School, housing policy changes

Fort Benning officials have changed the post school enrollment eligibility policy.

In light of the current increase of families coming to Fort Benning and the reduction of housing available because of the Residential Community Initiative, Soldiers are now allowed to enroll their children in post schools 180 days out from housing being available to them on post, said Chuck Walls, deputy garrison commander.

The old policy allowed Soldiers to enroll their children in Fort Benning schools if the family was scheduled to move onto post within 90 days of their arrival. Now, when families come to Fort Benning and are placed on the housing waiting list with a wait of 180 days, the children may attend post schools although they live off post.

"The 180 days out rule refers to 180 school days," Walls said. "If you arrive at Fort Benning and the housing waiting list is, say twelve months long, we're going to get your kids into Fort Benning schools."

This adjustment to the policy, Walls said, is the installation's way of showing the Soldiers that they are truly concerned for their well being and that of their families.

Bush thanks troops, tells all to do same

John D. Banusiewicz
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush expressed his gratitude to the nation's military members and their families, and urged the American people to take time on Independence Day to make their own gesture of thanks.

Bush spoke at Fort Bragg, N.C., in a nationally televised address.

"To the Soldiers in this hall and our servicemen and -women across the globe, I thank you for your courage under fire and your service to our nation," he said. "I thank our military families; the burden of war falls especially hard on you. In this war we have lost good men and women who left our shores to defend freedom and did not live to make the journey home.

"I've met with families grieving the loss of loved ones who were taken from us too soon," he continued. "I've been inspired by their strength in the face of such great loss. We pray for the families. And the best way to honor the lives that have been given in this struggle is to complete the mission."

The president also expressed gratitude to military people who signed on to continue their service.

"I thank those of you who have re-enlisted in an hour when your country needs you," he said. "And to

FOR GRAMMAR'S SAKE

Red pen mightier than sword

Elsie Jackson
USAIC Public Affairs Office

I have a red sharpie. Please don't make me use it.

Maybe it's the line of work I'm in, or maybe it's a tribute to the nuns who drove the basics of what we now call language arts into me, but I am appalled by the spelling, grammatical errors and poor punctuation I am faced with on briefing slides, programs, signs and flyers every day.

Just the other day I read, "Please wait until the family exit the chapel." And then a local news channel put up a caption listing a "subdavision." And let's not forget my all time favorite sign — the one reading, "Lerning Center is closed."

And it's killing me. Latin is a dead language, and based on the symptoms, I'd say English is ailing.

I have threatened to take my red sharpie to make editorial corrections wherever and whenever there is a need, a lone, uncapped crusader in a solitary attempt to stave off the language's eventual decline.

Unfortunately my red sharpie can only be unleashed on written documents, (where people usually try a little harder to get it right) and where you can blame minor errors on poor typing.

My red sharpie's not much help with the spoken word.

I like to think that people know not to write "we was" or "they was," but they don't hesitate to use it when they're talking.

You want to send my blood pressure sky high? Use my "favorite" Nonglish (as in Not English) expression, "conversate," and watch me cringe. Some folks can score two-for-one with sentences like, "We was just conversating …"

I don't think I'm alone. Around the office, we all have our triggers.

For our editor, it's "ax," as in "We was just axing when the deadline were."

For another staffer, it's that little apostrophe that triggers rapid breathing. One recent document that presented itself in our office consistently used or omitted apostrophes, and all of them were exactly where they didn't belong.

Ditto for commas. Sure, it's a tiny mark, but a comma is an important piece of the punctuation puzzle. It does, after all, make all the difference between "Let's eat, Grandma!" and "Let's eat Grandma!"

A civilization's written language is a measure of its rise or decline. Just as you are what you eat, you eventually write as you speak, and that puts the future of the English language at the tip of our tongues.

Join me, won't you? It's past time to take a stand. Write it right, say it right or help me paint the town red.

Family fun with a lot of bang

Spc. Brian Trapp
Bayonet correspondent

With the Fourth of July celebration just around the corner, it brings to mind memories of people getting together and celebrating the birth of our nation by trying to blow up a small piece of it.

I remember one particular family Fourth of July celebration that nearly turned very bad.

Handing out sparklers to the kids is festive enough for me, but one year my Uncle Frank decided it would be the perfect time to get rid of all his old fireworks.

Exactly how old they were, I'm not too sure, but since the statute of limitations clears him, I'm pretty sure they were all as old as they were illegal.

He brought out a big box full of exotic looking packages, which I'm sure had enough black powder to get a rather good start on making your own personal coal mine.

They had names as ridiculous as the person who wanted to light them, Crazy Larry's Fiery Hornets Nest, the Burning Gorilla, and so on. But the box that looked the most menacing was simply named the Jupiter.

After setting off the first fountain of sparks and ribbon of firecrackers, everyone realized the fuses were burning a lot quicker than they should, making the night a hair more dangerous.

The thought of losing a couple fingers to those miniature sticks of dynamite and looking like a retired high school shop teacher would stop a normal person, but Uncle Frank is far from normal.

I'm guessing he was pretty set on getting rid of those fireworks in the most entertaining way possible, even if he was going to have to burn off his eyebrows in the process.

As the night wore on, the box got closer and closer to being empty; surprisingly no one was injured.

Well, that is until all that was left in the box was the Jupiter.

He carried it over, looked at it for a second, perhaps considering whether or not to take the chance, or just basking in the anticipation of seeing fiery, hot sparks flying into the night sky.

Then Uncle Frank crouched, lit the fuse and ran as if a Burning Gorilla and Crazy Larry himself were chasing him.

The Jupiter started out rather tame, then erupted, sending little rockets everywhere. It would have been more aptly named the Cluster Bomb.

Somehow, the majority of those little exploding rockets seemed to head for the house, and the crowd of people gathered there.

Uncle Frank's audience started jumping out of the way faster than a stampede of wildebeest.

Fortunately, the night ended with only a small lawn fire and a few burnt hands, and no one lost an eye — mostly because of quick reflexes.

By the grace of God, Uncle Frank is still around to run with scissors.

Now, passing out explosives to all your friends wouldn't seem like a wise idea on any other weekend, but there's something about the Fourth of July that entices people to do it anyway.

I read that every year about 12,000 people in the U.S. are treated in emergency rooms for firework-related injuries, and more than 70 percent of those injured are male. When I see those numbers, I can see a few parallels between Uncle Frank and the people who weren't so lucky.

I say avoid being a statistic or being part of someone's traumatizing childhood memories. Leave it up to the professionals. The ones with the permits, not Uncle Frank.

Zero tolerance for drunk driving July 4

Impaired drivers cause more than a third of Georgia's total traffic fatalities each year. Last year, that translated into a human cost of more than 500 funerals for Georgia families.

So the Governor's Office of Highway Safety has a message for impaired drivers this Independence Day.

"If You Drink and Drive, You'll Lose."

Georgia law enforcement officers from Operation Zero Tolerance will be out in full force this July 4 holiday travel period, and if you're drinking and driving, they'll be looking for you.

Through July 4, the Governor's Office of Highway Safety will mobilize officers from more than 500 law enforcement agencies throughout the state for Operation Zero Tolerance duty in areas all over Georgia.

State troopers, police, and sheriff's deputies will set-up saturation patrols and sobriety checkpoints across the state where drunken drivers least expect them.

Most drivers stopped at the checkpoints will simply receive a safety brochure, but motorists who are caught driving drunk or under the influence of drugs will go to jail.

For drivers stopped after drinking or using drugs, being caught, arrested, and prosecuted can cost thousands of dollars for defense and fines.

People driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol can lose their cars, their licenses, and their liberty if the charge is vehicular homicide.

So, your local law enforcement agencies urge you, if you plan to party, plan first for a designated driver, plan to take a taxi or plan to spend the night.

It is Zero Tolerance in Georgia this July 4th.

"You drive impaired, you will go to jail."

And this year, the Operation Zero Tolerance campaign is part of the One Hundred Days of Summer Heat initiative launched by the Governor's Office of Highway Safety.

Summer Heat will run through the end of the Labor Day holiday travel period in September.

High profile patrols are scheduled all summer long to raise safe driver awareness, especially about the deadly consequences of speed.

Summer Heat is supported across the state by the Georgia Sheriff's Association, the Georgia Association of Chiefs of Police, and the Georgia State Patrol.

All these police agencies will be on patrol during the July 4th Zero Tolerance mobilization through July 4th.

Keep safety first!

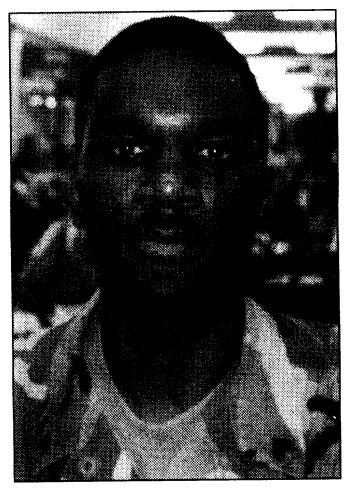
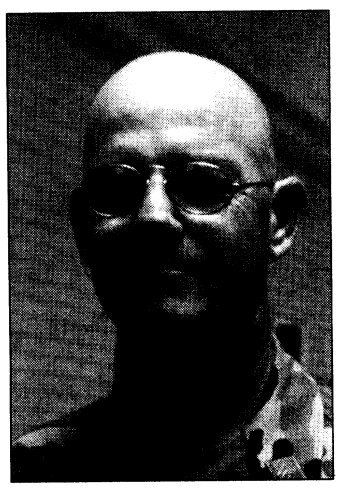
VARIOUS VOICES

What are things people say that bother you?



Simone Balek, family member — "I can't stand when people use double negatives, like saying, 'I can't do that no more.' I can't believe it when people make those mistakes! I am German, and English is my second language, and even I don't say that."

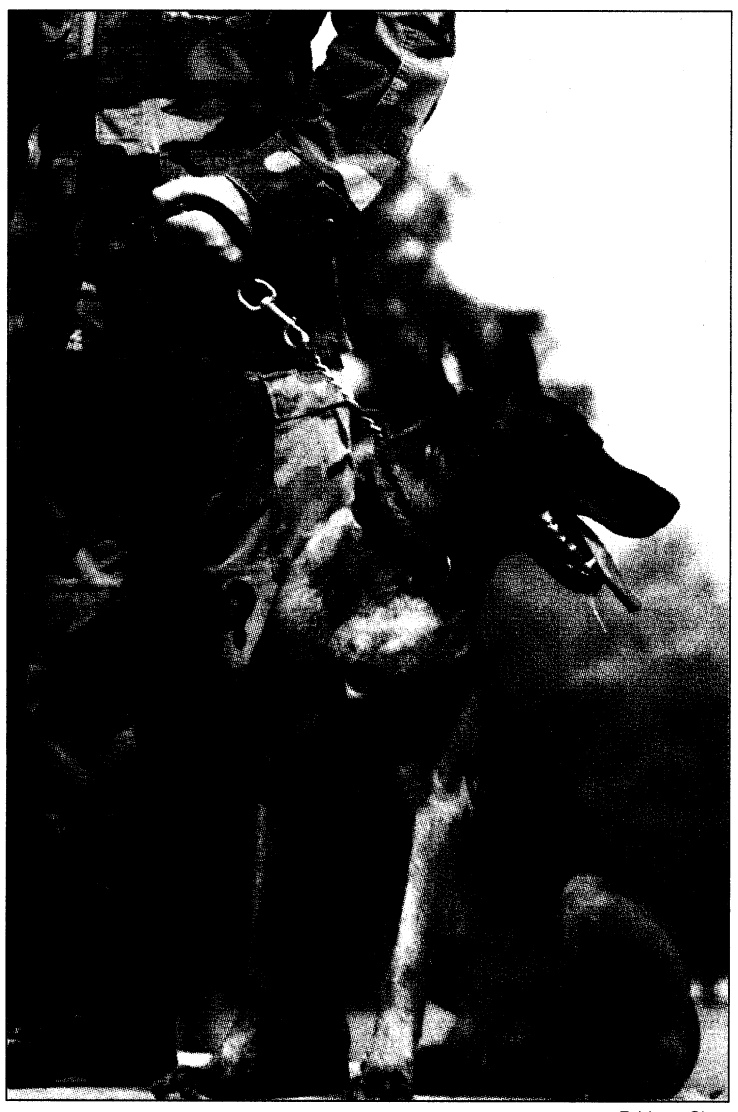
Yuel Kim, AAFES employee — "When a person says 'my friend and me,' that drives me crazy. I know it depends on the sentence which is right, but it just doesn't sound right. I like it better when someone says "he and I."



Maggie Foster, family member — "I hate it when people pronounce things wrong. Like someone will say 'screet' instead of street or 'scrawberry' instead of strawberry. I just don't like it. I wish I had better grammar, but at least I don't talk like that!"

Sgt. Dewey Williams, 14th Combat Support Hospital — "I don't like all the swearing, especially when it's in front of young kids. I try to use other words to express myself, because I don't want to teach that to my kids. They know if they hear me swearing then daddy is in a very bad mood."

Karie Colon, family member — "I don't like the word "dude." People say it all the time, and it just bothers me. A person is a woman or a man, not a dude."



Sgt. 1st Class Kevin Pippin, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "For me, it's a gesture that bothers me. I hate when people do that 'talk to the hand' thing. I think it's disrespectful."

Ann Runyon, family member — "I don't like it when people say, 'I seen it yesterday.' That irks me to no end, or when people say 'whatever.' It's just bad English."

Benning celebrates working dogs

Handlers, dogs attend memorial

Bridgett Siter

Search and rescue has gone to the dogs.

In Aruba "sniffer dogs" are being used to find a missing teen.

In Idaho, canine trackers helped locate a Boy Scout lost in the mountains last month.

In Alabama, officials are increasing the size of their K-9 Explosive Detection Unit, which works primarily in the Birmingham International Airport.

In Seattle, "service dogs" help reduce the anxiety children feel when they have to testify in court.

Nationwide, working dogs are finally getting their due, and it's high time, said Jesse Mendez, who organized the annual War Dog Memorial Ceremony on Fort Benning June 25, Military Dog Handler Day in Georgia.

"I think people are finally coming around to realizing what all dogs can do for us," said Mendez, who believes tracker and mine-and-tunnel dogs saved more than 100,000 lives in Vietnam based on archives of after action reports he has studied.

More than 100 veteran dog handlers, many of the Vietnam War era, their family and best friends — the furry, four-legged kind — attended the event at Sacrifice Field. For many, it was a reunion of vets who believe they owe their lives to the tracker dogs and handlers they served with in combat.

For others, like Gerri Miller, it was an opportunity to say thank you to the men and their dogs who paved the way for today's working dogs.

"These guys made it possible for me to do what I do. They broke ground," said Miller, who traveled with her German shepherd, Reise, from Western Pennsylvania to attend the ceremony.

Miller and Reise are members of CAESAR, a volunteer, nonprofit Canine Aided Emergency Search and Rescue organization that works primarily with police and fire officials on human recovery missions.

"We do land or water, live or dead. The kind of search going on in Aruba right now — that's what we do," Miller said. "It's not always fun. Sometimes all we can do is bring closure to a family — not the answer they wanted, but an answer nonetheless."

The annual ceremony, which includes a memorial service for handlers and dogs killed in action, brings a measure of closure to Kenneth Goss, who said he returned from Vietnam scarred and desperate to forget his combat experience.

Forgetting, as it turned out, was impossible, Goss said. Remembering helps.

"I came to realize that I did not want to forget it, because I owe it to everyone who paid the ultimate sacrifice, to honor them and remember them every day," said Goss, who led the memorial service, which included a 21-gun salute and the ceremonial placing of a leash and a field cap on an inverted rifle — one for each branch of the service that worked with tracker dogs.

Staff Sgt. David Daniels brought his 6-year-old German shepherd Kimba from Moody Air Force Base, Ga., to participate in the canine honor guard. Daniels and Kimba will deploy to a combat zone later this year.

The nine-year Air Force veteran looks forward to the experience.

"It's two thousand times more rewarding than anything else I've ever done," he said. "I have a dream job. A lot of people want to do it, but not everyone can."

That's because training and handling dogs is an intense, arduous job, said Mendez, who spent years training dogs and dog handlers for the Army after returning from Korea in 1953.

"Not everyone has what it takes," he said. "But those who do, they wouldn't trade it for anything in the world. There's nothing like working with an animal. It's the most satisfying thing I ever did."

those watching tonight who are considering a military career, there is no higher calling than service in our armed forces. We live in freedom because every generation has produced patriots willing to serve a cause greater than themselves."

Bush said service members should know the nation is behind them and that Independence Day provides a chance for the American people "to make sure that support is felt by every Soldier, Sailor, Airman, Coast Guardsman and Marine at every outpost across the world.

"This Fourth of July," the president said, "I ask you to find a way to thank the men and women defending our freedom by flying the flag, sending a letter to our troops in the field, or helping the military family down the street."

He said the Defense Department's "America Supports You" Web site is a good way to learn about efforts to support the nation's men and women in uniform.

"You can go there to learn about private efforts in your own community," the president said.

"At this time, when we celebrate our freedom, let us stand with the men and women who defend us all."

Those fighting the war on terror have earned their place in history and the nation's gratitude, Bush said.

"Those who serve today are taking their rightful place among the greatest generations that have worn our nation's uniform," he said.

"When the history of this period is written, the liberation of Afghanistan and the liberation of Iraq will be remembered as great turning points in the story of freedom."

Col. Mark L. Ritter relinquished command of the 11th Infantry Regiment to Col. James J. Klingaman June 23 in a ceremony on York Field.

Ritter will become the chief of staff for the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Deputy Commander Brig. Gen. James Yarbrough recognized Ritter for the impact he has had on the Army as he "produced leaders and paratroopers whose value can only be 'measured by the missions accomplished and the lives saved' as they deploy to combat."

"You've produced exactly the right caliber of leader we need to win this war," Yarbrough said. "They're the best we've ever had, and you've had the balance to care for Soldiers and their families."

"They do great things and are the reason our nation will always remain free," Ritter said, referring to the cadre and students of the regiment.

"Our mission in the 11th Regiment is to train the next generation of warrior officers and Soldiers to provide today's Army with competent, confident and adaptive leaders ,able to fight and win in any operational environment," he said.

"I think we do an absolutely awesome job accomplishing that mission."

Jumpers from the regiment's Command Exhibition Parachute Team, Silver Wings, commenced the ceremony by jumping from 11,000 feet and landing in front of a formation of 500 Soldiers.

The regiment's honorary colonel and command sergeant major, Jimmie Jones and Eddie Roberts, respectively, assisted Ritter as he passed the regimental colors.

Klingaman

Ritter

Ritter thanked his mentors, his leaders, his battalion and company commanders and the first sergeants who made his duty as regimental commander, "completely enjoyable everyday."

"I give my sincerest thanks to my fellow training units in the Infantry School and the installation staff for all you do every day to support our training and taking care of our families," Ritter said.

"We couldn't have asked for better support."

Ritter welcomed Klingaman to the regiment by extolling the team's camaraderie.

"You are getting a great team to lead here, and I envy you and the memories you will make in the next few years," he said.

"It is a great honor for me to have the duty to lead this regiment to train officers and paratroopers for combat, particularly in today's war on terrorism," Klingaman said in return.

"I look forward to working with all of you in this endeavor in our service to the nation."

Klingaman, a 1984 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy. His assignments have also taken him to Alaska, Guam and to Kuwait, where he spent the past year as the chief of Future Operations for the Coalition Forces Land Component Command.

near his military vehicle in Baghdad. He was a member of the 104th Transportation Company.

A native of Greenville, S.C., Jones was on his third tour to Iraq. He had previously served two tours with the 233rd HET.

"When I took over the platoon, I interviewed everyone (in the platoon)," said 1st Lt. Dennis Graves, 233rd HET. "Most of them would tell me about military stuff, but the first thing Jones said was that he liked to spend time with his family, hunt and fish.

"He loved his family. He had just been here on R&R to see the birth of his second child. He had only been back (in Iraq) a week and a half when he died."

Jones had surprised his wife, Kelly, and 2-year-old son, Blair, when he took emergency leave and showed up just hours before Kelly gave birth to Aaron May 12. Two weeks later he returned to Iraq.

"He was a good Soldier," Graves said. "He was happy, and you could see it. You could see how much he loved his wife and kids."

Graves said Jones was passionate about everything he did. He was an athlete, and on the ball field he was always trying to throw people with his intimidation schemes.

"We had a flag-football game, and everyone was getting ready when Jones showed up with this face paint on," Graves said. "I asked him what he was doing and told him this was just flag football. He said he was going all out because this was his NFL."

Sgt. Demeytrian Elam, 233rd HET, who served with Jones for three years, said when he thinks of Jones, the face paint always comes to mind.

"In softball, he would always come out with makeup on to intimidate the opposing team," Elam said. "He had this gum that made it look like blood was coming out of his mouth. He said that was for intimidation too."

Elam said, as an athlete and a Soldier, Jones never gave up.

"He didn't care what anybody thought of him, because in his eyes he was the best on the team," Elam said. "In softball, we would laugh at Jones because he would mix hardball with softball. At bat, he was a hard swinger, but never got on base."

Sgt. Kofi Weeks, who served with Jones since 2002 and lived a few doors down, described him as someone who gave his all in everything he did, no matter how small the task.

"He was a warrior. We lost a warrior that day," Graves said. "He was the type of Soldier you could ask to do something, he would knock it out and ask 'What else?'"

Graves said those attributes have also carried over to Jones' wife.

"She is strong," he said. "After the funeral, she said, 'Lieutenant Graves, we need to stop crying and start celebrating Anthony's life.' That's what we're doing."

A memorial service was held for Jones June 21 at the Sightseeing Chapel. Jones was buried June 25, next to his grandfather, in Sumter, S.C.

The Basic Combat Training Brigade bid farewell to its commander Tuesday at a ceremony on Pomeroy Field.

Col. William Gallagher relinquished command to Col. Charles Durr, former director for Combat Development.

"Command is too brief and too infrequent, and perhaps that makes it more special," Gallagher said.

"I have learned more, been inspired more and received more than I have ever given — for that opportunity, I will be eternally grateful."

Gallagher, who took command two years ago, helped transform BCTB from three basic training battalions to a reception battalion, two basic training battalions and an Infantry battalion.

"Soldiers, stay focused in your training," Gallagher said. "Have the confidence born of accomplishment, and know that you are a part of the finest Army the world has ever known. The nation knows this, too, and honors our profession."

During Gallagher's tour with BCTB, the brigade trained more than 25,000 Soldiers of differing military specialties.

"Colonel Gallagher led a transformation, relevant to the training, with measures such as field training exercise enhancement, MOUT training and weapons immersion," said Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, post commander.

> "Under his guidance, BCTB improved the Army's readiness and relevance with a stronger warrior culture, highly trained Soldiers and a perpetual legacy of standards, espirit de corps and excellence in the transformed Army of the twenty-first century."

"Because our trainees are deploying within a year of graduation, this training regimen proved immensely valuable in ensuring Soldiers are optimally prepared for combat."

Freakley commended Gallagher for his commitment to developing leaders and re-invigorating professional development for officers, NCOs and civilians.

"Colonel William Gallagher is an exceptionally principled and professional leader, as well as a consummate warrior who best serves the Army in command of troops," Freakley said.

Gallagher

"Under his guidance, BCTB improves the Army's readiness and relevance with a stronger warrior culture, highly trained Soldiers and a perpetual legacy of standards, espirit de corps and excellence in the transformed Army of the twenty-first century."

The new commander, Durr, has commanded troops at many levels and looks forward to the challenge BCTB presents.

"I believe there is no tougher mission than conducting initial entry training and providing well trained and disciplined Soldiers to our forces in combat," Durr said.

"This mission is serious business and comes with a unique responsibility — maintaining the sacred trust of the American people for the care of their sons and daughters."

Durr participated in Operation Just Cause in Panama, Operation Restore Democracy in Haiti and Operation Iraqi Freedom in Baghdad.

Gallagher will now begin a tour in Heidelberg, Germany, as the chief of the Commanding General's Initiatives Group for U.S. Army Europe.

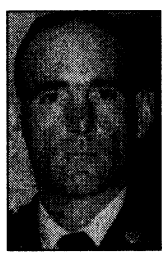
Rangers to induct 19 into Hall of Fame

The Ranger Training Brigade will induct the following Rangers into the Ranger Hall of Fame at Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium Thursday at 1:30 p.m. The ceremony is open to the public.

1st Lt. B.G. Burkett



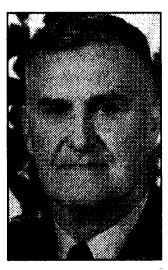
B.G. Burkett served with the 199th Light Infantry Brigade in Vietnam.

In 1986, he began raising $2.5 million to build the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Dallas. As the co-chairman of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial of Texas, he became a watchdog for Vietnam veterans, exposing fraudulent claims of more than 2,000 individuals who abused the sacrifices of Vietnam veterans for personal gain.

Burkett spent many hours researching and writing about veterans and discrediting negative stereotypes. He co-authored Stolen Valor, How the Vietnam Generation Was Robbed of Its Heroes and Its History, which won the William E. Colby Award for outstanding military book in 2000. He was presented the Distinguished Civilian Service Award, the Army's highest award for a civilian.

Command Sgt. Maj. Frederick Weekley Jr.

Retired Command Sgt. Maj. Fred Weekley Jr., a master parachutist and a pathfinder, volunteered to serve in Vietnam. He served as an advisor to the 1st and 6th Airborne Battalions and the 81st Airborne/Ranger Company, Army of the Republic of Vietnam. He earned two Bronze Stars, the Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm, and the Silver Star.



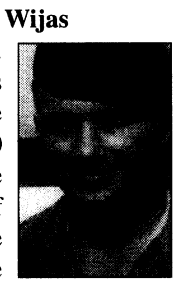
One Bronze Star citation reads that while engaging the enemy, "Weekley assisted in a link-up with friendly forces by leading his unit while under fire" and "then exposed himself to the enemy while effecting the helicopter extraction."

Later, upon encountering two enemy companies, Weekley "exposed himself repeatedly while advancing to a position where he could direct fire support and tactical aircraft. His actions "resulted in the main enemy force being destroyed."

As the sergeant major of the Ranger Department, Weekley helped reorganize the department into the Ranger Training Brigade, where he retired in 1992 with 25 years of service.

Weekley is Fort Benning's range management officer.

Gen. Henry Hugh Shelton



Retired Gen. Henry Hugh Shelton served two tours in Vietnam. He commanded the 3rd Battalion, 60th Infantry Regiment, served as the 9th Inf. Div. chief of staff for operations, commanded the 1st Brigade, 82nd Airborne Division, and was the chief of staff of the 10th Mountain Division.

Shelton served as the assistant division commander for Operations for the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault), which participated in the liberation of Kuwait during Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Shelton commanded the 82nd Airborne Division and the XVIII Airborne Corps. He led the United States Joint Task Force that restored democracy in Haiti. In 1996, he was promoted to general and became commander in chief of the U.S. Special Operations Command. He became the 14th chairman of the joint chiefs of staff in 1997.

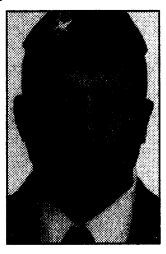
In 2001 he was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II and in 2002 was awarded the Congressional Gold Medal.

Col. Rodney J. Wijas

Retired Col. Rodney J. Wijas entered the Army in 1960 and attained the rank of staff sergeant by the age of 21. He volunteered for Vietnam in 1965 and was assigned to the 43rd Biet Dong Quan (Ranger) Battalion. When the company was ambushed, Wijas helped direct fire support on enemy positions perilously close to his own. He encouraged the dwindling BDQ force to continue to close on the enemy bunker line. When they reached the enemy positions, Wijas was cut down by a shower of grenade fragments.

After leaving the service in 1966, Wijas earned a college degree and returned to the military as a lieutenant in the Marine Corps. He participated in numerous joint Marine and Army exercises.

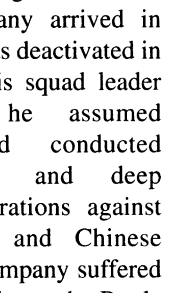
1st Sgt. Tom Wilburn



Retired 1st Sgt. Tom W. Wilburn participated in combat operations in Grenada and El Salvador, Operation Just Cause and Operation Desert Storm. His support of the National Command Authority placed him in harm's way on countless occasions, at times, as the sole American military presence.

Wilburn competed in four Best Ranger competitions, finishing first in 1992. He served 20 years on hazardous duty orders without losing a single day to injury.

Wilburn served as a trainer for the Federal Air Marshals Program, personal security and force protection team leader in Iraq and as a member of the Joint Improvised Explosive Device Task Force.



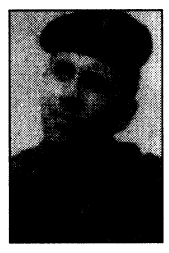
Chief Warrant Officer Cleveland Valrey

Retired Chief Warrant Officer Cleveland Valrey joined the Army Air Corps at 16 in 1949. He was an original member of 2nd Airborne Ranger Infantry Company.

Valrey participated in all company campaigns from the time the company arrived in Korea until it was deactivated in 1951. When his squad leader was killed, he assumed command and conducted patrols, raids and deep penetration operations against North Korean and Chinese forces. The company suffered grievous casualties at the Battle of Major-ri. Valrey saved the life of a wounded Ranger by carrying him from the battle to the aid station at night, over three miles of snowy, mountainous terrain. Then he returned to the battle.

Capt. Sidney A. Salomon

Retired Capt. Sidney A. Salomon was one of the original volunteers for the 2nd Ranger Battalion.



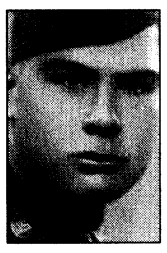
(Then) Lt. Salomon participated in the assault at Point et Raz de la Percee on June 6, 1944. As he led a mission to capture an elevated enemy position, Salomon was wounded crossing the beach. He unified the eight remaining members of his platoon and began to climb 70-foot cliffs. In a fierce battle, he led the clearing of a trench network.

On June 8, 1944, Salomon was assigned to command B Co., 2nd Ranger Bn., as the company fought its way across Europe. Receiving a battlefield promotion to captain, he led an advance into the enemy controlled Hurtgen Forest. He took an important tactical position and held it, despite heavy casualties.

Salomon moved from foxhole to foxhole, bringing supplies and encouragement to his Rangers. Braving intense fire, he moved alone to make contact with an adjacent unit and then returned to his unit. Wounded, Salomon rendered first aid and evacuated other wounded before being treated.

Salomon served as president of the World War II Ranger Battalions Association.

Sgt. Thomas C. Robison



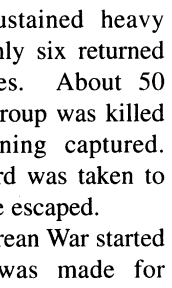
After serving in more than 30 missions in Vietnam, Sgt. Thomas Clement Robison volunteered for one last mission before returning home. On that mission, a land mine detonated, and Robison was blinded, his left leg amputated, his right leg badly fractured and his lower body badly punctured.

In the weeks following his injury, Robison endured 20 surgeries. Despite expectations that he would not survive, he walked away from the hospital 18 months later.

Robison earned a law degree and became a court administrator, devoted to helping the young. He helped youthful offenders have their records expunged so they could join the military. He became a proponent of the GI Bill. He was instrumental in building, staffing and maintaining a juvenile treatment center.

Robison is now an adjunct professor of law at Thomas M. Cooley Law School in Lansing, Mich.

Master Sgt. Harold L. Rinard



Master Sgt. Harold L. Rinard was one of the first to volunteer for Darby's Rangers. He fought in North Africa, Salerno, Anzio and all the major Ranger combat actions of those campaigns. He was wounded three times.

During an attack on Cisterna, the Rangers sustained heavy casualties — only six returned to friendly lines. About 50 percent of the group was killed and the remaining captured. Wounded, Rinard was taken to Poland where he escaped.

When the Korean War started and the call was made for Ranger volunteers, Rinard was heard to say, "Once a Ranger always a Ranger."

Feb. 15, 1951, five Chinese regiments surrounded his company at Chipyong-ni. Rinard led an attack to gain a key hill position. Among the first to top the hill, Rinard was killed later that day.

Col. William T. Palmer

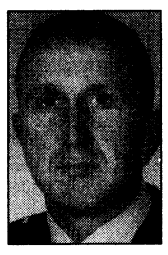
Retired Col. William T. Palmer was one of the original cadre for the 101st Recondo School at Fort Campbell, Ky., in 1958-59. He served on the Ranger Training team with the Army of the Republic of Vietnam Division near Hue, Vietnam in 1961-62. He also worked at Ranger Mountain Camp in 1965 and joined the 173rd Airborne Brigade in 1966, where he founded the 173rd Long Range Reconnaissance Patrol.

He led the platoon through the first class of the Military Assistance Command Vietnam Recondo School. While commanding the 173rd Long Range Reconnaisance Patrol, he developed the emergency extraction rig used extensively within the 173rd Airborne Bde.

He returned to Vietnam to command an Infantry battalion with the 101st Airborne Division in 1970. He later served as 7th Special Forces commander and J-3 for Joint Special Operations Command.

Palmer retired as commander of the U.S. Army Airborne and Special Operations Test Board. He earned the Soldiers Medal, seven Bronze Stars, four with V device, a Purple Heart, the Combat Infantryman Badge and the Master Parachutist Badge with Combat Star. Palmer is known as "the godfather of the 173rd LRRP."

Capt. John Francis Murphy

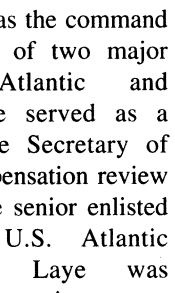


Capt. John F. Murphy enlisted in 1943.

His unit, the 6th Ranger Battalion, was chosen to free the 514 Allied prisoners of war behind Japanese lines. Included in the POW ranks were some of the survivors of the Bataan Death March.

More than 130 Rangers and Scouts spent two days maneuvering close to the camp. When the patrol was in front of the main gate, Murphy led his platoon through a tunnel to the other side of the road and to the rear of the prison to prevent any withdrawal of the enemy. He fired the first shot to initiate the largest, successful rescue of Allied Forces during World War II. All the prisoners were released and all the enemy guards were annihilated. Murphy received the Silver Star.

Command Sgt. Maj. Jesse G. Laye



Retired Command Sgt. Maj. Jesse G. Laye enlisted in the Army in 1971. In 1983, he began his Ranger career with the 1st Battalion (Ranger), 75th Infantry. He was deployed to Grenada and led his platoon in Operation Urgent Fury.

Laye was wounded in Somalia and received the Purple Heart.

Laye served as the command sergeant major of two major commands, Atlantic and Southern. He served as a member of the Secretary of Defense's compensation review board while the senior enlisted advisor for U.S. Atlantic Command. Laye was instrumental in getting a pay raise for enlisted personnel.

1st Lt. Jack L. Knight

Retired 1st Lt. Jack L. Knight was the commander of F Troop, 124th Cavalry, assigned to the second long range penetration group to operate in Burma. On Feb. 2, 1945, while leading his troop against heavy concentrations of enemy fire, Knight discovered a nest of Japanese pillboxes and foxholes. Preceding his men by at least 10 feet, he single-handedly knocked out two pillboxes and killed the occupants of several foxholes.

While attempting to take out a third pillbox, he was blinded by a grenade. Still, he rallied his troops and continued the assault. Before the task was complete, Knight fell mortally wounded. He was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

Maj. James V. Kimsey

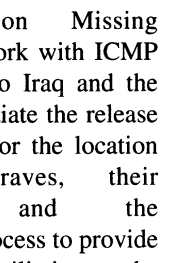
Maj. James Verlin Kimsey commanded the first company of the 82nd Airborne Division to arrive on the ground during combat operations in the Dominican Republic in 1965.

In 1966, the Regional Force/Popular Force unit he was with came under heavy fire. He engaged the enemy from an exposed position and repelled the ambush, permitting the unit to reach a friendly outpost.

On his second tour in Vietnam, Kimsey guided Regional Force/Popular Force units in the organization of the defense of their cantonments and was instrumental in the deployment of the Phoenix program.

Kimsey established an orphanage in Vietnam and supported it financially for 38 years.

In 1985 he became the founding chief executive officer of America Online, Inc. He left AOL in 1996 and created the Kimsey Foundation to benefit the community and level the field for disadvantaged youth.



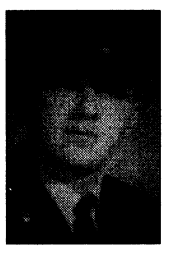
As chairman of the Board of Refugees International, he visited Bosnia, Timbuktu and Cambodia to assess refugee repatriation, land mine removal and human rights concerns.

In 2001, Kimsey was named chairman of the International Commission on Missing Persons. His work with ICMP has taken him to Iraq and the Balkans to negotiate the release of information for the location of mass graves, their exhumation and the identification process to provide peace and reconciliation to the war torn nations.

Kimsey traveled twice to the rebel-held Colombian village of Los Pozos to meet Manuel Marulanda, the chief of the powerful Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, known for earning huge profits from illegal drug trade and kidnapping. These discussions boosted fledgling peace talks.

In 1998, Kimsey received KPMG Peat Marwick's High Tech Entrepreneur Award, the American Academy of Achievement's Golden Plate Award, and the I Have A Dream Award. In 1999, he received the Horatio Alger Award and a place in the Junior Achievement Business Hall of Fame.

Col. John T. Keneally



In 1980, Col. John T. Keneally was selected to command "Hardrock Charlie" Company, 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, the unit that had, three months earlier, participated in the aborted "Desert One" operation to free American hostages in Iran. His company continued training to prepare for possible attempts to free the hostages.

Following a series of key assignments as an operations officer in Washington, D.C., he was selected to command the 6th Ranger Training Battalion at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

Following a brief assignment as director of Ranger Special Operations Forces at the Pentagon, Keneally assumed command of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. In 1992, the unit jumped into Great Britain and conducted live fire exercises for three days.

In late October 1992, Keneally volunteered to be the chief evaluator for 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regt., conducting contingency missions in Utah. He died in a helicopter crash near Salt Lake City.

Staff Sgt. Danny L. Jacks

In 1970, Staff Sgt. Danny Lee Jacks conducted a reconnaissance southeast of Tra Bong, Vietnam.

Jacks' team watched as the enemy force, more than 130 men, passed in front of the team's concealed position.

The team planned to allow the enemy to pass and pick a straggler or two at the end of the column.

But the team came under heavy fire as a result of a counter ambush by the enemy. Jacks led a counter assault against the enemy's ambush position without regard to personal danger and eliminated two of the enemy attackers and routed the remainder of the hostile soldiers.

Then, recognizing the need to regroup and reassess the larger enemy unit's strength and position, Jacks led his men across a stream. They again came under intense hostile fire.

Although wounded in the ensuing exchange of fire, Jacks directed his men to defensive positions while continuing to engage the enemy. He repeatedly exposed himself to fire while marking their positions for friendly fire support. He remained in his vulnerable position until the enemy force was completely defeated.

Col. Robert L. Howard

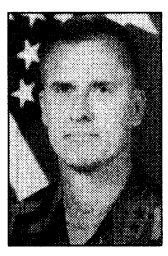
Retired Col. Robert L. Howard was a sergeant first class, the platoon sergeant of an American-Vietnamese platoon, on a mission to rescue a missing American Soldier in enemy controlled territory in Vietnam. The platoon was attacked by an estimated two-company force.

During the initial engagement, Howard was wounded and his weapon destroyed by a grenade explosion.

He saw that his platoon leader had been wounded seriously and was exposed to fire. Although unable to walk, and weaponless, Howard crawled through a hail of fire to retrieve his wounded leader.

As he was administering first aid and removing the officer's equipment, an enemy bullet struck one of the ammunition pouches on the lieutenant's belt, detonating several magazines. Howard dragged the wounded officer toward the platoon area and rallied the platoon into an organized defense force.

With complete disregard for his safety, Howard crawled from position to position, administering first aid to the wounded, giving encouragement to the defenders and directing their fire on the encircling enemy. For more than three and a half hours, his force and supporting aircraft successfully repulsed enemy attacks.



Howard supervised the loading of his men and did not leave the bullet-swept landing zone until all were aboard the helicopter safely. He was awarded the Medal of Honor.

Maj. Gen. David L. Grange

Retired Maj. Gen. David L. Grange is being recognized for his command of our nation's pre-eminent contingency strike forces.

As a first lieutenant in 1972, Grange was an advisor to the Vietnamese Airborne Division.

He commanded C Company, 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, in Desert One in 1980.

In 1982, he was assigned to 1st Special Forces Operational Detachment, completed the Selection Course (Delta) and served as a Squadron Commander during the invasion of Grenada.

Grange volunteered for service in Korea in 1987 and commanded the 1st Battalion, 503rd Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division.

He served as a special operations officer in Special Operations Command in Washington, D.C., and later served as deputy commander of the 1st SFOD where he commanded a Task Force during Desert Storm.

From 1991 to 1993, he commanded the 75th Ranger Regiment and supported the Ranger Memorial Foundation.

He then served as Deputy Commanding Officer, Army Special Operations Command, and upon selection as a general officer, he served as both ADC for Support and Maneuver in the 3rd Infantry Division, Germany.

In 1997, Grange returned to Germany and took command of the Big Red One and Task Force Eagle in Bosnia, where he was responsible for U.S. forces and operations in Macedonia and Kosovo.

Since retiring in 2000, Grange has served as the executive vice president and chief operating officer of the Robert R. McCormick Tribune Foundation in Chicago.

Technician 4th Grade Ulysses G. Auger

Ranger Ulysses G. Auger served in World War II with the 4th Ranger Battalion in Sicily and the Italian peninsula.

Responding to a call for volunteers to reconstitute the 1st, 3rd, and 4th Ranger battalions, Auger completed Ranger training and, in July 1943, embarked in a 30-man assault boat in the first wave of the invasion into Sicily.

The Rangers disabled the enemy coastal batteries and repelled attacks by Italian tanks and the formidable Hermann Goering Division, gaining control of Licata and Gela.

The 4th then led the attack into Maiori, the right flank of the invasion at Salerno, and secured the beaches to allow the 1st and 4th Ranger Battalions into Chiunzi Pass, overlooking the main Naple-Salerno road.

They secured the towns and the road and overcame fierce attacks by superior enemy forces to join the 1st and 4th Ranger Battalions in gaining Naples. Auger was severely wounded during the campaign at Venafro.

Upon returning to civilian life, he opened a hot dog stand in Washington, D.C. Auger's hot dog stand became so popular, he opened a restaurant, "Blackie's House of Beef," where he counted presidents and politicians among his clientele. That restaurant eventually spun off nine more.

Auger opened the Black Russian restaurant in 1966 in the basement of the D.C. Welfare Department building "because we wanted to give people on welfare and people in the neighborhood a nice place to eat."

He acquired an interest in the Mayflower Hotel, where he had worked as a busboy after dropping out of high school to help support his Greek immigrant family.

Policy: Changes lets children into schools 180 days out

Alabama Department of Defense Schools, said this policy is good because it reduces the amount of moves children have to make.

"We are governed by federal statute and DoD policy," McMullen said. "In order to enroll into our school, the statute requires parents to either be residing in permanent government quarters on the installation or possess a valid 90-day occupancy letter from housing."

Because of the housing issues currently going on at Fort Benning and other installations, McMullen said Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, post commanding general, worked hard to extend the 90 school days to 180 days.

For parents who are moving off post, the policy doesn't change — their children will be allowed to finish the school year, Walls said. However, they will start the next school year in schools off post.

"We tried to get an exception to the policy to have the children of Soldiers who live off post to come onto Fort Benning schools. But because of the statute that governs DoD schools, we were turned down," he said. "The only thing we can do for those families is allow their children to finish out the school year they began."

The same rule applies for Soldiers whose status changes during a school year or for DoD civilians who move off post, McMullen said.

"The children of DoD civilians and Soldiers who retire, move or complete their military commitment during the school year will be allowed to stay in Fort Benning schools until the end the school year," she said.

Families who arrive at Fort Benning this summer and are placed on a waiting list will receive a 180-day occupancy letter from housing to take to the Fort Benning schools and enroll their children.

"We don't like to lose our families," McMullen said. "The children already have a number of disruptions due to PCS moves. We hope this new policy really helps."

The new policy has already been posted on the DDESS Web site: www.am.dodea.edu/benning/schools.

BEING DEPLOYED?

PURCHASE THE BEST VALUE PREPAID CARD AT YOUR MILITARY EXCHANGE

AT&T Global PrePaid Cards offer low rates that are optimized for military personnel calling home to the U.S.

The 550-Unit AT&T Global PrePaid Card offers deployed soldiers the best value when calling to the U.S. from Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom — just 19¢ a minute when the Card is purchased at any OEF/OIF location. When purchased online or at other Exchange locations in the U.S. and around the world, it's just 21¢ a minute.*

★ Where can AT&T Global PrePaid Cards be purchased?
Buy yours at your local Exchange or online at www.aafes.com. Friends and family of military personnel can also purchase Cards for you at this site. When deployed in Iraq, Afghanistan and Kuwait, Cards can be purchased at the Exchange, where the price of the 550-Unit Card is just $35.

When calling within the U.S., 1 unit equals 1 minute of calling. When making international calls from overseas, more units are used per minute of call time and the number of units is different based on the country you are calling from. For example, when using the 550-Unit Card, for calls made from OEF/OIF to the U.S., 1 minute equals 3 units of call time. So the 550-Unit Card is good for 183 minutes of calling. For information on other countries, just call the 800 Customer Service number on the back of your Card.

★ Optimized military rates. Great AT&T benefits:
- Minutes never expire.
- Low rates. Remember, prepaid cards bought at other retailers may have higher overseas rates.
- Recharge with AT&T Autominutes® and never run out of minutes.
- Toll free Customer Service available 24/7.
- INFO TO GO available† with weather, sports and more!

★ Visit Camp AT&T.
Before you're deployed, go to www.att.com/mil and check out the Camp AT&T section. It contains information on calling from all the forward-deployed areas, other overseas locations and from U.S. Naval ships.

AT&T

*A surcharge of at least 10 units/minutes (subject to increase) applies to pay phone calls. Units are based on U.S. domestic calling. International rates are higher than U.S. domestic rates, differ according to destination called and are subject to change. Rates may be higher for calls made to or from mobile phones. 7 lives, 3 careers, 2 wars add up to adventure

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

San Parr figures he's got nine lives, at best. At 66, he's used seven of them, and he's getting out while the getting's good. He retired Thursday after 47 years of federal service.

Retired Maj. Sanford Parr's 20-year Army career took him from the ranks of the enlisted to warrant and finally commissioned officer.

Before that, there was a stint with the Coast Guard and a year or two spent "ricocheting here and there, with no real direction, no mentors, no guidance."

In 1963, the Army gave the 23-year-old California native a home, he said. It very likely kept him out of jail. Most assuredly, it gave him a great wife, a good life and "one hell of an adventure."

The adventure wasn't always fun, Parr said. He figures he "lost a few lives" in Vietnam and prefers not to talk about those experiences, save one.

On the 366th day of his first tour as a helicopter pilot in Chu Lia — the day after what should've been his last day in country — Parr's Chinook was hit for the 13th time. It missed him by six inches.

"That was life number five," he said. "I've always thought thirteen must be my lucky number."

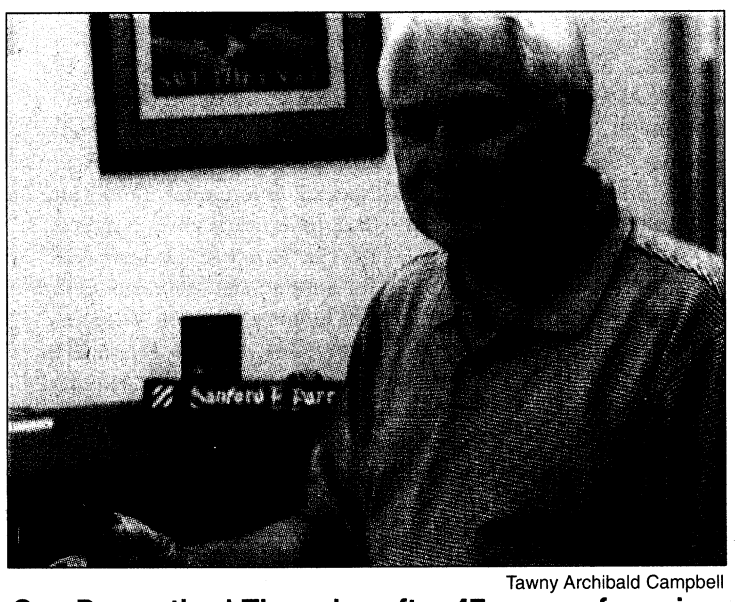
Lives six and seven were "lost," not on active duty, but civil duty. After retiring from the Army in 1982, Parr worked at a couple of civil service jobs before he became the deputy and senior technical advisor for TRADOC System Manager for Antitank Missiles, now known as Close Combat Missile Systems.

In 1992, while on a business trip to California, Parr found himself smack-dab in the middle of the Los Angeles "Rodney King" riots. Amidst the smoke and looting and general chaos, a "gang of thugs" attacked the car he was riding in, busting the window with wine bottles.

The experience was surreal, he said, but nothing compared to Sept. 11, 2001, when, during a business trip to the Pentagon, Parr turned down the wrong hallway — or the right hallway, as it turned out — and narrowly avoided being in the area where the hi-jacked jet crashed.

A hundred yards from "ground zero," Parr was flung against the wall.

"I knew right away what it was," he said. "It's true, at a moment like that, you think about the things that matter. Your life passes before your eyes, as they say."



The "things" that matter to Parr aren't things at all, he said. His wife, Brigitte, ranks right up there at the top, and he gets misty-eyed when he speaks of her.

The two met while Parr was stationed in Germany in 1963. She was only 19 when they married.

Three years and three children later, he left her for Vietnam the first time.

"I don't think I ever told her this, but it was traumatic, the separation," he said. "She's been the real trooper. She's been a camp follower for forty-three years. I don't know how she's put up with me."

Putting up with San has been easy, Brigitte said. Putting up with his career was not always so.

Tawny Archibald Campbell

San Parr retired Thursday after 47 years of service.

There was the time he deployed to Vietnam — the second time — leaving her, the kids and his mother stranded on the side of the road, their car broken down.

And there was the time he came home, to the home Brigitte loved in Augusta, Ga., and announced they'd be moving to Columbus. She balked.

"He said, 'Brigitte, if you want to eat, you're coming with me,'" she recalled.

But the toughest time was not Vietnam or the constant moving.

"It was 9-11," said Brigitte, who still cries when she speaks of the hours and hours she waited to hear her husband's voice that day after watching the terrorist attacks on TV.

"That was tougher than Vietnam. During Vietnam, I had three kids to take care of. I didn't have time to worry."

The couple, who have six grandchildren and a great grandchild, will cruise to Alaska next month. Next year, they'll visit France.

When they're not traveling, Parr said he'll "do a little consulting here and there," because giving up his job doesn't mean giving up his passion for Soldiers.

As the senior technical advisor to TSM-CCMS, Parr has helped field the weapons systems that improve Soldiers' survivability and lethality on the battlefield — systems like the Javelin, the Improved Target Acquisition System and the next generation TOW missile.

It's a mission he doesn't take lightly.

He can joke about the number of lives he has left, but he'll never know, nor will his co-workers know, the number of lives they've saved, he said.

"It's very rewarding. It's very satisfying when you turn on CNN and see a weapon system you worked on doing exactly what it was designed to do," he said.

"We're doing things that are really important to the Soldiers now.

"That's the focus."

Pfc. Paul Whitehorn helps construct a fighting position during the June 24 field training exercise for B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment.

During Week 12 at the Infantry Training Brigade, trainees take to the field. During the six-day field training exercise, trainees implement the skills they have learned during the previous three months of training. Throughout the culmination exercise, each platoon operates from their own patrol base. They conduct missions at the squad level that allows each Soldier an opportunity to execute individual tasks in a collective, tactical scenario. The company focuses on keeping its training as close as possible to the current world situation, this includes tactical check points and rules of engagement. The final event is a 12- to 14-mile foot march in full battle gear back to Honor Hill for the cross rifle ceremony. The FTX marks the end of the Soldier's training at Sand Hill. Soldiers will now focus on FTX recovery and prepare for graduation.

Long: 'Believed price was worth it, believed in mission' hundreds of Soldiers he helped carry to their final resting places.

Long, 26, was buried at the Arlington National Cemetery Monday, where he had spent two years serving as a pallbearer in about 600 funeral processions for the nation's fallen heroes.

Long, a gunner in 3rd Platoon, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, died June 18 after suffering injuries during an attack in Buritz, Iraq.

Long was driving the humvee he and his gun truck crew were using to transport a detainee. The vehicle was struck by insurgents firing rocket-propelled grenades.

Long's platoon leader, 2nd Lt. Noah Harris, an Iraqi interpreter, and the detainee also died in the assault. Pfc. John Chrzanowski, suffered serious injuries.

Before deploying to Iraq with the 3rd Infantry Division, Long had been assigned to the 3rd U.S. Infantry Regiment in Washington, D.C., to serve in the Army's ceremonial unit and protect the nation's capital.

"He was a great Soldier and a tall drink of water," said B Co. commander Capt. Bobby Toon, "so I am sure Bill made the Old Guard recruiter over on Sand Hill happy when he walked in the door."

Standing at 6 feet, 4 inches, Long was easy to spot in any crowd. But it wasn't his height that made him stand out, Toon said. It was the smile he always had on his face.

"Trust me, when you were in a tight spot and the situation looked bleak, it was a good feeling seeing Bill Long," Toon said.

Though Long thought it was honorable to serve in the Old Guard, Toon said, he still aspired to fight alongside his Infantry brethren at war.

"Bill saw the sacrifices of families, and the price of freedom," Toon said. "He believed the price was worth it and he believed in our mission in Iraq."

Understandably, Toon said, the chain of command of the Old Guard didn't want to release Long from their ranks.

After many failed attempts to be assigned to a deploying unit, Long re-enlisted to serve with B Co. as it prepared to fight in Operation Iraqi Freedom III.

Coming from the Old Guard, Long was polished and disciplined, Toon said.

It wasn't long before he established a reputation as a dependable leader among the members of the Wolfpack Platoon.

"He was like the big brother," Toon said.

"He had more life experiences, and he seemed to be the center of attention. He was the ring leader of the Soldiers."

Long grew up in Georgia, attending Shiloh and Berkmar high schools, before earning the General Education Development certification. He enlisted in the Army when he was 22 years old.

Toon said Long reminded him of himself when he first came in the Army.

He had been working temporary jobs and didn't have a lot of direction, he said, so he found it in the Army.

"It (joining) was the best thing he could have done," Toon said. "He probably would have made a career in the military. He had found his niche in life."

"I would ask you not to cry for Bill Long," Toon said at a memorial service on Kelley Hill June 24. "He was doing what he was meant to do and was where he wanted to be when he made the ultimate sacrifice."

Deanna Salie, the widow of Sgt. 1st Class David Salie, who served with 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, and died in Iraq on Feb. 14, expressed her condolences to Long's family by signing a guestbook dedicated to Long online.

"Nothing I can say will make any of this easier for you," Salie said, "But know this, Bill, Noah and David died heroes. Our nation and its people will be forever grateful for what our families have given for them."

Chrzanowski's mother Nancy, wrote similar sentiments on the same Web site.

"Our son John was with him on that tragic day, and we struggle for the words to tell him what happened when he is strong enough to ask," Nancy said. "

We know we will tell him that your son, along with Lieutenant Harris, are heroes. May you find comfort and peace as you grieve the loss of your son."

Harris: Well known, loved in hometown, Fort Benning family and friends celebrated his life and legacy.

From as far as 20 miles, yellow ribbons and signs reading, "We're proud of you Noah" welcomed the hundreds of people who traveled to pay respect to the man known for saying, 'I do what I can."

Harris, a second lieutenant and 3rd Platoon leader in B Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, died June 18 after suffering injuries during an attack in Buritz, Iraq.

On June 17, Harris, two Soldiers and an Iraqi interpreter were transporting a detainee when they were ambushed by the enemy.

They fired back and successfully fought through the ambush. Later they came to an intersection in the road, and instead of making a left turn to safety, they chose to turn right to re-engage the enemy and chase the insurgents, said Capt. Bobby Toon, B Co. commander.

"They were doing exactly what they were supposed to be doing at the right place and at the right time," Toon said. "They were taking the fight to the enemy."

Their humvee was struck by rocket-propelled grenades. Harris, Cpl. William Long, the interpreter and the detainee were killed. The lone survivor, Pfc. John Chrzanowski, suffered serious injuries.

"They were among some of the best Soldiers I've met in the last eighteen years," Toon said.

Toon said he thought Harris was not only an extraordinary Soldier, but also an exceptional person — the epitome of the all-American boy who loved his family.

Many Soldiers in Iraq have screensavers of supermodels or cars on their personal laptops, Toon said, Harris had a picture of a house on his. When Toon asked him about this house surrounded by azaleas, Harris said it was his parents' home in Ellijay.

It was near this forest home, Harris's father, Rick, said he and his wife, Lucy, walked a dirt road back and forth many times to help induce the labor of their only son. Thirty-three hours later — 24 years ago — in this very home, Harris was born.

"It (his birth) was like his life, naturally beautiful," Rick said about Harris, who weighed 10 and half pounds. "He was always larger than life."

Rick said about a year later Harris spoke his first word, "Out!"

"I guess you could say he was born ready," he said.

Ready to be a scholar, an athlete, and a leader, Toon said.

"He was driven and focused. I don't think he ever failed at anything."

Harris was an excellent student and achieved one of the top five SAT scores in his class, Rick said.

"He was very good at math and science, but also excelled in the theater department, starring in nine plays while in high school," for which he was named an Honor Bar Thespian, Rick said.

Harris served as a youth ambassador to Russia, a Rural Electric ambassador to Washington, D.C., and was a Georgia state science fair winner. He also received a $1,000 scholarship from Footaction USA.

He graduated with a degree in finance from the University of Georgia's Terry College's Institute for Leadership Advancement and was a member of its Leonard Leadership Scholars Program.

Rick said his son had always planned to go into business for himself and live out "the American dream." But after the nation was attacked on Sept. 11, 2001, Harris decided to serve his country.

Harris walked across the UGA campus and asked to join the Army Reserve Officers Training Corps.

"They told him that he couldn't join because he was a senior," Rick said, "unless he had done something really great, like attain scholar athlete for the state. After he (Harris) stopped laughing, they let him in."

Harris, an honor graduate of Gilmer High School in Ellijay, was named Georgia State Scholar Athlete of the Year for 1999. The same year he won a state wrestling title and was the captain of the high school football team.

In college, Harris was told he was too small to play football, so he joined the cheerleading team and became its captain in 2001. He was a member of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity and volunteered for Watch Dawgs, an organization set up to give students free rides to prevent alcohol-related accidents.

"He wanted to improve the lives of others," Rick said.

It was that same generosity that propelled Harris to set up an Adopt-a-Troop program, asking the folks of Ellijay and fellow UGA graduates to help boost his Soldiers' morale in Iraq by becoming pen-pals.

"Your consistent communication reminds each of us Soldiers that we are fighting for a country that we love and that loves and supports us," Harris later wrote in the Ellijay Times-Courier.

"We are so grateful to all of you, and though we may not be able to write back as often as we wish, please know that each and every word that you write, package that you send, or prayer that you lift up for us means everything to us," he wrote.

U.S. Senator Johnny Isakson, of Georgia, honored Harris on the Senate floor in Washington, D.C., June 23.

"I rise today to speak about an e-mail sent to me in May of this year. It said the following:

'Our presence here is not just about Iraq. It's sending a message to the oppressed peoples of the world that freedom can be a reality. Freedom is the greatest gift that we, the United States, have been granted, and as such it is our responsibility to spread it. For it to become a permanent fixture in our future and our children's future, we must give our all to those that desire it.'

"Mr. President, that's an e-mail to me from First Lieutenant Noah Harris of Ellijay, Georgia, from Baghdad, Iraq. On Saturday of this past week, First Lieutenant Harris died in the service of his country."

Isakson met Harris two years ago when Harris served as an intern for Congressman Nathan Deal. When he received Harris's e-mail, Isakson wrote him a note, thanking him for his service to his country and his fellow man.

"This morning I rise to pay tribute to the life that's been given on behalf of the greater good," Isakson said.

"We were always talking about understanding relationships, values, and how to be successful. After 9-11, he wanted to talk about his mission as an American," Rick said of his son's patriotism. "We think he got it right."

Rick said Harris "believed strongly in serving a higher purpose than oneself" and he was "willing to sacrifice his love of life for the preservation of a country, and the heroes who had provided democracy to him."

"He knew that for humanity to prosper, people need to be provided the kind of freedom he's been given all his life," Lucy said.

"He was a Soldier and was prepared to do whatever the mission was, He understood the plan and was a willing participant," Rick said.

Harris's parents said they want people to remember their son was willing to fight the war on terror, and for those Americans who would try to detract from the mission, should be reminded that freedom is not free.

Harris was posthumously promoted to first lieutenant and was awarded the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

SPORTS

Now that's hit and miss. Babe Ruth was the first baseball hitter to reach 1,000 strikeouts in 1930. He had a total of 1,330 in his lifetime. Mickey Mantle reached 1,500 strikeouts in 1966 he totaled 1,710 in his career.

Bench Notes

Erin Nash

• I called it! (kind of)

So I picked the San Antonio Spurs in six games over the Detroit Pistons, and it turned out to be seven.

There's nothing better than a game seven, though, and past history in most sports shows the home team almost always wins game seven.

• My MVP pick

Tim Duncan was picked for the MVP, but after seeing him throw up so many bricks for free throws, my pick is Robert Horry, "Big Shot Bob."

Horry forced the game six with his three-pointer.

• Stewart wins first of season

Tony Stewart was the king of Infineon Raceway June 26 in Sonoma, Calif.

This week's race is the Pepsi 400 at Daytona International Speedway. Coverage starts at 7 p.m. Saturday on NBC.

• NASCAR points change

Greg Biffle is now the NASCAR points leader, taking over from Jimmie Johnson, who slides into second. Johnson had a disappointing finish June 26.

• NBA draft

Andrew Bogut was the first pick in the NBA draft June 28. He'll play for Milwaukee.

Atlanta picked up Marvin Williams for the second pick and Utah got the third pick with Deron Williams. All three are college players.

• College World Series

Texas won the College World Series June 26 in Omaha, Nebraska, beating Florida in just two games of a three-game series.

Two home runs lead to 233rd win

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

As the second batter of the game Jake Dixon, of 233rd HET, hit an out-of-the-park two-run homer to start a string of runs, eventually leading to a 17-8 victory over WHINSEC in intramural softball Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

"When Jake Dixon hit that home run in the first inning, it got us started and it was all positive after that," said Dennis Graves, 233rd. "Everyone placed good hits and we had that rally momentum."

With Dixon taking the lead, 233rd raked in seven runs in the first inning to WHINSEC's two runs. WHINSEC looked like they might be stepping it up when left fielder, Jonathan Duran, nabbed two deep hits in a row to end the second inning, limiting 233rd to only two runs.

"That left fielder, he was straight," Graves said. "He can hit, catch and play. He's got game."

By the top of the third inning, WHINSEC had pulled within three, when 233rd took their turn at bat, playing their best inning of the game.

"Our hitting played a big key in this game," said Demeytrian Elam, of 233rd.

Dugan Daniels bounced the ball beyond the fence to net a double followed by Rodney Thomas who hit a two-run homer to help 233rd up their lead to 17-6 by the top of the fourth inning.

WHINSEC brought in one run in the fourth inning and kept 233rd scoreless, but time ran out before WHINSEC could bring in more than one run.

Jonathan Duran, WHINSEC, tries to slide into third base before Brue Connley, Hit-N-Run can tag him., Tuesday at Gowdy Field. Hit-N-Run won the matchup 17-8.

"Sometimes we come and kick the crap out of the other team, and sometimes we get the crap kicked out of us," said Jose Martinez of WHINSEC. "They got the jump on us from the get go and we just tried to dig ourselves out of a hole."

Martinez commended 233rd for the way they hit and placed the ball.

"I'm surprised they don't have a better record," Martinez said. "They hit the heck out of the ball. They're good."

Elam said the last couple of weeks have been hard for his team, and their mind hasn't been on the game, but things are changing.

"Today we just had fun for once," Elam said.

Graves said he was proud of his teams win, because the win didn't come from the opposing teams errors, it came from playing good ball.

"We placed a lot of base hits," Graves said. "That was the best game we have ever played."

Both 233rd and WHINSEC are now 3-3 for the season.

Best on post to compete in All Star game

The best softball players on Fort Benning will face off in the first ever All Star Break July 6 at Gowdy Field.

"The All Star game was added this year to help foster a competitive environment between the separate leagues — Sand Hill and Main Post," said Ken Wetherill, sports director for the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation. "If the big leagues can have an All Star Break, we should too."

The break will include a best of three game series between players from the Infantry Training Brigade and Basic Combat Training Brigade League and the Main Post League and a Home Run Derby batting contest.

Each team participating in intramural softball can submit two players to represent their team at the All Star game, Wetherill said.

Carol Gearheart, intramural softball coordinator, said the All Star Break will hand bragging rights to whichever part of post comes out on top

Games are scheduled for 5 and 6 p.m. with the championship game at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

"The All Star softball game is a way to bring the best of the best from Main Post and ITB," Gearheart said. "It's a way to challenge them and see whose best of the best are better."

The event was organized as a way to foster morale and to let teams break outside their leagues.

"People should come out and support whichever side they are on," Gearheart said. "It's a family event, and with school out, there have already been family members coming to the games with signs that say 'Go Daddy!'"

Gearheart said she hopes to see even more banners, signs and support at the All Star game. She also hopes people will come out for the Home Run Derby.

"(Intramural) teams may submit one player per team to take a crack at the 'Home Run King' title," Wetherill said.

The participants may be from any of the Fort Benning intramural teams.

Each batter will have a two-minute time limit to hit 12 balls, pitched by his choice of pitchers.

The Home Run Derby will begin at 7 p.m.

For more information on the All Star Break, call 545-4300.

Olympic Gold Medalist returns to USAMU as reloader

Paula J. Randall Pagan
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

An Olympic gold medalist has come home to the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

John H. "Jack" Writer, 60, was hired as a civilian reloader with the ammunition section of the Army Marksmanship Unit Custom Firearms Shop in April, nearly 36 years after he left as an Army first lieutenant.

While in the Army, Writer won two Olympic medals — the Gold Medal in Three-Position Free Rifle in 1972 and a Silver Medal in Three-Position Free Rifle in 1968.

As a reloader for the USAMU, Writer, and his co-workers are responsible for thousands of world-class match ammunition rounds produced each day for the Soldier-athlete shooters.

Each round for rifles and pistols must be measured and adjusted to within 1/10th of a grain. The reloaders test each cartridge case, propellant, primer and bullet.

"We're very excited to have someone with his level of experience here on our team," said Troy Lawton, chief of the USAMU Ammunition Section.

Writer and his fellow reloaders also work on ammunition development and testing, which has led to ammunition improvements for the warfighter, Lawton said.

The USAMU's high-velocity 77-grain ammunition and Squad Designated Marksman rifles are used by the 3rd Infantry Division in Iraq. The Special Forces in Afghanistan use the Special Purpose Receiver rifle.

Writer joined the Army in 1967 after completing Basic Officer's School at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. He was assigned to the AMU in 1967 as an international rifle shooter. The ordnance officer competed with the USAMU International Rifle Team until 1969 and shot with the Army Reserve Shooting Team until 1976.

Paula J. Randall Pagán

John H. "Jack" Writer, 60, reloads ammunition for U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. As a Soldier, Writer was assigned to the unit and won two Olympic medals.

When he left the Army, Writer returned to Illinois. He built his own guns and loaded his own ammunition for more than 40 years. When he heard the Army Marksmanship Unit was hiring a reloader, he applied for the job.

"As a boy, I loved shooting my BB gun and .22-caliber hunting rifle," Writer said. "When I was about 12 years old, I found out shooting was an Olympic sport after watching the 1956 Olympics. After a couple of years of pestering my parents, they bought me my first target rifle.

"Even though I did not know anyone who competed, I had made up my mind that I wanted to win the 50-Meter Three-Position Rifle event in the Olympics" Writer said. "That early goal was probably the main reason I was successful in the 1972 Olympics.

"As a junior shooter in high school, I would train seven to nine hours a day all summer and as much as I could over the winter," Writer said. "In college, I had a key to the range so that I could get all the training I needed. Over the years, I always felt that there was never enough time to train; there was always too much to do."

Writer has numerous marksmanship accomplishments including more than 30 medals in international competition. He also set four world records and won 11 open national championships.

Writer was the 1974 Three-Position Free Rifle World Champion, the 1970 Standard Rifle World Champion and earned the International Distinguished Badge. He is a member of the USA Shooting Hall of Fame, USAMU Hall of Fame and the West Virginia University Sports Hall of Fame.

Jack Writer served with the AMU from 1967 to 1969.

"Fort Benning and the Marksmanship Unit haven't changed a whole lot since I left," Writer said. "While facilities and equipment have been improved and modernized, the atmosphere is still the same. The USAMU's mission to produce the finest shooters in the world has remained unchanged over the years."

He and his wife, Ginger, were married in the Fort Benning Post Chapel in 1967. They live in Columbus, with their son Randy, 17.

"We always liked it here," he said, "so being back is like coming home again."

SPORT BRIEFS

Hunter harvest card amnesty — An amnesty period has been approved for hunters who have not yet turned in their harvest cards.

Harvest cards must be submitted in person to the Outdoor Recreation Office no later than close of business July 15. Individuals turning in harvest cards prior to July 15 will have their hunting privilege restored.

Long Drive Championship results — The following nine people are in the finals of the Long Drive Championship:

Qualifiers for April: John Osbourne — 317 yards; Staff Sgt. Mike Novak — 310 yards; and Bo Tabor — 287 yards.

Qualifiers for May: 1st Sgt. Romeo Victorio — 347 yards; Steve Kelly — 308 yards; and Retired CW4 Bob Antoskow — 285 yards.

Qualifiers for June: Sgt. 1st Class Dave Davis — 303 yards; 2nd Lt. Tim Herlickson — 291 yards; and Trip Blankenship — 290 yards.

There are six spots left. Three spots are available following the CG's Scramble July 28 and the final three spots will be decided following the CG's Scramble Aug. 25. The 15 finalists will compete following the CG's Scramble Sept. 29 to determine the 2005 Long Drive Champion.

The event is open to all. For more information, call Ray Meredith at 689-5584 or 681-6997

Kefurt Fitness Center closure — Kefurt Fitness Center will be closed until further notice due to an infestation of bats.

For more information, call Ken Wetherill at 545-4300.

Hunting committee monthly meeting — The Hunting Committee meets, the second Tuesday of every month through November at 3:30 p.m in the Doughboy Conference Room in Room 641 in Infantry Hall.

For more information, call Burt Davis at 325-0250.

Paintball parties — Birthday parties are available at the Paintball Park.

The cost is $20 per child with 10 or more children which includes 200 rounds of paint, a Subway sandwich, chips and a drink.

Units can also use the Paintball Park at reduced rates. With a minimum of 150 players, it is $25 per person for 500 rounds of paint.

Unit or training funds can be used, and there is an option of playing on other designated paintball fields.

For more information or reservations, call 405-9777 or 267-5038.

Late Night Basketball League — CYS Youth Sports and Fitness hosts a Late Night Basketball League for teens in grades nine through 12.

Games are the second Friday of every month at the CYS gym.

This is street-style basketball. Teams must be formed by 8 p.m. on game night. High school teams are not allowed.

For more information, call 545-3540 after 3 p.m.

Challenger Little League — The Columbus Challenger Little League is in need of "buddies." This league gives special needs children a chance to compete in organized baseball.

Many of the players need a "buddy" to help them run the bases or field the ball.

Each team practices from 6 to 7 p.m. Wednesdays and has games from 9 to 11 a.m. Saturdays off Morris Road.

For more information, call Sgt. Christopher Dennis at 544-1654 or 544-2802.

A PRIEST, a RABBI and an IMAM ARE WALKING DOWN THE STREET.

What do you get when you mix Christianity, Judaism and Islam? In many parts of the world, it's a recipe for disaster. Yet in America, it's a formula that has peacefully endured for over 200 years. In fact, not only has it endured, it's flourished.

The pundits may say that the ability for different faiths to coexist here comes from a lack of intensity and passion for any religion in America. But nothing could be further from the truth. Because we are free to choose which religion, if any, we'd like to follow, it enables us to have a deeper, more personal relationship with our faith than would otherwise be possible.

And because no one religion needs to feel threatened by another, we can look to the similarities that unite us, instead of focusing on the differences. Two hundred million Christians, Jews, Muslims, Buddhists and Hindus agree. To learn more about freedom of religion, visit rememberfreedom.org. Or, feel free to ask the spiritual leader of your choice.

FREEDOM. APPRECIATE IT. CHERISH IT. PROTECT IT.

According to Prevent Blindness America, the three types of fireworks that keep emergency rooms busy are bottle rockets, firecrackers and sparklers. Bottle rockets and firecrackers can fly in any direction before exploding and sparklers burn at temperatures hot enough to melt gold. So be careful.

Independence Day fun:

How NOT to blow yourself up, get arrested, crack your skull open, put an eye out or set your dog on fire

Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

Yep. It's that time of year again. Old Glory marks 229 years of independence July 4, and most of Fort Benning will have a nice, long four-day weekend to celebrate.

The landscape of any celebration can be spotted with dangers like exploding grills, driving fatigue, alcohol-induced stupors, fireworks mishaps and a wide range of other accidents.

One way to avoid having this year's Independence Day festivities take an ugly turn is to always put safety first.

It may seem ridiculous to conduct a risk assessment on your precious time off, but it doesn't take much, just a little common sense and some practical planning, to avoid trouble, said Command Sgt. Maj. Mike Kelso, post command sergeant major.

If you are of legal drinking age and plan to indulge this Fourth of July weekend, keep in mind the rules of engagement for alcohol use and plan ahead.

The Army has a zero-tolerance policy for drinking and driving that could cost you your career — if you are lucky enough to live.

On top of prosecution under the Uniform Code of Military Justice and a letter of reprimand from the commanding general, you could face up to an $800 fine, according to the recorder's court.

Capt. Kevin Pelley, the military police operations officer in charge, said drinking and driving is a serious offense and isn't taken lightly.

"Our mission is safety, not to ruin Soldiers' fun..." he said. "Have a plan before you even start drinking. Give your keys up before the alcohol sets in, get a dependable designated driver, have phone numbers for your chain of command and staff duty, and check with your unit and find out if they have a fund for paying for cab rides if you find you shouldn't be driving."

Alcohol-related accidents accounted for 17,448 deaths in 2001, according to the National Highway and Traffic Safety Administration.

Don't let yourself, your passengers or the innocent family you plow into become a statistic. Call a cab, call your unit, or just sit tight and sober up. But don't sit in your car.

"Sitting in your car while intoxicated, with or without the keys in the ignition, still constitutes a DUI," Pelley said.

Mixing fatigue and driving can be just as dangerous as drinking and driving, said Regis Beighley, the post safety manager.

"Even if you are using stimulants containing caffeine, and you are sleep-deprived, you are still likely to have 'micro-sleeps,'" he said. "These are brief naps lasting only four or five seconds. At 55 mph, you travel more than 100 yards — that's plenty of time to kill you."

He said no matter how well you think you can drive without enough sleep, the dangers are real.

"A drowsy driver doesn't process information as fast or as accurately as an alert driver and is unable to react quickly enough to avoid most collisions," Beighley said. "Drowsiness also narrows a driver's field of vision, so that objects or people at the side of the road cannot be seen until it is too late."

If you decide to brave the holiday traffic, buckle up in your car. Seat belt use increases the chance of survival in an accident by 50 percent, according to the NHTSA, and it saves you the trouble of getting a $15 ticket.

Roadway accidents aren't the only way to cut your holiday weekend short.

Grill accidents account for more than 60 deaths and hundreds of injuries each year, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission. Almost all those accidents are attributed to user error.

Gas grill accidents can be avoided by following simple rules, like properly maintaining gas grill hoses and tanks, protecting tubing from grease drippings, storing tanks in an upright, cool location and following manufacturer's instructions for use, according to the USCPS's Web site. Take 15 minutes and do a quick check of your gear to ensure that when you hit that ignition button you aren't lighting up everything within a 20-foot radius.

Charcoal grills are generally safer than gas versions, but can be just as deadly if used improperly, according to the Web site.

Burning charcoal emits carbon monoxide, a colorless, odorless gas responsible for more than 20 grilling deaths a year. To avoid carbon monoxide poisoning, never use any grill inside a building, tent, vehicle or other structure where air circulation is compromised.

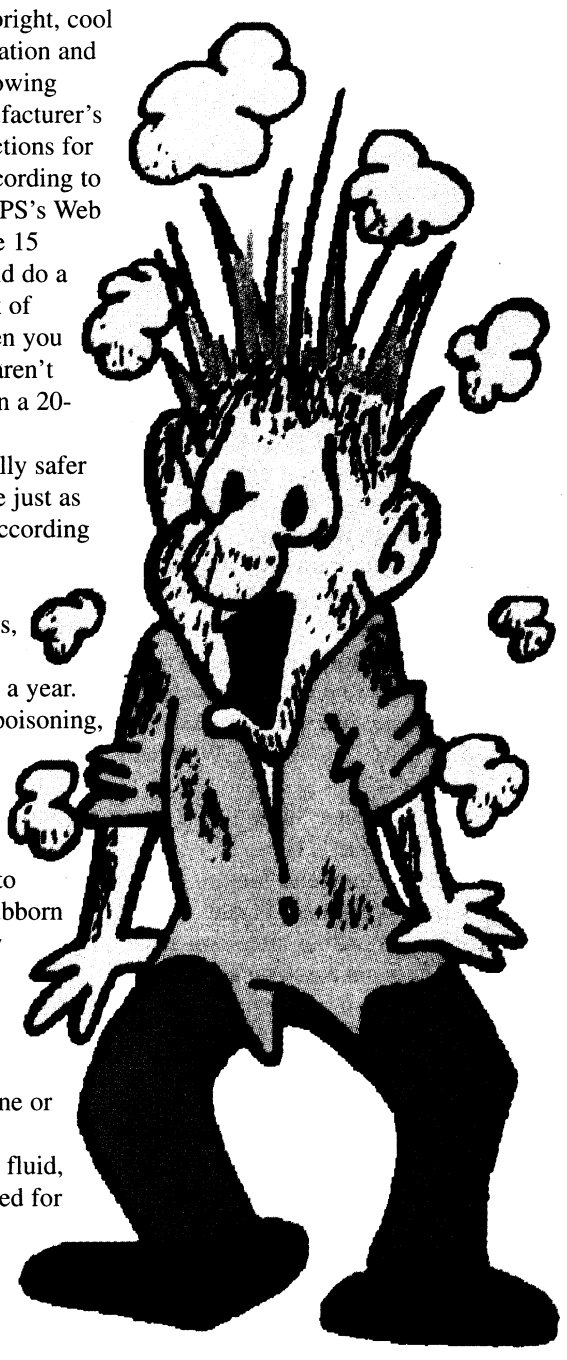
Using flammable liquids to accelerate the lighting of stubborn charcoal is another sure way to cause a flare-up and raise the risk of an emergency room visit for second- and third-degree burns.

Never use gasoline, acetone or any other highly flammable substance, other than lighter fluid, which is specifically marketed for that use.

Fireworks are yet another way to take a few layers of skin off, lose a finger or put an eye out. So if you live in Alabama or are traveling to a state where fireworks are permitted, follow common sense rules for use.

According to the National Council on Fireworks Safety, fireworks should never be lit while being held and should never be used to destroy bottles, cans or any other possible shrapnel-producing container.

A container of water or a hose should always be readily available to put out contact fires caused by fireworks, the council says.



Roman candles and similar types of fireworks should never be fired at people, animals, cars, homes, brush or anything that can be damaged by contact with a 700-degree projectile.

A reminder: fireworks, except sparklers, are not, under any circumstances, authorized for personal use in Georgia. Fireworks for personal use on Fort Benning are prohibited by U.S. Army Infantry Center Policy 210-5, Chapter 3-14.

Use of fireworks in these areas constitutes a crime, and you can be ticketed and fined more than $75, according to a Columbus Recorder's Court official.

The kids will probably be out, scampering around in full force for the holiday, too, so remember to make sure the little ones are supervised outside, in the pool and at large gatherings.

This Independence Day weekend can be a great time to reconnect with family and friends in the spirit of freedom and patriotism, but use your head, make sure that you put safety first and avoid a holiday disaster that could leave you blind, dead, an amputee or unemployed.

Vacation driving tips for dog days of summer

Response Insurance

Summer is here and many drivers will be hitting the road for vacations and weekend getaways.

"Hot weather brings unique challenges," said Ray Palermo, director of public relations. "It can present dangerous conditions for both the vehicle and its occupants."

Each summer sees more than 7 million car breakdowns on the road and Palermo said that most summer breakdowns can be easily avoided.

Before heading out, be sure you check out the basics, including: oil, transmission fluid, windshield washer fluid, battery level and strength, tire pressure (including the spare), cooling system (which should be flushed and refilled at least every two years), belts and hoses and have a well-equipped emergency kit and tool box in the trunk.

"Drivers need to stay cool as well," Palermo said. "Our studies have shown that 75 percent of drivers are fearful of encountering road rage and 37 percent said they had personally experienced it in the previous six months."

Don't escalate aggression on the road by responding to it. Stop periodically to refresh yourself; take along moist towelettes and water.

Here are more tips to stay cool:

• When driving in hot weather, it's particularly important to keep an eye on the lights and gauges. If your temperature gauge moves up, turn off your air conditioner and turn on your vehicle's heater to its highest and hottest setting. It will be uncomfortable, but it will help draw some of the heat away from the engine.

If you are stopped in traffic, put the car in park and lightly step on the gas to help circulate coolant. If the temperature light goes on or if the gauge enters the red zone, immediately pull off the road to a safe spot, well away from traffic. Do not drive any further — not even to the next exit. Driving with an overheated engine can cause serious damage to the engine.

• Do not attempt to remove the radiator cap itself. The pressurized coolant is extremely hot and will spray out with great force. Do not pour water over the radiator or engine, since a dramatic change in temperature could cause damage. After the engine cools a bit, add a 50-50 mix of coolant and water to the reservoir to bring it up to its proper level.

• Even when not stranded because of a breakdown, summer heat can pose dangers. Never leave a child or pet in a parked car in summer heat.

Even an outside temperature in the 80s can quickly bring a car interior to more than 140 degrees.

• Bring a cell phone for emergency calls, but don't use it while driving. Response's studies have shown that driving distractions have become the number one fear on the road.

Two free brochures, Driving Tips for Hot Weather and Hitting the Road Safely, and other information are available by calling (800) 610-5928 or at www.response.com.

COMMUNITY NEWS

ON POST

Power of attorney for housing residents — Soldiers planning to deploy between now and Nov. 30, whose families wish to continue to occupy family housing, need to execute a special power of attorney permitting spouses to sign the required resident occupancy agreement with Pinnacle Military Housing.

Pinnacle is scheduled to assume management of family housing Dec. 1.

The special power of attorney is available at Legal Assistance Division, Building 5, and can be done on a walk-in basis.

For more information, call 545-0667 or the Housing Office at 545-2990. For questions on power of attorney, call OSJA at 545-3281.

Reclamation sale — There will be a reclamation sale from 8 a.m. to noon today at 224A Upton Ave. Cash is the only payment accepted.

For more information, call 545-1104.

MEDDAC holiday hours — All MEDDAC clinics will be closed today through Monday in observance of Independence Day. The Main Outpatient Pharmacy will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and Saturday and closed Sunday and Monday. The Refill Pharmacy will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. today and closed Saturday through Monday.

For more information, call 544-2041.

Resident survey — An extension has been issued until July 31 to fill out and return a resident survey.

The survey lets residents tell how well their on-post housing needs are being met.

For a survey or more information, call Lillian Salazar at 545-0667 or stop by the RCI office in Building 280.

School Age Services Camp Courage — Camp Courage provides hourly, part-day and full-day camp for children in kindergarten through fifth grade.

Activities include movies, swimming, bowling, arts and crafts, educational field trips and skating.

Camp hours are Monday through Friday from 5:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. and parents can register children for individual weeks.

Tuesday to July 8 — Wet, Wild and Wacky

July 11 to 15 — Outer Space

July 18 to 22 — Surf's Up

July 25 to 29 — Jungle to Jungle

August 1 to 5 — Summer Finale

Breakfast, lunch and an afternoon snack are included. Fees are based on total family income.

For more information, call 545-3605. To register, call 545-2079.

Sayers Memorial Library summer reading program — The theme of this year's summer reading program is "FUNtastic Reading." The library has activities for children and teens that encourage children to read for pleasure.

The library summer hours are Monday through Thursday from 11 a.m. to 7:50 p.m. and weekends from noon to 7:50 p.m.

For more information, call 545-4911.

MEDDAC Open House and sports screenings — MEDDAC will host an open house and sports screenings from 8 a.m. to 2 p,m. July 23 and Aug. 6.

Screenings include sports physicals, immunizations and vision-hearing-dental screenings for children between the ages of 3 and 18 years. No appointments are necessary.

Parents should bring identification cards, medical cards, shot records and any required school physical forms to the open house.

For more information, call 544-1939 or 544-4408.

Tricare freeze lifted — MEDDAC has lifted the enrollment freeze. Tricare Prime enrollment is now open to all eligible beneficiaries. Visit the Tricare Service Center to complete enrollment forms and choose a primary care manager.

For more information, call 544-4406.

Volunteer opportunities — The Medical Department Activity and Martin Army Community Hospital have volunteer opportunities of all types.

Positions include public affairs intern, patient shuttle transport drivers, clerks, nurses, doctors and more.

Child care is provided.

For more information, call the American Red Cross at 545-5194 or the Public Affairs Office at 544-4276.

Spouse Support Group — The Chaplain Family Life Center offers a spouse support group for spouses of deployed Soldiers, from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursdays.

The support group has changed locations due to the response. The group will now meet at the Sightseeing Road Chapel.

Child care will be provided. Pre-registration is required.

For information or registration, call 545-9014.

First Steps Program — The First Steps Program provides support, education, resource referrals and follow-up contacts to parents of newborns.

For more information, call Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager, at 545-4043 or coordinator Carolyn Harris, at 544-2020.

OFF POST

Change in marriage license fees — Effective today, the fee for a marriage license in the state of Georgia is raised from $10 to $35. If the couple seeking the license has completed a qualifying premarital education program, as defined by House Bill 378, there will be no fee for the application. The bill waives only the application fee and not other fees and costs that may apply under Georgia law.

For more information, call the Cusseta-Chattahoochee County Probate Court at 989-3603.

Driver's license holiday hours — All Driver's License Customer Service Centers will be closed Saturday through Monday. Offices will reopen Tuesday. Standard office hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For more information, call Susan Sports at (678) 413-8657.

Thank a Soldier — A Safe Mini Storage is sponsoring Thank A Soldier. The public is invited to fill out a card that will be directed to Soldiers who don't receive mail, through the month of July. A Safe will pay the shipping.

A Safe is located at 4510 Armour Road in Columbus.

For more information, call 569-7600.

International Day — Join NLCI for International Day at New Life Church International at 10:30 a.m. July 17.

Prepare to celebrate diversity in the kingdom of God to include food sampling along with cultural displays, musical presentations and wearing attire that represents your nationality.

NLCI is located at 1858 Midtown Drive in Columbus.

For more information, call 565-9969.

National Short Story contest — As part of the Ernest Hemingway Festival in Sun Valley, Idaho, organizers are conducting a short story contest. Works of short fiction, which must be previously unpublished, should be postmarked by July 26. The winner will be awarded $500, will be honored during the festival and will have their story published in the festival magazine.

Stories should be submitted to Sue Bailey, SVKCVB, P.O. Box 2420, Sun Valley, ID 83353 along with a nonrefundable $10 entry fee.

Stories should be typewritten, double-spaced, maximum 2,600 words or 10 pages and available in Word format.

For more information, visit www.ernesthemingwayfestival.org or call (208) 726-3423.

Freedom Team Salute program — The Freedom Team Salute program gives all Army Soldiers the opportunity to recognize parents, spouses and employers for the support they provide to our Soldiers while they serve to protect our freedom and the American way of life.

Soldiers can nominate their parent, spouse or employer by visiting the Web site freedomteansalutemus.army.mil.

Off duty travel Web site — The U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center has developed www.offdutytravel.com, a Web site for authorized MWR patrons. It has links to Internet fare finders. The Armed Forces Vacation Club offers DoD and Coast Guard personnel a seven-night luxury vacation, on a space-available basis, for $249. Log on to www.afvclub.com/search.asp.

Community hosts tons of 4th fun

Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

It's a long weekend. The Fort Benning fireworks show Thursday night is over, and everyone needs to find something for the rest of the weekend.

The tricity area is hosting a variety of events to help you find something to do.

Here's a list of the local 4th of July events that will go on throughout the weekend.

Thunder on the Hooch — The God and Country Proud Celebration — WTVM and the cities of Columbus and Phenix City will sponsor Thunder on the Hooch, The God and Country Proud Celebration for the entire family.

The event is scheduled for 1 p.m. Monday on both banks of the Chattahoochee in Columbus and Phenix City. There will be a Country Celebration in the Phenix City Amphitheater, children can play on free rides, and when the sun goes down, there will be more spectacular fireworks show.

For more information, e-mail promotions@wtvm.com.

July 4th Surf & Sand Spectacular at Callaway Gardens — The annual celebration begins early Monday morning.

Callaway's celebration will feature beach games, music, miniature golf, shuffleboard and swimming.

The Iceberg Island Floating Water Playground will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. The Swingin' Medallions will entertain with music and dancing.

Once darkness falls, the night sky will light up with a fireworks finale over Robin Lake.

Admission fee is $16.05 for adults and $8.03 for children six to 12 years old.

For more information, call (800) CALLAWAY.

Fantastic Fourth Celebration, Stone Mountain — Stone Mountain Park explodes with excitement in a three-day salute with the Fantastic Fourth Celebration.

The evenings begin with the Lasershow Spectacular, and follow with a traditional fireworks display that will be spectacular. And on Monday, bursts of light will illuminate the sky, as fireworks are shot from both the base and the top of Stone Mountain.

The Lasershow and fireworks are free. A $7 parking permit is required for vehicle entry to the park.

For more information, call (800) 317-2006, 770-498-5690 or visit the Stone Mountain Web site at stonemountain.com.

Ole Time Fourth Celebration 2005 at the Jarrell Plantation State Historic Site — Join in the friendly competitions of a three-legged race, sack race, egg toss, or a tug-of-war at noon, followed with a reading of the Declaration of Independence.

Demonstrations of traditional crafts and skiils will be ongoing throughout the day.

For more information, call (800) 768-3401, (478) 743-3401 or e-mail jarrell_plantation_park @dnr.state.ga.us.

Florence State Park Marina Independence Day Celebration — The celebration includes butterfly and reptile presentations, boat rides along the river and much more.

Admission is free, but a $3 parking fee is required.For more information, call (229) 838-4706.

Independence Day at Westville — Early American patriotism is recreated with the "blowing of the anvil."

For more information, call (888) 733-1850.

Old Fashioned 4th of July in Pine Mountain — Celebrate the annual Old Fashioned 4th of July at Pine Mountain.

There will be a patriotic walking parade that everyone is welcome to join.

There will be food and game booths set up for everybody.

Admission is free.

For more information, call (800) 441-3502.

Special Olympics calls all volunteers

Children need help for annual event

Next month, the 2005 Special Olympics Masters Bowling Tournament for Georgia residents 22 years old or older with mental disabilities will be held in Columbus, and they need your help.

Nearly 500 volunteers are needed, said Wendy Mock, Muscogee County Special Olympics committee coordinator.

Volunteer scorekeepers, athlete assistants and general helpers are needed to help the 600 athletes expected for the tournament.

The tournament will take place at the AMF Peach Lanes located at 1636 Bradley Park Drive in Columbus July 16 and 17.

Spc. Matthew Gobble, assigned to the 29th Infantry Regiment and former president of Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers, started volunteering for the Special Olympics after joining the Army.

"The fact that I'm able to help someone who's counting on me and helping them have a good time is very gratifying," Gobble said.

Volunteer shifts are scheduled from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and noon to 6 p.m. Saturday, and 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sunday.

Volunteer orientation will be held before each shift, and volunteers are welcome to work more than one shift.

People 16 years old or older can volunteer to help through BOSS at the Sand Hill recreation center. Call 544-2741 for more information.

For more information call Myra Tinney with the Special Olympics at 507-0121.

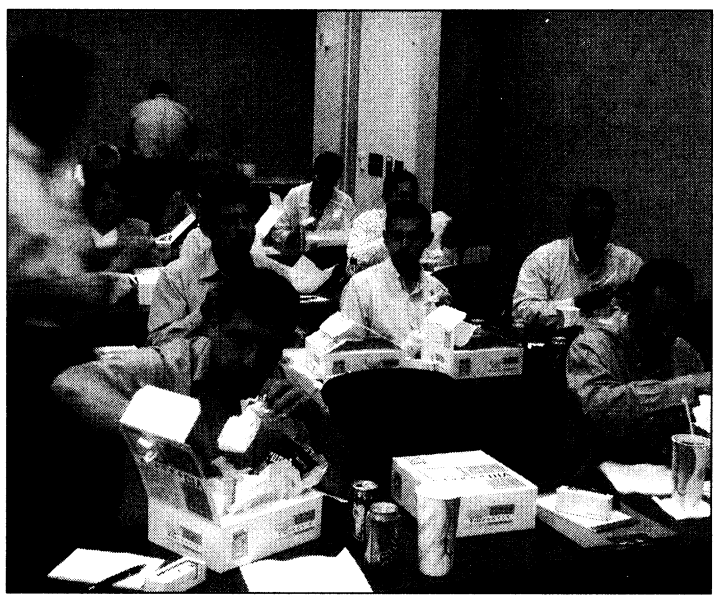
Fake eggs don't, among other things, make grade

Jo Kennedy
WHINSEC Public Affairs Office

Soldiers in Iraq craving crab legs, peppermint candy or Tabasco sauce may be out of luck.

These are just a few of the food items posing massive shipping challenges that were recently identified during the Department of Defense's annual Virtual Wartime Visibility Surge Test conducted June 13-15 by UniPro Foodservice Inc. in Atlanta.

UniPro's yearly three-day VWV test for the Department of Defense helps determine the efficiency of UniPro's national network of member companies in sourcing food items for mass military feeding within 48 hours in the event of an emergency.



Within days following the simulation exercise, UniPro holds an informal briefing at its Atlanta-based headquarters for executive officers, VWV staff members and DoD contract employees.

This year, UniPro opened the meeting for the first time to foreign military and civilian-officials involved with a defense resource management and logistics course offered at the DoD's Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

DoD industrial specialist and VWV supervisor Richard Golden, flew to Atlanta to learn the outcomes of the test firsthand, spoke during the June 17 briefing about the importance of the previous week's events and its impact on the U.S. military.

"This annual test helps improve the government's abilities overall in providing food to all military bases and military ships worldwide," Golden said.

"Originally, we spent roughly one billion a year on this effort.

Jo Kennedy

Following UniPro's June 17 briefing on the DoD's 2005 Virtual Wartime Visibility Surge Test, UniPro staff members and WHINSEC military officials lunch together.

"Since the war in Iraq started, this spending has increased to three billion."

According to Golden, this program helps limit spending elsewhere by moving toward managing information and away from managing military stockpile inventories of food supplies.

The food items, known as Other War Reserves, consist of an estimated 400 items. that either become part of the assembled ration or are shipped individually.

Items selected for the test consisted of those determined to be the most difficult to supply.

Dehydrated egg mix, Rock Cornish hens, tortilla chips and low-fat yogurt were a few of the many tested items.

UniPro uses its state-of-the-art information system to identify possible problem OWR items and shortfalls in commercial supplies.

The information is then used to guarantee that the commercial market has enough inventories to support a military operation.

Out of 73 specific items requested by the government for this year's test, 69 percent of the total shipments were completely filled by UniPro's distributors, down slightly from last year's fill rate of 77 percent.

Alicia Byers, UniPro's director of administration, explained that although these numbers are significant, they mean little in the grand scheme of the surge test.

"Our goal is not to get one hundred percent fill requirement for the government every year," Byers said.

"The purpose of the surge test is to identify where the government might have issues in a real-life scenario and to try and avoid them."

For example, items such as frozen braising steaks and Tabasco sauce caused shipping challenges due to limited numbers of available suppliers.

International products, including frozen crab legs and pitted olives, were not obtainable due to military restrictions on foreign-purchased items.

Hard peppermint candy was not on hand for shipping, because it is considered a seasonal item and is only available during the holiday season.

Byers says the group reviews the test's results to identify why certain food items were not filled and to offer viable recommendations to the military, such as eliminating or substituting items.

These suggestions will be presented to DoD officials during UniPro's semi-annual report in October.

Following the VWV briefing, Byers joked with WHINSEC students, that service men and women will most likely be pleased that dehydrated egg substitute made the list as one of the challenging food items because it is not a typical commercial product.

"The fake eggs are a military unique item because the average person does not buy dried fake eggs," she said.

"So if the military wants it, it is going to have to provide it themselves."

"UniPro simply can not supply it."

Considered the largest bulk food-buying cooperative in the world, UniPro has performed the simulation exercise for the military since 1998 under a contract with the DoD.

This marriage between military and commercial technologies enables the federal government to access UniPro's more than 250 member distributors and 2,000 food manufacturers.

UniPro tracks specific food components needed to support the military services during wartime.

"What we do is facilitate the logistic and sale processes," said John David Church, senior vice president of UniPro.

"As an alternate choice to distribution, we can cross company lines to coordinate the sales effort and activities."

CYS has child care available for all ages

Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Kyra Clark prepares to play the Wicked Stepmother in an adaptation of Cinderella. The summer program at the Fort Benning Preschool is one of the many services offered through Child and Youth Services.

The Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation has several programs to help ease the lives of Soldiers and their families.

One in particular, the Child and Youth Services Program, encompasses all Child Development Centers and providers at Fort Benning which are beneficial to children under the age of five.

"We try to offer child care programs for young children to meet the needs of military families," said Becky Carroll, chief of CYS. "Parents can choose the kind of center program they want for their child. Care is provided in well-kept facilities, and staff is trained to provide quality care for children."

There are three child care centers on post, the Main Post and Santa Fe Child Development Centers and Tot Town Child Development Center, Carroll said.

Tot Town provides hourly care for families that need child care for less than five hours per day on an irregular basis as well as full day care for children between the ages of 6-weeks old to 3-years old. The other child care centers provide full time care beginning from PT hours to 6:30 p.m.

The Fort Benning Preschool, formerly known as Patch Preschool, is available during the school year for children ages 3 and 4.

The school provides "enrichment activities on a part-time basis," Carroll said. Two-day, three-day and five-day programs are available from 9 a.m. to noon.

In addition to the Fort Benning Preschool, both Santa Fe and Tot Town Child Development Centers offer Georgia PreK classes at no cost to parents.

Tot Town also offers a program called Benning Buddies, an enrichment program for 2- and 3-year-old children. The program is designed to help children get used to being around other children of the same age.

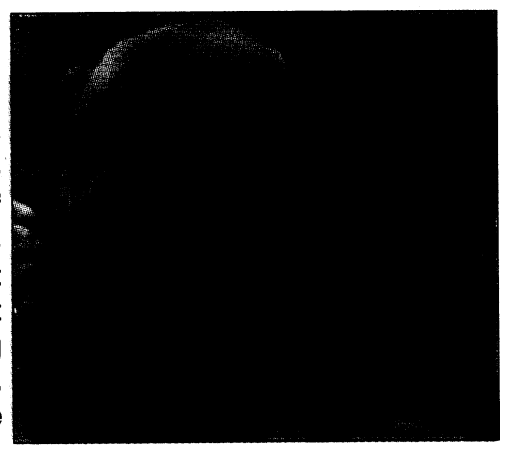
For those parents who would like to provide child care instead of taking their children to a child care center, CYS also has the Family Child Care Services.

"Parents are not allowed to run a child care service from their home on Fort Benning without being certified through DMWR," said Tabitha Smith, with the DMWR marketing branch.

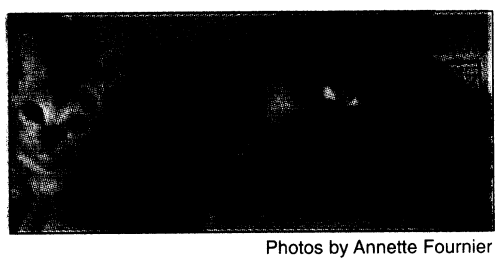
For those parents, the FCC program is available free of charge and gives them the same type of certifications as the staff at any of Fort Benning's child care centers.

"FCC providers are trained and certified to care for children from home for more than just business hours," said Earnestine Neal, acting FCC director.

As part of the certification process, aspiring providers attend a weeklong course that covers first aid, cardio pulmonary resuscitation, child and growth development, special needs, car seat safety and more.



Neal said FCC providers are also given a tax class to learn how to fill out their taxes as small business owners.



Many of the long term care providers care for children for longer than a 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. period.

"Some of our FCC providers care for children during weekends, holidays and even for more than 30 days," she said. "They don't mind doing this because they understand that some Soldiers don't have a nine to five job. They don't get weekends and holidays off."

To learn more about the services offered though CYS, call 545-2079 or visit the DMWR Web site at www.benningmwr.com.

When life becomes difficult, Jesus always there

Chaplain (Col.) Stanley E. Puckett

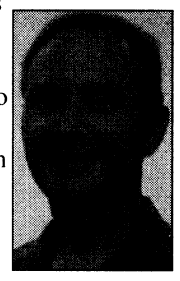
Sometimes, in the course of life, either we or people we care about suffer. These sufferings are very real and physical — sometimes the sufferings are less obvious, more personal, and yet real just the same.

At times like these, it is common to wonder why such things happen, and what the purpose of such suffering can possibly be. I would not presume to answer these questions completely, but I would like to offer some observations about such circumstances as I see them described in the Bible, in John Chapter 11.

John Chapter 11 tells the familiar story of Lazarus — how he became sick and how his sisters Mary and Martha sent for Jesus to come and heal Lazarus. As the story goes, Lazarus, a prominent man in his local community, becomes sick. His sisters send for Jesus, but Jesus waits two days before arriving.



During this time, Lazarus dies. The Apostles are puzzled that Jesus waits, allowing Lazarus to die before he arrives.

I want to make three observations from those verses. First, God loves us personally, despite any circumstances we face. In this story, the Bible plainly says that Jesus loves Mary, Martha and Lazarus. The sisters use a word that means to "love someone as if they were your actual family."

The point is in the time of their greatest need, Jesus loved Mary, Martha and Lazarus more than they knew, and more than they were prepared to understand at that time.

Secondly, sometimes God lets difficult circumstances occur in our lives.

REFLECTIONS

Puckett

In the story, Jesus waits two days to go to Lazarus. Since it's a full day's journey from where Jesus is to Lazarus' town, Jesus actually makes sure that four whole days have passed before he arrives, so that the funeral and burial would have already occurred.

This baffled the Apostles. Yet, Jesus explains that he knows that Lazarus has already died, and says so in verse 14. Jesus' wait, he explains, was not by accident, but on purpose and for a reason. I would note that Jesus does not fully explain the reason to the Apostles, but that he does reassure them.

Frequently, this is exactly how God works in our lives in difficult times. He has a reason for allowing us to experience the difficulties of life, and while he does not always explain fully (on our timetable) what he is doing, he does reassure us that he is aware of our needs and feelings and that he cares personally about them.

The third observation is that God is always present in our lives, especially when we have difficulties.

In the story, Jesus goes personally to see Mary and Martha, and to complete God's work in their lives and Lazarus' life.

In verse 11, Jesus makes reference to going to Lazarus, and although there is a large entourage with him, Jesus used the personal "I go" to describe the event.

God makes it his personal business to be present with us, to work his plan to completion in our lives, and to comfort and reassure us of his love. In the story, Jesus says this to Mary and Martha.

In our lives, God's spirit, which he sends into the lives of all Christians, speaks to us personally and through Christians who surround us. No matter where we are or how difficult the circumstances, God does not leave us alone or without comfort and assurance of his care.

When the difficulties of life assail us, it is the presence of God in our lives that brings hope and assurance. Even when our prospects are dark, when our lives are hard, God is there, with his personal and unconditional love, with his knowledge and awareness of our circumstances, and with his presence.

When life is difficult, ask Jesus to come to you. You will find that he is already there.

Cost of freedom comes at greater risk for greater gain

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

With the extra large stroke of his pen and the signing of the Declaration of Independence, John Hancock and 55 others boldly committed treason against the British Crown more than 200 years ago, at significant personal risk, that we might enjoy the religious, economic, social and political freedoms that we enjoy today.

Volumes have been written about why they did what they did and how the course of human history changed that day in a way the world had never seen.

Hawkins

Simply put, they risked everything, and two centuries later we've gained immeasurably because of that bet on freedom.

That's typically the equation with freedom, isn't it? It doesn't come free. Something has to be risked. In fact, the greater the gain, the greater the cost.

That cost was paid by patriots in days gone by, and that cost is being paid by patriots again today: American Soldiers.

The cost is being paid not just so that we can be free, but we are, daily, making a down payment on the freedom of others.

Suddenly the Army value of Selfless Service is far more than a PowerPoint slide — it's an act of will that puts self in harm's way for the benefit of others.

Just last evening I watched a TV show about a mother who has four children deployed in the Global War on Terrorism.

She's paying a price. They are paying a price. And they are doing so willingly — and that makes them patriots.

It amazed me as each was interviewed in their respective units in Afghanistan and Iraq.

To a person they all said they believed in what they were doing, they were proud of what was being accomplished and they knew that there was an incredible amount of satisfaction and purpose to their efforts. They are betting with their lives that, later, someone will look back, in a land very different than their own, and say, "I've gained immeasurably because of their bet on freedom."

As we celebrate this 4th of July, I, along with thousands of other Soldiers and home front heroes, will reflect on the price paid for freedom — the price paid then ... and the price paid now.

In 1776 and the years that followed, the cost was high, but generations to come would praise them for taking the bet on freedom.

In 2005 and in the days that follow, the cost again may be high — and may the generations that follow us look back and praise us for taking the bet on freedom, too.

Have a meaningful Fourth!

Rangers meet at Benning

Spc. Eliamar Trapp
Assistant editor

Today is the final day of the Ranger Rendezvous. It ends with the regimental change of command at 9 a.m. on York Field. Col. Craig Nixon relinquishes command to Col. Paul LaCamera.

Ranger Rendezvous is a regimental tradition, said Kim Laudano, 75th Ranger Regiment Public Affairs officer. Traditionally, Rangers from the regiment attend the weeklong event.

This year's event was kicked off with a mass tactical jump Tuesday on Fryar Field drop zone.

A mass tactical jump is a full regimental-size airborne operation that mirrors a combat airborne operation, Laudano said.

This year more than 1,000 Rangers participated in the event, jumping in full combat gear weighing more than 100 pounds.

The Ranger Rendezvous is a week of competition, camaraderie and team building, said Sgt. Michael Garcia, with the 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

Aside from the mass jump, the Rendezvous also included Distinguished and Honorary Members of the 75th Ranger Regiment inductions, sporting events and an advanced screening of the movie The Great Raid.

July 4th parade honors Soldiers

36th Engineer Group Soldier surprises family

Spc. Bryce S. Dubee
Army News Service

ATLANTA — Four Soldiers serving in Iraq returned to surprise their families with a reunion at the opening ceremony of the Atlanta Fourth of July Parade.

Organizers for the parade contacted the Army and found four Soldiers eligible to take leave for rest and recuperation and arranged to reunite them with their families in Georgia.

Arriving on Sunday, the Soldiers had a day to relax, get cleaned up and enjoy a dinner with Miss America. The next morning, they waited, hidden on a hotel shuttle bus for the parade to begin, while their wives sat in the grandstands, clueless to the fact that their husbands were less than 200 yards away.

In the bus, the Soldiers grew nervous, excited with the anticipation of seeing their families.

"Do you think my daughter will remember me?" Staff Sgt. Terrence Alford asked 2nd Lt. Stephen Lucas and the other two returning fathers on the bus, who reassured him that she definitely would.

Spc. Brent Goolsby was not only reuniting with his wife Arianna — who he hadn't seen in half a year — but seeing a member of his family who he had never met, Jonathan Aiden Goolsby, his newborn son.

"I just want to meet my son," said Goolsby. "I'm a father, but I'm not really yet a father."

The four wives and their children were called out to the starting line of the parade as honorary grand marshals where Miss America performed a song for them. During the song, from around the corner, the shuttle bus slowly pulled out into the street in front of where the families stood.

Insurgents target Iraqi progress

Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Insurgents in Iraq attack any sign of progress because "progress is their enemy," DoD officials said.

Officials spoke about terrorist Abu Musab al-Zarqawi's claim to have kidnapped Ihab al-Sherif, the chief of Egypt's mission in Iraq.

"If it is true that al Qaeda has snatched this diplomat, I think it suggests ... that al Qaeda has targeted those countries that are trying to cooperate in the success of Iraq's emerging democracy," Pentagon spokesman Larry Di Rita said during a press conference Tuesday.

A group calling itself the Foundation for Holy War in Mesopotamia took credit for the kidnapping via an Internet posting. U.S. officials could not authenticate the claim. The terrorists claim to be affiliated with Zarqawi's al Qaeda in Iraq group.

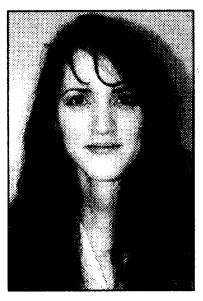
Iraqi army activates 5th Brigade

Staff Sgt. Raymond Piper
Army News Service

BAGHDAD, Iraq — The Iraqi army activated its 5th Brigade, 6th Division during a ceremony at Muthana Airfield June 29.

Iraqi soldiers in the eight-week program received tactical and strategic training to allow them to defend their country against enemy threats.



"This is an important day for the people of Iraq," said Maj. Gen. William G. Webster Jr., Task Force Baghdad commander. "These men before you are all volunteers and have sworn to defend Baghdad."

"All of the TV stations are here so that the people can see the ceremony," said Iraqi army Col. Mohamed Hashim Al-Musawy, the 5th Brigade, 6th Iraqi Army. "As our training goes on, the citizens, houses and the streets of Iraq will be safe. If the U.S. forces keep helping us in our training, we will control the Iraqi streets and we'll protect Mother Nature has my number ...

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

I'm a heat casualty. In fact, I'm a cold weather casualty too. Ever since I can remember, I've fallen victim to Mother Nature's most extreme temperatures.

My saga of fainting can be traced back to the fourth grade, when I fell on my way to the school bus stop. I stumbled as I was trying to fight my way through strong winds, the kind that force you to turn your head if you want to breathe. It was a bitterly cold day in New Jersey. I managed to get on the bus, but I have no memory of the ride, because I passed out.

When we entered the school parking lot, I awoke and tapped the shoulder of the boy sitting in front of me, who turned around to the horror of seeing his classmate covered in her own vomit. I don't know if it was the lack of oxygen, or seeing blood on my knee that made me sick, but it was the beginning of a lifetime of blackouts for me.

Three years later, as I cheered on the cheerleading squad for my hometown football team, my body succumbed to the wrath of the hot sun.

I was wearing a thick sweater in 102-degree heat. During our half-time break, I attempted to walk to the refreshment stand to buy a bottle of water, but I never made it, because I collapsed into a sea of spectators.

My most recent spell took place in 1999. Now an adult, I was working as a wedding videographer. Customarily, I wore a tuxedo to each ceremony.

On this particular day in late June, I had been wearing my tux, bow-tie and all, in a small church without air conditioning and a few small windows. I had problems adjusting my tripod and I decided to use a hand-held camera. Back then, I had to do all the editing in my camera as the ceremony was taking place, so the added pressure was already enough to make me sweat.

While the couple was exchanging vows, and I was standing in the center of the church in front of all the guests, I noticed that familiar kaleidoscope of black, white and gray dots before my eyes.

I realized I only had about 30 seconds to get to a pew before I would hit the floor. But I was doing the editing, so that meant I had to wait until the bride stopped talking, before I could stop recording. Twenty minutes and a concussion later, I woke up on a stretcher as paramedics were carrying me to an ambulance outside the church.

Later I had to visit the bride's mother to get my equipment and pick up the video, which the company I was working for offered to give the newlyweds for free.

The bride's aunt had taken my camera and videotaped the reception. Before turning the tape in to my boss, I watched the interviews of the guests and laughed as one said, "Did you see that videographer? She went out like a light!"

That incident didn't bring an end to my video career, but it was the red flag that made me get serious about my health and decide to take more precautions in severe weather.

When I joined the Army a year later and headed to Fort Jackson, S.C., for basic training, I informed all the drill sergeants as well as my battle buddies that I was prone to heat injuries.

I found that making people aware of my history helps me fight Mother Nature as she attempts to knock me down.

... but, she knows where I live

It's time for another confession — not that I can think of anything I've confessed here before.

I just want to say how much I love the out-of-doors, especially in the spring and summer, when everything is in full bloom and the colors are the most vibrant.

When the weather is nice, I can go running (because if I can't run outside, I won't run at all) or even enjoy the bugs hitting my face while I'm biking on the Riverwalk. The out-of-doors is definitely the place to be.

Now that the hot and muggy July weather has arrived in full force, I sometimes even find myself heading outside just to get away from the air-conditioning. Hey — I've never claimed to be normal.

This summer, horseback riding tops my list of favorite outdoor activities. If you haven't taken a nice, leisurely trail ride through the woods atop a horse, you're really missing out.

Picture the fading sunlight filtering through the canopy of trees, listen for the sounds of the creek running downhill to join the Upatoi, and watch closely — you just might see the mother doe and her twin fawns bounding across the path.

Well, this would have been me, too, except the riding trails that wind through the woods along Marne Road between the barn and the hospital were so overgrown a ride through them was almost impossible. The last time I went, I almost "clotheslined" myself on a thick vine hanging from the trees.

The trails needed some serious maintenance, so our intrepid group of "horse people" got together in the out-of-doors one pleasant Saturday morning to make the trails safe to ride once again.

That's the day, two weeks ago, I was reminded that no matter how much I love Mother Nature, she really doesn't love me.

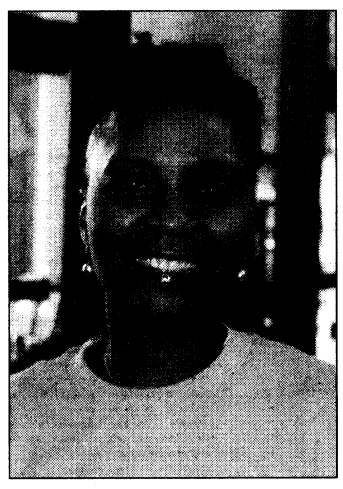
Less than 24 hours after tackling the trails, my husband diagnosed the cause of the itchy, red bumps on my legs. Chiggers. I've never had a chigger in my life.

So I promptly immersed myself in a bleach-water bath and he pronounced me cured.

Then I noticed the telltale signs of one of the poison triplets. I had, somehow, gotten myself into a patch of either poison oak, ivy or sumac. At that point, it didn't really matter which one, because I'm just plain allergic to them all.

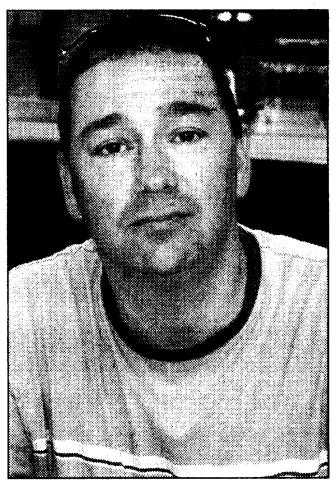
I haven't had a bad case of poison anything since I walked past the bush on my way to school in the fifth grade. My whole head swelled up like a balloon and my mother swears it took a month before I looked even somewhat normal again.

This year's batch took over my right arm, from my wrist to elbow, my right knee and the right side of my stomach, where I undoubtedly rested my arm, and underneath my left eye. I can't really explain that one.



And once it started to "weep" I avoided going out in public. I'm still sporting the tell-tale pink calamine lotion spots, because we had the pink stuff and I couldn't see buying another bottle just to get it in the clear version. The pink also camouflaged it somewhat, but a calamine pink nose is still a calamine pink nose, no matter how you look at it.

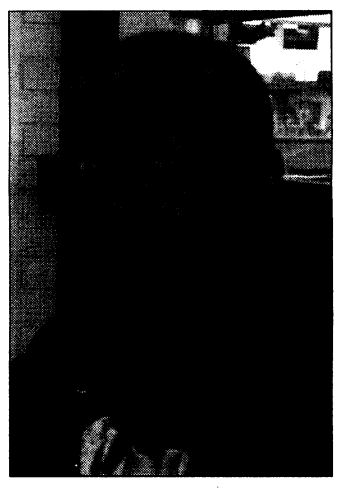
So when I went down to the barn and got stung by a wasp a few days ago, I decided that just may be the last straw.



I'll try not to mess with Mother Nature, at least for a few days.

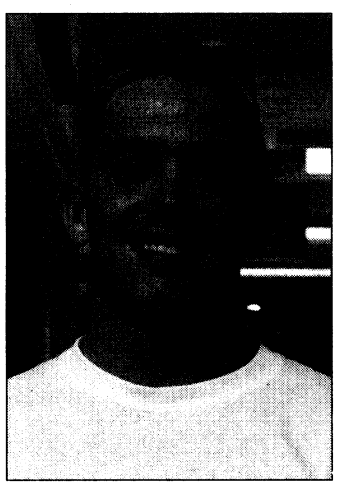
VARIOUS VOICES

What wedding mishaps have you seen?

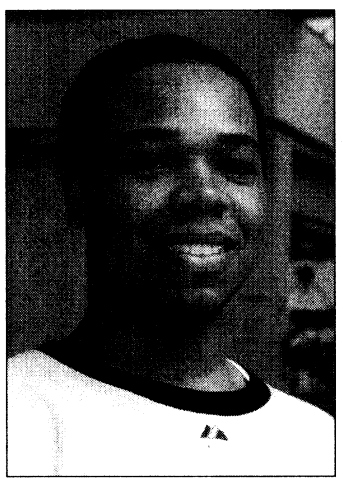


Deborah Nelson, family member — "I am a wedding planner. I was at one wedding I planned in which a candle fell over during the service and started a fire. The pastor had just asked, 'Does anyone object?' when the cloth covering the altar behind them burst into flames. We put the fire out, aired the smoke out of the church and finished the ceremony."

Sgt. 1st Class David Dillinger, 25th Infantry Division — "At one wedding I was at, the groom broke and ran from the altar. He had last-minute jitters. The best man had to tackle him at the door and drag him back into the church. Did I mention I was the groom?"



Christina O'Neil, family member — "I was the maid of honor for my cousin's wedding and all the bridesmaids had choreographed a dance. At the reception, the DJ didn't have the CD. We had to run to Wal-Mart in our fluffy dresses and buy it. By the time we got back, almost everyone had left, but we still did the dance."



Retired 1st Sgt. Clinton Graves, Fort Mitchell, Ala. — "I am a videographer for weddings, and one I taped, the bride showed up an hour late. It was hot and we'd been standing so long, that the girl holding my lights passed out. I ran over to check on the lights. Those are expensive!"

Siera Diaz, family member — "I was at a wedding over the weekend and there were a couple little kids who started crying and they were so loud you could barely hear the ceremony. But it was still a pretty wedding."

Pvt. Tim Kitsman, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "I was going to a wedding and my date was supposed to pick me up. I waited and waited, but she never showed up. I was late to the wedding, and had to go by myself."

Derek Johnson, family member — "I went to one wedding, and when the bride came in everyone stood up. The processional got to the front of the church but no one wanted to be the first person to sit. We just stood through the whole ceremony. It was really hot, so the pastor ended up skipping parts of the service so it would be shorter."

DMWR Outreach program is opportunity to give back

Sgt. Maj. Jennifer Pearson
DMWR

Baker Village Outreach Program started in November 2004 with guidance from post commander, Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley.

He told us a story about a young girl who was asked what she wanted to do when she grew up. Her response was to be like her mother — which meant living in Baker Village.

I'm not saying that's not a good dream, don't get me wrong. I just want her and all the other children to be educated on other things, too. There is an entire world out there that all of us can share.

Baker Village is located off Victory Drive, just outside the Fort Benning gates in South Columbus. During the early 1940s, Baker Village was family housing for Fort Benning Soldiers. Today, Baker Village is a housing project in the city of Columbus.

The housing project literally has generations of families within its boundaries, usually in the same complex next to each other.

Baker Village and Fort Benning have a long history. The infrastructure is old and the location is not good, which makes it a difficult place for a child to grow up.

But the Fort Benning program, Better Opportunity for Single Soldiers, and civilians and Soldiers from the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation try to make a positive influence on this community. They make a difference through going out to have fun and educating these children.

We go there to spend time with the kids. We play kickball and read stories to the children. We try to be good role models, and show them there are other opportunities out there in the world. We are not forcing them to join the military.

I started this program because the general asked me to be the project officer. But after getting it started, I still enjoy heading over to Baker Village to see the kids and spend time with them. I'm hooked, and will continue this program.

The Baker Village Outreach Program has really grown. Initially, the visits took place only one week a month. Now we have an event every week, from playing sports and doing activities with the children to going to the senior center and spending time or playing games with the seniors.

Depending on the event, all you have to do is show up and have fun. It's rewarding for the kids and the volunteers. We are always flexible and there for the children. Through dedicated people, we are trying to make a difference one child at a time!

Iraqis: Stand up army with help of American military the citizens from the explosions the terrorists make against the Iraqis."

The newest Iraqi army brigade will be responsible for defending the Green Zone and surrounding areas in Baghdad.

"I think they will play a vital role in the freedom of Iraq and Baghdad.

"With these Soldiers, they will show the American and Iraqi people that they are up to the task and can handle the job," said Command Sgt. Maj. Robert Taylor, 6th Squadron, 8th Cavalry Regiment.

The brigade, made up of more than 2,500 Iraqi soldiers, began training April 18 at Muthana Airfield. Soldiers from 6th Squadron, 8th Cavalry Regiment and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Battalion, 64th Armor Regiment worked with the fledgling Iraqi soldiers.

"They have trained hard and worked hard to get where they are at today. The activation ceremony was a turning point for the brigade from training to actually doing patrols and securing the Green Zone," Taylor said.

Soldiers were trained on a variety of tasks that they will use on the streets of Baghdad, such as reflexive fire, basic marksmanship and clearing rooms.

"I feel proud that the Iraqi soldiers can defend the country of Iraq," Mohamed said.

"I hope God will make them brave and keep them safe. We have soldiers who are very young, and we thought that they might fail, but because of the Americans that gave us good training they made it."

Mohamed added that the Iraqi soldiers now feel proud to be a part of the Iraqi army.

"In the past they were scared to be one of the Iraqi army soldiers so no one from the terrorists would kill them, but now, there are many volunteers," Mohamed said.

"I learned from our training that they have high feelings (morale) about their training and they've proved it during the operations that they've had in Dora and Haifa Street, Abu Dasheer and Karada."

"They may not be as good as American Soldiers today, but one day they will be just as good," Taylor said.

"They put their lives on the line every day, either at checkpoints or on patrols, and they are right beside us doing the same things we're doing."

Mohamed said that the Iraqi troops have been successful in these areas because of the U.S. Soldiers training and they will continue to get better.

"I hope the same unit will train the next brigade," he said, "so the new soldiers will receive the highest level of training."

Parade: Reunites families in Atlanta

As the song ended, the doors opened and out leapt the four Soldiers with bouquets and smiles, to the total shock of their wives.

The emotional reunion in the middle of Peachtree Street in downtown Atlanta created many teary eyes among the spectators.

After the ceremony, the families, now whole, took their seats back in the grandstands to watch the rest of the parade before heading home to enjoy the rest of their leave.

"I'm still in a state of shock, I mean I really can't believe he's here," said Jo Anne Griffin, wife of Sgt. Robert Griffin.

"This is a great experience, I feel so lucky to be here," Lucas said.

Sgt. Alex Licea

Soldiers wave to the spectators during Atlanta's annual July 4th parade.

"My only wish is that we could have brought more people back with us."

Sitting with his son in the stands, Goolsby looked up with a smile from ear to ear, "This feels good, this feels really, really good."

Progress: becomes target

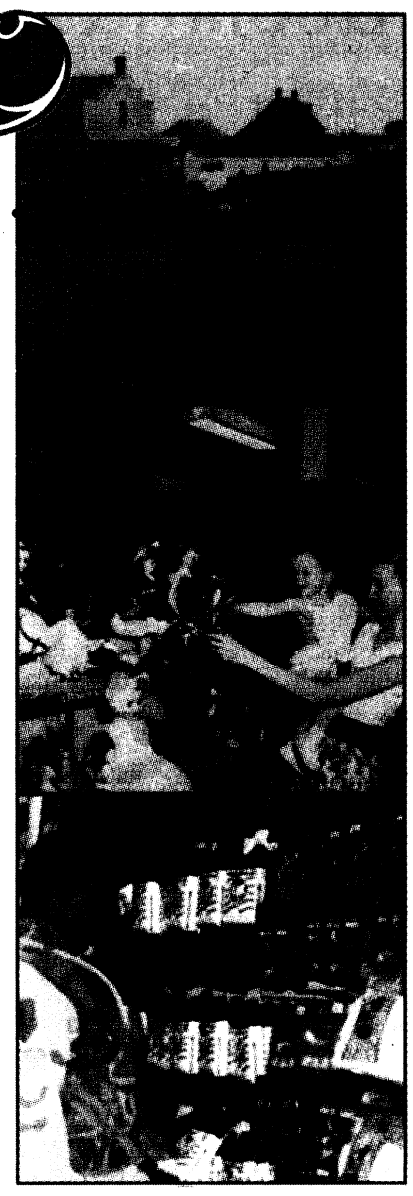
progress the Iraqi government makes.

"It's an insurgency that does not have Iraq's democratic future in mind," Di Rita said. "It has something much bleaker and much darker (in mind)."

In addition to the kidnapping, insurgents reportedly attacked diplomats from Bahrain and Pakistan in Baghdad Tuesday.



The insurgents see the presence of Middle Eastern diplomats as progress for the Iraqi government, said an official in Baghdad.

That official said it is an unfortunately familiar process. If the Iraqis make progress on electricity, the insurgents dynamite power pylons or electrical sub-stations. If the Iraqis make progress on forming local governments, the insurgents target those supporting the effort.

If Iraqis choose to enlist in the military or join the Iraqi police services in hopes of establishing a safe and stable environment, the insurgents target them.

AAEF continues testing new technologies

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Tawny Archibald Campbell

Soldiers with the EXFOR Company move across a landing zone before getting the mission brief.

The Air Assault Expeditionary Force launched the second spiral in their live force-on-force experimentation program designed to bring tomorrow's technology to today's battlefield.

Two platoons from the Experimental Force Company, spent three weeks at the McKenna MOUT site to test the platoon's lethality against a well-equipped enemy force.

During this exercise, dubbed the base case, a platoon of 39 Soldiers used their five senses and present-day equipment to fight an opposing force of 18 men during 10 day and night missions.

"We took a currently equipped infantry rifle platoon, with all their organic assets, and ran them through an overmatch mission against an OPFOR," said Capt. Clint Cox, commander of the EXFOR Company.

By doctrine, Cox said, when Soldiers fight, they always try to overmatch the enemy three to one. During this exercise, the opposing force was made bigger, to make the overmatch only two to one.

"Usually a platoon will try to destroy a squad, a company will go after a platoon," said Cox. "We want to be better able to overmatch the enemy with a smaller ratio."

Cox said data collectors followed his platoon leaders and their Soldiers as they moved across the simulated battlefield to get a better understanding of how they fight now.

They asked questions like, 'What do you know about the enemy?' 'Do you know where they are right now?' and 'What intelligence have you gotten along the way?'

They recorded the answers and will give feedback to the Army and manufacturers of military equipment, Cox said.

In August, the AAEF will travel to Fort Dix, N.J. to spend four to six weeks training on about 40 prototypes devised from the feedback compiled during the base case and Spiral A, which took place in 2004.

In November, the Soldiers will return to the MOUT site for the advanced case, to re-execute the same mission fought in the base case, next using sensors, robots, cameras, and other "leading edge" technologies.

"We're experimenting with emerging technologies to help design future combat systems for the military," said Gary Daniel, project lead from Fort Benning's Soldier Battle Lab.

"As the platoon is air assaulting over some distance from the objective, we want to be able, by virtue of technology, to give Soldiers better situational awareness of what the objective looks like so they can change or adjust their mission while en route," Daniel said.

"They may not have to destroy the enemy in an assault; they may be able to do that from a stand off distance," he said. "But they could only do that if technology provides them a clear picture of what the objective looks like and what the enemy force is doing."

Without technology, the platoon relies on information it gets from the battalion and above, said platoon leader 1st Lt. Aaron Schwengler. "We get a broad overview of where the enemy is and we have to develop a plan based on that."

"The information flow is slow," Sgt. Kyle Sisco said. "We don't even know where the enemy is until we're at the objective."

New technologies, like ground sensors, would be helpful, Schwengler said. Unmanned sensors can be dropped from the air, or mounted on vehicles.

"They can be our eyes forward," Schwengler said.

"The lack of intelligence given in the base case is realistic," Cox said. "Sometimes we take casualties because of lack of information."

Cox described a scenario played out during the base case to demonstrate his point.

"These guys were conducting a raid. They had been tasked to destroy a cache, kill as many bad guys as they could, and get out," Cox said. "They executed excellent movement, they never got compromised, and got within 20 meters of the enemy before they even knew they were there, using the sheer skills of patrolling, current day.

"Everything up to that point was done right. We got to the objective and started killing bad guys. The Soldiers stumbled upon the cache and the enemy detonated an IED right in the middle of it. We lost six guys immediately. Then they called for artillery on top of them, killing four or five more."

He said the platoon could no longer continue the mission because they had lost so much combat power. For every one casualty, it took two Soldiers to carry them out.

"The variables and the complexities they're putting in are real," Cox said. "The way the OPFOR is fighting is precisely the way the insurgents would fight," Cox said, referring to the Taliban's use of hit and run tactics in Afghanistan and ambushes and suicide bombings in Iraq.

Cox said the challenge for about 50 percent of the platoon who had participated in last year's spiral, was to go back to fighting "cave-man style," already knowing what technologies are available.

Spc. Andrew Hasbrouck, who controlled about 60 percent of robotics in Spiral A, said the new technologies definitely help because they are better at pinpointing the enemy's location and depicting friendly civilians from foe.

Hasbrouck said during one scenario in last year's spiral, the Soldiers used an unmanned aerial vehicle to determine that a group of civilians standing on a rooftop was friendly.

"In Iraq, the enemy is moving with friendly civilians," Schwengler said. "They may drop off, or they may occupy somewhere nearby and even use them as shields. You throw these new technologies in the mix and right away we'll be able to divert our forces, and not even have to deal with the civilian population because we can pinpoint where the enemy is and attack them."

"This information will be crucial to the way we fight in the future," Cox said. "We want to gain enough situational awareness so that we know where the enemy is, pick the right time to fight him, and attack him when he's at his weakest."

The feedback from these spirals will affect Army doctrine, organization, training, materiel, and leader development, Daniel said.

"This is the only venue that exists in the Army that gets technology off of the PowerPoint slides and into the hands of Soldiers," he said.

Spirals C and D of the AAEF experiments will take place in 2005 and 2006 respectively.

Expert offers tips on acclimatization

Hydrating improves performance

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

It's hot outside. Despite the heat, Infantry training continues.

Soldiers heading into Ranger and Airborne schools now have a practical guide to help them acclimatize their bodies to the heat.

Lt. Col. Karen O'Brien, chief of Family and Community Medicine at Martin Army Community Hospital and the U.S. Army Center for Health and Promotion and Preventive Medicine have put out a heat acclimatization guide for these Soldiers to help maximize physical performance while minimizing heat casualty risk.

Most people need at least two hours of increasing physical exertion requiring cardio-vascular endurance in a hot environment every day for two weeks to become fully acclimated, O'Brien said.

Strength training is best in the morning when temperatures are coolest, she said. Later during the day, engaging in a run and walk cycle that gradually increases to a 100-minute workout will help speed acclimatization to the heat.

Heat acclimatization increases the sweating rate, therefore increasing the amount of water needed to keep the body hydrated. Because of this, O'Brien said consumption of a gallon of water per hour is normal.

If exertion exceeds four continuous hours, O'Brien said a drink containing electrolytes should be considered as an alternative to replace body salts.

She does not recommend taking salt tablets because of the risk of consuming too much salt too quickly.

According to USACHPPM, dehydration will cancel out most of the benefits gained from physical fitness and heat acclimatization, so it is important to stay hydrated.

An easy way to learn how much water needs to be replaced from sweat loss is by recording body weight before and after the heat acclimatization exercises. The USACHPPM recommends for each pound lost, drink about half a quart of fluid.

Urine color is another indicator of hydration, O'Brien said. Clear or light yellow urine is a sign of good hydration, but dark yellow urine indicates fluid intake should be increased.

O'Brien said to be patient while acclimatizing. It is harder to work in the heat than it is for the body to get used to the heat.

For more information call the USACHPPM at (800) 222-9698, and ask for the Ranger, Airborne, and Other Elite School Students Heat Acclimatization Guide.

ADVERTISE IN THE BAYONET

Harman leaves legacy of progress

Will become director of Futures Group

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

During the 29th Infantry Regiment's change of command ceremony Wednesday, Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, commanding general of Fort Benning, listed almost two dozen accomplishments achieved by the regiment's outgoing commander.

Freakley credited Col. Frank L. Harman III, outgoing commander, with training and equipping Soldiers with a wide variety of techniques and technologies throughout the ongoing Global War on Terrorism.

During the last two years of the Global War on Terrorism and service at Fort Benning, Freakley said the 29th has led the way in innovation.

Noting that the 29th touches every aspect of what the Army is all about — building men and women to go forward and fight, Freakley illustrated an obstacle Harman overcame.

"We took away most of their noncommissioned officers a year ago, to fill up the new brigades out in the Army," he said.

The regiment, under Harman's leadership and Command Sgt. Maj. Milton Fields' leadership, started an unparalleled NCO training program that is a model for the Army, Freakley said.

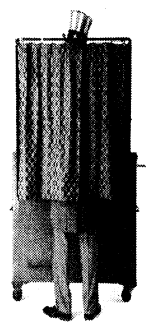
Calling Harman a great leader, tactician, trainer and forward thinker, Freakley said, "We've selected (Harman) to stay at Fort Benning to be the director of Infantry Futures.

Under Harman's leadership, Freakley expects the Army to move forward quickly, allowing Soldiers to receive the best equipment, training and doctrine as it is needed.

"Every day for the last two years, I thought about our Soldiers on the front line in the Middle East fighting the Global War on Terrorism and the sacrifices they were making," Harman said.

"What helped me was what we were doing ... accomplishing our mission and supporting the Global War on Terrorism."

Harman credited the regiment's success to the teamwork of the Soldiers, Department of the Army civilians and contractors.



"They are the absolute experts on the weapons of our Infantry," Harman said, "who all came together as a team of teams, to provide training and training support excellence to our Soldiers and for our Army."

Harman relinquished command to Col. Richard C. Townes, who joins the regiment after serving as an assistant chief of staff in Headquarters, Department of the Army in Washington, D.C.

NSPS survey needs employee input

Results will shape job performance evaluations

Donna Miles
American Forces Press Service

Civil service employees who will soon come under the new National Security Personnel System have another opportunity to help shape the program.

The new National Security Personnel System Factor Survey gives General Schedule employees the chance to register their views about several performance factors identified for inclusion in the new personnel system.

"Now we need your assistance to ensure that these performance factors are relevant and reflect work that you personally perform on your job," acting deputy secretary of Defense Gordon England wrote in a June 29 memo to DoD civilian employees.

England emphasized the importance of the survey in his memo.

While stressing that participation is voluntarily, he urged civil service employees to participate.

"I thank you for your feedback and participation in the NSPS design process thus far," he wrote. "We still need your help."

The survey period began Wednesday and continues through July 20.

Charles Abell, principal deputy undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness, urged employees to take the 15 to 20 minutes needed to complete the online survey to ensure their views are known.

Views expressed in the survey will have long-term implications, Abell said during an interview today with the Pentagon Channel.

The results will help program implementers determine what factors will be used to evaluate employees' job performance for the next 15 or 20 years, he said.

"It's an opportunity for (employees) to have a voice in the system that they are going to be living under and to make sure that we get it right," said Mary Lacey, program executive officer for the National Security Personnel System.

"And we want to get it right,""Lacey said. "We want to hear what employees have to say, and we want them to be a part of our design process."

Lacey said system designers are particularly interested in hearing from civil service employees who have been part of DoD personnel demonstration programs.

"They bring to the table real experience in a system that has National Security Personnel System-like features," she said. "So we think their input will be incredibly valuable."

Meanwhile, progress continues in putting the new personnel system in place.

The current goal is to publish the final regulations in the Federal Register by summer's end and bring the first employees into the system by the end of the fiscal year, Lacey said.

However, she stressed, the implementation schedule will be "event-driven," and "we are not going to take certain steps until we are ready."

Once in place, the new personnel system is expected to benefit the Defense Department and its civilian employees alike by doing away with outdated, bureaucratic policies.

"DoD is a dynamic institution," Abell said. "Our mission has changed, our focus has changed, and this will allow the civilian employee workplace to change with that changing mission and changing focus of our leadership."

One of the system's key features is a pay-for-performance plan that rewards and recognizes individual performance and contributions.

The new system will enable employees to get more involved in their career development, with broad pay bands and groupings to give them more flexibility to shape their careers, Lacey said.

The result, Abell said, will be a workplace that's "more productive (and more) efficient, with our jobs aligned with our mission."

Once the system is implemented, DoD "ought to be a happier place to live and work," he said.

The survey can be found at pfsurvey.net/nsps.

Army marks Gettysburg anniversary with Web site

Cheryl Boujnida
Army News Services

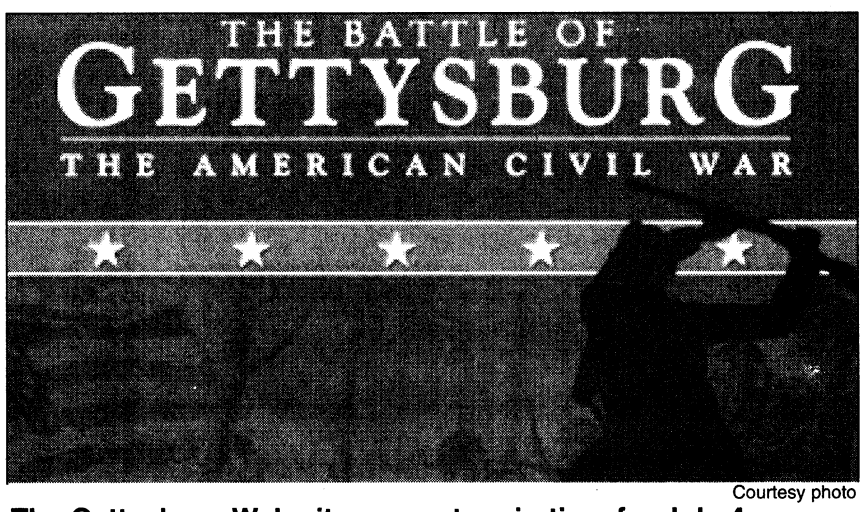
WASHINGTON — In an effort to link its past to the present, the Army launched a new historical Web site, the Battle of Gettysburg, in time for Independence Day.

The Battle of Gettysburg, which took place 142 years ago July 1-3, was one of America's bloodiest battles. It defined the United States as a nation said Chuck Jenks, program manager and senior communications strategist.

"We use historical content to articulate Army values and traditions to the global audience," he said. "Soldiers of yesterday are exactly like Soldiers today — they share Army values, a warrior ethos and call to duty. Soldiers understand what it means to be called Soldier and it's no different today than it was in 1863."

One of the goals of the new site is to communicate how Americans during the Civil War era also heeded the call to duty. It's another vehicle that tells the Army's story and reflects the timeless values of Soldiers, Jenks said.

The Battle of Gettysburg Web site, located on the Army's home-page, www.army.mil/gettysburg, offers a savvy perspective of the Civil War featuring pop-up icons, narration, an animated battlescape, historical video on weaponry and statistics, an epilogue and profiles of people who served during the war, said Chris Clarke, multimedia specialist and Web developer. He said that a lot has been written about Gettysburg, but Web designers opted for a different approach. It remained true to the historical aspects of the Civil War.



"The site allows you to get under the radar screen and into the heat of the battle and the profiles highlight everyday people who made significant contributions. Naturally, when you think of Gettysburg, famous Soldiers come to mind, but we focus on the everyday person who answered the call to serve, the call to duty," Clarke said.

To make the site unique, the animated battlescape allows users to launch the battle, which broke out July 1 at 6 a.m., he said.

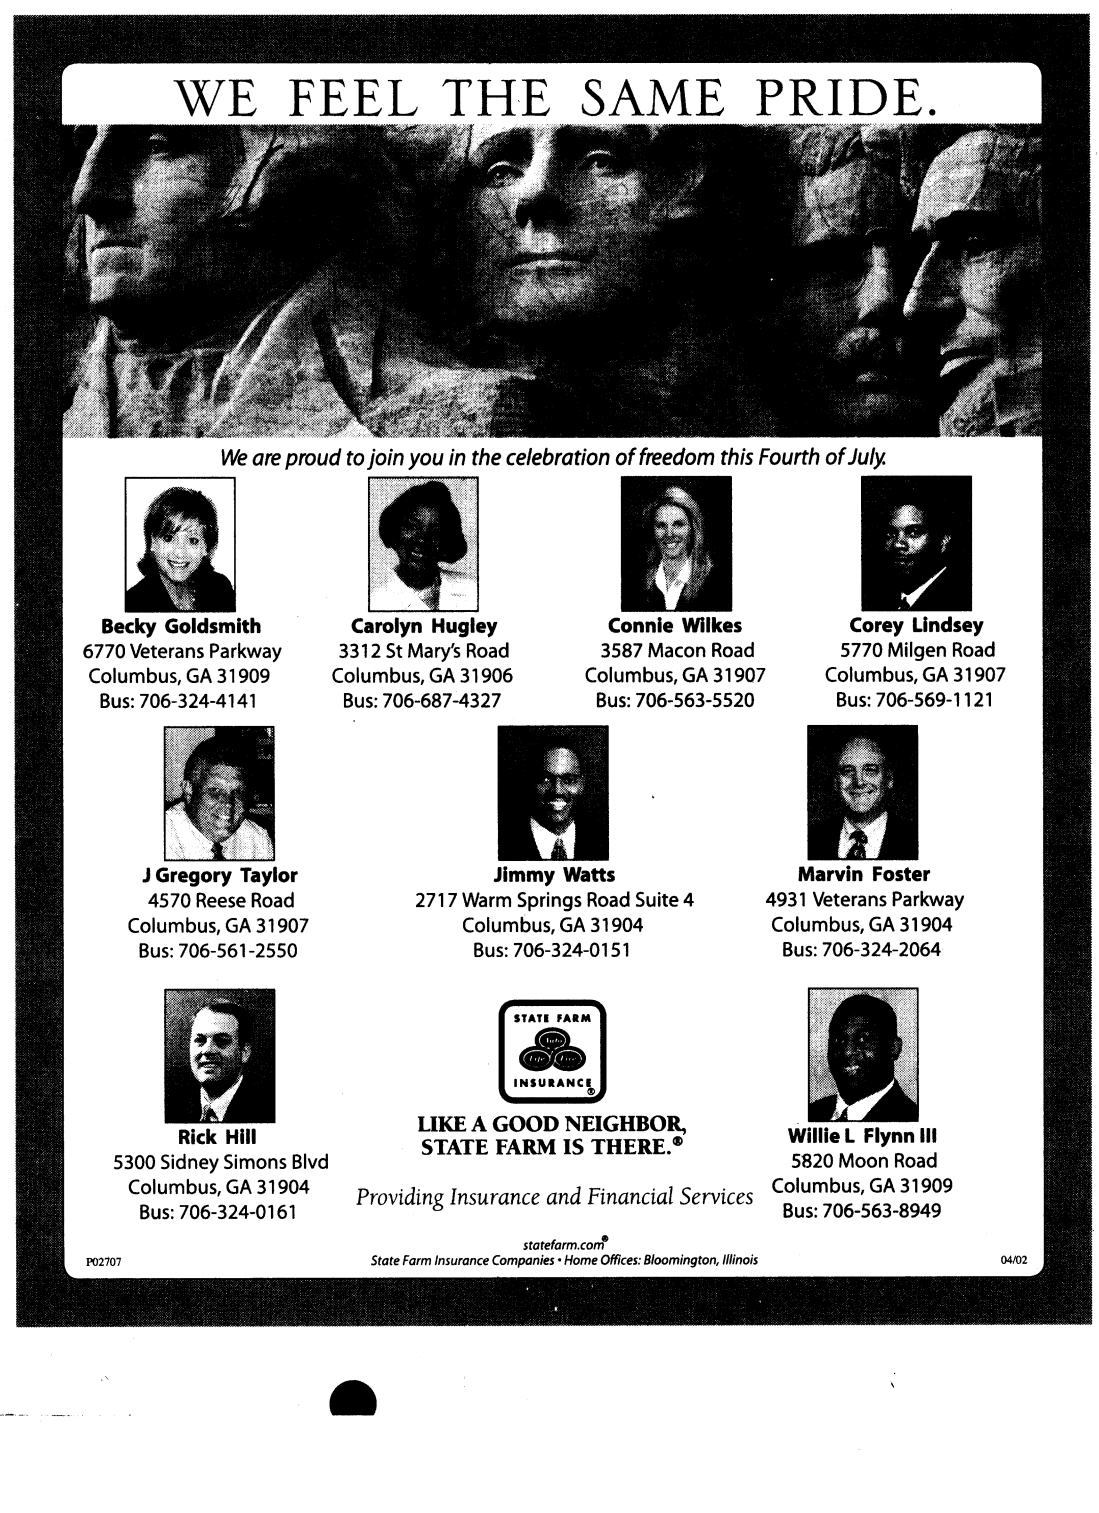
"This connects people with historical events and allows them to visualize exactly what took place while showing the struggle and sacrifices of those who were there."

Powerful historical footage also shows former president Franklin D. Roosevelt at the 75th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, Clarke said.

"It's very moving to see Roosevelt shaking hands with Civil War veterans. One of the veterans was only 13 years old at the time the battle took place. That all Americans share a call to duty is threaded into the theme of the Gettysburg Web site," he said.

Courtesy photo
The Gettysburg Web site was set up in time for July 4.

To gain more insight, Clarke and his fellow colleagues visited Gettysburg.



"By walking the battlegrounds, we were able to get a feel for the project and the sacrifices made there.

"We applied a team concept to design a site that's clearly an exceptional and quality product."

"The Army has a long and proud history and everyday Soldiers contribute to it. We capture the spirit of the Soldier and the Army's history in its making on a global scale," Jenks said.

Honor Hill changes attitudes, instills pride

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

It's been four months since the Soldiers of B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, arrived at Sand Hill, and today they graduate changed men.

Many have lost weight, others have gained confidence and the Soldiers have a sense of pride that comes from 15 weeks of intense training designed to make them part of the world's finest fighting force.

"The military changes everything," said Pvt. Cody Beggs, from Dallas. "It changes how you think. You are more disciplined, more respectful and have more self-esteem. Your goals are so much higher now than when you came in."

Pvt. Justin Smith, from Wichita, Kan., said for some Soldiers in the company, this is the only accomplishment they have ever really had, and it changes every aspect of their lives.

"It's amazing how much things can change in three months," Smith said. "I've seen guys go from not feeling any self-esteem to accomplishing things they never thought they could."

One of those things was making it through the 14-mile ruckmarch, in the rain, to Honor Hill. Here they received their crossed rifles and were welcomed into the brotherhood of the Infantry. For many, it's a monumental rite of passage that marks the end of training and the beginning of their career as a Infantry Soldier.

"At Honor Hill it hit me in the chest, and I realized there I was a Soldier," Beggs said. "I knew it before, but it hit me at Honor Hill, walking through the torches and seeing the flag and the fires."

Pfc. Richard Mendez, from Orlando, Fla., said no matter how bad his feet and back hurt, or how wet he was, at Honor Hill everything came together.

"It was like 'Bam' — this is what I'm here for," Mendez said. "When you walk up, you realize that, wow, it's all over. I had memories of standing along the road, clapping as other companies came through, and then it was me. I had made it."

Mendez said the pride came from knowing he had never quit, and had accomplished everything he was told to do.

"I never thought I could ruck 14 miles with eighty pounds on my back, but now I have," he said. "I joined the Army because I couldn't sit back and watch other people do this job. I needed to do something myself, and now I am."

Beggs said when he showed up at Sand Hill, he was an 18-year old kid who thought only of himself.

"I now have so much dignity and pride and I know now that I can take care of myself and my family," Beggs said. "I can stand on my own two feet as a nineteen-year-old man without relying on my parents."

The experience at ITB has changed every Soldier in a different way, Smith said, and no one walks away the same.

"This is something you can't experience anywhere else," Smith said. "It's a once in a lifetime opportunity that a lot of people can't do. It takes a special type of person to be Infantry. You have to want it."

Recalling the journey to Honor Hill

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

I remember the first time I saw them. They were all sitting in a room double checking the packets they had brought.

They were all dressed alike. Everything, except for their shoes. They wore in tennis shoes, flip-flops, sandals, cowboy boots and even dress shoes.

I remember someone telling me to take a close look, because in a matter of hours they would lose what little individuality they had left.

They were right.

These civilians first began to look like Soldiers when the clippers touched their scalps and all the hair came off. Individuality was gone. There was a difference in their demeanor. They immediately seemed more subdued, humbled.

The next time I saw this group of recruits was in the B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, area. It was pouring rain and they were soaked as they stepped off the buses and saw their new "home" for the first time.

Lugging their bags around, they tried to make sense of the chaos around them. Drill sergeants were screaming directions and these poor guys were doing all they could to comply, but nothing they did was right.

At one point, I was standing in 4th Platoon's bay when the recruits attempted their first Army regulation pushup.

After performing about 10 in cadence, I noticed most of the recruits were sweating and one was doing his best to hold back tears.

It's now been 15 weeks since I was first introduced to the Soldiers of B Company. I saw them go through reception, fill week, the leadership reaction course, combatives, Eagle Tower, the gas chambers, machine gun range, bayonet assault course, family day, mortar training, MOUT and their field training exercise.

I call them "my" Soldiers. I have watched them grow and even though I don't know all their names, I feel a sense of pride when I see them.

It's been my pleasure to watch them move from the awkward recruits at reception to the Infantrymen who will graduate today.

I had an "aha" moment during MOUT training a few weeks ago. Something clicked and suddenly I saw them differently.

One particular fire team was learning how to move between two buildings. A drill sergeant had just walked them through every step of the procedure and then told them to do it on their own.

As this fire team positioned themselves alongside a wooden wall, it hit me like a ton of bricks. These weren't recruits anymore.

They were Soldiers.

They looked like Soldiers, they acted like Soldiers and, at that moment, it was all them. Everything they had learned up to that point was put into action and they were on their own.

Capt. William Kimball Lewis, the company commander, gave me full access to his troops and the drill sergeants took the time to help me understand what the Soldiers were going through.

A high point came when Kimball called at 2:30 a.m. June 27 to let me know it was time to meet them at Honor Hill.

I felt a sense of excitement and honor just to be invited to see their rite of passage.

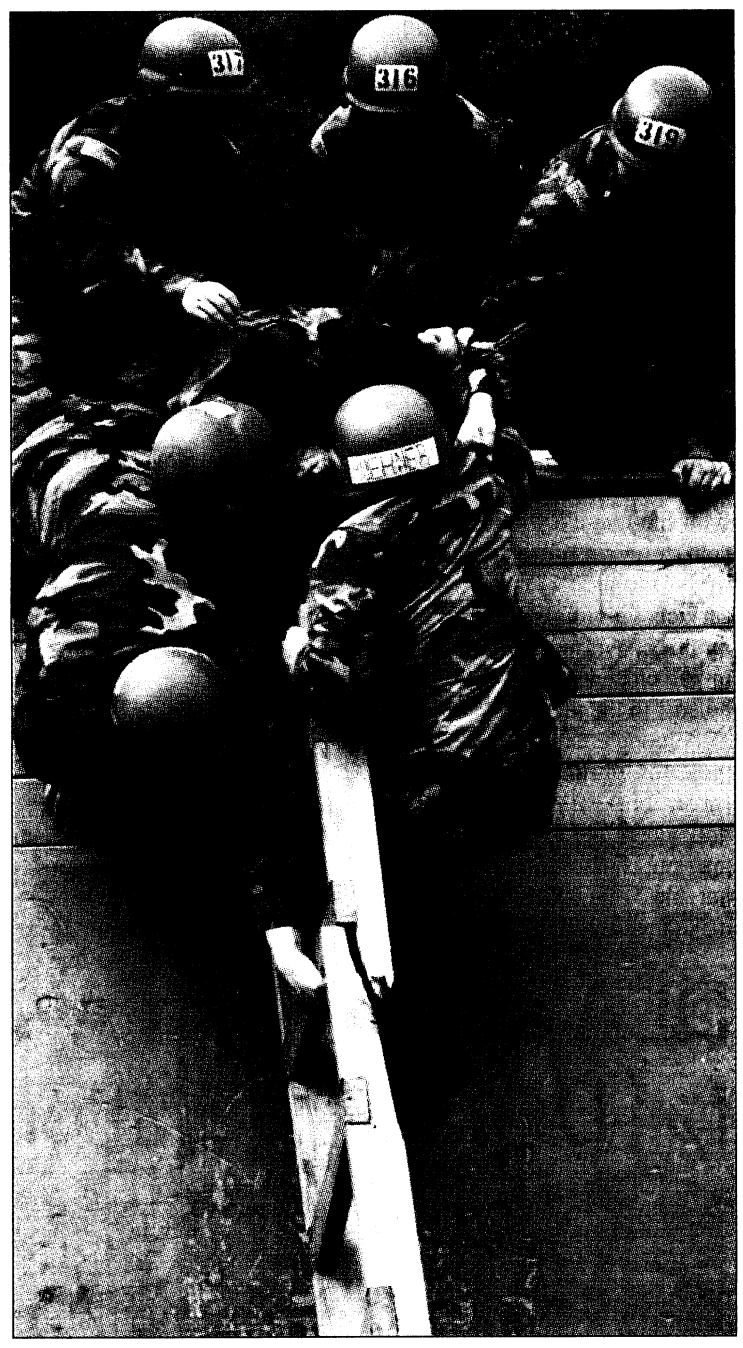
As I first heard the cheering of the Soldiers who had lined the road to cheer on "my boys," it hit me. These guys were done.

Their training was over, and for those who had made it through the grueling 14-mile road march, this was it. Everything they had worked so hard for had paid off. I could see it in their faces, they had made it.

The drill sergeants pinned the crossed rifles on their uniforms and I have never seen the men stand so tall and so straight. For about 30 minutes, the world stopped as 200 Soldiers stepped across the threshold into the brotherhood of the Infantry.

Today they graduate. Looking back on the photos from the first few weeks of training, I have a hard time identifying those recruits with the Infantrymen who will graduate today. As recruits they look so young, so … fragile.

Now I see men with self-confidence, assurance and a sense of accomplishment.

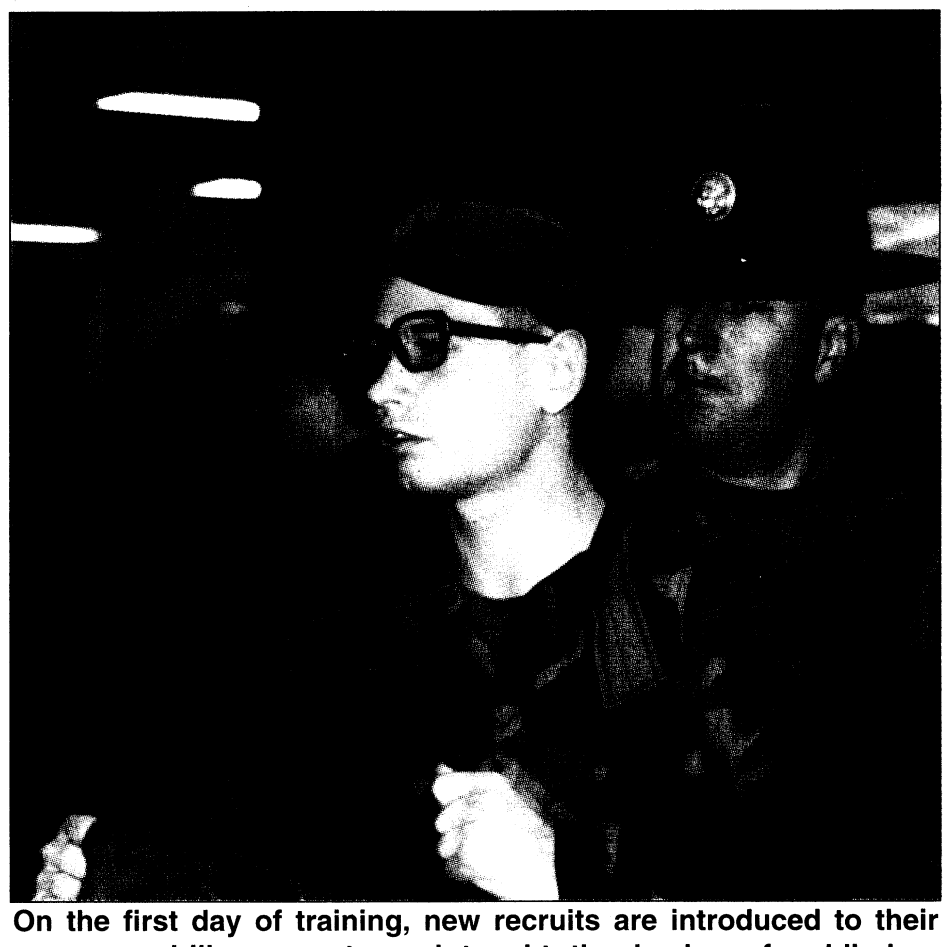


They still look young and they definitely look green, but I have seen how they have changed, and that has changed me.

Who knows what I will do when I wake up Monday and realize there is no reason for me to go up to Sand Hill this week. This has been one of the best experiences of my life and one of my favorite assignments.

I guess I will have to find new Soldiers to follow — maybe a company from the Basic Combat Training Brigade or a class of Airborne students or Ranger students.

I didn't join the Army, but through this experience, I feel I have vicariously made it through the initial training, and I have loved every minute of it.



Thank you, Bravo, for letting me tag along for the past 15 weeks and for showing me something most civilians never get to see, the pride of training and becoming a member of the Infantry.

Soldiers from 3rd Platoon work together as a team at the Leadership Obstacle Course during week one of training at the Infantry Training Brigade.

A Soldier from 2nd Platoon rests in the bay after completing a 14-mile road march that concluded at Honor Hill. Reaching Honor Hill marked the end of training for the Soldiers.

On the first day of training, new recruits are introduced to their company drill sergeants and taught the basics of soldiering, including how to do pushups, eat in the dining facility and march.

Army programs combating rising divorce rate

Monica Barrera
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — An increase of divorces among active-duty Soldiers has Army chaplains undertaking a number of programs to combat the rising trend and help Soldiers cope.

Divorces among officers tripled from fiscal 2002 to 2004, according to statistics compiled by the Defense Manpower Data Center. After Operation Iraqi Freedom began, there was an increase of 3,024 divorces Armywide.

"These statistics are a sign of a loss of a dream. People don't get married to divorce," said Army Chaplain (Col.) Glen Bloomstrom, director of the Ministry Initiatives Directorate for the Office of the Chief of Chaplains.

Several programs now help Soldiers cope with life and parenting after divorce. Divorce Care Support groups and Divorce Parenting classes are mandatory for Soldiers at Fort Hood, Texas.

"We recognize (Soldiers) come because they are required," said Lt. Col. David Scheider, director of Family Life Chaplain Training Center at Fort Hood. "But it is difficult to get time off on a duty day, so the requirement makes leaders willing to let them go."

Also available is Army One Source which is a toll-free nationwide number as well as a Web site that allows Soldiers to contact a consultant regarding life's issues. Through this service, Soldiers and their families have access of up to six in-person counseling sessions at no cost to them.

Although deployment is an indicator of the stress on the force, both Bloomstrom and Scheider agreed that the problem is that many couples do not have the skills needed to make their marriage work.

"Anytime there is a lot of stress, there is a higher opportunity for people to stray," said Scheider.

Marital skills have been studied by researchers at the University of Denver. The study was funded by the National Institute of Mental Health through the Prevention and Relationship Enhancement Program. PREP is known for thorough empirical research. Through PREP findings, Army chaplains are educating Soldiers and their families with coping skills and the skills needed to make a marriage successful.

Chaplains have established several programs and services in the Army that are designed to help couples manage stresses associated with the military lifestyle. Bloomstrom said all of the programs focus on three primary areas: awareness, attitudes, and skills.

The Building Strong and Ready Families program "was the first marriage education program that was systematically implemented in the Army," said Bloomstrom, who has been involved with the program since its origin in 1999. BSRF was first established at Hawaii's 25th Infantry Division Artillery.

BSRF is not marriage counseling, said Bloomstrom. It is marriage education. As stated in the 2002 Executive Summary interim report of BSRF, "While the Army has developed and deployed numerous programs to treat and respond to family and couple issues, the strengths in the underlying design of BSRF lie in a focus on prevention rather than reactive, crisis management."

Retreats for couples in BSRF are called Strong Bonds retreats. This year, there are about 600 retreats scheduled Armywide, each with 20 to 50 couples attending.

For Reserve and National Guard Soldiers, there are weekend retreats. Active component Soldiers have one-day events and overnight retreats. All U.S. states and territories have an event scheduled. Soldiers and their spouses can contact their State Family Program Office to find out what is being offered in that state.

Chaplains and chaplain assistants are also available to assist Soldiers wanting to talk.

"They have a relationship usually with that unit," Bloomstrom said of battalion and brigade chaplains. "There is a real benefit having them involved, as opposed to someone you don't know."

Scheider mentioned that Soldiers also trust the unit chaplains because of the confidential communication.

There has been a doubling of total Army divorces from the 2000 fiscal year to the 2004 fiscal year — an increase of nearly 5,000 divorces over this period. A year before Sept. 11, total active-duty Army divorces were at 5,658 among 255,353 marriages. Divorces rose a year later to 7,049 from 248,180 marriages.

Still, these statistics can be misleading. Bloomstrom said that if it is a dual military couple, the divorce counts twice. He also said the statistics do not take into account if these Soldiers are married and divorcing for a second time. He points out that normally, couples face a 50-50 chance of their marriage surviving. Couples in their second marriage face a 60 to 70 percent chance of their marriage ending in divorce.

Bloomstrom said that the Army needs to focus on its well-being.

"We recruit a Soldier, and retain a family," he said. "We need to listen to the other part of the fighting force which is the family that stays home and supports the Soldiers."

DLA announces A-76 results for DRMS operations

Defense Logistics Agency

The Defense Logistics Agency and its field activity, the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Service, announced the tentative decision that the usable property warehousing functions at 68 DRMS sites in the United States, including Hawaii, will remain in-house rather than be awarded to the private sector. The tentative decision was made after a detailed public-private competition indicated it was more cost effective for the functions to be retained by the government.

The competed functions are currently being performed by approximately 300 federal and contractor employees. Implementation of the Most Efficient Organization's proposal will result in warehousing operations being consolidated at 18 sites. A complete list is at http://www.dla.mil/public_info/drmsA76.pdf. Other DRMS services such as hazardous and scrap property disposal are not expected to be diminished or directly affected by the warehouse consolidation.

DRMS announced these functions were undergoing an A-76 study on Oct. 9, 2001.

The A-76 competition process is the prescribed method for deciding whether to retain recurring, commercial activities within the government or contract them out to the private sector. It also is a fair and effective tool for achieving the savings and efficiencies needed to continue to provide affordable and reliable disposal support.

The federal employees at DRMS presented a streamlined operations proposal that was determined to be the best overall value. The proposal projects a net savings of approximately $66.8 million, representing a 57.5 percent reduction in operating costs over the five-year period.

"The competitive sourcing process determined the best structure to perform DRMS operations in support of America's military services in the most efficient manner," said Maj. Gen. Daniel Mongeon, director of DLA Logistics Operations. "This process streamlines operations whether the current federal work force or a private sector company performs the functions. DLA continues to strive to provide the best value service to our customers," Mongeon said.

Col. Patrick E. O'Donnell, DRMS commander, said the announcement is the result of months of hard work by DRMS employees whose dedication and commitment to providing best value services to our war fighters has been remarkable.

"I am confident our team will continue to provide our war fighters the same levels of support DRMS demands for all its customers," O'Donnell said. "My immediate focus will be to assist those DRMS employees impacted by the changes, as well as working to support all DRMS employees through the transition activities of the next six months."

The DRMS mission involves disposal of excess property, including hazardous materials, received from the military services, with the highest emphasis placed on protecting the public and maintaining full environmental compliance. Property is first offered for reuse within the Department of Defense, transfer to other federal agencies, or donation to state and local governments and other qualified organizations. Excess property not reused, transferred or donated may be sold to the public as surplus. DRMS has a worldwide presence within DoD, with disposal specialists in 39 states, 15 countries and Guam.

DLA provides supply support, and technical and logistics services to the military services and to several civilian agencies. DLA is the source for nearly every consumable item, whether for combat readiness, emergency preparedness or day-to-day operations.

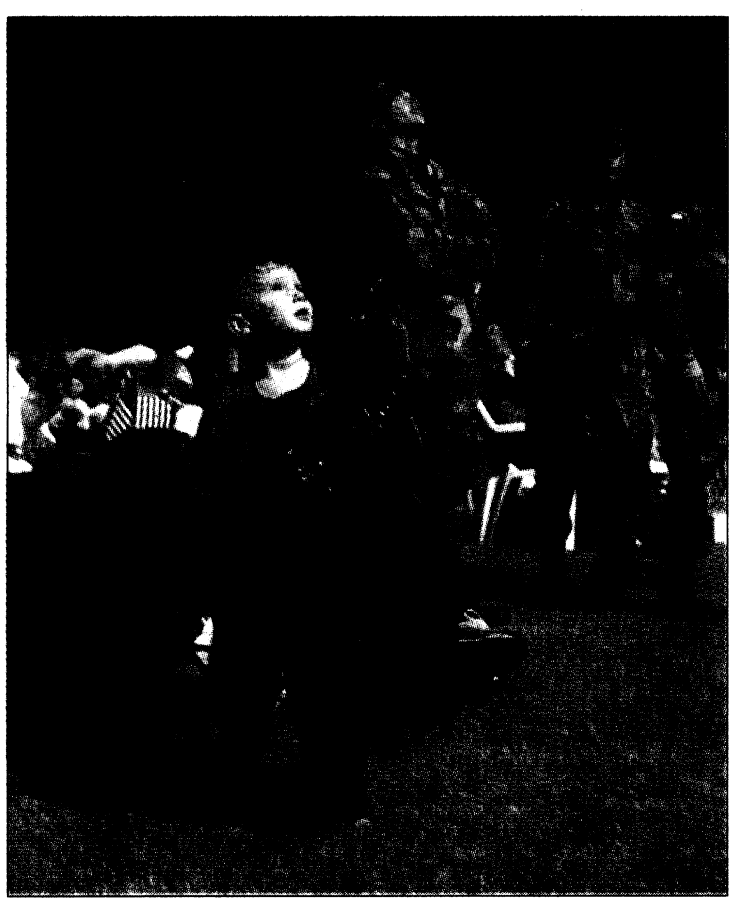
THE BAYONET
COMMUNITY



About 66 million Americans celebrated Independence Day with a barbecue. The most popular menu items include hot dogs, hamburgers, chicken, ribs, salad, potato salad, chips and watermelon.
Every large city in America hosts a fireworks show. Cities spent $135.6 million for fireworks in 2004.

Fireworks lighted the sky over Infantry Hall during Fort Benning's annual Independence Day Celebration June 30. An estimated 17,000 people gathered to watch what the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation said was the "best fireworks show ever in Fort Benning's history."

An estimated 17,000 people converged on York Field for the annual Independence Day Celebration June 30, sponsored by the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

Members of the tricommunity area came for the music, food, activities, demonstrations and the fireworks display.

"We had a lot more people than we expected, with the 3rd Brigade and 36th Engineers being deployed," said Sgt. Maj. Jennifer Pearson, DMWR sergeant major.

"It was hot and humid, but people came out to support us.

"I thought it was an excellent fireworks display — the best ever."

Festivities included rides for the children, a climbing wall, a Home Depot activities tent, live musical performances, interactive displays from units on post, a parachute demonstration, a Ranger SPIES and FRIES demonstration, flag pageantry, lots of food and a grand fireworks display.

Caitlyn McDowell had a pretty good grasp on what the celebration was all about, and she definitely had a favorite part.

"The Fourth of July is about the United States celebrating our freedom from Britain, I think," the 7-year-old said.

"I like to (celebrate) by going out and watching the fireworks.

"My favorite part was the last part of the fireworks, when they all went off — the grand finale."

Sherry Eifler, who just moved here from Fort Hood, Texas, brought her family out to enjoy the evening's activities.

"I love it," Eifler said. "This is our fourth time at Fort Benning, and I've been telling the kids we are coming home.

"I told them after we moved into the house we could see the fireworks and ride the rides — they were so excited."

Eifler said there are always long lines at the Independence Day celebration, but everyone is friendly, congenial and happy to be out and about.

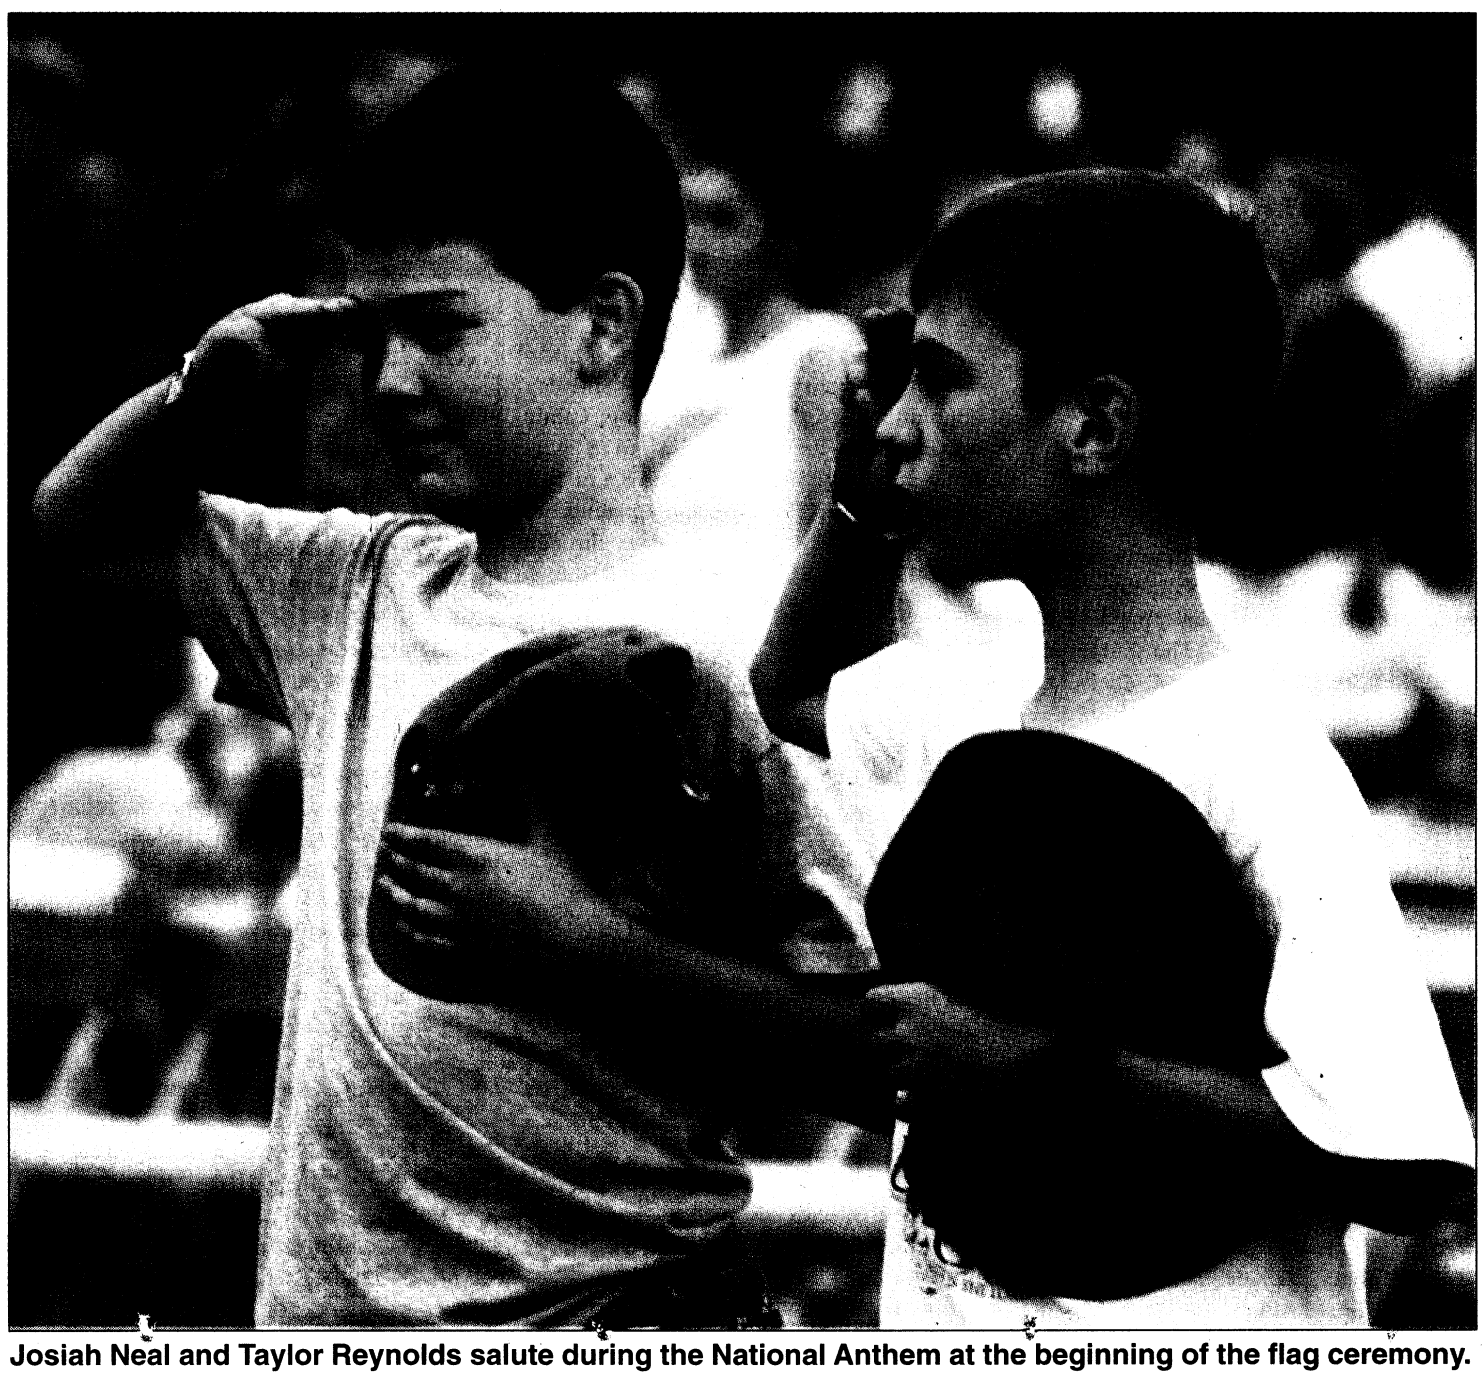
"You know the Soldiers really look forward to this," she said.

"The music is good, the demonstrations are good and the fireworks are always good.

"I love watching the kids' expressions and hearing their comments as they watch the fireworks. It's just a fun family time."

Pfc. Robert Coe, E Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, said coming to the celebration was a refreshing break from the training at Sand Hill.

"It's amazing to be here," he said.



"This gives us a chance to get out of the barracks and celebrate America and what we are fighting for.

"It gave me a chance to be proud of who I am and what I am doing."

Pvt. Karl Snow, a Ranger Indoctrination Program student, said he enjoyed watching everyone have fun.

"I think this is great for the Soldiers.

"It's something for us to look forward to," Snow said. "There's good food, plenty of entertainment and plenty of kids stuff."

Better Business Bureau warns consumers

Better Business Bureau

Better Business Bureaus have issued an international alert to warn about individuals who are fraudulently using the BBB name to extort money from online shoppers seeking to purchase big-ticket items at "low-ball" prices.

BBBs in Arizona, California, Florida, Georgia, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas have received queries from online shoppers who were directed to use bogus Better Business Bureau services or received bogus BBB invoices when pursuing jet skis, cars, motorcycles and similar items that were advertised on auction, classifieds and other Web sites. Sites where such items were allegedly listed include eBay, Craigslist, Carbuyer.com and Motorcycletrader.com.

Complainants reported that the merchandise was briefly posted on the online shopping site, and that when they attempted to buy the item by communicating directly with the seller, they were advised that their financial payment would be "handled securely through the Better Business Bureau Company's insurance service."

Buyers were told to e-mail the seller, whom, they were advised, would send their e-mail to "the BBB." "The BBB" would let them know if they were preferred customers and could start the transaction.

Next, the approved buyers received electronic invoices instructing them to wire thousands of dollars to a Western Union in another country to one of "the BBB's" agents. Signed "Better Business Bureau Customer Support," the e-mail states that "the Better Business Bureau will hold the transferred money until the merchandise is inspected and received by the buyer." To date, consumers have been instructed to wire money to Greece, Ireland or England.

There are other permutations to this scam. One purchaser was sent an invoice, signed by the "Better Business Bureau Finance Department" and featuring the BBB name and logo on "International Trading" letterhead. Another buyer received an e-mail purporting to be from the Better Business Bureau and containing a "verified BBB Seal Member Profile" for the online seller. One consumer in Florida reported being told to use a "BBB Auto Buyers Protection Program."

"These thieves are falsely using the BBB name to inspire trust and confidence on the part of the buyer," said Ken Hunter, president and CEO of the Council of Better Business Bureaus, Inc.

"The CBBB has reported the fraudulent activity to several law enforcement authorities and has taken steps to prevent others from being victimized by demanding that the individuals involved cease and desist from using the BBB name to pursue their extortion schemes."

He advised consumers to take note of the following:

• The BBB does not operate a "Better Business Bureau Insurance Service," and it does not offer a "BBB Auto Buyers Protection Program."

• The BBB is not a "preferred insurance provider" for eBay or any other entity.

• The BBB does not manage financial transactions for online merchants.

• The BBB does not issue profiles or reports on individuals; BBBs report on businesses.

E-mail addresses affiliated with the scam include support@bbb-paysafe.com and support@inc.bbb.com. One consumer said the e-mail she received from "Better Business Bureau Customer Support" had a BBB torch logo that, when clicked on, transferred her to the bbb.org Web site. In some of the e-mails, "Square Trade Better Business Bureau" or "Better Business Bureau Financial Department" appears as the name of the sender.

The BBB advises consumers to:

• Always contact the BBB when there are questions concerning the legitimacy of an offer;

• Always check with the BBB when its name is being used in an unusual or questionable fashion;

• Click to check BBBOnline Reliability Privacy program seals displayed on merchant Web sites or go to www.bbbonline.org for a list of merchants meeting BBBOnline standards.

BBBs are listed in local phone directories and contact information for individual BBBs is also available on the BBB Web site at www.bbb.org.

The local BBB of West Georgia and East Alabama, Inc. is located at 500 12th St. in Columbus.

To reach them, call 324-0712.

COMMUNITY NEWS

ON POST

Power of attorney for housing residents — Soldiers planning to deploy between now and Nov. 30, whose families wish to continue to occupy family housing, need to execute a special power of attorney permitting spouses to sign the required resident occupancy agreement with Pinnacle Military Housing.

Pinnacle is scheduled to assume management of family housing Dec. 1.

The special power of attorney is available at Legal Assistance Division, Building 5, and can be done on a walk-in basis.

For more information, call 545-0667 or the Housing Office at 545-2990. For questions on power of attorney, call OSJA at 545-3281.

Resident survey — An extension has been issued until July 31 to fill out and return a resident survey.

The survey lets residents tell how well their on-post housing needs are being met.

For a survey or more information, call Lillian Salazar at 545-0667 or stop by the RCI office in Building 280.

School Age Services Camp Courage — Camp Courage provides hourly, part-day and full-day camp for children in kindergarten through fifth grade.

Activities include movies, swimming, bowling, arts and crafts, educational field trips and skating.

Camp hours are Monday through Friday from 5:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. and parents can register children for individual weeks.

Monday to July 15 — Outer Space
July 18 to 22 — Surf's Up
July 25 to 29 — Jungle to Jungle
August 1 to 5 — Summer Finale

Breakfast, lunch and an afternoon snack are included. Fees are based on total family income.

For more information, call 545-3605. To register, call 545-2079.

Sayers Memorial Library summer reading program — The theme of this year's summer reading program is "FUNtastic Reading." The library has activities for children and teens that encourage children to read for pleasure.

The library summer hours are Monday through Thursday from 11 a.m. to 7:50 p.m. and weekends from noon to 7:50 p.m.

For more information, call 545-4911.

Tricare freeze lifted — MEDDAC has lifted the enrollment freeze. Tricare Prime enrollment is now open to all eligible beneficiaries. Visit the Tricare Service Center to complete enrollment forms and choose a primary care manager.

For more information, call 544-4406.

MEDDAC Open House and sports screenings — MEDDAC will host an open house and sports screenings from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. July 23 and Aug. 6.

Screenings include sports physicals, immunizations and vision-hearing-dental screenings for children between the ages of 3 and 18 years. No appointments are necessary.

Parents should bring identification cards, medical cards, shot records and any required school physical forms to the open house.

For more information, call 544-1939 or 544-4408.

Volunteer opportunities — The Medical Department Activity and Martin Army Community Hospital have volunteer opportunities of all types.

Positions include public affairs intern, patient shuttle transport drivers, clerks, nurses, doctors and more.

Child care is provided.

For more information, call the American Red Cross at 545-5194 or the Public Affairs Office at 544-4276.

Red Cross volunteer positions — The American Red Cross has the following volunteer positions available: station chairman, chairman of volunteers, records chairman, hospital volunteer coordinator, office assistant, shuttle drivers and others at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Days and times are negotiable.

For more information, call 545-5194 or stop by Building 2626 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Spouse Support Group — The Chaplain Family Life Center offers a spouse support group for spouses of deployed Soldiers, from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursdays.

The support group has changed locations due to the response. The group will now meet at the Sightseeing Road Chapel.

Child care will be provided. Pre-registration is required.

For information or registration, call 545-9014.

Same-day appointments — Martin Army Community Hospital offers same-day appointments. Family Medicine Clinic appointments are 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays. Pediatric appointments are 7:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

For more information, call 562-9505 or 568-7111.

OFF POST

Change in marriage license fees — Now effective, the fee for a marriage license in the state of Georgia is raised from $10 to $35. If the couple seeking the license has completed a qualifying premarital education program, as defined by House Bill 378, there will be no fee for the application.

The bill waives only the application fee and not other fees and costs that may apply under Georgia law.

For more information, call the Cusseta-Chattahoochee County Probate Court at 989-3603.

Thank a Soldier — A Safe Mini Storage is sponsoring Thank A Soldier. The public is invited to fill out a card that will be directed to Soldiers who don't receive mail, through the month of July. A Safe will pay the shipping.

A Safe is located at 4510 Armour Road in Columbus.

For more information, call 569-7600.

International Day -- Join NLCI for International Day at New Life Church International at 10:30 a.m. July 17.

Prepare to celebrate diversity in the kingdom of God to include food sampling along with cultural displays, musical presentations and wearing attire that represents your nationality.

NLCI is located at 1858 Midtown Drive in Columbus.

For more information, call 565-9969.

National Short Story contest — As part of the Ernest Hemingway Festival in Sun Valley, Idaho, organizers are conducting a short story contest. Works of short fiction, which must be previously unpublished, should be postmarked by July 26. The winner will be awarded $500, will be honored during the festival and will have their story published in the festival magazine.

Stories should be submitted to Sue Bailey, SVKCVB, P.O. Box 2420, Sun Valley, ID 83353 along with a nonrefundable $10 entry fee.

Stories should be typewritten, double-spaced, maximum 2,600 words or 10 pages and available in Word format.

For more information, visit www.ernesthemingwayfestival.org or call (208) 726-3423.

Freedom Team Salute program — The Freedom Team Salute program gives all Army Soldiers the opportunity to recognize parents, spouses and employers for the support they provide to our Soldiers while they serve to protect our freedom and the American way of life.

Soldiers can nominate their parent, spouse or employer by visiting the Web site freedomteansalutemus.army.mil.

Prayer vigil — A prayer vigil will be held on the third of every month, rotating among downtown Columbus churches and The Infantry Center Chapel.

Keeping mosquitoes under control

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

First referred to as "empis" by Aristotle in his 300 B.C. tome "Historia Animalium," the mosquito has been bugging mankind for a long, long time.

The U.S. Geological Survey's National Wildlife Health Center has classified about 200 different species of mosquitoes in the United States and 48 of them are biters.

Although most mosquitoes are just annoying, some mosquitoes are capable of transmitting serious diseases such as malaria, encephalitis and yellow fever to humans, animals and birds.

West Nile virus, commonly found in Africa, the Middle East, western Asia and the Mediterranean region is another potentially serious mosquito-borne illness.

It first emerged in the New York City area in 1999, and has quickly spread westward across the North American continent. As of last year, West Nile virus has been detected in all 48 continental states.

Even in areas where West Nile virus has been documented, the Centers for Disease Control said the risk of contracting the virus is statistically low.

Six years since West Nile virus first appeared in the United States, only one horse on Fort Benning has been confirmed as contracting the virus a few years ago.

"There's a question whether the horse caught the virus on post or somewhere off post before coming here," Gregg Mohler, construction inspector for the DPW engineering division said. "There are no cases of humans contracting the virus at Fort Benning."

Sgt. Gina Egan, NCOIC of Environmental Health at Martin Army Community Hospital confirmed there have been no cases of West Nile virus in humans.

"So far this season we have not found one mosquito, bird or animal with the West Nile virus," she said.

Symptoms of West Nile virus infection usually occur after a three-to-15 day incubation period. People infected with West Nile virus experience flu-like symptoms, which can include fever, headache and body aches.

In a very few number of cases, particularly among the elderly or those with compromised immune systems, the disease is more serious and causes encephalitis, an inflammation of the brain affecting the central nervous system.

Most people who get the illness recover from it. In severe cases, hospitalization is required. The CDC said less than 1 percent of those bitten by an infected mosquito develop severe symptoms.

Fort Benning's Directorate of Public Works has a mosquito control plan designed to promote and protect human health and the environment.

Mohler said the safest and most cost-effective way to control mosquitoes is to eliminate their breeding sites.

"People are their own worst enemy when it comes to keeping mosquitoes under control," he said. Any unchlorinated standing water is a potential breeding site. The chlorine in a glass of tap water dissipates within 24 hours.

Kiddie wading pools become mosquito breeding sites within 24 to 48 hours, if they're not emptied. Otherwise known as habitat modification, simply emptying any container that holds standing water will greatly reduce the chances of getting bitten.

"Don't water around the house in the evening," Mohler said. "It creates a water source for big roaches, and the mosquitoes will breed in the nooks and crannies."

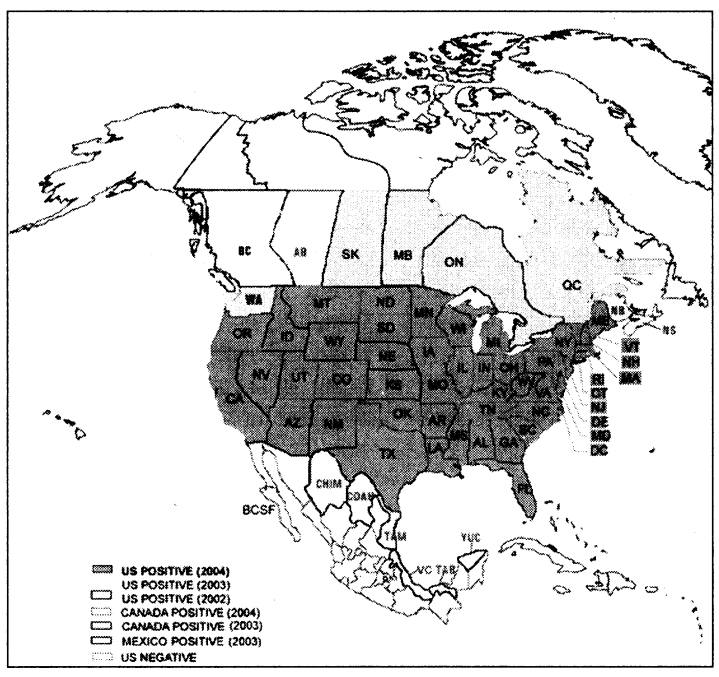
The U.S. Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventive Medicine said only female mosquitoes are capable of biting, and usually prefer horses, cattle, smaller mammals and birds as their meals of choice. The females are attracted to exhaled carbon dioxide, and influenced by temperature, moisture, smell, color and movement,

Erin Menefee, environmental specialist for the DPW environmental division, said Environmental Health Services trap and count mosquitoes as a method to identify potential carriers of the virus. They are collected every week and sent to the USACHPPM entomological sciences division at Fort Meade, Md., for analysis.

"We don't fog on Fort Benning because of the number of people with allergies," Mohler said. "Only once in 15 years did we do it for a Best Ranger competition because fogging only kills the adult mosquitoes when they're flying."

Instead, people should wear long pants and shirts with long sleeves, or use a mosquito repellent containing DEET or permethrin. "Just be sure to follow the directions when putting chemicals on yourself," Mohler said.

In addition to collecting information about mosquito populations and habitats through weekly trap testing, the surveillance of dead birds has been a very useful indicator of viral spread across the country.



"Any type of predatory bird, such as an owl or hawk that just drops down dead is suspect," Mohler said.

Should anyone find a recently dead or dying bird on post, call the Military Police Animal Control at 545-5222.

Armed Forces Pest Management Board

Most of the 2,500 species of mosquitoes in the world dine on nectar or other similar sugars, but this Aedes aegypti prefers a blood meal. Humans are not the mosquito's first choice for dinner.

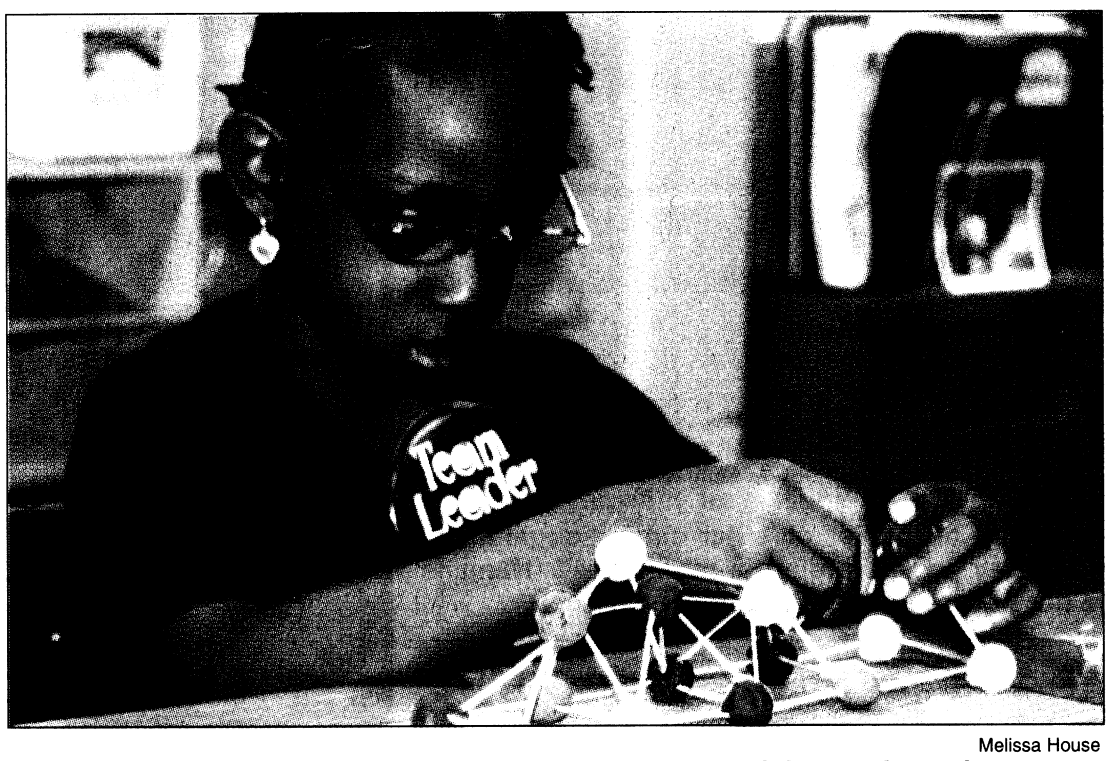
Post students' summer learning

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

More than 170 participated in the first summer school program ever offered to Department of Defense Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary Schools students. The four-week program began June 13 and ends today.

Fort Benning Schools assistant superintendent Bill Diesselhorst said the district has held summer school programs focusing on reading, but this was the first time he could recall an enrichment program.



Diesselhorst said the program was funded by DoD to help the children, especially on posts with a high deployment rate. Fort Benning had 254 slots, which were all filled prior to the first day of class.

"This is not traditional summer school," Diesselhorst said. "Most think of it as remedial, but it was not what this was at all. It's enrichment, and gives the kids more of a challenge in math and language arts."

The program, based on the Discovery Channel, took students through hands-on, interactive lessons.

The program was not grade-specific. Ten classrooms at Stowers Elementary had students in kindergarten through third grade working together to solve problems while four classes were made up of fourth- and fifth-graders. The two classes of sixth- through eighth-graders met at Faith Middle School.

Diesselhorst said more teachers applied to teach the program than there were slots. He said they all wanted the challenge of teaching the summer program for the first time.

Melissa House

Mihcaela Edwards, 6, adds more clay and toothpicks to her skyscraper structure Wednesday during the summer school enrichment program.

White Elementary teachers Janie Pride and Ann Lucas each taught classes of the youngest students. For Pride, this was her first summer school experience in 26 years of teaching.

"We're Voyagers," Pride said, referring to the name of the program. "We've taken lots of journeys together."

Pride introduced her class to the seven wonders of the world, talked about skyscrapers and glaciers. She said each lesson was reinforced with hands-on exploration like making skyscraper structures with toothpicks and modeling clay and even eating "glacier pie."

"I liked the glacier pie," said 6-year-old Stowers student Jesse Best. "It was delicious."

And with the fun, came some challenging work, Pride said.

"In math, the students had to do some real gifted-level pattern work," she said. "Some of it was difficult and some of the reasoning was really complex."

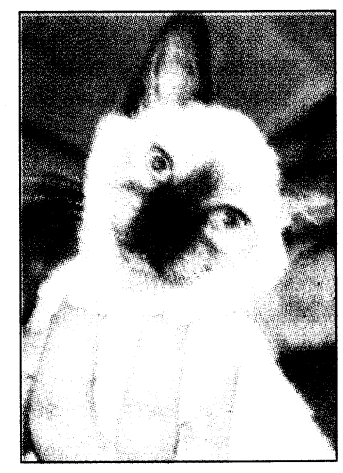
Lucas said her students had a chance to be detectives, engineers and even oceanographers. Ticierra Peters, 8, showed off a magic trick and Alec Armstrong, 9, shared some of the facts he learned about squid. The squid lesson was complete with a preserved squid.

White Elementary teacher Richard Thomas oversaw the enrichment program.

"I really love this program," Thomas said. "It ties in with our new science curriculum." He said he hopes the summer enrichment program will continue next year.

Stowers counselor Ruth Doughty spent a few days before class started transforming the school's music room into a "room of adventure."

"It's been fun," Doughty said. "It's an excellent curriculum and everybody wants more time to do it." Doughty echoed Lucas' and Pride's disappointment in not being able to do all of the activities in the three hours of class daily.



"This is a good learning experience," Doughty said. "This is how we should be teaching kids — with lots of hands-on time and activities."

On the walls of her classroom were some of her fourth- and fifth-grade students' work — a Venn diagram of pyrite and gold, and 13 "Area of a Foot Island," where each student traced their foot, mapped it and determined its area.

Cid Ortiz, a 10-year-old Stowers student decided her summer school experience had given her a head start on the fifth grade. "I'm ready to get back to school," she said.

Human race struggles for numerous freedoms

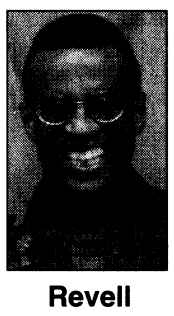
Chaplain (Maj.) Ken Revell
11th Infantry Regiment

The struggle for personal and collective freedom is a prevailing theme of the human race.

Whether this theme packages itself as civil rights, human rights, state rights or religious rights, it is all about the advancement of freedom in some form.

The American Revolutionary War, the Civil War, World War I, World War II and now the Global War on Terrorism are wars about freedom.

This push for freedom, independence and personal responsibility extends far beyond the battlefield.



It is played out in academic, political and religious circles.

Everybody seems to have a dog to fight here.

Teenagers, veterans, social activists, rock stars, rappers, politicians — all show up for a fight to determine how the freedom pie is to be divided and distributed among the masses.

As we've pondered our Independence Day this year, I submit to you that freedom does not exist in an independent vacuum devoid of morality, responsibility and accountability.

REFLECTIONS

Revell

A "checkless" freedom (a freedom without accountability) is reckless freedom.

Freedom thrives and flourishes in environments not only where might makes right, but also where right makes might.

I believe George Washington captured the right sentiment. My prayer this past Independence Day, and the days to come, is that his prayer becomes our prayer.

"Almighty God, we make our earnest prayer that Thou wilt keep the United States in Thy holy protection, that Thou wilt incline the heart of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of subordination and obedience to government, and entertain brotherly affection and love for one another and for their fellow citizens of the United States at large.

"And finally that Thou wilt most graciously be pleased to dispose us all to do justice, to love mercy, and to demean ourselves with that charity, humility, and pacific temper of mind which were the characteristics of the Divine Author of our blessed religion, and without a humble imitation of whose example in these things we can never hope to be a happy nation. Grant our supplications we beseech Thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Amen.

(Written at Newburgh, N.Y., June 8, 1783, and sent to all governors of all the states.)

Practice six "C's" and help your relationship last forever

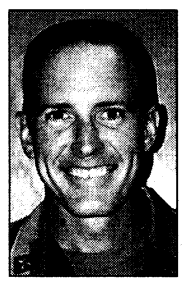
Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

The young Ranger stretched across the hospital bed to wipe the tear from his young bride's eye. She'd just gotten the word from the surgeon that she didn't want to hear.

"No, I'm sorry. There's nothing we can do. It's permanent."

You see, when the doctor went in to remove a small tumor from the inside of her cheek, he'd accidentally clipped her facial nerve.

And this once teenage beauty queen now looked more like a sadistically young victim of a stroke, lips grotesquely curled, her face sadly drawn on that side.



It was at that point that one of the most beautiful expressions of love I'd ever seen occurred. The young Ranger, a whole life ahead of him with a now irreparably disfigured wife, cupped his hands around her cheeks, got face to face with her, and then whispered, "I love you, and I'm not going anywhere." And then he did the unimaginable — he contorted his lips to match the disfigurement of hers and gently offered her a kiss.

That's real love.

What makes a love that strong — what makes real love? Best-selling author and pastor of one of America's largest churches, Rick Warren, offers six characteristics that will help you, too, go the distance:

• Communication — This is a skill you must learn through practice, but the bottom line is you've got to talk to each other. I read in Newsweek that the average couples only spends four minutes a day talking to each other.

• Consideration — The Bible teaches that we should show our love by being helpful to each other. Being considerate simply means paying attention to what your spouse says, showing common courtesy, and treating each other with respect.

Hawkins

• Compromise — We're taught in the Bible that "love does not demand its own way" (1 Corinthians 13:5). The unloving thing to do is try to change your mate. Instead you should yield your rights and learn the art of negotiation and compromise.

I've seen more marriages die from inflexibility than I've ever seen from adultery, alcoholism or abuse.

• Courtship — If there was more courting in marriage, there'd be fewer marriages in court. You need to date your mate, making your relationship a priority — specifically developing things you like to do together.

• Commitment — I find it interesting that the media has finally discovered the value of commitment. Some headlines I've seen lately include: "Measuring our quality of life — happily married;" "Strong commitment brings satisfaction;" "Commitment — the key to marriage."

There were many times through the years of my own marriage when my wife and I might have bailed out on each other, but we'd locked the escape hatch, agreeing that divorce was not an option. This forced us to change, to become flexible, to learn compromise, and to grow out of our selfishness.

• Christ — Jesus gives you the power and the desire to develop the other five characteristics.

He gives you love when you run out of love. The greatest thing you can do for your spouse is to become like Christ and then begin to treat your spouse like Christ would.

Marriage and Divorce magazine discovered that one out of every three marriages ends in divorce, but when the couple is married in a church ceremony and they attend church regularly, and they pray and read the Bible together, then the chances for divorce drop to one out of 1,105.

Rarely a week goes by that, after 23 years, Lori and I don't thank God in front of each other for each other. So take heart and know that you can have a real love that will go the distance, too. Just practice the "Six C's" and see what happens!

Want some help and encouragement to do that? Then call The Chaplain Family Life Center at 545-1760, or come by Building 2606 in Soldiers' Plaza or CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel, a postwide service for everyone, at 11 a.m. Sundays at Kelley Hill.

A weekly worship service of Healing and Reconciliation will start Wednesday at Kelley Hill Chapel at 7 p.m.
The service offers opportunity to come for healing emotional, spiritual and physical problems.

R & R

One of the few national anthems that does not mention the name of the home country, The Star Spangled Banner melody is based on an English drinking song. Written by Francis Scott Key in 1814, it was officially recognized as the American national anthem by an act of Congress in 1931.

Rock Star: INXS is the reality of rock 'n' roll

Ever since Elvis Presley swiveled his hips on The Ed Sullivan Show and sent America reeling, rock 'n' roll has always had an uneasy relationship with network television.

Not a man to shrink from a challenge, reality guru Mark Burnett (Survivor, The Apprentice) is gambling that network viewers are ready to rock this summer, with the Monday premiere of Rock Star: INXS on CBS.

Following the one-hour opening episode is another hour episode on Tuesday and then a half-hour on Wednesday. In subsequent weeks, the series airs half-hours on Monday and Wednesday, and an hour on Tuesday.

Rock guitarist Dave Navarro, formerly of Jane's Addiction and the Red Hot Chili Peppers, is co-host, with model and TV presenter Brooke Burke (Wild On). The aim of the show is to weed through 15 contestants — male and female, ranging in age from 22 to 36 — to find a new lead singer for the Australian rock band INXS (pronounced "in excess").

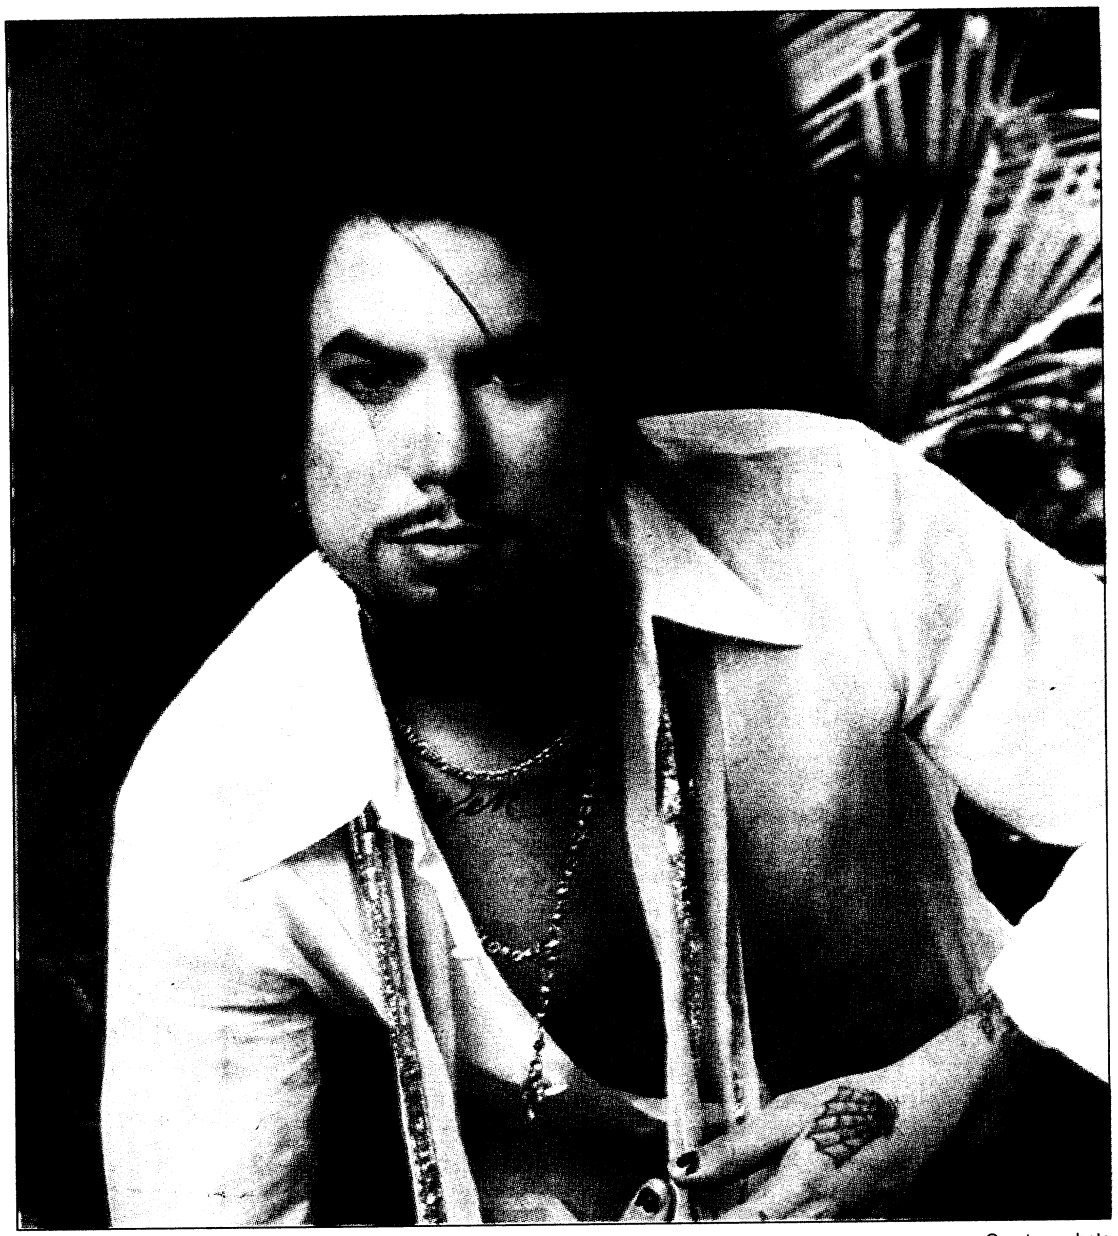
Popular during the '80s and '90s, the band lost lead singer Michael Hutchence to suicide in a Sydney hotel room at the age of 37 (lamented in the U2 song Stuck in a Moment) in 1997.

Other singers, including Terence Trent D'Arby and Jon Stevens, have fronted the band, but now surviving members Garry Beers, Andrew Farriss, Jon Farriss, Tim Farriss and Kirk Pengilly are looking to make a new match.

The 15 hopefuls live together in a Hollywood Hills, Calif., home. Monday episodes focus on the performers' relationships and activities; Tuesday is a performance competition; and Wednesday presents the weekly results.

With viewer participation, INXS chooses the ultimate winner to join the band in the recording studio and on a worldwide concert tour.

Speaking about the contestants, Navarro said, "A lot of these kids have been at this for years, in bands, tours, clubs around the country. They've been paying dues, let's put it that way. It's not like they found random people and put them up there."



Navarro believes the winner must have more than just a good voice.

"They need to have that 'It' factor, wherein you can't take your eyes off them, no matter what they're doing. There has to be a captivating quality, a willingness to be vulnerable. Those things in the rock arena are more important to me than vocal technique and chops.

"I was in two fairly successful bands where the lead singers, in both situations, were icons, but neither one was a schooled singer. There's more to it than hitting the notes, although that helps. For me, it's an intangible quality. It's about being able to stay true to who you are. The interesting twist on this show is that I will be on hand to give advice and to give my two cents to these kids when they ask for it, but a true artist probably wouldn't listen to that advice.

"I can truly relate to what a lot of them are going through, because I walked into the Chili Peppers 10 years after they got going or something like that, so I know what it's like to try to walk into a fully functioning machine like that. It's pretty gnarly."

The show is also an opportunity for the singers to wrap their voices around some rock classics, and for fans to hear some rock 'n' roll in network prime time.

Former Red Hot Chili Peppers and Jane's Addiction guitarist Dave Navarro co-hosts the unscripted series Rock Star: INXS, in which viewers choose a new lead singer for the '80s and '90s rock group, debuting Monday on CBS.

"I don't think it's going to hurt anything to have rock music on network television for a while," Navarro said. "We have songs from Nirvana, Living Colour, Courtney Love, the Black Crowes, Rolling Stones, The Who, to name a few. The songs they're going to be performing are real, great rock songs."

As to whether he thinks this is a legitimate way for a band to find a new lead singer, Navarro said, "The only part of this that isn't conventional is the fact that it's televised. Apart from that, it's actually a very intense audition process. To be even more frank, these kids will probably have a better shot than if INXS just held auditions, because they have 13 weeks to prove themselves.

"They show how they can hold up under pressure, evolve, grow, take criticism, either listening to it or leaving it outside the door. With a lot of bands holding auditions, you get a song or two to prove yourself and that's it. I've been in bands that held auditions, and I've auditioned for bands. You don't really get an opportunity to show your personality and your strength and your willingness to evolve in an hour. They actually have a better chance.

"And if it's a legitimate process or not, to each his own. I personally wouldn't hold auditions on television, but these guys want to, and that's cool."

Fantastic Four — Marvel's first family of comic superheroes takes the world by storm as the longest-running comic book series in history comes to the big screen.

Reed Richards (Mr. Fantastic), who can elongate his body; Susan Storm (Invisible Woman), who not only can become invisible at will but can render other objects invisible; Johnny Storm (Human Torch), who can shoot fire from his fingertips and bend flame; and Ben Grimm (The Thing), a hideously misshapen monster with superhuman strength, together battle the evil Doctor Doom.

Starring Ioan Gruffudd, Jessica Alba and Michael Chiklis.

Fantastic Four is rated PG-13 for sequences of intense action and suggestive content.

Dark Water — Dahlia Williams (Jennifer Connelly) is starting a new life. Newly separated with a new job and a new apartment, she's determined to put her relationship with her estranged husband behind her and devote herself to raising her daughter Ceci.

But when the strained separation disintegrates into a bitter custody battle, her situation takes a turn for the worse.

Dark Water is rated PG-13 for mature thematic material, frightening sequences, disturbing images and brief language.

War of the Worlds — A contemporary retelling of H.G. Wells's classic, the sci-fi thriller reveals the extraordinary battle for the future of humankind through the eyes of one American family fighting to survive.

Starring Tom Cruise, Miranda Otto and Dakota Fanning.

War of the Worlds is rated PG-13 for frightening sequences of sci-fi violence and disturbing images.

Bewitched — Hot-shot actor Jack Wyatt (Will Ferrell), set to star as Darrin in a film version of the '60s TV series Bewitched, finds his ideal Samantha in unknown actress Isabel (Nicole Kidman), who just happens to be a witch in real life.

Bewitched is rated PG-13 for language, including sex and drug references and partial nudity.

Rebound — Following a public meltdown, a high-strung basketball coach (Martin Lawrence) must redeem himself by leading a junior high school team consisting of athletically challenged youngsters.

Also starring Wendy Raquel Robinson, Breckin Meyer, Horatio Sanz and Megan Mullally.

Rebound is rated PG for mild language and thematic elements.

The Adventures of Shark Boy & Lava Girl — A 10-year-old outcast is shunned by classmates and forced to spend summer vacation alone.

With his two imaginary friends, Shark Boy and Lava Girl, he goes on a mission to prove dreams can become reality.

Starring Taylor Lautner, Taylor Dooley, Cayden Boyd and George Lopez.

The Adventures of Shark Boy and Lava Girl is rated PG for mild action and rude humor.

Herbie: Fully Loaded — Lindsay Lohan stars as Maggie Peyton, the new owner of Number 53 — the free-wheelin' Volkswagen bug with a mind of its own — and puts the car through its paces on the road to becoming a NASCAR competitor.

Herbie's got some new tricks under his hood.

Also starring Matt Dillon, Michael Keaton and Justin Long.

Herbie: Fully Loaded is rated G for general audiences.

George A. Romero's Land of the Dead — In a modern-day world where the walking dead roam an uninhabited wasteland, the living try to lead "normal" lives behind the walls of a fortified city.

A new society has been built by a handful of enterprising, ruthless opportunists, who live in the towers of a skyscraper, high above the hard-scrabble existence on the streets below.

Outside the city walls, an army of the dead is evolving. Inside, anarchy is on the rise.

Starring Simon Baker, Asia Argento and Dennis Hopper.

George A. Romero's Land of the Dead is rated R for pervasive strong violence and gore, language, sexuality and drug use.

Batman Begins — In the wake of his parents' murders, disillusioned industrial heir Bruce Wayne (Christian Bale) travels the world seeking the means to fight injustice and turn fear against those who prey on the fearful.

He returns to Gotham and unveils his alter ego — Batman, a masked crusader who uses his strength, intellect and an array of high-tech deceptions to fight the sinister forces that threaten the city.

Starring Ken Watanbe, Morgan Freeman and Michael Caine.

Batman Begins is rated PG-13 for intense action violence, disturbing images and thematic elements.

The Perfect Man — Teenager Holly Hamilton (Hilary Duff) is tired of moving every time her single mom Jean (Heather Locklear) has another personal meltdown involving yet another second-rate guy.

To distract her mother from her latest bad choice, Holly conceives the perfect plan for the perfect man — an imaginary secret admirer who will romance Jean and boost her shaky self-esteem.

The Perfect Man is rated PG for mildly suggestive content.

Mr. & Mrs. Smith — A married couple (Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie) are getting bored with their quiet domestic life.

What they don't know, however, is that they're both assassins, secretly hopping the world and killing for hire.

But their separate lives are about to collide when each finds out their next target is their own spouse.

Mr. & Mrs. Smith is rated PG-13 for sequences of violence, intense action, sexual content and strong language.

SPORTS

In 1933, a crowd of 4,000 gathered to watch a boxing match where "Fighting Bob" Lawson beat Seldom Heard in a 10-round battle at the Doughboy Arena. In 1956, two Soldiers from Fort Benning, 1st Lt. Pete Rademacher and Spc. Jim Boyd, won boxing medals in the Olympic games in Melbourne, Australia.

Bench Notes

Erin Nash

• Tony repeats win

Tony Stewart won his second race in a week, also setting a record at Daytona International Speedway, July 2 at the Pepsi 400.

Junior had his best finish of the year, placing third, though not giving him a boost in points.

• Wimbledon history

Venus Williams, who was seeded 14th at Wimbledon, captured the women's title July 2.

Roger Federer captured his third championship in a row July 3, beating out Andy Roddick.

• Danica wins pole, finished ninth

IndyCar driver Danica Patrick won the pole in the Argent Mortgage 300 at Kansas Speedway with the fast lap of 214.668 mph, but finished ninth. She's the second woman to claim the pole in an IndyCar series.

• All-Star game

The 76th MLB All-Star game will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday on FOX. The game is being played at Comerica Park in Detroit, Mich. Besides bragging rights, the winning league will claim home-field advantage for the World Series.

• Not really sports, but fun anyway

It's on ESPN, and I don't consider it "sports" per se, but the Nathan's Hot Dog Eating Contest is always fun to watch.

Japan's Takeru Kobayashi won for the fifth straight year, downing 49 hot dogs in 12 minutes. Virginian Sonya Thomas finished second, setting an American record of 37 dogs.

Jacinto Quintana, 3rd Battalion, knocks out Brian Christian, 1st Battalion, during the Ranger boxing match Wednesday. Quintana walked away with the 181-195 weight class title.

Rangers battle for bragging rights

In a week of athletic competition, Rangers from the 75th Ranger Regiment hit the fields, hardwood, mats and ring during the biennial Ranger Rendezvous.

Rangers competed in several team and individual events, including boxing, combatives, basketball, softball, flag football, soccer, tug-o-war and a stress shoot.

The Ranger Rendezvous is a week of competition, camaraderie and team building, said Michael Garcia of 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

"Once you're here, you have fun doing what you are signed up to do. I'm boxing and I'm having fun."

Garcia said the rendezvous goes back to when the first battalion was established.

"This is a real tight brotherhood," Garcia said. "It doesn't matter where you are from or what you do, you're in a battalion and you're a Ranger — you're brothers.

"You have to be pretty aggressive to do what we do, then you shake it off, give each other a high-five and it's over. We compete hard, and when you're done, you're friends."

Garcia won his boxing bout over 3rd Battalion's Marion Quill.

David Spencer, 3rd Battalion, wasn't participating in any of the events, but was out to cheer for his battalion.

"(These events) encourage the competitive spirit and aggressiveness," Spencer said. "This is the first one I have been to and it's really a big deal. It's really nice to see the whole regiment together in one place."

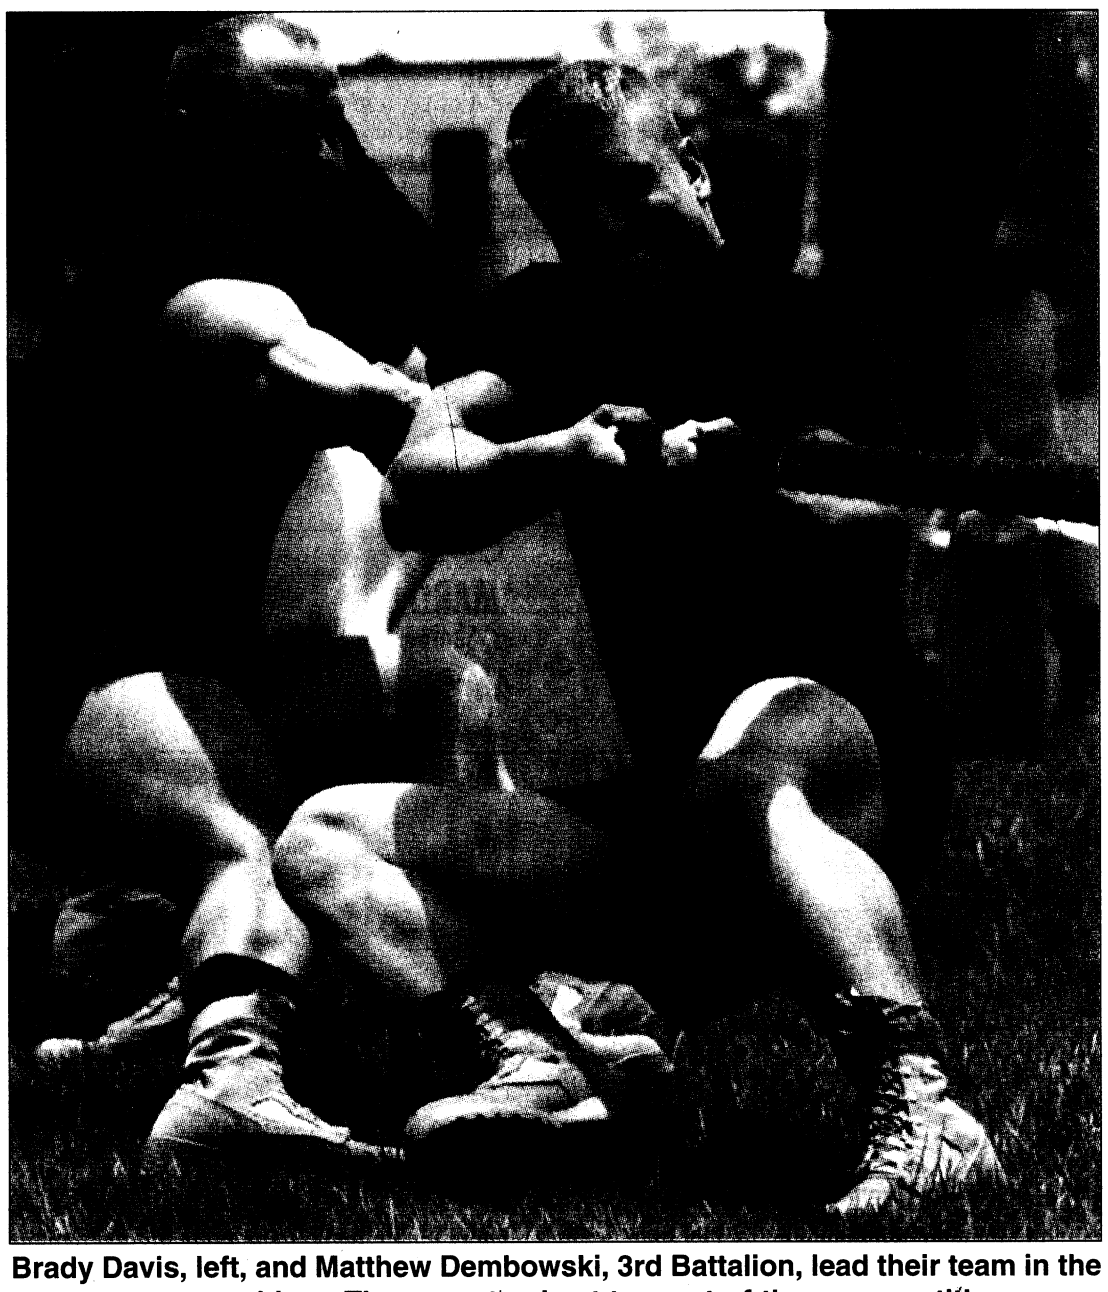
Spencer said his favorite part so far has been cheering on his buddies.

"It is fun to see people get knocked out," Spencer said. "And I want to support my company."

Keith Bach, with the combatives school, refereed the combatives events during the rendezvous.

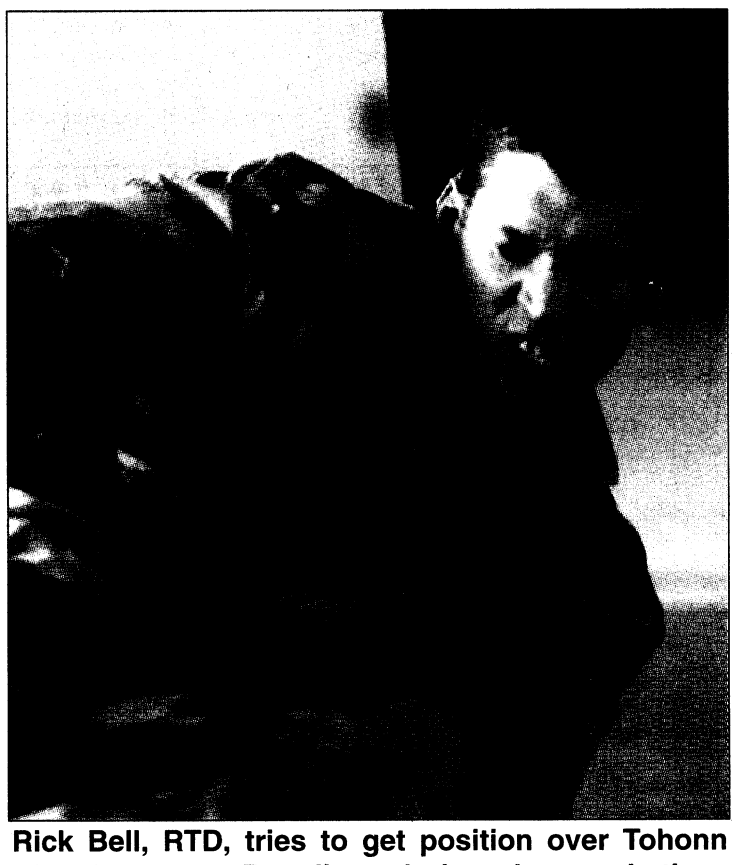
"There are a lot of guys who are really of good caliber," Bach said. "Some have trained really hard for this tournament and it shows."

Bach said the Rangers who competed weren't just randomly chosen, most of them had to compete in smaller tournaments within their companies to qualify for the meet.



"These are a good group of guys," Bach said.

"They come out and put everything on the line to see who are the best guys in the battalion and all of them fight hard."



The Ranger Rendezvous ends today with the regimental change of command ceremony at 9 a.m. on York Field.

Brady Davis, left, and Matthew Dembowski, 3rd Battalion, lead their team in the tug-o-war competition. They won the best two-out-of-three competition.

Rick Bell, RTD, tries to get position over Tohonn Nicholson, 1st Battalion, during the combatives portion of the Ranger Rendezvous. About 40 competitors grappled for the title of best fighter.

Nemechek makes comeback to 15th at Daytona

Sparks fly as Nemechek, 01 Army car driver, fights a turn during the Pepsi 400 Saturday at Daytona.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Joe Nemechek had mixed feelings about his 15th-place finish in the rain-delayed Pepsi 400, which started at 11 p.m. Saturday and completed at 1:45 a.m. Sunday.

The U.S. Army driver's performance on the famed Daytona International Speedway could be classified as a three-act drama.

Act one was a superlative performance by Nemechek, who easily positioned himself in the top five for nearly the first half of the race.

"That was the best drafting car we've ever had," Nemechek said, after qualifying fifth for the midsummer classic. "I was having a lot of fun challenging for the lead. I could put the Army car any place I wanted to — it was that good."

Act two went from being superlative to devastating when Nemechek's very fast 01 Army Chevrolet got clipped hard in the right-front fender by Michael Waltrip's spinning car on Lap 72 of 160. The incident not only shoved Nemechek to the rear of the field, it also put him out of the draft and eventually one lap down.

"It was just unfortunate that Michael had a flat tire," Nemechek said. "His car bounced off the wall and came back down and hit me. I didn't see him — I thought I was going by him and the next thing I knew is that I got clobbered on the right side. We went from being in position to challenge for the lead to a position of being lapped."

Act three eventually went back to Nemechek's favor. In the same manner of how his sponsor takes to adversity, the Army of One NASCAR team came through in the end with a lot of fight and grit to finish 15th. A savvy pit strategy by crew chief Ryan Pemberton and a tenacious driving job by Nemechek salvaged a decent weekend for the Army team at the World Center of Racing.

"Once we got the jagged edges on the right fender fixed and didn't have tire rub, the Army car was really fast again," Nemechek said. "One side of me says we deserved a much better result, but the other side says we'll take it because it appeared for a while we were looking at finishing somewhere in the low 30s."

"The other good news for the Army team is that we have this superspeedway car in one piece," he said. "We just need to do a little repair and it will be ready for Talladega for the fall race. I can't wait to get back into this machine at Talladega."

The next stop on the Nextel Cup Series will be Sunday at the USG Sheetrock 400 at Chicagoland Speedway in Joliet, Ill.

Follow Me golfer plays round with PGA pro Larry Mize

Ray Meredith
Follow Me Golf Club

I had the opportunity to play a round of golf at Fort Benning's Pineside Course with PGA Tour Professional Larry Mize April 25.

Completing the foursome were Leon Dunagan, head teaching pro at the Follow Me Golf Teaching Center, and his assistant Rudy Thorne.

To say it was the thrill of a lifetime is an understatement. Seldom do we get a chance to play with a truly skilled player, but to play with a PGA touring pro who also happens to be a former Master's champion was memorable.

Mize went through his warm-up and practice routine at the driving range.

This was the first of many differences I noticed in how a touring pro versus an amateur club player approaches a round of golf.

My pre-round routine normally involves hitting a few balls on the range or taking several violent swings with the driver on the first tee. Mize, on the other hand, hit a couple buckets of balls and seemed to hit every shot flush.

Leaving the range, he stopped to hit a few putts on the putting green to get a feel for the speed and then was off to the first tee.

I seized the honor of going first, knowing it was unlikely I'd have the honor again that day. My drive came to rest on the ninth fairway, a position I'm very familiar with. It left me with a wide-open shot to the green and the pin tucked behind the front bunker.

Mize played a beautiful tee shot to the center of the fairway (the number one fairway), leaving himself with about 125 yards to the pin.

My second shot was long, ending up 20 yards past the green and into the rough. Mize played his second shot into the front bunker.

My third swing left me 10 feet above the hole, and two putts later I had my bogey, whereas Mize's bunker shot was 10 feet left of the hole and his putt was dead-center for par.

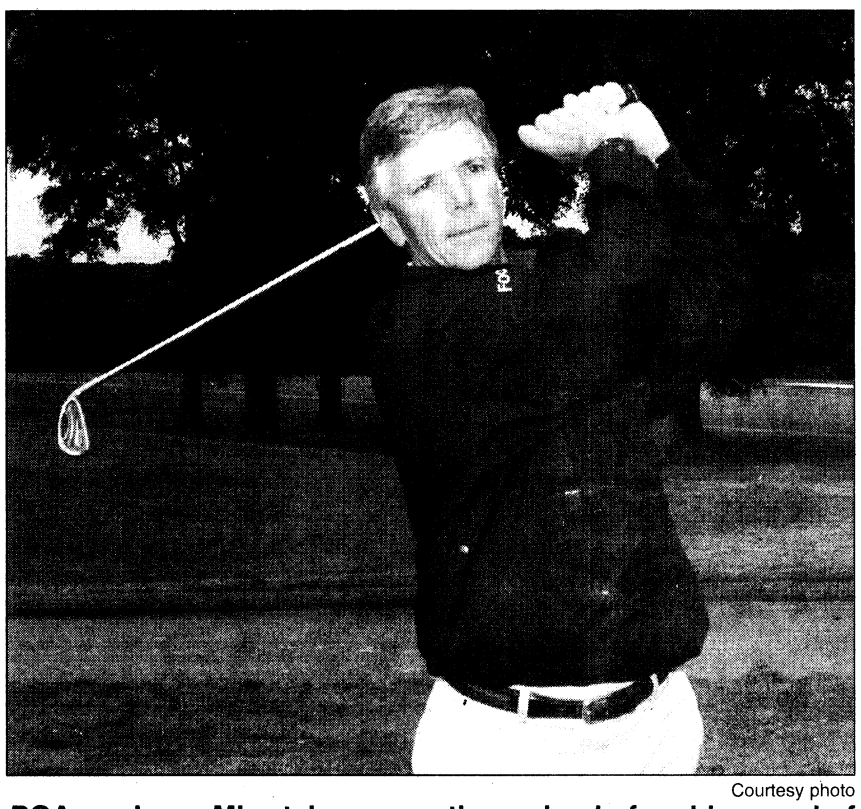
On the par-5 second hole, a good drive, second shot and pitch left me with an uphill 10-footer, which I made, giving me a birdie. It was my first highlight of the game.

Mize's 6-foot birdie attempt narrowly missed on the high side, and his par left us tied after two holes.

I was on cloud nine. So much so that I bogeyed the third hole and was never a factor again.

Mize made easy pars on the third and fourth holes, and made his first birdie on the par-4 fifth, a 10-footer.

This brings to mind another difference I noticed in the touring pro's game versus the amateurs' game; every time Mize lined up his putt for birdie, it was a 10- footer.



Pros face a lot of 10-footers. I face 10-, 20-, 40-, and more from on and off the green. I could be a much better player if I only faced 10-footers.

I concluded my front nine performance with three consecutive bogeys on the seventh, eighth and ninth holes. The bogey on the ninth come off a shanked chip shot from above the green that left me thoroughly embarrassed and deflated.

Mize parred six of the eight holes and closed with a birdie 10-footer on the ninth.

A quick check of the scorecard showed Mize at 2-under par, and me with a painful 4-over-40.

We got a couple bottles of water at the turn. Somewhat refreshed, we headed for the 10th tee.

PGA pro Larry Mize takes a practice swing before his round of golf on the Pineside Course April 25.

Mize's drive on the 10th brought another major difference to light; ball flight. His drives were really high. He can hit low if necessary, but his tee ball stayed in the air for a long time.

My drives range from knee to head high and hang-time is minimal. A good chip from left of the green on the 10th gave me two feet for par, which I made. Mize's 10-foot birdie putt lipped out.

On to 11, which featured my other highlight — a good drive in the middle and a solid 3-wood, which found the green 25 feet to the right of the pin and exactly pin-high. The putt for eagle wasn't bad but never had a chance, coming up two feet short.

Alas, the birdie-4 brought me back to three over for the day, and feeling pretty good.

Mize's routine birdie-4 took him to 3-under for the day, and it was on to hole number 12.

A drive in the fairway left me with a 9-iron in, which I pushed, leaving a 20-footer from the fringe. Two putts later, I had my par-4, and through 12 holes I was 3-over-par and strutting like a pheasant.

Mize's approach from the center of the fairway came to rest 35 feet above the hole and was his only long putt of the day. His birdie putt looked good all the way, ending up two inches right of the cup. His tap-in par sent us to the 13th tee.

Mize missed only his second green of the day on the par-3 13th. His ball come to rest about 30 feet long and left of the green on the slope.

I bunkered my tee shot, and thus began a string of four straight bogeys. Mize's chip left him (you guessed it) 10-feet for par, and the putt was never in doubt.

Mize completed his round with routine pars and a lot of 10-footers (except on 18 where he had an 8-footer from slightly above the hole).

I managed a par on 17, but closed with a bogey on 18 and logged an 80. Mize had a bogey-free 69 in his first trip around the newly renovated Pineside Course. A round that could have been much lower had just a few more of those 10-footers dropped.

Of course, my 80 could also have been much lower had just a few of those 40-footers dropped.

I would be remiss if I didn't mention the rest of the foursome. Rudy Thorne, aspiring pro, made five birdies en route to a 1 under 71, and Leon Dunagan fashioned a relatively mistake-free 77.

Here are some numbers for consumption; Mize missed only two fairways, hit 16 greens in regulation, and took 31 putts (high by his standards).

Mize is thoughtful on the course, but not deliberate. He plays quickly, his swing is beautiful and his tempo is consistent regardless of the shot.

He had some nice things to say about the Pineside Golf Course and offered us insight into his mental approach to the game.

He is a true gentleman and very easy to play with. It was a very relaxing afternoon on the course, and was one round of golf I will never forget.

Modifications against reg

Skill badges pinned to ACU not 'Velcro-ed'

Lori Egan
Bayonet editor

Modifying the new Army Combat Uniform is against regulation and Sgt. Maj. Thomas House wants Soldiers to know it.

House, the Training and Doctrine Command System Manager-Soldier sergeant major, said some Soldiers are buying the ACU locally and modifying it by sewing a piece of Velcro above the U.S. Army tape and attaching pin-on skill badges to a "hard card" to the Velcro.

"In the regulation, the chief of staff of the Army specifically stated that skill badges would be pin-on only," House said, "not attached to Velcro like the name tape, U.S. Army, rank or unit patches and skill tabs.

"Skill badges are to be worn in garrison, if they're worn at all," House said. "When Soldiers deploy, the skill badges don't."

The reason for the modification, House said, is that some Soldiers were concerned about fabric

Pfc. Phillip Morici, left, and Sgt. Brian Young, both with TSM-Soldier, wear the Army Combat Uniform with pin-on skill badges.

Father, daughter make Airborne history

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs Office

One of cadet Glory White's fondest memories of childhood is of playing Army with her dad, Sgt. 1st Class Richard White. They'd camouflage their faces and pelt each other with water balloons. But she never expected she'd one day be sitting next to her dad wearing camouflage and waiting to jump out of a C-17 aircraft.

The petite 19 year old and her dad are the first father and daughter to go through Airborne school together, as far as anyone knows.

When Richard heard his daughter, an ROTC student at Georgia Southern University, had received an Airborne School slot, he made some calls, managing to get in the same class with her.

Richard recalled the reaction when Glory announced she was getting her wings.

"When some of the family found out, they said, 'why would you want to jump out of a perfectly good airplane?' Then they found out I was going too, and it really blew their minds!"

The White family has a long history in the military, with Glory becoming the fourth generation to serve. Besides following in the footsteps of grandparents, great grandparents and uncles, her mother, Barbara, served in the Marine Corps.

After 12 years in the service, Richard runs Fort

Awareness key to security

Following the terrorist attacks in London July 7, the Department of Homeland Security raised the threat level from code yellow, elevated, to code orange, high, for regional and intercity mass transportation systems in the United States.

Matthew Bonham, with Directorate of Intelligence and Security, said anyone on this installation could potentially see something that could prevent a possible attack.

"We're trying to prevent something like what happened in London, Madrid or on 9-11 from happening again," Bonham said.

"Terrorists like to conduct surveillance," he said. "They solicit information from individuals about the population of different activities, how many vehicles come through the gates, about deployments and redeployments and things of that nature."

"While military might and the full resources of the federal government do indeed make us stronger and safer," said former DHS secretary Tom Ridge, "overcoming terrorism requires something far greater."

"To defeat an enemy that lurks in the shadows and seeks relentlessly for some small crack through which to slip their evil designs — such a victory requires the diligence of every American, the diligent preparation of every community and the collective will of our entire nation," he said.

Activity or situations that could be potentially harmful and should be reported to the Evacuees get jump on Hurricane Dennis

Fort Benning houses hundreds

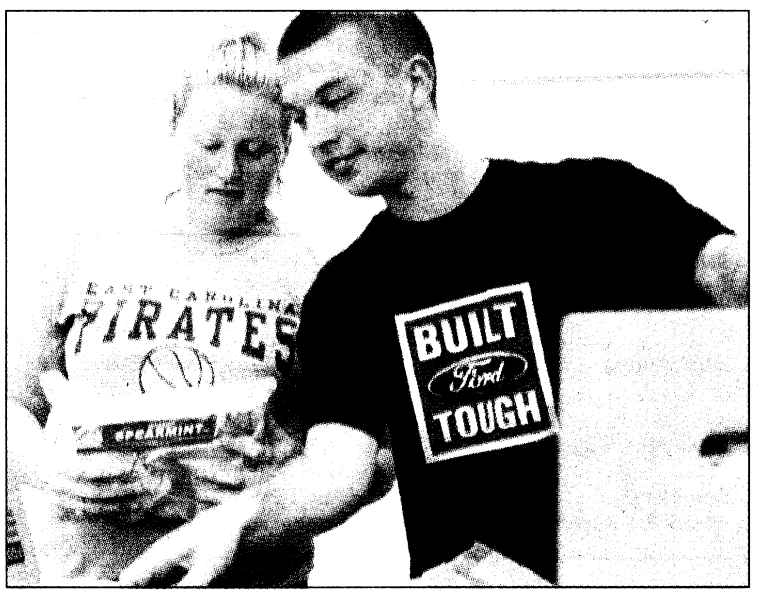
When the winds kicked up and the rain started to fall, many Soldiers and Airmen thought, "not again."

Less than a year after Hurricane Ivan pounded the Florida panhandle and Alabama coast, Hurricane Dennis loomed off shore, forcing the evacuation of Eglin Air Force Base for the second time in 12 months.



When Pfc. Brandon Robinson and Airman 1st Class Shawna Robinson heard news of the evacuation they knew leaving wouldn't be easy.

Shawna is due to deliver the couple's first baby July 17, so not only did they have pack their things, they needed to pack the baby's things — just in case he decided to make an early arrival.

"My chain of command has been really supportive with my wife being in the Air Force and pregnant," said Brandon with 6th Ranger Training Battalion. "It would be cool if she went into labor here because we would have a good story to tell … 'We were here for a hurricane and you popped out.'

"Everyone keeps asking us if we would name him Dennis, but we already have a name picked out,

ARMY FAMILY LEGACIES

Following my father's footsteps

"Fathers, be good to your daughters, daughters will love like you do."
– Daughters, by John Mayer

I had a mission. Write something about fathers and daughters. Easy, I thought. I'm a daughter and I have a father.

But before I could put pen to paper or fingers to keyboard, I ended up reading not one, but two disturbing stories that really made me all the more thankful for the relationship I have with my dad.

Last weekend, I surfed onto the first story about a mother who is trying to find the unmarked graves of her two children. Their graves are somewhere along Interstate 80 between Pennsylvania and Iowa. On July 4, 2003, her ex-husband shot and killed his teenage son and daughter. After describing the site where he buried them, the father committed suicide. His description wasn't specific enough for authorities to be able to find the bodies and return them to their mother for burial.

Last week, the mother searched by helicopter and by car in an attempt to find closure. I can't even begin to imagine her pain.

I'm fully confident my father would lay down his life to save mine, not use me as a human shield. That's the story I read in the newspaper on Monday, and it didn't have a happy ending either.

The father started shooting at the police, and in the ensuing gunfight, the toddler was killed. At this point they don't know who fired the bullet that killed her, but there's a chance it was her father's. Either way, her father's actions caused her tragic death, and again, I can't even begin to comprehend it.

My dad's not perfect. No dad is. But my dad did, and still does, a bang-up job of being there when I need him.

And, to honor him, I try to be the best person I can be and validate his work in my life. I like to think I paid him the best compliment I could by choosing to follow in his footsteps and "go Army."

He taught me how to shine boots, so mine wouldn't look as if I used chocolate bars on them. He suggested that the best foreign language to learn was one that didn't require you to learn a new alphabet, and dragged me out of bed to run, even when I knew running wasn't his favorite thing to do.

And then came Airborne School in a miserably hot July 1988. Still on active duty, Dad tried and tried and tried to get permission to make my first jump with me, without any luck. Master Parachutist wings aside, he was close to 50 and the Army decided it probably wouldn't be the best thing to do.

So he encouraged me to remember to keep my feet and knees together and watch out for obstacles on the drop zone — the scar on his elbow is a souvenir of landing on a truck in the middle of the night in Panama.

He was there on the drop zone when I made my last jump and pinned on the same set of wings he had received in 1963. I'm not sure which one of us was more proud.

Later that night, I told him the story of what had happened while I was sitting in the pack shed waiting for that jump.

A captain across the aisle had seen Dad walk in with his master wings pinned to the top of his BDU cap above his rank, something done by Airborne instructors and probably done by everyone in Dad's jumping days.

The captain looked at me and told me Dad was out of uniform and that I needed to set him straight.

I looked the captain in the eye and said, "Sir, if you think my dad's out of uniform, you're going to have to tell him yourself."

I guess it's not often a daughter gets to stick up for her father, but that day, it sure felt good.

Do you have a table for 16, right now?

Lori Egan
Bayonet editor

Because of the hullabaloo my last restaurant review caused, let me be clear — this is not a restaurant review. This is about customer service.

Spending time in the kitchen isn't my idea of a good time — I'd rather spend money in a restaurant where I know the food won't be burnt, the fire department won't be called and my daughter won't complain about the food or cleaning the kitchen. We eat out a lot.

And last Thursday was no exception. The Bayonet had a farewell dinner for Spc. Nikki St. Amant, who picked the restaurant. She chose a Columbus eatery known for its rustic interior and selection of microbeer.

Early afternoon we called the warning order in: eight at 7 p.m. Before 5 p.m. we issued the frago: 16 at 7 p.m. Both times, the restaurant's response was, "We can accommodate your party. Shouldn't be a problem."

I got there early (6:20 p.m.) to scout the area and be sure everything was set. The hostess said a table would be ready in 15 to 20 minutes and to have a seat.

A co-worker checked with the hostess at 7 p.m. The hostess had no idea we were there, that we were expecting a table for 16 at 7 p.m., and, oh by the way, the restaurant doesn't take reservations, except for private parties.

What were we? What is a private party? This restaurant doesn't have "family-style" seating so each table is "private." We've had plenty of office functions there before — tables put together provide the necessary seating. Then the hostess told us that the room upstairs, where the pool table used to be, was occupied by a reservation for 30.

We talked to the manager, who said the restaurant doesn't take reservations, he didn't get word from the day manager to expect 16 at 7 p.m., and what did we expect — him to kick people out so that we could be seated?

Nope, that wasn't our expectation. Clearer communication was the expectation: "We don't take reservations" should have been the first thing communicated, not, "We can accommodate your party." (You know what happens when one assumes anything.) Another expectation we had was that at 6:20 p.m. the hostess listened when I said we had reservations for 16 at 7 p.m.

We took our party of 16 across the street to a restaurant known for its eggplant parmesan. We were seated without comment, and the staff was willing to make a special plate that included three of the house pastas. Now, that's service — and a place I'll eat at again.

I've been pleased with the customer service at my apartment complex. Because when one of my ancient appliances breaks, which is often, maintenance is usually there to fix it within the hour.

So when I opened my freezer and found water instead of ice cubes, I called maintenance.

The office was closed, and I left a message to notify management I had a problem, rather than the other option, notify management of an emergency. Granted my thawing food is important, but I didn't think my sausage links carried emergency status.

Finally, I heard my doorbell ring and opened the door to a police officer. My thought was, the cops are going to fix my fridge?

He asked if I had a noise complaint, and after I explained, he said I had pushed the wrong button on the automated system, which apparently happens often enough that he's responded for a broken fridge before.

I couldn't offer an emergency or a noise complaint, but he chatted pleasantly, then checked the refrigerator and the fuses before saying, "yeah, it's broken."

It must be exasperating for an officer to show up expecting one thing and find that he's come to protect and serve my frozen goods. I appreciated the officer's pleasant attitude and helpfulness, even though I still had to throw out my sausage links.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

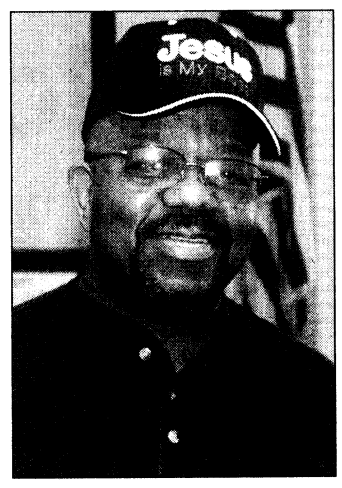
A little work makes big difference in home

Several months ago, there was a story with pictures in the Bayonet about home makeovers. That is why I am writing.

My husband and I were stationed at Fort Benning almost one year ago. I had heard so much positive information about the post prior to our arrival. When we first went to look at where we would be living I was surprised. I knew it would take some of our own money and hard work to make our home look nice.

Our home is very unique, and no other house on post looks quite like ours. I would like to share with others a picture of what can be done to military housing with a little money, time and effort.

I hope this will in some way make others take an interest in where they live on post. So many do not care, but I feel in our neighborhood we have made a difference.



Many prefer to not live on post, but by seeing the difference we have made, maybe we can change some minds. It is my understanding that generals on post would like to see Fort Benning housing cleaned up and improved. I am sure they would appreciate knowing that someone else cares.

Our community is important to us.

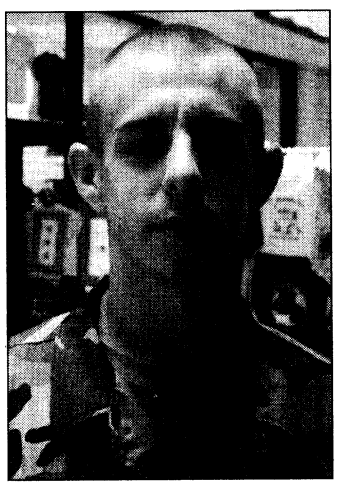
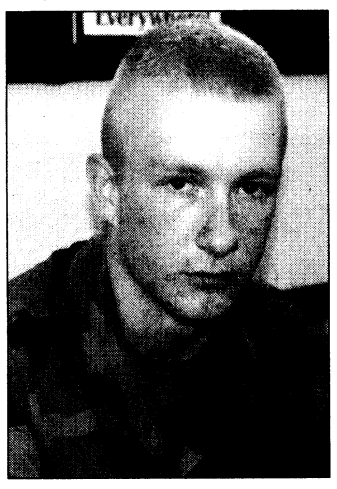
VARIOUS VOICES



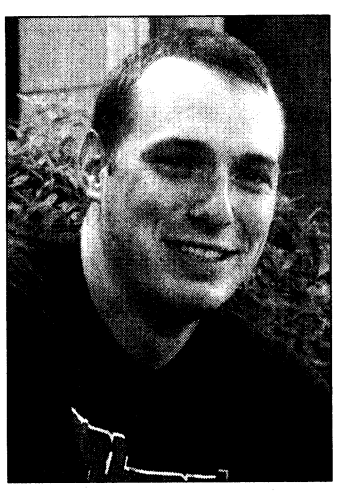
Is anyone else in your family in the military?

Retired Sgt. 1st Class, the Rev. Marvin Jones Sr., Columbus — "I was the first one to join the Army, but my son and daughter both followed in my tradition, as did five of my nephews. I was a recruiter so I was always telling them they should join. I'm so proud they did. They made a good decision."

Capt. Catrina Burks, 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment — "My mom served 23 years in the Coast Guard and my dad served 14 years in the Air Force. They definitely influenced my decision to join. My mom especially had so much pride, love and passion for the military, and it trickled down to me."



Pvt. Jeremy Brightbill, 30th AG Battalion— "My brother and I both joined the Army at the same time, and we both went Infantry. My family was really proud and supportive when we decided to join."



Spc. Joseph Carroll, 29th Infantry Regiment — "My father and both grandfathers were in the military. I think everyone should do at least two years public service to encourage good citizenship."

Retired Sgt. Alejandro Matos, Phenix City — "I am the only one in my family to have joined and I decided to join so I could get money for college. I also wanted to serve my country."

Pvt. Justin Alsman, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment— "My dad and grandfather both served 20 years in the Navy, so I grew up around the military. They weren't too happy when I decided to go Army, but I wanted more action. I didn't want to be out on a boat."

Pfc. Raymond Myers, CONUS Replacement Center — "No one else in my family has been in the military. I joined initially because I wanted to do something different. I think the military teaches responsibility."

Although the Army started fielding the ACU in April to deploying units, some Soldiers are going downtown to buy it.

75th Rangers change hands

New leader no stranger to Fort Benning

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

During a change of command ceremony held July 8th at York Field, Col. Craig Nixon relinquished command of the 75th Ranger Regiment to Col. Paul LaCamera.

Lt. Gen. Philip R. Kensinger Jr., commander of the U.S. Army Special Operations Command, praised the direction Nixon exhibited during his leadership of the regiment.

"Colonel Nixon's experience, vision and leadership, combined with his unquestionable devotion to these Rangers and their families contributed immeasurably to the success of the regiment, and ensured their relevancy well into the future," Kensinger said.

Kensinger said Rangers were among the first to arrive in Afghanistan and Iraq, and have been involved in every major operation involving the Global War on Terrorism.

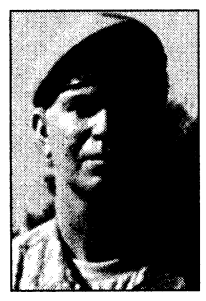
Nixon thanked the Soldiers who fought in Afghanistan on 10,000-foot mountains in 2 feet of snow and in the 130 degree heat of Iraq.

"They are a remarkable group of men in an historic period and I could not be prouder of them, or for them," he said.

Nixon said the GWOT is going to be long term and believes the outcome will be shaped largely by the actions of the next few years.

Donna Hyatt

Col. Paul LaCamera hands the 75th Ranger Regimental colors to retired Col. Ralph Puckett, honorary colonel of the regiment, during the change of command ceremony July 8.



"The Rangers understand this and understand the stakes and they're committed to the cause," he said.

"The bottom line is there are groups of people who want to kill us and our families, and they want to change our way of life," Nixon said.

He commended Ranger families for the support they provide for their Soldiers.

"The price of the Global War on Terrorism to the Ranger Regiment has been high.

"We will never forget our fallen comrades and we will never forget their families," he said.

New commander takes OCS guidon

Also accepts increased mission

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Lt. Col. Brad Booth relinquished command of the 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment to Lt. Col. Curt Carson Wednesday on York Field.

"We say farewell to an outstanding commander who has taken a great program and made it better," said Col. James Klingaman, 11th Regiment commander. "In the wake of 9-11 and Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom, (Booth) has worked hard to make the OCS program relevant and useful in war."

To do that, Klingaman said Booth "got the candidates out of the classroom and into the field."

"He has had a positive impact on the battalion and the battalion has had a positive impact on the Army," Klingaman said. Each year, the OCS commissions more than 1,200 second lieutenants in all 16 of the Army's basic branches.

Klingaman thanked Booth's wife, Karen, for her support of the battalion and welcomed the Carson family to the OCS and the regiment.

Noting that the battalions mission will increase next year to commissioning 1,625 new officers, Klingaman said he was counting on Carson and his team to meet the challenge.

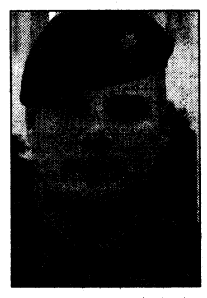
Lt. Col. Curt Carson, left, accepts the colors from Col. James Klingaman, 11th Regiment commander

"When you look up the definition of the Army family in the dictionary, you see a picture of Fort Benning," Booth said, giving his thanks to his mentors, peers and subordinates and special guests.

"The Army is about people," Booth said. "The profession of arms is what I love."



Booth paid tribute to the "hundreds of thousands" of OCS alumni who have served the country and had an impact on the nation's security.

"To the candidates and cadre — their history is being written today and their legacy will be recorded with regards to their leadership of our Soldiers today and the Soldiers tomorrow," Booth said. The 370 candidates on the parade field, he said, represented a snapshot of the OCS — 370 future second lieutenants who will lead platoons by year's end, and lead companies within 60 months.

Carson

Booth leaves for Germany, where he will serve in a joint assignment.

Booth

Carson said he was excited by the opportunity to command "a unit with such a tremendous charter."

"The mission of producing second lieutenants for our Army is absolutely critical," he said. "I will not take this mission lightly."

Lt. Col. Gary Spry handed the CONUS Replacement Center's guidon to Lt. Col. Dori Hash in a ceremony Monday in Infantry Hall.

The CRC's mission is to process non-unit specific personnel for deployment overseas and has been active on Fort Benning for the past 10 years.

"Most people don't know what the CRC is," said Garrison Commander Col. Rick Riera.

In addition to the mission of processing deploying and redeploying Soldiers, he said Spry and his unit took on additional missions like refresher training for Infantry Soldiers in the Individual Ready Reserve and commanding the medical hold unit.

Riera said the CRC processed 1,100 wounded, injured and sick Soldiers through "one tough system." During Spry's command, more than 26,000 Soldiers deployed through the CRC.

"We are clearly a nation at war and no one knows that more than the Soldiers standing here," Riera said. "They sent two hundred to theater weekly. We are a joint expeditionary force and no one understands that more than the Soldiers of the CRC."

Riera joked that although the CRC has many customers, none of them are happy.

"But the CRC is an absolutely necessary evil for Soldiers on their way to a critical mission," he said.

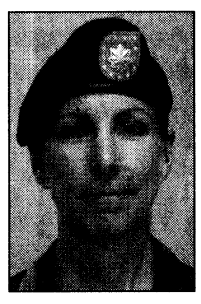
"Colonel Spry has done (the CRC mission) ably," Riera said, "and the CRC does what it does — best."

Riera said the CRC's incoming commander, Hash, has excellent qualifications, experience and credentials for the job.

The CRC moves from the Fort Benning garrison to the 29th Infantry Regiment this week, Riera said, and the Army's Human Resources Command wants Fort Benning to become a "super CRC" by January 2006, processing more than 600 Soldiers weekly.

"Dori, you have your challenge ahead of you," he said.

Spry, who leaves Fort Benning for the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., bid farewell to the Soldiers and civilians of the CRC.



"Colonel Riera, thank you for the authority to command this battalion the way I wanted," Spry said. "You challenged me to new levels — levels I did not know I could reach, but did, with the great Soldiers and civilians of the CRC.

Spry acknowledged the outside help they received from Fort Benning agencies that supported the CRC, without which, he said, the unit would not have been able to get their missions accomplished.

Spry had special thanks for his wife and children for their support, and thanks for the educators in the Fort Benning schools for giving his children "a great education."

Spry

Hash

"To the CRC Soldiers and civilians of the past and present — you do great service to our nation every day," he said. "A portion of the results of your mission are briefed to the National Command Authority every day. You have improved our reputation on Fort Benning. That is your success.

"You have made Fort Benning successful. You did it and all credit goes to you," Spry said. "Now, put your full support behind Lieutenant Colonel Hash. She's a first-rate officer and she'll do well. The CRC is in very capable hands."

Hash comes to the CRC from Korea, where she served as the executive officer for the 19th Theater Support Command.

"I am humbled and honored," Hash said, "and I look forward to the many challenges that lie ahead. The front line starts here."

Melissa House

Lt. Col. Dori Hash, incoming CONUS Replacement Center commander, left, accepts the CRC guidon from Col. Rick Riera, garrison commander during the change of command ceremony Monday at Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall. More than 26,000 Soldiers deployed through CRC during Spry's command. Installation commanders want to make a "super CRC" at Fort Benning, which would be able to process more than 600 Soldiers weekly.

5th Ranger Battalion changes leadership

David Dismukes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

CAMP MERRILL – DAHLONEGA, Ga. — After training 3,324 U.S. Army Rangers, during the mountain phase of Ranger training, Lt. Col. Douglas L. Flohr passed the reins of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion to Lt. Col. Michael D. Pemrick during a change of command ceremony Tuesday.

"Flohr has transformed Soldiers into Rangers; more than 3,200 combat leaders who know, when they meet the enemy, they will kill them, and will not have to fight them another day," said Col. K.K. Chinn, Ranger Training Brigade commander.

During the mountain phase, students receive instruction on military mountaineering tasks as well as techniques for employing a squad and platoon for continuous combat patrol operations in a mountainous environment.

"The cadre and support personnel have combined together to produce a unique weapon, the American Ranger, the finest combat leader in the free world. In the past two years we've produced 3,324. I'm extremely proud of that number. It stands alone and is our legacy," Flohr said.

Soldiers who complete Ranger training will most likely see combat, and training to exact standards under the most realistic conditions possible is critical, Chinn said.

"Lieutenant Colonel Flohr sets the standards, makes sure Soldiers are trained to standard and sets them up for success, and that's so important here at Ranger School, because every one of these guys are going to combat.

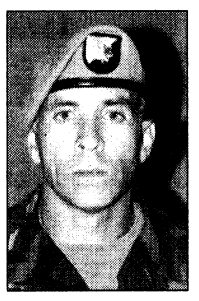
"(Flohr is) a dynamic and incredible warrior, whose fresh thinking, creativity, ingenuity and vision in creating the most realistic, rigorous combat focused training scenarios that integrate mountaineering has made a difference in Ranger history and this Global War on Terrorism.

"You've produced the most lethal weapon we have in the U.S. Army, the American Ranger, and a national treasure for our nation," Chinn said.

David Dismukes

Col. K.K. Chinn, Ranger Training Brigade commander, left, hands the 5th RTB guidon to Lt. Col. Michael Pemrick, incoming commander, during the change of command ceremony at Dahlonega Tuesday.

Flohr has been a great teacher and has encouraged everyone to do better always with the purpose of making the battalion the best it can be, Chinn said.



The cadre includes another example of Flohr's focus on excellence as Staff Sgt. Andrew Bullock from A Company, 5th Ranger Training Battalion, was named the 2004 NCO of the Year for the U.S. Army in September.

Flohr thanked his wife Christina of 25 years for her role in the command.

"We don't thank our wives enough. We'd be lesser men without them."

"(Christina) lived the Ranger wife's creed, 'I'm no ordinary wife, I'm a Ranger wife', she's been an excellent role model and an example for all," Chinn said.

"Today's Rangers are combating terrorism worldwide," Chinn said. "Ranger graduates are doing this because our motto is 'Rangers Lead the Way' and this battalion lives that motto. You're getting a very dedicated, committed warrior (in Pemrick) who will take you to new heights."

Combatives combines best moves

Soldiers learn hand-to-hand techniques

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, holds quarterly combatives events. More than 150 Soldiers are learning modern combatives beyond the basic level. All Soldiers, male and female, are encouraged to improve their hand-to-hand combat skills.

Starting on the bottom in order to control a situation seems like an odd concept, but in modern combatives training, that's exactly where a Soldier wants to be.

"In modern combatives, being on the bottom can be the dominant position because a person can see everything," said Master Sgt. John Miller, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

"With multiple opponents the one on top is vulnerable because they can't see behind themselves and could get choked, or worse," he said.

The term "combatives" is more than physical fighting skills. Like all martial arts, it refers to the ability of a Soldier to control a situation and himself through threat assessment, fear management and increased personal awareness.

Combining the best of several different forms of martial arts, modern combatives started in 1995 when Lt. Col. Stan McChrystal, commander of the 2nd Ranger Battalion, ordered a review of martial arts training within the battalion.

"The long-range goal was to find a method to easily teach Soldiers basic martial art techniques," said Matt Larson, former NCOIC of combatives training for the 2nd Ranger Battalion, commandant of the U.S. Army Combatives School and a black belt in several forms of martial arts.

After looking at several different self-defense systems from around the world, Larson said the Soldiers of the 2nd Ranger Battalion settled on a program with Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu, which focuses on ground grappling as the technical base. Judo, wrestling, boxing and kickboxing techniques were incorporated as well.

"This is really a grassroots program," Larson said. "I was a squad leader and trained my Soldiers in these techniques. We whipped the platoon. So we trained the platoon and whipped the company. Then we trained the company and whipped the battalion."

As Rangers redeployed to new commands, they took the modern combatives system with them and taught others.

It was (then) Col. Michael Ferriter, commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment, who successfully integrated modern combatives into the program of instruction for Officer Candidate School, the Infantry Officer Basic Course and the Infantry Captains Career Course in 2000.

Larson stayed behind and wrote the combatives field manual, FM 3-25.150, which was accepted as doctrine in January 2002.
Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, Fort Benning commanding general, thought the program was so important he took it straight to the Army chief of staff, who issued a directive for every Soldier to receive combatives training, Larson said.

"I think it's essential for Soldiers to know more about fighting than just how to shoot, but also how to handle themselves in close combat," Col. Richard C. Townes, commander of the 29th Inf. Regt., said. "I'm quite impressed and highly excited about the program, and can't wait to get involved with it myself."

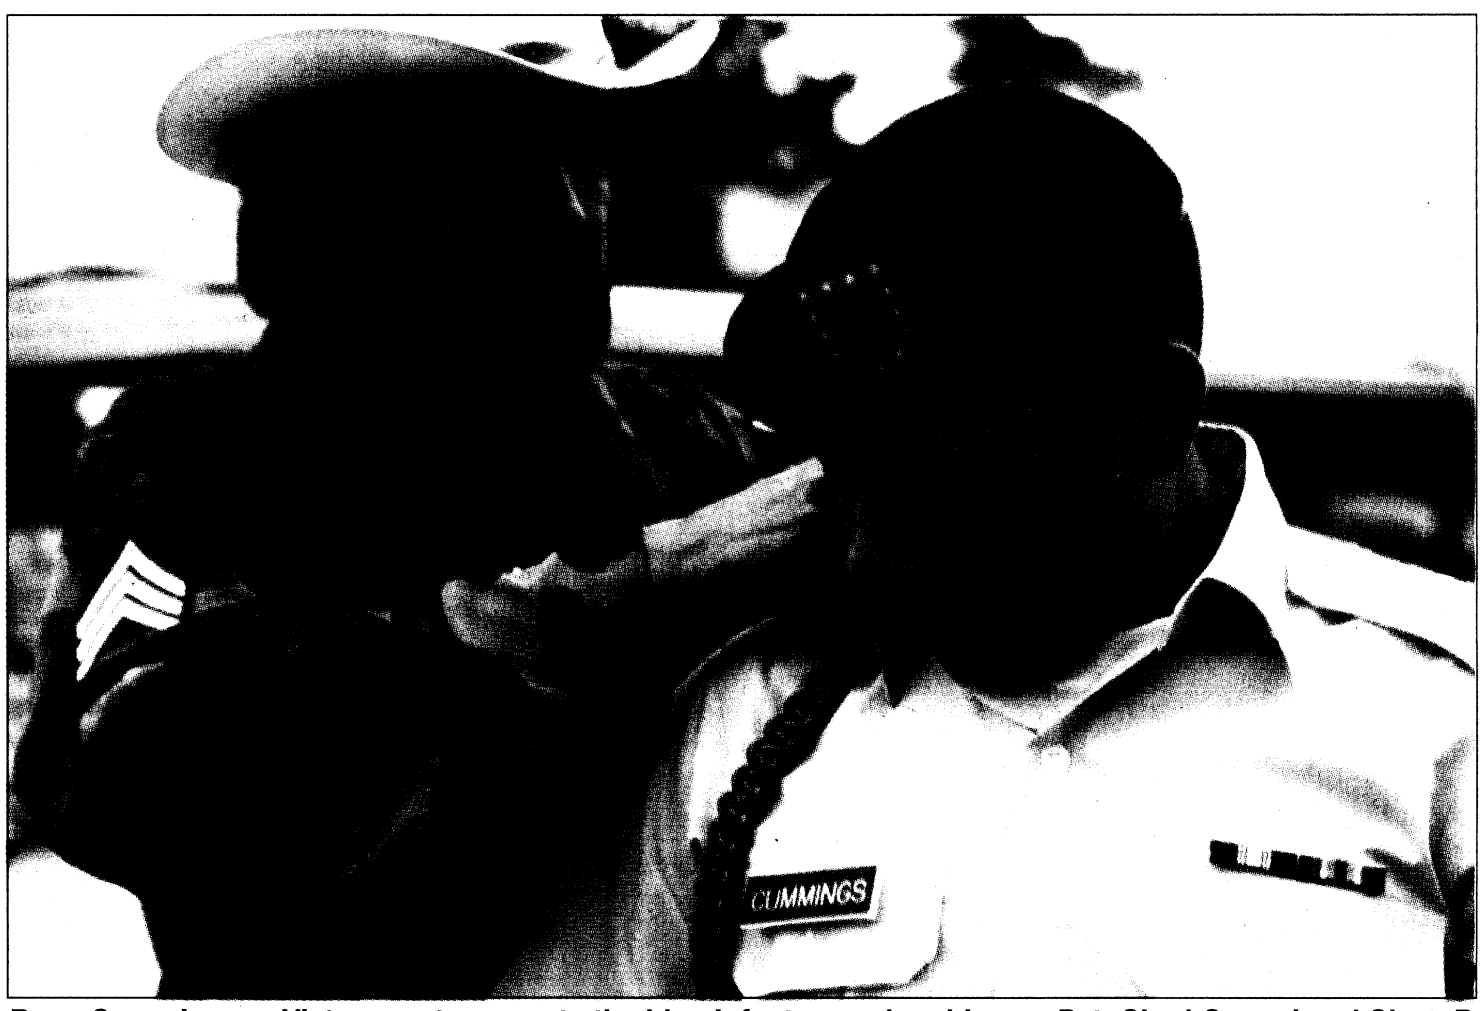
Soldiers turn blue, graduate



Photos by Tawny Archibald Campbell

Cadre and Soldiers from B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, participate in a demonstration for family and friends during the company's graduation July 8 at Kanell Field. The demonstration gave family and friends a look at what the Soldiers have learned over the past 14 weeks of training.

Staff Sgt. Anthony Rink shakes the hands of Soldiers in his platoon during the company's Turning Blue Ceremony July 7.

Boss Cummings, a Vietnam veteran, puts the blue Infantry cord on his son Pvt. Chad Cummings' Class B uniform during the Turning Blue Ceremony July 7.

Pvts. Brad Roberts, Matt Sampson and Anthony Spina wait for the signal to tear down their mortar system during a graduation demonstration at Kanell Field.

Week 14 at the Infantry Training Brigade is the final week of training. Soldiers spend the first part of the week cleaning weapons and recovering from their field training exercise. They also receive a final inspection and are tested on their military knowledge. The last part of the week is all about drill and ceremony. Thursday morning is dedicated to rehearsal and preparation for Turning Blue and graduation. The Turning Blue Ceremony is when Soldiers receive their blue Infantry cord, allowed a family day pass and receive their written orders for their permanent duty station or further military training. Friday is the company's graduation.

Editor's note: The Bayonet's Tawny Archibald Campbell has followed the Soldiers from B Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, through 14 weeks of training, offering readers a look at training for new Soldiers at the Infantry Training Brigade. This is the final installment in the series.

Family: Goes Airborne together

Stewart's DENTAC clinic. His daughter will follow his footsteps into a medical career.

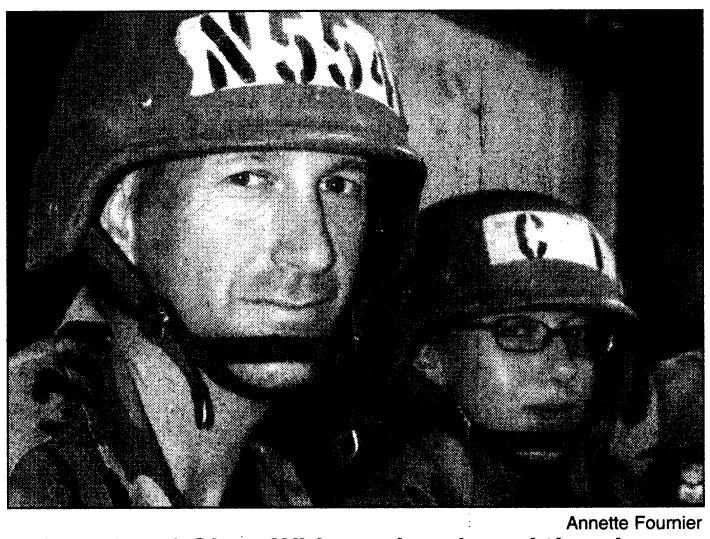
She originally joined the Reserves as a high school senior for the college money, going to boot camp the summer between her junior and senior year. But when offered a nursing scholarship, she jumped at the idea, transferring her Reserve commitment to ROTC.

"They're both high-achievers who push themselves hard," Barbara said. "I think maybe there's a little competition there."

Barbara said that her NCO husband recently applied to attend a course, at the end of which he'd become an officer.

"I tease him and say that with her being in ROTC, he just couldn't stand the idea of saluting his daughter."

But there was more camaraderie than competition Monday as they helped each other put on their parachutes, preparing for their first jump.



"It's been wonderful having my dad here with me," Glory said. "It also adds a little pressure, because I know I can't quit or fall out on the runs."

"It's a tough school, no doubt," Richard said. "But actually, for me it's been like a vacation doing something different."

Their first jump was scheduled Monday, Richard's 44th birthday, but the jump was delayed until Tuesday by weather conditions. Glory has ribbed her dad about keeping up as one of the older students, but he's doing well, she said.

"He never slows down! I'm 19 and I'm having a hard time with all the running. He just keeps going."

Glory is no slacker herself when it comes to physical fitness. In her ROTC program, she received the Iron Eagle Award for earning a perfect score on her PT test three times in a row, and she had the highest PT score in her basic training program.

Annette Fournier

Richard and Glory White wait to board the plane.

Academic success runs in the family as well.

Glory just finished her freshman year with straight As and was awarded an additional ROTC honors scholarship. Richard recently finished his bachelors with a 4.0 GPA.

"I'm so proud of both of them," Barbara said. "They work hard to get what they want. They're cut from the same cloth on that," Barbara said.

In a family with high standards, pushing themselves in training has brought dad and daughter closer, both said.

"This experience has just re-emphasized to me how strong Glory is," Richard said. "She's not a quitter. She sets a goal, accomplishes it. I'm very proud of my little girl."

Security: Look out for odd things

MPs include:

- Packages, luggage , boxes, briefcases or backpacks left unattended.
- Someone with an unusual interest in security procedures, government vehicles, uniforms or badges.
- People who do not appear to belong in the work place or local vicinity.
- Individuals taking notes, making sketches, pacing distances or taking pictures in unauthorized places or in a suspicious manner.
- Strangers or vehicles appearing to circle an area, or seen in the same location on multiple occasions.
- Any vehicle parked for an extended time in an unusual location.
- Emergency vehicles in disrepair, privately owned or parked in a suspicious area.
- Anonymous telephone or e-mail threats to Soldiers or civilians.
- Someone stockpiling suspicious materials or containers.
- Anyone treated for chemical burns or missing hands or fingers.
- Obvious signs of tampering with security barriers, and unauthorized entry or break-in at a building or facility.
- Any extremist or terrorist literature, training manuals or "how-to" materials found anywhere.

"People should trust their instincts and common sense when anything suspicious occurs," Bonham said. "Don't try to investigate suspicious activity by yourself. If you can see it, report it. Call the MPs."

Evacuees: Arrive at Benning, post ready for storm

Tyler Scott."

Most service members could travel anywhere within a 550 mile radius, with Robins Air Force Base and Fort Benning being the designated evacuation military installations.

However, the Rangers from 6th RTB were required to evacuate to Fort Benning, so this is where the Robinson family came.

Fort Benning and hurricanes are becoming synonymous for Brandon and Shawna.

Last year, Brandon was in Airborne School when Hurricane Ivan threatened the coast, so his class sped up the jumps to graduate before the storm hit.

Shawna was stationed at Eglin and evacuated to Fort Benning just in time to catch Brandon's graduation and pin his airborne wings on him.

This year the two evacuated together, and even though Brandon wouldn't mind returning to Florida as a family of three, Shawna would rather wait to deliver.

"I'd rather have the baby back at home where I don't have to make the long drive with a newborn," she said.

"But, there's no complaining. It's just nice to have a place to go where people will take care of you, and we are getting that from both branches of the military."

Brandon said he's very proud of his wife for how well she is taking the evacuation, given the circumstances.

"It's stressful but she is a trooper," Brandon said. "She hasn't whined about anything and has taken it all like a real Soldier."

The hurricane evacuation command center, located in Infantry Hall, is set up to deal with all kinds of situations, including medical, and is manned by both Army and Air Force personnel.

"We are expecting about 500 people to evacuate here," said Lt. Col. Al Lugo, Emergency Crisis Center commander. "But we are prepared for upward of 5,000 people."

A total of 533 people signed in at the hurricane command center, most were Rangers and their families.

Tech. Sgt. Pamela King-Hasberry and Staff Sgt. Tonya Posey arrived on July 8 and manned the Air Force table at the command center.

"We inprocess (the Airmen) and take down their information," King-Hasberry said. "We are here to be the Air Force liaisons."

When Soldiers and Airmen arrived, they were given information on religious, financial and medical issues, assisted with the care of any pets, offered free bowling and movie passes, given kits that included maps and basic information about Fort Benning, offered hygiene kits and assigned to a shelter.

Posey said the evacuation process went very smoothly. People were notified of the evacuation by noon July 8 and were required to be in a shelter by Saturday.

"This time when we came up here everything was already set up for us," King-Hasberry said.

"We feel confident coming to Fort Benning because we know everything will be taken care of here."

The evacuees were given the OK to travel home Tuesday with a few people leaving Wednesday.

Jeff Shuck, chief of installation plans and operations, said the biggest difference between the hurricane this year and the one last year was the amount of warning.

The early warning time allowed both Fort Benning and Eglin Air Force Base more time to get organized.

"As a whole, we remember quite well what happened last year," Shuck said.

"We got the warning and evacuation order ahead of time and that made a big difference."

COMMUNITY

Making its one and only Olympic debut, the Plunge for Distance aquatic event was introduced at the 1904 St. Louis games. Competitors made a standing dive into a swimming pool, and the depth of their dive was then measured. The United States won all medals, and the event was deep-sixed into obscurity.

Middle school adopts new dress code

Focus on academics, safety

Lori Egan
Bayonet editor

The annual back to school fashion parade won't be the same this year at Faith Middle School — the school is introducing a standardized dress code.

This means no denim jeans, skirts, dresses, shorts, overalls, shirts, etc. And all shirts must have collars and be tucked in.

The administration is putting the emphasis on academics and safety instead of dress code infractions, said Dr. Julio Gonzalez, school principal.

During the 2004-2005 school year, there were 225 dress code infractions, he said, mostly "sagging" and "midriff" violations.

Sagging is when oversized pants hang well below the hip bones and midriff violations occur when shirts aren't long enough to tuck into pants.

It is easy to conceal weapons in baggy clothing, and tucking shirts into pants helps to eliminate the possibility of concealed weapons, Gonzalez said, after showing a video where a teen dressed in jeans and an untucked shirt unpacked an arsenal, including a rifle and several pistols from his clothing.

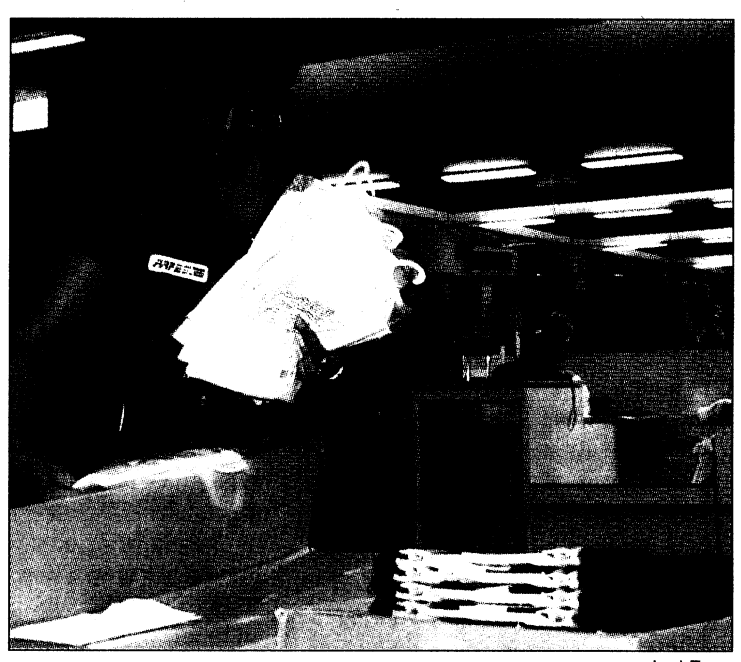
"Concealed weapons are not a problem at Fort Benning," Gonzalez said. "But the safety of our children is very important to us."

The standardized dress code isn't a uniform per se because flexibility has been built in to the new policy, Gonzalez said. Although there are shirt color recommendations by grade, any solid color shirt (with a collar) is acceptable.

The recommended color for the sixth grade is hunter green, blue for the seventh grade and red for the eighth grade.

Pants or shorts need to fit and remain above the hips. Walking shorts or skorts need to have a 7- to 9-inch inseam and should be no shorter than three to four inches above the knee.

Recommended pants are chino, khaki, Docker or any style dress slacks with belt loops. Belts must be worn and visible when loops are present.



The recommended solid colors for pants, shorts or skirts is navy, khaki and black.

The standardized dress code policy was printed in a brochure and sent home with students the last day of school, Gonzalez said. But parents will also receive the information in the mail.

A survey was sent home to parents in April, and Gonzalez said most of the parents who responded to the survey are in favor of a dress code.

CYS fees to increase Aug. 1

Money used for salary, equipment and uniform costs

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

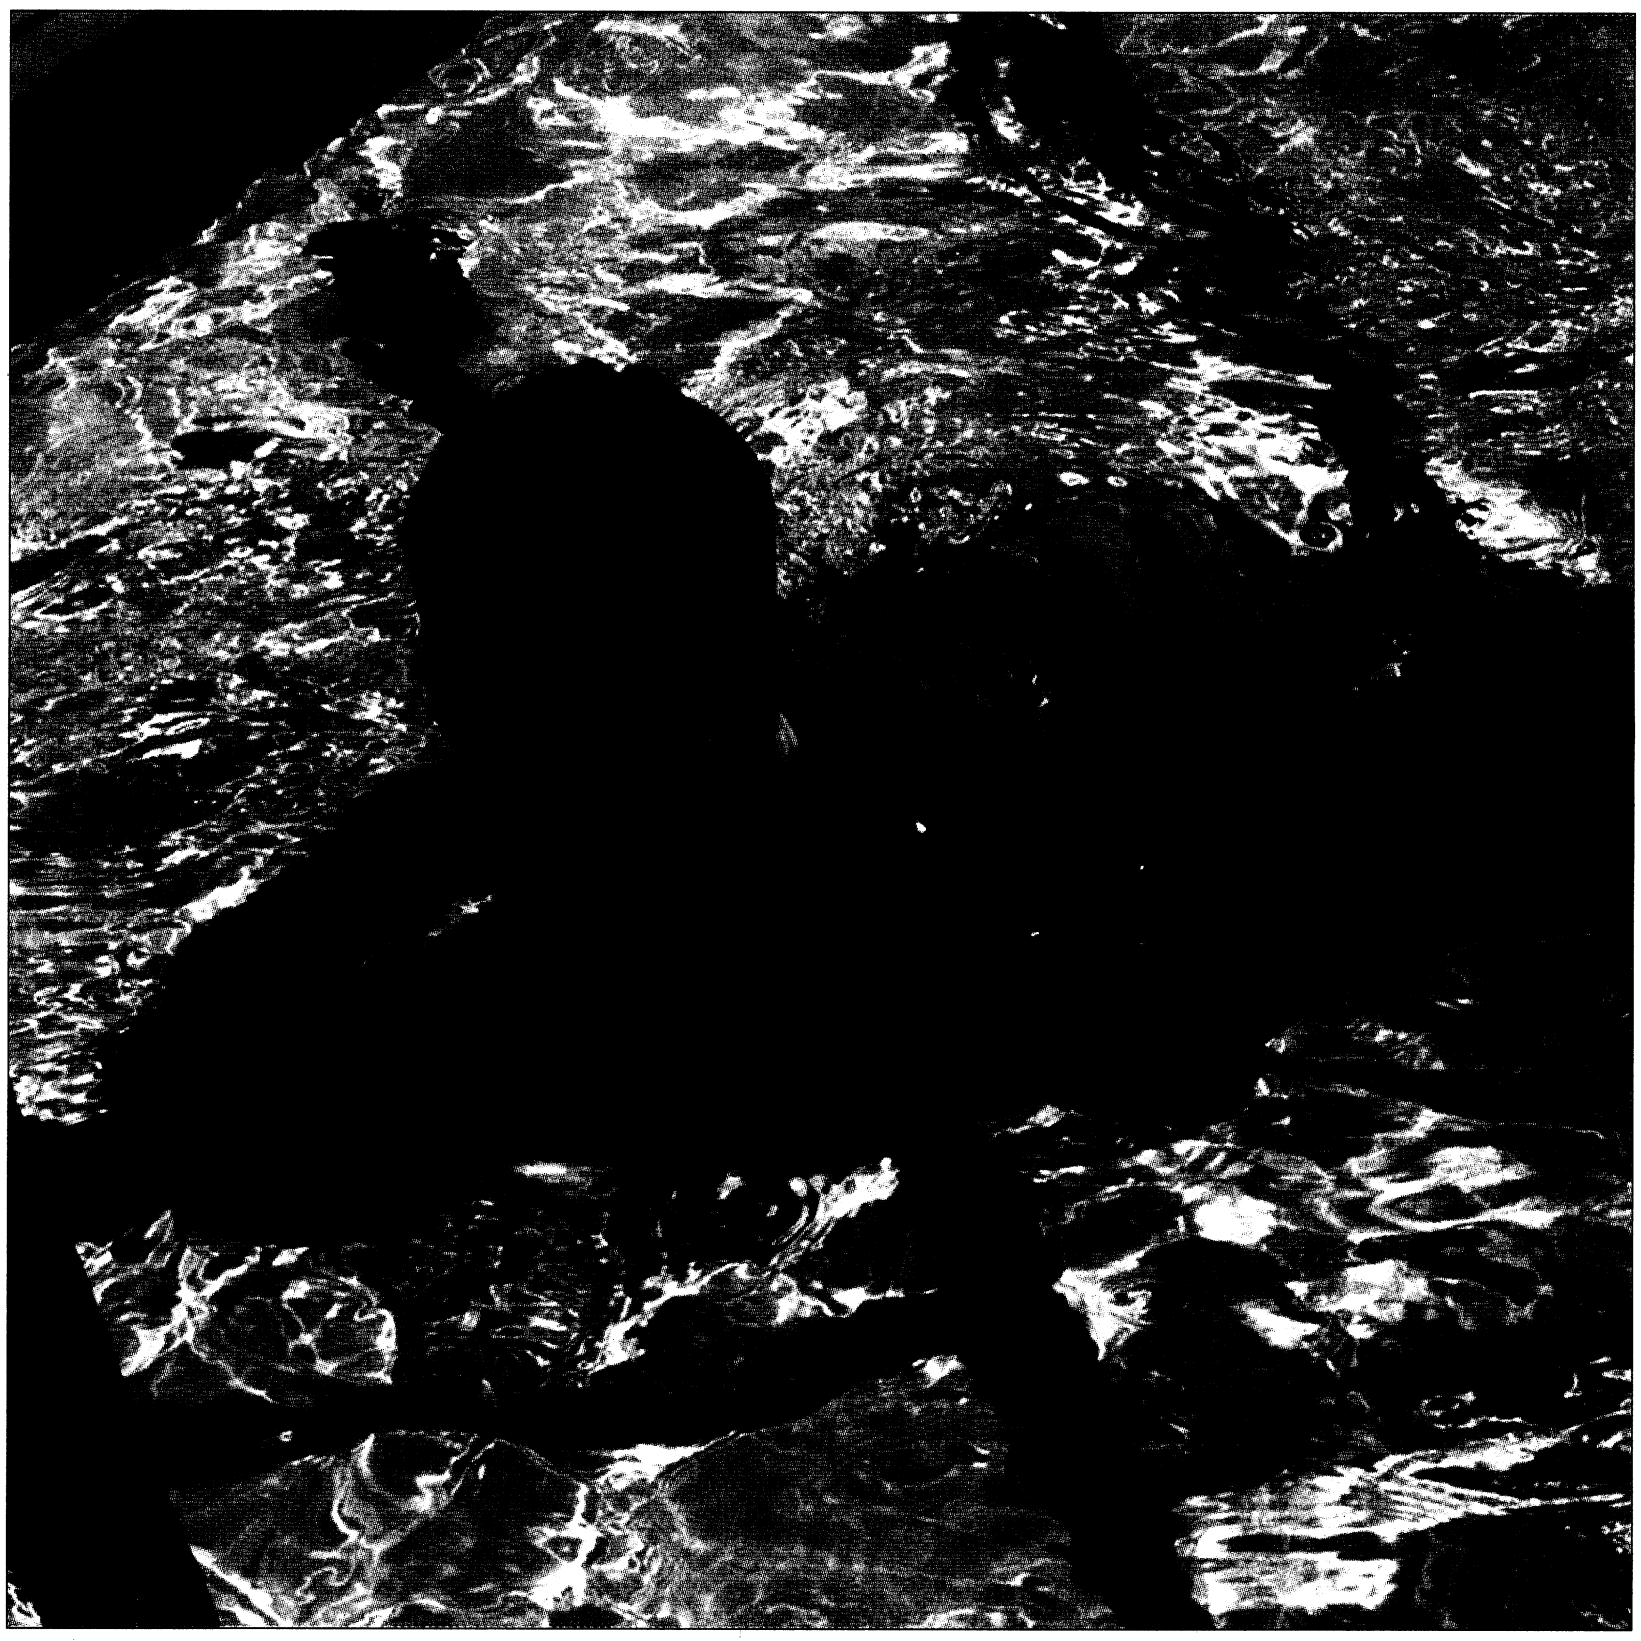
The Department of Defense has released the new rates for Child and Youth Services programs effective Aug. 1.

Fort Benning's Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation sent a letter to parents with children enrolled in the post's programs to inform them of the new fee scale.

In the letter, CYS chief Becky Carroll said the goal of the Fort Benning program is "to provide quality child and youth options that meet DoD policy."

Full-day and part-day fees increase $1 to $6 per month and sports fees increase $10 per child. The yearly registration fees for families also increase.

"These are very minimal fee increases," said Jennifer Williams, the CYS programs operations specialist. "And the next time parents register, they'll pick up the new fee." A parent who registered during April, for example, will not pay the new registration fee until April 2006, but will begin paying the higher child care and sports fees after August 1.



Williams said the CYS budget for fiscal 2006 was finished in June. All CYS fees are included in that budget for programs for approximately 1,200 children. The money, she said, goes into a pot that pays the salaries of CYS employees and buys uniforms and equipment for the sports programs.

"We pay for every crayon, every bite of food," she said.

Williams encourages parents to register now for CYS, especially for school-age programs, so children can begin those programs when they are needed.

For more information, call the CYS central registration office at 545-2079.

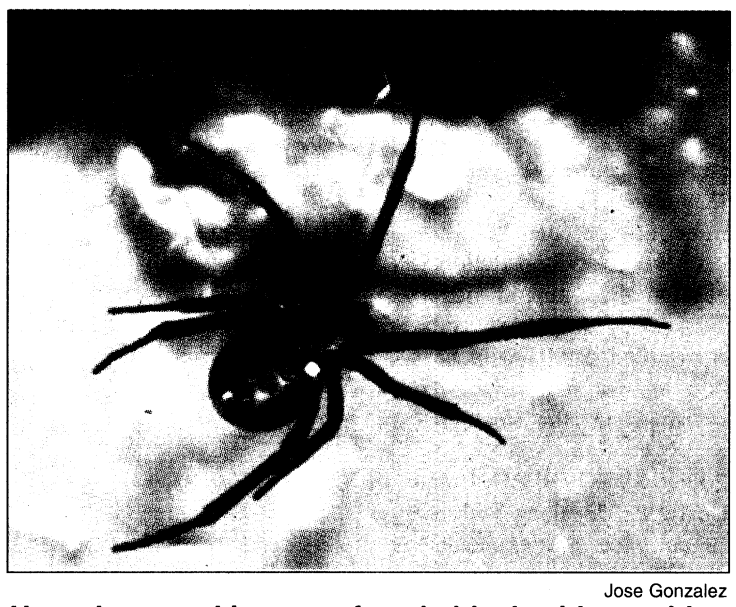
Poisonous spider bites uncommon, but possible



Follow steps to avoid spider bites

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Spiders are named for a mortal in Greek mythology who dared to best the goddess Athena in a weaving contest.

Athena was so upset about losing, she beat Arachne to the ground and turned her into a spider so she could keep on weaving.

There are approximately 20,000 different species of arachnids (better known as spiders) that inhabit the Americas, but according to the National Institute of Health, only 60 are capable of biting humans.

Jose Gonzalez

Hourglass marking on a female black widow spider.

Of those 60, only four are known to be dangerous to humans: the yellow sac, hobo, black widow and brown recluse.

And of those four, only the brown recluse and black widow can cause significant disease or death.

Fortunately, according to the NIH, brown recluse and black widow spiders are basically non-aggressive and only bite when disturbed or touched.

The brown recluse is properly named because it really is a recluse said Gregg Mohler, Fort Benning's construction inspector for the Directorate of Public Works.

The spider has a characteristic dark violin-shaped marking on its head, has a 'hairless' body and legs, and is commonly found outside in woods, leaves or rock piles. If a brown recluse comes inside it hides in dark closets, attics, basements and sometimes shoes.

"We've been called out to the barracks to investigate spider bites," Mohler said, "but there has never been a confirmed brown recluse bite on post."

"I've identified hundreds of spiders and no one has ever found a brown recluse," Mohler said. "It's always been one of the 2,500 varieties of wolf spiders that live in this country."

According to the U.S. Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventive Medicine, an emerging possibility of misdiagnosed brown recluse spider bites is an infection called Community-Acquired Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus.

It is a treatable bacterial skin infection spread by touching infected skin or touching objects that have been in contact with infected skin.

CA-MRSA lesions can be found on any part of the body. If multiple lesions are found on one individual, or several people have similar lesions, the USACHPPM considers this to be a strong indication that the problem is not caused by spiders.

According to the NIH, if there is itching, mild swelling and the skin turns faintly red around a bite area, there is a remote possibility that a person has been bitten by a black widow spider. Pain radiating from the bite site increases quickly and lasts for 12 to 48

Make safety priority for children this summer

MCG Health, Inc.

Every summer, approximately 2.7 million children in the U.S. ages 14 and younger are treated in emergency rooms for unintentional injuries, and more than 2,000 die. More children are accidentally injured during the summer months than any other time of year, with about 42 percent of fatal injuries occurring between May 1 and Aug. 31.

In a 2001 study, the National Safe Kids Campaign found that during the summer months, emergency room visits for accidental injuries among children increase nearly 20 percent over the average. This increase is greatest among school-age children.

"Summer is trauma season," said Rene Hopkins, R.N., coordinator of Safe Kids East Central at the MCG Children's Medical Center. "That's when kids are most likely to be riding a bike, swimming, crossing streets and spending time at the playground."

Safe Kids East Central encourages age-appropriate outdoor activity, but also urges appropriate precautions and active supervision.

"Simply being near your child is not necessarily supervising," Hopkins said. "A supervised child is in sight and in reach at all times, with your undivided attention focused on the child."

Parents and caregivers should know how to minimize the risks associated with:

• Swimming. Pools should be surrounded by isolation fences with locked gates. Keep your child in sight and in reach at all times while near a pool or body of water. Swimming lessons and inflatable swimming aids do not prevent drowning. There is no substitute for active supervision. Keep a phone handy and know infant and child CPR.

• Bicycling. Every cyclist needs to wear a properly fitted bike helmet. Children should ride bikes of appropriate size and should not ride without supervision until they have demonstrated safe riding habits and good judgment.

• Playgrounds. Grass, soil and asphalt are not safe surfaces for playground equipment. The ground should be covered 12 inches deep with mulch, shredded rubber or fine sand. Beware of jewelry, bike helmet straps and drawstrings in apparel which can get caught on playground equipment and strangle a child.

• Traffic. Teach your children to use crosswalks and walk signals when available and to cross only after looking both ways.

• Climbing and falls. Windows above the first floor should be equipped with window guards — a screen does not prevent falls. Supervise children around open windows — about 5,000 kids each year are seriously injured by falling out of windows onto hard surfaces.

This summer, make safety a part of your regular routine and help reduce the incidence of childhood injury.

CYS auditions — Child and Youth Services will conduct auditions for Missoula Children's Theatre's Beauty Lou and the Country Beast at 5 p.m. Monday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. All children in grades first through 12th are welcome to audition. Casting will take place the same evening.

The production will be at 3 and 7 p.m. July 23. The production is a rendition of the classic fairy tale Beauty and The Beast.

For more information, call 545-3070 or 545-7945.

Spouse Education Fair— The Spouse Education Initiative and the Fort Benning Education Center is sponsoring a higher education information fair from 4 to 7 p.m. July 21. The fair will be held in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2614.

Local colleges and universities will have representatives available to answer questions about programs and scholarships.

For more information, call Martha Borowski at 685-5759 or Stacy Scroggins at 685-5703.

Teen Variety Show — Child and Youth Services Middle School and Teen Program will host a Teen Variety Show for youth ages 13 to 18 at 7 p.m. July 22 in the Youth Services building.

Teens can enter under the following categories: vocal soloist male or female, rap male or female, vocal group, instrumental group, dance, praise dance, comedians, novelty acts, instrumental vocalist or soloist, spoken word female, master of ceremony and more.

Sign up for the show by Monday.

For more information, call 545-3070 or 545-7945.

Power of attorney for housing residents — Soldiers planning to deploy between now and Nov. 30, whose families wish to continue to occupy family housing, need to execute a special power of attorney permitting spouses to sign the required resident occupancy agreement with Pinnacle Military Housing.

Pinnacle is scheduled to assume management of family housing Dec. 1.

The special power of attorney is available at Legal Assistance Division, Building 5, and can be done on a walk-in basis.

For more information, call 545-0667 or the Housing Office at 545-2990. For questions on power of attorney, call OSJA at 545-3281.

Resident survey — An extension has been issued until July 31 to fill out and return a resident survey.

The survey lets residents tell how well their on-post housing needs are being met.

For a survey or more information, call Lillian Salazar at 545-0667 or stop by the RCI office in Building 280.

School Age Services Camp Courage — Camp Courage provides hourly, part-day and full-day camp for children in kindergarten through fifth grade.

Activities include movies, swimming, bowling, arts and crafts, educational field trips and skating.

Camp hours are Monday through Friday from 5:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. and parents can register children for individual weeks.

Army looks for next 'Military Idol' at installations worldwide

Tim Hipps
American Forces Press Service

So you think you've got what it takes to be the next Carrie Underwood or Bo Bice?

Perhaps you fancy yourself more along the lines of Fantasia or Ruben Studdard.

"Military Idol" will give military members a chance to sing their songs like their American Idol predecessors on 34 Army installations around the world this summer.

Performers have until July 22 to get involved in the competition based on the principles of Fox television's American Idol show. Local Military Idol competition will begin Aug. 1 and continue through Sept. 30.

Could you be the first Military Idol? Eligible contestants must be on active duty military status assigned to the local hosting installation, including members of all branches of service assigned on the installation. Active duty Soldiers not assigned to the installation where they will compete also are eligible, but they must provide their own transportation.

Only vocalists need apply — there's no place in this contest for musicians, comedians, dancers, jugglers, etc.

Installation-level prizes include $500 and temporary duty costs covered to compete in the Armywide finals for the first-place winner, along with $500 in unit funds. Second-place performers will receive $500, and third-place performers will receive $250.

The Pentagon Channel will air a 90-minute live broadcast of the Military Idol finals.

The installations where Military Idol will be contested are: Fort Myer, Va.; Fort McCoy, Wis.; Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.; Fort Carson, Colo.; Fort Lewis, Wash.; Fort Lee, Va.; Fort Eustis, Va.; Fort Sam Houston, Texas; Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Irwin, Calif.; Fort Huachuca, Ariz.; Fort Jackson, S.C.; Fort Knox, Ky.; Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort Rucker, Ala.; Hohenfels, Wurzburg, Baumholder, Heidelberg, Weisbaden, Bamberg, Hanau, Ansbach and Darmstadt, Germany; Belgium; Camp Casey, Camp Walker, Yongsan and Camp Humphreys, Korea; Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; Fort Richardson, Alaska; and Camp Zama, Japan.

Complete rules of the contest are available online at the competition's Web site at www.militaryidol.com.

Uniforms: To be worn by Faith students in August

policies at Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Knox and Fort Campbell, Ky., and Puerto Rico, and whose own children went to schools where they wore uniforms, said most parents like it because a uniform is cheaper. It also takes away distractions from clothing selections, putting the focus back on academics.

> "Concealed weapons are not a problem at Fort Benning. But the safety of our children is very important to us."
> Dr. Julio Gonzalez
> Faith Middle School Principal

For parents who are unable to purchase the recommended clothing right away, Gonzalez said the PTO has $500 to purchase the clothes and set up a lending closet.

The lending closet isn't new to Faith Middle School, said Selena Kirby, PTO president.

"Last year we loaned belts and shirts to children who needed them," she said. "We want to have clothes available for students who need them."

The clothes should be available for purchase in the Main Mall Post Exchange in July, said Barbara Beaudin, PX manager. The clothes will be by the front door, near the school supplies.

"We're planning on having drawings to give away ten outfits — a shirt and a pair of pants or pair of shorts."

Faith Middle School officials will meet with parents and students today at noon and 5 p.m. to discuss the standardized dress code.

The policy is available at www.am.dodea.edu/benning/faith.

Spider: Bites may cause skin to swell, itch, or turn red hours, and is accompanied by nausea, high blood pressure, headache, muscle weakness, profuse sweating and difficulty breathing.

The best way to avoid a black widow bite is to know what a black widow looks like.

Usually shiny, hairless and black with a red hourglass marking on its half-inch underbelly, only the adult female black widow has the poisonous bite. Males are much smaller with light red streaks on the abdomen.

"We find a lot of the black widows in our covered shooting pits on the range," Mohler said.

The pits are made of concrete and have a wooden cover to keep the rain out, making the pits ideal for insects and spiders, he said.

"When (Soldiers) open the pits up for training, they sweep all the webbing out."

> "... there has never been a confirmed brown recluse bite on post. I've identified hundreds of spiders and no one has ever found a brown recluse."
> Gregg Mohler
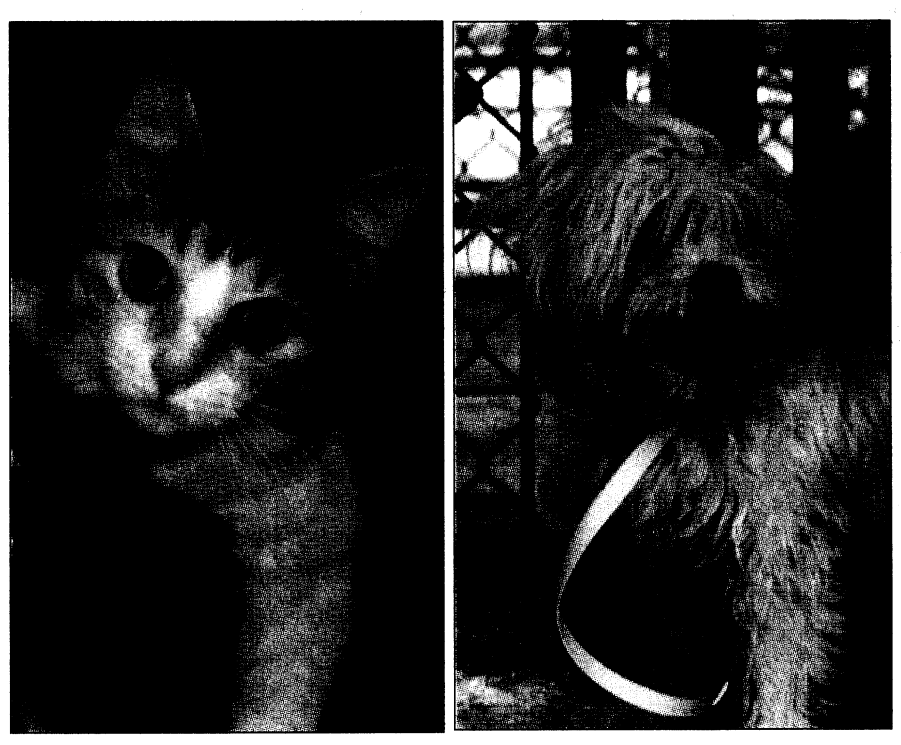
> Fort Benning construction inspector for the Directorate of Public Works

"Spraying for spiders is not really effective," Mohler said. "The best control for spiders is to seal up cracks and crevices, sweep the webs down and remove the food source — insects."



Mohler said people should keep their windows and doors closed.

"If there's not a food source, you're not going to find a spider," he said. "Leaving a light on all night attracts bugs," Mohler said. "A spider will spin a web right there next to the light and have a smorgasbord."

Confirmed spider bites are uncommon because spiders are non-aggressive to humans and only bite when accidentally pressed against the skin.

Whatever the cause, USACHPPM recommends people experiencing skin lesions or bites of unknown origin seek medical attention immediately.

Confidence key in facing your own Goliaths

Chaplain (Maj.) Joel Funk
Installation Chaplains Office

He was huge, standing more than 9 feet tall. If he were living today, he'd probably be the highest paid basketball player ever, because he could slam dunk standing flatfooted. His armor was so tight it looked like a tattoo. With that giant sword and spear, he looked like an Army tank wrapped in human flesh.

The sweatband he wore around his head was made from the skin of a lion carcass. When he walked, it was as if a mini-earthquake was taking place. His voice was like the clap of thunder as he strolled up to the battlefront and hurled his abuses at the Israelite soldiers. Who was he? His name was Goliath. Would you take him on?

The fact is, there are Goliath types in all of life. Sometimes Goliath is a decision to be made, a personal problem, a challenging suspense or deadline, an enslaving habit, a crippling determination or simply added stress in your life. These Goliaths stand bullishly before us and dare us to come out and fight. The problem is, many times our first inclination is to run and hide.

There was one young man, though, who chose not to run from Goliath. His name was David. One day his father Jesse said, "Go check on your brothers. I hear the army's at a standstill." So David headed for the front line and found his brothers and the other Israelite soldiers standing around a campfire, paralyzed by fear. Just as he asked why, he saw Goliath charge up to the battle line, firing his 50 cal into the air for special effect and daring anyone to come out and fight.

Well, it wasn't exactly like that, but

REFLECTIONS

David watched as the Israelite soldiers ran in every direction like scared rabbits. When the dust cleared, David asked, "Who's this loud mouth?'

"None like him," said his frightened brothers. "He's awesome in a bad way." David said, "Naw, the bigger they are, the harder they fall. So what's in it for the one who takes him out?"

His oldest brother, Eliab, saw that David was entertaining grandiose ideas about taking on Goliath and said, "David, you're out of your mind. Don't you get any crazy ideas like trying to whip Goliath."

Just like the elder sister in the story of Cinderella, Eliab tries to discourage David.

You know, there are always people around like Eliab, shouting disheartening words. Their message is always the same:

"You can't do it." "You'll never pass the exams." "You'll never get the points." "You'll never make the grade." "It won't work." "You might as well give up." "Quit now before it gets worse."

But thank God, there are some people like David who know that the place of our greatest weakness may also be the place of our greatest strength.

David knew that and it was that knowledge that gave David a courageous spirit to go to the front line of the battlefield.

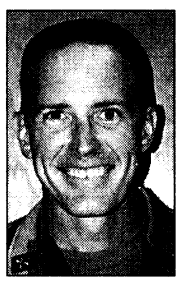
King Saul said to David, "You're but a kid! And besides that, Goliath's been a warrior since the days of his youth. What chance could you possibly have against him?" Yet David showed the same kind of courage that the apostle Paul had when he wrote to the Philippians, "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me."

That's confidence. David believed in himself.

"Thanks for the advice," he said, "but perhaps you haven't looked at my resume very closely. It's pretty impressive! Granted, watching sheep on a hillside may not've formed calluses on my hands, but let me remind you, these hands of mine have caught a lion by its beard and made mincemeat of him."

Confidence in yourself is the first key to confronting your Goliath. You might have it within you to meet Goliath, but you must believe in yourself. Don't let anyone tell you otherwise.

So, when Goliath, whoever he is or whatever it is, confronts you, believe in yourself. You may be the only one who will.



What whitewater rafting can teach you about your family

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

The 22-year-old guide with an oversized oar, well-worn flip flops and a mischievous smile told us it was "the second oldest river in the world, underneath the largest single span bridge in the world ... and that they hadn't had anybody killed in at least three days!"

So began the orientation briefing by our family's whitewater rafting guide last weekend while we were on leave in the steep and rugged terrain of West Virginia's New River Gorge. In my overzealous attempt to give my wife of 22 years, my college-aged daughter and my 14-year-old son a taste of Ranger School, I'd booked us on the smallest raft allowed by law on the river (the smaller the raft, the louder the screams), and the most intense stretch of the river (Class IV and V whitewater). Hey, what's an ex-Special Forces Army Dad for, right?

Five hours later, completely drenched, only slightly bruised and battered, and certainly wiser for the journey, we were spit out of the final rapids and immediately began talking smack about the wild ride we'd just survived. And on the way back to Fort Benning it occurred to me that navigating the challenges of raising a family, while also navigating the challenges of the Army life is a lot like Class IV and Class V whitewater rafting — just far more exhilarating — and far more dangerous. So now that I've had time to wring out my clothes and shake the water out of my ears, I've come up with these three insights on "What Whitewater Rafting Can Teach You About Raising a Family In The Military."

Hawkins

• Insight No. 1 — You're stupid if you don't seek expert advice. They have a word for people who go down this world-caliber whitewater river with no guide ... dead! Navigating the whitewater, just like navigating your family life, is a whole lot easier and a whole lot less hazardous to you and everybody in your boat if you've got an accomplished, experienced, wise guide. Who's your guide on how to navigate the whitewater of family life?

Insight No. 2 — Navigating choppy waters is much easier if you're all in the boat to begin with. In the military, our term for "being in the boat together" is "unit cohesion." It means that though we come from different places with different faces, we're basically committed to the same objective: to fight and win the nation's wars. What's your family's mission statement?

Insight No. 3 — Falling overboard isn't nearly as tragic as never getting back on board. No family is perfect, and from time to time, even the best of whitewater rafters wind up in the drink. For us it was actually the last rapid of the day. The last thing I remember was seeing my shoelaces somewhere up around my eyebrows and then being bounced out of the boat like a human pinball. Fortunately, my family just didn't say, "Man, too bad — ditch him, let's go!"

Want help navigating your family's whitewater? Call us at the Chaplain Family Life Center at 545-1760 or stop by CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel at 11 a.m. Sundays.

In certain regions of Central and South America it is a tradition to dance (for joy?) at the end of the cocoa seed harvest. Cocoa is the key ingredient of all chocolate products.

Contestants who think they can dance bust moves on Fox

Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Suddenly this summer, dancing is the "in" thing on television.

A couple of weeks after ABC's surprise hit Dancing With the Stars wrapped up its season, another fleet-of-foot series is stepping in. In conjunction with Dick Clark Productions, the producers of American Idol give amateurs the chance to show their stuff on the unscripted Fox show So You Think You Can Dance, which launches with a two-hour premiere Wednesday.

Los Angeles news anchor-reporter Lauren Sanchez hosts the 12-week competition, which follows the American Idol formula of staging preliminary auditions in major cities (in this case, New York, Los Angeles and Chicago).

Executive producer Nigel Lythgoe said the similarities between So You Think You Can Dance and American Idol end with each show being a talent search.

"Singers and dancers are different animals, and dancers are a lot more resilient, I think. They're accustomed to going to auditions and getting the job or being turned down.

"They sort of shrug their shoulders and move on to the next audition. A lot of people walked in off the street to audition for American Idol, but there's a bit more training to the people who came in for this."

That said, Lythgoe said that some still showed up for impromptu tryouts.

"Because they do a bit of break dancing, they think they're dancers. The whole premise of the program is, 'So you think you can dance? OK. Then do this.' That's what it comes down to, eventually.

"What's interesting is that some street dancers are now going to classes. It's almost easier to learn to dance if you can do eight pirouettes on your head and you have that rhythm built-in. I was a trained dancer, and there's no way I would dream of diving on my head and spinning around without using my hands."

So You Think You Can Dance will have its own versions of Simon Cowell, Paula Abdul and Randy Jackson, with a panel of judges Lythgoe hopes will become as famous simply by showing their expertise.

"I don't want to use celebrities," he said. "Simon was never a celebrity, and Randy was never a celebrity. They were just people we believed would make great judges. We want people who know what they're talking about.

"I started out as 'Nasty Nigel' on Popstars, which was the show that preceded 'Pop Idol' (the forerunner to American Idol) in the United Kingdom, and I was a pretty tough judge. We found that sort of truthful toughness, or hard honesty, really focused people's attention.

"Of course, nobody does that better than Simon. He's gotten to the point where Americans will tell him, 'You say exactly what I was thinking.' They used to boo him, and now he's turned that around."

Whereas a recording contract awaited Carrie Underwood and her American Idol-winning predecessors, the prize isn't quite as defined for the eventual So You Think You Can Dance victor.

"This isn't Idol," Lythgoe said. "You can't turn on the radio and listen to somebody dancing, so unfortunately, this won't have the same kind of appeal. The humanity will be the appeal here.

"Let's not forget that Idol comes in many layers, a bit like an onion. It isn't just about singing; it's about the people and their lives and about the chemistry between the judges. It comes at you from different angles.

Lauren Sanchez hosts So You Think You Can Dance Wednesday on Fox.

"It's the same with this show. It might not produce someone at the level of a Carrie Underwood or even a Bo Bice (last season's Idol runner-up), but it will produce a celebrity, and it will hopefully get the public to understand the hard work that goes into that.

"If you get tired as a singer, you lose your voice. If you get tired as a dancer, you lose your temper, and you also start pulling muscles and injuring yourself."

Moreover, Lythgoe said, "You're also forcing people together, and someone else will be holding the points that you earn in their hands.

"If they screw up, you're going to lose points, so there's a whole different feel to this from Idol."

Even though Dancing With the Stars outraced So You Think You Can Dance in getting on the air, Lythgoe doesn't mind.

He said the ABC show "skewed to an older age group, and with this, I'd like to find the same demographic American Idol has found in this country — which is right across the board, from grandchildren to grandmas."

Wedding Crashers — Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson star as a pair of divorce mediators who spend their weekends crashing weddings in a search for Ms. Right — for a night.

But when one of them falls for the engaged daughter (Rachel McAdams) of an influential and eccentric politician (Christopher Walken) at the social event of the year, they get roped into spending a weekend at the family's palatial waterfront estate and quickly find themselves in over their heads.

Wedding Crashers is rated R for sexual content, nudity and language.

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory — Charlie Bucket, a boy from an impoverished family under the shadow of a giant chocolate factory, wins a candy bar contest and is given a tour, along with four other children, of the amazing factory run by the eccentric Willy Wonka and his staff of Oompa-Loompas.

Starring Johnny Depp, Freddie Highmore and David Kelly.

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory is rated PG for quirky situations, action and mild language.

Fantastic Four — Marvel's first family of comic superheroes takes the world by storm as the longest-running comic book series in history comes to the big screen.

Reed Richards (Mr. Fantastic), who can elongate his body; Susan Storm (Invisible Woman), who not only can become invisible at will but can render other objects invisible; Johnny Storm (Human Torch), who can shoot fire from his fingertips and bend flame; and Ben Grimm (The Thing), a hideously misshapen monster with superhuman strength, together battle the evil Doctor Doom.

Starring Ioan Gruffudd, Jessica Alba and Michael Chiklis.

Fantastic Four is rated PG-13 for sequences of intense action and suggestive content.

Dark Water — Dahlia Williams (Jennifer Connelly) is starting a new life. Newly separated and starting over with a new job and a new apartment, she's determined to put her relationship with her estranged husband behind her and devote herself to raising her daughter Ceci. But when the strained separation disintegrates into a bitter custody battle, her situation takes a turn for the worse.

Dark Water is rated PG-13 for mature thematic material, frightening sequences, disturbing images and brief language.

War of the Worlds — A contemporary retelling of H.G. Wells's classic, the sci-fi thriller reveals the extraordinary battle for the future of humankind through the eyes of one American family fighting to survive.

Starring Tom Cruise, Miranda Otto and Dakota Fanning.

War of the Worlds is rated PG-13 for frightening sequences of sci-fi violence and disturbing images.

Bewitched — Hot-shot actor Jack Wyatt (Will Ferrell), set to star as Darrin in a film version of the '60s TV series Bewitched, finds his ideal Samantha in unknown actress Isabel (Nicole Kidman), who just happens to be a witch in real life.

Bewitched is rated PG-13 for language, including sex and drug references and partial nudity.

Rebound — Following a public meltdown, a high-strung basketball coach (Martin Lawrence) must redeem himself by leading a junior high school team consisting of athletically challenged youngsters.

Also starring Wendy Raquel Robinson, Breckin Meyer, Horatio Sanz and Megan Mullally.

Rebound is rated PG for mild language and thematic elements.

The Adventures of Shark Boy & Lava Girl — A 10-year-old outcast is shunned by classmates and forced to spend summer vacation alone.

With his two imaginary friends, Shark Boy and Lava Girl, he goes on a mission to prove dreams can become reality.

Starring Taylor Lautner, Taylor Dooley, Cayden Boyd and George Lopez.

The Adventures of Shark Boy and Lava Girl is rated PG for mild action and rude humor.

Herbie: Fully Loaded — Lindsay Lohan stars as Maggie Peyton, the new owner of Number 53 — the free-wheelin' Volkswagen bug with a mind of its own — and puts the car through its paces on the road to becoming a NASCAR competitor.

Also starring Matt Dillon, Michael Keaton and Justin Long.

Herbie: Fully Loaded is rated G for general audiences.

George A. Romero's Land of the Dead — In a modern-day world where the walking dead roam an uninhabited wasteland, the living try to lead "normal" lives behind the walls of a fortified city.

A new society has been built by a handful of enterprising, ruthless opportunists, who live in the towers of a skyscraper, high above the hard-scrabble existence on the streets below.

Outside the city walls, an army of the dead is evolving. Inside, anarchy is on the rise.

Starring Simon Baker, Asia Argento and Dennis Hopper.

George A. Romero's Land of the Dead is rated R for pervasive strong violence and gore, language, sexuality and drug use.

Batman Begins — In the wake of his parents' murders, disillusioned industrial heir Bruce Wayne (Christian Bale) travels the world seeking the means to fight injustice and turn fear against those who prey on the fearful.

He returns to Gotham and unveils his alter ego — Batman, a masked crusader who uses his strength, intellect and an array of high-tech deceptions to fight the sinister forces that threaten the city.

Starring Ken Watanbe, Morgan Freeman and Michael Caine.

Batman Begins is rated PG-13 for intense action violence, disturbing images and thematic elements.

CSH scoops up fifth season win

When Christopher Egan, 14th Combat Support Hospital, hit an infield home run in the second inning, his team knew they had the stuff to win.

The CSH went on to beat Headquarters and Headquarters Company, U.S. Army Infantry Center, 13-3, in intramural softball action Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

"We were all very energetic and determined not to let the other team score," said Sandra Forrest, a CSH team member. "Everyone came out to play and win."

In the first inning, the CSH brought in two runners and HHC was left scoreless.

The second inning was the best for the CSH with Egan's three run hit and three other runners crossing the plate, giving the CSH an 8-0 lead.

"It was an all right game, but we just didn't have the bats tonight," said Stephen Graften, HHC. "We played a good team and we had solid defense, but there is only so much we could do."

HHC got their first run of the night in bottom of the second inning, but was scoreless again in the third while the CSH added five more runs to its total.

The score was 13-1 at the top of the fourth inning when HHC managed to bring two runners home.

Down 13-3, HHC started to put the pressure on the CSH. Even though they didn't bring in any more runs, they kept the CSH scoreless for three innings.

"We really hoped tonight would be our jump off point and we could win a game," Graften said.

"I guess we will have to wait until the next time we play."

Forrest said her team did well at the beginning of the game, but the evening heat got to them.

"We put a lot in at the beginning and that took a lot out of us up front. But, we still managed a win."

Christopher Egan, 14th CSH, scoops up the ball while Jeff Jackson, HHC USAIC, tries to make it to second base. The 14th CSH beat HHC USAIC, 13-3, in intramural softball Tuesday.

Golfing spouse wins military tourney

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Growing up on the east coast of South Korea, near the 38th parallel, Jin Son Antoskow never played sports. And although she didn't pick up a golf club until 1991, she has two golf titles and two runner up titles at the Women's Military Dependents Golf Championship to her name.

Her most recent win came June 16 at the WMDGC event held at Robins Air Force Base where she shot a 79-79-72. The 72, although not her lowest round of golf, set a women's course record.

"Everybody (at the tournament) said I could do it," she said, " but I didn't know. I just went out and played."

Fellow golfers at the Bull Creek Golf Course in Midland, Ga., call her "the best female player" there.

"She's a good lady and a good player," said John Milam, director of golf for the Greater Columbus Golf Authority. "And not a lot of ladies play here (Bull Creek). The golf course is a little on the hard side for them."

That doesn't keep Antoskow from playing 27 holes there every day during the week and on weekends with her husband, Robert, a retired Army helicopter pilot.

Robert, she said, was the one who got her started golfing on Fort Benning 14 years ago, and he's the subject of two of her favorite golfing stories.

"When I first started, I was chipping and I couldn't see the hole," she said, "but when I got up on the green, he told me I hit it in." She said she's still not sure if she hit it in, or if he kicked it in for her.

"He made (golf) interesting," she said, "and he makes jokes and makes it fun."

Now on her sixth set of clubs, Antoskow's still having fun, although she's working on her game every time she goes out on a course — like the final round of the 2002 WMDGC where she was six strokes behind the leader on the final round.

When she plays, she said, she's just concentrating on hitting the ball straight and staying in the fairways, not trying to reach a green in a specific number of shots.

Sports roar through the 20s

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

This is the first of a three part series focusing on Fort Benning sports and highlighting some of the athletes and events that have defined its history.

Fort Benning has a colorful athletic past which includes boxing, polo, swimming, wrestling, football, tennis, basketball, softball, volleyball and track, along with other sports.

Sports teams started to pop up on Fort Benning during the 1920s. There are records of softball games being played by the 24th Infantry team as early as March 1922.

The earliest games weren't intramural games; they were games where various post teams played each other, local community and college teams.

Monthly boxing bouts were held on post, and in October 1922 a crowd of 1,700 turned out for one of those bouts.

On May 1, 1924, the groundbreaking for Doughboy Stadium was held. The stadium was officially dedicated on Oct. 17, 1925.

Funds for the stadium came entirely from donations by Soldiers and local units.

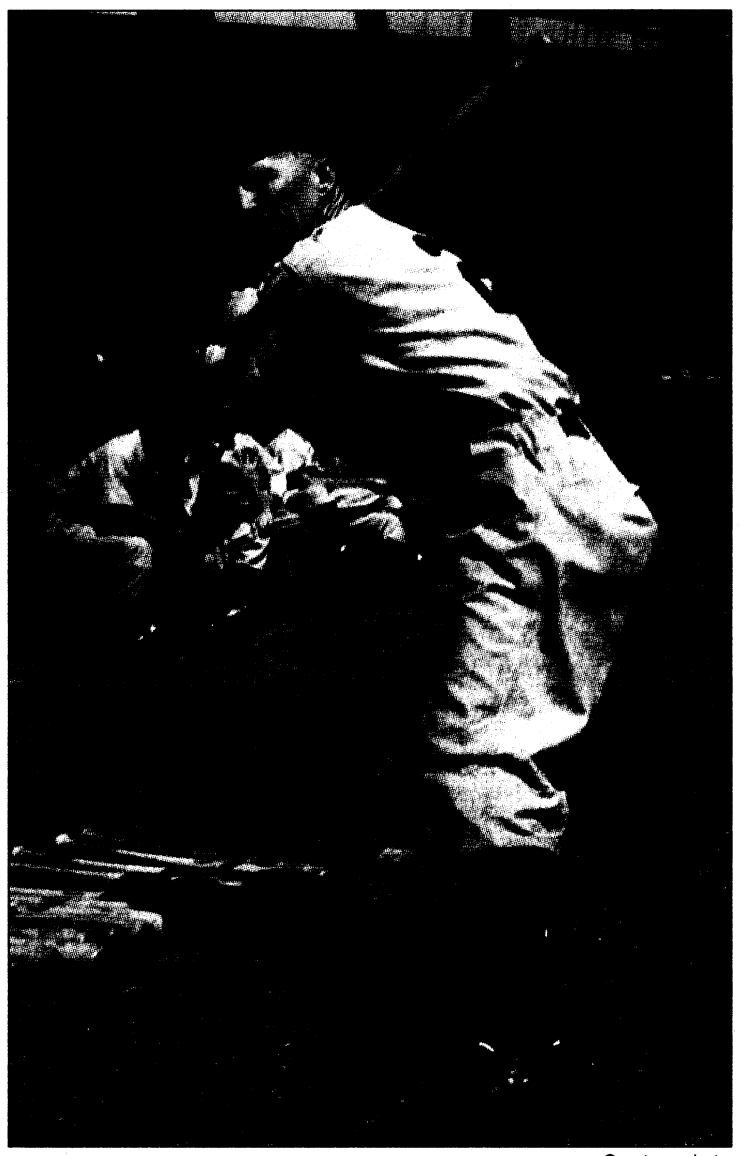
The first game every played at Gowdy Field took place on March 25, 1925, when the Infantry School played the University of Georgia.

The official dedication happened on March 31 when, thanks to Hank Gowdy, two pro baseball teams, the New York Giants and the Washington Senators opened the park to a packed house.

"One of the reasons Doughboy Stadium, Gowdy Field and the sports complex were built was to convince Soldiers to come here to Fort Benning," said Frank Hanner, Infantry Museum director. "Back then, they tried to get the best coaches and the best players to come to Fort Benning. Sports were very important to the post and held a lot of prestige."

Fort Benning made a name for itself in November 1924 when the football team from the Infantry School beat the Atlantic Scouting Fleet, 12-6, to win the enlisted men's interservice football championship, known as the United States President's Cup, in Washington, D.C.

This was the first time in history a president had offered a cup to be competed for in a sporting event.



President Calvin Coolidge personally gave the cup to the Infantry School team in a ceremony at Gowdy Field as a crowd of 5,000 cheered them on.

While serving as superintendent at West Point in the 1920s, Gen. Douglas MacArthur made it clear that sports were an important part of a Soldier's training.

He said, "Upon the fields of friendly strife are sown the seeds that upon other fields, on other days, will bear the fruit of victory."

Fort Benning took his statement literally and

That round, she also wasn't paying attention to the score.

"I didn't realize I caught up on my last putt and it was going to a playoff," she said.

She lost the playoff, but returned in 2003 and captured the title, followed by a second-place finish last year.

Tournament play, she said is exciting, and she travels frequently to Atlanta to compete in mid-amateur tournaments.

She's also spending time in the gym to build muscle and taking lessons, saying she needs to pick up some additional yardage on her drives.

"I won't go LPGA," Antoskow said, "but I'd like to make the cut. I need 50 (yards) and maybe I'll think about it."

Bull Creek golfer Neil Doblin, said he's been trying to get her to go on the ladies' Big Break show on the Golf Channel.

"She has all the tools in every phase of the game," Doblin said. "She'll beat just about anyone she plays with and she'll play with anyone out here."

History: Olympians call post home

became known as a sports powerhouse with some of the country's top athletes and coaches being stationed here.

"Dwight David Eisenhower was a coach here in 1926," Hanner said. "He later became one of only five Army commanders to hold the rank of five-star general and in 1953 he became president of the United States.

"General George Patton was a decathlete for the military. He was promoted to general on the steps of the Officer Spouses' Club."

Hanner said that Omar Nelson Bradley, for whom the Bradley fighting vehicle is named after, loved baseball and played on Gowdy Field when he was a captain. As post commander he always tried to attend the games.

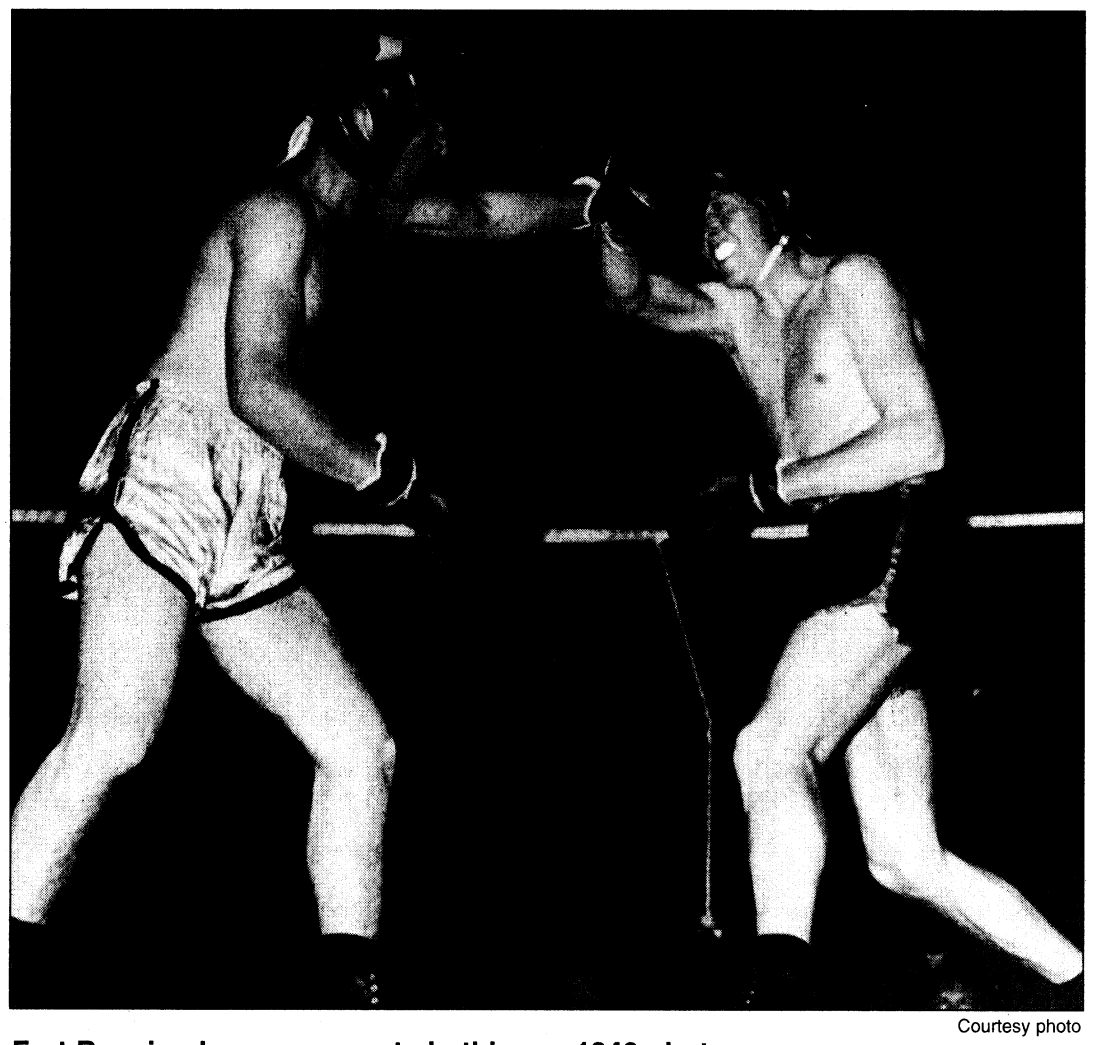
In the 1920s and 1930s polo was one of the most popular sports on post. The Fort Benning Polo Club teams played twice a week.

An interesting and sad piece of polo history, Hanner said, was that in the mid-1920s Lt. Harry W. French, of 29th Regiment, was killed during a polo game between the 6th Calvary from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. The field was later named in his honor — French Field.

Baseball was also popular during the 1930s. In 1916 "Sad Samuel" Stuart rejected an offer from the St. Louis Americans so he could stay in the Army and serve in World War I

After the war he played professional baseball, and in 1930 he came to Fort Benning and played on the Infantry School Detachment team.

Lt. Brookner Brady, who was attending the Infantry School, represented the United States in the 1932 Olympics and placed 11th in the pentathlon.



In 1936, Candidate Robert Livermore, 16th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment passed in review before Adolph Hitler with the U.S. Olympic team. He placed fourth in the ski competition.

Football was big in the 30s and 40s, and at one time more than 250 Soldiers were playing on intramural teams.

In 1942 more than 8,500 Soldier fans came out to watch the post football championships.

The first night games were played in Doughboy Stadium in 1943.

That same year, one of the county's greatest athletes at the time, Edward Wagner, received his commission from the Infantry School.

Wagner was an Olympian and All-American track and winter sport athlete.

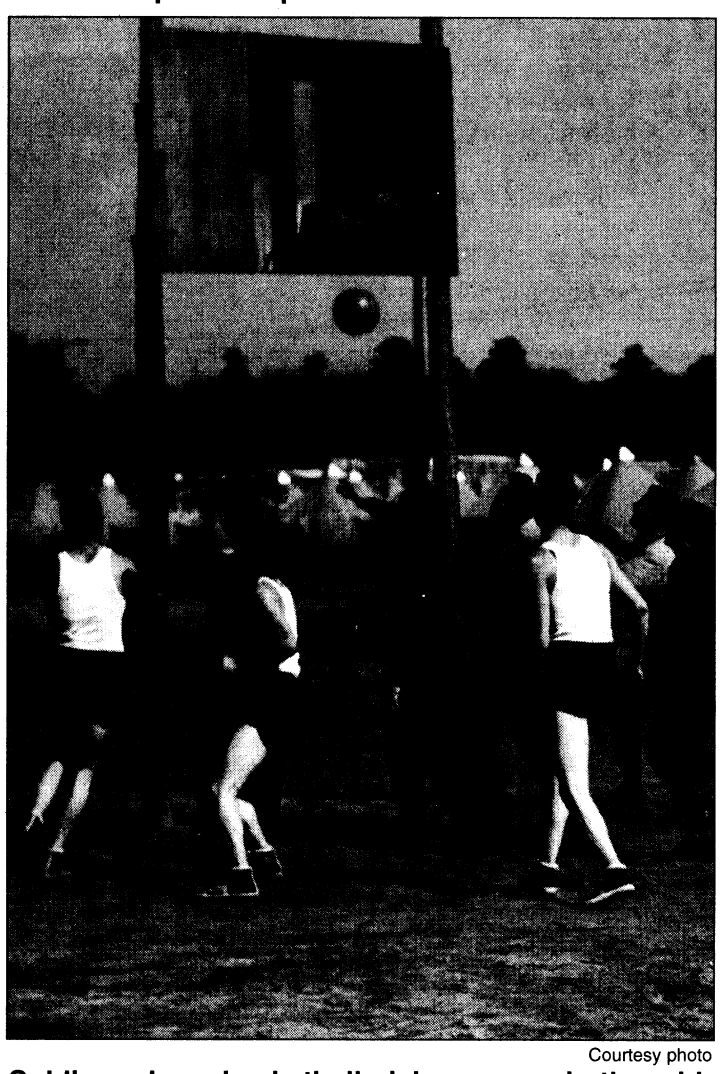
In 1932 he earned a two bronze medals in the 100- and 200-meter dashes, placing behind Jesse Owens and Ralph Metcalfe.

In 1936 he earned two more bronze medals in the same events.

He also competed in the winter Olympics that same year, skating in the 1500-meter and two mile events.

"The last polo game was played on Dec. 7, 1941," Hanner said.

"The teams were playing when they called the game and the announcement was made that Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, and then they started to play again.



"After a bit of play the game stopped and everyone went on alert. They never played a post game of polo again."

During World War II, sports just didn't seem to have the importance they once held, and Fort Benning's sports program began to slide.

"It didn't see right to have organized teams (during the war)," Hanner said. "(Regiments) would just play amongst themselves.

"After they war, the tried to crank the sports program back up but sports like polo didn't get back off the ground."

Next week will feature sports between 1945 and 1985.

Main Post sweeps All-Star Tourney

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

The Main Post All Stars walked away with the 2005 All Star Softball Series title July 6 at Gowdy Field.

The first of its kind, the event featured players from 10 Main Post teams and five Infantry Training Brigade and Basic Combat Training Brigade teams. The series consisted of the best two games out of three and the sports department provided players with black and gold All Star jerseys.

"The Main Post All Stars led the event throughout the first game," said Carol Gearheart, intramural sports coordinator.

"During the second game, ITB and BCTB All Stars were in the lead in the first two innings, but then fell behind and never regained (the lead)."

The Main Post All Stars won the first game, 11-7. During the second game they squeaked past ITB and BCTB, 8-7.

The All Star Softball Series also included a home run derby, but no home runs were hit.

"A possible cause for not getting any home runs is that the wind was blowing towards the infield," Gearheart said, "causing the balls to drop before making it over the fence."

SPORT BRIEFS

ON POST

Hunter harvest card amnesty — An amnesty period has been approved for hunters who have not yet turned in their harvest cards. The cards must be submitted in person to the Outdoor Recreation Office no later than close of business today.

Paintball parties — Birthday parties are available at the Paintball Park.

The cost is $20 per child with 10 or more children which includes 200 rounds of paint, a Subway sandwich, chips and a drink.

Units can also use the Paintball Park at reduced rates.

With a minimum of 150 players, it is $25 per person for 500 rounds of paint. Unit or training funds can be used, and there is an option of playing on other designated paintball fields.

For more information or reservations, call 405-9777 or 267-5038.

OFF POST

Golf privilege card — The 2005 Golf Privilege Card, available only from the American Lung Association, is good for reduced greens fees at more than 600 courses in the Southeast.

For more information, call the American Lung Association at (800) LUNG-USA or (770) 434-4864 ext. 212 or at www.golfsouth.org.

"AFTER A TERRORIST ATTACK YOUR FIRST INSTINCT MAY BE TO RUN. THAT MAY BE THE WORST THING YOU COULD DO."
~ Mario Polit, Firefighter, Ladder 106, FDNY ~
Knowing what you should do in a terrorist attack isn't just a matter of common sense. It takes some reading, some learning and some planning. That goes for people who live in small communities too. Readiness is for every American family, business and school. The terrorist threat is real and we can't afford to go unprepared.
Learn to put together an emergency supply kit, how to make a family communication plan, and how you should respond to an act of terror. All of that information is clearly explained at www.ready.gov. If you prefer, you can call 1-800-BE-READY (1-800-237-3239) for a free copy of the brochure, "Preparing Makes Sense, Get Ready Now."

Are heroes born?
Or are they made?

Inside every child is a hidden strength, an unknown ability, a hero waiting to be discovered. In afterschool programs, kids get involved in all kinds of activities – scholastic, athletic and creative. Activities that help them realize they have the potential to do better and reach further than they ever imagined. Because in the end, that's what makes a hero. Let us know you want afterschool programs in your area. Call 1-800-USA-LEARN.

Benning tests sniper tech

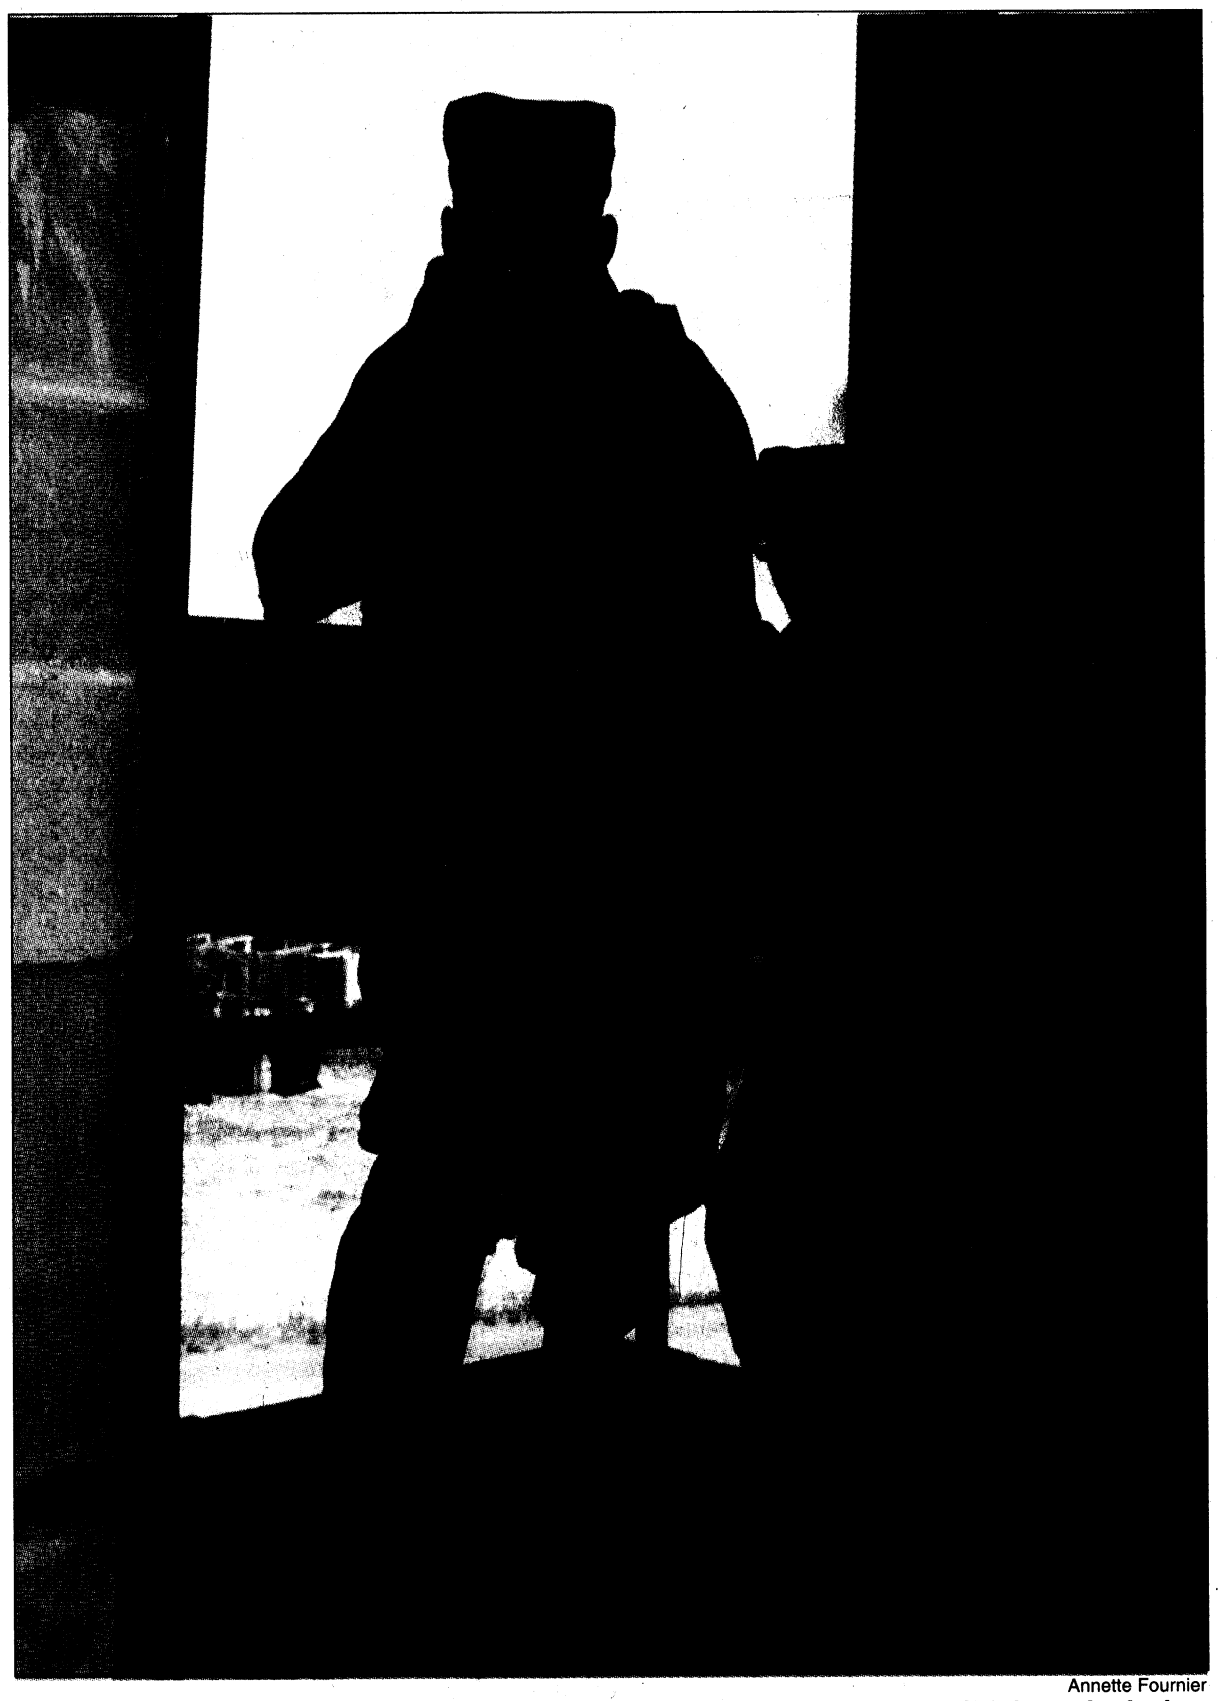
Annette Fournier

Sgt. Michael Jasso, 39th MP Detachment, goes head to head with the Overwatch, a sniper detection system, to test if man or machine is better at identifying the location of sniper fire.

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs

The Overwatch, a prototype sniper-detection system, is currently being tested for use in the Global War on Terrorism by the Soldier Battle Lab at Benning's McKenna MOUT site.

The Overwatch is a camera with a high-speed processor designed to sense the flash of gunfire and detect where it came from, said Tony Mason, Soldier Battle Lab project analyst. The camera can be mounted on top of a humvee for use during convoy security, for example, or at a forward operating base or airfield to detect sniper fire.



The Overwatch system detects the elevation, range and direction where a shot was fired. If the Overwatch is stationary, it also provides the grid coordinates.

The camera sends the information to a laptop, and Soldiers check the data to find the location of a shooter. They can take that information and determine what action to take next, from sending out a team to locate the shooter or calling for indirect fire.

The Overwatch is being developed by the Pacific Command and the Space Missile and Defense Command. Soldier Battle Lab and Pacific

Career counselors have details

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Re-enlistment bonuses have been around since the Revolutionary War.

Gen. George Washington offered bonuses (known as bounties) for Soldiers to stay in and keep the Continental Army strong during the founding days of our country.

Today, the Army offers Soldiers several different bonuses for a number of different re-enlistment options.

"There's no blanket bonus where every Soldier gets money. It's all given by MOS, rank, promotion status, where you want to go, what your ETS is and how long you re-enlist for," said Sgt. Maj. Lyle Hogue, the command career counselor for Fort Benning.

According to the Army Public Affairs Office in Washington, D.C., the Army has reached 106 percent of its active-duty re-enlistment requirement for the first half of this fiscal year.

At Fort Benning, Hogue said 81 percent of the Soldiers with less than 10 years of service who re-enlisted received a bonus this year.

"To stay strong, the Army needs three or four out of every 10 initial entry Soldiers to stay in. Do we want all 10 of them to stay in? Sure, but that's not realistic," Hogue said.

"I encourage Soldiers to read the bonus messages, but they really need to talk with a career counselor," said Master Sgt. Jeff Wolfe, Fort Benning senior

Alligator captured at Uchee Creek Marina

Relocated to Alabama pond

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

You never know when a roll of duct tape might come in handy.

So when Capt. Kevin Pelley, deputy provost marshal, got a call about an alligator at Uchee Creek, he took his duct tape with him.

"I heard the call over the radio," Pelley said, "and it was something unusual, so I went out."

He said the MPs regularly get calls about snakes, loose dogs and other wild animals, but not alligators. Pelley and Nathaniel Edmunds, a Department of Defense police officer detailed to the post game warden, went to Uchee Creek.

"The MPs don't handle wild animals," Pelley said, "but we were simply concerned about how close this one was to the docks and people putting their boats in."

Although there have been reports of alligator sightings, none had been that close to the marina, he said.

The call came in after two teenage boys rowed out to check a trot line they had set out near the junction of Uchee Creek and the Chattahoochee River. Tangled in the line and plastic bottle buoys

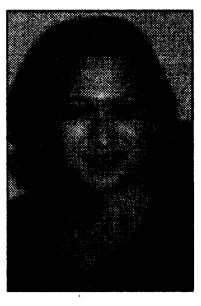
Give 'em a carrot, not a cookie

Annette Fournier
USAIC Public Affairs Officer



During college, I worked as a summer camp counselor with school-age children. During an average day, we would do a variety of activities, from hiking to swimming to playing kickball. Spending the day running around in 90 degree weather, I always brought a nutritional lunch so I could make it through without passing out. But the kids' lunches were a different story.

Lunches were packed full of cookies, Cheetos, sodas, and Lunchables. The sheer volume of food contained in the lunchbox meant the occasional apple or sandwich was thrown out in favor of eating a bulging bag of Oreos.

Just how much food does a 5- or 10-year-old need during the course of a day? If the fat and sugar content of those lunches was any indication, I'd judge the average American child needs roughly the same caloric intake as a 2,000 pound steer.

Childhood obesity is growing at increasing rates, tripling in the last 25 years, according to the American Obesity Association. More than 30 percent of children ages 6 to 11 are overweight and 15 percent are obese, with similar statistics for adolescents and teenagers, according to www.obesity.org. A child is considered obese when their body is more than 25 percent fat for boys and 32 percent for girls.

Obesity in children can cause asthma, type 2 diabetes, high blood pressure, abnormal bone development, sleep apnea and a higher probability of becoming obese adults. Overweight children are more likely to develop self esteem problems, depression, and eating disorders.

There are many causes of childhood obesity, such as low physical activity and genetics, but the saying, "you are what you eat" tells it like it is.

It's easy to guess which option most kids will choose when deciding between brussel sprouts or a Big Mac. Having limits is a good thing. Just because a kid wants it, doesn't mean they should have it.

I can't imagine any parents would pack cigarettes in a child's lunch box, just because little Bobby likes to have a drag during recess. Obviously they wouldn't want to encourage behavior that is unhealthy and addictive. Bad eating choices are also habit-forming and obesity can lead to a lifelong battle with weight.

Parents cannot control every morsel a kid eats, but parents can control what food they choose to buy. Most likely, if junk food and sugary drinks are not in the house, the adults in the family will lose weight along with their kids.

The worst obesity causing culprits according to www.childhealth.com are:

- candy and cookies
- ice cream
- toaster pastries and snack cakes
- chips and nachos
- soda and fruit flavored drinks

Instead, try giving kids these foods:

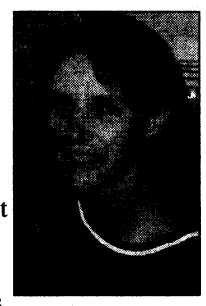
- nuts or popcorn
- sugar-free Jell-O
- sliced vegetables or fruit
- water, reduced fat milk, diluted juice or sugar free alternatives

Health experts suggest these tips to help kids build healthier habits:

- Before kids eat, have them drink a glass of water.
- Do not routinely eat fast food.
- Involve kids in cooking, so they understand what they're eating.
- Don't use food to comfort an upset child or as a reward. Kids will associate food with comfort, and may become emotional eaters.
- Become a label reader and ponder if you really want the ingredients listed going into your developing child's body.
- Eat family meals whenever possible and discourage snacking.
- Make sure kids eat a healthy breakfast.
- Don't let kids snack in front of the TV or computer. When kids sit at a table, they're more conscious of how much they're eating.
- Break bulk foods into smaller portions. Rather than letting a child eat straight from a bag of chips, give them a handful on a napkin, and don't allow seconds.
- Parents should set a good example, by eating a healthy diet, talking to kids about nutrition and exercising with their kids.

Mother Nature can play nicely after all

Melissa House
Bayonet staff



Mother Nature and I are back on good terms again. Never mind the fact that you can still see where the chiggers nibbled my legs and where the poison whatever was.

If you were driving down Lumpkin Road last week and saw a crazy woman and a dog sitting on the grass staring up at a tree, well, that was me and my faithful companion Dixie.

We had taken an early evening walk around the block and stopped to talk to neighbors who were moving out. As we stood there, a large bird flew from one tree to another, so I chased it down.

It was an owl, a beautiful cream and brown owl, with a really annoying crow-like squawking call. It sounded nothing like the soft, soothing whoo-whoo you'd associate with an owl.

So, we decided it was a screech owl. I went inside to share my little bit of nature joy with my boys, who were suitably impressed enough to come out and sit with me a while.

I took the binoculars out on the second trip, whipped them up in front of my eyes — and couldn't see a blasted thing. I checked for lens caps. Nothing. So I put them to my eyes again, this time adjusting the fit to my eyes and rocking the focus bar back and forth, all to no avail. All I got was an eyeful of white and fuzzy.

Just then, my neighbor's 10-year-old daughter came up and wanted to try the binos. I warned her they weren't working quite right, and I didn't know how they could possibly be broken.

That's when I learned that not only am I nature-challenged, but I'm basically a buffoon when it comes to really, really, low-tech equipment.

Lauren summed up the problem within seconds.

"You're fogged up, Mrs. House."

And indeed I was. A few swipes on the four lenses and that owl was crystal clear.

And long after Lauren and my boys lost interest, there I was, sitting on the grass, looking up into the trees.

My unwillingness to leave paid off when I was rewarded by hearing a second squawk coming from another tree. I searched thorough the leaves and branches in the fading light and spotted the second owl.

I finally gave up when dusk gave way to dark. It was so peaceful sitting there and the two birds were absolutely gorgeous. One watched every move the dog and I made.

I plan to get back out there one of these nights a little earlier so I can see them better and watch them longer. To me, that's Mother Nature at her finest and I'm glad she let me enjoy those owls. I can feel my grudge about the poison stuff, the chiggers and the wasp sting slipping away.

Extraordinary is right word, but special will do

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

I've been involved in plenty of sporting events in my youth, and been a spectator at many more, but this weekend I witnessed sportsmanship at its finest.

While covering the Special Olympics Masters Tournament at AMF Peachtree Lanes in Columbus last weekend, one athlete about to bowl was stopped by a competitor from the other team.

It seems the bowler's shoestring was untied and the competitor was concerned he would trip and fall.

One competitor concerned about the welfare of another? This was not anything I'd ever witnessed in the sports arena before.

Later that night at a dance at Columbus State University, my usually shy 8-year-old daughter laughed and played with Special Olympic athletes for two hours.

There were giant beach balls bouncing off walls and heads, leis around every neck and lots of little toys littering the floor.

Without any prodding, all the toys my daughter had been given were laid one-by-one onto the floor, where someone else would scoop them up and hug them to their chest.

I asked why she was doing that, and she said it made her happy to have someone else find her little treasures.

The next day we watched the conclusion of the bowling tournament together.

Athletes would come up and high-five us because they knocked down a pin, and we were happy to applaud them.

There were no fights or disappointed tears. No one was tearing down the reputation of anyone else. There was no evidence of jealousy of any type.

The bowling alley was full of people, more than I'd ever seen in a bowling alley before, and everyone was happy.

It was a boisterous, peaceful, joyous occasion.

While the Special Olympics focuses on making the athletes feel competent, what I saw were competent athletes encouraging everyone else with their enthusiasm and good will.

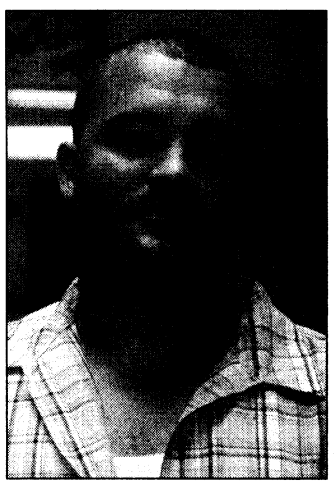
It makes me wonder who really benefits most from these games. The athletes or the average person?

The child-like joy of living and succeeding that every athlete exhibited moved me beyond words.

Their sincere displays of camaraderie and good will, no matter who was winning, were the epitome of good sportsmanship.

Next year my daughter and I have agreed to be volunteers.

We like these Special Olympic athletes.

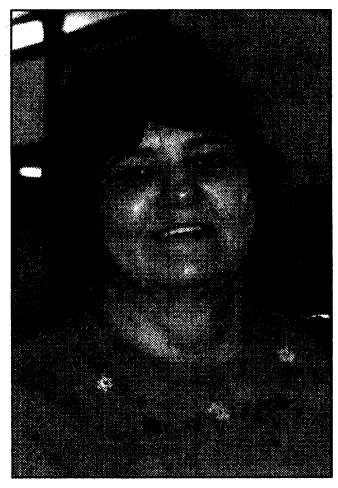


They truly are special in the classic sense of the word.

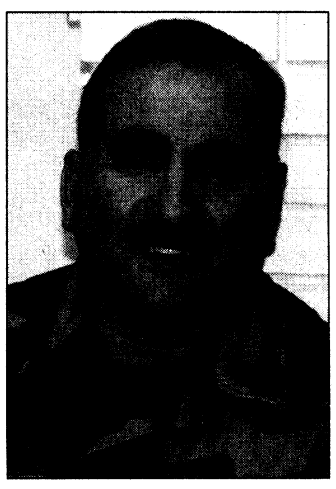
VARIOUS VOICES

What are ways to help kids be healthy?

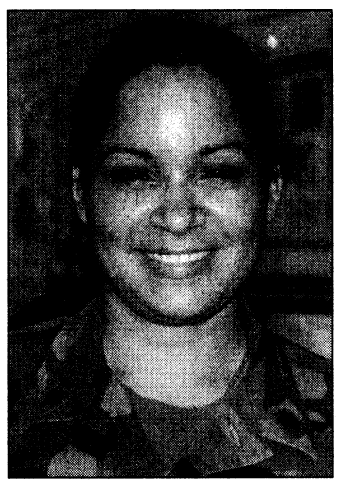
Laurie DesJardin, family member — "I think eating healthy is important. My kids have eaten healthy since they were babies, so encouraging them to eat right isn't a problem. They play sports and I limit their TV and time playing video games. It's not as easy getting my boys to go along with that!"



Sgt. 1st Class James Jennings, HHC, USAIC — "My 13-year-old son eats more than anyone else in the house, but he's very active, so he works it off. I think it's important to get kids involved in sports. My son was an award-winning athlete at his school in Fort Hood, Texas."



Spc. Kay Charlemagne, 14th Combat Support Hospital — "Paying attention to what they eat is really important, like no fast food. I'm a nutritionist in my job, so I'm really aware of it, and it drives me crazy to see people feeding kids junk."



Sgt. Frank Castaldo, 30th Adjutant General Battalion — "Balanced meals are very important. Kids shouldn't eat only one type of food all the time. We exercise as a family, taking bike rides, going on walks and playing tennis. Kids need to learn the value of exercise."

Dr. Bunny Campbell, family member — "I'm a child psychologist, and consistency is most important for a child's development. Family time is also very important. Kids who eat dinner with their family on a regular basis are seventy-five to ninety percent less likely to use drugs."

Sgt. Gary Sparks, Medical Retention Center — "Kids need to eat the right foods, which means limiting the candy bars and cupcakes and sugary junk. You have to teach them when they're young to stay active."

Spc. Eve Johanna, 14th Combat Support Hospital — "Give kids healthy food from when they're little. My son won't even eat fast food, because he's never had it. If we go to a fast food place, he doesn't want a hamburger. He just wants the toy."

Soldier shows age doesn't matter

Melissa House

Pvt. Brian Hayes is an oddity in his platoon. Now in basic training in A Company, 1st Battalion, 329th Infantry Regiment, Hays celebrated his 40th birthday May 11, making him the oldest new Soldier around.

"Yes. They call me old," Hayes said. "I knew that was coming. I fully expected it."

Hayes first enlisted prior to Sept. 11, when he still met the Army's age limit. He arrived at Fort Benning for training, but didn't finish because of some family issues.

By the time everything was resolved, he had exceeded the age limit, but said he strongly supported the country's response to the terrorist attacks and still wanted to serve.

Earlier this year, his recruiter obtained a change of policy waiver for him, and after submitting letters of recommendation, he found out his enlistment was a 'go.'

"I was sworn in on February 2," he said. "And I was surprised to hear, a month later, they had raised the age." The Army announced the increase of the enlistment age for Army Reserve and National Guard Soldiers to 39.

Hayes said he was inspired to enlist again in part because of world events, and partly because of his family. He has two younger sisters, one married to a Soldier who served in the Gulf War and was medically retired after 17 years, the other who became a state trooper at 35.

Although he had friends who thought he was crazy for joining the Army at this stage of his life, he decided he needed to do something more fufilling. "I just needed to do what I thought was best," he said. Hayes said he's also getting the support of his younger company mates.

Pvt. Brian Hayes, A Company, 329th Infantry Regiment, heads for lunch Wednesday after coming off the range. At 40, Hayes is the oldest Soldier in his company.

"I've heard nothing negative," he said. "They support me. There's good camaraderie and teamwork. The young guys have a lot of energy and they motivate me. Hopefully, I can be of some motivation, too."

Army officials said "experienced recruits who can meet the physical demands of military service generally make excellent Soldiers based on their maturity, motivation, loyalty and patriotism."

Pfc. Phillip Hawley, said he knew Hayes was older, but he didn't know how old at first. Hawley, who is 21, ended up with Hayes as his battle buddy.

"I just wanted someone not brainless — and athletic," Hawley said. "And he beats almost everyone in the platoon on the (physical training) test."

Hawley said Hayes runs a minute faster than his 12:52 two-mile time.

"He definitely holds up his end of the deal," Hawley said. "He's motivating to everybody." Hawley said one of Hayes best characteristics is that he doesn't use his age to try to make the younger Soldiers listen to him.

Hayes said there were a few differences in his two basic training experiences.

"The training seems more focused now," he said. "There's a different intensity, too." This time around, he carries his weapon with him instead of drawing it from the arms room when he needs it for the field. He has individual body armor, newer equipment and said he's firing his weapon from the kneeling position for the first time. Overall, he thinks it has improved.

In civilian life, Hayes is a professional roofing contractor who owns his own business, which he'll continue when he's not training with his unit, the New York National Guard's 105th Infantry Regiment. He said the type of work he does helped prepare him for the rigors of basic training.

But basic training does hold one challenge for Hayes.

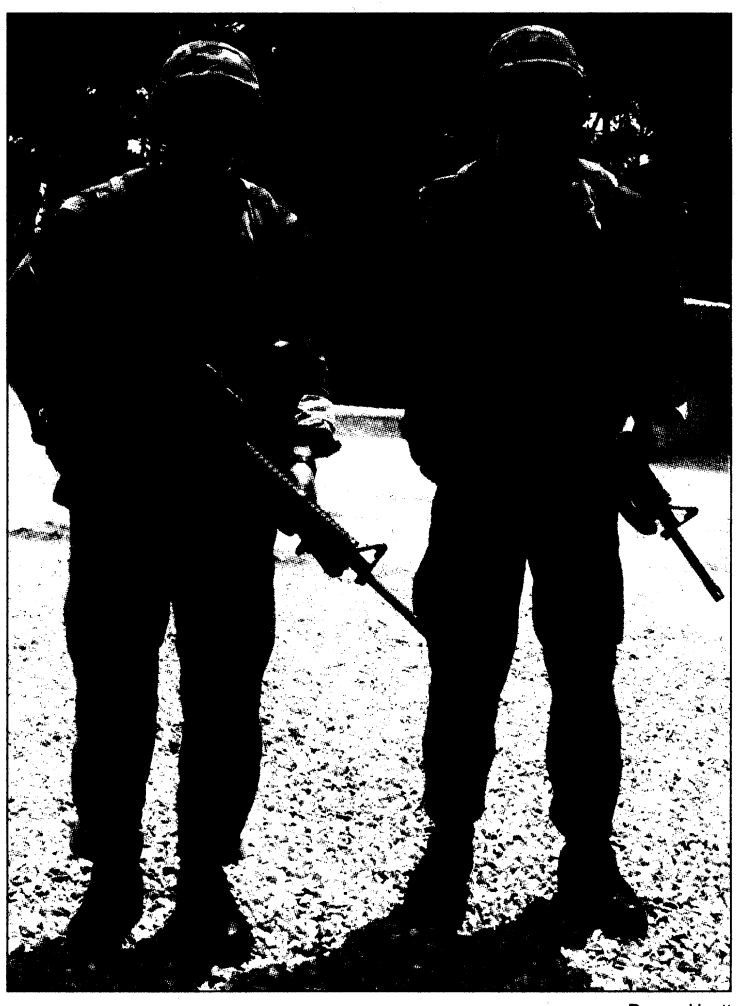
"It's hard to get used to the different sleep cycle," he said.

Lawyer brothers band together

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

They were born on opposite coasts four years apart and haven't lived under the same roof in more than a decade, but two brothers keep choosing remarkably similar paths in their walk through life.

Actually, they're marching in the same direction these days, marching for the National Guard.



Spcs. Jason and Cory Beato, two criminal prosecutors from different parts of the country, are currently in their seventh week of basic training with A Company, 1st Battalion, 329th Infantry Regiment.

"It's not about the money, it's not about the rank, it's all about the job and serving wherever this country needs me," Jason, 35, a criminal prosecutor for the Fulton County District Attorneys office in Atlanta, Ga., said.

"We were both thinking about joining the Army and we talked about it. I'd studied international politics in school and had always wanted to do something to serve our country," Cory, 31, a criminal prosecutor for the city and county of Denver, Colo., said. "I'm already a lawyer. I wanted to do something different, so I joined the Infantry."

"We joined for a lot of similar reasons, but I was also drawn to the physical aspect," Jason said. "By serving in the National Guard I get to be a prosecutor but also serve my country. It's a physical and mental challenge and I'm glad to be here."

Both said they enjoy the training. "It's a lot of what I expected," Cory said. "I love the outdoors and wish we were outdoors more, but it's starting to get more hands-on now."

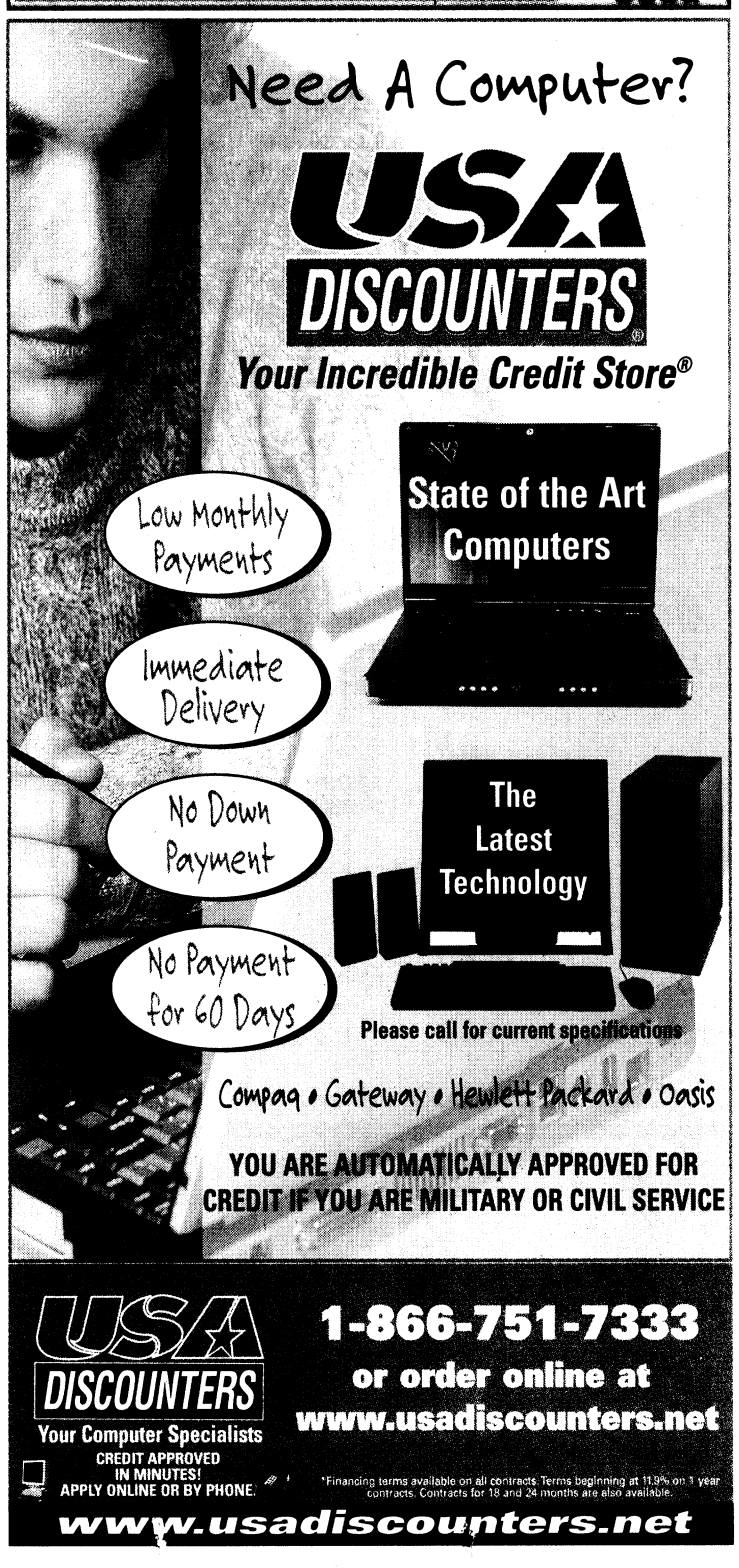
"We have eight people over the age of 30 training here right now," said 1st Sgt. Marty Wazbinski, 1st Sgt. of A Co. "There are seven people with bachelor degrees and three with masters degrees, including the two brothers."

Neither brother is concerned about being older than the average Soldier in basic training.

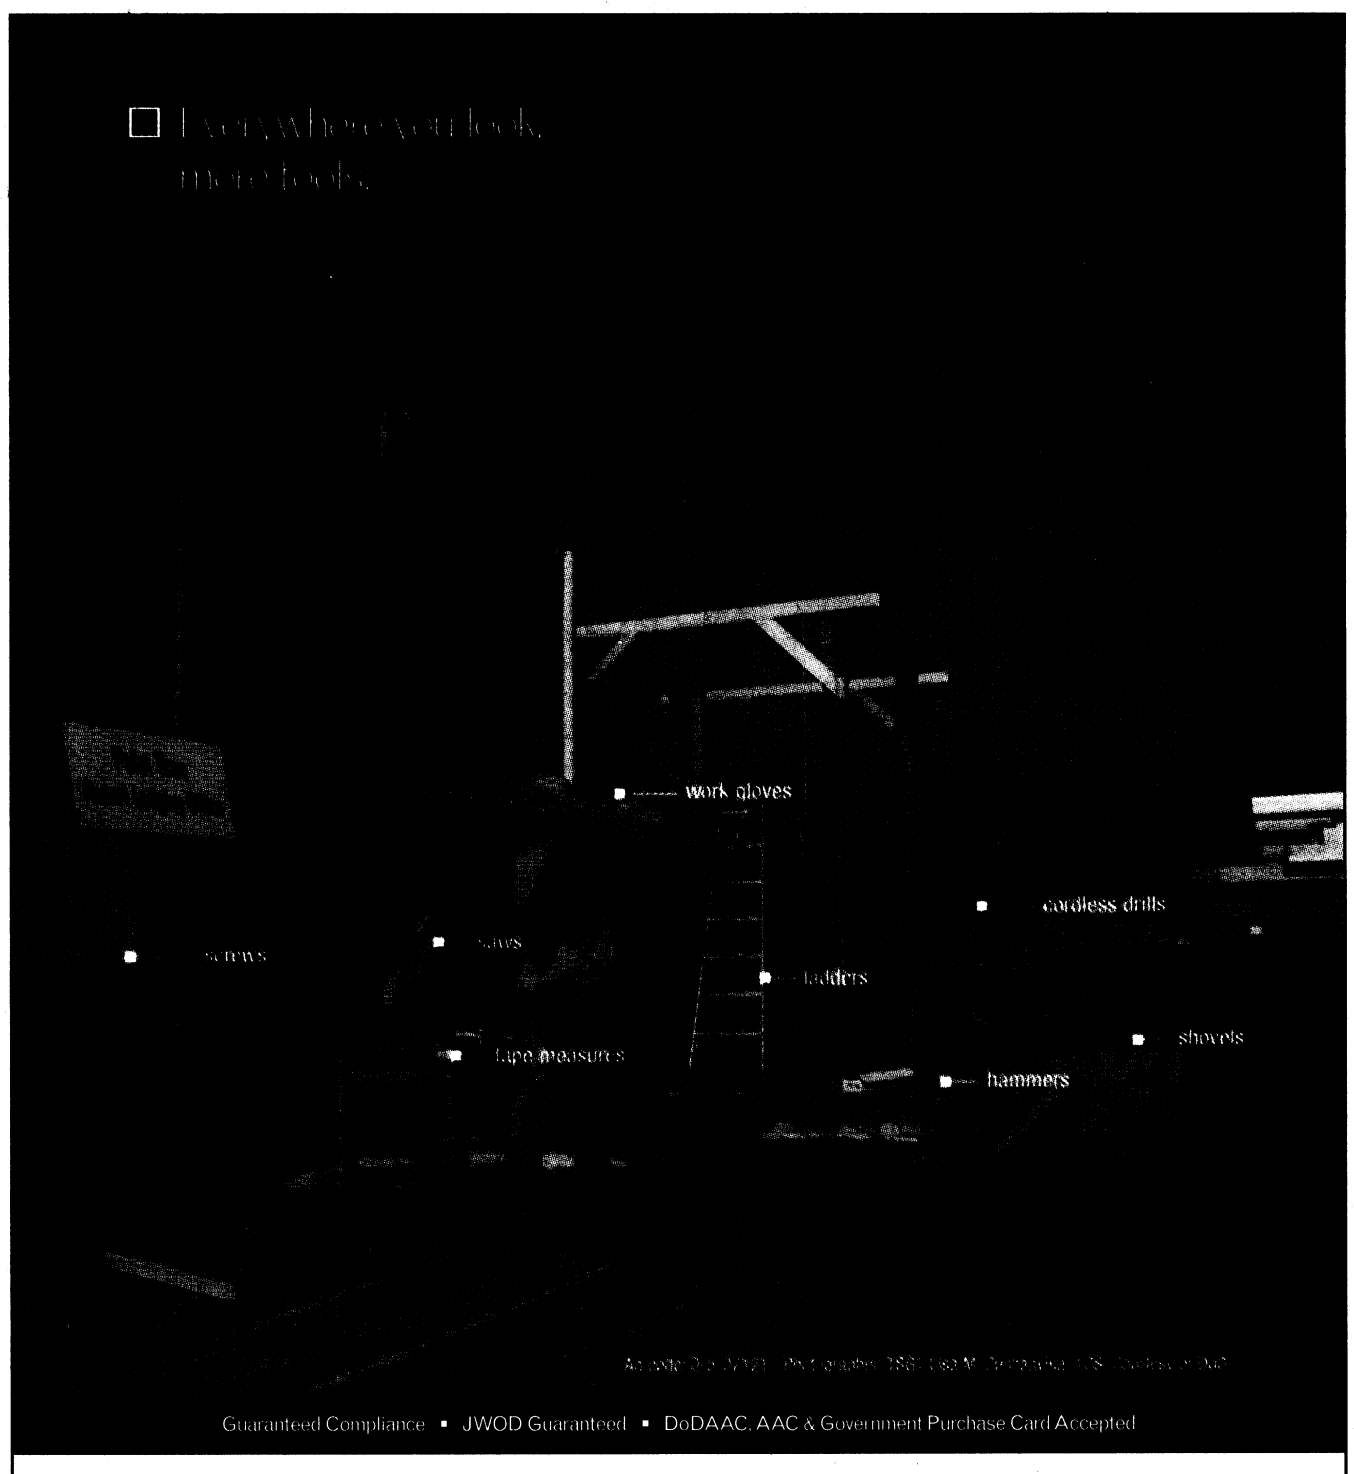
"The body doesn't feel like it did fifteen years ago," Jason said. "But we're doing what we have to do, and we're keeping up."

"Maturity just comes with the years," Cory said. "The training environment is one where you have to get along. Age is really helpful in that respect."

"The worst day is Sunday," Jason said. "You go to church services and that's it. We just sit around. It's like (the movie) Groundhog Day - it's the same thing every Sunday over and over again. Once you get over Sunday, the rest of the week flies by."



Neither is concerned they might deploy overseas.



"If its got to be done, we're willing to go wherever the Army wants us to go," Cory said.

Following graduation from basic training, the two brothers are headed to Airborne school.

"I guess you could say we're battle buddies," Jason said. "I just have more information to blackmail him with later on. That's how we're different from most battle buddies."

6th Ranger Training Bn. changes command

David Dismukes

Rain pours down on the Color Guard and Rangers of the 6th Ranger Training Battalion as they stand at attention during the unit's change of command ceremony where Lt. Col. Lee Sikes assumed command from Lt. Col. Darcy Brewer at Camp James E. Rudder, Fla., July 15.

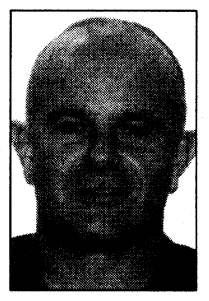
Rain doesn't dampen change of command ceremony July 15

David Dismukes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

CAMP JAMES E. RUDDER, Fla. — With harnessed alligators in attendance, Lt. Col. Lee Sikes assumed command of the 6th Ranger Training Battalion from Lt. Col. Darcy Brewer July 15 during a summer downpour.

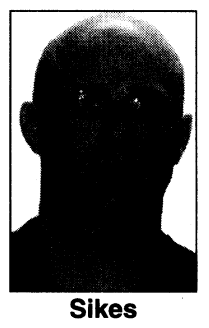
"As we saw today, Rangers are a little bit cold, wet, tired and hungry all the time; they're always hallucinating, always learning how to make quick decisions with an exhausted mind. Here at Camp Rudder is the final phase of Ranger School, and this battalion polishes up the gem that we call the American Ranger," said Col. K.K. Chinn, commander, Ranger Training Brigade.

The Florida phase of Ranger School is the third and capstone phase with emphasis on continuing the development of Ranger students' combat arms functional skills, Chinn said. Rangers must be capable of operating effectively under conditions of extreme mental and physical stress.



"(As Rangers you) need to know your environment," Chinn said. "Lieutenant Colonel Brewer knows the environment here and also knows what it means to be a combat leader. He's served overseas and is a proven combat veteran and brought that knowledge with him to the Florida Ranger Camp. He's a premiere trainer and has done a phenomenal job on what we do and how we train Rangers for our Army here in Florida."

When Rangers leave here they are prepared to execute the missions and operations they're going to have to execute overseas, Chinn said, and that's Brewer's lasting legacy in 6th Ranger Battalion.



Brewer completed Ranger school in February 1986.

"I remember getting out of the boat, neck deep water, dark and trying to find a tree to sleep in, while the rest of my Ranger buddies tried to get out of the boat without submerging themselves," Brewer said.

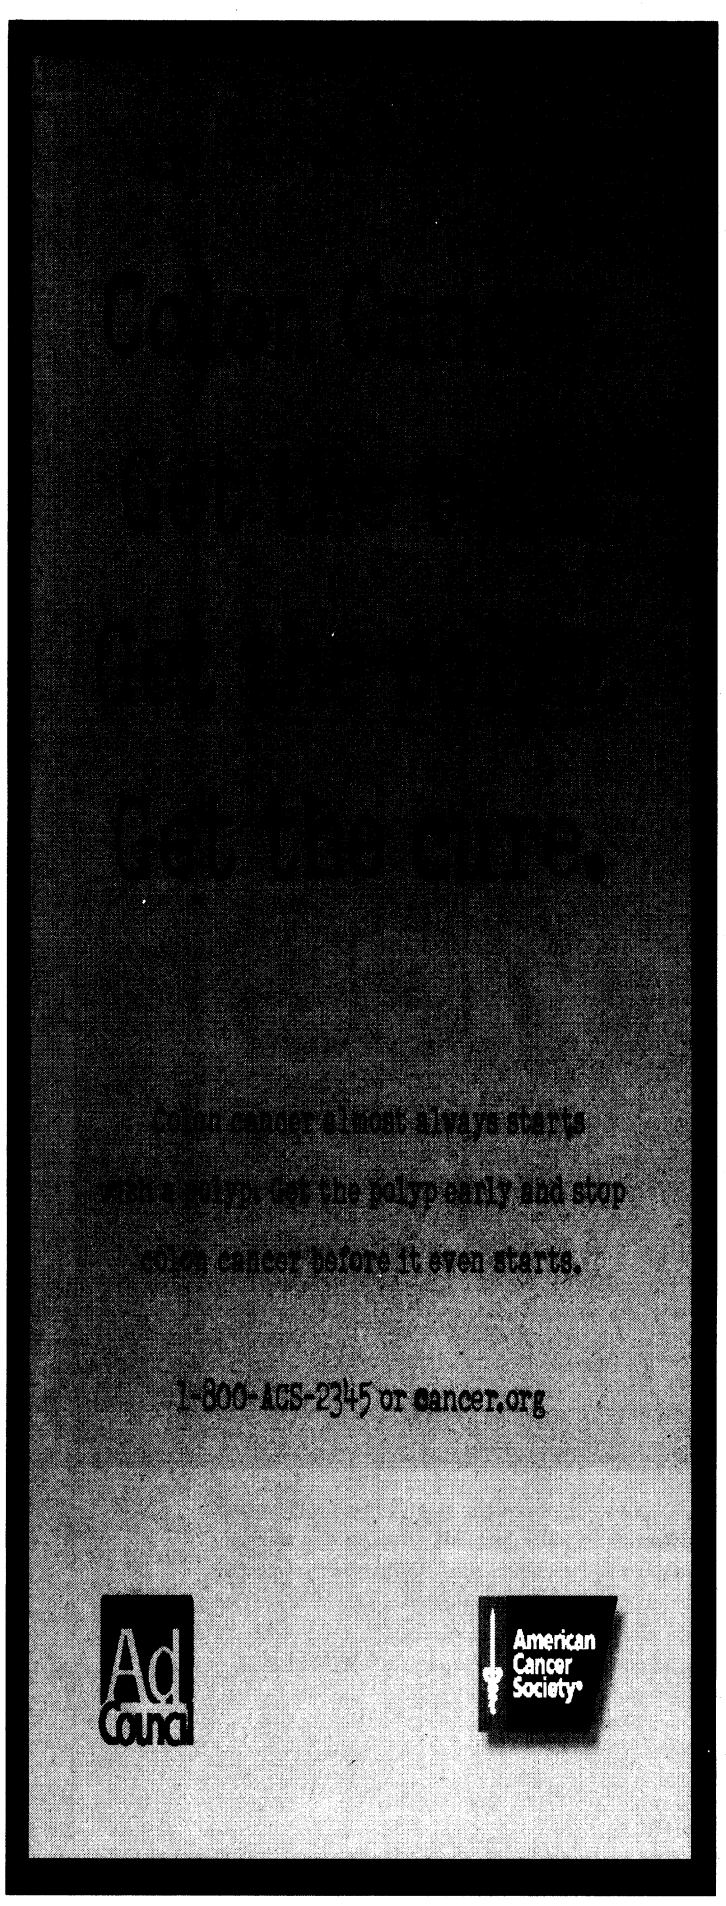
"We've come a long way since then. Ranger Training is still some of the toughest, most realistic and challenging training the Army has to offer. It has to be to train the future leaders of our Army. The training you give these students will leave an indelible print on their memory that will last a lifetime. Ensure you train Rangers as if it were combat, because for many, combat will be their next training exercise."

Brewer

Sikes

During Brewer's command, 6th Ranger Training Battalion trained more than 2,900 Ranger students in the Army's most dangerous training environment to exacting standards to make a difference between life and death on today's battlefield, because every Ranger graduate is going to combat, Chinn said.

"Ranger School is the best life insurance policy you can get for you and the men you'll lead in combat," Chinn said.



"(Brewer) has left a lasting legacy during the past 24 months. He's the most innovative and best trainer I've ever observed," Chinn said. "The mark of a great leader is that he improves everything he touches. Based on the current threat in Iraq and Afghanistan, (he) changed how we train Rangers for our nation."

Brewer included AC-130 gunship support in the training, he increased the urban operations objectives, included media and civilian on the battlefield, Chinn said.

"We're winning this war on global terrorism because of Rangers and this battalion plays an integral role in training the best computer on the battlefield and the most lethal weapon in our U.S. Army, the American Ranger," Chinn said. "Sikes is a proven warrior, a combat veteran of Panama and commanded a company in a Ranger regiment. He knows Rangers and knows what is expected of them once they earn that Ranger tab. No one is more qualified to lead this battalion and build on the strong foundation set by Brewer than Sikes."

"As Ranger instructors your mission remains unchanged, to be confident, quiet professionals that train Soldiers through realistic training that adapts to the ever changing phase of combat. The burden remains on the student to meet the standard and earn the Ranger tab. Those students who earn the coveted black and gold tab are our legacy to the Army and a very critical contribution to the Global War on Terrorism," Sikes said.

Brewer was selected to become deputy chief of Staff, Operations Initiative Group for the U.S. Army, and will be stationed in Washington, D.C.

Survey notes most wired, hospital gets recognized

Maj. Louis Schwartz
MEDDAC

Martin Army Community Hospital was named one of the nation's "Most Wired — Small and Rural Hospitals," according to the results of the 2005 Most Wired Survey and Benchmarking Study released July 13.

The survey, completed by more than 1,000 hospitals, looked at the use of technology to assist in the care of the patient.

Survey results found that these hospitals and health systems are making significant progress automating four core components of an electronic medical record — current medical records, medical history, patient demographics and nurses' notes.

The survey also measured the nation's hospitals on using Internet technologies for quality, customer service, public health and safety, business processes and work force issues.

"Top hospitals realize the power of the electronic medical record to improve quality, safety and the patient experience," said Alden Solovy, executive director of Hospitals & Health Networks, the journal of the American Hospital Association, which has named the 100 Most Wired hospitals and health systems for the past six years. "These hospitals are emphasizing clinical quality and patient services in their efforts to remain technology leaders."

MEDDAC was named one of the first military facilities to implement an electronic health record. In addition, MEDDAC has been using electronic prescription, laboratory and radiological requests from providers since the early 1990s as well as an electronic in-patient medical record since the late 90s, which less than 5 percent of medical facilities in the nation use.

> "We are very proud of this national award and believe it demonstrates our overall commitment to health-care technology, which continues to be a critical component of our health care delivery system."
> Col. Margaret Rivera
> MEDDAC commander

"We are very proud of this national award and believe it demonstrates our overall commitment to health-care technology, which continues to be a critical component of our health care delivery system," said Col. Margaret Rivera, MEDDAC commander.

"This blend and balance between the quest for improved technology and the continued delivery of individual, personalized care should be very reassuring to our community and our patients," she said.

"MEDDAC is consistently looking for ways to improve the delivery of health care," Rivera said. "Technology is one of those contributors to care that helps provide quality care to our patients."

"Our patients have the capability to use the Internet to book appointments, see the status of their consults and refill prescriptions while our providers can review the status of their patients, order medications and X-rays securely from anywhere in the world, including Iraq," said Lt. Col. Placidia Clark, infomatics nurse with MEDDAC.

"The military's health-care system leads the country in the use of technology to support care and this award demonstrates that."

Three staff members from the facility will travel to San Diego, Calif., at the end of July for the National Healthcare Leadership Summit to receive the award.

"I'm very excited about the opportunity to represent the hospital," said Nick Davis, site manager for SAIC who was selected by his peers for his work to foster the use of technology in health care.

VA partners with Army to replace monument

Department of Veterans Affairs

Last November, VA and the Department of the Army signed a joint agreement to replace the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery. The main part of the Tomb, crafted from a 55-ton block of solid marble, has stood adjacent to the Memorial Amphitheater overlooking Washington, D.C., since 1932.

The 73-year-old monument is being replaced because of two large cracks that travel completely around the Tomb.

Because the Tomb of the Unknowns is considered a government headstone, the Army asked VA — through the National Cemetery Administration (NCA) — to acquire an identical replacement.

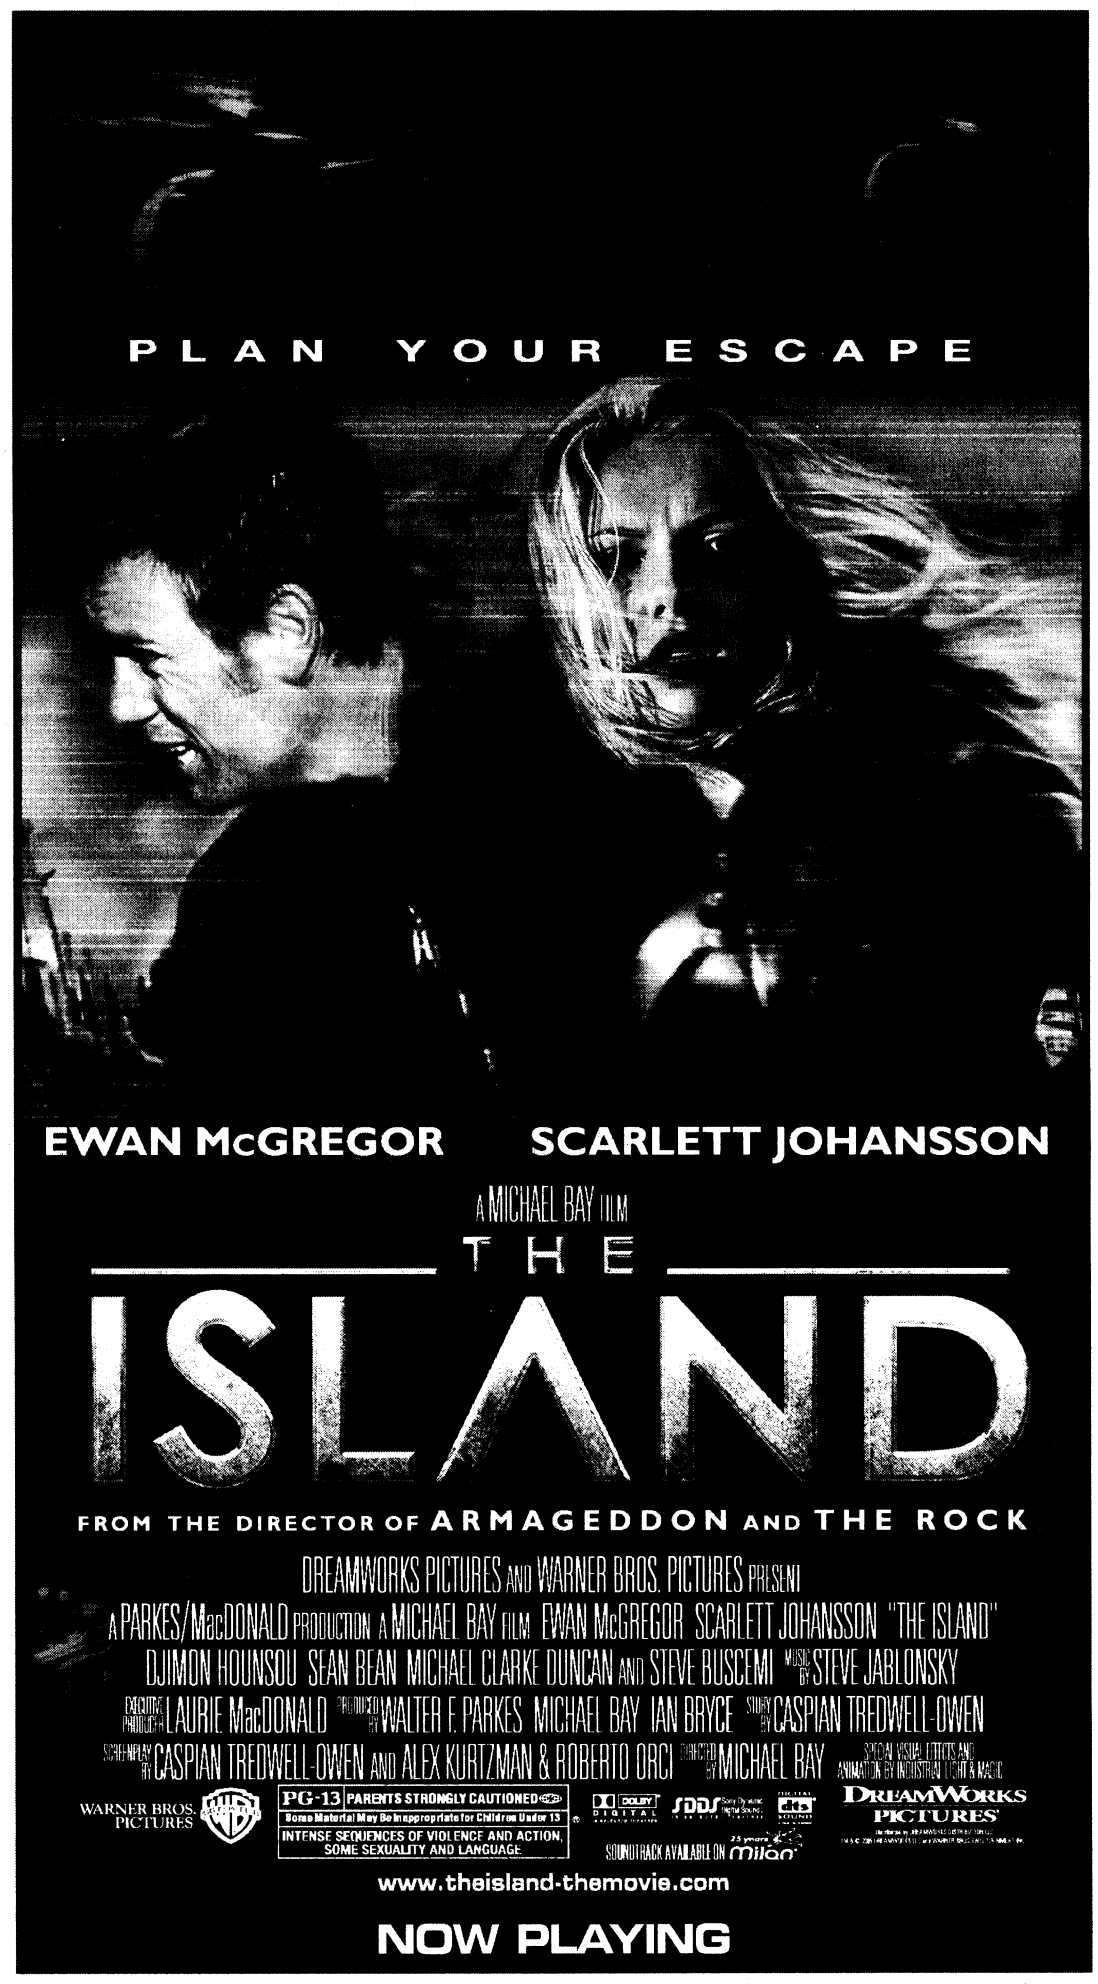
NCA will solicit, award, and fund the contracts to create the replacement Tomb, including procurement of the stone, sculpting the marble, and transporting the new Tomb to Arlington.

The original Tomb came from Yule Quarry in Colorado. It was designed by Lorimer Rich and sculpted by Thomas Hudson Jones.

The Tomb consists of seven pieces of marble — the sub-base (four), base, die and cap. VA will replace only the base, die and cap. The die is the main part that most people think of as the Tomb; it includes the north and south faces with wreaths, the west face with the words "Here rests in honored glory an American Soldier known but to God," and the east face with the three Greek figures representing peace, victory, and valor.

Since the drawings used to create the original Tomb were lost, one of the first steps in the replacement process was to create a blueprint of the Tomb. The Army turned to Direct Dimensions Inc., of Maryland, to capture digital images of the Tomb of the Unknowns.

Using the latest technology, Direct Dimensions recorded the precise specifications of the Tomb. Rather than using video or photographs to create two-dimensional images, laser scanners were used to create an exact three-dimensional model. The laser scanning picks up barely visible marks and details that video and photographs don't.



The three-dimensional model replaces the original blueprints. Not only will the information be used in contracting for the sculpting of the Tomb, it will also help with the actual sculpting. The three-dimensional model will be loaded into computer-assisted milling machines that use lasers to do the initial sculpting to within one-inch of specifications.

Then sculptors will complete the finished work by hand.

NCA estimates it will take 18 months before the replacement Tomb is ready for delivery to Arlington National Cemetery. The original Tomb will be donated to the Smithsonian National Museum of American History.

PURCHASE AT YOUR MILITARY EXCHANGE

AT&T Global PrePaid Cards offer low rates that are optimized for military personnel calling home to the U.S.

The 550-Unit AT&T Global PrePaid Card offers deployed soldiers the best value when calling to the U.S. from Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom — just 19¢ a minute when the Card is purchased at any OEF/OIF location. When purchased online or at other Exchange locations in the U.S. and around the world, it's just 21¢ a minute.*

★ Where can AT&T Global PrePaid Cards be purchased?
Buy yours at your local Exchange or online at www.aafes.com. Friends and family of military personnel can also purchase Cards for you at this site. When deployed in Iraq, Afghanistan and Kuwait, Cards can be purchased at the Exchange, where the price of the 550-Unit Card is just $35.

When calling within the U.S., 1 unit equals 1 minute of calling. When making international calls from overseas, more units are used per minute of call time and the number of units is different based on the country you are calling from. For example, when using the 550-Unit Card, for calls made from OEF/OIF to the U.S., 1 minute equals 3 units of call time. So the 550-Unit Card is good for 183 minutes of calling. For information on other countries, just call the 800 Customer Service number on the back of your Card.

★ Optimized military rates. Great AT&T benefits:
- Minutes never expire.
- Low rates. Remember, prepaid cards bought at other retailers may have higher overseas rates.
- Recharge with AT&T Autominutes® and never run out of minutes.
- Toll free Customer Service available 24/7.
- INFO TO GO available† with weather, sports and more!

★ Visit Camp AT&T.
Before you're deployed, go to www.att.com/mil and check out the Camp AT&T section. It contains information on calling from all the forward-deployed areas, other overseas locations and from U.S. Naval ships.

AT&T

*A surcharge of at least 10 units/minutes (subject to increase) applies to pay phone calls. Units are based on U.S. domestic calling. International rates are higher than U.S. domestic rates, differ according to destination called and are subject to change. Rates may be higher for calls made to or from mobile phones. Command are conducting the assessment of the technology and will evaluate it during a demonstration at Fort Shafter, Hawaii in September.

Representatives from the Air Force are at Fort Benning to observe the experiments, and determine if the technology would be useful for their needs.

Soldiers from the 39th Military Police Detachment out of Fort Shafter are at Fort Benning to aid in the testing.

Sgt. Marco Gonzalez has been working with the technology for about a month.

"It's a great piece of equipment, and I think it could be really useful," he said.

"This testing is interesting because it kind of pits man against machine, to see whether a Soldier or the Overwatch is better at detecting where sniper fire came from."

In one experiment, Soldiers drove an Overwatch-mounted humvee past McKenna MOUT while testers fired blanks at the vehicle.

One Soldier listened and watched for shots while another used the Overwatch to detect fire. The Soldier watching was able to say that the vehicle had been shot at, but the Soldier using Overwatch was able to determine the exact building the shot came from.

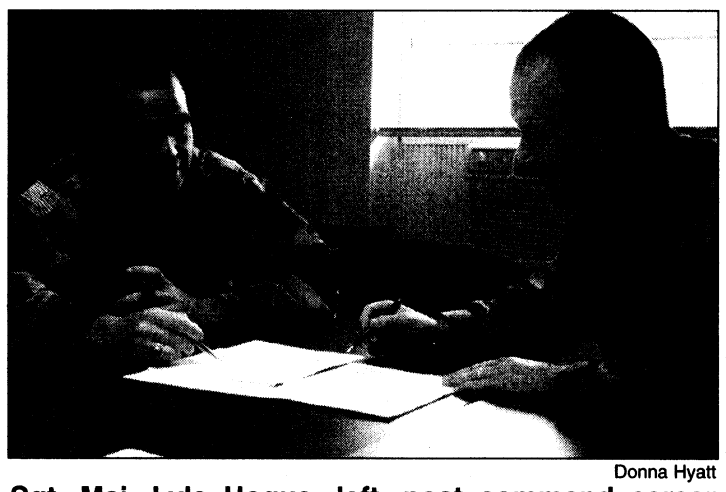
Annette Fournier

The Overwatch, a prototype sniper-detection system is being tested at McKenna Mout site. It is a high-speed processor designed to sense the flash of gunfire and detect where it came from.

At this developmental stage, there are still some challenges to work out, said Greg Lawson, systems engineer for Radiance Technologies.

The Overwatch has to be weather-proofed against moisture, dust, and extreme temperatures.

"Any time you have machinery working in a closed box without ventilation, it's going to produce heat," Lawson said. "Then you put that technology in a desert environment, and you have to find ways to deal with that heat."



One way the developers have found to control the temperature is by placing a cooling system on the unit.

Another challenge is that the Overwatch can only detect fire that comes within its field of view, 120 degrees horizontally and 20 degrees vertically. This means the system cannot detect a shot unless the camera is pointed in that direction, Mason said.

Engineers are trying to improve its ability to distinguish between gunfire and other distractions, for instance a flash of light from a reflection.

"These experiments are important because they help us determine whether this technology is going to help Soldiers do their job better," said James Evans with data section, Soldier Battle Lab.

"It's a technology with a lot of possibilities," Evans said. "Following these experiments, we'll take all this data back and crunch the numbers. That will really tell us how effective the system is, and how we can improve it."

career counselor and Retention Operations NCO.

"Especially because the bonus messages are always changing.

"Keeping track of which MOS is offering how much money for what length of re-enlistment service during a short open time frame can be a daunting task to keep them all straight," he said.

There is a career retention NCO in every company and battalion on post. They are trained to answer specific questions for each Soldier interested.

"Each person you have to approach differently and find out what their goals are," Hogue said.

"All of the career retention counselors on Fort Benning are trained to do that, and know where to go to find the bonuses for them."

In May, the Army announced a new re-enlistment policy allowing Soldiers to re-enlist up to 24 months before their enlistments end.

"If the timing is right, because Soldiers have to re-enlist within a certain period of time, Soldiers can receive especially large bonuses," Hogue said.

"One of the latest incentive messages to come out is for some Soldiers who have ETS dates in the remaining fiscal 2005.

"The Army added an extra $7,500 bonus if they re-enlist," Hogue said.

Some Soldiers on a stop-loss with an ETS of fiscal 2005 and deployed to Afghanistan, Kuwait and Iraq are eligible for some really big bonuses right now, he said.

Because the bonuses involve so many different factors and are constantly changing, Soldiers are encouraged to talk with their unit career retention counselor for bonuses that apply specifically to them.

Gator: Relocates to Alabama pond

was the alligator.

The boys, whose father is a retired first sergeant, had lived at Fort Polk, Pelley said. They told him finding wild game, even alligators, was nothing new, but they didn't want to pull it in their small dinghy.

"They definitely weren't scared," Pelley said. "They've been out in the woods and they knew about dangerous animals."

Pelley and Edmunds met with Alabama conservation officer Cooper Howard and Gordon Cox, a nuisance control contractor, and went to get the gator.

"He was tangled up pretty good," Pelley said, "so we used the trot line to tow him toward the boat and he did his death roll."

The four men pulled the male gator into the boat, where they used the duct tape Pelley and Cox brought to secure its mouth and "handcuff" its legs behind its back. They estimated the alligator is 5- or 6-years-old and weighed more than 100 pounds. It measured 7 feet 10 inches long.

The alligator was moved to a pond on private property in Russell County, Ala., where it is out of the Chattahoochee watershed.

Pelley said anyone who encounters an alligator or other dangerous animal on post, should slowly leave the area and contact the Environmental Management Division of the Directorate of Public Works at 544-7319 or the Military Police at 545-5222 or 911.

To report wild animals in the housing areas, call 545-3224 or the MPs.

Families First to transform personal moves

Program offers benefits, safeguards

LaWanda York
American Forces Press Service

The process of service members moving their household goods — virtually unchanged for many years — is about to transform.

The Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command is developing a new process called Families First, scheduled to launch Feb. 1.

"We are extremely proud to introduce this absolutely transformed personal property program that will provide many benefits and safeguards to individual service members," said Maj. Gen. Charles W. Fletcher Jr., head of SDDC and leading proponent for Families First.

Families First is designed to alleviate some of the stress of moving by involving the service members in the process and giving them a voice in how their personal property is moved.

Working closely with the military services, the Office of the Secretary of Defense and Congress, SDDC partnered with the trade associations of the American moving industry to create Families First.

"Families First is dedicated to supporting the armed force's most important stakeholders, the military and civilian service customers," said Thomas Hicks, the command's program director for personal property moves.

"Our commitment to the warfighter runs parallel to our support to the invaluable work provided by America and international transportation service providers.

"The working partnership between the moving industry and the U. S. military is a longstanding, mutually productive and positive relationship," Hicks said.

Every year, about 500,000 service members and civilian employees move to new duty stations.

This comprises the biggest moving population in the United States, making the stakes high for both the customer and the transportation service provider.

Presently, transportation service providers are selected based on the lowest cost, with little consideration for performance.

Under Families First, transportation offices will use a "best value" approach that focuses on performance. Most moving business will be awarded to transportation service providers who do the best work as measured by the customer.

That customer, the service member, will exercise his or her voice by completing a Web-based customer satisfaction survey to measure the performance of their movers

"We all share the goal of providing the best customer service to those who deserve it the most, the American service member," Hicks said.

"Families First unites the moving industry, the (military) services and SDDC in a sensible and cooperative manner to achieve this goal."

This emphasis on customer satisfaction is expected to stimulate better quality work from all transportation service providers.

Families First also promotes customer satisfaction through full-replacement value for property lost or damaged beyond repair, direct claims settlement between the service member and transportation service provider, Web-based counseling option; and increased emphasis on direct deliveries — reducing temporary storage requirements.

> "We all share the goal of providing the best customer service to those who deserve it the most, the American service member."
> Thomas Hicks
> Director of personal property moves for the Surface Deployment and Distribution Command

Currently, service members may only receive a depreciated value for property lost or damaged beyond repair in a move. In the new program, a member is entitled to the current replacement value of the item.

There are some exceptions where the transportation service provider may replace the lost or damaged item with a comparable used item. The exceptions list includes boats, personal watercraft, ultralight aircraft, pianos, musical organs, firearms, art objects, all-terrain vehicles and snowmobiles.

Today moving claims are handled through the closest military claims office.

In Families First, service members file a claim directly with the transportation service provider using SDDC's Web-based claim filing process, a part of SDDC's new Defense Personal Property System.

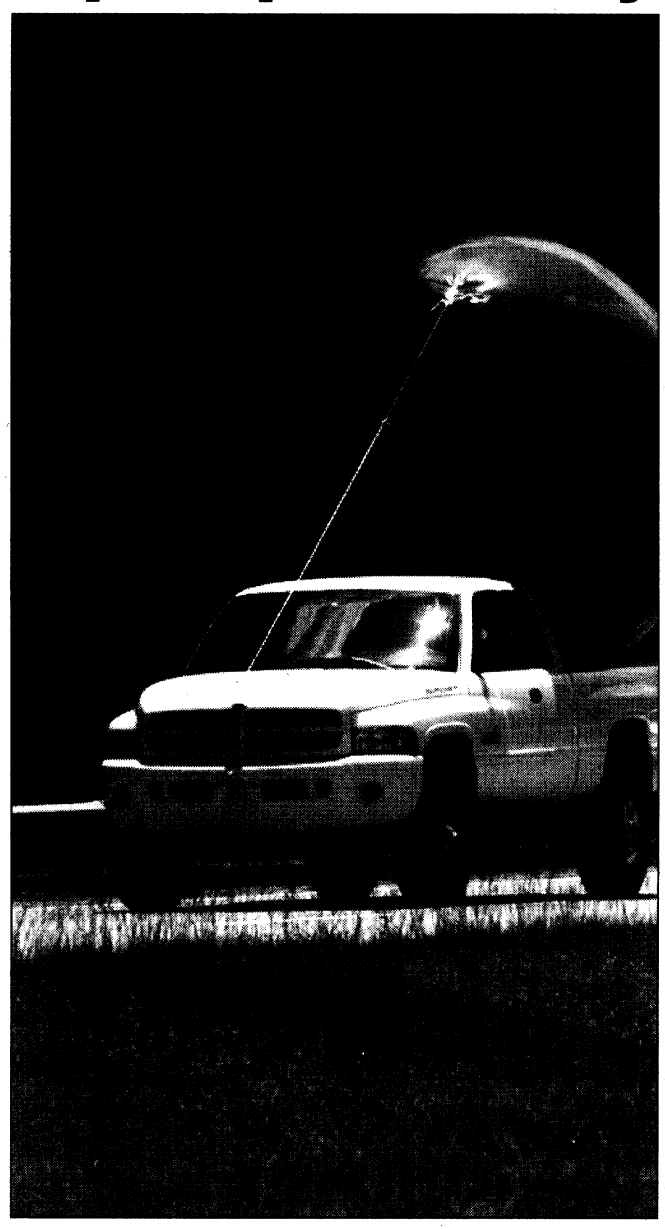
If no settlement is reached within 30 days, a service member may transfer the claim to the servicing military claims office. In all claims processing, maximum transportation service provider limit of liability increases to $50,000 — up from the current $40,000.

Presently, service members receive pre-move information from the local transportation office or the Department of Defense pamphlet entitled "It's Your Move."

In Families First, service members have an added option and convenience to receive pre-move counseling through SDDC's Web-based Defense Personal Property System.

Families First encourages door-to-door moves with the goal of sharply reducing temporary storage. Temporary storage results in more handling, delay and expense, all of which increases risk to the shipment.

"Under the new program, we will work closely with the services to synchronize member relocations so most moves may be door to door," Hicks said.



"This initiative emphasizes customer convenience and reduces the need for the double handling of property."

Families First provides a payment program feature that automates payments to transportation service providers.

"We recognize that Families First represents a dramatic change in the way we do business," Hicks said. "The greatest challenge is managing business among competing firms."

A contractor working for Columbus Water Works moves red balloon on I-185 Wednesday. CWW operates the water system on Fort Benning, but plans to connect with the main CWW plant. The pumping station under construction just off post on Northstar Drive, will be an unmanned station that boosts the water pressure to post. The telemetric data — including line pressure and valve conditions — will be transmitted to CWW by radio signal. CWW flew the balloon to measure the strength of the radio signals from the new station's location.

Poison sumac

Pretty to look at but poison to the touch

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Leaves three, let them be, is a saying most people have heard about identifying poison ivy, oak and sumac plants.

The problem is some of the plants don't always follow this rule, and can have leaves in groups of five, nine, or even more.

According to the Food and Drug Administration, the one thing they have in common is urushiol, the sticky substance that causes the burning, itching rash on the skin of vulnerable people.

The American Academy of Dermatology estimates that approximately 85 percent of people will develop a sensitivity to poison ivy, oak and sumac.

Most animals, except for a few higher primates, are not sensitive to urushiol, but the FDA notes that they can carry it on their fur or paws. When people touch the animals, the urushiol comes in contact with the skin, usually starting a rash.

Even inanimate objects such as garden tools, balls, or anything else that might come in contact with the plants can be contaminated with urushiol, which will then infect people.

The FDA warns that urushiol that's rubbed off the plants onto other things can remain potent for years, depending on the environment. If the contaminated object is in a very dry environment, the potency of urushiol can last for decades.

Because urushiol can penetrate the skin within minutes, the FDA recommends cleaning the substance off the skin as soon as possible. If more than 10 minutes elapses between skin contact with a poison plant and cleansing can occur, a rash will more than likely develop.

If you've been exposed to poison ivy, oak or sumac, the FDA recommends the following action:

Wipe the exposed skin first with generous amounts of isopropyl (rubbing) alcohol, followed by plain water. Don't use soap before the isopropyl alcohol, as soap will spread the urushiol around on the skin, causing an even more severe rash.

Once the urushiol has been wiped away, take a regular shower with soap and warm water.

Clothes, shoes or anything else that may have come in contact with the plants should be cleaned with alcohol and water.

Poison ivy, oak and sumac rashes usually appear within 12 to 48 hours after contact, followed by blisters and severe itching. The rash only occurs where urushiol has touched the skin, but according to the FDA, the rash appears to spread over time rather than all at once. Urushiol is absorbed at different rates in different parts of the body. Sometimes, urushiol trapped under the fingernails spreads the rash when the skin is scratched.

Most cases of poison plant rashes disappear within 14 to 20 days without any treatment, but the FDA suggests wet compresses or soaking in cool water to relieve the itch. The FDA also recommends over-the-counter topical corticosteroid medicines for effective control of the itching sensation. More severe cases involving the face, genitals or covering more than 30 percent of the body should be treated by a physician.

A few over-the-counter products recommended by the FDA to dry up the oozing blisters include:

Aluminum acetate
Baking soda
Oatmeal baths
Aluminum hydroxide gel
Calamine
Kaolin
Zinc acetate
Zinc carbonate
Zinc oxide

So far, none of the desensitization vaccines and barrier creams claiming to protect against poison plant contaminations has been approved by the FDA.

Most poisonous in the spring and summer when the sap runs freely, poison ivy, oak and sumac are still potent in the dormant winter months. The FDA warns against touching even dead plants because the urushiol remains active for several years.

There are a number of chemical combatants that will kill the poison plants, but they also kill other plants as well. The American Academy of Dermatology considers manual removal of the plants to be most effective, but every bit of the plant needs to be removed, leaves, vines and roots. Be sure to wear long pants, long-sleeved shirts and gloves when getting rid of the weed so as not to contaminate yourself.

Never burn the plants. The FDA reports that urushiol can spread in the smoke and cause serious lung irritation.

Poison ivy:

Usually grows around lakes and streams in this part of the country. It's woody with a ropelike vine or a trailing shrub. Leaves usually come in sets of three but can vary with up to nine leaves that all come off the larger main stem.

Leaves are green in the summer and red in the fall, with yellow or green flowers and white berries.

Poison oak:

Usually grows as a low 6-foot tall shrub in clumps, but can reach a 30-foot vine.

Leaves look similar to regular oak tree leaves and are usually found in clusters of three with yellow berries.

Poison sumac:

Normally found in boggy areas, especially in southern Georgia. It's a rangy shrub growing up to 15 feet tall and having 7 to 13 smooth-edged leaflets with pale yellow or cream-colored berries.

The idea of Growing Room Child Development Centers began in my heart in 1988. We're a local company with deep roots in our community and a strong belief in traditional family values.

Children deserve a literacy-based education, strong with language, reading, writing, and hands-on math and science experiences. Children deserve to be treated with dignity and respect and enjoy a clean, safe school environment. They deserve well-trained, nurturing teachers who encourage strong thinking skills and practice positive reinforcement with strong parent-teacher-school partnerships.

Toddlers and K-2
"Growing Up On Our Block," our early childhood curriculum, teaches themes, colors, letters, skills, and concepts to your 18 month to 2 year old learner. Family-style dining and other specific self-help skills such as potty training are included.

K-3
The "Growing Up On Our Block" 3 year old curriculum is enhanced with the A-BEKA phonics program. More detailed learning experiences include classic children's literature, poetry, writing centers, pre-reading, listening centers, multicultural music, science, math, and family- style dining.

K-3/4
Because many children just miss the September 1st birthday requirement for Pre-K, Growing Room offers a challenging program designed for them. In-class computers, and the phonics-based reading and writing program, A-BEKA is provided, along with all the components listed above in our "Growing Up On Our Block" program.

K-4
This program is for all children (regardless of residency) who are 4 years old on September 1, 2005. It is the extension of the K-3 program with an expanded version of the phonics-based A-BEKA reading and writing program.

COMMUNITY

The global Special Olympics movement got its start in July 1968 when the First International Special Olympic Games were held at Soldier Field in Chicago. The movement may have gotten its inspiration from Eunice Kennedy Shriver, who started a day camp for people with intellectual disabilities at her home in 1962.

It's 9:30 a.m. and the playroom starts to fill with laughter, jabbering and a few tears.

Doris Slaughter, the instructor, helps assure one child that today will be a fun day as she asks a parent to initial some paperwork.

Tot Town's Benning Buddies, for 2- and 3-year-olds, is running on schedule.

The other regular teacher, Gwen Witherspoon, is out sick, so Dawn Cirinese is the substitute for the day. The children don't seem to mind too much and move from one station to another, playing with toy cars and flipping through books.

"The children's attention span is short, so we have a lot of different activities to keep them busy," Slaughter said. "We have different centers for them to do, like painting, writing, listening to music, playing with blocks and reading."

Today is gymnastics, and after circle time, where Slaughter and Cirinese greet each child by name, the group of 10 pair up and walk to the Child and Youth Services, just across the field.

At first, several of the children opt not to participate, but that doesn't stop Slaughter from getting down on the mats and stretching with the children. Instructor Ann Brown and her aide, Paula Knox, start the children off with stretches and move on to different types of movement, then it is on to summersaults, the jump and straddle, uneven bars, balance beam, rings and the slide.

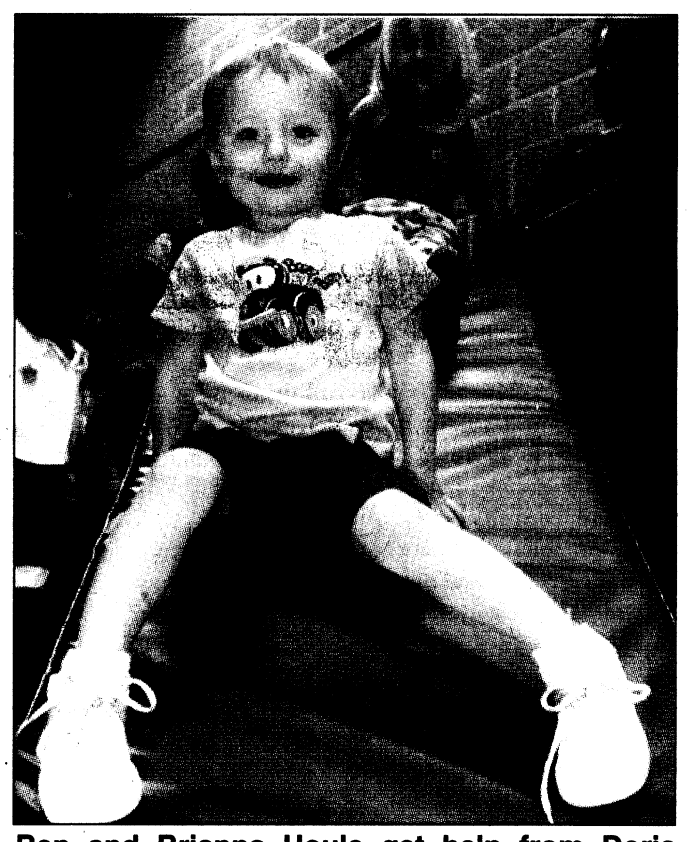
"Gymnastics help to build (the children's) self-esteem and they get to learn something new," Knox said. "They learn to do something where they don't necessarily need someone there to help."

After gymnastics, it's back to Tot Town for story time, songs and lunch.

"We get them to set the table, use silverware and then we eat family-style dining," Slaughter said. "This isn't to take the place of parenting, it is to enhance parenting skills."

Slaughter said teaching the skills the children need to put together the meal helps them learn basic things, like how to count.

After lunch, the children can play at the learning centers again before they have a final circle time and stories. Then it's time to go home, and for most, to take a nap.



"Benning Buddies is a parent morning out program that encourages development and social skills in children," said Kaye Elliott, director of Tot Town. "The program is only a year old and we started it because we felt there was a need."

Elliott said the program helps children who don't get an opportunity to socialize in other ways, for instance, only children or those without neighbors their age. It also gives parents some time for themselves.

"We developed the program to encourage the children's growth and development intellectually, socially, physically and cognitively," Elliott said. "It also helps encourage language development and problem solving skills."

Each week has a different theme to help the children learn about their surroundings. One week may be car safety, where children learn about the importance of buckling up. They will read car books and sing car

Georgia Special Olympic athletes compete in Masters tournament

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Columbus hosted the Masters Bowling Tournament last weekend at AMF Peachtree Lanes for almost 1,000 Special Olympic athletes 22 years old and older.

The athletes came from all over the state and competed in the tournament at southeast Georgia's largest bowling alley.

Severely handicapped athletes were assisted by almost 500 volunteers, and had the option of using a specially constructed bowling ramp to launch their balls.

"Columbus has been great to us. We've got a thousand participants here from across the state. We've been coming to Columbus for five years, and the management team, volunteers and internal workers have been fantastic. Everybody loves coming to Columbus," said John Jowers, senior public relations manager for Special Olympics Georgia.

"We haven't had one incident of anyone getting upset or disruptive," said Wendy Mock, Muscogee County Special Olympics committee coordinator.

Special Olympic competitors and volunteers party at Columbus State University, Saturday.

"There are more than 22,500 athletes in the state of Georgia registered to participate in Special Olympics, which is huge, but we still have a long way to go to reach out to other eligible participants.

"Hopefully, showcase events like this one in Columbus can help us increase the number of eligible athletes and let them know the wonderful benefits of participating in something like this," Jowers said.

Special Olympics of Georgia estimates only 23 percent of the eligible population is currently involved in their programs.

To commemorate the event, a dinner and dance was held at Columbus State University Saturday night. Athletes and volunteers danced to the music of a disc jockey. Giant beach balls filled the air and leis festooned athletes' necks. Winners displayed their medals and ribbons.

"It's extremely rewarding. You go around and look at the athletes faces and see how they help each other, sometimes to the loss of their own medal, and you can see the true care and sense of sportsmanship these people have.

"I think people tend to underestimate how active Special Olympic athletes are. They're competitive but at the same time they'll help each other out. It's sportsmanship at its best," Jowers said.

This is the 35th year Special Olympics has been operating in Georgia.

The Special Olympics State Fall Games will be held Oct. 7 to 9 in Albany, Ga. More than 1,500 competitors are expected to participate in cycling, softball, bocce, golf, walking and running sports.

Fly Old Glory right

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

The Fourth of July may be over, but there are still many American flags flying. Of course patriotism is a good thing, but those choosing to display their pride with an American flag need to be aware of the rules and regulations that come with the responsibility of displaying the flag.

The National Flag Code came into effect June 14, 1923, which is why America celebrates Flag Day on that date. The code is a guideline for handling and displaying the American flag.

One myth debunked is what to do if your flag touches the ground. If the flag should touch the ground, it does not need to be destroyed. If it gets dirtied, soap and water will clean it.

A lot of flag-fliers aren't aware of Section 6a of the Flag Code that states, "When a patriotic effect is desired, the flag may be displayed 24 hours a day if properly illuminated during the hours of darkness."

The Code offers no other guidance, but most who choose to keep their flag up 24 hours a day illuminate the flag with a spotlight, or enough lighting so that the flag is visible.

When a flag is faded or ripped, Section 8k of the Flag Code states "The flag, when it is in such condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning."

Several civic organizations offer assistance in disposing of a flag. These include a local VFW Chapter, an Elks Lodge, the American Legion or the Knights of Columbus. Some Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops also may be of assistance.

A very common mistake is the hanging of the flag when not on a pole. When the flag

Inexpensive ideas keep kids busy in summer

Take Charge America

Are your children hitting a summer slump? Once the initial excitement of taking a break from school dies down, children often find themselves at home with nothing to do besides playing video games or watching television to pass the time.

This summer, get them out of the house and treat them to fun-filled and educational activities that won't break the bank.

According to Take Charge America, a national consumer credit counseling company, keeping your children occupied during the dog days of summer doesn't have to be a chore.

Mike Sullivan, director of education for TCA suggests the following inexpensive summer activities for families to enjoy:

• Public libraries. Many community libraries offer summer reading programs that award children with trinkets or small toys for reading. Have children sign up for their own library cards and encourage them by attending book readings and other activities.

• Bookstores. Attend book signings and appropriate music performances at local bookstores. Meeting children's authors and having pictures taken with them can be exciting for both young and old readers.

• City pools. Nothing spells summer better than being out in the sun and playing in the water. Swimming lessons are inexpensive and fun for children of all ages and are offered during different times in the summer.

Many public pools also have water slides, diving boards or wading pools to enjoy.

•Local playgrounds and parks. Almost every neighborhood is equipped with a playground or park. Have a picnic lunch under the shade or plan a barbecue for the family.

• Discount movie theaters. Matinees offer great discounts on movie tickets. Consider discount movie theaters that offer bigger savings, and bring student IDs for discounts or early showings.

Weekday viewings may also be cheaper than those on the weekends.

• Craft programs. Arts and craft stores often hold in-store children's classes and craft sessions on Saturday or Sunday. Parents and their children can do hands-on projects such as creating notebooks, picture frames and flower pots.

• Year-long membership and day passes. Invest in memberships at museums, zoos, aquariums or theme parks for discounted prices. Visit attraction Web sites and sign up for e-mail newsletters to receive news about upcoming events and extra discounts.

• Minor league sports. Consider attending minor league sporting events as an inexpensive alternative for your children. There are great deals and cheap seats available during minor league seasons.

Treat, don't ignore, postpartum depression

Dr. Amy House
MCG Health System

When your baby is born, you expect everything to be blissful and wonderful. But for 10 to 12 percent of new moms, postpartum depression can leave them feeling worthless, sad and alone.

Although many women will experience the baby blues for the first seven to 10 days after giving birth, postpartum depression is much more than that. Postpartum depression can occur any time in the first year after giving birth and last for two weeks or more.

Symptoms include constant feelings of sadness, irritability, loss of interest in things, worthlessness, difficulty concentrating and low energy. At its worst, a woman may have thoughts about harming herself or her baby. The following are guidelines to help you beat postpartum depression:

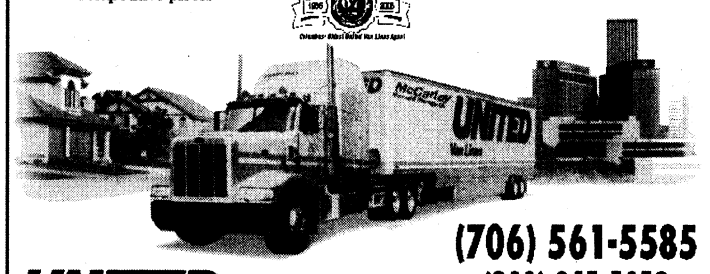
• If you have experienced episodes of depression before, recognize that you are at greater risk for postpartum depression. Make an appointment with your care provider to discuss what you need to do to help avoid it.

• Make sure you have a good support system following the birth of your baby, whether it's family, friends or even local new mom support groups or mother's day out programs. It's important to know that you have help and support in taking care of your new little one.

• Take time to take care of yourself. Go out with friends, exercise 20 minutes daily and eat right. Remember, if you feel happy and healthy, your baby will be happier and healthier.

• Whether or not you are at risk for postpartum depression, if you find yourself feeling depressed for more than two weeks either during pregnancy or after the birth of your baby, call your doctor. A program of therapy and or medication can help.

• Don't ignore the symptoms. They will not just go away. By seeking help, you could save yourself and your family from months of unhappiness and depression.



Those first few months with your new baby are precious. Don't allow a treatable illness to overshadow them. If you are experiencing a problem and think you may have postpartum depression, contact your care provider or call the MCG Department of Psychiatry and Health Behavior at 721-CARE.

songs during the week.

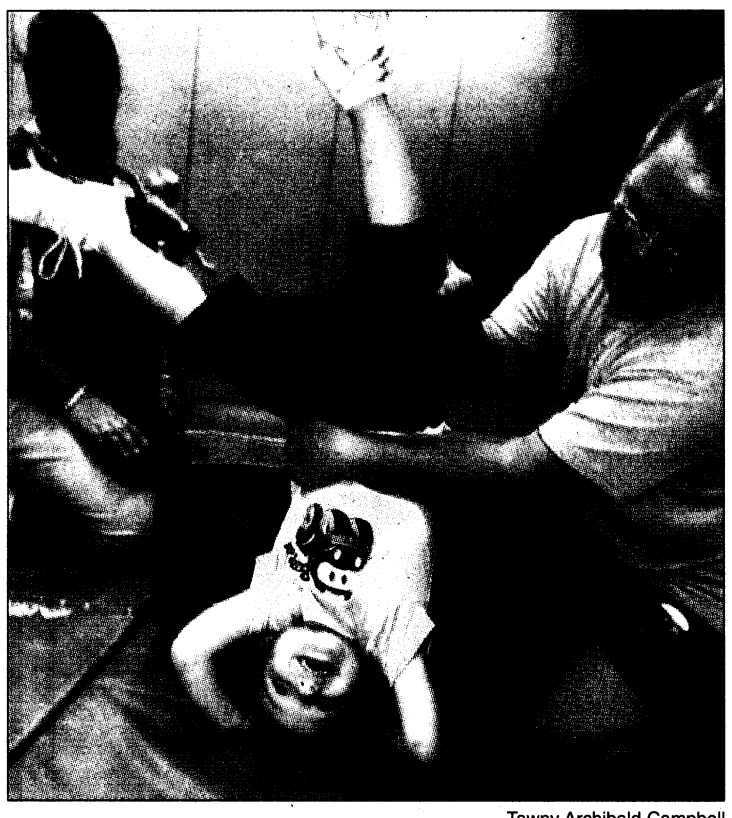
Slaughter said when parents come to pick up their children they can get handouts to reinforce what was learned during the day.

"The instructors have one-on-one involvement with the children and each child's needs are considered when planning the agenda for the day," Elliott said. "This is not a baby-sitting service. You don't just drop your child off and they do nothing. The kids are busy all day."

The program is popular with spouses of deployed Soldiers by providing with free time they might not otherwise have, Elliott said.

"It's only a three-hour program, but provides an opportunity for children to be in a different environment," Elliott said, "and for mothers with two or three children, it gives them a chance to spend one-on-one time with one child while the others are here."

Elliott said the best part of the program, to her, is that she sees how well the children enjoy themselves.



"What I see are happy children who are glad to be engaged and forming friendships with their peers and good, safe adults," Elliott said. "They leave here much more capable than when they came in."

Benning Buddies offers three-day and two-day programs.

Prices are based on income and range from $66-$124 per month.

Tot Town also offers a Summer Buddies program, full day day care services, hourly care and Georgia pre-school.

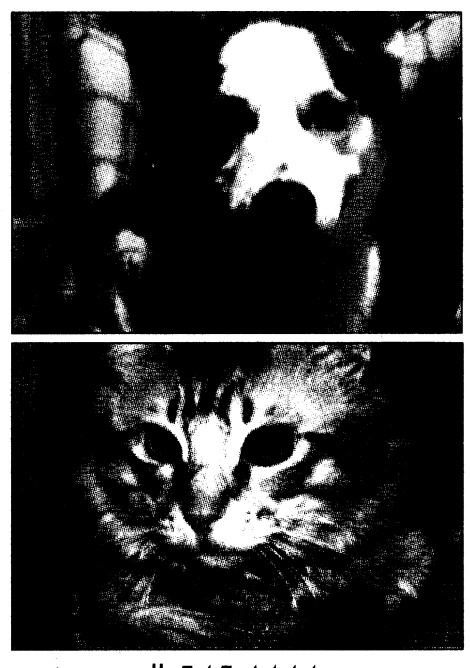
is displayed horizontally or vertically, the union (the blue background with the stars) should be uppermost and to the observer's left.

Other interesting rules in the Flag Code include "The flag should never be used as wearing apparel, bedding or drapery.

American flags should not be embroidered on such articles as cushions or handkerchiefs and the like, printed or otherwise impressed on paper napkins or boxes or anything that is designed for temporary use and discard."



As the Code says, the flag represents a living country and itself is considered a living thing.

REFLECTIONS

"The trouble with Eichmann was precisely that so many were like him, and that the many were neither perverted nor sadistic, that they were, and still are, terribly and terrifyingly normal."

— Hannah Arendt, Eichmann in Jerusalem: A Report on the Banality of Evil

Acuff

In 1960, a group of Israeli special operations soldiers found what they had long sought — the Nazi war criminal who had planned and executed the operations order for the Holocaust.

For 15 years, Adolph Eichmann eluded the scores of people who had dedicated their lives to finding him and bringing him to justice.

But now the chase was over. He was captured. Bundled aboard a plane, Eichmann was smuggled out of Argentina and brought to Tel Aviv to stand trial.

This monster — one of the quintessential embodiments of modern evil — would now get what he deserved.

But once the trial began, and people were able to study the man who had engineered the deaths of millions, what they found was troubling. Eichmann was no monster. What people expected was a Darth Vader or a Hannibal Lecter.

What they got instead was a man more along the lines of a Woody Allen or Pee Wee Herman. Eichmann was quite simply a dork, a dweeb, a nerd. He even wore the requisite BCG glasses.

Had Eichmann been a monster, people could have rested easier. But the revelation that Eichmann was nothing worse than an ambitious bureaucrat was unsettling.

There was simply nothing in Eichmann's life that would give cause to the actions that had made him infamous.

Had Eichmann been a monster, the trial would have brought some measure of satisfaction to those who had suffered.

But Eichmann's ordinariness and mediocrity simply raised the question of whether all of us have the potential to do the same.

For many, one look at Eichmann was all it took to banish pride and instill humility. If Eichmann could commit such acts, then perhaps we all could.

Twentieth century history presents to us a few well-known monsters who are the featured characters of The History Channel. But those monsters are indeed few.

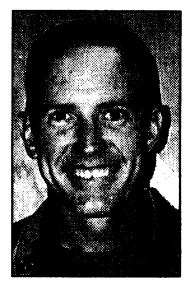
The tragedy of the 20th century is not that evil is executed by evil people, but rather by "average Joes," people altogether ordinary and unremarkable.

Perhaps, contrary to popular belief, we are not naturally good. Perhaps we need help beyond ourselves to move us in that direction.

Consider being adoption hero

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

As I sat across the table, I watched her eyes dance as she talked about the long awaited dream becoming a reality. For years, she and her husband had tried and tried, but to no avail. There were no easy answers. Prayers seemingly bounced off heaven only to land right back in their laps again.



Others had babies so easily, why couldn't they? Others didn't even want their children, why couldn't they be blessed with this one thing they desired above all others?

Eventually, faced with the challenge of not being able to bear children themselves, they joined the ranks of the gracious, courageous and tenacious, and began pursuing adoption.

As I watched her eyes dance as she talked about the long-awaited dream becoming a reality, I realized I was looking at a certified, bona fide adoption hero.

Adoption, under any set of circumstances, is a significant investment of time, energy and effort. For military couples looking to adopt, the journey can be even more challenging.

Due to the frequent moves Uncle Sam calls us to make, many adoption agencies in the past have been unable or unwilling to work with military couples.

Hawkins

As a result, a valuable source of families willing and wanting to adopt is not being tapped.

But the environment is changing. As the number of waiting children continues to grow, some social workers are beginning to re-examine their beliefs and look for ways to make it happen for those associated with the military.

Agencies that work with military families find in them many of the positive attributes they are looking for in adoptive families.

Among these are ethnic diversity, access to adoption benefits and availability of medical resources. Military families are prime resources for the large number of waiting children who come from minority cultures.

Forty percent of military families are families of color; three-fourths of these are African-American. Military installations and civilian neighborhoods, where military personnel live, tend to be ethnically diverse, providing ideal settings for the many children of color waiting for permanent families.

Military families are entitled to adoption benefits of up to $2,000 a year for reasonable and necessary expenses associated with adoptions finalized after Oct. 1, 1990, whether they are infant adoptions, intercountry adoptions or adoptions of children with special needs.

Military personnel and their families are also eligible for free care at any military medical facility. Also, unlike other medical insurance barriers, the military does not have a waiting period for pre-existing conditions, a barrier that frequently prevents civilian adoptive families from adopting children with special medical needs.

Is your heart open to adoption? Do you want to join the ranks of those courageous and loving enough to take one of the 100,000 children waiting for a home? Would you like help in navigating the emotions of that decision?

Then give us a ring at The Chaplain Family Life Center at 545-1760, Building 2606 in Soldiers' Plaza or stop by and say hi at 11 a.m. Sundays at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel, a postwide service for everyone on Kelley Hill.

I look forward to serving you.

"This trial is a travesty; it's a travesty of a mockery of a sham of a mockery of a travesty of two mockeries of a sham. I move for a mistrial."
Woody Allen in "Bananas"

The Law Firm makes TV's latest case for reality shows

Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Set The Apprentice in a law firm and you get ... well, The Law Firm.

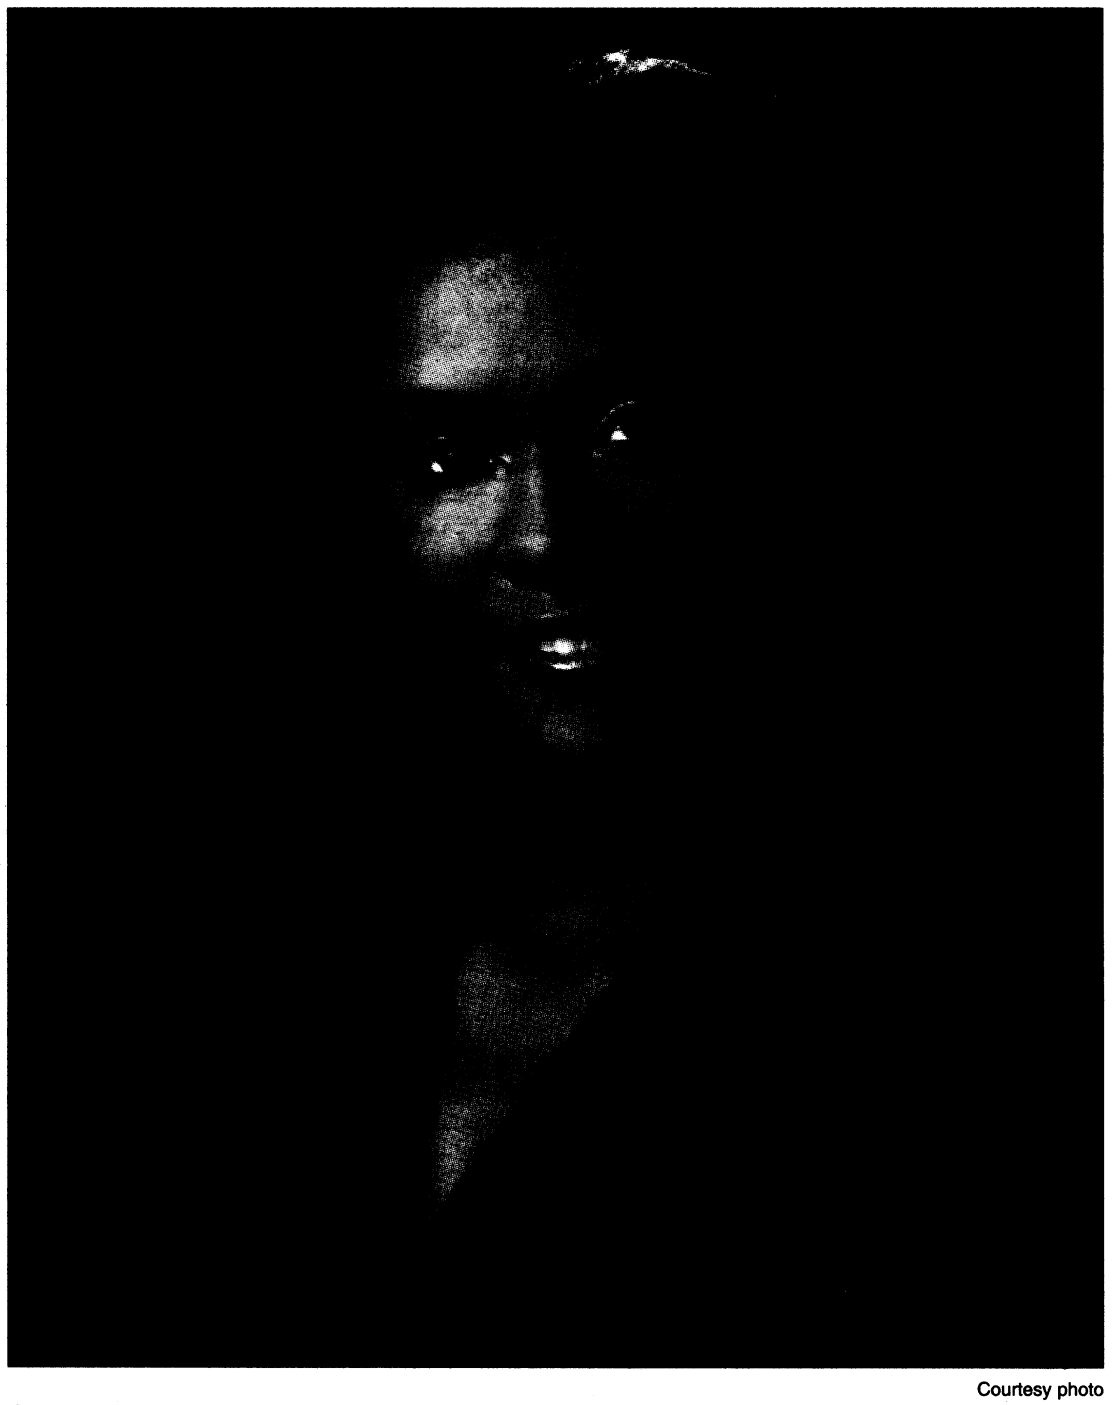
Renowned for his award-winning work on fictional shows such as Boston Legal, The Practice and Ally McBeal, television producer and former attorney David E. Kelley enters the unscripted-series arena with the Thursday premiere of his involving, slickly made NBC show. Instead of Donald Trump, noted trial lawyer Roy Black is the man-to-please who puts 12 ambitious legal eagles — from Anika Harvey to Olivier Taillieu — through paces and cases, with $250,000 going to the last contender standing.

As Black stressed at the show's outset, though, it's not just about the money. At the Miami firm of which he is senior partner, he tells the competitors they are expected to deal with real-life clients, judges and juries "with excellence and compassion," in matters ranging from two people's argument over dogs all the way up the legal scale to murder trials. Working in teams, the lawyers don't always see eye-to-eye on strategy — to put it very mildly.

Also the mentor of the series Picket Fences and Boston Public, Kelley said overseeing The Law Firm was "proposed to me. When I was doing The Practice, my greatest fear was that somebody was going to come along and do those kinds of stories for real and put us out of business, because it would be more compelling and interesting to see for real the same stories we were telling in fiction.

"Lo and behold, not long afterward, (fellow Law Firm producers) Jay Renfroe and David Garfinkle came into my office and pitched that very thing. This just has a feeling like it was meant to be, and it's a show that I would watch, which is how my particular compass works. They were looking for someone to help champion the idea, so I came on board."

Finding actual cases for the show wasn't a simple process, Kelley said. "We went to various arbitration banks, and the trick was to find cases where everyone concerned was willing to give the case over to our formula. That meant it would be a two-day trial, and it would be binding. Having to wait years for a trial, there are a lot of frustrated litigants out there ... plus in smaller cases, it made financial sense for them to walk the plank with us. If this is a success, we expect people to line up at the door for the second year. A lot of people who sue just want to give voice to their outrage."



Black is no stranger to television work, appearing frequently on NBC News programs as a legal analyst.

"He was my first choice," Kelley said. "Roy is a great teacher as well as a great trial lawyer, and he loves projects where he gets to teach the law."

Indeed, Black likes being involved in The Law Firm, since he reasoned, "These young lawyers are providing better legal service than these (clients) might get otherwise. They're very engaged, and they put an enormous amount of energy and enthusiasm into the cases, which were tried very well. I can always pick apart trial skills, but as we got toward the end (of production), it was a very high level of advocacy."

While a monetary prize does go to the Law Firm winner, Black doesn't believe that affected the lawyers doing what lawyers would do anyway.

"If you're a good lawyer," he said, "you're more interested in winning the case than thinking about the prize. Doing the best job possible is exactly the same thing as coming out ahead in terms of the prize, but I think what really drives these lawyers is the case and the client and the desire to win. If you wanted to make a lot of money, you'd go into real estate like Donald Trump."

Attorney Anika Harvey vies in The Law Firm, an unscripted series that premieres Thursday on NBC.

Black is pleased to be working with Kelley, having previously used a cross-examination from an episode of The Practice in a law class he teaches.

"To me, that was the best of all the legal shows," Black said. "America loves trials as entertainment. It's like Court TV becoming popular; there's no script, so nobody knows how things will end.

"I'm hoping people will see in this show how much work lawyers do. They all think you just put on your suit, you walk into the courtroom and you're ready to go. For every hour in the courtroom, though, you're usually spending 50 hours of preparation."

Since he still makes scripted series like Boston Legal, which returns to ABC in the fall, Kelley conceded he's of two minds about reality shows ... particularly now that he's involved in one himself.

The Devil's Rejects — The unthinkable horror and chaos continues a few weeks after the events depicted in House of 1,000 Corpses as the murderous Firefly family is forced on the lam after a bloody showdown at their home.

With their story all over the news, the family continues their soulless killing spree, while Sheriff John Wydell (William Forsythe) looks to track them down for one last horrifying confrontation.

The Devil's Rejects is rated R for sadistic violence, strong sexual content, language and drug use.

Bad News Bears — Morris Buttermaker (Billy Bob Thornton), a former pro baseball player, was ejected from the game for attacking an umpire and now works as an exterminator. Buttermaker is lured back into the game by Liz Whitewood, an attorney whose class action suit has forced the Little League to accept all players, regardless of their abilities.

As the new coach of the Bears, the most losing team in Little League history, Buttermaker has his work cut out for him.

Also starring Greg Kinnear and Marcia Gay Harden.

Bad News Bears is rated PG-13 for rude behavior, language, some sexuality and thematic elements.

Hustle & Flow — Though DJay, a streetwise Memphis pimp, has always had a way with words, that gift has long been misused; this philosopher hustler lives a dead-end life at the fringes of society. Still, DJay wonders what happened to all the big dreams he had for his life.

A chance encounter with an old friend, Key, spurs DJay: if he's ever going to make his mark, it has to happen now.

Starring Ludacris, Anthony Anderson and Taryn Manning.

Hustle & Flow is rated R for sex and drug content, pervasive language and some violence.

The Island — Lincoln Six-Echo (Ewan McGregor) is a resident of a seemingly utopian but contained facility in the mid-21st century. Like all of the inhabitants of this carefully controlled environment, Lincoln hopes to be chosen to go to "The Island," reportedly the last uncontaminated spot on the planet. But Lincoln soon discovers that everything about his existence is a lie.

Also starring Scarlett Johansson and Steve Buscemi.

The Island is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action, some sexuality and language.

Wedding Crashers — Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson star as a pair of divorce mediators who spend their weekends crashing weddings in a search for Ms. Right — for a night.

But when one of them falls for the engaged daughter (Rachel McAdams) of an influential and eccentric politician (Christopher Walken) at the social event of the year, they get roped into spending a weekend at the family's palatial waterfront estate and quickly find themselves in over their heads.

Wedding Crashers is rated R for sexual content, nudity and language.

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory — Charlie Bucket, a boy from an impoverished family under the shadow of a giant chocolate factory, wins a candy bar contest and is given a tour, along with four other children, of the amazing factory run by the eccentric Willy Wonka and his staff of Oompa-Loompas.

Starring Johnny Depp, Freddie Highmore and David Kelly.

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory is rated PG for quirky situations, action and mild language.

Fantastic Four — Marvel's first family of comic superheroes takes the world by storm as the longest-running comic book series in history comes to the big screen.

Reed Richards (Mr. Fantastic), who can elongate his body; Susan Storm (Invisible Woman), who not only can become invisible at will but can render other objects invisible; Johnny Storm (Human Torch), who can shoot fire from his fingertips and bend flame; and Ben Grimm (The Thing), a hideously misshapen monster with superhuman strength, together battle the evil Doctor Doom.

Starring Ioan Gruffudd, Jessica Alba and Michael Chiklis.

Fantastic Four is rated PG-13 for sequences of intense action and suggestive content.

Dark Water — Dahlia Williams (Jennifer Connelly) is starting a new life. Newly separated and starting over with a new job and a new apartment, she's determined to put her relationship with her estranged husband behind her and devote herself to raising her daughter Ceci. But when the strained separation disintegrates into a bitter custody battle, her situation takes a turn for the worse.

Dark Water is rated PG-13 for mature thematic material, frightening sequences, disturbing images and brief language.

War of the Worlds — A contemporary retelling of H.G. Wells's classic, the sci-fi thriller reveals the extraordinary battle for the future of humankind through the eyes of one American family fighting to survive.

Starring Tom Cruise, Miranda Otto and Dakota Fanning.

War of the Worlds is rated PG-13 for frightening sequences of sci-fi violence and disturbing images.

Batman Begins — In the wake of his parents' murders, Bruce Wayne (Christian Bale) travels the world seeking the means to fight injustice and turn fear against those who prey on the fearful. He returns to Gotham and unveils his alter ego — Batman, a masked crusader who uses his strength and an array of high-tech deceptions to fight the sinister forces that threaten the city.

Starring Ken Watanbe, Morgan Freeman and Michael Caine.

Batman Begins is rated PG-13 for action violence, images and thematic elements.

Jerry Butler in concert Aug. 6

An award-winning performer, producer and composer, and one of the architects of rhythm and blues, Jerry "The Iceman" Butler, will perform at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 6 at the RiverCenter.

Some of his most familiar recordings are For Your Precious Love, Never Gonna Give You Up, Only the Strong Survive and Ain't Misunderstanding Mellow.

For more information, call 265-3612.

"Flying High" Circus through Aug. 12

Every summer since 1960, the Florida State University "Flying High" Circus has resided at Callaway.

The circus is made up of college students who train and perform in the circus as an extracurricular activity.

The top students in the circus are invited to the Summer Family Adventure each year to showcase their talents and to serve as camp counselors.

They entertain guests with trapeze acts, juggling routines, balancing acts, high wire walks and more.

The "Flying High" Circus will perform daily (except Wednesdays) through Aug. 12.

To visit the Flying High Circus Web Site, visit www.fsu.edu/~circus/. The Callaway Gardens Web site is www.callawaygardens.com.

Here's to the Heroes

Anheuser-Busch is offering a single-day complimentary admission to any one of Anheuser-Busch's SeaWorld, Busch Gardens or Sesame Place parks to members of the military and as many as three direct dependents through 2005.

Congratulations

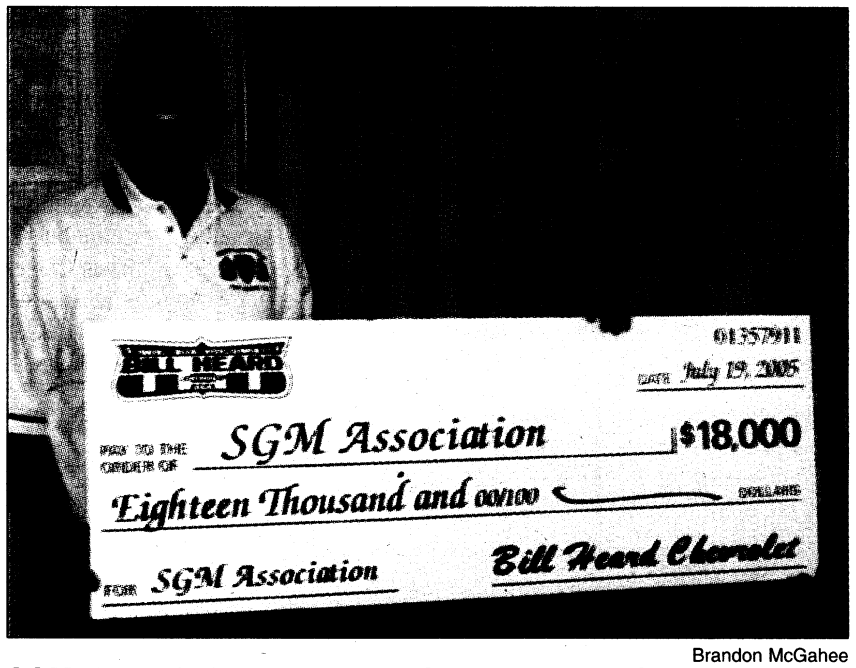
Donna Hyatt

Craig Taylor, left, Fort Benning's director of Public Works, presents John Esson, center, the National Commendation for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve. Esson arranged for Staff Sgt. Joseph Ranson, right, to receive his civilian pay after he was unexpectedly called to active duty with the 104th Division at Moffit Field, Calif.

Good luck

David Dismukes

Lt. Col. Douglas Flohr, left, looks on as Col. K.K. Chinn, Ranger Training Brigade commander, presents an award to Flohr's wife, Christina. Standing next to their mother are Benjamin and Riannna Flohr. The Flohrs are PCSing from 5th Ranger Training Battalion in Dahlonega, Ga., to Virginia where he will work in the Pentagon. Flohr's change of command was July 12.

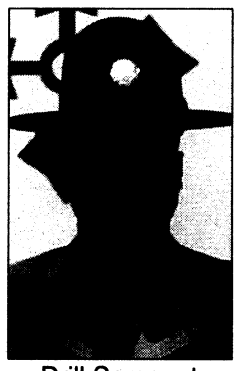


Well done

Brandon McGahee

Col. Charles Cornwell, left, Fort Benning's chief of staff, presents Sgt. Maj. Peter O'Grady, with the German Liaison Office, an Army Commendation Medal Tuesday for his service to the U.S. Army Infantry Center. O'Grady and his wife, Emily, are returning to Germany in August.

Thank you

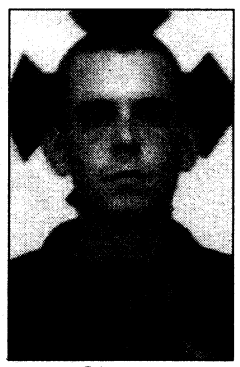


Brandon McGahee

SGM Association president Sgt. Maj. Jan Stegeman, left, accepts a check from Bill Heard III, of Bill Heard Chevrolet, to help build three POW/MIA memorials in the tricommunity. In 2004, the association built a memorial at the Columbus Consolidated Government Center, another will be dedicated at Fort Benning Sept. 17 and a third memorial will be dedicated in Phenix City, Ala., in 2006.

Graduation

Staff Sgt. Alvino King, Drill Sergeant of the Cycle, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment



King is from Chicago. His previous assignment was Fort Stewart, Ga. His favorite hobby is basketball.

Drill Sergeant of the Cycle

Pvt. Richard W. Turpin, Soldier of the Cycle, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment

Turpin is from Fort Walton Beach, Fla. After graduation, he will travel to Fort Rucker, Ala., for Warrant Officer Candidate School. His favorite hobby is basketball.

SOFTBALL TRIVIA

Q. We all understand that companies sponsor teams for exposure and tax benefits. In the early years, companies would also sponsor teams but for a different reason. Why?

A. Games could be played over lunch.

Q. When did "softball" become the official name?

A. 1926

Bench Notes

Erin Nash

• Tony's on a roll

Tony Stewart drove his Chevrolet to victory July 17 in the New England 300 in Loudon, N.H.

Tony's just 85 points behind points leader Jimmie Johnson (Biffle's still second), while Jeff Gordon slips to more than 500 points behind the leader.

• Tiger roars

Favorite-to-win Tiger Woods won the British Open Championship July 17 in Scotland, bringing his total championships to 10.

Maybe the marriage thing is starting to help his game.

• Larry buyout

The Detroit Pistons' head coach Larry Brown was terminated by the organization July 19 under undisclosed terms.

Brown can still coach next year. Flip Saunders is the favorite to replace Hall of Fame coach Brown.

• Rogers charged

Kenny Rogers (not the singer, the pitcher of the Texas Rangers) was charged with misdemeanor assault resulting from a June 29 incident in which he assaulted two cameramen. He was released on $1,500 bail.

• Raffy becomes latest Mr. 3,000

Baltimore Oriole Rafael Palmeiro joined the elite 3,000 hits club July 15.

Raffy joins Willie Mays, Hank Aaron and Eddie Murray as the only players in MLB history with 3,000 hits and 500 homeruns.

•Tour de France continues

As of press time, Lance Armstrong still holds the lead in the Tour de France. If he doesn't win a seventh straight I'll be very surprised.

RTB winning streak continues

Rangers remain undefeated in season play

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

The Ranger Training Brigade was behind only once in the game, and that was before they ever took a turn at bat.

RTB beat Headquarters and Headquarters Company, U.S. Army Infantry Center, 8-1, in intramural softball action Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

HHC was the first up to bat and Michael Chambers started the game off with a double. RTB was quick on the defense and even though Chambers made home, no one else on his team advanced past third.

RTB managed to send two runners home during the bottom of the first to grab the lead, and never looked back.

With no runners scoring for either team in the second inning, and RTB only bringing in one runner in the third, the game seemed pretty even.

"We started off fielding kind of slow and we didn't have good clean throws," said Dwayne Stone, RTB. "We let them stay in the game too long.

"Our goal is to win every inning by at least one run, so by the middle of the game we have a cushion going into the later innings."

That cushion came during the bottom of the fourth inning when Jesse Leimbach drove in two runs to put RTB up, 5-1. Two more runners crossed home increasing the lead to 7-1.

The HHC catcher misplayed a pitch and James Breakfield made an aggressive move stealing home plate to push the lead to 8-1.

The last three innings were scoreless as defense on the field tightened up.

"We held our own till the bottom of the fourth inning and then we hit insurmountable odds — (five) runs," said Jeff Jackson, HHC.

"Our team did really well. We expected a good solid game and we did better than we normally do."

Jackson said RTB had solid fielding and good base hits, which proved too much for his team.

"Base hits win the game," he said. "We did good, but they won every inning."

Stone said after his team started placing the ball and making the base hits, that's when they ran up the score and the last three scoreless innings was mostly due to HHC.

"They closed the gaps and stopped the ball," Stone said.

"They shut the infield down with good solid defense."

Tennis dreams turn to running gold

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Stephanie Feagan never wanted to be a runner. In high school she thought running farther than one mile was insane. Now, seven years later, she is training to run her second Army Ten-Miler.

Feagan's goals were lofty. She wanted to be a professional tennis player.

"Thank goodness God had other plans for me, because I'm afraid of the ball," said the first lieutenant, a training and personnel assistant with the 14th Combat Support Hospital. "On a whim, I decided to run, and I won. I hated the pain, but I liked to win."

During junior high she vowed never run longer than a mile.

"I just couldn't understand why you would want to do that," she said. "(By high school) I had finally found a sport I could do, and once I had this as an outlet, I 'ran' with it."

When she went to the College of Charleston she figured, if she could run a mile, what was an extra two more? So she tried out for the cross-country team, which runs 5Ks.

"I didn't realize you have to run twelve miles for practice," she said.

Feagan said she spent a lot of time in prayer, pleading for strength to make it through those first few practices.

But by the end of the season, Feagan realized something — she was hooked on running.

By her junior year she was an NCAA, Division I, all-conference, cross-country runner.

"When I came into the Army, I looked for any chance to run," Feagan said.

One of her more memorable races was in Iraq, when she ran in the first Tikrit Army Ten-Miler.

"You were racing with sheep and goats and were hoping not to get shot," Feagan said.

For Feagan running is a time to reflect on her life, faith and future.

"I love being outside, and I use running as a time to pray, meditate and ruminate about the day," she said. "I'm at peace by the time I finish."

She also dedicates miles of her route to different people in her life and prays for them during that particular section of her run.

"I've memorized Philippians 4:13 where it says, 'I can do all things through Christ which strengthens me' and I repeat that over and over again as I run," Feagan said.

Feagan has also integrated her faith into her pre-race rituals. Just before she runs, she will read Isaiah 40:36, which talks about being able to "run and not be weary, walk and not faint."

"After that I will drink something with caffeine and then bounce around like a bunny on speed," Feagan said. "I like to think of the part of 'Chariots of Fire' where the guys talks about when he runs it's his small way to glorify God, and I thought that was a great way to look at it."

Feagan says she has two running goals she would like to achieve.

"I want to run the ten-miler in under sixty minutes and I want to run a sub-eleven minute two-mile," she said.

To date her fastest ten-miler is 62:23 and her two mile run is 11:26.

"The biggest thing right now is just to improve," Feagan said. "(The goals) aren't impossible. If I train, I can do it. With (God's) help I can do anything."

Feagan is the only female on the Fort Benning Army Ten-Miler team. Barring any injuries, she will run with the team in October in Washington D.C.

Vietnam puts damper on post sports

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

This is the second in a three part series focusing on Fort Benning sports and highlighting some of the athletes and events that have defined its history.

By the end of World War II, Fort Benning sports programs were suffering. Even though unit-level sports continued throughout the war, post events had been put on hold.

By the late 1940s, an effort was being made to rebuild the sports program and reinstate events that had faded out during the war, said Frank Hanner, Infantry Museum director. Many of those sports, such as horseshoes, polo and fencing never caught back on.

"In the early 1950s, sports were still a way to entertain troops, and televisions were still new," Hanner said. "By the end of the 50s, television was everywhere. If you wanted to watch a game, you could watch a professional game, little league or Soldier's game. People would usually turn their television on and choose professional sports.

"By the end of the 50s with television crowds, (post) sporting events start to die off."

However, Fort Benning was still turning out top athletes.

Two Olympic boxers, a no-hit baseball game, two 3rd Army championship teams and the adoption of a new sports program provided the top thrills at Fort Benning in 1956.

The Doughboy football team plays in this 1940s photo. Thousands of spectators came out to watch games during the season.

Sports: Public opinion forces changes

Spc. Jim Boyd and 1st Lt. Pete Rademacher both won boxing medals in the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne, Australia.

In 1957, the post football season featured 13 teams on the regimental level with a total of 48 games.

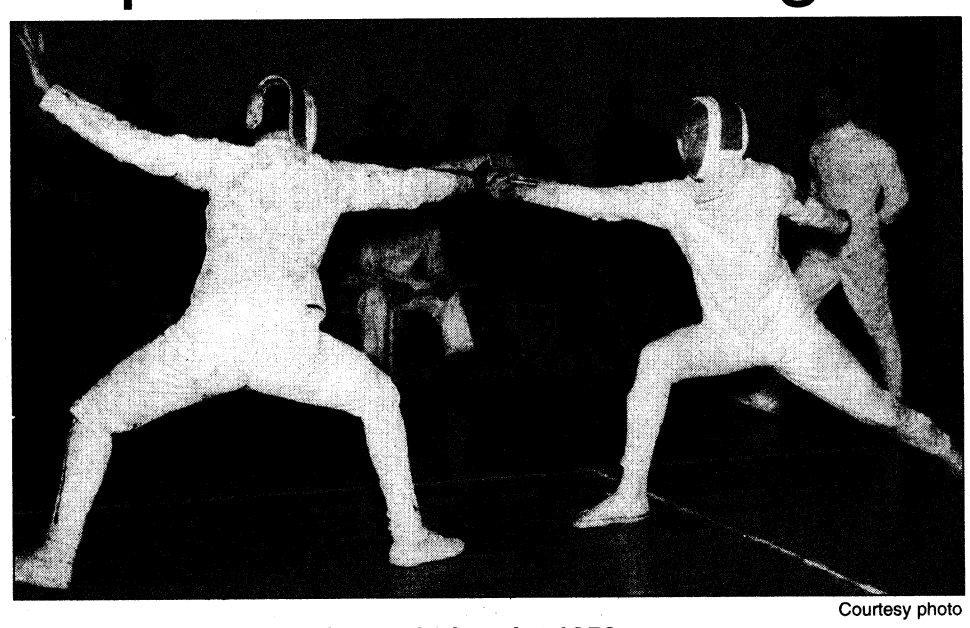
Edward Cook Jr. won a gold medal in boxing in 1960. In 1962, an all-women's basketball team from Fort Benning competed in the 3rd Army women's basketball championships, winning the title and ending an undefeated season.

Also in 1962, Pat Dye, who went on to coach at Auburn University, was selected to the Army Times All-Army football team.

Fred Woods, manager of the Audie Murphy Fitness Center remembers the heyday of sports and the changes brought about in the 60s. He was a member of the 1962 Doughboy Football team and played battalion-level basketball, softball and volleyball.

He said sports was used as a morale builder and it reflected positively on the post commander if his athletic teams were some of the top in the Army.

"Back in those days it was big bragging rights to be a post commander and be the best in a sport," Woods said.



Soldiers who played sports were top-notch athletes; many had come from college teams and some professional teams.

Woods said when drafted, Soldiers were asked if they played a sport, and if they did, they might sign a contract to just play sports for the Army. Some Soldiers would also try out for teams and it was possible to go an entire enlistment without ever serving in their enlisted MOS.

With the social changes in the 1960s, Hanner said, people started to view athletes and sporting events in a different light, using the word "jock" as a negative term.

"Sports just wasn't looked upon as favorably as it had been," Hanner said.

Hanner said people were questioning everything in society and they started to question whether or not Soldiers should play sports full-time or if Soldier-athletes should get better treatment than other Soldiers.

Fort Benning athletes fence during the 1950s.

Hanner said it had become a long tradition for Soldiers to work until noon with their units, eat lunch and then have the rest of the day to go play sports. That practice started to come into question as did the idea of recruiting athletes to play on Army teams, especially while so many were being sent to fight a war.

"This preferential treatment and the amounts of money spent on sporting equipment, uniforms and travel was questioned," Hanner said. "Finally, with smaller budgets and the war in Vietnam, which had an effect on how people viewed the Army, it just got to be (too much)."

However, athletics continued on a scaled-down company level as opposed to battalion or post level.

During the 60s and 70s, Fort Benning was home to Maj. William Blankenship, who, at the time, was the only Soldier to have held the three highest shooting awards recognized by the United States — the Distinguished Pistol Badge, the Distinguished Rifle Badge and the Distinguished International Badge.

In 1972, the U.S. Army marksmen brought home two Gold and one Silver Medal from that year's Olympic Games.

In July 1980, Fort Benning's 12-man boxing team won 11 Gold and one Silver medal at the Alabama Amateur Athletic Union championships.

During the same year, Capt. Tom Ducketts, in his first competitive swimming meet in four years, tied the U.S. and World records in the 50-meter backstroke, beating the national champion.

In November 1984, seven Fort Benning Soldiers represented the United States in the Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

In the mid-1980s Fort Benning switched to intramural sports and upward of 100 teams signed up to play basketball and softball.

With the changes in sports, the Doughboy football team was disbanded.

"After Vietnam, we built things back up and changed to intramural sports," said Woods, who retired from the Army in 1980 as a sergeant first class and started working in the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation in 1982.

"We had a tremendous intramural sports program, because we had no worldly commitments. Sports were going strong in 1985."

Next week will cover 1986-2005.

I found buried treasure in my attic.

More than 40 years ago, Grandma gave you some Series E Savings Bonds. So you put them in a safe place and forgot about them—until now. You were looking for old records when you found an unexpected treasure . . . those old Series E Savings Bonds. And even though your old bonds are no longer earning interest, they could still be worth more than 5 times their face value. So why not redeem those old bonds at your local financial institution? To find out more, call 1-800-4US BOND, or write to Savings Bonds, Parkersburg, WV 26106-1328. Old Savings Bonds. They're a treasure worth digging for.

"AFTER A TERRORIST ATTACK YOUR FIRST INSTINCT MAY BE TO RUN. THAT MAY BE THE WORST THING YOU COULD DO."
~ Mario Polit, Firefighter, Ladder 106, FDNY ~
Knowing what you should do in a terrorist attack isn't just a matter of common sense. It takes some reading, some learning and some planning. That goes for people who live in small communities too. Readiness is for every American family, business and school. The terrorist threat is real and we can't afford to go unprepared.
Learn to put together an emergency supply kit, how to make a family communication plan, and how you should respond to an act of terror. All of that information is clearly explained at www.ready.gov. If you prefer, you can call 1-800-BE-READY (1-800-237-3239) for a free copy of the brochure, "Preparing Makes Sense. Get Ready Now."

What is a hero?

A girl who finds the courage to try something new. A boy who discovers the strength to reach further than he ever has. These kids, and thousands like them, have the hope of a better future and the power to make it happen. By taking part in afterschool programs, kids explore, learn, grow, and most importantly, find the hero inside themselves. Army unveils BCT stations

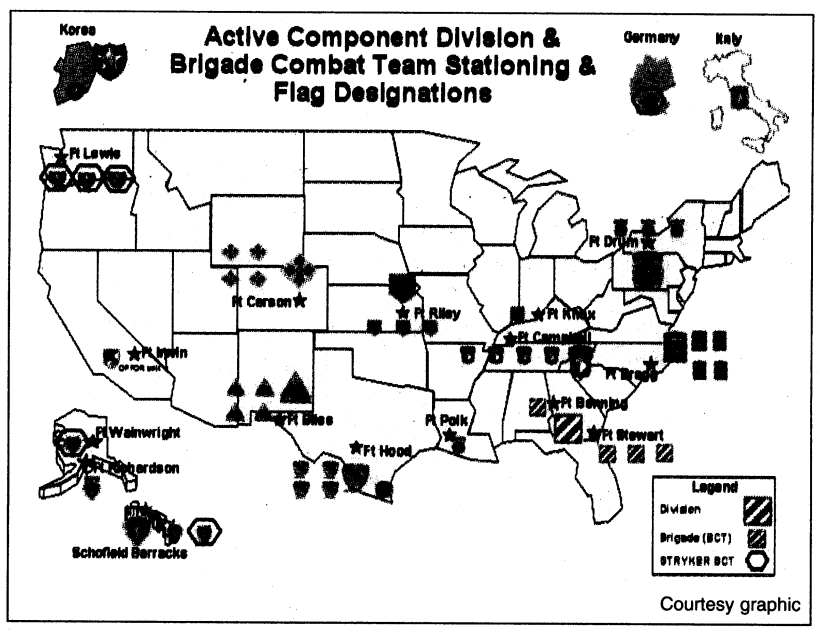
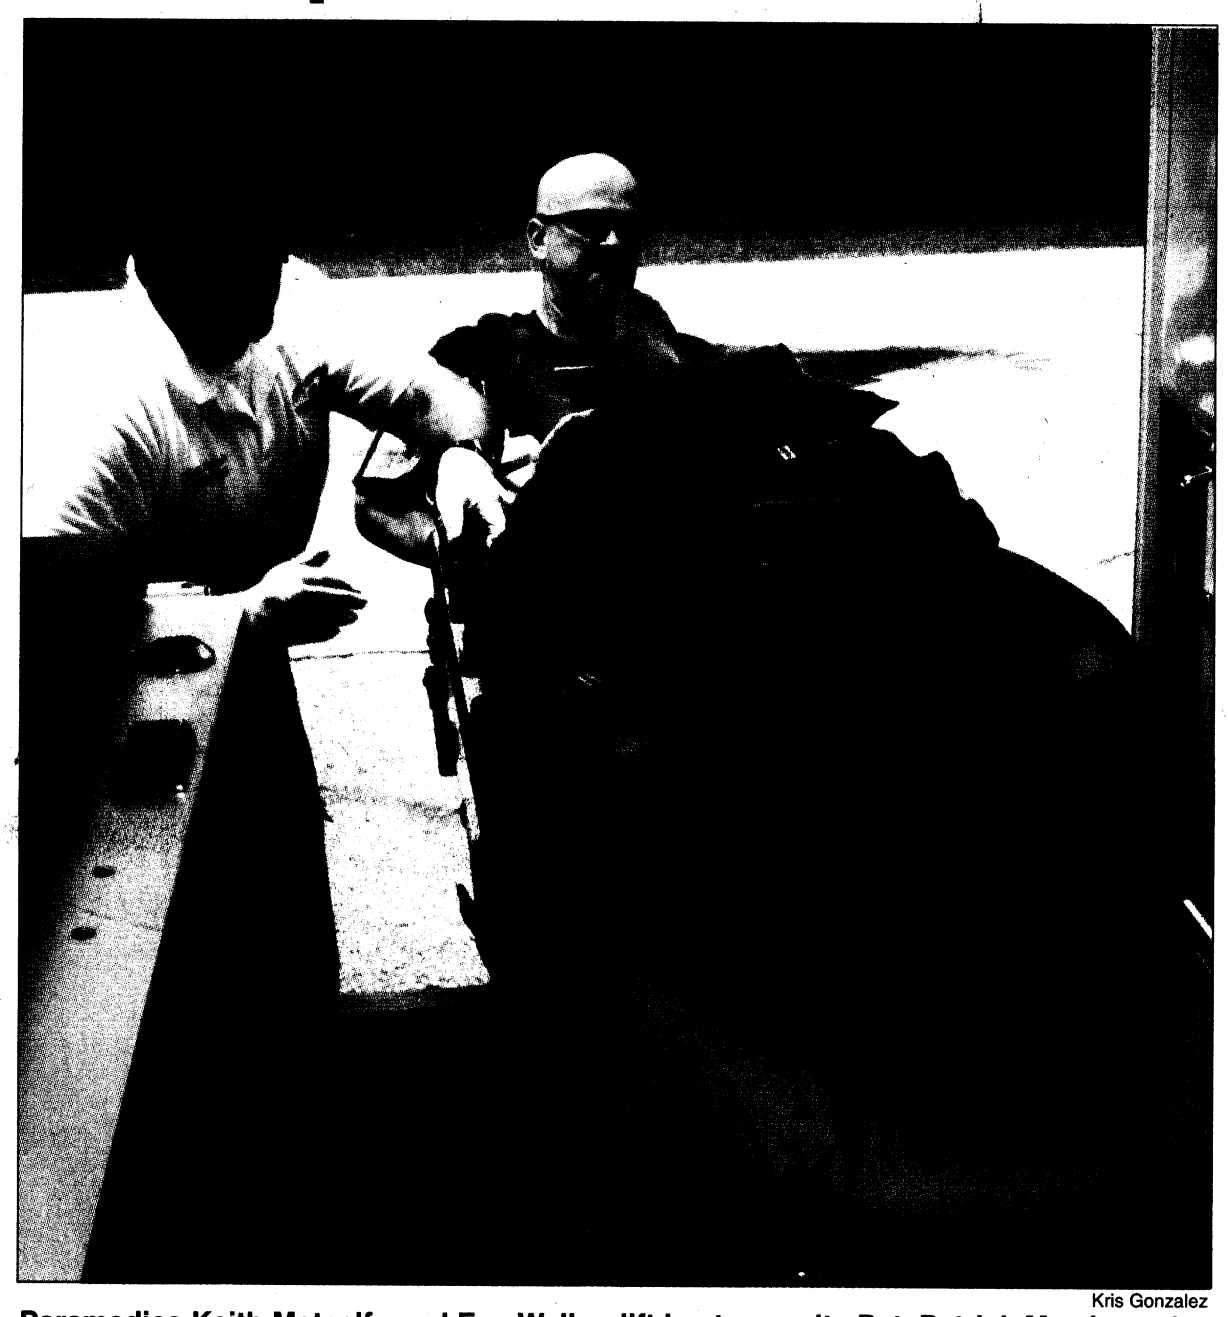
3rd Brigade Combat Team remains here



Maj. Desiree Wineland
Department of Defense

The Department of the Army announced the locations for the active component modular brigade combat teams Wednesday and provided more detail on decisions that were factored in to the Defense Department base realignment and closure recommendations in May.

"The Army Modular Force Initiative is the Army's most important transformational initiative for a reason; it involves the total redesign of the Operational Army into a standardized, stand alone, larger, more powerful, more flexible and more rapidly deployable force that will enable the Army to change the way it fights and the way it operates," said Francis J. Harvey, secretary of the Army.



The decisions implementing the Defense Department's Integrated Global Presence and Basing Strategy recommendations allow the Army to return up to 50,000 Soldiers from overseas locations by the end of the decade.

Heat keeps EMTs busy

EMS respond to an increase in calls for 2005

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Shortly after 1:40 p.m. Tuesday, the Fort Benning Emergency Medical Services received a call from Sgt. 1st Class Oscar Romine, drill sergeant with D Company, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment. One of his basic training Soldiers became disoriented during a field training exercise and was showing other signs of heat-related injuries.

Paramedics Keith Metcalfe and Foy Walker jumped into an ambulance and headed toward the training location. Eight miles and 10 minutes later, they arrived at the scene to find Pvt. Patrick Morrison, 18, in a stretcher, covered with water-soaked sheets.

Romine and fellow cadre had performed the first steps in cooling the Soldier's body, now it was up to Metcalfe and Walker, experts in treating heat casualties, to step up efforts to save this man's life.

Morrison, a Michigan native in his third week of basic training, had a core temperature of 104 degrees. The paramedics' goal, while en route to the emergency room, was to bring down his body temperature, hydrate him without throwing off his electrolyte balance and get oxygen flowing to his brain and vital organs.

The call to help Morrison was the 16th call the EMS had received that day. They would

Road projects to begin

Guardrail installation part of plan

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

A construction project focusing on improving the safety of highways on Fort Benning and in Columbus is set to begin in three weeks.

The Oxford Construction Company of Albany, Ga., will install double-faced guardrails down the center of State Route 1/520 and U.S. 27/280 from I-185 to State Route 26 at the Fort Benning reservation boundary near Cusseta, Ga., and down the center of Lindsay Creek Parkway from Custer Road to 1st Division Road.

Guardrails will be installed along shoulders with steep banks and at other safety related locations, said Kenneth Holloway, master planner for the Directorate of Public Works.

Guardrails will also be installed at the end of all paved and unpaved roads and trails that access the highway, with the exception of Eisenhower Interchange and the MP checkpoint entrance onto 1st Division Road.

"Closing off these entrances and exits via guardrails will greatly improve Fort Benning's antiterrorism and force protection capabilities," Holloway said.

"Emergency vehicle only" turn-arounds will be constructed along the highways, marked by signs, he said. And a deceleration lane will be constructed for vehicles coming from Cusseta, making left turns onto 1st Division Road safer.

Oxford Construction Company president J. Bruce Melton said the company will Storm causes Main Post water main to break

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

People living and working in Fort Benning's Main Post area experienced some water woes last week. The trouble stemmed from a water main break along Marne Road July 20.

"Just about all of Main Post was affected," said Benny Hines, the post's utilities manager.

Hines said a number of factors contributed to the water outage and a subsequent air conditioning outage in offices, barracks and other buildings.

He said the employees in Infantry Hall and Meloy Hall suffered the most, but the main complaints weren't about the lack of water above the ground floors, but about the lack of air conditioning. The air conditioning in some buildings is provided from chilled water facilities.

"The air conditioning was off because the chillers won't work without water," he said, so the units were filled from water trucks.

Hines said the garrison staff was receiving hourly updates on the water status, while Columbus Water Works crews worked to fix the break.

Cliff Arnett, CWW's senior vice president and director of their division of operations and technical services, said a total of 35 personnel worked non-stop from the time the system lost water pressure until all service was completely restored less than 48 hours later.

He said the power failure during the severe storm disrupted pumping at the station. When the pumps shut down, it caused a "water hammer effect" within the water mains.

Concrete blocking near the site of the break — part of the system's safeguards which should have prevented the piping from becoming dislodged because of the water hammer — was totally inadequate, and a surge suppression device at the site had been rendered useless sometime before CWW took over the post's water system, Arnett said.

Arnett said the cast iron line had

Viva la vacation — family style

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

"You're going where? With who?"

That was the reaction I got time and time again before the Siter Six embarked on a three-week tour of Europe.

"You're taking the kids? Didn't you see National Lampoon's European Vacation?"

They didn't actually say it, but I could read between the lines. Those with children broke out in a fine sweat. Those without children merely chuckled.

Except for my friend, Abby, mother of four, all grown and expelled from the nest.

"We took the kids to New York once for a whole week," she said with a shudder. "Aren't you afraid of being attacked?"

"Well, no. It's Europe, not the Middle East," I replied, weeks before London was bombed.

"I'm not talking about the war!" she said. "I'm talking about the kids. Three weeks together, 24-7, in hotels and buses and airplanes without Ritalin? Somebody's gonna get hurt."

Well, dear Abby, and nay-sayers et all, Europe survived the Siters. International relations are intact, such as they are, and familial relations, believe it or not, are better for the experience.

Together, we climbed the Alps, the Eiffel Tower and Germany's highest waterfall.

We survived the autobahn, the ouzo, the gypsies, an unfavorable exchange rate and a few cultural bathroom barriers.

We visited Dachau and paid homage to the victims of Nazi terrorism.

We marveled at forts and castles and tried to wrap our minds around histories and traditions predating Christ, which seemed the simplest way to put it into context for 9-year-old Mckenzie, whose concept of ancient is biblical (though "old" starts at 40.)

We learned to order schnitzel with or without gravy, with pommes, not fries.

We ordered Coke Euro style

— Cola Light or Cola heavy, no ice — though the boys suggested we embrace the European experience and simply order "bier." When in Rome and all that.

True, three weeks is a long time to live out of a suitcase and not nearly enough time to see all of Europe. But it's plenty long enough to rack up some incredible memories. We'll be rehashing those memories for years, laughing about:

• The look on the face of the Parisian waitress who took Dad's order for crepes "au beurre et sucre."

"Mister, I speak English," she said. "And I still can't understand you."

• The look on the face of the waitress in Germany's Black Forest who served liqueur-laced Black Forest cake.

"Boy Howdy, that's strong!" I said.

She left the table confused, and thereafter, the kids forbade me to use the phrase "Boy Howdy" for the duration. (We struck a deal. They agreed not to use any phrase, expression or punch line from Napoleon Dynamite until we set foot on U.S. soil.)

• The look on Mckenzie's face when she met an Italian waiter who's wit surpassed his command of the English language.

"Do you have, ummm, those little pieces of chicken without bones?" she asked.

"Cheecken nuggets?" he offered.

"You call them nuggets?" she asked, surprised.

"Tis better than 'leetle pieces of cheecken without bones,' no?" he laughed.

Yep, the Siters ate — and laughed — our way across a good portion of Europe. Despite the occasional frayed nerves and too many flatulence jokes (three teen-agers and one in training, you understand), ours was an unforgettable trip.

I'd do it again in a heartbeat.

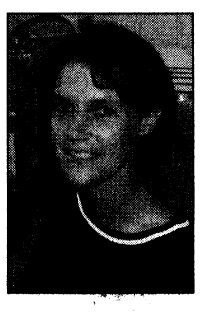
LETTER

Former resident says thanks

I didn't do this before our family PCSed, but I felt it important to say these words. When people think of Fort Benning, they think of the Soldiers and their families. What they don't realize is that there is another magical side of Fort Benning, full of wonderful and caring people who march the extra mile for anyone.

In the four years my family was stationed at Fort Benning, we met many of these wonderful people. Many have touched our lives forever and we feel lucky to call them our friends.

To my neighbors Wanda Taylor, Kathy Thornton, Monique Tompkins, Kelly Becker, the Kirkover family and the Christmans, we thank you for always calling or stopping by to make sure we were OK.



To the Daniels' family and the Ratliff family, I can never thank you enough.

To Kathie Montooth, thank you for taking over the company FRG. And a special thanks to all the key callers for volunteering your time.

Will new hybrids save environment, provide enough room so boys don't fight in car?

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

I really can't explain where my environmentally friendly tendencies (read obsessions) come from. Maybe I was fed too much granola as a child.

A trip to Pennsylvania last week just may have me convinced it's at least partially genetic. I watched my dad hiding recyclable plastic bags inside milk jugs. If the bags are loose, or even if a bunch of bags are tied inside another bag, he explained (and complained), the recycling guys won't take them.

I'm just like him.

I actually retrieved my full recycling bin from the curb one day after I watched my recycling guys throw my neighbor's items into the trash because the truck was "broken."

I didn't buy it for a second, and I'm sure they thought I was nuts as I schlepped it all back to the house to wait until the following week.

So here I am, months later, still thinking about replacing my 1996 van with 106,000 miles on it. But, I'm loath to ditch the van, because I don't know what I want to buy. I even defended my "wheels" to a neighbor who thought we were about to blow up. It was just the funny engine-straining noise it makes when I'm trying to accelerate with the air conditioning on. Nothing major.

But, I have a dilemma.

Many years ago, my desire to have a larger family squashed our ability to fit comfortably into a diesel Volkswagen Cabriolet convertible — or some similarly fuel-efficient vehicle. And I'm quite comfortable with the respectable 20 miles per gallon the van gets around post, which is where I am most often.

Goodness only knows I can't expect my boys to sit next to each other everywhere we go. They might actually touch. And — heaven forbid — if we ever took a long vacation, by car, and had to take the 60 lb. dog along, we'd have to tow the luggage, or some of the kids, in a trailer behind that VW.

I'd really like to make the jump to a hybrid vehicle. I want to be earth-friendly, so much so that I put down roots with a tall, lean man whose birthday is Earth Day. I guess that makes me a tree hugger.

I want to save the whales, the seals, the aye-aye, the Northern hairy-nosed wombat and the Clanwilliam redfin.

I want to reduce our dependence on foreign countries for our fuels and lessen our dependence on fossil fuels overall.

But I'm stopped by visions of trying to fold three 6 feet tall boys into the same back seat. There just isn't a hybrid out there right now that can meet my space needs. It's also going to have to have a trunk big enough to carry two sets of ice hockey gear.

And right now, it seems the experts are divided on what impact hybrids are really going to have on our gas supply.

Toyota's Prius is apparently selling like hotcakes, but the hybrids on the road right now account for less than 2 percent of the nation's 230 million vehicles.

They're going to "hybridize" the Camry, but the experts still say the gas savings may not be worth the higher up-front cost of the hybrids. I don't think even the Camry will be large enough for me.

Then, I heard a guy on the news program predict that every vehicle model could have a hybrid version available within the next 10 years or so. I'm going to have to baby my van along until then.

Or instead, I'll just consider the fact that my boys will grow up and move out long before my hybrid will stop helping the environment.

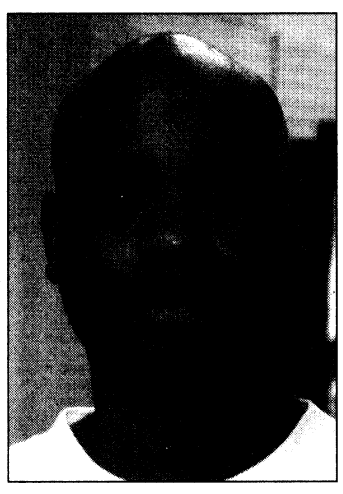
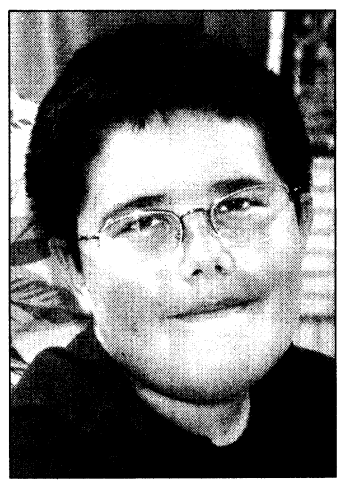
VARIOUS VOICES



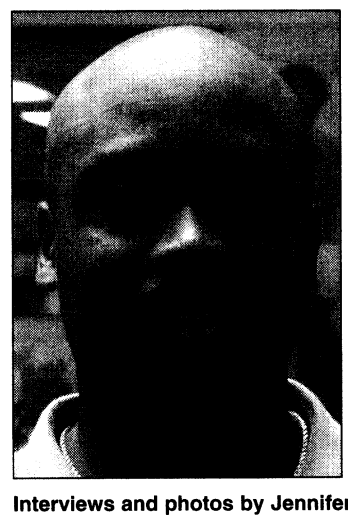
What was the most interesting thing you did this summer?

Sgt. Randolph King, 209th Military Police Detachment — "I finally came back from Germany after six years. I missed the States. Something as small as being able to read the billboards is important when you don't have that ability for a while."



Spc. Fallon Reed, Defense Military Pay Office — "I haven't done anything this summer, just worked. But, I'm looking forward to going home to Pennsylvania in August for my daughter's first birthday and the fact that her dad will be on R and R from Iraq."

Moe Stewart, family member — "I installed a fence around my yard. I've been talking about doing it for two years, and this year I finally got around to doing it."



Amanda McSherley, 9, family member — "I went to SurfSide with my best friend Margaret. It has a lot of cool rides like Lazy River. I like being lazy."

Brandon Sweeney, 10, family member — "I went to Panama Beach with two of my cousins from North Carolina. We stayed three days at St. Andrews. It has a snorkeling area where you can go and see all the ocean fish."

Sgt. 1st Class Cynthia Outlaw, Defense Finance Office — "We had a family reunion slash surprise birthday party for my mother-in-law. She turned 70 this year, so the family got together. Being in the military, you hardly ever get to see your family, so this was nice."

Retired Sgt. 1st Class Dwayne McClenton, Ellerslie, Ga. — "My family came down to visit from New York. We were able to hang out, catch up, go to the pool .... It's been almost 16 years since I've seen some of them."

BCTs: Part of transforming Army

This stationing of brigade combat teams allows the Army to continue its transformation to a campaign-quality force with joint and expeditionary capabilities that meet the future demands of the combatant commanders. The secretary of defense approved an increase in the number of active modular BCTs from 33 to 43 on Jan. 30, 2004.

Two key recommendations of the global force presence realignment decisions include the return of the 1st Infantry Division to Fort Riley, Kan., and the relocation of the 1st Armored Division to Fort Bliss, Texas.

The 1st Inf. Div. will return in fiscal 2006 and the timing for the return of the 1st Armored Div. is under review.

The Army selected locations for modular brigade combat teams based on existing and potential capacities, available training space, and current locations of similar and supporting units. The Army preserves its historic heraldry and lineage in this design. While the modular brigade combat teams follow historic division and brigade unit naming conventions, these units are of a completely different design than their predecessors.

The essence of this transformational design is a new force that can be deployed singularly or in groups — ready for employment in a variety of designs as self-contained modules over a dispersed area.

The Army modular force initiative involves the total redesign of the operational Army into a larger, more powerful, more flexible and more rapidly deployable force and moves us away from a division-centric structure to one built around the Army's new modular combat team.

The Army is committed to minimizing the turbulence for soldiers and families.

"Providing for our Soldiers and their families throughout this process remains foremost in our planning," Harvey said.

Active Brigade Combat Teams posture:

Fort Benning – 1 Brigade Combat Team

Fort Bragg, N.C, – 4 Brigade Combat Teams

Fort Carson, Colo. – 4 Brigade Combat Teams

Fort Hood, Texas – 5 Brigade Combat Teams

Fort Lewis, Wash. – 3 Brigade Combat Teams (Stryker)

Fort Campbell, KY – 4 Brigade Combat Teams

Fort Drum, N.Y. – 3 Brigade Combat Teams

Fort Knox, Ky. – 1 Brigade Combat Team

Fort Stewart, Ga. – 3 Brigade Combat Teams

Schofield Barracks, Hawaii – 2 Brigade Combat Teams (Stryker)

be "reconstructing the intersection of State Route 26 and State Route 520 in Cusseta to make the intersection a straight 90 degree intersection for safety and traffic flow reasons."

A detour is planned to handle through traffic while this work is ongoing, he said.

Motorists can expect lane closures, except from 6 to 9 a.m. and 4 to 8 p.m. in Columbus and 6 to 9 a.m. and 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. on Fort Benning.

The Georgia DOT encourages motorists to drive safely through work zones even when no work is taking place, said Dorothy Daniel, DOT communications officer. Besides traffic control measures, roads in idle work zones may have uneven pavement or high edges.

Construction is expected to be completed by Oct. 31, 2006.

been diverted at a 45 degree angle instead of continuing on a straight line as the system map indicated.

Today's fittings do not fit these old cast iron lines without modification, he said, conditions that added up to a non-typical line break.

Much of Fort Benning's system is more than 50 years old, Hines said.

Arnett said modern water lines are conventional ductile iron pipe.

"In terms of the degree of difficulty," Arnett said this was "as difficult a repair as can be experienced, requiring highly skilled and experienced staff as well as the appropriate equipment. CWW is proud to say it has both."

Arnett said the CWW's foremost concern is the health and safety of its customers and they would continue to put forth their best effort to resolving any problems with the water.

Hines said some of post's recreational facilities were affected by the water main break as well.

Anna Slaughter, manager of the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation Wellness Center, said the storm caused the pool behind the Officers' Club to overflow.

"So we had to drain some of it," Slaughter said, "and when we went to add water, the water was muddy."

Workers drained and cleaned the pool. They had to wait for the water supply to build back up before they could refill it.

Hines said the post-storm maintenance was the result of "a major effort by a lot of people." He said the initial MWR pool refilling actually helped flush the brown water out of the system.

'Rock Force' battalion changes hands

Former leader set to deploy to Iraq

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Lt. Col. John McCarthy relinquished command to Lt. Col. Ricardo Mitchell Tuesday at Kanell Field.

The 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, "Rock of Chickamauga" traces its roots to Indianapolis, where it was constituted in 1861. The unit made great contributions to the Army during the Civil War, in the Philippines and in Korea. The unit has been training Soldiers at Fort Benning since 1997.

"John McCarthy is a great American and a great success story," said Infantry Training Brigade commander Col. Scott Henry. "He's the ideal role model."

Henry said McCarthy's "good family upbringing mixed with good military role models" from his childhood years at Fort Bragg, N.C., helped him understand the importance of people.

"I saw his good traits every single day in his no nonsense urban training operations and his realistic live-fire training," Henry said. "He is truly a great battalion commander who guided training to a whole new quality level."

He said McCarthy handed over a disciplined and cohesive unit to his successor.

"The battalion reflected you," said Henry, who thanked McCarthy's wife, Margie, for her "invaluable support and generous leadership" of the unit's family readiness group.

McCarthy's next assignment is deputy commander of the 2nd Brigade, 4th Infantry Division, at Fort Hood, Texas.

McCarthy

Mitchell

Henry welcomed Mitchell and his family back to Fort Benning.

"Your background and leadership make you the ideal choice," Henry said. "We are fortunate to have you on the Sand Hill team."

Mitchell's last assignment was as the (G5) of the 5th Army at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

McCarthy thanked his wife and daughters for their support during his command.

"They were the cheering team waiting for me to get home, no matter how late it was," McCarthy said. "They have made me a far better man than I would have been alone."

McCarthy, who said the battalion's success was due to the command climate on post and to Henry's faith in his subordinate commanders, had special thanks for the unit's top NCOs.

"Command Sergeants Major Brimsten and Pearson — you both are my mentors," he said. "You both could put eagles on your shoulders. You both represent what is right about the Army."

McCarthy also thanked his staff officers for making things happen with a small staff.

"One of the greatest things about command is setting the conditions for your subordinates to succeed," he said. "If not for the initiative and drive of the companies, we would not have seen improvements in training."

He said the dedication of the staff and cadre was reflected in the fact that the graduating Soldiers believed in themselves.

"In every platoon, in every company, the Soldiers commented on how well their drill sergeants prepared them," McCarthy said. "There is no better testament out there, and I am truly thankful to the effort those men put in every week — that's the mark of professionals.

"It's the strength of the leaders out there that has made this battalion," he said. "I am proud to have served with you."

Mitchell spoke briefly, saying the ceremony was to honor the McCarthys for "a job well done," for their help to him and his family and their dedication to the Army.

"I look forward to the challenge ahead," Mitchell said. "To the Soldiers — you are the future of our great Army and defenders of our nation. Remember, it's a great day to be an American, but a greater day to be an American Soldier."

College UAVs tested here

Competition at McKenna MOUT site attempts flight

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Fort Benning hosted an Unmanned Aerial Vehicle competition for college students July 21 at the McKenna MOUT site.

It's an ongoing, yearly robotics competition, and there has yet to be a winner.

"The teams have a mission they have to accomplish, and there are four levels they have to complete," said Mike Kennedy, experimentation manager of Unmanned Systems, Mobility Branch, Soldier Battle Lab.

The first thing they have to do is fly their UAV over a three-kilometer, three-point path, Kennedy said. The operator turns it on, makes sure the system works, and can launch it, but then it has to fly to those three points autonomously, without operator help.

That's step one, and Kennedy said it's a lot more complicated than the average remote control model (platform) anyone can buy off the shelf.

"A lot of these schools are coming in on very, very small budgets. Most of them can't afford to buy platforms or software or (global positioning systems), so they're writing their own software code," Kennedy said.

The Association of Unmanned Vehicle Systems Atlanta offered a $50,000 prize this year to the group that successfully completed all four levels.

Of the 13 competing teams, only four made it to level one, and there are three more levels to reach.

With no team successfully completing all four levels, Kennedy said the prize increases to $10,000. Next year competitors vie for $60,000.

According to the Georgia Institute of Technology UAV competition Web site, this challenge is so difficult, no team is expected to complete the mission for at least two more years.

"The next level is to identify all the buildings in McKenna, specifically the target building," Kennedy said.

Philip A. Brooks

Virginia Tech competitors watch their custom-built helicopter safely land following a successful, autonomous three-kilometer flight around McKenna.

Once the target building is identified, Kennedy said, the UAV then has to analyze all the openings in the building, determine the location of doors and windows, and if the doors or windows are open or shut.

The last level requires the UAV to either fly into the building and search it or launch a sub-vehicle that flies into the building on a search mission.

"We're raising up the next generation of (robotic) designers who are going to create the machines that help the Soldier in the future and keep him out of dangerous situations," said Robert Michelson, founder of the competition.

"Look at the Iraqi hostage situation," Kennedy said. "If we had the ability to search a terrorist house with a UAV, some of those people might not have been killed."

This year, Georgia Institute of Technology, the University of Arizona, Simon Fraser University and Virginia Polytechnic Institute and University completed the first level.

Kennedy said one of the four has possibly completed level two, but the college team declined to tip their hand in this year's competition.

Team works to sustain Benning

SMS program to help post environment

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Since early 2004, a Fort Benning team has been developing and implementing a sustainability management system. The goal of the SMS is to sustain the installation and its lands to help Fort Benning meet its mission requirements.

The SMS program was mandated under Executive Order 13148 and must be in place by Dec. 31. The order mandates all federal agencies to integrate environmental accountability into daily activities and comply with environmental regulations regarding pollution.

The Army's SMS is based on a voluntary International Organization Standardization standard that allows organizations to develop the most effective way to manage their unique environmental activities.

"It's an all-encompassing type of thing," said Mel Stafford, the SMS coordinator. "SMS looks at how we get things, how we use them and what impact those activities have on the environment." Stafford is a chemical engineer with a master's degree in environmental planning and risk assessment.

As Fort Benning meets its missions of providing the world's best Infantry Soldier, trained units and being a power projection platform capable of deploying individuals around the globe, the SMS provides measurable goals, objectives and targets to help the post stay "environmentally friendly."

Stafford said the SMS team identified objectives relating to the post's land, air and water.

"Our own impacts are our own impacts," she said. "They're unique to Fort Benning." The land objective is to continually increase the acreage of usable land for mechanized training. In order to do that, she said, the post will need to thin trees, control erosion and mitigate the impact on wetland areas.

Other targets are promoting the use of alternative fuels for non-tactical vehicles on post, reducing hazardous emissions and improving the quality of surface water. Stafford said there are things people living and working on Fort Benning can do to help achieve the SMS goals.

"Be careful what you put down the drain or dump in your yards," she said. Things like paint, oil, solvents and other cleaners affect the quality of the water. "The same is true for personnel out in the training lands, they need to leave it like they found it," she said. "Don't just dump used materials out there. Bring them back and turn them in. Also do things like fill in holes they've dug for training to avoid degrading and eroding the land." Stafford said SMS information would be available to residents in a pamphlet to be distributed at town-hall meetings.

Although the SMS has identified the negative impacts of Fort Benning's mission on the environment, Stafford said there are a number of positives too, like the Materials Recycling Facility and the new gas station on Dixie Road. When the new station opens, it will have an ethanol pump.

"If someone has a vehicle that can use this type of fuel, a flexible-fuel vehicle, using it will help protect our air quality because of less harmful emissions from their car," she said.

"SMS encompasses so many things, mission included," Stafford said. Because SMS crosses all organizational lines on post, it's important for everyone to participate and incorporate SMS into daily activities. Ignoring the SMS can have a negative impact on the mission by increasing waste, accidents, spills and injuries. And non-compliance can lead to fines.

"We want to have these lands available for future generations of Soldiers," Stafford said.

Benning's top enlisted retires after 31 years

Post CSM says he'll miss camaraderie

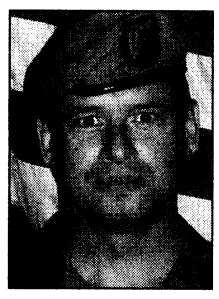
Spc. Nikki St. Amant
Bayonet staff

In the more than 31 years since Mike Kelso joined the Army, he has seen war come and go, witnessed the nation struggle through a civil rights conflict, an oil embargo and Sept. 11, and seen the nation's largest military force reinvent itself time and again.

Change, the one constant in life, is something Kelso has come to accept.

The Infantry Center command sergeant major hands the reins to Command Sgt. Maj. Lonnie Wright today at 11:30 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

In his new position with Soldier Battle Lab, Kelso won't be far from the comfort of his sixth floor Infantry Hall office and the familiar faces he has come to know over the years. That's a small blessing for someone who said the thing he'll miss most is Soldier camaraderie.



"This was inevitable," he said. "Whether he has been in three or thirty years, every Soldier faces the day he doesn't have to put on a uniform. I'm not excited about it."

But on his road to civilian life, Kelso takes three decades of experience. He learned to cope with the ever-changing face of the Army, the nation and the world.

"I've seen a lot of changes in my time," the history buff said. "They are for the better. I'm not saying the Army I joined in 1973 couldn't get the mission done, but there were problems."

Kelso talked about the rampant drug use he witnessed in his early units, deplorable Soldier living conditions, racism, and dangerous equipment and fuel shortages.

Today's Army is different, he said. Racism is a thing of the past, Soldiers have a much higher standard of living than ever before, and the new Army has no tolerance for drug use or faults of character. Today's Soldier is happier, better paid and better equipped.

Kelso

But Kelso recognizes and appreciates the accomplishments of the old Army.

When he was a young trooper, the NCO Education System was created as officers began placing more trust and responsibility in their NCOs following the Vietnam War. Tasks, conditions and standards were developed, which are now the backbone of every Soldier's training and every unit's mission. And Soldiers were more disciplined overall in his early days.

That discipline can be attributed, in part, he said, to training methods frowned on today. Rough, grueling drills and the aggressive reinforcement of values bred Soldiers who appreciated doing things the right way.

But today's Soldier is better educated, Kelso said.

"They are better educated than we were," he said. "Any type of education gives the Soldier the ability to think on his feet, to adapt, which is something that is invaluable given the kind of war we are fighting right now."

Though today's recruits may not face the same harsh conditions upon entry into active duty as he did, Kelso believes in their mettle.

"Do I think the drill sergeants are coddling these young Soldiers through their fourteen weeks of training? Absolutely not," he said. "I believe what we turn out on Sand Hill every Friday will be outstanding Infantrymen. We don't need harsh discipline."

The female role in the Army has changed in 30 years, too.

While Kelso doesn't believe women should be signing up for Ranger training or wearing blue cords, he is realistic about today's female Soldier and the role she plays in the war-fighting effort.

"The current policy is the right policy," he said. "Besides, they are fighting. We have women in combat arms — patriot missiles, air defense, pilots. Women contribute immeasurably. Back in 1974, when I went to Airborne School, there were probably three women in the whole class. Go across the street and count how many there are now. Women make great Soldiers."

Old Army or new Army, it will be missed by the outgoing sergeant major. He has no regrets, but said timing kept him from serving in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"Timing is everything. I'm disappointed I missed Iraq and Afghanistan, but I feel very fortunate I was able to serve the country in Panama.

"You don't have to be a guy on the ground in Baghdad to be serving your country. Every Soldier is serving his country in a time of war and that is commendable.

"But I believe every Soldier, every good Soldier, at least longs for the chance to serve in theater."

VETERAN GOES

Green to gold to green to gold

Donna Hyatt

Soldiers sometimes go from green to gold, but retired Maj. Thomas Jelks, of Columbus, went from green to gold to green to gold, again.

"When his tenure ran out in his temporary assignment as an officer, he immediately enlisted as a master sergeant and served in that grade as well," said Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, post commanding general, as he honored Jelks with the Order of Saint Maurice during a July 22 ceremony in Infantry Hall.

Prior to World War II, Jelks served three years as an Infantryman and mortar crew member in the Maryland National Guard.

Following the onset of the war, he enlisted in the Army and deployed to southern France with the 100th Infantry Division's 397th Infantry Battalion. Heavy fighting seemed to be everywhere.

Capt. Todd Lamb, assistant operations officer for the 1st Battalion, 329th Infantry Regiment, said the 100th Inf. Div. was, at one time, assaulted by 1,500 German soldiers in an effort to isolate the American forces from the 44th Inf. Div. in the Rhine Valley.

Following a fierce and bitter battle, the German advance was halted. (Then) Pfc. Jelks personally accepted the surrender of the enemy battalion commander and earned the Bronze Star for his actions.

After World War II, Jelks completed Officer Candidate School in Europe and received a temporary commission in 1946 while retaining his rank of master sergeant.

"He retired in 1966 as a major and also a master sergeant," Freakley said. "It's indicative of (his) generation and their absolute unwavering commitment and selfless service to the nation."

Jelks was nominated for the Order of Saint Maurice by Col. Michael DeVine, 100th Inf. Div. chief of staff in Louisville, Ky.

"He's contributed a lot of artifacts to the 100th Infantry Division museum," DeVine said. "When I found out he had never been awarded the Order of Saint Maurice, we wrote it up."

In addition to museum artifacts, Jelks has contributed to the 100th Infantry Division-Lieutenant General Withers A. Burress '14 Scholarship at Virginia Military Institute in Lexington, Va.

Attending the July 22 ceremony was 1st Lt. Matthew Norris, of the 3rd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division, a recent VMI graduate.

"Receiving the scholarship was a great benefit to me, because at the time I was paying out-of-state tuition. My family had moved to Michigan," said Norris, who is at Fort Benning to attend the Infantry Officer Basic Course. "(The scholarship) allowed me to finish my college education."

Retired Maj. Thomas Jelks receives the Order of Saint Maurice July 22. Jelks was awarded the Bronze Star for his service with the 100th Infantry Division during World War II.

Freakley thanked Jelks for many years of selfless service and exemplary duty to country as he bestowed upon him the Order of Saint Maurice.

The Order of Saint Maurice is awarded to those who embody the virtues of courage, justice, commitment, principle, leadership and gallantry.

"He's a tremendous example of being a Soldier and living the Soldier values," Freakley said.

"I've lived for eighty-nine years and been through a number of battles," Jelks said. "I'm thankful I was born and raised in a free country, and could serve our country for twenty-five years."

Wetherby Field

The Donnas to headline concert

Miller Lite tour comes to post Aug. 6

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

The Donnas will be headlining at Wetherby Field on Fort Benning Aug. 6, in the Miller Lite Army concert tour.

Originally influenced by AC/DC and KISS, The Donnas have since incorporated the sounds of the Rolling Stones, the Beatles, Dolly Parton and others, according to their official Web site.

"They're a twenty-somethings' band. Most college students would know who they are," said Brian Smith, marketing director for Fort Benning's Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"They've had some hits and been on MTV a number of times and been (featured) in Rolling Stone," he said.

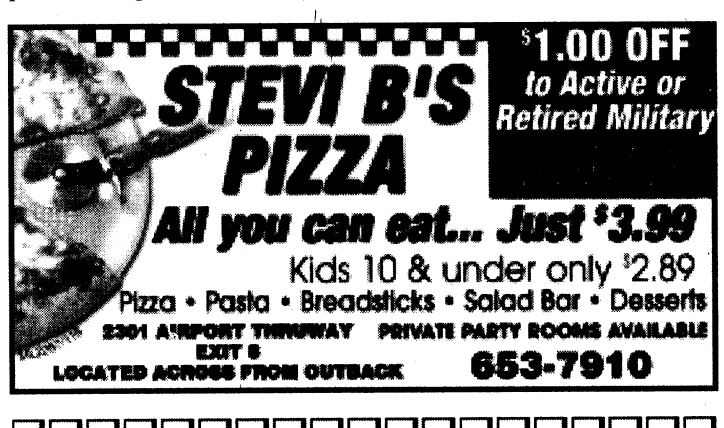
According to The Donnas Web site, they've also appeared on Saturday Night Live, the Tonight Show with Jay Leno, Late Night with Conan O'Brien and The View.

Local Columbus club band Angie Aparo is scheduled to open the show.

"Daniella Cotton also plays," Smith said. "Daniella Cotton is a female band, whereas Angie Aparo is not," Smith said.

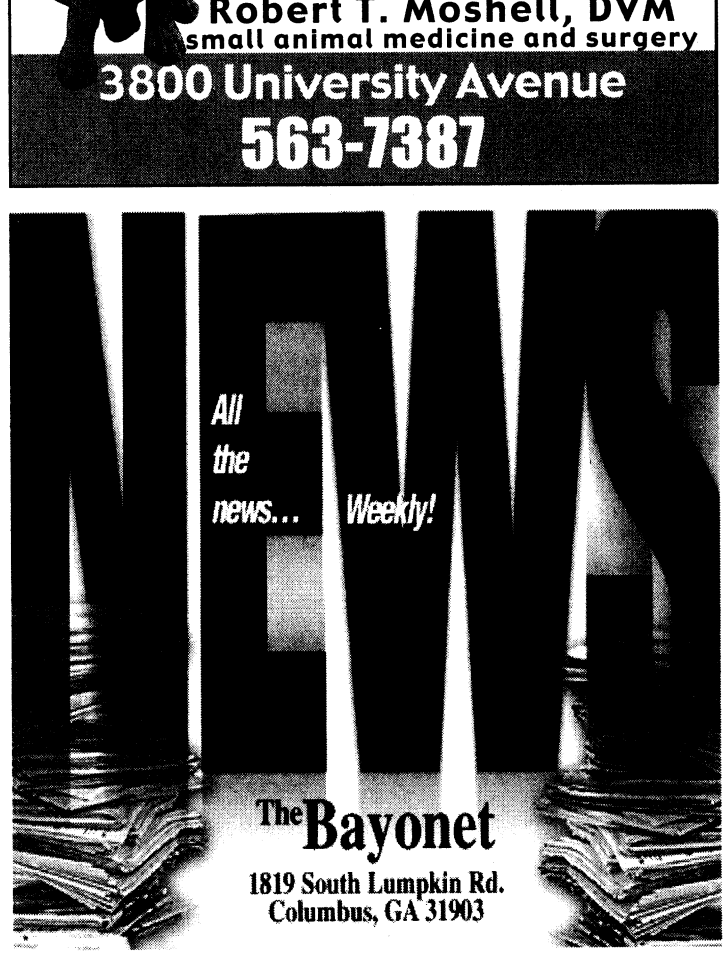
"It's going to be high-energy and a lot of fun," Smith said. "All of the bands are very clean. The entertainment should be fine for the entire family."

The concert, open to the public, is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. Advance tickets are $15, or can be purchased for $20 at the gate. A family 4-pack costs $50.



Tickets can be purchased on post at Omega World Travel, the Fort Benning Officers' Club or DMWR headquarters. Online tickets can be purchased at www.benningmwr.com.

Wetherby Field is located off Highway 27 East. There is no military checkpoint to enter, but coolers and pets are not permitted on the field. Refreshments will be sold, and chairs and blankets are allowed.



Should the concert be cancelled for inclement weather, Fort Benning and Columbus media will make an announcement.

More information about The Donnas can be found at www.thedonnas.com.

Susceptible Soldiers to be tagged

Color-coded risk bands help prevent heat injuries

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Originally Soldiers were marked on the battlefield with color-coded bands to easily identify key leaders, like machine gunners and medics, during firefights.

"In the post-Vietnam era, the Ranger School wanted to develop a marking system to identify people susceptible to weather injury, bee stings and insect bites," said Capt. Bronston Clough, personnel officer for the 4th Battalion, Ranger Training Brigade.

"So what we came up with was a marking for the top of the BDU blouse, which allowed the Ranger instructors to identify these personnel day or night from different angles," he said.

"What we have now is a half-inch mark using colored tape on the left suspender of their load carrying equipment," Clough said.

Command Sgt. Maj. Wayne Andrews, Infantry Training Brigade command sergeant major, said he's seen Infantry Soldiers marked with tape his entire 27-year Infantry career.

"We use red tape for heat injuries and white electrician tape for cold weather injuries," Andrews said. "I've seen it wrapped on load carrying equipment, on pistol belts, canteens, wherever it can be seen.

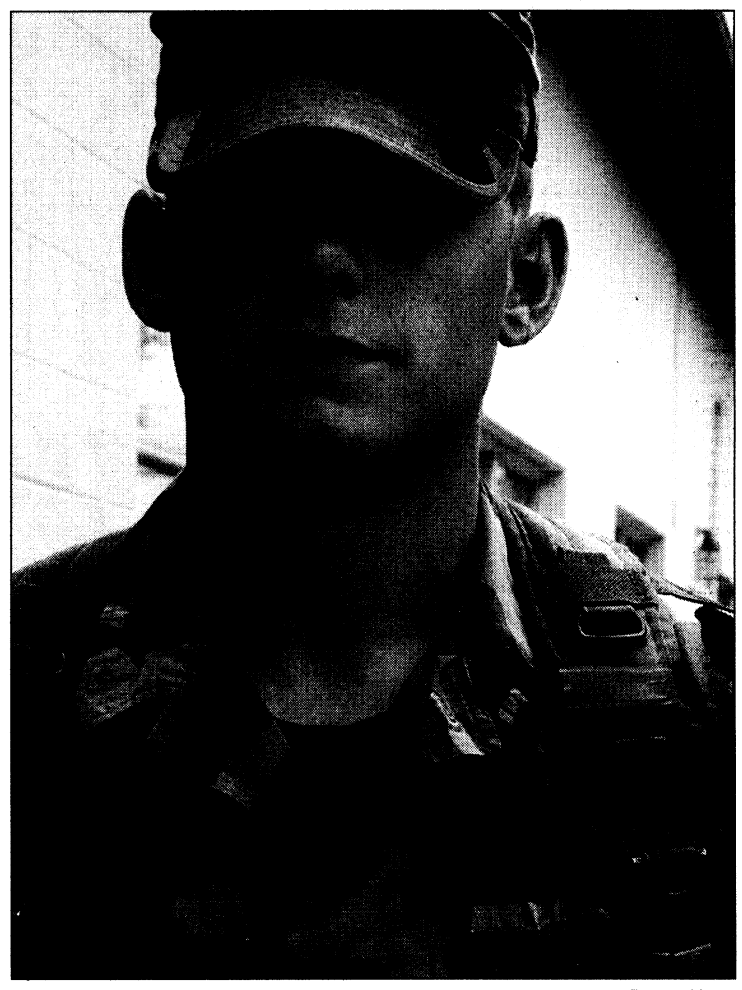
"If you walk up on a Soldier and see one of those colors, you know to keep a special eye out for him," he said.

Soldiers in basic combat training are now wearing color-coded bands on their wrists.

"When Soldiers started going down in the heat, we put red wristbands on them so the drill sergeants could keep an eye on them," said Maj. Greg Way, executive officer of the 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment.

"Originally we just thought we'd try it out, but they've made a noticeable difference," Way said. "Of course we won't know for sure until later this year when we write the after-action report."

This week, the Fort Benning Safety Office presented Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, commanding general, the staffing results for a potential policy marking at-risk Soldiers with color-coded wristbands based upon the Ranger's color-coded marking system.



"Different units might use different ways to mark their Soldiers," said Regis Beighley, Fort Benning safety manager. "The commanding officers can modify policy to best suit their Soldiers. I recommend (the color-coded system)."

"It works great," Clough said. "When we do Ranger instructor change-over, we go through a standard briefing informing (the RI) of different things that might happen on the patrol, and one of those is possible hot-weather injuries."

"The RI can tell just by looking at (the Soldiers) who is at risk while on patrol. He knows who's at risk, even at night," Clough said.

The Rangers use red for heat related susceptibility, yellow to signify bee sting or medical allergies, white for cold weather injuries and blue to denote a weak swimmer.

"Anything we can do to help the Soldier is worth a try," Way said.

High heat, humidity ingredients for health hazards

Georgia Department of Human Resources

ATLANTA — With hotter-than-normal summer temperatures blanketing most of the U.S., the Georgia Department of Human Services wants to remind people of the potential health hazards associated with high heat and humidity.

Prolonged exposure to high ambient temperatures can cause excessive fluid loss and shock and may cause the body's temperature-regulating mechanism to fail causing dangerous elevations of body temperature. Heat-related illnesses — heat exhaustion and heat stroke — can be serious and should be treated immediately. People planning outdoor activities should exercise caution, limit activity, and watch themselves and others for signs of heat illness.

"When you combine high heat with high humidity, your body has a harder time cooling itself because sweat does not evaporate as quickly," said Dr. Stuart Brown, director of the Division of Public Health. "It's very important to 'listen' to your body, and if you begin to feel weak or dizzy, know that it's time to take a break, go indoors and cool down."

Brown said that anyone can be at risk for heat-related illness but the elderly and children can be particularly susceptible.

In addition, people who work outdoors or who exercise outdoors need to pay close attention to the warning signs of heat-related illness.

Heat exhaustion is the body's response to high temperatures for a long period of time.

Symptoms of heat exhaustion include dizziness, nausea, vomiting, headache, excessive thirst, and feelings of weakness.

Persons experiencing heat exhaustion may not sweat due to dehydration and skin may feel cool to the touch.

Persons experiencing these symptoms should be moved indoors to a cool place immediately, given water to drink, and cooled in a cool bath or with cool compresses. Consultation with a physician is advised as heat exhaustion may progress quickly to heat stroke.

Heat stroke is a serious and potentially life-threatening condition that occurs when the body can no longer regulate its internal temperature.

Symptoms of heat stroke include vomiting, dry, hot, red, or pale skin, headache, mental confusion and disorientation, and loss of consciousness.

Emergency medical response (911) should be called immediately for persons experiencing these symptoms. Move the person indoors to a cool place, and cool with cool bath or compresses. Do not give the person fluids.

To minimize the potential for adverse health effects caused by heat and humidity, the Department of Human Resources recommends the following:

- Drink plenty of fluids, especially water and ice water, and other clear liquids. Sports drinks are especially good because they not only replace fluids, but also replace necessary nutrients lost through sweating.
- Avoid excessive activity, especially between the hours of 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. when the sun is highest overhead and the air temperature highest. Excessive outdoor activity can be especially hazardous.
- Wear loose-fitting, light-colored clothing that allows air to circulate around the body. When outdoors, be sure to apply plenty of sunscreen to minimize the risk of sunburn. Take extra care with infants and children whose tender skin can burn much faster than adults'. Never leave an infant or child or pet in a car when the weather is hot, even with the windows down.
- Indoors, keep air circulating with fans if you do not have air conditioning. Windows should be opened slightly to allow better air movement, while keeping shades and blinds closed will help keep indoor air temperatures lower. Use air conditioning if you have it.

Just doing their job

Photos by Tawny Archibald Campbell

Eddie Ford and Pfc. Jhontan Tello, both with Emergency Medical Services, load a stretcher into the back of an ambulance after transporting a patient to the emergency room at Martin Army Community Hospital Tuesday.

Fort Benning Emergency Medical Services responded to 3,027 calls last year. With nearly 2,000 calls already this year — more than 425 in July alone — officials said calls to EMS will likely exceed 4,000 in 2005.

Military police respond to a crash off Marne Road and Lumpkin Road Tuesday night.

EMTs: React to heat injuries

receive 43 calls by the end of the day — a record, Walker said.

The majority of the calls were to treat victims of heat related injuries, with the most serious having a 109 degree temperature.

With more than 200 victims of heat related casualties since June 1, the emergency medical technicians have treated more patients this summer than normal, Metcalfe said

The humidity in Georgia is the biggest culprit, he said. And when people from all over the country come here to train, their bodies are not acclimatized, and they react in different ways.

Metcalfe said his workers responded to a higher number of calls this past winter as well. There were more car accidents, probably due to the quantity of rain, he said.

To date, the EMS has responded to about 2,000 calls. Metcalfe expects the number to exceed 4,000 by the year's end.

He said he thinks his crew is more than capable of handling the volume of patients.

Sixteen full-time paramedics and six Army medics from the 14th Combat Support Hospital make up the EMS team.

Each paramedic is nationally registered, which means they are trained in advanced life support, capable of performing CPR and invasive procedures, and can administer a variety of drugs.

"With the exception of lab work, we do everything the emergency room does, in the back of the ambulance," Metcalfe said.

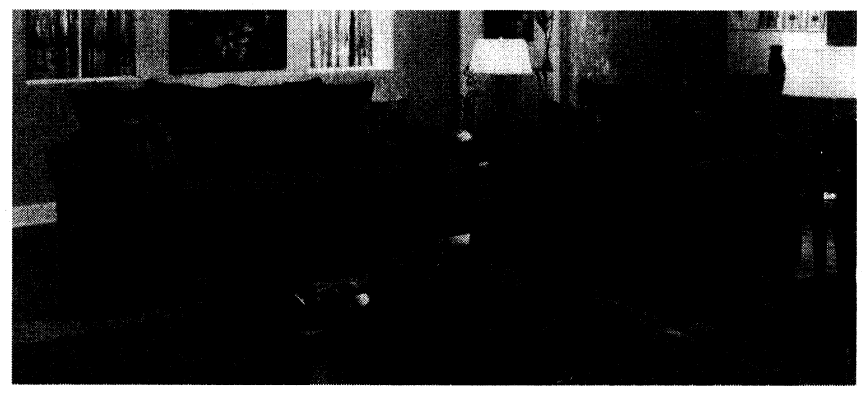
"We consider ourselves experts in treating casualties," said paramedic Mark Sweat. "We have the best equipment, the know-how, the experience. If we get there quick enough and the drill sergeants have done what they need to do, we have a good chance of getting that kid back."

Sweat referred to the basic trainees who make up the majority of patients treated by the EMS. He said the influx of Soldiers is another reason for the high number of heat victims this summer.

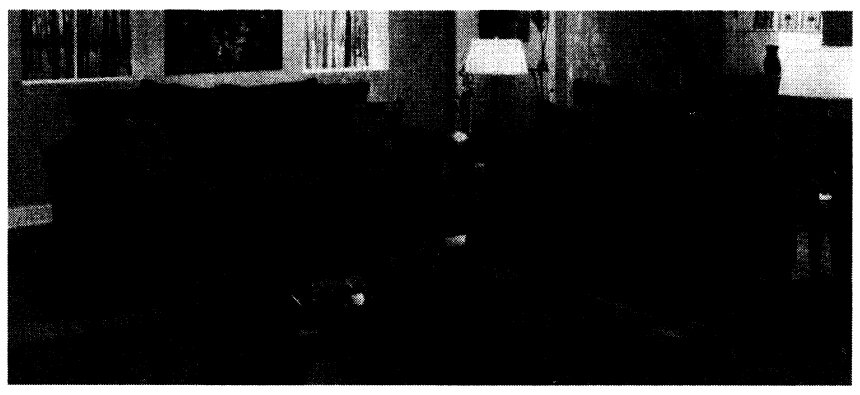
"No matter how many heat casualties you've treated, it's never routine," Sweat said, "because you don't know how bad the guy is going to be."

And no matter how bad off a patient is, Sweat said, the paramedics of Fort Benning uphold the highest standards in emergency care, and they do what they do because they love it.

"It's an adrenaline rush," Walker said. "It's not for the meek."



JD KINDER'S FURNITURE



SUMMER SALE!

SHOP SMART!

JD Kinder's Furniture is the most recognized destination in the Columbus trade area for a wide selection of quality home furnishings. We enjoy a great following amongst our military citizens and buying and financing here is very convenient. But many people are unaware that JD Kinder's can arrange financing for many people who are young and just starting out with little credit history or are in need of credit repair and think that they can't buy from normal retailers like us. These people many times go to rent to own stores and specialty military stores. They have their place, but many times the people that can least afford it end up paying more for furniture. Look at the illustration below and see just how much you can save at Kinder's.

COMMUNITY

According to a Myvesta survey, families spent an average of $431 on clothing, $142 on supplies and $207 on sporting activities getting ready to go back to school last year. This year, parents will be shopping for an estimated 53.4 million children enrolling in kindergarten through 12th grade.

Chattahoochee County HS 'school of choice'

Registration continues today

Lori Egan
Bayonet editor

Approximately 70 Fort Benning students will travel to the new Chattahoochee County High School for school Aug. 11, the first day of school.

The initial start date was Monday, but, because of road construction in front of the school, the first day of school was postponed until Aug. 11, said Pam Timms, school principal.

The school board made the decision to delay the school's opening because the acceleration and deceleration lanes in front of the school are unfinished, she said.

The high school is on Highway 26, about 15 miles from Fort Benning, and will serve grades six through 10 initially with one grade added each year. The first graduating class will be in 2008.

Chief Warrant Officer Rob and Teresa Rayner moved here from Fort Drum, N.Y., recently and went to the school's ribbon-cutting ceremony Friday to find out more about the school for their 15-year-old daughter, Jessica.

During the ceremony, Superintendent Dalton Oliver told the audience the $9.7 million building, built on 155 acres, had five science labs, a 24,000-square-foot gymnasium and a 6,000-square-foot cafeteria, and cost $87 per square foot.

"There's a computer for every student with state-of-the-art technology labs," Oliver said.

"Science first, then electives," said Georgia Board of Education member Peggy Nielson, the guest speaker, noting that China graduates 10 times the number of engineers than the United States does and U.S. jobs are moving to India and China.

"But if the children aren't in school, they can't learn," Nielson said, "and 'bell to bell' Chattahoochee County sweeps the state in that achievement."

Dewayne Baldwin, Fort Benning School Liaison officer, said Chattahoochee County High School is a "school of choice," meaning Fort Benning ninth- and 10th-graders can still attend Muscogee County high schools.

"Although some Fort Benning students are zoned to attend Chattahoochee County High School, it's not a 'mandated' school," Baldwin said.

"I think the high school is counting on competing with the magnet schools in Columbus," he said, "attracting top-notch students for the advanced placement classes."

Chattahoochee County High School will be four schools in one — a traditional high school, an alternative school, an accelerated school and a vocational school.

All students will use the technology, Oliver said, and if the students choose, they can earn a year of college credit while attending high school.

School registration continues today. Timms said the Web site, www.chattahoochee.k12.ga.us, should have the updated school handbook online today. The school's phone number is 989-3678.

For more information, call Baldwin at 545-3062.

SKIES Unlimited offers unlimited possibilities

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Fort Benning's Child and Youth Services launched a program to help military kids advance their education in academics, the arts, sports and life skills.

Through SKIES Unlimited, or Schools of Knowledge, Inspiration, Exploration and Skills, children will participate in programs not available or included in curriculums on post and at local schools.

The program, expected to go Armywide, was initiated by the Army's Children Family Support Center and will allow CYS to hire top-notch instructors to teach classes like ballet and algebra, even skateboarding, said Dewayne Baldwin, school liaison officer.

The classes will be made available in addition to the classes and programs that already exist through CYS. Some classes that have been proposed to begin in September are drivers' education, a financial readiness workshop for teenagers, and guitar and violin lessons.

Kids who need to catch up on classes they've missed throughout the school year, or who are preparing to take exams such as the SAT, will be offered classes tailored to their needs, Baldwin said.

"Since our families often have inconsistent hours because of the needs of the Army, CYS can offer, through this education program, consistency in time and space," said Jon Burnham, school transition specialist for the U.S. Army Installation Management Agency Southeast Region Office in at Fort McPherson, Ga.

"Parents can have more peace of mind knowing their children are learning valuable information that enhances their school work at a high interest level," he said.

"SKIES Unlimited will provide classes that are affordable and comparable with programs downtown," Baldwin said.

Some courses will be offered at no cost, and others for minimal fees.

Money generated will go back into the program to upgrade facilities and equipment, he said.

The goal is to offer a catalog of classes with descriptions, broken down into semesters, much like those printed for college continuing education programs.

All military children are eligible to participate, but they must be registered with CYS.

The program, established by CFSC in 2002, was piloted at posts throughout the country and abroad, including Fort Belvoir, Va. and in Kitzingen, Germany. In 2003, school liaisons were trained to integrate the program with Youth Services.

"We're very excited about the program," Baldwin said. "The options are unlimited, that's why it's called SKIES Unlimited."

For more information about SKIES Unlimited, call Baldwin at 545-3062.

Experts 'drive' home safety tips

Leni S. Kass
Hoeffner PR Group

When summer break ends, thousands of college students will drive back to school. An urgent plea for highway safety is being issued from College-Bound Teen Magazine, Hey U.G.L.Y., Inc., NFP and Precision Tune Auto Care.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reported 7,452 fatal crashes involving drivers 16-20 in 2003. While the number of highway deaths overall rose .4 percent that year, fatalities in crashes involving drivers ages 16 through 20 rose 1.3 percent.

Teenage drivers are involved in fatal crashes at twice the rate of other drivers and have a fatality rate four times that of drivers ages 25 to 69.

According to the Car Care Council, poor vehicle maintenance is responsible for five percent of road accidents involving 2,600 deaths and 100,000 disabling injuries each year.

"Our goal is to educate students on car care (and) safe driving practices," said Gina LaGuardia, editor-in-chief of CB Teen.

Joel Burrows, "the Car Doctor," vice president of training and R&D at PTAC, advised teens to make it a habit to walk around their cars and inspect their tires, adjust mirrors and check windshield wipers before putting the car in gear. He also urged drivers to buckle up and follow posted speed limits, and get plenty of rest.

Each year, according to the National Highway Traffic Administration, at least 100,000 crashes, 40,000 injuries, and 1550 fatalities are the result of drivers falling asleep behind the wheel.

These crashes happen between the hours of midnight and 6 a.m., involve a single vehicle and a sober driver traveling alone.

Drivers need to be fully alert and focused on the road and other vehicles in their vicinity to insure a safe trip.

And, while having a cell phone is an important safety tool, don't drive and talk, said Burrows, who advised students to keep the radio volume at a level that enables them to hear emergency vehicles.

The Precision Tune Auto Care Car Doctor offered these tips:

• Don't forget to check the wipers before driving. Windshield wipers should clear the windshield in one full cycle.

• A cell phone is an important safety tool, but talking and driving don't mix.

• Get to know your owner's manual.

• Relax and enjoy the ride. Fast aggressive driving, on average, saves only 30 to 40 seconds.

• Perform a monthly inspection of all external lighting. The ignition must be turned on to check lighting such as the blinkers.

• Get in the habit of walking around your vehicle prior to getting in. Check tire inflation level.

Proper tire inflation specifications are located on the door jam, gas cap door or trunk deck lid.

Learn the proper procedure for changing a tire.

• Check the oil when the car is cool.

The vehicle should be on a flat surface with the engine stopped.

• Check the engine coolant. Don't raise the hood if steam is visible.

If the radiator cap must be removed, the vehicle should be cold.

• Regularly check fluids.

• Adjust side mirrors should be adjusted so the vehicle is almost not visible. This helps to reduce the blind spot.

• Keep a first aid kit, flashlight, blanket, flares, water, ice scraper, emergency phone numbers and equipment to change a flat tire on hand.

Welcome to Fort Benning Schools

Wilson Elementary

112 Lavoie Ave.
545-5723

Wilson was named in honor of Pfc. Richard G. Wilson, who received the Medal of Honor while serving as a medic with the 187th Infantry Regiment in Korea. Since 1965, the school has served children in the Indianhead Terrace community. More than 400 are expected to enroll this year.

Phyllis Parker has been the principal of Wilson since 1990. The wife of an Air Force veteran, Parker graduated from the Principals' Center at the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

Wilson was recognized as a model school by the North Central Regional Education Laboratory, and its partnership with the Basic Combat Training Brigade has been recognized as a model for the Partners in Education program in Georgia.

Wilson students have the opportunity to participate in chorus, drama, computer club, craft club, sport stacking, photo club and an environmental protection club.

McBride Elementary

700 Custer Road
544-9411

McBride Elementary serves about preK through fifth-grade students from McGraw Manor. The school opened in 1968 and was named in honor of Capt. Morris McBride, a Fort Benning Soldier who was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism in Vietnam.

Del Hicks is the principal at McBride. He has a master's degree from Northern Illinois University and an educational specialist degree from Troy State University.

McBride's Woodland Trail, a two-mile outdoor classroom, has been recognized as a model wildlife sanctuary by the Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission.

The school's extracurricular activities include sport stacking, the Woodlands Club, reading and technology clubs.

Stowers Elementary

7791 Stowers Drive
544-2312

Stowers has annually served more than 600 students from the Davis Hills and Bouton Heights Housing Area since it opened in 1993. The school is named for Cpl. Freddie Stowers, who distinguished himself for exceptional heroism in 1918 while serving with the 93rd Division in France. Stowers was the first black Soldier to be posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

Angie McPherson is the principal of Stowers. McPherson, the former principal at Loyd Elementary, earned a master's degree in special education from Jacksonville State University. She is married to Col. David McPherson, commander of the Army National Guard Training Center at Fort McClellan, Ala.

Assistant principal Clint Wise, the son of retired Sgt. Maj. Emory and Elizabeth Wise, attended school on Fort Benning.

Stowers is one of two elementary schools on Fort Benning that offers special education classes and serves students with special needs. The school partners with Ranger Joe's, Lowe's and the Headquarters and Headquarters Company from the 3rd Brigade.

White Elementary

300 First Division Road
545-4623

White Elementary serves students from Main Post, Battle Park and the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation. The school, which opened in 1962, is named in honor of Lt. Edward A. White, who was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism while serving with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

Principal Tommy Lee has been at White for five years. He holds a doctorate degree from Auburn University.

Nearly a quarter of White's students speak a primary language other than English. These are mostly the children of the soldiers who come from Latin America to study at WHINSEC. WHINSEC and the Officer Candidate School are partners with the school.

White offers a variety of after-school activities, including chess, technology, Spanish, science and broadcasting clubs.

Dexter Elementary

99 Yeager Ave.
545-3424

Dexter Elementary opened in 1969 and was named in honor of Maj. Herbert J. Dexter, who was killed while serving with the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam.

A sculpture of Dexter's mascot, an eagle named Herbie, sits next to the school atop a piece of the Pentagon which was partially destroyed in the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11.

Melissa Hayes is the new principal this year. She holds a post-graduate reading specialist degree from Georgia State University, an educational leadership from Troy State University and is working on her doctorate in educational leadership at Colorado State University.

Dexter partners with the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, and the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiments. The school's extracurricular activities include the Feel Good Mileage Club, ecology, technology and Spanish clubs, a Junior Leadership Team, sport stacking, and sign language.

Loyd Elementary

900 Santa Fe Road
544-8964

Loyd Elementary, 900 Santa Fe Road, opened in 1959 and serves students in the Custer Terrace community. It is named in honor of 2nd Lt. Frank R. Loyd Jr., who was killed in action while serving with the 25th Infantry Division in Korea in 1950. For his heroism as a platoon leader, Loyd was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

Maria J. Martinez begins her first full year at Loyd after becoming principal in October 2004. She came to Fort Benning from Fort Rucker, Ala.

Loyd is one of two elementary schools on Fort Benning that offers special education classes and serves students with special needs.

Loyd students participate in various after-school clubs, including chorus, reading and writing, math and cup-stacking.

Faith Middle School

Ingersoll Ave.
545-5524

Faith is Fort Benning's only middle school. It opened in 1952 and was originally located. The school was named in honor of Lt. Col. Don C. Faith, a Medal of Honor recipient mortally wounded in Korea while serving with the 1st Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment.

Dr. Julio Gonzalez is the principal. Mike Starrett and Angie Cotton are the assistant principals.

Faith follows the traditional middle school concept, assigning students to "teams" for literature, language arts, math, science and social studies.

Students also select from a menu of elective courses, including band, art, industrial arts, Spanish and multi-media.

Faith offers intramural sports, cheerleading, National Junior Honor Society and a media club, WBET, which has earned international recognition.

Faith partners with the Directorate of Public Safety.

COMMUNITY NEWS

ON POST

EFMP support group — The Army Community Service Center Exceptional Family Member Program has planned a support group meeting from 6 to 7 p.m. Tuesday in Building 359.

If you would like to participate in a support group geared toward meeting the needs of military families with special needs children, call ACS EFMP at 545-5521 or Amy Riley at 685-2644.

MEDDAC Open House and sports screenings — MEDDAC will host an open house and sports screenings from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Aug. 6.

Screenings include sports physicals, immunizations and vision, hearing, and dental screenings for children between the ages of 3 and 18 years. No appointments are necessary.

Parents should bring identification cards, medical cards, shot records and any required school physical forms to the open house.

For more information, call 544-1939 or 544-4408.

National Kids Day — Youth Services will host National Kids Day Aug. 6 in Youth Services Building 1056 from noon to 4 p.m.

National Kids Day is an annual event designed for kids and parents to spend the day together.

There will be food, music, face painting and games for everyone to enjoy.

There will also be ping-pong, horseshoes, cards, kiddie games, demonstrations and many more fun-filled activities and games. Youth of all ages are invited to attend.

For more information, call Youth Services at 545-3070 or 545-7945.

Defensive Driving Course — The Child and Youth Services Middle School and Teen Program will offer a Defensive Driving Course for students with a Georgia State Learner's Permit.

The course is a free four-hour online course.

There are five sessions and each session has a pre-test and test.

Parents can use the completion of this course to help lower insurance rates 10 to 20 percent (depending on the insurance company).

Students will have their own passwords to enter the site. There are a limited number of passwords issued to Fort Benning for this program. Sign up ends Aug. 31.

This course can be taken in Building 1056. Members of the CYS program can apply.

For more information, call 545-3070 or 545-7945.

Qualified Recycling Program — The Fort Benning recycling program relies on the participation of installation workers, family housing residents and military office workers and Soldiers in units on the installation.

Materials collected are cardboard, all types of paper, glass, plastic and metal cans (aluminum and tin).

These items are processed at the Materials Recycling Facility located in Harmony Church, where it is sorted and baled for sale.

For more information, call 544-6142 or 545-0276.

Chaplaincy celebrates birthday

Chaplain (Capt.) Michael L. White
Conus Replacement Center

Most everyone in the Army is aware that the Army was actually established on June 14, 1775, the year prior to our nation's declaration of independence. However, the number is far fewer who know that the Army Chaplain Corps was established next, just a few weeks after the Army, on July 29, 1775. The Navy wasn't organized until Oct. 13, 1775, and the Navy Chaplain Corps followed on Nov. 28, 1775.

Today, as every year, Army chaplains Armywide are celebrating our heritage and history. Fort Benning chaplains are gathered for this annual Organizational Day picnic at the Uchee Creek Lodge and Recreational Area.

There will be a special program of commemoration to kick things off, lots of fun activities for the kids, a softball tournament (chaplains against chaplain assistants — chaplains rule!), a cake-cutting ceremony (the youngest and newest chaplain gets the honor of assisting the installation chaplain) and, of course, lots of delicious barbecue, baked beans and potato salad.

White

While all this is very exciting and enjoyable, we need to remind ourselves that we are able to celebrate like this because of the service and sacrifice of so many who have gone before us.

Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) David Hicks, the Army Chief of Chaplains, wrote in his July 2005 newsletter, "In the 20th century alone, a total of 124 chaplains gave their lives in service to this nation."

Truly, these chaplains — and a large number of chaplain assistants, as well — rendered a very valuable service and made the ultimate sacrifice, "For God and Country."

That phrase is the English translation of the Latin motto of the Army Chaplain Corps, "Pro Deo et Patria." I think it says it all.

From July 29, 1775, to July 29, 2005, Army chaplains and chaplain assistants continue to serve for God and country. Happy birthday fellow chaplains and chaplain assistants, and may God's grace, mercy, love, joy and peace be with us all. Amen!

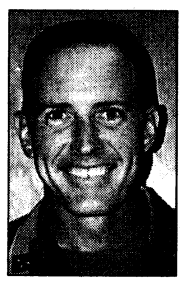
Lifelong love in Army possible



Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

In a moment of honesty across the scorching hood of a hot humvee, the specialist slowly asked, "Is it possible ... really possible, to have a lifelong love in the Army?"

Believe me, I can appreciate why he'd ask. I can understand why because this week I sat with a Soldier whose wife had just informed him that she'd been sleeping with his best friend (now that's using the term "best friend" pretty loosely, obviously) for several months.

I can understand because just this morning I sat with a wife whose husband had left her and more children than fingers on my hand (with several of those children being his from a previous relationship) because he just didn't "feel" about her like he did when they first got together.

I can understand why because each week I have the unenviable position of reviewing case after case of couples who only years (sometimes even just months) before stood in the midst of a wedding celebration and professed their unending affection for each other only to travel to the place in their relationship where they are literally bruised and battered, emotionally and physically, because of their anger toward one another.

Hawkins

Isn't it interesting that it takes more paperwork to get my Labrador registered on post than it does to get my lady married downtown? It takes far more instruction to get a driver's license than it does to get a marriage license. Now let me ask you (those of you who've both been married and drive) — which is harder?

If lifelong love in the military possible? Sure it is. Does it take work? Sure it does. Is it worth it? Absolutely! Do we have to be better at the "relationship thing" than our civilian counterparts who get to live in the same state for more than 24 months, get to sleep in the same bed with their mate a majority of the time, and get to have family within a day's drive ... you bet your Airborne Alice Pack!

That's why, here at the Family Life Center, we're committed to helping give young Soldiers and their fiancees the tools they need to build a relationship that will go the distance.

As a chaplain team, we take that so seriously that we actually require anyone getting married by a chaplain on Fort Benning to attend a six-hour "Making Love Last Forever" pre-marriage workshop at the Family Life Center.

It's not because we don't have other things to do — we do, lots of them. It's because there is nothing more important we can do with our time than to introduce young Soldiers and their mates-to-be to timeless principles that make for rock-solid relationships.

Stronger marriages and stronger families make for a stronger Soldier and a stronger Army. It's just the right thing to do.

Can you find lifelong love in the Army? Well, I'm on year 23 and pretty intoxicated with the girl I first married as a private first class — and I know a few thousand other folks who could say the same.

It's the second most important decision you'll ever make, and it's the primary determinant of your happiness here on this earth.

So if you or anyone else you know of is considering tying the knot, make sure they call The Family Life Center at 545-1760 so that we can give them all the advantages they need and deserve in being "fit to be tied."

"Sad folks wake up and say, 'Nuther day.'
I wake up and say, 'There she is again! There it is!
I get on my knees and pat the earth and say,
'God, you done it again!
God, you done good!
Thank you, feller ... friend."

OFF VETERANS PARKWAY

THE BAYONET

R & R

When Pope John Paul II made a 47-hour trip to Los Angeles in 1987, the LAPD recorded an almost 50-percent decline in bookings at local jails and only one murder. Police Chief Darryl Gates said, "People had time to reflect on what life is all about and maybe some felt there was more to life than committing crime."

TNT explodes the police genre with Wanted

At a bank in Culver City, Calif., about a block from Sony Studios, glass from shattered windows crunches underfoot at the entrance and on the floors. Police cars and ambulances crowd the parking lot.

Inside the building, blood and brain matter spatters walls, desks and filing cabinets.

In the middle of the chaos, a law-enforcement team gathers around a tattooed, pierced computer expert as he scans surveillance video of masked robbers brandishing automatic weapons.

All this violence and gore is just another day on the set of Wanted, TNT's new police drama, premiering Sunday. Created by Jorge Zamacona (Homicide: Life on the Street, Oz), it follows a fictional team of officers from local, state and federal agencies, tasked with capturing the 100 most wanted criminals in Los Angeles.

As Los Angeles Metro SWAT Lt. Conrad Rose (Gary Cole), the team leader, puts it, "We don't have to knock before entering."

"The idea," Zamacona said, "came from a bunch of stories I'd heard about this unit that existed in the '80s. My tech advisor, Louis St. Clair, had heard about this. In the middle and late '80s in L.A., the murder rate was over 2,000. So the Sheriff's Department and the mayor and the LAPD got together and put together this group that would just go hunt down the 100 worst guys."

As to whether the group still exists, Zamacona said, "Nope. They got their 100 guys, and then the U.S. Marshals Service came over, and they have a task force in L.A."

Zamacona liked the idea of a multidisciplinary force, with a variety of tools and tactics, working just outside the system — and occasionally just outside the law — to nail particularly heinous offenders. But, he emphasizes, this is not the morally ambiguous LAPD Strike Force portrayed in FX's The Shield, led by hard-hitting but ethically challenged Detective Vic Mackey (Michael Chiklis).

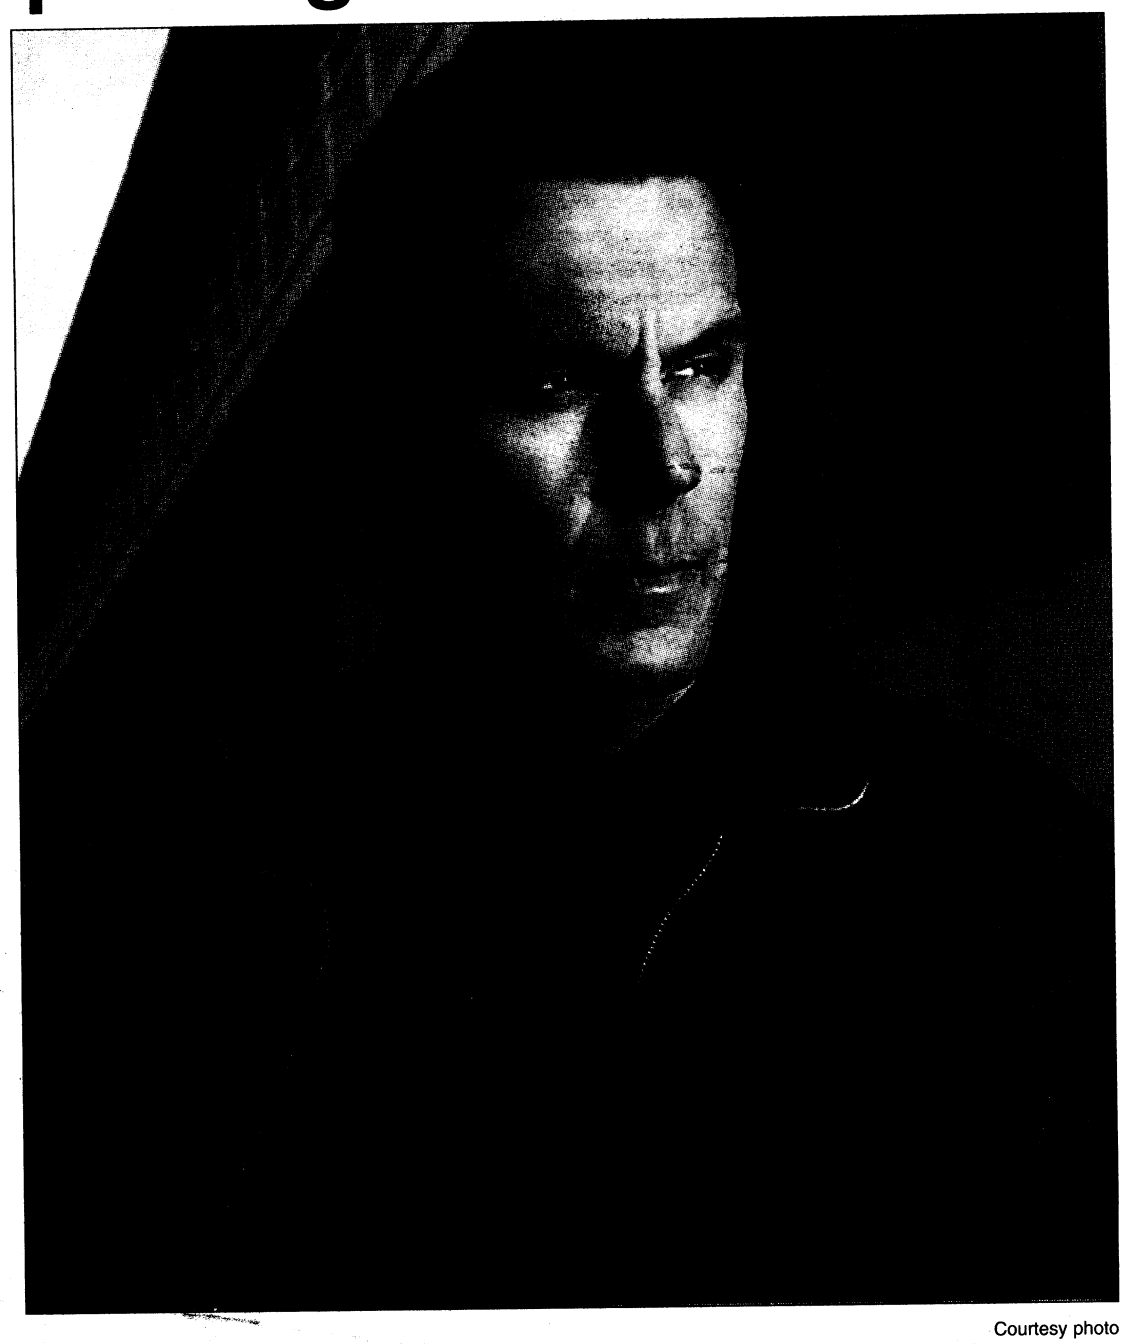
"This is moral cops," he said. "It's heroic cops. It's not amoral, corrupt policemen."

Rose, a father of two who's going through a divorce, has assembled a team that crosses agencies, personalities and backgrounds.

ATF agent Jimmy McGloin (Ryan Hurst) can recite chapter and verse of the Bible, never met a gun he didn't recognize, and is a political conservative.

Carla Merced (Rashida Jones, daughter of Quincy Jones and Peggy Lipton) hails from Naval Intelligence, and is an expert hostage negotiator.

Cocky FBI agent Tommy Rodriguez's (Benjamin Benitez) relentless womanizing is both an undercover asset and occasional hazard.



LAPD technical genius Rodney Gronbeck (Josey Scott, lead singer of the band Saliva) boasts a lot of ink and metal, but has a first-class mind.

DEA agent Joe Vacco (Brendan Kelly) lives in the team's waterfront warehouse headquarters because he's been booted from his own place.

The last to join — in episode two, the one in production on this day — is U.S. Marshal Eddie Drake (Lee Tergesen), who studied under Rose at the L.A. Metro Police Academy. He takes a break from bar ownership to sign onto the team after a member goes down in the line of duty.

The mix is intentional, especially the presence of McGloin's conservative voice.

"Not everybody is a lefty liberal," Zamacona said. "I'm a little left of Attila, but ... it's a balancing act. All we want is a balance.

Gary Cole stars in Wanted, premiering Sunday on TNT.

"He's not always right. Nobody's always right. I like these points of view being represented in this group, because they come from different training and disciplines. They don't get along."

Zamacona also wants the show to be about more than just nabbing crooks.

"I think it has a strong moral core," he said, "with spiritual overtones about right and wrong and good and evil. That's what I'm after. I like flawed human beings who are trying to figure out what right and wrong means for them, good and evil, what God is."

Does he believe evil exists in the world?

"I do," he said. "I'm interested in the notion of a card-carrying member of whatever faith, all of whom have a common denominator of 'Thou shalt not kill,' when part of the job is to kill or prepare to kill. What is the emotional hangover of that?"

Cole sees a lot of that in the character of Rose.

"I think what Jorge's trying to portray, especially using the family, is how tipped it is. What cops walk through and deal with, then they're dealing with school principals and homework, picking the kids up. It's almost schizophrenic.

"He goes from brutality — some of the stuff, when it turns into violence, gets unspeakable — to domestic things and back again. It's surreal. It's very unbalanced."

Sky High — When you're the son of the world's most legendary superheroes The Commander (Kurt Russell) and Jetstream (Kelly Preston), there is only one school for you — Sky High, an elite high school that is entrusted with the responsibility of molding today's power-gifted students into tomorrow's superheroes.

The problem is that Will Stronghold (Michael Angarano) is starting with no superpowers of his own and instead of joining ranks with the "Hero" class, he finds himself relegated to being a "Sidekick."

Sky High is rated PG for action violence and mild language.

Stealth — Deeply ensconced in a top-secret military program, three pilots struggle to bring an artificial intelligence program under control — before it initiates the next world war.

Starring Josh Lucas, Jessica Biel and Jamie Foxx.

Stealth is rated PG-13 for intense action, violence, brief strong language and innuendo.

Must Love Dogs — Sarah Hurlihy (Diane Lane), a divorced preschool teacher who has sworn off dating after a bad breakup, finds her family pushing her back into the dating world.

Her sister places a personal ad for her, declaring that anyone answering it "must love dogs," despite the fact that Sarah doesn't own a dog herself. When someone intriguing (John Cusack) responds to the ad, she decides to borrow Mother Theresa, her brother's dog, and plunge in.

Must Love Dogs is rated PG-13 for sexual content.

The Devil's Rejects — The unthinkable horror and chaos continues a few weeks after the events depicted in House of 1,000 Corpses as the murderous Firefly family is forced on the lam after a bloody showdown at their home.

With their story all over the news, the family continues their soulless killing spree, while Sheriff John Wydell (William Forsythe) looks to track them down for one last horrifying confrontation.

The Devil's Rejects is rated R for sadistic violence, strong sexual content, language and drug use.

Bad News Bears — Morris Buttermaker (Billy Bob Thornton), a former pro baseball player, was ejected from the game for attacking an umpire and now works as an exterminator.

Buttermaker is lured back into the game by Liz Whitewood, an attorney whose class action suit has forced the Little League to accept all players, regardless of their abilities.

As the new coach of the Bears, the most losing team in Little League history, Buttermaker has his work cut out for him.

Also starring Greg Kinnear and Marcia Gay Harden.

Bad News Bears is rated PG-13 for rude behavior, language, some sexuality and thematic elements.

Hustle & Flow — Though DJay, a streetwise Memphis pimp, has always had a way with words, that gift has long been misused; this philosopher hustler lives a dead-end life at the fringes of society. Still, DJay wonders what happened to all the big dreams he had for his life.

A chance encounter with an old friend, Key, spurs DJay: if he's ever going to make his mark, it has to happen now.

Starring Ludacris, Anthony Anderson and Taryn Manning.

Hustle & Flow is rated R for sex and drug content, pervasive language and some violence.

The Island — Lincoln Six-Echo (Ewan McGregor) is a resident of a seemingly utopian but contained facility in the mid-21st century. Like all of the inhabitants of this carefully controlled environment, Lincoln hopes to be chosen to go to "The Island," reportedly the last uncontaminated spot on the planet. But Lincoln soon discovers that everything about his existence is a lie.

Also starring Scarlett Johansson and Steve Buscemi.

The Island is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action, some sexuality and language.

Wedding Crashers — Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson star as a pair of divorce mediators who spend their weekends crashing weddings in a search for Ms. Right — for a night.

But when one of them falls for the engaged daughter (Rachel McAdams) of an influential and eccentric politician (Christopher Walken) at the social event of the year, they get roped into spending a weekend at the family's palatial waterfront estate and quickly find themselves in over their heads.

Wedding Crashers is rated R for sexual content, nudity and language.

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory — Charlie Bucket, a boy from an impoverished family under the shadow of a giant chocolate factory, wins a candy bar contest and is given a tour, along with four other children, of the amazing factory run by the eccentric Willy Wonka and his staff of Oompa-Loompas.

Starring Johnny Depp, Freddie Highmore and David Kelly.

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory is rated PG for quirky situations, action and mild language.

Fantastic Four — Marvel's first family of comic superheroes takes the world by storm as the longest-running comic book series in history comes to the big screen.

Reed Richards (Mr. Fantastic), who can elongate his body; Susan Storm (Invisible Woman), who not only can become invisible at will but can render other objects invisible; Johnny Storm (Human Torch), who can shoot fire from his fingertips and bend flame; and Ben Grimm (The Thing), a hideously misshapen monster with superhuman strength, together battle the evil Doctor Doom.

Starring Ioan Gruffudd, Jessica Alba and Michael Chiklis.

Fantastic Four is rated PG-13 for sequences of intense action and suggestive content.

Bench notes

Erin Nash

• Lance reigns in France

Lance Armstrong claimed his seventh consecutive Tour de France title July 24.

Lance is now retired, but maybe the fever will capture him again and we'll see him racing in the future.

I'd sure like to see it happen.

• Larry heads to the Big Apple

Former Detroit Pistons' coach Larry Brown will be the head coach of the New York Knicks if all the rumors are true. Larry's a great coach. Let's hope his health problems stay in check.

• Kurt finally wins

Current Nextel Cup title holder Kurt Busch won the Pennsylvania 500 at Pocono July 24.

This puts Kurt in fifth place in points, behind Jimmie Johnson, Tony Stewart, Greg Biffle and Rusty Wallace.

Nice kiss for the dog, Kurt.

• NASCAR gets some rest

This is an off week for NASCAR drivers, only to be followed by the Brickyard 400 at Indianapolis Speedway Aug. 7.

After the Brickyard, there's only five more races until the real Chase begins.

• NFL camps start

I'm already itching for some football, and NFL camps started this week.

Ricky Williams is back with the Miami Dolphins (probably because he owes them a lot of money) under new head coach Nick Saban.

• Trade deadline is here

By press time, the MLB trade deadline will be looming. It will be interesting to see who goes where, who gets who and how it affects the season.

The players from 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, played a tight defensive game to shut down 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, and add to a now four-game winning streak.

2nd Battalion beat 1st Battalion, 10-1, in intramural softball Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

"We played great on defense and shut them down to one run," said Darren McDonough, coach for 2nd Battalion.

The game was scoreless in the first inning, mostly due to errors and poor batting, said Pedram Davoudpour, 1st Battalion.

The first two runs of the game came in the second inning.

"We had good base running and took advantage of pass balls that the catcher missed," McDonough said. "That really helped advance our base runners."

The third inning was scoreless and both teams sent one runner in during the fourth inning.

The fifth inning was short and sweet with no runners coming in.

It was in the sixth inning that 2nd Battalion finally started to chalk up the points.

Chris Holcomb hit a triple and McDonough hit a sacrifice to send him home.

That play was followed by three base runs which put 2nd Battalion in scoring position.

"We had good, decent hits with smart base runs," McDonough said. "That was one inning where we just stuck in it."

The seventh and final inning, 2nd Battalion added three more runs to the score to end the game, 10-1.

"We couldn't hit at all," Davoudpour said. "It was like one, two, three (outs) and that was the inning for us."

Davoudpour said his team is usually much better.

"We kicked the crap out of these guys last time we played them," he said. "This team tonight is a mixed squad. It's the first time half of these guys have even played with each other."

Most of the players on the regular line-up are on leave, at work or in training, Davoudpour said.

McDonough said his team expected a tighter game, especially since they had lost before to 2nd Battalion, but he could see their opponent wasn't in the game.

"They had a lot of mental errors," he said, "but they're still a good team."

2nd Battalion is now 5-3, and 1st Battalion is 4-3.

All-star looks ahead to All-Army ball team

Egan keeps softball dreams alive with Army

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

For as long as he can remember, sports has played a major part in Christopher Egan's life.

"I think it was just my upbringing," said Egan, a mental health specialist with MEDDAC. "I've played baseball ever since I can remember. My father played professional baseball in the minors, right out of high school, and then went into the Army."

Growing up, Egan said, he, his dad and his little brother would go out every night and play ball. His dad would hit the ball and the boys would field it.

"One time I was playing catch with dad out in back yard, I was about nine or ten," Egan said. "He was teaching me to pitch, and my stepmother said something to get his attention. I went ahead and threw the ball anyway. It hit my dad in his face and broke his nose.

"All my dad said was that he should have kept an eye on the ball."

Egan knew exactly what his dad meant. A few years earlier, while playing T-ball, he had a similar experience.

"In T-ball I played first and this girl, named Kelley, played third," he said. "She got the ball at third and threw it to first. I took the ball right in the face and it chipped my tooth. I remember everyone on the team looking on the ground for the chipped off part of my tooth, not that it would have helped anything."

Egan continued to play sports and in high school he played baseball, football and basketball.

He started to play competitive softball in 2000, when he came back into the Army. He played on the Baumholder post team in Germany for two years. Both years his team placed second in the U.S. Armed Forces Tournament in Europe and came in third in the Final Four tournament.

In 2001 and 2002, Egan was selected for the Final Four All-Tournament

1986 to 2005

Mission takes spotlight from post sports competition

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Since it's inception, the Fort Benning sports programs have rollercoastered. It's had highs and lows, and the two decades from 1985 to 2005 were no different.

By the mid-80s, sports were at a high point. Hundreds of athletes participated in basketball, volleyball, flag football, bowling, golf, boxing, softball, soccer and many other programs offered through the sports office.

Olympic caliber athletes were still making themselves known on post, but not as many were competing in the upper level competitions.

One Olympic hopeful was Spc. Ernie Fradella. In 1988, he was selected for the U.S. National Bobsled team. To train, he pushed his Toyota Celica around the parking lot at Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

In 1988, Master Sgt. Erich Buljunt won a Silver Medal in air pistol.

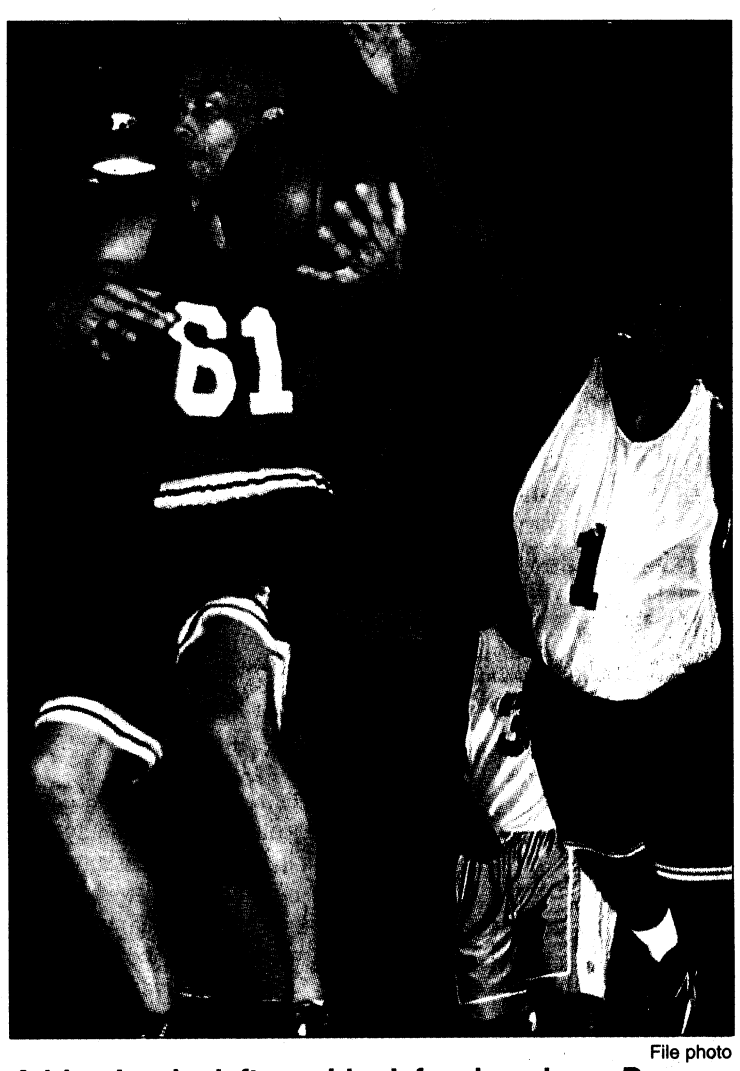
Paula Randall Pagan, public affairs officer, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit said that was the last pistol medal won by anyone in the United States.

Runners could be seen all over post as they trained to go the distance.

In November 1988, the first women's Fort Benning Ten-Miler team placed fourth overall in a field of 16. The men placed seventh out of 85 teams.

With the onset of the first Gulf War, athletics took a dip.

"We used to have about 85 teams in play during the softball, basketball and football seasons during the 80s," said Carol Gearheart, intramural sports coordinator. "In volleyball, we would have about half that."



In 1990, the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, hosted the first Sledgehammer Track and Field Tournament in the deserts of Saudi Arabia during Operation Desert Shield.

According to Gearheart, in the 90s, Fort Benning became a place where All-Army athletes came to train.

In March of 1990, the All-Army Wrestling Team did what no other team had done in 12 years. They captured the freestyle wrestling competition and the overall wrestling team title at the 1990 Armed Forces Wrestling Championships.

On Oct. 13, 1991, the Fort Benning men's Ten-Miler team took the Commander's Cup at the 7th Annual Army Ten-Miler in Washington, D.C., with a time of 3:25:42.

Spc. Charles Dent placed third overall and first among military personnel with a time of 49:53.

He was also selected for the 1991-1992 All-Army Cross-Country team.

In 1992, Spc. Rodney Smith earned a Greco Roman Wrestling bronze metal in the Olympics held in Barcelona, Spain.

The 1993, USA Rugby Military Club Championships at Blue and French Fields brought together more than 400 rugby players from 23 clubs around the country. The Fort Benning Cruise-a-matics captured the club title.

"In the early 90s, we brought on the Commander's Cup program," Gearheart said.

"Teams would get points throughout the seasons and then a commander's cup was given to the winning command."

In June 1993, the All-Army track team, which trained on post, won the team title in the men's and women's division at the Armed Forces Track and Field Championships. They dominated the 4x400 relay, triple jump and high jump.

Col. Willie Davenport was the coach of that team, Gearheart said. He was an Olympian in the 1964 and 1968 summer games in track and field and brought home gold medals. In 1972 and 1976, he won bronze medals.

In 1996, Spc. Rodney Smith made a second appearance at the Olympics when he and his teammate, Staff Sgt. Derrick Waldroup, qualified for the Olympic Greco Roman Wrestling team. Six shooters also competed that year.

Cruise-a-Matics forward Roy Krueger, center, narrowly evades a tackle during a rugby tournament hosted at the Cruiser Dome during the summer.

In 1997, the All-Army Volleyball camp was held at Fort Benning. The Armed Forces Volleyball Championships were here that year. The All-Army team won the overall title.

"From 1992 until 1999, the sports program grew, Gearheart said. There were four leagues — Sand Hill, Kelley Hill, Main Post and 36th Engineer League.

But since 9/11 and subsequent deployments, leagues have been reduced to three.

In 2000, Sgt. 1st Class Todd Graves won a Bronze Medal for shooting in at Sydney Olympics.

Shooters from USAMU dominated the 300-Meter National Championships in August 2001.

Four-time Olympian, Capt. Glenn Dubis swept the competitions, winning Gold Medals in three events. Maj. Stephen Goff took home three Silvers and Spc. Trevor Gathman took home a Bronze.

In 2002, Graves won the 2002 World Cup Final in skeet shooting.

In 2003 Sgt. 1st Class Daryl Szarenski, of USAMU, won a Gold Medal in the men's 50-meter pistol competition at the Pan-American Games in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic.

In 2004, eight USAMU Soldiers, seven shooters and a gunsmith competed in the Olympic games in Athens, Greece.

It was Maj. Michael E. Anti's third Olympics and he came home with a Silver Medal. He had shot in the 1992 and 2000 Olympics.

Spc. Hattie J. Johnson, 22, is the only female active-duty Army shooter on the Olympic team.

In 2005, Spc. Mike Osier placed fourth in the All-Army triathlon competition in California, which qualified him for the world competition.

"I see sports rebuilding itself again," Gearheart said. "I believe sports (changes) because of two things — the missions in the world and the commander's influence. Right now, sports are suffering. And it's mainly because of missions."

All-star: Hopes for next year

Team, where the top two Army and Air Force teams, stationed in Europe, play off.

"I coached and played with my unit-level team and won the post tournament two years in a row," Egan said. "The second year, we were undefeated up until the U.S. Armed Forces Tournament."

Last year, Egan played in the Columbus league with the Bill Heard team, which finished the season, 27-2. They were undefeated in industrial league and finished their season second out of 108 teams.

"One of the reasons I still play is because of a love of the game," Egan said. "I'm a die-hard baseball fan and I look for an opportunity to play."

Egan said playing helps him feel younger, and he's noticed that the older he gets, the better he plays.

How well he plays may not be the only reason Egan is drawing attention. It may be uniform he wears, brightly colored, pin-striped pants.

"I just like real bright pants," Egan said.

"I got the bright idea to get red pants with stripes, black with red stripes and orange with black stripes."

Egan said one of the reasons he likes to pitch is because he likes the attention that comes with being in every play.

"Maybe (the attention) has something to do with the pants," Egan said.

"I've been wearing goofy pants for the past three years. I think the next ones I get will be the Florida State colors, garnet and gold."

Egan is now playing with several softball teams. He plays on the JV&C construction team with the downtown league, the 14th Combat Support Hospital team on post and the Team8/Miken team out of Mississippi. Team8/Miken, which includes two other players form Fort Benning, is part of the Black Majors, the highest level of softball in the area.

As for family time, Egan said his wife, Gina, also assigned to MEDDAC, is very supportive of his hobby. She and their daughter, Angelina, 1, come to most of his games.

"She likes to give me a hard time, but says it's OK as long as it makes me happy," Egan said. "When I'm not playing ball, I am with the baby, who took her first steps at a ball game."

For the past two years, Egan has had high hopes of playing for the All-Army Softball team.

"I had planned on going last year, however my daughter was born and I was not about to leave my daughter," he said. "This year, I wanted to put my packet in, but the Expert Field Medical Badge test is coming up and I want to do that."

He's banking on 2006 being his year.

"All-Army is the level I want to play at," Egan said. "Hopefully next year I will go."

SPORT BRIEFS

ON POST

CYS registration — Registration for Child and Youth Services fall football, soccer and cheerleader programs will take place Monday through Aug. 15 at the CYS Central Registration Office, Building 359.

Sign-ups will be from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday for walk-ins and by appointment only after 1 p.m.

To sign up for CYS, the child's shot records, birth certificate, ID card, Social Security number and emergency point of contact are required. All participants will be required to have a physical before practice begins. Coaches are needed for all sports.

For more information, call 545-2079 or 545-3582.

3-D Archery Challenge — Fort Benning DMWR and the Archery Shooters Association will sponsor the Unit 3-D Archery Challenge. The event will be at the Uchee Creek Activity Center Aug. 11.

Registration begins at 11:30 a.m., competition from 12:30 to 4 p.m. and awards, dinner and prize drawing from 4 to 5 p.m.

Registration is $20 for military ID card holders, $25 for others. Major subordinate command units are encouraged to register. More than $5,000 in prizes will be awarded.

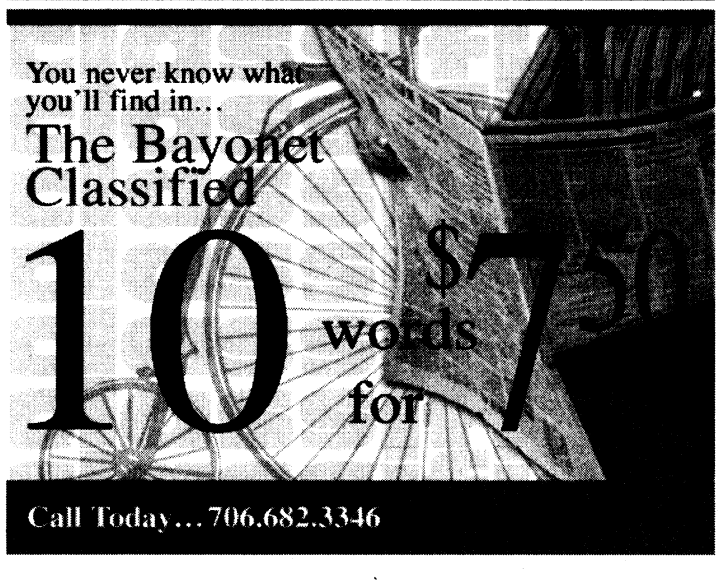
Registration is open until July 29 at Uchee Creek, Outdoor Recreation and Building 2783.

For more information, call Cliff Hughes at 681-6995.

Late Night Basketball League — CYS Youth Sports and Fitness hosts a Late Night Basketball League for teens in grades nine through 12.

Games are the second Friday of every month at the CYS gym.

This is street-style basketball. Teams must be formed by 8 p.m. on game night. High school teams are not allowed.



For more information, call 545-3540 after 3 p.m.

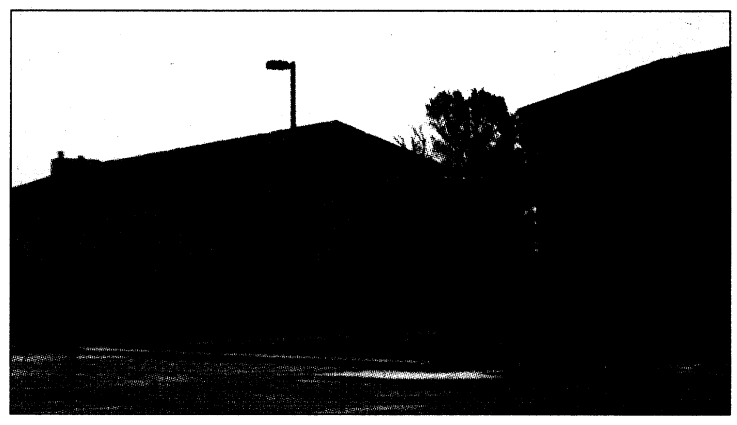
Benning continues to grow

$50 million in projects in progress

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

The Savannah District of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is keeping an eye on more than 10 construction projects underway at Fort Benning and looking ahead to more.



Those projects have been contracted out to five companies, said Jack Bartholet, head of the Savannah District's construction division, and some should be completed within the next two or three months.

Bartholet said the biggest of the projects is the $30 million barracks construction — seven buildings in one contract that includes a four-plex on Dixie Road, a battalion headquarters on Indianhead Road and two buildings adjacent to Martin Army Community Hospital.

"There is air conditioning on in two of the four barracks on Dixie Road," Bartholet said. "That's an indication for us that we're getting close." He said that quad complex was identified as the post's most critical construction need.

Construction on the new $6 million post chapel and religious education annex at The Infantry Center Chapel is Four new barracks buildings on Dixie Road are nearing completion. Clark Construction Company, the design and build team, also has a barracks project at the hospital and is building a battalion headquarters on Indianhead Road.

Soldier overcomes obstacles

Tracy A. Bailey

Spc. Peter Sprenger was injured by an IED in Iraq two years ago. He graduated from Ranger School July 29.

Soldier returns to unit tabbed

Tracy A. Bailey
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For Spc. Peter Sprenger, an Infantryman, Dec. 9, 2003, is a day that will stay with him forever.

Sprenger, who's assigned to the 101st Airborne Division's 1st Battalion, 187th Infantry Regiment, was on an early morning patrol in Talafar, Iraq, when a car bomb exploded near the command post. No Soldiers died in the attack, but Sprenger was one of 60 casualties.

"My right eye was just mutilated, and I had shrapnel wounds to my mouth, back, legs and shoulder," he said. "It kind of messed up my day."

Sprenger was evacuated to Landstul Regional Medical Center in Germany and then to Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C., where President George W. Bush presented Sprenger a Purple Heart.

Sprenger spent nearly eight months undergoing numerous surgeries and rehabilitation. He's legally blind in his right eye, still has shrapnel in his shoulder, the small of his back and his right leg.

Program offers option for Sailors, Airmen

Bonuses available for transfers

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

While the Army's transformation will result in a larger force, the opposite is true for the Navy and Air Force. The Navy is expected to reduce its force by 8,000 by the end of this year, and the Air Force will likely trim at least twice as much.

To help meet the needs of a growing Army and retain quality, experienced servicemen from the overstaffed services, the Department of Defense launched a program last year to allow Sailors and Airmen, enlisted and commissioned, active and Reserve, to transfer to the Army.

"It makes sense to bring on board someone who is already military-minded," said Sgt. Maj. Lyle Hogue, Fort Benning's command career counselor. "Why waste this talent when we can offer them a transition into the Army?"

Under Operation Blue to Green, Sailors and Airmen willing to enlist for three years may be eligible for bonuses up to $40,000.

Post's chief of staff to retire after 27 years

Last three-year tour only tour at Fort Benning

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Sitting in his office Tuesday, Col. Chuck Cornwell is having a hard time believing he's about to retire. But on Monday, he took everything off the walls so the room would be ready for the next chief of staff of the Infantry Center.

"I have to write my speech," Cornwell mused as he started to talk about his career, "or I'll get caught up in the emotion. The job — it's not overwhelming, but it's been the most fantastic job."

Cornwell has spent the past three years, the last of his 27-year career, at Fort Benning. And when asked to describe his job, he likens it to a huge ship.

"It's more like a battle carrier group," he said. "It doesn't turn on a dime."

He said it's hard to understand the support structure and "safety net" of Fort Benning if you're assigned to a unit on post or just here as a student.

And then, he said, he sometimes finds himself in charge of everything.

"Fort Benning is all about it's people," he said. "All the missions are made great by great people."

Cornwell said he found himself wondering why some of those great people continue to do the tough and stressful jobs they do every day, and decided it must be because they love what they do.

He said this, his first assignment at Fort Benning, has been the most rewarding because he can be out with Soldiers on any given day, doing Infantry-related things.

"It's energizing to come back here to do this job," he said. "The hardest part — the 21 funerals we've had. I wish we didn't have those.

"And things are exacerbated by the guys deployed. Somehow you don't appreciate them as much when they're here."

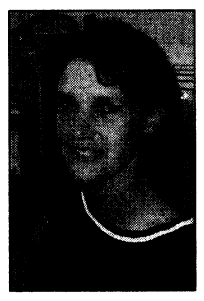
CHANGES

Time to roll with inevitable changes



Melissa House
Bayonet staff

You've heard it — the more things change, the more they stay the same. I'm not sure I buy into that completely, but I'm working on it.

My lifelong impression of the Army is that it's a constantly changing organization. Like some wise and well-known Greek, or maybe Roman — well, a guy named Heraclitus said, sometime in the fifth century B.C., "change is the only constant."

Just this summer alone, we've had at least 12 changes of command at the battalion and brigade level, and we'll soon have the one for our post commander.

What that change of command number doesn't include are the company commanders, platoon sergeants, squad leaders or drill sergeants who come and go during the course of each year.

If the word change in "change of command" doesn't scream change, I don't know what does.

After two years of watching Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley's seemingly endless supply of energy where both Soldiers and their families are concerned, it's going to be hard not to notice things have changed.

Each new person who joins an organization, whether it's an Army unit, a support agency on post, or our schools, will effect some sort of change while they're there — and we just have to hope those changes will be for the better.

Our Soldiers are still adapting to the changes brought about by transformation. Shoot, the spouses are still adapting to the changes as well.

We're all working around the changes in the deployment schedule — deployments that really haven't been a part of the regular Army "schedule" in ... maybe ... ever.

We have new construction, new equipment, new signs and new Army uniforms. Even our middle schoolers have a new uniform. That may end up being the most pressing change we parents have to deal with.

Sometimes the best way to deal with change is just to roll with the punches.

I've found keeping an open mind about certain changes makes them easier to accept, especially those things I'm particularly powerless to do anything about.

At this point, I could throw in a dozen more pithy quotes, adages and pearls of wisdom, but I won't. This is where you burst out cheering because you've had enough.

Did I mention even Harrison Ford has a "quotable quote" on change?

It really wasn't that good.

I have a bone to pick with you

Special to The Bayonet

The Bayonet must be doggone desperate to recruit me as a writer. Not that I was their first choice, mind you. But the German shepherd over there — his English is nicht so gut. And the Afghan is lazy.

That leaves me.

My writing skills ain't so good, neither, but I entered into this endeavor understanding the editor will "fix" it. I've been neutered, so I understand the concept.

That's why I've been elected to write about a problem that's bugging the bejeebers out of me and my four-legged friends here at Fort Benning's Vet Clinic adoption center.

The Bayonet features us regularly as Pets of the Week, or POWs. Now, I'm a plain-speaking kinda canine. I don't like nothin' sugar coated (except for that wormy little pill they shove down my throat once a month, but that's a grievance for another day). I say give it to me straight. Tell it like it is.

Pets of the Week has a mighty fine ring to it, but truth is, we're prisoners of war. Every time troops deploy from Fort Benning, we get a steady stream of fresh fleas in here. It never fails.

It's even worse during the summer. When Soldiers are gone and their families head home for a long vacation, they don't want the bother of taking us along. And boarding fees can get pretty expensive. It's much easier to drop us off at the pound and hope we'll be adopted. (The alternative is unthinkable, so try not to think about it.)

Then, too, there's that nasty little flea problem that's plaguing the South this year. What with the mild winter and all, fleas are twice as bad as last year, according to the vet. I guess some folks would rather give up their pets than be pestered with baths and sprays and shots and lotions.

I understand. Dogs are a lot of work. Who needs 'em? I mean, besides the blind and disabled, the elderly and lonely, the ground trackers, the MPs and the guys over in Afghanistan who're counting on their canine comrades to sniff out the bombs and bad guys.

All I'm saying is this: If you want a disposable dog, get a chihuahua. No, that's not what I meant to say. Get a stuffed animal. Buy a battery-powered poodle. At the very least, offer to pet-sit for a friend long enough to figure out if pet ownership is your cup of tea.

The good folks at the Vet Clinic fight to find homes for abandoned dogs year-round, but summer is particularly hard. Before you make a POW of your pet, make the effort to find him a good home. It's hell behind bars.

There. I've said my piece, and done a mighty fine job of it, I think. I may have found my forte. It sure beats catching and fetching.

Be sure to catch my canine byline in upcoming issues of The Bayonet when I address the ongoing War on Terriers and the problem of IEDs: Why dogs and dark chocolate don't mix.

Cool days those school days

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

"School days, school days, dear old golden rule days."

That's the song my mother-in-law used to sing to her children when school started.

The tradition continues with my son.

You can bet Tuesday morning about 7:30 a.m. the phone will ring, and Grandma Judy will sing it to Addison.

He thinks it's funny now, but I'll bet when he's about 13, he'll groan when the phone rings on the first day of school every year.

Addison will tell some people he's ready for the first grade. Others he'll tell he just wants to stay home and play with his friends.

I'll worry on his first day, about whether or not he likes his teacher, if any of his old friends are in his class, etc.

But I also remember how much I enjoyed first grade. It's been 25 years, but I remember it as a time of enchantment.

Enchantment?

Yup, because in first grade, I learned how to read, and as soon as I learned, I never stopped. My teacher, Mrs. Pytko, taught reading so that reading was fun.

I've had my nose stuck in a book ever since.

I believe that through reading I've learned words I would never have learned from television or movies.

My participation in two spelling bee finals in sixth and eighth grade is a testament to that.

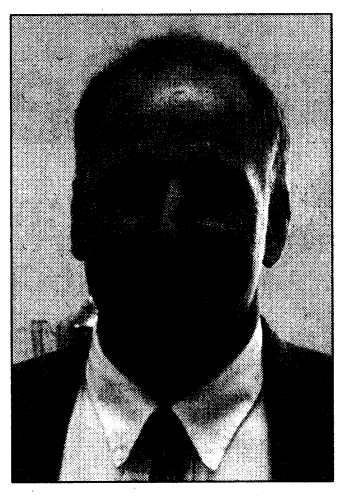
My son has had the privilege of both preK and kindergarten, and he's already reading because of the excellent teaching he received.

He has already learned much more at the age of 6 than I had, and the world of learning is wide open to him.

All school grades are important, and every year my son starts a new one is like a clean piece of paper. I know by the end of that school year that piece of paper will be filled many times over.

I'll be sad when I drop him off Tuesday, but I know in my heart he's in the best hands getting an outstanding education that will prepare him for anything in life, and for that I am grateful.

School days, school days, dear old golden rule days.



'Readin' and 'ritin' and 'rithmetic,' taught to the tune of a hick'ry stick. ...

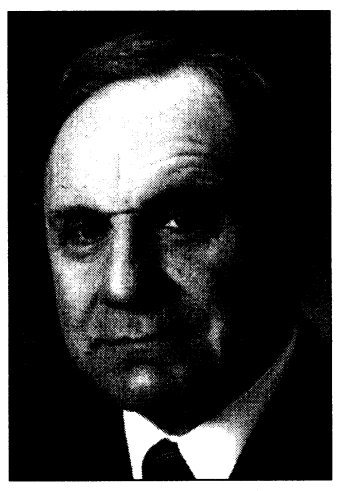
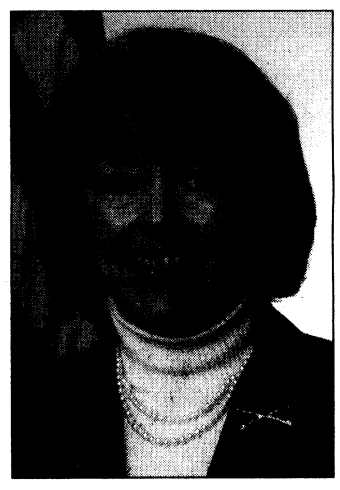
VARIOUS VOICES

What will you remember about Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley?

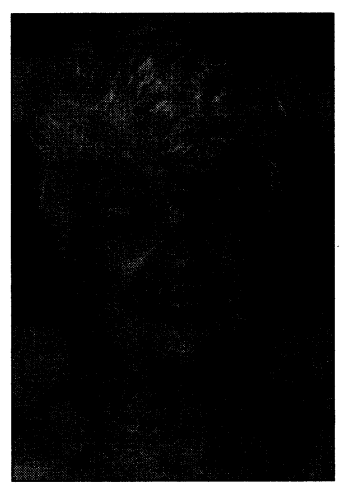


Stephen Hesler, former president, Columbus Chapter AUSA — "He had an infectious enthusiasm that motivated everyone to do their best in supporting Soldiers. Both he and Susan valued the role of the retired Army community in continuing to serve. Maj. Gen. Freakley communicated that we can always do more for Soldiers and you're never wrong if you keep that as a guiding principle."

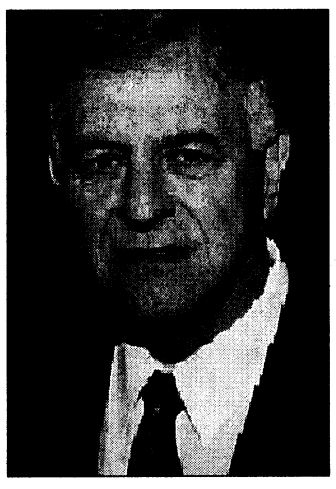


Eve Tidwell, God Bless Fort Benning, Columbus — "I think he will be remembered for re-introducing the heart of the Soldier to the Columbus community. Everything he did and participated in was anchored in what was best for the Soldier and how his men and women were faring. Each new command brings its own style of leadership; I will always remember his was from the heart."

Robert Poydasheff, mayor of Columbus — "I will remember him as an outstanding Soldier and a great commander. It is obvious he cares deeply about the Soldiers he leads and their families. He is recognized in this community as a friend and leader who has maintained and even strengthened the relationship between Fort Benning and the civilian community."

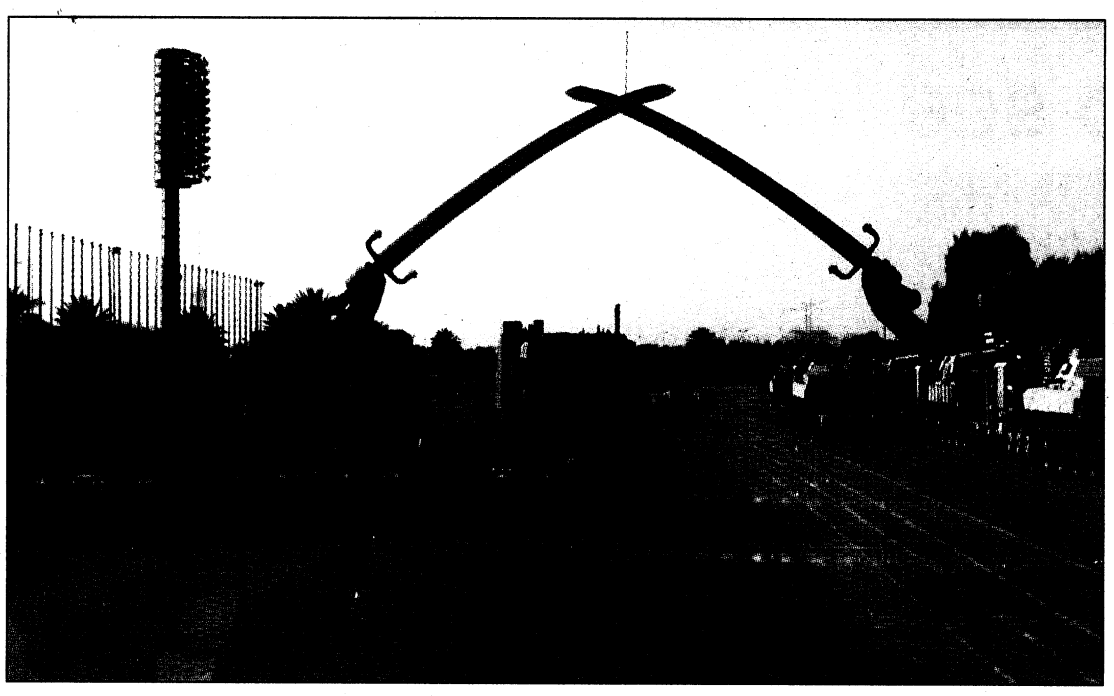


Dr. Dell McMullen, superintendent, Fort Benning Schools — "(Maj.) Gen. Freakley's support of the Fort Benning Schools has been extraordinary. Our Partners-in-Education programs flourished under his leadership. We were so very grateful that, even with his unbelievable schedule, he always found time to visit the schools and support our programs."



Jeff Hardin, mayor of Phenix City — "He has been instrumental in preparing the community for the coming influx of Soldiers and civilians. As you can see from all the new construction of buildings and upgrades of infrastructure, Maj. Gen. Freakley has done a wonderful job of sharing his vision and needs for Fort Benning with the Department of the Army in Washington."

Peggy Martin, Russell County commissioner — "The tricommunity area has continued to maintain a unique camaraderie for better government and service to its people under the USAIC command of Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley. I appreciated not only his admirable leadership but his neighborly, welcoming warmth to Fort Benning."



Retired Lt. Gen. Carmen Cavezza, Columbus — "Somehow he has managed to accomplish the many complex and important missions he has with the many hats he wears and still be very involved with the community. I am amazed he is able to do so much with the community and still effectively carry out his other responsibilities. He has been a great commander and a great chief of Infantry."

104th Transportation Company, 36th Engineer Group (Combat), provides logistical support to 3rd Infantry Division and other units in Iraq.

Mission continues for Road Dawgs

1st Lt. Wilford Ruffins
104th Transportation Company

With more than 225 combat logistical missions, more than 150,000 miles of driving and hauling more than 25,000 tons of Class V, VII, and other equipment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom III, the 104th Transportation Company has truly made its mark — a 100 percent mission accomplishment rating.

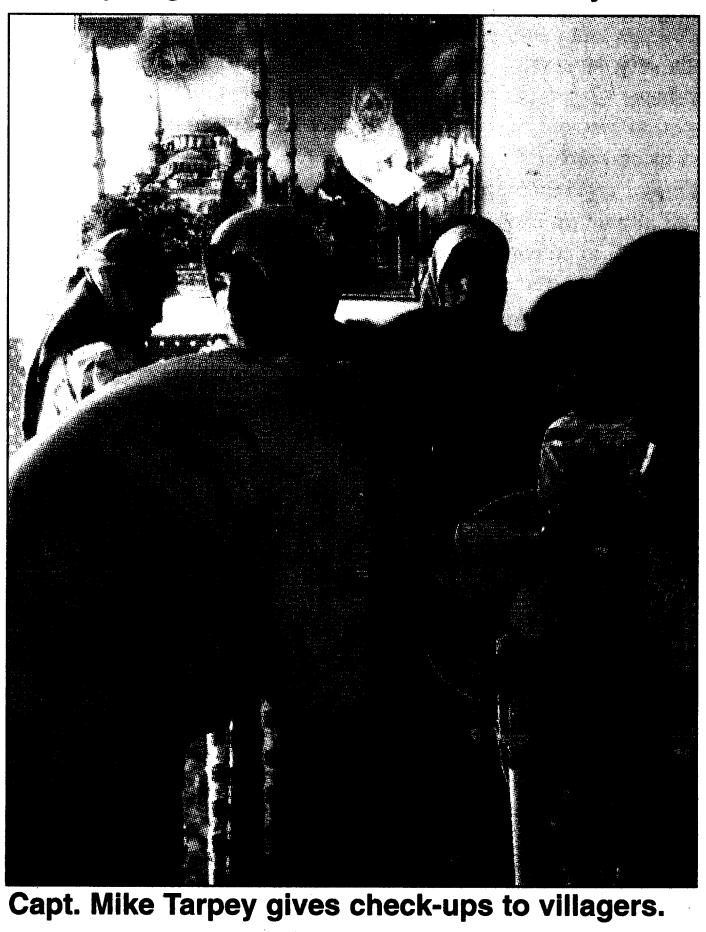
The 104th Transportation Company is a composite truck company of heavy equipment transports, palletized loading systems and M-931 5 ton tractor trailers.

The unit provides direct support to the 87th Corps Support Battalion and the 3rd Infantry Division Support Brigade, including line-haul missions, local hauls and missions from forward operating base support to the Division Distribution Center and the Class I and IV Distribution Point on Camp Taji.

The routine prior to embarking on a convoy logistics patrol pushing support to the outlying FOBs, begins with the preparation process necessary to get vehicle on the road. This consists of daily preventive maintenance checks and quality assurance and quality control inspections.

Vehicles arrive at the staging area for a final inspection, which includes ensuring loads are tied down correctly and vehicles are dispatched properly before travelling on the dangerous roads of Baghdad.

The company has endured and withstood four major attacks during the six months in Iraq. From suicide bombers in vehicles detonating within the convoy, small arms fire, rocket propelled grenades, and the death of Sgt. Anthony G. Jones, 25, who died June 14 in Baghdad, Iraq when an improvised explosive device detonated near his military vehicle, this has been a difficult deployment. But knowing the importance of our mission, the Soldiers of the 104th Transportation Company will persevere and succeed during this fight against terrorism.



Slow down. Watch for schoolchildren!

Medics give, show care

Lt. Col. Gary Brito
1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regt.

A medical assessment visit to a small farming village was a rewarding mission for both the Soldiers and villagers alike. The mission — basic medical care. Task Force 1-15 Infantry medics performed check-ups on more than 25 villagers within the unit's area of operations. The majority of the villagers had not received basic medical care, including children's immunizations. The local elder and Imam said, "Never before has the former regime of a new government shown us so much interest."

Before you pitch it, check to see if it's recyclable

Recycling brings money to DMWR

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Fort Benning has an added incentive to recycle paper, plastics and metal cans. It helps keep some of the post's family activities like the Independence Day fireworks, concerts and other special events free or inexpensive.

It costs about $72 to throw away a ton of trash, said Dorinda Morpeth, Fort Benning's solid waste program manager.

If Fort Benning recycles a ton of newspaper and then sells it for $70, the benefit is more than $140, she said. Multiply that by the tons of material that's recycled every year and it's a tremendous savings to the installation, which goes back into the celebrations people enjoy on post.

The materials collected and sorted on post are sold to an outside vendor, and the money covers recycling expenses such as labor, equipment and repairs, said Debbie Addison, plans officer for the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

If there's additional money after expenses, Addison said, it is split between recycling and DMWR. DMWR uses the money for the post's programs and services.

That could add up to a lot of fun, but Andrea Hicks, Fort Benning's Pollution Prevention program manager estimates just 30 percent of the people who live and work on post participate in the program.

In the 70s, when the first push came for recycling, everybody was gung-ho, but over time people fell off from doing it, she said.

"We have executive orders in place that say we should recycle. Right now it's a voluntary program."

According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the United States currently recycles approximately 28 percent of all consumer waste, double what it recycled 15 years ago. The EPA goal is to reach a 35 percent national recycling rate by 2008.

However, recycling of specific waste materials has been very successful. The EPA estimates 42 percent of all paper, 40 percent of all plastic soft drink bottles, 52 percent of all major appliances, 55 percent of all aluminum cans and 57 percent of all steel packaging is currently being recycled.

As cities and towns grow, landfill space costs more to purchase, Morpeth said. Some cities, like Boston and New York City send their garbage to West Virginia where the price of land is much lower.

Recycling conserves landfill space, she said. "Nobody wants a landfill in their backyard."

Even though they don't pick up recyclable materials from apartment complexes, Columbus has an estimated 40,000 household participants in their recycling program, Morpeth said. Columbus recycling managers estimate their landfill space has been extended for several years because of recycling.

Morpeth estimates that 60 to 80 percent of our waste is recyclable.

"Even with the people who've always done it and feel it's their civic duty to recycle, not all of the materials are getting to the Materials Recycling Facility," she said.

Part of the problem is people throw other things in with the recyclable materials.

"Garbage in recycled items contaminates the materials. They have to throw it all away," Hicks said.

Donna Hyatt

Recyclable plastic items are piled together for collection and resale by James Hill, material identifier and handler, at the Materials Recycling Facility.

The University of Georgia and the Georgia Department of Natural Resources Pollution Prevention Assistance Division are working on a number of food residuals composting programs throughout the state to help alleviate the garbage issue.

At the Athens campus, a pilot study found that combining the food scraps from approximately 19,000 meals served every day with mulched university yard trimmings would save the school $12,000 a year.

The results of the study are now being incorporated into a full-scale operation by the school's Bioconversion Research and Education Facility, and the resulting compost is used on the university grounds.

On Fort Benning, there are specially designated dumpsters for recyclable materials located around the post. To be sure if a plastic item is recyclable, Morpeth said to look on the bottom of the jugs.

"Everything is coded one through five. The lower the numbers, like one and two, the higher the price we get when selling materials to recycling vendors," she said.

Children's hard plastic toys and swimming pools are made with a brittle type of plastic that cannot be reused, and should not be placed with the recyclable types of plastic, she said.

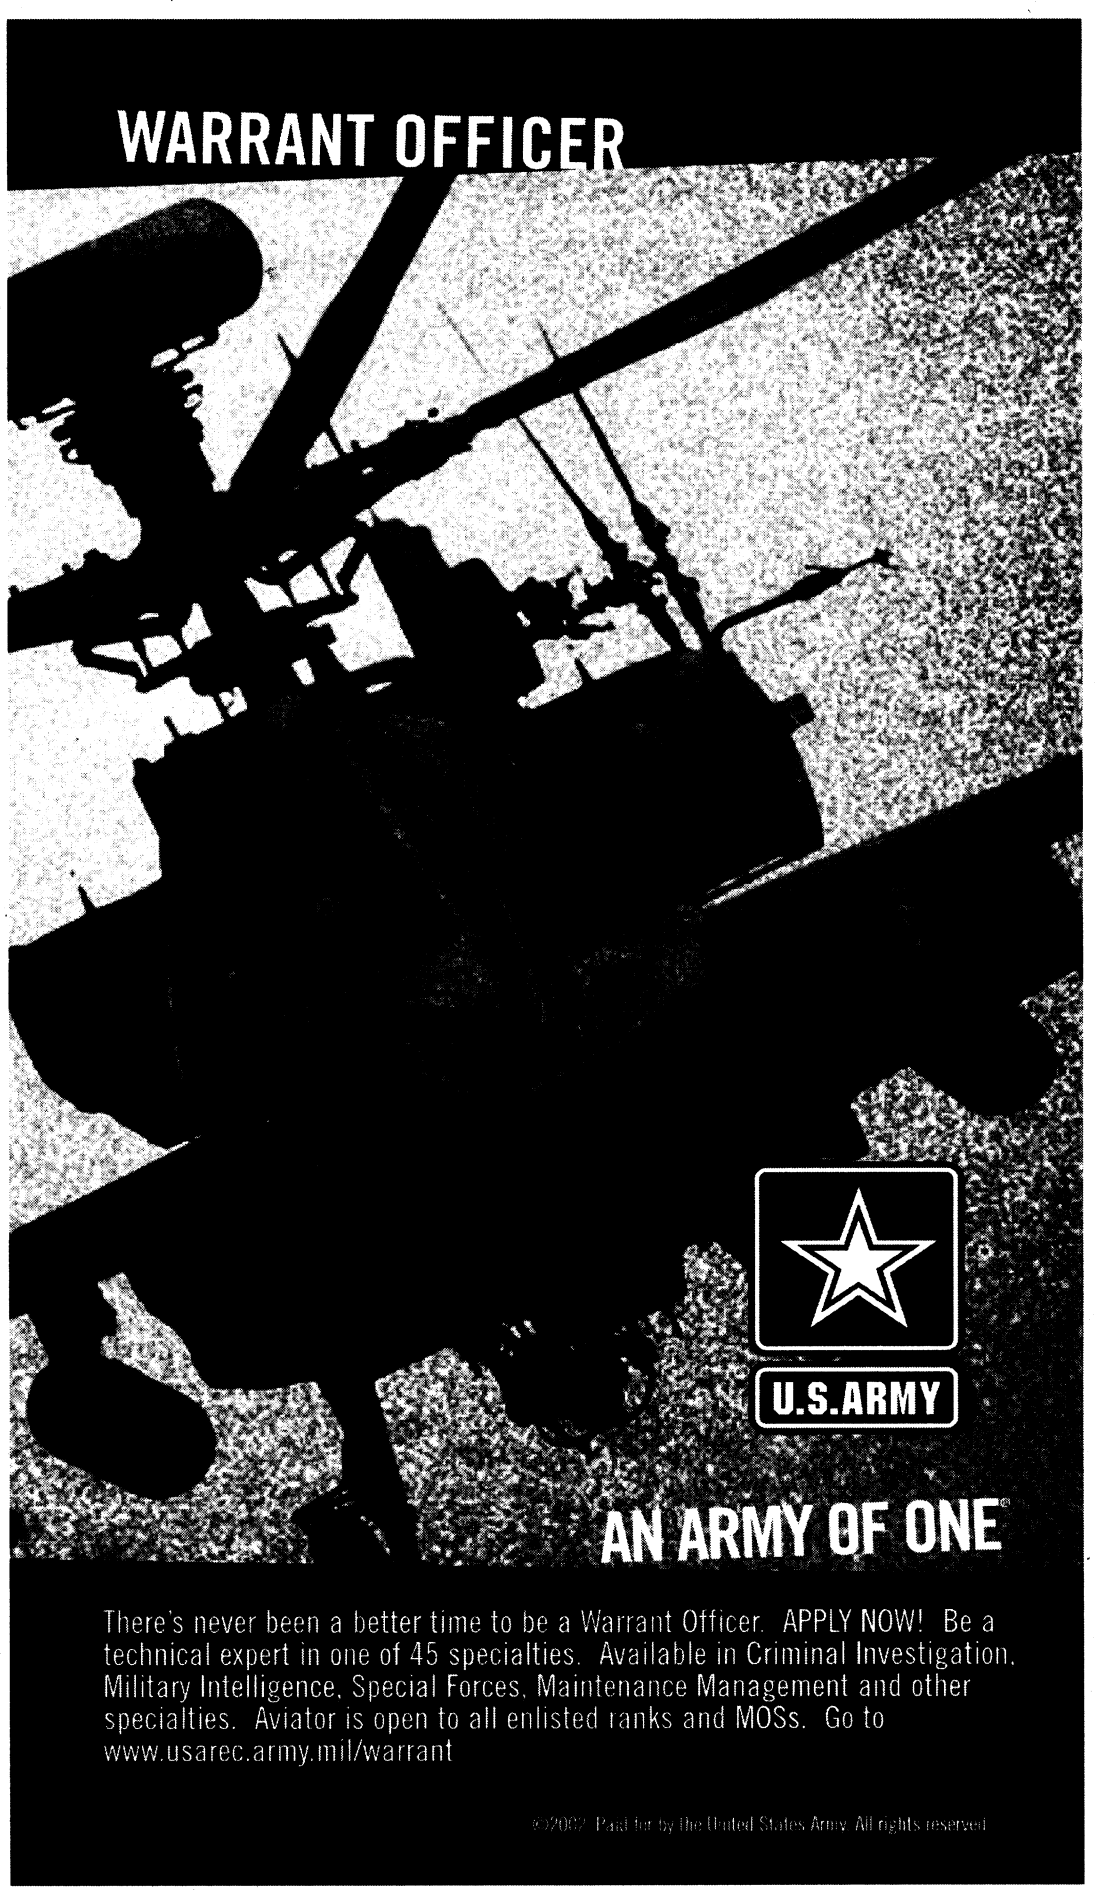
One of the things that has been proposed and is strongly encouraged by the Environmental Management Division is setting up neighborhood collection points, Morpeth said.

Until the satellite collection stations are set up, the MRF is the main collection point for wooden pallets, scrap metal, aluminum and tin cans, paper, plastic and glass.

After the materials are collected and sorted at the MRF, they're sold to recycling manufacturers who incorporate the materials into new products.

According to the EPA, in addition to recycled paper, many construction, landscaping, transportation, recreational and office products now contain recycled materials.

Innovative applications such as recovered glass in roadway asphalt and recovered plastic in carpeting, park benches and pedestrian bridges are now coming on the market.



An item has to contain at least 30 percent of recycled materials to be considered an environmentally friendly "green" product, Morpeth said.

"Recycling is part of the Army's long-term sustainability goals," Hicks said. "And it's good business practice."

Not only that, but it could be bigger and better celebrations for everyone, just by setting aside the recyclable materials.

The MRF is located in building 4000 at Harmony Church. For more information call 544-6142 or 545-0276 about recycling on Fort Benning.

Military police serve, protect, keep neighborhoods safe

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

When Willie Bell pulled into the parking lot of the Military Clothing Sales Store Monday afternoon on a quest to buy a belt, he thought his trip would be quick and painless. He was in and out of the store in less than 10 minutes — perfect, he thought.

Until he reached his "baby," the shiny, new car he bought just two weeks earlier. The once blemish-free car now had the most unsightly imperfection. Someone had backed into it, dented the hood and scratched his car like they had been in a brawl. The worst part about it was, the driver fled the scene.

With only one clue as to who might have done it, Bell called the military police.

"They didn't have the decency to tell me they hit my car," Bell said to Pfc. Levi White, with the 988th Military Police Company.

Bell told White as many details as he could remember about the government vehicle he had parked behind. When he returned from the store, the white flatbed was gone. White knew, without a description of the truck's license plate, there wasn't much he could do, other than make an official report.

"Unfortunately, stuff like this gets to you because you want to find the people who did it and cite them," White said, referring to hit-and-run perpetrators. "It makes you feel better as an MP and a person if you can help somebody (like Bell)."

Bell, who served in law enforcement years ago, said even though White wouldn't be able to catch the person who damaged his new car, he was still grateful for the MP's assistance.

He said White, who aspires to become a civilian cop after he gets out of the Army, will be picked up by any academy he applies to because of "his extensive training, his dedication and hard work."

It's this display of gratitude White said makes him proud to serve as an MP.

White's supervisor and six-year veteran, Staff Sgt. Dave McMillan, said it's this kind of interaction with members of the community that makes him love his job.

A father of three daughters, McMillan said he takes on a sort of paternal attitude toward the people living and working in the Fort Benning area.

McMillan said he feels it's his responsibility to make sure the post is protected, and everything runs smoothly.

He said his goal is to make the public aware that the MPs care about the community just as much as they do, and the MPs are not here to disrupt the flow of traffic (by motorists slowing down for fear of getting a ticket) or to harass them.

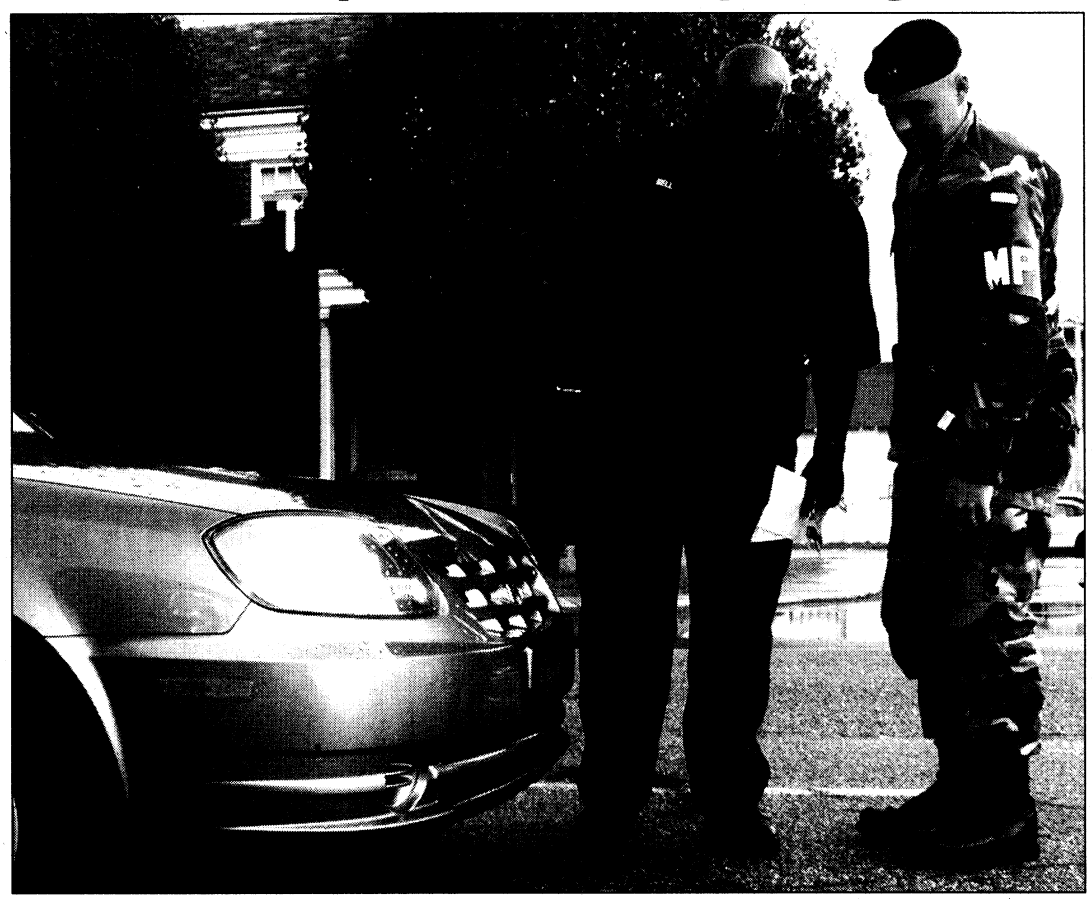
"We're not here to harass anybody," McMillan said. "If we're harassing you, it's because you've done something wrong."

"People don't know the extent of what we do," he said. "We're on the road to serve, protect and assist."

As the MPs patrol the neighborhoods, they do security checks at community buildings, like elementary schools — twice a day, once during daylight hours, and once during the night.

"We're a very good deterrent (of crime) because kids see us. If they see an MP vehicle driving around, they're less likely to break a window or try to get into somebody's quarters," McMillan said.

Kids love to talk to the police, McMillan said, and they'll give up all sorts of information.



McMillan said he can't count the number of times he's been stopped while driving through his neighborhood and got a tip that he might not have had if he hadn't been driving around.

He said this summer there's been a lot fewer incidents with teenagers, compared with last year. He gives credit to the MPs who are out in the community, being proactive and conducting investigations.

"When they drive through the neighborhood, they'll look for broken windows, jammed doors — anything that seems suspicious or out of place," McMillan said. "We're out here to enforce Army regulations as well."

He said he also wants community members to know that because they're military police, they know the consequences of getting tickets, coming up on the blotter report and being subject to the Uniformed Code of Military Justice.

"We're not here to ruin anybody's career," McMillan said. "We just want to be an asset for the community and make it a safer place."

Construction: Adds necessary facilities, barracks progressing to meet an October completion date, he said, and passersby might notice the addition of a tiny steeple atop the building.

"The original plan had no steeple," Barthlolet said, "but the (Office of the Chief of Chaplains) said there needed to be a steeple." The steeple fell within the project's original budget, but is too small to fit the scale of the building. Since then, he said they have received more money to add a larger steeple.

He said construction began on a Digital Multipurpose Range Complex – a $24 million project near the intersection of old Buena Vista and Underwood Roads that should be finished in early 2007.

"This is the first in a series of large, outdoor ranges where tanks and troops can maneuver and shoot," he said. "Although this is specifically a tank range, there are a number of others to follow."

Construction just began on an Infantry Squad Battle Course, which will be followed by a platoon-level maneuver range.

Three of six access control points have been completed and Bartholet said he anticipates both the Benning Boulevard and 1st Division Road ACPs will be completed this fall. Construction on the final point on Custer Road can't begin until the Benning Boulevard point is completed, but once it begins, he said it should be finished early next year.

Bartholet said there are new projects in the works.

"The biggest in the mill is at Kelley Hill," he said. The $40 million contract was awarded last week and will take three years to build. The new construction in the middle, including additional barracks and a new brigade headquarters, will blend the completed construction at the east and west ends of the area.

"This will give Kelley Hill a nice, campus appearance," he said. "We're halfway there and we know what it can look like."

Bartholet said a great deal of work goes into the new construction, from the master planning aspect that addresses additional needs and timing that construction, to the architectural planning that makes sure the new buildings "fit."

Another of the in-progress projects is a new fire station on Dixie Road across from Soldiers' Plaza, being built by Engineering Design Technology, a design and build company from Marietta, Ga.

Construction began mid-May and should be competed in January, said Willie Long, EDT's superintendent, and quality control and safety manager. At any given time, he said, there are between 20 and 100 people working at the site.

"If it would quit raining, I'd be happy," Long said. "No, it's really not that bad." He estimates they are 35 to 40 percent complete.

He said all the structural steel work is finished and expects to be standing walls on the 12,900 square-foot facility next month. The steel, he said, is sitting on geopiers — holes packed with rock — a first-time construction in the Savannah District. Long said they used that type of pier because of the poor condition of the soil they were building on.

> Three of six access control points have been completed, and Jack Bartholet, Savannah District, Corps of Engineers, said he anticipates both the Benning Boulevard and 1st Division Road ACPs will be completed this fall. Construction on the final point on Custer Road can't begin until the Benning Boulevard point is completed. It should be finished early next year.

The station has three bays, an apparatus bay, sleeping quarters and a kitchen. The bottom of the exterior is brick with stucco above, giving the station the same look, he said, as the barracks being built down the road by another company.

"It's going to be really nice," Long said.

Ranger: Earns tab despite being legally blind in one eye

"I shoot with my left eye, anyway," he said.

Sprenger, who could have been medically retired, chose to get back to his unit and complete his mission.

"I came into the Army to be a Soldier and fight for my country," he said. "I was not going to let this incident deter me."

DoD policy required Sprenger to "pass" a medical evaluation board before returning to active duty.

Once cleared medically, he returned to his unit, re-enlisted and applied to attend Ranger School.

"Everyone who I came in contact with during my request to stay on active duty was positive and helpful. No one discouraged me in any way.

"My unit was like, 'See you when you come back.' Not if I came back, but when and with my Ranger Tab," he said.

Sprenger graduated from Ranger School July 29.

Col. K.K. Chinn, commander of the Ranger Training Brigade, said Sprenger has a great attitude, a winning spirit and confidence.

"There really was never any doubt that he was going to get Ranger qualified," Chinn said.

Sprenger came on active duty in October 2001 shortly after the Sept. 11 attacks.

"My paperwork was well underway when Sept. 11 happened. It just motivated me more to become a Soldier," he said.

"I didn't come back just to train. I believe an Army should be ready to do what it trains for. I came back on active duty to deploy with my unit."

Program: Offers other services chance to transfer

Those willing to retrain in one of more than 50 priority military occupational specialties can receive bonuses of up to $10,000. The recruiting command will determine the amount of the bonus based on the skill and availability of training.

Those Airmen and Sailors in an MOS "equal" to an existing Army MOS may qualify to receive the Army's selective reenlistment bonus currently offered to Soldiers re-enlisting. Those amounts fluctuate.

"That will probably be the biggest challenge — matching up what they did in the Navy or Air Force with what they want to do in the Army," Hogue said. "If its something like security police — that's a good fit. It's pretty much the same as our MPs. Otherwise, they have to be willing to retrain."

If the servicemember has a transferrable job skill, he or she will attend a four-week Warrior Transition Course to learn essential skills and information needed in the Army, such as rank identification, uniform policy and career progression.

Those who require new skill training will attend a much more extensive course.

Though Sailors and Airmen interested in transferring should see their post retention counselor, the Human Resources Command has contracted Resource Consultants, Inc. to handle applications. The company will provide civilian recruiters to contact prospects and conduct seminars on Air Force and Navy bases stateside.

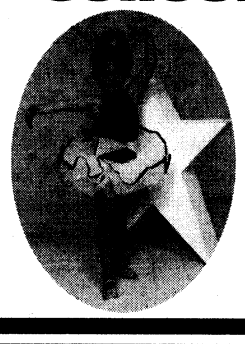
The program is not designed for those who have already left the service or are being chaptered out for any reason.

"The Army wants people who meet our standards," said Master Sgt. Jeff Wolfe, Retention Operations NCO. "As long as they're physically fit, and they meet the prerequisites for re-enlisting in their service, they'll probably qualify for ours."

Operation Blue to Green is open to all ranks and specialties. Officers and E-1s through E-5 will retain their rank. The rank of E-6s and above will be determined case by case.

The program is also an option for Air Force and Navy ROTC cadets.

As of February, 39 officers have transferred. More applications are pending approval.



Transferring from one service to another will not affect Montgomery G.I. Bill benefits, Hogue said.

For more information, visit the installation retention counselor, visit the Army Human Resources Command Web site at https://www.perscomonline.army.mil/opdistacc/IST/CIST.htm, or contact Lt. Col. Terri Ashley at terri.ashley@hqda.army.mil.

Army gives teenagers split options

Students use break to start military career

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

While most teenagers spent their summer vacation hanging out with friends, going to the beach or working odd jobs, many teenagers from all over the country traveled to Fort Benning to do the toughest job of all — become a Soldier.

They signed up for the Army's Split-Training Option, which allows high school students to go to basic combat training during the summer of their junior year and complete advanced individual training after they graduate high school.

And instead of being in a place where they're the oldest and "seniors rule," the "split-ops" are the youngest among men who learn life-saving lessons and killing techniques from some of the military's toughest drill sergeants.

These teenagers don't have to worry about being bored or finding something to do, because the drill sergeants will do that for them, said Pfc. Andrew Hardman of Sandy, Utah.

California native Pvt. David Molina, 17, of Windsor, Calif., said basic training is fun and better than going to the beach.

Pvt. Christopher Buckerfield, 17, of Clinton Township, Mich., disagreed.

"What do ya mean it's better than the beach?" Buckerfield asked Molina. "Man, do you see any bikinis out here?"

There are no bikinis, or females for that matter — just lots of sweaty guys getting smoked, or doing lots of push-ups, learning to find their way through the woods, clearing their sinuses in the gas chamber, and going to ranges over and over again to learn how to fire a weapon to make "one shot, one kill."

Tuesday, the Soldiers of D Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, qualified with their M-16 rifles. The farthest thing from their minds was relaxing at the beach. Soldiers like Buckerfield, and fellow split-op Pvt. Michael Amante, 18, of Grand Rapids, Mich., got their adrenaline rush from knocking down simulated terrorists hiding behind berms, also known as pop-up targets.

Both Soldiers have been hunting since age 12 and they admit one of the hardest things about basic rifle marksmanship training was overcoming bad habits they learned while firing with their own rifles.

Not only did they have to master the fundamentals of shooting with an M-16, but they had to qualify wearing the new flak vest, or individual body armor, and in a kneeling position, as well as the standard prone position, supported by sandbags.

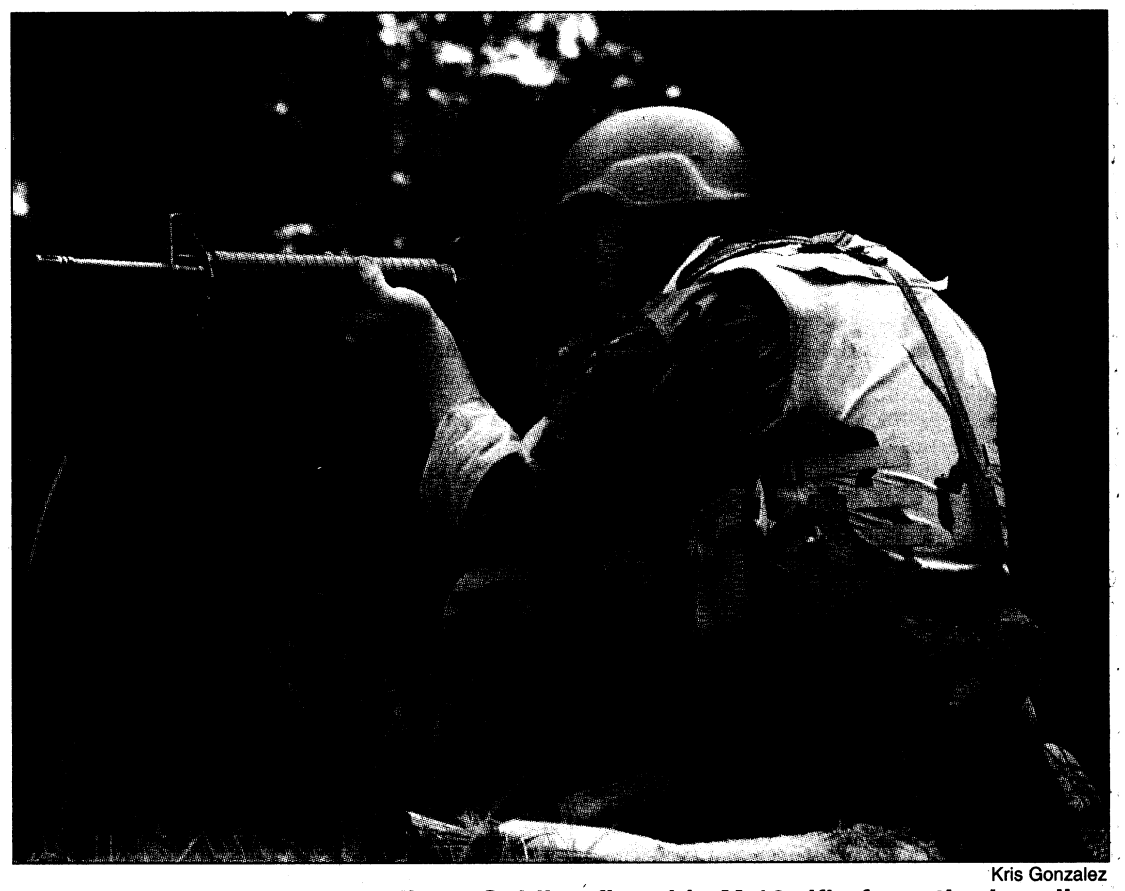
The IBA consists of two 12-pound body armor plates and adds 10 degrees to the temperature outside, said 1st Sgt. Anthony Heath.

While the rest of Fort Benning enjoyed a drop in the heat index Tuesday, these Soldiers were considered to be at heat category five.

With temperatures higher than 90 degrees, the Soldiers must take a 10-minute break after working for 50 minutes, and they must consume a quart of water an hour.

Amante said he didn't mind the added discomfort.

"If I'm firing a weapon, I'm happy," he said.



Buckerfield, Amante and their fellow split-ops agreed they need to do well at marksmanship because it will save their lives in Iraq or Afghanistan. They said they know what they signed up for.

"We were all aware of the obligation before we joined," said Pfc. Travis Stickney. "If we don't do it, who will?"

Stickney said his father recently returned from a six-month deployment in Afghanistan.

He said he was proud of his father, who served in the Naval Reserve for 15 years, so he followed in his footsteps and joined the National Guard to see if he would want to work full time in the active Army one day.

Hardman also joined the Guard. As young as he is, Hardman has his own private pilot's license and will train in aviation operations when he goes to Fort Rucker, Ala., for AIT next summer.

ITB chaplains meet needs of future combatants

Assistants 'eyes and ears' for chaplains

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

When an 18-year-old basic trainee must be told about the death of his grandfather, the man who raised him, it takes a kind word, a sympathetic ear and an experienced "shoulder."

When a 17-year-old "split-option" trainee wants to call it quits before his senior year, it's not the drill sergeant's place to offer gentle encouragement.

And when a new recruit goes looking for spiritual truths amidst the rigors of Infantry training, Sand Hill cadre are not equipped — or allowed — to proselytize.

With an Army at war, now, perhaps more than ever, the chaplaincy team at the Infantry Training Brigade fills a genuine need. And they must be "genuine" to succeed.

"You've got to be real. If you're not, they'll spot it a mile away," said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James Foxworth, the ITB's senior chaplain. "And they certainly won't come to a worship service if they don't connect with the chaplains or chaplains' assistants."

They are connecting. That much can be assumed by the numbers — typically more than 700 — that attend the two Sunday morning services, which had to be relocated to the Sand Hill Recreation Center when they outgrew Soldiers' Chapel.

They connect for three reasons, Foxworth said: today's young Soldiers respond to the contemporary style of worship; they know what the future holds for them. They're going to war; and the chaplains and assistants serve with them, running, marching and training alongside them.

"That's the fun part," said Spc. Valerie McNair, 23.

A chaplain assistant's job is to protect the chaplain, McNair said, "but here, no one's trying to kill the chaplain. So we get to do fun stuff, like get down in the dirt and mud and train with the Soldiers."

Her willingness to sweat has helped her ministry.

"As an assistant, I'm the chaplain's eyes and ears," she said. "When I got here, they thought I was either a Bible thumper or the worst Soldier ever, nothing in between. I had to develop a rapport with them and show them I'm no different than they are. Now they feel comfortable with me, and a lot of times they'll talk to me before they'll talk to a chaplain."

If it's cadre, the conversation usually involves stress, family discord or theology. Basic trainees typically seek help when they have second thoughts about serving in the Army, said McNair, an Army brat who became a devout Christian two years ago, about the time she joined the Army.

"For these guys, it's hard-core from the minute they get up till they go back to bed," she said. "They just want to go home. Sometimes, all they need is a little motivation, someone to say, 'Don't give up. Hang in there.' The methods we use (to encourage) are very different than what the drill sergeants do. Sometimes I quote a Bible verse, and it's the very thing they need to hear. It's no big thing, but it's the very thing they need at that moment."

Foxworth said that's the genius of the 230-year-old Army chaplains program.

"We're one of them. We wear that uniform. It gives us a measure of instant credibility," he said, noting that the word chaplain comes from the French word for cloak. "We go where the Soldiers go. We cloak them in God's love and forgiveness."

Most of his congregation is very young, said Foxworth, 55, who helped set up a chapel in one of Saddam's "fishing pads" after the fall of Baghdad in 2003. Now, as the "senior pastor" of more than 5,000 basic trainees and 700 cadre, Foxworth said his team's mission is no less important or challenging than that of their cohorts in combat.

"I look out over (the congregation) and some of them look like they're 12 years old. I have socks older then most of them," he said. "These are very young men preparing to go to war. We pray a lot. We pray Psalm 91 over them. Psalm 91 is very real."

The young Soldiers' dedication to their faith is also very real, Foxworth said.

"You've heard there are no atheists in the foxhole, and that's true. We see great numbers right now because there is a great need right now," he said.

"In some cases, they come to learn and get to know God. In other cases, what they already believe — their faith — has become more real and more important to them."

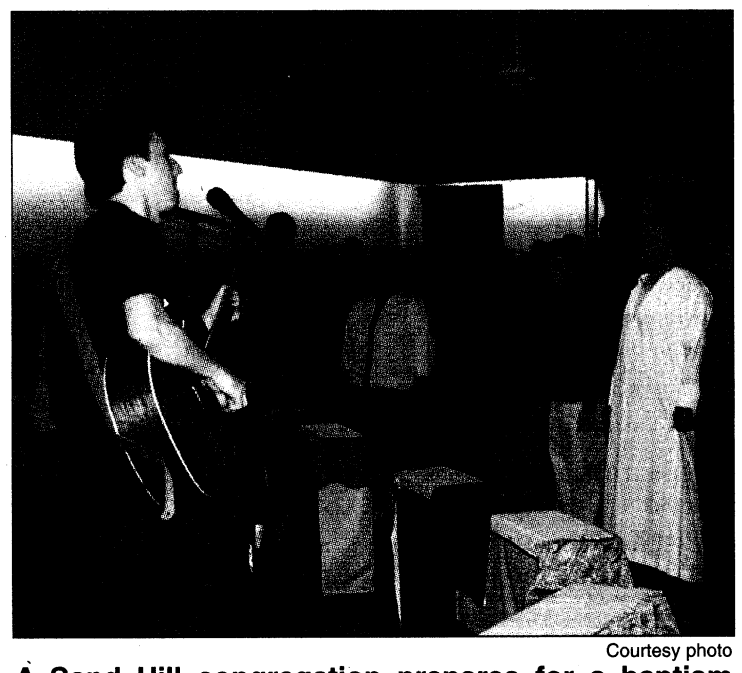
A South Georgia native with roots in the Southern, Primitive and evangelical Baptist churches, Foxworth was the pastor of a church in Eufaula, Ala., when a friend recruited him as a National Guard chaplain 23 years ago. He balanced both positions for three years before heeding the call to the chaplaincy full time.

As a pastor, Foxworth said, he was surrounded by like-minded believers. As a chaplain, his "parish" is very diverse.

Though Protestant, Catholic and Jewish services are the norm, by law, the chaplaincy program must provide a time, place and clergy for all faiths. When a chaplain of the faith is not available, the service is "contracted out" to local clergy who meet Army-mandated qualifications.

Presently, services for Latter-day Saints and Muslims are contracted out. Though rare, Buddhists and Wicca occasionally request accommodation.

"I tell people you can't be a chaplain if you can't tolerate other people's beliefs," Foxworth said.



"If you know what you really believe and you're secure in your faith, you can handle this job. Even when my faith tells me it is contrary to everything I believe in, I have to make an opportunity for these people to worship the way they choose. I have to make an intellectual decision to separate myself from that. I've struggled with that through the years, but I have to do it or I can't be a chaplain, and I know I'm doing what I'm called to do."

The flip side, he said, is the freedom he's given to minister and share his faith. For that he credits the Reagan-era Army administration.

"We turned a corner in about 1986. Before that, I might've said the chaplaincy program was watered down. That's not the case. We are free and empowered to share our faith. I have never been told not to say this or that or tone it down. Like I said, if we did that, these (Soldiers) would recognize it in a minute."

So would their mothers. Though families rarely attend Sunday services, Foxworth recalled a visit from a recruit's mother who drove from Atlanta to attend church with her son. Her words speak volumes about the success of the chaplaincy program, he believes.

"She said, 'I came to the chapel because my son is here, and I just wanted to know that God is here. He is, and I can leave in peace.'"

Combat veteran returns to Sand Hill as chaplain

Rusack returns to minister to trainees

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Chris Rusack was a reluctant 19-year-old basic trainee the first time he attended service at Soldiers' Chapel on Sand Hill.

The Rochester, N.Y., native wavered for a year after high school before taking the plunge. The bottom line — the decisive factor — was money for college. He certainly never thought he'd go to war. That was 18 years ago.

In the years that followed, Rusack, who grew accustomed to being called "Rucksack," honed his Infantry skills in Germany with the 3rd Infantry Division and at Fort Stewart, Ga., where he deployed with the 24th Infantry Division in the Gulf War.

There was one telling moment in the midst of war, a foreshadowing, if you will, when Rusack gazed at the battle that raged around him and thought, "If there was a man of God here, today, what an impact he would make."

After the war, Rusack married and moved his bride, Cindy, home to Rochester, where he attended seminary and joined the Army Reserves. He and Cindy, and the two daughters who followed, moved to Chattanooga, Tenn., where they bought their dream home and pastored a church.

Rusack tried to ignore the persistent, gentle calling back to the Army. For a time.

"I resisted it for years," he said. "I said, 'Please, Lord, you can change this. Please."

But "God nailed it," Rusack said, "when he gave Cindy the vision." He confirmed what Rusack knew all along — his is a military ministry.

When Chaplain (Capt.) Rusack arrived at Sand Hill in April, after attending the Chaplains' Officer Basic Course, he parked his car in front of Soldier's Chapel and stood gazing at the place where his past met his future.

"I wept. I realized that everything cumulatively in my life had prepared me for this very place and this very time," he said. "I can say that in hindsight. God directed me every step of the way."

Now Rusack ministers to basic trainees who are headed to war. "That's the difference between them and me," he said. "They know they're going to war. To me, they're great American heroes."

As surely as Rusack knows God directed his path back to Fort Benning, he knows the road had to run through the Middle East.

"I've seen the horrors of war firsthand. I know what they're going through now, and I know what they're going to go face over there," he said. "They look to me for spiritual support and encouragement, and I can tell them, 'I was just like you, and if I can make it, you can make it.'

Though Rusack insists he's "nothing special," his experiences make him uniquely qualified for a ministry God designed for him.

"This isn't a job or a profession, it's a ministry unequaled," he said. "You can't match this level of impact in a civilian church. I see young men who would never darken the door of a civilian church. To get the opportunity to touch their lives is very serious business. I feel it strongly.

"I tell them physical and mental fitness is important to a Soldier, but spiritual fitness will carry you through the hardship and stress and terrors of combat. It did me."

West Point cadets get 'schooled' at Benning

Juniors shadow drill sergeants, train Soldiers

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

About 60 cadets from the U.S. Military Academy got a taste of Infantry training this summer.

"The (Infantry Training Brigade) is the proponent for Drill Cadet Leadership Training," said Capt. Nick Cali, Headquarters Service Company deputy operations officer.

Two groups of approximately 30 cadets each were sent here.

Brown

The first group stayed through June, and the second group arrived July 8. They're scheduled to depart today.

"The cadets come between their sophomore and junior year to Fort Benning," Cali said.

"Usually on the front side or backside of these duties they'll go to Airborne or Air Assault school."

Following initial counseling with their assigned company commanders, the cadets shadow the executive officers and drill sergeants throughout the cycle.

"They learn the administrative process and resourcing, and they learn how we train Soldiers," Cali said. "They'll get down on the ground with the Soldiers just like they were a private."

"Being an XO is a tough job," said Cadet Skyler Brown, assigned to G Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment.

"Not necessarily because of the workload, but because there's always something that needs to be done.

"Close of business is never late enough, I'm always in the office doing this, down the hall doing that, or out in the field doing other things," he said.

In addition to shadowing the XO and drill sergeants, the cadets teach classes on Army values and safety, Cali said.

"It's turned out to be a great program. All the feedback I get from the company commanders say these guys really mature and grow into their role," Cali said.

"This is their first real contact with Soldiers and officers who aren't instructors at the academy."

While learning hands-on Infantry training, Cali said the cadets also take part in officer physical training and social functions to help them integrate into the officer corps.

"I like interacting with the cadre most," Brown said. "The lessons they've learned, they give to me so I don't make the same mistakes, and I can have the same successes."

"It's been a very positive experience for me," he said.

Chief: Leaves Army, Fort Benning with mixed emotions

All this passion for Soldiers comes from a man who had very little experience with the military before. Although his father had served in the Navy during the last part of World War II, his was a Tennessee farming family.

"I didn't have that family background," he said. "The Army was not my destiny — not like Lieutenant Dan in Forrest Gump."

And because he didn't know exactly where he wanted to go for college, he ended up at the United States Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., because he said, West Point was an opportunity.

As the second of four brothers, Cornwell said he already understood the values of church and school — values he said the Army has brought together now, with others, in a more formal format.

At West Point, he was drilled in the basics. The hard math and English, he said, served him well.

"West Point gave us a good grounding in the fundamentals," he said. "It wasn't just about preparing us to become good Army officers, but preparing us to be a leader in everything from academics to the national level."

What Cornwell also found at West Point, was the love of his life, Peggy. He met her at his graduation in 1978, when she came from Santa Barbara, Calif., to see her brother graduate. They dated for two years and married when Peggy graduated from college.

"I keep telling her it was love at first sight when she saw me," he said, "but she swears she has a letter that proves I fell first."

And talking about love reminded Cornwell that he's referred to as the "love colonel" around post, despite sometimes having to be the bearer of bad news. But the nickname seems to fit a man who was once a foster parent and hopes to surround himself with more foster children in his retirement.

To relax, Cornwell said he took up cycling a year ago and got hooked. He has trained for and ridden in several "century" rides - cycling speak for 100-mile rides.

"You don't think you can do (a century) until you train and do it," he said. "And when I'm out there, I have a lot of time to think — five or six hours.

Much of what he thinks about is his family and his job.

"It has all been good," he said. He said Peggy has set new heights for their family for volunteering in the time they've been here. Fort Benning, he said, provided more opportunities and a chance for his son, Adam, to graduate from high school

"That's been rewarding for me," he said. "I was able to see his high school activities."

But Cornwell said he'll leave post August 12 knowing there are activities here he wasn't able to participate in — things he learned about while working with the Columbus and Phenix City leadership.

"There's so much here I haven't done," he said.

Now, Cornwell said, he's reaching all the way back to the beginning of his Army career to figure out how to fit the fundamentals into 'his next adventure." On his agenda for Saturday — starting his job search in Columbia, S.C, in earnest.

"It's sort of heartbreaking to leave it all behind," he said. "I've had good Soldiers all around me and I found it comfortable to live within the parameters of the Army. But I don't really have to leave it all behind. I'll be taking all those same things to whatever I do next and try not to look back with sadness, but to the opportunities ahead."

Cornwell said he's been able to be himself in the Army all these years and maintain those things, like faith and family, that are important to him.

"There is a place (in the Army) for anybody who wants to conform to the standards," he said. "The pain and the misery and the transformation have all contributed to this great, shared experience."

PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA! PIZZA!

The Donnas meet The Caesars at Wetherby Field

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Little Caesars is ramping up for the busiest day of the year — Saturday, the day of the annual Army concert tour.

When The Donnas hit the stage on Wetherby Field at 6 p.m., the employees at two Little Caesars franchises will be up to their eyeballs in pepperoni and cheese, enough to cover 1,600 12-inch pizzas.

And that, they hope, will be enough to feed 4,000 basic trainees and an untold number of civilian spectators.

Ralph Somerlot, the retired Soldier who manages the Fort Benning franchise, said he'll call in 12 employees Saturday to handle the rush, more than twice as many as he needs on a typical evening.

Somerlot and his crew have plenty of experience feeding the masses. They produced 1,200 pizzas for the annual Fort Benning Independence Day Celebration.

Still, it takes a lot of careful planning, precise timing and a little help from their friends at the Ladonia, Ala., Little Caesars franchise, who will produce about 600 pies to help ease the load.

The actual process of preparing the pizzas began at the Fort Benning site Thursday, when workers began filling the walk-in refrigerator with dough balls.

Early Saturday morning, they'll fire up three ovens and crank out as many as 300 pizzas an hour — that's about the same number of pizzas they make on a typical Friday, the busiest day of the week for Little Caesars.

The pizzas will be stored in insulated bags and delivered by the vanload to Wetherby Field.

Somerlot admitted he's never heard of The Donnas. He has no idea if they'll be a hit Saturday. But he has no doubt the pizza tent will draw a sell-out crowd.

Papa John's supplies pizzas for Soldiers abroad

Jennifer Gunn
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Papa John's ovens in Ladonia, Ala., were fired up early on Monday morning to crank out 500 pies before noon.

The occasion: one deployed Soldier's hankering for pizza in Iraq. And, not just any pizza.

In an e-mail to Staff Sgt. Randy Henson, 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, Kevin Loncher, the military liaison for Bill Heard Chevrolet, asked him what he could use "over there" (in Iraq). Henson said he "would love a Papa John's pizza."

Loncher made it his mission, with the help of co-workers, to purchase 20-30 pies to send to the Soldier. He called Papa John's to see if he could get a discount "since it was for a good cause."

"They said, 'no, we'll give you the pizzas,'" Loncher said.

Scott Pratt, the local franchise's vice president, said Papa John's has donated pizzas to deployed Soldiers on a corporate level, but this was the first opportunity to do so locally.

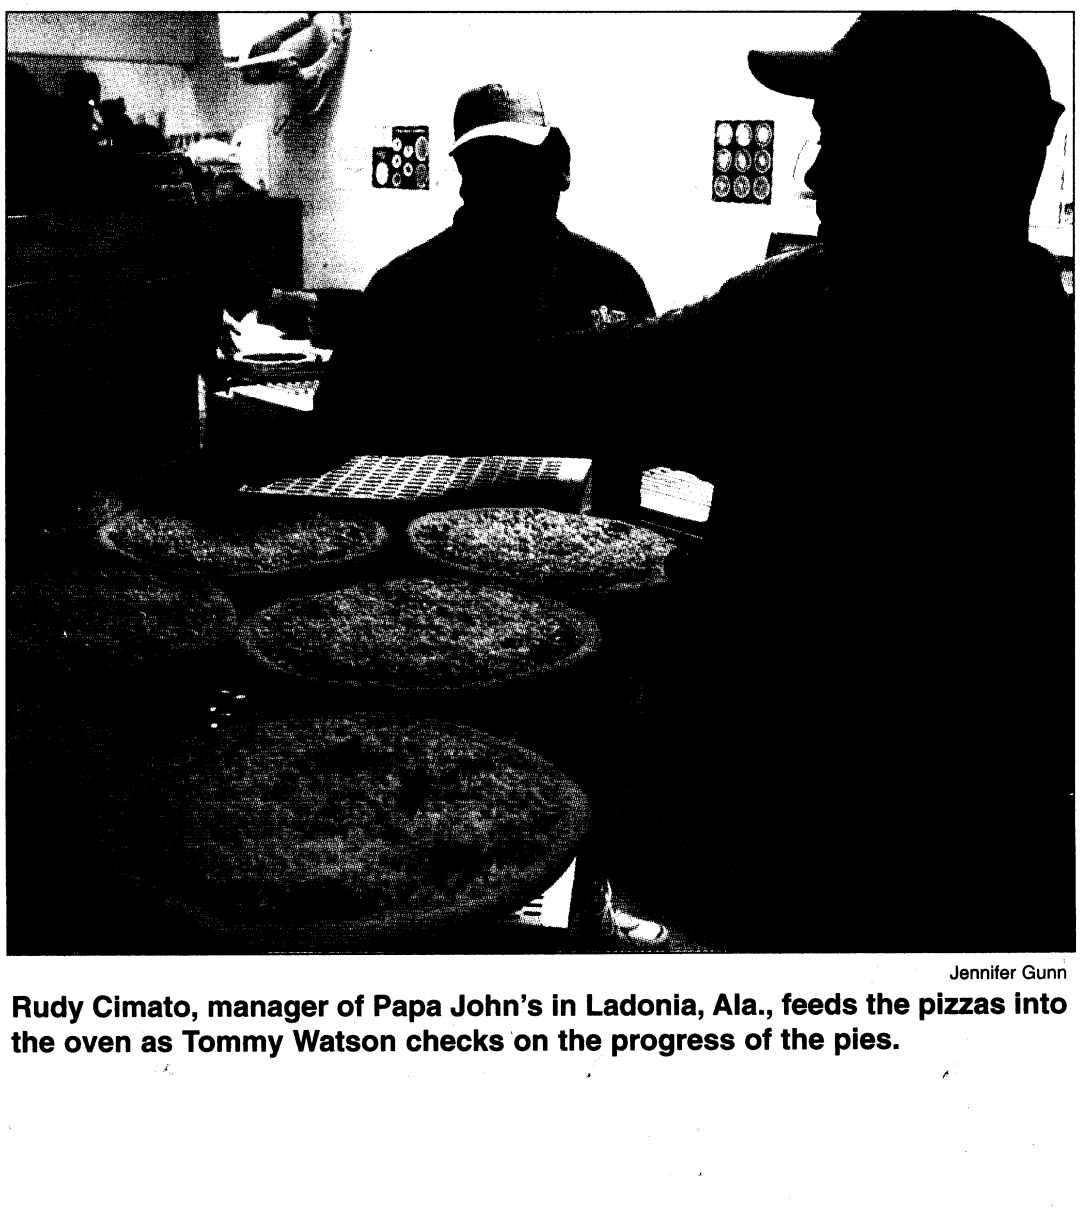
"We're ecstatic that we get to do this," Pratt said. "We would have given them a thousand if they could have taken that many."

And they could have if not for the high cost of overnight shipping. As it is, DHL Worldwide Express is giving a 70 percent discount. Otherwise, Loncher said, it would have cost $10,000.

The pizzas were shipped from Phenix Food Service in Phenix City, where they were vacuum sealed and frozen for the 6,000-mile journey.

1st Lt. Virgil Dwyer, rear detachment commander, expects the pies to be delivered sometime next week, and he said their arrival will come at a great time to boost morale. The battalion has been in Iraq for seven months building schools, improving medical facilities and helping to restore water and power to the community.

"To have something like this at the seven-month mark of a deployment is a big morale booster," Dwyer said. "Right now, we're focusing on one company. We consider this run the test pilot to see how well this could work for other (companies)."



Pratt said Papa John's is ready for a repeat performance.

"We'd like to do this a couple more times before the battalion comes home," he said.

Loncher plans to cover future pizza drops by setting up a trust fund for contributions in hopes the operation can become a monthly event. Even if this pizza drop is the only one of its kind, the Soldiers believe it was worth the effort.

"This shows the Soldiers over there we love them — that's all that matters," said Staff Sgt. Donald Lindblade, with the battalion's headquarters company.

Several local businesses contributed to Operation Pizza Drop including Wal-Mart, Mahone Video Production, Tidwell Cancer Treatment Center and Dr. Willie Perry Consulting. For more information, call Ricky Riley at 681-9870.

Tips to choose right running shoe for you

Dr. Joel Brenner
MCG Runner's Clinic

Just as your car needs an oil change, athletes, both young and old, need to regularly replace their running shoes to ensure peak performance. But all running shoes aren't created equal.

Your foot type, shape, length and width all help determine which running shoes will be comfortable, reduce stress on the feet and body and help prevent injury down the road.

Regular runners should plan to replace their shoes every six months or every 300 to 500 miles. It's a good idea to plan to do this at the end of summer and at the end of winter.

Adults can then gear up for the popular running seasons of fall and spring, and parents, in particular, can make sure their children and teen athletes have the appropriate gear for the cross country season in the fall and track in the spring.

Understanding your feet

When you run, your foot naturally rotates inward to help absorb impact as you hit the ground. Problems occur when your foot rolls too far inward (known as overpronation), leading to shin splints or knee pain, or when your foot does not roll inward much at all (or underpronation), which can lead to stress fractures, heel and knee pain, and other injuries because the foot does not absorb impact well.

Your arch height is one of the factors contributing to the natural rotation of the foot. To determine the size of your arch, wet your foot and step on a piece of cardboard or on the sidewalk. Feet with a low arch (an almost complete imprint of the foot, with just a slight curve at the arch) tend to roll inward too much.

Feet with a high arch (an imprint with a very narrow band connecting the heel to the front of the foot) are more inflexible and do not roll inward much at all.

Feet with a normal arch (an imprint with a curve at the arch) rotate normally.

Trying on shoes

When you look at shoes, check the shape of the shoe and its last, the form around which the shoe is built. For shape, look at the bottom of the shoe to check if the shoe is curved, semicurved or straight. The right shape should correspond to the imprint of your foot.

For last, check inside the shoe, under the insole. Shoes stitched down the middle likely are slip lasted, which means they are lighter weight and more flexible. Those stitched around the border are usually board lasted, which are heavier and more stable. Some shoes use a combination of slip and board lasting, which provide balance in weight and flexibility.

Follow the following guidelines to help pick the right type of shoe:

• If you have low arches and your feet tend to overpronate, select a straight, board lasted shoe with a firm heel. A medial post, a stiff material on the inner side of the shoe, also helps control motion. These are called motion-control shoes.

• If you have high arches and your feet tend to underpronate, select a curved, slip lasted shoe that will provide needed support and cushioning.

• If you have normal arches and normal pronation, choose a semi-curved shoe with a combination of slip and board lasting for stability. A medial post may be an option to help prevent a tendency to overpronation. These are stability shoes.

• Have your feet measured since your shoe size can change over time, and remember that athletic shoe sizes can vary.

• Shoes should fit comfortably in the heel to reduce slippage, but toes should have plenty of room to move. Leave about a finger width from the tip of your longest toe to the front of the shoe.

• Your feet tend to be larger at the end of the day, so plan to try on shoes in the late afternoon or evening to ensure the best fit. It's also a good idea to wear the socks you plan to run in.

• Take your time in trying out different types of shoes, and don't be embarrassed to take them for a quick test jog in the store.

• Employees at specialty running stores are often runners themselves and may be able to provide good advice.

If you need more help, or have pain when you run, contact a sports medicine specialist, check if your medical center offers a clinic just for runners, or visit the MCG Runner's Clinic. With the right gear and the right advice, you'll be able to run safely and soundly all year long.

For more information or to register for the MCG Runner's Clinic, call 721-3536 or visit www.MCGHealth.org.

Faith media 'coach' to teach in Japan

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

Lorri Blanchard has taught Fort Benning schoolchildren for 18 years. She knows a thing or two about the problems and perks of military life. But during the past month, she's gained a greater understanding of the former. And soon, she believes, she'll experience the perks firsthand.

Blanchard, the Faith Middle School multimedia teacher who wore the title of Fort Benning Teacher of the Year two years ago, left a lifetime of family and friends in Columbus Tuesday and moved to Iwakuni, Japan, where she'll serve as the educational technologist for two years at an elementary school on the Marine base there.

"It's an emotional rollercoaster," she said. "It's a great opportunity and I can't wait, but I've lived here all my life. I'm leaving knowing I'm not saying good-bye to everyone I should be saying good-bye to. There's not enough hours in the day."

The opportunity to teach in a Department of Defense school overseas — something Blanchard and her husband, John, have long anticipated — came suddenly when it finally came.

Previous offers from Japan, Guam and Iceland had been withdrawn when funding fell through.

This time, the couple learned about the job opening June 30 and had two days to accept or decline.

Blanchard

Their daughter, Rachel, 13, whole-heartedly supported the idea, but 16-year-old John Robert, a junior at Hardaway High School, was reluctant.

"I can understand that," Lorri said. "I know that's what military kids go through all the time. But I think we'll love the experience, all of us. If we don't, what's the worst that could happen? We can say we lived in Japan for two years."

John Sr. had no reservations. The son of a retired Soldier, he spent his youth ricocheting around the East Coast.

"I knew what it meant to have to move around, but I never got to go overseas," he said. "I love the idea. If we don't do it for us, we've got to do it for the kids."

John sold his landscaping business and the family prepared the house to rent. That was the easy part. Navigating the sea of paperwork, getting shots, security clearances and passports, and scheduling movers was much more difficult.

It's a challenge all military families face, but as a civilian-about-to-be-"military," it was much more complicated.

The family boarded a military "hop" headed to Japan Tuesday. They were met by a sponsor who will help them settle in on Camp Iwakuni, where they'll live like their military neighbors, working, shopping and going to school on base. But Lorri doesn't plan to get too comfortable.

"I know there's a lot I've got to work out in my head. John understands it, but I'm going to have to learn the ins and outs of military life," she said. "On top of that, I don't want to live like an American in Japan. I want to experience the culture."

That sense of adventure is typical of Lorri, John said. She was trained to teach music and earned her master's degree in middle grades education.

She spent her early years teaching at Faith before transferring to Stowers Elementary School when it opened 10 years ago.

After extensive training in technology at Columbus Tech, she launched a media club and a closed-circuit TV show at the school.

In its first year, Stowers News Network garnered international honors in the Association of Educational Communications and Technology International Media Festival.

Blanchard took those skills with her to Faith the next year, and with her went the fifth-grade student members of the fledgling media team.

As sixth- and seventh-graders, they continued to take top honors in media competitions around the country. A handful of that original team, all girls, are entering their eighth-grade year at Faith.

"That's the hard part," Lorri said. "I feel like I'm leaving my daughters. I'm going to miss them terribly."

Her "girls" feel the same. Ashley Ballesteros said Faith "won't be the same without Mrs. Blanchard."

"I'll always remember her because she involved us in everything," Ashley said.

"She took us to Chicago for the awards ceremony when we (won the AECT) competition. Other teachers were there without their students."

With Blanchard's guidance, the girls learned all aspects of writing, filming and producing educational videos, Ashley said.

"When I started I was so shy I couldn't speak on camera. She changed that. She encouraged me to be outgoing."

Dr. Julio Gonzalez, Faith principal, taught in military schools overseas for 18 years, including a stint in Japan.

Though Blanchard will be sorely missed at the middle school, Gonzalez believes she made a wise choice for herself, her family and the students she'll teach.

"She will bring a wealth of experience to the program there," he said. "But her greatest strength is her willingness to work long hours, long beyond the work day.

"She does it for the kids. She encourages them to work to their very limits. We'll miss that here."

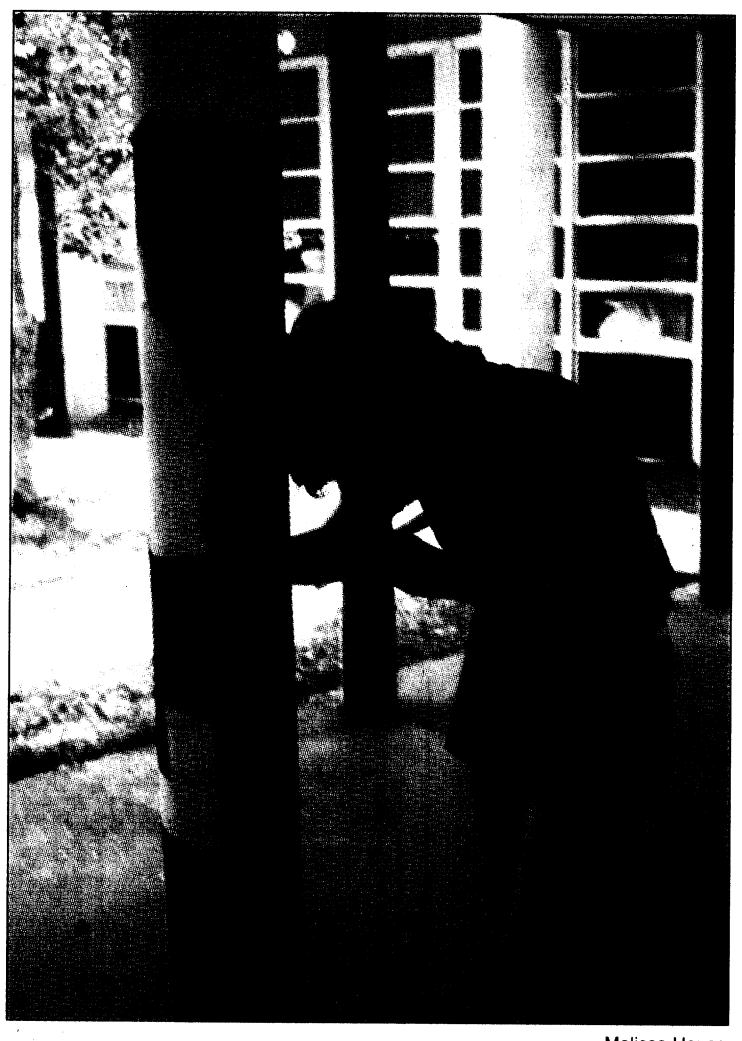
Artist transforms ugly pillars

Makes open-air walkway more colorful

Melissa House
Bayonet staff



Lizzie Garner might not have known what she wanted to do on her summer vacation, but the Parent Teacher Organization at White Elementary had something in mind. The PTO hired Garner to work some artistic magic on some of the 90 concrete pillars that line the school's open-air walkway.

PTO President Susan Wright said the PTO is usually asked to fund a big project for the school, but this year, Principal Dr. Tommy Lee didn't have one. Eventually, talk turned to the pillars.

"I'm not creative," Lee said. "I envisioned painting something on a plywood cutout and attaching it to the poles." He said the group started tossing out ideas, finally deciding to hire Garner, a student at the Savannah College of Art and Design, to paint directly on the poles.

"I had seen her artwork in people's homes on post," Wright said. "She's just talented, and we thought it would be a great opportunity for her." Garner's younger brother, Gavin, was a student at White last year.

So Garner went to work designing, then painting murals on 28 of the 90 pillars. The rest of the pillars were painted in the school's colors or in colors to help identify the individual "pods" where the different grades or specialty area classrooms are.

Melissa House

Savannah College of Art and Design student Lizzie Garner adds a ponytail to a girl she's painting on a concrete pillar outside of the fifth-grade pod at White Elementary Tuesday.

Garner said she's always had an interest in art and took formal drawing lessons in the sixth grade.

"I've been drawing forever," Garner said, "and I'm a little better drawing than painting." But she made the leap from charcoals required in three of her college courses to the house paint she used on the pillars.

She said she was able to complete two pillars a day, sketching first in pencil, and then painting.

"Everything has to be done in layers," she said, "so I usually do the skin and the big colors first, then the faces, hair and the details. Sometimes it's a little tricky because the house paint is a little transparent."

Garner said the principal and the PTO left the design up to her, simply asking that it be "kid-friendly."

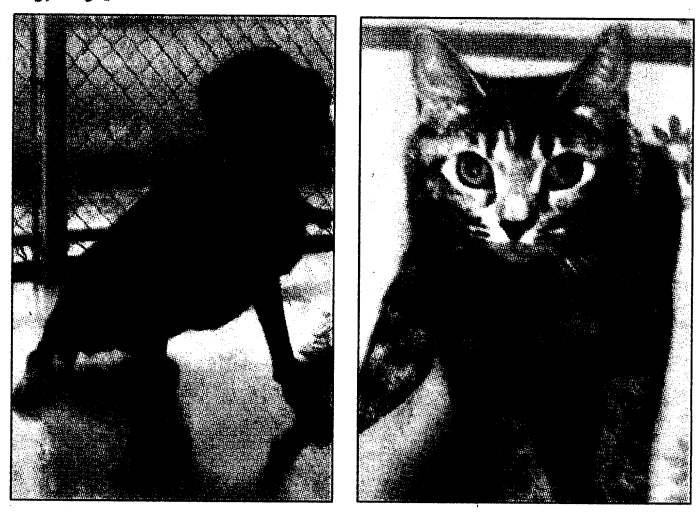
The pillars down the long, central walkway are school spirit or patriotic. Two have lion faces — White's mascot — and a number have flags.

Garner said she has a few flag pillars to complete, and some of them will have a lion at the bottom holding a flag.

Age-appropriate art now covers the pillars leading into each of the school's five pods and into the multi-purpose room. Murals outside the grade pods feature a child with a thought bubble over their head; something Garner said was inspired by kids' love for comic books.

Outside the second and third-grade pod are a "science girl and a reading boy." Wright admitted the science girl, with her goggles and test tube, was her favorite, and she said fourth-grade teacher Richard Thomas had a request for her. Thomas, who sponsors the school's chess club, asked for a chess player outside his pod.

Garner said she found the work both "anxious and exciting." She's been sketching and painting for the past five or six weeks, spending up to 25 hours each week on the project. She'll finish the thought bubble over the "writing girl" with an essay titled "What I did over my summer vacation."



Garner said she has gotten positive feedback from kids riding through on bikes, feedback echoed by Lee.

"We are really excited," Lee said. "(The project) is the epitome of a parent and school partnership."

Lee said a young student told him the art was going to put a smile on her face every day she went to school.

"People who didn't see it before, won't understand the magnitude of the transformation," he said. "You couldn't make (the walkway) any uglier."

Invest in marriage now for healthy relationship

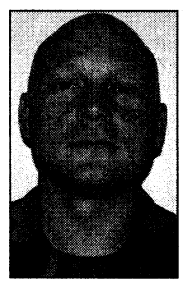
Chaplain (Capt.) Cary S. Snelling
1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment

In the past several months, I have become increasingly weary with the number of broken marriages seen, not only in my battalion, but throughout our military.

My first thought was, "Well, it's just all these deployments and time away that is causing all of this."

After a little research, I found our rate of divorce is not all that different from the rate of divorce outside the military. This leads me to believe the problem is not within the military, but can be found within the relationship itself.

First, think about it, how much time do you actually spend communicating with your spouse every day? When you are talking, what exactly are you doing?



I have come to realize most couples, if they talk at all, talk to each other while watching the TV. Not only are we spending a lot of time in front of the TV, but we often sit apart while watching. Neither of you would have ever allowed this to happen when you were dating.

I can remember buying chicken and driving to a picnic area just so my wife and I could just talk. As long as we were close together, I really didn't care what we were doing. If we watched a movie, we would sit together and guess what, hold hands.

When riding down the road in my old pickup truck, my wife had to sit next to me in the middle, because I didn't want her all the way over there on the other side of the truck, and guess what, she wanted to sit in the middle anyway.

The more time I spent with her, the more I understood what God meant when he said in Genesis 2:18, "It is not good for the man to be alone." Have you forgotten what it feels like?

REFLECTIONS

Snelling

Recently, I have really been watching couples on Fort Benning ` — they do not hold hands anymore.

If you are in your military uniform, I understand the military bearing issue of the uniform, but you do not have an excuse in civilian clothes.

Men, you need to take the lead and take your wife's hand in yours. If you, as a couple, are not talking, not sitting together, not holding hands, not spending time together, then exactly what are we communicating to each other? Matthew 12:25 says, "Every kingdom divided against itself will be ruined, and every city or household divided against itself will not stand." We must work toward one another, so that we are not working apart.

Secondly, when was the last time the two of you went on a date? I mean a real date! One where both of you clean up (means smell good), leave the kids with a sitter and spend an evening together.

I bet before you were married, you had to have at least two dates per week, because you just had to see each other. Do you want a better relationship, a better marriage? Get back to a dating relationship where you spend time getting to know each other again. At least once a week would not be too much, but at a minimum, once every two weeks.

Lastly, it all comes down to an investment. You and I both have invested in our children's future by creating a college fund. We put money in it so we won't have to worry about finances in the future.

We invest in our marriages in the same way. How you care for your spouse today will determine your future relationship. When I buy my wife little gifts or send her flowers, I am investing in our future.

When I hold her hand, or hold her close, I am investing in our future. When I tell her how much I love her, I am investing in our future. When I take her out on Thursday nights so that we can catch up on each other's week, I am investing in our future.

What are you investing in your relationship's future?

Dig through dirt to get to emotional treasure chest of life

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

I'm amazed at the resilience of the human spirit. Ever meet someone who should have had all rights to be mad at the world, yet seemed to be able to keep a smile on their face and a song on their lips?

I met someone like that this week at the intersection of Sightseeing Road and Way Street, and while I'll not go into that story today (another story for another day), I will say the person was amazingly accomplished in the great life skill of "emotional treasure hunting."

Do you know what emotional treasure hunting is?

Emotional treasure hunting is when you look around you at all the dirt in your life and decide that wherever there is a lot of dirt, there is also some priceless treasure to be found.

You have dirt in your life, don't you? For some of you, that dirt may be a tough childhood. Maybe you lost a mother or a father at any early age. Maybe you didn't lose a mother or father at an early age, but truth be known, you wished you would have because of the abuse you suffered at their hands.

Maybe the dirt in your life looks like crooked teeth and a face that won't be on this month's magazine cover. Maybe, like me, it's humped shoulders, a sty on the eye and an ever-enlarging bald spot.

Hawkins

Perhaps the dirt in your life is the loss of something. Perhaps the dirt was losing a bunch of money. Perhaps the dirt was losing a bunch of time. Perhaps the dirt was losing a bunch of love. What's the dirt in your life? What are the things you consider to be "hard knocks" or serious setbacks or disadvantages? We've all got dirt, don't we?

The interesting thing is that although everybody's got dirt, we can do different things with the dirt we have. Two things to be exact. The first thing you can do with the dirt in your life is sit in it and focus on it. You can blame the dirt, you can curse the dirt, you can even obsess over the dirt you've been dealt. And you can make you, and everyone that's soiled by you and your dirt, miserable.

There is another option, though. You can choose to move the dirt and mine the treasure that's buried beneath it. If you've been abused as a child, you can move that dirt and mine the treasure beneath it that allows you to be a far more sensitive adult and far more caring parent.

If you've got less than Madison Avenue looks, you can move that dirt and mine the treasure beneath it that allows you to be particularly skilled at affirming people not for what they look like or what they wear on the outside, but for who they are on the inside.

If you've lost money, you can rejoice that you're wiser and more careful now. If you've lost time, you can give thanks you are a person who makes every moment count now. If you've lost love, you can even come to peace with how much you cherish creating the deepest connections in life with those you care about now. If we let it, every dump of dirt in our lives can have a priceless nugget of gold.

If you need any emotional treasure hunting help, come see us at The Chaplain Family Life Center at Building 2606 in Soldiers' Plaza, call 545-1760, or come see me at 11 a.m. Sundays at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel on Kelley Hill.

Protestant Sunday School will delay opening day until facilities are prepared to accommodate classes. Problems with mold at Custer Terrace Chapel will not be fixed before the scheduled opening Sunday.

Showtime's Weeds blows aside social smoke screens

John Crook
© Zap2it

Recently widowed soccer mom Nancy Botwin (Mary-Louise Parker) is in a pickle. Her adoring husband dropped dead while jogging, leaving Nancy with neither partner nor paycheck to pay the mortgage on their picture-perfect home in Agrestic, Calif.

Convinced that being a stay-at-home mother is best for her two sons (Alex Gould, Hunter Parrish), she does what any doting mommy would do to make ends meet: She starts covertly selling pot to some of her wealthy neighbors.

Weeds, the dark new comedy series premiering on Showtime Sunday, takes place in a world Blue Velvet director David Lynch would recognize all too readily, a place where a cosmetically flawless exterior often masks the dry rot underneath.

"There is no perfect relationship, or Garden of Eden or perfect anything," Parker said of the good-looking but hollow existence her character prizes so highly.

"In our suburbia, there's a woman who may seem perfect, but she's a drug dealer. If you were to go into each of these houses, you'd find some deep secret in every one of them."

Celia Hodes (Elizabeth Perkins), for example, is head of the local PTA, but hasn't a clue about how to cope with her own children.

Another neighbor, Doug Wilson (Kevin Nealon), is both Nancy's accountant and one of her biggest customers, a middle-aged suburban dad who gets stoned to forget his mundane job and home life.

"I wanted to do a show that focused on gray areas of human nature and life, as opposed to the standard black-and-white, good guys and bad guys stories that we see all the time on television," said Weeds series creator Jenji Kohan (Tracey Takes On).

"I was inspired by shows like The Shield and The Sopranos, in which people who are functioning outside of society's moral code have adopted a moral code of their own.

"How do you convince yourself that you are still a moral person if you are doing something illegal?"

Parker negotiates a very fine line between the poignancy of Nancy's financial dilemma and the comedy of her contraband commerce, but Perkins nearly walks away with the show as Celia, a mother so misguided she hides a videocam in her older daughter's bedroom to make sure she isn't having sex and "helps" her chubby younger daughter by mixing laxatives in with her hidden chocolate stash.

"Celia believes that she is 100 percent politically correct, but she could not be more politically incorrect if she tried," Perkins said of her role. "This is a woman who, in her quest to have the perfect life and be the perfect mother, has as one of her chief concerns, 'My daughter is fat and she is not going to succeed, so I need to put her on laxatives.'

"She honestly believes that, and her outlook sort of becomes a metaphor for the whole show:

"There is this perfect world that everyone wants to live in, yet underneath it is a very different, very ugly world."

And that's one of the things that gives Weeds its sardonic bite, the fact that both Nancy and Celia are struggling to hold on to a perfection that is all illusion.

"When you go out to these 'just add water' communities, they all look pretty but they're built like crap," Kohan said.

Mary-Louise Parker stars in Weeds, airing Sunday on Showtime.

"It's the same house over and over, all style, no substance.

"Everything in their world is mass-marketed," Perkins pointed out. "Their homes are full of 'condo furniture,' which looks perfect at first but it's just trash. That kind of suburban sprawl is everywhere here in Southern California these days. They're springing up at a rate of 250 houses every six months.

"Valencia basically built a town, then added a fake main street that they kind of antiqued, to make it look as if it had been there a long time. It's fake reality, like Disneyland, and Celia is very much in tune with that."

In the fourth episode (Showtime has ordered 10), Parker's former Angels in America co-star Justin Kirk joins the cast as Nancy's reckless and corrupt brother-in-law, Andy, who moves in to "help" but quickly sniffs out Nancy's furtive little business. It's a smart plot twist that jolts the series onto a completely new level.

"I totally agree," Kohan said. "Justin was a vital ingredient to this mix, and he brings a whole new level of comedy and immorality and provocative behavior."

The Dukes of Hazzard — Set in present day, the story follows the adventures of good old boy cousins, Bo (Seann William Scott) and Luke (Johnny Knoxville) Duke, who with the help of their eye-catching cousin Daisy (Jessica Simpson) and moonshine running Uncle Jesse (Willie Nelson), try and save the family farm from being destroyed by Hazzard County's corrupt commissioner Boss Hogg (Burt Reynolds).

Their efforts find the Duke boys constantly eluding authorities in the General Lee, their famed 1969 Dodge Charger that keeps them one step ahead of sheriff Roscoe P. Coltrane (M.C. Gainey).

The Dukes of Hazzard is rated PG-13 for sexual content, crude and drug-related humor, language and comic action violence.

Sky High — When you're the son of the world's most legendary superheroes, The Commander (Kurt Russell) and Jetstream (Kelly Preston), there is only one school for you — Sky High, an elite high school with the responsibility of molding today's power-gifted students into tomorrow's superheroes.

The problem is that Will Stronghold (Michael Angarano) is starting with no superpowers of his own and, instead of joining ranks with the "Hero" class, he finds himself relegated to being a "Sidekick."

Sky High is rated PG for action violence and mild language.

Stealth — Deeply ensconced in a top-secret military program, three pilots struggle to bring an artificial intelligence program under control — before it initiates the next world war.

Starring Josh Lucas, Jessica Biel and Jamie Foxx.

Stealth is rated PG-13 for intense action, violence, brief strong language and innuendo.

Must Love Dogs — Sarah Hurlihy (Diane Lane), a divorced preschool teacher who has sworn off dating after a bad breakup, finds her family pushing her back into the dating world.

Her sister places a personal ad for her, declaring that anyone answering it "must love dogs," despite the fact that Sarah doesn't own a dog herself. When someone intriguing (John Cusack) responds to the ad, she decides to borrow Mother Theresa, her brother's dog, and plunge in.

Must Love Dogs is rated PG-13 for sexual content.

The Devil's Rejects — The unthinkable horror and chaos continues a few weeks after the events depicted in House of 1,000 Corpses as the murderous Firefly family is forced on the lam after a bloody showdown at their home.

With their story all over the news, the family continues their soulless killing spree, while Sheriff John Wydell (William Forsythe) looks to track them down for one last horrifying confrontation.

The Devil's Rejects is rated R for sadistic violence, strong sexual content, language and drug use.

Bad News Bears — Morris Buttermaker (Billy Bob Thornton), a former pro baseball player, was ejected from the game for attacking an umpire and now works as an exterminator.

Buttermaker is lured back into the game by Liz Whitewood, an attorney whose class action suit has forced the Little League to accept all players, regardless of their abilities.

As the new coach of the Bears, the most losing team in Little League history, Buttermaker has his work cut out for him.

Also starring Greg Kinnear and Marcia Gay Harden.

Bad News Bears is rated PG-13 for rude behavior, language, some sexuality and thematic elements.

Hustle & Flow — Though DJay, a streetwise Memphis pimp, has always had a way with words, a gift long misused; this philosopher hustler lives a dead-end life at the fringes of society. Still, DJay wonders what happened to all the big dreams he had for his life.

A chance encounter with an old friend, Key, spurs DJay: if he's ever going to make his mark, it has to happen now.

Starring Ludacris, Anthony Anderson and Taryn Manning.

Hustle & Flow is rated R for sex and drug content, pervasive language and some violence.

The Island — Lincoln Six-Echo (Ewan McGregor) is a resident of a seemingly utopian, but contained, facility in the mid-21st century. Like all the inhabitants of this carefully controlled environment, Lincoln hopes to be chosen to go to "The Island," reportedly the last uncontaminated spot on the planet. But Lincoln soon discovers that everything about his existence is a lie.

Also starring Scarlett Johansson and Steve Buscemi.

The Island is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action, some sexuality and language.

Wedding Crashers — Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson star as a pair of divorce mediators who spend their weekends crashing weddings in a search for Ms. Right — for a night.

But when one of them falls for the engaged daughter (Rachel McAdams) of an influential and eccentric politician (Christopher Walken) at the social event of the year, they get roped into spending a weekend at the family's palatial waterfront estate and quickly find themselves in over their heads.

Wedding Crashers is rated R for sexual content, nudity and language.

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory — Charlie Bucket, a boy from an impoverished family living under the shadow of a giant chocolate factory, wins a candy bar contest and is given a tour, along with four other children, of the amazing factory run by the eccentric Willy Wonka and his staff of Oompa-Loompas.

Starring Johnny Depp, Freddie Highmore and David Kelly.

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory is rated PG for quirky situations, action and mild language.

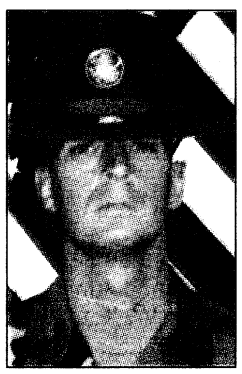
Ranger

Courtesy photo

Honorary Ranger Evan Schneider salutes the troops at Fort Benning for their support of the Make-A-Wish Foundation. Evan's wish, to be an Army Ranger at Fort Benning, became a reality in November 2004. He touched many people and made many friends here. As the anniversary of his visit approaches, he would like them to know he is doing well and sends his best wishes.



Congratulations

Laura Walker

The largest crowd to ever attend a soccer match was 199,854 spectators at the World Cup in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, on July 16, 1950. The game pitted Brazil against Uruguay. Uruguay won the match, 2-1.

Bench notes

Erin Nash

- Raffy's "accident"
  Mr. 3,000 Rafael Palmeiro has been suspended for 10 games following a violation of MLB drug testing.
  All these months after testifying to Congress he has never done steroids. He said he "accidentally" took steroids. Uh-huh.

- Bring on the Brickyard
  After an off week, NASCAR returns with the Brickyard 400 from Indianapolis Motor Speedway.
  Coverage starts at 2:30 p.m. on NBC. Should be a good race, time's getting tight.

- Buick Open
  Vijay Singh won his third Buick Open July 31, edging out Tiger Woods by four strokes.
  The PGA Championship is Thursday through Aug. 14, where Singh will go for his third win and his fourth major victory in two weeks.

- Shaq blings on
  Shaquille O'Neal opted out of his one-year, $30.6 million contract for a new five-year, $100 million contract with the Miami Heat.
  It's the highest salary in the NBA. As long as there's no more movies, thanks Shaq.

- Maybe next year
  Barry Bonds said that his doctors have advised him not to play until next year, because of his injured right knee.
  Bonds is currently third on the career list of home runs, behind Babe Ruth and Hank Aaron.

- NASCAR rumor
  Looks like Mark Martin will drive next year, since Chip Ganassi won't let Jamie McMurray out of his contract to drive Martin's No. 6 Ford. Martin was prepared to retire after this season.

Dr. Julio Gonzalez, principal at Fort Benning's Faith Middle School, played on the Puerto Rican National and Olympic teams and semi-professional team out of New York. Gonzalez currently plays for three local teams.

Principal gets kick out of soccer

'Dr. G' played for Puerto Rican National team

At the age of 15, Julio Gonzalez, one of the best soccer players in his native Puerto Rico, was drafted to play on a Division I team.

At 18, he was called up to play for the Puerto Rican Olympic and National Soccer teams.

Gonzalez, known as "Dr. G" to the students at Faith Middle School, where he is principal, was introduced to soccer when he was 5. He played baseball and soccer, until his coach, Saso Tulier, told him to pick one sport and focus on it.

He chose soccer.

"That coach really made a difference in my life," Gonzalez said. "He is a positive role model. Even now, in his 70s, he still plays soccer, and we keep in touch."

Both Gonzalez and Tulier played for the National team. Gonzalez was the youngest player and Tulier was the oldest.

Gonzalez was the captain of his college team. At the same time, he played for the national team and two Division I teams.

It was during this time he was invited to play on the Puerto Rican team that was trying to qualify for the World Cup, which was also an Olympic training team.

"I guess that was my claim to fame," Gonzalez said. "I was on the team that played against Haiti. They qualified for the '72 World Cup."

During the past three decades, Gonzalez has coached and played on teams all over the world. He played on a semi-professional team in New York and in a premier league in Washington, D.C.

While serving with the Department of Defense Education Activity, he coached and played on teams in Okinawa, Spain, Panama, Portugal and the Philippines, where his team once challenged the Navy Seals.

"The protocol was for the entire team to parachute in, in full soccer uniforms, ready to play the game," he said. " I still get goose bumps remembering it."

Grand slam puts 1-19 back in game

Tawny Archibald Campbell

All it takes is one bad inning to lose a game. And sometimes it only takes one great play to win.

Both statements were true as 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment beat 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Reg., 9-7, Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

First Battalion jumped out to an early 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning when Pedram Davoudpour hit a two-run homer late in the inning.

The lead was short-lived as 2nd Battalion's Shawn Williamson sent Floyd Koger across home plate to put his team on the board.

Aaron Anderson cleared the bases with a three-run homer to put 2nd Battalion up, 4-2.

"We came out and got the lead and kept it going for a while," said Stuart Lanford, 2nd Battalion.

First Battalion only managed to send one runner home during the second inning, leaving them down by one.

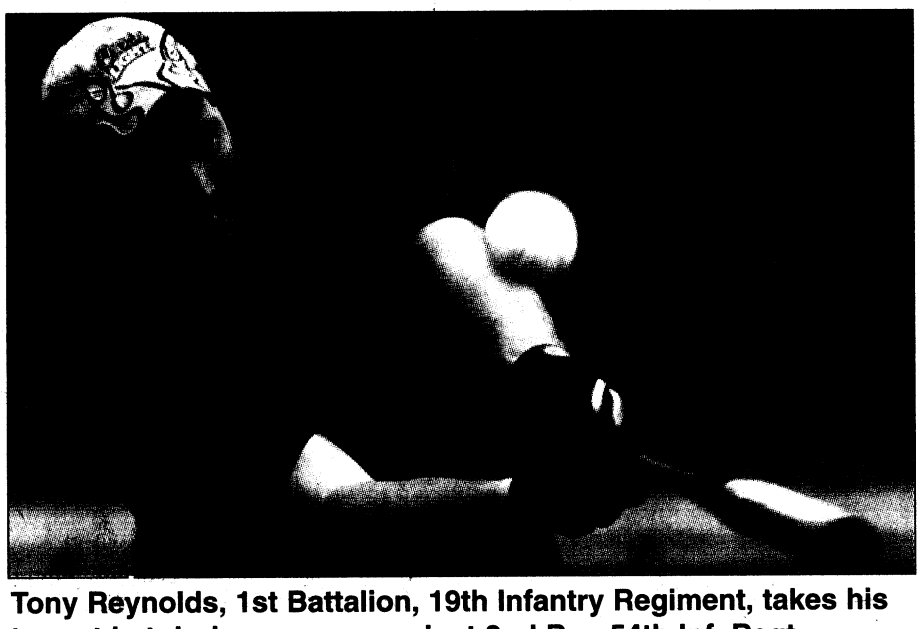
During the top of the third inning 2nd Battalion's William Lewis stole home when the catcher bobbled the ball and Peter Delgado hit an RBI followed by a one-run double by Koger to increase the lead, 7-3.

"During the first (two) innings everything was real tight," said Cary Snelling, 1st Battalion. "(Anderson) had an awesome hit that was bad for us. Then (Shane) Hankey hit a grand slam when they bobbled the ball."

The grand slam came during the bottom of the third inning. The bases were loaded with two outs when Hankey sent the ball deep into center field.

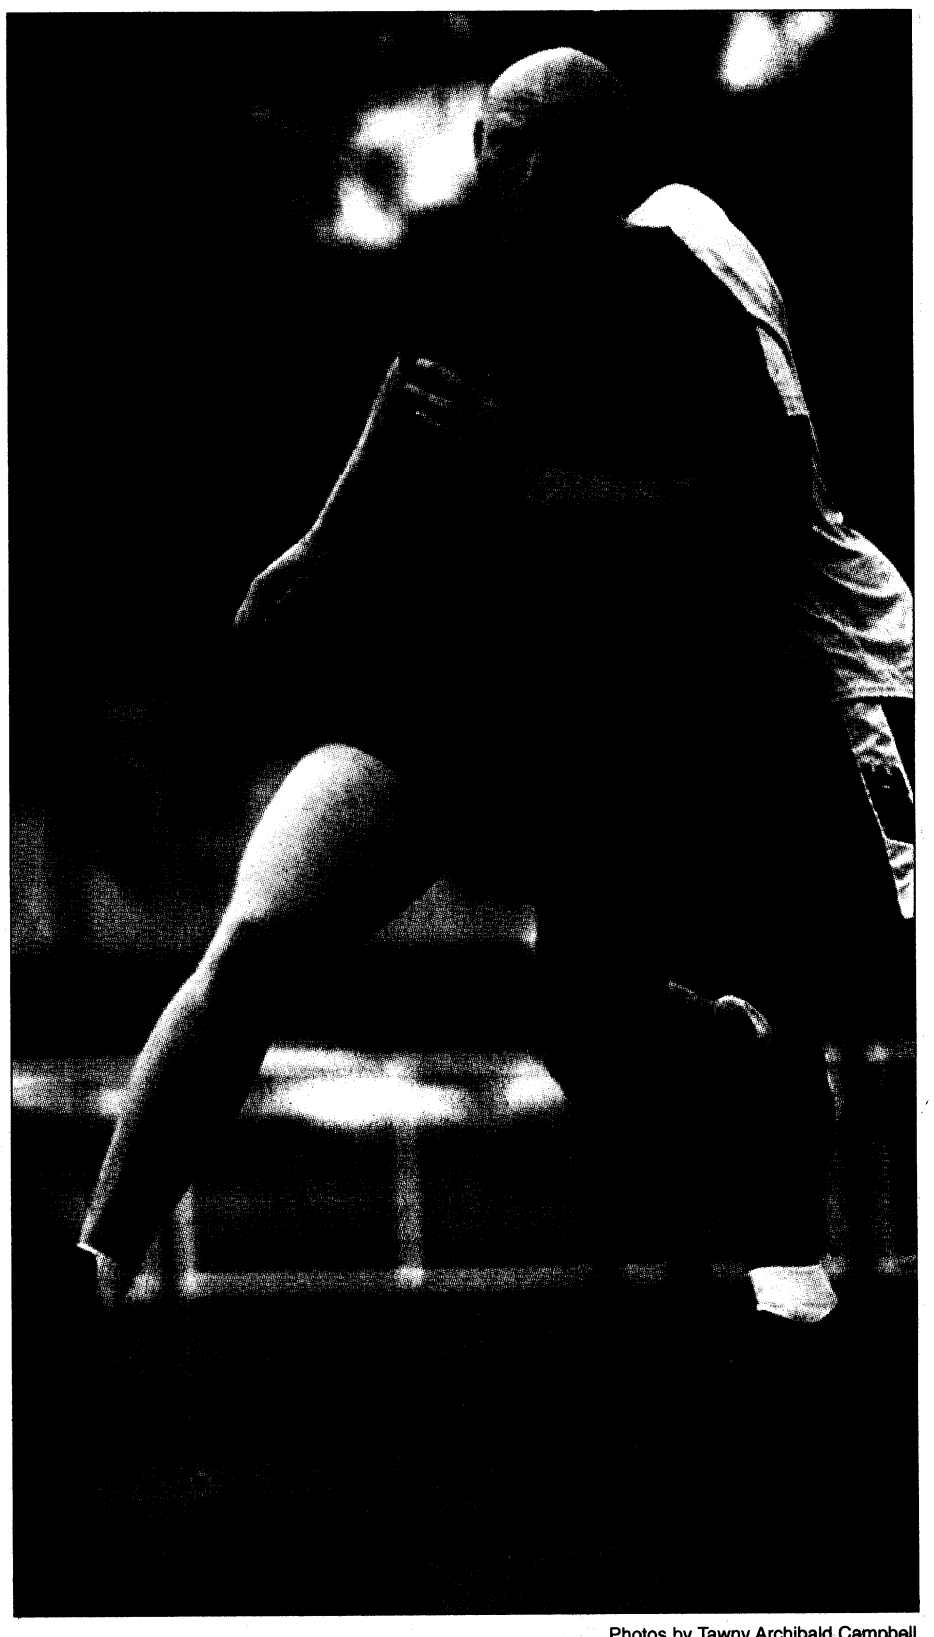
The catch was dropped and by the time the ball made it into the infield all four runners had cleared home plate and the game was tied, 7-7.

"One poor inning put them into the game and finished us off," said Lanford. "It's all about placing the ball in the right place and making them work for the outs.



"One inning every game puts us down and we can't seem to break the pattern."

Both teams tightened the defense and there were no runs in the fourth inning or the top of the fifth.



During the bottom of the fifth inning, Daniel Maloney, 1st Battalion, managed to send in two runners to give his team a 9-7 lead when the game was called.

"During the last inning we hit everything, had good solid base hits and were able to jump on top of the game," Snelling said. "They didn't have any errors, we just had good hits."

Second Battalion is still the league leader with a 6-2 record. First Battalion is in second place with a 5-2 record.

Registration underway for CYS fall sports

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

School's about to start and so is the fall season of sports.

From now until Aug. 15, kids can sign up for soccer, flag football, tackle football, cheerleading and wrestling through Child and Youth Services. After Aug. 15 children will be put on a waiting list, said Phyllis Bailey, CYS program assistant.

CYS also offers instructional classes in dance, gymnastics and martial arts all year long. Kids must first be registered at the CYS Building 359.

Annual registration fees have gone up this year. The fee for one child is $18, $32 for two children, and $40 for three or more children. Prices for each sport vary from $30 to $60 a season. Instructional class prices range from $25 to $35 per month.

Each child must have a sports physical before they begin in September.

A form can be picked up at central registration, Building 359, before going to Martin Army Community Hospital. MACH will conduct sports physicals on a walk-in basis from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday.

"Sports are a healthy outlet for kids," said Dorrie Wagner, CYS sports specialist.

"A lot of them have parents who are deployed. Sports can help them get through the tough times."

A parent from each family must attend a Parents and Youth Sports Clinic that focuses on sportsmanship, Bailey said.

"There are appropriate words you should say to a child to show support," Bailey said.

The parents' clinic costs $5, is about 30 minutes long, and is good for one year, she said.

"They (kids) have to deal with winning and losing, but as long as they are having fun, that's the most important part," Wagner said.

Once the kids are registered and signed up for each sport, they're placed on teams in their respective age groups, she said. A coach from each team will call the players, and a roster will be placed on the CYS gym window.

Wagner said participating in sports is a great way for children to learn valuable life-lessons.

"Sports can really help kids, because they learn how to work as a team," Wagner said. "Being a team player is very important in life."

Archers ready for competition

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

The Fort Benning Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation, along with the Archery Shooters Association, will host the Fort Benning Cup and the first Unit 3-D Archery Challenge.

The event will be Thursday at the Uchee Creek Campground Activity Center. Twenty unit teams are invited to draw their bows and arrows to compete for the Fort Benning Cup.

Individual archers will be teamed up with an ASA professional archer and three other team members to compete for archery equipment and prizes, said Cliff Hughes, campground manager.

The unit teams will compete on one range for the Cup, while the other teams will be broken down according to skill level and will compete against archers equal in skill, said Mike Tyrell, president of ASA.

The entry fee is $20 for military ID card holders and $25 for non-military participants.

The fee includes participation in the competition, coaching lessons, a ticket for the prize drawing and dinner. Each participant will receive a $50 goodie bag, Hughes said.

The competition will run from 12:30 to 4 p.m.

Dinner will be served, awards will be presented and the prize drawing, from which $3,000 in archery equipment will be awarded, will take place immediately following the competition.

Registration begins at 11:30 a.m. the day of the competition. Participants are encouraged to pre-register at the Uchee Creek Campground and Marina Country Store, the outdoor recreation, Building 1707, or the DMWR headquarters, Building 2783.

Coaching sessions can be arranged for noon, 1:30, 3 and 4:30 p.m. Wednesday and at 8 or 10:30 a.m. Thursday. Only 10 slots are available during each session, Hughes said. More than 300 people are expected to participate and the event is expected to generate $10,000 for DMWR, Tyrell said.

For more information, call Hughes at 685-3060, ext. 204.

Soccer: Shares talent, skill

Gonzalez said the game went into overtime and his team lost, but the defeat didn't mean much after such a memorable pre-game show.

Another "unique experience," Gonzalez said, was meeting a Haitian dictator when he played a game in Haiti.

When his team entered the heavily guarded arena, they were greeted by 30,000 fans and were introduced to the country's president.

At 51, Gonzalez is still involved in soccer, playing in three leagues, and said he is addicted to the sport.

He plays for the Columbus Adult Soccer Association in a veteran's division, a Woodruff Farm's B Division and plays with a team from the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

Gonzalez is also the commissioner of a new CASA league, the Men's Division A.

"You ask what soccer has given me," He said. "It has given me so much that it would be worthless if I did not give back to the league.

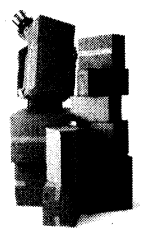
"I almost find it a duty of mine to give what I have learned, my skills, back to the community — that is what I do as a volunteer commissioner," Gonzalez said.

He said whether he is serving at Fort Benning, or any other place throughout the world, he feels a need to volunteer his skills.

Gonzalez said soccer has provided him with leadership and organizational skills that have helped him become the professional he is today.

"Julio is an intellectual man and his experiences with people from around the world have helped him deal with people in our community," said Ash Jain, former CASA president.

Jain said Gonzalez has helped promote local Latino soccer teams and manages the Latino league.



"He is one of the most interesting people I've ever met," Jain said. "In life he is very passionate, enthusiastic and positive with a can-do attitude.

"And, for an old fella, he is a pretty good soccer player."

Gonzalez said soccer will always be a part of his life, whether or not he is playing on the field.

"(Soccer) is a sport for life, one that works not only your mind, but your body," he said. "It's about teamwork, eleven guys working together for the same goal.

"I do this because I love it, it's really just the love of the game."

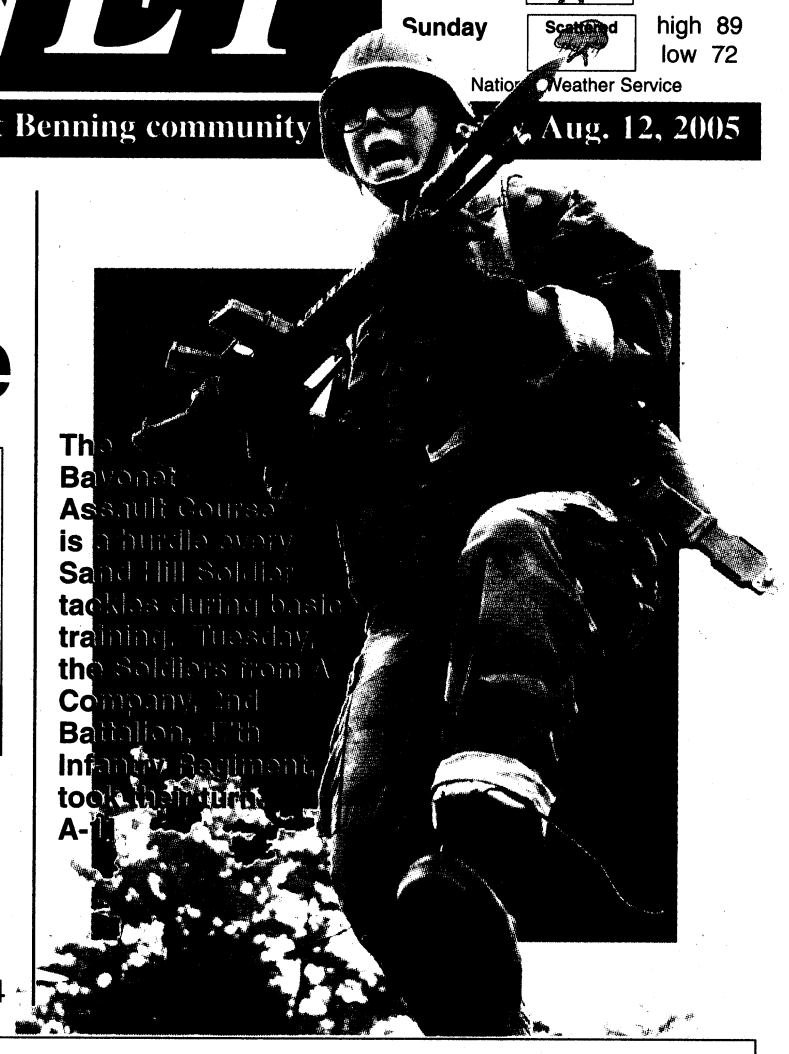
Freakley bids Benning goodbye

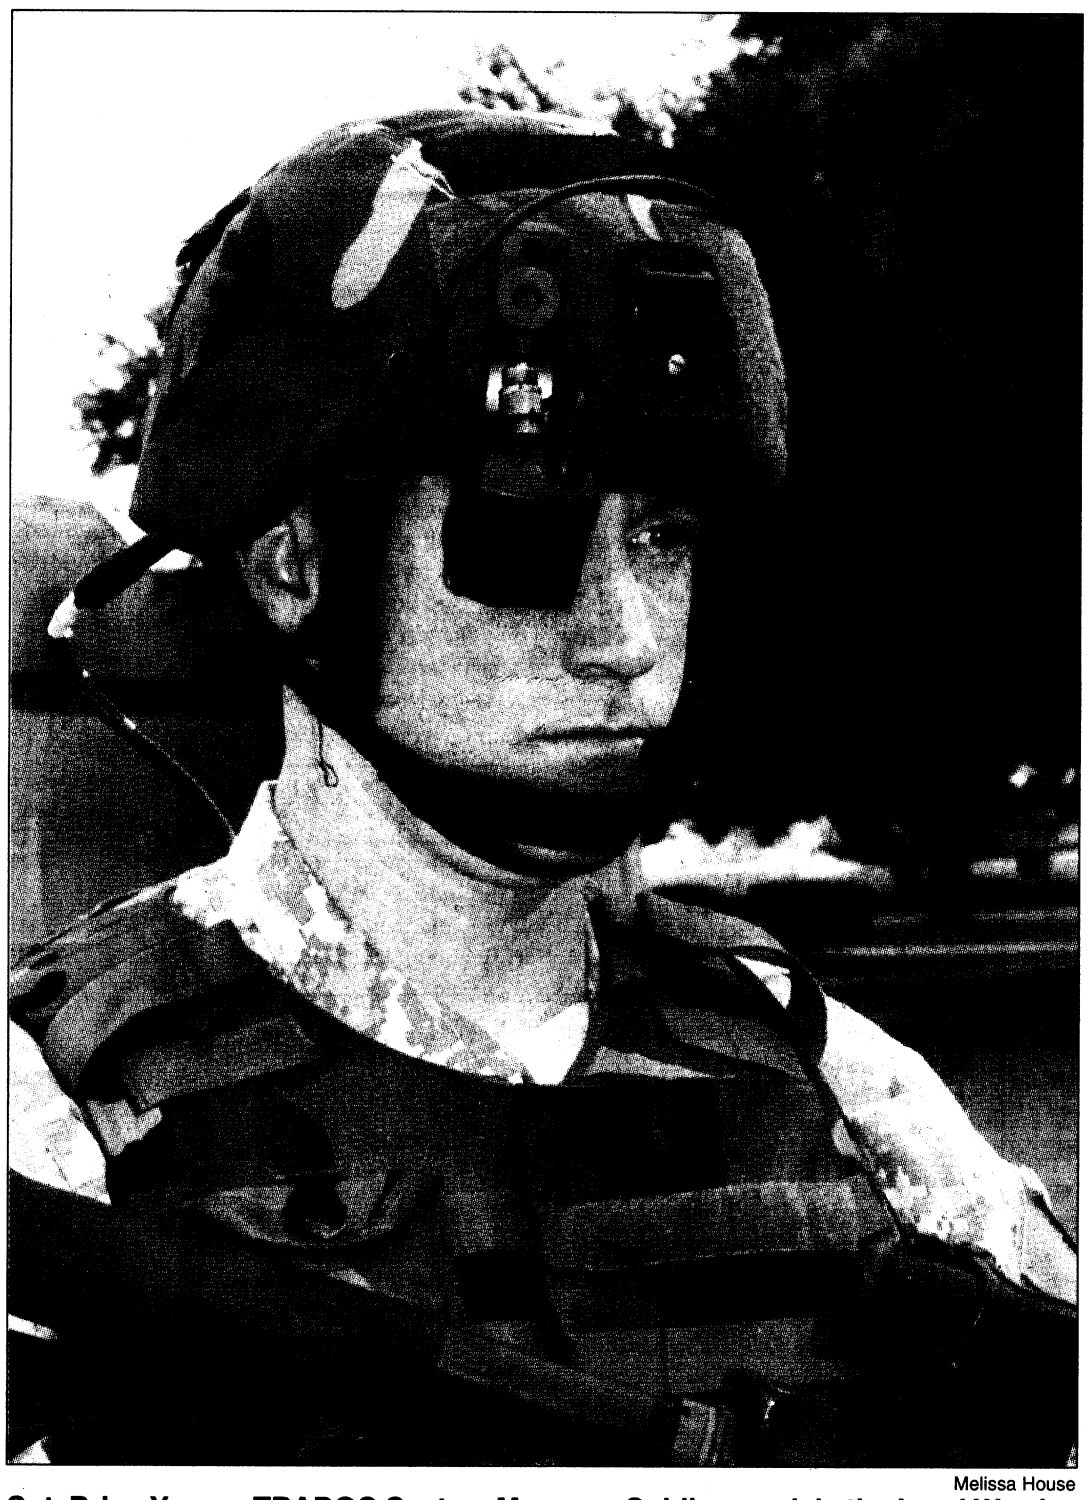
Changes command today at 7:30 a.m.

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff



"This is America's Army," Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, commanding general of Fort Benning, said Wednesday, at his last media conference before leaving post. "It's not an isolated island unto itself. We serve the people of the United States."

"I think it's an important duty of the commander at all levels, from company commander to post commander, to maintain relationships with those whom we serve," he said.



That Freakley maintained good relationships is evident from the numerous visits elicited from state and local elected officials throughout his tenure. Freakley said Sonny Perdue, governor of Georgia, has been here

System enhances, integrates digital battlefield

Melissa House

The Soldiers in the TRADOC System Manager-Soldier are on the road introducing the country to the Land Warrior System, which will make its unit debut in April 2006. That's when 440 systems will be fielded to the Soldiers of 1st Squadron, 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Staff Sgt. Ruben Romero, the NCOIC of the Land Warrior demonstration team, visited Fort Lewis in June.

"This visit was a preview to try to get everyone in line and ready to go," Romero said. "Then we'll start the planning phase for fielding, which will include training the trainers."

Soldiers will be trained on the modular Land Warrior system, which consists of three major subsystems; the computer and helmet and weapon systems. Everything in the system is powered by the same batteries.

Sgt. Brian Young, a three-year veteran of the 75th Ranger Regiment and now a Land Warrior demonstrator, knows exactly what the system provides Soldiers.

"It doesn't take over for anything you do as a Soldier," Young said, "it just enhances it."

The system, weighing in at slightly more than 15 pounds, is compatible with currently issued helmets, weapons and body armor.

"Land Warrior integrates the Soldier as a system instead of a Soldier who carries all the systems," Young said.

A helmet-mounted optical display allows Soldiers to access a wealth of infor-

Two Benning Rangers killed in Afghanistan

Soldiers drown when Humvee goes into river

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Two Rangers died Aug. 4 during a mission in support of Operation Enduring Freedom.

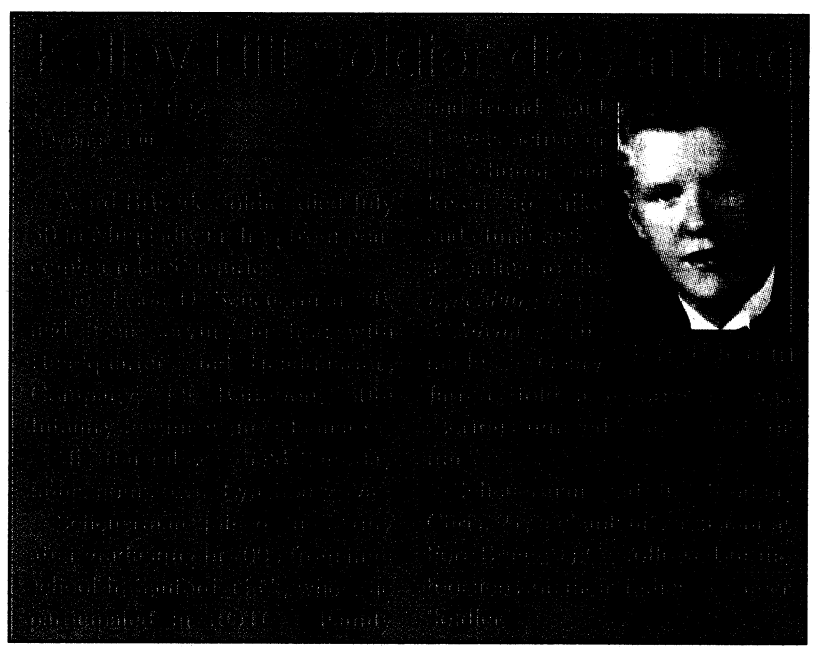
Pfc. Damian Garza and Pvt. John M. Henderson Jr., died when their Humvee slid into the Kunar River, northeast of Jalalabad, Afghanistan.

According to a Department of Defense press release, two other Rangers escaped from the humvee before it slid into the river.

The Rangers were traveling with a large convoy along the river, which had expanded due to excessive rainfall in recent weeks and melting snow from nearby mountain peaks.

Garza

Henderson



Garza, 19, and Henderson, 21, had just arrived to Afghanistan in July to serve with the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

Garza enlisted in the Army in April 2004, the day after he graduated from Zion Christian School in his hometown of Odessa, Texas.

Henderson, a Columbus native, graduated from Pacelli High School in 2002 and enlisted in the Army in December 2004.

Both Soldiers completed One Station Unit Training at Fort Benning as Infantrymen and attended Airborne School.

Garza graduated from the Ranger Indoctrination Program in November 2004. Henderson graduated in May 2005.

"He'd always tell us he'd be flying one of those (planes) or a helicopter, or jumping out of one," Jaime Garza told Clovis News Journal about his son.

"We thought he was crazy, but he just said he wanted to be the best

GOOD GRIEF

Don't need no stinkin' PDA

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Ah, technology. That stuff Webster defines as "a scientific method of achieving a practical purpose."

It's all the things at work and at home that, I guess, are supposed to make our lives simpler and easier. As with all things, you either love it, or you hate it. But right now, I'm trying to perfect the art of sitting on the technological fence.

Technology isn't like the wheel — that's more of a innovation, in my world. I equate technology with electronics, gadgets like PDAs, laptops and cell phones you can connect to the Internet with.

Even my new ion hair dryer doesn't make the cut as far as technology is concerned, especially since it doesn't dry as fast as my old non-ion model, and that's a big issue in the humid South.

Computers — they're definitely technology. I can't imagine trying to do what we do here at the paper without them. On the days when our computer network acts up, or we can't print, I have visions of us all having to break out pica rulers and cut and paste. I can't paste in a straight line and always use too much glue, so that would be ugly indeed.

The printer is up at work, but I haven't been able to print anything from my home computer in months. It seems, after two years, that the computer now doesn't like the printer, or vice versa.

I spent almost two hours with the help desk guy (from a computer manufacturer that will remain nameless) and was finally able to uninstall and reinstall my printer.

I printed four measly pages before the computer got wise and stopped talking to the printer. I'm getting used to not being able to print at home, but it would be absolutely crippling if we couldn't print at work.

Last year, I thought I had stumbled upon the electronic organizational device technology to end all technologies.

My husband had a PDA he wasn't using, so I jumped at the chance to grab it. I'm a sucker for small calendars, address books and calculators, and I decided this would be right up my alley.

And this was no ordinary calendar, address book or calculator. I could stick it into the charging cradle, push a button and instantly transfer all the data I had entered away from home into a companion program running on my home computer.

Wow. What a concept. I could run the calendar at home, and it would have all the same entries. I'd never miss a meeting, an appointment or anything else. I'd always have phone numbers at my disposal, no matter where I was.

But it gets better. I could snap a little keypad to the PDA, download a word-processing program and sit in the stands during hockey practice, pound out articles and never miss a deadline.

I got my recurring Wednesday morning racquetball game plugged in, and that was about as far as it went. I just couldn't handle only being able to see my schedule one page at a time. And if I changed it to view a week or a month at a time, my calendar entries were reduced to little tick marks. The more ticks, the more things I had to do.

I decided I didn't want to define my days by tick marks. I needed the words, written on paper the old-fashioned way.

Today, I'm happily scratching out entries in my Far Side desk calendar, as the PDA gathers dust in the computer room next to the printer.

It's one piece of technology I can surely live without.

What do they do when their dishes are dirty?

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

A friend of mine visited the Main Post laundromat last week to do one last load of clothes before pointing her car in the direction of her next duty assignment.

Ever the multitasker, she popped the clothes in the dryer and left for half an hour or so to run errands.

She came back to an empty dryer.

Now here's where I would like to tell you:

a) They were neatly folded and stacked in her laundry basket, or

b) Oops! Someone accidentally took them and returned them as soon as she realized her mistake.

Nope. Neither.

Apparently two, ummm, voluptuous gals in miniskirts and heels helped themselves to Ely's new jeans.

I assume they're donating them to a worthy cause, because they will never actually wear them. Unless they stole a crowbar, too.

I called the laundromat and spoke to the kindly manager to see if the clothes had been returned.

"Oh, no darlin', it wasn't no accident," she said. "People shop up in here like they shop up at the Wal-Mart."

Huh?

What the heck are sane people supposed to make of this?

Are blue jeans hot on the black market?

Is there a dark and dangerous underworld of underwear?

And do sticky fingers leave their mark on clean clothes?

According to the manager, this is a growing problem.

What would turn the tide? I'm not sure, but security cameras, ID checks and sign-ins would help, I should think.

Maybe it'll take a Dirty Laundry Task Force to clean up this problem. Undercover agents armed with detergent and fabric softener?

Look, I hate to do laundry as much as the next gal. The thought of trading it in for a fresh load from time to time has a certain appeal.

But thievery is still immoral and illegal, and much as I hate it, I'd rather do laundry than do time.

If you or someone you know has a problem with stealing laundry, contact your chaplain, your doctor or the 1-800 number on the back of the Wisk bottle. Get help.

And would the rest of you, please, keep an eye out for two really broad broads in bimbo heels and size eight jeans? Tell 'em you're on to their dirty little secret.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks for support

The military has changed my life in more ways than one. The staff, NCOs and officers came through for me in a time of need. The support of the folks at Building 4 and the command group was remarkable. Their efforts are awesome in assisting Soldiers like me in getting over the hump of adversity

The programs for single Soldiers and Soldiers with families are unbelievable. The grants and loans available to help Soldiers in hardship are easy to access. Soldiers through their chain of command should find out about CFC, AER and so many other programs.

Their encouragement, along with words of wisdom, kept me grounded and sane during my time of pain. The women and men, in and out of uniform, I have worked for within the command group have been nothing but insightful and down right motivating.

To Maj. Gen. Freakley, Brig. Brig. Gen. Yarbrough, Col Cornwell and Command Sgt. Maj. Wright, thank you. I am a firm believer that out of the Army values, selfless service is demonstrated and executed within the command group many times everyday. To me, you have shown your true character. My family and I thank you.

— Sgt. Theodore Hargrove
Fort Benning

Reader raises flag question

Why doesn't the post office (Building 110) have an American flag and pole? Every post office across this great country flies the flag daily. But not at Fort Benning, Ga. Why?

I did inquire with the postal clerk and was told there's enough flags on Fort Benning. Huh? Just concerned and baffled.

— Bill Neff
Fort Benning

Postal official replies

I welcome the opportunity to comment on Bill Neff's letter in which he wonders why the U.S. flag does not fly in front of the base post office (Building 110).

The practical answer is that the postal service leases the part of the building it occupies. The installation of a flagpole is not our call.

But I think a more important focus is what the flag represents: a confident and optimistic people united in a commitment to freedom and opportunity for all. I don't think you have to worry about the men and women of the U.S. Postal Service on that front. We are patriots. Hundreds of thousands of us served with honor at home and abroad, in both peace and war.

Thousands of us serve in Reserve and National Guard units. Many have seen action in the current conflict. Some of us have not returned.

We respect the men and women who defend our nation and our values. We are with them literally and figuratively. No one should read anything into the absence of a flag pole in front of Building 110. The postal service honors our men and women in uniform, has high regard for the job they do and shares with them the same depth of feeling for the nation they serve.

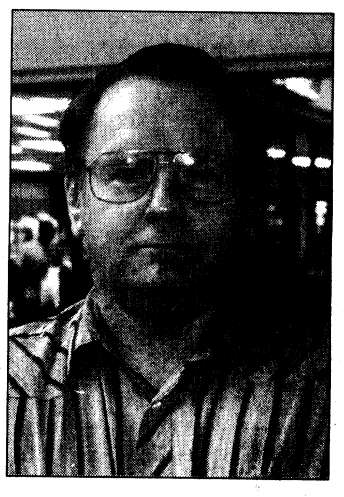
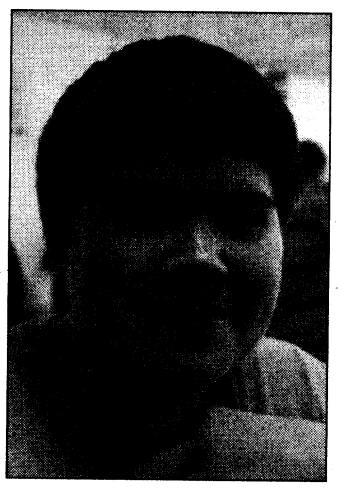
What is one technological invention you cannot live without?

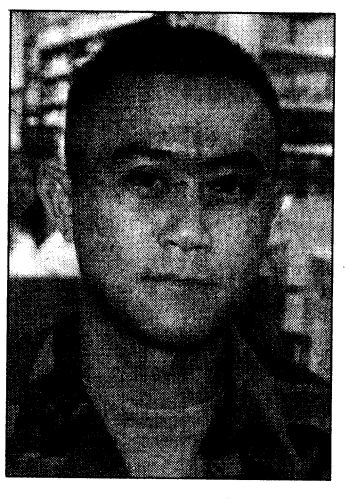


Kainoa Aitaro, family member — "The cell phone. That's how I keep in touch with my family in Hawaii, my children and my husband. My cell phone is my extension to them."



Sgt. Fredrick Bailey, Infantry Training Brigade — "My vehicle, because there's so much distance you have to cover, even back and forth to work. It'd be hard trying to get around any other way."

Jasmin Raw, family member — "I think that would probably be a computer because you can contact people, there's news and it's something to do besides watch television."



Richard Maehr, AAFES employee — "This is a very complex philosophical question. Can you do without the wheel? Without it, you'd have to do away with the car, electricity, indoor plumbing, there'd be no water pressure. Think of how many things use the wheel on a daily basis."

Ian Walker, family member — "I would have to say the computer because if I ever need something to do research for a report on, I can just type it in and find it on a computer."

Nancy Tapia, family member — "An automobile, that's probably the biggest thing. You use it to get your groceries and to get to work. I'd have to catch a taxi or a bus without my car."

Staff Sgt. Vinson Vo, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "A cell phone. It's convenient to call from anywhere and at any time. In an emergency or when you are out in the field you can contact your family."

Benning mysteries are family histories for those who claimed this land first

History of Cemetery 2 predates nation

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

The sign propped against a tree reads "Cemetery 2." Above it, nailed to the tree, is another: "Sensitive Area, No Digging."

Somebody's macabre humor or a grave mistake? Neither, actually.

Cemetery 2, on a hill alongside Santa Fe Road, sandwiched between the PX and Love Dental Clinic, is one of several graveyards Fort Benning inherited when Army officials purchased the land to establish an Infantry School in 1918.

The land that is now Fort Benning was comprised of several tiny rural towns, some consisting of nothing more than a handful of shacks. "Shack," in fact, was the name of one.

But it was "Red Bone" where stood a farmhouse belonging to generations of the Parkman family, early Chattahoochee County pioneers. In its place now stands Martin Army Community Hospital. Red Bone extended some distance beyond the site of the cemetery, where Parkman kinfolk were buried right up until the land was purchased from David Richard Parkman.

David and his wife, Anna Cordelia, were loath to part with their land, which had been in the family since 1830, but the government gave them no choice. They were allowed to live on the homestead until David's death in 1921. He, and later his wife, were buried in Columbus.

Burials in most Fort Benning's "non-military" cemeteries ceased when the Infantry moved in. They are, however, treated as sacred ground. Most, like Cemetery 2, are encircled by a fence and mowed from time to time. But mostly they're left in peace. Post officials are responsible for their maintenance, but little can be done about the damage wrought by time.

There are about 20 distinguishable graves in Cemetery 2. No doubt there are more, but age and weather and perhaps even vandalism have left their exact location — and the name of their, ummm, inhabitants — a mystery.

A heap of what appear to be headstones surrounds a mound of dirt, leaving one to assume they once marked uniform rows of graves. Next to the mound lies an upturned basket of faded silk flowers.

Across the graveyard, rain has eroded the red clay into a steep, but shallow bank, much too close to the grave of William H. Parkman, who served, according to his epitaph, in Pemberton's Company of the Georgia Cavalry for the Confederacy.

Next to the grave, perhaps exposed only recently, lay shotgun shell casings — eight in all — dated from 1917 to 1930. Presumably, these were left by an honor guard, probably after a Veteran's Day ceremony. Who can say?

For all its mystery, Cemetery 2 holds many answers for Anna Cordelia Elkins, the 13-year-old great, great, great granddaughter of David and the first Anna Cordelia.

"When I was little, I didn't like my name — Cordelia. I thought it was weird," said Anna, who lives in Phenix City. "I grew to like it, because it's different, but I didn't know until last week that I was named after her. That's very cool."

Bridgett Siter

David Stieghan, Fort Benning's command historian, listens as Marian Parkman Fletcher shares the Parkman family history at Cemetery 2 Aug. 5. Behind Fletcher is Anna Cordelia Elkins, right, and her mother, Susan Parkman Elkins.

Though her namesake is buried in Columbus, Anna came to Fort Benning Aug. 5 to view the other graves.

The one near the bank — Parkman of Pemberton's Co. — was David Richard's father and the son of Joe Daniel Parkman, who migrated here from South Carolina. Joe Daniel, born in early 1776, was buried a few feet away.

That said, the history of Cemetery 2 predates the birth of the nation. Considering the familial ties, that's powerful stuff to Anna, who visited Fort Benning with her mother, her brother, her aunt and a cousin.

"I learned a lot about history — my family history and (local) history," Anna said. "It kinda made me feel important to know that my family made such a difference — that things around here wouldn't be the way they are if my family hadn't been a part of it. It makes me want to learn more."

Anna's aunt, Marian Parkman Fletcher, organized last week's visit. She's the family historian since her great-aunt Bonnie Parkman died 30 years ago.

Bonnie, who regularly trekked to Fort Benning to tidy the graveyard, remained resentful about the loss of her family land up until her death, her niece said.

In a paper on the history of the family, Marian recalled her aunt's description of the Parkman family back in 1939. "I have found no great wealth, no outstanding fame, no presidents, no governors, no criminals, but men and women of honor ... ," she wrote.

"The characteristics of the clan seem to be the same as the generations pass on. They are lovers of nature, mostly tillers of the soil, sportsmen — loving the outdoor recreations, especially the rod and reel and the gun and dog. They possess a keen sense of humor ... "

They'd likely enjoy the morbid humor of the signs marking Cemetery 2 a "Sensitive Area, No Digging."

Freakley: Doesn't rule out returning to this area

several times and is very supportive of Fort Benning.

"I'm proud of the team here," he said.

"I think the training the team has put together here has focused Soldiers on what they're doing in combat."

Under Freakley's command, Fort Benning made a major shift from training Soldiers for their first unit, to preparing them for immediate combat.

Old ways of Soldiering such as drills, ceremony and bivouacking were replaced with constantly updated techniques for fighting a very sophisticated enemy in Afghanistan and Iraq, he said.

"This is the hardest job I've had in (my) thirty years in the Army. It's very complex," Freakley said.

"We have TRADOC Soldiers here, FORSCOM here and Special Operations Soldiers here. The commanding general of Fort Benning has a lot of bosses at different levels."

He said it is one of the most exciting places he's ever commanded, and he's enjoyed the camaraderie of everyone from Infantry Training Brigade recruits to Rangers, and everyone in between.

Perhaps because he'd spent time living in a tent in Mosul before assuming command of Fort Benning, Freakley has a special affinity for the Soldiers and has specific ideas for their survival.

Since his arrival here, Freakley has championed the concept of the Soldier as a System, where Soldiers receive integrated, mix-and-match equipment that can be transposed based upon the mission. The implementation of Soldier as a System is scheduled to go into full effect next year.

"We try to give Soldiers integrated equipment from the beginning now, that is modular," Freakley said.

"You can take it off or put it on based on the mission, versus dumping a bunch of equipment on them and saying, 'You figure out how to make it work.'"

Freakley admitted he and his family loved living in Columbus and find it hard to leave.

He doesn't rule out returning one day.

"There's no place in the Army where, as the commandant, you can go to the gym in the morning and work out with the population on post, come to work, go get on an airplane and jump out over Alabama, come back from that and go to a live fire with Soldiers from basic training who tell you they're excited about what they do, and finish up the day with a bunch of Rangers," Freakley said.

"You can't do that anywhere else."

New officers learn warrior skills in BOLC programs

Battle tactics taught in three-phase leadership course

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

A pilot training program to prepare junior officers for battle is in full swing at Fort Benning.

Following several years of planning, the Basic Officer Leadership Course has been standardized and divided into three phases.

Now known as BOLC I, the first phase focuses on precommissioning training and is conducted at the U.S. Military Academy, Officer Candidate Schools and Reserve Officers Training Corps.

BOLC I focuses on the basic skills and knowledge necessary for officer leadership. All future officers receive the same training and instruction regardless of the commissioning source.

In the past, all officers went directly into a branch-specific officer basic training course. In the pilot program now being conducted at Fort Benning, all new officers will attend a six-week course known as BOLC II in small-unit leadership and tactics.

"Regardless if they're a lawyer, a dentist, a doctor, a signal guy or a Soldier fixing equipment, they're Soldiers no matter what," said Maj. Kevin Elder, BOLC commander of Alpha Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

"The days of 'I don't know what to do, let's call a signalman, a tanker, an infantry or an armor guy' are over, because of the present environment with the insurgents we're dealing with," he said.

Focusing on physical-fitness and mental clarity, approximately 80 percent of the course is taught in a field environment.

"We're teaching them core warrior tasks with all the newest equipment, so they'll be ready when they deploy overseas," Elder said.

"When they get on the battlefield, they'll be able to keep their people alive. There is a real threat that exists. It's out there, and it's unfortunate and we're dealing with it," he said.

BOLC II students found the training to be practical and believable, especially when exploding containers of baby powder coupled with the sounds of bomb blasts to simulate improvised exploding devices were added to the situations.

"In the training we did last week, some of the platoons had to deal with IED's, secure the site and react to contact," said Capt. Patricia Driscoll, 4th Platoon, platoon trainer.

"It's very realistic, particularly what we're doing right now (at McKenna). These tasks, particularly MOUT and convoy operations are completely new," she said.

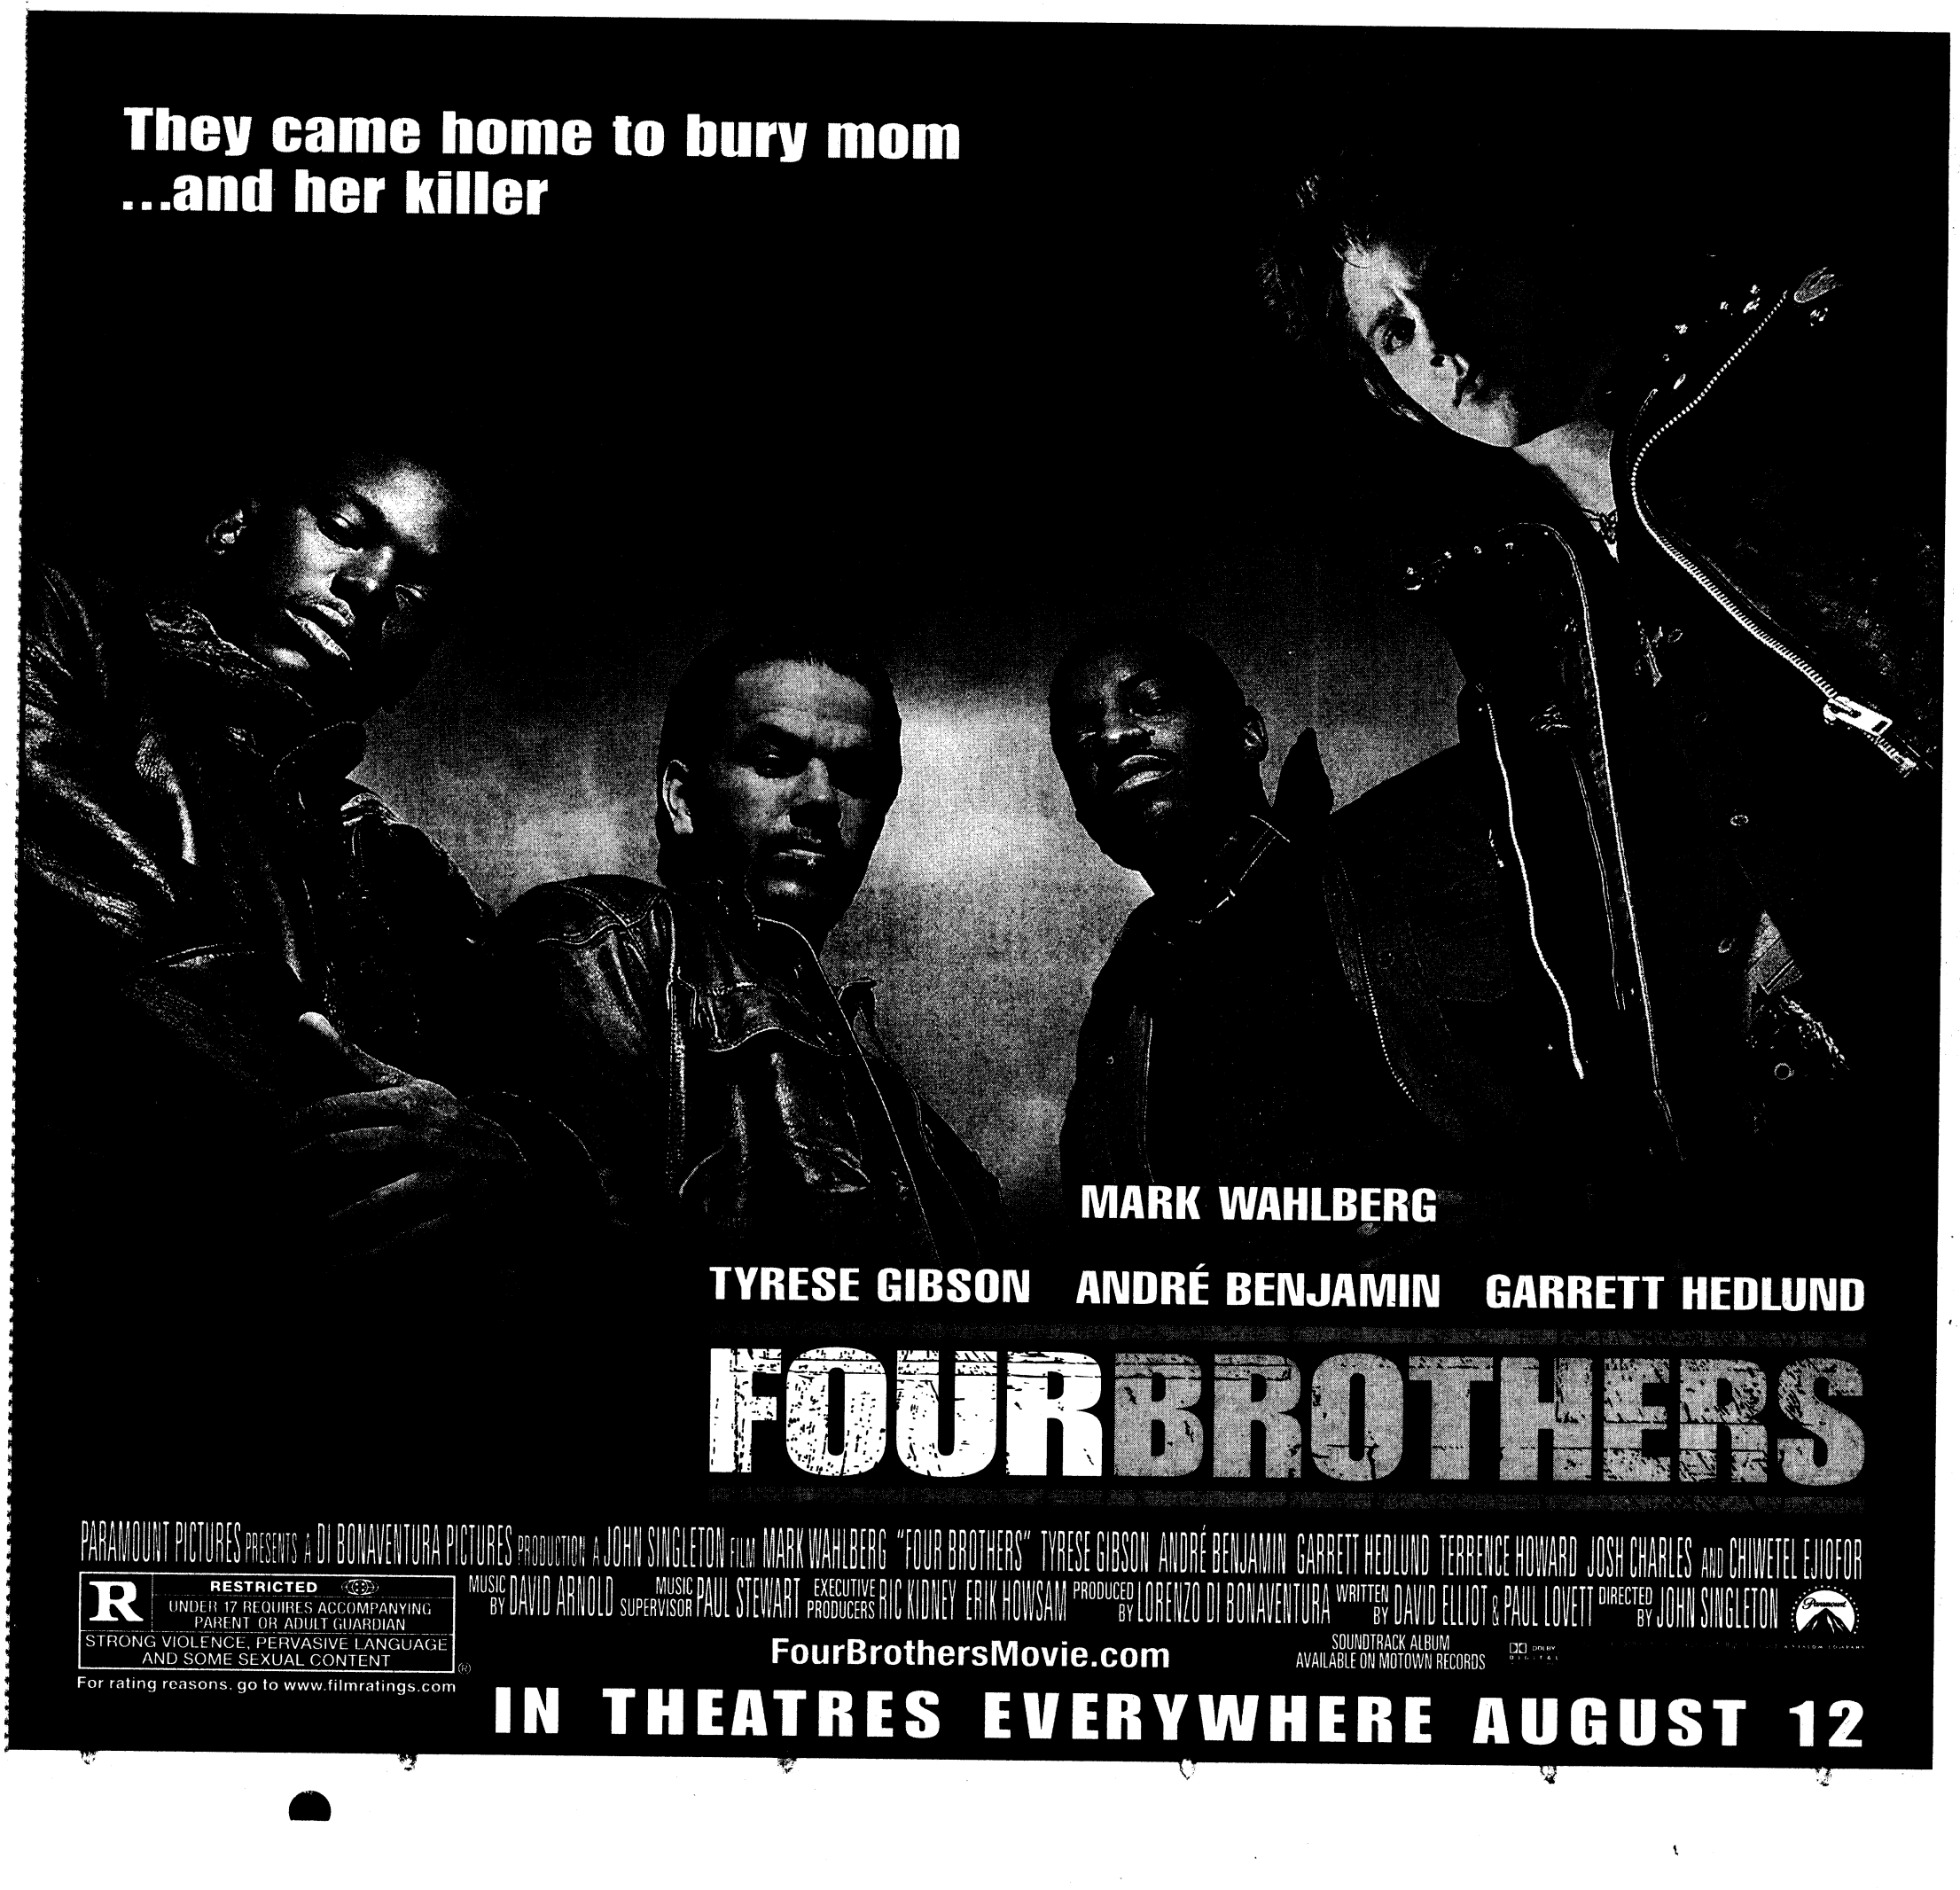
"The training is valuable, and we're developing muscle-memory in these tasks," Driscoll said.

"You do things so repetitively and so often that hopefully when it counts the skills will come to the surface instinctively."

Throughout the entire course, platoon cadre evaluate and mentor the young officers about stacking on a door, carrying a weapon correctly and every other phase of training, said Elder.

Donna Hyatt

Junior officers learn valuable urban assault skills at McKenna MOUT site in the pilot program for Basic Officer Leadership Course, phase II.



The hands-on phase of battling insurgency was developed using first-hand experience from returning Soldiers.

"I think the urban assault course we're going through right now is probably the most productive," said Sgt. 1st Class Danny Lopez, BOLC platoon sergeant for 3rd platoon Alpha Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

"I think it's very important that they go through the scenarios now to make them better prepared for current operations over there," he said. ""We're going to take the fight to the enemy.

Upon graduation from the second phase, junior officers will attend BOLC III for specific technical courses and specialized training in skills, doctrine, tactics and techniques unique to their assigned branches.

The pilot course for BOLC II will wrap up next week. Once BOLC II is implemented, the course will only be taught only at Fort Benning and Fort Sill, Okla.

mation, toggling between maps, operations orders and intelligence information.

The system also provides icons showing the location of friendly troops on a screen the updates every 10 seconds.

Romero and Young agree the best feature of the system is the increased situational awareness, which the Fort Lewis unit will be able to use while inside the Stryker vehicle, or while dismounted.

"I know where the Soldiers are at all times," Romero said. "At any given moment, I can see where they are and communicate with them." Soldiers communicate by pushing buttons on either the Soldier Control Unit worn on the body armor, or a Weapon Control Unit mounted on the weapon.

"Knowing where you are and where your buddies are in relation to the battlefield takes some of the guesswork out," Young said. Eventually, he said, the system will include the capability to capture images.

For anyone afraid the computer's data might get into the wrong hands, Young said the system can be personally purged or remotely purged by the unit according to standing operating procedures. Injured Soldiers can call for a medic by pressing a specific button on either the Soldier or Weapon Control Unit, causing their icon to change color.

Thermal sights, lasers and day video sight all add to the versatility and increase a Soldier's capabilities.

The three power settings on the day video sight allow Solders to engage targets in the 300 to 400 meter range without problems, Romero said. One Soldier at Fort Lewis told him the first time he shot four consecutive 300 meter targets was with the Land Warrior system.

"We had Soldiers shooting 400 and 450-meter targets who had never hit one at 300 meters," Young said. The modular system allows Soldiers to mount equipment based on whether they are left- or right-handed firers.

And the Soldiers firing with the new system aren't the only ones impressed with its capabilities, Romero said.

The demo team has been to Capitol Hill, showing how the system will change the way Soldiers fight and how it will help them on the battlefield.

Romero said many on Capitol Hill wished they had Land Warrior technology when they were serving in the armed forces and heard comments like "I could have used this on an (observation post) in Vietnam." Most impressive, he said seemed to be the thermal capabilities.

With 13 years in the Army, Romero thinks the most challenging part will be getting the older Soldiers used to the integrated system and adapting to the change to a more electronic, digitized battlefield. He has worn the Land Warrior system in the field and said the extra weight wasn't hard to get used to.

"The younger Soldiers say it's like this video game or that video game, and they want to use it," he said.

Jason Kaye

Staff Sgt. Ruben Romero, left, NCOIC of the TRADOC Systems Manager-Soldier Land Warrior demonstration team, watches Col. Jay Lehr, commander of the 2nd Cavalry Regiment at Fort Lewis, Wash., use the Land Warrior system to engage targets on a range at Fort Lewis in June. A squadron in Lehr's unit will receive 440 systems in April 2006.

Special Ops tourniquet saves time, lives

Deployed Soldiers use new device

Spc. Jeremy D. Crisp
Army News Service

The Army is now providing troops with a new tool designed to save life and limb.

The Special Operations Forces Tactical Tourniquet, the Army's newest medical device, is being issued to Soldiers serving in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Designed for one-handed application, the SOFTT allows a Soldier to apply a tourniquet himself, replacing the Army's field-expedient method in which Soldiers used a bandage and a stick to stop blood flow from a wound.

The field-expedient method worked, "but the SOFTT is better," said Sgt. 1st Class Michael C. Klemowski, serving with the Multi-National Force – Iraq personnel section.

"Having this issued to Soldiers will cut down on casualties because it is a time-saving device," said Klemowski, a former drill sergeant. "The less time that is wasted, the better chance there is of saving someone's life."

The new tourniquet is suitable for hard-to-reach injuries. The SOFTT's strap can be released completely through the web clamp and then re-threaded, allowing for application to trapped limbs.

Working on the same principles as all tourniquets, "(The SOFTT) is used to stop the bleeding from an extremity and to prevent shock," said Staff Sgt. Thomas J. Brennan, Multi-National Corps - Iraq surgeon cell NCOIC.

The SOFTT has two latches used to secure the metal handle. While only one latch is required for the tourniquet to be effective, the extra latch provides extra securing ability, depending on the handle's position after tightening.

To apply the tourniquet, a Soldier slides it over the limb and pulls the tail quickly. Once the slack is removed, he or she twists the handle until bleeding is controlled and secures the latch. A screw on the belt can be tightened to prevent accidental loosening.

The SOFTT is used as a last resort to treat a wound, Brennan said.

Soldiers should first try to stop the bleeding with a bandage Brennan told a class of Soldiers learning how to use the new tourniquet. And, if the bleeding persists after using the pressure dressing for five minutes, they should use the tourniquet.

Once the tourniquet has been applied, Soldiers should check the pulse on either the hand or foot where the injury is.

"No pulse means the tourniquet is working," Brennan said.

"The new tourniquet became available in Iraq and Afghanistan in January and Soldiers can get the SOFTT at their unit's supply section," Brennan said.

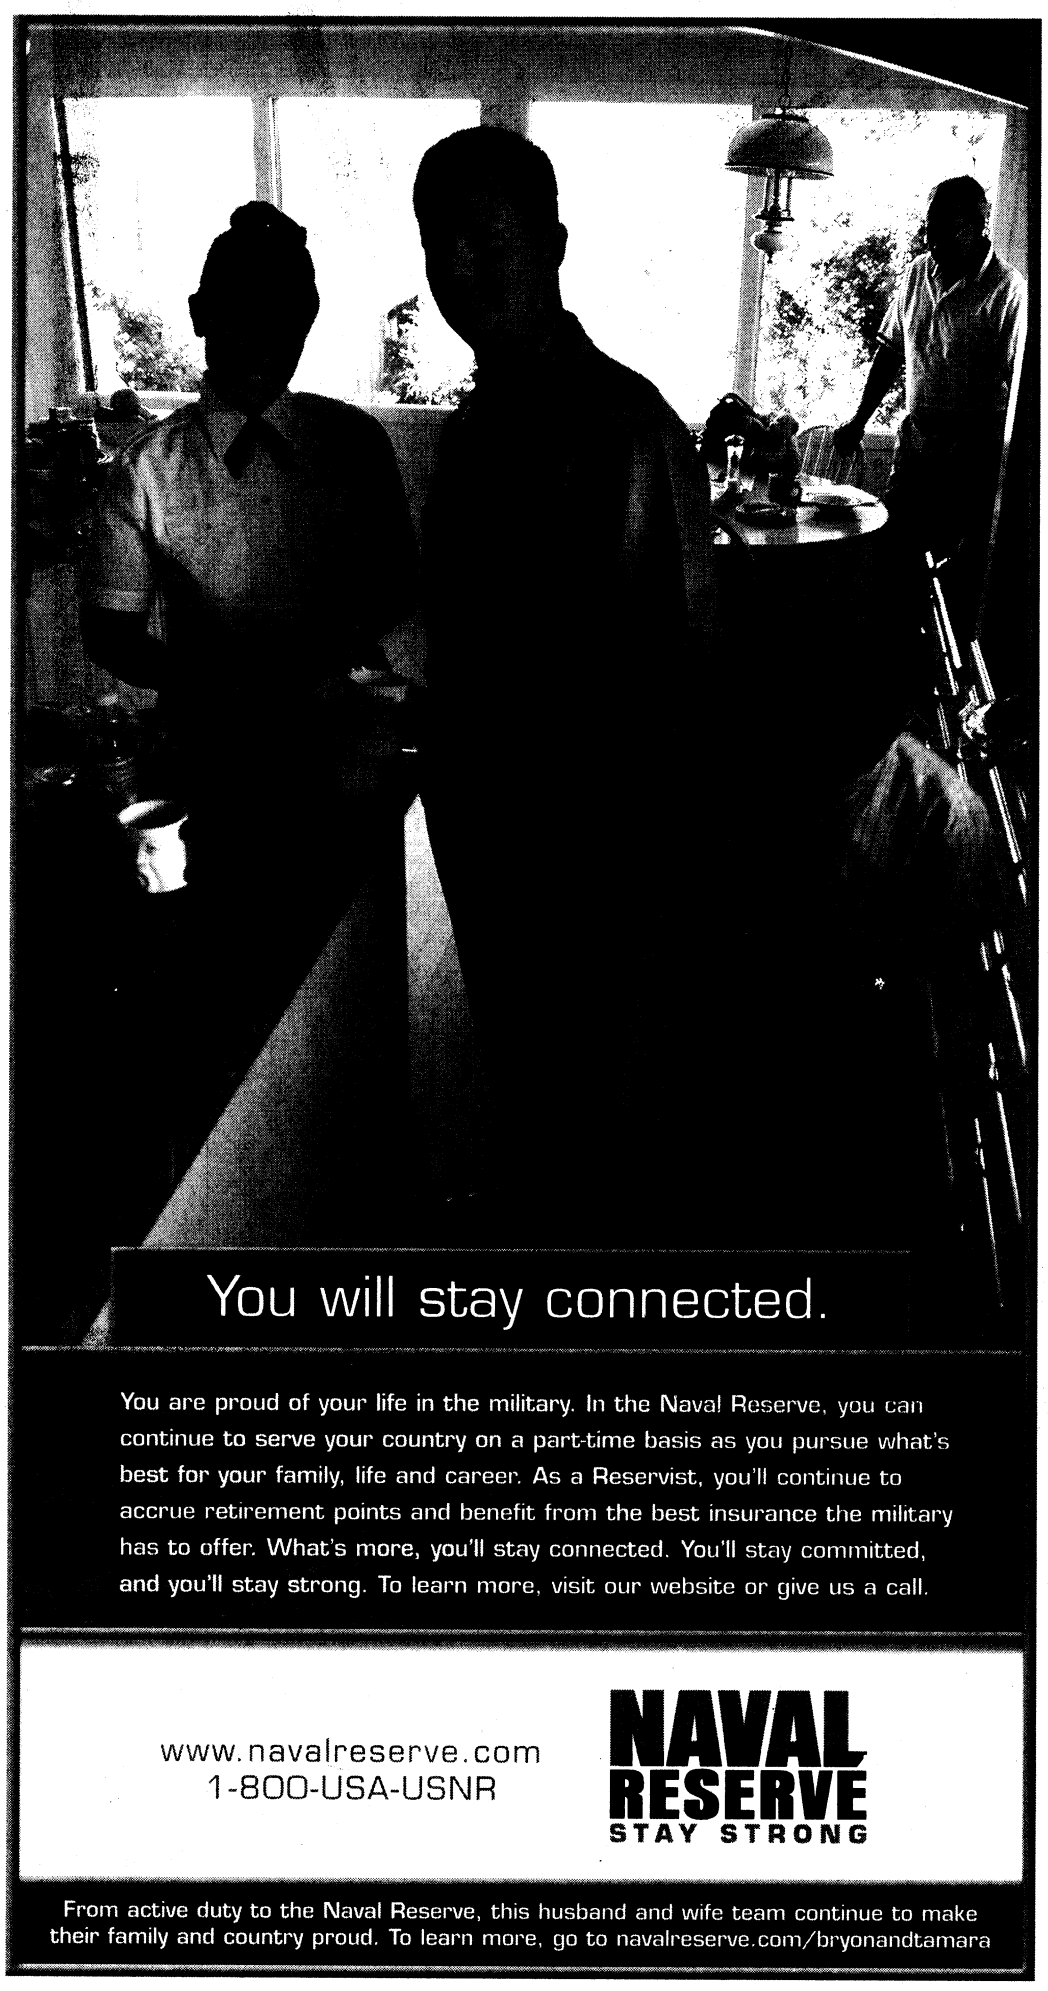
Separating Soldiers must see the Army Career and Alumni Program and attend a pre-separation briefing 90 to 120 days

This is mandatory. Upon regular ETS or separation, Soldiers may be eligible for the following benefits: dental treatment, unemployment compensation, Montgomery GI Bill, vocational rehabilitation and employment, disability compensation, home loans and health benefits.

There are specific time limits and restrictions on the benefits. All of the information can be accessed through the Veterans Affairs homepage at www.va.gov.

For more information, call 545-4887 or 545-5424 or see your unit personnel NCO.

Loose lips sink ships



Army leadership has recently expressed their concern about the apparent inattention to basic operational security procedures.

OPSEC is the responsibility of every soldier, civilian and contractor. Everyone should practice continuous OPSEC.

Information about unit strengths, operational capabilities and deployments, in the wrong hands, can severely undermine unit safety and mission accomplishment.

Media inquiries should be directed to the installation Public Affairs Officer.

For information, call the PAO at 545-2236 or 545-2218 after duty hours.

Course builds confidence, teamwork

Soldiers tackle Sand Hill's Bayonet Assault Course

The Bayonet Assault Course is a hurdle all Sand Hill Soldiers will get to tackle during training at Fort Benning.

Whether they will become computer technicians, medics, logistical specialists or Infantrymen it's a chance to test their skills and see if they have what it takes to defeat an enemy in hand-to-hand combat.

Tuesday, Soldiers from A Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, took their turn on the course, learning that no matter what military occupational specialty, hand-to-hand combat skills are a must.

"(The Bayonet Assault Course) helps them establish the warrior ethos and the warrior spirit," said 1st Sgt. Timothy Johnson. "It helps them — the non-Infantry Soldiers — understand they are responsible for their own safety and they may have to pick up and use a bayonet sometime."

Johnson said the experience also helps boost confidence and motivate Soldiers.

"They walk away with teamwork (skills) because they are continually focusing on moving as a unit," Johnson said. "They learn espirit de corps and walk away being one step closer to the warrior ethos."

"As computer technicians and supply, we may feel like we are not a part of the war, but we are," said Spc. Major Wilburn, 26, of Fayetteville, N.C.

"We will need all these skills to protect our country and ourselves so we can get back to our families safely."

Pfc. Richard Eagle knows the importance of teamwork. This is his second time in the military. Ten years ago, Eagle, a native of Tampa, Fla., was in the Air Force.

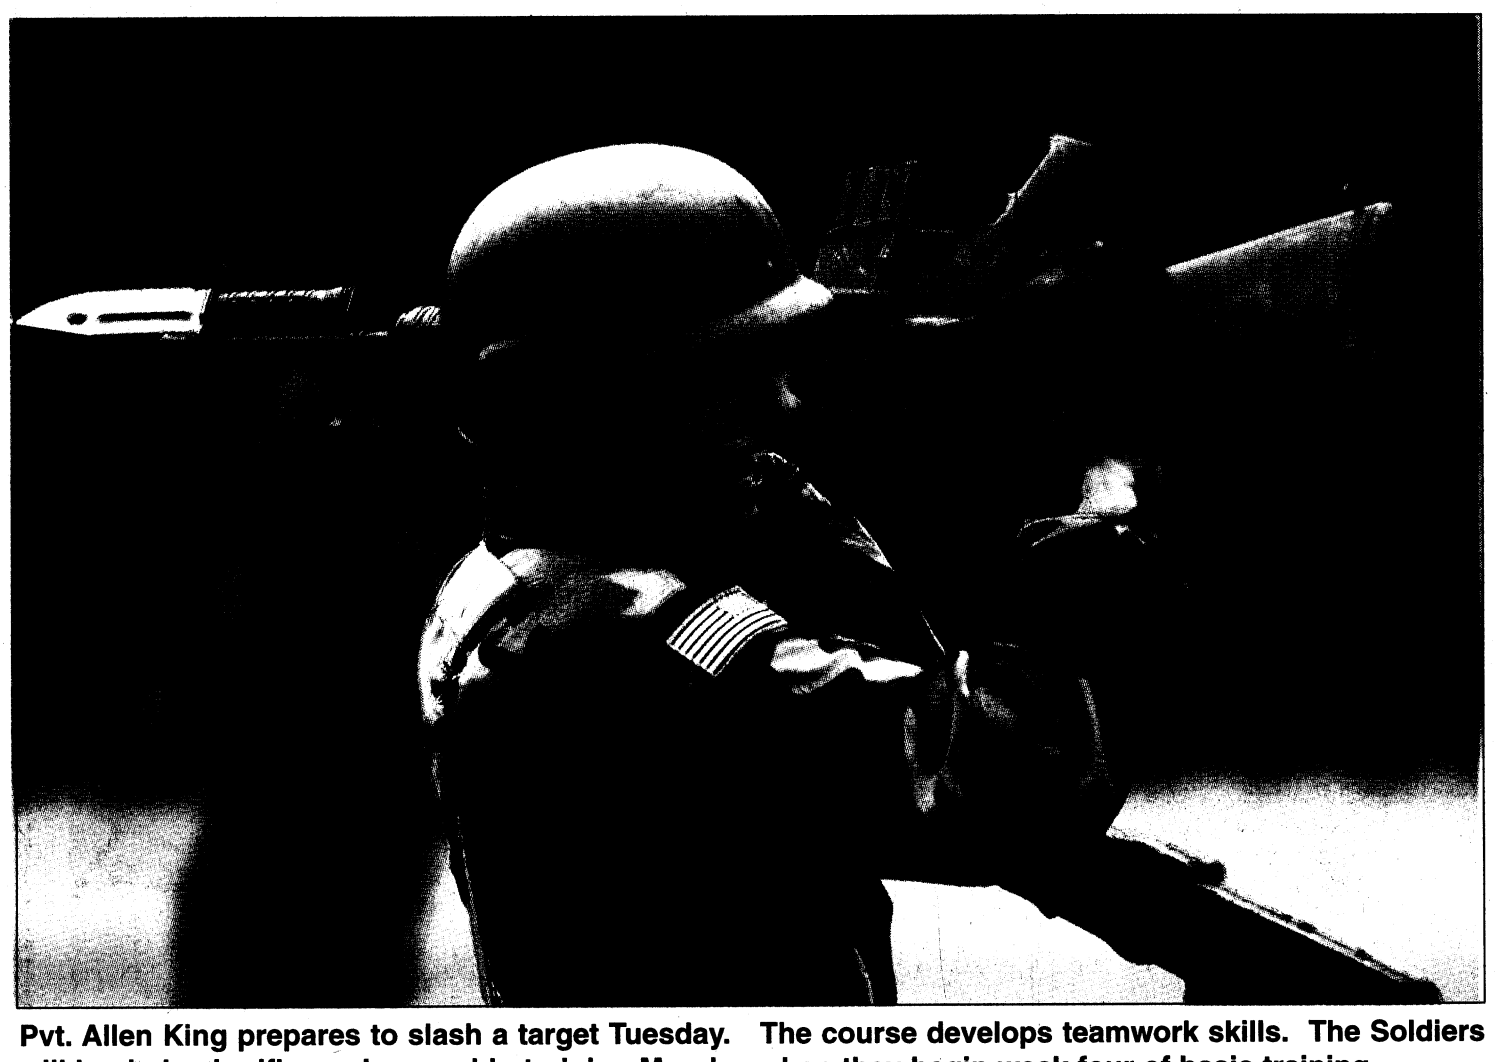
Now, at 30, he is doing it again, only this time with more of a purpose — to provide for his 8-year-old daughter, Savannah.

Eagle hopes to become a better Soldier and a better leader, something he can use throughout the rest of his life.

"It is a very positive environment," Eagle said. "It's intense and there is a lot of discipline, but I look forward to becoming more of a team and learning those necessary leadership skills."

Johnson said the course is just one part of Soldiers' training that builds a foundation for further training, before they move onto advanced individual training.

"That's what basic training is all about," Johnson said. "We teach discipline, teamwork and the seven Army values. From that foundation you can build anything."



Pvt. Greg Hargett moves across a wood bridge.

Pvt. William Visnick, A Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, charges a target during the unit's bayonet training on Sand Hill Tuesday. The Bayonet Assault Course is one part of every Soldier's basic military training, regardless of their military occupational speciality.

283rd Army Band receives superior unit award

Honored with Army Superior Unit Award

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

Soldiers of the 283rd Army Band have added a new award to their uniforms. Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley, commanding general, presented the band with the Army Superior Unit Award in a ceremony Aug. 5.

The ASUA is awarded during peacetime for "outstanding meritorious performance of a difficult and challenging mission carried out under extraordinary circumstances." The award was established in 1985 by then Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr.

The 283rd Army Band, better known as The Infantry Center Band, earned the award for their efforts between October 2003 and October 2004, when they performed more missions than they had in any of the previous five fiscal years while critically short of personnel.

Freakley joked with the band members before helping Chief Warrant Officer Daryl Vail, the band's director, attach the ASUA streamer to the guidon.

"For the past two years, I've tried to kill every one of you, Freakley said, speaking of the 673 missions the band completed during the period of the award. "I am proud of the Soldier musicians and this particular band — they have been absolutely remarkable."

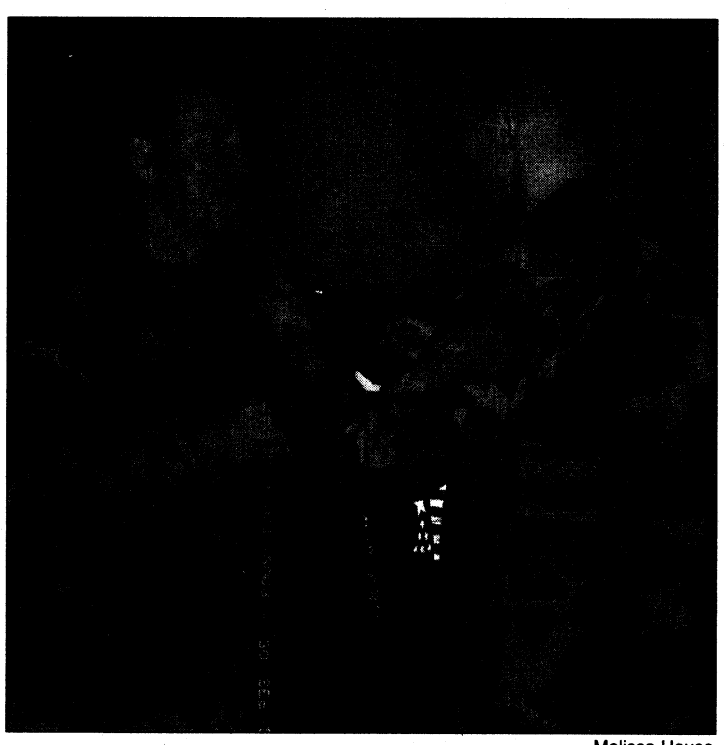
Freakley said he had received a phone call from a man who had never left California until he came to Fort Benning for his son's graduation.

"He said he was stunned by the pageantry and tradition the band brought to the ceremony," Freakley said. "Families have been won over to the Army by the band."

Another of the band's successes was increasing community and international relations, taking on community relations initiatives not normally associated with a band of its type, the citation read.

Freakley said the band performed "great concerts at Riverside, downtown and on recruiting trips" and some of the band's combos performed for international visitors.

He said a sergeant had found the music for "an obscure Hungarian folk song" and played it for a visiting Hungarian ambassador. Freakley said the man had a tear rolling down his face. "They're so much more talented than just the Army or Infantry songs."



The band members also trained for and certified the first convoy live-fire range at Fort Benning.

First Sergeant Wendy Thompson said the award was a tribute to the Soldiers who put in a lot of effort while the unit, like many others, was significantly undermanned.

"There are a lot of people wearing a lot of hats," she said. "This award is confirmation of a job well-done and the Soldiers deserve all the credit. They're making it happen every day."

Soldiers assigned to the band during the period of the award may wear the ASUA permanently. All others will only wear the award while assigned to the unit.

The first unit to received the ASUA was the 3rd Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment from Fort Campbell, Ky., after almost 200 Soldiers died in the 1985 plane crash in Gander, Newfoundland.

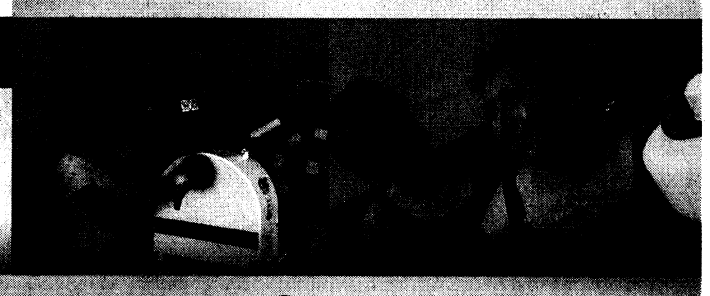
HUGHSTON Orthopedic Hospital

Bill Bowick, Retired Radio Personality

He played basketball in high school and college. As an adult, he routinely swam and worked out at the gym. When Bill's physical independence was threatened, he turned to the Rehabilitation Center at Hughston Orthopedic Hospital for therapy.

Great Expectations...



When you say, "I can't do any more." We say, "Yes, you can." And you do, because your recovery is the focus of all our efforts. We think that's why we're ranked number one in patient satisfaction among HCA hospitals nationwide.* And we know that's why over 90% of Hughston rehab patients return home with a higher level of function.

Extraordinary Outcomes.

Today, Bill has regained his former independence. He's back at the gym, swimming 500 yards at a time. To find out more about the Rehabilitation Center at Hughston Orthopedic Hospital, call our admissions coordinator at 706.494.6087.

Twin trainees mean double trouble for basic training

Brothers make military a family thing

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Kris Gonzalez

Pvt. David Cotterill, left, and his twin brother, Pvt. Daniel Cotterill, check inside their BDU soft caps to make sure they have the correct cap.

When Sgt. 1st Class Brian Forshee arrived for his first day as drill sergeant in second platoon, he thought he was seeing double.

As he tried to become familiar with the faces of the troops in D Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, who had just embarked on their second week of training and were learning to fire M16 rifles at the range, he didn't realize he would be dealing with twins.

"I met one of them and told him to do something," Forshee said. "When his brother walked by later, I yelled, 'Private, I thought I told you do do something.' He said to me, 'That was my brother, Drill Sergeant."

Forshee said it took him about two days before he could distinguish 17-year-old Pvt. Daniel Cotterill from his older brother (by three minutes), Pvt. David Cotterill.

"One's taller than the other," Forshee said, "and of course, they have different roster numbers."

At six feet two inches, David stands one inch taller than his younger brother.

The twins said their classmates at Markesan High School in Markesan, Wis., had an easier time telling them apart, because David wore braces for two years but had them taken off just before arriving at Fort Benning.

"Everyone has trouble telling us apart at first," David said. "But as they get to know us, it gets easier."

Forshee said other than getting the typical jokes, the twins, also known as "Doublemint" or "Pete and Repeat," are just like any other Soldiers.

"Their PT scores are relatively close," Forshee said. "One is not better at something than the other."

Though their abilities may be as similar as their faces, they say it's more than their identical features that make them stand out from the rest of the basic trainees.

They boast that they are two of the fastest runners in the company, with David running one mile at 5:07 minutes, and Daniel running it even faster, at 4:42.

"They're very competitive," said Vicki Cotterill, the twins' mother.

Vicki said she was excited when her only sons told her they were joining the service, until "reality set in," and she realized they could one day be "shipped off" to another country and "might never come back."

"I've been having a hard time with it," Vicki said. "I'm not happy about it, but I support them."

The twins' father died after suffering injuries in a snowmobile accident when the boys were 12 years old.

Vicki has been raising them and their two sisters alone ever since.

"Twins are very special," Vicki said. "They have a bond you wouldn't believe unless you could see it with your own eyes."

But Daniel and David said being a twin is no big deal.

"A lot of people wish they had a twin," Daniel said. "but it's just like having another brother."

And of course being a twin has its bad side as well as its good.

"You have to share everything," Daniel said.

The brothers said their mom would dress them alike and buy them the same things, just in different colors.

Now they're wearing identical battle dress uniforms and marching to the same cadence.

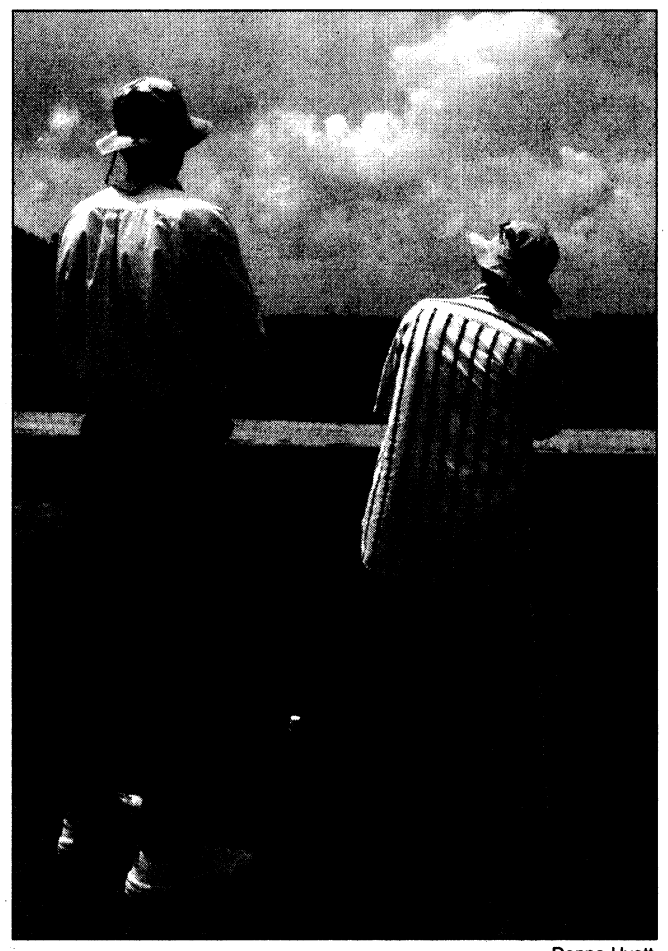
They were happy they could go into basic training under the buddy system, because "they'll get to bunk together and do the same things," Vicki said.

Both Daniel and David enlisted for six years in the National Guard through the Army's Split-Training Option, which allows them to complete basic training during the summer of their junior year, and complete advanced individual training after high school.

Each will receive a $10,000 bonus, $60,000 from the Montgomery G.I. Bill, and an extra $7,000 in college money because they scored above average on the Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery.

To get shipped together, they both signed up to become light-wheeled mechanics. But after basic, Daniel wants to change his military occupational speciality to Infantryman.

That means when Daniel returns to Fort Benning and David travels to Fort Jackson, S.C., for AIT, the brothers will be separated for the first time in their lives.



"That's why there are phones," David said.

"Besides, it's not like we'll be gone forever," Daniel said.

And though they may not be able to communicate as often, their mother will continue to write them letters every few days.

"I'm always thinking of my boys," Vicki said. "They're so special."

Vicki will be visiting her boys at Fort Benning Aug. 31 for family day. The twins graduate basic training the following day.

The NASA family had more than the Space Shuttle Discovery's descent to look forward to Tuesday, as the daughter of a former senior astronaut descended from the sky over Fort Benning from a C-130 during her final week of Airborne School.

Only hours after Space Shuttle Discovery touched down at Edwards Air Force Base in California, retired Navy Capt. James D. Wetherbee, a veteran of six space shuttle flights, watched his daughter, Pvt. Kelly Wetherbee, touch down on Fryar Drop Zone. It was her second jump.

"She really likes rolling around the dirt and jumping out of airplanes. I've never jumped out of an airplane, and I don't intend to, either," Wetherbee said.

An astronaut since June 1985, Wetherbee first piloted the Space Shuttle Columbia in January 1990, before serving as Columbia's mission commander for another mission in the Fall of 1992.

He logged almost 1,600 hours in space and is the first American to command five space missions.

He also flew aboard the Discovery in 1995 and 2001, Atlantis in 1997 and the Endeavour in 2002, which was the first combined crew exchange and major assembly mission to visit the International Space Station, according to the NASA Web site.

PURCHASE THE BEST VALUE PREPAID CARD AT YOUR MILITARY EXCHANGE

AT&T Global PrePaid Cards offer low rates that are optimized for military personnel calling home to the U.S.

The 550-Unit AT&T Global PrePaid Card offers deployed soldiers the best value when calling to the U.S. from Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom — just 19¢ a minute when the Card is purchased at any OEF/OIF location. When purchased online or at other Exchange locations in the U.S. and around the world, it's just 21¢ a minute.*

★ Where can AT&T Global PrePaid Cards be purchased?
Buy yours at your local Exchange or online at www.aafes.com. Friends and family of military personnel can also purchase Cards for you at this site. When deployed in Iraq, Afghanistan and Kuwait, Cards can be purchased at the Exchange, where the price of the 550-Unit Card is just $35.

★ What's the difference between minutes and units?
When calling within the U.S., 1 unit equals 1 minute of calling. When making international calls from overseas, more units are used per minute of call time and the number of units is different based on the country you are calling from. For example, when using the 550-Unit Card, for calls made from OEF/OIF to the U.S., 1 minute equals 3 units of call time. So the 550-Unit Card is good for 183 minutes of calling. For information on other countries, just call the 800 Customer Service number on the back of your Card.

★ Optimized military rates. Great AT&T benefits:
- Minutes never expire.
- Low rates. Remember, prepaid cards bought at other retailers may have higher overseas rates.
- Recharge with AT&T Autominutes® and never run out of minutes.
- Toll free Customer Service available 24/7.
- INFO TO GO available† with weather, sports and more!

★ Visit Camp AT&T.
Before you're deployed, go to www.att.com/mil and check out the Camp AT&T section. It contains information on calling from all the forward-deployed areas, other overseas locations and from U.S. Naval ships.

AT&T

*A surcharge of at least 10 units/minutes (subject to increase) applies to pay phone calls. Units are based on U.S. domestic calling. International rates are higher than U.S. domestic rates, differ according to destination called and are subject to change. Rates may be higher for calls made to or from mobile phones. See Card for details. †Use of Info To Go information services will incur an additional charge to your Card balance. © 2005 AT&T. All four members of The Donnas were born in 1979. Originally called Ragady Anne, and later the Electrocutes, the group professionally recorded their first song in 1995. The Donnas broke into the Top 100 pop chart with their album Spend the Night in 2002, and first appeared on MTV in 2003 with their video Take It Off.

More than 3,000 Soldiers, including basic trainees, attended the concert Aug. 6 at Wetherby Field.

Although he'd never heard of The Donnas, Pvt. Jeremy Seider, a Soldier from E Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, enjoyed sweeping the rain off the stage. "It's something to do," Seider said. "It keeps me out of the bay and out of the woods."

There's nothing like four hard-rocking girls on stage to fuel the frenzy of more than 3,000 Soldiers released from basic training for a night.

Or maybe it was the opportunity to escape the dull routine of another Saturday evening in front of the tube.

Whatever the reason, The Donnas were met by a most appreciative crowd Aug. 6th at Wetherby Field.

"I always like to see a good rock and roll show," said Donald Newbold, AAFES service station manager.

"We need more rock and roll concerts like this. So few of them come to Columbus," he said.

Already veterans of European and Japanese tours, as well as coast-to-coast concert gigs, The Donnas are headlining this year's Miller Lite Army Concert Tour, sponsored by the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"I've never heard The Donnas before," said Pvt. Donald Young, a Soldier from Delta Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment. "But that's okay. I like all music except glass-shattering opera."

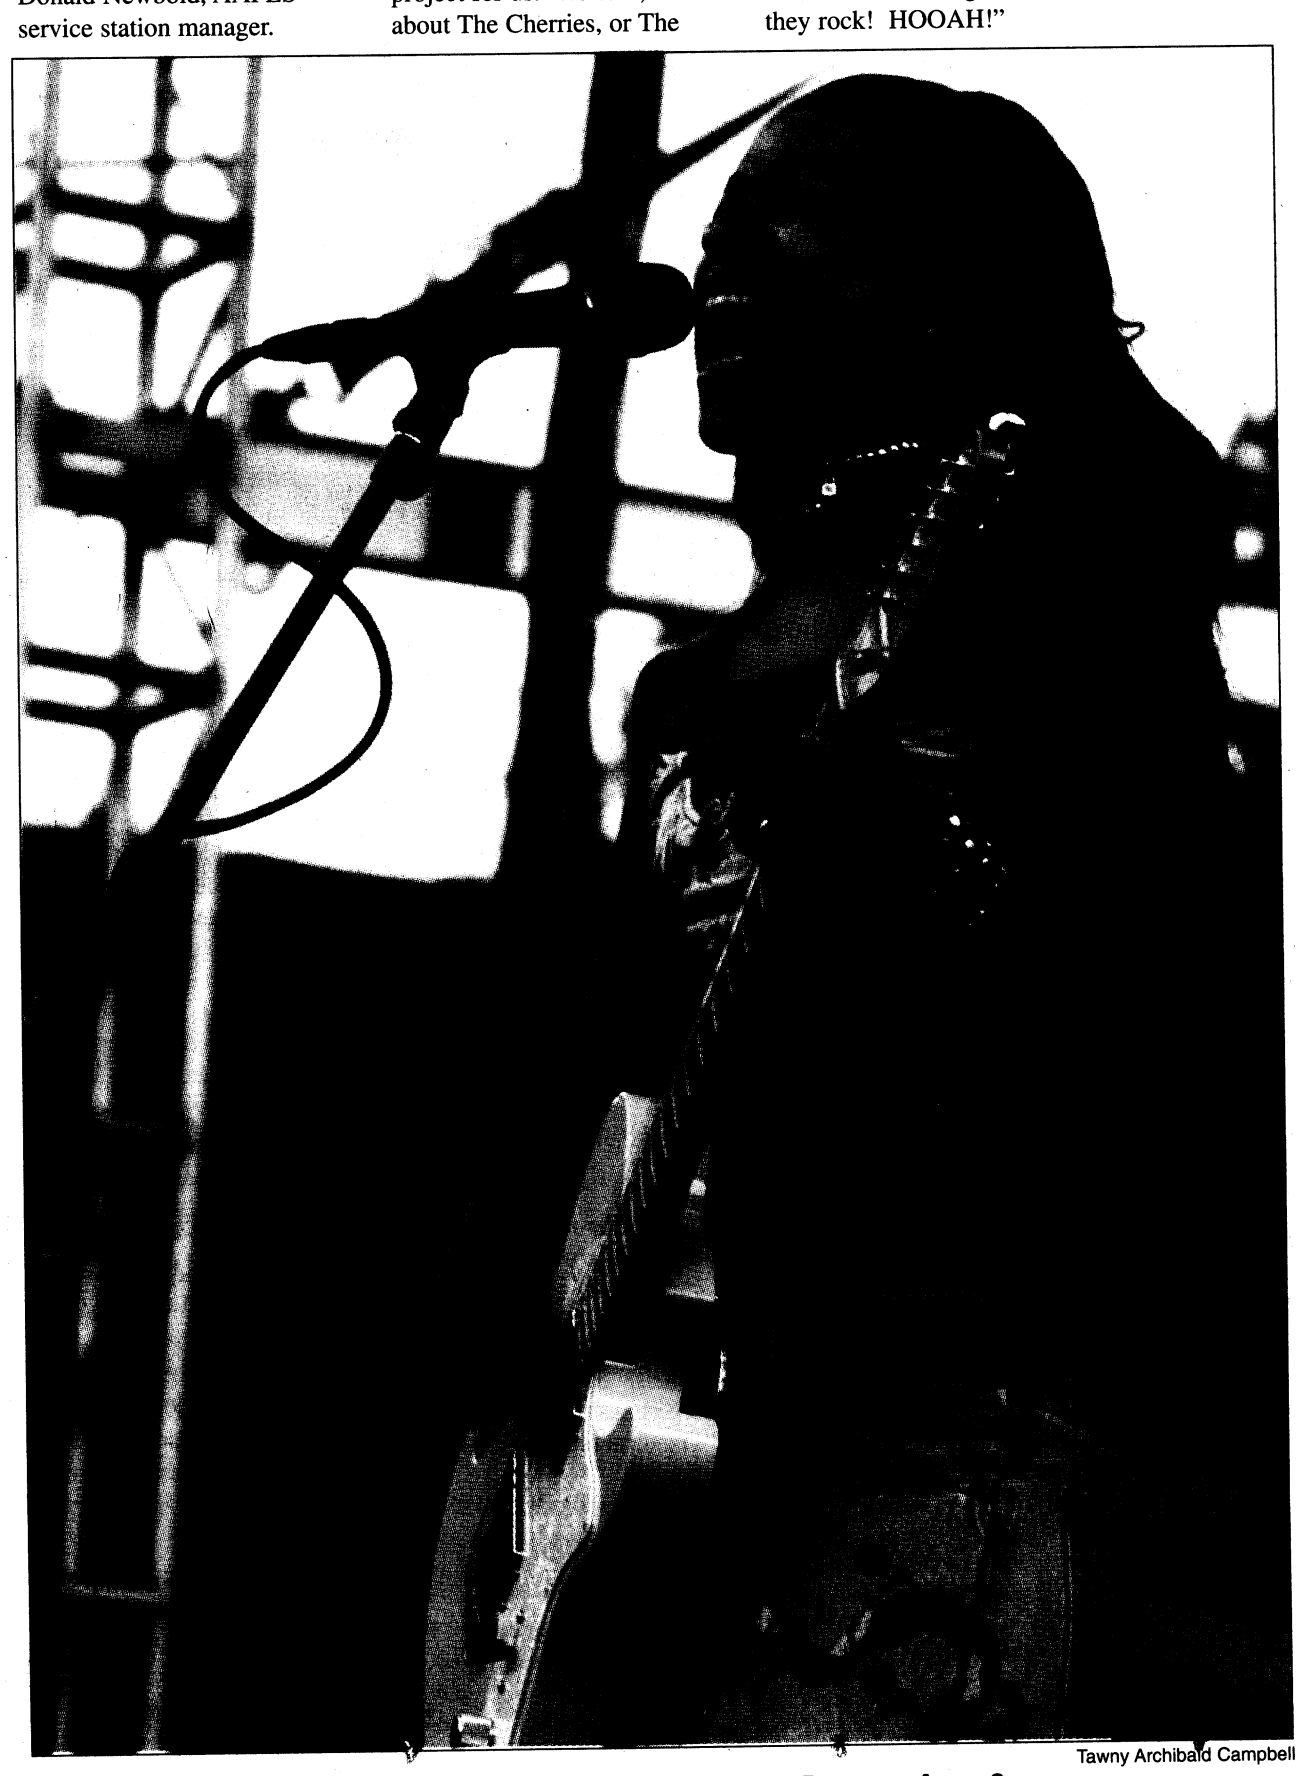
Originally from Palo Alto, Calif., The Donnas formed in 1993 when the four young women were in the eighth grade.

Donna Betencourt, a new resident of Columbus, wondered why they call themselves The Donnas.

"It was kind of a joke," said Donna F (Maya Ford), the group's bass player. "We had another band going at the time, and The Donnas were a side project for us. We said, 'How about The Cherries, or The Donnas,' and The Donnas was a lot better."

Despite intermittent rain and a muddy field, Soldiers and civilians braved the elements to hear the young ladies crank out their original music.

"There are people out there protecting our freedom," said lead guitarist Donna R (Allison Robertson).



"We've always wanted to support the people that have to go overseas and actually do the fighting, no matter how we feel about the politics behind everything," said drummer Donna C (Torry Castellano).

"It's cool to show that we're grateful," said lead singer Donna A (Brett Anderson).

"Everyone has opinions about the state of our country, but if (the Soldiers) didn't do their job, we couldn't do our job."

For some Soldiers, being freedom's protector took a temporary back seat to the girls of rock and roll.

"Are they single?" asked Pvt. Adam Rondon, Delta Company, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., and a temporary 'Donald' for the night. "I think they rock! HOOAH!"

ASK THE JUDGE

Capt. Stuart D. Alcorn
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Several times a week we see Soldiers who either feel they have been treated poorly in the process of buying a vehicle, or in the process of getting their vehicle repaired. These are the answers to the questions they often wish they had asked. I hope these answers will help you avoid some of the same problems.

Buying an automobile

Buying a car is a huge financial investment. In addition to the monthly payments, you must consider insurance, gas and maintenance. Consider the following before you buy a car.

1) Don't be convinced you can't afford a new car. First of all, interest rates are almost always cheaper on a new car than a used one. They can be as much as 10 percent cheaper or more. If you take the time to shop around, you can probably find a car or truck that suits your needs that you can afford.

Also, when you buy a new car, your maintenance costs are usually nothing more than regular oil changes for the first few years. When you balance that against costly repairs you may run into by buying an older car, a new car could be much cheaper in the long run.

2) Don't buy more than you can afford. Your total outlay on a vehicle should be no more than one-third of your take-home pay. One-quarter is better. This amount includes the monthly payment, insurance and gas. Always remember debt is a sneaky enemy that can have you drowning before you know it. One of the first mistakes a new Soldier often makes is buying a car that takes up over half of his or her take-home pay.

3) Before you buy a car, always check with the credit union here on post and your bank for a car loan. If you qualify, you can almost always get a better interest rate than you will from a used car dealer. Even if you are buying a new car, shop around for the best interest rate you can find. Try to get at least three offers.

Also, if you can save up for a down payment of five to 10 percent of the total price, it will usually result in a better interest rate and reduce your monthly payment.

4) Always shop around for car insurance. Ask your first sergeant or anyone else who has been in the military for several years. There is at least one insurance company who caters to service members and their rates are among the best. We can't recommend them by name, but your senior leadership should be able to square you away.

5) Sometimes leasing can be a good option. With a lease, you still make regular payments, but at the end of the specified amount of time, you have the option of turning in the keys and walking away. If you decide to lease a car, bring the contract in to let us look at it and explain any potential problems we see.

6) Finally, don't give in to the temptation to trade in your car once you pay it off. The real trick to car buying is making interest work for you. By saving the money you had been paying on your monthly note for one year, you'll be able to make a huge down payment on your next car. Do this two or three times and you will eventually be able to pick out the car you want and pay cash.

Automobile repairs

One of the most difficult problems Soldiers bring to the legal assistance office is when they feel they have been wrongly treated by a local auto mechanic. Here are some steps Soldiers should consider before having their vehicles repaired.

1) Whenever possible, utilize the DMWR auto shop here on post. Not only can you save some money by doing some of the work yourself, but here at Fort Benning, you can choose to have their mechanics do the work for you at prices competitive with any off-post shop. Most importantly, however, you are dealing with the DMWR, and you can have confidence you will be treated fairly.

2) If you choose to have your vehicle repaired off post, take the time to get an estimate from the new car dealer first. You may be surprised to find the dealership's price is competitive with the local garage down the street.

3) Ask around in your company or platoon and find out who has received good or bad service from a local mechanic.

4) No matter who you eventually choose to repair your car, be sure to get an estimate in writing before you authorize any repairs. Make sure the price they quote is an "out the door" price.

Sometimes a mechanic will try giving you a price that only covers the parts but not the labor cost. Those labor costs typically run from $50 to $75 per hour. If the mechanic tries to charge you more than the quoted estimate, do not pay it unless you are convinced that the amount covers a valid repair the mechanic could not have known about prior to giving the estimate.

5) Get a written warranty that covers the repair and spells out how many miles or how long the warranty is valid. Ask about this before you authorize the repairs and if a mechanic is unwilling to give a written warranty, go somewhere else.

6) If you have a dispute with a mechanic you can not resolve, don't get into a confrontation over it — just come see us. We can try to negotiate with the mechanic but if you have already called him a dirty, rotten, lying, cheating, no good scoundrel, then you will have made our efforts much more difficult.

Remember, our job at the JAG office is to help the Soldier. If you feel you have been treated poorly by a dealer or mechanic, come see us right away. But if you will follow these suggestions, your chances of having a problem will be much less.

Country's crew invites Soldiers to run in Midnight Express

Annual event profits visually impaired

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

A Fort Benning Soldier lost an eye when an IED exploded in Iraq Sunday. No doubt, his 3rd Brigade buddies will be thinking about him when they run the Midnight Express later this month. Proceeds from the event will benefit the visually impaired.

The Country's Barbecue Midnight Express 5K run will start at midnight Aug. 27 at the restaurant on Mercury Drive, off Macon Road in Columbus. More than 2,000 runners, including 70 who are visually impaired, are expected to participate in the 25th annual event, which raised more than $30,000 last year.

Halfway around the world, at Forward Operating Base Warhorse in Iraq, 3rd Brigade Soldiers will take part in the event at 8 a.m. their time. They will be broadcast live at the site of the race in Columbus.

Fort Benning Soldiers have been a part of the event since its inception, said Scott Ressmeyer, owner and manager of the Mercury Drive restaurant. But their participation abroad takes the partnership to a new level.

"We're pretty excited about it. We hope to see family members show up here to run with their Soldiers over there," Ressmeyer said. "The idea is to get everyone involved."

The event, free to Soldiers in Iraq, raises money through registration fees, a motorcycle poker run and the sale of food. Local bands will perform and representatives from Sprint will be on hand to help family members place free phone calls to their deployed Soldiers.

No alcohol will be served, said Ressmeyer said, who expects more than 4,000 people to attend. They'll begin arriving about 8 p.m. Auburn Avenue and Mercury Drive will be blocked off for the event, which will end about 2 a.m.

Parking, Ressmeyer said, is "pretty much anywhere you can."

Registration for the poker run is $20 up until the start of the event, which will begin at 6 p.m. at Chattahoochee Harley Davidson on Fortson Road. Participants will receive three poker hands, a T-shirt and a meal. Tickets can be purchased at Country's on Mercury Drive or online at www.countrysbarbecue.com.

Runners can also visit the restaurant or the Web site to register for the 5K. The cost — $18 until Aug. 25 and $20 after — includes a T-shirt and a meal.

The public is also invited to attend a free exhibition fastpitch softball game between sponsors of the event and a local blind team at 7 p.m. Aug. 26 at Columbus State University. The game is free, but proceeds from concessions will go toward the sponsors' goal of raising $30,000 again this year.

For more information on any of the events, call 366-4416.

- Money raised at the Midnight Express will go to local charities and organizations that support the visually impaired.
- The money from previous events helped purchase a VIP Gold Ventilator for a local hospital in the name of Sara Shultis, the daughter of a former Fort Benning Soldier, Lt. Col. Dean Shultis. Babies like Sara, born prematurely, can suffer retina damage from the oxygen inside the ventilator.
- The ventilator regulates the flow of oxygen to alleviate this problem.

Volunteers offer free CPR classes

Technique can buy time, save lives

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

When a person has a heart attack, the heart quivers rapidly, breathing ceases and blood stops flowing through the body.

At this point, the patient is clinically dead, according to the National Institutes of Health.

In an effort to reduce sudden cardiac arrest, the Columbus Heart Safe City volunteer organization is holding four free cardiopulmonary resuscitation classes Saturday at Saint Luke United Methodist Church in Columbus.

"CPR buys time until the heart can be defibrillated or shocked back to normal," said Jo McDaniel, a volunteer with Heart Safe City.

McDaniel would know. When her husband went into cardiac arrest in 1997, it was the quick thinking and CPR administered by her son that saved his life.

According to the NIH, more than 460,000 people die outside the hospital from cardiac arrest every year.

"Cardiovascular disease is the leading cause of death in America and kills more people annually than cancer, HIV or automobile accidents combined," said Shannon Stephens, clinical research coordinator for the University of Alabama at Birmingham, Department of Emergency Medicine.

"A large number of these deaths are caused by sudden cardiac arrest," she said.

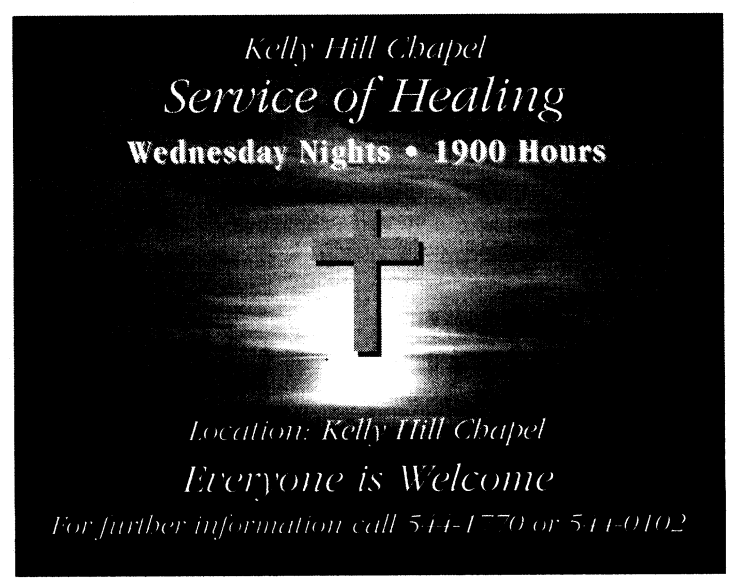
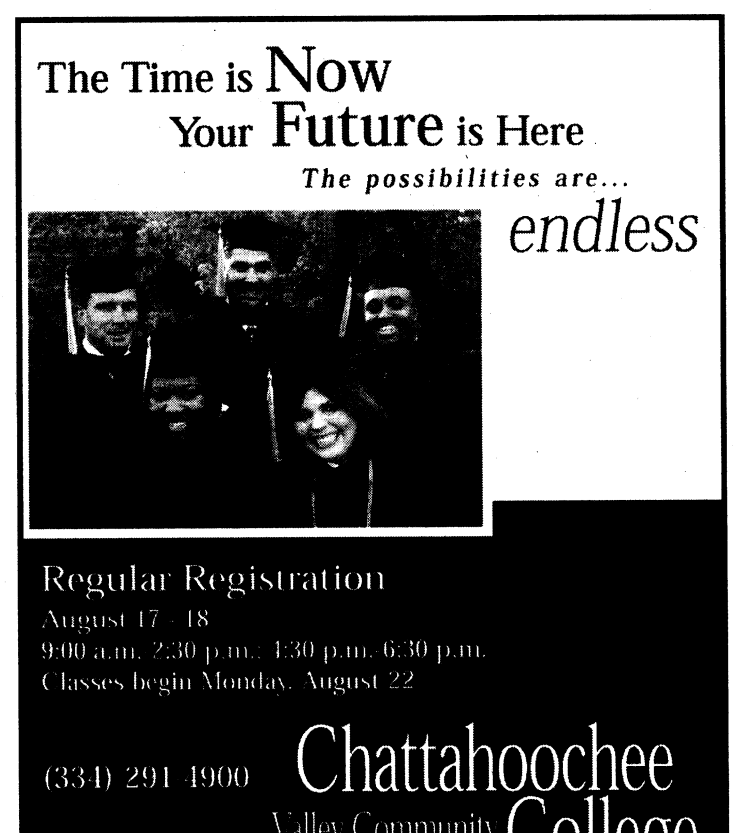
Mike Higgins, a volunteer with the Columbus Fire and Emergency Medical Service, said he's hoping for one thousand people to show up and take this course. He urges people to pre-register by calling Sandee Olson at 256-1017. Walk-ins will be welcome on a space-available basis.

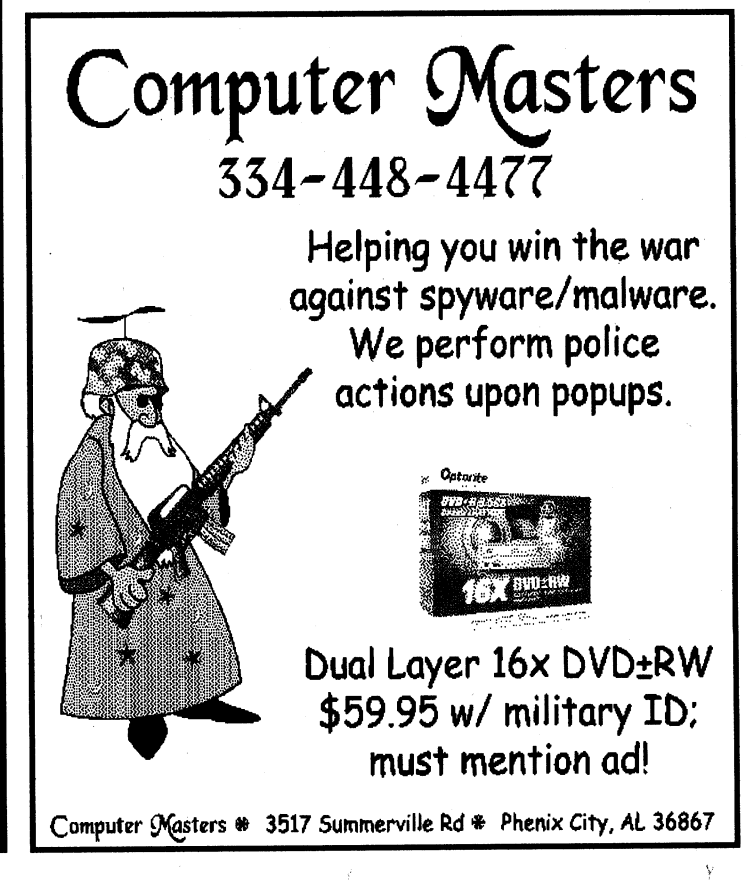
The free, two-hour classes are not a certification course, but will cover the basics of CPR.



Saint Luke United Methodist Church ministries center is located at the corner of 301 Eleventh Street and Third Avenue.



Classes will be at 8 a.m., 10 a.m., noon and 2 p.m.



Artist recreates Benning history

Pate to sign posters at Donovan Library

Tawny Archibald Campbell
Bayonet staff

Martin Pate has always had an interest in the military.

As a young boy, some of his first drawings were of Soldiers and Army scenes. That passion for art and the military has helped inspire five paintings highlighting Soldiers and the rich military heritage of Fort Benning.

"My brother and I were always drawing Soldiers, Indians and superheroes," Pate said.

"I never seriously considered any other career than art. Bringing (historical) sites to life combines my love of painting and a keen interest in history while also serving as a great mechanism to teach and educate."

Four of the latest Fort Benning posters will be available to the public at a poster signing from 10 a.m. to noon Monday at Donovan Library in Infantry Hall.

The posters include: Gowdy Field 1925, D Company 24th Infantry Regiment 1926, Lawson Field 1932 and Eubanks Field — Jump Towers 1943.

Pate's paintings, scenes of Fort Benning from the 1920s to 40s, are part of a joint project between the National Park Service and the Environmental Directorate.

Three other paintings were previously commissioned and included a painting of Doughboy Stadium in 1925.

"Martin Pate has worked for us before," said Dr. Christopher Hamilton, of the Environmental Directorate.

"There are now seven posters. He did the first three some years ago and this is a new batch."

Hamilton said the purpose of the posters is to help "increase public awareness and educate people on the cultural and historic properties on Fort Benning."

Pate started painting the last four paintings about two years ago, under the guidance of the National Park Service and Hamilton.

Hamilton said he gave both Pate and the park service topics to base the paintings on. Research was then done to make sure the paintings were as historically accurate as possible.

Hamilton said he tried to find scenes that would help people better understand what the original post was like.

"The point of all this is that the installation is composed of people, and what we have here is a community," Hamilton said. "Fort Benning has performed as a home for numerous families since its inception, and in order to function, each community has to have its own amenities.

"These paintings show that Fort Benning isn't just a place for Infantry training.

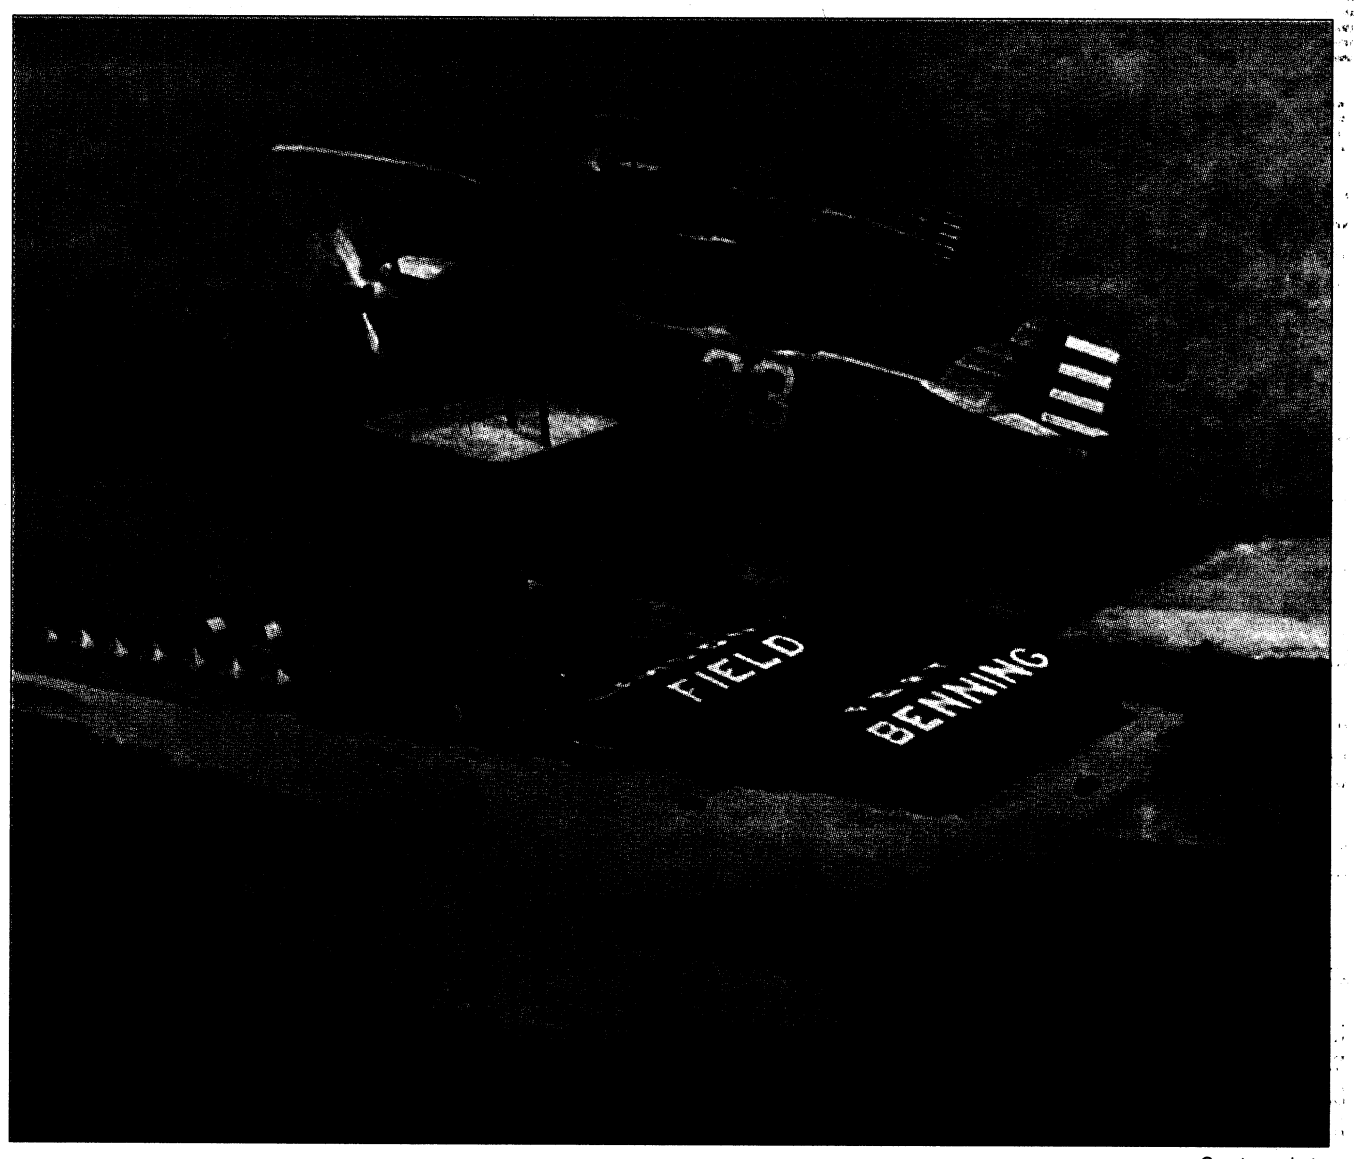
It's a place where people live and it has the full life range of activities that people need. (The posters), in a way, help soften the image of the military."

Pate said it has been exciting to learn about the history of the post and its people as he has researched for his paintings.

For instance, he learned that during the big "mini World Series" played at Gowdy Field in 1925, there was no covering over the bleachers, so he had to revise his painting to make it more historically accurate.

Also, there had to be a revision of his painting of the jump towers. In the original painting it showed Gen. Omar Bradley standing off to the side looking at the towers.

After some research Pate discovered Bradley left Fort Benning before the towers were built and there are no records that he ever came back while the towers were in use, so he had to remove the likeness of Bradley and replace it with a likeness of the general who was at Fort Benning when the towers were built.



Pate said he hopes as people look at his work, they will remember history and gain pride in the legacy of Fort Benning.

"When people see a painting it adds an air of importance to that time period and area," Pate said.

"It helps educate the public to what has happened and show then how things may have looked."

There will be 350 of each of the four newest posters available at the signing. The posters are free to the public. The original paintings will be on display in the library during the signing.

For more information contact the library at 545-8591.

Martin Pate will be signing his "Lawson Airfield 1935" poster, along with three others, from 10 a.m. to noon Monday at Donovan Library. The posters are a joint effort between Fort Benning's Environmental Directorate and the National Park Service. About 350 of each poster will be available to the public at no charge.

Chaplains graduate

Program helps units meet religious needs

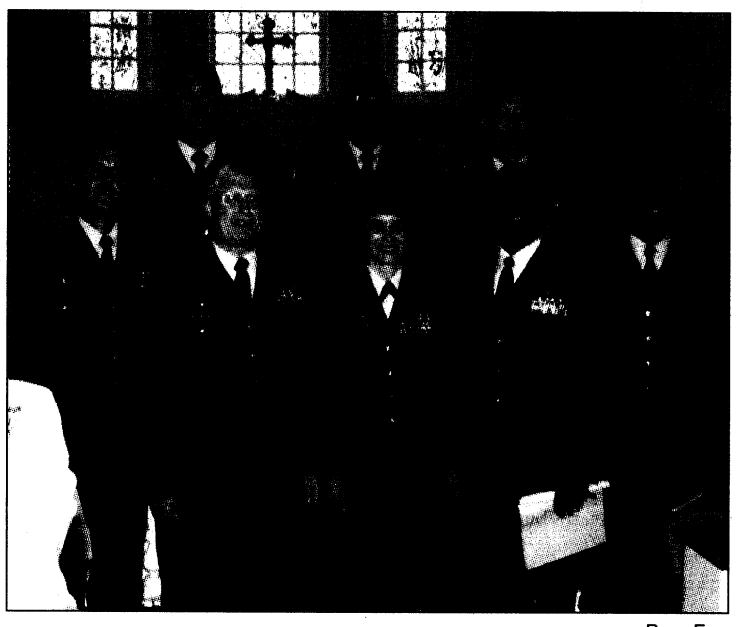
In a ceremony noted for the diversity and qualification of its participants, the United States Army Chaplain Family Life Training Program welcomed the seven members of its class of 2005 into the ranks of those chaplains who will join Army and Air Force units from Alaska to Italy, and from Louisiana to Germany Aug. 4.



In ceremonies at the U.S. Army Infantry Center Chapel, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Thomas C. Waynick, director of the program, hailed this initiative as a tremendous service, and described how it meets the needs of our warriors and their families at this crucial time when we are a nation at war, and when Soldiers and family members face the stress placed upon them by extended deployments.

Each of the graduates was awarded a Master of Science degree in community counseling.

This Chaplains' training program represents a long-standing cooperative effort between Columbus State University, the Pastoral Institute and Fort Benning. Representatives of all three agencies joined in congratulating the graduates on their achievement.

Dr. Michael L. Baltimore, professor, Department of Counseling, Educational Leadership, and Professional Studies, CSU, pointed out that the program is nationally accredited and that each student had successfully completed the National Counselors Examination.

He also stressed that they are now qualified to both conduct family counseling themselves and to pass on what they have learned by supervising the counseling performed by others not already accredited by the program.

Dr. Ronald E. King, Executive Director and CEO of the Columbus-based Pastoral Institute, discussed the importance of theological integration in family counseling and praised the Institute's close ties to Fort Benning, citing the 10-year program of working with family life chaplains.

King reminded the graduates that the program had first been suggested a decade ago, during a visit by the Army Chief of Chaplains to Fort Benning.

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins, himself a Fort Benning Family Life Chaplain and a former Armor officer, had recently served at the Office of the Chief of Chaplains and had been involved in the selection of chaplains for this program.

He pointed out that the need for family life chaplains was never greater than it is today, when America is at war, family members are deployed around the globe, and the moral foundations of our nation are being challenged from many sides.

Hawkins cautioned the graduates that they may face limited support, even less recognition, and experience frustration, but that they are touching lives and making a difference.

The guest speaker, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Glenn S. Davis, USAIC Command Chaplain, summarized the intent and requirements of the program which the seven graduates had successfully completed.

The 15-month program of study and hands-on instruction included theological integration, demanding academic requirements, and enhancement of therapeutic skills.

The participants also completed a total of 3,200 hours of clinical work in addition to their classroom instruction and research projects.

Davis added that these graduates have met the goal of being able to offer our armed forces and family members world-class counseling.

Fort Benning's family life training program, and a similar program at Fort Hood, Texas, train comparable numbers of chaplains each year, and in 10 years, have sent forth approximately 120 well-qualified and highly motivated chaplains to meet the needs of America's service members and their families.

Dear MR. Wood,
A Couple of Weeks ago We Came To your Place of business With What We Thought was a Transmission Problem. We were expecting To maybe even have To have you so into The transmission at an expensive repair bill. When you drove The Car + Told us it was a Fuse We were so relieved! When you didn't even charge us a dime we were even more surprised. As we Left We looked at The Cards you gave us + we began To see. We were dealing With a Christain. How wonderful To know There are still People Like you IN This World of doubt + mistrust. We have told everyone We know about This incident. We were Stranded Away From home. you could have taken advantage of us + we wouldn't even have known. Thank you so much For your kindness.

REFLECTIONS

Now that the renovations have been made and I have returned to my original office space, I have a window once again.

The view is much better most days, but today it is hot, sticky and overcast — not the type of summer day I would have hoped for.

I would like some sunshine and about 75 degrees (with no humidity), but the weatherman will not cooperate.

Your thoughts and hopes for summer may be different than mine, but we can all agree each of us experiences the same kind of yearnings for a better day, no matter the season.

This is because hope is an integral part of our well being. We must have something to believe in, to anticipate and long for.

On a muggy day like today, as I said, I'm hoping for sunshine (and no humidity), yet I know that the rain is necessary for trees and plants (as well as the growth of my needing-to-be-mowed lawn).

As you read these words, the weather may have cleared. It may be a picture-perfect day, and there actually may be lower humidity.

I hope so.

But, the season or weather of our hearts and life may, from time to time, be cloudy, sunny or in between.

My life is typically "partly cloudy, with a chance of storms" on most days. But I am amazed at how God's people are able to discover hope when circumstances appear to dictate otherwise.

Contentment and joy have never truly been about circumstances, money, possessions or even health.

St. Paul, who knew true suffering and defeat as well as great victory, gives us these words as God inspired him:

"I have learned how to be content, whether I have much or have little. I know how to live on almost nothing or with everything. I have learned the secret of living in every situation, whether it is with a full stomach or empty, with plenty or little. For I can do everything with the help of Christ who gives me the strength I need." (Philippians 4:11)

And, as the writer of the old hymn assures us, "My hope is built on nothing less than Jesus' blood and righteousness."

Well, there you have it — the only place where true hope is found: Jesus.

I too will continue to yearn for beautiful weather, good health, security for myself and my family and the quick and safe return of all of our Soldiers.

But true, lasting hope is found only in the Lord, who offers salvation and victory over death.

May you discover this hope, built upon, "The fertile soil of God's Word; Watered by the Living Water, Jesus; Nourished by the presence of His Spirit." Amen!

What being R-E-A-L is all about

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

Don't you love just being around people who are "real?" People you can trust? People you can believe in?

Think back on a time when that little b.s. (that does not stand for bible study) meter down deep inside you went off in the midst of a conversation.

Why is that? Why do we begin to feel uncomfortable? The buzzer goes off because we've been hardwired to seek authenticity in our relationships — we want to be around people who are "real."

Now being "real" doesn't mean being abrasive. A lot of times we confuse "telling it like it is," in a spirit that is destructive, not constructive, with being authentic.

It reminds me of the guy whose wife was about to have a birthday. She said, "I don't care what you get me, as long as it goes from zero to 200 fast!"

The next day she opened her garage door to find a gift-wrapped bathroom scale in the middle of the garage. I've been told they haven't found that man's body yet.

There's a difference between being real and being rough.

Hawkins

What is being real all about? Well, I enjoyed a wonderful message two weeks ago by Paige Paquette at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel that, literally, spelled it out in a very practical way. Let me share that with you. Paige said being R-E-A-L is all about:

• "R" — Being reliable. In order for somebody to connect with you, you've got to be reliable. If your family and co-workers were to rate you on a scale of one to 10 (one being absolutely unreliable, 10 being "my word is my bond"), how would you measure up? Consistency with people has a beauty all its own. Reliability builds trust, period.

• "E" — Being empathetic. What's empathetic? Empathetic is caring with your eyes and ears. I didn't use to care much with my eyes and ears. I was big on talking, but very short on engaging people and listening closely to what they said.

Isn't it amazing the people we often consider to be the most authentic are also the people who make eye contact with us and listen far more than they spout off? Empathy is essentially turbo-charged listening.

• "A" — Being accurate. Ever feel like the folks you talk with are amping up the story just to make it juicier ... padding their tale with details to make them look bigger, better, brighter, smarter? I've certainly been tempted to do that.

But think about who folks go to in a crisis. Think about who people respect when integrity is what's needed. It's folks who don't inflate, but accurately relate. Accuracy is a mark of character.

• "L" — Being loving. You can shoot straight as an arrow. You can be as accurate as an atomic clock. But if you're not loving in the way you work with people, it all adds up to zero.

Love is the bridge that we all walk across to get to each other. People who are real are always people who are loving.

Name the most authentic person you know. They're loving, aren't they? Love is the glue that keeps hearts together when circumstances would pull them apart.

Want some more ideas on how to be more R-E-A-L in your life? The chaplains at the Family Life Center at Building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza, 545-1760, are here to help you any way that we can. Or come see me at CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel at 11 a.m. Sundays on Kelley Hill.

Nebraska rocks in Tommy Lee Goes to College

Motley Crue drummer Tommy Lee, a 42-year-old, twice-divorced father of two who's had run-ins with the law, would like people to know that there's more to him than sex, drugs, tattoos and rock 'n' roll.

"I always say that misconception is my worst enemy," said Lee, the former husband of Heather Locklear and Pamela Anderson.

"Just from my previous marriages to my band, all that stuff, people get these little blips of information about you, whether they're good or bad. There's tabloids, this or that. A lot of people judge you on what they know about you, and they know so little.

"They don't know me. So I'm hoping that through the TV show, I make a whole lot of new friends, because I'm actually a really cool guy. Not a lot of people know that. They think I'm some crazy, tattooed, madman rocker, and I'm like, 'Come on, guys.' "

In the interests of showing this other side of himself — and getting a good shot of network — TV exposure to coincide with the release of his new album, Tommyland: The Ride — Lee stars in a six-episode reality series Tommy Lee Goes to College, premiering Tuesday on NBC. He also wrote the theme song.

Lee attended a semester of classes at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, home of the Cornhuskers, but, as explained in the show's disclaimer, Lee was "not an enrolled student at UNL."

"I'm not sure what that decision was," Lee said. "Obviously, we were there to make a TV show, so we basically bum-rushed the university. I attended a full semester, so that I could be tested and all that."

Lee, who's a producer on the show, and executive producers Eddie October (who also directed), BT, Richard Bishop and Brad Wyman, ultimately chose UNL because it would put Lee in unfamiliar territory.

"If we were to do it in L.A. or Miami," Lee said, "people would be like, 'Oh, there's Tommy.' But in Middle America, Lincoln, Nebraska., when I arrived, people were tripping out. That's really what we wanted. We wanted it to be out of control."

Lee's been in the rock 'n' roll business since high school, living the freewheeling lifestyle that goes with it.

One might expect he'd roar into the university, throwing his celebrity weight around and causing trouble.

Shockingly, Lee was affable, easygoing and polite, especially in his meeting with university Chancellor Harvey Perlman, who takes a no-nonsense approach to his new student.

"Oh my God," Lee said, "I was freaking out. One of my favorite parts was where he said, 'You know Tommy, we do know a little bit about your history,' and I was like, 'Hopefully not too much of it.' I was like, 'What's this guy going to bring up next?' Did you notice all those awkward, silent moments? They were genius. You could hear when my throat would go, 'Urp.' I got read the riot act.

"But I tell my kids, mostly nobody will turn their backs on you if you're always polite and courteous."

Lee found an off-campus roommate in political science and philosophy student Matt Ellis, who graduated from UNL in December 2004 and now works as an administrative aide to Nebraska State Sen. Deb Fischer.

"He's a smart cookie, that kid," Lee said. "He does play a little guitar, and he's a music fan, so we got along on a musical level. As things progressed during my stay there, he really helped me to stay focused, because there was a lot of studying to do. So Matt and I got along really great. He's a great kid."

Tommy Lee is the subject of the unscripted series Tommy Lee Goes to College, premiering Tuesday on NBC.

Among Lee's classes was chemistry. He was soon way out of his depth (he thought he'd get lab time, but instead wound up mired in mathematics), so his academic adviser, bow-tied physics professor Tim Gay, recommended a tutor.

Little did Lee know that his tutor would be beautiful, blond pre-med student Natalie Riedmann.

"It was really difficult," Lee said, "because she's so pretty, and I'm trying to pay attention. She's supersmart. She did get through to me.

"She actually helped me not so much with chemistry, but with study habits, word associations, certain little drills that would help me remember test answers.

"But as far as chemistry goes, I can't divulge how it would turn out, but let's just say it gets a little crazy."

In hopes of not feeling on the brink of failure all the time, Lee also tried some things he thought he'd be good at — like reliving his high-school days by trying out as a drummer for the Cornhusker marching band.

The Great Raid — Set in the Philippines in 1945, The Great Raid tells the true story of the 6th Ranger Battalion, under the command of Lt. Col. Henry Mucci (Benjamin Bratt) who undertake a daring rescue mission against all odds.

Traveling 30 miles behind enemy lines, the 6th Ranger Battalion aims to liberate more than 500 American prisoners of war from the notorious Cabanatuan Japanese POW camp in the most audacious rescue ever.

Also starring James Franco, Connie Nielsen and Joseph Fiennes.

The Great Raid is rated R for strong war violence and brief language.

Four Brothers — Four adopted brothers come together to bury the woman who raised them.

At the funeral, the brothers discover that their mother may have been murdered and they want revenge.

Starring Mark Wahlberg, Andre Benjamin, Tyrese Gibson and Garrett Hedlund.

Four Brothers is rated R for strong violence, pervasive language and sexual content.

Deuce Bigalow: European Gigolo — Deuce Bigalow (Rob Schneider) is seduced back to his unlikely pleasure-for-pay profession, when his former pimp (Eddie Griffin) is implicated in the murders of Europe's greatest gigolos.

Deuce must go back to work in order to clear his good friend's name. Along the way, he must compete against the powerful European Union of prosti-dudes and court another bevy of abnormal female clients.

Deuce Bigalow: European Gigolo is rated R for pervasive strong crude and sexual humor, language, nudity and drug content.

The Skeleton Key — Set largely in the dark backwoods just outside of New Orleans, The Skeleton Key stars Kate Hudson as Caroline, a live-in nurse hired to care for an elderly woman's (Gena Rowlands) ailing husband (John Hurt) in their home — a foreboding and decrepit mansion in the Louisiana delta.

Intrigued by the enigmatic couple and their rambling house, Caroline begins to explore the old mansion. Armed with a skeleton key that unlocks every door, she discovers a hidden attic room that holds a deadly and terrifying secret.

The Skeleton Key is rated PG-13 for violence, disturbing images, partial nudity and thematic material.

The Dukes of Hazzard — Set in present day, the story follows the adventures of good old boy cousins, Bo (Seann William Scott) and Luke (Johnny Knoxville) Duke, who with the help of their eye-catching cousin Daisy (Jessica Simpson) and moonshine running Uncle Jesse (Willie Nelson), try and save the family farm from being destroyed by Hazzard County's corrupt commissioner Boss Hogg (Burt Reynolds).

Their efforts find the Duke boys constantly eluding authorities in the General Lee, their famed 1969 Dodge Charger that keeps them one step ahead of sheriff Roscoe P. Coltrane (M.C. Gainey).

The Dukes of Hazzard is rated PG-13 for sexual content, crude and drug-related humor, language and comic action violence.

Sky High — When you're the son of the world's most legendary superheroes, The Commander (Kurt Russell) and Jetstream (Kelly Preston), there is only one school for you — Sky High, an elite high school with the responsibility of molding today's power-gifted students into tomorrow's superheroes.

The problem is that Will Stronghold (Michael Angarano) is starting with no superpowers of his own and, instead of joining ranks with the "Hero" class, he finds himself relegated to being a "Sidekick."

Sky High is rated PG for action violence and mild language.

Stealth — Deeply ensconced in a top-secret military program, three pilots struggle to bring an artificial intelligence program under control — before it initiates the next world war.

Starring Josh Lucas, Jessica Biel and Jamie Foxx.

Stealth is rated PG-13 for intense action, violence, brief strong language and innuendo.

Must Love Dogs — Sarah Hurlihy (Diane Lane), a divorced preschool teacher who has sworn off dating after a bad breakup, finds her family pushing her back into the dating world.

Her sister places a personal ad for her, declaring that anyone answering it "must love dogs," despite the fact that Sarah doesn't own a dog. When someone intriguing (John Cusack) responds to the ad, she decides to borrow her brother's dog, and plunge in.

Must Love Dogs is rated PG-13 for sexual content.

Hustle & Flow — Though DJay, a streetwise Memphis pimp, has always had a way with words, a gift long misused; this philosopher hustler lives a dead-end life at the fringes of society.

A chance encounter with an old friend, Key, spurs DJay:

If he's ever going to make his mark, it has to happen now.

Starring Ludacris, Anthony Anderson and Taryn Manning.

Hustle & Flow is rated R for sex and drug content, pervasive language and some violence.

THINGS TO DO

"Flying High" Circus today

Every summer since 1960, the Florida State University Flying High Circus has performed at Callaway Gardens.

The circus is made up of college students who train and perform as an extracurricular activity.

They entertain guests with trapeze acts, juggling routines, balancing acts, high wire walks and more.

The Flying High Circus will give its last performance today.

To visit the Flying High Circus Web Site, visit www.fsu.edu/~circus/. The Callaway Gardens Web site is www.callawaygardens.com.

Cool History Saturday-Sunday

Port Columbus Civil War Naval Center will present one of its most popular programs, Cool History, Saturday and Sunday.

Cool History programs take themes from Civil War naval history and bring them to life.

This is the museum's performance interpretation event where actors and staffers take the roles of individuals from famous naval events of the Civil War.

For more information, call 327-9798.

Second Sunday Program Sunday

Oxbow Meadows will present its Second Sunday program entitled, "Eat My Dirt: Earthworm Discovery" from 2 to 3 p.m. Sunday.

Kerry Smith, of the Alabama Cooperative Extension System at Auburn University, will uncover the a-maze-ing world of worms, from the biology of worms to how they compost the soil. It's a hands-on wormology class.

Cost is $1 per person.

Oxbow Meadows is located at 3535 South Lumpkin Road in Columbus.

For more information, call 687-4090 or visit http://oxbow.colstate.edu.

2nd Sunday Serenade Sunday

Nadine Coker, resident manager of the Stewart Community Home, will bring her guitar and songs to entertain at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Columbus Public Library.

This monthly serenade brings musicians and community together to explore this art.

For more information, call Patty Chamberlain at 243-2697.

Movies for adults Tuesday

Family Art Affair Aug. 21

Kids of all ages are invited to the Columbus Museum at 3 p.m. Aug. 21 to explore the King Bridge Biennial exhibition in the gallery and create a sculptural bridge using recycled materials.

Children must be accompanied by an adult.

The event is free.

For more information, call the Columbus Museum at 649-0713.

An Evening with George Guidall Aug. 23

George Guidall, the premier narrator for recorded books, will share some favorite stories from the more than 140 audio books he has narrated.

Join the Columbus Public Library at 7 p.m. Aug. 23 to meet and listen to this remarkable man.

Information on audiobooks will also be available.

For more information, call Patty Chamberlain at 243-2697.

Walk of Flags and Stones Tour Aug. 24

Take a guided tour at the Little White House Historic Site of this walkway lined with 51 state flags and stones.

Many diverse colors and formation make up these stones, making this an educational tour for those interested in geology as well as history.

Tickets are $4-$7.

The Little White House Historic Site is located at 401 Little White Road, one-quarter mile south of Warm Springs, Ga. on Hwy. 85 Alt-U.S. Hwy. 27 Alt.

For more information, call 655-5870.

Radical Reptiles Aug. 27

From scales to shells and jaws to claws, participants will learn what makes a reptile a reptile and which ones you are likely to encounter in your neighborhood.

The event will be at 7 p.m. Aug. 27 at FDR State Park.

For more information, call 663-4858.

Labor Day weekend celebration Sept. 2-4

Florence Marina State Park invites the public to the annual Labor Day weekend celebration Sept. 2-4.

There will be boat rides down the Chattahoochee River in the park's pontoon boat. Due to high fuel costs, a $1 donation is requested for boat rides, but crafts and games are free.

The park's pool will be open, so bring a picnic and spend the day.

Visitors are reminded that a $3 park fee will be required for each vehicle.

Florence Marina State Park is located 16 miles west of Lumpkin, Ga. on Hwy. 39C.

For more information, call Trena Evans, interpretative ranger, at (229) 838-4706.

Labor Day Fiddlers Contest Sept. 5

Westville's Fiddlers Contest offers the perfect 1850s setting for musicians and music lovers to show off their talents or to sit back and enjoy listening to skilled performers compete.

Westville, usually closed Mondays, will be open Sept. 5.

The youth fiddling begins at 11 a.m., and adult fiddling begins at 2 p.m.

Westville is located one mile south of Lumpkin, Ga.

Admission is $10 for adults, $8 for seniors, college students and military, $4 for students in kindergarten through 12th grade and $35 for a family membership.

For more information, call (888) 733-1850.

SPORTS

In 1963, baseball pitcher Gaylord Perry said, "They'll put a man on the moon before I hit a home run."
Neil Armstrong set foot on the moon on July 20, 1969.
Perry hit the first and only home run of his career just hours after Armstrong landed on the moon.

• Hoosier daddy?
Columbus, Ind. native Tony Stewart won the Allstate 400 at the Brickyard Aug. 7.
Tony also jumped into the points lead. Former points leader Jimmie Johnson falls to 75 points behind, Greg Biffle 111, Rusty Wallace 218 and Kurt Busch 277.

• PGA Championship
Catch Vijay Singh defending his title at the PGA Championship at Baltusrul Golf Club in Springfield, N.J. today at 1 p.m. on TNT and this weekend, 2 to 7 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday on CBS.
Can Tiger do it?

• Bertuzzi reinstated
Vancouver Canucks' right wing Todd Bertuzzi was reinstated to the NHL Aug. 8.
Bertuzzi punched Steve Moore and left him with a broken neck. He might never play again — he's now an unrestricted free agent.

• NFL HOF
Quarterbacks Dan Marino and Steve Young were inducted into the NFL Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, Aug. 7, along with running back and first African American coach Fritz Pollard and quarterback Benny Friedman.

• The Great One returns
Wayne Gretzky made his decision the night of Aug. 6 to be the new coach of the Phoenix Coyotes. Since not many of us even missed hockey last season, maybe this will breathe some life into hockey again.

• NASCAR race
This weekend's race is the Sirius Satellite Radio at the Glen at Watkins Glen International. Stewart won last year.
Coverage begins at 1p.m. Sunday on NBC.

Golfers to tee off in long drive contest

There are still six slots yet to be filled for the Fort Benning Long Drive Championships in September.

On Aug. 25, golfers will have their final chance to qualify for the championships.

"This is the first time we have ever done this," said Ray Meredith, Follow Me Golf Course superintendent.

"We are always looking at ways to do things a little different and we were looking at things we could do to bring in a little variety and excitement."

Since the PGA tour has a long drive contest every year, Meredith thought it might be something they could try.

"We wanted to do something like they do," he said. "And, everyone likes to see someone who can hit (the ball) a mile."

Meredith had planned on having five qualifications, one each month, starting in April. However, due to some miscommunication, the qualification in July wasn't held, leaving six qualification spots open in August.

"The one in August is going to be the best one to qualify in," Meredith said, "because we are taking more golfers.

"Bring your driver and we will supply the golf balls."

Golfers wanting to participate need to pay $5 for every three shots, and they can take as many shots as they want to pay for to qualify.

"Once they qualify they are done paying," Meredith said.

He also said golfers who didn't qualify in earlier rounds can come back and try again.

Participants will tee off around 6 p.m. on the 18th fairway and will hit from the green back up the fairway, Meredith said.

Drives will be measured using a GPS and grid system.

The top 15 finalists will compete following the Sept. 29 Commanding General's Scramble.

The winner will receive a trophy and a two night's stay at the Destin, Fla., Recreation Area.

"During the finals everybody starts out the same," Meredith said.

"Scores will not include previous hits. Whoever hits the furthest on that day will be the winner."

Both civilians and Soldiers are encouraged to participate in the contest, which Meredith hopes to make an annual event.

The best drives so far include: Romeo Victorio, 347 yards; John Osbourne, 317 yards; and Mike Novak, 310 yards.

For more information, call the Follow Me Golf Club at 689-5584.

Jason Cowman, 63rd Engineers, touches first base just after Jeffery Houston, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, tags the base sending Cowman back to the dugout. Second Battalion beat the Engineers,15-5, in intramural softball Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

2nd Battalion cruises to victory

With an early 5-0 lead, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, cruised to a 15-5 win over 63rd Engineers in intramural softball Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

In the first inning, 2nd Battalion took a commanding lead when Darrell Poling hit an in-the-park home run to bring in three RBIs.

Two other 2nd Battalion players came in to end the top of the first.

The Engineers managed to send two players across the home plate to pull within three runs, but during the third inning 2nd Battalion answered back with four more runs to the Engineers' two.

"They would score two and we would score two," said Floyd Koger, 2nd Battalion. "Every run they made we made it back plus some."

With no score during fourth inning, 2nd Battalion put the nails in the coffin during the fifth inning when they scored five runs, including an infield home run by Loman Evans.

The Engineers added one more run when Justin Stanten drove in Johnny Cobb. The final run of the game came when Lebron Upshaw hit an RBI, leaving the score 15-5.

"Everyone hit good and placed the ball where it needed to go," Koger said. "Overall it was an excellent game with excellent calls.

"Everyone was in sync and on the same sheet of music."

Jason Cowman, 63rd Engineers, said part of his team's problem was that they had some key people missing.

"We also made a couple of big errors and were not batting like we should have," Cowman said. "We did have a couple of outstanding plays in the field by our shortshop, Steven Showers. But, all around we could have played a lot better."

SPORT BRIEFS

ON POST

Army Ten-Miler tryouts — The Fort Benning Sports Department will hold the last chance to qualify for the Fort Benning Army Ten-Miler team at 7 a.m. Saturday.

More than 40 years ago, Grandma gave you Series E Savings Bonds. And you forgot about them—until now. You were cleaning out boxes of junk when you found a treasure... those old Series E Savings Bonds. Even though they're no longer earning interest, they could still be worth more than 5 times their face value. So why not redeem those old bonds at your local financial institution?

Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley relinquished command of The Infantry Center and Fort Benning to Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski Aug. 12 on York Field.

Lt. Gen. William Wallace, commander of the Army's Combined Arms Center at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., was the guest speaker at the ceremony, which included what he called a "who's who of Infantrymen."

Wallace acknowledged the efforts of the tricommunity in taking care of Fort Benning's Soldiers and their families and thanked the Soldiers on the field for "looking great" and "doing your commanders proud."

"Great work is accomplished every day by our young leaders," Wallace said. "What we have asked them to do in the past two years is simply incredible and they've delivered."

"There is nothing more important than trained and ready leaders and Soldiers, and Ben Freakley has delivered," Wallace said.

During Freakley's two years in command, Fort Benning has trained more than 113,000 men and

It's not so much an Army of One concept as it is One Army. The Army has revamped its officer instruction to resemble basic training.

Under a comprehensive initiative to transform the Officer Education System, all officers will be trained together as warriors — and trained to lead warriors — before they attend the courses that will define their military specialties.

"It's warrior first – Soldier first – then signal or Infantry or armor or whatever," said Maj. Kevin Elder, commander of A Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

"It was refreshing to see all these eager young lieutenants excited about training. They know they're going to war, and they were eating it up like biscuits and gravy. I believe they'll graduate from here more flexible and adaptive and ready for an everchanging battlefield."

Maj. Kevin Elder
A Co., 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

The regiment hosts the Basic Officer Leader Course Phase II, a seven-week, initial-entry, branch-immaterial course in small-unit leadership and tactics — the kind necessary to win a war being fought primarily by small units.

Soldier dies in car crash

MP volunteered for Iraq

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

A Fort Benning Soldier was killed Saturday when his car crashed into another on Alabama Highway 165 in Russell County.

Spc. Christopher Lee Vinson, 22, died shortly after 7 p.m. when the Toyota Celica he was driving hydroplaned into oncoming traffic.

Vinson, who was born in Charleston, S.C., had served with Fort Benning's 988th Military Police Company since July.

His funeral was held in Warner Robins, Ga., Thursday.

Vinson served with the 209th Military Police Detachment for a year before requesting assignment with the 988th, which is scheduled to deploy to Iraq in December.

He was a "hard-charger," who sought tough assignments, his company commander said.

"He took his job seriously," Capt. Steven Devitt said. "He would've been one of our go-to guys in Iraq."

Vinson is survived by his parents, Charles and Alison Vinson, a brother, Marcus Vinson, and grandparents Wilma Cox, Lou Vinson, and Alfred Edge.

Son follows father's dream, father follows son

Bridgett Siter

A conversation between father and son before basic training:

"You're going to feel homesick. Real homesick. Week two is going to be crazy," Joshua Amaro said. "Just suck it up. It'll get better."

"I'm already homesick," Luis Amaro replied. "How much worse can it be?"

Father and son Soldier stories are as old as the Army itself. But this one has a new twist. Joshua — Pvt. Joshua Amaro — is the son, now in his fifth week of basic training with 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment on Sand Hill. His father — Pvt. Luis Amaro — starts basic training today, making this very likely the first time a father has followed his son into service since the Civil War. Maybe the first time ever.

Luis was a 17-year-old high-school senior, the son of Puerto Rican immigrants, in Hartford, Conn., when he became a father for the first time. He did the only thing he knew to do. He dropped out and went to work. The twins came soon after.

"More kids, more work. I never had time to go back to school," Luis said. "But I always dreamed of two things my whole life — graduating from high school and serving my country."

The marriage between Luis and Joshua's mother crumbled

Denial ain't just a river

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

I was watching TV with my best friend when we saw a commercial for a show called Over There on FX. It portrays Soldiers in Iraq. We watched it in silence, then looked at each other and said, "Uh-uh." Her husband was deployed, mine was getting ready to, and we both knew it would not be a show we would watch.

So why won't I watch Over There? Simply put, even though it's not a reality show, what my husband does is reality. I don't want to see Soldiers being shot at and I don't want to worry about IEDs more than I do now.

Am I burying my head in the sand? You betcha. And I prefer it that way.

After my husband's first deployment in 2001, the only thing I asked when he got home was if he did the combat jump I watched on CNN. Sure did. Oooookay, that's enough information for me. He's on his fourth deployment, and that's the extent of my knowledge about the time he's spent overseas.

I keep a picture in my head of him sitting on his bed, gazing longingly at my picture. Not reality, I know, but it helps me get through the day.

I really don't know if Over There accurately portrays what Soldiers are really doing "over there." I'm sure the producer did his homework to make it "realistic," but to me realistic is actually being there. The actors are just that — actors. I'd bet the amount of money they're making is way beyond what our Soldiers engaged in combat are making. That's just wrong.

My aversion extends to movies too. I bought the Black Hawk Down DVD for posterity. It's still in the wrapper. I also own W*e Were Soldiers*, because it was made at Fort Benning. I went scene by scene to see the Fort Benning scenes — like the ones of the wives receiving telegrams that their husbands weren't coming home. I've never seen the entire movie.

My reality is sending my husband on combat deployments every six months. Even between deployments, I won't watch Over There, because I know in a few months he will be back overseas. Sometimes reality is harsh.

My mom once asked me why I watch Survivor. "It's not even reality," she said. To which I replied, "Exactly."

I would rather watch someone try to down a glass of pureed sewer rat than watch a convoy come under attack. Because that is my reality, constantly worrying about what could happen to my husband. I refuse to subject myself to it. It's just more stress, more stuff to worry about.

I'm not in the dark about what does go on "over there." I watch the news. I get phone calls when a Soldier has fallen. I've sat with families during a memorial service and heard them sob when their son's name was called during roll call, and he didn't answer.

When I see a car slow down in front of my house, I look to make sure they're not wearing dress greens. I've jumped out of bed at 10:59 p.m. when I heard a car door slam, because "notification" can happen until 11 p.m. I know the reality. I just don't like it, and if that makes me the queen of denial, it's a title I'll gladly wear.

I'm not saying Over There is a bad show — I'm simply making a command decision that it will not be on any TV in my home. After all, I am the queen.

Over There helps me cope

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

My husband has been over there since January. These have been the hardest seven months of my life.

When he deployed, our son was 11 months old, at the tail end of his colicky stage. That meant hours of rocking or walking to get him to sleep. I'd sit on my couch, soaked with his tears and mine, until he finally learned to cope.

But it was me who really needed to learn how to cope. I'm the sole caregiver, housekeeper, cook, bill payer, mechanic, landscaper, letter writer and package sender. And with all that, I'm trying to maintain a relationship with the person I love the most, who has to be a Soldier, liberator, educator, counselor and diplomat in a country where people don't want him or ask too much of him.

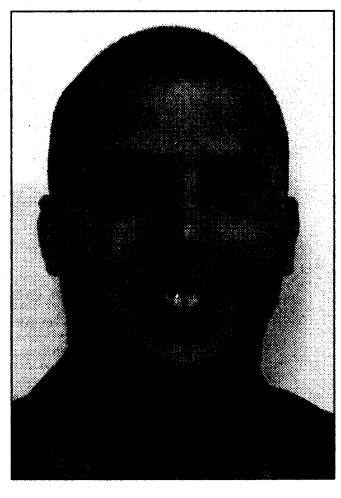
At first, in a desperate attempt to be a part of his chaotic world, I stayed on my computer for hours, e-mailing, instant messaging, Googling, scavenging for articles about his unit. I wrote letters as often as my son would let me, and we spent hundreds, if not thousands of dollars on telephone calls.

Then my husband took company command. Calls and e-mails came less and less. I would not only endeavor to become FRG leader — but the best FRG leader ever! If I couldn't be a major (or captain, as my husband would say) contributor to my husband's success, then I would make my "captain" contribution to someone's life here.

As days passed and we spent less time talking on the phone or Internet, I started to doubt his loyalty to me versus his loyalty to the Army. No one forced him to join, it was his choice to serve. I felt abandoned. I was angry.

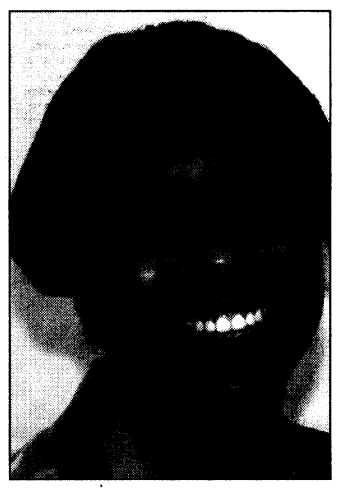
Then I went on a couple of assignments that helped me see I was not alone. I also began to watch Over There, which gave me a glimpse of my husband's world and made me appreciate his dedication. I understand more of the complexities of Soldiering. I know my husband is not in a firefight 24/7. He may never engage in one at all. But he, or any Soldier, could face a scenario similar to the ones portrayed on screen.

I've gained a better understanding of the stress that comes with having to decide whether to fire at a vehicle, the pain of realizing you might have mistaken friendly for foe, and the relief that comes with knowing the years of training were not in vain because it just saved the lives of your Soldiers.



I understand wives may not want to know what their husbands go through, but not knowing makes me worry more. I want to know what emotional baggage he'll bring home. We can sort through it. I can't help my husband do that if I don't know what he's carrying.

And for the wives who will be annoyed by the portrayal of a cheating Army wife, I understand your disgust. But an unfaithful spouse may be another Soldier's reality, and by acknowledging that, we can help him sort through his baggage. Because when he returns, he will be working with my husband, his kids will play with mine and his wife may still participate in my FRG.



Over There has given me insight into the realities of war. I will continue to watch it because it's another way to connect to my husband's world.

VARIOUS VOICES

Do you like the FX drama series Over There?

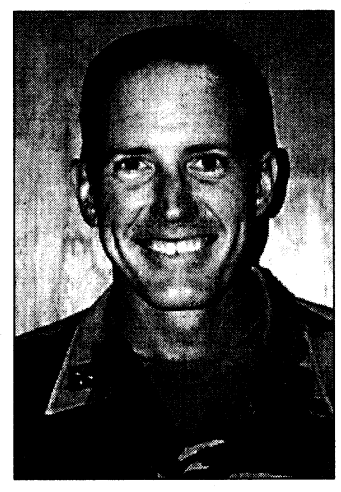
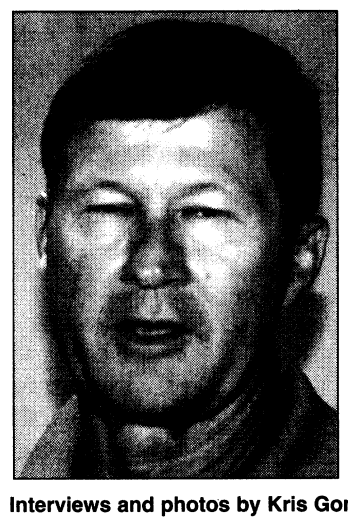
Staff Sgt. Abinoam Herrera, HHC, USAIC — "I like it. I think it reflects what's going on in today's Army, especially with the family aspect of it. Whether it shows what the Soldiers are going through or the wives' troubles, it brings to light their struggle to deal with things."



Staff Sgt. Lanretta Covington, Secretary General Staff — "I haven't seen it yet, but I would like to because my husband is in Iraq and I'm curious about what is going on over there. He doesn't tell me too much."

Staff Sgt. Robert Jones, Directorate of Combat Developments — "I love it. I watch it with my wife. I don't necessarily recommend that spouses watch it, because it might make them worry. But I do recommend it to anyone who has been over there, because it helps with the healing process."



Amy Fish, family member — "I haven't seen it, but I would like to, because I think it would help complete the picture of what my husband is experiencing in Iraq."

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins, Family Life Chaplain Center — "I think in their effort to sell a show, they're over the top. I appreciate their wanting to make things realistic and show the tension that exists, but you still have to realize it is a Hollywood TV show and they amp things up. Combat is not that thrilling. You get more action inside of that hour than most of those guys will see in a month."

April Kempmoya, family member — "I would like to see it because here we don't get to see the full spectrum of the day to day challenges the Soldiers face. Whether it's drama or not, I'm sure it's based on some reality. But I would also take it with a grain of salt, because it's not a documentary."

Freddie Manning, Omega Training Group — "I don't care for it. I didn't think it was realistic. The Soldier-leader relationship is way off base. It's a left-wing radical-thinking portrayal of the Army versus a well disciplined force. I know a TV program can't be by the TM or FM, or it would be so boring no one would watch it. But I hate to see anybody portray poor leadership or poor Soldiers."

This is what's really going on 'over there'

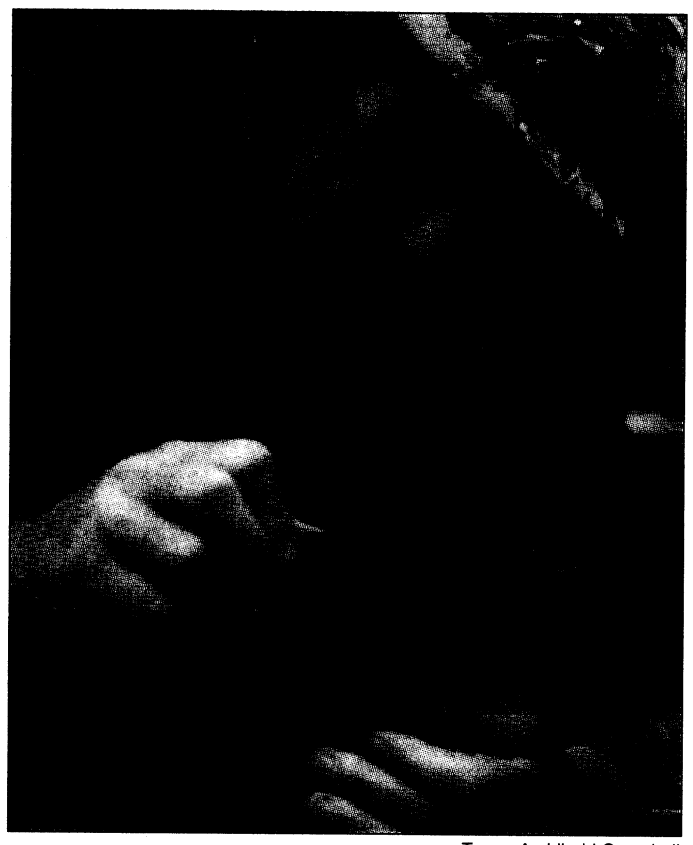
Command Sgt. Maj. Don Becker
1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment

We've hit the seven-month mark, and we're all looking forward to the end of the hot months. That won't come anytime soon, and we know it. As the Can Do Battalion continues its mission, our Soldiers are proud of their accomplishments, and with good reason. We've sent a lot of bad people to jail and captured plenty of weapons that will no longer be used against Americans.

During my two weeks of R&R (yes, even sergeants major get leave once in a while) several people asked me about the progress in Iraq. The first couple of times I figured those asking just didn't watch the news. Then I realized that with all of the negative things going on around the world, the progress that we're making just doesn't stick out the way it should. I see the progress on a daily basis. I assumed that everyone back in the U.S. saw it too, but I was incorrect.

Don't get me wrong, I'm not knocking the media. Let's face it — the negative stuff sells papers. But it's disappointing that the positive things we're doing aren't making the news. Regardless of your opinion of the war, one thing should be evident: it's better to fight the bad guys in some one else's backyard than in our own.

As far as progress on the fighting goes, we're winning — big time.



What you see daily in the news is carnage, death and mayhem. What you don't see is a country being born, people gaining rights they never had before, people voting, people not living in fear of a dictator, roads being repaired, schools receiving supplies so teachers can teach, clinics receiving medicine and equipment, soccer stadiums being built, downtown areas being improved, law and order being restored, a government being established and an Army being trained and equipped to maintain security after we leave. It can't be found in the headlines, but it's happening, every single day.

Sure, there have been hiccups; but even the U.S. didn't become the greatest nation on earth overnight. Like a toddler, it will take time for this new country to stand on its own. That's why we're here.

Our culture and that of the Iraqi people are very different. That's probably the biggest hurdle we face. The Iraqi people have to realize that they've got to help themselves and shouldn't expect us to do everything. But as every day passes, we gain their trust and confidence and prove to them we're here to help until our mission is accomplished.

There will always be people who hate America and want no part of a free Iraq, but like I said, if we're not fighting the bad guys in Iraq, where will we fight them? New York City? Chicago? Nebraska? We're winning the war on terror and a big part of it is happening in Iraq. You may not see it every day, but I do.

Army leaders gather for IET Conference

More than 150 Training and Doctrine Command leaders gathered this week for the Initial Entry Training Brigade Commander, Command Sergeant Major Conference. The conference was hosted by Fort Benning for the United States Army Accessions Command, Fort Monroe, Va., said Col. Carl Turner, project officer.

The purpose of the conference was to provide a forum where all IET Brigade commanders and command sergeants major could discuss policies, administrative procedures, initiatives of concerns and receive feedback while enduring tactical relevancy for deploying junior enlisted Soldiers.

"We will go out and look at some of the latest and greatest training that is being provided to the IET Soldiers," Turner said. "Then we will look at some of the other viewpoints of other installations doing the same training.

"We're trying to figure out the best way to create the most effective Soldier given the contemporary operating environment."

Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, post commander, said Fort Benning is proud to be a part of training better Soldiers.

"We have a host of important issues we will discuss as we move forward to train Soldiers to the requirements of the improved Army," Wojdakowski said.

Lt. Gen. Robert Van Antwerp, Commander of the US Army Accessions Command, said Fort Benning was the logical site for the conference.

"It is one of the five basic training sites," Van Antwerp said. "We want to steal ideas and share ideas."

The first day of the conference included a team-building shooting competition. Participants donned battle gear and competed in long range firing, 9 mm firing and reflexive firing.

"We require our Soldiers in basic training to qualify with full battle gear, so that's why everyone here is in battle gear," Van Antwerp said. "Tomorrow we will go train with a convoy live fire."

Participants also participated in Basic Rifle Marksmanship training.

Van Antwerp said because Fort Benning is the home of the Infantry, the Soldiers here stand as experts in a lot of areas, specifically BRM and convoy training.

"The first thing we will do is observe the training and see the Fort Benning way," Van Antwerp said. "Then we will discuss it as a group and go back and apply what we have learned."

Van Antwerp said commands need to make sure Soldiers are trained to go straight to war.

"We want to raise all expectations and standards," Van Antwerp said. "My vision is that (leaders) will leave here excited to go back and implement what they learned."

Change: Brings Wojdakowski back to Benning

women for the nation.

Wallace credited Freakley with transforming training across the Infantry by improving the relevance and rigor, and imbuing new Soldiers with warrior ethos and Army values.

"We are engaged every day in a small-unit war," Wallace said. "Fort Benning is providing the mental tools our leaders need to fight and win."

He said Freakley spearheaded the Soldier as a System program, the "most important individual acquisition program" giving Soldiers more than 300 items they need for the fight.

"He is a true visionary leader and his legacy will live on," Wallace said. "The Army will continue to benefit from his extraordinary abilities in his new assignment as commander of the 10th Mountain Division at Fort Drum, New York."

Wallace joked that Freakley had "married up, way up." "He's married to an exceptional lady to whom the Army owes a special thank you," he said. "Susan has been a mentor and role model for young spouses and made sure volunteer recognition was routine. Thank you for caring for our Soldiers and their families."

Wallace said the audience could be assured that another capable and talented Soldier was taking command. Wojdakowski, he said, is no stranger to Fort Benning or the business of training warriors, serving a total of six years on post in positions ranging from company commander in the Ranger Training Brigade, to 20 months as the deputy commandant.

"Walt Wojdakowski understands that leading Soldiers is a privilege, a sacred trust and an affair of the heart," Wallace said. "I can vouch personally for his abilities to understand the business of leading and training Soldiers for the complexities of today's battlefield."

Freakley began by reminding the audience of the men and women fighting and winning the Global War on Terrorism.

"I can assure you we will win — we will prevail — due to their courage and commitment and selfless volunteerism," he said. "We salute these warriors and their spouses who are selflessly serving America."

Freakley said the Infantry Center has not deviated from the legacy of its former commandants, continuing to train tough the Soldiers assembled on the field. Those Soldiers, he said, are backed by fine leaders and trainers and supported by the post's garrison, civilian workforce and medical and dental activities.

"Those on the field and off are building an Army invincible in combat," he said. "And the citizens of Columbus, Phenix City and the surrounding area have been a tremendous group to serve with.

"I am happy to welcome Walt and Candy Wojdakowski. I cannot think of a better commandant," he said. "It's a five-tuba day. Who'd have 'thunk' it."

Wojdakowski thanked everyone for the warm welcome. "I am excited and proud to become part of the TRADOC team," he said. "Although a lot has changed, one thing that has not changed in the seven years since I left, is the impact Fort Benning, and installations like it, has on the Army. Infantry Soldiers are the ones who do the real heavy lifting.

"I can't imagine a more important mission, more important contribution to the nation than to live and work at the home of the Infantry," he said. "(Freakley) and Susan should be justly proud of a job well done."

Wojdakowski ended the ceremony saying, "All SOPs remain in effect. But troops, we have a lot of work to do, so ruck it up. We're moving out. Follow me."

104th Transportation driver receives Purple Heart

Gen. Mark E. O'Neil, assistant division commander (support), 3rd Infantry Division, shakes hands with Staff Sgt. Khevin G. Smith, a heavy wheeled vehicle operator with Fort Benning's 104th Transportation Company, 87th Corps Support Battalion, Division Support Brigade, after awarding him the Military Order of the Purple Heart August 11. Smith, a Dallas, Texas, native, received the award for injuries sustained during an ambush on his convoy April 20.

A truck driver with the Division Support Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, was awarded the Military Order of the Purple Heart Aug. 11 in a ceremony at the DSB Ministry Center at camp Taji, in Iraq.

Staff Sgt. Khevin G. Smith, a heavy wheeled vehicle operator with the 104th Transportation Company, 87the Corps Support battalion, was awarded the medal by Brig. Gen. Mark O'Neill, the assistant division commander for support for the 3rd. Inf. Div.

Although this is the award that nobody wants to get, O'Neill said, "to be able to pin this award on a Soldier is a great joy. "It means the equipment, the training, and circumstance, which none of us get to predict or script, allowed him to be standing here with us."

Smith, was wounded in action April 20 when his convoy was ambushed on its way to Camp Liberty.

Smith's Heavy Equipment Transporter was struck by a vehicle-borne explosive device.

He also managed to evacuate his truck commander, Spc. Morris Smith, who was sitting in the passenger seat.

> "You don't need to go get another one of these."

The two of them were picked up by Sgt. Eric Martin, who had pulled his HET next to them as they exited their damaged truck.

"The actions of Martin and the escorts from the 3rd Battalion, 117th Field Artillery Regiment, Alabama Army National Guard are the reason we're here," said Smith, whose unit deployed from Fort Benning, Ga. He praised God for their safety under fire.

O'Neill said it was a blessing that Smith's equipment and training proved valid. He offered Smith the following advice.

"You don't need to go get another one of those," O'Neill said. "One's enough."

Benning Guardsmen train 1st Inf. Div.

Mobile team teaches Air Assault course

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

"We're as close to being One Army as we've been in my 30 years of service," Maj. Gen. Benjamin Freakley told a group of National Guardsmen at Fort Benning last week before relinquishing command of the Infantry Center.

Among those present during Freakley's final visit to the office of the Special Assistant to the Commanding General-Army National Guard were Air Assault cadre fresh from four weeks at Camp Robertson in Schweinfurt, Germany, where they conducted two classes for nearly 600 Soldiers from the 1st Infantry Division and the 5th Corps.

The instructors returned confident their students are prepared to deploy — many for a second time — to Iraq, where they'll rely on the skills they learned, said Sgt. 1st Class Doug Conaway, chief instructor.

"When we got there, they had a lot of, shall we say, misconceptions about working with the Guard," Conaway said. "We overheard a few comments on the first day, but by the time they graduated, I'd say their eyes were opened to the truth about these 'Guard guys.'"

These "Guard guys," 14 in all, have among their ranks combat veterans, Rangers, master parachutists, rappel masters and pathfinders. Their combined experience makes for a highly-skilled Mobile Training Team, which takes it's show on the road at least four times a year.

Here, they call Fort Benning's National Guard Warrior Training home.

"Any time the Guard and active duty work hand in hand, it builds a relationship of trust and confidence, where maybe there wasn't trust and confidence in the past," Conaway said.

"They're going to go back to Iraq and work alongside National Guardsmen and maybe feel they have a little more in common with them after this."

The WTC is one of four Army agents authorized to teach air assault skills.

The others are the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., the 10th Mountain Division at Fort Drum, N.Y., and the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii. The Infantry School is responsible for accrediting all the courses and all the training sites.

> "Any time the Guard and active duty work hand in hand, it builds a relationship of trust and confidence, where maybe there wasn't trust and confidence in the past. The 1st Inf. Div. built the site at Camp Robertson and asked the WTC cadre to come. They taught the three-phase program to Soldiers from various military specialties.

They learned to rappel, establish a landing zone, evacuate medical casualties and "slingload" humvees, water trailers and cargo on Black Hawk helicopters — "the kinds of things they'll actually be doing in theater," Conaway said.

Tim Hutchens, the Air Assault accreditation chief for the Infantry School, said the course also served as a retention incentive for many of the Soldiers who requested it upon re-enlistment.

"Over there, it's a little harder for them to get the rigorous training they want, and yes, Soldiers want rigorous training," he said.

"In this case, it's much more cost effective to take the course to them than to try to get them all here."

Dad: Fulfills lifelong dream to become Soldier

under the weight of youth and responsibility. He married Elisa soon after, and together, the couple raised his three and three of their own.

They grew up together and raised their family with a strong faith and family values. When they weren't in church, where Joshua was active in the youth group and Luis delivered a weekly radio sermon in Spanish, Luis toiled from sun-up till sun-down at the dry-cleaners.

Joshua, 19, graduated from an advanced program in the community college last year and announced to his family he was joining the National Guard.

"It was about the opportunities, a better future," said Joshua, who plans to spend six years in the Infantry before becoming a chaplain's assistant. "But it was also about the adventure. I want to go to combat. I'll need that experience, because someday I want to be able to help other people who have been in combat."

Joshua's "opportunity" reminded Luis of his dream. But his opportunity had passed, or so he thought.

A fortuitous policy change — Luis believes it was divinely inspired — raised the age of enlistment to 39.

Now only one thing stood in the way.

"They told me to get my GED, but my wife wouldn't let me," said Luis, 36. "She encouraged me to get my high school diploma instead. Book reports, homework, studying ... it was hard. But she took care of the kids and supported me every step of the way. I wouldn't trade her for anything in the world."

Luis donned his cap and gown in May and was greeted by a cheering crowd in the auditorium where his high school graduation took place.

With that dream fulfilled and "out of the way," Luis was ready to don BDUs. He did so Monday at the Reception Center on Sand Hill.

"I never, ever — not once in my life — wore camouflage," he said. "I figured it was something you had to earn the right to wear. I stood in front of that mirror and said, 'You made it, man.'"

> "I never, ever — not once in my life — wore camouflage. I figured it was something you had to earn the right to wear. I stood in front of that mirror and said, 'You made it, man.'"
> Pvt. Luis Amaro
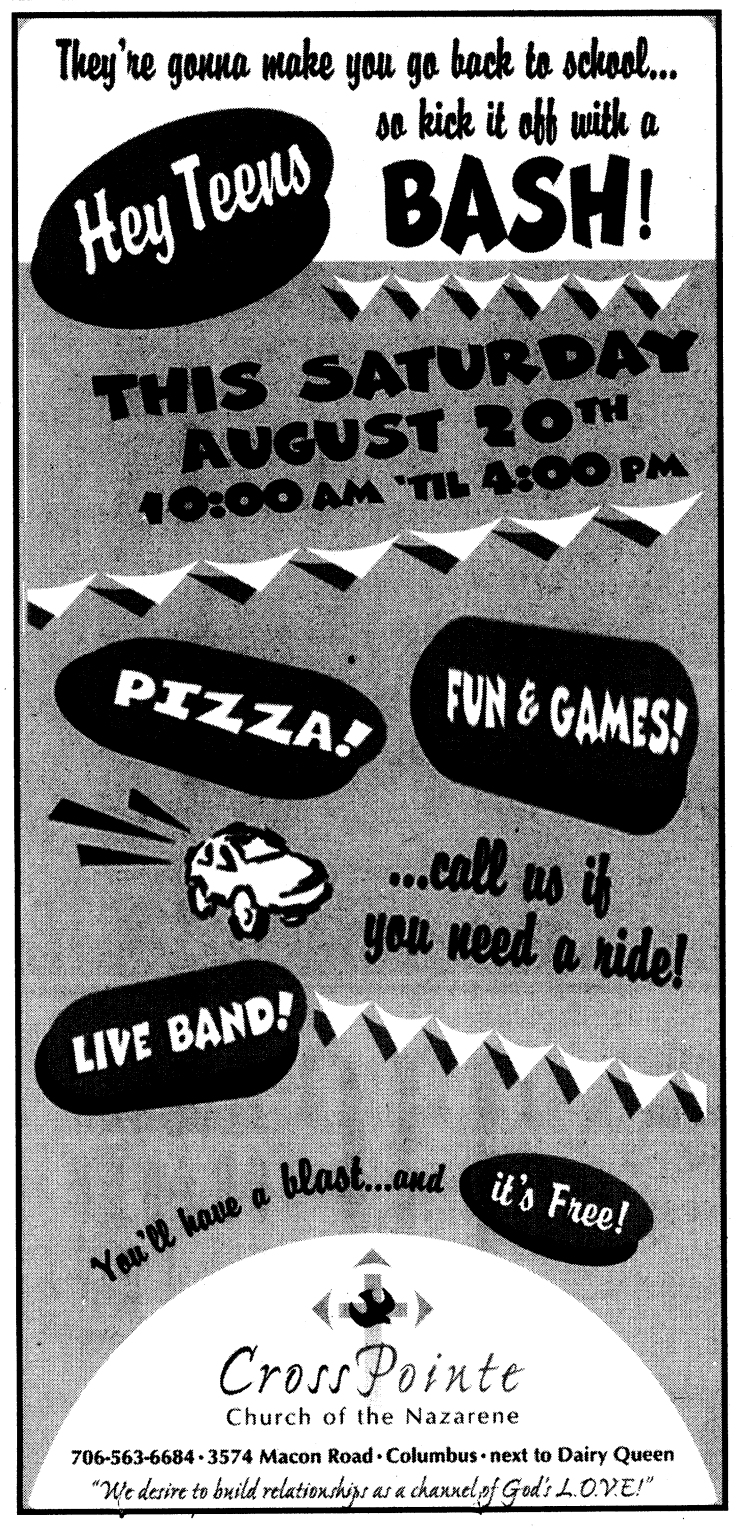
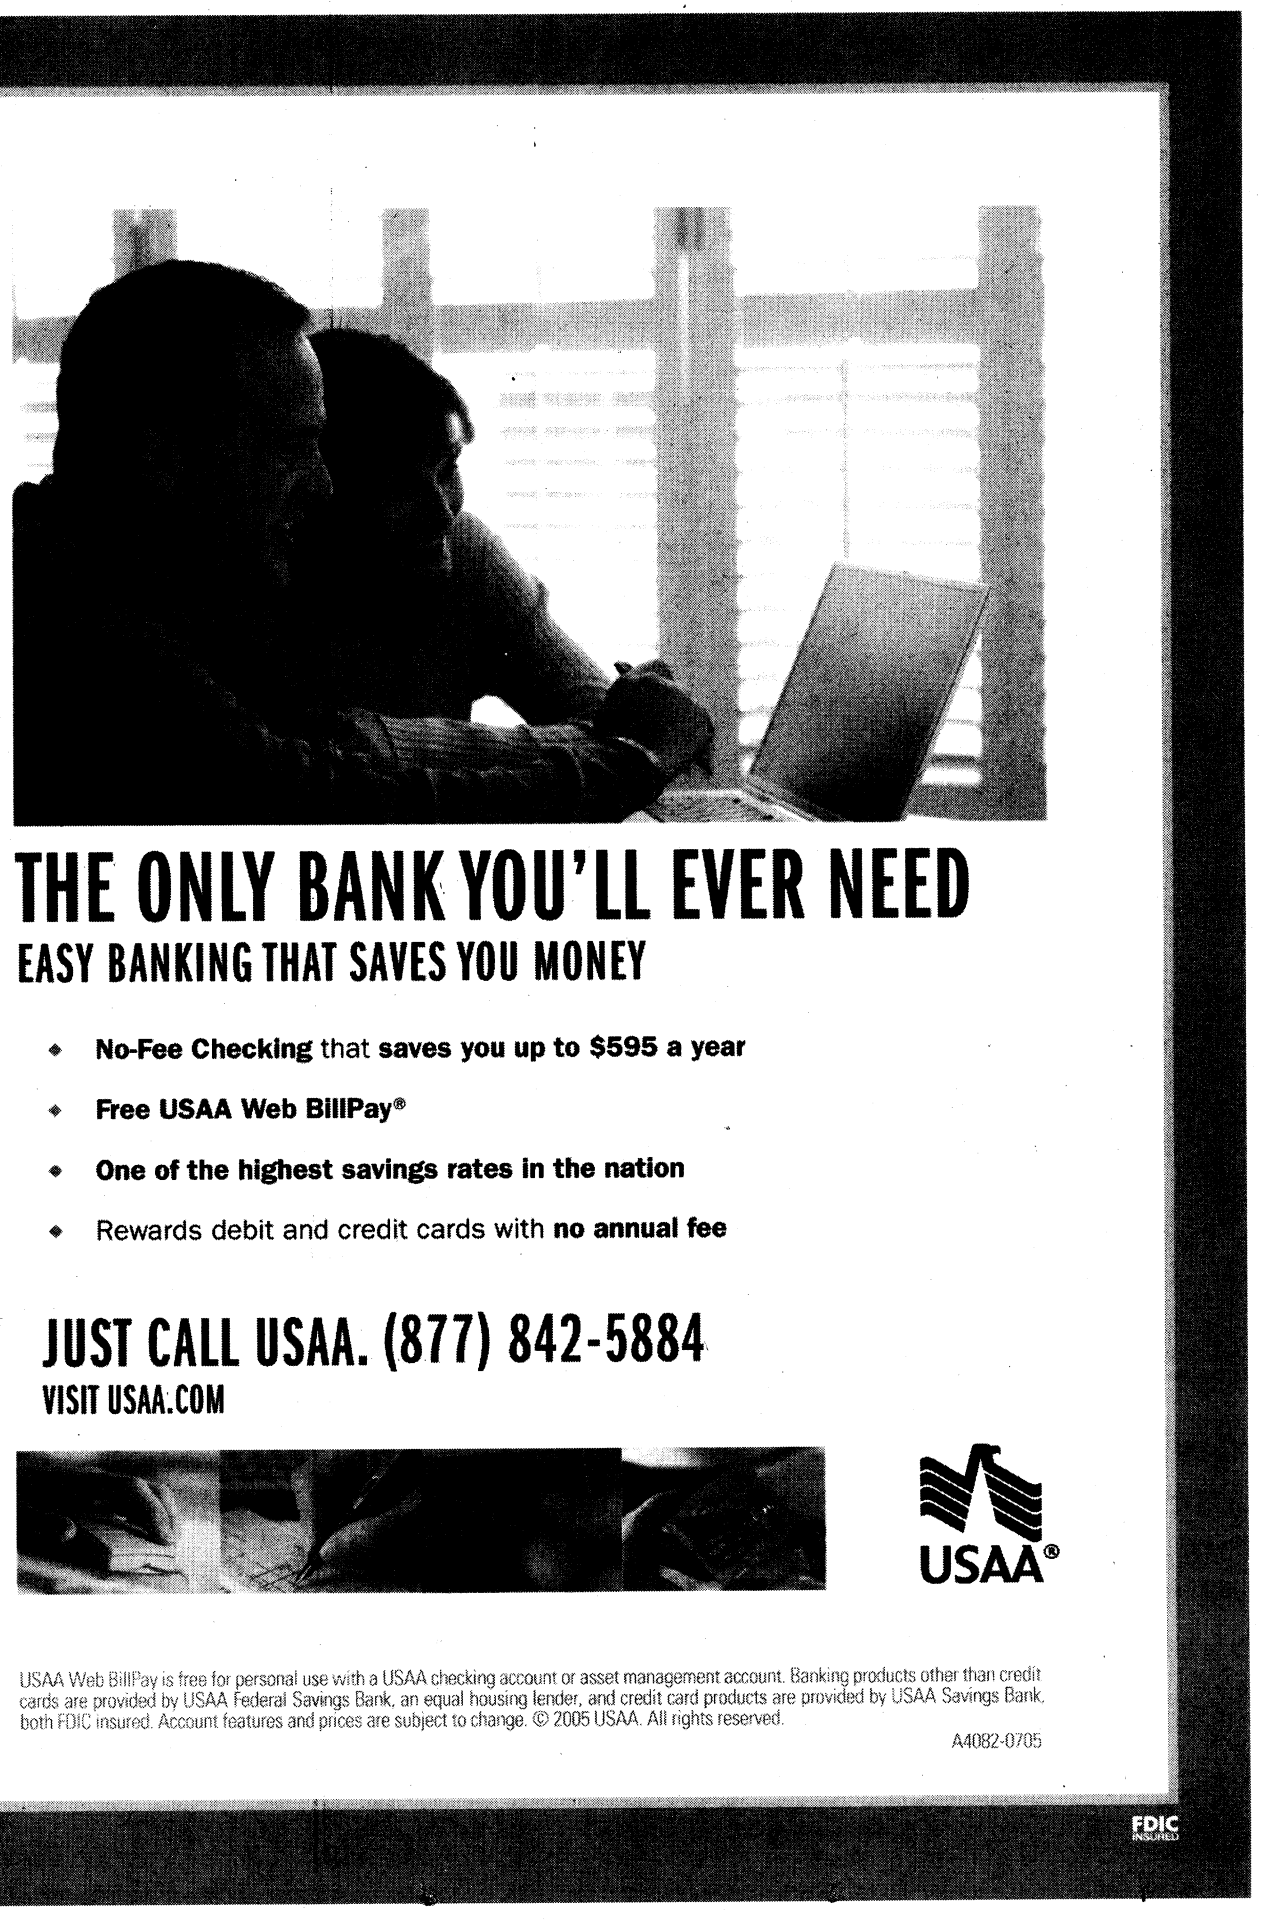
> On wearing BDUs for the first time

Luis knows he and his son will likely deploy with the 1st Battalion, 102nd Infantry Regiment in Connecticut. Though not as excited about the prospect as his son, he's "more than willing to make the sacrifice for the opportunity to serve."



The fulfillment of his dreams comes with a bonus — the educational benefits offered by the Army National Guard. Luis, like his son, hopes to become a chaplain's assistant, but he'd also like to earn his college degree and become a police officer.



Though Joshua and his father hoped to come in together, Luis needed waivers and the paperwork delayed his entry by several weeks. So Joshua, the "ranking" Amaro, had words of advice for his father Tuesday.

"Don't take anything the drill sergeants say personally," he said. "And everything they say is right. Just agree and you'll be fine."

BOLC: Will create 'Infantry-centric' officer corps

Fort Benning folks might not recognize the "new" in BOLC, since the Infantry Center began hosting the Phase II pilot program in 2002. Since then, the program has undergone continual revision. Aug. 25 marks a milestone in the process. 173 officers, including five foreign officers and five warrant officers, will graduate at 3 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium.

"These are Soldiers ready to lead," Elder said. "We told them on the first day of class that it's imperative they turn into sponges and absorb it all. That's what they did.

"It was refreshing to see all these eager young lieutenants excited about training," he said. "They know they're going to war, and they were eating it up like biscuits and gravy. I believe they'll graduate from here more flexible and adaptive and ready for an everchanging battlefield."

That's the goal. The transformation of the Officer Education System, and the implementation of BOLC in particular, is designed to better support an Army that has transformed into a faster, more mobile and flexible force, equipped to fight on a battlefield more unpredictable and complex than ever before.

As the battlefield continues to evolve, the revised Officer Education System will give leaders a "framework to refer to, a handrail to grab on to," a Training and Doctrine Command official said.

A study by an Army Training and Leadership Panel more than three years ago identified initial entry as one of two critical periods in the development of well-rounded officers. The other, the period of "field-grade" education, is being addressed in a similar revamp of the mid-career officer education programs.

Together, the implementation of these programs will mark the biggest change in officer training since the Vietnam War and the establishment of an all-volunteer course, Col. Steve Jones told an Army Times reporter in May. Jones, the director of leader development and training for TRADOC, said the new "Infantry-centric" BOLC program will end the problem of lieutenants who consider themselves specialists first and warriors second.

"This has been a problem for the past 30 years, as it has created a branch-centric, rather than Army-centric, culture. It has hindered the ability of our branches to interact on the battlefield," Jones said. Under the new program, "lieutenants and platoon leaders (will) think of themselves as warriors first."

Toward that end, BOLC's Phases I, II, and III were designed to "ensure a tough, standardized, small-unit leadership experience," each phase flowing into the next, from pre-commissioning in Phase I, through the third phase of branch-specific technical and tactical training, according to the BOLC Charter Task Force.

Phase I looks much like the pre-commissioning phases of the past.

The curriculum of the U.S. Military Academy, Officer Candidate Schools and Reserve Officer Training Corps programs will be standardized to train future leaders in basic Soldier and leader tasks and steep them in the Army values and traditions that will give them a clear understanding of what it means to be an officer.

Phase II, the "common course," at Fort Benning and Fort Sill, Okla., will likely be the defining phase of the program. It is here that all officers, regardless of their branch, will undergo "basic training."

Eighty percent of the course is conducted in the field, where students learn combatives, advanced land navigation, marksmanship, the use of night vision equipment, and nuclear, biological and chemical operations.

Classes are organized into companies with five 40-student platoons, each filled with male and female students from various branches and commissioning sources. Exercises, based on real-world scenarios, will be conducted at platoon levels, with students rotating responsibilities.

"They're all treated the same, and they're all given the same opportunities and responsibilities," Elder said. "The end result will be better prepared leaders who will be peers on the battlefield. Instead of, 'Hey, there goes an ordnance guy,' it'll be 'Hey, we're in this together. One team, one mission.' It'll mean a mutual respect and a greater understanding regardless of branch specificity."

BOLC's final phase will prepare officers for their military specialties at branch technical TRADOC schools around the Army.

The 6 to 14-week classes have been redesigned to incorporate more "experiential training," which means the officers will benefit from lessons learned in current operations and will be expected to perform more hands-on training than ever before.

What others are saying about BOLC

Lt. Gen. Robert L. Van Antwerp
commanding general, U.S. Army Accessions Command

"BOLC is developing leaders with a common warrior experience — more competent, confident and adaptable — effective at solving problems, making rapid decisions and leading Soldiers. These leaders will be ready to train and lead small units in combat immediately upon arrival at their first unit of assignment."

Command Sgt. Maj. Otis Smith command sergeant major, Fort Knox, Ky.

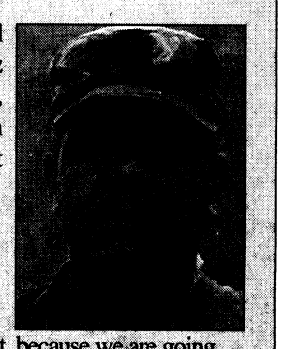
"BOLC will change how we grow competent, confident, adaptable lieutenants. BOLC II will ground them in warrior tasks and prepare them to lead. Our mounted BOLC III will train them to be both reconnaissance and armor platoon leaders — a significant change in the type of operations the Army is pursuing."

Maj. Gen. W. Montague Winfield
commanding general, U.S. Army Cadet Command

"The curriculum stresses rapid decision-making and mastery of the combat Soldier tasks that are vital to being a successful small unit leader. BOLC II will help to forge important bonds among the officers of all commissioning sources and all branches of the Army."

Maj. Kevin Elder
commander, A Co., 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment



"They're getting realistic, applicable training for today's operational environment. (BOLC) makes adaptable and flexible leaders to deal with whatever they face on the battlefield. These are the future leaders of the Army, and when they get the core knowledge, they can deal with any situation they face."

Brig. Gen. Robert P. Lennox
commanding general, Fort Bliss, Texas

"The leadership team at the U.S. Army Accessions Command and the Infantry School have designed an exciting and challenging course to hone the warrior skills in new officers. Now every new lieutenant will receive the same baseline of training, regardless of their branch and commissioning source. This reinforces to all that first and foremost they are warrior leaders."

Sgt 1st Class Daniel Lopez
BOLC trainer, A Co., 1st Battalion 11th Infantry Regiment

"BOLC II is important for today's contingency operations. The counter-insurgency training is most important, because we are going to take the fight to the enemy. That's what (officers) are expected to deal with."

Kid Butler keeps airborne tradition alive

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

"Butler (was) a dandy lad, full of zip and tobasco," Ross. S. Carter, author of Those Devils in Baggy Pants

They called him "Kid Butler," the newest and youngest member of the 3rd platoon, C Company, 504th Parachute Regiment. He'd barely started his senior year of high school when his number was called, and 18-year-old Charlie Butler, a newspaper delivery boy from Bessemer, Ala., became Pvt. Charlie Butler, Infantryman.

The day a studio photographer came from Birmingham to photograph the Bessemer High Senior Class of 1944, Pvt. Butler was making his final training jump at the Fort Benning Parachute School, now the U.S. Army Airborne School.

Three months later, he jumped into Holland with the 82nd Airborne Division.

"I was too young and too naive, I didn't know enough to be scared," said Butler, recalling his combat initiation 60 years ago, as C Company led an assault on the bridge of Nijmegan.

The 20 millimeter anti-aircraft rounds that whizzed overhead fascinated the young man who used to while away summer afternoons in Bessemer concocting recipes for home-made fire-crackers.

"It was like a great big fireworks display. I looked up to get a better view, and I got hit with shrapnel right here," he said, pointing to a scar on his forehead, just above his left eye.

In an instant Butler gained a Purple Heart and a healthy respect for war.

He spent nearly two more months in Europe and was wounded again during the Battle of the Bulge, this time a rifle round through his right leg.

It was there he saw the worst fighting of his military career, which spanned nearly three decades and three wars.

Butler served once in Korea and twice in Vietnam as a combat engineer.

"But World War II was the worst, because I was in the Infantry. The worst I ever saw was the Battle of Cheneux. It's right there in the book," he said, referring to Those Devils in Baggy Pants, a blow-by-blow account of the 504th's involvement in World War II, written by Ross. S. Carter, Butler's former squad leader.

Carter's account paints a poignant picture of the C Company's struggle with German forces in the town of Cheneux.

But it's what's left unsaid Butler still finds painful to talk about.

"I try to block out the bad stuff, but the 20th of December is always a bad day," he said.

As the newest member of the eight-man squad, Butler was supposed to walk next to Carter as they approached a number of barbed wire fences on the outskirts of Cheneux. But a last minute change in line-up likely saved Butler's life.

Another Soldier, Finkelstein, was the shortest Soldier in the company. He traded places with Butler so the other Soldiers could help him over the fences.

Finkelstein was killed when a 20 millimeter shell exploded his hand grenades and set him afire.

"It talks about it in the book," Butler said in a broken whisper, his eyes brimming with tears. "But it doesn't say he took my place. If it weren't for him, I wouldn't be here."

Now the 79-year-old father of two spends a great deal of time educating others about the realities of war and military service, airborne in particular. He frequently attends airborne graduations and events like today's National Airborne Day celebration and shares with the Soldiers his enthusiasm and appreciation for "all things airborne."

An avid photographer, Butler's always taking pictures of his new friends with their new "wings."

And he never misses an opportunity to show them faded photographs of himself as a young paratrooper. He loves to tell war stories, but his are seldom the sober variety.

He prefers to recall the occasional moments of levity among war-weary Soldiers in battle —"They're like hunting and fishing stories — the more you tell them the better they get." — and he explains the mindset of a combat Infantryman in the terms of a sports enthusiast.

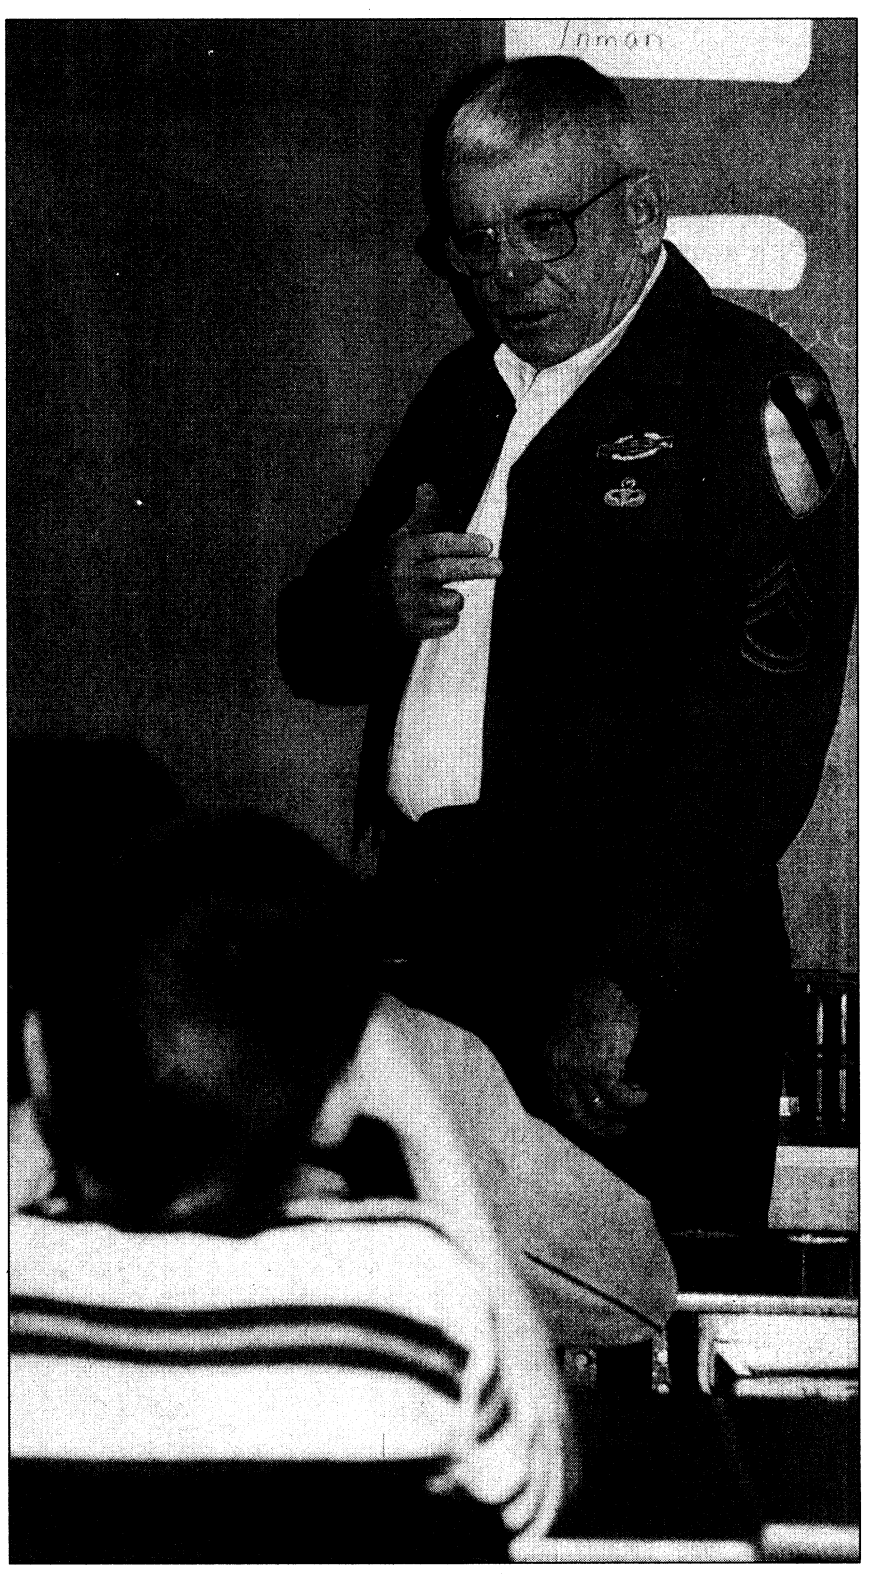
"Being in combat is very much like being on a football team," he said. "You're all working together to accomplish a mission, but you can't be distracted by what the guy down the line is doing.

"You have to focus on what your job is to stay alive."

And when asked, Butler compared the job of the parachute Infantryman in World War II to that of the modern Soldier in today's war on terrorism.

"Every war is different, and what we have now is like nothing I've ever seen," Butler replied.

"But some things haven't changed. The job of the Soldier is still to get to the enemy, wherever he's at, and outpower him. And the essentials are still food and munitions."



Butler believes it is the responsibility of his generation to help educate the younger.

"For so long older survivors didn't talk about what happened, so people just didn't know," he said.

"It's getting better. Maybe it's the world situation. Maybe it was the movie Saving Private Ryan. Maybe people are just realizing their own mortality. But more people are talking to their family members about it. They have to," he said.

"If they don't, it just disappears."

No doubt Kid Butler will be available today to share his stories at the National Airborne Day ceremony.

Shortly after midnight, just after jumping into Normandy in 1944, Benjamin Reese caught a hand grenade to the side of the head. He bled so profusely, his fellow Soldiers rolled him into a ditch for safekeeping.

At the sound of approaching German soldiers, Reese pulled the pin of his hand grenade and waited.

The German soldiers moved on without discovering Reese.

Instead, a medical team found him the next morning with the grenade clutched tightly in his hand. They jammed a twig into the grenade to replace the pin he'd lost in the dark.

So begin the memories of an original Army airborne veteran who served through World War II and Korea.

He and his friend Louie Davis, both residents of Columbus, were two original members of the Parachute Test Platoon that formed in 1940 at Fort Benning, Ga.

Every original member came from the 29th Infantry Regiment, said Reese.

"They called for volunteers in the first or second week of June 1940," he said. "Fifty members volunteered for this. It was just something different to do."

About half of the volunteers went on to rigger school to learn how to repair and pack parachutes, and the other half set up training aids for the Soldiers who followed them into the new discipline of airborne at Lawson Army Airfield, Davis said.

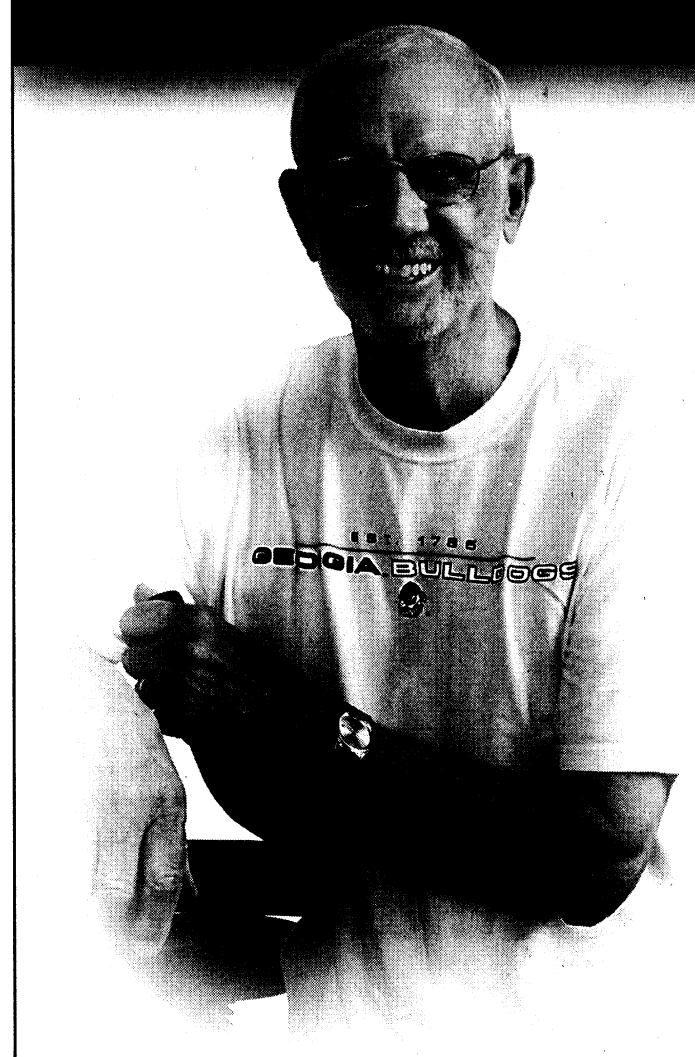
"I stayed on with teaching until 1943. The school mushroomed out because we were training troops like mad," he said.

Instead of heading overseas, Davis volunteered to train agents for Great Britain in 1943. He stayed there two years before heading to a new assignment in China.

"We had to set up and we didn't have nothing," Davis said. "We had to get the local people to help us construct a (jump) tower and use an interpreter to train a battalion of Chinese commandos."

Less than a year later, Davis arrived back at Fort Benning. Except for a stint in Korea, he devoted his remaining years to honing the skills of fellow airborne Soldiers.

All airborne units can trace their history back to the Parachute Test Platoon.



Reese and Davis will be among the honored guests today at the National Airborne Day Celebration at Eubanks Field.

The celebration starts at 9 a.m. with an exhibition jump by Fort Benning's free-fall demonstration team, the Silver Wings.

Brig. Gen. James Yarborough, deputy commanding general of Fort Benning, is guest speaker for the graduation of D Company, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

The ceremony will end at approximately 10 a.m. at the Airborne Walk The public is welcome to attend.

"I'll never again take walking for granted."

Gators and snakes and bears, oh my!

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

"Anything that can go wrong will, so be prepared."

That's what you get when you cross Murphy's Law and the Boy Scout motto.

So what do you get when you cross an alligator and today's edition of The Bayonet? Well, you'll get away relatively unscathed, with a great story to tell, if you heed my advice.

Not that I can claim ownership, mind you. I've never actually handled an alligator, but my husband caught me handling an alligator bag once, and I escaped unscathed. He's a take charge kind of guy, my husband. He took my charge card and wrestled that gator outta my hands.

That's the closest I've come to anything that might qualify as an alligator encounter, but I know the odds of bumping into one increase exponentially each year. As more and more northerners migrate to Florida, they bypass a steady stream of gators headed north to escape the masses.

Just last month, an alligator was nabbed on Fort Benning in the Upatoi Creek. He was sporting a bumper sticker that read, "Save the swamps." I feel for the poor critter, but I hope to never feel the poor critter in my favorite fishing hole.

But you never know. What with the recent spate of attacks by sharks and bears, gators have not been getting their fair share of the headlines. They're liable to launch a comeback anytime. Be prepared.

Cut out this handy-dandy guide to wildlife safety and keep it in your pocket. Whip it out slooooowly if you happen upon a crazy critter in your backyard.

Note to readers who prefer their Bayonet with pork rinds and a six-pack: Do not try any of these methods on pit bulls, your mother-in-law, zoo animals or anyone named Big Bubba.

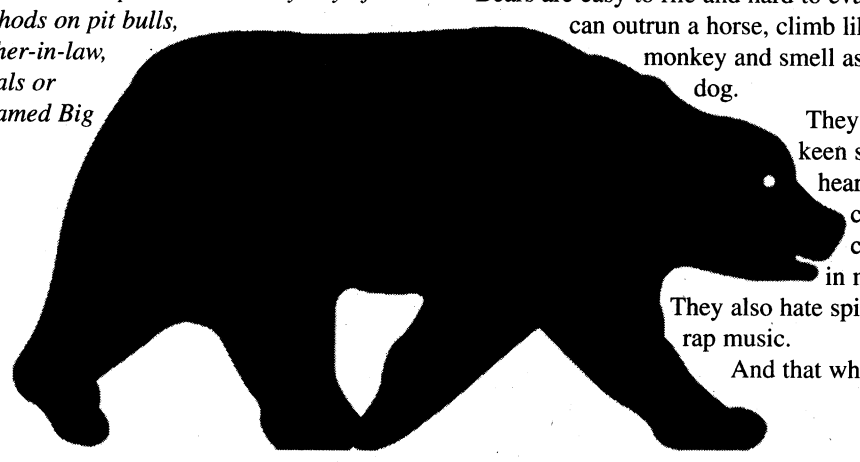
How do you thwart an alligator attack? With a whack. Whack it on the nose.

While deaths from alligator attacks are rare in the U.S., injuries are actually on the increase as more and more people encroach upon swamp land.

Don't swim, wade, bathe or baptize in unfamiliar water. Don't dangle arms or legs or chihuahuas. And don't drink the water, because that's just gross.

If you spot an alligator — even a spotted alligator, which, of course, would make a great handbag — let somebody know, preferably somebody with a badge.

Don't feed them — the gators I mean, not the guys with badges. Don't approach them, don't taunt them, and above all, don't sing Crocodile Rock. They hate being called crocs and they hate Elton John.



But what they hate the most is having their nose pummeled. If an alligator closes its jaws around any part of your anatomy you'd like to hang onto, punch it on the snout.

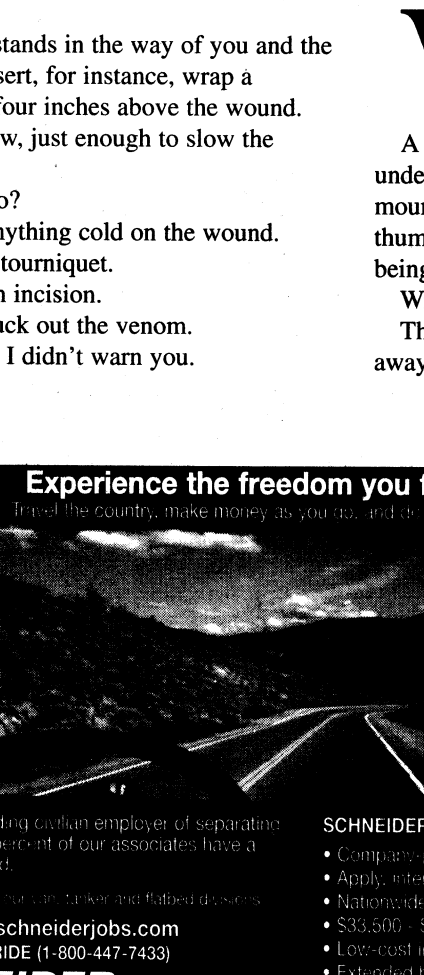
Alligators are also mighty sensitive about their eyes. If he's getting frisky, but he hasn't clamped down on anything you want to go home with, cover his eyes to calm him down. If he continues to flail, poke them good and hard with your fists.

Then you should probably run like the wind.

There are more than 650,000 disgruntled bears in North America — 650,026 if you count the Chicago Bears, who haven't won the Super Bowl in 20 years.

Bears are easy to rile and hard to evade. They can outrun a horse, climb like a monkey and smell as well as a dog.

They have a keen sense of hearing and can rip a car apart in minutes. They also hate spinners and rap music.



And that whole Teddy bear schtick is completely bogus. Bears like their personal space, and as far as they're concerned, it's all their personal space.

They're fiercely protective of their cubs and their food. Remember, their cubs are their cubs, but your food is their food. Don't leave any in your car, your tent or your pockets.

If you see a bear, don't try to outrun him. Make your presence known — clap, sing, yell or play the spoons — whatever it takes to let him know you're there. You do not want to surprise him.

If he approaches, lie on the ground and be still. He'll probably go away. If he attacks anyway, go for the snout or eyes.

Good luck.

This one's easy. The best way to prevent a snake bite is — read carefully — STAY AWAY FROM SNAKES!

If you're close enough to a snake to tell if it's poisonous, you're way too close. The markings of venomous and nonpoisonous snakes are hard to distinguish at a glance, and that's about all the time you'll have to figure it out before it's too late.

It's like your momma told you: Snakes are cold-blooded. If you happen upon one, in the backwoods or the bar room, leave him be. Don't try to take him home.

Snakes can strike in a split second and they can lunge half their body length, six feet or longer, before you can bat an eye.

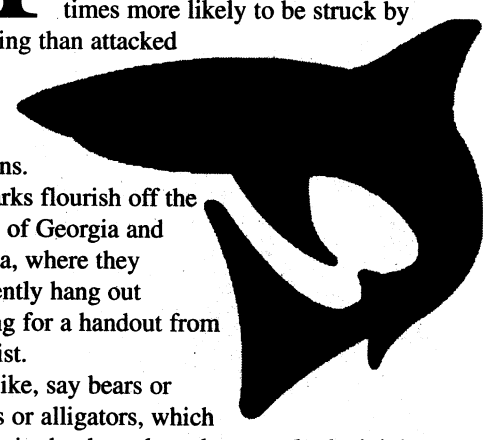
If you do get bitten, immobilize the area and keep it lower than the heart. Wash it with soap and water if possible and get to the doctor.

Duh.

If something stands in the way of you and the doctor, like a desert, for instance, wrap a bandage two to four inches above the wound. Not too tight, now, just enough to slow the venom.

What not to do?

Don't place anything cold on the wound.



Don't make a tourniquet.

Don't make an incision.

Don't try to suck out the venom.

And don't say I didn't warn you.

True, snakes, bees and wasps cause more deaths each year than sharks do, and here in the U.S., you're 30 times more likely to be struck by lightning than attacked by a shark. But it happens.

Sharks flourish off the coasts of Georgia and Florida, where they frequently hang out looking for a handout from a tourist.

Unlike, say bears or snakes or alligators, which pop up in the darnedest places, a shark sighting should come as no surprise.

If you are in saltwater, and you hear the theme music from JAWS, and you don't tread water, you have no one to blame but yourself.

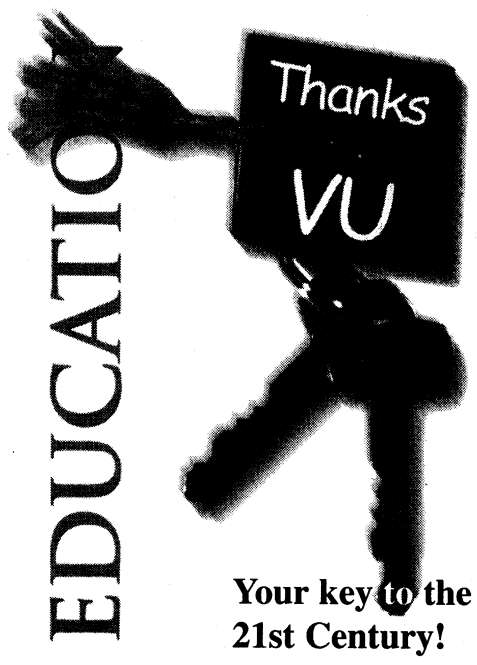
But, on the off chance one wends its way into the Chattahoochee, I wouldn't want you to be caught unprepared. Take note.

Sharks are drawn to solitary figures, the smell of blood, shiny, reflective anything, brightly colored clothing and — get this — uneven tan lines. Yep. Sharks prey on objects with contrast and color.

Whereas bears, snakes and alligators, given adequate warning of your presence, are likely to avoid a confrontation, a shark is a nosy fellow. He may "hit and run" or "bump and bite" with no intention of making a meal of you.

That's little consolation if he takes home a souvenir, so don't wait to see if a shark plans to dine.

If he gets close enough to clamp down on your boogie board, baby, strike at his eyes with your fist. If you can't reach his eyes, go for the gills. Don't waste your time with his nose. That's a misconception.



When it comes to wild critters, its always best to give them a wide berth. Alas, it's not always possible.

A good rule of "thumb," should you come under attack — in the woods, the water, the mountains or the mall — is to plunge your thumbs into its eyes — the obvious exception being a snake.

Wish I'd known then what I know now.

That alligator bag would've never gotten away.

BOLC II teaches battle skills

Week six: Convoy Ops

Tawny Archibald Campbell

As the rain fell on the small convoy, the radio crackled as word that some kind of roadblock was up ahead.

Soldiers readied their weapons and waited as the trucks stopped.

The order to unload and secure the area was given and Soldiers leapt from the light medium tactical vehicle onto the muddy road.

Suddenly there was an explosion and small arms fire could be heard coming from the wood line.

The convoy was under attack.

After locating and disarming two "insurgents" the drill was over and everyone loaded back up into the trucks to head back to the forward operating base for a final after action review.

The training is part of the Basic Officer Leader Course.

One hundred seventy-eight lieutenants, captains and warrant officers have been training at Fort Benning as part of the seven-week pilot program designed to prepare new officers for combat.

"The purpose is to develop adaptive, agile leaders who can adapt to any situation easily," said Capt. Jeffrey Erts, 3rd Platoon senior instructor, BOLC, Phase II.

"We give them the skills to do that."

The training is three-fourths hands-on training, interspersed with sit-down classes and reviews, Erts said.

"We have a short block of instruction and then we practice, practice, practice," Erts said.

Today marks the end of the sixth week of training, which focused on convoy operations, first aid and nuclear, biological, chemical training.

"Convoy is the most important thing at BOLC," Erts said.

"We train them how to survive in a convoy. Not everyone here will be in combat, like the Infantry, but everyone will be in a convoy if they are deployed to Iraq."

When a convoy's hit, everyone will look to the senior officer to get them out, Erts said.

"We try to equip (the students) with the skills they need to get out safely," Erts said.

"If they roll with a convoy and are hit, whether in the desert of urban area, they will know the correct way to survive the situation."

Second Lt. Welton Chang said the training has been extremely helpful and the cadre add a real-life perspective to the drills.

"I think it is really important to learn convoy operations," Chang said. "I guarantee people in this group will move through a real, live convoy – probably everyone will.

"Every one of the cadre have had the opportunity to experience this for real in theatre, and they know what to teach us."

Capt. Jessica Wise said she may not remember everything she has learned over the seven weeks, but she knows the skills she is learning are important, no matter what you do.

"This isn't just for Infantry," Wise said.

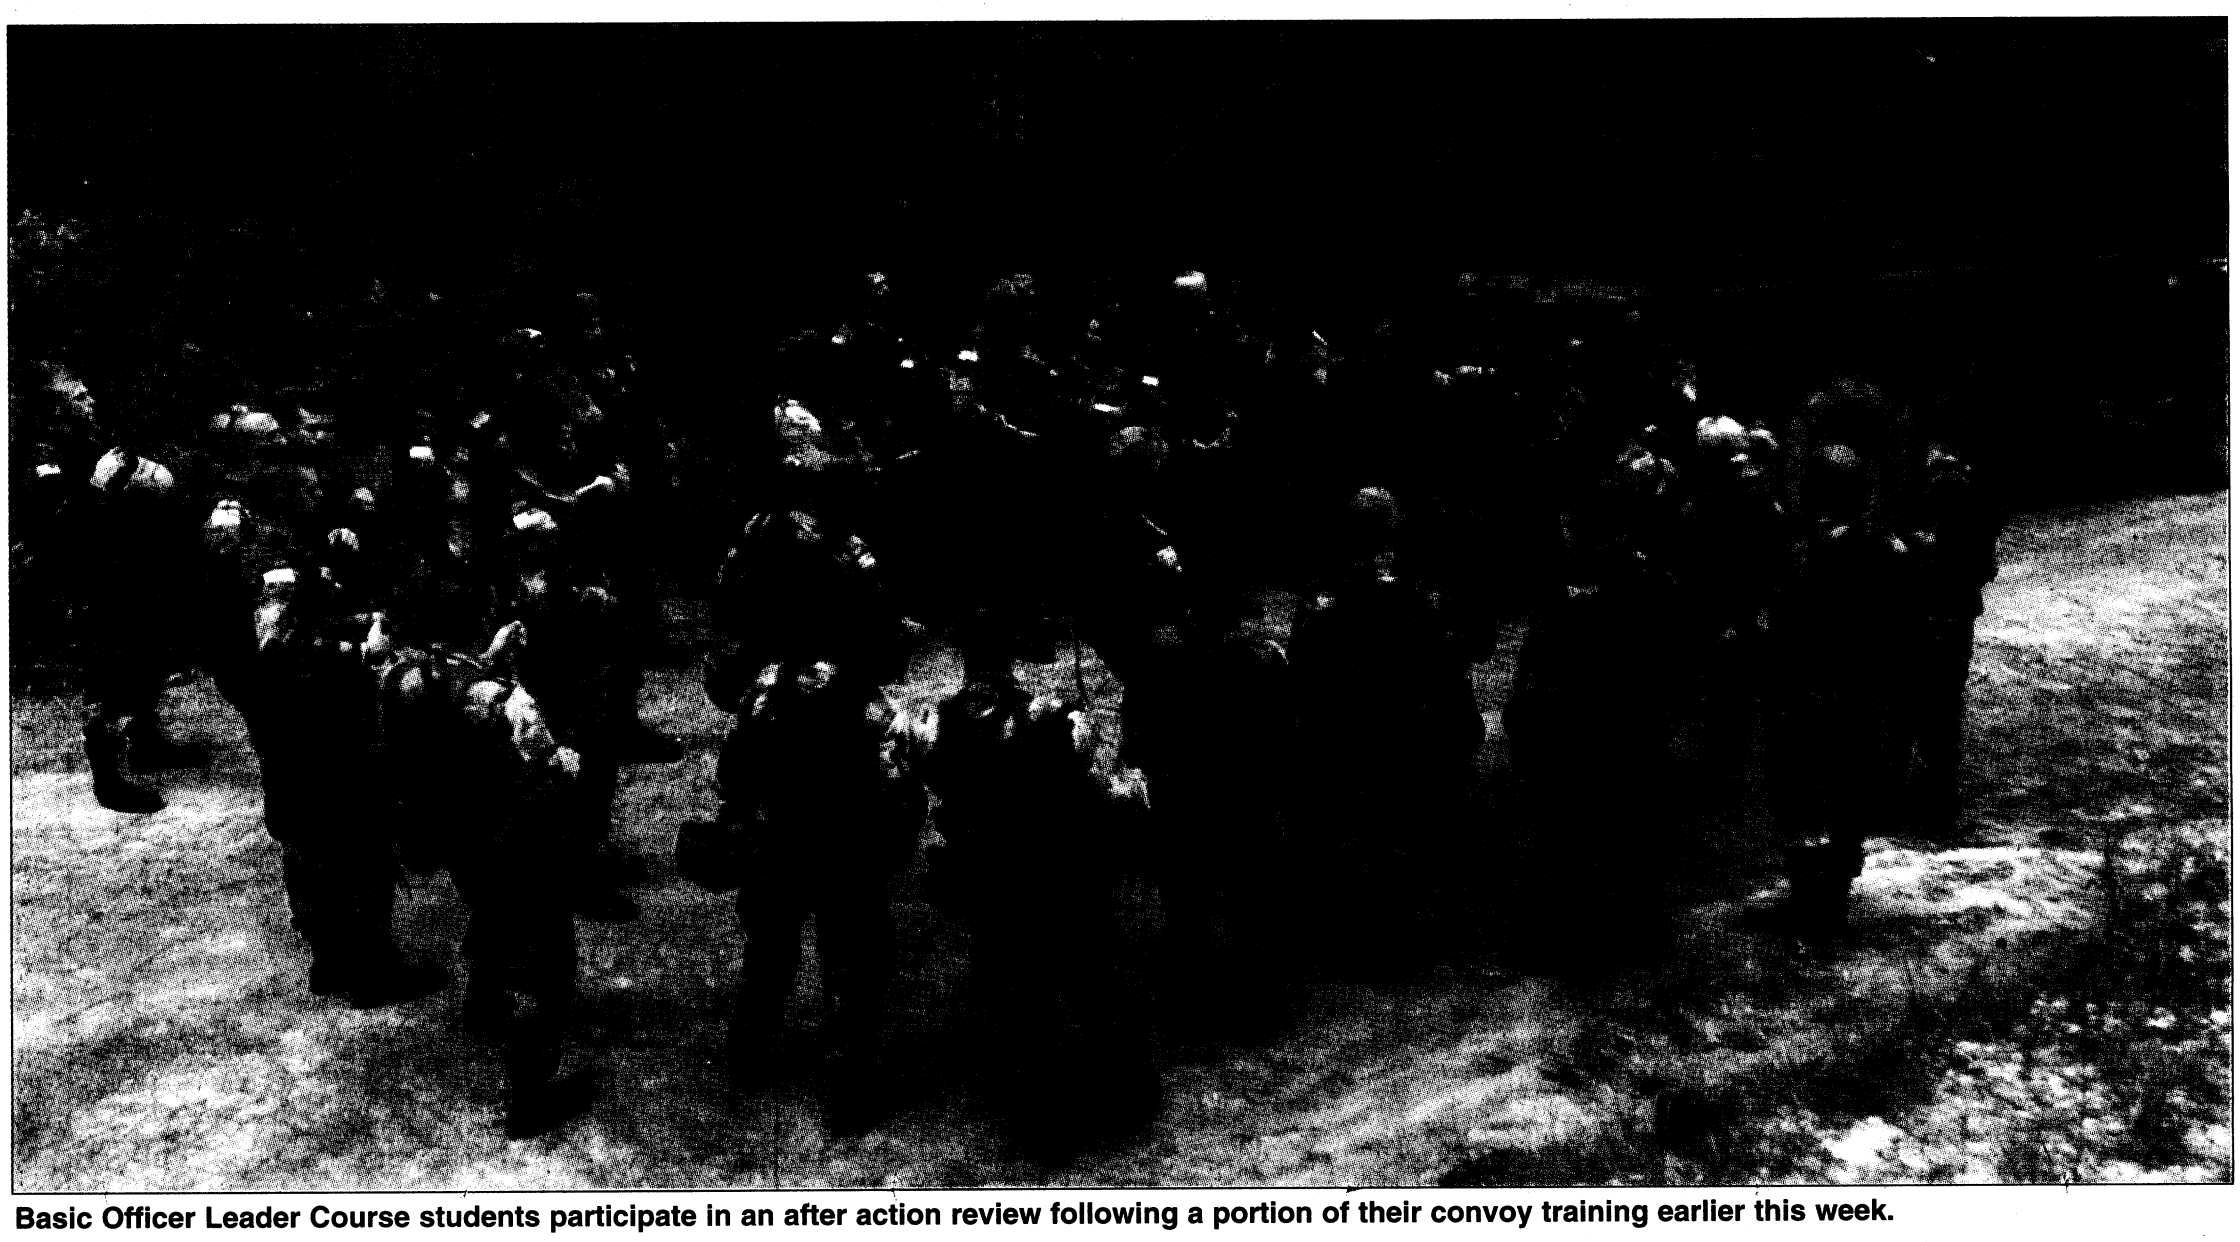
The new Army lawyer said this kind of training was important for those in her branch, too.

She said training with the cadre and learning from people who have "been there and done that" gives her confidence, not only with her equipment, but her new skills.

She even volunteered for the course in hopes of gaining more experience.

"Now that I'm here, I'm glad I came," Wise said.

"Even though they crammed us with information here, we will hear about this again and at least have a clue as to what they are talking about.



"I guess I could say I'm being prepared for an inevitable deployment."

The students of BOLC II will graduate Aug. 25.

Soldiers test enhanced weapon system

.50-caliber machine gun gets upgrade

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Pfc. Danny Adkins and Spc. Jaroslaw Markiewicz, right, fire blank rounds from an Enhanced .50-caliber machine gun at Griswold Range Aug. 11.

Fort Benning Soldiers tested a new prototype for the only weapon system used in every war since World War I.

The Directorate of Combat Developments, in conjunction with Fort Benning's Soldier Battle Lab, conducted a week-long evaluation of the Enhanced .50-caliber machine gun, which may one day replace the standard M-2 .50-caliber machine gun, also known as "Ma Deuce."

Soldiers were trained to fire the original version of the M-2 and then compare it with the enhanced version, which includes new features that make it quicker and safer to use.

Integrated in the Army during the first World War, the M-2, was originally designed as a water-cooled heavy machine gun, said Staff Sgt. Robert Jones, crew served project non-commissioned officer for the DCD, Small Arms Division.

The sleeve that covered the barrel had water in it, making it act as a radiator, which cooled the barrel after use.

The heavy barrel was later redesigned and a metal handle was added to assist in removing the barrels when they got hot.

This new handle created the need for a headspace gauge to ensure the space between the barrel and the bolt, where the round is seated, is set properly, he said. Timing also needed to be set to ensure the firing pin strikes the bullet at the proper time to prevent the predetonation of the round.

"When the headspace is set properly you're ensuring the bolt and barrel are matched so the round is fully seated in the chamber," he said. "Timing will determine when the firing pin is shot or strikes the round."

The new barrel on the E.50 consists of a support sleeve, handle, a guide pin and a flash suppressor.

The new barrel support keeps the barrel from wavering while firing. It also has an alignment slot, called a J-slot, to guide the barrel into a locked position.

The handle is made from a plastic composite that won't melt when the weapon heats from use. This makes for a quicker barrel change, because the Soldier can remove the barrel without using a thermal glove.

The guide pin allows for proper alignment of the barrel to the barrel extension group, which means when a Soldier locks the barrel in, it will be properly headspaced, Jones said. The fixed headspace concept for the E.50 allows for barrel interchangability without making any adjustments or gauging.

Currently it takes about 45 seconds to change a barrel on the standard M-2. With the enhanced features, changing the barrel can take as little as seven seconds.

> "The suppressor reduces the flash and makes it harder for the enemy to detect our position."

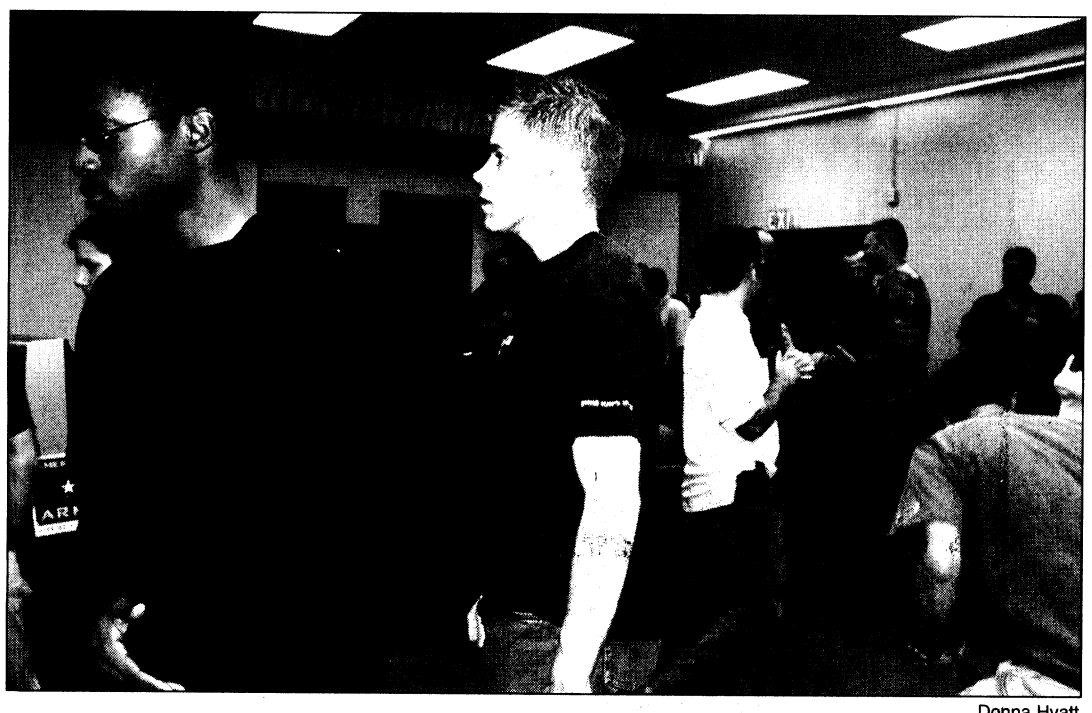
"The more time you're out of the firefight, the more time you're at risk," said Sgt. Jeffery Minton, 36th Engineer Group. "In a combat situation, time is money."

"Time is lives," said Spc. Craig Smalls, 36th Engineer Group.

And to help save more lives, the enhanced .50-caliber prototype offers more safety features.

The new flash suppressor at the end of the barrel reduces flash by about 50 percent.

"When the enemy is on the other end of the barrel, the first thing he sees is a flame that gives our position away," Jones said.



"The suppressor reduces the flash and makes it harder for the enemy to detect our position." The M-2 does not have a safety lock."

The enhanced weapon has a manual safety mechanism, or lock, on its backplate to prevent a loaded weapon from firing.

"We have Soldiers driving around in downtown Baghdad, and if they hit a bump, there could be a misfire, possibly resulting in an injury or death," Jones said. "The safety on the E.50 will prevent misfires."

A pickatinny rail has also been added to allow optics, like lasers and heavy thermal weapons, to be mounted on the machine gun. This feature assists the Soldier in accurately targeting the enemy, Jones said.

"And that is the purpose of the evaluation," Jones said. "To continue the mission of giving the Soldiers the best equipment possible to fight and win in war."

New Army game based on real Army life unveiled here

Game box version goes on sale in Oct.

Donna Hyatt
Bayonet staff

Following the success of the computer game America's Army, a new Xbox and PlayStation 2 console version called America's Army, Rise of a Soldier was unveiled Wednesday at Fort Benning.

Three years ago the Army released America's Army, a free computer game originally created for recruiting purposes, which became an instant gaming success.

At last count, the Army estimates there are more than five and a half million registered players of America's Army, making it the fifth or sixth most popular computer game played in the world.

More gamers play on a console such as Xbox and PS2 rather than on a computer, said Col. Casey Wardynski, an internal consultant from the U.S. Military Academy, and Army project director for America's Army, Rise of a Soldier.

The new game was designed in conjunction with Ubisoft, a leading international developer, publisher and distributor of interactive entertainment products.

"The PC version and the new version are different, but we took a lot of the experience and the look of the game from the PC game," said Tony Van, executive producer for Ubisoft.

"There are some things completely unique about America's Army, Rise of a Soldier, but anyone who played the (computer) game will notice some things we kept from the original."

Van said it took about one year to develop the new console-only version of the Army game.

"We did a number of motion-captures with different special forces Soldiers and filmed different locations around the world to make it as authentic as possible," he said.

"We've had a number of Army personnel come through during its development," Van said. "And everyone's remarked how realistic it is, how authentic it is and how all the details are exactly right."

According to Van, the new console game has a number of extra things such as a full character model that can be created from the ground up, and the option of playing alone or as part of a team.

"You can go anywhere from recruit to special forces," he said. "It has an open-ended career mode so a player can choose how to move through their Army career.

"You start with no skills and as you go through the game and build up skills, you create a custom character that increases your own ability and the ability of your teammates," Van said.

America's Army, Rise of a Soldier is expected to go on sale in early October.

The original America's Army game is based upon the different training schools and terrain found at Fort Benning.

"There's a reason for that," Wardynski said. "Many of the kids playing it are going to come in the Army, and we want them to feel like they've been here before. Like they're hitting the ground running. They've captured everything down to the dirt."

"Fort Benning has an interesting history with the game because the PC version takes a player through basic training. He can even go to Airborne school and Ranger school," said Maj. Randy Zeegers, 20th Special Forces Group, Alabama National Guard.

"As he goes through different schools, he is able to play different levels," he said.

A new Internet download for America's Army called Overmatch will also come out in the fall.

"It's designed to show the overmatch capabilities the Army has, like Javelin missiles and all the stuff the enemy can't bring to bear," Wardynski said.

America's Army can be downloaded free of charge at www.americasarmy.com.

Incoming!

Forewarned is forearmed after combat

Kris Gonzalez
Bayonet staff

Carolyn woke up to the sound of legs kicking her bed. She quickly threw her own legs across her husband, Boyce.

He woke abruptly and asked, "What did you do that for?"

"You were running," she said.

"Oh. I thought I heard somebody yell 'Incoming,'" he said before going back to sleep.

For years to come, Vietnam veteran Boyce Fields would have flashbacks and the occasional nightmare about the trauma he endured while fighting in the longest war in America's history. Even today, he can feel the vibrations of a helicopter flying miles away. It's a "happy sound," he said, because in Vietnam, the sound of a chopper meant a Medevac or gunship was on its way.

Fields is one of thousands of American veterans who suffered from and learned to cope with post-traumatic stress, or "post war syndrome" as he calls it.

Today, 30 years after the last living American Soldier was lifted out of Vietnam, Fields is helping a new generation of Soldiers and their families learn to cope with the stresses they face while fighting "a totally different war from those of the past."

"In Vietnam, there was no focus," said Fields, a Care Manager for Fort Benning's Social Work Care Manager Program.

"There wasn't a downtown," said Elaine Kelly, Field's supervisor and fellow Care Manager. "Sometimes (the Vietnam war) moved into the city, but this war is like fighting in downtown New York. It's in the streets, in town after town. This is not jungle warfare. This is urban warfare."

Fields and Kelly said they act as "liaisons" to help Soldiers get counseling to resolve issues related to their deployments. They "provide an atmosphere where issues can be discussed in comfort and safety with the added benefit of confidentiality."

"This is not a mental health program," Kelly said. "We're trying to take away the stigma that surrounds counseling. We want to make people feel more comfortable about getting help."

Fields and Kelly offer short-term counseling to Soldiers and their families, then help the patients identify their needs and may refer them to other services for continued support,

"Maybe that person needs help from a doctor or the Family Advocacy Program," Kelly said. "Maybe that panic attack or that anxiety he or she is

Chaplain "on call" when Memories come back to haunt

Bridgett Siter
Bayonet staff

The story of how Army chaplains became family counselors predates the war on terrorism by 30 years at least. It starts, in fact, after the Vietnam War, when battalion commanders began to rely on their chaplains for help in dealing with Soldiers who were dealing with the symptoms of what is now known as post-traumatic stress disorder.

She signed up to be a truck driver. In Iraq, she became a warrior, with strict instructions to let nothing impede the progress of her convoy.

So when a 10-year-old Iraqi boy stepped into her path one dark night, she did the only thing she knew to do. The memory still haunts her. So much so that it hampers her ability to "mother" her own 10-year-old boy now that she's home.

That's why she went looking for counseling.

Hers is just one of the very real cases seven "mid-career" chaplains studied during the 15 months of training they completed to become marriage and family therapists. Last week, they graduated with masters degrees in community counseling from Columbus State University.

"As chaplains, we've been counselors on a very basic level for some time," said Chaplain (Maj.) Tammie Crews, who's assigned to Fort Irwin, Calif.

"Most of us are going to serve at posts where Soldiers are returning from Iraq or Afghanistan every day, so we need to do what we do even better.

"This training gave us the technical skills to do what we've been doing all along, but to do it better and to feel more confident about it."

WEAK TO WEAK
Spouses find strength in sharing ups and downs

Kris Gonzalez

When her husband deployed to Iraq in January, Stacy Richardson, mother of three, thought she might have difficulty juggling her own responsibilities with the extra duties she acquired in his absence. And for the first two months, it was as she expected — tough. But a friend saw that Richardson was in need of support and introduced her to a network of people going through similar hardships.

Now Richardson is learning to live life one week at a time.

"Just as one wife put it, 'I measure my life now from Thursday to Thursday,'" she said.

Richardson attends the "Keeping it Together" Support Group every Thursday from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Sightseeing Road Chapel.

"The support group has been the single most successful tool for helping spouses cope with deployments," said Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey Hawkins, Family Life chaplain. It's open to all family members of deployed Soldiers.

"It's a chance to share your week and what's been going on," Hawkins said. "It's a way to get your batteries recharged."

The group starts each meeting with dinner provided by donations or potluck. Carabbas will be providing the meal next week.

"Eating is very therapeutic," Hawkins said.

Richardson said the dinner is one of her favorite aspects of the meetings because she doesn't have to worry about the stress of cooking for herself and three children one night a week.

After dinner, the members break into small groups and discuss random topics chosen by Hawkins,

Chaplains: Share training, experience

what is now known as post-traumatic stress disorder.

Most chaplains, with only two or three college courses in counseling under their belts, were willing but not necessarily able. So Department of Defense officials instituted a program 10 years ago to "train the trainers" — the chaplains who will pass along their newfound knowledge and skills to chaplains at their posts who deal with families in crisis on a daily basis. These days there's an emphasis on treating those who suffer the affects of PTSD, including spouses and children.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Tom Waynick, Fort Benning's director and clinical supervisor for the Family Life Training Program, knows first-hand the trauma Soldiers and their families face during wartime. He's been both.

Waynick was just a boy when his dad left for Vietnam, admonishing his son to be "the man of the house." The responsibility weighed heavy.

"I was the oldest, but I was just a kid," Waynick said. "My mother would watch the news every night and cry, and I'd want to do something — I felt like I was supposed to do something — to help, but I had no idea what to do."

Flash forward to February 2003, when Waynick took part in the invasion of Baghdad. The experience changed him, as it does everybody whose ever been to war, he said. No one escapes. Not even chaplains.

Waynick realized he was exhibiting mild symptoms of PTSD one Sunday morning, when he "blew up" at his family before chapel service.

"I was obsessed with getting there on time, and I became very impatient and angry," he said. "Down range, punctuality was vital. If you're late, someone can get killed. It was sobering at that very moment to realize I had transferred that urgency home. The realization helped. I got better."

Trite but true, the recognition that one has a problem is the first step toward finding a solution, Waynick said. Though Soldiers receive debriefing about stress-related behaviors after deployments, they're not always "totally tuned in."

Much as an airplane passenger embarking on vacation might pay cursory attention to preflight safety instructions, redeploying Soldiers are likely to allow thoughts of home to interfere with their concentration during debriefing. Though the symptoms of PTSD typically appear within months of return, they can become more pronounced, and therefore more noticeable, as time wears on, long after a Soldier has forgotten how to recognize them for what they are.

That's why it's often a spouse, commander or doctor who recommends counseling. The healing process, Waynick said, will likely include all three.

"The standard modality includes medication, when necessary, and family or group therapy. Often both," he said. "Though we fill a special niche throughout the Army, we don't work alone. We have a great relationship with the other resources on post and in the local community."

It pays to have so many people looking out for the welfare of Soldiers and their families, Waynick said, because it's easy for the layperson to overlook the symptoms of distress. After all, Soldiers in the throes of PTSD often alienate themselves from the people closest to them.

"Family therapy recognizes the importance of attachment figures in the overall mental and spiritual health of an individual," Waynick said. "An attachment figure is someone you've developed a secure relationship with. It's your spouse or a parent or a friend or even God. If I have healthy relationships, I can withstand severe trauma. With time, I can work it out. But that doesn't mean, for a time, I won't try to alienate myself from those very relationships."

Soldiers, sometimes a year or so after they return from combat, may experience sudden loss of pleasure, irritability, nightmares or "intrusive, disturbing thoughts," Waynick said. These don't always signal a full-blown case of PTSD, but they're symptoms nonetheless, and should be treated before they escalate.

> "PTSD is like the grieving process. In a way, it is a grieving process. Grief has its own timetable. Some take months, some years, some longer. That's the way it is with PTSD."
> Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Tom Waynick
> Director, Family Life Training Program

"PTSD is like the grieving process. In a way, it is a grieving process," he said. "Grief has its own timetable. Some take months, some years, some longer. That's the way it is with PTSD."

For some Fort Benning Soldiers, the process is expedited by back-to-back deployments. Before Kelley Hill Soldiers from the 3rd Brigade departed early this year for their second tour in Iraq, Family Life chaplains saw a spike in the number of couples seeking counseling.

"These were Soldiers committed to making their marriages work, and they knew they needed to deal with the last deployment before they left for this one," Waynick said. "That's not uncommon. We see surges before deployments and the first three months after."

In fact, more than half of the "cases" chaplains counsel are couples, he said, since the war has wreaked havoc on Army marriages and brought PTSD to the forefront of counseling programs once again as more and more Soldiers return as emotional trauma casualties.

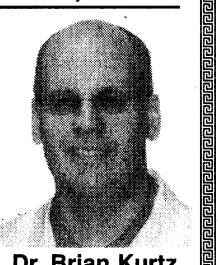
That's why the chaplains who graduated from the Fort Benning program last week were carefully screened and selected by the Department of the Army. Five were combat veterans and most had at least 10 years in service.

While studying at CSU, which is contracted to do the training, the chaplains conducted a total of 3,200 hours of supervised counseling on post.

With civilian counselors charging about $100 per hour, that saved the Army and the Soldiers an incredible amount of money.

"It's a good deal any way you look at it," Waynick said. "They got an incredible education — as good as any I've seen in the civilian world — better than most. The Army saves a lot of money, and these chaplains go back to their posts where they'll train and supervise others to do the same."

Crews, who served six years in the Army Reserves before coming on active duty as a chaplain eight years ago, said the training at Fort Benning, which was a 15-month PCS assignment, allowed the chaplains to break from their regular duties to concentrate on learning to help families heal in the aftermath of war.

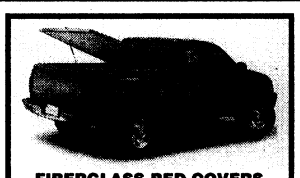


Having returned from a year in Iraq just one month before arriving at Fort Benning for the course, Crews found herself dealing with the symptoms of PTSD even as she learned to help others deal with them.

"I came back from an extremely stressful situation and had to jump right back into work," she said. "I found myself getting angry at first, but as the year progressed and I learned more and recognized what was going on, I began to settle down."

Having experienced the problem and the solution firsthand, Crews said she feels better equipped to help others through the process.

"On the whole, the problem's not going away. We're going to see more and more Soldiers, like the woman who was a truck driver and a single mom — people who come back from a very stressful situation and have to reconnect with the people who are important to them.



"We're going to see it a lot, and counseling is the one thing I know will help."

Operation One Voice — The Duluth Police, Gwinnett County Fire and Emergency Services and Georgia State Patrol, as part of Operation One Voice, will join the Atlanta Corvette Club in an Alpharetta to Fort Benning Corvette Ride in a show of support to troops and their families.

The motorcade will be at the National Infantry Museum at 12:30 p.m. Aug. 20 and will depart at 2:30 p.m.

For more information, call the Duluth Police Department at (678) 417-9262.

Super Sign Up — The Officers' Spouses' Club Super Sign Up is at 6 p.m. Aug. 25 at the Officers' Club. The Enlisted Spouses Club will join the OSC and all enlisted spouses are welcome.

For more information on the ESC, call (334) 298-2999.

Defensive Driving Course — The Child and Youth Services Middle School and Teen Program will offer a Defensive Driving Course for students with a Georgia State Learner's Permit. The course is a free four-hour online course.

Parents can use the completion of this course to help lower insurance rates 10 to 20 percent, depending on the company.

Students will have their own passwords to enter the site. There are a limited number of passwords issued to Fort Benning for this program. Sign up ends Aug. 31. This course can be taken in Building 1056. CYS members can apply.

For more information, call 545-3070 or 545-7945.

EENT clinic school screenings — The EENT clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital conducts eyes, ears and dental screenings for all children entering a Georgia public school for the first time.

The screenings are by appointment only from 1 to 3 p.m. on Wednesday afternoons. The child's medical records, ID and medical cards are required.

For an appointment, call 544-2273.

Power of attorney for housing residents — Soldiers planning to deploy between now and Nov. 30, whose families wish to continue to occupy family housing, need to execute a special power of attorney permitting spouses to sign the required resident occupancy agreement with Pinnacle Military Housing. The power of attorney is available at Legal Assistance Division, Building 5, and can be done on a walk-in basis.

For more information, call 545-0667 or the Housing Office at 545-2990. For questions on power of attorney, call OSJA at 545-3281.

feeling can be treated with medication. We help them identify what's going on and try to understand what's going on with their families as well. War doesn't just affect the Soldiers. It affects the families, from the spouse to the children, and to the parents."

"I have parents call me all the time," Fields said. "I've had parents of a former reservist call and say, 'My son is acting weird. Who should I call?' I got them in touch with their nearest Veterans Affairs office."

Fields and Kelly said they found that most times, Soldiers are still dealing with problems they had before they left, and those problems have only been compounded by what they experienced at war.

"They're suffering the affects of things like sleep deprivation," Kelly said. "And it's frustrating for Soldiers who are fighting IEDs. They're not fighting people, but things – lethal weapons."

"I had one Soldier who said he wouldn't drive over anything," Fields said, "because IEDs were buried in anything — bags, dead animals, MRE containers. His wife was wondering why he was avoiding things on the road."

"I had a Soldier who said she was sitting in traffic and when a car backfired, the first thing she did was fall down on the seat of the car," Kelly said. "She had been back from war for a few months and had not even been thinking about her experiences until the car backfired. Now there was immediate panic at the traffic light."

Fields and Kelly, who primarily focus on Soldiers returning from war who need help reintegrating into society, said there are always signs that someone may be having difficulty dealing with a traumatic event.

"They may experience sleep disturbances, anxiety, depression, hyper-alertness," Fields said. "They may have trouble in big crowds. They may go into isolation or have intrusive thoughts. They may have problems getting certain images out of their heads."

Fields and Kelly offer to the families the following tips for helping deployed Soldiers cope with their issues now, as they're facing combat in Iraq or Afghanistan.

"Get them to talk about what's going on," said Kelly, who thinks communication is the key to helping Soldiers work through their stress. "What we've found is the more they talk about it, the more they gain control of it."

"But remember," Kelly said, "you're not his therapist. Even if you're on the phone, remember you're not trying to treat him. Your job is to be supportive. Encourage them to talk, listen to what they say and accept their boundaries. Sometimes those boundaries are their coping skills."

Kelly addressed the fact that some Soldiers hold back from telling their family members too much, in order to protect the family.

"If you know your loved one, and you see they're showing signs like isolating themselves, but you don't think they want to talk to you, encourage them to talk to someone else," Kelly said. "You can say 'maybe you need to talk to someone other than me.'"

Kelly suggested encouraging Soldiers to talk to counselors, chaplains, social workers or other Soldiers.

> "I had a Soldier who said she was sitting in traffic and when a car backfired, the first thing she did was fall down on the seat of the car. She had been back from war for a few months and had not even been thinking about her experiences until the car backfired. Now there was immediate panic at the traffic light."

"Sometimes they don't realize their battle buddies need to talk too," she said. "They can be a support system for each other."

Fields suggests encouraging the Soldier to keep a journal.

"When things happen over there, it sometimes happens in a disorganized way, very chaotic," Kelly said. "Writing gives them some organization, some control."

As far as writing to the Soldiers, Kelly suggests that family members write letters versus e-mailing.

"Letters are more personal," Kelly said. "When you're e-mailing, you tend to use different language, pound it out quickly, click it and send it. If you had to write it out, you could slow things down and write from the heart."

"The Soldiers get excited when they hear mail-call," Fields said. "They want to get letters from their spouses and children."

Fields recommends that children write their own letters to parents, who may in turn send letters back.

"It's therapeutic for both the parent and child," he said.

Field said adding more to the letters to make them even more interesting, like writing something humorous, or spraying the paper with a nice scent, can boost a Soldier's morale. Another suggestion Kelly makes to wives is to become more independent.

"Be able to function when your husband is gone," she said. "Make sure you can pay the bills, know where the life insurance papers are, how to get the car fixed, how to cut the grass — it is something that you have to learn how to do.

"You can't call a Soldier and say, 'What am I supposed to do, I can't cut the grass?'" Kelly said. "If the Soldier is worried about the family back home, they are distracted, and you don't want a soldier to be distracted over there."

Fields and Kelly agree on one last tip to help relieve the stress of Soldiers coming back from combat — accept that he or she has probably changed.

"Support and understand, that he is different," Kelly said. "And accept that, so are you."

Support: Group meets weekly

like "What did you do for your summer vacation?"

They also play a game called Highs and Lows, where each member tells her highest, or happiest, point in their week and their lowest, or saddest.

Everyone in the group commits to two ground rules before participating — be kind and keep things confidential.

"Nobody gets beat up or emotionally abused," Hawkins said. "And everything that's said there, stays there."

Toward the end of each meeting, the groups come together and present their needs to one big group.

"Maybe somebody's had an especially tough week," Hawkins said. "We'll take that time, just to circle around and encourage anybody who's had a particularly tough week."

On any given night, there will be 20 to 30 family members at the meeting, and an equal number of children, Hawkins said. Childcare is provided free for children younger than 10.

Hawkins said participation is optional. Nobody is pressured to share issues, but the group provides such a comfortable forum, the members "tend to resonate well with what's going on with the others.

"Sharing has never been a problem with that group," Hawkins said. "It's a lot of laughter, a lot of loving and some tears from time to time. There have been challenges during tough weeks, they (the members) are their own antidotes for the blues."

"Everybody's in the same boat together," he said. "Good things happen when everybody is coming from the same place. So when there's a week when somebody's up, you can rejoice and be up with them. When there's a week when somebody's down, the chances are there's somebody in that group who has experienced that same sort of feeling."

"We all share a common bond," Richardson said. "It's really helped me stay positive, which helps my husband stay positive because it makes him feel good knowing I have support back home."

Hawkins said the support group, established in January when 3rd Brigade deployed, has met every week since.

"We knew that deployments were a challenge, so we wanted to do anything that would make things easier," he said. "Any tool we can give, any plank we can lay in the bridge to build a better marriage, helps retain our greatest resources, our Soldiers and their families. Our greatest weapon is the American Soldier and the family that supports him. We don't want to lose or break that system, so we're doing what we can."

"This group is the Army's way of saying we honor you and we understand the tremendous price you're paying to make all this possible," he said.

Prevent serious heat injuries, illnesses

Dr. Verle Valentine
MCG Sports Medicine Center

Athletes and those working outside in the late summer months are at risk for heat-related injuries, ranging from heat cramps to heat exhaustion to heat stroke, which can be deadly. To help avoid heat illness and dehydration, as well as improve performance, the MCG Sports Medicine Center offers the following tips.

Prevention

Heat and humidity are a bad combination, as humid air slows evaporation of sweat from your skin. Evaporation helps keep you cool on hot days. To help prevent heat illness:

- Plan activities early or late in the day or decrease intensity of the workout.
- Stay in the shade if possible.
- Wear lightweight and light-colored clothing, preferably items that wick sweat.
- Wear a hat and sunscreen.
- Allow a few days to give your body time to get used to the heat prior to strenuous activity.
- People who are overweight or have other medical conditions are at high risk for dehydration and heat illness. They should consult their physician before starting any exercise program.

Hydration

The biggest mistake is not hydrating properly. Follow these guidelines before you exercise or work outside.

- Don't use thirst as your guide. Drinking only when thirsty is too late.
- Water is good for general hydration. If you are exercising strenuously, salt and carbohydrate-containing drinks such as Powerade or Gatorade are a better choice.
- Drink 16 to 20 ounces of fluid one to two hours prior to outdoor exercise to ensure you are properly hydrated.
- Drink every 20 minutes, especially when active for longer than one hour.
- Eat carbohydrate- and salty foods if you are active for longer than one hour.
- Weigh yourself before and after to determine your sweat rate, and replace every pound lost with 16 ounces of fluid (water or sports drink).
- Avoid alcohol and caffeine as they cause you to dehydrate more rapidly.

Signs of dehydration

Know the early warning signs:

- Thirst
- Cramps
- Irritability
- Headache
- Nausea
- Weakness
- Dizziness
- Decreased performance

If you experience any signs of dehydration, get out of the heat immediately, cool down with a fan and drink fluids to rehydrate. If you do not recover or have a more serious problem, seek medical help.

Many factors can contribute to heat illness. But taking the proper precautions and knowing the warning signs can help you stay safe in the heat.

Vietnam veteran's book geared toward today's combat Soldiers, families

Melissa House
Bayonet staff

"It took me more than 20 years to admit Vietnam had affected my life. In that time period, I left a trail of broken marriages and families with much discord. You do not have to let this be your story."

— Chuck Dean,
Down Range to Iraq and Back

More than 40 years since he went to Vietnam with the 173rd Airborne Brigade, Chuck Dean still has the best interest of Soldiers and their families at heart. His newest book, cowritten with Bridget Cantrell, Ph.D., is hot off the presses and covers a topic Dean thinks is important for Soldiers returning from Iraq and Afghanistan – post-traumatic stress disorder.

In 1987, Dean published his first book, Nam Vet, addressing the spiritual and emotional issues caused by serving in a combat zone. The new book, he said, uses the same basic idea, but with contemporary language and ideas.

"As a veteran who suffered," Dean said. "I do not want the same stuff to happen to these guys that happened to us when we came back."

And this book, he said is dedicated to bringing the troops home and addressing the challenges of reintegration.

After Vietnam, Dean spent two years as a drill sergeant. Through the years, he's maintained close ties with the present-day Soldiers of the unit he went into combat with. He earned a degree in religion and has served as the National Chaplain (Emeritus) for the 173rd Airborne Brigade Society.

This relationship with the 173rd led Dean and Cantrell to develop a workbook course called "Turning Your Heart Toward Home," designed to help Soldiers reintegrate and rebuild relationships with loved ones at home. In May, 2004, they traveled to Vicenza, Italy, to speak with more than 2,500 Soldiers about PTSD.

Dean, who made three combat jumps into Vietnam with the 173rd, said he felt he could help the Soldiers who made a parachute jump into Afghanistan in 2003.

"We were there for seventeen days," Dean said, "and the book is a result of our observations and personal counselings during the trip." Sprinkled throughout are quotes from Operation Enduring Freedom and Iraqi Freedom veterans, including first-hand accounts from Soldiers at Logistic Support Area Anaconda, a place many deployed Soldiers have been.

Dean and Cantrell said the book was their attempt to make a caring contribution to help those who come home find a sense of peace.

"For the boots on the ground, Iraq may as well be Vietnam," Dean said. "The dark psychological fallout from this conflict sounds all too familiar to those who remember, and deal with, the aftermath of Vietnam."

A chapter called "Some Wounds are not Visible," takes readers through the "anatomy" of PTSD — symptoms and warning signs including anger, depression, alcohol and substance abuse.

Cantrell addresses first aid for PTSD and speaks of the importance of not trying to handle the stresses alone. Her 1997 research study of Vietnam veterans in Washington state led her to conclude that "social support is always a mediating factor in curbing potential difficulties with life performance and coping choices."

The book also covers information for Soldiers preparing to reunite with loved ones, a "self-care" checklist for leaders and the first part of the workbook course to help prepare families for the homecoming.

What's in your medicine cabinet?

Erin A. Nash
Bayonet staff

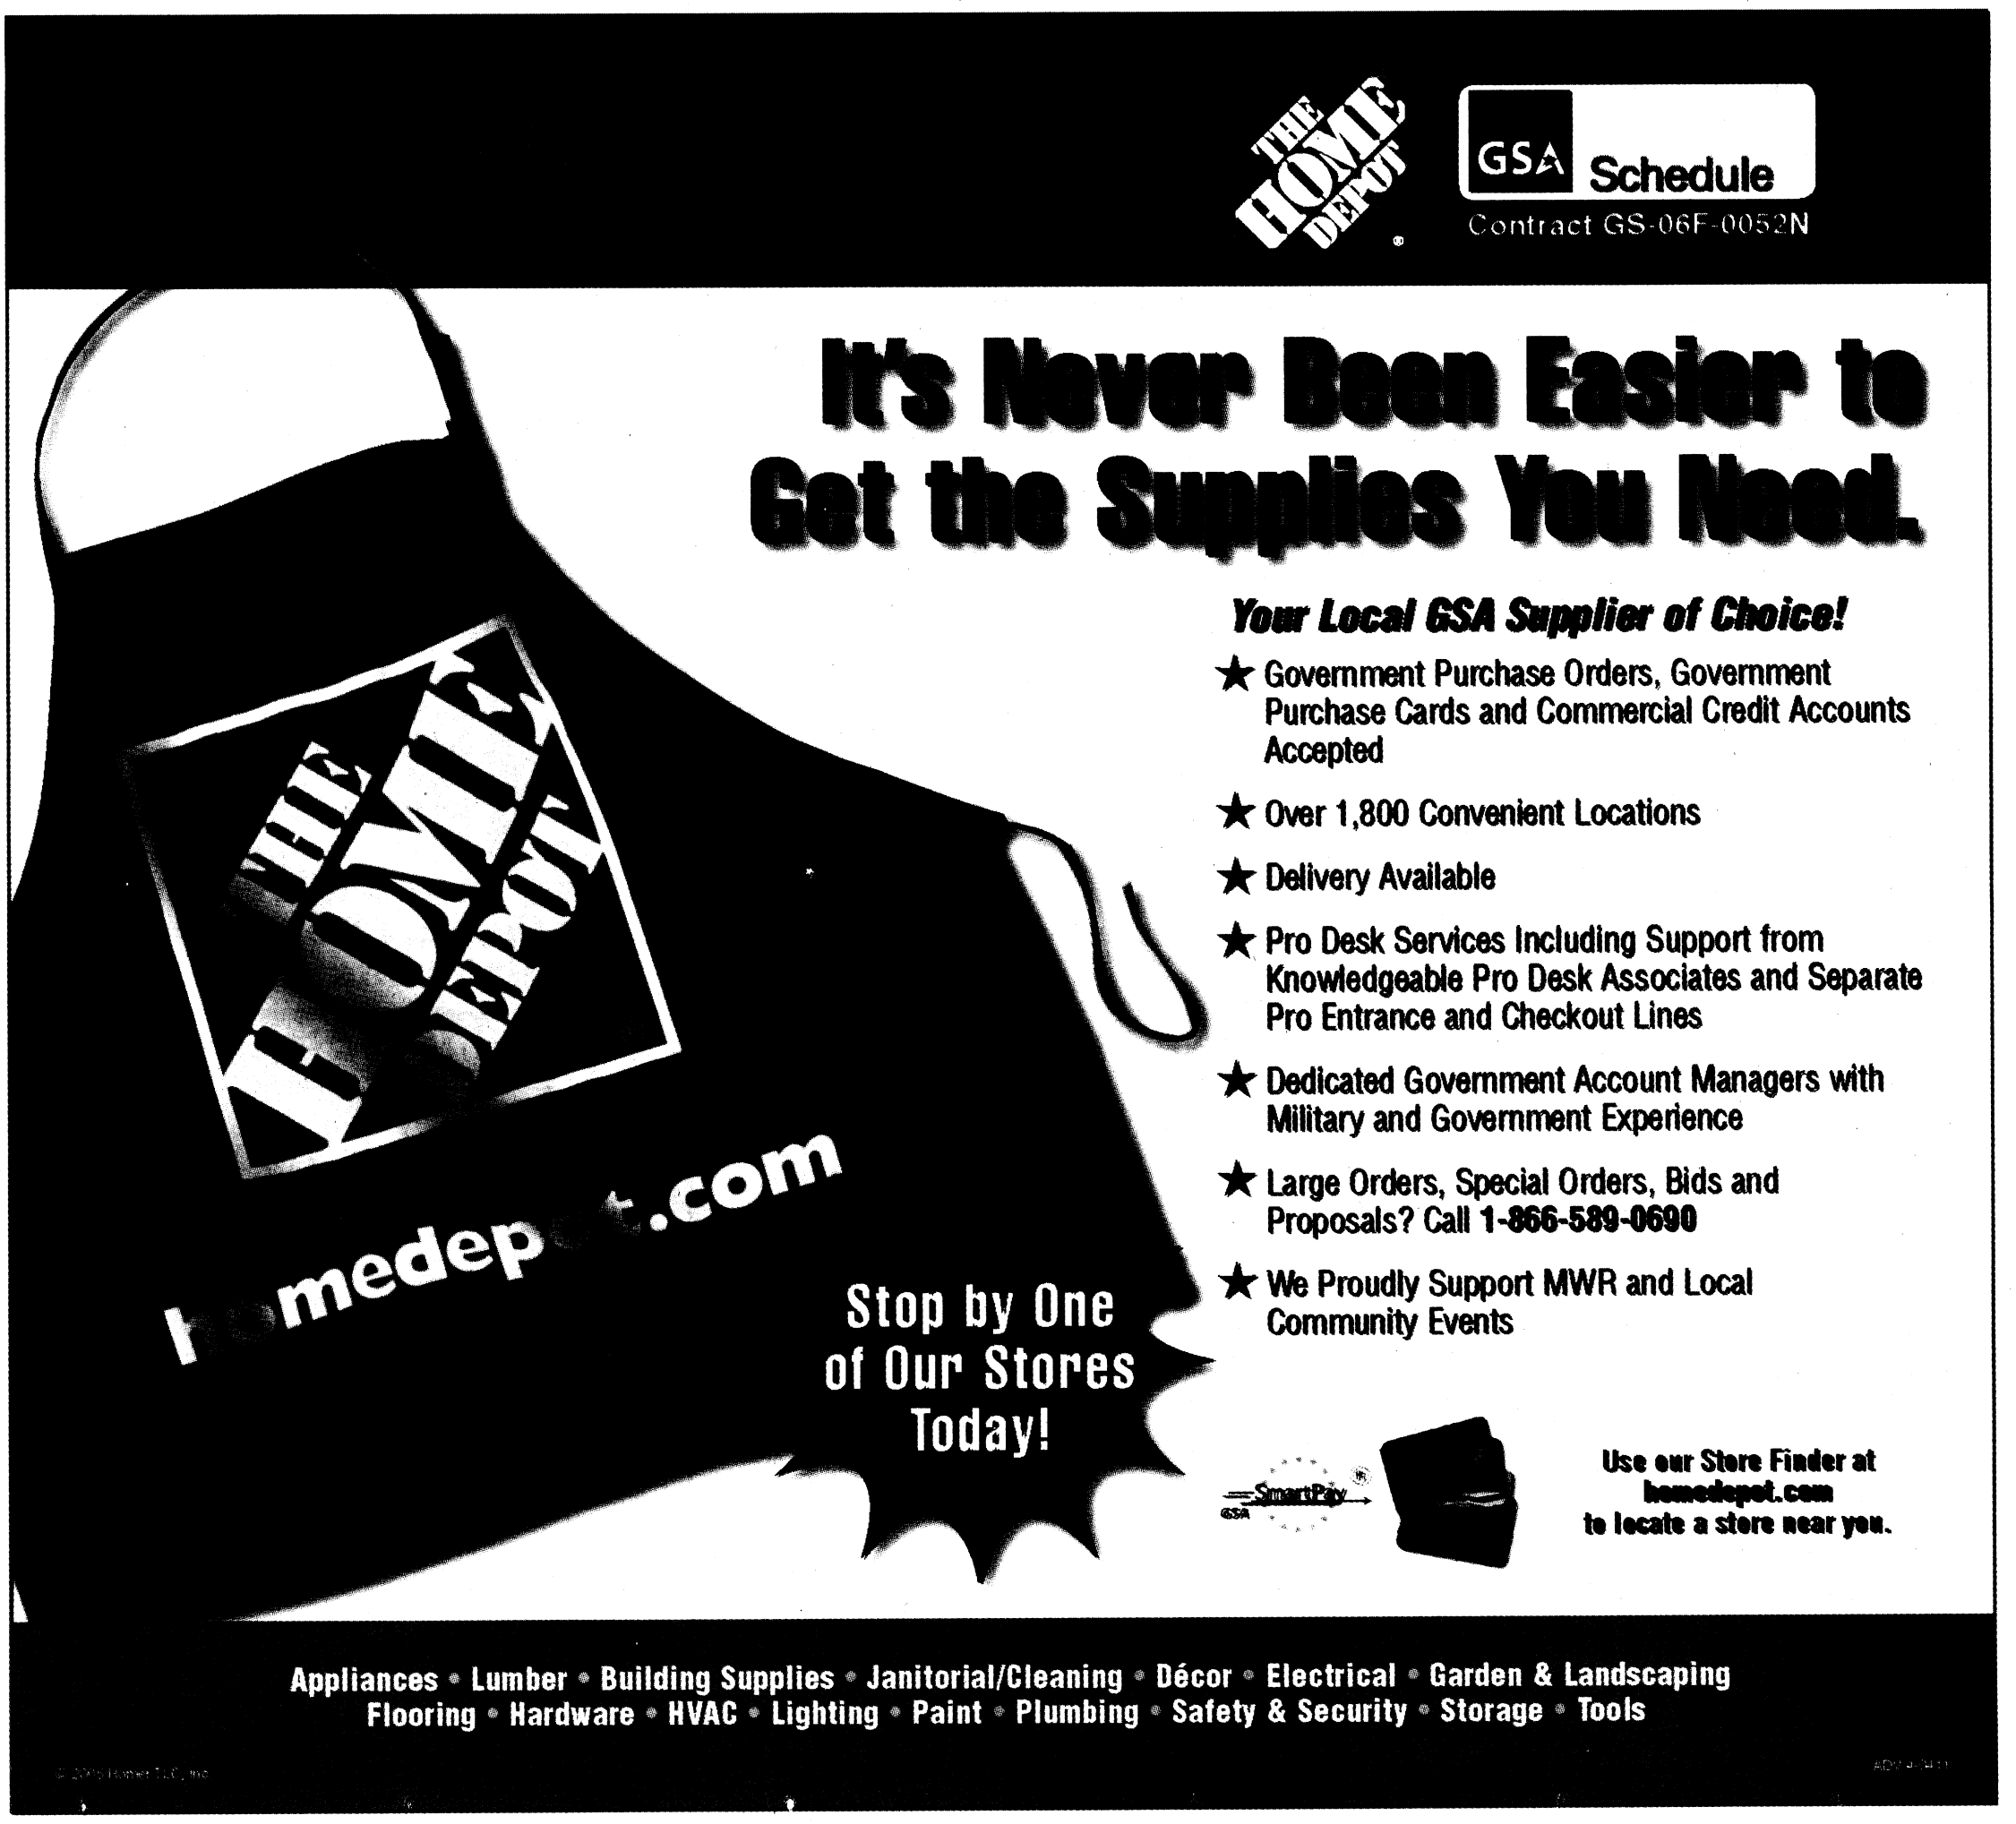
When my husband, now on his fourth combat deployment, left the first time in 2001, I didn't know where he was or when he was coming home. I worried nonstop, but I got through it. Then another deployment came. And another. With each, I learned new coping mechanisms. Now we're on our fourth, and recently, I let my secret slip, my way I cope with worry during deployments: I buy in bulk.

It sounds crazy, or "fascinating" as one co-worker put it, but it really works. Having 10 large jugs of laundry detergent makes me feel better. The 36 tubes of toothpaste makes me feel even better. And the 30 plus paperback books next to my recliner is downright bliss.

My best friend figured it out. "Erin," she said, "You can't control what's happening with your husband, but you can control how much stuff you have."

Some people find comfort in food or bubble baths — I find mine in Sam's Club, when I score an industrial-sized bathroom cleaner with two refill bottles. I'm obsessive, but as long as I'm buying "necessity" items I'm OK. If I came home with 20 bags of carrots that would just be wasteful. You always need toilet paper, so why not buy the 20-pack?

Everyone has their own comfort level, especially during deployments, no matter how long or short. The trick is to find that comfort.



There are many days when I want to feel sorry for myself because I have to be the mom and the dad, mow the lawn, take out the trash. That way of thinking will get you nowhere but down. I was born a pessimist and will die a pessimist, but during deployments, I become the eternal optimist. Why? I count my blessings.

Child-rearing is hard, but my husband will be home again to share parenting duties. I've chosen to look at my son as my blessing. If I didn't have him, there are days I wouldn't get out of bed. And I always remember that he has one-half of his dad's DNA, so I do have a piece of my husband here.

There's a litany of complaints I could vocalize daily, but what good would it do? Whining will get me nowhere. Looking at things on the positive side helps. Yeah, it's hot when I mow, but my husband's doing battle in 120 degrees. I have to be the "single" parent, but he has 40 guys to take care of.

I guess the key to coping with a deployment is looking on the bright side. Find your comfort zone and go with it (this is where I implore that it be safe and legal and not self-destructive). And get your hands off my "Buy 16 get 4 free" toilet paper.

Go fishing with dad

REFLECTIONS

Chaplain (Capt.) Charles Wood
Ranger Training Brigade

I sat across the table from my classmate, a fellow captain, a peer (although I was 20 years his senior) sharing life over a cup of coffee.

As he shed light on his past it became apparent that this was one of those stories with a happy ending rather than the often-heard disasters of modern society.

One thing kept shining through — he really loved his dad. He was his hero, a man of tall stature in his mind's eye, a father with exceptional character and presence.

My curiosity piqued, I finally asked, "What has made you love your dad so much?"

He blushed a little at having revealed so much, but indulged me with this explanation: "Well, my dad would do little things; he would take me out of school and we'd go to the lake for the rest of the afternoon, fishing and talking."

He assured me that this only happened once or twice a year, just in case the truancy officer was in the next booth, but I could tell he was talking about a treasured memory.

I interrupted his fond memories with this question: "What would you say if I told you I loved your dad as much as you did, based on your story?"

He scoffed, "No way!

"Why not?" I retorted, luring him in to the chaplains' ambush.

"Because you've never been fishing with my dad."

Ah, the perfect opening for a discussion on the need for a personal devotional life.

Isn't it true? We hear so much about others' time on the lake with the heavenly father and have relegated ourselves to these secondhand stories.

We hear the preacher, Sunday school teacher or the "real religious guys" talk about their relationship with the father, and we end up getting the leftovers. Why can't I go fishing with dad?

We can. Communion with the father is built on communications with him. As we spend time in the Bible and prayer, we get to know him and he speaks directly to our lives. We discover a sense of intimacy with God that's deep and full.

Moses experienced this kind of intimacy with God. In Exodus 33:11 we read, "The Lord would speak to Moses face to face, as a man speaks with his friends."

An amazing thing, to develop a relationship with the creator of all things. Sign me up!

Let me give this suggestion— make an appointment to meet with the father every day, preferably at the same time. Read one chapter of the Gospel of Mark each day and ask yourself, "What can I learn about myself or about God from this passage?"

Then spend a couple of minutes in prayer, just talking to God. In 16 days, you will have finished the Book of Mark and more importantly, started a lifetime that leads to tremendous rewards.

Move on to the next book in the Bible and have fun fishing.

Make children mind without losing yours

Chaplain (Maj.) Jeffrey D. Hawkins
Chaplain Family Life Center

Now that sleeping in has given way to alarm clocks, playing until after dark has been replaced by, "Is your homework done yet?" and sleeping bags for overnighters have been switched to lunch bags for school, a lot of parents out there are turning their attention to the children beneath their roofs.

We want the best for our children, don't we? We want them to be bright, we want them to be a joy socially and we want them to have better than we've had — in every area: mentally, physically and spiritually.

And part of the challenge we face at the Hawkins house is that our kids don't always line up, dress-right-dress in the morning, "all in their places with bright, shiny faces." In fact, on some mornings before school and on some evenings after school, the contest of wills that can take place makes Tom Cruise and War of the Worlds look like a a Disney flick. So how do you "Make Children Mind Without Losing Yours?"

Hawkins

Well, first off, let me tell you that I can't share everything I'd love to in one week's article here, so we'll be talking about that for the next several weeks in this column.

Second, let me make you an offer. If you'd like to maintain your sanity while at the same time raising an angel (or at least someone who doesn't wind up on America's Most Wanted), then come on out to CrossRoads Contemporary Chapel the next three weeks for our special series for parents, How To Make Your Children Mind Without Losing Yours.

It'll be fun and give you time-tested truth to make your family even more of what you want it to be. CrossRoads is a postwide service for everyone that meets at 11 a.m. Sundays at the Kelley Hill Chapel.

The good news is there will be special music by kids, for kids. There will also be children's churches and a nursery for all, birth through age 8, so they, and you, can enjoy the service designed for each of you.

What's the first step in making children mind without losing yours? Well, the first step for me is to affirm to all you parents out there that it's a legitimate desire on your part. Families work best when parents are in charge.

Just look around at any home where the 2-year-old, 10-year-old or 18-year-old runs the roost, and you'll be looking at lots of frustration and heartache. The way things are designed and run best, you're supposed to be the leader (some days that's tougher than others, isn't it?). What do parents do as leaders? Three things: They make the rules; they stick together and they stay in charge.

Want some practical ideas on how to accomplish each of those major "METL" tasks of parenthood? Then roll out on Sunday and make your way to CrossRoads, or if you just can't wait until then, call The Chaplain Family Life Center at Building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza, at 545-1760.

We're here to help you any way we can in the most rewarding (and most demanding) calling of all: parenthood. I look forward to seeing you.

The Dukes of Hazzard trivia tidbit — The yearly Duke Fest at Bristol Motor Speedway in Tennessee in 2005 drew 40,000 fans during a two-day event.
A stunt show was part of weekend along with the presence of the show's stars.

Charmed magically stays alive on The WB Network

Tempers were a bit frayed last April on the set of The WB Network's Sunday-night supernatural drama Charmed. The seventh-season finale was in production, and there was no word yet on whether the show had been renewed.

Star Holly Marie Combs, who plays Piper, the eldest of three demon-vanquishing good-witch sisters, was getting a bit cranky.

"I'm not going to sugarcoat it," she said at the time. "I am not pleased. After this amount of time on a network, we deserve better."

Brian Krause, who plays Piper's husband, Leo, was more optimistic, saying, "I think they'd be silly not to bring us back."

"Whatever's going to be is what's going to be," said Rose McGowan, who plays youngest sister Paige.

Alyssa Milano, who spent the better part of her 20s playing middle-sister Phoebe, worried more about the fans, saying, "I don't get ... not giving them what they deserve for hanging in for seven years, because that's going to lose more audience."

The word finally came at the 11th hour, right before the network was to announce its fall schedule to advertisers in mid-May. Apparently The WB was not willing to toss out the show's 3.5- to 4-million weekly viewers (who would then see promos for The WB's new fall shows). The new season begins Sept. 25.

Said network entertainment chief David Janollari (to whom executive producer Brad Kern had made an impassioned pitch for the new season), "The pickup of Charmed, which has long been a terrific performer for us and held its ground really nicely in its seventh season, was a matter of saying, 'Let's continue to have an eight o'clock show to anchor the night that we know performs and has a loyal audience."

The decision was also made to add a new, younger witch, Billie, played by Kaley Cuoco (8 Simple Rules).

With Billie, Janollari wants to "spice things up a little bit, to bring potentially a new and somewhat younger audience into the show."

And, as hope springs eternal in the network breast, Kern said, "Janollari has some hope, however much of a long shot, that Kaley's character, in combination with any one of the sisters, may want to come back, could keep the show going. There's always that possibility. That door is not closed."

All this happy news meant, of course, that Kern now had to dig himself out the deep dramatic hole he created for the finale.

He had allowed the sisters, collectively known as The Charmed Ones, to wipe their slates clean and start new lives with new identities (played by different actresses), while also protecting the secret of their magical abilities.

"I didn't know we were coming back," Kern said. "What was I supposed to do? It was more of a series finale than a season finale. But there were more than enough elements in there, building blocks, to help me and the writing staff dig out of it, and we have. We've got the first six scripts written as we speak."

One might wonder, with three witch sisters and another witch on the way, why Kern doesn't simply have someone cast a spell and undo everything?

According to Kern, that would be cheating, and the fans would resent it.

Kaley Cuoco joins the cast of the Sunday supernatural drama Charmed, which returns for its eighth season this fall on The WB Network.

"Magic might be a Band-Aid," he said, "but it won't be the solution. Our folks wouldn't stick with us if they saw us do, 'Oh, never mind, that didn't really happen.' We have to get out of it authentically. We have to earn it.

"That turns out to be fun for the first third of the season, watching how the girls live their lives after having feigned their deaths and realizing that maybe the identity they left behind, or some part of that identity, they want back."

Unfortunately for Kern, there won't be any magical solutions for his practical problems either. Although the sisters abandoned their old lives, budget restrictions mean Kern must retain all his standing sets, including the sisters' Victorian house in San Francisco.

"Frankly," Kern said, "our budget was cut back substantially in order to come back.

"That forced my hand tremendously as far as creative choices.

"It's funny, that was actually my biggest concern, how can I back the stories and the characters into this new, restricted budget and not have it show?"

Kern also has to find room for some new characters, starting with Billie. When original cast member Shannen Doherty left the show, her character, eldest sister Prue, was killed off, and McGowan joined the cast as long-lost half-sister Paige.

Billie, though, won't be a member of the family.

"I think we've brought in enough family members over the years," Kern said.

"She's just a young witch who has just come into her powers and thinks it's pretty cool to use them, thinks the world is one big video game.

"In order to preserve some semblance of a normal life, the girls are going to wind up having to recruit her to do some of the demonic heavy lifting.

"At the same time, they're going to have to teach her what a moral compass is."

Supercross: The Movie* — Two brothers overcome emotional and physical obstacles to achieve success in the competitive world of supercross racing.

The brothers' conflicts are magnified by their different life choices and their decision to become competitors and rivals.

Starring Steve Howey, Mike Vogel and Sophia Bush.

Supercross: The Movie is rated PG-13 for language and some sexuality.

Valiant* — A comedy-adventure tale of a brave-but-undersized pigeon named Valiant (voiced by Ewan McGregor), who dreams of joining the elite Royal Homing Pigeon Service and serving crown and country during World War II.

Despite his small stature, Valiant's ambitions are enormous as he keeps a stiff upper beak and endures rigorous training in preparation for a dangerous mission to deliver vital messages to troops behind enemy lines.

Valiant is rated G.

Red Eye* — Lisa Reisert (Rachel McAdams) hates to fly, but the terror that awaits her on the night flight to Miami has nothing to do with a fear of flying.

Moments after takeoff, Lisa's seatmate, Jackson (Cillian Murphy) menacingly reveals the real reason he's on board: he's an operative in a plot to kill a rich and powerful businessman, and Lisa is the key to its success.

If she refuses to cooperate, an assassin awaiting a call from Jackson will kill her father.

Red Eye is rated PG-13 for some intense sequences of violence, and language.

The 40-Year-Old Virgin* — Forty-year-old Andy Stitzer (Steve Carrell) has done quite a few things in his life. He's got a cushy job stamping invoices at an electronics superstore, a nice apartment with a collection of action figures and comic books, good friends, a nice attitude.

But there's just one little thing he hasn't quite gotten around to doing yet — Andy's never, ever, ever had sex.

Also starring Catherine Keener and Paul Rudd.

The 40-Year-Old Virgin is rated R for pervasive sexual content, language and drug use.

The Great Raid* — Set in the Philippines in 1945, The Great Raid tells the true story of the 6th Ranger Battalion, under the command of Lt. Col. Henry Mucci (Benjamin Bratt) who undertake a daring rescue mission against all odds.

Traveling 30 miles behind enemy lines, the 6th Ranger Battalion aims to liberate more than 500 American prisoners of war from the notorious Cabanatuan Japanese POW camp in the most audacious rescue ever.

Also starring James Franco, Connie Nielsen and Joseph Fiennes.

The Great Raid is rated R for strong war violence and brief language.

Four Brothers* — Four adopted brothers come together to bury the woman who raised them.

At the funeral, the brothers discover that their mother may have been murdered and they want revenge.

Starring Mark Wahlberg, Andre Benjamin, Tyrese Gibson and Garrett Hedlund.

Four Brothers is rated R for strong violence, pervasive language and sexual content.

Deuce Bigalow: European Gigolo* — Deuce Bigalow (Rob Schneider) is seduced back to his unlikely pleasure-for-pay profession, when his former pimp (Eddie Griffin) is implicated in the murders of Europe's greatest gigolos.

Deuce must go back to work in order to clear his good friend's name.

Along the way, he must compete against the powerful European Union of prosti-dudes and court another bevy of abnormal female clients.

Deuce Bigalow: European Gigolo is rated R for pervasive strong crude and sexual humor, language, nudity and drug content.

The Skeleton Key* — Set largely in the dark backwoods just outside of New Orleans, The Skeleton Key stars Kate Hudson as Caroline, a live-in nurse hired to care for an elderly woman's (Gena Rowlands) ailing husband (John Hurt) in their home — a foreboding and decrepit mansion in the Louisiana delta.

Intrigued by the enigmatic couple and their rambling house, Caroline begins to explore the old mansion. Armed with a skeleton key that unlocks every door, she discovers a hidden attic room that holds a deadly and terrifying secret.

The Skeleton Key is rated PG-13 for violence, disturbing images, partial nudity and thematic material.

The Dukes of Hazzard* — Set in present day, the story follows the adventures of good old boy cousins, Bo (Seann William Scott) and Luke (Johnny Knoxville) Duke, who with the help of their eye-catching cousin Daisy (Jessica Simpson) and moonshine running Uncle Jesse (Willie Nelson), try and save the family farm from being destroyed by Hazzard County's corrupt commissioner Boss Hogg (Burt Reynolds).

Their efforts find the Duke boys constantly eluding authorities in the General Lee, their famed 1969 Dodge Charger that keeps them one step ahead of sheriff Roscoe P. Coltrane (M.C. Gainey).

The Dukes of Hazzard is rated PG-13 for sexual content, crude and drug-related humor, language and comic action violence.

Sky High* — When you're the son of the world's most legendary superheroes, The Commander (Kurt Russell) and Jetstream (Kelly Preston), there is only one school for you — Sky High, an elite high school with the responsibility of molding today's power-gifted students into tomorrow's superheroes.

The problem is that Will Stronghold (Michael Angarano) is starting with no superpowers of his own.

Sky High is rated PG for action violence and mild language.
