael replied. "That's Ben Reese. He's an original."

That's the way I like to imagine it happened last week, on March 19, when 92-year-old retired Chief Warrant Officer Benjamin C. Reese left this world for the next, where he was greeted by Michael, the patron saint of paratroopers, and a host of airborne angels.

Ben Reese was 23 years old when he volunteered to participate in the great airborne experiment back in 1940. Never before, not in this country anyway, had anyone tried to leave a perfectly good airplane midair with any reasonable expectation of making it safely to the ground. The parachute was as foreign to this Georgia boy as hot tea at high noon. That's not the way things were done around here.

But for 21 bucks a month, Reese was willing to give it a go. He was one of 48 young men who volunteered for what we now call the original Parachute Test Platoon.

I cannot fathom that kind of courage — the kind of courage it took to put their faith in a heavy pack of canvas and twisted rope. There were no jumpmasters there to offer encouragement. It had never been done before. Period.

Ben Reese gave more than 30 years of his life to his country. Twice he jumped into combat. He raised a lovely family and loved his lovely wife for 66 years. By all accounts, he was a truly great man. But in my estimation — and I knew him for only a few short years — he defined his legacy, that of a true American hero, 70 years ago, when he raised his hand and said, "Send me."

I have met a lot of brave men and women in the 10 years I've been interviewing brave men and women, but I have a special place in my heart for Ben Reese and the men of the Original Test Platoon. So does Saint Michael.

I trust he put in a special request for wind gusts just strong enough to keep the airways clear above Eubanks Field Wednesday morning, when we gathered at the Airborne Walk to say goodbye to an original hero. The Silver Wings were scheduled to jump, but they were grounded. The only one airborne was Ben Reese.

How very appropriate.

Challenge isn't knowing where you're going but how to get there

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

It's happened. After 17 years, it's happened. Rationally I knew it would happen, but when my daughter gave me the thumbs up after passing her driver's license test during last year's spring break, I realized I wasn't ready for it.

It's not so much her driving — she's cautious and a defensive driver — but I'm not sure she knows where she's headed. No, I'm not talking about her future. She's got that mapped out. Jessie's taken the SAT once and plans on taking it again in May. And this spring break we're off on college visits. The visits are for my benefit, because she's already determined her university of choice. I just don't think she could find it — she's geographically challenged.

Last fall, she was driving us home on a road we travel daily when, about a mile and a half down the road, she asked, "Am I on the right road?"

She gets lost a lot. When she was in the fourth grade, she wanted to walk from Dexter Elementary School to a friend's home on Austin Loop. I showed her the route to take, drew her a map and practiced the route with her — on foot, in the car and on bike — for more than two weeks. The day she went alone, she got as far as Riverside before she got lost. She turned around and walked back to the school. Luckily she found it.

Because of this challenge, when she got a car, I bought her a GPS to help her navigate through the streets of Columbus. So does she use it? No, it's easier to call Mom and ask how to get from Columbus High School to wherever she going. And does she listen? No, but that's another commentary.

So this spring break when we are driving through the states of Alabama and Georgia, only one of us will be using maps. The other one will be telling me where to go.

Helmets protect more than good ideas

Elsie Jackson
USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

If you are riding a bicycle on post, wearing a helmet is mandatory. And if you wreck, you need to replace it.

My first helmet had to go after I hit another rider's back wheel with my front tire. Somewhere between there and picking myself up off the road, my helmeted head bounced on the asphalt. Hard. During my spontaneous demonstration of how effective a properly worn helmet is, I learned that at the tender age of nevermind, I don't bounce the way I used to at 5 (or even 15), which hurt more than the bumps and bruises did.

I threw out another helmet after someone made a hard right turn, right in front of me.

Let's just say that I skipped the first, second, third and fifth points of contact. But I hit number four at least three times, and proceeded to experiment with at least a dozen others before I stopped bouncing, rolling and sliding.

My helmeted head was the last body part that made contact with the road, hitting hard enough to pop all the rivets securing the straps on the left side out of their sockets. That helmet didn't just save me from a concussion, it spared my right ear, a large portion of my scalp and a significant amount of hair from some significant damage.

Bicycle helmets reduce the risk of head injury by as much as 85 percent and risk of brain injury by as much as 88 percent.

It's estimated that 75 percent of bicycle deaths among children could be prevented by properly worn bicycle helmets.

The most effective way to get your children to wear a helmet? Wear yours. One study found that if parents wear helmets when they bicycle, 98 percent of their children would too. If the parents don't wear their helmets, that number drops to 30 percent.

Helmets are Styrofoam inside a plastic shell. They're only designed to take one hit. Finding a "good" helmet is as simple as looking inside the helmet for the words "CPSC approved." I've seen CPSC approved helmets for as little as $10, making the cost of replacing one less than your deductible at an emergency room.

I've proven to myself (and assorted witnesses) why wearing a helmet is a good idea. I don't need some regulation telling me that regardless of age, it you are riding a bicycle on post, wearing a helmet is mandatory.

Here's hoping my testimony convinces you to wear one too.

OCS graduate receives award

Zanders

2LT Kerry Zanders Jr., the executive officer for B Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, received the Officer Candidate School's Patterson Award Thursday night. The award is given in conjunction with the annual OCS Hall of Fame Ceremony, which is 2 p.m. today in Marsahll Auditorium.

The Patterson Award was established to honor the most distinguished Infantry-branched OCS graduate of the preceding year. It is named for Judge Robert Patterson, who enlisted in 1915 and was commissioned in 1916. Patterson received the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism during World War I, and served as the undersecretary of War for presidents Roosevelt and Truman.

"It is an honor and a privilege to receive this prestigious award," said Zanders, who graduated from OCS in November 2007 and earned the Jess Walls Award as the Distinguished Honor Graduate.

Zanders, from Detroit, graduated from one station unit training on Sand Hill, and then attended Airborne School, where he heard a Ranger recruiting brief.

"Being a Ranger sounded pretty high-speed," said Zanders, who didn't know much about the military before he joined the Army in 1999. "I planned on becoming an astronaut when I was a child."

After attending the Ranger Indoctrination Program, Zanders was assigned to 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. He graduated from Ranger School in 2001.

He has deployed in support of operations Iraqi and Enduring Freedom; while assigned to the 75th Ranger Regiment, he was promoted to the rank of sergeant first class. He's graduated from survival evasion resistance escape training, jumpmaster and pathfinder classes. He's earned a Combat Infantryman Badge and an Expert Infantryman Badge.

"My dream job was being a Ranger fire team leader — leading from the front," Zanders said. "It was something I worked very hard to become, and I enjoyed the challenge and the responsibility."

Zanders said his goals include the challenge of developing leaders for the Army and competing in the Best Ranger Competition before he retires.

Zanders is married and has three children.

Soldiers try for Drill Sergeant of the Year

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Photos by Cheryl Rodewig
SFC Jason Duncan, A Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, assembles a weapon, one of three that were disassembled in the same bag. The sergeants had to complete the task within eight minutes.

Four Soldiers competed this week for the post title of Drill Sergeant of the Year. They are the top two drill sergeants from both the 192nd and 198th Infantry brigades, determined by a brigade-level competition earlier this year.

This competition emphasizes the many challenges associated with being a drill sergeant, said SSG Tommy Beauchamp, NCOIC for the event.

"It's a very complex job," he said. "There are so many different facets of knowledge that we have to be subject matter experts on in order to bestow that knowledge on Soldiers in training.

"The drill sergeant has one of the most important roles as an NCO — the instruction of trainees. A drill sergeant is what puts the footprint of the Army inside the trainees. I still remember my drill sergeant. If you have that drill sergeant who is smart, motivated, physically fit, mentally tough, your goal as a private all the way up through your NCO years is to emulate that Soldier, to be as good as or better than your drill sergeant was."

The role of a drill sergeant is critical to the fight, said SSG Michael Johnston, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, who won his brigade-level competition.

"It's the most important, especially in today's times, going to Iraq and Afghanistan," Johnston said. "About 90 percent of everybody you're training, they're going to war. It's not like it was when I came through where you had that question of someday you may or may not need these skills. It's 90 percent guaranteed, you're going to need to know these skills."

The competition focused on tasks a drill sergeant must know thoroughly, such as instructing a Soldier on how to execute a hand salute, applying a tourniquet, conducting night land navigation and zeroing a weapon with limited rounds. It also included a written essay, a timed exam, an obstacle course and other hands-on drills.

SSG John Laughter, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, said the competition has been a challenge.

"I've learned so much in the competition," he said. "I've pushed myself physically, so I'm able to keep up with the rest of the candidates and to just be the best I can physically, mentally, tactically and technically. The competition includes things that will test your tactical and technical knowledge as well as your skills as a drill sergeant and noncommissioned officer."

Laughter said he has wanted to be a drill sergeant since basic training when he saw the level of professionalism and dedication of his own drill sergeants. After holding the position for a year and a half, he knows it can be difficult but is well worth the effort, he said.

"Being a drill sergeant is definitely a challenge," Laughter said. "There's the long hours; you're away from your family a lot, but there's also the added reward as you're training new Soldiers into the Army.

"You're their first taste of Army life. And you have the opportunity to instill in them the discipline, honor, duty, integrity and personal courage that can turn them into a Soldier in America's fighting force."

SSG Jackson Perry, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, finishes assembling a radio before transmitting a message within his five-minute time limit Tuesday on Sand Hill.

Regardless of the outcome of the contest, all of the candidates, Johnston, Laughter, SFC Jason Duncan and SSG Jackson Perry, are superb drill sergeants filling needed positions, Beauchamp said.

The winner will be awarded the Army Commendation Medal and continue on to the TRADOC-level competition in April to represent Fort Benning alongside three other installations and two Reserve components.

Editor's note: Read next week's edition of The Bayonet to find out who won.

Police recruits flees after an explosion detonates near the recruiting station, where Soldiers are providing security March 17. The scenario-driven training exercise encouraged Soldiers to combine what they learned so far in the cycle and apply it to a real-world urban environment.

FTX 3 'not the movies'

Basic trainees conduct urban operations on Malone MOUT

Locals were playing soccer; others were calling from building windows or shouting things like "Captain America" and "G.I. Joe" from the dirt street.

If SPC Andrew Herendeen learned anything during his third field training exercise, it was "the chaos of urban operations," he said.

"There's a lot to pay attention to. It's hard to know what's important, what we should be focusing on, and what is just extra," said Herendeen, one of 238 Soldiers in B Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, who conducted scenario-driven training March 17 on Malone MOUT.

FTX 3 is a culminating event, combining all individual and collective tasks the basic trainees learned during the cycle and preparing them for missions in theater, said CPT Michael Johnston, B Company commander.

"When you're actually out on a patrol, reacting to any situation requires the complete package of what we train our Soldiers out here," he said. "We're training them how to think, not what to think."

Two squads of basic trainees ran through the exercise at a time. Their mission was to provide security for a police recruiting station. When a bomb detonated at the station, followed by gunfire, the Soldiers had to respond to the situation.

"It's one thing when you're in an open field practicing, but it's another when you're in a role-play environment," said SPC Dan Ireland, a squad leader.

"Marksmanship, simple four-man team operations, first aid, squad movements, we put that all together here with a unique set of challenges. Prior to this, you would know what's going to happen. Here, it was reality, multiple things happening at the same time."

The experience was overwhelming, Ireland said, but he learned the importance of clear communication and good leadership.

"It's not the movies," he said. "The movies, it's all action, it's all, 'Go save the day.' Here, there's a whole set way of doing things. I wanted to run right into the thick of it, but the truth of it is, being a leader, that's not necessarily the right thing to do."

After completing the exercise, Ireland said he feels better prepared for next time, whether that's in training or in combat. B Company will graduate Thursday.

PVT Zachary Macey, a basic trainee from Lancaster, Pa., observes the situation after a bomb detonates March 17 on McKenna MOUT. A soccer player crouches for cover behind Lancaster, who waits for further information before proceeding. After gunfire is heard from other buildings near the village, the Soldiers engaged the enemy, incorporating skills learned earlier in the cycle, such as marksmanship, room clearing, first aid, team communication and tactical movement. It is the culminating field training exercise for these Soldiers, said CPT Michael Johnston, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, commander.

Fort Lewis LRS unit visits Benning, completes RSLC

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Literally jumping into their training with both feet, 52 Soldiers made their entrance on Fort Benning by jumping onto Fryar Drop Zone March 13 after a seven-hour flight from their home station at Fort Lewis, Wash. The Soldiers, in C Troop, 38th Cavalry Regiment, 201st Battlefield Surveillance Brigade, came to Fort Benning for the 4th Ranger Training Battalion's Reconnaissance and Surveillance Leaders Course.

"People said it was one of the first times any school here has ever seen a unit come and jump into their course," said CPT John Paluska, the troop's operations officer.

C Troop has had a lot of firsts during the past year.

The company stood up in May, and is one of only three active-duty long-range surveillance companies in the Army. In July, C Troop was reorganized under the newly designated 201st Battlefield Surveillance Brigade, formerly the 201st Military Intelligence Brigade. The reorganization is part of the Army's transition to a modular force.

C Troop reports directly to the brigade level, and in theater, its corps commander can order it to move wherever necessary.

"We're like a specialty company he can flex anywhere he wants," Paluska said.

In another first, C Troop is the first LRS company to come through RSLC as a full unit, in what is referred to as Resident Unit Training, said CPT Brian Canny, executive officer for D Company, 4th Ranger Training Battalion. A total of 71 students participated, 52 from C Troop, the highest enrollment ever for an RSLC course. The training was crucial for a unit mainly composed of Soldiers from backgrounds outside of surveillance and reconnaissance.

"We're a long-range surveillance Cavalry unit, but in reality, we are all Infantry Soldiers," Paluska said.

"We're supposed to be able to do everything the regular Infantry does, and more," said SSG David Lynn. "And this is the 'and more' part they're training us on here —transforming from an Infantry line guy in a nine-man squad to a six-man recon element. And that's huge for a lot of those guys who haven't been with a LRS unit before."

RSLC, a 26-day course that teaches communications, surveillance, and reconnaissance techniques, emphasizes hands-on training. Many C Troop Soldiers said that hands-on experience was one of the course's biggest benefits.

"Everything here is pretty much hands-on training, from radios to camo systems, insertion and extraction techniques, even sitting in the classroom," said SGT Kishawn Lewis. "The instructors are right there. If you have a question, they'll stop, make sure you get it, the guy next to you gets it, the whole class gets it and then they'll move forward."

The unit is set to deploy to Iraq in the fall, and its RSLC training will be vital to accomplishing its missions, SFC Phillip Razian, a communications platoon sergeant.

"When we got stood up, we had no equipment to train on," he said. "I've only got eight radios in my shop, and for me to train some 150 guys with eight radios, you can't do it. Coming here, the guys are getting hands-on training and actually being able to see how everything works. The 4th RTBn taking us onto this course is probably going to save lives."

To facilitate team building and esprit de corps, C Troop Soldiers trained at RSLC in the same teams they will work with when they deploy. That organization was vital in helping the Soldiers come together as a unit, Razian said.

"I think a lot of people didn't see the big concept of how everything's orchestrated on the battlefield," he said. "But they're starting to realize how important their role is. If one man goes down, you lose half your team."

Paluska credits the hard work of the RSLC instructors and cadre in making C Troop's training a success.

"The 4th RTBn has done an incredible job allowing our entire company to come here," he said. "It's one of the best organized, most professional courses I've ever been to."

RSLC is an important first step for C Troop, Canny said.

"It's a great building block for them to use to get ready for deployment," he said. "They'll be able to take it back to Fort Lewis and over to Iraq."

Ceremony: Honors service to country passed in review in front of a crowd of more than 3,000.

"If you take any one of those patches of soil and put it under a microscope, you may see the blood shed from those who fought there," said Hill, keynote speaker for the graduation. "We cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground, for the great men who fought on these battlefields have consecrated this far above our power."

The Sacred Soil Ceremony was narrated by actor Sam Elliott, who played CSM Basil Plumley in the movie We Were Soldiers. Plumley scattered soil from Landing Zone X-Ray, where the first major conflict of the Vietnam War was fought. He shared the duty with LTG(R) Hal Moore, his battalion commander with 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry Regiment.

Soil from each battlefield was preserved for posterity in glass containers set in granite pavers on the field. Beginning with soil taken from Yorktown, the ceremony included Antietam, Soissons, Normandy, Corregidor, Korea, LZ X-Ray, Vietnam, and Iraq and Afghanistan.

Several family members, veterans and service members of different generations met for the first time on the field, like Samuel Parker Moss and George York.

Grandson of Medal of Honor recipient 2LT Samuel Parker, Moss shared the responsibility of sprinkling soil from Soissons with York, the son of SGT Alvin York, who earned the Medal of Honor in France during World War I.

"I actually went back to Soissons with my grandfather when I was 10," Moss said. "I got to tour and hear some of his discussions. I actually heard him talk a little about SGT York, so this is particularly great to have George here, who is his son. This sent chills up my spine."

York said he heard few stories about the war from his father, who didn't discuss the war with his family. He attended the ceremony, he said, simply to honor service members.

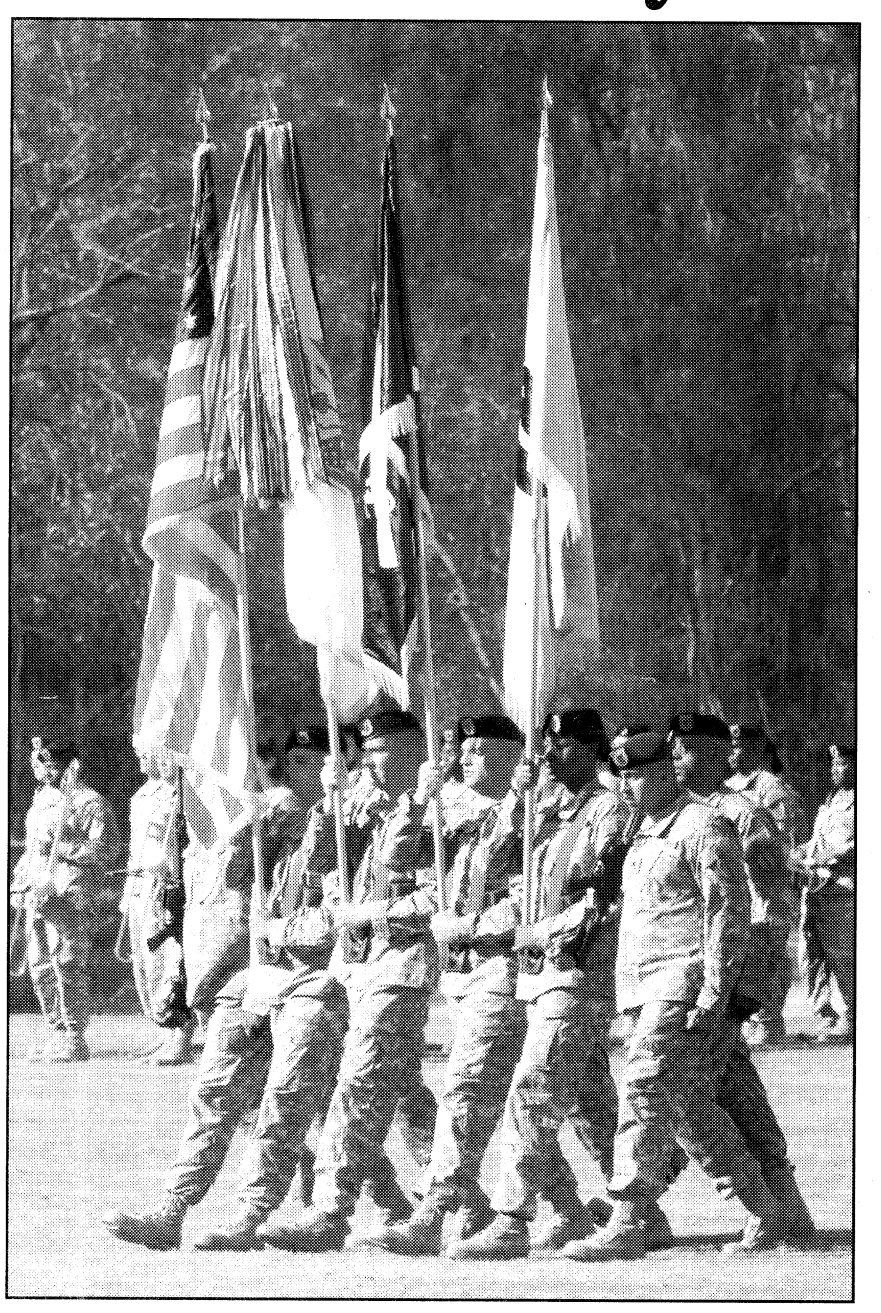

"I love anything that has to do with the service," he said. "My dad was an Army man; my son was an Army man; my grandson is an Army man. This kind of thing is very emotional to me, because I think we have the greatest country in the world and I think we have the greatest Army in the world. I just say God bless them all."

Following York and Moss on the parade field was Theodore Roosevelt IV, grandson of Theodore Roosevelt Jr., who earned the Medal of Honor on D-Day. As he spread the soil from Normandy, Roosevelt reflected on the challenges his grandfather must have faced going ashore in northern France.

"It must have been scary for him," Roosevelt said. "When they got ashore, they basically knew that they were a mile and a half from where they should be. They (decided) they'd start the fight there rather than re-embark the boats and try to go where they were supposed to go. I was a Navy SEAL, so I can remember going ashore in Vietnam not knowing what I was going to do. That was child's play compared to what he was doing. Here was this man who was 57, crippled with arthritis … but he was committed. That's what I was thinking about."

As he honored the service of his grandfather, Roosevelt said it was moving to see another company inducted into that tradition of service.

"For me, it's the concept of public service — serving in the military," he said. "We're commemorating the service that American Soldiers have done on behalf of our country. Public service for our nation is one of the most important requirements, in my opinion, of being a good citizen. It's a great legacy. We're all Americans and we can be proud of it."

The color guard prepares to present the colors before a crowd of thousands who gathered for the Sacred Soil Ceremony and graduation of B Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, March 19 on the parade field adjacent to the new National Infantry Museum, which will open June 19.

After the ceremony, the Sky Soldiers performed an aerial "star burst" with Vietnam-era helicopters. Graduates and their families toured World War II Street, a replica of a 1940s company street.

The Soldier Center, which includes the IMAX Theater, the Fife and Drum Restaurant, the museum lobby, gift shop and WWII Street, will remain open through the museum's grand opening June 19.

Dixie: Lights reset

Dixie Road will be widened to four lanes, from Lindsay Creek Parkway to Sightseeing Road, just short of Lawson Army Airfield. The project has a 540 day performance period with completion expected for late 2010, said Jay Brown, Fort Benning's Base Realignment and Closure program manager, during March's BRAC town hall meeting.

Recognizing the difficulty drivers have in turning west from Soldiers' Plaza and the gas station, Clarke recommended all traffic turn east and use the available side roads to reorient in the desired direction.

"We looked at several options, including making Dixie Road a one way road during peak hours or closing off the side streets," Clarke said.

"Again, the current plan is the best approach with the options we have," Clarke said.

New ACAP Web site aids deployed Soldiers

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

The Army Career and Alumni Program has launched a Web site designed to expedite the process of registering for ACAP services.

Through the Web site, called ACAP Express, Soldiers, Department of the Army Civilians, and spouses can register for pre-separation counseling, schedule Veterans Affairs Administration briefings, learn how to find a job, use resume tools or connect with ACAP employment professionals for advice and support.

The Web site will help ACAP better fulfill its mission and serve Soldiers, said Eddie Perez, transition services manager.

"ACAP's mission is the successful transformation from Soldier to civilian," he said. "The new Web site will save Soldiers quite a bit of time because they don't have to come in here to do what they need to do."

The Web site's biggest beneficiaries will be deployed Soldiers planning to separate or retire from the Army soon after redeployment, said Nichole Cleveland, contractor installation manager for the Fort Benning ACAP office.

"The express site will help us reach a greater number of Soldiers, especially those in the field who can't come into the center," she said. "If they have just a couple minutes and access to a computer, they can register for ACAP services and receive them in a more timely manner."

Soldiers must schedule a pre-separation briefing at least 90 days before separating from the Army. Soldiers retiring can use ACAP services up to two years before their retirement date, and Soldiers separating from the Army can use ACAP services up to one year out. Perez urges Soldiers to register with ACAP early in order to better take advantage of its services.

"We do an employer's day each month, and we might have five employers come each month," he said. "If a Soldier registers with ACAP one year out, they have the opportunity to see maybe 60 employers. But if they wait until the 90th day, they might be rushed."

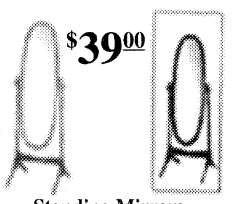

The express Web site will help facilitate Soldiers' job searches, Perez said.

"(The Web site) makes it a lot easier for us to work with them and see what their goals are before they get back from deployment," he said. "If a Soldier registers through the site before deployment, we could even send their resume to a potential employer while they're deployed. We'll make a way for that employer and Soldier to talk to each other, and that way they won't miss out on any opportunities."

ACAP is located in Building 2634 in Soldiers Plaza. It is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. For more information, call 706-545-2308 or 706-545-2309, or visit www.acapexpress.army.mil or www.acap.army.mil.

EOD Soldiers instruct engineers on using robots

Cheryl Rodewig

Under the guidance of 789th EOD Soldiers, PFC Sunil Atri, an engineer in E Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, maneuvers the Talon robot during an exercise March 10 while other E Co. engineers look on.

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Engineers learned how to maneuver small land robots March 10 and 11 at the 789th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Company headquarters.

The EOD unit, which owns the robots, provided instruction for the engineers in E Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment. The Soldiers learned how to maneuver through a tight space and over difficult terrain and how to open a door, pick up an object and dig in the ground with a robotic arm.

The Pacbot and the larger Talon are the most common robots used for IED detection in the Army, said SGT Adam Jenks, who showed engineers how to operate the two robots.

"Most of these guys haven't been to combat yet, so we're trying to get them familiar with the systems that they'll be using downrange," he said. "This is a perishable skill. It's one of those things if you don't do it a lot, you forget how to do it. You get sloppy and you get rusty. So, by allowing them to get time now, basically they'll be proficient when they get downrange."

The Soldiers guided the robots through a course that included uncovering a land mine buried in a sand pit.

The problems in this course are the same ones Soldiers encounter in Iraq or Afghanistan, and hands-on training prepares them best, Jenks said.

"This is my first time working with the robots," said PV2 Vincent Gardner. "It's definitely a good experience. It's a lot better than what we learned in AIT, probing for mines by hand, digging in the ground. It takes a little while getting used to maneuvering the robots around, (but) it's a lot safer. I'd rather send a robot out and have to buy a new one than lose a comrade out there.

"It's just good training. Being ready for the mission at hand — that's what all training is really about."

Although the engineers will have robots at their disposal when they deploy, they don't have any for training available on post. They are partnering with the 789th EOD Co. through the end of March to borrow the equipment, said SFC Robert Pancake, NCOIC for the training.

Helping the engineers prepare for deployment fits with the EOD company's task to support other units, Pancake said.

"That's our mission at EOD, to provide freedom of movement to the rest of the Army," he said. "If there's a roadside bomb, that road is closed until EOD gets on scene and disarms or destroys the IED. This way, we're keeping the troops safe and allowing them freedom of movement on the battlefield."

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Schilling announces retirement

Pitcher Curt Schilling announced his retirement from baseball March 23 via his blog, 38pitches.com. Schilling, 42, won a World Series with the Arizona Diamondbacks in 2001 and with the Boston Red Sox in 2004 and 2007. He missed last season with the Sox because of a shoulder injury.

Armstrong injured

Seven-time Tour de France champion Lance Armstrong broke his collarbone March 23 after falling in a pileup in the first stage of a five-day race in Spain. The break was described as a "clean collarbone fracture without complications."

Get well soon, Lance.

NCAA Tournament

The NCAA Men's 2009 Tournament has been whittled down to the Sweet 16. The Elite Eight will play Saturday and Sunday, with the Final Four April 4 and the championship game April 6. I'm not picking any favorites yet — every time I do they end up losing.

Busch uses anger for win

Kyle Busch looked like he had the win in the bag March 21 in the Nationwide Series race, but got penalized when his pit crew accidentally let go of a tire and it rolled away. He angrily left his car, and must have channeled that anger into a victory at Bristol Motor Speedway in the Sprint Cup Series March 22. He led 378 of 502 laps.

This week's race begins at 2 p.m. Sunday on Fox and is at Martinsville Speedway.

Lady Vols fall

Defending champions of the Women's NCAA Basketball Championship, the Tennessee Volunteers, were upset by Ball State March 22, 71-55.

It was the first time the Lady Vols had ever lost in the first two rounds of the tourney. Pat Summitt, Vols' coach, had her worst season ever.

Japan wins WBC

Team Japan won their second World Baseball Classic title March 23 with a win over reigning Olympic champion South Korea, 5-3. The Japanese won the first WBC three years ago.

I'm a huge baseball fan, but still can't get into the appeal of the WBC. It seems like it's just more opportunity for players to injure themselves right before the start of the MLB season.

Off-the-court issues arise for UConn coach

UConn coach Jim Calhoun is having to explain possible recruiting violations with former recruit Nate Miles.

Miles alledgedly received lodging, transportation, meals and representation from a former student-manager turned agent and alleged that the coaching staff made more than 1,500 phone contacts with Miles, his family and the agent, all NCAA violations. So much for concentrating on the NCAA tournament.

Rodeo teams compete

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Dirt, ropes and poles flew as rodeo teams from around Georgia competed at a Georgia High School Rodeo Association rodeo hosted by the Harris County High School rodeo Friday and Saturday at the Mike Tracy Arena in Hamilton, Ga. The rodeo included calf roping, goat tying, bull riding, bareback horse riding, barrel racing and pole bending.

Among the participants was Harris County High School sophomore Kaitlyn Dervan, stepdaughter of CSM(R) Samuel Rhodes.

She competed in barrel racing and pole bending.

In barrel racing, riders race horses around three barrels as fast as they can without knocking over the barrels and if any barrel is tipped, the rider gets a time penalty.

"You have to be able to run as fast as you can (with the horse) and slow down enough on the turns," Dervan said. "It's all about speed and keeping control of the horse.The most challenging part is keeping the horse calm."

In the pole bending event, riders have to weave in and out of a set of six poles without knocking over the poles.A knocked over pole means a time penalty for the rider.

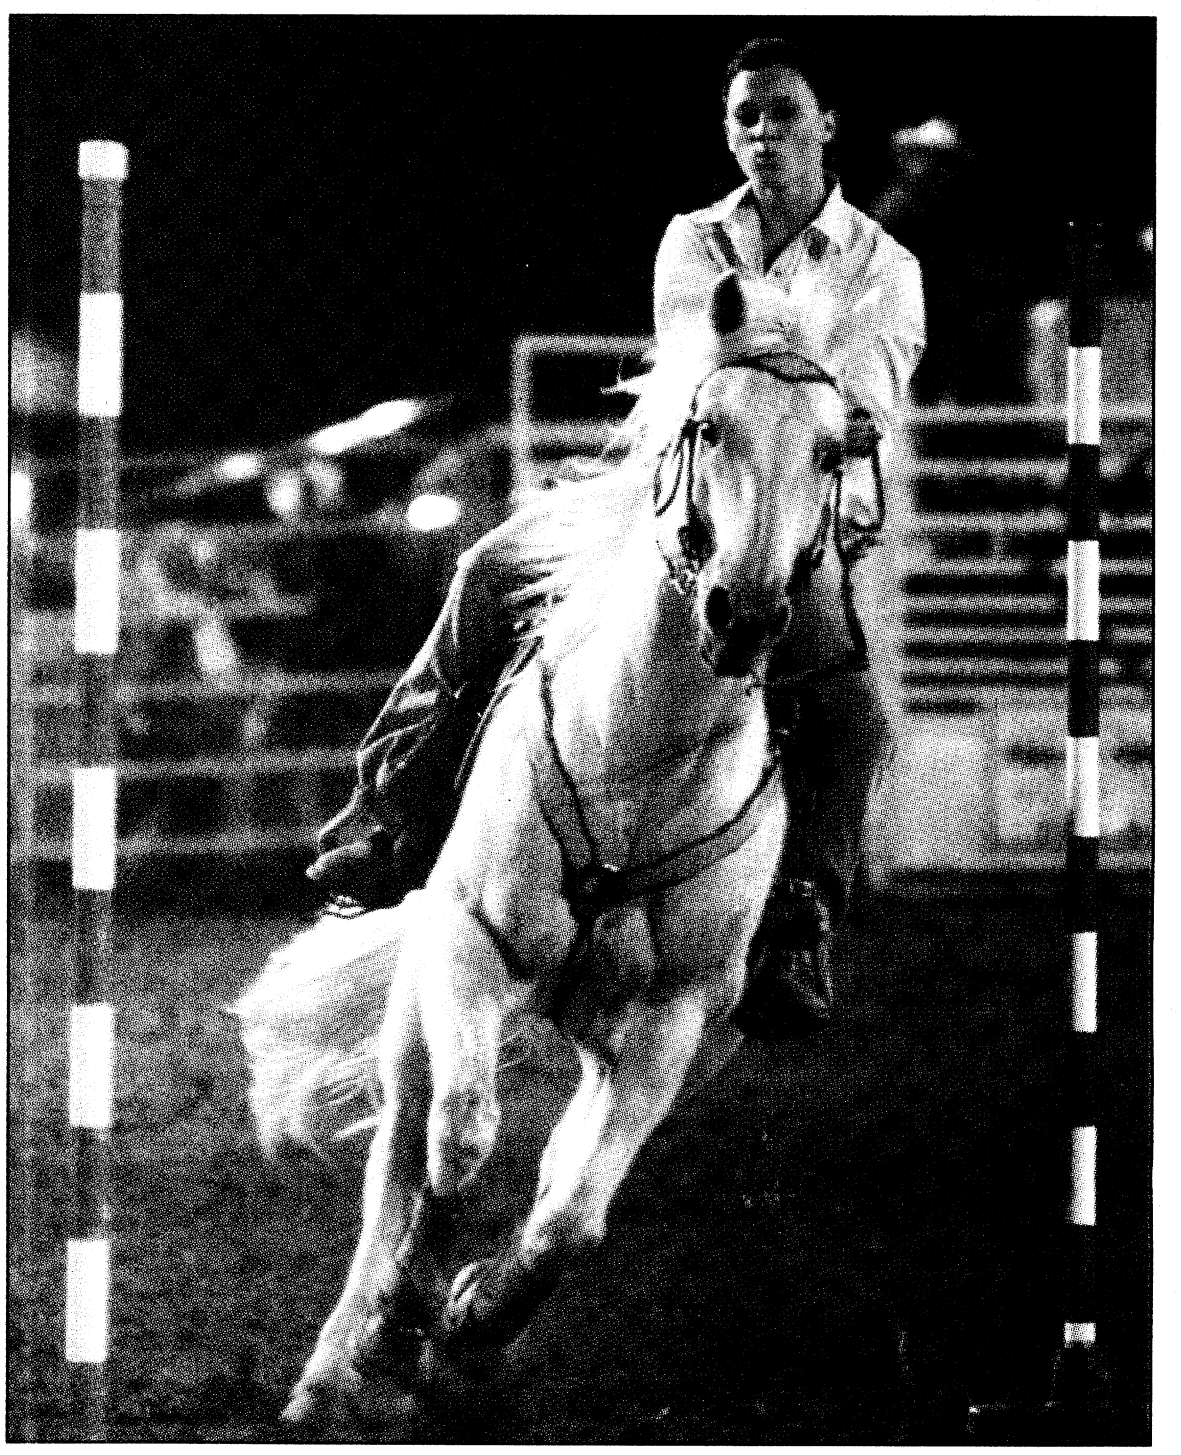

"This isn't something you can be good at the first time you try it. It takes a lot of balance and practice," Dervan said.

Dervan said even though she has been performing in these events for four years, she still gets nervous.

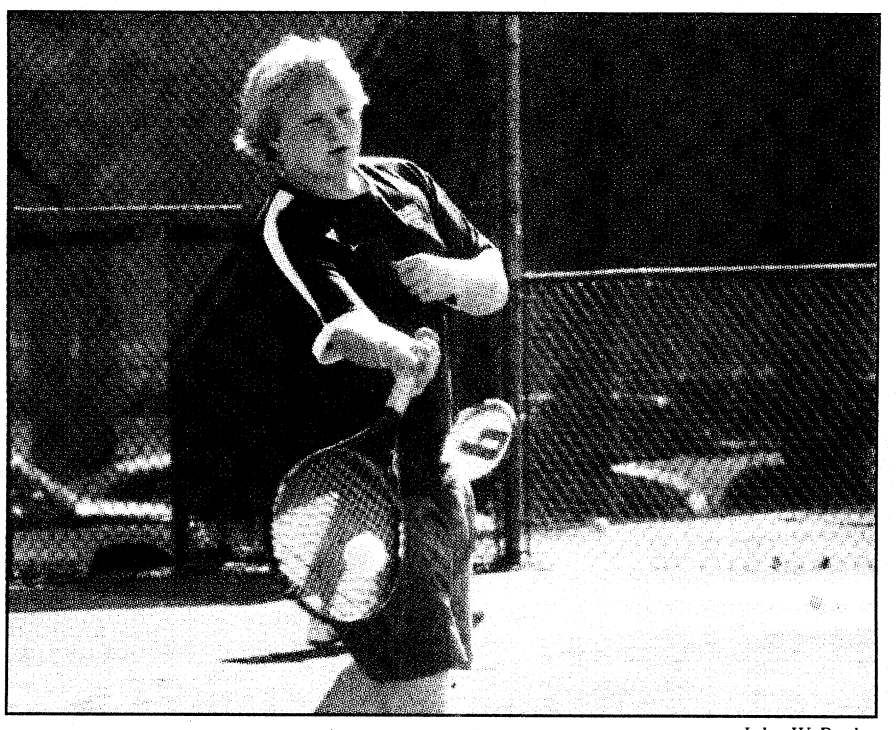

Dervan got 18.378 in the barrel race and 23.035 in the pole bending competition. She knocked over one barrel and one pole.

"I improved on my pole bending time and think I did OK at both (events), but I was hoping to do better," she said.

It's Ivan Linsky's first year as a volunteer coach for the 7- to 8-year-old Wildcats. His focus is to teach his players the fundamentals of soccer.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach emphasizes effort, teamwork

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Coach Ivan Linsky volunteered to coach soccer because there weren't enough coaches for the Child, Youth, School and Services soccer teams, he said, and he loves it.

Linsky, who played soccer in middle and high school, along with baseball, basketball, tennis and football, said effort and teamwork are essential in soccer.

"You get out what you put in. If you are at practice playing around and not focusing, you aren't going to learn much," he said. "And soccer isn't just about one person. If you don't play as a team, you aren't going to be successful."

His focus at the 7- to 8- year-old level is for players to learn the fundamentals of the game.

"Dribbling comes with time, but it's important they learn their position and the rules of the game because everything depends upon that," he said.

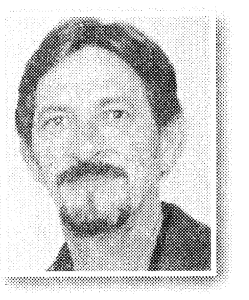

Learning the sport may not always be easy, Linsky said.

Linsky said by the end of the season, he hopes the kids learn discipline, teamwork and sportsmanship — values they can use throughout their lives, he said.

How 'bout some love for women's basketball?

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

The weather is getting warmer, the days longer, but nothing reminds basketball fans that spring is here like the NCAA March Madness tournament.

Not even the current economical situation is keeping fans from crowding into basketball arenas around the country.

My questions? Where are the women's basketball fans from the media? Where is all the hoopla with the women's games?

Everyone is getting into the action — 5 million fans in the ESPN bracket challenge, including President Barack Obama, appear to be concentrating on the men's bracket.

Come on, why aren't the women's games getting any love? Even the president only picked the men's games — at least publicly.

While I like watching men's basketball, women's basketball is just as exciting. There may not be as many highlight-reel slam dunks, but the games are just as competitive and can keep you on the edge of your seat just as long as the men's games.

I have heard people say they "just don't do women's basketball," but never heard any real reason why. Maybe it is just a personal preference — we all have our preferences.

My preference? Good action and competitive games regardless of the X- or Y-chromosomes involved.

Tennessee Lady Vols coach Pat Summitt's quest for a ninth national title should have been one of the bigger story lines in this year's tournament — but not much was said about it.

Yes, I said 'Lady' Vols.

No coach in NCAA Division I has more wins than Summitt. The well-known Bobby Knight, often thought of as the best basketball coach in NCAA history, finished his career at 902 wins — 103 wins shy of Summit's record prior to the NCAA tournament. Summitt is still going strong in her 35th year of coaching, and with the way coaches are hired and fired, I don't see anyone passing her anytime soon.

Although Summitt and her Lady Vols didn't make it to the Sweet 16, she had 27 consecutive trips until this year. That is something to get excited about, but not much was said.

While Summitt will not win a ninth NCAA title this year, or even make it to the Sweet 16, it was a story line worth following for those who truly love college basketball.

Maybe it's not that people don't like women's basketball, but rather just follow what they see in front of them.

With the high visibility men's college basketball receives, maybe it is just a matter of fans being guided from the media, pointing them to the mer games.

I had a hard time trying to find the women's bracket when looking for upcoming games.

ESPN, Fox Sports, CBS Sports and even Yahoo Sports all default to men's basketball when looking for college basketball scores and news.

Maybe women's basketball doesn't make the big draws of crowds simply because of marketing. When it comes to publicizing the NCAA March Madness brackets, which brackets are announced first? — the men's.

In the television and Internet age it appears the people in charge of marketing are not comfortable with women's basketball pulling their fair share of the college basketball market. Maybe it's because men's basketball is given priority to begin with.

The men's brackets are announced first which makes the announcement of the women's brackets anticlimactic. By the time the women are playing their first game, the men's bracket is already in the second round.

What ever happened to 'ladies first?'

Doesn't seem quite fair — or equal, and almost like the women's games are just an afterthought.

While the people who put together the way college basketball is presented may be thinking they are maximizing the sport, they may be in jeopardy of turning people away from women's basketball by focusing on the men.

I realize that these are college athletes, but the women playing on these teams may be playing for the opportunity to move on to professional basketball, as well. Don't they deserve the same opportunity as the men?

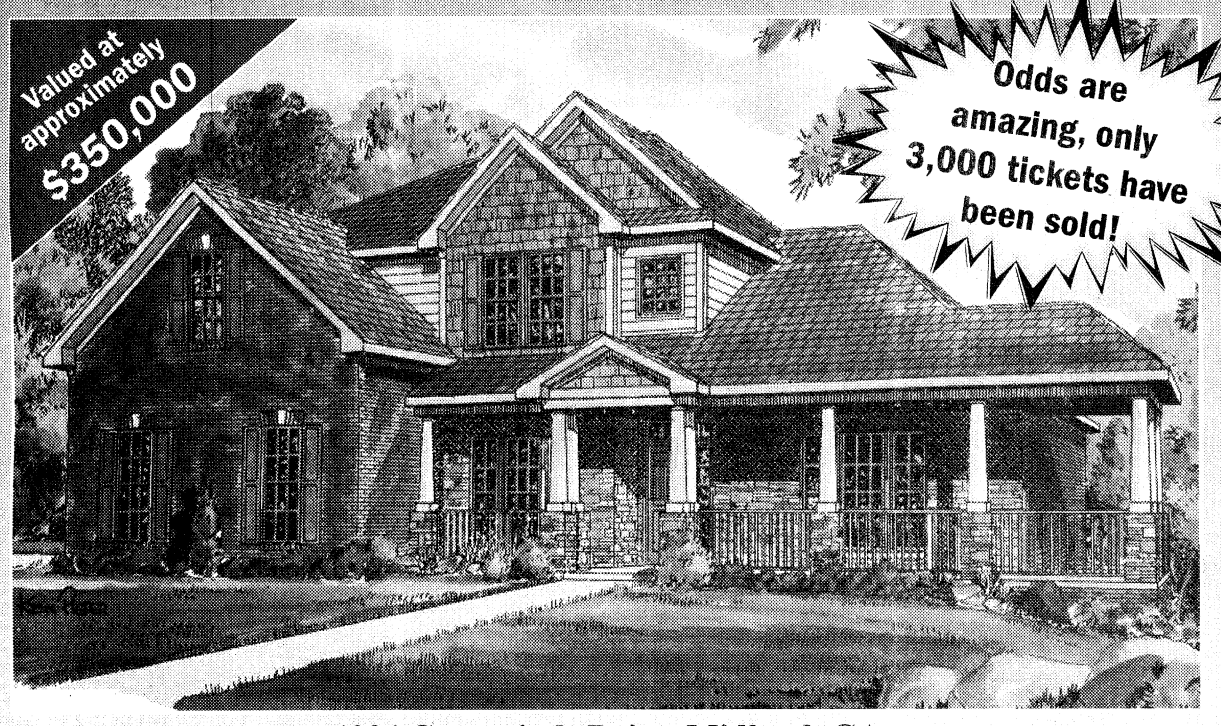

Women's college basketball deserves the same hoopla as the men's. A women's national title is just as important to the players and to the recruiting potential of the college that wins.

It is not about X- or Y-chromosomes. March Madness is about determining who are the best college basketball teams in the nation — and not just about who is the best men's team.

For all those who "do not do women's college basketball," you are truly missing out.

Faith: Plays today, Sunday

2-1 with an 8-1 win over Moody's Brandon Wilson and Richard Kelly. In the girl's doubles, Moody bounced back with Kristen Sands and Jessica Moody taking an 8-1 win over Faith's India Barnett and Amani Bradley to knot the match score, 2-2.

In what was the closest match of the day, Moody's Kartanowicz and Madison Pinet stayed within reach of Faith's Karl Ivey and Selena Buchanan in the mixed doubles match, but with the match score at 5-2 in favor of Faith, Ivey and Buchanan put the match away winning the final three games. With the 8-2 win, Faith clinched the match.

"There has been a lot of improvement," coach Miguel Lugo said. "The improvement is about 100 percent right now. Both the girl's and the boy's serves are coming along."

Lugo said the team has a lot of first year players, and as far as he knows, this is the first time Faith has had a team.

"This is the first year of the middle school playing in a league like this," he said. "We are having to teach them everything. We are having to teach them the mechanics, the strategy and even the etiquette of tennis.

"They surprised me today. Last time I think we won in a tie-breaker in the last set. We have two matches left and we are going to train hard to make Faith Middle School and Fort Benning proud."

The Warrior Bears will play their remaining two matches at Cooper Creek Park. Today's match begins at 4 p.m. and Sunday's match begins at 1:30 p.m.

75th Ranger Regt. Champs defeat CRC Stallions

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The 75th Ranger Regiment Champs defeated the CONUS Replacement Center Stallions in two sets of volleyball Monday at Smith Fitness Center in the winners' bracket playoffs of the Commander's Cup preseason volleyball tournament.

The Champs and Stallions battled back and forth in the first set for points and tied twice before the Champs took control of the game with a 25-14 win.

In the second set, the Champs scored the first point and kept scoring, not giving a chance for CRC to catch up. The Champs closed the match with a 14-point lead over CRC, 25-11.

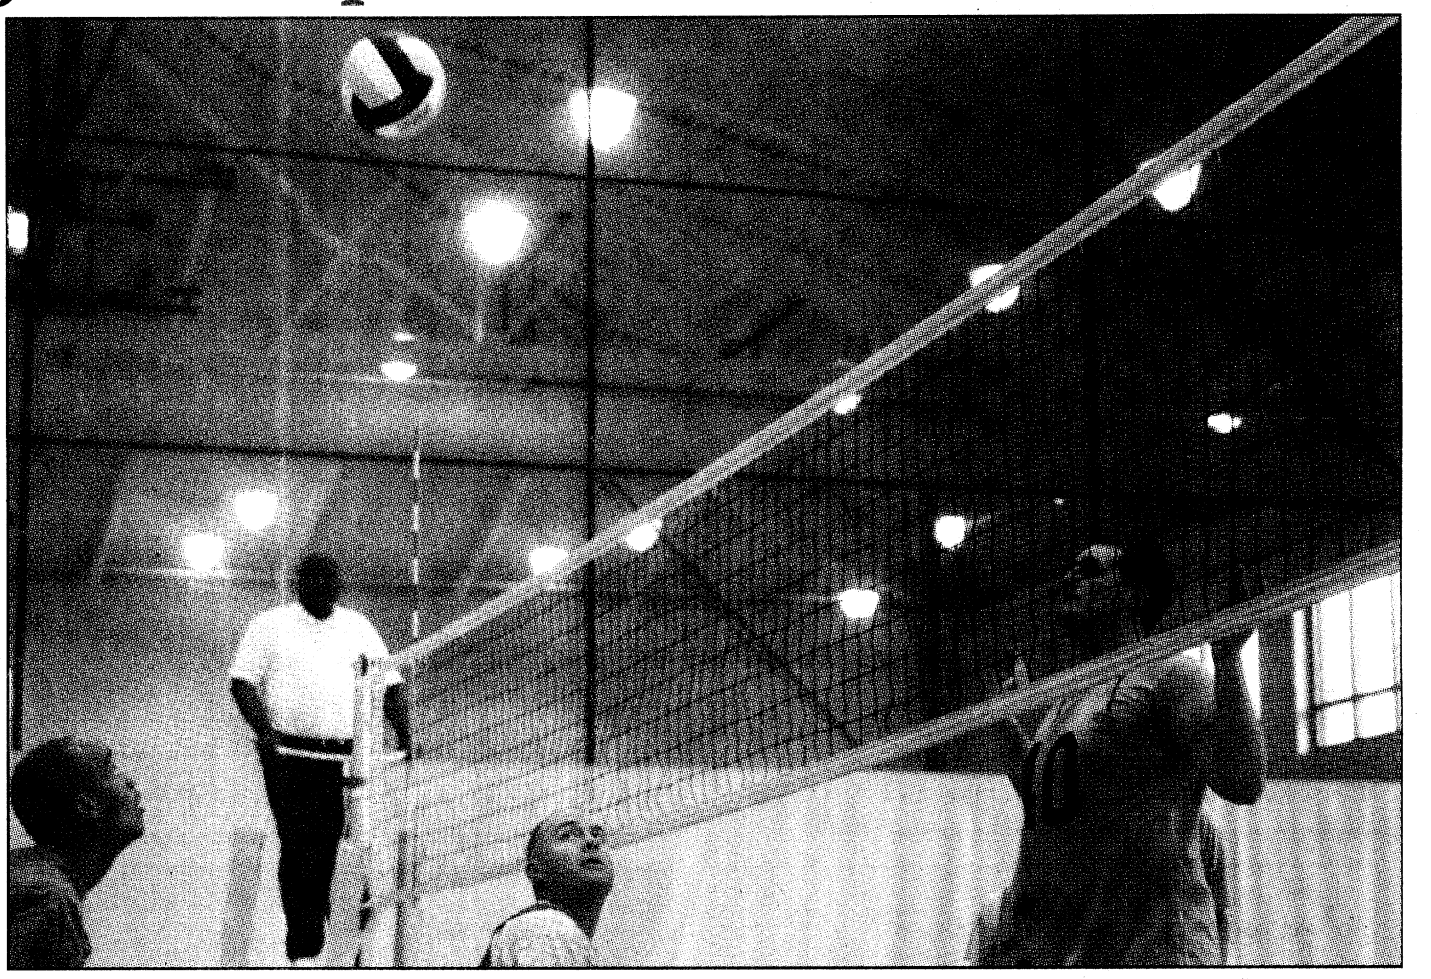

"I think their team had a strategy on how to win before they came out here," said Stallion James Brown. "We need to get in more practice time and I think we'll be good."

"I think we had really good footwork out there and we had good communication going on," said Champ coach Benji Morgan. "Although we won, I think we can always get better."

Champ Bryan Allen, who got 15 kills and seven aces in the match, said it was a well played game by both teams.

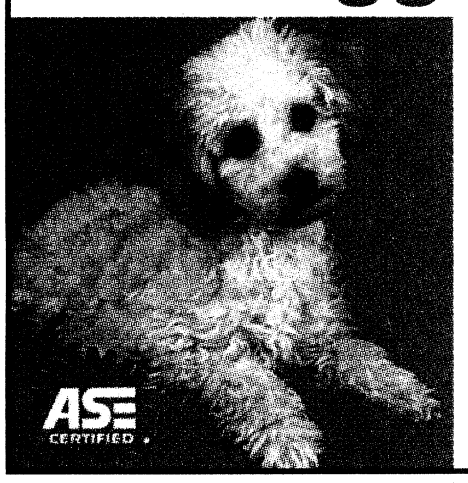

"We scored a lot on serves and we had a good offense and good teamwork," he said. "Our next game is against USAIC. We played them in a scrimmage game and lost, but I am confident we can win against them this time."

The Champs were supposed to play USAIC Tuesday at Smith Fitness Center in the quarterfinals, but won by forfeit over USAIC. The Champs played in the finals Wednesday night. For complete results of the finals, see next week's edition of The Bayonet.

The Financial Star

Credit card companies are crunched.
Your bank is bailing.
But we're still serving you.

Economic hardships due to our current recession are hitting nearly everyone. Of course those with money in the stock market have felt its effects, but people are feeling the pain in other ways as well.

Many are now saddled with adjustable-rate mortgages that have adjusted to rates and payments they simply cannot afford. Many have found that they couldn't afford to purchase those new cars that's done in keeping mum on specific decisions, but say they're just trying to avoid loss.

There are however unintended consequences to the credit card companies' actions. Having their limits cut gives consumers less available credit, which alters their credit-to-debt ratio and results in lower FICO scores. Like the woman we spoke to, many good customers are being adversely affected by these new credit card terms.

As the military banking division of MidCountry Bank, Pioneer Services not only helps the credit challenged, but also offers special low rates to those with strong credit. Our Premier Military Loan provides fixed rates as low as 9.95% APR*, and our proprietary credit scoring model allows us to assist those with less-than-perfect credit. So if you're active-duty or career-retired military, we may be able to help with a quick, no-hassle personal loan for up to $10,000.

- Special low rates for good credit.
- Affordable payments for less-than-perfect credit.

We offer three convenient ways to apply:
By phone at 706-685-2005, in person at 4525 Victory Dr., or confidentially online at PioneerMilitaryLoans.com.

Faith Warrior Bears fall to Chattco Panthers

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Faith Warrior Bears fell to the Chattco Middle School Panthers in a doubleheader March 19 at Chattahoochee County Middle School. Chattco took a 15-3 victory in the first game and 8-2 in the second game. Both were four-inning games.

In the first game of the night, the Warrior Bears had a rocky start when the first two batters struck out, but with runs by Max Ashe and Bryce Crouch, Faith had the lead, 2-0. Faith was unable to pick up any more runs before the Panthers sent them to the outfield.

In the bottom of the first inning, Chattco was on a scoring streak, with six batters in a row scoring runs. Warrior Bear pitcher Crouch struck out two batters, but the Panthers answered with another run by Chris Askew. Panther David Williams hit an infield pop fly, but Crouch caught it, ending the inning with Chattco leading 7-2.

The Panthers shut down the Warrior Bears quickly in the second inning, striking out the first three batters. Then, Panther Jack Peavy hit an RBI triple. Panthers closed the second inning with an 8-run lead over the Warrior Bears, 10-2.

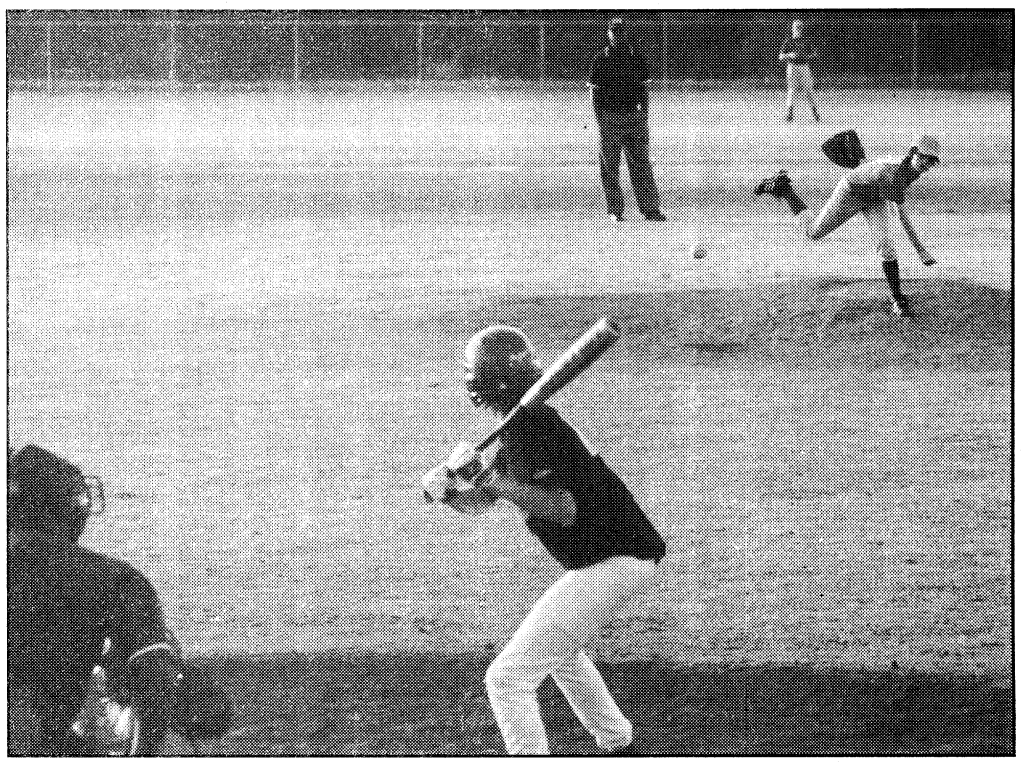

Before the game was over, Panther Jamal Head managed to pull out a run, and so did Warrior Bear Ashe in the fourth inning, sealing the 15-3 victory for the Panthers.

"I think the kids were nervous," said Warrior Bear coach Eduardo Ramos. "I think they got upset because things weren't going their way. Once they started losing and making some errors, and the other team kept scoring runs, they started to give up. They started to turn it around in the second game, really paying attention to the game and I think they were a lot more comfortable with the field because they already played a game on it."

Warrior Bear Joseph Cox said the team played hard.

"But we need more practice. That will make our team better," he said. "Hopefully, we'll do better in our next game."

The Warrior Bears will take on County Middle School at 4:30 p.m. April 2 at home.

Rodeo: 'Takes a lot of courage' to ride, compete

Billy Hogue, son of MSG(R) Bill Hogue, participated in the bareback horse riding event.

"I finally got it," Hogue said after riding eight seconds on a bareback horse Saturday night. "It's (bareback riding) hard to do because you got so much to do and so much to remember when you are getting jarred around."

Despite getting stepped on by the horse, Hogue said he was happy about his performance Saturday because before then, he hadn't stayed on eight seconds.

"It's an adrenaline rush to be out there — I can't even explain what it feels like," he said.

Thirteen-year-old Reno Kincy, stepson of SFC Daniel Akens, said the rodeo was "pretty cool."

"I think those riders are crazy to go out there and do what they do — it takes a lot of courage," said Kincy, who hasn't been to the rodeo before. "I like watching it, but I wouldn't do it."

The rodeo also included a special needs rodeo and a rodeo for middle school teams.

Wildcats defeat Tigers, 2-1

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The 7- and 8-year-old Fort Benning Wildcats took a 2-1 victory over the Fort Benning Tigers Saturday at a soccer game at French Field. It's the Wildcats' first win of the season, they have a 1-2 record.

Both teams had a few out-of-bounds kicks before Wildcat Ariel Dukes scored a goal on a penalty kick, giving the Wildcats the lead, 1-0.

Both teams dribbled the ball up and down the field, but neither were successful at putting any balls in the net, until Tiger Haven Mish scored a goal on a Wildcats' throw-in. At the half, the score was tied, 1-1.

In the second half, Tiger Benjamin Sellers attempted a shot on goal, but missed. Wildcat Shane Bruce broke the tie with a goal from the left side, giving the Wildcats the lead, 2-1. In the final minutes of the game, Wildcat Mish attempted a shot on the goal, but the ball traveled just outside the left side of the goal, sealing the 2-1 win for the Wildcats.

"It was a close game," said Wildcats coach Ivan Linsky. "I saw good things out on the field — the team was staying in their lanes and they were passing the ball like I taught them in practice. The two previous games they were bunching up, but they didn't do that this time. The defense was much better too."

"It was a super win because we did better than the past two games and we all worked together to get the win," said Wildcat Tyjzmeir Cundiff.

Wildcat Angel Gabriel said passing and kicking is what won his team the game.

"We lost the last two games so I really wanted us to win this one and I'm glad we did," he said.

The Wildcats will take on Team USA at 9 a.m. Saturday on French Field.

AMU hosts qualifier

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

More than 170 of America's top shooters from around the country gathered at Fort Benning Friday through Wednesday for the Fort Benning Spring Preliminary Tryouts Match, hosted by the Army Marksmanship Unit.

The match featured men's and women's skeet, trap and double trap events, and the top three scorers in each discipline earned the right to compete with the U.S. in one of the four World Cup shooting events held annually. It was the first time Fort Benning had hosted the match.

"Being able to host it in this area gives our local community a chance to shoot at an important venue, which then gives them a chance to compete on the international level," said SFC Charles Coffey, NCOIC for the event. "Right now, Kerrville, Texas, and Colorado Springs, Colo., are where the big matches are hosted, and for someone who lives on the East Coast it's harder for them to attend those matches. Hosting it here saves our team money because we don't have to travel, and it's definitely an advantage for our Soldiers to shoot on their home range."

The AMU home turf advantage was clear during the men's double trap finals Friday, when SPC Vincent Hancock and SFC Bill Keever took gold and silver in the event. Hancock is no stranger to the top of the medal podium, having won gold in skeet shooting at the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing. But, this was the first time he left the comfort zone of skeet shooting to try his hand at double trap, an event he began training for only two weeks before Friday's competition.

"I was just looking for a challenge," Hancock said. "I wanted to come out here and see if I could make a world team in something other than what I normally do."

Midway through the competition, Hancock said he thought he was doing "very well," but was not complacent.

"I think I'm in first place right now but there are some guys up there who could post a pretty good score and beat me, so I don't know," he said. "I wanted to average what I shot today … so I'm happy with my score so far."

For Keever, competing alongside champions like Hancock was a reward in itself.

"Any time you can finish second to an Olympic gold medalist, you feel like you had a pretty good day," he said.

Keever said he was glad AMU had hosted the match.

"In these tough economic times right now, people are tending not to travel as much to compete," he said. "But we haven't seen that with this match, and I think that's a testament to what the Army has to offer people here."

Learning Center helps increase GT scores

> "Here, I've got a computer teacher that's infinitely patient ... and if you get hung up, you've got a human teacher who will walk over and explain it."
> — Ed Ray, BSEP and FAST instructor

Soldiers and family members wanting to improve their test scores or refresh their basic academic skills have a wealth of resources available at the Learning Center in Classroom 32 A in Infantry Hall.

The Learning Center, open to active-duty Soldiers and adult family members, offers individual computer-based tutorial programs focusing on areas such as algebra, vocabulary and writing. It is also where Fort Benning's Functional Academic Skills Training program takes place.

FAST, a component of the Army's Basic Skills Education Program, is a 17- to 35-day program to help Soldiers improve their job performance and raise their general technical scores. Soldiers can enroll for half or full days.

"I help get Soldiers from where they are to where they want to go on their GT score," said Ed Ray, BSEP and FAST instructor.

On average, Soldiers see a 10-point increase in their GT score for every 16 to 18 days of study at the Learning Center, he said. They work individually with the Lifetime Library computer program, which assesses

AAFES policy change ends need for SSN

SSN not required for AAFES transactions

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Thanks to a change in AAFES policy, family members shopping at Fort Benning AAFES facilities no longer need to present two forms of identification with their Social Security numbers when paying by check, getting a refund, or cashing a check.

The policy, already in effect, is a response to the Department of Defense's move to gradually eliminate Social Security numbers from all CAC and Teslin ID cards by 2012.

"It's less hassle for family members," said Ken Brewington, general manager of Fort Benning AAFES.

The first phase of the ID card change is already in effect, allowing family members to opt not to put their Social Security numbers on their cards. As a result, family members getting a refund or making check transactions at AAFES facilities can now use their sponsor's Social Security number for ID verification instead of their own.

"All they'll need is their ID card," Brewington said. "They'll no longer have to carry around their Social

Students are able to link classroom to the real world with bird watching

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Armed with binoculars, checklists and a telescope, students from McBride Elementary School spent the morning bird watching at Oxbow Meadows Environmental Learning Center March 18.

The outing was part of Kids Bird Watch, a program developed by Oxbow Meadows staff, aimed at getting children excited about watching birds.

"We want to make bird watching and citizen science one of the most memorable experiences they have in elementary school," said Heidi Hughes, Oxbow Meadows executive director. "What we're trying to do is create those 'aha' moments so that kids can have that 'Wow that was really cool!' experience watching a bird."

The program, which is being piloted in Key, South Columbus, McBride, Matthews and Clubview schools, targets fourth-grade science classes. Thanks to donations by the program's sponsors, each school will receive a bird feeder and enough birdseed to last through May. Teachers and students will receive hummingbird feeders to take home with them, as well as several birding books and checklists.

Students will send data about birds they observe at school to the Cornell University Lab of Ornithology's eBird project, an online resource for scientists tracking bird population and location

Fort Benning celebrates Women's History Month

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"It's about where women have come from (and) what women have overcome," said 15-year-old Jeanetta Myers, daughter of CPT Marcus Myers.

In describing the skit she would perform with the Spencer High School drama club, she summed up the reason behind the annual Women's History Month luncheon Friday at the Benning Conference Center.

"It's just saying how strong women are," said Jeanetta, before her performance at the luncheon. "A woman can do anything."

Jeanetta said she knows she can do whatever she sets her mind to, just like the women in history who have faced challenges before her.

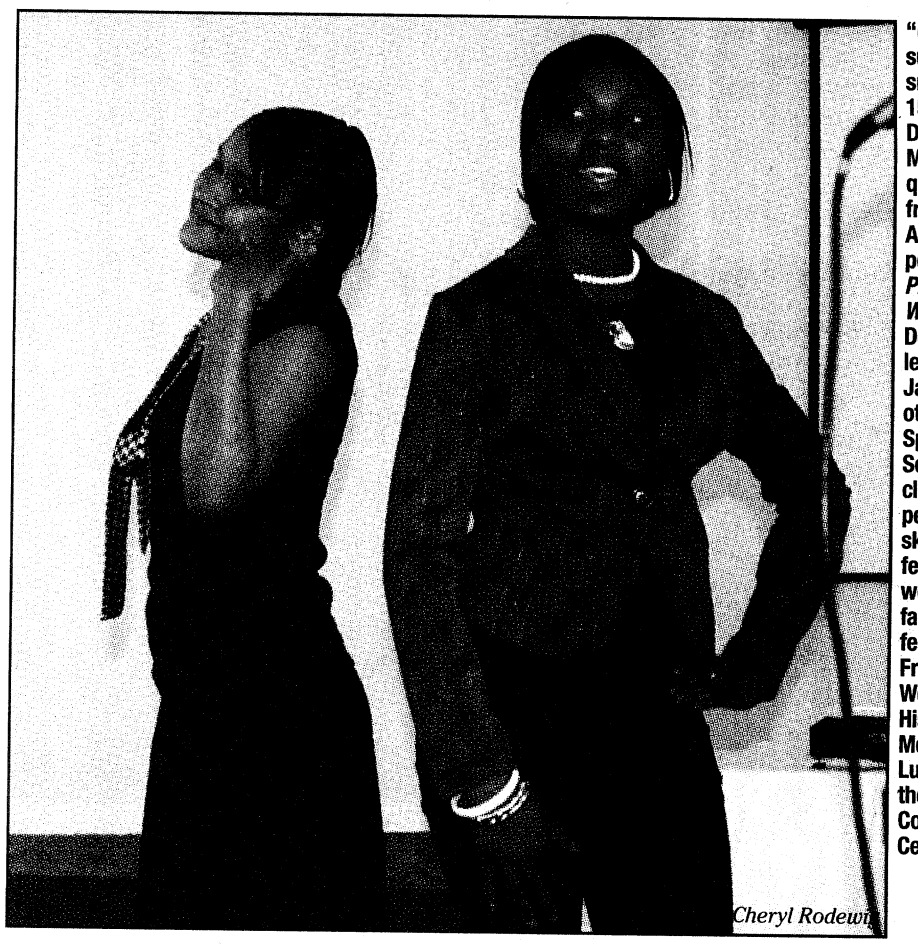

Women's History Month, celebrated in March every year since 1987, is an opportunity to recognize the many contributions women make to society.

"'Women taking the lead to save our planet,' (this year's theme), celebrates the countless ways in which the spirit, courage and contributions of American women have added to the vitality, richness and diversity of American life," said CPT Sharonda Mozee, the master of ceremonies. "This theme emphasizes the endless accomplishments of women of the past, present and future. Today, women, both military and civilians, are propelling our country to new heights."

One woman on Fort Benning taking a lead in the green movement is April Smith, the wife of LTC Dwayne Smith.

Keynote speaker for the luncheon, Smith spoke about environmental responsibility

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief MSG Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations.

Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

Security card."

Eliminating family members' need to carry their Social Security cards will cut down on risk and allow minor family members greater access to AAFES services, Brewington said.

"For minors, they could possibly run the risk of losing their card," he said. "And secondly, minors who are not of driving age generally do not have a second form of ID with their Social Security number on it, so they would be excluded from those transactions even though they are authorized customers."

their strengths and weaknesses and tailors practice tests and quizzes accordingly. If a Soldier gets stuck on a question, Ray is on hand to help.

Lifetime Library's biggest advantage, Ray said, is that it allows each Soldier to work at his or her own pace and level.

"Traditionally, BSEP and FAST are taught in a class of 15 people for two weeks," he said. "And the problem with that is, you've got everybody from the 80s to the 100s on their GT score trying to get to the same place at the same time. No teacher can do that very well. Here, I've got a computer teacher that's infinitely patient ... and if you get hung up, you've got a human teacher who will walk over and explain it."

SGT Keesha Dentino, 3rd Brigade Special Troops Battalion, has been studying intermittently at the Learning Center since January. She said the center's resources have helped her tremendously.

"It's easy to use the computer, but you also have someone here you can rely on," she said. "I'm up for re-enlistment pretty soon, and I wanted to do ROTC. For that, you need a 110, and I had a 107. So I'm just trying to get a 110 and see what my options are for re-enlistment."

Dentino is working on a bachelor's degree in intelligence at American Military University, and said she often uses Lifetime Library and Ray's coaching to help with her college courses.

"I've used him to help me with my college algebra a lot," she said. "If you don't understand something, you can ask him and he'll give you an easier way."

Soldiers interested in enrolling in BSEP or FAST should contact the Army Continuing Education Services counselors in Building 2602 in Soldiers' Plaza to confirm their eligibility. Family members can use Learning Center resources depending on availability.

The Learning Center also has 18 computers and one printer available for Soldiers and DoD Civilians for work or e-mail purposes. It is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and is set to remain open in its current location in Infantry Hall during the Maneuver Center of Excellence renovation. Women: Take lead in green movement and its history and importance to daily life.

"To me, working in conservation, it's not about protection; it's not about saving the environment over other things," she said. "It's about striking a balance, so that we have a healthy environment and help the economy. So much of our economy in this country is based on natural resources."

Following in the tradition of other female environmental leaders, Smith leads an effort to preserve clean water resources and restore ecosystems through her work with the National Audubon Society.

Smith named many female supporters of the environmental movement, including COL Maria Gervais, Virginia Callaway and Marjory Stoneman Douglas, but said that women today who do small acts of responsibility, like turning off the lights and limiting water use, are also taking a lead.

Some people think that green efforts are "special interest," Smith said, but things like air and water affect everyone.

"It's not about something that's out there," she said. "We live in an ecosystem. We live here on Fort Benning. The environment is the air we breathe, the water we drink, the land we live on — the environment our kids grow up in."

Oxbow: Students get 'a good wildlife experience'

trends. Participating in eBird will provide an important link between the classroom and the real world, said Andrea Chambers, McBride science teacher.

"They'll be able to take what they've learned in the classroom and apply it to ... the world," she said. "And as 21st century teachers, we should be able to have our children adapt to real-life experiences."

In addition to getting kids excited about watching birds at school, the program also aims to inspire them to come to Oxbow to watch birds in their free time, and to bring the excitement of bird watching home to their families and friends, Hughes said.

After the field trip, Michaela Dow and Lynsey Painter said they hoped to return to Oxbow that weekend to bird watch.

"I think the coolest thing about bird watching is we were able to get a good wildlife experience," Dow said. "I thought we might just go inside and look at pictures of birds, but instead, they took us on a nature walk and showed us live birds that ... were roaming free."

Marquel Fordham also plans to bird watch again in the future.

"Birds are very interesting," he said. "I think the most fun part was learning more about them and really getting to know them."

For Bonar Eliacin, bird watching opened new horizons.

"I never did bird watching before," he said. "Before I came here, I just thought they flew everywhere."

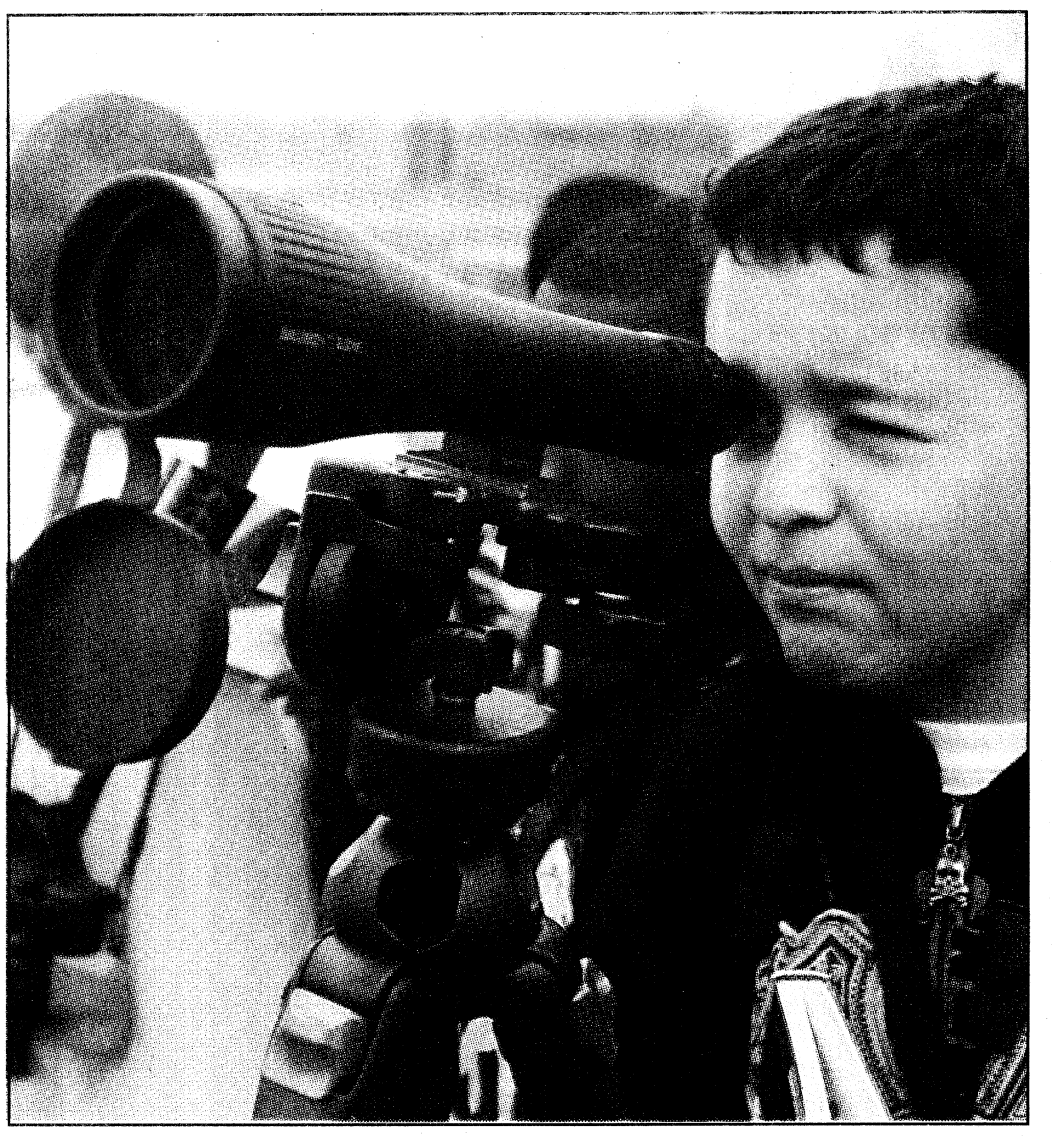

Some students, like Madison Poznanski, kept an eye out for their favorite bird species.

"My favorite bird was the Northern Cardinal, because they're really unique and pretty and they're good birds to watch," she said. "We saw a couple of them fighting with each other."

Chambers said she hoped the program would help students develop a lifelong love of science and bird watching.

"We want the children to understand that this is something they can take with them into adult life," she said. "It's a connection. It's another tool we can use when it comes to connecting community and school and awareness of environment."

SEXUAL ASSAULT Myths

MYTH: Women claim rape to get even with men.
False - Although it may happen on rare occasions, false rape charges are on the least reported crimes, nationwide.

MYTH: The victims "ask for it" by their dress.
False - No one "asks" to be assaulted. In addition, when most attackers decide to assault someone, how they are dressed is of little consequence.

MYTH: It's easy to spot a sex offender. They are creepy and have shifty eyes.
False - Sex offenders come from all walks of life and ethnic backgrounds, sex, and age. Do not let your guard down on first impressions.

MYTH: Rape is a sexual crime.
False - Sexual assault is a violent assault acted out in a sexual way.

MYTH: Sex crimes are crimes of passion or desire.
False - Sex crime is a crime of violence, anger and power not passion.

MYTH: Sexual offenders commit these crimes because they never have sex.
False - Many sex offenders are married and engage in normal sexual relations with their partners. The reason they sexually assault their victims is because they get gratification from intimidating, humiliating and degrading their victims.

MYTH: The victims secretly want to be raped.
False - Fear of ones life or disfigurement to oneself or a loved one can immobilize anyone. Always remember, the goal is to survive the attack.

Faith in God key to getting through life's tough times

Chaplain (MAJ) Walt Hoskins
COMBINED ARMS & TACTICS DIRECTORATE

Life can be pretty tough sometimes. Whether we are at Fort Benning for training, are assigned to a unit or are in a support role, we all face tough times. Our spouses and children face tough times at home and at school. As we move from post to post we often forget how difficult and stressful life in the Army can be. Times are also tough economically. When you consider the economy, the wars, the relentless change and the endless deployments that loom in the future, it's clear that times are tough indeed.

The scriptures are filled with accounts of people who faced tough times and made it through. Joseph, who was mistreated by his brothers and sold into slavery, became a better person and trusted leader as a result of his trials. Esther learned of a genocidal plot and intervened with great courage before the king and was granted favor. Noah was ridiculed for believing God, yet ultimately vindicated – he made it through the flood.

Take a look at history. It reveals that tough times seem to be the norm. The prosperity and affluence that we are accustomed to as Americans is an exception by global standards.

Rather than escaping tough times, we need to learn how to face them. We should adjust our expectations, adapt to new conditions and move forward in hope for the future.

Faith in God helps us make sense of the tough times. The scriptures teach us in James 1:2 that we should "consider it pure joy, my brothers, whenever you face trials of many kinds..." God's purpose for our trials is to improve our character and strengthen our faith so that we can develop perseverance and live victoriously through the tough times.

We experience joy and satisfaction when we look back on our lives and remember the hard times we endured. Many older couples I know cherish their memories of when they were newlyweds and financially broke. Their tough times drew them together and formed a bond that is still strong today.

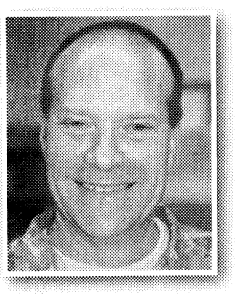

If you are currently in a tough situation, don't give up. Have faith in God to help you through your tough times.

See you at chapel.

For peaceful marriage, celebrate gender differences

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Last week I talked about the meanings behind some of the words women use. This week I will look at some of men's behaviors that may seem mysterious to women.

Mystery No. 1: He doesn't talk about his problems. When a woman is stressed, upset or fearful, she talks about it. Why does she do this? To create connection. Women share words to bring closeness. They share their feelings and thoughts and empathize with each other. They say, "Oh honey, that's okay. We know how you feel. Come here and let me give you a hug."

Men do not operate this way. Men normally think expressing their feelings is a sign of weakness, especially in the military community, which emphasizes the idea "suck it up and drive on." If a woman tries to pry into a man's feelings, he will close up tighter than a clam. She should tell him she's there if he wants to talk and leave it at that. When a man does start talking, women should be supportive and not offer advice unless asked.

Men do not like unsolicited advice, period. So even if a woman sees a man doing something stupid, she does not have to say a word. She should just let him learn. It is not that men do not talk, but that they will open up when they are busy doing something else, like driving or walking. Ladies, try talking to men during those times, since there are no distractions and you have a captive audience.

Mystery No. 2: He is not a multi-tasker. Men are single task thinkers. They think in compartmentalized terms, whereas women are better multi-taskers and think much more globally. This is a simple fact of biological differences of men and women. Men actually have larger brains and thicker skulls, so there is some truth to the fact that men are more "hard-headed" than women. Why is it that when a man sits down to watch television, he needs everyone to be quiet? Because men are focused on the TV and do not want the distractions. This is why women cannot understand why men get upset when it is not quiet. After all a women can watch TV and talk on the phone while watching the children and knowing what other children are doing in a different room. Ladies, this is often why he comes into the room and changes the TV station while you are on the computer, talking on the phone or tending to the baby. It's also why, when you say to him, "I was watching that, please turn that back," he looks like a deer in the headlights.

Mystery No. 3: He doesn't see dirt. According to a study done by the Soap and Detergent Association, dirt really is in the eye of the beholder. Dirty dishes in the sink do not bother men. Dirty laundry on the floor does not bother men. Little boys seem to think bathing is an evil. You would think asking your six-year-old boy to take a bath was like you were asking him to get a tooth pulled without Novocain.

Women notice dirt and crumbs left on the kitchen counter after their husbands claim they cleaned it. In fact, he did clean it, but to his standard and not his wife's. He is just dirt challenged.

Mystery No. 4: He lives for sports. Ladies, if your husband wears his lucky jersey to bed and can't miss a minute of the game, he's not being difficult, he is just expressing his competitive nature. Studies show that watching sports triggers a hormone surge that's similar to those experienced by the players. It is like getting excited when your own child plays a sport. To watch grown men at a sports match when their children are playing, you would think the call was against them personally or that they were the ones who scored the touchdown. But, according to a University of Kansas study, sports fans suffer fewer bouts of depression and are more social than non-sports fans. So, there is a bright side of being a sports widow.

In short, God made men and women different, and sometimes those differences can challenge us. We must learn to celebrate the differences between the sexes and recognize the strengths each bring to the table. Failing to recognize and value our differences is when we can get into trouble.

Struggling with your differences in your marriage? Give us a call at the Chaplain's Family Life Center at 706-545-1760 or stop by 2606 Dixie Road and make an appointment today. Our trained counselors are here to help with your journey.

God bless!

Presidential retreat

Dowdell's Knob overlooks Lake Franklin, which includes swimming docks and two campsites.

This life-size sculpture of Franklin Delano Roosevelt sits atop Dowdell's Knob, a favorite with the president who often picnicked there.

With the arrival of spring, F.D. Roosevelt State Park is starting to bloom with blossoms like these on many of its trees.

10,000 acres of natural beauty at F.D.R. State Park

Georgia's largest state park offers hiking, swimming, horseback riding, camping

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

His name was Ranger, and that was my name, too, at least during the leisurely ride along the creek trail at Roosevelt Stables inside F.D. Roosevelt State Park. If my guide, Leasa Stulz, needed to check in with me during the ride, she'd call back for "Ranger," and I knew that meant me.

Ranger was a roan quarter horse who trotted along pleasantly, hanging back a bit, but I didn't mind. As a novice rider, I felt safe with this steady, well-trained horse, even when he livened things up by quickening his pace to catch up with the others.

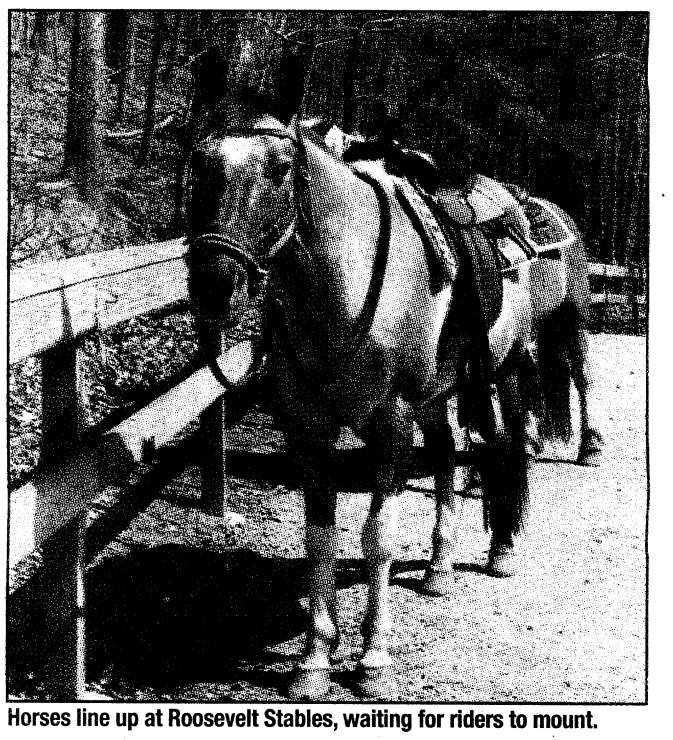

It was a great start to my day at the park. After letting Ranger do most of the work carrying me around for a while, I set out on foot on the Pine Mountain Trail. This 23-mile path meanders through hardwoods and pine trees, nothing too steep, unless you head off the beaten path.

But to walk the entire park — the largest in the state — you would have to cover more than 10,000 acres. In this vast expanse, you'll find several nature trails, campsites, a swimming pool and various scenic overlooks that make great picnic spots. Roosevelt's favorite of these spots, Dowdell's Knob, offers a panoramic view of King's Gap. A life-size statue of the president sits on Dowdell's Knob as a tribute to F.D.R., who sought treatment in nearby Warm Springs, Ga., for polio.

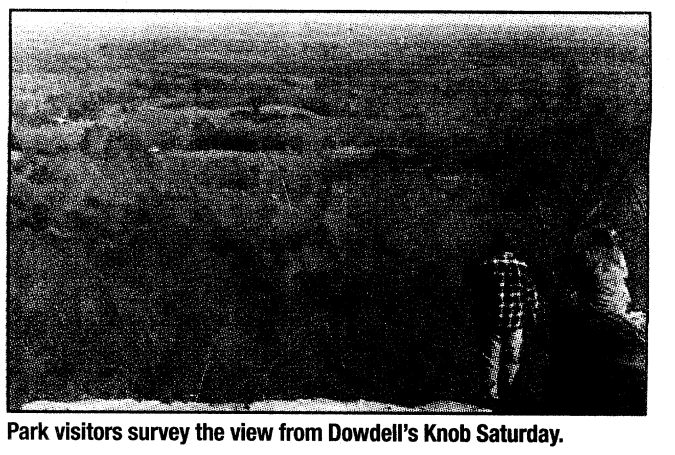

The park also has two lakes and four small waterfalls. The falls are near the eastern edge of the park and require a five-mile hike round trip. A few minutes away, the town of Warm Springs, with its restaurants, shopping and Roosevelt's Little White House historic site, makes an easy side trip if you want a break from the horseback riding, hiking and swimming featured at the park.

When you go, be sure to bring $3 for parking, sunscreen, plenty of water and your tennis shoes. They have events at the park throughout the season, starting with a "ride through history" from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday. You will journey on horseback through thick oak forests and even see structures left as a monument to the Civilian Conservation Corps. The cost is $45 for the ride. To register, call 706-628-7463.

For more information about F.D.R. State Park, call 706-663-4858 or visit www.gastateparks.org/info/fdr.

Horses line up at Roosevelt Stables, waiting for riders to mount.

Park visitors survey the view from Dowdell's Knob Saturday.

Revolutionary dining opens to the public at Patriot Park

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The Fife and Drum restaurant opened for business March 19. Located inside the new National Infantry Museum at Patriot Park, this Revolutionary-themed bistro includes upscale décor and quality cuisine close to home for Fort Benning families.

"It's a nice evening out," said MG(R) Jerry White, chairman of the National Infantry Foundation, after enjoying a meal at the Fife and Drum. "We wanted to offer a nice restaurant where people could come and enjoy eating. And believe me, I'll be monitoring it every day to make sure it maintains the quality."

After living at several installations across the U.S., Vickie Benton said she knows what it's like to want a good restaurant nearby.

This restaurant, from the Williamsburg-blue walls to the replica 1776 continental uniforms of the staff, is "really all American," she said. "It's affordable and delicious."

Events coordinator for the museum, Benton suggested the name Fife and Drum, alluding to the Fife and Drum Corps, which first played with GEN George Washington's troops during the Revolutionary War.

The restaurant includes a Continental Room, which can seat 48 and is available for private events. It also features a full-service bar. Entrees include fresh seafood, pastas, steak and some regional favorites, such as the grilled red wine chicken.

"It's a chef-driven kitchen, which means a lot of creativity and a lot of attention to detail," said general manager Steve Moore. "We're focused on creating a family-friendly, classic military-themed dining experience."

Chef selections will rotate on a daily basis, Moore said.

The restaurant is open for lunch and dinner from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays and 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. on the weekend.

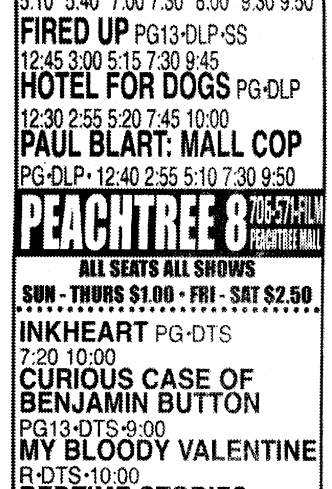

For more information or reservations, call 706-685-5800.

Are You Ready for a Tornado?

Here's what you can do to prepare for such an emergency

Prepare a Home Tornado Plan

- ✔ Pick a place where family members could gather if a tornado is headed your way. It could be your basement or, if there is no basement, a center hallway, bathroom, or closet on the lowest floor. Keep this place uncluttered.
- ✔ If you are in a high-rise building, you may not have enough time to go to the lowest floor. Pick a place in a hallway in the center of the building.

Assemble a Disaster Supplies Kit containing—

- ✔ First aid kit and essential medications.
- ✔ Canned food and can opener.
- ✔ At least three gallons of water per person.
- ✔ Protective clothing, bedding, or sleeping bags.
- ✔ Battery-powered radio, flashlight, and extra batteries.
- ✔ Special items for infant, elderly, or disabled family members.
- ✔ Written instructions on how to turn off electricity, gas, and water if authorities advise you to do so. (Remember, you'll need a professional to turn natural gas service back on.)

Conduct periodic tornado drills so everyone remembers what to do when a tornado is approaching.

Stay tuned for storm warnings

- ✔ Listen to your local radio and TV stations for updated storm information.
- ✔ Know what a tornado WATCH and WARNING means:
  - A tornado WATCH means a tornado is possible in your area.
  - A tornado WARNING means a tornado has been sighted and may be headed for your area. Go to safety immediately.
- ✔ Tornado WATCHES and WARNINGS are issued by county or parish.

When a tornado WATCH is issued—

- ✔ Listen to local radio and TV stations for further updates.
- ✔ Be alert to changing weather conditions. Blowing debris or the sound of an approaching tornado may alert you. Many people say it sounds like a freight train.

When a tornado WARNING is issued—

- ✔ If you are inside, go to the safe place you picked to protect yourself from glass and other flying objects. The tornado may be approaching your area.
- ✔ If you are outside, hurry to the basement of a nearby sturdy building or lie flat in a ditch or low-lying area.
- ✔ If you are in a car or mobile home, get out immediately and head for safety (as above).

After the tornado passes—

- ✔ Watch out for fallen power lines and stay out of the damaged area.
- ✔ Listen to the radio for information and instructions.
- ✔ Use a flashlight to inspect your home for damage.
- ✔ Do not use candles at any time.
