Sergeant Unglo Enjoys Plunge In Icy Wafers

Polio Fails to Stop Coast Artilleryman And Strange Hobby

Sergeant Ralph Unglo of the 455th Coast Artillery at Ft. Benning is quite an ice-breaker. In Pittsburgh, his hometown, he used to "break the ice" each New Year by going for a swim in the frigid Allegheny River. The people of Pittsburgh named him the "Polar Bear."

Thirty minute swims in 10 below zero weather were just an average winter's day routine. Unglo claims he became bored with the long, dreary shut-in days. Being a crack swimmer and life guard, he longed for a refreshing plunge. So in 1931 he cracked the ice on the Allegheny one brisk January morning and took a lit-tle dip. It proved so delightful that he's been doing it ever since.

POLAR CLUB

One brisk near-zero morning, Sgt. Unglo challenged members of Pittsburgh's Polar Bear club, an organization of hearties who occasionally brave a short dip during the winter months, to an endurance contest in the icy Allegheny. He lasted for half an hour. None of the others showed up, and since that day Unglo has been unofficial president, vice-president, secretary and water boy of the Pittsburgh Polar Bear club to end all other similar organizations.

But he hasn't always had a rugged constitution. While very small he contracted infantile paralysis, and it was only due to consistent rub downs and hot baths by his father that he even walks today. Long hard workouts and swims helped build up his vitality.

One day on the way to school, he broke through the ice and was soaked in the icy water. Pulling himself out, he proceeded to school and wore wet clothes all day. However, the following morning he was as bright and healthy as ever. This happened several times before Unglo realized that he was able to withstand extreme cold without ill effects.

ICY WATERS

He started swimming regularly in wintry waters, not all of it in fun either. One morning on the way to work in his brother's produce store, Unglo spied a group of people gathered on Pittsburgh's Fortieth Street bridge. An automobile had plunged through the railing and lay in the bottom of a half-frozen river. Stripping to his waist, Unglo went down on a rope to look for the passengers. He remained under water three and a half minutes before signalling to be hauled up.

But that is only one of the many acts which have earned him praise from Mayor Scully of Pittsburgh, local police and the F. B. I. While home on furlough during December, Unglo was caught in an untimely flood. Local authorities remembered the "Polar Bear's" previous work in emergencies and disasters, and wired Army authorities for a leave extension explaining that he was urgently needed in the flood ridden city. It was approved.

SEPTEMBER MORN

It is natural that unique stories should collect around such an interesting character. One newspaper claimed that two of its subscribers caught cold after just looking at pictures of Unglo clad only in a bathing suit prancing in the snow.

Right now Sergeant Unglo is prancing around in the 455th headquarters as ration clerk, plugging hard to become staff, and yearning for the day when he can go home and start business as a chiropractor and masseur.

Panthers Victors At Harmony Arena

Third STR Panthers defeated the Second STR Commandos, 53 to 29, in the colored Service league at Harmony church sports arena last night, led by Phillips with 16 points and Jones with 14.

Larry scored 12 tallies for the losing quintet.

In other games, Post Detachment whipped the Medical boys, 33 to 20, while the First STR ran over the Academic regiment 58 to 37.

New League Begun In Harmony Church

Four late-comers on the basketball scene have been banded together into a minor unit court league on the Harmony Church area. The clubs which form the new Harmony Church league are 3rd STR Headquarters, 113th Guard Squadron from Lawson Field, the 31st Ordnance Co., and the 99th Ordnance Co.

All games will be played on Court No. 2 in the sports arena at Harmony Church, and the clubs will play a double round-robin. At the close of the campaign, it is expected that post officials will pit the Harmony Church winner against the victor in the Main Post league to determine a minor unit champion of the post.

Two games are carded tonight in the Harmony circuit when 3rd STR takes on the 99th Ordnance tossers at 7:30, and 1013th Guard clashes with 31st Ordnance. In the openers a week ago, the rivals in the second game tonight were the winners, so tonight's victor in the 1013th-31st tussle will assume the league lead.

Clark Leads 24th General Hospital To Fort Cage Win

The 24th General hospital quintet Tuesday night defeated 863rd Ordnance, 36 to 22, in a game played in the post gym in the Main Post League.

Clark led the attack on Ordnance, scoring 16 points, while Porter led scoring for the losers with 13 tallies. Halftime score was 17 to 9.

First Paratroop Trainers blasted the Finance Detachment, 38 to 12, led by Nelson with 11 tallies, and York and Bayes with 10 each. Formicelle and Feldmesser tossed in six each for the Financiers to score all points for their team. Halftime score was 11 to 2.

Ciecíorka led the 99th Quartermasters to a 50-29 win over 53rd General hospital, with 16 points. He was followed by Hudspeth with 14. For the 53rd Byszesky scored 11 points.

Lawson Queen To Be Named

Lawson Field continued its mastery over the 124th Infantry courtment Thursday with a convincing 44-41 win in a conference test at the sports arena. The Fliers knocked the Gators out of the first-half title, and then repeated last week by handing them their first loss in the second-half race.

The air corps team hopped off to an early lead and held a three-point advantage at the end of the first quarter. They held this same lead at the end of every period and were out in front all the way. Bill Metcalfe and Bill Horne paced the Fliers with 15 and 13 points respectively. Top man in the scoring column for the Gators was pivot Tony Foster who corded 15 markers.

TENNIS TOURNEY

A tennis tournament which will include all men's and women's events will be held at the Officers' Club on March 20th and 21st. Those interested in entering may registed either at the tennis shop or the Officers' Club.

Fulton Lauds Army Hour

WRBL Also Praised For Morale Work

Speaking on a special broadcast celebrating the third anniversary of the "Army Hour" Sunday at the USO Army and Navy YMCA, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general at Ft. Benning, declared the program has been a source of pleasure to the men under his command.

Principal speakers on the program, introduced by Capt. Russell J. Hammargren, public relations officer of the post, praised radio station WRBL, Columbus, for making the program possible and stressed the program's value in building morale for members of the armed forces as well as civilians, who look forward to the broadcast.

Important speakers, besides Gen. Fulton, included Brig. Gen. George P. Howell, commandant of the Parachute School and commanding general of the First Parachute Infantry at Ft. Benning, and J. W. Woodruff, Jr., owner of station WRBL.

The musical portion of the program was furnished by the Third Armored Regiment band and the 508th Parachute Regiment orchestra. The Reception Center Chorus sang several selections.

Jack Gibney, co-founder of the "Army Hour" program, spoke briefly. Importance of the National Red Cross drive, which opened Sunday, was stressed on the broadcast, and listeners were reminded to continue regular purchases of war bonds and stamps.

Civilian Mess Inaugurated

Two Meals Daily To Be Served

Establishment of a mess for the white civilian employes quartered in the Civilian Dormitories is announced by George B. Jefferson, manager of the dormitories.

First meals were served on Monday, with breakfast from 6:30 a. m., to 8:30 a. m., and dinner from 5:30 p. m. to 7:30 p. m. Hours for Sunday meals are breakfast, 8:30 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. and dinner, 12:30 p. m. to 2:00 p. the mess each day.

Mess for colored civilians will m. Two meals will be served in be established later as the colored portions of the dormitories fill up, Mr. Jefferson announced.

The mess is operated on a cooperative plan, he said, and ration books are not necessary for indifiers' Club.

Among those in the receiving viduals except that those who take eight or more meals a week will be required to turn over their books. Meals will be paid for on a cash basis.

There still is room for 20 white women and 127 white men at the dormitories. In the colored personnel section, there is room for 34 men and 16 women.

voked. The army placed several "off limits' and honky-tonk operators were told by Phenix City authorities to "clean up or close up."

After one month results began to be noticed. In April there was a 57 per cent decrease in the number of cases from Phenix City. There were 97 per cent fewer cases in August as compared with last February.

RECORDS KEPT

The army kept records at all prophylactic stations. Over 80 per cent of all white exposures occurred in Phenix City, and it is significant, Major Loveless pointed out, that August, with a 93 per cent decrease in venereal cases from Phenix City, there was likewise a decrease of 91 per cent of exposures.

"The records show conclusively," Major Loveless said, "that venereal cases will not be stamped out so long as prostitution is tolerated."

OFFICIALS PRAISED

Chief credit for the repression program, according to Fort Benning officials goes, in addition to Mayor Reese and Commissioner Cobb, to Chief of Police J. W. Perry, City Attorney Roy L. Smith, and Ralph Matthews, sheriff of Russell County. Judges W. R. Belcher and H. E. Randall were responsible, say the army authorities, for enforcing the existing laws needed to drive out prostitution. Credit is given to the Columbus press for its help in arousing public opinion.

Income Tax Returns To Be Filed March 15

Entire Base Pay Must Be Reported, Lt. Inzer Says

Deadline for filing income tax returns is March 15, and officers and enlisted men of the army are subject to filing tax returns the same as civilians, personnel at Fort Benning were warned today by Lt. John W. Izner, post insurance officer, who also acts as income tax officer.

Blanks may be obtained from unit income tax officers for the various organizations through the entire post, he stated. Enlisted men who have questions about income taxes or who desire blanks, may contact their personnel offices to learn names of officers appointed for the different organizations.

Lt. Col. Phillip A. Dickey is serving as supervising income tax officer for the Infantry School, while Lt. Beverly S. Simms is serving for the Tenth Armored area. If units have no blanks, soldiers may contact any of these officers to secure them, Lt. Inzer pointed out.

WHERE THEY GO

Tax blanks should be filled out, even if deductions mean the individual may pay no tax, he pointed out. They should be returned to the Collector of Internal Revenue in the state where the soldier lived as a civilian.

For soldiers, the entire base pay must be reported as income. This means that allotments to wives or dependents, War Bond purchases, insurance payments or other similar deductions are not deductible from the Income Tax astatement. Money added to allotments by the government for families, however, is regarded as a gift from Uncle Sam—and therefore need not be reported as income.

Income tax blanks must be filed if the soldier is single and has an income of more than $500 per year, exclusive of $250 of his Army pay; or for a married man whose income (including any earnings of the wife) is more than $1,200 per year, excluding up to $300 of his Army pay.

DEDUCTIBLE ITEMS

Many deductible items should be noted, Lt. Inzer said, emphasizing that the Government "does not want more than it is entitled to receive." These include such things as property and poll taxes; Federal taxes on telephone calls or telegraph messages or utilities, or stamp taxes on automobiles; amusements, state income and personal property taxes, sales taxes where the tax is assessed directly against the consumer; taxes on bus and railroad tickets, automobile license taxes, drivers license fees, interest on notes or mortgages; support or alimony paid to a divorced wife when ordered by a court of proper jurisdiction; losses by fire or theft not covered by insurance; extraordinary dental or medical expenses in excess of five per cent of net income, and charitable contributions.

OTHER EXEMPTIONS

In addition, there is the 10 per cent of net earned income credit, and an additional exemption of $350 for each dependent child under 18, or others properly classed as dependents. All of these deductions are to be entered if the soldier uses Form 1940 (long form) and they must be properly itemized, it was pointed out.

The average soldier, however, whose income is below $3,000, and that, of course, includes most soldiers, will fit it simpler to use Form 1040-A, on which deductions need not be listed, since an average of 6 per cent of gross income, based on a national average, is automatically allowed to cover all deductions, except for dependents, which must be listed separately.

DEFERMENT

The Federal Income Tax may be paid in quarterly installments, Lt. Inzer pointed out. He also pointed out that a deferment may be asked until after the war if the man's earning ability has been "materially reduced" through his entry into the Armed Forces. Forms for making such a statement are available, he said.

For guidance of men who must mail income tax blanks to their home states, the Bayonet lists herewith offices of collectors of internal revenue by states:

Former Circus Clown Prefers Army Life to Big-Top Fare

11th Armored Soldier Says World Needs A Child's Sense Of Humor

"After 15 years under the Big Top, this Army life is a picnic!"

With these words Private William J. Andrich, of the 11th Armored Regiment, who traded the monkey suit, grease paint and putty nose of the circus clown for the olive drab and Garand rifle of the soldier, concluded an interview over Radio Station WRBL on the "Fort Benning on the Air" broadcast recently.

One of several talented Tigers introduced to Fort Benning listeners in a current series of radio broadcasts, Pvt. Andrich opined the "glamour" of the big-time circus cannot compare in his estimation with the advantages of the Army.

In his endorsement of the Army, Pvt. Andrich cited "good food and reasonable working hours leaving me plenty of time to rest" as reasons which will prompt him to give up the Big Top forevermore in preference for an Army career.

A life of touring the circuits has taught Pvt. Andrich that the bespangled costumes, colorful acts, laughs and thrills—all the things which go to make up a circus from a spectator's point of view—are not alone the components of a trouper's career.

PUP TENT—BIG TOP

Pitching a pup tent is child's play compared to the hoisting of a giant circus canvas; a cross-country hike is little more tiresome than endless days of riding by train or bus; Army rations are far better than the hastily prepared and still more hastely eaten meals during a winter circus tour; and the long, irregular working hours of the Big Top performers lead one to appreciate even more the spare time afforded the soldier, according to the veteran clown.

But, it's not all work and no pleasure under the Big Top, Pvt. Andrich admits. Like all performers, amateur or professional, he enjoyed entertaining others, capering and clowning to the delight of adult and child alike.

"Children, especially, make a swell audience," Andrich reflects, "and I get almost as big a kick out of them as they seem to get from me. If the whole world had the frank appreciation, ability to laugh, and sense of humor of the kids who come to circuses, we wouldn't be here now."

During his radio interview, Pvt. Andrich told Lieutenant A. E. Mathews, his interrogator, of his early start in the business of making people laugh.

HIS START

"When I was only eleven years old," he related, "I caught a runaway circus mule and that became the start of an 'auspicious' career as a circus rider and clown. I rode the mule back to the circus area, and was invited to join the troupe of 'Riding Rooneys.'

"Well, it was vacation-time, my mother thought a trip with a traveling unit would be good experience for me, and I, like all youngsters, yearned for adventure. So off I went on a life under the Big Top which lasted for 15 years until the Army intervened twelve weeks ago."

During his long career, Pvt. Andrich was employed by several famous circus outfits, including Ringling Brothers, Wallace Brothers, The Russell Shows, Grottos, Jay Gould's Million Dollar Circus and Tom Mix.

Nor has his experience on the road been without adventure or excitement.

CIRCUS ADVENTURE

On one occasion, the circus with which he was traveling pitched camp beneath a levee. Heavy rainstorms weakened and finally ruptured the dam, allowing tons of water to pour down and inundate the entire area. Though the water failed to rise high enough to drown anyone, a majority of the animals with the circus perished when live wires strung along the ground charged the water and electrocuted the beasts who had been unable to escape.

A popular act which featured a man placing his head in an elephant's mouth resulted in disaster for a trainer with Pvt. Andrich's troupe. Tired and nervous from a long ride during the day, the elephant closed his jaws on the trainer's head, snapping the unfortunate performer's neck and killing him instantly.

All that is new behind for Pvt. Andrich. Henceforth, he will confine his clowning to Army talent shows, he says, and maybe someday he'll be privileged to succeed Mussolini as the biggest clown on the continent of Europe.

The khaki uniform were first worn by the U. S. Army in 1898 by the volunteer troops in the Spanish-American War. It was found that the heavy woolen, dark blue uniform was too hot for the tropics. The khaki was found so serviceable, that the whole dress Regulation for the Army was changed to khaki.

Officers Give Col. Stubbs Farewell Party

Former Broadway Stars Feature Stellar Show

The officers of the Second Student Training Regiment staged a farewell party Saturday night at the Sports Arena for Col. M. G. Stubbs, former commanding officer of the Regiment who is now attending Division Officers class at The Infantry School preparatory to assuming a new assignment.

Col. Stubbs was the original commander of the Second when that organization was activated Nov. 13, 1941, and held that position until this January when he was succeeded by Col. Edward B. Jackson.

It was strictly an all-regiment party, with the music for dancing furnished by the Regiment's own Leaders, swing band from Headquarters Company, and with a short and snappy floor show put on by officer candidate talent from the Regiment.

The show was emceed by Candidate Albert K. Stevens of 11th Company who has had considerable stage experience. He appeared with Ken Murray in the "Blackouts of 1942" on Broadway, was an emcee at Earl Carroll's Hollywood Theater Restaurant, and also appeared as a regular member of the cast on the late Joe Penner's radio program.

Also appearing was Candidate Robert Everhart of 7th Company, impersonator extraordinaire, whose biggest laugh-act is his take-off on Pop-eye, in which he is considerably aided by a double-jointed jaw. Then there was OC Clarence K. Lundborg, of 28th Company, Pacific Coast Weight-Lifting Champion, in a show of strength, and OC Kenneth C. Scheibal of 23rd Company, former pianist with Clyde McCoy's orchestra.

Fifth Company, Third STR, Qualifies 191

Despite a cold day that numbed fingers and an accompanying eight to ten mile wind that had the aggrevating habit of changing often, twenty six members of the Fifth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, came through with expert rating at McAndrew Range recently.

Fifty came under the classification of Sharpshooter and 115 qualified as marksman.

Out of a possible score of 340, Frank E. Longevin was high with 319 and Ray W. Burkett second with 315. John J. Conlon and Francis N. Dorulla tied with 312 each. Other expert scores follow: Reger L. Baker, 306; Joseph R. Jackson, 305; William J. Cotter and Marcus W. Weber, Larry LGreenstein, Leonard N. Franke and Frank J. Bucholz with 301 each.

Eighth Company, 1st STR, Breaks 3 BAR Records

Three Browning automatic rifle records thus far were smashed by the officer candidates of Eighth Company, 1st Student Training Regiment.

Traveling at a record-breaking pace under the guidance of the "A" team they qualified 87 experts compared to 73 as the former record recently published by the 17th Company, and 96.5 per cent of the company qualified as compared to the previously unbeaten 95 per cent record set more than a year ago. In addition, each member of the class received at least a "C" in his graded test.

If all the guns on the P-47 fighter were fired for one minute, they would release sufficient energy to lift a 35,000-ton battleship.

Small-Bore Rifle Champ TIS Student

Two-Man Team Hit Perfect 800 Last September

First Lieutenant John F. Holmes, whose permanent assignment is with the Signal Corps Replacement Training Center at Camp Crowder, Mo., but who is now with the 10th Company, 1st STR, was a member of the duet who shattered a national record in carrying off the two-man team title in the Oklahoma small-bore rifle championship meet at Tulsa last September. Holmes and his partner hit a perfect 800 to improve the existing national mark of 799.

Lt. Holmes is co-holder of the American Legion record in the Presidential match at Camp Perry, O., where he fired 143 of a possible 150 during the 1936 matches. At that time it was a new national record, but has been tied. The Signal Corps AUS first looie is a member of the board of directors of the National Rifle Association.

A member of the regular army which saw service during the Mexican border scrape in 1916, Holmes again came to his country's service in the World War, and advanced to the grade of drillmaster in the United States Marine Corps.

Miss Vera Mullins Is Bond Officer At TIS Building

Miss Vera Mullins, who for the past several years has been secretary to the commandants of The Infantry School, has added to her other duties the job of bond officer for the staff and faculty of the school.

Miss Mullins' bond office is located in room 304 in The Infantry School headquarters building. She will handle the cash sales for bonds which will be in addition to the bonds purchased by payroll allotments.

Miss Mullins will also handle bonds for enlisted men, it was added.

West Point Exams Taken By 135 Men

Approximately 135 men began a five-day validating examination here Tuesday for entrance to the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.

Including both soldiers and civilians, the men were appointed by senators or congressmen, selected by competitive examinations from the ranks, or are presidential appointees-at-large. They come from nearby southeastern states within the Fourth Service Command.

The examinations started at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. Both the mental and physical examinations were given in classroom No. 3 in the First Student Training Area. Civilians are being quartered and fed on the post. Aviation cadets and enlisted men are quartered and rationed with Headquarters Detachment, DEML.

The board of officers appointed to conduct the examination is composed of Col. Melville A. Sanderson, Lt. Col. John S. Roosma, Lt. Col. Alphonsa M. McCarthy, Lt. Col. Louis Ochs, Jr., Maj. Vincent W. Siren and Capt. James H. Mobley. Colonel Roosma is serving as president of the board.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. —It's not unusual for a sailor to ask for a second cup of coffee at the USO, but when he prefaces his request, as one did here, with the announcement that he used to be a coffee-taster for one of the leading companies—that's a compliment to the good lady volunteers.

Lt. Marquardt Is First Lieut.

Second Lieutenant Oswald K. Marquardt, aide to Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, was named a first lieutenant Monday. Lt. Marquardt, who entered federal service on April 30, 1941, has been stationed at Fort Benning since August 20, 1942.

While at Benning, Lt. Marquardt has served as assistant billeting officer and statistical survey officer. Before being assigned here, he served with the 302nd Field Artillery at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

Baker-Cook School Teaches Men To Carry On Under All Conditions

Ovens Must Function In All Kinds Of Temperatures In Global War

BY PVT. BRITTON TABOR

Being trained to cook under any conditions—whether to the tune of bomb bursts on Bataan or the shrill scream of shrapnel in the Solomons or in the icy wastes of Iceland, embryo bakers and cooks at Fort Benning are prepared for any eventuality.

They're being taught to use a discard oil drum on the field of battle, make their own ovens from clay and straw—or even a hole in the ground—grab yeast from the very air, use a shovel for a baking pan, and hundreds of other expedients that qualify them to make bread even if all their equipment should be smashed by a shell.

They are taught at the Fort Benning Bakers and Cooks School to adapt their needs to the varying requirements of the arctic tundras, tropical jungles, desert sands or temperate climes.

When going into the field, bakers and cooks are provided with the finest army equipment of its kind in the world. Army bakers are very proud of their new M-1942 field set-up for baking break, and of their field mixer which is one-cylindered and gasoline operated. Army cooks are enthusiastic about their field cooking range and other equipment.

But although the Bakers and Cooks School trains the men in assembling and disassembling their equipment and making repairs when things go wrong, it is always assumed that cooks and bakers in the actual battle zone might be called upon to do without their equipment altogether. Enemy shell very possibly might destroy the cooking range, the field oven, the mixer and even ladles and stirring implements.

IMPROVISE TOOLS

In view of these possibilities, students at the school are taught thoroughly how to make improvised stoves and ovens so that the job of feeding fighting men can go on. Some of these improvised ovens date back to the time of ancient Egypt, while others, more recent, were popular in the days of the War Between the States.

The clay-intermittent type is the oven which would most generally be used in such conditions. The only necessary materials in its construction are clay and straw, hay or grass, and a little water. It is cylindrical in shape, with one end open level with the ground. The other end is closed. A hole or pipe in the top provides the exit for the smoke and a part of the air-circulation system.

The bakers heat the oven thoroughly by means of a fire inside. They then remove the coals and proceed to bake their bread by the heat which is retained inside.

Another intermittent type of oven can be dug out of a hillside. This oven works on much the same principle as the clay type, and is often used when the clay and straw is not available or if a hillside oven should be more practical at the time.

TRENCH OVEN

Should neither a hillside nor clay and straw be available, the trench type oven can be built. The trench is shallow, usually about 12 inches deep, 18 inches wide and of variable length. Bakers burn out such a pit for 18 hours whenever practicable, and then remove ashes and coals. Pans are placed inside the trench, which is covered with a piece of tin or any type of metal that can be found. The coals are placed on top of this make-shift oven to provide an even distribution of heat. The walls and bottom of the trench are already heated from the long burning-out process.

In this modern war of machines which depend upon oil for their very utility, a cast-off oil drum is usually found with ease in a combat zone. This orphan oil drum, whose usefulness to the tank driver or motorized artilleryman is at least temporarily gone, can be made into a most efficient oven by the army baker.

Filled a quarter full with sand, clay or mud, the oil drum is horizontally sunk into the ground and covered with any sort of earth. Bread is baked inside the drum above the filler. The fire is put in a space dug underneath. An opening is left in the back to permit the passage of heat and air.

INGENUITY

In the event their field dough-mixing machine becomes a battle casualty, army bakers are trained to mix the ingredients of bread on a moulding table—or a board—or a piece of metal. The process of fermentation, also very important in bread-making, can be handled with a dearth of equipment.

"Proofing" the bread can be done by placing any kind of hot metal into a pan or even a hole of water to provide the steam necessary for the proofing process.

Even if the yeast, without which palatable bread hardly could be made, were exhausted, the bakers are prepared to create the proper conditions for making a yeast culture of their own. Continuing an almost exhausted supply of yeast is done by taking the yeast that remains and putting it into a mixture of water, mashed or boiled potatoes, flour, salt and sugar and keeping the mixture at a temperature of 80 degrees Fahrenheit.

YEAST FROM AIR

In case the yeast supply is completely gone, the bakers are trained to obtain virgin yeast from the air. A mixture similar to one used to continue a yeast supply is made and left exposed to the air at a temperature of 80 degrees. Yeast thus obtained is quite adequate for bread baking.

In fact, under very adverse conditions, army bakers can make palatable bread with only flour and salt. They can obtain their own yeast. They can make their own ovens. They can take a piece of wood and carve it into utensils or tools, and can make them from pieces of metal as well.

In arctic lands, snow can be melted for water. Near the sea, the salt water can be boiled or otherwise purified for use in bread. When fresh water is used, bakers reduce the amount of salt they would otherwise put into their mixture of dough.

CAMOUFLAGE

In fact army bakers are instructed to set up their equipment with first thought for camouflage rather than with regard to water supply inasmuch as water can almost always be transported to the scene.

Further, army bakers are carefully taught to make bread which will keep for weeks in a fresh and palatable condition. Round four-pound loaves, baked with very thick crusts, are used for such purposes and remain fresh for as long as six weeks. Such loaves can be baked in make-shift ovens like those used in Egyptian days.

Army cooks are prepared in the same way to meet the most adverse conditions. With a equipment lost, they too can cook by use of clay ovens they are taught to build, and by open trenches. With the latter, the hood or the bed of a truck can serve as the top of the stove.

In the event their cooking utensils have been destroyed along with their field ranges, the cooks will not be at a loss when the time comes to prepare food. Any kind of metal will serve to cover the open trench fire and the food can be cooked on it. Potatoes can be baked in the ashes of the fire. Paddles and ladles are whittled out of wood.

MORMITE CANS

Army cooks also are provided with Mormite cans, which are cork-lined and retain heat for hours. If necessary, they can go far behind the lines, obtain the cooked food, carry it many miles to the front line and then serve hot food to battle-weary and hungry soldiers.

As a matter of fact, these Mormite cans are also a form of fireless cookers, for food will continue to cook in them while the trip to the front line is being made.

Army cooks and army bakers who are sent to the Fort Benning Bakers and Cooks School are drilled in the many ways in which they can meet any handicap in the field. Ingenuity, resourcefulness and the ability to work under the most adverse conditions conceivable are qualities characteristic of men who have gone through this school.

Truck Unit's Men Taking Special Work

Emphasis Also Given To Individual And Basic Training

The Provisional Truck Regiment is offering many opportunities to officers and enlisted personnel for specialized training in various fields.

Since the activation of the regiment as a part of the Infantry School Service Command and, with the assignment of Colonel Frank J. Vida, former Chief of the Operations Group, Automotive Section, The Infantry School, as regimental commander, a greater emphasis has been placed on the training of the individual and ordinary basic training is but one step in the program as outlined by the regimental administration.

Within a few weeks after the activation of this organization, a group of enlisted men was sent to the Mechanic School and since that time a regular number are being enrolled in those classes that will, in a very short time, send a steady stream of trained mechanics back to the regiment for active duty with the many vehicles of the outfit. Most of these classes last three months and provide the finest of instruction and first hand experience for these members of the regiment.

VARIOUS SCHOOLS

Other men have shown ability to function well in other branches of the service and have been sent as officer candidates to ordnance schools as well as the Medical Administrative School. Some members of the enlisted personnel are awaiting orders to report to the Infantry and Quartermaster Schools, and one of the soldiers has applied for admittance to the Adjutant General's School.

Officers have likewise been given opportunities for advancement and have been sent, as they could be spared from their duties, to short courses at the School for Bakers and Cooks at Fort Benning.

MOTOR COURSE

However, the largest group of officers to represent the regiment in one of these schools was a group of 16 quartermaster officers who registered on last week for an officers motor maintenance course, at the Infantry School. This group consisted of First Lieuts. Robert W. Harris, Crawford H. Lydle, Jr., Milton V. Seraile, William H. Webb, Jr., James C. White, Jr., Lloyd M. Wright, and Second Lieuts. Joseph D. A. Dismond, Richard A. Edwards, Charles H. Fields, William G. Gray, Melvin A. Hendry, Jr., Cyyde W. Briggs, Tyler E. Hill, Jr., Channong C. Colston, Fambro L. Kendrick, and Herman McKinney. At the completion of this course, these officers will return to their original organizations better trained to carry out the duties of this very large truck regiment.

Engineer Private Saved From Nazi Army Duty By American Citizenship

Profs Impress in Easy Win Over Paratroopers

If he hadn't been protected by his American citizenship, 22-year-old Pvt. Paul Hunchak of the 55th Armored Engineers Battalion undoubtedly would have been drafted into service by the German army in 1939—just four weeks before the Nazi war machine invaded Poland where he had just left his mother and four brothers.

It happened in this way: Hunchak was on his way to the United States to live and the train on which he was travelling had been stopped at the Polish-German frontier. A Nazi recruiting officer came alongside the coaches and invited Hunchak and a dozen other American-born Polish youths to join the German army. All declined, with thanks. The train then proceeded through Germany and on to France where the youths took passage for America. But Hunchak is well aware that his American birth was all that prevented the Nazis from pressing their invitation.

TRACKS LAID

As they crossed the frontier Hunchak was amazed to see that the Germans had laid extra railroad tracks all the way to the border, which was very significant in the light of developments just a short month later. Later he saw a vast open space with hundreds of planes lined up in a U-formation, and he wondered about that, too. At one stage of the journey the train whizzed past a steel foundry, and was still whizzing past the same foundry 10 minutes later. This was all he saw of the Nazi war preparations, but it was enough.

Hunchak was born in New York City and lived there until he was seven years old. Then his mother returned to the old country, taking her five small sons with her, and the family established residence on a farm in the Ukraine. Living conditions were very hard and, to add to natural difficulties, there was constant strife between the Poles and the Ukranians.

SUFFERED MUCH

Hunchak is actually Ukrainian and because of his ancestry he suffered considerably at the hands of a small group of Polish terrorists. He contends that the Ukranians half wished for war because they felt that under Russian protection they might fare better. They never considered the possibility that the Germans might become their "protectors," he says, and no one has to tell him now how wrong their calculations were. After all, he left his family in what is now German-occupied territory, and he has heard nothing from them in more than three years.

There is no doubt where Hunchak's loyalties lay.

"I don't care where they send me," he says, "as long as I can help defend my country, and this is my country."

M. P. Chief Once Musician

Renews Friendship With Visiting Player

When Capt. Wheeler W. Sidwell, now of the Corps of Military Police at Fort Benning, went down the list of names of the American Symphony Orchestra to issue passes for the members, he thought he recognized a name of a musician he had met 39 years ago up in Minneapolis.

And when he went to the concert of the orchestra, he made his way backstage and was hailed with delight by Joseph Della Aquia, harpist with the orchestra, who immediately recognized the captain.

Both had been members of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra back in 1904. Capt. Sidwell, a native of Minneapolis, was a violinist and young Della Aquia, had been brought in from Chicago to augment the orchestra. Later they played together at theaters and then their paths separated.

Capt. Sidwell enlisted in 1917 and served overseas, becoming one of the first warrant officers ever created in the ranks of musicians, when he was in Coblenz, Germany with the 8th Infantry. He was called back to service on his reserve commission and came to Fort Benning to organize the Second Armored Division band. He then served as an assistant to Lt. Col. Charles P. Finnegan, special service officer, then was assigned to the provost marshal's office.

Jewish Troops Plan For Purim

Columbus JWB To Hold Receptions

Purim or the Feast of Lots will be celebrated by Jewish troops at Fort Benning March 19-21, Chaplain Samson A. Shain announced Monday.

The Megillah ritual will be recited and selections from the Megillah will be read at all religious services on the post during Purim week-end, Friday evening, Sunday morning, and Monday evening.

Special Purim receptions prepared by the Army and Navy committee of the Columbus Jewish Welfare Board will follow each service.

Purim is founded on the dramatic story told in the Biblical book of "Esther." Haman, the enemy of the Jews in Persia in the Fourth Century B. C., sinks into dismal obscurity and Mordeccai rises to prominence. The Purim message is one of hope and cheer to Jews of all ages in the face of persecution planned to brin gabout their destruction.

Chaplain Carraway Given Captaincy

First Lieut. Archie C. Carraway, Protestant chaplain of the 24th General Hospital, has been promoted to captain, according to word received at post headquarters.

Chaplain Carraway came into service in July, 1942, and has been with the 24th Hospital since that time. In civilian life, he was pastor of the Burt Pickens Memorial Methodist church, Dumas, Ariz.

He is a graduate of Southern Methodist University and a native of Corsicana, Texas.

Identical Twins Possess Identical Army Records

Rogers Boys Get Promotions, Furloughs, OCS Same Time

Medical authorities claim that there is nothing unusual about twins. Even identical twins are not what could be classified as rare. But identical twins with identical service records is another story.

Alex and William Rogers, sons of Mrs. Diana Rogers, of Chicago, Ill., of the First Company, Third Student Training Regiment, have the distinction of being one of the very few sets of identical twins in Officer Candidate School. Born in Chicago in 1921, both of the Rogers attended Taft High school and Lane Technical High school, before entering the Army in March, 1941. They were sent to Camp Forrest, Tenn.

Both men were made corporal on August 1, 1941 and obtained their sergeant stripes on February 15, 1942.

NECK AND NECK

In March the Rogers were sent to Ft. Brady at Sault Saint Marie, Mich., stationed there to guard the important Soo Locks. Both William and Alex appeared before the Officer Candidate board at Ft. Brady the same day, were accepted and sent to Fort Benning.

During their "hitch" in the service, they have each had four furloughs, always together and always the same length.

Light Ponton Company Composed of Specialists

Men Learn Defense And How To Get That Bridge Across

BY PFC. S. E. SUSSINA
71st Engr. L. Pon Co.

There must be some doubt in the minds of some people in Fort Benning as to just exactly what an Engineer soldier is.

Engineer soldiers come from all walks of life. As civilians they were farmers, crane operators, tractor and truck drivers, coal miners, boat operators, and even an occasional pen pusher. These men, when thrown together, with a castle on their lapel, make up the finest group of men in the service; the corps of engineers.

These men are gathered from every state in the country and usually begin their training at one of the several Engineer Replacement Training Centers. Here they learn the fundamentals of engineering. They learn the difference between a shavetail and a first lieutenant, and they learn not to let the shavetail know it. They learn to wash dishes on a large scale and to peel potatoes on an even larger scale. They learn to walk, march, drill, run, shoot, and kill. This, they accomplish in from eight to thirteen weeks. They are then assigned to one of the many different types of engineer units.

ONLY KIND HERE

One of the most important and useful types of engineering companies is the Light Ponton Company. This, by the way, is the only kind of Engineers on the Post proper at the present time.

It is the job of the light ponton engineers to construct ten-ton ponton bridges. This work necessitates split second timing. Each man must know his job. A non-commissioned officer must be able to work alone, without an officer being present. A private must be able to carry on in the absence of his non-commissioned officers.

The equipment is heavy; too heavy for an untrained man to handle. Practice is a necessity and dry runs are held frequently.

MAINTENANCE

Not only is it necessary for the men to be able to build the bridge but they must know how to care for and maintain the equipment. Maintenance of equipment is, perhaps, the most important part of engineer training.

The Light Ponton Company is composed of specialists. Each company has carpenters, blacksmiths, tinsmiths, painters, mechanics, and many "jacks of all trades."

Every man in a light ponton company should be a thoroughly trained truck driver.

Every man must know and practice demolitions, field fortifications, extended order drill, chemical warfare, fire control and all infantry tactics, for when building a bridge, it is sometimes necessary for a light ponton company to defend itself, and at the same time "Get the bridge across."

So, when you see a soldier with scarlet and white piping on his cap and a castle on his lapel, remember that he is an Engineer, one of the best trained soldiers in the best army in the world.

Woman's Club

BY KATHERINE HAMMARGREN

An enthusiastic audience expressed its appreciation for a brilliant and well-balanced musical program Monday afternoon, when the Music group presented talented artists at the general meeting of the Woman's Club in the Polo Hunt Club. Miss Ruth Bennett Buettner, charming young concert pianist who arranged the program, and her group of musicians who have been generous in contributing their talents, can well be proud of a successful and enjoyable performance.

Opening the musical program was Mrs. Benjamin F. Wills, mezzo-soprano. She included in her selections the quaint "Fairy Tales", by Wolff, and Peccia's airy "Come Buy," whose words are taken from Shakespeare's "Winter's Tales." Mrs. F. A. Harris, violinist, followed with the clear notes of "Canzonetta." Her violin created the effect of blowing winds and rattling bones in "Ghost Dance." She concluded with the nostalgic "Old Refrain."

BEETHOVEN

Miss Buettner played as her piano solo the first movement of Beethoven's "Appassionata" sonata, Opus 57, recognized as the greatest of Beethoven's thirty-two sonatas. Miss Buettner pointed out the V for Victory sound carriad as a motif throughout the sonata.

Outstanding among Mrs. Richard Lamb's selections was the beautiful "Last Four," by Kramer. Her lovely lyric soprano voice did full justice to this number. Mrs. Falko M. Schilling, violinist, entranced her listeners with "Crinoline" a minuet by Albert Stoessel. The dramatic soprano voice of Mrs. Harley A. Twedt provided a lovely note when she sang "Eros", by Grieg, the beautiful "When I Have Sung My Songs", by Charles, and "Devotion," by Strauss. Corporal Donald Davis, trombonist, with the 29th Infantry band, concluded the scheduled numbers with "Liebestraum" and "Valse Elegante", both well-suited to the mellow notes of the trombone.

A touching finale to the program, and a surprise for the audience, was Mrs. Lamb's singing of "When The Boys Come Home". This number, popular in the last war, brought tears to the eyes of many of the listeners.

MRS. FULTON SPEAKS

Before the program Mrs. Walter Scott Fulton announced the opening of the Red Cross war fund campaign, saying that financial aid is only half the aid we should give and asking that her listeners give time and money for our men in the armed forces.

Tables for the tea following the program were beautifully arranged with forsythia and acacia surrounded by aqua pottery figurines. Those officiating at the tea tables were Mrs. C. A. Bagby, Mrs. H. C. Jones, Mrs. William S. Eley, Mrs. P. H. Camp, Mrs. Maurice G. Stubbs, Mrs. James H. Watkins, Mrs. Warren W. Christian, Mrs. C. P. Chapman, and Mrs. Clark N. Bailey. Mrs. Syril E. Faine, hospitality chairman for the Woman's Club, and her committee were responsible for the success of the tea. Her committee consisted of Mrs. John M. Ferguson, Mrs. H. E. Potter, Mrs. Christian, Mrs. Camp and Mrs. Jones.

Benefit Bridge For Nursery School Slated

Funds To Supply 'Back-Log' Seen In Mar. 16 Party

By KATHERINE HAMMARGREN

The desire to make the Fort Benning Nursery school available to a large number of children on the post by lowering the cost of tuition has taken the form of a benefit bridge to raise money for the school. The benefit bridge will be held Tuesday, March 16, at 2 p. m. in the main lounge of the Officers' Club.

The Nursery School, which filled a long-felt want when it opened in October of this year, has done well on its limited funds. All money, except two gifts from the chaplains and an anonymous donation from Columbus, has come from tuition dues. Out of these dues the salary of the full-time supervisor, Mrs. Horatio C. Mason, has been paid, and equipment such as a jungle gym and a slide has been bought.

However, it is felt that many young mothers cannot afford the present tuition. Thus a "back-log" would enable tuition to be lowered, which in turn would increase enrollment and free mothers for important Red Cross duties.

Tickets are now on sale for twenty-five cents. They may be bought from Mrs. Joseph K. Lambert, chairman of the ticket committee, phone 3349; Mrs. George Millener, representing the Infantry school, phone 2515; Mrs. Russell J. Hammargren, Post Headquarters, phone 2423; Mrs. William E. Eckles, Tenth Armored, phone 2904; Mrs. Harvey T. Morgan, paratroops, 2645; Mrs. Cecil G. Stillinger, medicos, 2511.

Bridge will be played until 4:30 p. m., after which tea will be served. Drawings for a door prize will take place during the tea, so those not wishing or unable to play bridge may come to the tea. Mrs. F. W. Pratt will have charge of the bridge tables, while Mrs. Mason H. Lucas will arrange the tea.

The Women's Missionary Society is observing a week of prayer for home missions this week at the Baptist church here, at 3 p. m. EWT.

Rev. C. W. Stilk, pastor of Wellston Baptist church in Macon, Ga., filled the pulpit of the local Baptist church Sunday evening.

The Royal Ambassadors, Girls Auxiliary and Sunbeams, along with their leaders, Mrs. J. B. Sharpe, Mrs. O. L. Greene and Mrs. C. O. Pharris have given a special invitation to their parents and friends to meet with them Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock EWT.

RECREATION

The enlisted and civilian families will enjoy dancing from nine to twelve o'clock Saturday in the auditorium. Tickets may be bought in advance from Mrs. Hays, 31-C; Mrs. Beck, 34-A; Mrs. Benefield, 14-A; Mrs. Furcorn 55-A, or Mrs. Ashe 86-B. Tickets will be sold at the door and the dance will be informal.

Next Sunday, March 7, is the day set for the kite tournament. If the weather is suitable residents of the Village are invited to gather on the large athletic field near Benning Drive to watch the tournament. Boys and girls between the ages of eight and sixteen will be eligible to enter. There will be two age groups. Awards will be made to the ones having the sturdiest flying tailless kite, the most unique home-made kite, and for the one hundred yard dash. Further details may be obtained from Mrs. Troutman. The tournament will begin at 4 o'clock EWT.

The Mothers club met last Wednesday in the auditorium with a good attendance. After the business meeting others joined the club members to hear a talk by Mrs. B. B. Littlejohn on point rationing.

The nursery school hours have been changed to 10:15 EWT. Many of the children are returning to school after illnesses of measles and mumps.

A group of twenty-two ladies will receive first aid certificates for having completed the Standard Red Cross course.

A nutrition course will begin Monday, March 9, with Mrs. Frank Gainese, home demonstration agent, teaching. Those interested in attending are asked to register with Mrs. Troutman.

Europe will be open to invasion from the Mediterranean. Hitler is fighting for time there just as we did on Bataan a year ago. The longer he can hold us off in Africa, the stronger he can build his defenses in southern France and the more pressure he can put on Franco in Spain to bring him in to the battle.

From Algiers, though, comes a report that Giraud and De Gaulle have reached "complete accord." This ought to prove good news because the bickering between French elements has been one of the bad things in North Africa.

The Germans dropped bombs that whistled to frighten people. We couldn't figure them out. We would think the bombs were coming right down on our ship because of the whistle when they were really far away," Heyman related.

"Dunkerque was in terrific flames, with the buildings gutted and planes falling. Civilians came out to our boat with British soldiers.

We loaded 500 to 600 men at a time, loading them like cargo. We put them in the holds, on the middle decks, and under decks, the bridge and anywhere we could.

BULLET-SPRAYED

"Our ship was sprayed often by machine gun bullets and bomb splinters, and although damaged it came through all right. All of the men didn't. We would go for 36 hours without sleep, and then we'd just nap for a couple of hours before starting work again."

After Dunkerque, Heyman continued to follow the sea. On June 30, 1941, after many narrow escapes, the ship on which he was serving was bombed and sunk. The German planes machine-gunned the lifeboats.

After three weeks in a hospital with a broken jaw, Heyman sailed for Canada. Near Iceland, the ship was torpedoed and sunk. For three and a half days, he and his shipmates drifted in a lifeboat in cold and stormy weather, without food or water, and clad only in underwear. A passenger ship picked them up and took them back to London.

Heyman still did not lose his taste for a sailor's life. He signed up with a 10,000 ton ship bound for South Africa with planes and tanks. After beating off an attack near Iceland, the ship finally met its doom near Trinidad when it was torpedoed.

Sharks !!!

After getting in a lifeboat, Heyman decided to return for his valuables. While he was on the ship, the second torpedo struck. The lifeboat was gone, so he jumped overboard and swam away from the ship. Luckily he was in a pool of oil which kept away the sharks, for it was two hours before his shipmates picked him up.

A little later the submarine surfaced and offered them food. They refused to accept and also refused to answer any of the many questions the Germans asked. The sub finally left after telling them to steel southwest.

The men put up a canvas as a sail on the lifeboat, and three days later had gone about 60 miles of the 400 miles to Brazil when an American tanker picked them up.

18 EGGS

"I ate 18 eggs and 12 slices of bread, took two baths and then slept on the floor for 46 hours without awaking. We received the best treatment from this ship I have ever had," Heyman said.

The tanker put the survivors ashore at Santos, Brazil, from where he made his way to New York. There he started his campaign to join the Army. Delayed because of his youth and the fact that he was an alien, he worked at various jobs in New York City until October 7, 1942, when he finally was accepted by the Army.

Private Heyman has not heard of his family since he left Holland in 1940. His father, however, was killed when a torpedo struck his ship at sea.

Pointers Plan Annual Dinner

Will Pay Homage To Sacred Dead

The anniversary of the founding of the United States Military Academy will be celebrated by West Pointers at Fort Benning March 13 with the annual West Point Dinner. The post gymnasium has been selected tentatively as the scene.

The dinner will not only commemorate the beginning of West Point but will also honor those graduates who have already given their lives in the service of their country in the present war.

HIGHLIGHTS

The affair will be highlighted by short talks by Brig. General Walter S. Fulton, post commander an doldest living graduate here, and toastmastering by Col. Bernard A. Byrne, head of the communications section.

Lt. Col. John Roosma, committee chairman, pointed out that these dinners have always been a milestone in a West Pointer's military career and that every effort is being made by his committee to make this one a signal success. The committee will bring before the diners a choir composed of 65 officers making up the newly graduated Point class of 1943 who are now taking the basic course in the Infantry School.

G. I. Summary Of World News

BY SGT. O. J. REMINGTON

MOST INTERESTING NEWS of the past week was the destruction of a Japanese armada of 22 ships by U. S. air power in the Bismarck Sea. This was the gathering of Jap power which last week looked like a resumption of Nip offensive effort. American planes in a perfectly planned attack swooped down, downed two scores Japanese fighter planes, and totally destroyed the gathering of naval power.

Experts see all sorts of things in this—but one thing clearly demonstrated is the fact that sea power nowadays is practically helpless against land-based air power. It's the same lesson that was demonstrated at Midway Island. It also serves to show the terrific odds against a simply naval attack against the Japanese Isles themselves and points to need of land bases in Asia and to adequate airplane defenses for an attacking naval force.

At any rate, the news of destruction of the Japanese naval force is splendid—but Gen. MacArthur's latest communiques indicate continued gathering of Japanese power in the Pacific area. Evidently be plenty of excitement there before long, apparently. Doubtless the Japanese will do all in their power to put pressure on American and Australian forces in order to keep as much pressure as possible away from the German forces in Tunisia.

STARTLING WAS THE statement by Admiral William H. Standley, American ambassador to Russia, that he did not think the Russian public was being informed of the complete story of American aid to Russia.

That the Nazis consider it of utmost importance, however, was shown by reports of a gathering of German sea power off the Norwegian coast. Nothing has come of this so far, but implications are that the German fleet plans to attack the huge convoys of United Nations shipping that is carrying all sorts of supplies to Russia.

Reports in the English press said that the concentration of German sea power included the battleship Tirpitz, the large cruiser, a number of destroyers, the battleship Scharnhorst and the aircraft carrier Graf Zeppelin. Should this formidable group take to the open sea to begin raiding operations, it would, of course, draw off large units of American and British power and thus help ease the German situation in Africa.

IN NORTH AFRICA, Rommel continues his desperate slashes first at the British Eighth Army, then at the American forces. American air forces smashed at an Axis sea convoy off Bizerte and continued hitting at land transport.

After a few days of inactivity, American and RAF bombers resumed their attacks on German submarine bases and interior cities.

In China, Japanese troops were being forced back by fierce Chinese counter-attack.

In Russia, Red armies continued pushing back Nazis following stiffening of German resistance and even of some fierce counter-attacking that has gained the Germans some ground last week. The Russians are encircling the German base of Vyazma, and if they

Local News Reel Feature Starts Monday

Bi-Weekly Film Of Post Events Slated For Theaters

"Look, It's Fort Benning," a bi-weekly newsreel devoted exclusively to the post, will start a regular run of the circuit of theaters on the reservation Monday night, at the Main theater, it was announced today by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post. It will be shown at both performances.

An innovation at an army camp, the newsreel will be shown for a brief period at each of the several theaters on the post. The first newsreel, which is slated to open on Monday night, will run about ten minutes and will include scenes on the arrival of the company of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, the inspection of Fort Benning by ten Argentinian newspapermen last Saturday, and the review by the First Canadian Parachute battalion on Monday as well as action shots of the paratroopers jumping.

Presented by the Post Public Relations office and the Special Service office, Fort Benning's newsreel is being filmed by the newsreel section of the 161st Signal Photographic company, which includes several trained newsreel men.

Succeeding presentations of "Look, It's Fort Benning" will film activities of soldiers in different sections of the post. Novel ideas for newsreel shots, which may be adaptable for the newsreel, are sought and should be made to the Public Relations office, Telephone FB-3535.

No Extra Gas For Furloughs

Local Rationing Board Rules Answering Queries

No extra gasoline can be allowed for military personnel desiring to use automobiles on leaves or furloughs, it was announced today by Sgt. Louis Lipp, secretary of the Fort Benning branch of the Muscogee Counnty Price and Ration Board.

Scores of soldiers have been besieging not only his office but office of the board in Columbus under the mistaken idea that gasoline ration coupons may be issued, he said. In some cases, soldiers have said that officers have advised them to go directly to the board in Columbus, thereby wasting time and valuable gasoline in making a trip needlessly.

"There seems to be a great deal of confusion on this subject due to the fact that soldiers may use their automobiles for social purposes while at home on leaves, but this does not mean that they can secure extra gasoline coupons to make a trip on leave or furlough," he said. The rules are very specific about this, and nothing can be done to get any extra gas.

"Personnel being moved from one station to another, however, may secure gasoline to enable them to make the trip."

PAPA SMITH!

Staff Sergeant Stewart W. Smith of the Infantry School Public Relations Office beamed with pride today because Mrs. Smith presented him last night with an eight-pound, three-ounce daughter at the Station Hospital. The daughter will be named Joan Elizabeth. The Smiths live in Baker Village.

Canadian 'March Past' Honors Post Generals

Dominion Represented By High Officials; Gen. Fulton Speaks

North American solidarity was heralded Monday afternoon when the First Canadian Parachute Battalion staged a "march past" on Gowdy field before high-ranking Army officers of the United States and Canada.

The review and inspection was presented for Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, and Brig. Gen. George P. Howell, commandant of The Parachute School, as the Canadian unit completes its intensive training at Fort Benning before moving to Camp Shilo, Manitoba, Canada.

Brigadier A. E. Nash, deputy adjutant general of Canada, who came to the post from Ottawa, and Lt. Col. W. B. Wedd, the Canadian military attache in Washington, were on the reviewing stand with General Fulton and General Howell as the Canadian battalion took part in the exercise.

WAAC'S ATTEND

Gowdy field's grandstands were filled with spectators, including the entire company of the newly-arrived 43rd Post Headquarters company of the Women's Army Auxiliary corps.

When the Canadian battalion was drawn up in formation before the reviewing stand, after the 29th Infantry band opened the ceremony with the "Star Spangled Banner" and "God Bless the King," General Fulton spoke to the unit.

"It is thrilling to know," General Fulton told the troops, "that so fine a body of men is an ally of ours in this struggle against tyranny. We are proud here at Fort Benning of our own parachute troops because already the graduates of the school here are writing history in battle.

SHOULDER TO SHOULDER

"We have had time at Fort Benning in the past months to know that the men of Canada are taking their places side by side with our own men," General Fulton observed.

General Howell then presented the qualifying "wings" to the most recently graduated class of Canadian paratroopers who went through the American Parachute school. As the presentation ceremony was concluded, the battalion passed in review before the general officers.

Symbolizing the solidarity of the United States and Canada, the Stars and Stripes and the British Union Jack fluttered on either side of the reviewing stand during the ceremonies.

Shortly the major newsreel in theaters throughout the country will present views of the impres-

Who Wouldn't Wonder Which WAAC's 'Twas?

The WAAC's were due to arrive at Fort Benning.

Into the office of Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, post athletic officer located in the post bowling alley strode Sgt. Carl Neu.

"Say, I have a lot of wax out here," he announced. "Can you help me out?"

The bowling alleys emptied as though by magic as several score of soldiers rushed out believing they were going to get their first view of the WAAC's—and all willing to give a helping hand.

They were slightly chagrined that Sgt. Neu had two hundred pounds of floor wax he was having delivered and was merely requesting help for the unloading.

Officer Receives Navy Decoration

Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, Jr., who was assigned to the Infantry Board at Fort Benning from 1937 to 1939, has been awarded the Navy's Distinguished Service Medal for his leadership of American forces during the mopping-up campaign on Guadalcanal. Gen. Patch left Ft. Benning to become an instructor of the Alabama National Guard.

He was cited by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, acting in behalf of President Roosevelt, "for exceptionally meritorious service in a duty of great responsibility as commanding general, Guadalcanal area, during operations against enemy Japanese land, naval and air forces from December 10, 1942 to Feb. 9, 1943."

Santa's Son, Joseph Clause, Made Corporal

Here's a real Christmas present, though a bit belated for one Fort Benning soldier's dad.

Pvt. Joseph E. Clause, of Division Headquarters, Tenth Armored Division, has just been promoted to corporal. So the soldier trotted over to the telegraph office to wire the good news to his Dad: Mr. Santa Clause of Marshall, Mo

'Bayonet' Contest Contributions Roll In As WAAC's Get Busy

Contributions to the Bayonet's contest offering $350 in War Bonds are pouring in. Even aspiring pen-women among the newly arrived WAACs have made entries. The deadline for contributions will be April 1.

J. W. Thomas, manager of the Sears Roebuck store in Columbus, has been named general chairman of the committees which will select the prize winners in the contest. Next week Mr. Thomas will announce the local businessmen who will comprise the committees to decide on the winning contributions.

Prizes will be awarded for the best material submitted in several categories. The best human interest or feature story will bring a $25 war bond to its writer. Four other prizes of $15, $10, $8 and $5 in war stamps also will be given.

The same prizes will apply in the sports features, editorials or essays and poem departments.

Two $25 bonds will be awarded for the best humorous cartoon and serious piece of art work, respectively. War stamps of $10 $8, $5 and $2 denominations will be prizes for the four next best pieces of work in both categories.

The Bayonet will publish most of the contributions in a special edition April 15. Winning contributors will be feted at a dinner to be held in Columbus. Altogether 30 prizes will be awarded.

Everything submitted by officers or enlisted men between now and April 1 will be eligible for the big prizes, however, the editors of the Bayonet reserve the right to use preliminary judging and use the contributions between now and the April 15 special edition.

Material so used may compete for the usual $2 weekly prizes and may be considered also for the war bond prizes, in which event the material would be reprinted in the special edition.

Special Service Slates Two Radio Shows

Local Talent Will Feature Programs; Prizes Announced

Two new half-hour radio programs, "Fort Benning's Dance Bands on Parade" and "Fort Benning's Theatre of the Air," to be broadcast directly from the military city of Fort Benning, will hit the air waves commencing Thursday, April 1, at 8:30 p. m., it was announced by Lt. Colonel Charles C. Finnegan, chief of the Special Service branch.

The two programs will alternate, with each program being presented on every other Thursday. "Fort Benning's Dance Bands on Parade" will bow in the programs on April 1. The following Thursday, April 8, will mark the debut of "Fort Benning's Theatre of the Air.

"Fort Benning's Dance Bands on Parade" will feature a half-hour of popular dance music played by the dance bands of the various organizations stationed at Fort Benning.

ORIGINAL SCRIPT

"Fort Benning's Theatre of the Air features the presentation of orginal scripts written by military personnel stationed at the Post. The plays will be enacted by talent recruited from the various camp organizations.

A call has been sent out by the Special Service office for all soldiers who may be interested in participating in these programs. Tryouts will be held in the radio studio at Service Club No. 1, Main Post, Thursday and Friday, March 11 and 12 at 7:30 p. m.

MONETARY REWARD

To encourage development of writing talent the Special Services office will offer $10 in War Savings Stamps for each original script accepted and produced. Awards of $5 in War Savings Samps will be given for ideas and plots for scripts which are accepted and used in order that soldiers who lack the leisure time to complete their scripts may have an opportunity to participate.

Scripts should not run more than 25 minutes reading time, according to the Special Services office. Scripts and ideas and plots for scripts should be submitted to Pvt. E. Barry Sturmer, Special Service office, Post Headquarters, Fort Benning.

The presentations will be directed by Private Sturmer, who in civilian life was director of Playcraft Guild of Long Island, and co-author of "The Straw Hat Revue," a Broadway musical hit in 1940.

Taunting Twin Trouble Tumming To Tumbody

Not double but quadruple trouble is seen for some unsuspecting first sergeant, especially should two sets of twins inducted at the Fort Benning Colored reception Center be sent to the same camp.

They are the 18-year-old Carlton twins, Julius A. and Julian R., Atlanta, Ga., and the 19-year-old Grimes twins, Johnnie and James, of Elberton, Ga.

After their induction Friday the pair of twins left for home and seven-day furloughs. They were sent to the Reception Center from DeKalb county Selective Service Board. The Grimes twins worked as waiters in a fraternity house at Emory University before Uncle Sam beckoned.

Catholics Hold Week's Mission March 14-21

Twelve Redemptorist Missionaries Arrive Today for Services

Twelve Redemptorist Missionaries will arrive at the Post this afternoon to prepare for the Catholic Mission which begins Sunday morning and will last through Sunday, March 21.

The mission, which was arranged through the cooperation of Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, post commander, and the Most Reverend John F. O'Hara, military bishop of New York, will provide an opportunity for Catholic soldiers to participate in a mission on the Post and in their own organizations. The Solemn Opening of the Mission will take place at all Masses conducted at the Post Sunday morning. At that time, the Missionary at each Mass will explain the idea and purpose of the Mission and announce the schedule for the individual area.

The opening is followed by two services daily, the Morning Mass and the Evening Exercises, in each area and throughout the week. The Solemn Closing with the imparting of the Apostolic Blessing occurs on March 21, and will mark the end of the mission.

The Rev. Joseph Turner, superior of the Missionary Band, is a missionary of many years' experience, and selected the very best priests at his disposal to aid the soldiers. The Rev. Francis Murray was a chaplain in the Aviation Corps during the first World War and for a number of years was civilian chaplain at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. He is noted for his experience and humor.

ELOQUENT SPEAKER

The Rev. William Walsch, noted for his eloquence, served in Puerto Rico for a number of years. The Rev. Joseph Sofka, a seasoned missionary, speaks several languages fluently and has conducted missions all over the United States. The Rev. Thomas McCauley is the former president of St. Mary's, college, Illchester, Md., and of the Redemptorist House at the Catholic university. The Rev. John Prosser served many years

Choir To Sing In LaGrange

2nd STR Songsters Make Second Trip

The choir of the Second Student Training Regiment will make another musical excursion this weekend when it travels to LaGrange, Ga., for two public appearances there Sunday.

The choral group will be entertained at a dance by the LaGrange Women's College Saturday night, and then will appear at the First Baptist church of LaGrange Sunday morning and at vesper services at the LaGrange College chapel in the afternoon.

The invitation to come to LaGrange followed closely on the heels of the successful trip the choir made to Atlanta about a month ago where it appeared at the Atlanta Episcopal Cathedral. A group from LaGrange came to Fort Benning this week to make final arrangements.

Capt. John S. Greenfield, company commander of the 16th Company, is the director of this choir composed almost wholly of officer candidates which has established quite a reputation in Georgia musical circles through its various public appearances. The group was organized more than a year ago at the inspiration of Regimental Chaplain Edwin L. Willson, at whose Chapel No. 2 it has not missed a Sunday since it was organized, despite frequent changes in personnel.

Army Enlisted Men Given Specialized College Training

Nineteen enlisted men representing various post units have been ordered to report Friday to Georgia Tech in Atlanta for specialized courses in engineering, Gen. Walter S. Fulton, post commander, has announced.

Approximately 2,000 men took examinations this week and orders are expected shortly for additional soldiers to depart for other colleges for courses.

This step is a phase of the army's specialist training program to send qualified enlisted men to college to fit them for special duty.

Serviceman Tax Exemption Bills Before Congress

Bills providing tax exemptions for both men and women in the armed services has been introduced in Congress by Senator Eastland (D-Miss.) and Representative Abernathy (D-Miss.)

The Eastland-Abernathy bill, if it should pass, would skip last year's taxes, this year's taxes, and all taxes so long as the war lasts for service men and women in the Army, Navy Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

Another bill was thrown into the legislative hopper to aid members of the armed forces by Senator Reynolds (D-N. C.), who introduced a bill to knock off all taxes for the duration on cigarettes and tobacco for use of members of the services.

Tiger Policies Now Near $100,000,000

Almost $100,000,000 worth of National Service Life Insurance is held by the men of the Tenth Armored "Tiger" division, with a total of 86 per cent of the men insured, First Lt. John W. Inzer, Jr., Post Insurance officer, revealed today from figures submitted by Lt. C. A. Gilmore, Jr., Life Insurance officer for the "Tiger" division.

The figures were released as of February 28, 1943. In the period betwene February 15 and February 28, new policies or increases in old policies in the amount of $1,602,000 were taken. The Third Armored regiment led with an increase of $445,000.

Enlisted Men Are Heavy Donors To Big War Chest

Setting the pace for army camps throughout the nation, the Red Cross War Fund drive at Fort Benning today skyrocketed to $23,000 as military and civilian personnel in all areas of the camp joined in contributing to the annual appeal.

Mrs. Walter S. Fulton, who is coordinating the work of many women volunteers in collecting contributions, today praised the spirit of enlisted men throughout the post who haves accounted for the majority of donations.

"The contributions of the enlisted men at the post," Mrs. Fulton said, "are exceeding all expectations. These men are not being solicited for funds but they are making up the bulk of the contributions."

As Fort Benning's gifts to the Red Cross continue to soar, the drive will be concluded this weekend. With more money coming in daily to the War Fund chest, Mrs. Fulton said she expects the total for the post to climb to a still higher record.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN

Fort Benning's contributions to the Red Cross have broken all previous records for contributions by post personnel. "Fort Benning is doing a magnificent job in this Red Cross drive," it was pointed out today by T. G. Reeves, general chairman of the Muscogee county campaign. "Their record gives the citizens of Columbus something to aim for. Surely every civilian will feel it his duty to see that Columbus' record equals and even surpasses that of the post."

The second and Third Student Training Regiments Saturday boosted Fort Benning's contributions ahead with donations totaling almost $10,000. Mrs. S. R. Tupper, wife of Col. Tupper, commanding officer of the Student Training Brigade, brought the huge sum of money to Red Cross headquarters on the Main Post in all sorts of collection boxes, paper and cloth bags.

TENTH ARMORED

More than $3,500 weer added to the fund on the post Tuesday when contributions from enlisted men of the Tenth Armored Division were brought to headquarters.

Throughout the Red Cross drive at the post, the response of enlisted men has been outstanding, it was pointed out, although no direct solicitation has been made. The War Department has forbidden the solicitation of donations from enlisted men.

However, since most soldiers at the post know of the vast amount of worthy aid the Red Cross extends to soldiers at this reservation as well as to fellow comrades-in-arms throughout the world, thousands of soldiers are volunteering contributions to the drive.

Post Papers Will Exhibit Cartoons At Service Club

The Regimental Mirror of the Academic Regiment will sponsor an art exhibition on Monday and Tuesday, March 15th and 16th, at Service Club No. 1, displaying cartoons, drawings and photographs, most of which have appeared in Fort Benning regimental newspapers.

513 Parachute Regiment Becomes a Training Unit

Basic, Specialists Courses Offered In New Set-Up

Serving as a training regiment for graduates of the Parachute School, the 513th Parachute Regiment will give a six-week course in basic subjects as well as follow-up specialist schools, according to an announcement received today.

Lt. Col. Albert H. Dickerson, commanding officer of the 513th, also will serve as school director, it was learned as the regiment took up quarters in the Alabama area of Fort Benning.

Organization of the new school will mean that the regiment will be divided into two groups, he explained. The first will be officers and permanent cadremen. The other will be personnel assigned after completing their work in the Parachute Training regiment.

He announced that the six-week course will be in basic subjects including preparatory rifle marksmanship; firing; scouting; tactical training of the individual soldier; and some mortar and light gun courses.

FOR SPECIALISTS

After this course, those who have shown promise will attend specialist schools in sniping, machine guns, mortors and automatic weapons.

The sniping course will include instruction in advanced marksmanship, use of camoulflage, telephones, scouting, patrolling and other subjects. In the machine gun course, both heavy and light guns will be stressed. Both the 60 mm and 81 mm mortar weapons will be included in instructions in the mortar course, together with the Thompson sub-machine gun, Browning automatic rifle, pistol and carbine.

Students graduating will be organized into companies and battalions of the 513th.

THE STAFF

Colonel Dickerson will maintain his office in the Technical School offices of the building that previously housed the 506th Parachute Infantry headquarters. Lt. Col. Marshall A. Goff, commander of the 1st Battalion of the Parachute Training regiment will command the administrative companies that houses students during attendance at the school.

Major F. C. W. Kellam will act as operations officer of the new school while assisting him will be Major John G. Turner, general committee chief; Major George R. Walten, tactics committee chief and Major Gerhard Bolland, weapons committee chief.

As battalions of the 513th are organized later, officers and non-commissioned officers will be used to organize the new units.

Insurance Policies Sans War Waiver Clause Are Okeh

In a statement appearing in the January 28 issue of the Benning Bayonet, concerning the value of commercial insurance once a soldier left contintental United States, Major W. Russell Lowe, Insurance Section Adjutant General's office was erroneously quoted as saying this insurance was valueless once the soldier boarded a transport.

What Major Lowe did say was that most commercial policies with war waiver clauses attached eliminate the coverage when the soldier left the contintental limits of the United States, but that commercial policies without the waiver were as good or better, as the day they were purchased.

1st STR Unit Launches Leadership 'Offensive'

Is Answer To Claim Subject Is Intangible, And Uneteachable

If you were the platoon leader, what would you do if you discovered one of your men with a full bottle of cognac at his lips while you were moving up to the front?

That was the question before Third Battalion, First Student Training Regiment officer candidates and basics as Lt. Col. John S. Roosma, their commander, launched an offensive in leadership recently. That was the problem they tossed back and forth like a mental grenade.

Col. Roosma has launched his leadership training course, a series of weekly conferences, to meet the burning need for vigorous leadership for American soldiers. It is a reverberating 155 mm. answer to those who have said that knowledge of strategy, tactics and logistics was enough as well as to those who insisted leadership was an indefinite something which could not be taught, officers declared.

WEST POINTER

A graduate of West Point in the class of 1926, he won the coveted sabre of the best all-round athlete in that year and was a unanimous choice for the All-American basketball team. No new-comer to this Post he served here from 1926-28 with the 29th Infantry and from 1928-30 with the 15th Tank battalion, following up with a course at the Infantry school, in 1931.

From 1931-34 he was with the 31st Infantry in the Philippines. In 1932 he was sent to Shanghai to protect the lives and property of American citizens. In 1934 he was with the 18th Infantry at Fort Wadsworth. From 1935-40 he was provost marshal at West Point. From 1940-42 he was with the 21st Infantry in the Hawaiian Islands. He was at Schofield Barracks when the Japs struck.

RAISON D'ETRE

His experience as a peace-time and battle officer showed him the necessity for officers to be on the move; do things with whatever they have on hand; always to keep progressing; to watch constantly for the personal welfare of the men. He saw how soldiers emulate their officer if they are good leaders. He knew the need for personal inspections, tactful teaching and correction by commissioned personnel.

It was the lack of training in these essentials of leadership that led Colonel Roosma to organize his course. He is proving that the 'Object Lessons' In Patriotism Serve As Curative For Goldbricks

Orthopedists Show Offenders Casts Of Soldiers' Deformed Feet

Goldbricks are given an object lesson in patriotism and actual physical defects when they appear in the orthopedic section at Station Hospital complaining that minor foot ailments should exempt them from duty.

This object lesson is gentle but effective. The goldbricks are merely shown a plaster of paris reproduction of a pair of feet.

But those feet differ radically from those possessed by the malingerer. One of the feet has only three toes. The other foot has but four. The whole structure of each foot is so different from an ordinary foot that one wonders how they could be used effectively for walking.

"That man—the one who has those feet—is capable of a 10-mile march. He is still in the army and doing important work, because he feels it is his job to serve his country in the army."

TURN BRICK-RED

Words like these usually make the goldbrick turn brick red for he then realizes his own imagined troubles amount to very little, after all.

This evidence of psychological knowledge is merely one small phase of the impressive work being done by the Station Hospital's orthopedic section here in Fort Benning.

An average of 300 patients are treated in the 11 wards now handled by the orthopedic staff which is operated under the general supervision of Lt. Col. A. M. McCarthy, chief of surgery, and under the immediate direction of Major Roy Ciccone.

The orthopedic section at the present time has two wards in the main hospital—ward No. 1 for enlisted men and ward No. 13 for officers—and nine wards in the cantonement area. It is equipped to expand at any time to meet any emergency that might arise.

LATEST EQPIPMENT

All of the latest equipment to care for orthopedic cases is utilized in treatment. The Roger Anderson apparatus for treatment of fractures is used in all cases which require it. This frame is much the same as the recently publicized Stader splint, which allows patients to walk soon after the bones are set. In this method, large pins are put into the bone both above and below the fracture and hold it in place. Bars outside the injured member are attached to the pins thus carrying the weight which otherwise would be placed on the broken bone.

Another apparatus used in treatment of certain cases is known as a "walking iron". These are placed outside a cast and terminate below the foot. They strike the ground and allow the patient to walk without strain or disturbance to the fractured part of the lower extremity.

A fully equipped operating room enables the orthopedists to treat properly all compound fractures and simple fractures which cannot be taken care of by closed manipulation.

ARCH SUPPORTS

Braces and arch supports are made in a brace shop which is operated under the section. Here, corrective supports are made for patients who suffer from bad arches and other foot troubles. Many a soldier who otherwise would be unable to drill or march for long periods is provided with the type of shoe and arch support which will enable him to keep up with his companions in the field even though the latter may have perfect feet. It would be difficult to estimate the number of soldiers who are of full use to the army now, despite flat feet, as a result of the corrective shoes and supports furnished by the orthopedic section.

"Suspension traction" looks like a Rube Goldberg contraption. It is used by the orthopedists in the tratment of many unusual cases. It utilizes mazes of wire, iron and plaster to correct and treat some of the more complicated problems dealing with injured bones and joints—or in medical terms, certain "traumatic cases."

BONE INJURIES X-RAYED

Upon arrival at the hospital, all acute bone injuries are taken immediately to the X-ray department, where films are made of the involved bones. They are then carried to the orthopedic clinic, which is next to the X-ray room in the hospital, where emergency and definite treatment is instituted. Those cases, such as compound fractures which require immediate surgery are taken to the operating room in the same building and which is prepared at all times to take care of such cases.

Approximately eight types of cases come under the heading of orthopedics. These are: fractures, such as broken legs or arms, severe sprains, dislocations, bone deformities, congenital anomalies, bone tumors and bone infections.

Taking care of an average of 300 patients confined to hospital wards is not the total work of the section by any means. A large number of soldiers who are not hospital cases are seen daily in consultation, and corrective treatment and measures are prescribed which permit the soldier to return to his unit. For example, a broken finger would be treated at the orthorpedic clinic, but seldom would require hospitalization.

SOURCES OF INJURY

The most frequent sources of injuries treated in the clinic result from parachute jumping, obstacle course racing and automobile accidents. Fractures around the ankle are the most frequent single injury.

"We've had every kind of bone injury as the result of training activities," Major Ciccone said, in discussing the problem of treating every type of case in his field on a post as vast as Fort Benning.

"However, the equipment here is excellent and equals that of the best civilian hospitals. And I have great praise for my assistants, who are all extremely well qualified for their duties here. "Also, the X-Ray department, under the supervision of Lt. Col. E. R. Bowie is to be highly praised for their cooperation, inasmuch as the orthopedic department depends upon X-Rays to a great extent in treating fracture cases."

Major Ciccone was on active duty at the Walter Reed hospital in Washington before he reported to his present station. His M. D. degree was received from New York University and his orthopedic training was obtained in Bellevue hospital, New York City, and the Boston City hospital. Major Ciccone came on active duty in July, 1941.

Capt. John T. Vandover, who obtained his M. D. from St. Louis University and received five years post graduate training in surgery, is assistant chief of the orthopedic section under Major Ciccone.

CAPTAIN WOHL

Capt. Charles S. Wohl is in charge of the orthopedic clinic. He received his medical degree from Cornell University and received five years of surgical training in New York City hospitals. He has been on active duty since April, 1941.

Captains William J. Tobin, Samuel Carrington and Marshall Bergen are ward surgeons in the section. Captain Tobin obtained his M. D. degree at the University of South Carolina and received post graduate training in orthopedic surgery at the Johns Hopkins University and Massachusetts general hospital. He reported for duty at the Walter Reed hospital in August, 1940, and was transferred to Fort Benning in December of the same year. After going on inactive duty in August, 1941, he returned to Walter Reed hospital in April, 1942, and was soon transferred to his present post.

Captain Carrington, who spent nine years in the practice of general surgery before entering the army, received his medical degree at the University of Chicago. After interning at several important Detroit hospitals, he took post graduate training in Europe at the Universities of Vienna and London.

Capt. Marshall Bergen obtained his M. D. degree from the Long Island Medical school. Following approximately 10 years of private practice, he took a residency in orthopedics at the medical center in Jersey City, N. J. He came into the army in October, 1942. At present the staff is augmented and ably assisted by members of the 24th General hospital.

The orthopedic section also is continually training and sending out to other units many enlisted men. Enlisted personnel from the numbered general hospitals, besides men in the detachment here, are trained to assist in the various procedures in orthopedic work. Among those trained here are men in the 21st General hospital now stationed somewhere overseas.

GREAT PROGRESS

Tremendous advances in the field of orthopedics have been made since the last war, Major Ciccone points out. Among these are internal fixation of fractures with metal plates, which was seldom used in the first World War, and external fixation of fractures.

Also of importance in this field is the marked reduction in the number of infections from compound fractures, due largely to the use of sulphanilamide.

Nonetheless, Major Ciccone adds, the many principles learned in the first world war have not been forgotten. Cleaning and debridement of wounds is still found to be the most essential thing in the treatment of wounds.

In addition to the large number of hospital patients treated daily and the many soldiers who are daily seen in consultation, the orthopedic section still has time to investigate and study problems of great importance to the medical field and the army alike. For example, Captain Tobin has started a survey of parachute injuries and is investigating the cause and distribution of fractures and the methods of prevention.

The job of keeping the army on its feet, of handling all types of orthopedic cases, and of returning men to active duty as quickly as possible is the thought evermost in the minds of the orthopedic section.

Major Ciccone and his assistants present an excellent example of the skilled physicians and surgeons provided by the army for the care and health of the soldier. The top-notch equipment used adds emphasis to this care.

Free Recordings To Be Made In H. C. Area

Three representatives of the Pepsi-Cola company will move into the Harmony Church area Thursday to make recordings for the men of that area. Recordings are made free for the men and sent without charge to anyone the man designates.

Recordings will be made in the day rooms of both the Second and Third Student Training Regiments. For several weeks the company's representatives have been in the Tenth Armored division area where they have made on an average of 100 recordings a day.

Right Man In Right Job Proves Merit

Col. Rosenberger Points To More Efficiency At Post

Personnel officers of Fort Benning disclosed last week-end that the proper assignment of military personnel to the right jobs at the Army post had resulted in the more efficient handling of work.

Lieut. Col. J. D. Rosenberger, Jr., adjutant of the post and director of the Military Personnel Division, returned today from a conference at Fourth Service Command headquarters in Atlanta where a conclave discussed the proper utilization of personnel.

Capt. Harry Shoemaker, assistant adjutant, and Lieut. Marvin L. Holland, assistant chief of the Military Personnel Branch at Fort Benning, accompanied Colonel Rosenberger to the meeting.

Major General William Bryden, commanding general of the Fourth Service Command, discussed with personnel officers of the larger Army posts in the Service Command the assignment of enlisted men and officers.

NOTABLE RESULTS

Colonel Rosenberger pointed out at the meeting that Fort Benning had achieved notable results in increased efficiency accruing from the assignment of the right personnel to the jobs for which they are best suited.

The encouragement of qualified enlisted men to apply for technical training in the Army Specialized Training program was stressed at the meeting. All enlisted men in the Service Command, who have the qualifications, and pass the required examinations are slated to be sent to colleges, as a phase of the program, to gain further knowledge that they might be better utilized in highly specialized assignments.

Fort Benning, Colonel Rosenberger disclosed, already has launched its program to enroll enlisted men for college training. Examinations have been held and qualifying soldiers will soon go back to school to benefit the Army and themselves.

EVANSVILLE, Ind.—(CNS)—When a "nut house" caught fire several inmates took advantage of their unexpected freedom. Two women patients strolled around the area in the nude while a third, clad only in a slip, swiped a bicycle and went for a ride.

Bond Activities To Be Aired

4th S. C. Official Will Speak Mar. 13

War bond activities at Fort Benning will be discussed by Lt. Col. Fred J. Jacobs, chief of the War Bond section, Fourth Service command, in a conference to be held with key bond officers here, Saturday, March 13, according to Major George Fink, post war bond officer.

It is expected that Col. Jacobs will explain the new decentralized certification of war bonds for military personnel, which should undoubtedly speed up delivery of actual certificates to purchasers. All class A allotments have been cancelled as previously announced, and class B deductions substituted.

NEW ARRANGEMENT

Under the new arrangements securities purchased by deductions will be made out upon certification of local finance officers that bond has been paid for. Previously, it was necessary that the Army War Bond office, 366 West Adams At., Chicago, Ill., before certificates could be completed, and mailed to subscribers.

Major Fink repeated that military personnel having pay reservations must make out a new form 29-5 or the revised form 29-6, in order to have their deductions continue after March 31. No new reservations will be accepted to commence before April 1, and for enlisted men minimum deductions must be at least $3.75 monthly, and may range as high as $375. The lowest class B allotment which an officer may authorize is $18.75.

Unit war bond officers not having sufficient application blanks are informed that an ample supply is on hand and may be secured directly from the office of the post war bond officer.

1st STR Cadre Unit Studies Marksmanship

Following a policy of continual military instruction, the cadre and officers of the 4th Battalion, 1st Student Training Regiment, under the direction of the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Ellis Moore, are in the midst of an eight weeks' course in rifle marksmanship.

This course in marksmanship was mapped out in the beginning to fit into the working day of the cadre. During the week, Tuesday through Friday, inclusive, the officers and cardre meet for one hour in the afternoon. The enlisted men seem very eager and interested in this work, since they know that some day proper training with the rifle will stand them in good stead, Col. Moore said.

ACH! NO BEER

LONDON (CNS)—Reuters asserted recently in a Zurich, Switzerland dispatch that Germany had ordered a halt of beer consumption, beginning March 15. (This report was without confirmation.)

PRESENTATION OF A V PLAQUE was made to the Fort Benning Boy Scout Troop 11 and to Cub Pack 1 by the National Boy Scout headqquarters for the work done by both groups in the war effort. Stamps denoting work in the salvage campaign, treasure hunt for rubber, the aluminum collection, and in the Red Cross campaigns have been affixed so far. Here Lt. Col. Virgil Ney, left, presents the plaque to Clifford Brown, center, representing the Cubs and to Craig Thorn, right, of the Scout troop. It now is hanging in the Fort Benning Boy Scout cabin. (U. S. FUN AND FROLICS

The enlisted and civilian families danced Saturday evening to the music of the 7th Observation Squadron orchestra. The hall was beautifully decorated with patriotic colors and tables and chairs arranged around the room gave the impression of a night club. Such a good time was had that the request for more dances was answered by "We'll have the next dance on March 27 — Save the date."

The officers and their wives will dance on Saturday, March 20. Plans indicate a very enjoyable evening. The 29th Infantry Orchestra will play.

Bingo, Saturday night, March 13. Come and play for the fun. Nice prizes will be awarded, too. 8:30 E.W.T., in the auditorium.

Miss Connie Garcia of 52A, daughter of Sgt. Garcia, director of the 29th Infantry orchestra, entertained a large group of friends at a birthday party Friday evening in the auditorium. More than thirty young people danced and played games for several hours. The hall was decorated with red, white and blue, and the girls wore formal dress. A large pink and white birthday cake holding fifteen candles was the highlight of the refreshments.

The auditorium may be used for private parties, all that is necessary is to check with Mrs. Troutman to avoid conflicts.

The kite tournament Sunday afternoon was greatly favored by Mr. Weatherman. Winners of first places in the tournament were: For best constructed kite, Joyce Givenn of 88A; for the fifty-yard dash, Buddy Glaze, 39D; for the best performance, Charles Wilson, 143D, and for the string winding contest, Dorman Shoemaker, 143G. Prizes were awarded. Judges were Sgt. R. L. Chapman, 37D, and Sgt. E. C. Dowdy, 95C.

Requests have come for more such tournaments. Perhaps if March lives up to its reputation and gives plenty of windy weather, we can have another.

The Nutrition Course, taught by Mrs. Frank Gaines, county home demonstration agent, started Tuesday. It is not too late for others to enroll in the class. Classes meet each Tuesday and Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock E.W.T. in the auditorium. Now that food is rationed it is more beneficial than ever to have such a course.

Several lost articles have been turned in to the Rental office, including a set of keys. Anyone losing these may receive them by claiming same. A lady's gold evening bag was lost at the officers' dance. The owner may obtain it by seeing Mrs. Troutman.

The knitting class will be conducted each Friday from one to two o'clock instead of two until four as before because of the Nutrition course, Mrs. Vaughan announces.

A total of 4,100 feet of tubing is used in each B-24 bomber.

Have YOU Contributed?

'I Am The Sergeant Of My Laigs,' Suh!

The man was stumbling in the darkness, his field pack inclined at an uncertain angle, his feet scarcely clearing the ruts of the hard-caked roadway. The battalion had been on maneuvers and was on the home stretch with almost twenty miles to go.

We recognized the soldier by his relative position in ranks; he was an illiterate from Gastonia, N. C., slight of build and scarcely eligible to the description of "sturdy"—one of the type who would rather do latrine duty than bother to question the origin of the order. Being one of our men, we were concerned, hence suggested we be allowed to help him carry the pack or rifle.

His retort was determined, concise: "I been carryin' this here pack for foah days; I aims to carry it into cyamp."

So we marched abreast of him for a while, wondering what on earth we could say. It was perfectly obvious, dark though it was, that the man was suffering badly—and it was further evident that nothing short of outright order would force him to surrender his pack. Nothing remained but to whisper an, "Attaboy, Chevilot!" and fall back into formation at the end of the column.

However, things were not as simple as all of that. Men began tumbling out of ranks, flopping to earth at the roadside, waiting for the column to march by and to be subsequently retrieved by the ambulances that hounded the rear. Chevilot's stumbling increased, his pack canted further, and his puffing become more irregular. Confidentially—and we are old hands at it—our own legs were numb to the thighs; the going was getting rugged. It took us minutes between the moment of decision and the minute of execution, to quicken our pace and overtake Chevilot again.

This time, we tried an alternate route of suggestion: "You don't want to fall out with the rest of them, do you Chevvy?" We voiced it with more statement than query, waiting with some misgivings for his reply. It was forthcoming and abrupt: "I hain't aimin' to fall out with nobody!"

We chuckled at the vindictiveness of his voice and rasped, "If you keep carrying that pack and rifle, your legs'll be the ones to decide whether you fall out or not."

"Like hell they are!" and his reply was instant. "Ever since I was a kid, I been tellin' my laigs whut to do. I aim to keep them doin' like I say as long as I got laigs. I ain't no sargint of no company, but I am sargint of my laigs. I says they're going to carry me an' my pack an' my rifle back to camp; they will!"

All of which left us in a train of thought for the remainder of the march. In the sporting world, the difference between the best and the second best, is the difference between mind and muscle. One phase of this control can be very easily termed, "coordination," speaking militarily or in the vernacular of the pretzel-twister who coordinates the twist of his wrist with the momentary estimate of his eye. Reaching for the foundation of the issue, nevertheless, mental control can demand from the body, more performance than the body is inclined to give: For example, the body tires after strenuous physical effort—and subsequently is inclined to commend the mind to erase the order. The mind, if it has no control, executes the command by allowing the body to cease in its efforts. The body stops, flops and rests. This decentralization of command—if we may put it thusly—is alternated back and forth during the process of severe physical effort, until at length we drop, convinced that we are fatigued and incapable—for a while, at least—of further effort.

Putting it simply: Run at a fairly fast pace until you decide that to run another yard would be beyond the capabilities of your body's conditioning. Then, take mental charge of your body and decide that the body shall run and continue to run until you give it the signal to stop. A little further up the road, it will again decide for you that you cannot run any further. Repeat the order only this time you shall have to be much more vigorous and authoritative; the body by now is rebellious and may have the inclination to tell you to go to hell—that it wants to rest. Insist upon it! Will yourself forward. You shall be astonished to discover that you can go on and on, doubling, trebling your original distance! Conditioning in your body shall take place much more rapidly, and, what's much more important, your mind shall develop greater control over your self. You shall be doing as your brain prescribes not as your inclinations are prone to suggest!

Chevilot of Gastonia had this control. Many of us who have been much more fortunate than he fail to grasp it from the books and lectures to which we have been subjected.

The paramount issue then comes to the front: as the body argues perpetually with the untrained mind, so the mind raises a variety of hells with the mind itself. It is generally accepted by the men who have more claim to erudition than we that the cerebrum, cerebellum, pituitary and pineal lobes—parts of the brain—each have an assigned function. Witness a supposedly true incident: during the bombing of Britain, a man's skull and brain were transfixed by—of all things—the shaft of an umbrella. The man lived; nothing wierd about that, with surgery what it is today. The fantastic aspect of the incident was introduced through observation of his recapitulative capacities; he remembered incidents wich had long since been obliterated from his memory, and yet failed to recall incidents of great importance which transpired a brief few hours before his incapacitation during the air raid!

Assume then, by virtue of strange case-histories like this one, that, indeed, the sections of the brain are detailed each to its own function. Isn't it possible then, if not outrightly logical, that a center-tissue, or dominating lobe, controls the functions of the others? And if this "master tissue" is overcome by the influence of the lesser tissues, isn't it likely that we shall give way to our baser inclinations? Call them instincts if you wish.

Among the innumerable qualities required of officer material, we find "SELF CONTROL," What need is there then for any of the other qualities? Having perfect control over thoughts, and naturally over our physical selves, our efforts can hence be guided into the trend of thought most necessary for assimilation toward our goal.

Burst the bubble of technicality and call it "will." Have the will to succeed in our control of our minds and our reflexes. Perhaps we cannot "sargint a company," but we certainly can "sargint our laigs," and what is so infinitely more important, our minds.

Gastonia made it back to camp with banners flying. He had "sarginted" himself into overcoming an almost insurmountable obstacle considering his obvious physical condition. Others had allowed their minds to go to hell and had lost control of their bodies—bodies which flopped dismally by the wayside, to lie there in full view of a passing column—to lie in derision and ignobility and, worst of all, defeat.

Sargint your self; you shall soon be sarginting others who cannot sargint themselves!

Great Armies Are Not Necessarily Carnivorous

It is the accustomed belief that meat is indispensable in the human diet, and that the health of our armed forces, and civilian population will be impaired due to the rationing of meat. This belief is unfounded, we know that the Axis countries have done without meat, or have had just rare samplings of it, and have managed to raise powerful armies.

It has been the custom of the army mess to serve meats in large quantities, sometimes as often as three times a day. That this method builds stronger and better soldiers is a fallacy. We know that the Japanese army subsists on practically no meat at all, and other foreign armies have done fairly well on a restricted diet forced upon them by a scarcity of meat.

From a health standpoint there is no danger in meat rationing. There are many other protein foods in abundance in this country, not rationed, that are equal to or even better than meat as far as protein value is concerned. Some of the other foods that can easily take the place of meat are fish, eggs, cheese, nuts, fresh fruits and plenty of vegetables.

The people of China, North Africa, and India have existed mainly on a vegetable diet. We understand that the Chinese Coolie works tirelessly as long as sixteen hours a day on a meatless diet. The Moslems of North Africa seldom touch meat, and they live long and healthy lives. In India the Hindus with their religious fasts show they are healthy in spite of their vegetable diet.

The erroneous fallacy that meat taken in large quantities means superiority in health has been disapproved by the above examples. Instead of grumbling about our meat shortage, let us study the various substitutes for meat, and use as many of these substitutes as are not rationed. Even with rationing, our meat supply will be better than in any other country, and we still will be able to buy more meat than we actually need for our health. Grateful are we to be tunate to live in a country where rationing still means plenty for all.

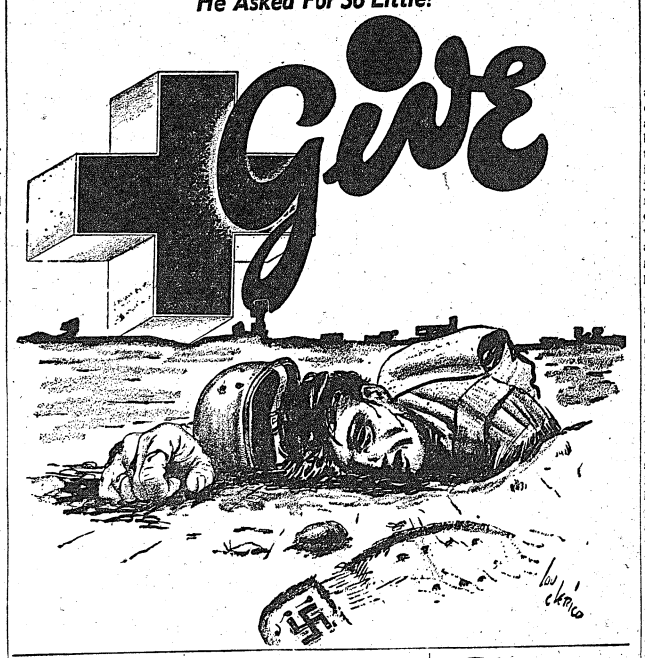
First Regiment Men Learn Dirty Fighting

The groaning and grunting, the swearing and sweating, that's what made it a virtual Valhalla for the boys with the cauliflowered head flaps. It was only a ten-day course. Ten days of chastisement dished out in dirty fashion. But the boys of the Infantry School's First Student Training Regiment who took the course in "Dirty Fighting" (and survived) are proving themselves zealous apostles of the art.



There isn't a man in the First Regiment who hasn't been tossed over at least two other men's shoulders. There isn't a surviving man amongst them who hasn't been cornered at least once and given a very persuasive dissertation on the ease with which a man's noggin can be shattered, his spine be pretzelrized, his eyes gouged, or (if it's just temporary measure) the air removed from his lungs.

Such ardent zeal on the part of these few enthusiastic "grunt and groan" artists is a bit tough on the majority, but it speaks well for the training they have received and the anticipation with which they are awaiting the time when they will have the opportunity to impart to others their knowledge and bruises.

Give me a gun and a pack on my back,
And give me your daringest dare.
Give me a smile—then give me a crack
At the fronts where I am told to "Beware!"
Yeh! Send me ahead—I want to be first
To taste of the enemies' shell.
Yeh! Send me to where the War's at its worst—
Where fighting is raging like Hell!

I pride in the pain of marching through rain—
Of hiking in heat that is fire.
I trek through and over any terrain,
Through water and sand and through mire.
Through bombs and through gas—through cannonade din—
Through treachery's damning deceit—
I vow with a grin—an invincible grin
"I'll NEVER drop to defeat!"

I'm flamed with a will to crush and to kill
The cowards who've traitored our peace—
I'll give of my soul—my blood will I spill
But murdering monsters I'll cease.
I'm one who believes in no if's and no out's,
I blaze through the day and the night.
I'm a "gettin'" guy with plenty of guts,
And I GET what I want in a fight.

I battle with bullets, bayonets and fist—
Onward and onward I go!
With wildcat cunning I crawl and I twist,
Forward to finish my foe.
I laugh at the gaff that goads at my soul,
And with tears that heavens my eyes,
I scream of my faith to the skies.

I'm steady and ready and ever alert,
My rights I'll ever defend—
A buddy—a pal I'll never desert—
And loyal I'll be to the end.
With vengeance I yell that fear cannot quell
A Doughboy's courage-filled cry.
I fight with the might—with the fury of Hell,
I FIGHT TILL I WIN OR I DIE!

USO Presents—

TWO HOLLYWOOD FILMS EASING HEADACHE OF RATIONING AND TAXES

By SHELDON A. KEITEL

To ease the headache somewhat of two pressing problems currently, the USO Town Hall program Sunday at the Ninth Street USO will be devoted to a discussion of point rationing and income taxes. . . . Two Hollywood-made films will be shown on the subjects besides of the talk of a guest speaker. . . . The first, "Point Rationing of Foods," made by the Screen Cartoonists' Guild, Leon Schlesinger and Warner Brothers, stresses the importance, fairness and the ease of point rationing of processed fruits and vegetables. . . . The other, "Spirit of 1943," is a presentation with Walt Disney's renowned Donald Duck which stresses the significance of saving for our income taxes to get "Taxes to Bury the Axis." . . . The Town Hall Forum is open to soldiers and civilians and will start at 3 p. m. (EWT).

Begorrah and old St. Patrick won't be forgotten by the USO. . . Sure and his day will be kept. . . . A St. Patrick's Day tea will be served Sunday afternoon at the Salvation Army-USO in Columbus.

To help get the boys of the 455th Coast Artillery acquainted with Fort Benning and Columbus, a party including a quiz program and games for approximately 40 of the fellows will be given at the Salvation Army-USO in Columbus Tuesday night.

Remember that Tenth Armored Division talent show at the Phenix City Salvation Army-USO two weeks ago? . . . Well, it went over with a bang and the boys from up Sand Hill way will render an encore Sunday in Phenix City at 4 p. m. (CWT) . . . George Hardin, program director at the Alabama USO club, promises another nice afternoon with some new talent.

"Sinkers and java comin' up" is the cry Sunday mornings at 10 (EWT) at the Columbus Salvation Army USO when the "Dunkers' Club" gathers for merriment and refreshments, says Miss Mell Tolbert, program director.

Lack of the opportunity to glide on silver blades here in Georgia is softened somewhat by the roller skating parties Sunday afternoons and every night at 8 p. m. (EWT) on the patio at the Army-Navy YMCA-USO in Columbus. . . . There are always at least 15 charming feminine partners available to Fort Benning's soldiers. . . . Skates can be rented at the nominal fee of 25 cents.

Should your next USO hostess at a dance be wearing ballet slippers, Roman sandals or raffia-soled moccasins, remember shoe rationing. . . . The girls are faced with several hundreds dance-miles this year. . . . The time is ripe to plan for the future lest they find themselves with nothing between their feet and the hard, cold floor but that thin layer of epidermis.

Coming to the Ninth Street USO is the Spring Music Festival, Sunday, March 21. . . . Other bookings worthy of note on the calendar are a boxing exhibition Friday, March 19, and the Pilot Club Dance, Monday, March 29.

Here's one to rival Sgt. Phil Lagerbloom's flush of victory turning into the measles after his sweetheart was named Queen of the Tenth Armored Division at a Valentine party. . . . Ray Rand, acting the part of a character with measles in a USO Camp Show up at Ft. Devens, Mass., felt ill after the show. . . . He really had the measles. . . . Must be catching.

HOW TO WIN FRIENDS

Among the most popular books in the last year or two is "How To Win Friends." Since its publication some 800,000 copies have been sold.

That is very interesting. Not that over a half million people are on their way to a more intimate contact with their fellow men — the value in that direction is very doubtful. Reading a book will never qualify one for that select circle of pleasing personalities; you either belong or you don't. The interest, the significance lies in the fact so many want to qualify, want to be helpful, want to lengthen the shadow of their influence.

It's good news; in line with the best traditions of our country. There has been and is much amiss in our national life. But we have always tried to be a good neighbor. Behind the barriers of creed, language, customs, there has been a genuine feeling of brotherhood. Envy, jealousy, class hatred have been noticeably absent. We like others to get ahead. We are proud to say, "Why I knew him when . . ."

So we are glad this spirit still abides in our land. For it accounts not only for the success of our democracy but points the way to a better day. Edwin Markham clarifies our thought:

He drew a circle that shut me out,
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout.
But love and I had the wit to win:
We drew a circle that took him in.

A happy future can grow only from an honorable present.

Plenty of people can give the answer. Only the toughest can live it.

Women can work their husbands, work on them, or work with them. Which do you do?

Hate and indifference are twins.

Old age comes through loss of interest sooner than through loss of years.

News is pretty much the same thing happening every day to different people. News of a new world would be daily change taking place in the same people.

If someone is to remind you of your mistakes next Sunday, let it be a preacher rather than a cop.

Eve Says—

SHE BEHOLDS OUR NEW WAAC'S AND GIVES THEM H ER BLESSING

At long last the W. A. A. C.'s are with us at Fort Benning. The curiosity and interest over their arrival were natural. We have been reading and seeing pictures of this revolutionary activity of women working in conjunction with the armed services for many months. We've listened to gags and speculations. We've wondered what they looked like and whether they were beautiful glamor girls we saw pictured on posters and magazines.

What a pleasant and thrilling surprise they really are. There's a G.I. look about them, something of the stern controlled appearance of the old line sergeant who knows his job and will take no nonsense from anyone.

These are no glamor girls who rushed into uniform in war hysteria. For one thing, the uniform isn't really so glamorous. It's too sturdy and serviceable. Olive drab isn't a color to do things for one's hair and complexion. There's a precise look of tailored utility about their uniform that places them exactly where they intend themselves to be—in the service with our menfolks.

The restrained use of make-up is another outstanding characteristic. In fact, they look as though good soap and water are their main beauty treatment. In a world of women bent on making themselves lovely for the morale of their men this clean, scrubbed look is wholesome and refreshing.

There is nothing of the "flibberty-fidget" about any of them. They're well above the average in intelligence and education. They look in fact as though they have relinquished positions of trust and responsibility. It isn't hard to imagine that they've sacrificed a career to serve their country. For they've a look of cool American efficiency about them.

One can also feel that they are aware of their grave responsibility, these first W. A. C. C.'s to report for duty at Fort Benning. They are the first women in the history of our country to serve with our army. Upon their shoulders rest the responsibility of proving the worth of their organization for all time to come. There's no question in my mind that they'll fulfill their trust. They'll do more than that—they'll make themselves so invaluable to our service that even the most hardened soldier who thought of our army as "this man's army," will wonder why they hadn't thought of something like this years ago. The "bumbling" clerks with one finger typing, farm boy soldiers groping with distasteful tasks will be a thing of the past. Our Army will know the joys business men have long known, that women are capable of being an efficient and invaluable asset to a smooth running organization.

Already many must be saying as our General's wife said when she first saw them, "God bless them." I echo her words as will many an Army wife. Our camp following life is apt to look somewhat futile in comparison.

COL. SWAMPWATE RS PUTS VILLA BEHIND 8-BALL WI TH BILLIARDS

It's quite comfortable up here in our office once you get comfortable. It was with this thought in mind that I planted my right ankle over my left ankle, which was in an oblique position on my desk, when General Quagmire's "aide de camp," Second Lieutenant Jericho hastily made his appearance.

"Sergeant!" he quacks, "I beg audience with Colonel T. P. Swampwater."

"Yes, Sir," I drawled, almost turning over my swivel chair in my haste to get up, "Right this way!"

As we entered, the Colonel gave us a dirty look and hastily shoved a copy of Spicy Tales into the drawer of his desk.

"Lt. Antonio Jericho, aide de camp to General Quagmire, to see you, Sir," I announced.

"Yes, Sir," pipes up Lt. Jericho, "I have come to deliver a message to you, Sir."

"Speak forth, Lieutenant," encouraged the Colonel, offering him a stick of his precious chewing gum, a fact that rather surprised me as he usually reserved this token of hospitality for the higher brass."

"Thank you, Sir," continued Lt. Jericho. "My immediate superior, Sir, desires your presence at a poker game to be given at your quarters on pay day night.

"Shades of Salome, Lieutenant! I must comply, but 'off the record,' I am extremely vexed. I lost two dollars the last time Quagmire pulled his rank on me. But tel him I'll be there. I place duty above personal sacrifice."

"Yes, Sir, I'm sorry, Sir, but I shall tell him. Sir," replied Lt. Jericho, saluting his way out.

As soon as he had gone, ol' T. P. turned to me and said, "Sergeant, that young fellow has a promising future as an officer. Did you hear him call me 'Sir'?"

"Yes, Sir," I replied.

"Well, all he needs is a little campaign experience and he'll really be a credit to the Army."

"Yes, Sir," I added.

"There's nothing like field experience, Sergeant, nothing like it. In spite of that incredulous look in your eye I haven't always been an "office officer." I was once the pride of Pershing's Mexican Infantry, an unsung hero of the Mexican rebellion."

"How was that, Sir?"

"Well, General Pershing, my immediate commander, had left me and my platoon holding a deserted village in the thick of the campaign against Pancho Villa.

"This village was fourteen miles from where the main body was battling what they supposed was the bulk of Villas' forces, but old Pancho was a wild strategist; it seemed he had sneaked out of the battle and was racing toward my village with a troop of his best cavalry for a surprise thrust at Pershing's flank. Young Douglas MacArthur had warned Pershing of this threat but the General had ignored it and proceeded to tell MacArthur that the only thing in the village of any value was the Double X Saloon which had been deserted by the Mexicans during the first American advance. Besides its long bar still stocked with wine, the main furniture consisted of several billiard tables.

"But why take Swampwater out the battle, Sir?" adds MacArthur, "he did all right at the siege of Turkey Creek, didn't he?"

"He did until he got his feet wet," replied the General, "that's why I'm giving him this mission." The General was always having his little joke.

"It was with this command singing in my earth that I stood at the Double X bar to await developments. My mess sergeant and one of the corporals were shooting pool and the rest of the men were in position for Villa's sudden charge from a hill at the lower end of town.

"After Villa had cut loose with several volleys, I ran out to give my orders to my platoon, while Villa's unit was reloading.

"I shouted my command: 'Ready on the right! ready on the left! ready on the firing line! Villa is charging! FIRE!' Then I ran back into the saloon to finish my drink and note the accuracy of my artillery.

"Things went admirably well for two hours. Villa would charge, firing as he went, and while he reloaded I would go out and adjust my fire. Scores of Villa's men were killed and a few of mine went over the hill. But suddenly the crisis arrived. As Villa mustered his remaining forces for a last desperate charge, one of my squad leaders ran up to inform me that we were out of ammunition and what was the School solution?

"Hell, Sergeant," I replied, "as I remember you must fire anything handy. Go get those billiard balls and fire them."

"Yes, Sir," he said, and ran to get the billiard balls and prepared for the coming charge. Down the long sloping hill charges the forces of Pancho Villa with clouds of dust rolling behnd them.

"My men were eager to let 'em have it but I yelled "don't fire until you see the whites of their eyes!" and suddenly they must have seen them for our guns cut loose with a deafening roar and as the smoke cleared away, I saw that the victory was ours.

"Majestically, I congratulated my men, and strolled back into the saloon to pour myself another drink, extremely proud that I had finally got Pancho Villa behind the "eight ball."

"Well, that's all for now, Sergeant, but will you call the officers' club physician and make an appointment for him to massage my saluting arm."

"Yes, Sir," I replied strolling dutifully to the telephone, and at the same time being fully cognizant of the perplexing profundities of my leader's life."

Post Returns To Normal As WAAC Contingent Assumes Routine Duties

Women In Khaki Get Big Thrill From Official Reception Accorded

Main post personnel was settling back to normal again this week after having recovered from the initial shock of seeing women march around attired in G. I. khaki.

Along the streets of the post proper, in the post office, the bank, the exchange, and the soda shop could be seen the nattily attired members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps who arrived at the post Friday, 135 strong.

They are the members of the 43rd Post Headquarters company of WAACs who had come in from the huge 2nd WAAC Training Center at Daytona Beach, Fla. Before the female soldiers started their various duties at the post early this week, they had a day or so to acclimate themselves, although several drill sessions were also the order of the day.

Already, though, other members of the post personnel had begun to accept them as just another part of the daily life at one of America's busiest posts. Officers were getting accustomed to receiving snappy salutes from pretty young auxiliaries, and soldiers were saluting the WAAC officers same as they do the nurses.

MUTUAL CURIOSITY

Curiosity, however, abounded on all sides. Soldier and civilian wanted to know all about the WAACs and the WAACs in turn wanted to know all about Fort Benning. The members of the 43rd Company come from almost every corner of the nation, but they were all thrilled by the fact that they had been selected to serve at Fort Benning.

To the last auxiliary, they were most thrilled by the reception they had received when their train pulled into the fort's diepot. There the company was met by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, post commander, and several high-ranking members of his staff, as well as newsreel and still photographers and a large throng of onlookers.

Next biggest thrill for most of the WAACs was the sight of parachute jumping activities at Benning's famed Parachute School which they could watch off in the distance. Several of them also found time to wander into Gowdy Field and watch the dress rehearsal for the review which the First Canadian Parachute Battalion will stage Monday. One auxiliary thought that the jaunty march step of the Canadians was the most interesting thing she had witnessed so far.

LETTER WRITERS

In their few spare minutes after chow, most of the girls flocked to their barracks and busied themselves writing letters. Letter writing with the WAACs, just as with soldiers, is a major preoccupation, and they do plenty of it, explained pretty Jessie Mazanek from East Vandergrift, Penn. Many of the auxiliaries have either a brother or a husband in the armed services to whom they write regularly as well as to parents and girl friends back home.

The WAACs were entirely on their own Friday after having trained kitchen help from Col. Stephen B. Massey's supply division aid in the preparation of the chow for the first day. Under the direction of Mess Sergeant Helen Harar, of Chicago, Ill., the kitchen was operating quite efficiently with the WAAC K. P.'s attired in gingham house dresses in contrast to soldier denims. However, they too wore floppy fatigue hats just like the G. I. kitchen helpers.

Blonde auxiliary Alice Chemistruck from Rockville, Conn., looked hardly glamorous or military while attending to her kitchen duties. Attired in regulation white cook's uniform, her face was smudged with soot and her uniform soiled. She was the WAAC assigned to tending the fire in the stubborn G. I. cooking range. But she tackled her task with a smile and a spirit that is typical of the corps and seems to say "We'll take what's given us and like it."

NO SHORT-SHEETING

The girls really appreciated all the help the soldiers had given them on the first day of their arrival. They were particularly surprised to find that their bunks had been already made up for them, but then immediately suspected that the soldiers who had done the job might have "short-sheeted" them as part of an old army initiation trick. When they found that had not been done, they immediately listed all Benning soldiers as "true gentlemen."

Most of the WAACs retorted quickly, when asked why they joined the service, that they wanted to help the nation's war effort. They were all glad that basic training in military ways was all over, but several said they would not have exchanged their experiences at Daytona for anything in the world.

Although already trained in administrative and other specialized duties, several of the auxiliaries already have their points set on higher objectives. One girl, for instance, has ambitions to study aerial photography and hopes to attend a WAAC school for such study in the near future.

SUPPLY SARGE

Typical of the non-coms in the 43rd Company seemed to be blue-eyed Margaret Blumer who hails from far-off Ellendale, N. D. She is the supply sergeant of the company and her greatest concern at the moment is where to store clothing and equipment until proper supply room facilities are available.

Sgt. Blumer is a graduate of the University of North Dakota and has been in the WAACs just about six months. During that time she married although she had to get official okays. Her husband-to-be was an officer candidate at Fort Benning and as soon as he was awarded his gold bars as a second lieutenant, he rushed to Florida where they were married. He is now in California, and she's at Benning which causes her to bemoan the fact that the WAACs didn't arrive here a few months back.

The attractive blonde supply sergeant has been busy as a bee rushing around making arrangements for the girls to get their laundry done and a hundred and one other details. The cooperation from soldiers and officers she said has "been just perfect." Her blue eyes twinkled when she told her some of the help was even unsolicited. One supply officer even sent some flashlights when Sergeant Blumer "hadn't even asked for any."

VOLUNTEER GUIDES

Many of the auxiliaries were eying the Benning soldiers very cautiously and talking of possible dances they might attend in order to meet some of the boys formally. Some of them had already met a few volunteer guides for their tour of the post, and they found the Benning soldiers to be most helpful and very gentlemanly.

A few of the boys suggested dates later on when the girls are permitted to leave their area after retreat. And while the girls were not immune to the suggestions, they warned the lads that all WAACs must be in barracks in time for a nightly bed check at 10:45 p. m.

Meanwhile, 2nd Officer Elevyn Rothroct, the company commander, and 3rd Officers Gaines and Miller, her two assistants, busied themselves with the problems of assigning the auxiliaries to their various duties.

Blooey Blows Back to Benning With Wistful WAAC Warrior

Kicked Out Of OCS He Can't Tell Girl He Has No Company

By PVT. S. B. SUSSINA

Pfc. Pooey Blooey, formerly of the 71st Engineer Light Ponton company, having been ousted from OCS, the reason being, "For the good of the government," left Fort Benning Wednesday night.

Being without funds it was necessary for Pooey to accept transportation in what is usually referred to as a box car. Little did Blooey realize that this short ride he was about to take might change his whole career, — maybe his whole life.
his whole life.

Poor Pooey, up until now no one would have him. He couldn't do a thing in the army. He wasn't strong enough to strk out in the company and do straight duty. His I. Q. alone made a great impression on the commanding oficer—now you know why Pooey didn't get through OCS. He couldn't even pull K. P. on K. P. he would continually salute the refrigerator. He did that because he thought it was "General Electric." Pooey still thinks that the title 4-F is only given to fellows who have a FARM and a FAMILY with some high ranking military FRIENDS along with FUNDS. Even Pooey will conceive to the fact that in view of the above he will never become a four-effer.

TAKES IT EASY

After being in the army for almost two years Blooey learned to live down a lot of disappointments so when Uncle Sam let him go he took it fairly easy. So easy in fact that he fell asleep in the box car, the form of transportation that the Central of Georgia railroad had, er should we say suggested, as it rolled out of the city of Columbus going south.

You can be sure that Pooey Blooey didn't think well of the Central of Georgia railroad when he was rudely awakened a few miles this side of Albany. That is at first, but a quick inspection of surrounding area made Pooey believe that he would rather catch the north-bound train and go back to Columbus. Why??? You guessed it. There on the north bound track, not 20 feet away was a trooptrain full of WAACs. There were 136 of them. 133 Auxiliaries and 3 officers, and they were all bound for Fort Benning.

BOARDS TRAIN

Due to previous experience, getting on the train without a ticket wasn't hard at all for Pooey. Once inside the train he made it his business to pick out a member of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps with some chevrons on her arm. Pooey wasn't the type that would even strike up a conversation with a private. Since the WAACs were sidetracked at Albany until close to four in the morning they were glad and willing to talk to anyone, even Pooey Blooey. In due time he found that he was among the 43rd WAAC Post Headuarters company from Daytona Beach, Fla.

Close to four o'clock Friday morning the WAACs with Pooey aboard left their "bivouac" area to continue the trip to Fort Benning. Since Blooey had spent a great deal of time here on the post he seemed to be a great help to the WAAC company. The conversation up until now was of an official nature but since Pooey always did go beyond the call of duty he thought it was up to him to find out and get to know the names of all the WAACs aboard. Rather than to introduce all the WAACs to Blooey the first leader gave him a roster with all the girls names, ages, and martial status on it. Looking through the list Pooey found the name of a girl he used to date back in Hicksville.

JUANITA

Juanita was twenty-two when she finished her 4-week basic training at Daytona Beach. She had blond hair and blue eyes. Pooey was the only fellow she knew in over a thousand miles. She was everything that Pooey wanted too. Immediately Blooey went back to the next car to see her. They just got talking of old times when they pulled into Columbus. Pooey looked at his watch and after a few minutes of computing found that it was exactly 9:30 and the train had been 37 minutes late.

Pooey couldn't come out to the Post with his girl but he did promise to call her real soon. But Pooey hasn't been able to keep the promise due to the fact that he is a man without a company and what would he do if Juanita wanted to see his company.

Pooey couldn't tell his girl that the army didn't want him. He couldn't tell her that he was kicked out of OCS. He couldn't tell the only girl that ever paid any attention to him that the engineers wouldn't have him. Help the poor fellow out. He isn't much of a soldier but he has got to live and he has to tell Juanita that he belongs to some company. If you have an opening in your company think of Pooey Blooey—Remember he still has that list of WAACs names that the first leader gave him. Pooey Blooey can be reached at the Chaplains office, Telephone number, Mercy—Oh—Oh—Oh.

Lt. Charles Taylor Appointed Captain

1st Lieutenant Charles B. Taylor has been promoted to captain, it was announced today. Captain Taylor came into the army in April, 1941 as a private taking his basic training at Camp Croft. In November, 1941, he was selected for officer candidate school and graduated in Feb., 1942 at which time he was assigned to the Academic Regiment. In June 1942, he was promoted to 1st lieutenant and appointed special services officer. Captain Taylor is a native of New Richmond, Indiana and attended Indiana university. He is also war bond officer for the Academic Regiment.

SALT LAKE CITY (CNS) — Archie Bixby told police a traveling bag had been stolen from his hotel room. A day later he found a pawn ticket in his room. It produced the stolen bag.

Pelcy Sarron, ex-featherweight champ who lost his title to Henry Armstrong, is in the Army and stationed at Camp Shelby, Miss.

The Ft. Sheridan (Ill.) basketball team ended a 24 consecutive victory streak of Camp Grant (Ill.) cagers by handing the Warriors a 52-39 licking last week.

Leaders Upset Profs In Conference; Face 802nd Artillery Five Tonight

Powerful quintets of the 2nd Student Training, 7th Observation Squadron, 55th Engineers, and 10th Armored Supply Battalion were nearing loop titles this week as the greatest league basketball campaign in Benning sports history approaches its final week.

With only two games remaining on their schedules, the Leaders of the 2nd STR paced the strong Fort Benning Conference with five straight wins and were the only unbeaten entry. The same situation applied to both the 7th Observers in the Main Post League and the Mighty 55th in the Sand Hill League.

Supply Battalion rated first in the Cusseta League on the basis of four wins against no losses and also had but two games remaining to be played. All of the apparent winners are newcomers to the title scene with the exception of the 55th Engineers who also grabbed the first-half gonfalon in the Sand Hill circuit.

With play-offs a distinct possibility in three of the four loops, the Fort Benning Athletic Association announced this morning that the series between first and second half winners would probably start the end of the next week.

After a season's champ has been decided in each loop, the Sand Hill circuit winner will oppose the Cusseta champ for 10th Armored honors and the right to battle the conference flagholder for the post championship. The Main Post League champ will stage a post-season series for the small unit title with the winner in the Harmony Church League which is still going full-blast.

CONFERENCE

The greatest eye-catcher of the week was the conference battle on Sunday which saw the crack Leaders of the 2nd STR bump the Academic Profs by a 31-26 tally at the sports arena. The Profs won the first half crown and were strong favorites to repeat until the Leaders started their great upward surge.

Officer Candidates Jackson and Ricks have been the big factor in the Leader victory march and will send the team into its remaining two games as strong favorites over the 802nd Field Artillery tonight at the sports arena and the Parachute School on Sunday at the post gym.

In the event of a Leader slip, either the Profs or Lawson Field could step into the picture since each has been stopped only once. The second place entries oppose one another tomorrow night, however, at the post gym to determine which will continue to stay on the heels of the 2nd STR. The biggest battle in the conference seems to be that of four quints fighting desperately to step out of a tie for the cellar spot.

MAIN POST LEAGUE

Continuing their flashy brand of play, the 7th Observation Squadron disposed of two more rivals in the Main Post League during the week and stepped into first place on Monday by tripping the 24th General Hospital, the only other unbeaten entry until that time.

In their remaining two games, the 7th must face Finance and 863rd Ordnance, two teams which are in the middle of the standings. The 24th Medicos and 99th Q. M. are close on the heels of the Observers and a slip by the Lawson Field tossers might force a play-off between them and one of the second place clubs for the honors.

SAND HILL LEAGUE

The Mighty 55th Engineers appeared to be the most consistent club on the post as they continued their victory stride in the Sand Hill circuit with two more wins. Only the 420th Field Artillery remains as a challenger and they are a game and a half behind in the standings.

The 55th won the first half title in a play-off tilt with the 420th but the husky bridge-builders hope to corral the present honors without ever breaking stride. The Engineers oppose 419th F. A. tomorrow night and close out with the 11th Armored Tankers on Monday evening.

CUSSETA LEAGUE

Real surprise of the 10th Armored races his been the sudden rise of Supply Battalion in the Cusseta circuit. Finishing with a .500 average in the first half, the Supply lads have played good ball all the way to displace the 90th Recons as king-pins in the loop. The Recons have slipped to a tie for third but are priming themselves for the play-off series for the loop crown.

Academic Swordsmen To Stage Bouts At Gym Friday Night

The Academic Regiment's fencing team makes its first public appearance tomorrow night when the swordsmen, led by Sgt. Nino Maniaci, will stage several exhibition matches at the post gym, in between the basketball game.

The exhibition will be a warm-up prior to the fencing match with Georgia Tech which will be held Saturday, March 20 at the gym.

Sgt. Maniaci, winner of the all-Eastern epee championship in New York last month, has welded together a capable team of swords men and promises an exciting demonstration tomorrow.

THREE EVENTS

Exhibition matches will be held in all three events, foils, epee (duelling swords) and sabre. Among the fencers who will participate are Maniaci, Cpl. Bertram Bristol, Post Finance, and Pvt. Joseph Urell, 55th Engineers, 10th Armored.

Maniaci is also giving instruction twice a week to about 40 embryo fencers. Those interested in learning the art of fencing can report to Sgt. Maniaci at the gym handball courts on Monday or Friday evenings.

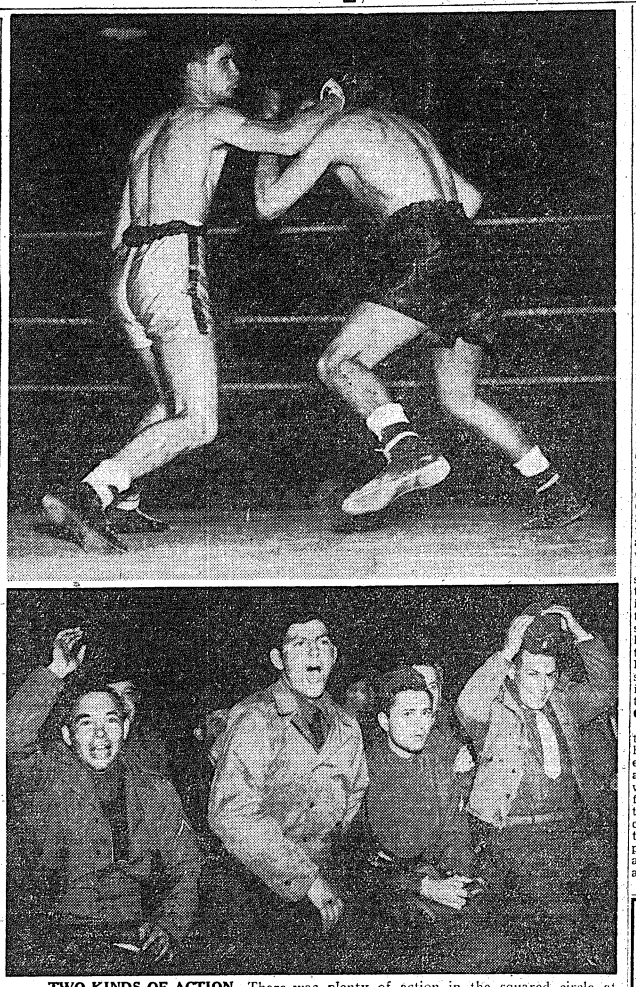
All-East Grid Leader Now In 1st STR Group

Capt. Pringel Was Michigan State Triple-Threat Back

Last summer G. I's. throughout the nation acclaimed the exploits of "their team" as the Army all-star Eastern team played havoc with the outstanding professional football teams of the country.

Captain and outstanding star of this aggregation of truly great players was a former All-American ace now assigned to the 3rd Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, as a student in the battalion commander and staff officers course. He is Captain John Pingel who won gridiron glory as a triple-threat back at Michigan State College where he occupies a position of esteem comparable to that of Tom Harmon at neighboring University of Michigan. Finishing his college career a year before Harmon blazed onto the gridirons of the Midwest, Pingel never had opportunity to match prowess with "Terrible Tommy."

ORANGE BOWLER



During his brilliant career Pingel participated in an Orange Bowl game at Miami, the East-West all star game in San Francisco and the all-star game in Chicago. He led his team to three highly prized victories over the big Wolverines of Ann Arbor and compiled the best punting average in the nation for two consecutive years. In 1938, his senior year, Pingel gained nation wide recognition and made several All-American teams. The next fall found him again in action, this time with the Detroit Lions, in the national professional league. Pingel performed brilliantly in the pro ranks until an unfortunate injury in mid-season forced him to sidelines and led him to his retirement from the game at the end of the season.

WEST POINTER

Captain Pingel turned next to the more prosaic task of sales promotion with the Dodge Co. of Detroit, a position he held until called to active duty January 27, 1941. He was well fitted for the Army life into which he now entered, having had the plebe year at West Point and holding a reserve commission attained after 4 years in the Michigan State R. O. T. C. unit. He served for 14 months as assistant professor of military science and tactics with the R. O. T. C. unit for Detroit schools, then he transferred to the 702nd M. P. Battalion, the unit to which he is still attached. His promotion to captain came on June 13, 1942, just three years after his graduation from college.

Captain Pingel states that his selections to the Army's all star team last year and the experiences with this strictly G. I. outfit afforded him the biggest thrill of his notable athletic career. Although inactive on the gridiron for 3 years, he soon regained his old time form this past summer and established himself as sparkplug of the team, being selected as team captain. The squad worked at the Yale University under the tutelage of Colonel Bob Neyland, former grid mentor at Tennessee University.

Sergeant Jackie Wilson, California welterweight who's doing his soldiering at Mitchel Fld., N. Y., lost to Ray Robinson in ten rounds at Madison Square Garden recently before 16,336 fans. Robinson, 5-to-13 favorite, gained a close decision. He had Jackie on the canvas in the fourth for a count of nine for the only knockdown of the bout.

TWO KINDS OF ACTION—There was plenty of action in the squared circle at the post gym recently when the crack 29th infantry riugmen pounded out a triumph over the 300 th infantry sluggers. At top you'll see the lightweight clash with Johnny Stutes of the Two-Nine slapping a right hook at Joe Franco of the 300th. Stutes took the decision over Franco who was post champ in his weight at Camp Robinson, Ark., before coming to Benning. But all the action wasn't in the ring as you can see by the bottom-shot of ringside spectators snapped during the height of some of the furious fighting. (Signal Lab Photos by Stock.)

Ex-Light Heavyweight Champion Is 3rd Student Regiment O. C.

Torchy Smith Also Won Inter-Service Belt, All Weights

"If you think Officer Candidate School is tough, you ought to put in some time in the grunt and groan business," says Candidate John J. Gelfond, of the 12th Company, Third Student Training Regiment.

Candidate Gelfond, who grunted under the name (probably remembered by many) of "Gentleman Torchy Smith" began wrestling in 1929 under the tutelage of none other than Strangler Ed Lewis, and during the ensuing years accumulated many of the top-notch honors of that profession, culminating in his winning the world's light heavyweight champion from Hugh Nichols at the Olympic Stadium in Hollywood on the night of October 10, 1936.

"Torchy' has also many service matches to his credit, and in his field went out for even bigger game than his light heavyweight classification indicates, for in Honolulu in 1937 he won the inter-service championship, all weights, from the then title-holder, Lynn Gustafson.

STUDENT OF JUDO

In view of the recent emphasis on judo and man-to-man defensive and offensive tactics that the present war demands, it is interesting to note that, during the course of his wrestling years, Candidate Gelfond made a detailed and exhaustive study of these means of combat under some of the world's best masters. In Honolulu, Professor Okasaki passed on many of the tricks of the trade to "Torchy," and in Japan itself, he continued working under the famed Takahashi, Kata Judo.

The mere mention of the localities in which the above honors

This Coach Really Could Boast a 'Murderer's Row'

When baseball fans around the Third Student Training Regiment's 22nd Company talk of the hitters on their favorite team, and refer to them as a real murderer's row, Officer Candidate Raymond W. Hanke smiles to himself.

For, at one time, Candidate Hanke coached a baseball team which numbered five convicted murderers on its line-up.

"And," he observes, "murderers were our best patients. They always seemed to be the higher type of criminals."

For, prior to entering the Army, Hanke did occupational therapy at the Central State Hospital for the Insane near Madison, Wisconsin. His work included the teaching of wood-working to inmates, and coaching them in baseball, basketball and other sports.

"Athletics, in particular, did a great deal to aid the patients in recovering," Hanke explains. "It gave them something to talk about and took their minds off their own troubles."

"But, at the same time, it gave the coach plenty to worry about. For example, one of our best hitters on the baseball team was extremely erratic. You never could tell what he would do. Once he smashed out a solid hit, rounded first on the way to second, and suddenly turned around and started back towards home plate."

Despite such peculiarities among his pupils, Hanke found his work both interesting and unusual. "You see," he adds, "it was highly gratifying to watch the improvement of the patients under the treatment.

"One of the patients, who had never played basketball before entering the institution, did so well at it that following his discharge he played considerable professional basketball."

Don Budge, national amateur tennis champ for three years before turning pro in 1939, entered the Army last week at San Francisco. "I'm ready to go anywhere they order me," Budge said. "I'm in pretty good shape."

Ace Soccer Player Trains With 3rd STR

Burness' Calves, Developed In Game, Envy of Regiment

A reasonably sized body struggling under the burden of a perpetual and top-heavy grin may be seen any day in the places the 17th Company, 3rd STR is working.

It is a remarkable sight, since the grin does not wear off and the shoulders do not sag; but the legs, shaped, sized and textured like a pot-bellied stove, are more remarkable still, for they support not only the body and the grin, but whatever weight of equipment operations may see fit to hang upon the body beneath the grin.

The plump and mighty legs, famous in the Company, belong to Candidate Henry E. Burness, who formed them playing soccer, amateur and professional in three countries. He began this strenuous and highly mobile game in Scotland, where he was born some thirty years ago, and resumed it after transplanting to Canada when he was seventeen.

He had relatives in Toronto, and won a reputation throughout Ontario and the neighboring provinces for his proficiency as a center forward and the agile instincts of his stocky and growing legs. He played with the Toronto Scotish and helped make them Provincial Champions; he represented both the city and the province on teams selected to decide the Dominion Championship.

COMES TO U. S.

A brother induced him to cross the border to Boston in 1928, and he has been in the United States ever since. He went to work for a Boston oil company and stayed with them until he began to work for Uncle Sam in 1942. He continued soccer as a matter of course, and his legs continued tremendous. He joined the imposing Boston-Americans, first as an amateur, when he was known as their white-headed boy; and

10th A. D. Trio Shoots L. Machinegun Possible

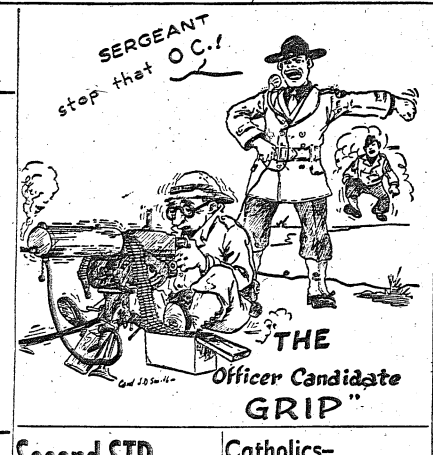
Privates Wallace L. Campbell and Raymond W. Meadows of the 3rd Armored Regiment, 10th Armored Division, have returned from furloughs earned by some phenomenal shooting. Both men shot perfect scores with the Browning light machine gun their first time on the range.

When Meadows and Campbell scored 90's on their preliminary runs on a gun which neither man had fired before, 1st Sgt. Hague gave both men the go-ahead sign for their try for qualification. The results, in addition to being amazing, made Sgt. Hague a very happy man. In less time than it takes to tell, both men rattled out identical 124's—a perfect score unmatched elsewhere in the regiment and duplicated only rarely anywhere else in the 10th Armored Division.

Major General Paul W. Newgarden, commanding general of the Tiger Division and a strong advocate of "good and straight shooting," requested that the rookie experts be sent to him for congratulations. Both Privates Campbell and Meadows declined General Newgarden's invitation—a privilege normally reserved for lieutenant generals and higher.

MEASLES CAUSE

While getting ready to meet the commanding general, Pvt. Campbell, who boasts an AGCT score of 147, the regiment's highest, complained that he felt "rather unusual." As they must to most men—even those with perfect machine gun scores and AGCT ratings of 147—the measles came to Pvt. Campbell. Since Meadows lived in the same barracks, neither man was able to receive General Newgarden's congratulations personally.



Born in Creekmore, Kentucky, an old and established squirrel shooting community, Pvt. Meadows had handled guns before he entered the Army. Pvt. Campbell, a cosmopolite who was born in Atlanta, educated in New York and Chicago, and who worked in Washington, D. C., prior to his induction, had never touched a gun. Their scores, stated Colonel Thomas M. Brinkley, commanding officer of the Third Armored regiment, were "a testimonial to good instruction and individual effort, and bring credit on yourselves, your company and the regiment."

O. C. Barney's Frankenstein Now Plagues Him

O. C. Robert Barney of the first platoon, 15th Company, 1st STR knows what it is to have the tables turned on him.

As production analyst for the International Business Machines Corporation in his home town, Endicott, N. Y. Barney helped make the test scoring machines used by The Infantry School for grading the graded tests.

He says he feels like a Doctor Frankenstein and that many times he wishes he hadn't made the thing. Barney came to the Infantry School from Camp Wheeler.

art of leadership can be taught. The experience of the United Nations in this war for freedom testifies that it must be taught—especially to OC's and basics.

No less a personage than General Eisenhower recently wrote back to the War department confirming the need for the very thing that Colonel Roosma has begun. Other documents from battle areas testify eloquently that the teaching of leadership is vital to the winning of the war.

Roosma's course, a compound of military experience, study, good sense and personality, is studied with discipline and morale problems (like the one about the bottle of cognac) which bring flashing fire upon the question of leadership. It rolls the spirit of the offensive for which American troops are famed, unto a new target—a defilade and difficult target which must be knocked out.

LEADERSHIP DEFINED

"Good leadership is the art of handling men in such a manner as to command their respect and loyalty and so as to inspire them to accomplish your objective willingly, intelligently and skillfully," Colonel Roosma declared, pointing out that the objective of such leadership is to "build up a high spirit of discipline, morale, individual initiative, loyalty and teamwork for the purpose of winning ultimate success in battle."

"Leadership," he continued, "may be acquired through the study of psychology and through the experience of others. To be a great leader you must like people. You must observe and study human behavior. Your personality, character and initiative must influence your men firmly but fairly. You must gain professional knowledge through practical experience, the Field Manuals, ("the best military books ever published"), professional books, magazines, movies and finally the experiences of battlefield observers and others.

FOUR-FOLD MISSION

The four-fold Mission of the course is:

1. To help officers and potential officers to mould their own system in handling men.

2. To advise as to methods and means to acquire the qualities of leadership.

3. To relay messages on leadership from combat leaders and observers.

4. To pass on experiences, acquired under peace and war conditions, that will help eliminate mistakes.

STUDENT REACTION

The reaction of officer candidates has been highly favorable. Chester McCracken declared "It is making us think deeply about fundamental problems of leadership in a personal way. It shows us the difference between leading and driving."

OC Carlo Marrese said "The conference open the field to what leadership really means."

"We are getting insight into some of the vital elements of leadership which we can't find in field manuals," Robert McDade stated.

Ernest Morgan, insisted "It is making the boys think in terms of handling situations under conditions such as they will actually meet them and the solution are practical."

Candidate Roy Mikkelsen, former National Ski Champion said: "We have a lot to learn more about ourselves as leaders so we can do the job that has to be done."

Berry Anderson said he felt that leadership training had been neglected because it was considered ambiguous, but "this course is doing a lot to show us that men can be trained in leadership as well as in other things."

Colonel Roosma's Third Battalion students are becoming known throughout the Post for their "YEA-HA" pep yell which means "Be alive, word hard, think ahead, never quit, be loyal!" They find that YEA - HA has a definite place in leadership. Combined with the academic and tactical training, leadership training is giving them a new weapon which only the Infantry School can produce.

were won should give some idea of Candidate Gelfond's travels, but they by no means include his entire itinerary while in the practice of his profession. The former champ has wrestled in practically every country in the world, including Australia, China, India, Italy, France, Germany, England, and so many others that he at last earned from Nat Fleischer of Ring Magazine the accolade of being "the most traveled wrestler in the world."

Now "Torchy" is wrestling with the problems of The Infantry School with which, if he is successful, he will be commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army of the United States about May.

The debt moratorium for servicemen also cover members of the WAACs. They receive all the benefits provided by the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act.

Second STR Men Assigned

Several reassignments in the 2nd Student Training Regiment were announced last week. Major Gerald P. Shine, commanding officer of the 21st Company, went to Regimental Headquarters as executive officer, while Capt. Edward C. Elliott has taken command of the 21st Company.

Major Hartwell T. Bynum, Regimental investigating officer, becomes commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion. Major Lester E. Winslow, who has been active as Regimental executive officer, was appointed investigating officer.

Major John J. Hazel and Capt. Robert L. Rowan, recent advanced course graduates, become executive officers of the 4th and 2nd Battalions, respectively.

2nd Lt. Marshall P. Smith has been assigned to the Regimental staff as an assistant personnel adjutant.

Two Firms Are Now Off Limits

Two establishments were declared "off limits" to all troops of Fort Benning in an order issued by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post.

They are Uncle Joe's place and the Blue Top Inn, both located at Twelfth aveneu and Hamilton road.

"Hereafter, no member of this command will never this establishment except on official business and with written authority therefor," read the official order applying to both places.

later became a professional, widely known by his opponents as the red-headed raider.

He played with the Boston Americans for years, married Elsie Tripp of Cambridge, and was one of the soccer coaches at Harvard and officiated at games there.

The time came, and Harry Burness volunteered for service with the American Army. He was sent to Fort McClellan, where his legs and Scotch-Canadian-Boston lingo amazed his comrades in arms. His ability as a soldier, more important, impressed his officers; and December 7, Harry Burness commenced the extraordinary ordeal by which The Infantry School makes men into officers.

Jungle Jim and the obstacle course have taken the place of soccer for Candidate Burness; but the impish grin remains and the muscular legs remain muscular. The Army is the only profession Candidate Burness can think of that is capable of maintaining the athletic magnificence of his Scotch - Canadian - New England calves.

If the serviceman does not make application for allowance under the Servicemen's Dependent's Allowance Act of 1942, his dependents may make it, or persons acting in behalf of the dependents.

in Puerto Rico. The Reverend Fathers James McCann, Ambrose McAdams, James Cotter, Francis Dauenhauer, Alphonse Schumacher and Francis Chapman are missionaries of many years experience.

Post chaplains will meet the Missionary Band at the station in Columbus at 1:50 this afternoon. The band then will repair to the USO building for lunch as the guests of C. A. Bergman, USO director. In addition to the Catholic chaplains at the Post, Father Dan McCarthy, Vicar General of the Savannah-Atlanta Diocese and pastor of the Holy Family Church in Columbus, and Father James Salway, pastor of St. Patricks Parish in Phenix City, will attend the luncheon.

TO MEET CO'S

Friday morning the missionaries will meet the commanding officers of the organizations and familiarize themselves with the areas where the missions will be conducted. A meeting of the band with Post chaplains to discuss last-minute details is scheduled for Saturday.

The priests will live as soldiers during their stay, living in barracks, eating in mess halls and maintaining the rigorous schedule of the Post. They will adapt themselves to the training program of the soldiers so that there will be no conflict with training.

The idea of the post-wide mission was that of Rev. William H. Hunt, chaplain at the Post Catholic chapel and World War Veteran.

The schedule and place of services as announced by the various Army chaplains is listed below.

MAIN POST AREA

Chaplain Hunt, 1st lieutenant, Fourth Service command, has invited the soldiers to make the mission in Post Catholic Chapel No. 4, located at Sigerfoos road and Vibbert avenue. Mass in the mornings will be at 6:30 o'clock, and the Mission Exercises in the evening will be at 7 and 8 o'clock. Rev. Joseph Turner will speak at all services.

At Zuckerman and First Division roads, in classroom No. 14, building No. 2673, the Rev. John Prosser will conduct the mission for all units near the 24th General hospital, including students of the First Student Training regiment. 7 and 8:30 o'clock in the morning and at 8:45 in the evenings. The late evening hour is chosen for the benefit of the students who have study periods in the earlier part of the evening. Chaplain Francis C. Waterstrat, 24th General Hospital, will assist the missionary.

Chaplain Walter J. Felix, 1st. lieutenant of the 29th Infantry, announces his men will follow the exercises of the mission at the Post Catholic Chapel No. 4 under Father Joseph Turner at 6 o'clock in the mornings and at 7 and 8 o'clock in the evenings.

HARMONY CHURCH AREA

Chaplain John M. McMahon, 2nd Student Training regiment, states that Rev. Francis Murray will conduct the exercises in Chapel No. 3, located at Long and Collins streets in the rear of Building B-2 at 6 and 6:30 o'clock each morning and at 9 o'clock each night.

In Chapel No. 5, located on 8th Division road and Cusseta road, Rev. Thomas McCauley will conduct services at 6 and 6:45 o'clock in the morning and at 9 o'clock in the evening. Chaplain Joseph B. Jakubiec, Third Student Training regiment, will assist.

The 124th Infantry, according to Chaplain William H. Hunt, will have the services of Rev. Francis Chapman at Chapel No. 1. The hours for the Mission Exercises are 6:30 o'clock in the mornings and 7 o'clock in the evenings.

SAND HILL AREA

Major John Feckter, Hq., 10th Armored Division, Chaplain, declares services will be held by Rev. James McCann in Chapel No. 5, located on Arrowhead road near Division headquarters. The hour will be at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Chaplain Joseph Krocheski, captain, Artillery Command, announce Rev. Ambrose McAdams will conduct the mission in Chapel No. 2, located near 13th and Bourg streets. The time of the services is 7 o'clock in the evenings.

Rev. James Cotter will deliver the Mission Sermons at services held at 7 o'clock in the evening in Chapel No. 4, located across from Theatre No. 7, according to Chaplain Patrick Trainor, 1st. lieutenant, Division Trains, 10th Armored Division.

Chaplain Francis C. Zimmerer, 1st lieutenant, 90th Reconnaissance battalion, 10th Armored division, states Mission Exercises will be conducted in Chapel No. 3, located at 10th street and Scott avenue be Reverend Francis Dauenhauer at 7 o'clock in the evenings.

Commemorative Book To Be Published

A year ago Friday, the Third Student Training Regiment, which today maintains 30 officer candidate companies, came into being without a headquarters and staffed with an extremely small group of officers headed by the present regimental commander, Col. R. H. Lord.

A commemorative booklet on the anniversary is being prepared at the regiment's headquarters and ought to be ready for publication within a few weeks. The booklet will contain photographs, art and reading material which will serve to freshen the recollections of the early days of the regiment lingering in the minds of its "veterans."

Colonel Lord, former executive officer of the First Student Training Regiment, took over command of the new regiment on the day of its inception, Mar. 12, 1942. Associated with him during the early phase of the organization were Capt. Harry R. Bright, now regimental adjutant; Capt. Ralph W. Bohannon, present regimental personnel adjutant; and Maj. Manlio T. Delfini, who now commands the Second Battalion of the regiment.

508th Parachute regiment, announces Rev. Joseph Sofka will conduct the mission in the Parachute School Chapel located at Lawson Field at 6:30 o'clock in the morning and at 8 o'clock in the evenings.

In Chapel No. 2, "the Chapel on the Hill," Lawson Field Chaplain Luke W. Crawford, 54th Air Base Squadron, states the same Rev. Joseph Sofka will give the exercises at 6:30 o'clock in the morning and at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Rev. William Walsh will speak in Chapel No. 3, located behind Lawson field, formerly known as the 117th Infantry Chapel, for the members of the 300th Infantry. The time of the services is at 6:30 o'clock in the morning and at 7 o'clock in the evenings.

Across the river in Alabama, Chaplain John Verret, 1st lieutenant, 507th Parachute regiment, Inf., states Rev. Alphonse Schumacher will conduct services in their new chapel located near the gymnasium and the mess hall at 6:30 o'clock in the morning and at 7 o'clock in the evenings.

Waived Age Exemption To Be Classified In I-A

O. C. Served Poland In First War; Is Linguist

Officer Candidates have backgrounds of varying hues, but page the vermillions and indigoes, brace the easels, for here comes one in a corps — Mieczslav Wlodzimierz Friedel (Mye-chi-swav Vlo-zi-myesh Friedel).

Born in 1897 in a section of Poland, babelled with the load of three nationalities, each of which further burdened itself with the pastime of war. He came to the United States at the age of fourteen, leaving behind oppression and persecution that vied lustily with anything Herr Schickelgruber has or ever shall dish out to the unfortunates. "The only difference there is," and we quote Candidate Friedel, "that one was called 'Junkerism' and 'Prussianism;' the other, 'Nazism!' "

1918 saw him in a Polish unit, enlisted in the United States and transferred to Canada and subsequently overseas to France, where he attended L'Ecole de Comptabilite Militaire, a military school, and later a General Staff subordinate academy in Carcow, Poland, where he found things a little worse for the wear, but all nationalities still aspiring for independence.

Having resigned with a rank of sgt.- major, and in line with demobilization arrangements, Mieczyslaw Wlodzimiers shipped back to his adopted land, the good old U. S., aboard the transport, Pocahontas, in 1920, was honorably discharged and proceeded to tangle with the doubtful prospects of earning a living.

VARIETY SPICE OF LIFE

That is where things began to pop: From farmer, to glass blower, to actor, to playwright, to newsreporter, to printer, to publisher, the continuity of his background is scarcely equalled, winding up with the job of editor-in-chief of a tabloid whose circulation numbered in the higher brackets among the foreign press sheets.

Schooling was apparently his avocation—and in every sense of the word—for he speaks everything from Polish to Japanese and linquistically includes a goodly part of each nation is between in his list. He modestly precludes any claims to brilliancy, but somehow the array of phonestics smacks too much of the burning of the midnight oil to suggest that he learned all of this by chance—especially since he can read and write almost all of them to a magnificent degree of proficiency.

AIRS FOREIGN DRAMA

Idly, between study and business, he oftentimes contributed to the sponsorship, direction, and production of foreign drama over the air—a rather husky profession in itself, not to say the least. The organization of the Printpress Corporation and later occupation of secretary and general manager of the establishment can be credited to him by the records.

Notwithstanding, Candidate Friedel, having actually tasted of the Schikelgruberian (Nazism to you) rudiments when he was a child, has been long since naturalized. A recent tussle with the Adjutant General's Department at Washington failed, because of the length of channels to bring him any dividends in the form of active service in Uncle Sam's forces in a capacity warranting the donning of the regalia of war, so Friedel tried it the hard way: He requested, in spite of his years, immediate reclassification to 1A, was granted the request, worked his way through basic training like the American he has chosen to be, and now mingles with the cream at Benning.

A deserved reward it is, Candidate Mieczslaw Wlodximierz Friedel, of 342 Condley Drive, Toledo, Ohio.

Second STR Unit Organizes Catholic Club

Catholic soldiers in Headquarters Company of the Second Student Training Regiment have formed a Catholic Club which held its first meeting last week. It is under the guidance of Chaplain John M. McMahon, Catholic Chaplain. There are some 90 to 100 Catholic men in the company interested in the club. Various discussion meetings are planned at frequent intervals.

An Army Wife Shops In Columbus

By EVE

The weather in Georgia is as changeable as a woman. One day we're picking daffodils and violets and choosing cool summer frocks. The next day we're bundled up in woolens and fur coats. There's an old saying about the month of March. If it comes in like a lion it will go out like a lamb. Those who've lived in this part of the country for long know when warm weather really comes it's here to stay for months and months. Let's not be fooled by a few cold days into thinking spring and summer are far away.

Girl Scout Week starts tomorrow, March 12, and continues until March 18. One of our proud successes at Fort Benning is the Girl Scout activities. They're so enthusiastic and happy under the constructive leadership they have, we can well include them in our war time achievements. KIRVEN'S are proud of their Girl Scout Center, which is the headquarters for all official uniforms and full equipment of the Girl Scout. Besides all the essentials they carry a line of gift items that are especially desired. Girl Scouts adore them for birthday and special gifts. There are book ends, wallets, coin cases, make-up kits, handkerchiefs, pen and pencil sets, writing paper, birthday and address books, flash lights, official knives and whistles. Any of them would be a lovely gift that would prove your pride in them and their work. Kirven's has arranged a special program for the Girl Scouts on their Kitty Kay Broadcast on March 13 at 9:30 A. M. Central War Time over WRBL. Another kindly gesture to our young girls is the "Tricks for Teens," which will be given to them for the asking at the Young Columbus Shop. It's a small brooklet crammed full of points on good grooming, make up and costume tricks. It even tells how to make clever costume jewelry. Remind your youngdaughter to ask for one of these booklets the next time she's in town.

If you respond to gay color combinations you'll not be able to resist the lovely new print and butcher linen ensembles just received in KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. One is a black crepe with bright yellow roses. The yellow butcher linen jacket has applique of the material of the dress on the collar and pockets. Another dress of crepe is in a small print of green, white and red. The red jacket is appliqued with a gay tulip. A breath of Mexico is evidenced in another print jersey, gay with hats, pottery and gourds. The two toned yellow and brown butcher linen jacket is trimmed with applique of the figures of the print. Another lovely in hot pink has a dress covered with tiny service men with their dates on their arm. The matching jacket closes with a plastic clip of a soldier figure. In tune with our times, this dress. The designs and detail of these dresses are so beautiful they're special date dresses for many occasions. Did you know that Kayser-Lilienthal, Inc., have a special dress department for sizes 38 to 44? They are proof that larger women can be as beautifully dressed as the smaller women. The navy and black sheers with frosty white lingerie touches at the cuff and throat are especially beautiful. Cool chiffons, subdued prints, meshes and jerseys all designed with distinction and finished with fine dressmaker detail.

How many more seasons will we have to see those frightful handkerchiefs tied under the chin? Not even our famous Lillian Russell would have been beautiful in something we used to associate with peasants behind the plow. Few women remotely resemble the lovely Lillian and consequently need only the plow to complete the peasant picture with their gaudy handkerchiefs. Equally prevalent on the streets of Columbus are artificial flowers and all manner of bows and what-nots in the hair. Few realize it, but the fashion may have been copied from Japanese women. They never wear hats. Their elaborate coiffures are ornamented with jewelry and trinkets. This is a preamble to advising you to look at the lovely hats at ROBERTA WELLS, of GODWIN, WELLS AND POPE, on Broadway. The new spring felt casuals by Weyman, Leighton and Gage come in a variety of beautiful colors that are sure to match on contrast any spring outfit you have in mind. Our more tailored spring things would be smart with the new homburg or padre style of hats that are especially designed for wear with our suits. Very feminine and new this season are the hand crochet straws and milan lace hats. There are several smart sailors in the flattering toast and light coffee shades. Beautiful hats for lovely ladies.

— — V — —

One of the less desirable aspects of spring is the task of house cleaning. This year it presents a real problem with the widespread lack of household help. More than ever before those who must do their own work look for time savers for household chores. I found something that 's a real discovery. H. ROTHSCHILD, INC., at 1229-31 Broadway has the Magic Foam solution that has proven to be as good as its name, magic. A small bit of the solution is poured into a saucer and worked up into billowing foam with a sponge. It's then ready to clean upholstery, silk lamp shades, stubborn spots on the rug and all manner of articles tht are color fast. the cleansing foam dries quickly and leaves the article free from spots and griminess. Powderene Rug Cleaner is another household find for brightening and cleaning your precious rugs. Regular cleaning with this fine product will eliminate expensive professional cleaning. H. Rothschild, Inc., also have the famous Johnson and Armstrong wax, of which we're all familiar and regular users. While you're in this store look at their lovely lamps. One stunning lamp has a base of a crystal horse mounted on a handsome brass base. A tailored white silk shade completes this handsome lamp with the Chinese art influence. Another lamp has a base of gunmetal and silver with a tailored shade of white silk trimmed with restrained maroon folks of silk. Each one of these lamps are handsome enough for the loveliest home.

MILLER - TAYLOR SHOE STORE has some sensational shoe news this week. They are announcing the revolutionary shoe so constructed as to eliminate the necessity of wearing hose. Heretofore there have been many objections to the feel of bare feet in ordinary shoes. This new type of shoe is lined with a neutral beige toned faille ribbed material, soft in texture and easy on the feet. The feet will not stick, slip or slide, for the sensation of this new shoe lining is similar to that of actually wearing stockings. The larger cities have made much of this new shoe idea, calling it one of the brightest ideas of our time and giving impetus to the patriotic bare legged trend of today. A great many different styles and types of shoes are going to be shown with this new lining. At the present time Miller-Taylor have one pair of shoes that they'll be glad to let you see. Do step in and look at it, for its quite possible you'll want to save our precious ration coupon for a pair of these shoes for the coming summer months. Besides the obvious advantages of this new lining is the very practical precedence that it can be cleaned. War time or no American ingenuity will give us new and wonderful things for our daily living.

Just as soon as these sharp, windy days are over with and they can't last much longer, many women will be looking forward toward the golf course. The PATRICIA GOWN SHOP at Fort Benning and the Ralston Hotel has a very smart golf dress, the Sportsemble, in lovely colored cottons. The action sleeve, simplicity of design makes this dress a pet for the women who takes her golf seriously. Another new arrival is a handsome tailored challi print robe. They're the trim type so suitable for travel, for they are light and packable. There are two color choices one a beautiful blending of greens, the other tones of grey. Another eye catcher is the adorable play suit of calico like print. They come in the high colors with tiny sprigged prints and are so beautifully cut and finished they are certain to be a flattering hot weather garment. The high school miss would like the butcher linen skirts that come in bright colors. They're gathered to a tight waist and gay with a banding of peasant embroidery. A crisp white blouse with a skirt like this would make an attractive outfit for the summer months ahead.

Temporary homes are the lot of most army people these days. Whether these homes are attractive is entirely up to the ingenuity and abilities of the wife as a shrewd shopper. Columbus is filled with inexpensive articles for a war time home. J. J. NEWBERRY COMPANY, well known for the dollar value on quality merchandise has an assortment of scatter rugs that could do much to anal'ng a bare floor attractive. There are rag rugs in beautiful color combination to carry out the principal color scheme of the bright curtains. Besides the oblong shape there's an attractive round rag rug that could be used in many places to an advantage. If you prefer, there are small rugs of the axminister type in soft color tones, well worth the moderate price tag they carry. A small dingy kitchen could be transformed with the linoleum rugs this store has. The colors are so clean and fresh and they're real time savers of cleaning hours if they're placed near the sink and stove. While you're in this store look at the attractive new shell, plastic and wooden jewelry. An inexpensive way to add originality to the simplest dress.

Radio Broadcast Starts A 'Beeyoutiful' Romance

A love story that might have been concoted in the imagination of a Hollywood scenario writer actually happened to Candidate Paul C. Donovan of the 1st Company, 2nd Student Training Regiment. The story began when he first breathed a song into the radio air.

Against competition tougher than a GI steak, the smiling, blue-eyed Irish thrush had captured top honors in the eliminations contest held at Camp Edwards, Mass., to select a representative to appear on Tommy Dorsey's popular "Soldier of the Week" program last June 25.

Paul hurriedly packed his barracks bag and highballed it down to Gotham for the program, to be aired over a nationwide hookup. He gingerly stepped up to the microphone and poured out the cadenzas (being endowed by nature with a splendid pair of pipes) to vindicate thoroughly the judgment of his buddies back at Camp Edwards besides snagging off a mittful of Morgenthau lettuce, mostly in War Bonds.

FAN MAIL POURS IN

On returning to camp, Donovan found that he had incurred the wrath of the company mail orderly who cursed and groaned alternately each time he deposited bundles of fan mail on Donovan's bunk. Letters poured in to Donovan from throughout the country as a result of the broadcast. Most of the mail came from feminine admirers.

Paul gratefully acknowledged each with a short note of appreciation. Several insisted on maintaining regular correspondence but, by process of elimination, Paul arrived at the irreducible minimum of one—and she turned out to be a dark-haired colleen from Cleveland, Ohio.

ROMANCE BUDS

Now Paul is a fine brother of an Irish lad himself and the match had all the earmarks of a natural. Letters, then photographs, were exchanged fast and furiously as the budding romance was nurtured along. Then the tone of the notes became more and more endearing until last Christmas when, armed with a ring, Paul spent his holiday furlough in the Ohio metropolis and popped the $64 question to Miss Alice Dwyer of that city. Of course she would, she said.

And now, by George, it's all arranged for June 19 approximately one year since the all important broadcast. But first, Paul is sweating April 7 when he is slated to come out of the shavetail factory.

The song he sang? It runs something like this:

"Johnny Doughboy found a Rose . . ."

Earl Brown Is Warrant Officer

Receiving an appointment to warrant officer's grade last week was former T-5 Earl W. Brown of the 29th Infantry. Mr. Brown, who was a section leader there in a rifle company, had also been assigned to the regimental maintenance shop.

Taking his warrant officer's examination last November, he received his appointment exactly two years after his induction into the service. Mr. Brown has been assigned to motor maintenance work since his appointment and has been transferred to another post.

Prior to his entering the army he was employed for a period of nine years as a motor mechanic in a section of New Jersey near his home at Pittsville. He has been with the 29th Infantry during the whole length of his service up until his appointment to warrant officer.

MUSIC AND MIRTH, respectively, will be furnished in the all-Negro show, "Shuffle Along," by the Chanticleers, a quartet whose members play straight character parts in the show and sing, and Chuck and Chuckles, famous comedy dancers.

'Shuffle Along' to Play Post 5 Days Next Week

"Shuffle Along," Broadway's first all-colored musical comedy, will "shuffle" into Ft. Benning Tuesday, March 16, and will play through Saturday, March 20. This 1943 streamlined production of a great musical show will be presented by USO Camp Shows. Times of performances will be announced later.

"Shuffle Along" will play at the Main theater Tuesday, March 16, at 6:45 p. m. and 8:45 p. m. and Wednesday, March 17, at 6:45 p. m. The 8:45 p. m. show Wednesday at the Main Theater will be for colored troops only.

Othe play dates of the show are: Thursday, March 18, at 6:45 p. m. and 8:45 p. m. at Theater No. 4 in the Sand Hill area; Friday, 19, at 6:45 p. m. and 8:45 p. m. in Theater No. 11 in the Harmony church area, and Saturday, March 20, at 6:45 p. m. at 8:45 p. m. in Theater No. 4 in the Harmony Church area.

The show was written, staged, produced and acted in by Noble Sissle, Eubie Blake, Flournoy Miller and the late Aubrey Lyles some 20 years ago. It ran in New York for two years before going on the road, and the original cast boasted such names as Paul Robeson, Josephine Baker, Paul Johnson and a score of other now famous actors.

OLD FAVORITES

Song hits to come out of the production were "I'm Just Wild About Harry," "Shuffle Along" and "Love Will Find a Way."

Sissle, Miller and Blake have modernized the new production with Addison Carey, dance director, who played the part of a juvenile in the original. Several new songs in addition to the original hits have been written into the show.

Miller and Blake are in this new "Shuffle Along," playing their original parts. Blake is in the pit with his nine-piece band, and Miller plays Steve Jenkins. Sissle is now a member of USO-Camp Shows board, representing Negro talent.

The new, strictly big-time cast of "Shuffle Along" also includes: Johnny Lee, comedian who was teamed up with Step Fetchit for years; Avis Andrews, singing star of many Broadway musicals; the Chanticleers, noted quartette; Moore and Larry, internationally known dance team; Chuck and Chuckles; Cora Green, torch singer; Ralph Brown, eccentric dancer; Max Boyd, male lead; and a line of copper colored "Careyettes," dancing girls trained by Addison Carey.

Gorin Thrills Fort. Soldiers

Artist Shows Keen Sense Of Humor

The soldier audience guests of the Three Arts League at Igor Gorin's concert Monday night at the USO club heard music that was stirring, timeful, modern and old. Gorin's concert was planned to please a discriminating audience but at the same time it was conceived for those who love music but lack a trained musical background.

Especially appealing was the group by American composers, including "Within My Dreams" by Igor Gorin which was exceptionally well received.

His keen sense of humor and his dynamic personality were brought into full play by his rendition of Albosmy to Jack-jacy, a Polish Folksong Arrangement and Burlak (The Drunkard) done without music with the exception of an introduction and closing. His comic antics made this an outstanding hit.

"She Never Told Her Love" and None But The Lonely Heart" were sung with much feeling as was Eortunio by Andre Messager.

GRACIOUS ARTIST

Igor Gorin will be long remembered in Columbus and by the Fort Benning personnel not only for the rich, resonant baritone voice that he possesses but also for his complete lack of "temperment" during several most embarrassing disturbances. His pleasing personality and graciousness in responding to encores endeared him to his audience and make his concert one of the outstanding event of the musical season.

Robert MacDonald accompanist for Mr. Gorin, is a musician of outstanding merit. His piano group was one of the most pleasing Columbus has heard in some time and of special merit was "Arabesque." "Caprice d'Alceste" his opening number was played with the ease and grace of a master.

Mr. Gorin was pleased with his soldier audience and expressed pleasure at being able to sing for them.

Midway Veterans Take TIS Course

Two unsung heroes of the Midway victory have entered the 2nd Student Training Regiment as officer candidates. They are George Whitmeyer and S. N Prickett of the 26th Company.

Stationed on the island of Kawaii at the time of the attack, this pair and the remainder of their platoon were rushed into aircraft assistance. Planes damaged or depleted of their ammunition would land on Kawaii, receive aid, then shove off for battle again.

"The planes would come in pretty badly banged up," Whitmeyer described it. "Lots of them had big holes in their wings, some of their guns were blown to bits, and sometimes you'd wonder how they could fly at all.

"We'd patch up their holes, mount new guns into positions load 'em up with bombs and bullets, then send them on their way again."

For their valuable and efficient efforts, Candidates Whitmeyer and Prickett were officially given recognition by the United States for rear guard action.

"It was tough, but it was fun," they said. "The only better thing we can think of is to get a first hand crack at those Japs."

Torpedo was named after a fish with an electric shock which numbs its victims.

With Civilians

MYRTLE JOINES

The Ace Club of the 53rd Sub-Depot at Lawson Field held its regular business and social meeting combined with the new board of governors acting as hosts to the group Friday at the home of Louise Bailey. This club is composed of the civilian personnel of the entire Lawson Field area and combines social activities with worth-while war projects, having participated in the scrap drive, the rubber drive and all war bonds activities.

Grover Inglett of the Supply Division is president, Anne McInish, vice president; Babs Ford, secretary and treasurer. The board of governors includes besides the above named officers Frank Molinari, James Cleveland, Nell Hawie, Louise Bailey, Peggy Martin, Herbert Everidge, Genevieve Millhouse and Cola O'Neill.

From September 1941 until March 1943 is a long time to go without leave but that is the record of Clara Zahrback of the Motor Transport Division who leaves Friday for New York and Boston. Just a little flying trip to shake off that tired feeling.

Dorothy J. Given of the Knox County, Maine Motor Corps, who drives a tractor at a port of embarkation was a visitor in the post recently.

At a luncheon at the Officers' Club Mrs. Given was an interesting guest recounting her experiences and acquaintance with Mrs. Walter S. Fulton, chairman of the Fort Benning, chapter of the American Red Cross. She recalls her school days with Madame Chiang-kai-Shek whom she first knew at Wellesley when Mayling was only nine years old. Her reminiseces draw a sharp contract between the little pajama clad Chinese girl with the present world famous Madame Chiang-kai-Shek.

She has kept in touch with Madame Chiang-kai-Shek all through the years with her work for Chinese Relief and carries many personal letters from Mayling.

Mrs. Given has the distinction of being one of the very few women who is known for her ability to drive "any type" of government vehicle.

She came south on official business and to visit friends in Fort Benning and Atlanta.

COMING AND GOINGS: Margaret Coan of the Purchasing and Contracting Branch, MC, and Dorothy Streatman of the Property Branch spent the weekend in Atlanta with Margaret's mother Frances Alford and Johsphine Haggard, post headquarters, made a flying trip to Atlanta to shop and Helen Smothers of the Engineers Division, Sub-Depot, Lawson Field and her son, Tommy are going up to Atlanta this weekend to see Ethel Barrymore in "The Corn Is Green." Shirley York and Winona Andrews of the QMC are going to Atlanta also this weekend. Shirley has to check up on that brother of hers and G. M. A. Helen Martin of Lawson Field went to Jersey City with her husband to visit his family and to Westville, N. J. for a look-see at her mother.

The Fiscal Section of the Infantry School is mighty happy over having Mrs. Marie (Edward) Lemon back with them again. Congratulations are in order for the fine boy Mr. and Mrs. Edward are the proud parents of.

Mrs. Lucille (Charles) Kirkpatrick is back from a few days' visit to LaGrange. She had such a nice visit with former college mates and relatives. You would never know she had been in the hospital the trip did her that much good.

Marijane Price has set something of a record in her travels of the past three months. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, New York to the state of Washington, through flood, and Blizzard as well as four (4) army camps just to be with her husband, Lt. Price who is back at Benning at taking another special course at the Infantry School. The Automotive Section is happy to welcome her home again.

Iva Colquitte and Captain Paul G. Scheible will be married this Sunday at the First Presbyterian church in Columbus. They both are at Lawson Field. Happy landings always to the two of them.

Another bride of this Sunday is Mary A. Whitesell, and Lt. Wm. L. Rogers. She is from the Automotive Section of the Motor Transport division.

We would like to extend a welcoming hand to Mrs. Lena Mary (Paul) Johnson assistant hostess at The Main Post Hostess Club. A trained nurse by profession and training, Mrs. Johnson is a happy acquisition to the post.

Goodbye to Mary Burgess who left yesterday for Hoffman, N. C. to be with her paratrooper husband. The Automotive group will miss her.

The Officers R. & R. Club on Cusseta Road is by far the most popular place in Columbus for commissioned officers and their guests. Ask anyone on the reservation who has been there.

Lord Approves Hymnal Request By Chaplain

Lieut. Col. J. D. Rosenberger, Jr., adjutant post headquarters, blinked twice as he noted a request before him.

In true, formal Army style, a written request came from the Third Student Training Regiment for a number of haymnals for a chapel. What made Colonel Rosenberger blink was the endorsement on the request for the hymnals. It was signed "Lord," who is Colonel Robert H. Lord, commanding officer of the regiment.

455th C. A. Men Warrant Officers

Two enlisted men of the 455th Coast Artillery Battalion have been promoted to warrant officers according to an announcement from that headquarters.

They are Technician Fifth Walter F. Kornman, and Sergeant Luther Carlton. The former is reconnaissance specialist for the battalion and latter is ammunition technician.

Kornman is a native of Raleigh, N. C., and Carlton comes from Rochester, Pa.

O. C. Eaves Boasts Novel Civilian Career

Was Cowpuncher, Miner, Author And Navajo Expert

Cowpuncher, rodeo rider, prospector, miner, author, expert on the life of the Navajo Indian, scholar, soldier is the amazing background of "Happy" Eaves of O. C. S.

Royce I. Eaves of the First Platoon, Fifteenth Company, First Student Training Regiment, has written many stories of other people. His own experiences would form the framework for many a work of fiction. "Happy" as his friends know him lives in Aneth, Utah, gets his mail in Towaoc, Colo., and buys his groceries in Farmington, N. M.

Born on a cattle ranch twenty-eight years ago, Happy Eaves grew up in the saddle and early learned to manage the unruly horses on the ranch. He became an expert horseman and took part in many rodeos as a bulldogger. One year he spent prospecting for gold in Northern New Mexico. Another couple years were spent mining copper for the Anaconda Copper company in Globe, Ariz.

KNOWS NAVAJOS

Becoming friendly with the Navajo Indians, he learned not only their customs and traits but their language as well. Before entering the Army a few weeks ago, Eaves had written several stories based on this Southwestern tribe.

Eaves was older than most young men, when he entered New Mexico State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, in fact twenty-four years old. He became active in all college activities and served as business manager of the college weekly, "The Round Up." During the entire four years he was a member of the F. O. T. C. and held every grade and rank in it before graduating last December. With all his other activities Eaves still had time to lead his class, scholastically, and to be elected to the honorary society, Alpha Zeta.

Eaves loves the infantry, and both his tactical officer Lieutenant Henry Barnes and his company commander, Captain Carl Hawthorne, Jr., are expecting a brilliant Army career for him.

Benefit Bridge Interest High

Tickets For Nursery School Fund Sell Well

By KATHERINE HAMMARGREN

Advance sales of tickets for the benefit bridge to be given Tuesday, March 16, for the Fort Benning Nursery school indicate that army wives are keenly aware of the necessity of such a school on the post. Tickets are selling so rapidly that more may have to be issued, with many of the buyers expressing the opinion that even though they may be unable to be present they feel they are donating their money to a worthy cause.

The benefit bridge, which will be held in the main lounge of the Officers' Club at 2 p. m., has as its object a reserve fund to enable the reduction of tuition fees, an increase in enrollment, and a furthering of the usefulness of the school. Those selling tickets are Mrs. Joseph I. Lambert, chairman of the ticket committee, phone 3349; Mrs. George Millener, representing the Infantry School, phone 2515; Mrs. Russell J. Hammargren, Post Headquarters, 2423; Mrs. William E. Eckles, Tenth Armored, 2904; Mrs. Harvey T. Morgan, paratroops, 2645; Mrs. Cecil G. Stillinger, medicos, 2511.

Tables will be non-progressive, so guests may play whatever suits their fancy. For those who wish to buy only one ticket, partners will be found to make up a table. There will be a tea at 4:30 p. m., during which drawings for the door prize will be made. Those unable to attend the bridge are invited to come for the tea.

'Yank' Requests Yanks To Report Address Changes

Lots of servicemen who subscribe to YANK, The Army Weekly, don't seem to have the facts straight on what they should do to keep getting their copies when they ship out, YANK advises the BAYONET.

The thing to remember is that YANK, as the official publication of—and by—the enlisted men of the United States Army will follow you whether you're shipped to New Jersey or New Caledonia. In fact, we bet that one of the first things you'll get in the mail at your new post will be your copy of YANK.

But nobody's going to know where to send it unless you tell them when you move. The easiest way to do that is by using a regular change-of-address blank printed in every issue. All you've got to do when you hit your new station—or before you move out, if you happen to know your new address—is to fill out this blank carefully and mail it in. The address is YANK, The Army Weekly, 205 E. 42nd Street, New York City. It's printed right on the blank. Be sure to include your former address as well as your new military address.

After you've done that you can forget about the whole thing—you'll be getting your copies. And remember, you'll be getting them along with American servicemen all over the world. Wherever you find Yanks you'll find them reading YANK. And wherever you'll find Yanks fighting, you'll find a YANK enlisted-man correspondent—He's digging up for you the G. I. slant on the fighting news.

In case you don't have a copy with a change-of-address blank handy—just drop YANK a line without the blank. That address again: YANK, The Army Weekly, 205 E. 42nd Street, New York City.

Provisionals Enjoy Pay-Day Party In Columbus

Members of the Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment of the Provisional Truck Regiment gave a pay day party last Thursday in the Assembly Hall of the colored Army Navy YMCA - USO in Columbus.

Suggested by Mr. Sgt. James Leith, Regimental Sgt. Major, and planned by Sgts. Walter Bennett, Theodis Donald, and Lieut. Henry A. Talbert, Special Sevice Officer, this dance was the first affair given by organizations of the regiment.

A formal affair, approximately 50 couples were present and danced to music furnished by the orchestra of the Post Quartermaster Detachment. Decorations were planned by Corporal Robert Ryals and Private First Class Francis Riggely who worked along with members of the Army Wives Club in planning a patriotic setting.

Another feature of the affair was the fine spirit of cooperation evidenced by personnel of the United Service Organizations. Held in the YMCA building, the menu was planned by members of the USO-YMCA and the refreshment bar set-up by them was filled with cleverly prepared delicacies.

So enjoyable was the affair that members of the Headquarters group are looking ahead to future pay days with the hope that their recent "evening of fun" may be soon duplicated.

2nd STR Soldier Served In Five Service Branches

F. D. Mitchell of the 20th Company, 2nd Student Training regiment, has been about as much of the United States during his stay in the Army as is possible to see and still remain in the states. In the last three years he's been in forty-three of the states. The five that he hasn't been in are: Washington, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Massachusetts.

During this time Mitchell has been attached to the following branches of the Army: Infantry, Cavalry, Medics, Glider Corps and Air Corps. He has 243 hours flying time including 80 hours with the Air Corps and 20 hours with the Glider Corps. Upon completion of OCS training Mitchell plans to go to the Artillery as a Liaison pilot.

7th Observation Leads Main Post

Five Army air force officers of the 7th Observation Squadron at Lawson Field have been promoted to the rank of first lieutenants.

The officers are: Lts. H. W. Eakins, Jr., of Springfield, Ohio; F. W. Doepke of Cincinatti, Ohio; B. H. Pitkin of Brighton, Mich.; J. S. Bartlett of Asheville, N. C., and M. R. Williams of Artesean, S. Dak.

Lt. Eakins is technical and assistant supply officer, Lt. Doepke is assistant armament and chemical officer, Lt. Pitkin is assistant is assistant special service officer and assistant tech supply officer, Lt. Bartlett is assistant engineering officer, and Lt. Williams is the statistical officer, insurance and bond officer, Mess and personnel officer for the 7th Observation Squadron.

Captain Langley Gets Majority

Captain Robert P. Langley has been promoted to major, it was announced at post headquarters of Fort Benning.

Major Langley, who for some time was special services officer for the Reception Center at the Fort, now is in command of the Receiving battalion.

A native of Louisville, Miss., Major Langley was superintendent of schools at Fayetteville, Miss., before being called into active service on March 18, 1941, when he was assigned to the Reception Center.

He is a graduate of Mississippi State college and took an M. A. degree at George Peabody college, Nashville.

ATO'S TO MEET

Mempers of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity will meet March 14 at the home of Mr. T. G. Fortson, 1524 Second avenue, Columbus, at 4:15 p. m. All ATO's in the vicinity, including Fort Benning, are cordially invited.

TIS Civilians Have Excellent Bond Record

Colored Employees Contribute Share To Purchases

War Bond purchases were made by 95.1 per cent of The Infantry School's civilian employees during the 30-day period ending Feb. 15, according to Captain J. S. Coney, War Bond Officer for school civilian employees.

Captain Coney gives outstanding praise to Captain Fred Earhart, assistant property officer, and his 128 civilian workers, 118 of whom are colored janitors. Captain Earhart signed his unit up 100 per cent, and every employee on his rolls, with only two exceptions, subscribed for at least 10 per cent of his salary. The average allotment was 13.97 per cent. The 128 employees bought one third of the school's entire wa bond sales during the months, a total of $1,525.

The two civilians employed in the Visual Aids Section are credited with the largest percentage allotments, however, investigating 18.44 per cent of their monthly income.

Captain Coney reported that only civilian group of 308 persons on The Infantry School payrolls failed to make purchases. The overall average allotment was 11.93 per cent, for a total of $3,884 allotted.

Captain Coney remarked that the excellent record of the civilians was made without any need to impress upon them the advantages of purchasing the bonds, for they fully realized the opportunity afforded them.

3rd STR Men Get Promotions

Five enlisted men in the Third Student Training Regiment have been promoted to higher grades, according to Col. R. H. Lord, regimental commander.

Abram Post, battalion mess sergeant and a native of Youngstown, O., was advanced to staff sergeant. Leonard Edward Szykowny of Toledo, O., and Robert Brooks Byron of Owingsville, Ky., were promoted to corporal. Joseph S. Sobolewski of Cleveland, O., and Harold Joseph O'Neill of Toledo, O., were promoted to the grade of technician, fifth grade.

LAFF OF THE WEEK—

NEW YORK (CNS)—A Marine second looey in the South Pacific Area wrote his sister that he had been promoted to the order of the silver bar. He added that it was so hot that he never wore a blouse and only rarely did he don his shirt. She sent him a pair of silver bars neatly mounted in adhesive tape for those days when he will go shirtless.

LONDON (CNS)—The Germans began last week the distribution of gas masks to civilians in Berlin, said a Stockholm dispatch to "The Evening Standard."

Turn to BREAD for Energy!

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

Keeping fit applies to both men and women in the service. But after a hard day's training comes the welcome pause that refreshes. Ice-cold Coca-Cola quenches thirst and leaves you feeling refreshed.

ALL America values the extra service that the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps brings to the war effort. And Americans, too, set store by the simple things that help build morale.

Ice-cold Coca-Cola, for example, does a special job in refreshing folks. You know from experience that its taste is deliciously different. And Coca-Cola does more than quench thirst. It brings a delightful after-sense of refreshment that never fails to please. Choicest ingredients and 57 years of experience have helped make it the best-liked soft drink on earth.

An original creation to begin with, the taste, refreshment and quality of Coca-Cola set it apart. So make sure you get the real thing. There's no comparison.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coke. Both mean the same thing . . . "coming from a single source, and well known to the community".

Army needs come first. That's why you see plenty of Coke at Post Exchanges. In civil life, Coca-Cola being first choice sells out first, now that there's less of it in wartime.

There's good news to write home and pleasant refreshment at hand to make the note lively. The delicious taste of Coca-Cola, its quality, tells you the best is always the better buy.

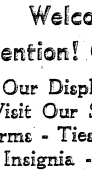
Medicos Hail 'Sulfa' Drugs

Effects On Gonorrhea Studied At Benning

Sulfathiazole given orally "appears to be an effective preventive against gonorrhea" is the conclusion reached by Col. William Denton, station surgeon at Fort Benning, and Major James Loveless, venereal control officer at the post, following a study made with 1400 colored troops.

Results of their study, published in the March issue of the "Journal of The American Medical Association," indicate "that under certain conditions and in a final form yet to be developed, sulfathiazole administration would produce a remarkable decline in gonorrhea in the army."



With the test group of soldiers, two grams of the drug were given the men whenever they left the post and additional doses of two grams were given when they returned, along with still two more grams in the morning.

PHENOMENAL

"In this company," says report, "there has occurred a phenomenal disappearance of gonorrhea and chancroid."

The rate dropped to a level of only eight per thousand men as compared with 171 per thousand in a comparable group not given the drug.

No serious reactions from the use of the drug were found, the two army officers reported, and they added that though there might be dangers involved in administering the drug on a large scale, "in view of the magnitude of the venereal problem and its effect on man days, we believe the risks are justified."

Prize Winners

The Bayonet announces the prize winners for contributions used in the past two issues. Two dollar checks are awarded for the best original writing, cartoon and poetry contributions.

Lt. Lou Clerico took the $2 prize for his cartoon, "Get Away From That 'Phone," in the February 25 Bayonet. Other winners in that issue are Pfc. S. B. Sussina of the 71st Engineer Light Ponton Company for his "Pvt. Bloopy" story and Candidate Robert J. MacIvor, 7th Co., 3rd STR, for his poem about the "Benning School for Boys."

In the March 3 issue what "Eve Says" copped a $2 check for her. Lt. Bach of the 3rd STR won the cartoon prize money for his drawing on Capt. Hank Gowdy, and Pfc. Louis Fiedelman, H. Q. Co., 1st Bn., 11th Armd. Regt., 10th Armd. Div., led the field of poetry contributors.

Winners may call at the Public Relations Office in Post Headquarters to sign for and claim their checks. Remember, if you didn't get a prize this time, keep trying. Send us bigger and better stories, cartoons and poems.

THE CRITICAL NEED for manpower in the United States resulted in a new program for drafting men between 38 to 45. New orders resulted in men in this age bracket losing their special draft classification and local boards were ordered to put no more of them into class 4-H. Further, they are to transfer men now in that classification into the regular classes, but not actually to draft them. Effect of this order is to have these men ready for induction "when, as, and if" the armed forces need them.

New regulations also were issued designed to keep agricultural workers on farms.

Millions of Americans struggled this week with income tax forms. Deadline. is Monday, March 15. Men in the services must file returns the same as civilians. They should be sent to the Collector of Internal Revenue in their home states.

The political pot begins to boil (to coin an old phrase) again, with a movement to have President Roosevelt run for a fourth term in 1944 while the Republicans are planning heavy state primary contests. Wendell Willkie, Republican nominee in 1942, appears definitely to be a candidate in several state primaries.

Sergeant Sets Possible New World BAR Record

Alabamian Scores 206 Out of 210 Points With Weapon

American backwoods have, for generations, provided some of the world's outstanding rifle sharpshooters — as Andrew Jackson taught the British at New Orleans and as Sergeant York taught the Germans in France.

Now, what is believed to be a new world's record for firing the Browning Automatic Rifle has been set at the Infantry School by soft-drawling Sgt. Grafton King, a big backwoodsman whose home is "about a wagon's grease" from Somerville, Ala.

After making a score of 206 out of a possible 210, breaking his own record, nobody at the Infantry School doubts the authenticity of Sgt. King's statement that he "can hit a Jap rite whur the galluses cross" from 400 yards.

The fact that the automatic rifle fires at the possible rates of 350 or 650 rounds a minute makes Sergeant King's score nothing short of amazing. There are few riflemen in any army who can shoot a score of 206 out of 210 even by firing single shots.

QUAIL ON WING

Closely paralleling the experience and backwoods training of Sgt. Alvin C. York, hero in the first World War, Sergeant King's shootin' eye was developed in the tall-timbered section of Northwest Alabama, where he was dropping quail on the wing before he was big enough to hoe cotton.

Although he has not yet seen combat duty, the sergeant earnestly advises his recruits, "When you get over there close to them Japs, shoot 'em through the 'P. A.' pocket." Farmers of Northwest Alabama carry Prince Albert smoking tobacco in the shirt pocket over their heart.

A few months ago, he saw a movie in which Wallace Beery, playing the part of a first sergeant, told a group of inductees, "You are now looking at a real soldier."

NO SHRINKING VIOLET

Sergeant King, not a shrinking violet, liked the idea of the self-introduction and paraphrased it for his own use. He now greets a new group of men by informing them: "You are now lookin' at one of the better sergeants in the In-

G. I. Summary Of World News

BY SGT. O. J. REMINGTON

THE NAZI WAR machine began to roll once more as spring crept into the southern part of the Russian battle lines and produced weather and ground conditions more to the liking of the German tactical methods. Kharkov definitely fell into German hands after fierce battling and German efforts are strenuous as they attempt to push back the Russians from the lands gained by the Red Armies during the winter. In the North, however, Russian attacks kept up.

Question, of course, now arises as to what power the Germans can bring to bear and how far they can go this summer on the long road back to the gates of Stalingrad—and whether they will be able to overrun the Caucasus and southern Russia completely.

Many factors enter here, of course—extent of American material aid to the Russians; pressure that the United Nations can exert to withdraw German troops from the Russian front; success of the Tunisian campaign; amount of softening that prolonged raids by RAF and American Air Force bombers may have had upon German industrial centers; actual losses sustained by the Germans during the past winter; amount of reserves both of manpower and material left in Germany; and a lot of other considerations. A probably safe prediction is that the Nazis will toss everything, including some brands of "frightfulness" into the campaign in a desperate attempt to finish off the Russians or at least take the valuable oil-bearing territory and then consolidate defense positions.

WAY DOWN UNDER. the Japanese are massing more ships, planes and armies at their bases northwest of Australia, General Douglas MacArthur warned. And this despite the continual blows being dealt against such concentrations by American and Allied air power. Japanese were reported building many landing fields and strips in various places in the area. American airmen also made heavy assaults on the Aleutian island of Kiska during the week.

Dispatches from India indicate that the Japanese are attempting to recapture the initiative in Burma, with renewed ground attacks on the British lines.

In North Africa, heavy artillery fire on both sides of the Mareth Line was maintained as ground activity slowed on both sides. Anything might happen here at any moment, however, with Rommel still fighting against time and American and British troops faced with the necessity of clearing stubborn resistance.

General Henri Giraud, in an international broadcast, offered a union to General Charles DeGaulle on the basis of a mutual pledge that the French people would be allowed to choose their own government when they are again free. Giraud is civil and military commander-in-chief in French Africa. He promised repeal of Vichy legislation and implied that he would oust the many officeholders who still lean toward Vichy—or actually toward Germany. Since the offer was very much similar to one

Scribe Gets The Needle Seeking 'Allergy Story'

Pvt. Britton Tabor, a member of the Public Relations Division at Fort Benning, was "needled" when he sought a news story from the allergy clinic at the Station Hospital recently.

Pvt. Tabor, formerly of Muscogee City, Okla., where he was a member of the news staff of the "Muscogee Phenix" walked into the clinic—but before he had a chance to proffer his questions, Major Marion T. Davidson, of the Allergy clinic, told him to "get your chart and get in line".

Since Pvt. Tabor had previously visited the clinic, Major Davidson presumed he was there for medical attention. When Pvt. Tabor reached Major Davidson and the "needle" he started to explain his mission.

But Major Davidson cautioned, "This won't hurt" and in went the needle! Then, when the needle was withdrawn, Pvt. Tabor spoke right up and asked the major for the news story he sought.

Asked why he didn't move out of the line, Pvt. Tabor explained "That's one aim of Army Public Relations—keep the civilian press well informed and keep our Army contacts happy."

News Film Has Premiere

Fort Benning Events Scheduled Semi-Monthly

A new feature opened Monday night at Theaters number one and eight when "Look, It's Fort Benning" had its premiere.

The feature is a newsreel of events at Fort Benning, presented by the Public Relations Office and the Special Service Office and filmed by the newsreel section of the 161st Signal Photographic company.

The first of the news reels showed scenes of the arrival of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, inspection of Fort Benning by 10 Argentinean newspapermen and the review by the First Canadian Parachute Battalion.

"Look, It's Fort Benning" will be filmed so that a new newsreel may be shown through the post theaters every two weeks. Schedule for the showing of the first reel for the remainder of the week is as follows:

Thursday at theaters two and three; Friday and Saturday, at theaters four and five; next Sunday and Monday, March 21 and 22, at theaters six and seven and on March 24 and 25 at theater No. 10.

Col. Carlton Is Ordnance Motor Chief

Officer Grew Up With Motorized U. S. Army Branch

Twenty-nine years ago he nearly blew up General Frederick Funston while trying to run the first Army truck in Hawaii.

Today he has just been designated as chief of the Ordance Motor Transport Branch at Fort Benning, it is announced by Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the Post.

He is Lieut. Col. Charles Carlton, who has been soldiering for 30 years and has been making trucks and automobiles run for the Army for about as long as the Army has had any motor vehicles at all.

IN OLD ARMY

Enlisting in the old Army in 1913, he found himself the next year in Hawaii where the Army had in some manner acquired an ancient Studebaker truck. Nobody knew just what to do with it—especially as there was no gasoline available in the Army stores. So the young soldier got a brilliant idea, drew some naphtha from one of the old patrol boats and put it in the truck's gas tank.

It ran all right but mighty nearly blew up the engine. And General "Freddie" Funston was in the truck at the time.

TO MEXICO

By the time the Mexican Border troubles came along, the Army had taken on some trucks and by the time of the American entry into the World War back in 1917, of course trucks were widely used. Colonel Carlton saw plenty of service in both theaters, then in 1918 was commissioned and has been in the ordnance keeping the automotive equipment rolling just about ever since.

He is a graduate of the Infantry School at Fort Benning and also of the Tank School. He was with the old 15th Tank Battalion at Fort Benning from 1925 to 1929. He was in charge of the motor transport branch at Camp Gordon before assuming his new duties at Fort Benning.

46 Soldiers Go To Tech

To Take Advanced AST Engineer Course

Forty-six Fort Benning soldiers left for Georgia Tech in Atlanta last week and began the advanced Engineer Course of the Army Specialized Training program on Monday, March 15, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post, announced today.

The group was the first contingent of Fort Benning enlisted men who passed the recent examination for participation in the specialized training program to leave for one of the colleges giving the special courses.

Of roughly 2000 soldiers who took the examination and an interview before a board of officers, about 20 per cent, or approximately 400, were successful applicants, according to Lieut. Salvador Llosa, station supervisor of the army specialized training program, and assistant classification officer.

Orders are expected shortly for additional soldiers to depart for other colleges for the courses.

200,000 EXAMINED

Col. Herman Beukema, Director of the Army Specialized Division, has revealed that more than 200,000 soldiers throughout the continental United States were examined by screening boards who picked the men for the training.

These examinations produced not only the March group, but the April contingent as well, which will be about ten times

Wife In Uniform Hubby In Civies Reverses Order

War brings about strange things in the domestic affairs of the nation!

Take the case of the Thomas T. Tatro family of Long Island City, N. Y. Hubby is overseas but he's still a civilian. Wifey is Auxiliary Albertine Tatro, a member of the 43rd Post Headquarters Company of the WAACs now stationed at Fort Benning.

Having reversed the usual order of hubby in service, wife at home, doesn't faze the Tatros according to the service member of the household. She stated recently that after her husband went overseas as an aviation mechanic with Lockheed, she felt that the place for her was in the WAACs.

Now she's serving as the cashier in the canteen at the bowling alley on the main post at Benning and relieving a soldier for more important duties. Thus, she feels the Tatros are doing their share in the war effort even though she's wearing the uniform in the family!

Shoe Repair Plant Helps Keep Soldiers Well Shod

New Service Rebuilds Officer Footwear; Black Carbon Soles Used

With the advent of shoe rationing, public concern for the care of footgear hit an all-time high—but is was an old story to the already conservation-minded Quartermaster Corps at Fort Benning where conservation of shoes has always been practiced and where it is realized that an Army really does travel on its feet.

In fact, Fort Benning boasts one of the largest and most modernly equipped shoe repair plants in this section of the country, efficiently organized on a "production line basis" and so smoothly run that it never reaches its capacity of 1,500 to 2,000 pairs of shoes per day.

The shoe repair shop is under direction of 1st Lieut. Ross W. Crossley, working under direction of Colonel Stephen B. Massey, Fort Benning's director of supply.

KEEP 'EM WALKING

Prominently displayed in the huge shop is the sign "Keep 'Em Walking." Alva F. McGreggor, Sr., civilian superintendent, explains it this way:

"A soldier whose shoes are worn or incorrectly fitted so as to cause him trouble in walking is of less use than a soldier without a gun. It is our job here to see that every one of Ft. Benning's enlisted men's shoes are kept in first-rate repair.

"But our job here is not only repairing wornout shoes. We also install special metatarsal bars and orthopedic heels in GI shoes according to prescriptions from the orthopedic section of the hospital.

"A soldier's shoes are of far greater importance to him than any other part of his clothing."

While half soling worn GI shoes and replacing run-over heels is

To All Military and Civilian Personnel:

Fort Benning has scored another record! And, in making that record, every enlisted man, officer and civilian alike, who played a part, is to be commended.

More than $31,500 has been contributed to the War Fund Drive of the American Red Cross. Although no specific quota was sought from Army posts, soldiers and civilians here have set the pace for other camps throughout the nation. And we should all be proud of our fine showing.

Since we know well the good the Red Cross does, both at our Post and wherever the armed forces serve, we gave what we could to support the organization in continuing its humanitarian deeds.

In days to come, as the Red Cross helps our comrades-in-arms we may feel that we have contributed a share to a fellow soldier's welfare and happiness.

To those of you who joined in supporting the Red Cross War Fund, I extend my heartfelt thanks for your exemplary generosity. To the score of women volunteers who aided in collecting the contributions, we all owe our gratitude, for having served a cause which knows no distinction between men, neither in race, color, nor creed.

Our record contributions to the Red Cross attest to our continued confidence in this great humanitarian organization.

RC War Fund Drive At Post Goes Over Top

Gen. Fulton Commends Personnel For Record $31,500 Contribution

Fort Benning's Red Cross War Fund soared to more than $31,500 today, as officers, enlisted men and civilians sent the post contributions far "over the top," exceeding all preliminary estimates

In heralding the mark established by thousands of contributors on the post, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post, and honorary chairman of the War Fund Drive here, observed in a commendation to personnel that "Fort Benning has scored another record! And, in making that record, every enlisted man, officer and civilian alike, who played a part, is to be commended."

The Third Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School, which is commanded by Col. R. H. Lord, contributed more than $7,000 to the drive. The Student Training Brigade, of the Infantry School, which embraces the three student training regiments, turned in a total of more than $11,000.

Soldiers of the Tenth Armored Division contributed more than $5,000 to the drive. Goals were exceeded in all corners of the camp. The 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment set a goal of $513 and turned in that sum.

NO SOLICITING

Solicition of contributions from enlisted men was forbidden by the War Department. But, since personnel on the post have learned of the work of the Red Cross here, enlisted men voluntarily contributed thousands of dollars to the drive.

"The collections at Fort Benning have exceeded all expectations," Mrs. Walter S. Fulton, wife of General Fulton and chairman of the auxiliary of the Red Cross here, pointed out. "The post responded to the Red Cross appeal much more than was expected since donations from the enlisted men could not be solicited according to army regulations. However, the major part of the $31,500 was voluntarily contributed by these men. We believe we are leading other Army camps in contributions to this worthy cause."

Mrs. Fulton and Eugene Bussey, field director of the Red Cross headquarters here, are preparing letters to be sent to all units which contributed to the drive.

Broadcast Tabs Mary Martin As Bayonet Girl

Mary Martin, singing star of stage and screen, is proud of having been chosen "Bayonet Girl."

She was introduced as having been picked "Bayonet Girl" by the soldiers of Fort Benning, when she appeared on the Andre Kostelanetz radio program recently. David Ross, master of ceremonies of the big-time radio show told of her selection.

Miss Martin was named after her picture appeared in one of the first issues of the "Bayonet," the post newspaper.

Bayonet Contest Ends On April 1

Downtown Committees Selected To Name Prize-Winning Entries

In two short weeks, the Bayonet's contest for soldier writers and artists closes!

Although the announcement of the contest was made on March 4, many contributions already have been submitted to the Post Public Relations Office to vie for $350 in War Bonds and stamps which are offered by The Bayonet for prizewinners.

All Army personnel are eligible to compete in the contest, the first of its kind at the post. Contributions will be adjudged in the following classifications: editorials, essays, or stories; human interest stories; humorous cartoons; serious cartoons; sports stories, and poems.

30 PRIZES

Thirty prizes, with several $25 War Bonds as awards, will be awarded to winners of the contest. J. W. Thomas, manager of Sears Roebuck in Columbus, has been named chairman of the judges committee to select the prize-winning contributions. Downtown judges assures that all winners will be fairly chosen.

Mr. Thomas today announced chairmen of the various sub-committees who will adjudge individual contributions. Mr. Thomas serves as chairman of the editorial committee, while C. L. Foster, of Foster Men's Wear, will head the committee to choose the best human interest story.

Leslie Lilienthal, of Kayser-Lilienthal, heads the committee on humorous cartoons, with Frank Poster, advertising manager of the J. A. Kirven Co., as chairman of the serious cartoon committee. Hugh Bentley, of Bentley Sports Store, is chairman of the committee to select prize-winning sports stories, and Victor Kiraify, of Kiralfy's, heads the poetry committee.

SPECIAL EDITION

Soldiers throughout Fort Benning are encouraged to contribute their articles, cartoons, or poetry to the Bayonet's contest. Prize-winning contributions will be printed in a special edition of the Bayonet on April 15.

In forwarding contributions to the Contest Editor, Bayonet, Public Relations Office, Post Headquarters, military personnel should submit their articles through unit public relations officers with the request that they be forwarded to Post Headquarters for the contest.

Don't forget, soldiers, if you have any stories stuffed down in your barracks, or tucked away in the back of your head, put it on pa-

Novel Function Marks Strides In Vice War

Post, Alabama Notables Meet At Officer's Club

Officials from Phenix City and Russell county joined army officers at a luncheon yesterday at the Officers club on the post in observance of the strides made in suppression of prostitution and the reduction in venereal disease during the past year.

Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, greeted the guests who included three representatives of the Alabama health department. Other army representatives included Colonel William Denton, station surgeon; Major James A. Loveless, post venereal control officer; Major W. D. Veal, provost marshal, and Capt. R. J. Hammargren, public relations officer.

OBSERVES RECORD

The luncheon observed the record established in Phenix City and Russell county during the month of February this year when not a single venereal case at Fort Benning was traced to the Alabama community.

A year ago February, conditions were so bad that steps were taken to have the May Act invoked, but a program was launched by the Phenix City and Russell county authorities with the help of army officials, with

Tuskegee Grad Promoted Twice In A Single Week

One of the many Tuskegee alumni in the armed forces, Otis D. Goodwin, class of '42, is adding to a brilliant scholastic record achievements, in his military career. With two promotions within one week, Staff Sergeant Goodwin, sergeant major of the First Battalion, Provisional Truck Regiment, has set a pace that his soldier mates might well follow.

Drafted into the army in September, 1942, Sergeant Goodwin, the son of Mrs. Henry Gray, of Eldorado, Arkansas, left a job as Civil Service Clerk at the 99th Pursuit Squadron Air Base, Tuskegee—home of the Army's famous Air School for colored flyers.

While at Tuskegee, he was a versatile student and was one of the selected few to be listed in Who's Who Among American Universities and Colleges. He was very popular at his alma mater and was a member of some of the campus' outstanding organizations.

With the Provisional Truck Regiment since its activation in December, 1942, Sergeant Goodwin holds one of the most responsible jobs in his battalion.

"Halt! Who's there?

"Halt! Who's there? This time more emphatic.

Still no response but the continued crackling of underbrush.

Then a few seconds of quiet from the guard.

Then a shot rang out in the stillness of the Alabama night. Then quiet.

The guard continued walking in his post worried about that shot and the silence after it. Off duty during the remainder of the night the guard worried about that shot.

Daylight found him on the spot of the shooting the previous night and in the bushes huddled a small kitten, who hadn't learned that when a paratrooper said "who is there," he meant business.

THE BENNING RED CROSS War Fund drive got a stimulating shot in the arm this week when the Student Training Brigade turned over more than $11,000 to workers. Cigar boxes, paper sacks, in short, all sorts of containers were pressed into use to hold the money. Above are shown Mrs. S. R. Tupper, wife of the brigade commander, and Major Fletcher Cannon, statistical officer of the brigade, displaying the contributions to Mrs. Walter S. Fulton, coordinator of the drive and chairman of the post's Red Cross Auxiliary, and Eugene Bussey, Red Cross Field Director at the post.—(Signal Lab Photo.)

Thrift Club Foursome Pools Rationing Cards

Soldiers' Wives Find Novel Way To Get Abundance, Variety

The OPA and the War Ration Board do not unduly concern Staff Sergeant Otis Goodwin, Sergeant Major of the First Battalion, Provisional Truck Regiment, and Sergeant Parnell Jones, member of one of Fort Benning's other organizations, for these two men with their wives have organized a "Thrift Club" that may be forerunner of many other similar groups.

The idea for this club came to these two resourceful soldiers when, in talking of their expenses of the previous month, they found that the two families had spent over $217 for food, shelter, entertainment, and miscellaneous items. Striking them as a rather generous sum in such critical times, they called in their wives, Mrs. Lillie Goodwin and Mrs. Willie Jones, and that night the "Thrift Club" was born.

Realizing that they lived in the same apartment building, they arrived at the logical idea of conserving labor by having the ladies alternate in meal preparing so that every other day one would be relieved of cooking.

Further value was seen in this plan when it was observed that fuel used in cooking separate meals could be saved by cooking but one meal for the four persons. And, stealing a march on the Ration System, they found that by pooling their ration cards and point books they would be able to have a greater variety of food and, consequently, a better balanced diet, all in the course of one meal. Lending a collegiate air to the set up—for both couples are graduates of colleges—discussions on timely topics of the day as well as spoken memories of college days find their way into the normal mealtime conversation and "bull sessions" are a daily occurrence.

AUDIT OF PANTRY

Operating on a budget basis that has been carefully worked out, President Goodwin and Business Manager Jones instruct Mrs. Goodwin, the secretary, and Mrs. Jones, treasurer, in the methods of procuring and accounting for these foods. Periodic checks of food cabinets and the

1st STR Unit Qualifies 70 Experts In Downpour

Student officers of the 11th Co., 1st STR, who believe what they hear, take Major H. F. Lindal, of the M-1 Rifle Committee, at his word.

The class was firing on McAndrew Range recently in a heavy downpour that lasted all morning and through the afternoon. Major Lindal in an effort to cheer up the rain-soaked marksmen, told them:

"I don't know why it is but, in weather like this, men turn in outstanding scores. They seem to be so bothered with the elements that they squeeze off triggers, get correct sight pictures and unusually high scores."

Checkup of final scores showed that the men believed him as 70 in the class of 172 qualified as experts, 53 as sharpshooters and 49 as marksmen. Not a single officer "boloed."

Lt. Elwin D. Sterling, with "possibles" on rapid fire kneeling, sitting and prone at 200 yards, was the star performer. Out of a possible 305 on a modified B course (the 500-yard prone event was cancelled because of the weather) he scored 296 points. Although he had previously qualified as expert three times with the .03 rifle, he had never fired the M-1 for record.

Other high scores were made by Lts. Billy F. Bolton, 294; Elzie F. Truby, and Edward R. Reuter, 292; Sheldon S. Baker, 289; Elzie F. Lamar and Cecil B. Highland, 287 each, and Lt. Willian J. Regner, 284.

Basic Class No. 48 is attached to the 11th Company, First Student Training Regiment, commanded by Col. Thomas R. Gibson.

O. C. Moran Writes Novel

Candidate Joseph T. Moran of the Sixth Company, Third Student Training Regiment is putting the finishing touches, in the few spare minutes at his disposal, to an as yet unnamed novel which he plans to enter in Doubleday Doran's $10,000 Service Men's Contest.

Riding with the manuscript to the publishers will be not only the best wishes but the high confident of his barracks mates, among whom Moran, a quiet chap, is extremely popular.

Like many authors, Moran, who comes from Chicago, is seldom without his note and anecdote book, five of which such volumes he already has filled since entering the Army. The Army, however, simply is not a springboard to a writing career for Moran for he already was established as a writer before his induction both in college and as a contributor to such nationally known publications as Esquire. He is enthusiastic, moreover, over the training he is receiving as an officer candidate.

Moran was graduated last September from DePaul University, Chicago, where he was editor of the newspaper and associate editor of the yearbook. He also wrote the musical comedy, "Break It Gently," produced by the University Players.

MYRTLE JOINES

Clarice Grier is celebrating 17 years in the office of the Post theater. Handling 935,004 tickets, an average of 2,562 daily for one year several years ago was the biggest year in the history of the Main theater on the post proper.

When Clarice first came to Fort Benning, the theater office and news office was combined. The Benning Herald was published on the post at that time. About a year later the two offices divided and since that time she has been in the Main theater office.

After the little original wooden shack the stucco theater which burned and now the lovely brick structure on the post with a seating capacity of 1500. Clarice is not only one of the busiest people on the post. she is certainly one of the most efficient from all sources. Columbus is her home and Jordan her alma mater.

The WAAC's have invaded the Finance Office in an unexpected way. Betty Kimbrough Glattly has joined up with them for service until—well you know when. Betty will be remembered by old Columbus residents as the "Miss Columbus" of several years ago. A great big cheer to her for carrying on in the service of her country since the death of her husband, Major James Glattly.

Hello to the Personnel Division of Fort Benning who take up permanent quarters in the new section of post headquarters and goodbye department of EWP, District Four. We didn't have time to get acquainted with Belle Taylor, Rosanne O'Kelley's sister before she moved out. Maybe she will be coming to visit us though.

Jerry Jenkins and Grace Hundt of the Finance office are certainly happy now because their husbands, Frank Jenkins has been transferred from Augusta to the Motor Tire Inspector's office at Fort Benning, and Frank Hundt is back in the Finance office.

Helen Denman has had a ten days' vacation home to visit her mother and Virginia Haggard has just returned from a visit to Washington, D. C., after a visit to her mother and father, Major and Mrs. Leo A. Veal.

We are always happy to welcome new girls to our post. This time we say "hello" to Elizabeth Edward of the Finance Office and Ruth Waite and Mary Ellen Corruthers of the Second Section of the Infantry School.

Welcome WAAC's to Headquarters. We have looked forward to your coming for a long time and now that you are here we are happy to have you. You are awfully nice. You are "on the beam." You are doing a swell job. I speak for all the girls here who come in daily contact with you. You are all we thought you would be and are swell to work with. We hope you like us and feel at home with us.

When Rosanne Claymore Jones received a phone call from her hubbie the other day, she was delighted with the news that he had a few days leave from Camp Hodo, Tex., and that he wanted her to meet him in Atlanta. She was also mystified by the promise of a pleasant surprise.

On arrival in the big city, she was greeted by Lt. Gwyneed Jones, who had graduated from officer candidate school at Camp Hood. The lieutenant was a sergeant when his wife last saw him and he had kept it a secret that he was an officer candidate. He has been assigned to a tank destroyer battalion.

DAVIS-ROUSE

Technical Sergeant Cecil W. Rouse of the 24th General Hospital and Miss Virginia Lee Davis of Lafayette, Indiana, were married on Wednesday, March 10th at the Post Chapel by the 24th's Protest Chaplain, Archie C. Carraway.

Both the bride and groom are natives of Indiana. Sgt. Rouse is a member of the 24th's Headquarters staff.

After two years of service, seven months of which were spent in overseas duty, Private Frank Cooper of the Canadian Army, much to his disgust was dismissed when his superior officers discovered his age of 16 years.

Single Company Boasts 20 Greek Letter Frats

An easy solution to the 1943 convention problem of national college fraternities can be provided by the officer candidates of the 12th Company, Third Student Training Regiment. For the present Greek letter organizations will be unable to spend thousands of dollars to send representatives to far-flung parts of the country for conclaves.

In the 12th Company there are 20 fraternity men who can find some time after the evening study period to smoke cigarets and fume over fraternity budgets. The fraternities are represented as follows: Phi Kappa Sigma, Anthony N. Faracles; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, W. Dale Griffiths and John M. Wagner; Phi Mu Alpha, Vernon G. Charleson; Omega Psi Phi, Edwin D. Murray; Sigma Phi Epsilon, William C. Pedersen; Sigma Sigma Delta, A. Louis Cohen; Sigma Pi, Ernest H. Scruggs; Alpha Kappa Delta, John W. Burress.

Acacia, Wendell T. Nickerson; Phi Mu Delta, Franklin N. Sayer; Alpha Tau Omega, Walter T. Craven; Chi Lambda Rho, Francis M. Harrison; Tau Kappa Epsilon, Robert W. Brown; Phi Alpha Delta, Taylor M. Nelion; Phi Eta Mu, Francisco Colon; Phi Alpha, Eugene H. Bloom; Phi Kappa Phi, Argus F. Smith; Phi Kappa Psi, Welkos O. Hawn, Joseph R. Aponte.

It is suggested college fraternities take advantage of the opportunities offered by Army barracks life to continue their public relations endeavors conveniently and inexpensively.

Noted Announcer Arrives At TIS For OC Course

You've heard his resonant voice many times over the air waves, but Announcer Bert Parks of Columbia and NBC fame has laid aside that role to become an officer candidate in the 29th Company, Second Student Training Regiment.

At 18 he was the nation's youngest announcer and in the past nine years has won an enviable niche in his chosen profession.

Some of the personalities whose programs he has announced include Eddie Cantor, Benny Goodman, Ilka Chase, Bob Hawk, Xavier Cugat.

Parks said that of all the radio stars he liked Xavier Cugat best. "I think he's more genial and more talented—and besides I like the rhumba."

Candidate Parks volunteered for enlistment in June, 1942, and toured in 18 cities with the Army's war show which displayed the various arms and raised some $1,500,000 for the Army's emergency relief fund.

Although he only lives 114 miles away—in Atlanta—it's the first time that Candidate Parks has been on the grounds of Fort Benning.

VICTORY GARDENS

The people of Baker Village and Benning Park homes will be able to put their gardening ability to the test. Arrangements have been made for the use of the land north of Allison avenue when the lumber has been removed. People desiring an area may stake it off and plant it. We are hoping to see many vegetables and flowers in the village this year.

The officers and their wives will dance to music of the 29th Infantry orchestra Saturday night in the auditorium. The dance will be informal and there is only a limited number of tickets to be sold. Mrs. I. J. Holton, No. 8 Barry, 4-3416, is chairman of the ticket sales.

Those interested in taking piano lessons are asked to meet Mrs. Brown in the auditorium next Wednesday, March 24, at 11 o'clock E. W. T. to make arrangements for lessons.

The ladies will meet on the athletic field next Monday afternoon March 22 to play softball. Anyone interested may play at 2:30 E. W. T.

'TEENERS'

The "Teeners" met last Friday night in the Recreation hall and plans were made for a party Friday night, March 19. About fifty boys and girls over fifteen years old will be invited by special invitations.

This newly organized club is really getting underway, and will become the social highlight for the younger generation of Baker Village.

RED CROSS

The ladies interested in sewing for the Red Cross will meet Thursday at 2:30, E. W. T., at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Davison, 3200 Benning road.

NUTRITION CLASS

The Nutrition class, which started last Friday afternoon, has as the instructor, Mrs. Frank Gaines, Home Demonstration agent. Much enthusiasm is being manifested by the large number of ladies who are taking the course.

The class attended the Garden School at the U. S. O. building Tuesday and heard professors of the University talk on subjects relative to Gardening. The class meets each Tuesday and Friday afternoons at 2 E. W. T.

TRAINING UNION

Sgt. and Mrs. P. J. Hopkins, 124B, were hosts to the Keystone Union of the First Baptist Church Training Union Tuesday night at their apartment. The social was a farewell party for the president and his wife who will leave soon.

With the discontinuance of the W. P. A. Recreation program this week, the playground leaders will no longer be available, and the Craft shop will close. Many regret to see Miss McCullogh, Mrs. Patton, Mrs. Meadows, and Mrs. Evans leave. Good work has been done and a vacancy will be left with their parting.

The Intermediate B. T. U. of the local Baptist church will enjoy a social at the church Friday evening at 7:00 E. W. T.

Chinese O. C. Hasn't Seen Mother Since Age of Six

An officer candidate at Fort Benning with a really personal hatred of the Japanese invaders of China is Gong Y. Yee, now of the 13th Company of the Third Student Training regiment, for his mother still is in China, land of the soldier's birth.

Yee was brought to the United States by his father who operates a laundry in Latrobe, Pa., while the mother was left in the family home to care for a younger son. Yee last heard from the brother in 1942 when the latter was attending a university in Hong Kong and the Japanese hordes were pouring into the city. He has not heard from his mother since 1940, however, and of course has not seen her since he came to this country when he was six years old.

He hopes to gain his lieutenant's bars and to lead American troops in clearing the Japs out of his homeland. Before he was accepted for officer training, Candidate Yee was an instructor at Camp Croft, S. C.

WAAC's On Duty In Service Club Of Tenth Armored

A detachment of the 43rd W A A C Headquarters Company has taken over a wide range of duties at the Service Club of the 10th Armored Division. Twelve WAAC's are on duty at the club daily from 10 a. m. till 10 p. m. in addition to their regular company work.

The WAAC's at the Service Club are now staffing the library, hostess house, supply room, clerical office of the theater, and a receptionist desk. They are also serving behind the steam table in the cafeteria and at the soda fountain.

TWO-NINE GLEE CLUB

The first try-outs for the 29th Regimental Glee Club were held last Tuesday in the Cannon Company day room and a rehearsal will be held March 17 at 7:30 p. m. in the same place. Previous experience is unnecessary and any member of the regiment may apply for membership.

Nurse's Sex Blocks Bars

Army Regulations Fail To Include Males

Pfc. Herbert Jones of the 80th Medical Battalion, 10th Armored Division, would be a commissioned officer in the army today if it were not for the fact that he is a man. As it is, he must wait until a 40-year-old law is revised or go through the same channels as other enlisted men to obtain a commission.

Jones, in civilian life, was a registered nurse. He attended a nursing school and studied most of the subjects that women study, with the exception of obstetrics and pediatrics, and in addition he took courses in urology and psychiatry. After graduating, he took the same state board examination that female nurses take and received the same coveted R. N. certificate.

NO SCHOOLS FOR MALES

The story of Jones' predicament today goes back to the early part of the century when the war department drew up a regulation providing for commissions for women who were registered nurses. At that time there were no schools for male nurses and, consequently, there was no need to specify that nurses of both sexes would be equally acceptable. So Jones and some 5,000 other male nurses in the country are out of luck because of this omission in the original legislation.

And—since this is a story of it's—if Jones were a civilian, he could be earning about $15 a day, which adds up to considerably more than $54 per month that a private first class receives.

Jones learned his profession in Philadelphia where he attended the Pennsylvania Hospital School of Nursing for Men, one of five such institutions in the country. He got his certificate from the state of Pennsylvania early in 1942 and immediately found a demand for his services. Believing that he would like industrial nursing, he accepted an offer from the New York Shipbuilding Corp. of Gadsden, N. J., and remained with this concern until the Selective Service board reached his name.

WIDE FIELD AHEAD

The male nurse, according to Jones, has a wide field ahead of him, especially in industrial work and in mental institutions. Most male patients actually prefer male nurses after they know of their existence, he says, and doctors also seem to have a preference for them.

Not a man to make a claim without basis, Jones has a champion in the person of an officer of his company, Capt. A. E. Breslow, who is a doctor. Capt. Breslow permits himself to be quoted as saying that he believes "male nurses are better to work with than women in 90 per cent of all cases," realizing that he is laying himself open to a barrage of opposition from the softer-voiced sex.

Whatever the merits of the case, Jones is convinced that male nurses will become familiar personalities in the field of medicine.

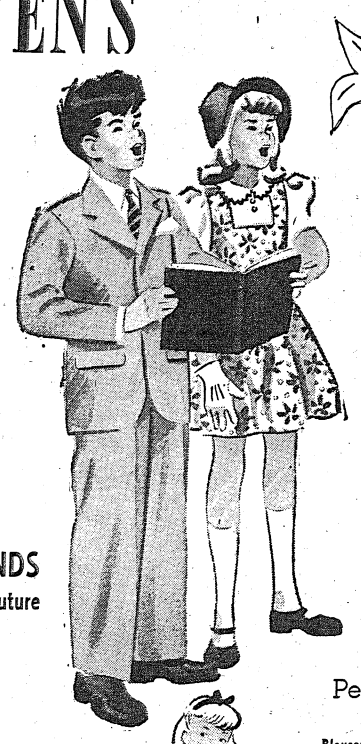
Assistant TIS PRO Named

Lt. Gray Former Carolina Publisher

Assignment of 2nd Lt. Gordon Gray, former newspaper publisher, radio executive and state senator from Winston-Salem, N. C., as assistant intelligence and public relations officer of the Infantry School, was announced this week by Major General Leven C. Allen, commandant. He will aid Major Silas K. Baker, assistant executive on the General's staff.

Lieutenant Gray is a recent graduate of the Infantry School's officer candidate course. He was inducted into service as a volunteer officer candidate on May 16, 1942, sent to Camp Wheeler, Ga., for basic infantry training, and on Nov. 20, 1942, to officer candidate school here.

The North Carolinian served two terms in the North Carolina State Senate—from 1938 to 1942—resigning his post to volunteer for military service. He was publisher of two Winston-Salem daily newspapers, the Journal and the Twin City Sentinel, and executive with WSJS radio station, and W41MM, frequency modulation station, both in Winston-Salem.



Lieutenant Gray, prior to entering the service, was county chairman of war bond sales. He formerly served on the North Carolina State Banking Commission, was trustee of the Winston-Salem Teachers college, negro state teachers institution, and was president of the Winston-Salem Community Chest.

He is a graduate of Woodberry Forest school in Virginia, received his A. B. degree at the University of North Carolina in 1930, and his LLB at Yale Law school in 1933. While at the North Carolina school, Lieutenant Gray was president of the Phi Beta Kappa, and a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. At Yale he became editor of the Yale Law Journal.

TWO-NINERS 100%

Two units of the 29th Infantry, Cannon Co. and Co. C, show 100% in war bond reservations. The Regiment, as a whole has but 5% to go to catch up with its two leading companies since its total now stands at 95%. Co. F alone has subscribed $1,814, the largest single amount.

Enlisted Men Give Generously To Red Cross

Fort Benning's Red Cross War Fund donations skyrocketed over all expectations: more than $30,000 was contributed by thousands of Fort Benning officers, enlisted men and civilian employes.

By far the majority of contributions came from enlisted men. And rightly this should be so, as the number of enlisted men far exceeds the number of officers as well as civilians on the post. But, another reason, indicative of the esprit de corps, accounts for the generosity of the noncoms and buck privates.

We all know what the Red Cross does for our comrades in arms. More than 15,000 soldiers last year benefitted from Red Cross counsel. Several hundred soldiers received financial assistance from the Fort Benning headquarters of this humanitarian organization. And, it is with these facts in mind—knowing that the Red Cross really does help us all when the need arises—that we contributed so generously to the cause.

All Fort Benning should be congratulated on their record in the Red Cross campaign. And, in turn, we should suggest a heartfelt salute to Mrs. Walter S. Fulton, who so unstintingly gives much of her time to Red Cross activities on the post and enlisted the aid of scores of women volunteers on the post during the drive. Mrs. Fulton, and the members of her committee, as well as every woman volunteer on the several Red Cross committees, served our cause well. We thank them.

Thoughtlessness Shown At Recent Concerts

In the "mail-call" column on this page we publish a letter from a reader of the BAYONET in which she reproaches soldiers at Fort Benning for flagrant breaches of "concert etiquette". During the course of a recent recital by one of the world's greatest musicians soldiers by the scores rudely stamped out of the hall. It is reported that "about a hundred" departed at the end of the first number.

Unfortunately, this is not the first time that such behavior has occurred at this post. Noted artists have appeared in various areas of the reservation during recent months, giving gratuitously of their time and talent and affording opportunities for our soldiers to hear some of the world's greatest music rendered by internationally famed artists. As our correspondent points out, tickets to a similar concert under different conditions would cost a pretty penny even for standing room only. Meanwhile, quoting our correspondent again, hundreds who would gladly pay if necessary are turned away at the door.

Our point in short is this. Sufficient advance notice is given in the press and radio of forthcoming events of USO Camp Shows to enable the soldiers to determine whether they are really going to be interested in the performance. If the soldier doesn't appreciate fine music, if he automatically tunes his radio on another program, jive for example, when classical music is rendered over the air, then certainly he will have little interest in attending a concert in which artists make personal appearances. The USO shows are varied enough to provide entertainment for all tastes.

If you don't appreciate good music, then stay in the barracks and give those who do a chance to enjoy the program. They and the performing artist are certainly entitled to this consideration.

We are quite sure that these growing discourtesies are due to thoughtlessness rather than to a dearth of manners. Artists visiting our post are our guests and are entitled to be treated as such. Military courtesy is the pride of the Army. Treat your guests as you would your commanding officer or the guests in your homes.

Pressure On Prostitution Proves Its Worth

Organized prostitution is a filthy business and the filthy business and the venereal diseases it spreads is a filthier business. With other rackets practically abolished or on a non-paying basis, we know that the criminal underworld must do a flourishing brothel business, in order to make the road to easy money the easiest road for the criminal's livelihood.

If the prostitutes kept the money they earned, anywhere from ten to forty or more customers on a busy night, so some claim, you could see how to a mental defective, it might appear to be a profitable business. These women only receive a very small part of these proceeds. After the money is deducted for room, board, clothes, drinks, and what not—of course, the "Madame" gets her share, the "big shot" who runs the outfit gets his, and the many higher-ups who are supposed to see that the laws aren't strictly enforced, that these houses are protected, and so on, get theirs—it is easy to understand how little is left for the prostitute herself.

I can't see how any self-respecting community can tolerate such a disgusting business. In some of these towns or cities, where the "pressure is applied" to close these disorderly houses of filth, some people invariably bring out these arguments:

a. Why not have some doctor examine these prostitutes at regular intervals;

b. If you clean out this district, you will scatter disease;

c. When these houses are closed, your daughters and wives will not be safe. All of these arguments are incorrect. If a doctor examined these women even daily, it still wouldn't prevent the spread of venereal diseases. If these women scattered or kept moving, they cannot acquire an established business, and consequently, this will bring about a decrease in venereal diseases. Segregated and commercialized prostitution only means organized crime. Past experiences have shown that decent women and girls are safer where prostitution doesn't exist. After these disorderly houses are closed by an honest administration, there will be less outside prostitution, not more. Of course, it must be kept in mind that there is still the problem of rehabilitation and treatment. As for cleaning out this menace, it can be done easily by legal machinery. Even this is not necessary if the right person says that it must stop, and then enforces his decision.

Imagine how many more fighting men we would have in first class condition, instead of in the hospital; how many dollars our government would save; and how many of our insane asylums would be closed if the right man in every town or city in the United States would say, "No more prostitution in my town, or my city."

A specific example of what the right man can do if he is really sincere is shown by the record of Phenix City, Alabama. In February, 1942, sixty-percent of all our cases of venereal diseases were contracted in that city. After one year of "putting on the pressure", through the cooperation of the officials and police department of that city, there were no venereal disease cases in February, 1943. This is an enviable record of which the officials of that city should be very proud, proving that prostitution can be stamped out, if the right people want it so.

These few men, by undertaking the very important task of cleaning out prostitution, could assist our war effort to a great degree, also protect innocent women and girls who will be the future mothers of this country, from falling into the clutches of the many organized crime syndicates.

We, of the Armed Forces, need all of our fighting men to protect our democratic nation against the common foe, and for the coming invasion of the European continent. Venereal disease hinders our war effort by crippling our soldiers. We wish to plead to the patriotic instinct of these leaders: Drive ou the prostitutes, and organized crime, and WE will win this war in the shortest possible time.

Regimental Surgeon,

Keeping 'Em Firing with More Bonds.

On this last fifteenth day of March.
It sure did take some extra starch,
To declare everything we earned
In our Income Tax return.
Remember, then, when we say, "Taxes
Will defeat the Jap or Axis,"
Our real Victory Tax may be
This tax upon our honesty.

"We're a great people," said a country philosopher, "but we don't always work at it."

What can happen tomorrow depends on how we are living today.

The business of the future will make men its chief business.

We once had our barn raisings and corn husking bees. Today it's block parties which may make America a nation of neighbors again.

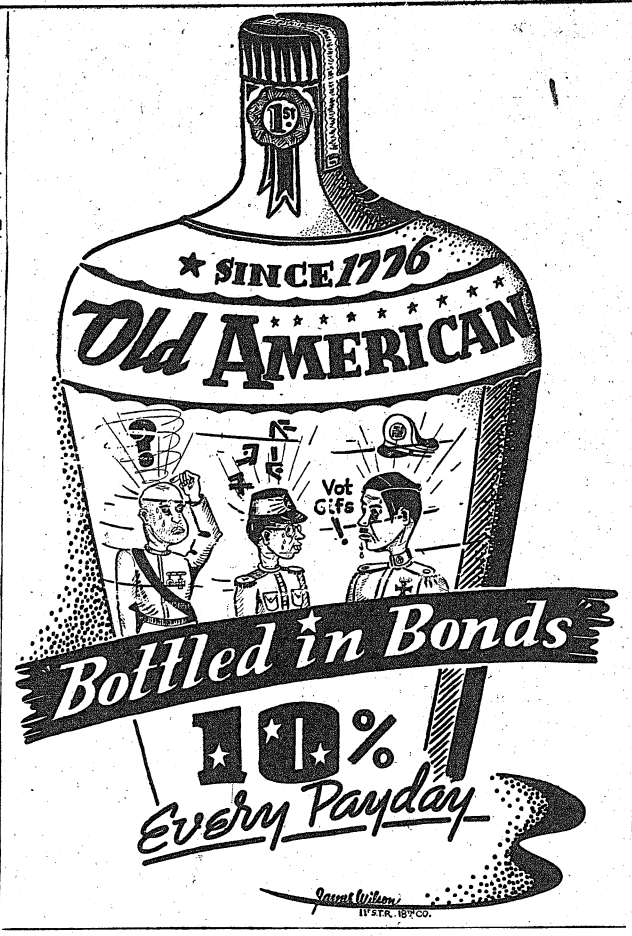
Peace won't follow victory in war.
It will only follow victory in living.

Winning the peace means making a peace that won't fall to pieces.

The final war to end war will be fought out in our daily lives—a day-in and day-out battle to end selfishness.

It's natural to be selfish as the devil but not necessary. You can always tell the devil to go to hell—that's where he lives, anyway.

Here's a dare!
If you'd care
You could spare
More to share!



To knock off work, these days, is to knock out America. Those who take time out for themselves are putting time in for the enemy.
Absentee shirkers
Are enemy workers.
People should be paid in marks for marking time on the job.

"War is caused by selfishness, hate and fear," said a naval commander. "Let's eliminate these things ourselves and create, here on shipboard, the things we're fighting for."

"Those who travel in pursuit of better neighbors," said David Grayson, "never find them."

Dreams aren't likely to come true for those who oversleep.

War is the same wherever it is—between nations, between races or between the family at breakfast. We can't banish war from the world till we banish it from the breakfast table, any more than we can banish mumps from the world while we have it at home.

USO Presents—

A 'CHAMPIONSHIP' HOOP GAME, OPEN HOUSE, AND NEWSREEL

By PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

Cage fans have a big afternoon in sight Sunday, March 28, when the champion and runner-up teams of the USO League at Cochran Field, Macon, Ga., come to Columbus to contest with the champion and runner-up teams of the USO League in Columbus . . . The runners-up will be seen in a preliminary tilt, and the champions will vie in the "main go." . . . Scene of battle will be the Ninth Street USO . . . Arrangements have just been completed by E. J. Bargmann, USO director in Columbus, for return games the following Sunday in Macon.

- - - — V

The "Army Hour" broadcast Sunday from the Army-Navy YMCA - USO over Station WRBL at 5:30 p. m. (EWT) will feature a number of men from the 1st Student Training Regiment who were prominent in the "big time" radio before answering the call to the colors . . . E. K. Askerman, program director, promises some really worth while listening—not that it's at all unusual on the "Army Hour."

- - - — V

Sunday, March 28, will be celebrated as "Open House Day" at the USO clubs in Columbus and Phenix City . . . Big doings are seen, more about which will come next week.

- - - — V

John Lee, assistant USO director in Columbus, has returned from a two-week training period in Washington . . . His friends at Ft. Benning should be happy to hear he's back.

E. K. Askerman of the Army-Navy YMCA-USO is seeking men from Ft. Benning who have leisure time and the desire to use it to good advantage to assist him in the staging of the many USO program at the center . . . Thus far, he says, he has found several soldiers whose talents from civilian life fit well into the picture . . . Anyone interested should call at the USO center to be interviewed.

- - - — V

The Ft. Benning Station Hospital band scheduled for an earlier appearance which had to be cancelled will be heard Saturday at 8:30 p.m. (EWT) in a musical program at the Salvation Army USO in Columbus.

- - - — V

"News to Date," a 45-minute newsreel, is a popular Thursday night feature at the Salvation Army USO in Phenix City . . . It plays at 8 p. m. (CWT) . . . Other popular attractions at the center include the spaghetti suppers Wednesday nights at 8 p. m. (CWT), the Friday night cake and pie socials and the Sunday morning breakfasts for the men who stay over Saturday night at the club . . . Captain Bergren, director, warns, however, that if you want to be "put up" over Saturday night, you'd better get your reservation in by 7 p. m. . . . There are accomodations for but 61.

- - - — V

If you haven't already seen "Shuffle Along," the all-Negro musical hit presented by USO-Camp Shows, it will play through Saturday.

A FUSS BUDGET

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

A well known author penned this as an introduction to one of his books:

without whose never failing sympathy and encouragement this book would have been finished in half the time."

Do you not adore dear, fussy, fidgety Leonora? Was she his loving mother or devoted wife, he does not say. It does not matter. We have her picture. She surrounds him entirely. If the sky is overcast, she has his rubbers and umbrella. Does he sneeze there is the hot water bag. His food is carefully selected and proportioned. The shades of his room adjusted to the proper angle; his desk in apple pie order; his necktie just so. The wonder is that the work was ever finished.

The preface was meant to be humorous and no doubt the writer expressed himself as forcibly as he dared under the circumstances. But one should not jest with tragedy. And it is a tragedy as all those who have to live and work with the Leonoras, male or female, will readily testify.

We repeat it is a calamity to be associated with the folks who are eternally concerned about our physical and moral well being; who fuss and fret and fume about keeping things in order, who sacrifice peace and harmony to the god of triviality.

An Old Play—"I hope you're not a fidget 'A what?' A fuss, then — a person who always wants everything done the other way."

The Bible uses harsher language. "Even the stupid are weary of his fussiness." Ec. 10-15. (Moffatt Trans.)

More than vegetables come out of a victory garden. There's wholesome exercise — neighborliness with the gardener next door—and the fresh clean power and outlook drawn from simple things, and from the soil, which set us walking and breathing freely once more.

Self-discipline is the armor that's invincible to Hitler's secret weapon. He has banked everything on our inability to control ourselves.

Mail-Call

Columbus, Georgia.
37 Court Avenue,
Benning Park,

Dear Editor:

The soldiers are indeed fortunate to have the privilege of having a great artist come to Fort Benning to entertain them.

Last night Jascha Heifitz gave an inspiring concert, and I am sure a great many soldiers got a big thrill. They realized that ordinarily it would have been necessary to reserve tickets at about $2.50 a person to hear Heifitz when he appeared as guest soloist with some symphony.

At 7:30 the Main Theater was packed, and a great many disappointed people were turned away. Heifitz appeared and play his first number. I wonder if you realize the jolt I got when about a hundred soldiers got up and "clamped" out at the end of it. A hundred came in and took their places. At the end of the second number, a few more walked out and others took their seats. I thought the concert was turning into a game of musical chairs!! Can you conceive of anyone leaving a hall in which the greatest living exponent of the violin was playing? It is evident these people attended the concert expecting Heifitz to entertain them by standing on his head or taking off on a hot chorus of "Tiger Rag".

I am not going to say that I think these boys are ignorant. You can't expect everyone's tastes to run to fine music. I do say they were ignorant to walk out when it wasn't what they expected.

I am not alone in being thoroughly disgusted with the courtesy shown artists when they present concerts. Certain conduct is expected of the boys on the streets, in mess halls, etc. Isn't there something that could be done to demand a little concert courtesy? Perhaps a little advertising as to what these USO shows are going to offer would help. There is a variety of entertainment given. Why not have "show girl and jive music" for those who appreciate it, and have the artist concerts for those whose tastes turn to the classics. It is most annoying to have a soldier walk down the aisle with the comment, "I've suffered enough of that", when he had a seat that some other soldier would have paid to sit in.

Is there anything the "Fort Benning Bayonet" can do to help this situation? I am sure it would make concerts more enjoyable for artists and I know many "indignant music lovers" who would be a lot happier!!

Very truly yours,
MRS. F. A. HARRIS.

Eve Says—

CHANGE OF STATIONS ORDERS A LITTLE LIKE DYING TO OLD ARMY WIVES

Orders are such common place things these days one would think receiving them would be a very ordinary thing. They are when others get them. Bright remarks such as, "Oh, I won't say goodbye for we'll see each other again" is a valiant way to bid farewell to dear friends you are going to miss terribly. But what a different sensation when orders are received by a member of your family.

Then you know what your friends experienced. It's a little bit like dying for old army wives. We've been G.I. for so many years. We've lived within the sound of the bugle. Olive drab is the color of our lives. We learned our discipline of manners and customs from ranking officers' wives during those long years we served as lieutenants' wives. Strong bonds of common experience welded friendships that sustained goodbyes, separate stations and joyous meetings long years after.

We found comfort in the feeling that our men took care of us. Men being used in the plural sense, for the newest recruit civilian employee in the Quartermaster Department and the Commanding Officer watched out for us as if we were their own family. Maybe that's what makes the hurt so great. We are a family. Sometimes a griping bickering one, but always there like a strong arm when the need arises.

Now we old timers leave our beloved army family to make our like in a strange and alien civilian life. No matter what kindness they offer us, it will be the kindness of a stranger and not of our family. There will be so much they can't understand. The constant explanations and justifications for our army way of living becomes an irritation with repetition. We who know it so well can't understand why there should be any whys. The army just is. It always has been and always will be something different from civilian life.

Friends who are still living at or near army posts will write the gossip fo ra while. As the months pass the exciting life of rumors and gossip will recede. You'll wonder where this one or that one is, and if they received the expected promotion. You'll wonder if Marie bought a home in San Antonio as she planned and if Mary has learned to be content with the small town in which she chose to live.

You'll hunger so for the army you once knew that you'll talk with everyone you meet in uniform. Newsreels of army activities will be a warm personal experience. The sight of a jeep, or an army truck will stir you. You'll listen to news broadcasts and read the newspapers with absorbed attention.

And you'll wait and wait with a patience born of your long years of discipline for it all to end. You'll hold tight to the belief that there will be peace again and normal life will return. You'll believe reward will come for your patience and day your family will once again live in the dignity, charm and gracious life you knew before the world became an existence of torment and bloodshed.

(Editor's Note: This is Eve's "thirty" in the 'Bayonet'. It is with deep regret that the editors relinquish her to other climes. We have enjoyed her stimulating pen, her vivacious presence. God-speed to her and her Army men until we meet again.)

SARGE REQUISITIONS A WAAC AROUSING THE OLD MAN'S IRE

By S-SGT. TOM McDONALD

Up in our office, Wednesday is always the day of remorse. On this regretful day Colonel Swampwater usually gives the entire staff "down the country" beginning with Major Foxhowl and continuing through Private Sawgrass. When General Quagmire doesn't send Lt. Jericho down for a "dressing down" my turn usually begins with the ringing of the Colonel's buzzer at one P. M. (Just when I have returned from a delightful dinner and am in a very carefree mood.)

This Wednesday was no exception. Precisely on time the buzzer rang, and after hiding under my desk for several minutes Private Sawgrass finally found me and told me the usual schpiel — the colonel desired an "audience" with me.

When I entered, Colonel Swampwater was leaning menacing on his desk, chin elevated, and deep serious furrows on his forehead between his eyes. I trembled with anticipation, hastily trying to remember all the Articles of War I had violated since last Wednesday.

"Sergeant," growls my superior officer, "in the past at our usual Wednesday afternoon 'conference' I have generally corrected your little deficiencies and only practiced throwing my voice in a menacing manner, but this afternoon my ire is really aroused, I want a detailed explanation of this 'requisition' now resting in my waste basket."

"Requisition?" I inquired trying to feign ignorance.

"You're mighty right," he retorted. "Who gave you authority to make out a requisition to have a WAAC assigned to you? And to top the matter you actually started it through channels without my approval. I want an explanation, Sergeant! (My leader continued in this vein for several minutes, but I shall have to omit this admonishment, since the words he used were beyond my capacity to spell.)

"Well, sir," I said, rather surprised that the ol' boy had actually got around to reading anything on its way through channels, "It's like this. The WAAC's have been here over two weeks now and I haven't been able to meet one yet. Everytime I get half an opportunity and enough nerve to say "howdy" to one of them, six paratroopers and technical sergeant from the 29th Infantry barge in ahead of me and I just can't get a word in edgewise. Besides I'm the strong silent type.

"Egad," glared the Colonel as he cleared his throat.

"So I just kind of thought if I had a nice cute "WACK" up here to sort of help me out I would obtain some valuable information for your new book called "Whither The Army?"

"Well, shades of Salome, Sergeant," interrupted the old boy. "So all the time you were unselfishly thinking of me and trying to help me with my book. I feel awfully ashamed for bawling you out like this. I should have known your thoughts were on a higher plane when you entered this requisition. But I'm a real field soldier, Sergeant, I know when I've made a mistake, so please accept my apologies.

"Yes, Sir," I said, greatly relieved, "I always place duty first, Sir—nearly every time."

"A fine quality, Sergeant," added the old boy, "that's the way I like to see my men handle the WAAC situation. Now that we've got this little problem ironed out, I'm going to let you make out another requisition.

"Yes, Sir," I replied, overjoyed with the prospects, "I shall get to work at once, Sir. I can see her now, a nice, neat, trim young lady, about 5 ft., 4 or 5, and eager to learn how we operate up here."

"Don't order one that's too gullible, Sergeant."

"No, Sir," I said, edging eagerly toward my typewriter.

"And one more thing, Sergeant, before it slips my mind."

"Yes, Sir," I answered.

"I want this kept strictly confidential! Under no circumstances must Major Foxhowl get wind of it yet, but I'm putting in a requisition too."

"You are, Sir?" said I curiously.

"Yes, Siree, Sergeant. I've ordered me a cute little third officer with blue eyes."

With these words ringing in my ears, I headed hastily for my typewriter fully cognizant that Wednesday afternoons weren't as bad as they used to be.

In a civilization where the byword is "anything goes", you can be sure that pretty nearly everything worthwhile has gone already.

Worse than hiding our heads in the sand is holding our fingers in the ears of our conscience.

Receiving no salute from a sentry on duty, a lieutenant stopped his car and sternly ordered the offender to repeat General Order No. 10. Without hesitation the man responded correctly.

"Perhaps you don't believe in following it," suggested the lieutenant.

"Sir," replied the sentry, "the order says to salute all officers, standards and colors not cased. As the windows of your car were closed I assumed that you were cased."

O. C. Tells How Father Blew Up Bridge To Stop P. Villa

Ciro Ramirez Witnessed Sire's Bold Maneuver

Though he was only four when it happened, the activities which have since shaped the life of Ciro Ramiriz, officer candidate of the Sixth Company, Third Student Training regiment, were definitely influenced then.

It was the spring of 1917, high in the mountains of northern Mexico. The celebrated Pancho Villa's Bandit Army, retreating before the advance of a superior force of Federal troops, took shelter in a mountain pass, access to which, was controlled by a solitary bridge, which spanned a deep and otherwise impassable gorge.

Arriving at the bridge, the Federal troops exchanged a few desultory shots with Villa's guards; decided that his position was impregnable, and promptly went home; thoughtfully leaving the bridge intact.

VILLA MOVES

Villa, the opportunist, immediately decided to move out after them and conduct one of his habitually-successful fighting raids. Swiftly he made his preparations, news of which reached Ciro's father, who taught in the nearby government school, on the side of the gorge occupied by Villa's guerillas.

Realizing that disaster faced the Federal troops, Senor Ramiriz with typically fatalistic Latin calm, prepared to do the one thing that would stop Villa.

He promptly gathered his little family together, packed a few precious belongings, and a personal satchel, then led them to the bridge.

Villa's sentries, cradless since the withdrawal of the government troops, asked a few perfunctory questions, and permitted them to pass, but kept them under observation.

PLACES SATCHEL

Reaching the other side, Senor Ramiriz sent Ciro and the rest on ahead, while he stopped and busied himself with the contents of his satchel. For several minutes he worked oblivious of the shouts from the guards. Then he reached into his pocket, drew forth a match, lighted it and applied it to the end of a short fuse which now protruded from the satchel.

Ignoring the increasingly belligerent questions of the sentries, he wheeled and running as fast as his legs would carry him, dashed back to the center of the bridge. Reaching there, he carefully put down the satchel, then turned and sprinted for safety.

The guards thoroughly aroused, and realizing that something was seriously wrong, blasted a fusillade of shots after him.

TEACHER HIT

At the first volley, the courageous teacher dropped, fell sprawling just a few feet from freedom. Seeing his beloved father writhing helplessly, Ciro instinctively and foolishly, ran back to him, wildly calling his name, then stopped in amazement, as Ramiriz senior jumped up, and limping painfully with a sprained ankle swept Ciro into his arms and stumbled behind the shelter of a huge boulder which bordered the road.

Peering out from their protection, they saw the soldiers who had started after them, stop at the satchel on the bridge. One bent over it, reached inside, and was just about to shout a warning when, suddenly satchel, soldiers and bridge disintegrated in the midst of the most deafening blast those mountains in northern Mexico had ever heard.

That was in the spring of 1917.

SEEKS KNOWLEDGE

In the years that followed there grew within Ciro Ramiriz the urgency to gain knowledge, so that he might return and, like his father, teach his people.

This led him to and through elementary and secondary school and later William Jewell college, Kansas City, Mo., where he received his A. B. degree.

He worked for the Mexico Consulate for some time, this work taking him to his homeland frequently.

He then received his M. A. from Peabody Teacher's college and taught in New Mexico, Paducah Junior college, Kentucky and had returned to instruct at Peabody when the Japs bombed Pearl Harbor.

If Candidate Ramiriz successfully completes the rugged three-month course here in the Infantry School he will be commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army of the United States the latter part of May.

Edward Prudhomme, known as "Jack Hagan" in wrestling circles is now tussling with the problems of a ground crew specialist at the Army Air Forces Technical Training School of Chanute, Ill., where he is attending a course.

Tenth Company, 1st STR, Has 27 Captains

Two new captains have turned up in the ranks of the 10th Company, 1st STR since promotions were granted to L. J. McNeill and C. H. Cooler during the past week. This increased the number of captains in the 10th Company to 27.

Promotion of 10 second lieutenants in the Company since the class was formed a month ago has thrown the balance of power to the boys with silver bars. The Company now numbers 80 first lieutenants and 72 seconds among its students.

Second lieutenants advanced in grade are: J. D. Cunningham, J. D. M. Hughes, L. W. Harrell, W. E. Parker, G. F. Toalson, R. G. Merek, R. S. Gilbert, A. A. Sanelli, W. R. Kesler and C. P. Rollman.

Tenth Company responded with fervor to the Red Cross roll call, Company Commander Merton B. Tice announced. Contributions totalling $181.00 were received from the student and tactical officers of the organization. The roll call was announced after drill one evening and the funds checked in before instruction the following day.

New Insecticide Issued By Army For Use Overseas

A new insecticide is now being furnished to all American Army contingents overseas for the control of mosquitoes and other annoying or disease-bearing insects, according to an announcement by Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply.

The new insecticide, which is being supplied by the Quartermaster Corps, is said to be highly efficient, non-toxic and non-inflammable. It is composed of freon, sesame oil and pyrethrum. Colonel Massey stated that the insecticide comes in pressure containers which hold about one pound, and which have spray outlets that can be controlled by the person using them.

Only four seconds of spraying are required for a confined space of about 1,000 feet, ten seconds for a pyramidal tent, and three seconds for a pup tent. One container of the new insecticide, according to Colonel Massey, is reported to be equal in lethal qualities to more than a gallon of liquid insecticide, thereby permitting a substantial saving in shipping space and weight.

Catholic Club Opens Activities With Big Dance

Under the energetic direction of Chaplain John McMahon, the Second Regiment's Catholic chaplain, the newly formed Catholic Club of Headquarters Company held its first social event since its inauguration but three weeks ago. It opened with a highly successful dance Tuesday evening at the new Brigade Rest Camp at Victory Pond.

The multitude of pulchritude of Columbus came in to act as escorts for the boys. They were the Military Maids, with Mrs. Hugh Roberts, Jr., as hostess. Some watched the kindling embers of the pine log fire, others danced to none other than Headquarters Company's own inimitable dance band, the Leaders. Throughout the evening the waltz took a temporary rest, as the greatest part of the requests were for jitter-bug numbers, which will never die, as long as the South lives.

Refreshments were served during the evening, finding many a chow-hound in delight and exultation, till the sombre strains of "Lights Out" caused all good times to find an end.

Among the guests of honor were Capt. and Mrs. Henry R. Callahan, officers of the Regiment, wives and friends of Headquarters Company Catholic Club and former members of the company now taking up positions at Brigade Headquarters.

SMART TO SCHOOL

Captain Neil R. Smart, lately personnel adjutant of the 29th Infantry regiment has been placed on special duty with the Infantry School for an advanced course of studies. His brother, Captain Donald Smart of Fort McClellan, Ala., is attending the same course. Other students from the 29th are Captains Ledgerwood, Glaze and Layton.

Worn Clothing Mended For Use In Field, Fatigue

In line with its policy of requiring maximum use of all clothing and equipage, the supply division at Fort Benning announces that all unserviceable articles, which cannot be renovated for reissue for ordinary wear, are being repaired and utilized for all types of training and duties in which the appearance is a secondary factor.

According to Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply at the post, this clothing issued for wear in special field exercises, maneuvers, landing operations and other training as well as for such fatigue duties that are destructive to clothing.

TRY IT By GOSH

Well-Known Zoologist Is TIS Officer Candidate

Men from every phase of life come to Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, but the background of Candidate William G. Sheldon of the 8th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, is more unusual than most. Being a field collector of zoological specimens, he can spin many interesting tales.

He spent eight months during 1935-36 in the mysterious and uncharted interior of Tibet as a member of an expedition of the New York American Museum of Natural History.

His experiences included shooting a giant panda—and this in the days before zoological specimens of the panda had been brought home alive. Snow leopards, blue sheep, and the takin, or wild ox, were other unusual animals he saw.

He attended the Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., graduated from Yale in 1933, attended evening school two years after graduation, and took a special course in public speaking and map making at the Harvard Geographical Institute.

His interest follows closely the interest of his father, who spent the greater part of his life as an explorer and "hunter-naturalist," and who was extremely active in the fields of conservation—being largely responsible, for instance, for the establishment of the Mt. McKinley National Park in Alaska.

During Candidate Sheldon's summer vacations from college he traveled extensively in northern British Columbia, doing specialized collecting for the U. S. National Museum. Most of the time required traveling by canoe and pack horse. After college he was on a special mission in Nova Scotia for the International Diatomite Company of Canada. Later, in his most important work, he was a field collector near Chinese Tibetan borderland in some of the most mountainous and primitive areas in the world—where the mountains only begin at 10,000 feet above sea level.

Since his basic training in the Army he has been instructing ski troops at Camp Hale, Colo., until coming to Officer Candidate School.

Officers' Club Governing Board Headed By Noyes

Colonel Edward A. Noyes has been named president of the board of governors of the Officers' Club at Fort Benning, it was announced in an order issued by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton.

The other members of the board include Colonel S. R. Tupper, Colonel Stephen B. Massey, Colonel James Notestein; Lt. Col. John S. Roosma and Maj. Henry R. Hester.

1st STR Unit Could Be Self Sustaining On Desert Island

Butchers, Bakers, Candle-Stick Makers Enrolled In Class

If all the student members of the 3rd company, an advance course unit in the 1st Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School, are ever marooned together on an island of any size, they will amongst them have the makings of a completely self-sustaining, well-balanced community. For just about every vital occupation known to a civilized land is represented in the class—and many an occupation, as well, that during war time would be termed luxury.

Available to this mythical community are farmers, professors, auditors, restaurateurs, clothiers, frozen food experts, entomologists, and exterminators. To run it there would be available the city manager from a metropolis of over 36,000 population, a president of a contracting company, a congressional secretary, and a county treasurer. To care for the public safety there would be an imposing little group consisting of one policeman, one prison guard, one manager of a reform school, and a member of a prison bureau. There is also an armored car guard who could be used to check valuables.

For shelter our self-sustaining little community could form a powerful team consisting of a home builder, a contractor, an electrician, a dealer in home appliances, a hardware proprietor, a realtor, a civil engineer, an interior decorator, an upholsterer, and a hotel clerk. Between them they could surely concoct some sort of pleasant dwellings.

AND MORE AND MORE

Community sustenance would be amply taken care of by several farmers, a herdsman, an agronomist, a livestock buyer, a frozen food expert (for Icelandic maroonings), and a restaurateur. The health department could consist of a pharmacist, a chemist, and a milk sanitarian, while education could be very capably handled by a substantial representation of high school teachers and superintendents, professors, and a lecturer. Recreation could be turned over with complete confidence to a little group made up of an actor, a professional football player, a couple of Boy Scout executives, several athletic coaches, and a brace of radio announcers.

There would also be available in the community two bankers, several auditors, and a whole horde of lawyers. To satisfy more specialized needs there would be obtainable the services of several brokers, a map maker, a social worker, a machinist, an oil refinery operator, and a mirror manufacturer. The transportation department would consist of an auto dealer and a mechanic. This department being now nearly extinct these officers could be held as supernumeraries.

THE WONDER GROWS

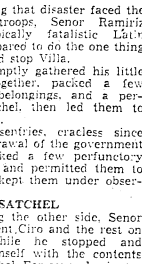
For clothing this class could furnish a department store executive, a tailor and a cleaner. There is even a shoe designer present. Comfort could be safeguarded in this heterogeneous combination by teaming the entomologist with the exterminator, the first to call the shots of latter.

Communication being so important in this modern world it will be a pleasure to note amongst the group on this mythical isle the presence of a telephone lineman, several postmen and newspapermen.

But lest it be that this group is unduly civic for a military class it should be pointed out that among its members are such militaristically named officers as Capt. Major, Major Sergeant, and, as student commanding officer, a full Colonel appropriately surnamed "Conquest."

Ordered to report for his final physical examination, Ben Hogan, noted golfer will be inducted into the Army March 25. At present this well known linksman is undergoing private flying instruction in Tulsa, Okla.

Candidates Tell Why They Want To Be Officers



The First Platoon of the 15th Company of the Infantry School's First Student Training Regiment is made up of men from many walks of life and range in age from eighteen to forty-three. Many have held responsible positions in civil life, while many others are recent graduates from the universities of the nation. Recently they were asked, "why do you want to be an officer"? The following summarizes their combined answer:

"Millions of the finest boys of our land are leaving home for the first time to take over the toughest jobs this world of men ever has been forced to assume. The leaders of these kids will determine largely their sorrows, their happiness, their future, and, in many cases, their lives. I want to help them to a successful close of this madman's conflict. And I pray God I may have what is necessary to lead them, the knowledge and the guts and the sympathetic understanding to lead them where we need to go, when we need to be there."

Lieutenant Henry Barnes is tactical officer for the First Platoon. The Company Commander of the Fifteenth Company is Captain Carl Hawthorne.

NEW QUARTERS

Fifty civilian employees, members of the civiljan personnel branch, moved into their new quarters at the post headquarters building Monday. The group, under the immediate charge of Lt. Raymond A. Parkins, is housed in an addition to the building just completed Saturday.

Profs And Leaders Clash Tonight At Sports Arena In First Play-Off Tilt

2nd STR Rates Slight Favorite Over Profs; Tiger Play-Offs Open

Tap-Off Tonight Is Set For 8:30; Recons Meet Supply Friday Night

With the league schedules just about completed, the attention of Benning court fans will be focused on the Harmony Church arena tonight where the Academic Profs and 2nd STR Leaders clash in the opening battle of the three-game play-off series to determine the Fort Benning Conference title.

Tomorrow night, speedy quintets from the 90th Reconnaissance and Supply Battalions of the 10th Armored Division will take over the center court at the H. C. arena for single-game decision of the Cusseta League laurels. The Recons took the first-half crown and Supply has just finished a straight run to the second-half honors.

Sunday afternoon, the Profs and Leaders will move their conference arguments to the hardwood at the post gym for the second game of the series at 3:30. The preliminary on Sunday at 2 o'clock will pit the 1st Parachute Trainers against 7th Observation in the initial game of the Main Post play-offs.

The basketball pot will continue to boil at both courts on Monday night when the Cusseta League winner is slated to oppose the 55th Engineers, winners of both halves in the Sand Hill League, for the 10th Armored Division title and the right to meet the conference champ for the post title.

If a third title is necessary between the Profs and Leaders, it will be contested on Monday night at the post gym with the tap-off carded for 8:45. The preliminary will also provide plenty of action with the paratroopers and observers clashing in the second game of their series. A third tilt in the Main Post League will be played Tuesday if necessary.

FINALS NEXT THURSDAY

Indications are that the final series of the year between the conference champ and the 10th Armored winner for the post title will get under way next Thursday night and probably continue on Friday and Sunday to wind up the court campaign just one week before the opening baseball game of the year is carded.

In most of the league play-offs the second-half winners will rate the favorite's nod at tap-off time. Generally they are considered to be in top stride right now, and the first-half winners will have to regain theirs if they are to come out on top.

The conference play-off will probably attract the most interest, due to the presence of the best "money team" at the post and the real "cinderella team" of the year. The Profs for many weeks rated the top slot in any sort of a rating scale and their slump has just come about in the past two weeks.

ACADEMIC QUESTION

Whether or not the academics can shake off their doldrums and return to early season form or whether they have really gone stale is the big pre-game question. The Leaders are surely one of the best teams of the year and may continue their grand-slam by taking the post title.

2nd STR closed out its schedule with its seventh straight Sunday by bumping Parachute School. Also, during the week they drubbed the 802nd Field Artillery tossers and appeared in top form. Meanwhile, the Profs dropped a pair of tilts to Lawson Field and the 124th Gators and were completely out-played in both encounters.

LAWSON IN SECOND

Lawson Field also defeated Station Hospital to finish the loop with six wins and but a single defeat which earned the Fliers second place in the standings. At that only one point separated them from a play-off chance since their only defeat was at the hands of the Leaders by a single marker.

The 55th Engineers appear to be the most consistent champ of the year and will rate as the favorite

10th Armored Boxing Finals Next Thursday

Five Teams Still Have Chance To Capture Division Title

Sixteen finalists—the only competitors left of more than 400 men who have competed in the division boxing tournament—will meet at 8 o'clock Thursday, March 25, in the Harmony Church Sports Arena for the division championships in eight weight classes.

Five teams still rate a good chance of taking the division championship, determined on a point basis of so many points for each victory an individual fighter scores.

Right now the 3rd Bn., 3rd A. R., and the Provisional Bn., 11th A. R., have three men each in the finals. The 3rd Bn., 11th A. R.; 423rd F. A., and 1st Bn., 54th Inf., each have two men. Having one man left are the 90th Recons; 55th Engineers; 3rd Bn., 54th; and 1st Bn., 3rd A. R.

The Provisional Battalion of the 11th is on top with 2,100 points, only 100 more than the 3rd Battalion of the 3rd Armored. The 423rd has 1,900, and the 3rd Battalion, 11th Armored, has 1,800.

The matches scheduled are as follows:

112 lbs.—Pvt. Rech, Prov. Bn., 11th A. R., vs. Pvt. Phillips, 1st Bn., 54th Inf.

118 lbs.—Pvt. Clark, Prov. Bn., 11th A. R., vs. Pvt. Coburn, 3rd Bn., 11th A. R.

124 lbs.—Sgt. O'Brient, Prov. Bn., 11th A. R., vs. Pvt. Anderson, 3rd Bn., 3rd A. R.

135 lbs.—Pvt. Danish, 423rd, vs. Sgt. Guthrie, 3rd Bn., 3rd A. R.

175 lbs. or over—Pvt. Wijas, 1st Bn., 3rd A. R., vs. Sgt. Coleman, 3rd Bn., 11th A. R.

SLAM-BANG BOUTS

The finals are certain to produce some slam-bang fights crammed into three rounds each. There were only three knockouts in the 16 semi-final fights, but there were no slow, dull fights. The men were in there scrapping from the first bell, generally slowed down midway in the second round to catch their breath, and then gave their all in the last round.

It's hard to say which fight next Thursday promises the most action, but the 145-pounder scrap between Zwadski and Milligan will be as good as any. Ryan, in the light-heavy class, has three straight knockouts, but he is meeting an opponent this trip who can possibly turn the tables on him.

Danish and Guthrie, at 135 pounds, are an even match, with Danish packing more wallop and having a lot of speed. If he can last the three rounds without tiring too much, he will take Guthrie.

Taylor will have to spot Godwin about eight to ten pounds, just as he did Fianzzo Monday night, but he is as good a boxer as there is competing. If the weight difference isn't too much for him, he rates an edge over Goodwin.

The writer could go on with the prognostications, but what's the use? We tell you there isn't a bad fight on the card, so be at the to see a flock of good fights.

Service Unit Pugs Ready For 'Haction'

Athletic Club Has Excellent Stable Of Promising Fighters

Aided by its fine stable of promising young fighters, the Service Battalion Athletic club is beginning to edge into the Fort Benning athletic spotlight. Under the guidance of Major Ball, Master Sergeant Sellers and Corporal Jackson, the club has been progressing in the fistic division for the past year.

On the honor roll of victorious fighters are Dynamite Daniels, Him Still, Jimmy Mitchell, Chris Cragg, New Haven Swan, Oliver Roberts, Johnny Morgan, Roosevelt Pitts, Buddy Williams, Leo Young, Young Levi Irvis, Joe Noble, Rowin Eddie Washington and Tiger Peterson.

Coming up fast is young Thomas Beatty of Cambridge, Mass., rangy 147 - pounder who recently achieved a one-round knockout over Gene Wilson, classy Newark, N. J., puncher. A second great prospect is Bennie Deshaziar, a Newark youngster who can deliver a punch and take one. He was extended to a decision by Jack Myers of Chicago but in a

3rd STR Hoop Team Struggles

Strictly cooperative is the managerial scheme of the Third Student Training Regiment's basketball team, which has survived apparently insuperable vicissitudes through the season to enter the double round robin tournament of the Harmony Church League.

The team was formed last November with the usual sponsorship and supervision given a regimental athletic endeavor but shifting assignments finally left the Third S. T. R. courtmen without responsible leadership centered in one person.

The players, however, were determined not to allow the first basketball team of the young regiment to disappear from the league rolls. Practice sessions went on in the Third Regiment's gymnasium and opponents were encountered on a regular schedule on the Second Regiment's court.

Credit for the success of the quintet in meeting obstacles which would have finished off many other teams must go to the present lineup, now composed of Staff Sgt. Theodore Cook, Corps. Fencers Meet Georgia Tech Foe Saturday

Sgt. Mino Maviaci to Lead Benning Team In First Match

Fort Benning's newly organized fencing team will literally cross swords with a seasoned Georgia Tech outfit at 7:30 Saturday night at the Main Gym.

The Post team is captained by Sergeant Nino Maniaci, winner of All-Eastern epee champianship in New York last month. Pvt. Joseph Urell of the 10th Armored Division and Cpl. Bertand Bristol of the post finance office as well as two substitutes, Pfc. Patrick Schievella, 29th Infantry, and Pvt. Thomas Wilson of the Academic Regiment.

Georgia Tech will outnumber the post team seven to three. In order for the home team to win, they must get 14 out of 27 points. Each man on the team will fence three bouts in each of the three weapons, foil, epee and sabre making nine bouts altogether. At least four bouts must be won by each man.

Georgia Tech has won four out of four matches so far this year and is headed by Straighton Hard, letter man on their varsity fencing team. He has won 10 out of 10 foil bouts 20 for this season and 6 out of 8 sabre bouts.

Maniaci is exected to match anyone on the Georgia team. Urell and Bristol have not had the experience that their captain has in competitive fencing, being more adept at classical fencing.

Maniaci says, "fencing is like chess only with swords."

Whatever the outcome, this first match will be a test of capacity to engage future teams. A return match is scheduled for March 27th.

the regiment's Headquarters Company. Also in the lineup early in the season was William R. Crew Jr., Headquarters Company's first sergeant.

The league tournament currently is being played off in the Harmony Church Arena in the Second Regiment area and will end some time next week.

TIS Nine Vs. All-Stars Is April 4 Menu

Captain Gowdy To Train Locals For Big Game

Captain "Hank" Gowdy, Infantry School baseball director, today announced plans for Fort Benning's first gala diamond attraction. He has scheduled the Columbus All-Stars to meet the Infantry School nine on Gowdy Field, Fort Benning at 2:30 p. m. April 4.

Hugh Bentley will organize the Columbus team and will draw from the great wealth of professional and amateur talent of the city in the hopes of putting out a club that will sorely test the mettle of the Infantrymen.

COACHES TO CHOOSE

The Infantry School will have a star studded array of players composed of picked men from the many teams within the School command. They will be chosen by the coaches of the individual regimental and battalion teams.

Many of the unit clubs already are in training, and their members who are chosen for the Infantry School team will be called together for a period of further training under Captain Gowdy, former major leaguer, one of the first player from the big circuit to enlist in the last war. Gowdy plans to

Vet Pitcher Attends OCS

John Berry of Orlando, Fla., who has spent the past 14 years pitching for, and managing, both large and small baseball clubs, has exchanged the horsehide for the hand grenade in his current "winter training" program here.

Berry is an officer candidate in the 10th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment. Before entering the Army last fall, he managed and played on the Orlando Gulls, achieving notoriety as the only man in baseball ever known to have his own club owner expelled from the baseball park. The incident occurred when the over-enthusiastic owner tried to run the team that Berry was being paid to manage.

The officer candidate began his career in 1929 with the Wilmington, N. C., nine in the Eastern Carolina league. He pitched on several Brooklyn Dodger "farm" teams and spent two seasons with the Dodgers themselves. While pitching independently in Panama City several years ago, he won every one of the 14 games he started, one of them a no-hit, no-run affair. When not on the mound, he played outfielder and batted .536. Over one period he made eight consecutive hits, including two homers, and in one game drove in 14 runs.

Watch For All-Star Selections In Four Leagues Next Week

Next week's sports pages of the BAYONET will contain all-star basketball selections in four of Benning's six court loops. Mythical all-league teams will be named for the Fort Benning Conference, the Main Post League, the Sand Hill League, and the Cusseta League.

The selections will be made by an impartial board of experts acting on the recommendations of the various coaches of the loop teams. In the Bayonet the following week a mythical all-post quintet will be chosen from the outstanding stars of the different leagues.

55th Engineers Take Sand Hill League Laurels

Bridge-Builders Stop Tankers in Last Tilt Of Regular Schedule

The 55th Engineers won their seventh straight game Monday night to cop the second half title of the Sand Hill league when they bested the 11th Armored Regiment, 48-27. The lop-sided victory atoned for a 38-32 reverse given them by the 11th in their final game the first half, forcing them into a playoff they won from the 420th Field Artillery.

The clincher for the Engineers assures them of being the representative of their league in the single game inter-league playoff for the division championship. Their opponent will be either the 90th Recons or the Supply Battalion, the former going through the Cusseta League first half unbeaten and the latter finishing the second round with a clean record.

The Recon-Supply game has been scheduled for Friday, March 19, in the Harmony Church Sports Arena, while the division championship has been set tentatively for Monday, March 22, at Harmony Church. The division champion will compete the following week in a post tournament, March 24, 25 and 26.

SUPPLY LOT

Hottest team in either league the past four weeks has been the Supply quintet, which could do no better than break even in six games the first half. They have pinned a 61-12 defeat on the Recons, and topped their next two closest rivals, Signal Company and Service Company, by ten points each, while more than doubling the score against lower division teams. Their great comeback makes them a slight favorite to topple the Recons, who took the 61-12 lacing while their two top scorers were absent.

But neither team rates much of a chance to beat the Engineers, who have a well-rounded outfit which never seems to know when it is beaten. A highlight of the season's play has been the ability of the "Mighty 55th" to beat their only close rival, the 420th Field Artillery, when the chips were down.

The teams were very evenly matched—maybe the 420th even had a slight advantage in the smoothness of their offensive—but the Engineers had the spirit and drive which were necessary to carry them down the stretch three times.

PHOTO-FINISH

In the first game they overcame a three point disadvantage in the last two minutes to win, 30-28. The second time they led all the way, then stayed off a 420th rally to win, 33-29. Two weeks ago they were down, 28-19, near the end of the third quarter, but they came back to win by a 33-29 score again.

The two league winners will each receive a loving cup, while the division champion will get another cup.

The final league games Wednesday night pit the 80th Medics against Supply Battalion; Service Company—Trains; 419th—423rd; and 54th—3rd.

Billiards King To Be At Post For Exhibition

Demonstration Slated For Service Club 1 On March 24-25

Officers and enlisted men of Ft. Benning will be afforded an exhibition of championship billiards when Erwin Rudolph, five times champion of the world at pocket billiards, plays here Wednesday and Thursday, March 24 and 25.

Rudolph is being brought to Ft. Benning by Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer, through arrangements with The Billiard Association of America. One demonstration will be held in Service Club No. 1 on the Main Post March 24 at 8 p. m., and the other in Service Club No. 2 in the Sand Hill Area March 25 at 8 p.m.

An overseas veteran of World War I, Rudolph will not only demonstrate the kind of billiard skill that won for him the world's championship but also will open his bag of trick shots. In addition he will give instruction in the simple fundamentals which make for better billiard play.

Rudolph has been playing pocket billiards—better known as pool—for the past 25 years, nine months of which time he spent helping put the Kaiser behind the "international eight ball." He has been identified with championship billiard play since his return from France, having won the world's title in 1927, 1930, 1931, 1933 and 1941. The cue stick artist has run 277 consecutive points in pocket billiards and boasts an average of 11.2 points per appearance at the table during the 1929 world's title meet in Detroit. The latter figure is a world's tournament record grand average. Rudolph has a high run of 111 points in tournament play.

TENNIS TOURNEY

Men and women interested in entering the all events tennis tournament at the Officers club on March 20 and 21 are asked to register at the Tennis shop at the club.

Spanish Civil War Vet Studies Demolition In Parachute School

Pvt. Pitzer Began Life of Adventure At Age of 15

Pvt. Charles Pitzer is going to blow up.

In fact, he's already blown up—in Spain where he was with a guerrilla band after attending demolitions school in that country back in 1937. Now he is attending the demolitions course of the Parachute School.

Beginning a life of adventure when he left home in Oklahoma City at the age of 15, Pitzer has sailed the seas, fought in the recent Spanish revolution, travelled the Burma Road to Japan, so it was only natural that he enlisted in the army the day after Pearl Harbor.

Because of his background the army used him to give orientation lectures, but that was far too dull and he volunteered for the Parachutists. He finished that course two weeks ago and went on to follow up with the specialized course in demolition which is offered here by Captain Ray O. Phillips and his staff of men who know how to blow up and destroy.

STOWAWAY

He left his home at 15 and stowed away on a Japanese freighter.

"I didn't like that at all," he said, "and I and another fellow jumped overboard. We jumped too soon, though, because we were about 30 miles off the Mexican coast. We spent two days and two nights in the water before being picked up by an American ship."

Pvt. Pitzer then returned to school back home, but that was only an on and off thing and so for some time he knocked around the world in freighters. Along with a few other things he tried some professional boxing on the West Coast.

When the war broke out in Spain he organized a transport brigade, then went to demolition school.

BLOWS UP BRIDGES

"We managed to blow up some bridges and highways," he related in much the same manner as a man would about shooting some first rockets.

He finally found himself in a hospital and when he got out he left Barcelona and left Europe by way of France. Pitzer then travelled through Japan and China and he tells how he knew the war was coming "as anyone who was in that country could tell by the preparations they were making."

At the time we entered the war he was a merchant seaman and would not have had to enter the army. But with his already crowded 25 years behind him, Pitzer had to get in.

He hopes to blow up a lot of things, including some Japs and Germans.

Shoe—

TEN COMMANDMENTS

Fort Benning's "shoe doctors" in addition to repairing your GI's have some tips for GI guys on caring for shoes.

The "ten commandments" as laid down by Lt. Ross W. Crossley and Superintendent Alva F. McGreggor are:

1. Do not allow your shoes to wear through. Repair them when necessary.
2. Do not use water to clean shoes. Use a good brush and rags.
3. Use a dobbing solution where possible to waterproof shoes and give a longer life to the leather.
4. Change shoes daily. Perspiration keeps shoes damp, causing leather to depreciate.
5. Never soak new shoes in water. It impairs the quality and service of the leather.
6. Always keep an extra pair of shoes free from dirt, grease and grime.
7. Do not stuff socks in shoes.
8. Never dry shoes near excessive heat. This tends to draw and crack the leather and weaken the stitching.
9. Expose wet shoes to cool, fresh air. Do not store shoes in foot lockers or barracks bags.
10. Use a high grade shoe polish or cream.

probably the biggest job in the shoe section of the Clothing and Equipment Repair Shop at Ft. Benning, it is by no means all that it done at the shop.

BETTER THAN NEW

Many pairs of shoes badly worn but with uppers still in good repair are completely torn down and re-welted. They are then soled, half soled and heeled, and are better for the soldier than a new pair, as Superintendent McGregor says, "because they need not be broken in."

The shop was opened in February 1941. During its first year of operation 179,000 pairs of shoes were handled, but the figure was just one-third of the plant's capacity.

NEW SERVICE

As a result of the noticeable lack of work" a new service was inaugurated recently at the shoe repair shop. Offered now to officers at Ft. Benning is a repair service at a very nominal sum. For $2 an officer may have his shoes heeled and completely resoled with top-grade leather.

Explaining the fact that the shop is not forced to operate at even near top capacity, Lt. Crossley and Superintendent McGregor point to the black carbon composition sole which the Army utilizes to half-sole its GI shoes. They state the rubber sole will outwear one of leather three to one.

An example of the wearing quality of the black composition sole is the story they tell about a man from the 29th Infantry who wore his shoes for six months after they had been repaired with the rubber sole.

Since only 13 per cent of a cow's hide renders top grade leather, it is very evident what a boon the Army the black sole is, according to Superintendent McGreggor.

11,729 LAST MONTH

During the month of February this year the repair shop handled 11,729 pairs of shoes. Of these 11,254 were the GI shoe. Other types worked on included garrison shoes, leather boots, paratrooper boots, officers' shoes, orthopedic shoes and Canadian paratroop boots.

When shoes are brought in for repair, they are first inspected to determine whether they are repairable or whether they should be salvaged. Each stage or particular portion of thejob is handled in a different section of the shop, but every man in the plant is capable of doing the other man's work should the need arise.

The 30-odd cobblers comprising the plant personnel were trained right in the Ft. Benning shop. Many of them had never done even similar work. Some were from cotton plantations, farms and other diverse fields. All were trained and promoted to successive bigger and more important jobs by Superintendent McGreggor, who has been in the shoe repair business for more than a quarter century.

KNOWS HIS MEN

Lt. Crossley knows every man in the shop by name and keeps a close check on their work which explains to a great extent their enthusiasm for their jobs and their eagerness to handle more shoes.

Neither the lieutenant nor the superintendent worry a great deal about the selective service system claiming their men—because they are mainly classified 4-F. Most of them have but one leg, a leg deformity or one eye.

Only one section of the shop is causing Lt. Crossley and Superintendent McGreggor any concern in their campaign to "Keep 'Em Walking." That is the stitching machine which practically requires a man with two good legs to operate it.

frigidaire by the business manager insure the foursome of a steady, but thrifty, flow of good, wholesome food supplies and unusually excellent meals are a common thing. A bit of friendly rivalry is injected into the preparation of these meals as the two wives strive to offer the best and tastiest dishes while staying within the boundaries of their budget. This carries over into the general appearance of their respective apartments and it would be difficult to find more pleasant surroundings than are occupied by these two families.

Reporting that the first month of this trial plan resulted in successes far exceeding their financial expectations, these members of the Thrift Club have started something that is already gaining favor with others of the personnel who, like Sergeants Goodwin and Jones, live in nearby Columbus, Georgia.

to represent the armored division in the final series. However, the winner of the Recon-Supply clash will provide a keen test for the mighty 55th on Monday night.

The play-off games are expected to produce some of the most thrilling basketball of the year, and after the crazy season that fort fans have experienced, anyone of the five teams involved may emerge as the victor and successor to the 29th Infantry as king of the court at Benning.

7th Observers Can Clinch Loop Title In Tonight's Game

The strong 7th Observation squadron tossers can clinch the second-half honors in the Main Post League tonight with a victory over 863rd Ordnance in the first game of a triple bill at 6:45. The Fliers have won six and lost one, while the second-place 99th Quartermasters have the same number of wins and one defeat.

If the ordnance tossers should upset the 7th and throw the standings into a deadlock, the play-off tilt would be staged Friday night at the post gym, starting at 7:30 o'clock.

Two other tilts are also carded for tonight at the gym. 1st Student Training meets 1st Parachute Training in the second game at 8 o'clock and the final game at 9:15 will bring together the Medico rivals from the 24th and 53rd General Hospitals.

Capt. Hammargren Appointed Major

Captain Russell J. Hammargren, director of the public relations division at post headquarters, has been promoted to the rank of major. Major Hammargren assumed his present duties 14 months ago with the rank of first lieutenant. He was made captain last August.

He is on leave from the University of Denver where he heads the department of journalism. He holds two degrees from the University of Minnesota where he at one time lectured on public opinion.

Major Hammargren formerly worked with the Milwaukee bureau of the United Press, with the St. Paul Pioneer Press, and other papers in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

made earlier by DeGaulle, leader of the Fighting French, it appears that some basis for an accord is being reached.

PLENTY OF TALK about what sort of world we are all going to live in after this war is over, came popping out of headlines during the week.

Biggest single bit of news was dumping of plans into Congress' lap for demobilization of the hugh armies together with a program for postwar security—one little document alone running to a mere 550,000 words.

Briefly, the highlight of the plan, which carried with it President Roosevelt's indorsement, were for enlarged social service benefits and a move to gear the country to a new peace time economy. This would guarantee every man released from the armed forces or from war plants a job with "fair pay and working conditions;" continue rationing and other restrictions as long as necessary; give labor "responsibility in organization and sharing in management; establish government-private partnership in some plants and facilities, and consolidate railroads into a limited number of regional systems.

Later a group of Senators conferred with President Roosevelt on plans for an organization of all of the United Nations on wartime collaboration and peacetime goals which would make full utilization of all of their military and economic resources now in carrying on the war, assist in rehabilitating areas now dominated by the Axis, set up machinery for peaceful adjustment of international disputes and create a United Nations military force to quell future attempts at aggression.

Some opposition has already sprung up against parts of this plan, especially that of "policing the world." Sounds very much like the opposition to President Wilson after 1919.

Col. Vernon Dies Following Brief Illness

Lieutenant Colonel Percy M. Vernon, commander of the First Battalion of the Second Student Training Regiment, died Sunday at the Station hospital; after a brief illness. Death was caused by pneumococcus meningitis.

Col. Vernon, a regular army officer, came to Fort Benning in April 1942 from Camp Rucker, Alabama to attend the Division Officers' Course at the Infantry School. At the completion of the course, he was transferred to The Infantry School for duty with the Second Student Training Regiment.

Col. Vernon resided at 313 Lumpkin Road. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Theresa H. Vernon and three children, McCay, Graham, and Teresa Vernon.

STATE MEN ATTEND

From the state health department came Dr. B. F. Austin, state health commissioner from Montgomery; Dr. Richard Gill of the state health department in Montgomery; and Dr. A. H. Graham, state director of health for eastern Alabama from Opelika.

Others at the luncheon included: Mayor Elmer Reese, Commissioners Homer Cobb and A. L. Gullatt, City Attorney Roy Smith, County Attorney J. W. Braswell, Circuit Judge J. S. Williams, Sheriff Ralph Matthews, Police Chief J. W. Perry, Health Director R. H. Todd, Judges Harry Randall and W. H. Belcher, City Recorder, Ashby Floyd, County Solicitor Arch C. Ferrell, Solicitor General Gus Borders and A. L. Patterson, chairman of the Russell county draft board.

Lt. James Gordon Govatos was recently promoted to the rank of Captain, according to an announcement made by Colonel Thomas R. Gibson of the First Student Training Regiment.

The Officers R. & R. Club on Cusseta Road is by far the most popular place in Columbus for commissioned officers and their guests. Ask anyone on the reservation who has been there.

3rd Armored's Piker IV Meets An Untimely End

Bulldog Challenges Truck's Right-of-Way And Vehicle Triumphs

"Piker the Fourth" is dead—for the big English bulldog, mascot of Company "F" of the Third Armored Regiment, 10th Armored Division, passed on last week due to the courage of his convictions—not to be rushed under any circumstances although in this case it meant death from a brutal truck.

The most agreeable of a series of bulldogs named "Piker" and owned by Company F, the late lamented Piker IV had a reputation for never hurrying, although he was once clocked at two miles-per-hour when he was tailing a rations truck up Scott Avenue.

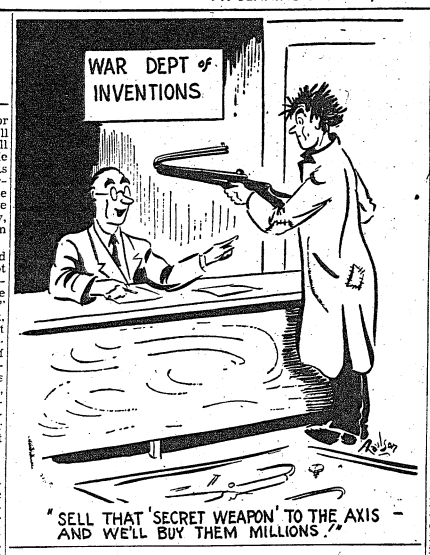
Although Piker IV was a ferocious looking animal, particularly on a dark night, he was never caught in any act more violent than growling and making threatening gestures at a certain red squirrel who loved to tantalize the canine character.

SARGE BUSTED

Before his untimely demise, Piker ran up an impressive string of titles. He was sergeant at one time, but was busted for drinking beer on duty. He was the officially accredited mess hall inspector for the Tiger Division, exacting a toll of considerable food per mess hall for each official inspection. He stood most formal guard mounts as liaison agent for acting corporals of the guard—unless the guard mount happened to be more than a quarter of a mile away, which was a little too far for him to walk.

Although considered an enlisted man, Piker occasionally got chummy with the officers, possibly because he considered the Officer's Mess to be "on his beat." His last public appearance, in fact, was a Division Bowl assembly at which Maj. Gen. Pauw W. Newgarden, commanding general of the division ,spoke. Despite threatening weather and Company F's frantic attempts to get him away, Piker sat on the speaker's platform until General Newgarden announced the training program for the Tiger Camp. Piker, at that time, quickly left the platform.

LIKED MOVIES



In general, Piker's favorite entertainment was the movies. He would arrive just after the opening of the second show in order that he might miss the rush and still pick up plenty of popcorn. However, he was very careful to leave just before the picture's climax, for he lived in mortal fear that he would be locked up in a vacant building.

Particular about his sleeping quarters, he would never sleep on a poorly made bunk on one which did not have the regulation six inch fold.

Although wrapped in gloom and sadly missing Piker IV, Company F once again is looking for an English bulldog—which they will undoubtedly name Piker V. The company's only consoling thought is that only an hour before Piker IV wandered off on his last trip he ate a hearty meal.

Mexican Mainteneers Learn Duties Rapidly

Yankee Hospitality Quickly Puts Recruits At Complete Ease

The boys in the various barracks of the Maintenance Battalion on the night of Dec. 4, 1942, were indulging in their favorite forms of relaxation when suddenly the barracks door opened and revealed a group of swarthy, dark-skinned men standing in the doorway.

The usual reaction would be to reach for a gun, and this was hastily complied with until it was learned from an unimpeachable source that these men composed a group of rookies of Mexican parentage who had just arrived from Ft. Sam Houston, Texas.

Their entrance into the Maintenance Battalion marked for them the beginning of a new, life, a life filled with uncertainty and doubt. Their difficulties with the English language, and their ignorance of the treatment they would receive at the hands of the veterans were some of the things with which they had to contend. It is no wonder their eyes darted around the room and a frightened look appeared on their faces.

FEARS DISPELLED

The fears of the rookies were soon dispelled, however, for that old American warmth and regard for fellow man came to the fore. In exactly the time it takes to make a G. I. bed the ice was broken. Fellows from Jersey City were showing them how to make their beds, sergeants from Seattle compared the glory of Washington state to the grandeur of Texas, and Irishmen from Brooklyn learned the words to "The Rose of Juarez."

The participants in this little show thought nothing of what they were doing. But underneath this little incident were the basic principles for which we are fighting, and Herr Hitler, no matter how small it was, it was still a slap in the face. Little slaps like the one administered will add up and become an upper cut which will knock him and his friends flat on their miserable backs, members of the battalion maintain.

Almost two months have passed since that memorable night, and many changes have taken place. Fellows with names like Cristobal Marfin, Jose Ramirez and Isauro Gonzalez are pulling guard, K.P. and going through their regular duties as soldiers.

If by chance one should hear a group of voices singing in a strange tongue, don't be alarmed. It is just Sgt. Gaffney and his boys giving out with "Rose of Juarez," aided by "Pop" Espinoza and his gang. The Mainteneers certainly have learned to like Mexican music.

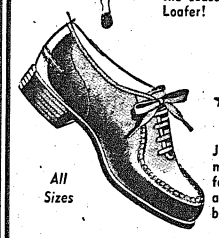
Infantry School Range Officer Is Lt. Colonel

The recent promotion of Lieut. Col. Lewis A. Minichiello has been announced at the Infantry School. He holds the responsible position of range officer which includes all types of construction and maintenance of firing ranges and related problems.

He received his B. S. degree in 1926 from the University of New Hampshire, Durham, New Hampshire. While at the university, he was active in the Rifle Club and a member of the Rifle and Pistol team.

Lieut. Col. Minichiello was first commissioned as a second lieutenant in the reserves in 1926. Upon graduation from the university, he was connected with the United States Forest Service in construction work and later became a company commander in the C. C. C. in the First Corps area.

He was called to active duty on April 22, 1941, in the rank of captain, and served with the 1st Division, 18th Infantry, at Fort Devens, Mass., until he was ordered to attend the Company Commander's course at the Infantry School in June, 1941. Upon completion of this course, Col. Minichiello served for a short time as a company commander and was appointed to this present position in the fall of 1941. In March, 1942, he was promoted to the rank of major.



CAPTAIN LOGAN

Lt. Byrl C. Logan, of the First Student Training regiment was recently promoted to the rank of captain, it was announced by Colonel Thomas R. Gibson, regimental commander. Captain Logan is a graduate of the University of Tennessee where, for four years, he was the outstanding star of that school's basketball and track teams.

Tigers Begin Tough Program

Men To Spend Two Weeks In The Field

The men of the 10th Armored Division last week undertook last week a tough two months training program which will see nearly every man spend two weeks in the field—one in a physical hardening camp and the other in a tactical training camp.

The first camp is the tougher of the two. The schedule begins with a 14-mile hike, ends with one of 25 miles, and contains a daily program from 6 a.m. until 11:30 p.m., with only one half day break.

After breakfast and camp police details, the men begin four one-hour class periods at 8:30 a. m. After an hour for dinner, there are four more hours of classes and one hour of calisthenics. The four hour night schedule resumes at 7:30 p. m. after supper.

Some of the classes are demonstrations or lectures in scouting, patroling, use of the campass, tank ambushing, camouflage, and field-craft. But most of the time is spent in downright physical conditioning.

Every day the Tigers run two obstacle courses which feature rope climbing, hurdling, barbed wire entanglements, seven and nine foot walls—while instructors toss firecrackers near them to accustom them to battle noises. Swimming will come later when the weather becomes warmer.

INFILTRATION COURSE

Most nearly like actual combat is in the infiltration course — a 70-yard stretch of shell holes and barbed wire covered by machine fire only a few feet off the ground. The "Jap-in-the-grass" course requires the men to creep through sloppy underbrush and fire at bobbing targets.

The strength and stamina test has the following requirements: 33 pushups; creep, crawl and run alternately for 75 yards in 20 seconds; sprint 300 yards in 45 seconds; sprint 75 yards carrying a man of the same weight; hike four miles in 50 minutes with full field equipment and arms.

First men to go through the course were the headquarters soldiers—most of them office workers. They represented division headquarters and service companies, 150th Signal Company, 80th Medical Battalion, and Supply Battalion. But they proved they had what it takes by enduring one of the hardest weeks they ever had. There were no serious accidents—only the routine colds, cuts, blisters and bruises.

Provisional Truck Promotes Many

Men recently promoted in the Provisional Truck Regiment and their companies are as follows:

Company "A," First Battalion, from staff sergeant to first sergeant, Clifford Thomas, Cusseta, Ga.; to sergeant in supply—T-5th Harry D. Maul, St. Louis, Mo.; to T-4th—T-5th, George Evans, Salters, S. C.; to corporal, Alvin Hunter, Savannah, Ga.; to corporals, Pvts. Morton Sims, Stephens, Ga.; Benjamin Bennett, Blackshear, Ga.; Eugene Blye, Elba, Ala.; Joe Ben Christian, Almany, Ga.; Jessie Collins and Eddie B. Hill, of Birmingham, and Leon Hill, Hardaway, Ala.

Company "R," Fourth Battalion, announces the promotion of the following: Private Arthur Beasley, Smock, Penn., to corporal and company dispatcher; Private Clarence Green, Ballinger, Texas, to T-5th grade; Pfc. Oscar E. Miller, Ashland, Kentucky, to T-5th grade; and Private Bill Johnson, Tupelo, Miss., to private first class.

The Headquarters Detachment of the Second Battalion has just added Sergeant Stanley E. Rutland, Forsyth, Ga., and in the Regiment Headquarters Detachment, Pvt. Rexford Clark, Chicago, Ill., has been advanced to the grade of corporal.

Marvelous days these not only to make plans but carry them out. Look at the brave and patriotic gardening efforts we see about the post. Most of them will be miniature gardens, but they'll provide many a salad and fresh vegetable in another month or so. Then there are the house freshening plans for those who hope to stay here a while longer. And most exciting of all, planning and buying our spring and summer clothes. They're so pretty and gay. Colors have never been more beautiful than they are this spring. They seem the perfect panacea for a heart lifting emotion during these harassing days.

It doesn't seem anytime since Christmas. One wonders what happens to the days and weeks that fly by so quickly. In their flight we recall the many things we intended to do and never got around to. I personally can count many who confessed they mean to get their picture taken for the folks at home. Their mother has written so many times and said "please" so often. Well, before you know it, we're going to be celebrating that American observance, Mother's Day. It comes on May - you know. While that seems a long way off now, it isn't. A fine photograph takes time. Time for you to make the difficult decision of what picture you'd like out of a number of proofs. Time for the photographer to give it the careful attention that means a perfect portrait. All of which leads us to the conclusion that March 18 isn't too soon to make definite plans to visit AIME DUPONT PHOTOGRAPHERS on Broadway. Your mother will receive the picture of you she's wanted so long, a picture that's caught your nicest personality trait. She'll treasure it more than any gift you can give her, for it's a bit of you.

Wouldn't you think California would be satisfied with producing the largest and finest fruit, flowers and everything else you can think of? the mostest of the bestest must be a habit in that state for they're now supplying the millinery market with some of the most beautiful hats I've seen in years. THE HAT SHOP in KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC., is a veritable garden of hats suggestive of smart loveliness. None of the ridiculous this year. Not a single hat that can be called amusing. They have a specific and definite purpose not only to make you beautiful and feminine, but to give allure to your dresses and suits of simple lines. Flattering are the hats with soft saturn straw, contrasted with skillfully draped and stitched brims of felt, in cartwheel and off the face styles. Artfully fragile in appearance are the white klooney lace straw hats. They remind one of crisp white lace doilys. They come in tiny tri-corn, sailors and pomparoud styles that are unbelievably becoming. Then there's the glistening panama-lac straw. Wonderfully sophisticated that is fashioned into a knowing hat of unquestioned glamor. Completely Hollywood are the Studio Hats made expressly for Warner Brothers stars. This line of stunning hats is exclusive with the Hat Shop.

One of the most popular forms of transportation at Fort Benning with officers and their wives alike is the bicycle. Every morning, noon and night one can see officers pedaling back and forth from the Infantry School to their quarters. During the morning hours the wives are seen bicycling about their errands on the post. They've even been known to go visiting during the late afternoon hours on their bicycles. It may be a patriotic, gas-saving gesture, but it must be fun too, for they all seem to enjoy it. Bicycles are a difficult thing to find these days and will become increasingly so as the months pass. The FIRESTONE STORE at 1246 First avenue has a supply of the new war time bicycles. It has a gay name, Vagabond, and is wonderfully light in weight for convenience in handling. It only weighs 34 pounds. If your gasoline ration doesn't come out even with the distance you have to cover a month, these bicycles are the answer to your wartime transportation. Firestone is a veritable treasure house of hard-to-find articles. They have for instance a complete line of gardening tools. Everything you need, whether it's a garden hose, rake, trowel, shovel or clippers. The famous line of Burpee's Seeds are to be found in this store too.

— — V — —

There are two schools of thought in regard to flowers. Some feel their gardens are for outdoor loveliness. Others want to bring their garden inside in the form of lovely bouquets in their home. The latter look for flowers that bloom endlessly so they're never faced with empty and bleak vases. Nothing is quite so satisfactorily for continuous blooming in Georgia as rose bushes. They bloom in April and continue until nearly Christmas time. When you can have roses available for that length of time, planting rose bushes is a must. J. J. NEWBERRY COMPANY has a stock of two year old rose bushes, guaranteed to bloom this spring, at an astonishing low price. A rose bush won't cost you much more than a packet of seeds. You'll not only be giving yourself pleasure, but the bushes will remain for future families that occupy your quarters for a long time to come. They probably won't know you, but they'll thank you many times for your efforts of beautification. J. J. Newberry Company also has a wonderful assortment of those special sort of plants that transform sun porches into a lovely spot. Plant them in one of the attractive flower pots also found in this store and watch the new leaves grow into trailing vines. You can in fact make a conservatory out of this popular Fort Benning porch from the many choices you'll find in this store.

— — V — —

If you are the type that believes the most you get for nothing is nothing, you'll be interested to know that you can purchase furniture for your home today and the many tomorrows you look forward to after the war. H. ROTHSCHILD, INC., on Broadway have just received a fine shipment of suites of bedroom furniture. Handsome mahogany styled in the 18th century period, this bedroom furniture is a household possession that will indicate the impeccable good taste of the owner. Hepplewhite, Sheraton, Queen Ann Colonial and Colonial are the periods represented in this group. They come in a range of prices, unbelievably reasonable for outstanding quality and design of this handsome furniture. The suits consist of a bed, vanity, bureau, chest and night stand. Besides these fine suites H. Rothschild, Inc., carry open stock bedroom furniture. You can buy the minimum needs and add to your suite at a later date. This firm has a stock of fine mattresses and springs, but they're only sold with the purchase of a bedroom suite. I'm just telling you this to let you know your purchase of bedroom furniture can be complete at this store.

Isn't it nice that we can buy play shoes without ration coupons? That's really a marvelous break, for many of us have worn those wonderfully comfortable shoes for casual wear. They're so beautifully designed many of them can be worn for dressy occasions. MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE STORE has long stressed the place this type of shoe has in your wardrobe. Immediately after the ban was lifted on play shoes they were beseiged with customers and their stock was soon depleted. They will be receiving limited supplies of new play shoes from time to time. This week they received some blue and turf tan Penaljo sandles. Wedge heel of course. They are punched for detail trim and are reminsdful of the barefoot sandle we wore as youngsters, only they're smart grown up versions of this childhood comfort. Another good looking play shoe is the red loafer labelled Easygoers. Colorful highlight they'll be for our summer cottons and brief shorts. You may not be able to get these shoes, but if you're a determined shopper you'll visit Miller-Taylor often until you strike the lucky day when a new supply has just been unpacked. The demand is great, the supply is limited. This store with its strong merchandising contracts will manage to serve us well during these days as they have in the past.

It's a rare woman who doesn't look smart in a suit. In spite of the fact that it has become almost a national costume, the individuality of cut and material keeps it from being a uniform. We've worn them all winter and shopped assiduously for light weight spring suits. Now we're being shown the summer versions of suits. THE PATRICIA GOWN SHOP at Fort Benning and the Ralston Hotel in Columbus have just received a beautiful selection of summer suits. There's a white waffle pique suit with stunning pottery buttons. Here is an outfit so smart you'll wear it for your most important occasions. A stunning hat, smart shoes and a bag and you'll look like next month's issue of Vogue. Best of all, this suit will be as fresh and white at the end of the season as it was in the beginning. Innumerable tubbings and exposure to the sunlight will not damage this fine white material. Another summer suit version is a gingham plaid dress of blue and yellow with a navy butcher linen coat. Another in grey, blue and melon red plaid with a coat of light coffee colored butcher linen. For something truly stunning there's a black faille silk with a fine white check. It's a dressmaker type of suit with a peplum and ornamental buttons. A crisp white jabot of embroidery organdy highlights this fashion find. Cotton suits of black and white pin check, Scotch plaids and Glenn plaids are deceptive for they have the tailoring and appearance of light weight wool.

The real worry these food rationing days is the effect it might have on our families' health. We're all quite willing to master the intricate business of points. We've been such a well-fed nation. We've eaten T-bone steaks at the first of the month, hamburger before payday. It's been a matter of money, not availability of food in our fine markets that decided what the family would eat. Our meals will now be governed by the point system and the national food supply. Medical discoveries of the last few years have given us a wonderful supplementary supply of vitamins. We're going to depend on this discovery for help in our families in first class health. J. A. KIRVEN COMPANY are proud to announce their new supply of Vimms, which contain the precious minerals and vitamin essentials. Vitamins A, C, D and 3 essential B complex, together with vital minerals, phosphorus and iron, are contained in Vimms. You can purchase them in the Toiletries section in a medium size as well as a large family size.

3rd STR O. C. Lifts Battalion Liar Crown

Texan Tells Tall Tales To Take Tricky Title

In the Army we've heard of the barracks liar, the platoon liar, and the company liar but we find in our midst here in the Second Company, Third Student Training Regiment, a Battalion Champion liar.

Candidate Robert R. Tait., Jr., Houston, Tex., won this dubious distinction at Camp Roberts, Cal., where the 84th Infantry Training Battalion held an extemporaneous campfire entertaining contest, while in bivouac ont night. Each of the companies in the battalion selected a representative and the contest narrowed down to Candidate Tait and an enthusiastic native of Minnesota.

By the statement of a few facts about his home state, Texas, the champion reiterated to his audience the manner in which, he, in a few minutes, converted his competitor into a full fledged Texan. Candidate Tait's opponent told proudly of the industries of Minnesota. After listening for some time Candidate Tait started telling of the bigness of Texas and soon convinced his opponent, who was from Duluth, that his home city of Duluth could be neatly placed in the lobby of the Rice Hotel in Houston and that it was without doubt easier to travel farther in an elevator in Houston than on a street car in Duluth and that he'd rather be a lamp-post in Houston than to be the mayor of Duluth!

HOME INDUSTRIES

The soldier from Duluth recapitulated with a long discussion of the industries of his home state to which the Texan replied: "Ranching is one of our many 'chief' industries. Why, if all the hogs in Texas were just one hog, he could dig the Panama Canal in just one root and a grunt. Actually, if all the steers in Texas were just one steer, it would have to be described geographically—it would stand with its right front foot in the Gulf of California; its left front foot in the Gulf of Mexico; its right hind foot in the Bering Strait and its left hind foot in the Bay of Labrador. It could poke holes in the equatorial moon with its horns and rub the mist off the Aurora-borealis with its tail!"

When the gentleman from Duluth mentioned mining and manufacturing the Texan retaliated with facts concerning the agricultural productivity of his state with one or two limitations. For instance, says he, "it's impossible to grow watermelons commercially in Texas for the simple reason that the soil is so allubial that the plant grows so fast that it wears the melons out dragging them over the ground and, for commercial purpose, the cost of individual sleds runs into too much money! As a matter of fact a good deal of the remunerative return from the soil down there comes from planting shingle nails and harvesting two crops of crow bars a year!"

MORE LIES

The contestant from Duluth admitted that he spent four days, on the go, "just passing through Texas." Candidate Tait replied with: "Yeah, once I had the honor of entertaining an elderly couple from Minnesota who had come to Texas to invest their life savings in real estate as a result of the stories they had heard regarding the productivity of the Texas soil. The 'old man' had a wooden leg and to his amazement found that it was necessary for him to carry at all times a small hand axe with which he could keep the sprouts chopped off his hunk of furniture.

"The 'old lady' had a prize pekinese which she kept in a capacity at all times by means of a four-foot leash. One warm afternoon she entered the kitchen in the home of one of the Texas showplaces for a drink of water and a short rest. Upon entering she tied the extreme end of the four-foot leash to the lower limb of a small castor bean bush near the back door She came out in about twenty minutes and choked with horror at the sight of her poor little pekinese dangling in the breeze—he had been hanged."

It required little more to convert the erstwhile native of Duluth into an honest Texan and by retelling the story, Candidate Tait was awarded an "Iron Cross" in recognition of his talent as an outstanding liar.

Nursery School Fees Reduced

Flat Rate of $6 Per Month Assessed

By KATHERINE HAMMARGREN

Reduction of tuition fees for the Fort Benning Nursery school to a flat fee of $6 a month for each child, effective April 1, has been made possible by the success of the benefit bridge held Tuesday in the Officers' club. It is hoped that the small fee will bring an increase in enrollment, thus augmenting the usefulness of the school and freeing more mothers for important war tasks.

The Nursery school, sponsored by the Woman's club, is open to all officers' children of pre-school age. It is held every morning except Sunday from 8:45 to 11:45 a. m. at 601 Madden Avenue under the capable direction of Mrs. Horatio C. Mason, full time supervisor, and a group of volunteer workers.

Children are given a medical inspection twice weekly by a registered nurse, and a ration book for fruit juices is being arranged. Small tots play happily indoors with crayons, paints, and a variety of toys, or outdoors in the sandbox, slide, and jungle gym. This is followed by a short rest period.

Rebates on the tuition fee will be made if a child is out of school for half the month because of illness, if notification of the child's illness has been made. For those wishing to leave their children for only an occasional morning, there is a charge of fifty cents a morning.

Plans are underway for an afternoon session of the school, when arrangements for a supervised playground are completed.

It is also hoped that a piano may be procured, either through a donation or for a reasonable price. At the present time records are played to an enthralled audience during the music period. A system of pooling rides is now being worked out among mothers to avoid too much strain on the family car.

All parents wishing to enroll children may do so by phoning Mrs. W. T. S. Roberts, in charge of finances, at 2755.

3rd STR Unit Is 100% In Bonds, Red Cross Drive

Members of Company "E" of the Service Battalion, Third Student Training Regiment, have signified their determination to be 100 per cent in everything.

During the Class "A" Pay reservation drive for War Bonds the company, commanded by First Lieutenant Jack D. West, subscribed 100 per cent.

Now, during Red Cross War Fund, the entire company has voluntarily contributed and despite the fact that enlisted men are not being asked for pledges or donations, the average was more than a dollar per man.

Lieutenant West who also serves as bond officer, insurance officer, mess officer, supply officer and bond officer to name but a few of his additional duties, now is staging a campaign to reach 100 per cent in insurance for his company.

23 Lieutenants, Second Regiment, Get Silver Bars

Twenty-three lieutenants in the Second Student Training regiment changed their gold bars to silver last week.

The new 1st lieutenants, announced by regimental headquarters, are as follows:

Lts. George W. Allsop, 2nd Co.; Garland D. Anderson, 29th Co.; William C. Andrews, 3rd Co.; Vance M. Caskey, 8th Co.; George W. Duncan, Jr., 9th Co.; Frank H. Fife, 3rd Co.; William N. Flood, 19th Co.; Freeman F. Gage, 11th Co.; Clyde E. Glass, 1st Co.; George J. Hucherson, 20th Co.; Russel C. Lopossa, 29th Co.; David B. Lovejoy, 14th Co.

Lts. Albert S. Madding, 18th Co.; Weldon C. McBride, 18th Co.; Thomas B. Onstott, 14th Co.; William E. Pierce, 12th Co.; John A. Reed, 31st Co.; William J. Scanlon, Jr., 24th Co.; Robert Smith, 13th Co.; Robert L. Stevenson, Jr., 20th Co.; Dalton J. Thibodeaux, 1st Battalion Mess Officer; Jack W. Waggoner, 16th Co.; and Runa S. White, 26th Co.

Lieut. Stern Made Captain

Murray M. Stern, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Stern of New York, received his captain's bars recently according to a release made known by Colonel Thomas R. Gibson, commanding officer of the First Student Training Regiment.

Captain Stern, former vice-president and sales manager of Stern Brothers Manufacturing Co., New York City, is a graduate of New York University and Harvard Graduate School of Business Administrations. Captain Stern first joined the army in January 1942 as a private and rose through the ranks until, as a sergeant, he was selected to attend Officer Candidate School.

Winners

If O. C. Agies Mihalakis of the 4th Co., 3rd STR and O. C. Frank Micossi of the 30th Co., 9rd STR will call at the Public Relations Office in Post Headquarters, they may claim their $2 checks as prize money for the best original contributions published in the last issue of the Bayonet.

Mihalakis won the best original writing prize for his editorial titled "I Am The Sergeant of My Laigs, Suh!" and Micossi led the field of poetry contributions with "The Doughboy's Creed."

Each week the Bayonet awards a $2 prize to the contributors of the best original pieces of writing, poetry and cartooning.

STARTLING NEWS to the effect that "Sgt. A. E. Skillin, Co. L, had a baby" struck the 124th Infantry recently, but it turned out that one of Uncle Sam's new 18-year-old warriors had arrived. The youngster, Pvt. John B. Grimes of Pittsburgh, Pa., is five feet four inches tall and weighs 109 pounds. He was promptly taken under the spacious wing of Sgt. Skillin, of Sarasota, Fla., who tips the scales at 225 pounds and stands six feet two. The pair is shown above at bayonet practice.

Original Answer Man Has Fun With GT's

Before he entered the Army, Candidate Ralph E. Jones, Jr., of the Seventh Company, Third Student Training Regiment, was an "answer man", a position worthy of respect in these days, especially in view of the fact Jones' job was in the nation's capital.

In the busy office of the War Production Board, Jones was known as a "supervisor reviewer" and as such was required to answer questions raised by wartime conditions and dispatched to Washington by letter and telegram.

Among the knottier problems Jones was called upon to solve was a query from an Iowa housewife as to whether Mr. Donald Nelson could arrange for her to exchange a set of double-bed springs for a single-bed spring. A southern spinster wrote in excitedly that in concocting an experimental mixture for an asthma cure, she discovered the substance stuck to the spoon. She concluded, elatedly, that she had stumbled upon a substitute for rubber.

Jones holds A.B. and LL.B. degrees from George Washington University. For about 10 years he was associated with the FBI identification division.

7 DEML Soldiers Get Advancements

Seven enlisted men of Headquarters Detachment, D. E. M. L., Fourth Service Command, have been promoted upon recommendation of the detachment commander, according to an announcement from post headquarters.

Major Bynum Commands Second Battalion, 2nd STR

Maj. Hartwell T. Bynum last week took command of the Second Student Training Regiment succeeding Lt. Col. Herbert F. McG. Matthews.

Major Bynum has been Investigating Officer of the Regiment for the past eight months. He originally received his commission from the ranks in the last World War, and was recalled to active duty as a Reserve Officer in October of 1941.

After graduating from basic class he commanded 7th Company, Maj. Lester E. Winslow succeeds him as Investigating Officer.

Melo Starts Summer Run On March 26

Two Benning Soldiers In 'Drunkard's' Cast, Civic Production

Two Fort Benning soldiers will have parts in the production of "The Drunkard" by the Columbus Civic Theater opening March 26 and 27 and continuing each week end during the summer.

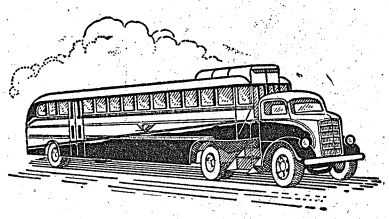
They are Pvt. Julian Rawlings, former Atlanta radio man and actor and Pvt. Jack Nielsen, Muskegon, Mich., now both of Company K, First Parachute Training Regiment.

Private Rawlings played the part of Edward Middleton, the young man who is led astray by the wiles of the villain, aided by a bottle, with the Atlanta Civic Theater group last summer. He will alternate in playing the same role in Columbus.

The play was written nearly 100 years ago as a serious drama but now is performed in the "ham" style of the '90's with the villain being hissed, advice coming from the audience, and everybody generally having a lot of fun at a production of the show.

Private Nielsen has the role of a boy who helps track down the villain at the end of the play.

The show will be presented Fridays and Saturdays at the Chase Conservatory, 220 Tenth street, in Columbus.



Undefeated in three dual meets this season, Cadet Johnny Doolittle of the U. S. Military Academy's boxing team's middleweight class. Shows good promise of emulating the lead of his famous father, Maj. Gen. "Jimmy".

The Army's loss of Leo Durocher is Flatbushmen's gain. The Brooklyn Dodgers' manager was rejected recently because of a pierced ear drum, and will start the coming esason a shortstop.

ASK the ski trooper why he welcomes ice-cold Coca-Cola. He will tell you what every ski enthusiast knows. Few things can make you thirstier than skiing. The dry cold, the exertion, the altitude do it. Experienced skiers know that Coca-Cola is the perfect refreshment after a ski run.

Coca-Cola not only quenches thirst. It adds refreshment that goes into energy. It is refreshment that tastes good, feels good, is good. Coca-Cola is made with choicest ingredients put together with a finished art.

Each time you raise an ice-cold Coca-Cola to your lips, you'll agree that the only thing like Coca-Cola is Coca-Cola, itself.

Even with war and so many Coca-Cola bottling plants in enemy-occupied countries, our fighting men are delighted to find Coca-Cola being bottled in so many places all over the globe.

After battling slopes and snow, who wouldn't welcome the pause that refreshes at the end of the trail? Ski troopers do. So would anybody else.

Even with snow and ice outdoors, it's summertime indoors. Ice-cold Coca-Cola is the year 'round answer to thirst that everybody welcomes.

Sunday A. M. 'Phone Queue Is A Benning Phenomenon

'Mother Bell' Gives Candidates Hardy Training In Self-Discipline

List among Fort Benning's more interesting local phenomena the Sunday morning queue for telephones.

Here's the line nobody dares buck. This is the formation that needs no controlling command. Here the stony stares of public opinion would subdue the boldest bus or barber shop cheat.

Time was when an officer candidate could move to the phone booths an hour before breakfast, confident that he'd have the field to himself. But like the inside tip on the long-shot that circulated too soon before race time, everyone has learned the trick. Now the congestion is as fierce at dawn as in the afternoon.

First come the early birds. They arrive at 0630, unshaven and hoarse, complete their calls in jig time, then wonder if it was worth it. Their conversations run something like this:

MAWNIN', HONEY

"Good morning, honey . . . you sound sleepy . . . well, of course it's still dark in Indianapolis. It is here, too. How else did you think I'd get through to you? Now wake up and try to get this. My birth certificate is in the back of my cheque book in the middle desk drawer. I've got to have it by the end of the week. Send it air mail. (He repeats the directions several times, get off some small talk.) Well, good-bye, honey. Maybe next week I'd better call a little later."

By 0800 the formation has grown to a healthy column of twos —one file of those with calls already placed, the other of those waiting to move to the firing line. The campers have begun to appear.

CARRY LUNCH

These hoary, battlewise veterans know they won't be finished in time to return for breakfast, but they're prepared. In one hand they carry a box of cookies and an orange, in the other writing paper, a couple of old GT's and the new "Life." An all-morning booth-side bivouac won't bother them.

Behind the folding doors sounds the muffled murmur of voices pleading with invisible operators. "Make it collect . . . No, Spokane, Washington, not Washington, D. C. The home phone is Bangor seven, eight, three, two . . . You say there'll be a one to two hour wait? . . . Just a minute till I get some change."

The bell rings in the end booth and the door swings open.

"Is there a Jenkins calling Flint, Mich.? Well, soldier she says the line's busy. Better cancel it, hadn't you?" the harried man in the booth suggests hopefully.

The man with the completed call is generally too addled and exhausted to remember what he meant to say. The wolves outside the door make him feel that he shouldn't take time to say it even if he should find the words.

"Mother Bell"—the name telephone company workers reserve for their employer—must chuckle to herself when she realizes the tactical training, the combat hardihood and the self-discipline her services have unwittingly imposed upon the future officers of the Army of the United States.

NEW CAPTAINS

Promotions of First Lieuts. Elmo R. Struth, commanding officer of Co. M, 300th Anfantry and Alex Buckman, Jr., personnel adjutant of the 300th, to the rank of captain has been announced by Col. R. G. McKee, the 300th's commanding officer.

Captain Buckman is a native of Capels, W. Va., while Captain Struth's home is in Starke, Fla.

3rd STR Unit Boasts Young Top Sergeant

Youngest first sergeant in the Service Battalion of the Third Student Training regiment is 23-year-old Edward A. Mencer, who holds that rank in Company B.

Sergeant Mencer enlisted in the Regular Army September 6, 1938, and served in the 24th Infantry regiment until April, 1942, when he was transferred to his present station. His experience has proved valuable to members of the company which has a record of fewer infractions of rules per man than any company in the battalion.

Foreign News Specialist Is TIS Student

Osborne Covered Spanish Civil War For Newsweek

A preview of this war was witnessed in Spain by Candidate Walter D. Osborne of the 17th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, as a specialist in the gathering and interpretation of foreign news. He was in Spain at the outbreak of the civil war, experienced several bombings from the air and was evacuated by the H. M. S. Repulse, which several years later was to go down in the Straits of Ualacca after an attack by Japanese torpedo planes.

A native of Orange, N. J., Osborne studied Latin-American history and politics at the University of Mexico and developed a fluent Spanish. He joined the staff of Newsweek in 1938 as a specialist in the foreign affairs department.

Osborne was a member of the Seventh Regiment, New York National Guard when that famous organization was federalized in 1941. In December, 1942, he came to Fort Benning and is scheduled to be commissioned an Infantry lieutenant in March.

War Veteran Joins Tigers

Sherrod Participated In Six Battles Against Franco

"Our soldiers must be made to see clearly that an Allied victory in the war against the Axis is of the utmost importance, and that America's democratic principles and her ways of life must be preserved at all costs."

These emphatic words were spoken by an American soldier who has seen action, and lots of it, in the Spanish Civil War. He is T-5 Richard M. Sherod of the 11th Armored Regiment, 10th Armored Division.

Corporal Sherod's hatred of totalitarianism became so strong that he volunteered to fight on the Loyalist side during the Spanish Civil War. As a member of the International Brigade, he participated in six battles. Thrice wounded, he finally was sent home by the Spanish government late in 1938.

Sherod left New York on the Isle de France in February, 1937, stopping first at Havre, France. In Spain he joined an organization comprised of French, Italian, Austrian, Polish, German, English, American, and Canadian volunteers who championed the Spanish Republican cause.

Sherod took part in batiles in Madrid, Quinto Belchite, Fuentes de Ebro, Teruel the Fascist breakthrough to the sea, and Ebro. He was wounded in the first, second, and last engagements. He left Spain with a rank equivalent to equivalent to that of a platoon sergeant in the American Army.

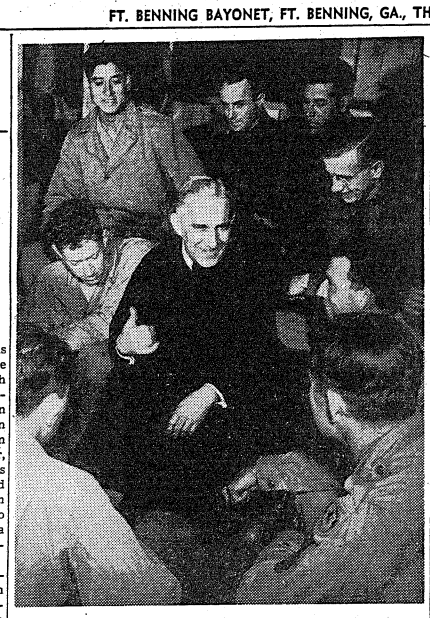
TIPS FOR VICTORY

After his experience, he has the following tips for American soldiers:

1. Have no fear that you will not be able to give a good account of yourself in your first fight.
2. Do not worry too much about your present military status. Actual battle is the acid test for leadership.
3. Get in excellent physical condition.
4. Learn the characteristics of friendly and enemy vehicles and planes.
5. Make the most of your training in night maneuvers and patrol work.
6. Master infiltration tactics.
7. Become proficient in the art of fire distribution, and in the throwing of grenades.

In conclusion, Corporal Sherod said:

"The American enlisted man must be more than an expert soldier. He must have a fighting heart and a team spirit which will crush the Axis into oblivion."



Cinema Falsifies South Sea Isles, Candidate Says

Flowers, fruit, saronged beauties and romantic adventure do not abound on Pacific tropical islands, despite scenario writers' presentations, according to Candidate John J. Yurcheyk of the 29th Company, Third Student Training Regiment.

Instead, says Candidate Yurcheyk, who spent 10 months on a Pacific isle as sergeant in control of establishing beach defense, one is likely to encounter almost unbearable heat, typhoons and a lack of vegetation and fresh water.

His group, moreover, had to live on part rations because the supply ship ran aground in a typhoon, losing half its stores. An unbroken alert was maintained, the soldiers several times sighting Jap observation planes and being shelled by a Jap submarine, one of which was sunk in sight of shore.

Yurcheyk suffered a broken ankle while unloading a supply ship but merely charges the injury up to experience. He came to Fort Benning via Fort McDowell and Camp Wolters.

Going Overseas, Buddy? Here's Your Must List

Knives, Waxed Twine, Glue, Several Pipes Are Necessities

Valuable advise on what to take with you and what to leave at home when you go into combat is contained in a letter received recently by Officer Candidate Gordon E. Randall of the 29th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, from a young infantry soldier in New Guinea.

The soldier counsels young officers about to be shipped abroad never to go into a fight without carrying a Boy Scout knife. "Two would be better," the letter adds. "The can opener itself is worth the price and the rest of the blades and gadgets can be put to good use."

A "million uses" will be found, moreover, for a ball of twine, preferably the waxed mining variety, the letter continues. The twine should be carefully conserved and cutting of lengths for the sake of neatness should be avoided.

NO FANCY PAPER

It is suggested that pipe smokers take two or three pipes and a supply of cleaners and to purchase tobacco in one-pound tins for the cans will be found usable after the contents are exhausted. A bottle of liquid glue will serve to replace the mucilage on personal envelopes ruined by the weather. Fancy stationery boxes are "out" because of their bulk.

The New Guinea veteran further states the combat officer ought to procure a good mirror of glass with a wood frame and back. Toilet kits with a smooth leather finish are preferred to those of rough leather because the latter will mold in the cracks. If he knows how to use them, the officer will be better off with a couple of straight razors. Otherwise he should lay in a good supply of blades.

DON'T OVERLOAD

Officers, however, should not overload themselves with personal articles. "Excess equipment," the soldier. correspondent concludes, "may dangerously hamper your efficiency and that of the men under you. On the other hand it's just about as bad to try to get by without the necessities. Think twice every time you start to put in something your wife wants to add to the pile."

Ex-Swiss Soldier Says Inspections Were Humdingers

If you think the U. S. Army is rigid in its inspections, have a little talk with Walter Tobler of the Third Company, Third Student Training Regiment, who was born in Switzerland and served in the Swiss Army.

Tobler took his compulsory 13 weeks' training in the Swiss Army in 1935 and, according to him, an inspection there is a major operation. "They even turn your pockets inside out," he reveals, "and if there's a particle of dirt or accumulated thread or anything at all, it's a gig." Penalty for this offense usually is a week-end restriction, followed by another inspection.

The candidate is known to his barracks mates as the "Eiger Steiger," "Eiger" being a mountain and "steiger" meaning "climber." He came to this country in 1937 and after entering the Army in January, 1941, was assigned, appropriately, to the 87th Mountain Infantry.

O. C. Served As British Army Officer

Says 1918 Training More Leisurely Than Intensive TIS Course

Officer Candidate Schools are an old story to Candidate Edward Scott, who is completing his course in the 23rd Company, Third Student Training Regiment, learning not so much how to be an officer as how to become an officer in the new American Army.

For Scott already is a graduate of one Officer Candidate School, having been commissioned a second lieutenant in the British Army in 1918. He enlisted as a private in the British Army when he was 18 and received the usual 12 weeks of basic training as an enlisted man.

In the early part of the World War, the British Army commissioned its officers in the field or accepted them green from the universities. By the time Scott was in the service, however, the Officer Cadet Battalion had been organized and these became the chief source of officers before the end of the war.

20-WEEK COURSE

Scott recalls the course covered about 20 weeks and instruction was somewhat leisurely, certainly less intensive than the work he is doing here. This difference is mainly due to the different conditions attending the two wars but there is no doubt that the Benning method is superior for turning out large numbers of qualified officers quickly, Scott says.

Examinations in the British version of the OCS, Scott revealed, were designed to determine a man's general grasp of the subject rather than his ability to absorb key information and principles rapidly.

Scott's commission came through a month after the Armistice and he went on to Cambridge University to take his degree and then taught English for the next decade in an English preparatory school. For the past 10 years he has taught the same subject at Phillips—Exeter Academy in New Hampshire. After becoming an American Citizen, Scott determined to know all about his adopted country and traveled in each of the 48 states.

Co. D., 3rd STR, Service Battalion, Promotes 20

Twenty promotions among the enlisted personnel of Company D, Serving Battalion, Third student Training Regiment, were approved recently by the regimental commander, Col. R. H. Lord. The advancements were as follows:

To staff sergeant—Technician, Fourth Grade, Sherman Spiller Jr. and Technician, Fifth Grade, William J. Smith.

Infantry School Problems, Paratroops Armored Division Viewed Yesterday

Dapper and buoyant Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, accompanied by General George C. Marshall, American Chief of Staff, and Field Marshal Sir John Dill, yesterday toured Fort Benning witnessing demonstrations and chatting with every soldier he had a chance to meet.

After watching an Infantry school demonstration, Mr. Eden arose and faced a class of 200 officer candidates and said: "I want you to know that you should be proud because you are training to lead American soldiers. There is no higher or bigger job. Our folks at home in England are with you. We're proud to be with you and we'll see the war through to victory."

General Marshall also addressed the class, asserting that reports coming back from Tunisia reflected credit on the Infantry school for the training it had given the officers. Sir John, chief of the British joint staff mission in the U. S., then spoke and said that he had been "tremendously impressed" after what he had seen.

ARRIVE TUESDAY

The military might of the army's famed training center was on display for the distinguished guests. Arriving at Lawson field Tuesday night by army transport plane, the visitors were met by Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of the Infantry School, who was host to the guests.

Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, assistant commandant, accompanied the party. Wednesday the party toured the several areas of the reservation, viewing troops in combat training, and left for an unannounced destination about noon.

Accompanying the group were Lieut. Col. Frank McCarthy, assistant secretary of the General Staff, Captain Reginald Winn, aide to Sir John Dill, Maj. N. M. Pascie, also an assistant secretary to the General Staff, Maj. H. C. Munson, pilot, and First Lieut. Joseph C. Barron, co-pilot.

Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, toured the post with the guests.

The visit to Fort Benning by Mr. Eden highlights a tour of army posts and training centers which the British emissary is making with Sir John Dill and General Marshall. Mr. Eden has been in the United States for several days, during which time he has conferred with President Roosevelt and other high-ranking government leaders on the prosecution of the war and post-war plans.

General Marshall, who was assistant commandant of the Infantry school from 1927 to 1932, has been a visitor here on several occasions.

Before visiting Fort Benning, the party inspected Maxwell field in Montgomery, Ala., Tuesday. The trip to Maxwell field coincided with the 33rd birthday of that training center where Orville Wright flew with one of his first clumsy planes.

The tour started in the morning at the Parachute school where Brig. Gen. George P. Howell, commandant; Col. Garland Williams, assistant commandant; and Major Alton R. Taylor, executive officer to Colonel Williams, showed the party around.

Mr. Eden, on one occasion, left the party, jumped up onto a training platform and began asking Private William McHugh, a student from Detroit, Mich., questions. Afterwards, McHugh was so excited that he had difficulty in spelling his name for the visiting cameramen.

Mr. Eden was obviously interested in everything he saw all through the tour and, on several occasions, General Marshall had to hurry him along as the party was adhering to a strict time schedule.

General Marshall, true to his custom, asked to see Master Sergeant Thomas Tweed, a veteran game warden at the post, and a personal friend of his since 1926. The two, in former years, hunted together and, as General Marshall prepared to board the plane leaving Benning, Sergeant Tweed presented him with a wild turkey.

From the parachute area, the visitors were escorted to Holliday Hill to witness an officer candidate class in combat firing during which machineguns and rifles were fired over the heads of advancing troops.

Mr. Eden, Sir John, and General Marshall then were escorted to the Wood Road area where they saw another group of officer candidates learning proper methods of combat patrol. In this class, the students were taught proper action for small patrols to drive enemy snipers from trees, foliage, or buildings, to force enemy troops out of slit trench emplacements, and to clean up enemy resistance in a village.

This was the first time Mr. Eden has visited the Infantry School, but it was a return trip for Sir John Dill and General Marshall. Sir John made a brief visit here last summer in company with General Marshall, Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mounbatten,

Post Red Cross Gifts Pace Nation

$33,000 Tops All Military Stations

With contributions still coming in, Fort Benning today led all military stations with its subscriptions to the Red Cross War Fund, according to a congratulatory telegram from Frank Grayson, director of the Military and Naval Welfare service of the American Red Cross.

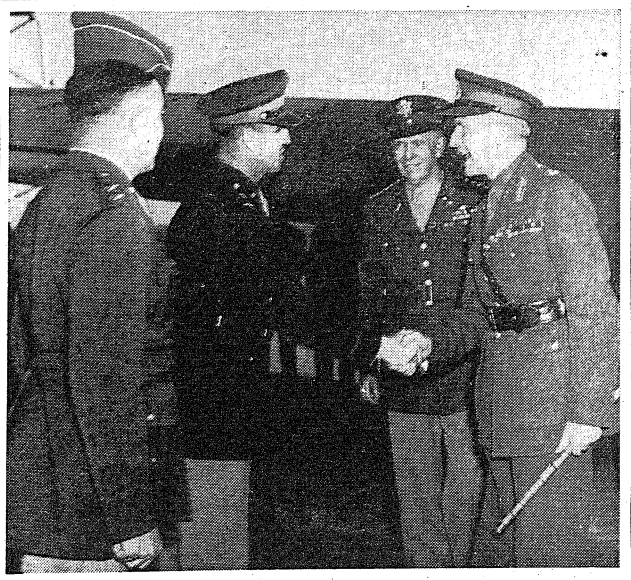
So far $33,000 has been contributed by officers, enlisted men and civilian employes on the post, Mrs. Walter S. Fulton, chairman of the auxiliary, reported, and several organizations on the post have not yet reported.

"On the basis of War Fund reports from military stations to date, Fort Benning heads the list," Mr. Grayson said in his telegram to Eugene Bussey, field director of the Red Cross at Fort Benning. "Congratulations and thanks to the military and civilian personnel for this splendid showing."

ENLISTEES GIVE

Although enlisted men were not asked to contribute, thousands of soldiers at Fort Benning dropped coins into the boxes that were placed in theaters, exchanges, service clubs and other spots through the entire post.

"We hope still to get in considerably more from the various units that have not yet reported, so that our total will continue to lead the other camps," Mrs. Fulton said today. "Everybody who worked on the campaign is to be highly congratulated and we all desire to express our deep sense of gratitude for the splendid response made on such a voluntary basis by the personnel of Fort Benning.



"Many organizations reported that 100 per cent of their officers and enlisted men had subscribed to the Red Cross War Fund.

SOURCE OF PRIDE

"Even if we had not established a record that put us in the lead we would well be very proud of the excellent response. I want to express heartiest thanks to everybody who gave to the Red Cross."

DEVERS PRESENT

Lt. General Jacob L. Devers, commander of the Armored Forces, arrived Wednesday and joined General Marshall, Mr. Eden, and Sir John Dill in inspecting Tenth Armored activities.

Eden Praises Troops In Action; Visit Here Highlights Mission

British Secretary, F. D. R. Talk On Problems of War and Peace

Anthony Eden's inspection of the military might of Fort Benning is an important highlight of the British Foreign Secretary's visit to this country. Coming to the United States a few weeks ago, Mr. Eden launched official conversations with President Roosevelt and high-ranking government leaders on problems of war and the peace.

Observers in Washington point out that Mr. Eden's trip to this country is occasioned by further moves for a unification of the war effort, particularly in the political and economic fields.

During a recent press conference in Washington, Mr. Eden heralded the "gallant victories of the British Eighth Army in Africa and "the loyal comradeship of your forces and ours in Tunisia." The British diplomat lauded the trusted leadership of General Dwight D. Eisenhower who is directing the North African campaign. General Eisenhower, as well as most other ranking Army officers of the United States, is an alumnus of Fort Benning, the Army's University.

General Eisenhower was assigned to the 24th Infantry from 1926 to 1927 when that unit was at the post. At that time General Eisenhower was a major. Upon completing his tour of duty with the 24th, which has since been moved to a theater of operations, he was assigned to duty in Washington.

'FEEL OUR STRENGTH'

"We are beginning to feel our strength," Mr. Eden told the press conference, "and make the enemy feel it, too." Since that observation in Washington, the Allied forces in North Africa have commenced routing the Axis in southern Tunisia, with Lieut. Gen. George Patton's American forces and General Bernard Montgom-

Simplicity Marks Chief's Return to Infantry School Where He Served 1927-32

As Ass't Commandant, Gen. Marshall Received Commendation for Work

The absence of pomp and ceremonies yesterday marked the wartime visit of the Army's Chief of Staff, General George C. Marshall, to Fort Benning.

General Marshall, who has frequently been mentioned as a probable selection as supreme commander of the Allied Nations, formerly was assistant commandant of The Infantry School at Fort Benning from the early summer of 1927 until the middle of 1932, when he left for the Eighth Infantry at Fort Screven, Ga.

General Marshall assumed the position of Chief of Staff on April 27, 1939, when he succeeded General Malin Craig. The elevation of General Marshall to his present assignment upset military precedent when President Roosevelt upped a brigadier general to four-star status in 1939.

LEADING ROLE

The choice of the 58-year-old Pennsylvanian as Chief of Staff was immediately linked with administration plans for solidarity of defense in the Western Hemisphere. Since that time, General Marshall has not only played a leading role in preparing the Western Hemisphere for total war but also has directed American forces throughout the war in several battlefronts.

At the termination of his assignment as assistant commandant of The Infantry School in 1932, General Marshall was commended by Major General Campbell King, the Commandant at the time, who heralded the uniformly superior manner in which Marshall performed his duties.

PRAISED BY KING

"For the past four years and seven months," General King wrote, "you have served as assistant commandant, The Infantry School, in direct charge of the Academic Department. The value of your services to The Infantry School cannot be overestimated. By your clear thinking and far-sighted policies; by your indefatigable efforts and knowledge you have improved the teaching methods of this school to the point where they are not surpassed in any other service school. The value of your work is recognized throughout the infantry. Your able handling of the school proper has been of inestimable value to the service at large and has been indicative of the reputation you have long enjoyed as one of the Army's ablest and most brilliant officers."

General Marshall, a veteran of World War I, was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious service during World War I, and in addition was decorated by several of the Allied Nations.

While stationed at Fort Benning, General Marshall was married to Mrs. Katherina Tupper Brown of Fire Island, Maine, who was a frequent visitor to Columbus.

World War I Veteran Is Flight Chief At Lawson

Sgt. Swift Gassed, Wounded; Decorated By U. S., France

Tech Sergeant Herbert W. Swift, veteran of World War I, is now performing his duties as flight chief with the 32nd Troop Carrier Squadron at Lawson Field.

He enlisted in World War 1 at the age of 15 in 1915 in Indianapolis, Ind., and received his recruit training at Columbus Barrack, O., now known as Fort Hayes, the headquarter of the Fifth Service Command. Later he was assigned to the Fifth Artillery, Fort Sill, Oklahoma and was sent to the Mexican border when Pancho Villa was on the rampage.

When World War 1 was declared, he was sent to France with the First Division, was made first sergeant at the age of 17 during the first engagement of Battery F when the previous first sergeant was missing in action.

He was gassed July 14, 1918, when the Germans were making the big drive on Paris, and was wounded October 3, 1918, in the battle at Meuse-Argonne. Later he served with the Army of Occupation and was transferred to Battery F, 18th Field Artillery, and stationed at Coblentz, Germany, until relieved in the summer of 1919.

The five major engagements in which he participated are the Chateau-Thierry, Aisne-Marne,

Proud Soldiers Pilot Sedans For Visitors

Cpl. Yanes Ozbolt, Eva, Ala., and Sgt. Amon Respress, Crestville, Fla., both of Company A, Academic Regiment, were two proud soldiers Wednesday. Ozbolt drove the car conveying Anthony Eden and General Leven C. Allen on the tour of the post, while Respress piloted General Marshall and Sir John Dill.

Huns Talked International Goodwill Backed by Guns

Exchange Student Relates Experiences In Nazi Germany

If Candidate Alfred N. Briggs, Jr., 18th Company of the 1st Student Training Regiment, ever has the opportunity so many American soldiers are seeking—to enter Berlin in pursuit of one A. Hitler—it will be his second chance to greet that not-so-illustrious leader of the German people. For back in 1937, as an American exchange student in Germany, Briggs was introduced to and shook hands with Hitler at a luncheon given for the students.

Right now, of course, Briggs has to answer to his barracks mates as to why he didn't attempt to apply some Judo to Der Fuehrer when he had him in hand. "You can imagine how impossible that would have been," Briggs explained. Hitler was always well protected from any attempts on his life. Oddly enough the theme of this luncheon I attended was good will between nations, but there were so many S. S. men on guard with sub-machine guns, you would have wondered how they intended to promote such international understanding. That dining hall was more than well guarded all the time Hitler was present."

STUDENT GROUP

As a boy of 17, Briggs was able to enter Germany as a member of a student group, through an international experiment in foreign living worked out by the Putney school, Vt. Briggs' home is in Cambridge, Mass., and after 3 years study of the German language, he went to that country to learn more intimately of the home life and customs. Staying in private homes allowed him to be tutored in practical sense and, as he puts it, "if we didn't learn to talk just as the family did, it meant we were liable to go hungry."

The luncheon at which Briggs met the Reich Chancellor was held in Nuremberg and 250 students from many countries attended. Ironically enough, students were present from Czechoslovakia and Austria also, despite the fact that amity between their lands and Germany was being destroyed at the time.

A celebration and event that Briggs will never forget was the week he spent in Munich during which time Hitler visited this historical city. The towns people really outdid themselves for this gala occasion; every street was decorated with buntings of 9 different colors. Small Nazi flags flew from all windows. Nazi soldiers, with their parades and bands, crowded the streets.

HITLER TOWERS OVER PEOPLE

"When I heard Hitler speak before a huge crowd at the Deutches Museum during this week in Munich," Briggs said, "I was able to understand why his oratory stood him in such good stead in his rise to power. He stood high above everyone else on an impressive rostrum with spotlights playing upon him and before a background of spangled swastikas. Although only a small part of the audience understood what he was saying, as he speaks a very low German dialect, he soon had the entire audience in his complete control.

"He would deliver a few phrases of garbled German, accompanied by some frenzied gyrations, then dramatically pause. The people would go wild—they would stand by their seats, cheer as loudly as they could, and shout 'Heil Hitler!' What he said meant little to them but his acting and the elaborate setting mastered their emotions and brought them to a point of fanaticism. It was just such speeches, plus his flare for the dramatic, that brought Hitler so swiftly to power and complete control over the Germans."

VISITS VIENNA

Although he was abroad for only three months, Briggs had the chance to visit Vienna and many other cities in Austria. Because he happened to be in that country, his stay abroad was cut short, for it was late in the summer of 1937 and things were beginning to get warm there. The American consul suggested that students from all countries leave and go back home, and it wasn't long after that that the German army moved in and took Austria over for Der Fuehrer. Briggs recalls today how poverty-stricken the Austrian people were at that time, and how they felt becoming a part of Germany would be their salvation.

"By also staying in a "Jugendherbergers"—a Hitler Youth Hostel—I got a pretty good insight as to how the German youth was influenced continually by the Germany army," Briggs pointed out. "Young boys were given military training from the time they were able to hold a gun, and their sole ambition was to fight for their leader and bring greater glory to the Fatherland."

Mountain climbing and skiing have always been hobbies of Briggs, and even at the age of 17 he climbed the highest peaks of the Tyrol while in Austria. These included the Gross Glockner and the Wiesbachorn. In America Briggs has taken part in many ski events in the New England states and before entering the Army managed a hotel for skiers in New Hampshire.

SOS Given New Name

Unit Now Known As Army Service Forces

Simultaneous with an announcement that SOS—Services of Supply—now is to be called the ASF, for Army Service Forces, Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, ASF commanding general, has sent letters of commendation in which he reviewed the accomplishment of the SOS during the past year to the commanding generals of all posts, Brigadier Gen. Walter S. Fulton, Post commander, announced today.

General Fulton, in distributing copies of the letter from General Somervell, expressed his appreciation to all concerned for their "loyal services which have contributed to the great accomplishments of the Services of Supply.'

The change in name of the Service of Supply to the Army Service forces brings the Army administration under the three forces, the Army Ground Forces, the Army Air Forces and the Army Service Forces. The SOS was created a year ago when the War Department General Staff was reduced in size from approximately 500 to 98 officers.

REVIEWS YEAR

In his letter reviewing the past year and the work of the SOS, General Somervell said, "In twelve short months we created one of the largest organizations ever conceived by man; we staffed it completely, set immense objectives, and met those objectives. The first phase of our job has been accomplished with great credit to our organization. The second phase will be accomplished."

"In our first year we procured $17,000,000,000 worth of supplies and equipment; . . . we inducted, classified and assigned more than 4,000,000 men, fed them adequately, clothed and housed them, kept them well. We constructed $6,-000,000,000 worth of military facilities, transported 1,000,000 men and 14,000,000 tons of supplies overseas, we set up an administrative organization for the largest Army in history and made that organization work," General Somervell stated.

In commendation of members of the SOS, he said, "To the military and civilian personnel of SOS I say: 'Well done!"

Music Merchants Seek Old Records

Local Columbus music merchants are urging post soldiers to sell their old recordings, so that these may be salvaged to make new music discs. Used recordings are worth three cents, and parts and broken discs are valued at two cents each.

It is not as yet compulsory that an old record be turned in when a new one is purchased, but there is a very definite shortage of recording materials. Voluntary help on the part of all military personnel may alleviate the situation.

Children's Hobby Show Scheduled

Fort Benning children interested in collections as a hobby are urged to start getting ready for the annual hobby show, to be held in conjunction with the Benning P.-T. A. meeting April 1 at 8 p. m. in the Children's school. Prizes of war stamps will be given for the best collections.

Army children, with their wide range of interests and their jumps from one army post to another, are expected to produce a great variety of interesting collections. Scrapbooks, dolls, drawing and handcraft, soldier collections, airplanes, insignia, match covers, nature collections, tokens and coins, are a few of the many things picked up during their travels and expected to be presented at the show.

Mrs. Leven C. Allen, Mrs. George P. Howell and Col. Harry N. Burkhalter have graciously consented t ojudge the exhibits.

New Anti-Tank Record Made

8th Company, 3rd STR, Qualifies 91 Per Cent

Eighth Company of the Third Student Training Regiment last week set a new record in qualifying 91.2 per cent of its men in 1,000-inch range firing with the 37-mm. anti-tank gun. This was 15 per cent above the average of recent classes.

The 37-mm. which spells trouble for many an OCS student, proved easy for Capt. William T. McClure's men, who proceeded to break subsidiary records in a wholesale fashion. As an example, 44.8 per cent of the class fired expert—compared to 21.7 per cent in recent classes.

Exactly 25 per cent fired first class gunner; 21.4 per cent fired second class gunner; and only 8.8 per cent failed to qualify, as compared with 23.8 per cent in recent classes.

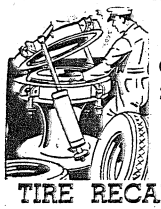
On the field firing range, using service ammunition, the class proved it did not fear the noise, muzzle blast or recoil. Here 29.5 per cent of all shells fired were hits, contrasted to an average of 24.8 per cent in recent classes. Likewise, on 30-caliber field firing, 37.4 per cent hits were scored, compared with 28.8 per cent in recent classes.

Highest scores on the 1,000-inch range were fired by Candidates T. A. Johnson and Charles Luke, each of whom achieved 190. A dozen candidates fired 175 or better.

Recons Go 100% For War Bond Pay Allotments

Personnel of the 90th Reconnaissance Battalion 10th Armored Division, last month continued to be the only unit in the division which is 100 per cent on pay deductions for war bonds, the report of Lt. Eugene B. Dockery, battalion bond officer, showed today.

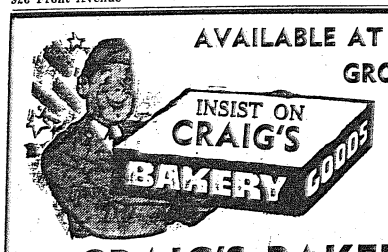
The Recons became the first unit to become "perfect" in January. Pay deductions during February amounted to $5,077.15. The men also made $575.00 in cash purchases last month.



2nd STR Unit Spring Dance Slated April 8

Headquarters Company in the Second Student Training Regiment will celebrate the coming of Spring in a big way with a dance to be held at the Sports Arena in the Harmony Church area on Thursday evening, April 8.

Music will be by the Leaders' 12-piece band, and the Military Maids of Columbus will act as hostesses. Things will get going about 8:30 p. m.



Men in Headquarters Company of the Second Regiment are invited to bring their wives or girl friends, or to come as stags. Arrangements for the dance are being made by Capt. Henry R. Callahan, company commander, who promises a gala evening.

Hospital Allergy Clinic In Constant Battle Against Asthma, Hayfever

Hyper-Sensitivity Causes Soldiers Misery, Army Loss In Man Hours

Maj. Marion T. Davidson, chief of the Allergy section at the Station Hospital, objected to plans for putting a composition floor covering on the floor of his clinic on the grounds it might cause asthma or hay fever, and then proceeded to prove by science that he was right.

Convincing Col. Edward A. Noyes, commanding officer of the Hospital, that it conceivably might have an adverse effect upon his allergy patients, Major Davidson took a piece of the proposed floor covering, cut it up into fine shreds, extracted the protein from it by a formula and then injected the resulting solution into all new patients for a month to see if they reacted. Approximately ten per cent showed positive reactions.

Thus, although the allergy clinic does not possess the bright new floor covering being placed in all the other wards of the hospital, Major Davidson feels that he has done well by his patients to sacrifice superficial beauty to science. Because the main object of the clinic is not to satisfy a sense of aesthetic appreciation but to return men to duty.

Allergies are capable of causing soldiers much misery and the army a great loss of man hours in its training program. The clinic is doing a herculean job in reducing and eliminating such conditions. Patients are given shots, put on special diets and told what things to avoid. Soon, most of them are back on full duty.

HORSE HAIR

The floor covering which was not placed in the allergy clinic is only one of the many and strange items capable of producing in individuals a condition of hypersensitivity which may interfere with or stop completely their ability to carry on army activities. Horse hair can produce "hive fives," hay can cause hay fever, radishes can start rashes and asparagus can bring on asthma. Duck or chicken feathers, face powder, insect spray or glue can produce most of these conditions.

Determining the particular cause of an allergic condition by finding out the things to which a patient is allergic, and then giving proper treatment is the function of this unusual clinic which deals with one of the most recent scientific fields in medicine and utilizes the most up-to-date methods of testing and treatment.

In addition to hay fever and asthma, the clinic treats soldiers who suffer from urticaria (popularly known as "the hives"), eczema (which includes most skin irritations and rashes), and headaches and stomach upsets which cannot be contributed to causes other than an allergic condition.

AVERAGE 80 EXTRACTS

With the exception of ragweed and grass pollens, which are obtained from commercial sources, all the average of 80 to 90 extracts used in the tests are made in the laboratory of the allergy clinic here at Fort Benning. By a complicated process, protein is extracted from various kinds of fish, pork, beef, chicken, turkey, various fruits, vegetables, condiments, dust, animal hairs, milk, egg, kapok and many other items too numerous to mention. The protein is taken off by a chemical formula and the mixture is used both as a testing and a treating solution.

For convenience's sake, Major Davidson has his 80 or 90 different mixtures divided into four "boards" or groups. Board No. 1, called the "Routine Board" because it consists of items most commonly causing allergic conditions, contains grains like wheat, animal hairs, house dusts, pollens, eggs and milk, along with others. Board No. 2 contains fruits, and Board No. 3 consists of vegetables. Board No. 4 includes condiments such as mustard, pepper and cloves; meats, fish, and drinks.

All patients are tested for allergy to each of the items on the four boards. Usually such tests run for three days. Boards No. 2 and are given in one day, and the other two usually are given on separate days. In giving Boards No. 1 and 4, scratch tests are given first, which means that the top layer only of the skin is broken and drops of the extracts placed in the broken places. If no reaction is shown, intradermal injections are given after the precautionary scratch tests. All tests are made in neat rows and exact sequence.

"LET 'EM COOK"

After the tests are given, the patient reports to Major Davidson, who glances at the soldier's arm to see which have shown quick reactions. The major then tells the soldier to sit down and "let them cook a little while." A few minutes later, the arm is ready for final inspection. If wheals or welts have risen on the arm, it is an indication that the person is allergic to the particular vegetable, fruit or whatever it may be. The major identifies the item by its position in the rows on the arm. The size, and to a certain extent, the redness, of the wheal or welt determines how allergic the patient is to the substance.

After the items to which the soldier is allergic is established, treatment is begun. Two ways of treating are available. The patient can stop using or coming into contact with the substances which are to him allergents, or he can be desensitised by means of hyperdermic shots taken over a period of time. If a patient is allergic to milk, he is given milk shots, which contain the same extract as used in the tests. Depending upon the degree of sensitivity, he is injected with a small amount of the solution diluted with distilled water. By increasing the amount of extract in the solution in subsequent shots, a gradual resistance to the item is built up in the patient. Thus in all probability he may seen be able to start drinking milk again without bad results.

Although the allergy clinic usually gives around 80 or 90 tests to each patient, they can prepare tests and shots for almost any item or food conceivable and have made solutions from approximately 150 different substances. The large number of tests given at the clinic here is extremely unusual for an army post. Most army allergy clinics use only about a dozen items, and approximately that number is sent out by the Fourth Service command for allergy tests. It is quite possible that a large number of tests are given in the Fort Benning clinic than at any other such army clinic in the country, with the exception of Walter Reed hospital in Washington, D. C.

Peep Hoopsters Get Letters

Twelve members of the Peeps basketball team, composed of boys on the post were presented with letters by the Boys Athletic Activities Association at a dinner in the Officers Club.

Letters were presented by Captain C. C. Carll, coach of the team and Hugh Bentley, president of the Columbus Sportsman's Club. Lt. Col. Virgil Ney, director of boys activities, acted as toastmaster at the dinner.

CHICAGO—(CNS)—A local rationing board gave several reasons why it revoked the A and B gas ration books of Joe Pacela. He had given the wrong name and address; had T and C coupons, and had said he was an egg trucker, when he was a laborer.

Father, Son Meet At Post

Former Is Private, Latter A Corporal

Two natives of Salisbury, Md., Corporal Francis L. Brown of the 16th Company of the Second Student Training Regiment, and Private Francis L. Brown of the Medical Detachment at the Station Hospital, met by chance at Fort Benning.

Private Brown is Corporal Brown's father and both were inducted into the Army at the same time. The two were separated upon induction and not reunited until the son was assigned to Fort Benning to enter officer candidate school.

The father and son received their notices from the selective service boards to report for physical examinations last Oceober 16. On the same day, the father received a telegram from his youngest son, Vernon, 19, advising him he had enlisted in the Army.

ENTER SAME TIME

Francis L. Brown, Sr., went into service in Baltimore on October 29, but the son took the two weeks granted inductees at that time and began his army career on November 12. The elder Brown was assigned to service with the 419th Field Artillery of the 10th Armored Division, but recently was transferred to his present assignment.

Francis, Jr., was sent to Fort McClellan, Ala., and qualified for officer candidate school. He arrived at Fort Benning on Feb. 6. Four days later, his father noticed a familiar stride of a soldier just ahead of him in Columbus, and found the soldier to be his son—whom he had not seen since they parted in Salisbury.

Private Brown is a veteran of World War I. He served with a Medical Unit in Boston and later at Camp Greenleaf, Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga. The Armistice found the unit with sailing orders for Europe.

Private Brown is a grandfather at the age of 46. His son, Francis, is married and has a year-old daughter.

513th's C. O. Full Colonel

Assumed Command Of Unit In January

Lieut. Col. A. H. Dickerson, commanding officer of the 513th Parachute Regiment, has been promoted to the rank of colonel, it was announced today.

Formerly the executive officer of the 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, Colonel Dickerson was named commander of the 513th in January. He is a regular army officer, a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point. Prior to entrance of the United States into the war, he had served in the Philippines and had participated in maneuvers on Bataan.

Colonel Dickerson came to the Parachute School in July, 1942, and qualified as a jumper in August. He then served for a short time as executive of the 503rd Parachute Regiment, then took over the same job with the 505th.

He is married and lives on the main post. He is a native of Iola, Kan.

MYRTLE JOINES

Alice Walton is the only draftswoman on the post. She is with the Area Engineer on the main post and does about everything that has to be done in that department. Among her outstanding achievements are the plans for the New Post Office building on the main post and a Recreation Cabin. Alice is a native of Kansas City, Mo., but received her higher education at the University of Minnesota. Alice's special interest was homes. Her success in home planning, we feel sure, is attributable to her womanly intuition of what a home should be.

4 New Outfits Join Tigers

760th Tank Roster Includes Indians

Four organizations have joined the 10th Armored Division within the past month, including the 774th Tank Destroyer battalion, which arrived in camp March 15.

The 455th Coast Artillery (AA) battalion arrived here from Camp Stewart, Georgia, on February 20, after a two-day march of 270 miles. The battalion spent a night in bivouac at the ball park in Cordel en route.

Lt. Col. Charles H. Sargent, Jr., is in command of the artillery unit. His men, who are quartered at the main post next door to the parachute units, are proudly wearing their new armored force patches. They have already impressed the paratroopers with the ruggedness of the Armoraiders who man the big guns.

764TH TANK BATTALION

The 764th Tank battalion (L) is installed in the Harmony church area with the 738th Tank battalion (M) as its neighbor. Officers and cadre for the 764th came primarily from the 760th Tank battalion. Lt. Col. Jack J. Richardson commands the organization. Included in the roster are a group of Indians from New Mexico who are learning to adapt their old traditions of warfare to the modern weapons of an armored division.

The 738th Tank battalion is staffed by an officer cadre drawn primarily from the 741st Tank battalion, Camp Polk, La., and is under the command of Lt. Col. Raymond W. Odor.

HOOD CHAMPS

The 774th Tank Destroyers arrived at Fort Benning with the basketball championship of Camp Hood, which they won in a close game just prior to their departure. The battalion is under the command of Lt. Col. Conrad B. Sturges. It is quartered in the Sand Hill area near the 54th Infantry.

The officers and their ladies from the 455th have already been welcomed to the division by a dinner party at the officers' club and a similar dinner was given for the 764th last Wednesday. Welcoming parties for the other two units will occur in the near future.

The new units have already given evidence of becoming a part of the division's activities. The 455th boxers have challenged the Tiger champs, while the 774th makes a similar challenge for its basketball team.

Air Hero Is Lawson Guest

Major Cook Battles In 26 Operations

Maj. Howard G. Cook, formerly stationed at Lawson Field with the 15th Bombardment Squadron, was a recent visitor to the field.

While in foreign service, Major Cook participated in 26 operations piloting light bomber planes. He received the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with three clusters for meritorious service while participating in aerial flight and outstanding performance and skillful leadership in the successful accomplishment of his missions.

Major Cook's extraordinary activity reflects the highest credit on himself and on the Army Air Forces.

A native of Kingsville, Texas, he was with the U. S. Marine Corps for four years and one year with the Texas National Guard before entering the U. S. Army Air Force.

Major Cook is now stationed in Birmingham, Ala., with the Third Air Support Command.

Major Lewis Leads 55th Engineer Unit

Major Inge Appointed Executive Officer Of Bridge-Builders

A recent personnel change has placed Major William H. Lewis in command of the 55th Engineer Battalion, 10th Armored Division, with Major Andrew V. Inge as executive officer. Both officers served previously in the 17th Engineers of the 2nd Armored Division and with engineer units at Fort Knox.

Major Lewis, a 1933 West Pointer, served with Army engineers at New Orleans from his graduation until 1939, when he went to Cornell University for a year. Since receiving a Master's Degree in science at Cornell, he has served with the Armored Force.

After graduating from V. P. I. in Virginia in 1938, Major Inge accepted a regular Army commission a few months later and spent two years in Hawaii. Like Major Lewis, Major Inge's principal service with troops has been with the Armored Force.

'Bayonet' Contest Is Nearing Climax

One Week Remains Before Deadline In War Bond Compete

Come on, Fort Benning personnel, get hot with those typewriters or even pens and especially with those drawing brushes.

Because there's just a week left in the big 'Bayonet' contest for soldiers and artists and while plenty of material is being received every day—there's more than a likely chance that what you write or draw may win one of those big prizes in war bonds.

And there are plenty of prizes, too, thirty of them all together, totalling $350.00.

If you don't win, one of the big $25 prizes as an award for your effort, perhaps you'll win one of the others, any one of which is well worth exerting a bit of time, skill and effort in an attempt to connect.

Special Edition

This contest is the first of its kind to be staged at the Post. All army personnel are eligible and contributions are being received now in the following classifications: editorials, essays or stories; human interest stories; humorous cartoons; serious cartoons, sports stories, and poetry.

Deadline for entries in the contest is April 1. Prize winning contributions will be printed in a special edition of the Bayonet on April 15. Judges will be composed of Columbus businessmen. In sending in your contribution, submit it first through your unit public relations office, with request that it be forwarded to Post Headquarters for the contest. Contributions should be addressed to the Contest Editor, The Bayonet, Public Relations Office, Post Headquarters.

Eighteen Columbus business men will act as judges in the contest. J. W. Thomas, of Sears Roebuck, will act as chairman of the Editorial judging board, assisted by C. T. McDonald of Maxwell Brothers & McDonald and Walter Miller, of Miller-Taylor Shoe Store.

Human Interest

In the human interest story division, C. E. Foster, of Foster Men's Wear, will be assisted by W. E. Hiers, of the Provision Company and E. Rothschild, of H. Rothschild, Inc.

Leslie Lilienthal, of Kayser-Lilienthal, will be chairman for the Humorous Cartons, assisted by Joe Levinson of Levinson Brothers and Dr. S. Till of Wells Dairies.

Serious Cartoons will be judged by Frank Poster of J. A. Kirven; Sam Neel, Sam Neel Shoe Store and D. L. Metcalf, of Metalf's.

Hugh Bentley of Bentley Sports Company, will judge the Sports Story division, assisted by T. G. Reeves of United Oil Co., and Edgar Chancellor, Sr., of Chancellor's.

Poetry will be judged by Victor Kiralfy of Kiralfy's; Sam Persons, Persons-Pennell and J. L. White, White's Book Store. One rule is imposed—please write only on one side of the paper and double space if you use a typewriter. Use of typewriter is not necessary, however—you may write your contribution longhand if you wish.

'Bayonet' Contest Dead-line Is Rapidly Drawing Nigh

The BAYONET's big War Bond and Stamp contest is rapidly approaching its dead-line as April 1 lifts its head above Time's horizon and contributions in all categories steadily flow into this office. The contest files are crammed with poetry, editorial essays, feature articles, and cartoons making the response of military personnel on the reservation most gratifying to say the least.

It goes without saying that the task which now confronts the gentlemen from Columbus who have so obligingly volunteered their time and effort in serving on the committees of judges is not an enviable one from the point of view of decision-making. But there can be no doubt that they will enjoy reviewing the material which has been submitted.

Despite the fact that only one week remains before the contest ends, there is plenty of time remaining for those who have postponed sending in their work. As we so often, have reiterated, Benning is blessed with an abundance of talent, both literary and artistic. The Infantry School is a powerful magnet drawing unto itself a never-ending stream of litterateurs from all sections of the country.

It is the hope of the BAYONET that its April 16 issue will carry the best that this post can offer and that every talented soldier writer or cartoonist will be represented by at least one contribution. Therefore, our invitation to participate is repeated. Do not permit the time element to frighten you. Great works of literature born of inspiration have been written in less time.

But do not tarry in transcribing your minervas to paper. Entries must travel through channels, originating with the public relations officer of each respective unit. Allow at least two days time to make certain that yours reaches this office before the dead-line.

Benning Post Office Carries Tremendous Load

An officer returning recently from duty in the Solomons rates soldiers' mail as the first and most important factor in morale; even beyond food and cigarettes. Like so many of the benefits Americans enjoy we are apt to take the superb service we get for granted and never think postal facilities except with irritation on such occasions as Christmas when the minimum of delays is inevitable.

As a result of the vastly increased personnel at Fort Benning the volume of postal matter so multiplied that it had outrun the means for handling in the old building on Vibbert Ave. A disused shed in the 29th Infantry motor park was utilized to handle the incoming post which had reached the formidable figure of 700 to 1000 sacks of parcel post and 75 pouches of letters a day.

The move to its new quarters on the corner of Ingersoll St. and Vibbert Avenue has doubled the space of our post office and enabled Postmaster Richardson and his staff to cope with the situation more readily. This move was accomplished in a single day without any disruption of the service, no small accomplishment when one reflects that nearly one and three quarter million pieces of mail are handled in a given month by this office.

R. P. Richardson, superintendent of the Ft. Benning branch of the Columbus postoffice, estimates that about 95 per cent of the outgoing mail comprises unpaid cancellation in consequence of the franking privilege extended us by the government. He observed that this exemption of the military from postal charges was not instituted solely as a "morale builder upper" but rather because of the difficulty or impossibility of the soldiery buying stamps on many occasions. One may readily perceive what a pretty kettle of fish it would be were we unable to send our mail home for lack of a convenient nickel-in-the-slot stamp machine on our particular oasis or South Sea Island.

Needless to say, the postal authorities are having their headaches in these trying times. The volume of business is of unprecedented proportions and obviously requires augmented personnel. Under the circumstances, however, such supplementary help is only taken on for the duration of the national emergency. The postoffice department cannot compete with private enterprise in the matter of wages and the temporary nature of these jobs obviates the compensatory factor of security and an ultimate pension. Mr. Richardson cited the Savannah area as a typical example. There, such men as selective service has passed by can earn considerably more money working for the great ship building industry which has mushroomed so recently in that vicinity. A postoffice job of temporary nature offers no attraction.

'C. C. Pillitis'—A Rebuttal To 'Goldbrikitis'

The essay on "Goldbrickitis—A Disease" written so ably by Major Ciofalo of the Medical Corps, prompts me to offer a rebuttal on the part of would-be-patients, and a comparison between the disease the major discovered and the one so many of us have run across in the Medical Corps.

C. C. Pillitis, unlike Goldbrickitis, has only one main class, known to the average layman as "The Universal Cure-All."

To take a few specific incidents—you have had a cold for a few days and you wish you were dead—so you finally get up the courage to make the safari to the Dispensary. After a bit of red tape you accost a medical officer. You tell him your ailment. He turns to a "T" corporal and says "Give him a box of C. C. pills." To you he blithely comments, "That ought to help."

Another example of the more virulent form of this disease.—you have cut your hand on some sharp object. The next day your arm swells and there is a red streak running up it. F.M. 19 1-2, paragraph 352 diasnoses that as blood-poisoning, so you dash madly over to the dispensary, trying to convince yourself that there are plenty of people who get along with one arm. Breathlessly you tell the medical officer to rush you to the hospital. Calmly the medico asks if you are sick at your stomach. You answer "No," feeling fainter and fainter. With an unperturbed smile the doctor turns to the pharmacist and says "Give him a box of C. C. pills."

This prevalent disease exists in all forms, and is found wherever the Medical Corps functions. Whether you are afflicted with a broken arm, St. Vitus Dance, mumps, measles, smallpjox or the "Trots," C. C. pills will cure you.

General McNair Lists Errors In Tunisian Battle

Infantry School instructors took time off recently to study a memorandum issued by Lt. General Lesley J. McNair, commander of the Army Ground Forces, dealing with a number of errors made by American troops in Tunisia, and then increased the tempo and volume of instruction relative to battle conduct of the American soldier.

The errors which Gen. McNair enumerated and which could have proven disastrous are common ones on which the Infantry School staff has been working overtime to eradicate. Officers in the basic courses and officer candidate classes can well testify to the fact that their instructors have maintained an unending barrage of repetition, day in, day out, to prepare future combat officers to teach their men that carelessness in observing elementary precautions in training may well cost many lives on the battlefield. They have spared no pains to inculcate in the minds of their students that in training they must assume that they are working under battle conditions and that the man or squad or platoon or whatever the unit exhibiting carelessness in training will invariably commit the same mistakes with bullets flying about them.

General McNair's memorandum listed these as the faults observed in the Tunisian fighting:

1. Failure to dig fox-holes promptly upon taking up a position.

2. Failure to make full use of available cover and to conceal their position by improvising camouflage quickly.

3. Avoidance of "booby-traps"—equipment or personal belongings, such as fountain pens, left behind by a retreating enemy, which explode when souvenir-hunting soldiers pick them up.

4. Insufficient disperson of troops—an important feature to lessen the effectiveness of enemy bombing.

5. Movement of truck columns bearing supplies or troops in closed-up formations and during the daytime, making them good target for enemy air attacks. Such movements should be made at night, whenever possible.

6. Failure to make a proper reconnaissance of the route over which motor columns are sent. The lack of such a reconnaissance or full knowledge of the route selected resulted in "some unnecessary loss of motor equipment" in Tunisia, it was said.

In his memorandum on the lessons of the Tunisian campaign, General McNair said that reports from North Africa on the caliber of leadership shown by both commissioned and non-commissioned officers were encouraging.

"In general, personal leadership by commanders has been of the highest order and there have been many examples of the personal bravery of officers and non-commissioned officers inspiring their men to super-human efforts," he said.

SOME "SERIOUS FUN"

I was intending to see the Cardinal-Dodger baseball game one afternoon and I grew impatient while waiting for Veronica (my girl) to dress. Finally I said, "Veronica, I want to hurry and get there, so please hurry." She was in the next room and came running out with a startled look. "What did you say" she said. Again I repeated. "Oh excuse me" she said, "I thought you said "I want to MARRY when I get there." I gulped a few times and finally I said, "What if I did say that?" Well, to make a long story short, in 15 minutes we were headed for St. Louis but not to see the baseball game.

USO Presents—

ITS SECOND ANNUAL OBSERVANCE OF NATIONAL OPEN HOUSE DAY

By PVT. SHELDON KEITEL

Almost 1,000 invitations are now in the mail for the second annual observance of USO National Open House Day Sunday. The USO clubs in Columbus and Phenix City have decided to offer regular features. All directors have expressed a sincere desire for Fort Benning's soldiers who are not availing themselves to the fullest extent of the USO's services to "drop in and see what's going on." It will be a fine time to get acquanited.

A new feature will make its appearance Tuesday, April 6, at the Ninth Street USO when the premiere performance of "Quiz-Serial-Movie" will be held at 8:45 p. m. (EWT). The first program will include a quiz on the screen which the audience will follow on tally sheets, a technicolor comedy, a sport reel and a film from the War Production Board. "Quiz-Serial-Movie" will be a regular Tuesday night feature.

An exhibition of the water color art work of Sgt. Salvitore Borrazzo and Sgt. George A. Cooke opened at the Ninth Street USO Sunday. The Art Club at the center announces that model classes are held every Tusday at 8:30 p. m. (EWT). Soldiers and their wives are invited to attend and make use of the modern studio facilities.

Miss Helen Wohlstedter announces that many new classical symphonic recordings have been received at the Ninth Street USO, and that daily from 5 to 6 p. m. programs of these records are featured.

Just a reminder about the basketball games Sunday at the Ninth Street USO between the winner and runner-up of the Southeastern service team championship conducted at Macon and the winner and runner-up of the Columbus USO league. It will be "big time cage stuff."

The Private Thoughts Of An Officer Candidate

AM Well, looks as though I'll have an easy day of it . . . Might as well relax . . . A cigarette—a-a-h, that's fine . . . What's the instructor talking about? . . . Oh, the platoon leader . . : A helluva spot to put a guy in as platoon leader . . . Boy! Did I sweat out that assignment . . . Nuts to him . . . Boy! this is a fine day . . . Guess I'll go into town this weekend . . . Drink a couple of brews . . . What's this about the Battalion C. O.? . . . Nuts, let the platoon leader worry about that . . . Let's see . . . ammunition bearer . . . Guess I carry the ammunition . . . Shouldn't be a tough job . . . Just follow that Joe in front of me . . . PM Here it is, the Zero hour, or H hour, or whatever they call it . . . Who's that yelling his head off? . . . Hmmmm, it's the section leader yelling for me . . . Am I in that Joe's section? . . . Guess I should have read the bulletin board . . . Must be though . . . Might as well fall in here; looks like a convenient spot . . . What, I'm in the first squad? . . . Well, where the devil is the second squad? . . . Oh, over there? Hell, I'm even in the wrong platoon . . . Now how did I get in that mortar platoon? . . . My gad! there's the tactical officer . . . Better run on the double past him and smile . . .

Well, hi, boys! . . . Where have you been? . . . Me? . . . Just looking over the local situation . . . "On the ball" Jones, they calls me . . . Just hand me that big ammo box, Smitty . . . Hmmm . . . Where did you get that base plate, Skinny? . . . What vulgar language . . . What goes on now? . . . Guess we're moving out . . . Squads abreast, sections in depth, according to the instructor . . . But what's a squad abreast? . . . Might as well follow that Joe in front of me . . . Here we go . . . Who's that yelling like that? . . . You're yelling at me? . . . I'm not abreast? . . . Abreast of who? . . . Oh! you want I should move over? . . . O. K., brother, don't get in an uproar . . .

Now where the devil are those guys going? . . . My gad! what's that noise? . . . Holy Moses! . . . The mortar boys are firing on us by mistake . . . Where's that hole in the ground? . . . Think of that. Trusting O. C.'s with over-head fire . . . Might kill a guy, me especially . . . Well, whaddya know! . . . Only those (%)@!$@)! instructors setting off that T.N.T. . . . Might as well look good . . . Follow me, men! . . . Hope that sounded good . . . Now where are we? . . . Everybody stopping . . . Must be the assembly area . . .

Might as well light up a cigarette . . . Who's that Joe with the bar on? . . . Christmas—he's coming right to me . . . Holy Moses! it's the tactical officer! . . . Wonder what he wants . . . What's that you said, Sir? . . . Where am I? . . . I'm right here, in front of you, Sir (what a helluva question) . . . Oh, I see, Sir . . . I'm on this hill, the reverse slope (that's letting him know) . . . What hill? . . . Hill 34, Sir . . . Oh, it's Hill 33 (that's bad) . . . Yes sir, you're correct, Sir . . . What am I doing (come to think of it, what am I doing?)? . . . I'M bearing ammunition, Sir . . . No, Sir . . . Not children—ammunition . . . Where am I bearing it? . . . To the front, Sir . . . What front? . . . That front to our front . . . What front to our front, (cheeze, he's getting tough)? . . . To the line of departure, Sir . . . Oh . . . We've passed it? . . . OoooooH . . . What am I going to next, Sir? . . . Run, on the double . . . Run where, Sir? . . . Wherever that guy in front of me runs . . . Where's the platoon leader? . . . He's in front, Sir . . . He ain't? . . . Well, he should be . . . Oooh, he's at the battalion CP? . . . Hmmmm . . . Why didn't I know that, Sir? . . . Well, hell, he never told me he was going to the Battalion CP.

Well, that's that . . . Guess I let that tactical officer know I'm on the ball . . . Wonder what he meant about meeting the board? . . . What board? . . .

People who can't solve problems in a democracy give money, get drunk or criticise the administration. Going to the bank, the bar or even the polls is no substitute for going to God. There's no economic, social or political answer to what fundamentally are moral problems.

WANDERLUST

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

The little Road says, Go.
The little House says, Stay.
And O, it's bonny here at home,
But I must go away.

The spirit of the road is the heritage of all. No matter how snug and comfortable one may be, ever and anon comes the urge to wander, to see new faces, to meet new sights. Some are fortunate enough to be able to satisfy the desire. It is well. For one will never know how bonny it is to rest at home until he goes away.

But a month's journey will not still the feeling of unrest. We will be very aware of the fact that here we have no abiding place to be taken down in the morning; that the lament of David runs through all our days, "We are strangers and sojourners on the earth as our fathers were."

From a late book of fiction an anguished voice cries out as the home was breaking up, "Oh God, please don't let her go. Please make something happen to stop it and let everything be as it was before."

Maybe, no other way
Your child could ever know
Why a little House would have you say
When a little Road says, Go.

POETRY

UNTIL I COME BACK

How can I say, "I love you,"
In a way never said before,
How can I say, "I'm happy,"
And it grows each day more and more;
How can I say that until I come back,
My heart is yours to keep,
And my every breath is a silent prayer,
For you, Dear, awake and asleep.

I try so hard, my Darling,
To write each word with my heart,
And tell you how much I am caring,
Though we're many miles apart.
To tell you, too, that soon, Dear,
I'll be coming back to you,
With a love grown stronger each moment,
As I've felt your love grow, too.

Your spirit with mine is woven,
And where you go so I must,
Our hands clasped tightly together,
In complete confidence and trust.
Even when I am forced to lie, Dear,
In fever and great pain,
I know that you're loving and grieving,
And I find good health again.

You are doing your share towards victory,
As you watch and wait with a smile,
For all the many dreams that we share,
Which will be ours in a little while.
And just as I know that you do,
I pray the whole long day through,
That God in his goodness and mercy,
Will bring me back home to you.

SHE GROWS A WEE BIT WISTFUL FOR COMMUNITY SPIRIT OF BLOCK 23

On balmy spring nights the thoughts of some of us turn a trifle wistfully toward Block 23. Block 23, for the information of the uninitiated, is that section of officers' quarters on the main post erected, so rumor has it, as temporary barracks during the first world war, later used as quarters for non-coms, and now housing officers and their families.

To be an inhabitant or an alumnus of Block 23 denotes that one is hardy soul. Extremes of temperature present no qualms after one has spent months coping with a striker who leisurely attacks the firing problem after everyone is up and out, boots the temperature up to a sultry summer heat in mid-afternoon, and lets the fire die out entirely just when one is expecting guests.

Nor do changes of quarters, with their subsequent problems of interior decoration, hold qualms for the hardy pioneer of Block 23. One learns that yards of target cloth can do wonders for windows, for quartermaster cots, for slip covers. Give a Block 23-er target cloth, time, and ingenuity, and the results are amazing.

Our wistfulness just now for Block 23, however, is for the community spirit we found there. Things may be different now, but during our Block 23 days soft spring nights found a half dozen or more lonely souls, whose husbands were on maneuvers or otherwise among the missing, consoling each other. Sitting on benches which adorn the strips of lawn between the sets of quarters, one ear cocked for the infant slumbering peacefully inside, one grew to know and understand one's neighbors, to realize the courage and stamina of the Army wife.

Plans were exchanged for the day when wives and children would settle down as civilians "for the duration," with the good and bad points of various parts of the United States discussed in detail. The anxious mother, expecting a second child and suddenly maidless, was reliever of her worries when neighbors volunteered to look after Tommy during her sojourn in the station hospital.

Such neighborliness has its disadvantages, however. In our day as Block 23-ers a rip-snorting dog fight was a daily occurrence. There was discussion, sometimes a trifle bitter, as to why young Butch Jones couldn't learn to keep his hands off other children's toys. And it was not uncommon to have someone phone and demand, in no uncertain terms, that the radio be turned off so people could sleep. People who ate at odd hours, wafting the odor of food into the neighbor's bedroom above, were in for a bit of indignant criticism.

However, with all its faults life on Block 23 made and cemented many friendships. In future years many of us will look back with a touch of nostalgia to our days spent there.

Thru the Peep-Site

By Sgt. O. Remington

THOUGH SECRECY shrouded his visit, General George C. Marshall got another close look at the Army's university, mighty Fort Benning, inspecting the Infantry School, Parachute School and Tenth Armored Division yesterday. With Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary and Field Marshall Sir John Dill, chief of the British Joint Staff Mission, General Marshall made a fast but thorough tour of the post.

Gone are the days of pomp and ceremonies. Thus, when the Chief of Staff came to Benning yesterday, his orders precluded the use of distinguishing insignia and flags on vehicles which would make his presence obvious to soldiers in training. Symbolizing the serious side of the war, General Marshall bears the mark of the "soldier's soldier." A veteran of World War I, General Marshall was for four years the assistant commandant of Fort Benning's famed Infantry School.

BACK AND FORTH swung the battle lines on all front during the week, with huge armies locked in deadly battles, the outcome of which undoubtedly will have considerable effects.

In Africa, General Patton, who has been placed in charge of land operations in Tunisia, has started a move to cut the Axis defenders in two. At the same time, General Montgomery's British Eighth Army has crashed the Mareth line. The smart defenders, Rommel and Von Arnim, are utilizing their forces to hit at first one side, then the other, desperately striving to hold out for more time, but with breaching of the Mareth line, there's not much hope of doing more. Some experts already are speculating on what Rommel will do with his forces when it becomes impossible to hold out further—best ideas being the Germans and Italians will make every effort to get them to Sardinia and Italy to continue battling there to make the Mediterranean Sea as unsafe as possible for Allied shipping. Or they may be sent to Jugoslavia to help against the Russians. Some experts think the Germans fear an invasion of Europe by way of Greece as being the easiest—and of most effect in relieving pressure on the Russians.

THE RUSSIAN FRONT itself presents another picture of armies swaying back and forth. The German machine is not rolling at the same speed it did in its offensive last spring, while in the north, the Russians still continue on the offensive, with considerable success. In the Donets basin, however, the Germans push ahead in face of fierce resistance.

Herr Hitler finally broke a long silence to make a radio speech on the German Memorial Day, and admitted that the entire German area is "now a war zone." He put German dead at 542,000 so far, then declared his Eastern front is being strengthened by fresh troops.

Hitler's speech came a short time before Prime Minister Churchill talked to the world from London. He was somber in tone, warning that it might take two more years to crush Hitler. Churchill repeated his previous assertion that after Hitler is beaten, the Allies would turn to "punish the greedy, cruel empire of Japan." No reference was made, however, to the length of time estimated for this particular chore, that faces all of us. He also sketched a hopeful picture of social and economic advancement for the years following the war—possibly embracing a "council of Europe and a council of Asia" to act to prevent aggression and preparation for future wars.

CHINESE ARMIES PUSH against tremendous odds in the Far East, while in Burma. British and American airmen continue destructive raids. Chinese are advancing slowly under "difficult conditions" near the Yangtze in the Hunan-Hupeh border region. In Burma, not much activity except for the air raids is reported. In the Australian area, aerial sweeps continue on the part of General MacArthur's forces. So far, nothing much has come of Japanese concentrations that at one time appeared to forecast a big push—American airforce has pounced on these concentrations so hard and so quickly that the Japs seem unable to get set for any major operations. Again, the concentrations may be consolidation activities aimed at making Allied advances more difficult.

ALONG THE HOME front, President Roosevelt and Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commissioner, struggled with the vexing problem of national service legislation. President Roosevelt wants to avoid drafting of workers for war industries if it is possible, but Mr. McNutt appears to have reached the conclusion that such a national service act is "inevitable."

President Roosevelt also is faced with a threatened strike of United Mine Workers in the soft coal fields. The president has suggested to John L. Lewis, head of the UMW, that they adopt the same understanding which was reached in 1941, thereby inferring that the government would not be exactly agreeable to any wage increase exceeding its policies under wage stabilization.

In Congress, plenty of buzzing during the week over adoption of the Ruml plan for a "pay as you go" policy of running the government—or some variation thereof. Surveys indicate that public opinion is thoroughly behind the plan.

Sudden orders of OPA banning for an entire week the sale of butter, margarine, lard and other edible fats and oils came as some what of a startling surprise to millions of housewives. These goods were to be rationed on March 29 anyway, however, and OPA said stocks were not sufficient to support heavy public buying during the week.

Baldwin, N. Y. (CNS)—Albert Leibert bet a friend Mrs. Leibert would have a baby boy. He was so sure he agreed to pay the friend $5 for every girl. His wife presented him with girl triplets.

Birmingham, Ala. (CNS)—Locomotive engineer Emmett Dean Davis, 30, was fatally scalded when escaping steam from his engine sprayed him.

Red Cross Man Leaves Five Million Dollar Business To Contribute Bit To Victory Drive

Patriot Has Two Sons In Service; Wife Active In R. C. Motor Corps

Not satisfied with two and one-half years' service in the first World War, with his two grown sons in the armed services and his wife active in the Red Cross motor corps in Philadelphia, Henry G. Reifsnyder, 48, left his big wool business in the hands of his partner and is now at Fort Benning as an assistant field director of the Red Cross.

Mr. Reifsnyder reached the Post last week at his own request and assumed his new duties. He asked for assignment to Fort Benning in order to be near his eldest son, Henry Reifsnyder, Jr., who is in an Infantry School casual battalion awaiting assignment to Officer Candidate School. The latter enlisted in the army on his twenty-first birthday last July 3 after graduating from Harvard University.

One of three partners in the wol merchant firm of I. Reifsnyder, Son and Co., which was founded by his grandfather in 1868, Mr. Reifsnyder handled most of the buying and selling for the concern. Despite the fact his firm is highly important to the armed services by supplying finest quality wool, he sought some way in which to be of even greater service to his country in time of war and chose the Red Cross as the field in which he could do the most effective work.

SPECIAL WORK

Notified on February 8 that his proffer of service had been accepted Mr. Reifsnyder promptly went to Washington, D. C., for two weeks special training in Red Cross work. He then reported to Camp Shelby, Miss., where he underwent two weeks additional training. Upon learning his son was at Fort Benning, he requested and obtained the position he now holds here.

SERVED IN 1917

Four days after this nation entered the World War in 1917, Mr. Reifsnyder, who was attending Cornell University, enlisted in the Army and served for two and a half years. He was with the Pennsylvania National Guards which became the 28th Division. He was in France for a year and a half with the division, which, next to the First Division, had a larger number of casualties than any other American division in the war. He served as a dispatch rider during the fifth German offensive at Chateau Thierry, the Ch. Reque - Vesle offensive, the Meuse-Argonne drive and in the Metz sector, where the armistice was signed.

SON INNAVAL RESERVE

In addition to the two members of the family serving at Fort Benning, Mrs. Reifsnyder has been doing Red Cross work in Philadelphia, and Howard Reifsnyder, II, the second son, is in the Naval R. O. T. C. at Harvard University. The only member of the family not in active war work is Mr. Reifsnyder's 14-year-old son who is attending William Penn Charter School in Philadelphia, the oldest private school in the country, founded in 1689. Mr. Reifsnyder also attended the school in his youth.

CIVIC LEADER

Mr. Reifsnyder was associated with many civic and professional activities as well as professional and social organizations at the time he began his present work. He was on the board of St. Christopher's Hospital for Children in Philadelphia, president of the Wool-Golf Association, a member of the Union League of Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Country Club, the American Legion, the Colonial Society of Pennsylvania, the Sons of the American Revolution, the Downtown Club of Philadelphia and the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Local USO's Plan National Open House

Celebration Slated For Sunday, March 28, From 3 To 6

Imagine, if you can, a party for a city the size of Lynn, Mass., Wells in Columbus and Phenix City from March 1942 to March 1943 social activities were attended by more than 95,000 soldiers from greater Fort Benning. That figure is comparable to the size of the New England city.

The United Service Organizations in Columbus and Phenix City will dedicate its afternoon program Sunday from 3 to 6 p. m. (CWT) to "Open House" as part of the nationwide program to acquaint the public with achievements and activities made possible by generous voluntary contributions.

PUBLIC INVITED

The USO clubs will conduct regular program fcatures and thus enable the public to view what is offered. "Open House" will be observed in 1,200 USO clubs on a nationwide basis. The general public is invited.

Slogan of the day will be "This is your USO, come in and see it."

In connection with "Open House" day, the local United Service Organizations have released a set of figures showing the attendance of men in uniform at programs and indicating services offered during the year ending.

Social activities, exclusive of social dances, attracted more than 95,000 men. More than 233,000 attended social dances. Group activities, including art, craft and camera clubs, were participated in by 63,000 soldiers, and free motion pictures attracted more than 87,000.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES

Religious services, including vesper and special religious holiday services, were attended by 75,796. Availing themselves of information and various other little services were 106,814.

The USO helped 45,628 men find housing for their wives who came to live near Fort Benning. A total of 8,503 men received counseling services.

More than 7,000 soldiers were invited into private homes under USO auspices, and 41,083 took advantage of dormitory services. More than 130,000 men were availed of personal services such as shower facilities, shoe shining, sewing services and wrapping of Christmas and gift packages.

Considering that the average USO volunteer worker spends three hours a day in planning and carrying out the many United Service Organizations services, it is estimated that 226,309 volunteer hours — or almost 9,430 days— were spent during the period from March 1942 to March 1943.

Former Two-Nine Officers Reported Missing In Action

Two officers, formerly of the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning, are reported as missing in action somewhere in North Africa," according t oword received here.

They are Lieut. James J. MacArevey and Lieut. Herman Hoeger. Lieut. MacArevey is a native of Troy, N. Y., who enlisted in 1941 and was assigned to Company K, where he was appointed as transport sergeant of the 29th Motor Park. He played on the regimental football squad. In April, 1942, he entered the OCS and graduated in July.

Lieut. Hoegger was formerly of Company K also. He graduated from OCS in May, 1942.

Ross Vachon Is Writer, Marksman, Athlete, World Traveler

Ross P. Vachon, officer candidate in the 13th Company of the Third Student Training regiment, is living for the day when he can contribute to an American victory which will liberate his father from a Japanese prison camp.

When that day comes, Vachon probably will face his father and say: "Sir, Lieutenant Vachon reports for duty to General Vachon," for his father is Brig. Gen. Joseph P. Vachon, who was taken prisoner by the Japanese with General Wainwright and his staff in the fall of Bataan.

When the general last saw his son, the latter was working his way toward a military career in the Lehigh University R. O. T. C. Candidate Vachon received an appointment to West Point some time ago, but an examination disclosing less-than-perfect eyesight precluded confirmation of the appointment.

Going to Lehigh, he made immediate application for officer candidate school upon completion of his course in January. Another point which hastened his decision to get into the fight was the death in action of two cousins in the British forces.

MILITARY FAMILY

The Vachon family has long been represented in the military. General Vachon arose to his generalship the hard way by coming through the ranks. He has been in the service 38 years and has been assigned to stations all over the world. His family accompanied him on most of these tours. Young Vachon has travelled in England, on the European continent, Panama, Hawaii, Australia and in the South Pacific, and has attended approximately 25 schools.

A sister, now the wife of major, was born in China. General Vachon's wife was born in Australia. General Vachon was born in Westbrook, Me., and the officer candidate was born while the family was at Fort Brady, Mich., 22 years ago.

Candidate Vachon, who writes plays—several of which have been published, placed 10th in the national junior rifle matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, several years ago, and was captain of his high school basketball team.

Canadians Bid Post Farewell

Move To Camp Shilo To Establish School

As the First Canadian Parachute Battalion moved from Fort Benning to Camp Shilo, Manitoba this week, Lt. Col. G. F. P. Bradbrook, commanding officer of the unit, expressed the hope "in the not too distant future of fighting side by side" with American troops "as we are doing in the many theatres of war now."

The Canadian Battalion, which has been in training at the American Parachute School for several months, moved to Camp Shilo where a Canadian Parachute School will be established by the battalion.

Two weeks ago the Canadian unit heralded North American solidarity as a climax to their training in the United States when it saluted Brig. Gen. Galter S. Fulton, post commander, and Brig. Gen. George P. Howell, commandant of The Parachute School. The Canadians staged a "march past" in Gowdy Field and paraded before high-ranking American and Canadian officers.

C.O.'s STATEMENT

Colonel Bradbrooke issued the following statement as his unit entrained:

"On the occasion of our departure from Fort Benning may I take this opportunity on behalf of the officers, N. C. O.'s, and men of the First Canadian Parachute Battalion of extending our most sincere thanks to the Post Commander, Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton, and to the Commandant of The Parachute School, Brigadier General George P. Howell, and all ranks under their commands for the many kindnesses and wonderful cooperation extended to us during our stay here.

"Our pleasant associations with the American troops will long be remembered. We hope for the opportunity in the not too distant future of fighting side by side with these troops as others are doing in the many theatres of war.

"I would like to extend best wishes and all success to this grand post of Fort Benning.

"G. F. P. Bradbrooke,
"Lieutenant Colonel,
"Commanding."

Antitank Gun Record Falls To Second STR Unit

Another long-standing record toppled to the 18th Company, STR.

With 97.6 per cent of the group shooting, qualification scores on the 37 mm. anti-tank gun and 14 men firing scores over 180 in range firing the 18th Company, commanded by Capt. James W. Sorenson, matched a previous record set on the Browning Automatic Rifle range earlier in training.

In firing the BAR, the company posted 94 experts to break the previous school record of 87 and at the same time qualified 199 men.

The new and latest record on the anti-tank gun was held up in both 1,000 inch range firing and field traget firing as the 18th Company men rated high above the average of recent classes on both ranges and placed 44.7 per cent of the entire class as expert anti-tank gunners.

3rd STR Company Boosts Range Record For Antitank Gun

First Company of the Third Student Training Regiment has boosted the record for Bickford Range by 7.9 per cent in establishing a recent percentage of 40.5 hits in recent field firing of the 37 mm. anti-tank gun.

Many of the averages of previous groups were improved by candidates of the present class. High score on record was taken by Candidate Don Tansey of Detroit, Mich., who qualified with 185 out of a possible 200.

Francis Berry Succeeds McEvo, As Prison Officer

Wirst Lieut. Francis W. Berry, has been appointed Police and Prison officer to succeed Lt. Richard T. McEvoy, who has been transferred to another station.

Coming to active duty September 5, 1942, Berry first attended Provost Marshal General School, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and was assigned to Benning in November. He will continue to serve as assistant provost marshal, which position he filled previously.

At the same time, Lt. Russell K. Smith was named assistant police and prison officer. Prior to this, Smith served as chief forester, working under the post engineer, and later as post gardener.

Modern Boone Kills Bears With Pistol

The First Student Training regiment has a modern Dannie Boone enrolled in the Fifteenth Company and First Platoon in the person of Herbert F. Greathouse. Greathouse scorns any such unsporting bear killer as a rifle; he kills his bears with a pistol.

Sometime prior to his coming to Benning, Greathouse and a friend were following their hounds in what they thought was a bobcat chase down in New Mexico. The dogs' barking brought the two hunters to a cave. Greathouse knew his prey was inside, and he crawled in, lighting his way with a flashlight which failed within a few yards of the entrance. Growls in front gave notice of imminent danger. From Greathouse' vantage point the terrain was held by the enemy and the situation definitely was not good.

In the darkness of a narrow cave a man doesn't have much chance against a bobcat. But, the growls weren't those of a bobcat. Herb rapped the flashlight, and light flooded the underground room. Three feet in front was something to worry about—a tremendous black bear.

But in such a situation you don't have much time to worry. You have to act, if you don't want to become the property of the civilian quartermaster. Greathouse shot the bear three times with a .38 pistol. He doesn't remember whether the shots could have been covered by the unsharpened end of a leadpencil, but they were close. The bear weighed three hundred forty pounds.

WILDERNESS

Greathouse says he was born on a cattle branch, "ten thousand feet up in the sky and a million miles from a store." The post office is Regina, N. M., that's all there is there. Twenty-five miles away there is a store in Cuba, N. M. and ninety miles away in Albuquerque there is a movie. He was captain of the undefeated 1938 Spanish American Normal School baseball team. In 1939 he was New Mexico Golden Gloves champion. During his four years high school work he made an "A" in every course and an "A" on every exam except one; that was a "B."

Greathouse came to Benning from New Mexico State A and M college where he received his degree in Chemical Engineering. He was a member of the ROTC there throughout the four years. Here at the Infantry School he has made expert on all weapons except one; he is a first class gunner with the light machine gun. He takes the obstacle course in one minute and sixteen seconds and can break the course record at any time he chooses.

Greathouse says that he can kill Mr. Moto with a pistol but that he is going to us an MI just to be sure.

Leadership Course Enters Sixth Week

The Leadership course of Lieut.-Col. John S. Roosma, commanding officer of the Third Battalion, First Student Training Regiment is now in its sixth successful week.

Something new and different in military training, the course deals with such tough practical problems as how to quiet green jumpy troops on their first combat assignment; what to do with the veteran sergeant who loses his head and beats up a private; how to prevent a rumor from disrupting morale of the troops; what to do with the soldier who disobeys orders and eats his K ration before he should; how to make inspections instructional as well as routine.

Launched as an answer to the burning need for aggressive leading of men, Col. Roosma's course has opened a new field of military instruction which the Third Battalion Students have eagerly received.

Ex-Two-Nine Sergeant Captures Kasserine Pass

Sgt. Sherman Proves To Heinies That War Is H—; Known Here For His Leadership

A former Fort Benning soldier, Sergeant Clabe Sherman who spent 15 years as a member of the 29th Infantry, led the detachment of 115 men which recaptured strategic Kasserine Pass from the Germans on the Tunisian front February 27, according to advices just received at the post.

Sergeant Sherman, with his little band of men, achieved this military exploit after a two-hour battle with German and Italian rearguards, and held it overnight until a battalion of United States infantry arrived. The battalion, looking for Axis defenders and themselves hoping to recapture the pass, found the sergeant and his men sitting on the rocks waiting for them.

Assigned one afternoon to lead a detachment against Axis positions on a high hill commanding the pass, Sergeant Sherman's superior officers, Lt. Col. Charley Eastburn of Meridian, Miss., and Capt. Noble H. Abney of Leesville, Ga., gave only one order, "Find out what's on that hill and knock it out!"

WITH COMPANY G

Recalling his renowned namesake of the War Between the States, Sergeant Sherman decided to teach the Germans that "War is hell," and went on from there to capture the pass.

His unit consisted of two rifle platoons, one machine-gun platoon and one mortar platoon.

While at Fort Benning, he was a platoon sergeant in Company G of the 29th Infantry and was considered to be one of the best field leaders officers could desire. When angry, he usually called his men "punkin' jumpers."

The 38-year-old sergeant, who has spent 18 years in the army and is a native of Anderson, Tenn., left Fort Benning in 1940 to become first sergeant in a tank-destroyer unit.

Supply Detachment Men Promoted

Thirteen enlisted men of the Supply Detachment, Supply Division, Section One, Fourth Service command, have received promotions upon the recommendation of their organization commander.

Sergeant Dirk J. Dammers has been named staff sergeant, and Corporals Maxie Cooner and Cullen Register have been promoted to the rank of sergeant. Privates First Class Marvin A. Barber, Franklin A. Brown, Antone B. Perez and James L. Saracina have been named corporals, and Privates T. W. Brown, Dallas Barron, James W. Bolton, John J. Fanelle, Douglas Y. McKenzie and Joseph N. Platter have been advanced to privates first class.

Captain Gardner Gets Majority

Captain Joseph H. Gardner, commanding officer of the armed forces induction station at Fort Benning, has been promoted to major.

A graduate of Emory university in Atlanta, Major Gardner was for 15 years head of the chemistry department at Lanier High school for boys, Macon, Ga.

He was called into the army in August, 1941, coming to Fort Benning with the induction station. He assumed command of the station eight months ago.

10th Armored Cage Supremacy Is On The Line Tonight

The 55th Engineers and Supply Battalion basketball teams in the 10th Armored Division will clash tonight for the division title.

The finalists are winners respectively in the Sand Hill and Cusseta cage leagues.

The 55th team is slight favorite to win the one-game playoff tonight.

New Lawson Theater Opens

Replaces Old No. 3; Modern Throughout

Personnel in the Parachute School, Lawson Field and the 300th Infantry areas now are being served by the newly completed Theater Number 3, which opened this week, it is announced by Maj. James Sutton, post theater officer.

Located between the branches of the roads leading to Lawson Field and to the Parachute School area, it is a modern theater, latest word in compactness and equipment for camp use. Besides the movie and sound equipment, it is completely fitted with stage, so that it may be utilized for any USO Camp Shows which may later be assigned to the area.

The new theater replaces old Number 3 theater, which had been located farther back in the 300th Infantry area and was not so readily accessible to the personnel of Lawson Field and the Parachute School.

Pvt. Jack Vaughn Rises Through Rank To His Captaincy

Lt. Jack C. Vaughan was recently promoted to the rank of captain according to Colonel Thomas R. Gibson, commanding officer of the First Student Training Regiment.

Captain Vaughan has risen through the ranks from the grade of private when on December 5, 1940, he enlisted as a Private and was sent to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., for his basic training.

On January 23, 1942, Captain Vaughan graduated from Fort Benning's Infantry School, received his commission as a second lt., and was assigned to the First Student Training Regiment where he has been on active duty since.

Captain Vaughan is married to Anne Gwin of Natchez, Mississippi, and hails originally from that city.

Parachutists Win Main Post League Basketball Crown

Another court ruler crowned in the past week's parade of champions was the crack 1st Parachute Training Regiment quintet which swept to two straight wins over 7th Observation squadron to capture the Main Post League laurels.

Sunday afternoon in a prelim to the Prof-Leader fuss, the Trainers grabbed a 36-24 verdict over the observers. On Monday, though, the 7th fought back stubbornly but went down by a 33-31 tally to give the paratroopers the laurels.

Sam Newlin, husky forward, was the big point-maker in the 1st PTR triumph, but he had plenty of able support from the rest of the cast which included Nelson, York, Brown, Vargo and Goldhagen.

JACKSON AND RICKS of the 2nd STR are two of the fort's outstanding courtmen of the year. Both are selected this week on the Fort Benning conference all-star team, and tonight they will be the mainstay of their team which opens the playoff series for the post title against the 55th engineers at the H. C. sports arena. Joe Jackson, on the left, is a former New Mexico Aggie star, while Troy Ricks made the All-American when performing for Mississippi.

Ex-Minnesota Grid Captain In OC School

Several All-America Selections Included Big Gopher Star

Win Pederson, former captain of the University of Minnesota football team and selected on many mythical All-America teams, has arrived at Fort Benning to enter Officer Candidate School as a member of the 12th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment.

Pederson's first football endeavor was as a senior at West High at Minneapolis, where he played because he was taunted into it. As a high school player he was selected All-City tackle and made thirty-three points during the season as a lineman.

Upon entering the University of Minnesota, Pederson made the freshman team and in his second year made the varsity playing 320 minutes out of a 480 minute schedule. Win was selected on the Big-Ten sophomore team.

During his junior year he played 430 minutes out of a 480 minute schedule and was selected on the Big-Ten All-Conference Team. In his senior year, being elected captain, he earned the name of "Iron-Man" by playing all but twenty-eight minutes of the entire schedule, and was selected on many mythical All-American teams.

PLAYS PACKERS

He played on the Chicago Tribune team, selected by national poll at Chicago against the professional Champion Green Bay Packers. Pederson wound up his college career in Shrine East-West game at San Francisco in which he played 58 minutes.

Pederson then successfully coached a semi-pro team at Milwaukee but forsook this for a more remunerative position with the New York Giants. During off-season he was a salesman for General Mills. His latest change is with the team which he says is the World's Best, the United States Army.

ARMY ALL-STAR

Pederson, a volunteer officer candidate, enlisted in August 1942 and was immediately placed on the Army All-Star team under Colonel Butler, coached by Major Wade, formerly of Duke University. During the short season of eighteen days five games were played, the proceeds of which were turned over to the Army Emergency Relief Fund. On October 21, 1942, Pederson was assigned to Camp Wolters, Tex., where he completed his basic training.

Among his other athletic achievements are hockey, basketball, boxing and he is a charter member of the Minneapolis crew club.

Charley Paddock, once known as "the world's fastest human," has been commissioned a captain in the Marines. Back in 1917 Paddock quit high school in Los Angeles to enlist in the Army. He rose to the rank of second lieutenant in 1919, and then resigned his commission to go to the University of Southern California. Paddock won the 100- and 300-meter dashes in the 1920 Olympics held at Antwerp, Belgium. He has been publisher of the Pasadena (Cal.) Star-News for several years.

Parachutists in the U. S. Army get a monthly $50 bonus in addition to their regular base pay. The reason for this is that parachute jumpers perform what is considered one of the most hazardous jobs in the army.

Rivals Meet Tonight In Series Opener On Sports Arena Court

55th Engineers, 2nd STR Primed For Crack at Post Court Crown

Emerging from the year's most exciting court battle on Monday night as the victor and new champion of the Fort Benning Conference, the powerful 2nd STR Leaders start after the post title tonight at the Harmony Church sports arena when they oppose the 55th Engineers, 10th Armored champs, in the first tilt of a three-game series.

The championship battle is slated to get under way on the arena's spacious center court at 8:30 before a capacity house. Sunday afternoon the rival quintets will move the title scuffle to the post gymnasium for the second game of the series at 3:30 o'clock.

If a third game is necessary to decide the post crown, it will be played either Monday or Tuesday night with the floor still to be decided upon. The winner of the three-game series will be awarded a handsome trophy as well as individual player gifts by the Fort Benning Athletic Association, sponsors of the fort's vast court program.

Jackson, Ricks and Co., of the 2nd STR earned right to battle the Engineers for the post diadem with one of the most thrilling comback efforts ever witnessed on a Benning hardwood. After losing the first tilt on their home court at the arena last Thursday, few fans conceded the Leaders a chance to win since the final two games were slated for the post gym, home floor of their Academic Regiment rivals.

But on Sunday, the H. C. tossers came back with renewed vigor and swept to a fairly easy 40-30 conquest over the Profs. Then on Monday came the climax when the Leaders roared back from a six-point deficit with seven minutes left to play and grabbed the all-important win and the conference flag by a 50-48 count.

The final game was a 40-minute thriller. The Profs pushed off to an early lead, and paced the Leaders for better than three quarters. But suddenly, the 2nd STR caught fire with a victory flame tha couldn't be doused. Jackson, Ricks and Bland were the heroic figures in that final rally, all three making almost unbelievable field goals, while the former two added timely foul tosses to clinch the verdict.

Joe Jackson and Troy Ricks were the key figures in the Leader triumph but it remained for slim Lonnie Bland, the star forward, to lead the scorers with nine brilliant field goals for 18 points. The Profs went down fighting and it marked the second straight year that they had lost out on a title in the finals by a slim margin. Last year, the 29th Infantry eked out a one-point win to grab the post laurels from the Academics.

The "Mighty 55th' earned its way into the title series which opens tonight by tripping Supply Battalion for the Tiger championship. The bridgebuilders have been one of the most consistent teams of the year, being the only one to win both halves in their league.

The 55th will go into tonight's game on almost even terms with the Leaders, and the series promises to provide many thrills. The Engineers are a big, rugged team that packs a never-say-die spirit. They lack the outstanding offensive punch of the Leaders, but play a fast passing game that will cause the conference champs plenty of woe.

Bell, a big center, and Petak, a rugged guard, are the shining lights on the 55th but Coach Movius has a plentitude of material and a well-balanced team. Leader hopes, on the other hand, rest once again on the able shoulders of Jackson and Ricks who are two of the outstanding players of the year.

The title series for the post crown brings together two of the most colorful teams at the fort, and is sure to provide a fitting climax to the greatest basketball campaign in post history.

3rd STR Quint Gains Laurels In H. C. League

Topple 99th Ordnance In Close Battle To Capture Court Title

The Cinderella of Fort Benning sportsdom, the Third Student Training Regiment basketball team, was still assuring itself today that it wasn't a dream after all—that it really was the champion of the Harmony Church League.

The quintet clinched the title last week by earning a close 38-32 decision over the 99th Ordnance, the very team to which it had lost at the start of the league tournament.

MORAL VICTORY

To the team, weary from playing tournament schedule with scarcely a substitution, the championship represents a moral as well as an actual triumph for it was achieved after a series of disheartening setbacks.

Composed entirely of men from the regiment's Headquarters Company, the five, the first to take the court for the youthful regiment, was organized last November with a fanfare of publicity and a lot of confident predictions and, most important, a reasonably adequate lineup of players.

STARTED WELL

The season started auspiciously enough and then a lot of things happened. Officers who played a role in the team's organization were transferred, players were moved out of the area and their places were left unfilled and interest started to flag.

These discouraging turns were followed by a series of defeats and a resultant loss of support-ing spirit among the team's followers in the regiment. A few weeks before the team entered the tournament, a so-called "double round robin" affair, the lineup consisted of but seven players, Theodore Cook, Paul Sorreis, Elmer Glick, Harry Clingenpeel, Carl Bachman, Vincent Valentino and William E. Bowles.

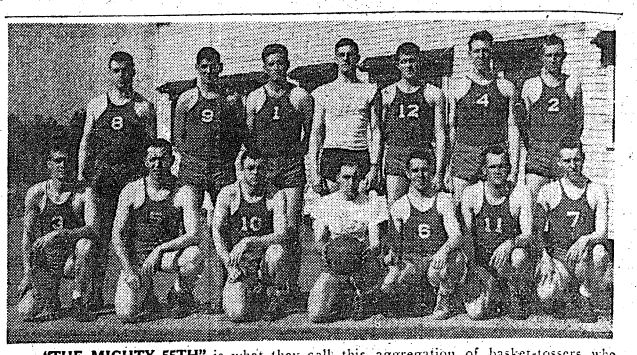
LOST LOOP OPENER

In spite of the lack of substitutes and other obstacles, the team suddenly and unaccountably acquired a new spark and started winning. Then came the tournament and the loss of the first game.

The initial defeat discouraged everyone in the regiment except the players themselves. They worked harder and conducted regular and frequent practice sessions in the regimental gymnasium.

Their diligence was repaid for victories started coming their way again, culminating in the smashing, 60-20 triumph over the 31st Ordnance in the tournament semi-final.

Gen. Patton's Life To Be Featured In Air Premiere



Date for opening of the new series of radio programs, "Fort Benning Theater of the Air" has been set for April 8, it was announced today by Lt. Col. C. C. Finnegan, Special Services Officer. The programs will be presented through the Special Service Office and the Public Relations Office.

First presentation will be a theater play "No More Heros" depicting dramatically the highlights in the career of General George Patton, former commandant of Fort Benning, now in charge of American operations in Tunisia.

The new program series will be presented from 8:30 to 8:55 p. m., over WRBL and the Columbus Broadcasting company and WGPC in Albany, Georgia. They will be broadcast directly from Fort Benning.

GRIDDER PRISONER

Word has been received by the parents of Mario (Motts) Tonelli, former Notre Dame football star who made the winning touchdown in the Ramblers' 13-6 victory over Southern California in 1937, that he is a prisoner of the Japs in the Philippines. "Motts" is a Sergeant in the Coast Artillery and was in Northern Luzon when the Island was invaded by the Japs.

"THE MIGHTY 55TH" is what they call this aggregation of basket-tossers who have just been crowned champions of the 10th Armored division and tonight will start after the post title in a game at the sports arena against the 2nd STR Leaders.

Engineers Top Supply For Tiger court Flag

Petak Sparks 55th For 33-27 Victory In Playoff Tilt

The 55th Engineers won the 10th Armored Division basketball title in the Harmony Church Sports Arena Monday night with a 33-27 decision over the Supply Battalion. The victory sends the Engineers against the 2nd Student Training Regiment, Fort Benning Conference winner, for the post championship.

The Engineers, a heavy pregame favorite, let the Supplymen play their own style of game throughout the first half, which ended with the losers out in front by 12-5.

But the "Mighty 55th" began rushing all over the floor at the start of the second half to speed up the play, taking an 18-17 lead at the end of the third quarter on Bell's tip in shot.

SPARKED BY PETAK

Again it was Petak, chunky Engineer guard, who sparked the 55th to victory. He topped all the scorers with ten points, but he scored all of them in the last half drive.

He scored five points in a row in the third quarter to bring the Engineers ahead for the first time. With the score tied, 20-20, two minutes later, Petak dropped in the basket which saw the Engineers get the lead and told it.

COAST IN

At this point Patterson made two quick baskets, Petak sunk another, and then the Engineers coasted in by making five straight free throws. Free throws actually beat the Supplymen, both teams scoring 12 field goals. The 55th made nine of 17 shots, while the Supplymen dropped in only three out of 12.

The Engineers won both halves of the Sand Hill league, while the Supplymen won the second half in the Cusseta league and defeated the 90th Recons in the playoffs.

Shaffer Leads 'Gator Nine

Played Five Years As Minor Leaguer

Lieut. Don Shaffer of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, has been selected to lead the 124th Infantry on the diamond.

Lieut. Shaffer has quite an extensive baseball background and is equal to the task of leading the Gator toward the baseball pennant on the post. He pitched for Cedar Rapids High School and is a veteran minor leaguer, playing five years in the Three-I League and the Western League.

The lieutenant came into the service on selective service in April, 1942, and was stationed at Camp Barkley, Tex. He received his gold bars as a Christmas gift and graduated from The Infantry School, Dec. 22, 1942.

General Valdes Inspects Tenth Armored Units

Filipino Chief-Staff Praises Training Given Tiger Troops

The men were soaked to the gills from three days of camping out in the rain, but they smiled back at the man who spoke to them. For the latter had endured much more than a little rain, and he could still smile. He was Major General Basilio J. Valdez, the Philippine Chief-of-Staff and General Marshall or chief of staff of the gallant Philippine army.

General Valdez was making an inspection trip to Tiger Camp, watching the Armorediers go through obstacle, infiltration and Jap-in-the-grass courses. He was greatly impressed by the demonstrations, sorry his own men could not have had such training.

"I wish my soldiers could have had this training," he told the men of "C" Company, 11th Armored regiment, as they crawled through the muddy infiltration course under machine gun fire during a driving rain.

VALDEZ SPEAKS

"Your officers are giving you wonderful instruction here," he said. "Do not look on it as a game, do not consider it a joke. Take it seriously. Think that you are in an actual battle. Take advantage of every bit of training you get."

General Valdez has been a general officer since the middle thirties, outranks most generals in our army today. That he was a medical officer in the American army in World War I, a somewhat inauspicious start for an army careerist, is a fine tribute to his ability as a soldier.

The visit by General Valdez and the general officers who accompanied him lifted the spirits of the men in Tiger Camp, where the going is tough even without the rain. General Valdez was accompanied by Major General Paul W. Newgarden, Tiger commander; Major General Leven C. Allen and Brigadier General George H. Weems of the Infantry School; Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton, Fort Benning commandant; and Brigadier Generals R. A. Grow and Morrill Ross of the 10th Armored Division.

Absent-minded substitution of the word "Love" instead of "Free" on the letter of a lieutenant did not retard delivery by our benevolent and understanding postal authority.

An Army Wife Shops In Columbus

by Phyllis

Spring is officially here! Prognosticators forecast the usual things in fashions. Fripperies and doodads are definitely out from now on. Women factory workers recently selected their choice for "The Ten Best Dressed Women Of The Year." Not all of us can wear the welder's helmets and riveter's overalls they choose. We can, though, be better dressed if we shop for values and quality. So let's do it.

From time immemorial, herbs have been accepted as excellent cress, not only for health but also for beauty. Countless women all over the world rely on the creams, powders and lipsticks from The Herb Farm Shop in London to care for soft, lovely skins. An ideal lotion for the present windy and sunny days ahead is Unner Powder Mist, which is also, as the name suggests, an excellent aid in keeping makeup and powder fresh for hours. Perfumes and toilet waters produced by this famous house are exquisite fragrances of lilac, white phlox, green mace, royal purple and the number one scent and favorite of the Queen of England, Night Scented Stock. This intriguing merchandise is displayed exclusively in Columbus by KIRALFY'S. In addition to the distinctive cosmetics, they also have unusual culinary herbs which even could not match the most intricate recipe of Escoffier. An attractive gift bowl containing assorted vinegars, herbs, and herbal seasoned salts can later be used for mixing salads. A wooden fork and spoon has been thoughtfully included in this combination. Another especially eye-catching value is a practical Lazy Susan cruet set of tarragon, basil, garlic, elder and eschalot onion. If you have a yen for tasty flavors in your favorite dishes, this is an unusual opportunity.

Many an Army wife will be pleased to view the foresighted Easter fashions at J. A. KIRVEN CO. Practical as we must be in wartime, the store has blossomed out for spring with smart dresses, hats and accessories which shall bloom for ever more. Ambling though the main floor, as well as upstairs, I was attracted by dresses which would be delightfully dependable from the coming holiday season on. Versatile coats in the newest shades are available to top a sun's spring print or dark sheer. Hats of unpretentious charm thoughtfully chosen here would combine with any of these dresses to make a truly tireless costume. I had a really intriguing time seeing countless beautiful gloves and bags and appropriate shoes so perfect for today and seasons of tomorrows. Everything throughout each corner of this up-to-the-minute store has been chosen keeping in mind that women nowadays will shop and shop endlessly for durable values and fashionwise merchandise. I know you'll quickly realize, as I did, that this is your chance to look right and lovely under Georgia's sun and stars for many months ahead.

MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY has a wonderful stock of children's footwear. Growing boys and girls need correct shoes from the time they stop wearing little booties. This concern carries the Scientific shoe which is ideal when little tots are just taking their first shaky steps. This shoe gets them off to a good start developing their arches. The soft elk leathers and unlined moccasin leathers are extremely pliable and give the toes plenty of room. The tops are not too high and yet they are just high enough to give good support to the ankles. I also noticed a grand selection in the famous Edwards type shoe. These are nicely executed in a tan oxford or a black patent and a white calf one strap for spring. Inasmuch as older boys and girls are limited to three pairs of shoes, just the way we grownups are, it is more than ever necessary to have excellent quality and correct fit. A careful check by an X-ray machine and the cooperation of experienced fitters makes certain that every youngster will be wearing the perfect shoe for his type foot. A mistake in fit might well change the walk of your little boy or girl so it really pays to buy where this could never happen. Youngsters always beg for new shoes to wear in their own Easter parade so take care of this shopping now.

"To wear with confidence." . . . I've said that before, and I say it emphatically again today when quality is ever more important. You can have confidence in the timely collection of suits at KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. A suit which would certainly be a duration darling is a virgin wool tweed with threads of royal blue, brown and white patterned to give an all-over checked effect. It is tailored with painstaking care, so necessary in this trim type suit. In these days of skimpy hems and even skimpier pleats, the ever-so-wide pleat and hem of the skirt is worth noting. Careful detail-oring to stand up to the extra demands of wartime is noticeable in an aqua wool gabardine suit. Softly tailored, the minute hand stitching adds a fashionable touch around the lapels and down the front of the long jacket. This popular shop also has a real knockout of a suit in hounds-tooth check of black and white. The red crepe lined swagger jacket boasts matching square buttons. The black skirt has intricate pockets inside the front. And to top all this, although the suit certainly needs no extra filip, is a short sleeved scarlet wool blouse fashioned after a man's weskit. Any one or all of these suits will certainly serve you long and loyally on the home front.

If you've been keeping your "news" ear tuned to your radio, you've undoubtedly heard the good word about SCHWOBILT catering to women. Innumerable swatches and patterns are on display in the delightful showroom at 947 Broadway so you can dilly-dally all you wish until you've decided just what type tailored suit or coat you'd like them to make. I had a more-or-less inside peek at several suits already finished for some lucky women. There were suits of imported worsted mohair, delicate plaid shetlands, and various shades of gabardines. Especially lovely was a suit and matching top coat in the poodle-dog shade called "Genieke," which is browner than beige but beiger than brown. The joy of picking your very own material and style is heightened by knowing it won't be necessary to return for fitting after fitting. An expert tailor makes a complete record of your measurements and, of course, notes any unusual details to which you wish him to pay particular attention. All you do then is wait a few days and drop around and try on your completed suit. Don't you look lovely? Isn't it well tailored? And isn't your new suit just what you had been hoping for? Of course it is!

WRBL Slates Bond Auction By Radio

Fort Benning is going to cooperate with Radio Station WRBL in a radio auction to stimulate sale of war bonds on a special program April 12.

The Bayonet is asking for articles to be auctioned. Do any of our celebrities have some little thing which they would be willing to donate to the cause?Do any of you have hobbies of making things, one of which you might donate?

If you are willing to help make the war bond sale a success, call the public relations office and we'll help you or explain further details. But the time is getting short. Give us a ring right away.

Uniform Shop To Join 'Center' Early Next Week

First shop to be moved to the new "shopping center" now being built near the Main Exchange on the Post at Fort Benning will be the Fort Benning Exchange Uniform Department, it was announced by Lt. Col. Harold McCaffey, exchange officer.

The uniform department will be closed Thursday and Friday for taking inventory and moving to its new location, just south of the Howard Bus Station in the new building adjacent to the Main Branch of the Exchange. It is expected to be ready for opening by the first of the week.

chief of the British Commandos, and other high-ranking British and American army officers.

Completing their tour of the Infantry School, the guests inspected troops of the Tenth Armored Division in combat training. Major General Paul W. Newgarden, commanding general of the division, Brig. Gen. Robert A. Grow, commanding general of Combat Command A and Brig. Gen. Morrill C. Ross, commanding general of combat B, escorted the visitors through the Tenth Armored's area.

A spectacular display of fire power of an armored division was staged for the visitors at Range 9. Most of the basic weapons of the armored unit fired live ammunition.

Among the displays at Range 9 were the firing of an Infantry platoon with mortars, rifles, light machineguns and tommy guns. The deadly M-7 tank destroyer, which was used effectively in the rout of Rommel from El Alamein, mounting a 105 m.m. howitzer on a medium tank chassis, fired at point targets.

The highly mobile and maneuverable self-propelled 37 mm. anti-tank gun likewise was fired at point targets. A platoon of medium tanks fired co-axial mounted .30 cal. machine guns at moving tanks, spitting live ammunition and tracers at the targets which lent realism to the demonstration.

Light and medium tanks staged a demonstration. The M-5 light tanks fired their 37 mm. guns and machine guns at point targets while the M-4 General Sherman tanks also fired.

As the party of visitors toured through the Tenth Division's area, the following displays were arranged which the visitors observed: A mobile water purification unit, division train's supply depot and staging area, field message center, field aid station, tenton wrecker with light tank, anti-aircraft battery in position, and field maintenance stations.

Completing the tour of the Tenth Armored Division, the visitors returned to the main post and boarded their plane at Lawson field, taking off for their next destination.

Sgt. Swift claims that the St. Mihiel drive was the heaviest artillery battle in the history of the World War and the Argonne drive was the most severe.

Sgt. Swift left the regular army in 1922 as first sergeant. He served a hitch in the National Guard, one hitch in the Regular Army Reserve and one hitch in the U. S. Coast Guard, where he was discharged as first class petty officer.

He re-enlisted as private, February 7, 1942 and was assigned to the Field Artillery, Fort Bragg, N. C. He was transferred to the Air Corps later.

Eden—

ery's British Eighth Army smashing through prepared positions of the Germans and threatening their last stand.

Mr. Eden has extended the congratulations of the British people on the American victories in the South Pacific, mentioning particularly the recent destruction of the large Japanese convoy.

"The British people," he said, "have watched with interest the intense prowess of American forces and their Australian comrades in arms in the Pacific theater. The British people would want me to extend to you their warmest congratulations on the signal victory in which American forces destroyed the Japanese convoy recently."

NEVER AGAIN

In speaking of war aims at his press conference, Mr. Eden said "the important thing is to take precautions this time" so that Germany and Japan would never be able to start this thing again."

"That is fundamental," he continued. "We should not adopt the same attitude as the last time. I don't think it is wise just to set up a new government in Germany and trust to luck. We have got to take precautions in both Germany and Japan."

"Italy is different. I don't think the Italian menace will be a long enduring one."

COLLABORATION

In touching upon post-war problems, the British Foreign Secretary again emphasized collaboration among the members of the United Nations, mentioning particularly Britain, America and Russia.

"That kind of collaboration," he went on, "is pretty well indispensable if we are going to have a stable peace after the war. I don't mean any exclusive collaboration. It, of course, would bring in China and would be the foundation for the kind of collaboration we would like to see among all members of the United Nations."

O. C. Breaks M-1 Record

Firing Gun For Second Time In His Life Crain Loses 2 Points

Firing the M-1 rifle for the second time in his life, Hugh F. Crain, an officer candidate in the Third Company of the Second Student Training Regiment, has just broken all records of the M-1 rifle at Fort Benning with a score of 338 out of a possible 340.

The previous range record here was 336 and the highest score made by an officer candidate was 332; until Crain, who is a native of Carthage, Mo., topped both records. His only shots outside the bullseye were two at 500 yards.

In addition to Crain, the regiment now has such rifle experts as Oscar L. Gallman, officer candidate in the 30th Company, holder of the Knuble Trophy and top rifleman on the 1940 Infantry team at Camp Perry; and First Sergeant Joe B. Sharp of the Fifth Company, coach of many winning Infantry teams at Camp Perry and himself an international champion and member of the U. S. 1930 team which won the international rifle championship in Belgium.

Lieut. John V. Baker established a new low in understatement when, following the sinking of his ship, sent his mother a message saying "Not much news. Will let you know if anything happens."

A tourniquet should not be tightened beyond the bare point necessary to stop bleeding and a tag inscribed with the exact time of application must be conspicuously attached to the casual.

Blackstone The Magician Scheduled For 5 Days

Necromancer Bringing Large Company To Aid In USO Show

Blackstone, the greatest magician in the world, who boasts he carries no mirror with him nor does he require any trapdoors to be cut in the stage on which he performs, will bring his company of 15 and other star acts to Fort Benning for a five-night stand beginning Tuesday, March 30.

These adventures into the world of the occult are coming to Benning through arrangements made by Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer, with USO-Camp Shows.

The show will play at the Main Theater Tuesday, March 30, at 6:45 and 8:45 p. m. and Wednesday, March 31, at 6:45 p. m. The 8:45 p. m. performance that night will be for colored personnel only.

Blackstone and his company will be at Theater No. 7 in the Sand Hill Area Thursday, April 1, at 7 and 9 p. m. The show will play two nights in the Harmony Church Area, Friday, April 2, at 7 and 9 p. m. in Theater No. 11, and Saturday, April 3, at 7 and 9 p. m. in Theater No. 4.

GIRLIE SHOW

With his large company of talented assistants, Blackstone is said to offer the most pretentious magic show ever to be presented anywhere. Girls predominate in the show.

Ghostly seances, spirit writing and mysterious experiments with the audience participating are on the show's menu. Titles of a few of the acts are The Girl and the Tree, The Girl and the Bush, The Water Fountain, The Enchanted Fountain, The Girl in the Electric Cabinet, The Girl on the Trapeze, The Man With the Whiskers, and others.

Blackstone is now in his thirtieth year on tour as the world's leading magical entertainer.

In addition to the magic show, Frank Boss and Anita Pierre, comedy impersators, will be featured. They will do take-offs on prominent personages, and Miss Pierre will sing.

The Clark Sisters, Ann, Peggy, Jean and Mary, will offer their delightful harmonies, both sweet and hot. They first appeared with Buddy Rogers and his orchestra before they were in their 'teens and have since been on Bing Crosby's Music Hall program, have sung with the orchestras of Benny Goodman and Shep Fields and were featured attractions during the recent season at the Hotel McAlpin in New York.

And then there's Monroe and Grant, the latter having been "big time" for 25 years. Consolo and Melba have just joined the unit.

BLACKSTONE WAVES WAND, RESULT—BEAUTIES!

The Thrift Shop Proves Bargain-Hunter's Paradise

Scribe Discovers Miniature Caledonian Market Place

By PVT. THOMAS DEVINE

As most of us have discovered, the Army thinks of everything so here, on Wold Ave., hard by dispensary A we have a miniature Caledonian market where you can buy (at a bargain, mind you) a set of Wedgwood plates, an electric toaster, a guitar and, if not a Schiaparelli original, then at least a passable copy by Klein (You know, "on the Square).

The Thrift Shop is the result of a rummage sale held about three years ago by the Society of Army Daughters of which Mrs. S. R. Tupper is president. So successful was this event that the Daughters decided to make it perpetual and established a sort of eternal rummage sale in a shed in the Quartermasters' area. Continued success and expediency impelled the enterprise to move to its present situation in 1941, where it has flourished ever since.

HUMANITY LOVES IT

Humanity in general, but the feminine gender more particularly, loves a bargain and, regardless of a girl's financial status she would rather buy a thing at a bargain price even if it might cost less new in a regular retail shop. And, if you think that only the poor and underprivileged go in for second-hand, just drop in to the Parke-Bernet Auction Galleries the next time you're in New York and you'll see more millionaires to the square foot than you'd believe possible. They're so plentiful they seem to be coming out of the woodwork.

By the same token a military parallel may be witnessed any morning in the week or all day on Thursday which are the bankers' hours of the Thrift Shop. A general's lady exulting over a few precious square feet of chicken wire to guard her flower beds from the punitive operations of the squirrels or a sergeant's wife clutching an electric toaster the like of which she cannot find in a sivilian operated shop.

CHICHI ATMOSPHERE

Lest the foregoing give the impression of a very chichi atmosphere let it be hastily said that there is actually as much to interest the private of limited possessions as there is in the way of household goods.

If, for example an ill-advised newspaper item before your induction, prevented you from bringing a travelling bag along with you and you find yourself on the brink of a furlough utterly without luggage, for six bits or so you can wangle yourself a not too bad suitcase or satchel which will serve your purpose very well.

Should you, on the other hand, be one of those public menaces with a passion for doleful hillbilly music you can buy a guitar for a small sum at the Thrift Shop and drive the rest of the garrison to drink (if they need any further incentive) by strumming an accompaniment to "The Wabash Cannon Ball" for hours on end. (N. B. Non addicts of such rustic symphonies might club together and buy up all available stringed instruments as a preventive measure).

YOU'LL BE SURPRISED

You smart young things who have houses here on the post and are "getting along on a shoestring, my dear" might hike over and haunt the Thrift Shop from time to time. In case you didn't know it the smartest interior decorators get considerable material from just such sources and, after applying a little paint and imagination, sell it to you at respectable prices.

Most of those chic furniture props you see as a background for Balenciaga models in Vogue and Harper's Bazaar were salvaged from some second-hand shop on Second Avenue (N. Y. C.), whooped up a bit with a can of paint, a few yards of cotton fringe or striped sateen.

To be perfectly specific: there is a marble-topped Victorian parlor table there at the preseit writing. In its present state it is more curious than useful. However, if it were cut in two, painted a flat white or pastel shade and the carvings picked out in gold you'd have a very smart pair of consoles to attach to the wall in the foyer or dining room. You have to be on the ball, girls, when you're an army wife. After all it doesn't cost any more to live in a smart and comfortable house than a stiff and stupid one if you put that brilliant imagination of yours to work and add a bit of elbow lubrication.

PROFITS TO CHARITY

It's always a comfort to know that you're doing good to others at the same time you're benefiting yourself. The personnel of the Thrift Shop, which is managed by Mrs. Hamilton Thorn, assisted by Mrs. W. R. Desobry, includes but two paid workers, the rest being volntary.

The merchandise sources are just where they find them though, of course, most of the items come from residents or persons attached tothe Port. Some commodities are donated outright, while others are placed uon consignment by the owners. The shop authorities will place these on sale for three months. If sold, the shop takes 10 percent of the selling price and the former owner gets the balance.

The proceeds from the shop have been contributed to the obstetric ward of the hospital, the Red Cross, furnishing of a day room, and other worthy causes.

Seniority in U. S. decorations belongs to The Congressional Medal of Honor. It is given to officers and enlisted men of all the services for conspicuous galantry in actual combat beyond the call of duty.

Bandsman Blizzard Blows Blasts; Aims At Alligator Aggregation

"Of course swing is in my blood, why, even my corcuscles are Hep."

That's the way Pvt. Albert D. Blizzard, Headquarters Company, Third Battalion, 124th Infantry, testified about his musical background.

Pvt. Blizzard comes from a long line of musicians. His mother beats out on the piano and organ; his Dad slides along with a trombone; while his brother blew a hot trumpet in Charlie Barnett's band, before he enlisted in the army. Blizzard, himself, swung an alto sax in Artie Shaw's aggregation until he auditioned before his local draft board doctors. Now his rhythmical background is being put to use on the manual of arms, as he is one of the newest recruits in the Gator Regiment.

At the age of 16, while still attending high school, he joined a band which was on tour for the entire summer. Winding up the one-night stands, he returned to his scholastic studies in the fall. But the call of the wild and hot melodies won out over the tame and cold facts of high school learning, and Blizzard quit school the following year to follow in the footsteps of the jive-masters.

Blizzard has tooted his sax in such famous places as the Meadowbrook, N. J., Hotel Sherman, Chicago, Strand Theater, New York, and several spots in Greenwich Village.

When Blizzard completes his basic training, he expects to join the 124th Infantry Band and then really get in the groove with the Gators.

Corporal Aiken Writes Song

Lyrics To Be Published, Played Over Network

A song, "Just for the Sake of a Memory," which has been accepted for publication by a West Coast music firm and which soon will make its debut on a nationally broadcast radio program, has been composed by Cpl. Earl L. Aiken, a clerk in the personnel section of the Third Student Training regiment's headquarters.

Apparently very well pleased with the quality of Corporal Aiken's song, the publishing firm has offered him a contract for publication of any other songs he now has available and those he may develop in the near future.

An indefatigable tracer of new melodic patterns, the corporal declares the disjointed fragments of "Just for the Sake of a Memory" occurred to him as far back as two years ago. It was in the Headquarters Company day room, at the company piano, however, where he recently eradicated the rough edges of the song and added the fill-ins and modulations which give it the smooth ,dreamy qualities it possesses.

Corporal Aiken had his own band while a student at Lenoir Rhyne college in his own home city of Hickory, N. C., and assisted in the production of the first of a series of "Campus Capers" shows which have become at annual event at Lenoir Rhyne, where he was graduated with a B. A. degree.

He composed the music for three Army shows produced at Camp Croft, S. C., where he underwent his basic training. Several of his unpublished pieces have been broadcast from North Carolina radio stations.

Corporal Aiken writes both words and music for his songs, and inspiration for the lyrics invariably arrives simultaneously with his discovery of a novel tone structure. When free of his duties, he usually can be found in his company day-room working out the myriads of ideas for songs which flash through his brain at odd moments during the day.

Eight Finance Men Promoted

Eight enlisted men of the Detachment Finance department, Fourth Service command, have been given promotions upon the recommendation of their detachment commander.

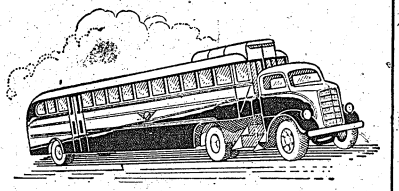
Technician Fourth Grade Russell S. Emig has been promoted to technician third grade, and Technicians Fifth Grade Frank J. Hundt and George W. Keegan have been appointed technicians fourth grade. Privates First Class Carmine C. Di Donato and Walter J. Malle have been advanced to technicians fifth grade, and Privates Leslie C. Schrage, Oscar D. Cummins and Calvin H. Oslin have been promoted to privates first class.

Soldiers Entitled To Rationed Goods While Furloughed

Under Office of Price Administration rationing regulations, soldiers on furlough for seven days or more are entitled to obtain quantities of rationed foods which may be used to supplement the rations of the soldier's family or friends with whom he is spending his furlough, according to word reaching Fort Benning.

The soldier may have one-half pound of sugar and 16 points for processed food for each week or fraction thereof of his furlough. He is also entitled to one pound of coffee for each ration period.

The extra rations may be obtained by the soldier by presenting his furlough papers to the local War Price and Ration Board functioning in the area where he is visiting. The board will write or stamp its designation upon the furlough papers and will then issue certificates in the proper amount for each of the commodities requested by the soldier. The certificates so obtained may be used at all grocery stores in the same fashion as are ration stamps and will be worth the same quantity of food products or the number of points written thereon.



It is expected that the forthcoming regulations covering the rationing of meat, cheese and fats or oils, and canned fish, will contain similar provisions for soldiers on furlough, except that the soldier need be on furlough only three days or more to obtain them, receiving eight points for each three days of furlough or fraction thereof.

Twenty-two bucks a month are deducted from servicemen's pay under the S. D. A. A. This deduction is made whether his dependents are in class A (wife and child, or children) or class B (parents, brother, sister and grandchild). However, if an allowance is paid to dependents in both class A and class B, $27 will be deducted from his pay.

THE fashion magazine, "Harper's Bazaar", publishes two pages showing a row of young models . . . each in an original dress creation. Each is drinking an original creation in refreshment . . . ice-cold Coca-Cola. Thumb the pages of magazines and you see Coke in picture after picture. Note how shops and stores feature "Coke-Bars" for their customers' refreshment.

Coca-Cola had to be good to get where it is. The finished art of 57 years' experience is in its making. The result is a different kind of refreshment—all the difference between something truly refreshing and just something to drink.

The only thing like Coca-Cola is Coca-Cola, itself—the trade-marked product of The Coca-Cola Company. There's no comparison.

'Enemy Alien' Has Hard Uphill Climb to OCS

Weill Thought Maginot Line Was Impregnable

From French soldier to American immigrant to "enemy alien" to American soldier to American citizen to future officer candidate in the Army of the United States—this is the saga of T-3 George C. Weill of the Division Finance Office, 10th Armored Division.

George Weill was born in Alsace, 21 years ago, and he grew up like any other French boy of the post-war priod. He received his schooling in Dieuze, one of the oldest towns in France, with a history dating back to Roman times. After finishing school he entered the "Credit Lyonnais," a secret banking institution with 1400 branches, and in seven years he had risen to the position of assistant to the head of the commercial draft department. All in all, he was doing well for himself.

To Louisiana

It was at this stage of his life that fate prepared his first turning point. An uncle in Louisiana wrote and asked him to come to America to live, and after weighing the matter carefully the young banker gave up his job and bought his passage to the United States. He arrived in New York early in 1939 and proceeded on to Louisiana.

At first, of course, he was handicapped by his ignorance of English but he soon found a job in the accounting department of a large store, where he got along all right because "figures are the same in any language." Three years passed and then came Pearl Harbor. Weill, to his consternation, found himself listed as an enemy alien, but four months later his status had been sufficiently clarified to permit his induction into the army. In July, 1942, he became an American citizen, and the cycle was completed.

his background that he was promptly sent to the army finance school at Indianapolis, Ind., for special training. And now Sgt. Weill has been accepted for O. C. S.

DEEPLY GRATEFUL

For the good fortune he has enjoyed as a resident and citizen of the United States, Sgt. Weill is deeply grateful. He would, indeed, be very happy if it were not for the fact that his mother, father and three brothers are still in France. Up until September he heard from them regularly since they were in Unoccupied France, but there have been no letters since the Nazis moved last fall to occupy the entire nation. One of the brothers was a lieutenant, and in the brief, tragic Battle of France, he was wounded three times.

Weill served his year with the French army after he reached his 20th birthday, and he saw and learned enough to convince him that the defenses of France were impregnable. For seven months he served as secretary to a colonel whose mission, in wartime, was to defend a sector of the Maginot Line, and in connection with his duties Weill spent one month in this tremendous fortification. The Line was incomplete at that time but Weill, nevertheless, was "amazed at the strength" of the structure.

IMPOSSIBLE HAPPENED

"I never thought I would live to see the day when Germany would invade France again after I saw those fortifications," he says today, "but the impossible happened."

Weill believes that the great mistake of France was her "insistence on a war of position instead of a war of movement and speed." He attributes her defeat to inefficiency and corruption in industry and to the work of the fifth columnists. The French army, he stoutly maintains, was a good army, well-trained and disciplined.

"The loss of the war was certainly not the soldiers' fault," he holds.

Today Weill has two great objectives: to give his best as an American soldier to the cause of the United Nations, and to bring his family to the United States. As he expresses it:

"I can only hope and pray for the best, having confidence in Uncle Sam and in a quick invasion of Europe by the Allies."

WAAC's Allowed To Allot Pay For War Bonds

Members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps are authorized to make allotments from their pay under the provisions and regulations governing allotments of pay for officers and enlisted men of the army, according to an announcement received at post headquarters today.

A full interpretation of this new ruling was not available. However, Major George Finz, post war bond officer, said that members of the WAACs are eligible to participate in the pay reservation plan, and urged all to invest regularly in war saving bonds. The same limitations as to minimum amount deductible prevails as for army officers and men.

At the same time it was revealed by Lt. John W. Inzer, post insurance officer that WAACs are not, under the present interpretation, eligible for National Service life insurance.

Lt. General George S. Patton

O. C. Who Participated In Hitler's Early Sweep Relates Experiences

'Schultz' Says His Men Had No Stomach For Their Grim Task

A story of corruption, drab daily existence in training camp, and low morale in general in the Army of one of Hitler's satellite nations was unfolded Wednesday by O. C. Douglas Schultz of the First Student Training Regiment.

Schultz adopted this name when he received his citizenship papers recently. His true name is withheld for the protection of his relatives still in Europe.

At twenty-three, he was drafted into the army. Due to his education, he was given the opportunity to study for the rank of officer and was made the equivalent of our rank of second lieutenant. What follows of the description of conditions in that army should make the readers of this article grateful for the privilege to serve in our army. Describing conditions, he said:

"Due to corruption and poor planning, funds destined for food went to the officers' mess or into their pockets. The poorest types of food were furnished. Frozen potatoes, spoiled and cheap grade meat, and low grade, black, stickey bread were not uncommon. Fresh fruits and vegetables, milk, butter and eggs, fowl, and vitamins were not a part of their rations. As a private I required food from home, as I couldn't get along on the food provided. When a soldier wanted a package from home, he wanted bread and salami, not trinkets. These were not unusual conditions to the privates because their condition in civil life were no better.

NO SHOWERS

"Conditions generally were of similar character. No showers or baths were provided in camps for the private and he managed a bath perhaps once a month in the public baths in nearby towns. I was issued on induction one pair of wraps to serve as socks. These served the purpose well, but the soldiers had no laundry service and as an officer on inspection of barracks at night, I can assure you that the stench was almost unbearable.

"Few soldiers carried toilet articles to promote his personal hygiene. There was much sickness, but not so much reported. Treatment given them was rough and unwilling. Consequently, a soldier reported only when absolutely necessary. When he recovered, he was restricted for a period equal to the period of illness as punishment for being sick. There are no dentists. If a tooth is bad, the doctor pulls it.

DRAB EXISTENCE

"No attempt is made to give the soldier an enjoyable existence. There are no libraries, no service clubs, no day rooms, no theatres, or Chaplains to help them with their troubles and no athletic equipment furnished. He is paid the equivalent of two dollars per month and with it, he is able to afford about six packages of cigarettes or an evenings entertainment in the nearby village, without many of the ordinary American soldier's idea of trimmings.

"There is on teaching of individual leadership possible, for two reasons. The first is that the average intellect of the soldier is very low. About twenty per cent are illiterate and another forty percent have an equivalent of a few grades education. They can barely read and write. Their inborn intellect is normal but undeveloped, and for this reason, it is very slow and difficult teaching them.

NO INITIATIVE ALLOWED

"The more important reason, however, is that they are afraid of individual leadership and do not want the soldier to have abilities along that line. Their training is along lines of mass following of the leader. There is no encouragement for individual ideas, and it is unheard of for a private to speak up with an idea. He speaks to his officers only when spoken to and then only answers questions. This failing was apparent to me in all of the fascist armies of Europe, including the German army, and I believe this failing will be their downfall on the field of battle. This difference also creates a soldier whose heart is not as strong in defeat as it is in victory.

"I participated in one occupation, and can assure you that the spirit of those taken over was not favorable, as you at that time were told, and that the soldiers under me had no stomach for the task. They were interested only in getting home, and indirectly, requests to that effect reached me daily.

"The invasion of Poland convinced me that further resistance to the Germans was useless and that only by getting to America could I work toward the downfall of Nazism.

"Arriving in New York in 1940, I took a job as a dishwasher. In my sparge time, I studied at night to gain proficiency in the American language. My lack of knowledge of English caused me to lose many jobs. In fact, I had twelve different jobs prior to my induction in August, 1942.

"After Pearl Harbor, I realized that my change had come to lend my efforts toward the liberation of Europe from slavery. Three times I attempted to volunteer, but each time I was rejected. Since then, I have gained citizenship and can truthfully say that the day I received it was the first day of my life that I experienced the feeling of freedom.

"With the spirit in which we fight and the ends to which we aspire, I am sure we can only be victorious in this war."

Yea-Ha Spurs War Bond Sales

1st STR Buys More Securities For Cash

Putting "Yea-Ha" into War Bond and Stamp sales to officer candidates, "Certainly gets the job done," according to Lt. Norman D. Martin, 14th Co., 3rd Bn., 1st STR.

"Yea-Ha!" originated by Lt. Col. John S. Roosma for his 3rd Battalion means: "Be alive, work hard, be loyal, never quit, think!"

"It is exactly this progress which was applied to our initial March War Bond campaign," Lt. Martin explained. "Most of the O. C. S. of our company were already buying bonds on the allotment plan but we felt that a spirited drive might produce increased results and it did!

NO SALES PRESSURE

"There was no sales-pressure of any kind; it was all on a 'Yea-Ha!' basis. We spent five minutes in talking it over and the first day sold approximately a thousand dollars worth of bonds and stamps on a cash basis. And these sales were made to a small company.

"Of course, we intend to continue the program. O. C.s are sold on the investment value of war bonds; they simple need a little 'Yea-Ha!' and convenience in purchasing to jump at the opportunity to buy. From our initial results we would say that Benning's officer candidate classes offer an extensive and neglected market."

Collection of the money for the war bonds and stamps and purchase of them for the men was made by Lt. Martin.

"Encouragement of officer candidates in habits of thrift, certainly has a place in our training," believes Capt. John J. Wrinn, 14th Company commander, "and we don't know what better direction we can turn this training than to war bonds."

Bootblacks In Top Hats Attract Wide Attention

3rd STR Private Built Up Chain Of Elite Polishers

Anyone would look twice at a bootblack plying his trade while faultlessly attired in a mess jacket and top hat.

Capitalizing on this idea, Private, First Class, Mearon Harper of Company A, Third Student Training Regiment Service Battalion, built up a chain of "TOP HAT" shoe shining parlors in San Francisco which were patronized by celebrities of the sports and entertainment worlds.

Harper's well dressed bootblacks drew the attention of the local press and even the radio. Among his patrons were Ted Lewis and Duke Ellington, the band leaders; Bob Hope and Jerry Colonna, the comedians; Henry Armstrong, the fighter; Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee slugger, and George Bowles, the manager of the Golden Gate Theater. Girls of the "Vanities" cast likewise sent all their shoes to the "TOP HAT" for shining.

Harper, a native of Chicago, opened his first shop in a San Francisco neighborhood where a top hat was certain to be a sensation. This shop later was enlarged and business grew to the point where it was necessary to open two more shops.

While on a well-earned vacation in Chicago, Harper was taken into the Army via Selective Service. He spent two months at Fort McClellan before coming to Fort Benning.

Recent addition to the quaint initial groups in national war effort are the WIRES, a body of civil servants being trained as radio instructors and technicians to replace men. If you haven't already guessed, the letters represent "Women In Radio and Electrical Service."

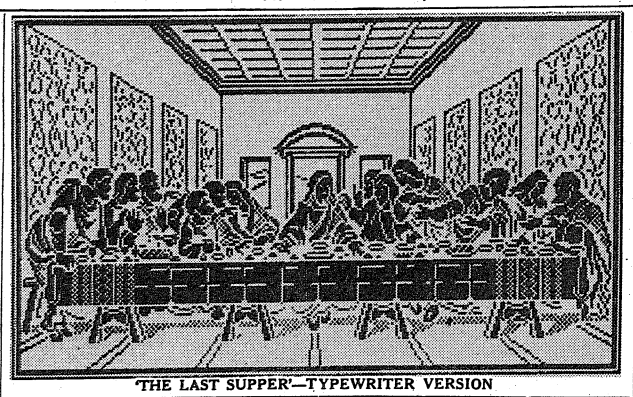
Sergeant Produces Art Designs On Typewriter

Bauer's Work Makes Ripley's 'Believe It Or Not'

They look like tapestries as they hang on the walls of Master Sergt. Kenneth L. Bauer's quarters but closer inspection shows that they're actually objects of typewriter art.

Turning out original designs and reproductions of art works with only a typewriter as his medium is a hobby of Sergt. Bauer which he took up several years ago and found so fascinating that he has kept it up ever since.



Sergt. Bauer is manager of the Post Theater and his quarters, in true tradition of the theater, are in a revamped dressing room behind the stage of the old post theater, now being utilized for the Army Post Office. There he has hung up his masterpieces, together with other mementoes of an army career that dates back to his enlistment in 1917. He served with organizations guarding the Mexican border, was just about to go overseas with a newly trained division when the Armistice was signed—and then decided to remain in the army. He came to Camp Benning back in October 1921 when the only permanent building was the Service Club.

HOW HE WORKS

He makes his works of typewriter art by first preparing a detailed working drawing or blueprint, using a magnifying glass to pick out the pattern. He then follows it on the machine, generally using the Ampersand, or @ sign, unlike most typewriter artists, who favor the X. He does use the X for some pictures, however.

He spends many hours preparing the pattern, then more hours go into the amazingly detailed work of producing the finished picture. Some are done to look like crocheted tapestries; others to reproduce works of art such as Whistler's Portrait of His Mother; others are original studies such as pictures of birds or animals.

Sergt. Bauer won an army hobby contest with his unusual pastime and also has been used as a subject by Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" cartoon.

Mrs. Jack Furcorn, 55-A, has been ill for several days. Her friends hope for her a speedy recovery.

FUN AND FROLICS

The Teeners club was host to the young people of the village Friday night when a party was given in the Recreation hall. Around fifty young people gathered and played games and danced for several hours, after which refreshments were served. The hall was beautifully decorated in green and white in honor of St. Patrick's Day.

The enlisted and civilian families are invited to the dance to be given in the Recreation hall Saturday night, March 27. Plans are being made for a large dance, and all of those who come will be assured of a good time. Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock.

Little Dickie Harper celebrated his fifth birthday with a party given for his friends in the nursery school Monday afternoon in the Recreation hall. Eighteen children were invited to the party and participated in games and songs led by Mrs. Harper and their teachers, Mrs. Minnie Trapp and Mrs. Berta Wilson. The table was beautifully decorated with chocolate cake and white icing, and red, white and blue favors and nut cups. Cake and ice cream were served.

Ladies interested in sewing for the Red Cross will meet Thursday afternoon at 2:30, EWT, at the home of Mrs. O. L. Greene, 52-H.

The Men's Brotherhood of the Benning Park Baptist church will meet at the home of Sgt. J. A. Strozier, 65-A, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, EWT.

The Girls' Auxiliary, Royal Ambassadors, and Sunbeams will meet at the Baptist church Saturday at 2 o'clock, EWT.

Catholic services are held each Sunday morning in the auditorium at 9 o'clock, EWT. Confessions are heard before Mass.

Soldiers Told How To Get Back To Farm

No Furloughs Planned For Individuals; Units May Be Utilized

Procedures by which individual soldiers may obtain discharges to relieve the farm manpower shortage was outlined by the war department this week, although full details have not yet been received at Fort Benning, according to Lieut. Marvin L. Holland, assistant chief of the Military Personnel Branch at the post.

Simultaneous with this announcement, it was reiterated that the war department does not contemplate giving furloughs to individual soldiers to work on farms, but in case of emergencies, troops under command of their own officers, housed and fed by the Army and subject to military control may be sent into the fields.

Although the discharge of any appreciable number of soldiers under 38 is not contemplated, the War Department has set up a procedure by which individuals in this age group may be discharged in cases of extreme emergency. The soldier himself initiates htis procedure by submitting written explanation to his immediate commanding officer who will advise him as to what evidence he will need.

The application goes through military channels, to the Selective Service System in Washington which refers it to the soldier's local draft board. Each case is decided on its own merits, largely by the soldiers neighbors, and a discharge will be given only if the services of the individual are more important to agriculture than to the Army.

Soldier-farmers over 38 years of age should make out discharge applications before May 1. These requests must be accompanied by a letter or statement from local farm agents to the effect that the soldiers will be employed in essential agricultural activities if discharged. Such requests are made by the soldier to his immediate commanding officer. A soldier meeting these requirements will be discharged promptly unless his release will affect seriously the efficiency of his unit.

CURRENT EVENTS CANCELLED

The Current Events group of Woman's Club has been forced to cancel its regularly scheduled meeting due to circumstances beyond its control. Plans for the next session will be announced.

An army uniform may be worn, complete with insignia, for 90 days subsequent to discharge. Thereafter, provided buttons and insignia are removed, it may be worn indefinitely.

Class 'A' Pay Reservations Stop April 1

Cancellation Will Be Automatic; New Class 'B' Substituted

Military personnel were reminded today by Major George Fink, post war bond officer, that all class A pay reservations now in effect will automatically terminate April 1.

It will not be necessary to fill out a Change or Cancellation Form , 304-5. By War Department order all reservations of this type held by military personnel, will cease with March deductions. No new class A deducations will be accepted.

Supplementing the older subscriptions, is a class B reservation operating similar to the former type. Under this system enlisted man may authorize deducations starting at $3.75 monthly, and deductions for officers range from $18.75 to $375. In all there are 11 different plans offered enlisted men, and seven for officers. Allotments authorized under this setup will commence with the April payroll.

New Plan Urged

All persons now holding class A reservations are urged to fill out form 29-6, authorizing class B allotments, so that purchase of war savings securities will continue uninterrupted. Those forms may be secured through unit war bond officers, or directly from the post bond officer.

The new plan was inaugurated to facilitate certification and delivery of bonds to soldiers. It will no longer be necessary that actual cash be forwarded to the army War Bond Office, Chicago, Ill. A statement from an authorized certifying officer will be sufficient to start the mechanics into action.

Reservations now held by civilian personnel will in no way be affected by the Class B allotment program. Their pay reservation plan will continue as previously, according to Major Fink.

He noted, at the same time, that under a new streamlined system of bond delivery to civilians, most January and February purchases had been delivered, and that there was a noticeable increase in the amount being invested by these workers.

Work As Usual Slated At Post For Army Day

April 6 is Army Day—and Fort Benning will celebrate the day by maintaining the high-pitched tempo of its training of thousands of soldiers rather than take even a minute off to make the occasion.

This was announced today by Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post, who stated that "because of the extreme urgency with which our forces must be prepared for combat, neither the War Department nor Fort Benning officials consider it appropriate to diminish training activities, even to celebrate this annual event."

He further stated that diversion of any troops or equipment from essential war activities to participate in parades is considered by the War Department to be incompatible with the present war effort and national fuel and transportation shortages.

Large public dinners or other events in which military personnel would predominate also are considered out of order this year, General Fulton stated, because of the restrictions on food that have been applied throughout the nation.

Drunken Bandit Robs Boozed-Up Attendant

Starting Comedy Of Errors; Gives Back Money To Get Gun

During his tour of duty with the San Francisco metropolitan police force as radio patrolman, Major Daniel W. Danielson, student member of the Third Company, First Student Training Regiment, Fort Benning, recalls one most peculiar incident.

It concerns the case of a drunken robber. This culprit, much in his cups, entered a filling station at 4 a. m. and held up the operator, taking all money that was in the cash register. He then sauntered down the street swinging the money bag in one hand and fumbling with a cigar with the other.

But the station attendant did not call for the police when the intruder left. Instead he joined the robber in his walk and persuaded him to surrender his gun. The two then returned to the filling station, and the thief was about to exchange the money for the gun when Officer Danielson arrived in response to a telephone call from a bystander who had observed the robbery.

Major Danielson states the stick-up man was holding out for some small change — car fare across town. "I believe," the major explains, "had the trade been effected, the hold-up scene and its aftermath would have been repeated."

Lt. McNamara Heads Machine Records Unit

First Lieut. Thomas McNamara has been named officer in charge of the Fort Benning machine record unit to succeed Capt. Burton E. Moore, according to an announcement made at post headquarters.

Captain Moore, who assumed command of the unit seven months ago, will leave shortly for Washington, D. C., where he will be assigned to the Machine Record Branch, Adjutant General's Office.

Lieut. McNamara comes to Benning from headquarters of the Fourth Service Command in Atlanta. With him is Warrant Officer Arthur Fritz, who will take over duties as assistant to the officer in charge, a position formerly held by Warrant Officer E. D. Lewis, recently transferred to Fort Bragg, N. C.

The Officers R. & R. Club on Cusseta Road is by far the most popular place in Columbus for commissioned officers and their guests. Ask anyone on the reservation who has been there.

WRBL's Bond Drive To Start In Wooden Tank

Radio Station WRBL will get its War Bond radio auction underway Saturday with a broadcast from a novel booth to be set up at Twelfth Street and Broadway.

The program will begin at 4:30 p. m., Benning time, from the booth which will be in the form of a wooden tank. The tank will be termed an auxiliary of the Tenth Armored Division.

Major General Paul W. Newgarden, commanding officer of the Tenth Armored, will extend greetings, and many post officials will make short talks during the course of the program.

Ex-Fort Veteran On Duty In Africa Gets Merit Award

Master Sergt. H. T. Gurley, veteran of 22 years' service at Fort Benning, has been awarded the "Legion of Merit" while stationed in Africa, according to letters received by his wife, who lives at 833 First avenue, Columbus.

The awarde was made in recognition of long and exceptionally faithful service, his commanding officer, Col. S. R. Hinds, declared.

Sergeant Gurley has been on foreign service since Dec. 12, 1942, and is entitled to wear the American Defense Medal and the European-African Middle-Eastern campaign medal.

Enlisting on Aug. 7, 1920, he was a private with Company "I" of the 9th Infantry, and with Company "G" of the 22nd Infantry. From April 5, 1928, to Sept. 29, 1940, he served as a sergeant with Company "E" of the 29th Infantry.

He served as sergeant major of the Second Battalion from Sept. 29, 1940, to Sept. 10, 1942.

Gen. Marshall and Tweed Talk 'Turkey' on Tour Of Benning Last Week

Whenever General George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, comes to Fort Benning, he puts in a call for Master Sergeant Thomas Tweed, now chief range guard and game warden at the Post.

And Sergeant Tweed generally responds by bringing the Chief of Satff a wild turkey—provided the General's visit coincides with the proper season for shooting wild turkeys here.

The friendship began back in 1926, when Sergeant Tweed and General Marshall first went hunting on the reservation together. Sergeant Tweed, a native of White Rock, North Carolina, joined the Army in 1915, and served with troops guarding the Panama Canal during World War I. In 1919 he was sent to Fort Benning with the 29th Infantry, and later became a range guard. He has served in that capacity for 19 years.

WHERE IS TWEED?

On one occasion when General Marshall came to Fort Benning for a brief inspection tour, he put in a call for Sergeant Tweed. By the time the sergeant received the call, the General was about to board his plane at Lawson Field. Sgt. Tweed rushed to the field, but was denied admittance by a guard.

"Where the blankety blank is Tweed?" finally bellowed General Marshall. "I can't keep this plane waiting all day."

Aides scurried about, finally returning with the report that the sergeant was not being allowed past the gate.

"Well, tell them to let him through or I'll tear the blankety thing down myself," roared the General. "When I want to see a friend I don't want some guard holding him up."

Sergeant Tweed was passed through the gate without further delay.

It was the General's recent visit to the Fort, together with Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, and Sir John Dill, General Marshall kept the visiting dignitaries waiting while he introduced the sergeant to Mr. Eden and glowingly described the non-com's hunting prowess.

Sergeant Tweed is married and lives on the post with his wife and a 14-year-old daughter, Lillian Louise. Two sons are in the Army, one being Lieut. Earl Edward Tweed, who graduated from OCS at Fort Benning last July and now is taking a cannon course. The other, Erving Glenn Tweed, has completed training and his present whereabouts are unknown.

G. I. Summary Of World News

BY SGT. O. J. REMINGTON

THE GREATEST FOXHUNT in the history of the world is on, with the hounds of American and British forces harrying the Desert Fox, Rommel, as the main armies of the Allies seeking to bring him to earth come thundering along behind.

The British, who had previously breached the Mareth line, only to be pushed back again by the fiercely fighting Germans, now appear to have crumbled the entire line, while American troops to the North in Tunisia, are driving ahead in an effort to split Rommel off from the troops under Von Arnim. At last writing, Rommel was reported fleeing northward trying to make a junction with Von Arnim.

One wonders what efforts will be made to evacuate Rommel and his men from Tunisia, where they have put up such a stubborn resistance for so long. A pretty safe bet is that the German military machine may force Hitler to sacrifice him to the war-dogs now so hot on his heels. It's a very nasty little trick that Hitler has. Must be a great thing to be a German general and know that you'll get a swift kick in the slats for having been too good, too smart, too brave.

FIERCE BATTLES CONTINUE to rage in the Donets basin with mud hampering both the Nazi attackers and the Red defenders. As spring advances into summer, the Germans doubtless will make more herculean efforts to push ahead there. In the north, Russian troops still continue advances, endeavoring to encircle the strategic center of Smolensk. So far the armies appear locked.

In one of the biggest raids of the war, several hundreds of RAF bombers hit at Berlin while heavy squadrons of American planes struck by daylight at the railway yards of Rouen. Tremendous fires burned in Berlin following the attacks, which dumped 900 tons of bombs on the Nazi capital.

Not much activity during the week reported from the Far East. Japanese bombers hit at the Allied base of Oro bay, on New Guinea, and appearances are that the Japanese are still building up strength possibly for a major move.

An American naval detachment shelled Jap cruisers and destroyers at long range in the North Pacific, turning back a force headed for the Aleutians. It was the first surface exchange between ships in the Aleutians. The large Jap force of warships was escorting only two merchant ships, so it is believed generally that the Jap situation on Kiska must be desperate and that the enemy is trying to insure delivery of vitally needed war materials.

AS FOOD RATIONING started in a big way at home, housewives wrestled with the intricacies of the point system and the point values of some foods were reduced. Reports from Washington early in the week were that leaders of major farm organizations are expected to urge the president to give Food Administrator Chester C. Davis greater authority over farm prices.

At the same time, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard may be asked to take a commission to help co-ordinate the food production programs of U. S., Great Britain, Russia, and to develop production program for North Africa.

Predictions were being made of a record shortage in cotton and also of sugar by Rep. Fred Crawford of Michigan in

Civic Leaders To Be Guests Of Gen. Fulton

Luncheon To Tribute Muscogee Officials' Battle Against Venereals

Columbus and Muscogee county officials will be guests of Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, at a luncheon Friday at the Officers club, as a tribute to the progress and cooperation given in the Army's fight against prostitution and venereal disease, it was announced today.

"Civic authorities have shown their sincerity in wanting to handle these problems," General Fulton said, "and the Army wants to commend them and recognize their efforts."

A year ago, post officials said, conditions in Columbus and Phenix City were so bad that suggestions were being made that the problem of vice be turned over to federal authorities. In the year, however, much progress has been made and it is thought that if the same program in effect now is carried on, prostitution and venereal disease will no longer be major problems in this military area.

GUEST LIST

Representing the Army at the luncheon Friday will be Col. William Denton, station surgeon; Major James Loveless, venereal disease control officer; Major W. D. Veal, provost marshal; Major Russell J. Hammargren, public relations officer; and Lt. O. K. Marquardt, aide to General Fulton.

Local officials indicating that they would be present for the "victory" luncheon are: Edward Wohlwender, Jr., solicitor general; Judges T. Hicks Fort, Arthur Lynch, Solon Davis and T. L. Bowden; County Attorney Bentley Chappell; City Manager Marshall Morton; City Attorney William Worsley; Chief of Police John Newberry; J. W. Satterfield, county chief of police; Sheriff Arthur Poole, Mayor W. G. Bridges; Commissioners J. B. Knight, B. B. Key, Sterling Albrecht and E. G. Blanton; L. R. Aldredge, chairman of the county commission; County Commissioners L. P. Banks and T. G. Reeves; Dr. J. A. Thrash, city and county health commissioner; and Dr. J. G. Gainey, venereal disease control director for Muscogee county.

Theater No. 8 To Be Rebuilt

Reconstruction work has commenced on Theater No. 8, located in the last Student Training area, which was destroyed by fire last fall.

Major James C. Sutton, post theater officer, said however, that the new structure would not be ready before June. At present temporary facilities have been set up in one of the Infantry school classrooms, which is helping to relieve the load on the main picture house.

Novel Names Nonplus Nosey Newshound Noend

Thumbing through a card file of colored selectees inducted into the Army at the Reception Center recently disclosed a variety of names.

In an 18th century satire or a volume of Grimes Fairy Tales one could expect to find names like Nathaniel Coonrod, Peter Cabbagestalk, Timorrow Friday, Onward Standback, Livingstone Wildgoose, Parnell Goodenough or William Eggshell.

When it comes to length these may vie for a prize: George Booker Taliaferro Washington Collins; Thomas Pemuell Davis Howard Barron Conkle; Gerald Vasphere Dazzle Earnest Cortney Dangerfield.

A tongue twister is Earnest Jgwo.

Post Reception Center To Get Full-time Band

War Department Gives Approval To Organization

War department authorization for a full-time band has been received by the Reception Center, which is probably the first reception center in the country to receive such approval, Lieut. Col. Ulric N. James, commanding officer of the Reception Center, announced today.

Although the Center for the last year has possessed a band which has been called upon by many organizations to play for parades, the members were assigned to regular duties with various companies and were able to practice only at nights and in their spare time. The War Department authorization will permit the band to devote full time to musical activities.

ALL NOW ASSIGNED

Although some of the members of the band were assigned to the station complement many of them were attached only, and were liable to transfer at any moment. One result of the authorization

Winsel's Castle Ordered Off Limits For Army Personnel

Winsel's Castle, located at 2803 Cusseta Road in Columbus, has been declared "off limits" to all military personnel at Fort Benning, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, post commander, announced this week. Henceforth no member of the command will be permitted to enter the place except on official business.

On March 21, two Fort Benning soldiers were shot during an altercation which took place at that address.

Vigilant MPs Nab Woman

FBI Charges That She Impersonated Officer

Arrested at Fort Benning by Military Police on request of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, 21-year-old Jeanette Marie Treadwell is held in Columbus on charges of violating federal statutes by representing herself as a second lieutenant in the women's auxiliary ferry command.

The young woman also is alleged by authorities to have admitted fraudulent cashing checks against a Tampa, Fla., bank. In cashing them, she is alleged to have displayed bars of a second lieutenant, an air corps insignia and a pair of pilot's wings, it was reported by Columbus police.

She was arrested March 25 after Major W. D. Veal, Provost Marshal of the post, had been warned by Columbus merchants to be on the lookout for her. F. R. Hammack, special agent in charge of the Atlanta FBI office, said that she had claimed to have a former connection with the Civilian Air Patrol. She had registered at the Fort Benning hostess house under maiden name, Jeanette Marie Ellender, and had stated she had come from South America where she claimed she had been patrolling coastlines. Treadwell claimed to be married to an army officer whom she said she left at Lake Charles, La., about March 14.

TAKING A CUT at the old apple as the baseball season swings into action is Benny Zientara, stellar second baseman, who is expected to hold down that spot for the Infantry School all-stars in their opener on Sunday.

Devers Says Yankee Equipment Superior

Armored Force Chief Reports On Visit To African Theater

Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commanding general of the Armored Force, visited the 10th Armored Division last week, accompanied by his staff.

Recently back from an extensive tour of the North African front, where he inspected the British Eighth Army, which has driven Rommel's Nazi forces back 1,700 miles, and the American forces now operating under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., General Devers emphasized three points in his talks at Fort Benning.

He stated that fighting in Africa had proved American equipment to be superior to the Germans'. Against this advantage, however, he stated we must improve our training so that every officer and man knows his job thoroughly.

Allan Jones Joins Magician

Performances Continue Through Saturday

Blackstone, the modern Merlin, and his troupe, aided by singing star Allan Jones, opened his bag of tricks to jam-packed houses at the Main Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday night. The USO-Camp Show feature was enthusiastically received by Fort Benning's soldiers.

The master of magic and Allan Jones and company will continue their stand at greater Fort Benning tonight, Friday and Saturday nights.

Two performances are scheduled for Theater No. 7 in the Sand Hill Area tonight at 7 and 9 p. m. The show will be in Harmony Church Friday and Saturday. Performances will be at 7 and 9 p. m. Friday in Theater No. 11 and Saturday in Theater No. 4.

USES NO MIRRORS

Cast of the show inclues a bevy of beauties who aid the world's greatest magician in his adventures into the occult. Blackstone carries no mirrors with his property, nor does he require any trapdoors to be cut into the stage on which he performs.

He is now in his thirtieth year as the world's leading magical entertainer.

Other "names" in the Blackstone-Allan Jones complement are Frank Boss and Anita Pierre, comedy impersonators; the Clark sisters, Ann, Peggy, Jean and Mary; Monroe and Grant, and Consolo and Melba.

The show was brought to Benning by arrangements made by Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer, with USO-Camp Shows, Inc.

Post Papers Given Awards

'Alligator,' 'Pine-Bur' On National Honor List

Two regimental papers published at Fort Benning were among 74 papers to win certificates of achievement in the Camp Newspaper Service contest in which hundreds of camp and unit papers were entered, it was announced today.

They are "The Alligator", official organ of the 124th Infantry and "The Pine-Bur", the publication of the Second Student Training Regiment.

Awards in the contest went to newspapers published officially as camp or regimental organs, from special service or other funds.

Fort Benning is the only camp in the country to place two papers in the honor list, according to the announcement sent out today by the Camp Newspaper Service.

'PINE-BUR'

Editor of the Pine-Bur is Corp. John M. Naylor, Baltimore newspaper man and radio man. Captain John B. Torinus, special service officer, former Green Bay, Wis., newspaperman, acts as supervisor of the paper. Corporal Naylor worked on newspapers in Philadelphia and Baltimore and was program director for WMFD at Fredericks, Md., before entering the Army. He was the only member of the staff during the contest period, which covered the first four issues of publications put out after January 1 of this

30 Ski-Troops At OCS Include Battle Veterans

Rugged Soldiers Win Commissions To Lead Forces

Thirty ski-troopers who sped from a regiment in Camp Hale, Col., to the Eighth Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, have invaded officer candidate school to attempt the capture of their golden bars. From that regiment, Fort Benning now has over sixty ski troopers attending O. C. S.

Most of the above skiers traveled from Fort Lewis, Wash., to Camp Hale, Colo., besides being on experimental detachments.

The ski-troopers at Camp Hale are an extremely rugged outfit. Many have fought in the Finnish army against Russia, and many are from Norway and Switzerland. One of the numerable battle-experienced leaders is a Finn who has had thirteen bayonet skirmishes.

MANY NOTABLES

A few of the hundreds of notable skiers there are Walter Praeger, former Dartmouth head coach and is said to be the best skier that Europe has turned out; Gordon Wren, one of the best jumpers; Peter Gabriel, a Swiss guide and patrol leader whose picture was on the Life magazine cover; Captain John Woodworth, one of the first skiing officers in the army; Lt. John Litchfield, stylist and a head instructor from Sun Valley; Olaf Rodegaard, Lt. Charles McClane; and recent graduates from Fort Benning include Lt. Roy Zoberski and Lt. Gordon Andersen.

Infantry School's All-Star Nine Plays Host To Columbus

Hank Gowdy's TIS Club Prepares For First Big Battle

Baseball's 1943 season bows in at Fort Benning this Sunday afternoon when Capt. Hank Gowdy, former big league star and coach, will lead his brand new Infantry School all-stars into action against the Columbus Foxes at 2:30 o'clock.

The game will, of course, be played at Gowdy Field which is named after the tall TIS tutor in honor of his exploits as a sergeant overseas during World War I. He was the first big leaguer to enlist during that conflict, and has just recently returned to duty as special service officer at the school.

The game with the Columbus club, an amateur nine that will represent the neighboring city on the diamond this year, is the first of a series of attractive tilts scheduled by the Infantry School team prior to the opening of the post leagues two weeks from now.

Gowdy's tossers have been working out diligently for the past week in preparation for the opener, while the Foxes have been drilling for almost two weeks. Starting line-ups for both nines are still considerably in doubt but the rival managers, Capt. Gowdy and Nathan Copeland of the Foxes, have plenty of fine material.

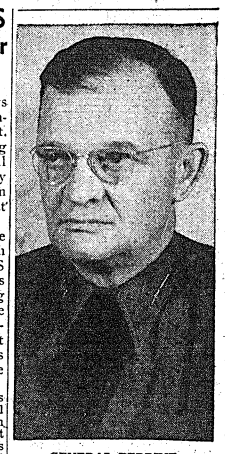
BANNER CROWD

Expectations are that a banner crowd will fill the Gowdy Field stands for the first 1943 cry of "play ball." The famed 29th Infantry band, directed by Warrant Officer Albert Andrews, will be on hand to liven up proceedings and lend additional color to the ball game.

Gowdy Field itself has been undergoing extensive "beauty" preparations for the opener. The diamond has been practically rebuilt and is in good shape. A screen that will materially aid the batters has been erected in deep center field, and the grandstand has been painted.

A great deal of interest centers around the TIS nine which may develop into one of the strongest clubs ever to represent the post. Gowdy has rounded up a brilliant collection of former professionals and crack Army talent that he is welding into a powerful nine.

STARTING INFIELD



In the starting infield, for instance, will probably be three youths who are the property of big league teams and a fourth player who has spent ten years in the St. Louis Cardinal farm chain.

One of the four, Benny Zientara, will be a familiar figure to the Gowdy Field fans. Last season, the peppery second sacker played for both the post team and the champion Academic Regiment nine. The year before, he spent the latter part of the season with the Cincinnati Reds after having put in two seasons with Indianapolis in the American Association.

Zientara is almost a sure bet to start at the keystone with Red McCluskey on third, Al Bamburger or Dib Williams at short, and Herb Moore at first. McCluskey belongs to the Brooklyn Dodgers and was due to come up with Montreal in the International this year. Bamburger is owned by Pittsburgh and spent last year in the Pony League.

Williams, of course, is the same infielder, who spent many years in the American League with both

GENERAL PERRINE

FDR Nominates Col. Perrine General Officer

TIS Executive Was Member of Original Infantry School Faculty

Colonel Henry P. Perrine, executive officer of The Infantry School, who was nominated for promotion to brigadier general by President Roosevelt, is an army officer who has known The Infantry School at Fort Benning well since the day it was activated.

Graduated from the United Statese Military Academy at West Point in 1913, he served brief tours of duty on the northwest coast and in Alaska, and then was assigned as an instructor to the School of Small Arms at Fort Sill, Okla., the predecessor to the present Infantry School. When the school was activated here in 1918, he was an original member of its faculty.

Colonel Perrine left Fort Benning in 1919, and returned to The Infantry School twenty years later to become chief of the publications section here. After the start of the emergency, he became successively the assistant director of training, the secretary, and then the executive officer of the school.

MANY POSTS

During the twenty years interval between his first and second tours of duty at Fort Benning, Colonel Perrine's career took him to many posts. He became an instructor to the New Jersey National Guard in 1919, which post he held until he was sent to the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1925. After graduation, he was assigned to the staff of the First Corps Area in Boston.

In 1919 the Army sent him to Harvard University for advanced study, and he was graduated from Harvard in 1931 with a degree of Master of Business Administration. He served as an instructor to the Massachusetts National Guard for five years, and in 1936 he was transfered to the 34th Infantry at Fort George G.

Contest Sports Deadline Extended Until Next Monday

With contributions to the big $350 war-bond and stamp prize contest still pouring in, dead-line for entries of sports stories and sports cartoons has been extended to next Monday morning.

Today remains, however, as the deadline for other entries in the contest, including editorial material, cartoons, essays and feature stories.

Prizes of a $25.00 war bond are being put up as first prizes in the various classifications, with many other prizes in stamps to bring a the total in the big competition to $350.

In the sports category, ex-sports writers are urged to turn in feature articles on their experiences, or athletes might write a feature on their various competitions to walk off with some of the prizes. The cartoonists are also urged to turn their skill to the sports field to cop some of the prizes there.

A committee of Columbus business men will judge the entries which will be published in the April 15 issue of the Bayonet.

OC Artist Fled Hun During World War I

Family Moved To Donets Basin; Settled in Canada

Artist, linguist and world traveler, Candidate Albert S. Berr of the Fifth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, will not be experiencing anything novel in the whine of bullets and crash of bombardments when he goes into combat.

Berr, son of a prominent furrier, was born in Russia and fled with his family into the Donets Basin ahead of the German advance in World War No. 1. After the peace, the family returned to its home, but was compelled to flee again when the Communist revolution started.

He can recall vividly the fierce street fighting that spread with the revolt, hugging the ground as machine gun fire spat around him, and going without food for long days and nights.

PEREGRINATIONS

The family moved to Poland, then to Rumania and eventually crossed the Atlantic to take up residence and make a fresh start in business in Canada. In the course of his travels, Berr learned to speak fluently not only his native Russian but French, German, Polish, Ukranian and Rumanian.

He studied at McGill University and became an electrical engineer, becoming associated, in an executive capacity, with several large firms. Although he insists it is just a hobby, Berr studied sculpture for a year at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Montreal, winning first and third prizes at exhibits in Quebec for his works, a statue, "The Slave", and a bust, "John the Baptist".

Some time ago Berr declined an offer of a commission from the Canadian Army, made on the basis of his knowledge of electrical engineering. He was inducted in the Army from New York City last November, and aspires to enter military intelligence work because of his knowledge of Europe, its customs and languages.

CAMILLUS, N. Y.—A building was destroyed by fire with a loss of $11,000. It was the city fire house.

Sergeants Pose For Pictures

Famed Photographer Takes Training Shots

Two hard-bitten non-coms of the academic regiment, Tech Sgt. Willie E. Joiner and Sgt. Richard R. Richard, both of Company F, were chosen to pose for pictures that shortly will be used to teach raw recruits the technique of successful scouting and patrolling, with famed Gjon Mili taking the photographs.

The pictures were taken last month at Mili's New York studio and will be used to make up a "graphic portfolio" on the subject. The first of these portfolios, a new idea for the training of new troops, has just reached the field and has proved an invaluable aid. Subject of the first folio was rifle marksmanship.

DIFFICULT TASK

Posing for Mili, according to Sergeant Richards, was no easy task. "It was harder than being in the field. We posed and posed and posed again. Down and up, up and down. He was never satisfied until the last minute detail was perfect."

Working as assistant instructors with the training of the individual soldier group of the Infantry school, Sergeants Joiner and Richards almost daily, and on many nights, give demonstrations for officer candidates of the correct procedure in scouting and patrolling.

Sergeant Joiner, a veteran, has 15 years of service to his credit—all of it at Fort Benning. Sergeant Richards, a native of Easton, Pa., has been in the army since January, 1942.

MIAMI, Fla.—A prosperous deaf mute was nabbed for shoplifting. He penciled a note to arresting officers which read, "I never stole anything before, but sometimes I just get tired of waiting. It's not my fault. There just aren't enough clerks in the stores."

Gentleman's Agreement Cuts Verbose Speeches

Occasionally, but not often enough, the spectators at some austere occasion are blessed by an "off the record" incident which influences the length of the proverbial ear beating to which they are subjected.

It might be an automobile accident and the untimely demise of the guest speaker, or perhaps, an attack of indigestion brought on by a guest of honor luncheon, and two helpings of Coquilles de St. Jacques. But, no matter, it isn't often that the squirms of the audience are spared by a gentlemanly agreement of two humorous gentlemen.

Chaplain Helfer, of the First Student Training regiment, attended a recent graduation and made preparation, as previously planned, to deliver the invocation. Present, to deliver the talk of the day, was Lt. Colonel Benjammin Thurston. In those final moments before the firing of the opening gun, the colonel gently admonished the chaplain against a long prayer.

"Okay, colonel," replied the chaplain, "if you'll go easy on that speech making of yours."

Thereupon was made an agreement: The chaplain to make the invocation brief, the colonel to cut his speech down to a minimum. The ceremony opened, the chaplain was true to his word, the oath of office followed, commissions were awarded, and Colonel Thurston launched into his talk. Time slipped by rather quickly, for both speaker and listener, the colonel being an exceptionally fine elocutionist. Suddenly, with hand dramatically raised, the colonel cut dead in the middle of a sentence, stood poised for the time it takes to flick a glance at the chaplain — then turned to the audience, explained the agreement and sat down, sentence unfinished. The appreciative audience almost brought down the house.

533rd Ordnance Jions Tigers

The 533rd Ordnance Company became the fifth new organization added to the 10th Armored division this month when it joined the Maintenance Battalion for the special task of heavy maintenance.

Capt. C. L. Reed brought his company here March 20 from the Aberdeen, Md., proving grounds. The skilled mechanics recruited late last year in western Pennsylvania have taken the nickname, the Keystone Ordnance company.

Sgt. Crawford Is Warrant Officer

Walking in one morning with stripes, and the next morning with bars, is the record made by Warrant Officer Charles Ewing Crawford, of the 55th Armored Engineer Battalion. On March [illegible] Master Sergeant Crawford served his last day as sergeant major; on the next day he was sworn in as a warrant officer. He will remain with the "Mighty" 55th.

Staff Sgt. Albert C. Inman has taken over the reins as Sergeant Major.

Hypnotist Helps Men Conquer Jitters, Stutter

Candidates who stutter and gulp while giving a field order, suffer from knocking of the knees when standing before the "Old Man" and get chattering of the teeth around board meeting time, will do well to consult with OC Arthur Moore of the 28th Company in the Second Student Training Regiment.

With a hypnotic stare and a few hand motions, he performed a demonstration last week using OC E. P. Peterson as a subject, and revealed to fellow company members the ideal solution of all their problems.

Candidate Moore, who has made a study of hypnotism and its application for the past ten years in civilian life and since his entry into the Army in 1941, showed by a series of convincing tests on Candidate Peterson that the relaxation of mental tension by hypnosis will perform miracles of memory and muscular coordination.

Now with the approach of each GT, Candidate Moore finds himself swamped with requests for hypnotic suggestions on the best method to arrive at the school solution!

'Hell-Driver' Makes One Too Many 'Life Slides'

Sergeant Charles Ray, now of the Supply Detachment, Section 1, of the Quartermaster Corps, made one "Slide for Life" too many.

Formerly a stunt-driving member of "Suicide" Hayes' Original Hell Drivers," with whom he performed the death-defying "Slide for Life" through blazing oil, he slipped off an army tank while filling it with gasoline and hurt his ankle. The ironical result of this accidental slide from a stationary vehicle of a man who performed innumerable feats of daring from speeding automobiles was reclassification to limited service, taking him away from the Armored Force he loved so well.

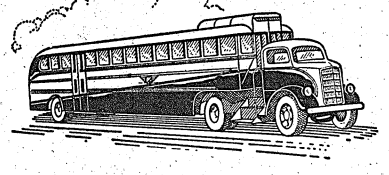
During the 1939 summer, Sergeant Ray toured most of the eastern seaboard states with the Hell Drivers, performing in ball parks and race tracks in North Carolina, Virginia, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and such Georgia cities as Atlanta and Savannah.

A native of Adel, Ga., Sergeant Ray farmed until 1935 when he enlisted in the army and served in the 83rd Field Artillery at Fort Benning. When his three-year period was up early in 1938, he sought "more adventure," he says, and got a job with "Suicide Hayes" " troupe.

The Hell Drivers performed many hair-raising feats with automobiles such as the slide for life, the head-on collision, the board wall crash, the 'ski jump," the "spin," the "turnover' and many others. Each of the drivers was supposed to perform any of the death-dodging stunts.

Sergeant Ray, however, specialized in four of the acts. One of the featured feats of the entire show was the "Slide for Life" in which the sergeant leaped from the rear of an automobile speeding at sixty miles per hour. The leap was terminated by a slide through an oil fire blazing 10 to 12 feet high. Sergeant Ray's only protection besides his regular working clothes was a football helmet.

He also performed the head-on collision, where two automobiles collide head-on with a 60-mile impact; the side-on collision; and the ski-jumping act, where the speeding automobile hits a series of three ramps with two wheels, causing the car to leap into the air as if ski-jumping.



In 1939, again seeking adventure with the outbreak of the war, Sergeant Ray joined the Army for a second time. Naturally he chose the Armored Force as he wished the excitement of maneuver and thrill-driving attached to tank warfare. He was assigned to the Second Armored Division at Fort Benning, and was soon sent out on cadre to Camp Bowie, Texas, with the 760th Tank Battalion.

Sergeant Ray returned to Benning with the 760th and late in 1942 made his unhappy and accidental slide. Although now working in Warehouse No. 127, which is the clothing-issue building for the Quartermaster Corps under Colonel Stephen B. Massey, director of supply at Fort Benning, Sergeant Ray still follows closely the events in tank warfare and training and the sporting activities of automobile stunt drivers.

He still wonders that he could perform so many dangerous "Slides for Life" through blazing oil and not get hurt, and yet accidentally slide from a tank with such unfortunate results. "Why when I did the slide for life professionally,' he said, "I never did get hurt, although I did get my hair singed a couple of times."

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

"SPOTLIGHT Bands", the radio program broadcast over Blue Network every week night for Coca-Cola, features the nation's favorite name bands. Their names mean something because their bands have something extra to offer. Coca-Cola got where it is by offering something that more than quenches thirst. It brings a delightful after-sense of refreshment, too.

In ice-cold Coca-Cola you find quality you count on. You find delicious taste that sets it apart. You find refreshment that goes into energy. Anybody can make a soft drink, but only The Coca-Cola Company makes Coca-Cola. The only thing like Coca-Cola is Coca-Cola, itself.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coke. Both mean the same thing... "coming from a single source, and well known to the community".

Lines are put in, stages fixed, loudspeakers hooked up, and rehearsal begins. Soon, the boys in uniform will hear their favorite band in person just as their families will on their home radios.

Tune in on "Spotlight Bands", the radio show for Coca-Cola. Every week night, 9:30 E. W. T. You'll hear how the boys go for that band music. Just as enthusiastically as they go for Coca-Cola, itself.

Seder Slated For April 19

JWB Plans Big Community Ritual

The annual Passover rituals will be observed by Jewish troops stationed at Fort Benning on Monday and Tuesday, April 19 and 20, Chaplain Samson A. Shain announces.

The first Seder will take place Monday night. Plans are being made for a soldiers' community Seder at the Ninth Street USO Club in Columbus. The affair will be directed by Chaplain Shain but it will be conducted entirely by officers and enlisted men. Preparations for the Seder are being made by Edward Korn, director of the Jewish Welfare Board, and a committee representing the entire Jewish community of Columbus.

Invitations are to be extended to general officers and other high ranking officials of the post to attend.

Passoer begins on the eve of the fifteenth day of Nisan, falling either in March or April. It is celebrated continuously for seven days or for eight days in the case of Orthodox Jews. During the period only unleavened bread (matzohs) is eaten with meals.

The Passover is a family celebration through the Seder-Order conducted usually on the eve of the first or second day. During this service, the family seated about the table, listen to a ritual called the Haygadah (narrative) which explains the early history of Israel, the purpose of the ritual, the miraculous emancipation of the Jews from Egyptian bondage. Hymns are sung and the evening meal is then served.

and secondly, we have to learn to fight as effective teams.

SEES NAZI MATERIEL

General Devers visited with the tank crews and gunners of the British Eighth Army as well as the American soldiers in the front lines in Tunisia. He had an opportunity to inspect the great quantities of Nazi equipment captured by the British.

"We must train our officers and men up to the high standards set by our equipment so that we use it to the best advantage," he stated. "We must build teams in our tanks. We must teach every man to shoot accurately."

LAUDS EIGHTH ARMY

Speaking to the men at Tiger Camp who had just finished the obstacle course run, the General told them they were getting the kind of training which would teach them how to fight as a team. He had high praise for the effective team fighting of the British Eighth Army. The lessons learned from our own units in Africa are being applied in all our training, he said.

The following officers from Armored Force Headquarters came to Fort Benning with General Devers: Col. Edward K. Wright, plans and operations; Col. William L. Barriger, supply; Col. John Castle, intelligence; Col. James H. O'Neil, chaplain; Col. Alvin L. Gorby, surgeon; Lieut. Col. Jack Kilgore, assistant personnel; Lieut. Col. William Isham, tank automotive section; Lieut. Col. Earle Hormel, aide; Capt. B. G. Davidson, pilot.

TECH SGT. HERBERT W. SWIFT, flight chief of the 32nd Troop Carrier Squadron at Lawson Field, enlisted in World War I at the age of 15, was a first sergeant at the age of 17. He participated in five major engagements and received the Order of the Purple Heart and the French Fourragere. He left the Army in 1922, but reenlisted as a private on February 7, 1942.

Woman's Club

By KATHARINE HAMMARGREN

Fort Benning Woman's Club is fortunate in having obtained for its April meeting two outsanding speakers, Brig. Gen. Henry B. Cheadle and Private Patrick Smith. The meeting, to be held Monday, April 5, at 2:30 p. m. in the Main Theater, has been declared an open meeting because of the timeliness of the subjects the speakers will discuss. All Woman's Club members are urged to bring guests, and others interested are invited to attend the lectures.

General Cheadle, back from North Africa, where he commanded the Sixteenth Infantry at the time American forces were landed, will talk on his experiences there. He received his promotion to the rank of brigadier general on the field of battle as a reward for his leadership, and is at present giving orientation talks throughout the United States. He was graduated from West Point in the class of 1913, was a distinguished graduate from the Command and General Staff School, is a graduate of the Army War College, and served at Fort Benning as an instructor several years ago.

Private Smith, who enlisted in the Signal Corps(will give an illustrated lecture on "China's Struggle and Recovery." Private Smith, an acting lieutenant colonel in the British army in the yast war, has spent 20 years travelling back and forth from the United States to all parts of the Near and Far East. He has crossed the Pacific 34 times during those years, to wander over little known lands, returning to show his splendid color movies and give lectures on them. As Far Eastern editor of the New York Sunday Mirror, Private Smith has covered every major activity of the Japanese Army during the British army in the last ing the ten years prior to Pearl Harbor.

a speech in Dallas, in the heart of cotton-growing country.

In Washington, the pay-as-you-go issue moved toward a climactic vote witha great deal of politics being played both by supporters and enemies of the Ruml plan. The House finally rejected the plan 215-198 and sent all tax measures back to the ways and means committee.

A house of representatives committee also was raising some hue and cry over alleged profits made by shipping companies in the chartering of ships to carry urgent war cargo to the East African front for the British.

A bill to empower the government to seize and operate plants where war work is halted by labor disputes was revived in Congress.

Klein Leaves Fort Benning

Lieutenant Herman L. Klein, adjutant of the academic regiment and resident of Fort Benning for the past 18 years, left last week to take over a new assignment at Camp Buckner, N. C., where he will serve under his former superior officer and academic commander, Colonel S. S. Eberle.

During his stay at Fort Benning, Lieutenant Kline served as an enlisted man with the 29th Infantry and the I. S. D. He was commissioned from the ranks in September, 1942, while serving as sergeant major of the academic regiment.

sea level, there is a T-bar Constam ski lift 1 1-5 miles long which brings the skiers nearly 12,000 feet above sea level. This is located near Mt. Massive, with an altitude of over 14,000 feet. Another interest one would find is about four miles above the regular camp where a train with three engines comes chugging over the highest standard-gauge railroad in the world at 10,600 feet. To go from camp to Denver by bus one would travel 130 miles in approximately 8 hours, whereas by train it would be 220 miles in 14 hours.

MULES DRILL

At camp you will find mules doing close order drill, lectures on nomenclature of mountains, camouflaging, etc. All of the men's equipment, costing about $750 each is white except the goggles. Candidate Garrett A. Gast, a ski instructor to groups of twelve, appraises highly the value of camouflaging.

Simultaneously, they have test detachments in Alaska, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Michigan, Washington, and Canada. In Canada, north of Lake Louise, Candidate William Sheldon states their experimental glacier camp is on ice 200 to 400 feet thick and that army trucks with chains ascend on roads of ice to the camp. Surrounded by mountain peaks it is not unucual to hear and see ice and rock avalanches changing the beautiful scenery.

1ST STR PROMOTES

Colonel Thomas R. Gibson has announced the promotions of the following enlisted men of the 1st Student Training Regiment: to be staff sergeant, Sgt. Claud R. Owens; to be techn. grade IV, Cpl. Roy E. Cairns, Jr.; to be corporals, Pfc. Walter Bedder; to be techn. grade V, Pfc. Furman C. Barnett, and Pvt. Verdmon Henley.

MILITARY FAMILY

Colonel Perrine is a member of a military family. His father was graduated fro mWest Point in 1896, and was a captain when retired from the service because of disability. His sister is the wife of Major General Charles W. Ryder, who led the American invasion at Algiers. His brother was graduated from West Point in 1917 and served in the last war, but he is no longer in the army.

Colonel Perrine was born in Trenton, N. J. His mother, Mrs. Henry P. Perrine, Sr., still resides in that city. The colonel's wife is very active at Fort Benning in Red Cross work, in the Grey Ladies, and in other worthwhile organizations. They have two sons, Peter and David, aged seven and eight, respectively.

was the immediate assigning of all the band personnel to the station complement, considerably diminishing the likelihood of frequent loss of members through future frequent transfers.

Ratings for every man in the 28-piece band also was authorized, and range from pfcs. to one technical sergeant and one staff sergeant. A warrant officer grade was opened as well.

BAND'S LEADERS

Sgt. Alton A. Davenport of 1009 Ala., is band master, while Pfc. Horace O'Neal Jackson of 444 Second street, North, also of Birmingham, is assistant band master. Both played in high school orchestras. Sgt. Davenport, who also is director of the Reception Center orchestra, played four years with both the band and the orchestra at Tuskegee Institute, and later played with Fess Watley's orchestra. Pfc. Jackson played with the band of Tennessee State college in Nashville, and later played with Watley's orchestra and Howard Thunderbird's orchestra.

The band is under the supervision of the Special Service Office at the Reception Center. Lieut. Robert M. Reynolds is Special Services Officer.

Anthony Eden Makes Hit With Benning Personnel

Most of us know by this time that a favorite Axis propaganda theme is anything which might possibly weaken Anglo-American solidarity in the present conflict.

It is unfortunate that there are no more Roosevelts, Churchills and Edens who by their own dynamic personalities can bring home the unity which does and must exist in the war and post war purposes of the struggle.

The German hogwash about great leadership in a dictatorship and lack of leadership in a democracy is made to look nothing short of the completely absurd by what has taken place.

The sympathies and solidarity of the whole western hemisphere against dictatorship can be attributed to democratic leadership as exemplified by President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull. The newspaper editors of Peru, Uruguay, and Argentina who have visited Fort Benning in recent weeks have left no doubt on that score.

That the English admire our leaders there is no doubt. That Americans respect Winston Churchill for his dynanmic leadership of the English through a terrific ordeal there can likewise be no question.

England could have done much worse than send Anthony Eden to this country. By his very walk, his every action, there was a man to impress everyone who came into contact with him at Fort Benning. His was no stereotyped visit. He had energy and a purpose. He talked with everyone. Questions poured out to generals and to soldiers. He refused to leave a demonstration until he could stride across a hundred yards of ground to pay his respect to the men who had put on a demonstration. Did the boys like it? What do you think?

He spoke Friday night over a national hookup and commented on the soldiers he had met—and he referred, obviously, to the many he had talked to at Fort Benning. He said we should be proud of them as he was proud that his nation was aligned with such men.

Sure, he knows some of us have criticized England's treatment of parts of its commonwealth. But many of the north, too, know that Canada is a part of the Empire and we hope that thousands at Fort Benning had a chance to talk to those grand Canadian parachute boys to know how they feel about the English commonwealth of nations, if they didn't know before.

But Eden admitted that mistakes had been made and with his sense of humor suggested that we had been the first to point out her mistakes back in 1776. Americans like humor because they don't as a rule take themselves too seriously. And the Germans and Japs do lack humor within their own nationalistic limits, which is one reason why we can't understand their brutal folly.

Well, Mussolini and Hitler huffed and puffed, but their vaunted leadership is beginning to look a little weak as the very same men they ridiculed continue to bring their nations closer together. We saw an officer candidate class spontaneously cheer Anthony Eden because he brought them a few words which sounded like the McCoy American boys like. That's the kind of leadership Americans go for. What a hell of a razzberry that class would have given a strident, arrogant, blatant Hitler—if guns were not at their heads.

You, Adolf, Benito and Hirohito, come take a few lessons from democratic leadership.

Class 'B' Reservations To Expedite Bond Deliveries

For the purpose of speeding up delivery of war bonds purchased by military personnel through pay allotments, the old Class "A" reservation will make way for the new Class "B" subscription on April 1. The new plan is designed to get the securities into the hands of the subscribers as quickly as possible thereby eliminating the objections of many potential subscribers who do not like to wait 90 days for the receipt of their first bond after date of initial deduction.

Exactly to what extent the new plan will expedite delivery is not known at present but it is believed that not more than 30 days will elapse before regular receipt of bonds will begin.

The Bond Officer states that all Class "A" reservations will be cancelled automatically and urges that all military personnel having such reservations fill out the new form 29-6 authorizing Class "B" allotments in order to avoid interruption of bond deliveries because of the change-over.

The BAYONET is glad to add its voice to that of bond officials in urging that this necessary step be made at once. It also urges all those who have been making cash purchases of bonds on payday change over to the pay reservation plan. No safer investment exists on this earth than that in war bonds because it is an investment in the American way of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, backed by the economic stability of the Government and people of the United States of America.

The pay reservation plan is also painless, automatic savings plan. Even though one may be far from a bank, post office, or department store where bonds are sold, one's "cold-cash" assets will continue to be built up regularly and gradually. It also precludes wasteful and inflationary spending of funds in excess of those needed for actual necessities in these trying times. While cash purchases are fine and dandy, the pay reservation plan will eliminate the need of a regular battle with temptation on the first of every month. It is easy to decide to postpone the purchase of a bond until the next month, but thus far the Japs and Nazis have shown no inclination to wait for our boys in the Pacific and in Africa to be adequately equipped to meet their drives.

The pay-reservation plan is the most effective way to keep the tools of war flowing steadily to our boys and our allies. We suggest that all of us sign for the Class "B" system.

This Thing Called 'Freedom' Is You!

Have you ever wondered what Freedom is,
That thing which we hold so dear?
I never knew what it meant till today,
But now it's all very clear.
I stood beneath the flag at five,
As the bugler sounded, "Retreat,"
When suddenly it dawned on me,
And my heart gave a faster beat.

I'm going to pass it on to you,
So you too, its meaning will see,
Then it will be as important to you,
As it will always be to me.
Freedom is a man lifting a gate latch at dusk,
Coming home to a loving wife,
Sitting with her and their son on the porch,
It's the very essence of life.

It's the laughter of a girl on a bench in the park,
As the boy tries to steal a kiss,
It's all their hopes and plans and dreams,
Their world of heavenly bliss.
It's a man on the corner cursing a cop,
Though he knows himself to be wrong,
It's the peace that seems to fill our hearts,
At the sound of a favorite song.

It's a piece of mother's apple pie,
There's nothing more American than that,
It's the grin that's on DiMaggio's face,
As he steps to the plate with a bat.
It is you trying so hard to remember,
The words of, "Oh say, can you see,"
It is I saying "Howdy," to all of you,
It is you saying, "Hello" to me.

It is everything we've always done,
For so very many years.
It's all the things we have always felt,
The joy and sorrow and tears.
To sum it all up is mighty hard,
It is something too good to be true,
It is best described with only one word,
This thing called Freedom is - - - - YOU.

The Time Is Now For Arms and Ideas

The recent words of Anthony Eden, Madame Chiang Kai-shek, and Admiral Standley point to the face that we are at an important stage in World War II—more decisive than many think.

This is a critical moment in the war of arms. It is also a critical moment in the war of ideas. Total warfare has mobilized America's industry. It has not yet mobilized the hearts and wills of all Americans for an all-out effort, nor has it succeeded in overcoming the self-seeking and divisiveness which still hinder the fight for victory.

National unity, industrial unity, the will to pull together, the will to sacrifice—all the intangible factors which make up national and industrial morale—these are desperately needed in our American war effort. Hardly a soldier or statesman who returns from overseas fails to warn civilian America of the fanatical determination of the enemy and to urge a vastly greater unity, dedication and fighting faith here at home.

There are forces in America which still believe that such qualities can be bought or legislated. Yet most Americans know that they can only come from the production lines of character and the dynamic power of a fighting faith.

If materialism is our only philosophy of war, it not only delays the victory but dooms the peace. The battle against materialism will go on when the war of arms is over. But the battleline of that warfare is drawn now.

America must fight now to establish nationally the qualities of character—ruggedness, self-sacrifice, faith in country and in God—which alone can bring victory, insure lasting peace, and build a new world.

Today's meat racket makes old-fashioned bootlegging look like small potatoes. Is our fight for freedom just a fight for progressive degradation?

USO Presents—

SWING SESSIONS, MOVIES, ART CLASSES AND A ONE-MAN MINSTREL

By PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

With memory and our file copy serving us correctly, we recall a fe wweeks ago alligators and hep cats were promised some big news that "would send them solid." . . . Here it is . . . Swing and jam sessions will be inaugurated Sunday afternoon at the Ninth Street USO . . . Hep musicians from Fort Benning's soldiery may bring their instruments down to the USO these spring Sunday afternoons for "out of this world clambakes." . . . And, boys, you can store your "agony pipes, licorice sticks and skins" at the USO to give them time to cool off until the next week. . . . NOTE—no "papermen" need apply.

Nationally, one of the largest celebrations of the Feast of the Passover will be observed in Columbus Monday, April 19, when almost 1,000 civilians, soldiers of the Jewish faith and their wives will gather in the auditorium of the Ninth Street USO. . . . Chaplain Samson A. Shain of Fort Benning will officiate. . . . Special music will be furnished by nearly 50 musicians from Fort Benning.

"Quiz-Serial-Movie" will make its first appearance Tuesday, April 13, at the Ninth Street USO instead of April 6 as originally announced. . . . A modern version of "The Three Musketeers" starring John Wayne and Raymond Hatton has been secured for the serial "third" of the program. . . . Every soldier attending the program will be given a tally card as he enters the auditorium, and answers to the screen quiz will be made on these cards. . . . As the answers are graded, short movie subjects, cartoons, comedies and government-released features will be shown. . . . Three prizes for answers to the quiz will be awarded. . . . The feature will start at 8:45 p. m. (EWT).

A one-man minstrel comedy show will be offered at the Salvation Army USO in Columbus Saturday at 8:30 p. m. (EWT). . . . * * *

Some fine topics are scheduled for the USO town Hall programs Sunday, April 11 and April 18, at 3 p. m. (EWT) at the Ninth Street USO. . . . "Thomas Jefferson—Man of Yesterday and Today" is billed for April 11. and "Women and the War" is scheduled for the following week. . . . On the latter Town Hall a film from Britain and one from Russia will be shown with America's side of the picture being explained by a WAAC from Fort Benning.

Bolnick Discourses—

WHEN SOMEONE CALLS YOU 'POP', YOU'RE GETTING OLD, SOLDIER

"Old soldiers never die,
They only fade away."

It was said that sometimes they even evaporated. The tune itself is one of the bar room harmony type, pledging the soldier's immortality. But if the old soldier never dies his joints get mighty sticky.

The tendency toward eliminating the older soldier from active fighting duty has become a more accepted policy in the army. Of course, old soldiers, like eggs, can be soft, medium or hard and each case is judged on its individual merits. It is no reflection on the old soldier that he can't set the pace or lead the pack. Time has put a ceiling on his muscles.

When a young soldier steps out for an evening and has a little too much, even though his head feels like a cement mixer and his stomach like a porcupine fight, he comes too quite quickly. The difference here is that while this was a special evening for the young fellow, this sort of feeling is chronic with the oldster. And as he lets out more of his buttons and consumes more sour belly and cornmeal mush the more he is less apt to become familiar with obstacle courses and the various army programs for conditioning a man.

The older soldier first realizes something has happened when he notices a difference in the ladies. In times past when he came in range of a beautiful lady he instinctively perked up like a rooster about to crow; and when he caught the lady's eye, the look she gave him was friendly or haughtly or speculative. Now the look he thinks she is giving is the look that a marketing house wife gives to a fish that has passed its prime. Perhaps also he first notices it when someone addresses him as "pop," or when he thinks someone is about to get up and let the old soldier have a seat in a public vehicle. Perhaps he finds it difficult to stand up to shake hands, and surely in the morning it takes him more than one motion to get out of bed.

Realizing all this he evens the score by saying that at least age is a virtue, that he knows more than the smart aleck of thirty and that he has accumulated a lot of experience and wisdom.

Then he wants respect, not because he is necessarily better, but he's been here longer. He insists on talking a lot, and gets bored with younger ideas. Noise bothers him and love stories seem silly. He's now 40.

But at 70 he won't feel half as old.

Chaplain's Corner...

MISSING ONE'S SHIP

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

The unpardonable sin in the navy is to miss your ship. No explanation explains; no excuse excuses. It's down, and stays down, on your record.

An officer told me that he never waits for the last boat to take him abroad. He always kept one in reserve, a margin of safety. He might never use it, but he was very comfortable knowing it was there to be used in an emergency.

Lots of heartache and other kinds of aches would be saved if that policy were followed in other activities—a margin of time, of goods, of morale. Think of the calamities that befall those who squander all their money—nothing saved to tide them over the unexpected expense: of the dead and mutilated on our highways because there was not enough space left to turn in before the coming car crashed, head-on—no margin of safety.

In the realm of character it is equally disastrous. In the critical hour when temptation loomed large; when deep discouragement held forth, there being no deposit of religious training, no excess of honesty, integrity, nothing worth while to draw on, the inevitable happened. You can't prepare for a crisis when it's on, you can only meet it. You can't gather honey in the winter, you can only use what you have garnered when the flowers were in bloom. You can't take another boat if the last one is gone.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men
When taken at the flood leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries."

TINY SABOTEUR CRIPPLES FAMILY CAR BY FILLING GAS TANK WITH SAND

To all wee little lads for their perusal when they grow up. Mothers, please chip and paste in scrap-book.

Modern mothers, familiar with the startling results a properly balanced diet has on the youngest generation, have no doubts as to what an American soldier, fortified with the best of America's production, can do. They know that any male stuffed with his proper amount of citrus fruits, leafy green and yellow vegetables, one or more servings of meat per day, and so on through the Army's rigid qualifications for an adequate diet—also the adequate diet demanded by pediatricians for healthy offspring—can cope with any given situation to the amazement and terror of antagonists or mothers, as the case may be.

Brave quartermasters and post engineers must blanche at the thought of what a vigorous two-to-five male old male can do to cherished quarters. Highly polished floors retain their luster but a short time under the vigorous peddling of a tricycle. Bits of plaster are industriously picked off newly renovated walls, while keys and essential parts of stoves have a mysterious way of disappearing down cold air registers.

Fond fathers have even been known to wonder if their offspring might possibly be in the pay of the Axis, so effective are the results of their innocent sabotage. Automobiles, so precious even in a dilapidated state, are found with the gas tanks mysteriously packed with sand. The bland unawareness of the heir-apparent during the ensuing family crisis would do credit to a Japanese ambassador during the attack on Pearl Harbor.

The "hup, two, three, four; hup, two, three, four" of shrill childish voices resounds throughout Fort Benning on any clear day. Terrific battles are fought. Equally terrific wailings are heard at the end of each battle, but the doughty warriors lay themselves down to bleed awhile, then return to fight another day. Bushes cherished by the powers that be and invisibly labeled "do not pick," are rent asunder as sturdy runabouts explore the topmost branches.

I've seen Japanese children on the West Coast and admired their stolid, damnably patient persistency. Maybe those characteristics were the result of rice, seaweed and fish. Now, though, I've taken on new hope from a well-rounded diet and think that perhaps the American lustier, gustier man, grown from these hoodlum boys, is a better bet.

Anyway, maybe we can do with a little less and keep those grown up boys filled with plenty of food. It seems to work wonders for the kids, and perhaps is the right formula for the men. Ask any mother with a healthy boy who gulps his meals, properly balanced, and oozes health.

Sgt. McDonald's Basket

THE OLD MAN HAS MANY FAULTS BUT HE ALWAYS PAYS POKER DEBTS

Today from practically out of nowhere arrived "The Three Musketeers," the pride and joy of the Finance Department of the Post Abattoir. Lt. Bawlson, Lt. Shylock, and Lt. Jericho (who also acts as General Quagmire's "aide de camp").

As usual, their appearance was one to provoke consternation. Standing rigidly at attention I tried to guess what their objective was so as not to disturb Colonel Swampwater's rest, with trivialities.

"Sergeant!" commanded Lt. Bawlson, "we wish to have audience with your immediate superior officer, Colonel T. P. Swampwater!"

"Yes, Sir," I replied, "and what is your mission, Sir?"

"Entirely personal, Sergeant," sneered Lt. Shylock. "Just admit us to his inner Sanctuary."

"Yes, Sir," I answered going obediently toward Colonel Swampwater's office fully cognizant that Lt. Jericho was fumbling nervously at his belt buckle with the end of his tie. The colonel was "hell on wheels" to those who appeared with dull belt buckles.

When I entered the colonel was resting contentedly in the arms of Morpheus, one foot slightly elevated over the wastebasket and his swivel chair tilted in a northeast direction so as to balance his sagging shoulders. I trembled with anticipation as I kicked the wastebasket out from under his foot to wake him up. And wake him up it did, for his whole body tilted forward with an uncoordinated jerk, hurling him back into reality. Before he could quite comprehend what had taken place he yelled, "13th Infantry, Charge! No two divisions can stop Swampwater's regiment!" As the very rafters echoed with the vibrations of his voice, he suddenly became aware of what was occurring.

"Shades of Salome, Sergeant! I must have fallen asleep. A swell dream I was having, too; my regiment was winning the Spanish American War again."

"Yes, Sir," I replied, rather happy to know that he didn't realize I had kicked the wastebasket out from under him.

"Lt. Bawlson, Lt. Jericho, and Lt. Shylock are waiting to see you, Sir."

"Egad!" mused the old boy, "those young whippersnappers can be here but for one purpose. They want to collect the money they won from me at the poker game at General Quagmire's. Show them in, Sergeant."

"Yes, sir," I answered, as I strode dutifully to the door to let the trio in.

"Well, well! Gentlemen, this is a surprise," cooed the colonel. "Stand at ease."

"Yes, sir," snapped Lt. Bawlson.

"Yes, sir," snapped Lt. Jericho.

"Yes, sir," replied Lt. Shylock.

"Yes, sir, Lieutenants, it was mightly nice of you to drop in to pay your respects to me. I like to have the young officers come around to see me socially. I'm very fond of young people."

"Yes, sir." answered Lt. Jericho, who nominated himself to act as spokesman for the group. Possibly his immediate Superior General Quagmire could prove very beneficial in any clash of rank with Colonel Swampwater.

"Sir, he continued, "my friends and I feel rather ashamed to come around and disturb your work, but—'er—well, we were thinking—well, 'er—we haven't seen you socially since the party at General Quagmire's house six months ago and well—'er, we kind of thought that—'er—."

"That it was time for another party," interrupted Col. T. P. "That's a mighty fine idea, Lieutenant, but I'm afraid I have already beaten you to the draw. We are giving a big 'Peanut Brittle' party over at my quarters Saturday night. Just to make it easy on everyone, all of us are contributing $5 each in advance to the treasurer for adequate refreshments."

"Who is the treasurer?" asked party-minded Lt. Shylock.

"I am," replied the colonel, passing his garrison cap around the trio, who reluctantly filled it with fifteen dollars in one dollar bills.

"That's fine, beamed the colonel, everything is settled. The party will begin at 8 o'clock."

"Very good, sir," the three replied.

"And, by the way, men, I believe I owe each of you a small poker debt. About two dollars, I believe." (The three nodded hopefully).

"It must have slipped my mind," continued the ole boy, handing each of them two one dollar bills.

"Thank you, sir," replied Lt. Jericho, Lt. Bawlson nodded and Lt. Shylock looked blank.

"Well, so long, men, I'm expecting you at 8 o'clock sharp," cackled the colonel.

"Yes, Sir," replied Lt. Jericho.

"Yes, sir," replied Lt. Bawlson.

"Yes, sir," mused Lt. Chylock.

Softly closing the door to Colonel Swampwater's office, I followed the three elated lieutenants to th outpost door of our outer office. Lt. Jericho and Lt. Bawlson in front, closely tailed by Lt. Shylock. As the three went gleefully through the door, the last thing I heard was Lt. Shylock happily singing, "We Got It! We Got It! We Got It!"

Democracy may be bedraggled but it is not discredited. Only those who have not served the idea faithfully think it isn't any good.

Human plans have never yet succeeded as a substitute for Providence. If we want "cradle to grave" security in life, we still might try trusting the Hand that puts life into the cradle and raises it from the grave.

You can really start to fight for the nation when you stop fighting for yourself.

Father and Son Are Together Once More

Do As I Say, Not As I Do, Says He To Us

It was a case of apple bites teacher when the irrepressible 19th Company met up with the Combat Training Committee last week. A preview of things to come was shown during an afternoon lecture in which the class was warned to beware of booby-traps.

At one point in the lecture the instructor turned from the blackboard to find a large red apple rolling towards him, evidently dropped by a careless candidate.

The worthy lieutenant reached for the apple with great alacrity just before it blew up in his face. His leap backward was a thing of beauty to behold and his astonisher grunt was music to many anticipating ears. But he recovered magnificently, and at the end of the class both students and instructor were wiser as to the workings of booby-traps.

3,000 Miles Once Separated Tippers; Senior World War Vet

The Tippers, father and son, are together again, but behind that simple fact is an amazing chain of developments that prove it really is a small world and a small country, and that anything can happen in the sand hills of Georgia—even if you start in Seattle, Wash.

Raymond R. Tipper, the father in the case, and Charles E. Tipper, his son, are living right across the street from each other in the Maintenance Battalion area of the 10th Armored Division. But they are not in the same unit. Charles is in Co. A of the battalion while Ray belongs to the 433rd Ordnance Co. (Heavy Maintenance, Tank), while was attached to the 10th Armored Division only a short time ago. All of which makes their reunion all the more astonishing.

Father and son had planned to join up at the same time, a year ago. But the illness of Ray's mother-in-law necessitated a change in plans, and Charles was obliged to enlist alone. He was inducted at Fort Lewis, Wash., and eventually was sent to Fort Benning to join the 10th Armored.

The death of Mrs. Tipper's mother some months later left Ray free to follow his son. He took his oath on Nov. 14, the day after Charles returned to Ft. Benning from his first furlough at home. Following his induction, he was sent directly to the 533rd Ord. Co. at Aberdeen, Md., which immediately cut down his margin of separation from his son from 3000 to 900 miles.

IMPOSSIBLE (?) HAPPENS

Then, in March of this year the impossible happened. The 533rd got orders to move—and of all the posts to which it might have been sent, the camp selected was Fort Benning and, more specifically, the Sand Hill area of Fort Benning. The Tippers still can't believe it.

Today it is Cpl. Charles Tipper and Pvt. Ray Tipper, but in the old days son would have been ranked by father. A veteran of the first World War, Ray ran the gauntlet from corporal to staff sergeant—and back, because there was an incident in which he got involved with another sergeant and found himself down the ladder a couple of grades.

"But this is the first time I've ever been a buck private," he says, and he doesn't seem to mind it in the least.

RAY OVERSEAS

In the last war Ray went overseas with the 2nd North Dakota Infantry and landed in France on Christmas Day, 1917. Later he was transferred to the 161st Ambulance Co. and saw action in the Vosges mountains, at Meuse-Argonne and at Verdun. He was overseas 18 months.

Ray had his reasons for enlisting in 1917 and he has them today, too. Here is what he says:

"I spent 18 months in France during the last war. I know what war is. Now I want to help make sure that the job is done right and that this doesn't happen again."

Ray is much stockier than his son and a little shorter, but for a man 46 years old his military bearing is as good as that of his son, who is only 22.

At home in Seattle, proud of her two boys, is Mrs. Tipper, wife of Ray and mother of Charles, and with her is Dorothy Jean, aged 12, who is not quite old enough to join the WAAC's.

And when the war is over, father and son will both be glad enough to get back to Seattle. Meanwhile—there is work to be done.

1st STR Puts On Broadcast

Dramatizes Award To Colonel Gibson

Before a crowded studio of approximately 300 visitors, students of the First Student Training Regiment broadcast a half hour program Sunday, March 21. The entire show, including script, musical arrangements, etc., was worked out by members of the regiment and the highlight of the broadcast centered about the dramatization of Col. Thomas R. Gibson's winning the Distinguished Service Cross in the last war.

After a short introductory opening by Officer Candidate Q. L. McNary of the 15th Company, a quartet consisting of Lieut. Robert G. B. Bourne, director; OC Roy E. Parrish, 15th Co.; OC John Pfezenmaier, 8th Co.; Tech Grade 5 Philip G. Gudger, 23rd Co.; and Tech Gr. 5 Robert Spitzer, 23rd Co., sang "Vive La Compagnie."

Colonel Gibson was interviewed by Lieut. Dick Daley of the Paratroops. An accordion solo was next on the program by OC Richard McCarthy of the 18th Co., followed by a dash of humor added by OC Don May of the 13th Co. and Sergt. Wayland Lee of Headquarters Co. Service Battalion. Real boogie-woogie went on the air when Gordon Anderson of Co. A Service Battalion (one of Tommy Dorsey's boys) beat it out on the piano. The half hour show was brought to a close with a quartet medley.

Sound effects used during the broadcast were recordings made especially for the program under the supervision of Capt. William Myers and T. Sergt. Neiditch of the Sound Section of the Infantry School.

DEML'S PROMOTED

Three enlisted men of Headquarters Detachment, DEML, Fourth Service Command, have been given promotions. They include Pfcs. Roy R. Levey and Charlie M. Phipps, raised to technicians fifth grade, and Pvt. Curtis B. Bell, promoted to private first class.

TIS Sergeant Qualifies Each Year With Rifle

McCrane Makes Small Arms His Life For Twenty Years

Master Sergeant John A. McCrane, a Fort Benning soldier since 1922 and enlisted group chief of the Technique of Rifle Fire and the Training of the Individual Soldier at the Infantry School, has fired the rifle qualification course every year and has never yet failed to qualify as expert.

Sergeant McCraine has made small arms his life work since he came to Fort Benning more than 20 years ago, and handles the Springfield, the M-1, a light machine gun, a Browning Automatic Rifle, a grenade or a bayonet with competance and ease.

At present he supervises the work of 65 key enlisted assistant instructors who train officer candidates in both advanced and basic courses. A native of Pike county, Alabama, he joined the Army at the age of 21, but was discharged eight months later when President Warren G. Harding issued a decree reducing the size of the Army.

After spending a year on his farm, Sergeant McCraine felt the urge to rejoin the service, so he came to Columbus, walked out to Benning and enlisted. He was immediately assigned to the I. S. D. After holding every grade from private up successively, he was made a master sergeant in January, 1941.

Cast Chosen For Radio Play

'No More Heroes' Is Life Of Gen. Patton

Announcement of the cast of "No More Heroes," the first play of the new series of radio programs, "Fort Benning Theater of the Air" which start April 8, was made today by Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, Special Service Officer.

Members of the cast are Capt. Rogert Shackleton, Martha Merriman, wife of Lt. H. Bumpus, who will direct this presentation; Sgt. and Mrs. Jack Ryder, Corp. William Cope, Sgt. Owen J. Remington, Corp. Robert McSkimmey, and Pvts. Tom Devine, Ben Fargenson and Julian Rawlings.

The technical and sound effects staff include Sgt. Jack Ryder and Pvts. Robert Soukup and Ben Fargenson.

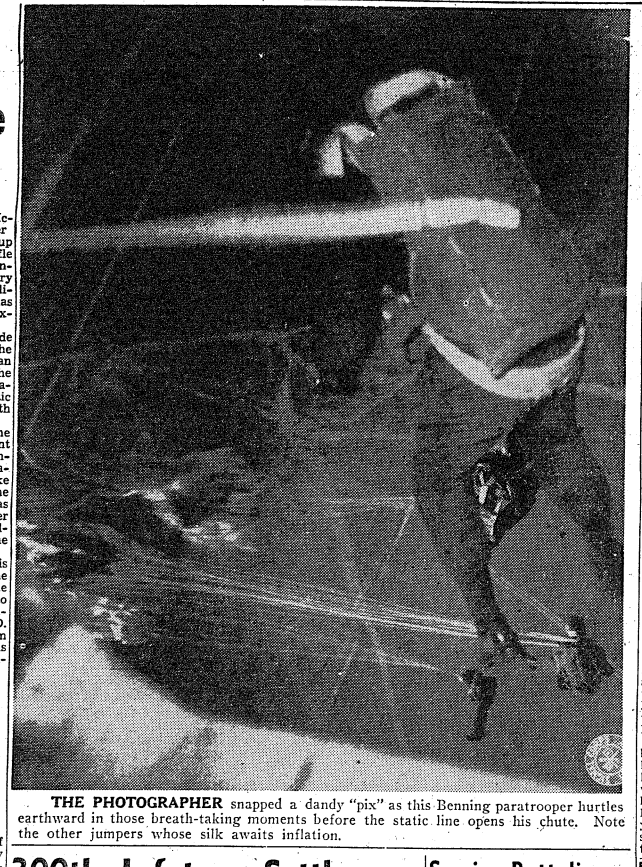
The play, "No More Heroes," is an original script depicting the highlights in the career of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., former commandant of Fort Benning, now in charge of American land operations in Tunisia. It was written especially for the radio program next week by Lieut. Thomas Phipps, former script writer for the Metro - Goldwyn-Mayer moving picture studios.

CINEMACTOR DIRECTOR

Lieutenant Bumpus, under whose direction this play will be staged, was known as Bob Wayne in the movies, starring in "western" cinema productions.

In charge of the new series of production is Pfc. E. Barry Sturmer of the Special Services Division through which, with the Public Relations office, the programs will be presented. Private Sturmer announced today that military personnel who have had theatrical experience or script writing experience or who desire to gain such experience are needed for production in future shows.

A feature of the dramatic presentations will be original scripts by G. I. authors. Awards of $10 in War Savings Stamps will be given to each soldier whose script is accepted and produced. Such scripts, or ideas for scripts, should be submitted to Private Sturmer, Special Service Division, at Post Headquarters.



The "Fort Benning Theater of the Air" programs will be presented from 8:30 to 8:55 o'clock, (EWT), on every alternate Thursday beginning with the April 8 production by the Columbus Broadcasting company over WRBL in Columbus and WGPC in Albany, Ga. The program series will originate at Fort Benning.

Leaders To Be Guests At Dance On April 8

The Leaders, championship basketball team of the Second Student Training Regiment, will be guests of honor at the big dance to be held by Headquarters Company of the Regiment on Thursday evening, April 8.

The dance is scheduled for the Sports Arena in the Harmony Church area, as a large number of guests are expected. Arrangements for the party are being made by Capt. Henry R. Callahan, commanding officer of Headquarters Company.

The Military Maids of Columbus will act as hostesses, and a 12-piece band from the regiment will supply the music.

300th Infatnry Settles Into Home Of Its Own

Boys Were On Verge Of Believing Lockers Were Shoulder Weapons

The once far flung and gad-about 300th Infantry can now retire its carrier piegons, remove the auxiliary fuel tanks from its messenger peeps and supply trucks, and conclude the educational program necessary to convince some of its troops that their foot lockers are not really shoulder weapons, and that there is nothing in Army Regulations that compels them to move once a week.

On March 8 the Post peregrinations of the 300th came to at least a temporary halt. The first and second battalions moved in with the third, which already was occupying a part of the regiment's home area—the area formerly occupied by the 117th Infantry—and helping Colonel R. G. McKee and his staff hold down the original claim staked out for The Infantry School's new demonstration outfit.

STORY OF EFFICIENCY

The activities of the 300th Infantry to date tell a story of the efficiency of the Army in general and of Fort Benning and The Infantry School in particular. It is the story of how the school was able to activate a complete demonstration regiment and start a comprehensive program of training for its troops three months before quarters or a regimental area were available for them.

When the regiment was activated in December, the first batch of recruits was split into two groups. One (A) was quartered with the 29th Infantry; the other (B) went out to the Harmony Church area as guests of the 124th. The second contingent to arrive (C) moved in with group A. A third contingent (D) moved into the outer fringes of the 117th area.

But that was not the end of the moving. Parts of groups A and C also moved into the 117th area, and they did not stop moving after they got there. Other parts of groups A and C found haven in the Third Student Training Regiment area, and some parts of A and C stayed put.

ELEMENTS OF HUMOR

Now that the regiment is settled in its new home, it is possible to discern some elements of humor in the good old and more mobile days. But it was no laughing matter then when an intra-regimental visit was something that could be undertaken only by the hardy, and accomplished by the hardy only under the most favorable circumstances.

When a man in Company M, let us say, decided to visit a buddy in Company E, he committed himself to adventure of the highest order. And no man was permitted to set out on such a journey until he had equipped himself with the 300th's Little Gem Traveling Kit. That kit, stripped to bare essentials, contained one three-day pass with extension clause, one bus time-table, the revised edition of "Edibie Berries Indigenous to Georgia," twelve candy bars, a map, a compass, and a small native guide.

Even with the kit, the journeys were hazardous. The last man to attempt one managed to survive only by eating pages 1 to 156 of "Edible Berries."

THY GUIDING PRAYER

We give our thanks to Thee O Lord
The creator of everlasting might
Thy gift of kindness Thou has given
Our world eternal light.

To Thee O Lord we give our thanks
Thou has giveth us our daily bread
And forever watch on all mankind
With Thy guiding care Thou has led.

Service Battalion, 1st STR, Range Firing Completed

The Fourth Battalion, 1st Student Training Regiment, recently climaxed its rifle marksmanship training with two days of range firing. In spite of rain the first day and a high wind the second day some excellent scores were made.

1st Sgt. Alderman took top place in the battalion with Staff Sgt. Carl B. Short taking second honors.

High scores for the companies were as follows: 19th Company, Sgt. Alderman; 20th Company, Sgt. Short; 21st Company, Sgt. Edmunds; 22nd Company, Sgt. Russell; 23rd Company, Pvt. Bennette; 24th Company, Sgt. Ellis.

Every man assigned to the battalion fired. The Fourth Battalion is the only service organization in the First Student Training Regiment to fire.

Old-Timers Organize 3rd STR Orchestra

Service Battalion Musicians Plan Regimental Service

A versatile dance orchestra, capable of both "swinging out" and playing the dreamy music sought by the more sentimentally inclined, is being organized in the Service Battalion, Third Student Training Regiment, around a nucleus of veteran professional musicians and entertainers.

According to present arrangements, which are being worked out between the men themselves and Lieut. Jack Gushin, battalion morale officer, the band will consist of 12 pieces with provisions made for future expansion. All that is holding up full-dress rehearsals is the delivery of the instruments, which are on order.

It is expected that the band will contribute greatly to the social side of battalion life with its appearances at dances and other functions but it will play its biggest role in the musical comedy production which is to be staged by the men in the near future.

MOVING SPIRIT

One of the moving spirits in the new organization is Pvt. William Tutt, who has had four years' solid experience in band and orchestra work in Alabama schools. An accomplished solo and rhythm guitarist, Tutt also can play most of the wind instruments.

An out standing performer in the ensemble is Monroe Jockel, who plays both tenor and alto saxophones and who has sung and acted in many stage productions in New York and Newark, N. J., notably "The Hot Mikado," which featured the famous Bill Robinson.

The "man with the stick" will be Corp. Harcourt McClean, violinist, who not only will conduct but will do solo and featured work. Most of McClean's musical background leans to the classical. He studied the violin for seven years, winning a partial scholarship from the Boston Conservatory of Music, and played for a year in the NYA Symphony Orchestra of New York City.

RHYTHM SECTION

In addition to Tutt, the rhythm section will consist of William Powell, pianist; Henry Hargrove, drums, and Clark S. Jarnigan, bassist. Hargrove received his formal musical instruction on the violin but has been playing drums in dance orchestras through the South for four years. Jarnigan has been a professional musician for nine years. For six years he played trumpet and about three years ago took up playing the bass viol. Alternating with him in the battalion orchestra on bass will be Robert Mayfield.

Much of the arranging will be assigned to John R. Young, trombonist, a musician and arranger of 10 years experience. Rounding out the orchestra, which has adopted the battalion's sobriquet, "Panthers," will be: Sam Wilson and Eugene Wilson, trumpets; Barry Washington and Levi Irvin, alto saxophones; Thomas Mines, reeds and brass; and Robert Hagans, tenor saxophone.

Fred J. Wolfe Made Captain

Fred J. Wolfe, Jr., member of the dental staff of the 24th General Hospital, has been promoted to the rank of captain.

Entering service as a dental officer with the Army Air Forces, Captain Wolfe was assigned to McDill Field, Tampa, Fla., in April 1942. Upon activation of the 24th General Hospital, he was transferred to the unit and came to Benning in July last year.

Captain Wolfe is a graduate of Fortier High school, and Loyola university, both in New Orleans. From the latter institution, he received his dental degree in 1938.

In civilian life Captain Wolfe was active in sports, participating in the Sugar Bowl rowing regatta as a member of the New Orleans Rowing Club in 1939 through 1940.

2nd STR Five Wins Court Title

Leaders Capture Two Straight Games From 55th Engineer Quint

Living up to the name they so confidently dubbed themselves at the start of the season, the sharpshooting 2nd STR Leaders swept to the post championship on Sunday when they smashed their way to a second straight win on the court over the mighty 55th Engineers, 10th Armored Division champs.

The final score of the season's climax game favored the new champs by a 43-35 margin, the same point difference that separated the title rivals in the first game on Thursday which the Leaders won 46-38. The 2nd STR sweep made a third game in the series unnecessary.

Fort fans found the Leader-Engineer series an anti-climax to the three-packed scrap a week before which established the Harmony Church crew as champs of the conference and earned them the crack at the post title. The "mighty 55th" gained its way into the final series by first winning both halves of the Sand Hill League and then toppling Supply Battalion for the championship of the Tiger Division.

Sunday's victory for the Leaders enabled them to write "finis" to one of the most amazing comeback stories in post sports annals. At the start of the season, they were one of the weakest clubs at the fort, and dropped seven straight games to finish the first-half race deeply imbedded in the cellar position.

ADDED NEW BLOOD

At mid-season, however, the student training quint added new blood, revived its spirit, and began a comeback that swept them to the post championship, vacated by the 29th Infantry, with the loss of only one game en route. That defeat was at the hands of the Profs in the first playoff tilt for the conference flag. The win over the 55th Sunday was the eleventh in 12 starts since mid-season for the new champs.

Lonnie Bland and Troy Ricks were the big guns in the final triumph of the Leaders, while Carl Ott stepped into the big shoes of Joe Jackson to help out considerably. Bland dropped six field tosses and a foul for 13 points, and Ricks accounted for 10 on four double-deckers and two charity flips.

OTT SPARKLES

Ott, who earlier in the campaign coached and captained the famed Camp Wheeler Spokes, arrived in the 2nd STR for officer candidate school just a short time ago. He saw little action until Sunday, when Jackson, the stellar Leader center, went into a slump. Ott relieved him and contributed eight valuable points besides sparking the team.

Al Petak's four long field goals gave him eight points for the Engineers, enough to enable him to lead the Tiger champs in scoring. Clark and Guinto, who alternated at one forward slot, each tallied seven points to share runner-up honors.

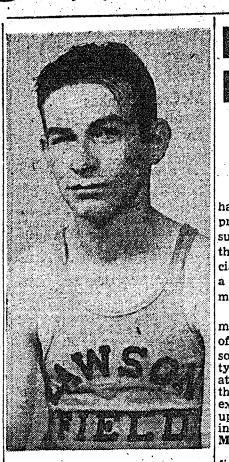
NIP AND TUCK

The "Mighty 55th" jumped off to an early lead and led at quarter time by 10 to 8. By intermission, however, the Leaders had taken command of the game and were in the van by 16 to 13. An Engineer rally put the armored team back into the ball game and it was nip-and-tuck for quite a while until about six minutes before the finish, when a Leader basket barrage put the game and the title on ice.

Both teams played rather ragged basketball, probably as a result of their long, grueling schedule and the strain of so many exciting play-off tilts in which they have both been involved.

Series' box scores:

FIRST GAME



2nd STR (46)		55th Eng. (38)
Bland (6)	F	Patterson
Gordon (4)	F	Clark (11)
Jackson (10)	C	Bell (12)
Ricks (15)	G	Wallis (4)
Whitehorse (3)	G	Petak (6)

Substitutions: 2nd STR, Francis (8).

SECOND GAME

55th Eng. (35)		2nd STR (43)
Patterson (5)	F	Bland (13)
Clark (7)	F	Gordon (4)
Bell (4)	C	Jackson
Wallis (4)	G	Ricks (10)
Petak (8)	G	Whitehorse (6)

Substitutes: 55th Engineers: Guinto (7). 2nd STR: Ott (8), Dnacisko (2), Smith.

Frank Shannon Gets Captaincy

Prof Court Coach Raised in Grade

Frank Shannon, one of Fort Benning's most prominent athletic figures, yesterday was promoted from first lieutenant to the rank of captain according to word released at the Infantry School.

The new captain just recently hung up his basketball uniform after a court campaign in which he was adjudged one of the outstanding performers at the post.

Shannon served as playing coach of the Academic Regiment Profs, who compiled the best record of any squad at the fort for the entire season. The Profs lost out in their bid for the Fort Benning Conference crown by a two-point margin in the final playoff game.

During the first half of the conference schedule, Shannon led all scorers in the strong eight-team loop, and he finished second in the point-getting race for the entire season. He was also honored recently when he gained a forward slot on the conference all-star team selected by the Fort Benning Bayonet.

Besides his prowess on the court during this past winter, Captain Shannon also tutored the Academic Regiment on the baseball diamond last summer when the Profs won the post championship.

A former star athlete at Wittenberg College in Ohio, Shannon earned his Army commission at Fort Benning's Infantry School a little over a year ago. His present military duty is as commanding officer of Company "G" in the Academic Regiment.

Elaborate Softball Program Is Planned

Major League and Many Minor Circuits To Be Sponsored by F. B. A. A.

Fort Benning is expected to have the most elaborate softball program in sports history this summer, according to advice from the Fort Benning Athletic Association, which plans to sponsor a post-wide setup embracing a major and several minor leagues.

Softball moguls of several units met Saturday at the F. B. A. A. office to discuss the coming season and make plans for various types of competition. Indications at the close of the session were that the softball program would exceede even the basketball setup as far as number of teams involved.

MAJOR LOOP PLANNED

Definitely on the way for the first time in post annals is a strong major league for softball in which most of the large units are expected to enter a team. The loop will operate on a "home-and-home" basis with all of the games being played in the actual areas of the participating teams.

This also is an innovation since it is the first time that inter-regimental sports have actually been carried into the areas of the regiments and units which sponsor teams. All league teams will be completely uniformed and the interest may rival that in baseball.

UNITS ENTERED

Definitely ready to enter the softball loop are Lawson Field, Station Hospital, 124th Infantry, Academic Regiment, 1st STR, Radio and Motor Mechanics School, and probably the Parachute School and 300th Infantry.

A split-season schedule is planned with a playoff at the close of the campaign to determine the major unit softball champion of the post.

SMALL UNIT PROGRAM

The F. B. A. A. also plans to sponsor a program to assure every small unit on the post a chance to gain title laurels as well. Several regiments and areas already have their own leagues in which company and small unit tens are participating.

Present plans call for sponsoring several more of these loops in different areas, and then having the champions of all the leagues meet in a softball tourney sometime late in June to determine the small unit softball champ of the post.

Enthusiasm generated at the meeting indicated that softball interest is definitely gaining at the post, and that the greatest number of men ever to participate in a sports program at the fort may be involved when the season starts full blast.

Many Former Pro Tossers Will Start For Infantry School Club

the Philadelphia Athletics and the Boston Red Sox. He is now a member of the 764th Tank Battalion after having spent last season with Columbus in the American Association. Moore has played for almost every team in the Card chain, and managed the Washington, Pa., nine in the Penn-State League last year.

MERCER IS SLUGGER

There is plenty of good, fast outfield material working out and the starting trio is still in doubt. One lad almost sure to draw an opening slot is Garnet Mercer, who batted .362 and slammed 16 homers with Madison in the Three-I League a year ago. Ryan, Neibler, Dabbs, Kunkle, Arneth, Cox, Hill, and Shaffer are others battling for positions.

Behind the plate, where Gowdy once held forth himself, will be either Stan Reft, former Minneapolis receiver, or Simmons, once with Jersey City in the International. Plunk, Stevens and Fenno are other aspiring maskmen.

GREAT MOUND STAFF

It is in the mound department, however, that the TIS stars can really boast of talent. There is Little Rock's Prendergast, San Diego's De Volter, Milwaukee's Dickerson, Rochester's Rundus, Baltimore's Cave, and Johnny Daily who spent two years with the Boston Braves.

Then too, Captain Gowdy can call on Lefty Lehner, Bill Bobo, Orlando Taylor or Yochman as well as Bob Friedlund, ace hurler from Michigan State College. Just who will get the first call Sunday against the Foxes is purely a matter of conjecture, although either Prendergast or Dickerson seem likely choices.

It will probably be at least another week before Gowdy is able to simmer his candidates down to a real starting nine, which means that on Sunday he may experiment by giving quite a few of the TIS stars a chance to perform.

FIELDS IN H. C. AREA

While most baseball talk revolved around the opener, athletic officials announced that work has begun on the construction of two new diamonds in the Harmony Church area which are expected to be ready for the loop openers on April 18th.

Cracker, Baron Nines To Visit Post For Tilts

Atlanta and Birmingham Clubs Scheduled For Gowdy Field Games

Two of the strongest baseball clubs in the Southern Association, Atlanta and Birmingham, will appear at Fort Benning in the next two weeks as opponents of Capt. Hank Gowdy's brand new Infantry School nine.

Games have also been booked with the Columbus Foxes, Georgia Tech, and Camp Wheeler as part of an attractive pre-season schedule. Three road trips are also in store for the Doughboy tossers since they will repay the visit of the Crackers and Barons and also invade Macon for a return series with the Wheeler Spokes.

TECH HERE WEDNESDAY

After Sunday's opener with the Columbus aggregation on the Gowdy Field loam, the next tilt will bring the Georgia Tech nine here on Wednesday, April 7. The opening twilight tilt of the campaign is scheduled to start at 6:30 o'clock.

The Birmingham Barons will come to the post on Saturday of next week for a twilight tussle, and then both rivals will journey to the Magic City for a return battle the next day.

TO INVADE ATLANTA

Atlanta's Crackers will face the TIS sluggers at Gowdy Field in a pair of games on Wednesday and Thursday, April 14 and 15, and the Doughboys will invade Ponce de Leon park in Atlanta a week later for a Tuesday and Wednesday series.

The home-and-home series with Camp Wheeler, arch rivals of all Benning teams, will bring Cecil Travis and his Spokes here on the 24th and 25th, and the Infantry School will return the visit on May 1 and 2.

Columbus Team Gets Ready For Sunday Opener

Lefty Wissman May Start On Mound For New Foxes

BY ERNEST CASTLEBERRY

Some 22 candidates for the Columbus baseball team have been going through the paces at Golden Park this week in an effort to be in the starting lineup when the Foxes open the season at Fort Benning Sunday afternoon with the Infantry school nine.

Competition is keen at nearly every position and Manager Nathan Copeland has a big job in selecting his regular squad by Sunday. According to present plans Copeland will carry a 15 man team, including four outfielders, five infielders, two catchers and three pitchers.

WISSMAN MAY HURL

Although five pitchers have been working out at the park since practice started, Lefty Eddie Wissman, former Columbus Red Bird hurler, will get the starting assignment Sunday if he is still in town. Wissman, who played with Rochester in the International league last season, is awaiting definite status before deciding whether to remain in Columbus or report for spring training.

In the meantime the former Columbus pitcher has been working out with the Foxes and is ready to start. If he is not available Sunday, Manager Copeland will probably call on Gurley, who pitched with Rosenberg in the senior league here last summer. Other pitching candidates are Long, Lamb and Kyle.

BATTLE FOR FIRST

John Wright and Alton Lewis, both of whom pack a lot of power at the plate, are battling for the first base spot with Wright an almost sure starter against the Infantry school nine. Lewis mashed a finger and has missed practice all week.

The race for second base is wide open between George Carmack and Chase Riddle with the Foxes manager expected to make his keystone selection Friday afternoon. Billy Brim and Hilliard Kent have been scuffling for the shortstop position and competition is especially keen there.

BOWDEN AT THIRD

Earl Bowden, last year's Nehi third sacker, and Red Pickren are out for the hot corner. Bowden will probably be in the starting lineup Sunday. Six outfielders have been drilling for the outer gardens at Golden Park and all Manager Copeland can say now is that three of them will get the opening call. To choose from he has E. Carmack, Br[illegible]e, Whipple, Franklin, Land and Tomblin.

Three capable catchers have been backstopping in drills so far, namely McQuirter, McLendon and Griggs. All three are good receivers.

The Foxes will meet the Infantry school nine in a return game later in Columbus.

WAACs Win Wild 'n Wooly Softball Game, 28 to 16

Top 24th G. H. Nurses In Female G. I. Tilt

Midst the cheers of some 300 spectators, members of the 43rd Headquarters Company, WAAC, defeated the nurses of the 24th General Hospital Sunday in one of the wildest, laugh-filled softball games to be played at Fort Benning.

Leading off with a group of heavy hitters, many formerly of Brooklyn and vicinity, the WAAC lineup went the rounds three times, chalking up 16 runs before Pitcher Weishaupt of the nurse corps could get her team organized.

From there out, however, the going was tougher. The ladies in white, only figuratively speaking after the first inning, fought back with surprising tenacity, permitting never more than five runs to go through in any other frame.

SCORE APPROXIMATE

Mary Minucci of the headquarters outfit seemed to have the situation well under control, having only 10 runs scored against her in the first five innings, as compared to 24 against Nurse Weishaupt. Although final scores on the game were at best approximations, the most accurate count seemed to be 28 to 16, favor of the Women's Auxiliary.

There were a total of five home runs knocked during the afternoon. These were credited to Minucci, Bingham and McCracken of the 43rd company, and Millie Pollet and Miller of the hospital group.

WAIT 'TIL NEXT TIME

One nurse confessed after the final inning, "This is only the second time I've played softball in 20 years, but I think we can beat them next time."

Managers for the two teams were Lt. Gaile Gaines of the WAAC, and Lt. Millie Pollet, crack first baseman of the nurse corps.

Fort Soldiers Followed Odd Civilian Professions

Many Occupations Are Totally Unknown To Average Citizen

Civilian occupations pursued by many soldiers before their induction into the Army are strange indeed, for the variant professions run from vermin exterminators to hose sorters, and from bottle fillers to merry-go-round operators.

They range from street-car conductors to corn-husking machine operators, from spot cleaners to honky-tonk sandwich men, from cowpunchers to stable "sergeants" (not sergeants of a G. I. type).

A spot check of records in the post headquarters classification section at Fort Benning, which is operated under the direction of Lieut. Robert C. Weiland, classification officer, and Lieut. Salvador Llosa, assistant classification officer and director of the Army Speecialized Training Program, reveals unusual trades, rare professions, and amazing occupations most people do not know exist are among those practiced in civilian life.

HOSE SORTERS

The hose sorter separated hose into piles of correct size, shade and style in a hose factory. The bottle-filler filled the milk bottles of a dairy with milk. The spot cleaner was an expert in removing grease spots from clothing, and the expertness of his work lay in the fact he determined the type of spot by "feel" and eye.

The stable "sergeant" was in charge of the horses on a horse farm, handling both the horses and the stables. One linquist acted as an interpreter in a Paris, France, hotel. Another man calls himself a doffer; he removed full bobbins from a spindle in a textile mill, and set empty bobbins in place.

A gold-leaf-layer shaped and applied gold leaf to the edges of books, using a silk-covered frame to pick up the gold leaf for application. A juice-reamer, reamed the juices from various fruits for canning purposes. A stemming machine operator took the stems from leaf tobacco in a tobacco plant.

THE MULE-SKINNER

A qualified mule-skinner, a yarn winder in a rayon plant, a male nurse in an insane asylum, a master of ceremonies in a night club, a bleachery cloth-examiner, a saddle maker—and butchers and bakers and candlestick makers galore are included in the many professions represented.

A "slubber-tender" operated "a slubber that transformed a sliver into roving, thinning and twisting cotton strand." It is suspected that the person worked in a textile factory, but few are qualified to explain his definition of just what he did.

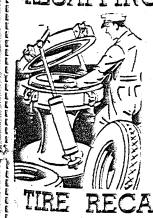
One man gained his livelihood by changing the combinations on safes, and opening locked safes for their forgetful owners. Another was a rodman, a man and chainman in a survey gang. Still another man, slightly less versatile, was only a rodman and chainman in a ditch-digging gang. However, he didn't get the axe for the army got him.

One soldier was a professional housewrecker—but in a legitimate sense. A beef-boner took the bones from meat in a packing company. Pickle canners, bellboys, professional fishermen, pool-room rackers, country club locker room attendants, and slate pickers all are represented among the relatively few soldiers whose records were spot-checked at post headquarters.

ARMY UTILIZES ALL

The army, by its classification system, utilizes odd occupations to the maximum degree possible. A tree surgeon in civilian life, for example, now is in charge of a crew of men who keep the trees on the main post properly pruned and in the best of health.

Another man also listed his professional as tree surgery. With the particular job already adequately filled at Fort Benning, the erstwhile tree surgeon was utilized in another important task. His hobby and the profession he had followed before becoming a tree surgeon was that of pigeon fancier. He is now a pigeoneer with the signal corps.



Movie-projectionists in civilian life oftimes follow the same profession in the army, at post theaters or in showing training films. A former playwright now is in the Special Service Office, dealing with theatrical people who visit the post to perform, and supervising plays and features coming under the jurisdiction of his army job.

Even a deckhand on a Mississippi river tugboat keeps tugging on. He pulls and pushes wheelchairs at the Station hospital.

Post Pledges Full Support

In 'Go-to-Church' Campaign This Month

Fort Benning officials have pledged the cooperation of military personnel with the "Go-to-Church" campaign which is being conducted in Columbus and Phenix City during the month of April.

Sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce in both cities in cooperation with the Ministerial Alliance, the campaign leaders wrote to the post that "We feel that Fort Benning is a vital part of Columbus and we want the full participation of the military population in this project."

B. F. Young, E. K. Garrett, Bill Miller and John Barbee are members of the committee for the campaign. On the advisory board are the Rev. Norman Lovein, Drs. J. Calvin Reid, Frederick S. Porter, Joe Cook and T. C. Cassidy. With them are Vivien Bagley and J. W. Woodruff, Jr.

GEN. FULTON'S LETTER

Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning in writing to the chairman of the "Go-to-Church committee said:

"I am happy to lend my support to the "Go-to-Church" campaign to be held in Columbus and Phenix City during the month of April. We in the Army are eager at all times to carry the message to families of men in uniform that, though their loved ones may be far from home, their religious needs are well provided for.

"At Fort Benning we have a large staff of chaplains of all denominations, and our thirteen chapels are filled to capacity at all services. Thousands of our men, however, with their families, live in neighboring cities, and it is to the churches of those cities that they must look for religious guidance. It is gratifying to know that the clergy and lay religious leaders are aware of this and have asked our assistance in this campaign.

"I trust that the response from Fort Benning will justify your faith in our participation."

Atlanta Bishop Confirms Five Tenth Armoraiders

Bishop John Moore Walker of the Episcopalian Diocese of Atlanta officiated at the confirmation of five 10th Armored division men, Sunday, March 28.

The five men confirmed were Pvts. William C. Koster and Homer Bates, 420th Armd. F. A. Bn., Pvt. Ernest Downing, Supply Bn., Pvt. Louis Downing, Co. F, 54th Inf., and Pvt. Robert Jesson, Med. Det., 423rd F. A. Bn.

Mrs. Charles Sherwood, wife of Lt. Sherwood, Service Co., 423rd F. A. Bn., was also confirmed at the same ceremony.

Bishop Moore also conducted services at the Harmony Church chapel. The confirmation took place at the Sand Hill chapel No. 1 of the Artillery Command.

Chaplain Albert J. Dubois is arranging regular weekly Chaplain's Hours for each of the battalions in the Artillery Command. Monday evening at 7:30 p. m. has been set as the time for the 423rd F. A. Bn. Hours are being arranged for the 420th and 419th F. A. Bn.

INFANT CHRISTENED

Carol Jean Ruger, ten month old daughter of Corporal and Mrs. Hugh Ruger was christened by the 24th's Protestant chaplain, Archie C. Carraway at the Chapel, Sunday morning, March 28, 1943.

764th Tanker To Put In Bid For Diamond Title

The 764th Tank Battalion (L), which was recently attached to the 10th Armored Division, expects to make a strong bid for the Infantry School league crown when the baseball season opens—and with good reason.

One of the men who will represent the 764th on the diamond is Edwin Williams, formerly of the Philadelphia and Boston Red Sox, and manager of the Decatur Club of the Three I League in 1941.

Dial Phone System To Be Post-wide

Installation crews have arrived at Fort Benning to commence conversion of all manual telephone circuits on the main post, Harmony Church, and Sand Hill to dial systems, according to Lt. Col. Alexander W. Young, post signal officer.

Although attainment of the final goal is three to four months in the future, at that time available telephone service for all post activities will be increased considerably.

In place of the eight to 10 circuits now connecting the post proper to Alabama area, a submarine type cable under the Chattahoochee will carry approximately 50 lines to this sub-division when complete.

Dial equipment will be housed in the present manual building in Harmony Church; however, a new exchange will be constructed in Sand Hill area.

Leopard Finally Changes Its Spots

Candidate Clarence D. Dockett of the Seventh Company, Third Student Training Regiment, found the situation reversed on himself last week when he had to fall in line for "shots."

For, as a former Medical Corps officer, it used to be his duty to administer shots to long waiting lines of men. Dockett, moreover, has found his entire training pro-

Reporter Joins Army To Cover Biggest Story

Candidate David K. Gross of the 26th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, currently is working on the biggest assignment of his career but his typewriter is back in Philadelphia, where he broke into the newspaper craft 20 years ago and from where he enlisted in the army last year.

Widely known as a newspaper feature writer and playwright in the East, Gross is now 38 years old and asserts he is in the finest physical condition he has enjoyed since his high school football days. He will disagree heatedly with anyone who says there is no place in combat outfits for men who have passed their 38th birthday. And all his hutment mates concede he can give the best college football player in his company a good race on the obstacle course and that he can negotiate the bayonet assault course as easily as any of his fellow candiates.

One of Gross' personal reasons for joining the army was that he could not see himself on the sidelines, missing the greatest story of a lifetime. He enlisted two days after his latest play, "High View House," was on its way to the producers.

NEWS BUREAU

A native of New York City, Gross was raised in Lansford, Pa., where he was prominent in high school sports. He studied four years under a former Oxford university professor and at the age of 19 took a job with a news bureau in Pittsburgh.

Gross worked in the Philadelphia field for 10 years, later moving to the New York Sunday Mirror's magazine section as a by-line feature writer. Among the important stories he has covered were the Lindbergh kidnapping case and the New York gang war between the Vincent Coll and Dutch Schultz factions. He also has done syndicated feature material for International News Service.

NOVELIST

In 1937, Gross turned to free lance writing and started to work on a novel, "The Time to Live," which is being marketed at the present time while he enters the intensive phase of his officer candidate training. Upon successful completion of the course, he will be graduated and commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry May 30.

"High View House," the play, was started by Gross as a starring vehicle for his friend, Paul Muni.

Gross has a brother, I. T. Gross of Newport News, Va., who served in the World War as an American army officer and was stationed in Germany for eight months with the 346th Infantry, an occupational force.

G. I.'s See First Run Movies Before Civilians

Profits Returned In Form of Other Recreational Activities

The average GI guy "sweating out" a queue at one of greater Fort Benning's eleven theaters, seldom considers how fortunate he is to be about to see a "first run" motion picture or how the profits derived ill be returned to him in the form of other recreational facilities.

But it is true. In a given month, Fort Benning received $2,600 which had been divided and returned on a pro rata basis.

The Main Theater, opened September 18, 1936, is one of the finest on any post and equal to some of the best civilian theaters. It has a capacity of 1504 and usually plays to full houses.

The average daily attendance at the Main Theater during 1942 was 1,041 daily while the yearly total was 1,017,779. Maj. James C. Sutton supervises Benning's movie houses.

Master Sergeant Kenneth L. Bauer, who has been managing theaters at Fort Benning for 17 years and the main theater since its opening, points out that attendance figures are no gauge of the enthusiasm or lack of it with which a motion picture is received.

PROMPTED BY BOREDOM

He states it is boredom rather than choosiness which prompts the majority to attend a show. Many will come regardless of what is playing.

The sergeant does have, however, a practical means of judging popular opinion. He stands at the head of the main aisle, and when the feature is a "dud", he says, critical members of the audience just rise and leave.

Western pictures—or "horse operas"—are always enthusiastically received, he observes. "Arty" pictures such as the recent Noel Coward opus, "In Which We Serve," are not good box office.

Besides the films booked in Atlanta for eight-day periods, USO-Camp Shows are presented fortnightly at the various theaters. Like the movies, they are well-attended.

The theaters scattered over the Main Post, and the Sand Hill, Harmony Church and Alabama Courtroom areas require a personnel of 135, 21 of whom are at the Main Theater. Certain duties have recently been assumed by members of the W. A. A. C.

Incidentally, Sgt. Bauer places his stamp of approval on the way they have taken to their jobs.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—A watchdog was left locked inside their home by the Ralph MacBride's. When they returned the pooch was locked outside. He had been put out by a thief who stole $75 worth of clothing.

During peacetime an enlisted man is eligible for 30 days furlough a year. However, this does not apply now that there is a war going on. Furloughs are granted at the discretion of the C. O.

Children's School To Celebrate Father's Night

The Fort Benning P.-T. A. will entertain the Fathers at an evening meeting, Thursday, at 8 p. m., in the auditorium of the Children's School. Dr. Paul Munro, superintendent of the Columbus Schools, will speak on "Some Great Imperatives in American Education."

The Hobby Show, under the supervision of Mrs. Elliott Watkins, will be an added feature. Prizes of war stamps will be awarded to the best collections. Judges for the Hobby Show are Colonel Harry N. Burkhalter, Mrs. Leven C. Allen and Mrs. George P. Howell.

Officers for the coming year will be chosen at this meeting.

Amateur Night Is Regular Club Feature

Colored Troops Enjoy Varied Friday Programs By Talented Artists

Every Friday evening is "amateur night" at Benning's Service Club Number Four.

That nothing is barred is the obvious attitude of the usually large soldier audience that fills the club recreation hall. The amateur invariably finds listeners receptive and sympathetic to anything he chooses to do from an aria by Bach to "Wee Baby Blues." In the end the hour turns out to be crisp, satisfying entertainment with a more or less spicy flavor of Harlem vaudeville.

Jovial, two hundred pound Cpl. Julius Jackson, of the reception center's Company "B" is announcer and general director. Many times he turns out to be a show all within himself with his impersonations of a raw recruit after his first day in the army or of a minstrel blackface lost amid the audience.

EIGHT-PIECE BAND

The club band of eight pieces is made up of service men who are able to play after a day of usual duties within their respective units. There are two saxophones, two trumpets, a string bass, an electric guitar, a piano and drums.

Talent comes mainly from three sources. Permanent units on the post furnish a considerable variety of dancers, singers and instrumentalists. The transient group from the reception center supplies another part, while guest artists or civilians either employed on the post or from nearby Columbus complete the list.

A few entertainers become all-time favorites who return frequently over long periods. Two such individuals are reception center's Private Willie Mitchell and "Georgia Brown."

PROFESSIONAL

Pvt. Mitchell is a reformed professional performer at one time with "The Hot Harlem Revue" and several other troupes about the southeast. He amounts to something of a mixture between Bill Robinson, Ray Bolger and a whirling dervish with his dancing feet and husky singing voice.

"Georgia Brown" is a singer of "blues" and torchy numbers that somehow never sound like the originals since she re-interprets each song to suit herself and her audience whether it means rearranging the words or modifying the melody.

New Ration System Will Reduce Waste

Supply to Be Based On Average Number Of Meals Served Daily

A new system of computing ration issues to various organizations, designed to reduce waste still further in army mess-halls, was outlined this week by Maj. A. H. Veazey, post mess supervisor.

In the past, rations were issued to units on the basis of numbers of men carried on the morning report. However, a close check-up revealed that sometimes there is a difference between this figure and the number actually taking meals in mess-halls. This could result in preparation of an over-abundance of food.

Under the latest plan, it is contemplated having rations counted on the basis of average meals served per day. Unit mess sergeants are now engaged in keeping a daily count of actual numbers present at each serving. Such records kept over a period of time will make possible an estimate of a unit's strength, normally taking all meals with their outfit. Rations will then be delivered on the basis of this average daily consumption.

CHECK EXCESS STOCKS

Major Veazey added that regular inventories of the 17 station complement mess-halls under his supervision include checks on excessive stocks carried in company kitchens, and surveys on consumption of different foods compared to actual amounts needed. He said that a limited reserve stock in Army kitchens would assure fresher foods on the table and a minimum of spoilage.

As for reduction of waste in consumption, smaller portions are being served, with soldiers having the privilege of "seconds", if desired.

It has been noted since the inauguration of a mess supervisor, and the resulting closer inspection of various kitchens, that the volume of garbage is reduced considerably.

In addition to his duties in connection with the elimination of waste, Major Veazey, with Lt. D. R. Bergen, post food nutrition officer, and the nutrition board plan standard menus of balanced meals for all units at Fort Benning. The major also makes regular inspections of kitchens checking utensils, dishes, and the waiters and cooks themselves for cleanliness.

Lyric Baritone Takes Course

Played Roles in Many Famous Operettas

Just now, towering and massive Officer Candidate Wesley K. Bender of the Second Company, Second Student training Regiment, here at Fort Benning, is fighting mad. He wants to get his commission and get some well-placed shots at our Axis enemies.

But after the war he plans to return to the "bright lights" of show business—a field in which he has already advanced notably. A lyric baritone, he began his Broadway career in 1935 but has played on the stage since 1929.

He began by playing juvenile leads and later went on a vaudeville tour with Greta Nelssen. He played second lead to Dennis King in "Fredrika" and was in "The Three Waltzes." In "You Never Know," Candidate Bender appeared with Lupe Velez, Toby Wing and Libby Holman.

After completing a cross-country tour with Mae West, Candidate Bender described her as "one of the nicest, most wholesome persons I've ever known."

His biggest break came, however, when he went to see a rehearsal of "The Student Prince"—his favorite operetta — and was cast for a part in it.

Lawson Field Trio Get Promotions

First Lt. Allison S. Perry and 2nd Lt. Paul E. Campbell of the 54th Base Headquarters & Air Base Squadron and Lt. Donald W. Kollman of the 1013th Guard Squadron have received promotions. Lieut. Perry was promoted to captain, and Lieuts. Campbell and Kollman were made first lieutenants.

Capt. Perry, Base Tech Inspector at Lawson Field, comes from Lake Wales, Fla. A pilot, he received his primary training at Pine Bluff, Tex., his basic at Randolph Field, Tex. and his advanced at Brook Field, Tex. He also took a course in aeronautical engineering at Curtiss Wright, Los Angeles, Calif.

Lieut. Campbell, statistical officer is from Ohio where he received his education. He attended the Ohio State University, AM School, Chanute Field, Ill., and upon receiving his commission at OCS Miami Beach, Fla., Lieut. Campbell attended the A.A.F. Statistical School at Harvard University, Boston, Massachusetts.

Lieutenant Kollman comes from Westgate, Iowa. He is a graduate of University of Iowa where he received a BS degree. Before receiving his commission at the Infantry Officer Candidate School, Fort Benning, Ga., Lieut. Kollman was stationed with the 9th Infantry Regiment Anti-Tank Company at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas. Lieut. Kollman is the Plans and Training Officer and also squadron training officer.

Only 24 pounds of beans are included in the ton of food served to each U. S. soldier a year.

THEY'RE NOT behind the eight-ball, as anybody can clearly see, because the eight ball is of course jet black. But they're behind a table completely cleared of billiard balls after a brilliant run by Erwin Rudolph, right, five-times world champion pocket billiard expert who met Pfc. Harold J. Baker, Lawson Field, formerly Hollywood trick shot expert. The two played a special match as Rudolph came to Fort Benning to give an exhibition Wednesday and Thursday. Private Baker, now with a troop carrier unit, had first played against Rudolph nearly 15 years ago at a world championship match in Milwaukee—Signal Lab Photo.

Washington Fanfare Described by O. C.

Failure to See FDR Chagrins Honor Guard

Practically every soldier has seen in the newsreels pictures of a distinguished visitor being received in Washington and the honor guard that is turned out to pay proper homage as the celebrity is enroute to the White House to be received by the president.

Candidate Nathan Spritzin, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was stationed at Fort Meade, Md. prior to his assignment in the Second Company, Third Student Training regiment, gives the following account of his experience as a member of an honor guard.

"A distinguished visitor must always be received by the president of the United States with the honors due his rank. This necessitates the mounting of an honor guard along the streets of approach to the White House. The units stationed at Fort Meade being in close proximity to Washington were usually given this honor.

PRACTICE DRILLS

"Days before the mounting, practice drills would be held and everything made spic and span for the appointed day. After a final inspection the men would board the special train for the capital. Arriving there, a parade would be held to Constitutional Avenue. When the men reached their appointed places they would take up a formation of parade rest awaiting the moment when the president or distinguished visitor would pass. Everyone, especially those who had never seen the Command-in-Chief patiently awaited his arrival.

"Finally the moment arrived. Sirens blared in the distance and everyone came smartly to the alert. An officer gave the order to 'present arms.' And then came the disappointment. Cars whizzed by so fast that it was almost impossible to see who was in them. The president's car was distinguished by the Secret Service men riding the running boards but there was no sight of the chief himself. The procession was over almost before one had a chance to blink his eyes. Disappointment shown in most faces of the guard. They had hoped to get a glimpse of the president but few if any were able to.

NARY A GLIMPSE

In one instance as the men were getting ready to march back to the trains, a policeman noticed their chagrin. Turning to them he explained that for fifteen years he has been on the force and had yet to see the president or his visitor in any procession. He has to face the crowd when the entourage passed by."

Among the visitors for whom Candidate Spritizin has mounted honor guards are Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, the president of Cuba and the president of Peru.

1st STR Unit Slates Dance

The Eighth Company, First Student Training regiment, will sponsor a dinner dance, jestingly titled "Graduation (?) Hop," Tuesday night, April 13, at the Brigade Rest camp. The Third Armored regiment dance orchestra has been engaged for the evening.

The dance will follow the company's tenth week board by several days, and it is predicted that between 175 and 200 men will be able to attend. The candidates have used a comic twist to announce the dance and the floor show saying, "Any resemblance between characters depicted during the floor show and tactical officers, living or dead, is purely co-irridental. We're bucking."

The dinner menu is being arranged by Candidate Maurice Dubinsky of St. Louis, Mo., dance chairman. The floor show will be a series of ten-minute skits presented by each of the company's four platoons. The entertainment will deal with the educational and recreational opportunities in the OCS curriculum.

74th TD's Promote 16

Promotions of three officers and 16 enlisted men of the 774th Tank Destroyer Battalion, recently attached to the 10th Armored Division, have been announced.

Capt. Edward J. Bellamy of Atlanta, Ga., has been raised in rank to major, and 1st Lt. Lum A. Ingram, Jr., of Fayetteville, Ga., and 1st Lt. Ira G. Bottoms of Atlanta, have been promoted to captain.

Promotions of enlisted men in the battalion are as follows:

To technical sergeant: Staff Sgt. Rene V. Brassard, Manchester, N. H., and T-4 Charles H. Kember, Cincinnati, O.

To corporal: Pfc. William H. Mills, Jr., Long Island City, N. Y.

To technician fifth grade: Pfc. Clarence E. Childers, Middlesboro, Ky.; Pfc. Edward R. Earnshaw, Manchester, N. H., and Pfc. Peter F. Supranowicz, Philadelphia, Pa.

QM Supply Officer First Lieutenant

Lt. William H. Johnson, supply officer of 283rd Quartermaster Refrigeration company, has been promoted from second to first lieutenant, according to word received at post headquarters.

Entering service as a private in August, 1941, Johnson served with the station hospital, Camp Robinson, Ark., until he was selected to attend officer candidate school, Camp Lee, Va. He was commissioned in August, 1942, and assigned to Fort Benning in September.

Ex-Upholsterer's Art Eases Medico's Life

Cpl. Nardantoni Is Also Excellent Cook; Knows His Stuffing

Cpl. Guido Nardantonio has contributed a good deal to the morale of his company and battalion, and as a result of his efforts the officers of the 80th Medical Battalion, 10th Armored Division, and the men of Co. A have experienced solid comfort in their respective day rooms.

An upholstered in civilian life, Cpl. Nardantonio created from odds and ends around the battalion area a studio couch and overstuffed chair for his company day room. Then, after an officer had seen the finished products, the corporal found himself committed to make a duplicate set for the officers' quarters.

Materials were decidedly scarce, but this did not bother Nardantonio. He made the frames for the furniture from scrap wood. Then he confiscated an old bed and used the spring in the couches. But it was in the matter of stuffing that he displayed real ingenuity. Lacking cotton waste and other materials generally employed by upholsterers, he took to the woods—and came back with a load of pine needles, which are quite plentiful in the Sand Hill area. The result was amazing, for the pine needle-stuffed pillows are quite as comfortable as many a fancier product.

Nardantonio left his upholsterer's hammer at his Newark, N. J., shop when he came into the army, but he found a substitute when he tackled these jobs, a sledge hammer. Shears also seemed to be scarce, so he cut all his cloth with a razor blade.

In the old days when he was turning out custom jobs in his shop, Nardantonio used to collect $60 or $70 for a studio couch. His price to his buddies in Co. A was $2—the cost of a few items he had to buy.

All of the furniture was made in Nardantonio's spare time. His job in the army? Cooking, which bears no relation to upholstering except that there are degrees of skill in both trades, and Nardantonio considers himself a very good cook.

He is still in business in Newark where his partner is carrying on alone—and he is quite ready to take orders for anything in the upholstering line.

Pinball machines and other mechanical gambling devices are doing their warbit as electrical and signalling devices. Hundreds of confiscated "mechanical bandits" have been salvaged and converted into telegraphic and radio equipment.

Guide Learned To Hit Ground Hard Dodging Hunters' Wild Bullets

Long before he started his training here for second lieutenant's bars, Candidate Clayton B. Farnsworth of the 12th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, was adept at hitting the ground fast and hard enough to draw the praise of a tactical officer.

Farnsworth used to be a professional guide in the northern lakes region of Wisconsin and, as he tells it, he frequently had to take speedy cover and duck when excited tyro hunters cracked and fired their guns wildly.

The candidate comes from Hayward, Wis., near Lake Superior, a region which offers some of the best hunting and fishing in the country. It was his job to conduct parties of city-dwelling sportsmen on jaunts into the woods which often lasted for 10 or 14 days.

A collector of guns for many years, Farnsworth takes especial pride in his possession of a 300 Holland and Holland Magnum, which has telescopic sights and 30 per cent more range than the Army's M1.

LINCOLN, Neb.—(AP)—Ralph Cox, a member of the State Board of Control, told the legislature's appropriations committee that the south wall of the state penitentiary at Lincoln had been in bad shape for four or five years.

"In fact," Cox added, "it might go down at any minute."

Army Wife Shops In Columbus

Comes once again this day of hilarious laughter and tricks. Needless-to-say, today is; and may April First eternally be, April Fool's Day! For what other time brings such abundance of lighthearted foolishness and joyous nonsense? And who doesn't need a bit of cheering up these uncertain days? Whatever the weather past, April First really is the grand opening for all the sunshiny months to come. Sunshine poking its inquisitive nose into all dark and dreary corners means much hustling and rushing around to 'Be Prepared'. Whether your home needs a thorough reorganizing or your wardrobe begs life-giving, exciting new touches, get off to a good start this April Fool's Day.

One of the smartest and most fashion-wise shops in Columbus is SEALY'S. Uncomplicated clothes—free of gingerbread is their forte. Fastidiously detailed suits of tan or blue gabardine are ideal for wear immediately and in early summer. One pure wool suit with a difinite try-to-pass-me-by look has a minute black and white hounds-tooth check cardigan jacket, complete with white pearl-buttoned blouse and slim black skirt. You'll wish summer were here right this minute when you see this fashionable shop's assortment of cotton chambray washable dreses in various melt-in-your-mouth colors. Peppermint stripes, quilting checks, unusual plaids are just a few of the patterns you'll discover in dirndl, shirtwaist, and "little suit" styles. Delightful jockey caps, tiny calots and pillboxes will complete many of the summer dresses. Made especially to top the prettiest outfit you own are chic hats of chartreuse felt or red and green straws in several becoming styles. If you want dinner gowns, coats, suits, hats, or dresses which really look as though they were made just for you, make it a point to see the outstanding collection at this up-to-the-minute shop.

The old adage "Absence makes the heart grow fonder" is not always true in these uncertain days. But the presence of a fine photograph which really looks just like you will mean much to your loved ones. Mother's Day on May 9 suggests that the time for taking this photograph is drawing nigh. The excellent, life-like work of the ADME DUPONT STUDIO is a guarantee that the gift you may give your family will make them almost as happy as they'd be if you were really with them. Proper lighting, natural positions and a generally relaxed feeling are all necessary in order to achieve the masterpiece you expect and hope your photograph will be. And a masterpiece of photographic art you shall most certainly be able to give your parents. This renowned studio will be satisfied with nothing less than a masterpiece. Good photography takes time—for selecting poses, developing prints, and possibly a bit of retouching are not matters which can be completed in a moment. If you have your picture taken this very week, by the time Mother's Day rolls around your friend family will be the recipients of a truly fine portrait of you just as they would remember you best.

Pretty-as-a-princess clothes are in every corner of THE KIDDIE SHOPPE at 1144 Broadway. Your daughter, be she one or twelve years old, will squeal with impulsive delight when you take her shopping for her new Easter clothes at this gayly decorated shop. Bright cotton play dresses and softer-toned outfits for "good" wear are numerous in size one to junior fourteen. One especially fresh looking pinafore is fashioned of a delicately soft shade of coral cotton with eyelet embroidery trimming the ruffled "angel wing" on the shoulders. A dainty white dotted swiss dress with pale pink roses embroidered between insets of white lace will be ideal for your wee tot if she wears size two or three. Little boys, being just as important as little girls, come in for their share of attention with the famous Kaynee suits which have been made in tan, green, blue, and red and white striped cottons. If your son, despite the influence of the Army, has still managed to remain nautical-minded, he'll certainly clamor for a suit with a navy blue and white striped blouse boasting an authentic sailor's collar. Other numerous attractive and practical wash suits are available in many sizes.

—V—

As sure a sign of Spring as that "young man's fancy, lightly turning" is the gay array of millinery at KIRALFY'S. The hat section has literally bloomed overnight and is displaying hats of every conceivable color and style. There are blithe new casuals of soft felt, immaculate and fresh looking sailors trimmed with dainty white lily-of-the-valley and froths of white veiling. Possibly you'd like something to perch prettily behind your pompadour hair-do. The creations of Dobbs, Croyden, Berkley, Karo and G. Howard Hodge have all been deftly designed in imported straws and the finest fur felts. Look-alive pillboxes, calots, sailors and off-the-face styles are made of spanking white pique and delicate eyelet embroidery. This shop also features many flattering and unbelievably beautiful new cartwheel creations. I have always felt, and don't we all, that a cartwheel is one of the most versatile and universally becoming type hats one can wear. Whether you prefer enormous cabbage roses or minute field flowers highlighting your headgear this season, you discover with delight that right here in Columbus are just the hats of superb quality, character of design and individuality that will make you look as smooth and lovely as you've always wanted to appear.

H. ROTHSCHILD, INC., has somehow, in these days of delayed shipments and lack of materials, managed to purchase a large supply of fine, comfortable mattresses of exceptional value. This certainly should be of extreme interest to those of you, who perhaps have been sleeping on "overaged" and tired mattresses which are nothing more than a series of uncomfortable bumps. A box spring, purchased for the same moderate price as your mattress, will make your hours of sleep really beautiful and something you've always hoped for, but until now, never obtained. These "clouds of comfort" are covered with patterned heavy damask or woven tickings in blue, green or grey, as you prefer. All are real bargains which have been built to stand up for years and cannot shift or become lumpy. As is the case in all really good mattresses, handles have been added to facilitate lifting and make the periodical turning a simple matter. Tufted or tuftless styles are available in the colors I've mentioned above. Bedding of high quality is unusual at these money-saving prices, so don't say I didn't tell you.

—V—

Perhaps you've not discovered that J. A. KIRVEN'S has a really intriguing line of better jewelry. Their lapel watches, rings, bracelets and pins are all gold-filled with sterling silver bases. Cocktail rings priced reasonably make a perfect gift for you or someone you'd like to flatter and please. Numerous styles are made of polished imported stones such as white sapphire, aquamarine, amethyst, emerald and ruby. Real French Poodles are cunning pets; if you can't have a real one, why not substitute? One pin which really captivates me is designed as a graceful gold French Poodle whose neck ruff and leg bands are highlighted by double rows of sparkling rhinestones. This is just one of many selections available in Coro-Craft jewelry. This renowned line also includes lovely clip-on earrings set with aquamarine, amethyst, rhinestone and topaz stones which match many of the pins on display. Lapel watches whose external style, beauty and distinction are matched only by their internal time-keeping efficiency are almost a necessity in these days when time means so much. If you lean toward dressy clothes, a truly exquisite watch, set in a gold triple-bow effect and embellished with glistening aquamarines, will add a distinctive note of perfection to your costume.

An Easter card thoughtfully chosen has long been one of the most appropriate ways to express your greetings, love, and understanding. WHITE'S BOOK STORE has a seemingly endless display of attractively designed cards from which you'll have no difficulty choosing several whose messages express exactly what you would like to say. Traditional bunny rabbits, spring tulips, fancy Easter eggs, fuzzy yellow ducks enliven the gay cards for your children. Just as attractive designs, with perhaps a bit more sedate touch, are especially suitable for Mothers, Fathers, Aunts, Uncles, in fact, for all of one's closest relatives. Appropriate greetings for those in the armed forces are innumerable. If you're sending many Easter messages, you'll enjoy perusing the less expensive and simpler cards. If, on the other hand, you're able to go "all-out," you'll find exactly the tinsel, lace and satin-ribboned cards you want to send to friends which are really just the kind you'd love to receive from them.

Superbly interpreted handbags by the famous house of Lewis are eagerly-awaited new arrivals at KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. These bags are made with unassuming lines and for life-long expectancy. Tailored and sturdy bags of brown or black alligator calf would be an ideal complement to your new spring tailleur. Strap handles make for comfortable carrying. Cordé bags have long been the pride of women who are satisfied with only the best in accessories. Large pouch styles with attractively carved lucite frames are perfect for wear with costumes which are not strictly tailored. Anything red hits you between the eyes. Let it. But only one shot at a time! The perfect knock-out drop, if you do like this color, is a red Lewis bag of extremely fine gabardine which has been softly tailored and trimmed with painstaking care. Bow knots on either end of this envelope type bag add the final fashionable touch. Wooden-framed bags of fushia, pale yellow and kelly green striped fabrics in pouch or envelope styles are especially suitable for everyday wear and will hold up especially well under a great deal of knocking about. Whether you need a handbag for everyday use or for your moments of glamour, fail not to see this complete display.

For many years past Navy blue has been the favorite color of fashion-minded women for spring wear. This year is no exception. Now that the OPA is having quite a bit of say-so in the matter of colors, this is the last chance for you to select shoes of Navy blue. MILLER - TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY presently has a substantial stock of the latest styles in this appealing shade which are smart enough to go anywhere. You'll recognize the rightness of their shoes of blue calf, twiltex, patent and gabardine. Much of their superbly fashioned footwear is available in either high or medium heels. You'll take pride in the perfect fit and comfort of the blue calf walking shoes in ties or step-in styles which will make your every step tireless throughout your action-filled days and nights. Some of these walking shoes have either leather heels or smartly executed covered heels. An outstanding shoe I noted especially is a Navy blue calf step-in pump beautifully made by I. Miller. Wearing playshoes for your lighter moments will enable you to preserve your other shoes. Suitable blue calf play shoes by Joyce, Easy Goers and Penaljo are very much in evidence throughout this store where quality, fit and superb craftmanship will reward your selection.

Many Army wives, not knowing exactly where to go, have spent countless, tiresome days seeking various forms of employment in Columbus. Knowing that this is a far from satisfactory way to find work, the Junior Chamber of Commerce has undertaken to help them by opening the ARMY WIVES EMPLOYMENT SERVICE. This Service is located in the offices of WRBL, 1420 2nd avenue, and is very competently managed by Mrs. Louise Shores and Mrs. Betty Lewis. They are both ready and willing to help find employment, especially for those interested in domestic or factory work. Naturally the salaries for this type work are not as high as those for some professional employes. This worthwhile Service is offered entirely without expense to either the employer or employe. If you feel a bit timid about trying to find employment because of lack of experience, the Service might well be able to uncover just the work you'd enjoy learning to do. If you've had previous experience, your problem will be a comparatively simple matter to figure out, and before you know it, you'll be a working girl again. An interview, of course, doesn't guarantee you a job, but it may well lead to one. Sounds like a good idea, doesn't it? You'll find this Service is really just what you've been seeking.

Gridiron Clash Brought On By Officer Order

Southern, Mid-West Football Greats In OCS Grass Exercise

When Lieut. Edgar Wynn, tactical officer of the 15th Company of 1st STR, recently ordered grass exercises, a scene took place that grid fans would have paid hundreds of dollars to have seen.

"Line charging will be the next exercise," Wynn announced, little realizing he had the nucleus of a major bowl game on his hands when the command was given. Open mouthed, OCS students gaped when they heard the mighty thud of four grid behemoths driving head-on.

15-MINUTE CLASH

The intersectional clash lasted for 15 minutes, which was to determine whether Big Ten football technique was superior to Southern razzle-dazzle. OC students Jack McKewen, Alabama star lineman, paired off against Iowa's famed fullback, Bill Stauss. And Sam Sharp, Alabama's star end, chose Detroit's backfield ace, Jack Weston, as his line opponent in the grass exercise. Jim Todd, Georgia Rose Bowl fame, was in the middle.

The clash is rapidly becoming a legend. It is claimed one and one-quarter acres of the parade ground's velvety lawn was torn up in the scuffle; that the foot grips left holes as big as plowed furrows, and that grunts, and smashing of bodies of the grid titans could be heard hundreds of yards away.

ALL ON SAME TEAM

Whether the meeting was accidental or premeditated Lieut. Wynn couldn't fathom, and he regretted very much to call "time" at the end of the quarter. When asked, after seeing the exhibition, whether he had found out if Southern Conference football technique is superior to the Mid-Westerners' style of play, the tactful tactical officer stated, "They're all playing on the same team now."

Mock Ball Game Turns Realistic For OC Class

Zany event of the week was a mock ball game staged in the Second Student Training Regiment by a quartet of 30th Company OCs during the noon break on the machine gun range. Most ball games are called off because of rain, but this one was started because OCS students gathered in the stands to keep dry.

There was no ball, no bat, no gloves, no bases. The only players were Pitcher Merrill Myers, Catcher Frank Flores, Batter Clay Eakle, and Umpire Ed Harper. Though the mock game was short, it was striking for its realism. You could actually see the ball.

Highlight of the game came when Eakle connected with the ball that Myers didn't pitch and hit a fast drive along the third base line that wasn't there. He stretched the hit into three imaginary bases but was called out in attempting to stretch it to four because he failed to touch the corner of the visionary plate.

Boxing Tourney

The post boxing tournament to determine the team champion of Fort Benning will get under way next Monday and Tuesday nights in the squared circle at the past gym. Deadline for ter mentries is this afternoon at 5:30 according to the F. B. A. A., sponsors of the event.

Preliminary bouts will be held the first two nights in two different classes, one for regimental squads and one for batalion units. The 29th Infantry sluggers are defending champs in the larger division and will enter a full team in an attempt to retain their laurels.

Engineers Boast Excellent Court Record for Year

The 55th Engineers, who lost out in the final playoffs for the post basketball title, might well lay claim to having the best record of any Benning quintet for the entire season. The Big Red won 23 out of 26 encounters and won first-place honors in all their league races.

Two of those defeats, of course, were administered by the 2nd STR Leaders in the playoffs, which meant that during 24 tilts played in the regular season, the 55th lost only once. That included competition for both halves in the Sand Hill League as well as the USO loop downtown.

The 10th Armored Champs were tutored by Lieut. Earnest (Doc) Movius, a medical officer in the battalion. Said he, when asked to name a star player, "We weren't able to boast a single professional ballplayer or any outstanding individual. The secret of our success in the various league races was the fighting and cooperative spirit the men displayed."

Considering that the "Mighty 55th" tossers spent most of their time, including the morning of the final playoff game with the Leaders, in building bridges for the Tiger Division, they deserve a real pat on the back for their efforts on the hardwood this winter.

Tiger Supply Unit Promotes 35 Men

Two first lieutenants of the Supply Battalion, 10th Armored division, have been promoted to captains, and 33 enlisted men in the battalion have been elevated in grade. The officers who have been promoted are Capt. John A. Early, now commanding officer of Co. A, and Capt. Samuel Keats, now executive officer and S-3 officer of the battalion.

Sgt. Ernest G. Lundy of Mobile, Ala., has been promoted to first sergeant. New staff sergeants in the battalion are Frank S. Cocca, North Troy, N. Y.; Carroll D. Hudson, Waycross, Ga., and Joseph M. Robertson, La Canada, Calif. Promoted from corporal to sergeant are Charles W. Morga, St. Joseph, Mo.; Gregory F. Meehan, Newark, N. J., and Walter E. Strouse, Jr., Wellsville, N. Y.

T-5 Hubert Trusty of Pine Ridge, Ky., and T-5 Joel Englander of Brooklyn, N. Y., are now technicians fourth grade. Four men have been made corporals and there are 20 new technicians fifth grade in the battalion.

Ahighly ingenious technique for bucking long, slow-moving dental inspection lines has been developed by certain soldiers who have the correct "equipment." Men who are able to do so simply remove their false teeth, hand them to the next in line and say, "Show these to the officer and bring 'em back to the barracks when you come."

G. I. Summary Of World News

BY SGT. O. J. REMINGTON

DAYLIGHT AIR RAIDS over Europe, comparable to those now being made at night by the RAF, soon will be made by American Flying Fortresses, according to Brig. Gen. Newton Longfellow, commanding the Eighth USAAF.

When our generals begin making such statements, look for plenty of action along the European fronts this spring and summer.

With American and British forces still pounding away at Rommel, with Germany still trying desperately to reinforce the African troops, with American air forces already smashing at Sardinia and Naples, any invasion of the Continent still awaits Allied forces gaining complete control of North Africa.

American air forces during the week struck heavily at the Renault factory in Paris, and again at Amsterdam. The growing thunder of wings and explosions of bombs over Europe rather took the headlines away from Africa. In Russia, mud appears to have stalemated both armies. Marshal Petain issued a statement condemning American bombing of the Renault works. German sources gave out statements boasting of the "invincibility" of German held Europe, and stated that tremendous fortifications have been built along more than 1,500 miles of Channel and Atlantic coasts. Germany also called King Boris III of Bulgaria for a visit to Hitler's headquarters. Apparently the Nazis still figure an invasion attempt through Greece and the Balkans.

IN THE FAR EAST, American bombers swept down on 10 Jap strongholds, making a three-day assault on enemy ship concentrations at Kavieng, New Ireland during which 12 Japanese vessels, including seven cruisers or destroyers, were sunk or badly damaged.

It would seem that Gen. MacArthur's forces are attempting to keep Japanese concentrations constantly harrassed, to prevent threatened moves toward Australia. The Japs continue to reinforce their outlying positions, though, and some big activity may come of it.

In China, official government statements were issued that a famine in Honan province has become the biggest natural disaster to strike the struggling Chinese for six years. Five million persons are effected.

WHILE GEN. PATTON continues his attacks against the Axis forces in North Africa, he quite apparently is not neglecting the statesman end of the war for dispatches tell of him meeting with Gen. Saleh Oumertak, chief of the Turkish delegation touring Allied bases in the Mediterranean area. After the meeting, the Turkish general was quoted as stating flatly that the Allies will win the war. Doubtless this is very important in keeping the Turks lined up on the right side.

Funster Forces Finnegan's Flight From Feline Fury

Lieutenant Zenus E. Finnegan, ordnance property officer, never wants to hear of a cat again, although until April 1 he had never particularly loathed the feline creatures.

Besieged again and again by telephone calls from people offering to sell him cats at two dollars a head, and mobbed by persons actually bringing nondescript furry animals to his office at the ordnance warehouse, Lieutenant Finnegan, perplexed, and worried that his office might soon overflow with cats, did a little investigating.

Picking up his copy of the Daily Bulletin issued by the office of Lt. Col. J. D. Rosenberger, Jr., post adjutant, Lieut. Finnegan found a notice stating that he would pay $2 each for all cats brought to the ordnance warehouse, regardless of kind. The lieutenant, of course, had absolutely no need for the animals.

Contacting Captain Harry L. Shoemaker, Jr., assistant adjutant who issues the bulletin, Lieutenant Finnegan found the former had accepted the notice in good faith and not as the April Fool joke it was. The kittenish person who thought about the cats turned a little red a little later, Colonel Rosenberger said.

Post Exchange Plants Huge Victory Garden

Vegetables To Be Sold To Fort Military Families

Families of officers and non-commissioned officers living on the post at Fort Benning will soon be purchasing vegetables grown on a giganti, Victory Garden that now is being planted by the Post Exchange, under the supervision of Major Alexander H. Veasey, assistant Exchange officer.

A 50 acre tract, located southwest of Lawson Field on the Ferry Road now being planted in several types of spring vegetables and later on summer and then fall vegetables and green goods will be planted. S. K. Bell has been secured to farm the plot, Major Veasey stated.

TO SUPPLY PX GROCERY

Sufficient vegetables should be grown in the garden to supply most of the needs of the exchange grocery, which is maintained for families living on the post, Major Veasey explained. He emphasized that the growing of vegetables will in no way effect feeding of men at the Post, but is designed to augment the food supply of the Fort available for sale to those residing there.

Now being planted are potatoes, and onions, and in a short while, snap and lima beans, tomatoes and sweet potatoes will be put in. Cucumbers and peppers and some greens such as turnip and kale also will be put in and corn also will be planted.

In the fall, onions and other greens and fall cabbage will be planted.

Raff Praises Paratraining Given At Post

African War Vet Says Value Proven In Tunisian Battle

On the battle front in Africa was proven the efficacy of the rigorous training American paratroops received at Fort Benning, says Col. Edson Raff, who recently returned from "over there" where he directed the operations of the surprise vanguard in the first landings on the Dark Continent.

Colonel Raff returned to this country to assume a new command. He was a visitor in Fort Benning yesterday before going to his new post.

As a member of the original Provisional Parachute group and the 501st Parachute Battalion, Colonel Raff was one of the pioneers in the American paratroops. He has been promoted rapidly since joining the paratroops and recently was raised to a full Colonel, thereby qualifying him for a new, enlarged command.

Describing the daring raids by American 'chutists in the invasion of North Africa, Colonel Raff said:

"Although the paratroops underwent intensive training in England for several months prior to the actual invesion of North

Perrine Named School Troops Brigade CO

Colonel Potter Is His Successor As Executive Officer

Newly made Brigadier General Henry P. Perrine has been named commanding officer of the School Troops Brigade at The Infantry School, and his position as executive officer of the school will be filled by Colonel Harold E. Potter in a shift of assignments announced at Infantry School headquarters.

The new brigade commander, who received his appointment as a general officer on April 2nd, fills a position which has remained vacant since the activation of the school Troop Brigade last June. Until now, the school's commandant, Major General Leven C. Allen, has been in direct command of the school troops in addition to his other duties.

COMMAND COMPONENTS

The brigade is composed of the demonstration troops for the School Troop Brigade last June, the 124th Infantry, the 300th Infantry, the Provisional Quartermaster truck regiment, the 764th Tank Battalion, the 802nd Field Artillery Battalion, Battery A of the 801st Field Artillery, the 71st Engineers, and the 7th Observation Squadron.

General Perrine was a member of the orginal faculty of The Infantry School when the school was activated here in 1918. He left here in 1919 to return 20 years later as chief of the Publications Section of the school. After the start of the emergency, he became successively the assistant director of training, the secretary, and then the executive officer of the school.

Graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1913, General Perrine has also attended the Command and General Staff school at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and has a Master of Business Administration degree from Harvard university.

POTTER ASSISTANT

Colonel Potter was assistant executive officer of the school before succeeding General Perrine as executive officer. The colonel has been at The Infantry School since October 1940 when he became commanding officer of the First Student Training Battalion. He held the assignment for a year, re-

French Officers Arrive For Special TIS Course

Soldiers To Learn All About Yankee Weapons, Equipment

Two platoons of very serious French officers have assembled in the First Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School to attend a special course set up for them by the school in collaboration with the War Department and the chief of the French Military Mission in Washington.

The group, headed by Major Guy De Rochefort, consists mainly of well seasoned, hard bitten heroes of many historical European campaigns, both in this and the last World war.

The class as a group were unacquainted with one another until their arrival at The Infantry School. Now organized, they have become a French volunteer group preparing for the day when they can return overseas to help free their many relatives from the ruthless grip of the Nazi oppressors.

DEADLY EARNEST

Despite the fact that some of the officers are handicapped by a none too good command of the English language, they have already impressed several instructors with their deadly earnestness. They are here to learn and it is apparent that no obstacles will prevent them from accomplishing that mission.

The group includes many civilians who are taking the course as officer candidates. The officers represent almost every branch of military service. There are aviators, infantrymen, cavalrymen, engineers, and artillerymen.

The curriculum for the eight weeks' course is made up of specially selected subjects from the regular Infantry Officer Candidate course. The main purpose for the course is to familiarize the Frenchmen with American weapons and equipment, and the tactical techniques employed by American troops. They hope to fight side by side with the American soldiers overseas as soon as possible.

Post To See Bob Hope Show

Cast Includes Vague, Colonna and Langford

Grab your girdles, boys and girls, for rib-busting mirth. While there's life, there's "hope," and the one and only Hope is coming! Bob Hope will make a one-day appearance at Fort Benning May 25, bringing with him a galaxy of screen and radio favorites including Frances Langford, Jerry Colonna, Vera Vague, Skinnay Ennis, Wendell Niles, and others.

Bob began his swing of the nation's camps following his Tuesday night broadcast and show for the WAVES at the San Diego Naval hospital. He is making every effort to complete plans for a trip to England to entertain the boys over there upon completion of his engagements on this side of the big drink.

According to press releases, his big show at Fort Benning will be broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up. It will be one of his weekly broadcasts.

The time and place for his Benning performance has not been settled yet, but will be announced as soon as the special service officer can make the necessary arrangements.

Tenth Armored Queen Seeks New Laurels

Having won the title of Queen and Sweetheart of the Tenth Armored Division, Miss Verna Linnett of Bluffton, Ind., now is seeking new laurels as she was entered in the eighth and final qualifying week of competition to pick Miss Armorette, sponsored by the Armored Force News.

Her photograph appears in the current issue of the News with nine other contestants. From these photographs, soldiers in the Armored Forces will vote for their favorites and the three who receive the most votes in the eighth week will enter the finals starting April 19 and ending May 10. Miss Armorette will be announced on May 17.

Second WAAC Unit Assigned To Duty In TIS

84th Post Headquarters Company To Be Quartered In H. C. Area

Scheduled to arrive in the near future for duty with the Infantry School Training Brigade is the 84th Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, Post Headquarters company, according to an announcement received at post headquarters.

The unit which will be housed in Harmony Church area, opposite Student Training Brigade headquarters, is composed of two clerical platoons and one headquarters platoon. The two clerical sections will take over duties with the brigade similar to those assumed by members of the 43rd company at post headquarters, mainly relieving soldiers from desk jobs. Administrative details are to be handled by the headquarters platoon under the direction of the company commander and the leader, a non-com corresponding to first sergeant.

It is not yet known who will command the latest auxiliary outfit, nor who will be second in command. However, Third Officer Elenor P. Abbott, who recently arrived from Des Moines, Ia., will be the unit's mess and supply officer.

Although attached to the Infantry School for duty, the 84th company will have its administrative details handled by post headquarters.

Still another WAAC company is expected to arrive some time in June. This one will be attached to the Infantry School headquarters and will reside on the main post.

Officer, OC Set Obstacle Course Mark

Barriers Negotiated In 53 Seconds; Qualification 1' 40"

An officer in the 11th Company and a candidate in the 8th Company, after running the obstacle course of the 2nd Bn., First Student Training Regiment, as part of their physical training routine, are co-holders of a brand new record.

Several weeks ago members of the Physical Training Committee decided to hold competition, against time, over the course. First Lieutenant Herbert H. Graham won over his 170-odd classmates in the 11th company. Lieutenant Graham negotiated the course in 53 seconds, against a qualification mark of one minute, 40 seconds.

GRAHAM MILER

Lieutenant Graham, whose regular assignment is Ft. McClellan, Ala., was a miler and boxer when he attended the University of Florida, where he was graduated in 1941.

"I ran the mile to keep in condition for boxing," he admits.

Officer Candidate Ned Behr, the 8th company, equalled the mark of 53 seconds when he ran the course last week. The usual obstacles—tank trap, seven-foot wall, fence jump, box run, 20-foot climb and drop, log run, water jump, over-head swing and tumble pit—are included in the course. A sign nearby lists the names of titleholders and observers are waiting to see who will break the 53-second mark.

And It Ain't No Bad Idea At That, Ibetcha

Army officers are becoming leather-conscious. This was evidenced last week when members of the 10th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, were receiving instruction in combat intelligence.

2nd Lt. Sam Snead was playing the part of "sergeant intelligence" and was about to initiate his search of the improvised body of a late German sergeant, when Major Bryson, instructor, asked, "What is the first thing to be done?"

Before the student officer has an opportunity to frame his reply, one of the class members piped the helpful suggestion: "Take off his shoes and sell them."

PX Cafeteria Opens April 12

The post exchange restaurant operating in Service Club Number One will close Friday night, April 9, in preparation for opening of the post exchange cafeteria, corner of Wold avenue and Ingersoll street, Monday, April 12, according to Lt. Col. H. E. McGaffey, post exchange officer.

Two cafeteria counters and other necessary equipment have been purchased for the new restaurant, and are expected during the week. It is hoped that these will be installed and operating Monday morning. However, in case these do not arrive in time, temporary restaurant service will be offered military personnel and civilians in the new post exchange activity.

It is necessary to close the restaurant in Service Club Number One on Friday, so that its equipment may be dismantled and reinstalled in the new eating place.

Featured in the new cafeteria will be meals reasonably priced for civilian employees, and service men and their families. Additional space over that available in the older restaurant will afford facilities for feeding 7,000 to 9,000 persons per day.

Directing operation of the cafeteria is Lt. Clifford "Clinton" under the supervision of Col. McGaffey, and the Post Exchange Council. He repeated Col. McGaffey's hope that the cafeteria would open Monday but announced a need for waitresses and urged interested enlisted men's wives to apply.

1st STR Class Trains Under Battle Conditions

Whining Bullets, Exploding Mortar Shells Give Realistic Touch

More work with live ammunition—closer to real combat conditions.

That was the expressed preference of officer candidates of the 9th Company of the First Student Training Regiment upon completion of their course in the tactical employment of the rifle platoon recently.

Instructors sought to learn from the class whether a battle problem which involved machine gun bullets cracking a few feet overhead, mortar fire nearby, and land mines exploding so realistically close that the attackers were showered with dirt, had proved of practical benefit to the officer candidates.

But when the question was put to the assembled candidates they replied with a spontaneous and enthusiastic "Yea-ha!"—battle-cry of the Third Battalion, of which the company commanded by Captain John J. Wrinn, is a member. The "Yea-ha" slogan—meaning "be alive, work hard, think, never quit, be loyal"—was brought back from the Pacific war zone by the battalion commander, Lieut.-Col. John S. Roosma.

FACE PREFERRED

"Keep your rifles clean." was the word that went down the line as the candidates, under their own student leaders, took their formation and drew ammunition shortly before the starting time of "H" hour. "They'll be a lot of smoking your face or your rifle in the mud," they had been told, "it had better be your face."

A few minutes later they were moving forward, bent low, in the opening phase of the attack. Machine guns pounded. Tracer bullets laid down streaked avenues of death. The attacking force tumbled into a ditch, temporary shelter. Land mines blew up in their faces. But rifles barked steadily at targets on the "enemy"-held hill. The troops pressed forward, fell, rolled, fired—up and on again.

After a tortuous advance to the foot of the hill the men were close enough to the first objective for hand grenades. Throwing, they exploded with a roar. A bayonet rush—then the triumphant infantrymen, their objective won, treked back toward the stands for the inevitable critique.

"GOOD SHOW"

There was criticism on some points—the purpose of the training was to bring out and correct mistakes that might later cost lives in real combat. But spectators, among them a number of high ranking officers, generally agreed it had been a "good show," a performance well-carried out.

The "attack" was resumed later behind a spearhead of tanks, which added a spectacular finale to the morning's work.

"We should have more work under actual fire—it's what all of us need," said Candidate H. M. Murray of Minneapolis during the later open discussion with instructors.

"Give the students a little leeway in making their own decisions," was the suggestion of John A. Diffey, Jr., of Cotton Plant, Ark.

Instructors explained, however, that strictest control was needed for the sake of safety.

"It may not show in our GT's," volunteered another candidate, "but we actually learned a lot today."

The great majority of the class agreed that as a training aid the experience of working under the hazards of live ammunition had been decidedly profitable.

COLONEL SHARP

Colonel Sharp Takes Command Of 1st Regiment

Unit's Former Executive Officer Succeeds Col. Thomas R. Gibson

Colonel Robert Sharp, at one time executive officer of the First Student Training Regiment, recently rejoined his regiment as commanding officer. Colonel Sharp comes to the First Student Training Regiment from Student Training Brigade to fill the vacancy left by the transfer of Colonel Thomas R. Gibson.

Colonel Sharp, who graduated from the Presidio of San Francisco's Officer Candidate Training Camp in 1917, has always held a keen interest in all things pertaining to embryo 2nd lieutenants. With the knowledge and experience that he himself gained by running the gamut of officer training, Colonel Sharp has been able to look on the trials and tribulations of the present day officer student with deep understanding.

Colonel Sharp first came to the regiment in August of 1942, from Headquarters of the 7th Corps Area. Prior to this assignment, he had been, at one time, with the 29th Infantry. During his 3 years with that regiment he came to know every nook and crany of the Fort Benning reservation. His knowledge of all things "Benning" is a vast reserve of experi-

Soldier Is Drowned On Obstacle Course

Pvt. Grady P. Brendle, 22, of Company E, 54th Armored Infantry regiment, 10th Armored division, was drowned Monday while swimming across a narrow stretch of water as part of routine training on an obstacle course in the 10th Armored area, the Benning public relations office announced today.

Brendle was the son of Mrs. Lula Jean Brendle of Franklin, N. C. He was inducted into the army on Nov. 7, 1940, at Camp Croft, S. C.

Funeral services were held Wednesday from the Oaklawn funeral home after which the body was sent to Franklin. First Sgt. Harry A. Pascale of Company E, accompanied the body.

10th Armored Tigers on Last Lap Of Arduous Garrison Training

Division Concentrates On Combat Firing, Tactics, Physical Training

The 10th Armored Tigers are rapidly rounding into shape for maneuvers as they come down the stretch of the final phases of garrison training.

The division is concentrating now on three things—combat firing, tactics, and physical training—with each unit in the division getting training in all three. Every unit is spending two weeks in the field, one week being devoted to working out tactical problems day and night and the other week being spent in Tiger Camp.

SELECT FRATERNITY

Proudest men in the division are those who qualify as "Tigers," a select fraternity of men who are just a little bit better than their fellow soldiers. Though the division nickname is Tiger and every man in it is known as a Tiger, the fraternity is one of super-Tigers.

To qualify as a "Tiger," the individual must pass the following tests: march five miles in one hour; expert compass reading day and night; proficiency in scouting and patroling—small protective units; swim half a mile stripped; drive all platoon vehicles; be qualified in first echelon maintenance; qualify in carbine, submachine gun, and machine gun; unarmed; disarm a man with a knife or sword; identify and explain use of certain constellations; map reading and message writing at night; blackout driving.

The press of field training has eliminated the examinations for qualification the past month, but the next few weeks should see several hundred men join the ranks with those 70 men who have qualified already. The tests will be given not only to individuals, but to platoons and companies as well.

MEN OVER 35 OUT

General Newgarden has directed that all men past 35 years of age be removed from all reconnaissance units, which will be composed of "Tigers" insofar as possible. When 90 per cent of the individuals of a platoon qualify, the platoon will be entitled to carry a distinctive guidon on all its vehicles. The individuals will wear a special patch on the left sleeve of their blouses.

Above and beyond the qualification of individual "Tigers" is the Tiger Camp, where every man under 40 years of age—and many volunteers who are over 40—must spend a week of training in the field which tests every man's physical strength and stamina. But the rigid training there doesn't make one a "Tiger"—it's just routine training.

TOUGH GOING

A few of the strength requirements follow: do 33 pushups from the ground; carry a man of equal weight 70 yards in 20 seconds; run 300 yards cross-country in 50 seconds; hike four miles cross-country in 50 minutes; swim 70 yards carrying individual weapon while fully clothed.

In the camp the men get indoctrination in battle noises—crawling through a barbed wire no-man's land with live machine gun bullets whizzing overhead and dynamite exploding near them. On the Jap-in-the-grass course they wade through swamps and underbrush firing at surprise targets which flash up from the ground and behind trees.

SKULL PRACTICE

In addition to the physical training, there are "skull practices" and demonstrations involving such subjects as scouting and patroling, tank hunting and tank ambush, compass and map reading, and fieldcraft.

Every officer and enlisted man is graded while in camp. If he cannot stand the pace and is definitely not up to par, he may find himself assigned to a new job which requires less stamina.

The division is not neglecting tactical and firing training, either. Each week finds two battalions in the field working on problems outlined by G-3, and the ranges are busy with men taking up elementary combat firing.

The Tiger Division is rapidly rounding into shape for summer maneuvers, the prelude to active combat duty. When that final call comes, the Tigers will be ready and growling.

Two Veteran Sergeants Retire After 30 Years

Sgt. Harrison To Raise Food For Armed Forces

The First Parachute Training Regiment lost two of its oldest members, Wednesday, March 31, when Master Sergeant Ira G. Elliott, and 1st Sergeant Doctor T. Harrison, retired from the Armed Services after having served 30 years.

Master Sergeant Elliott's first enlistment was with the 27th Infantry, Co. G, in January, 1913. He was then transferred to the Service Company, 29th Infantry, and served with that company until January, 1942 at which time he was transferred to 502nd Parachute Infantry. On May 15, 1942 he was transferred to the 1st Parachute Training Regiment, which unit he helped activate. Sgt. Harrison served as first sergeant in Co. D, 1st Parachute Training Regiment until the time of his retirement.

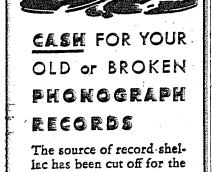
Sgt. Elliot moved to Missouri, his permanent home April 2, and Sgt. Harrison moved to Martin, Ga., to raise food for the Armed Forces on his farm.

Guam. He was transferred on May 15, 1942, to the 1st Parachute Training Regiment, which he helped activate, and served as regimental supply sergeant major, until he was retired on March 31, 1943.

SGT. HARRISON

First Sergeant Harrison enlisted June 17, 1912, in the 12th Cavalry Regiment, and served in that unit until September 20, 1920. During this tour of duty with the Armed Services he saw actual combat in chasing Pancho Villa on the Mexican Border. On October 1924, he was transferred to the Service Company, 29th Infantry, and served with that company until January, 1942 at which time he was transferred to 502nd Parachute Infantry. On May 15, 1942 he was transferred to the 1st Parachute Training Regiment, which unit he helped activate. Sgt. Harrison served as first sergeant in Co. D, 1st Parachute Training Regiment until the time of his retirement.

Sgt. Elliot moved to Missouri, his permanent home April 2, and Sgt. Harrison moved to Martin, Ga., to raise food for the Armed Forces on his farm.



Two Six-Star Families Represented At Benning

Richard Bode, who represents Kenosha, Wisconsin's, six star service flag family at Fort Benning, is studying and working side by side with another young man who is one of six from his immediate family serving in the armed forces.

Bode, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Bode, 6616 Third avenue, has been assigned to the 12th Company of the Third Student Training regiment. With him is Anthony Calliguirie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Calliguirie, 2226 Sixth avenue, East, Hibbing, Minn.

Upon successful completion of their course here, the two candidates will be graduated and commissioned as second lieutenants of Infantry on May 8.

Hartford, Conn.—Mrs. Robert F. Stoezner became a grandmother and a great-grand-mother all in one day when her daughter and her granddaughter-in-law bore baby girls.

Smith, Smith, Smith, Smith, Smith and Smith completes the roll call of Smiths in the 19th Company of the Second Student Training Regiment, as many an assistant instructor has discovered to his dismay. On some of the weapons committees, an instructor would read a candidates nameplate and order "Smith, go draw more ammunition" only to find the whole damn gun crew answering "yes sir" and fleeing away to return with the deliberation typical of Smiths generally. The difficulty of identification is increased by similarity in the initials of the sextet: E. B., J. T., G. P., E., G. F., and T. R.

Engineer Corps On Campaign For Volunteers

Asks Construction Workers Subject To Draft To Apply

With governmental construction "catching up on itself," the Corps of Engineers of the U. S. Army now is conducting a campaign of valuntary induction of men who have been engaged in such work, it was announced by Captain James A. Baird, area engineer at Fort Benning.

The announcement came following receipt of orders from Col. Doswell Gullatt, district engineer, U. S. Engineer Office, Mobile, as plans for assisting qualified men in going through local induction boards were outlined.

"This plan gives an excellent opportunity to men who have been engaged in various types of construction work but who now will be subject to draft, to get into the Corps of Engineers where they can perform the services for which they are best qualified," Captain Baird said.

INTERVIEW

"Men interested are asked to apply to the Area Engineer's office at Fort Benning. They will be interviewed by the Engineer personally. Men may also apply at the Engineers Office in mobile or any Area Engineer office.

"The Area Engineer will then prepare a form letter addressed to the Commanding Officer at the Armed Forces Induction Station, requesting the applicant's induction into the Corps of Engineers, and forms also will be sent to the Chief of Engineers. The applicant will then be transported to the nearest Local Draft board, in departmental vehicles if necessary. If the applicant's own Draft Board is in the immediate vicinity he will be taken there; if not, to the nearest Board and the original Draft Board will be given full credit for the applicant.

"The applicant himself will be supplied with three copies of the form letter and will be instructed as to the proper completion and mailing of the letters. In this way, we will follow the man through his induction and basic training in order that he may be sent to the Corps of Engineers where he is vitally needed."

MIRACLES WORKED

Colonel Gullatt in a letter to Captain Baird explained that during the past year and a half, the engineering and construction industry has created a miracle in completing the immense amount of work that has been necessary for the housing, training and supplying of our enlarging army. In the Mobile Engineer District, more than $350,000,000 worth of construction work has been completed. An immense army of trained construction personnel has been used. Now, however, much of the personnel is being released, since the construction program is being rapidly finished. Thus these men are being made available for induction and with the critical need for qualified specialists for troop duty in the Corps of Engineers constantly growing, it is hoped that the new plan will insure securing of these men for training where they can be of the greatest benefit to the war effort.

All individuals between ages of 18 and 37 who are eligible for induction by their draft boards, but who have not been notified of their scheduled induction, are eligible to apply for this voluntary induction, Colonel Gullatt said.

El Paso, Tex.—Two plump sheep were grazing near a railroad line when along came a hungry section gang. Mutton was the main course of the winner according to the district attorney who said the laborers converted the sheep to meat.

Galveston, Tex.—Apparently in order to beat horse food rationing a horse went swimming in the bay and paddled from one reef to another feeding on salt water grass. He was coaxed aboard a barge and later claimed by his owner.

Company of the Third Student Training Regiment.

Before coming into the Army a second time, Hogan, moreover, was serving his nation in a volunteer civilian capacity, as appeal agent for his home town Selective Service Board, to which position he was appointed by Governor George Wilson. He returned to the Army Sept. 30 last and took his basic training at Camp Wolters, Tex.

Hogan's first term of service in the armed forces began in April, 1918, when he enlisted at Fort Dodge. First he trained at Fort Stevens, Ore., with the 69th Field Artillery, going across in July of that year Then followed six months' additional near Bordeaux, France.

Admitted to the bar in 1932, Hogan practices in Fort Dodge, where he makes his home with his wife and four children. He is a past commander of the Fort Dodge American Legion post and a member of its executive committee.

'Army Day' Quiet At Post

Training As Usual; Broadcast Made

Tuesday was Army Day, but this year Fort Benning and all army posts throughout the country observed it by working as usual on an intensive training program.

Last year there were parades, an open house, and stores in downtown Columbus were closed, but not this year. Gasoline, the War Department has announced, is too valuable to use for parades, and time schedules in the training program must not be interrupted.

Only deviation from the normal day was that a radio program commemorating the day was broadcast from the post over Station WRBL in Columbus. Mobile unit pickups were made from a tank and from a rifle range.

The hour long program originated from the studio in Service Club No. 1. The 29th Infantry band under the direction of Warrant Officer Albert Andrews played the musical portion of the program.

Speakers on the program included Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post; Brig. Gen. George P. Nowell, commandant of the Parachute School; Brig. Gen. Morris Ross, commanding officer of Combat Command B of the 10th Armored Division, Col. Robert S. Miller, director of training for the Infantry School; Col. Henry East, assistant director of training for the school; Lt. John C. Gallaty, an instructor at one of the rifle ranges at the post, and Sergeant Tommy Kerr, a parachutist. An officer candidate will also be interviewed.

When leaving your observation position always go by a route different from which you came. The enemy may have discovered your tracks and be waiting for your return.

Bostonian Has Sailed Seven Seas

Candidate Clifford G. McKeon of the Sixth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, probably will feel at home and be among friends wherever the Army should send him after completing his studies here. A Bostonian, McKeon has been going to sea almost since he was old enough to keep his balance on the tossing decks of a tanker or liner.

Alaska, Australia, Morocco, Egypt, Burma—all are familiar territories to McKeon who studied seamanship and navigation at the Massachusetts Nautical School. Upon successful completion of his course here he will be graduated and commissioned a second lieutenant May 29.

Service League Sponsors War Bond Competition

Cartoons And Short Stories Requested Of Benning Personnel

Officers and enlisted personnel, both men and women, stationed at Fort Benning are invited to submit entries in the short story and cartoon contest sponsored for the armed forces by the Armed Service League of Philadelphia, Pa.

All entries must be in the hands of the judges by September 1, 1943, and no manuscripts will be returned. Authors relinquish world book rights. Manufacturers should be mailed to the Armed Forces Service League, 2030 Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Building, 123 South Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Prizes for winning cartoons and stories will be $100 War Bonds. The work will be published in a volume to be sold for the benefit of the Relief Activities of the Armed Forces Service League.

Short stories will be judged by Clifton Fadiman, famed critic and interrigator of "Information Please;" Maj. Hartzell Spence, editor of "Yank" magazine, and Lt. Max C. Miller, U. S. N. R., author of "I Cover the Waterfront." Cartoons will be judged by Jerry Doyle of the Philadelphia "Record" staff assisted by Capt. W. Victor Gunnis, U. S. M. C.

Judges' Decision Final

All decisions of the judges will be final, but to avoid any discrimination between officers and enlisted personnel manuscripts will be numbered upon arrival at the league headquarters and will be known only by that number until the winners were announced.

Stories may be from three to ten thousand words in length and may be on any subject but must contain no military or naval information. Cartoons may be done in pen and ink or simply pencil, and manuscripts may be typewritten or legibly written. Each entry must have the home address and the serial identification number as well as the signature of the author.

Profits from the sale of the prize story book will be used to establish scholarship funds for men and women in the services who joined up before finishing college, to establish an employment bureau for the war's physically handicapped and for artists and writers who have and will come back jobless and other rehabilitation activities of the Armed Forces Service League.

Travel-Weary Army Guide Settles Down to Study

Candidate Kenneth T. Healy, after months of touring the country wide, at government expense, has finally settled down to some really serious work in the Twelfth Company, Third Student Training Regiment at The Infantry School.

Before "seeking the bars" he was assigned to the Reception Center at Fort Lewis, Washington with duties of accompanying recruits to first assigned posts covering "roughly about 39 states."

Candidate Healy, who lives in Portland, Ore., before being inducted into the army was employed by the Union Pacific railroad which, no doubt, accounts for his previously assigned duties in the service.

UNIFORMED ROOKIES

Candidate Healy has many interesting incidents to relate about these "uniformed rookies" ranging from their farewell kisses upon leaving home to their reactions upon arriving at their new posts. He has gotten the biggest kick out of the pets that some of the boys carry, one boy had a crow which was lost en route somewhere at Cheyenne, Wyo.

There were always the same questions, "Where are we going? What's it like there? and Is Army life tough?" "But I guess, what tops them all is the inevitable talk of their 'one and only' which usually materializes into a mass comparison and exchange of photographs."

Candidate Healy is one example of an enlisted man whose civilian experience was used to the service. If he successfully passes the rugged three months course here in the Infantry School he will be commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army of the United States on May 8, 1943.

The yardstick of the present is our only real gauge of the future. Our present measure casts the shadow of our future stature.

Men cannot have equal rights unless they accept equal responsibilities.

There is only one sound national economy. That's national unselfishness.

The sky will naturally look dark to people who are holding black umbrellas.

Tank Busters Promote 16

An Army Wife Shops In Columbus

by Phyllis

Red Cross work, spring house cleaning, club meetings, juggling ration coupons, and a thousand other things contrive to steal away the time you'd like for your favorite habit; shopping, window or otherwise. Be not deterred, you'll find the spring offerings of the shops selected for quality, fashion smartness, and practicality so much so you'll be able to skim through your shopping, really enjoy it, and still have time for those "thousand other things".

Especially for you who cherish individuality is the millinery displayed by Mrs. Slattery of the KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. HAT SHOP. All the Bretons, padres, kettle-edge bonnets, off-the-face cartwheels are smartly trimmed with unique and unusual touches.

White is no new story for spring but this year you'll want to add that immaculate, cool, collected look to your costumes by wearing white pique hats in small sailor and bumper pompadour styles. These hats are neither plain nor fussy but have just enough veiling or perhaps kelly green bows placed "just so" to suit your fancy. Panama hats have always been extremely popular. Ecuadorian panamas of Tulcan and Tanbo weaves are available in an unlimited number of blocks. To enable you to get even more than normal use from this type of hat, Mrs. Slattery has adjustable hat bands of various shades to harmonize with your different outfits. Kelly green, red, aqua, natural, black and blue are just a few of the lovely shades featured in this shop's latest style milan straw hats. These, for the most part, are trimmed with bows, ruffles or bands of fine French belting. When you have acquired one or more of these exquisitely lovely creations you'll be certain to keep them clean and fresh if you use the excellent Rafield cleaner sold exclusively by this store in Columbus.

Latest word from the fashion-wise editors of Vogue tells us this patent leather shoes are high on the priority list of "musts" to add to our spring and summer wardrobes. Spring prints and dark summer sheers beg for that effervescent touch which a well-turned slipper of patent leather radiates. A wide assortment of delicate, dainty but none-the-less practical patent leather sandals are featured at MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY. This enticing array of patent leather prizewinners includes high and low heel pumps as well as sandals. For those of you who prefer just a touch of patent leather for your new footwear, there is a fine assortment of blue or black gabardine with patent trim in both high and low heels. These also are very smart for Easter and summer wear. In choosing our new shoes, we should carefully consider the demands of fashion as well as the demands on our present Shoe Ration Coupon No. 17. We all know by now that this coupon entitles us each to one pair of new shoes before summer. And, with Easter in the offing, there is no more appropriate time to plan to use the coupon more advantageously. This store's reputation for first showing of the latest styles similarly guarantees to—quality footwear and correct fit.

All our relatives and friends in the Armed Forces are always so grateful for any small remembrances we send them! We'd like to send something every day. This not possible. 'twold seem tht this fast approaching Easter is an appropriate time for a surprise gift. KIRVEN'S had the same idea in mind when purchasing a gala assortment of suitable luxury presents for men and women in the Services. We all well know that one of the most important things in a soldier's life is mail. Every Doughboy, be he officer or enlisted man, looks forward to "mail call" with as much anxiety as he awaits "mess call." To make letter writing a pleasure for him, I suggest you look at this store's new Victory Rite Kits, which are filled with paper, envelopes, postcards, and space for an address file and unanswered mail. Another extremely useful and practical gift is a rubberized duffle bag filled with necessities, including the all-important shaving cream and "housewife," or sewing kit. This is available in navy or khaki colored material. For cross-country transfers or long-awaited furloughs or leaves, the ideal luggage displayed by this store is a handy field bag. In addition to these practical Bundles For Buddies, there is a fine display of authorities shirts, ties, and socks for the Service man or woman.

What truly feminine woman can resist a sparkling bit of jewelry? I'm sure you'll all be tempted by the intriguing collection featured by KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. Their earrings of sterling silver, shaped like authentic four leaf clovers, will make you lucky in more ways than one. Ideal earrings for wear with summer frocks are this shop's button styles made of blue, green, pink, yellow, and white lightweight plastic. The plastic creations are rapidly gaining in popularity, both for formal and informal wear. With a price range well within the limits of all practical shop-wise Army wives, these plastic accessories may lend just that charming touch to your new ensemble which you want. If you are looking for a handsome brooch which will last a lifetime, you will be pleased with the large assortment of heavy sterling silver pins. An ideal one to pep up a dull frock or highlight your latest addition to your fashionable wardrobe would be a Belmar Creation. One especially lovely pin in this array combines synthetic rubies, handset in gold with a tiny sprig of rhinestones. This pin would lend the exquisite touch you want to add to your new spring suit or print dress. Whether you like plastic beads, sparkling earrings, lapel watches, or pins set with semi-precious stones, you'll have a grand time making your selections from this shop's complete display.

A MESSAGE TO THE PRESENT OFFICERS AND THE FUTURE OFFICERS OF FORT BENNING
Your Career and Your Uniform
Whether you are being commissioned or are an older officer in the service . . . it is wise to weigh the advantages of wearing uniforms custom-tailored to your figure. A smartly turned-out military appearance can help a man get ahead . . . certainly it never stands in his way.
Smith-Gray custom-tailoring gives a seasoned air of authority to individual personality—wins the admiration and respect that well tailored clothes always command—and reflects an officer's own sense of pride in the service to which he is attached.
Remember, too, as your custom tailor we retain a detailed record of your physical measurements. Wherever your orders may assign you—here or abroad—we can on short notice tailor and ship you one or a complete set of uniforms. And it will fit you as perfectly as if you had stepped into our workrooms for a try-on!

"Weep, General (Patton), it shows you have a heart. And the American people understand, because they, too, have hearts. The war is being fought so that men may continue to have hearts."
—Atlanta Constitution on death of Capt. Richard Jenson.

Aux Soldats Francais Qui Sont Venus Chez Nous

Soldats de la France, The Bayonet est tres content que vous soyez chez nous. Vous etes venus ici pour vous preparer pour la grande lutte qui donnera encore a votre pays bien-aime la dignite et la virilite d'une nation libre.

Aujourd'hui la France, l'amie traditionnelle des Etats-Unis, se trouve la victime d'une oppression monstrueuse de l'ennemi de tous les hommes libres. C'est a dire la France physique parce que la France spirituelle, la France de Rousseau, de Voltaire, de Montesquieu, la France de la Revolution ne peut etre esclave, ne peut mourir.

En arrivant en France il y a vingt cinq ans, le General Pershing dit "LaFayette, nous sommes ici!" Nous les Americains n'oublierons jamais ce que nous devons a votre patrie magnifique. Nous esperons que le jour n'est pas loin quand la France sera encore libre et que le Pershing moderne des armees americaines visitera le tombeau du soldat francais inconnu pour repeter ses mots immortels du General Pershing.

Nous savons que vous serez nos compagnons jusque l'on gagne la grande victoire inevitable. Nous ensemble ecraserons la tyrannie. Aux armes, citoyens, formez vos bataillons! Vive la France eternelle!

Soldiers of France, The BAYONET is very happy that you are with us. You have come here to prepare for the great battle which will restore to your beloved country the dignity and virility of a free nation.

Today, France, the traditional friend of the United States, is the victim of a monstruous oppression on the part of the enemy of all free men. That is, physical France because spiritual France, the France of Rousseau, of Voltaire, of Montesquieu, the France of the Revolution can not be enslaved, cannot die.

On arriving in France 25 years ago, General Pershing said "LaFayette, we are here!" We Americans shall never forget what we owe to your magnificent country. We hope that the day is not distant when France will again be free and that the modern Pershing of American armies will visit the tomb of the unknown French soldier to repeat General Pershing's immortal words.

We know that you will be our comrades until the great inevitable victory is won. Together we shall crush tyranny. To arms, citizens, form your batallions! Long live Eternal France!

Special Service Officer, Staff Rate Orchids

While on a recent tour of army camps with a USO Camp show, Joan Blondell, cinema actress, noticed that all the select seats up front were occupied by officers and their wives. She stomached it as long as she could but finally addressed herself to her audience as follows:

"The other performers and I have come here to entertain the enlisted men. We would all be happier to see the enlisted men as far back as the eyes can reach, with officers in the last rows!"

We are happy to learn that at Benning, taken as a whole, no such situation is permitted to exist. In most theaters on this post a section is reserved for officers and their wives, and they are not always the best in the house. For example a small section of aisle seats in the Main Theater are set aside for officers. Once these seats are filled, the overflow is left to shift for itself and find seats wherever they can be found.

This handling of audiences to the complete satisfaction of both actors and audience speaks well for the efficiency of Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer of the post, and his staff of officers and enlisted men.

Their job is a difficult one. An experienced theater man must be and is assigned to the show during its entire stay on the reservation. Personnel is assigned to handle the troup's mail and to fill the wants of the performers and stage crews. Guides are assigned to direct buses and vans from theater to theater.

Furthermore, billeting must be arranged weeks in advance to accommodate the troup. Columbus is overcrowded and when quarters are not available in town, civilian barracks must be made available on the post. Dressing rooms must be kept clean and properly lighted and experienced helpers must be on hand before, during, and after the presentation.

USO performances have gone on here without a hitch, which is a far cry from complaints recently registered by some performers in "Equity." Actors have arrived at various camps to find no hotel reservations or otherwise no dressing room facilities, and complete lack of stage help. In one instance there was no guide assigned and the troup drove out of camp 70 miles out of the way before getting their bearings.

A vote of thanks is due to the special service officer and every theater officer on the reservation who see to it that things are kept running smoothly.

Some say we must burn with hate to win this war. Others, closer to the firing line, know that cool-headedness is the real strength of America's fighting men.

Honesty, Conscience, Integrity Keys To Victory

Many Americans have gotten a closer view of the real source of China's strength from Madame Chiang Kai-shek. In Madison Square Garden she said, "Recrimination and hatred will lead us nowhere. We should use our energies to better purpose." To what better purpose does she use her own energies?

Her entire energy seems to go toward making China worthy of victory and a pattern of national life. "During the military campaigns," she said, "I came to realize that mere force of war was not sufficient for the transformation of the country; a more subtle reform was necessary to change the Chinese character. I realize that China requires two strong national characters; first, the citizen's morality and spirit; and second, the citizen's knowledge and technical training. The citizens with higher morality and better spirit will contribute more to the progress of society."

The Generalissimo and the Madame founded the New Life Movement in 1934. The four pillars of new national life are these: Courtesy, Honesty, Integrity and the Voice of Conscience. On the ninth anniversary of this founding last month, it was pointed out editorially in four of Chungking's papers that "this movement, has had the effect of a spiritual revolution which has, more than anything else, accounted for China's ability to hold an invader of superior military might for nearly six years."

We Americans need to ask ourselves whether we are tapping this big source of strength. The morale that stands up against sustained hardship is nine-tenths sound morale. This is the moral fibre which can cure absenteeism, selfishness and buckpassing wherever it is on the home-front. No shortcut, however popular, can give to us the security and enduring peace we are fighting for.

Benning Man Requests Blood Bank In Vicinity

For several weeks, newspapers throughout the United States have been printing pleas to the people to give their blood "that the life of a fighting man may be saved." In towns all over the country, the American Red Cross has set up stations to receive blood donations.

In a recent issue of an Atlanta newspaper, an article appeared siting the fact that "the Army and Navy asked the Blood Donor Center of the Atlanta chapter of the American Red Cross to step up its shipment of blood to 1,500 pints a week . . . just exactly six times what had formerly been supplied."

Evidently seeing these pleas and wishing to do their part, personnel of Fort Benning have been calling the Post chapter of the Red Cross asking where they should go to make their contribution. The answer they received was . . . "the nearest collection station is in Atlanta."

Both Fort Benning and Columbus have gone "all out" in their effort to aid the Red Cross. In fact, the monetary donations made at the Post were not surpassed by any post in the country. The same men and women who contributed money would certainly be just as generous with their own blood . . . if they were given the opportunity.

Wouldn't it be possible for the Red Cross to set up a blood bank in Columbus or on the Post? If, for some reason, this is not practicable, couldn't one of the mobile units from Atlanta visit this area at specified times?

Can't some arrangements be made whereby the thousands of men at Fort Benning can make their contributions . . . which may save the lives of friends who have "gone ahead" . . . which may even mean life or death to the men themselves some time in the future?

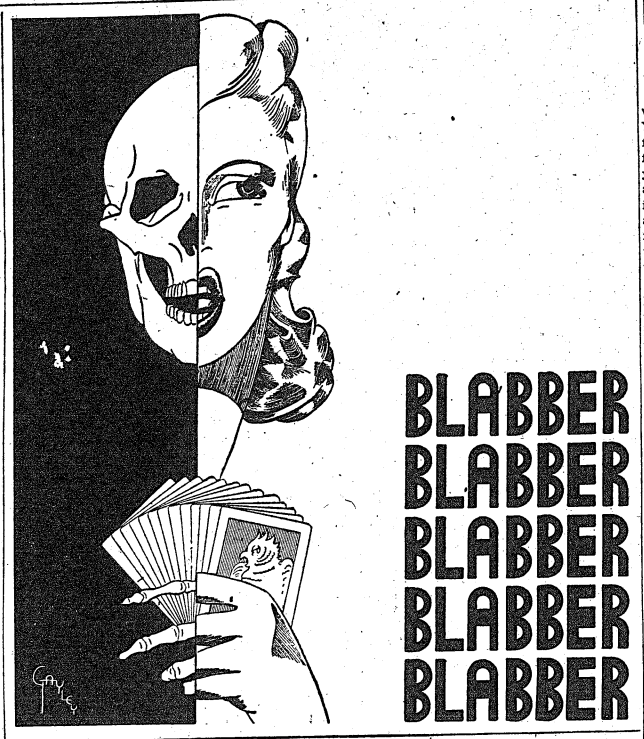
Buy more bonds and save for taxes,
Then you'll blunt the "ax" in Axis.

What does every man most want?

Isn't it to have real confidence in the other fellow and to know the other can have confidence in him?



In the old days we had a sense of right and wrong. White was white and black was black. We didn't always keep the Ten Commandments but knew when we didn't. Today we seem to have forgotten about black and white and the Ten Commandments. This, of course, is just a yellow streak. Men morally color blind are no help to the red, white and blue.

"The saints," said Robert Louis Stevenson, "are sinners who keep on trying." And the sinners, we may add, are those who think they are already saints.

It isn't a wall that shuts us off from the new world we're wanting. It's a will or a won't.

Post-war planners seem to go on the theory that you can make want unconstitutional, fear illegal and legislate against indifference and apathy.

Buy more bonds and save for taxes,
Then you'll blunt the "ax" in Axis.

USO Presents—

A SPORTORIUM, ADDRESS BY NELSON SHIPP, AND RECEPTION CHORUS QUARTET

By PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

Fort Benning's soldiery will not only find recreation but will also have more opportunity to advance their athletic prowess when the "sportorium" at the Ninth Street USO opens . . . The auditorium is being revamped . . . In it will be installed boxing rings, wrestling mats, volley ball and free throw basketball courts, badminton and tennis courts and six ping pong tables . . . To begin with the "sportorium" will offer supervised open play, but later it is planned to have tournaments and organized tournaments . . . Equipment will be provided at the service counter . . . It will be open Wednesday and Saturday afternoons and nights and Sunday afternoons.

The USO film "Johnny Doe Goes USO" has been sent to Atlanta, Ga., to be reprinted and will probably be shipped back in two weeks equipped with a sound track . . . It is explained that the picture as it has been shown was simply a "rush run" with no finished or quality photographic work . . . The revamped picture will be shown in the near future to Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general at Fort Benning, who appears in the movie.

Nelson Shipp, associate editor of the Columbus Enquirer, will speak Sunday on the USO Town Hall Forum at the Ninth Street center . . . Topic of the day is "Thomas Jefferson— Man of Yesterday and Today" . . . The program to be presented in Club-room No. 3 will be part of a nationwide Jefferson memorial celebration and will begin at 3 p. m. (EWT).

The First Student Training Regiment will provide the program Sunday on the Army Hour broadcast from the Army-Navy YMCA-USO . . . The quartette will sing, and the new commanding officer, Col. Robert Sharp, will be introduced . . . E. K. Ackerman of the YMCA-USO announces that the response to the Wednesday night "rough and tumble" moving pictures has been pleasing and that the action features will continue.

The Reception Center Chorus will sing Saturday at 8:30 p. m. (EWT) at the Salvation Army USO in Columbus . . . In addition to "songs of the soul" the boys will render several selections from light opera and "Rigoletto" . . . Special numbers will be provided by the quartette.

The photography class at the Ninth Street USO will be resumed tonight at 8 p. m. (EWT) and will continue every Thursday night . . . The class will be of interest not only to beginners in the picture field but also to advanced camera fans . . . The classwork will delve into development and printing of photographic film, and classroom discussions will be supplemented by darkroom demonstrations.

Gummed States of America

MOVIE POLL REVEALS THAT GI'S ENJOY MANDIBULAR CALISTHENICS

Several years ago Julio Camba, one of Spain's outstanding humorists, made a journey to the United States and upon his return to his country wrote an article entitled the "Gummed States of America." The article was later republished in a little book called "The Traveller Frog."

Camba facetitiously implied that the United States are held together by chewing gum. The mastication of chicle, according to the journalist, is the national pastime of our great country. Unlike our late President Coolidge, average Americans "chews" to run.

That Camba knew whereof he spoke is evinced by the fact that on any Sunday afternoon at the local movies, before the lights go out for the first show, one curious enough to bother, may count the number of jaws of Fort Benning soldiers and their wives, bobbing up and down with the rhythm of a Coca-Cola capping machine. We counted three center rows last Sunday to find that only two or three on every row were not participating in mandibular calisthenics. Where they got the gum, we couldn't find out because chicle is becoming as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth.

Camba declares that poorer American families whose budgets could not stand the strain of regular purchases of chewing gum solved the problem in the following manner. The head of the house somehow procured an old inner tube (ah, those blessed days before rubber rationing), washed it off, and then placed it in the center of the family board. At mealtime the members of the family seated themselves around the table and upon signal from the head of the house proceeded to chew on that section of the inner tube assigned to him. (Incidently, we understand the OPA is getting ready to ration the number of bridge games. Rubber shortage, you know.)

Personally we favor every American soldier being supplied with all brands of gum just before going into battle. Spearmint can be used in the event that one breaks one's bayonet in the guts of a Jap; doublemint can be thrown into the enemy's belly with the effectiveness of a solar plexis punch; dentine can be used to dent the enemy's lines; and peppermint can be thrown into their eyes to blind them. Beach-heads can be established with beechnut. And how they could bust out enemy brains with good old Blackjack gum!

THE SCIENCE OF SLOBBERING
Chaplain F. M. Thompson

A Russian physiologist found in his investigation with hungry dogs that the sight of food made their mouths water. As a result of his study he wrote a pretentious volume on the avlue of external stimuli. A critic dubbed his work the science of slobbering.

The learned doctor could have found a more fertile field, certainly a more interesting one, had he experimented on the human family. For here it has become, in part, a science. The child early realizes that it can blubber its way to almost anything it wants. A few tears, a few sobs, and the little rascal wins out. Some time ago a boy came up to me crying, a handful of old papers clutched in his hand. He wanted me to buy one, saying he was a newsboy; that his papers for the day had been stolen and that he had to have 50 cents or he would get a beating when he returned home. A checkup proved that his story was not true. It was simply a racket.

That is the method used by all charity racketeers. They try to awaken your sympathy by tears and tales of woe. You have been approached by the young man working his way through college, although he looked as if he needed a bath instead of an education; by the man who had a job but must have a suit of clothes before he could report; by the one whose mother was dead in a distant city and all he wanted was a ticket so he could get home in time for the funeral. The appeals are myriad. Not all of course are fakes; only about 99 per cent.

We are a wonderfully kind hearted people, easily moved. We do not want anyone to suffer. But indiscriminate charity is as reprehensible as the absence of charity. It robs the one who receives of his self respect; makes possible a large army of undesirables who prey upon the public. And since we do not have the time to investigate, our giving should be done through institutions like the Community Chest and the American Red Cross.

"He that's liberal
To all alike, may do a good by chance,
But never out of judgment."

If you are a prisoner of war, never discuss anything about your organization's activities. An agent may be planted in the group or microphones may be hidden to pick up such information.

In the event of your capture by the enemy, remain silent to all questions, excepting those regarding your name, rank and serial number.

An alien can be promoted up to the grade of master sergeant if qualified. After receiving final citizenship papers he is eligible for OCS.

Kay Says---

IT DOESN'T TAKE LONG FOR THE GIRLS TO ADAPT THEMSELVES TO ARMY LIFE

You're in the army now. You're wives from Minnesota, from New York, from California. You're from the plains, the mountains, from near the sea. For many of you this is your first taste of army life, and for many of you it's the first time you've been away from your home and your friends. You're the country girl, the small-town wife, the sophisticated gal from the big city.

You came here to be with your husbands, who are the selectees, the reserve officers, the enlisted men, the national guard. They're busy taking basic courses, going to officers candidate school, or being plain Private Jones. It's all new and strange, this army life, and at first a little terrifying.

You settle down to make a home in anything you're fortunate enough to find, from one-room and share-the-bath apartments, with kitchen privileges if you're lucky, to those more pretentious affairs which take all your rent allotment and more. You hole in and try to get adjusted to your new, utterly strange life.

BEWILDERED

At first you're bewildered. You don't like the country, you don't like the people, you don't like the food, you don't like anything even if it has its brighter side. You spend hours writing letters home, yearning for your old friends, the furniture you left behind, the corner grocery where you'd traded for years. Your trips to the commissary are a weekly adventure; you're bewildered at the line-up in the Exchange grocery.

You're a little afraid of the regular army women. You've heard tales of the social life of the army in peace time; you shudder at the thought of rumored formal calls to be paid. You stand in awe of a general's wife, and you wonder if your one and only evening dress can possibly pass muster at a rare event at the Officer's Club.

AS TIME GOES BY

Gradually a change takes place. You're an old timer at the commissary; the PX grocery is a place to meet acquaintances. Generals' wives are gracious persons, and the army no longer goes in for formal calls. You stop writing so many letters because your old friends just don't understand about that line-up in front of the movie, the meat counter, the soda fountain. You begin to brag about mighty Fort Benning, and you sneer at those newcomers who are still comparing the south with their home towns. You remark on the beauties of a Georgia winter, and smile at those persons who are horrified at the multitude of insect life abounding in a semi-tropical climate.

You no longer complain because the man of the house is seldom home; you're doubly grateful when he has a few hours of precious leisure. Those endless hours of time-on-my-hands are filled to the brim with trips for food, afternoons at the Red Cross work room, time spent tracking down an elusive safety pin or an extra cord for the iron, or a session with your ration books and the newest point system.

Lady, you may not realize it, but you've gone army.

IN THE OLD DAYS THE NON-COM HAD TO ANTICIPATE CO'S WANTS

By S-SGT. TOM McDONALD

In the Spring the scintillating routine of living is not always filled with blessedness. Sometimes dark clouds hover over the horizon and the cold icy hand of winter returns to its February haunts, as if to cast one last lingering spell over the places it had so strongly bound and then released.

Cold and shadowy it stalks the hallways, and the offices, and the swivel chairs, until only a familiar voice palpates it back to reality.

It is Col. T. P. Swampwater's voice, and "Sergeant!" he says, "Back in the old Army a noncom had to be able to anticipate his commanding officer's needs way before they were bound to occur. He had to think ahead and prepare for all eventualities. You have not been doing this, Sergeant, and I must say I am extremely disappointed in you."

"How is that, Sir?" I ventured, eager to show the old boy that the heart was willing though the mind be weak.

"Well, to be perfectly frank," my leader replied, "when this sudden spell came up, you should have known what some of its dire results would be. This morning when I came to work and had to sit down in my cold chair, you can well imagine how I felt. Cold chills ran up and down my spine, vitalizing the goose pimples it raised from my head to my toes."

"What a shame, Sir," I said. "It shouldn't have happened to a dog."

"Your're mighty right, Sergeant! And by the immortal 'Shades of Salome!' I don't aim to have it occur again."

"From now on when the abominable hand of ol' man weather casts a cold spell on the premises of our beloved Fort Benning, you, Sergeant, will come to work one-half hour earlier in the morning and sit in my chair during this extra period so that it will be nice and warm for me when I arrive."

"Yes, Sir," I said," but—

"But what, Sergeant?" snapped the ol' boy.

"Well 'er I have no intention of swerving from my duty, Sir, and I'm practically immune to goose pimples, but if I may suggest, Sir, considering the broad aspects of Major Foxhowl's personality, he is much better qualified for the job than I am, Sir."

"Egad!" mused the Colonel. "What you say is quite true, Sergeant, quite true, but since I do not crave an extreme humid temperature, I firmly believe that you are quite capable of meeting the requirements."

"Yes, Sir," I said, "trembling with the thought of contacting the cold seat of the Colonel's chair so early in the morning."

Editors,
THE BAYONET,
Fort Benning, Ga.
Gentlemen:

It has been my good fortune to come into possession of a recent issue of The Bayonet. As a veteran of World War No. 1, an Infantry soldier in the bargain, let me tell you how much I enjoyed the issue, the big kick I derived from the paper. It is wonderfully well edited and prepared, the features are choice. I may be pardoned for making these observations but you will understand best when I tell you I have long been engaged in newspaper work and appreciate a thing when it is well and neatly done. Yes, the issue was swell, made me a bit nostalgic, sort of back to my own days with the Infantry at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. So, long live the Bayonet! Long live Fort Benning and the fine officers' school there!

Believe me to be
Sincerely,
WILLIAM ROBERT FUOSS.

(Ed's Note: Thanks for the orchids, soldier. Modestly we take a bow.

Dear Sir:

What's happened to "Benning's Unknown Soldier" whose contributions are superb and we consider him as Poet Laureate of Fort Benning?

More power to him and may we see some or rather more of his works.

Victoriously yours,
The Classical Gang (300)
29th Infantry.

Only enlisted men of the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or the Coast Guard, including any and all retired and reserve components of such services, are entitled to receive a monthly family allowance for any period during which such enlisted man is in active military service of the U. S. on or after June 1, 1942, during the existence of any war declared by Congress and the six months immediately following the termination of any such war. Grades above these are not covered by the act.

A Third Class Petty Officer ordinarily must be 20 years old; Second Class, 23; First Class 26; and Chief, 30.

The U. S. follows the rule laid out in the Hague Convention of 1929 which set up international rules of war and was signed by all the major nations now fighting, to pay captured officers $25 per month.

Ex-Pedagogue Praises TIS

Cites Incomparable Efficiency, Equipment

For efficiency and the facilities at its command, no other educational institution can compare with The Infantry School here, according to Officer Candidate John F. Philp, who taught at Manhattan College in New York before entering the Army.

Philp, now undergoing the stiff course of the 17th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, says The Infantry School is "an educator's dream." He left his teaching post last October to become a Volunteer Officer Candidate, "prepping" at Camp Croft, S. C.

Philp's home is in Yonkers, N. Y., where, during the summers, he worked as a playground supervisor for the city park system. Only 25, his academic background is broad. He majored in education, winning an M.A. degree from Manhattan and an M.S. from Fordham University. At Manhattan, where he has taught French for the past two years, some of the students were older than he.

Finance Office Takes Over Old P. O. Building

The old post office building has been taken over by the Finance department and will now be known as the Finance Office Annex, according to Col. John H. McFall, post finance officer.

Housed in the annex will be the commercial accounts section, accounting section, fiscal section, and agent officer section. All other units will remain in their present location.

A passageway is being constructed between the two buildings, and all work should be completed by May 1. Several rearrangements will be made in the present finance office in order to allot greater lobby space to the two bank branches located in the same building.

Lieut. Colonel Leads The Boys 'Over The Hill'

About 75 of Fort Benning's young men "went over the hill" last Sunday and they were led by a lieutenant colonel!

The occasion was the boat hike from Engineers' Landing led by Lt. Col. Virgil E. Ney, of the Infantry School, who supervises the activities of boys at the post, and the "hill" was the Indian mound at Coweta on the Alabama side.

The "hike" was no creampuff affair. The colonel had his charges disembark upstream and across a creek from the mound. To reach their objective the youngsters, sons of officers and enlisted men at Benning, had to traverse a "jungle commando course" and cross the creek by a field expedient which was a tree felled across the water.

At the mound Col. Ney lectured the group, made up of Boy Scouts of Fort Benning Troop No. 11, Cub Scout Pack No. 1 and Rangers, made up of boys between the ages of six and nine, on the historical aspect of the location.

He organized searching parties to find Indian arrowheads and spearheads of flint. Prize spearhead, found by Bobby Rooks, son of Col. and Mrs. John M. Rooks, 309 Lumpkin Road, was a perfect specimen and measured approximately six inches in length.

The boys had "chow" in the field and athletic contests after the search was over. Lt. D. F. Farrell, Lt. W. A. Ruff and Major C. G. Stillinger accompanied the party.

Thrice Father, Enlists Again

41 Year-Old Joins Army For Second War

One war apparently has not been enough for R. D. Fisher of Carthage, Tenn., 41-year-old father of three children, who is an officer candidate in the 11th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment here.

Fisher served in World War No. 1, enlisting at the age of 18, and when the urge to get into the present fight became too much to overcome, he joined up last October and went to Camp Wolters, Tex., for his basic training.

Knows Hull

While practicing law in Carthage, Fisher became a personal friend of Secretary of State Hull, whom he has visited in Washington. An active American Legionnaire, he has served as adjutant of the Carthage post for two terms.

Fisher was doing his bit for national defense even before entering the Army, as captain of his local unit of the Tennessee State Guard, in which his older son is now a corporal. The boy plans to join the Army soon, leaving Mrs. Fisher, a daughter and another son to keep the home fires burning.

Navy Vigilance Stymies Stowaway On Late Arizona

But for the vigilance of the U. S. Navy, Pvt. Robert C. Hagans, of Company D, Service Battalion, Third Student Training Regiment, would have seen action at Pearl Harbor.

Shortly before it sailed for Pearl Harbor, where it was put out of action in the Japanese "sneak attack," the U. S. S. Arizona docked at New Orleans, Hagans' home city. A bootblack, Hagans went aboard the battleship to shine officers' shoes. He liked the vessel so well he attempted to depart on it as a stowaway but he was quickly found.

While he has always had a desire to go to sea, Hagans says he is happy that he is in the Army ground forces and is anxious to get into combat.

Chief Nurse Made Major

Anderson Completing 25 Years Service

Captain Ruth Anderson, chief nurse at Station Hospital has been promoted to the rank of major.

Major Anderson, who on May 15, will complete 25 years service as an army nurse, is now one of 66 majors in the Army Nurse Corps. She came to Fort Benning as chief nurse in March 1941 and in August was promoted to captain.

Major Anderson has served at several army camps during her 25 years including Camp Robinson, Fort Bragg, Fort Riley and Fort Oglethorpe. She served at Fort Benning from 1929 to 1932, and has been on duty twice at Walter Reed hospital in Washington. Included among her stations are the Philippines for one year, Tientsin, China, for two years, and Hawaii for three years.

Colonel Gibson To Leave Post

Officer Gets New Assignment Elsewhere

Colonel Thomas R. Gibson, commanding officer of the First Student Training Regiment of the Infantry School and a much-decorated officer during the first World War, has just received orders for a new assignment, it was revealed today.

An inspiration and an example to the men in his regiment, Colonel Gibson's biography reads like a guide book to success for newly-graduated officer candidates. In August, 1917, he graduated from an officer candidate school at Fort Sheridan, Ill., and immediately received sealed orders. Twenty days later he was on French soil.

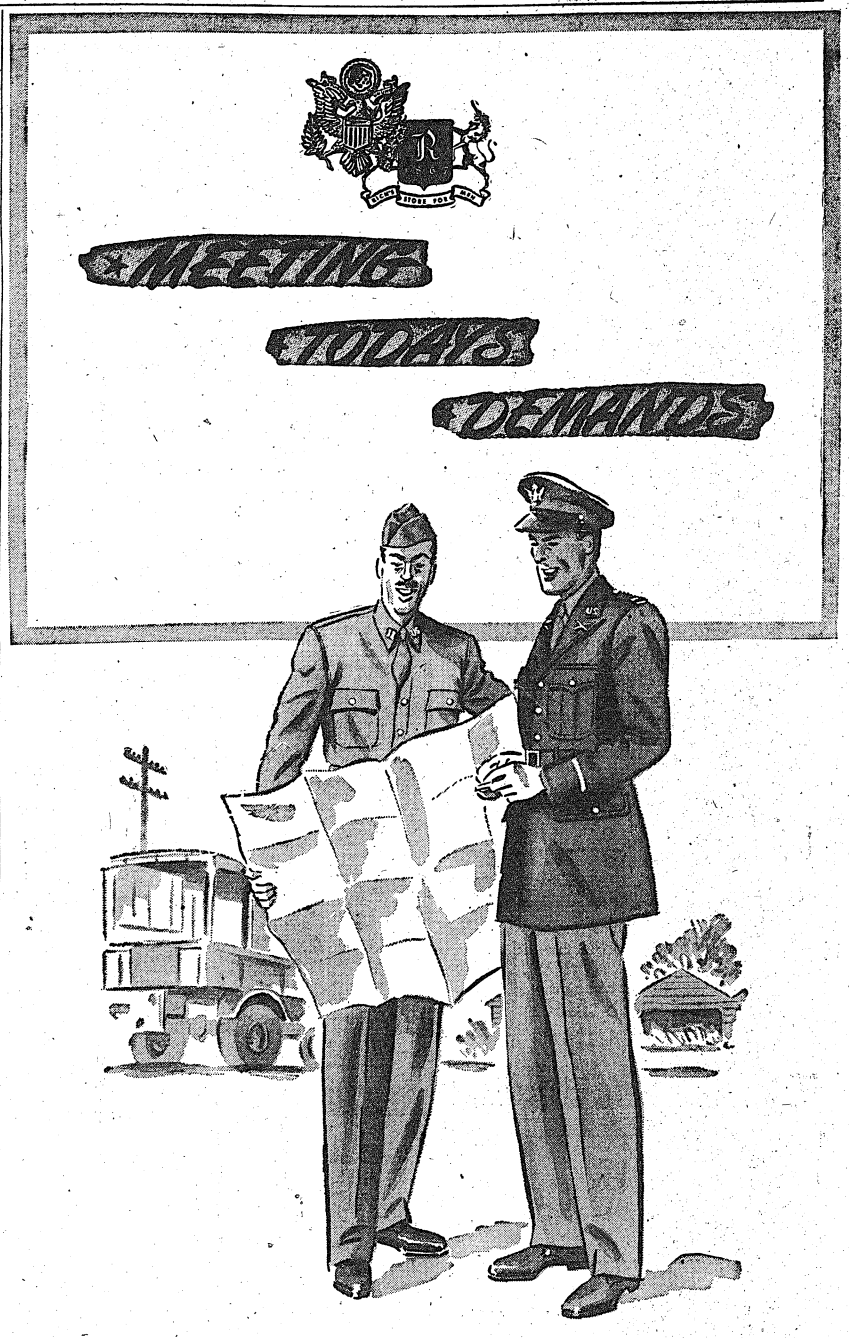
During the next month he attended a British machine-gun school and was then assigned to duty with the First Division. It was this division that Colonel Gibson participated in many major engagements and shared in the traditional ceremony of dipping the colors in the Rhine.

For his services in the first World War, Colonel Gibson was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the Silver Star, with the Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Purple Heart. The French government awarded him the Croix de Guerre, and because of citations twice awarded to his regiment, he was permitted to wear the French Fourragere.

Besides these decorations won on the battlefield, Colonel Gibson also possesses the Campaign Medal for Participation in the Occupation of Germany, and the Verdun Medal, a Decoration of Honor awarded by the French government.

9 Enlisted Men Of Supply Division Get Promotions

Nine enlisted men of the Supply Detachment, Supply Division, Section One, Fourth Service Command, Fort Benning, have received promotions.



Sergeant James H. Watts has been promoted to technical sergeant, and Sergeant John W. Smith has been raised to staff sergeant. Technician Fourth Grade Charles H. Mann is now sergeant, and Corporal Herman D. Bryant is now technician fifth grade.

Privates Ancil T. Sweat, Irenio C. Castro, Louis E. Dilembo, Willoughby B. Jordan and John R. Bryant have been promoted to privates first class.

Birmingham Nine Plays Here Saturday

Barons Oppose School Tossers in Twilight Game at Gowdy Field

Rivals Travel To Magic City For Sunday Battle

Sports activities at Fort Benning this weekend will be highlighted by a home and home baseball series between the all-star Infantry School nine and the Birmingham Barons of the Southern Association. The teams will play a twilight game at Gowdy Field Saturday evening and then will journey to Birmingham to do battle in the Alabama city on Sunday.

Captain Gowdy's athletes look better with each day's practice, and with games against the Columbus Foxes and Georgia Tech behind them, they feel confident that they can add a couple more victories to their record this weekend.

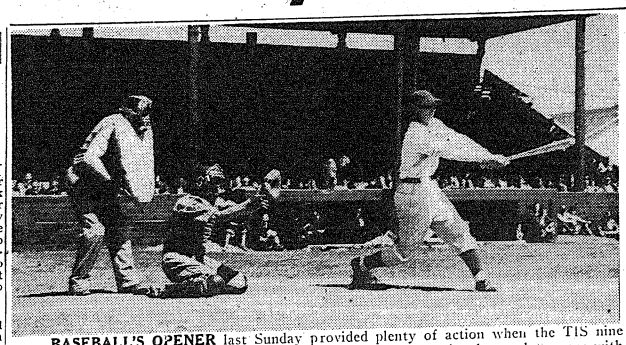
Three changes have been made in the personnel of the squad since the opening game. Elmer Niebler, Johnnie Dally and Dick Plunk who were in uniform for the season's debut last Sunday have been dropped from the squad. Dally is a pitcher who played two seasons with the Boston Braves. He was expected to show well for the school nine, but was unable to get his arm into shape.

SQUAD ADDITIONS

Merlin Stoker, a catcher, and Lewis Christie, a pitcher, both from the 124th Infantry, have been added to the squad, as has Pitcher Bob Friedland, former Michigan State College star. All three have looked so good in practice this week that they could not be denied uniforms.

Captain Gowdy has been working his pitchers only three innings apiece and will probably follow the same policy in the games against Birmingham. No announcement has been made concerning the hurlers for the Barons series, but it is probable that Christie, Friedland, Lehner, De Volder, Rundus and Yockman will see action.

George Hill will probably hold down the centerfield assignment again Saturday, but he will be flanked by a couple of outer gardeners who were not on the field at the start of last Sunday's game. Chester Dabbs will replace Tommie Ryan in left field while Buddy Lewis, former star third baseman and outfielder for the Washington Senators, will take over Niebler's slot in right field. Ryan and Libren Cox are expected to see some action in the outfield during the games.



INFIELD SAME

The infield will be much the same as the one which started last Sunday with the exception of first base where Garnet Mercer will get the nod over Herb Moore. Mercer was listed as an outfielder at the beginning of practice, but he has also played a lot of first base for Madison in the Three-I league where he compiled a .362 batting average while hitting 16 home runs in one season.

Benny Zientara will be seen at second with Red McCluskey at third. Bamburger will probably get the starting call at short stop although ex-major leaguer Dib Williams may replace him.

The starting catcher assignment will fall to George Simmons, Stan Reft, or Merlin Stoker, with Jim Stevens around for some extra assistance.

The Infantry School nine will return to the post after the game in Birmingham to prepare for battle with the Atlanta Crackers at Gowdy Field next Wednesday and Thursday, April 14th and 15th. Both games will be played under the lights. The school team will travel to Atlanta on the 20th and 21st for a pair of games with the Crackers in the Georgia capitol. Four contests with Cecil Travis' Camp Wheeler Spokes will conclude the schedule for the school all-stars. Wheeler comes here April 24th and 25th, and Gowdy's charges return the visit on May 1st and 2nd.

BASEBALL'S OPENER last Sunday provided plenty of action when the TIS nine downed Columbus by a 6-4 count at Gowdy Field. Shown above is a home plate scene with Simmons, the school catcher, swinging at a Columbus pitch. The catcher, down on his knees, is McQuirter of the Foxes, while Holtzclaw is the umpire. TIS Nine Downs Columbus In Diamond Opener, 6-4

George Hill Gets 3 Hits In Victory Over Foxes Sunday

By SGT. HERBERT KALETTE
Infantry School Public Relations

Captain Hank Gowdy's Infantry School tossers opened their 1943 season in a blaze of glory Sunday at Gowdy Field, as they hammered out a 6 to 4 victory over the Columbus Foxes before 3,000 soldier fans.

Led by Centerfielder George Hill who had two singles, a triple, and a base on balls for four trips to the plate, the Infantry School nine collected a total of eight base hits off the combined offerings of Wissman and Corley of the visitors.

The Foxes collected eight hits also off the slants of De Volter, Rudy Rundus, and Joe Yockman, but they were well scattered.

Four errors made behind the Columbus pitchers spelled defeat for the Foxes. Except for two late inning errors by George Hill, the Infantry School fielders played flawless ball.

The longest hit of the day was contributed by the soldiers' third-sacker, Red McCluskey who hit a prodigious wallop over the left field fence just outside the 355 foot sign at the foul line. The ball was foul by just a few feet. Called back to the plate, McCluskey then took a fourth ball and subsequently scored.

The service team scored one unearned run in the first and two more unearned runs in the second inning and were never headed. The Foxes did not seriously threaten until the last two innings when they ganged up on Yockman for three runs on as many hits.

Al Bamburger, school shortstop, came up with the fielding gem of the game in the first half of the second inning when he went far to his left to take McQuirter's sizzling grounder behind second base and made a fast throw to Moore, but the Columbus catcher beat the throw by a hair for an infield single.

Ace Netman Attends TIS

When OC Gayle R. Kellog of the 28th Company, Second Student Training Regiment, was in high school he was one of the smallest men on the football team. So after being bowled over regularly, he decided to take up tennis and became one of the best players in the Middle West.

Kellog is now a husky 189-pounder whacking away at OC school, and hopes that his tennis playing has developed co-ordination that will help him with bayonet and hand grenade.

Trims U. S. No. 5

In the last five years, Kellog has held the Nebraska and Kansas state tennis championships, and was ranked as the No. 3 player in the Missouri Valley.

When his family moved to San Diego, Calif., two years ago, Kellog stopped in Arizona long enough to knock off the state championship. Last year before entering the Army, he won two tournaments in southern California. In a tourney at the Coronado Hotel, he trimmed Ensign Joe Hunt, Davis Cup player rated in the top five in the United States.

Hollywood— Mrs. Maurice Kosloff was sitting in the lobby of a hotel when her husband walked up to the desk and registered with another woman as "Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kosloff." The first Mrs. Kosloff sued and won a divorce.

O. C. Played Baseball Game Against Japs

Nips Won Tilt But Return Match Is Another Story

Candidate Evermonte Huffman, Jr., of the Eleventh Company, Third Student Training Regiment here in the Infantry School, played a baseball series against a Japanese team in Shanghai in 1932. The Japs won. But Huffman is playing another game now and is determined that the result is going to be different.

Huffman's is the rare case of a seaman turned soldier. A resident of Huntington, W. Va., where his wife, five-year-old son and parents now live at 1201 Third Avenue, Huffman served in the United States Navy from July, 1930, to January, 1934. He was stationed in the Far East for two years, and while there played baseball for his ship, the cruiser Rochester, in an inter-service and civilian league. He was the only Navy man chosen for the all-league team which met the champion Japanese university team in a six-game series.

BOXING CHAMP

Besides his baseball activities in the Navy, Huffman won the light heavyweight boxing championship for his ship.

The Rochester was the oldest ship in active commission at that time and was at one time Admiral Dewey's flagship. Huffman was in the crew that put her out of commission in Cavite Navy Yard in 1933. Later he was on a submarine tender.

Los Angeles—Sally Rand, stripdancer, will have to cavort without even her shoes in the future. The ration board turned down her appeal for 50 pairs annually which she made, claiming her art wore out a pair each week.

Tiger Baseball Opens April 14

Four Games To Usher In New Season; 3rd Armored Defends Crown

The 10th Armored Tigers' 1943 baseball season will get under day Wednesday, April 14, with four games scheduled—one for each playing field in the Sand Hill area. The 3rd Armored Regiment nine is the division defending champion.

The division has been divided into two leagues, the Sand Hill and the Cusseta, with nine teams in each. The larger units, the regiments and battalions, will compete in the former, while separate companies and a few battalions comprise the Cusseta.

At the close of the season May 23, a "little world series" such as the American Association and International Leagues play off every year, will be held. The four top teams in each league will play in an elimination tournament against one another to determine the league champions, who will then meet for the division title. The final standings will have no bearing upon the championship other than to determine which four top teams of each league will compete in the tournaments.

The 54th Infantry will have three separate battalion teams in the Sand Hill league. Other teams are the 3rd Armored, 11th Armored, 55th Engineers, and the three artillery battalions, the 419th, 420th, and 423rd.

In the Cusseta league are the 90th Medical, Supply, 774th Tank Destroyer, and 90th Reconnaissance battalions, and Headquarters, Service, Signal and Trains companies.

29th Boxers Defend Ring Title Monday Against Dragons

The 29th Infantry's crack ring team will defend its post title laureis Monday night at the post gym when it faces the onslaught of the 3rd Armored Dragons in a challenge match for the 1943 crown.

The Devil sluggers have waited many weeks to put their laurels on the line, and finally the Dragon mittmen rose to the occasion and will enter the ring against the tough Two-Niners at 8:30 Monday.

In the preliminaries, the 24th General Hospital mittmen will tangle with a battalion team from the 54th Armored Infantry as one part of the fight-off for post smaller unit laurels.

Both the Devils and Dragons are expected to enter a full team.

Daffy Dilly: And here's another reason studios aren't so dumb? March may have been the deadest month of the year for picture production, but there's a reason . . . Remember March 15? . . . Well, the movies did, too . . . Because on that date, they are taxed for every foot of finished film on hand . . . So now that the traditional scramble to unload their celluloid stocks is over, picture production soon will swing back to normal . . .

10th Armored Gets First Chief Warrant Officer

Warrant Officer Gail A. Palmer, assistant personnel officer of the 10th Armored Division Headquarters Company, became the first chief warrant officer in the division upon his promotion April 1.

Warrant officers of the junior grade must wait six months before they can be promoted to chief, the highest non-commissioned rank in the army. Mr. Palmer had been a warrant officer 11 months.

Juvenile nines Challenge Teams

An open challenge to any boys baseball teams in Columbus, Phenix City, or other nearby towns was hurled today by six boys' teams on the Post.

The teams, composed of boys of officers and non-commissioned officers living on the post, are the Peeps, Jeeps, Spitfires(Tomahawks, Thunderbolts and Airacobras.

The junior teams practice every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday at 3:15 p. m.

While the Jeeps and Peeps practice every day Monday through Friday at 5:30 p. m. on the 29th Infantry baseball diamond. The teams are sponsored by the Fort Benning Boys' Athletic Activities Association, headed by Lt. Col. Virgil Ney.

Little Ferry, N. J.—Fred Haverecker administered first aid to a blackbird with a broken wing, a badly bruised dog and a frog with an injured leg. He is a Red Cross first aid instructor.

The approximate proportion of officers now serving in the Army that have come up from the ranks is about one-third.

Colored Woman First At Post To Get Bars

Hospital Dietitian One of Quartette In Whole Nation

Lieutenant Velma P. Owens, a staff dietitian at the Station Hospital, holds the distinction of being the first colored woman ever commissioned at Fort Benning and one of the four colored dietitians commissioned from civilian life in the United States, it was revealed today.

Although Lieutenant Owens took the oath for her commission on March 16, it was retroactive to December 1, 1941, when she came to the Station Hospital to assume her duties as a staff dietitian. Her duties involve supervision of special diets, preparation of special menus, and general supervision of preparation of food.

WIDE EXPERIENCE

Lieutenant Owens, a native of Indianapolis, Ind., spent three years prior to her arrival at Benning as head dietitian at the Central State Hospital, Petersburg, Va. She received a bachelor of science degree in home economics at Indiana State college, Terre Haute, and was successively head of the home economics departments at the Boylan-Havens School for Girls in Jacksonville, Fla., and Campbell Junior college in Jackson, Miss. She was instructor at the former school in 1931-32, and at the latter school from 1932 until 1934.

After doing post graduate work in home economics at Ball State College at Muncie, Ind., she took dietitian's training at Freedman's Hospital in Washington, D. C. It was after receipt of her certificate there that she became head dietitian at the Petersburg hospital.

Lieutenant Owens' husband, Cpl. George Abbott Owens, is a technician fifth grade in a coast artillery stationed overseas.

The other three colored women similarly commissioned in the United States are stationed at Camp Livingston, La., and at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. Two of them are on duty at the Louisiana camp.

O. C. Describes Rigid Commando Training Overseas

As one of a group of 75 American soldiers who spent last summer in Northern Scotland, Officer Candidate Donald E. Larson of the 11th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, had an opportunity to undergo British Commando training and compare the program with that of the U. S. Army.

While similar in many respects to that he is receiving, the Commando training was much more arduous, Larson, who comes from Bremerton, Wash. ,points out. Obstacle courses were a mile long, including ascending and descending cliffs, and were run under fire with live ammunition.

Speed marches were scheduled twice a week and often the trainess had to build and cross toggle bridges under fire and then have the bridges cut away, tumbling them into the water. During a practice landing, Larson had a paddle shot from his hands.

H. C. Officers Club Opened

Dinner, Open House, Show Celebrate Event

Representative officers from all sections of Fort Benning marked the opening of the new Officers' Club in the Harmony Church area Thursday night with a dinner and brief ceremony.

Following the dinner open house was held and several hundred officers of the area visited the club.

At the ceremony Col. S. R. Tupper, commanding officer of the Student Training Brigade, presided and introduced Col. J. P. Edgerly, executive officer of the post who represented Brig. Gen. Walter Scott Fulton, commanding general, and Col. Edward A. Noyes, president of the club's board of governors.

Also introduced were Capt. James Guthrie, secretary of the club; Lt. William Courtland, who will be directly in charge of the new club, and Lt. Millard G. Rotter, his assistant.

Entertainment was provided by acts from the Southern Manor, Bama Club and the Maytag.

TIS Student Hires Taxi For Flight From Nazis

Trip Takes Him From Boulogne, France, To Belgian Border

Officer Candidate Quentin C. Sternbergh is studying with the 17th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment here to take a leading part in ending the world catastrophe which sent him on a dramatic flight from Europe Sept. 3, 1939.

Sternberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hervey Sternberg of 339 Spring street, Reading, Pa., was in Paris on that fateful day when England and France declared war on Germany, and he immediately received a cable from his father directing him to return home.

Unable to find an outgoing ship at Boulogne, Sternberg teamed up with an American who had lived in France and Belgium almost all his life and who was unable to speak English. Sternberg's newly found friend had an automobile in Antwerp, so they made an expensive taxi trip to the Belgian border, where they were met by friends with the car.

In the car they headed for Rotterdam, where they frantically boarded a Dutch liner, first neutral ship eventually to dock in New York after the outbreak of war. Because so many sailors and stewards had quit the ship through fear, passengers had to help make beds and serve food.

Sternbergh, 21, is a graduate of Pennsylvania Military College and his company is scheduled to be graduated here June 14.

Britain Serene Under Duress

O. C. Recalls World War I Street Scenes

Young as he was at the time, Officer Candidate William G. Clyde of the Eighth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, can recall the serene self-confidence with which Great Britain faced World War No. 1, a conflict for which she was psychologically unprepared.

Clyde and his mother had gone to Scotland in the fall of 1913 and he was six years old when England entered the war. He can recall kilted Scotsmen marching off to war to the wild skirl of bagpipes, Britain facing transportation, housing and food crises just as she is now.

"I can still thing back to the Territorials leaving for the front," he says. "Out in front was the drummer, wearing his kilts, sporran and leopard skin, traditional garb of the leader. And on the sidewalk was my aunt, a girl then, crying her eyes out. One of those leaving was her sweetheart. He never came back."

A native of New York City, Clyde was for years a swimming coach and hockey player. Possession of a Class B rating in ski racing was responsible for his assignment to the Mountain Infantry.

The Officers R. & R. Club on Cusseta Road is by far the most popular place in Columbus for commissioned officers and their guests. Ask anyone on the reservation who has been there.

Fulton Lauds Fight On V.D.

Urges That There Be No Let-Down

Continued cooperation in the fight against prostitution and venereal disease by the Army and Columbus and Muscogee County was pledged at a luncheon meeting Friday at the Officers' Club at Fort Benning when Army and civic officials met at the invitation of Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general.

"Conditions looked dark a year ago," General Fulton said, "but today I have a feeling of optimism in the spirit with which the city and county has tackled these problems. We know that this is a continuing fight and that there must be no let-down."

Major James Loveless, venereal disease control officer at the post, also praised the progress which is being made and prophesied that if the present rate of progress is continued, vice would no longer be a major problem in this area.

JURIES MUST HELP

Assuring the group that the courts would aid in every way possible, Judge T. Hicks Fort said "Whenever juries have the courage to give proper verdicts you can be sure the judges will lead their just offices to aid this cause."

Others speaking briefly at the meeting were Mayor W. G. Bridges, City Manager Marshall Morton, L. R. Aldridge, chairman of the county commissioners, and Dr. J. G. Gainey, venereal disease control director for Muscogee county.

Other local officials attending the luncheon were City Attorney William Worsley, Chief of Police John Newberry, Sheriff Arthur Poole, County Commissioner L. P. Banks, City Commissioners B. B. Key, Sterling Albrecht and E. G. Blanton, Edward Wohlwender, Jr., solicitor general, and J. W. Satterfield, county chief of police. W. E. Tucker, editor of Columbus Enquirer was also present.

In addition to General Fulton and Major Loveless, others from the Army were Major W. D. Veal, provost marshal; Major Russell J. Hammargren, public relations officer; and Lt. O. K. Marquardt, aide to the general.

Sailor's Life Out For 3rd Student Reg't. Candidate

Officer Candidate Chester Maliszewski of the 15th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, will take the soldier's life in preference to that of a sailor even though he has experienced several air raids on shore.

The candidate declares unreservedly that he feels he came closer to death during a hurricane which struck his convoy, bound from Iceland to this country, than at any time in four years of soldiering. His ship rode out a 100-mile-an-hour wind and the soldiers were kept busy shifting ballast to correct a 40-degree list in the vessel.

Although the advanced cadre of Maliszewski's division landed in Iceland as the first AEF of this war, Maliszewski remained behind until last March. Soon after his arrival in Iceland, he was appointed an acting officer. Although life around the Iceland capital was much the same as that around any Army post, Maliszewski would like to return there upon completion of his course here. His class is scheduled to be graduated May 26.

Student Once Made Arms He Now Fires

3rd STR O. C. Employe of Colt Co.

As an employe of the Colt Firearm Co. prior to his enlistment in the Army last September, Candidate B. Alex Dickson of the Sixth Company, Third Student Training regiment, once supervised the making of parts for the weapons he now fires.

Dickson, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Dickson, 82 W. Center St., Manchester, Conn., was supervisor of the Colt department that made parts for the rear sight and feeding mechanisms, extractors, ejectors and numerous other divisions of the Browning heavy and light machine guns and automatic rifles. He also designed tools to facilitate mass production of these important infantry weapons. So the graded tests of his company on at least three subjects hold no terrors for Dickson, who is scheduled to be graduated on May 19.

The candidate enlisted last September and previously served eight years in the Army, as a member of Company K of the 43rd Division. In that unit he was a company clerk for three years and supply sergeant for another three years.

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

No matter what your job, off to a good start means off to a fresh start... alert and refreshed with ice-cold Coca-Cola.

THE Civil Air Patrol has recruited more than a third of the nation's 100,000 civilian pilots to fly for national defense. Coming from every walk of life, they are putting forth an extra something to do their trained part. To them and to you, in its own way, ice-cold Coca-Cola offers something extra, too. More than just quenching thirst it brings refreshment... refreshment that goes into energy.

Made with a finished art and with a taste all its own, Coca-Cola has quality that sets it apart. Here is something in refreshment that was, and still is, original. Coca-Cola offers all the difference between something really refreshing and just something to drink. There's no comparison.

Even on the ground, pilots know that your thirst takes wings when you drink ice-cold Coca-Cola. Refreshment comes to take its place.

Chinese People Do Not Know Defeat—Smith

General Cheadle Describes North Africa To Woman's Club

By KATHERINE HAMMARGREN

A China whose spirit of recovery makes her rise above destruction and war was vividly shown by Sergeant Patrick Smith Monday afternoon in his magnificent motion picture, "China's Struggle and Recovery", presented to the Fort Benning Woman's Club in the Main Theatre. Sergeant Smith, main speaker of the afternoon, was preceded by Brig. Gen. Henry B. Cheadle, who gave a brief but interesting talk on North Africa.

Sgt. Smith, a lieutenant-colonel in the British army during the first World War and who enlisted as a private in the American army recently, is now attached to the 196th Signal Photographic Company. He has crossed the Pacific 34 times in the last 20 years to take pictures in little known lands.

His splendid pictures of China, taken since the outbreak of the Japanese war, show clearly that in the masses of China there is no defeat. Places said to be destroyed completely are not destroyed at all, and shipping and shopping goes on in Shanghai as usual. Sgt. Smith believes that when the war is over Shanghai will become one of the world's great cities.

However, Sgt. Smith emphasized there is a grave danger of our underestimating Japan. He pointed out that his films show that the Japanese army has never "bogged down" in China, saying that the Japanese took all the steel works, railroads, and ports, leaving China dependent on her allies for weapons. Consequently, he said, the Chinese army has never had a chance to fight the Japanese. Tens of thousands of young Chinese men were shown far behind the lines, waiting till they had arms to serve their country.

Brig. Gen. Cheadle, back from North Africa where he received his promotion on the field of battle as a reward for his leadership, gave his audience a brief picture of the country. He described Oran as old, historic, but uninteresting; Algiers as a beautiful city, and Casablanca as a country town. It is a fertile country, but he found many persons were half-starved. Morale of the American soldier is high, he said, although water is scarce, produce has to be cooked thoroughly to avoid contaminated food, and the men work in seas of mud.

3rd STR Unit Sets Obstacle Course Record

Fourth Company of the Third Student Training Regiment qualified 97.4 per cent of its candidates to set a regimental record last week in running the obstacle course against time.

Normally about 10 per cent of a company fails to scale the walls and top the hurdles in the prescribed time of two minutes. In the Fourth Company, however, the non-qualifiers ran to only 2.6 per cent.

Fastest time, 1:32, was run by Candidate John J. Rosol of the Fourth Platoon. Arthur Hutton of the Second Platoon and Elmer Kinner of the Third Platoon ran the course in 1:33.

Raff—

Africa, the basic paratroop training we all received at Ft. Benning made possible our success in harrassing the enemy," Col. Raff said today.

He disclosed that the 'chutists have seen action in three assaults against the enemy. Colonel Raff praised his troops highly for their combat efficiency but likewise dispelled one popular notion to belittle the German and Italian troops in the Tunisian campaign.

"The enemy is surrounded," he said, "but the Germans and Italians are battle-wise. They have seen action longer than have our soldiers and on that score make themselves an alert, stubborn enemy."

Colonel Raff disclosed that on the trip by air to Africa from England, which took the paratroops to action, the soldiers set back in their seats, cracked jokes, ate canned ration and coffee, and read "thrilling" detective stories.

"One of the most popular ways of passing the time on the 12-hour trip to Africa," Colonel Raff related, "was the reading of 'Wild West' stories by the paratroops. The soldiers were sorta getting into the spirit of gun duels for the immediate future."

When the paratroops actually were on their way as an element of the huge invasion force to take North Africa, Colonel Raff said, the soldiers were eager to get to their destination and "get the situation well in hand."

Seasoned at Ft. Benning as a paratrooper, and decorated four times while serving in North Africa, the 35-year-old colonel revealed that he was the first commander in charge of a mixed group of Americans, French and British troops in the African campaign.

NO WORRY

"There is no worry about French politics in the front lines," Colonel Raff said.

"The French can fight and they want to fight. It did not make much difference what weapons they had. They were up there on the front meeting the Germans and Italians. They want to kill and drive them out of their country and be able to return to their families."

In the first paratroop attack in North Africa, Colonel Raff sustained a broken rib. However, he recovered quickly and served with his troops on their successive missions in which he led them into battle.

Colonel Raff placed emphasis on the importance of small unit training. He disclosed that it is of paramount importance in actual combat for small unit leaders, lieutenants and non-commissioned officers to have complete control at all times over the men under them.

Colonel Raff has been decorated with the Silver Star, the French Legion of Honor, the French Croix deGuerre with Palm, and the American Purple Heart.

While her husband was on duty overseas, Mrs. Raff and her children resided in Richmond Hill, near Savannah.

Serial Number On Letters

Advised If Name Is A Common One

If you have a surname that is fairly common—be sure to include your army serial number along with your name and address in upper left corners of envelopes and have your correspondents learn to include it in your address when they write to you.

That was the advice given today by Captain Joseph F. Twohig, in charge of the army post office, following receipt of a circular issued by the War Department.

He pointed out that inclusion of the serial number is not mandatory in the return address, but that soldiers with surnames shared by many others should cultivate the habit.

"In many instances, there are men with exactly the same names—often they turn up even in the same companies," he pointed out. "Thus delivery of mail is difficult. Even when names are only similar, or when initials become confused, mix-ups occur. By making a habit of including the army serial number in addressing soldiers mail, delivery can be speeded up. It's a very good idea to notify your friends and relatives to include your serial number when sending you mail. And it's not a bad habit even for men whose names are not so common."

A graduate of Leland Stanford University where he was a great name in athletics, Colonel Potter entered the army through the first officers' training camp in the last war. He has served tours of duty with the 12th, 16th, 31st, 35th, and 64th Infantry regiments and with the 16th Infantry brigade. He was adjutant of the 12th Infantry regiment and the 16th Infantry regiment brigade. He was commander of the 1st battalion of the 16th Infantry at Governors Island, New York when he was transferred to The Infantry School.

Was Track Star

Colonel Potter was at Fort Benning during the winter of 1939-40 as a member of the staff of the First Division. He later held staff assignments with the Fourth Corps and with the Third Army. All these staff positions were as an assistant adjutant.

Colonel Potter is well known in track circles. He was a track coach of the United States Olympic team in 1920, and he has coached many army teams since that date.

picture, however, comes news that the long-awaited meeting between Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, and Gen. Henri Giraud has been "indefinitely postponed." This may not be so serious as it at first appears, though, because those planning things may wait for complete Allied mastery of North Africa, then spring the meeting as an added psychological blow at the Axis forces.

A WIDE RANGE of world problems were discussed by President Roosevelt and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, it was announced as Eden left the United States. The meetings were described by the President as having "achieved a very fruitful meeting of minds on everything that came under discussion." Indications are that America and Britain are endeavoring to avoid situations that arose following the ending of World War I back in 1918. Talks with Russia may now be expected before very long.

American shipyards in March established a record for construction of merchant vessels—and now we are turning them out at the rate of nearly five per day, according to an announcement by the Maritime Commission.

Coming as a move to bolster depleting manpower reserves, Major General Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, announced that, beginning May 1, men in the 38 to 45 year old group must face possibility of induction unless they leave the list of "non-deferrable" occupations.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau disclosed comprehensive administration plans to stabilize post-war currencies and fix their value in terms of gold. It's another indication that the administration is doing considerable planning for the course of things to come after we've whipped the Axis powers. Mr. Morgenthau emphasized, though, that the program is "purely tentative."

The Ruml plan for "pay-as-you-go" taxation was defeated — at least for the time being, in Congress.

Cafeteria Opens and Rush Is On

New Cafeteria Real Gastronomical Dream

Unite Can Serve Large Variety of Comestibles To 8,000 People Daily

No longer do you have to wait while the waitresses finish dating up a couple of G. I.'s for a week from next Michaelmas; no longer do you have to brush several dozen lounging 28th Infantrymen out of the way (doesn't that gang ever eat at its own mess?); no longer do you have to wait while the cook looks around to see what he has "or else."

Nope, you can get waited on neatly, efficiently and with dispatch now as the new Cafeteria opened Monday in the new light airy, clean building just across from the Main Theater with a capacity for taking care of hundreds of persons where the old restaurant in Service Club No. 1 took care of dozens.

Potted palms are scattered about. Hanging flower pots are on the pillars and walls. Canaries trill.

GOOD FOOD, SHONUF

And best of all, there's good food behind the cafeteria counter—and plenty of it.

Besides a full line of full meals, many of which never were attempted at the old restaurant, there are home made pies, cakes doughnuts and other delicacies that look just like a package from mother before rationing went into effect back home.

The main cafeteria counter serving full meals will be open from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m. daily. Next Monday, the second "line" will be ready and will be opened from 11 a. m. to 10 p. m. Here the cafeteria will serve hamburgers, hot dogs, pies, pastries, ice cream, beverages. The two sections of the cafeteria will be kept separate so that those desiring a meal may secure it while those wanting just a snack may have room to sit and chat with friends or relatives who may be visiting on the post.

140 EMPLOYES

The cafeteria will employ about 140 persons, including seven cooks, six bakers, five pantrywomen.

The new cafeteria has been in the building for several months. Difficulties in securing equipment held up the opening until this week. Lt. Col Harold E. McGaf-

G. I. Summary Of World News

BY SGT. O. J. REMINGTON

AFTER TUNISIA, WHAT?—everybody naturally expects to see American and British forces combining to assault the bastion of Europe. But just how, when, where?

The answers depend on how quickly Gen. Patton and Montgomery can clean Rommel out of Tunisia and after that of course on a lot of other things. Best guesses now being made are that the Allies will hit from a dozen directions. Certain is it that Hitler and Mussolini expect an invasion attempt.

Mussolini has been conferring with his boss at some length. Hitler has probably written Italy off as useless to attempt to defend except to delay invasion of the actual continent as long as possible exactly as Rommel now is doing in Africa. But outside of that, the Peninsula actually is a tremendous liability from a military standpoint.

Don't be surprised to see Hitler moving into Spain at any moment now — and further, don't be surprised at a smart Allied move to forestall it by getting there first.

AT ANY RATE, it appears to be only a matter of days now before American and British troops should be occupying all of North Africa. After that, the task of an invasion will be many times greater than knocking off Rommel. American air forces already are slashing at Italian naval might and have knocked out two 10,000 ton cruisers in an Italian port.

In France, reports are that Allied airmen are smashing at the French transportation system. And significantly enough, French saboteurs are working day and night to wreck it, too.

For the first time, too, Russians have joined the general aerial offensive against the Axis with raids on Koenigsberg, old capital of East Prussia, which is out of practical range of British and American bombers based on England. On the Russian front, Red armies are struggling to resume an offensive, with some local successes.

THE ALLIES LOST 8 destroyers, a corvette and a tanker as a strong Jap air force struck at the Guadalcanal area in its heaviest bombardment in five months—but the Japs lost 54 planes although Tokyo claims sinking of an American cruiser, destroyer and 10 transports in the attack, with loss of six Jap planes. The Japanese made the attack with 50 bombers and 48 Zero fighters. Outside of that, nothing much has been reported during the week from the far Pacific area.

PLENTY OF BIG domestic news during the week has been getting the headlines. The biggest war financing campaign in all history began Monday as the United States started a drive to borrow thirteen billions of dollars to wage global war and keep the country on an even economic keel.

Organized labor lost its first legislative fight of the 78th congress when the house passed the Reed bill to make robbery and extortion punishable under the anti-racketeering act of 1934.

President Roosevelt permitted the debt limitation bill and its salaries rider to become law without signature "in order to avoid embarrassment to our war financing program," and condemned Congressional action in permitting salaries to continue on their 1942 basis. He further called anew on the lawmakers to impose a special war superiax holding all individual net incomes to $25,000. As passed the bill raises the national debt limit from 125 billion dollars to 210 billion dollars.

OPA drafted dollars-and-cents ceilings for many items, indicating lowered prices for some foods. At the same time, the first United Nations conference on post-war planning to deal with food and agriculture was set for May 18 at Hot Springs, Va.

Virginia's Old 176th Joins School Troops

Regiment's History Dates Back To Time Of American Revolution

The regiment that led Pickett's famous charge at Gettysburg, the 176th Infantry Regiment, which dates back to 1632, arrived at Fort Benning this week and soon will begin participation in classes and demonstrations as a unit of the Infantry School's troop brigade.

The 176th, which is commanded by Colonel Edwin Cox, has one of the most glorious histories of any unit in the American Army. It was organized originally as the First Virginia Infantry in 1632, by authority of the then Lord Protector of England. In 1680 it was engaged in Bacon's Rebellion and then in the decisive defeat of the Iroquois Indians in their invasion of Virginia.

During Braddock's campaign in the French and Indian war, George Washington commanded it. Together with the Second Virginia Regiment, it defeated the Indian Confederation under Chief Cornstalk at the battle of Point Pleasant.

GALLANT CREW

When the colonies declared their independence, it was expanded in 1776 into the First, Fourth and Fifth Virginia Regiments of the Virginia Line, and fought at the battle of Great Ridge. Later, with the Continental Army, it participated in the Northern and Western Campaigns. It was cited for gallantry in the battles of Long Island, Brandywine, Monmouth and Princeton, and also was present when Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown. Its first commander in the Revolutionary period was no other figure than famed Patrick Henry.

Following its reorganization after the Revolution, John Marshall, who was to become Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, was in command of the regiment. It served during the War of 1812, defeating a British army at Craney Island in one engagement.

During the Mexican War, several components of the regiment served in Mexico.

BLOODY FIRST

In the War Between the States, the regiment was active from the secession of Virginia until Lee's surrender at Appomattox, participating in more than 30 battles. It was one of the leading regiments under Pickett at Gettysburg. It was known as "The Bloody First" because it lost 80 per cent of its strength, being reorganized no less than 10 times during the four years of battle.

During the Spanish American War, the regiment did not leave the country, but was at the Mexican border in 1916 and was a component of the 29th Division in the First World War.

Blood Bank Sought Here By Red Cross

Soldiers Request Means To Give Blood For Plasma

An editorial contribution of a Fort Benning officer, appearing in last week's Bayonet, which suggested a Red Cross Blood Bank be made available near this Army post to accommodate military personnel wishing to donate blood, has attracted the attention of local Red Cross authorities who already have made moves to make this possible.

Eugene Bussey, field director of the Red Cross here, commended the suggestion made in the editorial by Lieut. H. S. Wilcox, of the Publication Section, The Infantry School, which asked that facilities be afforded Benning soldiers to give their blood.

DAILY PETITIONS

Mr. Bussey points out that his office "has had almost daily requests from persons wishing to contribute their blood."

The Red Cross field director states that on February 5, he suggested to higher Red Cross headquarters that facilities be made available in this vicinity for this service. In reply, Mr. Bussey was advised that arrangements were being made "for a mobile Blood Bank to visit this Post or vicinity."

No mobile or permanent facilities have been established yet in this vicinity, it was pointed out, because of some time the permanent blood bank in Atlanta has been in a state of organization.

84th WAAC Unit Arrives For TIS Work

Additional Platoon Expected To Join Company Very Soon

Fort Benning's second company of the Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps arrived Saturday night when the 84th W.A.C company reached the post from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. to assume their work with the Infantry School.

Immediately housed in their permanent quarters across from the Student Training Brigade headquarters in the Harmony Church area, the members of the company will start work in various capacities Tuesday morning.

Commanded by Lieut. Letitia Gentile of Providence, R. I., and with Lieut. Eleanor Abbott mess and supply officer, 103 auxiliaries compose the personnel of the organization. Most of the members are natives of New England states.

The headquarters platoon will handle the administrative phases of the company, while the clerical platoon will take over duties with the Infantry School similar to those assumed by members of the 43rd WAAC company at post headquarters, relieving soldiers from desk-jobs.

ADDITIONS SOON

A second clerical platoon will join the company in the very near future to assume additional specialized work with the brigade.

Activated at Fort Oglethorpe 10 days ago, specialists in the company came from the WAAC training center at Des Moines, Iowa, while the basics were trained at Fort Oglethorpe.

Immediately after their arrival Saturday evening the auxiliaries were invited to attend various dances and other entertainments at Fort Benning. Sight-seeing over the vast reservation occupied much of their time on Sunday afternoon. Impressed with the magnitude and completeness of Fort Benning, and its many-sided activities, the WAACs already have been besieged with countless invitations to future social functions during their time off from duty.

Gen. Prosser Inspects Post

Signal Corps Officer Views Set-Up Here

Major General Walter E. Prosser, commandant of the Central Signal Corps school at Camp Crowder, Mo., inspected the Infantry School Communications Section Tuesday on a visit to Fort Benning as he was on his way back to his command from a tour of the Panama Canal Zone.

In 1940 General Prosser was at Fort Benning where he organized the Fourth Division. He previously had served at the post with the Sixth Division, acting as chief of the Infantry section.

A native of Indiana, General Prosser is a graduate of the United States Military Academy, class of 1905. During the World War he served as a Colonel of Field Artillery and from 1924 to 1926 he served on the General Staff Corps. He now is in charge of training troops at the Signal Corps School, reckoned as the largest in the country.

28 GO TO API

Thirty-eight Fort Benning enlisted men reported this week to Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn for refresher courses and classification in the Army Specialized Training Program, Lt. Salvador Llosa, ASTR station director and assistant classification officer, announces.

Upon completion of the course at API the men will be classified and the decision will be made whether they shall take basic or advanced courses offered by other colleges in the Army set-up.

War Bond Drive Spurred By Soldier Subscriptions; TIS Civilians Commended

With launching of the Second War Loan drive on Monday, Major George Fink, Fort Benning war bond officer, announced that the Infantry School was the first sub-division to reach its quota in the civilian pay reservation program.

This, of course, does not count in the drive since Fort Benning as a community does not have a quota. However, it means that civilians working for the Infantry School are contributing regularly to the war bond program as requested by the Secretary of War.

Of the 293 civilians employed by the school, 279 (ninety-five per cent) have monthly deductions tataling ten and eight-tenths per cent of their salaries. This is slightly better than the "90 pere cent-10 per cent" goal set by the War Department for its civilian employes.

In a letter addressed to the Commandant of the Infantry School, Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton, post commander, commended civilian personnel under jurisdiction of the school headquarters, saying:

COMMENDS PERSONNEL

"It is desired to commend the civilian personnel of the Infantry School for achieving and surpassing the "90 per cent-10 per cent goal" fixed by the Secretary of War for the War Bond Pay Reservation Program. This outstanding accomplishment typifies the spirit of cooperation and duty well done that has always marked the every act of The Infantry School.

"I have advised the Commanding General, Fourth Service Command, Army Service Force, Atlanta, Georgia, that you are eligible to receive a certificate of achievement and to purchase a War Department banner which may be displayed inside your Headquarters."

At the same time a concentrated effort is being made to raise the average participation of civilian employes of other sub-divisions. Major Fink said that counting at this time the showing made by the Infantry School was very encouraging.

In addition to regular participation, the nation has been asked to raise $13,000,000,000 between now and May 1. Although Fort Benning does not have a quota in this drive, many of its personnel, both military and civilian, will take an active part by helping nearby Columbus and Muscogee county raise approximately $6,000,000 in the next three weeks.

Bonds And Stamps To Be Presented At April 28 Dinner

To many an ingenious G. I. this week go valuable prizes in the form of War Bonds and Stamps as prizewinners in the Bayonet's contest for writers and artists at Fort Benning.

In this week's Bayonet, heralding the selection of the winning entries, the winning contributions are printed as well as scores of the runners-up in the newspaper's contest.

Photographs of some of the top prizewinning contests are pictured on this page as is a complete roster of the various soldiers and officers who won the coveted prizes, ranging from $25 War Bonds to $2 in War Savings Stamps.

All of the entries in the contest, which was announced a month ago, were considered by a group of merchants in Columbus who made the selections to be awarded prizes.

BIG DINNER

In addition to winning War Bonds and Stamps, the prizewinners will be feted at a banquet in the Columbus room of the Waverly hotel on Wednesday, April 28. At the banquet the prizes will be awarded the several winners. Entertainment, music and dance numbers are slated for the dinner which will be held at 7:30 p. m.

Although the editors of the Bayonet literally were "swamped" with entries for the contest, the Public Relations Office, which furnishes for general release the material published in the Bayonet ,urges soldier-artists and writers to continue to send in their manuscripts and cartoons. These will continue to be printed in the newspaper which has the largest circulation on the post.

Entries in the Bayonet's contest, according to the civilian judges, represented a wide variety of talent at Fort Benning. Although many of the contestants formerly have been writers or cartoonists, the majority of the contributions were entered by novice artists.

Catholics Set Easter Mass

Bishop W. T. McCarty To Celebrate Occasion

Bishop William T. McCarty, Military Delegate of the Army and Navy will come to Fort Benning to celebrate two Pontifical Masses on Easter Sunday.

He will arrive late on Good Friday, April 23, and will celebrate a Pontifical Mass Easter Sunday at 9 a. m. in Chapel No. 4, Sigerfoos Road and Vibbert avenue and another at 11:30 a. m. in Chapel No. 3, at 10th street and Scott avenue in the Sand Hill area.

Loudspeakers will be set up in Chapel No. 3, it was announced by Chaplain Francis Zimmerer, to allow an expected overflow crowd of celebrants to hear the Mass. Chaplain William H. Hunt is the chaplain at Chapel No. 4. Major John Peckter is divisional chaplain of the 10th Armored Division arranging for the visit of Bishop McCarty to that area.

Bishop McCarty was recently consecrated Coadjutor to the Military Bishop, John F. O'Hara, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York City.

CONFIRMATION

Following celebration of the Masses, Bishop McCarty will administer the Sacrament of Confirmation in the afternoon at Chapel No. 4 to soldiers from all parts of Fort Benning.

Soldiers desiring to be confirmed are advised to get in touch with their Chaplain immediately.

Valdes Urges Benning Troops To Avail Themselves Of TIS Instruction

Filipino Chief Of Staff Gives Description Of Philippine Rape

Major General Basilio V. Valdes, chief of staff of the Philippine Army, who recently completed a course at Fort Benning's Infantry School, urged soldiers to "train hard, take advantage of the magnificent instruction given here at The Infantry School and be prepared for the reconquest of the Philippines."

General Valdes, who has been a general officer since the middle thirties, vividly outlines the rape of the Philippines by the Japanese.

His story follows:

"When General MacArthur was recalled to active duty and appointed Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army Forces in the Far East, in July of 1941, it was evident that the clouds of war were becoming darker and darker in our part of the world. For this reason General MacArthur deemed it necessary to call to active duty ten reserve divisions of the Philippine army.

"Upon the request of General MacArthur, President Quezon issued an executive order calling to active duty the components of ten reserve divisions of the Philippine army. Large cantonment areas were hastily constructed in various parts of the islands. Seven of these divisions were assigned to the Island of Luzon, the largest island of the Philippine Archipelago, two divisions in the Visayan group of the islands, one division non the Island of Menlao.

SHORT OF OFFICERS

"Due to our shortage of high ranking officers in the Philippine Army, only two of these divisions were commanded by Philippine Army officers. These were the 21st Division, commanded by Brigadier General Mateo Capinpin, a retired officer of the Philippine Scouts, and a former graduate of the Infantry School Fort Benning. The 41st Division was commanded by Brigadier General Vicente Lim, the first Filipino graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, a graduate of the Infantry School, of the Command and General Staff Officers School at Fort Leavenworth and of the War College in Washington. Both of these divisions fought creditably—inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

"Of the remaining eight division, one, the 81st, was commanded by Brigadier General Guyafort, an American officer of the Philippine Army, who was a former officer of the Philippine Constabulary. The remaining divisions were commanded by United States Army officers.

ALL YOUNG MEN

"Considering the fact that these reserve divisions of the Philippine Army were entirely composed of young men, directly from civilian life, and who had had military training averaging from five and one-half to eleven months, the manner in which they fought, and the courage they displayed, merits all the praise we can give them.

"On December 24, 1941, I received orders to proceed with President Quezon and the other members of his war cabinet to Corregidor. When we were ready to leave the Presidential Palace to proceed to the water front to board the boat which was to take us to Corregidor, an air raid was sounded and we were compelled to wait for the all-clear signal. We left the Palace at three o'clock and proceeded without delay to the Presidential Landing on the water front, where the presidential launch was waiting.

"We had scarcely reached the ship that was to take us to Corregidor when another group of Japanese planes returned to bomb the water front, and for more than half hour we stood in the middle of the bay hearing the bombs fall on the water front, praying all the time that our ship would be spared the consequences of an aerial attack. Immediately after the all-clear signal was sounded we sail-

20-Year-Old TIS Graduate Gets Silver Star

A graduate of a Basic Officers' Course at The Infantry School has just been awarded the Silver Star for extraordinary valor in the action which drove the Japs out of Papuan, New Guinea. He is Lieutenant Bill Mullen, and the award was made in person by Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger.

Gen. Eichelberger congratulated Lt. Mullen for a grand job well done. "If American troops have ever in history been in tougher fighting than at Buna, I know nothing of it," he said.

Lt. Mullen is only 20 years old. A native Nebraskan, he was graduated from Missouri Military Academy where he received his early military training. Called to active duty with the army a year ago, he was sent to Benning to attend the Basic Course at The Infantry School before he was sent to the southwest Pacific area.

O. C.'s Make-Believe Diary Is Drole Story of Bivouac Life

Rolled Pack Holds Enough Foodstuff To Feed Company

Hardly typical of the behavior of the average officer candidate are the happenings recorded in a completely fictitious diary submitted by Candidate Carl B. Lewis of the Fourth Company, Third Student Training Regiment.

For the sake of background, Lewis adds the diary "was found in a battered pair of overalls turned in for salvage by a candidate of the Fourth Company after Creek area. Disposition of the a five-day bivouac in the Shell person formerly fitting within the suit, one-piece, WORK, is unknown."

Extracts of the diary follow:

"April 1, 1943—Prepared for sojourn in Shell Creek area. Rolled pack. It was rather large as it included shelter half, two blankets, 25 candy bars, two cartons of cigarets, 10 boxes of matches, pictures of Sally, Gert and three hostesses from the Brown Derby in Calumet City, flashlight with four extra batteries, one pair of socks, two pairs of shorts, two pairs of long drawers, two long-handle tops, 14 field manuals, 26 old G.T.'s, clip board, notebook, brown, red, blue and green pencils, letter writing materials, two pairs of silk pajamas.

"This trip shouldn't be so bad. After all, I was out one night just before being kicked out of the Boy Scouts for conduct unbecoming a tenderfoot.

"Bathed feet. To bed at 2259.

PACK HEAVY AND HOW

"April 2, 1943—Donned pack at 0800. Found it rather heavy. Sat down on a locker to rest and it took Mac and three other guys to get me up. Fell twice going downstairs and broke rifle stock. Found close order drill rather awkward. Tac officer could not understand the roller skate I borrowed from Slush on bottom of pack. Explained that my roll was rather long but he made me remove skate and shortly afterwards I noticed him writing in the little black book.

"Trip out winded me. Double time three minutes and walk two. Lost raincoat on first turn. Lost shovel at 14.32-29-40. Dropped mess gear at Sunshine and Lumpkin rds.

"Company arrived in bivouac area at 1716. Tac officer, march officer, my squad and myself arrived at 1805 with parts of my pack. All tents, including mine, were up at 1900. Mine was down again at 1905. The ground was pretty soft. Had it up by 1920. Ditched it but shovel hit three pegs and it fell again. Up again at 1940.

"After filling canteen cup at lister bag got ready to wash and shave and found I had left toilet articles in locker. Pulled locker out of blankets and found toilet articles missing. Lynn reported seeing them on poudre room shelf last night.

OFF AZIMUTH

"Missed chow while hunting small building in woods which was supposed to be on an azimuth of 153 degrees and 104 paces from tent. Arrived at tent three hours later and crawled between blankets.

"Tent was kicked over three times during night by others enroute to small building in woods. Moved and reditched tent at 0135. Just stayed up as it was too cold for sleep. Ate 10 bars.

"April 2, 1943 — Up at 0135. Breakfast at 0710. Discovered my knife, fork and spoon must have been left on shelf in barracks. Learned to eat grapenuts with fingers. Rather messy. After a day of running around in the woods, got back to the little cottage on Shell Creek to find I had been gigged for not mopping around tent. Couldn't find mess gear. Ate nine candy bars.

"To bed at 2000. Up at 2010 for trip to small building in woods. Made a mistake and took a back azimuth ending in impact area back of hill 32. Arrived at tent at 0259. Ate five candy bars.

"April 4, 1943 — Up at 0304. Breakfast at 0815. Spent time feeling sorry for those who spent last night cooped up in some stuffy bar in Phenix City.

"Studied from 0890 to 0905. Played volleyball from 0910 to 1200 when foot hit stump. Left first aid tent at 1300. Missed chow. Ate one candy bar. Smoked last pack of cigarets.

IN GREAT PAIN

"Studied from 1402 to 1407. Pitched horseshoes from 1415 to 1630. Arm gave out. In great pain. Left first aid tent at 1700. Missed chow. But Slush gave me three cold boiled potatoes.

"Tired out so went to bed early. Asleep by 1830. Rain began to fall sometime before 2000 as at that time the tent came down. Unraveled myself from tent at 2032 about 100 yards downstream from original site. Spent rest of night in tree on azimuth of 165.

"April 5, 1943—Managed to get tent set up by daylight. Found rifle at 0800 about 300 yards downstream. Missed chow. Feel myself getting weaker. Carried machine gun tripod six miles at double time all morning. Squad got lost, was late for chow but managed to get two spare ribs and small boiled potato.

SOME CHOW

"Carried bipod eight miles at double time all afternoon. Couldn't find mess gear, so ate peanut butter sandwich for chow.

"To bed at 1900. Blankets too wet to sleep. Spent rest of the night by fire.

"April 6, 1943—Up at 0400 and started for small building in woods. Rain must have ruined compass as I came out at range house on Jamestown road. Missed chow and was late for formation.

"Spent morning manhandling .37 through three miles of unbroken forest. Spent afternoon trying to find company. Company found me trying to do manual of arms with .37 at 29.05-16.18 at 1900. All the guys were mad as we were supposed to be back at barracks at 1615 for chicken and ice cream. Arrived at barracks at 2100. Rather tired.

"Have reached the conclusion that Shell Creek is the result of too much Georgia being left lying around."

Plans Complete For Passover

Gen. Fulton Issues Message To Jewish Troops And Families

Preparations for the Jewish Soldiers' Community Seder at 8 p. m., Monday, April 19, in the 100 Ninth Street USO, have been completed.

Arrangements for the feast which will usher in the eight-day Passover festival are in the hands of the Columbus Army and Navy Committee of the Jewish Welfare board. Herman Julius is chairman of the committee, assisted by Ed Korn, director of the JWB.

SCHEDULE OF SERVICES

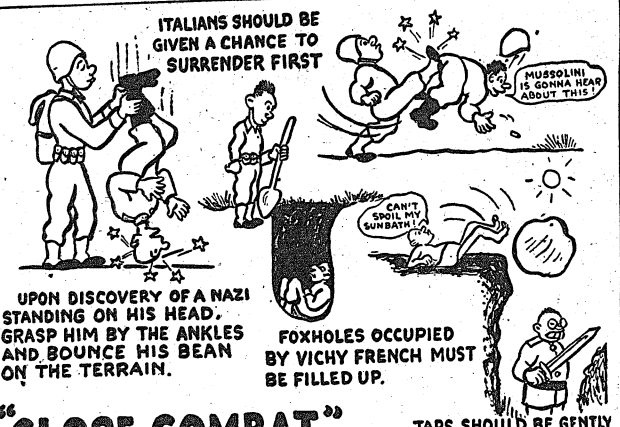
Preceding the Seder supper, there will be services beginning at 7 p. m., in the Ninth Street USO.

Chaplain Shain also announced the complete schedule of services during the Passover festival season. All services will be held in Children's School with the exception of the Seder.

On April 20 services will be held at 9 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., and on April 21 at 9 a. m.

Services will be held also at 7:30 p. m. April 25, at 9 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. on April 26, and at 9 a. m. on April 27. This last service will include the Yizkor memorial service.

In a special message to the Jewish troops in his command and to their relatives, General Walter S. Fulton, post commander at Fort Benning, pointed out that in many homes all over the nation there will be chairs left vacant by Jewish youth of America who have been called to the colors to aid in the destruction of a tyranny far greater than that of the Pharaohs.



"It should be an infinite consolation to many of those fathers and mothers to know that Jewish communities all over this country, as well as in those nations which have held at bay the cruel oppressors, are preparing community Seder suppers for the benefit of those boys who are away from the family board.

PRAYER FOR PEACE

"We of the Christian faith join our Jewish neighbors in the offering of a prayer that the awful pall of war shall soon be dispelled and that next year the observation of this feast will find the whole earth once more enjoying the pursuits of peace and liberty."

The Seder ritual will be directed by Chaplain Samson A. Shain with active participation on the part of both officers and enlisted men of Fort Benning.

The festival will celebrate the deliverence of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage 31 centuries ago. The ritual will follow in spirit the Biblical protoype, the narrative of which relates how each household had gathered and eaten the lamb roasted on the fire, with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, their loins girt, shoes on their feet and staff in hand prepared for the march through the desert that foreshadowed Israel's great pilgrimage through the centuries.

1st STR Unit Practices Jungle Warfare Tactics

'Japs' Pop Up From Nowhere Taking Pot Shots at Soldiers

Arduous perils of jungle warfare were sharply impressed on officer candidates of the 14th Company of the First Student Training Regiment as they sweated through the swamps and heavy undergrowth of the Ochilee-Upatoi Creek region in a final combat phase of their pre-graduation training. The company, commanded by Capt. John J. Wrinn, will graduate April 15.

"Jungle warfare is full of surprises," the candidates were warned by Colonel Milton C. Shattuck, director of the maneuver, in his preliminary instructions.

Even as he spoke, a brown-skinned camouflaged sniper arose from a fox-hole, took a "pot-shot" at the commander from the rear, missed, apologized with an insolent "Excuse, please," and promptly disappeared into the underbrush with the promise that he would "try again."

It was a forerunner of things to come. As the candidates moved forward over vine-entangled trails they were harassed by snipers on all sides. They toiled up steep hills. Sank deep in boggy quagmires.

Shooting broke out ahead. The woods prevented observation. "Find out what's happening up there."

As he dispatched a messenger, Candidate H. T. Allison of Warren, Ohio, student company commander with J. M. Braly of Spring Lake, N. J., and H. R. Ingram of Glendale, Calif., in successive phases of the attack, was finding out how difficult and how vital is communication in the jungle. His messenger was soon back.

"Sir, the platoon leader says one of his squads was ambushed. They fought their way out. They are moving ahead now.

GUN CHATTERS

The company pressed forward. At a clearing in the woods a machine-gun started to chatter "Tat-atat-tat-tat-tat—" Abruptly, it ceased. An instructor - umpire nodded approvingly. "They got that gun out in a hurry," he said. "Someone did some good work out there."

A messenger came running up. "Candidate Hardin crawled around with a hand grenade and tossed it in the gunner's lap," he explained.

Forward again. Where was the right flank platoon? A few moments before it had been moving along in sight. Now it had disappeared completely. More worry for the company commander. Control—one of the endless problems of heavy-woods fighting. The advance must cease until the platoon was located.

It had edged ahead and was soon found, luckily. The going became tougher. Sweat crusted on the backs of coveralls. Briar vines ripped and tore. Canteens were empty and water became a problem. The candidates learned then the value of water discipline.

Perspiring and weary they wormed their way to the Ochilee, to be met by a withering fire from the opposite bank. The creek flowed between steep banks at undetermined depth. Mosquitoes swarmed. A snake slithered away from someone's hand. Then a thick smoke-like cloud was swept by the wind out of a nearby gully. "Gas"!

As if there were not already enough harrassments, gas masks were donned. To reach the opposite bank seemed an impossible task. But they were going across.

TOUGH GOING

Under covering fire, the first "wave" slid down the bank, plunged into water still so icy-cold it made them gasp. Rifles held high, they waded in. The current tugged at their feet. The bottom was slippery. Splash! Someone went in head first. There were trip wires in the stream bed!

They got across, wet but not too ingloriously. The enemy fled before their bayonets.

The sun was low before the weary officer candidates fought their way through more swamps and mire to a last enemy-held objective, then dragged their feet at sound of the bugle to a final assembly area.

"Actually, one of the things we wanted to impress upon you was the difficulty of attacking over terrain such as this," said Col. Shattuck. "Don't do it unless you have to. It's too costly a maneuver."

A student, wet and bedraggled, dabbed at his face, scratched and torn by briars. "Well," he said, "I've a lot more respect for those boys fighting in the jungle now."

No one disputed him.

Capital Inspector Visits Benning

Visiting various Fort Benning units, including post headquarters the Infantry School and 10th Armored Division is Colonel William A. Rounds, inspector-instructor from the Judge Advocate General's department in Washington.

For the past several days he has been busy conferring with local authorities including Lt. Colonel William F. Coulborn, post judge advocate general, on War Department policy relating to the administration of military justice.

His tour of inspection has covered several other large installations, including those located at Montgomery and Maxwell Field, Ala., which he visited last week.

With Civilians

MYRTLE JOINES

Congratulations to these former civilian employees who under recent order from the war department are now 2nd lieutenants in the army of the United States. At the station hospital are Catherine Fox, Eleanor McKnight, Ruth E. Galt and Helen Munford in the white mess and Velma P. Owens in the colored. These lieutenants have really won their bars by hard work and diligence to duty. These new lieutenants are all graduate dieticians and the civilian personnel at Fort Benning is happy of their new rank.

The cilivian personnel at post headquarters gave a luncheon for Rosanne Claymore Jones at the Officers' club Wednesday as a farewell gesture to this popular co-worker on the eve of her departure for Texas to join her husband, 2nd Lieut. Gwenedd Jones. The table was beautifully decorated with white Iris and sprays of bridal wreath spirea. Mrs. Jones was presented with a piece of lingerie as a going-away gift.

Thelma G. Byars and Lula A. Carson are in Atlanta attending school. They are learning the three "R's" of governing civilian personnel.

Mary Valks and Horace (Pete) Thames announce plans for their wedding on April 9th, at 9 p. m., E. W. T., at the Wynnton Methodist church. Virginia Gray announces her wedding to Sgt. Robert H. Stewart, a paratrooper, on April 3.

Mary White has just come back from New York after visiting the big city and some little place in Pennsylvania. Brought lots of spring ideas back with her.

The 24th General hospital is very proud of their new 2nd lieutenant, Ruth E. Pontius. She received her commission just the other day and did the boys give her a big hand over that commission.

Another commission which we are very proud of is that of Julia Warwick, the physiotherapist aide at the Station hospital. Nice to see so many of our civilian employees getting recognition from Uncle Sam in the form of gold bars.

Margarite Brescia and Ruth A. Chapman of the Civilian Personnel Section, post Headquarters are on detached service for a few days in Atlanta in connection with the classification training program. They are duly missed.

Jewel Bankston of the Quartermaster will soon be leaving these parts for the Maine coastal area where her single days will be over and the Army loses another good girl to the Navy. Radio Instructor John H. East is the prospective groom. He has just returned from Africa where he participated in the AEF landing campaign. We will miss Jewell but will just be thinking how happy she will be in her new life.

The Finance Office is all a-dither over moving into their completely renovated quarters in the old Post Office Building. Mary Reynolds says the are moving the fiscal, accounts, and commercial departments over. We will announce an "at home" date early next week.

Virginia Butler and Mariam Denson have just returned from a delightful trip to Atlanta. They were guests of the Atlanta Biltmore and did the night clubs and shows besides a little shopping while in the big city.

A Little Story With A Big Moral

FIFTH PRIZE, FEATURES

It isn't much of a story. The people in it weren't important. Just a mother and son, driving in an ordinary car, who had given me a lift back to camp one Sunday evening.

I sat in the back, not listening to their conversation; just bemoaning my fate that tomorrow was Monday and why I had to get so low a number on my draft board. Gradually their conversation broke through my thoughts—stuff about "Army" and "enlisting" perked up my ears.

The mother was talking in a low voice that seemed to me to be quivering slightly. "John, I don't want to influence you about joining up but I think you have a duty to your two children and wife. They, too, need you, need your care and support."

"Mother if I don't enlist I might not have a country left to support them in."

The silence filled the car and as I got out at my destination the mother's head was bent.

300th Infantry Band Needs More Instruments

Band instruments and music both are needed for the newly organized 300th Infantry Regiment Band, it was announced today by Lt. B. F. Zvolanek, who has already conducted one rehearsal of the new musical organiaztion at Fort Benning.

Any individuals or any organizations in Columbus or on the post with a surplus of basses or trombones of clarinets or baritones will learn the undying gratitude of the entire regiment if they will arrange to transfer the instruments to the new band, Lt. Zvolanek said todsy.

So if you have any instruments —or any band music that you can spare—please contact the Special Service Office of the 300th Infantry, Fort Benning 66.

Native German Says Hitler Fooled Backers

Stooge Turns Tables On Supporters Who Gave Him Power

The latest member of the 22nd Company, First Student Training Regiment, is T-5 Herbert Ashe. Ashe was born near Munich, Germany, in 1912. He resided there until 1938 when he came to the United States to escape oppression by the Nazis.

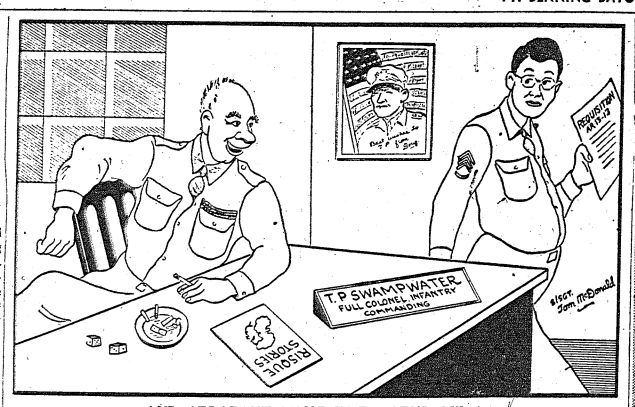
Ashe states that in 1933 when Field Marshal Von Hindenburg appointed Hitler to the Chancellorship of the German Reich, the Nazi Party was not the majority group at that time. However, Ashe states, it is interesting just how they gained control of everything in the German Reich.

The organization that brought Adolph Hitler to the top intended to use him as a stooge to further their own political and economic interests. These circles consisted mainly of big industry and the Prussian military clique. The German people imagined they could do away with him as with so many previous politicians at that time. They were gravely mistaken.

Within a few months all political parties within Germany were dissolved, their property taken away, and their leaders put in concentration camps or liquidated. All essential industries and banks were forced to dismiss their "Liberal" employees and executives. The courts were cleaned of the "Undesirable Elements", and so called reliable men replaced them. New teachers taught the Nazi religion and thus the organization was eliminated.

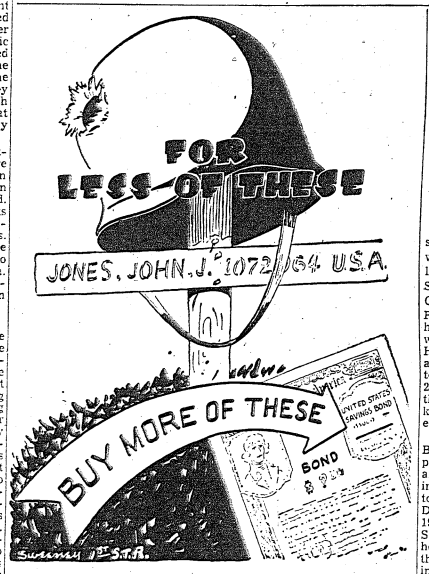
MASSES CONTROLLED

The next step was to bring the masses of the people under one control. This was only accomplished by fear, and it was done in that way. Their methods might be compared to our own gang world prevelent in the roaring twenties. When a business or person was asked to join the party either he joined or took the consequences. The consequences might mean a convenient accident or business might dwindle to nothing. It was their form of protection. Individuals began to distrust each other. No one was free to speak his own thoughts. Your neighbor might be a member of the Gestapo planted to gain information from you. This finally grew so bad that in order to gain favor of the "Big Shots", men would discriminate against each other.



Formerly members of the Reich would greet each other by lifting their hats. This was to be changed. "Heil Hitler" was now the prescription and one was provoking trouble not to do this or to do otherwise.

CAVE DWELLERS



Of course there were the people who didn't believe in what was going on, and they wanted to live to their own convictions. These were a small minority or were in concentration camps. However they still live in caves and in the hills, and in their hideouts all over Germany, ready to help and greet the victorious Americans in their day of victory.

However it is Ashe's conviction that you cannot oppress the human mind indefinitely and he is sure that part, at least, of the German people will rise against their oppressors as soon as they have the weapons and tools with which to work.

Ashe ends his story by saying, "There is no place like the United States, and no army like the American Army. I am proud to be a member, fighting to rid Germany of the enemies within itself".

Sgt. Towler Meets Italian King After 1918 Armistice

Speaking of men who can carry stripes on the left sleeve, and wear ribbons over the well known left breast pocket, there is First Sergeant Vane W. Towler, 22nd Company, 1st Student Training Regiment. Sergeant Towler boasts he is one of the "Old Soldiers" who know the well known "ropes". He now displays nine hash marks and very shortly there will be ten. He joined the army April 23, 1914. When he says something, the personnel listen, as they know it is the "Voice of Experience" speaking.

The trouble on the Mexican Border was Towler's first campaign. When World War I came along, Towler sailed for France in June, 1918. He was assigned to the 40th Military Police, 40th Division. After the Armistice in 1918, he returned to the United States in 1919. After remaining here only a few days, he decided that he wanted to go back. He immediately enlisted, and was sent to the 8th Infantry at Brest, France.

TO COBLENZ

The first Battalion, 8th Infantry, was sent to Coblenz, Germany, as part of the Army of Occupation. While there, he was selected as one of the members of his regiment to go to Italy to honor the unknown soldier. While there he was presented to the King of Italy. He is one of the few soldiers who can truthfully say he called on royalty without meaning four kings.

Sergeant Towler remained abroad until 1923, when he returned to the United States and landed at Savannah, Ga. He was then stationed at Fort Screven, Ga., until 1940, when he was sent to Fort Benning, to the First Student Training Regiment.

Our America Synonymous With Peace, Happiness

PRIVATE JOSEPH LANGAN,
Hq. Co., 29th Infantry

America, land of peace, prosperity and happiness. Three small, simple words. And, yet, how small, how simple are they? These three words form the very foundation for something which the average American does not really appreciate. Perhaps it is because he has always had it. Let us take each of these words, one at a time, analyze it, tear it apart and see just what it really does mean.

What is peace? Some would say that peace means. "Not being at war." It means, however, much more than this. Peace means freedom from worry, that wonderful feeling of being able to lie down at night and rise the next morning with a bright and shining countenance, ready to face anything that the world has to offer. It is the ability to marry and rear a family in the happy knowledge that their lives will be the lives of free men. All these things and many more are contained in that small, simple word, "Peace."

Prosperity, in the minds of many, means wealth and all its accompanying luxuries. Prosperity is really nothing more than the earning of a living. Any man who has found a means of supporting himself and those who depend upon him for support, whether it be with his hands or his brain is indeed a prosperous man.

WE LONG FOR IT

The dictionary tells us that "happiness" is "the state of being happy." The word itself is unfathomable. But, perhaps we can conceive some idea of its meaning. It is the one thing that every human being strives for from the moment he is born yet fails to realize that he has it until he has either lost it or is in dire danger of losing it. It is peace, prosperity, and many other elements all in one.

These three words form the unshakeable foundation which this great country, the United States of America is built. There are some who will say, "Where is our peace today?" "We are engaged in a terrible war, a struggle to the death. Where is our prosperity today? We must pay most of what we earn back in taxes and bonds. Where is our happiness today? Our brothers, husbands and even fathers are engaged in a dangerous struggle where every moment their very lives are in danger."

SWEAT OF BROW

To these people we can only repeat what our Father in Heaven decreed after the sin of Adam. "Henceforth man shall earn his living by the sweat of his brow." Our fathers before us and their fathers before them had to sweat and even die to give us these things we have, until now taken for granted. We realize all these things now. That is why this great nation, one hundred and thirty million strong has risen as one to strike down the hand of oppression. The hand that would take from us all these hard won treasures.

We will fight. We will work with all our might and main until the enemy is utterly and completely destroyed and unable to again shake that mailed fist that has for the second time in one generation thrown the world into a chaos of death and destruction. We will place the shining star of our wonderful country in the "Heavens of Destiny," there to be an eternal reminder of what a great nation, founded on brotherly love and freedom contributed toward the lasting peace and security of the world.

Peace, Prosperity, Happiness—AMERICA.

Tank Accident Takes Life Of Sgt. Flanagan

Sergeant John J. Flanagan, 25, was killed April 7 when a tank in which he was reding rolled off an embankment. The accident occurred at the junction of Moye Road and St. Mary's Road, Sand Hill area during a routine battalion training march.

Sergeant Flanagan, as tank commander, was riding in the turret. Other members of the crew escaped with only minor injuries.

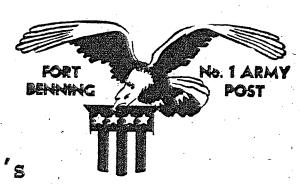
Sgt. Flanagan was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Flanagan of Allentown, Pennsylvania. His wife, Mrs. Joan A. Flanagan lived at 809 Broadway, Columbus, Georgia. He was a member of Company E, 3rd Armored Regiment of the 10th Armored Division.

Sergeant Flanagan was inducted into the Army April 22, 1941, at Wilkes Barre, Pa.

Soldier Father Buys Bond For 8-Hour-Old Babe

A radiantly happy candidate presented himself the other day before Lieut. James G. Young, bond officer of the Sixth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, and proudly asked for a war bond to be made out in the name of Robert D. Parlaman, Jr.

"Certainly", said the pleased officer. "How old is the boy?"



Parlaman pere paused, consulted his watch, half closed his eyes as he made a rapid calculation and then announced brightly: "Just eight hours, sir. I got the wire a few minutes ago and the boys in the barracks immediately took up a collection to buy him a bond."

The candidate previously had made the announcement in the company mess hall to his assembled fellow officer students.

CHARLOTTE, N. C. —(CNS)— Sam Able, Negro, told a judge that he was cutting his fingernails when his knife slipped and slashed Laura Belle Young making a gash which required 32 stitches. It was the fifth time such goings on had occurred, according to witnesses, so the judge sentenced him to five years in the pen.

CHICAGO —(CNS)— Twenty-four Chicago university coeds are learning the "gentle art" of Jiu-Jitsu "because it's a handy thing to know." The instructor is Erwin Cahn who also teaches sailor the same tricks. (Lucky guy—Ed.)

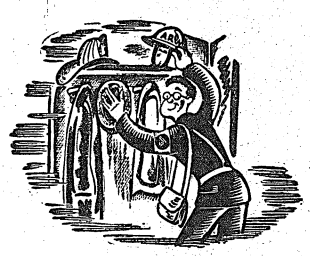
By Fighting for Him at Home

MAKE YOURS A VICTORY HOME



You saw the front pages . . . read the headlines . . . and afterwards turned strategist . . . ready to plot roads of victory for Eisenhower and MacArthur. But have you thought of indulging in a bit of home-front strategy . . . finding ways of beating the Axis in your own backyard. Well, glance below . . . you'll find 6 ways of doing your share; thus helping our boys achieve an earlier, quicker victory.

Give 10% to Uncle Sam

Give Uncle Sam 10% of what you earn each pay day and he'll make certain there will always be a pay day (no pay days for Axis slave labor, you know). If you can, give more than 10% . . . better to lend Uncle Sam 15% or 20% (knowing you'll get it back) than have the Axis grab the entire 100%.

Give Time to War Work

If you're a volunteer worker for Uncle Sam you know what a swell boss he is . . . how richly he pays you in satisfaction and security. If you're not already enrolled in volunteer work, remember, this is your personal war and you're needed . . . every hour you work brings Victory an hour closer.

Give Up Riding and Sending

It's simple to carry home what you buy . . . healthy exercise to walk wherever you're going. At the same time you're giving your bus seat to a war worker; saving gas and rubber by carrying your own. Remember, walking and carrying help speed our war effort at home and abroad.

Give a Wide Berth to Gossip

"Button up your Lip" is a slogan for Victory. An unbuttoned lip may mean a sunken ship, a wrecked train, a war plant in flames. If you know or hear anything, true or not, keep it to yourself. Anything to do with ships, troops or ports, etc., should end with you . . . or it may be the end of them.

Give Attention to What You Have

Our grandmothers were brought up on the proverb "use it up, wear it out, make it do . . . or do without." That certainly applies to our present modern times. Mend what you have, make it do; you'll be relieving manpower and material for essential war work.

Give Care to Your Victory Garden

Grow the vegetables you eat in your own backyard. Planting and caring for a Victory garden is fun; and you reap rich rewards in garden-fresh vegetables, besides knowing you helped release precious food for our boys and Allies. Spring's here . . . get busy . . . start planting.

The Bayonet Contest Was Signal Success

The BAYONET takes great pleasure in announcing the names of those soldiers of Fort Benning who were adjudged the winners in this paper's big War Bond and Stamp contest and extends to them our heartiest congratulations.

The contest was highly successful and the work submitted was of a very high calibre indeed. It would be carrying coals to Newcastle to state that the editors and those Columbus businessmen who served as judges enjoy reviewing the entries immensely.

We would like to avail ourselves of this opportunity to extend our note of thanks publically to the judges who took time from their daily work to cooperate with the BAYONET in this contest. The entries were numerous, especially in the field of poetry. More than 300 selections were offered for the judges' consideration, and this took a great deal of time and patience.

We also desire to thank the hundreds of soldiers who participated and urge them to continue sending in their contributions. The BAYONET will continue to publish their work and will also continue the award of our weekly prize of two dollars to the best poem, cartoon, and original contribution published.

As a parting word, we would like to suggest that winners of war bonds add their awards to their collection of bonds for the duration. Those who won stamps would do well to buy the stamps necessary to fill out the album and convert them into bonds.

We Shall Keep Our Faith In America Unbroken

1st Prize, Essays

In an article to my newspaper several years ago, I mentioned our "Erstwhile Peace." Today we have no peace. We are at war.

In that article I quoted from Col. John McRae's famous poem "In Flanders Fields." Again I quote—

"To you, from falling hands we throw
The Torch, Be yours to hold it high,
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep, though Poppies grow
In Flanders Fields."

We have seen fit once more to engage in mortal combat with that same enemy and their fiendish allies. The spirits of Colin Kelly, Buzz Wagner and many other unnamed, unsung heroes have proved beyond infinite doubt that that torch is held high.

Though the poppies in Flanders Fields have wilted and died from the smoke of renewed battle, the souls of those long-dead heroes still rest in peace, and that peace shall not be broken. They sleep, knowing that their lives, laid on the Altar of Liberty, have not been given in vain. We shall carry to greater glory, to a more lasting eternity, the power and peace that is America.

We shall fight unendingly, to win and preserve that peace, that we may say to our children, "This is your heritage—a free and peaceful world." We fight, too, that our mothers, wives and sweethearts may walk without fear in the security of that freedom. That they may not know the oppression, agony and hopeless finality of mastered slavery.

To Col. McCrae we answer, "We have not failed, nor shall we close our hearts to the Prayer you gave, but we shall continue in the Grace of God, to give our all, that the dreams of all Americans may never be deluded."

Joe Knows Exactly What He Fights For

2nd Prize, Essays

Much has been said and written about the Atlantic Charter and the Four Freedoms; about Vice President Wallace's famous "bottle of milk"; about a plethora of other enunciations and declarations setting forth war aims and postwar planning. In turn, these have met with cries of "Globaloney" and "foolish Utopianism," and other outbursts of subtle, and harsh ridicule.

Naturally, this tends to confuse Private Joe Blisterfoot, U. S. Army. It all sounds vague and indefinite, in an abstract sort of way.

Now, Joe is the all-American Small Guy, a spawn of the dizzy Roaring Twenties. He was pushed around plenty during the depression. He smoked Bull Durham quirlies and wore two-bit haircuts. He loafed on street corners and hunted possum because he couldn't find anything to do. People whispered ugly things about him and said he didn't belong; they were sorry for him. But Joe didn't quit, because that was alien to his nature.

Today, a crushed, frightened world looks to Joe to maintain the feeble light of liberty and freedom—even for life itself.

And what does victory mean to Joe?

It means a mother's warm smile and spicy apple pie; it means teasing the kid sister and her bashful beau; a cool bottle of beer when day is done; a doubleheader and a bleacher seat in the sun in Brooklyn; the smell of new mown hay on the west forty acres in Kansas.

It means raiding Mom's icebox with the rest of the gang at midnight; it means denouncing the waste and inefficiency at Washington, then scrimping and saving to pay his income tax; it means a group of housewives exchanging choicy bits of gossip over the backyard fence at noon.

It means a long-winded orator spouting profusely on a hot Fourth of July afternoon; it means a hilarious tug-of-war between the married and single men at the Elks' picnic; it means the sun rising over Hogback Mountain, then slipping slowly, like a giant nickel in a slot machine, beyond the western hills; it means a tiny cotton patch in Virginia.

To Joe, victory means ham comedians cracking corny jokes over the radio; a billowing wheat field in the middle west; a pretty girl caught in a gust of wind, skirts blowing high; Pennsylvania's golden hills in an Indian summer setting; crickets chirping merrily near the garden pond; mission bells ringing out "The Angelus" over a sleepy California town.

Joe isn't afflicted with delusions of grandeur, nor is he seeking personal aggrandisement. He doesn't even consider himself a hero.

Instead, he only wants the simple, homey things—typically American things—because they are his heritage.

These are the things worth fighting for, Joe figures, as he continues slugging away in training camp and in combat zone.

Fort Benning Plants A Huge Victory Garden

The good news from the local home front is that the Fort Benning post exchange is planting a huge victory garden on a 50 acre tract located southwest of Lawson Field on the Ferry Road. From this soil will come fresh vegetables with which to supply the boards of the families of military personnel stationed at Fort Benning.

The garden will be under the direct supervision of Major Alexander H. Veasey, assistant exchange officer, and planting will go on during the spring, summer, and early fall.

All post officials who are giving their backing to this worthwhile project are to be congratulated. Families on the post will be enabled to guard their precious rationing points and fill out their meals only when necessary from the proceeds of the small but important coupons. Meanwhile those who have small plots available for victory gardens would do well to emulate this project.

More than vegetables come out of a victory garden. There is wholesome exercise, neighborliness with the gardener next door, and the fresh clean power and outlook drawn from simple things which set us walking and breathing freely once more.

The more fresh food we raise at home the more we can send to our fighting boys and our hungry allies, the more each of our homes will have to eat. Victory gardening is not only a national service, it is a world necessity.

The soil which we can pick up in handfuls and run through our fingers is worth more than gold. It is our basic wealth. For those who have gotten away from the soil and for those who never could leave it, the pleasure of growing things is the same. Whether we have a ten-by-ten garden plot or a 100 acres the rich spiritual rewards of the soil are the same. One man called gardening "a constructive job in a destructive age."

As America gets back her love for the soil, she gets back her deepest national strength. The soil re-enacts the miracle of Easter under our very eyes. As we come to love the soil, we begin to remember God.

"Earth is God's living workman. Age by age Abundantly it turns death into life."

Garden clubs, newspapers, radio stations can furnish attractive instructions to the new gardener and helpful hints to the experienced gardener. The other qualifications of a victory gardener are hard work, patience and love of America. These are the qualities that made America great. These same qualifities in all of us will make her victorious.

An ideal may stand forever but a nation never stays put. It must constantly grow closer to its ideal or it will surely fall away from it.

We strongly guard today the ideals we took too lightly yesterday. Yet even now they can die within the circle of our guard unless we regard them highly enough to live them.

For a noble vision to come true, somebody will have to start living nobly.

Faith doesn't come along by itself, like the next bus or trolley car. You have to go after it. It takes hard work to really believe in something.

Life is interlocked these days. No one can fail at living without causing a collapse in someone else.

USO Presents—

LESSON IN ARGENTINE TANGO AND NEW HOSTESS HOUR PROGRAM

By PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

"Muchas gracias" was the reply from Benning's boys when classes in expert instruction in the Latin dances was inaugurated at the Ninth Street USO Monday night. . . . Instructor is Joe Dayan, who formerly gave exhibitions in New York and taught the intricacies of the Argentine tango . . . Now director of the Columbus Civic theater, he has volunteered his services to the USO . . . Besides the "one, two, three, kick" his classes which start at 8 p. m. Fort Benning time will also include ballroom dancing for both beginners and advanced pupils.

Capt. Richard Bregren of the Salvation Army USO in Phenix City announces that the center has bid adieu to genial George Hardin as program director . . . New director there is Mrs. Kathleen Smith, who comes to the USO with six years' experience in recreation work . . . Mr. Hardin's leave was due to pressing duties in his other jobs. . . . A new feature at the Phenix City USO is the Wednesday night "Soldier Sings" at 8 p. m. (EWT) to piano accompaniment . . . Incidentally the largest turnout in the history of the club was present for the recent minstrel show given by Fort Benning's colored reception center.

A home hospitality program for Easter is being arranged by the USO clubs in Columbus and Phenix City . . . Soldiers who would enjoy having a meal on Easter Sunday in a private home are urged to register immediately at their favorite center . . . Plans call for the event to be as important as the home hospitality program was last Thanksgiving Day.

A new feature at the Ninth Street USO is 'the Hostess Hour Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6 p. m. (EWT) . . . Mrs. W. B. Scanlon is chairman and soldier guests will partake of refreshments, nibble cookies and rather around the fireside in the main clubroom. Word has it that there will be no hearth fire when the mercury juts above 75 degrees.

Now an aircraft tool maker, Alfred Thissi's desire to share his enjoyment of woodcarving and novelty making as a hobby with others has led to the classes at the Ninth Street USO Wednesdays at 8:30 p. m. (EWT) . . . Specializing in plastics, he states the making of lapel ornaments and other small "knick-knacks" can arouse an intense interest and at the same time provide the craftsman with a sense of accomplishment.

• • •

"Just US," a USO newspaper circulated among soldiers, volunteer workers and professional workers, has made its appearance . . . Edited by Janet Rastall it is reported as being "an expression of the appreciation of the total USO activities."

Bus Riders Pity Sardine

GAS RATIONING RESULTS IN CLOSER CONTACT FOR ALL CLASSES OF PEOPLE

The American people do not mind making sacrifices when they make them for a good cause, patriotism for example. When they were told that it would be necessary to restrict to absolute needs the operation of their motors cars and use public transportation instead they accepted the edict good-naturedly and patriotically.

Restrictions on the use of cars through curtailment in the gasoline supply brought to large cities and boom towns the perplexing problem of transporting people back and forth from home to work. Columbus is one of the many "army" towns so affected.

Before gas rationing, the local buses were used by those financially unable to buy and support the maintenance of an automobile which includes family servants and the casual rider who owned a car but rode the buses at times for the novelty of the thing.

Because of the gasoline shortage, everybody in Columbus and at Fort Benning unable to arrange "pool-the-ride" transportation is now resorting to the bus as their only means of transportation.

Now this might have been just cause for resentment on the part of those who had been regular patrons of the local bus lines all their lives. Here were soldiers and soldiers' wives, bankers and newspaper publishers, merchants and public officials, all with shiny (?) cars parked in their garages because of the demands of war, all crowding into public conveyances which the non-car owner had come to regard with possessiveness because of daily use and a quirk of the human mind.

Rather than resentment these people have come to regard the matter with amusement for here these formerly fortunate people were no better off than the man without a private car.

The situation has brought to Columbus a parallel with conditions in the large cities during the rush hours when subways, "L's," and buses are packed to the limit. During the rush hours in Columbus people are being packed into buses like sardines in a can.

The story is told that the other day a bus was so crowded with human flesh that a woman sneezed and broke the ribs of the man standing next to her! A fat man packed in a bus was forced to draw in his stomach for all of this minutes he was travelling from East Wynnton to North Highland in order to make room for his neighbors. After dismounting

THE GLORY OF PETER PAN

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

Some think Barrie's Peter Pan a tragedy and not something to glory in. It could be so interpreted. The people who never grow up, who refuse to take on the burdens of maturity, who always travel on a child's ticket, are not of great value to a community.

The trouble is most of us grow too far up. The spirit of youth, trust, laughter, adventure, disappears. We become hard, cynical. Our state is Missouri.

Now there is a place for Peter Pan in life—a place for the lad, who "always wanted to be a little boy, and have fun."

"I called the boy to my knee one day
And I said: 'You've just past four,
Will you laugh in the same light-hearted way
When you've turned, say, thirty more?'
Then I thought of a past I'd erase—
More clouded skies than blue—
And I anxiously peered in his upturned face
For it seemed to say: 'Did you?' "

Blessed are those who still stay young as their years grow long. And if the boy in you has gone and age is taking its toll, look up the poem, "The Boys," by Oliver Wendell Holmes, written for a reunion of his college classmates.

Has any old fellow got mixed with the boys,
If there has, take him out without making a noise.
Then here's to our boyhood,
It's gold and its gray,
The stars of its winter, the dews of its May,
And when we have done with our life-lasting toys
Dear Father, take care of Thy children, the boys.

Kay Says—

YEAR'S AT THE SPRING AND 'TIS BEAUTIFUL ALL OVER GOD'S EARTH

Recently we had a visitor from the middle west, here for her first taste of the south. Unfortunately, during the two weeks she was here, we had one of those unceasing spring rains with which some of us are familiar. Our visitor, we feel sure, went away convinced that Georgia is a damp and uncomfortable place.

On the other hand, we have a friend who is in agonies of dread at the prospect of moving out to South Dakota, a state which she feels must be beyond the bounds of civilization. The prospect of doing all her own work appals her; visions of endless plains terrify her.

PROVINCIALS AT HEART

Perhaps we're all provincial, in our own way. Our home town and our home state look best, and it is with great reluctance that we admit the advantages of any other locality. The wife from New York, lauding the merits of Macy's, has no idea that she is as provincial in her way as the girl who longs for the comfortable friendliness of her favorite store in Oshkosh.

Sit back and settle down into your environment, and you find that any place in these United States can be an enjoyable place to live. The sun rising over the great plains of the Dakotas is the same sun you watch coming up over the Rocky Mountains, and just as magnificent a spectacle. Spring, whether it comes with breath-taking suddenness as it does in the south, or with slow reluctance, is a season to be enjoyed to the utmost before the onset of summer.

LOVELY SPRING

There are those of us who miss the great stretches of prairie, the bustle of a large city, the sight of snow capped mountains, or the sound of surf along a sandy beach. Find your compensation in the startling loveliness of the dogwood in blossom, or the later beauty of the magnolia tree. Listen to the soft whirring of insects in the grass and trees during a summer night. Take time to investigate the violets found in Georgia woods, or smell the odor of pine knots drifting from Georgia fires.

You'll find yourself so busy gathering new impressions you won't have time to feel that twinge of longing for the place you call home.

COL. SWAMPWATER PUTS VILLA BEHIND 8-BALL WITH BILLIARDS

3rd Prize, Essays

It's quite comfortable up here in our office once you get comfortable. It was with this thought in mind that I planted my right ankle over my left ankle, which was in an oblique position on my desk, when General Quagmire's "aide de camp," Second Lieutenant Jericho hastily made his appearance.

"Sergeant!" he quacks, "I beg audience with Colonel T. P. Swampwater."

"Yes, Sir," I drawled, almost turning over my swivel chair in my haste to get up, "Right this way!"

As we entered, the Colonel gave us a dirty look and hastily shoved a copy of Spicy Tales into the drawer of his desk.

"Lt. Antonio Jericho, aide de camp to General Quagmire, to see you, Sir," I announced.

"Yes, Sir," pipes up Lt. Jericho, "I have come to deliver a message to you, Sir."

"Speak forth, Lieutenant," encouraged the Colonel, offering him a stick of his precious chewing gum, a fact that rather surprised me as he usually reserved this token of hospitality for the "higher brass."

"Thank you, Sir," continued Lt. Jericho. "My immediate superior, Sir, desires your presence at a poker game to be given at your quarters on pay day night.

"Shades of Salome, Lieutenant! I must comply, but 'off the record,' I am extremely vexed. I lost two dollars the last time Quagmire pulled his rank on me. But tell him I'll be there. I place duty abpve personal sacrifice."

"Yes, Sir, I'm sorry, Sir, but I shall tell him, Sir," replied Lt. Jericho, saluting his way out.

As soon as he had gone, ol' T. P. turned to me and said, "Sergeant, that young fellow has a promising future as an officer. Did you hear him call me 'Sir'?"

"Yes, Sir," I replied.

"Well, all he needs is a little campaign experience and he'll really be a credit to the Army."

"Yes, Sir," I added.

"There's nothing like field experience, Sergeant, nothing like it. In spite of that incredulous look in your eye I haven't always been an "office officer." I was once the pride of Pershing's Mexican Infantry, an unsung hero of the Mexican rebellion."

"How was that, Sir?"

"Well, General Pershing, my immediate commander, had left me and my platoon holding a deserted village in the thick of the campaign against Pancho Villa.

"This village was fourteen miles from where the main body was battling what they supposed was the bulk of Villas' forces, but old Pancho was a wild strategist; it seemed he had sneaked out of the battle and was racing toward my village with a troop of his best cavalry for a surprise thrust at Pershing's flank. Young Douglas MacArthur had warned Pershing of this threat but the General had ignored it and proceeded to tell MacArthur that the only thing in the village of any value was the Double X Saloon which had been deserted by the Mexicans during the first American advance. Besides its long bar still stocked with wine, the main furniture consisted of several billiard tables.

"But why take Swampwater out the battle, Sir?" adds MacArthur, "he did all right at the siege of Turkey Creek, didn't he?"

"He did until he got his feet wet," replied the General, "that's why I'm giving him this mission." The General was always having his little joke.

"It was with this command singing in my earth that I stood at the Double X bar to await developments. My mess sergeant and one of the corporals were shooting pool and the rest of the men were in position for Villa's sudden charge from a hill at the lower end of town.

"After Villa had cut loose with several volleys, I ran out to give my orders to my platoon, while Villa's unit was reloading.

"I shouted my command: 'Ready or the right! ready on the left! ready on the firing line! Villa is charging! FIRE!' Then I ran back into the saloon to finish my drink and note the accuracy of my artillery.

"Things went admirably well for two hours. Villa would charge, firing as he went, and while he reloaded I would go out and adjust my fire. Scores of Villa's men were killed and a few of mine went over the hill. But suddenly the crisis arrived. As Villa mustered his remaining forces for a last desperate charge, one of my squad leaders ran up to inform me that we were out of ammunition and what was the School solution?

"Hell, Sergeant," I replied, "as I remember you must fire anything handy. Go get those billiard balls and fire them."

"Yes, Sir," he said, and ran to get the billiard balls and prepared for the coming charge. Down the long sloping hill charges the forces of Pancho Villa with clouds of dust rolling behind them.

"My men were eager to let 'em have it but I yelled "don't fire until you see the whites of their eyes!" and suddenly they must have seen them for our guns cut loose with a deafening roar and as the smoke cleared away, I saw that the victory was ours.

"Majestically, I congratulated my men, and strolled back into the saloon to pour myself another drink, extremely proud that I had finally got Pancho Villa behind the "eight ball."

"Well, that's all for now, Sergeant, but will you call the officers' club physician and make an appointment for him to massage my saluting arm."

"Yes, Sir," I replied strolling dutifully to the telephone, and at the same time being fully cognizant of the perplexing profundities of my leader's life."

HOW HIGH THE STARS

How high the stars
And yet the moon is low.
How high is man
Yet little does he know.

How short is life
Yet full of everything.
How strange is death
And yet a common thing.

How Great is God,
Yet simple is His plan.
"Peace on this earth
"Good will to every man."

How small we are
Yet great our destiny.
How high the stars
Yet near for you and me.

For Once in a Lifetime Two Wrongs Make Right

BY PVT. COLEMAN C. MOSEB, Div. HQ, 10th A. D.

Well, I suppose you could say Private M. S. (Stands for "Military Secret") Thomson, committed two wrongs; but you'd have to be an old military man to have developed such a strange concept of ethics. Only a very stuffy civilian would have been annoyed in the first place and not even a really stuffy one would have expected to exact any part of a pound of flesh from poor old "Military Secret."

I haven't any idea who reads stories these days. The soldiers are much too busy—those who can read. And civilians have little time to read anything except ration coupons and the instructions as to how they should be used. So there isn't any explanation why magazines should be doing a better business than ever before—unless the fuel shortage can be a partial explanation. But here is one story someone ought to read because it is so silly and yet so pathetic.

You see "Old M. S." was one of the conscientious, patriotic, earnest, well-intentioned old guys who felt he should take his part in this country's war. He had a war job in an airplane factory. He had a wife who was patriotic enough to be working too, and he had a child, a son 12 years old, whom he stuffed into boarding school so the whole damn family could go to war. He was well educated and had obviously been around long enough to know the score in spite of appearances to the contrary. He wouldn't have been drafted until Hitler landed in the Battery in Lower Manhattan.

His reasons for volunteering were so queer that even the draft board should have suspected his mental capacity. Think of it! He actually said the reason why he got in the Army was because he had known the war was coming for many years and since neither he nor any of his generation had done what they should or could to prevent it, then it was far more his duty to fight the war than some kid 19 or 20 years old who was still mewling at whatever-kids mewl at when the international scramble got off the track. Sure he blames lots of people for letting the war happen, but he's first one I have run into who blames himself most of all.

SANTA ON KEAKI

He's been here with the rest of us, pushing his round little forty-year-old body over the same long dusty roads as the rest, looking like a khaki Santa Claus with his pack on. He did all right, too. Never out front, but never last either. And the dope even volunteered for extra duty when the Sergeant started picking out volunteers. His explanation for doing this was all of a piece with the rest of his strange philosophy of human behavior. He simply said when asked why he volunteered, "Well, I'd rather do something than nothing—and I might accidentally learn something about soldiering at the same time." What could you do with a guy like that, except shrug and smile?

There it is. Wrong No. 1: He never should have been in the Army.

Wrong No. 2 was a direct and completely inevitable result of the first wrong.

If you know the Army at all, it will not surprise you to learn that he was one of about 20 selected from our company to go over to Division Classification a couple of weeks ago. The whole bunch were pretty excited; because I don't care who you are or wheer you are in the Army, you always feel you belong somewhere else and are only being kept where you are out of sheer malice on the part of your top sergeant. I guess the sergeant knows this as well as anyone. He was human once. And this time he was human enough to give "M. S." a chance—or what he thought was a chance. Like all the rest of us, M. S. thought he could do better elsewhere, and his ambition was to get into the Air Corps to take part in the development work on the Halicopter (look it up—it's not unlike the Ornithorincus Paradoxus in its versatility). Of course, he could have stayed with Mr. Sikorsky at six times his present salary, but why go into that.

On the day above mentioned, he went off with the rest, standing in an open truck with a smile in his eyes and laughter on his lips—no different from all the others, and therefore not particularly noticeable. But it was a shame the sergeant's one attack of humanity in the last two months wasn't also tempered with a bit more knowledge. The blow wouldn't have struck quite so hard otherwise. You can say he had to wake up sometime and you'd be right. But it is always a shame to see a nice sleep roughly broken off. If you need proof of this, drop in for reveille any nice, cold, rainy morning.

ROSE TINTED GLASSES

When these soldiers finally got to the Classification Center, they were given a glowing picture of a speedy advancement open to all who went to school for 13 weeks under the Army Specialist Training programme. It sounded beautiful—and it was beautiful. But there were certain negligible conditions which had to be met to get consideration. You have heard of the Army's minimum requirements. One group 18-22 only had to have graduated from High School. The others, had to have one year of college. With a masters degree behind him, M. S. felt pretty cocky. The lad on the platform, announcing from under his nice shiny lieutenant's bars, pricked the bubble of hope for fair. The joker! The age limit was 38. About a dozen got up and walked over the feet of their neighbors to the aisles, turned in their questionnaires, and walked out. They were a pretty disappointed lot. Some had been drafted but more had volunteered and all were doing a lot of wondering why.

You can bet it took a lot of moral strain even for M.S. to get himself back into the frame of mind where he thought he was doing the best he could for his country when he had just had his dear old Uncle Sam slam the door of advancement in his face.

Maybe Uncle is right and knowledge and experience together with a spirit willing and eager to serve do not balance youth when it comes to war. But it is hard for an older man to see the reason, when he has lived all his life in a world where those human attributes were always considered the first requisites of success.

The Classification Center is a good two miles away from our barracks. I guess you can imagine what a long and lonesome road that must have been to M. S. that particular day. The bright sunshine and the faint smell of the tall, straight pines along the way weren't so invigorating as they had been on the way over. He had a long skinny bird with him who was in the same category, and I imagine they spoke cheerfully enough, but I rather suspect the words came from a different part of the mind from that strange Gethsemane where most of existence takes place.

WASN'T WORRIED

When they got as far as the Headquarters buildings where they both worked, M. S. made the excuse that he had to get something and went off by himself. John Maklin, the long lad, came back by himself. He did enough nervous pacing up and down the barracks to indicate that the termites were pretty busy guzzling his gizzard too. But he wasn't worried about "Military Secret" Thomason. He wasn't even surprised that M. S. didn't show for chow—he often ate at the PX. But we were all surprised when he came in so late and was obviously so upset.

It took a bit of doing, but we finally got the story, and it is really the damnedest picture of an absent-minded professor act you ever heard of. It did nobody any harm; but this is the Army, Mr. Jones; also Mr. Thomason. It seems he was wandering about lonesome as Wordsworth's much publicised cloud when his unguided or misguided feet took him to the parking lot where the Big Boys leave their trundle buggies. There was a long green job standing there—it stands there every day. Why shouldn't it; it belongs to Major Hanford of G3 Air. Maybe Major Hanford of G-3 Air. Maybe Hanford and the Air Corps or maybe, as he says, he wasn't thinking at all.

MAYBE SO, MAYBE NOT

He had just walked two miles and maybe he just wanted to sit down, as he says. Maybe he has a car exactly like that Green Job—there is no reason to doubt his statement on that. And there was nothing really wrong in his sitting there behind the wheel. I have an idea that his subconscious—if not his unconscious—had quietly picked him up and carried him back to sit in his own car to wait for his wife who was getting the kid fitted for a pair of shoes, or a football. But in this case, the subconscious rather overdid its benign function. It left him there long enough on his imaginary shopping tour or his trip through his own green Connecticut hills for the Major to get tired of looking at the Sergeant and feel thirsty.

"Military Secret" was gracious enough to invite the Major to get in when he finally saw him standing beside the car. He was reaching over to open the door like a true host when the enormity of his predicament flowed down over him with a sudden return of awareness of the present. As the downflow of truth bathed him from head to foot his heart squirted blood to every exposed portion of his body from fot to head. Shock and shame left him sitting there for a second with his hand on the inner door handle and his goggle-eyed face stretched after it. In any honest contest he would have taken all prizes from even the fanciest gold fish. Such color, such beautifully bugged eyes, such a kind expression on his gasping mouth—even the gill palpitation, where the pulse beat in his throat.

POSTERITY'S LOSS

We don't know what the Major said. That is lost to posterity, I regret to have to report; but the ghostly appearance of M. S. was evidence that it must have been good. The pity of it all is that it might have been really epic and now we'll never know. Even if the Major has another charge left in him of such proportions, he may never be given sufficient of a jolt to bring it out. Too bad.

M. S. himself, pointed out that he could have said the lights had been left on and he just got in to turn them off. But he didn't. All he did was reel off, in a mad jumble, everything that had been uppermost in his mind. Somehow it did not strike a chord of sympathy in the Major under the circumstances. Noblesse was simply overflowing with disoblige. And M. S. was in a whale of a sweat about the horrible consequences.

It just so happened that Hq. was full of problems and stuff that the General had had shown to him by Divine Guidance in a recent nightmare; so for the next few days all the Higher Ups were flying about like crazy. This delayed the inevitable fall of the merciful axe on the neck of "Military Secret".

HORRIBLE SUSPENSE

You may well believe that during those horrible days of suspense M. S. got a complete conception of what a war of nerves really meant. By the time word finally came that he should report front and center, he was just a gelatinous, quivering mass. But by going carefull on all fours he made it to The Presence.

Of course, we were all pretty curious and stood about doing nothing even more than usual, so we could catch the body as it came hurtling through the door. Time stretched out and out until we were in almost as bad a state as M. S. However bad our state, chow is still chow, so we didn't witness the emergence. The Major was gone in the afternoon and so was M. S. All we could do was to speculate on the horror of his fate. We had him in the Guard House, court-martialed, dishonorably discharged, even swinging gently at the end of a rope. There were no blood stains on the Major's floor nor any spots that had been freshly scrubbed, however.

SO WE WONDERED

So we wondered. And as we wondered we began to bear down on the injustice of the Army which would first slap a guy so hard he was out on his feet, and then penalize him for being in that condition. Good sense finally got the best of our speculations and we felt pretty sure everything would be all right as we walked home to barracks at five-thirty.

Having got ourselves into so complacent a humour by the time we got to barracks, our show and horror and real anger were almost at a danger point when we discovered the gap in our line of bunks where M. S. used to sleep. This meant just one thing—the guard house. All his clothes and bedding turned in at Supply meant a pretty long sentence.

It can tell you it looked to us more like mean malice than Army discipline, and it gaves those who hate the Army anyway plenty of chance to shoot off their faces. It shut up those who customarily argue the point in good-natured disagreement. But because they had to take it without answering, they were getting pretty sore and, for the lack of arguments, resorted to personalities; so that after a bit the place was a seething mass of hate, very near the point of physical expression—fisticuffs to you. Voices, never too refined, were raised to the proverbial pitch of fishwife. Nobody cared thatour family quarrels were being broadcast through the whole company area. Everybody was neutral in this battle of nit-wits.

Just as the hoofs began to paw the dust and the heads began to sink toward the ground, waving slowly from side to side; just as the eyes became evompletely mad with blood lust, who should skip into this charged atmosphere in calm and cheerful unawareness but the "Military Secret" himself! We were all so furious at each other that we weren't even surprised to see him. We had forgotten what had started us off. But here was the cause all dressed in Class A. O.D's, complete with overcoast, waving a paper and all but dancing.

I won't keep you waiting and I won't bother to explain. He had his transfer to the Air Corps.

Do two wrongs make a right?

Swiss O.C. Declares Reich Not Beaten Yet

Hitler, Not People, Will Decide Time Ripe For Surrender

Germany is far from being defeated and will not give up until actually invaded, according to Officer Candidate Maurice Wyss, of 28th Company, Second Student Training Regiment, who was born in Switzerland and lived there for 17 years until he came to the United States.

Basing his observations on early contacts with German students and travels in Europe, Wyss believes the German state of mind is far different than it was when the nation collapsed in 1918.

"It is dangerous for us to think that 'Germany wallows in defeat.' She will not be defeated until our armies have crossed her borders," Wyss declares. "We are not up against a mere 'mopping up' situation in Europe. We must expect to make heavy sacrifices."

GERMANY STRONG

Stating that Germany is in a stronger military and economic position than she was in the last war, Wyss says that "the Kaiser was no Hitler," and that "not the 'thinking' people of Germany, but Hitler will decide whether Germany shall fight on."

"Obviously," Wyss continues, "Hitler has everything to lose if he gives up now. And he still has plenty left to fight with."

"Ordnung" (order) symbolizes the mentality of the German people more than any other word, according to Wyss, who says the word has very far reaching connotations in the German mind. As an example, he points to the "New Order."

Deflating the idea that "thinking people" in Germany are tired of Hitler, Wyss decliares it appears to be a fact that as regards national ambition and the desire for "order" there is no difference between a thinking and an unthinking German.

REPUBLICANS TURN NAZI

Wyss relates that in the early 1930's he was well acquainted with a group of German intellectuals—professors and graduate students at a leading university, who had just visited Chancellor Bruning, one of the last leaders of the German republic, and were not unfavorably disposed toward the Weimer republic. A few months later, after Hitler had come to power, Wyss states these same lukewarm republicans had turned into enthusiastic Nazis.

In the summer of 1937, a German engineer who represented "young Germany" at its best told Wyss, when questioned if Germany's policy would lead to war, "That is not for me or my fellow Germans to worry about. Our Feuhrer decides for us and we know that he will act for the best interests of the Reich."

Such statements and reactions from "thinking" Germans have convinced the Swiss officer candidate that the will of Germany is not the will of the people but of Hitler alone, and that we should not expect a crack-up in Germany until we have crossed the Rhine.

Japanese prisoners on Guadalcanal called the P-39 Airacobra "the long nose airplane." Some of them admitted that they feared intensely this "long nose" when flown by United States Air Forces pilots.

Army life is brand new to Pvt. Andrew Jenkins of Leesburg, Ga., which he describes as "nothing but a little town of five or six stores."

"To a man that's been farming all his days drilling and all that stuff is hard to catch on," he explains.

Private Jenkins is strong and tall with long arms and big muscles that bulge and work visibly under his black skin when he tightens his hands about the handle of his shovel. He is twice married and has a son of 13 who "works like a man."

The tall private has spent his first week in service at the Reception Center among many hundreds like him completing induction processes and awaiting transferal to training areas.

Sergt. Dewey Edward Chester of Reception Center Headquarters' record section has an amazing memory. He is chief clerk in the locator file section and a former insurance salesman of Cuthbert, Ga.

Recently the frantic voice of an officer came through the section telephone asking the whereabouts of a Pvt. Freddie Edenfield. "He was shipped, sir, on Special orders 289, Paragraph 8, to Fort Knox, Kentucky," Sgt. Chester returned promptly.

Together with five assistants his job is to locate records at any time any of the more than 100,000 selectees who have passed through the Reception Center in the past two years.

Sgt. Chester has been in the army 25 months and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester B. Chester, Sr., of Cuthbert. A brother, Milton E. Chester, was inducted recently. Both are in Headquarters company, Reception Center.

Pvt. Lewis Walton, Jr., of Waverly Hall, Ga., never had a pair of shoes to fit him in all his 23 years, he explained to outfitters at Reception Center's quartermaster division. Officers studied the situation and called on the area supply division for help. Result: A special shoe was made for Pvt. Walton, size 6-GF, which is nearly as wide as it is long by actual measure.

The soldier has six toes on each foot. However, the normal activity of his feet is not obviously impaired. He expects to become an expert rifleman.

Pittsburgh, Pa.— (INS) — Proboscis clearing (nose blowing to you) caused a fight in a trolley as the car entered South Hills tunnel here. E. M. Williams poked Elmer Mullen on the schnozzola when the latter blew his nose. When the car emerged from the tunnel both men were arrested. Williams complained that he never boarded a car or bus but what someone blew their beak, coughed or sneezed in his face or down the back of his neck. The fisticuffs cost him ten bucks in magistrate's

EVANSTON, Ill.—(CNS) — A middle-aged, well-dressed woman entered her ration board headquarters and demanded an extra ration book. "I have 17 cats," she explained, "and they all need canned cat food and milk." She was refused.

O. C. Relates Adventure Midst Submarine Pack

Men Remain Calm But Clammy From Dripping In Oil

By O. C. JOHN F. MEKLAS 1st STR.

All of us have heard of the destructive wrath of the Nazi submarine, but Candidate Harold Nelson of 18th Co., 1st Student Training regiment, has actually felt the impact of swastica draped torpedoes.

"Yet those tin fish did not stop our ships as they were designed to do. In fact, it makes us more stubbornly determined and persistent to carry out our mission."

Candidate Nelson was quartermaster and part of a gun crew on a convoy bound for points east and west. The crew manned 5-50s used in submarine defense. Morale-Builders was their adopted name and rightfully so. Face to face with a submarine and BANG! No sub.

There were twenty-one ships in the convoy. After leaving an Eastern port some of the ships were dropped in the vicinity of Key West. The ship on which Candidate Nelson was a member of the crew, proceeded to a Carribean port. Sixty miles out of the port a tenseness gripped the crew. Some strange and prophetic feeling possessed every member. Yes, these were dangerous waters, yet eagerly and with a "bring them on" attitude, the crew, with the exception of the watches, went below for some rest.

Just before dawn the men were shaken out of their bunks, the ship stopped in her tracks as if a huge cliff had been placed in her path. By this time everyone knew what had happened. Through it all a collected and cool mentality was maintained. Then another crash; a second torpedo.

The crew managed to get to life boats with only one casualty. A third torpedo split the water near the life boat Nelson was in and struck the boat amidship. Score: One U. S. ship in flames and all men temporarily safe in life boats.

There were eleven men in the life boat with Nelson. Not frightened, not unnerved, just clammy with oil. After thirteen days in a life boat, with provisions practically exhausted and not a cigarette to be had, the spark of hope for rescue was burning low. Then late on the fourteenth day, a freighter picked up the crew and returned them safely to American shores.

The rescued men went immediately to the Maritime Service. There they could sign up for subsequent trips, which they did. Some of those lads are yet defying the Nazi and fighting the Battle of the Atlantic with all of their bodies and souls: forever believing in and hoping for the day of reckoning. The others have found various methods to continue the fight.

Candidate Nelson will obviously repay the enemy their just desserts from the Infantry front: the unconquerable front.

Night-Duty Officer Runs Gamut Of Pathos-Bathos

Locates Diapers, Reunites Sons With Parents, Lectures Derelicts

SUBJECT: Night duty.
TO: First Lt. John Doe.

1. This will notify you that you have been detailed on duty at this headquarters for the period from 1730 EWT, April 8, 1943, to 0830 EWT, April 9, 1943. One enlisted man will be on duty ao assist you with this detail.

This is the harmless sounding first paragraph of an order received about every fortnight by members of the station complement assigned to headquarters at Fort Benning. No matter what the officer's regular duties may be, for the night he has the job of an assistant adjutant and sees to it that all necessary action is taken in an emergency.

The events of the night may be commonplace; they may be hectic, and again they may be emotionally dramatic.

WHERE'S A DIAPER?

Take for example one junior officer on duty recently who received an emergency call from one of the hostess houses demanding some diapers in a hurry. Where in the world was he to get them at midnight? Harried after several fruitless calls here and there, the happy thought struck him to try the Red Cross. He "dooed it," and in a short while, the baby, the mother, the Red Cross, and the officer were all happy again.

Sometimes the man on night duty must find quarters for a new unit being sent in and this generally occurs at 2 a. m., when the unit was not expected until noon of the next day. If the unit is a small one, some place can generally be found to house the men—but when it's several hundred men, it's a mighty hard chore.

HEAVY TOLLS

On one occasion a St. Paul, Minn., police department official called to check on his son who was supposed to have completed an OCS—but had neglected to tell the home folks whether he had made the grade. The enlisted man always on duty with the officer happened to be from St. Paul and the two merrily passed the time of day—or night. The soldier wanted to know all the news of home while the police official was so excited about finding somebody who actually knew his son that he babbled on and on. Later he called the operator and asked what the call cost him. "Nine dollars and 76 cents, sir," she said sweetly.

On another occasion an irate woman seeking her officer husband refused to believe that he was not within whistling distance and hung on for nearly half an hour, calling from Louisville, Ky. Her bill must have been terrific.

Nothing gives the night duty officer a bigger kick than having been instrumental in reuniting a soldier with some member of his family.

Last Christmas Eve a father and mother, the latter wearing three silver service stars, drifted into headquarters. They were on their way to an Alabama camp to visit a son, and en route the happy idea occurred to them to buy a son stationed at Benning some extra Yule gifts and deliver them in person. They had driven far off their charted course, but, when they got here, all they could remember was that this son was an officer candidate.

JOY AND GLOOM

With just this wee bit of information, the duty officer began his round of phone calls. The results of his calls were reflected on the faces of the anxious parents, first joy, then gloom, then joy again. The target was hit after the eighth or ninth call with the information that the son would be on his way to join his parents in half an hour. It was a lucky break for all concerned as the soldier was preparing to leave for town to spend Christmas Eve with friends.

Others have not been so lucky. Officers have known relatives to follow an impulse and hop a bus for Benning to see a son or nephew upon failing to hear from him in several weeks.

Recently an uncle and a brother rode all night on a bus from Macon to see a soldier who had been sent to Benning from Hawaii. Bedraggled and worn, they walked into headquarters at dawn asking for Bill. The usual calls to the APO and other headquarters followed. Finally it was learned that the soldier had been transferred to another post. No graphic description is adequate enough to paint the disappointment written on the faces of those two weary men.

"I WANT TOM"

Few laymen have any idea concerning the size of Uncle Sam's training camps. Long distance calls are received almost nightly from different sections of the country asking for Tom, Dick, or Harry. All they know is that the doughboy is at Fort Benning and they cannot realize what a task it is for the duty officer to locate anyone in a few minutes with no facts to go on except name and rank.

Often callers become quite indignant because Private Smith or Jones cannot be located immediately. The callers appear to think that the man on duty at headquarters ought to be able to press a button and summon anybody in camp within two minutes.

"Well, it's a funny Army," exclaimed one irate lady one night. "I should think you'd know who was in your old camp." After much explaining she was made to understand that it would take several miles of filing cases to keep track of each individual person.

As a matter of fact, the Army Post Office does endeavor to keep an index of all men on the post, and generally the missing soldier can be found through the APO's files.

If every soldier could serve a tour at headquarters for just one night, his first step next morning would probably be that of visiting the APO to sign a card with a telephone number at which he could be reached in an emergency.

Nor would he neglect to write home regularly. Fortunately one cannot quarrel with the great rank and file of Uncle Sam's huge army on the point of writing home.

But not so long ago the night duty officer received a much-handled letter addressed in pencil to "Fort Benning, Ga.," nothing more, nothing less. The envelope bore the postmark of an Alabama hamlet. It read in effect:

WRITE ME A LETTER

"Dear Sir: Will you please ask my boy, Private So-and-So to write to his mother. I have not heard from him in ten weeks." That's all there was but it was enough.

The duty officer finally located the soldier, and going beyond the call of duty (to which he was assigned for the night) gently admonished him to get out his pen and paper. The boy had been rather busy and had let the letter-writing matter slip from day to day. He was ashamed of himself and admitted it. The promise was made that the letter would leave in the next mail.

"This will notify you that . . ." And there's no telling what the events of the night will bring.

'Rabbit Cop' Takes Kidding As Clean Fun

Although he must endure a lot of good-natured kidding about being a "rabbit cop," Officer Candidate Robert D. Parlaman's experience as a state game warden stands him in good stead in his course here with the Sixth Company Training Regiment.

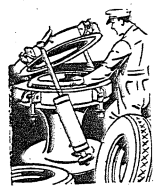
During the years that preceded his enlistment in the Army from his home city of Charleroi, Pa., Parlaman tramped trails, patrolled forests and learned unforgettable lessons in scouting and stalking. He learned much from his father, who also was a game warden, before entering the Pennsylvania State School for Game Wardens.

His duties as a warden were many, including trapping, apprehending violators, game management, forestry, land acquisition, maintenance of hunting grounds and public relations.

Stickerless Cars Tagged By MP's

Several hundred automobile drivers who have not obtained their Fort Benning license stickers, or may have forgotten to paste them in their windshields, were tagged today as Military Police were ordered to check on all motor vehicles on the Post.

Those who received tags must report to the Provost Marshal's office, it was explained by Major W. D. Veal, Provost Marshal. If they have already secured their Fort Benning registration card, it must be pasted up. If they have not, they must secure one.



Regulations for motor vehicles provide that a driver must register an automobile within 24 hours after bringing it to the post. A registration fee of ten cents is charged to pay for the stickers.

Permission to drive a vehicle on the Post may be revoked if the driver violates post regulations, Major Veal stated.

PFC Blooey Reinstated In C. O.'s Good Graces

Gets Book Larnin' Then Becomes Chaplain's Official Assistant

By PFC. S. B. SUSSINA
71St. Eng. L. Pon. Co.

The telephone rang at Mercy Oh Oh Oh for the ninth time in thirty-five minutes last Thursday night after the Fort Benning Bayonet was distributed among the Post personnel.

This time it was the Third student training regiment. The First and Second had already called. The 71st Engineers had called along with the 124th Infantry the 300th Infantry and three or four other "School Troops."

Why all the telephone calls?? All the commanders of the above organizations have had at one time or another Pfc. Pooey Blooey in their company. Having learned that he was without a company and was staying with the Lawson Field chaplain, they called to inquire about him. The next call was from the 41st Mess Kit Repair section of the First Under Ground Balloon Corps who called and asked if the one and only Pooey Blooey wouldn't please pay their company a visit because they were scheduled to go across and the C. O. wanted his men to see everything before they left the States.

REFUSES TO GO

But Pooey wouldn't go. Last week when he was left out in the cold by the WAACs because he didn't officially belong to any company, the chaplain took him in. After a week of "Book Larnin' " Pooey was officially the chaplain's assistant. Although Holy Joe, Jr. spent most of his time in the chapel, he rationed and quartered with his former company, the 71st Engineers.

Pooey always did like the 71st, but he never cared much for the food. According to Pooey we still get fed a lot better than the poor boys in civilian life. Blooey found it was good to make a lot of "Points" in the army but he says that in order to live on the outside now you've got to have points. Pooey had cheese and balogna Friday night for dinner and he didn't have it again until Sunday night . . . Saturday night he had balogna and cheese.

After a week with the chaplain a glorious day dawned for Pooey. His request for a transfer back to the 71st was returned. The 28th wrapper indorsement approving the 15th indorsement ordered compliance with the basic communication. Pooey came home.

WARM WELCOME

When he reported in at the 71st a warm welcome awaited him; a warm welcome which is seldom seen. The fire actually came out of the orderly room door followed by Technician Sixth Grade Pooey Blooey. After a little fatherly advice given by the "Old Man" Pooey was assigned to the motor pool to help the mechanics. A great change had occurred. Pooey had discovered at OCS that work was something that was expected of all Engineer Soldiers, especially him. At the time, Pooey didn't know a gas tank from a carburator but a little night school helped him out. Night school (extra duty as additional instruction) started for Pooey when he tried to siphon the crank case dry when he was told to check the hypoid. It was agreed by all, even Pooey, that he would never get anywhere if he spent all his time in the motor pool, so he was reluctantly taken into the supply to learn how that part of the company functioned.

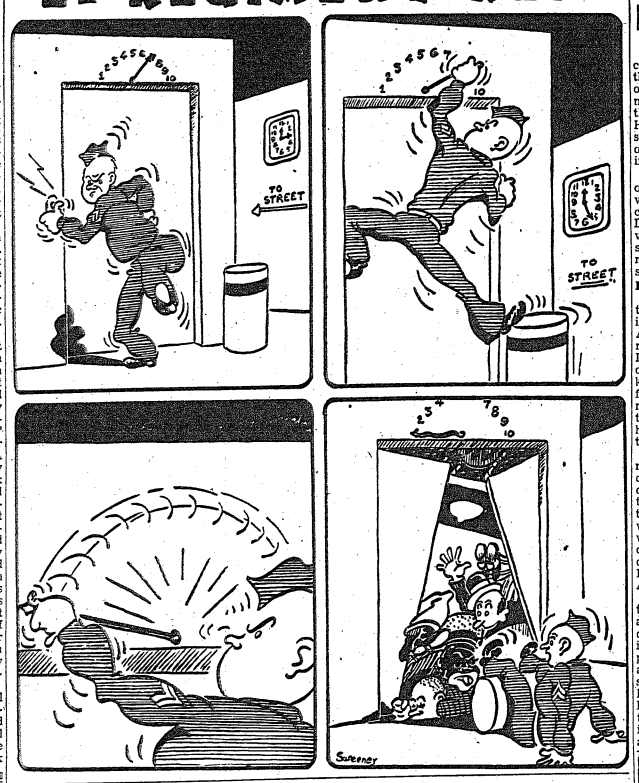
Pooey was what you would call a fair worker. He would continually break ramrods so he could go to Ordnance and see his girl when he salvaged them. Since he never could drive, he had to ask someone to take him, and then he told the girl that the fellow outside was his chauffeur.

As the next day was Saturday, Pooey had to get ready for inspection. All the windows were clean as a whistle due to base ball practice the day before. Blooey had an exceptionally dirty rifle. Since Blooey wanted to be an "on line soldier" he made up his mind that his rifle was going to be the best looking one in the company. Pooey went to work with some steel wool and metal polish. Then he put his rifle in the rack intending to get it the first thing in the morning.

SERIAL NUMBER SALVAGED

The next morning all that was left was a small pile of rust and a serial number. He salvaged the serial number and the remainder cost him approximately forty-seven dollars and a few odd cents. Pooey still doesn't remember reading that abrasives are not to be used when cleaning a rifle.

God knows how he did it, but Pooey finally got through the inspection. After inspection a short class was held for additional instruction. Even in OCS Pooey couldn't pay attention and you can't expect a fellow to change too much in a few weeks. When asked where the balance of the rifle was Pooey said, "This is all they gave me, Sir." Even the Engineers can only take so much so the class dispersed and the company was given the afternoon off. That is, everyone except Pooey. He had to pull guard.



SHOOTS COW

Pooey had to take his faithful '30 down to Engineer Landing and guard all the company equipment for a full twenty-four hours. In the middle of the night a huge object started to cross the bridge from the Alabama side of the Chattahoochee. Pooey challenged once, then again, and as it says in the soldiers hand book, again, and then—he went up to the truck to get his rifle. Making as little noise as possible, Pooey loaded his rifle and fired. Since the object was so big, Pooey couldn't miss. He heard it fall but was too scared to see what it was so he sneaked off to the side where the Engineers have their sign "Bridge Under Construction, One Moment Please" and hid until daylight.

At daylight he saw that the object he had shot was not a man, and by no means an enemy. It was a real, honest to goodness cow.

At the steak supper that night Pooey was presented with the Good Soldiers' Medal.

Hollywood Accordionist Entertains O. C. Pals

An outstanding accordionist who has hobnobbed with the movie stars of Hollywood and played his musical instrument all over the land now entertains his fellow officer candidates in the 18th company of the Third Student Training Regiment.

The accordion player is candidate Richard McCarthy, formerly of Los Angeles, Hollywood, and points east and west. He has played one night and one week stands all over the nation. His repertoire ranges from Rimski-Korsakc and Johannes Brahms to Cole Porter and Irving Berlin.

Not only has McCarthy played at many Hollywood parties as an entertainer, but he also has played for moving pictures. Among the stories of his experiences with the stars, his fellow officer candidates love to be regaled with the story of his presence at an unusual party given by Harry Carry at his ranch after the filming of "The Shepherd of the Hills," a film in which McCarthy played.

NAMES A FEW

The officer candidate, when asked to tell who was present, agrees to name a few of them including Betty Grable, Betty Fields, Bing Crosby, Abbott and Costello. The highlight of the party was the showing of a film collection of funny sequences made by famous comedians from the earliest days of the movies to the present time. He recalls scenes taken in the year 1910 as shown in the Nikelodians of that day.

McCarthy, however, considers the most impressive experience he has ever had to be the appearance he made in the late Will Rogers' stage show on Christmas Day at the Fox's Florence theater. The show was put on on the Christmas day before Rogers' untimel; death.

In addition to playing at parties and theaters, McCarthy has played over radio stations, played in large dance bands, worked for various motion picture studios, and at one time taught a conservatory of music in St. Louis. His hobby was also in the realm of art, for before his induction in the army he made oil paintings.

Now He Knows Why So Many Refuse Bars

There's nothing so nice as having friends—at any cost.

Just ask Mr. Arthur Frieman, newly made warrant officer. Prior to the administration of the oath Mr. Frieman was Technician Grade IV and as such, had many buddies whose arms bore as many different degrees of stripes.

When word got about headquarters, of the First Student Training Regiment that Technician Frieman had received his appointment, and that Lt. Morrison was about to administer the oath of office, a group of wellwishers rapidly gathered to witness the momentous occasion. Everything came off in jig style, not a single hitch. Lt. Morrison shook the new Warrant Officer's hand, congratulated him, and wished him good luck.

Warrant Officer Frieman rendered his first salute in his new rank, did an about face, took one step forward—and stopped dead in his tracks. There facing him was an apparition horrible enough to stop even a newly made general. There facing him were three of his buddies all drawn up at "hand salute," Hand salute at one buck per salute.

Wags Advocate Bundles For Home Front Move

Some wag recently made a crack to the effect that men in the army should write home more often in order to bolster civilian morale, while another suggested that we start a "Bundles For The Home Front" movement. That such things are not just humorous gags is proven by occasional incidents around Fort Benning.

The other night a man in one of the 10th A.D. day rooms was wrapping a parcel or assorted candy bars for his family in St. Louis. He explained that he had written asking his people to send some candy. They replied that none was to be had in the local shops.

IMPRACTICAL ITEMS

Another soldier received one of those amazing gift boxes containing a wealth of impractical items. Among the oddments and bitments was a box of tea bags. Inasmuch as: (a) the army has overlooked providing us with tea kettles (b) this man doesn't care for tea anyhow and (c) he has no relatives who do, he turned the tea bags over to a guy who has a maiden aunt living in Boston.

Rookies arriving at Fort Benning during the few weeks preceding Christmas were somewhat distressed on discovering what they supposed to be the limitations of the P.X.'s and looked forward to the lifting of the three weeks restriction when they might once again taste the sweets of civilization in that spectacular Paris of the South, Columbus.

ANTE-CLIMAX

The eagerly anticipated visit to town, unfortunately, proved to be an ante-climax in some respects, due to no fault of the city and its fathers. Candy was about as plentiful as free speech in Munich and the coffee which tasted like something Lucrezia Borgia might have whipped up in one of her less amiable moods, was limited to one cup per customer. Only in the USO's, which are, after all, sorts of army embassies with extraterritorial privileges, were the rookies able to secure in plenty the little luxuries which are taken for granted in garrison.

Manifestly these conditions are not peculiar to this part of the country but are nationwide. Americans are a very long way from suffering hardships in civilian circles and the possibility of their doing so is rather remote. It is only that we are all learning the real difference between necessities and luxuries and the knowledge is bound to do us more good than harm.

Gag Results In Long Trip

Befriending a downcast newsman back in 1931 in Oshkosh, Wis., Elmer Clark, now an officer candidate in the Second Company, Third Student Training Regiment, found himself enmeshed in a series of circumstances which caused him to travel over most of the globe the hard way and not get home for four years.

It all started when Candidate Clark and a friend gave a "big" story to a newspaper reporter who was low in spirits because he had muffed an assignment. The story was that the two were planning a round-the-world trip in a 30-foot boat.

The trouble lay in the fact that the yarn was not entirely true, but the press and radio made so much of it that Clark and his friend felt they had to go through with it. They journeyed East.

On the basis of an agreement with a tobacco company and a movie actress, both of whom had promised a certain amount of backing for publicity reasons, the two plunged their savings into a 30-foot sloop. At the last minute, both "angels" withdrew.

Clark and his friend began fishing professionally off the Maine coast until the friend gave up. Clark sold the sloop. Goig to work as an ordinary seaman, he sailed to the Philippines, China and Japan.

Finally in 1935 with earnings saved while working on movie producer Howard Hughes' yacht, Southern Cross, Clark was able to finance his way back to Oshkosh.

Japanese Atrocities Not Exaggerations

Young O. C. Declares; Lived for 13 Years In China, Japan

Even before the outbreak of the war, the Japanese boasted they were able to locate within four hours any white person in any country under their control, so close was their surveillance of foreigners, according to Candidate Francis Browne, who spent 13 years in China and Japanese-dominated countries. He now is an officer candidate in the 17th Company of the First Student Training Regiment.

Browne who was born in the Presbyterian Mission in Ichowfu, China, where he lived until the age of three, states that even if persons were to go to another town for a week-end, a Japanese agent would meet them at the train to find out who they were and where they were going.

By the time Brown and his family moved from Ichowfu to Chefoo, a port town of 200,000 people, his father had been captured and released by Chinese bandits several times. The candidate recalls watching, at the age of four, a group of bandits use his family's yard and wall as a small fort to beat off another gang who made similar use of some graves across the road.

4 YEARS IN KOREA

Brown spent four years at the American mission high school in Korea, and twice a year had to travel through the customs of Japanese-held Korea and then-free China. He well remembers sitting in the study hall in Korea and watching planes from the second largest airfield in the Japanese Empire practice dog-fighting over Pyeng-Yany by the hour.

In 1937, the town of Chefoo, in which the family was still living, was taken over by the Nipponese. Chinese forces considered defense of the city impossible with their equipment and withdrew. The Japanese took over the electric barbed-wife gates zoning the city, closing them at different times. A person caught behind the gate would have to hasten to take another way or be caught in the zone and forced to spend the night. Travel after dark meant a person was questioned at every post with a Jap bayonet point pressing against him.

His parents, who stayed in China after Brown left for the United States and who were interned after the outbreak of the war, returned last September on the ex-

Clothes Designer Thinks Men Are Best Judges Of Milady's Wardrobe

Since women traditionally dress to please men, a man is a better judge of what a woman should wear than the woman.

This was the way William H. Hilton reasoned a couple of years ago when he was trying to choose a career for himself, and the result was that Hilton successfully invaded a field that is commonly considered the excusive bailiwick of women: the designing of women's clothing.

Hilton is now Pvt. Hilton of the 90th Reconnaissance Battalion, 10th Armored Division, and his prospective assignment as gunner on a scout car is a pretty far cry from the designing of street dresses and evening gowns. But he concedes that it would be rather difficult for the army to place him according to his civilian occupation.

Until he donned his uniform last fall, Hilton was in partnership with a young woman who had formerly been a model in style shows, and the firm was launched on what promised to be a very lucrative business. Hilton did the designing while his partner did the fitting and incidentally advertised the products very effectively by wearing them on every possible occasion. In the few months they were in business they not only kept out of the red but actually showed a profit.

ENORMOUS PROFITS

"The profits in this business are enormous," Hilton frankly admits. "You can turn out a very satisfactory dress, sell it for $17.95 and make a profit of $10."

There is nothing really strange in Hilton's choice of career. In fact, his reasons were quite logical from a man's point of view.

"I had seen so many feminine scarecrows running around," he says, "that I decided there were all kinds of possibilities in the field of designing. Too many women, I thought, were spoiling their appearance by bad taste, and too few were dressing to suit their personalities."

So Hilton enrolled in a school of designing to learn the mechanics of the business. He had never done any drawing or sketching but he was soon able to outline the feminine figure and face. He also learned how to make patterns and how to cut materials from the patterns. When he was in business, he did much of the actual dressmaking himself.

CANDOR TRADEMARK

After he opened his business, Hilton made candor his trademark. He refused to follow the sacred law that the customer is always right and made it a rule instead to tell his customers when he thought they were wrong. If a determined housewife spurned his ideas as to how a dress should be made, he promptly advised her to go elsewhere—and the housewife generally liked this kind of treatment.

After the war Hilton intends to return to St. Louis and he has every expectation of making a very profitable living out of catering to feminine fashion whims.

Provisional Unit Soldiers Attend Night School

A regimental school sponsored jointly by the Provisional Truck Regiment and the Federal Works Agency, Georgia, is being held for some 150 students of the regiment.

Meeting four evenings weekly, these soldiers, many of whom were unable to secure proper educational backgrounds in civilian life, are using their spare time in endeavoring to better themselves intellectually.

Instruction is offered on three levels: for beginners, intermediates, and advanced pupils, and special emphasis is placed on reading, writing, arithmetic and practical geography. Colonel Frank J. Vida, the Regimental Commander, has made plans for the securing of necessary equipment and the latest instructional materials are made available for the students' use.

Three civilian instructors, Miss Ethel Smith and Messrs. Thomas and Jenkins work with Sergeant Walter Bennett, Company "I" and a staff of enlisted men who volunteer their time for instruction and who relish the opportunity of doing what, in many cases they were doing in civilian life. These army teachers, in addition to Sergeant Bennett are Sergeant Thebdis F. McDonald, Corporal Stanley E. Rutland, Private First Class Jesse Hare, Private First Class John McKim, Private First Class William Boyd, Private First Class William Boyd, Private First Class Richard Perry, Private William Officer, Sergeant Grafton Whyte, Private William E. Hopson, Corporal Ransom Persons.

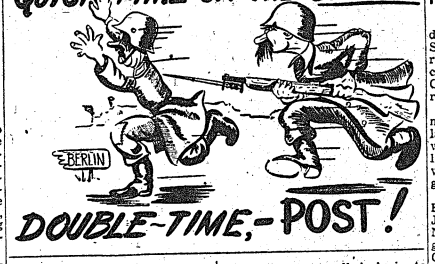
Local Stores Making Illegal Insignia Sales

The sale of military insignia to unauthorized persons by some Columbus merchants has been reported to Benning military intelligence authorities, it was disclosed as post officials warned unwary merchants that they face possible fine and imprisonment, or both, if convicted of violating War Department regulations governing the sale of insignia.

Although War Department regulations do not forbid clothiers to sell wearing apparel without Army insignia to unauthorized persons, Army regulations, based upon statutory law, specifically prohibit the sale of garments with insignia or insignia alone to unauthorized purchasers.

The War Department regulation governing the sale of such goods states that "Insignia, including buttons . . . may be sold by authorized dealers only to persons who present official War Department identification indicating their right to wear such insignia."

Interpreting this provision, Major H. C. Chapman, director of the Military Intelligence Division, stressed today that the sale of insignia can be made only to persons "indicating their right to wear such insignia."



In one instance a local merchant sold an official blouse to an unauthorized person. Since the blouse had insignia on it, in the form of U. S. Army buttons, the merchant violated the law and is liable for prosecution when military authorities investigate the incident.

"The army is not endeavoring to embarrass merchants," Major Chapman pointed out. "We are only following regulations and since Congress has passed the law, which is interpreted in Army Regulations, we must abide by our instructions."

MAY LOSE LICENSE

Major Chapman said that dealers who are not strict about selling insignia to authorized persons face the possibility of losing their right to sell Army insignia as well as face legal prosecution.

"Such cases of violations in the sale of insignia," Major Chapman stated, "are not new. However, higher headquarters are insistent upon merchants carrying out their agreement with the War Department. These merchants have promised not to sell insignia to unauthorized persons. In cases where they do, which are frequently reported to military intelligence and then on to higher headquarters, these merchants may find their business curtailed with the loss of the right to sell such items."

Academic Regiment Promotes Enlisted Men

Six enlisted men in the Academic Regiment of The Infantry School Service Command have received promotions in rank, according to an announcemet by Col. Harry N. Burkhalter, the regimental commander.

T-4 Edward Meissner of Elmont, Long Island, and Cpl. Roland A. Gessert of Pontiac, Mich., were made sergeants. Cpl. Franklin Van Etten of Stillwater, N. Y., was raised to technician fourth grade.

Privates First Class Robert Finch of Chapel Hill, N. C., and John A. Schleimer of Brooklyn, N. Y., were made technicians grade five, and Private First Class Sidney Shaw of Brooklyn became a corporal.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—(CNS) — Monty, five-year-old pet gander known throughout East Cambridge for his fondness for beer, has been kidnapped. He was picked up by a truck deliver, witnesses said, as he emerged from a tavern —a stewed goose!

I'll Lay Me Down To Bleed Awhile Then Get Me Up And Fight Again

Ex-Lance Corporal, Veteran of Somme, Is TIS Student

George Buick Leslie, of Ridgeporal, led a platoon of the famed Canadian Royal Highlanders through six weeks of the battle of the Somme, now 27 years later, is readying himself to resume the war against the Huns, this time in the Army of the United States.

But in this war, George Leslie is seeking his commission as are hundreds of other Americans. He is a member of Officer Candidate School, 11th Company, Third Student Training Regiment.

In the last war he became a platoon leader through the elimination process of the war, but as the war ended, he had a commission in the Royal Highlanders.

Standing well over six feet, lanky and spare of frame and with a face that belies his approaching forty-sixth birthday, he's proving to members of Third Student Training Regiment's 11th Company that age has little bearing on agility. And at the same time it recalls to him the difference and contrast between life here at Benning and at the officer's training school he attended in England back in 1918.

18 MONTHS AT FRONT

At that time a candidate had to have a year of front line duty to his credit before he was eligible for officer's school. Candidate Leslie had eighteen months before he left the battlefields of Europe to return to England to receive his commission.

Recalling those three months he tells a story of a life strangely in contrast to ours. Gigs, manuals and specialized instructors were unknown. Since all had spent a year in battle, tactics were studied only briefly. The emphasis was on close order drill, and that was done in the streets of the town near Brighton where the school was located.

However, the truly fascinating story is of those eighteen months on the front. It was during the battle of the Somme that he found himself in charge of his platoon for six weeks. Two platoon leaders and three non-coms had been killed, three other non-coms were in the hospital when Lance Corporal Leslie realized he was the senior officer.

NO OFFICERS

"We did our job and had no complaints, and I guess that was why no one seemed particularly concerned over the fact we had no commissioned officer over us," he continued. However, his most vivid recollections are of the incredible mud that so decided the battle of the Somme and truculously prolonged it for five months.

"When the Somme overflowed and flooded the battlefield in December of '16, everyone gave up the war as hopeless when they found themselves isolated on little islands of high ground with no one to talk to except perhaps a German stranded with them. Misery loves company . . . and we had plenty of it then," he explained.

BONNIE SCOTLAND

Born in Scotland in a little town named Arbroath, in 1911, he came to the United States and to Lynn, Mass. Four years later he was on his way to Canada and there he enlisted as a private in the Royal Highlanders, the organization with which he remained throughout the war.

Though almost beyond the age limit he was accepted as a volunteer officer candidate shortly after the United States entered this war. He took his basic training at Camp Croft, S. C., and has nothing but praise for the efficiently complete basic training given during this war to the men of our Army.

With such a wealth of experience to his record it's little wonder that Candidate Leslie is accepted by the men of the 11th Company as an arbitrator of arguments on how they are going to win this war.

CARSON CITY, Nev.—Work of the Nevada legislature has been slowed considerably by the lack of typewriters, and the War Production Board won't allow the purchase of any more machines.

Former French Officer Seeks U. S. Commission

Lt. Martinot Was Cavalryman; Heart Is With Infantry

Sous-lieutenant Pierre Martinot of the 12m-Regiment de Dragons, stationed at Colmar in Alsace, is now an officer candidate in the 17th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, after having volunteered and served as a private in a heavy weapons company at Camp Croft,, S. C.

The desire to escape from the Cavalry to the Infantry is natural enough to obviate comment; but a Frenchman does not leave France very readily, and Martinet loved his country from the green slopes of the Vosges to the Purple Mediterranean at Perpignan.

There was a conflict of two affections, and Candidate Martinot surrendered to an American girl who is now Mrs. Martinot; he has an American son and American citizenship and speaks American. These and his French birth sent the lieutenant of eighteen years ago unhesitatingly through the rigors of basic training in one of Croft's roughest battalions and on into the relentless pace and concentrated effort of the Infantry School, whence he will emerge early in March a lieutenant for the second time, in arms against the same old enemy.

He was born at Luneville in 1903, but moved to Nancy in 1921. While a student he heard the thudding rival artillery at Verdun as a daily accompaniment to life in Nancy; he learned a hatred for the invader of his land; and when in due course he was called to military service he did not resent being sent with the French Army of Occupation to Dusseldorf and Wiesbaden, a policing job he may repeat some day with an American Army of Occupation.

Before this experience he had won an exchange scholarship to Wooster College and spent the academic year 1922-1923 in the Ohio City. The first visit to America gave the impetus that brought about his permanent residence here a few years ago.

At his conscription he was made a cavalryman because the French military authorities ordained it; but he showed the true infantry stuff in him by winning an appointment to the Officers' School at Saumur after only seven months' training, and by obtaining his commission a few months later. Honarably discharged in 1925 at the conclusion of his period of service, he quit the cavalry forever.

He was sent to New York as representative for a firm of French importers; and in sending him his employers lost him, gained him a wife and changed his citizenship and the flow of his career; for in New York he married an American girl, returned to Europe on an extensive wedding trip and eventually settled again in the American metropolis not as an importer, but as a free-lance commercial artist, an occupation in which he has been active ever since, acquiring a critical and quiet renown as a dexterious and resourceful designer and craftsman.

He specialized in books, end-papers and book jackets, and his talents were utilized by all the major New York publishers. Easy in disposition, little inclined to worry, and with nothing to worry about, Pierre Martinot found life very agreeable until June, 1940, when the Germans over-ran France. He had relatives, friends and memories there. He was cut off from them by a wall of German iron. He began to worry, and after Pearl Harbor decided there was only one thing for him to do.

What he felt he had to do was not easy—in fact it was impossible for a man of thirty-eight to do it then. Martinot wanted to fight for his new and old countries, but the American armed forces did not then accept recruits of such an age. Not until the promulgation of the V. O. C. plan was he able to induce his adopted country to make use of his willing life in her new swelling army.

He chose the Infantry as the arm he wished to serve in, and all the rest is a familiar history. He volunteered in March, 1942, was inducted at Camp Upton in June, trained at Camp Croft from early August until December, was assigned to O. C. S. on December 7 and has been with the 17th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, ever since.

Cpl. Scott Spends Almost Entire Life At Ft. Benning

Soldiers who regard themselves as Fort Benning veterans should consider the case of Corp. Joseph Scott before they start to boast or complain of the length of time they have spent here. Corp. Scott, who is a member of Company E of the Service Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment, has spent almost his entire life on the post although he was not inducted into the service until last July.

He is a native of Ochillee, Ga., which locality was taken over by the government and added to the Fort Benning area shortly after his birth. Scott can recall the "Golden Era" before the war when officers and nelisted men of the post had time to hunt and he acted in the capacity of unofficial game warden, providing "G. I" grain for wild fowl during seasons when forage was difficult.

It was nothing unusual, moreover, for Scott to awaken to gunfire and discover his home was an objective in an officer candidates problem or maneuver.

Except for the few days he spent at the reception center on the Main post last July, Scott has been continuously on duty during his army career less than three miles from the point where he first saw the light of day.

BLANDING, Utah—For 20 years people here have argued whether a horse can travel twice as far in 24 hours as a man. A test was made by Leland Shumway. After 10 hours he had gone 65 miles and the horse had made 135.

Cuban With Armored Tigers Fought in Spanish Civil War

Pvt. Fernandez Escaped Iberia On Italian Steamer

Pvt. Carlos Francisco Roman Nicolau Fernandez of Artillery Command, 10th Armored Division, is a man of strong convictions. While giving in Spain back in 1936 he had no difficulty in deciding to fight for the Loyalist cause, even though everything was "confuse." Returning to Cuba his native country, he offered his technical knowledge to the Cuban government. And when the United States got into the war, he went to work for the U. S. Engineers.

Last November Pvt. Fernandez was drafted into the army of the United States — and was quite happy about the whole thing. The proof of this lies in the fact that Fernandez has just been given his choice of remaining in this army or returning to serve in the Cuban army, and he has not only elected to stay where he is but he has also decided to seek American citizenship. And here is his reason:

"A U. S. loss is Cuba's loss; a U. S. victory is Cuba's victory."

Fernandez's main concern now is mastering the English language, and for a man who has been in this country only six months he is doing all right.

TO SPAIN AT 15

Born in Cuba 31 years ago, Fernandez went to Spain when he was 15 years old and received his education in that country. His profession, by the way, is topographic draftsmanship, and he specializes in the making of mosaic maps.

The Spanish Civil War began in 1936 and Fernandez, like everyone else, found his life disrupted. There was no question us to his participation in the revolution because every man, woman and child in the country found himself involved.

"Everyone was a soldier in Spain then," Fernandez expresses it, "and the confusion was terrific. Fathers were fighting against their sons, and brothers against brothers. The fighting would be in this city one day and that city the next day. Around Barcelona, where I was, almost all the officers were killed and there was no leadership at all."

WOUNDED

Fernandez remained in Spain for six months after the revolution started and incidentally was wounded several times. He took the first opportunity to escape and left the war-torn country as a refugee aboard an Italian warship early in 1937. Arriving in Italy, he hunted up a friend at the Cuban consulate, and this friend facilitated his passage to France. He returned to Cuba aboard a French liner which made a stop, ironically, at a port in northwestern Spain—but Fernandez felt no nostalgia.

As he looks toward the future, Fernandez has strong hopes that one of the effects of the war will be better relations between the United States and Cuba. He himself feels that he is doing a little to further this objective by serving with the army of the United States—and he is, needless to say, proud of his status as a soldier in this man's army.

PRISONERS' MAIL GETS THROUGH

WASHINGTON—Mail addressed to prisoners of war held in Japan is getting through, according to an announcement made by the International Red Cross here. It said word had been received from its representative in Japan that 150,000 letters had been delivered.

HOLLYWOOD—In a rush to catch a train Bing Crosby, crooner, slipped as he leaped from an automobile. One wheel of the car passed over his left leg. Bing made the train with help of his companions but his doctor later ordered him to bed for a week.

Fame Of Signal Corps Photographers Blossoms From Fort Benning Training

'Chutist Shot By Kortemerer Blankets U. S.

Cameramen Have Important Tasks In Training Camps

"U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo," the by-line which frequently appears below pictures in newspapers of Army life in training camps or on battlefields, denotes the ananimity of the famed Signal Corps photographers who sweat out long hours behind and under hefty cameras or cornered in a stuffy darkroom developing the finished products.

Many of the crack Signal Corps photographers in Australi, India, England and on battlefronts with fighting U. S. Army troops first nurtured a Graphlex at Fort Benning, where several of the photographic companise have blossomed forth into well-trained units for duyt overseas.

The mission of Signal Corps units, however, is not alone one of pictorially presenting life on the battlefronts of the world. Many units have important missions in training camps throughout the United Staets, photographing life in cantonments where soldiers are preparing for action.

TOP-NOTCH PHOTOS

Such is the picture in the Signal Corps Photographic Laboratory at Fort Benning, where a trained crew of cameron and technicians turn out top-notch photos under the direction of Captain Herbert W. Cooley, Signal Property Officer.

Many a Signal Corps Photo, produced by Fort Benning's Signal Laboratory, has been reprinted in hundreds of newspapers throughout the country. Among the photos which has received the most widespread distribution recently is a photo by Sergeant Donald K. Kotemeir, which pictures four paratroopers as they bailed out of a transport high over Fort Benning. The picture, which appears above, was reproduced and distributed by the three major newspicture syndicates.

"BY KORTEMEIER"

Sgt. Kortemeier, who is a native of Racine, Wis., apprenticed in photography at Fort Pierce, Fla. During four years prior to enlisting in the Army in 1941, Sgt. Kortemeier was a partner in the Florida Photographic concern at Fort Pierce. There he did commercial, portrait, aerial and illustrative photography.

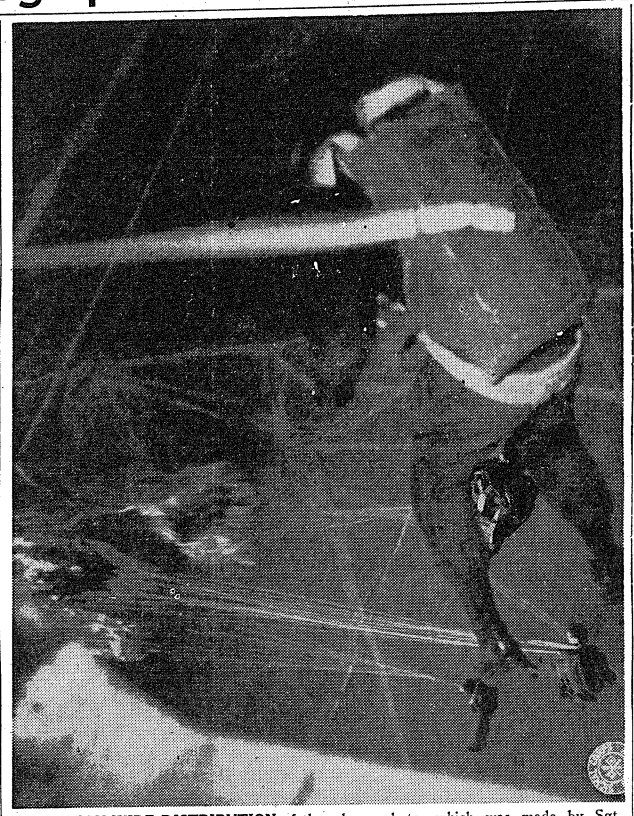
After he joined the Army and was assigned to Fort Benning, Kortemeier was in the 161st Signal Photographic Company, where he first wielded a camera for the Signal Corps. Sgt. Kortemeier attended a special course for Signal Corps photographers in New York which is conducted by Life Magazine. There, the Signal Corps photographer perfected his knack with a Graphex and came back to Benning to "cover" events here.

Two other members of the Signal Laboratory here likewise tatended Army schools for photographers. Sgt. Edward Bourne, formerly associated wiht Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. N., and Corporal Melvin Stock, formerly a free lance photographer in California, both attended the Signal Corps Photographic Center's school in Astoria, Long Island, N. Y.

Corporal Sam Bondone, a printer in civilian life from Los Angeles, Calif., and PFC Jack Newman, who was in the wholesale supply business in photographic accessories, round out the male side of the Signal Lab at Fort Benning.

THE WAACS HELP

Auxiliary First Class Elinor McAuliffe, a member of the 43rd Post Headquarters Company of the Women's Auxiliary Corps, has been assigned as a member of the Signal Lab's staff. Auxiliary McAuliffe, who joined the WAACs about three months ago, handles muc hadministrative routine in the Lab, although she has already become adept at operating cameras in the Lab.



Captain Cooley describes the work of the Signal Lab as "one of the most exacting types" of work. When the cameramen accompany members of the staff of Major Russell J. Hammargren's Public Relations Division on assignments, the photographer is usually on a trip where the pucures are "musts."

Such was the case recently when Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, and General Marshall, the Chief of Staff, visited the Post. On that assignment the PRO depended on Sgt. Kortemeier's pictures. So, Sgt. Kortemeier "got" the pictures.

LEWISBURG, Pa. — (CNS) — Bucknell University's Cap and Dagger dramatic society called rehearsals recently for "Knickerbocker Holiday." Then the Army called some of the boys up. Now the dramatic society is rehearsing another play instead—it's called "Ladies in Retirement," and has a predominantly female cast.

NATION-WIDE DISTRIBUTION of the above photo, which was made by Sgt. Kortemeier, heralds the excellence of the products turned out by Army Signal Corps photographers. This picture, showing four paratroopers in mid-air after they bailed out of an army transport over Fort Benning, was made in a split-second as the static line on the 'chutist in the foreground was about to rip-open his parachute. Newspapers throughout the country carried this picture, including a half-page reproduction in last Sunday's New York Daily News. (Signal Lab Photo by Kortemeier.)

HERE KORTEMEIER by snapping his shot from the precise angle necessary gives the impression the ship is afloat when in reality it's on the ground. The girl is Pegge Parker, girl reported of the Washington Times Herald.

Philippine Vet Explains How To Distinguish Japs

If you encounter an Oriental in a jungle somewhere and want to determine if he is a Jap or a Chinese, ask that individual to pronounce "lalapalooza"—if conditions permit, of course.

According to Candidate Paul Mauricio, formerly of the Philippine Islands and now a member of the 10th Company, Third Student Training regiment, there is no letter or sound corresponding to "L" in the Japanese language and, consequently, few Japs, even the well educated, can pronounce a word with a lot of "L's" in it. The best a Jap can do with "lalapalooza" is something like "wawapawooza."

A native of Manila, Candidate Mauricio says it is often difficult to distinguish between Chinese and Japanese. Mauricio, however, has drawn up a list of guides to aid the American soldier in this direction and they follow:

1. Japs speak in a staccato fashion with harsh intonations while Chinese speech is soft, slow, pleasant.

2. Jap posture is very poor, usually featured by bowed legs, while the Chinese are erect and carry themselves more like Americans.

3. Japs, as every cartoonist knows, have buck teeth in most instances while Chinese usually have straight teeth.

Candidate Mauricio's family now lives in Honolulu. Mauricio joined one of the all-Filipino regiments training on the West Coast and from there was appointed to Officer Candidate school. His only ambition at the present time is to be an officer among the troops that will smash the Japs out of his native Philippines.

11th Armored Regiment Promotes 40 Enlisted Men

Promotions of 40 enlisted men were recently announced by the 11th Armored Regiment, 10th Armored Division.

Staff Sergeant Arthur H. Barbakoff and Sgt. Emil Slama were advanced to the grade of master sergeant. New first sergeants were S-Sgt. Christ Jorgensen and Sgt. Daniel A. Sleeth. Staff Sergeants Millard C. Wingate and James H. Sprinkle were made tech sergeants, and advanced to the grade of staff sergeant were the following: Sgt. Chester E. Derda, T-5 John L. Guzzi and T-4 Robert O. Bunce.

Twenty-three vacancies in the list of sergeants were filled by the following: Cpls. Edward B. Sliva, Alexander M. Sekula, Raymond H. Timm, Arthur V. Pagel, David Caroff, John T. Bartz, John Tramutola, George W. Jenott, Herman J. Lee and Pierce J. Meyers. T-4 Blame C. Christy, T-5's John A. Sokolski, Lawrence V. Froelich, Charles W. Bates, Clifford C. Looney, John F. Cox, William E. Spess, Leonard J. Wilson and Ivan O. Miller, Pvts. Raymond V. Dunham, Clifford Shields, William P. Dewberry and Julius L. Lyon.

T-5's Lester F. Wippich, Earl D. Pease and Essie Priddy, Pfc. John E. Allen Jr., and Pvts. Jim C. Woodburn, Otto Dzobel, Elice B. Ferguson and James F. Stoffel were all made technicians 4th Grade.

Officers, Non-Coms Hand Down Insignia Of Rank After Promotions

Custom Child Of Metal Shortage, Superstition, Or Sheer Benevolence

Variety spices the Army, even when it comes to the disposition of officers' insignia of rank and enlisted men's stripes after promotions have been received.

A poll at Post Headquarters as to what happens to "outmoded" bars and strips reveals that other officers and enlisted men, scrapbooks and even pillow cases are some of the beneficiaries when promotions occur.

Most officers, realizing the shortage of metals in this nation, follow the practice of passing on their insignia to other officers who are entitled to wear them but lack a sufficient number to satisfy their requirements.

Certain humorous superstitions, as could be expected, also have arisen around the disposition of certain insignia under particular circumstances. For example, it is considered good luck to give away any outmoded officer insignia if it was a present itself to the possessor.

DOLLAR BILL

Some enlisted men, who follow the practice of "being in the know," take advantage of another such superstition which calls for an officer to give a dollar bill to the first enlisted man who salutes him at the time he is first commissioned. The story runs that one enlisted man who had access to an officers' promotion list used to wait outside the door of the newly promoted officers on the day their commissions came through, and then give a salute. The soldier often made several dollars a day over and above his army stipend.

Some officers, anticipating the end of the war, keep in mind the fact that most war-time promotions are for the duration only, and save all or some of their insignia for the day when peace comes and they are reduced in rank.

Other officers save one insignia of each rank for a keepsake. For example, Lieut. Col. J. D. Rosenberger, Jr., post adjutant, has a collection of one insignia for each rank he has held. Colonel Rosenberger also follows the practice of keeping some outmoded insignia in his desk so that when an officer is promoted he can give him an insignia befitting his new rank as soon he he sees him. This, the Colonel feels, makes the newly appointed officer feel pretty good to be able to wear his new emblem so quickly.

STEIPES FREE

Enlisted men, as a rule, also follow the practice of giving away their outmoded stripes to other enlisted men entitled to wear them. Master Sergt. Clarence F. King, chief clerk at Post Headquarters, states that stripes which are issued free by the quartermaster corps, usually were worn out by the time additional stripes were awarded in regular army before the war. However, they were generally passed on to others if they were in shape.

Sergt. William H. Simmons, Jr., post headquarters transportation sergeant, gives away his old stripes to other enlisted men with the exception of one pair of winter and one pair of summer stripes for each rank. He is saving these to put in a scrapbook after the war. The scrapbook contains the highlights of his life, and he considers the award of each additional stripe a thing to remember.

SEWED TO CUSHION

Staff Sergt. Lawrence Rosenstrauch, assistant in the judge advocate's office, also gives most of his stripes away, but he has a novel idea for one pair of stripes of each rank. He is sending them home and is having his mother sew them on a cushion cover. The cushion always will be a reminder to him of his army life and of each promotion in grade he received.

Staff Sergt. Carl Neu, assistant to Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply, and who also is attached to the Public Relations Office, the Athletic Office and innumerable other jobs, watches the promotion lists in the various offices and gives his old stripes to enlisted men when they receive promotion.

TO GIRL FRIENDS

One sergeant, who prefers to remain annonymous, admits he sends his outmoded stripes to "all my girl friends." But he says he's always careful to warn them that they are merely tokens of, ahem, admiration and esteem—and not to be worn since the War Department frowns severely on such practice.

The origin of the bars and stripes is, in itself, an interesting phase in the history of our army. The story goes back to the days of the American Revolution, when the limited funds in possession of the Continental Congress were hardly adequate to supply ammunition, much less uniforms. Soldiers brought along their own outfits, and many of them garbed themselves in clothes looted from the homes of hated Tories.

Since the officers were usually more conservatively garbed, this condition led to some confusion. An order issued in 1775 stated that since "many inconveniencies (arose) from not being able to distinguish commissioned officers from privates, some badges of distinction should be worn."

In consequence, the commander-in-chief was directed to wear "a light ribbon across his breast between his coat and his waistcoat." Major generals were designated by a purple ribbon, brigadiers by a pink one and aides by one of green.

The beginning of the epaulet and stars came in 1789 when Washington ordered that major generals should wear one on each shoulder, with two stars on each, that brigadiers be adorned with two epaulets with one star on each, and that field officers wear a gold epaulet on each shoulder.

Sergeants were ordered to wear a worsted shoulder knot on each shoulder, and corporals such a knot on the right shoulder. This order, however, did not come into effect until 1782.

The insignia that G. I.'s know so well came along as a sort of evolution through the years following the establishment of the Republic.

Boys Overseas Are Well-Fed

Rationing Reason, Officer Writes Colonel

To anybody in the United States who may be complaining about food rationing — pipe down—because the boys in Africa are definitely getting that food you're going without and because of that our boys are able to fight and work all the better.

That was the gist of a letter received today by Lt. Col. C. A. Will, Plans and Training officer at Fort Benning from Captain Homer P. Harris, formerly stationed here.

Capt. Harris was in command of the quartermaster detachment, section one, when he was a lieutenant at Fort Benning. He now is "somewhere in North Africa" as company commander with an armored force.

FOOD ALWAYS GOOD

"Congratulaitons on your promotion," he wrote to Col. Will. "News from home comes pretty slow. I am well and O. K. and doing fine. Made the trip across in fine shape and landed safely. Have the best group of soldiers in the world. The Quartermaster really fights and does the work, too, over here. The food is always good.

"If anyone at home kicks about the rationing—tell them that we are getting it. Each man also gets a package of cigarets every day. We have a radio and pick up the London and United States short waves.

"Don't believe the propaganda that comes from Berlin—it's all bull. The French and Moslems are very friendly. So far I'm learning a few French and Arabic words.

AFRICAN GOTHAM

"I was northeast of Casablanca when the president was there. It is about the size of Atlanta and is the New York of North Africa. Right now I'm here in a cork wood forest. This is indeed a strange, unusual and interesting country. The Arabic architecture is beautiful. Have visited some French officers' homes. Have been to the Church of England once.

"One of our men won the DSC in a landing operation here. We'll leave the Japs to the Marines—we know how to handle the Germans."

Candidate Recalls Zepplin Raids Of World War I

Vivid recollections of the first Zeppelin raids and the arrival of German troops in Antwerp, Belgium, during the first World War are retained by Candidate Henry J. Wolfs, 2nd, who is now undergoing officer's training in the Third Student Training Regiment.

Wolfs was with his family in Belgium at the outset of the last war, and witnessed the historical events which took place in the country at that time. He was orphaned at 13, and took over the responsibility of care for his younger brother, who now is reported a prisoner of war in Germany.

The officer candidate went to sea for several years as a steward, and was in the hotel business when he volunteered for the army. He was recommended for officer training after completing a course in the Non-commissioned Officers school.

1st STR Officer Is Jack Of All Trades

Major Danelson Has Tried Hard At All Professions

An officer with an occupational itinerary including farmer, aircraft mechanic, gold miner, policeman and tankman in the Armored Force is Maj. Daniel W. Danielson, student member of the Third Company, First Student Training Regiment.

He left the University of California in 1933 with a degree in animal husbandry and the intention of using it in the appropriate occupation of farming. But it was just a step to another occupation for Major Danielson, and he soon found himself a general mechanic.

He became a specialist in his new field and in 1936 became an air corps mechanic with the 31st Bombardment Squadron at Hamilton Field, Calif.

Acquiring weight, Major Danielson decided to become a gold miner. This pursuit he followed until the San Francisco Fair opened, and he took the civil service examination for appointment to the metropolitan police force there.

The department was seeking many policemen for temporary duty at the fair, but the major did so well in the examination he got a permanent assignment to the force. He was sent to the San Francisco Police Academy, where he became one of more than 50 students taking a three-month course.

His instruction was in such subjects as first aid, marksmanship and ju jitsu. He characterized the course in ju jitsu as being of most value to him. "Ability in this line," he said, "has stood me in good stead more than once."

Major Danielson's police career ended with a call to active duty in the army in February 1941. He was at Fort Knox, Ky., for a year with the 69th Armored Regiment as maintenance officer. He then transferred.

With his love of action and travel the major is now in what branch? You've guessed it—the paratroops!

24th General Dental Chief Is Lt. Colonel

Major Charles W. Rossner, chief of dental surgery for the 24th General Hospital, has been promoted to lieutenant-colonel.

Coming into service with the anticipation of the Tulane unit, 24th General Hospital, Col. Rossner has been on duty since July, 1942. Prominent in Louisiana dental circles, in civilian life he was engaged in private practice at New Orleans.

SEATTLE—A 44-year-old letter of recommendation helped secure a job for 70-year-old Charley Burdett. He got a job with the same firm which had given him the letter when he left to enlist for the Spanish-American war.

CAPTAIN RAY O. PHILLIPS, officer in charge of the demolition section, Parachute school, Fort Benning, Ga., is shown lecturing on the destruction of bridges and other installations. The model shown is a replica of a span actually dropped in to the Trinity river near Dallas, Texas, in a tactical training problem. In the background is a paratrooper-demolitionist, rigged out with necessary equipment. (Signal Lab Photo by Stock.)

U. S. Paratrooper-Demolitionists Are Martians, Mules Combined

He looks like a combination "man-from Mars" and pack mule. A composite individual, he is commando, shock trooper, and glorified blower-upper. This is the U. S. Army version of the paratrooper-demolitionist.

In that myriad of pockets, he carries grenades, K-ration concentrates, work tools, pliers, several rounds of ammunition, plus enough TNT to blast hell out of the average small stream bridge, or a concrete pill box, and tucked in among these bundles is a short, death-dealing carbine.

Five of these blast masters, working as a team, can drop river spans up to 140 feet long and 40 feet high, within 8 minutes from the time they jump. The actual work of splitting and destroying takes a mere 4 minutes. This is not guesswork or mathematical theory. A mission of this type was actually performed, according to Captain Ray O. Phillips, officer in charge of the demolition section of the Parachute School, who participated in the problem.

It was a span across Trinity river, southeast of Dallas, Texas, on a road which had been condemned. The bridge was in good condition, itself, and was to be taken down for salvage. Furthermore, local county officials specified certain requirements as to which way the different portions should fall.

Ask for Job

Members of the first demolition outfit under the supervision of Captain Phillips, lean west Oklahoma rancher, from West of Fairview, asked for the job, upon receiving the consent of local authorities, they set to work planning the operation.

It called for three weeks of painstaking study and rehearsal. Every wartime factor was considered. Since in actual combat it would not be feasible to survey the structure ahead of time, a scale model costing $300 was constructed from aerial photos and S-2 reports, showing minute details of bridge and surrounding terrain.

Five men could do the job. Each was assigned a specific position on the span, with the exact amount of his necessary charge computed and prepared. Small bridges were constructed and blown in test rehearsals. When this was perfected, the group set out for their mission, 1200 miles away, an objective which none of them had seen.

Reaching this point, demolition experts were dropped on both sides of the Trinity.

"We were slowed up somewhat by mud," said the captain, "one detail which did not show up in our intelligence data. However, everything else went like clockwork. Charges were placed to divide the bridge in thirds, as plans. The caps set, and Boom! The whole frame shuddered and dropped into the stream simultaneously. Quick as a flash, another report, and two concrete bridgeheads toppled."

FASCINATING WORK

At the school, every effort is made to give the student a well rounded background in explosives. Actual demonstration is supplemented with field problems performed by future demolitionists. Each man has an opportunity to handle and set off 14 different charges. Individual initiative and ingenuity are encouraged, since "store bought" explosives are seldom available under combat conditions. Methods of constructing booby traps, land mines, and anti-charges from materials at hand are dimonstrated. All through the three weeks course, necessity of using just the right amount of explosives is stressed. Use no more than needed . . . once out alone, what's on hand must go a long way.

Another phase trains demolitionists to drive motorcycles, motorboats, locomotives, and tanks, for a man who knows how a vehicle operates is better able to put it out of commission. It is also possible that enemy equipment may provide transportation for getting home.

Captain Phillips added, "Brother, when five of these devils drop behind the enemy lines . . Hell's afoot. Each one can create a little Dante's inferno all by himself."

Texas Golfer Takes Course

Singletary Played Alt Top-Flighters

If one of Texas' best young amateur golfers can be as good an officer as he is a golfer, then the 2nd Student Training Regiment will be producing a mighty good officer.

The young man is Sgt. John P. Singletary of the 20th Company and Beaumont, Texas. A golfer since he was fourteen the sergeant is one of the many fine athletes in the company. For the last twelve years he has been playing golf in Texas, the Pacific Coast, and the Mid-West. During this time he has met some of the nation's top golfers, both professional and amateur. Included in this group are men like Byron Nelson, Lawson Little, Dutch and Jimmy Hines, and such amateurs as Henry Todd, Don Schumaker, Reynolds Smith, and Jack Munger.

A list of the tournaments played in and the ones won shows that John is a pretty mean boy with the woods and irons. He has played in such tough meets as National, Western, Texas and Houston Opens, the Western Amateur and Galveston Invitations.

IN FOURTH PLACE

In the Houston Open, Singletary tied for fourth place. In that tournament he had to face some of the country's top stars and did very well to tie for fouth place. Another excellent showing was in the Beaumont Invitation when he defeated one of the Lone Star State's top golfers, Don Shumaker, in the finals.

Singletary has been in the Army for the last two years, during which he has been stationed at Headquarters 3rd Army, San Antonio, Texas. In this time he has played in two tournaments, the National Open in Fort Worth in June 1940, and in the Army tournament in San Antonio. In the latter, he won second prize.

John has had several fine rounds, one of his finest being a 66-67 on the Pine Grove Country Club in Beaumont, which stands as the course record. These good scores are mainly due to a fine approach game.

Army Provides Timely Hit Kits For Doughboys

Although he may be a long way from home, the American soldier will never feel far from Broadway under the new plan of the Army to provide every soldier with copies of the latest song hits, Lt. Col. Charles E. Finnegan, special service officer at Benning, says.

To meet a demand from the ranks for songs which soldiers can play and sing, especially for late popular numbers, Army authorities have prepared a special packet of new song hits, containing the words and music to six popular songs. The packets are called "Hits Kits" and will be sent to all units each month, starting at once.

Twenty-one of America's outstanding names in radio and the popular music field have agreed to serve as a committee, with Fred Waring as chairman ,to select the six songs to make up the Army "Hit Kit."

FIRST ISSUE RELEASED

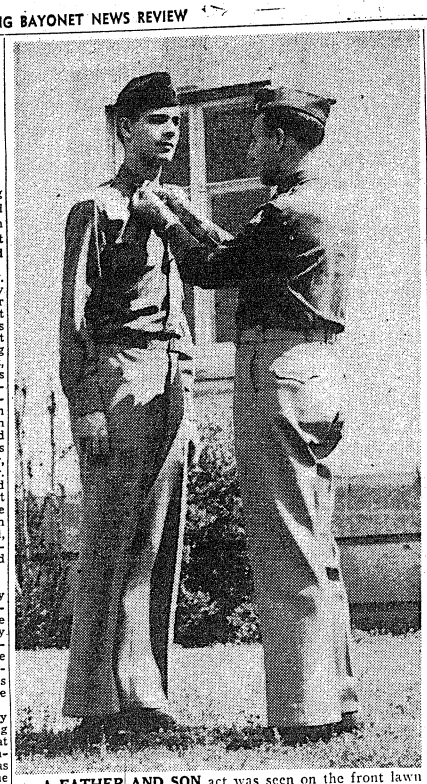
The first issue of "Hit Kits" has already been released and contains the following numbers: "This Is The Army, Mister Jones," "There Are Such Things," "Move It Over," "I Had The Craziest Dream," "I've Got Sixpence," and "Praise The Lord and Pass The Ammunition." New arrangements of old favorites such as "For Me And My Gal" will be included in the "Kits," from time to time.

Fifty "Hit Kits" will be packed in a single envelope and be mailed out monthly on the basis of one to each 200 men. This will provide one copy of the words to each 4 or 5 men, and enough copies of the music for each instrument rack in the camp.

Special effort, by all available means, will be made to get the new "Hit Kits" to soldiers in combat area on all of our fighting fronts.

Replacing brass buttons and insignias on overcoats and blouses with plastic ones will make more metal available for war production. It is expected to result in a saving of 365,000 pounds of metal in 1943. They new plastic buttons are exact reproductions, are nontarnishable and will not reflect light. As an additional step in metal conservation, manufacture of distinctive insignia for regiments, separate battalions, etc., will be discontinued.

Colored Diamond Ace Joins Unit Of Third Regiment



Corp. Frederick F. Beckett, Jr., who was regarded as one of the smoothest shortstops in the Colored American League by baseball writers, has been assigned to the Service Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment. Beckett, who comes from Everett, Mass., was playing with the Cleveland Giants at the time of his Army induction.

Interested in baseball since he was a youngster, Beckett played on high school and semi-professional teams and then was purchased by the Philadelphia Stars of the major colored league in 1938. The Cleveland Giants offered the highest bid and took over his contract in 1940.

Maintenance Men Rate Promotions

Four promotions in the Maintenance Battalion and one in Division Headquarters company of the Tenth Armored Division have been announced by Major Paul W. Newgarden, division commander.

William H. Miller, Jr., Richard S. Hart and Dale N. Baker, all of the Maintenance Battalion, have been promoted to the rank of technician fourth grade, and James E Chandler, also of the Maintenance Battalion, has been made master sergeant. In Division Headquarters company, Pvt. Edward C. Scanlon has been advanced to the rank of technician fifth grade.

A FATHER AND SON act was seen on the front lawn of the Infantry school headquarters building one day this week when Colonel M. A. Sanderson, post dental surgeon, pinned the double bars of a captain on the shoulders of his son, Captain M. A. Sanderson, Jr. The younger Sanderson was graduated from a basic course at the school in February, 1942, has been a tactical officer in the 30th company of the Third student training regiment. 501 Paratroopers Were Nucleus of Uncle Sam's Winged Infantrymen

Regiment Returns To First Home; Many Familiar Faces

BY LT. J. E. FLYNN

Back in 1940 the 501st Parachute Battalion, nucleus of Uncle Sam's great present-day Para-Army was making military history at Ft. Benning. Most of what we know about military parachuting today comes from that experimental group, who risked their preciously few necks to lay the ground-work for today's foolproof system.

Much of this experimental work was done under the watchful eyes of experts, and Mr. and Mrs. N. America didn't find out what was going on until newsreels displayed them filling the sky with whipped and billowing silk. More or less complete information about the battalion and its work was circulating around the country in the form of a motion picture called "Parachute Battalion", and the usually complacent public immediately accepted them with band-wagon acclaim. The distinctive uniform of the Paratrooper became the symbol of a man of daring, of physical fitness, and a living representative of America's answer to the enemy's airborne challenge.

MUCH SILK

Much silk has all-streamed under the tail since then. During furlough seasons the streets of almost every town from Bangor to San Pedro are pounded by Paraboots. Whole regiments of them have come and gone at Fort Benning, and still the great planes fly, spewing hundreds of new trainees into the blue sky. The "Geronimo" battle cry has now been heard in Africa, and will be heard from Oran to Yede Bay.

That cry and all of those early-established traditions could not be allowed to dust on official shelves when the old 501st went over to prove themselves in combat. Somewhere in the mountains of north Georgia a slim, boyish-looking colonel was forming a new regiment. He knew all of those old traditions. He knew that any regiment which bore the name of that original group would have to live solidly up to it, and on these principles Colonel Howard R. Johnson began organizing the 501st Parachute Infantry.

GRUELLING WORK

For thirteen weeks this regiment plowed through basic training under the detail-conscious eye of its commander. Long rungs with full equipment, swift, stealthy night marches, and gruelling daylight maneuvers have toughened these men up to a parity with any troops in the world. Many fell by the wayside, but those who came through successfully carry the strength and the purpose which is so necessary at this time to maintain the security of the homes from which they came.

This regiment is now at Fort Benning to earn its wings. In a sense, the 501st is home. Here it was conceived, here it was born, here it realized full manhood, and from here it wil go to train further for the cataclysmic struggle which so will determin whether we live in homes or concentration camps.

Many of the old 501st are with us. Major Julian J. Ewell, a West Pointer, is executive officer, and other personnel include Lt. Don Ducer, Sergeants Gordon, Peters, and Sadlo and Tate. No other regiment can rightfully claim the "Gerinimo" cry as its own. We inherited it by right of name. It's our torch to hold high, and "Geronimo" will be a name, in the words of Colonel Johnson, "to inspire confidence in our friends and terror in our foes."

Soldier Gets Draft Notice From His Board

A polite explanation to the effect he will be detained by important business has been sent by Candidate Robert L. Sickler, Seventh Company of the Third Student Training regiment, in response to a request by his draft board to appear for a primary physical examination.

Sickler received the notice last week and it stated while the examination would not be final, attendance was compulsory unless the "selectee" should be detained by illness or important business. The candidate is registered with a Philadelphia Selective Service board.

SUPPLY MEN PROMOTED

Two enlisted men of the Supply Detachment, Supply Division, Section One, Fourth Service command, have been promoted upon the recommendation of their detachment commander, according to an announcement from post headquarters. Private First Class John P. Chrzanowski has been elevated to the rank of technician fifth grade, and Private Charles H. Allen has been promoted to the rank of private first class.

'Frenchy' Sees Loveliness In Box Of M-2 Ammunition

3rd STR OC Tells Harrowing Tale Of German Drive On France

BY O. C. ROBERT McCLEAN
10th Co., 3rd STR.
(First Prize, Features)

"It's beautiful, Frenchy said, pointing to a full box of M2 ball ammunition.

The 10th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, was on the range and Frenchy had been admiring the ammunition all morning.

A lot of things have been said about M2 ball ammunition but exclamations over its beauty have been rare. Only a man who has had Frenchy's experiences in this war can see loveliness in an abundant supply of ammunition.

As Frenchy explains it: "You see, there were but five of us and we had rifles that were half a century old. We had six rounds of ammunition per man and we were to hold up the advance of the German army."

The mail clerk of the 10th Company nicknamed the officer candidate "Frenchy" becase he could not pronounce his real name. He must remain simply "Frenchy" because his father is still a prisoner of war in France and mention of the family name might bring on additional penalties and persecution.

UNSCATHED

Combat is supposed to mark a man, but not so in Frenchy's case. He has had experiences in this war that would gray the hair of a dozen men but Frenchy apperently has come through all his harrowing experiences unscatched.

Frenchy's story begins the day war started, in September 1939. He was in New York then and he did not lose much time getting back to his native France. The rest of his story, from the time he fanded in France and got on a train to join his regiment are told in his own words as follows:

"I was on this train", he relates. "I did not have a uniform with me. In the middle of the night, the train stopped and an official came aboard. I explained to him that I was an officer. He said: 'Good. There are troops here. They are moving up to the front. They badly need officers.' I told him I would be happy to be of service.

"I was a machine gun company. I was taken to the commanding officer. He was happy to see me. He provided me with a uniform. We moved out.

DIVE BOMBEES COME

"In a few days we had reached the point where we had orders to prepare a defense position. We started to dig in. The German dive bombers came. They ignored us and dropped their eggs on artillery to our rear. The artillery was wiped out.

"Then came the tanks. We got down in our holes and they passed right over us. We had no anti-tank equipment, not even a 'Molotov cocktail", so we let them go. They crushed several of our machine guns and passed right on. We got ready for the wave of infantry that should have followed. It didn't come that day.

"The next morning at dawn the German infantry struck. We turned them back with our guns. In the early afternoon they came again and again we sent them back. For two days they hammered at us and for two days we pushed them back. They seemed to prefer always to attack just before sunrise and shortly after the noon hour. They would try to find the weak parts of our defense but always we were lucky and they were not.

ONLY OFFICER LEFT

"On the morning of the third day, this was the situation: I was the only officer left. The others were dead. I had 20 men who were still able to fight. I had 11 men who were still dying, and dying very painfully and slowly. It is a terrible thing to watch a man die and know that there is nothing you can do for him. We were isolated. There were no aid stations. We had only a pitifully small supply of ammunition left. I had no orders to cover the situation. Perhaps we had been sent there to die. A soldier must expect that. For all I knew, the whole German army was due any moment.

"What did I do? I did what I had been trained to do, what every well-trained soldier would do in a position such as that. I stayed.

"On that third day, the Germans attacked twice more, right on their regular schedule. If they had known how few we were, they might have walked right over us. But they were cautious and we managed to deceive them into thinking we were a much larger force.

REAR GUARD ACTION

"On the fourth day the Germans were gone. Where, I shall never know. War is full of perplexities like that. That afternoon, by some miracle, a messenger reached us with orders to fall back and form a rear guard for the regiment.

"Picture us. Twenty men who were barely able to walk. All of them exhausted from days of fighting, hungry and sick. And, of course, we had very little ammunition. A few good bursts from our guns and it would be all gone.

"We marched. We marched 30 miles before we contacted the main party. We set up a rear guard patrol. We had not eaten for days. Then we had the good luck to discover a farmhouse. We bought a calf from the farmer, slaughtered it and started to cook it. We were almost delirious from hunger. Then came the word that the Germans were only a mile behind us. We threw the calf on the farmer's manure pile for the Germans and went on. We marched, I suppose, 60 miles more. How terrible that march was. We walked in a half-sleep. We fell down and got up again. We didn't dare sleep.

"We didn't know what was happening to France. We had no news. All we know was that we must protect the rear of our larger force.

ARMISTICE FALSE ALARM

"We reached a village. Someon told us that an armistice was to be signed. They told us the fighting was over. We fell down and slept in our tracks.

"When I awoke, I found that no armistice had been signed. The fighting was still going on. I called for volunteers in the village. Among the able-bodied men available, we finally formed a small company to make a stand at the village. How many of us? Five. Aand three of us were priests. We found an arsenal where arms were to be issued to us. The arms were rifles that had been made in 1874. We found six rounds of ammunition per man. We prepared to fight. We were ready to die then, I suppose, about as ready to die as I have ever been in my whole life.

"We waited for the Germans to reach the village. And then another of those perplexities of war happened. The Germans by-passed us, swept around the village. We wept with disappointment. It was good to be alive, of course. It is always good to be alive.

NIGHTMARISH DAYS

"I can not describe those nightmare days. We didn't know what was happening anywhere. Flying columns of German armored units moved all over the countryside. Much of what they did made no sense to us.

"Several other officers reached the village and one evening we sat listening to the radio broadcast from London. General De-Gaulle spoke. He urged Frenchmen not to surrender but to revolt and escape.

"We decided to make a try for it. The rest is all jumbled in my mind. We reached the unoccupied part of France and I succeeded in getting into Spain. I reached there in a ragged cost I had bought from a farmer. The heels were gone from my shoes. The Spanish promptly threw me into jail.

"I had the luck to get word through to the American and British consuls. I was free again. I took the first Clipper to America. Now I am ready to fight again. Only this time I will have enough ammunition. Best of all, this time I will be with the Americans. Americans believe in fighting. I like them."

Because of his proficiency in languages, Frenchy could have had a civilian job for the duration but he chose the Army. And why did he choose the infantry? His answer is:

"I believe in fighting."

May All of Us Become 'Screwballs' Like Him

By LT. F. M. SCHILLING
3rd Prize, Features

It had me beat why this guy was always bucking, what with no ratings in the company open. Hadn't been any for months. Quick damn, it looked as if there weren't going to be none, either, unless they got out another T-O with more stripes. But the kid kept up his dizzy pace in all-round, too-damn efficiency. It gave me the snakes and had me beat nine ways. Maybe, I figures, he is a "screwball" . . . grade A.

We tagged the kid "Blitz" almost from the start, on account of that was what he done in his spare time. But the monicker he signs with on the payroll was Micheal C. Sheehan and that should have been O. K. by his sarge (that's me), who's got half Murphy and half O'Leary in him, and not counting my great-grand uncle who married a Kelly.

'BLITZ' FROM START

Well, as I was saying, the kid was "Blitz" from the start. He'd pull K. P. without no gripe. In fact, I used to sneak him on when things got tough, like Christmas Day, cause I knew pretty well that he'd keep on smiling and doing the job while the others kept squaking about "getting on the list" . . . and stuff like that you all heard before. It got me so bad I couldn't sleep a couple of nights, trying to figure it out, and then feeling as rotten as hell for taking advantage of the "Blitz" and his way of doing the job right. "A guy's no good unless he gripes," we used to say in the old army. Something must have been off the beam in the kid's head. Maybe he didn't know no better.

And I wasn't the only one who figured it out that he was a screwball. The fellows in the outfit got wise the second week he bunked here, most of the men thought he was bucking for a rating that they hadn't gotten wind of, so they kept on the ball for a couple weeks and bucked right along with him. The outfit sure improved for a while. It got kind of lonely in the orderly room waiting for someone to chew up. The "Blitz" had worked a miracle.

WRONG HOLE

It didn't last long, though. After the fourth week the fellows couldn't keep up the space with the kid, besides, it seems that someone got straight dope that they were barking at an empty hole. From then on the "Blitz" was poison. They left him completely alone, they hooked him on C. Q., on guard, and had him dogrobbing K. P. on week-ends. I guess I was mostly to blame.

The kid took it as it was dished out for five months straight. He didn't even put in for no pass, although the old man had me feel him out for one at least a dozen times. He didn't bunk fatigue neither, or haunt the sick book, or duck to the P. X., or goldbrick around. As I said before, it had me beat.

Me and old Sarge Mullen of Company B got to talking it over about the "Blitz" one afternoon while pulling over some varnish-remover we got by pulling our rank on a couple of B and C students who are burning hash while our own boys are loafing it at home for 15 days. Mullen is whacky on this "psychology" that he picked up from some book he found at the U. S. O. He figures it out that maybe we can solve the "Blitz" with a little intelligent reconnaissance of the kids 201. But that didn't do no good, except we learned his older brother was with the 55th. That was no dope, though . . . at least it didn't explain "Blitz."

DEEP FIGURING

Now I know that it was wrong for us to check further, but Mullen and I really got to deep figuring. "There must be a solution," he says to me. So we hotfoots it to the kid's bunk, "Not such a good job of policing up today," says the sarge, and I notices the "Blitz" has left a couple of letters lying almost under the pillow. This is the first time he's slipped up, I'm thinking to myself. Suddenly I snaps on the light in my mind, "Maybe the answer's in them letters," I says. But they was kind of old and worn out from lots of handling, and I begin to feel that they couldn't be much help.

I didn't notice the post mark until after. The letter was from the kid's folks who was visiting the islands and just having a helluva good time. They mentioned about seeing Joe and how well he looked. "My God," says Mullen in a voice that nearly scares me, "Joe must be the brother in the 55th . . . and look at the post-mark and date!"

It made me feel kind of funpy, sort of sick, to remember just what happened to the 55th. The "Blitz" had his folks there visiting Joe. I remember the newspaper reports. They got the civilians, too, those little rats. The second letter just told what I'd already figured . . . it was all three . . . Mother, Dad, and Joe.

You should see our outfit now. At long last we're really soldiering, and we're moving out next week. Maybe you'd like to meet the fellow who'll someday replace me as first sarge. Folks, meet Corporal Michael C. Sheehan.

Tiger Officer Is McCoy As A Big-Game Hunter

Bags Big Bengal Tiger On French Indo-China Safari

One 10th Armored Division Tiger has not only matched wits with a real tiger in French Indo-China, but he went on to slay his fierce adversary in a dangerous jungle hunt. He is Lt. Col. Joseph I. Lambert, Provisional Battalion commander, of the 11th Armored regiment.

The tiger is looked upon with mingled awe and terror by the natives of Indo-China. He performs incredible feats of strength and agility, such as jumping over a six-foot fence with the body of a man between his powerful jaws. Even a single scratch from one of his razor-like claws may prove fatal. He prowls through the dense growth of the jungles by night and pounces upon his prey with the speed of lightning to deal sudden and violent death. It is small wonder, therefore, that the superstitious natives speak of him with the greatest respect and call him "Mr. Tiger."

It was while he was stationed in the Philippine Islands some years ago that Colonel Lambert, rifle expert and big game hunter, made the decision to add a tiger's head to his collection of trophies. One day he boarded a ship for Saigon, which was the capitol of Lower Cochin-China before the French conquest in the 1860's.

INTO STEAMING JUNGLES

The colonel organized a safari consisting of Ken Mois, members of a race of savage Indonesians of Malayan ancestry who are related to the Filipinos, and one French guide. He led this party some 75 miles to the northeast of Saigon and penetrated the dense, steaming jungle until a point not far from the border of Annam was reached.

"We are in the stamping grounds of the dreaded Bengal tiger," warned the Frenchman. "In habits these animals are far more active and agile than the lion, and they exhibit a large amount of fierce cunning. They move noiselessly and stealthily through the thick brushwood of the jungles. When the great cat appears you must shoot straight, and shoot to make an immediate kill."

The hunter of big game knitted his brows for a moment, then said, "We have provisions to last us indefinitely. For fresh meat we shall continue to bag us a deer every day. I've come to get a tiger even if it takes a month of continuous hunting. What do you recommend as the best way to catch the wily beast?"

"In this country you must put out bait," explained the guide.

"Y—es, I understand that, for I've been informed that one cannot stalk a tiger," replied the colonel. "Neither can the big cat be hunted from the back of an elephant as is the custom in India, for the jungle is too thick in this territory. What I want to know is what kind of bait to use and where to use it."

DEER BAIT

"Deer and banteng are bou.. recommended for bait," the Frenchman pointed out. "They are killed first, and then hauled to a game trail. A point which offers perfect concealment on one side for the construction of a boma is selected as the spot to plant the bait. In order to catch our prize it is necessary to fasten the bait securely and hide in the boma until the beast appears."

Colonel Lambert and his guide explored the area until they found a good game trail, one that apparently had been created by elephants seeking food and water. When the desired spot was located, a boma was fashioned in the brushwood adjoining the trail. A fresh deer carcass was brought up and tied to a tree about 15 yards away.

Daily for more than a week a new carcass was secured to the spot in front of the boma. Each morning at dawn the bait was examined, only to be found undisturbed.

The colonel was not discouraged by this, however. He knew that the ferocious jungle beast he wanted for a trophy rested and slept during the day and hunted prey at night. He knew that once the savage animal had made a kill he returned to feed on the carcass again and again until it was consumed. Once the bait would be discovered, therefore, his great chance—the opportunity to bag a tiger—would come.

BIG CAT SMART

Early one morning Colonel Lambert discovered that the bait had been disturbed during the previous night. He climbed into the boma. For hours he waited in absolute silence, but no tiger appeared. The hunter returned on the following day and resumed his patient watch. Again no jungle cat showed up.

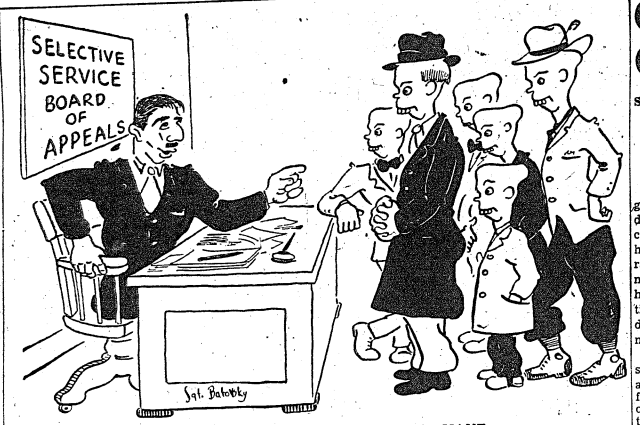
For the next couple of weeks there were no new developments. Each day a fresh carcass was fastened in place. Finally, on the twenty-third morning, there was evidence that a really hungry cat had come across the bait. The colonel's pulse quickened and he crawled into the boma with a feeling of expectancy.

Dawn fused swiftly into a bright, sunny morning. The jungle fairly teemed with wild life. Several hours later, about 9 o'clock according to the watch of the hunter crouched in his boma, the monkeys jumping about in the nearby trees began to chatter in great excitement.

Colonel Lambert peered sharply through the lookout of his hiding place. Several minutes went by. At last the object of his dreams became a reality. "Mr. Tiger," moving in majestic silence across his right, came into full view.

ADMIRING AWE

"What a beauty!" exclaimed the colonel to himself as a strange kind of fear gripped him. He faced the monster alone. Now the vicious cat approached him directly from the front. A deer carcass, only 15 yards away, lay between the hunter and the lithe, jungle beast.



"If that tiger reaches the bait before I get him, all my patience and effort will be lost," mused the colonel. "What will the natives think of me if he gets away? Again, suppose I should merely wound the beast, or miss him entirely."

Tensely he drew a bead on the tawny monster and squeezed the trigger on his Winchester. There was a shot. Upon on his hind feet reeled the tiger. In the next instant the beast fell on his side and lay motionless.

Colonel Lambert cautiously came out of the boma. Nearing the creature, he saw the bullet had penetrated the tiger's head from the front. A later examination revealed that the animal measured nine feet, six inches from nose to tail and weighed nearly 500 pounds.

The natives arrived in due time and cast many an admiring glance at the triumphant tiger hunter. He had slain one of the largest specimens of the great cat family. Yes, the tiger's head still proudly hangs on a wall in the colonel's home. And Colonel Lambert stands out as the only 10th Armored Tiger who really knows what a tiger is.

SAN FRANCISCO — (CNS) — During a cold spell Mugs, the Zoo giraffe, skidded and fell on the ice. Trying to regain his stance he skidded around some more and accidentally kicked himself in the jaw. Probably the first time in history a giraffe ever kayoed himself. Keepers dragged him into his shed and hoisted him back to his feet with a block and tackle. He remained slap happy until they gave him a shot of nerve stimulant and then he came around apparently none the worse for wear.

Life In Our New Army Ain't So Bad, At That

Every Chow House Should Serve Chow, Else The PX Will Get More Customers

SERGEANT ROBERT SCHWAB
21st Hospital Train
Care of 24th General Hospital

Let us first of all delve into this thing called chow or mess. It is one of the most important things, if not the most important thing, in a soldier's life. So you see that it should be run with care and cleanliness. There should be a system to it, and it should vary from this system as little as possible.

First of all, every chow house should have chow in it. If not, then the soldiers will not patronize it! Secondly, the chow should be at least a third of the way digestible, if not, then the PX gains several more steady customers, or former chow hounds. Then too, the cooks should be half way reasonable with the men. For instance, they shouldn't whack a guy's finger off just because he is trying to hook another slice of butter. How does a situation like this usually end up? Simple, in the future chalk up another customer for the PX, and at the present chalk one up for the hospital.

Now comes the problem of the mess equipment. I feel that at any time it is at all possible the chow house should furnish the eating utensils for the men, instead of making the men use their mess kits. After all, soldiers have many things to do besides waste their valuable time washing mess kits. For instance, what about that daily siesta after the noon chow? It is practically an all around morale builder, except of course on the KP's. But then they don't have it so bad, they have the smell of food in their nostrils all day long. I feel that this one fact alone is the reason whoy most soldiers clamor to have their names put on the KP list. Then too, these same men always do the little misdemeanors that consistently keep their names on this grand and glorious honor roll.

ANY DETECTIVES?

When I was first initiated into this so-called club of Uncle Sam's, I was very fortunate. A fellow, everybody called him sergeant, lined the whole da— bunch of us up, and then asked a very direct question. "Who", he asked, "knows anything about detective work?" Since I had read several mystery stories in my time, and never failed to read Dan Dunn, daily, I felt qualified to answer the sergeant's question, which I did. That first week, my friends, is when I learned just what a policeman's job in the army is! I remember the first day of it. The messy sergeant and a lieutenant were talking, and as I looked up the messy sergeant pointed to me and said to the lieutenant, "No Sir, that's the only crack pot we have in the kitchen!" I looked at the pot I had in my hands, but I couldn't find any crack in it. I have often wondered what he was talking about.

Well so much for this shilly shally. The next step to be taken up is manners, or the way a guy eats. To cover this subject thoroughly let us first define two very familiar words, chow hound. A chow hound is a thing that walks (anyway it never gets farther than a slow lope more than three times a day, and double time are two words it never uses unless accompanied by the word chow) on two legs, and has a beaten path that always ends up at the chow house door. He is a normal looking creature, and at times becomes deeply engrossed in the study of literature. He can answer any question, picked at random, about any popular comic magazine published in the last three months. He has been known to have solved mysteries in a day's time, that have taken Dick Tracy two months to figure out! Remarkable, you say. Perhaps, but as I always say, every man to his own opinion.

WHAT'RE HIS HABITS

Let's probe deeper into this creature's habits. First, let's ask some questions in regards to his habits. How does he have the instinct to dash from his barracks, always to be first in the chow line? Is he a famous runner, and in that way eludes his would be fellow glory seekers? Has he taken a special course in this art? Does he do this mad dashing because of his unmistakeable love for food? Has he ever been known to have missed a meal? Have you ever seen a peg legged chow hound?

For answers to these questions read Maggie Malone's column, How to bite the love bug back, in your daily paper—I give up!

Freeze's Sneeze In Wintry Breeze Rates 2 Leaves

For a brief but glorious moment the other morning, Officer Candidate Charles W. Freeze of the 13th Company, Third Student Training regiment, was vested with the insignia of a major. Freeze achieved this lofty, though temporary, status as the result of a loan from Maj. Randal E. Lee of his field jacket.

The candidate appeared for a formation of his class in the bleachers on Ebbert Hill insufficiently clad against the wintry breezes of early morning. Major Lee, instructor from the tactical section of The Infantry School, noted the O. C. freezing and sneezing in the stands and offered him the use of his field jacket, complete with the insignia of rank.

REMINISCING

Where the wild wind snarls through the craggy pass
And 'cross the open plain,
Where plumes of white cap the mountain's mass,
Where drives the sudden rain;
There the lonely sentry walks his post
And huddles in his fur,
And gloomily surveys the coast
And thinks of things that were . . .
And thinks of things that were
. . . how cruel
To think of yesterday,
His friends that were, the days at school,
The glorious first-week's pay;
The way the sun slipped in each
morn,
The way the children cried,
The way each venture new was born,
The way Cecilia sighed,
And how she loved to promenade
On Sunday afternoon,
How Dad would sit in his chair and nod;
How Monday came too soon;
Ay, yesterday was nice, no doubt—
Could it be so long ago?
But memories must be put to rout,
Memories are a foe
That rail at us, but yet, a friend
To walk with us by night,
Until the lonely vigil's end,
Until the shadows' flight.
So nurture them until the day
When this will all be o'er
And we'll go back to work and play
And memories make some more.

Corday Gives Helpful GI Etiquette Hints

SERGEANT ROBERT SCHWAB

TODAY'S HINT: How to eat frankfurters, and store valuable calories at the same time!

Oorday, famous chow hound, is guest in our column today. Oorday is an old timer at this thing called soldier's etiquette. In fact he has been considered a first rate chow hound for several months now. So today, I went to him seeking material for my article. With a bright smile and a deep chuckle, he agreed to furnish me with some material.

He felt as though he could give some very valuable tips on the art of eating the frank. Oorday figures that many a valuable calorie has been lost, simply because the average soldier doesn't know how to prepare his food prior to devouring it. I certainly hope that Oorday's tips, in today's article, will serve to enlighten you on this matter.

Oorday figures, from actual experiments, that approximately six and one-half (61-2) calories are used up in the eating of one frankfurter alone! He goes on to state that one (1) calorie is used up per swipe of the knife, per cut of the frankfurter. Figuring four (4) swipes of the knife per frankfurter, there alone are four (4) calories used. Now figuring one (1) dig with fork per cut of frankfurter, and figuring too that one-half (1-2) calorie is used up per dig, there again are two and one-half (2 1-2) calories. Adding the two figures together, Oorday arrived at the astounding figure of six and one-half (6 1-2)!

SCIENTIFIC RESULTS

Now here is the result of Oorday's scientific experiments conducted in the chow hounds laboratory—the mess hall. Oorday eliminated all swipes of the knife while eating his frankfurters. In fact he never uses a knife! At this point I quote Oorday. Quote: "My grandpaw et with a knife, why should I? I ain't old-fashioned!" Unquote.

Oorday uses only his fork. He proved that by eliminating the swipes with the knife, he saved four (4) calories. He also prides himself on the mastering of the one (1) dig with fork per frankfurter system. This system saves four (4) digs with fork per frankfurter, and gains two (2) more calories. By Oorday's system approximately six (6) calories are saved and stored up. Surely by following Oorday's system you too can store up calories, and thus become hale and hearty.

I'm positive that Oorday's experiments, on the art of eating the frank, have enlightened you tremendously, and I know too that this tale of his daring has thrilled you. So until the next time I will say Adios, and I'll be seein' youse at the chow house door!

YORK, Pa.—(CNS)—After 35 years of careful planning, the funeral of Howard S. Thomas has been held just as he wanted it following his recent death. He made his own coffin of $4 worth of cherry wood and exhibited it in his barber shop. He carved his own tombstone complete with all inscriptions—except the date of his death. He chose pallbearers and outlived four of his six original selections.

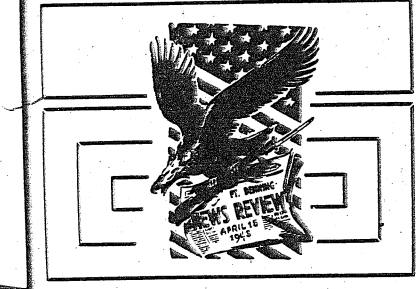
GALVESTON, Tex.—(CNS) — Francis Gause, 33, and his six children were injured when an Army medium bomber struck the top of his automobile while attempting a forced landing. The Army crew of five was killed.

Hospital Slates A Field Mass Easter Sunday

Outdoor Altar To Be Erected For Ceremonies

A field mass will be celebrated on the lawn of Station Hospital on Easter Sunday morning, weather permitting. Patients of the hospital, officers, nurses, medical detachment men and friends will attend.

Music will be under the direction of Pvt. Winfield Davis of the Medical Detachment, and Sgt. Frank Hines will be master of ceremonies. Father Ignatius McCarty, the Catholic chaplain of Station Hospital, will be celebrant of the Mass.



AMPLIFIER

An outdoor altar will be erected under the trees with a large evergreen as a background, while those attending will occupy the lawn immediately in front of the altar. An amplifier will carry the voice of the celebrant to the congregation.

The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass will begin approximately at 7 o'clock. In the event of inclement weather, the recreation hall of the Red Cross building will be used. Mass will be celebrated, as usual each Sunday, at 6 o'clock in this recreation hall, and there will be no Mass at 8 o'clock, the field Mass being said in its place.

Servicemen overseas do not have to file an income tax return. The date for filing a return and making payment is automatically postponed for a serviceman serving outside the continental limits of the U. S. for as long as he remains in overseas service during the present war. If you're in this country, you pay.

Soldiers Sweat In January In Good Ole Georgia State

But She Ain't So Bad After All, Soldier Opines

By PVT. JAMES E. SMART
Co. B. Maint. Bn.
10th Armored Division

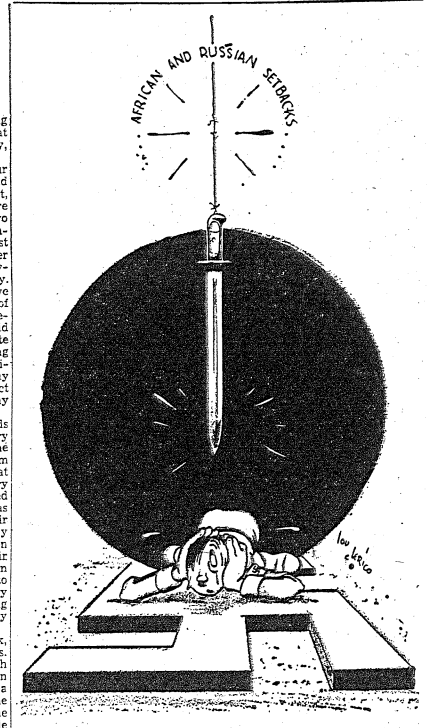
It seemed funny to be sweating in January, but that was just what we were doing in a big way, sweating.

As we walked along with our heavy packs on our backs and our gas masks slung on the left, and rifles on the right, we were all hoping that we were going to bivouac soon. The sun occasionally broke through the overcast sky, giving one a boiled lobster feeling, not quite dead, still having the ability to move slightly. The hopefulness with which we looked forward to the patch of woods that shaded the road beyond and the thought that it would soon be time for a ten minute break helped to keep us moving along. The commands of the officers seemed dead and far away but everyone heard with distinct clearness the command, "Company halt, fall out."

We all ran for the cool woods along side the road and every ones right hand went to the same place, the canteen hanging from our pistol belts on the right. That water sure felt good to our dry lips and throat. Spirits improved greatly and soon everyone was laying on their backs, using their packs for a pillow, eating candy bars and fruit that had been stuffed into spare corners of their packs for just such an occasion as this. Everyone was trying to imagine that they could just lay there and relax forever, thinking of all the swell times that they had had in years past.

Soon someone made the remark, what a hell of a state Georgia was. This remark was taken up with great enthusiasm and passed on down the line, each one adding a little more to it until by the time it had reached the end, all of the proud founders of the hell hole called Georgia must have turned over in their graves. "Why I'd even rather live in Colorado than I would in Georgia," came a remark from a white skinned lad with a beautiful broad eastern accent.

"Why brother," came the reply, "that damned state of Vermont where you hail from hasn't even been put on the maps yet. The government is thinking of starting a school out there to teach the people how to speak English." Soon the discussion or rather the destruction of every state was taken up by the gang in every form from the best Harvard English to the worst profanity that the illiterate is able to utter so fluently, from the slow sleepy southern drawl to every other brogue that is possible from so broad a land as ours.



WHISTLE SOUNDS

The whistle brought us to our feet with a jump. I looked at my watch and sure enough, the officers had given us extra rest time. I guess that they too were enjoying the conversation too much to break it up any sooner than was absolutely necessary. We were on the march again, but spirits were much improved from the rest. As we marched along we could hear the roar of a tank as it charged pell mell like an angry monster towards its target, and the staccato report from a machine gun in the distance.

The high pitched whine of an aeroplane brought the officers to an instant alert. Yes, sure enough it had spotted our column and with incredible speed had overtaken us and was preparing to bomb us to eternity if possible. Three sharp blasts on the whistle sent us scurrying at top speed to flop flat on the ground on either side of the road, our only protection. The recent rains made a mire of things, but, "Any port in a storm," as the old saying goes. The bombardier dropped two bombs, small sacks of flour, but we had scattered too quickly and blended too well with the surroundings for him to locate us and both missiles went way wild. It was only make believe this time but I'm sure that it was on every one's mind, "Just how long will it be before its the real McCoy?" The whistle called us back to the road and we resumed our march, somewhat muddy from our recent experience.

REST AND MARCH

That is the way an army marches, rest and march, rest and march, until it seems as though eternity would come before we stop. The dreaded cry of gas, gas, gas shocked everyone into an instant instinctive action, due to hours of tedious practice in gas mask drill. Every man moved as one unit, the right hand pulling off the cap and sticking it between the legs while the left hand tears open the gas mask carrier at the same time. In a matter of seconds

THE SWORD OF DAMOCLES DESCENDS
(Third Prize, Serious Cartoons)

everyone had turned into a grotesque "Man from Mars," and the march was resumed. The U. S. Army gas mask will stop any known chemical warfare agent but everyone dreads the day and prays to God that it will never come when we will have to endure a real gas attack. The hard drawn breath, the stinging of the face from unevaporated sweat makes life inside a gas mask a living hell and the minutes lengthen into hours until the all clear is given.

At last the command was given, "Column right, march," and we headed into the pine woods to bivouac for the night. We paired off in twos and my buddy and I picked a nice spot under the pines and proceeded to pitch our pup tent. Each man carries half of the tent, one folding pole, tent rope and five pegs. The two halfs button together at the top in a water tight joint. After the tent was pitched we dug our ditch around it to drain off the water in case it rained and choose a place protected from air observation and each one dug his slit trench for protection in case of attack. After our tents were camouflaged, it was time to turn to company duties such as diging latrines, KP's to help the cooks prepare the evening meal, the posting of gas and air raid sentries and the choosing of interior guards, out post guards, and Cossack post guards. Everyone would have liked to have curled up in his tent and gone to sleep, but every soldier knows that its better to be tired and sleep rather than dead, as we have guards for one reason only, protection.

CLOUDS GATHER

The clouds were getting thicker and now and then distant flashes of lightning and cleps of thunder gave everyone a good idea of the night to come. The growing wind made a restless sound in the tops of the tall pines, and everyone worked harder to get ready for the on coming storm. My pal and I drew first relief of interior guard and were lucky enough to get the same post so we at least had someone close that we knew out there in that wilderness around the camp. The "chow" call was a welcome sound and soon everyone was in line to have his mess kit filled with steaming hot food. The storm struck without a seconds warning. The rain, pouring down by the buckets full, was driven into sheets of water by the angry wind, soaking everything in its path. The mess kits were soon full of water but we kept on eating because one must have food in his stomach to keep on going. Thank God that we had put on our heavy G. I. rain coats and legging so we were dry inside anyway.

SORRY SIGHT

The guard was a sorry looking sight that night as we formed to march to the different posts. The rain had let up to a sprinkle now and the woods seemed like a tropical forest with enough mosquiotes present to inform us of their prepetual desire for blood, regardless of the season. It was so dark that you couldn't see your own guard partner five feet away and the dropping of the rain off the trees gave one the jitters thinking that the enemy was right upon you. A careless guard snapping a twig underfoot sounded like the explosion of a bomb. The cry of "Corporal of the guard, post number five, corporal of the guard, post number five," split the air like the crack of a cannon in the stillness. This steeled every ones nerves even more if that was possible. The enemy must be coming through all ready, was the tought on our minds.

We later found out that two rookie guards had captured a bewildered major who didn't know the counter sign. He was led meekly away by the corporal of the guard to be identified by other officers inside the camp. The first thing that a soldier learns is not to run if he is stopped by a guard. A guard out ranks the highest officer when he is walking his post and all officers value their life too much to try and pull a fast one. Slowly the minutes dragged on uneventfully except for the visit of the O. D. (Officer of the Day) and challenging an occasional gas sentry passing on his rounds. It was past time for the second relief to come on duty and we were dead tired. There was kind of a restlessness in the air, a kind of a second sense that tells a guard all is not well. At last we saw a light bobbing through the trees which proved to have the sergeant of the guard back of it with the next relief, for which we were indeed thankful.

ENEMY SIGHTED

We marched back into camp and after some looking around we found our tents in the dark and lost no time in hitting the bed roll. As tired as we were it was hard to go to sleep. The strange night noises and hard ground didn't help any. Soon the cry of, "Corporal of the guard, post number six," split the night and in a few minutes most of the posts were showing great activity. We had been right, the enemy was trying to come through in hordes and we had heard them in the distance, but our guards were on their toes and caught everyone of them.

Sweet sleep came at last and it seemed only moments before we were awakened again at 2:30 a. m. to walk our second and last relief. As I sleepily pulled on my shoes and leggings I suddenly realized that the skies were clear and a georgeous big southern moon with its millions of smaller assistants were doing as wonderful a job in illuminating the old world as the previous storm had done to darken it. When we had again taken our posts the woods seemed like a different place entirely. It now seemed friendly and beautiful with millions of moon beams filtering down through the tops of the tall pines, casting little pools of light on the carpeted floor of the forest. I couldn't help but think how we were enjoying the beautiful moonlight here and how it was being cursed on the battle front where utter darkness means safety. All was still and quiet and peaceful here, but I fear that millions of other soldiers all over the world were not so fortunate as we. The rest of our watch passed uneventfully by and we returned to our tents to sleep the remainder of the night.

GAS ALARM

The following morning after chow the command was given to strike camp and prepare to move. A good soldier can strike a tent and be completely ready to move in fifteen minutes. After a thorough policing of the area to remove all evidence that anyone had bivouacked there, the order was given to assemble in companies, ready to march. Suddenly the gas alarm was sounded and it was no false alarm that time because all ready huge clouds of tear gas was being blown down upon us by the wind. No time was lost in putting on the gas masks.

Charge after charge of tear gas was set off until we were standing in great billows of it. The heavy atmosphere from the recent rains pushed it down to the ground and one could see it swirl and curl like an angry serpent on the ground, but it couldn't hurt us in any way as it couldn't penetrate our gas masks regardless of how thick it was. Everyone was nervously running his hands along the edges of his mask to make sure that it was properly sealed. The order to march was given and we lost no time in getting out of the gassed area. A man has a great deal more respect for his gas mask after an experience like that because he realizes what the mask will do for him. Its uncomfortable to wear, its true, but one would be much more uncomfortable without it.

The homeward march was much like every other march and the sight of the barracks was a welcome one indeed. The officers inspected everyone's feet for blisters as soon as we had reached the barracks and removed shoes and socks. The shower room became the most popular place next and after that dry, clean clothes and a good, hot chicken dinner, most everyone was ready to lay down and catch up on some lost sleep.

Even though it did seem pretty bad at the time, I'm sure that we will all look back on it with pleasant memories. Thus ended our bivouac in Georgia.

Yankee Doodle Upsets Adolf's Plans, Doesn't Read 'Mein Kampf'

On Battlefield He Fails To Follow Hitler's Prescripton

BY SGT. TOM McDONALD

There is something about a soldier that utterly distinguishes him from the aviator and the sailor Like the wooden horse of Troy, the Ft. Benning soldier is always an instigator of complete surprise. Not only to the enemy, but to his fellow soldiers and girl friends as well.

Sometimes loudly, sometimes quietly, he always performs the unexpected. Examples of combat have revealed the poor churchhouse type of man whose wildest deeds in peacetime consisted of standing quietly at some bar sipping a mug of beer, suddenly rushing into the enemy with such wild, daring bravery that Japs, Germans, and adjacent rats have literally been annihilated before the soldier's surge.

Yet, strange as it may appear, if one had asked one of the soldier's friends what type of fellow he was, they would probably reply, "Oh, Smith? Well, he's just like any other guy, chases butterflies, drinks an occasional beer, and gripes about the Mess Sergeant."

Yet, strange as it may appear, if one had asked Hirohito or Adolf what kind of fellow this Smith was, these assinine Neophytes would have probably answered, "Dere American, hump!

He is wild and unpredictable, de big bums, dey killa alla my puppets before dey can adjust their range. Dey do not fight fair—dey did not read my book (Mein Kampf) predicting how I said dey would act. Dey is always upsetting my plans. Ach!"

1918 Veteran Says Modern Doughboy Has a 'Cinch'

By MR. SGT. J. T. SCOVILLE

It is indeed a privilege to serve as "guest columnist" and, as such, I should be listed at the very top as that is newest thing in the Army. In this column I will assume that among my readers (if any) there will be some of my fellow World War 1 veterans, and I imagine they will be surprised at some of the things the modern soldier thinks of as "his right" that we didn't dream of at all.

Those of us who learned the intricicies of "Squad Right" the hard way through countless hours of monotonous drill up and down the field will doubtless recall the many lectures explaining the absolute necessity of such drill to gain morale and obedience. It was so thoroughly instilled in our minds that the old timers will be amazed to learn that, except for 3 months basic training, very little time is devoted to close order drill and about the only movements left are "Forward March" and the flank movements. The old squad of 7 men and a corporal is a thing of the past. Most of the men are specialists of one kind or another, their training being a series of schools to develop a high degree of skill in a particular line.

MATTER OF COURSE

The modern doughboy takes as a matter of course many things of which we old timers would never dream. Our training camps of '17 were much inferior of those of today. Each camp had a "Liberty Theater" which, by the way, offered free entertainment to those few who could get in. Now theaters are scattered all over the camps, and though there is a small charge for admission the entertainment is far superior to the old days of World War I. Instead of the old regimental "Y" building, each company has a day room with—yes—real furniture, pool and ping pong tables. There is also a regimental recreation hall of about the size of the old "Y."

Who would have dreamed of "public quarters" for married Non Coms (or for officers either for that matter)? Many of the posts have adjacent villages built and operated by Federal Housing Authority where not only the wives of the Non Coms but the Non Coms themselves live spending most of the nights AT HOME.

Furloughs and passes are about the same as a quarter of a century ago and are, if anything, a little easier for the average soldier to get without having to "know the right person." The pay being so much higher, it is but natural that there are more soldiers traveling greater distances on furloughs and weekend trips.

DOCTORS' OFFICE

The Regimental Dispensary has become more like a Doctor's Office, there being no ward or other accommodation for patients. All who are too sick to remain in quarters are now sent to the Post hospital. The facilities there are far superior to any found in the old days. We still have all the old "shots" and many new ones and I really believe that I am at least immune to every thing except accident and old age. The old sarge who used to pass out at the first touch of the needle had a son who still reacts the same way and the old sarge's buddies have kids who make practically the same wisecracks about the "fallen hero."

Every effort is made to make life in a training camp as pleasant as possible. We sleep on steel cots with real mattresses, sheets and pillows, yes and we eat at a table set with China dishes and "real" silver. We even have salt and pepper shakers and catsup, etc. on the tables. The mess hall is a separate building with far better than our old ones, but the K. P. still peals potatoes in the same old way. The mad dash from barracks to latrine across a snow covered side walk in the middle of the chilliest night is a thing of the past as each barracks now has a latrine. Tent camps have been changed into "Hutment" camps and the digging of a pit latrine is a lost art.

The equipment of the 1943 doughboy is about the same as that of his Dad in World War I, with many added items. The two paramount pests, the bugle and the "Top kicks" whistle, remain unchanged but Taps doesn't always mean lights-out where ever one goes there is, as there always has been, an M. P. to take the joy out of life. That is, if the soldier has tried to put too much joy into life.

SAME OLD RUMORS

There are still the same rumors with about as much foundation and the regiment is still going to leave next week or next month for the North Pole, the South Pole or some way station. The colonel, the major and the captain is still either a "Heck of Aguy" or "A Heck of a swell Guy," the medico still "don't know how to give a guy anything but a dose of oil, a CC pill or an aspirin," but they still manage to keep the sick record of the troops far better than the average for a like group of civilians. There are still those who "should have been promoted — but" and there are those who "never would have been promoted if the captain new anything at all about them."

Colored Coach, Baseball Star, On Panther Nine

Corp. Moody Randolph has found an opportunity in the Service Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment to reshape the athletic career in civilian life that he was forced to abandon upon his induction in the Army in January, 1942. He played football here last fall and now is a candidate for the Service Battalion Panther baseball team.

A native of Ahoskie, N. C., Randolph played high school baseball and football and shortly after leaving school won a berth with the Norfolk Black Tars, professional baseball team, with which he played for two seasons. Later he returned to coach his home town team, the Ahoskie Black Tigers.

Randolph received his basic training at Fort McClellan, Ala., where he was given the name "Big Train", because of the heavy tasks he was able to perform.

'Chutists Get New March

508th Paratroopers Sing Song At Work

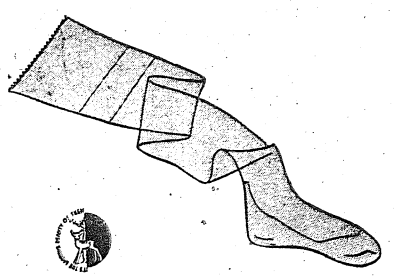
'Airborne we fly the sky
Paratroopers do or die'

Students and instructors alike at the Parachute School are singing at their work. It is the stirring "March for the New Infantry," completed with an airborne arrangement.

Members of the 508th Parachute Infantry introduced this version of the song, on their way through parachute training. Soon it was rolling off tongues, the length and breadth of the school. Work became easier and morale of the entire training center was raised. It was too great a stroke to go unhonored.

So a thousand of the "fightinest devils anywhere", men of the 508th regiment, and their band gathered during a break in classwork and had their lusty voices recorded. It was just for their own pleasure and also so that the tune might pass to future skywork again, still singing.

The song follows:



Airborne we fly the sky
Paratroopers do or die
Speed troops like the wind we go
We're sons o'guns! We're sons o'guns!
We won't take "no" for an answer,
Can't stop those paratroops,
Jumping down into the fray.
Oh! it's not the way it used to be,
A bigger and better infantry comes in by air today!

It used to be the infantry did nothing but march all day,
Dusty guys, with mud in their eyes,
Went slogging along the way.
But times have changed and now we range
The sky and sea of blue,
We fly a bit and then we'll hit the silk of a parachute. OH! ! ! !

...You can spot it every time

IT'S knowing what all the shooting is about plus all there is to know about 'chuting that gives the paratrooper his extra, skillful something.

It's knowing how to quench your thirst plus how to give you the fine feeling of refreshment that has made ice-cold Coca-Cola the best-liked soft drink on earth. Quality is the extra something. You'll taste it and feel it and enjoy it every time you tip up a frosty bottle of Coke.

Fifty-seven years of skill working with the choicest of ingredients creates its goodness. So, call for ice-cold Coca-Cola by its full name or by everybody's affectionate abbreviation, Coke. That's treating yourself right.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coke. Coca-Cola and Coke mean the same thing ... the real thing .... "coming from a single source, and well known to the community".

When people plan a happy time, ice-cold Coke just naturally fits into the plans. It's so convenient and it offers energy to active folks.

He can't pause for refreshment on the way down ... but watch him head for the familiar red cooler and ice-cold Coca-Cola when he does get the chance.

Ask any fighting man. He'll tell you that ice-cold Coca-Cola at a canteen adds a special touch to morale. And it adds refreshment, everywhere you get it.

The best is always the better buy!

Plenty of Talent In 3rd STR Unit

First call for baseball talent, which was issued almost simultaneously with the arrival of spring, brought a response from a large number of experienced diamond veterans in the Service Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment last week.

For the present, the team candidates are undergoing a limbering up program set up by the manager, Sgt. Charles L. Staples. It is expected that the season schedule, which is being prepared by Lieut. Jack Gutshin, battalion recreation officer, will include several collegiate as well as post teams.

Among the talented players responding to the call were Corp. Fredrick F. Beckett, Jr., who has played professional baseball with the Negro American league and exhibition all-star games in Cuba. He is trying for the catcher's position and will alternate at the shortstop spot, which he played throughout most of his league career.

Pvt. First Class Howard Wallace, who formerly played with the highly rated Passaic, N. J., Black Sox, a semi-professional team, has his eyes on the first baseman's job. Others who are making a strong bid for permanent positions are Pvt. Arnold Palmer, who used to play with the Big Georges and the Paragonas in Flushing, N. Y., and Corp. Frank Phillipson of Brooklyn, a versatile athlete in the battalion.

Ben (Evil Eye) Finkle, the champ hex artist of the world is now a private at Scott Field, Ill. Ben's left eye has stared many a ring great into submission for some reason or another. The Evil Eye was in Braddock's corner the night he licked Baer. He was at Solly Kreiger's stool the night he beat Billy Conn in Pittsburgh. He helped Lou Ambers beat Pedro Montanez. But now that eye is riveted on just three guys—Hitler, Tojo and Mussolini!

Profs Meet Brigade And Lawson Plays TPS

Three Generals Will Help Open Campaigns

Allen to Pitch, Fulton to Catch And Howell to Ump on First Ball

Two Benning baseball circuits will get off to an auspicious start Sunday afternoon at Gowdy field when a crackerjack doubleheader plus elaborate opening day ceremonies are planned for the first games in the Infantry School and Fort Benning leagues.

The opener at 1:00 o'clock will pit the Academic Regiment Profs, seven-time post champs, against the up-and-coming Student Training Brigade tossers as the pry-off tilt in the TIS loop. Immediately following that battle, the Fort Benning circuit opener will bring together Lawson Field and the Parachute School.

124TH BAND PLAYS

Appropriate opening day ceremonies will get underway promptly at 12:45 when the bandsmen of the 124th infantry strike up a march tune and lead the players of all four competing teams to the flag pole in deep center field.

There, Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, the post athletic officer and head of the F. B. A. A., will present the brand new Gowdy field flag to Capt. Hank Gowdy, now special service officer at the Infantry school. The man for whom the Benning park was named many years ago will then hoist the gonfalon to the top of the pole as a token of rededicating the field.

The band and players will then return to the infield where the diamond stars will line up on the base paths while the band stops at second base and plays the national anthem.

THE "FIRST PITCH"

Then will come the official "pitch-out" ceremonies with an all-star cast. Major General Leven C. Allen, commandant of the Infantry school, will do the pitching. Brig. General Walter Scott Fulton, post commander, will do the catching, and Brig. Gen. George P. Howell, commandant of the Parachute school, will do the umpiring on the first pitch. Thus will the "first ball" be thrown, and after that the ump will cry "play ball" and the loop seasons will be officially open.

EXPECT GREAT CROWD

One of the greatest crowds to ever jam the ball park is expected to be on hand when the Academic Profs take to the diamond for the first game in search of their eighth straight title. Despite the increased strength of many teams, the Profs still rate as an even money choice to repeat.

No less than five of the men who will probably be in the opening lineup Sunday have been holding down varsity slots on Hank Gowdy's TIS all-star nine while three Prof pitchers are also on the Doughboy squad.

As a matter of fact, the entire TIS outfield at present is an Academic Regiment affair with Chet Dabbs in left, George Hill in center, and hard-hitting Garnet Mercer in right. These same three will probably open Sunday.

STRONG INFIELD

In the infield Herb Moore, Academic's new tutor, who is a player-coach at first, and the stellar Benny Zientara at second are fixtures. Johnny Russo will probably take over the shortstopping for the Profs and Elmer Neibler is slated to start at third base.

Either Plunk or Fenno will do the catching for the defending champs and Joe Dickerson, ex-Milwaukee Brewer, or Rudy Runrus, former Rochester hurler, are favored for the opening mound choice. Lefty Lehner, Bill Bobo and two or three others give the Profs a good mound staff.

BRIGADIERS UNTRIED

The Brigadiers who will oppose the Profs are as yet untried, but they boast two corking good pitchers and a stellar catcher in Georgie Simmons, once of the Jersey City Giants who is also coaching the club. The moundsmen are Eden DeVolter, late of San Diego in the Pacific Coast loop, and Jim Prendergast, last year's mound ace for the Little Rock Travelers in the Southern.

Tommy Ryan, an outfielder, looks like a hitting star while McCluskey and Bamburger, who have formed the left side of the TIS infield so far, will probably be used in the same spots for the Brigade entry.

BUDDY LEWIS TO PLAY

The Fort Benning League opener will also bring together two crack nines. Lawson Field will boast the services of the outstanding player at the post, Buddy Lewis, for several years a star with the Washington Senators in the American League. The former Senator slugger will probably hold down an outfield berth.

The Fliers have developed a well-balanced nine behind some better-than-average pitching from Lefty Ritter and Tom Nelligan. Their Parachute School rivals also have a strong mound staff with Big Bob Grodzicki the most likely starter.

The chutists have dropped a pair of practice tilts to the 3rd Armored Regiment and Columbus but showed plenty of promise and are expected to be a contender for title honors in the loop. Ross, a left-fielder from the Three-I League and Kinard, hard-hitting infielder from the Florida State loop are the big guns for the TPS club at the plate.

Former Star In Colored League Now In 3rd STR

Fred Beckett Was Shortstopper For Cleveland Giants

Hero of many games in the Negro American league, Corp. Fredrick F. Beckett, Jr., is looked upon as a future mainstay of the Panther nine which soon will take the diamond for the Service Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment.

Beckett comes from a baseball family, his father, Fred Beckett, Sr., who lives in Philadelphia, starred with the Philadelphia Giants more than a score of years ago. The younger Beckett says he has known and loved the game since he was five years old.

He first started to attract attention while playing catcher with a Philadelphia high school team, going from there to the Central Stars of Philadelphia, a semi-professional outfit. Before playing organized baseball, Beckett picked up a few pointers on the professional game as a batboy with the Washington Pilots.

The Philadelphia Stars of the Negro National league bought Beckett from the semi-professional circles but he remained with that team as a catcher for only a month before his contract was purchased by the Cleveland Giants of the Negro American league. The team owner, William H. Ford, switched Beckett from behind the plate to the shortstop position, where he played edthrough the seasons of 1938, 1939 and 1940.

During the winters of those years, Beckett made several trips to Cuba to play exhibition baseball with all-star pickup teams in the principal cities.

Beckett was living in Wildwood, N. J., when he was called into the army just at the start of the 1941 baseball season. Until his arrival at Fort Benning about five months ago, Beckett was stationed at Fort Devens, Mass., where he played on the 366th Infantry team.

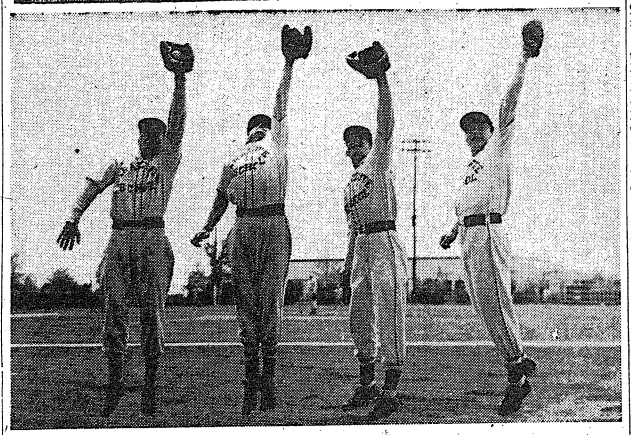
Tigers Plan Track Meet in Stadium For Division Stars

A 10th Armored division track meet will be held May 8 at Doughboy stadium on the main post under the direction of the division Special Service office.

In most respects it will be like any other track meet but "something new has been added" to give this the Army stamp: A 120-yard course with five obstacles involving hurdling, jumping, crawling and balancing, and a hand grenade throw—for accuracy.

Other scheduled events are as follows: 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 440-yard dash, 880-yard dash, mile relay, 440-yard relay, shot put, high jump and running broad jump.

Unit commanders are asked to submit their entries to the Special Service office by May 1.



Men discharged on account of physical disabilities during peace time can be drafted. Physical standards have been greatly lowered, and it is possible that your brother would now be acceptable.

N. Y. Congressman Gets In Fox Hole; Tank Rolls Over

A representative of the people who demonstrated the courage to undergo the severe phases of an officer candidate training visited the 13th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment last week.

He was Congressman Joseph Clark Baldwin of New York, who served in World War No. 1 as a lieutenant and showed by his actions and in the talk he gave the candidates that he has a good grasp of military matters. The Congressman won the applause of the company when he got into a foxhole and permitted a tank to run over him. His gesture served to quiet the fears of the candidates as they looked forward to the experience.

READY FOR SUNDAY—Chatting over the prospects of the Academic Regiment taking its eighth straight post crown this year are the three former pros in the top picture who will provide much of the batting punch for the Profs. They are Benny Zientara, star second baseman; Garnet Mercer, the hard-hitting rightfielder who smashed out 16 homers in the Three-I League last year, and Herb Moore, Cardinal farmhand who is coaching the defending champs and also plays first base. At the bottom are shown the leaping infielders of the Parachute School who oppose Lawson Field in the Fort Benning league opener. They are Third-baseman Kissel, Shortstop Migus, Second-sacker Kinard, and First-baseman Hudson. (Signal Lab Photos by Stock and Kortemeier.)

Timing and Follow Through Are As Vital In Army As In Sports

PFC. CHARLES W. VOORHIS
Co. F, Academic Regiment
1st Prize, Sports

There are various tricks of the trade whereby a sports writer creates a profound impression upon his reading public. By knowing the greats of the sports world (he shook the hand of Babe Ruth) he can write about them authoritatively. Through those associations he is deemed to be an expert in those sports with which the greats are associated. He goes to great lengths to analyze those sports and predict the outcomes of competitions in them.

He can further his high estate as an expert by delivering technical discourses on the proper methods of gaining perfection in those sports. His chief stock in trade—and don't tell me there is a sportswriter who has never written about them—are his comments on the value of timing and follow through.

SHINES IN GOLF

He shines in his golf articles. He'll tell you the impact of the clubhead and ball must come at the moment the wrists are rolled or uncocked and the weight of the body is shifted from the right to the left foot. This calls for the synchronization of feet, knees, hands, hips and shoulders. Then he'll tell you that it is most essential to follow through with the swing.

Sluggers in baseball must have perfect timing for distance. Pitchers must have that perfect follow through to break off their hooks and control the corners of the plate.

A prizefighter can never possess a Sunday punch unless he develops a follow through and he can't box his way out of a paper bag unless he can make his hands and feet coordinate. That's timing.

IN ARMY NOW

You're in the army now. Instead of reading those theories in the sports pages, you're getting them out of army field manuals. Instead of golf pros or baseball coaches, you're listening to officers and N. C. O.'s spout these same theories.

There is a close relationship between the adaptation of these theories to sports and their adaptation to army training. What good is a horizontal butt stroke if you don't follow through? It and you are lost if your feet are tangled up: that is to say, if you can't make your feet and arms coordinate, buddy, your timing, then is off. You don't get results with a hand grenade unless you follow through.

What good comes of shooting a rifle unless you have a trigger squeeze and follow through? And the No. 2 man of a howitzer gun crew is a sloppy workman if he can't drive a shell into the breach and follow through.

You can't even march well without timing and follow through. Your hands do the latter.

PRETTY GOOD CREWS

But these sports writers and authors of army manuals are no proponents of theories that are new. In the days of the Romans there were some pretty good crews afloat in those slave galleys. It didn't make much difference whether they used a Connibear stroke with a long layback or a Glendon stroke with a quick catch. They had to have timing and follow through or feel the whip of the bargemaster.

David who slew Goliath must have had a trigger squeeze of a sort when he fired his slingshot. And a cave man couldn't last very long unless he got some timing in that shillelah he wielded.

And there you have it—your annual springdose of timing and follow through. You can't avoid it even in the army.

Just remember, though, it's nothing new. But it gives sports writers and army officers something to shout about against which there can be no argument.

Tiger Ballplayer Once Hurled 18-Inning No-Hit, No-Run Game

Pitching an 18-inning game is a good day's work in any man's language, but making it a no-hit, no-run game in the bargain is something to shout about.

The candidate of the 10th Armored Division for baseball's hall of fame is Cpl. Milton "Bib" Falk, who chalked up the above performance in 1940 when he was playing semi-pro ball with the Blue Colts of Cicero, Ill. Falk joined the Tiger Division only recently, and was assigned to the Special Service office where, among other duties, he will assist with the direction of baseball.

EXPECTS TO PLAY

And, if he finds time for it, Falk will play some ball this spring, hurling for the Division Service Company—which automatically should give this unit a jump on other clubs in the Sand Hill circuit.

A native of Chicago, Falk began his baseball career in the American Legion's yearly tournament in 1931. He later played while attending [illegible] Junior College in Chicago and subsequently signed up with the Cicero Blue Colts. After he pitched his spectacular 18-inning game in 1940 the big league scouts came around with their offers and he tried out with the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Chicago White Sox.

JOINED ARMY

The army nipped his career in the bud just two years ago, for it was April 3, 1941, when Falk put away his spikes and tried on a pair of G. I. shoes. But he has not been able to stay away from the diamond. In 1942 he played on an all-star team at Fort Bragg, N. C., and put in a very good year on the ordnance master's team at Fort Bragg. His season's record was 28 games pitched and 24 won. Of the four games he lost, three were two-hit games.

Falk also did all right for himself when he pitched last year for an all-star army team against an all-star aggregation representing the navy. When the dust had cleared and the weary sailors had had hurled a no-hit game and incidentally fanned 19 batters. This was sailed as a new modern record, since the great Bobbie Feller had managed to fan only 18 men.

ALSO JOURNALIST

Off the mound, Falk has delved into journalism. He was editor of the Barracks Farrage column of the Fort Bragg Post and was also editor of the 79th Field Artillery Regiment's Howitzer, which on acclaim from the War Department.

Falk is married, and he says that his most ardent rooter is his wife, Sophie, who, not to be outdone by her husband, was a star volleyball player in Chicago.

First Regiment Boasts Many Star Athletes

Gridsters, Boxers, Basketeers Included Wrestlers, Baseball,

The roster of officers basic, 9th company, First Student Training Regiment, looks like the lineup of Walter Camp's "All-American".

In the "brawn" department are the following gridsters: 2nd Lt. Al Fielder, former captain, VMI, 1938; 1st Lt. Roger Stearns, University of Maine all-conference tackle, 1940; 1st Lt. Joe Hamrick, Northwestern, chosen all-conference tackle Big Ten, 1939; 1st Lt. Ivy Hyman, tackle, Ohio State, 1937.

1st Lt. Irving Agard, Lafayette University, 1939, 175-pound Eastern Collegiate wrestling champion, and 1st Lt. Bob Gordon, UCLA end in 1938 and Pacific Coast intercollegiate boxing champ, represent the square arena.

Other athletic stars include 2nd Lt. John A. Darcy, catcher with Boston Red Sox; 1st Lt. Don North, varsity basketball player for the University of Nebraska in 1936, and 2nd Lt. Ted Williams, Tennessee guard.

Dragon Ringmen Stage Upset To Deadlock 29th

Post Crown Undecided After 3rd Armored's Surprising Boxing

One of the largest crowds to ever invade the post gym saw a surprising 3rd Armored ring team deadlock the 29th Infantry's defending champs on Monday night in a challenge match for the post crown.

Each squad came off the winner in four bouts apiece, and no decision was reached as to just who should be acknowledged as titleholder. The teams may fight over again at a later date.

THRILLING BOUTS

Despite the no-decision result, however, the bouts provided some of the biggest sports thrills of the year. The Dragons earned the eventual deadlock on the wings of a thrilling win by Johnny Mojas, their heavyweight entry, who pummeled out a decision over Big John Zawaski of the 29th, who had him outweighed by 40 pounds.

Two knockouts were recorded by Two-Niners. Johnny Stutes slammed out a TKO win over Montano of the Dragons in 55 seconds of the first round to take the bantam honors, while Benny Parks sneaked in a neat job to the chin of Jack Crain and sent him reeling to the canvas in 1 minute and 45 seconds of the second round in the welter scrap.

CRUZ, CORLEY WIN

Flyweight Cruz and Lightheavyweight Corley gained the other wins for the defending champs, while Guthrie, Anderson, Finozzo and Wojas were the Dragon winners. All bouts that went the three-round limit were close, and the huge crowd was in an uproar most of the time.

In three preliminary settos, the 24th General Hospital mittmen scored two wins over punchers from the 90th Recons of the Tiger Division. Hugh Ruger, defending flyweight champ of the post, and Tanoti were the Medico winners, while Chuck Taylor of the Recons knocked out Silva of the hospital unit in the third match.

Wuxtra! Luban, Neu Bury the Hatchet!!

Rival Tells Us Things About Carl We Never Knew

BY SGT. MILTON LUBAN
2nd Prize, Sports

We have reached the end of a stirring basketball season and the cheers for Shannon, Ricks, Webster and other court luminaries can still be heard in barracks bull sessions. Soon the air will be resounding with frenzied yells for Zientara, Lewis, Niebler, Cox and countless other warriors of the diamond as baseball takes its natural place at the head of the Benning sports parade.

Meanwhile there's a lull during which it might be a good idea to meet the man behind the scene. So we present S. Sgt. Carl Neu, the man who has had more abuse, complaints and old-fashioned cussin' heaped on his shoulders than any six supply sergeants.

Officially attached to the Quartermaster Public Relations branch, Carl Neu gradually drifted into Post sports and soon was not only covering all Benning sports for the Bayonet, but actually arranging, organizing and running them. While we suspect that Carl originally helped organize sports in order to have news to write about—we often do the same thing for the Academic Regiment's newspaper—we also suspect that Benning sports would be pretty chaotic without Carl's guiding hand.

NASTY ASPERSIONS

We did not always think this. When the Conference basketball schedule was released we were convinced that Neu was on the payroll of the seven other teams who were out to stop the Profs in any way possible. In our column in The Regimental Mirror we cast nasty aspersions upon Carl's good name.

In due time we discovered that almost all the other teams suspected that Carl was on our payroll. For a while we alternated with Cpl. Naylor of The Pine-Bur in taking cracks at the officiating, the schedule-making, the tobacco Carl smoked and everything else we could think of.

Meanwhile the basketball race merrily rolled along, attendance was good, it was ridiculously easy to get cooperation from the Athletic Office in arranging fencing matches and practice basketball games and, much to our amazement, we found pleasant remarks about Carl Neu appearing in our column. We couldn't let him get away with that, naturally enough, so we determined to keep a suspicious eye on Sgt. Carl Neu.

HUMAN DYNAMO

Now, alas, after watching that human dynamo in action we have to break down and confess we don't know how he does it all. He covers all sports for the Bayonet, sends out all sports press releases to the local newspapers, does all the schedule making for the many basketball, baseball and softball leagues and then sees to it that the leagues function correctly, does a daily 15 minute broadcast over WRBL, announces the sports events and probably polices the grounds when no one is looking.

Neu is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania having received his B.S. in Economics from the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, considered one of the best business administration schools in the country.

SGT. CARL NEU

While at Penn he served on the staff of the Daily Pennsylvanian, did radio announcing at the university, and also predicted the outcome of 20 football games per week, ending up with a phenomenal season's average of .857.

BASEBALL MANAGER

Later he became sports editor of the local paper in Jenkintown, Pa., also managing the local baseball team for two years. Then he decided to become a city slicker and migrated to New York where he connected with R. H. Macy & Co., the world's largest department store. Within six months the energetic Mr. Neu was a section manager and by the time he donned O. D.'s—two years and two months ago—he was the buyer of sporting goods.

Then came a period with the 8th Infantry; then to the Quartermaster Detachment of Station Complement as stock record clerk; then to Quartermaster Public Relations and then gradually to the Big Bertha of sports.

HAD LOTS OF FUN

He's had a lot of fun at Benning interviewing such stars as Harpo Marx, Mischa Auer and Veronica Lake. Claims the best storye he ever wrote was his story on Veronica Lake—and it was never printed.

But while he's had his fun he's worked and worked hard. The huge crowds who enjoyed his stirring football and basketball games these past seasons owe many thanks to Carl. And the forthcoming exciting baseball tournaments also bear the imprint of his energy. So while the crack of the bat is heard throughout the leagues function correctly, does a daily 15 minute broadcast over WRBL, announces the sports events and probably polices the grounds when no one is looking.

Neu is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania having received his B.S. in Economics from the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, considered one of the best business administration schools in the country.

O. C. Enlists Two Hours After Pearl Harbor Hit

Within two hours after broadcasting the news of the fall of Corregidor from his radio studio, Candidate H. W. Thompson of the 30th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, had enlisted in the U. S. Army.

"That news made me ashamed of myself for holding a job in an air-conditioned radio studio while a lot of other fellows were taking a rap from the Japs," he explained, "so I made up my mind before I had completed the broadcast to join up and I've never been sorry that I did."

Prior to his entering the Army, Candidate Thompson had edited and broadcast news over stations affiliated with the three major radio networks for seven years. He started his career writing and taking part in dramatic productions at Station WSM, Nashville, Tenn., and he since has broadcast events from every part of the country, including the "Squalus" rescue project, the Army maneuvers in the California deserts and other thrilling news "breaks." His greatest ambition as a radio announcer is to give a "blow bl blow description of the/ signing of the peace in Tokyb," he declares.

Candidate Thompson is a native of Wyoming and received his basic training at Camp Roberts, Calif., after enlisting from Los Angeles.

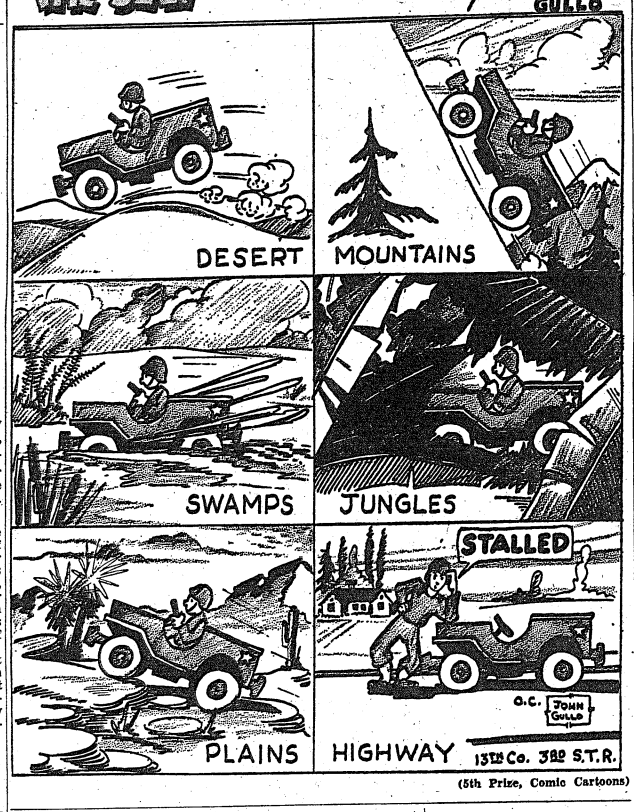
Former Finance Officer Plays Role In African Coup

Colonel L. H. Sims, formerly Finance Officer at Fort Benning, has been mentioned in news dispatches as having played an important role in preparing for the North African invasion and consequent campaigns there.

According to the dispatches, he was in charge of a group of American officers who worked for several weeks in a vault hundreds of feet below London streets, preparing American currency for army finance officers in North Africa. The cash was ready weeks in advance of the actual start of the campaign.

Friends on the post recall that he was Finance Officer here from 1937 to 1941, and believed that he flew across with General Marshall. A son, L. H. Sims, Jr., now is a student at United States Military Academy at West Point.



Lt. Sullivan Receives First Lieutenancy

Lt. John F. Sullivan, Jr., personnel and executive officer of the 283rd Quartermaster Company, has been promoted from second to first lieutenant, according to an announcement received at post hadquarters.

Entering the army in February, 1942, as an enlisted man ,Sullivan served for several months with the Quartermaster Replacement Training Center, Camp Lee, Va., before attending officer candidates' school. He was commissioned in August of last year, and came to Benning in September, where he joined the 283rd company.

P. O. Amends Its Overseas Mail Regulation

All-Weight Packages Of Essential Articles Now Acceptable

In order to facilitate the overseas shipment of small essential articles such as eyeglasses, watches, fountain pens and insignia, restrictions on army overseas mail as previously outlined in post office orders have been amended to permit acceptance of sealed first-class packages without presentation of approved requests from the addressee, according to R. P. Richardson, Fort Benning postmaster.

Under the same conditions of weight and postage, individual copies of "House Organs" or employee publications, may also be sent to such personnel.

Also included in the list of accepted parcels are packages containing uniforms and accessories ordered by officers, and medical books sent to doctors connected with army hospitals or units under their official titles and for their official use. For the above listed items there is no size or weight limitation, under the new amendment.

Renewals of present subscriptions of newspapers and other publications entered as second class matter from any source will be considered as a continuation of the present subscription and mailings to overseas personnel will be allowed, regardless of whether the renewals may be paid for by others than the addressee, and without any request from the latter. This does not apply to complimentary issues distributed by the publishers.

TEXT BOOKS

Text books and study material sent by the United States Armed Forces Institute, Madison, Wis., an agency of the government, and universities and colleges conducting courses in cooperation with that institute, also such material sent by other schools and colleges conducting home study courses, in connection with enrollment prior to Jan. 15, 1943, may be sent without request at time of mailing.

The same ruling also applies to matter sent in connection with enrollments or requests, made subsequent to that date, except that such requests shall bear the approval of the student's commanding officer.

Upon the wrappers of material and literature dispatched by the Armed Forces Institute, and cooperating agencies, should appear a return card similar to the following: Armed Forces University Extension Courses, Home Study Department, University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill. Official Mailing.

In the case of such mailing by other schools and colleges, the parcels should be endorsed "Mailing Authorized by P. O. D. Notice March 12, 1943."

BOOK CLUBS

Book clubs under contract to furnish members outside continental limits of the United States with books to be mailed at specified intervals, may continue delivery of these, providing the arrangements were made prior to establishment of the restrictions.

It will be noted, however, that this does not apply to instances where book clubs merely furnish members with lists of books, which the member is not under obligation to purchase, but for which he submits a specific request. In this case the approval and stamp of his commanding officer is necessary.

Requests of officers and personnel not assigned to organizations or assigned to separate companies and detachments must be approved by the next higher headquarters or by the theater headquarters.

The War Department has issued instructions to its personnel that under no circumstances will requests be approved by other than battalion or regimental commanders or other officers of field grade, having supervisory authority over the officer or enlisted man making the request.

Exceptions to the overseas restrictions as outlined in the order include shipment of parcels to military agencies such as the Red Cross, post exchanges, canteens, USO, and libraries. Also excepted is religious material addressed to chaplains and articles sent commanding officers, addressed to them, as such, by title.

No approved request is necessary for these. The regular limits of size and weight, namely 70 pounds, and 100 inches in length and girth combined are applicable. Such parcels should be labeled, "For Military Agency."

AER Applicants Should Get Okeh Of Commander

Applicants for Army Emergency Relief are advised to be sure that the first endorsement on their applications is executed by their commanding officer or personnel officer, Lt. John J. A. Lyons, A. E. R. officer at Post Headquarters, said today.

The endorsement should contain the date and amount of the individual's last pay, the amount of pay due him from the United States, deductions—if any—authorized by the apllicant, and in the case of married men, whether or not the allotment has been executed in favor of his dependents.

If an allotment has been executed, it should be specified on the endorsement as to whether it is being received.

All of this information should be furnished before the loan may be made. Failure to comply works additional hardship on the applicant, Liutenant Lyons said, in stressing that this procedure must be strictly adhered to.

The AER "is ready and should be utilized to carry families of enlisted men through any period of financial embarrassment that may ensue while they are awaiting receipts of Dependency Benefit checks," according to Lieutenant Lyons.

The AER application form must be filled out in triplicate. The amount of loan desired, the purpose for which it wi used, and probable date or plan on which the individual expects to make repayment must be stated on the form.

Between May, 1942 and March 20, 1943, approximately $15,000 in AER loans had been made at Fort Benning. Approximately $9,000 has been repaid of this amount. A total of 385 loans were made in this period.

During December, January and February, the numbers of loans ranged from 30 to 70 per month, with an average monthly amount of the loans running between $1600 and $25000.

Tiger Masters Slav Tongues

Engineer Private Makes Study Hobby

One soldier who should be at home in many foreign lands is Pvt. Joseph Strinchak of the 55th Armored Engineers, and yet Pvt. Strinchak is strictly an American who hails from Gary, Ind. The reason is that he will carry wherever he goes his own brand of heavy artillery: languages.

This soldier can converse fluently in Serbian, Croatian, Polish and Slav, and he is fairly fluent with the extremely difficult Russian tongue. And there is no great similarity between any two of these languages, either.

Strinchak acquired his lingual ability by listening and practicing, and he did this during the period when learning is easiest: as a child. His parents were Czechoslovaks, so he learned Slav while he was speaking his first words in English. All of the others he picked up during after-school snacks at the homes of playmates. Since he lived in a community that was composed largely of foreign-born people, this was not too difficult for an alert youngster.

"One of the boys' mother's would say something in Serbian or Croatian," he says, "and after I had heard the words two or three times I would have them."

FREQUENT PRACTICE

Strinchak probably would have forgotten all he learned however, if he had not used his oral tools in his adult life. Normally gregarious, he reasoned that he could get to know many more people if he spoke their language, and he never missed an opportunity to add to his vocabularies.

He even had the tenacity to learn to read one of these languages, Polish. Coming across a Polish catechism one day, he sat down and stayed with it until he could read it. Today he reads Polish, or rather, Polish-American newspapers as well as most people read English.

Strinchak feels that he has had a lot of fun that he might have missed otherwise as a result of his unusual hobby. And, on the serious side, if the 55th Engineers ever land in the Balkans they won't need any maps to tell them where to build their bridges. Strinchak will just stop a native, pass the time of the day with him and ask him for directions.

$1,000 Prize Offered Best WAAC Manuscript

E. P. Dutton and Company, one of America's largest book publishers, has a contract all ready, together with a check for one thousand dollars (in payment of advance royalties), for the first acceptable manuscript from any member of the WAACS, WAVES, SPARS, WAFS, or United States Marine Women's Reserve. In addition to the $1,000 check, the usual book royalties will be paid.

There are no restrictions or limitations. The Dutton firm hopes to obtain a manuscript which is both fresh and original, and which may come to mean to the thousands of young women in the armed forces what "See Here, Private Hargrove" now means to our soldiers and their families.

If you are a young woman in the service of the Army ,Navy, Coast Guard or Marine Corps, and have a manuscript ready, or in preparation, notify the publisher, E. P. Dutton & Company, 300 Fourth Avenue, New York City, immediately, submitting the manuscript if it is ready, or notify them when you expect to submit it if it is not yet completed. Quite possibly there may be more than one manuscript accepted.

Dom DiMaggio, star center fielder of the Boston Red Sox and now serving with the Coast Guard, has lost the sight of his right eye and has been hospitalized and under the care of specialists for five weeks. No injury caused the loss of sight. Dom is taking treatments for the infected eye and his sight is gradually improving. When asked whether or not in the event that he was discharged from the Coast Guard, he would fill center field for the Red Sox, he said, "I would prefer to remain in the Navy with one eye than to play baseball with two, for the duration of the war."

MARCELINE, Mo.—(CNS)—A young fellow in city court was charged with passing worthless checks and was fined $17.95. He handed the judge a check. It bounced, too.

Forever Together

PRIVATE ROBERT J. SHAVER
(Acad Com., Parz. Sch.)

The future was so uncertain that she preferred not to marry him then, so his thoughts turned to a greater companion—America, not that he especially loved her more, but that it was his duty. Something within called him. And so he enlisted, kissing her goodbye for the last time, perhaps.

He had had permanent deferment, but others were being called. Inwardly a voice had said, "Go where duty calls!"

Indifferently he packed his civilian wardrobe and shipped it to her. He never expected to see her again. He was on his way to give his life for his country—for America—for Freedom. Yet, to comfort her, he faithfully assured her that he would return to her. The ring and all their heavenly vows remained the same. The sweetness of their love was even greater. Each night they prayed that God would protect them and see them safely together again. Month after month passed. Her lover was being trained as a doughboy, ready and eager to give his life for his country, if necessary.

Her sweetheart—her fiance—was in the Army. It was difficult for her to believe it. Just a few months ago he had been a public servant. Now he whom she loved more than anything else in all the world was away—far away in person, but even closer in spirit. Each night—and several times during the day—she prayed for his protection; she prayed that he would safely return to her. She prayed that their love would be strong enough to keep them together in spirit. Each night at an appointed hour she took his picture into her arms and talked with him—he, too, was talking with him—he, too, was talking the continent separated them in person, their thoughts were together. They reminisced by looking wistfully upon the same moon, for each was romantically on the beam. Their hearts beat as one.

SHE'LL WAIT

It was difficult for him to reconcile the pale muck of the barracks with his high, noble mind, and still enjoy the companionship of his buddies. But he admired them for their good points, always trying to condone their unconscious blasphemy and their crude, insincere low minds. He was different—so different that his buddies envied him, especially his fiancee. It took only one look at her sweet, lovely portrait for one to remark, "She'll be waiting for you, Pal," or "No wonder you are different!"

Yes, not every soldier had a sweetheart like Virginia. Nor did every soldier have so much to which to look forward. Not every soldier had a high mind and a desire to retain it. Not every soldier had enjoyed the real heavenly happiness which had been his. But it had been more than his—it had been theirs—theirs in their dreamhouse together.

PEERLESS VIRGINIA

There had been other girls, of course, but none like Virginia. She was sweet because she had been and was always considerate and understanding of his desires, his peculiarities, and his weaknesses. But more than that, she caused him to appreciate the spiritual and cultural matters of life. She was sweet because she was kind and patient; intelligent, pretty, and affectionate. She was truly an ideal sweetheart, one whom any young man would long to possess.

Though six years his junior, she was mentally his superior, in some respects. They were more than a well-matched couple: they were an ideal couple, apparently made for each other.

Six months passed. He was still in training, preparatory to going overseas. But fate altered his plans: He was injured and temporarily relieved from active duty in paratroop training. Realizing that the injury would reoccur through subsequent training, he later asked for a disqualification. The request was granted. He would be sent to a combat outfit, from the Casual Company. That was his preference, anyway, as he had planned to put in application for O. C. S., his original desire and intention upon enlistment.

When he was offered a permanent clerical job with the Parachute School, his thoughts turned immediately to Virginia. He loved her. It would be ideal for them: They could be married. She would be happy. He rushed a letter to her, telling her how happy he was that he had accepted the permanent job and that he had recovered from his injury.

DON'T CRY, SWEETHEART

In reply, she wrote a very sweet letter, expressing her happiness and gratitude, but "... Don't count too much on our being married till after the duration," she wrote.

Knowing her as he did, he realized that such a statement was the same as saying that they would definitely not be married till after the war.

"She doesn't love me," he thought, "or else she would marry me now. It is foolish to wait. Life goes on now. We could work together as one; build, create, and overcome our adversities. We shall be young only once; besides, no one knows just how long the war may last. It is absolutely foolish to wait. There is only one conclusion: She just does not love me! A permanent job and still she refuses! It doesn't make sense!"

He was provoked, mad, furious. He would understand, she thought. Their love was strong and deep enough to keep them together always in spirit and understanding, she believed.

But his responsive letters coldly told her off: ". . . You have really flattered yourself in believing that I would wait indefinitely for you. I land a perfect set-up with permanent security for the duration, and what do I get in return? A broken heart! My face is wet and distorted with tears; I have cried myself sick. A miserable wretch am I—all because I was led to believe that you really loved me! Well, Little Lady, so far as I am concerned, you can just keep on waiting indefinitely to be married! You may do whatever you want to with the ring and everything else. I'm through with it all. I'd rather be dead than alive. I'm volunteering for immediate combat. I can bear it here no longer. I want death as a comforter. As you call recall, I once said that if anything should ever happen to sever our romance, I would destroy myself, because I could not bear to go on just existing. I shall be true to that promise, but in going, I shall not go in vain, for I shall go fighting and dying that my friends and loved ones back home may not become slaves of ruthless tyrants. I shall willingly die for a cause. Death is my destiny! Long live America and Fredom! Best o'luck to you . . ."

LOVE TO HATE

A beautiful love had turned to hate. Faith had turned to infidelity. Nothing mattered anymore.

Shattered were their dreams. A beautiful flower had been twisted, trampled upon, and beaten into the ground.

Virginia was heartbroken, remorsefully ill from the effects. The thought of one certain line in a recent letter from him left her in tears, with an empty, aching heart. The words stared her in the face: ". . . My love has been killed—just burned out."

Though of the words haunted her, frightened her, with a deep tragic dejection. It was inconceivable, impossible. Her kind and loving Bob would not be that way. He would never be patient and understanding, faithful and Christian.

OTHERS BIRDS HAVE FLOWN

Four years had passed since Betty, his first sweetheart, had told him coldly that it was all off. He had suffered disappointment before. But when he parted with her four years before, he said to her: I'll still be waiting for you, Darling, even if it takes you five years to change your mind." They would always be friends, at least, they had agreed. Occasional friendly letters had passed between them during the past four years.

Now that Virginia apparently did not love him, he turned hopefully toward Betty. Maybe someday they would be reconciled. Maybe she had realized her mistake in turning a cold shoulder to him, and now that each had completed five years of college, maybe it was about time for the five years to come to fruition. But the hope was only faint, coldly realistic.

Poor Little Virginia, who had ever dreamed of a perfect love and marriage, and who had ever kept herself chaste and wholesome for her long-anticipated husband, had met a heart-rending disappointment—a very sad, bitter disappointment. But her faith remained the same. She prayed that her Bob would have a change of heart and tell her that he still loved her. Surely God would help them who helped themselves, she believed. But he had forsaken God. Hence God had forsaken him. He had ceased to pray, for prayer seemed useless, vain. Was there a God? If so, why had He not been more merciful and comforting? If there was a God, why did He continue to allow the red blood of innocent peace-loving men and women to fill the gutters of a war-terrprized world?

RUTHLESS WILL

In Virginia's heart, she felt that she had the answer: The ruthless will of man was the cause. The very ones who believed not in Christ and His doctrine and principles were the cause of all the terrible conflict. Virginia believed that God is good to those who keep constant faith in Him, even in the face of death. She believed that He is good to those who have the Faith that the Master had when He departed from earth, saying, ". . . I go to prepare a place for you."

Virginia had considered more than the present: She had planned for their future, ever guided by the faith that ". . . God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whoseover believeth on Him might not perish, but might have everlasting life." She prayed incessantly and faithfully that her Bob would understand and believe that she did truly love him. She prayed that he would once again be the same sweet-heart whom she had idolized since their meeting eighteen months previous.

But at the moment of her most sincere prayers, he was entertaining the idea of seeking physical gratification. Nothing seemed to matter anymore. He would get out of life what he could. Through biological reactions, his tearful heart had altered into materialistic impulses. When Betty had quit him four years before, he had turned to physical gratification, by associating with Lela Ann, a sympathizing, understanding woman somewhat his sension. He had found extreme physical fondness of being with her.

LELA ANN

She had considerably heeded his desires, and at the same time had tried to console him during his sorrow over Betty. He and Lela Ann had had fun together, even though inwardly he cared little for her. Romance had seemed a thing of the past to him. Companionship with physical gratification as its objective had been enjoyable, despite its worldliness. She had understood the situation, because she knew Betty. She had sympathetically given in to his desires, through personal interest, to some extent. Their association was rather consistent, despite his thoughts of Betty. It was most difficult for him to forget Betty. But in spite of his memory of her, he had developed a physical love for Lela Ann. And now, nearly four years later, after having once reformed and been converted, and after having proved himself worthy of Virginia, his thoughts turned strongly in memory of Lela Ann. She would understand. She had before. She would again. She had since married, but that would not matter—he allowed himself to believe—because they had been friends long before she had met her husband. If he could only see her! If he could only be with her for awhile!

PASS TO TOWN

But he could not see Lela Ann. The next best was a pass to town. But instantly he recalled that when he had departed from Virginia, he promised her that in the face of temptation her beautiful face would always be before him, in his mind and heart. He assured her that its smiling sweetness would ever prevent his weakening. In respect for himself, as well as for her, that was one promise which he was determined not to break, no matter how strong the temptation might become.

When the temporary desires of his physical appetite ceased through natural reactions, he found himself looking with aversion upon any thoughts of lustful, worldly gratification, for he realized the fact that he had committed adultery in his heart. He was sorry, for such pleasures were only temporary and were detrimental to the soul. The real lasting love in his heart for Virginia was still there, even stronger than ever. He had to do something, or else go insane.

"I'll call her," he said impulsively.

With a penitent heart, he said a prayer that he might be forgiven, because life without Virginia in his heart was coldly dull and futile. She knew all about Betty and Lela Ann but had forgiven him, if he would prove himself worthy of her love. Now was an opportune moment.

FORGIVE ME, DARLING

While she waited to hear his voice, she said a silent prayer that he would honestly tell her that he loved her. With joyful tears in his eyes, he apologized for all the depressing letters he had written to her, for all the impulsive coldness toward her. ". . . Please forgive me, Darling, and believe that I love you with all my heart. Pray for me"——a lump came into his throat——"pray for me, Sweetheart . . ."

It seemed that his sweetheart was right there in the telephone. He wanted to reach out and take her into his arms. The feeling was mutual. It was a heavenly reconciliation. He promised upon his word of honor that he would do nothing until after haivng talked over everything with her while on his anticipated furlough.

Blessed reconciliation! Blessed change of heart! God had once again come into his heart. Love was divine. Once again he fervently offered thanks to God for his many blessings, and once again he prayed for a happy personal reunion with his sweetheart. This time and repeatedly in the following days, he gave thanks unto God, realizing that he had much for which to be extremely grateful.

He was happy because of an ever comforting prayer in his heart:

"O, God, help me always to have that spiritual peace which ever prevails through constant faith in Thee. Help me to be understanding and loving. Help me to dwell upon the things that are vital and permanent, even in the face of imminent death. Help me to realize that the greatest blessings of life are spiritual. Help me to realize thta even though Virginia thinks it best not to marry till after the duration, she loves me with all her heart, for she is thinking of our future. Help me to be ever kind and loving—just as I was in civilian life. Help me to perform bravely and proficiently whatever duty is mine, even if it is my lot to give my life for the cause of Freedom.

If it be Thy will to see me safely through this war and eventually unite me with Virginia, I shall ever be thankful unto Thee and try to carry on thy will where I left off in civilian life. Amen."

Panther Nine Finds Fire Power In Ace Batter

The Panther baseball team of the Service Battalion, Third Student Training regiment, has found a source of fire power in Corporal Lawrence E. Hamilton, one of the candidates for the nine, who has an all-time batting average of .351.

Hamilton, who is attached to Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the battalion, was a recreational director for a Cincinnati boys' club before entering the Army. He was one of the first to report when the call for organization of the Panther team was issued by Lieut. Jack Gushin, special service officer for the battalion.

While playing for the Loveland High All Stars in his howe town of Loveland, Ohio, Hamilton batted .354. He also played both in the outfield and infield for the Highports and the Madisonville (Ohio) A. C., semi-professional teams. His highest batting average, .380, was achieved while playing with the 368th Infantry at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., prior to his transfer to Fort Benning.

Fox Found in Foxhole Fittingly Foxes Finders

It's back to his very own foxhole for "Nub," erstwhile mascot of Company I, 124th Infantry, which seems to be having a very difficult time indeed to keep a mascot these days.

"Nub" was a gray fox which had been seen frequently flitting from fox-hole to fox-hole—and they were really fox-holes made by the foxy fox himself—as men of the company were out in their own fox-holes demonstrating the arts and sciences of warfare for officer candidates.

Finally Staff Sgt. Walter H. Powell, Colquitt, Ga., and Sgt. Milton E. Hardin, Ellington, Fla., and Sgt. David Holland—all old fox-hunters in their own right—set out some steel traps and box traps and caught the little animal.

SUFFERS LEG INJURY

He sustained a fractured leg in the capture, however, and was treated by Major Ralph E. Hockenberry, regimental surgeon and Captain Logan B. Hull. The leg healed and the little fox soon became tame enough to handle. He loved G. I. food and was soon being petted by all the men of the company.

However, he has now gone AWOL as somebody pried off the screen in the box where he was kept of nights. The box had originally been constructed for a raccoon that had been caught in the woods—but he too went AWOL one night so now Co. I has no mascot at all.

Organized Athletics Give Esprit de Corps

Second STR Offered As Striking Example To Prove Point

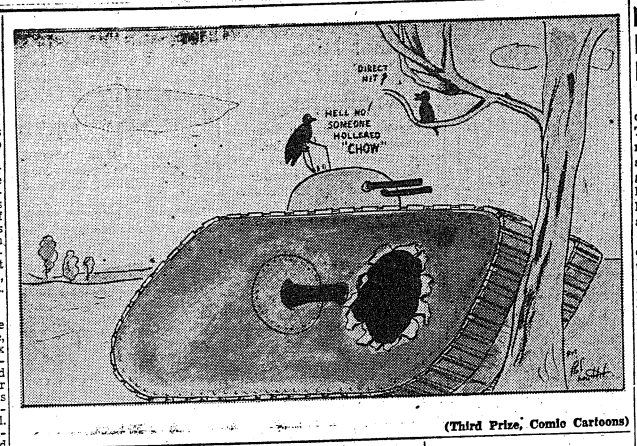
BY CAPT. JOHN B. TORINUS
Third Prize, Sports

What Army sports can do for an organization is well illustrated by the case of the Second Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School, a regiment naturally handicapped in a sport way because of its temporary nature, but a regiment which has found that organized athletics can do wonders in giving a unit a unified esprit de corps as well as providing a high type of entertainment for its personnel.

This Regiment, commanded by Col. Edward B. Jackson, whose main mission is the training of Infantry Officer Candidates, is currently the talk of Fort Benning sport circles because of its post championship basketball team, the LEADERS(but through the LEADERS a well-rounded sport program is being developed capitalizing on their success.

WORLD LOVES WINNER

Naturally the LEADERS did not command much attention in the Regiment, as they lost their first seven post conference games, but once they started winning, officers and enlisted men of the permanent personnel and Officer Candidates turned out in droves to see the games. It was a common sight to see a whole OC company marching to the Sport Arena to the accompaniment of a good barber-shop tune. The fans even organized an impromptu cheering session and a couple of GI's who had been hot stuff as high school cheerleaders worked the cramps out of their bones and went to work on some skyrockets.



Seeing the success of the LEADERS, other sport groups in the Regiment were enthused. At present a top-notch baseball team is working out daily in the hopes of duplicating the LEADERS' feats on the diamond. Combined with the Third Regiment to gain greater strength, the team will cavort under the title of the RIFLES, and is being coached by Lt. Mickey Bach of the 3rd STR.

OFFICERS LEAGUE

Officers of the Regiment have formed their own softball league, with teams entered from the six battalions. A number of OC companies are getting up softball and hardball teams to challenge other companies. A softball league is being talked up among Headquarters Company personnel. There have been a number of impromptu boxing matches staged among OC's. Officers have all winter participated in several volleyball leagues.

The Service Battalion has always been active in sport circles, participating in all the service leagues on the post in football, basketball and baseball. The Second Regiment likes to point out also that its Service Battalion COMMANDO grid squad holds the post colored championship. A number of Service Battalion GI's have even formed up their own track team and are looking for outside competition.

All of this has been done in a Regiment which has a very small permanent personnel and where the student personnel turns over daily. It looked like an impossi-

(Third Prize, Comic Cartoons)

2nd STR Courtman Rates As Man of Varied Careers

One of the most versatile officer candidates to land in the 2nd Student Training Regiment is a man named Smith. For a good part of his 33 years, Irving Lewis Smith of the 15th Company has been distinguishing himself as athlete, scholar, teacher, lecturer, lawyer and entertainer.

Born in New York City in 1909, he excelled in athletics all through school and won eleven varsity letters in high school. These covered basketball, football, swimming, soccer, baseball, fencing, and what have you. Upon graduation he received the "best all-around-athlete-of-New-York" award of that year.

ATHLETE

In St. John's College, Brooklyn, he participated in all sports as he had in high school. Their basketball team of 1930-31, known as the "Wonder Team," went through the entire season without losing a single game and won the National Intercollegiate Championship. At that time the wonder team was engaged by Warner Brothers to make a basketball short with Ted Husing. He also represented St. John's in the National Intercollegiate Fencing Championship meet in 1931. For two years after graduation Smtih toured the country playing exhibition basketball games with the famous Detroits, of which he was co-captain.

PROFESSIONAL

He played professional basketball with the American Eastern League and professional baseball with the St. Albans of Long Island. He was catcher and battery mate of Marius Russo, who later gained distinction as star pitcher for the New York Yankees.

But athletics covers just one phase of his varied career. He next turned to the profession of law and again enjoyed more than average success in both civil and criminal cases. He earned the distinction of being admitted to practice before the U. S. Treasury Department and was appointed an assistant investigator for the Appellate Division of Queens County, New York. Smith worked on one case which altered existing law by improving a woman's rights as a prospective wife. This decision was upheld by the Court of Appeals.

WAS TEACHER

His teaching comes next. He was appointed by the New York City Board of Education and after only two years was promoted to the position of teacher-in-charge, which is the equivalent of principal.

His experience in the entertainment field had an almost accidental beginning and reads like a story book. One day he filled in for an ailing partner in the dance team of Enrique and Dolores. Another famous dancer he has had for a partner is Marjory Matin, ballerina of the Radio City Music Hall.

WEDS MODEL

An August 9 last year Smith entered one more field that of being a married man. Perhaps many of us have seen his lovely wife unknown to us. She was Muriel Allen, a model for Murray Korman, and her picture has appeared on the covers of several popular magazine. Soon after his wedding Smith bid his bride farewell and headed for an Army processing building. Before coming to Benning he took his basic training at Camp Croft, S. C.

Colored Stars Grace Service Unit Team

The Service Battalion Baseball Club, coached by Captain Joseph R. O'Connor, former minor league player and one-time property of the Cleveland Indians, has for its nucleus several players of the National Negro Professional League.

John Washington, the first baseman, was a member of the Baltimore Giants, the leading team of the National Negro Professional League. Washington has led the league in hitting for several years. In 1938 he participated in the Annual East and West game in Chicago.

James E. Taylor, one of the numerous pitchers on the Service Battalion team, was the ace pitcher of the Homestead Greys of New Jersey. His best record in the Negro Professional League has been twenty-five (25) victories, one of which has been over Satchell Paige, the most outstanding pitcher in baseball. Besides his pitching, Taylor is an outstanding hitter.

Another pitcher, Eugene Randolph, was a member of the Tidewater Giants of New Port, Virginia. Randolph, a lefty, set a record on his team, winning twenty-seven (27) and losing six (6). Prior to his induction Randolph was slated to report to the Cuban All Stars, a leading Colored traveling club.

Besides these stars, Captain O'Connor has several former players of the old 24th Infantry Club, and some outstanding sandlot players around the country.

Radio, Mechanic Soldiers Afforded Plenty of Softball

The greatest of all American sports has made its debut this past wek in the 4th battalion (Enl), 1st Student Training regiment, with an inter-battalion soft ball league.

The unique part of this league is that every man that is available for company duty on each day of play must play at least two innings of ball. This gives every man an opportunity to participate in the game and also to represent his company in athletics at least twice a week.

The captains and managers and also the officers of the companies can be seen every day around noon with their heads together doping out the line-up for the days game, that begins at 2:30 p. m. The reaction to these rules of every man playing has created an overwhelming enthusiasm for the game by all the men of the battalion even though they never before in their lives had played baseball.

1st Lt. Grant Gniess, the battalion athletic officer, in setting up the rules for the league has just about over done himself in that he has made possible for every man to play and enjoy himself in doing so. Lt. Gniess said, "We defeat our purpose of mass athletics when we bar a man from playing just because he might not be able to play the game as well as his buddy. So we will make the rules so that every man will play at least two innings and in that way we will induce everyone to be interested in his team."

Hitting one of the highest qualification scores of recent OC classes on the 37 mm 1000-inch range, the 28th Company, commanded by Capt. John L. Pinson, of the Second Student Training Regiment, last week registered 87.6 per cent in the midst of a drenching cloudburst.

Highest individual score in the amphibian shooting contest was made by OC Clyde Cortez with 185, with 11 men scoring 175 or more. Officers with the 37 mm. committee said that the class record firing was made under conditions equal to a combat area.

Always keep the safety lock on when your weapon' is loaded and you are not firing. If you don't, you may accidentally catch the trigger and shoot yourself or a comrade.

NORMAN, Okla. — (CNS) — This general order is posted at the Norman Naval Training station:

"Holding hands, hugging and other displays of affection are proper only when a lady admits she is the sailor's mother."

24th Company, 1st STR Wins Softball Tourney

The 24th Company of the 4th Battalion, 1st STR, has earned the distinction of being the first company of the regiment to hang a softball pennant in their day room as the result of a three-weeks tournament just completed.

The 21st Company looked like a sure winner for awhile, but was passed up on the last turn and the 24th won out in the stretch. A final tally showed that 24th Company had won 13 games while losing only two for a percentage of .867, which, considering the competition and enthusiasm, is almost miraculous.

The Government has prepared a special form for the use of military personnel in making requests for deferment of income tax; one can get it by writing your home office of the Collector of Internal Revenue. By using that form you will be certain of giving the Government all the information it needs concerning your inability to pay your taxes because of military service.

Golden Gloves Featherweight Is In Training

Pfc. Terrie D. Livingston, lightweight boxer, is now known as the "Little Armstrong" of Company A, Service Battalion, TIS.

Before entering the service this little dynamo fought in the St. Louis Golden Gloves and was featherweight champ of 1941. Competition has been hard to find for opponents for this up and coming fighter.

He is now training hard for his next fight which is to be held in Doughboy Stadium some time soon. Watch him in his next fight and see if this name "Little Armstrong" isn't justified.

Noted Wrestler Is Instructing O.C.'s In Dirty Fighting

If their bones hold out, officer candidates of the 18th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, ought to become highly skilled dirty fighters for they are getting their instructions firsthand from one of the world's leading exponents of the "grunt and groan" art.

Their teacher is one of their own classmates, Paul Boesch, internationally famous wrestler, who has met and defeated such headliners of the mat as "Strangler" Lewis, Ray Steele, "Man Mountain" Dean, Joe Cox, Gus Sonnenberg, Joe Savoldi, the four Dusek brothers, Dan (Irish Whip) O'Mahoney, and many others.

Boesch was an instructor in dirty fighting at Camp Wallace, Tex., but a desire to become part of a combat outfit led him to enlist in the infantry. He received his basic training at the Camp Wheeler, Ga., and attended the NCO school there prior to his transfer to Fort Benning.

Mountain Infantry Soldier Lives Up To His Own Name

Officer Candidate John de la Montagne's name indicates his branch of service for John "of the mountain" is a Mountain Infantry man who currently is completing his study for second lieutenant's bars in the Third Company of the Third Student Training Regiment.

Captain of the 1942 Dartmouth College speed skating team, de la Montagne, seeing an omen in his name, interested himself in mountain climbing and skiing and after his induction in the Army chose the ski troops as his branch of service. He received his basic training at the sloped approaches to picturesque Mt. Rainier.

De la Montagne's wife is the former Phoebe Corrhell of Laramie, Wyoming, one-time Rocky Mountain ski champion. While at the Rainier station, the couple decided on making "a peak a week" and, together, climbed the major elevations of the Olympic Range, Northern Cascades, Tatoosh Range and Snoqualine Mountains.

While awaiting transfer to an advanced Colorado base, de la Montagne, with the help of several other men built a simulated "cliff" of logs to supplement the training in mountain climbing. The climbing was done while wearing full field packs.

De la Montagne's home is in White Plains, N. Y., not accessible to high mountains but the candidate and his wife intend, after the war, to peek at those peaks they have missed.

Doughboys Play Atlanta Crackers Tonight At Gowdy

Zientara's Grand Slam Enables Infantry School To Split With Barons

Birmingham Bows 7-2 In Final Of Two Game Series

Capt. Hank Gowdy's powerful Infantry School Doughboys split a pair of games over the past week-end with the Birmingham Barons of the Southern Association. The Benning nine lost the opener of the two-game setto on Saturday night at Gowdy Field by a 9-8 count, but retaliated on Sunday in the Magic City to dump the Barons, 7-2.

The Infantry School tossers took sweet revenge in Birmingham for their defeat of the night before when they banged out a victory to spoil the home opener of the Barons. A home run by Benny Zientara with three mates aboard in the ninth inning highlighted the attack.

The team went into the ninth leading 3 to 2. Simmons doubled Rundius laid down a sacrifice bunt and all hands were safe when the Baron pitcher made a vain attempt to get Simmons at third. Dabbs walked, loading the bases and setting the stage for Zientara's grand slam wallop.

A sizzling drive down the third base line in the last half of the ninth inning with two out and the tieing run on second base was ruled a foul ball by the umpire, and as a result all-stars went down to their only defeat of the young season Saturday evening against the Barons at Gowdy Field.

NIP AND TUCK

The game had been a nip and tuck slugging duel all the way and the lead had changed sides several times. The Barons had gone into the lead in the seventh by virtue of a home run by First Baseman Walsh with one man on base, but the school sluggers nad tied it up at seven runs apiece in their half of the seventh. Then came the fateful ninth. Thaxton tripled with one down, and after Lawing had popped up to the second baseman, Walsh slammed a clean single to right field driving home the winning run.

Russo opened the home team's half of the ninth as a pinch-hitter for De Volder and struck out. Dabbs got on base on an error but was erased on a fielder's choice when Zientara grounded to the short stop. Zientara took second when the Birmingham pitcher made a bad throw to first trying to pick him off the bag.

Red McCluskey, who had already had two doubles and a single as his contribution to the attack was next at bat. He worked Pitcher Murray to a three and two count before lacing his hard smash down the third base line. The ball was foul by not more than an inch or two. On the next pitch McCluskey struck out and Birmingham had won a ball game 8 to 7.

A true account of the school's defeat Saturday is a story of too many men left on the bases. Captain Gowdy's charges made a total of fifteen base hits including doubles, and they were the recipients of four bases on balls and one base on an error, but they left fourteen men stranded on the paths. The Barons, on the other hand, made the most of their scoring opportunities and tallied their eight runs on ten hits.

TOP TECH

The game was played well, and it was a heartbreaker to lose. It was the second exhibition of batting power in a row by the school team as they banged out ten runs on as many hits against Georgia Tech as the preceding Wednesday night. Herb Moore had been the batting star of that game with three hits for four trips to the plate. Buddy Lewis scored three of the ten runs although he was not credited with a single base hit. Lewis got on base twice by virtue of free passes and once on a fielder's choice.

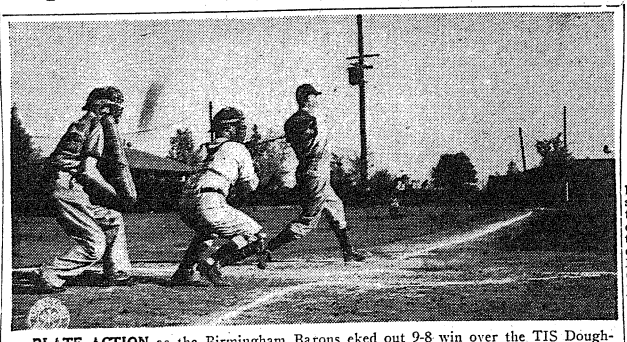

PLATE ACTION as the Birmingham Barons eked out 9-8 win over the TIS Doughboys at Gowdy Field Saturday shows Jimmy Usher, Birmingham outfielder and lead-off-man, just after he slammed out a hit (ball can still be seen at right). The catcher is Stoker of the Infantry School and the umpire, Blakely. (Signal Lab Photo by Stock.)

Americans Need Have No Fear Of Terrible Nipponese Jiu-Jitsu

Yankees Build Up Legendary Invincible Jap Hand to Hand Combat

By O. C. Agis Mihalakis

If the Japs have the reputation in the United States of being virtually invincible in hand-to-hand combat because of the art of ji-jitsu, Americans themselves have built that reputation. Yet, close study will reveal that it is a false one and not to be feared especially.

Where this occidental, etc.! ....

A number of Japs know the rudiments of jiu-jitsu; the number, however, is small and compares badly with the number of athletes turned out each year by our schools inasmuch as the average Jap's chances of an extensive education, jiu-jitsu or otherwise, is rather limited in comparison.

The Japanese Army inaugurated a system of training somewhat like ours and— this statement is made with some limitations—endeavoring to lend weight to the eastern odor of "jiu-jitsuitis" which has been polluting the American atmosphere.

The results of this training have not made supermen of the Japs. The average Jap knows no more than the average American about how "to put a guy to sleep with jiu-jitsu" and how to break a man's arm with a slight twist of the little finger.

It can not be done and if it could we should be able to do it all the better.

KNOCK STUFFIN'S OUT

Our own gullibility is to blame for the spread of the lie that the Japs are invincible hand-to-hand fighters. The sooner it is impressed upon Private Jones that the Jap is just a little guy and that a tougher, bigger guy can kick the stuffings out of him every time they tangle britches, the better it will be for us.

Credit them however, for their guile in shooting jiu-jitsumania at us on every opportunity. But let's boost a little game that we play—a game that has developed through the ages from the ancient Greek civilization. It's called "catch-as-catch-can."

From "knock - me - down-and-I'll - try - to - knock - you-down-first," it has turned into a wild sortie of "Masked Demons," "Yellow Dragons" and "Gorilla Joneses." You guessed it! We refer to the sport commonly misnamed "wrestling." There is a story behind it.

It seems as if once upon a ring there was a muscleman. He was called the Greco-Roman; trim, lithe and bebritched in ankle-length John L's. The number of rules that governed the ethics of the sport by far outnumbered the wrestling holds.

CATCH-AS-CATCH-CAN

So a corn husker from Nebraska decided that it was silly to stand and maul his opponent, each rigidly upright. He fell to the expedient of taking his man off his feet and wrestling the daylights out of him on the mat. Greco-Roman was no more; "catch-as-catch-can" was born—and it raised havoc with champions from Europe to India to Oshkosh. The better man won the match and the only rules were: No kicking, biting, punching, clawing or spitting; everything else went. This new method was challenged in Berlin, Bombay and— last but not least —in Tokyo, smack in the center of the Mikado's odoriferous empire.

Ad Santel, "the man of a thousand holds," had the effrontery, in 1929, to take American catch-as-catch-can wrestling to Japan. He went through their jiu-jitsu teams like a threshing machine. This is a matter of record—in 31 starts, Santel heard 31 Japs squeak their equivalent of "Kamerad." This was enough for the Nips. Pressure was brought to bear and Santel was ushered to the pier by a group of smiling, yellow cops and put on a speedy boat home.

Ironically, Santel somehow had fancied that the Japanese government would pin medals on his lapels and remunerate him for his magnificent showing.

TERRORS OF '30's

The 1930's brought "Terrors" and "Marvels" to the ring. Catch-as-catch-can was not wild enough for them and the fans wanted blood. They were paying for it to the tune of $5.50 for ringside—and by the thousands.

Money talks, it is said, and in this case it also kicked, bit, gouged, gnashed and spat. Ask your insurance man to look over his rate sheets of the period. In 1935 and 1936, no major insurance company would take a risk on granting life insurance to professional wrestlers.

It was catch-as-catch-can no more: now it was "I'm going to GUZZLE you unless you GUZZLE me first!"

Just exactly what is American wrestling?"

A Jap jiu-jitsu team came to the United States in 1932 to show us how superior jiu-jitsu was to our methods of manhandling. They went back to Japan on short notice. We saw a YMCA amateur team at Dreamland Auditorium, San Francisco, shellack, beat, trim and whale the entire Jap team in one night—with their own referee!

The AUS is teaching the private "guzzle or get guzzled" methods. They are infinitely superior to any method of physical combat insofar as they are a combination of all methods. The American must forget this bunk he hears by the hour and by the day—bunk that impresses him with the idea that Japs are tough. He must learn to trust in the instinctive American way of thinking, put a chip on his shoulder and believe in the adage: A tough, bigger guy damn well can lick a tough little guy—any time, any place, any way—and go into combat with the chip in place and the conviction that of all men on earth, he can especially lick a Jap.

Prendergast and Dickerson Will Hurl for TIS Nine Against Pros

Rivals Play Final Two Games Next Week In Atlanta

The Infantry School all-star baseball team winds up a highly satisfactory week of competition tonight with its second in as many days with the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association. A large crowd is expected to witness the last showing of the school nine at Gowdy Field until April 24th when they will play hosts to Camp Wheeler.

The soldier team has already amassed an enviable record against first rate opposition in the twelve day old session. They defeated the Columbus Foxes and Georgia Tech handily last week and then split a pair of good games with the Birmingham Barons over the week-end.

Manager Al Leitz of the Crackers has with him a squad of 21 players wel balanced between seasoned veterans and rookies coming up from lower leagues. Leitz himself is the first strong catcher while Cheste and Gildo Njirich are battling for the runner-up spot.

Infield Line-up

The Atlanta infield lines up with Harry Hughes, a newcomer, on first base, Parker on second, Roy Hartsfield at short, and Charlie Glock at the hot corner. Ray Theobald might be seen at second or short while Theard came along as a substitute first baseman. Leon Treadway, Marshall Mauldin and Lindsay Deal will be patrolling the outer garden at the start of the game with Clarence Manning around for extra protection.

Leitz has eight pitchers to choose from tonight's game. They are rookie left hander Charlie Cozart, Bill Tyers, Vernon Curtis, Edgar Chitwood, Floyd Stromme, Johnny Wilson, Pep Rambert, and Bud Tilbury.

Captain Gowdy was not certain what his starting line-up would be for tonight's game, but he said it would be similar to his talent array for the earier games with the exception of shortstop where Dib Williams will get a chance to show what he has learned during several big league baseball experience.

In Pitcher's Box

Prendergast and Dickerson will probably do the pitching with George Simmons as the starting catcher. However, Stan Reft or Merlin Stoker might get the back-stopping assignment.

The TIS infield will line up with Moore on first, Zientara on second and McCluskey on third as usual, but Williams will be tried in the short stop berth instead of Charlie Bamburger. George Hill, Chester Dabbs, and either Buddy Lewis or Garnett Mercer will start in the outfield.

The Infantry School athletes will return the Crackers' visit next week when they play afternoon games Tuesday and Wednesday in Ponce de Leon Park, Atlanta. The team will return to Gowdy Field for a twilight contest against Camp Wheeler Saturday, April 24th and an afternoon game the following day. The Wheeler team is led by Cecil Travis, former star Washington Senator infielder.

Two Officers Are Promoted

Baker, Beall Made Lieut.-Colonels

Headquarters of The Infantry School has two new lieutenant colonels this week according to an announcement by the commandant, Major General Leven C. Allen. The newly promoted officers are Silas K. Baker, assistant executive officer in charge of intelligence and public relations and Claudius A. Beall, Jr., assistant.

Colonel Baker has been in adjutant general.

charge of intelligence and public relations work for the school since January 1942. Until recently he was also the school's special service officer. A reserve officer, he was called to active duty as a captain in April 1941 and was with the First Division briefly at Fort Devens, Massachusetts before being selected to attend the Basic Officers course at The Infantry School. After completion of the course he served for a few months as a company commander in the First Student Training Regiment and then was assigned to the school headquarters to take over his present job on the commandant's staff.

The WAACs are beginning to bring in women athletic stars. Latest recruit from Fort Des Moines, Iowa, is Ilda Hanchett of Inglewood, Cal., national archery champ in 1932.

Barney Ross, who is convalescing at the St. Albans (N.Y.) Naval Hospital from malaria which felled him in New York City upon his return from Guadalcanal, has been promoted to a sergeant in the U. S. Marines. The former corporal and boxing champ is credited with killing 22 Japs on Guadalcanal.

Brothers-in-Law Unknowingly Live 9 Months Only 100 Yards Apart

Lt. Paul Miller of the 10th Armored Division had a brother-in-law from St. Petersburg, Fla., in the Army, but he did not know where. The brother-in-law's name was Zack Bocher, and when last seen or heard was a sergeant at Fort Myer, Va.

Since that time, Paul Miller, from West Palm Beach, Fla., has seen service in Iceland as a buck private, had returned to the States to go to OCS at Benning, and had ended up at the 10th Armored Division in the service company of the 54th Infantry.

And the lieutenant wanted to see his soldier brother-in-law, while his wife was anxious to find out how her brother was getting along. So they went to the Red Cross.

TRAIL LENGTHY

The search started at Fort Myer, the last known location of the now missing sergeant. Fort Myer pointed the trail to Fort Oglethorpe, Tenn. Fort Oglethorpe put up an arrow to Camp Atterbury, Ind. And there the Red Cross drew a blank.

The search backed up to Fort Oglethorpe for a new start. This time the hounds took off for Benning. The main post at Benning said look in the Sand Hill area, there is a Sergeant Bocher with the 10th Armored. And with the faces of all concerned getting redder and redder, the trail of the missing sergeant ended up at the headquarters company of the 3rd Armored Regiment.

TOGETHER AGAIN

The now Master Sergeant Bocher had been snugly living in a barracks for nine months not more than one hundred yards from the quarters of his brother-in-law.

The Red Cross closed its file, the sister probably scolded the brother for not writing, and the brothers-in-law settled down to tracing their army careers which had brought them under the shadow of each other's nose.

Capt. Stanley Bach, athletic officer of the European theater of operations of the U. S. army, recently announced plans for the organization of six service baseball leagues in England and one in Northern Ireland. He also announced the formation of the "London International Baseball League" with members composed of four American, three Canadian and one aircraft corporation teams. U. S. Army Headquarters in that theater described the program as "the greatest baseball season any country outside the U. S. has ever known."

The Manhattan Beach Coast Guard (N. Y.) quintet won the Eastern Servicemen's basketball championship by walloping Aberdeen Proving Grounds (Md.), 56 to 43, in Madison Square Garden, New York City, last Tuesday night. The guardsmen gained control in the second period after they had been held to a two-point margin at half time. Three minutes after the opening of the second half, Manhattan Beach put through six points in a row, followed that with a string of 12, and won going away. Bob Dorn, former Temple star, was high scorer for the guardsmen with 16 points. Abe Novak was high man for the soldiers with 12.

'Full Many A Gem Of Purest Ray Serene---'

Verse Contest Reveals Many Excellent Poets

Bards' Efforts Result In Production Of Some Really Fine Versifying

When the Bayonet announced its War Bond contest last month, the editors were certain that a great many poetic efforts would be submitted, some good, some bad, some indifferent.

But frankly we were not quite prepared for the great influx of verse which came pouring, even less were we expecting such a quantity of really fine verse. More than 125 verse entries were submitted, and the judges tell us they had a difficult task in selecting the first five prize winners.

Without mentioning any personalities, several Benning bards revealed that they have a real sense of the poetic as well as a fine grasp of the mechanics and technique of versifying.

Several of the poems indicate that the poets possess an excellent sense of the dramatic with the development of an unexpected climax. Another poem is a fine epic on the rise of the American nation.

The editors regret that space does not permit the publication of all verse submitted, but the readers of the Bayonet are invited to peruse carefully the work of the poets which we are able to publish below. It will be well worth the time necessary. "Full many a gem of purest ray serene" may be included.

"RIVER"
2nd Prize, Verse

A river starts endlessly
Weaving with water
Patterns lands follow.
Love begins eternally
Producing with fervor
Labyrinths of wonder.
A river flows onward
Untrammeled, untouched,
Complete and abstract.
Love is entangled,
Interlaced in a web,
Diffused with an echo.
Why is one unfettered and free—
The other a bond
Which fetters me?

Cpl. A. T. Rotgard
Co. E., 29th Inf.

"ENCOUNTER"
3rd Prize, Verse

I looked at him, he looked at me,
We both looked at each other.
He looked enough just like myself
To be my baby brother.

Far off a bomb bursts crimson fire,
Far off at home are waiting
My wife, my mother, all my folks—
I am so sick of hating.

The sun stands high in copper sky,
The bloom is on the clover.
It looks so like the little place
I'm going when it's over.

I saw a smile gleam on his face,
As though my thoughts had filled him.
He took a forward step—and I—
I raised my gun and killed him.

TREES
4th Prize, Verse

Of all the things for me to be,
I had to be a lousy tree.
A tree that stands out in the street,
With little doggies at my feet.
I'm nothing else, but, alas;
A comfort station in the grass.
I lift my leafy arms to pray,
Go away, little doggies, go away.
A nest of robins I must wear,
And what they do gets in my hair.
Of all the things for me to be,
I had to be a damned ol' tree.

SEEK NOT
5th Prize, Verse

Seek not a powerful beauty,
Tho' beauty is what we adore.
Go not abroad for flow'rs beautiful,
For they grow right at your door.

Seek not a strength to soar and fly 'way,
Remain, toil and labor like the rest.
Seek not to kill and painfully destroy,
The hand, that held you to its breast.

Seek not to love that which is far,
But that which is doubtfully near;
For love has but one strong enemy,
That one, we dread called "FEAR."

Seek not to change that which Nature builds,
Temptations are great . . . But should one yield,
The beginning of the end one abruptly feels.

Seek not to conceal sorrow and pain,
For happiness is sure to come again.
Life itself is periodical torment,
And NOTHING is permanent . . . but the present moment.

Seek not to live a dreamers life,
Unreal, unsafe, and full of strife,
And as we live so shall we die,
For life will pass a DREAMER by.

By Benning's Unknown Soldier.

TO VERONICA

I sit here watching the blue sky
The music is playing so sweet
My heart yearns for you, my dear one,
And from my head way down to my feet.

You can't imagine the terror
That all this has brought about
But in spite of all these confusions
When I think of you I just shout.

Day by day I work at my duties
And try to do my best
But until I hear those words from you.
I'm sure that I'll never rest.

Wherever I am in the daytime
Whether mopping or sweeping the floor
Again each pause brings back memories
That makes me love you more.

I believe that our hearts are together
And that our feelings are the same
So with these good thoughts in our minds
We'll march happily in HIS name.

You're so sweet, so precious, so loving,
I adore you from head to toes
I long for the touch of your sweet lips
And my love for you always grows.

Sometimes I wonder what would happen
If you were to leave me cold
And I know that I'd never attempt again
To let my heart get so bold

I love you and want to make you happy
And I'll work for you like a slave
And all that I ask of you my dear
Is to be honest with "love" and be brave.

And as I'm ending these sweet words
Let's look to Him up above
That he may guard our intentions
And keep sacred our holy love.

PRAISE THE SILK

As I sat in the plane with my chute on my back
I was as frightened as could be,
The jump master was ready in the door
I know for I could see

The boys on the ground looked like bugs from afar
The ground it looked so black.
"Stand Up and Hook Up!" the jump master cried,
And I found myself on my "Back."

I stood on my feet as shaky as could be
With my knees just beating a tune,
But bravely I said, "Move over men,"
"Move over and give me room."

I stood in that door with a prayer on my lips,
Wondering why I was there,
When I saw the jump master leave the plane
And sail out into the air.

Then out I went into the blue
With my face as white as could be,
I tried to count and check my feet
But God, why couldn't I see???

I opened my eyes and my chute finally opened
My knees even stopped knocking,
I looked up above and I saw my true love,
Made from 400 silk stockings.

THE INFANTRYMAN

"I want a transfer," the young soldier said,
"Out of the Infantry, out of the mud;
Out of the trenches, away from the blood;
Away from the rifle and dry hardtack
And crawling things and a heavy pack.
I saw a plane the other day,
Up in the clouds in the clean, cool air,
And with the Captain's permission I'd like to go there.
I want to go to the Air Corps," the soldier said,
"And fly an airplane and sleep in bed,
And maybe die, but die with glory,
Not in a squad, all torn and gory
On some red field untold in story . . ."

"Now, think a minute," his Captain said;
"I understand why the things you've read
About the airmen and daring deeds
And deathless gallantry up in the sky,
And reckless battles where men die
With scarcely time to reason why,
Have gone to your adventurous head.
I may be wrong but I think I'm right—
The Infantry is our real might;
All other arms just help the fight
That must be fought when ground is won
From little Jap or stubborn Hun;
And when all is over and said, and done,
The speeches made and the talk begun,
When the field is quiet and the dead remain
For burial in some strange terrain,
Where the maggots crawl and the wounded call
For water, that is not there at all,
Who holds the ground? Who reckons the loss and gain?
Who bore the brunt of the battle's strain?"

The young soldier paused, and scratched his head,
Then after a little thought he said:
"Captain, sir, I guess I'll stay;
You've made me see it another way.
A man'd be sort of a heel to quit
The Infantry for a lighter kit.
It may be rough and it may be tough,
And I guess the credit will be small enough,
When the tanks and planes, the special troops,
The armored force and the mechanized groups
Have had their say and won the day
And paraded down New York's Broadway.
But I'll stick with the Doughboys, sir," he said,
"And I'll sleep on the ground instead of in bed;
I'll sling that rifle and I'll swing that pack,
And I'll dunk in coffee my dry hardtack.
I understand what the Captain says—
The Infantry has seen some better days.
But when all is over and said, and done,
The war will be won by the guy with a gun."

ODE TO A SHAVETAIL

From the tip of the Aleutians
To the humid port Dakar,
The boys trek back to Benning,
To seek the bright gold bar.

From bucks to sergeant-majors,
Whate'er the rank may be.
The lads fall into classes,
And bear the name O. C.

They learn how to read a map,
To teach on ev'ry gun.
They study 'bout the tricky Jap,
And how to crush the Hun.

They all can read an ax-muth,
And bark out sure commands;
And when they hit the battlefronts,
The fight is in good hands;
The boys are really in the pink,
The obstacle course is rough,
But they are set for any job;
Our foes will find them tough.

Takes four full years at West Point,
To sweat the shiny brass;
But ninety days of endless toil
And Benning shavetails pass.

Wonder boys of ninety days,
But brass comes tough that way.
So don't you worry 'bout those lads
Who're trained on Benning's clay!

A SOLDIER TO HIS MOTHER

Ah, Mother dear, I had not known
How sweet the sweet of Love can be
Until the years had made me grown
And miles had captured me.

Ah, Mother dear, my heart was sad
Until your beauty made me smile:
The warmth of touching you—the tears
We shared a little while.

The love of home is simple—yet
The world can know no love so true,
No spot so sweet, no thought so great,
No one so dear as you.

A dream has been shattered like a rose in the rain
The make-believe is over, only the reality remains
My bubble has bursted, all my dreams are gone
My castle in the air, is like a forgotten song
No harsh words have been spoken, no hurts from a dare
Just a heart has been broken, and deep in dispair
No words can express, the loneliness I fear
That the sweet memories of you, will bring to me hear
Like a ship without a port, a night without a dawn
I'll continue on my way, until the last spark is gone
So until the mistery is over and once again I can smile
I'll cherish every memory and know life has been worth the while.

The Little Things

By OC MILES B. BAKER, 5th CO., 3rd S. T. R.
First Prize Verse

For these I would live if the end seemed close.
The hand of fate beckoning near,
For these I would strive to delay the hours;
Once again to relive the years.

The smell of hay freshly mown,
The air after a shower—
Of moss-covered stones by a spring;
The delicate scent of a flower.

The smell from a pipe on a misty night,
Of burning brush piles,
A flickering lantern, its light—
Of river bottoms, wet corn in shock, and grass;
Sweet anise, honeysuckle and sassafras.

These, my lad, are the little things,
For these would I live again.

The soft little touch of a baby's hand,
The hearty clasp of a man's,
The lingering spell of a woman's kiss,
The sincere smile of a friend.

The ring of an axe on a frosty morn,
Of walking barefoot in sand,
The merry lilt of a whistled tune;
The earthly smell of new-plowed land.

The bark of a squirrel, the bay of a hound,
A crow's harsh call—a ground bird's cry;
Wild geese in the night,
Dead leaves, fall—

These, my son, are the little things,
Through them I'd live again.

BIM BAM BOOGIE WOOGIE
(Portrait of a Negro Night Club)

A hide beat flat with a boogie bat
A Harlem gent in a garrison hat
At Main and Twelfth you'll send yourself
With the bim bam boogie woogie.

The joint gets hot and the gators sweat
The maestro shouts "got the tempo yet?"
A guy goes broke but it's all a joke
It's the bim bam boogie wookie.

You'll hear popping corks
And the sound of tinkling forks
But no one ever squawks
"It's a thriller, it's a killer."

The trumpet man tears the air with notes
The hatcheck girl trucks behind the coats
It's half past two your gal and you
And the bim bam boogie woogie.

THE AMERICAN DREAM

To where the latitude of dream meets the longitude of dare
Westward pushed the course of destiny—
America was there.
Men came seeking a dream they dared to find
Beyond the hazards of time and space,
Beyond the wilderness of their own mind,
Beyond the lost horizons of the past.

And the fingers of the wind turn the pages of history
And the ages evaluate the years,
And in the diary of destiny
The dream is ever present the deed not in arrears,
And slowly the story is unfurled
In imponderables to lead the world.

For the dream grew rugged in breadth and width—
Pizarro — Champlain — Captain John Smith—
Arrows wrapped in snakeskin, snakeskin filled with shot.
The axe building homes the musket begot
Till the witch of Salem riding her broom
Rough swept the dream into a narrow room.
Burdened by taxes, chained by oppression,
A dream is a thing won't make a concession,
So it split the dark through a thousand cracks
To warm the spine in strong shouldered backs,
Pleading lustily with defiant breath
"Give me liberty or give me death . . ."
And muskets were taken down from the wall,
Yes—this was worth fighting for—that was all.

Inevitable the truths the dream dictates
"We the people of the United States . . ."
And the lightning from the many sources
Was grasped in a firmly tightened fist
And the fire-forks twisted and pointed high
To form a torch to light up the dull sky
Brightening the dark for the world to see
The eternal symbol of Liberty.
And men walked with the dignity of MAN
When a people became American.

And the dream grew brighter, men following its gleams
Along Indian trails, the rivers and streams.
Others came seeking—"the scum o' the earth,"
Seeking a land to put their full worth
In the melting pot where honest toil
Would boil them as one with the native soil.
And cities grew and the dream fanned out
Encompassing all the land about
Until Mars breath in the body politic
Left the dream, a flame fluttering on the wick.
But the dream is One and cannot fail
Though a sword should cleave it to detail
And men pledge allegiance with mind and heart
They pledge it to all when they swear by a part.
And brother fought brother many a day,
Lay laurel on the Blue, willow on the Gray.
Wounds were bound of a nation dedicated,
The dream once more reinstated
"With malice toward none, with charity
For all, with firmness in the right." And free Men grew strong vowing freedom's new birth
"Of the people, for the people, and by the people Shall not perish from the earth."
And the dream leaped mountains, swept the plains,
And a new era dawned within men's brains.
Waters were harnessed, land was furrowed,
Minerals struck, the hard earth burrowed.
And the dream found outposts beyond the sea
Stretching itself in Manifest Destiny.
Horses became iron, men like steel,
A nation was turning industry's wheel,
Structures were towering high toward the sky,
Words took wing, men learned to fly,
And oceans were conquered within their depth,
The dream was running where once she had crept,
But the dream was trembling like shook foil
Within a world of troubled oil
And the dream put its arm around mankind,
The sword defended what the pen defined.
But the troubled oil is bubbling again
And the dream still followed by millions of men
Unsheathes the sword of liberty
To cleave the chains of slavery.

The dream is a heritage we must fill,
"We can, we must, we will . . ."

SONNET TO MEMORY

Memories are life in favored tread,
That leave the heart in past's repose,
And stills thoughts long past spent;
A mind's links severed, yea exposed—
Yet treasured still ere life's full bloom,
None can take them from thee,
Nor bend the reed toward yon East,
Save the pauper's saint who shuns thee;
That hopeless maze of one who dreams,
Mid thoughts still ever mounting.
'Til o'er the threshold of yester year,
It's faced still ever doubting;
This is past, that it must go?
Memories' pages prove it so.

A TOMMIE'S REVERIE
(Dedicated to an English Soldier)

When this show is over
And things have quieted down
I'll go to my home in Dover
There to settle down.

Green pastures all around me
The clean country air,
Blue skies that surrounde me
I long to go back there.

I've seen my buddies 'round me
Cut down like new mown hay,
They gave their lives, that I may return
To my Dover home some day.

I'll pay them back for you boys
With all the fight I've got They'll wish to hell their lives were spared
The whole Axis lot.

The day will come, this hell shall cease
No more then I'll roam,
In my homeland England there'll be peace
For me and my Dover home.

LINES TO A FATHER
CORP. HENRY B. MILSTEAD
Headquarters Co., 3rd STR.

This day I think of you, each year this day,
As deep April throws her mantle, soft and white,
Over the hills we used to walk, we two.
Then you were young and tall and straight,
Your stride was swift, your eyes were eagle bright,
The days slipped by, so gradual the change,
I did not seem to know
That time had laid its hand upon your brow,
And one day you had gone beyond the hills,
Above the far horizon, dim and blue,
Blazing a trail I could no longer find.
Many a moon has waned and suns have set
Since I have walked without you, but your voice
Comes often to me in the still dark hours,
Gently, like a benedictine prayer,
Bidding me face the perils of the day
Without a flinch or falter.
Sometimes as I wander far afield,
I feel your guiding hand upon my arm
And stars shine out before me in the dawn,
Leading me to some strange destiny . . .
The greening world may turn a thousand times,
But thtis has borne itself into my heart:
That mystery and romance never die,—
And one far day we'll walk again together
Beside some thunderous river in the hills,
Smoking our pipes in silence, as men do . . .
This day I think of you, each year this day.

A TALE OF THE NIGHT PATROL

Eight good men of company B
Were sent out on patrol
Seven died and one came back.
And here's the tale he told.

We started out in dead of night
With firearms tried and true
A BAR for Private Dyke
And one grenade or two.

The rest of us our M-I's bore
Except for Corporal O'Shea
For in his hand was firmly grasped
An antitank gun .03.

Our faces were smeared a ghastly black
To keep from reflecting the light
And belts were drawn set and firm
'Til all our packs were tight.

And each of us in perfect health
Set out to meet the foe
Far down the dusky jungle path
Just where we did not know.

A little after twilight
Within a dusky glade
I dug myself a foxhole
With my trusty spade.

My job within the unit
Was to scrutinize the trail
Lest some filthy sniper
Should neutralize our tail.

The other fellows scattered
Into the jungle drear
To gather information for
Our company in the rear.

At eight o'clock or after
I heard a gurgling sound
As if some faithful guagmire
Had pulled its victim down.

Then not a sound for hours
Nor forms in the light of the moon
I hoped with dark foreboding
The rest would come back soon.

I watched quite cold and anxious
While water drenched my feet
But only the jungle stillness
Was all I had to greet.

Far past the assembly hour
'Til the light must soon appear
I carried out my mission
To guard the unit's rear.

Then knowing that my comrades
Were lost, or maybe dead
I started for the company
With all the news I had.

"THE HAND, THE HEART, THE TONGUE"

—1—

The tongue so boneless, small and weak,
Can kill and hate with little speech,
Can heal and save, both mind and soul
Often thought more precious than gold.

—2—

Protects our homes, country and land,
Secrets are passed from man to man
The storehouse for the tongue . . . the heart,
Ne'er can they e'er stay apart.

Men have bought,
Men have sold
Things more precious than purest gold.

Men have spied,
Men have lied,
With that little tongue.

—4—

DESTROYS man, his body and soul
Shakespeare: "Woe be it unto any one,
Who cannot win out with only tongue.

So goes an old scrupulous proverb,
"Hands rock the cradle, rule the World."
And with his hands, not heart, nor tongue,
Nero fiddled, while Rome was burned.

His voice began to sink and lift,
"The British are coming by land and sea,
Arise and save De-moc-ra-cy (cee)."

I'm lonesome for the ones I love,
The Texas stars and skies above,
I'm lonesome for my home town, too,
For all my friends but mostly you.

—2—

I'm lonesome for those shady trees,
The open space and quick cool breeze,
I'm lonesome for my little wife,
My darling baby so full of life.

I'm lonesome for that little kiss,
For many months I've grown to miss,
I'm lonesome for those nights at home,
With my darling wife and not alone.

O BEAUTIFUL SKY

"O beautiful sky as I gaze at thee
Humbled am I at thy beauty and infinity,
Your endless color of blue so clear
Makes the entire world seem very dear,
Like a protecting cover over the land
You seem to me from my beach of sand.

O beautiful sky as I gaze at thee
Away from land, far out in the sea,
The twinkling stars to us seem to say;
With our faith in God he will lead the way,
To a successful journey for which ye learn
And he promises us also a safe return.

O beautiful sky as I gaze at thee
Flying in the air you seem nearer to me,
High above the earth into your clouds we soar
Our ship invading your silence with its roar,
Sailing through the mists with its fleecy lining,
We know we sail on, the sun will be shining.

O beautiful sky as I gaze at thee
Your billowing clouds seem to remind me,
That from the heavens rain will pour
To refresh the good earth once more,
Then the lovely rainbow as your clouds melt away.
Adds to my faith in our creator today.

As I gaze at thee O beautiful sky
The long day wanes and night draws nigh,
From out of the west across through space
The beauty of color adding to your grace,
All of God's gifts, O nature behold,
The beautiful sky never grows old.

THE MEDICOS

We aren't the first at the battle scene,
But we're always last to leave.
And we've seen such sights through the smoke's gray screen
That would be hard for you to believe.

We've seen the earth where armies fought
Turned red by human blood.
And we've watched the buzzards as they sought
For corpses in the mud.

We've heard the screams of dying men
Like screams that come from hell
For the screams of a dying man are worse
Than the scream of a falling shell.

But why should I go on writing here
Of the things we've seen before
When what I started to tell you first
Is who we really are.

We're the men who have the dirty job
Of cleaning up the mess
That's left behind when battles done
And the strong have won the test.

We try to patch a shattered arm
Or mend a mangled leg
To give release from burning pain
For which the wounded beg.

We try to keep a spark of life
Alive in the shattered frames
Of the men who were called away from home
To play war's dirty games.

And so we tag along behind
Wherere our armies go
And the foe we have to fight is death
For we're men of the medicos.

DON'T YOU HEAR THOSE SPIRIT VOICES CALLING?

Don't you hear those spirit voices calling?
They're calling to you and to me,
'Tis the voices of our dauntless dead heroes,
Who have died to make us all free.

Shall we turn deaf ears to their pleading cry?
And forever bow our heads in shame,
'Tis better in Freedom's great battle to die,
And let their spirits in peace, rest again.

I hear the voices of those who have suffered,
Of those in the Alamo, who fought and bled,
I can hear the ones who sleep in Flander's Field,
In the hallowed earth their blood has turned red.

Oh! let us take up the battle torn banners,
Of our comrades who fell in the fight,
To win victory in freedom's great battle,
To a sad world, bring peace and God's light.

Don't you hear those spirit voices calling?
They're calling to you and to me,
'Tis the voices of our dauntless dead heroes,

TO KEEP OUR COUTRY FREE

Go tell the linky pine tree
That lifts its arms to God,
To whisper in His presence
That I have left the sod.

Be good to my sick mother
When I am far away.
Tell her I am in the service
To keep our country free.

Good-bye you drugstore warrior
Who never worked before,
Who never felt the shrapnel flying
Or heard the cannons roar.

Ol' farm I've plowed your sloping acres
And tramped your grassy sod.
But now I swing the deadly saber
And fear no one but God.

Goodbye 'ol fields, I say
With my last breath,
Tell my folk when I am gone
I've cast my lot with death.

Goodbye playmates with whom I went to school
Tell the teacher I'll not be there
As long as tyrants rule.

Go and tell the Freedom Statue
Standing proudly in New York Bay
I've climbed upon my country's altar
To help to keep our country free.

IMMORTAL WAKE ISLAND
By Pfc. Moses A. Monroe

Amidst the raging fury of bursting bombs,
Which rocked the little Isle of Wake,
Came demons of death with treacherous hums,
Against the heroic warriors of a sterner make.

From dawn to dusk in fiendish glee,
The vaunted foe surged in;
To drop their lethals and then to flee,
Back to their lair which we shall rend.

Again and again the bestial foe attacked,
The mighty symbol of our glorious land;
But Americans stood there, hence the enemy fell back,
To bolster once their perfidious hand.

But in hellish anger the heathen hordes came on.
In numbers too great for these mortals to withstand;
Thus succumbing to the inevitable which fate had sown,
In the epic drama of our native land.

O, Men of Wake thy noble spirit with us abounds,
In the hearts and annals of our hallowed land;
And shall guide us on until victory is found,
In the blood and gallantry of our resolute band.

St. Paul, Minn.—(CNS)—An abandoned suitcase in Union station caused cops to suspect it might contain a bomb. They checked every way they knew without results. Finally they opened it very gingerly. It contained nine skinned rabbits and nine fish.

'Tis Wise to Build Rear Door on House

Palluchi's Enemy Evens The Score Once And For All

BY O. C. W. L. SACKS,
6th Co., 3rd STR

We were rushing back and forth shouting like scared devils in front of the burning building. A big red splotch broke the darkness of the sky. Small sparks darted upward and were suddenly puffed away by the high wind.

In our town of six-hundred people, there isn't much that we can do to save a building after it has caught fire. What we try to do is keep the blaze from spreading. That was what we were trying to do the night Palucchi's house burned. Some of us were on the bucket brigade, dampening roofs of nearby houses and wetting the grounds around them. Others dug up earth about the house with shovels, and a few were using the big chemical spray which was mounted on a wagon.

Through words yelled from one man to another, I learned that Palluchi was at a Christening and wasn't expected back until morning.

I stopped for a moment to wipe the perspiration from my face. My eyes were smarting and my throat burned. My chest felt as if a big lump of lead were pressing on it—I had to rest.

Johnny Burton, he's my neighbor, came up to me, put his buckets down wearily, and gazed at the blazing mass.

"Bad," he mumbled.

"Plenty," I replied.

BOOTLEGGERS DID IT

"The mob on the other side of the street are saying that Palucchi's bootlegging enemies did it. Put him on the spot for not dividing equally with them," he told me.

"Well, we'll never know" I told him as we both took up our buckets again and started for the pump.

I was just emptying my second bucket again and started for the tap, when someone jerked my arm. It was Palucchi. His face was working—twisting into wierd patterns. His nails dug into my shoulders.

"Da wife? Da kids?"

"All safe."

"Da papers? Dey gotta de papers"

I didn't know about any papers. He looked at my face querly then whirled about.

"Stop," I screamed.

He was running toward the house. He leaped upon the porch. opened the door and banged it after him.

I started after him but someone caught my arm.

"But Palucchi is in there," I pleaded.

"Palucchi?"

"Yes. He's after something in there."

"We'll get him."

GUSH OF SMOKE

The man rushed up to the door and pushed it open, only to be met with a cloud of dense smoke which started him coughing violently.

"We can't open the door. The air will help spread the fire," he gasped.

A man I had never seen before touched my shoulder.

"If you're worried about the man who just went in there, I saw him go out the back door," he said smoothly.

Just then the fire engines from Henderson county drove up, and in an hour or so, the fire was under control.

The next morning my wife woke me to answer a telephone call from Burton.

"It's Palucchi, Jim. They've found him! Burned to a crisp. Can you get over here?"

I got into my clothes and hurried to the scene of the fire. It had begun to drizzle and everything looked gray and dreary. Most depressing of all was the steaming embers from the house.

Lowly Private Sees Ace Shoot Down 'Gray One'

4th Prize, Features
BY PFC. SAM KATZ
Co. "E"—ISSC

This morning was no different from fifty-eight previous ones. As far as the Private was concerned things were sorry indeed. Day after day it had been one continuous grind of cleaning guns, oiling guns, greasing guns, inging guns up for the set-up, and making others do the same thing. A most boring and monotonous existence indeed.

His thoughts were none too pleasant as he scampered up the hill which would leave him about fifty yards in the rear of the supply shed which Roger and Carroll took such good care of, as their war effort. From every perspective and outlook things were none too pleasant as he saw it.

It was a cold and foggy morning in November and the darkness still enveloped Hammond Field with a shroud of gray, low-hanging clouds. And it was quite quiet with all the section men out on O'Brien Range this particular morning. The Private had a feeling that nothing would ever happen to him around the shed. What could happen to a grease monkey private? He does his job and no one ever sees him at it. And very, very seldom does he ever see anyone. Here he was young, healthy, and yet there was something very sorry in his way of looking at things. A most unhappy young man.

With somber thoughts he began his normal routine. The first chore was to collect all the oily waste and dirty rags which had accumulated in the clean-up of the night before. About fifty feet north-east of the shed was a pit which the Preacher had dug for this purpose. He struck a match and thought how easily oily wastes caught fire. Once in a while the thick black smoke died down slightly. Whereupon the Private poked the fire with a metal rod he had salvaged from the old grease pit nearby.

PANORAMA SPREADS

From his hill perch he could see the panorama for many yards. As his eyes took in the view he began to feel something was about to happen. Funny that he never felt this before. He had done the very same thing for many mornings. But somehow this morning hadn't seemed to be like the rest. Today his senses seemed to be sharper. He sensed something was up, and up was high in the air above him. Now he saw it overhead. It was the first aerial combat. The oldest dog fight of all time. A struggle which had started with the Creation and which was still in progress. And he the Private had been singled out to watch in awe and wonder. His body turned to the southwest—

Far, far, far off and at a great height he saw the Gray One. Huge, powerful, sleek, despotic and arrogant. The Gray One thundered along with breath-taking speed. And showed no mercy to anything in its wake or in its path. It cut the air like a heavy rain which overpowers haplessleaves and brush by sheer weight alone. Unrelenting in its fury, stalking, punishing and eager for the kill. This was the Gray One. He was superbly equipped and panting for the fray. His was the fight for the sheer love of fighting. And he was on top now. He had altitude and clouds to play hide and seek with his enemy. His was the initial advantage. It was his will to battle and he was strong and ready. And then the Private turned to the northeast—

THE GOLDEN ONE

At a great distance to the left of an avenue of telephone poles just behind an airdrome heavily camouflaged by a thick cluster of evergreens, he saw the Golden One begin his long, graceful take-off into the wind. The Private gazed fixedly as the newcomer soared far out over Cusseta at a seemingly low altitude. The gray clouds were beginning to lift over head. And then with a surge of unquenchable and not to be denied power the Golden One zoomed upward, upward, UPWARD, HIGHER and HIGHER as straight as a rocket bound for the top of the sky. He flew in a line swinging from far off in the east, banked to the left and came on as straight as a die westward, forever westward.

The Private stood silent, awed and alert. Then the Gray One heard the onrush of the Golden One and girded himself for the battle. He lay in wait, in silent ambush, hoping to strike one surprise blow and thus soften up his foe. Suddenly the antagonists were locked in combat. The Golden One had climbed so fast that he levelled off directly parallel to the Gray One. Now at right angles. Now face to face, nose to nose and then finally eye to eye. The Golden One kept blazing away at the other with his eyes spitting red hot fire. The Gray One wilted as the fire power of his stronger opponent wore him down. He turned and fled. The Golden One rose higher and higher as the loser disappeared into the far away clouds.

MASTER OF THE SKIES

The Golden One was master of the skies for this day. Tonight a refreshed Gray One might return to take command in a new battle. But to the Private it was a great day. He had seen an ace in action, and had seen the ace emerge a victor. The Golden One had risen from the east to become sovereign of the skies. The Golden Sun had risen in the east. The vanquished gray was the moon. There would be no rain today.

The Private smiled softly as he poked his metal rod in the fire and inwardly commented on the beauty of the day.

Steis Named Assistant S-2 Of 3rd Regiment

Appointment of First Lieut. William Burton Steis, Brandy Camp, Pa., as assistant intelligence officer of the Third Student Training Regiment here has been approved by Col. R .H. Lord, regimental commander. In his new post, Lieutenant Steis will handle investigations and courts martial work.

Before his assignment to regimental headquarters, Lieutenant Steis was serving as a tactical officer in one of the officer candidate companies of the regiment. He was commissioned a second lieutenant Aug. 24, 1942, and advanced in rank to first lieutenant March 19, this year. He formerly was stationed with the Service Company of the 112th Infantry and held the grade of first sergeant and fulfilled the duties of transportation chief in that unit when he entered upon active service.

Truck Unit Gives To RC

To show their appreciation and high regard for the fine work of the American Red Cross, officers and enlisted personnel of the Provisional Truck Regiment, Infantry School Service Command, contributed generously to the recent fund raising effort sponsored by that worthy and well known organization.

Although no formal appeal for funds was made, personnel upon hearing of their chance to voluntarily have a part in this effort, readily responded and, according to figures released by Colonel Frank J. Vida, the Regimental Commander, within a few days the officers had contributed $111 while the enlisted men, many of whom had just arrived, were giving $405.

Unsolicited

During the time when contributions were being accepted, many and various unsolicited reasons for these donations were given by the men. Some had received furloughs as a result of the Red Cross' aid, others had been given help with family problems and still others had memories of assistance from this organization. One soldier gave an unusually large sum with the statement that he wanted to express his gratitude for a personal favor extended him by one of their branch offices and all contributors were loud in their praise of such a merciful agency—thankful that an organization so universal in its efforts could still handle the most minute problems right at home.

Buying Bonds

Continuing their wise use of funds coming to them, these men of the Provisional Truck Regiment have not forgotten their duty to their country and have been supporting the War Bond effort with increasing enthusiasm. Captain Ross, Third Battalion Executive Officer; who is the Regimental War Bonds Officer, states that February cash purchases were well over $800 and that pay roll deductions ran into the four figure column. These evidences of members of this regiment contributing to worthwhile agencies are true indications of the calibre of the men who made up one of the army's largest, and busiest truck units.

Pat Kept Jump Ahead Of History Until Draft

Served As Trooper With Canadian Royal Dragoons

Scion of an Army family, Candidate Patrick A. Lennon of the 24th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, has been present at many places throughout the world where military history was being made or was about to be made.

He was born in Maymyo, Burma, where his father, John Lennon, was a member of the British Army garrison. The father, now retired, and living in Dublin, Ireland, was twice decorated for bravery during his Army career, which covered the Boer War-World War I era.

Candidate Lennon's first acquaintance with gunfire was made while he was a youngster in Burma. He was idly gazing at an object hanging from a tree when an Army officer ran up and fired a pistol at the strange thing overhead, which proved to be a cobra. Later the Lennon family removed to Aldershot, England, the famous infantry and artillery school, British counterpart of Fort Benning. Then the family went to Dublin, England, the younger Lennon went to Canada where he joined the Royal Canadian Dragoons, renowned cavalry organization, in which he served for six years.

Lennon won several prizes and ribbons for horsemanship in competition in the Dragoons and thoroughly enjoyed the life as a trooper but he returned to civilian life in 1935, settling in St. Albans, Long Island, N. Y. He was married and comfortably situated when Selective Service beckoned last August, resulting in his going to Camp Croft, S. C., for basic training. He began his officer's training here Jan. 2.

LAFF OF THE WEEK—

NEW YORK—(CNS)—A group of Naval cadets in training at Columbia University here were left standing outside one wintry day while their leader entered a building to find out exactly where they should report. While he was gone a group of small boys began peppering the officers-to-be with snowballs. The cadets were taking it indulgently when the leader returned. Grasping the situation at a glance he became a man of action. "Left, FACE!" he snapped, then "Fire at will!" The boys withdrew in the face of a force with superior fire power.

Post Clothing Repair Shop Largest Military Unit Of Kind In South

Unit Can Mend More Than 30,000 Garments Per Month

Addition last month of 68 machines and 36 women from the Columbus WPA has made the Clothing and Equipage Repair Section of the Quartermaster Reclamation Shops at Fort Benning into the largest such shop of its kind, military or civilian, in the South, and in all likelihood as large or larger than any other similar Army repair shop in the nation, according to Colonel Stephen B. Massey, Fort Benning's director of supply.

This was achieved on March 12, when the enlarged repair shop went into full operation, prepared to repair 30 to 40 thousand garments and pieces of equipage each month without strain of any sort. Prior to that date, the shop had only 12 seamstresses and was able to handle only a small part of the clothing repair work on the post. Most of the work had been sent to the WPA in Columbus by the Reclamation Section of the Quartermaster Corps for repairs.

The lot of many pieces of the damaged clothing would be a dust-rag's life if they were in the possession of the average American housewife because they are so ragged and worn, and so tattered and torn. The Quartermaster Corps here, however, salvages every piece of material in every possible way to provide cloth, extra buttons, zippers or half-zippers and other material. A good sleeve from one ragged shirt, with a good collar, a good back and other good parts from other worn shirts are put together until a complete shirt is made—and made well for the purpose it is to serve.

When WPA was closed down by the government late in February, the Quartermaster Corps brought most of the WPA machinery and personnel to Fort Benning, expanding the Clothing and Equipage Repair Shop to its present size. Today, a total of 74 sewing machines are utilized and number of employes range from 73 to 80.

FULLY EQUIPPED

Sixty-six of the machines are stitchers, three of them are button machines and one each are over-edge, felling, button hole, special double needle, and Eastman rotary cutter machines. The over-edge machine is specially constructed to finish blanket edges, while the felling machine closes side seams on work clothes. The button hole machine makes button holes of any size, and makes them look almost as good as new. The double needle machine is used mostly for putting on patch pockets, while the rotary cutter cuts patches in large quantities.

Of the 68 machines brought from the WPA, 64 were stitchers and four were special machines. All special machines are operated by three women employes, who are specially trained in the work.

Clothing and equipment come to the shop from many sources, including excess clothing from various units, clothing turned in by soldiers who have received discharges, and clothing which has been worn out by soldiers and turned in by supply sergeants for "salvage." The clothing and equipment range from an "almost new" state to a state of almost utter uselessness by former civilian standards.

Operated under the general direction of Colonel Massey, the Clothing and Equipage Repair Shop is under the immediate direction of First Lieutenant Ross W. Crossley, a native of Columbus, Ohio, and Quartermaster Reclamation Officer, who is also in charge of the shoe repair shop and several other quartermaster repair shops.

ALL TYPES MENDED

All types of clothing are included in the items repaired by the shop, and some new processes, worked out here at Fort Benning, have been put into practice by the shop.

Raincoats for example, are patched like rubber tires by a process Lieutenant Crossley himself experimented with and found to be far more efficient than the usual method of repair. Running across some rubberized cement used in the tent repair shops coming under his supervision, Lieutenant Crossley decided to try "cold patches" similar to those used on punctured automobile inner tubes. The area around the tear or hole in the raincoat is cleaned thoroughly by a mixture of ammonia and benzine, and a neat patch is placed over the tear from the inside and held by the rubberized cement.

The former method of sewing patches on the raincoats was not nearly so effective. The new method saves considerable time, saves machinery, and most important of all, leaks none whatsoever, while sewed patches sometimes were inclined to ship a little water. The only time a machine touches a raincoat for such repairs now is when a new buttonhole is made on the coat.

When the clothing and equipage comes into the shops for repair, they range from mattress covers to laundry nets, from barracks bags to mosquito bars, from shelter halves to woolen blankets and cotton comforters, and from prossaic O. D. clothes to the yet more prosaic herringbone twill.

The clothing and equipment goes first to the ripping and sorting group in the shop and are sorted into types as to material and as to kind of repair needed. If the unit finds certain of the clothing is unfit for repairs as a whole, the strong parts are ripped off and saved until enough different parts are collected for entire garments. If the individual bit of clothing can be repaired satisfactorily it is sent to the proper group for repairs, by the forelady at the machines inspection table, who allots the clothing to the various machines within the specialized groups.

WORKERS CLASSIFIED

The workers are divided into special groups for special duties, just as in an extremely well run factory. However, when new workers are hired, all of them, regardless of the extent of their previous training, are put into a training group and taught specifically and carefully the work of the shop. All of them are taught to know the types of material, the types of weaves and cloth, enabling them to match all patches on garments, and the best method of repairing each type of clothing or equipment. Thus, each worker will know from experience and training exactly the types of patching and material to use on each individual item coming up for repair.

After completion of the training period, the workers are put into one of the skilled groups, which include field jacket, blanket, comforter, wool shirts, wool pants, and herringbone, to mention but a few. The size of each group depends upon the volume of clothing or equipment of each type coming through the shop.

Clothing is divided into two general groups—Class B, and Class X. Class B clothing probably has been worn, but is still good for re-issue after repairs. The hand-repairing group repairs such woolen clothing and which shows only minor breaks in material which cannot be detected after repairs.

Class X clothing has been so worn and patched that there are outward evidences of repair. However, it is never wasted in any respect, and the good material from the various items are picked up in every case. Such clothing is utilized by the Army for field maneuvers, landing operations and other such activities which would speedily make Class A or Class B clothes facsimiles of the worst of Class X clothes. This type of clothing is issued without accountability, which means that the soldier or organization is not charged with the items.

CLOSE INSPECTION

After routine repairs on the garments coming into the shop, each is placed on a tray beside the worker. The garments are picked up by a checker and carried to the inspection table again. Garments requiring buttons, outside patch pockets, reworked button holes, or other such work requiring special machines are then assigned out to the proper persons to do the work.

After the special operations, the garments once again return to the inspection table where they are thoroughly rechecked to see if all needed repair work has been completed. Another checker classifies the garments, makes the count, and places them in the proper bins to be picked up by the trucks from organizations all over the post.

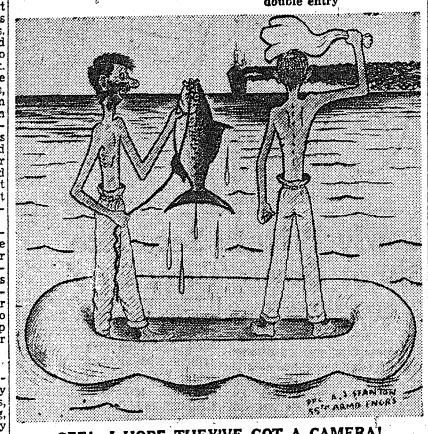
Braids are put on all overseas caps for soldiers on the post, and these shops now do all the work of this nature for the entire Fort Benning reservation.

A total of 22,542 pieces of clothing and equipment were repaired during the month of March, although full scale operations began only on the 12th of the month, Lieutenant Crossley reveals. Of this number, 7,305 were Class B items and 15,269 were Class X items. Barracks bags, all Class B, were repaired completely including the installation of the metal parts through which the barracks bags' draw-ropes are drawn, and a total of 2,364 barracks bags were placed into service as a result of the shop's activities in March. Raincoats repaired during the month totaled 1,119 Class B and 149 Class C rubberized raincoats.

1300 PLUS A DAY

An average of 1,300 to 1,600 pieces of clothing and equipment are now being repaired daily, Lieutenant Crossley points out. The amount of work an individual worker in the shop can produce depends upon the type and condition of the garment, he says.

In discussing this phase of the shop's operations, Mrs. Florence Pearce, supervisor of the shop, declared: "Khaki trousers are an example for one extreme, for they can be repaired with great rapidity. One worker can, in one day, repair as many as 85 to 100 of them. On the other hand, field jackets are hard to repair, and 20 or 30 of them repaired in one day by a single worker is quite a satisfactory showing."



Mrs. Pearce, now in charge of all workers and all duties in the shop here, was in charge of the WPA section in Columbus which previously did the repair work.

Personnel of the shop, well trained, efficient, and enthusiastic about their work, do their jobs in spite of physical handicaps. All of them are women, and few of them would be subject to any draft, even if the law should, in the future, declare the WAACs to be a compulsory organization for women. The oldest worker is a 66-year-old woman, well beyond draft age. The youngest is 19 years of age. One woman has but one leg, and three of the workers have an artificial eye apiece. Despite such handicaps, they fully earn their livelihood by their work, according to Mrs. Pearce, who states they are all highly skilled for their tasks.

As an evidence of the Army and Quartermaster Corps determination to be prepared for any eventuality, every one of the 74 machines are always ready for use and can be put into operation at a moment's notice, according to Lieutenant Crossley. This feat is an unusual one considering the number of machines, the magnitude of their use, and the intricacy of the machinery, but it is characteristic of the Reclamation section to be prepared—come what may.

Company Experiences Miniature Dunkirk

By LT. ARTHUR EVERSON

One of the events that an Officer Candidate is not likely to forget is the overnight maneuver which comes at the end of his course. It gives a student a chance to apply everything he has learned and is one of the high-points in his career as an O. C.

The 8th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment drew the assignment of Heavy Weapons Company for their share of the problem. We cheered when we saw twenty weapons carriers pull up Friday afternoon. Little did we know that they were there to create a problem in logistics and not to carry the weapons. For when they arrived at the bivouac area around midnight, we had to play "hide the behicle" while running over a minimum number of men . . . our heartaches had begun. The lucky ones got two hours sleep before chow was served. It was so dark that to this day no one knows what we actually ate.

AH, THE HEAT

The next morning at 0445, while our weapons carriers were resting up for the day's work, the stalwart men of 8th Company were tramping gayly down the road, a baseplate slung over one shoulder, a series of cement gadgets simulating ammunition over the other. The only casualty other than worn shoulders and stiff muscles (softened by many days in the sunwarmed bleachers), was Candidate Biel who was last seen disappearing into a hidden spiderhole of undetermined depth, machine-gun and all.

The men stuck with it though, and performed nobly. After the seventh mile the cement blocks and weapons were still intact, and although our legs said no, our heads said yes. The only unfavorable comment at this time was that of Candidate Dubin, who, a little worse for wear, was heard to say, "It isn't the heat, it's the humidity!"

ATTACK GOES WELL

The attack went along well and we poured ammunition onto the enemy positions. There was still enough spunk left for some double time when we displaced, and everyone had reason to rejoice when the bugle sounded the end of the attack phase. It was then that many candidates got their first taste of the army's famed K ration accompanied by the critique and a fine speech by Colonel Pratt.

The final phase was the occupation of a defensive position. The first machine-gun platoon, who had been on outpost all night and shot hell out of the enemy during the attack, had an opportunity to apply swamp crossing technique. Back on the main line of resistance, planes came over and harassed us, reminding us at that stage of Dunkirk and no rest for the weary. But we got in position and the bugle was blown. Someone said that the war was over. It was for the time and the G. I. trucks felt comfortable in spite of the dust and bumps on the way home, because at the end of the trip there was a glass of beer and a hot shower.

With the marvelous fighting spirit displayed by the Officer Candidates of 8th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, we are sure that such prevailing spirit will soon put an end to this war.

MEMPHIS (CNS)—Troupers in a traveling USO show spent the night in jail here recently. The unit was forced to spend the night in the lock-up because of a mistake in hotel reservations. Police sent out a request for all patrol cars to report available accommodations. None were found, so the actors went to jail—and to bed.

A Soldier's Heart Quickens At Sunset's Evening Retreat

PRIVATE HARRY L. KRAINES,
Special Service Office
Hq., 10th Armored Division
5th Prize, Essays

Sundown! That magic hour when man lays down his tools and turns his eyes homeward with a feeling of pride that he has earned his rest.

Sundown! When American soldiers in every quarter of the globe, from the isolated islands of the Pacific to the vast desert wastelands of Africa; from the lands down under in Australia to the frozen tundras of the Arctic, look proudly to the Stars and Stripes as it is gently lowered, and gather courage for the coming day, secure in the belief that through their protection of the flag on the battlefield their loved ones are protected at home.

Sundown! When an American soldier salutes his flag and parades with pride his fitness to protect it. PRIDE . . . the soldiers word for RETREAT PARADE; pride in himself, his army, his country, and his flag. And why not? Isn't his record a proud one?

Wherever he has stood Retreat Parade no one has dared challenge his possession of the ground over which his flag flew without fear of retribution. Though many have challenged, not one has been able to withstand the punishment delivered by the American soldier so swiftly, surely decisively.

That is the meaning of RETREAT PARADE!

GLADDENS HEART

It is a sight to brighten the eye and gladden the heart. At West Point, Annapolis, Randolph Field and a hundred other garrisons there is shine and polish and stirring music. It is in these permanent bases that the raw recruit renews his acquaintance with American tradition. It is there that he begins to understand the price in hardships and privations his forebears paid to gain the strength, courage, patience and spirit to make us and keep us free.

At Valley Forge, under Washington, our forefather stood his frozen ground. Beneath blue skies he colored the snow with the blood of his bare feet.

Decatur slashed his way through Tripoli and opened the seas forever to commerce.

Perry connected the two ends of the world when he first planted the American flag on Japanese soil.

Mexico became a good neighbor when the cry of the Alamo brought our swift vengeance, and Spain lost all interest in world empire when we hurried to the rescue of Cuba and the Philippines.

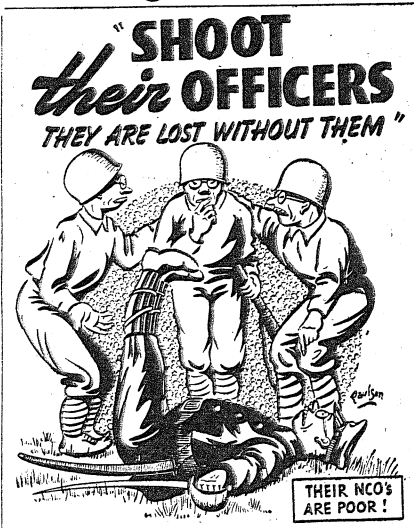
In the malaria infested swamps of Central America our soldiers cleared the jungles of bandits, found the answer to the deadly yellow fever, and opened the Panama Canal to the world.

In our fight for universal freedom we buried our dead in Flanders Field and kept a faithful watch on the Rhine.

This, and more, the American Soldier did to bring the world closer to understanding.

NEW CHAPTER

Today a new chapter is being written. Heroism is no longer a thing of the past. Chivalry has come to life again and many are the heroes who have put away their peaceful pursuits to don armor against the two-faced dragon. MacArthur! Colin Kelley! John Bulkley! Stillman! Patton! Chennault!



Many are the lands their feet have trod upon. Bataan! Wake Island! The Burma Road! Libya! Guadalcanal!

Many are the steeds that have carried them into battle. The Flying Fortress! The Wasp! The Hornet! The General Grant!

Faith and courage are their birthright and for their bravery they deserve to be free.

. . . And when the battle is over there is Sundown. While the dead are buried and the wounded aided, the weary soldier looks off to the horizon and thinks of home. But his job is not yet finished. Not till the battle is won will he have earned his rest. Like his forefathers at Valley Forge he has learned the meaning of Liberty through fire.

As a lonely bugle flings a challenge into the air . . . while the Stars and Stripes are being lowered . . . the American Soldier remembers his creed. With his head held high, his courage strengthened in battle, his faith steadfast and unswerving, he pledges allegiance to his Flag and to the Republic for which it stands. ONE NATION INDIVISIBLE, WITH LIBERTY AND JUSTICE FOR ALL!

Words Can't Win Wars; They Can Lose Them

By SGT. CHARLES MORGAN
Medical Detachment

As a veteran of the World War, and a member of the armed forces in the present conflict, I wish to emphasize today one of the most vitally important aspects of the present war—the evil threat of the home-grown saboteur whose idle chatter is damaging to our morale and encouraging disunity on the home front.

We can't talk our way to victory in this war. It's going to be won by ships, planes, tanks, guns, production and manpower, not by words. Oratory, editorials, propaganda, even the Atlantic Charter itself all represent empty words unless they are backed by action. We don't need to be told this. We all know it.

No, words can't win this war for the United States and the United Nations. But I wonder when we are going to realize that words can lose the war. Lose it by weakening the bond between the democratic people of the earth. Lose it by fostering disunity and disruption, not only between nation and nation, but between persons and groups. Lose it by playing our enemy's game of suspecting one another, opposing one another; by clinging with blind obstinacy to outworn political theories. Talking can lose this war if it is the wrong kind of talking. And an awful lot of talking that's going on today is the wrong kind of talking.

WE SPIN OUR OWN

We must not be so childish as to believe that all the fantastic rumors which are disturbing civilian morale so dangerously today are inspired by the treacherous Japanese or the cunning Nazis. Many of these stories are being made out of the whole cloth by American citizens who think they are patriotic but who are actually quite unable to distinguish between their patriotic obligations and their personal political loyalties. Rationing restrictions are a good example of what I mean.

Sugar rationing, coffee rationing, fuel oil and gasoline rationing actually affect everyone alike —Republicans and Democrats, Presbyterians and Congregationalists, Catholics, Jews, Christian Scientists, blondes, brunetts and red-heads. Why can't we understand this and take it in our stride? Why can't we realize that war-time restrictions are no harder on us personally than on 130 million other Americans. Most of us do. But too many of us don't.

There is the woman who is frightfully annoyed because she can no longer buy nylon hose. She knows that all the other women in the country are wearing cotton or rayon stockings but she still thinks somehow SHE ought to be allowed nylon or silk because it just happens that she doesn't like rayon. The men laugh at such a woman for being a bird-brain and not realizing what this war is all about—but what about the man who, by hook or crook, wangles a C-card so that he can ride to his office in the comfortable seclusion of his own automobile while his neighbors are riding the street cars and buses? What about the man who legitimately is entitled to a B or C-card for business purposes because he really is in an essential war business, but who then wastes precious gasoline and rubber using his car for pleasure riding or to take his children to the picture show?

REAL DANGER

These examples of selfishness would be neither pertinent nor important if they did not point the way to a very great and a very real danger. Too often, such degree of public opinion, on the selfishness is excused by the culprits themselves, or by a certain grounds that the rationing restrictions are unnecessary anyway. They say, for example, that the government is rationing foodstuffs and other commodities only because it wants to show its authority or—which is worse—because the government is covering up its own mismanagement of the entire food and production problem.

Take, for instance, the rumors that are running wild around the country today to the effect that food rationing has become necessary because we have robbed ourselves to send too much of our food products abroad in lease-lend shipments. These rumors are plain bunk. As a matter of fact, food rationing is necessary because of the gap between our average production of 1942 and the increased demands due to the war.

The next time you hear someone say that the people of the United States are going hungry to feed the Russians or the Chinese, tell him that that lie belongs with the one about how the English always get other people to fight their wars. Both are lies. They may not be German inspired lies but how Herr Hitler and Herr Goebbels must love them just the same.

LACK FORESIGHT

We all know the sort of person who insists there is no need for oil rationing because the country has lots of it. A person like that simply isn't looking to the future. He can't see that conservation of essential war-time supplies must be planned on the basis of a long period of years in case the war lasts that long. He can't even see that gasoline rationing is in effect primarily to save precious rubber. It wouldn't matter that he can't see any of these truths if he would just accept the situation anyway and shut up. It's when he gets to talking that he is dangerous. He's the kind of person who ascribes the worst motives to everyone else but himself. He's the one who asserts the government is playing politics every time a White House appointment or a new government war-time regulation is announced.

You ask, "How can such trifles affect the war?"

The answer is that they are not trifles. They are symptoms of a dangerous ailment that is afflicting our country. Too many American citizens have not yet realized that our war effort must be a TOTAL effort. Too many of us want the war to be won OUR way. We are not willing to yield our personal comfort and convenience to the common cause of victory. We are not willing to admit that those of different religious beliefs—or those of an opposing political party—or those whose ancestry does not reflect the same nationalities as our own —are honestly inspired with the patriotic fervor and the same determination to win this war as we ourselves.

No one is claiming that everything our present administration has done since Pearl Harbor has been the wisest thing to do. No one is claiming that any one person—be it Franklin Roosevelt or Winston Churchill or anyone else —is always right, that he has not made mistakes—that he is infallible. It's not important that the people of England live under a form of government that is slightly different from our own. What difference does it make whether a man speaks with a Boston or a British accent if he is on our side in this global war to preserve human freedom and personal liberty?

TEND OWN GARDENS

Let's stop looking at the faults of our own administration—of our Allies among the United Nations—of the war preparations prior to December 7, 1941. Let's concentrate our thoughts on the faults and wickedness of our enemies. Let's win the war by cooperation. Let's win the war by working together in unity and harmony. Let's postpone all differences of opinion, all personal considerations that are not directly related to victory for the United Nations. Above all, let's not give aid and comfort to Adolph Hitler or Tojo by bickering among ourselves. Let's not cheer their black hearts with the knowledge that anything at all is as important to us—to all of us, you and me and the man next door—as victory, total victory over them and their followers—and their rotten ideas about world domination and a master race.

We really have just one choice. Do we work together for victory? Or do we work separately for defeat? We haven't much time you know. We started this war way behind the Axis schedule. Are we going to fall farther behind because we are spending precious days and weeks arguing and disagreeing about the details of our war program?

The next time you hear a friend or a neighbor complain because he can't get all the gasoline he'd like for his car—or because his house isn't as warm as it used to be—or because his wife served hash instead of sirloin steak for dinner last evening—ask him if he'd rather have a handful of rice a day which the Japanese civilians are allowed—or whether he'd prefer the Nazi Swastika to the Stars and Stripes. That's really what it all comes down to, you know. This war isn't being fought to keep a Democrat in the White House at Washington, or to put a Republican there. It's being fought for our lives—literally for our lives.

Let's get that idea through our heads. And let's try to get it through the heads of the John Does and Richard Roes who think the war will wait until they iron out their personal differences of opinion. It won't. There is nothing Hitler is hoping for so much as time. The longer we take to win this war, the more time we give him to defeat us. It's as simple as that.

Johnny Dogface Finds America All Over Again

CANDIDATE H. R. HOLTZ,
15th Company, 3d S. T. R.
4th Prize, Essays

America is being discovered. Again and again, America is being discovered by the thousands and millions of young American warriors stalking silently through the jungles of New Guinea and across the deserts of Australia and North Africa; by befurred Main Street boys picking a treacherous path across the sliding ice-masses of Greenland, laboring across the mountains and lava fields of Iceland, shivering damply in the barren Aleutians.

Some there were who thought that we had little or no culture. They smiled at the word "culture" and bethought themselves dreamily of faded and cracked paintings and statuary lying under the dust of centuries reverently undisturbed. They murmured, "Culture," and heard the deathless music of Bach, Strauss, Wagner, Leoncavallo. They read Burns, Goethe, Shakespeare, Hugo. They drank of the wines of Spain and France and of their hoary traditions. Culture: The Parthenon, the Coliseum, the Arc de Triomphe, the Pyramids.

Would you like to know what culture is? Ask Johnny Dogface as he strolls through the heat and flies of Algiers. Ask him if he would like to step into a cool and modern theater in some mid-western town.

Asks parka-clad Private Jones as he wanders forlornly along Reykjavik's Auberstraeti. Would he like to enter a restaurant of gleaming chrome and bright-colored plastics, snowy linen, clean glassware, polished silver, multi-itemed menus. Go on, ask him.

'BREATHS THERE THE FOOL'

Ask the soldier in inaccessible Alaska if he ever thinks of thousands of miles of super-highways, of the wonderlands of Florida, Southern California, Yellowstone National Park.

Ask the men who are now calling a spot in India "home". Mention the Empire State building, the Golden Gate Bridge, the Mount Palomar Observatory.

For they all know these things. Not just the millionaire businessman and the political leader but every little man on the street and on the farm. They've all seen and known the miracle of America's abundance; America's lofty standard; America's stone and glass civilization, America's chromium and plastic culture.

They've all seen shelves piled mountainously with canned goods, staples and "fancy" foods; overflowing, even in these lean days, with fresh fruits and vegetables. Olives, mushrooms, peppers to spice their foods. Automobiles, radios, washing machines, refrigerators to spic their lives.

They've seen the factories humming, the gleaming machines turning, spinning, punching, stamping out the tools for peace and the tools for war. The same factories and the same machines that made us great in peace to make us great in war.

He knows, Johnny does, about the feel of fine fabrics on his body, the polished woods and rich tapestries in his home, the swift luxury car in his garage, the great, echoing corridors of the radio station, the city hall and the bank in his own small town, just one small town among thousands.

Perhaps it's not so much that America has these things as it is that he, Johnny Dogface, just an ordinary guy, has them!

Now ask America's Man-In-Uniform when America was discovered. Ten to one he will say, "December 7th, 1942!"

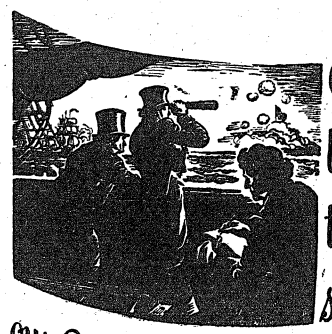
Nine DEML Men Get More Stripes

Nine enlisted men of Headquarters Detachment, D. E. M. L., Fourth Service command, Fort Benning, have been promoted upon the recommendation the detachment commander, according to an announcement at post headquarters.

Technician Fourth Grade Owen J. Remington has been raised to the rank of technician third grade, and Private First Class Maurice F. Buckley has been promoted to technician fifth grade. Privates Oscar Boyd, Jr., W. D. Hill, Donald L. Hodge, Paul M. Mingle, Charles S. Penn, Hubert L. Scarbrough and Herman E. Stewart have been raised to privates first class.

17 MP's Rate Advance In Grade

One corporal, two privates first class and 14 privates of the Corps of Military Police, have been given promotions in rank, according to an announcement from post headquarters.



Corporal Bernard W. Lundrigan has been promoted to sergeant, and Privates First Class Willie B. Allums and Carl P. Middleton have been raised to corporals. Privates Don Baird, Paul M. Caldwell, Marvin Galloway, Marvin B. Garrett, Herman G. Hill, Robert L. Little, David H. McClatchey, Worlie L. Pitt, Charles V. Ryals, Edward C. Sykes, Parks E. Williams, Thomas W. Wingard, Durward M. Kinsler and Grady P. Preston have been promoted to privates first class.

College Girls Are Service Bn. Guests

Girls of the Fort Valley State college were guests at the recent dance given by the Service Battalion of the Third Student Training regiment at the new service club in the battalion area. The dance was the first of a series planned for this season.

Success of the affair is being measured by observers in the increase in the volume of mail leaving the battalion for the college.

"And the Star Spangled Banner
IN TRIUMPH SHALL WAVE
O'er the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave"

O say can you see by the dawn's early light, what so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming. Whose broad stripes and bright stars, thro' the perilous fight, O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming, and the rockets red glare, the bombs bursting in air, gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there.

Read those words again and again. You've sung them a thousand times—perhaps too automatically, unthinkingly. You learned them first when you were a small child, raising a thin voice in school. You learned them by heart. But is their meaning alive in your heart today? The land of the free and the home of the brave. That is how the young patriot, Francis Scott Key described these United States. And one hundred and twenty-eight years later we fight again to keep it free. Today it is still the home of brave young millions of men who have reached around the world in the globe-circling war which can only end in making every man's land a free land!

But the fight will be long, and the sacrifice will be great. Lives will be given, homes broken, and loved ones torn from each other's arms. For this is a war of the people, just as ours is a flag of the people—its stripes an ever-flying banner of glory: its stars an ever-bright beacon of liberty.

What could be more fitting today than that every American rededicate himself to the cause both the words and the flag bespeak! How better can we rededicate ourselves than by reaffirming — each and every one—the pledge to . . . buy War Bonds.

Gem-Studded Platinum Brick Causes Army Plenty of Grief

Self-Pity Is One Of Major Afflictions Among Fighting Forces

BY PVT. THOMAS DEVINE

No one feels sorry for the man who feels sorry for himself and self pity is one of the major afflictions with which our long suffering army has to put up. Every outfit has its gold-brick but occasionally one encounters a rare example of a platinum specimen studded with gems.

A classic example is treasured by a company farther from here than you could cast a stone but by no means a day's journey. He would not have been a bad looking lad save that his face wore a permanent expression of pouting sulkiness and long suffering. This countenance was not further improved by a complement of pimples, diagnosed by his barracks mates as the consequence of a diet in which candy bars, cakes and ice cream left little room for anything else.

MA MILKS CHOCOLATE

The rate at which this ill-favored creature could put away sweets gave rise to a legend in the barracks that his veins contained not blood but sugar syrup and that his mother was a dairy maid in a candy factory where her duty was to milk chocolate.

However, it would never occur to this lad to offer any of the sweets which he hoarded in his foot locker to his companions in the barracks and, even in emergencies such as inventory at the PX he wouldn't even part with a bar of chocolate for cash on the nail. In short: a wart.

At mess our subject would pass up everything but the dessert, cram as much as he could get of that into his face then tear for the barracks where he'd crouch like an anemic toad on his foot locker munching glumly away on candy bars. Presently he developed a couple of boils on his neck and, characteristically, complained that the doctor was neglecting him.

THE ETERNAL SWEETS

Every duty assigned to him he grumbled about and never learned that his groanings got him less than nothing. On one occasion he complained to the first sergeant because he'd been put on KP after having had it the previous week. The result was he had several extra days of this unwelcome duty as dividend. When on latrine duty he'd set himself a relatively easy part of it and nearly rub the nickel plate off the faucets leaving to his partners such tasks as mopping the floors and carrying out the duckboards. On cold mornings at the rifle range our hero would never aid in collecting fuel for the fire but, when it was burning, would select a choice spot beside it where he'd squat champing on his eternal candy bars.

Another rupulsive facets of this man's character was his fancy for himself as a Casanova with the women. His manner of relating his successes, instead of arousing the envy or amusement of his barracks mates, made them despise him. No one liked him and he was treated like poison ivy by the men.

PERSECUTION COMPLEX

There are plenty of privileges which are not a soldier's right but which can be extended by noncoms and officers at their pleasure. To enjoy these makes a man's lot considerable easier and the people in authority are not usually grudging of them. This fellow however, received a minimum of such favors. He thought he was being persecuted. He was in a sort of negative rather than a positive way but it never occurred to him that his own attitude was to blame. After all, if you have it in your power to give or withhold a privilege you don't bestow it on someone whose very existence is revolting to you.

At the completion of basic training this chronic mess was assigned to an office in headquarters. In a day or so the office discovered that it was overmanned and our object lesson was unloaded to another section. Latest reports had this department cudgelling its collective brains to devise some means of passing him on to somebody else.

It is not improper to wash the American flag. It is no disrespect dry-clean an American flag. It is also proper to mend the flag when torn, unless it is in such bad condition that it would be a discredit to the owner if displayed.

From an Army Theatrical Performance Report on a USO-CAMP Shows' unit, with guest star: "Seating capacity—4,000. Attendance—15,000. Hospital attendance—5,000."

Tigers Set Up Three Boards To Test Men

Committees To Decide Right Of Elements To Wear Insignia

Three division boards have been set up by Major General Paul Newgarden, commanding general, 10th Armored Division, to test individuals, platoons, and companies seeking the right to wear the Tiger emblem.

The test for individual soldiers includes scouting and protective measures, use of booby traps, disarming an armed man, qualification in small arms, use of compass, swimming, vehicle driving, and cross country run.

Plattoons eligible to take the Tiger Test as a unit are the reconnaissance platoons of battalion headquarters. Nineyt per cent of the men in these platoons must qualify as individual Tigers before the platoon can win a Tiger Giudon.

Companies A, B, C, of the 90th Recon. Bn. and the reconnaissance companies of the 3rd and 11th armored regiments, and of the 775th tank destroyers may enter the competition as units. Company D of the 90th Recon will be tested on a date to be announced. April 11th to April 18th has been designated as the period for company tests.

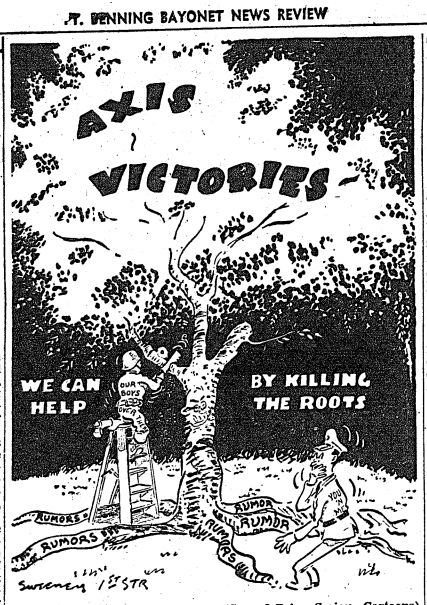
Individual soldiers will be entitled to wear the Tiger Sleeve Emblem as long as they remain in the 10th Armored Division.

Capt. Cofer Named Quartermaster War Bond Officer

Capt. Louis C. Cofer, veteran quartermaster officer at Fort Benning, has been appointed war bond officer for all personnel of the post quartermaster at the fort, according to an announcement made by Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply.

The appointment of Captain Cofer relieves 1st Lieut. James W. Connor who has served in that capacity for the past six months. Lieutenant Connor was recently named an executive assistant to Colonel Massey.

Besides his new duties as war bond officer for the Q. M. C., at the post, Captain Cofer also serves as fiscal officer on the staff of the director of supply.



Sand Hill WAAC Wants To Run Obstacle Course

Several weeks ago Tiger's Tale ran a picture of the WAACs who have been assigned to help Mrs. Baker in the Service Club at Sand Hill and generally make themselves useful in the library and theatre. This week the paper decided to check on their progress.

They really have become soldiers. Of the fourteen assigned here, six were taking "shots," one was in the hospital, and two were on pass.

Finally two of them were corralled, and the editors managed to get a short progress report. Auxiliary Alice Smith of Pittsburgh, Pa. who works behind the soda fountain, has become a real Tiger. When she saw the camera, which always accompanies them, she growled, but they got the picture. Her greatest desire, besides a transfer to Camp Hood, Tex., is to run the obstacle course, and ride in a tank. In civilian life she was a hairdresser. She feels that this is a "non-essential" job and, consequently, enlisted ten weeks ago to do her part.

Auxiliary Pauline Hodulik, from Pittstown, N. J., who is the Service Club Receptionist, was a social worker and truck-driver. She has been in service since January, having taken her basic at Daytona Beach, in sunny Florida. She likes army life, and the Tenth Armored Division particularly. Actually, she is impatient for the projected Sand Hill barracks for the WAACs. The girls are now trucked over from the Main Post.

Soldier Does Rightabout-face On Merits of Dictatorships

Alongi Describes Daily Life In Fascist Italy

The American form of government with its system of checks and balances is quite superior to the dictator plan followed in Italy, according to Pvt. Alphonso Alongi of Company E, 11th Armored Regiment.

"Once Italy was my home. When I lived there I, too, believed that Fascism was good for that European country. But after I came to America in 1936 and saw how a democracy lives and works, I changed my mind," declared the soldier at a recent discussion involving the Italian political picture.

"I was born in Trapani, Sicily in 1920," Alongi continued. "After entering school my family was compelled to enroll me in a junior Fascist organization. The dues were $5 per year. In return each young member received a special uniform which was worn only in attendance at Fascist activities. Girls had to belong to a similar body, but their doings weren't quite as frequent as ours were.

MUCH BREAST-BEATING

"On holidays and other special occasions we took part in parades. After a parade was over, everybody, men and women, boys and girls, would assemble at a public place in town to hear speeches. I don't remember what they were all about, but there was always some fun and excitement.

"Two or three times a year, bigger and better festivals were held in far-off Palermo. On those occasions we got up early and gathered at a meeting place. Here a number of trucks would pick us up, and away we went for a three or four hour ride. After reaching the big city we would dismount and march for a couple of hours in a great parade. At noon we had a little time off to visit and eat. In the afternoon we usually attended games of soccer.

Mussolini's picture appeared in many buildings and public places in Sicily, but Alongi never knew what the blatant dictator actually was like until the Italian spellbinder was seen and heard on the screen of an American theater. There were no moving picture houses in Trapani.

Alongi's father came to the United States in 1913. At the outbreak of World War I he was recalled by his native government and served four years in the Italian army. He, too, had found America so much better to live in that he returned immediately after the clase of the war. Working as a laborer, he saved his money until he had enough to bring his family over.

WORKS FOR NOTHING

"Although my father was only a laborer in America we lived well in Sicily on the money he sent us," the soldier pointed out. "We even could afford a hired man. While in Italy I left school at fourteen to learn the blacksmith trade. I worked hard for two long years without pay. During all this time if I failed to show up on the job for just one day I got bawled out like nobody's business."

Concluding his remarks, Alongi said:

"It was different after my father brought me to America. Here I could work where I wished, and whenever I wanted to make some money. My income as a factory hand enabled me to own a car, which I enjoyed very much. Yes, I'll take America first every time."

The War Department estimates the cost for 12 months of full-time training for a soldier in the U. S. Army is between $1,500 and $2,000—the difference in cost is largely the difference between training a foot soldier and a mechanized soldier, the latter being costlier.

It all adds up to just this—USO-Camp Shows bring the best in show business right to YOUR camp.

Shifting Scene Confuses CO

Company Has 3 'Tacs' In 3 Days

It didn't happen on April Fool's Day, either. It was the day after.

Captain Lewis E. Zalesky, who commands the 12th Company, 1st STR, was on leave and Captain Clinton Arnett was in command. As is the custom, the student company commander appeared in the company commander's office on the morning of Fripay, April, 2, for special instructions prior to moving the class to the area f instruction.

Having been satisfied by Captain Arnett, he went his way. That afternoon, Captain Arnett was transferred to the 10th Company. The following morning when the student company commander appeared in the company commander's office, he looked at Lt. Harold O. Marshall, who, as senior, took over when Capt. Arnett vacated. Having been satisfied by Lt. Marshall, he went his way.

The climax came on Monday morning of the 5th. Captain Zalesky having returned from his leave the day before, was seated in his chair when the student company commander appeared. It was too much. Three in three days. Noticing the student company commander's presence, Capt. Zalesky calmly looked up from his desk and asked, "Yes, Captain, is there something I can do for you?"

"Just one thing, Captain, tell me, Who's in command now?"

Tiger Library Favorite Spot

Shelves Hold Books Catering To All Tastes

One of the most attractive and comfortable spots in the 10th Armored Division area is the library where officers and enlisted men of the division can sit down in easy chairs to read and relax—or, to read and study, for many are missing no chance to continue their education while they are in the army.

The library, which is Post No. 2 library of Fort Benning, is equipped with 5,000 volumes, all of which are catalogued and classified. All are easily accessible to the reader who has only to consult the card index and proceed to the section in which the book he seeks is located.

According to Miss Mary Clark, librarian, the interest of 10th Armored Tigers is about evenly distributed between fiction and non-fiction. Current favorites in the non-fiction group include "Guadalcanal Diary," Joseph C. Grew's "Report from Tokyo" and Steinbeck's "Bombs Away."

For men who are especially interested in mechanics and technical subjects, the library is now adding new books on radio, motor maintenance, chemistry and physics to augment its present fine collection of textbooks.

Every Monday night the library sponsors a forum at which discussions on current events and other topics are conducted. The forums are open to all men of the division and, Miss Clark adds, "So is the library."

Phi Delta Theta To Meet April 17

A gathering of the Fort Benning Chapter of the Phi Delta Theta is scheduled for April 17 at 8:30 p. m. at "Sam and Hatties," behind Benning Park on the back road between the Post and Columbus. The first meeting of the chapter was held at the Polo Hunt club last month on Founder's Day, the 95th anniversary of the fraternity's inception.

Captain John T. Eichnor led the post-banquet discussions whose theme was "The War Challenges the Fraternity" and the singing of favorite songs closed the group meeting.

Information about the chapter may be had from Lieutenant MacKenzie of the Second Student Training regiment who may be called at Harmony church 382 or Columbus 2-1615.

2nd Prize, Features

Even though the southern sun shone brightly, the air between barracks was cold. As the company did its column right off the road into the space between barracks, the faces were drawn and the ears red. Arms were held stiffly by hunched soldiers instead of swinging freely—6 inches to the front, 3 inches to the rear.

"Company—HALT!"
"Right—FACE!"
"At EASE!"
"The twelve men with pistols! FALL OUT! Line up over here!"

"The rest fall out and form in columns behind these twelve men. FALL OUT!"

"Come on! Cover OFF! Dress RIGHT! What the hell's the matter back there! Stop that talking! Snap——! Drop your arms as soon as you're dressed up!"

"Front to rear, Count OFF!"

"All right, there are 12 orders. Order No. 1, fall over against barracks No. 3 with pistols. Order No. 5, take positions to the left of one of these men to coach. The rest of you remember your order numbers. Fall out and watch this carefully. There will be no smoking and no talking!"

It was the same old routine which we had gone through many times before. We went through all the commands with which we would be faced when we got on the range. And we squeezed our triggers on targets tacked to the wall of barracks No. 2.

SO WE STOOD

Those coaching and dry running were in the shadow of barracks No. 3 where the cold winter wind had free and uncontested access to bare hands, faces. The rest of us stood in the sunshine, which was some help. But we faced the wind and the bright low sun with unprotected eyes. We were allowed to sit, but the brown dead grass was black from the soft coal soot from the iron stacks of the barracks furnace rooms, so that if a hand were dusted over it, the hand came up a very dark and greasy gray. So most of us stood—many did their own laundry. And we got extra duty if our clothes were dirty, even fatigues.

Dry running meant practically nothing to most of our crew. Many more than half had never handled a weapon of any kind. Also, since there was no noise, no sense of accomplishment by being able to compare scores. We just shivered and got our tails chewed off by equally disinterested sergeants for lack of attention. It was only two o'clock when we started and this was scheduled to go on till 5, when we shaved and dressed for retreat. Each order took about ten minutes, making a total of two hours and 24 minutes for all to get through. A ten minute break each hour permitted us to smoke and rush for the Day Room to thaw out a bit.

Since we had been through this routine so often before we were able to cut the time for each order down to about five minutes on this day. But that didn't do anything except allow us to go through the orders twice. Still the process was learned. It had become familiar routine. Nobody gummed it up any more. Never was a gun on the line held in any other position than at "raise pistol" pointing down range. Nobody realized it; or, if they did, nobody cared that we had learned our lesson thoroughly—more through hate of the monotonous stupidity of the thing and the accompanying personal discomfort and boredom than any actual desire to master an essential element of our new and dangerous way of life.

HE WAS A BUFFER

At this stage in our basic training there were certain of us selected, more or less promiscuously, as acting corporels. One to each squad. His function was merely a means to bring authority a little closer to us and, since he was one of us, he acted as a buffer between the harsh military attitudes of our sergeants. In delegation of barracks details, etc. he was useful to authority and fair to the men—or he'd have been murdered.

Jim was one of these acting "gadgets," as one sergeant was pleased to call them. He was rather conspicuous in his earnestness. His intelligence being well above average, it was not to be marvelled at that he caught on more quickly than most at this "dry run" pistol practice. Nobody resented it, either, that he was acting on the day above described as assistant on the line to the sergeant who was instructing us.

Jim came along well all during his training. He was well liked but always a bit aloof—not superior or snooty—just reserved, quiet, serious. But he progressed rather more quickly than the rest of us to T5 and was the first to get T4. This came only a week after he had been finally assigned to scout cars as a driver. His work was never noisy, outstanding, nor spectacular. It was serious, methodical, and was properly rewarded for its conscientious thoroughness.

JIM OKEH

I probably knew Jim as well as anyone and felt very well pleased, as things finally got more and more settled down, to find myself assigned to his car as crew for one of the .30 cal machine guns. Our car, which was Jim's responsibility as driver, was always in tip top shape and we never got gigged for his failure to perform any of the many tasks necessary to protective maintenance or inspection before during and after a problem. It is one of the rules on our trips, when we are running in convoy, that the driver inspect his car at every halt. Jim never once failed to do this, even that cold and sleety night when we were on a blackout problem. We were running on muddy, rutted clay roads in driving rain and sleet. Of course, you can't have the top up on a scout car when you are in action, so all seven of us were plenty wet in spite of slickers and plenty cold with nothing to do but hang on. Even under these conditions, Jim got out and crawled under the car to see whether that stump we had jounced over had done anything to the steering apparatus or the oil reservoir. He wasn't any wetter than the rest of us, but he was a hell of a lot dirtier. And most of the other drivers were too miserable to bother.

I guess the Lieutenant, who was our car commander, must have said something about it when the problem was discussed in the General's presence next day. Anyway, the General mentioned Jim's name as the only exception when bawling out the other drivers for not inspecting properly. We had had to abandon two cars and a tank in the mud till daylight. It was later proved that one of these breakdowns was preventable. Ours was the only crew that didn't get gigged—down extra duty. Thanks to Jim.

ALL TRY FOR CADRE

Nobody could understand why Jim didn't want to go on to O. C. S. when the opportunity was presented. But then he started bucking for cadre—this is the nucleus of a new unit broken off like the dividing of an amoeba from a division which has nearly completed training. Everyone tries for cadre because it usually means promotion and may delay the fateful day when one is sent overseas. In most cases, the former is the real actuating reason. Usually the good men are sent on cadre but they have to have the quality of teachers as well. Also, some of the best are kept so as to retain the morale and confidence of the parent organization.

Jim was refused on the latter grounds. Most guys would have been pretty gratified to have the company commander tell them they were too good to let go. But Jim was really upset. It was the first time his reserve had ever been broken. He actually began kicking about things just like a soldier. It was then I began to suspect, reluctantly, that Jim didn't want to go to the front.

When this very unwelcome thought entered my mind, I began to realize why he hadn't wanted to go to O. C. S. Nobody wants to go to the front if luck will keep him away, but everyone takes his sentence with good grace and after the passing of the shock of the first real awareness that he has actually been in training to fight, he usually makes a pretty fair showing of being pleased that he is deemed worthy to defend his country. As his knowledge and ability increase his cheerfulness increases until, by the time he ships, he is possessed of a completely unshakable confidence in himself, his teammates, and his equipment.

RECORD GOOD

Jim's record had been so good and his automatic functions were so conditioned that he didn't let down in spite of his mental distress. In fact, there weren't more than two of us that even realized he wasn't as he always had been. This was one time when his native reticence stood him in good stead. It resulted in his being made a scout car commander before we shipped. This lifted him to a technical sergeant.

We remained in this state all through our months of maneuvers. And we found ourselves slogging along the north coast of Africa in the same relative condition.

We got our initiation into battle by fairly easy stages. We had a few brushes with the enemy patrols and got to feeling we were completely naked without gas masks, tin hats and side arms. As tank commander, Jim had a pistol for a cover. This seemed to be what the war was going to be for us. Just a couple more dents every other day or so on the ear, replacing a few rounds of ammunition.

But then one day we thought we were in our customary brush with a patrol when all of a sudden we found ourselves in the middle of the damnest scramble I had ever seen. Thanks to some damn good driving on the part of Tony Mascio, some really effective marksmanship on the .50 ca. bow gun and thanks also to the skill of poor Sandy with his radio before a tank got him, we got clear away, gladly leaving the enemy armored force in what seemed to be the very competent hands of our own tanks and mobile field guns.

LIKE AUTOMATON

We had lost one man and one gunner got creased, but in view of the hornet's nest we had stirred up, I thought Jim's reaction, like mine, would be one of sorrow for Sandy tempered with a very considerable pride at the efficient handling of our small fighting unit. All the way back to base he behaved like an automaton. Only four of our six cars were in by noon and we were considerably anxious about the fate of the other two who had been on patrol with us. We had been busy repairing the damage and replenishing our supplies and equipment. By chow time we were ship-shape and ready for a rest. We had our shelter halves rigged into a protection from the rain and were just settled when along came the Lieutenant with another radio man. They were moving fast. We watched the mud splash under their feet as we chewed contentedly as any of Carnations Cows.

The Lieutenant stood outside, water dripping off every part of him and told us we had to move out again at once and here was our new radio man. Though all our months of training it always had seemed that we invariably got another job handed us just when we were settling to recover from the last. This announcement, therefore, seemed to be just the customary routine designed for no other purpose than our inconvenience. Through long months of training to accept any orders, however, seemingly silly or unpleasant, we began to roll into it.

I don't remember now where Jim had been at the time. The actions of the next few minutes were such as to drive everything out of my mind. Wherever he had been, he was now standing beyond the Lieutenant with pistol drawn and such a look of combined fear and hate on his face as I never again hope to witness. He roared, "Nobody moves out of here! There's nothing out there but death and we're not going, see, we're not going."

WASN'T FOOLING

I don't know how long we stood still but it seemed a dog's age. I thought I could never get another breath. The guy wasn't fooling. I began thinking of how to get out of it, and picturing Jim's court martial, the firing squad for refusing to obey a command and threatening his commanding officer with a weapon. He was obviously out on his feet. His eyes were vacant as those of a punch drunk fighter. He kept licking his lips. And I saw the rain dripping from the finger tensed around the trigger.

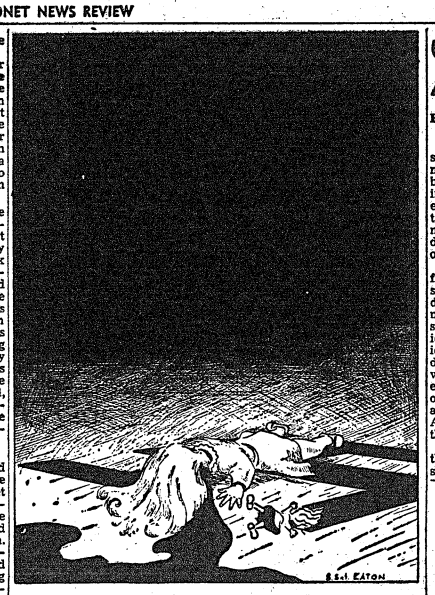
I haven't been to O. C. S. or O. T. S. like our Lieutenant has, but if his actions were due to his training and not entirely due to the man, then I say here and now we have this war won. He had been looking over his shoulder straight into the front end of that pistol barrel which looked to me as big as a 16 inch naval rifle. Now he turned his back on Jim and, in his parade ground voice, called out in rapid staccato the old routine.

".45 CALIBER AUTOMATIC PISTOL!
"DRY RUN!
"RAISE PISTOL!
"CLEAR YOUR PIECE!"

Jim's reactions were a trifle slow but he got into it finally and just at this point the Lieutenant turned on him and shouted,

"SNAP INTO IT, SERGEANT!"

Then to me—I was nearest.



"GET UP THERE AND COACH HIM, CORPORAL!"

I stepped over and took Jim's gun away from him while he stood holding the full magazine in his hand, staring stupidly at it.

The Lieutenant bent down to retrieve from the mud the live round lying there which Jim had ejected when clearing his weapon. He must have been thinking, weighing ten to the dozen. When he straightened up he merely looked at his wrist watch, and said in a normal voice "Better snap it up, we pull out at 0-one-hundred. You have eight minutes. Form over by the first gate. You, Jim, fall in in the second place as usual, right behind me."

We snapped—and were first on the line as usual. The thing was forgotten. It never happened.

Just Dry Run.

STILL LIFE

Bus—

from the bus, he subconsciously kept his stomach drawn in for thirty minutes before he realized that there was now plenty of lebensraum for him and his paunch too.

Riding the buses is good exercise too, that is, for the fellow lucky enough to be caught either in the front or rear exit. For everytime the bus stops to discharge a passenger, down he must hop to let the fellow out.

Getting from the front of the bus to one of the rear seats reminds one of passing through the famous "Fatman's Misery" squeeze in the Endless Caverns of Virginia. Especially if the boarding passenger is really fat.

On one of the city buses, a big fat colored woman with red bandana kerchief on head and checkered apron is a regular rider. When she boards the bus, she has to sidle in because the door is a little too narrow to permit a frontal attack. When she sweeps her magnificent mass down the aisle, those occupying the aisle side of the seats are in dire peril of being swept off their seats. However, a little cooperation on the part of one's seat partner saves the situation by gently flowing by process of osmosis in the other direction. One day, Aunt Jamima (a little faded in coloring) boarded the bus with a bundle of washing. She sidled in as usual but the wash and she were caught in the door, and it took three strong men and true to get her through.

Yep, gas rationing has produced real democracy and has brought about closer contact between all levels of society. And we do mean close.

FANTASY

I know what makes men drink;
I know what makes men swear:
The fear of thoughts that sane men think,
And deeds that make men care.

I know what makes men fight;
I know what makes them die;
The memory of love's sweet light,
A hungry baby's cry.

Ah, once I held apart,
And counted up the cost—
But memories have stung my heart
And I am drunk, and lost.

Woman's Club

BY KATHERINE HAMMARGREN

A meeting of interest to all army women is to be held Monday, April 19, when Mrs. Frank Gaines, Muscogee county home demonstrator, will show army women how to can fruits and vegetables. The demonstration, in charge of the practical home making group of the Fort Benning Woman's club, will be given at 2:30 p. m. in the auditorium of the Children's School. Mrs. C. P. Chapman, cahirman of the group, has declared the meeting open to everyone because of the timeliness of the lecture.

Mrs. Gaines, a graduate of the University of Georgia, will bring fruits, vegetables, and cans, and will conduct a complete demonstration on the process of canning. Her suggestions should be invaluable to numerous women who would like to augment rationed foods with home-canned products.

St. Louis, Mo.—(CNS)—Mrs. Vera Ice obtained a divorce from Everett Ice. She charged him with being "cold and indifferent."

Courageous Heroes Gave America Her Grandeur

PFC. HEROLD E. SHOWALTER
31st. Ordnance Co.

We boys in the service, understand the meaning of freedom more than any other Americans, because that is what we are fighting for and that is why the government has found it necessary to call us for service, so that we may be able to protect our freedom from the ruthlessness of other greedy nations.

What is the real meaning of freedom? Freedom is the right of speech, religion, the press, freedom from want, and the other necessary freedoms that make up such a glorious country as America. This country is our America, the people's; the lawyers, the doctors, the bakers, and everyone who is a true citizen of the United States, no matter how young or old, we all have a part to play and something to do to help keep America the greatest country in the world.

How did we get America to be the greatest country? I can answer that in a few words. We have made America great by the courageous heroes to whom we owe so much. From the building up of the small colony of Jamestown, Virginia, to the immortal cities of today, with their towering skyscrapers lining the horizon with all their majestic beauty and splendor, is all owed to the great valient men who have helped keep America great.

Washington, Grant, Lee, Lincoln, Sherman, all of whom we will never forget for their great effect into the history of our country.

To be a real American, we must love America, above any other country in the world and be willing to vote whenever the opportunity provides. We must honor the American flag with all its glory and splendor as the symbol of our country and protect it from harm or discredit.

To be a real American, one must live in the spirit of America, for the honor of America, and for the help of America.

This is a real American.

THIS EASTER
Look Before You Leap to Buy!

Of course you want to dress up this Easter and look your very best. But looking your best need not mean wearing brand new clothes. If your wardrobe is well filled, you won't need a new Easter outfit. And it's patriotic not to buy unless you need to buy. So for the sake of those who may need clothes more than you . . . and so that you may be sure of being able to buy new clothes next year and the next and next . . . look your situation over carefully before you leap in to buy this Easter!

P. S.—With the money you save—buy War Bonds and Stamps.

1st STR Has Community Sing

USO Broadcast Proves Popular

A "Community Sing," first of its kind to be presented over the air from a Columbus U. S. O., was broadcast by talent selected from the First Student Training Regiment, April 11.

Songs of World War I, such as "Tipperary," "Smiles," and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," opened the program of musical mirth with enthusiastic singing accompanied by a nimbled-fingered duo at the piano, Corporal John McCormick and Private Irving Siegel. Through their efforts every voice was woven in harmony. A novelty trio, consisting of Sgt. Frank Molinari, accordionist, Cpls. Salvatore Paterno and Frank Zucco with guitars, played their favorite "Lady of Spain," ending with First Student Training Regiment speciality arrangement, "Liebestraum."

Before the flood lights there burst forth into bloom "The Creator of Jive" at the piano, Pfc. Gordon "88" Anderson of Service Battalion with his version of "St. Louis Blues," hot as it was, he burned the home stretch with a medley of his own composition. "88" Anderson, as he is known to his friends, was a former composer for Tommy Dorsey, he is all of "Hept and Jive," and has become famous with his hot licks.

Service Battalion claims an exceptional singer of Negro spirituals, Pfc. John T. Davis, with a bass voice. His selection, "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen," was sung with feeling

On the serious side of life, at the end of a soldier's day, comes the time when the head is bent in prayer. Chaplain Frederick W. Helfer reflected those moments with his "meditation." Chaplain Helfer stressed companionship in our daily tasks, fighting for the freedom which is our heritage, voices lifted in song to "Onward, Christian Soldiers" concluded the session of prayer.

Through the fine cooperation of Lieut. Dick Daly and Lieut. James B. Sweeney the arrangement of the program was a success.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Not for beauty's sake, but rather to lessen discomfort in cold climates, the Jersey City Quartermaster Depot announced that the army is supplying soldiers in Arctic posts with beard clippers "to prevent the formation of ice on whiskers."

CARIBOU, Me. —(CNS)— The draft board here reclassified John W. Keene 1-A. Then they discovered he was blind and 90 years old.

IN FIVE WARS—and still going strong—Cpl. John L. Whitton (left), of Columbus, at age 65 is serving in his fifth war. His wife (right), Mrs. Ruby I. Whitton, is working as parachute maintenance worker at the Fort Benning sub-depot. Whitton served in the Spanish-American war, the Philippine expedition, Boxer rebellion and World War 1, but he signed up again to take part in this war, and is stationed at Camp Stoneman, Calif. He is in Columbus on furlough to visit his wife. Two sons are in service overseas, a daughter is a lieutenant in the army nurse corps, and two other daughters are married in men in service.

Veteran of 4 Campaigns Anxious to Go Again at 65

Wife Does Her Part, Too, In 'Chute Shop At Benning

Sixty-five years of age and as a veteran of four major campaigns did not deter Cpl. John L. Whitton, a former resident of Columbus, from volunteering for the army again.

And, what's more, the corporal's wife wants to do her part too, so Mrs. Ruby I. Whitton, is now a parachute maintenance repairman at Fort Benning's Lawson field, sub-depot.

"From the point of combat, I'm the oldest man in the service," observed Corporal Whitton as he watched his wife at work at Fort Benning where he visited briefly on furlough from his regular station at Camp Stoneman, Calif.

He fought in the Spanish-American War in 1898, the Philippine expedition from 1899 to 1901, the Boxer Rebellion, the World War I. And now, he's back for more!

"Whenever Uncle Sam is in a fight, I just can't keep John home," Mrs. Whitton remarked as she went on intently repairing a parachute at Benning. With many other feminine war workers, Mrs. Whitton daily reports for work at Fort Benning where she lends her talents to further the war effort.

JOHN WANTS OVERSEAS

Corporal Whitton is anxious to see action abroad, pointing out, "I want to get overseas again with the boys."

Born in 1878, Corporal Whitton squeezed under the age limit for the Spanish-American war by exaggerating his life a year. At that time, all soldiers had to be at least 21 years old.

Corporal Whitton is believed to be the only former senior sergeant, which was the forerunner of the army's present rank of master sergeant, back in active service again.

During his several tours of army duty Whitton has served at army posts and stations throughout the nation, including a year he spent at Fort Benning in 1919 as deputy director of operations and as post truckmaster. At that time, he ranked as a master sergeant.

OLD MAN OF ARMY

Corporal Whitton, who considers himself the "old-man-of-the-army," has served tours of duty with several branches of service, including the cavalry, infantry, armored force, motor transport, ordnance and engineers.

During the Spanish - American war, Whitton was brigade orderly for Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who later became president of the United States. Then, during World War I, Whitton served under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who was at that time a lieutenant-colonel in the tank corps.

Corporal Whitton's whole family is either in the army or attached to the army. While his wife is busy keeping parachutes in repair at Benning, two sons are serving overseas. A daughter, who is a lieutenant in the army nurse corps, is stationed at Camp Cook, Calif., whole two other daughters are married in men in service.

Tigers Enjoy A Good Show

11th Armored Band In 'Fun and Music'

A fast moving show packed with laughs, clever skits and good music was presented April 8 before a large audience at "Tiger's Lair" by the 11th Armored Regiment band under the supervision of the regimental special service office.

The show, which was called "Fun and Music," opened with the band's original arrangement of "Limehouse Blues." This was followed by a skit, presented by Pvt. Rioux and Cpl. Hundricks. Pvt. Rioux also gave his interpretation of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

Highlights of the show was a sketch entitled "Der Fuehrer's Face," presented by D Company of the 11th Armored. Based on the popular song of the same title, the skit was a satire of the Nazi leaders. Hitler was played by Pvt. Blechner, while Goering was portrayed by Pvt. Bornstein. Cpl. Alberts was the American aviator who was captured by the Nazis.

Russ Nordstrum, trumpeter in the band, doubled in brass to give an excellent vocal interpretation of "Daybreak." Another double-threat performer, bass - player Lloyd Sowers, also offered a vocal number.

The band then played the new "Tiger Song," composed by Pvt. William C. Koerper, who also conducted the band for this number. Pvt. Theodore Labowsky, the ex-coal miner with the golden voice, sang light classics and was warmly received.

T-Sgt. Dante Perfumo directed the band for the show and Cpl. Richard Smith served as master of ceremonies.

Football Stars In 1st STR

Several West Point Ex-Greats Included

The nucleus of a first class football team is contained in the Second Company, 1st STR, with All-Americans: Lt. Col. Harvey J. Jablonsky, U. S. M. A.; Lt. Col. Harley N. Trice, U. S. M. A.; Major Francis Greene, also a graduate of the Military Academy, and Major Graham Batchelor, University of Georgia graduate.

Col. Jablonsky is the "Jabo" of West Point fame and is known to all followers of Army football. He served as football coach at West Point for several years in addition to his other duties while stationed there.

Col. Trice served at West Point as an assistant football coach also and served in Russia and in Hawaii before coming to Fort Benning.

Major Greene was one of the outstanding football players of his class when he graduated from West Point in 1922, and is now serving up there as an instructor.

Major Batchelor, a star football player for the University of Georgia, also was coach of boxing, track and football at Georgia Military College and found time to be assistant professor of Military Science and Tactics.

11th Company 1st STR Qualifies Anti-Tank Men

Members of 11th Company 1st STR, finishing their work in weapons, ended in a blaze of glory with 91.1 per cent of the group qualifying in 1000 inch target firing of the 37 MM Anti-Tank Gun.

Of the total of 170 officers in the class, 40.5 per cent qualified as experts, 28 per cent as first class gunners and 22.6 per cent as second class gunners. Qualification averaged recent classes, both basic and OCS, was 80.2 per cent, committee members said.

In .30 caliber field firing the percentage of hits by the class was 26.6 and on the 37 MM field firing, the mark was 27.2.

High scorers on the 1000-inch target firing, with a possible of 200, were Lts. Otto Carroza and James Duffy, Jr., with 195 each; Lts. John S. Chesebro, Ross S. Douglass and Henry M. Truby, 185 each, and Capts. George C. Warren, Jr., Henry A. Clayton, James A. Zimmerman, Jr., and Lt. George L. Robertson, 180 each.

The next day, while clearing a "live" mine field, the class set off only 8 per cent of the mines, the best mark turned in by a basic class. The third platoon of the unit, which is the 11th Company, First Student Training Regiment, uncovered 18 live mines and booby traps without exploding a single one.

Unit Speeds Up Mail Delivery

The 24th Company of the 1st Student Training Regiment has completed the first three months of a proposed six-month trial of a new company postal system. Up to date and highly efficient, this system has been extremely satisfactory and has eliminated the excessive handling of mail before reaching the addressee.

The new system was worked out by the mail orderly of the 24th Company Furman C. Barnett, and the company commander, Lt. F. M. Schilling. It originally consisted of replacing a regulation door with a bank window installation. Since the first few days of the experiment the idea has expanded. The miniature post office has been equipped with a set of alphabetical boxes, scales to weigh both first class mail and parcel post, sorting table, re-addressing board and table, high stool, plenty of pens and ink, added mail box space, and lockers for protection of undelivered mail.

ONE-LINE PRINCIPLE

The system, itself, was formulated by the company commander on the "one line" principle. Since the student motor mechanics who are members of the organization must wait in line for meals, it was an added hardship to "sweat out" letters at mail call. The men leave the mess-hall in small groups; they can very easily be handled at the postal window in the "country post office style." The mail orderly quickly masters the art of knowing the men who have mail each day, and as each man gives his name he can hand them the letters personally.

The system has other advantages, too. It eliminates the necessity for handling the mail in any place other than the mail-room; it speeds up the distribution because it is regulated and controlled by the fact that men leave the mess-hall in small groups; it permits the security of mail until actual delivery; it offers weighing and handling facilities, thereby allowing the men more time for study or recreation. Since the company mail room has been furnished with stamps, getting excused to "run up to the post-office to get this letter (or package) mailed" is a thing of the past.

Seattle, Washington State, Or Dontcha Know?

CAP. J. H. CULP
Div. Surg. Office
10th Armored Div.

My wife, God bless her, loves to talk about anything and everything and all the time, but she usually manages to switch the conversation during an evening from war, politics, ration points, dieting and bridge to the subject of the "Northwest Playground," Seattle, Washington, in particular, our abode before peregrinating to Fort Benning. Of course, I am fond of the place myself and have no objections to her loquacious boasting of the city and its environs; nevertheless, having heard her platitudes repeatedly asserted, I must admit the subject is repulsive to my mood at times.

Naturally, I finally objected, and for three weeks, she morosely limited her Seattle (chamber of commerce) speech to the succinct phrase, "Yes, it is a grand place to live," for which I was very grateful.

But curse that man who one night maliciously introduced her as Mrs. X, the woman from Sea Island, (Georgia).

Now she feels that perhaps many other people also have incorrectly understood her to say "Sea Island instead of Seattle," and she is determined to undo that mistake. So I, poor husband, am again back in the groove, apathetically listening to her vociferous descriptions of Seattle, but with the added laconic phrase. "It's in the State of Washington, you know!"

Sgt. and Mrs. Harris Announce Son's Birth

Sgt. and Mrs. Richard Harris of Baker Village, Columbus, Ga., announce the birth of a son, Richard Ernest, at City Hospital on April 7.

Sgt. Harris is in the Military Personnel Office at Post Headquarters, Fort Benning. Mrs. Harris is the former Jeanette Schleuning of 237 Loring Avenue, Buffalo, New York.

Before being inducted into the Army, Sgt. Harris was connected with Sears, Roebuck and Company of Buffalo.

COAST GUARD BARRACKS, San Francisco, Calif. — The "largest flag in the world" was displayed at Kezar Stadium during the 18th Annual Shrine All-Star East-West football contest. 126 feet long and 75 feet wide, the mammoth "Old Glory" stretched from one 30 yard line to the other and was supported in the center by nine men who marched with their heads protruding through the flag.

Sodus, N. J.—(CNS)—Thirteen-year-old Jennie Lewis killed herself with a shotgun after a stray cat had killed her pet canary as the bird fluttered about the Lewis farm with the child.

The rest-pause that refreshes

Welcome in peace... more welcome in war work

IN letter after letter from war plants and factories, managers write in to tell how important they consider Coca-Cola in providing energy-giving refreshment for workers . . . in helping output and morale. Of course, workers in war plants welcome a rest-pause . . . with ice-cold Coca-Cola to make it the pause that refreshes.

Ice-cold Coca-Cola quenches thirst. But it goes further to add pure, wholesome refreshment that you feel and enjoy. Made with a finished art, Coca-Cola has a taste all its own . . . a goodness you always welcome.

Popularity with war-workers has made Coca-Cola the symbol of the rest-pause. And remember: only The Coca-Cola Company produces Coca-Cola.

Letters from plant managers from coast to coast emphasize that the little moment for an ice-cold Coca-Cola means a lot to workers in war plants. It's a refreshing moment on the sunny side of things . . . a way to turn to refreshment without turning from work.

Hard work takes moisture out of you. Ice-cold Coca-Cola is a pleasant, refreshing way to put it back . . . a way you'll enjoy.

A breathing spell, a rest-pause and ice-cold Coca-Cola. Contentment comes when you connect with a Coke.

Two-Beat Charlie Goes Back To Civilian Life

Musician To Take Defense Job Building Ships

The next time the 10th Armored Division Tigers gather to listen to the strains and stresses of the 11th Armored Regiment band a familiar face will be missing. For Sgt. Charles F. Krider, veteran of two wars and known from coast to coast as "Two Beat Charlie," is returning to civilian life to take a defense job in a shipyard.

Charlie, you know, is the boy who can "slap that piano" and make the drums say "Daddy." It was way back in 1894 when he first saw the light of day. He was reared in San Francisco and educated in Oakland, California. When presented with a scholarship by St. Mary's College of Oakland he forthwith took up his drums and helped the school orchestra make a name for itself.

In 1914 the then youthful musician joined up as a drummer with Art Hickman's dance band. He played with this famous West Coast orchestra for more than two years. Shortly after the outbreak of World War I he enlisted in the U. S. Army and became a member of the 39th Heavy Field Artillery. Stationed at Camp Lewis, now known as Fort Lewis, Washington, he organized a drum and bugle corps for this unit.

WITH 'CAN-DO'S'

Krider found that he liked army life, so a few months after his discharge in 1919 he re-enlisted. This time he was placed with the 15th Infantry band. Later the regiment was transferred to Tientsen, China. During his stay here he organized a soldier vaudeville troupe. In 1921 this group of performers was sent to Manila, Philippine Islands, to participate in the Magellan Carnival held there in February of that year. The troupe also entertained patrons at several Manila night clubs.

Following his discharge in 1922 the sergeant played on various name bands for nearly twenty years. In New York City he was associated with the Four Marx Brothers, Don Parker's Band at the Strand Roof, and the Bruno Brothers' Orchestra which performed at Chin Lee's well known Chinese restaurant. He also paddled the drums with Mat Martin's Band on the Keith Circuit, a vaudeville combine whose performers appeared at "big time houses" on the East Coast.

On the West Coast he was a member of Tom Guerin's dance band at San Francisco's Bal Tabarin. He also sparkled iwth Joe Wright's Orchestra at the Silver Slipper, a 'Frisco night club.

BUGLE CORPS WINNER

Numerous American Legion posts on the West Coast called upon Krider to form and instruct drum and bugle corps for their respective organizations. One such unit which he trained for the Humboldt Post of Eureka, Calif., took first prize at the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco.

When Herr Hitler plunged the world into another bloody holocaust Charlie became restless. After the fall of France he could stand it no longer and re-enlisted in the Army on July 1, 1940. Assigned to the 11th Cavalry, he served on the Mexican border and other points in California. Last summer he was transferred to the 11th Armored Regiment.

Krider continued his rhythmic activities with the 11th Cavalry dance band. When the 11th Armored Regiment Band was organized he was placed in charge of the drum section. He is the organizer of the regimental drum and bugle corps, which he claims is the best in the 10th Armored Division.

FILIPINOS LOYAL

During the course of his travels in the Orient he found the Chinese people to be very friendly and "on the square" with Americans.

He also observed that the Filipinos were a good, industrious people who were loyal to their native land and to the American flag. But the Japs, well, one look at them was enough.

"No American soldier who was stationed either in China or the Philippine Islands ever had any use for those scummy, slant eyed Japs," thundered Krider. "We called them 'scibbies,' and 'monkeys,' and 'yellow snakes,' too. They've always been such treacherous skunks."

Questioned concerning his opinion about the outcome of the war, he declared:

"The Untied Nations will deal such terrific blows to the Axis governments that their peoples will long for peace. Our men will never quit, however, until the enemy is soundly trounced. Now I want to say one more thing to all my old Army friends, and that is 'so long.'"

PLEASE—JUST A LITTLE MORE BREEZE.

New Recruits Take Refresher At Tiger Range

Waac Relief Sends Hundreds Of Men Back To Troop Duty

Carmouche Range, in the Sand Hill area, is the scene of bustling activities once more—this time as the home of half the newly arrived enlisted men who were transferred to the 10th Armored Division bewteen March 30 and April 8 from service command jobs throughout the Midwest and South.

Every new man, whether a private with very short service or a staff sergeant with three hash marks, will get two weeks at Camp Carmouche for orientation concerning the operation of an armored division, to be followed by one week at Tiger Camp. Half of the provisional training battalion under Lt. Col. Douglas Cameron began their Carmouche training the past Monday, while the remainder of the men will have their opportunity some time in May.

Most of the new men came from induction stations, military police detachments, replacement centers, and service commands in Georgia, Indiana, Michigan, Mississippi, Florida and Kentucky. While some of them are told-timers, they are for the most part selectees who have been replaced in their comparatively cushy detached service jobs by WAACs and limited service men.

PROMOTIONS FROZEN

Their coming brought about a temporary freezing of all promotions of enlisted men in the division, since there were so many non-coms in the group that tables of organizations in many cases have been stretched beyond the allotted strength in regard to ratings. The new men will hold whatever rating they had upon joining the division for three months, after which they may be reduced if they prove inefficient.

Major General Paul W. Newgarden, division commander and one of the Armored Force's ace training generals, lost no time in putting the newcomers to work. Some of the men who were patrolling swank night spots in cities a few days ago found themselves puffing along the dusty trails of Tiger Camp a day after they reached the division—if their assignment placed them with an outfit which was then in Tiger Camp. Some of them were even facing the prospect of the 25-mile hike last Saturday morning when they got a reprieve from the general, who ordered them all delivered into the garrison for his welcome address.

HARD AT WORK

The two-week indoctrination courses at Camp Carmouche will be a concentration of guns and vehicles, with the usual basic training courses, such as drill, scouting, sanitation and first aid, military courtesy and the like being skipped entirely. When the new men have received the proper orientation, they will be given jobs as nearly like those they had before as possible. Whether they will hold those jobs will depend upon their ability to switch from typewriters and M. P. beats to guns and tanks and vehicles.

Service Unit, 1st STR Plans Sports Program

The Service Battalion of the First Student Training Regiment recently organized its baseball team for the 1943 season, Headquarters Company again leads the Service Battalion with outstanding players.

Much is expected out of Eugene "Lefty" Randolph who will be seen in action on the mound, while Vernon "Grand-Pop" Bumbray will be found in the end field doing a good job with Eugene "Noise-Box" Greatheart doing his bit in the out-field.

On Tuesday night, April 20, the Service Battalion will have another of its battalion parties, there will be games and prizes for contestants. Wayland Lee will show the boys the latest dances from Harlem, while George Pace, former bantamweight champion, will give the fellows a few points on the old game of boxing.

Capt. Sam E. Agrillo along with the help of 1st Sgt. William Oglen has really kept the fellows on the ball for quite a while.

National Service Life Insurance is issued upon the 5-year level premium term plan, with the privilege of conversion to policies of ordinary life, 20-payment or 30-payment life insurance. The act provides that all 5-year level term policies shall terminate at the expiration of the term period. It is possible that congress will have for consideration the renewal of this type of insurance as it has in the case of World War I veterans. If the 5-year term insurance is changed to one of the above specified policies the insurance will remain in effect as long as the premiums are paid.

Three Hospital Trains Prepare For Vital Work

Personnel Receiving Advanced Training In Care of Injured

Preparing for important service overseas, three hospital trains similar to those which proved so effective in the first World War, are now undergoing intensive training at the Post for the vital work which lies ahead of them.

These three units, whose personnel is now receiving advanced training at their quarters in the Pine Grove area, are the 21st Hospital under the command of Lieutenant John D. Wilkes, the 23rd whose commanding officer is Captain Edward Shires, and the 24th headed by Major Glen E. Burbridge.

Actually complete and well equipped mobile hospitals for use in or outside of a theater of war, these hospital trains would be used in a foreign area of operations to move casuals from an evacuation hospital to an embarkation port. Similarly, such units would transport wounded men from a hospital ship to a station hospital in this country.

TRAIN MEANS TRAIN

Unlike the practice in other military outfits, the term "train" used in connection with these medical units means just the same as in civilian parlance, that is, a number of railway cars drawn by a locomotive. These comprise unit cars which contain operating rooms, kitchens and shower room, and ward cars housing 32 beds each in double tiers.

After they had proved so valuable to the United States Army in World War I, the War Department has since kept one of them in commission at Carlisle Barracks, Penn. This train formed the nucleus or prototype of the present hospital trains which have been activated, including the three at Fort Benning.

LEND-LEASE REVERSED

While it cannot be stated how many of these trains are in use overseas, it was announced in a recent issue of the Army and Navy Journal that the British government recently turned over one of its own hospital trains to the American forces operating in the Kingdom, this action constituting a typical instance of lend-lease operating in reverse.

Major Burbridge, commander of the 24th Hospital Train and a graduate of Creighton University in Omaha, Nebraska, practiced medicine in Logan, Iowa for two and one half years preceding his call to active service with the rank of first lieutenant in November, 1940. He was immediately ordered to the Station Hospital at Fort Benning where he remained until placed in command of the train upon its activation last November.

Captain Edward Shires of the 23rd Train is a graduate of Albany (N.Y.) Medical School and held a residency in the Highland Hospital of Rochester, New York. He left this post to join the Army in 1941. His first assignment was to Fort Bragg, N. C., from where he was sent to Fort Benning, Nov. 4, 1942.

First Lieutenant John B. Wilkes, who heads the 21st Train is a graduate of Vanderbilt University and held a residency in Grand Rapids which he left to join the armed forces.

AMONG THE PINES

The three hospital train units are situated among the pines which gives the name of Pine Grove to that area, and like most smaller military units there is a more personal and familiar atmosphere than is possible in a large barracks. Possibly for this reason individual accomplishments are brought more to the fore and various talents exhibited.

The orderly room of the 23rd Train, for example, contains various pictures in pastel which are the work of Sergeant Warner Hansel. The sergeant, during convalescence from an illness, some time back, experimented with finger painting in the medium of pastel and has developed considerable proficiency in this field.

Listeners to the March 5 broadcast of "Fort Benning on the Air" heard the performance of an excellent pianist, Corporal Sheldon Smith, who is a member of the 24th Hospital Train. Corporal Smith's entertainment was so successful, in fact that he has been asked to make return engagement on this same program in the near future.

RECRUITED PERSONNEL

The personnel of the three mobile outfits has been recruited to a great extent from those with previous hospital experience. Others, while lacking such, signified a desire to join the medical corps and thus have an aptitude for their present work.

Besides the male personnel each of the three trains has as an integral part six female nurses.

Advanced AST Men To Keep Their Grades

Soldiers In Basic Courses Assigned Private's Rating

All enlisted men finally selected for advanced courses in the Army Specialized Training program will be assigned to schools in their current grades, although those men selected for the basic courses will continue to be assigned in grade seven—or private, according to information received by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post.

This information supercedes previous directives which specified assignment of all men selected for the program in grade seven, whether assigned to the advanced or the basic courses.

Meanwhile, the War department has commenced sending out letters to qualified soldiers outlining the purposes, needs and benefits of the program, according to Lieuts. Robert Weiland, classification officer, and Salvador Llosa, station director of the ASTP. The letter, prepared by Colonel Herman Beukema, director of the ASTP in Washington, D. C., is being sent to all enlisted men with grades of 110 or higher on the Army general classification test.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY

"Success in these courses," the letter states, "will assure the trainee that he possesses the educational requirements of Officer Candidate School." It further points out that men selected for the courses, which are being given in various colleges throughout the country, will be given the opportunity to develop to the fullest whatever native skills they may have.

Revealing that two out of every three men in both combat and non-combat service in a modern army must be specialists of one kind or another, the letter declares that "a serious and constantly increasing shortage of certain types of highly developed commissioned specialists must now be met if the armies of the United States are to reach the desired peak of efficiency."

Fort Benning soldiers who have qualified for and passed ASTP examination are now attending courses at Purdue University, Georgia Tech, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Princeton University.

13th Company Second Regiment Has Luminaries

The 13th Company in the Second Student Training regiment boasts a collection of luminaries, any one of whom can reflect a share of fame on the organization.

One of its outstanding stars was a recent associate of Orson Welles, as writer, actor and director in his latest South American tour. Another is a former Hollywood actor and stunt man. Still another was a former reporter of Paul Gallico's sports department in the New York Daily News and one of the initiators of the nationally famous Golden Gloves and Silver Skates tournaments. He also was the Eastern Intercollegiate high jump champion from 1929 to 1931.

The ranks are further swelled by a former member of the Chicago Cattle Exchange (the midwestern counterpart of the New York Stock Exchange), and another is a veteran of the Spanish Civil War, who campaigned through its bloody years with honor and distinction as a member of the famous International Brigade.

LITERARY LIGHTS

The literary lights are no less brilliant, with one author of eight books, one special feature writer for some of our leading magazines, and a handful of veteran newshawks, representing some of the better papers.

Its record on the ranges are well in keeping with its personnel. On the rifle range it attained the enviable record of 20 Expert and 35 Sharpshooters out of a class of 160 students. There were only six per cent of the class who failed to qualify. OC Ernest L. Reed was individual high with 313 out of a possible 340.

In the light machine gun, the 13th Company had a platoon average of expert, with one of the lowest averages of failures on record: .018. OC Rozelle B. Brazley took individual high honors with 248. On the heavy machine gun range more than 98 per cent of the company qualified, with top honors being equally shared by OCs W. M. Fernel and Ernest S. Tripp.

Those of the 21st are commanded by Lieutenant Lucy J. Ramsdell, while Lieutenant Ruth Logan heads the 23rd and Lieutenant Mary Foley is chief of the 24th's contingent.

Now in their final stages of advanced training these railway hospitals will shortly be engaged in the actual work of easing the lot of those American soldiers who are injured on the fighting fronts.

I WISH YOU WOULD HAVE THAT TOOTH PULLED—YOU'RE MAKING ME NERVOUS!

Filipino Declares Army Is Fastest Route Home

Fastest way home to his wife and children lies in the U. S. Army, believes Alberto C. Elefano, 31-year-old second lieutenant of the Philippine Army now taking the rifle and heavy weapons course in the 14th Company, Third Student Training regiment.

Lieutenant Elefano arrived at this conclusion sometime even before terminating a position in the animal husbandry department at the University of Maryland and applied for active duty with the U. S. forces. He still is a member of the Philippine Army but he has filed application for transfer to this nation's army and hopes for eventual assignment to one of the all-Filipino units now training in this country. His present status would prevent his being sent back to the Philippines as a member of the islands' army.

He last heard from relatives at home in November and he is especially anxious to see for the first time the younger of his two children, born while the lieutenant was on his way to this country. His other child is three. Mrs. Elefano remained in the Philippines because her husband was originally slated to remain in this country for only a year.

SENT BY GOV'T

His government sent him here more in September of 1941 to study animal genetics at the University of Illinois. Upon completion of the course, he toured the country and took a teaching position at the University of Maryland.

Lieutenant Elefano won his commission through ROTC training at the University of the Philippines in Manila, the school from which he was graduated. He taught in an islands', vocational high school for five years.

Five feet, three inches in height, Lieutenant Elefano is the shortest officer in the company but he keeps with the bigger men on the obstacle courses and in weapons firing and all the other "studies."

At present he is drawing 10 per cent foreign duty pay because technically he is on foreign duty. Upon transfer to the U. S. Army, however, this pay will stop until he heads for home, when he again would be on "foreign duty."

Uppermost in the lieutenant's mind as he goes about his training are the statements made by General Douglas MacArthur upon his departure from the Philippines, "we shall return" and "see you in Manila," uttered by the hero of Bataan, Capt. Jesus Villa-

WE WHO WILL NOT STAY

Here's to those who went before,
Those who have gone today,
And, here's to those, who are as I,
We, who will not stay.

We all have loved ones dear to us,
The ones wor whom we're here,
We go for life and liberty, that
They may live sans fear.

This is the end of tyranny,
This is the last crusade.
We are the Knights of Mercy,
And we are not afraid.

To those we leave behind us,
Look forward to that day.
Carry on in life for us,
We, who will not stay.

Ex-Sound Technician Handled GWTW Film

Laird Met Many Hollywood Beauties During Movie Career

Envy of all his fellow officer candidates in the 15th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment is Edward R. Laird, who can talk glibly of his friendships with many of Hollywood's beautiful actresses.

Before entering the Army two years ago, Candidate Laird spent four years as a sound technician with the Technicolor Motion Picture Laboratory and had a hand in the filming of color pictures of the major studios. He assisted in the coordination of the sound track with the color negative, collaborating with the sound men of the producing companies.

Laird's biggest assignment was on "Gone With the Wind," a job that lasted almost two years. He handled 94,000,000 worth of film, covering every foot of the four-hour picture to make certain that Vivien Leigh's voice did not come from the screen in bass tones and that Clark Gable would sound like he-man.

The candidate will be graduated from officers' school May 29, should he successfully complete the course. Before coming to Fort Benning, he was a staff sergeant in the 164th Infantry.

Enemy Sea Action Causes Huge Loss Of Overseas Mail

Within recent weeks, more than two thousand sacks of mail from United States, destined for troops overseas have been lost through enemy action, according to a report by the Army Postal Service.

An announcement by the War Department said that the U. S. mailing public should be guided according in the non-receipt of these parcels by men overseas. Represented in these mails were a great number of individual pieces, originating from all over the country and for the most part posted during February.

Mails thus lost, it was revealed were destined for points in the United Kingdom, Ireland, North Africa, Egypt, and India. A considerable portion was first class mail, and was being carried by United Nations ships.

Col. Massey Gets New Assistants

Two new officers have been added to the staff of Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply, according to an announcement made at the post yesterday.

Second Lieut. Clifton P. Keys has reported for duty from Camp Wheeler, Ga., and has been assigned as assistant to the officer in charge of Quartermaster Repair Shops, who is 1st. Lieut. Ross W. Crossley.

The other addition to Colonel Massey's staff is 2nd Lieut. Paul A. Finske, who reported from headquarters of the Fourth Service Command in Atlanta. Lieut. Finske has been assigned as an assistant to Capt. Marcus E. Cooper, officer in charge of the subsistence section of the quartermaster branch at Fort Benning.

An Army Wife Shops in Columbus

Importance has a new meaning today. Things important today are guns, ships, planes, man-hours in war plants. Winning the war is the most essential thing of all. Important things today too, are your Nurse's Aide cap, your ration books, home managing under new conditions, and conserving faithfully. Above all things the war effort comes first for you, but after that in importance is just plain living. Keeping your best foot forward can be such a simple matter if you plan your time accordingly. Whether you are living in a one-room paradise or a southern mansion, keep organized and don't let all your duties add up so you're always in a dither. Systematizing your war work, shopping and "playtime" is the key to a smooth-running household and will pay you handsome dividends.—P. B. T.

Now that the hot sun has been beating down, we once again have that seasonal urge to wear cool and comfortable clothes. KIRALFY'S has a multitudinous assortment of washable play suits in many suitable summer shades. You may choose several in crisp pique, chambray, seersucker or spun rayon. One lovely model is smooth sharkskin combined with washable taffeta. Comfortable shorts are attached to the shirt top so you'll have no worries about the two becoming separated. With the simple addition of a matching skirt, you'll be suitably dressed to do your shopping or daytime visiting and none will know you're actually wearing shorts underneath your well-fitting skirt. Frilly little pinafores formerly were exclusively children's apparel, but presently they are the latest rage for youngsters and oldsters alike. And no wonder! They're so comfortable and convenient to slip on either to protect your Sunday-best dress or make you feel really perky as you go about your daily duties. These pinafores are displayed in chambray, gingham and seersucker. One of Kiralfy's black, green or royal blue checked taffeta eyecatchers really will give you a becoming look of sophisticated innocence.

One of the most treasured mementos one has are pictures of persons dear to him. Similarly, there could be no more appropriate gift for your mother this coming Mother's Day on May 9 than a fine photograph of you. Already scores of thoughtful sons and daughters have benefitted by the excellent craftsmanship of the AIME DUPONT STUDIO in Columbus. This renowned studio boasts—and well they might—of the skilled photographic technicians whose work is exacting to the most minute detail. If you choose to have a photograph taken, and this is a most timely occasion to do so, by all means visit Dupont's. I warn you, though, it will not be a matter of a five minute undertaking to have your photograph produced at this studio. In order to attain the best results, the photographers will prove their dexterity as they test you for the best pose, make an appropriate number of proofs, and then prepare the finished photograph. On Mother's Day, though, you may rest assured that your parents will have received a gift which will be cherished for years to come.

Spring brings a rush of weddings. The KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. HAT SHOP is really headquarters in Columbus for bridal veils and millinery for bridesmaids. Whether your wedding is to be informal or formal, you'll revel in the unsurpassed selection displayed here. Fingertip or full length veils of Brussels Illusion with tiara effects, juliet caps or sweetheart bonnets are just a few of the becoming bridal selections. Lovely flower-trimmed chapeaux or infinitesimal calots in pastel shades will enhance the charm of your attendants. If you and your bridesmaids have a fetish for individual millinery you'll take advantage of this shop's designing department and have them work up, through sketches and discussions, an exquisitely made bridal veil for you and dainty and original bonnets for your bridesmaids. If, on the other hand, you're planning to be married wearing a street-length outfit, you'll still find this special department within a department just the place to turn you out looking as lovely and bridelike as you've long dreamed you'd look on your wedding day.

Whether you're a brand new bride, a young married, or a desirable damsel, you'll cherish the allurement of White Orchid Perfume by Elizabeth Arden. At the perfume counter of J. A. KIRVEN CO. are other inviting scents to suit your every mood. Ciro's Danger and Vigny's Beau Catcher are exciting perfumes for the frankly flirtatious. The house of Patou, the famous French designer, has packaged a lovely gift set of three light and rather sweet odeurs, namely Colony, Amour Amour, and Moment Supreme. The containers are of hob-nail crystal and surely would make an exquisite gift for you to give friends this Easter or you might even surprise yourself with a set. Sirocco, the most recent offering of Lucien Lelong, is about the most magnetic and irrestible perfume I've yet discovered. Just a drop or two will help you catch HIS heart (or keep it, now that you have it). For traveling you'll value a completely fitted make-up bag which has adequate room to carry several pieces of clothing. Whether you'd like romantic perfumes, dusting powders, colognes, make-up kits, lipsticks, rouge, or other cosmetics you'll find the perfume counter in Kirven's just the place to spend some "sweet and scented" shopping hours.

Infinitely importane things today are clothes which combine excellent quality and infallible fit with loveliness of line. Mr. Lilienthal of KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC., has kept this constantly in mind while purchasing his latest line of fashionable creations. His newest collection looks as fresh as spring and as pretty as its flowers. Dream-like, cool prints dramatized with sprigs of posies, poodle dogs, or pixies would most certainly be of vast help in maintaining beauty and poise in today's world of action. This shop also has light weight crepes in light colors which would make you look smooth as cream this coming Easter and during the forthcoming summer. If you perhaps are fond of jacket dresses, relaxed, but sans zoot, you'll find just what you've been hoping to discover. Good quality jersey has the definite advantage of being wrinkle-proof. A glorious array of printed or plain colored ensembles in luscious shades in ever so many unusual styles will give you a grand chance to select what you'll be wearing to be the hit of the parade this coming Easter.

— V —

While we're all selecting new ensembles fo Easter, let us not forget the youngsters—especially since each probably still has his shoe ration coupon number 17 right handy. They love new shoes as much as peppermint sticks. So, in selecting shoes for the younger members of your family, be sure to visit MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY where quality shoes for kiddies are as much in demand as fashionable pumps for ladies or military oxfords for our men-folks. A most complete stock of Easter shoes for kiddies is on display, starring Edwards and Stride Rights brands. For the smaller children, the shoe shop has a fine assortment of Scientific in white elk. Many mothers agree that Scientific is the best line of shoes made for the baby who is out to buy his first pair. The Edwards and Stride Rights are the finest available in one strap pumps and oxfords. Remember, for correct fitting shoes, whose size is determined by experienced salesmen and checked by X-ray, bring your youngster to Miller-Taylor's for his Easter present.

SEARS ROEBUCK AND CO. has long been the haven of Mothers who are doing their best to keep up with their growing youngsters' clothing needs. Practical wash dresses for your daughter's delight are in this store. You'll like the deep hems which will be so simple to "let down" should she suddenly decide to sprout up a few inches. Serviceable cotton ankle socks are featured in all summer shades to match these dresses. Tiny boys feel comfy and look fresh and clean in washable cotton suits. Green, red, tan, blue or striped shorts button conveniently to matching shirts. Perhaps your son is just at the betwixt and between age. He has an idea he'd be king of the neighborhood if he just had a pair of long trousers. You, on the other hand, know he has still a few more years to go until that happy day. Sears Roebuck and Co. understands all these family problems and has a large supply of wash trousers which will please both you and your boy. They have been made longer than the short shorts tiny tots wear and are available in "men's" colors of grey, brown and blue. Dresses, hats, trousers, socks and underthings, even pyjamas and nightgowns are special values of this store which will make your pre-Easter shopping for the children a simple matter indeed.

— V —

Your Easter greeting can be just a so-so card which will be forgotten shortly after it is received or it can be such a work of art that it will be cherished with other prized moments in a memory book. Pristine white cards with appropriate decorations will express the true meaning of Easter in the refined, subdued way you like. One especially lovely card I noticed at WHITE'S BOOK STORE shows a choir boy, traditionally clad in his white surplice. A few nicely etched Easter lilies at his feet are the only other decoration. The excellent artwork on this tastefully created card makes it especially appropriate for one who has an appreciation of fine artwork. Other cards colored, but not blatantly so, are results of painstaking care and thought, both in the decoration and verse. The same excellent work is noticeable in many Mother's Day cards displayed in White's collection. Life-like pansies, violets and other spring flowers in a combination water-color and etching design are the highlights of many of the cards. Whatever type cards you wish will be waiting for you in this immense display. All you have to do it to meander around to your heart's content and pick them out.

— V —

Weddings, Easter, Mother's Day and the usual stream of birthdays seem to keep one busy shopping for unusual and attractive gifts. You'll enjoy browsing among the numerous tables in MAX ROSENBERG CO. at 1239 Broadway which are laden with gifts of every sort. You'll discover many delightful decanters, highball glasses, crystal of the finest type, demitasse cups of intriguing design, crystal ash trays. Plates decorated with Currier and Ives prints would make appropriate and thoughtful presents. Giving perhaps a sewing box, shaving kit, or a leather make-up box will cause, I'm sure, endless "thank you's" and blessings to shower down upon you. If you're not sure just what you're seeking, then on seeing the shining hammered copperware, jewelry, and knick-knacks you'll have no trouble making up your mind. Especially colorful and practical china sets of good design are those created by the well-known Russell Wright. These sea foam, dusty pink, maroon or yellow sets of 20 pieces each are real bargains and are just what you've wanted to make your temporary housekeeping a bit more like home.

— V —

That old adage about "All work and no play . . ." is probably more important today than it has been in the past. During the current stress and strain of long, arduous hours, there is a definite need for all of us to take advantage of some hours for recreation. Physical fitness is an important aspect of the war effort. Hours of fun and recreation may be enjoyed playing golf, trying one's hand at archery, fisning or possibly baseball. The FIRESTONE STORE at 1246—at avenue in Columbus has a large stock of equipment to outfit the amateur or ardent sportsman in any of these avocations. Championship Walter Hagen golf clubs for the men-folks and the especially fine Miss Victory clubs for Army wives are on display at this store. A small investment in a set of golf clubs and bag here will guarantee many long hours of fun and enjoyment for all. This store has a galaxy of supplies for archery, an ever-popular sport. If you're interested in fishing, do not fail to view of the display of equipment available, as there are several ponds and lakes in this vicinity. Although we consider a baseball game for the young and hardy, there's nothing more exciting than a nip-and-tuck game on a nearby lot among families. This wide assortment of sporting goods will be a boon to recreation-minded Army folks.

Lately I've been listening to many a mournful tale about the scarcity of toasters and various other household wares. MONTGOMERY WARD has toasters and sandwich grills for those of you who have been missing your toast 'n jam with that rationed cup of coffee these past mornings. Furthermore, your one cup of coffee will taste just the way you like it if you let it drip properly using a new glass Silex. In this basement section of the store are Pyrex ovenware sets suitable for baking, cooking, mixing or storing food in your refrigerator. Using Pyrex utensils whenever possible is a much cleaner and more satisfactory way of preparing food than using crockery and enamelware. Summer finds us all eating crisp salads and fresh fruits for dessert. Attractive glass salad services, complete with glass spoons and forks, and matching dishes for desserts, will brighten up your meals throughout the long hot season ahead. Many other household necessities, including flashlights, and kitchen ware such as strainers, large ladies, and egg beaters are what you'll need whether your housekeeping is temporary or permanent.

— V —

All lovers of music, with personal pleasures ranging from jive to opera, find their musical paradise in HUMES' MUSIC STORE. Vast selections of recordings, including those of popular dance orchestras and symphonic arrangements are readily available at this store. Popular with many music lovers are the record albums featuring Victor, Blue Bird and Decca which bring to the home a variety of artists. Important hand-maids in homes which are blessed with phonographs are record cabinets and record folders. In addition to the unexcelled collection of records and phonograph equipment, Humes has several bargains in used pianos, both uprights and grands, which have been factory reconditioned. These include Steinways, Knabes, and Chickerings. Also on display is a five octive marimba, slightly used, which has been factory reconditioned: a treasured price for a music lover! Also a fine quality used bass violin is included in the fine assortment of instruments. Music devotees: stop in at 1219 Broadway!

With the debut of spring and the famous warm Southern nights, it becomes ever more important to find a comfortable mattress on which to sleep. There's nothing like spending hot nights, tossing and turning on a hard, lumpy mattress! Ask us: we've done it! There's no need for anyone else to do it though since H. ROTHSCHILD, INC. has "the answer to your prayers." A large assortment of "clouds of comfort", which definitely are the quality mattresses of which you've been dreaming, is on display at this store. Covered with patterned heavy damask or woven tickings in blue, green or grey, the mattresses will please the most discriminating. This merchandise has been made to last for years and not solely "for the duration". Fine workmanship is evident in these mattresses which are so manufactured that they cannot become lumpy or shift. After only one night of enjoying the luxury of a new mattress, you will eagerly look forward to a "thousand and one" nights of comfort.

After breezing through these several popular Columbus stores, there's really no more pleasant rendezvous in which to stop, chat, and have a bite to eat than at the modern CITY PHARMACY, 14 - 13th street, across from the Waverly Hotel. Here, in this spic-and-span store, a delightful soda fountain offers delectable delicacies for luncheon or a frosty drink to "cool off". A featured attraction is the Shopper's Tea, which draws many of us afternoons as we shop in Columbus. Notable in this shop is the prompt, courteous service afforded one and all. In this day of hustle and bustle, when crowds may tax the capacity of any establishment, it's pleasing to note that this pharmacy aims to cater properly. Here, too, is a complete drug department to care for your most exacting prescriptions. The imposing array of quality cosmetics and make-up necessities will please all of you. Similarly, the pharmacy frequently displays special notions, ranging from delicious jellies to cute ash trays. The variety of offerings here makes the pharmacy a "must" before you finish your shopping tour.

Noted Writer Visits Benning

Adela St. Johns Here To Gather Material

Adela Rogers St. Johns, famous newspaper writer, radio commentator, novelist and author of so many short stories that even she has stopped counting, is making the rounds of Fort Benning this week exhausting her guides with her boundless energy.

To any woman who might ask how she could do as much work in her life and still successfully rear five children, the answer is that Mrs. St. Johns bubbles over with vigor and has an insatiable zest for full living.

Here to gather material for a book-length story for The Ladies Home Journal, Adela, as she prefers to be called, has demonstrated her limitless interest in anything that happens. Monday night she went to a Fort Benning broadcast and then later to some boxing matches at the post gymnasium.

BOUND OF VISITS

Tuesday she went to the Commissary, the Exchange grocery, the Thrift Shop and at noon had lunch at the WAAC's mess. The afternoon she spent at the hospital, following which seh was interviewed over a Benning radio program. From the studio she dashed over to the Harmony Church area service club and lined up at the cafeteria counter for dinner, as a guest of Miss Nellie Mitchell, hostess, and then spent the evening watching officer candidates dance at a special party given for them.

Wednesday was just as full but lunch today was at the Officers Club with the wives of four generals, Mrs. Paul Newgarden, Mrs. Leven C. Allen, Mrs. George Howell and Mrs. Walter S. Fulton. At the luncheon also were Mrs. R. J. Hammargren and Mrs. C. C. Finnegan.

Mrs. St. Johns will move into Columbus Thursday so that she can meet army wives and civilians living in a community such as this adjoining a large army post. Friday night the Business and Professional Woman's club will have an informal reception for her at the Ralston hotel at 6 p.m. (EWT), with app presidents of women's civic organizations as guests.

TALKS TO ALL

She has talked with everyone she has met, generals and privates alike. In her own conversation she skips from "FDR," to the King of England, Gary Cooper and Joe Louis, all in the same paragraph. All persons, regardless of station, are grist in her mill and of interest to her, because people are her stock in trade.

She carried with her a letter from Mrs. Patton, wife of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., who is writing history in North Africa, to Mrs. Newgarden, wife of the commanding general of the 10th Armored division.

"Mrs. Patton," says Adela, "definitely thinks of Fort Benning as her home and took a long time telling me what I must be sure to do while I am here."

Mrs. St. Johns is not removed far from the war. One son who was too tall to enter the American air corps, went to Canada and joined the Royal Canadian air force. He is now overseas. Another son is with a combat intelligence unit and a daughter is working in an airplane factory. Her youngest son is in a New York military academy.

POOR 4-FER

"The other boy, poor kid," she said, "is 4-F. He feels terrible and I'm so sorry for him."

Adela Rogers St. Johns got her start writing when she was 17 years old.

"My father was a prominent criminal lawyer," she said, "and I think the San Francisco Examiner paid me my $7 a week to get information out of my father for them."

She has worked on papers in Los Angeles, Chicago and New York and still does special assignment work for International News Service. Her biggest news assignment she still thinks was the Hauptman trial.

"Right after the trial," she related, "I went to England and was to have dinner with the new King Edward VIII. I was scared to death and worried about what we were going to talk about, but as soon as he sat down he began asking about the trial. My worries were over."

STORIES IN SLICKS

Her short stories have always been in the "slicks"—Cosmopolitan, Ladies Home Journal, Saturday Evening Post and American, among others. She's been writing stories for 20 years.

"I had to," she said, "to bring up the kids."

But Adela Rogers St. Johns knows everybody. She thinks the president is "swell," that Jack Johnson was the greatest fighter that ever lived, and that Joan Crawford is the best all-time motion picture actress. Just mention anything or anybody. She's interested.

"I can't understand why anybody could ever get bored," said Adela. "That why married people get divorces. They get bored."

One thing is certain. Adela Rogers St. Johns is not bored here in Fort Benning and Columbus. She hates to leave Saturday but she wants to visit a son at Camp Jackson.

Arabs Mooch Cigarettes From Yanks Under Fire

War, despite the thunder, the dust, the wanging of bullets, often times develops its humerous bent as tales are unfolded by those who like to sprawl across the other fellows bunk and recount biographies. So it was that Lt. Jeul Wild, a student in the First Student Training Regiment, came to relate the story about cigarettes, Arabs and bullets.

As is well known, Arabs have an unquenciable longing for American tailored cigarettes. This longing occasionally becomes so strong in the individual that he becomes impervious to surrounding dangers and systematically sets about the business of mooching a fag.

On one particular African terrain problem, involving live ammo and live enemy, Lt. Wild's platoon was seeking to make uninhabitable, by accurate rifle fire, a certain portion of brick wall located about 250 yards to their front. By judicious use of the scanty cover available, and by much cautious creeping and crawling, the Yank platoon was making progress.

Suddenly a wandering group of benightgowned Arabs discovered the American lads and set about the process of mooching. They would strole up to a man hidden behind a blade or two of grass and, squatting down beside him, squeek out their inevitable line of gibberish with the 'Americano Zig-rat pluss' terminus.

Upon being told by the individual to "get the H— out of here, there's a war on", they would loudly start praying to Allah that all Americans be protected from the bullets of their enemies. Between the zizz of the bullets and the chant of the sons of Allah it wasn't long before the Americans were in a give-away-cigarette frame of mind.

Valdes—

ed for Corregidor, arriving there about 6:30 that night.

"Upon our arrival there Major General Moore, the commanding general of Corregidor and adjoining forts, told us that he was happy that we did not arrive sooner, because the Japs had bombed the water surrounding Corregidor and had left a cargo ship in flames.

SOLID ROCK TUNNEL

"In order to safeguard the life of President Quezon and members of his family we were accommodated in one of the wings of the Molanta Tunnel—a tunnel built in 1934 by General Kilbourne, through solid rock, and the center of the tunnel is 150 feet below the surface of the hill. There was complete safety from aerial attacks, but life in the tunnel was far from being healthy. As a consequence in the middle of January, President Quezon was taken seriously ill.

"The President, in conference with General MacArthur and members of his war cabinet, agreed that the President would be able to do more for the people of the islands if he were to leave Corregidor for the southern islands. At 9 p. m. on February 20, 1942, the President, Mrs. Quezon, their five children, three members of his cabinet, his aide and his chaplain, under cover of darkness boarded the United States submarine "Swordfish". At night we sailed on the surface, but just before daybreak the submarine submergered and we remained under water for twelve hours.

"In my opinion that was one of the hardest parts of the trip from Corregidor to Australia. The intense humidity and heat inside the submarine while we were submerged was, at times, unbearable. At two o'clock in the morning of February 22nd we arrived at the town of San Jose, Antique, on the coast of Panay. As we approached the coast the sailor on duty at the watchtower yelled, "Sea craft ahead!" Immediately the officers and crew of the submarine got into battle positions and remained there until they had the assurance that the boat seen through the darkness was a friendly one. We transferred to this launch, bidding farewell to the officers and men who had treated us so well during the trip.

JAPS FIND OUT

"On the island of Panay the President commandeered a small, but comfortable, ship with which to sail from one island to another in the Visayan group. The Japs had apparently learned of our movements and sent a cruiser and two destroyers to patrol the water around Panay and the island of Negros. They sighted our ship, shelled the port where it was, and then sent a landing party which towed the ship away. Finding ourselves without means of escape, the only alternative was to go up into the mountains and put up our resistance there in case the Japanese sent a landing force.

"However, General MacArthur, realizing our predicament, instructed General Wainwright to send the P-T boats that were at that time on the Island of Menlao to Negros to take us to Menlao. Thus, on March 23, under cover of darkness, the President, his family, members of his war cabinet and his aide boarded Lieutenant Barkeley's P-T boat. The trip was not devoid of danger. Due to the roughness of the sea the pin that sets the torpedoes in action got loose and set both torpedos in action. It was only through the coolness of Lieutenant Barkeley, his officers and some of his men that both torpedoes were disposed of before they had a chance to explode. Fe flew to Australia and from Australia we came to the United States on the "President Coolidge."

BE PREPARED

"The story of our departure from Corregidor and my message to you is to train hard, take advantage of the magnificent instruction given here at the Infantry School and be prepared for the reconquest of the Philippines. Remember the American and Filipino boys who gave their lives in the Philippines in the defense of the American flag and the principles of government it respects.

"These men endured the unspeakable suffering of Bataan and Corregidor, they were fighting for a cause, they had faith in the ultimate victory of the United Nations. Towards the middle of June the food supplies stated to become low. At first the rations were reduced to two meals a day; later to one meal a day. Medical supplies became exhausted and ammunition ran low. Their endurance was becoming weak, but they kept on fighting; they never lost hope or faith in the country whose flag they proudly kept flying from Corregidor until the very end—when hunger and sickness forced them to surrender.

"I hope that the knowledge of this suffering of those boys who kept on fighting when everything was against them will inspire every American citizen to a greater determination to reconquer the Philippines and to crush the enemy once and for all. Let this be our pledge: "We are going back to Bataan!"

Lt. Clifford Clinton, who gained nationwide recognition for his organization of the 24th General Hospital Mess, was placed in charge of organizing the kitchen and the cafeteria lines for the opening. As operator of the "Golden Rule" restaurants in Los Angeles he had built a national reputation in the restaurant world.

EXPERIENCED MEN

Working under him are two other experienced cafeteria men—Pvt. Jack Harper, as cafeteria manager and Pvt. L. E. Tradewell, in charge of the soda shop and the service counter.

Before entering the Army, Pvt. Parker had been cafeteria manager for Lt. Clinton's restaurants in Los Angeles. Pvt. Tradewell, a native of Boston, managed the Colonial Kitchens there. Evelyn Fuller is counter floor lady while Miss Mae Yarborough is dining room hostess.

The new cafeteria will have a capacity of between 6,000 to 8,000 per day, Lt. Clinton said.

Monday night both broadcasts emanating from the reservation, "Fort Benning on the Air," local newscast and talent feature, and "Listen, It's Fort Benning," the weekly twenty-five minute show, were devoted to stressing war bond activities at the post. Featured speaker of the twenty-five minute show was Major Fink, who is charged with coordination of all local bond activities. He spoke briefly on Fort Benning's part in the nation-wide program, and the current war loan drive.

As yet only incomplete reports are available in the Second War Loan Drive. R. P. Richardson, Fort Benning postmaster, said that local sales had risen sharply Monday, and that approximately eighty bonds were purchased during the day as compared to the usual average of fifty. In actual cash value these totaled $2,681. No doubt numerous other purchases wer made in Columbus by persons from Fort Benning, it was pointed out.

It achieved such a fine record during the Army maneuvers in 1941 that it was selected as a guard regiment to protect Washington, D. C. It was stationed there for 14 months before being transferred this week to Fort Benning.

By federal authority, it has battle streamers for the War of Independence, the War of 1812, and the World War. By authority of the Commonwealth of Virginia, it has battle streamers for the French and Indian Wars and the War Between the States.

The regiment is quartered in the old 151st Regiment's area in Harmony Church.

SINGING SIXTH

"The Singing Sixth" is the new sobriquet of the Sixth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, where the present class, after six weeks of study and drill, has manifested a mass proclivity for vocalizing. Slowly at the first, the singing has gathered volume and momentum to the point where harmonies burst forth on the march, during breaks and at nights in the barracks. Even the G. T. results have failed to stem the serenading, suffering instructors maintain.

KEESLER FIELD, Miss. — Necessity (to be present at reveille) is the mother of the newest invention by Sgt. Edward L. Schwartz. Every night he winds his clock, sets the alarm for the proper time, and goes to sleep. Next morning the alarm goes off, the string winds up around the button pulling the light switch up and presto! the light goes on! What happens afterward is no part of this story!

OBJECTIVE: To kill the Black Market in order to insure the proper distribution of meat and butter at no more than ceiling prices and thereby help the rationing plan to work smoothly: to establish and maintain the largest ration shares possible: to protect the nation's health against unsanitary meat.

In America today, there are traitorous individuals who place profits above patriotism—even at the cost of war production and American lives.

These individuals are Black Market operators.
Since civilian demand and war time needs have exceeded the supply—and civilian earnings have increased—Black Markets have flourished.

Black market prices have sky rocketed. Distribution has become uneven. Our fighting forces have been shorted of vitally needed supplies. Their rubber requirements have been sharply curtailed. Our army and our fighting allies are being cheated out of "fighting equipment" by some on the "Home Front".

Our war workers, too, are being chiseled out of their fair shares. Honest producers and dealers are losing their trade to racketeers.

The Black Market in meat has become alarmingly serious. Its consequences are lengthening the war and losing lives. For meat is a fighting food. It is a part of a fighting man's diet which gives him the energy to smash the enemy. When food supplies fail, offensives turn into retreats. Victories change to defeats.

These "fighting foods" are important on the home front, too. Meat "sticks to your ribs" for a full day—or night—of hard labor. It gives you that "extra something" to work harder, faster, longer. A poorly fed worker may mean one less tank . . . which can mean the lives of American boys on the battle fronts.

Another serious consequence of Black Market meat is the health aspect. It can be, and often is, meat slaughtered under unsanitary conditions. Already, illness has been traced to Black Market meat in some sections of the country.

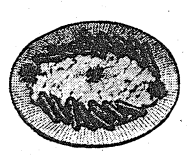
Rationing and Price Ceilings Help Kill Black Markets.
The point rationing of meat offers an additional measure to kill the Black Market in this food. Housewives must be urged to buy meat only by means of their red ration stamps. If this alone is accomplished the Black Market will be checked at once!

By never paying more than the ceiling price for meat, housewives can assist in nailing another corner down on the Black Market coffin.

Because we are at war, victory requires price control of foods—they are battle ammunition. With the government's huge purchases and an increased civilian demand, an abnormal price rise would be inevitable unless checked. That is the reason for ceiling prices—and price control. An outline of the price regulations for the commodities rationed in this program is given below.

PORK—Effective April 1st, pork retail ceiling prices were made identical at all independent retail stores doing less than $250,000 per year and same at all chains or independents doing more than $250,000 in each of 11 zones. Retailers must display the ceiling price poster furnished by the government and may sell only the official cuts as designated.

Retail prices for pork sausage, canned pork and all variety meat, until changed, are subject to the general Maximum Price Regulation—the highest prices charged in March, 1942.
BEEF, VEAL—The retail prices of beef and veal, now subject to the general Maximum Price Regulation, are to be given flat retail prices by zones within a few weeks.



LAMB AND MUTTON—The retail ceiling prices of Lamb and Mutton are subject to Regulation 239 which establishes ceilings at the highest prices sold by each retailer (1) For Lamb during the period July 27 to July 31, 1942. (2) For Mutton, during the period September 28 to October 2, 1942.

1. LET'S STAMP OUT BLACKMARKETS! Conscientious use of the Red Stamps is the surest way to lick the Black Market.
2. A BLACKMARKET IS A BLACKOUT OF PATRIOTISM! A dealer who is willing to sell you any rationed foods without stamps is a racketeer and people who buy from him are his partners in crime. They take more than their fair share. They cheat our fighters and workers of their fair share. They are enemies of our country.
3. WE WANT TO MAKE THE MOST OF OUR MEAT—NOT ON IT! We want to get the greatest good for the most people from our available meat supply. The greatest health for our civilians; the greatest strength for our fighters. No decent citizen would profiteer on the lives of men who are fighting for him!
4. We DON'T WANT THIS KIND OF MEAT STRETCHER. This child is dead. Because he was hungry. Hungry enough to eat meat placed before him on the dinner table. He was too young to know about the danger of tainted meat, unsanitary blackmarkets, etc.
5. ONE WAY TO "CARRY" GERMS If you are buying any but good meat, from honest dealers, and in return for ration stamps, you may be packing unclean meat into your children's lunchboxes.
6. YOU MIGHT GET YOUR MONEY BACK . . . But Not Your Health
   Is one steak worth jeopardizing your health? Before you give in to the desire to pick up "just a little steak" or something which "might" have been blackmarket goods—think of the possible consequences.
7. THE ARMY, NAVY, AND MARINES COMBINED CAN'T LICK BLACKMARKETS . . . But We Can
8. THE BLACKMARKET IS OUR BEHIND - THE - LINES ENEMY . . . Fight It With Red Stamps!
9. SISTERS UNDER THE SKIN These steaks look the same. But are they? Do you know that the meat in them is sanitary, and rich in food value? You can be sure of this if you buy from reputable dealers only. Meat procured otherwise may look just the same. But it will be too late when you discover otherwise.
10. BE SURE THE MEAT YOU BUY HAS BEEN GOVERNMENT INSPECTED!

SHARE THE MEAT

Meat for fighters first . . . Meat for civilians next

Col. Tibbets Visits Post

Piloted Movie Stars To Tunisian Front

After having seen action in England and Africa, and piloting the plane which took Martha Raye and Kay Francis to the Tunisian battlefront, Lt. Col. Paul W. Tibbets, formerly stationed at Lawson Field with the 97th Observation Squadron, has returned for a brief visit.

While in England this 28 year old colonel participated in nine raids over the continent, including both Germany and France. Following this he went to Africa, where he took part in seventeen more engagements. In the latter sector he served as special staff consultant of 8-17 heavy bombardment planes to Major General "Jimmie" Doolittle.

WON MEDALS

Colonel Tibbets did not speak of the actions which won for him the Air Medal with three clusters, Distinguished Flying Cross with one cluster, and the Purple Heart. However, he stated modestly that his group flew Flying Fortresses at latitudes of more than 20,000 feet over enemy targets in the Tunisian sector with exceptionally satisfactory results.

He was ordered home in February but before returning was chosen to fly the two screen stars, Martha Raye and Kay Francis, to the African battlefront, where they performed for Allied soldiers.

At present Col. Tibbets is stationed at Orlando, Fla., testing new Army heavy bombardment planes.

He is married to the former Miss Lucy Wingate of Columbus, Ga., and has one child, a two year old son, Paul W. Tibbets, 3rd.

Downtown Billeting Office Abolished

The Fort Benning billeting office located in downtown Columbus has been abolished, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post, announced.

All business of the billeting officer will be transacted at the office of Lt. John A. White at main post headquarters.

Civilians of Columbus and all military and civilian personnel stationed at Fort Benning may contact Lieutenant White by calling Fort Benning, 3505 or 3506.

From Columbus it is first necessary to dial 6631 before asking for Fort Benning operator for the post billeting office number.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (CNS)—Safecrackers invaded the office of an insurance company here and dropped the safe out of an eight-story window, thus cracking it open. They hauled it away to fleece it at their leisure.

'Looping the Loop' Plays At Post on April 20-24

Glittering, glamorous, riotous "Looping the Loop", a USO-Camp Shows, production, is coming to Fort Benning Tuesday, April 20, for a five-day stand, Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer, announced this week.

The schedule of performances includes shows at 6:45 and 8:45 p. m., Tuesday and Wednesday, April 20 and 21, in the Main Theater, the second show on Wednesday being for colored troops only; 7:30 and 9:30 p. m., Thursday, April 22, in Theater No. 7; 7 and 9 p. m., Friday, April 23, in Theater No. 11; and at 7 and 9 p. m., Saturday, April 24, in Theater No. 4.

The show is a musical comedy featuring a dance routine by a line of high-stepping lovelies; a comedy act by the well-known Carroll and Howe team, Miss Carroll wowing the audience with a series of clever impersonations.

BALLET TAP-DANCER

Beauteous blond Alice Kavan is slated to repeat her masterful ballet-tap routines which have delighted audiences in topflight theaters and clubs all over the country.

A four-man team (two of each sex) of world famous roller-skaters. The sensational Macks, will do its whirls, twists, leaps, dances, and turns in an act of seeming impossibilities, and Carols and his Caballeros, popular harmonica and comedy act, fresh from Beverly Hills Country Club, are to combine expert playing with hilarious fooling.

The vocalizing will be handled by Judy Starr who was featured vocalist with Rudy Vallee and Hal Kemp. For two years she had her own program "California Melodies" with the orchestras of Andre Kostelanetz, Raymond Page, and David Broekman as accompanists.

Another "believe or not" team is the Lane Brothers, comedy acrobats, with their simply terrific rope-skipping antics. One of the boys skips the hemp while the other brother is poised with one foot on his thigh and the other foot around his neck. They do it again with one boy flat on his back and the other perched on his upright feet.

The show will be free to all military personnel on the post.

Blackout Fails to Faze Unit's Spring Cleaning

If the flashes which lit the sky the other night while the Third Student Training Regiment's lights were out had been bombs instead of lightning, the experience would have been no more memorable for the members of that regiment's Sixteenth Company.

Stripped for action, they were industriously proving to themselves and, incidentally, to their company commander, that they had not forgotten the gentle art of floor-scrubbing learned in preschool days. Beds were piled on beds, lockers stacked on lockers, mops and pails were all over the place, and once in a while a scrubbrush would appear from the tangle of wet and soapy arms and legs. The whole scene was like a Spring house-cleaner's worst nightmare.

And then the lights went out.

Recalling the order as to what to do in sucs a situation, the company proceeded to fall out into the street quickly and quietly. Quickly, as you would run Jungle Jim and seventeen obstacle courses carrying a baby-grand piano. Quietly, as you would brush against an unsteady stack of rifles under the stare of the battalion commander. True, there was an occasional subdued utterance which might, without exaggeration, be called an exclamation.

Breathless and a little pale—a G. I. pail, that is, stuck here and there on the lower end of a foot, and with a few special epaulettes of mop-string braid. They were alert, ready for action, and prepared to overcome any enemy by the use of suddy water and mop handles.

Some night! But the next day, even the captain said the floors were clean.

Inquiry showed that it contained varied gear and fragments from a damaged German Messerschmitt. Sergeant Conant explained some of the facts of life and shipping space to the souvenir collector.

Camp Shows Praise SSO

Experience Personnel Handles Tough Chores

One Army camp for which USO-Camp Shows have expressed only admiration for the way in which they were housed, transported and treated in general is Fort Benning, one of the largest military posts in the entire country, where difficulties of transportation and housing are most acute.

The handling of visiting USO-Camp Shows is under the direction of Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, chief of the Special Service Branch at Fort Benning. Col. Finnegan was at one time coach at North Dakota State, Fargo, N. D., and a veteran of World War I who has had plenty of experience himself in showmanship.

Then, too, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the Post, realizing what these shows do toward building the morale of his men, is insistent that every possible care and courtesy be extended to the members of the troupes.

Under such a set-up, Col. Finnegan has always managed to secure men with theatrical experience to handle the difficult assignment of managing the thousand-and-one details attendant on bringing a show to camp and keeping it running smoothly.

ABLE ASSISTANTS

There was, for instance, Sergeant James Wicker who was known on Broadway as Jimmie Carr, former stage manager of several hits including, "Leave It To Me" and the Aquacade in Cleveland. Jimmie is now a lieutenant and is in charge of a special service unit out on the coast.

Pfc. E. B. Sturmer, known on B'way as Barry Williams, now handles the chore. Pfc. Sturmer authored the "Sunday Nites at Nine" Revues and sketches for several B'way attractions including, "The Strawhat Revue" and "All In Fun." He is assigned to the show during its entire stay. He handles the mail, directs buses from one theatre to another, and arranges billeting.

Columbus is generally overcrowded and the troupers cannot be quartered there. Lodgings are found on the post and every facility is made available to the show-folk.

Dressing rooms are always kept clean by details assigned to the theatre staff, under direction of Major James E. Sutton, theatre officer. Stage crews are trained and managed by Sgt. A. Whitson of the Theatre Office.

Every USO-Camp Show that has left Fort Benning has written a letter to Col. Finnegan expressing gratitude for the fine methods worked out for handling the show while at this post. As "Blackstone & Company" left the officer's club to step into their buses and leave Benning the entire cast gave three rousing cheers for "Barry" Sturmer to express their feelings for the manner in which he extended himself to make their stay at Benning a pleasant one.

Parachute Band Hopes to Jump

The new 501st Parachute Infantry, among other things, boasts of one of the only parachute bands in the country, and members hope some day to jump with their instruments.

Organized in January of this year, by Sgt. Phillip Kirschner who is the director, the band is made up of 45 members most of whom are former "name" band members.

The band is currently playing on Saturday nights at the Officers' club.

This story goes back to 1908 when Congress actually forgot to appropriate money to pay Army officers and enlisted men.

After six months without pay, a certain sergeant major, out for a walk, sighted his colonel, a very straight-laced old man. Crossing the street and saluting, the sergeant said:

"Colonel, sir, I hate to bother you during off-duty hours, but—look, sir, I'm broke; can you lend me some money?"

The colonel drew himself up haughtily.

"Sergeant, get the devil back where you came from. I'm working this side of the street—you work the other."

NEW YORK, N. Y. — On February 4 the USO was two years old. It was on that day, back in 1940, when the United Service Organizations were officially incorporated under the laws of the State of New York. Since then its work has expanded to include operation of over 1,200 clubs and units in continental United States and many more in offshore and hemispheric bases.

Drinking Rules Amaze French Officers In U. S.

The company of French officers, now safely in-grooved at the First Student Training Regiment, are not without their sense of humor, despite the seriousness with which they look upon their work at the Infantry School. Attached to a foot locker of one "soldat de guerre" is a ragged newspaper clipping:

"—encountered difficulty with Washington's drinking regulations at Union Station yesterday.

Gathered in a station restaurant with cocktails in hand, they stood as one man when Col. Albert Jean Paul Le Bel of General Giraud's Washington staff rose and gave a toast, "Sante La Belle France."

Then it seemed like every one of the waitresses descended on them at once. "It's against the rules," they protested. "You mustn't drink standing up."

The officers meekly sat down and asked puzzled questions of one another. "What's wrong?" they said, still uncomprehending even when it was explained to them."

America—"quel pays entonnant" —a funny country—Yes?

MAJOR PICKENS

The promotion of Captain William L. Pickens, executive officer of the First Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment, to the rank of major was announced recently.

Happier Days in Offing After the War Is Won

SGT. A. J. GALLO,
55th Armored Engineer Battalion
10th Armd. Div.

The American people who, had been repeatedly warned of the pessimistic turn of events, are encouraged and gratified by the magnificent and successful raid of our Asiatic fleet against the Japanese fleet, which cost the Japanese the total destruction loss of 22 naval vessels, and 55 aeroplanes.

It is evident that Japan, who concentrated all her efforts against the Philippines, Singapore, Dutch East Indies, and Guadalcanal, could not strengthen the defenses of all her possessions scattered in the vast Pacific. And a surprise attack such as that prepared and boldly carried out by the valiant Vice-Admiral Halsey, found her unprepared against this countermove and exposed her to considerable losses.

This offensive operation of the American fleet must be cited not only for its immediate advantages, but it represents a grave warning to the Japanese, who too soon and too superficially imagined the possibility of completely dominating the Pacific by expelling the English, the Americans and their Allies.

UNPLEASANTNESS

Uncle Sam's fighting ships remained on the high seas three weeks and completed a ten-thousand mile sweep. When we consider that the distance between Hawaii and Tokio is 4000 miles, the Japanese may easily understand how they are subject to unpleasant visits right at their own front door by the American Asiatic fleet and her increasingly formidable air escort.

And all this has taken place while Japan, with years of preparation was at the peak of her air and naval strength, which she is exhausting day by day in the many theaters of war, and while the U. S. has hardly begun to rearm on a large scale and after it suffered the unforeseen damage inflicted in the criminal Japanese aggression of the 7th of December, 1941.

Today's situation will very soon be improved to the advantage of the United States and the longer the war lasts the more will America's superproduction outdistance the small production of Japan and the Axis, thus giving the Allies absolute superiority, particularly in the air and on the sea which are the important elements of decisive victory.

MAN'T MATCH US

It has been ascertained that Japan cannot produce in a year the 5000 planes which American plants will turn out every month during the current year. The Ford plant alone, is producing a four-motored bomber every hour.

And in what part of the world can ships be built with the proven speed of American shipyards? It is merely a question of time. More precisely it is a matter of making up a great deal of time lost in the hope of avoiding this war of destruction. But as to the final result of the gigantic conflict there can be no doubt.

With leaders such as General MacArthur and Admiral Halsey, with soldiers like the defenders of Wake, Philippines, and Guadalcanal, with the gigantic war production of the Arsenal of Democracies, the initial successes of the enemy will be gradually wiped out and victory will be ever nearer for the nations who are fighting for their own independence and for the independence of the people set upon by the aggression of the new barbarians of the East and of the West.

Let us therefore give all we can, in perfect unity and discipline, to America—men, labor and money—so that victory will be hastened for our good and for the good of the people who look upon America's triumph as upon the dawn of a new era which promises happier days for humanity, now again tortured by the destruction of this war brought about by ambitious and blind dreamers of bloodier plunder, of greater dictatorships and of more horrible oppression.

2nd STR Unit 100 Per Cent In Life Insurance

Here is a record for other companies at Fort Benning to shoot at. It is a 100 per cent bullseye in complete and maximum coverage in Army life insurance.

The record was made in the Second Student Training Regiment by the 15th Company, commanded by Lt. Norman P. Patterson, with Lt. Hugh T. Foster as insurance officer. Each and every officer and officer candidate in the company now holds $10,000 worth of National Service Life Insurance.

"It didn't require any job or selling at all," Lt. Foster said. "We simply told the men about the insurance and that we would put their applications through."

The total figures for March in the Second Student Training Regiment show $37,173,500 worth of insurance held, as compared with $35,923,500 in February. Percentage of men in the regiment holding insurance also rose from 76.5 in February to 84.2 in March.

FORT BENNING BAYONET

VOLUME 1, NUMBER 32 | Published By The Ledger-Enquirer Co. | FT. BENNING, GA., THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1943 | For America's Most Complete Post | PRICE FIVE CENTS

President Inspects Fort Benning On Surprise Visit Last Thursday

Post Will Pay Expenses of 14 Mothers To Visit Soldier-Sons On Mother's Day

Fourteen lucky mothers of fourteen lucky soldiers will visit all Fort Benning soldiers as well as their own soldier sons as guests of the Post for Mother's Day, May 9, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general, announced late Wednesday as The Bayonet went to press.

All arrangements and expenses will be under the supervision of chaplains on the post, under the direction of Lt. Col. Frank M. Thompson, chief of chaplains, the general announced. Round trip fares will be paid for the mothers and all housing and food costs will be taken care of by the chaplains.

Full details were not available immediately, but it is planned that every soldier at Fort Benning will be given a chance to have his mother chosen.

Five mothers will be chosen from among the troops of the Infantry School, three from the 10th Armored Division, two from the Parachute School, one from Lawson Field and three from various units of the Service Command.

The apportionment was made on a basis of the number of men, it was explained, and on the same basis two of the mothers will be those of colored troops, one from the Infantry School and one from Fourth Service Command men.

During their stay the mothers will ride in jeeps, army vehicles of other types and also visit all areas of the post.

Maj. Gen. Paul Newgarden, commanding general of the 10th Armored division; Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of The Infantry School; Brig. Gen. George P. Howell, commandant of the Parachute School, and Lt. Col. John E. Albert, commanding officer of Lawson Field, have expressed their desire to cooperate in making Mother's Day a memorable event at the post.

Units will use different plans in choosing the lucky soldiers, but in general some lottery system will be used, a quick survey indicated.

So that every man on the post may know just how his mother may be entered in these various methods of choosing the winners, Fort Benning personnel are urged to listen nightly beginning tonight to Station WRBL for "Fort Benning on the Air" at 6 o'clock, Fort Benning time.

Roosevelt Pleased With Training Here

F. D. R. Viewed At Close Range Nearest Thing To Actual Combat

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, on his first wartime tour of Fort Benning, last Thursday, in a whirlwind visit saw demonstrations of the Infantry school, paratroopers, armored raiders, and all the branches of activity that go to make this "America's most complete army post."

Shrouded with wartime secrecy, the visit of the commander-in-chief to this military training center was a known fact to but a few high-ranking officers who made arrangements for the tour.

However, Thursday noon much speculation was aroused when the presence of steel-helmeted guards took up positions at bridges, the Columbus railroad station, and other vital places along the route the president's party was to follow.

Arriving at Fort Benning late in the afternoon on a special train, the president was greeted at the Fort Benning railroad depot by a guard of honor from the 29th Infantry and the 29th Infantry's band.

During his inspection of the post, the several general officers of Fort Benning were privileged to ride with the president in his special open car. Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of the Infantry school; Maj. Gen. Paul W. Newgarden, commanding general of the Tenth Armored division; Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post; and Brig. Gen. George P. Howell, commandant of the Parachute school, accompanied the president in his car at one time or another on his rounds of inspection.

Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia, who made a special trip to Fort Benning, likewise met the president here and rode with him on his tour.

Fort Benning's troops were in their prime for the surprise inspection. Brass had been polished to its highest luster by the guards-of-honor, faces were blacked with the darkest charred cork by troops engaged in simulated battles, ten-inch jump boots of paratroopers boasted their brightest shines, and all were eager in their anticipation of what was in the offing.

Although the president's tour of Fort Benning was hurried, the commander-in-chief viewed all phases of military training here, including demonstrations at the Parachute school, the Infantry school, and the Tenth Armored division.

The shrouds of secrecy which surrounded the chief's visit here was lifted Tuesday afternoon. Prior to visiting Fort Benning, FDR had started his tour of military posts at the marine corps training center, Parris island, S. C., and then visited Maxwell field, near Montgomery. After leaving Fort Benning, President Roosevelt motored to Warm Springs, Ga., home of the "Little White House."

At the Parachute school, first of the president's list of demonstrations here, he saw the rugged chutists in all phases of their training; hurling themselves from mock towers, rigging and repairing chutes, parachuting down from the 250-foot training tow-

F.D.R. Highlights

One of the Infantry's most recent inventions, the Bazooka, which is said to be able to pierce the best of the enemy's tanks was on display for the President's inspection. The Bazooka defies description since it's a secret weapon which packs a deadly punch for any Mark VIs which might venture in its path.

Falla, FDR's prized Scottish terrier, also got a first-hand glimpse of Fort Benning. In company with some of the President's secretaries, Falla, the President's constant companion, rode in a sedan which was driven by Corporal Yanes Ozbolt.

One of the proudest individuals at Fort Benning after the President's visit was Hutchinson Covington, a veteran waiter at the Officers Club. With three other waiters, Sgt. Tom Fields, W. C. Reed, and Taylor Tellis, Covington served orange juice to the presidential party when it stopped to view a problem on Holliday Hill. Covington, his cohorts say, won the lucky toss and was privileged to serve the chief.

Thirty-six lucky members of the 124th Infantry escorted FDR and party to Warm Springs after the Benning tour. As a guard of honor, the Gators were under the command of Capt. Russell Whetstone, Lieut. Richard H. Koehler, Lieut. Charles E. O'Leary, and Lieut. O. T. Dalton.

G. I. Summary Of World News

BY SGT. O. J. REMINGTON

WARNING OF HARD fighting still ahead in Tunisia was sounded by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander, as British and American troops continue chipping away at the stubborn defenses thrown in the mountains surrounding Tunis. French troops also were playing quite a part in the operations. Gen. Eisenhower warned that Germans and Italians have been sewing mines and that strong defenses now ring the city.

Attempting to cut off escape of the Axis troops, American planes have been blasting away day after day at shipping, ports, and German planes. Sardinian, Sicilian and Tunisian targets are being heavily attacked. Allied airmen have destroyed Axis planes numbering into the hundreds in attacks aimed at cutting off both reinforcements and escape lanes. General Eisenhower disclosed that the Second U. S. Army Corps had captured 4,680 prisoners, destroyed or captured 683 Axis vehicles, destroyed or damaged 69 tanks, captured 150 guns. He also revealed Second Corps casualties as 5,372 killed, wounded and missing. He listed 903 killed, 3,610 wounded, 859 missing.

HEAVY BLOWS WERE struck during the week at concentrations of Japanese shipping in the Far East. General Douglas MacArthur has issued three warnings that a big Japanese fleet is massing in the area of Truk, the main enemy base outside the Japanese Islands. This is "less than three days" sailing distance of New Guinea. Constant convoys are operating beyond the range of our air forces, he stated.

Long range bombers were hammering away, however, at concentrations of merchant shipping that were within their range, and broke up one convoy of nine ships that attempted to land at Wewak, New Guinea, driving it off after sinking two ships. Bombers also hit at another concentration of cargo vessels in the Shortland Island area and broke up a shipment of supplies to the hard pressed enemy garrisons on the Solomon Islands.

In the North Pacific, both Kiska and Attu, enemy held outposts in the Aleutians, were struck during the week by bombers.

MUD SEEMS TO have caused a stalemate on the Russian front, but German troops were reported massing there. Looks like a race with time now to see whether Allied troops can hit at the continent in time to draw off German troops from the Russian front, which will doubtless be the scene of German attack as soon as they can move.

The RAF crossed the Alps early in the week for raids on the Italian naval base of Spezia, Messina and Palermo.

American heavy bombers, in strong force and flying without escort, hit at the German Focke-wulf fighter plane factory at Bremen, shot down more than 56 enemy planes—but sustained an unprecedented toll of 16 four-engined bombers. Russian planes at the same time raided Danzig, Koenigsberg and Tilsit

Mexican Army Chief Inspects Post Activities

Thorough Training Program Impresses General Sanchez

Completing an extensive inspection of military installations and the training of tactical units at Fort Benning last Friday, Maj. Gen. Salvador Sanchez, chief of the presidential general staff of Mexico, observed that "the impression we have received here today will stay with us all the rest of our lives."

Speaking for himself and the party of high-ranking Mexican officers who accompanied him, General Sanchez heralded the outstanding training given soldiers at Benning when he pointed out:

"I have strong hopes from what we have seen here today to give something to aid Mexico now that our country is cooperating loyally and sincerely with the United States and the other United Nations."

Throughout the day, General Sanchez, who is a member of the staff of President Avila Camacho, and his party viewed demonstrations at the nearby army post. Other members of the visiting party included Lt. Col. Arturo Davila Caballero, deputy chief-of-staff of the Mexican army; Lt. Col. Antonio Cardenas Rodriguez, representing the Mexican air forces; and Capt. Augusto Monsalve Bravo.

FULTON ENTERTAINS

Last Friday, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, feted General Sanchez and his party at a dinner in the Officers' club in Fort Benning. High-ranking officers from the post attended the affair, which signaled solidarity existing between the United States and Mexico.

The party toured Fort Benning's Infantry school, where Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, the commandant, and Brig. Gen. George Weems, assistant commandant, pointed out the latest innovations in the training of officer candidates and infantrymen.

Before viewing any demonstrations, General Sanchez inspected a platoon of soldiers in the 300th infantry, who are all of Mexican descent. Most of the soldiers are natives of southern Texas and speak Spanish principally. After he inspected the platoon, General Sanchez commended the men for their fine appearance and interest in winning the war for the Allies.

MANS GUN

While Sanchez was observing the firing of .30 caliber machine guns in one demonstration, he asked if he could fire the weapon himself. General Sanchez was urged to try his hand at the U. S. army gun and he assumed the position of the gunner. General Weems acted as the assistant gunner and received the empty cartridge belt as it came through the weapon.

The party also viewed demonstrations of hand-to-hand combat at the Infantry school, witnessed the firing of the 81 mm. and .60 mm. mortars, and then viewed a platoon in the attack during a combat proficiency test.

In the afternoon, General Sanchez and his party were first the guests of Brig. Gen. Geo. P. Howell, commandana of the Parachute school, who conducted them on an inspection tour. Several of the Mexicans enjoyed the novelty of riding in a seat up to the top of the 250-foot controlled tower and dropping in a smooth descent,

Post Chapels Plan Full Easter-Week Observance

Protestants Slate Sunrise Service; Catholic Program Comprehensive

Easter week—the second one of the war—will be observed in Columbus and at Fort Benning with elaborate services highlighted by the mid-week and two Sunday sunrise services at the post.

Around-the-clock services will be held for soldiers of every denomination at Fort Benning, Col. Frank M. Thompson, chief of chaplains' branch pointed out.

Three protestant services have been announced for the main chapel. Easter Masses have been announced for those of the Catholic faith, and a field mass is to be celebrated on Station hospital lawn on that day.

The protestant services will be ushered in with a Sunrise service at 7 o'clock. Mid-week lenten services will be held.

Chaplain Frederick W. Helfer will conduct the sunrise service Sunday, while Chaplain Thompson is to conduct the communion service at 9 o'clock. Chaplain Alfred L. Pollack will conduct the morning worship at 10:30.

The second sunrise services on the post Easter morning will be the Protestant services of the 29th Infantry, beginning at 7:30 a. m. in the quartel of the regiment.

Chaplain E. L. Storey will deliver the sermon and the 29th Infantry band will furnish the musical portion of the services, featuring special Easter music. The general services will be followed by a field mass.

Other protestant holy week services will include worship Thursday night at 7:30 with the chapel junior choir directed by Mrs. Wilbur Peterkin rendering special Easter music including "Christ Arose" by Lowry. Friday at 7:30 p. m. the senior choir under the direction of Mrs. J. O. Methvin will present Maunder's "Quiet to Calvary," a cantata.

Announcement of Catholic services to be held at chapel No. 4, the main post Catholic chapel, during the remainder of holy week, was made.

GOOD FRIDAY

Thursday there will be a repository, and Catholics are requested to go to the chapel and make visits to the Lord during the day and evening. Chap. Francis O. Waterstraat, will deliver the sermon at 7:30 p. m. On Good Friday, a morning mass of the pre-sanctified will be held at 5:45 in the morning. In the evening there will be a three-hour devotion on the crucifixion of our Lord from 7 until 10 o'clock.

Morning mass will be at 5:45 on Holy Saturday morning, when the blessing of the holy water will also take place. Confessions will be heard beginning at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and lasting until 5:30, and again from 7:30 in the evening on.

On Easter Sunday morning, Easter masses will be said in the chapel at 7 and 8 o'clock. The rituals over which Bishop William T. McCarty was to preside have been cancelled due to His Excellency's sudden illness.

Thursday mass will be in the chapel at 5:45, and holy communion distributed at this mass only.

The holy week services began with the saying of mass at the main post chapel at 7 in morning and will be repeated in evening at the same hours next Wednesday. Confessions will be Wednesday night beginning at 8 o'clock for those who wish to receive holy communion on Holy Thursday morning.

Station hospital patients, officers, nurses, medical detachment men, and friends will observe the Easter holiday with the field mass on the lawn, weather permitting.

Father Ignatius McCarty will be celebrant of the mass, special music will be under the direction of Pvt. Winfield Davis of the medical detachment, and Sgt. Frank Hines will be master of ceremonies.

The holy sacrifice of the mass will begin at 7 o'clock. An outdoor altar will be erected for the services, and amplifiers will carry the voices of the celebrant and the vocalists.

In the event of inclement weather, the services will be held in the recreation hall of the Red Cross building.

That Freedom For All May Be Resurrected

Proud G. I.'s Reminisce Over Thrilling Moments In President's Presence

Eleven Soldiers Have Something to Tell Their Grandchildren

BY SGT. OWEN J. REMINGTON

When the children and probably grandchildren of 11 Fort Benning soldiers ask them what they did in the war—they probably will sit back and say "Why, we drove President Roosevelt's party around Fort Benning when he made a tour of the post."

And then they'll go on to tell how they also drove the Presidential party—a pair of admirals, secret service men, confidential secretaries, press correspondents and photographers and one dog—from Fort Benning to Warm Springs, Ga., took the party on a picnic, took others sightseeing, lined up to form a guard of honor as the Presidential special pulled out of Warm Springs and probably a few other little reminiscences.

Four of the 11 enlisted men who acted as chauffeur for the motorcade gathered together in a tiny office across the hall from Maj. Allen D. Albert in the Infantry school and recalled some of the big thrills that the entire 11 had during the tours of Fort Benning and the following trip to Warm Springs. From time to time Major Albert or other officers and reporters stopped in to listen.

There were Corp. John P. Ford, from down Texas way, now of Company A, Academic regiment, who drove the two admirals, one of whom was Admiral King, presidential physician. And Cpl. Ralph L. Childress, Pounding Mills, Va., also of Company A, who drove several photographers; Pfc. Eugene Enlow, of Mount Vernon, Ill., Company H, Academic regiment and Corp. Leonard Nix, Deland, Fla., of Company B, Academic regiment. Private first class Enlow and Corporal Nix drove other newspapermen on the tour.

"Those newspapermen and photographers were certainly highly impressed with Fort Benning," they said. "They said that the 29th Infantry band was the finest of any band to greet the party on their tour. They said that the tour was the biggest and most fascinating place they ever saw. They were specially excited about the paratroopers and when they went out to watch the demonstration at Holiday Hill they said the men were the most soldierly lot they had seen anywhere."

Master Sgt. William Shannon, Company H, Academic regiment, wasn't in the little group today. He was out driving for some other officers on official business today. The others told, however, how he drove the secret service men all the way to Warm Springs.

"We started out from the 10th Armored area about 5:30 p. m.," Corporal Childress said. "The president went first in his car, directly behind the state police and motorcycle escort. Sergeant Shannon drove along on the left side of his car all the way, with a car full of the secret service men. The rest of us came behind.

"Every 200 yards or so, all the way from Columbus to Warm Springs, there were armed soldiers guarding the road. Most of them were from the 124th Infantry and the 176 Infantry."

"When we got there, the president went to the Little White House and we went back to the hotel to clean up and eat. Everybody treated us royally. We had swell food, rooms at the hotel and were able to see everything that happened."

President Roosevelt drove his own car around up there," recalled Corporal Ford. "It's a little old 1939 Ford, specially built so he can handle the controls. I guess they probably keep it there all the time for his use, because he had come to Benning by train and then the train went on up there while we all went by car, and I don't think it was on the train.

"Anyway, he went out on Friday in his car and that old beat-up hat he wears. I got an awful kick out of seeing him in that. The president took Falla, his dog, with him, and whenever the president stopped to talk with a patient, or dropped in on some friend in town—Falla would jump out and go exploring. He seemed to know all the dogs around there, and also seemed to be acquainted with the people around the town.

"Friday afternoon he drove his car up to a mountain top nearby and we took the rest of the party along for a big picnic for the children and a lot of civilians who came out from town. We did not stay, however, but went back to town to eat."

"I took Stephen Early, the president's secretary, out for a round of golf," said Private Enlow. "And I got his autograph, too."

"I took a group of the newspapermen to Magic Hills and they took my picture going up—or down—that hill. It looks as though you're going down but the car strains—then you put it in neutral and go backwards and it looks as though you're really going up hill."

"When the presidential train party down, and then Sergeant pulled out, we took the entire Shannon lined us up and we saluted the president as he stepped aboard," Corporal Nix related. "He returned the salute and gave up all that big famous grin. It sure sent a thrill right down all our spines.

"Everybody in the whole town was there to cheer the train as it pulled out. On Friday morning we took the party out while the president went for a swim in his own pool. He seemed to know everybody in the entire place by name.

"On Thursday night he made a talk at dinner but we were waiting in the cars so we could not

Physical Therapy Department Combines Age-Old With New

This Branch of Medicine Proved Its Efficacy in World War I

Methods as old as mankind and used by beasts in the jungle, modern man, and primitive civilization alike are scientifically applied by the Station Hospital's physical therapy department to lend nature's normal processes of healing a helping hand in the treatment of everything from "Goldbrick's Delight"—an elusive back condition difficult to diagnose—to warts and "Charley horses."

The department takes a pair of hands, some hot water, an old style short wave radio set and a bit of synthetic sunlight, compounds these ingredients with a little human sympathy, and proceeds to work its cures and speed up recovery from ailments of almost every sort.

Although many of the methods have been used indiscriminately by laymen throughout history and ruthlessly exploited by charlatans, and although the procedures to many may seem only remotely connected with medicine as usually practiced, they are applied now with knowledge and discrimination resulting from careful scientific investigation separating the chaff from the grain.

ARMY CAUTIOUS

The Army, notably careful about accepting medical innovations until they are fully proved, recognized and provides physical therapy because the methods employed result in an appreciable reduction of hospitalization time and permits men to return to duty much more quickly than otherwise would be the case. This branch of medicine proved its effectiveness to the Army in World War I when it was used to great advantage.

Conditions treated by this section are, in reality, a cross section of medicine. Fractures, arthritis, wounds, infections, ear-nose and throat ailments, flat feet, respiratory infections, burns, atrophied muscles, skin diseases, and back conditions are only a few of the cases in which physical herapy helps other branches of medicine and surgery do their tasks.

Heat, massage and exercise are the basic elements of treatment in the department, which is operated under the immediate direction of Major Nathan A. Schwalbe, M. C.

MACHINES STRANGE

The strange looking machines and equipment in the clinic include electrical apparatus which carry one back to the first experiments in electricity by Franklin and Volta. One of Faraday's Machines is still used in physical therapy treatments. Radiant heat lamps, "bakers", and ultra-violet ray machines are among those pieces of equipment used.

The radiant heat lamps use electric light bulbs to raise the temperature of the part under treatment. Circulation in the tissues is increased and a soothing effect is felt by the patients. Radiant heat also can be supplied by "bakers", which look like metal barrels cut in half. These are put over the patient's body to cover the affected part, and like the lamps, contain electric light bulbs to create heat.

These heat baths produce a decided relaxation of muscles and a decrease in pain in the injured part. Massage and carefully supervised exercise usually follow.

MASSAGES GIVEN

Massages are given by four expert therapy aides working under the direction of Major Schwalbe. Commissioned second lieutenants last month from their civilian capacity in the department, these aides are Lieuts. Ethel Hansen of Arlington, Mass.; Adeline Pirone of Ayer, Mass.; Hope Doolittle of New Haven, Conn.; and Julia Warwick of West Palm Beach, Fla.

Fully recognizing the importance of encouragement as a factor in recovery from various ailments, these aides created a personalized atmosphere which instills patients with a desire to get better and to utilize their own efforts to get well.

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—For those too lazy or too busy to read the funnies every night the "Bulletin" has a comic digest, "This Week in the Comics," where the adventures of Major Hoople, Popeye, Dick Tracy, and Blondie are presented in non-pictorial synopsis form.

O. C.'s Vote No Frails At Stag Graduation Party

People who think they know something about soldiers will be puzzled by the news that officer candidates of the 11th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, recently voted, 3-1, for a stag graduation party. The celebration is scheduled for Friday, April 23.

"This is the first time such a thing ever happened to us," declares Lieut. Edward G. Garrett, Jr., social officer, who recalls past company parties when he spent many hours looking up dates for graduation dances.

But stag party this will be, only girls present to be members of the cast of a floor show planned as part of the program. The dinner and entertainment will be held at the Student Training Brigade rest camp.

Tigers Take ASTP Course

65 Enlisted Men Sent To 3 Schools

"Soldiers of Science" is a designation that could be applied to 65 enlisted men of the 10th Armored division who have forsaken Army barracks for the halls of learning, some for a few months and some possibly for a few years.

Selected from among hundreds who took the "OCT X-3" test designed to cull college talent, these men are now studying at the Georgia School of Technology at Atlanta, the Alabama Polytechnic at Auburn, Ala., and Princeton University at Princeton, N. J.

Those who are at the two technical institutions are men who, according to the Division classification office, "were preponderantly recommended for some type of engineering course, mathematics or chemistry." The Princeton soldier-students were recommended for almost all types of courses offered by the Army Specialized Training program and include men who displayed aptitude for languages, military government and psychology, as well as scientific pursuits.

200 QUALIFY

As of April 10 a total of 200 men in the division had qualified on test score, age and educational requirements. Five were subsequently ruled out because of transfer to the Air Corps, enrollment in officer candidate school or appointment as warrant officer.

At latest reports, a special board had considered 192 cases and recommended 92 men for advanced courses. A total of 66 men were deemed capable of pursuing basic courses while 34 candidates were "not favorably recommended."

Of those who were not recommended, however, nearly all were regarded as immediate possibilities for officer candidate schools. Moreover, two of these men were graduate engineers who would not need any additional training.

The division classification office points out that the program is being continued until all men with the necessary qualifications have taken the special test and until all cases have been considered by the board.

Tigers Organize Training Battalion; 2 Courses Given

A provisional training battalion has been formed in the 10th Armored Division. Two courses will be conducted, each course to include two weeks at the Carmouche Range and one week at Tiger Camp.

Among the enlisted men who have been placed in the battalion are former personnel of service commands who were released from their duties and replaced by WAAC's and limited service men.

Roosevelt—

ers, and then actually making 12-man jumps from transports flying over Lawson field.

Next traveling to the Infantry school, President Roosevelt sat within 100-feet of machine-guns spitting their deadly fire where he viewed a battle indoctrination problem for officer candidates.

Capt. Francis K. Westlake, TIS instructor for the weapons section, of the committee on tactics of the rifle platoon, vividly annotated the problem for the visitors. He pointed out the missions of the problem as well as what errors were made.

From the crest of Holliday Hill, squads of infantrymen from the 124th Infantry, with faces blacked with charred cork and clad in camouflaged uniforms, subdued simulated enemy concentrations across a valley on a ridge with their withering fire.

As the squads advanced, dynamite charges exploded about the officer candidates.

Utilizing underbrush and trees for protection, one squad held the enemy's attention, while another concentrated on the strong points, running a few yards, then falling prone, hurling grenades and loosing rifle fire to press home the attack.

At times 30 caliber machineguns spit real bullets and tracers which streaked red over the heads of advancing troops. Whining shells of 81. mm. mortars at the same time blasted distant hills, sending up blasts, shattering pines and starting grass fires with the lethal charges.

Through all of this attack there was a distant overtone of rifle and machine gun chatter while the base notes were sounded by exploding mortar shells. However, the sharp voice of Captain Westlake continued to narrate the changed positions and tactics throughout the demonstration.

President Roosevelt obviously was impressed by the demonstration, as he gazed intently on one group of soldiers and then another as they pressed home the attack.

Then the commander-in-chief saw anti-tank platoons repel an advance of light tanks in another problem on Wood road. Firing blanks, from enfilade positions, the crack crews of 37 mm. guns pilfered the light tanks as they swept forward, attempting to dislodge the anti-tankmen.

At another demonstration, the president viewed a realistic attack of officer candidates attacking a Nazi village. The villains of the problem, clad in actual Nazi uniforms, held the village until the doughboys crept stealthily forward and finally breaking out in a dead run at close range, yelling madly, to overwhelm the village.

With simulated hand grenades made of spoiled potatoes and stuffed with fat firecrackers and utilizing strong rifle fire, the advancing troops dislodged the enemy from the village. Soon the problem was over as the doughboys emplaced a machine-gun in the attack of one of the houses and resumed their deathdealing attack on the fleeing "Nazis."

From the Infantry school demonstration, the president motored to the Tenth Armored division where he viewed the proud General Sherman, M-4, tanks. The Tenth Armored division displayed bulldozers, derricks, pontoons, mobile workshops and a variety of other equipment which go to make the armored raiders a potent force in modern combat.

All of its power turned out for the presidential party which was met in the Sand Hill area by General Newgarden and his staff at Ochillee. There, too, was a light and a medium company of tanks.

At Tiger field was another medium tank company. Here also were displays by engineer and maintenance battalions and a field hospital station. The 11th Armored regiment had a mass boxing demonstration, the 3rd Armored regiment did mass calisthenics, the 455th coast artillery anti-aircraft, put on a demonstration, and anti-tank crews went through a drill.

The escort of honor came from the 2nd battalion of the 54th Armored Infantry and the Third Armored regiment band played as it never played before. And as the division artillery fired its salute to the president, observers knew that the party had seen all of the activities of a powerful striking force.

As he concluded his visit at the post, the president expressed to the several commanding generals his complete faith in the strength of the American army.

A special motor convoy, with drivers from the Infantry School's motor pool, the 7th observation squadron, and the 300th Infantry, drove the president's party to Warm Springs where, they report, they were "treated royally." A guard of honor, under the command of Lt. Col. Henry McMillan, executive officer of the 124th Infantry regiment, escorted the president and his party to Warm Springs. The guard of honor was made up of selected troops from the Third battalion and service company of the regiment.

Road guards along the area of the Third Student Training regiment were furnished by 124th under the command of Lt. Col. Robert N. Hill, commander of the Third battalion.

LETITIA GENTILE

Third Officer Gentile Is 84th WAAC Commander

Third Officer Letitia Eileen Gentile, of Providence, Rhode Island, is the commanding officer of the detachment of WAAC's which arrived last week at Fort Benning.

Third Officer Gentile, who is now in charge of the 84th WAAC Post Headquarters Company at the fort, was formerly commander of a WAAC company at the Third Training Center, Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga.

She was transferred to Fort Oglethorpe after being graduated from Officer Candidate School at Fort Des Moines, Ia., on February 23.

Third Officer Gentile was the office manager for F. W. Whipple & Co. in Providence, R. I., in civilian life.

TUESDAY NIGHT Presidents Roosevelt and Camacho met at Monterrey, Mexico, and issued manifestos attesting to the great friendship between the United States and Mexico. This unusual shot of Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, and Major General J. Salvador Sanchez, chief of the Mexican presidential general staff, is a notable testimonial of the solidarity between the two nations. The photo was taken just before General Sanchez and his party took off from Lawson field following their two-day visit here.

Red Cross Plans Course

Motor Maintenance Class Starts In May

The American Red Cross announces that a new course in Motor Maintenance for candidates for membership in the Motor Corps will be held in May.

Registration for the post applicants will be at the Red Cross workroom April 28-30, from 9 to 12 E.W.T. The course, to be given by officers of the Motor Mechanics Division, will start May 4 and continue through May 27, on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6:15 to 7:15 p. m. The course is to consist of eight lectures and lessons in practical application.

The Motor Corps is the transportation arm of the American Red Cross, and the very worthwhile and patriotic work which it is doing at this time should be an incentive to every woman who is eligible for membership, officials said.

PREREQUISITES

A candidate must be between the ages of 20 and 50, a citizen of the United States, of good character and in good health. She must be a qualified driver, with a current Georgia license and have the use of her car when assigned to duty.

A Motor Corps member agrees to equip her car with an approved first aid kit which she has qualified to use by completing the standard and advanced first aid courses, to drive lawfully and carefully, and to answer all calls for service willingly and promptly. Supplementary gasoline rations are given for actual mileage in the course of her duties.

Registration for Columbus residents who have been invited to take the Motor Maintenance course with the women of Fort Benning, will be at the Red Cross office in the Flowers building.

East Highland Church Invites Benning Soldiers

A cordial invitation has been extended to all Fort Benning personnel of the Pentecostal faith, together with their friends, to attend a basket dinner on Easter Sunday on the grounds of the East Highland Assembly of God, the Rev. Mr. Jimmie Mayo, pastor and secretary-treasurer of the Columbus-Phenix City Ministerial Alliance, announces.

The church is located at Twelfth street and Twenty-second avenue Columbus, and may be reached by boarding the East Highland bus.

The dinner will be prepared and furnished free to the soldiers by members and friends of the church. Plans have been made for the greatest Sunday school ever assembled at the church, and placards have been placed on all city buses inviting everyone to ride the buses free to that church during the month of April.

Sunday school will begin at 9:45 a. m. (CWT), followed by morning worship and a baptismal service at 11 a. m. Those attending are urged to arrive in time for Sunday school.

'He Is My Refuge And My Fortress'

—91st Psalm.

Easter is wartime news because it is the key to victory. We as a people and a nation have many obstacles to overcome before we have victory. Even after we win military superiority, how can democracy re-establish confidence and hope in an impoverished world? A superman job lies ahead of us. Easter, because it is the greatest victory of all time, becomes for us the mightiest promise and hope of the future.

"A merciful Providence guarded us in this great victory," said General MacArthur as the roar and smoke cleared away from the shores of New Guinea where once more his men wiped out the mounting threat to Australia. American and British fighting men emphasize the fact of an all-powerful God.

The officer commanding the lead tank pursuing Rommel through the minefield at Knightsbridge wrote back, "All fear and tension totally disappeared as I took grip of myself and handed back my life to God, with the thought from Psalm 91 which I read just before the push: 'He is my refuge and my fortress.' This gave me infinitely more confidence than six inches of armor-plating."

The power to win the war and build a new kind of world flows from Easter. One condition of victory is that we as a nation shall search our lives and our conscience to make sure that in all things we are worthy of victory. In the finest American tradition of Washington, Lincoln, Lee and countless others, we can ask the Almighty's help to put out of our lives the obstacles to victory—malice, doubt and fear.

"Only God can change human nature. When you decide to be governed by God, then the change comes. This means to listen to a Wisdom beyond your own. And obey. This fits you for your highest national service. This is the power of Easter to solve our knotty personal and national problems today.

Easter, 1943, can be the awakening of America to this her untapped power.

The Axis Is Done For Sooner Or Later

Victory is ours! Every American has in his heart the certainty of victory over all our enemies despite some reservations of those who, through their admonitions, want to see the maximum possible development of American rearmament speeded up.

But, without being too well versed in military science, it is sufficient to ponder calmly on what has happened up to today in the various sectors of the war, to come to the conclusion that the United States and its Allies will be victorious.

Hitler and his regime who armed themselves to the teeth while the other European nations were under the illusion of being able to avoid war through friendly agreements, succeeded in gaining rapid successes from the beginning of hostilities until May, 1940.

Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, and France were quickly subjugated and England remained isolated and almost without arms, with a greatly reduced air corps, besieged in its own territory, while Italy entered the camp alongside Germany, immobilizing a good part of the great English fleet in the Mediterranean.

Germany, at the height of its power, having sustained but few losses in the first season of operations, having conquered an extraordinary war booty in the occupied countries, was unable to invade the English Isle, did not succeed in prostrating Great Britain, which from month to month has reconstructed its forces, rebuilt its factories, gathered immense war material with its merchant ships from America and everywhere it was possible.

Germany cannot win now. In her vain struggle against Russia she has sustained grave losses and is becoming exhausted by her retreat which is becoming increasingly ruinous. Her grave error was in prolonging until the winter season her futile offensive against Russia.

Japan is now alongside the Axis. But the entry into the war of Japan—already engaged in a war with China for four years—has dragged into the battlefield that colossus under arms which is America, with all the enormous weight of its resources and of its war production galloping towards heights heretofore inaccessible.

The position of the Axis is hopeless. The ferocious and haughty Hitler predicted victory for Germany in 1940, again he predicted victory in 1941. But a month ago when he spoke, he dared not talk of victory in 1943 or 1944 and did not fail to recognize the difficulty of the situation on the Russian front.

Machines alone cannot win the war. But America has men, men imbued with the combative spirit of the justice of their cause, men who are fighting for the ideals of liberty and freedom, men like those who defense of Wake, Midway, Philippines, and Guadalcanal has written in glorious pages of heroism.

If the Axis has not won over England alone, if it hasn't won over England and Russia, it cannot win over England, Russia, China and the United States, aided by the valorous men of the Dutch East Indies, of the English Dominions, of the Philippines, who wait only for more arms to intensify their battle and fight for victory.

'There's None So Fair As Fighting Infantry'

Doughboy, when you're holding a mountain pass or a beach-head or a jungle outpost against forthcoming odds, will you worry about fighting true to the tradition of the American Infantry? Maybe you will stick to your guns because you've got guts and discipline but those other intangibles such as tradition, esprit de corps will play no small part in keeping you there when the situation appears hopeless.

Thousands of centuries ago the first warriors were infantrymen; the prehistoric barbarians fought on foot with hand weapons — or just hands. And up through the periods of history, through all the devastating wars before and after Christ, land battles were, in the main, a foot-slogger's field day. There were incipient angles to warfare such as artillery and cavalry, but moving via the muscular leg and killing with the bare paw still remained the prime ways of fighting.

Certainly, then, the infantry has no claim to novelty. Moreover, the inherent characteristics of the infantry form ancient chapters in the physiological story of man; excepting paralytics, all persons use daily those limbs of the body structure, arms and legs, which on the field mean do or die for the infantrymen. Finally to disintegrate entirely any fragment of modernity, those vexatious recipes of the elements—mud, snow, sleet, wind—being anything but innovations in our lives, very neatly help to make infantrymen soldiers with whom one can associate nothing but prosaic methods. Hence, as far as popularity derived from newness goes, the infantry is literally living itself into eclipse.

Today, the Queen of Battle contends with more than moldiness of age in order to stay glamorous. A cabal of motors, wings, Hollywood films, you-know-what magazines, a human propensity to dislike walking, everything that glorifies and makes attractive other fighting branches, has been added to the already described psychological disaffection of the public to place the infantry soldier in umbrage.

Let us not be too harsh with news-hounds for under-publicizing the American doughboy in favor of the armored forces and the Air Corps. Yes, they're dashing new, mechanical, these bellicose babes of the military. They typify the current speed tempo. Again they make fine news copy because the personnel of these arms of the service revel in displaying their pride in their outfit. But the glum infantryman is the forgotten man of Uncle Sam's Army, forgotten by the civilians, and, what is worse, by himself. He seems almost ashamed, unless a paratrooper, to make known the fact that he's a doughboy. Naturally! He feels that the infantry is ordinary, common.

There is no intention here to develop a proof of the strategical eminence of the infantry. Rather are we attempting to inculcate into the fighting Yankee who wears the cross rifles, the belief, logically sound, that he has no superior and few peers when it comes to blood and thunder scrapping. Remember that the Marines and Rangers and Paratroopers, when engaging in their most perilous, hair-raising actions, are primarily tactically infantrymen.

It's Johnny Doughboy who takes the ground and holds it. It's he who knows only front-line discomforts, who is put to the most supreme of physical tests. He actually must "chaw" blood, smell blood, bayonet men, choke them, gouge eyes and smash brains. Infantrymen know no thirty minute battles; it's prolonged affairs, stretching over months of daily and sanguine vigil, that are his business. Trapped behind enemy lines, hungry, thirsty, those are common events to foot soldiers. Where is there more vivid material for sales of gruesome adventure than in the familiar night patrols of the infantryman? He fights, one man against one enemy, and thus one death is inevitable—that's not the case in other branches.

You're a killer, doughboy. Your job is gruesome, awful, dirty, bestial. You're tough and mean and rough. You'll get no quarters when you meet your foe.

So, Doughboy, when they ask you what branch you're in, blast their ears off with, "I'm in the Infantry!" and when you're over there, in the white heat of action, let 'em know what boys they're fighting so that in the future they'll fear you both as an American soldier and as an Infantry soldier. And when the pressure is on, and your back is to the wall, come blazing through because you're in the United States Infantry. Be proud!

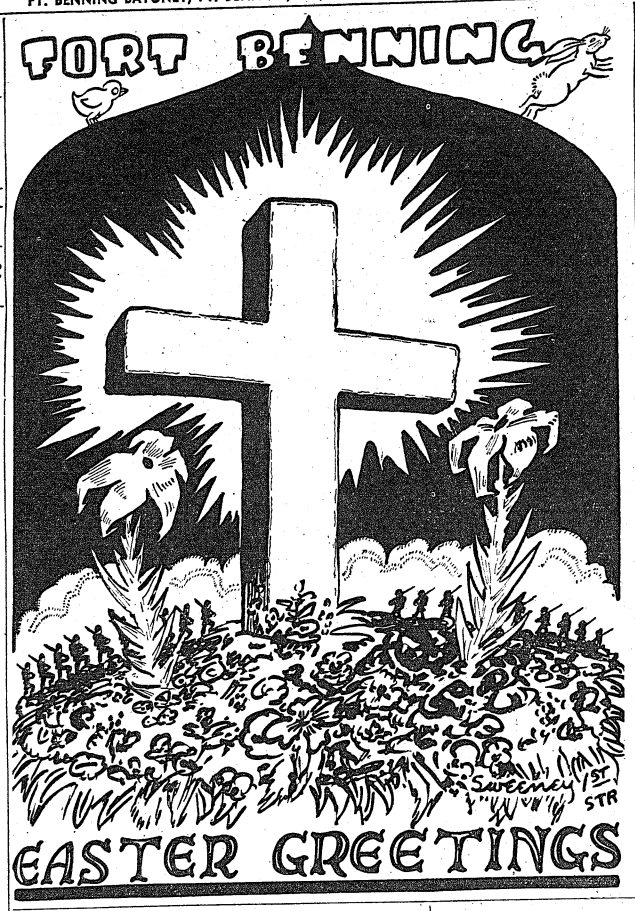
Some of us who think we're hot are only half-baked.



Hate is a mere badge of impotence.

We can save democracy through the keenness of our arms and still lose it through the dullness of our minds.

If you want to find something, your only hope is to look in the one place where it happens to be. Man will only find security as he builds a moral world.

Don't worry if your job seems small,
And your rewards seem few.

POETRY

ESTELLA

When twilight falls I sit and dream of you,
Then somehow my dreams seem to be so real,
Your loveliness suddenly comes in view
And intensifies all the love I feel.

First, I visualize your hair kissed with sun,
And your eyes, so green, arrest my heartbeat,
Dimples foretell thrills that are to come,
When softly, and sweetly our lips do meet.

Dear, you answer my heart's call for a mate,
And loving you is my eternal task,
At last, I am favored by fickle fate,
My fervent prayer is "Lord, please let this last."

What if wanderlust does come to the heart,
And brings it to seek somebody new,
Each time it feels the sting of cupid's Dart,
It will be jus a deeper love for you.

Let us go heart to heart through years of love,
Through all tears, joys, hardships we shall wend,
For our love is consummated above,
Combined, we will stay until the end.

Chaplain's Corner..

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

"A Lantern in Her Hand," by Bess Streeter Aldrich, is the story of a pioneer family in Nebraska.

Year after year they fought drought, grasshoppers, prairie fires, Indians, summer heat, winter cold. Disappointment followed disappointment, but they continued bravely on, for the mother carried a lantern in her hand—the lantern of hope and good cheer.

In an accident, one of their children almost died and the woman spoke of the fear of death, how it always hung over her like a menacing cloud.

The man never had much to say, especially about religion. Life had been very serious for him. But that evening as they sat together he began to speak as if to himself, "I wonder why we fear death, the naturalness of it. Wild geese flying over, cattle coming home, birds to their nests, the leaves to their winter mould, the last sleep. When my time comes I wish my family and friends could think of it in that way, without tears."

The time came when the doctor said her man was dead.

It was fall, and the wife and mother, standing there in her loneliness and desolation, remembered the evening of years gone by, and as she remembered, she looked out over the prairie and saw the cows coming up the pasture through the gate, the leaves of the poplars floating out onto the lone road, a bird flying into the cedars, a long wedge-shape line of wild geese circling low—Will lay sleeping.

Then there came to her a wisdom hitherto unknown. She raised her hand for silence from her four weeping children, and said, almost sternly, "Not a child of Will Dean's is to shed a tear."

It is good to think of death in that way, a sleep. It is the lesson of Easter.

I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die.

Misery loves company — but doesn't get it.

"Cheers for our riders," says the Pacific Electric Lines:

"To Mrs. McTush for avoiding the an.

"To Mr. More for not blocking the door.

"To Miss Heddy for having fare ready."

When homes are in tune, it's a lot easier to face the music.

George Washington raised a standard to which the wise and honest could repair. Our standard might be to repair the unwise and dishonest.

If we come out of this war morally bankrupt, we are certain to be ruled by tyrants, whether they be men or systems.

Democracy gives men the chance to have the inner liberty they desire with the inner discipline they need.

'J. L.' ANSWERS CALL TO COLORS TO SORROW OF ADMIRING YOUNGSTERS

Fresh into the army from the western states, where no one thinks of having help with the housework unless one is fairly wealthy or very ill, I was astonished at the assumption that one had to have a maid, or at least some sort of help. That, however, was before I looked over the expanse of G. I. floors to be polished, and the Georgia weather which soon puts a blight on northern energy.

Our combination cleaner and yard man— and, in a pinch, nurse maid—has been with us for over a year, and might be classed as one of the family. He is indispensable in times of stress, and a thorn in the side on various occasions. The weeks before Christmas finds the household in an orgy of housecleaning, whether or not there is any necessity for it. Silver must be polished, floors must be waxed, curtains must be crisp and clean, wreaths of holly must adorn the rooms. Spurred on by J. L.—for that is how this paragon chooses to call himself — I find myself digging into cranies which have never before seen the light of day. On Christmas day J. L. takes a long-awaited rest, and so does the mistress of the manor.

COMES A LULL

After Christmas a lull is in order, seen at first with relief and then with misgivings by J. L.'s various employers. Work slows down. Things formerly done in half a day take an extra day a week. One dares not peer too carefully into corners, for fear one will go into righteous rage and fire an indispensable, though casual, worker.

J. L., a psychologist of the first order, knows exactly when he has overstepped. Comes a day when work has been too slack to be forgiven, or when inroads into the family's liquor supply have been too flagrant. J. L. promptly disappears for two weeks, leaving behind a mound of work. Confronted with the painful duty of mopping up floors, washing sticky fingerprints off walls, and cleaning the bathrooms, his employers welcome him back two weeks later. All is forgiven, and J. L. proceeds to make a fresh start.

As spring approaches, we are confronted with another spurt of energy. J. L. loves yard work, especially when the sun has just the proper warmth. With a choice of inside or outside work before him, he whips through his housework in no time flat, to emerge triumphantly to cope with nature. Given a swinging blade, a hoe, and a grass rake, and J. L. can transform a yard from a shambles into an example for the neighbors to envy.

AT BEST UNDER DURESS

In an emergency J. L. is at his best. Given an unexpected party where he is recruited to help with the serving, and he appears in all the glory of a white coat, shoes shined to a pristine glory, trousers creased to razor-sharpness, and a glistening smile in anticipation of an evening of pleasure — for he dearly loves a party. Solomon in all his glory, one murmurs as one watches him preside over the punch bowl.

He has a gentle hand with the small fry of the house, who follow him about apishly imitating every gesture and picking up quaint southern expressions: Nothing pleases him better than to be left in full charge of the heir-apparent, who is then ruled with a gentle but firm hand. He marvels at the rapid growth of his young admirers, and stops his work to lend a helping hand to clumsy young fingers.

It is with mingled regret and relief that we learn that J. L. is soon to join the army. Deferred because he has a wife and a baby, J. L. has learned that he has to find work more indispensable to the war effort or join the armed forces. He prefers the latter. "I ain't never minded being called," he says when questioned.

We predict J. L. will be the constant worry of his top sergeant. But comes a day when there's fighting to be done, when a real emergency arises, and J. L. will be in there doing his best—and his best is something of which any of us could be proud.

T. P. FREEZES JERICHO'S ICE CREAM FOR THE DURATION, ALAS!

By S. SGT. TOM McDONALD

Whenever Colonel Swampwater sulks all day Monday and Tuesday, Wednesday has always been a period of trial and tribulation here in the office. Like an angry bull storming the gates of Hisop, the Colonel's rage enfolds us in the form of his usual Wednesday afternoon jam session.

He "jams" the law down on us so hard we all feel like G. I. flapjacks when he finishes.

But in spite of the ugly routine of it all, today's session had a bit of novelty. General Quagmire was on a tour of inspection at Camp Wheeler, Ga., and he had previously instructed his "aide-de-camp," Lt. Jericho, to report here to Colonel Swampwater for his usual "bawling-out", a denouement that greatly pleased my leader.

Among the "higher brass" it was considered a distinction of note to have a general officer offer one of his aides for a "dressing down". So when Colonel Swampwater's tirade proceeded on schedule, the note of authority in his voice echoed in great splendor as he commenced.

"Men!" growls he, nodding toward Lt. Jericho and me, "Youve never known what it means to have been in the 'old army'. You are all a bunch of panty waists."

The very windows vibrated at his words. Lt. Jericho who was not accustomed to Colonel Swampwater's cadence, so blushed bisibly, an occurrence which ol' T. P. was quick to note.

"And you, Lt. Jericho! According to the notes I obtained from General Quagmire, you have been committing an act that the "old army" could never tolerate. You, it seems, have been going to the ice cream parlor during breaks instead of coming down to the coca cola machine for a manly refreshment. General Quagmire says to tell you that this practice will be discontinued in the future."

"Yes, sir," stammed Lt. Jericho, blushing so profusely that I couldn't help feeling sorry for him. I knew that he didn't like bottled drinks! Ice cream was one of his most cherished pleasures. It was truly a staggering blow to his morale.

Towering majestically, the colonel marched back into his office and closed his door. Slowly and with great melancholy, Lt. Jericho picked up his cap and walked slowly toward the exit, the rest of us gazing after him with utmost pity. Reaching the lintel, he turned slowly and faced us.

"Fellow soldiers," he began. "I know that you too are great lovers of ice cream, so you realize what is in my heart. And even though I shall outwardly be my charming self, from now on I shall show you what it really means to be a soldier. I shall give up ice cream for the duration!"

Tenderly the Lieutenant took out his handkerchief and wiped the tears from his eyes as he strode away.

FACING TIME

Never shall I look behind,
To reflect a page of spring,
And fear that time has been unkind.

Always to the future find,
In facing its lick or sting,
Is life without a recess bind,

He who has frequently dined,
In the past of each gone thing,
Has exiled life and stilled the mind.

Remove this fear of the bind,
The gnawing of time on the wing,
For never shall I look behind.

Never should my face be lined,
And I've much to boast of spring,
Or fear that time shall not be kind,
Never shall I look behind.

SO IT WILL

CANDIDATE H. R. HOLTZ
15th Company, 3rd S. T. R.

Have you let your chin sag low a bit
Since Johnny marched away?
His head was high and he carried his kit
As a man must do today.

He smiled and stilled his trembling lip
With a wholesome Yankee grin
As he strode up the plank to the gray-clad ship
With the heart of a man who would win.

Have you fretted and feared the worst, at times,
Awaiting each letter he sent?
And tried to read between the lines
To see if he said what he meant?

But you'll smile it aside, it's easy to tell
And cover the aching bruise
That's left on your heart, for you know full-well,
'Twill cost less to win than to lose!

BEFORE THE BATTLE

I shall not be afraid
The growl of bombers roaring through the night,
The whine of Spitfirese and th shriek of shell
Is not for me.

Tonight all shall be well
I'll lay me down in peace, and none can say
Whether my brow is hot or mouth is dry—
No one will see.

God will not let me die
Tomorrow when we look hell in the face, shall be brave as any other man
Who sleeps tonight.

Tight-Rope Artist Is Expert Paratrooper

Following the straight and narrow path of army life should be easy for Corporal Dolph Cyr of Service company, 513th parachute Infantry Regiment, for during the past 10 years he has toed many a fine line as professional tight-rope walker.

Starting at the age of twelve, Cyr literally followed in the footsteps of his father a high wire artist. Before long he was walking and flipping on 150 foot high tight ropes, developing such technique that he could perform five front and three rear flips while treading the lofty string.

For extra-curricular activity Cyr performed stunts such as walking 300 feet above Grand Falls, Canada without the use of even a balancing rod. Cyr received an $800 bonus for that walk.

LA DAME FATALLE

However, one false step on a path like Cyr's is close to fatal, as he learned while performing with a Canadian circus in Ottawa. A second glance at a female in the audience, brought him to her, all 172 feet of the way. By skillfully tumbling in the safety net, Cyr escaped with a broken leg. Nothing daunted, he returned to work as soon as the leg mended.

Nothing seemed to fill his craving for excitement. One afternoon he and a group of friends were joy riding in an airplane. Friendly argument arose. Cyr, chief dissenter was mischievously dumped out in a parachute. However, the trick backfired. Cyr enjoyed jumping so much that he turned professional, asking 73 jumps before entering the service.

In between tight rope jaunts and parachute jumps, Cyr developed a taste for razor blades, broken glass, and other harsh tid-bits. Other than that, his 513th buddies say, Cyr is a very ordinary fellow.

6 Seconds Lopped From Obstacle Course Record

Six seconds were lopped off the existing record this week at the Obstacle Course of the 2d Battalion. 1st Student Training Regiment as Officer Students of the 10th Company ran the course against time.

2nd Lt. Lawrence R. Bourgeois of 10th Company led his classmates in new record time of 49 seconds. He was one of five officers who shattered the 55 second mark. Only 19 officers fell short of qualification with the fourth platoon making the best showing in percentage. In that group all officers save one were on the safe side of the 80 second requirement.

Bourgeois, whose permanent assignment is with 1RTC at Camp Robinson, Arkansas, is a graduate of Louisiana State University, where he tossed the javelin and participated in relays for the Tiger cinder squad and bent his efforts toward boxing during the cold season.

Only a few weeks ago the physical training committee decided to send students through the jumps against time. 1st Lt. H. H. Graham of 11th Company and Officer Candidate Ned Behr of 8th Company were co-holders of the first record, both negotiating the hurdles in 55 seconds. Qualification for the course is set at one minute, 20 seconds.

1st STR Names Two New Majors

Colonel Robert Sharp, Commanding Officer, 1st Student Training Regiment, recently announced the promotion of Captains Neal Dow and John J. Wrinn to rank of Major.

Major Dow was called to active duty August 26, 1941, as 1st lieutenant and reported to the Infantry School. Major Dow attended a Rifle and Heavy Weapons Course, graduating November 27, 1941. His transfer to 1st Student Training Regiment was effective immediately after his graduation. Major Dow has served as Tactical Officer of officer candidate and basic classes.

Major Wrinn, a Reserve Officer, received his ROTC training at Clemson College and graduated with a "BS" degree in 1936. He was connected with the South Carolina Public Schools as an instructor in Agriculture prior to entering the Army.

During the present emergency Major Dow was called to active duty as 1st lieutenant and reported to the Infantry School February 11, 1941. He attended a company officer course in the spring of 1941 and graduated July 22, 1941. His assignment to the 1st Student Training Regiment was effective immediately after his graduation. To date Major Wrinn has served as tactical officer with the 3rd Battalion.

Four officers were promoted from second to first lieutenant, it was announced last week to headquarters of the Second Student Training Regiment:

Lieutenants Francis S. Greenlief, 26th Company; Charles E. Grisvold, Company C, Service Battalion; Giles A. Generette, 21st Company; Claude R. McClarey, 19th Company.

Sgt. Lowe Is M-1 Expert

Fired 56 Bulls In As Many Minutes

The distinction of being able to fire the M1 rifle faster and more accurately than any other man in the world is held by Master Sergeant Oddie L. ("Mad Minute") Lowe, enlisted chief of the M1 Rifle Group in the Academic Regiment of The Infantry School, who just made 56 accurate hits out of 56 shots in one minute.

Ever since he enlisted in the Army at the age of 17, he has specialized in rifle work during the 22 years of his military service. He has won 154 medals for rifle marksmanship, including the Distinguished Marksmanship Medal, the highest award given for rifle marksmanship. He won this in 1936 when he captured the National Team Match.

WON CHAMPIONSHIP

Some of his other triumphs include winning of the Northwest Rapid Fire Championship in 1931 and the Governors Match in Texas in 1933 and the Mexican Border Patrol championship in 1934.

He has made several films for training purposes and has been photographed many times for Army field and technical manuals and training posters. He has just completed his sixth Signal Corps training film on the technique of M1 rifle fire, acting both as technical advisor and demonstrator.

31 PISTOL MEDALS

In addition to his skill with the rifle, Sergeant Lowe has won 31 medals for shooting the .45 caliber pistol. Before the Army adopted the new carbine, he tested it at the Aberdeen Proving Grouns, firing about 10,000 rounds.

During his military career, he has been stationed in Texas, Massachusetts, Ohio, Montana, Washington, California and Georgia, and he also has been a professional boxer during his career.

Woman's Club

BY KATHERINE HAMMARGREN

Plans for the traditional May breakfast of the Woman's Club are underway, according to Mrs. Reginald H. Kelley, president of the club. Looked forward to as one of the outstanding events of the club year, the breakfast will be held Monday, May 3, at 1 p. m. in the main lounge of the Officers' Club.

In these days of rapid changes of stations and sudden departures, the breakfast is also a time to bid adieu to old and new friends at the Woman's Club's last meeting of the year, a year which has brought numerous changes in the personnel of the club and its group chairmen. It is hoped that attendance at the annual May breakfast will be a record one.

Reservations for the breakfast may be phoned to Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, F. B. 2622, Mrs. W. M. Spann, F. B. 2620, Mrs. E. R. Bowie, F. B. 2600, Mrs. C. D. York, dial 8, ask for 281 W, and Mrs. S. E. Faine, F. B. 3230. Price of the breakfast is eighty cents.

BUS FOR CHILDREN

Mrs. W. T. S. Roberts, finance chairman of the Fort Benning Nursery School, announces that the kindergarten bus is now picking up nursery school children. The bus picks up children between 8:30 and 9 a. m., along with the kindergarten children, and leaves the nursery school between 11:30 and 11:45 a. m. Arrangements for having your child delivered to the school, via bus, may be made by phoning the nursery school, F. B. 2896, the previous morning.

Those interested in the school feel very fortunate in having Mrs. Betty Baker Kadick as full-time supervisor. Mrs. Kadick, who replaced Mrs. Horatio C. Mason the last week in March after Mrs. Mason's husband received orders for a change of station, has supervised playground work at Schofield barracks, Hawaii. A graduate in physical education, she took her minor in kindergarten work. She is staying in Columbus during the time her husband is serving overseas.

OFFICIALS GRATIFIED

Officials of the school are tremendously gratified over the enrollment increase, due to the reduction of enrollment fees to a flat fee of $6. However, they are hopeful that even more mothers may become interested in the help the school can give them, especially since the school is to continue throughout the summer months. More outdoor equipment is being planned, with the promise of at least two large pieces for the yard.

124th Infantry Gives Promotions To 13 Officers

Thirteen officers in the 124th Infantry have been promoted to higher rank.

Captain Harold F. Milton, former special service officer and now executive officer of the Second Battalion in the 124th, was promoted to the rank of major. First Lieutenants Joel McMillan of Company K, Maxey S. Crews of Company E, Benjamin C. Price of Company G, and Hugh T. Lawson of Headquarters Company, Third Battalion, were raised to captains.

Second Lieutenants Thomas W. Joens of Headquarters Company, Second Battalion; Orville E. Bloch, of Company I; Lloyd H. Sotter, of Cannon Company; O. T. Dalton, Jr., of Company K; Dwight C. Dilworth, of Anti-tank Company; Robert H. Lewis, Jr., of Company L; William R. Murphy, of Headquarters Company, Third Battalion, and Cornelius O. Shanahan, Jr., of Anti-tank Company, were all promoted to the rank of first lieutenant.

Ancient Weapons Were Not So Simple After All, Soldier Researcher Learns

Twentieth Century Has No Corner On Inventiveness In Art Of War

During a class in field stripping a complicated machine gun a new recruit of the 10th Armored Division at Fort Benning sadly remarked that he wished he'd been born five centuries earlier when bows and arrows were in general vogue. After all, if you've been an interior decorator in civil life and don't know the difference between a bolt and a screw it is a bit tough to try and learn all about sear pins, splines, head space, etc., in three easy lessons.

However, distant fields are always greener and the rookie is greatly mistaken who thinks that all ye knights of olde had to do was to walk up to a guy and conk him over the head with a G. I. M. 1492 club. The twentieth century has no corner on the invention field and since warfare has always been one of the major occupations of mankind it is not surprising that human ingenuity has been so largely directed toward making it more complicated.

NOTHING NEW UNDER SUN

Whenever anything new is devised some bore always breaks into print with the statement that the Chinese thought of it in the year 3000 B. C. So it is with gunpowder which was known to the ancient Asiatics and, for that matter, to the pre-historic Europeans. It appears, however, according to an old volume contained in the Infantry School at Fort Benning that gunpowder was first used for incendiary purposes, in European warfare at least. The Greeks had flame throwing devices during the siege of Constantinople in the 15th century and, indeed the Arabs used it at the siege of Mecca in 690. Thus the Division of Chemical Warfare may be chagrined to know that fire tossing is just old stuff after all.

DOGS, CATS USED

By the same token the ingeniously named WAGS or K9 command, utilizing dogs in warfare, had jolly well better get a tight clutch on its laurels. It'll have to get up pretty early in the morning to surpass the imagination of our medieval forbears who not only used dogs but pussycats in the bargain. Nor did they confine the activities of these creatures to such pedestrian purposes as guard duty. As our illustrations (Plate 3) will attest, torches were attached to these beasts and they were sent skedadling off to set fire to the camp of the enemy. How, in the absence or remocte control, these unhappy pets could be kept on the right azimuth, our authority does not say.

ARMORED VEHICLES

Had an ancestor of General Newgarden been called upon to smite the heathen four centuries ago he too would have gone about the task with an armored vehicle which in contrast with our rugged simplicity of today the boys of the 16th centuries called a balista fulminatrix instead of an M4. At this point it may be remarked that if the lads of the maintenance battalion think they have a tough furrow to plow let them get a load of the guys inside the wheels of this 1552 edition of a tank. (Plate 1).

PACKS WERE HEAVIER

Let those selectees who groan at the encumbrance of a full field pack take an eyeful of the little number depicted in (Plate 4) which was the smart vogue for assault troops in the 16th century, and if you think cleaning the 50 calibre machine gun is hard and dirty work it may be a comfort to reflect that in the year 1505 you might have had to push patches through all 36 muzzles of the serpentine organ shown in plate (Plate 2).

Those whimsical present day warriors who name their scout cars, peeps, field guns, etc., with such names as "Beula" "Trelva," "Zowie," "Zombie" and the like may be interested to know that a two foot calibred German cannon of the 15th century has engraved upon it the legend "My name is Catherine, beware of my contents. I punish injustice. George Endorfer cast me. Sigismund, Archduke of Austria Anno 1404"

W. D. Urges V-Mail Use

Vital Cargo Space Must Be Conserved

Fort Benning authorities this week issued an urgent request to all soldiers in this command writting to relatives overseas that V-mail be used as a means of communication. It was also requested that individual officers and enlisted men advise their correspondents of its desirability.

The use V-mail will expedite the arrival and delivery of correspondence. In addition vital cargo space necessary for the successful prosecution of the war and the supply of our allies will be conserved.

The War Department issued this directive to all military personnel because of the ever-increasing volume of first-class mail slated for over-seas delivery.

Some people wake up when nudged in the elbow. Others have to be touched in the pocket book.

Colonel Davis Named TIS Ass't Executive

Officer Gets Two Promotions Same Week; Advanced From Major

Appointment as assistant executive officer of The Infantry School and promotion to the rank of lieutenant colonel came this week to Col. Jack I. Davis. He became the assistant executive officer of the school in the shift of assignments which made Col. Harold E. Potter, executive officer and Brigadier General Henry P. Perrine, commander of the School Troops Brigade. Perrine was formerly executive officer with Potter, the assistant executive.

Col. Davis has been at The Infantry School since May, 1941. He has served successively secretary of the Academic Department, acting inspector, billeting officer and personnel officer for the school, and assistant executive.

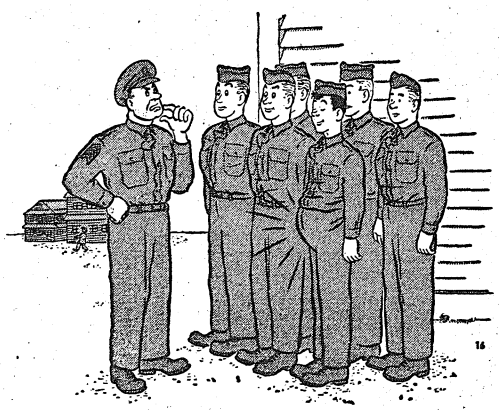
Col. Davis came to the school directly from C. C. C. duty where he had been a sub district commander for a year. Previously, in 1936-37, he had been a C. C. C. company commander in New Mexico. He was commissioned in the reserves in 1931. When not on active duty, Col. Davis was a practicing attorney in Dallas, Texas.

Caution Issued On Ration Book Use By Troops

Men Must Eat 10 Meals Per Week At Home To Rate Nos. 1-2

Fort Benning and Columbus authorities again stressed the fact that soldiers must eat at least 10 meals per week with their families to be eligible for ration book one or two.

Through misunderstanding of rules and regulations some persons have obtained books, who were not eligible for extra food allowances. A routine check is made by rationing authorities before a ration card is granted, but the cooperation of all soldiers and civilians is also necessary.



Military personnel both officers and enlisted men, who are eating in army mess halls have no right to separate ration allowances. Officers whose wives live in town must eat more than 10 meals with their families before they can apply for ration cards. The same is true of enlisted personnel. If an enlisted man is not on separate rations, and does not possess a letter to that effect from his commanding officer, he is not eligible for special food allowances.

Mrs. Claire S. Walker, chairman of the Muscogee county board warned that persons seeking to retain books to which they had no right would be subject to fine or other punishment. She added that there is ample food for all under the ration setup. However, abuse could result in serious impairment of the whole plan.

All persons are asked to check, and turn in allowance cards to which they are not eligible, immediately.

Georgia Bulldogs Play 300th Nine Here Tonight

Arclight Game In Gowdy Field Starts At 8:30

Cave or Dally To Hurl for Infantry Team in Opener

The University of Georgia Bulldogs invade Gowdy Field tonight for a diamond battle with the brand new 300th Infantry tossers at 8:30 under the arclights.

Although not as famous as their football brethren who gained everlasting Rose Bowl fame earlier this year, the baseball Bulldogs are nevertheless a scrappy collegiate nine that will provide a stern test for the 300th in its official diamond debut.

The first scheduled game for the new infantry outfit in the Infantry School League was carded for Monday night against the 124th Gators, but rain and extremely cold weather combined to wash out the tilt, making the Georgia fuss their initial outing.

FRIEDLUND COACH

Coached by Lieut. Bob Friedlund, former Michigan State athletic great, the three hundred lads have been working out for several weeks and boast a likely-looking squad of some 25 baseballers that may develop into one of the best at the post.

Friedlund's mound selection for tonight is expected to be either George Cave, formerly with the Baltimore Orioles in the International League, or Johnny Dally, who spent some time in the National League with the Boston Braves. Other members of the 300th hurling corps are Van Meter, Symsack, and Reeves.

LINE-UP IS SET

Either Van Horn or Drinkard will don the mask and pad for the soldier nine against the Bulldogs. The infield is expected to read Cobo at first, Palo at second, Eason at short, and Graham at the hot corner. Katowski, Kunkle and Mauer will be the starting gardeners for the 300th.

Little is known of the strength of this year's Georgia nine. Gone are Big Cliff Kimsey, Anderson, and some of the other stars of the 1942 Bulldogs who played series at Gowdy Field with the post team last spring.

However, the Red and Black has always turned out good nines, and this one will probably not be too much of an exception.

Baseball Star With 1st STR

Washington Played Big League Circuits

An ex-National Colored Baseball League star is with the 1st Student Training Regiment, in the Service Battalion's Company "B." He is Pfc. John Washington.

Private Washington is a native of Alabama, but for several years has been a resident of New York City. It was during his school days at Montgomery Grammar School, Ala., that Washington showed signs of having what it takes to top in the baseball world. Shortly after finishing his schooling he entered the professional teams, in whic hhe climbed from one success to another.

Johnny Washington known to his buddies as "Papa," due to his general advisory manner, is a first baseman. He has been connected with such teams as Montgomery Gray Socks, Birmingham Barons, Monroe Monarchs, Pittsburgh Crawfords and the New York Black Yankees. He played in several Northern and Southern States, until finally reaching the greatest Metropolitan City of the world.

In New York he reached the peak of his goal, and was acclaimed by all who saw him play. Leading magazines and newspapers throughout the Nation have paid tribute to his ability. During his career, which was interrupted by the draft, he had been up against the Homestead Grays, North Eagles and Philadelphia Stars.

Milton Rises From Private To Majority

Gator Executive Was Coach of Post's Grid Champions

Back fifteen years ago, a gangling, fifteen-year-old rookie, was enrolled in the ranks of Company H, 124th Infantry. That same lad, today is Major Harold F. Milton, Executive Officer, 2nd Battalion, according to a recent announcement by Colonel John D. Hill, Commanding Officer.

Major Milton, from Jasper, Fla., rose through the ranks and at one time, was first sergeant of Company H. He attended school at the University of Georgia, and upon graduating, received a reserve commission as 2nd Lieut. serve commission as 2nd lieutenant.

Major Milton resigned the reserve commission in 1939 to accept an appointment as second lieutenant in the National Guard, with the 124th, when the regiment was activated.

A lifelong friendship sprung up with another second lieutenant at that time, and the same friend is now the commanding officer 2nd Battalion, Major Louie C. Wadsworth. The two clung together tenaciously and through maneuvers were seemingly ever fighting the sham battles side by side.

ATHLETIC STAR

An athletic career, both participating and coaching was started by Major Milton back in 1929 through 1933, playing football for Lake City High School, Lake City, Florida. His coaching career found him winning the Georgia State Football Championship for Hartwell High School, Hartwell, Georgia, in 1940.

In 1942, Big Red, as the Major is known to the officers of the 124th, was selected to coach the Gator grid team besides being C. O. of Company H. His team went through the Post League undefeated and wound up winning the Fort Benning Post Conference Championship.

Great Pitching Marks 10th Armored Openers

Trio of One-Hit Games Recorded In Two Leagues

Brilliant pitching performances featured play in two 10th Armored Division diamond loops last week with six chuckers who toiled for the four winning nines giving up a total of but six safeties.

Motley and Canary, who divided the hurling chore for the 423rd Field Artillery, limited the 3rd Battalion, 54th Infantry club, to one bingle in setting the Infantrymen down by a 9-2 tally in a Sand Hill league scrap at Field 12-A.

In the other Sand Hill tussle, Kruszeskwi and Roslyn combined to hurl another one-hitter as the 11th Armored Regiment swamped the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry, 22-3, at Field No. 5. Hearn paced the victors' murderous attack on a trio of 2nd Battalion moundsmen, banging out six for six, and scoring five times.

Perhaps the most sparkling mound performance of the day was turned in by Lasing of Supply Battalion, in a Cusseta league duel at Field No. 2, the Supplyman fanning 16 batters in blanking Headquarters and Headquarters, Co., 13-0, with one safety. Monchak, player-coach and ace of this year's Cusseta league championship basketball team, was the big gun for the QM outfit, walloping two doubles and a single in four trips to the platter

In the other Cusseta league game, Quinlan turned in a three-hit hurling job in twirling Maintenance Battalion to a 10-2 victory over the 90th Reconnaissance Battalion at Field No. 9-2. The clever Maintenance elbower should have had a shutout but for an infield miscue with two down in the ninth.

A five-game card scheduled for Sunday, April 18, was washed out.

National Lefty Golf Champion Now In 3rd STR

George Buck Won Oddest Crown In Competitive Golf

Candidate George Buck of the 22nd Company, Third Student Training Regiment, is possessor of one of the oddest crowns in competitive golf—the National Lefty Open.

This so-called Lefty Open is similar to the ordinary tandem match play, with this difference—a right-hander plays all of his shots left-handed and vice-versa. This method of play might not seem so different to the "Sunday golfer" but a regular assailant of "Old Man Par" will say it presents many difficult and embarrassing situations.

However ,this is not the only golfing laurel Buck has acquired. He has participated in such major links events as the Augusta Masters Open and the Miami, Miami-Biltmore, LaGarre, Fairfield county, Connecticut and Providence opens.

Like many professional golfers. Candidate Buck started his career as a caddy. His first competitive golf was played as a member of his high school team in Norwalk, Conn., which he captained through two successful seasons.

Upon leaving school, Buck took a job as caddymaster at the Shorehaven Country Club in Norwalk where he eventually worked his way up to the position of professional. As representative of this club he won the Fairfield county open three times and captured the Connecticut and Providence open crowns. He also played such prominent sportsmen as Babe Ruth, Gene Sarazen and Gene Tunney.

Spokes Meet TIS Tossers In Two Week-End Battles On Gowdy Field Diamond

Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis, who for several years comprised the left side of the infield for the Washington Senators in the American League, will be in opposite dugouts Saturday and Sunday at Gowdy Field when the Camp Wheeler Spokes come here for a pair of tilts with the Infantry School all-stars.

Both former big leaguers came into the service more than a year ago, and this is the first time they will have met since their paths separated at that time. Travis holds down the shortstop slot for the Macon soldiers, while Lewis is expected to draw a starting outfield berth on the TIS nine.

The first game with the Wheelerites, arch-rivals of Benning teams for the past two years, will be staged under the arclights at 8:30 o'clock on Saturday night. The finale of the two-game setto will get under way Sunday afternoon at 1:00 p. m. Next week-end the rivals will conclude the series with two games at Camp Wheeler.

Camp Wheeler will bring a potent aggregation to Benning for the series here. The Macon lads have always held a diamond jinx over Benning entries and are out to continue their streak, but in the TIS crew they will crash into sturdy opposition, well-seasoned by several games with Birmingham and Atlanta of the Southern Association.

MANAGED BY ROSNER

The Spokes are managed by Milt Rosner, former Buffalo Bison catcher in the International League, and boast as many pro players on their roster as the Infantry School.

As a matter of fact, the entire Wheeler infield formerly played pro ball. Lamar Zimmerman of the Appalachian loop is the first baseman, with Tony Sabol from Toronto of the International at second, and Lou Insert of Louisville in the American Association at third. Travis, of course, plays short.

Whitey Bahrinsky from Buffalo of the International; Babe Ellis, a former Atlanta flychaser, and Jackie Netcher, once of Duke University, are the starting gardeners. Either Rosner himself of Jim Oglesby, former Alabama receiver, will do the catching.

HALLEY TO PITCH

In the mound department, the Spokes also boast plenty of experience. Foremost is Red Haley, who licked Benning twice last year, after having hurled for Kansas City, Newark and a short while with the New York Yankees. Harry Jordan and Hank Valko are other stellar curve-ball artists.

Captain Hank Gowdy will probably use his regular line-up for the Wheeler tilts, with Herb Moore, Ben Zientara, Charley Bamburger and Red McCluskey in the infield. Either Chet Dabbs or Elmer Neibler will start in left, with George Hill in center, and either Lewis or Garnet Mercer in right.

George Simmons and Merlyn Stoker will divide the catching duties, while Jim Prendergast, Lew Christie, George Cave, Joe Dickerson and Eden DeVolter are expected to see action on the pitcher's knoll. After their early game here Sunday, the Spokes will journey into Columbus for a tilt at Golden Park with the Columbus Foxes, making their third tussle within 24 hours.

V MAIL AVAILABLE

With the completion of two new sending and receiving stations in North Africa, V-Mail service is now available to al overseas installations, according to R. P. Richardson, Fort Benning postmaster.

Previously it had been necessary for V-Mail dispatches to and from North Africa to be carried in its original form, since V. Mail equipment was lacking in that sector.

Tigers Throw Weights Around

Professional Teaches Men To Toss Japs

The Japs will really know that something has hit them if they ever come close enough to the 11th Armored Regiment of the 10th Armored Division. It is not beyond the realm of possibility that the boys in the 11th will just drop their guns and start throwing Japs at Japs as if they were so many hand grenades.

The 11th is fast developing into an aggregation of strong men to whom a 60-pound dumbbell will soon seem as light as a drum major's baton. They are getting that way as the result of a weight-lifting and general body-building program that was instituted in the regiment several months ago with Cpl. M. D. Medved, a man who should give the great Atlas a run for his money any day now, as instructor.

Medved, a weight-heaver from away back, reported for induction into the army with two (2) 60-pound dumbells in his possession. (This is for the benefit of those unfortunates who thought a loaded barracks bag was hard to tote around). At his first station, Camp Seeley, Calif., Medved quickly became renowned for his ability to toss these weights around. Later he was transferred to Camp Lockett and there he found 22 men who were interested enough in body development to strain along with him. The Dedved Institute for the Building of Bulging Biceps was then and there launched.

SPEK STRENGTH

Since those days Medved's outfit— then the 11th Cavalry, which is now the 11th Armored Regiment—has taken to weight-lifting as G. I.'s take to chow. The weak as well as the normally strong have come around to his classes to try to grow muscles where none grew before. Special classes are conducted for men who are overweight and underweight. Charts are kept for everyone, and weight, height and measurement changes are checked each month.

Medved and his fellow herculeans have accumulated what they regard as one of the best equipped [illegible] gymnasiums in the army. The collection includes more than 30 bars which are loaded to 60 pounds for mass training; 12 abdominal boards, a deep-knee bending board which can also be used for leg pressing and supine pressing; one Olymoic set; a pair of iron boots, and a grip developer. In addition to this weight-lifting equipment, they have such standard items as Roman rings; a rope for rope-climbing, 24 small mats and one large mat; a set of stold bars, a horizontal bar, six cable sets; four light punching-bag stands, and a heavy bag, as well as a portable boxing ring.

"YER OUT" thumbs Umpire Guy Holtzclaw in a familiar motion at Gowdy Field where he is as much a part of the scenery as the scoreboard or backstop. An extremely popular fellow in an extremely unpopular job, this sergeant from the Academic Regiment is one rump who can back up his decisions with plenty of emphasis, as well as beef and brawn. hear what he said. But before the train left Friday, he made a little talk and we were standing about 10 feet away, so we could see and hear everything.

"As I recall it, the president said, 'This has been a wonderful tour and a splendid visit to Warm Springs. I sincerely hope that I may return to Warm Springs again during 1943'—just a few brief words like that."

The other drivers who made the trip included Cpl. Yanes Ozbolt, Co. A; Pfc. John L. Barrett, Co. D; Sgt. Lawrence Gress, Co. B; Sgt. Elmer Gaska, Co. H, all of the Academic regiment; Cpl. Casimer Venkler, Co. H, 300th Infantry, and Cpl. Laird E. Cogley, 7th Observation squadron, Lawson Field.

as do the aspiring paratroopers during the early stages of training at the school.

General Sanchez was particularly interested in the manner in which paratroopers were strapped into shock harness to acclimate them to the rigors of jumping. He then asked to be strapped into one himself.

Pvt. Elam Sanchez, a native of Albuquerque, N. M., who is assigned to the parachute school, acted as interpreter for the Mexicans at the school. Of Mexican descent, Private Sanchez, speaking in Spanish, described the mechanics of a parachute trooper's training at Fort Benning.

VISITS TIGERS

From the parachute school, the party of Mexicans went to the 10th Armored division area. Brig. Gen. Morrill Ross, commanding general of Combat Command B and acting division commander, in the absence of Maj. Gen. Paul W. Newgarden, escorted the guests throughout the Sand Hill area.

General Sanchez climbed in and out of tanks and tank destroyers inspecting the various instruments. He then donned coveralls with the rest of the party and went for a rugged ride in a light tank. General Ross acted as driver for the tank in which the Mexican general was riding.

During the tour in the Tenth armored division another private of Mexican descent, Pfc. Alvino Trevino, a member of Company A, maintenance battalion, and a native of Rio Grande, Tex., acted as an interpreter for the guests.

As he left, the 10th Armored division, General Sanchez remarked that he was greatly impressed by the various demonstrations of the U. S. army as staged at Fort Benning.

"It is a great pleasure to have been here," he said, "and to have had the honor of visiting Fort Benning, where each instructing organization in an illustration of the high efficiency of the commanding officers and instructors."

General Sanchez was greatly impressed by the high morale among the American soldiers, he said.

Accompanying the Mexican party were Maj. C. C. Valle, G. S. C., of the inter-American defense board, and Maj. Benjamin Muse, G. S. C., assistant foreign liaison officer, G-2, both from Washington, D. C.

Three Warrant Officers Raised To Senior Grade

Warrant Officers James D. Beck, M. J. Jammes, and William H. Beckett of the Fourth Service Command at Fort Benning have been raised to senior grade it was announced at Post headquarters today.

Mr. Beck and Mr. Beckett both have been assigned to Benning since entering service, and formerly served with the 29th Infantry. Mr. Beck, a native of Huntsville, Ala., enlisted in September, 1938 and came to post headquarters in May, 1941. At present he is one of the assistant post adjutants. Mr. Beckett joined the army in January, 1937 and was transferred to the finance department in January, 1940. He is a former resident of Danville, Ill.

Mr. Jammes formerly of Sanford, Fla., served with the 8th Infantry at Fort Screven, Ga., before coming to Benning in 1940. He is assistant chief of military personnel

All three received junior grade appointments in October, 1942.

Portuguese Visit Post This Week

Three officers of the Portuguese military mission who are in this country at the invitation of the War Department will arrive at Fort Benning Wednesday for a two-day inspection of training activities at the post.

The three men are Lt. Col. Joviano Lopes, Captain Jose Chabeleza Ferraz, and Captain Luis Camara Pins.

The party will be escorted through the Parachute School Thursday morning, will have lunch in the 10th Armored Division area and inspect activities there, and the finish off the day watching demonstrations of the Infantry School. They will be entertained at dinner in the evening at the Officers' club, and leave Fort Benning Friday.

over the week end. American bombers also pounded away at the U-boat bases at Brest and Lorient.

Pvt. Joe DiMaggio last week stepped up to the plate for the first time since the World Series of 1942—and got a walk. Sluggin' Joe played outfield for the Santa Ana (Cal.) Army Air Base nine when they crossed bats with the Fullerton Junior College team. "In the army I lead the sweet, pure life," said Joe. "I weight 208 pounds—and that's right on the button." He's a physical instructor at the Base.

Pay Station Opens Tuesday

Scheduled to open Tuesday, April 27, is the new attended telephone pay station which will be located in the space formerly occupied by the old Exchange soda fountain, on the corner of Vibbert avenue and Ingersoll street.

Arranged through cooperation between local military authorities and telephone company representatives, the attended station will have two operators on duty at hours as yet to be announced, who will assist soldiers in placing local and long distance calls. This service will be available seven days a week. During periods when the operators are not on duty the station will remain open for regular phone service.

PROVEN SUCCESSFUL

Facilities similar to this are now offered from the Ninth Street USO in Columbus and have proven so successful that it was decided to place an installation of this type on the post. By this means more efficient service between caller and called parties is assured.

A hostess will be on hand to help callers obtain the correct numbers of desired parties from the assortment of out-of-town books, which will be on hand in the lounge of the office.

In addition a comfortable waiting lounge provides space for soldiers who have to wait for their connections. Postcards, writing paper, and pen and ink will be given free of charge so that men will be able to take advantage of the intervening time. Also a number of periodicals and magazines will be available for those who want to spend their time reading.

SPEEDIER TRANSFER

Although the actual station to station connections cannot be speeded up due to war time load, by having the caller and operator together, speedier transfer of the calls can be accomplished, and the hostess will have a sufficient amount of change on hand to avoid any delay which might result from that cause.

Furnishings have been lent through cooperation of the post special service office. Actual installation is being handled by the telephone company with help from the post signal office and post engineer office.

Major Beall Is Lt. Colonel

Is Infantry School Ass't Adjutant General

Major Claudius A. Beall, Jr., assistant adjutant general at the Infantry School, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel, it is announced by Major General Leven C. Allen, commandant of the school.

Colonel Beall, a native of Dublin, Ga., has spent all of his army career in this vicinity. He was commissioned in the reserves upon graduation from Georgia Tech in 1932. Called to active duty as a first lieutenant directly from CCC work in August, 1940, he was assigned to the Infantry School as assistant adjutant general.

Colonel Beall held that assignment until three months ago when he was sent on detached service to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas to attend the Command and General Staff School there. He returned to his post at the Infantry School last week.

JUDY J. MORRILL

Michigan Girl Lawson Queen

Coronation Rites Set For April 23

Miss Judy J. Morrill, a senior at the University of Michigan sponsored by Tech Sergeant Andrew Kyle of the 50th Troop Carrier Squadron, was chosen as Queen of Lawson Field from entries submitted by enlisted men stationed at Lawson Field. The contest, sponsored by the Base Special Services Department, closed at midnight March 26.

Miss Morrill, a typical American girl, is one of Michigan's loveliest girls. She is 22 years of age, 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighing 110 pounds and has brown hair and blue eyes.

She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Morrill now residing in Detroit, Mich. Dr. Morrill is Superintendent of the Detroit Receiving Hospital. Upon completing high school in Detroit, Miss Morrill entered Duke University at Durham, North Carolina and matriculated there for two years in the study of arts and literature.

She then entered the University of Michigan where she is pursuing the same course. While a student at Duke University, Miss Morrill became a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority. Swimming is her favorite sport.

The ceremonies will be opened with the crowning of Miss Morrill as Queen of Lawson Field at the start of a formal dance to be held in her honor on the night of April 23 at the Recreation Hall.

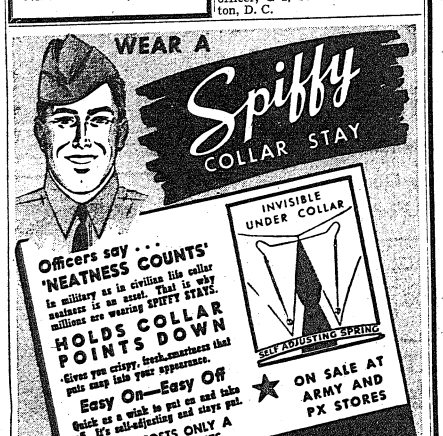
Colored Library Opens April 25

Formal opening of the Club Library for colored troops at Service Club No. 5 in the Harmony Church area will be observed by a musical tea, Sunday evening, April 25, from 5 to 7 o'clock, it was announced today by the service club staff which is sponsoring the tea.

Although the club's library began serving soldiers in the area shortly after the arrival of the librarian, Mrs. Hazel Reed, on February 17, the Easter tea will mark the official opening. During the afternoon, music will be furnished on the piano by Sgt. Colonius Davis of the Second Student Training Regiment.

Scribe Trains With 3rd STR

Charles Norman, internationally known newspaperman and author, turned down an offer of a government public relations job to join the Infantry as a private and now is undergoing the rigorous program of the 17th Company, Third Student Training Regiment.



After he acquires his second lieutenant's gold bars, Candidate Norman hopes to lead one of the units that some day will wrest France from the Nazis. Norman has a special affection for the City of Paris, having broken into the newspaper craft there as a member of the staff of the now defunct Paris Times. On that paper he worked alongside Vincent Sheean, famous war reporter and author, and under supervision of G. H. Archimbault, now a New York Times correspondent.

Norman was a staff writer and editor of The Associated Press for many years, and was featured by the newspaper PM before entering the service. He was the author of the pre-Pearl Harbor defense show, "Proudly We Hail".

COVERED DUST STORMS

AP nominated Norman for the Pulitzer Prize for reporting in 1937 after his series on dust storms and floods hit the front pages of member papers throughout the country and earned the praise of Vice-President Wallace. The series was entitled: "Enemies of the Earth; What Dust Storms and Floods mean to America"; Norman interviewed many celebrities while with AP and also wrote many pieces on the theater and sports.

That day we've all been looking forward to—that day when we'll each of us blossom out in our nicest and newest spring finery—THAT day is just a few days off. Yes, Easter has come. And with Easter comes the advent of a new season in women's wear.

But, as Easter comes and goes, our colorful, light clothes will not then be relegated to the closet. Instead they will be the fashion to introduce us to summer and the grand selections of women's apparel and accessories which are available in our stores here in Columbus.

Not since the pre-automobile era has an American been more of a pedestrian. We walk. We walk to church. We walk to win. We care about our shoes the way a soldier cares about his gun and his shoes! They must be soft and light, well-fitting, long-living and handsome to be altogether right. Those who walk about, talk about the white shoes at MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY. These will, without a doubt, be on many prancing feet this summer. The comfort, the flattery of shoes that fit like part of your foot, are just two of the joys you'll know when you wear any of the smart shoes in this interesting display. I Miller, Florsheim, Rice-O'Neil, Madamoiselle, College Bred and Vitality shoes are all smartly executed in tie, pump, oxford and sandal styles. Each pair is stamped with the skilled craftsmanship, the excellent taste, the infinite quality that you cherish now more than ever. You're more likely aware of the tremendous possibilities of white shoes. They complement all the colors of the rainbow and if you've not tried it before, why not let white sandals or pumps peek prettily beneath the folds of your summer evening gown. Whatever type white shoe you seek, be it of kid, linen, buckskin, it's waiting for you at Miller-Taylors.

Whatever be your demands for music, you'd best visit MONTGOMERY-WARD at 1201 Broadway and view their fine selection of records. Classical and popular music are both featured in the music section of the store. A large assortment of Victor, Columbia, and Decca records are on display and new numbers are arriving every day. In this day of hustle and bustle, there is nothing quite like enjoying your phonograph—be it in the morning, afternoon or at night. Scores of hours of entertainment are afforded by the phonograph which is rapidly becoming a "must" in every home. Whether you posses an electric phonograph or a hand-wind machine, you'll profit, by visiting this store's music department to make your selection of records. You will also be interested in Montgomery Ward's display of needles. Standard steel needles, which most of us use, are readily available. But, what interests a lot of phonograph addicts, is the "lifetime" needle which affords hours and hours and hours of music without ever a sign of year. Take your music seriously, view this store's popular music department and make your selections.

Here in Columbus, SEALYS is the home of the world-famous Habitmakers, Eisenberg and McMullen lines. Mrs. Sealy is intensely proud of her new shipment of summer styles which are arriving each day. And well she might be proud, for each and every one of these dresses is outstanding. All have been made with particular attention to comfort, fashion and just plain wearability. In this collection are cottons, rayons and crepes. Of course, all the cottons and many of the rayons can be washed successfully over and over again. I was especially delighted, and I know you'll be too, with the deep hems, corked seams and expert workmanship evident in all these frocks. They have been made to wear for the duration and even after that. The colors alone are unusual, spunk green, pop pink, click blue, chartreuse, soft aqua and spotless white, just to mention a few. Sealys also has a very inexpensive line of casual cottons in smart, but simple styles ideal for shopping and every day wear. Seersuckers, chambrays, dotted swiss, pique and ginghams are included in this colorful selection. To add the final touch to your summer outfit this shop has an intriguing array of Eisenberg jewelry. Earrings, pins and necklaces of original design worn with your new frocks will make you look like the latest issue of Vogue.

Statistics show the average man spends one-third of his life sleeping. This being the case, why not have him comfortable and fashionable during these nightly visits with Morpheus? CHANCELLOR CO., INC., foremost in men's furnishings, has a vast selection of cool, lightweight robes and pyjamas. One especially fine robe and pyjama combination of American Fuji cloth (wash spun rayon) is priced reasonably and is made attractively in a soft bamboo shade trimmed with tan. The robe is made also in a soft rust tone. Other wash robes for men are made of terry cloth and striped seersucker. Chancellor's also has fine Egyptian long-staple broadcloth pyjamas, imported from England. Available shades are royal or light blue, green, tan or rust. A striking paisley-patterned robe pictured recently in Esquire is suitable for and would complement any of the above mentioned pyjamas. These pyjamas still are made with the English coat style collar and ocean pearl buttons. The WPB recently ruled out English coat style collars and ocean pearl buttons on men's pyjamas, but Chancellor's had a large supply on hand and are still able to furnish the men folks with smarter looking robes and pyjamas.

This year as in past years, the shopping of many for spring clothes has been left to the last minute. But, fortunately, it is still not too late to do something about this delay. The superb selection of clothes at KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC., makes shopping such a simple matter that you'll still be able to have what you want in time for Easter. If you're looking for a print dress to wear this year, this shop has a grand supply of original prints in polka dots, flowers or geometric designs on backgrounds of black, or navy or lovely colors. Grey appears to be the outstanding color for women's wear this spring. And why not? It flatters the woman with grey hair and is equally becoming on young women, too. Adding, perhaps a touch of white or bright color, will make your grey gabardine suit or crepe dress a truly lovely costume. Or maybe you're looking for a dark sheer to wear with a very light weight coat. Black or navy sheers, clarion-climaxed with sparkling touches of white and topped by your new chapeau, will make you a standout in this Sunday's Parade. If you have postponed your Easter shopping from week to week and suddenly realize the time has come to do something about it all, dash down to Kayser-Lilienthal's, Inc, and you'll find the quality and style you cherish.

War Knows No Specialties, Doctors Learn

However Wartime Training Will Benefit All Practitioners

By MAJ. FRANK I. CIOFALO, Reg't Surgeon, 1st STR

This war has taught us that medical doctors are more important on the battlefield as general practitioners than as specialists, and that every doctor regardless of his specialty training in civilian life must be able to handle any medical or surgical emergency.

The war is changing super specialists and doctors are beginning to treat any kind of a medical problem presenting itself.

No doubt, the individual medical officer will benefit from this war-time training. An obstetrician in civilian life would only deliver babies, but the same obstetrician in the Army, especially on the battlefront will be called to treat medical diseases like malaria, emergency surgical traumatic wounds and practice sanitation and preventative medicine. This will be one of the outstanding medical achievements of this war: making doctors in all branches of medicine who can handle any situation anytime, anyplace.

MAY FEEL UNEASY

At the beginning a specialist may feel a little uneasy to treat cases outside of his line on the battlefield, knowing he is the only medical officer present at that particular time and place. Something must be done immediately in this emergency and he will then dig in and do a good job. He will be prepared to do it as well as when he completed his internship.

It is true that many of the specialists have been and are now assigned to Station and General Hospitals here and abroad, but in the future with more Medical men being assigned to the front lines, specialists will be called on to act as Battalion and Regimental Surgeons to treat all emergencies as they occur. These specialists will welcome a chance to treat a variety of diseases and war wounds encountered, and the knowledge obtained will benefit their future practices when this war is won.

WAAC's Buy Many Bonds

Girls Are Allotting 16 Per Cent of Pay

One hundred per cent behind the war bond program is Fort Benning's 43rd Post Headquarters Company of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps whose 146 members are setting aside 16 per cent of their pay for war savings securities each month.

Lt. Evelyn Rothrock, commanding officer of the group said that every person in the outfit had a war bond deduction and that of the company's payroll, $8,158, a total of $1,337 was going to the purchase of war bonds.

Considering that many of the subscribers are making little more than $50 per month the showing is considered outstanding. Typical members of this unit are Auxiliary first class Erma E. Latham of Niota, Tenn., who authorized a deduction of $37.50 from her monthly pay of $56, and Auxiliary Bessie Levin of New York City, who receives only $50 monthly and is investing half of it in war savings bonds.

HIGHEST PERCENTAGE

While several other units on the post have 100 per cent of their members subscribing to the pay reservation plan, Major George Fink, post war bond officer, said that the 43rd company had the highest percentage deducted of any outfit on the post, the average deduction of each member being $9.15.

During the month of March, purchases by military personnel stationed at Fort Benning totaled $365,000 and civilian employees invested enough to bring the post average over $400,000 for that period.

Civilian employees under the jurisdiction of the Infantry School recently reached the "90 per cent-19-per cent" goal set by the Secretary of War for participating under the pay reservation plan, and are now eligible to fly war department banners in their headquarters.

Hit Kits Are Popular Here

Although the third monthly issue has yet to be released, the Army's "Hit Kit" folio of popular songs is definitely a huge success from all reports and indications.

These Hit Kits are released through Colonel Charles C. Finnegan, Special Service Officer and it has been necessary for the Colonel to request a greater number of these folios to meet the increasing demand here at Fort Benning.

The reaction is the same in all the military camps all over the country, Major Howard C. Bronson and Captain Harry Salter (ex-CBS maestro), in charge of contacting the music publishers, are planning another 250,000 copies, in addition to the 1,000,000 song sheets printed up every month. Among other factors contributing to the need for more Hit Kits is the increasing number of femme recruits — WAVES, WAACS AND SPARS—have been eager for these Hit Kits.

BEST TUNES

Selections for the first issue, released in February, were: 'This is the Army, Mr. Jones.' 'Move It Over,' 'Sixpence,' 'Praise the Lord.' 'Craziest Dream' and 'There Are Such Things.'

The March (No. 2) Hit Kit comprised of 'Marching Along Together' (new special war lyric); 'I've Heard That Song Before', 'Coming in on a Wing and a Prayer', 'There's a Star-Spangled Banner Waving Somewhere,' 'This Time' and 'I Kissed Your Picture Goodnight.'

The third issue soon to be released contains such popular favorites as 'Brazil,' 'Black Magic,' 'You'd Be So Nice to Come Home To,' and several well known oldtimers, 'Margie.' 'Wait Till the Sun Shines Nelly,' and 'Bells of St. Mary.'

Alice Pacht Sings To Tigers

Baritone Labowsky, 11th Armored Band Included On Program

Alice Pacht, mezzo-soprano who formerly sang in Hollywood, and Pvt. Theodore Labowsky, who developed his powerful baritone voice while working in a coal mine, were featured in a concert presented Friday evening, April 16, by the 11th Armored Regiment special service office. The 11th Armored Regiment band, conducted by T-Sgt. Dante Perfumo, accompanied the soloists and Pvt. Don Whitman served as narrator.

Miss Pacht, who sings three times weekly over the Columbus station WRBL, sang two classical numbers, Tschaikowsky's overture "1812" and Camillo De Nordis' "The Universal Judgment," and two semi-classical songs, Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and Victor Herbert's "A Kiss in the Dark." She also sang a duet with Pvt. Labowsky, "Canadian Capers," by Chandler, Whie and Cohen.

Pvt. Labowsky presented Youmans' "Tea for Two," Herbert's "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life" and "Gypsy Love Song," and a medley overture entitled "Bits of Remick's Hits," arranged by J. B. Lampee.

The 11th Armored Band opened the program with a march and closed with "Continental Serenade," by Morton Gould.

3rd Armored Given Regimental Colors

General Newgarden Makes Presentation At Ceremonial

Standing before the Third Armored Regiment, drawn up in formal review last Saturday morning on a Tiger Division review field, Major General Paul W. Newgarden, Commanding General of the Tenth Armored Division, presented the officers and men with a gift that each regiment receives only once during its lifetime—the regimental colors.

In accepting the regimental colors for the officers and men, Lt. Col. William T. S. Roberts, the regiment's executive officer, promised that "these colors are now the same as our honor, and will be defended in battle with our lives."

Immediately after the presentation, the 3rd Armored Regiment band swung into the "Tenth Armored Tiger," written and composed by two of the bandsmen last November, and dedicated to Maj. Gen. Newgarden.

As the regiment passed in review before the Commanding General and Col. Thomas M. Brinkley, regimental commander of the Dragon regiment, the national colors and the regimental colors were carried together for the first time.

"It gives me more than usual pleasure to present this magnificent regiment with its colors," declared Maj. Gen. Newgarden, "I know what this regiment has already accomplished; I am certain that its future record will be as bright."

FIRST UNIT

The 3rd Armored Regiment is the first unit in the division to receive its colors from the War Department.

In his expression of thanks to Maj. Gen. Newgarden, Lt. Col. Roberts replied:

"The 3rd Armored Regiment is proud to accept these colors from the War Department through its Commanding General of the Tiger Division. In our minds and hearts we will always be Tigers, but at the same time, we will remember too that we are Dragons."

A moment later Sgt. Richard D. Gates took the colors and marched back to take his place beside Sgt. John M. Cunko, who carried the national colors throughout the presentation and review.

Designed by the War Department for the 3rd Armored Regiment, the suggestions of Col. Brinkley were adopted into the distinctive insignia. On the regimental colors, this insignia appears superimposed as a shield on the body of the American eagle, which is placed on a field of Kelly Green with white borders—the colors of the Armored Force. The basic idea behind the dragon motif was that the dragon, heavily scaled, breathing fire, and holding a sword in his mouth, typified the mobility, fire power, armor and striking power of an armored regiment. The motto "Forged of Bravery and Steel" was chosen by the officers and men of the regiment to accompany the distinctive insignia.

NO METAL INSIGNIA

Although no metal insignia were manufactured for wear, due to the shortage of critical materials, the nickname of "3rd Armored Dragons" spread quickly over Fort Benning when the name was first used at the opening of the football season last year.

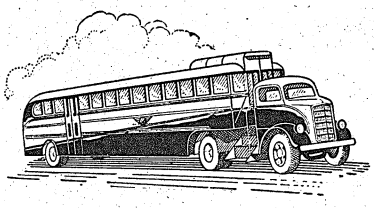
By way of reminder ,the 3rd Armored Band also struck up with the march, "Brave Rifles," the official song of the 96-year-old 3rd Cavalry, which furnished the basis of the cadre which helped form the 3rd Armored Regiment at its activation last year.

O. C.'s March Four Miles In 23 Minutes

Officer candidates of the 11th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, are confident they established a new record for time in moving a class cross country when they marched four miles in 23 minutes returning from a recent problem.

On the morning of the same day, the class, moving out of of its bivouac area, traversed country which lacked a single path for two miles in 13 minutes.

Major Commends Gator Foursome For Fire-Fighting



Befitting the true 124th Gator spirit and initiative, Staff Sergeant Milburne Cassidy, (Co. K), Staff Sergeant Arthur P. Metcalf, Sergeant Charles A. Tatum of Hq. Co. 3rd Battalion and Ex-Gator Officer Candidate, William H. Brown, formerly of that company, put on an act of heroism last week, in extinguishing a fire that raged in an Opelika store.

The event happened as they were returning from a week-end of frolic from Roanoke, Ala. While passing through Opelika the men noted clouds of smoke pouring from a down-town store. Upon closer observation, they saw the firemen waging a losing battle to the raging fire. Without hesitation the group pitched into the fight. After several precarious hours of hard work the fire was put out.

The mayor of Opelika, appreciative of the boys' effort, that he treated them to the largest steak they've seen in a long time and insisted they accept the cash award he offered. In commending the men, the mayor pointed out that if had it not been for their unselfish deed, the city would have lost thousands of dollars in property.

That Extra Something!
...You can spot it every time

THE lovely entertainer goes to Panama to sing songs and cheer our troops. Flowers and ice-cold Coca-Cola greet her. Soldiers want to enjoy a Coke with her and talk. A pretty girl and a Coke . . . just like home.

In Iceland, the news told how troops had a good-natured fight to get the first Cokes they found available. Such are the stories from our fighting men everywhere.

To mean so much to so many, a drink must have something extra—in taste, in goodness and, above all, in true refreshing qualities. Just to sip ice-cold Coca-Cola is to find all those things. Yes, all the difference between something really refreshing and just something to drink. There's no comparison.

Heart-warming applause greets the American girl who sings to the boys at distant army posts. It's like a touch of home . . . as is the pleasant pause for refreshment with ice-cold Coca-Cola.

Maybe it's a make-shift dressing room, but Uncle Sam's soldiers have given it a homelike touch . . . fresh flowers and a frosty bottle of Coke. Who could ask for more?

Even with war and so many Coca-Cola bottling plants in enemy-occupied countries, our fighting men are delighted to find Coca-Cola being bottled in so many places all over the globe.

The best is always the better buy!

Officer Gives War Bond For Best Bond Essay

$50 Certificate To Be Awarded Academic Reg't Man

The new war bond drive got off to a flying start this week when Major Marvin W. Jared, executive officer of the Academic Regiment, plunked down the cash for a $1000 war bond. At the same time the Major purchased a fifty-dollar bond as a prize for the enlisted man in the regiment who writes the best letter on "Why a Soldier Should Buy War Bonds."

"It is obvious why civilians should purchase bonds," the Major said, "but now we want to show why service men also find it important to invest in war bonds."

Gleefully accepting the Major's two checks, Captain Charles B. Taylor, regimental bond officer, referred to the regiment's citation last February by Major George Fink, post bond officer, as having "the finest war bond record at Fort Benning and undoubtedly one of the most outstanding in the nation." The Captain vowed that despite various changes in the regimental set-up and the Army's war bond purchase plan, "the Academic Regiment will not lose its habit of breaking records."

NEW DRIVE ON

Enlisted men were formerly permitted a minimum pay reservation of $1.25 for bonds. Under the new plan, the lowest monthly pay reservation is $3.75. During the days of Class A allocation the regiment once soared to within a decimal point of one hundred per cent in its bond subscription. The purpose of the new drive is to maintain the regiment's record percentage even while working with the higher minimum, the Captain pointed out.

Contest letters for the fifty-dollar prize should be written or typed on one side of the paper only, be limited to 250 words, and delivered to the news-room of the Regimental Mirror. Noon of Tuesday, May 11, 1943, is the absolute deadline for the contest.

JUDGING COMMITTEE

The prize-winning letter will be chosen by a committee of three judges, M. Sgt. W. L. Chaffin, Sgt. Milton Luban, and Pvt. Walter Miller. The winner will receive his award, together with a hearty military handshake, from the Major himself.

According to figures for the month of March, Companies B and D and the Special Service Detachment were leading the bond parade with ninety-eight per cent subscribing. Company F slapped down the largest cash amount. Pay reservations for the month added up to $15,266.25, cash purchases piled up to $11,850, leaving men of the regiment with $27,116.25 worth of war bonds for last month.

French General Lauds Bayonet

Leader Sees Common Trials and Victories

The Bayonet again has been singled out for commendation.

Major General M. E. Bethouart, chief of the French Military Mission in Washington, D. C., sent a letter to Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post, lauding the Bayonet's editorial which welcomed a class of French officers here where they are undergoing training at The Infantry School.

The Bayonet's editorial written in French was published two weeks ago. The letter from General Bethouart follows:

"My Dear General:

"I have just finished reading the extremely moving editorial which appeared in the "Bayonet" welcoming the "Soldiers of France."

"It is a clear sign of the generous hospitality Fort Benning is extending to the French volunteers. I know this article reflects the warm feeling of the American people for France, physical and spiritual, as the article so aptly stated.

"I trust the ties of the Franco-American friendship will be still strengthened by common trials and common victories.

"Vivent la France et l'Amerique eternelles.

"Sincerely yours,

"M. E. Bethouart,
Major General Chief,
French Military Mission."

Barnes Boys Bosom Buddies, Bunk-mates

Add to the growing list of coincidences in this war the records of two men named Barnes, both now of the 18th Company, Third Student Training Regiment.

Lloyd E. Barnes of Little Rock, Ark., and Frank J. Barnes of Manistique, Mich., recently found themselves occupying adjoining bunks in the first squad of the company's first platoon. They began comparing notes and this is what they found:

Both were born at the same hour on the same day, midnight, July 4. Each has three brothers and three sisters and each is the baby of his family. Both have two brothers in the service. Both enlisted and were sent to foreign service in 1942 and both were machine gunners. Both applied for OCS on the same day and, each coming from an opposite side of the world, landed in the United States at the same time. They arrived at Fort Benning the same week and were assigned to class on the same day.

Both Barnes are in the same firing order of the same platoon of the same . . . ad infinitum.

Colonel Coutts Is Parachute School A. C.

Veteran Paratrooper Served On General Eisenhower's Staff

Named to succeed Colonel Garland H. Williams, who has served as assistant commandant of the U. S. Parachute School, at Fort Benning, since September, 1942, is Lt. Col. James W. Coutts, formerly executive officer of the 517th Parachute Infantry Regiment, according to an announcement made by General George P. Howell, commandant of the school.

Colonel Coutts, a veteran paratrooper, commanded "B" company of the 501st Parachute Battalion, one of the first three jumping companies organized. The Colonel at that time a captain, became battalion S-3 when the unit moved to Panama. Promoted to major in February, 1942, he returned to the United States to become a battalion commander with the 502nd Parachute Regiment. During the summer of that year, Colonel Coutts attended Command and General Staff School, Leavenworth, Kansas.

HELPED ORGANIZE 507TH

Upon returning to Benning in August he helped organize the 507th Regiment and became its executive officer. Following that he left under secret orders for duty in England. There he served on General "Ike" Eisenhower's staff, planning parachute operations in connection with the coming invasion of Africa. The operation completed, Col. Coutts returned home in March to join the 517th as executive officer, which position he held until recently.

A West Point graduate of the class of 1932, he served with the 27th, 28th, and 1st Infantry before becoming a parachute officer. He attended the Infantry School during 1936-37, and has seen duty in Hawaii, where he gained fame as coach of the 27th Infantry boxing team.

Colonel Coutts is married and a native of Philadelphia, Penn.

PROMOTIONS

Promotions of 10 men in Company C, Service Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment, have been approved by Col. R. H. Lord, regimental commander, as follows:

To Technician, Fourth Grade—Frank M. Stevenson, Robert Dixon, Harry Coy and Lonnie Johnson.

To Technician, Fifth Grade—John Johnson, Clemie Robinson, Albert Flemings, Willie D. Alexander, Dallas Parks and Claudius Wingate.

100 Per Cent Goal Asked For Insurance

All Personnel Requested To Take Life Policies Up To Limit Allowed

"A goal of 100 per cent of military personnel insured with $10,000 Government Insurance each has been announced by General George C. Marshall," according to Lt. John W. Inzer, post insurance officer.

"To help accomplish this new legislation just approved provides that any person in active service and while in such service shall be granted National Service Life Insurance without medical exabination and without medical history statement, upon application therefor and payment of premium within one hundred and twenty days after April 12, 1943," he added.

Lt. Inzer went on to explain that all military personnel who have less than $10,000 Government Life Insurance will be informed immediately of their current right to apply without statement of health or physical examination, and will be urged and assisted in taking out the maximum.

EXAMPLE OF NECESSITY

According to word received from the War Department, casualty lists show a high percentage of military personnel have no Government Life Insurance or only a ftw thousand dollars. This situation may become very embarrassing as it brings about conditions where some dependents in the same community receive substantial monthly benefits whereas others receive nothing or insufficient amounts for reasonable needs.

Once the goal of 100 per cent is reached, Lt. Inzer said, all reductions would be discouraged unless there is a good reason therefor, approved by the commanding officers and made of record in the individual's service record.

Under the new legislation, he explained that applicants would secure coverage notwithstanding rejection of any prior application for such insurance on any grounds whatsoever. This also covers the right to increase current policies.

Insurance Form 350 should be used to apply for insurance and AGO Form 28 should be used in making class N allotments from pay for premiums. Applications should specify that insurance is effective immediately, and mailed directly to Veteran's Administration, Washington, D. C. Allotment forms should be mailed directly to Chief of Finance, War Department, Washington, D. C. If necessary forms are not available, the War Department has authorized that they be reproduced locally.

Blue Uniform Out For Duration Plus

Authority for the wearing of the officer's blue uniform has been revoked, according to a War Department announcement received at Post Headquarters today.

The notice states that the action is being taken in order to conserve critical materials and labor and because there are inadequate facilities for proper cleaning of this uniform. Except as specifically authorized or prescribed by the War Department, no dress blue uniforms will be worn for the duration and six months thereafter.

Summer coats for officers and the white dress uniform will remain optional and may be worn as authorized.

War Is Termed Battle For Religious Freedom

Fulton Lauds Seder Celebrants For Part In 'Greatest Army'

Hundreds of Jewish soldiers stationed at Fort Benning who attended the huge Seder Supper at Ninth Street USO club Monday night heard Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, post commander, term the observance a great manifestation of one of the four cardinal freedoms, that of worship.

The Seder tendered by the Jewish Welfare board and the Columbus Jewish community was the largest community supper in observance of the eight-day Passover festival in the fourth service command and probably the largest in the nation.

Introduced to the vast throng of soldiers of the Jewish faith present by Chaplain Samson A. Shain, General Fulton said that his aduience formed a part of an army that is well on its way to becoming the greatest in the history of the world.

"The great object of this army is to fight for the four freedoms. Tonight you are participating in one of them—freedom of worship. To guarantee the future of these freedoms will require each of our officers and enlisted men an eagerness to work, an eagerness to endure and an eagerness to carry through any missions given them.

"We have been involved in this world maelstrom for 16 months but in that period the members of the Jewish faith have demonstrated by their superb work that they measure up to the best traditions written down in our army's glorious history.

"Having witnessed this work on all hands at our post, I welcome this opportunity to appear here tonight as the commanding general of Fort Benning and to bring to this assembly the greetings of the entire personnel stationed here. We salute you with admiration and gratitude."

Amateur Cinemactor Has Never Seen Self In Film

Still Awaits Local Showing of 'Shadow Of A Doubt'

Almost every motion picture actor has a story to tell of his struggle to break into pictures.

But with Officer Candidate James B. Keegan of the 11th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, it is different. Keegan simply stumbled into a movie part last July and his only struggle has been trying to see the picture in which he and his wife had "bit" roles.

Keegan's home is in Santa Rosa, Calif., where Universal's currently popular "Shadow of a Doubt" was filmed. A teller in a bank which forms an important background for the picture, Keegan was enlisted by Director Alfred Hitchcock as a member of the cast. When women were needed for the film, Keegan brought his wife down and the couple spent many interesting evening and Sunday hours as bank employes in front of the lens. While so engaged, they became friendly with the stars, Joseph Cotten and Teresa Wright.

"Shadow of a Doubt" was released after Keegan had entered the Army. While in basic training at Camp Wheeler, Ga., he watched the local movie programs for the film, which finally did appear—the day he left for Fort Benning. Several days after his arrival here, he learned the picture had been shown the day he reported to The Infantry School.

Some second-run theater is going to have a very interested patron one of these days.

Army Vehicles' Names Reflect G.I.'s Fancy

When you see an army truck or a peep with some name like "Harpy" or "Satan" stencilled in white letters on the olive drab surface you're probably right in thinking it was so christened in honor of some soldier's mother-in-law or first sergeant.

However, the naming of these vehicles is not impelled merely by soldierly whimsy but serves a very useful purpose since it allows the soldier to pick out his own "Dearie" or "Hot Mama" with greater ease.

A modern army unit contains an enormous number of various type cars, and one peep, for example, looks as like another as do two peas. True all of them are numbered but it's done by a system which seems complicated to an outsider and which is indeed not too simple to a military man. Therefore a name is much easier to remember and for that reason one finds that all over the army such vehicles as peeps, trucks, tanks, and "tank-busters" will have a title besides a numeral.

NO SYSTEM

There is no arbitrary system of choosing these games, the matter being left to the unit concerned. Sometimes one will see such symbolical names as "Sawbones" on an ambulance or "chowhound" on a mess truck. Menacing terms such as "Hitler's Woe" or "Slapajap" or occasionally selected.

Probably the name of the driver's girl friend is the commonest inspiration and there are plenty of two and a half "Betty Mae's" and half-track "Hannah's" in any motorized unit. However, place-names like "New Yorker," classical allusions such as "Jupiter" and literary allusions such as "Gone with the Wind" are widely used. This is one department in which the army man's fancy is, within certain limits, allowed free play.

Benning Soldiers Invited To Hear Gounod Mass

Fort Benning military personnel has been invited to attend a special Easter Sunday service at the First Presbyterian church in Columbus at 9 p. m. (EWT), Dr. J. Calvin Reid, pastor, announced today.

A group of 35 voices, composed of the choirs of the First Presbyterian church and the St. Luke Methodist church, will sing Gounod's "Messe Solenneller" commonly known as "St. Cecilia Mass", a superbly beautiful and deeply moving musical setting of certain portions of the service for Holy Communion.

The singers will be directed by Miss Mary Catherine Medley and Mrs. Robert Gatewood with Mrs. Walter Brown playing the organ accompaniment.

The trio will be composed of Mrs. Richard Lamb, and Messrs. Joe McCook and Tom A. O'Kelley.

ing the supper possible and in enabling the men to celebrate the holiday in the spirit of age-old tradition. The chaplain also made explanations of the rituals followed during the entire celebration.

The services in their entirety including a musical background, were conducted by military personnel from Fort Benning. The serving of dinner was preceded by religious worship led by Chaplain Shain.

The special guest list included General and Mrs. Fulton, Chief of Chaplains and Mrs. Frank M. Thompson, Col. Edward A. Noyes, commanding officer of Station hospital, Lt. Col. Louis Ochs, and Chaplain P. J. Maddox.

Latin Scribes Arrive Friday

Group To Include Editors From Cuba, Chile, Uruguay

A group of 11 newspapermen representing Chilean, Paraguayan and Cuban press will visit Fort Benning Friday for a first-hand view of training on the post, it was announced at post headquarters Monday.

The party will be the third to inspect war preparations here since mid-January. The tour is being sponsored by the National Press club in collaboration with the War department bureau of public relations. Following the Benning visit the newspapermen will begin a swing of the nation's camps and war production centers.

The members of the party include Mario Planet of La Hora, Santiago, Chile; Hugo Silva, director of El Mercurio, Antofagasta, Chile; Luis Silva, director of El Sur, Concepcion, Chile; Renato Silva, representing the Valparaiso Mercurio, Santiago; Mario Vergara, writer for the magazine Zig-Zag, Santiago.

Jorge Hipolito Escobar, assistant editor of El Tiempo and acting under-secretary for foreign affairs, Asuncion, Paraguay; Luciano Gomez, assistant director of the section of press and propaganda in the Paraguayan Ministry of Interior, Asuncion; Jose Antonio Moreno Gonzalez, correspondent for the Associated Press, Asuncion; Carlos Antonio Mersan, acting editor of La Tribuna, Asuncion.

Miguel de Marcos, columnist and editorial writer for El Diario de la Marina, Havana, Cuba; Jorge Marti, writer for El Mundo, Havana.

Other members of the group are Arthur Wild, director of tours and coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, National Press club, Washington; Alfred Canel, interpreter and coordinator of Inter-American Affairs; William Fox of the American Express company, and Capt. Fred J. Driver, Jr., of the War department bureau of public relations.

The newspapermen will view activities of the Infantry school, the Parachute school, and the Tenth Armored division. During their stay at Benning they will be luncheon and dinner guests of the commanding generals of the post and of the various units of the command.

Hospital Needs Blood Donors Of Types AB, B

Soldiers and civilians living on the post are needed as blood donors by the Station hospital. Persons whose blood is typed "AB" or "B" are urged to place their names on the main laboratory list so that they can be called in emergencies.

Only persons living on the post and who can be readily available are desired. At present there are sufficient "A" and "C" type persons listed, but there exists a critical deficiency of "AB" and "B" type persons.

Hospital authorities will pay $10 for every donation which these individuals are called on to make. Civilians and military personnel whose blood is of the necessary type and who live on the post are urged to volunteer and register their blood at once.

Lt. Jackson Birge Made Captain

First Lieutenant Jackson P. Birge, executive officer at the 236th Station Hospital, has been promoted to the rank of captain, it was announced today by headquarters of the unit.

Captain Birge, a native of Kiowe, Oklahoma, is a graduate of Oklahoma Medical School and served his residency at St. Anthony Hospital in Oklahoma City. Immediately prior to his entry into the armed forces, he was an instructor in surgery at the Oklahoma Medical school and practiced medicine and surgery in Oklahoma City.

Entering the Army on Aug. 13, 1942, Captain Birg was assigned to the Station Hospital, Army Air Force Base, Lincoln, Neb., and later was transferred to Fort Benning to his present unit.

Lt. M. L. Holland Raised To Captain

The latest of the many promotions of Lt. Marvin L. Holland, assistant chief of military personnel at post headquarters, was revealed this week when it was announced he has been raised to the rank of captain.

He enlisted in the Army almost 15 years ago as a private. His first assignment was with the 29th Infantry and was later on foreign service with the 14th Infantry in Panama, C. Z. He returned to Fort Benning where he was reassigned to the 29th Infantry. Transferred to Headquarters Detachment, DEML, 4th Service Command, he rose to master sergeant and was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Army of the United States August 10, 1942. Capt. Holland's home is in Florence, Alabama.

Small Unit Leader's Efficiency Key To U.S. Victory---Raff

BY COLONEL EDSON D. RAFF

(Editor's Note: Colonel Edson D. Raff, a 35-year-old pioneer member of the Army's Paratroops who trained at Fort Benning, recently returned to this country from Tunisia where he led his troops in action against the foe. Colonel Raff, who has received four decorations, will assume command of a larger unit with his promotion to full-colonel.

(In this article, written especially for the Fort Benning Bayonet, Colonel Raff vividly reveals how, in the heat of battle, the higher commander need have confidence in the ingenuity and courage of his Small Unit Leaders.)

The part I had in the fighting in Tunisia has proven to me the vital importance of having competent small-unit leaders. In the heat of battle, it is their action which may mean the difference between failure and success.

It is not difficult to recognize a good squad leader or a good platoon leader. He radiates confidence—confidence born of guts backed by knowledge of what to do and how to do it. Too, he knows his men—their personal history, their troubles, their capabilities. On the battlefield, he keeps abreast of the enemy situation; he checks the supply of ammunition; he looks to the physical condition of his men, and to a hundred other details. His men look to him, knowing full well that, should the occasion demand, he can drive them forward by sheer force of will.

To all small-unit leaders, and to those who in the future will achieve such leadership, let me say:

Not is the responsibility alone yours, but yours, too, is the privilege of leading in battle the most willing, the most intelligent, the best all-'round soldier in the world today—the American private. Lead him through Hell, if you wish—he'll follow. And as your unit drives on toward the foe, he'll give his life, if need be, so that you, his leader, may live.

Sweat now, learn now, teach now, so that on the inevitable day when your men face the enemy, they will feel nothing but supreme confidence in that most awesome of all moments. And remember that, though it be the general who is credited with the victory, he knows that it is the unbending faith, the indomitable will of the small-unit leaders, which played a large part in making possible that victory.

Fourteen Mothers Will Be Special Guests At Post

WHEN CPL. LeROY Oughton of the First Student Training Regiment was ordered to represent his regiment as an observer at the Mother's Day lottery the other day, he had no idea what luck his presence would bring him. Major General Leven C. Allen plunged in his hand and whose name should he pull out of the glass bowl but that of Mrs. Madeline Oughton of New Brunswick, N. J., the Corporal's mother. Mother and son are shown above during a recent furlough visit back home.

First Troop Carriers Plan For Birthday

Full Program Will Mark First Anniversary At Lawson Friday

The first birthday of the First Troop Carrier Command of which Lawson Field at Fort Benning is a component will be celebrated next Friday, and elaborate plans have been made to mark the day.

The Officers' Club at Lawson Field will have open house from 8 to 10 p. m. (EWT). An 80-pound cake will be baked for the occasion and served during the open house with other refreshments.

Similar plans are being made for the Enlisted Men's Mess. Appropriate decorations will be installed, and mementos will be given the individual men.

Lawson Field, commanded by Lt. Col. John E. Albert, became a member of the First Troop Carrier Command in September 1942. The mission of the command is to fly personnel and supplies from fixed bases to the front lines, tow gliders, and transport paratroops to points behind the enemy lines.

A unit of the command is now in action in North Africa. Recent reports from that front relate how planes of the command operated at low altitudes to avoid anti-aircraft guns and how young pilots, most of them not yet 30 years old, operated on 24-hour stretches carrying supplies and patrol to our forces.

The headquarters of the command are at Scout Field, Indianapolis, Ind., under the command of Brig. General Fred S. Borum. Lawson Field is one of two bases of the TCC, the principle duties of which are to fly paratroopers and give training to pilots in the transportation of paratroopers.

No Telling What Will Come Back In Next Wash

O. C. Joseph De Lappi of the 28th Company is the first candidate in the history of the Second Student Training regiment to receive a gingham dress in his G. I. laundry. And to top things off, the dress was found to be a perfect fit.

Candidate De Lappi is now worrying about the laundry outlook for next week, now that the WAACs have moved into the Harmony church area.

Mitchell Named New Red Cross Field Director

Appointee Comes To Fort Benning From Camp Van Dorn

Newly appointed field director in charge of all Red Cross activities at Fort Benning is Ralph James Mitchell, who formerly headed Red Cross work at Camp Van Dorn, Miss.

He will succeed Mr. Eugene Bussey, who has been called to headquarters of the Red Cross eastern area at Alexandria, Va., pending a new assignment.

Mr. Mitchell entered on Red Cross duty in August, 1942 after having spent eight years as educational advisor with the Civilian Conservation Corps. He was first sent to Washington, D. C., to undergo the usual 10-day orientation course, before assignment to Camp Beauregard, La.

After another two week training period there, Mitchell was ordered to Camp Polk as assistant field director. The next nine weeks, he spent on maneuvers with the 7th Armored division. Early in December, Mitchell was raised to field director and named to head Red Cross activities at Camp Van Dorn, near Centerville, Miss.

Although originally from New England, the new field director has worked in the South for the past 15 years and claims Lewisville, Miss., as home. He is a graduate of the University of Mississippi at Oxford, where he gained an A. B. degree in modern languages and later took graduate work and instructed.

He is married and has one child.

Mother's Day Plans May 7-9 Completed

Mothers of fourteen soldiers at Fort Benning, coming from their homes in ten different states, will be guests of the post May 7 through May 9 for the special Mother's Day program which has been arranged by Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post.

Selected by lottery, the mothers have sons in various units of Fort Benning. All of the expenses for the railroad trip to Fort Benning and home again are to be defrayed by the Chaplains' Fund.

The ten different states which will be represented on the Mother's Day program are Tennessee, Texas, Maryland, Illinois, New Jersey, Ohio, Connecticut, New York, Florida, and Arkansas. Two mothers are coming to the post from Maryland, two from Chicago, Ill., two from Tennessee, and two from New York.

HOW ALLOCATED

The allocation of the number of mothers to the various commands on the post was determined by the proportionate strength of the units. Three mothers of soldiers in the Fourth Service Command unit have been invited, two mothers of soldiers in the Parachute School, five of soldiers assigned to the Infantry School, three from the Tenth Armored Division, and one from Lawson Field.

Scheduled to arrive at the post Friday, May 7, the mothers will be met at the Columbus railroad station by their sons and special service officers of the units to which their sons are assigned. The mothers will then be taken to the main post where Lt. Col. Frank M. Thompson, chief of chaplains, will welcome them and assign them quarters in the various hostess houses.

Post Opens Legal Office

Major Fink Made Head; Assistance Available For Men

A Legal Assistance Office was established at Fort Benning today, it was announced by Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post, to afford military personnel and their dependents as well as civilian employees employed and residing at Fort Benning an opportunity to receive assistance in legal matters.

In announcing the new office, General Fulton pointed out that "such gratuitous legal service should not be considered as charity, but entirely as a service of the same nature as medical, welfare, or other similar services provided for military personnel."

General Fulton named Major George Fink, a lawyer in civilian life, as the Legal Assistance Officer. Major Fink, with his office in Post Headquarters, is also the War Bond Officer for the post.

Office hours for persons needing counsel in legal matters will be from 8:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.,

Phenix City Sets Midnight Curfew

Want 'Safety for Soldiers;' To Collect Dangerous Weapons

A midnight curfew for Fort Benning soldiers was established by the city commissioners of Phenix City on Tuesday, "to make Phenix City just as safe a place for Uncle Sam's soldiers to visit as is possible to make it," said Commissioner H. D. Cobb, who introduced the resolution calling for a curfew law.

At the same time commissioners also ordered Phenix City Chief of Police J. W. Perry to have collected all pistols, blackjacks, and other weapons kept by owners and employes of cafes and nightclubs.

The resolution also requested that Fort Benning authorities establish a military police headquarters in Phenix City, to be located in the neighborhood of the Fourteenth street bridge, where both Georgia and Alabama officers are said often to run into difficulties catching law violators.

The curfew law, which is similar to the one in Columbus, was established to prohibit the serving of food or drink to army personnel after midnight, EWT.

Mayor E. E. Reese and Commissioner A. L. Gullatt enthusiastically endorsed Commissioner Cobb's resolution.

G. I. Summary Of World News

BY SGT. O. J. REMINGTON

AS NAZI DEFENSES begin crumbling before determined onslaughts of American and British forces in Tunisia, the Germans are stepping up attacks against the Russian army in the Caucasus, indicating that a full scale spring offensive may soon be under way there.

Dispatches from Moscow state that Germans are attacking with assaults so heavy as to "indicate that this may be the real thing." So far, Russian lines are holding firm. Germans are sending up reinforcements and are bringing up hundreds of airplanes to dry airdromes of the Crimea for use in the Caucasian theater.

In Africa the Axis defense lines were bending dangerously at several spots and breakthroughs are imminent as Allied forces continue heavy pressure. Reports are that Rommel has disappeared from Africa, as the Allies batter at the gates of Mateur. Allied planes have shot down 20 gigantic transports loaded with men and all-important oil, to keep reinforcements of men and materials from reaching the beleaguered Axis forces.

General McNair was wounded slightly when his steel helmet stopped a shell fragment.

RUSSIA HAS SEVERED diplomatic relations with the Polish government in exile, much to the delight of the German propaganda machine. Our own state department expressed regret over the break. And well it might, for implications in the break are most serious. Certainly it will pose some serious difficulties at the peace table following the war. Russia charged the Polish government of being in league with the Germans in carrying out a "hostile campaign" against the Soviet Union, in connection with German charges that Russians had killed 10,000 Polish officers near Smolensk. The Russian note handed to the Polish ambassador by Foreign Commissar Molotov charged flatly that the Germans had killed the officers. He claimed further that the Poles, by falling in line with Nazi propaganda, hoped to gain some territorial concessions in Russia. There has been friction for some time between the two governments.

Benning To Cooperate

Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, said Wednesday that the post would gladly cooperate with all requests made by Phenix City law-enforcing agencies in connection with the curfew.

Q. C. Curtis Dies Of Blast Injuries

Officer Candidate Anthony L. Curtis, 39 years old, member of the 2nd Company, Second Student Training Regiment, died yesterday at the Fort Benning Station hospital.

Curtis was injured critically during a training problem and both his legs were amputated.

He is the son of Mrs. Marie E. Curtis, 14 North Vassar, Ventnor, N. J. The body was shipped today to Atlantic City, N. J., for burial.

Midway Hero Visits Uncle, Gen. Weems

Lieutenant Numbers One of 15 Weemses In Armed Forces

One of the first Americans to sight the Jap fleet off Midway Island, Lieutenant Thomas N. Weems, Jr., navigator in the U. S. Air Corps and nephew of Brigadier General George H. Weems, assistant commandant of the Infantry school is now ready to go back in action hunting for more dishonorable Jap hulls to bomb into Davy Jones locker.

Lieut. Weems, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. N. Weems of Model, Tenn., has been visiting his uncle at Fort Benning during a 30 day sick leave, and departed last week for a few days with his brother, John Weems, a pilot for Pan-American Airways at Brownsville, Tex. He will then report to the Army Air Corps Replacement Pool as a navigator.

General Weems is justly proud of this latest member of his family to achieve fame in military service. Thirteen other "fighting Weems" are now in the armed forces including one WAAC, Captain Mary Catherine Weems, a niece of the general, now holding an important post at the WAAC center in Daytona Beach, Fla.

WINS DECORATION

Navigator Weems was honored with the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism during the Battle of Midway, and has taken part in 29 combat engagements while serving with the army air forces in the Pacific war theater.

During his stay at Benning, the lieutenant was asked if his plane had sunk any of the Jap carriers. He smilingly referred all questioners to "news stories."

(Stories of the battle listed Jap losses as:

(Two or three aircraft carriers sunk with all planes lost; one or two aircraft carriers damaged with most of their planes destroyed.

(Three battleships damaged, one seriously. Four cruisers damaged, two seriously. Three transports damaged.)

General Weems conducted the young lieutenant to various demonstrations at Fort Benning to show him the latest methods of Infantry instruction. He also watched training of troops in air-ground contact emphasized by General Weems as a vital part in the combat development of the Infantry officers and soldiers at Fort Benning.

Colonel Jacobs 2nd Army CO

New Chief Served In World War I

Named to command all Second Army troops stationed at Fort Benning is Colonel George E. Jacobs, who replaces Lt. Col. Frank E. Sharpless, former commander of the group.

This is Col. Jacob's first assignment since returning to the States after spending three years in Panama, where he served as chief of mobile forces, with headquarters at Fort Clayton, near Balboa. Col. Sharpless has been transferred to Camp Joseph T. Robinson, Ark., prior to receiving a new assignment.

The Second Army detachment chief is a veteran of the last war and saw overseas service in France and with the Army of occupation in Germany. He entered World War I as a reserve officer, but accepted a commission in the regulars in 1920. Since then Col. Jacobs have served tours of duty at Fort Knox, Ky., Ft. Sam Houston, Texas, four years R. O. T. C. duty at Ohio State University, and three years in the Philippine Islands. He is a graduate of

Chilean Visitor In Tokyo During Doolittle's Raid

Mario Planet Says Japs Hate All Whites Including Axis Partners

Mario Planet, writer for La Hora of Santiago de Chile, who visiter Fort Benning, Ga., Friday with a group of Latin American editors, had the novel experience of being in Tokyo the day the city was bombed by General Jimmie Doolittle's American flyers.

Planet was on a newspaper assignment in Japan at the time, and watched the air attack from the limbs of a tree he climbed. While the physical damage wrought was slight, the psychological effect on the inhabitants of Tokyo was considerable, Planet declared.

"For several weeks after the raid, the 'Tokyonese' suffered a terrible case of jitters," the correspondent said. "They expected a wave of bombing to follow the initial raid at any moment. Failure of the Americans to follow up the bombing had a tremendous effect on their nerves."

Planet said that the Japanese people have had instilled in them an intense hatred, not only for Americans, but for all members of the white race, Germans included.

ITALIANS CATCH IT

"But the Italian nationals living in Japan are really the ones who bear the brunt of Jap insolence and insults. Their mistreatment at the hands of 'their allies' was truly amazing," he said.

He recalled that the Japanese have been quoted as having told the Germans that for their assistance in the Pacific war they would have the honor of being the last white nation to be driven from the Orient.

Discussing the Japanese man-in-the-street, Planet said that he has no opinion of his own as his thinking is molded by what he is told in the Jap press and through the Nipponese propaganda radio.

PUNCHES JAP

Asked if he had suffered at the hands of the Japs, Planet related that he had been forced to "take a punch" at a Jap who attempted to grab his camera as he was "shooting" a picture of a particularly beautiful bird he saw in a Tokyo park. His punch resulted in a dozen Japs ganging up on him, and he was forced to take refuge in the Colombian legation. Planet said that for several days afterward, he exercised extreme caution whenever he ventured forth into the streets.

Planet returned to the United States on the same boat which brought Joseph C. Grew, the U. S. Ambassador to Japan, back to the States. The writer left Benning Friday night with his party to continue a swing of the country's military posts, ship-yards, and war production cetners.

Post Hq. Civilians Go 100 Per Cent In Bond Purchases

One hundred percent of the civilian employees at post headquarters are subscribing to the war bond program under the pay reservation plan, according to Major George Fink, war bond officer.

Coming to the top in a sudden burst, this civilian group according to Major Fink showed a gain of thirty-four percent during the past month, its last month's average being only sixty-six percent.

Other civilian groups on the post have shown similar increases in the size and number of reservations and the major added that Fort Benning civilians have come a long way toward qualifying under the 90 percent-10-percent plan requested by the Secretary of War. Under this program, civilian employees of the War Department are asked to contribute 10 percent of their salary monthly to the purchase of war bonds.

Major Claypool Named Executive

Major B. E. Claypool is new executive officer of the 1st STR. Major Claypool formerly the Regimental Supply Officer of the regiment, comes from Arcata, Calif., and is both a graduate of the College of the Pacific and The University of Southern California.

Secret Nobody Told Takes Toll Of Lives

Enemy Pieces Together Bits Of Info Innocently Spilled

Just before dawn, six weeks from today, United States war and troop ships will slide over the horizon unseen and approach a certain enemy island. As dawn breaks, our warships will begin an intense bombardment while our troops race for the shore in invasion barges. Simultaneously, roaring down on the island, United States paratroop planes will arrive overhead, the sky will blossom with 'chutes and 10 minutes later our men will have the scurprised enemy's airfield. Six hours later our invading forces will be mopping up, and not too many days later you'll be smiling as you read in the headlines of a United States victory.

But will you? Is that what you'll be reading? Or will the enemy's "bits and pieces" system have done its job? You see . . . last Tuesday evening, on a bus, the wife of a shipping clerk in an Iowa drug house remarked to a friend: "We're staying home tonight—Al's tired. He shipped 80 cases of quinine to the Army today."

And last night, in a restaurant, a friend of a friend of a soldier said to her girl friend: "Helen found out why Earl hasn't written lately. He's all right—it's just that his arm's been swollen from inoculations. Don't know why he got 'em, though—he was inoculated before, when he first joined the paratroops."

And in a lot of other places a lot of other people — as Americans always have—talked about their jobs, their friends, and what they were doing. And a few of their remarks were heard by the enemy. Many more were not overheard—the enemy isn't everywhere, doesn't hear everything. But some were heard by enemy agents and sympathizers whose instructions are: "Keep your eyes and ears open. Mingle with people. Report everything you hear—don't try to judge its value yourself. Leave that to those who are higher than you."

And now—today—a man is studying those tiny "bits and pieces," those seemingly harmless scraps of information from all parts of the country. "Quinine for the Army . . . the tropics, eh? And 80 cases means a lot of men. Interesting." He continues — goes through many other reports. Some he studies and lays aside. Others are filed and indexed for possible future reference.

Two days later— ". . . paratroopers inoculated . . ." "Now, why? Must have been inoculated once before—why again? Expecting to encounter new diseases, maybe? Tropical diseases, perhaps?"

Iowa City— ". . . heard man in movie lobby talking about neighbor's son named 'Tom.' Son being trained in coast-invasion tactics in Texas . . . neighbor hasn't heard from son lately . . ." "Hasn't heard lately—maybe he's sailed."

Harmless Remarks Tell Enemy Plenty

From the files under "Sailing,"—a report of 2 weeks ago., Denver— ". . . a woman said her nephews, John Wycowski, had sailed."

From the files under "List of Men Whose Divisions Are Known"— ". . . heard girl ask friend, Stella Wycowski, if she'd heard from brother lately. Stella W. replied, 'Yes, he's in Texas with 29th Infantry.' " "So the 29th of Texas has sailed . . . and another soldier in Texas, with special invasion training, seems to have sailed, too — looks like one and the same thing. One division of invasion troops sailing . . . quinine shipped . . . paratroopers inoculated, probably against tropical diseases . . . could they be going after one of our tropical islands, perhaps?"

And so he continues, studying, sifting a steady flow of bits and pieces of information. Many are useless. Few mean much in themselves. But the men who study them are like men working on huge jig-saw puzzles—piecing together scraps of information—checking, confirming, and judging one against another — watching their pictures — our plans — slowly take shape. Some pictures are never finished — the missing pieces don't come in. Few pictures are completed to the last detail. But they don't have to be. "Looks like they're after one of our islands. Can't find out which one . . . or exactly when. But it must be soon. And it's in the tropics—so it has to be one of these six." So the word goes out. And in that carefully planned attack — about which nobody talked . . . very much — many of our ships are sunk by enemy subs lying in wait. Others of our men are thrown back into the sea by numerically superior forces . . . our paratroopers and planes are caught by a swarm of fast enemy fighters. And that's what you read about — unsmiling — in your morning paper.

THAT STORY IS FICTION, OF COURSE. But it's true in this way—that's actually how enemy agents work in this war. It's a highly developed system—a "bits and pieces" system of assembling and guessing important information . . . from many scraps of what appears to be harmless information.

Little Secrets Add Up to Big Ones

Ordinarily little facts, you see, the kind of things anyone might know, such as a soldier's location; where he is, where he's going, how or when . . . may supply the missing pieces in the enemy's jig-saw puzzle. Chance remarks about his equipment, what he's doing, the name or number of the outfit he's in, the fact that he's sailing . . . could be valuable clues.

And not only soldiers—the same goes for planes and ships (and double for convoys) and their crews. What kind of ship or plane? How big? Where are we building new ones? How many? What kind? When will they be finished? What changes in design?

And production, too—"they use a lot of bronze" (sounds like naval guns to a spy) . . . "A funny little gadget like a watch and it has a lot of wheels" (means bomb timers to the enemy) . . . "Frank runs a lathe" (that makes 19 the enemy has counted in his factory) . . . "Charley's making 20 pounds of optical glass a day (20X31 men—620 pounds) . . .

Even ship sinkings—"It was terrible—we saw them from the shore. The men came swimming and rowing in all day." (The enemy wasn't sure he'd sunk that ship.)

But My Sister Is No Spy

And neither is your cousin, your uncle, your friends. But if you talk—even to them — why shouldn't they talk to some one else? And that "someone" will tell another person . . . who can tell a third . . . who'll pass it on . . . till eventually, somewhere in that chain, the enemy hears it. He doesn't care who he hears it from . . . or whether it's first or fifth hand. So don't start a chain. And don't keep up someone else's. Don't pass on information you hear.

But What About Things So Many Talk About?

The enemy must know about those things, too, you'd think. But that's wrong—the enemy won't know . . . if those hundreds of people don't talk. In 1918 a German submarine was sunk at Scapa Flow in Scotland. Its captain had been ordered to attack the British Grand Fleet there. Yet the Grand Fleet had left Scapa Flow a year before — as all Scotland knew. But the Germans didn't know. Because the Scots hadn't talked.

The enemy can't be everywhere, you see. Something big may be happening—thousands know about it—and it just happens there's not an enemy within a hundred miles. Especially here, because the FBI's nabbed so many of them—you've read about that. So the enemy's depending more than ever on his "bits and pieces" system for finding out about it later. But he won't find out . . . if we don't tell him.

Hoover Knows His Espionage Agents

J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, has a thorough understanding of how enemy agents work — he's studied, fought, and so many of them. He says:

"Certain key words will tell you what types of information our enemies are especially anxious to get hold of. Read these key words . . . study them . . . remember them."

"WHERE . . . are our soldiers, ships, planes? (And antiaircraft guns, forts, gun emplacements, factories, mine fields, harbor defenses?) Where are war weapons manufactured?

"HOW . . . are our men going? How are they armed and equipped? How are our planes, tanks, and other weapons made? How well or poorly do they perform? How are they changed in design?

"WHEN . . . are men going? When will that ship be launched? When does it sail? When will that production job be finished?

"HOW MANY . . . troops, ships, planes, tanks, other weapons, war materials? How many being made? And will be made?

"WHAT KIND . . . of duty is he doing . . . training is he getting . . . work is he doing in war production? What kind of regiment is he with, and its name? What's the name of his ship? What kind of a ship, plane, is it? What kind of cargo?

"Of course, that's only a suggestion of the kind of information our enemies need. No list of any kind could be even nearly complete. What would we like to know about our enemies—their men, their training; their location, their plans, their production? Well, that's what they want to know about us."

Can We Talk About Anything?

Of course. Just remember this rule:

If you HEAR it from someone—don't repeat it.

If you SEE it yourself — don't repeat it.

But if you READ it in newspapers or magazines or hear it on the radio, then it's public property—and you may talk about it. Of course, you mustn't repeat information you read in personal letters.

If you heard from a soldier, for example, that he was in Liberia, you shouldn't mention it to anyone. But when it's been officially announced —that is, when you read it in the newspapers and magazines or hear it on the radio —why, of course, you can talk about.

Marshall, King Address Nation

We Americans have always been used to talking without looking over our shoulders wondering who's listening. We're pretty jealous of our freedom of speech. So keeping quiet about bits of information that may seem unimportant . . . learning to force ourselves to stop and think before we talk . . . is going to be quite a job for us. But when you think of what could happen if you don't . . . it shouldn't be too hard. And all of us in the services—and our lives and success — are depending on you . . . to think before you talk."—G. C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, United States Army and E. J. King, Commander in Chief of the U. S. Fleet and Chief of Naval Operations.

PENNIES ADD up to war bond—Bill McKenney, 12-year-old soda pop salesman at Gowdy field, was caught by the Infantry school cameraman, turning his pennies in to Miss Vera Mullins for a war bond this week. Billy had $37.50, mostly in small coins, earned selling soda. And he found he had 11 cents left over to start saving for a new bond. Billy had his baseball glove and baseball cap with him, for he had just finished a rip-snorting game with the Tommyhawk baseball club. He's a red hot third baseman—and a darned good patriot. Chaplain Kuhn Joins 'Gators; Is Linguist Chaplain Stephen F. Kuhn, former missionary in Puerto Rico for nine years, this month reported for duty with the 124th Infantry to assume his post with the Alligator Regiment.

A native of Erie, Pa., Father Kuhn received his commission January 4, 1943, and immediately reported to the Chaplain's School at Harvard University for a course of training before arriving at Fort Benning to assume his first Army assignment.

Chaplain Kuhn, who attended Redeemer School of St. Mary in Pennsylvania and the Mount Saint Alphonsus Seminary at Esopus, N. Y., where he was ordained in 1926, spent three and a half years as pastor of the St. Mary's Church in Buffalo, N. Y., before going to Puerto Rico. He speaks German, Spanish and Italian fluently.

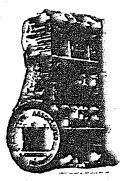
Ortiz Defends Puerto Rico

Says Island Not Poverty Stricken

It was the belief that he had not fully repaid this country for his freedom and education opportunities that led Officer Candidate Jose Ortiz to join the army. He is now working for his second lieutenant's commission in the 11th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment.

A native of Puerto Rico, Ortiz came to this country to complete his college education, began at the University of Puerto Rico. With the pride characteristic of his forebears, he declined an offer by an uncle in Cleveland to tide him over his college term financially.

He eventually arrived in Detroit with 25 cents in his pocket and a burning determination to attend Wayne University in that city. He slept on park benches several nights before finding a job which enabled him to afford lodgings at the YMCA. While attending Wayne he met the future Mrs. Ortiz.



After completing their courses at college, the couple returned to Puerto Rico where Ortiz did Newspaper and radio work until his appointment was information specialist for the Farm Security Administration.

Ortiz has another ambition besides his army career and that is dispelling the popular conception that Puerto Rico is, for the most part, run down and poverty stricken.

Sports quarters in London have suggested a United Nations Olympic games to be held in that English city.

Jap Prisoners Docile, Obedient, Marine Says

Refused Chance To Escape, Major, At Benning, Reports

Two marine officers now attending new division officer course who were among the marines who made the initial assault on Guadalcanal Aug. 7, 1942. They are Maj. Michael J. Davidowitch and Maj. Lawrence V. Patterson of the 1st Marine division.

Majo Davidowitch, provost marshal on Guadalcanal, was in charge of hundreds of war prisoners for several weeks and had but one attempted escape; this by two fliers, one of whom was killed in the attempt and the other captured.

Major Davidowtteh said that for the first four or five days after capture that the Japs were sullenly obedient, but after their initial surprise of not being killed by the Americans, as they had been told they would be, they became cooperative and at times even helpful.

Such an example of downright submissiveness was shown by Major Davidowitch as he told of an experience involving the movement of over three hundred prisoners during darkness. Two of the trucks involved in the movement were overturned and half a hundred Japs and marines sent sprawling in the inky blackness. Even though it was practically impossible to tell friend from foe, several Japs were observed to have picked up sub-machine guns and handed them back to their American captors with their infamous tooth-grin.

JAPS OBEY COMMANDS

Major Davidowitch stated that Jap troop discipline seemed excellent, and that they obeyed American commands almost to the letter. The best feeling he has ever experienced, the major said, was that of watching the receding coastline of Guadalcanal from the fan tail of his transport bringing him back to the state. Even though his experience on Guadalcanal had been hazardous, the major expressed his wish to return there some day.

Major Patterson, rifle company commander who was twice wounded in the initial phases of the battle for Guadalcanal, was far from complimentary concerning the island.

KNOWS JAP TACTICS

Major Patterson participated in several major engagements and is an authority on Japanese tactics. His two wounds were caused by a grenade, and he said that if the grenade had been American, he wouldn't be here today to tell about it. He cited one instance where a squad of marines was pitted against several Japs in what was little more than a grenade duel, the contestants being not more than 20 to 30 paces apart.

Dozens of grenades were hurled by both sides, and when the marines suddenly charged the Jap position with bayonets, they found only a few live Japs, these in a stupor from the concussions of the grenades that had been lobbed among them.

One Jap officer, sword in one hand and pistol in the other, was dazed running around a tree with a lieutenant in hot pursuit but unable to catch him. Suddenly the marine reversed his direction and met the Jap officer head on, and proceeded to put him on the road to Jap heaven with his service automatic.

Major Patterson is high in his praise for the courage of the Jap officers, although they seem to foolishly sacrifice their lives while leading charges well out in front of their men. In one instance the commanding officer of a whole movement led his men in a flanking attack and was killed.

TWO-HANDED BLADES

And about the swords carried by the Jap officers, it was learned that ranking non-coms also carry the huge two-handed blade. They are as sharp as a razor and can easily lop off a man's head. However, in one case it was a marine corporal who did the lopping. After wresting the sword from the hands of an officer, this marine corporal proceeded to shave off the ears of the Nip and then relieve him of his head. This same corporal led numerous bayonet charges against Jap positions and was finally killed in one of the furious battles. For his valor he was recommended for the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Although an order was issued that killing of livestock was prohibited, several de-steaked bovines were found around the marine positions. The general opinion was that the unfortunate cows had failed to give the proper password while trying to pass through the American lines and were so dealt with.

FEW SNAKES

Few snakes were seen on the island. As a matter of fact, all the game seeme to disappear because of the noise of battle. Birds were the toughest of the lot to do away with, however, and in the heat of battle, they could be heard chattering and screeching to one another.

Both officers said that many good American boys died on Guadalcanal and that if it were their lot to instruct marine recruits, that they hoped the hard and bitter lessons they had learned in the Pacific, would stand present and future marines in good stead.

Noted Artist TIS Enrollee

Lee's Oils, Water Colors, Pastels Nationally Known

Percy Myron Lee, nationally known artist whose oils, water colors and pastels have been exhibited in New York and Boston galleries and whose commercial works have appeared in leading magazines, is acquainting himself with the arts of warfare as an officer candidate with the 23rd Company, Third Student Training Regiment.

Forty years of age, Lee expects to become an aerial observer upon his graduation late in June. He was inducted in the army last summer and was sent to Miami Beach, Fla., where he was placed in the Air Corps public relations and special service department. While stationed there he did pastel portraits of the commanding officers and cartooning for the camp paper.

Lee, a New Yorker, studied art at the University of Washington and in 1925 went to Europe, spending four years at the Beaux Arts in Paris and a short period in Spain. He made another trip abroad a few years later, traveling through the Orient and touring Italy on a bicycle to sketch and paint Renaissance seetings.

In 1930 he return to America, married and set up a studio in an abandoned Long Island, N. Y. lighthouse. Many of his works in recent years have been used as magazine covers.

5 Johnsons Same Company Have System

Much to their discomfort, the Johnsons, all five of them, form the forward echelon of the 11th Company, Third Student Training Regiment.

For the first few weeks of the class, the instructors had a virtual field day every time they called out "Johnson" and five voices would pipe: "Who, me, sir?".

After an appraisal of the situation, however, the five candidates named Johnson, hit upon a strategy. Now, when the instructor shouts the name, only one Johnson responds with "Who, me, sir?" which inevitably is followed with "You'll do." In this manner, the five Johnsons split the blow five ways.

Usually it is the Jones, the Smiths or Browns who predominate but in this company there isn't even a Murphy. There are, however, a few groups with twin names and they use the "hesitating rise" method quite effectively when called upon.

12 Gator Officers Get Promotions

Gold turned to Silver, and Silver doubled itself in the 124th Infantry last week as twelve Gator officers received promotions.

Four captains included 1st Lts. Joel McMillan, Company K. Maxcy S. Crews, Company E. Benjamin C. Price, Co. G., and Hugh T. Lawson of Hktrs. Co., 3rd Battalion.

The eight Lts. receiving silver bars were, Thomas W. Jones, Hqs. Co., 2nd Battalion, Orville E. Bloch, Company I, Lloyd H. Cotter, Cannot Company, O. T. Dalton, Jr., Company K, Dwight C. Robert H. Lewis, Jr., Company L, William R. Murphy, Hqs. Co., 3rd Battalion, and Cornelius O. Shanahan, Jr., Anti-Tank Company.

Georgia people last year planted 30,000 new gardens—15,000 on farms and an equal number in towns and cities, the Extension Service reports.

It Was Bound To Pass; WAAC Weds Officer

First member of the 43rd Post Headquarters Company of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, Fort Benning to wed while in service is Auxiliary Gertrude Lybrand of Birmingham, Ala., who married First Lieut. Gordon Ransome in her home town last Friday.

In a romance centered at Fort Benning, Auxiliary Lybrand first met Lt. Ransome while he was attending the Infantry School here. Later she joined the WAACs, and was assigned here after basic training at Daytona Beach, Fla. But, by that time, the lieutenant had graduated, and journeyed to Fort Lewis, Washington where he was stationed with an infantry rigement.

They arranged a short leave period in which to marry and celebrate a honeymoon. The groom arrived in Atlanta Friday, they were married and then parted again Sunday morning.

Speaking of their marriage, Auxiliary Ransome said, "I hope we meet again overseas. It is barely possible. But if we do he'd better not try to pull his rank on me."

Auxiliary Ransome who has been in service since January, 1943, is assigned to the army post office here where she works as a file clerk.

Lt. Ransome is a native of Hartford, Conn.

Cupid Assaults 10th Armored

11th Armored Reg't Leads Division In Total Marital Ties

Judging from the records of chaplains now attached to the 10th Armored Division, the 11th Armored Regiment has been more successful in finding someone "nice" to come home to" than any other single unit in the division.

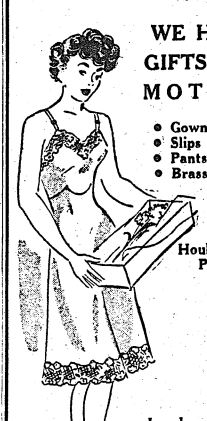
Of 102 marriages that have been performed by the present chaplains, 36, or more than a third, have taken place in the 11th. All but three of these were Protestant ceremonies while the others were Catholic.

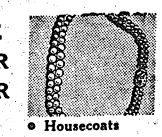
By contrast, the 3rd Armored Regiment has supplied only three bridegrooms for weddings in the chapels of the Division. The 54th Armored Infantry Regiment has done somewhat better with a total of 10 weddings—but the 150th Signal Company, only a fraction of the size of a regiment, has turned out five times to celebrate the nuptials of men in its ranks.

Other marital scores, as recorded by the chaplains, are: Division Service Co., two; 80th Medical Ba., three; Supply Bn., one; 55th Engineers Bn., 10; 90th Reconnaissance Bn., five; 423rd F. A. Bn., seven; 420th F. A. Bn., three; 419th F. A. Bn., two, and 774th C. A. (A. A.) Bn., six.

The majority of the ceremonies, or 86, were Protestant. Only 14 were performed by Catholic chaplains and just two were Jewish ceremonies.

The figures do not include marriages performed by chaplains no longer attached to the Division or those performed outside of the Division area.





Nine Alligators Get Promotions

Nine enlisted men in the 124th Infantry were promoted in grade this week according to an announcement by the regimental commander, Col. John D. Hill.

Invest In Bonds And Your Own Future

This second war drive loan of 13 billions is the biggest sum ever asked for in the history of our country. It is even more than we have been asked for in the past two years.

If we were in an Axis country we would be forced to give this sum and even more, but in an America we are asked to loan this money to our government which means that we are urged to save our money for a future date when we will need it for our own personal use. Could anyone refuse to help his own future? Could anyone risk the chance of not helping our country win this war in the shortest possible time? Could anyone refuse to help supply our fightmen with the necessary implements of war? Does anyone desire to see inflation set in, where our money would be worthless and the cost of living higher? Can anyone recommend a safer investment? If so we would be interested to know about it.

Let us oversubscribe this loan and help push the Axis off the face of the globe, so that we can maintain and preserve our freedom for ever and ever.

MAJOR F. I. CIOFALO,
Reg't Surgeon, 1st STR

O. C.'s Must Read To Answer John Doe

It is a matter of knowledge—and pride, in the Army, that the courses of instruction at The Infantry School are the best that can be provided, with up-to-date equipment, and the latest in training and training methods. Equipped with this background of training as a basis for future study, the potential officer candidate of the 1st STR may blossom forth in the full glory of his gold bars, available for assignment to duty.

In the array of knowledge to which the officer candidate exposes himself, however, there is one part which The Infantry School encourages, but obviously can not provide. This is—outside reading. The individual candidate may and may not avail himself of collateral reading, but there is no question that the officer who does such reading is infinitely better equipped to instruct men.

To see why this is so requires only a glance at the composition of the Army of the United States. In one respect—at least, it is different, in the overall intelligence and education of the average soldier. And his education in civil life was adequately supplemented by the many media of communication, unique in American life. In no other country is there such a widespread array of implements for the dissemination of information: Radios, newspapers, periodicals, publications, and even movie shorts and newsreels.

Transferring from civil life to service in the armed forces, John Doe, now Private John Doe, knows what the war is about, and has a general idea of where he is headed. This general sense of direction is aided by the orientation lectures given him during his basic training. Because of the shortness of time, however, the Army cannot afford to instruct him in the background of the conflict, nor would it be the duty of the Army to attempt to outline to him the framework of the post war world which he is helping to build. This latter point is important, because John Doe has some questions regarding it. By tradition, background and education he is curious. He is not content to ask "How?", he also asks "Why?"

For these reasons, and in addition, because of the far flung battlefronts in today's global war, there is a far heavier burden imposed on the junior officer. The very nature of the war, together with the energy of mind of the American soldier, make it imperative that any leader of men have to grasp not only of the important task of winning the war, but the whys and wherefores of the war. We may be able to conduct the technical training of the soldier, but we know also that if we are entrusted with a command that our responsibilities and duties only begin with technical training. Leadership requires more than technical ability, and high among its requisites is the ability to win and command confidence. If then, the question in the mind of the soldier, unspoken, as well as spoken, were brought to us to be resolved, could we meet such a test?

There are many questions in his mind, as there are in the minds of many of us, particularly if we attempt to study the complex international politics of Europe. An additional reason for these questions is the cynical reaction that occurred in the United States during the period from 1920 to 1930, when the opinions of many of us certainly did not flatter Europe. We adopted the conservative attitude of President Coolidge regarding the War Debts: "They hired the money, didn't they?", and we resented Europe's inability to pay. That we did not understand it didn't matter at the moment. The trend towards isolation—and suspician of European "power politics" grew with the failure of the League of Nations to function as an instrument of international policy, grew also with the toboggan slide of the Kellogg-Briand pact, the default in foreign bond payments, and the Nye Munitions investigation. We wanted no part of foreign affairs. As a matter of fact, when the looting of China by Japan began and the puppet state of Manchuko was set up, we felt a mild annoyance with the then Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson for his strong protest on the matter. His clarity of vision was lost on us at the time.

All these factors, consciously or subconsciously were a part of our mental picture of Europe, and strongly influenced the atmosphere in which Joe Doe grew, and in which his outlook on foreign affairs was formed. And the more headlines we saw in the daily papers regarding Europe, the more confused we became.

When the blackshirt rabble invaded Ethiopia we awakened sufficiently to remark that it was a damned shame that Mussolini couldn't pick on someone his size And thus having expressed ourselves we settled back in comfort again. The overthrow of republicanism in Spain made some of us uneasy, but we did not see the war clouds gather until we heard the thunder of guns in Poland. Yet we did not become really aroused until the war shifted to the Western Front. Suddenly, came Pearl Harbor, and we were in. John Doe, by the millions, went to war—and with him he took his confused picture of the chain of events that preceded it.

Now, from time to time, Private John Doe would like some of his questions answered; so would we. But we know that if we become officers, John Doe will look to us for his answer, and we face a test. Could we, for example, explain the latest subject of discussion (which seems to have inherited the mantle of Nostradamus) coming to us under the terrifying title of Geopolities? Could we explain, in brief, what it is, and outline its inherent fallacies, and thereby explode the myth of the omniscent and invincible Dr. Haushofer, who, for some reason or another has been held up to us as a Teutonic Dr. Fu Manchu? Or do we understand the fears and motives of Mackinder in his writing of "Democratic Ideals and Reality"?

This is not to say technical and training studies should be displaced in favor of reading material that would familiarize us with European or Asiatic or South American affairs. We know that the studies we have now are merely an introduction, and, at that, our hours are crowded. Yet, if we are to do our part, if we are to accept the responsibilities which are presented officer candidates, then those men for whom we may assume responsibility in future months have the right to expect that we will fit ourselves for that responsibility. They have the right to expect that their confidence in us will not be misplaced. For these reasons, we must manage to fit into our "spare time' at least some collateral reading. And so, the crowded hours may become even more crowded.

By O. C. DAVID R. ROCHE,
18th Company, 1st S. T. R.

Boy Scout Movement Worthy Of Support

The Boy Scouts organization since its start in 1908 has moved progressively forward. This organization with its present membership of nearly two million in the United States alone, is now organized in seventy lands all over the globe. The international headquarters in London handles all the problems of international scope that may arise. Here in the United States the Boy Scouts are operated through a National Council, which has 1,200 representatives. President Roosevelt is the honorary president of the movement in the United States.

This organization is based on a sacred code of honor, which originally came from the code of Knights. Its scope is international. There is no politics or class distinction in the Boy Scouts, nor is their prejudice against color or creed. For the main part theirs is the cherished bargain, which they make in the "promise of honor," on joining the movement. The "promise of honor" is duty to God and country, to help others, and to obey the law.

With the many wartime changes, parents busy in war industries, families broken up by enlistments of parents, movements to congested areas, and round army camps; little attention has been given to our juveniles of America. This mingling of events is giving children many opportunities to stray from the straight and narrow path. Grave concerns amongst our parents, teachers, and social workers has been noted due to the increase in delinquents. An excellent antidote to youthful irresponsibility is the Boy Scout movement. It is rare to have delinquents among our scouts.

The Scoutmaster in training his troop does not stop with teaching boys to take care of themselves, but also to give first aid to others and service to the community. A boy with scout training makes the best type of citizen because of the character training he gets. Such principles as honesty, good sportsmanship, doing a good deed daily, helping our neighbor, etc. establish this creed of good fellowship.

Let us encourage our boys to join the Boy Scouts, for this patriotic training will benefit their future, and ours as well. By doing so, juenile delinquency virtually will disappear.

Frank I. Ciofalo,
Major, M. C.
Regimental Surgeon, 1st Stu. Tng. Regt.

Faith is not measured by the length of time you sit down and wait for something to happen.

Tolerance is too often an appeasement of what's wrong and a compromise with weakness.

Some people would trade freedom for security or riches. Then, ironically enough, they find they are neither free, rich nor secure.

There's no use being free from the things we don't like if that just makes us slaves to the things we do.

USO Presents—

ACTIVITIES FOR ARMY WIVES, JOINT TRAINING INSTITUTE FOR WOMEN

By PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

(Ed's. note: All times used in the column are Eastern War Time).

Having been concerned mainly with activities for service men, "USO Presents" deviates this week to relate what is doing for the little woman who mends your GI socks and keeps you fed on those precious 16 points . . . So here goes with a few activities for Army wives—better known as the "shack man's helpmate:"...

Mrs. Janet Haag, director, and Miss Virginia Davis, assistant director, of the USO club at 1425 Third avenue, Columbus, announce to the ladies, "This is your home; use the sewing machine; iron out your wrinkles; have a shower; play quiet games; rent a bicycle; try ping pong or badminton; take home a book; reserve the kitchen and cook; piclic in the garden; hear favorite records; play the piano; write letters." . . .

* * *

On Mondays at 2 p. m. there is bridge with prizes and instruction for beginners . . . Tuesdays at 2 p. m. Red Cross work in surgical dressings are taken up at the Coca Cola plant . . . A sewing circle is rounded Wednesday at 2 p. m. with knitting, sewing and crocheting instructions and "friendly gossip" . . . A luncheon with a program is scheduled for 1 p. m. Thursday, and a nursing instruction course for prospective mothers will be inaugurated Friday at 11 a. m. . . . Vespers or Town Hall reigns each Sunday at 6 p. m. followed by a snack hour and singing . . . "Bring your HUSBAND and spend the evening" is the word from the directors.

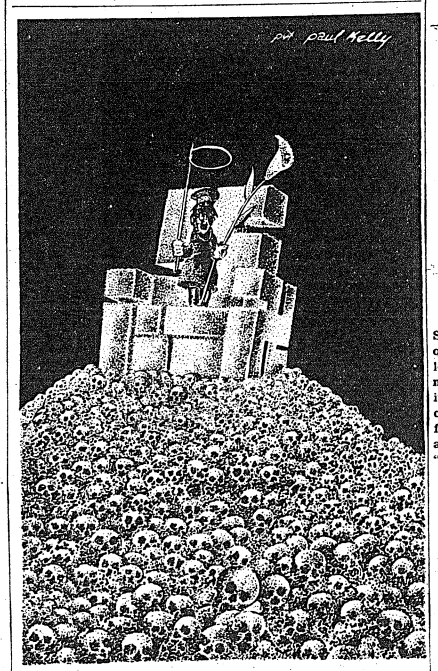
Recognizing its need for and inability to exist without volunteer workers, the USO of Columbus and Phenix City will hold a joint training institute for women who will volunteer their service to the centers . . . It will be held May 10 and 11 and May 17 and 18 at the Ninth Street USO . . . Designed to make for better service by volunteer workers, the institute will hold afternoon sessions for housewives and evening sessions for professional and business women.

* * *

After two and one half years the dance band of the 29th Infantry night dances at the Army-Navy YMCA-USO will feature the bands of the 124th Infantry and the 176th Infantry which will play on alternate weeks . . . Dancing is from 8:30 to 11:15 p. m.

* * *



Benning soldiers who are concerned about getting a gift or flowers home for Mother's Day can use the Shoppers' Service at the Ninth Street USO . . . A group of women there headed by Mrs. Carl Greentree have made shopping for men in service a science . . . Whether it is a lacey greeting card, or an adventure book for the kid brother or a broken watch or a pair of glasses that need fixing, the ladies can "bring 'em back alive." . . . And then at the Army-Navy YMCA-USO the new wrapping counter will be open and ready for business in time for Mother's Day business . . . The arrangement will be able to accommodate 2,000 packages per month.

A timely note from the Ninth Street USO to GI's who hold hope of a spring or early summer furlough announces that the Information Desk has a complete listing of furlough rates to all parts of this land . . . A ready answer from the Information hostess awaits the soldier who asks "where, how much and when?"

* * *

The USO Town Hall program at the Ninth Street USO Sunday at 3 p. m. will be dedicated to the men who form the "bridge of ships," who move convoys carrying United Nations cargoes on all the seas, who form a lifeline which is sustaining the present conflict for the Allies — men of the Merchant Marine. . . . An OWI film entitled "Men and the Sea" will be shown as part of the program.

ADOLF'S HAPPY, HAPPY EASTER

Verse

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A WAAC

What it means to be a WAAC,
Oh, sister, let me tell you,
It means retreat and reveille
And marching that will thrill you.

It means your bed must have four squares,
With not a corner showing,
Your hair must be kept well in place,
With not one strand a-blowing.

You drill and march, fall in, fall out,
Your shoes must be kept shining.
You eat your meals three times a day,
You call them "Mess," not dining.

You must not date the officers,
That simply is not done,
Don't take this for a joke, my lass,
'Tis not meant for a pun.

It means KP, lass, now and then,
A job all soldier's dread,
At end of day when work's all done,
You'll swear you're almost dead.

We find a lot of time to laugh,
We're soldiers one and all,
We each joined up to do our part,
When first we heard the call.

We'll work we'll sweat, we'll do our best
To help the lads across,
To fight and win this global war,
And show them all who's boss.

Kay Says—

AH, WRETCHED CO LD, HOW MISERABLE YOU MAKE ME FEE L, KACHOO (GESUNDHEIT)

There is nothing like a head cold to put you in your proper place. A woman with any amount of vanity — and what woman hasn't some—has only to look at herself in the mirror, eyes red-rimmed and nose streaming, to realize there are limits to what even the most expensive beauty aids can do.

Invariably a head cold comes on just when you want to look your best. Comes the night before that long-awaited dance, or that looked for dinner when you don't have to count the ration points, and you feel an ominous tickling in your nose and throat. Drastic measures are in order. You fill yourself with fruit juices, go in for a hot bath, and pop into bed, confident that in the morning all will be well. And then the phone rings. After paddling downstairs to assure some rich southern voice there isn't any Daisy Mae living here, the sneezes start. From there on in, you know the cold is here for its accustomed stay.

FEEL BAD, LOOK WORSE

The next morning you feel miserable, and you look worse. Your handkerchiefs are at the laundry, and the P. X. is out of issues. Your friends give you helpful suggestions, all contradictory. You hear rumors of pneumonia and mysterious ailments going around the post, and you're sure you have one or all of them. You're afraid to call the dispensary for fear some medico will either order you to bed or tell you it's all your imagination. So you struggle through the day, determined to last out until after the party, but sure you'll be dead before morning—and wishing you might be.

The anticipated event turns into a nightmare. Your nose by this time is red and shiny, and feels somewhat like a balloon about to burst. Your voice has sunk to a rasping whisper. The food, which looks so appetizing, tastes like an inferior grade of sawdust Comes a lull in the evening's entertainment and you sink back for a moment's respite, too weary to powder your poor nose or touch up your chapped lips.

EMBARRASSING

It is then, my friend, that you are unexpectedly introduced, to stand up, bow, and show to the public all the ravages your cold has wrought. You sit down, feeling everyone must be murmuring "I don't see what anyone sees in her."

Eventually, medications or no, your cold wears itself out. Or perhaps it merely waits until another crucial moment in your life to strike. You go happily along your way, full of restored health and energy, confident that with the coming of spring all will be well. Along comes a week packed to the hilt with activities, from house cleaning to club meetings. This time you're wrong. It isn't a cold—the hay fever season has started.

OL' T. P. WILL DO WATCH ON RHINE WITH W ATERMELON

By S. SGT. TOM McDONALD

Moments of greatness in Colonet Swampwater's office are often heralded by unexpected surprises. At 11 o'clock today our serene peacefulness was violated in the usual manner.

First Lt. Zowie Hillrocks of the Chairborne Infantry headquarters arrived with special information for Colonel Swampwater concerning the staggering importance of the local war effort. Due to the crucial nature of this material, the Colonel requested me to sit in on their conference and take notes. Since I did not feel particularly sleepy at this time I was delighted to accommodate him. Anything of importance from Lt. Hillrocks would undoubtedly be unique.

After sprawling in our respective chairs and getting ourselves most comfortable, Lt. Hillrocks began:

"Sir," he says, looking Colonel Swampwater straight in the eye, "our headquarters wishes to know if you have planted a victory garden."

Completely caught off guard by the questions, the Colonel twitched in his chair and cleared his throat. Any reference to manuel labor or energy requiring work always caught him off guard.

"To tell you the truth, Lieutenant, I have been waiting for the watermelon season to arrive. I have anticipated a vital shortage for this summer and I plan to give my utmost to remedy the situation. Why only recently I had the Sergeant begin reading a book on watermelon culture. How are you coming along with it, Sergeant?"

"I'm on the chapter called 'Reaping the Harvest,' I deceitfully answered.

"Very good," praised Lt. Hillrocks. "I shall be extremely proud to report to my headquarters that you and the Sergeant are doing your part."

"Thank you, Lieutenant," old T. P. responded, delighted with the changing trend of the conversation. "And how is Lt. Timurs getting along with the new mortar he is trying to invent?"

"You mean his knee mortar?" asked Lt. Hillrocks.

"Why, yes, that's it," answered my leader.

"Well, I'm sorry to say, Sir, that he had to give it up. It turned out to be impractical."

"Why?" asked the Colonel.

"It seems that General Quagmire had Lt. Jericho look up the statistics showing what per cent of soldiers in mortar companies had 'water on the knee' and Jericho's report was very discouraging. He found that 'water on the knee' was prevalent in some units so the General decided that such a gun would be impractical due to the discomfort it was likely to cause an infortunate soldier with this defect."

"The General is a man of great foresight," replied the Colonel.

"Yes, Sir," answered Lt. Hillrocks, rising from his chair and going to the door.

"We are indeed proud, Colonel Swampwater, to have such an able commander. Rest assured the headquarters of the Chairborne Command will be delighted with your contribution to the war effort."

"Tell all the boys not to forget the next 'peanut brittle party,'" added Colonel Swampwater as the Lieutenant departed. Then turning to me, he said:

"Sergeant, what do you think of the squash question. Do you like the crooked neck squash better than the straight?"

"I prefer watermelon," I replied without batting an eyelash.

Sternly and with great forebearance the ol' boy tried to look a hole through me. Then seeing that I was going to stand up for my tastes, he grinned and reached for a stick of chewing gum which he wolfishly crammed into his mouth.

Chaplain's Corner..

WINDOW DRESSING

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

It is very intriguing to watch workers dressing up a shop window. In a few hours under their nimble fingers and artistic eyes the most drab and colorless front becomes an alluring invitation, a place of enchantment.

I wonder if something like that could not be done about life—to make it more winsome and beautiful. Oh, yes, there are beauty parlors where faded faces may be restored and girth lines shortened. But our concern is not the complexion or specific gravity. It is more serious, it has to do with our conduct.

How ugly much of it is! Think of sour looks, hard words, ill temper, the lack of courtesy, appreciation, consideration abroad in the world.

I am aware some of it is thoughtless; that often there is more inside than appears in the window; that behind a churlish manner, a rough exterior there is laughter, kindness, helpfulness. But "conduct is three-fourths of our life and its largest concern." Certainly it is an index of character. So it would be very fitting if we adorned ourselves with those qualities which make for charm and attractiveness.

Emerson observed that:

"A beautiful behavior . . . is the finest of the fine arts."

And the New Testament says:

"Love doth not behave it self unseemly."

A beautiful behavior, then, is especially binding upon the followers of Him who has been called God's gentleman.

There can never be a levelling-off process for men. Those who are on the level will always be head and shoulders above the rest.

2nd Regiment's 16th Company Leads In Bonds

Intensive Campaign Results In 100% Allotments By Men

Nearly every week some company in the Second Student Training regiment sets up a new record for the rest of Fort Benning to shoot at. This time it is the 16th Company, which announced 100 per cent participation in cash purchases in the War Bond drive.

As a result of an intensive one-week campaign, every man in the 16th Company purchased a Series E bond or a considerable amount of war saving stamps. Total cash sales amounted to $3,706.50 for the company, which is commanded by Capt. John S. Greenfield, with Lt. Roy A. Ostram, Jr. as bond officer. Lt. Ostram had this to say about the method used to achieve the 100 per cent figure:

SALES SPURRED

"One reason for such a success was the fact that we conducted platoon competitions, and periodically the standings were announced to the company, which had a miraculous effect in spurring on more sales.

"The Second Platoon was the first to reach the 100 per cent goal, with the Fourth Platoon having the highest volume very close behind. These two platoons each bought over $1,000 worth of bonds and stamps.

"The main thoughts which were brought before the company were that buying bonds now will mean a 'nest egg' when the war is over, and that we should have a part in our country's bond campaign this month. It should be a strong stimulus to prove to the civilian population that the men in uniform are likewise as eager to help by buying bonds as by giving their services to the nation."

Captain Tice Made Major

Captain Merton B. Tice, company commander of 1st Company, 1st STR, was promoted to rank of major, according to Colonel Robert Sharp, commanding officer.

Major Tice, a native of Mitchell, S. D., is a graduate of the University of South Dakota with a LLB degree. In college he was editor for the weekly newspaper and coach for the freshman basketball team. Being very active in sports he received letters in football, basketball, tennis and boxing.

Major Tice, a Reserve Officer, received his ROTC training at the University of South Dakota and

2nd STR Officers Get Transfers To Other Posts

Five officers left the Second Student Training regiment last week for duty elsewhere.

Major John J. Hazel, commanding officer of the Fourth Battalion, is going to the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Among the veteran oficers of the regiment, major Hazel originally commanded Hq. and Hq., Co., and then went to the Fourth Battalion after completing the advanced course at The Infantry School.

Capt. Norman R. Hueston, commanding the 8th Company, left last week-end for the advanced course on the Main Post, with Capt. Edwin Jenusaitis replacing him in command of the 8th Company.

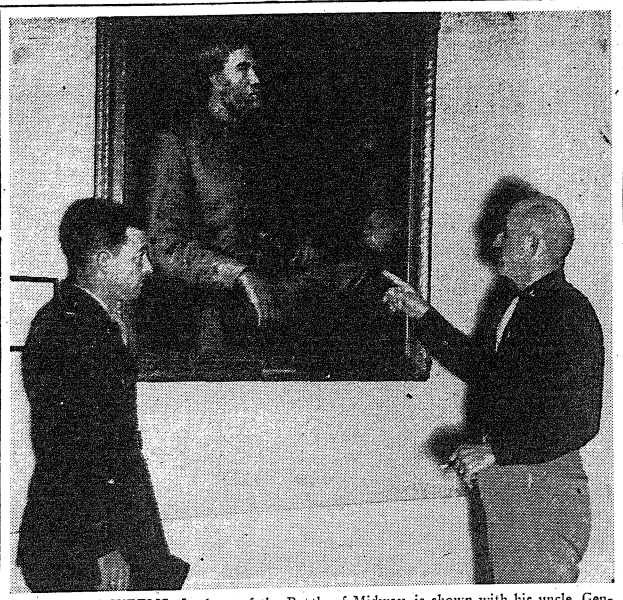
Three other captains left this week for duty elsewhere. Capt. Jack W. Mahler of 14th Company, Capt. Fred A. Polumbo of 17th Company, and Capt. Harvey W. Bush of 18th Company, Capt James K. Robinson replaces Capt. Mahler in command of 14th Company.

Capt. Polumbo for a number of months was Regimental Special Service Officer before going to the 17th Company, where he was executive officer. Capt. Bush was executive officer of the 18th Company.

State Guard School Founded

Georgia Officers, Other 4th S. C. Men to Train

Establishment of a school for State Guard officers at Fort Benning was announced today by Brigadier General Eric Fisher Wood, commanding general of Internal Security District No. 4. Selected officers from State Guard units in Georgia and other states in the Fourth Service Command will soon take special courses of training at this Army post.



In announcing the new school, General Wood disclosed that each course will be of one week's duration. The first course, scheduled May 2 through May 8, will be a company officers' course for guardsmen from Georgia. The second course May 16 through May 22, also company officers' course, will be for guardsmen from states other than Georgia in the Service Command. The third course, slated for May 23 through May 29, will enroll staff officers for special training.

225 IN CLASS

Each of the courses will enroll about 225 officers, General Wood said. The student-officers will attend demonstrations at Fort Benning's Infantry School as well as attend special lectures and demonstrations to be staged by officers attached to General Wood's headquarters.

commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant. In the present emergency he was called to active duty as a 1st lieutenant Oct. 3, 1941, and reported to Fort Benning, for the Infantry. He attended a Rifle and and Heavy Weapons course and was graduated Mar. 6, 1942. After graduation Major Tice was assigned to First Student Training Regiment as a tactical officer.

Cognomen 'Casey' Catches Candidate Christened 'K. C.'

Casey C. Brewer, an officer candidate in the 9th Company of the Second Student Training Regiment at the Infantry School, has a first name that is strictly G. I.

Here is how it happened. It was four years ago at Fort McClellan, Ala., when Brewer, who later became a first sergeant, was an army recruit.

After the immemorial fashion of all rookies, Brewer stood a tremble, with the rest of his uncertain companions, before the commanding officer for the first roll call.

"Brewer. K. C.," came the call, and Pvt. Brewer sounded off as manfully as he could under the circumstances.

"What," inquired the C. O., "does K. C. stand for in your name?"

"That's my name, sir, K. C. Brewer."

"Yes, I know, but what does K. C. stand for—Kansas City?"

"No, sir, K. C. is all there is to it."

The C. O. wrinkled his brows and considered. Then he began to beam as an idea smote him.

"Well, Pvt. Brewer, although I am a married man, I have never had the privilege of naming a child, so I am going to name you. Henceforth, my boy, you shall be known to the Army as Brewer, Casey C."

"Yes, sir!" yesired Pvt. Brewer, Casey C., in a dazed voice, not yet quite sure what had happened to him.

'Fighting Welches' Do Their Bit For Country

Officer Candidate James Welch of the Sixth Company, Third Student Training regiment, feels his family ought to be classified as the "fighting Welches" and there are many who concur with him.

Welch's 72-year-old invalid mother contributes to the war effort by sewing for the American Red Cross and through her activity as a charter member of the American Legion Auxiliary in Redwood Falls, Minn.

Two of his brothers, Frank and Chauncey, are veterans of World War No. 1, having served as first sergeant and second lieutenant, respectively. Another brother, John is in officer's training at Aberdeen, Md., and a fourth brother, Charles, a corporal, is stationed at Camp Blanding, Fla. A sister, Gladys, is a lieutenant in the Army Nurses' Corps and is serving overseas.

Last February a nephew of the candidate, Chauncey M. Erickson, was commissioned a second lieutenant through The Infantry School.

Canine Attends Tiger Lectures

Pup Grabs Platform Seat For Close View Of Illustrative Charts

The Unknown Dog was one of the most interested students at the officers' assembly of the 10th Armored Division last week.

Thirsting for knowledge, the Unknown Dog emerged from the woods at the approach of Major General Newgarden's car to the Tiger Bowl. This dog—of the species popularly known as man's best friend and the soldier's pal—took himself a seat on the platform in order to get all the latest dope on division training.

The Dog—Unknown—nodded a vigorous approval at the general's announcements concerning new drills, and showed a particular interest in the comments on vehicle drivers. Vehicles, this student indicated, must be driven with proper consideration for canine pedesterians.

Colonel P. G. Hansen, division surgeon, delivered a lecture on army medical services which fascinated the Unknown Dog. He bounced forward to inspect each chart as it was presented to the audience. One or two of the charts really held his interest, but for the most part he considered a cursory glance sufficient, concentrating more on the attendants who were manipulating the displays.

The WEFT system of plane identification held little or no allure for the Dog.

He indicated his intention of attending the next session. He has already been added to the list for distribution of orders so that he can be kept properly informed.

Quartermaster Continues Paper Salvage Drive

Even though the national paper shortage has been greatly alleviated, the Quartermaster Corps at Fort Bennnig is still waging a ceaseless campaign to salvage all usable paper at the post, according to Col. Stephen B. Massey, Director of Supply.

Recent instructions issued by the supply office at the post reiterate the care that should be taken in the classification and preparation of saleable waste paper prior to its delivery to the salvage warehouse.

It was emphasized that proper care should be taken that no greasy, waxed, or badly soiled paper, carbbon paper, banana peels, stalks, glass, rubbish, or foreign matter be included in any grade of saleable paper.

Waste paper turned in to the salvage warehouse is classified as newspapers, magazines and books, Kraft wrapping paper, and corrugated boxes. The first three classes are tied flat in convenient bundles which average 75 pounds, while the boxes should have the bottoms opened and be flattened, then tied tightly in bundles averaging 100 pounds.

Three times as many letters are written and received by the average soldier than when he was in civilian life.

here will "live the life of a soldier," General Wood observed. They will be obliged to "stand reveille" and all other regular military formations for the week's course.

The student officers will get practical work on rifle ranges, handling rifles as well as Thompson sub-machine guns.

Prior to the establishment of the school at Fort Benning to serve guardsmen from the Fourth Service Command, four courses of special instruction had been held, two at this post and two at other stations in Georgia.

Expert In Jap Tongue Here

Writes Nip Manuals For American Use

An expert in the Japanese language is something very rare, and also very useful, in the United States today. A teacher of this difficult subject has recently arrived, as an officer candidate in the 9th Company of the Second Student Training regiment. He is Lloyd J. Smith, formerly of the Hawaiian Islands.

Candidate Smith, who terms himself a "Jap specialist," has lived in the islands for several years, and in peace-time conducted a thriving business there. His knowledge of the entire Hawaiian group is extensive, and includes a study of the Orient for the past five years.

Focal point of this study has been the history, religion, culture and language of the Japanese, part of which he acquired in research and teaching at the University of Hawaii, and part in actual physical contact with the Japs and things Japanese.

PREPARES SOLDIERS

When the Nipponese struck on that fateful December 7, Smith, a member of our Army, was ready. His lectures to officers and men of our Pacific bastion prepared hundreds of them for the day they would contact the enemy.

Many of his former students have been on Guadalcanal and in other southwest Pacific areas, where they have put that knowledge to good use. In addition, he has written three Jap manuals which are now in use by our forces in the Pacific.

Candidate Smith tells an interesting, and perhaps prophetic, story on himself. At the time that Japanese funds in Hawaii were "unfrozen" by the government, he sold $42,000 in War Bonds to Japanese and citizens of that ancestry. Even the Nips know who's going to win the war!

Tulane Prexy Visits 24th Gen. Hospital

Medical Officials Of School Included In New Orleans Group

Dr. Rufus B. Harris, president of Tulane University of New Orleans, La., was at Fort Benning last week for a short visit to the 24th General Hospital, otherwise known as the Tulane unit.

Dr. Harris and his party composed of Dr. H. W. Kostmayer, dean of the college of medicine; and Dr. Alton B. Ochsner, professon of surgery, spent the day examining work of the unit's doctors at the station hospital.

The party sat with Brig. General Walter S. Fulton, post commander; Colonel Edward A. Moyes, commanding officer of the station hospital, and Colonel Walter S. Royals, commanding officer of the 24th Hospital, in the reviewing stand at French Polo Field and observed a review in their honor. Later Drs. Harris, Kostmayer, and Ochsner were honored at a banquet in the Officer's Club.

Most doctors on the 24th Hospital staff headed by Colonel Royals are Tulane graduates or former members of the university faculty who relinquished their teaching positions when the unit was called to duty. Among the latter are Lt. Col. Mims I. Gage, executive officer, who was associate professor of medicine; Lt. Col. S. H. Colvin, chief of the laboratory service, who was associate professor of pathology; and Lt. Col. R. P. Turner, chief of medical service, who is on leave from his post as assistant professor of pathology.

Acrobatics Valuable In Handling Weapons

The manual dexterity and coordination required in the handling of infantry weapons was obtained by Q. C. Jerome C. Knight of the 11th Company, Third Student Training regiment, long before the present war started.

Once a member of an acrobatic troupe that played leading vaudeville houses and circuses, Knight, in 1931, built up a Spanish impalement act in which he hurled knives and axes at a pretty partner. Some time before this he gained a knowledge of water movements as member of the crew of a private yacht and for experience in building enthusiasm among men he can point to another career as an announcer, lecturer and barker with circuses, midway shows and museums.

These are only a few of the highlights in Candidate Knight's variegated life. "I believe," he says, "that at least 15 years of my life have been a preparation for this war."

He taught acrobatic dancing and acrobatics to hundreds of persons who are still in show business today and he did engineering and pioneer work for a neon sign company, supervising the installation of some of the largest signs in the South.

Just prior to entering the Army he became chief investigator for the Sarasota, Fla., Police Department, and as a hobby, joined the Florida Volunteer Coast Guard, searching strange vessels for short wave radios and contraband.

At least 25 percent of the men in the Army were Boy Scouts of American in their youth.

TIS Tossers Seeking Revenge In Week-End Jaunt to Camp Wheeler

Powerful Spokes Capture Two Tilts At Gowdy Field

By SGT. MILTON LUBAN

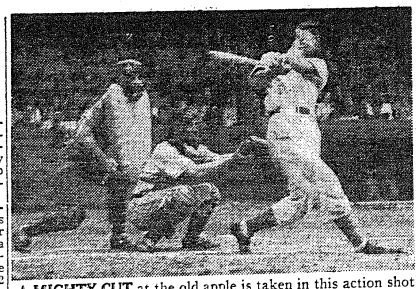
With blood in their eyes and revenge in their hearts, the Infantry School All-Stars leave for Marton Saturday morning where they play a night game against Camp Wheeler, followed by a game Sunday afternoon at the camp.

The Benning lads will be striving to break a hex which teams from Wheeler have held over them for lo, these maly years; a spell which, over the past weekend, sent a powerful TIS nine down to a double defeat, 6 to 2 and 10 to 6.

Wheeler's jinx was devastatingly assisted by Babe Ellis who launched a one-man blitzkreig in the two-game series, blasting out two triples, two doubles and two singles .It seemed that everytime the fans looked up there was Ellis tearing around the bases while the Benning pitcher looked disgusted.

Home runs by Cecil Travis and Bahrinsky also contributed to the TIS double loss, plus some brilliant hurling by Valko in the first game.

Both teams got only six hits in the first clash, but the lads from Wheeler made their's heavier and more timely. The second game saw both outfits smacking the ball, but Benning was just poking at it while Wheeler—or rather Ellis—was knocking the cover off the ball for extra base wallops.



Captain Hank Gowdy, in an effort to seek revenge, will probably throw Prendergast in against the Maconites. The TIS moundsman hurled good ball in the first game against Wheeler and with better luck—such as Ellis coming up with indigestion or Travis forgetting about the ballgame and going to a movie—may reverse the result. Christie will probably pitch the second game.

The All-Stars now have a record of 6 won and 4 lost. Leading their attack is Buddy Lewis with an average of .500 in four games. Unfortunately Lewis had to miss the other six games because of military duties.

Simmons, in eight games, is batting .410 while McCluskey, playing all 10 games is hitting .387.

The complete batting record for TIS:

	AB	R	H	Pct.	RBI
Lewis	14	5	7	.500	1
Simmons	17	2	7	.410	2
McCluskey	31	8	12	.387	7
Williams	12	0	4	.333	1
Zientara	40	10	13	.325	5
Moore	39	2	11	.282	4
Dabbs	32	7	9	.281	2
Mercer	25	4	7	.280	3
Hill	33	6	9	.272	7
Bamburger	18	3	3	.166	1
Stoker	15	0	1	.067	1

A MIGHTY CUT at the old apple is taken in this action shot of Buddy Lewis, erstwhile Washington Senator now playing with the TIS nine, driving an outfield fly in the Sunday game with Wheeler. Notice the cocked wrists of the ex-big leaguer. The catcher is Lou Isert, once of Louisville, and the umpire is Clint Hill.—(Signal Lab Photo by Stock.)

Leaders Begin to Appear In Tiger Diamond Loop

Several Nines Still Tied For First

Five teams in the Sand Hill league and four in the Cusseta league were undefeated at the close of the first full week of Tiger diamond play, according to official standings released by loop statisticians.

Although it is far too early to ascertain just what teams can be counted on to finish in the first divisions, at least half a dozen nines have already shown plenty of power, and pitching all down the line has been excellent.

In the Sand Hill circuit, the 3rd Armored Regiment, defending divisional champion, the 11th Armored Regiment and the 423rd Armored F. A. Battalion all looked like potential topnotchers in scoring crushing victories.

Cusseta loop lay has revealed that the Maintenance Battalion, defending league titlist, 774th T. D. Battalion, 455th C. A. (AA) Battalion and Supply Battalion all have the stuff of which pennant winners are made.

Outstanding feature of the opening week's play were the stellar jobs turned in by the moundsmen, two, three and four-hit performances being common occurences. Even the losing pitchers turned in neat chores in most games, poor support costing them well-pitched games.

Auburn Tigers Play Chutists Here Saturday

Parachute School To Entertain Collegians In Afternoon Battle

Auburn's Tigers will pay their annual spring baseball visit to Fort Benning on Saturday afternoon when they invade the post for a diamond battle with the Parachute School nine at Gowdy Field,

The game will get under way at 3:30 o'clock and is expected to draw a large crowd. The Tigers, being the nearest collegiate neighbors of the fort, have always been a popular favorite on Benning athletic fields.

GOOD HOLDOVERS

Last year the collegians from Tigertown boasted an unusually strong nine that divided a pair of Gowdy Field frays with the post team. Several holdovers, as well as a liberal sprinkling of grid stars, are included on this year's Tiger nine.

For the Auburn tilt, the Parachute School will field a team that is improving with every game. In Borden, Grodzinski and Davol, the chutists have some likely looking moundsmen. They are still weak behind the plate, but Gilman is rapidly developing into a good receiver.

MORRIS SLICK

In the infield, Morris is a slick-fielding first baseman who also weilds a big stick at the platter. Porterfield has also strengthened the infield with his play at second base while either Boki or Kinard will start at short with Maguire at third.

The TPS garden trio will probably be composed of Haller in left, Coyle in center and Hudson in right. Hudson was formerly the first-sacker but gave way to the rangier Morris.

53rd Hospital Nine Triumphs To Top League

Seward Hurls Team To Impressive Win Over Paratroopers

George Seward hurled sterling five-hit ball last night at Gowdy field as he pitched the 53rd General hospital nine to a convincing 6-1 win over the Parachute school. The triumph made it two straight for the Medicos and gave them possession of first place in the Fort Benning league.

The slim right-hander's wide-sweeping curves completely baffled the chutists and had them reaching for the horsehide all night. Seward racked up eight strikeouts and scattered the five hits he allowed over as many innings.

The mound performance of the Medico ace was by far the best of the season at Gowdy field and was performed under half-and-half lighting conditions. The game started at 7 o'clock and the first half was played in the twilight with the powerful floodlights being turned on for the final four innings.

Behind Seward's effective mound work, the 53rd Hospital nine cracked out a 10-hit attack which enabled them to win the game with ease. Pete Borden was the losing pitcher for the paratroopers, and although he gave up at least one hit in all but two frames, he was fairly effective.

No actual errors were recorded on the chutist nine's ledger, but several miscues helped the Medicos to runs. Three passed balls by the TPS catchers accounted for a trio of the 53rd's tallies, while an "Alphonse and Gaston" act on a fly ball back of second in the sixth gave Anderson a fluke hit that drove in two more tallies.

The lone Parachute school run came in the second frame when Hudson walked, stole second and caromed across on a timely safety by Dan Coyle, TPS centerfielder. Coyle, along with Boki accounted for two hits apiece in the losing cause.

Bristow and Logan, the short-stopper and third sacker for the Medicos, were the big guns at the plate with two hits apiece while Johnny Byszesky scintillated in the field, accounting for seven unassisted putouts at first base.

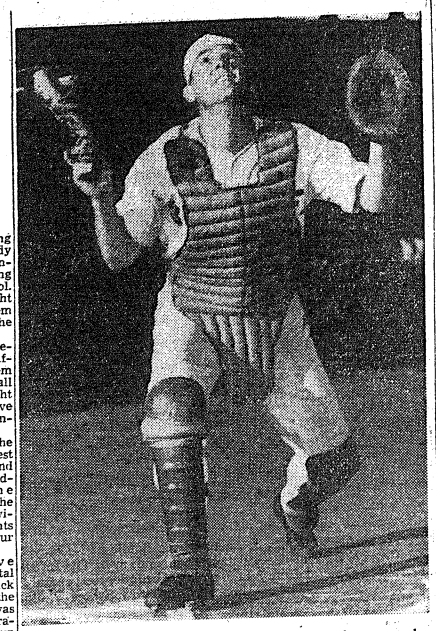
3rd Armored Hq. Company Volleyball Kings



Upset Victory Scored Over Defending Champs 10th Armored Division

Defeating last year's champions in a major upset, Headquarters Co. of the 3rd Armored Regiment won the volleyball championship of the 10th Armored Division in a fast-moving battle. In taking the title the "pencil-pushers" of the 11th subdued Rcn. Co., 11th Armored Regiment, 15-12, 15-5.

The new champions, who claim that their "superb physical condition" is the result of lifting typewriters from one desk to another, were captained by M-Sgt. Sterling G. Thompson who also organized the team. The only officer on the team is 2nd Lt. Robert J. McPeak, who has been mainly responsible for most of the points scored by the 3rd this year.

Others who helped the company team to gain the divisional title were T-Sgt. Robert M. Brown, T-4 Donald C. Pfeiffer, Cpl. Clarence H. Connor, Cpl. Joseph Strasqulic, T-5 Everett R. Peterson and Pvt. Myron M. Gasteneau.

In the first round of the tournament the champions defeated Rcn. Co., 774th T. D. Bn., while Service Battery, 423rd F. A. Bn drew a bye. Co. A, 54th Armd. Inf. Regt., subdued Co. B, 80th Armd. Med. Bn., while Rcn. Co., 11th Armd. Regt., had little trouble with the 150th Armd. Sig. Co. and Hq. and Hq. Co. forfeited to Co. A., Main. Bn. In the playoffs, Reg. Hq. Co., 3rd Armd Regt., outplayed Co. A, 54th Inf. Regt., and Rcn. Co., 11th Armd. Regt., defeated Co. A, Main. Bn. The finale went to Regt. Hq. Co. of the 3rd by scores of 15-12, 15-5.

UP AND AT 'EM yells Val Van Horn, 300th Infantry catcher, as he prepared to park under a foul fly back of the plate. The burly receiver will be seen in action Monday night at Gowdy Field when the 300th nine attempts to halt the Academic Profs in a night tilt at 8:30. Van Horn is also one of the big guns of the new infantry nine at the plate.—(Signal Lab Photo by Stock.)

24th General Hospital To Clash With 513th Tonight

Fort Benning League Nines Meet At Gowdy In 7 O'clock Game

The 24th General Hospital club will make its baseball bow in the Fort Benning League at 7:00 o'clock tonight when the Medics tackle the 513th Parachutes in a twilight-floodlight tussle at Gowdy Field.

The paratroopers from the Alabama side of the river took a sound shellacking in their first diamond outing from the 53rd Hospital, arch-rivals of the 24th, and will return tonight with blood in their eyes.

Both nines are still in the formative stages, and will probably have to play a few games before very much can be said about their chances.

24TH VS. 53RD

The 24th crew will have to reach their peak fast, however, because they are slated to oppose the loop-leading 53rd Medicos in the nightcap of Sunday's twin bill at Gowdy. In the opener at 1:00 o'clock(Lawson Field and the Parachute School will clash in the attraction that was postponed from opening day a couple weeks ago.

A fourth Fort Benning League tilt carded for the next week will pit the 513th tossers against Lawson Field on Tuesday night in a 7:00 o'clock game. The Fliers have a potent club that may figure strongly in the title picture, especially if Buddy Lewis, the ex-Washington Senator, can find time to play.

Crack Skiier In 3rd STR

Sees Construction Of Alpine Fortifications

After considering his experience in skiing and mountain climbing and something he personally witnessed in Europe several years ago, Officer Candidate McGregor Gray of the Fourth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, has concluded he favors the mountaineers over other branches of infantry.

Gray, who is the son of Dr. C. H. Gray, president of Board College, Annandale-on-Hudson, N. Y., captained the ski team of Reed College, Portland, Ore., for three years. He competed on such peaks as Mt. Hood, Mt. St. Helena and Mt. Rainier and in Yosemite Park. He made the first ascent of Mt. Heyburn in Idaho's Saw-tooth Mountains, regarded thereto as an "unclimbable" peak.

In 1937, while he was on a climbing holiday in Austria, Gray watched some 300 soldiers rope-hauling a giant howitzer up the steep crags of the Styrian Alps. They were from a regiment of Alpine engineers building fortifications facing south, and the memory of that rugged country is enough personally to convince Gray that any Allied invasion of the continent through the Alps would present tremendous difficulties.

Candidate Gray learned the German language while a student in 1930, at the Odenwaldschule near Heidelberg, a school which did not continue long after Hitler came to power. Gray entered the Army last August and took his basic training at Camp Wheeler.

Soldier Suffers Gun Wounds

Pfc. James D. Matthews, a member of Headquarters company, 55th Armored Engineers Battalion, Tenth Armored Division, is in the station hospital today in serious condition after he was struck in the chest by a bullet fired accidentally by a guard at Lawson Field, post air base. The bullet traveled 800 yards, and struck Matthews, who was visiting in the Parachute School area. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Matthews of Park Height, Route One, Cumberland, Maryland.

The Officers R. & R. Club on Cusseta Road is by far the most popular place in Columbus for commissioned officers and their guests. Ask anyone on the reservation who has been there.

3rd STR Service Battalion Boasts Promising Fighter

Service Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment is presenting another candidate for pugilistic laurels in the person of Pvt. Timothy (Big Tim) Still, who fought both in amateur and professional circles prior to entering the Army.

Big Tim fights with the Panthers Boxing Club of the battalion and says his early experience was gained in his Newark, N. J., neighborhood where the rule of the "survival of the fittest" prevailed. "It was fight or be mangled," Big Tim declares.

The fighter was conditioned by a stretch in the CCC where he entered an interstate boxing tournament. Then he entered the Golden Belt Tournament sponsored by the Newark A. C. and appeared at Madison Square Garden in New York. Turning professional before he was called by Uncle Sam, Big Tim achieved several meritorious victories over opponents of recognized ability.

Mat Champ Takes Course

A former intercollegiate wrestling champion is training as an officer candidate in the 11th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment here for the day he can pin the backs of the Japs and Nazis to the ground and make them holler "Uncle Sam."

He is David S. Weiner, who won the title in the welterweight division of the eastern states while grappling with the Temple University team in Philadelphia, in 1937. Later in that same year he entered the Temple Law School and was awarded his degree.

Candidate Weiner is deservedly proud of his wife, Mary Smogar Weiner, concert pianist who began her career as a finalist in the Robin Hood Dell Competition in Philadelphia in 1939.

Profs Trounce Gator Tossers By 16-7 Count

Academic Regiment Wins Opener In TIS Loop Easily

The Academic Regiment Profs got off to a flying start Tuesday night in the Infantry School league race by mauling the 124th Infantry, 16 to 7. It was a wild game that featured 27 hits, 12 errors, 14 strikeouts, five walks, two passed balls, a hit batsman and a riotous ninth inning which saw the Gators come bouncing back with six runs after being held to seven hits for eight innings.

DICKINSON HURLS

Dickinson pitched brilliant ball for the Profs, holding the Gaters to five hits and no runs up until the sixth inning when tw hits and an error spoiled his shutout.

In the last of the ninth the Prof hurler visibly grew tired and the fans who walked out when the score was 15 to 0 missed a wild finish climaxed by pinch-hitter Pieton's screaming triple with the bases loaded.

EARLY DEAD

The Profs got off to a five run lead in the first, added another run in the third, three more in the fifth, three in the sixth, three in the seventh and one more in the eighth.

Included in the Prof attack were homers by Dabbs and Moore and two solid doubles by Fenno, who led the Prof batters with 3 hits and a walk. Fenno scored three times himself and handled Dickinson's slants flawlessly behind the plate.

Time's Editor Visits Benning

Henry Luce Impressed By Brains Over Brawn

Henry R. Luce, editor of Time, Life and Fortune Magazines and William Howland, head of the Southern Bureau at Atlanta for the Luce publications were visitors at the Infantry School last Thursday and Friday.

The nationally famous editor on his first trip to Georgia made a visit to communications, automotive schools, and saw mechanical instruction. He watched officer candidate classes in action on village street fighting and small tactical problems using live ammunition. Upon completion of the tour Luce commented: "During my brief visit I have seen enough to fill a complete issue of Life Magazine. I was especially impressed by the use of brains over brawn."

Mr. Luce, who leaves today for a visit with relatives in Florida, was the house guest of Major Genral Leven C. Allen, Infantry School commandant, during his stay here. Mr. Howland was the guest of Brigadier General George H. Weems, assistant commandant of the Infantry School.

Also on the diplomatic front, the United States is on verge of a break with Finland, which may come at any time now. Apparently German occupation of Finnish territory is feared, and it may be an attempt to pry Finland right out of the war.

Sweden has protested reported attack by a German merchantman on the Swedish submarine Draken and Sweden may attempt to halt use of her territorial waters by Nazi ships. That would handicap German shipping between Norway and Denmark and might lead to German occupation of Sweden if the controversy is not settled.

HERE AT HOME, fierce anger blazed over announcement that Japanese had slaughtered some of the eight airmen who were forced down on Japanese held territory following General Doolittle's raid over the Japanese home islands a year ago. The killings were reported to be admitted by the Japanese governments to Swiss inquiries. Number of aviators executed is not known for a certainty, however.

Secretary Stimson opposed the enactment of legislation that would bar induction this year of fathers married prior to Pearl Harbor, claiming that "great opportunities are now developing for us to end the war as quickly as possible." He went on to say that in order to take advantage of developing these opportunities "it is essential that the carefully planned and co-ordinated program of raising and training an army composed of our best-equipped fighting men be not impeded."

John L. Lewis is defying the War Labor Board by refusing to nominate a labor member of a three-men panel to hear a dispute in the soft coal wage situation. Sporatic strike outbreaks are reported from various parts of the Appalachian field. The outlook is declared "dark" by district coal heads.

Drastic cuts were ordered in point values of canned and dried fruits and vegetables, and dried soupr, all frozen fruits and vegetables.

resolution also was passed closing "indefinitely" the Blue Bird cafe, at the end of the Fourteenth street bridge, where Pvt. William Dunbar was seriously wounded last week; and Woody's cafe on Third avenue, where John Reed was arrested for allegedly pistol-whipping William Gibson and Stepp Gordon, Ft. Benning, in an affray last Friday night.

The Phenix commissioners recalled that the two places had long been in bad repute. They indicated others of the "troublesome" type are also being considered for closing action.

C. J. Brown, who is out of the hospital and at liberty under a bond of $1,000 for his court appearance on a charge of assault, with intent to commit murder in the shooting of Private Dunbar, appeared before the commissioners seeking the re-opening of the Blue Bird cafe. He was told that the place would be closed indefinitely.

Woman's Club

BY KATHERINE HAMMARGR...

Newcomers to the post are invited to attend the final meeting of the Fort Benning Woman's Club, to take the form of a May breakfast Monday, May 3, at 1:30 p. m. in the main lounge of the Officers' Club. The opportunity to attend the traditional final event of the club will enable officers' wives, non-members and perhaps feeling a little strange in their new surroundings, to become acquainted.

Mrs. S. E. Faine, in charge of reservations, urges those who desire to attend to phone in their reservations as soon as possible. Reservations must be in by Friday night, April 30. Members of the reservations committee are Mrs. Faine, F. B. 3230; Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, F. B. 2622; Mrs. W. M Spann, F. B. 2620; Mrs. E. R. Bowie, F. B.. 2600; and Mrs. C. D. York, dial 8 and ask for 281-W. Price of the luncheon is eighty-five cents.

The flower show generally held in conjunction with the breakfast will not be given this year, officials of the club feeling that many flowers have been spaded up to make room for victor ygardens. The meeting will be purely social, giving women a chance to chat with friends and discuss plans for the summer months.

Mrs. Reginald H. Kelley, president, will preside at the breakfast, at which newly elected officers will be installed. Mrs. H. E. Potter, decorations chairman, will be in charge of table arrangements.

WOMAN'S CLUB

Final general meeting of the Fort Benning Woman's Club, the traditional May breakfast, will be held Monday, May 3, at 1:30 p. m. in the main lounge of the Officers' Club. Reservations must be in by Friday night, April 30.

Vet Preaches Self-Discipline In Water Use

Training Practice To Prove Value In Actual Combat

Learn to use water sparingly while training for this discipline will prove valuable overseas, is the advice of Officer Candidate William J. Burns, of Marlboro, Mass., who recently returned from nine months' service in Africa. Burns is studying for his second lieutenant's bars in the 24th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment here.

"When I left, the water allotment was a pint a man each day," reveals Burns, who was first sergeant in a headquarters and service company of a task force. "With this the soldier had to wash himself, shave and wash some of his clothes. Of course, our clothing consisted mostly of khaki shorts."

Morale among the troops was quite high when he left in March, Burns said, despite the inconvenience, such as not being able to run over to a "PX" every few hours for refreshments. He came back to the United States by plane.

Burns is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas V. Burns of Marlboro and was engaged in construction work before entering the Army. His officer candidate company is scheduled to be graduated July 9.

No man can manufacture planes in the time he spends manufacturing excuses.

'Drunkard' Slated For Hospital Coming Sunday

A presentation of the hilarious comedy "The Drunkard" by the Columbus Civic Theater will be brought to the Station Hospital recreation hall to entertain patients and staff at 3 p. m. Sunday, it was announced today by Lt. Col. C. C. Finnegan, Special Service Officer.

The comedy has been played every Friday and Saturday night for the past six weeks in the Chase Playhouse, 220 Tenth Street and will run for two or three weeks longer after this week end.

Pvt. Julian Rawlings of the Academic Regiment is one of the actors in the cast. The others are from Columbus.

An Army Wife Shops In Columbus

By Phyllis

We're all doing our level best to manage our homes as usual despite less time, less help, more work and no glory. We're still eating well despite rationing and shortages; we're still looking chic as ever. The answer to it all is thoughtful planning by the ingenious women of today.—P.B.T.

Every day should be Mother's Day, but since just ONE day has been so designated, make the most of it. The gifts at MAX ROSENBERG COMPANY, 1239 Broadway are all ideal for Mothers. One outstanding value in this display is a practical and attractive pitcher of the ever-popular Wedgewood China. Fostoria crystal vases in modern and semi-modern styles are useful and unusual suggestions. Once again the temperature rises to 90 degrees and will keep on rising. Thus the order of the day is an endless supply of long and frosted drinks. Ideal for this are tall, colorfully decorated highball glasses. Scalloped paper napkins featuring tricky verses and coasters for avoiding scarred furniture make inexpensive and smart presents for the home. An unusual bargain, reduced especially for Mother's Day is a 6 piece goldbordered china and srystal dinner service. Ornamental jars speckled with gold and flower bedecked may be used as actual containers or merely decorative purposes. These gifts are just a few of the appealing assortment to intrigue all members of the family, but especially Mothers, on this, their day. The time is drawing nigh, so do YOUR shopping for YOUR Mother's gifts now!

This summer, as never before, you'll want clothes that are honestly workable . . . nuisance-proof, time-saving clothes that are easy to slip into and out of . . . dutiful for work and beautiful for any midsummer's night scheme. A Nelly Don, L'Aiglon or Doris Dodson label on a summer dress is a sure sign of unfailing standard of excellence without being beyond the average woman's means. KIRALFY'S has a vast assortment of these famous lines at Doris Dodson Shantung has long been one of the summer pets of chic women. Large shaggy white chrysanthemums printed on a cool Sea Foam green shantung two-piece dress is just one of the numerous attractive renditions in this variety of unusual values. Many of these frocks of butcher linen and plaid or striped seersucker are the very simplest yet the most feminine type summer wear. Each one is noticed for its beautiful lines and dashing detail. In order to be cool, smartly attired and LOOK expensively dressed you'll have to feast your amazed eyes on the price tags on all these dresses, any one of which will enable you to receive your share of flattering compliments.

—V—

As warm weather (and pretty soon, hot weather) engulfs us at Fort Benning, we anxiously change to our cool wardrobes—bringing forth light cotton dresses and other light fabrics which will keep us cool during the hot months ahead. While light dresses play an important part in keeping the body cool, so light fabric slip covers on our furniture tend to make the home move liveable during the sultry months. SEARS ROEBUCK AND CO. has a grand display of washable fabrics with which to fashion some delightful coverings for your overstuffed sofa or heavy chairs during the summer months. Those of us who have, at one time or another, done without slip covers fully realize how important they are during the summer months. There seems to be a favorable psychological reaction at least, at the end of a hot day, to enter a home with cool, clean slip covers. There the individual tends to feel as cool as the slip covers look fresh. The fine variety of materials and designs available in bulk at Sears should warrant your attention. Your favorite seamstress could make a couple of suitable slip covers for you in no time flat. Or, better yet, why not take a try at it yourself? You'll be mighty pleased come July to enjoy the comforts cool and attractive covered furniture.

Noticed and welcomed by all is the change of military personnel to the regulation light tan summer uniforms. Not only is it universally becoming (but, you've guessed it!), it is a shade especially suitable for wear when "smooth" photographic results are desired. This was told me, and proved by Mr. Klemcheck of the AIME DUPONT STUDIOS, 1219 Broadway. Keeping all this in mind it would seem now might be the appropriate time to have photographs taken to send to your loved ones wherever they may be. A new process using Etching Plates is an offering of this skilled Studio which results in the fine detail and exact likeness necessary for an outstanding portrait. Letters help quite a bit when families are separated, but a photograph is the next best thing to being home in person. There is no need to wait until a birthday or holiday prompts a sitting. In fact, sending home a reliable likeness when it is least expected shows loved ones they're in your thoughts every minute. Whether you be Officer, Enlisted Man, Army wife, WAAC, or Army Nurse, having your photograph taken at the first opportune moment will result in a display of especially fine workmanship to be cherished forevermore.

Pristine white pique is as intriguing as a flash in a dimout . . . crisp, clean white to emphasize importantly meticulous tailoring. The collection of pique frocks at KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC., will add a bit of zing to your "smooth as cream" look. Rhinestone studs sparkle down the front of one especially unusual dress in this collection. Pique appliqued on mesh highlights the "V" neck and cuffs of a black patent leather belt tops off the whole affair. It sounds divine, doesn't it? Take my word for it, this is really THE dress! Another attractive pique dress is fashioned along Princess lines with a square neck. A wide band of mesh bordering the bottom of the skirt and outlining the neck is appliqued with a rather baroque-like design. All of the outstandingly attractive pique dresses in this shop have been designed with an eye to exquisite wearability. Among the more colorful dresses displayed are cardigan-styled polka-dot prints with white dots on rust, blue, green or red backgrounds of light rayon crepe. The simple jackets are nicely tailored and trimmed with narrow grosgrain ribbon to add a finished touch. One or more of these serviceable two-piece dresses would be a worthwhile addition to your wardrobe, I'm sure. Just a wee peek at any of these dresses will make you want to own them all!

Bits of expensive foolishness are banned for the duration. Now as never before practical gifts are welcomed by one and all. This Mother's Day what could be more practical and yet, at the same time, a more cherished gift, than attractive linens? The linen department of J. A. KIRVEN CO. is overflowing with luncheon sets, sheets, tea napkins and guest towels. A set of white Cannon Percale sheets and pillow cases would, without a doubt, gladden the heart of any Mother. Not to be overlooked is the fact that this attractive buy includes sheets in the 81"x108" size. Pale peach organdy decorated with white embroidered organdy borders results in a lovely four-piece luncheon set. Other luncheon sets in this array include plain white organdy or white organdy printed occasionally with pink roses. All are four piece sets. Ideal for everyday use and indeed a practical gift is a bright colored cotton luncheon set in basket-weave design. Anything made of real Irish linen will, you may be sure, be treasured and enjoyed a whole lifetime. Dainty hemstitched tea napkins of Irish linen highlight the multitudinous assortment of household gifts displayed for your approval in Kirven's linen department.

There's that old idiom about the "Army marches on its stomach." But, those of us who know the Infantry are quite well aware of the fact that they do plenty of marching on their feet! Which is the reason the Army is so insistent upon soldiers having comfortable shoes which fit properly. And, as every soldier is proud of his G.I. brogans, so he is especially keen about having a fine pair of low cut dress shoes. MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY is well known as the shopping center for dress shoes for officers and enlisted men alike from Fort Benning. Jarman military oxfords and Florsheim shoes are popular best-sellers by this shoe store. Now that Shoe Ration Coupon No. 17 is as preciously preserved by our men-folk in the Army as they are by us, the former are especially interested in buying quality shoes with the proper fit and guarantee for wearability. Both Jarman and Florsheim rank as favorites as thousands of officers and enlisted men have subjected them to the best test . . . that of actually buying a pair and wearing them. I suggest you remind your husband or beau the next time he contemplates buying a pair of shoes that he should, first of all, view the quality footwear on display at this store.

There must be scores of us who have yet to buy an appropriate card for our Mothers to herald the occasion of Mother's Day on May 9. There will be several Mothers of soldiers at Fort Benning from May 7 through May 9 as the guests of the post to enhance the spirit of Mother's Day for the troops. Especially, fortunate are the lucky Mothers who were selected for an all-expense trip to Fort Benning to see their sons. Others of us who will be separated from our Mothers for the occasion should not neglect to select a lovely card with which to send our remembrances. J. J. NEWBERRY CO., at 1149 Broadway, has a wide selection of beautiful cards which would please any of us . . . and especially our Mothers. If you choose to send a small gift, such as hankies or attractively-packaged toilet sets, I suggest you visit this store and view their display of suitable presents. Since most of us prefer to send home a small gift of some sort for the occasion, the selection you can choose from in this store should not be overlooked. A delightful card and possibly a small gift may seem to be but such a small thing. However, the Mother who receives the card and gift, no matter how inexperienced they be, will consider herself enthroned for yet another year.

A visit to Toyland is often, surprisingly enough enjoyed by adults as much as by youngsters. While visiting the Toyland section of BENTLEY'S SPORT SHOP, I had as much fun as several wide - eyed youngsters I noticed having the time of their lives nearby. In every corner of this store are interesting displays—miniature nurses kits, ouija boards, stuffed Pandas, character dolls and intriguingly bright books to gladden the heart of one's offspring. Ideal to calm down an over-active child is a miniature printing press which really prints! This reasonably priced gift would be sure to keep not only your youngster, but those of all the neighborhood, quiet and happy on many a long day. The ever-popular "Child's Garden of Verses" by Robert Louis Stevenson is just one of the many appropriate book selections especially suited for young people. Another attractively decorated and rather tricky book is the beloved "Surprise Book," by Tony Sarg, which really has to be seen to be enjoyed. It's honestly cute beyond description. Baby feeding sets and gay rattles are suitable gifts for the wee one sincluded in this colorful array for children. Bentley's also has in this same section some real Wild West cowboy suits for both boys and girls. Whatever you're seeking to make some tiny tot happy, you'll find it in this Toyland.

Typical Platoon Leader Model Autumn 1943 Is 26, Tall, Rangy Athlete

The typical American young man who hopes to be a second lieutenant by summer and leading a platoon of Infantry into battle by autumn, is 26 years old, a high school graduate with maybe a year or less of college, and not so long ago was a clerk or a machinist, a salesman or a lawyer, or just a student who closed his books and put away his football togs to take a poke at the Axis.

This description of the next crop of shavetails was found by a recent survey of officer candidates in a company picked at random in the Second Student Training regiment at Fort Benning's Infantry School.

The ages of the candidates in this one company are spread from 18 to 40, with the younger men predominating. They are a tall and rangy group, for the most part, and many of them have won varsity letters in three or four sports.

They came from nearly every state in the union and from several foreign countries, one candidate being a Russian who had served five years in the French Foreign Legion before coming to the United States.

The ten leading occupations of this company of officer candidates before they entered the Army were, in order of the most numerous, as follows:

Clerks, students, machinists, salesmen, lawyers, factory foremen, farmers, store managers, teachers, auto mechanics.

There was not an ex-mayor in this particular company of officer candidates, but otherwise they came from enough varied occupations to be able to run a fair-sized city. One used to be a judge, and two were policemen while still another was a plain-clothes operator. There was even an undertaker.

Two candidates could run a newspaper, and a third could print it. There was a letter carrier, who was taking a busman's holiday in the Infantry. Two bartenders were on hand, as well as a pair of brewery sales managers, rivals no doubt.

No doctors were available, but one mechanical dentist turned up. There were two bakers, but no butcher. The banking situation was well taken care of with a teller and an auditor.

If interested in a home, there was a real estate man, a contractor and a loan investigator, a linoleum layer and an interior decorator, a lighting expert and a landscape nursery manager.

A switchboard operator was available to take calls, and a lineman to put them through. One man could manage a dairy, two could run restaurants. There was a florist, also a candy manufacturer and a silverware polisher. One candidate made toys, another soap.

THEATRICAL GROUP

Something could undoubtedly be cooked up between the playwright, the singer, the theater manager, and the sign painter.

One man ran a textile plant, the man in the next bunk was a fancy loom weaver. Three drove trucks, one a motorcycle.

Americans all—steelworker and soda jerk, filling station attendant and stock broker, tinsmith and railway brakeman, ranch foreman and coal car loader, welder and electrician—they are now learning the most serious and responsible business of their lives; how to lead a platoon or a company or a battalion of Infantry into the final test of battle.

An Easter egg hunt was enjoyed by the 33 tiny pupils of Mrs. Berta Wilson and Mrs. Minnie Trapp. The children found the eggs hidden in the grass on the edge of the athletic field. Sheba Cadenhead found the most eggs and won a prize, while Linda Sue Zola won the prize for finding the golden egg.

Enlisted Men Go To Auburn

38 Chosen For AST; To Get Refreshers

Thirty-eight Fort Benning enlisted men reported to Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, Ala., last week for refresher courses and classification in the army specialized training program, Lieut. Salvador Llosa, station supervisor of the ASTP announced today.

After taking the refresher courses, the men will be classified as to whether they should take the basic or advanced courses offered by Auburn or other colleges assisting under the program. Auburn is one of the three "Star Schools" currently being operated in the Fourth Service Command for classifying white soldiers who have been selected for the courses. The other two are The Citadel and North Carolina State College. Colored enlisted men selected will be sent to the Agricultural and Technical School of North Carolina.

The establishment of these Star Schools, Lieut. Llosa reveals, is a new procedure just adopted by the Army in connection with the program. Although the function of classifying the selected men is being taken over by the Star Schools, selection and recommendation of the soldiers will remain the job of the board at Fort Benning and other camps.

THE SELECTEES

Men from Fort Benning who reported at Auburn were Corp. Donald W. Dugan, 24th Hospital Train; Corp. James I. Long, 420th Field Artillery; Tech. 5th Grade Joseph M. Moriarty, 82d General Hospital; Pfc. Leonard C. Carlson, C. B., 58th Armored Engineer Battalion; Pfc. John B. Ely, Co. B, 90th Armored Reconnaissance Battalion; Pfc. Warren C. Hoover, Jr., 55th Armored Engineer Battalion; Harry R. Ray, Service Battery, 423d Field Artillery; Pfc. Richard E. Shaver, Co. D, 54th Armored Infantry Regiment; Pfc. James C. Thayer, Reconnaissance Co., 3d Armored Regiment; Pfc. Sidney Ziff, Co. G, 3d Armored Regiment.

Tiger Anti-Tank Platoon Scores Perfect Mark

The white target moved slowly along its 100-yard front. Four hundred yards away the 37 mm. self-propelled anti-tank guns were lined up, taking their turns firing at the elusive square which moves at a tantalizing 15 miles per hour.

Suddenly a "spat," as they are affectionately called, belched smoke and orange flame. It was the last shot of the day, and the result was anxiously awaited by the members of the crew. Finally the word came through. The shot was perfect!

This was the signal for a general outburst from the men who had fired the shot. There was an excellent reason for this celebration. Out of the six guns of the Maintenance Battalion anti-tank platoon, not a one had scored less than a possible 40 points—which is perfect shooting in any man's army. Other units firing could do no better than to produce two guns with perfect scores.

Supplementing the record-breaking performance of the anti-tank platoon was the perfect showing made by the 37 mm. gun crews of the three letter companies. Practicing with sub-calibre ammunition as the anti-tank platoon was achieving its record-breaking score, the company crews later moved up to the firing line and came through with two hits out of two tries, thus upholding the reputation previously acquired by the anti-tankers.

If you can't spend your money, see your paymaster or disbursing officer for details of the special savings plan called Soldier's Deposits, which is sponsored by the War Department. It pays interest of four per cent on deposits for six months or over.

Remember that anything which will disclose the enemy's position to you will show him your presence, so do not be careless in any way which might attract attention to your position.

Captain Goderre Gets Majority

The promotion of Captain Cleo R. Goderre, regimental mass officer of the Third Student Training regiment here in The Infantry School was announced recently.

Major Goderre is from Gardner, Mass., and was an instructor of health and education at the University of Alabama before being called to active duty September 20, 1940. He received his B. S. Degree from the University of Alabama and M. S. from the Massachusetts State College, Amherst, Mass. He also is a graduate of the Rifle and Heavy Weapons Course here in The Infantry School.

1st STR Officers Softball League

Lieutenant Joseph T. Casey, tactical officer of 18th Company, 1st Student Training regiment, is in full agreement with the morale building idea of his "Army Mother." His enthusiasm for the idea may have been increased by the fact that she has him judging the idea for its worth to the Army.

Several carefully prepared packages were received by Lieutenant Casey during the past week. The packages contain foods not easily obtained, wrapped in cartoons, newspaper clippings likely to be of interest, and complete articles clipped from popular magazines. It is proposed by the civilian group, sending the samples to distribute these "fox hole rations" to soldiers traveling on trains and busses.

To those who well experienced the difficulty of obtaining food while travelling, "fox hole rations" should be a welcome innovation. After judiciously sampling the rations, Lieutenant Casey recommended the idea whole heartedly.

7 Waac's Go To OC School

Are First From Post To Seek Commission

The first group of members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps at Fort Benning to be selected to take the officers training course in the WAACs entrained left late last week for Fort Des Moines, Ia., where they will seek their commissions.

Seven enlisted members of the 43rd Post Headquarters company who have been assigned to Fort Benning with their company since March 5, have been serving in various jobs at the post headquarters while at Benning. As the members of the WAACs left their company, Captain Evelyn Rothrock, company commander, and members of the company waved goodbye and sent them on their way.

The WAACs who were named to take officer candidate training are Technician Fourth Grade Opal B. Aliff, of Whitesville, West Va.; Technician Fifth Grade Nancy V. D'Amico and Emile E. Dean, of Philadelphia, Pa.; May S. Laudenslager of Allentown, Pa.; Beatrice Tarnoff, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Ruth V. Zucker of Assinippi, Miss.; and Auxiliary Carol E. Couche of Passaic, N. J.

Upon completing thirteen weeks of training at Fort Des Moines the condidates will be eligible for commissions as third officers, or second lieutenants in the Auxiliary Corps.

Chemical Warfare Expert Lectures, Presents Gas Film

Lt. Col. R. P. Tisdale, chemical warfare inspector from headquarters Fourth Service Command, Atlanta, visited Fort Benning last week for a routine check and inspection of protective facilities against possible emergencies at the post.

Saturday a training film on chemical warfare was shown at the Main theater, following which Colonel Tisdale lectured briefly, on the necessity of adequate protection against poisonous gases.

All commanding officers are training officers along with four non-commissioned officers from each training unit of the Fourth Service Command attended.

Ordnance Shops Restore Crippled Cars, Trucks To Serviceability

Only Units In Service Command Equipped To Rewind Armatures

Crippled, wrecked and crumpled cars and trucks enter the shops of the Ordnance Motor Transport Branch at Fort Benning and leave the district as good or beter than new.

Automobile parts deteriorated with rust are remetalized and put in better shape than when they came out of the factory. Missing automobile parts are manufactured right in the Fort Benning shops. Engines are rebuilt, battered fenders, cabs and bodies are revitalized and upholstery is manufactured. Batteries are brought to life or actually made in the shops from parts bought locally.

The shops even have a department for rewinding armatures for starters and generators. This department was originated in the Fort Benning shops, and at the present time no other district in the Fourth Service Command is equipped for this work, although they are expected to follow this branch's innovation. The department has been in operation here for the last two months.

700 VEHICLES MONTHLY

Equipped to repair all wheeled vehicles, including trucks, army cars and sedans, jeeps, peeps, tractors and trailers, the shops average completing advanced echelon repairs on 700 vehicles a month.

Operated under the general direction of Lieut. Col. Charles Carlton, chief of the Ordnance Motor Transport Branch at Fort Benning, and under the immediate supervision of First Lieut. M. A. Sutton, shop officer, the shops are equipped to make their own tools and jigs and even gasoline "mules," which are used for pushing and pulling trucks.

Every vehicle entering the district must go to the inspection department for a technical motor truck inspection, complete in every detail. No matter if the truck or car comes in for a requested paint job only, it must still stand the inspection and should it develop a need for other repairs, those repairs must be made. As an added precaution the vehicles must go through the same thorough inspection again just before leaving the shop, and all safety features and repairs must be in A-1 shape.

PARTS MANUFACTURED

All kinds of automobile parts are manufactured in the machine shop. The only thing in this line this shop cannot manufacture are blocks, castings and drop forgings. Nothing is too large to be turned out by the shop's lathes, drill presses and power hack saws. They make spindle bolts, drive shafts, transmission parts and wrist pins, to mention but a few.

One of the newest wrinkles in the automotive world, the remetalizing process which has been developed by American industry within the past five years, is installed and utilized to the maximum degree in the metalizing department. With this process, there is no waste of automobile parts as they are brought back to their natural life.

A nine foot crankshaft valued at $700 and unobtainable on the market, was repaired in this shop, Lieutenant Sutton points out, and ran in a diesel engine for two years after the process. This, the lieutenant recalls, was the first such job done here at Fort Benning.

SURFACES GROUND

If cylinders, transmission shafts, armature shafts, cam shafts or turbine housings are brought in worn and rotted out to less than normal size, the surface is ground and prepared by rough threading or arc welding. This is done so the lava-like metal sprayed on by equipment similar to paint spray-gun will stick to the metal part. After the flowing metal has been applied, the part is machined back to normal size and is likely to do service for a period longer than its original life.

The process can be used for a thousand different purposes as far as metal is concerned, Lieutenant Sutton states. Gasoline tanks rotted out through rust have gone through this process and have been put back on the road again. Rear axle shafts, which are very expensive and virtually impossible to get, have been metalized on many occasions and put back to regular duty.

In the engine rebuilding room, engines are completely rebuilt when necessary. The shop does all its own reboring, crankshaft grinding and complete motor reconditioning.

All chassis work is consolidated in the chassis bay, where all heavy units like rear axles, transmissions, transfer cases, clutch assemblies and new engines are changed or installed. Frame straightening, wheel alignment and reconditioning are among the jobs performed.

BRAKE DEPARTMENT

The shops have a brake department for the reconditioning of all brakes, including the regrinding of brake drums, the relining of brake shoes and equalization of the brakes. The glass department installs all windshield and door glasses, which they cut and fit themselves, inasmuch as the glass comes in large sheets.

In collaboration with the sheet metal department, the shops run a blacksmith shop which does just about everything but shoe horses. The two departments are equipped to handle any kind of a ripping job, or fix up cars, trucks, water tanks, gasoline tanks or just about any kind of sheet metal which needs sheet-metal or welding work done.

The upholstering department repairs or makes all tarpolins used as truck covers, manufactures its own slip covers and upholstery for automobiles, and rebuild all seat covers just as a manufacturer would do, including coils, springs, padding and cover. The department gets its leather, canvas and upholstery material in large bolts. From then on, everything is made in a section.
