They took me to all these places. They showed me the plans for the immediate erection of a 150-bed hospital, immaculate and modern. There is a tailor and a barbershop. There's a wood-working and hobby shop for me to putter around in whenever I get the notion. There's large sections of unlandscaped grounds if I get the urge to garden, or to beautify them—and the average prisoner gets that urge, so much so, in fact, that within a few months of occupation, they usually turn their compounds into beauty spots.

There's several recreation buildings in which I can spend my spare time, and where I can find magazines to read; and there's a recreation ground on which I can exercise and play games.

PRISONER PERSONNEL

Who oversees all these things? Well, I have in my own company of prisoners a number of prisoner personnel to police me. They include a first sergeant, duty sergeants and corporals, a mess sergeant, four cooks and a similar number of helpers, a cobbler, a plumber, a carpenter and a barber—all chosen from prisoners whose former occupations give them preference.

These, in turn, are supervised by an American army contingent, one for each company, and operating under the authority of the camp commander. These include a first sergeant, a mess sergeant and a supply sergeant for each two companies (a prisoner company is 250 men), a company clerk, a cook and an assistant cook. In addition there are the members of the Military Police Escort Guard Company, who do the actual guard duty at camp entrances, in the towers, and around the fences of the camp. The military personnel of the Fort Benning camp, the colonel tells me, is 600.

MODERN KITCHEN

My tour continues. I'm taken to the kitchen. I see modern refrigerators capable of holding a week's supply of frozen-fresh meats. There are copious cupboards for canned goods and other supplies. There are stacks of china dishes and drawersful of table utensils—the same equipment used by the soldier boys at the fort. There's a steam dishwasher which not only washes, but sterilizes. And the mess hall proper is as clean as the proverbial hound's tooth—long rows of tables which daily are scrubbed and polished; benches to sit on. Foods are cooked on huge army ranges, installed in rows in the kitchen—and, in fact, that kitchen equipment would put quite a number of the Columbus restaurants I've seen utterly to shame.

What do I eat? Exactly the same food, and in the same quantities, as is served to the American soldiers on duty at the post, tempered somewhat, as I desire it, by national delicacies. Me, an Italian prisoner of war, well—I'm naturally going to want spaghetti, and macaroni, and ravioli and pastrami and above all, garlic. And they're going to give them to the cooks—the Italian cooks of my own company—to prepare just the way I want them.

WILL WANT WATER

On my arrival in camp, somewhat dehydrated by long months of desert warfare, perhaps, I'm going to drink huge quantities of fresh, cold water—uncontaminated by the chlorine I've been used to. I'm not going to demand much sugar, for I'm not used to it. At first I'll eat a considerable quantity of fats, for I'm undernourished in that direction, but soon I'll become normal. And how I'm going to go for that greatest delicacy of all—American white bread! I'll eat it with or without, any time of the day or night I can get it—and in any quantity.

And drinks? Well, I won't have any jugs of red wine, but I'll get coffee now and then, with real milk in it; and once in a while I'll have tea . . . but mainly I'll demand water, water and more water. And I'll probably put on several pounds of weight a month. In fact, I know I will—for I ate one of those meals and I haven't been hungry since.

DAILY ROUTINE

My daily routine is carefully explained to me. It is the same as that of the American army. I get up at Reveille, dress, have my bed, police my quarters, and go to breakfast. If I want to volunteer for outside work—for only volunteers are accepted—I then leave for my assigned task. On arrival there I work eight hours and then come home. Or, if I'm not working, my time is my own—for any of the recreational tasks or hobbies I prefer to engage in. At noon or thereabouts comes lunch, and in the evening the third meal of the day. I'm going to sing a lot, lusty Italian songs with a roll and a vim to 'em; and I'm singing because I'm a lot more contented than I was in the Libyan desert. And when nighttime comes and I go to my bunks, perhaps I'll say a little prayer, a little prayer for my loved ones at home . . .

Tomorrow, in the third and last article of this series, Reporter Sloan tells of his reactions to the camp, its personnel, and the life the prisoners will lead.

"I'm not going to treat these prisoners as criminals," Col. Chescheir, commander of the Ft. Benning Internment Camp, told me. "They are just victims of the fortunes of war. And we're bound—and are following—the rule of the Geneva convention regarding them.

"They are to be given the same treatment, insofar as possble, as our own soldiers get. They can write two letters a week, on special blanks we furnish them. There is a visitor's headquarters where any of their relatives, or any other person who has legitimate business with them, can visit them and talk to them.

"Representatives of the Geneva convention will have access to them at all times, and will report on the manner in which they are treated. They are at liberty to complain about any phase of their treatment, and that complaint must be forwarded to the Geneva authorities. But so far as I know, there have been few complaints in all the camps we are operating.

"Arrangements are being made so they can have church services on Sunday, and as far as our camp here is concerned, I'm going to try to get an Italian-speaking padre for them.

CAREFUL PICKING

"We have been very careful in picking our complement of U. S. Army men in the camp. I have men here of a score of nationalities. Their experience ranges from the Boxer Rebellion through the first World War. They have been studying the language for months, and it has been amazing how rapidly they have mastered it. And I cannot too highly compliment them on the manner in which they have taken hold, the interest they have shown in camp construction, and in getting the quarters ready for the prisoners.

"And these prisoners, by the way, are not going to be lions or animals in a cage. I've arranged it so there's only one public entrance to the camp, and that road will be guarded by military police. Only those on legitimate business missions will be allowed to pass.

In other words, the colonel seemingly was speaking of the Golden Rule in reverse, he hopes to "do unto these prisoners that which he hopes will be done to our own American prisoners in Axis camps."

And my reactions, my comparisons?

First, I'd like to say this, that at some point in my tour through the Fort Benning prison camp I lost the smoked glasses I wore to keep the hot summer dimmed a bit, and donned rose-colored ones.

I seemed to be envisioning not a prison camp, but a university; a university in which good treatment was the most essential part of the curriculum.

And on graduation on the day war ends, they will demand a diploma; and they will be given a degree of "Ambassador of Good Will from America," and that degree they'll proudly take home with them to their little olive-studded hills in Italy. . . .

A PARADISE

Why, to an Italian prisoner of war fresh from the heat and horror of North Africa that camp will be paradise. To the Italian peasant, inured to poverty and humble surroundings, the luxuries of that camp will be comparable to his mind to the luxuries of the Palazzio Venezia in Rome. The meals, to him, will be Lucullan banquets; the treatment he will receive will be so much the opposite from what his Virginia Gaydas have told him he would get, that his grin of appreciation will be as wide and expansive as his map can hold.

And in that achievement alone, those in charge of our prison camps and their regimentation will have accomplished something too important and lasting for just mere words to tell. They will have built a friendship for America that will outlast the memory of wartime—for in generations to come, in their little humble villages, the then white-haired elders will be telling their grandchildren how fine America treated them, prisoners of war, after their capture, when it would have been just as easy not to have so done, just as easy to have left a memory of bitterness and hardship and uncalled-for punishment as it is now to leave a memory of kindness and understanding and sympathy . .

That's one reaction, the rose-colored one, I had.

NOT SO GOOD

The others were not so good. For I remembered the stark barbed-wire concentration camps, with their lack of any comforts or even of basic sanitation, I had seen in Europe. I remembered the unforgettable sight of Italian soldiers behind machine guns mowing down helpless blacks in Ethiopia, and of the atrocities they encouraged and permitted against the native population after the country was temporarily conquered; I remembered their boastful taunts during the Spanish revolution, and the demand that Mussolini made on Hitler that Italian planes be allowed to join the slaughter of the innocents on London streets. I remembered, too, what happened in Albania and in the mountains near Tepelini during the Greek campaign . . . and of what has happened in Greece itself, to the thousands of women and innocent children who have undergone the tortures of hell and starvation, who have died, literally dropping by thousands in the streets of Athens, when even a handful of parched grain might have saved their lives . . .

Yes, those Italian prisoners who will come to Fort Benning can pray upon their knees every night, and thank all the Gods for their fate. For they will know, deep in their own minds and hearts they will know, just how lucky they are.

I left the camp with much regret. And I also left it with a strange thought in my mind—that if the Italian army, its rank and file, knew just what was in store for them in the prison camps over here . . .

The Italian Army would surrender, unconditionally, today.

A DOUBLE line of wire fencing, 15 feet apart and topped by strands of barbed wire, surround the internment camp. Throughout the night searchlights are played up and down the aisles. This scene was also snapped from one of the eight observation towers. (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

Old Army Meted Out Severe Punishment For Minor Offenses

Sneezing, Scratching, Surly Looks In Ranks Drew 7 Days In Solitary

The Army's a tough life, isn't it, boys—or is it? In 1825 you might have got 7 days in solitary confinement for sneezing, wiping your nose, scratching your head, or "looking cross" in ranks. Were you a G.I. in Oliver Cromwell's army in the middle of the 17th century you would have had your tongue burned with a red hot iron for swearing or vile language. So you think you're in a hard boiled outfit . . .

It is only in quite recent times that ideas on discipline and punishment have been so revised that the soldier has been accorded the just and human treatment which we take as a matter of course and flogging was a relatively 'minor punishment for infractions of military law. Only in 1861 was lashing finally abolished in the United States Army.

The Prince of Orange in 1668 hanged two men for stealing a chicken while a French general in 1696 had two men's hands cut off and their bodies broken on the wheen for plundering churches. A traveler of 1663 relates having seen in Naples the nose and ears of a deserter nailed to the gallows while the offender was literally kicked in the pants out of the army.

In the light of our present day conceptions of humanity these punishments seem, as indeed they are, savage and barbarous. They were, however, of a piece with their times and the lot of the civilian was pretty nearly as bad.

ENCHANTED LEGEND

Time and idealism has cast a sort of enchanted legend over our own Continental army and militia during the American Revolution but an examination of the common soldier of those days, his carryings on and his punishments dims some of the romantic light in which we are used to regard our heroic forbears.

That the woes of an officer during those stirring times were little different than today is demonstrated by an excerpt from a letter written by a private soldier from Cambridge, Mass. "Peace with our enemy, but disturbance enough with rum for our men got paid yesterday."

An article of war by the Continental Congress of 1775 says "Nor shall any punishment be inflicted at the discretion of a court martial other than degrading, cashiering, drumming out of the army, whipping (not exceeding 39 lashes) . . . ." None the less 100 lashes were given for "severe cases."

Three deserters from the 1st Pennsylvania Regiment who were apprehended drew lots to decide which would be beheaded. One of their lot, a corporal, lost the draw and his head in the bargain. The latter was displayed on a pole as a warning to other G. I.'s who might be toying with the notion of A. W. O. L.

MARCH TO GRAVES

In another instance a number of unsuccessful deserters were made to march to their graves to the tune of the Death March with their coffins carried before them. Happy to relate these lads given a reprieve literally on the brink of the grave.

Thirty-nine lashes were considered punishment for a deserter by more lenient commanders while a thief was entitled to 39. These were administered by drummers and fifers under the eye of the drum major which might account for the unpopularity of military musicians which survives to the present day.

The method of whipping was for a man to strip to the waist. His hands were tied and he had to kneel down to receive his punishment. He was given a leaden bullet to bite upon as a deterrent to vocal protest. A surgeon was present to see that the victim didn't succumb to the whip and if he showed signs of passing out the ordeal was halted and the rest given in a second installment. In the navy men were sometimes whipped about the fleet. That is: a certain number of strokes were given before the assembled crew of a given ship whereupon the man was rowed in a small boat to the next vessel and so on.

INFAMOUS LETTER

Let those gripers of 1943 who write home to their people in disparagement of their officers be thankful that they did not stand in the boots of the guy in the Revolutionary Army who was stood in the pillery for an hour "—for writing an infamous letter against Colonel Brewer."

An interesting if painful practise was that practised during the 18th century when a man was punished by being made to "run the gauntlet." This method comprised making the offender pass between two rows of his fellow soldiers armed with sticks for the purpose of whacking him as he passed. The condition in which he emerged from this trial was a pretty good token of how he stood with his bunkies. For more severe cases the criminal was preceded by a soldier walking backwards with a bayonet levelled at the culprits breast to insure against too rapid progress. Sometimes the gauntlet runner had a halter fastened about his neck.

Less severe and rather calculated to hold a man up to ridicule was the custom of chaining a clog to a man's leg for several days and sometimes, in addition, making him wear his coat inside out.

While it may seem odd that such severities should be practised in Washington's army it must be remembered that many of its customs were from British Army traditions and Prussian institutions which came to us by way of General von Steuben.

NAPOLEONIC REFORMS

For all their liberalism and progress in democracy and liberty the British were reactionaries in the matter of military discipline. Napoleon himself considered them savage in this category and, for that matter, the Napoleonic Code of civil law like his military regulations were a half century or more ahead of the English and ourselves in many respects.

A Napoleonic colonel writing in 1830 says that punishment is not good discipline and its efficacy lessens as a campaign lengthens. The effectiveness of Napoleon's method was certainly demonstrated by the extraordinary affection in which he was held by his soldiers. To such an extent was this so that there is still a Napoleonic faction in France which is strong enough to need reckoning with.

The London Times of March 18, 1834 observes that adverse public opinion had reduced flogging in army and navy services citing that while this punishment had been administered 655 times in 1830 and on 646 occasions in 1831 it had been administered in only 370 instances during the year 1833.

Eight years later another British newspaper describes a new and more humane instrument for branding deserters than the hot iron. This device was an instrument from which needles projected in the shape of a letter "D". The skin was pierced with this contrivance and a mixture of indigo and india ink rubbed into the wound.

FINES FOR OATHS

As short a time ago as 1910 an article of war imposed the fine of "one sixth of one dollar" upon a man who cursed. (One can conceive occasions upon which this would be rather a bargain). Not long since the navy abolished a regulation which made a man subject to court martial for a "look of silent contempt."

Regarding our own times it is edifying to note that among our Russian allies who are regarded in some quarters as criterions, army regulations permit an officer to resort to force of arms to enforce discipline without being punishable for the results. Furthermore those G. I.'s who resent any reserve, dignity and reticence in our own officers might like to know that Russian authorities deprecate very definitely any "pseudo democracy" in relations between officers and men. Enlisted men may be punished for even discussing orders among themselves and there is no appeal from severity of sentence.

In the Russian army it is also not uncommon for a private soldier to be tried by his peers in the ranks rather than by officers.

The truth is, as regards discipline in our own army of the present day, there is very little practical difference to the average man between its laws and those of civilian life. Any person who has had a decent upbringing has been disciplined in childhood and has no inclination toward law breaking in any case. None but the stupid or pathologically evil willfully do wrong. Recognizing this fact army discipline and regulations are so written as to protect the individual from cruel and undeserved punishments at the hands of capricious authority and no one can truthfully say that a good man has in our time been accorded unwarranted punishment.

LITTER STOPS OC CLASS

WAC Officer Knows Exactly Why She Joined Up

Lt. Mary E. Herman, commanding officer of the 772nd WAAC Post Headquarters Co., Lawson Field, has many tangible reasons for joining the Women's Army Corps.

She was more fortunate than most people in having a brother, Stewart Herman, Jr., a member of the American Embassy Staff at Berlin since 1939, who could give her an insight into the drastic changes that had and were affecting the German people. In his position as embassy attache and a pastor of the American church prior to our entrance to the war he was ideally situated to watch the anti-Christian program of the Nazis. He encountered at first-hand the subtle means to wean and force the people from their religious alliances.

Mr. Herman has written a book, "It's Your Souls We Want", and it has been signally honored by being selected by the National Librarians Association as one of the outstanding 50 books of the year. In his book Mr. Herman has showed by proof that Nazism is a drive for the very souls of the individual man and woman in every walk of life. Every believer in the essential freedoms for which the United Nations are fighting would find this book a document of value in guiding Americans in their post-war relations with un-Nazified elements in Germany.

Lieutenant Herman entered Officer Candidate School at Fort DeMoine, Ia., on July 11, 1942, and upon receiving her commission reported for Aircraft Warning Service in Harrisburg, Pa. In the different assignments she has had, Lieutenant Herman has seen the boundless enthusiasm of the auxiliaries and knods that the potentialities of the WACs are unlimited. The present complement of WACs are now serving in many phases of the work of the Army Air Force at Lawson Field. "The women of the Allied nations can expect the women of America to equal their records of achievement in every line of endeavor that the women are embodied to do," says Lieutenant Herman.

Birth Of Pups Stops OC Class

Thre and four star generals and even the President himself have visited the school. Yet the classes continued on a split second schedule.

Such was the case until last week when one officer candidate class in the third STR arrived with its mascot, a kindly female named Lulu whose ancestry was difficult of identification.

The class began on schedule and was progressing according to regulations. But the rules don't specify what shall be done when a candidate raises his hand and informs his instructor, "Sir, your dog is having puppies and already has two."

The class was stopped while Lulu and the two members of her new family were removed from beneath the bleachers, where the class was sitting, and taken to a nearby target house.

The instructions continued and when they were over, the candidates were delighted to learn that they had six little mascots to go with the original.

1st STR Unit Mess Praised

Spending several hours inspecting the kitchens and mess halls of the Fourth Battalion of the First Student Training Regiment, Captain Arthur L. Anderson, post food and nutrition officer, expressed general satisfaction at the way in which the battalion messes were conducted at the conclusion of his inspection.

Object of the visit was to check the quality of the food being served, the quantity consumed by the individual, amount of waste after preparation of a meal, and the general atmosphere in which the food was being served. In discussing the results of his investigation with Lieut. Roy E. Cook, battalion mess officer, Captain Anderson commented especially on the small amount of wastage and the good general atmosphere of the mess halls.

Lt. Bill Harmon, brother of Michigan's Tom, is at Cochran Army Aair Field. Bill was former captain and all-conference forward at Tulane. Bill played on the Cochran team which won the Georgia championship tournament. Team-mates at Cochran included Pfc. Dan McGillicuddy, ex-Fordham cage captain; Cpl. Dock Lee, Formerly of Kate Smith's Celtics; Lt. Pete Holcombe, ex- Presbyterian College star; and Cpl. Sam Schnielder and Pfc. Al Benson, Former pro basketball notables.

City Symphony To Include Fort Benning Talent

Orchestra Reorganized Using ASTP Soldier Musicians As Nucleus

Reorganization of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra once again to include soldier musicians from Fort Benning is under way, according to Eugene Bergmann of the Ninth Street USO which is sponsoring the orchestra.

The orchestra is being formed around a nucleus of musicians from the ASTP center in Harmony church at Fort Benning, and will be under the direction of Pvt. Murray Austrian, cadreman of the ASTP. Plans call for the present group of 18 pieces to be enlarged to 60, drawing talent from all over the post and from civilians in Columbus, Major John G. MacFarlan, special service officer of the ASTP announced.

The USO is guiding the venture and will provide a number of the instruments. Maj. MacFarlan and Mr. Bergmann emphasize that to become a member of the orchestra one need not be in the ASTP program but may be a soldier from any other organization at Fort Benning or may be a civilian.

Rehearsals are being conducted Tuesday nights in the Ninth Street USO at 8:30 p. m. (EWT). The project will make its public debut the latter part of July when it will be heard in its first concert.

Pvt. Austrian, Maj. MacFarlan said, conducted his own orchestra in civilian life.

Reward Offered For Recovery Of Stolen Car

Any aspirants to G-2 who would like to get in a little gumshoe practice and earn $25.00 reward if his efforts are fruitful might get to work on this.

On the evening of June 6 Lieutenant F. B. Gilbert of T. Company, 1st P. T. R. attended the baseball game at Gowdy field in the company of his wife. He parked his car, a light blue Chrysler four door 1939 sedan outside the entrance only to find it missing when the game was over.

Inquiries revealed that the car, containing two soldiers, one of whom was "sandy haired" stopped at the Post Exchange Garage and the driver purchased four gallons of gas. M. P.'s at the outposts said no car of that description had passed the gates of the Fort. Although the provost marshal's office and the police of every state in the Union have been ntofied, no news of the vehicle has been received. The lieutenant thinks that the sedan may very possibly never have left the reservation and that at this moment it may be standing in some unit parking lot.

Among aviation cadets at Bainbridge Field, Ga., now are George E. Porter, former University of Texas boxer and Southwestern A. A. U. and sectional Golden Gloves, champion; Claude E. Corbitt, formerly Duke University and American Association baseballer; and William B. Ostrander, formerly of the San Diego Bombers pro football club.

8th Company, First Regiment, Does Well With 37-mm.

Nearly 80 per cent of the student officers of 8th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, qualified in the firing of the 37 MM Anti-Tank gun on the 1000 inch range, leading recent classes with the average.

Records compiled by the Anti-Tank gun committee show also that 22.4 per cent of the members of the class qualified as expert gunners on this range.

Firing the sub-calibre 30 ammunition, the class recorded an average of 27.4 per cent of hits, and with the regular 37 MM ammunition recorded 21.8 per cent hits.

High score on the 1000 inch range was made by Lieutenant Swope, with 185 out of a possible 200. In second place was Captain Murray. Tied for third place were Captain Wheatly and Lieutenant Dunlap.

Scores of 170 were made by Lieutenants: Hall, Peters, McFall, and Graves, while scores of 165 were recorded for Lieutenants Filgo, Rosenfeld, Reilly, Selden, McFarland and Sabateur.

Giraud Pays Post Unexpected Visit

French Leader Declares TIS, Parachute Instruction 'Superb'

General Henri Honore Giraud, commanding general of the French armies in North Africa, swept through an inspection of the Infantry and Parachute Schools at Fort Benning Monday and left by plane a little more than 18 hours after he arrived here Sunday night.

"The training you are giving men here is magnificent," the general beamed before he left. "The Germans are beginning to weary and all of your men are fresh and enthusiastic."

And, as he prepared to board his plane, he shook hands with Fort Benning officers and told them that the training he had seen was "realistic."

"France will fight alongside the Allies until final victory is won," the French leader said Sunday night at a dinner at the Officers' club. "We will not quit fighting when Germany is defeated. We recognize Japan also as our enemy."

General Giraud witnessed officer candidates participate in a Combat Firing problem and also a demonstration by Infantry School troops in an attack on a village. Following the former, he delivered a ten-minute unscheduled critique.

PURELY BUSINESS

It was purely a military visit. Concerning the demonstrations he saw, General Giraud commented that the advance of the infantry platoon with machine gun and mortar support in the combat firing problem, approximated battle conditions in Africa. Of exceptional value in the demonstrations was that of flat trajectory fire support, he said.

The unscheduled critique occurred at the close of an officer candidate class in combat firing. With Lieut. Col. Leon Dostert, acting as interpreter, General Giraud adjusted a portable microphone and went into a detailed discussion of the problem which he had just witnessed before the officer candidate class.

"I have just witnessed a very realistic battle problem," he said. And after a ten-minute review of all phases of the maneuver, he concluded, "There are two things to remember in this very essential training. One is that you must have the muscle and will and physical strength to run as you saw the troops run this morning. The other is the heart—the determination and will power to go for-

Summer USO Shows Slated

Parade To Start With 'Happy Landing' On Next Thursday

While the temperatures soar during July and August, the parade of USO shows through Fort Benning during these months will provide GI's with a galaxy of entertainment, it is announced today by Lieut. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, chief of the Special Service Branch in post headquarters.

July 22 ushers in a USO-Camp Show production titled "Happy Landings." It features Joy Gaylor's All-Girl Band which is reputed to be one of the top all-girl bands in the country. This show will play the post for five days.

"Camel Caravan' is due to play Fort Benning for four days starting August 11. This troupe played here last season and was highly lauded.

Word has just been received that the outdoor season will be brightened with a smash attraction lifted bodily from Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe, one of New York's gayest night spots. This revue title, oddly enough, "Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe" will be presented by USO-Camp Show and is scheduled for the usual five-day stay commencing August 28.

In addition to the above named attractions there will be several G. I. productions featuring all-soldier talent. The first of these booked for Doughboy Stadium is the ASTP's "Priorities" which is set for July 30.

PATRIOTISM

The request for blood donors met with an overwhelming response from the men of the 300th Infantry. Soon after the call for volunteers was made, more than 300 enlisted men had registered their names with their First Sergeants, although the quota only called for 30 men.

Post Volunteer Blood Donors Exceed Quota

3,000 Answer Call For 500 Pints To Be Collected July 14-16

Three thousand soldiers rallied to the call as volunteer blood donors at Fort Benning to contribute to the mobile Red Cross Blood Bank this week, exceeding the quota by more than 2,500.

Ralph J. Mitchell, field director of the Red Cross at the post, remarked that the response of soldiers to the call for blood "truly indicates the spirit with which our fighting men are contributing their all toward winning the war."

Mitchell said that the required number of soldier volunteers to fill the quota was reached readily. He indicated that hundreds of more soldiers are "ready, willing, and anxious" to donate a pint of blood to the plasma reserves which are destined to give new life to members of the armed forces injured in the course of battle.

Actually 516 blood donors were sought to fill the three-day schedule of the blood bank this week. Fifty-five civilians have been selected as volunteers to donate blood, about half of them being the wives of officers and enlisted men at the post.

EVERY SIX WEEKS

In view of the surge of soldier volunteers, Mitchell said that Red Cross officials may be able to route the mobile blood bank to Fort Benning once every six weeks. Definite plans for the return of the blood bank will be made later, however.

To complete the quota of soldier volunteers, 600 members of the 455th Anti-Aircraft Battalion offered to fill 55 vacancies and the required number of soldiers was readily selected.

Included in the organizatons which have volunteers for the blood bank are 54 members of the Women's Army Corps Detachment, Station Complement, and nine members of the 772nd WAC Post Headquarters Company stationed at Lawson Field.

Permanent personnel at the Parachute School filled the quota of volunteers for the first day, yesterday with 172 donors. Troops under the command of The Infantry School fill out the required donors for Thursday, also numbering 172.

On Friday, the WACs, civilians and other units are scheduled to donate their blood. The blood collected at the post will be sent to Cincinnati and be dehydrated and processed. The resulting plasma will be consigned overseas for use in the field to aid troops who have been injured.

Major Fink Clarifies New Tax Collection

Explaining several phases of the withholding tax in connection with its effect on war bond purchases, Major George Fink, post war bond officer, today, said that the total of monthly deductions would not exceed last year's income tax. Under the new plan payments are merely divided into 12 parts instead of four.

"Therefore, there should be no letdown in war bond purchases by civilian personnel at this time; rather an increase for several reasons," the bond officer added.

"First, because it lends money to our government, which is needed now more than ever to push our advantage in the war; secondly, the more dollars invested in war bonds, the less money in circulation, thereby decreasing dangers of inflation; and lastly, investment in war bonds builds up a saving for the future."

At present Fort Benning civilians are subscribing $35,000 monthly under the pay reservation plan, which represents 7 per cent of their payroll. A goal of 90 per cent participation with 10 per cent deduction has been requested by the War Department.

Lawson Planes Change Insignia

Modification Will Improve Identification

The insignia on practically all planes stationed at Lawson Field have been changed to show the new type of design for the United States Army Air Forces planes, and the remainder will be changed immediately, Major Beverly H. Tucker, Jr., intelligence officer of Lawson Field at Fort Benning announced today.

The new type of insignia consists of the present white star on a circular field of blue, a white rectangle attached horizontally at the right and left of the circle, and a red border enclosing the entire device. It was adopted by the War Department to improve identification of Army Air Forces aircraft.

At the direction of General Henry H. Arnold, commanding general of the Army Air Forces, the new insignia was developed by the Proving Ground Command after visibility tests were made of the present Air Force device, and the German and Japanese insignia.

All United States Army Forces throughout the world have been directed to apply this new insignia to their planes immediately.

The tests by the Proving Ground Command established that the old Army Air Forces insignia, Japan's red dot and Germany's black cross superimposed on a wider white cross, all resolved into invisibility at the same distance from the eye and that as they closer they all appeared in the form of a dot because all angular figures take this form at great distance.

This was found to apply to the present AAF insignia because the points of the star disappear and the color appears to jump over the points to form the dot.

It was also determined that as all three of the insignia were brought nearer the eye, they became identifiable at the same point.

Tests made with the new United States Army Air Forces insignia show that it is visible at 60 per cent greater range than the old Air Forces device and the German

Senate Bill Would Increase Allotment Of Soldier Kin

The government's cash contributions to dependents of service men would be increased under a bill passed by the Senate last Thursday and sent to House for its consideration.

The measure, which was approved without debate would boost the total monthly allowance for a wife and one child from $62 to $68, and would increase the allowance for additional children from $10 to $11 a month.

Also, it would provide that the government pay all of the first month's dependency allowance, although after that time a service man would contribute $22 and the government $28 toward the basic amount allowed for a wife without a child.

Final congressional action is not expected for some time due to the congressional recess voted Thursday evening.

Benning Alumni Lead In Opening Second Front

Latin Writers To See TIS, Chute Activity

Ecuador, Venezuela, Colombia Represented In Group Here Friday

A group of 13 Latin-American newspapermen representing Columbia, Ecuador, and Venezuela will visit Fort Benning this Friday for an inspection of Infantry and parachute school activities. Benning will be the first stop of a tour of the nation's training camps and war production centers the newsmen will make under the auspices of the National Press club and the War Department Bureau of Public Relations.

The party will include Jose J. Jimenez of Bogota, Colombia, writer for La Razon; and Antonio Ribera of Bogota, editorial chief of El Liberal.

Representatives from Ecuador include Jaime Barrera of Quito, editorial writer for El Comercia and officer in the Press Information Bureau of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; Abel Romeo Castillo of Guayaquil, columnist and part owner of El Telegrafo; Luis Moscoso Vega of Cuenca, editor and director of El Mercurio; and Juan Emilio Murillo of Guayaquil, editorial staff chief of El Telegrafo and president of the Ecuadorian Journalists' Association.

VENEZUELANS

Venezuela will be represented by Jose Miguel Ferrer, of Caracas, press officer of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, author of verse and prose works; Pascual Venegas Filardo of Caracas, assistant editor of El Universal and president of the Venezuelan Journalists' association; Manual Pocaterra of Caracas, editor in chief of El Heraldo; Luis Esteban Rey Caracas, writer for Ahora; and Ramon Villasmil of Maracaibo, editor of Panorama.

The party will also include Richard Dyer, director of the tour; Thomas Dozier, representative of the office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs; Captain Fred J. Driver, Jr., Bureau of Public Relations, War Department; and James J. Baker, American Express courier.

SOCIAL FUNCTIONS

In addition to the inspection trip the program for the day will include an informal reception in the office of Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, post commander, immediately following the arrival of the guests on the post; breakfast at the Officers Club with Colonel Ridgeley Gaither, commandant of the Parachute school as host; luncheon at noon with Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of the Infantry School, as host; and dinner with General Fulton as host.

Following dinner the journalists will leave by car for Opelika, Ala., whence they will continue their tour by train by way of New Orleans.

Georgia To Honor Out-of-State Tags On Soldier Cars

Fort Benning personnel will not have to observe Georgia 'tag day" according to a report from State Revenue Commissioner Eugene Cook who stated that anyone in military training in Georgia who has a 1943 license for his car from his home state will not be required to buy a Peach state tag.

With the exception of soldiers, Cook said a tag must be bought "by anyone who is engaged in a gainful occupation in the state or who has established residence in the state or who has lived in the state 30 days or more."

Asserting that "the strict letter of the law" would compel these soldiers to obtain a Georgia license, Cook said he would waive its application in military cases. He added, however, that they must have a 1943 tag from some state.

Starnes Lauds Army Training

Officers of Today Are Hope For Future, Congressman Asserts

Necessity for trained leaders, not only to direct the war to victory, but to carry on the nation's business during the peace to follow was emphasized Wednesday by Rep. Joe Starnes, of Alabama, who addressed the Sixth company of the Second Student training regiment from which his son, Joseph Starnes, Jr., was commissioned a second lieutenant.

Representative Starnes, whose home is in Guntersville, Ala., awarded the commissions to all members of the graduating officer candidate class. Present in the audience at the exercises were Major Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of the Infantry School, Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, assistant commandant, and other high ranking officers.

Speaking extemporaneously, Representative Starnes said "the hope of a free world after this war is a strong, free and virile United States."

MUST MAINTAIN ARMY

He insisted that in order to make its opinions and ideals respected throughout the world, the United States must maintain a sizable fighting force after the present conflict is ended. Upon respect of United States' strength will be built the security and peace of all nations, according to the representative.

No nation in the world, he said, in discussing Fort Benning's Infantry School, has used so democratic a manner in selecting its military leaders. At Fort Benning has been established the greatest military school in the world—a school designed principally to train officers, but more than that, to develop leaders, he said.

"With leadership that such schools as this gives us we will strike again and again until the Axis has been completely de-

Paratroops, Tankmen Spearheading Attack

General Patton Commands U. S. Troops In Big Push On Italians

Shock forces of the American troops landing in Sicily, American Army paratroopers—all of them trained at Fort Benning—last week crouched quietly but with grim determination in their transports heading over the Mediterranean as, on one of them, they heard their commanding officer tell them for the first time, "Your destination is Sicily and you will be the first American troops to land."

GENERAL GEORGE S. Patton, Jr., former post commandant, more recently commander of the 2nd Armored Division once stationed at Benning, is commanding the American Army now engaged in the Sicilian invasion.

Armed to the teeth, toughened by the courses given them at Fort Benning and other training areas, smudge-faced American paratroopers, along with British paratroops trained for the same purpose, were aboard huge air transports which roared over the island between 10:30 and 11:20 last Friday night—three to four hours before the invasion itself.

One by one and in perfect order, these Benning trained parachutists bailed out over the sides of their planes into the darkness above the island of Sicily. As they followed their commanding officer, they screamed the strange and spine tingling warcry of the first American paratroopers—"Geronimo"—a cry originated at Fort Benning by members of the 501st Parachute Battalion.

HEAVY FLAK

Despite a heavy flak barrage, the transport command pilots carrying British and American paratroopers and towing troop-filled British gliders, maneuvered their big planes to their targets. The gliders were cut loose and they soured to objectives in the eastern sector of the invasion zone. The parachute troops boiled out over targets to the west, and moved swiftly to consolidate positions and cut communications lines behind the enemy's beach defenses.

This was the largest operation of its kind since the German capture of Crete, but far less costly than the Nazi aerial invasion of two years ago. It was the second large scale attack for the American troop transport command, which made its first big flight from England to Algeria last November.

Before leaving for a new assignment last week, Brig. Gen. George P. Howell, former commandant of the Parachute School, told Rotarians in Columbus, Ga., that every single paratrooper in the United States Army has been, at one time another, stationed at Fort Benning. Each of them went through the difficult training program here, and at Lawson Field learned how to fly and jump.

STEP BY STEP

Chronologically, from dispatches from the Associated Press and other sources, we can almost recapitulate every step of that first drop of American paratroopers on alien soil.

Sgt. Jack Foisie, correspondent for "The Stars and Stripes" was there on the field in North Africa for the takeoff, talking to the men, talking to Lt. Col. Wm. T. Ryder, "father of American paratroopers" and who brought the first platoon of them to Fort Benning to originate the school here; talking to Lt. Col. Charles W. Koontz, once of the 504th, who commanded the Benning boys on their jumps on Sicily, and who led them, these warlike ghosts of the night, on their jump. And there were others.

They're lounging in the shadows of the wings of the big transports, Foisie relates, which will carry them over the blac-shadowed Mediterranean to carefully designated dropping zones.

The paratroopers have known for several day what they were going to do. They had studied maps, memorized orders and completed coordinated plans.

Throughout the day the men checked and packed their gear and equipment. Each of the many pockets in their jumping suits were utilized. Their natty jumping boots—the trademark of their profession—were laced with extra tightness.

NO HORSEPLAY

The Yanks were ready and confident. The tenseness mounted as the time grew short.

Last chow was served at 3:30 p. m. Saturday night.

Now the sun was going down from behind the Tunisian Djebels where just two months ago the foe fought his last round in North Africa. The evening breeze, stirred by the cooling of the hot earth, was picking up sand off the runway, enveloping the field in a brown haze.

A colonel who would lead the combat team into action was giving last-minute briefing to enlisted men of officers and one war correspondent who would ride with him and jump with him.

It was a kind of a sacred huddle—this briefing. The General's staff officers who came to wish them luck stood off to the side. It was a strange, fascinating sight—men with faces blackened and

Medico Goes To Atlanta

Officer To Serve 4th Service Command As Consultant Surgeon

Lt. Col. I. Mims Gage, chief of surgical service for the 24th General Hospital at Fort Benning, has been ordered to Fourth Service Command headquarters, Atlanta, where he will assume duties as consultant surgeon for the Service Command.

Formerly associate professor of surgery at Tulane University, New Orleans, Col. Gage organized the 24th Hospital in 1940 upon request of the War Department, and served as its director until a commanding officer could be selected. Colonel Walter C. Royals was later assigned to that position.

Although a native of South Carolina, Col. Gage has resided in New Orleans since graduation from Medical School in 1917, and was associated with the Ochsner Clinic and Touro Infirmary in addition to his workk at the university. During the last war, he

Local Quartermaster Market Center Serves Three States

Unit Purchases Comestibles For More Than Score Of Camps

Serving mighty Fort Benning, as well as 24 other smaller posts, the Quartermaster Market Center in Columbus, located at Tenth avenue and Eleventh street, is daily providing thousands of American soldiers-in-training throughout an area of three states with perishable subsistence from all parts of the country.

Carrots and beets from Colorado, cheese from Wisconsin, milk from Minnesota, citrus fruits from California, and meats from the packing centers of the mid-west arrive daily by rail from distant points and within a few hours are being dispatched in a fleet of 15 refrigerated trailer trucks to Army camps in Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

Serving in the dual capacity of a procurement agency as well as a distribution point, the quartermaster installation also is producing a merry tinkle of dollars in the pockets of Dixie farmers by purchasing large quantities of perishable foodstuffs locally.

Local produce is bought from farmers within 250 miles of the Columbus market center, while the camps served by the Quartermaster unit are located within a 200-mile area. Farthest trips made by trucks from Columbus are to Tyndall Field in Panama City, Fla., and Elgin Field, Crestview, Fla.

Although Fort Benning and the 24 smaller posts are the only ones served regularly from the Columbus market center, there is a list of 40 more posts, camps and stations throughout the Army's Fourth Service Command that is served partially out of Columbus.

Heralding increased cooperation between the Army and Navy in matters of food procurement, there are also three naval stations being served by the Q. M. food depot in Columbus. They are the Naval Air Stations at Atlanta, Ga., and Pensacola, Fla., and the Naval Supply Depot at Gulfport, Miss.

Located at 10th avenue and 11th street in downtown Columbus, the Quartermaster Market Center is housed in an L-shaped structure built especially for its use and leased from the Nehi Corporation, whose main plant is located directly across the street.

A long rail loading platform which parallels the incoming Central of Georgia tracks; four huge cold storage rooms, and a two-story office building make up the physical portion of the market.

The officer in charge of the installation is Capt. V. Wade Hampton a Field Artillery veteran of World War I, who for many years, was in the food brokerage business in Fort Worth, Texas. Under his direction, a staff of more than 40 persons functions efficiently in the daily operation of the market center.

The size of the present staff is ten times what it was in early 1941 when the installation was first established here. At that time, it was located in the Swift Bldg., at Broadway and 13th St. and serviced only Fort McClellan and Camp Wheeler, Ga., in addition to Benning.

Captain Hampton arrived on November 22, 1941, to take over the operation of the market center and has watched it grow rapidly ever since, until today it is a moderp food depot handling thousands of dollars worth of perishables daily. The latest improvement was the addition of a

GENERAL'S WIFE AND G. I. alike were included in the first group of blood donors Wednesday at Fort Benning's Station Hospital when the Red Cross mobile blood bank arrived from Atlanta for a three-day visit at the post. Shown above are Mrs. Leven C. Allen, wife of the Infantry School commandant, and three Benning soldiers partaking of nourishment after just having donated a pint of blood which will be converted into soldier blood plasma. The soldiers are, left to right: Pvt. Merle Beaver, Headquarters Co., First Parachute Training Regiment; Pvt. Edward B. Weeks, 515th Parachute Infantry; and St. Sgt. Warren E. Fuller, Co. D, First Parachute Training Regiment. Fuller is from LaGrange, Ga. Mrs. Allen and the three soldiers were among the first of a quota of 516 civilians and soldiers at the post who are registered to donate blood during the three-day period. Local volunteers from the Fort Benning and Muscogee County chapters of the Red Cross are assisting the personnel from Atlanta in carrying out the program at the post. (U. S. Officer Is 1st Lieutenant At Ripe Old Age Of 18

The Air Corps can ruffle its wings and crow proudly over its juvenile generals and colonels, but for a person who has advanced just about as far as possible in the shortest length of time is 1st Lt. Marshall D. Treppendahl of the 13th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment.

Lt. Treppendahl was promoted to rank of first lieutenant at the ripe old age of 18 years, 4 months and 17 days. In compliance with army regulations a man can't be commissioned until he is 18. Therefore, Lt. Treppendahl hasn't been wasting any time.

Graduating from Castle Heights Military Academy in June, 1942, with the weight of 17 years resting upon his shoulders, Lt. Treppendahl was ordered to the Infantry School to attend a basic class. When he had successfully completed the course the following September, Uncle Sam stepped in.

"Go home, son," he said—"and enjoy your youth until you're 18; then I'll see what I can do for you."

So back to Woodville, Miss., he went, back to await his eighteenth birthday. Soon after that day arrived and he was commissioned a 2nd lieutenant, he was called to active duty to attend the Parachute School. After graduation, he was assigned to the 513th Parachute Infantry where he camouflaged his youth so well behind his 180 pounds spread over a 6 foot 1 inch frame that he was promoted to first lieutenant on dahl's future the Infantry will be able to hold up its head and look the Air Corps in the eye. Five more promotions and he'll be a brigadier general, and he's only been shaving a short time.

VILLAGE ATTACK

The other problem which the General witnessed was the attack on the village. At the conclusion, he complimented the instructor and troops of the 176th Infantry Regiment which participated in it, "It was a very excellent problem," he said.

Leaving the Infantry School area, the party passed the training towers of the Parachute School and proceeded down to Lawson Field. Lining the area were parachute troops. Tanks rumbled across the field while other troops employed demolition materials exhibited flame-throwers, signal and camouflaged uniforms and parachutes.

Previously General Giraud had said that he had seen American troops in action in North Africa and that he thought he was not likely to find anything to criticize in the program which trained those men. As he watched the various stages of training, he smiled affably and chatted with instructors, indicating that he approved the things he saw. Handsome, tall and straight, he shook hands with scores of officers along the tour.

ARRIVED SUNDAY

The General and his staff, accompanied by U. S. Army officers, arrived at Lawson Field shortly before 8 o'clock Sunday night and were welcomed by Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of the Infantry School; Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, and Colonel Ridgely Gaither, commandant of the Parachute School.

He was greeted by a 17-gun salute by the Headquarters Battery of the 244th Field Artillery and inspected a battalion of troops from the 176th Infantry. The band of the 176th played the national anthems of both nations. After inspecting the troops, Gen. Giraud and staff were guests at a dinner at the Officers' club. The General himself was the overnight guest of General Allen.

In the official party accompanying Gen. Giraud were Brig. Gen. Louis J. Fortier, of the War Department; Col. Albert Jean Paul LeBel, of the French Mission in the United States; Lieut. Col. Leon Dostert, Maj. Leonard Millman, Maj. E. T. Delaney, commandant Beauvre commandant Pontistowski, and Lieut. de Vaisseau Viret.

The plane which brought Gen. Giraud to Fort Benning was piloted by Maj. Homer C. Munson, personal pilot of Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, and was copiloted by Capt. Joseph Baun.

OC Merriam's Father Is Vice-Chairman Of Planning Board

While Officer Candidate Robert E. Merriam is busy in the 23rd Company of the Third Student Training Regiment learning methods of destroying the Axis, his father, Charles E. Merriam, is preoccupied with keeping the President posted on the problems that will arise when the democracies are victorious.

Merriam semor is vice-chairman of the National Resources Planning Board and serves as advisor to President Roosevelt on post-war problems. He served also as an advisor to President Hoover during the latter's administration and in World War No. 1 held a commission as captain while directing allied propaganda in Italy.

The younger Merriam comes to The Infantry School with a wealth of experience as a student, traveler and governmental administrator, although he is but 24 years of age. He attended Chicago public schools and Chicago University from which he was graduated in 1940 with an M. A. degree. He majored in political science and public relations and while at the university wrote a guide for municipal officials on regulation of land subdivision. He also won a letter on the college track team.

Following his graduation, Merriam went to Washington to accept a positon as administrative assistant in the National Housing Agency. He held this position until he entered the Army in July, 1942.

CAPTAIN RAMSEY

The promotion of First Lieutenant Lloyd H. Ramsey to the rank of captain has recently been announced her. In May, 1942, Captain Ramsey was called to active duty at Branch Immaterial Replacement Training Center, Fort McClellan, Alabama. He attended the Officers' Basic Course, The Infantry School, Fort Benning, in November, 1942, and upon completion was assigned as instructor to C. T. Rifle Group, The Infantry School.

Through the dark of night, and the heat of day, America's plane spotters have kept their lonely watch. Theirs is a job without recompense, without glory, without even the thrill of danger—yet they have kept to their posts. But there are times, when the fog rolls in or the skies are dark, that even the keenest human eyes are not enough. Then, along our shores and about our cities, we can depend on electronic sentries to scan the skies.

RADAR is America's best plane spotter. Like the bat, which is equipped by nature with one of the most remarkable sets of blind-flying "instruments" known to man, radar can operate "blind" in night and fog. Waves from electronic tubes, incessantly scanning the skies, can "feel" through the dark the approach of an enemy plane.

Radar, and the Spitfires, stopped the Stukas in the skies over England in 1940. Radar, helping to direct the fire of an American warship in the Pacific, enabled it to hit a Japanese warship 8 miles away in pitch darkness.

Yet radar is no more miraculous than your radio set. It is simply the application of principles discovered many years ago. Many scientists and engineers—in this country and in Britain, some working alone, some in the Army and Navy, many in college and industrial research laboratories—played a part in its development. And General Electric was one of the first and most active in this field.

This was only natural. For, when in 1940 the Navy requested G-E to begin the manufacture of radar equipment, we had been for more than 20 years engaged in the development and manufacture of the kind of electron tubes, circuits, and apparatus that makes radio, and radar, possible. Additional manufacturing facilities were started at once. And today, General Electric is supplying this equipment in quantity for the Army and the Navy.

Electronics Not a Wartime Science: We know it best through radio, a great and essential industry. But electronics works in almost every other industry, too—measuring in millionths of an inch, converting electric current to heat steel furnaces and to refine aluminum and magnesium, seeing through inches of steel, protecting property and human lives, regulating lighting. And electronic controls enable women to do many complex jobs in industry, releasing men for war.

But the destiny of electronics is not to replace—it is to add to the products and services we enjoy, and to make easier our ways of obtaining them. Things like television merely await the war's end. And in the electronic laboratories of today are the seeds of other, of new and undreamed-of benefits for tomorrow. General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

General Hazlett Praises Infantry School Set-Up

Replacement School Command Chief Is Impressed By Work

Maj. Gen. H. F. Hazlett, commanding general of the Replacement and School command with headquarters in Birmingham, concluded a three day inspection of The Infantry School last week and left with the feeling that the School had left nothing undone in bringing the present war smack into the classrooms.

As commanding officer of the 29th Infantry and later as executive officer of The Infantry School, he has seen many changes and improvements in its curricula of the School.

Prior to his departure this afternoon, he said, "Everytime I come back to the School, I find many changes and improvements but this time, I saw literally hundreds of them. There are changes every week and every day—always toward perfection.

"It always has been a grand school. The Officers and Officer candidates attending its course are taught the practical ways they learn by doing it. I noticed a vast improvement in modernizing the school and by that I mean the addition of instruction in problems involving lessons learned from the various theaters of this war.

INSTRUCTION EXCELLENT

"The instructors who are handling the classes are doing an outstanding job of putting across their subjects. I have deep respect for their work and also the sincerity of the students in absorbing it.

"There is one thing that the casual observer would not appreciate in a tour of the school. And that is the work behind the scenes, the coordination of the various agencies in making it possible for the classes to run on split second schedules. The problems go off when they are scheduled to go off and the classes arrive when they are scheduled to arrive. In the demonstrations, the men are in the right place at the right time doing the right thing.

"They all handle their assignments quickly and efficiently. Failure of a truck here or a body of troops there, to arrive on schedule would throw not only one but possibly several classes off schedule.

"The officers and men who are responsible for this coordination deserve considerable credit. There is a smoothness that is hard to believe in an institution as large as this."

Gen. Hazlett's inspection began Thursday afternoon. He was accompanied by Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of The Infantry School and Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, assistant commandant. Brig. Gen. Henry P. Perrine, commanding general of the School Troops Brigade, yesterday joined the tour of inspection which was arranged by Lt. Col. Andy A. Lipscomb, Jr., assistant director of training.

24th General Celebrates Natality

First anniversary of the activation of the 24th General hospital occurred today and will be marked by an organizational day party, it has been announced by Colonel Walter C. Royals, M. C., commandant of the unit.

An offspring of the old 24th Base hospital, which served overseas during World War I, the 24th General was activated at Fort Benning July 15, 1942. As it was in the first World War, the organization is largely staffed by alumni and faculty members of Tulane University, New Orleans, La., and is often referred to as the "Tulane Unit".

A picnic for the officers, nurses and enlisted men will be held this afternoon, while the enlisted men will have a dance at the Polo Hunt Club tonight.

It's OK now to buy army insignia in civilian stores, but it won't be for long. The manufacture and sale of army insignia by civilian firms will be prohibited within three months, the War Department has announced. After that you'll have to get them at your PX or at Quartermaster stores.

THIS IS just a small portion of the G. I. wash which goes through the QM laundry at Benning every day of the week. (Signal Lab photo.)

Strange Things Turn Up In G. I. Wash At Benning

False Teeth, Dog, Cat Were Once Discovered In Bundles

Strange things, including false teeth, identification tags, papers, money—and even once a dog and later a cat, have been found in garment pockets and bundles which have been sent in to the Quartermaster laundries at Fort Benning, superintendent William Blair of Laundry No. 1 revealed.

The episode when the puppy was found reposing in an enlisted man's bundle occurred many years ago. "The boys were sleeping in tents at the time," Blair says, "and the soldier must have placed the little fellow in his barracks bag the night before the laundry went out to keep him warm. He forgot his pet in the morning.

"There was no harm done. A telephone call to the soldier's organization brought him to the laundry on the double to claim the animal."

The cat, a snow-white feline, was found well camouflaged in the sheets of an officer's bundle. "Aside from frightening the girl checking the wash, we all had a good laugh," Blair said. No explanation was advanced as to how the cat got into the bundle.

Laundry No. 2 has found the usual items left in bundles. Mrs. Gladyn Munro, chief clerk, reports that checkers are now instructed not to search through pockets since it is felt that this takes too much time needlessly. "We usually find the articles after they have passed through the various operations but have never had anything yet which could walk off by itself," she smiled.

PLENTY OF HEADACHES

While war economy continues to take its toll of civilian laundries, the men who run the quartermaster laundries at Fort Benning also have their headaches yet the job of keeping Benning's soldiers in clean clothes and linen is done with neatness and dispatch.

In the fact of great labor turnover and absenteeism which sometimes reaches as high as 20 per cent of the personnel in the two laundry plants, Colonel Stephen B. Massey, director of supply, and Major Leslie E. Parker, laundry officer, oversee a job done effectively and efficiently.

Very prominent in the important task of doing the washing for a military city the size of Fort Benning are the civilian superintendents in the laundries. William J. Blair, an experienced laundryman from Chicago, is in charge of Unit No. 1, where he has been doing the same job for more than a score of years. R. N. Pinnell of Atlanta, Ga., is superintendent of the newer unit, No. 2, which he helped open in October, 1941.

Superintendent Blair came to Fort Benning in December, 1921, and opened Laundry No. 1 the following April. Facilities became crowded, and an annex was added in 1938. Of the trained staff which Blair once had, only 12 are left. In addition he has experienced a 90 per cent labor turnover since 1941.

SHORTAGES FEW

Despite the difficulties involved, Blair is still able to boast of the amazing record of shortages in soldiers' bundles which amount to but one-twentieth of one per cent. Laundry No. 2, which handles more work, tells of a comparable figure.

Laundry No. 1, built to accommodate washing for approximately 10,000 troops, averages handling about 10,000 bundles per week at present but has washed as many as 14,000 bundles in the same period before Laundry No. 2 was established.

Blair quotes quartermaster estimates that laundry patronage by soldiers hovers around 65 per cent, but it is his belief that at Fort Benning patronage is more nearly 80 per cent.

Laundry No. 1, produces figures to show it handles an average of 1,300,000 pieces of wash per month. Laundry No. 2 washes 100,000 bundles per month from enlisted men in addition to almost 2,500 bundles from officers.

Let's see how a typical bundle of laundry is handled: the laundries are unable to wash groups of bundles as fast as they are brought in on trucks from the various supply rooms, so first of all the dirty wash in barracks bags is piled high in bins. As work which was brought in earlier is "cleaned up," the checkers get to the lot in which our "average bundle" is.

First of all, the contenth in the bag are checked against the laundry slip. This done, the clothes are marked or stamped with the first letter of the sender's surname and the last four digits of his serial number.

Then the clothes are thrown into as many as 15 classifications and washed in from five to 11 changes of water depending upon the class of material.

After washing, excess water is removed from flat work and garments by centrifugal force in machines known as "extractors" which spin at a high rate of speed. From the extractors, flat work is sent to mangles to be ironed, khaki clothes are sent to pressing machines and still other classifications which need not be ironed are placed in hot air dryers.

240 EMPLOYES

Laundry No. 1 operates with two eight-hour shifts per day. Its personnel comprises about 240 employes. Laundry No. 2 employs 540 persons, including office workersand plant personnel. Three shifts are worked in the newer laundry. There are two full forces employed from 7:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. and from 4 p. m. to 12 midnight. A small staff is worked from 11:30 p. m. to 7:30 a. m. which does washing only.

Bundle work done at Laundry No. 1 includes enlisted men's work, work for two Women's Army Corps deachments at Fort Benning and nurses' bundles. Bulk work, including linens, is done for enlisted men, WACs and the station hospital. In addition, hospital work is done for Spence Field, Georgia. Mattress covers, mosquito bars, leggins and like pieces of work are also washed.

Laundry No. 2 does bundle work for enlisted men and officers, handles the linen supply for Station Hospital No. 2 in Harmony Church and the Opelika, Ala., Internment Camp. It was constructed according to plans known as "style number five," which is the largest single unit constructed for Quartermaster laundries.

A dry cleaning plant also is run in conjunction with Laundry No. 1. It, however, does renovation work only for the clothing and equipment section of the quartermaster repair shops and handles field jackets, mackinaws, OD shirts, ties and caps sent in with enlisted men's laundry bundles. No individual work is accepted.

CLEANING FLUID REUSED

An interesting feature of the dry cleaning plant, point out by Superintendent Blair is that all cleaning fluid used is strained and re-used again and again. The only loss is from evaporation.

Carrying peak loads, both laundry superintendents can handle a lot or group of washing and have it ready for the company or detachment supply sergeant to call for it in less than one week.

Blair describes the Quartermaster Laundry like this: "We realize that the price asked of a soldier for a month's washing is not much—in fact, it's pretty small. But, it is all we ask, and they gladly pay the price. Therefore we owe them the very best service we can offer. When there is a loss or shortage in a soldier's bundle, he should be dealt with as courteously and promptly as though he were makin ghis appeal to a civilian enterprise. We try to do it just that way."

CAPTAIN JENKINS

Announcement has been made here of the promotion of First Lieutenant Frank A. Jenkins, son of Mr. A. E. Jenkins, Charlotte, N. C., to the rank of captain.

He was commissioned from the ROTC, called to active duty on January 3, 1942, and assigned to the Infantry School as a student in Officers' Basic Course. Upon completion of the Basic Course, he was assigned, as a tactical officer, to Second Student Training Regiment here. His present assignment is with Radio Airplane Target Group, Weapons Section, the Infantry School.

2nd STR Food Pool Effective

Plan Saved Army Over $3,000 In June, Regiment Announces

Surpassing its previous record, the Second Student Training Regiment announced today a saving to the Army of $3,159.91 during the month of June, under its pooling system of food conservation.

The system aims to make the maximum use of non-perishable food left over in the various companies of the regiment. Here is how it works:

Every ten days each battalion mess officer makes an inventory of the left-overs in the company mess halls under him, and turns in a report to the regimental mess officer. In this way, the left-overs are polled and redistributed to other companies as needed, and the total amount of food that the regiment orders from the Quartermaster is considerably reduced from the rations allowed.

The efficient functioning of the system is in the hands of Lt. Carlton H. Cook, mess officer of the Second Regiment, who is assisted by Tech. Sgt. Minor Turner and Cpl. Irwin E. Nathan. Their report for June shows that a wide variety of foods made up the total savings of $3,195.91.

Some examples, and the quantity of each saved, are: Sugar, 600 pounds; coffee, 800 pounds; lard, 1,980 pounds; flour, 4,000 pounds; potatoes, 1,000 pounds; bacon, 670 pounds; beans, 200 pounds; lemons, 75 cases; canned milk, 84 cases; dry cereal, 126 cases; peas, 425 cans, and many other items.

The war will end in two years for Germany and not long after that for Japan.—Maj. Gen. Levin Campbell.

July 12 Might Have Been End of War

On July 12 we had been fighting the present war for exactly as long as the entire time of our participation in the first World War on Nov. 11, 1918; Armistice Day.

The odds we have had to contend with in this struggle are vastly greater than those of a quarter century ago. Our efforts have been more strenuous and the cast has been much greater than last time. The stakes today are immeasurably more tremendous.

Who could have foreseen in those early months of 1942 that in so short a space of time our very unhappy position would have been transferred into offensive action? Thus far, thanks to the superhuman accomplishments of our allies and the strategy of our military leaders our losses in lives have been unbelievably small.

A great danger for our side lies in a relaxing of our energies based on the supposition that since we have accomplished so much with so little inconvenience to ourselves we can gain final victory with a minimum disruption of our normal lives. This attitude has already been reflected in falling off of production. Americans cannot afford to wait to do something about an undesirable situation until it begins to hurt tangibly and individually.

Fighting thus far will fade to the status of preliminary skirmishes before the magnitude of the battles ahead for the European continent. Even when we have beaten the enemy both in Europe and Asia we still have years of resettlement to go through before the world shall have in any way recovered from the depletion of the past five years.

To visualize an imminent return to "normalcy" is childish and in the current idiom is only "a build-up for a let-down". It's all very well to say that the present juncture is "the beginning of the end" but we have a hell of a long and bloody road to travel before we reach the end of the end and any suppositions to the contrary are puerile rubbish and wishful thinking.

Clear, Constructive Thinking Conquers Fear

Just as there were no atheists in the foxholes of Bataan, there are no individuals who lack the instinct of fear. Fear of punishment keeps our children in check. Fear of law and order keep some of our people from crime. From the time a person is born and until the time he dies, he is told what he should or should not do. Members of the clergy are preaching daily right from wrong.

If a person is law abiding, and has a fear conflict, then the proper remedy it to forget it. It's easy to tell someone to forget it, but can we forget our own fears so easily? Science tells us to remember it. Think about it, calculate the chances for good or ill and then act.

Those people who cannot overcome fear are people who cannot think clearly or constructively. To free the mind, bound and gagged by fear, a person should study himself, and self study will bring each person up against his own unsolved problems.

Let a person ask himself in any situation that creates fear, "What am I afraid of? How would others act in my situation? What is the best way to overcome and solve my problem?", and when he has answered these questions in his own mind, then he should act according to his decision, and confront his fear without further contemplation. Only then can fear be mastered and overcome.

Regt. Surgeon,

Battle-Wise Fighting Men Staff Infantry School

A prerequisite in the formation of any institution of learning is knowledge that has undergone the acid test, knowledge based on experience.

The Infantry School is blessed with an ample supply of this precious commodity. Realizing the important influence today's teaching programs play upon tomorrow's battles, the Infantry School has spared no pains in gathering together a wealth of battle-wise fighting men, men whose background is years and years of Army life, years of campaigns, battles and life in the Army.

A recent survey conducted by Colonel Robert Sharp of the First Student Training Regiment showed that morale and fighting ability among the enlisted personnel of his regiment are being maintained by men who wear upon their arms the many stripes of long service in the United States Army. The roll of honor for such years devoted to duty and partiotism reads in part: twenty-nine years of active duty, Master Sergeant Charles S. Collins; twelty-four years of active duty, Master Sergeant Elton Stewart; tweny-nine years of acive duty, First Sergeant Manford G. Metcalf; twenty-three years of active duty, First Sergeant Lawrence A. Beck; twenty-nine years of active duty, First Sergeant Vene W. Towler; twenty-four years of active duty, First Sergeant Louis F. Cody; twenty-nine years of active duty, Albert A. Geydos.

These were, in part only, a few of the names which dotted the list that Colonel Robert Sharp held before him. Not all of the non-commissioned officers listed could boast of as many years as these seven soldiers for, among themselves they have compiled one hundred and eighty seven years of Army life. One hundred and eighty seven years of parade grounds extending clear from the watery rice fields of China, through the lush tropics of the Philippines, to the very heart of our mighty nation, Washington, D. C. These men have soldiered in heat, in mud, in trenches, in air made undesirable by nauseating gas. These men are in a position to tell others what war is lige. The Infantry School is amply staffed throughout its many regiments by such stalwart men of experience.

As is typical of the forethought used in planning the future of our Army, and being well aware of the role the non-commissioned officer plays in the scheme of such things, the First Student Training Regiment has a great many younger men whose years of experience run the gamut from one to fifteen years. These men so to speak, are the replacement training center. As a younger, more agile group of men, they are being taught the trick of the Army. They are being polished and groomed to take over more weighty problems in the Army of the future. The lives of our sons yet unborn are dependent on the care and training that these older men of our Army, pass on to these younger men and our Army.

Benning Recognizes Value Of Singing

The fact that the American people like to sing will be admitted by everyone. Small rural towns, in spite of war and crisis, still hold their all-day community sings. From time to time the movies invite mass singing by running off the popular song film in which the audience makes the rafters ring by following the little white ball as it bounces from note to note.

In every crisis in our history America has found songs which stir men's souls to courageous action, and this war is no exception. Hundreds of songs are coming from the presses, battle songs, morale-building songs, ready to wend their way to thousands of American homes waiting to sing them.

Congressman Hagen, Farmer-Labor representative from the Middle West, has called for singing as one of the most effective means yet found to build a fighting spirit on the home front.

"These songs," he says "are all proven morale builders in the barracks and on the assembly line". He cited an Army air base where the songs have already taken hold and he quoted an officer as saying that great war songs would help build the kind of morale that might "shorten the war by six months".

The value of singing as morale-building is recognized here at Fort Benning. Take for example the popular Reception Center Chorus which is heard over Station WRBL weekly. Colored folks like to sing; they sing at their work, they sing at play; they like to hear others sing. Reception Center officials took cognizance of this fact when they decided to establish the Chorus as an outlet for the natural inclination of the troops under their command.

Now comes the announcement of the organization of a male chorus of the Army Specialized Training Program Basic Training Center of the Infantry School which made its first local appearance recently at the First Baptist church in Columbus. It follows the choral group of the Second Student Training Regiment which has been in popular demand in Atlanta and elsewhere.

The Bayonet hopes that these examples will be followed by every organization on the Post. "Let music swell the breeze and ring from all the trees." Let's all sing; it's good for the soul.

THE BOND BETWEEN

Let's not give up, let's not give in, let's all give out, that's the way to win. It's you and me with a powerful BOND between us. Without you I am lost, without me you are lost, without the BOND we are both lost. Let's you and I forever make that BOND between us grow. Victory is in sight, plan to buy another BOND tonight, and behold that glorious sight.

Steppes Of Stalingrad

Battlefield of dread and horror, signs of man's destructive furor,
Where the winter snow is on the ground.
Here are tanks, both dead and dying, tombed in ice are corpses lying,
Through these graves the cruel winds blew around.

Not a bird is there a-singing, nor a bell is there a-ringing,
Like they do when spring taps at the door.
On the earth the ice is hailing, from the trees arose a wailing,
Songs of those who can withstand no more.

On the trees a few leafs rattling, dead and dry the strong winds battling,
Soon they too are coffined in the snow;
And the winter ends a story, tales of men who sought a glory,
Hopes of spring that died in winter's woe.

Overhead a plane is soaring, deep into the night winds roaring,
Lone his journey o'er a ravished earth;
And the pilot flies while dreaming, and he sees the red blood gleaming—
Rivulets which hate and wrongs gave birth.

Brood on dreams that led them to their doom.
Sapermen that marched off joking, now upon their own blood choking,
Weak with hunger stare into the gloom.

And the man who sent them singing, to the steppes destruction bringing,
For the snowy steppes are daubed with gore;
Now a world aroused with anger, poises its heel to crush this danger,
Stamp these coils from earth forevermore.

From the land a whispered singing, fills his ears with horrid ringing
Victory songs that will be heard once more;
Conquered, yes, but not forever, waiting for the chains to sever,
Right with might the bloody wrongs they bore.
Now he sleeps with pulses throbbing and h ewakes in fear and sobbing—
Murdered millions march across his brain;
And he knows the time is pending, when the sword shall carve an ending,
Tortured children chant a grim refrain.

Flying snow in mounds are heaping and into his spirit creeping,
Making desolate these hectic groves;
For the fruit has long since fallen, mated to death's clinging pollen,
Through this wilderness a dark wind roves.

Trees are dead, but trees have spring-birth, bodies wither into dust-earth,
That which goes shall never come again;
We can hear the chorus calling, pale the chords with tones appalling,
And their rhapsodies are scaled on pain,
To be sung and to be sung and to be sung—in vain?

WITHOUT SPOT OR BLEMISH
Chaplain F. M. Thompson

It is very disturbing to contact perfection—the "Unico Good," who are blithely insensible to the least bit of irregularity in their character or conduct.

It is perhaps a work of supererogation to buffet them with unkind words since they constitute such a small percentage of the brotherhood. However, I have the support of the Scriptures for my attitude, "Be Not Righteous Over Much."

But that is not the origin of this outbreak. It originated in a very uncomfortable half hour spent with one who exuded piety from every pare.

He had, it seemed, never missed a day from Sunday School for ten years. He had read the Bible through three times. He had never sworn, smoked, gambled or danced, and so on. All of which was very praiseworthy. But it left me very lonesome and embarrassed. I wished he had been more frail to human temptation. I had, however, the temerity to inquire whether he ever snored in the night?

Whatever may be the truth about the doctrine of original sin the fact is most of us are full of spots and blemishes. These lines etch most lives—

"My padre 'e saye I's a sinner,
An' John Bull says I'm a saint;
An' both of 'em must be liars,
For I'm neather of 'em, I aint.
I'm a man, an' a man's a mixture -
Right down from his very birth;
For 'arf of 'im came from heaven,
An' 'arf of 'im came from earth,
There's a summat as draws 'em uppards,
An' summat as drags 'im down!
An' the consikence is 'e wabbles
'Twixt muck an' a golden crown."

USO Presents—

DELUXE ACCOMODATIONS FOR SONG; FAREWELL TO E. K. ACKERMAN

By PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

Since the dormitory in the Salvation Army-USO at 1323 Broadway in Columbus was opened some 19 months ago a total of 16,675 men have been accommodated. . . . That figure is made up of enlisted men, some officers and a few visiting fathers and brothers. . . . Many men have been directed to the sleeping place from the railroad and bus stations by military police and taxi cab drivers,, Miss Mel Tolbert, program director explains.

Locker space is available, and accommodations are comparable to those of a good hotel. . . . The fee of 50 cents entitles the soldier to a towel with soap for a shower . . . Breakfast is served on Sunday mornings when the Dunkers' club holds sway.

• • •

A new director has taken over at the Army-Navy Y. M. C. A.—USO in Columbus, and the old is on his way to a well-earned Ohio vacation . . . E. K. Ackerman, director of the club since last October, was succeeded last week by Floyd Frisco, who has been understudying him since this past January. . . . After his holiday Ackerman will assume a USO post in Nebraska.

The discussions on recorded music at the YMCA-USO lead by Pfc. Joseph Delaney of Headquarters Co., 1st PTR, are continuing throughout the summer.

New feature of the program at the Salvation Army USO in Phenix City will be a motion picture quiz supplemented by short subjects . . . It will play Wednesday at 9 p. m. (EWT).

• • •

Ever wonder how the USO is able to provide girls for soldiers invited to dances, parties and picnics when countless numbers of GI's search high and low and almost invariably come back empty-handed . . . Well, the answer is organization—yessir, organization.

Here's how one Columbus unit arranges this most delicate matter . . . There is a council of eight girls who pledge five of their feminine acquaintances for the occasion, giving the club a total of 40 girls to draw upon for any affair . . . Should more be needed, maybe it cold be made to work like a chain letter . . . Should but 15 or 20 lasses be desired for a series of dances or parties, the original eight girls are revolved, each group of four being in charge of hostesses for alternate events. Simple, what?

Photography classes at Ninth Street USO for beginners and advanced picture snappers were not begun two weeks ago as originally announced but will start tonight . . . Difficulties in obtaining the supplies and materials caused the postponement.

Kay Says—

PLEASURE TRIPS AND TRAIN TRAVEL ARE OUT FOR DURATION

Well-meaning friends and lonesome relatives have been asking me when I intend to make my annual trek to the middle west, as if travelling were a thing to be undertaken lightly. For a few moments I start daydreaming about the luxuries of train travel, until I suddenly recall actual experiences within the last two years.

It was with no sense of forbidding that I started on my first cross country jaunt, via train, two years ago. Friends had assured me that even coach accommodations were delightful in those days, with adequate facilities for keeping the baby's formula on ice, kind-hearted strangers or a willing hostess to relieve one of part of the responsibility in caring for an infant, and excellent food.

Unfortunately, my optimistic friends had neglected to inform railroad officials and fellow travelers of their ideas. Gentle old ladies looked firmly down their noses when confronted with the prospect of a restless child in an adjoining seat. The only facilities for keeping formula seemed to be in the dining car which, not keeping the same schedule as my offspring, was inconveniently closed whenever the pangs of hunger struck. Consequently, my objecting eighteen-month-old lived mainly on canned baby food and ripe bananas, to the great detriment of his digestive system and my good nature.

• • •

Undaunted, I again braved the perils of train travel last summer, well fortified with reservations and the reassuring thought that the young hopeful was now old enough to take his meals in the dining car. Several other mothers had had equal forethought about reservations, I noted. Their children suffered variously from acute attacks of colic, a particularly virulent case of whooping cough, and measles in its early stages.

• • •

My young son enjoyed his meals on the diner, but seemed to feel that things were a bit late in getting started. Consequently, we spent a goodly portion of our waking hours either outside the door of the dining car waiting to get in, inside the car waiting to be served, gulping down our food so other persons would have a chance to eat, or stumbling back to our seats.

• • •

With temperatures again hovering around the hundred mark, the old urge for a chance of scenery is making itself felt. But I look over my last two experiences as a traveler and decide, regretfully to curb my wandering impulses until better times. Until then, I'll leave the trains for those who must travel. I've taken enough punishment in the name of pleasure.

THE OL' BOY GETS GOOD AND LOST IN A BLACKOUT

BY ST. SGT. TOM McDONALD

Once annually the Officers Club details Colonel Swampwater to make a thorough inspection of the main part of the main post and has him turn in the report to General Quagmire pertaining to the following items and their disposition:

Usable Coca-Cola bottles and their location, the number of fire plugs within two miles of the club, the name, rank and serial number of the officers using the path in back of the WAAC barracks between the hours of 10 and 12 p. m., the number of second lieutenants hanging around the Soda Shop during ten-minute breaks, and a complete summary the main post theater alone or with somebody.

Since this material is considered secret, restricted and confidential, the ol' boy was very sparse in regard to further details, but he assured me that my presence on the mission was to be of vital importance. I was to carry a notebook and pencil and jot down all of his more candid observations. A task of no little significance, due to my Leader's habit of gnawing wildly at a wad of imported chewing gum and still being under the impression that he was articulate.

Things went moderately well considering our problem from the start of our mission until about 2200 (army standard time). we had made a thoughtful reconnaissance and had assembled our information well on all aspects of our objective. The only item remaining was the path behind the WAAC barracks.

Being young full of hope, I followed the ol'boy with great interest as he edged nearer and nearer the barracks of our modern Dianas.. Keenly and with a noiseless tread my leader walked softly to the lighted windows, observant and on the beam as we approached.

"Sergeant," he says, "if you're wondering why we're sneaking over here, it's because I want to see if anybody has wandered off the path."

"Yes, Sir," I replied, holding my pencil poised in readiness to take a note.

"Now, sergeant," if you will observe the girls are all going carefully about their business."

"They're right cute, aren't they, Sir!"

"Ahem, Sergeant! that's beside the point! What I imply is that the fact they are going quietly about their business means none of our junior officers have wandered off the path, so I can confidently say our report on this item is most favorable."

"But what about the senior officers, Sir?" I inquired with my pencil elevated and ready to strike.

"That's irrelevant and immaterial, Sergeant!" the ol' boy snapped back, but before he could say anything more the loud, weird sound of the blackout siren rang out in all its shrillness. From every nook and cranny of the post the lights rapidly faded out, and before a moment had passed my commanding officer and I were enveloped in pitch darkness. Suddenly I heard a loud gulping sound and I realized that the old boy had accidently swallowed his chewing gum.

I patted him friendly on the back as he coughed violently to get it out of his wind-pipe. Presently he succeeded, and then I felt his cold, clammy hand on my shoulder, as he hissed in my ear:

"Quick, Sergeant! we gotta get out of here. This might be a real air raid for all we know!"

"Yes, Sir," I replied. "Where are we going?"

"To the Reproduction plant," he mumbled, stumbling blindly forward at the same time.

"No it ain't. It must be over this way. Come on!"

"Yes, Sir!" I answered, holding on to the back of his belt and stumbling reluctantly after him. After winding in and out of buildings and stumbling over several mysterious objects we arrived at a set of steps and the Colonel started up.

"Are you sure this is the Reproduction Plant, Sir?"

"Hell, yes, Sergeant! I was a reconnaissance platoon leader in the war against Pancho Villa!"

Not having a retaliation for this remark, I followed him on into the building and we sat down on what I thought was a foot locker.

"This must be a box of foundry type, Sergeant," the ol'boy suggested, utterly contrary to my line of thought.

Presently from the near vicinity we heard what I thought was female giggling!

"Are you sure, Sir," I whispered, "that we are in the Reproduction Plant?"

"Certainly, Sergeant," he whispered back. "It's just some of the secretaries that work here who had to stay through the blackout.

"Are you sure the Reproduction Plant has secretaries, Sir?"

"Shades of Salone, Yes, Sergeant! When the lights go on again you will discover what a shrewd patrol leader I am."

"Yes, Sir," I answered, still mystified by the twittering sounds I was hearing from various directions. After this we just sat there in the pitch darkness for what to me seemed an awful long time, but not so my leader. Somehow he had managed to find a new block of chewing gum in his fet hind pocket and was smacking happily all the while. Confident and proud of his ability in the realm of scouting and pathfinding.

After what seemed about forty-five minutes, the sirens blared forth again and out of the semi-dark window we could see the lights beginning to snap on all over the post. Then suddenly the lights where we were snapped on!

Stupefied and utterly flabbergasted O' T. P. swallowed his wad of chewing gum again. He had discovered what I had suspected all along. The two of us had been sitting on a foot locker in the middle of one of the WAAC barracks.

"Shades of Salome, Sergeant!" the ol' boy gasped. Do you see where you led me! Come on, we gotta get out of here."

"Yes, Sir," I replied, at the same time looking out of the corner of my eyes, as I ran hastily after him.

Humorous Peril Trails Student Communications Officers In Tree-Tops

Life is fraught with humorous peril for student officers attending communications courses in the First Student Training Regiment. These intrepid young men are called upon do do all the jobs they will eventually order enlisted men to perform.

Not the least among these is the tree-climbing. Clad in the tan coveralls affectionately nicknamed "For Bennin playsuits," the communications course men make frequent jaunts into the 60th Infantry woods, to practice the use of climbing irons.

In order to climb a tree, a man must have two leg irons and a climbing belt. The leg irons are equipped with sharp spurs which seldom stick in the tree, but often stick in the legs of the wearer. The belt is adapted for the low waistline affected by the flappers of the late twenties. It has two iron loops, one over each hip, called "D" rings. To one of these loops the two snaps of the safety belt. One end of this extra belt is unhooked, passed around the tree, and hooked up to the other "D" ring when the climber has reached the dizzy height of four or five feet. When he has done this, all he needs to do is dig his heels in and sit on his belt (it says in the book).

THREE-MINUTE LIMIT

The purpose of all this is to make what is laughingly called an overhead crossing, the approved way of getting a wire from one side of the road to the other without tangling it in the wheels of a jeep. In order to qualify, the students have to make a complete overhead crossing in three minutes.

To make an overhead crossing, the victim first secures a mess of wire, and wraps some it it around the base of the first tree, and ties it—and usually himself—firmly. As soon as he gets his hand out of the knot he has tied, he throws the free end around his shoulder and scrambles up the tree. About four feet up, he will feel a sharp jerk about his neck, meaning that he has taken up all the slack wire, and will go skidding down the tree, throwing splinters all over the amused spectators, which serves them right. He then takes a deep breath and a little more wire and starts over. After a number of terrifying skids, in which he resorts to the shinny position his father taught him, he decides that he has climber about far enough.

WHERE IS 'D' RING?

At this point begins the search for the "D" ring. He knows very well that it was on his belt when he started, and that his safety belt was hooked onto it, because he caught his heel in it on the way up. Finally he finds both the ring and the belt, far around in back. With trembling hands he unhooks one end of the belt, passes it around the tree, and hooks it into the ring on the other side. If he believes the book, he then calmly sits on his belt and makes another tie like the one on the bottom.

Having done that, he unhooks his safety belt on one side, and falls to the ground. With the loose end of his safety belt catching in his heels, he limps across the road and starts up the other tree. When he reaches the desired eight on that one, he unhooks the end of his safety belt and throws it around the tree at himself. The heavy iron snap hits him sharply on the head, and the whole thing drops to the ground, because it was only hooked at one end, and he just unfastened that. He decides he didn't want the old safety belt anyway, and starts looking for his wire. After awhile he finds it coiled up at the bottom of the tree, where he left it. By that time his three minutes are up anyway, so it doesn't make any difference.

A Wednesday afternoon musicale for patients in the neuropsychiatric ward at Station hospital was ushered in by an excellent solo by Sgt. Natal Pintello, followed by Cpl. Eugenia Gramas, the Song Bird of the WAAC's, with a rendition of "Let's Get Lost."

Pvt. John Whitworth, patient on Ward F-2, thrilled the audience with the sleight of hand card tricks. An excellent saxophone rendition of "Honeysuckle Rose" was given by Pvt. Ernest Heil, of the Medical Detachment. Pvt. James Bishop and Pvt. James Hall of Ward F-2, playing a guitar and a Mouth Organ, rendered a hillbilly number, "Corina." Cpl. Grimas again lifted her silvery voice to the tune of "White Cliffs of Dover."

The finale of the program was the Medical Detachment trio, Sgt. Natal Pintello, with his accordion; Cpl. Tate, with his bass violin, and Pvt. Heil, with his saxophone, playing a medley of "My Blue Heaven." All performers were awarded prizes of cigarettes and the festivities of the afternoon were heightened by the cold punch, served by the Red Cross.

Several moving picture shorts, presented through the courtesy of the Phillip Morris Cigarette company, were also shown.

Stocky, squared-jawed Candidate Robert G. Barnes of the Eighth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, holds degrees from two of the country's most distinguished universities and he taught in one of them before he came into the Army. But the events he has crowded into his 28 years would never be associated popularly with a professorial career.

Barnes was in Canton when that city was bombed by the Japanese; he spent several weeks with a Chinese guerrilla band and was twice arrested by the Japanese. These exciting adventures were experienced by Barnes while he was in China on a fellowship granted by the Princeton Yenching Foundation. He taught international relations at Yenching University during this period and added Chinese to his list of linguistic accomplishments—he also knows German and French.

The Japanese took him into custody on two occasions while he was visiting northern China when he approached military installations too closely with his camera. His captors were quite polite, however, he said. "They gave me tea and cakes. It was more like a party than an arrest."

For two weeks he was stranded on the second floor of a hotel in Kobe when unprecedented floods inundated the city and poured through the ground floor of the hostelry.

Barnes holds a B. A. degree from Princeton and an M. A. from Yale and taught international relations at the latter university. He was born in Battle Creek, Mich., but has called Philadelphia his home since he was eight years old.

6 Lonely Looies Make Best Of It Among High Brass

Sixth Company, First Student Training Regiment, boasts of having a large number of high ranking officers in its class. Two full colonels, 14 lieutenant colonels, 48 majors, 8 captains, and nine 1st lieutenants comprise the class as a whole.

The lieutenants are catching the spirit of so much brass and three of them were promoted to captain during the first week of the class. In addition one captain felt the urge as well and a new major was added to the ranks during the week. The promotions were: Lieutenants Cothran, Rawl and Henry to captain and Captain William M. Brown to major.

Colonel Stanley R. Putman is the student company commander and in that capacity keeps the company functioning as a well-organized unit. Colonel Leon T. Weaver is the student second in command, while Lt. Col. Nelson K. Lyons acts the place of a hard boiled 1st sergeant. However, little difficulty is encountered at formation when the squad leaders themselves are made up of company commanders.

1st STR Changes Made By Roosma

Lt. Colonel John S. Roosma, regimental commander of the First Student Training Regiment, announced the following changes in the 4th Battalion:

Former colored students of the motor mechanic and radio classes who were quartered in the Service Battalion are to occupy the 19th Company buildings now located on Dilboy street across from the 24th Company.

This change will give the 4th Battalion more area for their men, and also afford greater coordination of all units of this organization.

Along with the change of barracks is a change of command. Captain Halverson is now commanding the 19th Company. Captain Haezel, former commander, has been shifted to the 22nd Company.

2nd STR Captains Made Majors

Promotion of four captains of the Second Student Training Regiment to the rank of major in the Army of the United States has been announced by Col. Arthur A. Blain, commanding officer. Five other former officers of the Second now attending advanced course were also advanced to field rank.

The new majors are Alanson T. Lealand, executive officer of the Third Battalion; Harvey A. Mills, company commander of the 10th Company; Thomas C. McKinnie, company commander of the First Company, and John B. Torinus, Regimental Special Service Officer.

Capt. Edgar A. Reese, ex-University of Delaware swimming captain and football star, now is Operations and Training Officer at Ft. DuPont.

Legal Talent Quite Bountiful In 3rd STR OC Class

An array of legal talent is present in the Seventh Company, Third Student Training Regiment, to keep the candidates posted on their rights and privileges. No less than four experienced barristers are working for commissions in the company and the roster also shows a number of men who worked in the field of law and who were law students.

Thomas Talbot of Dayton, Ohio, practiced for nine years before entering the Army. Wiley Davis has been a member of the bar in Atlanta, Ga., for four years where, with his partner, he was co-editor of the Civil Code of Atlanta. He also worked on the Georgia Code.

Jack Spangenburg of Clark's Summit, Pa., was associated with the Pennsylvania Workmen's Compensation Board when Uncle Sam beckoned. Isadore Epstein of Brooklyn has 12 years of practice to his credit.

Lt. Joseph Goldsmith, who, with Joe Gordon, won the AAU handball doubles title in 1940 and 1942, now is on duty at Camp Bowie.

R. C. Lends Band To First Regiment Unit

The 4th Battalion, 1st Student Training Regiment, now has real band music every Monday morning for its weekly presentation of ribbon awards for excellence in march discipline and parade.

The band of the Reception Center here at Fort Benning has agreed to be in the 4th Battalion area every Monday morning. Composed of approximately 30 pieces, the band is well versed in military marches.

The band plays as the student company commanders and guidon bearers move forward to the reviewing officer to receive their ribbon awards. It also plays as they return to their company positions.

After the command "Pass in review" the Reception Center band moves past the reviewing officer, turns, and takes a position opposite the reviewing stand. In this position they play until the student companies have passed in review. This ceremony takes about 30 minutes and during this time the band plays continuously.

All the officers of the 4th Battalion are agreed that their band adds much to the Monday morning reviews, and the staff of the battalion are very grateful for the cooperation of the band.

OC Makes Expert First T ime Up With Garand Rifle

Working with the M-1 rifle for the first time, Candidate William S. Sollenberger of the 11th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, piled up a score of 194 to qualify as expert. The possible is 210.

Shooting—and shooting well—is not a new experience for Sollenberger, however. At Gettysburg (Pa.) College, from which he was graduated in April, the candidate had an expert's rating on the collegiate rifle team.

Sollenberger achieved his 194 on the McAndrews Range to lead all in his class. On the 1,000-inch range, Candidate H. M. Caldwell of the same company scored 252 out of a possible 256 with the light machine gun. Caldwell has had previous experience with the weapon.

'Yank' July 9 Issue Features WAAC's In Africa

The WAAC in North Africa puts up with all the bad features of military routine and gets none of the breaks that come to the average dogface. But, according to Sgt. Pete Paris, writing in the July 9 issue of YANK, not one of the WAAC's in Algiers is beefing.

In a two-page story with plenty of pictures, YANK tells about a company of 195 WAAC's on overseas duty with the Army in North Africa, describing their jobs, their barracks in an old Algiers convent, and their social life. This is second in a series of three WAAC articles being featured by YANK.

Also in the July 9 issue, YANK's Alaskan correspondent presents another hair-raising, eye-witness account of war on Attu.

Perhaps the most informative item in the forthcoming issue is, "New Tax Bill—It Lets Servicemen Off Easy," by Cpl. Richard Paul of YANK's Washington Bureau. Just in case you've been wondering how this pay-as-you-go plan affects you and your family, you'll read the answer complete in YANK. Presented in clear, simple terms, you'll find exactly what part and how much of your pay is exempt.

For a perfect pin-up, look on page 16 of YANK's July 9 issue. There you'll see none other than that cornsilk blond fresh out of Hollywood—Grace McDonald.

It's the July 9 issue of YANK, The Army Weekly, on sale in P. X.'s July 2—5 cents a copy. Look for the stirring Fourth of July cover: Old Glory in North Africa.

LT. VOLK PROMOTED

Lieutenant Richard A. Volk, commanding Company A, 538 Armored Infantry battalion, nas been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. A native of New York State, Lieutenant Volk saw enlisted service with the 3rd and 7th Armored Divisions at Camp Polk, Louisiana, before attending the Officer Candidate school here Until late in May he had been assigned to the 54th Armored Infantry Regiment of the 10th Armored Division.

Pfc. Herby Karpel, slated to join the N. Y. Yankees pitching roster this spring until Uncle Sam Tapped him, is with the 824th Tank Destroyer Battalion at Camp Bowie, Texas. Last year he won 11 and lost 1 while hurling for Kansas City, and was voted the outstanding American Ass'n pitcher of 1942.

BY SGT. CARL NEU

BUDDY LEWIS, the former Washington Senator third baseman, who is now an Air Force lieutenant at Lawson Field, gave diamond fans in the capital city an unmatched thrill a few days ago—by air. Buddy had visited his old team mates at Griffith Stadium before the afternoon game, and told them he'd be back at 4:30 P. M., via plane, to give them a salute after he took off for his return to Lawson.

Flier Lewis

Well, right on the dot, a two-motored transport plane swooped low over the center field fence in Griffith Stadium and roared straight down the center of the field across home plate as the fans held onto their seats. Then it cleared off and roared back up into the skyways bound for Benning.

The winged monster really stole the show from the ball game, though. According to reports, the umpires, the players on the field, the fans in the stands—all had their eyes fixed on the plane. George Case, crack Senator outfielder, who was ready to bat, threw the resin bag high into the air as Buddy roared overhead.

As a matter of fact, all the Washington players rushed out of their dugout to wave at the pilot of the big plane. But not another soul in the stadium knew what was going on—that this was Lewis saying goodbye to his old mates. As one writer stated, it was probably the first time in history that a baPlayer electrified a crowd by personally clearing a fence. That flight over Griffith Stadium may be the last that the fans in Washington will see of Buddy for some time, because he hopes to go overseas soon.

Lewis served with the Senators for six full seasons prior to his induction late in 1941. He was previously with Chattanooga of the Southern Association. After he had won his bars the hard way, Buddy was transferred to Lawson Field early this year, but has had little time for baseball. He did manage to play a few games for Hank Gowdy's TIS All-Satrs and looked in good shape. But there is a much bigger game at stake right now, and Buddy Lewis is anxious to win that fracas first.

VERSATILITY should be the middle name of Mike Hogan, Parachute School diamond chief, who seems to do everything but carry the bats for his club these days. A crack pitcher a couple of seasons back with the Baltimore Orioles where he won 17 and lost only 7, Hogan started in with TPS as their mound ace. It developed he had a flair for hitting the pitching round these parts, though, so he roamed the outfield when not hurling.

Then, the catching situation on the paratroop nine went from bad to worse, so now Hogan is catching and doing a workmanlike job of it. One thing is sure. His pitching arm is capable of nailing more base-stealers than any other receiver TPS has had all season. Oh yes, he's also quite adept at "discussions" with the umpires. All of which adds up to the fact that the lad the paratroopers have dubbed "Shanty" is fast becoming the most colorful ball player at the fort.

GOLF NEWS seems a little scarce these days, but here's a bit about a battle of twosomes last week between a duo from the Signal Corps and another representing the Infantry Board. The communications lads won by a 2-up count in a hot match over the post fairways. Capt Herb Cooley and Lieut Art. Lehman were the victorious twosome while Lt. Col. Bill Rutherford and Major Larry Mitzen were the losers.

Golfer Cooley

Speaking of Captain Cooley, who is one of the fort's most ardent golfers in his rare spare time, reminds us that he's the same linksman who scored a neat eagle on the par five 18th hole just a couple weeks back. The Signal Corps officer had traversed 430 of the 495 yards on two real healthy wood shots, and then proceeded to whisk a 65-yard niblick stroke right into the cup for an eagle three. The ball never even hit the green. It just hit the cup on the fly. And the good captain is still talking about it. Do you blame him?

SPORTING NEWS carried a story last week telling how Jimmy Reese, the former Yankee and Cardinal infielder, although only a corporal, bosses a lieutenant colonel when they are on the diamond. Reese is manager of the Camp Campbell, Kentucky, nine made up of players from the 12th Armored Division, and the colonel is none other than Travis Brown, West Point captain in 1930, and formerly a well-known sport figure around Benning. He's now one of the catchers on the Campbell team.

Colonel Brown served here as a major with the 2nd Armored and prior to that as post utility officer while a captain. He was also a star grid player at the Point as a halfback. He ws most noted at Benning, however, as a grid official. During the 1941 season when the 29th Infantry represented the post on the gridiron, Brown refereed all the home games and was rated as a topnotcher. Roy Evans, a team-mate at West Point, who umpired most of those 1941 games here with Brown, is now a lieutenant colonel in the Office of the Quartermaster General in Washington.

SEEMS THAT the sports editor of the 300th Infantry regimental weekly has set up quite a howl amongst post fans with some of his statements and insinuations. This week, he insinuated that the post title series was purely mythical, then went on to claim Lefty Francis was the best pitcher at the post, and finished up by telling his readers that when the Triplets achieved an eight game streak, they accomplished a feat no other team could match.

Just for the sake of accuracy, therefore, we'd like to refute ye honorable sports ed with the following facts. The post title series was not mythical, and the 300th had every chance to qualify for it—but they dropped four games and could only finish tied for third in the TIS loop. Secondly, Lefty Francis WAS the best pitcher on the post LAST year, but this year it's a different story and Lefty will be the first to admit it. He's just never had time to get into 1942 condition, he doesn't get a chance to pitch as often, and his record is not at all impressive as a result. There are at least half a dozen hurlers with much better records than Francis, including George Cave on the same team, who incidentally, is usually selected by Lefty to hurl the most important Triplet games.

Hurler Francis

And finally, it's a well-known fact that the Academic Profs compiled a nine-game win streak right at the start of the season. As a matter of fact, they won 13 in a row, both in and out of the loop, before they were finally tumbled. Now, Mr. Sports Editor, we're all in favor of beating the drums for your favorite teams, but it's a good idea to stick close to the facts. Otherwise you'll find yourself in the predicament you must be in right now—that of trying to explain to your readers how the invincible Triplets (as you put it) came to drop their first game of the second-half to the 764th Tankers, who languished in seventh place during the first-half race. How about it?

IF YOU THINK baseball isn't an Army game just listen to this line-up which graced the diamond for West Point in 1915 as one of the best nines in history. It's probably the only nine that ever stayed together through the years—and they're still fighting together in the same cause. Anyway here's West Point's 1915 line-up as it is today: Catcher—General Dwight Eisenhower; Pitcher—General C. F. Miller; 1st Base—General Jacob Devers; 2nd Base—General Charles Milliken; 3rd Base—General Charles Gerhardt; Shortstop—General Vernon Pritchard; Right Field—General Leland Hobbs; Center Field—General Omar Bradley; Left Field—General Hugh Mitchell.

Also, baseball as you no doubt know, was born of the War Between The States, and created by a general of the U. S. Army—Abner Doubleday. Then too, it's a historical fact that when Abraham Lincoln was notified of his nomination for the presidency, the commission got off the train to find him playing baseball in Springfield, Ill. The great man kept the commission waiting "till I get another base hit." And although the Presidency of the United States was at stake, it had to wait until Abe took his turn at bat.

SHORT SHOTS—Ewell Blackwell, new pitcher-outfielder for the 124th Gators, was a team mate for two years of Benny Zientara, Prof second baseman, when they were with Indianapolis in the Double-A. Like Benny, Blackie also was up with Cincy for awhile....Johnny Ciriello, unheralded shortstop for the 24th General Hospital, could give any shortfielder on the post a real argument for an all-star job. His fielding and hitting are tops in the post league....It's finally been settled. The name of the 176th catcher is Sahara, not Suchara, even though he's anything but dry when he's behind the plate.... Freddy Sington, the former Alabama All-American tackle who also played big league baseball, is now a Navy lieutenant. He used to be a frequent visitor at the post as a representative of an Atlanta sporting goods house....Vern Smith, Gator outfielder, rates an orchid as the best fielding gardener of the year. He made a throw a couple of weeks that was a dilly. Then Sunday, his catch in center was the greatest of the season and definitely big time.... WAAC Corporal Jennie Gramis at Service Club No. 1 is a sister of Big Mike Castronis, great white hope of the Georgia Bulldogs on the gridiron this fall. He's the lad who cleared the way for Trippi when both were freshmen, but was out with an injury last season....Hank Akers, Benning's number one diver and a former Billy Rose Aquacade star, is now at officer candidate school in the 3rd STR. He'd been a Parachute School instructor for over a year and starred in last summer's soldier water show.

Red Sox Take Service League Crown

1st Student Training Tossers Sweep Seven Straight for Laurels

Ten Colored Teams Entered In Second-Half Competition

Winning their final game from the Academic Pacesetters by a 6-4 count, the powerful 1st STR Red Sox swept to their seventh straight loop triumph and the first-half title in the Service league last week.

The Redlegs finished up without a loss to edge out the 2nd STR Commandos who captured second place in the final standings with six wins against one loss, that of course, to the 1st Regiment tossers. In third place in the standings were the Provisional Truck Blues, two games behind the Commandos.

Three clubs ended up in a deadlock for fourth place honors. They were the Reception Center Orphans, the 3rd STR Panthers, and the Post Detachment Tigers. The fourth place clubs will have a chance to settle their superiority in he second half ace which is scheduled to get under way next Monday after a week lay-off.

Two new clubs are expected to enter the loop for the second-half, raising the Service League to a ten-club loop. The newcomers are the Medical Detachment and the Military Police Blue Sox.

LITTLE TROUBLE

The Red Sox, coached by Capt. Joe O'Connor, had little trouble in taking the first-half title, but they will meet stiff opposition in the second-half. Towards the end of the schedule, the Red Sox rivals began to show strength and one team, the Reception Center, actually licked the 1st STR nine in an outside exhibition.

The final two wins which put the clincher on the title honors for the Red Sox were achieved at the expense of the Post Detachment by a 14-4 score at Gowdy Field, and the Academic Pacesetters, who finished in the cellar slot without winning a game.

2ND WINS THREE

The Commandos of 2nd STR swept into second place by winning a trio of postponed games last week. They gained a 9-0 forfeiture over the Orphans, trimmed Post Detachment 4-1, and gained an 8-1 decision over their arch rivals from the 3rd STR Panthers. In other games played at the close of the schedule, Reception Cenetr took over the PTR Reds by a 10-6 tally, PTR Blues blanked Post Detachment in a 4-0 game, and the Panthers romped over the Reds, 13-7.

53rd Hospital Opens Circuit With 8-2 Win

Medics Down 24th Rivals In Post Loop Opener

The 53rd General Hospital nine opened its assault on the second-half title laurels in the Fort Benning League Sunday afternoon at Gowdy Field by banking out an 8-2 verdict over its arch rivals from the 24th General Hospital unit.

George Seward was on the mound for the winners and turned in one of his best performances of the season as he set the opposition down with three hits in an abbreviated seven-inning contest.

MEET 513TH

The Medicos will go after their second win of the infant campaign on Saturday night when they oppose the 513th Parachutes in a Gowdy Field encounter. Three other loop tests are carded for the next seven days.

Tonight four loop teams will be in action with the Parachute School meeting Lawson Field at Gowdy and the 225th Station Hospital, newest entry in the loop, entertaining the 24th at Medico Field. Next Tuesday, Lawson's Fliers and the 24th Medicos clash at Gowdy Field.

FANS EIGHT

Seward, the slim righthander, fanned eight of the 24th batters and was in complete control of the ball game all the way. His curve ball was breaking neatly and the rival medicos had trouble throughout the contest.

Behind Seward's effective mound work, the 53rd tossers banged out a 13-hit total off two 24th hurlers, Gillardi and Mitchell, to take the decision and step into temporary possession of first place in the post loop. They tallied three times in the second, and after resting in the third, came back with five runs in the fourth to sew up the verdict.

CIRIELLO STARS

Catcher Faust and Firstbaseman Blackburn each chipped in two hits for the winners, while Seward himself struck a two-bagger which accounted for a pair of runs. Johnny Ciriello, flashy shtropstop, was the star for the losers with his brilliant fielding. He also contributed one of the three hits garnered off the deliveries of Seward.

New Nine Composed Mostly of Former Brigade Players

The Sixth Training Regiment of the ASTP Basic Training Center at the Infantry School is being represented by a strong baseball team in the second half of the Infantry School league schedule. Col. Robert Sharp, the regimental commander, recently announced the entry of his team, and also the selection of the name "Eagles."

The team is made up chiefly of players who slugged the Student Training Brigade nine into second place in the first half schedule completed last week. That S.T.B. team wound up the session with a record of 10 wins and only four losses. Three of the four losses were dropped in the final inning and all four were lost by only one run. Two of the lost games were extra inning contests.

SIMMONS MANAGER

Managed by All-League Catcher George Simmons, the former Jersey City backstop, the club will feature the potent bats of "Red" McCluskey who hit over .490 in the first half; Fred Kemether, heavy-hitting flychaser; and Tom Gallivan, combination pitcher-outfielder and a long hitter. The Big Six will show the league fine pitching with Jim Prendergast, Cliff Carlson, Ed DeVolder and Gallivan slanting fast ones at opposition bats.

15-MAN SQUAD

Player-Manager Simmons has a 15 man squad from which to draw his lineups. Bill Arneth, 1b; Bryce Oswald, 2b; "Red" McCluskey, 3b; Charlie Bamberger, ss; Bill Shiver and Norm Guritsky make up the inner defenses. In the outfield Simmons has Fred Kemether, Tommy Ryan, Tom Tom Gallivan and Dennis Kirby. Bill Stevens will spell Manager Simmons behind the plate and a new acquisition in Jim Wright, first-sacker of the 2nd-3rd STR "Rifles."

The Eagles meet the 'Gators of the 124th at 7 p. m. Friday night at Gowdy Field, and play again on Sunday at Gowdy, meeting the 300th ball club at 1:30 p. m.

176th Leaders Hope To Guide Team To Title

Manager Tommy Thomas And Bob Ramazotti Are Scrappy Duo

A scrappy manager and an experienced field captain provide the 176th Infantry nine with a combination that Spirit fans hope will lead their team to the second-half title in the Infantry School League.

The pilot is Lieut. Joseph Thomas, better known to the team as "Tommy," who in pre-army days was athletic director and coach of all sports at North Catholic High in Pittsburgh. The captain of course is the peerless Spirit shortstop, Bob Ramazotti, who has been playing organized ball since 1937.

FIGHTING CLUB

Lieut. Thomas, formerly a Philadelphian, is a quiet, dependable manager who has succeeded in molding a well-knit, fighting ball club to represent the famed 176th on the diamond. The Spirits opened their title assault Sunday with a convincing 2-0 win over the 124th Gators.

"Tommy" is real proud of his Spirit nine and believes their nickname really suits them because "they are an aggressive crew." "We all made mistakes in that first-half, but the experience gained gives us a good chance to come out on top this time," stated the 176th pilot.

PLAYED AT DAYTON

Thomas went to college at the University of Dayton in Ohio where he played four years of football as a quarterback, two years of varsity basketball as a guard and one year of baseball as a pitcher. After college, he went to North Catholic in Pittsburgh and in just two years produced a court team that lost the state Catholic title by only one game.

Teaming up with Thomas in the guidance of the Spirits on the field is the dependable Ramazotti, rated by most critics as the fort's best shortstop. The Ram is another Pennsylvanian, hailing from Altoona. He broke into organized ball back in 1937 with the Blair County League, and then spent 1938 and 1939 in the Bi-State League which embraces Virginia and Maryland.

PIEDMONT LEAGUER

Bob continued his spectacular infield play during 1940 with Johnstown in the Penn State loop and then in 1941 broke into the fast Piedmont League with the Durham club. Uncle Sam grabbed the up-and-coming star early in 1942 and now he's a Spirit mainstay although still the baseball property of the Brooklyn Dodgers. They sure could use him now!

Ram's rather reticent about making predictions on the TIS race. He said, "I'd rather not make any predictions. Let's wait for the results, and if we happen to get more runs than the other team, we'll win. We'll let our bats do the talking." And Ram's bat will do some tall talking, too, as can be witnessed by the following averages of the Spirit nine where Bob sports a neat .377 figure and leads his nine in hits with 23 for the season thus far.

513th Tossers Lose To Foxes

Defeated 9-1 By Columbus Nine

Playing loose ball afield, the 513th Parachute nine dropped a 9-1 decision to the Columbus Foxes on Sunday in a tilt played at Golden Park in the city. Joe Giglio, star right-hander for the Foxes, set the chutists down with two meager hits as he chalked up his fifth win over a Benning nine this season.

Stem pitched the full nine innings for the visitors, being nicked for eleven hits as well as being the victim of numerous costly errors by his mates.

SCORE EARLY

Columbus started scoring early, getting two runs in the last half of the first inning. Bridges walked, stole second and advanced to third on an infield out. He then trotted home on Bowden's single and Bowden counted on Wright's triple.

The Parachute nine tallied their lone run of the game in the second frame. Hendrickson singled and went to third as an attempted pickoff of Hendrickson got away from first baseman John Wright. He scored and Monk was safe when Kent fielded an infield roller and threw low to first.

SQUEEZE BUNT

Columbus scored again in the second as Garrett reached third on a thrown away ball at first and scored on Giglio's squeeze bunt, which was well placed.

The Foxes counted twice more in each of the fifth, sixth and seventh innings for their total of nine runs. The locals made two errors.

The only safe blow off Giglio's delivery besides Hendrickson's second inning single was a one-base knock by pitcher Stem in the eighth. The Columbus hurler was complete master at all other times.

Profs to Have Tough Sledding in 2nd Half Race of TIS Circuit

Spirits And Eagles Are Impressive In Opening Victories

By SGT. MILTON LUBAN

With three games played as this piece takes its rightful place among the literary classics, it has already become apparent that the Academic Regiment Profs will have their troubles in the second half of the Infantry School league race.

From what is shown so far, the 176th Spirits and the 6th Training Regiment Eagles stand out as the toughest threats to the Profs, with the 124th Gators right up there with them.

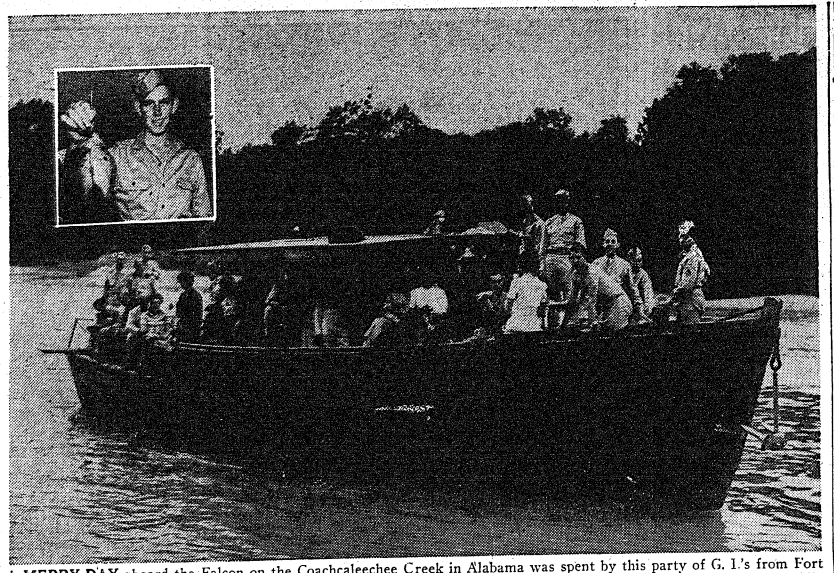
The 300th Infantry, which has just about clinched the post title in its own sports pages, should finish in the fourth or fifth spot. Before the Triplets start looking for a Section Eight form, it should be explained that the estimation is based on the stubborn conviction that games still have to be won on the field, not in the sports column.

Of course, the 764th Tanks, which beat the 300th in the second-half opener, may be a lot stronger than suspected and the Triplets may yet cause these words to be eaten. However, with ketchup they aren't a bad diet.



SPIRITS WIN

One of the best games of the season was the 2 to 0 triumph the Spirits achieved over the Gators. Paced by the crafty Lefty Missman, the Spirits played like champions; they had to in order to beat the scrappy Gator nine. Lew Christie pitched good ball for the 124th, but it was his tough luck to be up against a two-hit performance by a really hot Wissman.

Highlight of the game, and possibly of the season, was the unbelievable catch made by Vernon Smith, Gator center-fielder. Poland had wallopped a scorching line drive that had three-base hit written all over it. Then out of nowhere came Smith to hurl himself through the air, turn a complete summersault as he hit the ground, and come up with the ball in his glove. The sensational catch drew a roar of applause from everyone but Poland. The roar that came from him was definitely not one of applause.

EAGLES IMPRESS

On Monday night the 6th Training Regiment, looking suspiciously like the former Student Training Brigade team, tore into the 246th Field Artillery, knocking the helpless Gunners for an 18-2 count.

A MERRY DAY aboard the Falcon on the Coachcaleechee Creek in Alabama was spent by this party of G. I.'s from Fort Benning and their ladies last Sunday. A view of the Falcon is shown just before it tied up at the end of the trip, while in the inset is shown Pfc. Robert Creighton, 54th Base Headquarters and Air Base Squadron, Lawson Field, who caught the only fish of the day. (U. S. Signal Corps photo.)

Parachute School Divides Pair Wih Camp Stewart

Bardin Hurls TPS To 10-2 Victory After 10-8 Loss

Pete Bardin hurled the Parachute School nine to an impressive 10-2 triumph over Camp Stewart on Sunday afternoon at Gowdy Field to give the chutists an even break in their week-end series with the visitors from Georgia's huge antiaircraft camp over near Hinesville.

Bardin turned in one of his best performances of the year for the paratroopers, going the route and striking out nine Stewart batsmen. The sturdy righthander was never in serious trouble, although he gave up five walks and hit one batter. Pop Prather, Stewart second baseman, accounted for two of the three safeties off Bardin's slants.

8-RUN RALLY

TPS won the ball game in the second inning with another one of their famous scoring splurges. The Chutists sent eight runners scampering across the plate in that frame to break up the ball game early. They slapped out six hits and used two walks and a pair of Stewart errors as the ingredients for their big rally.

WIN IN NINTH

Two runs in the ninth inning of Saturday night's encounter broke an 8-all tie to give the Stewartmen the verdict in the first game of the series. Walck drew a walk, was sacrificed to second by Brim and scored on Derrico's two-bagger. The latter then came across on a single by Arch Archebald, antiaircraft catcher. TPS was helpless in its half and went down, 10-8.

The paratroopers spotted Stewart a six-run advantage at the start of the ball game, then staged a third-inning outburst that knotted the count as six runs crossed the plate. TPS went ahead in the fourth, but the lead was short-lived because the visitors retaliated in the fifth and led until the eighth when the home team tied it up again only to lose in the ninth.

SWARTHOUT BOWS

Lefty Swarthout made his début on the mound for TPS and pitched well although touched for ten hits. He was formerly a hurler for the Camp Shelby team and is also a power hitter, as evidenced by his 365-foot homer over the right field wall that put TPS out in front temporarily in the fourth inning.

Wissman Stars As Spirit Nine Topples Gators

In a beautifully pitched ball game, the 176th Spirits on Sunday night defeated the 124th Gators, 2-0. Lefty Wissman was the starting and winning pitcher for the Spirits, going all the way.

Wissman was "hot" that night, giving only two hits, a double in the third, and an infield single in the seventh while striking out nine. The one man he walked in the fourth, was picked off first in a neatly executed play, Wissman to Harlow.

GREAT CATCH

One of the highlights of the game was a running, diving catch by Vern Smith, of the Gator center fielder, of Harlow's hard hit ball. Reed, the new Spirit second-sacker has improved the efficiency of the infield, with his fielding and double-play ability. His pepper, and chatter livened up the Spirit infield.

The first Spirit run was scored in the last half of the fifth inning. Harlow got on base on an error. Reed then flied out. Sahara was safe at first on a fielder's choice which wiped out Harlow at second. On an attempt to get Sahara at first to complete a double play, the ball was thrown wildly and Sahara made second. Wissmann then beat out an infield hit moving him to third. Lohr was the next batter. The Spirit bleachers begged for a hit. "Come on you Shuffler!" they yelled. And Lohr, the "money" player came through with a single sending Sahara across with the first run, which could have been the winning run since Wissmann blanked the Gators.

RAM SCORES

The second Spirit run was scored in the last half of the eighth. Sadowsky singled. Ramazzoti was safe at first on a fielder's choice, Sadowsky being thrown out at second. With Poland, the next batter, waiting for the first pitch, Ram stole second. Poland hit the first ball to the second baseman who threw wildly to first base, Ram racing home on a daring run from second.

G. I. Catches Five Fish Spite Being Off Schedule

Having no less an authority than Frederick Kane's Fishing Calender in the Columbus Ledger and Enquirer to guide them for hauling in the choicest swimming specimens in the Chattahoochee River and its tributary creeks, a party of Fort Benning soldiery set out Sunday to prove that they needed no more than a bamboo pole, a length of line, fishing hooks and worms for bait to win for themselves a place beside Isaac Walton.

Now Mr. Kane's calendar warned that Sunday's fishing should be done between the following times: 12:25 to 1:25 a. m.; 6:50 to 7:50 a. m.; 1:15 to 2:15 p. m.; 7:10 to 8:10 p. m. It added that "times in black type are very best times."

Notwithstanding all this intelligence garnered for them, the groud did most of its casting and waiting and casting and waiting between the times of 1:15 to 2:15 p. m.—and even for awhile after 2:15 p. m.!

One man alone proved himself equal to the occasion. He, Private First Class Robert Ceighton of the 54th Base Headquarters and Air Base Squadron stationed at Lawson Field, pulled five handsome bluegill from Coachcaleeche Creek in Alabama for his pains. (Evidently a man of some accomplishment with rod and reel, Pfc. Creighton referred to his haul as "bream."

USO SPONSORED

Excuse for this piscatorial pastime was a boatride aboard the Falcon sponsored by the Ninth Street USO. It was the maiden Sunday voyage under USO colors. The plan was conceived two weeks ago, but river conditions had once postponed the trip.

Decidedly irked by the postponement one week before, the party assembled shortly after 11 a. m. in the office of Edward Korn at the Ninth Street USO. Determined to let the fish know by the end of the day that they could be hauled ashore, a few of the GI's displayed foresight enough to bring along wives and girl friends to let them look in on a fishing party—and see for themselves that in even the best regulated the fish oft' prove elusive.

Capt. Carl A. Pearson, master of the Falcon, escorted hardier members of the group afoot to the Columbus landing. The ladies and two cripples were driven to the scene.

Food and drink brought aboard and all passengers accounted for, the trim little craft pulled away from its moorings below the stern-wheeled riverboat, Henry W. Miller. Capt. Pierson was assisted in manning the Falcon by Yeoman First Class Thomas A. Callahan of the Coast Guard, who is stationed in Columbus.

The skipper is a man who knows Chattahoochee River lore. As the party passed the Columbus Iron Works, he explained that in that very establishment great numbers of Confederate ironclads went down the ways during the War Between the States. Many of the same boats now lie on the same river bottom, he added. He pointed to the spot where three packet boats which operated on the Chattahoochee burned and sunk.

Capt. Pierson has navigated the Mississippi River, all of its tributary rivers and the Red River of the North. In addition he has sailed the Gulf of Mexico many times and shipped out of Gulf ports to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Buenos Aires, Argentina, and ports in South Africa.

Navigaitng the Falcon on Sunday's excursion between jetties extending into the Chattahoochee's treacherous channel, the skipper hove to in sight of the Fort Benning water tower located near the railroad roundhouse on the post. He maneuvered to shore and tied up below Coachcaleechee Creek.

NOT BEST TIME

Taking but little time out to devour food and drink, the party began its fishing. Some went ashore, others tossed baited lines from astern. All of this during that portion of eternity not alloted for "very best" angling.

On the return trip, Pfc. Creighton's catch well-iced and safely stowed on the quarter-deck, the Falcon dropped anchor opposite Thomas' Bluff. There the party frolicked in the water and dove from the top of the cabin into its deeper portions. When the mermen and mermaids were thoroughly exhausted and soaked, they clambered aboard, and the Falcon resumed its homeward voyage.

One discordant note was sounded. A disgruntled soldier spat, "The trouble with these parties is that someone always wants to fish."

If you find a wire or cord stretched tight, do not cut it as that will detonate the mine.

McNair Lauds TIS Instruction

In Memorandum To Gen. Hazlett

In summarizing his recent visit to The Infantry School, Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commanding general of the U. S. Army Ground Forces, reiterated the excellent impression with which his visit to the chool left him. This summary was in the form of a memorandum to Maj. Gen. H. F. Hazlett, commanding general of the Replacement and School Command in Birmingham.

Portions of the summary include, "The classes, demonstration, and exercises observed were conducted in a superior manner. Instruction was uniformly of a high order. . . The progress made in providing battle realism has been great. The exercises involving live ammunition were excellent in that they generally combined co-ordination of all arms employed overhead fire, and included maneuver. The street fighting, close combat, and transition firing courses were superior. . . Since last observed, the School has made great progress in getting students themselves into action. The active participation of students in exercises is more desirable and should be to the maximum extent practicable. . . The energy and spirit of participating personnel, instructors, students and school troops, were of high order."

CAPTAIN RODEN

First Lieutenant Norman Roden has been promoted to the rank of captain. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in R. O. T. C. in 1940, and was called to active duty April 24, 1942 at Camp Wheeler, Ga. One month later he was assigned to The Infantry School. On October 31, 1942, he was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. His present duty is instructor, Automotive Section.

Army Intelligence Tests Stump 'Boston Tommy'

By PVT. THOMAS DEVINE

I got quite a high mark in intelligence when I entered the army. I don't quite recall what it really was, but I'm almost certain it was over 110. There were an awful lot of the questions I didn't answer, such as: "If two trains leave a given point, one going sixty fathoms a half hour and the caboose of the other weighing something over 10 tons, how much steam would a canvas back terrapin (a la Maryland) generate when cooked to palatability? Note: Mark square signifying yes or no."

Now the very fact that I skipped over such things indicates a certain intelligence because it demonstrates a knowledge of my limitations. I never could do long division for example. Recognizing my own shortcomings at an early age I very sensibly ignored the teacher who was tormenting my priggish colleagues with these vexatious matters and much more profitably entertained myself by drawing pictures of the sinking of the "Titanic" on the reverse of my arithmetic papear.

As for those block arrangements in the I. Q. tests: They'd drive a saint to drink. It's true I learned all that stuff in kindergarten but having so little use for it since I've become rusty.

RHETORIC TOSSING

On the other hand I've always been pretty good at tossing rhetoric about and with a feeling for words you encounter such a question as: "When a rebuke is caustic it is (a) peevish (b) effective (c) expensive (d) sharp" you know that they want you to answer that caustic means "sharp."

Now any one given to quibbling (irritating habit) might very well be justified in saying that a "rebuke" which, after all is just fancy talk for a wisecrack, could and, indeed, usually is, all four of these things but that's not the idea.

Just by the way, and without a shadow of offense, meant to the War Department I venture to point out that some of the questions in the classification tests are triumphs of ambiguity. Take 119 for example of test 1b Preliminary Form: "Pay ACCRUING to a soldier means pay which (a) accumulates (b) belongs (c) decreases (d) disappears.

Now of course what they want you to say is that it means "belongs" but this thesis is wide open to dispute. As for the other possibilities we may exclude "accumulates" insolfar as the individual G. I. is concerned because that is contrary to all nature. Also it seldom if ever "belongs, "belongs", morally speaking because if I know anything about the military proletariat (and I know plenty) it always "belongs" to any other lad who has been caught off guard and touched for as many kopecks as the traffic will bear. Beyond all argument it goes so fast that it would be difficult to draw the line at the exact point between which it "decreases" and "disappears."

GENERAL'S VERACITY

Opening classification test 1d our eye lights upon No. 126 Sic: "No one questions the general's VERACITY." Well — what's the idea? Is this an intelligence test or an insult to the selectee's intelligence. Insult forsooth—why it's a program. Why if I caught a general cutting down my favorite cherry tree, were to ask him if he were a vetting down the cherry tree and he said "No," I'd say "Very good, sir" click my heels smartly, do a right about face and leave the scene of action. I should stick my neck out between a general and a good for nothing old cherry tree? Don't you be silly. I don't like cherry very much anyhow.

Our attention is then caught by No. 134: "The base of a circular cannon platform has a radius of 35 feet." Now let us stop right here. Say—who do you suppose wrote this darn intelligence test anyhow? Bet some dumb civilian had a hand in it. If the guy was strictly G. I. and on his toes he'd known that it is pas du tout comme ill faut to allude to any piece of ordnance as "a cannon." That is distinctly horse and carriage and definitely has a flavor of the Emperor Pedro of Brazil being given a 21 gun salute at the Chicago World Fair in 1893. Surely it would be kinder not to start the poor recruit off on the wrong foot by leading him astray first thing off the bat on the highly important subject of nomenclature.

I'M FASTIDIOUS

No. 128 in the same document informs us that "He was not so FASTIDIOUS after he had been in the Army two months. Now to me that is definitely sinister and ominous. Imagine a poor sensitive lad being faced with this statement, pregnant with implication, on the very threshold of what he had been led to suppose was a promising career. Why anyone would start hurting from the start with FASTIDIOUS written in black cynical upper case like that. Cruel, I call it. Furthermore it isn't true. Take me for example: I've always been notorious for my fastidiousness, was known in fact as that poor fastidious Devine fellow and used to have to go to Emily Post every quarter to have the fastidiousness scraped off of me. Yet here I've been in the Army not two, mind you, but going on eight months and I'm just as fastidious as I ever was. True it's dormant but none the less efficacious.

Well—this has gone on long enough. You're taking up much more of my time than is warranted. The last thing the Major said before he went out to lunch was "Devine, you'd better get busy and split some of those infinitives that are cluttering up the office. They'll come in handy against a probable fuel shortage next winter. And for Heaven's sake tie up those dangling participals. I bump my head against one of them every time I move." Hence I'd better get busy before I start hurting.

QM Saves Metal With Substitute Protective Packing

Development by the quartermaster corps of protective packings as a substitute for tin cans or other packaging scheduled for overseas shipment eliminates approximately 75 per cent of the critical metal formerly used, Colonel Stephen B. Massey, director of supply at Fort Benning, reveals.

Working in conjunction with engineers of a leading metal processing company, officers of the quartermaster corps have perfected cans and bags composed of kraft paper and asphalt laminated to lead with bond paper and heat-sealing lacquer, the director of supply stated. Black plate tops and bottoms are used on the cans.

Colonel Massey disclosed that the new material is so constructed as to be readily sealed and provides a 100 per cent barrier against vapor, moisture, light, insects, and foreign odors, at a cost lower than that of tin cans. When formed into bags, the sturdy material creates, in reality, a large flexible tin can, according to the colonel.

Councilmen Named For Benning Park And Baker Village

Sgt. Percy I. Hopkins, Jr., unofficial mayor of Baker Village and Benning Park, announces the names of councilmen elected also to serve unofficially under the Housing Authority.

They are as follows, according to each of the 15 districts:

District one, Master Sgt. Robert Waller; two, First Sgt. S. A. Taylor; three, Tech. Sgt. J. H. Bishop; four, First Sgt. B. Lebovitz; five, Staff Sgt. Thomas Harvey; six, Master Sgt. Stringham; seven, tie between Staff Sgt. Albert Waldron and Staff Sgt. M. E. Johnson; eight, Staff Sgt. N. W. Frankfort; nine, J. E. Ansley; ten, Lt. Everette A. Stoutner; eleven, Maj. McNeal; twelve, tie between five men, Capt. Giles H. Kidd, Capt. R. A. Perkins, Lt. Roy Menashel, Lt. Robert C. Weiland, and Capt. George F. Arnold; thirteen, Lt. Ross Crosley; fourteen. Capt. T. A. Daniel; fifteen, Capt. Reid.

Lieut. Henthorne Made Captain

The promotion of William W. Henthorne, instructor in map reading in The Infantry School, from first lieutenant to captain, has been announced at the headquarters of the School here.

Capt. Henthorne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Henthorne, Marquette, Iowa, was commissioned in the reserve at the University of Iowa in 1942 and ordered to duty in May of that year. He was first stationed at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, and then came to Fort Benning to attend basic classes. He was assigned to the Map Reading Committee of The Infantry School where he served until June of this year. In October, 1942, he was promoted to first lieutenant.

Capt. Henthorne was assigned to Camp Ritchie, Md., last May to attend the Photo Interpreter's Course from which he was graduated. He was then returned to his station at this post.

Patricia O'Hara, formerly of Seattle, Wash., and West Coast and Canadian National free tsyle swimming champion, and Ella Mae Quillen, a breast-stroke star of the Multnomah Club team of Portland, Ore., are WAACs at Fort Des Moines, Ia.

Colored ASTP Unit Activated

1,500 Men Are Already In Training

Activation of the Second Battalion of the Special Training Regiment at the Colored Reception Center is announced by Lt. Col. Uurie N. James, commanding officer of the Center.

With 1,500 men already being trained in the First Battalion, this is the second step in establishment of the basic training center to handle colored troops coming from reception centers from all over the South. Eventually four battalions of 24 companies will be set up.

The center is being established to include an educational program to bring soldiers up to educational standards set by the Army. Men are given class work in the fundamental "three R's" during the mornings and basic military training in the afternoons. The basic program will extend over a period of between six and 13 weeks, depending upon progress made by the individual soldiers.

MAJOR HEARD, CO

Major Charles E. Heard, has been named commanding officer of the newly activated battalion, with Capt. Julius C. Newton as executive officer. Col. James also announced that Lt. Col. Frederick H. Tilchener has been named operations and training officer for the entire Regiment. The Second Battalion has been set up in the old Reception Center Area.

Commanding officer of the 9th company of the Battalion is Second Lieut. Clifford A. Brown, with Second Lieutenant Delvin A. Mills as a company officer. Serving as commanding officer of the 10th Company is Capt. Craig S. Mattice, with Second Lieut. Robert M. Lyman as a company officer.

In the First Battalion, already established, Major Alvin B. Cottrell is commanding officer, with Capt. Herman L. Luly as executive officer and Second Lieutenant Gordon Crawford as academic instruction officer.

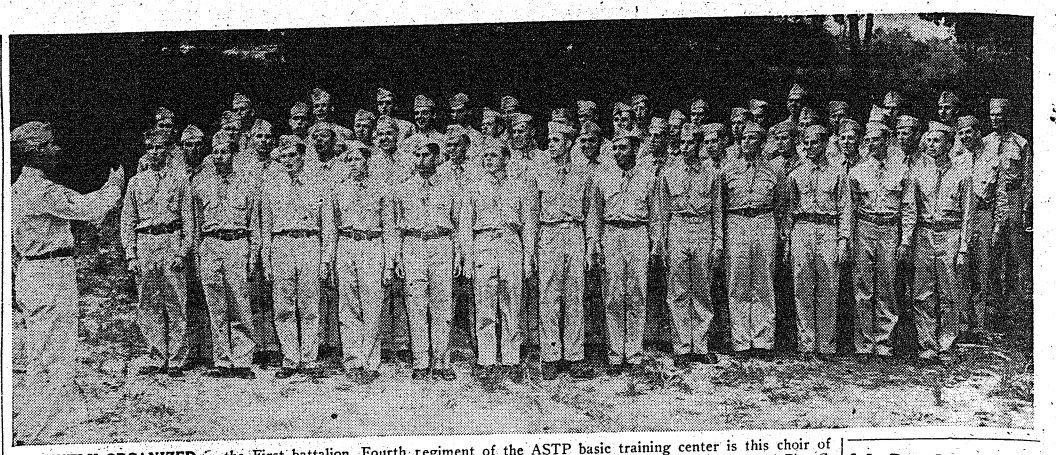
Capt. Ernest V. Hendrix is commanding officer of the First Company of the First Battalion. Other officers are Second Lieut. Robert M. Lyman and Second Lieut. Louis Hofeld.

Commanding officer of the Second Company is Capt. Newell C. Griffin and other officers are Second Lieuts. George W. Hoffman, Herbert P. Gruber, Norbert P. Bach and Wallace D. Redmon.

In the Third Company, Second Lieut. Gideon O. Biykin is commanding officer and acting battalion adjutant. Other officers are Second Lieuts. Claud Beeman, Jr., Joseph M. Haley, Harold Samuels and David Sklar.

Second Lieut. Willard L. Hodges is commanding officer of the Fourth Company. Other officers are Second Lieuts. David S. Abrams, Harry I. Schmidt and Stanley Spitzer.

In the Fifth Company, Second Lieut. F. T. Morgan is commanding officer and platoon leaders are Second Lieuts. Walter J. O'Connell and Henry J. Quell.



Second Lieut. Robert H. Eaton is commanding officer of the Sixth Company, with Second Lieut. John H. Korenkamp as training officer.

New QM Contract Office Set Up

Contract matters between mills in the Columbus area and the Army's Quartermaster Corps will soon be handled by a new branch contract negotiations office which will be established in Greenville, S. C.

When the Greenville branch begins functioning it will bring to five the number of such offices now operating. The others are located in New York, Boston, Chicago and San Francisco.

The new unit will be staffed by Quartermaster Corps officers to handle contract negotiations as required by existing law and will have price adjustment and cost analysis branches similar to those maintained in the Office of the Quartermaster General in Washington.

RECENTLY ORGANIZED in the First battalion, Fourth regiment of the ASTP basic training center is this choir of selectees representing numerous high school and college choral societies. The idea was originated by Corporal Ray C. Dodridge and carried on by officers of the regiment. Some of its rehearsals are held in a dell in that battalion area. G. I. To Use 8.3 Per Cent Of 1943 Sugar

High Energy Value Needed In Fighting Man's Daily Diet

Recently completed estimates of the sugar requirements in the entire army show that American fighting men will use approximately 8.3 per cent of the total available during 1943 according to a statement made yesterday by Col. Stephen B. Massey, Fort Benning's director of supply.

In addition to the sugar used by the army in its original form, a large amount of sugar is used indirectly in such items as jam, marmalade, candy and soft drinks consumed by the soldiers. Figures for 1942 reveal that purchases at the Jersey City Q. M. Depot, where the army's entire sugar needs are purchased, amounted to 7,000,000 pounds or $400,000 per week.

Manufacturers receive replacements on all sugar used in producing foods sold to the army according to the Benning official. This includes baking concerns, confectioners, beverage makers, producers of extracts and syrups, fruit and vegetable canners, manufacturers of dairy products, and ice cream, packers of pickled fruits and vegetables, salad dressing manufacturers and meat packers. When it is considered how often these items are included on soldier diets, it is possible to estimate the volume of sugar used in the army.

Colonel Massey also pointed out that army dieticians recommend menus which include foods containing sugar because of the high energy-producing value of the foodstuff which is so necessary in a fighting man's diet. The sugar purchases are placed with cane refiners located on the Atlantic seaboard, the gulf and west cosat as well as the Rocky Mountain states, so as to minimize the strain on any one producer and to avoid conflict with civilian needs.

QM Develops Waterproof Match, Special Shoelace

The latest items developed by the Army's Quartermaster Corps and being distributed overseas to American soldiers are waterproof matches and a special shoelace for use in the tropics, according to Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply at Benning.

For several months, the Benning official revealed, the Quartermaster Corps has worked with leading match manufacturers in an effort to produce a successful waterproof match. Beeswax was tried but proved unsuccessful since its melting point is 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

Results of extensive study have now brought about a protective coating of wax with a 'melting point of approximately 160 degrees. Ordinary household matches are coated with this wax and lab tests revealed that submersion in water for six or seven days does not prove harmful. Purchased primarily for jungle and mountain troops, the match is now being called the "jungle" match.

Men in tropical climates have discovered that overnight their shoe laces become covered with mildew and research proved that the starch content in the laces was causing this condition. According to Colonel Massey, a chemical content has now been added to the shoe laces now being purchased for overseas resale, and laboratory tests prove that the new laces will resist fungus growth.

4th Regiment ASTP Staff Officers Named

Colonel Edward B. Jackson, commanding officer of the Fourth Training Regiment, ASTP Basis Training Center, has announced the appointment of his staff officers.

Lieutenant Colonel John G. Folkes, formerly of the 176th Infantry, has been designated as the executive officer of the newly activated unit.

Major Gerald P. Shine has been designated as adjutant, Major R. Reed is plans and training officer, Major Paul L. Phelan is supply officer, Second Lieutenant Robert G. Holbrook is intelligence officer, Captain Robert C. Chinn is assistant plans and training officer and First Lieutenant Charles D. Alexander is assistant supply officer, Captain John S. Thomas has been appointed special service officer.

The majority of the staff officers come directly from assignments with The Infantry School, Colonel Jackson, Major Shine, Major Phelan Captain Thomas having previously served with the Second Student Training Regiment. Lieutenant Holbrook is also from Fort Benning.

Major Reed and Captain Chinn were assigned from Camp Wheeler, Ga.

(GREETINGS, FRIEND)

... or how to get acquainted in Mexico

Americans soon feel at home in Mexico. Down there you'll hear a new kind of saludo as homey as Main Street. It's Have a "Coke". It means "Howdy, neighbor" from Terre Haute to Tampico. All over the globe Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes — has become the symbol of welcome between friendly-minded folks.

QM Market Center Serves Three States

STAFF OF 40

The staff of 40 workers at the Q. M. unit is composed of six officers, 18 girl office workers, 12 warehousemen, two civilian marketing specialists, and two civilian food inspectors.

In addition to Capt. Hampton, the officers are Lt. John W. Loughlin, warehouse and transportation officer; Lt. Joe A. Boe, fruit and vegetable buyer; Capt. W. A. Anderson and Lt. Glen W. Freemyer, who purchase fluid milk and ice cream requirements; and Lt. Richard Curry, butter egg, cheese and poultry buyer. Two civilians, John R. Jarvis and L. C. Netherton also are buyers with Jarvis aiding in the purchasing of fruits and vegetables, while Netherton buys all meats.

The civilian field inspectors, H. C. Curran and J. W. Moore, travel almost continually throughout the area served by the Columbus market center. They go periodically to each camp receiving foodstuffs from Columbus and check the condition of the perishables upon arrival in the camps. Also, from time to time, they go into the growing areas and inspect government orders before they are shipped.

Constant checking on the quality of the perishable subsistence furnished Uncle Sam's fighting men is of primary importance according to Captain Hampton. Cheese, for instance, is always sampled upon arrival in Columbus and then held in a cold storage room until it has definitely ripened sufficiently to be shipped to the mess hall tables, which sometime is 90 days.

The market center is one link in the far flung chain of Army food procurement agencies spread all over the nation. In all, there are 35 market centers located at strategic points. All are linked by teletype with field headquarters in Chicago, where these market centers continually report the best food buys, the conditions of scarcity, and up-to-the-minute market quotations on perishables.

SYSTEM FLEXIBLE

This central buying system, operating through the market centers in the field, provides a flexibility that enables the Quartermaster Corps to purchase perishable food at the best possible prices, and of the highest quality with a minimum impact on the civilian economy. Instructions of the Quartermaster General to avoid any buying operations that would demoralize markets or tend to increase prices unduly for civilians are rigidly adhered to at all times.

Bearing out this fact, Captain Hampton revealed that in the Columbus area, the Q. M. buyers purchase only up to 40 per cent of the local production of any one commodity. That figure applies to fruits, vegetables and dairy products, and the meat figure is comparable. The officer in charge of the Columbus market center pointed out that the Quartermaster Corps buys only up to 45 per cent of the meat killed in government-inspected plants, and lend-lease requirements as well as those of the armed forces must be obtained from that quantity. In this manner, civilian supplies are safeguarded.

So fast-moving and efficient is the market center system of food procurement that a camp's requirements must be turned into Columbus headquarters only 20 days before the date of the first delivery. Approximately a week is spent in scouring the available market, and the bids are usually closed about 10 to 12 days before the actual delivery date. That allows sufficient time for perishables to be shipped in from almost any part of the nation.

BUY LOCALLY

If all or part of the requirements can be purchased locally, the Columbus officers buy right here in the locality. Whenever possible, they buy from a farmer who can supply all the needs of a particular commodity for any one camp. Then the foodstuffs can be purchased F. O. B., the camp, and arrangements made for delivery direct from the farm to the camp. The shipment is, of course, inspected by an agent from the Columbus market center before it leaves the farm and again by an army man when it reaches the camp warehouses.

If the demand cannot be entirely supplied with local produce without draining the civilian market here, then the needs are teletyped to field headquarters in Chicago. From that point the orders are placed with large producers the country over. Then the produce is shipped with an attempt made to ship as many car lots as possible direct to the camp.

Since Benning is the largest post serviced from Columbus, practically all perishables are shipped directly to the Quartermaster warehouses on the posti n car lot shipments. For the smaller posts and air stations however which cannot absorb a car lot of any one product, LCL less than carload shipments are effected to the Columbus market center. There the loads are broken down, stored overnight, and shipped out the next day by refrigerator truck to the camps.

Functioning as an assembly and distribution point on such shipments of perishable subsistence is one of the big jobs performed in Columbus. Conversely bids submitted by local vendors are relayed to field headquarters and if a large purchase is made in this area, the market center in Columbus works in the same fashion by merely reversing the procedure. Either car lots are shipped direct to camps, or LCL shipments are made up here and routed to other marketing centers throughout the country.

SWEET TATERS

The biggest volume crop purchased in this area is in sweet potatoes, although truckload after truckload of Georgia peaches from the orchards between here and Macon were sent all over the nation last year from the Columbus market center. Greens of different kinds provide the other big item purchased here for national distribution. Otherwise most of the local produce is consumed right in this area, such as dairy products and poultry.

The scientific buying of perishable subsistence practiced by the Quartermaster Corps is helping in many ways to diversify crops here in Dixie where fertile farmlands had been made cotton-poor over the years. The field men from the Columbus market center now contact the growing areas, not only to learn of crops which have already been planted, but also to advise on future needs of the Army. They even meet with various county agents and try to encourage farmers to raise needed crops such as sweet potatoes. Also the QM men encourage farmers to replace luxury crops like melons with more foodstuffs like peas.

Asked whether the available supply of perishables at the present was sufficient, Captain Hampton replied, "We frequently heve to substitute one food for another, but we can always supply fresh perishables." He pointed out that sometimes turnip greens are substituted for spinach or turnips for potatoes, but that on the whole, the soldiers "haven't suffered."

In commenting on the efficiency of the operation of the Columbus market center, Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply at Fort Benning who is charged with the duty of feeding the fort's thousands daily, stated: "I have nothing but words of praise for the work of Captain Hampton and his staff at the Quartermaster market center in Columbus. They are doing a splendid job, procuring for us perishable foods from all over the country. If every other camp in this area is as well serviced as we are, then the job of feeding their men is made immeasurably easier."

A Bookmobile, in the form of a station wagon equipped with several hundred books, begins operating among colored units in the Harmony Church area at Fort Benning Thursday, under a plan inaugurated by Mrs. Hazel Reed, librarian at Service Club. No. 5.

The Bookmobile will make the rounds each week of special units in the Second and Third Student Training Regiments and the Provisional Truck Regiment in a door-to-door library service, with Mrs. Reed in charge.

Purpose of the mobile library is to provide soldiers more easily with technical material for Infantry training, various books on the Army Institute courses, as well as fiction and non-fiction. Due to the fact that soldiers in this area are widely scattered and considerable distance from the library, the plan was adopted in order to supply books to soldiers with the least possible inconvenience to them. It was stressed, however, that the soldier borrowing books has the same responsibility for their return as if he had gotten it from the library instead of the Bookmoile.

AST Organizes New Orchestra

Pvt. Austrian Is Director of Musicians

In addition to the ASTP Male Chorus an orchestra of 18 pieces has been organized by Pvt. Murray Austrian of the Special Service Office of the Basic Training Center and it is expected with the many fine musicians now in training here to have one of the finest musical organizations on the Post.

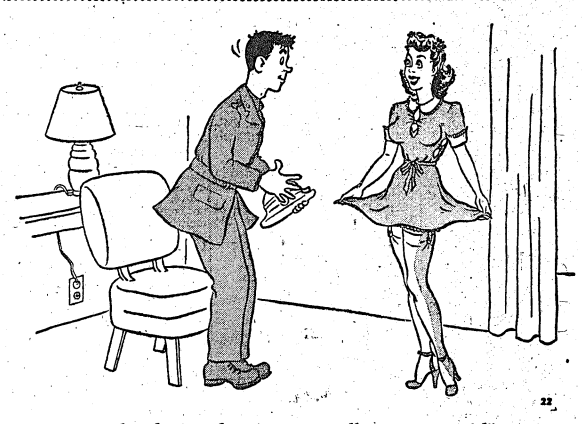
The Chorus, composed of 55 voices has been kept busy. They appeared on the "Army Hour" radio broadcast at the Army & Navy USO and then gave a concert of sacred music later in the evening at St. Luke's Methodist church.

The Chorus under the direction of Lt. Alfred W. Haight of the Second Student Training Regiment has received a number of invitations and will appear within the near future at many of the local churches as well as churches in surrounding communities.

CAPTAIN KENNEDY

Announcement has been made here of the promotion of First Lieutenant Mathias W. Kennedy to the rank of captain.



Captain Kennedy was called on active duty May 23, 1942 and assigned to Company A, 90th Infantry Training Battalion at Camp Roberts, California. On June 26, 1942 he was sent to Fort Benning as a student in the Officers' Motor Maintenance Course. Upon graduation, he was assigned as instructor to the Automotive Section, The Infantry School.

1305 Spiriters Are Recipients of Conduct Medals

A total of 1305 enlisted men of the 176th Infantry Spirits have received Good Conduct Bars for demonstrated fidelity, through faithful and exact performance of duty; efficiency through capacity to produce results and whose behavior was such as to deserve recognition.

The medals were presented by individual organization commanders, with Company G having the greatest number of men, 98, receiving the Ribbon Bars. The awards will be made monthly with the approval of the Commanding Officer, Colonel Edwin Cox, and at the recommendattion of the Company Commanders.

Derrick Guest Conductor Of Own Jubilee Singers

Corporal Cleavant Derrick of the Reception Center was right at home Sunday when he acted as guest conductor of the Derrick Jubilee Singers of Chattanooga, Tenn., for their appearance in Columbus for three concerts Sunday, July 11, as he is the original organizer of this singing group.

A graduate of the Cadek Conservatory of Music, Chattanooga, Tenn., Corporal Derrick studied at the A & I college at Nashville and under private teachers in Chicago, Ill., and organized this Jubilee chorus in Chattanooga in 1939.

The first public appearance of national interest of this group was in New York in 1940-41, and later they filled a successful engagement at the Cleveland Fair, Cleveland, Ohio in 1941.

As a morale builder in war times, the government sponsored a weekly broadcast of this chorus from Chattanooga, and they gave a weekly program for a private sponsor also.

An Army Wife Shops In Columbus

All of us can do more these active days if we walk in comfort . . . and know that our footwear looks just as handsome to others as it feels to us. Give yourself the pleasure of durable ease afoot . . . blended into voguish lines from fine leathers by expert craftsmanship. In action or repose wearing shoes from MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY will afford you greater comfort and sincere compliments . . . more than you've ever had before. Never before has such great emphasis been placed on good lines, correct fit and durability in footwear. Shoe rationing has made many realize shoe selections are not made by seeing what the favorite movie star of the moment wears on her 4 1-2 B's. I. Miller, Vitality, Mademoiselle and College Bred lines featured by Miller-Taylor's have all proved their worth and will do so for you whether you're buying black, white or brown shoes in either pump, oxford, sandal or tie styles.

Perfect for this summer of 1934—the dearly-beloved cotton frocks in jumper, pinafore, shirtwaist and dirndl styles. KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC., has many charming versions of these popular styles. Some in bright, cheerful colors, some in soft beige or white, all with nicely fitted shoulders, long enough waistlines and deep hems. As with every model in this exclusive shop you'll not see your own dress six times over on the streets of Columbus or out on the Main Post. Seersucker, broadcloth, chambray and sharkskin are a few of the appropriate summer materials used to fashion many of these warm weather standbys. The dresses for the most part feature rather simple lines without undue emphasis on "gingerbread" or "spinach," as you will. Even though we've been having blistering weather for many weeks, there will still be many more weeks to endure, I know you'll feel several degrees cooler in an unusual and well fitted cotton frock from Kayser-Lilienthal's.

Shoe ration coupon No. 18 is just as highly prized by the WAACs and Nurses as it is by Columbus civilians. The shoe department of the J. A. KIRVEN COMPANY has an assortment of the official shoes especially for these women in uniform. Fashioned of fine calf leather in either army russet or turf tan shades these moderately priced shoes will mellow and glow with age and polishing. They're meant to serve as capably as do their owners. Especially suitable for dress wear are the oxfords with a built-up heel in either military strap or classic styles. Authorized for wear by Army nurses is a casual classic style in a flowing shade of black leather. Comfort, correct fit and full value are combined in each of these footwear selections. Any women in the various services would do well to notice the many outstanding points in all these officially approved shoes displayed on the second floor of Kirven's.

The person who designed and outfitted the unusual duffle bags in CHANCELLOR'S INC., surely must have had close associations with the Army. These nicely lined carry-alls of softest russet leather are completely equipped to cater to the military man's grooming needs. That old standby the "blitz" cloth for button polishing starts off the list of this most practical assortment. A toothbrush, toothpaste, razor blades and brushlesss shaving cream are compactly packaged in a case of tackle-twill material. Absorbine, Jr., Band Aids, and a styptic pencil are included to aid enlisted men and officers alike. Fitch's talcum powder, tar soap, shoe strings and a non breakable "trench" mirror help to keep the owner well groomed. A tiny, though complete, sewing kit contains scissors, threads, straight and safety pins. A shoe brush, polishing rag, shoe polish, nail file and comb are all packaged to fit into the duffle bag. All the above mentioned equipment is also available in a duffle bag of durable tackle-twill which is a bit less in price than the leather bag. Either of these duffle bags would please and keep any military man well-groomed for the duration.

Boys will be boys, and as in the past their favorite outdoor sport is trying to emulate the latest deeds of their heros of the baseball diamond. Boys from the ages of 6 to 16 like to get decked out in a baseball cap, catcher's mitt and try their best to whack out a few home runs with a professional bat and baseball. The sports section of MONTGOMERY WARD & CO. can indeed supply the demand for every piece of equipment necessary to have a real baseball game or just a bit of practicin' between two pals. The catcher's mitts, in a number of sizes, are sturdily made of either genuine cowhide or horsehide. The baseballs are well covered with horsehide which has been securely stitched. Many of the baseball bats are labeled "Professional" and have taping around the grip. The sports section section has also, for real baseball enthusiasts, bright colored blouses and caps available on order in a variety of shades and sizes.

American flags sewed on their sleeves gathered at the feet of their commander.

The colonel, tallest of them all and his face more liberally smudged with blackening until he was darkest of them all, spoke his final commands: stowing of equipment, no smoking while in flight, the appointed rendezvous, time of departure, timee f replacing "Mae West" life jackets with chute, time over dropping zone.

CALM, COOL

He outlined their procedure after hitting the ground. His words were calm, cool and direct. The time for pep talks had passed. The operations had started.

"You'd better do it in a hurry," the colonel added, "for there are going to be a lot of itchy trigger fingers."

The briefing ended, the men had a few minutes for a smoke, a drink of water and a little talk.

I asked some of the enlisted men going in the lead plane the same question, "How do you feel about it?"

This is how they answered:

Cpl. Nickolas Kastrantas of Pittsburgh, Pa., said, "I feel better than I have for a long time. You see this is taking me closer to home." He paused, then added, 'say, can you put my nickname, 'Baby,' in there? That's the first English word I learned."

Pvt. David McKeown of Philadelphia said, "I'm rarin' to go. I'm all on edge and my nickname if you want to use it is Dandy Dan."

Pvt. Robert C. Bue of Dayton, O., said, "I'm certainly glad to leave Africa.

Pvt. John Noncak of Fulton, N. Y., said, "I feel just like the rest of the boys."

Pvt. Louis Mendieta, who has no home town, said, "I can live anywhere in a free land. I might someday want to live in Sicily. So I figure we'd better get going."

Sgt. Jack Gavin of Lincoln, operations man of a combat team: "We are going in with the colonel so everything is going to be all right."

FEELS GOOD

Pvt. Francis Doggett of Dayton: "I feel pretty good right now."

Pvt. Nalty R. Keen of Brookhaven, Mass.: "I've been waiting 12 months for this. Say, will the folks back in the states read your story? If something does happen, I'd like them to know."

Cpl. Doug Gabriel of Richmond, Calif.: "I want to get it over with —the quicker the better."

Pvt. Willie Snowden of Miami, Ariz.: "I don't know how I feel, but I will jump."

Pvt. Robert N. Lowry of Indianapolis: "I feel damn good. Of course, I've felt better."

Sgt. Bob Gillette of Lewiston, Idaho, celebrated ihs 23rd birthday today. "We will give him Sicily for a birthday present," chuckled some of the others.

These were some of the enlisted men who would jump with the colonel. Othero fficers in the commander's plane, included Lt. Col. William T. Ryder, "father of American paratroopers," who was going along as an observer; Maj. Benjamin Vandevoort, combat executive officer, and Capt. A. W. Ireland, adjutant.

"O. K., load up," ordered the colonel.

Then men drew the last puff of smoke, tightening the chin straps on their helmets and climbed aboard. One by one they disappeared into the cabin. Their commander saluted an assembled group then, he too, climbed inside, taking the seat nearest the door since he would be the first to jump.

The plane was piloted by Col. Jerome C. McCauley of Denton, Tex. The co-pilot was Capt. Albert Fahy of Rome, Ga. Upon their skill depended the initial success of the mission.

The motors roared to life. All over the field motors of many transports filled with Yank paratroopers began roaring, and the roar resounded over many other fields in North Africa.

It was dusk, and the wind still blew. From darkening corners taxied the transports.

The colonel's plane rose gracefully like a bird, and one by one the others nosed through the dust clouds and rose into the night air in smart formations of three each. Fighters hovered above them and above the fighters passed wave after wave of bombers.

The sky was filled with planes as far as the eye could see.

LIBERATION BEGINS

The liberation of Europe had begun.

So much for the takeoff. But, despite Sergt. Foisie, not all of the Benning boys knew what their destination was going to be. Some of them—at least those in the plane commanded by Lt. Col. Charles W. Kouns—who passed through the school at Fort Benning in May, 1942, didn't know, for the news wasn't broken to them until they were half way over to the island.

Then Col. Kouns, in the plane, gathered them closely around him and gave them the works.

"Your destination is the Italian island of Sicily, and you will be the first American troops to land," he told them tersely. They sat in silence for a moment, the dispatches say, and then cheered.

And finally, one by one, in perfect order, as their destination was reached and the doors opened, they jumped, jumped into the stillness of the Sicilian night, jumped to a landing on a premapped field, one of the dozens on which they and their buddies were to land during the night and early morning hours, and began the tremendous task of co-ordination of their forces, and their attempts to reach other Allied ground troops to be beached later in the dawning.

That they were successful is told in the continuing stream of dispatches received here. At least one city, and several airdromes, have succumbed to them. They have united with other Allied forces. And the dispatches reiterate they did it all "with very slight casualties."

The pioneer of American paratroopers witnessed the fruit of his efforts in the recent Sicilian invasion when he observed the landings of these hardy shock troops from one of the planes which bore first Army officer to volunteer for such work at the inception of our parachute training program in 1940 when the War Department organized a test platoon.

Benning was the locale of the original parartoop platoon which comprised 48 men from the 29th Infantry and three officers, Maj. Edwin A. Smith, Lt. James A. Bassett and Col. Ryder who was then a lieutenant in rank.

The platoon was started in July 1940 and the following November Ryder became parachute training officer of the 501st Battalion which was the outgrowth of the original platoon. When this unit moved out to overseas service Colonel Ryder was placed in charge of all American Army parachute training at Fort Benning and when the Parachute Training School was started in May 1942 he was the first assistant commandant.

A few months after he was transferred to headquarters of the Airborne command at Fort Bragg, N. C., as operations and training officer where he remained until sent abroad under secret orders.

Accompanying Colonel Ryder in the same plane during the Sicilian operation was Major Benjamin Vandevoort, combat executive officer who was also a member of the original 501st Battalion.

Captain J. B. Quinn Attains Majority

Captain John B. Quinn of the Tactical Section, Academic Department, The Infantry School, has been promoted to the rank of major.

Major Quinn was commissioned in the Officers' Reserve Corps in 1933 with the 309th Infantry, 78th Division, Camden, N. J., and was called into active service in February, 1941. He attended the Rifle and Heavy Weapons Course at The Infantry School and upon graduation was assigned to Camp Croft, S. C. In November, 1942 he returned to Fort Benning, Ga. as a student in The Infantry School, Battalion Commanders' and Staff Officers' Course. Upon completion, he was assigned to Tactical Section, Academic Department, The Infantry School.

Post Philatelists To Meet July 21; Collectors Invited

The Fort Benning Samp Collectors Club, as yet unnamed, held its first meeting Wednesday, July 7, at the Service Club on the Main Post.

A general discussion gave all members plenty of food for thought, and big plans are in the offing.

The following collectors attended the initial meeting: Mr. and Mrs. DeBolt G. Weyer, 300th Infantry; Sgt. James H. Sprinkle, 738th Tank Battalion; Lt. A. A. Sharp, 738th Tank Battalion; Sgt. John R. Fountaine, Co. L, 176th Inf.; Warrant Officer I. Amster, Hq., ASTP, BTC, Infantry school; Sgt. Richard L. Heyl, 53rd General Hospital; Pfc. Bill Hafner, Co. L, 176th Infantry, and Sgt. W. Hannes, Post Headquarters.

The next meeting will be held in the Library of Service Club No. 1 on Wednesday, July 21, and everyone interested in any phase of philately is urged to be present.

Speaking to the graduates, Representative Starnes said, "You have been under constant observation to determine whether you have the stuff out of which leaders are made. In being commissioned, you have received more than just a piece of gold, you have received a trust."

ASTP Students Attend Dance In H. C. Area

A program of social activity for the members of the ASTP Basic Training Center of the Infantry School was inaugurated last week at the Fort Benning Sports Arena with one of the largest social affairs ever held in the Harmony Church Area.

The 124th Infantry Dance Band provided the music and the Arena was converted into a huge ballroom to accommodate the large crowd.

Mrs. Hugh Roberts of the Columbus Defense Council handled the arrangements and invited over 150 young ladies to attend and act as dancing partners for the young men.

Des Moines WAAC Officer Visits Unit At Post

Second Lieutenant Suzanne B. Tirlet, Women's army Corps, Des Moines, Iowa, is the guest of Lieut. Gail Gaines, commanding officer of the WAC Detachment, Station Complement, Fort Benning, for a few days.

Lt. Tirlet comes to Benning directly from Washington where she has been in training for special duty with the WAC in Des Moines. Lt. Tirlet's special assignment will be lecturing in her native French on world topics to new recruits who are being trained for foreign duty.

A world traveler, Lt. Tirlet has crossed the Atlantic 13 times in addition to numerous trips to the tropics and South American countries. Her last assignment before enlisting for duty with the WACs was as private secretary to Mademoiselle Curie, world traveler, author, and lecturer.

For several years she arranged exhibits in America and Europe for the renowned American artist, Charles Winthrop Chandler. A native of Paris, France, Lieut. Tirlet's family is still residing in that city.

Second STR Inactivation Slated Aug. 1

Army Orders Move Reducing Officer Candidate Output

The Second Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School will be inactivated about Aug. 1, according to present plans, in line with present Army policy to cut down on the production of officer candidate schools.

This regiment, activated Nov. 13, 1941, which has specialized in the training of Infantry officer candidates, has become quite well-known at Fort Benning through its varied activities in extra-curricular fields. It was regimental policy to provide extra facilities and programs for the entertainment of the officer candidates during their vigorous course, and the OC's backed the program to the hilt.

Not one officer who was with the Second at its start still remains with the regiment. Col. Maurice G. Stubbs was the original commanding officer, and has been succeeded by three others, Col. Edward B. Jackson, Col. Arthur C. Blain and the present c.o., Col. S. V. Burton. Maj. Lester E. Winslow is the dean of officers in the Second as far as service with the Regiment goes, having been assigned to the Second Dec. 21, 1941.

Twenty-five enlisted men who were part of the original cadre remain out of the 79 in that group.

WILL LIVE ON

Figures on the number of alumni the Second has sent out as new officers to America's expanding army are confidential, but it is permitted to say that while the Second will go out of existence as a tactical unit here at Fort Benning, it will live on in the memories of thousands of officers scattered all over the globe who spent three rather hectic months within its companies out at Harmony Church.

THE PINE-BUR, regimental newspaper which won a certificate of merit in the national contest for Army newspapers run by Camp Newspaper Service early this year, published its final edition last week, winding up with a 28-pager which featured some of the best material from past issues. The paper was made up chiefly of the work of Officer Candidates, including writers and artists of nation note, all coordinated by the paper's editor, Sgt. John M. Naylor. Student Training Brigade plans to take over the PINE-BUR in the near future and publish is for all units in the Brigade.

GOOD ATHLETIC TEAMS

Among its athletic teams best known was the LEADERS basketball squad, which last winter won the Fort Benning championship. The team lost seven straight games in the first half of league competition, was then revitalized with the addition of several OC's and won seven straight in the second half. The crew went on to beat the Academic Regiment in the league play offs, and took the Sand Hill champs into camp for the post title. Another championship crew was the Second's Service Battalion colored football team, which beat all other colored elevens on the post last fall. The Regiment has always entered tams in most of the post athletic competitions, and this spring had teams in the Infantry School Baseball league, the post Service Baseball League and the post Softball League.

A Variety Club in the regiment consisting of soldiers wih experience in show business, movies, radio and newspaper work backed such projects as soldier shows, floor shows for the Service Club, and radio programs.

The Second also had its own choir, which became quite famed here at Fort Benning and made appearances at religious functions in Atlanta, LaGrange and in nearby communities.

All-Girl Orchestra Opens Here Tonight

'Happy Landing' With Joy Cayler Slates 5 Shows

The newest USO-Camp Show, "Happy Landing," featuring Joy Cayler, her trumpet and her all-girl orchestra will open tonight in Doughboy Stadium at 8:45 p. m. Should weather conditions interfere with any outdoor performance, the show will be moved to War Department theaters, Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, chief of the Special Service Division in Post Headquarters, announced.

"Happy Landing" will be at Doughboy Stadium Friday and Saturday nights, the latter performance being for colored personnel only. The show will move to Harmony Church Monday where it will play in Harmony Bowl and Tuesday in the Third Student Training Regiment Outdoor Theatre. Curtain will be at 8:45 p. m. for all performances.

Originally a college dance band, the Joy Cayler orchestra skyrocketed to fame in leading hotels and clubs of the West. Their "eye appeal" music features the voice and saxaphone of Jerry Salmon. Peggy Thompson and her trombone and Bonnie Sloan and Margie Cawood on vocal selections.

A wealth of outstanding supporting acts have been scheduled for "Happy Landing." Cliff Hall, the renowned "Sharlie" of the old Baron Munchausen act, is teamed with Sid Marion on the program. Their fast-talking comedy routine topped off by their exhibition of the shell game has made them famous along Broadway.

Catherine Westfield with her troupe of six almost life-sized dolls, fashioned after celebrities whose mannerisms they ape, has played theaters in the New York area, clubs throughout the South and in Canada, and has toured the West with leading name bands. Kay Taylor, attractive and talented young tap dancer, will display her terpischorean ability which won her applause in "Too Many Girls."

Maude Hilton and her girl friend, who is Jane Mason, will add to the comedy of the show with their "Gab Fest." Emmett Oldfield and company, comedy acrobatic act, and Elinor Sherry, pretty and popular singer, complete the complement of "Happy Landing."

The 545 pints of blood which were donated by Fort Benning volunteers when the mobile blood bank visited here last week is worth $13,625 to the American Red Cross.

It was insured at that figure—or at $25 a pint—before being sent to Cincinnati for processing, Ralph J. Mitchell, field director of the Red Cross at Fort Benning, revealed.

The Red Cross mobile unit will return to the post for another three-day stay on Oct. 13, 14 and 15, he announced. A call for volunteer blood donors will be issued approximately two weeks in advance of the autumn visit. At that time it is planned to accommodate 200 donors per day, the director said.

The recent three-day period of blood donations at Fort Benning set a record with the average of 181 pints of blood donated per day, according to headquarters of the mobile unit in Atlanta. This was the highest average of any community yet visited.

5 YEARS—NO LEAVE

Five years in the army without making a request for a furlough or a leave is the record of Capt. George S. Williamson, adjutant of the Provisional Truck Regiment of the Infantry School at Fort Benning.

Gen. Fulton Among Six Retired at Ft. Benning

Orders Relieve Officers of Duty At Earliest Date Before Sept. 1

Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, Sunday received a telegram, along with five other officers at the post, announcing that according to War department directives he would retire from active service by Sept. 1.

Signed by Maj. Gen. William Bryden, commanding general of Fourth service command headquarters, personal telegrams were sent to six officers notifying them that they should retire between now and Sept. 1 because of statutory age limits. The age limit is 62 for brigadier general officers and 60 for officers under that grade.

Other officers at the post may be affected, but only six had received telegrams by Wednesday night.

OTHERS INCLUDED

The message received read:

"All officers who have reached statutory age will be relieved from active duty by the War department upon expiration of accrued leave. Officers so relieved will enter upon terminal leave status at earliest practicable date and at any event not later than Sept. 1."

Key officers were unable to say when they would be able to begin their leave basis.

News of the War department order fell as a bombshell on post headquarters since the officers affected have served in their jobs with all of their years of experience behind them during this war period.

General Fulton, a veteran of 43 years service in the army, has had a distinguished career, serving in the armed services in this country and overseas.

On April 9, 1942, while holding the rank of full colonel, he assumed command of Fort Benning in September, last year, he was promoted to the rank of brigadier general.

Funeral Wednesday For Hamilton Child

Edward Earl Hamilton, 2-year-old son of Maj. and Mrs. E. S. Hamilton, was accidentally drowned in a bathtub at the home of his parents at 232 Austin Loop Monday afternoon.

In addition to his parents, the child is survived by his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Hamilton of Dallas, Ore., and his maternal grandmother, Mrs. F. G. Cutler of Birmingham.

Funeral services were held at the residence Wednesday with Chaplain Hunt, Catholic post chaplain, officiating. Burial followed in the post cemetery.

INVENTORY

All branches and activities of the Fort Benning Exchange are closed today for inventory. The grocery and garage will be closed all day and will be open for business Friday. All other activities will open when inventory is completed.

515th Paratroopers Get Lioness Mascot

There's a big cat in a box outside for the 515th Parachute Infantry Regiment," remarked an express man to Col. Ridgely Gaither, new commandant officer of the Parachute School at Fort Benning.

"And I think it's sort of hungry," continued the expressman as he folded the signed receipt. "Hear her roaring?"

Sure enough, Col. Gaither could hear a distinct roaring and it didn't take much investigation to show that it was really a "big cat" that had bee delivered for Lt. Co. Julian B. Lindsey, commanding officer of the 515th. In fact, it was a full grown lioness, and she was roaring for a few pounds of raw meat.

Col. Gaither quickly called Col. Lindsey and told him to get his "kitten." Col. Lindsey sent a man in a jeep for the animal but soon had to send reinforcements. The lioness had been sent to Col. Lindsey by Col. Lou Walsh, commanding officer of the 517th Parachute Infantry Regiment, now stationed at Toccoa, Ga. Col. Lindsey doesn't know where Col. Walsh got it—but the cat is said to be gentle as a kitten and likes to romp with the paratroopers who now are getting over their first awe of the 300 pound animal.

They've named her "Mickey" and she spent her first night with the 515th in the Colonel's own hutment, which he vacated to give room for the new mascot. The men are going to build a cage for her and expect to take her to war with them.

Merit Award Given Major Lawe Sunday

Citation Rewards Gallant Conduct On Guadalcanal

Maj. William J. Lawe, a veteran of the American assault which led to the capture of Guadalcanal in the southwest Pacific, has been cited for "meritorious conduct in the performance of services" with the award of the "Legion of Merit" to the Fort Benning officer.

In an impressive ceremony, Col. Sevier R. Tupper, Student Brigade commander, presented the award to Major Lawe in the presence of Col. John S. Roosma, commanding officer of the First Student Training Regiment, and members of his staff.

Following the reading of the award and the presentation, the students of the Fourth Battalion of the First Student Training Regiment marched in review before Major Lawe to the accompaniment of music by the Reception Center Band.

The complete citation reads:

"William J. Lawe, Major, then Captain, Infantry, United States Army for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of services of a considerable degree of merit at Guadalcanal from November 2, 1942, until the termination of resistance on the island. His duties as assistant G-3 of a division were expanded on Dec. 8 to include those of Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3 of the sector west of the Lunga river. These extraordinary burdens of responsibility were carried by Major Lawe with courage and untiring efficiency. Working without re-

All-Dial Telephone System Will Be Ready On July 29

Calls From Town To Be Handled Entirely By Main Switchboard

Approximately 1,600 manually operated telephones at Fort Benning will switch over to the dial system Thursday, July 29, Lt. Col. A. W. Young, communications officer, announced Tuesday. The entire post system will then be dial operated.

Persons, under the new change, can call any telephone number at the reservation from downtown Columbus by calling the main switchboard at 6631. Colonel Young said. At present there are different numbers for the main post, the Sand Hill area and the Harmony Church area.

The switch-over in the system will take place at 10:30 p. m., July 29, and Colonel Young urged that all Fort Benning telephone users consult the new directories which will be distributed by the day before the change since there will be hundreds of new numbers. Colonel Young also stressed that persons using handy reference lists should correct them before the system goes into effect.

STRAIGHT DIALING

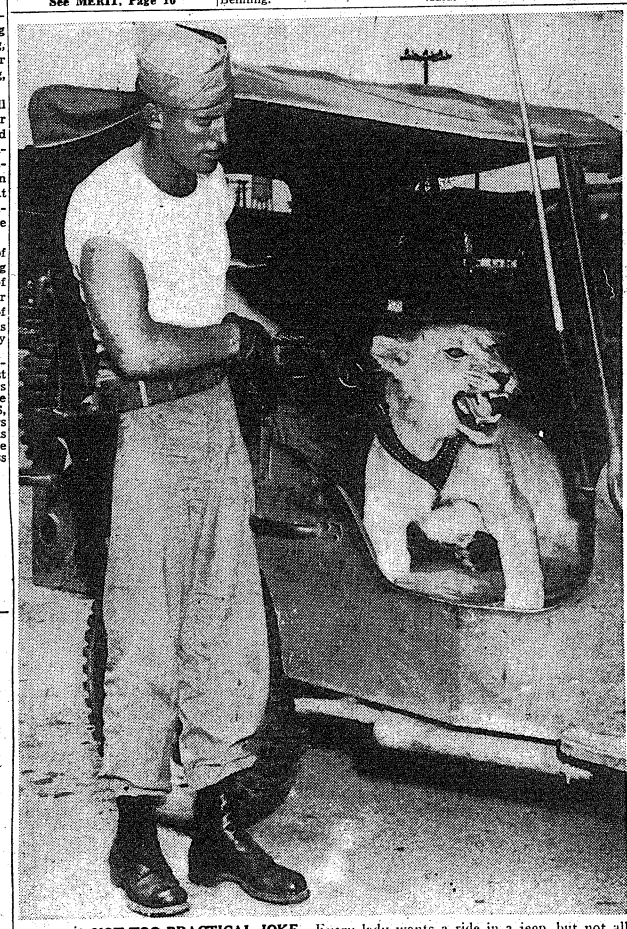
When the change is made, telephones users at the Main Post will be able to dial any number on the entire reservation. At present it is necessary to reach first operators in the Sand Hill, Harmony Church or Alabama areas. It will be possible also for persons in the Harmony Church and Sand Hill areas to dial all numbers at the post except those in the Alabama area.

Col. Young urged persons in downtown Columbus to check telephone numbers they are accustomed to call and to remember that the number for the entire reservation will be 6631. He also stressed that the new directories should not be used until after 10:30 p. m., July 29.

If new directories are not received prior to that time, Col. Young explained that copies can be had by calling 3533 at Fort Benning.

More French Patriots Here

Several Platoons In First Regiment For TIS Course



Several new platoons of Frenchmen, under the guidance of Captain Henri P. Bardeau of the French Military Mission to the United States, have arrived at the First Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, to attend the second French Officers' course, according to the post public relations office.

Their commander is Captain Pierre G. Ramin. The newcomers were welcomed by Col. John S. Roosma, commander of the regiment, who oriented them in the course which they are to pursue.

Some of the men have the status of Officer Candidate, but most of them are in the officer class, first or second lieutenants, or aspirants which is the equivalent of a third lieutenant, it was reported.

Until the Frenchmen assembled at the Infantry School they were, in the most part, total strangers. Twenty-three of them came from South America, mostly from Brazil. The rest are from all parts of the United States, and have been in this country since the fall of France.

The first day, therefore, was not devoted alone to the drawing of equipment. The process of getting canteens, rifles, manuals and other gear together, was frequently interrupted by introductions and handshakes, Benning officers said.

MIKI—A NOT TOO PRACTICAL JOKE. Every lady wants a ride in a jeep, but not all are so lucky as Miki, sent as a joke to mascot the 515th Paratroopers. She really was more pleased over her jeep ride than she appears in the picture, there are just moments in every lady's life when she feels like growling. Sgt. William Cooley and Miki are great friends since he beat her into submission, thus getting himself a job of "nursemaid." If he ever gets sent to Africa he'll feel right at home. He may even take word to Miki's family that she'd rather ride in a jeep than run in a jungle. (Photo by Forrester.)

Third Gullick Brother Earns Flight Wings

His two older brothers already attached to Parachute Infantry, Technician fifth grade Henry L. Gullich, now of the 23rd Company, 4th Battalion, First Student Training Regiment, TIS, recently became the third member of his family to receive his wings.

Proud but envious of his brothers, Lyoe and William, both second lieutenants on duty in North Africa, the young paratroper is among the enlisted radio operators class taking the advanced radio course here.

Lyee, the oldest brother, took his jump training at Bort Benning in 1941 and was commissioned last year in Florida. William, 22, also a graduate of the Parachute School, received his commission here.

Lyoe and William were separated upon arrival overseas, but a recent letter from the lieutenants to their family in Aberdeen, Miss., brought the news that they were together again and awaiting the arrival of their youngest brother to make the trio complete.

CAPT. RICHMAN

Word of promotion of First Lt. Charles A. Richman to the rank of captain has been received at post headquarters, Fort Benning. He is the commanding officer of the 523rd Ordnance (Heavy Maintenance) Company, which is a unit of the Second Army's special troops at Benning. Capt. Richmann holds a B. S. degree from the University of Illinois and was employed by Montgomery Ward Co., Chicago, as a merchandiser in the radio division before entering the service.

Lost Battalion Survivor To Get Discharge Soon

Germans Had Unit Completely Surrounded In Argonne Forest

One of the few survivors of the famous "Lost Battalion" of World War I, Sgt. Forney B. Mintz of Company C of the Academic Regiment, soon will be discharged from the Army, after more than 29 years service.

The be-ribboned sergeant is the holder of the Distinguished Service Cross, the Purple Heart, the World War ribbon, the Mexican Border ribbon, and the pre-Pearl Harbor ribbon. Two of them were awarded for his heroism with the 1st ("Lost") Battalion of the 308th Infantry, 77th Division.

Describing his experience, Sergeant Mintz said, "We were completely surrounded by the Germans in the Argonne. They sent a blind-folded soldier over to ask us to surrender. Our major told them to 'go to hell.' Of course, after that we always called him 'Go to Hell Whittelsey'."

TOUGH SPOT

"We were in a tough spot," the 51-year-old sergeant recalls. "They shot everything at us. Gas —one pounders—machine guns. I didn't have to do any bayoneting, but some of my men did. I had to throw plenty of hand grenades, though."

Stating that they could get supplies only by plane, Sergeant Mintz said they ate nothing but oak leaves and water for days because the Germans would get everything that was dropped for them.

"As soon as we made a move to go for some food or water that had been dropped, they picked us off," the sergeant relates. "Finally, when there were only 20 or 30 of us left, the battalions to the right and left of us advanced, and the Germans fell back. We were saved. And when I got out of there, I went straight to the hospital with two wounds."

GETS D. S. C.

The day after Christmas, 1918, Maj. Gen. Robert Alexander pinned the D. S. C. on Mintz's chest. Thirteen years later he was awarded the Purple Heart for the same action.

Originally from Ash, N. C., Sergeant Mintz signed up for the Army in 1913. He was on reserve during 1916 when he was called back to the colors to serve on outpost duty during the Mexican trouble, thus earning the first ribbon. When war broke out, he was transferred to Camp Upton as a cadre-sergeant with the 77th Division in the battalion later to be called the "Lost Battalion."

Since the first World War he has been with several units, including the 29th Infantry, and was an acting first sergeant in a CCC unit in Tennessee in 1933. He has been with the Academic Regiment since April, 1942.

CAPTAIN JOSLIN

Promotion of First Lieut. Otto Joslin, Jr., of the 12th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, ISSC, to the rank of captain, is announced.

The officer received his basic training at Camp Wheeler, Ga., where he was advanced to the grade of corporal, and then came to Fort Benning for officer candidate training. He was commissioned a second lieutenant May 5, 1942, and advanced to first lieutenant the following September.

. . . or how to make friends at home or abroad
When the American soldier overseas meets up with Coca-Cola, it's like meeting an old pal. Have a "Coke", says he to a stranger, and in three words he has made a new buddy. From Minneapolis to Melbourne, Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the mark of the good neighbor, the high-sign of the friendly-minded—has spread from Atlanta to the Seven Seas.

Five TIS Officers Made Full Colonels

Cooper, McHugh, Burton, Passailaigue Roosma Included

Five officers of The Infantry School have been promoted to full colonels with the last few days.

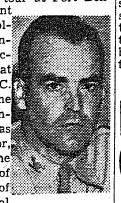
Burton

Col. Burton, who just recently took over his command, entered the Army in 1914 and was commissioned from the ranks in 1917. He has seen foreign service in the Philippines, China and Hawaii. He has also had extended service in R. O. T. C. work, serving four years at the University of Alabama, and at Casper (Wyo.) High School for a similar period. He returned to Fort Benning and the Student Training Brigade as Brigade Inspector. His other tour of duty here was in 1920-21 when he attended the company officers' course.

WEST POINT

Col. Cooper was commissioned from the United States Military Academy in 1924 and assigned to the 28th Infantry where he served two years before being transferred to the 19th Infantry. He went back to the 28th after three years and remained for three more years. His promotion to 1st lieutenant came in 1929. In 1932, he was a student in The Infantry School and from there was assigned to the 24th Infantry. He was promoted to captain in 1935 and was executive officer of the Infantry Rifle team in 1936.

Cooper



From 1936 to 1939, he was on the staff of the Second Division and commanded special troops for a short time. Then he attended the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth and was attached to the Third division for maneuvers. He was assigned to the Umpires Section under Lt. Col. Ike Eisenhower for a short time. The same year, 1940, he went to the 35th Infantry in the Hawaiian Department and was Plans and Training Officer of that regiment during the attack on Pearl Harbor. He later commanded a battalion of that regiment during the attack.. .. .... ment from that tour, he came to The Infantry School where he served as an instructor until his promotion to Colonel when he became executive officer of the Tactical Group.

Col. Cooper was born in Gainesville, Texas. He attended Peacock Military College, San Antonio, before entering West Point.

McHUGH POINTER

Col. McHugh was also commissioned from the U. S. Military Academy in 1924. He served with the 28th Infantry at Camp Perry and Fort Niagara and then was assigned to R. O. T. C. and C. M. T. C. at the Plattsburgh, N. Y. barracks. After a tour at Madison Barracks, he returned to West Point as an instructor in the Department of Tactics. Then he came to Fort Benning to take an advanced course which was followed by a tour with the 15th Infantry in China.

Returning to the States, he was stationed with the 4th Infantry at Fort Lincoln, Neb., and from there was assigned to the 31st Infantry in the Philippines. Then came another tour at Fort Benning as a student, which was followed by assignment to Fort McClellan, Ala., at the B. I. R. T. C. From there he came to The Infantry School as an instructor, later to become Group Chief of the Training of an Individual Soldier.

McHugh

He was born in Milwaukee. His high school career was unique in that each of the four years was spent at a different school—West Division High, Milwaukee; Minot (North Dakota) High; Central High at Grand Forks, N. D., and Devils' Lake High, Devils' Lake, N. D.

Col. Passailaigue began his military career in 1916 when he enlisted in the Charleston Light Dragoons, a Cavalry outfit which saw service on the Mexican border. Prior to that he attended The Citadel and University of South Carolina and was graduated from the latter in 1915 with the degree of LL.B. Shortly after being admitted to the bar, he was elected to the South Carolina House of Representatives. While he was in school, Col. Passailaigue played varsity football, captaining South Carolina in 1912.

OCCUPATION ARMY

Passailaigue

After his tour with the Army in 1916, he was honorably discharged but reenlisted shortly after as an officer candidate at the Second Training Camp at Fort Oglethorpe. He was commissioned a captain in 1917 and spent a year and a half overseas with the A. E. F. and Army of Occupation. He was a company commander in the Third Division which saw action in the Champaigne-Marne, Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne sectors.

In 1920, he entered the Regular Army as a first lieutenant and served with the 48th Infantry at El Paso, Texas. Then followed tours with the 25th Infantry at Camp S. D. Little in Nogales, Ariz., the 45th Infantry, in the Philippines and the 38th Infantry at Fort Douglas, Utah. In between these tours, he served as Professor of Military Science and Tactics at North Carolina State College and Tennessee Military Institute. He was also Adjutant General, Third Military Area, Salt Lake City.

Col. Passailaigue came to The Infantry School from the 349th Infantry, 88th Division at Camp Gruber, Okla., and has held his present command since last April.

STAR ATHLETE

Col. Roosma was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1926. He was a star athlete at the Point and in his last year, was awarded the Athletic Saber as the best all-around athlete. In his high school days, he played brilliant basketball in New Jersey where he established a state scoring record that still stands.

Roosma

One of his early assignments was with the 31st Infantry which was stationed in Shanghai in 1932 when the Japs made the first of their many attempts to gobble China. Still later he bumped into the Japs again, this time when his regiment was at Pearl Harbor.

Col. Roosma formerly commanded a battalion in the First Student Training Regiment and for a time, commanded the Sixth Regiment, ASTP Basic Training Center. He assumed his new command a short time ago. He has introduced many changes and improvements in the regiment, carrying out ideas and plans which he inaugurated as a battalion commander. He is noted for his perpetual energy and enthusiasm for all things "army."

One of the most practical and presently popular of all cosmetics houses brain children is the "Four yourself a pair of stockings" idea. Since stockings of rayon and cotton, the only kinds available this summer, are hot and sticky, legs of all ages, shapes and sizes are succumbing to the artifice of make-up. All the outstanding brands of leg make-up, such as Helena Rubenstein, Marie Earle, Elizabeth Arden, Tussy and Dorothy Gray are displayed by the J. A. KIRVEN COMPANY. There are still several months of hot weather ahead so buying a moderately priced bottle of makeup and applaying it with regard for directions will assure you of many pairs of stockings which look even better than Nylons and will never distress you by sprouting runs. If you've never used leg make-up before, I suggest you give it a try. The application is a simple matter and I'm sure you'll never be without a bottle when you see how attractive your legs look.

Cotton housedresses which hold up well and are still attractive enough to be worn making the rounds of the PX and the Commissary, are often hard to find. Fortunately for us Homemakers through, SEARS ROEBUCK COMPANY has a vast assortment of these practical wash dresses. Located on the rear of main floor is a whole section devoted to displaying brunch coats, and housedresses. Seersucker, chambray, broadcloth and gingham are the sturdy materials of which these attractive and colorful frocks are fashioned. Many have an attractive bit of eyelet embroidery or a narrow organdy ruffle to lend a dainty touch. Still others depend entirely on their perfectly tailored lines to achieve a becoming effect. Surprisingly enough each of the numerous styles is so reasonably priced I'm sure you'll find you'll be able to buy several frocks and still have a few pennies remaining.

At Fort Benning many fond parents miss being able to take snapshots of their growing boys and girls for a permanent record of every stage of their lives. There is no getting around the rule of "No cameras allowed on the reservation," the next best way to keep "Baby's Own Book" somewhat up to date is to have a photographic portrait of your tiny tot made every three or four months by a reputable photographer. In Columbus the logical place to accomplish this is the well-known studio of AIME DUPONT on Broadway. Whether you want a small photograph or an "8-by-10," you'll be given proofs from which you may make your final selections. Your suggestions, if any, for a bit of retouching will be carefully heeded. By keeping a record in this manner, you'll not only have pictures of little Susie or Jimmie when they cut a tooth, first go to kindergarten, dress up for their first Hallowe'en and many other occasions you'll want to remember.

— V —

Since shoe rationing has been in effect many of us have realized, much to our sorrow it doesn't pay to buy "cheap" footwear. Poor quality materials and sketchy workmanship often result in shoes being worn out before the next shoe coupon is valid. This is all far from true with all shoes purchased at the MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY. In this reputable shop the shoes are neithe "cheap" nor are they exhorbitantly high priced. The least expensive bit of footwear has the exacting workmanship and excellent quality which is characteristic of all Miller-Taylor shoes. All the men's, women's and children's shoes have been made, not of cheap materials and in a slap-dash fashion, but most carefully of the highest grade leathers and fabrics. When you need a pair of walking shoes or your youngster needs some oxfords for fall school wear, buying in a reputable establishment you are assured your footwear will give you comfort and lasting wear.

— V —

The shops and newspapers start advertising the latest fall creations just about the time we get our summer wardrobe in good shape and almost before we get a chance to wear out our cottons. There seems to be something so appealing and smart looking about a fall suit or smoothly tailored dark frock. KAYSER - LILIENTHAL, INC., has an unusually chic assortment of the latest suits, coats and dresses especially suitable to wear during the Fall and throughout the Winter. All wool suits in eye-catching colors and with just the right amount of fine handwork you'll want in your suit to make it much better than the run-of-the-mill. Two or three-piece styles have all been painstakingly fashioned in either tailored or dressmaker styles. The ever smart black, maroon, and pine green frocks are all exquisitely made to suit your most exacting tastes. A "word to the wise," is all that's needed, so select your fall clothing when you'll have your choice of new and varied styles.

MRS. RUBY YOUNG—Phone 5333

Playground activities have been planned and started for the boys and girls of Baker Village and Benning Park. Mrs. Lutz who is in charge of these activities would like to see everyone out to participate in the various phases of the schedule. Bulletin boards are placed on each ground with notices of activities and the time she plans to be on each playground to meet the boys and girls of each area.

Tuesday and Thursday evenings Mrs. Lutz will be out on the playgrounds next to the Administration building to supervise all types of activities. Darts, horseshoes, softball, volleyball, croquet are some of the games that will be found to engage in.

Everyone is invited to participate and we hope to see a large attendance.

On Friday, July 30, at 3:30 (EWT) a pet show is scheduled to take place on the athletic field. Every child is invited to bring his pet and enter this show. Judges will be on hand to select the best entry for the various classifications set-up. Children too small to enter their pet alons in this activity may be brought by their mothers. Watch the bulletin boards for further information on this.

Girls who wish to organize a softball or volleyball team will find a place on the bulletin boards to sign up.

Folk dancing is taught each Friday afternoon at 2 p. m. in the auditorium for all those interested.

A list of girls to take care of children is now in the Recreational Dept. Anyone wanting girls please contact Mrs. Young or Mrs. Lutz at the office.

There are two sewing classes now, Tuesday and Thursday at 2 p. m. (EWT).

Infantry School On Army Hour

OC Problem Aired From Holiday Hill

The Infantry School at Fort Benning went on the air waves on Sunday afternoon during the regularly scheduled broadcast of the "Army Hour" over the National Broadcasting Company network. The broadcast originated on Holiday Hill and featured an officer candidate problem involving combat firing by rifle and heavy weapons platoons.

This particular broadcast fitted into an overall picture of the activation of a new division. The Infantry Schools' portion showed officers, who are to head infantry components of a new division, come to the Infantry School for review and further instruction. The firing of the various weapons in the combat firing problem was picked up and broadcast. The narrative of the problem was handled by Maj. Francis Westlake. His description was identical to the text given a class during a regular problem. The "Army Hour" is the official War Department program on the NBC network.

The broadcast was the first of three scheduled for Fort Benning and The Infantry School within the next two weeks. The "Army Hour" will be back again July 25 for a broadcast featuring the Officer Candidate School. On July 31, the Columbia Broadcasting Company will have Fort Benning as its locale for one of its "Spirit of '43" series. This will be a somewhat historic broadcast for it will mark the completion of three years of the program which originated here in 1940.

An NBC engineering crew was in Fort Benning for the technical handling of the broadcast. Capt. Joe Thompson of the War Department's Radio Branch handled the production of the "Army Hour" and Bill Slocum will come from New York for the "Spirit of '43" show.

ROOSMA ON AIR

Colonel John S. Roosma, commanding officer of the First Student Training Regiment, will be presented to listeners of Radio Station WRBL in Columbus when he appears Sunday on a program starting at 5 p.m. (EWT). He is well known for his lectures and writings on the subject of "leadership." The radio program is being produced by members of the First Student Training Regiment and will feature surprise guest artists of radio fame.

Office Soldiers Need Regular Exercise

All Americans should keep themselves physically fit in these times of stress and strain. This means we should all have adequate sleep, rest, recreation, a nutritious diet and exercise. Every person in good health should take some form of exercise depending upon his age, strength and occupation.

Proper exercise strengthens the muscles which hold us erect and in good posture. It stimulates the circulation and keeps the heart and lungs in prime condition. It helps us avoid putting on excess weight. Digestion and elimination are improved, vigor and endurance are increased. In fact, proper exercise helps us live longer, and gives us a keener enjoyment of everything in life.

Generally some form of exercise which may be continued day after day throughout the year is preferable. Moderate regular exercise is far better than too much at any one time. Never over-do or over-strain. Any exercise is more beneficial out of doors. The tonic effect of fresh air and sunshine is invigorating. Moderately taken exercise should produce a pleasant exhilaration, not undue fatigue or aching muscles, or complete exhaustion.

Civilian and Military personnel doing any clerical work. and those who do light work, like sitting or standing at a machine, need exercise to keep them limbered up. Workers whose jobs demand great physical exertion need recreation more than muscle building. They should seek sunshine, rest, and fresh air in their leisure time.

This year millions of Americans are getting splendid exercise working in their Victory gardens, and some have reaped nutritious foods for their labor. Many of us have found that it takes more than digging and planting seeds to get food from our gardens. The insects, in some cases, get most of it, unless you are careful, but the exercise has benefitted all of us..

Being physically fit means less illness, more production of war materials and foods, and early termination of this war.

U. S. Industry, Agriculture Miracle of Modern Times

One of the miracles of these modern times is the achievement of American industry and agriculture, in aiding to supply our troops with the tools and food to win this war. Labor and Capital are pooling the might of this great nation, giving their utmost, just like our fighting men are giving their lives for victory.

We all realize that we are fighting the gravest threat in the history of this nation—a threat to those freedoms which we have enjoyed as our American way of life. The realization of losing these freedoms has brought the American public closer together. No sacrifice is too great to hold on to our freedms—having and holding the things that are our own, worshipping according to our own beliefs, educating our children as we choose—thinking as we please, saying what we please, and doing what we please, when we please, as long as doing so does not encroach upon the rights of others.

Everyone can't carry a gun to win this war. The people on the home front are part of this all-out war, and their contributions are just as important as fighting men in the war. They have to to manufacture the equipment and food for our armed forces to fight with, and we are all proud of their accomplishments.

Many civilians are constantly asking how they can best serve their country in the most useful manner. These are some of the best patriotic ways Americans can aid our country win this war:

1. Buying bonds, a minimum of 10% of your salary, or more.
2. Avoiding unnecessary expenditures in order to prevent inflation.
3. Avoid hoarding and observe rationing regulations.
4. Do not waste food.
5. Work where it will do the most food to our war effort.
6. Keep your bodies healthy.
7. Try to avoid accidents; be careful in driving your car.
8. Spread no rumors.
9. Conserve tires and gesoline.
10. Share your car with others.
11. Travel only when absolutely necessary.
12. Contribute to and work for the Red Cross.
13. Save scrap and fats.
14. Donate blood.
15. Do community service.
16. Pay your taxes and bills o ntime.
17. Start a victory garden.
18. Contribute books and magazines to men in the service.
19. Write to the men in the Armed forces often.
20. Observe blackout regulations.
21. Suppress venereal disease in your community by curbing organized prostitution and crime.

We may "set all nations free to seek their own just aspirations." But let's remind them at that time that there's no use being free to seek anything but freedom.

'Spite of War Life Can Be Beautiful

Many soldiers, their mind overcast with the sordid visions of a world torn asunder by war and chaos, fail to realize that all is not lost; that there is yet some beauty, and some ideals to be cherished and revealed in, on this crazy earth. One need not be a poet; a religious mind is not prerequisite, nor does a man's degree of education materially affect his appreciation of those intangible wonders which are his to behold and enjoy. That which is innate in all of us is the only requirement—a soul. Perhaps I can better express myself in this little poem—:

Have you ever heard the echo of a wand'ring whippoorwill
In the evening, just at twilight, when the earth is calm and still?
Have you seen a graceful skylark as he streaks about the sky,
Rising like an arrow and descending like a sigh?
Have you ever felt a summer breeze arustling thru your hair,
Or the tip-tap of the dew drops in the cool fresh morning air?
Have you known the joy of music of which the ecstatic strains
Bring sweet solace to a lonely world of sea and sky and plains?
Have you reveled in the wonders of the children hard at play,
Did you not smile at their little pranks maybe foolish, maybe gay?
Have you ever watched as raindrops pattered o'er a windowpane,
Bouncing off in shining silver spray to fall right back again?
Have you ever felt the icy blasts of wet wind-driven snow,
And is not the rapid summer heat a wond'rous thing to you,
Oh, if the world with its glories, mysteries, and rare delights,
Long, enchanted days, and thrilling, somber mantled nights,
Can offer naught that's new to you; then sea and sky must end,
And in my heart there is sympathy for you, my soldier friend."

Catch on, soldier. There's more to be enjoyed in this world than you can imagine. Something finer than a bottle of firewater and an uninhibited redhead . . .

Knowledge Is Only Mental Power Against Ill-Luck

During the season of 1897 a young man, carrying a heavy pack, slowly struggled towards a gap in a long string of ice incrusted mountain tops. He was, so he told himself, going far into the Yukon wilderness to pan for gold. That young man however was UNLUCKY.

He was unlucky because at that very moment he was but ten miles from a place called Dawson, and trudging through a section known as the Klondike River Valley where the following season, gold-seekers extracted over twenty million dollars worth of gold. He was unlucky because he did not know that at this particular moment he was walking on a veritable bar of gold. If he had but possessed the proper knowledge, he would have been lucky. Had he at one time or another studied geology then this story might have had a different ending. He would have, in all probability, been lucky. Lucky because he possessed the proper knowledge at the proper time.

Knowledge, properly guided, is the only mental power which will break ill-luck. If a man takes a genuine interest in his work, if he studies, if he applies himself and learns his work then he will be lucky. In doing one's work, and in doing it well, there is a certain compensating sense of satisfaction. This compensation not alone makes the required effort all seem worth while, but it also stimulates us into trying something bigger and better. It imbues us with a strange sense of power. Power because we realize that our knowledge is sufficient to meet any contingency the work might develop. We know our job and we do it well. We are lucky and therefore we receive a promotion.

It therefore follows that any man who wishes to have good luck has only to determine that he will be lucky. If he is sincere in his desires and determinations, he will begin to study. Study his fellow man, study his text books, study, study, study. Suddenly the realization will come that in his chosen field he knows more than any other man. Suddenly people will begin to take notice. Suddenly he will begin to get the breaks. Suddenly he will be lucky.

The fight for a new world is a continued story. It won't end when the last shot is fired. It will just move into the second chapter.

The Yankee Barbarians Dare Bomb Rome!

WE REGRET TO INFORM . . .

Regret to inform you the telegram reads
Of the heroic death of your son,
As he fought for home and country
With our enemies on the run.
The lady's kind face quivers while reading
Her eyes quickly fill with tears
She can see him knocked down in battle
And her thoughts quickly span the years.

She can see her own dear little boy
With his toy soldiers and his gun,
Little dreaming that one day across the sea
Her freedom would so dearly be won.
She sees him going on his first date
With the candy for his girl,
Happily going out to play
No battle cry to hurl.

She sees him too coming in from work
With a smile like no other had,
Kissing her with his greeting
Her so very gallant lad.
Then her weeping stops suddenly as she thinks
He really has not gone
For the joy he left her in memories
Will forever linger on.

So she tips the boy for the message,
And proudly opens the door
To go inside and in her thoughts
Wait for her son once more.
For every day just as always
He'll be coming home at five
To call his cheery greeting
That will ever be alive.

They'll be together every moment
As her thoughts bring him oh so near,
And she'll be so very happy.
To know that her boy knew no fear;
Then when victory shall be ours
As soon it shall one day
She'll know pride like nobody else will
For the price she had to pay.

USO Presents—

COUNTRY DANCING, TURKEY-BALKAN BACKSTOP AND FRIDAY NITE PARTY

By PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

Real "country dancin'" is featured every Tuesday night at the Ninth Street USO to the strains of a hillbilly band from Lawson Field . . . Included is square dancing, reels and the like . . . Musicians are Pfc. Harry Foster, violin; Pfc. William Hunley, guitar; Pfc. John Storkavich. guitar; Cpl. K. L. Moffet, mandolin, and Pfc. Charles Adametz, bass fiddle . . . All are from the Fifth Troop Carrier Squadron except Pfc. Adametz, who is from the 54th Base Headquarters and Air Base Squadron.

• • •

Musicians are still needed by the re-organized Columbus symphony orchestra, sponsored by the Ninth Street USO and made up of ASTP men, other Fort Benning soldiers and some civilian musicians . . . Players of violins, cellos, basses or violas are especially sought . . Practices are held every Thursday at 8:30 p. m. (EWT) at the Ninth Street USO.

• • •

A six-piece orchestra from Fort Benning's Station Hospital will be on the musical program Sunday at 5 p. m. (EWT) at the Salvation Army USO in Phenix City . . . They will play popular selections on informal requests from the audience.

• • •

An eyewitness account of fighting in North Africa will be the feature of Sunday's Town Hall program at Ninth Street USO . . . The story will be told by a former staff sergeant now an officer candidate in Fort Benning's Infantry School . . . That night "Birth of the Blues" will provide the motion picture entertainment.

• • •

The summer home hospitality program of the Ninth Street USO continues with a party Friday night for boys from Fort Benning's ASTP . . . It will be their introduction to Columbus hospitality.

It seems harder for American men to work together at home than for American boys to die together abroad.

"If you can't govern yourselves you'll never govern the Italians or Germans," said a captain at a Military Government School."

Peace needs generalship and basic training as much as war.

Chaplain's Corner . .

WHAT'S THE SCORE?
Chaplain F. M. Thompson

The great national game is on the home stretch. The first half has ended. In a few months the swat of the ball will be heard as the World Series gets under way.

That introduces you to a criticism handed me by a young man. He said that a certain preacher was unaware of what was going on, that he was all hazy as to the meaning of life. In other words, he did not know the score.

Now I am pretty sure the preacher was more familiar with life than the gangling youth. He knew a good game, how it should be played, also when one struck out. And so did the youth. He was not ignorant of the rules that ought to govern his conduct. Very few are worried by a lack of knowledge along that line. Herein lies their trouble. It is what they already know and fail to act upon.

I suppose there are times when a Dorothy Dix is needed to straighten out affairs. I wonder. I, like you, have given bales of advice and I have yet to learn that any of it was taken very seriously. The only counsel most folks want is that which confirms their own wishes and desires. Perhaps a lot depends on the way it is given.

I recall, many years ago, a maiden consulted me about a man she thought of marrying. I realized now that I used very poor technique in dealing with her. I came right out and told her that in my judgment the man was on his way to the bad place (only I did not use so mild a term) and he would very likely take her with him. "All right," she said. "I'll go with him." And she did—she married him.

After all, what difference does it make what the score is?
When the one great Scorer comes to write against your name,
He writes not that you won or lost, but how you played the game.

The United States Treasury is $60 ahead and a former soldier's conscience is aat ease, the War Department discloses.

The unidentified ex-serviceman placed two bills—a fifty and a ten—in a plain envelope. He enclosed a one-sentence note:

"The enclosed covers some blankets which as I see it now should have been turned in by me on my discharge."

Marked personal, the letter was mailed in New York to Lieutenant General Brehon Somervell, Commanding General, Army Service Forces. The money was forwarded by the War Department to the Treasury .

Athletic—

HAS SEVERAL INTERPRETATIONS AND 'DOC' MADE THE TEAM

By CAPT. F. M. SCHILLING

At an early age "Doc" Schofield learned he wasn't the athletic type. Not particularly, anyhow. He could still remember old Lundy's words. "Aren't you in the wrong department? Football managers don't wear uniforms." So he plugged along, contented and satisfied as a glorified waterboy until Dean Alex put him on probation. That means being disqualified for managership. That meant giving up the thing he loved most . . . being close to football.

The Dean might as well have told him to quit smoking or going out with girls. "Doc" took it all pretty hard. Even Barbara's confidence in him didn't help. Giving up the chance to go with the freshman team to Dartmouth was too much to ask. The Dean hadn't been very square about the whole thing. "Doc" had spent a warm summer in successfully making up the flunked subjects. He should have been taken off the probation list, Dean Alex had promised. Now "Doc" had learned that even big people break promises. So he gave up the thing he could do which came closest to athletics. Then he transferred to another school.

He played in the orchestra and in the band, he wrote a feature column for the college paper. he played the lead in one dramatic production (a one-act play) and did some minor parts in several others. But these weren't athletics. "Doc" longed for something in the athletic line. He wasn't good enough for the baseball or basketball team, in fact, he had never played the games before. He wanted to. He wanted to get into the game, to be a part of the team.

So he joined the Army. He didn't wait until his number was called. He wanted to get itno the game. "Doc" Schofield volunteered. "Doc" Schofield became a part of the big team. He could still remember old Lundy's words something about manager's not wearing uniforms. Well, he was wearing a uniform now, he was on the team . . . until he learned of his assignment to a station complement, a headquarters group, or easier explained as a KP and MP outfit. So old Lundy was wrong, for in big teams like the Army the fellows who carry the towels and waterbuckets, the managers, they all wear uniforms.

"If I'm going to get into the game, I've got to get out of this outfit," the kid reasoned. Maybe he wasn't an athlete, but he wanted to be. So someone in Washington figured out the officer candidate deal. "Doc" Schofield headed the line at the station hospital for the physical. It wasn't so easy to face those first boards either. Then they asked him why he wanted to be an officer and if Singapore was our largest naval base and if Dakar was important. In a few weeks he boarded the train for the school. In a few long months it was over. He was an officer.

Official records show that "Doc" Schofield was assigned to a training group. He was still playing the game from the manager's bench. He became melancholy and blue. He got married. He started writing again. Maybe it was a poem. Maybe it was a song. Maybe it was a short story. He became a good manager. He became a trainer. He sent out men who could carry his ideas to the playing field. He forgot about playing the game himself. If he could make better players. better athletes out of the men under him he was satisfied. He figured out ways to make better players. He wanted to win the game. If he couldn't play he'd make players who could win. At long last "Doc" was close to the one thing he cared about . . . the game.

Perhaps you're wondering how I know. "Doc" won't mind if I tell you. He's the kid who used to live next door to me. He's the kid I joined up with. We were together until just a couple of months ago. "Doc" finally did get into the game, you know. They sent him to combat. He was pretty happy about the whole thing when the order came. He kissed his wife goodby, shook my hand, then left here like a two year old kid with a piece of candy. He was pretty happy. The coach had finally patted him on the back and said, "Go in there and fight" . . .

They got "Doc". It took a lot of men, but they got "Doc". Maybe I should be sad. I guess I am, alright. He was my pal. But I'll bet, wherever he is, the "Doc" is happy. The citation reads, "For gallantry and heroism beyond the call of duty . . . and for athletic agility and superior energy in leading his company through impossible terrain in the capture of an enemy battalion." There's more to the citation than that. I may have it mixed up a bit, too. But the word "athletic" is there. I'll bet "Doc" is reading it over and over.

Key Says—

SHE GAZED IN FASCINATION AS MOBILE BLOOD BANK WORKED

That insufficient, bungling mortal at the Red Cross Mobile Unit last Thursday and Friday mornings was I, peering about and getting in the way of everyone who had work to do.

Thursday morning, I grant you, I went down with some idea of helping out, to discover that everything was running very nicely without any help. Sheer curiosity about this important contribution to the war effort, donations of blood, kept me there the rest of the morning. And I showed up again the next morning, to goze fascinated for another two hours—much to the annoyance of those who were working diligently, I imagine.

• • •

But it is fascinating, this painless process of taking blood from healthy persons to save the life of a wounded soldier. And it's done efficiently, thanks to numerous uprses and volunteer Red Cross workers. From the time you receive your registration card until you're sitting on the porch partaking of a soft drink or milk and a biscuit or two, there's no time lost.

• • •

In the meantime you've had your temperature, pulse, blood pressure and hemo-globin checked. You've been handed a drink of lemonade. You've answered numerous questions about your health. And then comes the real business of the day, giving that plant of blood. For that you get a bed to lie on, a piece of rubber tubing tied above your elbow, and a wad of cloth to clench in your fist. The nurse finds a nice, prominent vein and presto! In ten minutes it's all over.

• • •

If you feel a bit faint and wobbly, and there are some who do, you'll find something is being waved under your nose and a cold cloth on your head. And if you feel a little shaky and white after your donation, you'll find yourself lying on a cot until you recover. Most of even the so-called weaker sex, however, seem to be able to navigate under their own power for that coke or glass of milk.

• • •

There were a few minor tragedies, I noticed like the little girl who wanted so desperately to be a donor. She was a wee thing, but she thought she sometimes tipped the scales a 110 pounds, th eminimum weight. She admitted that she'd fainted the Sunday before, and that possibly she might be anemic, but even reassurances that it was for her own good couldn't overcome her disappointment when she was rejected.

• • •

There is also the teen-ager who felt that the rule that donors between 18 and 21 must have a release signed by parent or guardian didn't apply to her, since she was married to a soldier. She was finally persuaded to wait for the next Mobile Unit, and in the meantime to have the release signed by her husband.

• • •

Mingling among the paid doctors and nurses were an equal number of Red Cross volunteers, their uniforms adding a touch of color to surgical white and army drab. The crispy gray of the Gray Ladies, the pert blue pinafores of the Nurses Aides, the epaulets of the Motor Corps, canteen, staff assistants and executives were all in evidence. They all worked, and worked hard, many of them spending long hours at the Mobile Unit besodes donating blood.

• • •

The Mobile Unit is returning to Fort Benning October 13, so successful was its first visit. I'm planning to be right there donating a pint of blood, if they'll take me, and getting in on some of those free refreshments.

We've tried both contracts and compulsion in America. Now, let's try some caring. It makes contracts work and compulsion unnecessary.

Many who didn't give a dama for the country now have to give their sons to the country.

"A ship," says a shipyard worker, "is no better than the spirit of the men who build it."

Truck Unit Finishes First Six Months

The Provisional Truck Regiment, Infantry School Service Command, has just completed its first six months as an army organization and, in tracing its steady growth from an humble beginning to its present status, many interesting features of this outfit come to mind.

Activated on December 18, 1942, this organization used as its headquarters a small building in its newly developed area of Harmony Church, and in this limited area, newly assigned officers of Colonel Frank J. Vida's command worked with numerous enlisted cadremen in building from the ground up a truck outfit that in size outnumbers any other similar outfit in the United States army that is stationed on one post.

Within a very few days after the actual activation orders, troops began arriving by the hundreds and soon the area taxed to its capacity. Space was so limited that newly arriving personnel were taken to the Fort Benning Reception Center to await suitable accommodations. A group of thirty-eight colored officers reported from an outfit that was moved from the post, and other officers began reporting daily, — some from actual instructing positions in various sections of the Infantry School, while others came direct from motor classes that had just been completed.

Prospective leaders were selected around which to build the regiment and soon a clerical force was prepared to open records on another army unit.

PRIME MISSION

The prime mission of this regiment being transportation, it was necessary that motor vehicle operators and mechanics be assigned in great numbers. While some men reported who had had actual driving experience, the majority of the troops came from Infantry centers and with training of a nature not closely related to motors. The problem of producing men of the type needed was so acute that on one Sunday, the entire day was spent in qualifying sufficient numbers of drivers to meet a Monday morning dispatch. This little incident possibly paved the way for later motor instruction on a scale so large that over 100 enlisted men have received the very finest of motor mechanic instruction in branches of the world-famous Infantry School and many officers, likewise have, three months courses of instruction to their credit.

Other instruction has found weekly meeting of motor personnel as well as frequent written directives being made available to all persons in the regiment who are primarily connected with transportation. With this background, it is no surprise to know that the men of the Provisional Truck Regiment are doing a satisfactory job for the Infantry School.

Although transportation occupies the minds and time of all within the regiment, other activities have been developed to such an extent that the Provisional Truck Regiment soldier has a variety of outside activities and interests at his disposal. A well balanced recreational program finds modern day rooms available to all personnel. One battalion offers free fovies weekly to the personnel, other battalions encourage programs and company shows, while the Regimental Chorus and Quartet have filled numerous engagements and appear often—along with other regimental talent—on each Thursday evening's FORT BENNING ON THE AIR radio broadcast.

ATHLETICS STRESSED

Athletics play an important part in the daily life of the regiment and two teams, The Provisional Truck Regiment "Reds" and the Provisional Truck Regiment "Blues," are entered in the Fort Benning Service League. A boxing program is contemplated, and already the coaching staff is laying the groundwork for a regimental football team to be made up of stars who, as recently as last fall, played on college teams throughout the nation.

An orchestra is in the making and at present, an aspirant for a Band Leader's Warrant is organizing prospective musicians and completing final details relative to securing sufficient instruments.

Offering members of the regiment an opportunity to advance along formal educational lines, a Literacy School has been established and, to date, has graduated 114 men who have reached the prescribed level for this course. The Army Orientation Program is being introduced throughout the units and many persons are availing themselves of the opportunity of carrying on training in various fields in the hopes of completing college courses in the future.

The Army Orientation series are finding many interested followers and movies pertinent to that course have been seen by all members of the regiment. Various methods are used to keep the men aware of day-by-day happenings on the foreign and home front and even greater instruction is planned for the immediate future.

With the many opportunities for mental, physical, and mechanical advancement, it is gratifying to know that the personnel has taken advantage of them to such an extent that Colonel Frank J. Vida, the regimental commander, has recently issued a message of commendation to the members of his command.

2-Day Bomb Reconnaissance Course Given

A two-day course in bomb reconnaissance for representative officers and non-commissioned officers from every school, tactical, and station complement unit on the post and conducted by Captain W. G. Calder, assistant bomb disposal officer for the Fourth Service Command Headquarters at Atlanta, was concluded Saturday, according to Lieut. Col. C. A. Will, Fort Benning director of plans and training.

The classes by Captain Calder consisted of lectures demonstrated with blackboard illustrations, slides, motion pictures filmed in England, and items of enemy material brought to this country from England, Australia and Africa.

Purpose of the course was to train officers and non-coms to recognize the effects of air raids, to distinguish between unexploded bombs and bombs which have gone off and between dangerous and harmless objects which fall from the air—and thus to be in a position to save life and minimize danger which might result from bombs which have not yet exploded. Members of the class also were taught the proper method of reporting unexploded bombs and the means of bringing bomb disposal personnel to the incident with the minimum loss of time.

NEUTRALIZATION

The actual neutralization of enemy bomb fuses, a specialized procedure which can be performed only by bomb disposal officers who have graduated from the U. S. Army Bomb Disposal School at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., is the responsibility of the bomb disposal branch of the ordnance department, according to Captain Calder.

These bomb disposal units are stationed at strategic points in this country and abroad and are prepared to function as soon as bomb reconnaissance personnel have put indicents in the proper categories and paved the way, Captain Calder, a bomb disposal expert and a graduate of the Aberdeen school, stated. Bomb disposal officer for the Fourth Service Command is Lt. Col. Roy Collier.

The course at Fort Benning, which was organized and arranged by Colonel Will, was held at Theater No. 2 on the main post.

Watch any position you have selected for observation for 15 minutes before occupying it to make sure it is not tenanted by the enemy.

DIANE PSAKI, 18 year old American girl of Greek descent, knows what it means to be under the Nazi heel. That's why she is investing her money in War Bonds. An employee of the office of the director of supply at Benning, Col, Stephen B. Massey, Miss Psaki was in Athens when the Nazis occupied her country. She was able to get out of the country but her mother was too ill to be moved. The latter is still in Greece. Mess Sarge Solves Lead Pellet Mystery

By PVT. WALTER MILLER
Academic Regiment

"Lemme se your mess card, Pvt. Chowhound."

"Er—I left in in the office, sarge."

"Do tell, Pvt. Chowhound. Strange, is it not, that I know its appearance by heart? Now put aside that tray. Step out of that chow-line. Explain to the mess-sarge why a shackman is eating breakfast here whe nhis mess-card says 'Dinner Only.' Go ahead, fellows, go ahead."

"Guilty conscience?"

"No—I want to eat all my meals in the barracks from now on."

"How flattering. Your marriage is not washed out, I trust."

"Please, sarge, please, before I break down in front of all these men—"

BUCK UP, MAN

"Buck up, man. I've seen GI's with more courage than that as they thought up an alibi. After all, all you can get the first time is a week in the kitchen."

"I swear, sarge, I swear by my stripeless sleeves, this is the truth. Oh, put me to work in the kitchen, so I can forget everything—"

"Tough, eh?"

"That I expected. After all, I love her, I'm willing to make a few concessions. But here was a new angle. Lead pellets in my food. Me insured to the limit and she the beneficiary and trying to kill me with—hunks of—lead—in my biscuits—oh, sarge—"

"Tell me all the sad details. What did you do?"

I LOVE HER

"Sarge, I love her, I couldn't do anything. Even when I mashed a molar to powder, nearly ruined my teeth altogether. Even when the metal hurt my tongue I could not do anything. I just choked up when I took the lead out of my mouth, I put it into my pocket, I kissed her tenderly as she stood over the stove making pancakes, and left—"

"Probably lead in the pancakes too, huh."

"I couldn't wait to find out. I fled without a word, knowing I could never return—"

"Lemme see those pellets."

"Here. Scattered all through the batter, see?"

"Chowhound, call up your wife and apologize."

Chowhound looked at the mess-sergeant with mingled feelings. Hope, amazement, fear, consternation cancelled each othe rout as he tried again and again to express one or the other.

STRAINED LEAD

"KP, bring me that sieve full of pellets. See those, Chowhound? We strained that lead out of the evaporated milk this morning. The tin conservation program has made it necessary to use a solder very low in tin content. Lead pellets drop into the milk when the solder is used at an excessive heat. We have to sieve them out."

"Out of my way, sarge. I've got to telephone my wife."

"When you make up, tell her to buy a sieve. Then come back for breakfast—we'll make an exception this morning."

* * *

Pvt. Chowhound vanished from the mess-hall.

"KP," the sergeant said, "you'd better get that Post Memorandum No. 58 posted on the bulletin board. The one explaining about the pellets and how they're harmless and how we're straining them out anyhow."

Third Regiment Operates 30-Acre Farm Tract

Produce Supplies Unit Mess With Variety Of Fresh Vegetables

Fare on the mess tables of the personnel and candidates of the Third Student Training Regiment Harmony Church, will be supplemented shortly by wide varieties of fresh vegetables from the regiment's own farm.

Capt. Hugh D. Coleman, executive officer of the Service Battalion, is supervisor of the 30-acre tract. The land has been cultivated by the Second Regiment for approximately two years and passed to the control of the Third Regiment on June 15 of this year.

The farm is located in the Black Hawk section about three miles from the regimental area. "Roasting ears" for two full weeks are promised to the regiment from the 22 acres planted in corn, Capt. Colman revealed. Watermelons also will be added to menus when vines covering an acre and one-half of ground bear. Another section of the same size will provide watermelons in August.

Capt. Coleman directed that 4,000 tomato plants be added to the 1,000 already in when the farm was taken over. Other produce which the land will yield includes cantaloupes, beans, squash and radishes.

A long-range system of crop rotation is planned by Capt. Coleman, who learned husbandry on his father's farms. A civilian overseer works daily on the Second Regiment's land. Personnel from the Service Battalion and experienced farmers till the soil.

LONG PROMOTED

Second Lieutenant Robert C. Long, assistant special service officer at Service Club No. 5, has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant, according to an announcement of the Infantry School.

OUR ALASKAN OUTPOSTS had a rare treat recently when lovely Marjorie Reynolds appeared to sing and dance! Here she maps out her jaunt for canteen guests back home and shows them a fur parka presented to her by the Army. The Royal Crown Cola treat is on her, too!

STARRING IN HOLLYWOOD and making tours keep Marjorie busy. That's why Royal Crown Cola is her "quick-up." Marjorie went for Royal Crown Cola when she took the cola taste-test. She tried leading colas in paper cups. Says, "My winner—Royal Crown Cola!".

BY SGT. CARL NEU

BENNING MAY be the scene of an unusual baseball tourney sometime in September according to plans which are now being formulated by the Fort Benning Athletic Association in cooperation with the Sportsmen's Club of Columbus. The idea is to stage a tournament for colored nines from camps throughout the southeastern states. Feelers issued by Lieut. Jack Gushin, 3rd STR Panther coach who has done much to promote colored athletics here, indicate that teams from nine camps would be interested. Those, added to at least three Benning entries, would make a 12-team entry list. Approximately half of the games would be played at Gowdy Field with the remainder being contested at Golden Park in downtown Columbus. Tourney would run about five days and should produce some bang-up baseball. Idea sounds terrific and we'll let you know of developments.

NOW THAT football seems definitely on the way, the various regiments on the post are scouring their personnel lists for talent. Imagine the joy that prevails in the 300th Infantry where four full-fledged All-Americans hold sway. Expected to play for the Triplets this fall are Joe Routt, great Texas A. and M. guard; Ermal Allen, Kentucky's famed scat-back; Al Solari, U. C. L. A. left half who made the longest run of the day in the Rose Bowl tilt just last January, and Bob Friedlund, Michigan State right end, who will coach the 300th gridders.

BOB FRIEDLUND

After his days as a star flank with the Spartans, the Triplet tutor captained the Northern forces in the annual Blue-Gray battle over Montgomery way and then had signed a pro contract with the Philly Eagles when he was called into service. Last fall Friedlund was selected by Colonel Bob Neyland for the Eastern All-Army squad and played the season as varsity right end before returning to Benning. He rated good press notices in several of the games and hopes to perform equally well for the 300th this fall in addition to handling the coaching reins.

SPEAKING OF footballers, the 3rd Student Training Regiment wouldn't do too badly either if they could just hold on to all the ex-collegiate stars who are now passing through the unit on their path to gold bar days. In the regiment now are George Poschner, the Georgia Bulldog who used to grab Sinky's passes; Andy Dudish, flashy Georgia back; Bob Waterfield, U. C. L. A.'s great triple-threater of Rose Bowl fame; Forest Ferguson, Florida's All-American end; Henry (Chief) Bauer, former star quarterback for the Nebraska Cornhuskers; Big John Rucker, V. P. I. guad, and J. L. Robinson, husky Baylor tackle, not to mention many others from smaller schools.

WAAC WINS might be the title of this little yarn. Anyhow, it happened Sunday when a group of G. I's accompanied by some WAAC lovelies journeyed out to the Straus estate beyond Columbus for the regular weekly swim party which is sponsored by the Special Service Office. Along with the other festivities, an impromptu softball game got under way between the WAACs and the soldier lads. Midway in the game, there was a collision between the WAAC shortstop and a soldier who was racing from second to third. For a moment both parties of the crash faltered in midair practically. Then guess who toppled to the ground? You're right—the soldier, and the other players had to revive him while the WAAC re-arranged her rumpled hair and stumped over to the sidelines to catch her breath. Some women, these G. I. females!

TOUGH TANKERS from the 764th Battalion out Harmony Church way are going to give everybody plenty of competition in the second-half TIS race. Led by fiery, versatile Dib Williams, the Tankers have already stopped the 300th and dropped a tough decision to the Spirits of 176. Tonight they take on the Academic Profs in an arc-light affray at 8:30 in Gowdy Field and who knows but what they won't step up and slap down the current post champs.

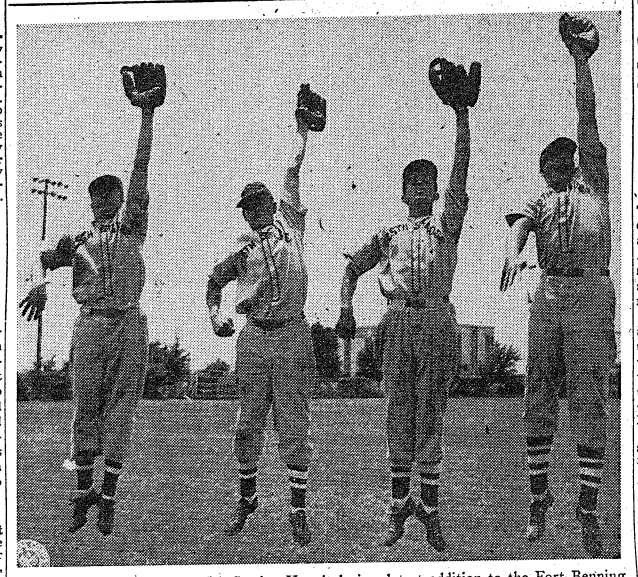
Williams, incidentally, is the only veteran major leaguer now cavorting on the local diamonds. Dib spent more than ten years in the big time, first with the Athletics and then with the Boston Red Sox, before descending to double-A ball a couple years prior to joining the colors. We can vividly remember being a member of the A's Knothole Gang back in the early thirties when Dib first took over the second base job on the Athletics, replacing Maxie Bishop. Williams was always a popular performer in Philly and he still is at Benning where many fans would like to see his Tankers crash through to the loop title.

DIB WILLIAMS

LAWSON FIELD'S crack softball team, which does quite a bit of travelling around the country in between post loop tilts, dropped a heart-breaking decision over Birmingham way last week to the Industrial League All-Stars of the Magic City. Earl Varchminn, who did the hurling for the Fliers, chucked a one-hit game but his team went down, 5-2. A scratch bunt was the only hit collected off the star hurler, but five walks and a poor lighting system which resulted in seven passed balls by the Lawson catcher did irreparable damage. For one Flier it was a return to the old stamping grounds. Major George Gorman, Lawson's crack first-baseman, was for many years a star softballer in Birmingham circles and also had a fling at Southern Association baseball with the Barons. He celebrated his return home by slapping a long double in the ninth, but the effort was all in vain.

IF YOU THINK that the nation's former grid athletes aren't doing their bit in this business of war, listen to this. Irv Mendelson, one of the great guards in the Ivy league with Pennsylvania a couple years back, dropped by to say hello last week, and informed us that every one of the 33 members of the Red and Blue's 1940 varsity squad is now wearing a service uniform. Frankie Reagan, the All-American tailback, is a Marine Corps captain, while Len Warner, a great end, is also a captain in the Army overseas, and all of the other boys are serving in some capacity. Mendelson, a real watch-charm guard who was selected on several All-Eastern teams, is now attending the enlisted radio operators school here. Pardon the boost for the Penn men, but a guy ought to be allowed to say something about his alma mater in a column once in a while.

JOHNNY WILSON



THIRD MAN in the ring a week from tomorrow night when the Panthers take on Tuskegee in an inter-camp ring card at Doughboy Stadium will undoubtedly be Johnny Wilson, Benning's number one boxing referee. The 1st STR top-kick is a right familiar figure up there in that squared circle and rates a real orchid for his efficiency as an Army ring official. His ability backed up by years of experience in post boxing circles, first as welter-weight champ for three years while in the 29th Infantry, and later as coach of both the Two-Niners and the post team.

Referee Wilson isn't always too popular with the crowd, but that's because ring crowds always want blood, which is okay in pro circles but not so good in the Army where every man is trained to fight the enemy and not injure himself in the squared circle. Johnny always works a fight with that in mind. He keeps the bouts plenty interesting, but is ever alert and cautious to see that neither puncher gets injured to the point where it might impair his military performance. That's the kind of men we need as a ref in Army boxing, regardless of the crowd's opinion.

SHORT SHOTS—Pete Crumpler, one of several good pitchers on the 176th Spirits, is now the proud daddy of a baby girl. . . . Capt. Maurice Dozier, well-known court referee during the past winter's hectic season, is now serving as special service officer with the 17th Infantry up at Fort Jackson. . . . Before he took the hill on Sunday against the 300th Infantry, left-hander Eden DeVolder of the 6th Training Eagles, had hurled 18 consecutive scoreless innings. . . . Major Leslie Parker, post laundry officer, is a most ardent Gowdy Field fan ,but he sees much more whitewashing at work than he's seen in the park since the hitters have gone on their recent rampage. . . . The new Gator hurler, Ewell Blackwell, won 19 games for Syracuse last year in the International. . . . Frank Monan and Harry P. Kleinsmith, 3rd STR officer candidates, were members of the 1942 Niagara (N. Y.) University's rifle team which won the Hearst national championship. . . . One lad who wishes Joe Louis would visit Benning on his impending camp tour is Eddie Jackson, Panther heavyweight, who would be willing to box an exhibition with the champ. . . . Lt. Col. Charles C. (Casey) Finnegan, popular post athletic officer, is recuperating at the station hospital after a tonsilectomy. Says he's getting in shape for the grid campaign. . . . Lieut. Johnny Cudmore, who coached the 117th Breakers on the gridiron last fall, is now a company commander in the 515th Parachutes over Alabama way. . . . Congrats to Herb Moore, Prof diamond tutor, who just received his silver bars. Finis.

Wissman Hurls Spirit Nine To 12-Inning Win

In the greatest game of the year Tuesday night, the raging Spirits of the 176th Infantry slammed out a ringing 5-2 triumph over the Academic Profs in the 12th inning to step into undisputed possession of first place in the Infantry School League.

It was truly a ball game to end all ball games as the seemingly unbeatable Spirits broke loose with a stirring five-hit barrage in the top half of the 12th to break up a beautiful pitching duel between Lefty Wissman and Rudy Rundus.

A crowd of almost 5,000 fans sat through the entire ball game in a state of tension, and when the 176th men burst the game wide open in the final inning, the stands were in a frenzy of excitement. It was a ball game that could probably never be duplicated for thrills and excitement.

For eleven thrill-packed innings Wissman and Rundus, both of whom once toiled for the Rochester Internationals, hurled matchless ball. It was apparent, however that sooner or later one had to give way and Rundus was the victim of his mound rival Wissman leading the attack on him by opening the fatal 12th with a single.

After Reed had sacrificed the Spirit hurler to second, Richardson lined out to third and it looked like Rundus might escape trouble. But the remarkable Shuffle Lohr again clicked in the pinch with a double down the right field foul line to score Wissman. Ramazotti and Poland followed with singles and Rundus finally gave way to Dickinson who was promptly greeted with a single by Pat Cooper which put the clincher on things.

It was Cooper's pinch-hit single in the ninth which helped the Spirits to rally and tie up the ball game after they had fallen behind in the last of the eighth. Ramazotti opened with a single, was sacrificed to second and moved to third on Cooper's hit which was held to a single on a brilliant stop by Ben Zientara. Then Sam Sodowsky laid down a perfect bunt to push Ram across with the tying run.

After four scoreless frames at the start of the game, the Spirits grabbed the advantage in the fifth when Sodowsky, who had doubled and been sacrificed to third, scored on a wild pitch by Rundus. The Profs knotted the count in the seventh when Cox got two bases on a muff by Poland and scored on a solid double by Ross Fenno. Ben Zientara's two-bagger, an infield single by Herb Moore and Elmer Niebler's wallop to right gave the Academics their short-lived advantage in the eighth.

Brilliant fielding by both teams featured the tilt with Benny Zientara, Prof second sacker, as the standout performer. At least six times during the game, the former Cincy Red contributed almost impossible stops to cut off Spirit hits. Bob Ramazotti, Spirit shortstop, also scintillated on several plays, and contributed three hits for the winners.

Wissman, who has succeeded in pitching the Spirits into first place, hurled a beautiful ball game. He gave up just eight hits over the enire 12 inning route, and was strong in the pinches. Once again his deceptive motions on the mound trapped two Prof baserunners and cut off incipient rallies by the first-half champs.

Player-Manager Gives Up Pro Baseball Career To Enter Business

Key figure in the workmanlike baseball displayed in the Infantry School League by the 6th Training Regiment is George Simmons, coach of the Eagles, who gave up a promising professional diamond career over ten years ago to enter private business. Rated as the best catcher at the post, Simmons is also considered one of the leading managers of any post nine.

Second Lieutenant George E. Simmons was born in Paterson, New Jersey, on November 12, 1911. His home is still in that city, at 841 East 29th Street.

SCHOOL CAPTAIN

He attended Paterson Eastside High School from 1926-1930. While there he was active in soccer and hockey as well as baseball, captaining the school nine in his last year. He was the catcher of the club and led it in hitting.

Upon graduation from high school he joined the Morris Plains team in the Lackawanna League (semi-pro, but good ball) and in 1931, attending Syracuse University, he caught for the Orange Frosh baseball team.

JOINS JERSEY CITY

In 1932 he joined his father in their established paint and decoration business, pausing only to play with Summit and (again) Morris Plains of the Lackawanna League. In 1933 he joined the Jersey City ball club of the International League. He stayed with Jersey City, as a catcher, until late in the season, thereupon returning to his father's business and having no further brushes with organized baseball.

In '34 he joined a team organized in Paterson by Charley Jamieson, erstwhile Cleveland outfielder and teammate of Tris Speaker. Jamieson's Red Sox used Catcher Simmons from 1934 until 1940 which was Lt. Simmons last baseball season.

TOUGH COMPETITION

In those years the Red Sox met the best competition in the New York Metropolitan League. Simmons crossed bats with men of the House of David, Bay Parkways, Springfield Grays and Black Yankees, to name only a few of the powerful, high-grade semi-pro teams that make up the star-producing "sandlot" baseball of metropolitan New York.

Simmons has met and played against literally hundreds of New York ball players who have gone up to the majors, Hank Greenberg, Frank McCormick, Hank Borowy, Johnny Vandermeer, Buddy Hassett, Marius Russo, Babe Young and many many more occupy their niches in George Simmons baseball memories (!!) (Just had to get that off my chest, Ed.)

Joining the 47th Infantry in 1941, Simmons helped organize the team in that outfit, but neither played nor managed the club.

BRIGADE MANAGER

His first baseball since the summer of 1940 was this last spring when he donned the mask and shinguards on behalf of the Student Training Brigade nine. He managed and caught that club to second place in the first half of TIS league schedule. Now he has the powerful Eagles under his direction, and their record will attest to his ability both as catcher and baseball tactics prognosticator. He is currently (as of Monday, July 19th) batting .254 and is undeniably the best catcher in the league.

GEORGE SIMMONS

Reeves Is Ring Coach In 300th

Former TCU Star Named To Post

Lieut. Roger E. Reeves, a former Texas Christian University all-around athlete, has been named boxing coach of the 300th Infantry by Col. J. H. Hunt, Jr., the regimental commander, according to an announcement made this week.

Triplet fans herald the appointment of Reeves as an ideal choice since the Company "F" officer has long been interested in the ring sport both as a competitor and a booster of boxing as a perfect means of physical conditioning.

ALSO A PITCHER

Reeves is currently serving as a member of the 300th pitching corps with the Triplet entry in the TIS league race. He won two and dropped two decisions in the first-half, and spent the rest of his time in the coaching box guiding the Triplets on the base paths.

An all-around athlete, the big fellow participated in football, baseball and boxing for the Horned Frogs of T.C.U. during his undergraduate days. During 1940 and 1941, he was a runner-up in the all-Texas Golden Glove competition in the heavyweight class.

WELL-KNOWN BOXER

Reeves has also done a lot of amateur boxing in his home state of New York and was particularly well-known throughout the boxing circles of Syracuse and Buffalo. The re-entry of the Triplets into post boxing circles after a lay-off since last winter will be widely welcomed since the 300th boasts several crack ringmen, particularly in the lightweight brackets.

Tentative plans call for a series of inter-company bouts to determine the membership of the regimental team. The program is open to all members of the regiment, and Lieut. Reeves has urged all potential ringmen to start getting into condition right away

6th Training Wins Sunday Tilt, 11-6

The high-flying Eagles of the 6th Regiment swooped down on the 300th Triplets in the late innings of their game Sunday at Gowdy Field and garnered nine runs to overcome a four-run deficit and win 11-6. They got to Triplet hurlers Francis and Cave for 9 hits and as many runs.

Jim Prendergast, who relieved Ed DeVolder on the hill in the 6th inning, was the winning pitcher. In the eighth, 4 hits, two Triplet misplays and a base on balls gave the Eagles 5 runs. Six hits in the ninth added four runs more. Red Kemether and Jim Wright both hit safely twice in the rally innings with Oswald, McCluskey, Simmons, Gallivan and Ryan also getting bingles.

OSWALD ERRS

Earlier, the Triplets had capitalized on second-baseman Oswald's errors for single runs in the first and second innings. They earned all four runs in the fourth inning, stretching a walk and three hits for four runs. One of these hits was Sam DiBlasi's home run over the left field wall.

The Eagles play at Harmony Church on Sunday, meeting the 3rd STR Rifles. The game will start at 2:30 p. m.

Triplets	. .	110	400	000	—	6	8	4

DeVolder, Prendergast (6) and Simmons. Francis, Cave (8) and Kucab, Van Horn (8).

Schultz Hurls 176th To Win Over Rifles

The 176th Infantry Spirits defeated the Benning Rifles 5-2 last Friday night. "Shuffle" Lohr continued his "in the clutch" hitting getting three hits and bringing in two runs. "Guzzler" Richardson got a home run in the second inning with the bases empty.

The game was featured by Francis Schultz's pitching with ten strike-outs in nine innings. Ram Ramazotti once again played good defensive ball at short-stop. On one play he went back of second to snare a ball that was tagged "hit" and flipped it to "Skeeter" Reed to get the man out.

Henry Kozlowski, who in March broke the 50-yard free style record Duke Kahnamoku put on the books 20 years ago, now is in the Army at Fort Sheridan, Ill., and hopes to become a paratrooper.

Infantry School Race Resolves Into Battle Royal of Four Rivals

Spirits, Profs, Eagles, Gators Involved In Dog-fight For Flag

BY SGT. MILTON LUBAN

When the rampaging 176th Spirits topped the first-half post championship Prof team Tuesday they gained first place, but the first week and a half of Infantry School league baseball clearly shows the race for second-half crown is going to be a dog fight among the 176th, the Academic Regiment, the 6th Training Regiment and the 124th, with the 764th Tanks ready to knock over any team that lets up for one moment.

Perched on top are the Spirits with four wins to their record, while the Profs won their first game played, a 16 to 4 slaughter of the 244th Field Artillery; then lost to the 176th

TWO MORE SCALPS

The Spirits, opening with a tense 2-0 win over the 124th Gators, added two more scalps to their collection, beating the 3rd STR Rifles, 5-2, and then winning a free-hitting thriller from the 764th Tanks, 10-7.

The Gators bounced back from their opening defeat to hand the 6th Training Regiment Eagles an 8 to 3 trouncing, the worst licking the Eagles have taken all season. Ewell Blackwell made his pitching debut for the Gators and proved that with him and Christie, the 124th will have about the toughest mound corps in the league.

CHRISTIE WINS

On Sunday the scrappy Gators took over the Rifles, 5 to 4, coming from behind to do it. Lew Christie pitched five-hit ball and drove in the winning run himself with a slashing ninth inning single. The Gators have the pitching, a brilliant catcher in Stoker and a sensational center-fielder in Smith. But the infield portion of the center line from catcher to center-field is where the Gators need strengthening. Give the 124th a sounder keystone combination and there'd be no stopping the team.

The Eagles looked fair in losing to the Gators and bad in beating the 300th. They had to overcome a six-run handicap to take the Triplets with Francis' wildness and Cave's poor relief hurling contributing more to the Eagle victory than anything the Eagles did. However, the Eagles are tough, and it was just lucky for them that they were able to get a bad game out of their systems and still win.

300TH LOOKS BAD

The 300th has looked bad in both its games. But the Triplets looked just as bad in the opening of the first-half schedule and then turned around and almost set the league on fire. There is still a chance that Lefty Francis can whip his boys into the fight. If Lefty can get himself into last year's form he is capable of pitching his team into first place himself.

In the Eagle game Francis allowed only two hits but handed out 10 walks. Last season when the southpaw gave up two walks in one game he was off form. In Sunday's game he showed flashes of his old brilliance, and if he really gets himself into condition the Triplets will yet prove a headache to the league leaders.

PROFS. VS. TANKS

Tonight the Profs will play their postponed game with the Tanks, the contest getting under way at 8:30 as the second game of a Gowdy Field double-header.

3rd STR vs. Academic Regt. at Gowdy Field and 244th vs. 176th at Harmony Church, Wednesday night.

176th Captures Thriller From 764th Tankers

Gain 10-7 Verdict In See-Saw Tilt Before Big Crowd

By PVT. AL SHAPIRO

The 176th Infantry Spirits defeated the 764th Tankers Sunday night before packed stands at Gowdy Field by a score of 10-7. The game was one of those "knock-'em-down-and tear-'em-apart" affairs with thrills riding on every pitch. The box-office appeal of the Spirits once again was displayed as the oddest of plays developed on the diamond.

COOPER STARTS

Pat Cooper started for the Spirits, working six innings. During that time he struck out thirteen men. But Cooper left the game with the score tied up at six-all. Francis Schultz relieved Pat in the first half of the seventh and was credited with his fifth win of the season against no defeats.

The Spirits started off "hot." In their half of the first inning they scored five runs. "Guzzler" Richardson got a single, moving to second on "Shuffle" Lohr's sacrifice. Bob Ramazotti was safe at first on an error and made second while Richardson raced home with the first run.

HARLOW HITS

Harlow then hit a single sending Ramazotti home from second with the second run. Sadowsky the next man up hits a single moving the fleet Harlow to third. "Skeeter" Reed was the next man up. It was two out and two runs had scored. Skeeter hit a ground rule double sending in Harlow, Sadowsky being held up at third. Suchara the next man up was given an intentional walk, loading the bases. Cooper, the next man up, singled in Sadowsky and Reed with the fifth Spirit run on five hits and one error.

The Spirits scored another run in the last half of the second when Reed was safe at first on an error and stole second. Suchara the next man up, hit a double sending Reed with the sixth Spirit run. The Spirits forged ahead in the last half of the seventh when Suchara again sent Reed in with a sharp single along the third base line, making the score at the moment 7-6.

TANKERS TIE

In their half of the eighth the Tankers got a run tieing up the old ball game. And then the fireworks started. That last half of the eighth was full of enough thrills to satisfy even the most ardent baseball fan.

"Hitch" Poland, r. f., struck out on a third strike, but raced to first when the ball got away from the Tanker catcher. Joe Cortazzo the Spirit first base coach kept him moving to second as the catcher fumbled the ball. Poland, nearing second, dove headfirst into the bag in a spectacular close play at the base.

WISSMAN PINCH-HITS

The next man, Richardson was given an intentional walk. Lohr then sacrificed sending Poland to third, and Richardson to second. Ramazotti was given an intentional walk, loading the bases. Harlow was taken out, and Wissman went in as a pinch hitter.

The fans in the stands yelled for a hit, and Lefty hit a tremendous double. Poland scored from third. Richardson was out at the plate in a close play, but Ramazotti running all the way from first, at top speed, slid in right on top of Richardson with the second run. Ram was only a few seconds later than Richardson, and the surprised catcher was too starteled to tag him out until Ram had crossed the plate and was safe. Only then did the catcher apply the ball, but it was too late.

Wissman made third while the hullaballoo went on around home plate. Sadowsky the next man up singled Wissman in with the tenth Spirit run.

PIN-UP QUEENS

"IGLOO QUEEN" of Aleutian Forces (Mary Elliott)

"GREMLIN CHARMER" for R.A.F. (Frances Rafferty)

JANE RUSSELL, wife of O. C. Bob Waterfield of the 3rd STR, now resides in Columbus. She aids the war effort by selling bonds at the WRBL bond tank in downtown Columbus.

24th Company, 1st TR, Takes Softball Title

After a long, hot, gruelling six week session, the 24th Company, of the First Student Training Regiment, TIS, went ahead to win the second intra-company softball tournament, thereby retaining the huge red and white pennant denoting the softball champions of the 4th Battalion, First Student Training Regiment.

This second tournament was to a great extent unlike the first. In the first series it was requested that every enlisted cadre man in each company play at least two innings. This made it a little more difficult for companies to put out a consistently strong team. Also one officer was allowed to play with each company team. However, in this second series companies were allowed to play any men they wished and officers were not allowed to participate.

CLOSE RACE

After a week's play in the current series the 19th, 21st and 24th companies jumped ahead of the other companies in the battalion. Near the end of the six weeks, the 21st Company dropped behind, and it became a race to the finish between the 19th and 24th Companies.

As the games ended and the dust cleared away it was found that the 19th and 24th Companies were at the top of the league and were tied for first place. This necessitated a play off between these two companies.

Both teams played head-up softball, and really fought it out for the championship. Both the 19th and 24th Companies teams exhibited excellent pitching, fielding, hitting, and team cooperation. However, the 24th Company easily nosed out the 19th by winning the first and second playoff games 17 to 1 and 26 to 0 respectively.

A great deal of credit is due to Pvt. Kull, pitcher, Pfc. Boudreaux, catcher, and to the fine fielding and hitting of Pvt's Kent, Shouse, Pfc. Coyle, Leahy, Lofg, and T-4. Cataldo which made it possible for the 24th Company to win the second softball series and retain the championship pennant.

Lt. James B. Hines, former gridiron and mat star of North Carolina State, and football and wrestling coach at the University of North Carolina, now is at Hendricks Field as junior director of physical training. Also at Hendricks Field is Lt. E. L. Jenkins, outstanding pitcher and versity basketball performer at Duke University, from which school he went into minor league baseball where he was successful as a playing manager.

Zimbalist's Son Takes Course In 3rd Regiment

Son of the great Russian violinist, Effrem Zimbalist, Jr., is an officer candidate in the 20th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, it was learned this week. Zimbalist has twice traveled around the world and has studied piano at the Kiev and Moscow conservatories of music. Before being called into service, he was gaining a reputation as an actor.

Upon returning to the United States after his sojourn abroad, he embarked on his chosen field and was quite successful and progressed rapidly until the time we went to war. Gone suddenly were the gay nights and the dazzling lights of Broadway. War meant dirt, stench and sweat — and Efrem was right there to take it along with the rest of them. Russia was at war along with the United States.

The strains of a violin played by a great master were slowly dying. It was up to young Efrem to help set the world free again so the notes of that great music could still be heard without restraint—so the world could once again listen to music of the masters instead of the unsteady beat of roaring guns and whistling bullets.

Mayor Hopkins In, Out, In Again As Village Head

All's quiet along the Chattahoochee and the storm has subsided in Baker Village and Benning Park.

First Sgt. Percy I. Hopkins, the in-again, out-again "mayor" of the government housing project, is back again, resuming both his duties at Fort Benning and as head of the civic bovernment of the communities.

So now the newly-adopted charter can be put away after it was gettin gpretty well thumbed as the city commissioners and others diligently were trying to figure out just what to do under the circumstances.

"Mayor"-Sergeant Hopkins had been ordered to Auburn College for Army Specialized Training a day or so after his election, first one in the communities' history. That left things pretty well up in the air, with nobody certain just what the charter called for in the way of action.

But today Sergeant Mayor Hopkins is back, taking up his previous duties at Fort Benning. He explained that there had been some mix-up about his qualifications for ASTP and that he had bee nordered back to duty at the post.

Block Dance Slated Saturday In Columbus

A block dance will be held in Columbus on Saturday night July 24 from 7 o'clock until midnight (CWT) under the auspices of the Army-Navy Y. M. C. A. and Service Clubs No. 4 and 5 of Harmony Church Area and the Main Post. The festivities will take place in that portion of Fifth Avenue in Columbus between 8th and 9th streets and music will be provided by the Reception Center orchestra.

The sponsors of the affair are E. E. Farley, J. T. Fagan, A. T. Wilson, George Dorsey and Miss Buella A. Grey, directors of the Army-Navy "Y" of Columbus, Miss Bernice Smith, and Lieutenant Robert C. Long of Service Club No. 5 and Mrs. Nell Blackshear of Service Club No. 4.

The dance is the first of a series of such entertainments scheduled to be held throughout the summer, the second of which will occur on August 28. Soldiers of Fort Benning are invited to attend.

Ken Heintzelman, ex-Pirate pitcher, now is at Fort Riley (Kan.) Cavalry Replacement Training Center, along with Pete Reiser, formerly of the Dodgers and Frank Crespi, once of the Cardinals.

Colonel Croft Classification Officer ASTP

Lt. Colonel Lysle W. Croft, former personnel director at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky, has been named classification officer of the Army Specialized Training Program Basic Training Center of The Infantry School according to an announcement by Colonel Sevier R. Tupper, commanding officer of the new training unit.

Colonel Croft, a graduate of the University of Kentucky where he recived his Ph. D. degree in applied psychology as well as his reserve officer's commission, comes to the training center from the Replacement and School Command at Birmingham where, for the past six months, he has done research work in the methods of examining and grading the in-coming selectee so that each might be placed to the best advantage for the war effort.

From 1934 to 1941 Colonel Croft was an instructor in psychology and also personnel director at the University of Kentucky. He entered extended active military duty March 27, 1941 as an instructor in R. O. T. C. at his alma mater and remained at the Bluegrass state school until the following March when he was detailed to the Armored Force School at Fort Knox, Kentucky to pursue a course in Tank Orientation.

Body of MP, Victim Of Heart Attack, Sent to Pittsburgh

Funeral services for Pvt. Fred Dauncey, of the Fort Benning military police who died of heart attack Saturday, were conducted in Pittsburgh where his body was sent Monday.

Private Dauncey, who was married to Miss Edna Grace Hoover only a week prior to his death, was on duty in Columbus at the time of his attack. He complained of pains and was taken to the Doctors building, but died in a few minutes.

His body was accompanied by Mrs. Dauncey and an escort of military police to the private's home.

PROMOTED

Two non-commissioned officers of Detachment, Finance Department, Fourth Service Command, Fort Benning, have been promoted to higher grades, according to an announcement from post headquarters. Technician Fourth Grade Sylvan Askin has been raised to technician third grade, and Technician Fourth Grade Robert Sattler has been promoted to technician fourth grade.

Shell Creek Bivouac Area Seasons Troops

Gives Valuable Field Experience To Infantrymen

Something new has been added to the curriculum of the Infantry School. The disciples of the "Queen of Battles" attending the basic and officer candidate classes are now being introduced to the Shell Creek Bivouac area—known to many by a shorter name which is arrived at by dropping the prefix "S" in Shell.

The bivouac area is designed to give the soldier-students experiences in field maneuvrs approximating actual war-time conditions. They eat, sleep and live in the woods during this phase of their studies and most of them emerge from the wilds of the reservation with numerous scars of battle to show for their stay in the rough. Briars, poison ivy, chiggers, wood ticks, snakes, yellow jackets, and varoius other species of flora and fauna combine to give the unsuspecting students the works.

Initiation to the bivouac area is usually preceded by a long march in full field equipment from the vicinity of Weems Pond, along a route abounding in scenic beauty, but embracing many hills which are arduous to climb. Hence the first glimpse of the bivouac area is usually a welcome one to the tired and footsore troops. The sites are indeed pleasant ones, located as they are in the heart of a vast pine forest, intersected by clear, cool streams, and enhanced by scattered growths of edible fruits, such as plums and grapes. During certain seasons of the year the area is truly Nature's garden.

TWO AREAS

There are two bivouac areas and each are divided into company subsections, Area No. 1 being developed to accommodate two companies while Area No. 2 has facilities for three company units.

The selection of bivouac areas in this locality was a fortunate one, for in addition to making it possible for troops to gain experience in field bivouacs, the locations are such that troops occupy a central position with relation to the large areas given over to field training problems. A gigantic saving to the government, both in time and money, is made by the proximity of the bivouac to the field training areas, as such locations eliminate the necessity of transporting large numbers of students to and from their forest classrooms.

Bivouac Area No. 1, located near the old Shell Creek Antitank Ranke, is under the supervision of Lieut. J. A. Hoovler, 2nd STR, while Bivouac Area No. 2, located about two miles west of the intersection of Jamestown and Shell Creek roads, is supervised by Lieut. J. J. Mazur, 1st STR. Each class spends three days in one of these areas, making the bivouac their base, but living and eating in the field while undergoing instruction.

During this period the men receive instruction in proper camping methods, field sanitation, camouflage, disperson, and various techniques which may at some time in the near future operate to the advantage of soldiers far from barracks, bunks, hot baths, and other comforts of garrison life. While in camp the soldiers live in neatly pitched pup tents, scattered at odd intervals among the pines with the view of eaching and upholding the principles of dispersion and camouflage. The only buildings in the area are the cook shacks and latrines which are of a semi-permanent nature.

RIGID INSPECTIONS

These cook shacks and kitchens are inspected rigidly each day as are the grounds surrounding the camp proper. Field sanitation is practiced to the best of the Infantry School's teaching. Such expedients as making boilers and wash troughs of halved gas drums suspended over open fire-pits prove a practical solution of a hygenic problem with a minimum of expense. All elements of field sanitation are under the supervision of the Medical Corps, in addition to the supervision exercised by the officers responsible for the areas.

A beautiful supply of clean, pure water is assured by the Army water treating and filter plant. It is a portable unit set up on the steep bank of Shell Creek, and is capable of furnishing from 8 to 10 thousand gallons of pure water daily. The plant consists of two large canvas tanks, a chlorinating apparatus, a filter and two pumps. The water is drawn from the creek into one of the 3,000 gallon settling and storage tanks, then run through the chlorinator where harmful bacteria are destroyed. The purified water is then filtered and pumped to another 3,000 gallon storage tank. After the water has been tested for purity and palatability it is ready for delivery on waiting trucks.

Pfc. Albert P. Skowronski, Hq. Co. 3rd STA, is in charge of the plant, assisted by Pfc. Ernest A. Krueger, Hq. Co. 1st STR. One or the other of these men are at their lonely post in the forest at all times, to operate and guard the machinery, and to run the various tests that insure that every pint of water delivered to the company messes meet the medical requirements of purity, clearness, chemical content and taste.

COL. LIPSCOMB

Lt. Col. Harold J. Lipscomb, STB Supply Officer, exercises overall supervision of the water plant and other permanent installations, and it was under his direction in February, 1943, that the development of the bivouac areas was begun. The actual clearing of the ground, erection of buildings, and other construction was performed by GI labor from the Service Battalion of the 2nd STR, supervised by personnel of the Harmony Church branch of the Post Engineers. All materials used in the construction were obtained on the Fort Benning reservation.

Lt. Jas. Sweeney Made Captain

1st Lt. James B. Sweeney has been promoted to captain, according to word received at 1st STR headquarters.

Captain Sweeney, who is public relations officer of the regiment, is one of the outstanding contributors to The Bayonet. His cartoons and articles have enlivened the columns frim time to time. He also starred in the army cinema, "Lt. Smith, U. S. Army," playing the part of the tactical officer.

A graduate of Villanova college, Captain Sweeney is a philadelphian. Entering the business world after graduation from college, he was associated with the Anglo News company, and later a departmental manager of the Barron Collier Advertising organizzation.

In February, 1941, he joined the army. He rapidly rose from buck private to master sergeant during the course of his first year.

He was selected by his superior officers to pursue an officer candidate course at the Infantry school. In June, 1942, he graduated as a second lieutenant, and was immediately assigned to the First Student Training regiment.

Thought--For Food

BY THE DEPARTMENT OF MESS AND CAFETERIA SUPERVISION

This Department is at the service of Station Complement Food Service Units.. Those who serve and those who eat are invited to assist in a betterment effort. Call upon, or send suggestions or criticisms to: Lt. Clifford E. Clinton, Fort Benning Exchange. Phone 2224, 10 to 11 a. m.

IMPORTANT FORT BENNING FOOD CONFERENCE

During the week 19-24 July, there is being conducted by OMS four sessions (each identical) for food conference. One session will be reserved for commanding officers. Conferences will be 2-5 p. m. They will be educational and vital to all persons related to Fort Benning food and mess services. The following groups and their guests are urged to attend at least one session:

IT CAN BE DONE!

Four messes have been experimenting on a waste control program. The average overall edible waste per man was 1 1-2 lbs. per day (including vegetable preparation trimmings. Within one week this was brought to an average of ¾ lbs per man per day). So it can be done! When all messes meet this standard over 40,000 lbs. of food a day will be diverted from the garbage can. It's worth working for, at a time when food is our No. 1 essential for victory.

IDEA EXCHANGE

1. Bread: To prevent waste of sliced bread—Left bread slices can be laid in a batter of milk and eggs until saturate, sprinkled with cinnamon, sugar (or apple butter, etc.) and used as a bread crust (instead of a pie crust) to any fruit or cobbler ressert. This not only is a way to save waste bread but can help use up left over fruits and saves the flour and ingredients that otherwise would go into making pie crust for the dessert. Saturated bread slices can of course be fried—and make elegant French toast—with many possible variations, sprinkled with cinnamon sugar; spread with jellies, etc. (Suggested by Capt. Foster and M.-Sgt. Black of Reception Center).

2. Hot Weather Service: The men really enjoy our policy of having bottled soft drinks available in our mess during meal hours. We can make no profit—must buy them at 5 cents; but they are eagerly received these hot days—and, "set up" a meal—Incidentally they satisfy those who do not prefer other drinks. Lt. Stankus and Sgt. Scherer, 24th GH).

3. Smorgasbord: Several messes use in different ways the "Buffet table" idea. Have a table near the service line—men can pass on both sides if necessary. On this "Buffet" men help themselves—On it can be placed any items desired—Relishes, extra items made from "over" items, fruit, salads, breads, toasts—and many other hto day pleasures that can very the menu. This table in some messes is decorated nicely and adds much interest. In some messes, soup or ice cream is served from it! The men enjoy it.

YOU ASKED IT!

Your comments and criticisms help.

Q. "... man these are hot days! . . . yet our mess does not have ice water for us——"

A. This of course is a serious oversight — If you will speak to your mess sgt., or officer, feel sure this oversight will be corrected—If not contact your C. O. These are days when every mess should provide plenty of ice water—and cold drinks, especially the citrus fruit drinks. Thanks for comment.

Q. "... Our men won't eat soup... it's on the GI menu... what to do . . . ?"

A. If you can otherwise use the nutritive ingredients to better purpose, it is acceptable. But about one half the men will eat soup when properly prepared. This means work. Bones must be saved—a rich stock made—the soups made with care and not too greasy—and not overseasoned. The same ingredients however can be given the men in other ways—this requires even more work and planning. Stock from bones, and vegetable "overs"—can be used in a variety of ways—in gravies—vegetable mixtures — salad plates, etc. The important thing is that the men be not deprived of available nutrients.

Q. ". . . Why can't we have some cold food plates . . . once in a while—hot or cold we get a hot lunch, usually fried meat-potatoes, etc. . . . Can't this be changed? . . . We are not doing heavy work . . ."

A. Of course it can!—An excellent suggestion. When the ration items permit, a cold plate dinner may be featured. It can be done by dividing the meat or fish item—using half for the hot for those who prefer, and using the cold when suitable for a cold sliced or diced item—In cold salad or sliced meat plate—with such fruit or other vegetables that will combine. Potatoes may be divided so that meal—half made into salad. Variations Variations where comparable nutritive values are assured, and an added attraction gained, are highly desirable. They take a little more "THOT for FOOD"—and work—but that is the mission of the mess—to SERVE!

Q. ". . . I eat at . . . mess . . . They have started to sort out the waste brought back by the men . . . I notice that after a few days there is very little. . .but in our mess, officers also eat. They do not bring back trays—But I notice they often leave a lot of good food . . . Shouldn't officers save waste food too?"

A. Certainly. Officers should be examples in this regard. However there are often other factors entering—Officers are served often differently and do not always have the freedom of choice in quantity, for their plates—Where present method of service, contributes to waste—whether officers or men—it will as soon as possible be corrected. A waste control program such as being conducted by this Post is a large affair—and moves more slowly than all would like. It is gratifying to note that where saving methods have been put into effect—the men are showing almost immediate cooperation, and excellent spirit.

1st Regiment Hits Fatigue

Colonel Institutes Physical Culture For Tactical Officers

In order successfully to combat fatigue and liselessness caused by long hours of duty, the First Student Training Regiment, TIS, has instituted and put into force a physical training program for its permanent staff of officers.

Under the organization and guidance of the regimental commander, Colonel John S. Roosma, there has been allotted a specific time for each officer to devote at least two hours every week to athletics and exercise. These allotted periods have been arranged so that groups of officers throughout the Regiment will be ab le to meet on Glenn Field and combine their activities into group games. The participants in such sports will be organized into teams and allowed to make their choice of activities.

In order that each officer may feel free to relax and thoroughly enjoy himself, thereby getting more good out of the program, a list of activities have been drawn up from which a may may make a choice of either softball, volley ball, touch football, medicine ball, setting up exercises, golf, skimming, wrestling and, in fact, just about any activity that a man could wish for. This is strictly an athletic program to bring zest and pep into the lives of men who live long hours of supervisory work. A definite plan of athletics will make a man act and think in a more efficient manner.

MONOTONY FOUGHT

Colonel Roosma arrived at the decision to institute such a plan when, after close observation, he became aware of the fact that the average tactical officer arrived on the job before 8 a. m. every morning. He must make inspections, watch over the preparation of food in the various kitchens, supervise company affairs and, in general, stay constantly on the go until after the evening meal at 6:15 or 7 p. m.

Quite frequently it then became necessary for an officer to keep several previously arranged appointments with men of the student class. Thus, as Colonel Roosma pointe out, a man does not get, nor does he feel equal to, any time available to exercise.

Under the new plan, two afternoons per week have been set aside during which a man must avail himself of the opportunity to improve both his work and his health. To facilitate those men who are non-residents of the post, and whose athletic endeavors had heretofore been confined to riding a shack bus, a designated building has been set aside for lockers and showers. Old clothes or athletic shorts are the order of the day and emphasis is placed on exercise and good health.

The program was first announced and put into force the week of July 12. It immediately met with the approval of the officers concerned. Many of the men were found to have banded themselves into groups with a challenge that they can lick any other similar group of officers at any game they might care to choose. Sort of a "choose your own weapons affair." The spirit of competition runs high and good health is bound to follow.

AST Personnel Officers Named

Capts. Tague, Foster, Wallace Selected By Colonel Tupper

Colonel Sevier R. Tupper, commanding officer of the A. S. T. P. Basic Training Center of The Infantry School, has announced the appointment of Captain Robert G. Tague, of Columbus, O., as personnel officer of the new training center and Captain Richard H. Foster, of Decatur, Ill., and Captain George S. Wallace, Jr., of Huntington, W. Va., who is in charge of the machine service unit, as his assistants.

Captain Tague, a graduate of Ohio State University, where he received his A.B. and L.L.B. degrees, earned his reserve commission through the R. O. T. C. of the Buckeye school. He was called into active service January 4, 1942, and detailed as a student in an officer's basic course here at Fort Benning. Following his graduation he was assigned as assistant personnel adjutant of the Second Student Training Regiment where he remained until September, 1942 when he was transferred to the Headquarters of the Student Training Brigade in the same capacity. He was appointed personnel officer of the Brigade shortly after. With the activation of the Army Specialied Training Program here, he was transferred t the new unit.

Captain Foster, a graduate of thee Infantry Officer Candidate school here at Fort Benning on May 5, 1942, was assigned to the Third Student Training Regiment as a tactical officer and remained there until his assignment to headquarters of the Student Training Brigade as assistant personnel officer the following September.

Captain Wallace, a graduate of West Virginia University, where he received his reserve commission through the R. O. T. C., entered active duty June 25, 1941, and was detailed to an officer's basic course here at Fort Benning. After his graduation he served as tactical officer in the First Student Training Regiment, battalion adjutant in the Second Regimen and company mess and supply officer in the Third Regiment. Before his assignment to the newly-activated training center he had served as assistant personnel officer of the Student Training Brigade Headquarters in charge of the Machine Service Unit.

G. I. Thinks Molly Pitcher Would Have Made Suitable Symbol for WAC Insignia

BY PVT. THOMAS DEVINE

All this carrying-on and publicity that's being tossed around about the WAC is to me distinctly yawn making: why you girls are mere tyros compared with your prototypes of old. That's the trouble with this generation: Thinks everything it does has never been done before.

Take Zenobia for example. She was Queen of Palmyra a thousand odd years ago. She had a husband named Odenathus. Pants had not become the vogue then but if they had, Zenobia would certainly have worn them in that family. Virtuous to a fault this formidable female whipped every nation in her immediate vicinity and was right on the front line where the carrying on were messiest.

Mme. Z. then proceeded to polish off a couple of Armies the Roman Emperor Aurelian sent against her and it took the utmost energies of the Roman Empire to give her her comeuppance. Taken to Rome in triumph finally she panicked the town and married her daughters into the F. F's.

Then there was a British girl named Boadicea who was no slouch. She lived a few generations before Zenobia and like her was quite a pain in the you-know-where to the Romans.

Her old man bequeathed his L. D. & S. to Nero, (that Imperial old Yehudi) thinking that N. would treat B. like a lady when she became a widow. That wasn't at all Nero's style, however, and with characteristic naughtiness he first proceeded to give Boadicea a sound spanking and then pulled a Way Down East act on her daughters.

Not being the clinging vine type, however, Boadicea called up her G.I.'s and proceeded to lay the Roman cold. Tore right into them in 61 A. D. four horse power scout car with scythes attached to the hubs and let 'em have it. When, after she'd wiped out about 70,000 Romans they finally managed to defeat her she committed suicide.

Then, of course, there was Hippolita, Queen of the Amazons, but we'll let her pass as her doings might be said to be apocryphal.

For that matter we need not go to such ancient and foreign sources for our prototype. Let us consider Hannah Dustin, that formidable New England lady who was captured by the Indians along with a couple of her offspring. Did Hannah start reciting the beatitudes to herself at this juncture? Perish the thought. While her captors were asleep she snuk up on them, scalped the lot and trotted home to her distaff.

In the following century Molly Pitcher sprang to the breech both literally and metaphorically after the death of her husband in the Battle of Monmouth and served a field piece with considerable verve and ardor.

Why should the WAC be so darned high falutin and go selecting Pallas Athenae for their symbol. How about a profile of Molly or Hannah?

Captain Andre Named Major

Promotion of Captain Charles H. Andre to the rank of major has been announced at headquarters of the Second Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School.

Major Andre is a veteran of the first World War. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in August of 1917 after attending officers' training school at Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Returning to civil life he was connected with the manufacturing business in Detroit, but maintained his commission in the Organized Reserves. As such he reentered active duty with the Army in 1934 and has been on duty since that time. He came to The Infantry School in May of this year and now commands the Service Battalion of the Second Regiment, a unit which is engaged almost exclusively in the training of Infantry Officer candidates.

Soldier Killed In Escape Try

Another Wounded; Third Recaptured

A Fort Benning soldier was slain and two others were recaptured, one injured seriously, after the trio made a desperate attempt to escape the post stockade late Monday night.

Pvt. John B. Vaughn, 21, son of Mrs. Ada Vaughn of Dallas, Ga., was recaptured last night after he returned to his barracks. His first sergeant discovered the fugitive and captured him without resistance, according to the public relations announcement.

He was returned to the stockade, and was reported uninjured.

Fatally injured was Pvt. Howard H. Felts, of the Tenth company, Fifth Training Regiment, ASTP, the Infantry School. Felts is 22 years old and married. His widow, Mrs. Gladys Felts, lives in Columbus.

Injured in the break was Pvt. Charles E. Whitlock, 21, of Company F, 176th Infantry regiment. Whitlock, who was shot in the hand by a sentry on duty at the detention barracks is the son of Mrs. Margaret Raikes, 813 1-2 North Twenty-fifth street, Richmond, Va.

All three prisoners had been lodged in the detention barracks on the main post for infractions of military law, and in attempting their escape, the soldiers tried to scale a wire fence which enclosed the detention area, according to military authorities.

Spebsqsa Inc. Seeks Chapter At Benning

Formation of a chapter of the SPEBSQSA, Inc., will be formed at Fort Benning if sufficient numbers of singers are interested—and judging from preliminary returns, plenty of the boys who love to get together and harmonize are definitely interested.

In case you don't know, the SPEBSQSA Inc., is the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, Inc., and there are groups now scattered all over the country. It's believed that if one is established at Fort Benning, it will be the first and only one at an Army camp.

Pfc. Don Hasse of the 176th Infantry, is arranging for establishment of a Ft. Benning chapter. He issued a public invitation today to all officers and men interested to get in touch with him at the 176th Special Service Office, Ft. Benning 3252.

Boy Swimmers Awarded Emblems

Emblems for various degrees of proficiency in swimming were awarded to members of the boys' classes at Fort Benning last week, Lt. Col. Virgil Ney, in charge of boys' activities at the post, announced. The swimming classes meet twice each week at the Officers' Club pool. Lt. M. L. Tryan and Mrs. Russell Akers are in charge.

Four classifications were worked out for the graduation ceremonies. They were tadpoles for basic swimmers, frogs for advanced swimmers, fish for qualified swimmers and flying fish for expert swimmers. Each group had a distinctive emblem.

Texan Named AST Chaplain

Chaplain Alexander, former pastor of the First Baptist church of San Saba, came to Fort Benning from Camp Butner, N. C., where he was Regimental Chaplain of the 128th Ordnance Regiment. He came into the armed forces October 5, 1942 and served as chaplain for the 3rd Ordnance Motor Base at Camp Butner until his assignment as Regimental Chaplain for the 128th, November 15, 1942.

Spirit Officers' Wives Club Meets August 4

The 176th Infantry Officers Wives Club will hold its next monthly luncheon Wednesday, August 4 at 1:30 p. m. in the Officers' Club. It was agreed by the members to meet every Wednesday from 9 a. m. to 12 noon at the Red Cross work room on the post to sew, knit, and make surgical dressings.

The following committees were appointed by Mrs. John Folkes, the president of the club: Mrs. Edwin Cox, flowers; Mrs. Nathan Mathewson, menus; Mrs. A. R. Phillips, collection; Mrs. Gerard Hart, publicity; Mrs. Albert Morris, Mrs. V. H. Metzgar, Mrs. Yale Cohen, Mrs. B. S. Hawkins, and Mrs. Max Fitzpatrick, arrangements.

All wives of officers of the 176th Infantry who would like to become members of the club are urged to contact Mrs. John Folkes at Fort Benning.

Major O'Dell Visits Lawson; Bombed Nazis

Major William C. O'dell, formerly at Lawson Field with the 15th Bombardment Squadron and a participant in the first American bombing raid on Germany on July 4, 1942, visited Lawson Field Monday.

Major O'dell left Fort Benning in March 1942 and went to England. From there he went with five other American pilots on America's maiden raid on the Third Reich. Later he was assigned to General Jimmie Doolittle's command in North Africa.

He is now back in this country for the purpose of giving expert instruction to pilots preparing for future raids on the Nazis. His new station was not named.

gard to hours or conditions of combat, his frequent visits to front line units enabled him to keep his commander informed of troop dispositions and to recommend changes. His professional knowledge of his calmness under fire inspired confidence in all with whom he came in contact and his performance was of inestimable value both to the division and sector command. Entered the military service from Missouri."

1904 of West Point Military Academy, is a veteran of overseas service where he served with a combat division. Highlighting his army career, General Fulton spent four years in Washington as a member of the War department general staff from 1929 to 1933. He was then in charge of the section charting plans for the present selective service legislation. Although later some modifications were made, many of the principles outlined during General Fulton's work in the section are embodied in the present system supplying manpower to the armed services.

Much of General Fulton's army work has been with the national guard, both in Washington and in state branches. Before going to Washington for duty with the general staff, the general served four years as senior instructor of the Minnesota national guard.

Among other tours of duty which General Fuiton has had were as senior instructor of the Louisiana national guard, executive officer of the national guard bureau in Washington, and from 1936 to 1939 as commanding officer of the 38th Infantry at Fort Douglas, Utah.

During his service at Fort Benning, General Fulton has played an important role in the development of the post to its present status eral Fulton served more than a year as executive officer and prior to that worked as special inspector, a post in which he had an opportunity to become thoroughly acquainted with administrative problems at what is described as the "most complete army post."

Foremost among many of the improvements in the Columbus-Fort Benning area, General Fulton has done much to foster harmonious relations between the military personnel and civilians of the defense area in this vicinity.

A veteran of 41 years' service in the army, Colonel Massey, who rose through the ranks from private to full colonel, was assigned to Fort Benning as quartermaster early last year. Under a reorganization last November, Colonel Massey's title was changed to Director of Supply.

In this position, Colonel Massey directs all supplies, communications, transportation, ordnance, subsistence, and all branches having to do with the supply of the thousands of troops stationed at Benning.

ENLISTED IN 1902

Enlisting in the army in 1902, he was assigned to the cavalry at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and was transferred to the Philippines where he served from 1905 to 1907, seeing action in the Battle of Bud Dago during the Moros insurrection in 1906.

In 1912, Colonel Massey transferred from the cavalry to quartermaster corps, forfeiting rank as a non-commissioned officer to transfer as a private. He rose rapidly through the various grades and was commissioned a captain QMC, on June 4, 1917.

In July, 1917, with a detachment of 400 men, Colonel Massey went overseas as assistant to the Chief Quartermaster of the AEF.

Among other tours, Colonel Massey served as executive officer of the planning branch in the office of the Assistant Secretary of War in Washington, leaving there in 1933 to become quartermaster at Rockwell field and Fort Rosecrans, Calif.

In 1935, Colonel Massey became assistant to the corps area quartermaster at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and in 1920, became quartermaster of the VIII army corps at Brownwood, Tex.

BAIN IS ENGINEER

Colonel Bain, a consulting and structural engineer in civilian life, first entered the army in 1918 when he was commissioned captain in the corps of engineers. In 1920, he entered the reserves until March, 1941 when he was called to active duty with the utility section in Atlanta.

After reporting to Atlanta for duty, Colonel Bain was assigned to Fort Benning on March 12, 1941 as post engineer. In his assignment at Benning, Colonel Bain's chief duties parallel those of a city manager.

He is charged with the maintenance and repair of all buildings and structures and the procurement of labor and materials for the repairs. Other duties include road maintenance, flood control, mosquito and insect control.

He is a member of the Western Society of Engineers, Society of American Military Engineers, Military Order of the World War, and the Reserve Officers association.

Colonel Kelley came to Fort Benning to head the reclassification board at the post to act on reassignment of officer personnel. Formerly stationed at Camp Blanding, Fla., Colonel Kelley had been commanding officer of the third military area, with headquarters in New Orleans.

During the first World war, Colonel Kelley was on the staff of the 29th division, in command of the 116th Infantry. During the Meuse Argonne offensive, he was wounded in action. Upon recovery, he was attached to the Provost Marshal's office of the American Expeditionary Forces with which he served until his return to the United States in 1919.

For service in World War I, Kelley was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal, the Order of the Silver Star, the Purple Heart, and the Croix de Guerre.

His first assignment after returning from overseas in the World War was to the Infantry school at Fort Benning as an instructor in tactics. He then attended the command and general staff school and the army war college. After these courses he returned to Benning as officer in charge of the Department of Experiment at the Infantry school until 1936, when he was assigned to the Philippines.

Colonel Mendelhall, who first earned his commission in the army at officers training camp in World War I, has served as subdistrict commander, District 4, internal security, fourth service command at Fort Benning since Jan. 2, 1942 under Brig. Gen. Eric Fisher Wood.

A civil engineer in civilian life, Colonel Mendenhall is a graduate of the University of Texas. Upon graduating from officers training camp as a second lieutenant in World War I, Colonel Mendenhall was assigned to the office of the chief of engineers, Washington, D. C. He then went overseas to serve in France.

For service abroad, he was decorated with the Black Star by the French Legion of Honor. Upon demobilization of the army, Colonel Mendenhall reverted to reserve officer status.

Colonel Mendenhall was called to active duty again in January, 1941, when he was detailed to duty with the selective service at St. Augustine, Fla. He then was detailed as officer in charge of building Moody field, Valdosta, Ga., until his assignment to Fort Benning.

Capt. Cook Saturday celebrated the completion of 38 years in the service. He originally enlisted in 1905 and served overseas 18 months in the last war. For 19 years he was a chief warrant officer in Atlanta at fourth service command headquarters.

Gen. Allen Cites Colored Soldier For Bravery

Pfc. Lyons Risked Life to Save G.I. From Chattahoochee

Pfc. Hezekiah Lyons, colored mess cadreman with the Fifth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, saved the life of Pvt. Calvin W. Rayburn, a white soldier of Co. E, 176th Infantry, from the swift currents of the Chattahoochee River while the Fifth Company was on its recent three-day bivouac there.

Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of The Infantry School, has cited Pvt. Lyons for "meritorious conduct beyond the line of duty." The citation was received Tuesday.

Lyons, who is a table waiter with the company, went down for a swim in the Chattahoochee river near its confluence with Smith Creek. He was accompanied by other cadre members of the company.

While they were wading in the shallows near the north bank, a group of enlisted men from the 176th Infantry, School Troops Brigade, attempted to swim across to Lyons' side from the South bank. The river is perhaps 200 feet wide at this point. The current is strong, rapid, and filled with treacherous eddies and overcurrents.

SWEPT DOWNSTREAM

Rayburn was swept down river, and was rapidly losing strength in his efforts to get across. The swift current and the eddies pulled him downstream swiftly. Upon hearing cries for assistance, Lyons, although he is not a strong swimmer, waded out in water up to his head, steadying himself at intervals by grasping small wooden pilings, apparently part of an old pier.

At considerable risk to his own life, he advanced to the last piling and was just able to grasp Rayburn's clothes as he was swept past by the current. Lyons held him and Rayburn was then helped to the bank, apparently suffering no ill effects.

Lyons has served in the Army since January 26, 1942, undergoing his basic infantry training at Camp McClellan, Ala. For the last 15 months, he has served with the Fifth Company and has an excellent record. He is 24 years old, single, and although born at Pittsburgh, Pa., his family now makes their home at Sarasota, Fla. In civilian life he worked as a cook.

He is modest about his rescue of a fellow-soldier. At the time, he says, he hoped he would keep cool enough to make the rescue. Apparently he succeeded, for eye-witnesses report that only good timing on his part made the rescue successful.

Capt. John D. Austin, executive officer of the Fifth Company has recommended that Lyons be cited for his rescue of Rayburn, in view of the dangerous condition of the Chattahoochee River and Lyons' immediate response without a thought of his own safety to a call beyond his duty.

Seat-Weary Chairbornes Eye Cavalry

Seat-weary members of officers advanced class, 5th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, following days of travel to and from demonstrations in springless vans were handed a laugh last week by the following series of communiques:

"MONDAY— Students will at all times straddle seats in vans to utilize fullest capacity."

"WEDNESDAY — While traveling in vans, students will remain seated at all times."

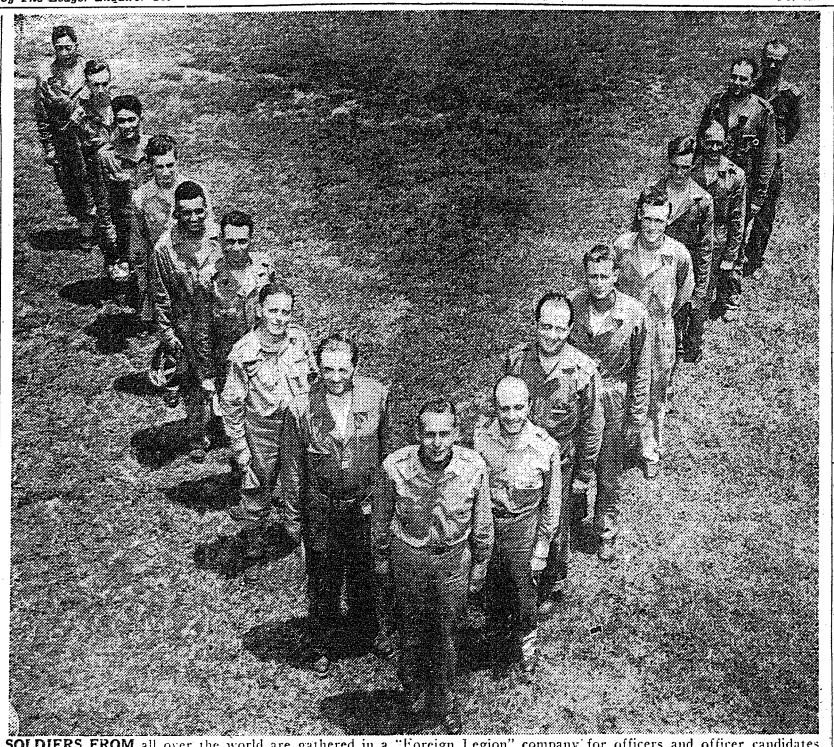
Two Canadian Brigadiers Inspect Post

Officers Voice High Praise of Infantry School Instruction

Brigadiers G. E. McCuaig and J. P. Archambault, co-chairman of the Official Selection and Appraisal Board of the Canadian armed forces have completed an inspection of The Infantry School at Fort Benning.



During their two-day tour of the School and its installations, the Canadians were impressed by the excellent and efficient methods of instructions. "Well-posted—efficient—capable" were the descriptions they used of The School's instructors.

The brigadier explained they were sent to observe the methods used in The School with the idea of employing some of them in the two Canadian Schools of a similar nature. These schools are maintained, one in eastern and the other in western Canada, for the Officers' Training Corps.

As co-chairman of the Selection and Appraisal Board, they control the training of officers for all branches of the military services in Canada. Both are veterans of World War I.

3RD STR STOCKADE

A stockade to house the erring personnel of the Third Student Training Regiment of the Infantry School is nearing completion under the direction of Lt. H. W. Blake, Regimental Supply Officer. The stockade is located between the barracks of the Service Battalion and First Battalion.

SOLDIERS FROM all over the world are gathered in a "Foreign Legion" company for officers and officer candidates taking a special course in the First Student Training regiment of the Infantry school. Post Mess to Launch Drive On Food Waste

Four-Day Conference Results In Pledge of Conservation

Continuing an unrelenting war against waste in Army messes, more than 1,400 officers and enlisted men, nurses, mess supervisors and civilians are pledged to a concerted campaign at Ft. Benning, as the result of a four-day conference on mess management and waste reduction.

The conference was arranged by Major Alexander H. Veazey, mess officer of the post, assisted by Lt. Clifford Clinton, who gained nation-wide fame for his management of restaurants in California before entering the army.

One result of the conference will be a booklet on army mess procedure, containing new ideas and hints on cutting down on waste, it was announced.

Cartoonists will have to get a new stock subject—peeling of potatoes just isn't done any more in the Army or at least if it is, it shouldn't be, it was disclosed following a series of conferences on reduction of waste in foods at Fort Benning.

"Potatoes should be peeled only when they are to be mashed, otherwise they should be boiled, baked, even fried, with the jackets on to avoid waste of valuable food," was one edict issued. "And when you must peel potatoes, peel them thinner," was another message.

"The army is continually working to cut down on waste in all departments, and one of the most important is in food," Maj. Veazey pointed out. "We now are planning to slash waste to set a new record here at Fort Benning. It is our aim to reduce mess waste to eight ounces per man per day for edible foods."

As a result of the conferences, which were conducted at Mess C-5 at the station hospital, several recommendations were made to all messes through the post.

These included maintainence of an accurate mess attendance count; stationing of an officer or non-commissioned officer to watch all platters after meals; segregation of all plate waste by the men; maintenance of a "menu performance record"; keeping a "daily waste report"; sorting and utilization of all perishables each day; drawing of rations only that can be used without waste; peel potatoes only when used for "mashed"; cook some things in smaller quantities and other things slower; use left over bread and rolls for toast; render out all fats; trim bones more carefully and use the bones for soup stock or gravies; use more cold plates for hot weather meals; serve moderate portions and ask men to return for seconds.

Maj. General Miller G. White, personnel officer of the War Department left Fort Benning last Friday for Washington following a brief inspection of The Infantry School. He was accompanied by Col. R. W. Berry and Lt. Col. E. Pasolli.

All-Girl Colored Orchestra Plays Post July 31

Fort Benning personnel in the Harmony Church area will be treated to a special one night stand of Eddie Durham's All Girl Colored Orches which will play at the Third Student Training Regiment amphitheater the night of July 31, it was announced by Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer. The band, which has played such spots as the Savoy Ballroom and other large places in New York City, will present the concert and show at 8:45 p. m. on that date.

Application Forms For Ration Book 3 Ready August 15

Application forms for Ration Book No. 3 will be available for distribution to military personnel at Fort Benning on or about August 15, according to Sgt. Louis Lipp of the Fort Benning Branch of the Muscogee county ration board.

A total of 25,000 of these application forms have been requested, Sgt. Lipp said, and will be available to military personnel requiring food ration books. Further information will be forthcoming at an early date, he stated.

Telephone Dial System Ready

Change-over Slated For 10:30 Tonight, Col. Young Announces

Recently completed dial installations in Harmony Church, Sand Hill, and the Alabama area are ready for operation and conversion of all post telephones to dial system will take place Thursday night at 10:30 p. m. (EWT), according to Lt. Col. Alexander Young, chief of Fort Benning's signal branch.

No longer will it be necessary to contact operators in the different areas. Connections may be completed directly by dial, to all points on the post, with the exception of Alabama. To reach Alabama numbers, it will be necessary to dial O, post operator, who will in turn dial the desired party.

Under the new set-up, any telephone number on the reservation can be reached from downtown Columbus by calling the main Fort Benning switchboard, at 6631. Previously there were different numbers for the main post, Sand Hill, and Harmony Church areas.

Industrialists To Visit Fort

Party Arrives Monday For Visit to Infantry, Parachute Schools

After being met at Lawson Field, the party will be taken through the Parachute School where they will see all phases of training and a mass jump. Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, will entertain at lunch to which high ranking officers and representatives of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and press and radio have been invited.

In the afternoon the party will tour the Infantry School after which the men will leave for Washington. Accompanying the men will be Lt. Col. Keith Morgan, chief of the management branch in the Industrial Services Division of the Washington Bureau of Public Relations which is sponsoring the trip here.

France, Japan, China, Hawaii, Philippines, Spain, U. S. Represented

In the records of the Student Training Brigade, the 12th company of the First Student Training Regiment is not listed as a "Foreign Legion" but the roster of the company smacks very distinctly of being just that.

In the company are 88 Frenchmen, five Japanese, three Chinese, three Hawaiians, four Filipinos, two Spaniards and the rest are Americans. Most of them are officers but some, among the French, are aspirants and officer candidates.

This company is taking a basic course in The Infantry School and will be the first to be graduated under the new 17 weeks program.

The student commander is Lt. Nicholas J. Thermos, U.S.A.; second in command is Captain G. P. Ramin of the French contingent. Captain Henri Barbeau of the French Mission to the United States is the tactical officer of the French contingent.

Lt. Theodore Sucoka, Honolulu born American of Japanese descent and a graduate of the University of Hawaii is bunking next to Lt. Sam G. Lew, American born Chinese and graduate of the Uni-

Super-Highway To Open Soon

Opening Will Ease Traffic Situation Into Columbus

With completion of a "cloverleaf" connecting the new superhighway between Columbus and Cusseta, at the juncture of the new road and Benning Boulevard, traffic in and out of Fort Benning will be highly facilitated, it was announced by Capt. Wheeler Sidwell, post traffic officer.

At present Benning Boulevard is closed because of the construction work on the cloverleaf connection, so that all traffic is being routed in and out over the old Lumpkin road.

Insurance Deadline Set For August 10

Physical Exams to Be Required Of All In Army For 120 Days

August 10 is the deadline for obtaining National Service Life Insurance without a physical examination, Lt. John W. Inzer, post insurance officer, reminded soldiers who have been in the army more than 120 days.

Formerly it was required that all soldiers, who had been in the army more than four months before applying for government insurance, take a physical examination.

The temporary waiver of physical requirements was due to the number of uninsured casualties in combat theaters, and the desire of the War Department to have all soldiers and their dependents adequately protected against combat risks.

Major Virgil W. Samms of the Adjutant General's office, insurance section, who has only recently returned to America from a tour of the South Pacific and Caribbean theaters, while visiting Fort Benning last week told local insurance officers that while a large percent of troops in continental United States were protected by government insurance, casualties in combat theaters revealed that in some cases 25 to 50 per cent of the men were not protected with insurance.

He added further that for the benefit of the individual soldier and his dependents, the War Department was aiming at 100 percent coverage on all troops before they went overseas. Furthermore that it was the responsibility of the various unit commanders to see that the insurance program as a whole and the 120 day program in particular is carried to a successful conclusion.

Lt. Inzer said that Fort Benning units have shown a decided rise in participation since June 1 and that the goal of 100 per cent coverage is not in the too distant future.

WAC Officers May Replace 4th SC Males

Survey In Progress At Post Headquarters On General Servicemen

General service, troop-age officers in Service Command units at Fort Benning may be replaced, where practicable, by commissioned officers in the Women's Army Corps when WAC personnel officially assumes status in the Army of the United States.

A survey has been initiated at Post Headquarters here, as well as in other Service Command installations, to determine how many assignments there are which WAC officers may fill under the proposed plan.

While the Corps has been designated WAAC and has not been officially a part of the Army, but assigned to serve with it, officer assignments were made solely for corps and company administration, training, and recruiting purposes.

However, it was pointed out today, that as the WAC assumes official Army status the officers will be available for additional assignments.

Jane Russell To Sell Bonds At Patio Grill

Jane Russell, the army's favorite pin-up girl, will sell war bonds and stamps in cash sales at the Patio grill Monday from 6 to 9 p. m., Major George Fink, post war bonds officer, announces. Miss Russell will appear through courtesy of WRBL, Columbus. She is at the present selling bonds at the WRBL Tank at Broad and 12th Street. Soldiers are urged to buy bonds for cash, in addition to regular pay allotments.

Waring's Pennsylvanians To Dedicate August 5 Program to Paratroops

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, heard five nights weekly on the Chesterfield Victory Tunes program over a NBC network, will dedicate their August 5 program to the Parachute School at Fort Benning, it was announced Wednesday. The broadcast will begin at 7 p. m. (EWT) and will consist of popular melodies selected by a vote of students of the Parachute School. Station WSB, Atlanta, will carry the program.

COL. COURSEY

O. C. Director Given Post In Washington

Col. Coursey Gets G-1 Assignment, War Department

Col. Richard R. Coursey, Director of Officer Candidates of The Infantry School for the last 19 months, has been appointed to the G-1 Division of the War Department in Washington. He concluded his duties here this week and departed on a brief leave prior to reporting to Washington.

Col. Coursey, widely known throughout the U. S. Army for his work in military schools, is a native of Lynn, Ga., and was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1918.

WEST POINTER

Having been graduated from West Point with a war class, Col. Coursey returned to the Point after the war to complete the regular course. On the completion of that course, he was enrolled in the first nine month's basic course here at The Infantry School. He was then assigned to the Fifth Division for a year. This tour was followed by four years of ROTC work, two of them at Georgia Tech and the other two at Gordon Institute, Barnesville, Ga.

In 1925 he was transferred to the Hawaiian Department where he served three years with the 21st Infantry. He returned to the United States in 1928 for a two-year tour of duty with the 12th Infantry at Fort Howard, Md.

Returning to ROTC work in 1930, the Colonel was named assistant professor of Military Science and Tactics at the University of Michigan, a position which he held six years. Then he took the Command and General Staff Course at Fort Leavenworth and was assigned in 1937 to West Point as assistant to the commandant, battalion commander and executive officer. He remained there until General Omar Bradley brought him to The Infantry School to take charge of the Officer Candidate program.

After serving in the First Student Training Regiment, he was appointed Jan. 1, 1942, to the position he has just vacated.

LAUDED BY WEEMS

In connection with Col. Coursey's departure, Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, Assistant Commandant of The School said:

"Colonel Coursey was commander of the first group of officer candidate companies to matriculate at the School and has been director of officer candidates throughout the entire period that thousands of them have been commissioned. He has exercised more influence in the selection of officers for the Army than any other man. In his work he has shown sound judgment and devotion to duty. He has never been swayed or influenced by any of the many strong pressures that have been brought to bear. The success of the Officer Candidate system at The Infantry School is due, in great measure, to Colonel Coursey who devised that system and directed its development."

'Boston Tommy' Finds Army Brings Him Too Close to Nature

He Prefers Soft Chaise Longue To Mossy Bank and Sunset

BY PRIVATE THOMAS DEVINE

To my mind the most objectionable feature of military life is the extent with which it brings the individual in contact with nature. With characteristic and paradoxical perversity man is forever praising nature and battling it at the same time. If nature is so darned wonderful as poets like Edwin Markham and Joyce Kilmer pretend to think why don't people just let the confounded thing alone? Nature simply is not man's natural element and it's just a lot of sentimental nonsense to pretend the contrary.

Born in the city I was perfectly happy in my proper milieu until at quite an early age I learned to read. I don't know what sort of literature they feed to the very young nowadays but in the dawn of the present century juvenile primers gave nature a terrific buildup; just carried on for pages about birds, trees, flowers and bees.

Like all publicity they only mentioned the favorable aspect of their topic. They described the birds' beautiful plumage without a word about what a chatter the beastly things make on a country mornnig when good Christians are trying to sleep; they said nothing about the trees attracting lightning, and hoarding caterpillars to drop on innocent cockneys who in ill advised moments wandered into the country for a day's pleasure. They mention the glorious colors of the flowers but ignore their role of producers of rose and hay fevers and while expatiating on the sweetness of the bees' honey they gloss over the sting which these vicious insects pack and deliver on little or no provocation to the unhappy towney who ventures outside the city gates.

Always of a trusting nature this praising of nature aroused my infantile curiosity and I plagued my elders until they presently took me to the country. It met with my complete and unqualified preadolescent disapprobation and I learned at that early age that we do things much better in town.

NOISESOMES COWS

Cows au naturel, for instance, I immediately perceived were awkward noisesome creatures requiring endless care and I pointed out to my seniors the palpable superiority of a mock up bovine in one of the concessions at a seashore amusement park. Artfully fashioned from plaster of paris and tastefully decorated with paint, this hygienic animal produced germless ice cold milk upon the effortless turn of a spigot by a junoesque, bleached blond, white clad dairy maid.

During adolescence, victimized by my own good nature I occasionally was, against my own best judgment, enticed into camping trips by my contemporaries. Always capable of profiting by experience I presently had forced upon my cognizance that it is a refinement of folly to depend upon any factor so capricious as nature, when one has at one's disposal products of man's art.

I acted on this premise on one occasion when two other boys and myself went on a couple of weeks trip in a small open sailing boat which we owned in common. Our plan was to spend a night on each of various islands in the bay camping (literally) the while. The general idea of course was to get close to nature if you know what I mean and I was willing to do this with certain reservations.

Now all these young creatures would groan and complain on every such occasion but never would they learn a lesson. I, on the contrary, whenever I learned of a march or bivouac in prospect would purloin a few slices of bread from the mess hall, cut off the crusts, and make myself some peanut butter and cheese sandwiches. From town I'd bring a bottle of stuffed olives and a box of sweet biscuits. I'd then squeeze and strain the juice of a couple of oranges with utensils I kept in my barrack's bag and put the resultant orangeade in a bottle.

DAINTY DEJEUNER

The result was that while the other G. I.'s were squealing and grousing about their victuals I was complacently consuming a dainty dejeuner which the Marguery couldn't have surpassed save in the way of table appointments. I can't truthfully say that the spectacle I presented endeared me to my comrades—but then you can't have everything and I always preferred comfort to love.

On the other hand I was practically the toast of the barracks on one occasion when, on learning that a window washing fiesta was due the following day, I bought a bottle of patent window cleaner with sprayer attached, thereby giving us at least an hour extra of goldbricking time while the other platoons were sweating it out with much less satisfactory results.

Lots of people have the notion that Tigers don't walk—well they're just crazy. We walked like fury and here again those ridiculous 20 year olds were never able to leave bad enough alone. They'd go flying along at a much more rapid pace than was required of them thereby demonstrating a vigor which no one ever thought of questioning in the first place. Now I could go just as fast as they if I'd wanted to—say for example I were on my way to a party—but why should one on such occasions? When someone behind me would commence grumbling about my pace I'd simply reply with the utmost civility, "My worthy man if you're in such a G— d—— hurry change places with me." By repeating this process sufficiently when we returned home I'd find myself in the rear rank but still with my outfit. What did the silly G. I.'s do with the time they hadn't saved by their frantic rush? Why they threw themselves exhausted in their dusty fatigues and muddy boots on to their bunks, passed out and were barely able to limp about for days afterwards. I, on the other hand, would take a shower, change to clean clothes, scuttle in town, have a few nips, eat a civilized dinner and be none the worse for my promenade. Another proof of the irrefutable truth of my philosophy—viz and to wit: don't struggle with nature; ignore it.

FIELD MANUALS

One must grant that the United States armed forces take a lot less nonsense from nature than comparable organizations of other nations. The French, for example, keep cows, pigs and poultry on board their warships and you can see what it brought them to if you read the newspapers. The less demanding British content themselves with rodents and bedbugs in their naval branch but regard the fate of the "Renown" and the "Prince of Wales." We on the other hand have any number of anti-nature devices and a good part of the engineers' work is devoted to putting her in her place and keeping here there. Why the soldier's handbook has pages devoted to antidotes to naturne and there are several field manuals which treat of nothing else.

No—I want none of your nature. Sentimental hypocrites can carry on indefinitely about natural scenery but I can match every Grand Canyon with a Rockefeller Center and each Niagara Falls with a "Queen Mary." As for sunsets: often as not they are in vulgar bad taste and violate every known rule of color harmony. If Malisse or Picasso were to attempt anything like that, they'd be laughed out of the galleries. Show me the mossy bank which remotely compares with the comfort of a down cushioned chaise longue and even a grade A sparkling mountain brook can't produce anything remotely like a "suissesse" or for that matter even a humble "daiquiri". All those who are in favor of nature stand over there and I'll distribute my share of it to them on a pro-rata basis.

On our first day out my more virile companions went hatless and stripped to the waist in accordance with their conceptions of what comprised the great outdoors convention and 200 per cent red-bloodedness. In my clean white shirt, duck trousers, canvas shoes and white topped peak cap I was the butt of considerable facetiousness and bons mots on their part, my prim neatness appealing to their joint sense of humor.

My quaint orthodox, however, turned out to be a fortunate asset to my friends for that night they found themselves painfully sunburned and afflicted with violent colds while I, with chipper fitness, smeared lotion on their raw backs and administered aspirin tables against pneumonia.

WRONG ADJECTIVE

By the same token my insistence on bringing along a chafing dish with spirit lamp was a source of endless entertainment to my friends being not at all in the Dan Beard, Richard Haliburton or Harry Kemp tradition. On second thought I observed that I selected the wrong adjective for their amusement did end toward the finish of the trip. We found ourselves on a barren little island on a damp evening. All efforts to start a cheery blaze by the approved Camp Fire Girl methods were unavailing. All that remained of our provisions was some dried bread, a bit of stale cheese, a small tin of evaporated milk, some concentrated coffee, a bit of sugar, pepper and salt. My great outdoor companions were very glum and irritable.

In three shakes of a lamb's tail I had out my faithful chafing dish and before you could say "swish" to a swan I had produced the most toothsome English monkey ever whipped up on land or sea with steaming coffee to accompany it. To my own credit, I must add, I firmly suppressed a smug smile and indulged in no single recrimination.

TIGER FORSOOTH

When a beneficent army decided I was Tiger material and endowed the 10th Armored division with my services my friends all thought it was terribly gay and no end of a dish. I can just imagine them saying, "Get a load of that one would you, a Tiger forsooth, 'terrify and destroy is it? Why he couldn't terrify a head waiter and he hasn't destroyed anything since the time he smashed his mother's Limoges tea set while climbing in the pantry looking for hidden chocolates."

However, it is well known that a prophet is without honor in his own country and, while it is perfectly true that my attainments at terrorization and destrucion left something to be desired I was pretty good at other things.

For example: during calisthenics there was a certain performance part of our routine which was known as "The General Newgarden Neck Exercise." It involved a rotation of the shoulders and a thrusting out of the chin somewhat in the fashion of a heron procuring an hors d'oeuvre. Now being at that critical time of life when, if a boy doesn't watch, out excess chins have a way of creeping up and moving in on him, I could do this gymnastic with some enthusiasm and allow me to say that I was spectacular at it.

MESS WITH NATURE

Inevitable, as I've previously remarked, there was an awful lot of messing around with nature in basic training. The trouble with the young and ingenuous is that they insist upon battling such obstacles as nature presents while the more mature mentality simply ignores or sidesteps them. When we'd got out to the firing range on a cold morning, those coltish G. I. would work themselves into a lather chopping down trees and building fires. They'd then squat around these blazes, roasting their fronts, chilling their rears and choking with the smoke, like a lot of blooming Boy Scouts. I with the wisdom of years would simply clamber into the cab of the mess truck, nibble at sweet biscuit and read a paper backed shilling shocker.

I did used to have trouble in reconnaissance problems. I couldn't seem to develop any protective coloration. Never having gone in for this faddish cult of sun tan which I consider unhealthy and undistinguished, my pink and whiteness of countenance stood out with peculiar distinctness in the Georgia jungle and, bearing no resemblance to anything in nature, my shell rimmed spectacles were a further liability. As a sergeant once aptly observed, I was as evident as a 53rd street fire hydrant on the Tunisian desert. Well—no doubt we all have our limitations and I'll just bet that if any of those scoffers ever found themselves in Iceland they'd envy me my talent for imitating a hungry sea lion. Not big as life to be sure but thrice as natural.

LUNCH ON THE FIELD

Then there was this business of eating in the field. In the matter of cuisine al fresco nature gives the minimum of cooperation; in fact she conspires against human comfort. The coffee always tastes like the concoctions some of the Roman emperors used to try out on their slaves and the food looks like something out of this world. (I don't know how it tastes, I never had the courage to try it.)

Bill Creates Pharmacy Unit

A bill creating a Pharmacy Corps within the Medical Department of the Army and putting registered pharmacists on the same basis as veterinarians, dentists and doctors was signed by the President this week, according to information received at Fort Benning this week.

In its final form, one important change was made in the bill. The original called for the abolition of the Medical Administrative Corps and the substitution of the Pharmacy Corps in its place. As amended by the Senate and approved by the House the Medical Administrative Corps would be retained in addition to the Pharmacy Corps.

It was explained that the Medical Administrative Corps is considered a vital necessity by the Medical Department and that although it has been the practice of late years to appoint only pharmacists in the MAC, there is a considerable number of officers, about 50, not pharmacists, who are administrative officers and hold commissions in the corps.

Following is the bill in part:

"That there is hereby established in the Medical Department of the Army a corps to be known as the 'Pharmacy Corps.' The Pharmacy Corps shall consist of seventy-two officers in grades from colonel to second lieutenant, inclusive. Appointments in the Pharmacy Corps, except as hereinafter provided for transfer thereto, shall be made in the grade of second lieutenant from pharmacists between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-two years who are graduates of recognized schools or colleges of pharmacy requiring four years of instruction for graduation, under such regulations and after such examinations as the Secretary of War shall prescribe. An officer of the Pharmacy Corps shall be promoted to the grade of first lieutenant after three years' service, to the grade of captain after six years' service, to the grade of major after twelve years' service, to the grade of lieutenant colonel after twenty years' service, and to the grade of colonel after twenty-six years' service: Provided, that officers of the Regular Army holding commissions in the Medical Administrative Corps on the date of enactment of this Act shall be transferred to the Pharmacy Corps and commissioned in grade in such corps in addition to the seventy-two officers authorized for the corps."

Lt. O'Neill Is Ass't SS Officer, Service Club No. 4

Second Lieutenant Alfred M. O'Neill has just been appointed assistant special service officer at Service Club No. 4, according to an announcement made by Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer at Post Headquarters.

Coming to Fort Benning and his new assignment directly from Gainesville, Fla., where he completed the Administrative Officers' Course at the University, Lieutenant O'Neill took over the duties of Lt. Alexander A. Reed who has been transferred to Nashville, Tenn., in connection with the Army Specialist Training Program.

A native of San Francisco, Lieutenant O'Neill is a graduate of the San Francisco.

In civilian life Lieutenant O'Neill was connected with the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation of San Francisco and has traveled extensively for his company making a tour of inspection in the Orient besides branches in America.

It Was Still Drill, Regardless, Majors Declare

If you are willing to take some sage advice from Major Edward W. Diehl and Major Harold B. Eagle, you will make it a definite point that none of your dental appointments come due the day of a period of strenuous field work. These officers of the 3rd Company, First Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, have taken a terrific ribbing from their classmates because they happened to be in the dental clinic the morning of a particularly rough field exercise.

Taking it for granted that these two culprits arranged it in order to escape trodding up and down the red clay hills of Georgia a thousand and one good natural taunts have been thrown in their direction since.

The biggest clamor of all comes up each day as the mess truck heads back toward the company street. "Last call for the Dental Clinic." "The firm qualification of a good leader is good teeth" are among the shouts that ring out from dozens of places as all eyes turn toward the victims of the joke. The two majors smile and wisely say nothing.

538th Infantry Now Quartered At Sand Hill

Located in new quarters in the Sand Hill area and with its roster of trainees complete, the 538th Armored Infantry battalion began its formal training program last week. The recently activated unit had been quartered in the old ROTC area on the main post.

Major Milledge M. Beckwith, commanding officer, has initiated a program of organized athletics aimed at making a swimmer and scrapper of every man in the battalion. Sergeant Paul Thomas represented the 538th at two weeks of intensive instruction in functional swimming, conducted at Russ pool last month, and is qualified to give tests for Red Cross life saving certificates.

Pfc. Philip Cardazone, known in professional lightweight boxing circles as Phil Cardy, is helping deevlop a team of boxers at Camp Tyson, Tenn.

QM Orders Canned Stock Out Of Storage

Move Being Made To Release Enough Space For 1943 Pack

To release storage space in cannery warehouses for the 1943 pack of fruits and vegetables, the Quartermaster Corps has issued shipping instructions for the removal from public storage of the remainder of the 1942 pack according to Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply at Fort Benning.

At the current rate of shipments the entire movement of some 10,000 cars is expected to be completed within a short time. In order to avoid unnecessary handling and shipping operations, the Quartermaster Corps contracted with the canners at the time of purchase to store the goods for 12 months from the date the purchase was made.

To interfere as little as possible with preparations for the 1943 pack and to enable canners to take in canning supplies and equipment well in advance of actual canning operations, the Quartermaster Corps began early in April to move its stocks from the canneries according to Colonel Massey.

However, the movement was spread over a period of several weeks in order not to throw an undue burden on the railroads and other transportation facilities.

CAPTAIN FLIPPO

First Lieutenant Thomas R. Flippo of the Communication Group, Academic Department, The Infantry School, has been promoted to the rank of captain. Captain Flippo enlisted in 1923 in the Cavalry at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, and transferred to the 83d Field Artillery at Fort Benning, Georgia. In 1933 he was assigned to The Infantry School, Communications Section. He attended the Signal Corps School at Fort Monmouth, N. J., in 1936-1937 and became a master sergeant on his return to this post. In 1942 he was appointed Warrant Officer and in the same year received his commission as a first lieutenant. His present assignment is with the Communications Group, Academic Department, The Infantry School.

538th Infantry Boasts Perfect Insurance Record

Every one of the 850 officers and enlisted men who make up the 538th Armored Infantry battalion carry National Service life insurance, 846 of them in the maximum amount of $10,000, Major Milledge M. Beckwith, commanding officer, reports.

The average coverage of all personnel is $9,974.

Major Beckwith said he believes his command has established something of a record, among units as large as a battalion, for purchase of National Service insurance.

Ex-Spiriter Fights In Sicily

Pvt. Games Escapes Death Narrowly

Pvt. Robert Games, of Norfolk, Va., a former member of the 176th Infantry was one of the participating parachutists in the Allied attack on Sicily. Pvt. Games was a member of the Spirits from February 3, 1941, until December 22, 1942. Games worked in Personnel in the morning report section until his transfer to the Infantry Parachute Unit at Fort Benning.

The report on Pvt. Games' excellent soldiery was written up in many papers, and following is the story of his exploits, his narrow escape from death:

"He should be dead. Attacking a pillbox, Games crept in close, when the enemy opened with a terrific barrage. They pitched three hand grenades at him, and fired seventy rounds at him, finally knocking him unconscious.

"Games awoke inside the pillbox, stripped naked. Half an hour later the Americans attacked again and destroyed the pillbox, but he was not even scratched."

WAAC Lt. Beale To Oglethorpe

The promotion of Second Lieutenant Jeannette Miller of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps to the rank of first lieutenant is announced by Lt. Col. J. D. Rosenberger, post adjutant.

Returning to Fort Benning after a tour of duty at Camp Shelby, Miss., where she was a supply and mess officer, Lt. Miller received special recognition for her work in the mess hall where service, decorations and equipment were modeled after the mess hall at the WAAC Detachment at Fort Benning.

Lt. Miller is executive officer of the WAAC Detachment, Station Complement, here with Lt. Gail Gaines, commanding officer.

Coming to Fort Benning early in February, Lt. Miller was the supply officer for the detachment to complete plans for the arrival of the first WAAC unit to the Fort.

Lieut. Miller is a graduate of the sixth officer candidate class, Des Moines, Iowa, in October, 1942, when she received her commission of third officer.

W. O. Callaway Is New Spirit Band Leader

Warrant Officer Paul Callaway of Washington, D. C., has been appointed the new leader of the 176th Infantry Spirit band. Mr. Callaway came to the Spirits after much experience as organist and choirmaster at the National Cathedral of Washington, D. C., and conductor of the Cathedral Choral Society also of Washington.

"I heard the band for the first time at a baseball game, and they sounded fine," said Mr. Callaway. "Sgt. Rotundi has done a swell job. I'll do my very best to carry on in the same tradition."

"I have seen much war in my lifetime and I hate it profoundly. But there are worse things than war; and all of them come with defeat. The more you hate war, the more you know that once you are forced into it, for whatever reason it may be, you have to win it. You have to win it and get rid of the people that made it and see that, this time, it never comes to us again."—Ernest Hemingway.

Mussolini Is Out; Emmanuele's Move Now

The Italian Kingdom composed of a number of erstwhile independent small states has only existed since 1870. While it should have been mending its home fences it commenced instead a career of imperialistic expansion and was always on the verge of bankruptcy. Participation in the first World War further disrupted Italian economy and the nation in 1923 was nearly in anarchy.

Racketeers collected the revenues of the ports and civil government exercised no effectual means of putting an end to the condition. A friend of the writer's who lived in Florence said that they did not even dare let their cars out of the garage and his sister had to go hatless on the street as the wearing of headgear would indicate that she was a lady of quality and subject to molestation by unruly mobs.

In this contingency Mussolini who had organized the Fascist Party threatened the Crown, saying that if he were not offered power he would seize it. Having a forceful group to back back him up, he was accepted by the King who, supposedly viewed him as the only alternative to chaos and nihilism.

Popular opinion in the United States and England, seeing with alarm the Bolsheviks in power in Russia and communism rife in Hungary, Germany and other European states, reluctantly reconciled themselves to the existence of an absolute government in the realm of an ally who had recently been on their side in a war for democratic principles.

At first, however, they could not be said to have approved of Fascism and it enjoyed a very poor press in Britain and the United States.

For the first few years of his rule, however Mussolini devoted himself to home improvements. He cleaned up the cities, reclaimed waste land, instituted social reforms and made the railroads more efficient and generally busied himself with commendable domestic projects.

The result of this program was that England and ourselves presently altered our opinion of Mussolini's value, losing sight of the fact that he ostensibly gave material benefits with one hand and he robbed the people of certain human rights with the other. For some years during the latter 1920's our newspapers and magazines praised Fascist works to the skies.

In the early 1930's, however, the Italian premier commenced throwing his weight around and, in defiance of all remonstrances embarked on a completely unjust war on Ethiopia, drove the Grand Negus from his throne and added this ancient Christian Empire to the Italian Crown.

From then on Mussolini's menaces to world peace and his general behaviour are notorious and the impunity with which he defied a world reluctant to embark on another bloody war pointed the way for Hitler with the result which we are now suffering.

Mussolini's chickens have now come home to roost and he has been deposed. What are the results of this event likely to be?

Obviously one can only guess and a man's hypothesis is only good in ratio to his knowledge of history and current European politics. The possibility of Mussolini's deposing being an elaborate Oppenheim plot in collusion with Hitler seems a little fanciful and a more obvious explanation appears more feasible. His popularity has been very much on the decline since his repeated military reverses in the present war. The Italian people have suffered severe losses and have utterly no prospect of recouping any of them. They are certain, in fact to emerge from the war with considerably less than they entered. No matter how strong and autocratic a government may be there is a point beyond which no amount of persuasion or force can keep in leash the resentment of a populace and, palpably that point has been reached.

A king who in theory is above politics is an exceedingly valuable institution. The crown of Savoy whatever criticism may be levelled at it for its complacency has a certain orthodox respectability which age and continuity endow. European peoples place considerably more importance in such matters than we do. Mussolini, one may be very sure, is an arch realist and even in his apogee must always have valued the Italian king as a figure around which the nation could rally in the event of a political debacle on the part of the Fascists. Such has proven to be exactly the case and the Italian people cannot accuse the House of Savoy of anything worse than a toleration of Fascism. It could always be pleaded that the King had no alternative. In any case he provides a symbol of order and unity and something to cling to as a protector since he has a reputation, deserved or otherwise, for being fairly persona grata to the United States and England. Certainly there has never been any considerable democratic party in Italy with which the Allies could treat.

It seems unlikely, however, that Italy will immediately surrender unconditionally. For one thing we have been given to understand that there are strong German forces and military installations within the Kingdom. It seems highly unlikely that the Germans would have countenanced a move which would abandon these to the enemy nor, indeed would they relinquish to the Allies a territory which would form a base of operations against the continent in general and southeastern Germany in particular.

The Italian monarchy may think that its nuisance value in delaying operations might form a bargaining point for a more lenient peace with the United Nations. They may figure that they can't win in any case since, even if they surrender, Italy will suffer the ravages of war. Her position under our domination would be analagous to that of France at the present under German hegemony. Imponderable factors may rule otherwise but the writer's guess is that the Italians will continue for a while a delaying fight foredoomed to defeat. The only probable alternative to this being an overwhelming revolt of the people and a refusal of the soldiers to bear arms.

You Can't Fool Military Censors For Very Long

Contrary to popular belief the inability to keep secrets is by no means confined to the female sex. Get a bunch of G. I.'s together and their monkeylike chatter will presently give the scene a semblance of the weekly meeting of the Bingville Ladies' Current Events Club. If one of these "strong silent men" dear to the hearts of pot boiling novelists and movie script writers is ever discovered he ought to be made a state charge or public monument and installed in the Museum of Natural History.

Despite all the efforts on the part of the Army to impress men with the need of secrecy concerning their whereabouts there have been numerous cases where soldiers attempt to evade the precautions of the authorities showing an ingenuity thereby which might be more profitably put to better use.

One case discovered by the censors was an attempt by a soldier to tell his family where he was by using a different middle intital in addressing the envelope ultimately supplying the name of his location by reading the initials in order of pot marks. His efforts, however, were spiked by fate because the letters, not being delivered in the sequence their writer planned, the place name was jumbled beyond recognition.

In another instance a soldier bought two maps the size of his writing paper and gave one to a member of his family. A scheme was devised whereby he would prick a hole in the paper in such a manner that when overlaid on the map's duplicate it would reveal to his correspondents at home his geographical situation.

Military censors are sent to schools and specifically trained to detect such subterfuge as these and similar. It is a very serious offense to divulge the whereabouts of troop units. The soldier who does so is jeopardizing not only his own life but the safety of his entire outfit and is hampering the prosecution of the war. That such wilful stupidity should be tolerated by military authorities is unthinkable and infractions whenever detected will be severely punished.

Am I Doing My Share To Help Win This War?

A boy died last night. It doesn't make much difference about his name. The important thing is that he died in poignant and awful loneliness out somewhere on a waste of sand, out in starless silence, 10,000 miles from home.

"Missing in action' read an obscure line in this morning's communique. That was all. Now he lies there crumpled beside the twisted wreckage that yesterday was his ship—riding high in the sunlit heavens—reaching out and touching the hands of God. The fine head and the shining face and the broad shoulders remain only in a picture that looks out upon a quiet living on a shaded street an eternity away.

Last night in those agonizing hours of unspeakable isolation, he went through a thousand deaths without the one thing that might have helped a little—the sound of a familiar voice, the pat of a friendly hand. Many people died last night in their beds at home, surrounded by those who cared. Last night he died in utter desolation, in an unimaginable loneliness.

The pain was terrible enough. But then there had to be that dreadful burden of thought in those endless last hours. Mom and Pop. The flowers blooming in the back yard. The good old roadster in the driveway. The last sweetheart kiss at the station. Those dances last summer. The half finished letter in his blouse. All those plans for the future—all the glorious accoutrements of youth. Buddies back at the field 5,000 miles across the water, wondering. Couldn't somebody find him, please? That wracking pain again.

Too much for you, all this. Well, it really happened last night just like that. And it'll happen again tonight. If people could only understand it, if they would just grind deep into their own thinking and consciousness the stark reality of it, then every petty, selfish interest would be swept away. They would sacrifice anything and everything just to make themselves worthy of that boy. They would hasten, aye gladly, to forge an instrument of revenge that would wipe from the earth the traffickers in war.

People would rise and demand that their government take anything, exactly everything needed—make them walk, feed them the commonest fare, black out every city, take away every penny of profit, render uncertain every commonplace comfort and easy security—just to avenge that boy.

He died last night.

—OPTIMIST INTERNATIONAL.

Journey's End

GUILTY . . . . 90 DAYS

He's on the ball or on limb.
He's up, he's down, or doesn't know,
If he'll get to stay, or have to go.

He writes his wife and says it's swell,
In all his work he's doing well.
He can lie to her in every letter
But . . . His Tactical Officer knows him better.

At night he sleeps, but not too much,
He dreams of Graded Tests, and such.
He has one A, some B's and S's
And sweats the rest up from doubtful D's.

He thinks his tests are up to snuff
Then finds that tests are not enuff . . .
His Voice and Command do not jell
The T.O. says they're weak as hell.

What can he do to rectify
Mistakes he's made in weeks gone by;
He tried so hard, or so he thought
For a small gold bar that can't be bought.

When commencement comes at long last 'round,
And good O.C.'s are homeward bound;
Heav'n help the guy who says in blunder
"There goes another three-month wonder!"

USO Presents——

IN THE FORM OF MUSIC GOT ANDY EVERY TIME

The service clubs operated by the United Service Organizations in Columbus and Phenix City are not eight different units vieing with each other for the soldier's patronage and attention. . . . They are offsprings of the same parent—all working toward the same goal.

* * *

They are, in fact, organized and operated to supplement one another's activities. . . . Each has its particular feature with a program or sort of "routine" built around that point. . . . Several USO clubs offer dormitory facilities, others do not. . .. Certain clubs by their very architecture offer better reading and writing facilities which other units due to their compactness cannot. . . . Due tot limitations of space, all of the organizations do not have large auditoriums, but that is taken care of with one unit having a huge auditorium.

* * *

All of the USOs do, however, offer many of the same facilities with but slight variations. . . . Information services, lounging, personal counseling, reading, writing, games, music and refreshments will be found at all of the clubs.

* * *

A picnic to the old Phenix City waterworks will be sponsored Saturday afternoon from the USO in Phenix City, Mrs. Kathleen Smith, program directr, announced. . . . Features of the day will be swimming, boating, horseshoe pitching and badminton. . . . Reservations should be made soon as possible for the party which will leave at 5:30 p. m. (EWT) from the club. . . .50 soldiers are invited.

* * *

If you've missed Mel Tolbert, program director at the Salvation Army USO at 1323 Broadway in Columbus, it's because she has been confined to her home with a sprained knee. . . . Better watch that badminton game, Mel.

* * *

The 176th Infantry Regiment "spirits" will be in charge of the Army Hour, all soldier program from the Army - Navy YMCA - USO, Sunday at 5 p. m. (EWT). . . . They will provide the music and entertainment.

Thought--For Food

"Who riseth from a feast
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
All things that are,
Are with more spirit chased
then enjoyed. . . ."

Several important facts were disclosed by the Food Conference conducted last week by the Office of Mess Supervision at Fort Benning, with more than 1,400 officers, mess sergeants, civillan personnel and others attending.

There exists considerable lack of uniformity and consistency in operation of Army messes, it was shown. Avoidable waste does exist, and can be cut even more than it has been—but more than food conferences are needed to accomplish all possible savings, was the concensus following this particular conference.

To meet present needs, the OMS at Benning has decided to publish a booklet that will give a step by step program that has proved effective in mess operations and conservation programs.

* * *

Before completing this booklet, the office would like to hear from all mess officers and personnel on the post. They want ideas—any ideas or plans that anybody may have.

As food more and more becomes the critical material of war and peace, it is apparent that many are doomed to die for want of food.

* * *

The circle around our enemies is being drawn ever tighter as food bases are bombed and supply lines are cut. Lack of food in Germany is going to play an important part in deciding the outcome of the war. Many who will suffer will be our friends who have waited and hoped for deliverance from the Nazi yoke. We must be prepared to feed them as soon as we have liberated them.

It is up to every American to take the personal steps necessary to conserve waste wherever we can. We must stretch every available ounce of food as far as possible. In this war food is ammunition.

Chaplain's Corner

THE VANISHED HAND

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

As one travels along life's pathway recollections of childhood days flood memory's chambers. We would throw of the cares and vexations of body and spirit and return to the scenes of long ago.

Backward, turn backward
O Time, in your flight!
Make me a child again,
Just for tonight.

Sometimes we follow our longings and find to our dismay—everything has changed. Oh no! The home in which you were born, a little worn perhaps is still the same. Likewise the brook, the hills, the folks. We have changed. The satisfactions of childhood no longer satisfy. We may retrace our boyhood steps but we can never recapture our boyhood vision. That has gone forever.

By other means we try to regain lost joys. It is said eastern magicians can take the ashes of a flower and bring it back to life and beauty. We are very certain they cannot. Nor can you take that piece of ribbon, the little shoe, the old letter, mementoes of gladsome hours and bring back the happiness of other days. The aching heart knows only too well the futility of all such endeavors.

The stately ships go on—
To their haven under the hill;
But O for the touch of a vanish'd hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still.

THE WAACS AND THE HEAT

When I hear the girls in the barracks, protest
Against the heat and the sun,
I laugh up my sleeve, and give them a grin,
For to me their griping is fun.

When I see them so wilted, and mopping their brows
Exclaiming —they've water for bones,
I offer no help to my comrades in arms
My heart must be filled with just stones

They listlessly sit, an their lockers and bunks
While signing for mountains and benches.
Of their homes farther north, than the State which they're in that is known for red clay and its peaches.

From Rhode Island, New Hampshire,, Vermont and New York
These girls are quite hard to beat,
They've never met anything, they could not lick
Until now, as they fight Georgia heat.

"Just wait, it gets hotter," in fiendish delight
I tell them the worst, which is true,
Someday I'm going to make up and find,

I've jested enough, I should be ashamed,
To laugh at their misery and woe,
I'll tell you the real reason of why I could laugh
I'm a native of Georgia, you know.

Aux. Henry W. Bishop,
43rd WAAC Post Hqs.

Key Says——

SHE COULD BEAT GEORGIA WEATHER BUT FO R 2 THINGS

At last I'm beginning to understand the meaning of that time-worn expression, "it-isn't the heat, it's the humidity." The phrase must have originated in Georgia, no doubt engendered by some weary native struggling through his third or fourth week of "continued warm, not much change in temperature."

It isn't the heat that gets you down. It's the way your clothes stick to you, the way that prickly heat spreads until you're one vast, suffering stretch of itching epidermis. It's that odor of mold and stale air in the house which no amount of airing and sunning will remove. It's the knowledge that weather like this, with only a few breaks, may continue until the middle of September or later.

I was told about Georgia summers when I first came here; not by Georgians, who seem to revel in a good blast of hot, humid air, but by persons new to the climate. I laughed at them, as becames a person who had survived the summers in the Dakotas, the hot months in Southern California, and a sweltering heat wave in Chicago.

In fact, I set out to show them they were wrong. For three months, during the hottest of the summer, I went along at top speed ignoring the thermometer. Mid-afternoon, when sane persons were inside relaxing, found me trotting over to the post office ignoring a brassy, glaring sun. Still embued with the midwestern idea of housewifely virtues, I brewed and baked, cleaned and swept, washed and ironed with right good will. At the end of summer I was a dreary-looking wight, and the fight between a Georgia summer and myself ended with me hanging on the ropes.

But now I think I have this heat proposition licked. My plan requires a bit of maneuvering, and will be resorted to only under extreme stress. But if it comes to a question of survival you may find me, between the hours of 2 p. m. and 6 p. m., ensconced in a tub of cool water, a fan stirring the air and a book in my hand.

Let the baby cry over his bruises and bumps; let the man of the house demand a button sewed on or an early dinner; let the laundress fail to show up or the phone ring incessantly. They'll get no help from me. Friends may call, duty may beckon, Berlin may fall—you'll still find me in a tub of cool water between the hours of 2 p. m. and 6 p. m.

It's a lovely dream. If it weren't for babies and husbands and Red Cross and groceries, I might be able to manage it. Until such time as I can perfect my method of keeping cool, I suppose I'll be sweltering along with the rest of you. There's only one consolation, as far as I can see. It isn't the heat, it's the humidity.

THE OL' BOY HAS TO ACCEPT AN EXCUSE, JUST FOR ONCE

"Sergeant!" bellowed Colonel T. P. Swampwater, "you are two minutes late for work this morning! Tell me in no uncertain terms the exact reason for this deficiency."

"Huh?" I replied, not entirely at ease.

"I mean why in the h--- were you late?"

"Oh 'er well 'er I, Sir", I exclaimed, trying not to flinch before the steely grey stare of my commanding officer's revolving eyes. "You see it was this way I 'er was 'er—

"Shades of Salome, Sergeant!" interrupted the ol' boy "Haven't you learned yet that a good soldier never makes excuses. Battles are won by men who never fail, who always have a reason for what they do, by men who lead the way

"Yes, Sir", I rejoined.

"Yes, Sir," I replied.

"Sergeant, as I was saying before you interrupted me I am very much perplexed over your conduct this morning. I am tempted to "bust you" down to Pfc. but my big, noble, generous, nature won't let me do it. No, by thunder, I am going to give you another chance. A chance to show me some real soldiership!"

"Yes, Sir," I interrupted, "But may I say one thing, Sir?"

"Certainly Sergeant! Free speech is the unalienable right of every soldier—provided, of course, it isn't too free."

"Yes, Sir", I agreed.

"And, Sergeant, because of my nobleness, my foresight and my uncalculatable ability to evaluate human nature, I am going to let you tell me your little alibi—your feeble little reason for being two minutes late. So out with it."

"Yes, Sir", I replied, at the same time clearing my throat. "'er you see, Sir, when I was on my way to work this morning I passed by your house as usual."

"Yes, Sergeant! Proceed."

"Well, Sir, I happened to look up and guess what, Sir!"

"What, Sergeant!"

"Your house was on fire!"

"I was going to, Sir, that's why I was gonna tell you about being two minutes late—I stopped to call the fire department."

"Shades of Salome! Sergeant, what will I do?" continued the ol' boy tearing his hair and juggling the telephone violently.

"Nothing, Sir, the fire truck put out the blaze with very little damage!"

"Well, Shades of Salome Sergeant."

"Yes, Sir," I said, strutting out the office with my nose in the air.

Stamp Club

Thanks to the PRO, the Fort Benning Stamp Club will have this corner weekly. Its purpose is to bring you interesting items about stamp collecting and news of the activities of the Club, with special emphasis on extending a sincere welcome to all collectors or potential collectors—off or on the post. The Club meets on the 10th and 25th of each month in the Library of Service Club No. 1 on the main post, and we repeat: everybody is welcome. So let's have a good crowd on August 10.

* * *

The special series of U. S. stamps honoring the Axis overrun and occupied countries of Europe, marches on. The Post Office Dept. announces that the fourth stamp in the series honors Luxembourg and will be placed on sale at Washington, D. C., on August 10.

The original set up on this series did not include Denmark, but it has been recently made known that that country will be added. A. E. Fade of Denver deserves much credit for his efforts toward securing well deserved recognition for his native country.

The Fort Benning post office tells us that the four sheets of the Polad stamp that they received went like hotcakes, so those of us who lost out will have to turn to other sources.

WAAC-tion

Voting for P. T. in the morning before mess, the 46rd Company is taking up where they left off in basic training, with these exercises. Each morning the grand finale is a run-around the area—purely voluntary—working up to a six-mile climax in competition to the paratroopers. Any one interested in reducing is cordially invited to this class at 6:15 a. m. each morning in the company area.

* * *

* * *

We salute these WAACs for their pride in their uniform, their trim appearance, and their fortitude in following in the steps of their CO in keeping those ties on and their uniforms in such excellent condition.

What Do You Say?

"I've done all I can"—or, "What more can I do?"

Polecat Puts Officer In Very 'Bad' Graces

It happened a month ago—but the effects linger on. Captain Theodore Ellsworth, student in the 2nd company, 1st Student Training Regiment TIS, went stumbling through the woods and swamps north of Custer Road on a map problem.

It was a dark night and Captain Ellsworth thought the darkness, the rough terrain, the low hanging vines, stumps, mosquitoes and heat were about all a human being could endure. But he found there was one more thing to add to his total discomfort, something that made the terrain and all its terrors seem insignificant. The good captain stumbled over what zoologists might call genus Mephitis, but what the captain knew was a plain ordinary polecat.

Somehow he managed to get through the problem and back to the starting point. His classmates immediately declared the truck "Off Limits" to him and seemed to dislike his presence immensely. But somehow he did get back to the company area.

The funniest part about it all is this: Captain Ellsworth hung his raincoat outdoors so it could receive the maximum benefit of wind and weather. Four weeks later occasion arose to carry the raincoat but it turned up missing. The theft was reported to Major Donald J. Boddicker, the company commander. However, before anything could be done about it, the coat reappeared on its outdoor hook. That was one mistake which even a blind man could have noticed immediately. Captain Ellsworth is once again back in the good graces of his fellow students.

Hearing Tales of Woe All In Day's Work at Ft. Benning Rationing Board

Army chaplains have nothing on the Fort Benning branch of the Muscogee county rationing board when it comes to listening to tales of woe, claims Sgt. Louis Lipp, board secretary.

Need for hard-to-get shoes, tires, gasoline, more food for army families, food points for personnel on separate rations, and a million and one other problems are aired before the board by a daily average of 700 soldiers and soldiers' wives who want action immediately or sooner, the sergeant said.

The officers in the provost marshal's office now are staffed by eight men, rounding out the first full year of eating under the present rationing set up. It started off, of course, with Sergeant Lipp and another man handling gasoline problems. Then came tire rationing, then food rationing, then shoe rationing. With each additional bit of work came new problems, new rules and regulations to be studied, new problems.

Demands for gasoline books still constitute most of the business. About 2,500 books are issued each month. Each person must make an average of three calls before the applications go through. And that means a lot of calls and personal interviews.

Besides caring for all the flow of normal business, Sergeant Lipp and his staff have to know a lot of things. They know the mileage, to an inch, from practically any given point within a 20-mile radius to any point on the post. They know the mileage and routes from every point on the huge military post to every other point. They know where to send people to get things straightened out.

SHOE RATION 'SCIENCE'

Shoe rationing has been worked out to an exact science now, with company commanders determining largely the individual enlisted man's need for civilian shoes in advance of asking for a purchase ticket. The men file applications in their orderly rooms, then the company can send in its needs once a week or so.

Nurses, however, demand more individual attention than others because they must be on their feet so much, and many of them need certain types of shoes. Then, too, many nurses must have several changes of shoes, often depending on the weather or whether they're on night duty, and so on. Their problems are met with every effort to cut red tape and help them get shoes as swiftly as possible.

"There's one thing you can say about the job, despite all its headaches," Sergeant Lipp remarked as he went over his first year's activities. "There's never a dull moment."

ASTP Supply Officer Named Lieut. Colonel

Major Harold J. Lipscomb, supply officer for the ASTP Basic Training Center and the Student Training Brigade, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel, according to an announcement by Colonel Sevier R. Tupper, commanding officer of these two Infantry School organizations.

Col. Lipscomb has served with the Student Training Brigade since May, 1941 and with the activation of the ASTP was appointed supply officer for this new unit.

He is a native of Clarksburg, W. Va., and prior to his call to active duty was connected with the Standard Oil company of New Jersey. He attended the West Virginia University and Cumberland University. It was at the former that he began his military career as a member of the ROTC. He received his Reserve Commission in 1930.

Hill-Billy Music Artist Joins 1st Regiment

Johnnie Barfield, one of the South's most popular "hill-billy" songsters and composers, now boasts a new audience—the enlisted personnel of the 23rd Company, 4th aBttalion, First Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School. Barfield, whose repertoire numbers at least two thousand songs, many of which are original, was recently transferred from Camp Croft, S. C., for advanced radio training.

A native of Georgia and a resident of Columbus prior to entering the service last December, his entertainment has been widespread over the past thirteen years. Composer of "Boogie-Woogie," "Numbers Blues," and several other favorite recordings, the tunes of Johnnie Barfield are well-known in this section of the country and as far north as Pennsylvania.

Both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System have carried the programs of Johnnie Barfield over the air-waves, and now his music is supplying one of those vital morale aids for the men of the 4th Battalion.

G. I.'s Attempt To Bring Up Orphaned Pups

Nellie was a good girl dog and a strictly G.I. mascot of Company B, the 176th Infantry of The Infantry School troops. But she couldn't understand automobiles and didn't trust other dogs near her puppies.

Twelve days after she gave birth to nine pups, seven of which lived, she chased a dog away from her kennel near the cuartel of the 176th and then got tangled up with an automobile. It was her last chase.

Undaunted, members of B company chipped in to buy seven nursing bottles and nipples and are attempting to raise the poochies.

Sgt. C. R. Turner, one of their foster parents, recalled that Nellie's mother, Boots, joined the outfit at Anacostia, D. C., in 1942. Nellie was one of nine pups. Her brothers and sisters were taken home by various members of the company when they went on furlough but Nellie remained as the company mascot.

She went with the outfit on its maneuvers, sleeping near Sgt. Turner but paying a lot of attention to S-Sgt. Louis Rockercharlie and T-4 Tony Tumolo, of the mess department. She wasn't used to barracks, preferred tents. And civilians? She disliked them cordially.

"When she was killed," said Sgt. Turner, "we didn't know what to do. But Nellie was a game dog and we couldn't let her down. So Tumolo bought the bottles and now we're feeding them. We hope to get a mascot replacement from the litter."

Foster parents and puppies are doing well, well enough to be photographed.

W. O. KIRKLAND

Tech Sgt., Walter F. Kirkland, Jr., of the Finance Detachment, Main Post, at Fort Benning, has been appointed a warrant officers' (junior grade), it is announced. Warrant Officer Kirkland was inducted into the Army May 28, 1941. He has been a member of the Main Post Finance Detachment since June 4, 1941. He was a resident of Shreveport, La., for several years prior to his induction.

CAPTAIN RAFFERTY

First Lieutenant Thomas A. Rafferty, Automotive Section, Academic Regiment, The Infantry School has been promoted to the rank of captain. Captain Rafferty was called to active duty October 1, 1941, and was assigned to the Officers' Basic Course at Fort Benning. Upon completion of the basic course he was assigned to Camp Robinson, Ark., and served as platoon leader. He attended the Officers' Motor Maintenance Course, The Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., in 1942-1943 and upon completion was retained here as instructor in Motor Maintenance.

The rumor that John L. Lewis' picture is pinned up in the soldiers' tents overseas may be said to be without foundation.

Postmaster Says No Soldier Requests Needed During Period

Christmas mail for members of armed forces overseas should be mailed between September 15 and October 15 for Army personnel, according to Robert P. Richafdson, superintendent of the Fort Benning Branch Post Office, who also outlined the procedure to write a write a prisoner of war.

Both Christmas parcels and Christmas cards for the Army personnel overseas must be mailed during the month period beginning September 15, during this time only no requests from the addresses are required in connection with sending the Christmas parcels.

The indorsement "Christmas parcel" should appear on each gift parcel. Special effort will be made to effect delivery of all Christmas parcels mailed during that period in time for Christmas.

Christmas parcels should not exceed the present limits of five pounds in weight, 15 inches in length and 36 inches in length and girth combined. The public is urged not to include food and clothing as the members of the armed forces are amply provided with these necessities.

PACKAGE WEEKLY

Not more than one Christmas package shall be accepted for mailing in any one week when sent by or on behalf of the same person or concern to or for the same addressee.

Due to the great distances this mail must be transported and the handling and storage it must undergo, it is necessary that all articles be packed in metal, wooden, or solid fiberboard, or strong doublefaced corrugated fiberboard or strong fully telescoping careboard boxes. The fiberboard or cardboard boxes must be securely wrapped in strong paper and tied with twine. As each parcel is subject to censorship, delay in handling may be minimized by securing the covering of the parcel so as to permit-ready inspection of the contents.

Contents of combination packages should be tightly packed so that the articles may not be loosened in transit.

THE ADDRESSING

Parcels addressed to overseas Army personnel should show, in addition to name and address of sender, the name, rank, Army serial number, branch of service, or ganization, A. P. O. number of the addressee, and the post office through which the parcels are to be routed.

It is recommended that postal money orders be used to transmit gifts of money to members of the armed forces outside the continental United States. Cash remittances are discouraged because many places where soldiers are stationed there is a local prohibition against the importation of United States money, and it could not be used if received. However, domestic postal money orders can be cashed at army post offices wherever they are located, and they are paid in local foreign currency at the rate of exchange in effect on the date the orders are presented.

Mail of prisoners of war, whether internees, has to pass both our own and enemy censors. For this reason, a person should write of nothing except personal affairs. Political or military affairs of this or any other nature should not be discussed.

The letter should be as short as possible and preferably written on thin paper with a typewriter. This will facilitate passage through censors and will help speed delivery through the channels of the International Red Cross Committee in Switzerland.

WAR PRISONERS

Letters cannot be transmitted to any prisoner of war unless he has been officially listed as such. This means that his nome has come from the enemy, through the Swiss to the office of the Army's provost marshal general and has been officially published by that office.

Letters to prisoners so listed should not be sent to the provost marshal general's office for forwarding, however. If, for example, a person has been notified that Pvt. John A. Smith was captu red in the Philippines and is being held at a certain camp by the Japanese, he should be addressed as follows:

Care of the Japanese Red Cross, Tokyo, Japan.

Via New York, New York.

The upper left corner of the envelope should be labeled: "Prisoner of War Mail," and the right upper corner should be marked: "Postage—Free." If the name of the camp where John is a captive is known, this should always be specified. The name and address of the sender should be on the back of the envelope.

The procedure for prisoners in Germany and Italy is the same except that both Germans and Italians give their prisoners numbers, about which families are notified. This number should be included. Also the Italians number their prison camps, and for addresses in Ita ly, this camp number should be given, as well as the military post number.

NO PARCELS TO JAPAN

In addition to standard Red Cross packages, personal parcels may be sent to prisoners in Germany and Italy, but not to Japan.

Letters to civilian internees should be addressed as follows:

Give the addressee's full name, followed by the words, "American internee," followed by "interned by Japan" (or by Germany or Italy, whichever is the case).

Name the internment camp, the city and country in which it is located, and follow this with "via New York, New York."

On the reverse of the envelope give your complete name and address.

Keep the letter as short as possible and, again, discuss only personal affairs.

From any branch of the American Red Cross you can obtain international Red Cross inquiry forms with which you may inquire through the Swiss about a civilian American in enemy hands. This is a simpler procedure, and the International Red Cross tries to obtain a reply which it transmits back to you on the reverse of your own inquiry.

At present there is no means of forwarding personal packages to civilians interned abroad.

WAAC Helen Spangler, who is stationed in Iowa, and her husband John, a soldier in Texas, were promoted to staff sergeant on the same day.

BY SGT. CARL NEU

BEST NEWS of the week is the announcement that the 124th Gators, post grid champions, will again field an eleven this fall and that it once again will be coached by fiery Red Milton who guided the regiment to the laurels last fall. Milton, then a captain and now a major, is currently pursuing a course of instruction at TIS, but will return to the Gator area in a couple of weeks and is expected to issue the first practice call shortly thereafter.

The former Georgia Bulldog line star started from scratch last year with the orange and blue and developed a really great eleven by mid-season. After a slow start, when they lost their first two tilts against strong collegiate opposition, the great Gator eleven hit its stride and swept to seven straight wins to make a clean sweep of the Fort Benning Conference and also add the scalps of two outside rivals.

Pre-season prospects indicate that when Milton calls the first practice, almost every member of the great 1942 squad will report. Only notable missing will be Claude Hackney, the ex-Davidson back, who is now an officer in the Air Forces. But the rest of the championship cast will be back including such luminaries as Roy Cestary, the great triple-threat back and Mr. Big of Benning football; Nick Calos, the place-kicking quarterback; Stan Ergler, a ramming fullback; Vern Smith, fleet wingback; Junie Belin and Pete Pieton, the great ends; Al Berasi, a powerful tackle; and Green Howard, all-conference guard, as well as a host of others.

GRIDDER BELIN

To add to this nucleus from the 1942 championship club, Milton will have a wealth of new talent fresh from the college campus. This list includes two members of Georgia's Rose Bowl eleven, and another pair from Alabama's Crimson Tide which won the Orange Bowl encounter. The Bulldogs are Lamar Davis, varsity wingback, and Jim Todd, who often spelled Sinkwich at fullback. Sam Sharp, regular end, and reserve tackle Jack McKewen, are the Alabama lads who will wear Gator colors. Then, too, there is Bill Staus, great Iowa fullback from last fall, and Bill Corey, who used to play center for Lou Little's Columbia Lions in Ivy League circles. Fordham's Bob Fitzgerald and Texas A and M's Joe O'Leary are two more ex-collegians who will cavort in orange and blue on the Doughboy Stadium turm.

With such an array of talent, the Gators will naturally enter the field as a ranking favorite to retain their post laurels, although the competition is expected to be plenty tough. The 124th also hopes to book several outside opponents and Capt. James Brooks, the former University of Cincinnati grid manager who is once again handling business details on Milton's staff, is already busily engaged contacting outside service elevens and several top-ranking colleges. All in all, it looks like another great grid season for the Gators, and with Milton at the helm once again, you can look for plenty of thrills.

PITCHER CAVE

THE UNPREDICTABLE George Cave, crack 300th Infantry right-hander, once again upset the dope Sunday night when he pitched a four-hitter to send the 176th Spirits reeling to their first loss in the TIS race. Cave has been just that uncertain all season. When least expected to win, he has stepped to the mound and hurled masterfully. When given a breather, he has often been shellacked from the mound. No one can figure him out, least of all his manager, Lieut. Lefty Francis.

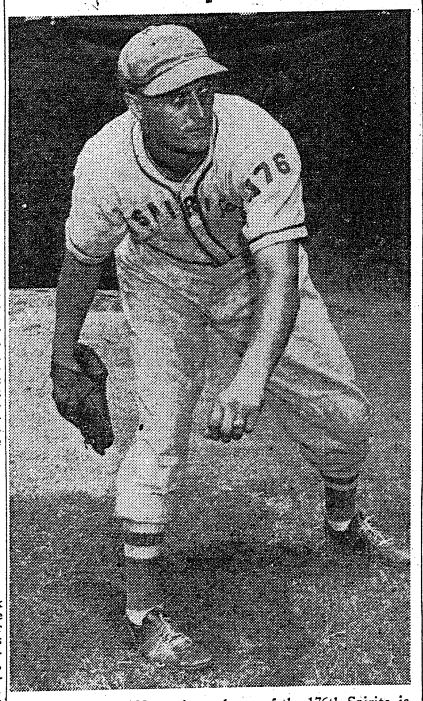
One thing is certain though. When Cave really wants to bear down, he really can acquit himself well and the Spirits will be the first to testify in his behalf. Sunday night, he was superb. Earlier in the season against the 124th Gators, he racked up the forts only no-hit, no-run game of the current season, and on several other occasions, the red-head has pitched beautifully. Withal, though, the former Baltimore Oriole is uncertain at other times. Our impression is that if Cave really gave out every time he stepped to the mound, he'd be the number one hurler at the fort. He certainly can do it when he wants to, and you'll surely hear more about the tempestuous red-head before the season wanes.

SPEAKING OF Cave and Sunday night's game, that battle drew the largest crowd of the season to Gowdy Field, an overflow crowd of more than 6,000 fans which would be the envy this season of even the big league clubs. As a matter of fact that mob was the largest to attend a Gowdy field encounter since spring of '41 when an equally large gathering watched the Cincinnati Reds and Boston Red Sox play an exhibition game here. For all we know, the Sunday night attendance might have been the largest to ever witness an all-soldier tilt. It's just further evidence that the fort has really gone baseball nutty of late. And why not? The calibre baseball and the tenseness of the games almost every night could not be equalled by most of the stronger minor leagues in the country. Yeah, man, the fans are really getting great baseball—and all for free, too!

LAWSON FIELD'S crack softball team is expected to enter the district eliminations of the national softball tournament which will probably be held right here in Columbus sometime in August. If the Fliers are successful, they will then move on to Atlanta for the state finals, and perhaps go to the regional tourney in North Carolina and the nationals in Detroit. Ninety per cent of the teams this year are expected to come from the armed forces and the team that Lawson will enter rates about as good as any we've heard of around these parts. For tournament play, the Fliers will add the services of Earl Varchmin, Benning's best softball hurler, who nominally belongs to the 1st Academic Company of the Parachute School. For outside tilts, however, Varchmin pitches for Lawson since he is quartered in the Lawson area and also played in the Lawson League. With Varchmin hurling and Lawson's strong team to back him up, the Fliers may go a long way in the nationals. Here's hoping.

ACE BLACKWELL

WHEN EWELL Blackwell, the long, lean 124th Gator, hurled the Harmony Church crew to their slick 6-5 win over the Profs on Monday night, many fans wondered at his mound proficiency. If they'd look in this year's baseball bible at his record, however, they wouldn't be surprised at the skill with which he fanned Zientara, Dabbs and Neibler in the seventh after the first two batters had hit safely. It's a fact that last year with Syracuse in the International League, Blackwell had an earned run average of 2.02 per game which ranked third highest in the league.



His won and lost record was not quite so impressive, but he did rack up 15 triumphs against 10 defeats during the regular season for the Chiefs. However, it was in the post-season Governor's Cup series that the lanky hurler really scintillated. In the nine games of the series played by the Chiefs, Blackwell accounted for three victories to lead the Syracuse nine into the little world series against the Columbus nine of the American Association. Unfortunately, though, Blackie took sick just before the series and without his services the Chiefs lost four out of five to the Red Birds. He has now been in service for seven months, and Monday night's fray was only the second nine-inning game Blackwell had hurled since his Governor's Cup triumphs last fall. Not bad going, huh?

JUST RECENTLY the members of the 176th Infantry nine picked an all-opponent team in the TIS League. The selections were interesting in that they corresponded quite closely with the all-star team selected by Sgt. Milton Luban, official loop scorer, a few weeks ago in this paper. The Spirits picked Herb Moore at first and Ben Zientara at second just as did Luban, and also had the same outfield with Red Kemether (Eagles), Pete Kunkel (Triplets) and Elber Niebler (Profs) included. At shortstop, where Luban picked Ramazotti of the Spirits, the lads chose Sammy Inoff of the 124th, while the pitching was the same with Cave, Christie, Dickinson and Prendergast listed. Luban had also added Wissman of the 176th. Only major difference was at third base where the Spirits thought Sam DiBlasi of the 300th was superior to Red McCluskey, the loop's leading hitter. That latter could conceivably be the root of many long-winded argument, since there isn't much to choose between the two hot-corner guardians.

SHORT SHOTS—A post wide tennis tourney for enlisted men is the next item on the docket for F. B. A. A. sponsorship. Announcement will be made next week. . .. 124th Gator officers still hold the lead in the officers' softball league with a record of 17 wins against one defeat. . .. 244th Field Artillery nine in TIS League has been combined with the 252nd F. A. and the team will now be known as the Artillery Group. It may provide some fireworks for the other nines who have consigned the Gunners to the cellar slot. . . . Lieut. Dan Canale, 3rd STR officer, who recently won the officers' singles title at the post, was the No. 1 player on Notre Dame's tennis teams in 1940, 1941 and 1942 and captained the Irish in his senior year. . . . The 176th and 300th are both getting whipped up about golf these days which means the 124th Gators may get some healthy links competition one of these days. . . . Lieut. Roger Reeves and his 300th boxers are now working out daily in the post gym and the former T. C. U. athlete has some neat looking prospects. . . . There are three full-fledged captains holding down infield slots in the TIS circuit. They are Thirdbaseman Spicer of the Tanks, Shortstop Graham of the 300th, and Second baseman Reed of the Spirits. . . . The 4th Training Regiment nine, composed of both cadre-men and ASTP lads, has replaced the 24th Hospital in the Fort Benning League. Finis.

Fur Will Fly In Stadium Ring Friday As Panther Boxers Face Bent Beezers

He's Top Hurler

LEFTY WISSMAN, crack southpaw of the 176th Spirits, is generally recognized as Benning's top moundsman as the season approaches the climax stage. The Spirit ace was with Rochester in the International League last season and is the property, of course, of the St. Louis Cardinals. His superior work on the hill is the major reason why the 176th nine is now deadlocked for first place in the TIS League. (Signal Lab Photo by Ruiter.)

He's Top Hitter

RED McCLUSKEY, stellar third baseman for the 6th Training Regiment Eagles in the TIS League, has paced the loop in hitting practically all season. His current average is .459 and he threatens to keep up his terrific stickwork until season's end. Slated for duty with Montreal in the International this year after being with Cedar Rapids in the Three-I last season, the hot corner guardian is the property of the Brooklyn Dodgers. (Signal Lab Photo by Ruiter.)

Profs Sag As Three-Way TIS Loop Battle Looms

Spirits, Gators Deadlocked For Lead With Eagles Right Behind

BY SGT. MILTON LUBAN

It's still a bit too early to pick a winner in this second-half of the Infantry School league race, but right now it looks as if the Academic Regiment Profs will be unhappily watching the 124th Gators, 176 Spirits and 6th Training Regiment Eagles fight it out for the crown.

The Profs seem to have lost much of their old zest, apparently trying to squeeze through with their first-half press clippings. On the other hand, the Gators, Spirits and Eagles have the pennant glint in their eyes and battling furiously all the way.

MIGHTY TOUGH

One fact stands out in bold relief: it's a mighty tough league, much better balanced than it was in the first half. There isn't a so-called underdog in the loop that isn't capable of staging an uprising against one of the leaders.

From this observation post we expect the Artillery Group to furnish some of the biggest headaches. While the Howitzers have still to win one, the team has been strengthened in several spots and has been looking better in every game. In Hoffman, the Artillerymen have a hurler who is going to cause a lot of batting averages to shrink.

HIGHLIGHTS

Highlights of last week were the games between the Triplets and Spirits and the Gators and Profs. With George Cave pitching airtight, four-hit ball, the 300th managed to squeeze through for a 3-2 triumph over the Spirits in spite of seven Triplet errors. It was the first loss for the Spirits while for the Triplets it is beginning to look like a duplication of their first half adventures when they also dropped the first two games then ran up an eight-game winning streak. Tonight's clash with the 124th and Sunday's game against the Profs will reveal the 300th's chances of making history repeat itself.

BLACKWELL WINS

On Monday the 124th Gators lost no time in capitalizing upon the Spirits loss. Packed by Ewell Blackwell's brilliant hurling, the Gators slapped down the vaunted Profs, 6-5, to climb into a first-place tie with the Spirits. As ball games go, it was rather a sloppy one, each infield kicking in with four errors. The game was a renewal of the oldest rivalry on the post and both teams seemed tightened up. The Gators, particularly, were fighting all the way and their errors were caused mostly by over-eagerness.

In the other important game of last week, burly Jim Pendergast completely smothered the opposition as the 6th Training Regiment took a 3-0 contest from the 3rd STR Rifles. Red Kemether led the Eagle attack, knocking in two runs with two hits, while George Simmons smacked in the other score.

Schedule for this week:

124th vs. 300th, tonight at Gowdy Field.

Academic Regiment vs. 300th at 3rd STR. vs. Artillery Group at 3:30, Sunday, Gowdy Field.

7, Sunday, at Gowdy Field.

764th Tanks vs. Artillery Group, Wednesday, at Harmony Church.

Officers Enjoy Softball Program

During the officers' athletic program of the Fourth Battalion, 23rd Co., 1st STR, a series of softball games has been started. Two teams have been formed by equally dividing the officers and also including the first sergeants. So far the first four games have shown good action and close competition resulting in a dead heat of two games won by both sides.

The "Hazards" composed of officers from the 19th, 20th, 21st, and 22nd Companies are matched against the "Wizards," composed 24th Companies, and battalion headquarters.

Major "Eagle-eye" McAllister is calling the strikes assisted by of officers from the 23rd, and Chaplain "Rule-book"-Reddick on the bases. The winners of a five game series will be the guests of the losing team at a battalion party.

By PFC. JOHNSTON C. WOODALL
Academic Regiment

Rudy Rundus needs a talkin' to! Yes, readers, he hasn't pitched but six games for the Profs and hasn't won but six. He hasn't struck out but 46 batters. His earned run average per game amounts to about 2.3. He hasn't but two shutouts to his credit. What Rudy needs, we think, is more games to pitch.

Our six-foot-four inch stalwart, age 21, weight 205 pounds, has really been bearing down on the batters and is amassing a wonderful record.

Rudolph Raymond Rundus, the three-R boy, was born at Belleville, Kansas.

GETS STARTED

Once upon a time in 1939, Rudy heard about the Cardinal try-out camp at Omaha, Nebrasica. So he packed his glove and off he took. After getting to the camp, Rudy exhibited such pitching wares as to be handed a contract.

The Cards sent Rudy to Monnett, Mo., in the Ark.-Mo. League where he dazzled the opposition "with a beautiful record—seven straight losses." Monnett was "by far, in the cellar of the loop, though."

TRAVELER

In 1940, Rudy went to Siloam Springs, Arkansas, a Red Bird farm in the Ark.-Mo. loop. "There I won a game—in fact seven, but I lost four," he confided.

Next, he went to Cooleeme, N. C., in the N. C. State League where he won one and lost four.

1941 BIG YEAR

The following season, 1941, he really went to town with the Cambridge, Md., club in the Eastern Shore League, winning 17 games and losing only eight.

"I about fell over,' he explained when the official scorer gave him a 1.7 run average per game.

Cambridge ended the season in second place by virtue of Rudy's excellent hurling. Rundus requested that we "needn't mention my batting average."

In '42, Rundus rambled to the Rochester club of the International League but it "wuzn't for long" as the screw ball pitching Rundus had given Cambridge the past season had hurt his arm.

He was sent to the Altoona, Pa., club, a Card farm, where he won four and lost two. There he received his draft notice, quit the ball team and went home.

From there, Rudy went to Springfield, Mo., in the Western Association where he won seven games and lost only five.

UNCLE SAM CALLS

About that time, Uncle Sam needed pitching so off he went to Camp Wolters, Texas, and from there to the Academic Regiment.

Rundus' greatest thrill was a twelve inning game for the Cambridge team, which was lost by a 1 to 0 score. Rundus had struck out 18 men and had given up only one measly hit before being relieved in the twelfth for a pinch hitter.

Rundus, seriously doesn't think it's his pitching that made the first-half champ Prof nine click—"the Profs are too good a team for the rest of the league."

He plans to "pitch baseball after the war" and he is still under a Card contract. Incidentally, his arm feels lots better and he is ready to mow the opposition down.

Rundus walked down the matrimonial aisles recently. He married the hometown girl, Norma Stransky. Since then the opposition hasn't scored a run, and the great all-American out actually got himself two hits against the Parachute School in the recent post title series.

Guiding Light of Spirits

3rd STR Sluggers and Tuskegee Fliers Meet In 12 Red Hot Fights

Dynamite Daniels Of Golden Glove Fame Battles Ed Perry in Wind-Up

Fur will fly aplenty in Doughboy Stadium tomorrow night at 8:45 when the Fort Benning Panthers begin slashing their gloved claws at the famous Bent Beezer Clug ringmen from Tuskegee Army Flying School over Alabama way.

Twelve fast, thrill-packed bouts are carded for the first inter-camp boxing card of the summer season and one of the largest crowds to ever witness an athletic event at the fort is expected to throng into the spacious arena to watch the colored lads in action.

Climax bout of the evening will bring together the colorful Dynamite Daniels, the former national Golden Gloves champ from Newark, N. J., and Ed Perry of the Bent Beezers. Perry is also an ex-Golden Gloves champ and hails from Detroit, the stamping grounds of Joe Louis.

The Daniels-Perry fracas will provide a five-round windup that is expected to keep the crowd howling from start to finish. The dynamic Dynamite, always a Benning favorite, is expected to tip the scales at 135 while Perry will go two pounds heavier at 137 pounds.

Daniels has worn the Panther colors into Benning rings several times in the past year, but rarely been a winner, simply because he was always pitted aagainst the former world's bantam champ, Georgie Pace of the 1st STR Service Battalion.

STAR COACHES

The Panther team that will enter the stadium squared circle tomorrow night has been prepared for the Bent Beezer engagement by a pair of nationally-known heavyweights, Eddie Jackson and Tim Still. Unfortunately, neither of the Panther heavies will have a chance to perform against Tuskegee, since the visitors have no one experienced enough to compete against either Jackson or Still.

Jackson is the likely-looking slugger who formerly served as a sparring partner for both Abe Simon and Tony Galento in preparing them for their engagements with Joe Louis. Still was recently listed by Ring Magazine as one of the top ten heavyweights in the country and held several amateur titles before entering the service.

VISITORS STRONG

The visitors from Tuskegee are tutored by Capt. Clarence F. Jones, Jr., and boast a well-knit team that will test the Panther claws to the utmost. Most of the lads on both sides of the ledger have had previous professional experience and ringside fans expect one of the hottest evenings of ring warfare that Benning has ever witnessed.

In the semi-windup another classic has been carded with the Panthers sending Jimmy Mitchell, a 175-pounder from Los Angeles, against LeRoy Boston, a New Yorker who hits the beam at 174 pounds. Sammy Wilson, Panther ace from Charleston, South Carolina, meets George Reed from Montclair, N. J.; and popular Joe Noble of the Benning stable will tangle with John Knox in other top bouts.

COMPLETE CARD

The complete card follows with the Panthers listed first: Dynamite Daniels vs. Ed Perry; Jimmy Mitchell vs. LeRoy Boston; Terry Livingston vs. M. C. Daniels; Joe Noble vs. John Knox; Pete Davis vs. Bill Mayberry; Levi Irvin vs. John Morell; Joe Williams vs. Andy Simon; Sammy Wilson vs. George Reed; Edgar Rogers vs. Clarence Toby; Bill Young vs. Tommy Horne; Danny Harris vs. Nelson Wright; and Orie Smith vs. Tony Jones.

Eagles Defeat Rifle Tossers

The powerful Eagles of the 6th Regiment continued their winning ways Sunday afternoon at Gowdy Field with a 3-0 victory over the 3rd STR Rifles. Big Jim Prendergast allowed the Rifles only 6 scattered hits and hit safely twice in three times at bat himself.

The Eagles chalked up two runs in the 3rd stanza when Prendergast singled and Oswald followed with a double to left field. Both scored on Red Kemether's screaming single to right. In the 8th Red McCluckey opened with a single and was put out at second on Kemether's fielders choice. The Staten Island redhead went to second on a balk and scored when catcher-manager George Simmons ingled to left field.

ONLY THREAT

Hurler Prendergast was on dangerous ground only in the 6th inning when Sorrel singled, Berry doubled and Glick followed with another single, loading the base. Big Jim settled down, struck out Silverman and Kerlic and forced Rosack to ground out in the infield.

Ex-Enlisted Man Returns To R.C. As An Officer

Lt. Wright Is First Soldier Having Distinction

From an inductee in April 1941, to a lieutenant in the adjutant general's department, is a long step but 2nd Lieut. Lowry G. Wright, took it in his natural stride. Lt. Wright has the distinction of being the only enlisted man to leave the Reception Center for officer candidate school and return there for duty after completion of the course.

Acting as classification clerk to select men for various outfits in the army according to their special training and abilities as well as analyzing qualifications as shown on government forms was Wright's first assignment in the army at the Reception Center at Benning, where he was inducted April 26, 1941.

He was selected to go to the Adjutant General's school from the Reception Center and was graduated February 24, 1943 with the rank of second lieutenant.

After the tour of duty at Fort Benning's Center, he was sent to a second school to take a course in personnel consultant work completing this course in June 1943.

His tour of duty at Benning is part of a field trip to various posts observing the procedure in the Special Training Units. Fort Meade, Fort Belvoir, Fort Lee, and the STAR program at Greensboro are stations visited before coming to Benning.

A native of Macon, Ga., Lt. Wright received his education in the Atlanta schools, receiving his A.B. degree from the Atlanta University in 1931 and his masters in 1936 from the same university. Prior to being inducted in the army, Lt. Wright did educational work in Georgia schools.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McGough, Sr., of Pittsview, Ala., announce the engagement of their daughter, Betty M. McGough, to Frank L. Brady, son of Mr. Joe C. Brady of Columbus, Ga., the wedding to take place September 4, at Pittsview.

Miss McGough attended Huntingdon college, Montgomery, Ala., the University of Alabama and Rider College, Trenton, N. J. She has been employed at Post Headquarters, Fort Benning, Ga.

Mr. Brady is a graduate of Centre College, Danville, Ky., and is at present attending the United States Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn. Upon graduation from the school he will be commissioned an ensign.

* * *

The 53rd Sub-Depot hung out the welcome sign the other day to the following trainees from the Jacksonville Vocational School. They are Lillian Clark, Loma Crawford, Angelo Lepare, and John Adcock in the sheet metal department. Mary Lyncker, Leo Altee and Tommie Fields in the Machine Shop. William Gibson, Lorene Allen, Mildred Anderson, Tony Herndon, Allean McMillan, Randy Frasier and Addie Terry in the Aero Repair and Pinky Brunson in the Electric shop. We hope all these new people like Fort Benning and have come to stay.

It's goodbye to Mary Ann Robinson formerly of the Infantry School Book Shop. We hear that Mary Ann has a grand place at McDill Field, Tampa, Fla., to be near her son and daughter, Major and Mrs. Baylor Harkos. Of course the granddaughter had nothing to do whatever, with Mary Ann's desire to be down there.

Boys Activities Plans Aquacade In Officers Pool

Plans for an "ajuacade" to be presented in about three weeks at the Officers' Club pool by the Boys' Activities Swimming Club at Fort Benning are being formulated, according to Lt. Col. Virgil E. Ney of the Infantry School, director of boys' activities at the post.

The aquacade will bring to a close the swimming instruction clases which are being conducted at the pool under the direction of Lt. William L. Bryan, instructor, and Mrs. Rusell Akers, asistant instructor.

The show, which will be built around 50 boys who are in the Boy Scout troop at Fort Benning, will include races and water formations set to music and will feature a lighted candle race. Ribbons will be awarded winners of all races, and a trophy will be presented the winning team in the relay race.

Older boys will be in the relay race, various wimming stroke races and diving exhibitions.

Smaller boys will be presented in plunging dives and leg-kicking races.

Rehearsals are being held every Monday and Tuesday night between 7:15 and 8:15 p. m. under the direction of Lt. Bryan and Mrs. Akers at the Officers' Club pool.

AST Chorus Gives Recital

The choir of the Army Specialized Training program, Basic Training of the Infantry School at Fort Benning has returned from a trip to Atlanta, Ga., where they were guests of the First Baptist Church of that city.

On Sunday, July 25th, the choir made an appearance at the Druid Hills Hour over radio station then during the morning service of the Atlanta First Baptist church, they made their second appearance of the day at a special sacred song service. Another engagement at the evening services at the Atlanta Tabernacle Baptist church concluded the day's activities. The offerings of the choir received many commendations from the citizens of Atlan ta as well as from the radio listeners of station WGST.

The choir was directed by Mr. Arthur Hall, USO, musical director for the fourth service command, former associate director of the Yale Glee Club, and Lt. Alfred W. Haight, of the second student training regiment of Fort Benning.

The choral group was accompanied by Chaplains George A. Ritchey and Theodore Bachelor. Chaplain Ritchey is the senior chaplain of the A. S. T. P. Basic Training Center and is the former classmate of the two entertaining clergymen, Pastors Middleton an, James of the Atlanta First Baptist church. Chaplain Bachelor, 4th regiment, A. S. T. P., is a former pastor of the Congregational church at South Hadley, Mass.

Post Swimming Pool Sees Old Fashioned Religion

"Madam, may we use the swimming pool for a baptismal?" a soldier asked Mrs. Neil Blackshear, senior hostess at Service Club No. 4 for colored troops at Fort Benning on a recent Sunday afternoon, just at sundown.

"Certainly, soldier," she replied.

Introductions disclosed that Pvt. Arthur Lee Sprogin, formerly of Memphis, Tenn., an evangelist who had traveled through Alabama some time ago, but now of 10th Company, Reception Center had another soldier with him, Pvt. John H. Burgess, who heard Elder Sprogin preach at Tom Creek, Ala., believed the message he brought and, meeting him at the Center, asked that Sprogin baptize him.

Using Young Pool at the Service Club for the ceremony, the two soldiers came up out of the water singing "Shall we gather at the river, the beautiful, the beautiful river—etc.", and soon the hills were resounding with this old hymn as soldiers and visitors, who had witnessed this simple ceremony performed with such dignity and reverence, took up the refrain.

Former Elder and soldier walked away from the scene in their dripping uniforms with shoes in hands down the road together—a new road for one and a familiar one to the other.

29 Enlisted Men, Interment Camp, Get Promotions

Twenty-nine promotions have been bestowed among the personnel of the Fort Benning Internment Camp at Harmony Church, Colonel George M. Chescheir, commanding officer, announces.

Technical Sergeants Thomas Smith and Reuben L. Satterfield and Staff Sergeants Albert Klick and Henry Green are promoted to first sergeant.

The rating of technical sergeant has been awarded to Staff Sergeants Robert L. Templeton and Antonio A. Lopardo.

Seals, Mario F. Santoro, Wesley J. G. Senkel and Lloyd W. Wicklund were made corporals while Pfc. Robert Cianchetti was raised to technician fifth grade.

Two-Weeks Revival Starts Sunday; Soldiers Invited

The many friends of the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Dobbins will be happy to hear that they are returning to Columbus this weekend to begin a two weeks revival meeting at the East Highland Assembly of God located at 12th avenue and 22nd street, according to the Rev. Mr. Jimmie Mayo, pastor of the local church.

Evangelist Dobbins is well known having been pastor of the North Highland Assembly in Columbus up until November of last year when he resigned to enter the Army as a Volunteer Officer Candidate feeling that he could be a greater blessing to the men in the service as an officer than as a chaplain. While receiving his basic training in a Texas army camp a rheumatic condition developed which prevented him from continuing his training and he was discharged from the service and again entered into the active ministry.

Evangelist Dobbins will bring the opening message of the revival meeting at the 11 o'clock service on Sunday morning, Aug. 1. Services will be at 7:30 p. m. on Sunday and at 8 p. m. each night during the week for two weeks. The public is invited to these services and a special invitation is extended to all service men and women. Special music and singing will be featured each night during the meeting.

By Phyllis

Many of the stores are having summer sales which really delight all the bargain hunters, men and women alike. Some shops, on the other hand, are already displaying new fall merchandise in order to give us an idea of the coming styles. This "preview" idea gives us all a chance to really shop in a leisurely fashion. Buying now saves a great deal of rushing around for something to wear the first cool fall days.

Water sprinklers and a variety of garden tools are yours almost for the asking at MONTGOMERY WARD COMPANY. You'll be able to buy all the necessary tools to keep your Victory garden in shape. And you'll not empty your pocket book, either. In this same basement department are pliers, wrenches, punches, chisels, files and drills to delight your handyman or you would-be carpenter husband. Hammers, saws, planes, hatchets, are all made carefully of the best available materials. Nuts, screws and bolts may be tiny, but there's no denying we'd be lost without them. Having a small supply of nails on hand and a hammer with which to pound them, might make possible that "Stitch in Time," some day soon. If your husband likes to putter about the house fixing and repairing things, having the proper tools will help him do a good job. If you don't know what to buy for your "tool box" have your husband shop at Ward's and he'll get just what you need.

Following a sewing pattern is now such a simple matter even teen-age girls are trying their hands at dressmaking. Sewing machines may be rented or borrowed and a little time and a bit of ingenuity is all it takes for anyone to add to her wardrobe. Keeping this in mind the J. A. KIRVEN COMPANY has a section on the main floor which is almost overflowing with bolt after bolt of fine fabrics. Seersucker, broadcloth, chambray, organdy, printed silk jersey and butcher linen are a few of the materials still available for use this summer. If you'd like to whip up a smart black wool dress or perhaps a plain tailored suit, you'll find every type fall material to choose from. Wool, rayon and wool mixtures, and a variety of crepe materials are displayed in eye-catching colors especially suitable for wear this fall and winter. To save shopping time, right next to the fabric department is a section devoted to dressmaking patterns, namely Vogue, McCall, Advance, Butterick, and Hollywood patterns. Why not pick a pattern, select a few yards of lovely materia land get busy using that needle and thread.

Temperatures still keep rising and sometimes it seems they'll just have to come down, but we still have several months of almost unbearably hot weather ahead for us all. The easiest way for all of us on the Post to forget the blistering heat is to take advantage of the swimming pools at our disposal. For daily dips in the pool most men find that simple boxer-type swim trunks are the most practical. These comfortable shorts of Zelan water-repellent fabric may be worn for swimming or as play shorts. CHANCELLOR'S, INC., still has available Jantzen or Gantner shorts in sizes 28 to 50. A tiny set-in pocket for keys and coins is a practical feature worth noting. The colors are all shades men find appealing, such as soldier blue, sand tan, natural, oyster white and plain white. The material in the shorts is mercerized, all combed cotton and of course, will not shrink. A new pair of these reasonably priced trunks from Chancellor's will help brighten many a man's swimming hours.

—V—

H. ROTHSCHILD, INC., presently is displaying some of the most attractive and reasonably priced love-seats, chaise lounges and boudoir chairs I've seen in many a day. I'm sure you'll agree with me when you see the unusual fabrics covering these different pieces. Embossed satins in lovely shades, patterned chintz materials and other upholstery fabrics combined with excellent workmanship make each article a masterpiece of its kind. The love-seats are comfortably low with sturdy little covered arm rests and well padded cushions and backs. The cushions and the backs are right in style with their decorative tuftings. Box pleats form the skirt of the love-seat and add another decorative note at the same time. Unusual also, in value and pattern, are the wing chairs displayed in this same group. Covered in patterned fabrics these substantial chairs would make a suitable addition to any living room. The boudoir chairs are most attractively designed with or without arm rests in a number of appealing shapes and with a wide variety of practical fabrics. Any or all of these pieces of furniture are exceptional values in every way.

—V—

Lovers of really good, all-wool sweaters will be, I know, delighted to hear that presently KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC., has a rainbow-colored assortment of these most practical additions to fall wardrobes. Short or long sleeves and bateau or crew-neck styles are prevalent. Many of the sleeves have been set in by hand to give that look of an expensive sweater. Not that they all are high-priced. Quality is evident in all these sweaters no matter what price you happen to pay. The shades are pink, ranging from a baby shade to Schiaparelli Pink, Peach, yellow, maize, white, red, lime green, blues of all shades, purple orchid are the colors which make it hard to resist buying one of each shade. A rather pebbly-like weave and the old faithful cable stitch are the two weaves noticeably different from the standard "knit one, purl one." Whether you favor cardigan or pull-over styles you'll have a wide choice if you visit Kayser-Lilienthal's now.

—V—

Even though the sun is still causing us all many a warm moment, it is still not too early to be thinking about using our No. 18 shoe coupon. Shoes for fall this season will be, of necessity, either black, army russet, or town brown. Though colors are limited, styles, fortunately are not. Dressy shoes, street shoes and sport shoes, all in a wide variety of styles are now available at the MILLER - TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY. Suede, pressed kid and reptile are the three popular materials featured in most of these shoes. Extremely fashionable according to Vogue are shoes of genuine alligator or lizard. You'll find low or high-heeled pumps, open back pumps, "ties" and oxford styles to fit and please you, no matter what size shoe you may wear and no matter what your tastes. Evening slippers of silver or gold kid in high-heeled or "flat styles are still non-rationed at Miller-Taylor's. Now is most certainly the time to select shoes while there is a wide variety of styles from which you can choose.

Hq. Outfits Reorganized

DEML, Finance, M. P. Detachments Now Form One Unit

Reorganization of headquarters detachment to include three groups was announced Saturday night by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Ft. Benning.

At the same time, reorganization of the Medical Detachment was announced.

The three organizations inactivated as of midnight and re-organized into one group beginning Sunday, are H. Q. Detachment, D. E. M. L., Finance Detachment and the Military Police Detachment, section one. Colored troops from the Post Detachment and the Military Police will be organized as Section 2.

Later the new group will be housed together, and a separate mess will be established. Capt. Samuel Lowry, now commanding officer of D. E. M. L., will be in command of Section One while Major James A. Mitchell will be in command of Section 2.

Personnel of the present units all are transferred in grade to the appropriate sub-sections of the new organization.

A similar new group for both white and colored personnel in the present Detachment, Medical Department, will be formed to be known as the Medical Detachment, Section I and Section II. The present Veterinary Service Detachment will be included in this set-up.

300th Infantry Get Rec Hall

Books, Magazines, Music Provided

The 300th Infantry under the direction of the Special Service Officer, Lt. Robert B. Russell, recently opened a Recreation Hall in the center of the regimental area. Formerly Tteater No. 3 the building was converted into a recreational hall when the theater was replaced by the modern theater in the Paratroop area.

The theater benches were removed and in their place are tables and chairs. The tables are always well stocked with a good variety of magazines. A radio, with phonograph facilities and records provide music.

The stage has been remodeled to permit theatricals. It is planned t orun programs organized by the enlisted men of the regiment.

Four Provisional Non-Coms Receive Conduct Medals

Colonel Frank J. Vida, Commanding Officer of the Provisional Truck Regiment, has presented Good Conduct Medals to First Sergeant Joe Ray, Staff Sergeant John Henry Spikes, and Sergeants Arthur Howard and Joseph R. Green, Jr.

This was a notable occasion in the regiment for these men were the first in the organization to receive this honor — decreed by the President of the United States for those men who have maintained excellent character and moral ratings coupled with outstanding military efficiency, and who had completed three years of active federal military service on or after August 27, 1940, or had completed one year's continuous active federal military service since December 7, 1941.

Although the medal, itself, will not be available for any of the recipients for some time, the ribbons were pinned on each of the men's breast by the colonel in quite an impressive early morning ceremony, that included the Regimental Adjutant, the Regimental Supply Officer, and the Battalion Commander, his adjutant and company officers of the honored men's organizations.

Don't forget the Pet Show to be held for all the boys and girls of Baker Village and Benning Park on Friday, July 30 (EWT). The place of the show is on the playground next to the administration building, instead of the athletic field, as previously announced.

All types of pets will be judged, and we hope to see every boy and girl out with his or her pet. In case you do not have a pet of your own borrow one from a neighbor who does not have a boy or girl to enter the pet. A variety of pets are to be found in the project. Let's have them out on Friday and see just what we do have in the way of pets.

The pets will be judged for first, second and third place, according to the list given below:

Largest pet, smallest pet, oddest pet, prettiest pet, homeliest pet, youngest pet, oldest pet, pet with most colors, saddest looking pet, best trained pet, prettiest dog, and prettiest cat.

The following persons have been selected to act as judges: Mrs. Rotari, 41-B; Mrs. Doan, 47 Clifton; Mrs. Hopkins, 124-B; Mrs. Gillard, 13 Allison, and Mrs. Harmon, 20-B.

We hope to see a good turn out for this event, and mothers are invited to bring small children who cannot come alone.

PLAYGROUNDS

Frances Hundertmark and Armyn Krakaner have volunteered their services to assist on the playgrounds several hours a week in story-telling, handicraft and games. This service will give these girls credit for the Victory Corps in high school. They will be at the Benning Park playground on Mondays at 3 o'clock, and all the children from that area are invited to participate in the games and story-telling that they have planned. Mrs. Lutz would be glad to see any of the other girls of high school ages who might be interested in volunteering their services to secure Victory Corps credit.

Tuesday and Thursday evenings the playground equipment is put out for everyone's use. Many have turned out this past week and have found somethin to engage in. We would like to see the playground at the administration office filled to capacity. Old and young alike are invited.

Horseshoe pits are underway, and we hope to have these in good shape and ready soon for those who enjoy pitching horseshoes.

Posters advertising the pet show ws the handicraft project this week. Next week soft toys from cloth and oil cloth will be started Monday and Wednesday afternoon are set aside for this activity. All boys and girls plan to meet with us on the playground for this activity.

BROWNIES

The Brownie Troop is steadily growing and is having a fine time each Monday afternoon. its sponsor is Mrs. Shoemaker, who has proved so popular that it looks at the present time as though another troop will have to be organized in order to take care of those who have expressed a desire to join.

The Girl Scout troop will meet each Wednesday at 2 in the auditorium.

An invitation is extended to all those who have not been able to attend the Tuesday and Thursday sewing class but who wish to start. Newcomers to the project are especially urged to come. Miss Rhodes is glad to assist you in all types of sewing.

All girls may join us in folk dancing each Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All girls of the Scout troop should be there to work on the bridge.

A swimming class at Russ Pool for girls up to 12 years is sponsored each Tuesday morning. Transprtation is by bus. Any girl who cannot swim may join this group. A permission slip from the parents is necessary to go off the project for this activity.

A red tricycle with rubber sear was left outside. Anyone knowing anything about it please see Joan Hagins at 77-C.

Remember---NOT ALL
are uniform!

And the same is true of uniforms. There is something about a Smith-Gray Made-to-Measure Officer's Uniform that not only makes the wearer look the part—but imports a certain look!

But, confidentially, there is something more—a "know-how" that is an integral part of the 98-year-old Smith-Gray tradition for UNIFORM PERFECTION.

We have expert tailors on the premises and are organized to give exceptional service to men slated to receive their commissions. Come in at your convenience.

Paratroops Seek Recruits Among Men In Uniform

Transfers To Be Trained As Jumpers At Chute School Here

Qualified men are needed now in the paratroops, which are more important to the Army today than ever before, according to information received today at Fort Benning from the Technical Information Division at Headquarters of the Army Ground Forces.

Soldiers whose applications are approved will be transferred to the Parachute School here at Fort Benning.

If you want to join the paratroops, here are a few answers to questions about which you may have wondered.

Question: What are paratroops?

Answer: Paratroops are essentially Ground Force soldiers who jump to fight. They are troops transported by plane, landed by parachute, who carry out special missions such as capturing enemy airfields or destroying vital enemy supplies.

Q. How do I join the paratroops?

A.: Arrange first of all with your First Sergeant to have a physical examination at your unit dispensary. If this examination shows that you meet the requirements, write a letter of application stating that you desire a transfer from your present unit to the Paratroops. This letter of application, addressed to your company commander, will then be forwarded through channels. If the application is approved, your transfer to the Parachute School at Fort Benning will be arranged.

Q.: What are the physical qualifications?

A.: The qualifications are: Age—18 to 32, inclusive; Weight—maximum not to exceed 185 pounds; Height—maximum not to exceed 72 inches; Vision—distant vision uncorrected must be 20-40 each eye, or better; Feet—a serious case of flat feet will disqualify; Genito-urinary System—recent venereal disease will disqualify an applicant; Nervous System—must be normal; Bones, Joints and Muscles—lack of normal mobility in every joint, poor or unequally developed muscle development, poor coordination or lack of at least average athletic ability disqualifies; Medical History—history of painful arches, recurrent knee or ankle injuries, recent fracture, old fracture, with deformity, pain or limitation of motion, recurrent dislocations, recent severe illness, operation or chronic disease disqualifies; Blood Pressure—must be normal. Other than these, the requirements are the same as prescribed for entrance into the Army, although only men who want particularly active and strenuous duty are desired.

Q.: Can I try to join again if rejected previously for some administrative reason?

A.: Yes. The fact that you were turned down on a prior application due to your General Classification Test score or some other administrative reason does not bar you from applying again.

Q.: If accepted, where will I be sent for training?

A.: To the Parachute School at Fort Benning.

Q.: What is the Parachute School?

A.: The Parachute School is the best school in the world for the training of paratroops. It is the result of years of experimentation by the Army in developing the best equipment and training methods to give American Paratroops the best training available. The course covers a four week period.

Q.: What will I be taught at the Parachute School?

A.: First of all you will be given training designed to "toughen up" hands, legs and muscles which will be needed in the work which will be assigned. Then will come a gradual period of training in jumping, starting from platforms from which you will learn to jump and roll and tumble properly. To accustom the student parachutist to the sensation of descene, you will be given rides in a seat guided by cables attached to a 250 foot tower. Then come a series of qualification jumps from a plane at varying heights. In addition you will learn how to pack your parachute. Along with these instructions comes training in specialized work to be done once a landing is made, such as driving a motorcycle, driving a locomotive, how to use explosives and the advantages of surprise attack.

Q.: Who will my instructors be?

A.: They will be men who have had Paratroop experience over a long period of years, men especially trained to teach you. Many of them are Paratroopers now returned from action at battle fronts to give you the advantage of their experience.

Q.: Is there extra pay involved?

A.: Yes, Parachutists are paid $50 monthly in addition to the pay of their respective grades. A private receives $100 a month minimum. Other enlisted men are paid up to $188 minimum, plus extra pay for length of service. Pay begins upon entrance into the Parachute School, after the weeks of basic training is over.

A.: You will be assigned to a Parachute battalion, part of the Airborne Command, which is under the Army Ground Forces. After additional training and participation in maneuvers you will then be ready for action.

Officer Favors 'Tac'-Instructor Lend-Lease Idea

1st Lt. Everette A. Stoutner, who has been on three months special duty with the Weapons Section, Academic Department, TIS, returned to the 1st Student Training Regiment to resume his duties as a tactical officer in the Sixth Company.

Lt. Stouter states that he is much in favor of the "Lend-lease" policy between the Student Training Brigade and the Academic Department. "The policy tends to create a more mutual understanding between the Tactical Officer and the Instruction regarding their duties and problems." Since the ultimate objective of both the Student Training Brigade and the Academic Department is to produce and turn out the finest officers the world knows today; there should be a very close and meticulous coordination between the two organizations.

Lt. Stouter, a graduate of Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Ia., was a "three letter man" in track. He was captain of the track team his senior year. The team, coached by Rorrest S. Rittgers who is now a major in the Army, won four straight Midwest Conference championship.

Sgt. Story Heads New Spiriters' Non-Com Club

The 176th Infantry's Non-Com Club held an election meeting at which time the following officers were nominated and elected: 1st Sgt. Payton Story, president; 1st Sgt. Raymond L. Jones, vice president; M-Sgt. Quinton C. Davis, 3rd, secretary, and M-Sgt. Edwin Singleton, treasurer.

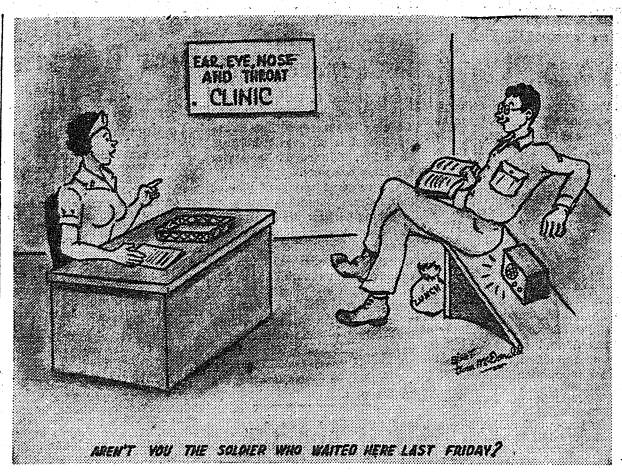
The club now has 264 members, a large percentage of whom attend the regularly scheduled Friday night dances held in the club house. The members are planning on a "Weenie Roast" to be held sometime in the very near future. All expenses for this outdoor picnic will be absorbed by the treasury. The exact date of the affair hasn't been decided upon as yet.

C. W. O. Richard Walden donated an American Flag to the club, and it hangs very prominently in the center of the floor. Cpl. Charles Bischoff is in charge of the maintenance of the club and it is his excellent work that has enabled the club house to assume the appearance of a country club.

Provides Records For Spirit Cuartel

Through the sponsorship of the Chaplain's Office of the 176th Infantry, familiar hymnal recordings are played every Sunday morning between 8:30 and 9 o'clock in the center of the Spirit Cuartel. It is hoped that these recordings will encourage more men to go to church on Sundays.

The Chaplain's Office has an album of three dozen records embracing organ music, vibra-harpe and organ (giving the impression of chimes), and semi-classical music. The Sunday morning music reminds the men that it is Sunday, and that they ought to go to services.



Among the many records are the "Lost Chord" with Jesse Crawford at the organ; Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus," "Face to Face," "Come Thou Almighty King," "Onward Christian Soldiers," and "Lead Kindly Light."

Five Spiriters Become Citizens

Five members of the 176th Infantry became citizens of the United States last week in a ceremony held at the Columbus Court House. Their names aren't important, their thoughts and reactions are! They all still have relatives in occupied countries.

One soldier expressed his sentiments this way: "This is something I've always wanted. This country is the greatest country in the world. I can remember enough of my old country to appreciate this one."

Another new citizen said "I am happy to call myself an American citizen. This is a great country, and I'm proud to be a part of it. My being able to become a citizen quicker than I had thought possible made me very happy. I will always do my best to live up to the high ideals this country possesses."

Insurance Man Visits Post

In Drive To Secure Maximum Coverage For Entire Military

Visiting Fort Benning last week in connection with the current drive to secure maximum government life insurance coverage on all military personnel was Major Virgil Samms of the Adjutant General's office, life insurance section, in Washington, D. C.

Major Samms, who has only recently completed tours of duty in the South Pacific and the Caribbean theaters of operations, as a member of a life insurance team of three officers, noted that while a large percentage of troops in the United States are protected with government insurance, unprotected casualties in combat zones have run as high as 25 to 50 per cent, a figure which has caused much concern in the War Department.

Stating that for the sake of himself and his dependents each soldier is morally obligated to carry the full $10,000 protection offered. Major Samms also added that dollar for dollar it is the best policy that can be purchased. For the man without dependents the major urged National Service life insurance as a substantial investment, with excellent conversion possibilities.

During the series of conferences, each unit commander was informed of his responsibility in seeing that members of his command are adequately protected against combat risks.

CAPTAIN HOWELL

Lieut. William L. Howell of the Weapons Section, The Infantry School, has been promoted to the rank of Captain. Capt. Howell was called into active service on May 9, 1941 as an enlisted man with the Corps of Intelligence Police at Fort Hayes, Ohio. He attended the Corps of Intelligence Police School in June of 1941. On February 11, 1942, he was assigned to the Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, Georgia, as a student. Upon receiving his commission on May 12, 1942, Capt. Howell was assigned as Instructor and Administrative Officer, Heavy Weapons Combat Training Group, Weapons Section, The Fnfantry School.

Lieutenant Jones Dons Double Bars

First Lieutenant Starr W. Jones has been promoted to the rank of captain.

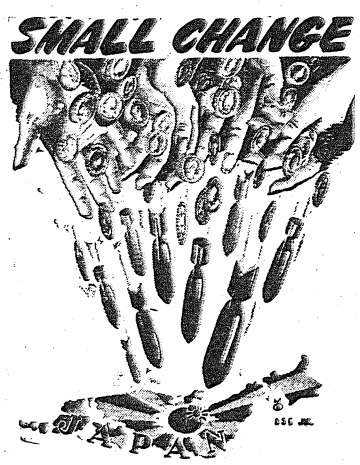
Captain Jones was inducted at Fort McArthur, California, on April 23, 1941, and was assigned to Service Company of the 53rd Infantry at Fort Ord, California, on April 28, 1941. On July 29, 1941, he served on interior guard duty through California, Nevada and Utah. He was assigned to Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, on March 16, 1942, and received his commission as a second lieutenant on June 12, 1942. Upon graduation and commission he was assigned as instructor to the Weapons Section, The Infantry School and was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant on August 29, 1942.

Tankmen Make Fox-Holes Rapidly In Unique Manner

The young lieutenant was a transfer from the walking infantry. He was instructing his platoon of the 538th Armored Infantry battalion, in hitting the ground. He welcomed this—his first opportunity to show these Armored Force lads, who he understood thought themselves a bit on the tough side, how real foot-soldiers slam themselves down on the sometimes bony bosom of their good friend, Mother Earth.

In the prescribed Infantry School sequence, he would first have demonstrated the improper method—then he himself would show his platoon the way genuine doughboys assume the prone position.

The lieutenant chose for his victim the puniest of his trainees—a spindling youngster who, he was sure, would go down by the numbers in at least eight counts. This jelly-bean infantryman shyly walked out in front of the platoon. On the lieutenant's order he slammed himself down with such force that he disappeared from sight.



When he had been dug out from under four feet of red Georgia clay and had spit the rocks out of his mouth, this panty-waist dog-face blurted, "I'm sorry, sir, you had to dig me out. You see, in our outfit we do this from half-tracks. We dig holes in the ground when we hit, but we always bounce out!"

Elinor E. Jones, women's Southwestern Golf champion and New Mexico state title holder, and a member of the board of directors of the Women's Trans-Mississippi Golf Ass'n., has joined the WAAC and is in basic training at Fort Des Moines, Ia.

Have a "Coke" = Dinkum Cobber
(HOWDY, PAL)

... or how Americans make friends in New Zealand
"You're a dinkum cobber", says the New Zealander when he wants to call you pal. The American soldier says it another way. Have a "Coke", says he, and in three words he has made a friend. It's a phrase that says, "Welcome, neighbor" from Auckland to Albuquerque. 'Round the globe Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the high-sign between kindly-minded people.
"Coke" = Coca-Cola

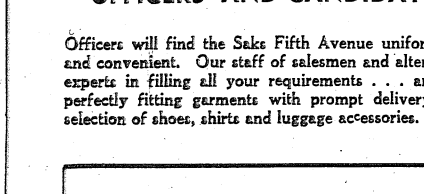
Reception Center Mess Sergeant Supervises 18,000 Meals Daily

Responsibility for 6,000 meals, three times a day or a total of 18,000 meals a day rests on the shoulders of Master Sergeant Jonathan Black, non-commissioned mess officer of the Reception Center.

Joining the Army September 16, 1929, at St. Louis, Mo., Sgt. Black has served all the grades from private to master sergeant in the 20 years he has served in the Army.

With the exception of two years spent at Tuskegee in the reserve corps, Sgt. Black has spent his with such famous outfits as the 24th Infantry, the Bakers and Cooks, the Biglerville Mess and at the Officers' Club but since 1940 has served at the Reception Center in his present capacity.

Under his direct supervision are the five messes at the Reception Center, including the mess for the special training units which have just been activated at the post.



WASTE WATCHED

Sgt. Black personally supervises the ordering and checking in and out of the foods, as well as the cooking and serving. Special attention is paid to waste—last Friday the overall waste per man was .17 pounds—and each mess has its waste weighed after each meal, and entered on records in order that waste can be eliminated to the greatest extent and too that any mess having an excess wastage is given special attention and inspection.

Each kitchen is personally inspected before and after each meal to see that every kitchen, refrigerator, mess hall, and table is in the spotless condition required by the Army. Sgt. Black and his corps of cooks and helpers feed this vast Army of soldiers with the best food the Army offers. It is prepared in the most palatable manner, in spotless mess halls, from the cleanest kitchens, to the hungriest soldiers in the world who can have one, two, or three servings if their appetites require that amount of food. Fish, beef, pork, lamb, and the choicest fresh vegetables and fruit in abundance, with the aid of these capable men supervised by Sgt. Black make these men among the best fed in the world.

Sgt. Edward L. Bellevue of the 20th Company, First Student Training Regiment, of The Infantry School is an avid fisherman. So is Pfc. Edward P. Zareski of the same company.

The sergeant is indeed pleased that Private Zareski is interested in fishing because the latter alone can provide proof that the Sergeant recently caught a "gar fish" weighing between 15 and 20 pounds and measuring five feet in length in the muddy Chattahoochee. The fish was caught on a small hook with an ordinary fishing line, a feat which the sergeant himself can hardly believe. He has no photographic evidence.

W. D. Abolishes Limited Service

Effective August 1, the classification of enlisted men as "limited service" will be abolished by the Army, according to the Army and Navy Journal of July 24. Clarification of the order has not been received as yet at post headquarters.

Indications are, according to post officials, that while the classification will be abolished, commanding officers may retain limited service men if they are qualified to perform their present duties.

The order calls for a physical examination of all enlisted men now classified as limited service. Those men, according to the Journal, who can pass current tests will be retained on active duty and all reference to limited service will be stricken from the records.

Men not able to pass the examination will be discharged, unless commanding officers desire to retain the men in their present capacities. Post authorities expect that the order will be a means of discharging incompetent men who have physical or mental defects.

FROM SOUTH AMERICA

A large number of the Frenchmen come from South America and from widely separated localities such as Peru, Curacao, Haiti, Costa Rica, El Salvador and Brazil.

Also in the French contingent are men born in Russia, Italy, England, South Africa and France.

In the American contingent are officers who have seen service in Africa, the South Pacific, Hawaii, Panama and Alaska.

One, Lt. John H. L. Buffington, of Newark, served 12 months in Alaska and didn't even catch a cold. But the first day in Fort Benning, he was bitten by a dog.

Instructions to this group appear complicated but the men are working out their own solution. The lectures are given in English and those French who understand English interpret them for their associates. The French and Americans are making headway in swapping languages, teaching each other their native tongues.

Lt. Joseph J. Mazur, executive officer, was surprised by the aptitude of his company in picking up commands. With a mixture of sign language and verbal commands, he has his platoons functioning in remarkable unison.

NO SPECIAL FOOD

The "Legion" is getting no special treatment in the matter of food. It is being served regulation American army chow and there have been no complaints except for a few gripes by Americans.

In addition to the 12th company, there is another group of South Americans, all from Brazil, who are forming a class for a similar course in the First Company of the First Student Training Regiment.

The connection is expected to be completed within three weeks at the latest and then the new road will be in use from Columbus. Then traffic can come into the main post by the old route over Benning Boulevard, and over the new road from downtown Columbus, converging either on Lumpkin road or Benning Blvd.

The new super-highway also will bear traffic out to Harmony Church and the Sand Hill areas. One bridge remains to be completed before traffic can flow to those parts of the Post, but it is hoped to have it completed by the time that the cloverleaf connection with Benning Blvd. is ready for use, Capt. Sidwell said today.

Civilian personnel are asked to have passes ready for presentation so that the flo wof traffic into the Post will not be held up while only the one artery is being utilized.

Pepper Bill Proposes Post War Education Loan Fund

Servicemen Could Borrow Up To $1200 To Complete Schooling

A bill providing loans to warhervice persons for educational purposes has been introduced in Congress by Senator Claude Pepper of Florida and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor in the Senate, according to advices reaching Fort Benning this week.

The proposed bill states that since the education of many men and women in the armed services and the merchant marine has been interrupted by the war, such people should be encouraged and assisted "to complete their education, or to take such training as they may be qualified for and worthy to undertake."

Under the proposed bill war service persons would be entitled, under certain conditions, to loans up to $1,200 a year to attend colleges, training schools or other educational institutions. The amount of the loan would be determined by the opinion of the educational institution or training school which the individual wishes to attend as to the sum necessary to provide for living expenses, exclusive of tuitions, books and fees of the person, and dependents of the person.

The tuition, fees, books and supplies required of the student by the educational institution would be provided by the Commissioner of Education of the United States under provisions of the proposed legislation.

Such loans would be made without collateral security and would bear one per cent interest per year, and be repayable in 10 equal installments. The first installment would mature one year after the student ceased to be eligible for the benefits. Each war service persons making loans provided for under the proposed bill would be credited with half of the amount of each payment due on such a loan at the time of maturity if he or she shows good faith and diligence in the work upon the certificate of the educational institution attended.

Captain Keeney Commands 6th Company, 1st STR

Sixth Company, First Student Training Regiment is now commanded by Captain E. M. Keeney recently returned from Puerto Rico where he had completed two years duty with the Caribbean Defense Command.

Captain Keeney entered on active duty in April of 1941 after having previously served on Civilian Conservation Corps Duty within the First Corps Area. Shortly after reporting for duty at H. F. C. A. he was assigned to the Caribbean Defense Command and ordered to report to the Puerto Rican Department.

In May of this year Captain Keeney received orders to return to the United States and in company with several other officers who had also, been in the Caribbean Area for over the last two years, he came back to the mainland on a Navy Transport. He was attached to the Student Training Brigade and first saw duty at Fort Benning with the Fourth Battalion of the First Training Regiment, joining the Sixth Company early in July.

Totem Poles Grace H. C. Officers Club

Some of the most unusual and outstanding works of soldier art on the Post of Fort Benning are the grotesque but attractive totem poles that decorate the Officers' Club in the Harmony Church area. Extending to the height of eight feet, the four skillfully executed carvings form an exotic setting for the two large fireplaces which they ornament. Each pole is carved into gaily colored animals and gargoyles which are symbols of Indian tribes. Further carrying out the Frontier motif are friezes of silhouetted figures which depict such Wild West characters as Cowboys, Indians, and dashing stage coaches.

Carved out of virgin poplar, by Sgt. Fred A. Netzlaff, Operations Section of the Student Training Brigade, the totem show unusual sculptural ability. The excellence of the work is all the more surprising when it is considered that this work was the first essay into the field of wood-carving made by Sgt. Netzlaff, although it is true that he was a carpenter and cabinet maker in civilian life. Sgt. Netzlaff credits Lt. Col. Harold J. Lipscomb, S-4, STB with his inspiration stating that the officer supplied him with photographs of totem poles with the suggestion that an attempt be made to duplicate them. "So," said Sgt. Netzlaff, "I started chiseling and it turned out pretty good results. I may make it a habit."

Lt. Clinton Resigns From Army To Direct Citizen Food Conservation

Famed Golden Rule Restaurateur To Try Program on National Scale

Fifty million pounds of food salvaged from the garbage cans of American homes is the ultimate aim of Lieut. Clifford E. Clinton, assistant mess officer at Fort Benning, whose resignation from the U. S. Army is effective this week when he leaves the fort to direct the "Citizen's Food Conservation Program," under the direction of Marvin Jones, War Food Administrator, Washington, D. C.

Having set in operation the food savings plan at the Fort where the number of pounds of food saved per day has proven its worth, Lieut. Clinton will set in motion this same program on a nation-wide scale for civilians.

Beginning the saving test fall in making melba toast, apple butter toast and weiback from left-over sliced bread, rolls and even bread "heels" by dextoronizing, this program has grown until at present each mess segregates, weighs and records waste from trays by having the soldier scrape all left-overs on his tray into receptacles especially marked for segregation as "meat," "vegetables", "tomatoes," "desert," and "bread." This segregation serves a two-fold purpose. It causes the man to think and realize that the army is determined to prevent waste, and disliking the segregation idea the soldier manages to avoid it by not taking more than he can eat. He is privileged to return for seconds or even thirds if he so desires.

The second purpose is it gives an accurate measurement for all plate waste permitting the mess personnel to adopt more corrective procedures. Messes that have adopted this procedure have reduced wastage 90 per cent in the first six days.

Believing that food has been proved the critical weapon in war and peace, not excepting ammunition, Lieut. Clinton has a plan to make every citizen in the United States food conscious. The essential elements of the plan would be to make every person in the United Stats sconscious of his ability to assist in the food shortage crisis by saving at least one-half pound of food per day per person, thus instituting in every household a conscientious food saving plan within its own four walls making it a definite, component of the "Win the War" campaign.

An important part of this program will be greater saving in purchasing, storing and preparing food as well as the use of all edible parts of vegetaoles eliminating the over-all wastage. The same waste segregation plan used in the army mess hall would be instituted in individual homes—making members of the family waste conscious. Already there are six average homes using this plan as a test for other homes, whose findings will be announced.

Contests will be conducted and United States War Bonds will be awarded as prizes for the best suggestions, slogans and posters to be used in the nation-wide food conservation program. Business houses, newspapers, and the radio will be used to nationally educate people in its possibilities, its scope and its tremendous food saying potentialities.

WORLD WAR VET

A veteran of World War I, Lieut. Clinton saw action with a tank outfit overseas during this conflict. Although he wanted to join the armored forces for World War II, his age kept him from joining this branch or the Infantry. However, he was accepted by the coast artillery and sent to Camp Wallace, Texas, for training.

The deeds of yesterday often catch up with the man of today, and so it was with Lieut. Clinton, then Pvt. Clinton. Reporters discovered that Pvt. Clinton, famous for his Golden Rule Restaurants in Los Angeles, Calif., and with this discovery came the death of his dreams for active duty. He was placed in charge of the Bakers and Cooks school at Cap Wallace, until he was sent to Carlisle, Pa., to Medical Administration school where he received his gold bars.

Director of dietetics, for a large mess at Fort Benning in August, 1942, was his first assignment as lieutenant. This mess hall vowed to undergo many strange changes from a regulation G. I. mess hall to one with painted walls, canaries, gold fish, a piano and juke box for music with meals.

CAFETERIA STYLE

Here in this mess was instituted for the first time the serve-yourself-cafeteria-style of service for mess halls. Using double lines of trayes the service was so speeded up that 600 men could be served in approximately eight minutes. This mess was the first to allow G. I.'s the privilege of smoking with their meals, and hand painted ash trays—made from empty tomato cans painted in gay colors with flowers—were placed on each table. Thus mess call was looked forward to with pleasure instead of something to be "done and got through with."

Applying the Golden Rule to his army activities, Lt. Clinton had the mess hall decorated with pictures and flowers; more care was taken in the preparation and serving of the food—for the idea was instilled in the minds of the cooks to prepare the food as they would like to have it prepared for themselves; and jams, drinks, and other extras were provided at a buffet table for their service.

Soon after the first of the year, plans were completed for the reopening of the Army Exchange Cafeteria on the main post. Lieut. Clinton was assigned to visit several large camps in various parts of the country to get first hand knowledge of the latest army equipment, management, and food preparation in these large camps, to couple with his personel knowledge of cafeterias for civilians gained from operating the Brookdale and the Pacific Seas in Los Angeles, for several years before enlisting in the army.

THOUSANDS FED

Thousands of soldiers with a sprinkling of civilians are fed daily at this cafeteria. Soft lights; soothing music; flowers, palms and hanging baskets; pictures; and neat courteous counter girls coupled with good food, attractively served make it the favorite eating place on the post.

The WAC detachment mess is indebted to Lieut. Clinton for his help in planning, decorating and serving their mess. This mess is painted white, with attractive curtains, flowers, and large plaques of Pallas Athenea, their emblem used in cutouts on their walls and ash trays. The color scheme of green and gold is carried out in the decorations here.

So, leaving Fort Benning and army messes behind him, Lieut. Clinton takes to his new assignment personal knowledge of a per-

12 Apartment Buildings To Be Added to Village

Relief from the acute housing situation in the Columbus-Fort Benning area is in sight with the construction of 12 apartment buildings with a capacity of 80 apartments to begin in about 60 days.

The temporary war housing project will be for white civilian employes at Fort Benning.

Work will be done under order of the Federal Housing Authority, according to Brown Nicholson, executive director of the Housing Authority of Columbus, local government agents.

Proposed site of the apartment buildings, a tract adjoining Baker Village on the southeast, has been approved by Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning.

The housing situation was never so desperate as this week when the Fort Benning billeting office reported it had not one room listed for rent in Columbus-Capt. John A. White, billeting officer, asserted.

An appeal was issued by the office to residents of the Columbus area to make available to army personnel and their families any housing facilities which they may have. An employe of the billeting office said rooms and apartments are so sought that many times Columbus householders will report five vacant rooms in a morning, and all will be occupied before noon.

Charles Pearce Paralysis Victim

The body of 13-year-old Charles Lovick Pearce, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Lovick B. Pearce of the Infantry School, has been taken to Washington, D. C., for burial in Arlington Memorial cemetery.

The boy died Sunday at Warm Springs, Ga., where he had been a patient for several months, the victim of infantile paralysis. He was stricken with polio in September, 1942 and was confined to Station Hospital for some time.

He was well known on the Main Post, having operated a paper delivery route. He was born in Charlotte, N. C., April 23, 1930. His father is assigned to the Publications Section of the Infantry School.

Besides his parents, he is survived by a sister, Anna C. Pearce.

It's High Time The Army Clean Up The Restaurants

An Editorial

Little doubt remains but that the Army generally has been responsible for removing, in most areas adjacent to camps, sources of venereal disease. Evil conditions such as red light districts, long tolerated by civilian governments, were cleaned out when the Army said that the health of soldiers would not be jeopardized. Much has been published in The Bayonet and the local press on the progress made in this area with the problem of venereal disease and prostitution.

In Columbus and Phenix City, however, there remains one dirty problem which we think it is within the province of Army authorities to attack, and that is the filthy, unsanitary condition prevailing in some of the local eating places.

We know of at least one place where no facilities exiet for employees to wash their hands in the one toilet which must serve all customers and employees, male and female alike. In another place a feeble sign states that all employees must wash their hands after using the dirty toilet facilities provided. The washbowl available, by its own filth, would bring shudders to those not at all squeamish normally.

Bones and entrails of animals litter the courtyard of still another place at which one must pass through the kitchen and courtyard to find a latrine. Garbage thrown in such confusion about the place certainly must provide a feasting place for hundreds of rats. In fact we have seen rats in one place act with such impunity that it is obvious they are tolerated and treated as friends. Before the war, it is recalled, the United States Department of Health regarded rats as a major menace to the nation's health. Presumably rats have not changed their status as potential carriers of germs which could spread a deadly epidemic.

At the soda fountain-lunch counter of another establishment frequented by Benning soldiers and their families the sour stench of decaying food is so strong that only one with a cast-iron stomach or suffering with chronic catarrh can possibly endure the nauseous odor.

Now all of the instances which we have cited above might possibly be labelled superficial. Yet if such conditions can be seen at a casual glance or a whiff, we shudder to think what a careful inspection would reveal.

The remedy is simple. If the Lonesome Pine Tavern can be placed off-limits as a measure of safety for the health of troops, so can any restaurant which flaunts all the common-sense rules of sanitation. We suggest that the medical inspector's office work out an inspection program in cooperation with local civic health authorities. That such a program can produce results is amply proved by what was accomplished with the filthy haunts of prostitutes.

Violations of decent standards may not be found in a majority of places, but where the managements of eateries refuse to follow some sort of standard it is not asking too much that Army authorities protect the men and women of this command.

FDR Has Post-War Plans For Servicemen

Service men and women may look to their readjustment in the post-war period with a feeling of security, according to a report on demobilization made by a conference established by President Roosevelt following his radio speech to the nation one week ago.

Among other social security benefits for service men and women in the demobilization and readjustment period following the war, the report called for a three-month furlough for every man and woman to be given at base pay, but not to exceed $100 per month, plus family allowances.

The need for rapid conversion of industry now geared to a war economy back to a peace time basis was emphasized by the report which recognized that the bulk of employment should be supplied by private enterprise.

SIX-POINT PROGRAM

A six-point program was mapped by the committee. It follows:

1. Three months furlough at regular base pay not to exceed $100 a month, plus family allowances.

2. Beyond that time, if necessary, unemployment insurance for 26 weeks for those who register with the United States employment service.

3. Special aid and counsel regarding readjustment and rehabilitation.

4. Special provision, including tuition and allowances, for those who wish to pick up the broken threads of their education or follow some special course of training.

5. Veterans' credit for old age and survivors insurance on the basis of service in the armed forces.

6. Opportunities for agricultural employment and settlement to be provided for a limited number of qualified servicemen. But in general, agriculture should not be looked upon as a dumping ground for the industrial unemployed, since the problem is broader than that of agriculture alone."

2230 ROTC CADETS EXPECTED NEXT WEEK

College Men To Be Assigned To ASTP Fifth Regiment

The recently activated 5th Training Regiment of the ASTP is making plans to receive a group of 2230 ROTC cadets this coming week. The ROTC men will come here from schools and colleges throughout the country and will receive the usual basic training before going through the rigorous officer candidate work.

During recent weeks the officers and men of the 5th Regiment have been straining every effort to prepare the area and training program so that every detail from the feeding of the men to the intricasies of training will click with the precision of a veteran organization.

Col. Kenneth S. Whittemore, commanding officer of the 5th Regiment, and his officers have a wide variety of background and experience that should make a well-balanced outfit. Col. Whittemore has 26 years experience as an officer in the regular army. Many of the others are veterans of various branches of the Infantry school, while others have been practical experience with basic training work at Camp Wheeler, Ga. Among the latter is Lieut. Col. James T. Cook, regimental executive officer, who is well known in Columbus and Macon.

The 5th Regiment will give this group of ROTC men the practical background of being enlisted men which should supplement their theoretical knowledge and make their officer candidate work easier and more profitable.

A total of $12,267.25 in war bonds and stamps were sold Monday night by a bevy of Fort Benning girls heade dby Film Actress Jane Russell at a bond rally held at the Patio Grill, Major George Fink, post war bond officer, announced Wednesday after a final check-up. The sales were made within a period of three hours.

Miss Russell was assisted by Lorraine Pointer, Mary Childress, Elizabeth Morgan, Mary Coan, Katherine Flynn, Doris Brown, Estelle Burns, and Marguerita Brescia, all employed in the civilian branch at Benning. Jack Gibney, WRBL announcer, also gabe his assistance. Miss Russell appeared at the rally through the courtesy of WRBL by whom she is employed as a bond saleswoman at the Victroy Tank downtown.

Major Fink declared that he was pleased with the results of the Patio Grill rally and said that Benning looks forward to participation in the seventeen billion dollar war loan drive slated to get underway September 5.

Camel Caravan To Play Post August 11-14

Popular USO Camp Show Schedules 5 Outdoor Performances

The Camel Caravan will visit Fort Benning from August 11 through August 14, inclusive, to give one outdoor show a night, Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer, announced. First performance will be next Wednesday at 8:45 p. m. in Doughboy Stadium. Another show will be presented the next night, same time and same place, before the Camel Caravan moves to the Harmony Church area. It will play in Harmony Bowl Friday at 8:45 p. m. in the Third Student Training Regiment Amphitheatre Saturday at 8:45 p. m.

Setting the pace for the star-studded show is Al Ferguson, a mirthquake in himself, who acts as master of ceremonies. His gags will send howls your way, and you won't want to let him off the stage.

His playmates include Bill and Pearl Wilson, magicians, whose tricks are as engaging as a top sergeant's orders, and the lovely Adrian Sisters, a melodious trio who have appeared at leading supper clubs in the country. The art of terpsichore is represented by Pearl Robins, a "tap on toe" specialist.

Emcee Ferguson insists Pearl satys on her toes to keep away from the heels. Additional attractions are a couple of table tennis champions, Sol Schiff, four time national, champ, and Cal Skinner, 1942 top man in the east.

Music is by Lee Barrett and her boys. The luscious and talented Miss Barrett has been in the limelight since she was ten when she first made her debut at a piano concert. Apart from music she

Future Wars Vet Co-Founder Goes To War

One of the veterans of Future Wars, the organization of American undergraduates whose satirical demand for prepayment of a 1956 bonus achieved headline notoriety seven years ago, has "gone to war," it was disclosed here recently.

He is Robert G. Barnes of the Eighth Company, 3rd Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, whose home is in New Haven, Conn. He was one of the 12 undergraduates who founded the organization at Princeton University in the spring of 1936 and guided the story career in the nation's press is now an officer candidate here.

TIS Graduates 68,307 In 19 Month Period

During the 19-months period from January 1, 1942 when the Officer Candidate training program swung into high gear, the Infantry School at Fort Benning has graduated 68,307 men from its various courses.

The majority of the graduates listed in the total figures released by Gen. Allen were commissioned officers. The figures also included enlisted personnel from the technical schools.

CLASS A DAY

This vast army of graduates is the result of the amazing growth of the Infantry School since the beginning of the war. There was a time during this period when an officer candidate class was graduated once every two months. At its peak, the school graduated classes almost every day.

There was a time, too, when the flow of candidates became so great the school could barely keep ahead in the building of installations for training. The area required for these installations now totals 220,000 acres, more than double the area employed on January 1, 1942. Hundreds of new barracks, and lecture halls were built, land was cleared and prepared for scores of outdoor classrooms.

Comparison of the graduation figures of the Infantry School with those of our largest universities, and a similar comparison of the areas involves, provides a comprehensive idea of the magnitude of the Infantry School.

General Fulton Swears In Hq. Detachment

Members of the WAAC Detachment, station complement, Fort Benning, "are in the Army of the United States" as of 7 p. m. Wednesday.

They were sworn in by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, post commander, and after the ceremony are no longer known as "auxiliary So and So" but as "private, corporal, sergeant," since they assume the grades as well as the privileges of enlisted men in the Army. The latter include free mailing rights, government insurance, dependency allotments, and all other benefits given enlisted men.

In swearing in the WAC's, Gen. Fulton praised their loyalty and ability to do their job and expressed appreciation for the effective manner in which they have assumed positions at post headquarters, relieving many enlisted men for active duty.

Authority for enlisting members of the WAAC into the WAC complements, AUS, Army United States, was received at Fort Benning late Tuesday by Lieut. Gail Gaines, commanding officer of the WAAC Detachment, station complement, from War Department. Machinery was immediately placed in motion to enlist as many women as have passed the rigid

'Gators Spend 24 Millions On Insurance

Climaxing an insurance drive in the 124th Infantry of The Infantry School Troops, 1st Lt. Guy W. Mack recently announced the Gators have invested $24,633,000. This figure represents 89.83 per cent of the Regiment with an average policy of $7,750 per man.

Company I boasts a 100 per cent, with each man holding an average $8,400 policy. Company G holds the greatest amount of insurance, having purchased $1,625,000 in government insurance.

Medical Department Anniversary Observed

The past week brought to a close a series of July celebrations by the Medical Detachment, Station Hospital, Major John B. Joyner, commanding, commemorating the 168th anniversary of the Medical Department of the United States Army.

The celebrations were under the direction of 2nd Lieutenant D. J. Dionisio, M. A. C., Special Service officer of the Detachment. Dances for the different units were the feature events, and the Unit Number One dance highlighted the activities of the month.

Music for the festal gatherings was furnished by the Detachment's own band, which is billed on local public appearances as "The Biggest Little Band in Fort Benning."

The Main Detachment Dance, attended by enlisted men and their dates, was held on July 29 at the Polo Hunt club. A bevy of attractive student nurses from the Columbus City hospital were special guests.

The club, situated in a nook of the Benning woods, was an ideal setting for the dance. Refreshments were served, and the large crowd enjoyed itself to the utmost as the strains of popular music brought merriment and good cheer to the nocturnal scene.

The anniversary dance for Unit No. 2 was held at Harmony Church.

HOE-DOWN

The colored detachment of Unit No. 1 made merry at Service Club Number 4 with an old-fashioned hoe-down.

The colored personnel of Unit Number 2 had a two-fold cause for celebration since their new recreation hall was completed during the month. They made the most of it with a shindig in which the dusky Joes and their girl friends cut fancy terpsichorean capers on the polished floor until long after "Taps" had sounded.

Speaking on the occasion of the anniversary, Major Joyner, veteran of World War I, said:

"Over a century and a half ago the Medical Department became a part of the United States Army. It began as a small staff attached to a few scattered armed units of that day. Since that time it has grown into a close-knit organization of mercy, serving millions of fighting men. For 168 years it has gone into the smoke and mud and blood of battle-scarred areas, and today it is serving on the rapid-fire battle fronts of the world.

"Through all these years the Medicos have kept the men in uniform ever 'Fit for Fighting.' They have worked while others slept, performing their manifold duties to stricken fighters, and have been an integral part of the wars of yester-year, uncomplaining, and with quiet efficiency, caring for those who could not care for themselves, twenty-four hours a day, 365 days out of each year, men of the Medical staff have been on the job. It is, therefore, an honor for men of this Detachment to be carrying on the noble work which a small body of patient, sympathetic men began 168 years ago this month."

Jump Recordings To Keep Individual Chutists In Shape

Hospitalized paratroopers at Fort Benning, who have been injured during training, no longer are out of the swing of things.

The Parachute School here, which trains army paratroopers for the Airborne Command, has provided several recordings of actual jump instructions inside planes over Benning, among other sound effects. These records have been turned over to the Station Hospital where the invalided paratroopers may listen to recordings on days when they want to, hear the drone of a C-47 the instructions of a jumpmaster, or the audible reactions of 'chutists as they are about to bail out.

ARCHERY RANGE

"Arrow shooting is a sport which trains the eye and steadies the nerve," said 2nd Lt. Dionisio, Special Service Officer of the Detachment. "It furthers the training of the Medical soldier in that it utilizes some of his off-duty time in practice which stands him in good stead in the strenuous hours of hospital duty."

Army Engineer Corps Personnel Needs Increase

With the development of the Allied campaign in Sicily and the necessity of developing bases in conquered territory, the need for men in the Corps of Engineers in the army is greatly increased, Captain James A. Baird, area engineer at Fort Benning, says.

Civilians reasonably proficient in any of the trades or construction industry may be voluntarily inducted, and enlisted men in the army who were specialists in these lines in civilian life may be transferred to the Corps of Engineers with definite assurance of getting the right job, Captain Baird said. Classifications range from that of camoufleur to tractor driver.

The Corps of Engineers gives men who volunteer for this work a chance to fit in the army in places for which they are best fitted and the variety of assignments is probably greater than any other branch of the service can offer Captain Baird stated. Assignments are available in the army air forces, the army service force or the army ground force, as the engineers operate in all branches.

In stressing the wide variety of jobs available for trained men, Captain Baird pointed out that the Amphibious Engineers actually landed American troops in Sicily. One of the ways in which they confronted the numerous problems was to throw chicken wire over barbed wire entanglement and crossed right over the wire without having to cut it piece by piece, he said.

Many ratings are available for men coming into the engineers Captain Baird said, and go up to and include master sergeant ratings.

CRITICAL NEED

In emphasizing the tremendous need for men with construction experience, Captain Baird pointed out that bridges, ports, airfields, and roads, to mention only a few, must be built in captured territory for use of combat soldiers and the transport of supplies. Much minature equipment, including scrapers and other excavating equipment, has been developed to be carried on airplanes to extremely distant battlefronts. Men in the Corps of Engineers will go right along with the equipment, Captain Baird said.

Civilians who have experience in these lines are divided into two brackets for joining the corps. Those from 18 to 37 years of age are eligible for voluntary induction, while those from 38 to 56 will come in strictly as volunteers under the present setup.

Interviews with Captain Baird in the office of the area engineer at Fort Benning will be granted to anyone interested, and the interview will impose no obligation upon the person involved, the captain stated.

CAN TRANSFER

Qualified enlisted man already ian the army also can be transferred to the engineers from other units, if their commanding officer gives them permission. However, such men seeking transfers must have their commanding officer's approval before obtaining an interview.

Among the wide fields in which men are needed are mechanics, carpenters, draftsmen, machinists, surveyors, radio operators, firemen, welders, well diggers, blacksmiths, telephone linesmen, motorboat operators, bricklayers, plumbers and cabinet makers.

Men coming into the Corps of Engineers also are eligible for officer candidate school after they have completed their preliminary training. In some cases, qualified men may be recommended directly to officer candidate school without the completion of the 13 weeks' training, Captain Baird said.

Material things must be the servant of man's growth and not the master of his decay.

We all know what we expect of the army. Let's begin to see what the Army expects of us.

Soldier Killed By Falling Pole

Fatally injured when a large pole being set up for observation purposes toppled over on him, Pvt. George W. Mallory Jr., 19 years old, member of the motor pool section of the First Parachute Training Regiment, was killed at noon Friday.

Pvt. Mallory was the son of George W. Mallory, Sr., R. F. D. Olean, N. Y., and Mrs. Ada Mallory, 370 W. Ferry St., Buffalo, N. Y. He was inducted on Feb. 12, 1943, at Fort Niagara, N. Y., and was sent to the Field Artillery Replacement Training Center at Fort Bragg, N. C., where he served until he came to the Parachute School on May 26.

BAND CONCERT

Patients in the Neuropsychiatric section at Station Hospital heard the Medical Detachment band and Corp. Jennie Gramis of the WAAC Headquarters Detachment at their regular weekly concert. The band played "On the Alamo," "You'll Never Know," "Embraceable You," and "My Gal Sal." Corp. Gramis sang "Let's Get Lost" and "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes." Cold punch was served.

Third Regiment Dedicates New Amphitheater

Arena Conceived And Built In 10 Days By Soldiers

It took only ten days for the Third Student Training Regiment's new amphitheater, dedicated last week, to move through the evolution from idea to reality. The amphitheater which is ideally located in a ravine that was a "natural" for just such a project was premiered by a presentation of USO Camp Show's, "Happy Landings," a musical revue featuring Joy Caylor's All-Girl Band. The entire production, setting and attraction was highly lauded by an enthusiastic throng of 3,500 G. I's.

The idea was hatched simultaneously in the minds of Major Everett Posey and Lt. Henry Blake of the regimental supply office who after conferring with Lt. Milton Bach, the 3rd Student Training Regiment's special service officer, made immediate plans to clear the ground and set up a stage.

Full credit for the construction of the amphitheater goes to Cpl. Nicholas Rosack, who having learned of the contemplated project volunteered his services. From then on things began to take form. Cpl. Rosack and a handful of men detailed from the Service Battalion worked from the crack of dawn till sundown, their ardour and enthusiasm for their task carrying through all obstacles.

The amphitheater can seat close to 4000 and plans are now being made whereby boxing bouts and other sporting events may be held on the stage which measures 42 feet in length and has a depth of 32 feet.

Draft Board Member Jumps Gun Into Army

A member of his own Selective Service board in Port James Thomas Munro of the Orchard, Wash., Candidate 21st Company, Third Student Training Regiment, did not wait to send himself "greetings." He came into service last December under the volunteer officer candidate plan.

Candidate Munro received his basic training at Camp Roberts, Calif., and was ordered to Fort Benning last month. A lawyer by profession, he held a position of high prominence in his home community where he was municipal court judge and chairman of the Republican County Committee.

Have a "Coke" = Come, be blessed and be happy

...or how to break the ice in Iceland

"Come, be blessed and be happy", says the hospitable Icelander when he meets a stranger. That's a warm way of putting it, but no more friendly than the way American soldiers say it. Have a "Coke", says the Doughboy and it works in Reykjavic as it does in Rochester. The pause that refreshes is the friendly way to say "Hi, pal" in any language. All over the globe Coca-Cola has become the gracious ice-breaker between kindly-minded strangers.

"Coke" = Coca-Cola

Benning Soldier Contributes Poem To Service Verse

A lyric picture of life in the wartime Army, Navy and Marine Corps is presented in the 41 poems by soldiers, sailors and marines published in the July All-Servicemen's issue of the "AMERICAN POET," verse monthly published in Brooklyn, New York. Fort Benning is represented with a full-page poem by Pvt. Walter Miller, of the Academic Regiment's MIRROR.

The 25 poets who have contributed have sent their verse from stations all over the Continental United States, from shipboard, from the South Pacific and, in several cases, simply from "overseas."

The realistic subject-matter of the poems is indicated by some of the titles: "All Leaves Cancelled", "General Alarm", "Joe Trains", "Poems from the Convoy", "Airplane".

Pvt. Miller, who was cited in "AMERICAN WRITING. 1942", as one of the better poets of the year, has published widely in various periodicals, and has appeared locally in the Academic Benning BAYONET.

Benning Press Association Announces Organization

A Fort Benning newspaper association was formed Saturday by representatives of six camp newspapers meeting in ASTP headquarters in the Harmony Church area. The organization, to be known as the Fort Benning Press Association, named Sergeant John M. Naylor, editor of the ASTP Pinebur, chairman pro tem.

Next meeting of the press association will be held Saturday at 10:15 a. m. in the Special Service office of the 176th Infantry Regiment to elect permanent officers. The organization will have as its primary aim a program to establish cooperation between the 10 odd post newspapers and will attempt to coordinate more closely their operations and activities, Chairman Naylor said.

Those attending the initial meeting were Chairman Naylor, Sergeant Milton Luban, editor of the Academic Mirror; Corporal Leo A. Breuer, sports editor and staff photographer of the Shavetail; Technician Fifth Grade John J. Fitzgibbon, editor of The Threehundredth; Pvt. A. Shapiro, associate editor of the Spirit of 176, and Pvt. Sheldon A. Keitel, member of the staff of the post public relations office and the Bayonet.

Every soldier newspaper published at Fort Benning is invited to join the press association.

Three former OC tactical officers of the 2nd Student Training Regiment, TIS, have reported to the 6th Training Regiment and have been assigned by Col. Robert Sharp, regimental commander.

First Lt. George W. Duncan, Jr., was appointed adjutant of the Second Battalion which is commanded by Maj. John L. Warack. First Lt. Joseph F. Grady, Jr., was assigned to the 12th Company and 1st Lt. John S. Calhoun was assigned to the 16th Company. The three lieutenants are graduates of the officer candidate course at The Infantry School.

MAJOR ORVILLE J. HALL, who leaves the Sixth Training Regiment where he was plans and training officer. Major Hall was a member of the Attack Committee of the Tactical Section, TIS for 13 months. He leaves Fort Benning to report for duty with the Infantry faculty of the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla. (Infantry School photo.).

CAPTAIN HOMAN

First Lieutenant Robert W. Homan of Company H, Academic Regiment, The Infantry School has beeen promoted to the rank of captain according to a recent announcement here.

He joined the Ohio National Guard in 1932 and when the entire outfit went into active duty, Capt. Homan came in as a Cpl. He was later promoted to Sergeant and was assigned to Officer Candidate School in March of 1942. He received his commission on June 27, 1942.

United States In Need Of Definite Foreign Policy

It is probably no exaggeration to say that 98 out of 100 American men in the armed forces think that because they are willingly doing their best in whatever branch of the service they happen to be in they are performing all that their country should require.

An overwhelming number of Americans regard international politics and foreign affairs as a shady dishonest mess which they won't even try to understand. They prefer to leave these matters to professional diplomats whose business they consider it is.

What so many of us innocently fail to realize is that in our form of society and government the actions of the President, the diplomats and Congress is ultimately at the mercy of popular opinion and that means the opinion of you and me and every other G. I. It further means that if you and I or our parents had been more intelligently informed in these matters the present war would not be taking place and we would be pursuing normal happy lives.

If you ask the average soldier why we are at war he'll answer, "Because the Japanese stabbed us in the back at Pearl Harbor" or "Because Hitler and the Germans are trying to dominate the world." Unhappily the real reasons and issues are not as simple and clear cut as this. It is perfectly possible that if American popular opinion had made feasibly a concerted foreign policy Hitler would never have come to power and Japan would have never been able to attack us.

To make a perfectly concrete example of how public opinion can frustrate the best efforts of competent statesmen let us recall our very own opinions of five years ago or even less. Although the President, our Department of State and the war and navy department knew perfectly well that war was absolutely inevitable anyone who ventured a warning was called a war-monger. To give that aid to England which no sane person can dispute in the light of subsequent events has saved us from invasion and devastation at this moment the President had to buck strong congressional and popular opposition. Many of the most intelligent people were deluded into supposing that we could avoid war by "minding our own business" and we missed committing the grossest error, folly and disgrace of our entire history by one congressional vote whereby the army was saved from disbandment in the fact of the greatest impending crises in the history of the world.

It is never a pleasure to be reminded of our own wrongheadedness but there were no doubt thousands of soldiers who when the last named measure missed being passed by so precarious a margin felt angry and ill-used. Let them reflect on what the possible consequences would have been. The United States has never once since her beginnings entered a war for which she was prepared and this has been inevitably due to the torpor of the people and their downright refusal to recognize a danger until it engulfs them. In answer to those who may point out that we never have lost a war it may be remarked that we have never engaged a first class power without the aid of formidable allies.

Now the typical American response to having these facts noted is "Yes—admitiedly we were mistaken but happily at whatever cost we've rectified our errors so let's get the war over with and get back to normal."

This attitude extended to its implications means in effect "Let us put down our enemies, make a just peace, and get back to a more prosperous version of our lives in 1937". It also means if American thought continues in its accustomed channels that we will take care of ourselves and once again keep our skirts clear of "foreign messes."

Now just let us consider one aspect of a future world in which the United Nations have emerged victorious over Japan and Germany and let that aspect be China: After centuries of political and economic stagnation wherein the nation to all practical purposes was in the same stage as the western world during the chaos of the middle ages, China within the past quarter century has shown evidence of a renascence and a disposition to take the place to which her area and population entitles her as a major industrial modern world power.

Leaders capable of bringing about China's rejuvenation have come to the fore and the process is inevitable. It is a question of under whose tutelage China's transformation is to take place and upon that tutelage and upon our attitude depends whether the formidable China of the not distant future is to be the friend or enemy of the United States.

Let anyone who thinks that such possibilities are of the remote future reflect on how short a time (less than half a century) Japan transformed herself from a primitive agricultural group of small islands into one of the greatest industrial and military empires of all time. China has the potentialities of far greater power than Japan possesses and while the realization of that power may be delayed nothing can prevent its ultimate fruition.

There are millions of people in China who don't care particularly who rules them, in fact many of them probably don't even know the Manchu Empire has ceased to exist. Given control over the country and an extermination of its able present leaders the Japanese could in a very short time reconcile a vast majority of people to their leadership through means of a puppet emperor or some such device. The Chinese, Heaven knows with some reason, have had no cause to love occidentals as such and are not so keen to love the difference between Englishmen, Frenchmen, Germans etc., as we are. In the course of a generation the Japanese, given a free hand, could forge a combine with China which all the powers of the Western World might struggle against in vain.

In short China is destined to be in the van of future world power and it behooves us to have her our friend and not the instrument of our enemies.

However, it does not follow that merely because we aid China in defeating Japan that she will therefore automatically love us forevermore.

We were the mentors of the Japanese, the English aided the Germans and the Italians in their struggles to become great nations, yet regard the present day lineup. Nations do not predicate their world policy on sentiment but rather on what they conceive to be their national interests and the ethics which prevail in the intercourse between individuals do not obtain in international affairs.

In order to cope with these headaches and to minimize the possibilities of future wars the United States has got to have a carefully planned foreign policy and such a foreign policy once formulated must have consistency and continuity and not be subject to the whim of changing administrations and capricious public opinion which can jitter with every excursion of a sensational press. No man can make a worthwhile agreement or bargain with an individual who is emotionally unbalanced and changes his mind with every breeze. By the same token how can our Allies trust an agreement made with us when a subsequent political reversal in Washington can bring about a repudiation of the arrangement? It happened after the last war when an isolationist congress, reflecting the views of a similarly minded people, prevented our power being thrown into the balance of world affairs through the League of Nations, and nullified its worth.

Whatever faults one may have to find with the present administration any intelligent American must be profoundly grateful for the forcefulness and consistency of its foreign policy in our national interest in the face of stupendous difficulties and it is to be fervently hoped that some means of insuring its continuity without regard to changes of political party might be insured.

In our democracy, as it has been observed before, popular sentiment controls our dealings with the rest of the world. With the best will in the world even the most intelligent of us are influenced by newspaper, magazine and radio sources. In fact one of the curses of the present age is our acceptance of ready made opinions and willingness to let others do our thinking for us.

Surely in the present circumstances the Government has a priceless opportunity to drag popular opinion out of the torpor or aimlessness of which it has been guilty. Under army tutelege are the men who are to comprise public opinion in the immediate future. Surely the very act of induction which takes us out of our particular little neck of the woods is one step towards giving us more broad and cosmopolitan conceptions of world affairs. A gesture toward indoctrination in foreign policy or world affairs is made in the sporadic lectures we receive on the origins of the present war and its progress.

These lectures however are apt to be given to large groups in a warm sleep producing auditorium and by means of an impersonal sound film. The result is that they are apt to interest only the men who are already pretty well conversant with such matters.

It would surely seem as though simplified discussions of American foreign policy and its direct bearing on the individual soldier by instructors who are really interested in their topic and are capable of imparting this interest to a small audience would pay valuable dividends in the immediate future.

E Pluribus Unum Indeed Our Motto

It is interesting to note that since Pearl Harbor one written and spoken word of American speech has almost vanished. Historians of the future no doubt will take cognizance of the fact that with America's entrance into the war the personal pronoun "I" became obsolete almost overnight, and in the place of the often obnoxious term, we began to hear the plural and more social "We.'

No longer do we say, "I will do a thing. We say, instead, "We will do it!" This is a subtle indication of the cooperative spirit which American people possess. It is indicative of the wholehearted, fullbodied support which we give to that which we believe to be right. Faced with a national problem, our individual and comparatively petty desires and ambitions vanish as each of us willingly becomes one unit of a mighty whole, bent on a single purpose. This purpose, in the present case, is to win a war.

This ability to work as one on the part of the American people, is, perhaps, one of the outstanding reasons why we have never lost a war. When the people of an entire nation can, for the nonce, strip themselves of their individual pleasures, comforts and desires to give their all to the cause of Democracy, the people of that nation are certain of success, complete and lasting.

People of foreign countries receiving American newspapers and short wave radio broadcasts must be impressed, consciously or subconsciously, with this absence of the "singular" in American thought. Since continual use of the plural indicates that every man, woman and youngster of a great nation are working as a whole toward a single purpose, it must have a heartening effect on the feelings of our Allies. For our enemies it must be, to say the least, disquieting.

GARDEN OF ROSES

To fight on the western sea,
And I cherished the rose that he placed in my hair,
When he kissed farewell to me.
Many months have passed, yet the rose is fresh
As the kiss I shall ne'er forget—
And the winds of time may tarry long—
But we'll wait for Johnny yet.
When the garden of roses blooms again—
And man of his bondage is shorn,
My Johnny will pluck a rose for my hair—
As before on a distant morn.

THE FOUR COMRADES

There were four brave men on the battlefield,
Four comrades, tried and true—
Oft in the face of death they'd laughed,
And many were the tales they knew.
The mark of youth shone in their eyes,
Though solemn and bold were they,
And versed in the ways of blood and war,
And the clarion call to fray.
Said one, a blue-eyed Irish lad,
"He was always by my side,
And smiled to heed my every whim,
Tho he oft himself denied."
And another, tall and lean and dark,
With a muffled voice, spoke he—
"His wife is my darling sister, and
She waits for him patiently."
A solemn voice joined the other two,
Tho harsh and rough, it yet did blend
To form an almost holy note,
As he said "He was my friend."
And, with one last look, they turned away,
With sorrowful steps they trod,
Leaving him to the graces of
His Father and his God.

USO Presents—

A SERIES OF SPLASH PARTIES PICNICS, AND THE ATER DUTCH TREATS

BY PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

The summer home hospitality program of the Ninth street USO will roll on through the month of August with a series of splash parties, formal garden parties and regular old-fashioned picnics . . . A few of the highlight attractions arranged by the USO are a icnic at Weracoba Park in Columbus Friday, August 13; a picnic and swimming party on the following Sunday, August 15, at the farm of Abe Straus, and a terrace dance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Simons in Columbus.

Invitations for the various affairs can be secured by soldiers if they will contact either of the directors, Mr. Edward Korn or Mr. Eugene Bergmann, at the Ninth street USO.

Although Miss Mel Tolbert, program director at the Columbus Salvation Army USO, was confined to her home last week with a sprained knee, she arranged a swimming party and picnic for tonight at the Abe Straus farm . . . Soldiers from Fort Benning's Parachute school have been invited . . . Mrs. Mary Johnson, assistant program director, had taken over for Miss Tolbert while she was away.

o o o

The Town Hall program Sunday at 3 p. m. (EWT) at the Ninth street USO will feature a discussion of war news and how it is handled from the fighting fronts and in the camp newspapers . . . The musical program that day at 4:30 p. m. (EWT) will feature all Tschaikowsky works.

o o o

A change in the schedule of the Sunday boat trips aboard the Falcon on the Chattahoochee river sponsored by the Ninth street USO is announced . . . he trips now begin at 2 p. m., and the price of the day's sport has been reduced to 75 cents.

o o o

Miss Naomi Gail, former recreational and welfare worker in Boston, Mass., has succeeded Miss Helen Wohlstedter as assis t director at the Ninth street USO . . . Miss Gail comes to Columbus after a USO orientation course in New York City . . . Miss Wohlstedter had been at the Ninth street USO six months.

Another in the Phenix City Salvation Army USO's series of novel theater parties is scheduled for Tuesday night . . . The plan, conceived by Mrs. Kathleen Smith, program director, is operated on the "Dutch treat" style . . . There is no limit on the number of soldiers invited, but Mrs. Smith asks that all who are going along to make a reservation . . . Soldiers and girls are paired, and together they go to a Columbus theater.

Everybody pays his own admission, and after the party the group adjourns to the USO for refreshments . . . It all begins at the club at 8:30 p. m. (EWT).

Food For Thought

Clan, comfortable mess halls will make the eating of meals more enjoyable and will cause the men to eat more nearly the proper amount of food and result in less food waste. During hot weather the mess hall should be properly ventilated at all times. All the windows and doors should be open to allow the circulation of fresh air through the building. Where available, fans should be used to speed up the circulation of fresh air. A supply of ice water in the mess hall will add to the comfort and pleasure of the men.

A few days ago, a quantity of bread, potatoes and other vegetables were found in the garbage at a mess which previously had a good record on food conservation. This waste was no doubt due to the carelessness of some member of the mess personnel. All mess personnel should be thoroughly instructed on the proper handling and conservation of food. Evidently this mess prepared a larger quantity of food than was needed for the men attending the meal, and after having it left over, the easiest way to get rid of it was by placing it in the garbage.

Left over foods can be made into attractive dishes and served at the subsequent meals. At times, spoiled food is found in the garbage. Except where refrigerators unexpectedly get out of order, there is no excuse for having spoiled food. Use left overs, perishable fruits, vegetables and meats before they have time to disintegrate or spoil. To do this requires careful checking and planning on the part of the mess sergeants and cooks.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

It has been prophesied that the time will come when the taking of human life by the state will seem as barbarous as the institution of slavery.

However, I can see no valid reason why one who deliberately commits murder should not forfeit his own life.

The old Mosaic law, an eye for an eye, has its good points. Even our human relations provide conditions which call loudly for retaliation. The mischief is, the law often acts as a boomerang. It maims the avenger as well as the enemy. You hurt yourself.

They threw a stone, you threw a stone,
I threw a stone that day;
Although their sharpness bruised the flesh,
He had no word to say.
But for the moan he did not make
Today I make my moan;
And for the stone I threw at him,
My heart must bear a stone.

The get-even spirit is not a good spirit. It takes grit and grace to sit by in silence when an injury is done us but that will win—our silence.

There is another way out.

Vengeance is Mine; I will repay, saith The Lord. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.

Stamp Club

Our government has thought up various means of convincing us that we ought to keep our big mouths shut in time of war, but Cuba has stolen the march on us on one account. They have issued an "anti-fifth column" set of stamps of five denominations which urges the loyal Cuban to fight the fifth column and to keep his lips sealed.

Did you know that the United States Government once employed a fleet of high powered camels to run the mails in the western deserts? However, the experiment proved a failure, because the rocky terrain of our badlands was a little too hard on their feet. The camels were turned loose and in time completely disappeared.

There are rumors that pressure is being applied to issue a three-cent stamp commemorating the 150th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the capitol building in Washington, but so far we hear nothing definite.

The current series of flag stamps seems to be crowding everything out of the limelight . . . Considering the far-reaching expanses of the British Empire, and considering the air-mindedness of the people of that empire, it seems strange indeed that Great Britain has never issued an airmail stamp.

Don't forget that the Fort Benning Stamp Club holds its third meeting in the library of Service Club No. 1 on the main post at 7:15 p. m. on August 10. Mr. I. Amster, our vice president, has promised a talk on United States stamps, and considering the magnitude of his specialized collection, this should be a talk well worth dragging a chair up to. So come out of hiding, you stamp collectors, and let's see you show up on the 10th.

Kay Says—

A PROFESSOR'S WI FE GETS GOOD TRAINING FOR LIF E IN ARMY

Mony women, suddenly confronted with the uncertainties which are the lot of an army wife, are appalled at the prospect of sudden moves, sad farewells to friends, and the possibility of indefinite separation from their husbands. Not so those of us who have had the good fortune, or misfortune—all depending on one's point of view—to have spent previous years in the role of the wife of a pedagog.

The faculty wife's existence, unless the man in her life has finally settled down, is filled with many of the problems which confound an army wife. Far pastures, to many a teacher, have a habit of looking greener. His long-suffering wife knows what it is to pack the children, the dog, and various household possessions into an over-burdened car for a cross-country trek.

She has acted as an advan force to find a suitable place to live. She has learned how to pack efficiently, and to be chary of hoarding possessions when freight charges come out of the family pocketbook. She has learned how to brighten up a furnished apartment with a few cherished knick-nacks, and to be philosophical when prized articles are broken in shipment.

She has known what it is to be left to her own resources, when her husband is working for another degree at summer school, or is deep in the throes of research. Often she helps the family finances along, in such a case, by finding work she can do.

She has learned to separate the wheat from the chaff among the other wives of the faculty. She knows who has something to contribute to her faculty women's club and other worthwhile organizations, and who prefers to take in the entertainment and shirk on the work.

She has already learned how to go into a strange town and make friends, and she has learned not to grieve too much when friends leave. She has discovered that friends have a habit of popping up unexpectedly, perhaps after years of absence, and that one seldom loses complete track of persons of whom one is genuinely fond.

For her occasional party for army personnel is a welcome relief after more rigid faculty teas and receptions. She accords the wives of superior officers the same courtesy and respect she has been want to tender the wives of college deans. The huddle of men at a mixed party, talking over interests closest to their hearts, is already an all too familiar sight. And having learned to differentiate between the lowly instructor, the professor, and the doctor, the title of Lieutenant, Major, or General comes more easily to her lips.

The ex-faculty wife has learned to combine the roles of maid, laundress, and yard man, when recalcitrant school boards or state legislatures decide to economize on teachers' salaries. And she has learned that the same school boards or state legislatures, in their temperamental moments, can make life fully as unpredictable as can the prospect of orders to an undesignated station.

In short, she's learned to take life as it comes, a valuable asset in these uncertain times.

Sucker Bait . . .

AND ANDY FELL F OR MUSIC EVERY TIME HE H EARD IT

BY CAPT. F. M. SCHILLING
1st STR

Old P. T. Barnum sure hit the nail on the head when he said something about suckers being born one per minute. He had the straight dope, all right. Most of us go for the hook if the bait's our brand. Of course, there're a million kinds of bait, too. My name's Andy Barnett (P.F.C.), and I'm a sucker for music. Take Mike Johnson and me, we both like music; it's a booby trap that gets us every time. With others it may be women, or money, or power, but Mike and I'll stick to music, thank you.

Music has lead us into lots of trouble at times . . . like the time we got caught trying to crash into the "Grove" the night Bunny Berigan hung clarinet notes on the lights over the third balcony. Man, those notes were high. They'd slide up from a mellow start, too. They'd start so low you could almost touch them, but before you could take a breath they'd be hitting the ceiling. The music wasn't loud, but it carried. We could still hear it from the outside even after we got bounced out. As I was saying, Mike and I were suckers for music. Any kind of music.

Miks wasn't with me the day the bug bit me near the corner of 6th and 48th. I was alone. But the music was there. Music that had layer after layer of harmony and melody. None of this "jump-up-and-down - like - you - got - ants" stuff, but real honest-to-heaven harmony and melody. So I followed, like a young kid following the smell of freshly made apple pie. I was hungry for music.

It was coming from the inside of a church I'd walked by a million times but never really noticed. A small, homey little church, with the plainest front you ever saw. Inside it was cozy and clean. You could smell the clean smell of the pine rafters and the cedar panels. The flowers up front sort of blended in and had you wondering if this wasn't about the closest you'd ever come to nature and goodness. It sort of carried you to a mountain top where you could see billowy white clouds floating in pale blue, and could feel a cool, refreshing breeze while scanning over lofty virgin timber and watching a small sailboat breaking the mirror of a blue-green lake with white jagged edges.

The music was beautiful, too. The organist was rehearsing the usual wedding selections. Every now and then I could pick one out and remember it as being played the time Em and I teamed up for good. It was sure swell music. I never felt so relaxed and happy before. As I already said, I'm a sucker for music. Maybe I forgot to say that I go for quiet, peaceful stuff like this, too.

Then I heard and saw the two of them. They weren't so young. She must have been in the forties. He looked a bit time-worn as well. Together they fitted into my picture of happiness. Even the ragged wedding dress and the moth-eaten tuxedo fitted in. They looked at each other with sparkling eyes. They looked happy.

A bolt of lightning struck. The minister walked in the front door just as the organist finished playing a concerto I recognized as being written by Tchaikovsky. The music stopped. "Good morning, good morning. And how are you both feeling? Not nervous I hope. You've been married so many times that you probably know the ceremony better than I do." The music started up again and I didn't hear the answer. I was madder than hell. The marriage ceremony started and I was still sore. I was sore at the minister, too. He had made fun of marriage. Maybe these folks had no respect for marriage, but the minister should have.

It was a beautiful wedding. No one was there except the minister, the couple, and the organist. I was still sore, but the wedding was beautiful. The music sort of soothed me a bit. Then it was over. I sort of lost my taste for music. After this, I'd change my brand of bait. Funny how something can change a fellow, how you can lose your taste for the very thing you cared the most about. I wanted to get away from that church. I didn't care if I never saw the place again.

As I got out of the pew and started out the door I heard the fellow talking. "This is the twelfth time Helen and I have been married here. We'll be back next year. Renewing the vows every year is a wonderful experience."

That should be the end of the story, I suppose. I left the church with a wonderful feeling. I wasn't sore anymore. I was still a sucker for music. But it isn't the end of the story. I remembered the date and returned to the church the same time this year. It all happened just the same ase before . . . except the fellow wasn't there to answer. The woman went all through the ceremony by herself. Somehow I'll bet he was there even if we couldn't see him. The war would be over some day and the man would be back. Perhaps for the fourteenth or fifteenth time. Things have happened like that before.

A voter, heading for the polls, was stopped by a ward heeler and offered 75c for his vote. A little further down the road the opposition party offered him 50c. This he pocketed. When he came out of the booth a friend asked him which way he had voted. "For the man who paid me 50c," he replied. "He was less corrupt."

A fighter in Guadalcanal got a letter full of grievances from home. "Dear Nellie," he replied, "Don't write me any more letters like that. Tear them up before you send them or keep them to yourself, and let me fight this war in peace."

Red Cross Field Director Joins Hospital Unit

Staff of Four Workers To Aid Mrs. Hordeman In Handling Work

Prepared to go into any clime and to share any hazards or emergencies the organization to which they are now attached may eventually be called on to meet, an assistant field director of the American Red Cross, with a staff of four workers, have been assigned to a Fort Benning hospital unit.

The assistant field director, Mrs. Theresa R. Hordeman of Casper, Wyoming, heads the Red Cross unit, which in addition to the assistant field director, who is always a social worker, includes a staff social worker, two recreational workers and a secretary.

Miss Eileen Jennings of Missoula, Monut., is the staff social worker, while Miss Dorothy Downs of Mt. Vernon, Iowa, and Miss Nancy Rex Coman of Wakefield, R. I., are the recreational workers. The secretary is Miss Mary Jane Young of Pittsburgh, Pa.

The unit, which was recently formed at Red Cross National headquarters in Washington, D. C., was assigned to the unit July 19, and will go wherever it may be assigned, Mrs. Hordeman declared.

As an assistant field director Mrs. Hordeman is a member of the military and naval welfare service of the American Red Cross on duty with the armed services. Her duties include the administrative and organizational functions of setting up teh unit, and supervision of both the social service and recreational phases.

PERSONAL NEEDS

The social service work, which will be performed by Mrs. Hordeman and Miss Jennings, include taking care of the personal needs of patients in the hospital and soldiers attached to the medical department, ward visiting, letter writing, and the other functions Red Cross workers do both in this country and abroad.

The recreational workers will be responsible for the organization and conduct of games, handicraft shops, movies and other types of entertainment. Wherever practical, outstanding talent will be brought in, and parties and entertainments will be sponsored. Miss Young, as secretary, handles the clerical work, including the setting up of files on all cases, and takes care of all Red Cross equipment.

In the event of overseas service the function of the Red Cross unit would be to provide a well-rounded program of recreational and social services for patients and detachment members. Although under the treaty of Geneva an assistant field director is considered a non-combatant, she and the members of the unit would be subject to every hazard of war and subject to capture. In case of capture, the assistant field director would be assimilated into the Army with the rank of captain for pay purposes, although a commission would not be held. In theaters of war, they are subject to articles of war just as soldiers are, and to the order of the military commander under whom they serve.

ACT AS LIAISON

Overseas, as in the United States, these Red Cross units handle communications with families of soldiers, and act as a liaison between the civilians of the United States and members of the army. For the benefit of the hospital's patients and the medical detachment, they would plan and organize a recreational program which would set up handicraft shops and workshops, improvise a recreation room for games, and also try to have a reading room wherever practical. Regular movies will be provided, and the Red Cross unit will be put on a regular movie circuit.

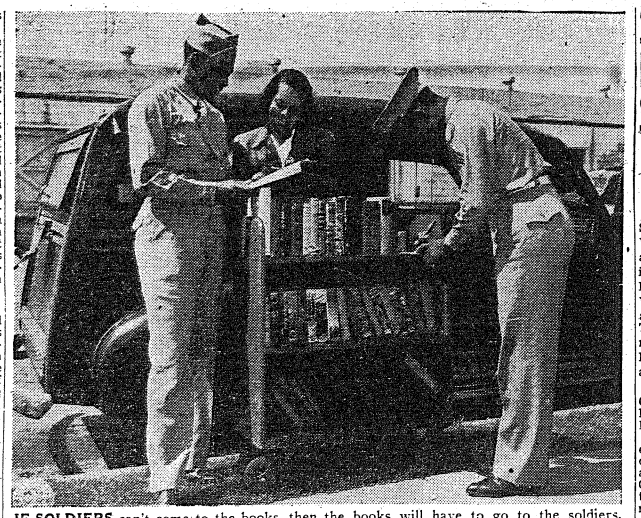
Tournaments, community sings, and games of all kinds will be sponsored.

Prior to leaving this country, such a unit would see that three kits are safely stowed away on board their ship to accompany them to their destination. Kit "A" is composed of comfort articles such as soap, pencils, tobacco, pipes, book matches, combs, chewing gum and other such things to be distributed to the patients. Kit "B" is composed of recreation supplies and includes games, such as checkers, chess, dominoes, bingo, table tennis, and a football. Also included is a phonograph with records, a 16 movie profector, handicraft equipment, and tools for wood carving, painting and drawing equipment. The third kit, Kit "E", is composed of office supplies.

On the social service side, the workers will visit in the wards, help soldiers with their problems, write letters or send cables for them, mail packages, and do personal shopping for the patients. The assistant field director also will have funds so that money can be loaned or granted to soldiers in case of need or emergencies.

SHARE ALL HAZARDS

Overseas, the Red Cross unit would share all the hazards and emergencies of the organization to which it is attached. "In the event it should be sent overseas," Mrs. Hordeman says, we will be ready for any eventuality and glad to share it. Just because one is a recreational or social worker in the Red Cross doesn't mean one will always de recreational or social work while with an organization. In an emergency we will do anything we are asked to do—pitch in with the nurses on detail work or anything else. We will be prepared to wash out of helmets or undergo any other discomforts of war out-fit may undergo. We will share and fare as they do."



Workers in such a unit are carefully selected by the Red Cross national headquarters, and all of them have had experience in the lines to which they are assigned.

Mrs. Hordman, after obtaining a B. A. degree at the University of Wyoming, did graduate work in social service administration at the University of Chicago. She also has served as a social worker with the Wyoming Department of Child Welfare. She has been with the Red Cross since April 1, 1942, and has served in the capacity of assistant field director at Camp Chafee, Ark., and Camp Khillips, Kans.

Miss Jennings, who has an M. A. degree in social service from the University of Chicago, was affiliated with United Charities in Chicago before joining the Red Cross in June. Miss Downs, who also began her Red Cross work in June, has done graduate work at the University of Colorado and the University of Iowa.

Miss Coman, also in the recreational work, was a student of the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York City, and has been associated with Junior Programs, Inc., prior to last May, when she came with the Red Cross.

Miss Young, who has done graduate work at Margaret Morrison College—a branch of Carnegie Tech—was a secretary and liaison worker with the Department of State prior to beginning her Red Cross work in June, 1943.

IF SOLDIERS can't come to the books, then the books will have to go to the soldiers. Here Hazel Reed, librarian of Service Club No. 5, checks out books to two soldiers on her recent trip with the Bookmobile operated for soldier's convenience. Left is Tech. Fourth Grade Emitt Brown, of Co. A, 1st Bn., Provisional Truck Regiment making his selection while Pfc. Joseph D. DuPree of Co. C, Service Bn., Third Student Training Regiment, signs his library card for his choice. (U. S. Army Signal Corps photo.)

Unit Library Provided 20th Company, 1st STR

Captain Edwin J. Cannan and 1st Lieutenant Samuel L. Pfefferkorn of the 20th company, First Student Training Regiment, have aranged for the company what might well be called "a unit library." This library is composed of approximately one hundred and twenty-five books of a wide selection including history, fiction by the best fiction authors, encyclopedias and poetry along with the complete volumes of the work of Kipling and Stevenson.

The library is managed under a system similar to the regular library checking system. The charge of quarters acts as librarian and keeps a numbered file on all books. The reader is allowed to keep a book for a period of seven days after which the book must be returned or brought back and renewed.

Captain Perkins To Attend Military Government School

Captain C. E. Perkins, assistant post medical inspector at Fort Benning, will shortly leave for the School of Military Government at Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif., where training is being given Army officers for administration of occupied countries.

Captain Perkins, who has been at Fort Benning since November 1942, is a former resident of Bartlesville, Okla., where he was district manager of several electric utilities. He had previously occupied the chair of civil engineering at Oklahoma A. & M.

Among the captain's duties as assistant post medical inspector was that of serving on the Mosquito Control Board which is one of the most extensive projects of its sort in the Army. The efficacy of this work is evidenced by the fact that in an area conducive to the breeding of malarial mosquitoes the disease is virtually nonexistent at Fort Benning through the efforts of the Control Board.

Asiatic War Veteran Now With Third Training Reg't.

A vast store of knowledge of the problems faced by troops overseas has been brought to the Third Student Training Regiment, the Infantry School, with the assignment to this unit of Lt. Col. Charles K. Dillingham, veteran of several theaters in both the current conflict and the World War.

Colonel Dillingham, a brisk, military figure, has been attached, for temporary duty, to the Fourth Battalion. He recenly completed a year of service in the Asiatic-Pacific theater, as commander of a battalion. Last February he was selected to command an infantry regiment cadre sent back by his Division to Camp Beale, Calif. From there he was ordered to report to Fort Benning.

EIGHT MEDALS

In both wars, Colonel Dillingham has found himself in the most active areas of operation. He wears eight medals as the result of this service, five from the last war and three from this one. His World War medals are the Distinguished Service Cross, the Purple Heart, the Victory Medal with four bars, the British General Service Medal and the Croix de Guerre with gilt star. In this war he has been decorated with the American Defense Medal, the American Theater Medal and the Asiatic-Pacific Medal.

Colonel Dillingham's military service started with his enlistment Sept. 27, 1909, as a private in Company B, Second Infantry of the South Carolina National Guard. Upon his removal to New Jersey, he entered Battery A, Field Artillery of the New Jersey National Guard on May 16, 1912.

With the outbreak of the World War, Colonel Dillingham on May 14, 1917, was received in the First Officer Training Camp at Fort Myer, Va., from which he was graduated with a second lieutenant's commission the following August.

He thereupon was assigned to the 318th Infantry of the 80th Division at Camp Lee, Va., the regiment with which he was to serve throughout the war in France with the exception of a brief period on detached service with the British 52nd Division at shell - wrecked, bloody Vimy Ridge.

WOUNDED IN ARGONNE

During the last phase of the Meuse-Argonne offensive, the colonel was wounded by shell fragments in an attack at Sivry les Buzanc on Nov. 3, 1918, only a few days before the Armistice.

Colonel Dillingham was discharged as a first lieutenant at Camp Lee on June 4, 1919, and immediately thereafter commissioned in the same rank in the Reserves. He was promoted to captain in 1923, to major in 1930 and to lieutenant colonel March 16, 1937.

In his home city of Plainfield, N. J., and throughout that state and New York, Colonel Dillingham has been prominent for the past 20 years in veteran and military affairs.

In civilian life a textile engineer, the colonel holds degrees from the University of South Carolina and the Philadelphia Textile School. He was graduated in 1918 from the British Snipers School and since then has taken extension courses at the Battalion Commanders and Staff Officers School here at Fort Benning and from the General Staff School.

The colonel has two sons in the service, Second Lieut. Charles K. Dillingham, Jr., of the Army Air Forces, who was reported missing in action June 7, 1943, in North Africa, and Pvt. Robert P. Dillingham of the Second Ordnance Regiment, Aberdeen Proving Grounds.

Post Mess Personnel Invited To Inspect Prize Establishment

The mess hall of Bakers' and Cooks' School No. 2 in the Bradley area won the "E" flag for being the best operated mess among Fourth Service Command organizations at this station during the month of July.

Mess sergeants and mess officers are invited to inspect the mess hall by Capt. Abraham Pfefer, a veteran of 32 years in the army, who is assistant commandant of the Bakers' and Cooks' School at Fort Benning.

The "E" flag will be displayed in front of the mess hall at Bakers' and Cooks' School No. 2 during the month of August. Each mess in the Fourth Service Command will have an opportunity to win the flag this month.

Basis for the presentation of the award is: keeping food supplies adjusted to current needs; storing and care of supplies; food preparation including cooking; serving of food; proper use of left overs; overall food waste control; cleanliness and sanitary conditions of mess; cleanliness of mess personnel; conditions of mess equipment; use of mess aids; attractiveness of mess; operating efficiency; plate waste.

Special Service Presents Noted Song Leader

Tenor O'Brien To Be On Post 4 More Days For Series of Concerts

Furthering the program of the Special Service Division of the War Department for a "singing army," the Special Service office in post headquarters is presenting Donald O'Brien, song leader, and William Conway, piano accompanist, to Fort Benning this week. The two will be at the post four more days, Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer, announced.

Singer O'Brien and Pianist Conway are playing service clubs, hospitals and beer gardens and leading GI group singing.

O'Brien, a well known light operatic tenor, is touring army camps and naval stations under auspices of USO-Camp Shows. Conway, his accompanist, has toured the world and is himself no stranger in the concert field.

O'Brien entered show business by singing "Mother Macree" in a parish entertainment in his home town of Ansonia, Conn. After his debut in New York's Carnegie Hall as a concert singer when he was by 23 years old, the singer has toured in vaudeville, made phonographic recordings and has appeared in Broadway shows, motion pictures and on many radio programs.

The Irish-American has recorded numerous Irish songs and ballads from the operettas and is introducing to service men on his current tour his newest ballad, "Maureen," which has not yet been recorded or published.

46 States, Four Nations Represented In 538th

Mess Sergeant Solves Food Problem; He Serves 'Em All Hash

In fact, they've met already, along with the North and South and the in-betweens—from 46 states they've come to make up the 538th Armored Infantry battalion.

Only Vermont and Rhode Island are not represented in his command, according to Major Milledge M. Beckwith, who heads the new unit.

Not content with being one of the Army's most representatively American battalion, the 538th adds a dash of the cosmopolitan to its roster—incldng men from Czechoslovakia, Canada, Russia, the Philippines and Hawaii.

The mess officer shuddered at the prospect of being expected to serve Columbia River salmon and Chattahoochee catfish, Boston baked beans and frijoles a la chile con carne, corn pone and pumpernickle, venison and roast 'possum all on the same table.

Here was trouble. So he at once wen to the mess sergeant and asked him what he intended doing about it.

"I've already fixed that up," the sergeant explained. "They're all Americans, ain't they? I just feed 'em hash."

CAPTAIN HIRT

First Lieutenant Dale W. Hirt, Academic Department, the Infantry School, has been promoted to the rank of captain.

Captain Hirt was called to active duty and was assigned to Company Officers Basic Course at Fort Benning, on June 4, 1942. Since graduation, he has been assigned as instructor with the Academic department, the Infantry School.

Leaders Clash Tonight In Hot Softball Race

176th Ten Plays Parachute Club; Profs Also Involved In Deadlock

Two of the three tens now tied for the loop lead in the Fort Benning football circuit will clash tonight at the Parachute School diamond when the 1st Academic Company, first-half titlists, entertain the vastly-improved 176th Spirits.

Both teams have won their first two games along with the Academic Regiment Profs and now share a three-way tie for top honors in the second-half race which got under way last Thursday. Deadlocked for fourth place, one full game behind are the Lawson Field Fliers and 124th Gators, both strong tens.

NO HIT GAME

Highlight of the week was another no-hit, no run game turned in by Earl Varchminn, First Academic company's crack hurler, against the new 283rd Quartermasters on Tuesday night. The game went seven innings with Varchminn fanning 14 of the 21 men he faced. Only one man of the Q. M. ten reached first on a walk and he was quickly wiped out on a double play.

The chutists scored their only run in the second frame on the only hit given up by the 283rd pitcher. It was a double by Johnny Long which followed a walk and accounted for the lone tally of the ball game.

PROFS WIN TWO

First Academic won its opener with Third STR last Thursday by a 10-5 count to step off on the right foot. The Academic Regiment, which finished high in the first-half won a pair of games from the Station hospital by 13-3 and the 124th Gators by a 4-0 count.

Greatest surprise was the improved 176th ten which tripped the 283rd Q. M., 6-1, and then followed with an 8-0 lacing of the Third STR on tuesday night. Other results saw the 124th Gators blank Lawson Field by 4-0; and the Fliers topple the Medicos by a 5-1 count.

ALL TEAMS PLAY

Besides tonight's feature title between the Spirits and the Chutists, three other games are on tap. Lawson Field invades the domain of the Academic Regiment, the Gators travel up to Station Hospital, and the 283rd Q. M. journeys to Harmony Church for a cellar battle with the Third STR ten.

Next Tuesday night, the 124th entertains the Third Regiment, Lawson Field plays host to the First Academics, the Spirits meet the Medicos on their home diamond, and the Academic Profs play at the 283rd field.

Profs Seek Revenge In Arclight Battle With Foxes Tonight

The Academic Profs will be seeking revenge for an early season defeat tonight when they face the powerful Columbus Foxes in an arc-light game at Gowdy Field which is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

Several weeks ago the city tossers handed the current post champs a set-back in a close game at Golden Park in downtown Columbus, and thereby became the only club to gain an upper hand on the Profs this season. The Academics have dropped several games at the post, but they were to teams they had already beaten earlier in the campaign.

In an effort to top the Foxes, Lieut. Herb Moore will send either Bill Bobo, lanky right-hander, or Lefty Lehner to the mound. Bobo, who is unbeaten in TIS League competition, is the most logical choice since Lehner was the hurler beaten by Columbus in the first tilt.

Joe Giglio, the crafty right-handed veteran who topped the Benning champs by a 2-1 count and set them down with only a few hits, will probably try to duplicate that trick tonight for the Foxes. Behind him, he will have a hard-hitting club that has compiled an amazing record against Benning nines this season.

Parachute Nine Tops Post Loop With Four Wins

TPS Tossers Down 4th Regiment Foe; 513th In Second

The Parachute school continued in first place in the six-team Fort Benning League during the past week's play by gaining a 4-1 win Tuesday night over the brand new Fourth Training Regiment nine in a game at Brigade Field in the Harmony Church area.

It was the fourth straight win for the chutists and enabled them to remain the only unbeaten club in the circuit. Meanwhile the 513th Parachutes stayed close on the heels of the school lads by pounding out a 5-1 win over Lawson Field at Gowdy Field also on Tuesday.

Lefty Newman, lanky southpaw find of the Thirteeners, was on the mound for the victors and hurled air-tight ball as the Fliers went down to their third loop loss against only one triumph.

Most notable event of the week in the Fort Benning League was the debut of the new Fourth Regiment nine which replaced the 24th General Hospital club. The "Big Four" won its opener on Friday at Brigade Field by trouncing the 225th Station Hospital, 17-2, and then gave the TPS nine a real battle Tuesday.

GAME TONIGHT

Tonight's action will pit Parachute school against the 225th in the Gowdy Field opener at 6:30, with the Academic Profs facing Columbus in an exhibition at 8:30. Tomorrow night, Fourth Regiment invades the main post for a tilt with the 53rd General Hospital at Medico Field, while the same two teams meet Sunday at Gowdy Field at 1:30. The nightcap of Sunday's twin bill pits Lawson Field against TPS at 3:30. Next Tuesday, the 53rd and 513th Clash at Gowdy Field at 7 o'clock.

Box Score: "Goldbricks" 17 runs, 14 hits and no errors. Batteries—Burdette, Beck and Carter. "Medico's"—2 runs, 2 hits ad no errors. Batteries—Denchock and Moore.

ASTP Goldbricks Trim 225th Nine In Opening Test

Opening the second half schedule of the Post Baseball league last Thursday against the 225th Station Hospital, the ASTP, 4th Training Regiment, "Goldbricks", trimmed the "Medico's" to the tune of 17 to 2.

Though newcomers to the league, the ASTP "Goldbricks" displayed an alertness that should make the rest of the Post League sit up and take notice. The "Goldbricks" hit in the pinches and played the field flawlessly.

Charles D. Burdette, ASTP traineee and former ace of Ohio University's pitching staff, in his debut for the "Goldbricks", was superb, allowing but one hit in five innings. Burdette, however, except for that slight lapse, pitched invincible ball, never being in trouble and allowing not a single opponent to reach second.

Robert W. Beck, ASTP trainee and former hurler for Indiana University took over for the "Goldbricks" in the 6th inning and gave up only one hit while pitching scoreless ball.

In the attack the ASTP "Goldbricks" were spark-plugged by another former Indiana University star, Dwayne W. Hodges, an ASTP trainee. Hodges play? ing a sterling brand of ball at center-field, scintillated at bat, banging out two home-runs, while hitting 4 for 5.

Reception Center Off to Fast Start With 3 Wins

Orphans Lead Service League After First Week of 2nd Half

Winning three games in six days, the crack Reception Center nine got off to a fast start in the second-half race of the Service League to take over first place in the loop standings this week.

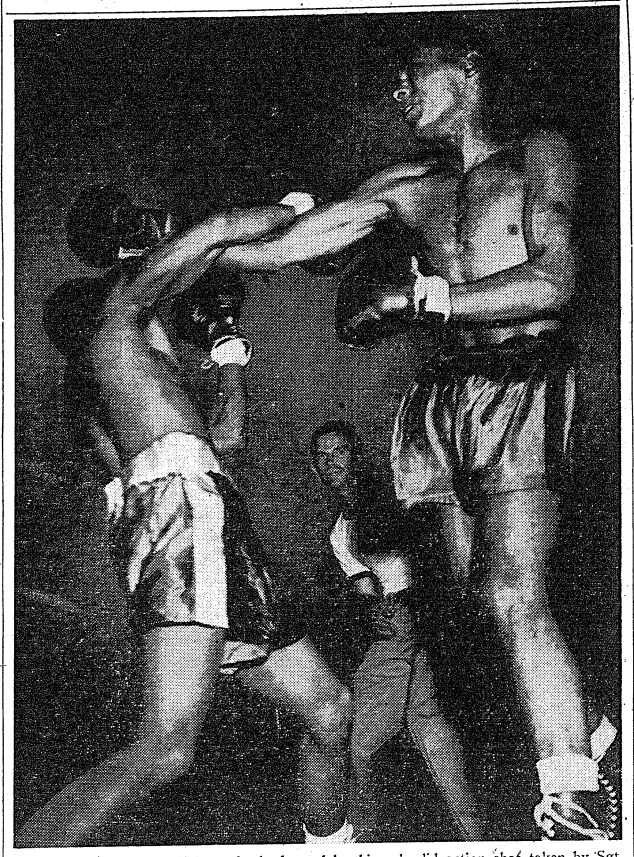
Two other clubs, the First STR Red Sox and Provisional Truck Reds, won one apiece and then fought to a nine-innig 5-5 deadlock on Tuesday night in a game that was called on account of darkness at Tanker Field in the Harmony Church area. The title will be replayed at a later date.

R. C. WINS EASILY

The R. C. Orphans pounded out a 10-1 win over the Third STR Panthers, romped over the Military Police Blue Sox, 16-0, and then just barely eked out a 5-4 win over Post Detachment to account for their commanding lead. The Red Sox bested the PR Blues, 5-3, at Gowdy Field Saturday night for their win, while the Reds trounced the Medical Detachment 11-5, for their opening verdict.

The Medicos, who just entered in the second-half race, upset the dope on Monday night when they took the Blues into camp by a 9-5 tally in a game at Medico iFeld. Post Detachment also won a game from the Academic Pacesetters to give them an even break for the week, while the Pacesetters scored a surprising 5-4 win over the Panthers, who have faded fast of late.

BUSY CARD



Quite a few games are carded for the next week with Academic's pacesetters invading the Reception Center tonight, the Reds and Blues clashing at Tanker Field tomorrow night, and the Panthers tangling with Post Detachment at Gowdy Field Saturday night.

Monday, the Medicos meet the Red Sox at Medico Field and Post Detachment plays the M. P. nine at Reception Field. The Blues and Panthers battle at Tanker Field next Wednesday, while at the same time, the Blue Sox and pacesetters clash at the R. C. diamond.

Blackwell Hurls No-Hitter For Gators

Gators In Spotlight As Mound Ace Hurls Perfect Game Against 764th

BY SGT. MILTON LUBAN

With Ewell Blackwell pitching a no-hit, no-run game, the spotlight this week is definitely focused on the 124th Gators, now sharing the lead in the Infantry School league with the 176th Spirits. The Gators had taken over sole possession of first place with Blackwell's no-hitter over the 764th Tanks on Sunday, but the Spirit win over the Artillery Group on Tuesday knotted up the race again.

Blackwell's game was practically a perfect one, only 29 men facing him. No walks were given up, but three men reached first on errors. One was promptly erased on a double play; the others were left on base.

Other highlights of last week were the ninth inning rallies staged Sunday afternoon by the Spirits and the Rifles to win their respective ball games.

SPIRITS RALL

The 176th went into the ninth inning tailing the Sixth Training Regiment, 3 to 2. Then, with one out, Sahara reached first on an error. Up came Pat Cooper to win his own game with a tremendous blast over the left field fence.

In the next game the Third STR went into the ninth trailing the Artillery group, 7 to 5. Then, with two away and Glick on first, McAloon reached first through an error. Strukel doubled to score Glick and came in on Berry's fielders choice. Sorrel drew a walk and Silverman slashed out a solid liner to drive in the winning run.

EASY FOR EAGLES

Other results saw the Eagles trounce the 764th Tanks on Friday at Gowdy Field, 15 to 1, while the Monday night, also at Gowdy Field, the Academic Regiment rofs tore into the Rifles for a 10-1 pasting. At Gowdy Field last Thursday, the Gators edged out the 300th, 6-4.

Losing the opener to the Spirits, 2-0, the Gators have now won six straight. With Blackwell and Christie, the 124th can boast the strongest mound corps in the league, while the Spirits with Wissman, Cooper and Schultz are rated just a shade behind.

Both teams have skillful, but weak hitting, receivers in Stoke and Sahara.

HITTING EDGE

As a team the Gators have a slight edge in hitting. Their infield, consisting of Belin, Ankrom, Powell and Linoff, can sock the ball, but is rather erratic in the fielding end. The outfield is a good one and in Vern Smith the Gators have a really brilliant flyhawk.

The Spirits have an ace infield, led by the spectacular Ramazotti; a consistent outfilder and, while the team batting is weak, two dangerous hitters in Ramizotti and Lohr.

So there they are; take your pick.

Meanwhile the Academic Regi-

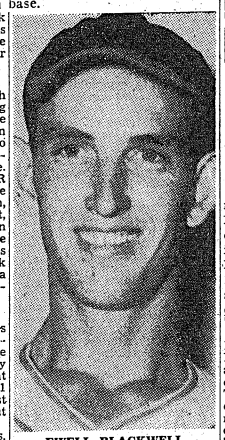
Blackwell Fans Dozen Tankers In No-Hitter

Gator Right-Hander Enters Mythical Hall of Fame



Ewell Blackwell, tall Gator right-hander, pitched his way into Fort Benning's Hall of Fame in defeating the 764th Tank Battalion, 4 to 0, on the Harmony Church Field last Sunday to extend the 124th Infantry's present win streak to six straight and strengthen their hold on first place in the TIS League.

Blackie, who was with Syracuse last year in the International League, hurled no-hit, no run ball all the way and retired 12 Tankers via the str ike-out route. Three 764th players reached first on errors during the game, but lai now boasts a 1.27 earned run average.

TANKER HURLS WELL

The Gators had trouble in solving the slants of Perrero, the Tanker, who allowed seven safeties. They capitalized once in the third on Vern Smith's long triple to center and twice in the 6th on Merl Stoker's single, two walks and a Tanker error. The fourth and final Gator tally was the result of Ernie Ankrom's second home run in as many games.

The no-hitter was Blackwell's third straight TIS victory and he now boasts a 1.27 earned run average.

Panthers Bow to Tuskegee Team In Fast Ring Card Before 7,500

Bent Beezef Club Wins Six Of Ten Bouts For Cup

There was action galore in the squared circle at Doughboy Stadium last Friday as close to 7,500 rabid fight fans sat through a drizzling rain to watch the Bent Beezer Clubmen from Tuskegee dull the claws of the Fort Benning Panthers in an all-colored ring card.

The final score was 13-8 in favor of the visitors from Alabama, with the Bent Beezers gaining the nod in six of the ten bouts. After the match, the winners were awarded a handsome silver loving cup, which had been offered as booty by the Fort Benning Athletic Association, sponsors of the exciting card.

DANIELS LICKED

The verdict in the first inter-camp ring match of the outdoor season was in doubt right up to the final bout between Dynamite Daniels, pride of the fort, and Ed Perry, a snappy Tuskegee puncher. But Daniels had a bad night and could not cope with the heighth and reach advantage he spotted his rival and verdict went to the Bent Beezer ace in a five-round windup attraction.

Dynamite fought hard but didn't seem to have his usual snap as he bowed to Perry, also a former Golden Gloves champ. Perry built up an early advantage on his strong counter-punching and infighting, and when the final round camp up, the fans realized Daniels' only hope was a knockout. They yelled for a finish blow, but the smaller Dynamite simply couldn't get close enough to Perry's chin to land a hard blow.

MANY KNOCK-OUTS

There were several knock-outs on the star-studded card and most of the fights kept the fans excited from start to finish. The Panthers started strong when Joe Williams dropped Tom Haywood in two minutes and 21 seconds of the first round. Then Joe Noble of the green-and-white stable won a three-rounder from Tuskegee's John Knox.

The first Bent Beezer win went to John Morrell when he was fouled by Tiger Peterson, Benning's 147-pound scrapper, late in the opening round. The visitors quickly tied the score when Levi Irvin of the Panthers was unable to come up for the second round in his bout with Bill Mayberry.

TKO'S DECIDE

Winfield Schonmaker, Panther 135-pounder, scored an impressive TKO over George Reed in one minute and 12 seconds of the second round to give Benning the edge once more, but Tuskegee quickly evened the count when Nelson Wright TKO'ed Russell Booker early in the third round. Tuskegee's Herman Collins surprised the fans when he upset Terry Livingston in a fast scrap.

Hardest knockdown of the evening was scored by Orie Smith, 3rd STR husky, who forced Tommy Horne to take the count of ten after only two minutes and 20 seconds of the opening round. In the best bout of the evening, the semi-windup, Tuskegee's clever LeRoy Boston out-maneuvered Jimmy Mitchell to gain the judges' decision. Then came the downfall of Dynamite Daniels, and it was curtains for the Panthers after a really exciting evening of gloved battling.

Did you ever wonder who performed the hair-raising, death-defying stunt work in Hollywood for the Johnny Weissmuller Tarzan "flicks"? It was none other than Candidate Henry (Hank) Akers of the 17th Company, Third Student Training Regiment, doubling for that brilliant screen star.

EXPERT DIVER

Born in Baltimore, Md., March 15, 1914, the son of a sea captain, Hank, from a very early age practically lived in the water, and as a result of that environment, became an expert in swimming and diving.

He has experienced the competition and companionship of Marshall Wayne, present Olympic diving champ; Peter Desjardine, Olympic diving champ of the world; Ralph Flannigan, swimming record breaker; and Katherine Rawls, world's most versatile woman swimmer and diver.

ALSO A DANCER

Nimble Hank turned his talents from the aquatic to the ballroom as a member of Arthur Murray's dance team and later in the position of dance instructor of those well-known "whirlers of the light fantastic." In 17th Company's physical conditioning program, "catlike" Candidate Akers slips over the obstacle course with the greatest of ease.

Strong 1st STR Nine Anxious To Avenge Earlier Defeat

Fort Benning's first-half Service League champs, the 1st STR Red Sox, invade Atlanta tonight for a feature battle with the famed Atlanta Black Crackers. The game will start in Ponce de Leon Park at 7:30 under the sponsorship of the Atlanta Constitution. It will be broadcast over WGST and Benning fans may follow the game by dialing that station.

Tonight's affair will be something in the nature of a grudge battle for the Red Spx who will be out to redeem themselves for the ignominous trouncing they took at the hands of the Crax on June 16th. In that mixup, the Sox went into the sixth frame leading with a tally of 6-1. They staged a comedy of errors in that inning and the alert Crackers cracked down. The game wound up a 12-6 run-fest in the Atlantans' favor.

O'CONNOR TUTORS

The Sox perform under the expert tutelage of Captain Joe O'Connor, who, in civilian life was a pro third baseman. Joe has the team worked down to a fine edge and confidently expects to even the tally in tonight's game. The captain expects to start his world-series pitcher, Robert L. Romby, and use Clarence Winbush behind the plate.

Romby, a brilliant moundsman with amazing coolness, is well known to Service League fans. He has worked the six toughest games this season with only two losses. In those six games he has allowed a total of thirty-three hits. He has a terrific fast ball that simply can't be seen. In 62 times at bat he has compiled a rather neat batting average of .467. When not working on the the mound, he is in left-field working with the same polish and efficiency as when he is mowing down the opposing sluggers.

Winbush is another of the Red Sox workhorses and has caught in almost every game this season and in 63 times at bat has scraped up a no mean average of .411.

WASH BATS .608

Big John Washington, the spectacular first sacker, will be in his usual place in tonight's game. Wash can always be counted on to deliver an outstanding game of baseball and is considered by the majority of fans to be the best first baseman in the league. However, Washington's batting average has dropped off a bit of late and he now has a batting average of only .608 in 69 times at bat.

Eugene Randolph, who held the Service League slugging lead with an average of .647, ran into a slump that cut his average way down to .476 in 65 trips to the plate. Randy is to be remembered as the party who lined out a 410-foot homer a few weeks ago for the longest hit of the season at Gowdy Field.

HAYNESWORTH SPARKS

Richard Haynesworth is that peppery individual who covers the keystone like the dew covers Dixie. He is the sparkplug of the team and that coupled with a batting average of .457 from 59 trips makes him one of the most popular members of the 1st STR nine.

SOL SCHIFF, four times national tennis champ, author of a textbook on the game, and member of U. S. teams which swept through Europe in championship play, will appear in an exhibition of his skill next Wednesday and Thursday at Doughboy Stadium as part of the Camel Caravan show. Schiff and his partner, Cal Skinner, will perform trick shots and play an exhibition game.

Homer In Ninth By Cooper Wins For 176th Club

Pitcher Wins Own Game With 360-Foot Clout Against Eagles

BY PVT. AL SHAPIRO

Pat Cooper was mad! He was sizzling. Here it was the first half of the ninth inning, and the Sixth Training Regiment Eagles were beating him by a 3-2 score. The 176th Infantry Spirits had one man on base, one out and the fans begging for a hit. Pat bit his lips, grabbed that bat tightly, and swung viciously at the first pitch. With a mighty roar, the crowd surged to their feet, as the ball cleared the left field fence for a 360-foot home run, sending in "Sparky" Sahara from second with the tying run, with Pat scoring the winning run himself.

Lefty Wisemann came in to pitch in the last half of the ninth, to set down the Eagles, the Spirits winning 4-3. The Eagles had two left-handed pinch-hitters coming up, and for strategic reasons Wissman was the logical pitcher.

RIP ROARING GAME

The ball game started off in a rip-roaring fashion. The Eagles scored two runs in their last half of the second to put them ahead 2-0. It wasn't until th elast half of the fifth that the Spirit fans had a real chance to sound their war-whoops. Cooper, who looked mad all day long when he was swinging that big bat of his, hit a double to right field. The Spirits were behind, and the bleacherites started beating their gums. 'We wan a hit!" "Let's Go Spirits!" Cooper on second, Erb up. Erb hit the ball towards second and Pat was caught in a rundown and tagged out, Erb safe at first. Two out, one man on, and Lohr up. Lohr was safe at second on an error, moving Erb to third.

RAMAZOTTI HITS

Captain Ram Ramazotti was the next batter. he most dangerous man in the Spirit lineup. Ball one, Ball two. Foul ball. The tension increased. The next ball was a hot single that chased Erb in from third, and Lohr from second with the tying run.

Cooper pished beautiful ball, and was especially good in the last half of the sixth inning. With one away, men on second and third, Pat struck out the next two batterso n six pitched balls. He had nine strike-outs in eight innings.

COLORFUL TEAM

Once again the Spirits proved themselves the most colorful team on the post. They have the facility of coming up with spectacular plays at the most opportune moments and the bleacherites count themselves a part of the team with their coaching from the side lines and all-out enthusiasm.

ment and the Sixth Training Regiment are still to be reckoned with. The two teams clashed last night after the Bayonet had gone to press, but even though the loser might be considered out of the race, either team is capable of beating any club in the league at any time.

The Profs, who play the Columbus Foxes at Gowdy Field tonight, took the first-half post title and are certainly as strong as they were in the first half. They have a strong pitching crew in Rundus, Dickinson, Bobo and Lehner; probably the tightest infield in the league with Moore, Zientara, Russo and Praisse, and four good, hard-hitting outfielders in Neibler, Dabbs, Cox and Mercer.

EAGLES STRONG

The Eagles with Prendergast, DeVolder and Charlson have three pitchers any one of whom is liable to stand any team on its ear. In Simmons they have the best catcher on the post while McCluskey at third is the league's leading hitter. Wright, Osweld and Bamberger round out a capable infield which at times tends to get a little erratic. The outfield, paced by husky Red Kemether, is a sound-hitting, sure-fielding collection of gardeners.

Yes, the Gators and Spirits are sharing the lead, but it will still pay to keep a wary eye on the Profs and the Eagles.

An Army Wife Shops In Columbus

By Phyllis

Of particular interest to you who cherish individuality is the millinery displayed by Mrs. Slattery of the KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. HAT SHOP. Recently returning from a two weeks' visit in New York, Mrs. Slattery has a wonderful array of non-spot velour hats to please the most exacting tastes. Pompadour berets, high-profile berets, and cloche styles are all exceedingly chic. Black, brown and such melt-in-your-mouth shades as Flying Blue, Amethyst, Wild Grape, Gayety Rose, Colonial Green, Caramel, Russet Earth, Fiesta Purple are especially appealing in these hats of finest velvet. Matching hat and bag sets in these striking shades are ready to add a dashing touch to many a smart fall outfit. For more casual wear, but quite as becoming, are tiny pompadour hats fashioned of rich tones of chenille or strip felt. Visiting this hat shop will give you an opportunity to actually see yourself in these ever-so-attractive chapeaux. Then I know you'll agree with me that they are all, indeed, what Fort Benning and Columbus women want to add—the final, fascinating fillip to autumn ensembles.

School and college girls love to be bundled up in a soft, shaggy coat that keeps them smart and snug for many a chilly day. The materials in the coats at KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. will exceed the highest expectations. So will the tailoring and detail. In this group of fall suggesions for youngsters, and some oldsters, too, are the hardy perrennials — reversibles. Of fine, sturdy gabardine and rain-proof at that, these coats are lined with tweeds or plaid materials. The ever-smart trench-coat styles and swagger-coats are many of them, beautifully fashioned of fine camel hair. If your daugter is setting off once again for college this fall, or plans returning to high school, a sport coat from this assortment would be a most practical addition to her school wardrobe. Many of these same coats are perfect, too, for us oldsters in our daily errands about the Main Post.

The old adage "Absence makes the heart grow fonder" is not always true these days. But the presence of a fine photograph which really looks like you will mean much to your loved ones. The excellent, life-like work of the AIME DUPONT STUDIO is a guarantee that the picture you may give your family will make them almost as happy as they'd be if you were really with them. All members of the various branches of the United States Army have at least one relative anxious for a portrait picturing the Officer Candidate, the WAC, the Army Nurse, the Officer, as he is remembered best. The DuPont Studio makes every effort to catch the twinkling eyes, crooked smile, or the somber, thoughtful expression which might be so characteristic of the individual. Presently, when a photograph may be so cherished and appreciated by loved ones, the Dupont Studios is the meeting place for those desiring outstanding work.

Public school, boarding school, whatever the prospect may be in store for your children this coming term, you'll want them to have substantial shoes to with stand many hours of rough treatment. And then on the other hand, you'll want them to have dressier shoes, just as practical, but more appropriate for special school functions when they'll all "spruce" up a bit more. Spectator pumps are almost regulation with many fashion-minded youngsters these days. The MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY has many especially attractive spectator pumps in the popular army russet and tone brown shades. Medium and high heels are available in all sizes. Low heeled ties of 'pressed kid" are perfect for everyday school wear. For dressier occasions Miller-Taylor's has suede pumps in a number of appropriate styles especially suitable for school-going girls.

These sweltering days when the sun pours down relentlessly, is there one of you who doesn't get a decided lift after sipping a cool, chocolate-mint soda, or a large, frosty glass of fresh orange juice? Of course there isn't. I can say this with conviction for I've actually seen many of you perk up noticeably after a visit to THE CITY PHARMACY. This cool and attractively decorated drug store is the meeting-place for business-men and shoppers, anxious for a bit of refreshment. In this store, too, I've especially liked the super-service for each and every customer. And the soda fountain dispenses, not sodas, alone. No, indeed, the luncheons served here are enjoyed especially by those whose system just can't stand another "ham on rye." Frosty drinks, appetizing luncheons, or afternoon tea, you'll enjoy them all at the CITY PHARMACY, directly opposite the Waverly Hotel.

You may be one of the active women with part of the world on their shoulders who must go out to meetings, to the Red Cross classes, to a daily job. A fur coat somehow fits this practical forthright scene. Coats of distinction, by designers determined to prove that a fur coat is a long term investment, are displayed by the J. A. KIRVEN COMPANY. These seal dyed muskrat, grey squirrel, natural muskrat, sable-dyed muskrat, sable-dyed coney, and black kid coats are perfect for all-around-the-clock life. Unusually attractive are the black kid coats, many beautifully lined with Royal Duchess satin. The skirt of the coat is wide enough for a free stride without having a bulky appearance. The plain neckline is perfectly cut to finish off a smooth line. Each and every one of these coats may be called a fashion valuable. I say "fashion valuable," for each coat assures lasting quality, enduring charm, and timeless design.

Not everything I mention in this column can be all glamour and fashion. It's about time I discussed something which is familiar to us all—the good old dish towel. They're found in every household and they do wear out on occasion and so new ones are in order. The SEARS ROEBUCK COMPANY has an assortment of kitchen toweling and towels already hemmed. The colors in both types are bright and cheery shades on a spanking white background. The 5 per cent linen, 95 per cent cotton toweling of green or blue checks on a white background might easily be, with a bit of patience, stitched into dozens of kitchen helpers. For those of you who are impatient and unskilled with needle and thread the already finished dish towels are the most attractive buy. Whether you want simply striped towels or elaborately flowered ones you'll be delighted with the prices and designs featured by Sears Roebuck Company.

Gators Capture Loop Lead With Win Over 300th

124th Tossers Step To Head of Pack With 6-4 Win

BY CORP. ED FOGG

A revised, hard hitting 124th Infantry nine, swept into undisputed possession of first place in the Infantry School League last hursday and ran their win streak to five straight by virtue of a 6-4 win over the 300th Infantry at Gowdy Field.

Coach Don Shaffer installing two new men, Jake Powell and Bill Ellerston in the lineup, added power at the plate and the team as a whole hit better to gather 11 hits, five going for extra bases, off Cave who was the losing hurler.

Lew Christie, Gator right hander allowed but three hits for seven innings, but ran into difficulty in the eighth, as one error and four scratchy hits netted three runs and the short 300th within one run of tying the game. Chris was taken out and Ewell Blackwell, the Gator's new hurler, who beat the Profs last Monday, took over on the mound and snapped the rally, by forcing Francis to ground out to short.

ANKROM HOMERS

Ernie Ankrom, Gator second baseman lifted one of Cave's fast balls out of the park in the first inning to score Inoff ahead of him and the Gator's never trailed, never to be headed. Jake Powell added two more tallies in the fifth, driving Stoker and Smith home with a long double to right.

300TH THREATENS

After the Gators had added a run to their total in the sixth on Ankrom's double and Belin's single, the 300th opened up a desperate rally in the eighth with bingles by Koivisto, Kunkel, Graham, and Symsak, and three runs to drive Christie to the showers and Bring in Blackwell to shut off the rally.

The Gators clinched the game in their half of the eighth on doubles by Rogers and Stoker to extend their win streak to five straight.

Eagles Sweep Aside 764th In 15-1 Win

The 6th Training Regiment swept over the Yankers of the 764th Tank Battalion last Friday night at Gowdy Field with a decisive 15-1 victory. Ed DeVolder and Cliff Carlson, the Eagle hurlers, kept the Tankers to 6 scattered hits while their teammates capitalized on 13 hits for the 15 runs.

The Tankers scored their lone tally in the first inning when Fields doubled, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Shortwell's long fly.

The Eagles bunched 6 runs in the second inning and added 5 in the third, 4 in the fifth. The game went only 7 innings. Bryce Oswald and Tommy Ryan led the Eagle batsmen with 3 bingles each. Red McCluskey, Oswald, Ryan, and DeVolder all hit doubles and McCluskey also hit a triple.

Parachute Ten Tops City Club

The First Academic company of the Parachute school Friday night defeated the Columbus Reds by the score of 19-4 in a softball tilt.

Earl Varchminn pitched two-hit ball in four and a half innings and then gave away to Colburn, who allowed four runs on three hits. The four runs came in the seventh inning. The chutists big inning was the fourth which scored seven runs.

Holy, pitcher for the Columbus Reds pitched six innings and allowed 19 runs on 19 hits, who in turn gave away to Tilley in the seventh and he allowed one hit. Engleman and Daval hit to singles and a double apiece with Masnick getting a triple, double and a single to lead the assault in four trips to the plate.

Physical Training Is Antidote For Fatigue

In order to succesfully combat fatigue and listlessness caused by long hours of duty, the First Student Training Regiment has instituted and put into force a physical training program for its permanent staff of officers.

Under the organization and guidance of the regimental commander, Col. John S. Roosma, there has been allotted a specific time for each officer to devote at least two hours every week to athletics and exercise. These allotted periods have been arranged so that groups of officers throughout the regiment will be able to meet on Glenn field and combine their activities into group games. The participants in such sports will be organized into teams and allowed to make their choice of activities.

CHOICE IS OFFERED

In order that each officer may feel free to relax and thoroughly enjoy himself, thereby getting more good out of the program, a list of activities have been drawn up from which a man may make a choice of either softball, volley ball, touch football, medicine ball, setting up exercises, golf, swimming, wrestling, and in fact, just about any activity that a man could wish for. This is strictly an athletic program to bring zest and pep into the lives of men who live long hours of supervisory work. A definite plan of athletics will make a man act and think in a more efficient manner.

Colonel Roosma arrived at the decision to institute such a plan when, after close observation, he became aware of the fact that the average tactical officer arrived on the job before 8:00 A. M. every morning. He must make inspections, watch over the preparation of food in the various kitchens, supervise company affairs and, in general, stay constantly on the go until after the evening meal at 6:15 or 7:00 P. M. Quite frequently it then becomes necessary for an officer to keep several previously arranged appointments with men of the student class. Thus, as Colonel Roosma pointed out, a man does not get, nor does he feel equal to, any time available for exercise.

Under the new plan, two afternoons per week have been set aside during which a man must avail himself of the opportunity to improve both his work and his health. To facilitate those men who are non-residents of the post, and whose athletic endeavors had heretofore been confined to riding a shack bus, a designated building has been set aside for lockers and showers. Old clothes or athletic shorts are the order of the day and emphasis is placed on exercise and good health.

The program was first announced and put into force the week of July 12th. It immediately met with the approval of the officers concerned. Many of the men were found to have banded themselves into groups with a challenge that they can lick any other similar group of officers at any game they might care to choose.

The Pet Show held Friday July 30, on the playground proved quite interesting and enjoyable to the participants as well as the spectators. The judges in several instances had a difficult time in deciding just which pet to choose to give first place. However, everyone seemed quite satisfied with the judges' decisions in each case.

It was pleasing to see the number of pets entered and except for two dogs that were running close competition for a blue ribbon and finally decided to tangle, the event went along very smoothly. We are sorry if some forgot the event and did not have their pets present to be judged.

The following judges were on hand to assist in this event. Msl. Rotari, Mrs. Harman, Mrs. Hopkins, Mrs. Gilland and Mrs. Doan. The awards were made to the following particpants and pets.

Oddest pet—Rabbit, Ann Herbert.

Prettiest pet—First, Curtis Herbert; second, J. D. Sayers.

Prettiest dog—First, James Arlen Bray; second, Charles Elliot; third, Glenn Lee Ward.

Prettiest cat—First, Ben Sharp; second, Roger Curtier; third, Georgia Lee Cook.

Homeliest pet—Bobby Davis.

Saddest looking pet — Bobby Davis.

Best trained pet—First, Mary Elizabeth Harman; second, J. D. Sayers; third, Glenn Lee Ward.

NEW GAMES

Quite a number of new games are on hand for the boys and girls of all ages to play during these hot afternoons. Mrs. Lutz will be on the playgrounds to teach these games and would like to see a large number out to learn the various games. Tables will be put out in the shade on the playground to use in playing. All sorts of children's card games, bowling alley, four in one, bargain day, Pollyanna, puzzles and others are among the games you will find.

A large sand box and horseshoe pits have been placed on the playground and will be ready for use this week. Volleyball poles are also up for use and net and ball can be obtained from the recreation department to use.

High school girls are volunteering several hours a week in order that the equipment can be put out for use four evening during the week. Bandminton is also among the new equipment that the adults can find to engage in on the playground each evening.

We are trying to provide activities that will be of interest to all ages so come out and meet your neighbors and get in to some of the fun.

SWIMMING

All girls who cannot swim and are interested in joining us each Tuesday morning at Russ Pool meet us at the office at 9:15 (EWT).

Folk dancing for all girls is taught in the auditorium on Friday afternoons at 2 (EWT). The Girls Scouts should plan to attend each Friday in order to be eligible for the folk dance badge.

A bingo party wil lbe held Saturday night, Aug. 7 at 8:30 till 11 o'clock in the auditorium.

AFTER CANDIDATES in Fort Benning's Infantry School finish a combat patrol problem such as the capture of an enemy village, they are taken to a "cemetery" on the outskirts for a critique. Numerous "graves" are dug and marked with names of various officer candidates who, during the operations, were guilty of mistakes which may have cost their lives in actual warfare. Above a tactical officer is causing the object lesson to be brought home to the tyros. The slub inscription reads: "Roses are red, violets are blue; if you ain't careful, this one's for you.

Fiji Islands Home Sweet Home to 3rd Regiment OC

To most persons the name Fiji Islands merely stirs misty recollections of struggles with grammar school geography books but to candidate Geoffrey Marks of the Eighth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, the name is synonymous with "Home, Sweet Home."

The candidate's father, the late Col. Sir Henry Marks, a Commander of the British Empire, was an officer of the Fiji Defense Force and lived the greater part of his life on the island outpost. Geoffrey, youngest of six children, was born 37 years ago in Melbourne, Australia, and was the only one not born in the Fijis.

The Fijis represents only one place on the globe where Candidate Marks can hang his hat amid surroundings thoroughly familiar to him. He attended primary schools in Australia and at the age of 15 went to England where he continued his studies at the Brownsgrove School in Worcestershire. In 1925 he was admitted to Trinity College, Oxford, where he obtained his B. A. degree in law three years later. Named to the Honorable Society of the Inner Temple in 1929, he continued his law studies intermittently until 1940, when he received his M. A. from Oxford.

LEARNED NOMAD

From 1929 to 1940, Marks' life was very much that of the intellectual vagabond. A highlight of that period was his trip down the Tiber River in a rubber canoe, an expedition which prompted him to write a book, "Down the Tiber and Up To Rome", a volume which today may be found on the shelves of almost any book lover whose interests center on travel.

His travels in 1930 brought him to this country where he commuted between New York and Chicago. In New York he met and married Beatrice Terry, actress and niece of the internationally famous Ellen Terry. He tried his hand at some more writing in this country, returned to England to practice law and, tiring of that, revisited the Fiji Islands for six months.

New York, however, had acquired a permanent lure for him so he came back to this country and took various jobs, one as editor-in-chief for a small publishing firm. In 1942 he attained his U. S. citizenship and started working on his Selective Service board to induct him in the Army. The board at first was reluctant to do so because of his marital status and age but in the end it acceded. In March of 1942, he was sent to Jefferson Barracks, Mo., for basic training.

The Army Air Forces, however, had little charm for Marks for, as he expresses it, to him "Infantry" and "Army" are synonymous and that's why he is at Fort Benning now.

PROMOTED

One first lieutenant and four second lieutenants of the 538th Armored Infantry Battalion, Fort Benning, Ga., were awarded promotions during the past month. First Lieutenant Francis B. Drass of Hollidaysburg Pennsylvania, was raised to captain. Second Lieutenants Clyde W. Pierce, J. W. Rafferty, William T. Stockton and W. B. Wemyss are now first lieutenants.

Post Sergeant Joins 'Yank'

A special order from Washington, D. C., last week sent Sgt. Frederic C. Konzelman of Company H, 300th Infantry of The Infantry School Troops, hurrying to New York where he has taken up his newly assigned editorial duties with Yank, the Army weekly.

Konzelman, who was on cadre to the 5th ASTP regiment at the time the order came through transferring him to New York, is former day news editor of the Detroit Free Press.

It is believed that because of the nature of his former job he will be placed on the copy desk of Yank, which publishes four editions that go to American fighting men in every corner of the globe.

He began as a reporter with the Free Press, and after six years of reporting and copy reading reached the position he held at the time he was inducted. He came to the 300th from Camp Robinson last December.

Within a sort time he was promoted to the grade of corporal and then to sergeant. When the cadre was assigned to the Harmony Church Area with the newly organized ASTP group, Konzelman went with them.

LT. JORDAN PROMOTED

Promotion of Second Lieutenant Harry C. Jordan, Jr., to the rank of first lieutenant was announced recently by Col. Henry J. Hunt, Jr., commanding officer of the 300th Infantry Regiment, the Infantry School. Lieutenant Jordan is serving as platoon leader. He was selected to attend the Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, and on December 14, 1942, after completing the school, he was commissioned a second lieutenant and assigned to Headquarters Company of the newly activated 300th Infantry Regiment.

Lieut. Gail Gaines, commanding officer of the WAC Detachment, will give the bride in marriage. The ceremony will be performed by Chaplain W. H. Hunt with a reception in the WAC mess hall to follow.

Lt. Williamson Made Captain

Colonel Frank J. Vida, commanding officer of the Provisional Truck Regiment, has announced the recent promotion of First Lieutenant George S. Williamson to the rank of captain.

Captain Williamson, who assumed the duties of adjutant of the Provisional Truck Regiment of the Infantry School troops the early part of June, is a native Virginian. Becoming interested in the army, he enlisted in July, 1938, at Roanoke and, within a short time, joined the 27th Infantry at Schofield Barracks, Territory of Hawaii.

Serving abroad until December 1941 he left Oahu en route to the states and enrollment in one of the Officer Candidate Schools. Entering the Infantry School at Fort Benning as a staff sergeant, he was commissioned a second lieutenant on April 10, 1942 and immediately assigned to the Third Student Training Regiment. Serving with that organization as an assistant adjutant and being interested in army personnel work, Captain Williamson's experience and desire for advancement resulted in his being transferred to the regiment he now serves.

A typical Regular Army man, Captain Williamson has demonstrated his desire to master army administration to such a degree that he has not requested a furlough nor leave since joining the army five years ago.

Paratroopers To See 'Just For Laughs'

USO Show Slated For Alabama Area Next Tuesday Night

USO-Camp Shows' "Just for Laughs," a fast-paced variety revue which is a counterpart of "Hellzapoppin'," will play to Fort Benning's paratroopers of the Alabama area next Tuesday, Aug. 10, at 8:45 p. m. The performance will be outdoors except in the event of inclement weather, according to Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer.

Bobby Pincus, versatile comedian who has been headlined at smart cafes and supper clubs of New York, London and Paris, is the featured player. Supporting him in various sketches is Mack Pearson, diminutive comic from the Hal Roach studios in Hollywood, who gives impersonations of famous personages.

MANN EMCEE

Jack Mann is master of ceremonies and straight man for the show. He has played night clubs in New York, Boston, Chicago, and other sections of the midwest. Bob Gordon, well-known vaudevillian who wrote and staged the sketches, and Ray Janis of musical comedy and radio fame, whose last broadcasting engagement was on the Fred Allen show, are also in "Just for Laughs."

Girls in the show are Ruth Foster, tap dancer, and June Lloyd, acrobatic dancer, and Betty Johnston, singing comedienne of the Betty Hutton type. Nelson and Marsh, dance team, are another combination to flavor the production.

As usual in all the USO-Camp Shows, admission is free to all military personnel.

Air Force Gets Combat Lunch

A special combat lunch for bomber crews on flight missions of from eight to 12 hours' duration has been developed by the Army Quartermaster Corps for the Army Air Forces according to Col. Stephan B. Massey, director of supply at Fort Benning.

The new lunch is packed in units sufficient for three men, and is composed of easily edible food items which can be consumed without further preparation or readily converted into hot dishes when the planes are equipped with electric hot plates or other cooking facilities.

Colonel Massey stated that the lunch consists of pre-cooked rice, lemon powder for lemonade, tea tablets, bouillon cubes, dehydrated beef, biscuits, fruit bars, dried apricots, a stable non-melting canned butter product known as Carter's spread, hard candy, chewing gum, soluble coffee, sugar and salt.

Because of the sharply varying temperatures in which bombers must operate, ranging from 135 degrees above zero on the ground to 50 degrees below in the stratosphere, the food items included in the lunch were selected on the basis of their stability under sudden or protracted changes in temperature, as well as for their compactness, light weight and high nutritive value.

From 1922 to 1937 only two freight vessels were built in American shipyards.

300th Infantry Promotes Twelve Enlisted Bandsmen

Promotion of 12 members of the 300th Infantry band was recently announced by Col. H. J. Hunt, Jr., commanding officer of the regiment.

The band, scarcely a few months old, has already attracted post-wide attention and the adnce orchestra composed of members of the band has played at many of the important social functions on the reservation.

Promoted to sergeant was Cpl. Charles F. Funk, director of the band. Pfc. Albert M. Krasic, leader of the dance orchestra, also received sergeant's stripes.

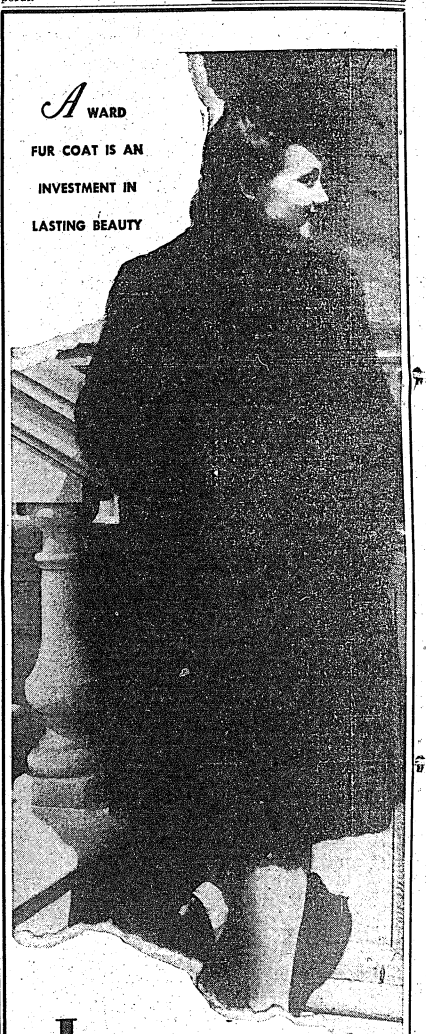
Other bandsmen upped to sergeant were; Cpl. Paul E. South, formerly with Benny Goodman's band; Cpl. Harry W. Summers, T-5 Joe H. Schafer, and Cpl. Loyd Schieber.

Members of the band who received corporal's rating were; Pvts. Laverne V. Johannesen, Pvt. Simon Velasquez and Pfcs. Godtfred M. Matson, Maurice B. Smith, Richard S. Gaddy and Jack F. Edwards.

PROMOTIONS

Promotion of two enlisted men has been announced by Supply Detachment, Supply Division, Section One, Fourth Service Command, Fort Benning. Corporal Lewis S. Whitten has been raised to technician fourth grade, and Private First Class Tom H. Maples has been advanced to corporal.

2 Units Join School Troops



Brig. Gen. Henry P. Perrine, commanding general of the School Troops Brigade of the Infantry School announces the arrival of two new units of the Brigade.

They are the 507th Engineers Company and the 252nd Field Artillery Battalion. The former, commanded by Capt. R. S. Burrus, Jr., has been located at the Main Post.

The artillery unit, commanded by Lt. Col. Louis M. R. DeRiemer is stationed in the Harmony Church area adjacent to the 244th Field Artillery battalion. Both units will be used as demonstration troops.

Gen. Perrine also announced that the 802nd Field Artillery which has been stationed at this post, has been transferred to Fort McClellan, Alabama.

Major Hutto 6th Regiment ASTP S-3

Maj. Troy N. Hutto has been appointed plans and training officer of the Sixth Training Regiment, ASTP Basic Training Center of The Infantry School it was announced by Col. Robert Sharp, regimental commander. Major Hutto replaces Maj. Orville J. Hall who has left Fort Benning for duty at the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.

Major Hutto is a native of Tipton County, Indiana and received an A.B. degree from the University of Indiana in 1928. At college he was a prominent member of the strong Hoosier track and field team, excelling in the high jump and discus. He was also a member of the Acacia fraternity. In 1933 he received his LL.B. from the University of Indiana School of Law and practiced as an attorney for 7 years in Winchester, Indiana. Major Hutto's ROTC commission was activated in November, 1940 and he was a member of Basic class 4 at The Infantry School. For 11 months he was a company commander at the IRTC, Camp Roberts, California, and he was then appointed Inspector of Training, Director of Schools and Assistant Operations officer of the BIRTC at Camp Robinson, Arkansas. Major Hutto was graduated from Advanced classs 25, TIS, and reported to the Sixth Regiment. Major and Mrs. Huttot and their three children reside at Fort Benning.

Major Hall, whose home is in Fayetteville, Arkansas, was a member of the Attack Committee, Tactical Section of The Infantry School for 13 months before attending advanced classes at TIS, and joining the Sixth Regiment as plans and training officer He was a member of the faculty at the University of Arkansas for 15 years and is now on military leave from his associate professorship at that institution's College of Agriculture.

We get pretty hot about what we read in the papers. On most of these issues, however, we need to bring light not heat.

Post Hq. WAC's Get Promotions

Technician Fifth Grade Thelma Harmon has been promoted to the grade of technician, fourth grade, and Technician, Fourth Grade Harriet Fravel to the grade of technician, third grade.

Sergeant Fravel of the morning report section is the only WAC technician, third grade in the WAC Detachment at headquarters. Enlisting in the corps in November, 1942, Sgt. Fravel was called to active duty December 30, at Daytona Beach, Fla., where she took her basic training before coming to Fort Benning to join her permanent company, March 17, 1943.

Sgt. Fravel's husband, Pvt. Westy R. Fravel is on Atlantic convoy duty.

Sgt. Harmon of military personnel section, enlisted in January of this year and took her basic training at Daytona Beach, before being assigned to Benning. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Harmon of 29, Fayette St., Boston, Mass.

Before entering the military service she was employed in defense work with the Raytheon Production Company, manufacturing radio tubes for the Navy.

Japs Made No Effort To Hide Lust For Power From Visitors

Says O. C. Who Visited Nippon With College Group

A guest of the Japanese government in 1935 with an American student group, Officer Candidate George Stees of the Ninth Company, Third Student Training Regiment, hopes to return to that nation soon—but as an uninvited and destructive visitor.

Stees was chosen as a representative from Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., to an American-Japanese student conference in Tokyo during his junior year at the school. The conference was arranged as a medium for exchange of views on international law, economics and relations between the two countries.

Japanese student delegates raised a fund to cover traveling expenses for 45 Americans, Stees said. When 90 students from this country were selected to make the trip, the Japanese government took over and footed the entire bill.

Stees said he believes most of the Japanese students at that time were sincere in their professions of friendship. However, during the conference, the Japanese set up their puppet government in Manchuria. The American students were taken on tours of Japanese-occupied territory and shown the "benefits" of Nipponese control but no effort was made to excuse or even shield the nation's aggressive intentions, the candidate declared.

G. I. Eats Only One Meal Per Day—All Day Long

Uncle Sam's soldiers are the best fed in the world and they should be because they eat 18 out of approximately 24 hours every day, Sundays included.

GI's eat three meals a day in their mess halls where they are served the best food the nation has to offer, cooked by the best cooks in the world, and served to the hungriest guys in the world. But those three meals are only the beginning of the day's eating.

Munching between meals is their favorite sport. Between breakfast and dinner—lunch to you—they have cokes, candy bars, maybe a doughnut 'N, an apple or cherry turnover with a glass of milk; or if they are on a hike you can be pretty sure that the PX was sold out of candy bars for those famous ten minute breaks before the outfit started that 17 mile hike.

Dinner is a famous meal for they have meat, vegetables, salads, and a dessert, generous servings too with a fruit drink to wash it down on the side. But does that hold them until supper time? It does not. You just stroll around and see the soda shop, the PXs, the drink dispenser area, the patio grill opened at 4:30 p. m., and then supper. Supper is really a meal and should fix a GI up for the night, but he has just really started on that nibbling by the time he is through with supper and then you should really see "him go to town." The Army Exchange Restaurant with its counter for self-service, the soda shop, the Patio Grill, and all available eating places are crowded until closing time, and then they hang around finishing up after the doors are closed.

Now don't get the idea that all GI's eat all the time. It is just that there are so many of them and they work various schedules that there are always enough with "off hours" to make a crowd at any place.

Drinks and peanuts are also sold to the crowds at ball games, so you can see that it takes a man of strong character to resist displays of food and drinks always there for the taking—provided there's still a little loose change in the pocket.

Yank Increases Subscription Rates Effective Sept. 1

Yank, the Army Weekly announces officially that subscription rates to the G. I. publication will be revised effective Sept. 1, 1943. A schedule of old and new rates is given below.

Old rates for Yank subscriptions mailed and postmarked up to and including Aug. 31, 1943: 8 months (35 issues) $1; 1 year (52 issues) $1.50.

New rates for Yank subscriptions mailed and postmarked on or after Sept. 1, 1943: 6 months (26 issues) $1.; 1 year (52 issues) $2.

The single copy price of 5 cents will not be affected by the change. It is suggested that soldiers contemplating entering subscriptions, mail them to YANK, 205 E. 42nd St., New York (17), N. Y., as early as possible before Sept. 1 in order to take advantage of the low, introductory rates.

October, 1942.

Major Hall Gets College Promotion

Maj. Orville J. Hall, plans and training officer of the Sixth Training Regiment, ASTP Basic Training Center of the Infantry School, has been promoted to an associate professorship of rural economics and sociology in the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. Major Hall is now on military leave of absence from that faculty on which he has served for over 15 years.

An Arkansas alumnus, Major Hall also holds a master of science degree from the University of Minnesota and completed further studies at Harvard University. He is the prolific author of organizational and research publications in the fields of economics and agriculture, and even now receives requests for such works from post-war planners all over the world.

ASTP Adds 103 Colleges

145 Now On Roster; To Name Others Later

An additional 103 colleges and universities have been selected for participation in the Army specialized training program and commanding generals of the service commands have been authorized to negotiate training contracts immediately, the War Department announces.

The newly designated institutions bring to 145 the number taking part in the training of soldiers for technical phases of modern warfare. Additional schools will be named later, the department said.

Twenty-three of the schools are listed as "star" or "specialized training and reassignment" units. There soldiers are classified for specific types of duty.

By the end of July, the department said, medical instruction will be available at 74 institutions; dental training at 36; veterinary courses at 10; basic phase instruction at 82; advanced engineering courses at 25; foreign area and language study at 17; advanced personnel psychology at 9; professional training at 6, and reassignment units at 23.

VARIED COURSES

Among the schools, many of which will conduct training courses in more than one subject, as listed by the Army according to courses available (x-indicates schools already in use under the program):

STAR UNITS: (x) Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn; (x)Agricultural and Technical College of North Carolina, Greensboro; (x) North Carolina State College of Agriculture & Engineering, Raleigh; (x)The Citadel, Charleston, S. C.; (x)Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge; (x)University of Alabama, University.

FOR PREMEDICAL TRAINING: Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge.

'Clerk-General' Is Expert Scout Of Pacific War

Pvt. James V. Anderson reported to the 6th Training Regiment headquarters, The Infantry School, last week. He was classified "Clerk, general," and when asked just what type of clerical work he'd been doing in the army, Private Anderson cocked his head uncertainly.

"Well, where have you been stationed?" asked the personnel officer. "Most recently in the Fiji Islands and New Zealand, sir," he answered, and added doubtfully, "I wasn't doing clerical work there."

Asked what his assignment had been, he calmly announced that he had been in the combat intelligence platoon of a battalion, being a scout-observer. He picked up tropical fever, was sent home (unsuccessfully torpedoed twice by the Japs on the return voyage) and will undoubtedly be instructing the ASTP Basics in the fine points and scouting and patrolling as he found it in the Pacific against the Japs.

WO Goldsmith Appointed Chief Warrant Officer

Climaxing a period of rapid advancement in the Army of the United States, Mr. George Goldsmith, WO (JG), has recently been promoted to a chief warrant officer, in the personnel section of the Provisional Truck Regiment, The Infantry School.

His preliminary military training was received at Fort Benning and he served in many capacities prior to his appointment as a Warrant Officer, Junior Grade. Coming to the Provisional Truck Regiment in December 1942, he was made personnel officer in Regimental Headquarters and has held that job since.

With Civilians

MYRTLE JOINES

Sylvia Fleischer formerly with the Machine Record Unit has returned to stay with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Fleischer, of 1900 Calvin street, West Orange, N. J. It is possible that Sylvia will be returning to Benning soon but not as Sylvia Fleischer, but we are not too sure.

There have been several changes in the Finance personnel this week. Isabelle Chadwick has been called to the West Coast because of serious illness in her family. Reva Lunn resigned on August 1st, to keep house, and Mrs. Guyola Wilson resigned for reasons to be announced later.

Mary Farmer, Director of Service Club No. 1 announced that her "snack bar" of soft drinks, tid-bits to eat, including that all important candy bar and chewing gum—limit two to a customer. There are six WACs assisting at the club now so soldiers are assured prompt service. A nice new writing room, and pool room where sitting-room on the floor was at a premium. Nice going, Mary.

Winona Andrews of the QMC is spending her vacation at Fort Walton, Pensacola, Fla. And while we are talking about the QMC we would like to give a nice big welcome to Parry Virginia Light who is back at work after an extended illness. We missed Parry. There's just one like her.

And while we are talking about sick folk getting well and coming back to work let's not forget Sara (Sally to most of us) O'Neal in the Record Section at The Infantry School who is back after two months spent in the LaGrange hospital, LaGrange, Ga.

The civilian personnel some 400 strong will be entertained at an old fashioned barbecue, on Sunday, August 8, for all day swimming, eating and what-have-you at the Quartermaster rest camp. Capt. Branch F. Delaney is chairman of the committee with the following civilians as assistants, James B. McCoy—the original—Mrs. Louise Bullard and Mrs. Mary Price with Lt. Maurice A. Sutton, technical adviser or maybe I should say food-expert. At any rate the cooking will begin on Saturday so there will be plenty for all.

Verne Neiderprume formerly of Post headquarters, message center, was a recent visitor on the post. She has returned to Sarasota, Fla., to be with her family for the duration.

CAPTAIN CURRY

Colonel John S. Roosma, commander of The First Student Training Regiment, The Infantry Scholo, Fort Benning, has announced the promotion of First Lieutenant Bernard M. Curry to the rank of captain. Captain Curry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Curry of New York City, and is a graduate of Columbia University, having received his LLB degree there in 1942. He is also a graduate of Holy Cross College, where he was active in the Debating Society and Intra-murial Athletics. Prior to entry into military service, Capt. Curry practiced law.

MAERTENS PROMOTED

Announcement has been made here of the promotion of Second Lietuenant James Edwards Maertens, Weapons Section of the Academic Department, The Infantry School to the rank of first lieutenant.

Branch P. O. In Parachute Area Opened

The new branch Post Office opened at the Parachute School for men of the First Academic company and adjacent outfits may in some ways resemble a "small town P. O." but, according to Capt. Joseph F. Twohig, Fort Benning postal officer, it has individual mail box facilities which are comparable to those of a fourth-class post office.

A unique feature of the new establishment, the eleventh of its kind on the post, is that its hours are flexible enough to accommodate odd-time workers. The usual schedule of daily service is from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m., but many times the office stays open until a much later hour to satisfy the wants of its patrons, Lt. John A. Minter, public relations officer at the Parachute School, revealed.

Sgt. Francis M. Patterson of the First Academic company has been detailed as postmaster, and Lt. Wallace J. Comeau is postal officer. Besides offering the paratroopers individual postal boxes, the unit sells stamps, money orders, handles registered mail and cashes money orders.

The branch is designated by the U. S. Post Office as Unit No. 11 at Fort Benning. The plan of branch offices is heartily endorsed by Capt. Twohig, who sees it as a big factor in offering soldiers better and quicker service in the handling of their mail. The establishment of more branches is planned in the future, Capt. Twohig said.

Special Services To Mark Jewish Day of Mourning

Jewish troops at Fort Benning will commemorate the destruction of the first and second temples of Jerusalem or Tisha B'ab during special services at Children's School, Monday, August 9, at 7:30 p. m. Chaplain Samson A. Shatz will officiate, and "Elegies for the Ninth of Ab" will be read.

The holy day also commemorates the destruction of the first and second Jewish commonwealths and is one of mourning and fasting, of grief and sorrow, yet also is one of the assertion of the confident hope proclaimed by the Scripture of Zion restored.

FORT BENNING BAYONET

VOLUME 1, NUMBER 48 | Published by The Ledger-Enquirer Co. | FT. BENNING, GA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1943 | For America's Most Complete Post | PRICE FIVE CENTS

EMILY McNAIR, who played here as USO's Claudia last fall in the production of the same name, has returned to the post as the wife of O. C. Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., of the 3rd STR, and will direct "The Cat and the Canary" with an all-Benning cast for the Columbus Civic Theater.

Benning Cast Rehearses For 'Cat and Canary'

Emily McNair Of 'Claudia' Fame Director Of All-Post Production

Lovely Emily McNair, prominent Broadway actress and now the wife of Officer Candidate Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., of the 3rd Training Regiment, will direct an all-Benning cast in the Columbus Civic Theater production of "The Cat and the Canary" which is scheduled for early September.

Miss McNair is well known at the post since she appeared here in the title role of "Claudia," which played here as a USO-Camp Show presentation last December. She hopes to return to Broadway after her husband is graduated from O. C. school and play the ingenue in one of this winter's productions.

Since her arrival in Columbus several weeks ago, Miss McNair has taken an active part in activities at the Civic Theater and was chosen to direct "The Cat and the Canary," the famous mystery comedy, which will be the initial fall production of the local group.

Lending a definite military aspect to the production, the directress has chosen a cast composed entirely of Benning soldiers, wives of fort men, and civilian employees at the post. It is also hoped that the play might be produced some place at the fort as well as at the Chase Playhouse in downtown Columbus, which is the home of the Civic Theater.

WELL-KNOWN NON-COMS

Five well-known Benning non-coms will play the leading male roles in "The Cat and the Canary." The romantic lead will be taken by Corp. E. Barry Sturmer of the special service office at post headquarters. Sturmer was quite active in the theater in civilian days, having written comedy sketches for several Broadway musicals.

Sgt. Bill Cope of the Academic Regiment, who serves as master of ceremonies on the regular Monday night radio show "Listen, It's Fort Benning," has been cast as Charles Wilder, the super-smooth villain of the three-acter. In civilian life Cope was a professional announcer and also has appeared in several Broadway stage shows.

Another Benning announcer, Sgt. Carl Neu of the public relations office, will portray Harry Blythe, the remaining member of the trio that seeks the hand of Annabelle West, the heiress. Neu has appeared in two other Civic Theater ventures, "Our Town" and "Holiday," during the past year.

St. Sgt. Owen J. Remington of the public relations staff, who played the lead role in the local group's production of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" last fall, has been cast as Roger Crosby, the

Ration Book 3 Forms Ready By Monday

All Eligible Military Personnel Must Mail Application By Aug. 31

Application cards for ration book 3 are expected to be received for distribution by Monday, it was announced today by Sgt. Louis Lipp, secretary of the Fort Benning branch of the Muscogee County ration board.

Military personnel eligible are to fill in the cards and mail them to the address printed on them by midnight August 31, according to a directive received today from headquarters of the Fourth Service Command at Atlanta. An identification stub containing the serial number should be torn off and retained by the applicant.

After August 31, applications for ration book 3 must be made to the local war price and ration board having jurisdiction over the applicant's home address. These applications probably will be delayed two weeks, it was emphasized, so military personnel were urged to be sure to send in their application cards prior to Aug. 31.

Several thousand books are expected to be issued to military personnel on the post who are on separate rations, Sgt. Lipp said. In order to provide sufficient quantity, 25,000 have been ordered.

Cards will be distributed to enlisted personnel through sergeant majors of regiments and other organizations, Sgt. Lipp announced. They have been notified to secure the number of men in their organizations who are on separate rations. They will then procure the cards and distribute them down through the various organizations. In this way enlisted personnel will not be forced to go personally to the offices in the Military Police headquarters for their applications blanks.

Service Insurance In Force At Post Hits Third-Billion

Physical Examination Became Necessary After August 10

As the result of an all-out drive to sign up Benning military personnel for service life insurance, post soldiers have put into force more than $250,000,000 worth of insurance, Lt. John W. Inzer, post insurance officer, announced Wednesday.

Lieutenant Inzer stated that the drive would continue unabated, and that it is the hope of post officials that the half-billion dollar mark will soon be reached.

The insurance officer lauded highly all unit commanders who, he said, have been tireless in their efforts urging members of their command to insure their lives before it is too late. Reports reaching the post stated that an alarming number of dependents have discovered that their men in the armed forces neglected to insure their lives before going to combat zones and then lost their lives in action.

As of August 10, all members of the armed forces in service more than 120 days must take a physical examination in order to take out service insurance. Lieutenant Inzer said any medical officer is authorized to conduct physical examinations for Benning soldiers desiring to subscribe to insurance.

School Children Send Books To Post Library

The students of Washington H. S., Mansillon, O., must be very, very fond of the soldiers at Fort Benning.

Last month they gave a concert and collected enough on admissions to buy 100 brand new books. These were promptly sent to the Garrison Library here, where Miss Frances Chandler, librarian, had the gift volumes inscribed and ready for distribution this week.

All of the books are popular novels or books about the war.

Post Boulevard Opening Slated For Next Week

Cloverleaf Traffic Circle Completed On Express Highway

Construction on Fort Benning boulevard—which has long carried the bulk of vehicular traffic to the army post from Columbus—is expected to be completed by Saturday but will not be reopened to traffic until sometime next week, according to Col. Albert J. Bain, post engineer.

The road must first be inspected by Georgia state highway department officials before traffic can be resumed around the middle of next week, Bain said.

The traffic circle is being constructed at the intersection of the new super-highway with the Fort Benning road, between Baker Village and Benning Hills. For the past two weeks the main road to the post has been closed and Benning traffic has used the old Lumpkin road to Columbus.

Capt. Wheeler Sidwell, post traffic officer, said late yesterday that the underpass from the Columbus-Cusseta highway to the armored division area in Sand Hill already has been opened for traffic.

He stated that the bridge across the Upatoi in the Harmony Church area will not be completed until about the middle of November to allow traffic flowing along the Columbus - Cusseta highway to pass into that area.

With the completion of the "cloverleaf," the junction of the Columbus-Cusseta highway with Fort Benning boulevard will afford traffic moving to and from the main post extra roadway facilities to lessen congestion arising from the increased flow of vehicles.

The provost marshal's office at the post reiterated the request that civilian personnel who use the highways entering the post during busy hours have their identification badges ready as they pass the military police outpost to alleviate delays.

Table Tennis Champs Billed

Offer Bond To G. I. Who Can Lick Them

Doug Cartland recognized as the Southern Table Tennis champion will appear in a series of exhibition matches with his partner Harry Cook, Canada's top-ranking player, at Fort Benning starting Sunday, August 15.

Cook and Cartland in addition to playing a match against each other will take on all comers and they offer a $25.00 War Bond to the G. I. who can beat them at their own game. This should prove very lively as Benning boasts of several outstanding exponents of this popular sport.

Sunday, August 15 — Service Club No. 1 at 8:45 p. m.

Monday, August 16 — Service Club No. 2 at 8:45 p. m.

Tuesday, August 17 — Lawson Field Rec. Hall at 8:45 p. m.

Wednesday, August 18 — Red Cross Auditorium, Harmony Church at 8:45 p. m.

Thursday, August 19, Red Cross Auditorium, Station Hospital at 3 p. m. Service Club No. 3 at 8:45.

Friday, August 20—Service Club No. 5 at 8:45 p. m.

Pin-Up Girl Of The Week

Bayonet to Present Series Of Benning Pin-Up Beauties

Service Club 7 Opens Aug. 16

New Unit To Serve Alabama Paratroops

Fort Benning's newest Service Club No. 7, will open formally Monday night, August 16, in the Alabama area to afford a recreational and social center for paratroops, Lieut. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, post special service officer, announced Wednesday.

Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post, and Colonel Ridgely Gaither, commandant of The Parachute School, are expected to attend the gala opening.

A dance is scheduled for Monday as the first social event at the club. The Military Maids of Columbus will be the guests of the paratroopers. Music for dancing will be furnished by the Lawson Field orchestra.

The new Service Club will be operated under the supervision of Miss Sarah Lee Head, senior hostess, and Miss Frances Dozier, librarian.

Facilities to be available to paratroopers will be a large auditorium, a library with more than 2,000 volumes and a cafeteria. Colonel Finnegan siad that the cafeteria will start operating next week on a limited basis.

300TH LUNCHEON

Wives of officers of the 300th Infantry will have a luncheon at the officers' club at 1:30 p. m. next Tuesday. A charge of one dollar will be made for the affair plus 25 cents extra for bridge. Reservations may be made with Mrs. Davis, phone 3-6360; Mrs. Rawls, 3-1630; Mrs. Grant, 3-5732; or Mrs. Graham 3-3849. They must be made by Monday night.

Various Service Branches Will Be Represented In Current Feature

G. I.'s, attention! You can start right now tearing down those eye-appealing pin-up shots of the Hollywood glamor girls which we know adorn the door of your wall-locker and peek out so prettily from under the lid of your footlocker.

Why? Well pin-up girls being what they are these days, which amounts to an international rage, the Bayonet has decided to give you a series of pin-up girls that will out-do everything you've ever seen.

While Army papers the country over continue to feed you the fetching poses of the Grables, the Hayworths and the Lamours, the Bayonet pin-ups will be strictly local lovelies.

And why not, it's always been our prime editorial opinion that at Fort Benning right now can be seen some of the loveliest femmes this side of heaven. Real angels in disguise, so to speak. Given the chance of the film glamorettes, perhaps some of our gals would be national favorites, too!

SEE WHAT WE MEAN?

Anyway, by constituting ourselves as the local chamber of commerce, beginning this week we're going to boost local faces and figures to our own boys at least. And since, we're sure you've already gazed long and longingly at lovely Eddie Lynch, the Signal Corps Sweeties, you can see what we mean.

This point is that this is just the beginning. Every week now for at least the next two months, we'll present the favorite pin-up girl of some branch of service here at the post. To be chosen, she must be either an employee of that branch, or the wife of a soldier serving in that arm of service. Anyway, she has to be strictly local.

By the end of a couple months, you should have your locker plastered with Bayonet Pin-Up Girls.

Then, our idea is to run a popular-vote contest amongst you G. I.'s and let YOU pick YOUR OWN favorite Pin-Up Girl. Sounds interesting, doesn't it? We'll have more dope on the contest as "time goes on" but meanwhile, keep your eyes peeled every week for the Bayonet's own Pin-Up Beauties.

Two WAC Officers On Benning Tour; Pleased at Training

Two officers of the Women's Army Corps, headquarters in Washington, who are touring WAC establishments and units throughout the Fourth Service Command, viewed personnel at Fort Benning Wednesday.

Capt. Alcesta Fowler and Capt. Ruby Herman, detailed to inspect the WACs by Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, director of the corps, arrived at the post yesterday. They will conclude their inspection of the three WAC units, the WAC detachment, station complement; the WAC detachment, Infantry School; and the 772nd WAC Post Headquarters company, at Lawson Field Thursday.

At post headquarters many WACs who have already relieved soldiers for combat duty were inspected. The tour is also to determine the type of training afforded and the living conditions for the WACs, their morale, and their health.

The officers expressed complete satisfaction with the WAC establishment. They were escorted by Lieut. Gail Gaines, commanding officer of the detachment.

Sales Exceed '42 Mark Same Period By Million

Civilian Allotments, Cash Purchases Cause Of Increase

Already during 1943, Fort Benning soldiers and civilians have invested $2,250,000 in war savings bonds, it was disclosed Wednesday by Major George Fink, post war bond officer.

This represents an increase of one million dollars over purchases during a similar period in 1942, and is due to sharp increases in pay allotments by civilian employees, and a rise in cash sales over the counter at Fort Benning's branch post office.

Since March, when the one week delivery schedule was inaugurated, civilian participation has risen from 25 per cent to 80 per cent for July, with the monthly payroll deduction climbing from 2 per cent to 6.9 per cent reported for July. Major Fink expressed hope that Fort Benning would soon reach the 90-10 per cent mark—the goal established by the President for civilians.

In the meantime sales at the local post office have already reached $604,087.50, according to R. P. Richardson, postmaster, as compared to $517,958.25 sold during the last seven months of 1942. Also the number of class E bonds sales had jumped from 13,958 to 14,020.

Major Fink said that he was proud to announce such a sizeable postwide interest in participation, which has been accomplished despite setbacks such as conversion of all G. I. reservations from class A to class B allotments. He stated further that after initial difficulties had been overcome, soldier participation rebounded to normal. At present over one-third of military personnel on the post have regular monthly deductions totaling just short of $200,000.

County Okays 'Swap' Of Land

200 Acres Received For Benning Plot

Muscogee county commission Wednesday approved an "even swap" of land between the county and the federal government.

The agreement calls for the county to trade its right to 200 acres of pasture land joining the county almshouse property which was condemned by the federal government, Sept. 1, 1942, to be added to the Fort Benning reservation, for another 200 acre pasture tract lying on Chatulga road immediately north of the almshouse.

The newly acquired tract will give the county a total of 400 acres making one complete rectangular tract instead of two separate tracts of 200 acres each. Bentley Chappell, county attorney, reported that the county would be able to take immediate possession of the land.

Alice Marble To Appear Here On August 29

Woman Tennis Star Will Play Exhibition With Mary Hardwick

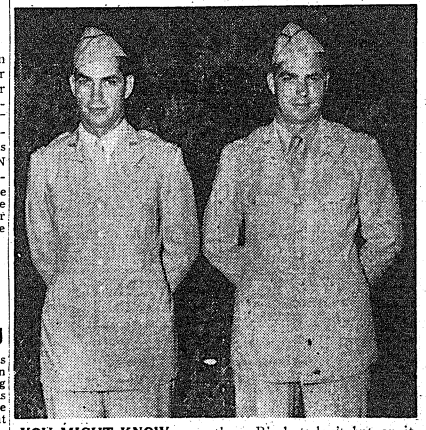
Alice Marble and Mary Hardwick, internationally famous tennis stars, will visit Fort Benning on Sunday, August 29, for a series of exhibition tennis matches, according to an announcement made Wednesday by Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, post special service officer.

The Benning matches will be part of a nationwide tour begun on Tuesday by Miss Marble and Miss Hardwick, during which they will visit most of the camps which have a large Women's Army Corps personnel.

The actual scene and time of the matches here has not yet been decided, but Colonel Finnegan stated that wherever the Marble-Hardwick match is played at the post, it will be open for service men as well as the WACs.

TENNIS CLINIC

Immediately following the match a special tennis clinic will be held for the female G.I.'s During this part of the visit, Miss Marble and Miss Hardwick will lecture on physical fitness for women and also conduct a question and answer program on tennis as well as give actual demonstrations.



The tour of the distinguished players is under the auspices of USO, but they will be accompanied on their visit to Benning by a WAC officer. Plans are also underway for Miss Marble and Miss Hardwick to be entertained by the local WAC detachments while here for their one-day stay.

EX-CHAMPIONS

The noted women tennists need no introduction to post court fans. Miss Marble is a former national women's singles champion, and also held the mixed doubles crown along with famed Don Budge a few years ago.

Miss Hardwick was the British women's title-holder and has appeared at Wimbledon, Forest Hills and all other important tennis events. Both players turned professional about three years ago and made a nationwide tour at

Nursery School Releases Mothers for War Work

Many mothers at Fort Benning spend their days in Red Cross workrooms wrapping bandages for American fighting men or otherwise doing their part in an all-out war effort despite the fact that their tender-aged children ordinarily might be expected to occupy all their time.

Diversion of this extra energy into the war effort is due largely to the Fort Benning Nursery School, which takes children of a pre-kindergarten stage off their mothers' hands during the day and supervises their play while teaching them the art of getting along with one another.

Begun last October under the sponsorship of the Fort Benning Women's Club, which is headed by Mrs Reginald Kelley, the Nursery School is presided over by Mrs. Mischa Kadick, who majored in child psychology at Schofield. The school operates the year round, six mornings a week.

Children range in age from 19 months to four years, and are at an age, Mrs. Kadick says, when they have only the most elementary sense of getting along with other people. At this age, according to Mrs. Kadick, the children have much imagination and are highly imitative, but lack initiative.

MAXIMUM PLEASURE

Thus the school organizes the children's play so that they obtain maximum enjoyment and at the same time learn generosity, respect for property, and how to get along with their fellow children.

Located on Madden Road, the school is a cottage possessing a front garden surrounded by wooden palings, which enclose a group of swings, slides, jungle gyms and other playground equipment.

Arriving in a bus early in the morning, the children are encouraged to engage in such calisthenic pastimes as swinging, sliding and climbing. They also model with clay, paint with their fingers and listen to nursery tunes and such musical classics as might appeal to them such as Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite."

The general function of the school, however, is not to instruct the children in constructive work, which is a function of kindergarten at a later age, but to give them a thoroughly good time while teaching them how to play together with respect for each other's rights.

Mrs. Kadick is assisted by Mrs. Carl Morton, but states that volunteer assistants are needed to help in caring for the 32 children in the school.

Children of any officer on the post are eligible for attendance at the school. The fee is $6 a month. Those who are interested in the school are requested to communicate with Mrs. Kadick at P.B. 2896.

Colonel Landis Named New CO Of First TCC

Lawson Field Is Component Of Troop Carrier Command

Colonel Reed G. Landis of the Air Corps, son of Baseball Commissioner Kennesaw Mountain Landis, has been appointed commanding officer of the First Troop Carrier Command of the Army Air Forces with headquarters at Stout Field, Indianapolis,Ind., according to advises received at Lawson Field. The Fort Benning air field is a component of the First TCC.

Col. Landis succeeds Brigadier General Fred S. Borum who has headed the organization since April 30, 1942. General Borum, who visited Lawson Field three weeks ago on an inspection trip, has been given an unannounced assignment elsewhere.

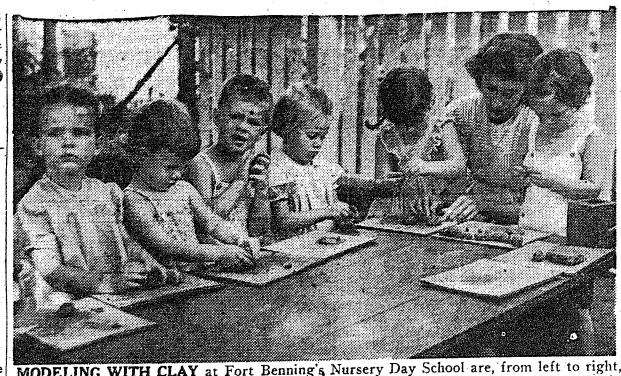
The new commanding officer served as chief of staff at headquarters of the First TCC prior to his appointment as commanding officer. In 1941 he was aide to the director of the Office of Civilian Defense with the rank of major. He helped organize the Civil Air Patrol. On May 21, 1942, upon his appointment as chief of staff, he was promoted to lieutenant colonel, and became a full colonel July 9, 1942.

He began his army career in 1916 as an enlisted man in the U. S. Cavalry. In 1917, he transferred as private first class to the aviation section of the Signal Corps.

He received training with the British Royal Flying Corps in England. He was then commissioned a first lieutenant and served with the British 40th Pursuit Squadron, later taking command of the 25th U. S. Pursuit Squadron. During the war he won the American Distinguished Service Cross and the British Distinguished Flying Cross.

Col. Landis became a recognized authority on aviation laws and rules. For a time he imported and sold airplanes and served as an officer with the American Airlines.

He is 46 years old and a native of Chicago.



General Borum enlisted in the service during the first World War in 1917 as a flying cadet. He served as flying instructor at fields in Texas and Arkansas and commanded various bombardment squadrons. He commanded the Air Transport Command before assuming duties as chief of the First TCC.

Col. Passailaigue Commands 2d STR

Command of the Second Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School at Fort Benning, has been assumed by Colonel Edward P. Paissailaigue, who was in command of the Third Student Training Regiment since spring and whose promotion to full colonel was announced several weeks ago.

Colonel Passailaigue succeeds Colonel Vincent S. Burton, whose promotion to full colonel also was announced only recently. Colonel Burton has assumed command of the Fourth Regiment of the ASTP's Basic Training Center.

Colonel Edward B. Jackson, former commander of the Fourth Regiment, has been assigned to the Academic Department of The Infantry School.

Technical Director of Film 'So Proudly We Hail' Joins General Section of School

Colonel Doyle One Of Last Officers To Leave Bataan

When the $2,000,000 Paramount Picture, a Mark Sandrich Production, "So Proudly We Hail," is premiered sometime this month at Music Hall, Radio City, N. Y., critics can be certain that the producers have taken no licenses with the technical direction of tre picture. Paramount requested that the War Department furnish them with a technical director for this story of the Army Nurses on Bataan.

And the War Department sent Col. Thomas W. Doyle, one of the last U. S. Army officers to leave Bataan, to Hollywood as the technical director of the picture. Col. Doyle had just been assigned to The Infantry School following his return from Australia, when he was ordered to the movie capital.

Despite the fact that the three nurses, Claudette Colbert, Veronica Lake, and Paulette Goddard, disliked very much to be burdened daily with the inconvenience of carrying the cumbersome gas mask that was always interfering with their movements, Col. Doyle insisted that they do so in order that the picture would be technically accurate. One concession was made. Miss Colbert was permitted to wear a helmet with the chin strap just off the chin because it interfered with her speaking.

Col. Doyle is now back in The Infantry School where he is assigned to duty in the General Section.

4-WAR VET

Colonel Doyle is a veteran of four wars over a span of 45 years, yet not all of his adult life has been spent in the army.

In 1898, at the age of 18, he enlisted for the Spanish-American War and served with the General Miles Expedition to Cuba and Puerto Rico.

Upon his discharge, he returned to civilian life and subsequently joined the Massachusetts National Guard. And it was with this outfit that he was sent the Mexican border during the disturbances in that area in 1916. Mustered again into Federal service in 1917, he passed officers' examination and was commissioned.

He served in France in 1918-19, participating in the battles of Champagne-Marne and the Argonne.

In 1920, he was promoted to captain and assigned to the 22nd infantry. Before being promoted to major in 1931, he saw service with the 28th and 15th Infantry. From 1932 to 1937, he served with the Massachusetts National Guard and then went on duty with the Officers' Reserve Corps at Akron, Ohio, for two years, during which time he was promoted to lieutenant colonel.

The attack on Pearl Harbor found him in the Philippines with the 45th Infantry, Philippine Scouts. He remained in the thick of the fighting until ordered to leave Corregidor May 3, 1942, shortly before it fell.

Colonel Doyle was with the 45th Infantry, Philippine Scouts, when Gen. MacArthur gave the order to retire to Bataan. The 45th was organized into a combat team with Colonel Doyle commanding. He had a varied assortment of troops including one or more companies of tanks, one or more battalions of field artillery, a company of engineers, a medical collecting company, Philippine Scouts, Philippine Constabulary, and a coast artillery battery.

BATAAN UNTENABLE

Bataan became untenable and surrendered on April 9. He was ordered on that date to Corregidor. Headquarters there were in latterals off the main Malinate Tunnel, the entrance to which was repeatedly bombed by the Japanese. On May 3, the executive officer to Lt. Gen. Wainwright, who had taken over the command of the U. S. A. forces in the Far East, handed Col. Doyle secret orders and stated that he had been ordered to Australia. He had but a short time to pack all his effects in a musette bag. The departure from the latteral in Malinate Tunnel was made in a station wagon which was to drive him to the water's edge. He was given many pieces of mail by members of the besieged garrison, who were very anxious that their loved ones in the states might know they were in good health and carrying on.

His party moved out into Manila Bay by boat until it made contact some hours later with a submarine which had crept inside our mine fields. This same submarine had sunk a cruiser, transport, and munition ship enroute to the Islands and the Japanese were on a hunt for it.

Once aboard, Col. Doyle found six army and six naval officers, eleven army nurses, one naval nurse, and the wife of a naval officer who were being evacuated. The submarine remained submerged for many hours before making a move, owing to the activity of the Japanese Navy. It finally got underway and proceeded cautiously beneath the mine fields until it reached the open sea.

After reaching Australia, Col. Doyle was ordered back to the States and assigned to The Infantry School. He was decorated for his services in the Philippines with the Silver Star with three oak clusters and the Purple Heart with one cluster.

Colonel Fish Killed On Attu

Formerly Served 3rd STR As Supply Officer

Lt. Col. James Fish III, former supply officer of the Third Student Training Regiment at Fort Benning was killed during the final phases of the fighting on Attu Island, according to communications received by Colonel R. H. Lord, regimental commander.

A regular army officer, Colonel Fish became associated with the Third Student Training Regiment at Fort Benning upon its organization in March, 1942, remaining with it as supply officer until the following September when he left to join the Seventh Motorized Division at Camp San Luis Obispo, Calif.

First Lieut. Robert O. English, another former officer in the Third STR who was graduate dfrom officer candidate school in the regiment, was near olonel Fish when he was injured fatally, and was later severely wounded, according to advises reaching First Lieut. William M. Schuler, commanding officer of Headquarters Company, Service Battalion, in the Third STR, who was graduated from officer candidate school in the same class as Lieute nant English.

According to information received, Colonel Fish and Lieutenant English were at the regimental command post in their sector when firing was heard from the left flank where Japanese patrols apparently had succeeded in breaking through American outposts. When the colonel went forward to investigate, he was stopped about 50 yards from the command post.

Colonel Fish is survived by his widow, Mrs. Josephine Hoyt Fish, and two children, Ballard and Elizabeth, whose home is in Oakland, Calif.

'This Is The Army' Player Promoted

Announcement has been made of the promotion of Second Lieutenant Daniel B. Dowling, of the Publications Section, Academic Department of The Infantry School to the rank of first lieutenant.

Lt. Dowling entered the army on March 1, 1942 with the 117th Infantry at Fort Jackson, S. C. From July 1 to October 2, 1942, he appeared in the Irving Berlin show "This Is the Army." He was selected for Officer Candidate School and reported to Fort Benning October 2, 1942. He was commissioned and assigned to his present duty on December 31, 1942.

Columbus Church Entertains Medicos

Fifty men from the Medical Detachment were guests at a big outdoor social and watermelon cutting at the Memorial Presbyterian church, "the soldier's church," last week.

The Rev. Mr. George W. Shefer, who has always shown an interest in the men at Fort Benning since he began his pastoral work at Memorial four years ago, with approximately forty young women and matrons, entertained the men with many games which were enjoyed by every one. Punch was served and the affair wound up with the cutting of twenty-five large ice cold melons.

The Memorial church plans to resume its Wednesday night social program for service men on a large scale beginning immediately. There will be a program each Wednesday, to which all service men are cordially invited.

Have a Coca-Cola=Wacko, Digger!
(OKAY, CHUM)

...or how to make a hit in Australia

When friendliness takes over, you find the spirit of cooperation, of "Let's work together for the common good". That's the way it works between Australians and Americans. Have a "Coke", says the Yank, and the Aussie knows he has a comrade. From Adelaide to Altoona Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes,— has become the gesture of the friendly.

244th Field Artillery Has 1st Anniversary

Unit Is Member Of Infantry School Troops Brigade

Sunday, August 8, 1943, marked the first anniversary of the 244th Field Artillery Battalion. The Field Artillery Unit which is a part of the School Troops Brigade of the Infantry School, has, for the past four months, participated in Infantry School demonstrations for the purpose of giving the students a chance to see, in actual operation, the different artillery techniques.

The 244th Field Artillery Battalion was activated August 8, 1942 at Camp Shelby, Miss., under the command of Lt. Col. George E. Cook. The original cadre came from the 172nd Field Artillery, a National Guard Regiment from the State of New Hampshire. Men came to the newly activated unit from the states of Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina and Pennsylvania. Basic training was completed at Camp Shelby, and in April, 1943, the Battalion was assigned to The Infantry School Troops Brigade. They came to this post covering almost 30,000 vehicle miles without a mishap or breakdown.

Soon after arrival at Fort Benning, Lt. Col. Cook left for an important assignment on the West Coast and Lt. Col. Mercado assumed command. For the past four months, the Battalion has been under the able and efficient guidance of Colonel H. G. Elliott, Commanding Officer of Field Artillery School Troops at Fort Benning.

Anniversary day was celebrated with a dinner in the Harmony Church area and the afternoon was spent at the Third Student Training Regiment Rest Camp where a large crowd participated in swimming, dancing and organized games.

1ST LT. PAULSON

Second Lieutenant William Joel Paulson of the Publications Section, Academic Dept., TIS, has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. He attended Officer Candidate school at Benning and was commissioned on December 18, 1942.

ASF Announces New Ruling On Promotions

Two changes in policy regarding promotion of officers under the jurisdiction of Army Service Forces have been disclosed at Fort Benning post headquarters.

Henceforth, officers who are eligible for promotion will not, except in unusual circumstances, be promoted more than two grades while serving on overhead duty. This ruling has been made, it was stated, since many ASF officers may be eligible for troop duty, in which case through successive promotions they might not be qualified to perform field duty commensurate with the grade they hold.

The second change in policy is that all captains and majors, before promotion to the next higher grade, need serve in their current status for at least twelve months before their recommendations for promotion may be made. A lieutenant colonel need serve fifteen months in ASF before being eligible for promotion to a full colnelcy. Grades below that of captain necessitate six months' continuous service.

With Civilians

BY MYRTLE M. JOINES

Three civilians from the Sub-Depot have gone to Warner Robins, Ga., for training as junior patrolmen. They are Mrs. Gertrude M. Enzweiler, Jack M. Griffin and George W. Head. These civilians will have the responsibility of guarding supplies and all government property from sabotage, careless handling, and keeping unauthorized persons off the area.

Airs Benning Soldiers' Song

The song "I Aain't Talking", composed by two former Fort Benning soldiers in the Third Armored Regiment, Tenth Armored Division, now on maneuvers was aired on the national hookup of the National Broadcasting Company, on the Army Hour last Sunday.

Composed by Technician Fourth Grade Chet Howard, leader of the regiment's band, and Private Sam Perna, a member of the band, the song already has won acclaim by the Army Times, a national weekly paper published for soldiers.

Blood Plasma Comes Into Own At Alamein

Not only did American soldiers during the battle of El Alamein blast the enemy with bullets and grenades, but the sturdy doughboys were called upon to donate 4,800 pints of "full blood" to save the lives of their fighting comrades.

Such testimony should be reason enough for soldiers in training at Fort Benning to volunteer blood for the Red Cross Blood Bank when it next visits Fort Benning.

The number of blood donors at the post when the blood bank was here last month far exceeded the required volunteers. Our response to the next visit should surpass even the recent record.

Colonel F. S. Gillespie, liaison officer from the British Medical Service to America, disclosed in Atlanta last week-end that the demand for blood was so great during the battle of El Alamein that it necessitated calling for transfusions from doughboys in action.

Besides the 4,000 pints of blood given by the soldiers, some 3,500 pints of plasma and 3,000 transfusions of glucose saline were used during the heat of the El Alamein battle.

"Probably no factor in the medical treatment of the urgently wounded is as beneficial as blood plasma," Colonel Gillespie said. "You can appreciate the need of blood plasma when you know the demands made in one battle—El Alamein. Transfusions of the plasma strengthen the dangerously wounded sufficient to move them to the rear for surgery and treatment. They are vital in saving the lives of wounded men. Men in the service never falter in offering their blood. They know what it means."

How about it soldier? Will YOU volunteer a pint of blood to the Red Cross Blood Bank?

Military Courtesy In One Easy Lesson

It is highly significant that Military Police of the Third Service Command are being armed with military courtesy reminder cards which will be handed out to enlisted men and officers who are observed in the commission of a military faux pas.

Too often an act of laxity in military courtesy or bearing is met with a sharp or nasty remark from an MP. It is regrettable that there should be any enmity between members of other branches and arms of the service and the military police, but it is none the less a positive fact.

The axiom that one can catch a great many more flies with molasses than with vinegar should prove currently true in the case of the Third Service Command MP's when they pass out their courtesy cards to an erring member of the service. After all, no soldier is anxious to be singled out in public by a fellow-member of the service (even though he is wearing the military police brassard) because of some minor military infraction.

The Bayonet sincerely hopes with the innovation of the Third Service Command program that the days of a loud "Hey, you, there, Mac, button up your shirt" are gone forever.

The military courtesy card cites three "don'ts" for all uniformed men: "Don't look the other way when an officer is seen; don't leave to others the duty of an officer or a non-commissioned officer to correct any subordinates, and don't make it necessary to have the MP's speak to you this message and to answer any question you may ask them in assisting you."

The new measure has already been put into effect in Baltimore, Md., but eventually will be used throughout the service command. The courtesy cards are termed "a harmless but important new weapon" by the Army and Navy Register.

Timed to make military personnel of the Third Service Command exemplify the finest traditions of the service and to win for them and their commanding officers the respect and confidence of civilians and other soldiers alike, the cards urge correct wearing of the uniforms as a duty owed to "those of our companions who die in their uniforms."

The cards will be handed out personally to the soldier or sailor without a necktie or cap and the officer who does not take his cigarette or cigar from his mouth before saluting. Repeated violations of the rules will bring sterner reprimands.

The Petals Of Humor Cannot Be Concealed

The Army has done it again:

This time a Thomas Gray quotation, "Many a rose is born to blush unseen," has been the victim of Army ingenuity. This ingenuity has been developed unconsciously, but is proving to be one of the greatest of all morale-builders among the men in service.

The "rose" referred to could be any quiet young civilian ushered into a new way of life because of unwanted world conditions. "Born to blush unseen" he may have been, but Fate, in the form of our Army, has played another of her many tricks upon human beings. Every quality, every whim of personality, every capability of this quite young civilian is now put to some good use. The most common seems to be the development or "debut" of his hidden humor.

Brought to light in situations which could occur only in servicemen's quarters, this new touch of humor has linked a common tie among the men; a bond essential to any fighting unit. The typical G. I. recruit moves into his new home-to-be quietly, a bit lonesome, and dubious. His basic training brings many a moment of fear,—fear of committing an error that will cause him to be the butt of laughter from "the boys."

If he only knew that each of the other men feels the same as he! If he only knew that the error will bring about a laugh, but that the laugh will be with him,—not at him! This is usually the first phase of the development of "Army Humor." The usual procedure of one thing leading to another follows, and moments of free time in which to talk over the days boners and sneak in a few needed laughs, are pleasantly looked forward to. These lighter moments of rest and relaxation make it all easier for him to bear and to understand.

Many an unexpected laugh finds birth in the kitchen. Typical of such was the case of the K. P. who, when told to wash the pans both inside and outside, washed the pans thoroughly in the kitchen sink, then went outside the mess hall to complete his task by repeating the operation! Also prominent is the quiet, subtle humorist who asks such questions as "Are we allowed to go in the Day Room at night?" Unforgettable will be the long drawn character looking like a refugee from a Lonely Hearts Club, whose favorite gripe is that Army life has cost him so much weight that he now has not trouble falling through the strings of a banjo without striking a note. "Slim" is usually accompanied by the other extreme; his pouchy, overweight chum, whose popularity is gained through a comical one-man-show while making valiant attempts to scale the eight-foot wall.

All of these G. I.'s make the most of their inborn characteristics, talents and capabilities. They do it in a manner that is pleasant to all, a manner which in civilian life they never would dare to reveal.

The "rose" no longer blushes. The petals of humor cannot but be seen. Chalk up another for the Army!

The Backbone Of Our Army: The Infantry

When a nation is at war, it is impracticable that the headlines of newspapers, the comments of radio columnists, and the scheme of general advertising techniques, should refer, in the main, to subjects other than the war, or, more specifically, to the men who are doing the fighting.

And I can hardly blame such agencies for dwelling upon the men of those branches of the service which are so conspicuously outstanding as to acquire that elusive charm best described as "glamor."

Therefore, I hear no ill-feeling for those who exuberantly hail the exploits of the more glamorous branches of service—the Navy, Marines, Paratroops, and especially, the Air Corps.

However, I feel that the men who do most of the actual fighting and dying get the least credit—so far as publicity is concerned—of all.

When I first entered the Army, it was my highest ambition ultimately to get into the Air Corps. There were other less-favored choices, of course. But one was not even on my list. And, in strict accordance to the rules of war, I got exactly what I didn't want—The Infantry.

It required time, before my primary feeling of depression passed away completely. Now it is no longer depression; it is jubilation that I feel.

I understand, now, that the Infantry is the Army, the real, hard, tough, blood and guts Army.

Perhaps this poem will clarify my point of view:

They give headlines to fellows who go zooming thru the sky
In a Fortress or a speedy P-38;
And well they deserve their glory, our boys with silver wings
Who drop upon the Axis the American brand of hate.
They tell stories of the fellows who man a destroyer's deck,
And sink Nips to the bottom of the sea,
And it's a mighty fine Navy, our American Navy,
That sails for the land of the free.
Yes, they tell many stories, and heap many glories,
On Marines, Air Force, and Field Artillery,
But where are the stories, and where are the glories
That are due to the fighting Infantry?
When it comes to blood and thunder that'll tear your heart asunder,
When it comes to downright, dirty, gory killing,
It's the Infantry that does it, in the foxhole and the trench,
The Infantry that goes where another man "ain't" willing—
Oh, you can have your wings of silver;
They don't mean so much to me
As the backbone of the Army, The fighting Infantry.

See what I mean? Let 'em have their headlines and their glamor. Meanwhile the Infantry will be the first to march into Berlin and Tokyo. And I hope I'm with 'em.

Cpl. Marty Margolit,
22nd Co., 1st STR

The best nations are home-made.

Some exert themselves to win the war through fear of what will happen if we don't. True victory means winning through our faith in what will happen when we do!

The Little Corporal's New High Command

TO A LITTLE BOY

Tonight as I sit and write you, son,
I hardly know what to say,
To keep you from being too lonesome,
At the news I have today.

You see, son, I received my orders,
We are shoving off at dawn,
I'll probably be gone for many months,
And I want you to carry on.

I want you to think of me as not away,
But right there by your side,
And my prayers will keep you and mother,
Secure while the time we bide.

You'll be the man in our home now,
Taking my place as you should;
Keeping everything in order,
Doing a hard job very good.

Always be proud and happy,
That I could go and fight for you;
And whatever happens while I'm away,
Don't you and mother be blue.

And if God in His wisdom and mercy,
Sees fit to keep me out there;
You'll know that I went to Him gladly,
Leaving a fine heritage for you to share.

Always be a good boy, son,
Give mother a kiss for me;
And I'll see you both in a little while,
After we've made the world free.

SCHOOL FOR CHARACTER

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

An editorial in a local paper on "Character as a Commodity," is rich in suggestion. It speaks of an organization whose purpose is to teach the youth of our State the value of character.

What a daring program! Character not as an ecclesiastical label, but something you can barter with, exchange for value received, a coin current in the market places of the world.

A friend suggests that it would be a fine thing if one could live backwards; that instead of growing old, grow young. Just reverse the process of living. If that could be done, this benefit would accrue. Endowed with the blistering knowledge of what it means to be a derelict from the moral realm, we would be more careful of our conduct; more sensitive to the worth of the essentials of life—that is, we would have a rendezvous with the integrity of our being.

Character is more than a commodity.

A page out of history tells of Mirabeau, one of France's greatest statesmen. He was never fully trusted, because of a clouded youth. However, such was his renown that at death he was given a place in the Pantheon among the illustrious dead. Two years after writings were found which proved Mirabeau false to the very end. By order his body was taken from the Pantheon and thrown into a common burying ground. The French Assembly declaring, "without honor, without character, no man is great."

USO Presents—

A WEDNESDAY NIGHT TREASURE HUNT AND NEW ARMY-NAVY USO DIRECTOR

BY PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

A Treasure Hunt will be sponsored next Wednesday night by the Phenix City Salvation Army-USO at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bentley . . . Mrs. Kathleen Smith, program director at the club, announces a marked trail will lead to concealed prizes and "treasure," and games will round out the entertainment . . . Forty soldiers are invited to attend, and a Fort Benning GI may assure himself a place in the party if he telephones Mrs. Smith or calls at the club to make reservations . . . Feminine companionship will be provided by the Victorettes . . . The group will meet at the club at 8:30 p. m. (EWT).

Fort Benning troops received a promise this week from the new director at the Army-Navy YMCA-USO, Mr. G. W. Avison, that the club will do its "darndest" to satisfy the needs and wants of servicemen . . . The new director stated he was "thrilled to be here and pleased to observe the way soldiers avail themselves of the facilities at the club."

Continuing Mr. Avison said, "I like to feel that doing this work I am making some real contribution to the greater war effort. Any time a soldier would like to discuss a problem with me or make any suggestion for the betterment of our program, my office door will be open to him." . . . He has been in YMCA work for 26 years, 15 years of that time in Korea working with the international council of the YMCA.

Miss Mel Tolbert, program director of the Columbus Salvation Army-USO, is having a two-week holiday to catch up on relaxation and to allow her sprained knee to recuperate . . . Program boss will be Mrs. Mary Johnson, who announces that Capt. Robert Marsalis, Salvation Army director in Columbus, will be guest speaker at the Sunday vesper service at 6 p. m. (EWT) . . . The Tuesday musical at 8 p. m. (EWT) will feature the piano style of Mrs. Jack Garrett of Baker Village.

Mr. Edward Korn, one of the directors at the Ninth Street USO, is having a three-week vacation on which he is spending some time at a USO directors' school in New York City . . . The pie socials at the Ninth Street USO have proven so popular that there is a shortage of tables . . . Ping pong tables have been pressed into service for full houses.

The program at the club will continue its usual course this week with a dance tonight to the music of the Lawson Field dance orchestra, old-fashioned square dancing Tuesday at 8:45 p. m. (EWT) and more movies, shorts and oddities throughout the week—all a part of the USO's "million dollar motion picture program."

This Khaki'd World

THIS KHAKI'D WORLD
By Pvt. G. I. Gripe

Listen you GI's and you shall hear
Of the hot caboose that brings up the rear
Of a luscious nifty, both swingy and shifty
Who works in our Post H. Q.

Now everyone knows that women are jealous
(Hey, boy, are you trying to tell us?)
So watching the shiver, the lovely quiver—
Other Cats often say "Mew."

Regarding the swing of that beautiful thing,
There was one babe who could stand it no longer—
So up she piped with a sneering gripe:
"You'd better not drop that, you!"

But our heroine fragile proved her own mind agile
And quick as a flash, she lifted a lash
And giving a smirk, said "Listen, you jerk
Better not try picking it up if I did, because it't be—
Too hot for the likes of you to handle."

* * *

Entire Second Student Training Regiment is watching these days with awe to see whether Pfc. Louis Barger can beat his own record. He recently downed 18 fried eggs, G. I. variety, at one sitting. They say over in the Regiment, too, that he capped it by eating an entire apple pie.

* * *

Headline in "Pine Bur" says "Dodger Fan Also Likes Hula Girls." Well, what the heck's news about that? Especially in an Army camp.

* * *

Hey, did you see those WAACs wearing the ISSC pins? For the information of the unobservant, or those who may never have seen one of those insignia, they're a blue enamel ornament with an upright sword in the center and the legend—"FOLLOW ME."

* * *

And speaking of WAACs, if you ever have the chance to get a group of them together, entice 'em to sing their parody on the Marine Hymn. It's plenty clever—and funny. Of course the trick is to get a gang of them together, all at one time.

* * *

Brother GI's, we need plenty of help in getting up a column the likes of this one. We need all sorts of little personal items but we don't want to pull any chestnuts out of fires for anybody; nor do we want to use any material that might hold up a fellow soldier to ridicule; nor do we want any trumped up stories about anybody. But we do want good funny yarns about GI's all over this camp. So don't forget us when you hear something.

* * *

Did you hear the one about the mess sergeant who sent the new K. P. to fill the salt shakers? Seems like the boy took four or five hours so the sergeant finally let out a yell:

"Hey, you, it shouldn't take you all day to fill a few salt shakers."

"Yeah," replied the K. P. "But it's a heluva chore, trying to get the darned stuff through those little holes."

* * *

Then they tell the one about the sentry who called out to the young miss who was just about to take a dip in a lake out Harmony Church way: "Sorry, but it's against regulations to swim in that lake." Whereupon the gal said, "Well, for goodnesssake, why didn't you tell me that before I undressed?" And the sentry said, "Well, there ain't no regulations against that, far as I know."

Key Says—

TRIBULATIONS OF MOVING ARE ENOUGH TO TRY MEN'S SOULS

After watching the exodus from quarters on the post within the last year, I have decided there are two things about moving which are almost as certain as death and taxes. The maid always leaves when packing and cleaning loom on the horizon, and no matter how immaculate you may leave your quarters the next inhabitants will always tell neighbors they've moved into a pig sty.

* * *

Packing really brings out the best, and worst, of the lady of the house. There are those who start the business methodically, taking down the curtains a month ahead of time, seeing that the rugs are sprinkled with moth preventatives, packing their prized figurines personally, and getting the buttons sewed on the children's clothes.

* * *

And there are those who wait until the day the movers get there before they go into action. They spend a frantic day cleaning out dresser drawers, hauling odds and ends down to the Thrift Shop for disposal, making last minute trips to the express office with packages which can't possibly be crammed into over-flowing suitcases, and unloading excess food supplies on startled neighbors. Gifts to neighbors may vary all the way from twelve half-used boxes of laundry starch to boxes of dry dog food, a head of wilted lettuce or a half dozen eggs of doubtful vintage.

There are those who see to it that the woodwork is washed, fingerprints removed from the walls, floors scrubbed, and all debris removed. And there are others who content themselves with having the stove and refrigerator fairly clean, and their own possessions out of the house. As a matter of fact, after the movers get through it's hard to tell what shape the place was in before they got there.

Some wives, after the packers have been in and they've been checked out of their quarters, gaily pile family, de-ticked dog, and household possessions haphazardly into a car of uncertain vintage for a long trek. Others, particularly those new to marriage and new to the army, have been known to blanch at the thought of even a day's trip unless under the protective guidance of a fond husband.

* * *

Yes, methods of moving differ on an army post. But somehow we all manage to get out at the designated time, and somehow we all manage to get to our destination. The method you take depends on whether you want to prolong the agony of packing or to get it over in one concentrated, hectic day.

THE COLONEL DEVISES NOVEL POST-WAR PLAN FOR INDUSTRY

BY S. SGT. TOM McDONALD

"Sergeant!" says Colonel T. P. Swampwater. "I have been giving a great deal of thought lately to the United Nations post war plans. I expect Washington to call me most any day now for one of my diversified opinions on the subject."

"What are you most interested in, Sir?", I politely inquired.

"What are your plans, Sir?"

"Well, as I see it, Sergeant, instead of just capturing Mussolini, Hitler, Goebbels, Goering and the rest and exterminating them, I think we should more or less capitalize on our loot."

"How, Sir?"

"Well, to begin with, I think it would be a good idea to have a shipment of canoe paddles sent to the locale of the execution, along with a couple of good auctioneers. Then I would sent out invitations and furnish airborne transportation to the place for several hundred of the wealthiest men in the world."

"Then what, Sir?"

"Then when I had everybody together, say in some centrally located capital such as London, I would rent one of the most exclusive stadiums and charge $100 admission to see the show."

"What show, Sir?"

"The show I'm planning, Sergeant! You see when I get the auctioneers and everybody together, I would have Hitler assume a horizontal position with his torso from the belt up and a vertical position from the belt down. Then the auctioneer would hold up a broad new canoe paddle and auction off the first lick and so forth."

"An admirable idea, Sir."

"Yes, siree, Sergeant, and according to my most conservative opinion we should be able to make several billion dollars on Hitler alone. Not to mention our top prices for Rommel, Goering, Ciano and the rest."

"If you may ask, Sir, what do you intend doing with all that money?"

"Why, I plan to turn it all over to war relief, Sergeant. It would buy clothes, food, and imported chewing gum for people all over the world."

"What about peanut brittle, Sir?"

"And peanut brittle too, Sergeant."

"Well, Sir, how long do you intend to run your show?"

"Until all of the canoe paddles are ready to turn over to the tooth pick factories."

"Yes, Sir?"

"And before we knew it, Sergeant, industry would be on its feet again. The factories could sell toothpicks all over the world for people to get the peanut brittle out of their teeth."

"Sir," I said, "you are a man of unlimited vision."

"Thank you, Sergeant, and now if you will excuse me, I'm going to go into my office and see if I can put my plan into a more tangible form."

"Yes, sir," I replied, not entirely cognizant of the many forces which move mankind.

Stamp Club

It's encouraging to know that our column is being read. Last week a non-philatelic friend told us she had read the column. We beamed. "Yes," she went on to say, "It smells."

The Fort Benning Stamp Club is temporarily losing its secretary, Sgt. Richard Heyl of the 53d General Hospital. He dropped in this morning to tell us that he will be away from the post on detached service for a while. Best of luck, Dick.

The Netherlands is the next country to be honored by the current series of flag stamps being issued by our government. This stamp, which is the fifth in the series, and which is of a similar design and denomination as the others, will be issued in Washington, D. C., on August 24th. At the rate these stamps are coming out, we figure that the whole series will have been issued by Christmas.

Did you know?...that the early stamps of Uganda, a British Colony in Central Africa, were manufactured via typewriter by missionaries...that Australia once operated a pigeon airmail service ...that in occupied Holland it is forbidden to illustrate any stamp which bears the portrait of any living member of the royal family.

By the time this goes to press, the August 10th meeting of the Fort Benning Stamp Club will have already been held. We hope that those of you who weren't able to attend will be sure to join us on the 25th. Time and place are as usual: 7:15 p. m. in the Library of Service Club No 1.

Of course, you've probably heard about the soldier who thought he could send a letter by airmail by writing "Free" twice.

Food For Thought

During hot weather, fresh vegetables and fruit deteriorate and spoil easily unless properly handled and stored. When fruits and vegetables are received at the mess, they should be opened and shuffled so air can circulate through them. Separate the ripe tomatoes and peaches from the others and store in refrigerator. Place the unripened ones in the open for ripening. Check them every day and use the ripest ones first.

Keep the leafy vegetables moist by sprinkling with water and keep stored in a cool place. Also, remove the burned and damaged leaves before storing. Use fruits and vegetables before they have time to deteriorate.

* * *

Practically everybody likes crisp brown friend potatoes, egg plant, chicken and other fried foods, but no one likes these greasy and soggy. To fry foods crisp and brown, the frying fat must be at proper temperature. If a piece of bread one inch square dropped in the fat, comes out a golden brown color in one minute, the temparature is all right. Take time to fry foods properly and there will be less left over.

* * *

Watch the leaks causing food waste. You should find out where these leaks are and take steps to eliminate them. Remember to keep your food waste down below 8 ounces per day per man.

Pacific War Veterans Arrive For TIS Work

13 O. C.'s Travel 7,500 Miles To School After 16 Months Of War

Thirteen men have been reunited in the Fifth Company of the Third Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, after some 7,500 miles of travel from their stations in the Southwest Pacific where they had seen 16 months service in the combat zone.

They are Candidates Herman R. Anderson, Paul C. Anderson, Gilbert O. Backman, Paul C. Condon, Howard B. Gagain, Charles W. Garbecki, Thomas Lidstone, John S. Lavery, Edwin P. Lechowitz, William C. Marooney, Henry A. Poley, George E. True and Donald H. Wiggiesworth. Their grades range from master sergeant, task force, to corporal.

To come to Fort Benning, the contingent traveled 4,500 miles across the Pacific Ocean under constant threat of Japanese submarine action and 3,000 miles across the United States by way of New York City.

Scoffing at the superstiiton attached to the number 13, the group informally has organized its own squad and by popular acclaim, Marooney seems to have been elected dean of the squad.

The entire group took its basic training at Camp Blanding, Fla., and, after a year spent there, was alerted and sailed to the Southwest Pacific shortly after the Pearl Harbor attack. They were among the first troops to reach that combat area after the war with Japan started.

WORK IN PERIL

The force was scattered among island groups, many of them secret bases, where fortifications were emplaced and strengthened. The men worked under the threat of Japanese air attack, a peril which materialized more than once.

Materials, ships and men were provided for both the Coral Sea and Midway actions. After these battles, the infantrymen worked on repairing and refitting the ships above the waterline under supervision of Navy officers. Both services cooperated to the fullest extent, sharing rations and exchanging material.

Marooney, a veteran of 19 years' service in the Army, served as sergeant-major for the entire task force which was under command of General Millard F. Harmon. In the islands, Marooney became acquainted with the French bishop of the diocese who had spent most of his 70 years ministering to the colonies.

This venerable patriarch spoke 14 languages but Marooney said his facility with the English language increased measurably after his contacts with the American infantrymen. His reverence even learned to play pinochle from the Americans and became quite proficient at it.

The Motor Maintenance class of the 20th Company, First Student Training regiment, The Infantry school was graduated this week with an exceptionally great record. Only four men failed to be graduated.

TIS Sergeant Knows Japs Well

First Sergeant John T. Radney of the 4th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, can feel proud and justly so of his service in the army. Sergeant Radney began his first enlistment back in 1937 when he was 25 years of age. Enlisting with the 21st Infantry, he received his basic training in the Hawaiian Islands.

The sergeant had a few altercations with the Japs while he was in the Hawaiian Islands. He says, "They just can't be trusted." He received an honorable discharge in San Francisco, Calif., on July 3, 1939, as a private 1st class.

However, the army had entered his blood and he reenlisted January 8, 1940, at Fort McClellan, Alabama, for duty at Fort Benning with the Fourth Anti-Tank Battalion commanded by Major General Leven C. Allen (then Lieutenant Colonel).

After serving a short time with the 4th Anti-Tanks, he was sent on special duty with The Infantry School where he served on the cadre of the 1st Basic Officers Class. The company was later designated as Company C, when the 1st Student Training Regiment was activated. He was also on the cadre detailed to the first Officers Communication Course.

First Sergeant Radney now holds a permanent sergeant's warrant dated June, 1941. He was promoted to first sergeant January 15, 1943. He is married and lives in Baker Village.

NO ARMY DOG TAG FOR CHIN—Army authorities turned a few shades whiter when they saw what information concerning Chin Wing had to go on the regulation identification disk, two of which every soldier must wear about his neck. Not to be outdone, they had a special dog tag made, large enough to carry the seven or eight lines completely identifying the Chinese Corporal. (U. S. Signal Corps photo.)

Tailor-made Dog Tags Ordered For Chin Wing's Exceptionally Long Name

Chin Wing has not perhaps "... the name at which the world grew pale" but his address turned the U. S. Army a few shades whiter. On his arrival at Fort Benning's 225th Station Hospital this Chinese born soldier was lacking his dog tags with good and sufficient reasons.

When Chin was inducted at Fort Devens, Mass. it was found that the essential information concerning him simply would not fit on the conventional 2 by 1 1-8 inch identification disk two of which every soldier must always wear about his neck. After all

Wing, Chin 31166470
Chow Chu Lin
Hoy Ping Hoy Sum Chow
Hung Mun Low Village
Kwangtung, China
Tetanus 42-43 Blood Type A.
Religion—Confucianism

is a whale of lot of verbiage to pry into 2 1-4 square inches.

Time pressed, as it has a way of doing at induction centers and there was no time to even think of tailor made dog tags before Chin was swooped off to Fort Benning and set down in the 225th Station Hospital in the Pine Grove area.

The unremitting wearing of dog tags, however is the Army's first "must" and Chin's commanding officer in the hospital unit promptly arranged to have some tags hand-made to fit his needs at Fort Bennings Colored Induction Center. The result was a rectangle 3-8 of an inch wider and 5-8 of an inch longer than the average.

Chin, now possessed of a corporal's rating and employed in the hospital's dispensary, was born near Canton, China, and was brought as a child to the United States in 1926. He entered the country at Seattle whence the family went to Charleston, W. Va., where they settled. There his father died and his mother still makes her home. Chin himself has lived in various American cities and much of his education was received in Boston, Mass. He returned to China in 1926 and went to work for a firm of American underwriters at Canton. He also taught in an Chinese high school in that South China port.

"Chin" is the corporal's first name while "Wing" is his first name. "Chow" is the family name of his wife and her given name is 'Chu Lin" "Hoy Ping" is the district in which the lady lives while Hoi Sum Chow is a further particularization which, Chin says, is "an islet." Hung Mun Low is the name of the village and Kwantung is the province wherein the whole kit and caboodle is situated. British papers, if copying, will please not laugh: remember such addresses as "Little Pinkles-In - The - Threeps, Near Swooton-Under - The - Hill-by Queens Crumpet, Salop."

During his stay in China Chin married Chow Chu Lin and their union has been blessed by six children, two of which were twins born after Chin's departure for the States in 1939 and which he has never seen.

Chin's present chief preoccupation is how to get an allotment for his wife and six children. In China marriage licenses not only are not required but definitely do not exist. Regulations demand that he have an affidavit from two persons not related to him testifying to the existence of his wife and children. How to get these in the circumstances over half a world is rather a formidable undertaking for a lone corporal and he still hasn't figured it out.

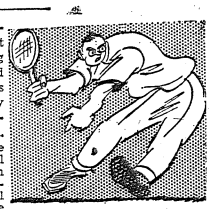
Sportscasting

BY SGT. CARL NEU

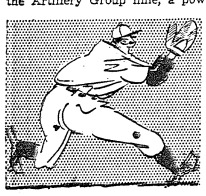


IT'S BEEN a long time since Capt. Hank Gowdy, the genial maestro of Infantry School sports, has had to wait until August to see his first major league ball game of the year—but that's what happened in this war year of 1943 with "Ole Goldenrod" once again wearing a military uniform instead of a baseball suit. Gowdy's been in service since early this year, and has stuck mighty close to Benning. But last week, he went on a well-deserved leave of ten days and we'll wager that he had a real busman's holiday up there at Crossley Field in Cincinnati watching his old team-mates on the Reds battle the National League opposition.

WOULD YOU believe that Pat Cooper, 176th Infantry pitcher, is now doing that effective hurling with a right arm that was badly broken in 1940? Well, it's true. The Spirit hero broke it while scuffling with another player in a friendly match while with Kingston in the Coastal Plain League. The very next year, he was back in pro ball, though, with Lynchburg in the Virginia State loop, and so impressed Connie Mack's scouts that he was signed by the Athletics. But he never got much of a chance to perform at Shibe Park before Uncle Sam reached out for him. In the last 37 innings he's pitched at Gowdy Field, Pat has struck out 69 batters. That's almost two per inning. Not bad for a guy with an arm that was broken just three years ago!

WHEN RUSS Pool for enlisted men re-opened on Sunday, it was a revelation to its patrons because it blossomed out with the bottom painted a shiny white. The super-duper paint job was administered with amazing speed by post engineer workmen last week so that the pool was closed for only a short period of time during this hot weather. The new finish does many things. It gives the pool a much neater appearance, it makes the bottom surface smoother, and it improves vision considerably so that the alert guards can better patrol all areas.

BEST NEWS of the week is the announcement in New York that lovely Alice Marble, this column's favorite female athlete, will visit Fort Benning on Sunday, August 29, for a tennis exhibition with Mary Hardwicke, the English lass who has been the constant playing companion for several years. The tennists opened a nation-wide tour of WAC camps on Tuesday at Camp Grant, Ill., and are due here two weeks from Sunday to entertain the female G.I.'s at this post. No definite word of their coming has yet reached here, so consequently plans for the match are still nebulous. It is hoped, however, that arrangements can be made so that Benning soldiers, as well as the WACs can witness the match since we know that many other lads beside this scribbler would get a real thrill out of seeing La Marble wield that racket once again in that same hard-stroking fashion that carried her to fame at Forest Hills a few years ago.



POST TENNIS fans are probably getting a little impatient at the first news of the forthcoming tourney to determine an enlisted champ in the court game. News of the tournament, promised by this week, has been delayed another seven days by the F. B. A. A. to enable several units which are now sponsoring intra-regimental play-offs to complete their own tourneys. Permitting time to finish off these unit tourneys will also give the racketmen a chance to get their strokes into a much better state of proficiency for the big post-wide affair.

THERE ARE collegians galore on the new 4th Training Regiment nine that is the first team to attempt to make use of the athletic talent in the ASTP Basic Training Center here. The Goldbricks, as the team is nicknamed, have a pitching staff, for instance, that consists of Ohio University's Charley Burdette, Temple's Jerome Johnson, and two Indiana University flingers, Bob Smith and Wendell Beck. Burdette was given a tryout by the Toledo Mudhens before entering the service, while Johnson was offered a tryout with the New Haven farm club of the Boston Nationals. He was also a varsity basketballer for the Temple Owls. Besides Smith and Beck, there are two more members of the Hoosier nine from Indiana U. now playing for the 4th Regiment. They are Catcher Ernie Burke and Centerfielder Dwayne Hodges, who was also a grid performer at Indiana.

ONE OFFICER candidate in the 3rd Student Training Regiment who was undaunted by the swift-flowing waters of the "ole swimmin" hole in the Shell Creek bivouac area recently was W. T. Lynch of the 14th Company. And no wonder! Lynch is a former National Pentathlon swim champ and also captured several New England championships any number of times. A Bostonian, Lynch won the Pentathlon crown as far back as 1928, when he was a mere youth of 16 years. Since then, however, he's been plenty active every year in numerous swimming events and in most recent seasons has kept up his water activities by serving a a swimming coach.

IT APPEARS that there will be no soft touches for anyone in the remaining TIS schedule. When the 252nd Field Artillery arrived here a short while ago and joined forces with the 244th F. A. to form the Artillery Group nine, a powerful team developed almost overnight. Although they haven't made any great strides towards the first division as yet the battle those Howitzers have been putting up lately is really gratifying. They came awfully close to dumping the 176th Spirits recently and really gave the Eagles some scrap Monday night. In Titus, one of their new hurlers, they have a moundsman who can give any of the recognized hurling aces a real tussle. That means that all of the first division clubs are in for a real scare before the schedule ends.

ANOTHER of the tail-enders, the 3rd STR Rifles, have also come to life with the injection of some new blood in the club by Lieut. Mickey Bash, their coach. Art Shively, who was with the New Orleans Pelicans in the Southern Association from 1936 to 1939 has considerably bolstered the shortstop position, while Ken Elsie is another promising infielder. Biggest help probably is Bob Tanner, former Rhode Island State collegian, who is a stellar left-handed pitcher and can also fill in an outfield slot where his hitting aids. His first mound start last week against the 300th resulted in a white-washing for Lefty Francis and Co. as Tanner blanked them with seven scattered hits. He's bound to give some of the other clubs plenty of the same treatment. Although both the Howitzers and the Rifles are too far back to win the flag, they may be the teams to decide the race, however, with their new-found strength making them an ever-dangerous threat.

SHORT SHOTS—Jim Prendergast, Eagle southpaw ace, was sold to Cincinnati almost two seasons ago, but never saw one of the Reds until he met Capt. Hank Gowdy here at Benning. . . . The 515th Parachutes have organized a late-season nine and are now playing in the Columbus Senior League. . . . Earl Varchminn, 1st Academic Co. softball hurler, pitches no-hit games almost as often as most players go for a drink of water. . . . Boxing is really on the upswing again with both the 176th and 300th working out daily at the gym. They'll be matched some time in early September. . . . Freddie Aguirre, who will train the Spirit ringmen, is a former 29th Division bantamweight champ and also captured the Tri-state flyweight title in the Carolinas and Virginia a few years ago. . . . Cappy Capello of the Academic Profs threatens to be the home run king of the softball league as he continues to knock the cover off the ball. . . . Southpaws Lefty Wissman of the Spirits and Jack Weston of the Rifles were team-mates several years ago at Union Springs, Ala., when both were just breaking into pro ball. Wissman later hurled for Rochester in the International and Weston was with New Orleans in the Southern. . . . Sgt. Vic Ephrem of the 300th Infantry's Cannon Co. is Benning correspondent for Ring magazine. . . . Lieut. Joe Thomas, current Spirit baseball coach, will probably be the backfield tutor on the 176th grid team this fall and expects to do a little quarterbacking as well. He was a Dayton University grid star. . . . Capt Frank Shannon, Benning's top court performer while with the Academic Profs, will probably play against his old mates this winter, since he has just been assigned to the 6th Training Regiment and may coach the Eagle quintet. Finis!

Gridiron Practice Starts In Three Units

Sixty Football Candidates Are Busy in 300th

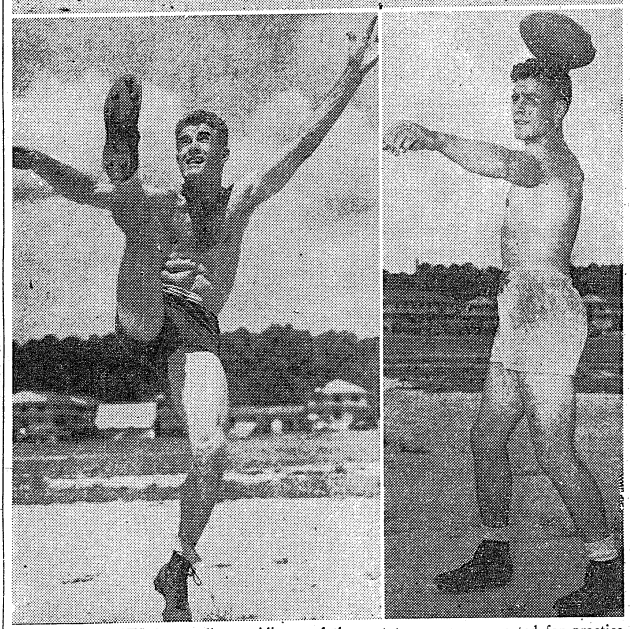
Several Ex-Collegians On Hand as Friedlund Begins Molding Team

Getting the jump on other outfits at the post, the 300th Infantry football squad began its practice sessions almost ten days ago and now has a squad of sixty candidates going through their paces daily.

According to Capt. Bob Friedlund, head coach and former Michigan State end, the early start was more a matter of necessity than anything else because the 300th is a fairly new regiment and is forced to build a team from scratch.

NO PROMISES

Friedlund, who played on the Eastern All-Army varsity last fall, is making no promises for his boys. The team is facing all the handicaps that face any brand new outfit. The men have not played together before, and much of the talent is as yet untested.



However, there are several prominent ex-collegians on hand from which the head mentor expects to form the nucleus of a fast, hard-hitting eleven. Outstanding in this group are: Joe Ruttt, former Texas A. and M. All-American guard; Ermal Allen, Kentucky's great scatback of two years ago; Al Solari, U. C. L. A. flash who made the longest run against Georgia in this year's Rose Bowl game; Meeks and Nolting, a pair of Tennessee backs; and Reeves from Texas Christian.

ROUTT AND ALLEN

Assisting Friedlund with the coaching chores will be Routt and Allen. Routt, a captain in the regiment, will handle the linemen on the 300th, while Allen tutors the backs. Both Friedlund and Allen were just elevated to captaincies this past week. All three of the coaches are also expected to play on the new 300th eleven.

The coaches have been putting the 60-man squad through some healthy workouts since the first day. Despite rigorous Army training, the first few days of drills brought forth grunts and groans from the big squad and there was a goodly sprinkling of sore legs and backs. Through a process of elimination in this early training, however, the coaches hope to come up with a starting eleven that will carry the 300th banners high in post competition this fall.

SHINING LIGHTS from college gridirons of the past two seasons reported for practice last week when the 300th Infantry began football work-outs. Shown at top is a high-stepping backfield quartet, consisting of Al Solari, U. C. L. A. Rose Bowl star; Hal Edge, Georgia Tech; Ermal Allen, Kentucky, and Bill Meek, Tennessee. Booting a high one on the left is Allen, who ran wild for Kentucky's Wildcats two years ago and is also serving as backfield coach of the 300th. 1st STR Red Sox Face Reception Center Foe In Crucial Loop Test

Gowdy Field Battle Saturday To Decide Service Loop Lead

Current king-pins of Service League baseball, the Reception Center and 1st STR nines will clash at Gowdy Field on Saturday night at 7 o'clock to determine temporary supremacy in the second-half race. Both clubs are now deadlocked for the loop's top spot with a pair of wins and no losses.

One Reception Center victory recorded a week ago was wiped off the books this week when the Military Police nine folded up and was merged with the newly-named Headquarters Detachment club, formerly known as Post Detachment. Since the M. P.'s had played only two games, league officials decided to simply remove them from the record altogether.

SOX WIN AGAIN

That move threw the first-place honors into a stalemate, since the Red Sox from the 1st STR won their only tilt of the week from the Medical Detachment by a 9-0 score on Monday night. Reception Center had only one game scheduled and that was rained out.

Both the Red Sox and the Orphans will come up fighting for Saturday night's big battle. In loop competition during the first-half, the Sox toppled the R.C. lads, but they have been beaten twice by the Orphans in outside exhibitions, and the rivalry between the two main post units is reaching a fever pitch.

SOUTHPAWS WORK

As a result of the importance of the tilt, both coaches are expected to call on their ace pitchers with Lefty Romby working for the Sox and Snooky Welmaker chucking for the Reception Center. Both are powerful southpaws with plenty of pro experience and fans look for a real mound battle.

In other games played during the past week, the Provisional Truck Blues rebounded after two early losses to dump their intra-regimental rivals, the PTR Reds, in an 8-5 tussle at Tanker Field on Friday. Saturday night at Gowdy Field, the Hq. Det. Tigers romped over the once-proud 3rd STR Panthers by a 6-1 count.

HQ. PLAYS TONITE

Tonight, the Tigers will be in action at Reception Center Field where they meet the Reds at 6:30. Academic's Pacesetters and the Medicos clash on the same field tomorrow night. Next Monday, 1st STR and the Reds will play off a tie game at Medico Field. Two games are carded Tuesday with Hq. Det. and the Red Sox clashing at Gowdy, while the Reds entertain Reception Center at Tanker Field. The Pacesetters and Blues meet Wednesday at the R. C. diamond to conclude the week's card.

Gators Topple Columbus Nine

Lew Christie and Ewell Blackwell collaborated in holding the powerful Columbus Foxes to two lone hits last Friday at Golden Park in Columbus as the 124th Gators swept to a neat 3-1 triumph over the city nine.

The famed Columbus batting attack was completely stymied by the two former minor leaguers who kept the game well under control. Christie, the former Dallas hurler in the Texas League, worked the first six frames and was relieved by Blackwell, once with Syracuse in the International, for the final canto of the abbreviated contest.

GATORS GET FIVE

Tom Dixon was the Columbus hurler, and he worked effectively, holding the heavy-hitting Gators to five hits. The Gators tallied twice in the fifth and once in the sixth after going scoreless for four frames. Four errors were racked up against Columbus while the Gators miscued only once.

Holders of tickets for last Saturday's wrestling matches at Golden Park in Columbus, which were rained out, were notified by the management this week that they will be redeemable this Saturday night, August 14th, when another all-star card is scheduled.

Major Red Milton Issues Call for Gator Gridders

Post Champs To Report On Monday; Impressive Coaching Staff Named

By CORP. ED FOGG

The first call for Gator football talent has been issued by Major Harold F. Milton, 124th Infantry football coach. Monday, August 16, all candidates will meet in McMillan Bowl for the initial muster. It is contemplated that Coach Milton will be met by at least one hundred and fifty new and old men.

FINE MATERIAL

The Gators, who won 7 straight and the post championship last year, will take the field strengthened by some of the country's finest football material. The old squad with its post famous names, Roy Cestary, Shine Berasi, Mike Aulenti, Lennie Pieton, Nick Calos, Vern Smith, Johnny Soltas and many other worthies, are anxiously awaiting first practice to get started on another undefeated post season.

The new faces that have appeared on the Gator grid horizon, are going to be utilized in a player coaching capacity. For line coaches, Bob Corey from Columbia will handle the centers, while Jack McKewen of Alabama will work with the tackles. With the wings, Coach Milton has stated that the responsibility will rest on the shoulders of Alabama's Sam Sharp, and Norris Layton of Western Michigan will be in charge of the guards.

PAIR OF BULLDOGS

In the backfield, two of Georgia's mainstays will work, Jim Todd with the kickers and Lamar Davis with the halfbacks. Bill Stauss of Iowa will handle the fullbacks. Captain James B. Brooks is back as business manager and Hal Leader has been named as equipment manager.

Coach Milton, as usual, looks into the future and predicts the least for the team, he says, "our squad will have to be much better this year, as we will play against much stronger competition. It will take long hours of tedious practice to build a squad equal to the fighting and spirited eleven that represented the 124th last year."

Pollock and Thomas Will Tutor Initial 176th Grid Eleven

The 176th Infantry will begin football practice on Monday August 16th. This will be the first football team in the history of the regiment. Prospects on the team are as yet unknown although theer are many former college players within the regiment.

Captain "Bud" Pollock will be head coach, and Lt. "Joe" Thomas assistant and backfield coach. Pollock played end for Penn Military College and was mentioned on several all eastern teams.

Thomas, a graduate of Dayton University in Ohio, played quarterback. The two coaches are old high school rivals from Philadelphia, Pa. In Philly, Pollock played for Northeast High while Thomas played for Germantown. Pollock's brother, "Red," is a former member of the Chicago Bears, and this year will be playing for the Philadelphia Eagles.

Captain Pollock is going to use a modified Notre Dame system, a type of play that both he and Thomas are well versed in. The two coaches expect to carry a squad of about thirty-five men.

Profs Score Shutout Win Over Columbus Foxes, 12-0

Lehner and Bobo Team Up To Hurl Academics To Win Over City Foe

Riding high on a beautiful pitching streak, the Profs scored their third shutout in four days when they trounced the Columbus Foxes 12 to 0 at Gowdy Field last week. Prof hurlers have now gone 28 consecutive innings without allowing the opposition to score.

Lefty Lehner and Bill Bobo split the pitching for the Academics, each giving up only two hits, with Lehner fanning eight in the five innings he worked.

NIEBLER DOUBLES

Corley started on the mound for the Foxes and held the Profs hitless for two innings. Then, with two out in the third, Chet Dabbs got a freak double on an infield fly that went soaring up over the floodlights. Bowden, the second baseman, completely lost sight of the ball and by time it landed, about two feet behind him, Dabbs was perched on second. Russo drew a walk, then Elmer Niebler slammed a double against the fence to score both runners.

After that the Profs kept slamming out hits. Corley went out in the sixth, Copeland in the seventh and Cobb finished for the Foxes. But they all looked alike to the Profs who banked out 12 hits all told, including two doubles by Niebler, other doubles by Prasse, Plunk and Dabbs, and a triple by Dabbs.

The game was the second between the two teams, the Foxes having won the first, 2-1. Conspicuous by his absence was Benny Zientara, star second baseman, who missed his first game of the year due to an injured back.

Hq. Detachment Whips Panthers

The strong Headquarters Detachment nine, formerly known as hte Post Detachment, whipped the 3rd STR Panthers by a 6-1 count in a Service League tilt at Gowdy Field on Saturday night. It was the second win against one defeat in the second-half race for the Tigers.

Simpson, on the mound for the victors, was the big factor in the Hq. triumph. The husky right-hander once again handcuffed the usually hard-hitting Panthers and held them scoreless in all except one frame, the fifth, wen safeties by Pillipson, Brumitt and Ward accounted for the lone tally. Simpson fanned seven 3rd STR hitters in the seven-inning game.

Post Softball Tens Expected To Enter Meet

District Playoffs In City to Decide State Title Entry

Several Fort Benning softball teams are expected to enter the district playoffs for the national crown at a meeting tomorrow night at Bentley's Sport Shop in Columbus when preliminary plans are discussed.

The conclave has been called by Hugh Bentley, Columbus merchant, who has been appointed district commissioner for the big softball event. The meeting will start at 9 o'clock Benning time.

STATE MEET

The winner of the district tourney will be eligible to enter the Georgia state meet which is slated to be run off the latter part of August. Tentative plans here call for the games to start within the next week and to be concluded by August 25th.

Each team losing a game will be automatically eliminated until only the finalists remain. Then a two-out-of-three game series will determine the district champ. All games are expected to be played on the softball layout at Pittman Field in Bibb City.

URGED TO ATTEND

All team managers, particularly of teams at the post, are urged to attend the meeting tomorrow night.

Prospective entries from Fort Benning include Lawson Field's crack team, the Lawson Sub-Depot civilian ten, the 124th Infantry Gators and the 283rd Q. M. club. Columbus Sportsmen's Club, Bibb Manufacturing, West Point, and Columbus Reds are expected civilian entries.

Francis Will Hurl Against Old Mates In Tonight's Tilt

Lefty Francis, 300th Infantry southpaw, will hurl against his old teammates tonight at Gowdy Field when he leads his team against the Academic Profs in the play-off of a postponed game. Rudy Rundus, slim right-hander, is expected to get the mound call for the Profs in the crucial TIS league tilt which begins at 7 o'clock.

Last summer with the Profs, Francis was the number one pitch on the post and hurled the Academics to the championship laurels. After graduating from O. C. School early this season, he was assigned to the 300th Infantry and immediately named coach of the baseball nine.

The left-hander's record with an in-and-out team has not been any too impressive this season, but all year long Lefty has been yearning for a chance to toe the slab against the Profs. Twice, the game has been postponed, and twice Francis was disappointed.

But tonight at seven, the 300th coach will have his chance and the prospects of the battle between the Profs and their former ace mounds-man is expected to draw a huge crowd to Gowdy Field.

Schultz of Spirits Is Former Semi-Pro

Francis Schultz, one of the Spirit moundsmen for the 176th Infantry is a former semi-pro star who is now compiling a neat record at the post. He was born in Kearney, N. J., and is 6 ft., 1 1-2 inches tall, and weighs 200 pounds.

During the first half of the TIS league, Schultz won three games while losing none. He beat the STR team, 764th and 244th outfits. His first game in the second half of the season was a brilliant five-hitter against the 3rd STR Rifles. He had ten strikeouts in that game.

Schultz can play the outfield well also, and has been used in right field. He bats and throws right-handed. Schultz broke into semi-pro ball in 1935. In 1936 he was with the Novia Scotia Dominion Hawks in the Cape Britan Colliery League in Canada. He returned to the New Jersey semi-pro baseball in '37 where he remained until his induction into the army in August 1941.

Howitzers Hit Late-Season Spurt To Complicate TIS Title Picture

Artillerymen Top Tankers, Eagles; Gators, Spirits Remain Deadlocked

BY SGT MILTON LUBAN

Rain created a little havoc with TIS league schedule last week but there was enough action for the Artillery group to live up to their prediction as to ther toughness made here two weeks ago, the Howitzers first giving the first-place 176th Spirits the scare of their lives, then knocking off the 764th Tanks, and following that up with a 6-4 triumph over the powerful 6th Training Regiment Eagles.

It is unfortunate that the Howitzers were strengthened so late in the season. Judging by their present play they would have been right up there battling for the lead if they could have fielded their current lineup from the beginning.

RIFLES WIN TWO

Meanwhile the in-and-out 3rd STR Rifles made it two in a row to live up to their reputation as the most unpredictable team in the league. The Rifles have a tough week ahead of them, meeting the league-leading 124th Gators tomorrow night, the Artillery Group on Sunday and the powerful Eagles on Monday. There is also a possibility that Sunday's rained-out game with the Spirits, co-holders of first place, will be squeezed in.

Best game of last week, and possibly of the season, was the brilliant pitching duel between Rudy Rundus and Jim Prendergast which saw the Profs emerge with a 1-0 win over the Eagles to take over third place. Both pitchers gave up only four hits, Prendergast holding the Profs to one bingle up until the eighth inning. Then Bill Cox smacked his second double of the game, was sacrificed to third and scored on a passed ball to ring up the winning run and paste the brilliant Prendergast with a heart-breaking defeat.

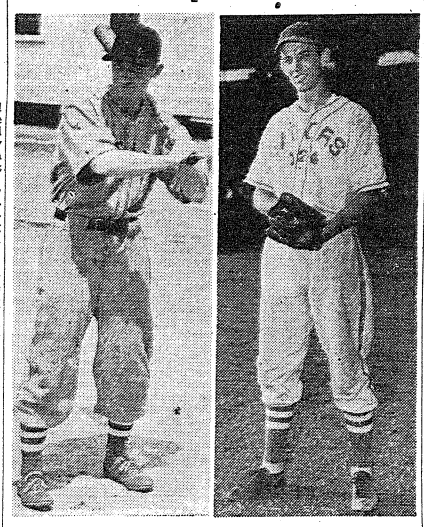
GREAT GAME

Rundus hurled a truly great game; striking out 13 men and pulling one of the most dramatic stunts of the season when, with none out and McCluskey on third waiting for any kind of a play to bring him across the plate, Rudy reared back and blazed in his fast ball to whiff the next three batters.

Rundus, a sadly under-estimated pitcher in the first-half, has been pitching beautiful ball all season and has definitely established himself as among the five best on the post.

TOUGHEST CARD

Toughest schedule this coming week is that of the Profs, with four games in five days. Last night the Profs met the Artillery Group at Harmony Church. Tonight they play the 300th at Gowdy Field, tomorrow they meet the 764th Tanks and on Sunday they clash with the dangerous 6th Training Regiment Eagles.



The results of this week should definitely show whether the Profs are to be counted out of the second-half race or whether they will be in the free-for-all with the Gators and Spirits. It will also be interesting to see how far their pitchers can stretch their runless stretch of innings, now consisting of 28 innings without an opposition score. Prof hurlers have now come through with 10 shutouts in their 27 games.

OTHER TILTS

Other games this week: 176th vs. 300th at Gowdy Field Sunday; Artillery Group vs. Rifles in the second game of the Sunday triple-header. At Harmony Church the Gators take on the 764th Tanks. On Wednesday it's the Spirits against the Tanks at Gowdy, and Artillery vs. 300th at Harmony Church.

TIS STANDINGS

300th Infantry	3	4	.428
3rd STR	3	4	.428
Artillery Group	2	6	.250
764th Tanks	1	7	.125

RIVALS TOMORROW at Harmony Church Field will be Bob Schively, new shortstop for the 3rd STR Rifles, who formerly played with the New Orleans Pelicans, and Lew Christie, stellar right-hander from Dallas in the Texas League, ho is expected to get the mound call for the 124th Gators in this crucial TIS League battle.

Prof Softballers Get Hot in 2nd Half Race

Academic Regiment Ten Threat To Supremacy of Parachutists

BY PFC. JOHNSTON C. WOODALL

Ending in a dismal fourth place slot in the first half of the post Softball League, the Academic Prof softballers have thrown consternation among other contesting teams, making an abrupt 'about face' by walloping their first three opponents and sharing the lead with the first Academic Co., Parachute School.

On the come-back trail, the Profs blasted the Station Hospital ten, 18 to 3, and then bumped the highly-touted 124th Infantry Gators 3 to 0.

RED HOT NOW

The Profs got hepped up and felt their proverbial oats the last game of the firs half by dusting the hitherto undefeated, invincible parachutists and their twirler, Earl Varchminn. The score was 1 to 0. Since that date, no team has stopped the red-hot Profs.

The Profs are breathing fire and smoke and are shooting the works for the second half pennant.

CAPELLA STARS

In "Cappy" Capella the Profs have probably the best hot-sacker in the whole league, barring none, catch as catch can. This lad parked two homers in one evening out of three times at the platter against the 124th Infantry Gators and is leading the league in homers with seven round trip clouts.

Baum and Giamo are the keystone combination and have turned in great performances on twin killings with the fancy-fielding Danny DeStefano at first base.

OUTFIELDERS GALORE

There are so many good outfielders that Captain Bob Homan has to alternate, in order to give all the boys a chance to play. Bozzo, Sherman, Meltsner, Homan, Caravella, Blasi, Hegler and Kresge are the murderers' row.

In Tommy Goldstein, the Profs have the only chunker in the league to best the brilliant Earl Varchminn. Goldy really goes with the chips down, ably supporting is Bill Estes, another star, who has been handling the pitching chores.

Behind the plater are the two-H boys, Hans and Hill. Both are reliable and steady.

All in all it seems that the Prof ten is traveling with the champ baseball Prof nine and the anguish and wails heard may be the opposing teams chant, "Beat the Profs and win the championship."

Three Tens Are Deadlockeed In Softball Race

Hamm Hurls No-Hitter For Gator Club In 17-0 Rout of 3rd

Tuesday night's result in the post softball league saw all three of the leaders continue their fast pace to remain in a deadlock for the circuit's top honors.

Highlight of the evening though was a no-hitter pitched by Howard Hamm, star twirler for the 124th Gators, as the Harmony Church crew swept to a 17-0 romp over 3rd STR. Hamm also hit a home run along with Soltas and Digianno of the Gators, who now hold fourth place in the loop.

SPIRITS WIN

The 176th Infantry Spirits dumped Station Hospital, 7-2, while the Academic Profs trounced 283rd Quartermaster, 16-1. 1st Academic Co., the other ten involved in the triple deadlock, won on a forfeit from Lawson Field which fielded only five men for their scheduled tilt.

Two of the four games last Thursday were rained out, but the Gators played through a drizzle to whitewash the Medicos, 10-0, while the 3rd STR ten tripped the Q. M. entry, 6-3, in a game at Harmony Church.

4 GAMES TONIGHT

Tonight, all eight clubs will be in action with the feature tilt pitting the Gators against the Spirits on the 176th diamond. Lawson invades the 283rd area, the Medicos plays 1st Academic, and the Profs travel to 3rd STR's layout in Harmony Church.

Next Tuesday, 283rd plays at Gatorland, the Spirits plays Lawson under the lights, 3rd STR journeys in to Station Hospital, and 1st Academic and the Profs clash in the big game of the week at the A. R. diamond on the main post.

Parachute Softball Club Divides With Birmingham Team

Fort Benning's powerful 1st Academic Co. softball ten, first-half post champs, travelled to Birmingham Sunday and split a twin bill with the strong Homewood Dairies of the Mound City.

The Birmingham club, last year's champions in the City Softball Association, took the opener by a 2-1 count, but the Benning paratroopers came back to win the nightcap, 4-0.

IRON MAN STUNT

Earl Varchminn, Benning's top hurler, pulled an iron man stunt in pitching both games for the soldier club. He hurled brilliant ball, giving up only six hits in the defeat, and permitting Birmingham only one hit in the aftermath.

First game:

Homewood Dairies	000	110	0—2	6	0

Raul Franco of 300th Is Little Man With Big Sock

Former Golden Glover Is Bright Prospect For Ring Honors

When the 300th Infantry boxing team fell out for its initial practice a few weeks ago, a little man was very much in evcidence. He was Cpl. Raul Franco of Company K who forgets everything else once he hears the word "boxing."

Franco, a native of California, received his primary boxing training in high school wheer he appeared in all the school matches. High school days over, he moved on to the amateur circles and gradually built up a reputation as a swift moving, capable little boxer.

GOLDEN GLOVER

The Golden Gloves Tournaments on the West Coast always found him on hand and his deceptive type of boxing enabled himto carry off a number of titles in the matches.

When the Army beckoned to him in the fall of 1942, Franco picked up his barracks bags and made tracks for Camp Joseph T. Robinson in Little Rock, Arkansas. He managed to sandwich in some boxing between the arduous schedules of basic training and appeared in all the bouts staged at the camp. In his two fights at Robinson, Franco came out on top, with a knockout in onde and a decision in the other.

WON ONLY BOUT

Transferred to the 300th Infantry here at Benning in January of 1943, Franco was the first to respond when the call went out for boxers. The 300th's first attempt at a boxing team was short lived. With the regiment scattered all over the post any attempt at a concerted program of athletics was impossible. The boxing team managed to make one appearance, that, against the 29th Infantry in the post gym and in that contest Fronco salvaged something for the 300th by winning his bout. The remaining five were lost to th regiment, one by default.

Lt. Roger Reeves, coach of the rejuvenated boxing team says that the situation is much different now and looks for a winning team. And with men like Franco he has a chance of having it.

Still another prominent Benning soldier cast in "The Cat and the Canary" is Sgt. Milton Luban of the Academic Regiment, who plays Hendricks, a guard at an insane asylum. Luban will also serve as stage manager for the Civic Theater venture and in past years has gained prominence for his theatrical work both on Broadway and in Hollywood.

The leading female role, that of Annabelle, will be played by Terry Ryder, wife of the Infantry School's Sgt. Jack Ryder. Mrs. Ryder has attended dramatic schools and played in summer stock. B. J. Beardsley, another experienced dramatic actress, and wife of Lieut. Paul Beardsley, who is cast in the play, will portray Cicily, one of the potential heirs.

The two remaining female roles will be played by civilian employees of the Post Engineer's office at Fort Benning, Janice Oettinger and Eileen Rubenstein. Miss Oettinger is cast as Susan Sillsby, another fortune-seeker, while Miss Rubenstein will play Mammy, a West Indian servant, who has been guardian of the West homestead ever since the owner's death.

Provisional Truckers Are Athletic Minded

Two Nines Represent Regiment and Grid Team Is Planned

The Provisional Truck Regiment is going in for athletics in a big way and seems well on the road to sharing some of the attention and fame that goes to the famed Fort Benning "Panther" organizations.

Starting back in the winter months during basketball season, this regiment made an appearance in local sports circles with a basketball team that was a worthy representative of the regiment. Starting late in the season and handicapped by lack of time for practice sessions, the team finished the season with a fair average and also a promise of future greatness.

With the call for baseball entries in the Fort Benning Service League, this organization answered by entering two teams—the PTR "Blues" and the PTR "Reds". The "Blues" are composed of players of the Second Battalion of the regiment and are managed by Lt. Richard Edwards, a former baseball player. Finishing the first half of the league in third place, this team was noted for its fine defensive play—having such ball hawks as Third baseman Lawson (an all around player), Shortstop Coulter (a home run hitter), Outfielder Baldwin (with years of playing experience), and a great moundsman, Pitcher Lacour, who pitched several masterpieces and who, just recently, struck out seventeen batters in one of the Gowdy Field games.

THE 'REDS'

The "Reds" are made up of players from the First, Third, and Fourth Battalions and use as their home grounds Tanker Field, located in the Harmony Church area. They function under the direction of Lt. Charles L. Campbell, former Howard University athlete and have two player-coaches Sergeant Charles Walker and Corporal Willie McGowen. Pitchers Bryant and House make a formidable duo of moundsmen while other positions are ably filled by suchplayers as Kimes, Williams, Tate, Upton, Johnson, Jones and others. This team, while not boasting a good first half record, has made a good start on the second half and to date has won one, lost one, and played the mighty First Regiment Red Sox (winners of the first half) to a 5-5 tie in one of the best games played on Tanker Field.

As the baseball season slips away, the call for football players is being sounded and from the response the PTR will be well represented on the gridiron. Lt. Joseph D. A. Dismond, three times all-conference fullback at Hampton University, Staff Sergeant Clarence V. Reid, Tuskegee football great and star on last year's Panther team, and Sergeant Walter R. Bennett, player and later assistant coach at South Carolina State will form the coaching staff and have at their call a number of likely looking prospects who are potential conference champions.

The athletic record being made by the Provisional Truck Regiment is all the more commendable when it is realized that this outfit is a transportation unit and, as such, is always furnishing drivers who are also ball players and athletes and who, consequently have very little time for practice and many times have to play in some contest within an hour after coming in from such dispatch and driving assignment.

1st STR Students Purchase Maps

Students in the 20th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, aren't letting long, arduous days in lecture hall and field blind them to the fact that they're getting ready to fight in a global war. From its unit fund, the company bought an excellent set of maps and hung them in the day room and other conspicuous spots about the area.

It's a complete collection and includes maps of the world, North and South America, the Atlantic Ocean, England, Asia, Africa, Australia, Europe and the Mediterranean theatre of operations. From now on, the boys have no excuse for not keeping posted on what's happening—and where.

Panthers Romp Over Blue Sox

Behind the excellent pitching of Frankie Phillipson, the Third Student Training regiment Panthers shut out the Military Police nine 19-0 at Tanker field, last Wednesday. Phillipson gave up two scratch hits.

The Panthers tallied four runs in the first fame, thre in the second, added seven more counters in the fourth inning and scored five tallies in the sixth frame, piling up one of the highest scores in the Service league this season.

The Panthers collected 14 hits. Fighting Frankie stole the show, pitching beautifully and connecting for a home run in the fourth inning, scoring Lamb and Johnson ahead of him.

Holmes, a newcome to the Service battalion team, hit safely in all three trips to the plate. Every member of the Panthers hit safely. Hodges, M. P. catcher, was credited with both of the hits collected by the losing team. No man on the Police team was able to reach third, while three men died at second base during the onslaught. Printz was the losing pitcher, leaving the game in the fifth frame. Benton replaced him and finished the game.

First TCC Has Near Perfect Insurance Record

A record in the First Troop Carrier Command for the highest amount of National Service Insurance per man has been set by the 5th Troop Carrier Squadron stationed at Lawson Field. All but six men in the squadron have the limit of life insurance.

Their total percentage of insurance coverage 97.93 per cent. The total amount of insurance carried in the squadron amounts to $2,867,500.

Caplain Parriott Made Major

Captain Robert Benedum Parriott of the Weapons Section, Academic Department of the Infantry School has been promoted to the rank of major.

Major Parriott is a graduate of Staunton Military Academy in Staunton, Va. He received his BS degree from the University of Texas in 1940. Previous to entering military service, he was employed as a petroleum production engineer.

Major Parriott was commissioned in the Officers' Reserve Corps on October 20, 1937, and was called to active duty as a student in Officers' Basic Course at The Infantry School, Fort Benning or January 28, 1942. Upon completion he was assigned as instructor to the M-1 Rifle Group of the Weapons Section of The Infantry School.

GERBER SILVER-BARRED

Second Lieutenant William Winton Gerber of the Weapons Section, Academic Department of The Infantry School, has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. Lt. Gerber was commissioned a second lieutenant on November 4, 1942, and assigned to his present duty.

Boston Tommy Reveals Mystery Of Inner Workings Of G-2

CPX Problem Finds Scout Car And Rescue Vehicles Mired In Clay

By PVT. THOMAS DEVINE

On the completion of my basic training with the Tigers I was assigned to G-2 and the very first day I worked in that office the Major called me and the other enlisted men into his private sanctum and shut the door. He then proceeded to tell us that ALL was known about us. We had been investigated with the utmost assiduity and they were even cognizant of the arrangements of our grandparents' dentures.

For my part I thought "God save the mark" and felt as the drowning man is supposed to feel when his life is said to pass before him in the space of seconds. "My Heavens," I speculated, "I wonder if they dug up the incident of the artificial pearls at the Cafe de la Paix and the subsequent denouement in Harry's American Bar. Could they have learned about the episode of the Baroness von E. and the Ed Pinauds' shaving kit. Can they have ferreted out that little matter of the Gainsborough portrait?" Presently I collected my wits. Of course they haven't, I'm here, am I not. For that matter the faces of the other guys presented just as interesting a study as my own must have.

The major after indulging in a moment of silent enjoyment of our mass distress assured us that the concern of G-2 was only in the matter of our patriotism, honesty and dependability and did not concern itself with our little private crotchets and idiosyncracies. We began to breathe a little easier. He then gave us a solemn lecture on the imperative necessity for keeping our faces shut about what we might learn in the office, administered us an oath and dismissed us with a tacit blessing.

THINK UP SECRETS

When any of the boys in the company would ask, "What the hell do you goldbricks do up there in G-2 all day?" I'd cryptically reply, "Why we think up secrets for G-2 to keep, of course, what do you suppose?" Hency my lips are sealed and even if I had learned any fascinating secrets (which I didn't), I'd never dream of murmuring them to a soul, no—not for worlds and worlds.

However, a few gay things happened during my tenure of office and in one particular, since a few thousand other Tigers participated, I don't feel constrained to mystify about it.

We went out one day on C. P. X. It was quite a lot of fun and excitement getting ready. With a good deal of squealing, camping and horseplay in general we gumshoers from G-2 clambered into the scout car allotted us at the motor pool.

"How about lunch—how about lunch, some one cried. There was much animated discussion on this topic but we learned that lunch was to be distributed to us in the field. However, thank Heaven, I managed to expropriate a big gallon thermos jug full of hot coffee and some paper cups and had my own little private store of candy bar stucked into my musette bag.

Presently we all composed ourselves and our car drove to headquarters on the hill where we alighted and commenced bringing the tools of our trade out to our vehicle. Portable desks, map cases and other impediments were put aboard and all was made ready.

Then the master sergeant began to make appointments. One man was made car commander, another was appointed to keep the log of the trip, a third was to man the machine gun. By the time he got to me there were no other posts to be filled. I felt quite crestfallen at being relegated to the position of ballast and I insisted that they think up something for me to be.

AIRPLANE SPOTTER

"You can be aeroplane spotter," they told me and, sinceit won't be too great a demand on your attention, you can tell us the story of the spinster and the wild ostriches and any more such which happen to mind."

After my vocal bandinage with friends in other vehicles, humorous gestures, general pantomime and clowning the concourse moved on toward our objective. It was a sharp overcast, but everyone was in good enough spirits and we bowled over hill and dale in a giddy fashion. Around midday we turned off the road to a predetermined bivouac wherein our conveyances had to be grouped. The ground sloped down from the road and levelled off a few hundred feet from the highway. The area was wooded with the inevitable pine trees and an inconsiderable brook trickled through it.

One of my colleagues in G-2 seated near me in the scout car was a man of high power verbosity. That clapper of his performed about 345 r. p. m. and he knew all there was to know on every conceivable topic. He could as easily correct Henry Ford about motor transport as he could inform Hank Gowdy on baseball, he'd have no compunction about correcting the Surgeon General on public health and he could give Mrs. Dionne points on obstetrics. Unquestionably when he achieves his heavenly reward he will argue with the Lord on theology.

In his then present millieu of private G. I. his specialty was issuing unasked for critiques to everyone within hearing of Army methods thus on our C. P. X. General Newgarden and his staff were vicariously subjected to a running fire of scarifying criticism which, I am sure, they had the benefit of it at first hand, would have revolutionized armored force tactics.

Naturally I was for everything he was against and out of sheer contrariness would vehemently dispute anything he said. Therefore when he began an exposition peppered with violent and profane adjectives and advocating the folly of driving our vehicle onto this terrain I arbitrarily took the opposite tack and declared I had never seen such an ideal spot for a bivouac of an armored force.

BET WE'D BOG

Thereupon he blusteringly bet me a dollar to my fifty cents that we'd bog down. I coolly took him and hardly were the words out of my mouth when the scout car in front of us stuck and within seconds our own bogged down. All our efforts to extract the vehicle under its own power only resulted in its sinking deeper in the mire.

My antagonist, I will say to his credit, kindly refrained from pointing my discomfiture as I forked up the four bits without comment.

After considerable fussing around had failed to unstick the vehicles it was decided to lunch. Alas—we learned that the food situation had been duly SNAFU'd and nothing had been provided for us. The officer responsible for this unhappy contingency handsomely apologized for his error but our major effected a more practical alleviation of the situation by insisting that we share the sandwiches which, with Napoleonic foresight, he had brought along for himself.

I should point out at this juncture that the business on which we were engaged was going on swimmingly. Radios buzzed, G. I.'s made marks on overlays in accord with the purpose of the expedition. However, many of the Tigers really had nothing much to do after camouflaging cars and digging foxholes so naturally a certain amount of social intercourse took place.

They had begun to attempt the salvaging of the stuck scout cars. Ours was strategically situated to witness the operations on the rest. We had plenty of hot coffee in our thermos jug which no other vehicle had so I invited some of my friends from the other staff offices over for a kaffee klatch and floor show.

MORE THE MERRIER

First they brought up a half track and attached a towing rope from it to one of the bogged down scout cars. The engine of the half track was started and the tow rope tautened then with much roaring and churning the half track dug a couple of fox holes for itself and its rear end settled about a foot into the earth.

Taken aback but by no means baffled a mess truck (2 1-2 ton) was brought to the scene and fastened by a tow line to the half track. In no time at all the lumbering vehicle found itself in the same enforced immobility as its sister cars.

A tough situation on hand and no U. S. Marines in sight but Tiger enterprise had not yet been exhausted. A medium tank thereupon galumphed into position and all spirits rose. With supreme confidence it was hitched to one of the helpless vehicles and started up only to burrow even deeper than the others roaring and rattling in futile indignation.

Heads were scratched and a myriad suggestions flew about all to no purpose and presently there appeared on the scene a vast motorized derrick which looked capable of righting the "Normandie." The crane was attached to the mired tank and the power turned on. The only result was that the wheels of the crane commenced to settle into Mother Earth but Miss Tank budged not one inch.

Here indeed was a pretty kettle of fish but it profited us nothing to hang around all day and miss supper. Finally a group of us attached a tow rope to our scout car, removed the accumulated earth from it front of the rear wheels, laid sacking down to help traction and corralled about twenty able Tigers. The engine was started gently, ten Tigers pulled on the tow line, ten more pushed from the rear and sides and in a few minutes we were clear and proceeding cautiously to terra firma.

The same procedure was resorted to by the other vehicles and we all got away except the poor M-3 which we heard along about 10 that night being ingloriously dragged back to the motor pool by the wrecking crane. The poor thing had its treads yanked off in the process of extrication.

As I've observed before, a Tiger's bed of roses has its occasional thorns.

An Army Wife Shops In Columbus

By Phyllis

Considering the scores of Columbus and Fort Benning women present during the recent OPA Rally at the Bradley Theatre, cooperation between shoppers and merchants regarding ceiling prices seems certain. Such co-operation is what helps make Columbus a pleasant shopping center for us all.

On your great occasions, look serene and lovely in the KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, Inc., manner, wearing a new Fall frock, slim and disciplined in cut, but in detail, delectable! Like the charming one of rich, black crepe, highlighted by a sparkling and unusual clip at the V-neckline. Other figure-praising dresses catch the eye with their deep-toned Fall shades. We all know that Kayser-Lilienthal's has been the boon of Columbus fashion-wise women for the past twenty years. We are well aware, too, that the styles in this extremely popular shop have dateless good taste. Each creation has its own casual distinction. The knowledge that each dress, suit or coat displayed here, is a masterpiece of design, quality and workmanship, is of satisfaction to chic women. This season the newest Fall costumes throughout this store more than live up to this enviable reputation for fashionable values.

THE MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY has more than 18,000 shoes for those of you who still have not used your No. 18 shoe coupon. Not just run-of-the-mill shoes ,but footwear designed to give you the ease most in comfort and style. And they'll wear for a number of seasons to come. Florsheim, Madamoiselle, I. Miller, College-Bred, Rice O'Neil and Vitality brands are some of the better known labels you'll notice in many of the shoes. The comfort, the flattery of shoes that fit like part of your foot, are just two of the joys you'll know when wearing any of the shoes in this gigantic display. As always, with the Miller-Taylor Company, quality is infinitely important. For full value, I suggest using your precious shoe ration coupon in this reputable store to take advantage of their superior materials, perfect and practical designs and fittings for comfort.

The Toyland section of BENTLEY'S SPORT SHOP is usually filled with wide-eyed youngsters having the time of their lives gazing at the many games, dolls, mechanical toys and books designed to intrigue them no matter what their ages. A miniature 75 mm gun of wood might certainly please any military-minded youngster. For the older youngster a 5' by 4' jig-saw puzzle map of the world results in both knowledge and pleasure figuring out how the pieces fit together. Tiny cribs for would-be mothers are attractive in price and design. Dolls of all sizes and types to put in these same cribs, are well made and dressed prettily. To keep up with the "Let's play house" idea are dainty little dinner and tea sets fashioned of softly shaded plastics. Knives, forks and spoons of the same plastic are included in these sets. Whatever the age of the youngsters they'll each find many articles they'd want to take home with them from this well-filled Toyland in Bentley's.

When you choose a lovely ring at the J. A. KIRVEN COMPANY, you can be assured of the inherent value of its diamonds and the lasting beauty of its design. Those of you who expect to become engaged or married some day soon, might deem it wise to do a bit of advance shopping and see these wedding and engagement rings of unusual designs. Many of the exquisitely daintly engagement rings have one large, brilliantly-cut diamond banded on either side by two smaller stones. Other styles have just the solitary, fiery stone, hand-set in a beautifully designed setting. The wedding bands, many set with diamonds, are made in a number of intriguing styles to suit the most discriminating tastes. Set in platinum or silver, the rings displayed on the street floor of Kirven's, are indeed masterpieces of jeweler's art.

The ultimate in sweaters, faultlessly classic, 100 per cent virgin wool, are displayed in all the exciting, new colors at KIRALFY'S. A few English-Knit cashmeres in soft tones are still available. Unusual novelty-knits in long or short-sleeved styles are eye-catchers for the school-going young lady. Fitted cardigan, boxy cardigan, long-sleeve, fitted and long-sleeve, boxy are the different styles from which to select. Many of these lovely sweaters feature the hand-sewn and hand-fashioned sleeve which denotes sweaters of the best possible make. Sweaters with this feature tend to fit the arm better. Practical and pretty are the Confetti sweaters of neutral background sprinkled liberally with multi-colored gnubs of yarn. All shades of the rainbow plus black, navy-blue, dark brown, dark green and maroon are included in this notable selection of fall sweaters.

Even though Columbus is south of the Mason and Dixon Line, the weather is still cold enough in winter to make many of us wish for a truly warm fur coat to keep out the frosty winds. Enchantingly soft, nicely lined, are the fur coats displayed on the mezzanine of MONTGOMERY WARD, Inc. Sable-dyed coney, China mink-dyed coney, sable-dyed seal, sable-dyed muskrat, beaver and oppossum fur coats are a few of the type furs in this moderately-priced display. Many of these practical coats feature the smart and luxurious turned-back cuffs. Wrapping any one of these creations in fur about your day or evening dress will keep you comfortably warm and fashionably smart. Any fur coat is an investment in lasting beauty, but these at Ward's are especially noteworthy values.

ENTERTAINING G. I.'S in the 538th Armored Infantry battalion are Private Willie E. Swift (left) and Private Herman A. Pittman, doing the honors with the guitar. The soldiers performed an act with a minstrel show which was staged by Headquarters company, the "Hell Cats" of the battalion. The minstrel show was staged again last night at the Ninth Street USO club in Columbus. (U. S. Army Signal Corps photo.)

Spiriters Plan Parade Friday

176th To Honor Columbus Clubs For Day Room Aid

Representatives of three civic clubs of Columbus will be honor guests of the 176th Infantry Regiment Friday afternoon to review the regimental parade and have dinner with companies of the regiment.

The regiment is complimenting these people out of gratitude for the aid received in day room furnishings.

The Charter Garden Club contributed $300 which was used in the day room of Company H. Their representative will be the guest of the company, and escorted by men and officers of that company.

The United Garden Club gave $300, which was used in the day room of regimental headquarters company and their representative will be the guest of that company.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce gave $300 which was used jointly by Company I and the Service company, and these companies will entertain the representative.

The day room furnishings are urgently needed in order for soldiers to have a place for recreation and relaxation at odd hours while in the companies, and also for entertaining families and friends and holding informal company entertainments.

The American Red Cross acted as liaison between the clubs and the Special Service Officer of the Regiment. The Camp and Hospital Service has a special fund set up to assist patriotic people who want to help army units with their problems of recreation and relaxation.

JOIN REGIMENT

Captains Frank E. Shannon and Charles B. Taylor reported to 6th Training Regiment last week. Both officers recently graduated with Advanced Class No. 26 of the Infantry School. Captain Taylor has been appointed adjutant 3rd Bn. Captain Shannon, who formerly commanded Co. "G," Academic Regiment and is a well known Fort Benning athlete, will command the 10th Company.

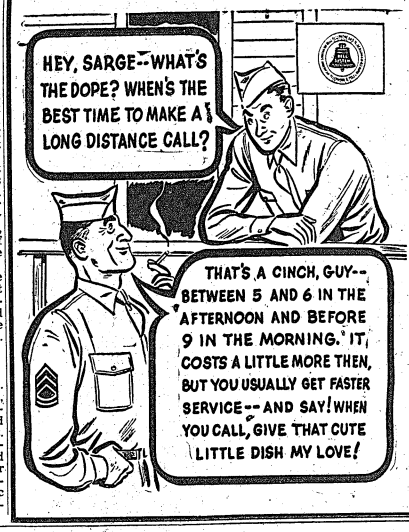
War Declared On Mustaches In 1st Regiment



Boys will be boys—and sometimes men will be boys too. That fact was brought out last week when several members of the 10th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment decided they didn't like mustaches.

During the noon-day lull last Friday, Lt. George A. Rigely was first to fall victim to the plotters. With the aid of G.I. soap lather and a semi-sharp razor, they trimmed his feathers. However, they eliminated only one side of his lip trim, leaving him the chore of making the sides balance.

His classmates agreed the change was for the better—but meanwhile, other mustache wearers in the 10th Company, and there are a number of them, are going around with a hunted look.

JERNIGAN PROMOTED

Second Lieutenant John T. Jernigan of the Weapons Section, Academic Department of The Infantry School, has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. Lt. Jernigan attended Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning and was commissioned on December 31, 1942, and assigned to The Infantry School for duty with basic machine gun group of the weapons section.

1st STR Officers Wash Own Clothes In Laundry Crisis

Did you ever see a pair of shorts walking? Then drive by the Second Battalion area of the 1st Student Training Regiment most any Sunday and you may do just that.

The current laundry crisis has taught many of the student officers that they can wash their own clothes—and Sunday is the day most of them choose to do it.

With no clothes lines, they have to spread their newly washed clothes out on the ground to dry. Of course, when the winds blow, the laundry gets mixed up a bit but these emergency washermen cheerfully cooperate, even to bringing in the clothes of a neighbor when rain starts falling—just another proof that officers can learn to handle any situation. But all concerned are hopeful that news of their latest accomplishment won't get to their wives—it might give them ideas.

TIS Graduate Is Kilmer CO

Word has recently been received that Colonel Cecil L. Rutledge was appointed commanding officer of Camp Kilmer, N. J. He was the former executive officer and assumed command when Colonel C. W. Baird, former commanding officer was retired.

Colonel Rutledge is a graduate of the Company Officers' Course, The Infantry School at Fort Benning and has attended such other army schools as General Staff and Command School, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and The Bayonet School, Fort Sill, Okla. He is a native of the "short grass country on the western edge of Kansas" and will be 49 years old in September. In July 1915 he joined the Second Kansas National Guard and two years later received a provisional appointment as a second lieutenant in the Regular Army.

Colonel Rutledge has served in and out of the United States and has traveled through China and Japan. From 1929 to 1935, he served as assistant professor of military tactics and sciences at Wichita University, Kansas. He is married and has one son, Cecil L. Jr., who is now a cadet at the West Point Military Academy.

CAPT. TWITCHELL

1st Lt. John S. Twitchell has been promoted to the rank of captain, according to an announcement by Colonel Sevier R. Tupper, commanding officer of the ASTP Basic Training Center of the Infantry School.

1st STR Company Draws Members From Arctic Circle To The Equator

Almost 100 Members Are Grads Of United States Military Academy

It's not new to see officers from the farthest corners of the earth gathered at Fort Benning for instruction in The Infantry School; but certainly the 11th Company, 1st STR, can claim distinction for the experiences of some of its members prior to their arrival for school.

From the Arctic Circle to the equator, the company drew its members; most of them from posts inside the United States, nearly a hundred newly graduated from the United States Military Academy, and 16 from the Carribean and Alaskan Defense Commands.

Some of the stories these last 16 tell are almost unbelievable, even when they are fully substantiated.

Members of the Alaskan group tell authentic stories about bear cubs, babies of the family, weighing 600 pounds. These temporary Alaskans tell of dust-storms as bad as any in the United States' "dust bowl"; of wild game so numerous that herds sometimes reach to the horizon.

One of the real oddities is a "blackout" in the daytime, just the reverse of the usual thing. Up in the far north, when the days are short, blackouts for protection against the enemy are naturally necessary during the daytime. On some posts, officers must use flashlights to go to breakfast and to supper through the darkness, while at other posts ropes are stretched from barracks to mess halls to guide chow-hunters through blizzards.

ALASKAN CONTRAST

Alaska offers a great contrast from treeless, wind-swept plains where it is warm enough in the summertime to make shorts comfortable, to the frigid snow-covered expanses for which that territory is better known.

From the wearing of shorts in Alaska, it's a long jump to wearing field jackets and sleeping under two wool blankets at the equator. One of the officers stationed in the Carribean says, however, that it gets that cold day and night at one post where he was stationed for a time.

Another of the officers from the equatorial region tells of flying over a mammoth waterfall near the equator, a falls so huge that the roaring of the cascading water could be heard even above the deep rumble of the four motors of the bomber in which he was flying.

There are many other stories, too, of patrols in the jungle living, not on GI rations K or D, but on fruits and fruit juices "au natural" and on bread made from the roots of trees. There's the story of a new volcano that popped open almost on top of one U. S. base in the Carribean area, of turtles large enough to carry a man, and of hundreds of wild turkeys as desirable for the table as any.

The stories there, but perhaps it would be just as well to stop the stories there, before they reach the completely incredulous stage.

Former Infantry School Instructor Wounded In Pacific

Col. Harry I. Cresswell, former executive officer of the weapons section of the Infnatry school has been wounded in action in the South Pacific and evacuated from that theater of operations according to word received at the Infantry school this week. He was assigned to the "B" school section while here.

Col. Cresswell left the school in May for the South Pacific after serving here since November, 1942. He had been the U. S. Military attache in Tokyo and was among those brought home aboard the S. S. Griholm in the exchange of diplomats in August, 1942. Following his return to this country, he served briefly in Washington and in Camp Roberts, Calif., before coming to Fort Benning.

Wire-Laying Pup, 300th Infantry Mascot, Is Dead

Skippy, the wire-laying dog of the 300th Infantry is dead.

Given to Headquarters Company by Col. Richard G. McKee, former commander of this Infantry School regiment, the full bred mastiff was a fully qualified member of the wire section.

In fact, the canine lineman was so proficient at laying wire that she was recently promoted from Pfc to Technician fifth grade, by Captain Thomas Hammond, commander of headquarters company.

Skippy came to the communications platoon a raw recruit, but after an intensive basic training period, showed her amazing aptitude for getting the wire through.

Despite expressions of doubt, Skippy was taught to drag a wire attached to her collar through all sorts of places inaccessible to a human. She could lay the wire as fast as a jeep and her uncanny sense of direction made her services almost invaluable.

Efforts are already being made to obtain a replacement.

65 Reception Center Soldiers Receive Medals

In making these presentations, Colonel James stressed that the Good Conduct Medal has been established to honor enlisted men who have demonstrated fidelity through faithful and exact performance of duty, efficiency through capacity to produce desired results, and whose behavior has been such as to deserve commendation.

The presentation was made before a mass formation of the new soldiers in the Special Training Regiment, recently established at the center, as an inspiration to these new men in the service and as a special tribute to the men winning these awards.

The enlisted personnel receiving these awards were from various companies and battalions at the center who met the requirements listed above and the physical requirement of at least one year's service since Pearl Harbor.

Cpl. Aaron Austin and Cpl. Julius D. Jackson and Sgt. James Lowe, from Company B, with the following men from Sanitary Company: Sgts. James A. Branch and James R. Hill; Staff Sgt. Willie M. Jackson; Cpls. Hubert Fogan and William N. Mason; Pfcs. Oliver R. Brown, James Davis, Anderson M. Ervin and Louis Wright.

Members of the Reception Center Band came in for their share also. They are: T-Sgt. Allon A. Davenport; Staff Sgt. Horace O. Jackson; T-4th Grade Ben James, Thomas W. Flowers, Lawrence C. Izzard, Walker P. Jackson and William H. Stover; T-5th Grade Archie Clark, Theodore J. Lawson and Pfc. Will M. Douglas and Charles E. Gilbert.

Announcement has recently been made of the promotion of Second Lieutenant William Jennings Finch to the rank of first lieutenant. On May 18, 1942, Lt. Finch enlisted in the army and was sent to Camp Wolters, Texas. He reported to Fort Benning, Ga., as a student in Officer Candidate School on September 22, 1942 and was commissioned and assigned to the 300th Infantry on December 21, 1942. He was transferred to his present duty as an instructor to the Weapons Section of The Infantry School on April 19, 1943.

Captain Huxford Assumes Command Of 1st STR Unit

Captain William E. Huxford, former executive officer of the 21st company, 4th battalion, 1st Student Training Regiment, has been assigned to the 18th Company of the regiment as commanding officer of the advanced class which began last week. Captain Huxford had been a member of the 21st company for over a year prior to this change, having reported to the company in June of 1942.

Captain James G. Govatos, commanding officer of the 21st company, has been appointed to attend the advanced class in the 18th Company. He will resume command of the 21st company upon completion of the course. Capt. Govatos was assigned to the 21st company in February 1941.

Colonel Burton Speaks On USO 'Army Hour'

Colonel Vincent S. Burton, commanding officer of the 4th Training Regiment, was the guest speaker on the "Army Hour" Army & Navy YMCA USO Club Radio program broadcast over Station WRBL on Sunday, August 8, at 5 p. m.

The program featured the 4th Training Regiment Glee Club directed by Mr. Arthur Hall in several groups of songs which included the celebrated "Stout Hearted Men" by Romberg and a spiritual, "Glory To The New Born King," by Work.

The recently organized ASTP Orchestra under the direction of Corp. Murray Austrian made its radio debut by playing a number of popular airs. The orchestra numbers were supplemented by feature vocalists, Corp. Alta Riffle of the WACs and Sgt. Louis Beninate of the Hq. & Hq. Company, ASTP.

PARTY SLATED

Colonel Kenneth S. Whittemore, commanding officer of the 5th Training Regiment ASTP, announced today that the officers of the regiment and their ladies will hold their first regimental party Saturday, August 14, at 8 p.m. at the Student Training Brigade Rest Camp. Corp. Murray Austrian and his ASTP Orchestra will furnish the music and a buffet luncheon will be served.

LT. FISH PROMOTED

Second Lieutenant Lellie Warren Fish of the Academic Department, The Infantry School, has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. Lt. Fish attended Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, Ga., and was commissioned on December 10, 1942 at which time he was assigned to the 300th Infantry as Supply Officer. He was transferred to The Infantry School on April 19, 1942 and assigned to duty with the M-1 Rifle Group, Weapons Section, as insructor. Prior to being commissioned, Lt. Fish spent five years with the Infantry in the Panama Canal Zone.

The surface of the sun that is visible on earth consists of clouds of incandescent metallic vapor.

Gator Officer Lieut. Colonel

Another step in the climb up the ladder of military sucess was attained by Major Louis C. Wadsworth, second battalion commanded, who was recently promoted to lieutenant colonel, according to an announcement from Col. John D. Hill, commanding officer of the 124th Infantry.

Col. Wadsworth embarked upon his military career as a 16-year-old private in 1925 in the Florida National Guard. Upon finishing high school, the colonel was employed as a flagman, conductor and freight agent on a railroad before entering Davidson College. He studied a military course and received a reserve commission as second lieutenant in May, 1929.

He resigned this commission and rose through the enlisted ranks, in 1936 he received his commission as a second lieutenant in the National Guard.

The colonel, long interested in newspaper work in civilian life, where he was editor and business manager of the Suwanee Democrat, carried his experience into the army by conducting a newspaper school within the 124th Infantry regiment to gather a pool of newshounds to furnish news for the regimental newspaper, The Alligator.

The colonel was president of the Live Oak Rotary Club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce in 1940. During 1942 he was promoted twice, first to captain when he assumed command of Co. "F," and then to major upon being assigned to the command of the Second Battalion.

With Mrs. Wadsworth and their 15-month-old child, Sandra Gayle, the colonel resides in Columbus. Sandra, incidentally, was the first officer's baby born in Fort Benning after the 'Gators arrived.

A statement from the colonel regarding the status of the 124th Infantry went as follows: "The fame attained by the 'Gators has been due largely to the pride and record of the enlisted men." Since taking command of the crack Second Battalion, it has been the policy of the colonel to stress and bear down on unit training and rifle marksmanship to keep the component companies of the battalion "on the ball."

3rd STR Inherits Second Regiment's Ice Cream Plant

More ice cream for dessert in the mess halls of the Third Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, is promised in the announcement by Capt. William Bessinger, mess officer, of the acquisition by this regiment of the ice cream manufacturing apparatus formerly operated by the Second Student Training Regiment.

The Second Regiment, it was revealed, used the plant to supplement the ice cream rations of only the candidates but in this regiment the extra ice cream will be divided among all the companies.

At the present time each company receives two ice cream rations a week, the dessert usually being served at the noon meals of Wednesday and Sunday. Captain Bessinger said Wednesday that he believed once the plant goes into full production that two additional ice cream issues can be made to each company a week.

The equipment taken over is being set up in the kitchen of Company D of the Service Battalion. It consists of one 200-gallon freezer and a 20-gallon churn, the latter capable of turning out two batches an hour.

Ice cream produced by the unit is packaged in half-pint containers. Two large storage boxes complete the unit.

HARTMAN ADVANCED

Second Lieut. William Cornell Hartman of the Rifle and Weapons Section of The Infantry School has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. Lt. Hartman was inducted into the army on April 15, 1942. On October 19, 1942, he reported for Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, was commissioned on December 22, 1942, and assigned to his present duty.

Crusading Journalist Is 1st STR Student

His Newspaper Gets National Award For Courage In Journalism

One of the students in the 2d Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, who hasn't been letting any grass grow under his feet is Captain John E. Donahey.

Donahey was graduated from the University of Iowa Law School in June 1940. While there he was an honor student and one of four chosen to argue before the Supreme Court of Iowa in senior law club arguments. While in liberal arts he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and Order of Artus, honorary economics fraternity.

Following his graduation John decided to make the most of it in a small town in central Iowa and hung out his shingle. He practiced almost a year to the day before being called into the service. He specialized in trial practice, winning nine cases in his last term of court. He has continued this work in the army by serving as trial judge advocate at Fort Knox, Kentucky and defense counsel at Camp Chaffie, Ark.

His greatest achievement was in the field of journalism. He and a friend, who was an editor, began investigating political conditions in their county. They found one of the county offices had indeed been badly administered. Articles published about it led to a libel suit which came up for trial three times, but Donahey won all three times. The case led to the ouster of the official concerned and resignation of three others. As a result the newspaper he represented received the National Award for courage in journalism.

He entered the service at San Antonio, Tex., as a first lieutenant, and was promoted to captain in September 1942 while at Fort Knox, Ky.

Colonel Heintges Leads Column Against Palermo

One of the U. S. Army columns which moved in to the capture of Palermo, capital of Sicily, was led by Lt. Col. John Arnold Heintges, former assistant director of training at The Infantry School.

Col. Heintges left this station last March after serving here since March, 1942. He had previously attended an advanced officer class in 1939-40 and officers' communication school in 1940.

His part in the capture of Palermo was disclosed by a story in Time magazine which related the adventure of a couple of American doughboys who gained permission to ride into Palermo, ahead of their column. Believing themselves to be the first Americans in the city, the doughboys were amazed at the willingness of the Italians and Germans to surrender. Then they discovered that Col. Heintges' command had already occupied the city.

Hobby Guild Sponsors Contest For Servicemen

For the purpose of stimulating hobbies among men of the armed forces, The Hobby Guild of America, with headquarters at 34 West 33rd Street in New York City, is launching a nationwide hobby contest for men and women in the Army, Navy, Coast Guard, Marines and Maritime Service. All service men and women, enlisted as well as officer personnel, are eligible.

A total of twenty-five prizes will be awarded to those service men hobbyists whose entries are judged most meritorious. The prizes include: 1st prize: $50.00 War Bond; 2nd prize: $25.00 War Bond; 3rd prize: $10 cash award; 4th, 5th and 6th prizes: Collection of Army and Navy insignia; 7th to 25th prizes: certificates of merit.

All entries should be mailed to The Hobby Guild of America, 34 W. 33rd St. N.Y.C. and postmarked no later than August 15, 1943.

The guild announces that it is particularly anxious to receive humorous as well as strictly creative hobbies, unusual hobbies as well as the prosaic type. Collections of all kinds, examples of whittling, carving, cartoons, sculpture drawing and photography as well as hobbies with a strictly military flavor are desired.

The entire collection of servicemen's hobbies will be placed on exhibition next fall at expositions, hobby shows, U.S.O. Service Clubs, schools and municipal auditoriums. The entries will then be returned.

Pvt. Kopacki Named Typical 176th Soldier

Pvt. Steve Kopacki, G Company, of the 176th Infantry, won the honor of being selected the Typical 176er. This election was open to all men of the regiment from the primary vote to the final vote. Kopacki, a private, polled most of the private's votes to win over S-Sgt. Joseph E. Judkins, 1st Sgt. John Lockamy, S-Sgt. Tony DeBellis, and Pfc. John R. Shea. Kopacki beat out Judkins by the narrow margin of 62 votes.

Pvt. Kopacki, a powerful soldier, is six feet tall and weighs 190 pounds. He was born in Baltimore, Md., in 1920. Before enlisting in the army, March 3, 1942, he was employed in the shipyards of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., Baltimore, Md. Kopacki prior to this lived in Poland from 1929 to 1938.

A life size portrait of the winner will be painted by Cpl. Ken Jackson. The portrait will be in complete battle dress and placed on display in the regiment.

Battle-Wise Vets Lecture Students Of 1st Regiment

The First Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School lists among its students, scores of officers who have seen service in various theaters of war.

Believing that their experiences will be of benefit to those officers who have yet to see battle, Col. John S. Roosma, regimental commander, has arranged a series of Monday morning lectures by these returning veterans.

Lt. Col. John L. Althouse who saw service with the British forces in Africa, spoke at the first lecture. A week later, Major William J. Lame, a veteran of Guadalcanal spoke. Lectures last 45 minutes and attendance is optional. To-date, however, most of the officers of the regiment who could do so, have attended.

Government Trains Men For Army of Occupation

Vacancies Exist For Ranks Ranging Through Majority

The War Department has spurred its drive to assign qualified commissioned officers of the Army to training centers which would school them for roles in administering the affairs of occupied territories.

In a War Department memorandum, received at Fort Benning, qualifications are listed for commissioned personnel who are desired to serve in the military governments which are established in the wake of the advancing allied armies as they capture Axis territories.

In training under the office of the Provost Marshal General, vacancies exist for officers ranking from second lieutenant through major. This training is aside from that given at the School of Military Government, Charlottesville, Va., for a limited number of officers, in grades from captain to colonel.

A directive, received this week at Post Headquarters, stated that individual applications by officers may be submitted through military channels to the Provost Marshal General by officers possessing the qualifications.

Officers who possess the required civilian training, must in addition meet general qualifications. Each must be between the ages of 25 and 50 years. Knowledge of a foreign language is desired but may be waived in exceptional cases.

In an exhaustive listing of qualifying administrative and professional experience, the War Department breaks down requirements into several broad categories: administration, public works and utilities, public saftey, fiscal, economics, public health, public welfare, education, public relations, communications, and legal.

Post Personnel Reduced

10 Per Cent Cut Effective On August 31

Over-Head Military, Civilian Workers Affected By Change

Increased efficiency and streamlining of installation organizations will enable Fort Benning to effect an approximate 10 per cent reduction in its over-head military and civilian personnel by Aug. 31, post authorities announced Wednesday.

In keeping with the policy of the Army Service Forces throughout the country to conserve manpower, Fort Benning will reduce its service forces to the minimum, even discontinuing some activities, it was announced.

Capt. R. A. Parkins, chief of the civilian personnel branch, announced that about 250 civilians will be released by Aug. 31, thus freeing many persons for other jobs. Specifications of office procedures and greater efficiency on the part of individual workers as they have learned their jobs have contributed much to making a reduction in the size of the force possible, Captain Parkins said.

240 SOLDIERS GO

Approximately 240 soldiers will also be freed for assignments to other posts by the end of the month, Capt. M. L. Holland, personnel adjutant at the post, has announced.

Because of these reductions in staff, some activities will have to be curtailed, according to Lt. Col. J. D. Rosenberger, Jr., post adjutant and director of personnel, and in some instances field forces will have to supply men if service clubs, theaters and other such facilities are to be maintained.

Col. H. A. Myers, director of personnel for the Fourth Service Command headquarters in Atlanta, spent the past weekend at Fort Benning, discussing problems arising from the cuts in personnel.

Said Colonel Myers: "Exact figures of the total reductions for the seven states covered by the Fourth Service Command are not available but commanders in the field are carrying out the Army Services policy of maximum utilization of both military and civilian personnel in performing the myriad Army Service jobs vital to the military establishment.

"Reductions will number several thousands workers by the end of the month. The objective is to bring the military employment of personnel to the absolute minimum consistent with the efficient functioning of all necessary offices and plants.

Pin-Up Girl Of The Week

HEADQUARTERS HONEY—Now, fellows, if you can just drag your eyes down here a moment, we'll be glad to give you more particulars on Liz Morgan, the luscious beauty you've been gazing at for hours. . . . Elizabeth, as she's more properly known, is a real, honest-to-goodness Georgia Peach. . . . Yeh, man, she was born and raised right here in Columbus, so don't ever let us hear you lads from up north complaining that you've been at Benning so many months and have never seen a femme peach, Georgia variety. . . . Because yonder she is, posed or poised as the case may be, for your approval. . . . John Robert Powers must have passed up Columbus and Benning in his search for long-stemmed American Beauties because Liz Morgan certainly could qualify. . . . And this lovely, believe it or not, has been right in our midst now for over a year and a half as a civilian employee at post headquarters. . . . She's now employed in the adjutant's office as secretary to Capt. Harry L. Shoemaker, Jr., and handles all details on the issuance of the post's daily bulletin. . . . But Liz takes a little time off for her favorite sports of badminton and swimming, and it was during one of the latter moments that our alert photog caught her gazing wistfully at the warm Georgia sun and billowy clouds. . . . This photog, incidentally, is practically the first to discover her photogenic beauty, because she swears she's never been in a beauty contest of any kind. . . . La Morgan was graduated from Columbus High School and also attended Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville as well as Columbia University's Medical Center back in the days when she thought she wanted to be a nurse. . . . But a business career was mor epromising and she came home and to Benning, much to our elation. . . . And, best of all, there's still hope, fellows, because Liz is single and doesn't expect to change that status right now. . . . MOR-

To The 'Lucky Seventh'

The officers and men of Fort Benning welcome this opportunity to extend greeting to the Commanding General of the 7th Armored Division, Major General Silvester, and to the officers and men of his command.

The rumbling tanks of the "Lucky Seventh" Division are a welcome sight to us all.

We know that you are hardened by training at Camp Polk, La., and more recently by training on the desert on the West Coast, and we know also that the personnel of the Seventh Armored Division is keyed to fulfill any mission. We are proud to have this division stationed here.

The facilities of the Post—recreational, social, athletic—are open to the men of the Seventh. May their stay here be enjoyable and their training valuable.

WALTER S. FULTON,
Brig. Gen., U. S. A.
Commanding, Fort Benning.

MAJ. GEN. SILVESTER

BRIG. GENERAL THOMPSON

BRIG. GEN. MURPHY

Major General Silvester Commands 7th Armored

Combat Teams Led By Generals John Murphy And John Thompson

When the "Lucky 7th" Armored Division was activated "on the double" and months ahead of schedule last year one of the Armored command's top-notch generals was selected as division commander. Maj. Gen. Lindsay McDonald Silvester, former member of the Infantry Board at Fort Benning, was that man.

Back in Benning today, he commands the Seventh Armored Division in the Sand Hill area. As assistant commanders controlling the combat teams, there are Brig. Gen. John B. Murphy, (C. C. "A") and Brig. Gen. John B. Thompson (C. C. "B") both of whom have been here before, the former as company commander and the latter as instructor in the Infantry School. Both combat commanders are also West Point graduates.

ACTIVE ROLE

Long before he became division commander, however, Gen. Silvester had played an active role in the Army's development of armored weapons. In 1935 he began a tour of duty with the 66th Infantry, a light tank regiment. Two years later he was assigned to the Infantry Board here, and in 1939 he was made chief of the tank section of the Infantry School.

General Silvester was transferred to Fort Knox, Ky., in 1940 for active duty with the First Armored Force (as it was then called) since its beginning on July 19, 1941.

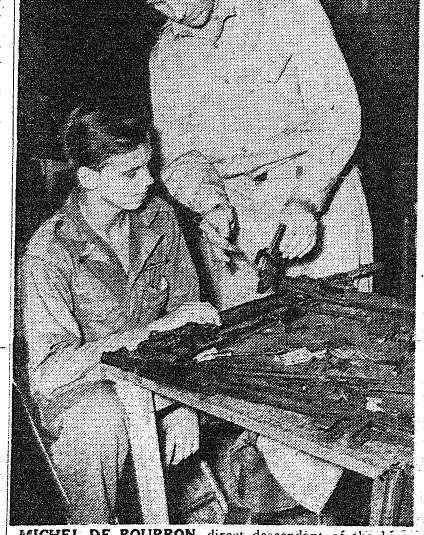
VIRGINIA BORN

He was born in Norfolk county, Va., and became a second lieutenant in the Infantry in 1911, immediately upon graduation from Maryland Agricultural College.

General Silvester has been in Hawaii, and participated in the Mexican expedition in 1916. During the first World War he served at the front with the 30th Infantry and the 7th Infantry, taking part in the Aisne, Marne, St. Mihel and Meuse-Argonne offensives. For extraordinary heroism in action in these battles, he received the Distinguished Service Cross and the Silver Star.

WELL-GROUNDED

Brig. Gen. John B. Murphy, leader of combat command "A", is also well grounded in Armored Command tactics, having served as G-1 at Armored Command Headquarters from August 1 of last year until April 15 of this year, when he was assigned to the "Lucky 7th" Armored Division.



One of the youngest generals in the Armored Command, he was born in Macedonia, Ia., in 1898 but made Texas his home several years late. Upon graduating from Amarillo, Texas, high school he spent a year at Texas A & M before entering West Point (U.S.M.A.).

SERVED WITH 83RD

There he earned his B. S. degree and also a commission in the Field Artillery. Stationed at Fort Benning 1926-30, he served as a company commander in the 83rd Field Artilley and later as a battalion adjutant in the outfit which was to make history on Guadalcanal.

Today in Benning, as a Brigadier General, he is still the keen student of military science he was back in school as a company commander. Enthusiastic in his work,

Private Kissell Up for Murder

Soldier Charged With Slaying of Comrade; Two Others Implicated

Pvt. Albert Kissell went before a general court martial at Fort Benning Wednesday charged with the murder of Pvt. Claude A. Alexander of Valparaiso, Ind.

Kissell, whose home is in Corning, N. Y., is accused of having murdered Alexander the night of January 9 by striking him with rocks, cutting and mutilating him and then, with two companions, throwing him into the Chattahoochee river from the Dillingham street bridge in Columbus.

Alexander's body was found down the river on the reservation Feb. 28.

Also held in connection with the murder are Pfc. Erschel Hunt, Betsy Lane, Ky., and Pvt. Raymond Fortney, of Otho, Iowa, both of whom face similar courts-martial following the trial of Kissell, according to Lieut. Col. William C. Coulbourn, Judge advocate.

Military Discipline In 12 Counties Now Directed By Veal

The conduct of all military personnel in 12 counties surrounding Fort Benning has been placed under the supervision of Major Willie D. Veal, Fort Benning provost marshal, Brig. General Walter S. Fulton, post commander, announced late Wednesday.

The announcement followed the receipt of a letter from Fourth Service Command Headquarters in Atlanta designating the counties. These include Chattahoochee, Russell, Muscogee, Meriwether, Troup, Upson, Harris, Talbot, Taylor, Marion, Stewart, and Webster.

All matters relating to the discipline of military personnel in these counties will be cleared through Major Veal's office, General Fulton stated.

Scion Of French Bourbon Kings Trains In 1st STR

Michel de Bourbon Is One Of Three Brothers In America

Michel de Bourbon, direct descendant of the kings who ruled France for nearly a thousand years, is toiling under the hot Georgia sun, training to help free his homeland. He's a member of the class of French officers and candidates in the 12th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School.

Born in Paris, France, young de Bourbon came to the United States in 1941. Arriving at Fort Benning a few weeks ago from his home in New York, he began the four-month candidate of intensive study and tough practical work. He's working harder than ever before, but finds the training intensely interesting.

Some of his French classmates may find language a barrier at times, but not Candidate de Bourbon. In addition to fluent English and French, he converses in German, Italian, and Danish. Upon graduation from The Infantry School, he hopes to serve as interpreter or liaison officer for the French forces.

Candidate de Bourbon has two brothers. One, a pilot in the Royal Norwegian Air Force, is stationed at Toronto, Canada. The other is attending school in Massachusetts.

Division Finishes Desert Training

Suntanned and hardened after several months in the depths of the West Coast desert training center, the Seventh Armored Division, under the command of Major General Lindsay McDonald Silvester, this week completed moving into its new home in the Sand Hill Area at Fort Benning.

The Division, which is known as the "Lucky Seventh", was activated and partly trained at Camp Polk, La. More recent maneuvers in the desert have schooled and hardened the troops in armored warfare.

In his return to Fort Benning, General Silvester "comes back home" in a sense for it was at this post that he attended the Advanced Officers' Course at The Infantry School in 1923. Instead of returning to the post alone, however, he brings with him a division of men, preparing to tackle the enemy.

Upon his graduation in 1924 from the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., General Silvester became an instructor in the 67th Infantry at Fort Benning in June, 1920.

In garrison now for the first time in months the "Lucky Seventh" has established a record among the Armored Division for continued accomplishment.

Assistant commanders of the Seventh Armored controlling the combat teams are Brig. Gen. John B. Murphy, of Combat "A", and Brig. Gen. John B. Thompson, Combat "B".

Members of General Silvester's Staff are Col. W. P. Shepard, Chief of Staff; Lieut. Col. Byron C. DeLaMater, Adjutant General; Capt. Fred O. Jackson, aide-de-camp; Major John V. Macwell, G-1; Lieut. Col. E. W. Murray, G-2; Lieut. Col. Jack H. Griffith, G-3; and Lieut. Col. Andrew J. Adams, G-4.

TRAINED BY 3rd

The Seventh Armored was partly trained by the former Third Armored Division. The Division followed 13 weeks of basic training at Camp Polk, was officially reported to Armored Force Headquarters at Fort Knox, Ky., and in Washington as having been activated. Setting a pace from which it has not slowed down, the "Lucky Seventh" is known far and wide as being one of the best trained armored divisions in the Armored Command.

Coming to Fort Benning, the Division occupies the Sand Hill Area, which formerly was the home and training grounds for General Patton's Second Armored Division and more recently for General Newgarden's Tenth Armored Division.

"From the very day of its activation", Gen. Silvester explained to the personnel of the Division "you have given every ounce of energy to the cause of making the Seventh Division such a well trained unit that it will be able to meet successfully any enemy against which it may operate".

It was a fast-moving business that took place in Louisiana last year—and every since. A new armored division was trained there in less than ever known in the history of the Armored Force—and that division was the Seventh Armored Division.

Using the Third Armored Division's equipment, tanks, trucks, weapons, kitchens and time, completion of the Seventh's first phase of training, "Marked the culmination of a training period which is unique in our service", Maj. Gen. Alvin C. Gillem, Jr., commanding the Second Armored Corps stated at the activation.

LIFE POLICIES IN FORCE HIT A NEW HIGH

Half-billion Dollars Expected August 31; 476 Million Already In

A late check of national service life insurance in force at Fort Benning as of July 31 shows a total of approximately $476,000,000, Lt. John W. Inzer, post insurance officer, announced this week.

The insurance officer stated that another report is due at the end of the current month at which time it is believed that the total will pass the half-billion dollar mark.

Insurance officers of the several units at Fort Benning are engaged in a concerted all-out drive to encourage military personnel to take out national service life insurance in the maximum amount of $10,000 allowed.

All personnel inducted into the armed forces may sign up for life insurance without a physical examination within 120 days after induction. Between April 12 and August 10 personnel, regardless of length of service, was permitted to take out insurance without the physical. Since that date the examination has been waived only in the case of those serving 120 days or less.

Reception Center Tackles Terrific Job Of Training Colored ASTP Soldiers

Tremendous Strides Made Since June To Care For 6,000 Men

"One, two, three, four; one, two, three, four; one, two, three, four; front to rear, cover down, head and eyes, off the ground; one, two, three, four; one, two, three, four; siix to the front, three to the rear, that's the way, we do it here; one, two, three, four"; soldiers from the Special Training Units, Fort Benning, sing as they go marching down the hot Georgia road, on the way to becoming some of Uncle Sam's best-trained colored soldiers in the Army today.

That is the rhythm and the cadence of the men in the training units at the Reception Center at Fort Benning.

Lt. Col. Ulric N. James, commanding officer of the Reception Center with the cooperation of Major W. Tippins, executive officer, and Captain Julius C. Newton, acting commanding officer of the First Training Battalion set about the organization of this first special training in June of this year. There were no buildings set aside for school rooms, no teacher to staff these units; just the simple statement from the Army Service Forces that the Reception Center at Benning would be assigned approximately 6,000 men to be trained under this program for not more than 13 weeks.

Soldiers assigned to this program were men who "were unable to read and write English at fourth grade level, who are unable to speak and understand simple English or who are classed in Grade V, to a state of proficiency which will enable them to proceed with regular basic training."

NOT DISCIPLINARY

At this point it is well to point out "that under no circumstances were these training units to be made the reservoir for incorrigibles and disciplinary cases. No enlisted men will be transferred to Special Training Units because of undesirable traits of character or previous disciplinary record," so it is plainly evidenced that these Special Training Units were primarily organized to gvie the soldier an opportunity to advance educationally especially those who had not availed themselves of educational opportunities or for economic reasons were unable to take advantage of these opportunities.

Of the 96 instructors in the First Training Regiment, all were voluntary and come from among the best educated men in the colored race. Men with A.B., masters, Ph.D, and various other degrees from the highest seats of learning in America are on this teaching staff.

Education alone is not the primary requisite for eligibility to this teaching staff. It requires men of infinite patience, kindness and understanding to get over to these men basic principles of education that ordinarily require four years, in 13 weeks or less.

Sgt. William L. Graham, Headquarters, First Battalion, Special Training Regiment, is educational adviser. A graduate of Paine College, Augusta, Ga., Sgt. Graham attended Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., where he received his master of arts degree, after receiving the bachelor of arts at Paine. He also has returned to Northwestern for graduate study. Twelve years in educational work in the State of Georgia, where he holds a life teachers' certificate, Sgt. Graham was principal of the Paine College Laboratory High School, working with boys at the Bethlehem Community Center in Augusta and register and teacher of English at Paine College.

Master Hypnotist Is With Third Regiment

Because he must have certain conditions before he can successfully work with his hypnotism, it is doubtful that Russell B. Holloway of the 18th company, Third Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School, ever will be able to exercise his hypnotic powers over the enemy after he becomes a combat platoon leader.

At the present time, Holloway employs his ability to dominate another person's mind merely to amuse and confound his barracks mates, selecting his subjects and then directing them through ridiculous moves of which they later have no memory.

Holloway, a youngster of 23, comes from Oklahoma City and was a law student before entering the Army. He acquired his mesmeric powers through association in collage with a youth who had made a study of the subject for several years and had read many rare books on the practice. Holloway shared a room with him for a year.

TEACHER A MASTER

The officer candidate insists his teacher was a master but if the demonstration he staged Sunday morning was on the level, and it certainly seemed to be, then Holloway, too, is a master. His barracks mates, moreover, swear by the authenticity of other demonstrations that Holloway has put on.

In Sunday's show, Holloway selected four men at random and endeavored first to put them to sleep. In so doing, he had to have absolute quiet in the barracks. After the preliminary test he decided J. D. Bray to be the most susceptible and cooperative of the subjects and from that point on concentrated his attention on that candidate.

After putting Bray to sleep, Holloway woke him up and then proceeded to put him through the paces of what he described as a post-hypnotic stage. Under this influence and acting on the previous directions of the "master mind," Bray got up, dressed and ran down to the mess hall and procured a lemon which he devoured with relish, insisting all the time the fruit was an orange and was "sweet as sugar."

IMMUNE TO PAIN

At certain signals from Holloway, Bray also exhibited immunity to pain, allowing himself to be struck and pinched without apparently being aware of the actions of his assailants.

Holloway uses no flourishes on his subjects. He looks at them steadily and talks in a low, soothing tone, coaxing them to relax and to concentrate on him. He repeats phrases over and over and as relaxation descends upon the subjects he employs a trick of making his voice seem to come from a great and hollow distance. The subjects are brought out of the hypnotic trance when he recites a phrase previously agreed upon between them and the practitioner.

Officers may wear any ribbons they earned while enlisted men.

Dozen WAC Officers Arrive

First To Get Duty Other Than Corps Administration Work

Twelve officers of the Women's Army Corps, arriving at Fort Benning late last week, are the first group of WAC officers to be assigned to the post for duty in jobs other than corps administration.

The officers, all second lieutenants, were given temporary assignments in the Station Complement.

Names of the officers and their temporary assignments are as follows: Second Lieut. Carolyn Pratt, of Detroit, Mich., assigned to duty with the WAC Detachment Station Complement; Second Lieut. Jessie Lee Gaines, Miami, Fla., Civilian Personnel Branch, Post Headquarters; Second Lieut. Edith S. Boehm, Vineland, N. J., Reception Center.

Also Second Lieut. Ruth F. Chelbas, Rutherford, N. J., assigned as assistant adjutant, Reception Center; Second Lieut. Loretta F. Wirth, Chicago, Ill., assistant to Army Exchange Officer; Second Lieut. Florence B. Hamsher, East Rochester, N. Y., Special Service Branch.

And Second Lieut. Cecilia A. Stanislewics, Milwaukee, Wis., Insurance Officer, Reception Center; Second Lieut. Kathleen V. Hawes, Washington, D. C., WAC Detachment, Station Complement; Second Lieut. Veronica E. Kelly, Kenilworth, N. J., Supply Division; Second Lieut. Frances L. Hartt, Rawlins, Wyoming, Public Relations Division, Second Lieut. Lois A. Price, Fauke, Ark., Special Service Branch; and Second Lieut. Dorothy B. Phillips, Rudyard, Mont., Supply Division.

The assignment of WAC officers to Fort Benning carries out the policy of the War Department in placing members of the Corps in positions where they may supplant general service officers for combat duty.

Already at Fort Benning many enlisted personnel in the WAC have taken over jobs formerly held by general service enlisted men who by now have been freed for full field duty.

Frenchmen Marvel At Machine Gun Crew's Precision

During the past week, the members of the French group who form two platoons of the 12th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, were strongly impressed by several of the demonstrations staged by the Infantry Schol for their instruction and that of other students of the class.

Most intriguing, however, were the demonstrations of machine gun drill by the team of non-coms used by The Infantry School for the purpose. Anything they do looks so very easy that the student groups of four don't yet see why they cannot duplicate the feat of going into action in eight seconds or out of action in six and one-half seconds. Well, with another 100 hours or so of machine gun training to go yet, there is still plenty of hope for these men of good will.

The machine gun demonstration men do an expert job. Their ease, precision, and speed of action puts them in the class of real champions, and they are as enjoyable to watch as crack tennis or ball players, and about as easy to imitate.

Primary School Session Ends

The school which has been in operation since February of this year was initiated at the request of Col. Richard G. McKee, then regimental commander and Chaplain Patrick J. Quinn, now with the 69th Division. It was felt at that time that the men in the regiment who had been denied the opportunity of attending school in earlier life should be given it now.

It was also hoped that the teaching of elementary subjects to these men would result in smoother operation of the various units in the regiment. The obvious difficulties that would arise from a lack of fundamental education on the part of some men would be avoided.

Organization of the course of studies was effected by Lt. Robert B. Russell, now special service officer of the regiment, who carried out the program until May. At that time the project was taken over successively by Lt. Ubaldo Alessandrini, now overseas, and Lt. William J. O'Connor who directed the school until it closed.

Of 272 men to start courses in reading and writing at the school, approximately 200 were able to complete their studies. Of the remaining number, some forty men were lost to the regiment because of over-age disabilities.

It is felt that the training given would approximate the completion of grade five of ordinary grammar school education.

Lawson Field Executive Made Lieut. Colonel

The promotion of Major William A. Capers, executive officer of Lawson Field, to the rank of lieutenant colonel has been announced at Lawson Field headquarters.

Col. Capers, a native of South Carolina, is a graduate of the Inman High School, Inman, S. C., and received his A. B. degree from the Citadel, Charleston.

He was commissioned a 2nd lieutenants June 1, 1930. Before being called to active duty with the Army Air Forces he spent almost six years as superintendent of a CCC camp. Here he directed the men in soil conservation activities, building waterways, tree planting, fence construction and other necessary work to improve the post.

He also spent some time as a surveyor doing instrument work, drafting, sketching and making field notes on highway survey projects. Prior to his present duties as executive officer of Lawson Field, Colonel Capers was commanding officer of the Base Squadron, Legal Officer and trial judge advocate of Lawson Field. He received the promotion to major on March 15, 1942.

Colonel Capers is married to the former Miss Juanita Bruton of Jackson Springs, N. C., and resides at 1024 Henry avenue, Columbus, Ga.

After 9 Years Sarge Furloughs In Phenix City

Sergeant Albert A. Gaydos of Headquarters Company, First Student Training Regiment of the Infantry School, decided, after nine years, that he'd take a furlough. So the Sarge up and packs and lights out—for Phenix City, Ala.

The sergeant has a whole clan of kinfolk in and around his home town of Bridgeport, Conn., but that was just the trouble. There were so many of them that he figured he couldn't get around to see all of them. And if he slighted any of them, there might be hard feeling. So he's back from his furlough spent across the Chattahoochee—and glad to be back, too.

Sergeant Gaydos takes pride in his 29 years of continuous service. After he first enlisted in Company L, 19th Infantry, back in February, 1914, the re-enlisting habit took hold and he's been in the Army ever since. During that time he specialized successively as a carpenter, supply clerk, saddler, and cook. Joining the 1st Student Training Regiment on January 1, 1941, the sergeant has been assigned since April of that year to Headquarters Company, commanded by Captain Curtis J. Ivey.

On July 29 the Judge Advocate General's office attained its 168th birthday. The Continental Congress created the office in 1775 and William Tudor, a Boston lawyer was the first to hold the office. The present incumbent is Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer appointed Dec. 1, 1941.

WAC And Soldier Supply Melody In H.C. Area

There's melody in Harmony Church area—and rightly so.

Two standout reasons for it are Corporal Alta Riffle of the 84th WAC Detachment and Corporal Murray Austrian, director of the ASTP dance band. The former is a vocalist who volunteers her services for the entertainment of the G. I.'s. The latter is the musical and entertainment director for the basic training center special service office.

While attending Boxley High School in Columbus, Ohio, Cpl. Riffle wrote for the school paper, played violin in the school symphony orchestra, participated in dramatic productions and sang in several stage musicals. The latter talent, however, is the one which she has given the most emphasis.

After her graduation from high school, she was discovered by Frankie Masters, bandleader, in his "Search for Talent" contest conducted by RKO. This led to appearances with the bands of Harry Martin and Jack Richards. She also sang in a Methodist church choir and broadcast over station WOSU each week. She also worked as a teletype operator and was thus engaged when she enlisted in the WAAC.

Her basic training was received at Fort Des Moines. She also completed the Adjutant Generals course at Russell Hill, Ark. She likes to sing for soldiers because they are so enthusiastic but her heart interest lies in the navy. Cpl. Riffle is assigned to the Supply Room at Regimental Headquarters of the Third Student Training Regiment.

Cpl. Austrian has developed a fine dance orchestra in the Training Center. He is an experienced band leader and prior to his entry into the service, directed several well known bands including the Capitol Theater band in New York City. He organized and directed his own band which played engagements at the Royal Palm Club in Miami and the Latin Quarter Club in Miami Beach.

FORMER INSTRUCTOR. in parachute packing at The Parachute School, Fort Benning, Sgt. Arlington S. King, Jr., has been selected as the representative soldier at the ASTP unit at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala. He was chosen from among men of six companies who are undergoing special scholastic training for the Army. Sgt. King was transferred to Auburn for advanced training in languages. He speaks French as fluently as he does English. By virtue of his honor, the former parachute instructor was invited to pose for an original charcoal drawing (above) done by Prof. Maltby Sykes of the API applied arts department.

Every Rose Has Its Thorn

They were hot and tired and a little dirty as what company wouldn't be after a four-day bivouac. But the members of the 10th Company, First Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School were happy.

Their bivouac problem ended at noon on Thursday and they had no classes until Friday morning. That meant an afternoon off and an early getaway to Columbus for shopping. The getaway was early enough but—

No one told them the stores closed at noon on Thursdays in Columbus.

128 Reception Center Troops Awarded Medals

A group of 128 colored enlisted men at Fort Benning's Reception Center have been awarded the Army's Good Conduct Medal for exemplary service, it was announced today by Lieut. Col. Ulric N. James, commanding officer, of the center.

These enlisted men were presented with the decorations before a mass formation of recently-inducted soldiers in the Special Training Regiment, at the Center. Other groups of colored soldiers have been presented with the medals at previous ceremonies at the Reception Center. To be eligible for the award, an enlisted man, under current regulations, must either have completed a three-year tour of duty in the Regular Army, or completed a year's service in the Army of the United States since Pearl Harbor.

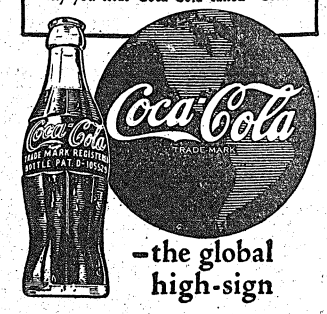
Have a "Coke"=Aloha No

(WELCOME, FRIEND)



...or how to be at home in Hawaii

There are two ways to greet a friend in Hawaii. Aloha No, says the native, and Have a "Coke", says the sailor. Both expressions carry the same note of welcome and affection. From Honolulu to Hartford, Coca-Cola has become the symbol of the pause that refreshes—the gracious introduction between kindly-minded strangers.

"Coke"= Coca-Cola

Hollywood Sound Man Sweats-out Gold Bars

Phillips Recorded Epochal 'Gone With The Wind' Film

Russell E. Phillips, who recorded the sound for some of the greatest moving pictures ever produced in Hollywood and, in so doing, associated with most of the screen's luminaries, is currently sweating out his second lieutenant's bars under the fierce Georgia sun as an 18th Company candidate in the 3rd STR of the Infantry School.

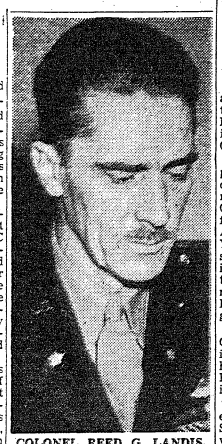
Phillips, a ruggedly good looking guy, came into the Army about nine months ago via the ERC route and because of his experience in the studios of Hollywood was assigned as a sound recorder to the First Signal Corps Mobile Photographic Laboratory at the Base General Depot, San Bernardino, Calif. He climbed rapidly up the enlisted men's rating ladder, achieving technician, third grade, before applying for OCS.

He admits that the infantry was originally his second choice of branches for a commission but now that he is here and has undergone some of the severe phases of the training he likes it. "Boy, it is plenty tough," he says with a grin, "but I feel a lot better for it and I am glad I am here."

When the going gets really strenuous, he gets inspiration from a large photograph of his beautiful wife, "Jerry," which occupies a prominent position on his barracks shelf. Mrs. Phillips is not associated with the moving picture business in any capacity, the candidate will tell you with what seems to be satisfaction and pride.

WITH GOLDWYN

A native of Virginia, Phillips has lived in California for the past 25 years and went to work for the studios in 1935. Most of his Hollywood career has been spent with Sam Goldwyn of the United Artists organization but he frequently has been "loaned" to other producers.



One of the last producers to whom he was loaned in this respect was Howard Hughes, whose picture, "The Outlaw," starred Jane Russell. Miss Russell's husband, Bob Waterfield, is an officer candidate in the 14th Company and Miss Russell herself is residing in Columbus and doing her bit for the country by running WREL's downtown war bond booth. Phillips describes her as an actress who was always gracious and cooperative on the set.

In the production of "The Outlaw," Phillips revealed, 40 consecutive weeks were spent "dubbing in" the music of Victor Young's 90-piece orchestra. The orchestra played 22 days and nights producing the music which found its way into the sound track.

GWTW RECORDER

Phillips also was the sound recorder on the epochal "Gone With the Wind," "The Westerner," "The Real Glory," "The Prisoner of Zenda" and numerous other great films. Among the other producers he has worked for were Walter Wenger and David O. Selznick. He was the sound chief for "Lady Hamilton," produced by Alexander Korda.

Sound men usually get along companionably with the stars of production, Phillips points out. The only situation he encountered which had the proportions of a minor crisis was with Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes." Miss Davis, a Warner Brothers star, made the picture for another producer and it was discovered that when she followed her own dictates in speaking her lines, that her voice came out on the track unpleasantly harsh. Finally it was necessary to borrow Warners' sound equipment for the picture, the equipment with which Miss Davis was accustomed to work.

COLONEL REED G. LANDIS, newly appointed commanding officer of the First Troop Carrier Command, Army Air Forces, of which Lawson Field, Fort Benning is a component part. The son of Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Landis, the colonel is a native of Chicago and Indianapolis. He has been in the air forces since ti was a section of the Signal Corps in 1917, and served with British and later American air squadrons in France as a combat pilot during the last war. —(U. S. War Department Forbids Compiling Of Military Names

The War Department has issued warning against the compiling of lists of names and addresses of military personnel by civilian groups and clubs, according to an announcement by Major H. C. Chapman, post intelligence officer.

The lists, according to the War Department, endangers military security "because they combine with the name of an individual, his unit designation and geographical location."

The warning added that while the motives prompting compilations of this nature are not condemned, "there is a tendency to overlook the fact that publication of these lists subjects the overal unit distribution to unauthorized scrutiny."

Clubs, organizations or groups which make such compilations are asked by the War Department to discontinue them.

WAC Privileges Made Public

Additional benefits available to members of the Women's Army Corps as soon as they have taken the oath as WAC's were listed in an announcement today at post headquarters.

Upon induction into the army, every member of the WAC will be eligible for National Service Life Insurance, the announcement disclosed, and will also be authorized to use the free mail privilege. The insurance may be applied for immediately after taking the oath, and may be issued without a physical examination if taken out within 120 days after induction.

As in the case of other members of the army, pay of WAC's who die in the service is payable to dependents for a period of six months thereafter.

Further it was added that WAC's may apply for family allowances for dependent children, mothers, brothers, sisters, and other relatives, not including husbands. However, members of this new unit are eligible to receive regular family allowances from husbands in the service, and those who are receiving government compensations for the death of husbands in the service will continue to draw such pensions.

It Adds Up To 300; Figure It Up Yourself

Sgt. Dyer of Service Co., 300th Infantry, who has a natural bent for mathematics came up with an amusing and interesting item recently while kicking around some figures in his head.

There are three Infantry regiments in the School Troops Brigade of the Infantry School: the 124th Alligators of Harmony Church, 176th Spirits of the Main Post and the 300th Infantry in the Frying Pan area.

Here is the item: 124 plus 176 equals 300!

Truck Regiment Changes Its Name

The Provisional Truck Regiment of the Infantry School lost its name Monday. As of that date, the regiment became known as the Truck Regiment of The Infantry School.

The Truck Regiment is the unit which provides transportation for Officer Candidate Classes and Academic Department personnel. The regiment was one of several throughout the country to drop the "provisional" part of their title when their table of organization was approved.

The motorcycle department at Fort Knox has been discontinued inasmuch as the use of these machines by the Armored Force has been largely been discontinued in favor of peeps. Cycles are now used mostly behind the lines for liaison and messenger service.

1st Sergeants' Luncheon Held

4th SC Officer Discusses Education Program For Soldiers

Education and the non-military activities of soldiers were the twin subjects discussed at the First Sergeants' luncheon at Service Club No. 5 in the Harmony Church area last Thursday.

The subject of education was presented by Captain W. A. Clark, of the Army Educational and Morale Program, Fourth Service Command, Atlanta; while workers from the USO-Travelers' Aid, the Army-Navy-YMCA-USO, and the YWCA in Columbus presented the subject of activities of the soldier in a non-military nature, and how to use these facilities. Sgt. Colonius Davis, toastmaster at the luncheon, introduced the special guests.

Cpl. Henry Baskett of the 3rd Company, Provisional Truck Regiment, sang numbers learned when he was a member of the famous Hall-Johnson Choir before entering the Army.

Captain Clark, presenting the education program of the Fourth Service Command, spoke of the vast opportunities offered the individual soldier through Army Extension Courses and the specialist training programs set up by the Army for individual or class instruction.

These courses are available at a small cost to the soldier and may be taken in a group—with reduced cost to the individual soldier—or individually. Also the Government has just completed a self-teaching group which enables the soldier to take any course—64 offered in all—at any time that his leisure will permit.

Parachute School PRO Is Captain

First Lieutenant John E. Minter, public relations officer of the Parachute School at Fort Benning, has been promoted to the rank of captain, it was announced Saturday.

Qualifying with the original 501st Parachute Battalion, Captain Minter has been in the paratroops for three and a half exciting years. During this time, he journeyed to Panama with the first paratroop group to leave the continental United States.

While participating in a routine jump in Panama, Minter hit the wing of a following plane, tearing off eight feet of its wing, and at the same time breaking all of his ribs, cracking a collar bone, collapsing one lung, and paralyzing one leg. He remained unconscious for eight days. But eight months later he was back on active duty.

The captain is a native of Columbus, having graduated from Columbus High school. Later he attended Mercer College, Macon, Ga. He is the son of John E. Minter, president of Dixie Brick Company in Columbus, and now resides with his wife and family at 2800 Tenth Street.

300th Infantry Graduates 68 Demolitionists

The 300th Infantry Demolition School has concluded its second period of instruction and graduated thirty-four men who had attended the school for two weeks. The first class, also of thirty-four men, was graduated from the school on July 26.

The Demolition School, according to Lt. Frank G. King, Director, endeavors to give a complete, though concentrated, course in the use of dynamite, TNT, and other standard military and commercial explosives, to clear obstacles from the path of advancing troops, to prepare defensive works, and to lay booby traps. Both electrical and non-electrical charges are studied in the course, which is augumented by analysis of demolition methods, used by the Germans in North Africa and the Japs in the Pacific Battlegrounds. Use of rocket launchers, Molotov cocktails, standard and improvised grenades, and flame throwers is discussed.

Throughout the course, practical work is emphasized. It's hard work, with plenty of digging and some danger, for work with explosives allows no bungling.

The school offers its moments of fun, particularly in the study of booby traps. Instructors offer prizes for the most ingenious traps, and competition is keen. Jeeps, cabins, and miscellaneous equipment (as it might be found on the battlefield) all serve as traps for the unwary. The night work, which involves ingenious uses of smoke pots and the explosion of mine fields via booby traps emphasizes the realism which permeates the instruction.

Army To Pick Specialists From Military Personnel

A recent War Department memorandum reaching Fort Benning states that the army is now approaching its maximum planned strength and directs commanding officers to fill vacancies in specialized posts from qualified military ranks rather than civilian circles.

Save in particular categories, notably those of chaplains, doctors, dentists and veterinarians, the army feels that within its own ranks it has personnel capable of performing most of the necessary functions of military administration and that these persons have, in addition to such accomplishments, had military training and indoctrination.

The practise hereafter will be to reassign an officer when necessary to a post for which his previous education and training fits him more exactly than the position he now occupies. Alternatively, in the absence of an already commissioned and qualified officer an enlisted man may be directly commissioned and invested with the position.

First Regiment EM's Advance

Colonel John S. Roosma, commanding officer of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, recently announced the promotions of the following enlisted men:

Over-Optimism Now Can Prove Disastrous

America's confidence in ultimate victory of the United Nations over the Axis powers is rapidly becoming over optimistic. An individual, and assuredly a nation, must have faith in his own power but should never achieve cocksureness or overconfidence.

Every day in this country one hears stories and rumors that the war will be over by Christmas. Some go a week further and say the New Year; others, Easter. Call it "wishful thinking" if you like that term, but many of the people subscribing to those thoughts firmly believe what they say. They actually DO think the war will be short from this point.

Misled by our apparent abundance of comparatively minor victories at this juncture coupled with one or two "breaks of the game," many people feel it's all over now but the shouting.

Yes, it is all over—all over but the SHOOTING.

A beautiful job was done in North Africa, Pantelleria, Sicily. Gen. MacArthur sees a certain Japanese downfall, and Admiral Halsey says we will land on the soil of Japan proper. Meantime the work of our armed forces goes ahead in the Southwest Pacific and on many other fronts. Russia is pushing Germany.

True we have been meeting with a nice brand of success in our latter efforts, and we have seen the first of the tottering triumvirate of Axis dictators topple. Rumors are rife of a Hitler collapse, dissension and a military government in Nazi Germany.

Stories like the recent one from Switzerland which foresaw the war's end within the next five to nine months make very comforting reading. They are nice to hear about, but the difficulty is they build up a false sense of security.

And what does this bring about on the home front? Production of vital war materiel lags, and the production job is steep enough with the critical shortages of labor in strategic areas.

We must not lose sight of the fact that the entire continent of Europe must yet be invaded by ground forces of the United Nations. So far there has been nothing but air blows struck by our own Army Air Forces and the Royal Air Force. The homeland of Japan lies almost unscathed.

Air power will give—as it already has—a fine account of itself in the crushing and total destruction of fascist influences in our world. But look at the huge task ahead of us.

Rather than these rosy tales which all of us have heard and even spread in some cases, let us all work a bit harder, do our jobs better, and this war will be won with a minimum of wasted time and motion.

Soldiers Should Use Voting Privileges

Probably no other people in the world do more complaining about government than Americans, yet no other people can as easily correct the shortcomings of their legislators than we.

However, the number of people who do not exercise this privilege for which lives have been lost in plenty and are still being lost is immense. The truth is a shockingly large number of United States citizens are too confounded lazy mentally to exert themselves in the performance of what is their duty as citizens viz: to vote and so so conscientiously.

The Government is going to considerable trouble to facilitate voting on the part of soldiers and it jolly well behooves the G. I.'s to take advantage of this privilege, carefully considering the merits of the people they elect and refrain from carelessly and blithely casting the ballot.

In the present contingency we need first rate people in control of our government. The authorities have no wish to influence you as to what party you vote for. All they ask is that you do vote and vote honestly.

Cards requesting an absentee ballot may be had from your first sergeant or, alternatively from the Secretary of State of your own state capital.

Why Lunch In Field Always Tastes Better

As a tactical officer in the First Student Training Regiment one often hears such expressions as "I wonder why the chow is always better when we're in the field"; or "Why don't we get food like this when we eat in the mess hall"; or "I suppose that since we had a good meal in the field this noon we won't have much of a meal tonight" and various other ways of expressing the same thing.

In this connection there are several reasons why these remarks are made. For one reason, and possibly the chief one, food always tastes better out in the open, even though there are drawbacks, such as flies, ants and other insects to contend with. Also, generally, when the meal is served in the field, the personnel has just completed a considerable amount of outdoor exercise which gives them a much bigger and better appetite, than if they had spent their time indoors in a lecture or study hall. There is a "something" about being out in the open that gives each individual a sort of inside shower bath, one that cleans and clears his mind and body as well, and prepares him for a good hearty meal to fill up the void.

In addition the meal that is served in the field is generally a combination of both the noon and night meals. This is done because the noon meal, as planned on the menus, is not as hearty as the evening meal, and as such would not be sufficient in body to carry the individual undergoing such trenuous exercise.

—ANNOYMOUS, 1ST. STR.

Subterfuge Is Cheap Way To Corner Officers

There is a certain cheap subterfuge occasionally resorted to by enlisted men in intercourse with officers which the officers usually fall for. It goes something like this: The enlisted man has some gripe or grudge concerning which he feels it would be impertinent to speak in the ordinary course so, with a show of specious candor he approaches the officer and says, "Sir, may I speak to you as man to man?" or "May I talk to you out of line?" The formula varies in wordage.

Thus addressed the officer feels it would be un-manly to refuse, says "yes" and, often as not subjects himself to some insocence which he is tactically powerless to resent.

Now such an approach is a moral cowardice since from the orthodox traditions of the national sense of democracy and 'fair play" it ostensibly puts the officer in the light of a prig if he refuses.

It is, however, his right and, indeed duty to decline such a proposal since the implication is that the officer would be capable of declining to hear a legitimate cause for complaint in his official capacity. There is nothing either in specific army regulations or in unwritten traditions which inhibits officers being spoken to on any reasonable subject and the positions of enlisted man to officer and "man to man" are not opposed in nature. The trick we mention is an abuse of a kindly human weakness and should not be tolerated.

—T. D.

Limited Service Ruling Is A Wise Decision

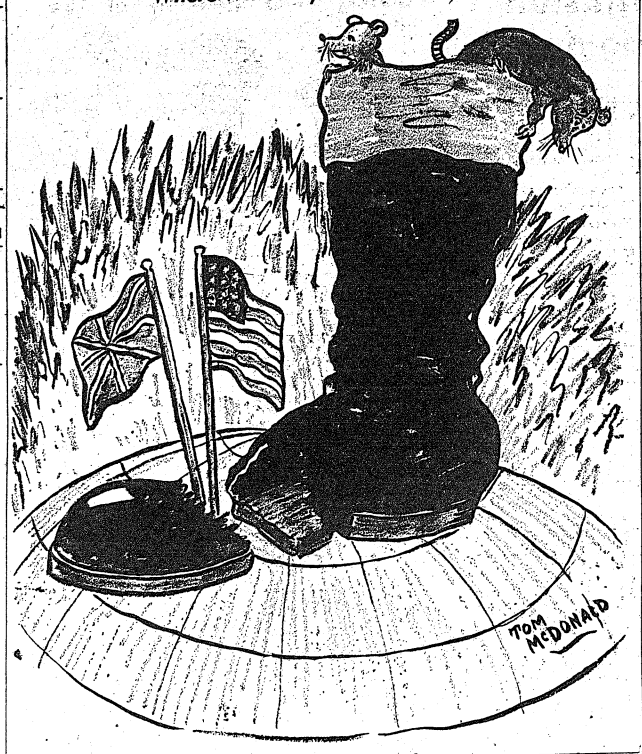
Whatever practical effect the recent regulation abolishing limited service may have it apparently does one thing which is obviously desirable: it facilitates the discharge from military service of unfit persons which thus far has been a tedious and long drawn out process.

Now obviously it would not be feasible to dismiss men from the Army because they'd rather be out than in. No doubt the number of men is very small which enters military service entirely of its own volition with enthusiasm and with other alternatives. However, most people, after they have adjusted themselves to their new environment are at least reconciled and reasonably happy and some like it a very great deal.

There are, none the less, a certain few who are constitutionally incapable of reconciling themselves to the change. Most of these, indeed are people who have never adjusted themselves to any environment. They are the chronically discontented who are always at odds with their families, their neighbors and society in general. They think they are abused, neglected and unappreciated and being emotionally unbalanced they cannot be reached by reason and must be dealt with through the medium of neuro-psychiatric therapy.

It costs as much to equip and administer a good and useful soldier as it does an unwilling and useless one. In fact the bad one costs more in the way of time and effort on the part of military authorities and he pays no dividends. Any man who wants to get out of the Army as intensely as some of these people do are much better out than in. Even if, as might be pleaded, this could encourage malingering it is not the less desirable because the chronic malinger is, ipso facto, a neurotic.

Nor must it be forgotten that this measure will facilitate the release of those sad cases who have genuine and tangible afflictions which render them unfit for military life. It is saddening to see some of these poor men with frail bodies and lamed legs or feet uncomplainingly going about their duties and doing their handicapped best. The discretionary power apparently given to commanding officers will certainly be more effective than the routine formalities which have been entailed heretofore.



—T. D.

A prophet is not without honor save in his own country. And that may be because he asks to honor and save our country without profit.

The school that always advocates "self-expression" always seems to assume it is a good thing to express.

There is nothing wrong with America's ideals. But something is wrong with the way we have served them. We must fight not only the outer enemy who threatens these ideals but the inner weakness which has kept us from attaining them.

T. P. TRIES TO ARO USE MAC'S INTEREST IN ALL THINGS LITERARY

BY S-SGT. TOM MacDONALD

On occasional weekday afternoons, my commanding officer, Colonel T. P. Swampwater, likes to put aside the trials and tribulations of his every day chores and discuss literature or some other highly aesthetic subject, with whomever is handy. On this remorseful afternoon I happened to be the victim.

"Sergeant!" he bellows, "drag up a chair, take a stick of my Class B imported chewing gum and tell me exactly what you think of things in general."

"Which General, Sir?" I inquired unwrapping the chewing gum.

"Shades of Salome! Sergeant! I'm not delving into personalities. I just want to hear your opinion on the current situation, the 'spasmodity' of existence or whatever you care to call it. Tell me about some of the books you've been reading."

'Well, Sir, I haven't been reading much lately; you know how busy I've been lately writing to all the chewing gum companies to ask them for free samples of their product for you."

'Yes, Sergeant, I'm aware of that fact."

"But once in a while, Sir," I continued, "I read 'Bringing Up Father', 'Blondie,' or 'Little Abner'."

"Humrmp!" retributed the old boy, vigorously clearing his throat. "Is that all you've been doing while I've been out on field problems?"

"Oh no, Sir," I retaliated at the same time trying to defend my integrity. "Why just yesterday afternoon I went through your peanut brittle assortment and picked out all the pieces with the most peanuts in them for your personal use, Sir."

"So I recall, Sergeant, and if I may add you were quite efficient. Next Friday I shall let you go through my assorted chewing gum and pick out all the sticks with green wrappers so I can put it in my "Guest offering box." I don't like that kind very well, you know."

"Yes, Sir," I answered not entirely in approval of the way my leader was looking at me over the bridge of his nose. "But getting back to the books, Sir, just what kind do you recommend that I read?"

"Oh yes, Sergeant! The books! Well just as an off hand reference I recommend something light and frivolous such as Gibbons' 'The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire'."

"Have you read it, Sir?" I inquired.

"No, Sergeant, but one of the majors on my staff recommended it to me. He said a corporal in one of his lieutenant's rifle platoons had read it and was highly stimulated."

"You mean the way you get stimulated over at The Patio Grill, Sir?"

"Not quite, Sergeant. Aesthetic stimulation is more of a feeling that you have inside of you. A resplendent upsurging of the emotions as they are geared and stimulated by the recurrent action of the visionary capacities of the brain during the process of undergoing a vicarious experience."

"Yes, Sir," I replied, trying to be agreeable. "I shall undoubtedly enjoy your book, Sir."

"I'm sure that you will, Sergent," beamed the ol' boy well pleased with his literary insight and aesthetic appreciation.

"Is that all for today, Sir?"

"Yes," mused my leader, but before you go will you go down to Major Foxhowl's office and ask him to please return my copy of 'Tarzan of the Apes'?"

"Yes, Sir," I answered, racking my brain to see what connection it could possibly have with Gibbons' "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire".

Chaplain's Corner...

EMPTY SPRINGS

CHAPLAIN F. M. THOMPSON

In a recent book a son with pathetic voice speaks to his mother who is all made up on the outside and within: "You never stop acting. When I've seen you go into a room, I've sometimes wanted to open the door suddenly, but I've been afraid to in case I found nobody there, an empty spring.

What devastating words! What a tragedy! It were as though a weary desert traveler, fondly hoping to find rest and refreshment at a certain stage of his journey, found, parched ground, the waters dried up, and the scattered, white bones of others who with like hopes had perished.

A large section of life is that way, barren, desolate. Look in any direction and you will find homes, centers of amusement, social activities void of all that is helpful, inspiring. The same is true in our reading. Most of it is trash. Shakespeare has a line for it. "Oh God, God how weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable."

Likewise our work, pursuit, interests, attitudes, beliefs, thought sufficient for the day, a never-failing fountain; but in an uneasy hour we awake to find they are not sufficient, the waters have failed, and we are camped by an empty spring.

We wonder wherein we missed out. Perhaps the abiding satisfactions are found elsewhere. The Great Teacher may have spoken the truth when He said:

"Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst, but will be a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

Atley Donald, bald-headed veteran righthander of the New York Yankees, has been rejected for the second time by his New York draft board. Donald, classified 4F, has a trick back.

Add the name of Milo Komenich, star Wyoming University basketball player, to the list of athletes rejected by the Army. Komenich was turned down in Cheyenne, Wyo. because he's too tall for the service. He's 6 feet 6 3-8 inches without his shoes.

Assistant War Secretary Robert Patterson is "pretty sure" that the Army-Navy football game will be played this fall, he said at a recent press conference. The game has been tentatively scheduled for Nov. 27 at West Point.

Kay's Husband Says—

HE NEVER APPRECIATES KAY ENUF UNTIL SHE TAKES A VACATION

While Kay's on vacation, Hubbie is pinch-hitting for her.

It used to be all right with me to have my wife go away for a visit, because in my own, and only my own, opinion I'm a pretty handy man around a kitchen. Given some potatoes to raw fry, a steak, a head of lettuce, a spatula, a pound of lard and two heavy skillets I could whip up a pretty good meal, even if the same dinner did get monotonous after two weeks or so.

Now I know how things have changed, what with living on the post and being in the army and all, and I see prospects of malnutrition rearing its ugly head, if not some more serious vitamin deficiency such as that suffered by John Barrymore.

* * *

The Officers' Mess stops serving dinner too early for me. Likewise being invited out offers no solution because more normal persons eat much too early to stimulate my salivary glands. Eating downtown would be a solution except for gas shortages, to say nothing of the fact that being even remotely associated with The Bayonet is no advantage right now in a downtown restaurant, if you remember a certain editorial we had two weeks ago.

* * *

Preparing dinner myself at night that former joy and privilege, is, alas, no longer posible. As for the steak, well you know the answer. Too, I now know my cooking limitations and realized with a shock that my boasting of that prowess was sheer bluff. When it comes to anything more complicated than the meal I described the effort hardly seems worth it.

* * *

Besides when cooking I merely use the same dishes over and over on the theory that since only I eat from them, washing and all that stuff is the sheerest form of nonsense. Well, down here there are little things that crawl and I'm afraid leaving food here and about just wouldn't work.

* * *

Further, I simply could not go shopping. It was bad enough before, counting change. My usual practice was to look sharply at it, smile profoundly as though I had figured it out, and trust that the cashier knew more about figures than I.

My ration books are languishing on the mantel. My respect for the housewife has risen immeasureably, for I know I would be lost either at the PX or the commissary. Counting point values on top of counting cost is too frightful a thought for me to countenance and I know I'd make a scene in front of all those women.

Maybe our circulation department will send a copy of this to Kay and she'll come home. If not she faces the prospect of finding an emaciated husband.

CALLS FOR LOTS O F GUTS BUT JOE HAD WHA T IT TAKES

By CAPT. F. M. SCHILLING 1ST S. T. R.

When Joe and Em were married they came to me for help in locating a room in the already overcrowded outskirts of town, seeing as how I was shack man of long standing. Of course I was pretty anxious to help the kids, but I can't perform miracles. You know how the towns next to army posts bulge with the sudden increase in population; and this place is no exception. It might have been a little worse than most places, at that. The post at which Joe and I were stationed was no runt, it was big.

So I finally persuaded old lady Kelly (my landlady) to let the kids have the spare room on the second floor. It wasn't very big and it didn't have much to offer in the way of light or ventilation, but it was large enough to put a double-bunk, a footlocker, and a radio in. . . . and that's enough space to call it a "room" these days. It would look better when it was fixed up, even if it was under the stairs to the attic and had a very small window rather high up on the wall. Joe had the thing looking pretty cozy in no time at all. A coat of paint, some shelves, a decorated crate to use as a stand for the electric plate, and a second hand ice-box made the room into a private's palace. Joe did wonders to the place and Em kept it so bright and clean you'd never know it had once stored a lot of trunks and worn-out furniture. It was home to the kids.

Selma and I had one of the front rooms on the same floor, one of the large rooms. The kids used to come in for an evening once in awhile. The four of us would whack at a few hands of bridge, or else the girls would jabber away about this and that while Joe and I tossed down some of the beer I keep on th ice just for such occasions. They were damn good company. The wife and I got a kick out of having them over. If it's the beer you're worried about, so what? I don't care if the kid never did ask me over to his place. The room wouldn't hold the four of us . . . and I know damn well he can't spare the dough to set them up for me. I'm a sergeant ain't I? I can't afford to treat.

My wife was all set to fix Em up with a job at the mill; it would have helped a little financially. It might have given them a chance to see a few movies and get a square meal on Sunday. Joe didn't want anything to do with that idea. Em was to stay home, Joe always said. She was an artist and Joe didn't want her to hurt her hands. Some of the girls squashed their fingers in the machines every once in awhile. Em wasn't going to; Em would stay home and rest. He said he'd see to that. Besides, they had gotten along for quite awhile now on what the army paid. But most of all, Em had told Selma and Selma told me, there was going to be a baby.

I sort of had a hunch the kids were up to something a couple of weeks ago. My wife told me Em left the house shortly after Joe picked up his ride to the post. She always got back home and had the place tidy before he came in at night. There was always a good, substantial meal waiting for Joe when he got home. I didn't tell him about Em's disappearance during the daytime. Joe was happy. It isn't my business to butt into other people's lives. I had it figured out that it couldn't be anything wrong, anyway. Not Em.

Then Joe acted queer. He'd carry a paper bag back and forth to work with him every morning. I told him he could leave it in my place when he asked me. Sure, I promised not to look in it, and I kept my promise. I didn't even feel of the bag. I left it sitting in the corner and just tried to guess. My will-power was stronger than I thought it would be.

One night we were having one of our now almost nightly powwows. Somebody mentioned that a paratrooper gets "jump pay." Em was pretty quick in answering that some people weren't emotionally fit to be paratroopers. I wondered what that had to do with the money angle, but Joe cleared Em's strange behavior up for me. "I've talked about signing up for that outfit, but Em doesn't think I should," Joe said. "You know you can't stand looking down from high places, Joe," Em answered. But Joe argued that maybe the extra money would straighten things out and make life a little easier, then he switched the subject again and started telling about what happened during the day at the Q.M. warehouse he was working at. The story didn't sound right to me, something he said didn't sound true. He mentioned going over to the Sales Store and watching officers getting stocked up on socks and underwear, probably getting ready to go into combat. He talked at length on the new O.D shade of shirts and shorts. As I said before, it sounded fishy. The Sales Store was closed for inventory today.

Joe came limping home the other night. He said it was nothing. He had dropped a packing case on his foot. Em hadn't come in early as she usually did. The room wasn't tidy, the supper wasn't ready. Our door to the hall was slightly open so I happened to overhear the conversation that took place when Em finally hurried up the stairs.

"Darling, you've been crying," I could hear Joe say. "You shouldn't have done it, Joe. You shouldn't have done it," Em said through her tears. Joe kissed her tenderly on the cheek and picked her up in his arms, he carried her gently into their own little home. He placed her softly on the bed and kissed away her tears. Then he closed the door.

Selma knew more about the situation than I did. She told me that Em had taken a job at the hospital. "A job in the office won't hurt me," she had said to Selma. So that explains the daily disappearance, I thought. The rest would explain itself later.

That evening the kids came in to our place as usual. Both of them were beaming like the happiest people in the world. Both of them had thought only of the other. Joe had wanted Em to have everything that girls want, the little things that count. Em wanted Joe to have a home, a happy place, a cozy spot he could return to after the day's work was through. A private's pay doesn't afford much luxury.

So Em had gone to work in one of the offices at the hospital. She didn't mind the work. Joe was too sensitive about the baby. There

G.I. Lives In World Of Illusion As Army Proves Just Too Kind

Soldier Suspiciously Waits For It To Show Other Colors, But No Soap

Dear Chaplain:

I'm very worried about myself and don't know what to do about it. I think I've got an indulgence simplex. No, of course you've never heard of such a thing; I never did myself until I made it up. It's the opposite of a persecution complex. I'm sure psychatirics don't recognize anything so freakish and I'm at a loss to know what to do about it. No one likes to be a freak and I've been striving all my life to conform to a recognizable norm. It's very discouraging. It's all the Army's fault. I was perfectly all right before I enlisted.

You see in civilian life I was just like everybody else. I knew that the world didn't appreciate me at my true worth and had not rewarded me as I deserved. Practically no one "understood" me; people were always plotting against my well being. Whenever I went to the doctor I always felt that he didn't realize the seriousness of my afflictions. I know the callousness of this world and was sure that I must await my reward til the next one. In fact I used to lay awake nights making imaginary mock ups of martyrs' crowns for myself. Sometimes I'd lean toward the closed top variety edged with strawberry leaves; on other occasions I'd favor something in the way of an episcopal mitre. When I had devilled cheese sandwiches and ale just before retiring a simple little circlet of thorns suggested itself. Then of course there was always something to be said for a modest unpretentious halo; one of those quaint off-the-face models. In short: I was just exactly like 98.07 per cent of the rest of humanity.

A DOG'S (?) LIFE

Any number of my friends entered the army before I did. (I always say "Be not the first by whom the new is tried, nor yet the last to cast the old aside.") When these intimates wrote to me and when we got together for a dish they were not in the least reticent about their experiences; telling what a dog's life it was. When they learned of my intention to follow them their counsel was virtually unanimous.

"Good God!" they'd exclaim, "I can't imagine YOU in the Army!"

"Can't you indeed?" I'd bridle, "well I'd just like to know why not. Am I any different than anyone else? I guess if you survived then." Whereupon I'd fly into a pet and sulk.

Seeing that I'd been offended and perceiving that there was still enough rum in the decanter to make several more punches these people would seem to mollify me.

"Oh, well," they'd say, "you'll find the first couple of months Hell, but if you survive that you won't mind it afterwards."

TOO, TOO KIND

In accordance with all these warnings I approached the recruiting office with considerable trepidation and was quite taken aback on being greeted with cordiality and politeness by the chap at the desk. Hmm —— I thought. This is probably just a hoax on the principle that you can catch more flies with treacle than with vinegar. I suppose they'll start the salt mine tactics after they get me sworn in.

Hence you may conceive my further mystification when I was actually sent on my way to the induction center without being once clubbed, kicked or even cursed at. On alighting from the railway train which bore me to the town near which the center was situated a truck was awaiting to convey us to camp. All set for being booted and pushed into the vehicle like a pogrom candidate my suspicious fears were re-awakened when the driver came over and asked me if I'd like to ride in the cab with him. Fancy my refinement of terror all the way to camp expecting to have pins stuck in me, my pocket picked or to be the victim of some cruel and ingenious practical joke. That none of these things happened makes it none the less horrible and I could hardly gasp a civil word of thanks when I fell more dead than alive from the cab on our arrival.

HUMANE TREATMENT

Discounting the peremptoriness of procedure consequent to the vast numbers of people they were handling, I was treated quite humanely during the processing and examinations. This was queer in light of what I'd been told about the savagery exercised on such occasions.

I knew from hundreds of newspaper cartoons that the quartermasters made a point of giving you clothes which were either ludicrously large or absurdly small and when they went to some pains to give me an excellent fit I was convinced that something was radically wrong.

The following day the brutes made us all get into a train of Pullman cars drawn up at a siding. I didn't mind this so much for my own sake because I've never been used to travelling more luxuriously than that but my heart bled for the poor young lads with whom I was surrounded because I could tell from their complaints and lamentations that they had never journeyed in anything less sybaritical than a stateroom or private car.

Several times during the journey south chocolate candy or cigarettes were distributed to us with the compliments of the officer in charge of the detail. This seemed to me singularly civil until one of my more sophisticated companions informed me that it was just a sly Army trick to keep count of us. This little cruelty put some heart into me, giving promise of some of the saddism in store for us.

AT LONG LAST BENNING

Finally arrived at Fort Benning and set down at Sand Hill I knew that my Golgotha was about to commence. We were all grouped outside a building where our final classification was to take place. As I waited other men emerged snarling and whining because they had been given short shrift and thrust into posts entirely unsuited to their talents and genius. The atmosphere seethed with insurrection. To my utter bewilderment the classification officer behaved to me with friendly civility and assigned me to a post which held promise of being more interesting than anything I'd thought possible.

My actual conviction of there being something radically wrong came to me after I had been in garrison a few days with the company to which I had been assigned. I knew that the non-coms were vicious boorish fiends and the officers loutish unreasonable bullys because everyone said so. It was universally agreed that the first sergeant was a ——, the lieutenants were —— ——'s and the captain was a —— ——. Hardly a recruit except myself but felt the brunt of these cossack barbarians. Injustice and persecution were rife. I really started to hurt them. Why was I being picked upon? The first sergeant never refused a reasonable request, the lieutenants were kindness itself and the captain exercised a benevolence which was little short of patriarchal.

SHEER TRICKERY

When any arduous exercises or long marches were incipient a non-com or officer would inform me I needn't perform them if I didn't wish. I never took advantage of these suggestions because I was sure they were just a trick and I found I was none the worse for my efforts. I wasn't going to be taken in by their cunning arts.

Always a slight eater the small quantities of food I took aroused the concern of the k.p.'s and they'd frequently show solicitude and urge more on me but I knew they had some trick up their sleeve and never succumbed to their blandishments.

Probably the most harrowing experience of all was that I had with the surgeons. I know for a positive fact that Army doctors are fiends incarnate. Any G. I. will quote you line and verse to prove it. It's a notorious truth that if you go on sick call they insult and abuse you and practically say in so many words that your ills are imaginary.

Now when I entered the service I was suffering from trouble in my ear canal. I had been paying an eminent specialist a whacking fee every time I visited him but he didn't seem to be helping me at all. Shortly after my arrival at Sand Hill I went on sick call because knowing that they'd just cut the ear off I figured it would be better that way since it was more trouble than it was worth in existing circumstances.

GREAT SOLICITUDE

That diabolical company surgeon put on a show of great solicitude and consideration which had me all of a tremble and made me a nervous wreck. After a few visits he had the ear all cured and good as new.

Whenever a meeting of the Club Latrine occurred I'd feel terribly out of things and simply not one of the boys at all. The rest of the men would have the most interesting tales to tell about rudeness from the officers, impositions on the part of non-coms and horrible behavior on the part of their comrades. Topping all would be the thrilling stories of neglect and worse on the part of the doctors.

When everyone had contributed his stint to these lurid Arabian Night's sessions they'd look at me expectantly. I felt it incumbent on me to contribute something to the entertainment so I'd timidly tell of some civil compliment the company commander had paid me, of the gift to town the first sergeant had procured for me or how efficacious the surgeon's treatment of a recent cold in the head had been.

The rest of the company would look at me with ill-concealed distaste and I'd slink away with my tail between my legs acutely conscious of being a social pariah.

It never rains but it pour. One day the Mephistophelian doctor at the ear, eye, nose and throat clinic discovered that my vision was below combat requirements. He clicked his tongue a few times and with a few strokes of the pen sentenced me to go before the reclassification board. This put me into a cold sweat. Anyone who has ever been before such a board will tell you that its victims are treated with scorn and contempt. They are browbeaten maligned and turned out with their self-respect hanging about them in ribbons. By the time I was ready to appear at this tribunal I had practically no fingernails left.

SATANIC MEDICO

On the way to my ordeal the satanic medical captain made me sit on the seat next him instead of allowing me to ride in the back of the ambulance with the other human sacrifices and he gave me some papers to hold while he drove. My own dossier was on top of the pile and I inadvertently read a few sentences pertaining to my own case for the information of the board. A more ingenuous mind than my own would have taken the writings to be a highly complimentary commendation but I knew perfectly well that these fair words were some secret code which mean in effect "Give him the works."

Well————all my fears were justified. The officers of the board were as insidiously polite and as ominously pleasant as though I'd captured Guadalcanal single handed. Talk about refinements of cruelty————you don't know the half of it.

It's been the same way ever since. Whenever my old outfit had a beer party they'd ask me over. I'd always take my own beer and sandwiches along with me because any saw the most naive G. I.'s know that you can't trust anybody and when, on these occasions my old officers would shake hands and say they were glad to see me I knew quite well that these hypocritical mouthings only masked malignant sentiments of vindictiveness.

WORLD OF ILLUSION

Now I'm convinced that I'm emotionally unbalanced and living in a world of illusion. The logical part of my mind tells me that I've received a rotten deal, been maltreated and kicked about. This conviction is confirmed by spoken evidence on every side. 8,000,000 G. I.'s can't be wrong. Yet another portion of me labors under a powerful delusion of well-being. I imagine that I've been kindly dealt with, that I've never had any unreasonable demands made upon me and that everyone is singularly courteous and considerate.

What in the world shall I do? Science cannot help me — I fear that I am a lost man.

If Your Reverence can suggest any way in which I can rid myself of this awful incubus you will have saved a suffering soul from premature damnation.

Yours in sorrow,

A Suffering G. I.

P. S. Chaplain: Don't trouble yourself about the foregoing. It was written in a low pot house where I had sought to escape my terrors in geneva spirits. An M. P. just came past and I asked him if it were past curfew. Laying his hand kindly on my shoulder, he said: "No, Sir, you got another hour yet." This is the last straw. I am ending IT ALL.

Jungle Fighter In TIS Course

Captain Flo Spent 15 Months In Pacific Theater Of Action

Captain Frederick T. Flo, of Los Angeles, Cal., knows at first hand what it's like to fight Japs and the jungle together. Now attached to the 12th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, the Infantry School, Captain Flo recently returned from 15 months of thrills and close calls in the Asiatic Pacific theater. During that time he fought in the battle of Guadalcanal until the last Jap was killed or driven from the island.

Patrol activity frequently brought the Captain into closer contact with the enemy than most veterans of Guadalcanal ever gained. He first commanded the reconnaissance platoon and then served as intelligence officer for a regiment that won the Silver Star for its gallantry in the campaign.

Carrying out his regular duties, Captain Flo led a small patrol that operated behind the Jap lines for 10 days. He found that it paid to make friends with the natives and learned many tricks that will enable a small unit to live in the jungle for days on end.

Says Captain Flo: "The Japanese are crafty, patient, and expert in camouflage. They are fair shots. However, they are so willing to die for the Emperor that they make many mistakes. Americans have time and again shown them (the Japs) what it is to really fight and have out-figured, out-fought and out-lasted them."

LEGION OF MERIT—Newest addition to the War Department's list of awards is the Legion of Merit, pictured here. It can be won only by members of the armed forces of the United States and the Philippines who distinguish themselves by exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services. It is issued in one degree and is rated between the Distinguished Service Medal and the Silver Star.

Musical Expert Leads Truck Unit Orchestra

When the orchestra of the Truck Regiment of The Infantry School makes its initial bow to the public, it will be under the direction of one of the most capable soldiers in that organization, Sergeant Harry M. Smyles, of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment.

Sergeant Smyles is a native of Cleveland, O., the son of Mr. John M. Smyles of Hampden Avenue. All of his undergraduate work was done in Cleveland. He attended Western Reserve University, graduating with a bachelor of science degree. A born musician, he played first oboe, one of the most difficult instruments, in his school band and also played with the orchestra, as well as singing in the choir. Because of his exceptional musical ability, he was pledged to Phi Mu Alpha, National Honorary Music Fraternity, an organization composed of some of the nations most prominent musicians.

After completing his college work in May, 1942, Sergeant Smyles was employed by the Cleveland Public Library and was, at that time a member of the Cleveland Philharmonic Orchestra as well as the Civic Opera Orchestra.

VARIED DUTIES

His army career had its beginning when he was drafted in October, 1942 and sent to Camp Shelby, Miss., for his basic training. He was then transferred to the 27th Quartermaster outfit at Fort Benning, Georgia and worked as company clerk until that organization was ordered away from the post.

Transferred again, this time to the Provisional Truck Regiment, his musical ability was recognized by Colonel Frank J. Vida, the regimental commander and he was assigned to the regimental Special Service Office. In this office he has been a teacher in the Literacy School, a member of the Public Relations Staff, and one of the lecturers in the Army Orientation series.

With the decision to form a regimental orchestra, he was selected as the logical person to assist in making the initial plans and on a recent furlough to Cleveland, Ohio, he ordered the necessary instruments incidental to the organization. Since his return and, with the arrival of some of the instruments, he has been working with some members of the orchestra and in the very near future will be seen waving his baton in front of the posts' newest musical organization.

The discontinuance of the manufacture of distinctive metal and plastic military insignia has been ordered by the War Department.

1st STR Has 48 Millions In Life Insurance

Some $48,131,000 worth of National Service Life Insurance is in force for the officers and men of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, according to Lieutenant Vernon A. Willoughby, Regimental Insurance Officer.

These policies afford protection to 97.1 per cent of the organization's personnel, believed to set a record in coverage for a unit of this type. It shows, too, that the student officers in the 1st S. T. R., commanded by Colonel John S. Roosma, are setting an example in protecting dependents that their home outfits can well emulate.

While company commanders have long been hammering home the facts about National Service Life Insurance, Lieut. Willoughby points out that not all soldiers fully understand its purposes and provisions.

BEST COVERAGE

Government insurance is the only kind a serviceman can now buy that will protect his dependents against all risks, even his death in battle. Civilian life insurance companies can't call on the taxpayers, as the Government does, for money to meet the sharp increase in benefits paid out to survivors of wartime casualties. Therefore the private companies can't possibly afford to, and don't, give the full protection that National Service Life Insurance provides soldiers. This same factor also makes government insurance cheaper than private if converted to peacetime form and kept in effect after the war.

SUCKER PROOF

Government policies offered soldiers during the last war paid off beneficiaries with a lump sum. All too often salesmen of phoney stocks or useless luxuries, or just plain moochers, separated orphans, widows, or dependent parents from the money they needed for daily necessities. By paying off in monthly installments over a period of many years, the new National Service Life Insurance sees to it that all the benefits, in the form of a steady income, reach the dependents whom the soldier intended to protect. To make these monthly payments to a family as large as possible is another reason why Lieutenant Willoughby urges each soldier to take full advantage of the government's plan and insure up to the limit allowed—$10,000.

CAPTAIN JOHNSON

First Lt. Floyd W. Johnson of the Publications Section, The Infantry School, has been promoted to the rank of captain, according to a recent announcement here.

Captain Johnson has been in Service since graduation from college in June, 1939, staring on July 5, 1939 as Secind Lieutenant in the Second Infantry, Fort Wayne and Fort Custer, Michigan. On September 11, 1940 he returned to his Alma Mater as Assistant Professor of Military Science and Tactics. He also served at Fort McClellan, Alabama, before reporting to the Academic Department at The Infantry School. Major Johnson attended the Basic Course, The Infantry School in 1942. He has been awarded the Defense Service Medal.

Military currency used by the Allied armies in Sicily comprises notes known as "yellowheads" because of a seal of that color on their face which names the place of circulation.

1st Battalion, 1st STR, Paints Up, Landscapes Messes

Recent improvements in the 1st Battalion, First Student Training Regiment, commanded by Lt. Col. Wilfred C. Jackson include the painting of mess halls. The color chosen is light green and ivory. Work is being done by enlisted men of Headquarters Company, First Student Training Regiment.

Other improvements include a system of gravel walks, the sodding of several areas and the planting of shrubs. The latter is an extension of already extensive work done along that line. The walks in the are are shouldered by plants and flowers, giving it the appearance of a parkway. A fine spirit of cooperation has been evidenced on the part of the Officer Students in keeping things beautiful and many of them have expressed satisfaction at so much effort being expended toward their comfort and welfare.

A new type of insole has been developed for the jungle boot by the Service of Supply. It comprises four coarse and one fine layers of plastic screening providing ventilation which minimizes susceptibility to fungus growths and allows the boot's interior to be sterilized with soap and water.

Military personnel must not write to prisoners in enemy internment directly. If communication is desired, the letter should be sent to a civilian relatife of friend and forwarded through regular postal channels.

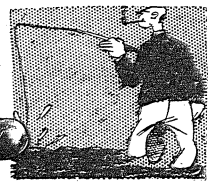
Sportscasting

BY SGT. CARL NEU

THERE'S A very definite possibility now that Sgt. Joe Louis, the internationally known Brown Bomber of the boxing ring, will visit Fort Benning for an exhibition sometime in November. Joe started his nationwide tour of Army camps yesterday on a jaunt that will eventually carry him and his partners overseas to entertain American troops. His camp-to-camp schedule has not yet been released and Benning has had no definite word of his coming here. However, it was announced that he will spend 22 days in the Fourth Service Command, and since this camp ground is one of the largest in the S. C., it seems almost certain that the heavyweight champ will come here.

Since the 4th Service Command will be the last stop on the Louis tour, however, it means that the big treat will have to wait at least until sometime in November. With the champ on his jaunt are George Nicholson, a former sparring partner, and "Sugar" Ray Robinson, the welterweight slugger. Exhibitions in the various camps will be arranged through the commanding general and included in the program will be talks by Louis to the soldiers about physical fitness.

It is hoped that arrangements can be made, if and when the champ comes here, for a couple of exhibition bouts with some of our own Benning talent. Eddie Jackson, for instance, of the 3rd STR Panthers is a young heavyweight who helped prime both Tony Galento and Abe Simon for theri battles with Louis. Eddie hasn't had much competition at the post, but he's been aching to get a chance to spar with Louis and has already expressed his willingness to tackle the champ. Also, it's quite posible that one of the post's outstanding colored welters might be matched against Robinson. It would be quite a show if it can be arranged.



THERE MAY be a better ballplayer at the post than Elmer Niebler of the Academic Profs, but we haven't seen him in action this season. For all-around consistency, reliability in the clutch, and an indomitable winning spirit, Nibbles takes the honors. We've felt this way for a long time, but held off proclaiming it simply because Niebler happens to be one of our best friends amongst the Benning athletes. But now, Elmer's record speaks for itself and his activities during the past week give ample proof that this quiet, unassuming lad deserves any praise that can be heaped upon his sturdy shoulders.

Right now, Niebler is hitting to the tune of a .359 average, which must rate at least in the top five of the TIS League. He has batted in 31 runs, accounted for 11 doubles, a triple and a homer. He leads the loop with 19 stolen bases to his credit. He leads the Profs with 46 hits. He has personally scored 33 runs this season. At the age of 23, he is an outstanding prospect for big time baseball. His little previous pro experience was gained with Salisbury in the North Carolina State League, but you can bet he'll go much higher at war's end.

What particularly stirs us is the way he always comes through in the clutch. We honestly can't remember a time this year, with a ball-game hanging in the balance and Niebler at the plate, that he hasn't come through with a hit. He's positively uncanny. Many a Prof win might have gone into the loss column if it weren't for Elmer's potent bat. He did the same thing with the TIS club in early spring and last year with the title-winning Profs. And just to prove he could do it in other spots, it was also Elmer who scored that winning field goal for the Profs last wintetr in the never-to-be-forgotten Prof-507th court game at the gym. In baseball also, he's played six different slots for the Profs this season. Quite a ballplayer this Elmer Niebler, and tops in our estimation.

FROM ALL reports we've been getting, this is a banner season for fishermen on the post. Just why that should be, we don't know. Or perhaps it's the blasted hot weather that simply makes the fish tales we hear seem slightly fantastic. Then again, maybe they aren't fish tales. We don't know, but never having been addicted to the leisurely old sport of casting thy bait into the water and waiting for thou fish to nibble, we're probably always a little skeptical.

That was particularly true this week when one of our beloved old sergeants returned from an excursion to Victory Pond on the reservation with a story about the catfish he caught, which he claims were easily over three feet long. Now we always thought catfish came considerably smaller than that, but if the story is true, then the post fish and game commission deserves a pat on the back for propagating our ponds with such handsome specimens. They make good telling anyway!

WHEN ALICE Marble and Mary Hardwick come here on August 29th for their tennis exhibition, the match will be played on the famed center court at the Officers' Club, which will give the girls the best available playing space at the post. Present plans indicate that large sections of bleachers will be constructed on both sides of the center court, and there will be plenty of seating space available. The WACs, for whom Marble and Hardwick are touring primarily, will, of course, get first choice on the seats, then will come enlisted men, and finally there will be a good-sized section for officer personnel. An attempt is now being made to discover a proficient tennist amongst the local WACs so that she might be persuaded to stage a few volleys with either Le Marble or La Hardwick, just to add local atmosphere to the event.

TALK ABOUT spirit on the baseball diamond, you'd have to go a long way to match that of Benny Zientara, injured second-sacker of the championship Prof nine of the Academic Regiment. Benny's been out several days with an injured back, then Sunday he had to have his ear drum punctured to eliminate some defect in that member. That meant that by game time Sunday night, when the Profs were due to meet the Eagles in a crucial test, Benny was pretty well laid up. Result was he didn't even put on a uniform for the game and was in the grandstand.

But when the Eagles jumped off to a three-run lead in the first inning and made things look pretty dark for the Profs, Zientara sneaked out of the stands, went to the barracks and a couple of innings later sidled into the dugout attired in his diamond uniform. After much pleading, he was finally inserted in the lineup late in the game and provided spark that enabled the Profs to come from behind with a three-run rally in the ninth to tie up the game which they won in the 12th inning. That is spirit, my friends.

NEWEST PAPA amongst the athletes at the post is Mr. Sgt. Odis J. Edwards of the Academic Regiment, whose lovely blonde wife gave birth to a daughter, Judy Ann, at the station hospital about ten days ago. Needless to say, "Pop" is prouder of that recent addition to the family than he is of his many achievements as an athlete in the past few years. Edwards was post handball champ back in 1939 and 1940, and still takes a hand at that arduous sport during the winter season.

The sarge was also quite an athlete in other fields, though. He coached as well as starred on championship swimming and volleyball teams for the I. S. D. (now the Academic Regiment) back in the late thirties. The swimmers won post titles in 1936 and 1937, while the volleyballers won the laurels in the latter year. Almost ten years earlier, Edwards was also a track star, and as a 100-yard dash man, he reached the semi-finls in the 1928 Olympic try-outs. He also coached the I. S. D. track team in those days although there was no post competition in the sport. But he's still proudest of Judy Ann's arrival.

SHORT SHOTS—There'll be some red hot grid news breaking almost any day now. First conference meeting, incidentally, was held this morning in the F. B. A. offices. . . . There was quite a table tennis battle in Service Club No. 1 on Sunday night when Cook and Cartland, here all this week, staged a friendly match with Schiff and Skinner, who were here last week with Camel Caravan. . . . Youngest baseball fan at the post is Richard J. Plunk, aged 3 months, whose daddy is catcher Pete Plunk of the Profs. He seldom misses a Prof game, cuddled in the arms of Plunk's pretty wife. . . . The Spirit baseballers of the 176th came back from their recent Florida trip well-rested and well-tanned for the race edown the stretch in the TIS League. . . . There will be at least three red-hot colored elevens on the post this fall representing the 3rd STR Service Bn., the Reception Center, and the Infantry School Truck Regiment. . . . Alton Sweeney at the Parachut School is a crack 142-pound boxer, winner of several bouts at Camp Wolters, who is anxious to meet any and all comers in a post ring. . . . Extra-inning games in the TIS League are all the vogue these days. Four of the last six played in the big park have gone overtime. That's all till next time.

Three Nines Scramble For TIS Laurels

Spirit Nine Leads As Profs Fight Way Back Into Race With Rally

Gators, Academics Deadlocked For Second As Others Are Eliminated

BY SGT. MILTON LUBAN

With two weeks left in the race, the Infantry School league scramble has been defiiitely narrowed down to a battle royal among the 176th Spirits, the 124th Gators and the Academic Profs.

Feature of the week was the upsurge of the Profs who took four games in five days to make it six straight league wins. The victory streak took the Academics from fifth place to a tie for second with the Gators, both teams being just percentage points behind the Spirits.

ZIENTARA OUT

What is particularly encouraging to Prof fans is the fact that except for an appearance as a pinch hitter against the 300th and a few innings against the 6th Training Eagles, the Profs have been winning without the services of Benny Zientara, star second-baseman, Benny will be back against the Gators and the Profs will be that much stronger.

A key factor in the Prof onrush was the sensational hitting and fielding of Johnny Russo who is challenging Ram Ramazotti for the right to be called the best shortstop in the league. Another bulwark has been the murderous hitting of Elmer Niebler, the most dangerous hitter on the post with men on bases.

HITTING .359

Elmer is now hitting .359 and has knocked in 34 runs. He has also been capably filling in at second during Zientara's absence, just as he filled in at third when Prasse was out. Against the Eagles, Niebler appeared in three different positions and gets this column's vote as the most valuable player to his team.

The Spirits played only one game this week, beating the 300th, 4-3, in an 11-inning game. The Gators helped themselves to two topheavy wins, slaughtering the oncoming 3rd STR Rifles, 15 to 3, and trouncing the 764th Tanks, 13-3.

COME FROM BEHIND

The fighting Profs had to come from behind in two of their games, scoring three runs in the ninth to beat the 300th, then pulling another stirring ninth inning rally against the Eagles, scoring three runs to tie the score and then winning out in the 12th. The one-two punch of Russo and Niebler were decisive factors all through the week, while Prasse has also been swinging a devastating bat.

Plenty of action is on tap for TIS fans this week with the Gators and the Profs fighting it out tomorrow night while the Spirits and the Profs clash next Wednesday. These two games may well settle the title right there.

STILL TOUGH

Another tough contest is Sunday's fracas between the Spirits and the Eagles. The latter team has hit the skids lately, sliding down to fifth place, but with Jim Prendergast on the mound the Eagles are still a dangerous ball club.

Tomorrow night the Spirits have a completely unpredictable game with the Artillery Group at Harmony Church. When the Howitzers are good they are very, very good. When they are bad, wow!

Sunday at Harmony Church will see a game between the Rifles and the Tanks. The Rifles have finally landed in the first division and it will take a stronger club than the Tanks to knock them out of it.

176th Tossers Top 300th Foe In 11 Innings

Spirits Remain At Top Of Standings With 4-3 Victory

BY CORP. MARV MATHRE

In eleven innings of hotly contested play, the 176th Spirits kept their TIS League lead as they defeated the 300th Infantry 4-3 on Sunday.

A spirit barrage of hits in the last half of the eleventh inning was the deciding factor in the evenly played game. In that inning Sodowski, leading off, hit a single down the first base line. Ramazotti followed with a single and Schultz scored Sodowski on another single to win the game.

HITS ARE EVEN

Hits were evenly divided by the two teams. The 176th garnered ten hits and the 300th was close behind with nine. Sodowski, Ramazotti, Schultz, and Reed hit twice for the Spirits.

Poland's double in the seventh and a single by Richardson were the remaining two Spirit hits. Grate, 300th first baseman, walked away with the batting honors hitting a triple, a double and a single. Other 300th hits were collected by Freeman, Symsack, Di Blasi, Koivisto, Palo, and Francis.

COOPER WINNER

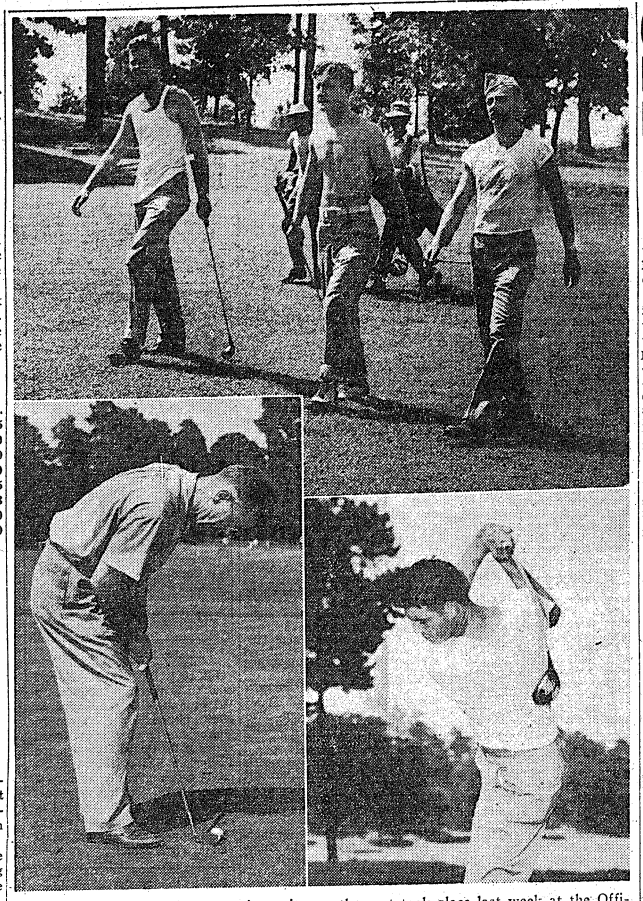
Although "Lifty" Wissman was not in his usual form, he struck out seven batters and walked only three men in the nine innings he was on the mound for the Spirits. Cooper, relieving Wissman in the tenth, struck out two men and allowed one hit in the last two innings.

Francis hurled the entire route for the 300th and pitched one of his best games of the season. The lefthander struck out none Spirit batters and walked only three men.

RAMAZOTTI STARS

Ramazotti again dominated the Spirit field play and also tallied the third 176th score on some very clever base running. In addition the flashy and steady Spirit shot stop hit two singles and cut off a 300th attempt to score in the fourth inning.

The 300th has been the only team to defeat the title fighting Spirits on a 3-2 win in one of the initial games of the second half. Over the whole season the two teams have divided the four games played with each team winning two.



First Baseman Buddy Hassett and Shortstop Johnny Pesky both are outhitting Ted Williams on the North Carolina Naval Preflight baseball team. The Cloudbusters, who have one of the strongest clubs in the service, recently trimmed a team of New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians, managed by Babe Ruth, in New York.

Spirits Topple Pensacola Nine

In a seven-inning game, climaxing their trip to Pensacola, the 176th Spirits defeated the Naval Air Training Center, 8-0. Cooper, starting Spirit hurler, held the Navy nine hitless for four innings of the abbreviated contest.

Schultz and Epstein allowed four hits in the remaining three innings. The Spirits garnered six hits to four for the Navy. Longest hit of the game was a home run by Schultz in the sixth inning with the bases loaded.

In the one hour and forty-five minute game, the Navy made three errors while the 176th nine made only one. In addition to Schultz's homer, Richardson, Ramazzotti, Sodowski, Reed, and Sahara collected singles.

BY SARGE MILT LUBAN

Real mellerdrammer, dat's wot is wuz. Dere's a bunch of guys wot wuz real pals—Lefty Francis, Benny Zientara, Elmer Niebler and Johnny Russo. Dey all usta play for de Profs and Lefty praktely pitches dem to a champeenship last year.

So wot happens? So it happens dat Lefty gets to be made an officer and goes to de Treehundred and he pitches against his old pals which is trying to win de champeenship again. And for awhile it's plain moider. De Profs is losing 4-1 and Lefty is just moidering dem.

LEFTY LOOKS SAD

Den cums de fit inning and de Profs git two guys on base which is also Profs. And who cums in to pinch hit but Benny Zientara who s ou of the last few games cuz he's hurtin' wid a bum back. So dere's Benny and dere's Lefty lookin' at each other. Den Lefty throws de ball and Benny smacks it for a single and den Lefty looks sad at his old pal.

OVER DE FENCE

Den with bases full dere comes up Johnny Russo and he smacks Lefty for a triple to empty de bases and den Lefty looks awful sad. And den dere cums Elmer Nebler and him and his old pal look at each other and den Lefty trows the ball at Elmer and Elmer socks it way over de fence for a homer and Lefty s awful awful sad and de Profs are leadin', 6-4.

So Lefty takes hisself to right field and George Cave cums in to pich insted and Rudy Rundus trows for de Profs in de place of Joe Dickinson, who aint done so well besides which Zientara has hit for hm. And after awhile de Treehundreds go ahead again, 7-6.

But den dere comes de ninth innin' and little Roddy Thompson cums inta pinch hit for Plunk and Reddy draws a walk. Den Garnet Mercer cums into pinch hit for Rundus and he beats out a bunt. Den dere cums Chet Dabbs and he pokes out a little dribbler and beats it out for a hit. And den dere cums up Johnny Russo again and he slams de ball into center field and gets to second base while Thompson and Mercer cum in wid two runs and de Profs win 8 to 7 and poor Lefty looks awful awful sad at his old pals.

Real mellerdrammer, dat's wot it wuz!

Fulton Scores 77 On Par 72 Course

Scoring 77 on Fort Benning's par 72 golf course is no simple task, but Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of the post, tallied 77 on the course Sunday on one of the two monthly occasions he plays 18 holes.

Officers and enlisted men at Fort Benning are urged to engage in some form of athletics during free hours to keep in trim physical condition.

General Fulton, who is to be retired from the army by Oct. 1 due to his age, 64, is an ardent golfer, although he necessarily cannot play as much golf as he would like, due to his busy job.

Gators Smash Rifle Nine by 15-3 Count

Smarting from the defeat by the Eagles, the 124th Gators loosed all power and smashed the 3rd STR Rifles 15 to 3 Friday night at Harmony Church field.

The Gators racked up 15 hits off Bessinger and Tanner including 4 home runs by Vern Smith, Jake Powell, Ernie Ankrom and Ray Rogers.

BLACKWELL WINS

Ewell Blackwell starting for the Gators pitched 3 hit ball, but was forced to retire in the 5th. "Dubby" Wilder took over the mound duties and set the Rifles down with one single, by Elsie, for the rest of the game.

Gator Golfers Defeat Spirits In Close Match

124th Linksmen Top Opponents With Two 18th Hole Victories

BY CORP. ED FOGG

A smooth-swinging 124th Infantry golf team defeated the 176th Infantry, 15-12 last week at the Officers Club course.

The match was unusually close in scoring and point earning and was decided on the 18th hole in two of the matches. Major Terry B. Patterson and Cpl. Mike Bilowich won the 17th and 18th holes to whip Mr. Walter C. Lea and M. C. Kupsich 2 to 1, after halving seven straight holes. Patterson defeated Lea 2 1-2 to 1-2 in the individual match while Bilowich defeated Kupsich by the same count.

SPIRITS WIN

The Spirits three and four men, Woody Everett and H. E. Reed, gathered 8 1-2 to 1-2 points over Lt. Col. Earle M. Shine and Ralph Viggiano to put the 176th out in front 10 to 8 in the master total.

As the last foursome came up the 18th fairway, tension ran high as the four ball match was all even. The four men hit good third shots to the green and it was up to the putters.

35-FOOT PUTT

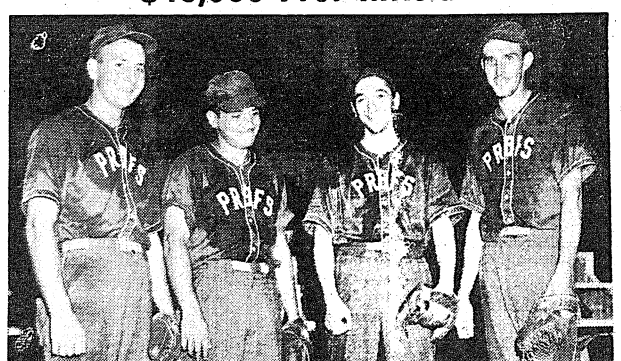
Joe Arrigo ran in a 35 foot putt to win the last nine and a point and a half for the 176th. The individual matches decided the affair as Jim Todd had already closed out Arrigo and won three points, Tony Joy won 2 1-2 to 1-2. Final result, 15 to 12 for the Gators.

Scoring was figured: 1 pt. each nine, 1 pt. 18 holes, four-ball and individual matches.

LaCour Pitches No-Hit, No-Run Game For Blues

Brilliant Hurler Blanks Panthers In League Tilt

Leon LaCour, a member of the Blues baseball team of the TIS Truck Regiment, (formerly the Provisional Truck Regiment), pitched a brilliant no-hit, no-run game on Wednesday, August 11th when the Panthers from the Third Student Training Regiment failed to solve the mystery in his pitching arm and lost 4-0.



Playing a Service League game on Tanker Field, in the Harmony Church area, before a crowd that cheered his every pitch, this slim right-hander cuffed such power hitters as the famed First-baseman Hank Blackburn and Shortstop Frankie Phillipson and registered an amazing number of strikeouts against some of the Service Battalion's best athletes.

DEFENSE GOOD

Backed up by the fine defensive play of his infielders, outfielders, and Catcher Smith, LaCour was never in trouble and had things his way all during the game. The big bats of his slugging team mates were very much in evidence as they fashioned an assortment of hits into four runs.

176th Boxers Clash At Stadium Next Tuesday

Semi-Finals of Spirit Ring Tourney Expected to Produce 12 Fast Bouts

BY CORP. MARV MATHRE

The 176th Infantry is going into ring warfare for the first time since its National Guard days back at Virginia Beach. Starting the boxing season with a Regimental Tournament on August 24th and 26th, the 176th boxers will continue in bouts against other teams. Twenty-eight erstwhile sluggers have entered the tourney, which opens in Doughboy Stadium next Tuesday at 8:45 p. m.

The men that will be competing all have a background of former Golden Glove and amateur competition. Although there are no big name professionals on the boxing roster, the training workouts up to this time show that in every weight the bouts will be closely contested.

26 ENTRIES

The 26 men that will enter the initial event have been undergoing a strenuous training schedule for the past month in preparation for this event.

Coach Hipp has not yet made the pairings in the various weight classes but there will be matches in all weights with the exception of the flyweight and the bantamweight. The two midgets in these classes, Seitz and Aguirre, will be matched in an exhibition during the final bouts. In all the other weight classes there will be several bouts.

WINNERS FORM TEAM

The winners of the tourney will constitute the 176th boxing team, which is scheduled to compete against the 200th Infantry on Friday, September 3rd. Boxing is relatively new to both regiments and the bouts that night should produce some colorful and hard fought rounds.

The 176th tournament will be held in the Doughboy Stadium ring with the initial bouts to begin at 8:45. On the semi-final night there will be about 12 bouts and eight on the final night.

Softball Ace Wanted Story in Bayonet So Naturally We Oblige

Varchminn Hurls Ten To Crucial Win Over Academic Profs, 6-1

By PFC. JOHNSTON C. WOODALL

With the league's leading moundsman, Earl Varchminn, pitching airtight ball, the Paratrooper softball ten took the measurements of the Profs Tuesday night at the Academic Regiment Field before the season's largest turnout. The final score was 6 to 1.

The scoreboard looked like a well filled fowll's nest with six big goose eggs until the hard-hitting Chutists came up in their side of the fourth to blast over four runs.

HOT TRIPLE

The Profs came back fighting in their side o fthe fourth and tallied as a result of Giaimo's screaming triple which sailed far over the left fielder's head. "Cappy" Capella was out on a fileder's choice with Tony G. coming in for the run.

Although the game was in the bag, the Chutists added two more runs in the fifth when three successive walks loaded the bags and Wasnick's double did the dirty work.

In the seventh inning, the Paratrooper ace hurler Varchminn had some slight difference of opinion with Umpire Bill Widman. Mr. Ump supposedly offered him the choice of three balls but Earl insisted that he would pitch none of them. Whereupon the umpire gave him a one-way trip to the sidelines.

HERE IT IS

However, Varchminn was well pleased with the outcome of the game as evidenced by a shouted suggestion to the Prof supporters at the end of the game to "Be sure to put this in the Bayonet!"

Utt and Wasnick starred at the stick each getting two hits in three times up for the Chutists. Lawrence, first bagger, looked good in the field and his triple put the Paratroopers on the way to victory.

HILL STARS

For the Profs, "Little Dynamite" Giaimo kept up his hitting streak by the tripl ealready mentioned. Hill played a fine game behind the plate. His attempt to catch a foul ball by dashing into the bleachers resulted in a knee bang-up. The kid took his injury with 100 per cent guts never opening his mouth. Hill also clipped a single.

Academic Regiment Field resembled the Polo Grounds from afar. The bleachers were packed full. Fans were on the sidelines. The second and third balconies of Academic Cuartel, resembling Polo Ground tiers, had their spectators. Briefly, they were everywhere. Approximately 400 to 500 viewed the contest.

RAINED OUT

Other than the big game Tuesday, there was little other action in the softball circuit this week. All other games that night were rained out. Last Thursday, however, the Spirits bumped the Gators to stay in the race, Lawson walloped the 283rd Q. M., the Paratroopers shut-out the Medicos, and the Profs ran roughshod over the 3rd STR, 22-6.

Tonight's card pits the 1st Academic against the 124th in Gatorland, the 3rd STR invades Lawson for a night tilt, the Medicos and Q. M.'s tangle on the 283rd Field, and the Profs invade the 176th for a crucial tilt. Next Tuesday Lawson plays at 124th, the Profs journey to the hospital, 283rd meets the Spirits, and the Paratroopers entertain the 3rd STR.

-- -- And Now

WAY BACK on March 31, 1925, Gowdy Field at Fort Benning was officially named in honor of Hank Gowdy, first major league ball-player to enlist in World War I. The occasion took place during an exhibition game here between the World Champion Washington Senators and the N. Y. Giants. Gowdy, then a catcher for the Giants, is shown above at left receiving congratulations from General Briant H. Wells, then commandant of The Infantry School. This week, Gowdy, who returned to the Army as a captain early this year, was promotetd to major and above at right he is shown receiving congratulations from Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, TIS commandant. On the wall between them hangs a portrait of General Wells to remind Major Gowdy of the other incident more than 18 years ago. (Signal Lab photo by Sgt. Don Kortemeier.)

Captain Gowdy Gets Majority

TIS Special Service Officer Is Promoted

Harry "Hank" Gowdy, one-time major league ball player and coach, has been promoted from captain to the rank of major it was announced at The Infantry School last week where he is serving as Special Service Officer. The promotion came while Major Gowdy was on leave in his home of Columbus, Ohio.

FIRST TO ENLIST

Major Gowdy was the first major leaguer to enlist in World War 1. He served overseas and returned with the rating of sergeant. Prior to World War I, he had played professional baseball for nine years and was a member of George Stalling's Miracle Boston Braves who came from the cellar to win the National League pennant in 1914.

Gowdy was a catcher and was behind the plate for the four games which the Braves swept from the Athletics in one of baseball's most stunning upsets.

NAMED CAPTAIN

After the war he returned to baseball as a player and then turned coach. He was assistant to Bill McKechnie, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, when he was appointed captain in January of this year and assigned to The Infantry School.

Gowdy Field was named after Hank when it was dedicated in 1925. He insisted that it should have been named for Captain Eddie Grant, a great pitcher, who was killed in the last war. But Army authorities wanted the field named for an enlisted man and Gowdy was the choice.

Table Tennis Stars Continue Post Tour

Doug Cartland and Harry Cook, two of the country's leading exponents of table tennis, continue their schedule of exhibition matches here at Fort Benning tonight and tomorrow night.

Sponsored by the post's Special Service Office, Cartland, recognized as the Southern States Champ, and Harry Cook, winner of Canada's crown, have already given four exhibitions presenting a very entertaining program which lasts for about one hour.

OFFER BOND

Each night both Cartland and Cook have challenged G. I.'s in the audience to compete with them and they offer to any serviceman who can defeat them in a two-out-of-three game match a $25.00 War Bond. To date the competition has not been very keen and they have won every game by a wide margin.

Tonight Cartland and Cook will appear at Service Club Number 3 in Harmony Church and the hostess there promises to have some players on hand who should put up a stiff battle.

They will make their final appearance tomorrow evening at Service Club Number 5, also in Harmony Church.

Spirit-300th Ring Battle Scheduled For September 3

The Fort Benning Athletic Association announced this week that the long-awaited ring battle between the 176th Infantry and the 300th Infantry has been scheduled for Friday night, September 3 in the squared circle at Doughboy Stadium.

Both regiments have likely-looking boxing squads that have been preparing for the match for several weeks. The 300th team is a revival of the one that fought a few bouts on the post last winter, while the Spirit ring team has just recently been organized. The 176th, however, will prep for the 300th battle with regimental show slated for next week.

Reception Nine Now Leads Fast Service League

Win Over Red Sox Places Orphans In 1st Place

Snooky Welmaker pitched the Reception Center Orphans into first place in the hot Service League race last Saturday at Gowdy Field when his southpaw slants downed the 1st STR Red Sox, 4-2, in an exciting game..

It was the first loop defeat for the Sox who swept to the first-half title without dropping a decision. Welmaker was supreme on the mound and won a hurling duel from Lefty Romby, southpaw ace of the 1st STR nine. Both pitchers gave up ten hits, but Welmaker was accorded errorless support by the Orphans.

FIELD HITS

The Receptionists won the game in the fifth frame when Fields drove out a base hit with the sacks loaded to score a pair of tallies. Frazier's pinch hit in the eighth added another tally just for good measure.

The Red Sox retaliated on Tuesday night after a week-end slump to hand the usually strong Headquarters Detachment Tigers a 10-0 pasting at Gowdy Field. This win moved Capt. Joe O'Connor's club back into second place and broke the deadlock they had been enduring with the Truck Regiment Reds.

TIE AGAIN

The Reds and Red Sox, incidentally, battled to a nine-inning 7-7 tie on Monday night at Medico Field. This was a play-off of an earlier tie game, but it looks like it will take a third tilt to finally decide the victor in their bitter feul. The Reds-Reception Center game on Tuesday, which looked like a crucial one, was rained out, and will also have to be played later.

Other events of the week in the Service League saw the revived Academic Pacesetters wallop the Medicas, 19-3; the PTR Reds bump Headquarters Detachment by a 5-4 count; and the Truck Regiment Blues whitewash the 3rd STR Panthers, 4-0, behind Leon LaCour's no-hit pitching.

FOUR GAMES

Four games are on tap for the next week with the Panthers and Medicas clashing tonight at Tanker Field in Harmony Church, and the Blues facing the Reception Center at Gowdy Field on Saturday at 7 o'clock. Next week, the Medicas entertain the Hq. Tigers at Medico Field on Monday night, and the Truck Regiment Reds oppose the Pacesetters at Tanker Field on Tuesday evening.

Prasse Of Profs May Not Like Baseball But His Record Disagrees

Versatile Ace Prefers Basketball Yet Boasts .367 Batting Average

BY PFC. JOHNSTON C. WOODALL

We might have another Pie Traynor or a Red Rolfe at Benning if this guy Lt. Erwin T. (T-for-Theodore) Prasse, Prof hot sacker, really liked baseball! As it is, he's close to pacing the TIS league with a sweet batting average of .362 and the pitching he encounters is nearly double A. As for homers, he's sharing the honors, having clouted out three lusty over-the-fencers.

SOME RECORD

His record as a Prof runs like this for 26 games: six doubles, four triples, six to seven bases, 26 runs batted in, 25 personal scores, and a total of 29 hits.

Through it all he claims basketball is his true game and really likes it as much as a G. I. likes a pin-up girl. The lieutenant is a former professional basketeer on the world's champion Oshkosh outfit, and is a footballer of national repute—a former all-American end at the University of Iowa. Even a timid soul would have to admit that Prasse is well atheletically inclined.

WENT WEST

Prasse was born in Chicago, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Prasse. in his teen age, he took Horace Greeley's advice and went west to the University of Iowa for his education. This happened in '26.

There, he was a member of the "Iron Men eleven,' the famous 14-man-total Hawkeye team which tripped Notre Dame 7-6, Indiana 31-29, the Minnesota Gophers and lost only to the Michigan Wolverines with Tommy Harmon at the helm. Iowa ended in second place in the Big Ten, one of the nation's tougher loops.

THREE SCORES

In the 31-29 Indiana triumph, Prasse caught three touchdown passes from Nile Kinnick. He lost 18 pounds in this game in weather that he describes "as hot as yesterday."

Nile Kinnick and Erwin Urasse both made all-American, Kinnick at the half back slot and Prasse at end.

KINNICK TOPS

"Kinnicks was tops," asserted the lieutenant when asked who was the best back that he's ever seen.

"George Frank of Minnesota, Harry Stephenson of Notre Dame and Tommy Harmon of Michigan were outstanding backs," he contined "but they couldn't quite match Kinnick."

"He had a fine fighting spirit and could run, pass, or punt and was as smart as they made them —bein, a Phi Beta Kappa,' he added.

Not satisfied with football alone, Prasse played on two Big Ten baseball championship Iowa teams, covering second base and hiting about .340 for three years' play.

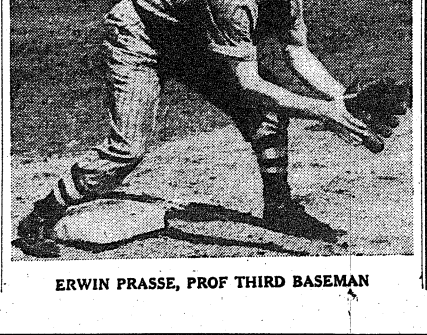
STAR COURTMAN

And in basketball, Prassed starred in three years in a row at Iowa U. at guard.

"Sidat-Singh of Syracuse U. was the best ittle man that I ever played basketball against," he opined.

"The three best basketball shots that I encountered were 'Chuck' Chuckovits of Toledo, Johnny Townsend of Michigan and Benny Stevens of my own team.".

WORLD CHAMPS



After college, he joined the Oshkosh club, which went on to win the National Pro-League title two years were runners-up in the 1940 world's championship meet at Chicago (losing this game by two points in the last 30 seconds), and copping the world's title the next year at Chicago. Prassed starred for the World's champs at the guard position.

Next, he entered the service at Camp Swift, Texas, and was then transferred to Sam Houston at San Antonio. He came to Benning for O.C.S., graduating May 12 this year. He was then assigned to the Academic Regiment.

Prasse married the girl "I grew up with" from his home town, and grins proudly when his red-headed son is mentioned.

If he takes after Pop, we say, he'll be an outstanding athlete.

But Pops allows that the young one "will probably pick up a book."

ERWIN PRASSE, PROF THIRD BASEMAN

Major—

he is looked up to and respected by the men of his command.

ARMY BOYHOOD

The story of Brig. Gen. John B. Thompson, commanding Combat team "B" is "like father, like son" for he spent his boyhood on Army posts. Like General Murphy he too has been here before. He served as an instructor in the Infantry School in 1929. Gen. Thompson is also a West Pointer, having graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1914.

He was assigned to the 14th Infantry but was transferred to the 1st U. S. Cavalry in 1915 with which he saw action on the Mexican border. Today that outfit is the First Armored Regiment. During the last war he saw service with the 9th Infantry.

READY FOR COMBAT

These, then, are the top three commanders of the "Lucky 7th," all men with a wealth of experience and the will and ability to put it to use. They have been tested and proven in training and are now ready for combat.

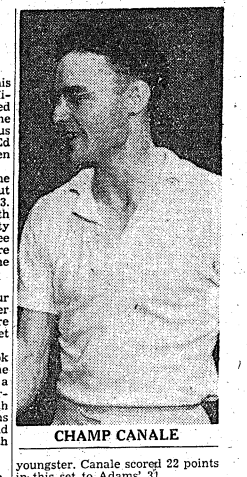
3rd STR Officer Wins Columbus Net Crown

Dan Canale Adds Another Title To His Victory String

Dan Canale, 3rd STR tennis star, who recently won the officer's singles title at the post added another crown on Sunday at the Lake Bottom courts in Columbus when he licked 16-year-old Ed Adams to capture the city open laurels.

The Benning officer gained the crown by triumphing in three out of four sets, 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, and 6-3. Canale had previously won both Indiana state and Memphis city titles besides having played three years of varsity tennis at Notre Dame where he captained the Irish in his senior year.



WINS FIRST SET

Canale, who lost only four matches in his collegiate career at Notre Dame (two of these were to Greenberg), took the first set in nine games, 6-3.

In the second set, Canale took the first two games, dropped the following two, and then with a three game rally, taking his service in the fifth and seventh games, ran up a 5-2 lead. Adams held his service in the eighth and Canale did the same in the ninth for a 6-3 win.

ADAMS ON TOP

The third set was Adams' practically all the way. Adams opened winning his service in the first and third games and in the sec? ond he broke through Canale to build up a 3-0 advantage. Canale won his fourth game service but lost his sixth and eighth games to give the set to the Columbus youngster. Canale scored 22 points in this set to Adams' 31.

CHAMP CANALE

Adams opened the fourth set by holding his service but then Canale opened with a strong rally that netted him the following five games. Adams took the seventh and eighth games but lost his service in the ninth to give the match to Canale.

50 Candidates Turn Out For Spirit Grid Eleven

Fifty candidates reported to Coaches Pollock and Thomas for the initial 176th football workouts on Monday night. They were put through a series of calisthenics and exercises in preparation for the weeks of hard practice ahead.

More men are expected out during the week. Workouts are being held every evening this week and next week there will be workouts both in the morning and the afternoon at Doughboy Stadium.

40-MAN SQUAD

Within two weeks the squad will be cut down to forty men. As the 176th has never had a football team prior to this time the possibilities of a strong team are more or less unknown. However the two coaches are preparing to form a hard fighting and smooth working eleven.

The line material looks very promising with many ex-college gridders trying out for those positions. As yet quality of the back field material is not known but several backs reporting looked good in the first practice.

Danny Murtaugh, Philly second baseman, was inducted into the Army last week. Next week he reports at Ft. Meade, Md, for his basic training.

AMONG THE LARGEST CLASS OF PARATROOPERS ever to graduate from the Fort Benning Parachute School were a number of soldiers still in their 'teens. Shown in this picture are two of them receiving parachute silver wings from Lieut. Col. James Coutts, on the right, assistant commandant of the school. They are Pvt. James E. Henderson, 19, of Atlanta, on the left, and Pvt. Gerald Nelson, 18, of Memphis, Tenn. On the right is a candid shot of the paratroopers, taken soon after they jumped from the large transport plane. Reception—of his race, Sgt. Graham has taken an active interest in all conference and regional meetings for the betterment of his race. Today we find him, after ten months spent in the Army, giving of his time, talent, and experience to helping those less fortunate than he in knowledge and opportunity.

Fourteen hundred and fifty men are indirectly looking to Sgt. Graham for the leadership that will enable them to prepare themselves for basic military training and educational opportunities.

But, this training is not purely academic. While reading, expression and writing are required subjects the soldier unconsciously learns the parts of his uniform, the equipment he need to be a soldier, the necessary information from the Soldiers Hand Book, interspersed with subtraction, division, and the multiplication tables. He is taught multiplication and subtraction by using his pay as the basis.

His insurance, allotments, and laundry are totaled and subtracted from this basic pay, showing him just how much money he will have left each month for those cigarettes, candy, and the movies. Handling money is of vital importance to the soldier or he will be cheated out of what he has earned. To many of these men, their Army pay is their first experience with a large sum of money and responsibility for its handling is of fundamental importance. Thus their knowledge of simple rules in arithmetic has a two-fold result: protection of what belongs to one—and how to enter into business transactions.

In much the same way is reading, expression, and writing taught to him. He writes letters and cards to his family and friends. He learns to enumerate the different articles of his uniform, how to spell them, what part of his body they go on and what is expected of them, how they must be cared for, his responsibility for them as they are his property and how they will serve him in time of battle.

After two weeks in class, Pvt. Levie Holman, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Holman, of Dawson, Ga., recited "My General Orders" word perfect. He was checked for pronunciation of words and accuracy. This is just an example of what these soldiers are learning from teachers who have the ability to impart their knowledge to pupils who are wide-awake and hungry to learn.

The daily training period is divided into two parts. One half for academic instruction and one-half for military. The military half includes lectures on sanitation, personal hygiene, first aid, the Articles of War and military courtesy. Many hours of heart-to-heart talks are given these men by company commanders who realize the many sides to a soldier's training. They are taught properly how to salute, in a quick "one - two!"

The work of actual military drilling is taken over to a great extent by the non-commissioned officers of the regiments. The soldier is taught to understand orders, the into obey them. They "mark time," "about face," "left face," and always the order followered by the command "humph," or at least something that sounds like that. But long hours of drilling back and forth across the drill field with commands given in rapid fire order bring the soldier to the highest degree of efficiency in executing commands.

SO IT GOES

So the training goes on, day after day, week after week, until the soldier is ready for that first all-important hike—2 1-2 miles.

Record 'Chutist Class Wins Wings

Weekly Graduates Swell Troop Ranks

Qualified paratroopers — many in their 'teens and from all sections of the United States — received their silver wings Saturday as the largest graduating class in the history of the Parachute school at Fort Benning completed its course.

The success of the airborne units in Africa and Sicily has led to expansion of army parachute troops and other airborne units, army authorities reported.

WEAR JUMP BOOTS

Qualified jumpers are graduated weekly from the school's rigorous one-month course. Upon graduation the paratrooper win their coveted wings and the right to wear the famed 10-inch jump boots.

Parachute training began at Fort Benning in 1940. On May 15, 1942, the Parachute school was activated and commanded by Brig. Gen. George P. Howell. Since that time General Howell has been succeeded by Col. Ridgely Gaither.

ALL VOLUNTEERS

All candidates for paratroop training in the army are volunteers. Many have had previous infantry and artillery training. Upon graduation, some paratroopers are assigned to tactical parachute regiments while others may be assigned to pursue technical courses at the Parachute school.

Five jumps are required to qualify as a parachutist with the allotted extra pay. After graduation selected groups are held over for additional training in one of the school's specialist divisions in which they may become parachute demolitionists, communications men, riggers or camouflagers. These courses run from one to ten weeks.

Wine Glasses Scarce, Jewish Weddings To Use Old Photo Bulbs for Symbolism

Jewish bridegrooms of Fort Benning will hereafter stamp on used photographic bulbs instead of the traditional wine glass, Chaplain Samson Shain has announced.

This picturesque feature of the Jewish marriage ceremony serves as remainder to the bridal couple that a trivial act can result in the shattering of marital happiness beyond mending and has thus far been practiced in the marriage rites of Jewish military personnel at Fort Benning.

The current shortage of non-essential goods has made wine glasses difficult to procure and costly when they are available, so Chaplain Shain cast about for a substitute which would at once be less extravagant and equally well serve the cause of symbolism. He presently hit upon the expended flash bulb which, once used, is discarded except for the metal base.

Now, through an arrangement with Fort Benning's branch of the Army Signal Corps, the chaplain receives an adequate supply of the burnt out bulbs which receive a new though brief lease of life in a spiritual cause.

CAPTAIN BROWN

It's now Capt. David O. Brown, Secretary, the Reproduction Plant of The Infantry School. Less than a year ago, he was a master sergeant, a rating which climaxed 14 years of Army service, most of which has been in Army reproduction work. He was commissioned a first lieutenant in October of last year and his promotion to captain has just been announced. Capt. Brown entered service in 1928 as a private in Co. F of the 29th Infantry. The following year, he was transferred to the Infantry School Detachment and assigned to duty with the Army Field Printing Plant.

Cosmopolitan Company Likes Its G.I. Chow

The 12th Company, with its group of internationalists, is setting the pace for food conservation in the 1st S.T.R., commanded by Col. John S. Roosma. This company has a conglomeration of all races and nationalities—Frenchmen, Japs, Chinese, Filipions, Hawaiians, Russians, Poles, Germans, and Greeks, all of whom have participated in many theaters of war and who have proven themselves loyal to the Allied cause. Of this group, the French Nationalists form the greatest percentage.

Epicurean as the French are known to be, these Frenchmen eat healthy G. I. chow and don't complain. Chinese may like rice, Japs—fish, Hawaiians—poi, Russians—caviar, but these American-minded internationalists are very well satisfied with our Army's wholesome and excellently-prepared food. In fact, one of the officers of Chinese extraction was said to have refused a helping of rice.

The 12th Company, commanded by Capt. P. R. Reid, is making a concentrated effort to reduce food wastage. Although serving family style means more work and less service for the officers, they are all willing to sacrifice this in doing their part for the food conservation program. Over each table in the mess hall is placed a sign with a warning and instructions on how to conserve food by helping yourself to portions within your appetite. Soup and dessert are served only upon request to the table-waiters. In addition to that, the officers are constantly reminded of the exigency of food conservation through the announcements and careful supervision of Mess Officer Lt. Mazur who is present at all meals and sees that the mess is run smoothly and that no one takes more than he can eat.

'Yank' Staff Member Seeks Post Material

Frano 'Shoots' Fort Scenes, Pets, And Personalities

Technician Fourth Grade John Frano, a staff photographer for YANK Magazine, all-service publication with editorial offices in New York City, spent two days this week taking pictures of Fort Benning and post personnel for use in YANK's future editions.

Among the shots taken by the photographer were pictures of Sgt. Louis Lipp, ration board clerk at the Provost Marshal's office; the Japanese and Chinese officer in the 12th Company of the First Student Training Regiment; a scene of the 300th Infantry on the range; the alligators, sign post and wishing well of the 124th Infantry; a camouflage job done on a paratrooper's face; Fort Benning's famed Chattahoochee choo-choo; the bookmobile operated by Service Club No. 5, and First Sergeant Percy Hopkins, who is also mayor of Baker Village and Benning Park.

Most of the pictures taken will eventually appear in Yank, according to Sergeant Frano, although probably not as a group. He explained that alligator pictures probably would be held until the magazine did a feature on Army pets; while such pictures as the one on the bookmobile probably would be used in a series on Army Service clubs or libraries.

Sergeant Frano, who was in the Signal Corps Photographic Laboratory at Fort McPherson in Atlanta before going with YANK, was a photographer on the Miami Herald and the New York Times before joining the Army.

Student Officers Get Promotions

When the members of 10th Company, First Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, return to their home stations on completion of the course, many will carry with them a higher rank than that with which they left in May.

Captains who were wearing a single silver bar when they reported here in May include: Francisco A. Delgado, Ponce, Puerto Rico; Nathaniel N. Wentworth, Canton, Mass.; Charles J. Traylor, Biloxi, Miss.; Robert H. Selltitz, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Angel H. Ruiz, Vega Baja, Puerto Rico; Donald C. Dammast, Nebraska City, Nebr. and Albert P. King, Columbia, S. C. Lieutenants Robert J. Pleasants, Cary, N. C.; Steve Graban, Campbell, Ohio; and Charles J. Garrison, Cadosia, N. Y. have exchanged their gold bars for the silver bars of first lieutenants.

Legion Awaits Conflict's End To Recruit Vets Of Present War

American Legion posts throughout the country are holding in abeyance, thousands of applications to join the Legion from members of the present armed forces, according to word received at Fort Benning. The national charter was amended last year so as to prevent any recruiting of Legion membership among men while in the service. Recognizing that this would keep large numbers of men out of The American Legion until the end of hostilities, the national convention at Kansas City nevertheless deliberately asked Congress to word the amendment admitting World War II veterans to membership in such a manner that no recruiting could take place for the duration. The Legion membership decided that men in training at home and in combat areas overseas ought to concentrate on winning the war, and take up veterans' matters only when they have completed their war service.

ELIGIBILITY FIXED

Since The American Legion is chartered by act of Congress, the eligibility of requirements for membership are a matter of law. When the news went around that the Legion would be open to membership by World War II veterans, large numbers of men applied for membership at once. The actual amendment to the charter, however, was drawn to provide that men of the World War II forces would become eligible to Legion membership only when honorably discharged, or after the termination of hostilities. Hence the applications which have gone to the Legion posts can only be held as pending until the applicant is legally eligible. A substantial number of men who have received honorable discharges have joined The American Legion, but no others thus far. Since about 70 per cent of the membership of the Sons of The American Legion is now in active service, and practically every individual who was in the SAL wants to be a Legion member, that group alone makes a substantial waiting list for membership.

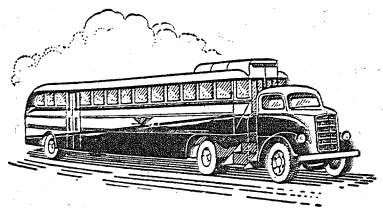
COMMANDER WARING'S STATEMENT

"The American Legion is a civilian organization," explains National Commander Roane Waring. "Of course, it works very closely with the armed forces, and always has been the leading spokesman for a strong national defense, but it has spoken as a citizen-veteran group, not a military group. It is composed primarily of ex-service men. We would regard it as a serious mistake to undertake to recruit men to Legion membership while they have this war to win. When it is won, the men who have won it become the natural and ultimate heirs to all that The American Legion is and has, its devotion to God and country, its service to community, state and nation, its potency for preserving American rights and liberties at home, and its material wealth in community homes and clubs, reserve and endowment funds.

"We recognize that in numbers there is strength and look forward to a very large membership after the war is won. The veterans of this war will greatly outnumber those of the last war, and I presume they will really take over the Legion when their membership becomes preponderant, which is as it should be. While they are fighting a war, they should not be diverted for one moment to the tasks which will later be theirs as veterans of America's victorious armed forces. With that fact in mind the Legion asked Congress to keep the eligibility to Legion membership on a veteran's basis solely.

SUPPLY PROMOTIONS

Six enlisted men of Supply Detachment, Supply Division, Section Two, Fourth Service Command, Fort Benning, have been promoted upon the recommendation of their organization commander. They are: Corporal Lewis Harris, to sergeant; Private First Class Pernell Dukes, to corporal, and Private First Class George L. Harrison, to technician fifth grade, and Privates Buford T. Jones, James Thompson and Albert L. Phillips to privates first class.



The American Theater Ribbon may be worn for any service in the Western Hemisphere outside of the United States. This includes Panama. Assignment to such duty is a necessary condition. Merely passing through on a visit doesn't count.

V-Mail Expert Assigned Local Army Post Office

Lt. Hartman Helped Train Postal Service Personnel In Processing

One of the Army experts who helped iron the early "bugs" out of the V-mail processing and plans, now is assigned to the Fort Benning Army Post Office, and today urged increased use of thetime-saving and improved V-mail in writing to soldiers overseas.

LT. HARTMAN

He is Lt. Melvin G. Hartman, who was given the original assignment as liaison officer between the Post Office and the Eastman Kodak people because he was not only a postal expert but had made a hobby of becoming an expert photographer and home movie fan. He had served for many years as postmaster at Martinsburg, Pa., before being called into the service.

Working with the Eastman experts, Lt. Hartman helped get the first V-mail started, and also helped train the first of hundreds of Army, Navy and Coast Guard experts in processing the V-mail.

"Most people still do not understand the use of V-mail and its superiority over old fashioned methods," he said. "Many believe that sending regular air-mail letters to their boys overseas is the fastest method, but actually that is not true for many reasons. In the first place, much air-mail for Europe must travel a large part of the way by boat. Some cannot even be taken on planes at all. But V-mail always travels by plane, thus arriving much quicker. And you don't need to put air-mail postage on V-mail.

PRIVATE MAIL

"A correspondent may write as many V-mail pages as he desires. Just number them, but be sure to address them separately.

"Some people think that V-mail letters aren't private— but every letter leaving the country in wartime is opened and read by the censor, so the V-mail is just as private as any other kind. Further, it is the safest of all wartime communications, because the original letters are retained on file so that if the V-mail should be lost, these letters can be re-photographed and sent out again.

"V-mail is an adaptation of Kodak's Recordak System, which has revolutionized the recording methods of thousands of banks and business houses. It was our job at first to help adapt this system to use for mailing purposes. Of course there were 'bugs' to be ironed out, but it did not take those expert Eastman scientists long to do that.

"This is the way it works now. A letter is written on a sheet of paper—regular letter size. This is photographed on microfilm, about a quarter of an inch square. Now it weighs only a hundredth of the normal letter. A ton of ordinary mail will weigh only 20 pounds when reduced to microfilm. Thus you may see clearly how much cargo-space can be saved if you use V-mail.

"The film is then flown across and then the film is 'blown up' to readable size, folded, sealed in an envelope, and forwarded on. It is as clear as the original writing. And if any thing happens, the process is repeated.

17,000 ON ROLL

On a single roll of 16 millimeter film, 1,700 letters can be photographed, at the rate of 40 to 50 a minute. At the other end, these tiny images are enlarged on a roll of continious photographic paper and processed at the rate of 1,200 an hour. Then the letters are separated and forwarded. In our work at Eastman laboratories, we often had mail delivered from England in five days, and even from Australia in seven. That's under ideal conditions, of course."

Today, according to word sent out by the Postal department, most failures in delivering mail to men overseas comes because of improper addressing. The Post Office stressed that every letter should bear full name and rank, army serial number, unit or service organization, and the Army Postoffice number.

V letters to men overseas should be written on V-mail blanks, which may be obtained free at postoffices, Lt. Hartmann stated. They may also be purchased in blocks at stationery and drug stores. It is no more trouble to send letters V-mail than other ways. Just write them, address properly, stamp properly and drop in a mail box.

"When typing, use the double-space, and when writing long-hand, write as large as possible, and of course as legibly as possible," he emphasized. "The forms have enough space for about 200 words. Use a three-cent stamp. Just treat it as ordinary mail—the Post Office and the camera experts will do the rest."

Sacrifice—

wasn't anything to worry about for a few months yet. Besides, the work wasn't strenuous. But today she had noticed a card in the pack that was handed her. It would have been routine except for the fact that it concerned Joe. Joe had been hurt. She had studied the card and then understood.

When two people love each other there is no sacrifice too great. There is no fear too great to overcome. Joe was scared of high places. Em wasn't the only one who sacrificed. Joe had been changing his clothes on the way to and from the post. The kids had their arms around each other. "Go ahead and look in the paper bag," Joe said.

"So a crate fell on your foot, Joe? Packing case, hell," I said as the contents of the paper-bag emptied on the floor. A pair of boots, an overseas cap . . . and a paratrooper's wings. I guess they didn't hear what I said when I spoke. They were locked in each other's arms and kissing like a couple of high school kids.

Shadows are the scout's good friend. However, they move with the sun. You move with them.

Reception Center Dispensary Chief Delivers 88,000 Lectures

Facilities on Hand To Care for Thousands Of Colored Inductees

Eighty-eight thousand lectures to enlisted men since coming to the Colored Reception Center in January, 1942, is only part of the remarkable record established by Lt. Col. William C. Kennedy, commanding officer of the Dispensary.

From a small unit established with facilities for handling some hundreds of men weekly to the large unit of today, equipped and staffed to handle thousands weekly is just a part of the story of this dispensary and the job it is doing of bringing health to these colored soldiers from Georga, Alabama and Tennessee.

The chief objective of this medical unit is the general physical condition of the soldier. Daily sick calls bring in patients with a range of ailments fro... a headache to neuropsychiatric cases. Uncomplicated cases are handled in the dispensary while the more complicated ones are transferred to the Station Hospital for treatment.

The dispensary is responsible for twenty-four hour service maintained for emergency cases; for medical attendants at parades; and hikes; and general troop activities.

Colonel Kennedy has given 88,000 lectures on personal hygiene, to soldiers passing through the center on care of the teeth, daily baths, attention to their clothes. Care of the feet is another important detail stressed in these lectures. A soldier must depend on his feet for his transportation —they must have the best care and his shoes must fit him perfectly, be kept in good repair, and frequently polished.

In giving these lectures, Colonel Kennedy stresses that the day is divided into three parts, one for work, one for play, and one for sleep. Sleep is one of the most important parts of the day as the soldier cannot take his share of the responsibility with other soldiers if he is not properly rested.

SANITATION INSPECTED

Sanitary inspection of the area facilities and mess hall inspection is also the duty of this unit, as are lectures on personal hygiene. An effort is made to educate each individual soldier orally during these lectures as well as through posters and pamphlets.

An additional general medical service rendered by this unit is the precaution against the spread of contagious diseases among selectees and also among those transferred to other branches of the service. A physical inspection is made and isolation enforced if a soldier is found with any communicable disease.

All members of the armed force are inoculated for typhoid, small pox and the deadly tetanus. Since the opening of the Reception Center in 1941, the dispensary has given approximately 300,000 typhoid shots in addition to 110,000 smallpox vaccinations.

With the discovery of the sulpha drugs, and arsenic compounds plus the application of newly-found methods of treatment, the Army is able to induct thousands of men fit for service who would have been otherwise rejected because of venereal diseases and the difficulty in treating them.

Instead of lengthy periods of hospitalization as was necessary formerly, the soldier may be treated on duty without any serious interruption of his training schedule or forfeiture of his pay. When the infected selectee enters the Reception Center for active duty he is first allowed to complete processing and orientation activities which may take from one to three days, then he is entered into the venereal disease clinic for treatment.

In a case of uncomplicated gonorrhea, the soldier is first interviewed for his sources of contact, his clinical records are completed and he is given a blood test for possible signs of latent syphillis. Over a period of five days he is given 20 grams of sulfathiazole, 4 grams a day. If all symptoms are not cleared at the end of the first period a second course of 10 grams is administered for five additional days. More than 7,000 cases have been handled through the dispensary venereal clinic since the initiation of this process in September, 1942; 4,077 cases were treated from January 1 through June 30, 1942. These patients spent on the average of 6.76 days under treatment.

CLEARING STATION

In addition to treating patients stationed in this area, the Reception Center Dispensary serves as a clearing station and distribution point for syphillis registers opened on selectees prior to induction. It is the duty of, this organization to complete clinical records of selectees which could not be done before dates of active service and to enter final records into the registers.

After the selectee has completed his processing and is transferred to a training center, his record is transmitted with him together with whatever information is necessary for completing his treatment. One thousand registers have been shipped with soldiers to numerous camps throughout the nation in the four month period between April and July.

The dispensary is in two units. One, Dispensary No. 1, is the point of processing, innoculation and general medical service. Dispensary No. 2, the venereal discase clinic.

Colonel Kennedy's staff includes: Maj. Dennis L. Halisey, executive officer; Maj. Isreal P. Neramaki, head of the venereal disease clinic; 1st Lt. H. N. Horne, Jr., 1st Lt. Louis C. Tonken and 2nd Lieut. James C. Watkins, administrative. It is their responsibility that the colored soldiers who pass through the Reception Center get the best medical aid the Army offers.

This Khaki'd World

By PVT. G. HOWIE GRIPE

Story last week in Bayonet told about death of Skippy, the wire-laying dog of the 300th Infantry. The regiment now is looking for another dog for a mascot, that might be trained along the same lines. Wire-haired terriers preferred, doubtless?

* * *

Certain sergeant at Post H. Q. was much discomfitted last week. Seems he figured on making a trip to Atlanta, and had been saving his "A" gas coupons for several weeks. Thinking it rather silly to go all the way up and back with an empty car, he inserted an ad in the Daily Bulletin. But eagle eyed Maj. W. D. Veal, provost marshal, called him to remind him "A" coupons weren't to be used for "pleasure travel." Very red-faced, the non-com called off his trip.

* * *

A loud-mouthed sgt. over in a Parachute Regt. is liable to be hurting if he isn't very keerful. He was telling all over Columbus recently that the Commander-in-Chief was due in at the Post on a certain date for ceremonies at which a lot of enlisted men (himself included) were to be presented with bars. To date the non-com still is just that.

* * *

Come on, come on, youse guys (and WACS) give!

We can't put out a colyum like this all alone and single handed. We just can't get around to all the outfits on the post and get all the dope on what's going on. Send along the little personality stories and stuff and nonsense from your outfit. Just address it "This Khaki'd World, the Bayonet, Post Public Relations Office." Put it through your own message center.

* * *

Wedding is imminent in ranks of the WACS at Lawson Field, with a sergeant at the field headquarters slated to take the fatal step. Fairly fast work, gals.

* * *

Jeepers, seems like all our items this week concern sergeants. Are they the only people on the whole Post doing anything interesting these days?

* * *

May be sticking our necks out—but still think the new publication "Shavetail" is snappiest looking of all regimental papers.

* * *

GRIPE OF THE WEEK:— Seems to us that the G. I's are getting awfully lax about "cinching" at tables lately. Asked for the milk yesterday morning and a corporal calmly poured remains of the cow-juice into his coffee and passed the empty pitcher down with the calm remark: "There ain't mucht left, is there." Of course we couldn't tell him what we thought—after all, rank is rank. In this case, pretty durned rank, too.

* * *

Or maybe it isn't the heat but the timidity.

* * *

Boys in Parachute Training School are claiming some sort of mascot record. They've two foxes and a racoon, captured while young and now being successfully raised in captivity; dog that's just had half a dozen pups—and now to top it off a pair of sparrows that have become so smart they won't forage any more—they insist on eating the mess hall crumbs.

* * *

And speaking of mascots, the 176th Infantry wants three white American bull dogs. Anybody having such a breed is asked to contact Capt. Brown, Ft. Benning 3232.

STAMP CLUB

Canada has increased its postal rates, and, accordingly, has issued some new stamps. There is now a four-cent stamp of similar design to the former two center, for first class mail. Also issued are the seven-cent airmail, and the seventeen-cent airmail special delivery. We hear, also, that the postal rates in Newfoundland have been boosted, but so far there are not many details available.

* * *

Along with the rising cost of living, stamps are also consistently rising in price, and in some cases are skyrocketing. It makes us wonder whether we should shell out immediately for that coveted set of stamps before the cost goes any higher, or to wait until after the war in the hope that prices will drop. And therein lies a question: will the price of stamps, on the average, drop after the war, or will they remain constant? We have encountered many differences of opinion on this topic, but it is still our belief that the present wartime prices on stamps are sure to drop, as they will on everything else.

The Fort Benning Stamp Club is planning to have a small exhibit of stamps in Library No. 1, (Service Club, No. 1, Main Post.) The stamps will be changed frequently to avoid monotony, and we will try to concentrate on stamps of current interest, so when you happen by the Library, drop in and gaze with awe—.

August 25th is the time set for the next meeting of the Club, so make it a point to be there. The place: Library No. 1; the time: 8:15 p. m.

Four Homan Brothers Serve in Armed Forces

BY PVT. WALTER MILLER
Academic Regiment

Capt. Robert W. Homan, who has just left his post as commanding officer of H Company, Academic Regiment, to attend the Advanced Course of The Infantry School, is one of four Brothers Homan of Napoleon, O., to be serving in this war.

The family boasts a private in Kansas with the cavalry, a Pfc. in California with the Air Corps, and two captains, one in the Infantry somewhere in the South Pacific, the other at TIS at Benning.

"My oldest brother, Capt. Lawrence Homan," says Capt. Robert Homan, "was commissioned in the Ohio National Guard in 1938, when he was 22, and he served as adjutant of the battalion in which I was a buck sergeant. He went through the Wisconsin maneuvers in '40 and the Louisiana maneuvers in '41. We didn't meet again until we both came to Benning early in '42, he to take the officers' basic course and I to go through OCS. He's off somewhere in the South Pacific now, and his letters are of course very vague about places and events.

"My next brother—Ralph, third in the family—is only 20, and he was a mechanic at Hamilton Field, Cal., when I last heard from him. Richard, the boy of the family, is 18. When my mother refused to let him join the Navy, he waited for the draft last April, and now he's in the CRTC at Fort Riley, Kas."

Capt Robert Homan is only 22 himself, and has been on active duty for three years, having entered the army with three stripes via the Ohio Guard. When he was commissioned here in June 1942, he came to the Academic Regiment as junior officer of "B" Company and later of "A" Company, after which he served as regimental mess officer.

When he left the Academic Regiment last Sunday, he was commanding officer of "H" Company, but to the men of the regiment he will best be remembered as player-manager of the Prof softball team, which, at this writing, is heading straight for the second-half championship.

When he was back home at Napoleon High School, Homan won renown as a football and basketball player and a track man.

"After the war," he says, "I'd like to go to college—Wittenberg College. That's Capt. Shannon's school," he laughingly points out—the school that produced one of the greatest basketball players of recent years.

Fortunately the ex-captain will not have to take ROTC there, but when this war is over, he will undoubtedly be able to teach it.

1ST LT. UNGER

Second Lieutenant Arthur W. Unger of the Wire Committee, Communications Section, Academic Department of The Infantry School has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant.

He attended Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning and upon being commissioned, was assigned to his present duty.

NEW THEATER OPENS

Another War Department theater has been opened bringing the number of motion picture houses on the post to 12, Master Sergeant Kenneth L. Bauer, manager of the Main Theater, announces. The new theater, designated as No. 12, is in the ASTP area in Harmony Church and is housed in a converted hall. Sgt. Bauer also revealed that Theater No. 7 in the Sand Hill area is again operating with one performance per night.

A total war for total peace!
That means, for me and you,
Win the war and then, not cease,
But win the vanquished too.

Class Qualifies 204 With BAR

Popularity of the Browning Automatic Rifle among the men of the United States Army is plausibly explained by looking at the records of classes who fire the weapon in their training at The Infantry School.

Out of a class of 210 student officers of the 8th Company, First Student Training Regiment, who fired the BAR on the known distance course recetly, 204 qualified, and 121 made expert scores.

Demostrating that the automatic rifle is a weapon capable of precision firing, Lt. Henry J. Chandler, high scorer of the company, ran up a total of 165 points out of a possible 175 in the record runs. On the 1,000-inch range 170 members of the class qualified. Capt. W. D Dean was high scorer with 197 out of a possible 210 points.

6TH REG'T MOVES

The Sixth Training Regiment, ASTP Basic Training Center of the Infantry School has moved from the Frying Pan area of the main post and is now occupying the former tank battalion area on Jamestown Road southwest of Eighth Division Road, Col. Robert Sharp, regimental commander has announced. The return to Harmony church marked a homecoming for many of the Sixth's personnel formerly stationed there with the Student Training Brigade, Casual Battalion and the 2nd STR.

Often our philosophy has been —"Get the better of the other fellow before he gets the best of us." Perhaps we need to learn—"Get the better of ourselves before the other guy brings out the worst."

All Set to Shop, Then Stores Close

They were hot and tired and a little dirty, as what company wouldn't be after a four-day bivouac. But the members of the 10th Company, First Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School, were happy.

Their bivouac problem ended at noon on Thursday and they had no classes until Friday morning. That meat an afternoon off and an early getaway to Columous for shopping. The getaway was early enough but—

No one told them the stores closed at noon on Thursdays in Columbus.

An Army Wife Shops In Columbus

By Phyllis

THE KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. HAT SHOP has an especially notable display of smartly styled fur-trimmed hats to add the final, outstanding touch to Fall suits and coats. No two hats in this display are alike and the fur trimmings are silver fox, lynx-dyed white fox, sable-dyed muskrat, clipped beaver, natural domestic mink, London-dyed squirrel, sable-dyed squirrel and leopard. Indeed unusual and becoming for wear with a plain Fall suit, are the silver fox and lynx-dyed fox hat and muff sets included in this smart fall assortment. The fur muffs all have beautifully stitched backs of fine satin in shades to match the fur fronts. The fur-trimmed hats are for the most part shade of black, brown, and cocoa-colored felts, although any shade of the rainbow may be obtained with a special order. Mrs. Slattery also features a number of fluffy balls of fur to trim a hat which need just a tiny touch of silver fox. persian lamb. or muskrat. Whether you want just a fur ball or a complete hat and muff outfit of fine fur, you'll discover a wealth of chic and becoming styles in this reputable hat shop.

All lovers of music with personal pleasures ranging from jive to opera have a musical heaven in the record department of SEARS ROEBUCK & COMPANY. Vast selections of recordings including those of the popular dance bands and well-known and loved symphony orchestras, may be listened to with a critical ear and then selected for personal use at home. For the most part the records are those of Victor, Columbia, and Decca. Especially interesting to bargain-minded musical addicts are the albums containing several records each of the best recordings of many a popular artist and orchestra. Whether your victrola is brand new or one of the old fashioned models, just as long as its runs, you'll have many hours of pleasure listening to intriguing musical selections which you'll find in Sears record shop.

Today's conditions compel you to use your head about your feet —and the MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY steps up with a brilliant answer to your footwear problems. Caressing comfort for action or repose—striking good looks and durable leathers blessed with fine craftsmanship. Every pair of shoes in this up-to-the-minute shop, whether it be an I. Miller suede pump for dress, a Florsheim oxford for walking, or a pair of College Bred shoes for wear to and from classes, is a modish style designed for comfort and lasting wear. They all have, too, the quality and enduring beauty that you demand. Feminine and lovely they are shoes of excellence that will survive in your affections as well as your wardrobe. Shoe rationing has made us all more appreciative of the finer points in good shoes. And shoe rationing has also made us more appreciative that the city of Columbus has such a store as Miller-Taylor, who carry the best in footwear for men, women, and children.

Oftentimes women who wear junior sizes find it necessary to shop from one end of a town to the other in order to find appropriate dresses to fill out their wardrobes. Columbus residents are indeed fortunate in having the shop of KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC. to make their shopping problems a simple matter. Junior size dresses especially suitable for Fall wear are displayed in this popular shop. Woolens and rayon and wool mixtures are predominate, although there are several lovely narrow and wide-wale corduroy dresses. The corduroy dresses are in bright shades of red, green, maroon, beige, cocoa and dark brown. The wool frocks are beautifully tailored in heavenly shades of blue, aqua, green, brown with white pin stripe, cocoa brown, beige and several shades of grey. One of the most outstanding outfits I noticed for the junior sizes was a wool and rayon suit featuring grey silk soutache trimming around the skirt bottom and also on the shoulder yoke of the jacket. This shop is indeed the haven of small seekers of junior size dresses.

Of late I've stressed the importance of military personnel having photographs taken to help brighten the lives of loved ones far distant. This stress does not in any way mean that members of the Armed Forces are the only ones who benefit from pictures of themselves. On the contrary, persons living with their family groups still intact can both surprise and please their constant companions with a photographic likeness. The most reputable AIM'E DUPONT STUDIOS are prepared to give civilians the same expert consideration and service given all military men and women. As those who have had photographed at these studios will tell you, excellent work of this particular type is not just a matter of a few hours. Of course your part in the process takes a short while, but the behind-the-scenes work is what really completes and adds the final touch to make each and every photograph a truly lifelike likeness to be cherished by the delighted recipient.

Army wives on the Post do a great deal of simple entertaining for friends and next-door neighbors. One of the most attractive ways of serving iced drinks to members of the family and friends is using a combination tray and glass set. The J. A. KIRVEN CO. has an unusual service of this type. The tray is of wood, painted white, with modern curved handles and yellow tile blocks for the bottom of the tray. Four tall glasses fit on either side of the tray and apple-shaped glass bowls, suitable for relishes and cheeses, are in the center of the tray. Another attractive thought to add a pretty touch to cocktail parties and the like is a glass hors d'oeuvre tray with sections throughout. If you worry about white rings on the top of your furniture, you'll prize the coaster and glass sets included in this gift display at Kirven's. The coasters are apple-shaped with matching glasses decorated delightfully with a frosty white apple and pale green leaves.

Post Income Tax Men Prepare Digest Of 1943 Law Affecting Servicemen

Declaration of Income for Current Year Will Be Due September 15

The following is a digest of latest income tax laws complete with interpretations, prepared for military personnel at Fort Benning by Lt. Col. P. A. Dickey, fiscal officer, infantry School, and Lt. John W. Inzer, post headquarters.

CURRENT TAX PAYMENT ACT OF 1943

Scope of Act

1. The Current Tax Payment Act of 1943, approved June 9, 1943, makes no change in the tax rates imposed by the Revenue Act of 1942. Its application is limited to individuals and does not extend to estates, trusts, or corporations. This act for the first time provides for the collection of taxes on income as it is earned. This change in fundamental policy has necessitated a departure from the former methods of paying taxes. As a part of the change-over to a current basis of collecting income taxes, the law provides for the withholding of tax at the source on salaries, wages and other compensation for personal services, but such withholding provisions do not apply to the service pay of members of the armed forces on active duty.

2. The Current Tax Payment Act insofar is it is of primary interest to members of the armed forces, may be divided into four principal parts:

(1) Additional allowance of $1,500.

(2) Cancellation of 1942 tax.

(3) Current payment of tax.

(4) Abatement of tax in case of death.

$1,500 ADDITIONAL ALLOWANCE

3. The law in effect for year 1942 providing $250.00 or $300.00 exclusion does not apply to year 1943. The new law allows all military personnel, irrespective of grade and regardless of whether single or married, to exclude from gross income, beginning with the year 1943, so much of base pay and longevity and foreign or special service as does not exceed $1500. This relief provision is in addition to the following personal exemptions and credits for dependents which are the same as under prior law:

Personal exemption of married person or head of family	$1,200
Personal exemption of single person	500
Credit for each dependent:
Form 1040	350
Form 1040A	385

CANCELLATION OF 1942 TAX

4. General.—Provision is made in the new law for the cancellation of some part or all of the 1942 tax. The 1943 tax will be increased by an amount equivalent to the uncancelled portion of the 1942 tax. Where the 1942 tax liability is greater than the 1943 liability, the difference is to be added to the 1943 tax liability, subject to a special rule in the case of a serviceman. Technically, the 1942 tax liability will be completely discharged on September 1, 1943. Any payments made on account of the tax for 1942 are considered as payments on account of the tax for 1943.

5. Rule where 1942 tax is not greater than 1943 tax.—Where the serviceman's 1942 tax liability as shown on his return is not greater than his 1943 tax liability (without addition of the unforgiven balance of the 1942 tax), his 1942 tax will be forgiven in full or in part as follows:

(1) If the tax for 1942 is $50 or less, all of the 1942 tax is forgiven.

(2) If the tax for 1942 is between $50 and $66.67, a flat $50 is forgiven and the balance is added to the 1943 tax.

(3) If the tax for 1942 exceeds $66.67, 75 percent of the 1942 tax is forgiven and the balance of 25 percent is added to the 1943 tax.

6. Rule where 1942 tax is greater than 1943.—Where the serviceman's 1942 tax liability as shown on his return is greater than his 1943 tax liability (without additional of the unforgiven balance of the 1942 tax), there will be forgiven the sum of:

(1) An amount equivalent to his 1943 tax if such tax is $50 or less; or

(2) A flat $50 if his 1943 tax is between $50 and $66.67; or

(3) An amount equivalent to 75 percent of his 1943 tax if such tax is more than $66.67,

Plus

An amount equivalent to the difference between the tax as shown on his 1942 return and the tax on his 1943 income, to the extent that such difference is attributable to 1942 "earned net income." "Earned net income" is net income consisting of wages, salaries, and other compensation for personal services which, after deducting expenses properly chargeable against such income, does not exceed $14,000. If the individual's net income is not more than $3,000, his entire net income is considered to be "earned net income."

For the purpose of recomputing 1942 tax all earned income which does not exceed $14,000 shall be excluded from gross income.

7. How to determine tax attributable to "earned net income."—The following is an example of the method used in determining the extent to which the excess of the 1942 tax over the 1943 tax is attributable to "earned net income":

Assume that an individual, single, had net income of $20,000 in 1942, consisting of $15,000 salary and $5,000 of other income, such as dividends, interest, etc. His 1942 tax return showed a tax liability of $6,816. He entered the armed services during 1943 and his tax on 1943 income is $1,000. Only $14,000 of his 1942 salary falls within the definition of "earned net income."

Tax for 1942	$6,816
Tax for 1942, after excluding net income:
Net income $1,000 plus $5,000	$6,000
Less personal exemption	500
Surtax net income	5,500
No earned income recomputation	000
Balance subject to normal tax	5,500
Normal tax—6 percent	330
Surtax	880
Total tax	1,210
1942 tax attributable to earned net income	5,606
Tax shown by
1942 return	6,816
Less tax on 1943 income	1,000
Excess	5,816
Excess attributable to earned net income	5,606
Excess not attributable to earned net income	210

8. Joint returns.—If a member of the armed forces files a joint tax return with husband or wife, for either the taxable year 1942 or 1943, the taxes of the spouses for the taxable year in which a joint tax return is not filed shall be combined in order to determine whether or not the 1942 tax is greater than the tax on 1943 income.

If a joint tax return was filed for the taxable 1942 and separate tax returns are filed for the taxable year 1943, the liability of husband and wife shall be joint and several with respect to any additions to the tax on 1943 incomes resulting from a carry-over of the unforgiven portion of the 1942 tax.

CURRENT PAYMENT OF TAX

9. Active service pay not subject to withholding.—As heretofore stated, the active service pay of a member of the armed forces is not subject to the withholding of tax at the source. Attention is directed to the fact, however, that any compensation from sources other than military or naval may be subject to the withholding at source of an amount equivalent to 20 percent of the excess over the family status withholding exemption, or 3 percent of the excess over the victory tax withholding exemption, whichever is greater.

10. Declaration of estimated tax.—Even though tax is not withheld from the active service pay of members of the armed forces, they may be required to file declarations of estimated tax on income from all sources for the current year and will start paying quarterly installments of tax based upon such estimates. For the calendar year 1943 the declaration will be filed on or before September 15, 1943, and in computing the installments payable September 15, 1943, and December 15, 1943, the individual will take credit against the estimated 1943 tax for any tax payments made during 1943 on his 1942 tax liability, and also for any income or victory taxes which may have been withheld by his employer in respect to salary, wages, or other compensation received during 1943. The declaration of estimated tax on 1943 income will be made on Internal Revenue Form 1040ES. Such forms may be obtained from Collector of Internal Revenue, Columbus, Georgia, or Office of Fiscal Officer, The Infantry School, or Lt. John W. Inzer, Special Service Officer, Post Headquarters about September 1, 1943. Notice will be published in Post Daily Bulletin when forms are available.

11. Who must file declaration of estimated tax.—A declaration is required to be filed by any individual:

(a) Single, or married but not living with spouse at the date prescribed for the making of the declaration, whether or not head of a family, if he had for the taxable year 1942, or can reasonably be expected to have for the taxable year 1943,

(1) gross income of more than $2,700 from wages subject to withholding; or

(2) gross income of more than $100 from sources other than wages subject to withholding, and gross income of $500 or more from all sources.

(b) Married and living with spouse at the date prescribed for the making of the declaration, if he had for the taxable year 1942 or can reasonably be expected to have for the taxable year 1943,

(1) gross income from wages subject to withholding which, when added to gross income from such wages of his spouse, exceeds $3,500; or

(2) gross income other than from wages subject to withholding which, when added to gross income other than from such wages of his spouse, exceeds $100, and his gross income from all sources exceeds $624 for 1943 or the aggregate gross income from all sources of both spouses amounts to $1,200 or more for either 1942 or 1943.

(c) Individuals, regardless of marital status, who were required to file an income tax return for the taxable year 1942 and whose wages subject to withholding for the taxable year 1943 can reasonably be expected to be less than such wages for the taxable year 1942.

(d) For the purpose of the declaration requirements stated in (a) and (b), in determining whether a person is single or married, his marital status at the time the declaration is require is controlling.

(e) If the individual was not required to file a declaration but because of a change of status (marriage, divorce, death of spouse, etc.) or because of a revision of his prior estimates of gross income, he does come within the requirements, a declaration is required to be filed on or before the 15th day of the last month of the quarter of the year in which such requirements are first met.

12. Place for filing declaration of estimated tax.—Declarations are to be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which is located the legal residence or principal place of business of the person making the declaration. Military personnel ordinarily retain the same legal residence which they had before entering the service. If they have no legal residence or principal place of business in the United States, they should file with the Collector of Internal Revenue at Baltimore, Md.

13. Computation of tax on estimated 1943 income.—To compute the estimated tax for the purpose of making his declaration, the individual will estimate his probable income from which he will deduct his probable allowable deductions to obtain his probable net income. He will then deduct his personal exemption and credit for dependents to arrive at surtax net income. From the surtax net income he will deduct his earned income credit to arrive at normal-tax net income. He will then compute surtax on the surtax net income and will compute normal tax on the normal-tax net income. The next step will be to compute the estimated victory tax which is at the rate of 5 percent on probable victory tax net income in excess of $624. An example follows:

INCOME TAX
(1) Estimated active service pay for 1943	$3,000
(2) Less exclusion of active service pay (up to $1,500)	1,500
(3) Estimated gross income	1,500
(4) Minus: Estimated allowable deductions for 1943 (interest paid, taxes, contributions, etc.)	200
(5) Estimated net income	1,300
(6) Minus: Personal exemption (married with no children).	1,200
(7) Estimated surtax net income	100
(8) Minus: Earned income credit (10 percent of item 3, but not more than 10 percent of item 5)	130
(9) Estimated normal-tax net income	0
VICTORY TAX
(10) Estimated victory-tax net income (same as item 3)	$1,500
Minus exemption	624
(11) Balance subject to tax	876
SUMMARY
(12) Estimated surtax (13 percent of item 7)	$13.00
(13) Estimated normal tax (6 percent of item 9)	0
(14) Estimated victory tax (5 percent of item 11)	$43.80
(15) Less post-war credit currently taken, limited to 40 percent of item 14 (see par. 14)	17.52
(16) Tax on estimated 1943	26.28
income	39.28

14. Explanation of victory tax.—Beginning with the year 1943, each individual is subject to victory tax in addition to regular income tax.

Victory tax is at the rate of 5 percent on victory-tax net income in excess of specific exemption of $624. Victory-tax net income includes all gross income exclusive of capital gains (gains from sales of securities, etc.) and taxable interest received on United States Government obligations issued prior to March 1, 1941. Service pay up to $1,500 is, of course, also excluded from victory-tax net income. The deductions for interest paid, taxes, contributions, etc., which are allowable in determining net income subject to the regular income tax are not allowable come, unless they are directly attributable to the individual's trade or business, or are incurred in connection with the production of taxable income. The deductions directly attributable to the individual's trade or business, or those incurred in connection with the production of taxable income, are not however, available if he elects to file on the simplified return form, Form 1040A.

In the case of husband and wife making separate returns for the taxable year, each is entitled to a specific exemption of $624. In the case of husband and wife making a joint tax return, if the victory-tax net income of one spouse is less than $624, the aggregate specific exemption of both spouses is $624 plus the victory tax net income of such spouse.

A post-war credit will be allowed against the victory-tax liability. In the case of a single person, the credit will be equal to 25 percent of the victory tax, but not more than $500. With respect to the head of a family, or married persons filing joint returns, the credit will be equal to 40 percent of the victory tax, but not more than $1,000. Where married persons living together file separate returns the limitation on the post-war credit is $500 for each spouse. A similar credit will be allowed for each dependent equal to 2 percent of the victory tax, but not more than $100. At the election of the taxpayer, the post-war credit may be used as an offset against the current tax liability (so as to reduce the amount of the current payment) to the extent of an amount equivalent to the sum of:

(1) Life-insurance premiums paid during the current year on life insurance outstanding on September 1, 1942, on his own life or upon the lives of his spouse and—or his dependents.

(2) The amount by which the smallest amount of his indebtedness outstanding at any time during the period beginning September 1, 1942, and ending with the close of the preceding taxable year, exceeds the amount of his indebtedness outstanding at the close of the taxable year.

(3) The amount by which the amount of the United States Savings Bonds, Series E, F, and G, owned by him on the last day of the taxable year exceeds the greater of (A) the amount of such obligations owned by him on December 31, 1942; or (B) the highest amount of such obligations owned by him on the last day of any preceding taxable year ending after December 31, 1942.

15. Amended declaration.—In case it is found that a declared estimate should be revised, an amended declaration may be filed. Such amended declaration shall be filed on or before the 15th day of the last month of any quarter of the current taxable year. Where the original declaration is found to have been too low, an amendment is advisable because a penalty will be imposed in any case where the estimated tax plus credits for tax withheld, if any, is less than 80 percent of the actual tax, as finally determined.

16. Joint declarations.—A joint declaration may be filed by a husband and wife, but such joint declaration does not bind them to file a joint tax return. The filing of separate declarations does not preclude the filing of a joint tax return.

17. Income and victory-tax returns.—On March 15 of each year the individual will file his income and victory-tax return for the preceding calendar year, i. e., on March 15, 1944, he will file his tax return for the calendar year 1943. At the time of filing such return the individual will pay any balance of tax remaining after applying his installment payments and any credits resulting from income and victory taxes which may have been withheld at the source; or if an overpayment of tax has resulted, such overpayment will be refunded or credited under regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. The unforgiven portion of 1942 tax liability (25 percent of the tax on 1942 income or 1943 income, whichever is lesser) will be shown on the 1943 tax return but may be paid in two equal installments, on March 15, 1944, and on March 15, 1945.

The Current Tax Payment Act of 1943 makes no change with respect to requirements for filing tax returns under existing provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. A return of victory tax must be filed by every person receiving a gross income of $624 or more in 1943.

18. Deferments.—The deferments authorized by statute to members of the armed forces with respect to the filing of returns and the payment of taxes are not changed in any way by the Current Tax Payment Act of 1943. These deferments also extend to the filing of declarations and the payment of estimated taxes.

ABATEMENT OF TAX IN CASE OF DEATH

19. In the case of any person who dies on or after Dec. 7, 1941, while in active service as a member of the military or naval forces of the United States, and prior to the termination of the present war as proclaimed by the President, the income and victory taxes shall not apply with respect to his income for the year in which falls the date of his death. The income and victory taxes for all preceding taxable years which remain unpaid at the date of his death shall not be assessed; but if such taxes are paid subsequent to the date of his death, such payment shall be credited or refunded as an overpayment. Such cancellation, credit, or refund will apply also to any interest or penalties which may have been added to the tax.

Next issue of "The Bayonet" will contain several examples of computation of 1943 Income and Victory Tax further illustrating the application of the above.

7th Armored Division Boasts Noted Athletes

"Lucky 7th" Excels in Boxing Ring With Golden Glover Poletti as Ace

Although the Seventh Armored Division sports program has been temporarily interrupted by the division's rigorous training schedule, these rugged Armoraiders have made a name for themselves in both division and Service Command sports circles. In boxing in particular they have excelled, winning state and sectional championships in Golden Gloves bouts in the South.

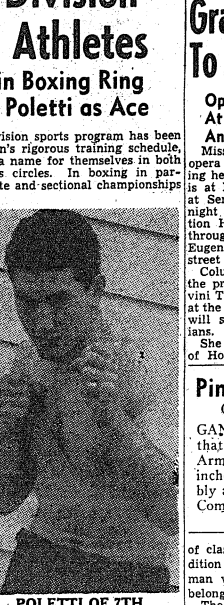
Looking back over the "Lucky 7th" sports record for the past 18 months we find that the 147th Armored Signal Company was tops in the American League in basketball, while the 489th Armored Field Artillery Battalion occupied a similar position in the National League.

WALSH TOPS

Sgt. Anthony Walsh of Maintenance Battalion took top trophy for division high score. He played pivot man on the Maintenance quintet and rippled the nets 38 times from the floor in seven games. He counted from the foul line for eight points and a grand total of 84.

In division softball it was the 147th Armored Signal Company which topped the Federal League, going undefeated in 13 ball games to take the division flag from the top two leaders in the other leagues.

PING-PONG KING



Off at one end of the Service Club, Pvt. Wilner P. Rhine of the 31st Armored Regiment defeated Sgt. Lloyd Bartel in the "Lucky 7ths'" ping-pong final to become undisputed paddle king of the division.

But it was in boxing that the Seventh Armored Division really rang the bell when the 48th Armored Infantry Regiment's heavyweight Pvt. Gene Poletti started punching.

POLETTI WINS

Pvt. Poletti, 193, scored three knockouts in as many bouts at a Fort Worth, Texas, Golden Gloves bout to place himself in the running for a national championship in Chicago, sponsored by a newspaper. However he declined to go to the Windy City because of his army training schedule.

Prior to his enlistment at Camp Grant, Ill., in Nov. 1942, Poletti had participated in the 1939-1940 Chicago Golden Gloves tournament, taking the heavyweight championship in the novice class. The following season he fought in the open class and won his way to the finals, where he lost by a close decision to Clayton Worlds who had bested Pat Comisky.

POLETTI OF 7TH

Gen. Gillem, who told the men of the new division . . . "the 7th is lucky, for two reasons—you have had your initial training with the 3rd Armored Division and you have General Silvester for your commander". Like magic Gen. Gillem's allusion to the Division as being lucky, spread, and today it's the "Lucky Seventh" that is almost always referred to when the division is mentioned.

The "Lucky Seventh" has carved a niche for itself in military circles which will be a reminder to the rest of the world that the U. S. Army is the army where enlisted men share equally the opportunities for advancement with graduates of the country's greater military colleges.

Since activations the Seventh Armored Division, approximately 897 men have been enrolled in the 18 officer candidate schools throughout the nation. At this time plans are being made to send additional men "from the ranks" to the training centers.

These men of the Seventh, hundreds of whom are now commissioned, are subjected to a "fine combing" before being selected to attend officer candidate schools, and each is chosen because of outstanding leadership qualities and with special personal ability in other activities. Personal habits, character and their everyday life in the Division under the scrutiny of their unit commanders lead to the ultimate selection of those attending officer's schools.

ACTIVES IN '42

The Seventh Division was the second armored division activated in 1942. Many of the officers came from Fort Knox and the Third Armored Division, which division was first to occupy Camp Polk. Additional officers and men came from replacement centers scattered throughout the country.

Using the same grounds, the same experience in training and the same equipment, the new 7th Armored Division was built alongside the Third Division. Equipment was scarce at first. Quarters were cramped and minor mistakes caused short tempers. In spite of all this, added to an influx of recruits, the Seventh's soldiers put their shoulders to the wheel, worked and learned together.

By January 1, 1943, every man in the Seventh Armored Division had fired primary and secondary weapons. Men attended specialized schools for advanced training and thorough practice familiarized themselves with new equipment.

Men of the 7th Division have been taught by experts within the division. Class work and laboratory experiment has occupied much of the men's time during the past year. There are hundreds of classes conducted daily in addition to regular training for evry man who is fortunate enough to belong to this Armored division.

The 7th division, ever expanding since its activities, has within its ranks some of the nation's best trained officers, many of whom grew up with the parent First Armored Division at Fort Knox. These men, especially qualified for their job in tanks, guns, light and heavy artillery, radio, motor mechanics and affiliate subjects, have seen to it that Seventh Division men had the best available training. Neither time nor effort has been spared by Gen. Silvester in providing opportunities at the very doors of the men of the "Lucky Seventh".

Fundamentally, the rookie only begins his training in the Seventh Armored Division upon completion of basic requirements, which for the most part are rugged enough to make of him a good soldier.

This is considered preliminary work only.

SCHOOLS OPERATE

In all units of the Seventh Division, schools are operated and maintained in subjects including radio mechanics, motor maintenance, motorcycle maintenance, tank mechanics, medical courses, gunnery, cooking, civil, mechanical and chemical engineering, which incudes map reading, and ordnance in all its branches.

Furthermore, any enlisted man who has shown aptitude for any particular work has been sent immediately to one or more schools to improve his efficiency so that he may return to his unit to teach others.

Radio school, which plays an important role in all that goes on within an armored division has been attended by hundreds of men. The men best fitted have been sent to radio communications school at Fort Knox, for study in advanced radio.

Besides regular duty, the average soldier in the Seventh Armored Division has had training in warfare tactics of the modernized, last minute technique. The bare fact that a soldier knows how to shoot a gun is not sufficient within itself. He must know his job and what it's all about as well as the other fellows' job.

Betty Hicks, pert little Long Beach, Cal., golfer was recently sworn into the SPARS. The day before she entered service she lost the Women's Western Open title when she called a penalty on herself.

Grace Panvini To Sing at Post

Opera Star Will Appear At Service Club 1 And Station Hospital

Miss Grace Panvini, a celebrated opera singer, is in Columbus visiting her husband, Curtis Rico, who is at Fort Benning and will sing at Service Club No. 1 Thursday night at 9 o'clock and at the Station Hospital Friday at 3 p. m., through arrangements made by Eugene Bergmann of the Ninth street USO.

Columbus music lovers will have the privilege of hearing Miss Panvini Tuesday, August 24 at 9 p. m. at the Ninth street USO, where she will sing for soldiers and civilians.

Miss Panvini, American coloratura soprano, concert, opera, radio star, has sung leading roles with the Cincinnati and San Carlos Opera Co., two seasons as soloist of the Toronto Symphony and twenty-five performances of Cassilda in "Gondoliers." She has made thirty concerts for Columbia Concerts, and the past season toured with Sigmund Romberg and his concert orcchestra on a tour of 140 concerts.

Miss Panvini will leave Aug. 25 for her home in New York, and then out on another opera tour of the country.

She will be accompanied by Mrs. Wendell Collicott, also here with her husband who is a lieutenant at Fort Benning. Mrs. Collicott is a brilliant concert pianist and an experienced accompanist. She has been a teacher at Trenton, New Jersey State Teachers college and music supervisor in public schools of Rahway, N. J. Mrs. Collicott will play Chopin numbers.

Post Inspector General Keeps Men Efficient, Prevents Waste

Officer Kept Busy Separating Fact From Opinion; Job Difficult

Behind the gates of Army installations, obscured by the more spectacular tasks of fighting men, a small group of highly-trained officers quietly works at military missions designed to keep all soldiers at the peak of their efficiency and to prevent waste of men or tax monies by carelessness or mismanagement. Such an officer is Lt. Col. James R. Johnson, post inspector general at Fort Benning.

A veteran of World War I, Colonel Johnson reported for active duty in January 1941 at Camp Shelby, Miss., and later took a battalion commander and staff officer's course at Benning.

He was assigned to Benning in February, 1942 and after taking a course in Atlanta, returned to the post as Police and Prison Officer. In April he was assigned as post inspector under Brigadier General Walter S. Fulton.

A native of Kentucky, Colonel Johnson served six years in the State Legislature from Marion, Ky.

Only recently returned from Washington where he took a special course at the Inspector General's school, Colonel Johnson returned to his duties at Fort Benning deeply impressed with instruction given by Major General Virgil L. Peterson, Inspector General, mastering fundamentals—(1) "finding the facts"; and (2) knowing the laws and regulations. With just a dash of "horse" sense added for good measure.

He further added that a fact is not a hunch; it is not an opinion or someone's idea of a thing, but something definite, truthful, indisputable—something that can be stated firmly and freely, the accuracy of which is not susceptible to doubt or uncertainty."

REGULATIONS

Virtually every activity in the Army is governed by regulations. Inspectors generally are not expected to know all the regulations, but are expected to know where to find them, so whether the problem be large or small, the inspector goes about his task with the same thoroughness.

Is that division now at a staging area really equipped and trained to fight in the Theater of Operations for which it is destined?

Has Lieutenant X changed the combination of his safe at the little Alabama camp where he keeps his confidential documents?

These two questions give some indication of the wide range of activities of the officers of the Inspector General's Department who find no assignment too large nor any detail too small for their attention. The mighty Army of the United States is a highly complex organization, employing men by the millions and consuming materials of war by the thousands of tons.

It is a citizen's Army, made up of men and women such as you and you, who had to learn their military jobs in a hurry. In the Fourth Service Command, with headquarters in Atlanta, the military jobs are largely those of service and supply, involving huge storage depots, feeding and housing of troops, medical service and a hundred and one administrative details.

One reason the tasks assigned the Fourth Service Command have been performed so well is because of the assistance given by the Inspectors General's staff, members of the Inspector General's Department. This group of inspectors general, a half dozen in number, directly under the Commanding General, makes annual general and special inspections at all installations that are under the jurisdiction of the commanding general and at others as directed by the War Department.

The duty of an inspector general does not end when he finds a condition that needs correction but includes advice and instruction—a friendly helping hand—to prevent recurrence of a deficiency or irregularity.

Inspectors general, Headquarters Fourth Service Command, headed by Colonel Henry J. M. Smith, I. G. D., Inspector General, are guided by the statement that "the primary duty of an inspector general in the field is to assist the commander and his troops in the performance of their duties."

TOUGH JOB

To accomplish this they must "inquire into all matters pertaining to the efficiency of the command, including the conduct, discipline, living conditions and morale of units and individuals; the condition of arms, equipment and supplies; and the economical, efficient and lawful expenditure of funds and property." Reports of findings are made with strict impartiality to commanders concerned.

Since an inspector general is essentially a protector device, he must be able to do a competent job, without guessing, without use of sarcasm, without partiality and with the ability to determine what is fact and what is mere opinion. Regulations govern practically every operation of the Army; an inspector general must be thoroughly familiar with regulations so that, even though he cannot memorize them all, still he will know where to find the applicable regulation in any given case.

A newspaper reporter, accustomed to searching for facts, would be appalled by the meticulous attention to detail required when an Army inspector general sets out on an assignment. For example, an inspector general visiting a post, would start with a huge and continuing curiosity about everything at that post. Is a soldier standing guard in a pair of civilian type shoes? That item is not too insignificant for inquiry, for a pair of stout Army shoes—G.I.—could actually mean the difference between success and failure, life and death, of that soldier in a battle. Are company and similar funds handled properly? It takes a fair knowledge of accountancy to look into the bookkeeping of an Army post to be sure that every penny is properly accounted for, or has been expended in the manner provided by law or regulation.

Are the fire extinguishers filled with extinguishing fluid—or has somebody slipped in some gasoline? Are those packing cases in the rear of the big warehouse actually filled with the merchandise listed on the outside? Is there dirt or dust in the containers used to measure out lubricating oils? Is every weapon completely clean, in first class operating condition? Are the kitchens clean? Is the food good. On and on go the questions aroused by the insatiable curiosity of an inspector general.

Wiping rags tossed carelessly into a basement corner could start a costly fire. Funds improperly recorded could lead to inadvertent losses or deliberate embezzlement. Poorly stocked food, ill-kept barracks, lax supervision over equipment could sabotage the morale of an entire outfit. Abuse of courts martial might lead to venting of personal spites, and the inspector general does not overlook this possibility. Inability of the non-commissioned officers to read their maps could be disastrous if not corrected, and the inspector general knows this.

Army cars are for official use only and any other use is a waste of government property, precious gas and ruober. The full gamut of Army affairs is subject to check by the inspectors, keeping in mind the counsel of Major General Virgil L. Peterson, The Inspector General, that "it requires hard, painstaking work, looking for things that do not meet the eye, accepting courteously what is shown you but inspecting it thoroughly with a view to finding that which is not shown you."

RANDOM ITEMS

These are just random items listed to illustrate the scope of an inspector general at work, and the constant search for both deficiencies and merit. The latter is important, too. It is part of the job to recognize and report meritorious conduct and performance of duty. It is also part of the job to instruct and advise, courteously.

By act of Congress inspectors general also inspect money accounts of disbursing officers twice a year at irregular intervals. While not as comprehensive, these inspections are comparable to the examination of banks by Federal or State examiners and are made without advance notice of any kind. The salutary effect of these inspections is readily conceivable.

A great deal of time and effort also is taken up in every conceivable type of investigation pertaining to command functions. These investigations are usually initiated by higher headquarters and the Inspector General's Department acts as a fact-finding agency. The army wants the facts in each and every case, so that proper steps can be taken to rectify any deficiency or irregularity disclosed or in certain cases to take proper disciplinary measures where appropriate.

These investigations require knowledge of existing regulations, great test in handling witnesses and above all a lot of "horse sense." An inspector general must lean over backwards to be impartial and must see that everybody is dealt with according to their rights. When all testimony and evidence called for has been gathered the inspector general prepares his report which is usually of a confidential nature. Facts must be supported by documentary evidence or sworn testimony. Conclusions are based upon the facts as found and recommendations are in turn determined by the conclusions. These investigations conducted by specially trained officers are of inestimable value to the service. An inspector general should possess "the wisdom of Solomon and the patience of Job."

In combat and on maneuvers, inspectors general are concerned with activities and installations for which officers responsible for tactical situations have no time. This calls for continuous inspections of every phase of the situation. An alert inspector general is the agency by which lives and property can be saved.

DROIT ET AVANT MOTTO

The motto of the Inspector General's Department is "Droit et Avant," which freely translated means "proceeding to a conclusion when in the right," or as Davy Crockett said, "Be sure you're right, then go ahead." Inspectors general are officers working for commanders, sharing their responsibilities as a member of the team. Behind them is a fine tradition. General Washington established the office of Inspector General in 1777 to bring efficiency and order into the chaotic ranks of the Continental Army. Alexander Hamilton served as Inspector General in the critical period of World War I. General John J. Pershing observed that the Inspector General's Department "throughout has ably assisted commanders." Now engaged in operations which dwarf in magnitude those of the First World War, inspectors general throughout the army carry on a complex task to achieve these results:

1. Assurance that every fighting man is equipped, trained and instructed so that he is without question the best soldier in the best army in the world.

2. Honest value is received for every dollar put into the military machine.

The first is important to all of us in winning the war; the commander whose outfit has been checked and re-checked until marked "OK" by the inspector general has every reason for confidence.

The second is of obvious value to all citizens who now must dig deeply into their pockets to pay for the war.

It Takes 26 Items To Fit Up New G.I.

No .17 Shoe Included In Varied QM Stock; No. 3 Smallest Fit

Short, tall, fat or thin—whatever the size of the soldier, the supply office at the colored Reception Center can outfit him from head to foot. And it takes 26 separate items to complete his outfit at that!

Captain George E. Fogle, Jr., is the supply officer with a staff of two officers—2nd Lieuts. Ernest Baumbach and Henry L. Pickle—as well as 11 colored non-commissioned officers and enlisted men—to supply the thousands of men who have been equipped in this center since it was opened in April, 1941.

Of the non-commissioned officers, two have seen more than two years service in the quartermaster warehouse here. Tech Sgt. Alexander Smoot, in charge of warehouse, has been in the Army six years, three of those years with the 24th Infantry and the other with this supply branch. A native of Birmingham, Ala., Sgt. Smoot was assistant canteen manager in the Veteran's Facility Hospital, at Tuskegee, Ala.

Staff Sgt. Eddie E. Green, chief clerk in the warehouse served with the C.C.C. for two years prior to entering the service in 1941. In civilian lift Sgt. Green was a warehouseman in Birmingham, Ala., his home.

ITEMS LISTED

Here are some of the items issued by this quartermaster supply depot to each man on his induction into the Army: wool coat, field jacket, cotton and wool shirts, cotton and wool trousers, raincoat, cotton drawers and undershirts, socks, wool and cotton caps as well as a knit cap, leggings, shoes, twill jacket, trousers, hat, belt, gloves, handkerchiefs, ties, barrack bag, bath and hand towels, shaving and tooth brushes, comb, complete canteen outfit, knife, fork, spoon; helmet liner, mess kit, razor and five blades, and one overcoat.

It is a fact that the smallest size shoe—3, and the largest size—17, are both in stock in this warehouse. Trousers come in lengths from 28" inside seam length, to 39" length, and from 28" waist measure to 42" measure. Coats run in size from 34 to 50 long, while caps are 6 1-2 to 7 5-8, but any unusual size in any part of the outfit whether it be shoe, trousers, coat or cap can be taken care of by special order. So whatever the size, soldier, the supply office can outfit you!

Academic Reg't. Celebrates Natal Day of Members

"Have a birthday and win a prize," is the new order of things at Co. F in the Academic Regiment of The Infantry School. Not only do company members get a carton of cigarettes on their natal day but they also occasion the baking of a birthday cake.

Furthermore on that day, the celebrator or celebrators sit at a special table and have their meals served to them. No waiting in chow line for them.

The idea was fostered by Lt. Philip W. Powers, company mess officer, and furthered by S-Sgt. I. Benseni, mess sergeant. First recipients of birthday cakes were Cpl. Thomas Bennett, 28, and Pvt. Edward Duffy, 22, whose birthdays fell on Friday the 13th.

The first birthday party was also the occasion for another celebration in the mess hall. Capt. R. A. Cassiott, company commander pointed out the report of Lt. Powers on the company's record in the food conservation drive. On that day, the total waste for the company was 63 pounds or .43 pounds per man.

This is well under the half pound a day-per man which is the limit prescribed in the conservation drive.

NEW ADJUTANT

The 23rd Company, 1st STR, has a new executive officer, 1st Lt. Cary Kenndey who has just joined the regiment. Lt. Kennedy is no stranger to Ft. Benning, having attended the Infantry School in the early part of 1942 and since that time has been on duty for a year at Camp Croft, S. C., also a few months at Camp Rucker, Ala. His home town is Memphis, Tenn.

When under fire by snipers take to nearest cover; dropping or standing still helps the sniper—not you.

Several Thousand RC Men Attend Weekly Out-of-doors Church

Several thousands of soldiers worshipping on Sunday morning in an outdoor service, eager for the words of faith that their chaplain is bringing them is no uncommon sight at the Reception Center.

Two chaplains and an assistant carry on the religious work at this colored reception center, one of the largest in the United States. With troops constantly arriving and departing, these chaplains have an unusual opportunity of getting the soldier started on his military career with favorable impressions of the Army.

As a spiritual leader of men the chaplain at the Center is primarily concerned with providing religious services for the soldiers of whatever faith they follow. Religious services are held in the Recreation Hall, mess halls, and out of doors. Wherever the place, the chaplain brings the Word of God to his men, and shows them a way of life that offers them the best assurance of individual peace and happiness. Candidates for church membership are baptised each Sunday and letters written to the church of the candidate's choice, as well as to his family telling of his church affiliation.

Thus the chaplain is the bridge that connects the soldier with his home, his church and the Army. He gives orientation lectures to new soldiers coming into the Army. He gets across to the soldier the importance of writing home frequently, saving his money, guarding his body and mind, his privilege to visit the chaplain's office for conferences on any subject that is disturbing him; and invites the soldiers to secure their free copy of the Testament and other religious material and urges them to attend religious services. This is a strategic lecture as it does much to form the soldier's opinion of what to expect from an Army chaplain and one that the chaplain takes full advantage of as his rich experiences can be a guiding philosophy of life that the soldier can take with him wherever he may go.

CHAPLAIN LEADS WAY

As the band leads a group of soldiers to the railroad depot for their departure from the Center, in the front of the line will be the chaplain. He bids each soldier, individually, goodbye with the suggestion that he visit the chaplain in his new station and make friends with him. Thus the last impression the soldier takes with him on this troop train is of his chaplain, thinking and planning for his well being.

Chaplains are often consulted by soldiers for financial aid in meeting bills—doctor, taxes, rent—for advice in making allotments properly, and choosing between two or three prospects for the best wife; how to find employment for the wife who has followed him to camp and stranded in a nearby town.

Often the chaplain has to display wisdom in settling disputes and he is constantly being called upon to secure furloughs for soldiers who think he is a magician. He must adjust, if possible, cases of maladjustment to Army life, and very often just to "sit and listen" to a homesick soldier away from home for the first time.

The chaplains at the Reception Center work in close conjunction with the American Red Cross. They verify telegrams before the soldier is permitted to leave on emergency furlough. The Red Cross furnishes sufficient funds for emergencies if the soldier is in need.

PATIENTS COME FIRST

Hospital patients come first on visits by chaplains. Daily rounds are made of patients, letters written to the soldier's home, prayers offered for his speedy recovery and any additional services needed for the soldier's comfort and well-being are performed by the chaplain.

The Reception Center chaplains take an active part in the community life of Columbus. They preach in the city churches, deliver addresses whenever invited—graduation, local civic meetings, USO centers and any gathering where their presence is needed you will find them there.

Under the capable supervision of Lt. Col. Frank M. Thompson, chief of the chaplains branch at Benning, 1st Lt. Charles B. Hodge, 1st Lieut. William Dickerson, and Sgt. Van J. Malone are the chaplains at the Reception Center. These men work in close conjunction with one another and in no way duplicate or interfere with the work of the others. Sgt. Malone is the oldest men in point of service in the Chaplains Division at the Center having been assigned there for more than two years.

Scientific Mess Management Boosts Morale—Col. Jackson

How scientific mess management not only boosts an organization's morale, but also conserves food, was stressed by Lieutenant Colonel Wilfred Jackson, of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, in a talk before officers of the regiment. It was the third in a series of lectures arranged by Colonel John S. Roosma, Commanding Officer of the 1st S.T.R., for his company commanders and their staffs.

Pointing out that morale is often largely made or broken right in the kitchen, Colonel Jackson outlined the following rules for a good menu:

Food must have variety, from day to day as well as at each meal. If the supply situation forces a mess officer to serve the same article over and over again, skillful and imaginative chefs can season or prepare the food differently so that it doesn't become monotonous. A varied diet is a balanced diet.

Serve some baked product at least twice a day. Hot biscuits, pies, baked potatoes or apples will be a welcome addition to any table.

WATERY SOUP? PFOOEY!

Keep a stock-pot on back of the stove at all times. Fill it with soup or gravy that has substance. Nothing has less nourishment, or less appeal, than watery soup or gravy.

Include a good salad with at least one daily meal. Slice lettuce, tomatoes and carrots, or compound a tasty fruit salad from apples, oranges, or whatever is on hand. Salads are not only popular, especially in hot weather, but they provide vitamins sometimes lacking in Army diets, and are easy to prepare as well.

One sure way to control waste, the Colonel emphasized, is to avoid putting too much food on the table.

DO'S AND DON'TS

He next told the 1st S.T.R. company commanders what to look for when they inspect kitchens and mess halls. Inspections before mealtime reveal that several mistakes crop up most frequently. Meats tend to be overdone. Toast and "hot" cakes are served cold. Drinks, both hot and cold, are placed on the table too soon and are neither hot nor cold by the time they are consumed.

Make another inspection right after the meal is over, this time looking carefully at left-overs and garbage. Note what foods are being thrown away and immediately check with the mess sergeant to ascertain the cause and remedy it. The fault may be poor cooking or seasoning. Or too much food may have been prepared. Unwise selection of foods may be consigning quantities to the swill pail.

There are items, such as egg-plant or spinach, that most men in an organization don't relish. Find out which foods have limited appeal and then serve them sparingly if at all, to reduce waste.

At the conclusion of the conference, Colonel Jackson asked the officers present to jot down their conception of the five rules of successful mess management.

A War Department order forbids the devising of coats of arms for newly formed units until the history and experience of these bestows significance on such.

Amgot Aspirants Referred to WD Memorandum

Due to much interest by commissioned officers on the post to the story carried in last week's Bayonet describing the specialized training of officers for military governments of occupied territories, it is suggested that officers desiring further information consult War Department Memorandum No. W350-206-43, dated 22 July, 1943, and titled "Availability of officers for assignment and instruction in civil affairs." This memorandum was an Adjutant General's office publication. Officers who wish to see a copy should consult their unit adjutants to determine the distribution.

Pin-Up Girl Of The Week

QUARTERMASTER QUEEN—Toast of the lads who keep 'em fed and clothed is cute Winona Andrews, a civilian employee in the purchasing and contracting section of the quartermaster office. . . . Winsome Winnie is an Alabama belle by rights, but has been a Georgian by residence now for over three years. . . . Alabama never did much to exploit her rare beauty, and neither did Georgia for that matter but she's seldom overlooked by the lads in the supply branch, what with her winning smile and capricious manner. . . the name Winona, which is just as cute as her dimples, was derived from an old Indian legend which told of a princess by the same name who perished in the waters when she despaired of her lover's return. . . . Posing as Bayonet pin-up girl for this week was Winnie's first attempt at any kind of modeling, but you'll have to admit she has what it takes. . . . Seems maybe some of the magazine cover guys have passed up a bet when they were looking for the outdoors type, because if ever there was a femme who loved the great outdoors, it is Winnie Andrews. . . . She literally thrives on sports, swims like a fish, plays tennis with a vigor, bicycles with rare abandon, loves to hike anyplace and anytime, and is about to lend her talents to golf. . . . Seemed kind of unnatural, therefore, when our glamor photog got this shot of Winnie relaxing on the catwalk at Russ Pool. . . . but after all, a girl has to relax sometime or else how is she ever going to accumulate that gingerbread brown of which Winnie can boast after her recent Florida vacation. . . . Once a few years back, Winnie took a fling at radio, singing in a trio known as the "Three Singing Secretaries" over a Dothan, Ala., station with her older sister and a cousin. . . . At Benning, she's done everything she could to help the soldier lads, attending numerous dances and helping with the sale of war bonds at many functions. . . . ANDREWS ON MEN: "Men, oh, they're wonderful and women just couldn't get along without them, but on the other hand, sometmes they can be an awful headache." . . . Yes, fellows, and she's still single, but you'd better stay clear unless you're the out door type with plenty of vitality and a keen sense of humor because you'll need it to keep up with vivacious Winnie. . . . VITAL STATISTICS: Height—5 feet, 2 inches. Weight—113 pounds. Bust—34 inches. Waist—24 inches. Hips—36 inches. Hair—Light brown and wavy. Eyes—Hazel when relaxed but green when excited. Complexion—Fair with a wonderful coat of tan right now. Yeah man, she's the cutest little number this side of heaven, this queen of the Q.M. Corps. . . .' (Signal Lab photo by Sgt. Don Kortmeier.)

LT. COL. ROBERT R. MOORE

Colonel Robert Moore Arrives From N. Africa

It's a long way from the wilds and battle of El Faid Pass and beach landings at El Biar in Algeria to home and family in Iowa and then to the Tactics Section of The Infantry School at Fort Benning.

But that is the Odyssey of Lt. Col. Robert E. Moore, now here at Fort Benning to teach valuable lessons from his battle experience in North Africa to students at the school.

The picture of Colonel Moore's welcome-back to Iowa by his wife and daughter was widely published and termed one of the most deeply touching human interest pieces of photography to come out of World War II. It was published in a recent issue of Life Magazine as the "picture of the week."

The angle from which the photograph was taken caused the colonel's face to be obscured, and another picture taken from a frontal direction showed Col. Moore and his family and appeared in a still more recent issue of Life in the letters-to-the-editor department.

CAPTURES MG NEST

Co. Moore was decorated with the Silver Star for gallantry in action, particularly in the capture of a machine gun nest at El Biar during the beach landings in Algeria last November. It was Major Moore then who led a platoon ashore on that November 8th night.

Heavy surf forced the landing boats of his platoon onto an unmarked beach. His men ran into machine gun fire and before the beach head could be established, Major Moore and a few men went forward and killed or captured the men manning two machine guns which were holding up the advance.

Later on in the campaign, he was with the American troops who were badly pummeled in Faid Pass. He succeeded in leading some 550 of them to safety.

His proudest moment during the African campaign came when his boys, grimy and tattered but seasoned with experience of battle, marched back after successfully capturing a hill which controlled a strategic pass, the capture of which permitted other units to move forward and meet the British army.

Colonel Moore is a native of Villisca, Ia., where he formerly operated a drug store. He enlisted in the Iowa National Guard in 1922 and served three years. After an absence from the Guard of two years, he returned as a second lieutenant and was promoted to captain two years latre.

In August, 1941, he was inducted into Federal service and was promoted to major in 1942. He is a graduate of the Basic Course, Battalion Commanders and Staff Officers' courses of The Infantry School. His foreign service includes Ireland, Scotland, Algeria and Tunisia.

Spirits Top Prof Foe To Lead League

Wissman Hurls 176th To 5-4 Win Before Crowd of 7,000

The red-hot TIS League race boiled over at Gowdy Field last night as close to 7,000 baseball-mad fans watched the scrappy 176th Spirits edge out the Academic Profs, 5-4, to take over first place in the loop.

Lefty Wissman, crafty Spirit southpaw, once again proved a jinx for the Profs as he defeated them for the third straight time in a mound duel with Rudy Rundus, Academic right-hander. Wissman gave up ten hits, four of them to Erwin Prasse, but was supreme in the pinches.

Rundus had tough luck on the mound and allowed his own wild throwing to contribute directly to four 176th runs. In the second inning, he tossed a fielded bunt wild over third to let two runs in, and twice he uncorked wild pitches to permit other tallies. The last of these came in the eighth with Bob Ramazotti streaking over with the winning run of the ball game.

MARY HARDWICK (LEFT) AND ALICE MARBLE

Women Net Stars Play Exhibition Here Sunday

Alice Marble and Mary Hardwick To Perform At Officer's Club at 6 P. M.

Alice Marble and Mary Hardwick, internationally famous tennis stars, will play an exhibition at Fort Benning on Sunday evening when they visit the post as part of their nationwide USO tour of large Women's Army Corps encampments.

The match between two of the leading feminine tennists will start at 6 o'clock on the famed center court of the Officer's Club on the main post, and will be followed by an open forum and lecture on physical fitness for members of the WAC serving at Benning.

SEATS FOR MEN

Although, Miss Marble and Miss Hardwick are coming here primarily to play for the WACs, there will be ample seating facilities for enlisted men of the garrison and a limited number of officers. Bleachers will be erected on both sides of the center court in order to seat as many spectators as possible, according to Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, post special service officer, who is handling arrangements for the visit of the court champs.

The distinguished sports visitors will arrive early Sunday morning and spend the day with one of the local WAC detachments. Sunday night they will sleep in the barracks of the WAC Detachment, station complement, which is commanded by 1st Lieut. Gail Geines.

TOUR NEARS END

The court stars will stop off for their stay at Benning between

War Bond Rally Set For September 2nd

Pin-Up Girls To Sell Securities; Street Dance Feature Attraction

Kicking off Fort Benning participation in the Third War Loan Drive, a gala street dance and War Bond rally will be staged Thursday night, September 2, it is announced by Major George Fink, post War Bond officer.

For the occasion, dance bands from the 124th Infantry and the 31st Armored regiments have been engaged, plus a hill-billy "jive" group from the 176th Infantry Blues. Music and dancing will be continuous at the dance, which will be held on Ingersoll street in front of Service Club No. 1, between 9 p. m. and 11:45 p. m.

Making up the sales crew and dancing partners for soldiers attending, will be all three of Fort Benning's pin-up girls, Edna Lynch, Elizabeth Morgan and Winona Andrews, together with 100 other attractive girls from Columbus and Fort Benning, including members of the women's army corps from the Station complement detachment, Infantry School detachment and 772nd Post Headquarters company from Lawson Field.

CASH SALES

Tables will be scattered around the edge of the dance area, where bonds will be sold for cash to soldiers interested in investing a share of their pay day money. Attendants will make out applications and give receipts. Bonds will be completed and mailed out by the local war bond office as soon as possible.

Although Fort Benning does not have a definite quota in the Third War Loan Drive, every effort is being made to boost soldier participation to aid nearby Columbus, which has a pledge of $5,600,000.

This is the second in a series of War Bond rallies to be held on the post. The first featured Mrs. Bob Waterfield, better known as Jane Russell, of Hollywood and "The Outlaw" fame. Over $16,000 worth of bonds were purchased at this occasion, which was held in the Patio Grill.

Civilian girls other than the three pin-up beauties, participating in the outdoor dance will be: Marguerite Bresca, Mary Childress, Lorraine Pointer, Margaret Coan, Melissa Davidovich, Ellen Holland, Vera Rogers, Willie Smith, Annie Roe Williams, Arline Driggers, Mamie Nicholson, Martha Woolbright, Kate Flynn, Mildred Hoyle, Pat Ford, Dorothy Storey, Aurela Scarborough, Lucile Jones, Sarah Bridges, Doris Lee, Mary Nell Culbreth, Dorothy Sossaman, Estelle Burns, Christine Stewart, Mildred Finnberg, Sarah Woodall, Sarah Bross, Ruth Cohen and Caroline Cox. Others will be announced later.

French Mission Chief Is Visitor

Colonel La Bel Lauds Work of Infantry School; Dinner Honors Officer

Col. Albert La Bel, head of the French military mission to the United States, left Fort Benning shortly before noon Wednesday after paying a flying visit to the French officers and officer aspirants in training in the 12th company, First Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School.

Before his departure the French leader expressed pleasure with the results attained by The Infantry School staff in moulding into a single fighting unit the many Frenchmen.

He pointed out that these men come from far-flung corners of the earth, hailing from South America, England, Africa, and metropolitan France.

The colonel and his aides were greeted upon arrival at Lawson Field by American and French officers headed by Captain Henri Barbeau, liaison officer for the French military mission at the Infantry School.

Captain Barbeau arranged in honor of Colonel La Bel and his aides a dinner at the Officers' Club Tuesday night. Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, TIS assistant commandant, delivered a message of welcome in which he greeted Colonel La Bel as an old friend of Fort Benning and himself, and congratulated him on the efficiency of Frenchmen taking the rigid TIS course.

Among Allied officers attending were Lieut. Col. J. A. McCarthy of the British army; Captain Gaston Ramin, company commander of French students in the Infantry School; Major Albert Damecourt of the French Air Force; Colonel Sevier R. Tupper, commander of the ASTP Basic Training Center; Col. Thornton Chase, Col. John S. Roosma, Col. Robert S. Miller, and Col. Phillip Kron.

Post Salvage Saves Almost Half-Million

Thousands of Articles Repaired and Returned To Serviceability

In the past fiscal year, nearly $435,000 have been returned to Uncle Sam's pockets as net savings through operation of reclamation and salvage shops at Fort Benning, according to Col. Stephen B. Massey director of supply.

The shops, which are under the immediate supervision of First Lieut. Ross W. Crossley, repair anything and everything that Benning soldiers use in the way of clothing, shoes or equipment. The repair units are operated by civilians working under Lieut. Crossley's supervision.

These civilian employees of the supply division never stop repairing articles until each is worn beyond repair. Often the same article is repaired many times before it is finally sold for salvage. In the case of clothing which is "too worn" to repair, items are cut into pieces of cloth to be used as patches and only the scraps are sold as salvage.

ITEMS RECLAIMED

The reports for the fiscal year ending June 30, which have just been released by Colonel Massey, show that during the preceding 12 months, the Benning shops repaired 343,961 articles. These consisted of 170,828 pairs of shoes; 130,357 articles of clothing such as shirts, coats, overcoats, neckties, caps, underwear plus textiles and miscellaneous articles; 42,225 canvas and webbing pieces such as belts, cartridge belts, tents and like and in addition 551 such items were altered.

The post supply chief also disclosed that the salaries of officers and civilian employees, plus operating expenses of the shops were $156,693.44. The value of the items repaired — figured at one half the original cost—was $589,276.81, leaving a net saving to the government of $432,583.37.

'Mom' Remains No. 1 Sweetie Of Fort Benning's Doughboys

She Continues To Lead The Way As Recipient Of Long Distance Calls

"Mom" is the Number 1 sweetheart of Fort Benning soldiers.

Or at least that's the impression of the attendants at the long-distance telephone pay station at Fort Benning in the tower at Doughboy Stadium, who each day serve soldiers on the post as they place calls which reach out over the tenacles of the nation's telephone system.

Wives are next in line of number of calls, while sweethearts and girl friends follow as a close third. Then down the line go calls to friends, relatives and business associates. But calls of all types and every degree are merely a part of the day's work to the attendants.

Another soldier, apparently a bit more persistent, desired a change for him to remarry the girl whom he had recently divorced. He wanted the ceremony to take place over the telephone so he and his former wife could tie again the knots that would bind them together although many miles apart.

One soldier expressed a desire man of great affairs, desired a that the telephone company ar- multisided call in which he and several of his business associates in widely separated cities could carry on an important business conference in which all the members could participate by talking through the telephones on their desks.

Experiences in an attended pay station on a military post run the gamut from pathos to bathos. The attendants are often the first to hear from soldiefs that they have just assumed paternal duties. They are requested time and again to assist in advising what the little wife should be directed to name their children. In different booths at the same time, the attendants often observe one soldier who is an expectant father, another who is calling in a great emergency, a third proposing to his girl, and still another just whispering sweet nothings into the ear of a girl for whom he may or may not give a hoop.

Often the attendants see a G. I.

Armed Forces Tax Report Will Be Filed Next March

The Treasury Department has just announced that members of the Armed Forces need not file a declaration of 1943 income until next March 15, provided that a final income tax declaration is made at that time, according to an Associated Press dispatch. A report for this year was originally scheduled for no later than September 15.

Polish Refugee Travels Long Road From Warsaw To Duty With Spiriters

It was a long, long trail, starting below Warsaw, on to France and Cuba then back to France and finally to the United States, by many a devious route, that brought Pvt. David Rosen to the 176th Regiment and his job as ammunition pioneer with the 2nd Battalion.

As a boy Dave had always dreamed of coming to this country and so when his brother in Cuba offered to arrange and finance the trip he jumped at the opportunity. Leaving early in the summer of '39 he traveled to Le Havre, France, where he boarded the "Flandre" bound for Cuba. The ship arrived at its destination where he learned with dismay that his papers were no longer legal. Hundreds of refugees from Poland, Spain, Austria, Czechoslovakia, and Germany found themselves in a similar predicament, with no homeland and no other place to go.

All attempts by the Hebrew Aid Society to arrange temporary visas faile so the ship sailed on to Vera Cruz. Here they succeeded in arranging to remain until such time as they could enter the U. S. A. within the quita. The authorities informed them that if they each deposited a $1200 guarantee they could stay on temporarily. Many of the poorer people were forced to telegraph friends in the United States for the necessary money. On the following day the order was cancelled. Then to make matters worse, the tax levied on monetary exchange in the transfer from dollars to pesos and then back again amounted to over a hundred dollars on that sum. Once again the vessel made port in Cuba wher the HIAS offered the government half a million dollars to allow the refugees to remain 'til they could enter the U. S. legally. However, all attempts failed with the result that many of the despairing people slashed their wrists or hung themselves. The Cuban police were forced to board the boat to restore order and prevent further suicides and that night the boat put out to sea for the long voyage back to France.

GOOD NEWS

Two days before their arrival at Le Havre the captain called a special meeting of the passengers in the dining room to tell them the good news. England, France, Belgium and Holland each offered to harbor within their borders approximately 250 of the 1000 refugees. Dave decided to stay in France where the HIAS was instrumental in helping he and the others to exist and to finally find work.

On September 1 the Nazi hordes attacked Poland. . . True to their promise to resist any further aggression by the Germans, England and France declared war. Then followed a period of feverish preparation during which Dave got a job in a munitions factory. Six weeks later he was drafted into the Polish-French Army but since the foreman was desperately in need of trained help Dave received a temporary deferment.

The entire world was stunned by the sudden collapse of the Low Countries and France. No one knew who controlled the new government until tired old Marshal Petain addressed his nation and the world and asked Hitler for collaboration. Dave realized that he had recourse to two things. He could stay and hope for mercy at the hand of the Huns; or, he could attempt to escape from France to England like thousands of others were doing. He packed a few things and started out on the perilous journey.

14-DAY TREK

The trek from Bordeaux to Louen to Luchon, required fourteen days, the nights were spent in the forest, and the days scrambling around for enough scraps of food to keep body and soul together. Although the French peasants are traditionally friendly, German Anti-Semitic propaganda had turned them, and together with a fear of reprisals it created a hazard for Rosen to be even seen in the neighborhood of farmhouses. Arriving at Luchon, on the Franco-Spanish border, he found a camp for refugees, with indescribable conditions, but this at least was a safe haven, temporarily.

The Germans had placed Luchon in the unoccupied territory, though this did not exclude the fact that Gestapo agents were everywhere. This was to be his home for eighteen long torturous months, during which he worked in the surrounding mountains and villages, in order to have enough to live on. Finally he found the chance to get to the American consulate. He was told there, that in order to get a visa to the United States he would be required to show a reservation on a ship sailing from Lisbon, a visa from Portugal, a transit visa from Spain and a doctor's certificate stating that he was unfit for any military duty. Besides all these papers, he would require a certificate of residence from the Parisian authorities, who by now were completely Nazified.

AIDED BY FRIENDS

Thru the intercession of friends in Marseilles he managed to obtain the necessary papers and with the cooperation of a friendly and sympathetic doctor obtained a certificate proving him to save serious cardiac ailments. He had actually lost eight-four pounds in the past months.

Hearing that all travelers over 30 years of age were not required to have Spanish visas, he arrived at the customs. There he was told that he must make out an application for Spanish transit visas, even though he had but seven days in which to catch the ship at Lisbon, Portugal. By some stroke of good luck, the Madrid authorities sent back the visas, and he passed thru Spain to Portugal.

On the 1st of June he arrived at Casablanca, Morocco, and on the 7th of June at Bermuda. He was examined by the British-American military authorities and given entrance to the United States, after a slight detention. He arrived in the United States on the 25th of July, and six months later entered the Armed Forces. The total expenditure in cash for the two trips was $1700, which he had obtained in various degrees from friends and relatives.

Although David Rosen still has difficulty expressing himself and speaks a combination of Polish-Heorew, French-English, he has made great strides in our language. After completing the elementary course given by "Dean" Troxler's staff he started taking a voluntary night-course to improve his English and also to better equip himself to take his place as a citizen of the United States.

WAC-Soldier Wed At Post

Dozens of uniformed friends of bride and groom thronged the main post Catholic Chapel at 7:45 a. m. Saturday to attend the wedding of Corporal Emary W. Lade, of Headquarters Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, to Private First Class Louise M. Martin, of the 43rd WAC Detachment. Chaplain H. Hunt united the couple in the half-hour ceremony.

Among the most colorful in the history of the chapel, the rites began when khaki-clad Corporal Lade escorted his bride down the aisle to the stately strains of "Lohengrin", played by Private Winfield Davis, organist. The impressiveness of the ceremony was heightened by the bride's carefully-selected blue wedding gown and bouquet of white roses.

From the chapel, members of Headquarters Company and the WAC Detachment returned to their respective organization to enjoy the 39-pound wedding cake which awaited them at each mess hall. The couple departed for a wedding breakfast at the Ralston Hotel, Columbus, at which Lieutenant Gail Gaines, commanding officer of the 43rd WAC Detachment, and Captain Curtis J. Ivey, commander of Headquarters of Headquarters Company, 1st of Headquarters Company, 1st S. T. R., were guests of honor.

The newlyweds are spending their 5-day leave at Pine Mountain, Ga. Corporal Lade, whose home is in Watseka, Ill., met his attractive bride last March at a Headquarters Company dance. Pfc. Martin's parents live in Cleveland, Ohio.

THIS IS THE FINISHED PRODUCT of an Infantry School record-breaking machine gun demonstration in which a heavy machine gun was put into action in eight seconds flat. The demonstration, by a crew from the Academic regiment, was two-fifths of a second faster than the previous school record. The crew consists of Sgt. Daniel Benner, No. 1, Sgt. Charles Dinnebier, No. 2, and Cpl. John Carp, No. 3 (U. S. Army Signal Corps photo.)

TIS Machine Gunners Set New School Mark

Two Infantry School machine gun demonstration records were broken this week by a crew of non-coms from the Academic Regiment.

The crew first clipped two-fifths of a second off the mark for placing a heavy machine gun in action when they accomplished the job in eight seconds flat. Then they took the gun out of action in six and four-fifths seconds, a fifth of a second faster than the record.

The crew was a regular demonstration crew in the Basic Machine Gun Group and consisted of Sgt. Daniel Benner of Co. F, and Sgt. Charles I. Dinnebier and Cpl. John P. Carp of Co. E. Sgt. Dinnebier was a member of the crew which held the previous record. Others on that crew were Sgt. Edward Pagoda of Co. E and Pvt. James Pulley of Co. C.

All three members of the new record-holding crew are selectees and have been in service about a year and a half. Sgt. Benner, 25, hails from Toledo, Ohio, where he was a polisher and buffer. Sgt. Dinnebier, 30, was a truck driver in Cleveland, Ohio, and Cpl. Carp, 25, was a paper hanger in Mechanicsville, New York.

Peace be unto you, says the hospitable Moslem when he greets a stranger. Have a "Coke", says the American soldier in return, and in three words he has made a new friend. It's a phrase that works as well in Haifa as in Harrisburg. Around the globe Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the high-sign between kindly-minded people.

TIS Officer Serves From Equator to Pole

From the Equator to the Arctic Circle, and then back to summertime—Georgia, is all in a year's work for Lieutenant Randolph P. Eddy, of the 16th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment.

The lieutenant certainly gets around. After 9 months duty in Panama, he came to Fort Benning and graduated from The Infantry School in an early officer candidate class. His first assignment was to Greenland, whence he returned to Benning after serving 13 months in the icy North. In between, he just about found time to pay fleeting visits to his home in Boston, Mass.

Hard work and plain down-to-earth soldiering filled Lieutenant Eddy's nine months in Panama. As a member of the Jungleers, a detachment that trained intensively in infiltration tactics, he often had to cut his way with a machete through thick jungle or wade the waist-deep swamps of the Isthmus.

Upon receiving his commission at Fort Benning, Lieutenant Eddy was assigned to the Ice Cap Task Force in Greenland. In charge of a detail of eight sergeants, he settled down to a dreary nine month vigil on the lonely ice-cap, observing weather conditions and rescuing forced-down fliers. At times the gale howled by their rude shelter at 170 miles an hour, and the thermometer dropped to 70 degrees below zero.

ISOLATION COMPLETE

Lieutenant Eddy and his party were completely isolated during the nine month Greenland winter. Twenty well-thumbed books and a single deck of cards completed their recreational facilities, but the monotony was broken when one of their Esquimo dogs gave birth. Thereafter the puppie sprovided endless diversion.

Thankful that, as an officer candidate, he absorbed every bit of The Infantry School's unequalled instruction, Lieutenant Eddy believes that he and his men owe their lives to the map-reading ability he gained here. Finding one's way in Greenland is particularly difficult, he recalls—no landmarks break the frozen desert, and a compass and the stars, and occasionally the sun, furnish the only guides. Eventually the lieutenant taught himself celestial navigation and became quite proficient at at.

His training in weapons, too came in handy. With the nearest ordnance depot across hundreds of miles of impassable ice, his little unit had to keep its own armament in firing condition, even when sub-zero temperatures froze oil in the working parts.

After some 7 months their K rations gave out and the party had to subsist on a diet of unvaried oatmeal. Fortunately, with the coming of spring they shot some seal and fresh meat appeared on the table for the first time in months. Thawing ice finally let a PBY flying boat work closer in to shore and take them off—off to new adventures, as far as Lieutenant Eddy is concerned.

Whew, but Georgia in August is a lot hotter than Greenland, he perspiringly declares.

JOHNSON TO SCHOOL

First. Lieutenant William Johnson, personnel officer of the 283rd Quartermaster Refrigeration company at Fort Benning, has been selected to attend the two-month Quartermaster advanced field course, Camp Lee, Va., and will leave Benning shortly.

Four 3rd STR Officers Sent To Blanding

Four well known figures in the Third Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School received orders of transfer early this week to the Infantry Replacement Training Center at Camp Blanding, Fla.

Those ordered to Blanding were: Lt. Col. Marsden P. Earle, who recently relinquished command of the Fourth Battalion; Major Alfred M. Potts 2nd, former executive officer of the old Fifth Battalion; Major Harold B. Eagle, former commanding officer of the Third Company; and Capt. Harry R. Bright, former regimental adjutant.

Colonel Earle has been succeeded in the command of the Fourth Battalion by Lt. Col. Charles K. Dillingham, veteran of overseas service in both the World War and the current conflict.

Majors Eagle and Potts left the regiment several months ago to take the advanced course at The Infantry School and upon a completion of their training were assigned to the Officers' Pool while awaiting orders.

Captain Bright became adjutant of the Third Student Training Regiment upon its activation and served in this capacity until he, too, was assigned to take the advanced curse. Succeeding him as adjutant was Capt. Lyndell F. Keene. Captain Bright remained attached to the Third Student Training Regiment, however ,until receiving his recent orders of transfer.

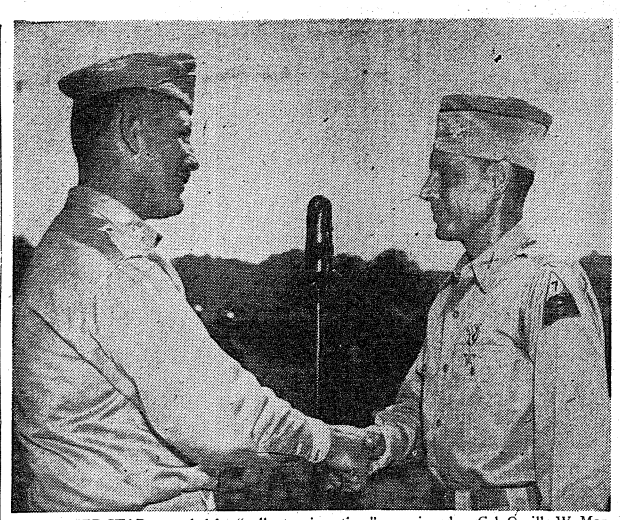
Colonel Earle's home is in Oak Lawn, Providence County, R. I; Major Potts, an educator in civilian life, comes from Plainfield, N. J.; Major Eagle's permanent address is Hinton, W. Va.; while Captain Bright is a Philadelphian.

First Regiment Hears Lectures On Strategic Isles

Officers of the First Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, enjoyed a very informative talk by Majr Harold C. Blinkenburg, who spoke on the island of Puerto Rico, its strategic, economic and topographic importance in the Caribbean Sea. Major Blinkenberg, who recently served one year on the island as a battalion executive officer, was thoroughly acquainted with his subject and gave his audience a very clear picture of what to them had been a vague and unimportant matter.

This talk was third in a series of informal lectures planned by Colonel John S. Roosma, commanding officer of the 1st S.T.R. who himself will discuss the key Hawaiian island of Oahu in the final talk of the series. The Colonel's talk will be based on first-hand knowledge, since he served over 18 months on the island.

At next week's meeting, Lieutenant Colonels Charles E. Walsh and William B. Zeller will present some facts about the Hawaiian Islands to the officers of the 1st S.T.R.



WAC Eligible For Finance School

Army Finance School instruction is now open to members of the Women's Army Corps, according to a War Department memorandum received at Fort Benning headquarters.

Already six officers of the WAC have begun the Army Finance course at Duke University, Durham, N. C., and 50 enlisted members will commence studies, August 26, at the enlisted section of Army Finance School, Wake Forest College, Wake Forest College, N. C. These are the first women to be enrolled for this course.

Selection of the 50 enlisted members will be on the basis of five from each of the four WAC training centers, three from each of the continental service commands, and three from the Military District of Washington.

Silvester, left, commanding general of the "Lucky seventh" division is congratulating Colonel Martin after the presentation before a mass formation of the division at Tiger field in the Sand Hill area of the post. Colonel Martin was cited for refusing to leave his post while directing artillery in the North African campaign Feb. 1, when, though wounded, he continued on the job until all pertinent information had been passed on to higher headquarters. Colonel Martin, 46 years old, trained with General Patton's famed 2nd armored division at Fort Benning and was serving with it in Tunisia when he was wounded. Married and the father of two children, Colonel Martin and his family reside at 101A Madden, main post at Fort Benning. (Seventh Armored Division Photo.)

Sarge Dives For Pearls In Shark-Infested Waters

All men coming back from overseas duty boast of some true experience or event they have witnessed. Such is the case with Staff Sgt. Edward Van Horne, 3rd Battalion, 6th Regiment of The Infantry School. The incident concerned took place on a small island "somewhere in the South Pacific."

One day when the sergeant had an afternoon off and he decided to use this time in the island's favorite pastime, pearl diving. The island on which he was stationed was noted as one of the world's richest pearl deposits.

The waters around the island were infested with tiger sharks, of the man-eating species. Though many of the native are killed each year by them, they still venture in this "bread-winning" practice. The pearl beds themselves are about sixty feet below the surface of the lagoons, and the divers have developed their breath-holding capacity and basal metabolism to such a degree that they can dive to this distance without the aid of any artificial device.

TIGER SHARKS

This breath - holding ability, however, is not used so much in staying below the surface to gather pearls as it is for their own protection. The waters are full of sharks. So, whenever a diver sees one of them coming while he is down a few fathoms, instead of immediately swimming to the surface to take a chance on matching his speed with that of the shark, he goes down deeper to the bottom where he crawls under the corral rock and there waits till the shark moves on. This means that a man often stays under water for five minutes or more, which sounds almost unbelievable. Then, he comes to the surface, refills his lungs, and continues on his search. Occasionally, though, a shark will come into the vicinity without being seen. This leads to the sergeant's story.

That particular afternoon the sergeant was sitting in an outrigger pulling up the baskets as soon as the natives had them filled with Mother Pearl shells. From this position he saw a shocking and nerve-tangling incident.

Suddenly a shark came into the area where a diver was below. On coming to the surface for air, the diver, warned by his fellows of the shark's approach, tried to make the nearest boat. Not in time, however.

FISH WINS

With a loud, swishing sound, the man was carried under the surface, clasped amidst the jaws of the huge fish. The other divers armed themselves with knives, jumped from their small crafts, and attacked this terror of the sea. Upon being wounded, the shark released the stricken diver. However, another shark in the area, sensing the blood, rushed in for the kill, and just as the mangled fellow was about to be hauled into the boat, shark number 2 tore him from the grasp of his rescuers and carried him off. This time it was impossible to save him, for the presence of more sharks made another rescue impossible.

MacMillan Offers $5,000 In Prizes To Army Writers

G. I. scribes are invited to compete for $5,000 in cash prizes to be given by MacMillan book publishers, New York City, for the best fiction and non-fiction novels submitted by December 31, this year.

Twenty-five hundred dollars will go to the serviceman or woman who writes the best novel, and $2,500 will be awarded to the author submitting the best non-fiction work.

Only members of the armed forces are eligible to compete.

WAC Officer Visits Fort

Captain Lee Bears Message of Praise From Col. Hobby

Bringing a message from Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, commanding officer of the Women's Army Corps, expressing her "appreciation for a job well done" for members of the WAC, Captain Phebe Lee, Section Chief, Recruiting School, at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., spent two days at Fort Benning this week.

A graduate of the first officer candidate class of the WAC at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, Capt. Lee has spent her entire enlistment in the Corps doing recruiting. She has traveled in the eastern seaboard states and did a tour of duty in the northwest of Utah, Oregon, Idaho, Washington and Montana.

Colonel Hobby sent with Captain Lee a message to WACs, congratulating them for doing a "job well done in the fact of overwhelming difficulties. That the job is only in its beginning is evidenced by the demands of commanding officers from all over the world for WACs to take up duties in all sorts of assignments," Captain Lee said.

"This desire on the part of the commanding officers for these WACs justifies, beyond doubt, their existence," Captain Lee further added.

At Benning she found the WAC Detachment, Station Complement, under the command of Lt. Gail Gaines, the WAC Detachment, Infantry School, and the 772nd Post Headquarters Company at Lawson Field taking jobs to relieve general service enlisted men in duties including chiefs, teletype operators, clerks, in the Army post-office, assistants in theaters, operating motor vehicles and in other technical jobs.

It's slipping moral standards that start an economic landslide.

Overseas Vet Relates Experiences in Jungle

After 11 months overseas with the 24th Infantry, Staff Sgt. James O. Council has returned to The Infantry School, Fort Benning to become mess sergeant for the 19th Company of the Third Student Training Regiment. Evacuated from the South Pacific theater because of ill health, he has been assigned to Company D. of the Service Battalion.

Council found it difficult to adjust himself to the climate of the South Pacific islands but he is well on the way to recovery now and those who knew him say he will provide plenty of competition for the "Star Kitchen" award that is issued among messhalls of the Fourth Battalion.

The sergeant relates that his troop transport was on the water for 24 days before effecting a landing. A circuitous route had to be followed because of the ever present peril of enemy submarines and surface craft.

NATIVES INTELLIGENT

In the landing and establishment of a beach head which eventually materialized, Council said his regiment confidently expected enemy fire. What happened was, however, that the men encountered an enthusiastic welcome from friendly natives.

The natives, too, provided a surprise, for, instead of being the cannibal-type, they were intelligent, and cooperative and some of them even spoke English, Council recalls.

Native boys, Council reveals, climbed trees to procure coconuts for the soldiers, did their laundry and taught the newcomers how to build huts of palm leaves.

After he had mastered this art, Sergeant Council personally supervised the construction of a 10-room officers quarters built entirely of palm leaves.

Council learned many other tricks of making oneself comfortable in the jungle and how to get along with the natives.

Army To Rescue As New Mother Sends Out SOS

If you think there is no shortage of civilian males in Columbus, try looking around for one when you need a strong arm.

A frantic woman was standing on the corner of Third Avenue and Ninth Street. She hailed an Army automobile. An enlisted man stepped out and crossed the street to learn what she wanted.

The woman explained that she had in her coupe a brand-new mother who had just returned from the hospital with her youngster. The mother lived on the second floor of a Third Avenue home and was in no condition to walk up the stairs.

Now Is The Time To Buy More Bonds

The Germans have scuttled like cockroaches off the Island of Sicily and an Allied invasion of the Italian mainland is imminent. Our recent pasting of Kiska, happily or unhappily, proved to be the beating of a dead horse, since the Japanese had flown the coop. The Russians have captured Kharkov and have apparently finally destroyed the German power of initiative.

All these happy events may well put heart into both the American soldier and civilian since, if we must fight a war it is far better to be engaged in a winning struggle than a losing one..

To be sure "Well begun is half done" but a half done victory is no victory at all. Let us remember that as yet neither the Germans nor the Japanese have lost a single inch of the territory for which they are fighting the war. The territories which we have recaptured are merely defensive areas around the territories which they considered vital to their several "new orders."

This is no time to rest on our oars, for if we do so we shall most certainly find all our previous sacrifices to have been in vain.

On September 9 a war loan drive in the amount of $15 billion is to be launched. This money is utterly indispensable to the prosecution of the war and it will be repaid to the lenders. Before that date another pay day for soldiers comes to pass. Let every man set aside a certain sum of money, possibly foregoing a couple of Saturday nights in town, and put that cash into war bonds. Just as surely as a soldier makes such an investment he is lessening the chances of himself or his comrades being killed or wounded. The greater the effort we make now the less is the probability of having to make much greater sacrifices in the very near future.

The average man is much too prone to live entirely in the present and leave the future to be coped with when it arrives. Every man in the American armed forces is being more than adequately clothed, fed and housed. He is aided by government in the matter of insurance and the welfare of dependents. To invest in war bonds can mean only the doing without of some minor luxury. Never mind making invidious comparisons with civilians. However great their concern is or should be with the war, ours is willy nilly a thousand times greater.

Columbus' quota in this drive is $5,601,000 and a formidable part of this should come from Fort Benning. Let us do our duty in this matter and be thankful that in our present order we do not have to be coerced.

CO Should Know His Men By Name

As a thoughtful, thorough-going unit commander, you won't be satisfied until you know the name of every man in your command. At the start, as a bare minimum, you'll want to know the names of your junior officers and non-coms, and to learn all the others as quickly as possible. The swift expansion and rapid turnover that has plagued nearly all organizations in recent years is no excuse for not taking the pains necessary to know your men by name.

Being able to call each soldier by name is an important part of your responsibility of instilling morale and strengthening subordinates' confidence in you, their leader. It furnishes tangible proof of your interest in them. More willing, conscientious execution of your orders will follow its application.

Learning to remember names and faces is not hard—every officer should make it part of his mental training. When a new officer or soldier reports, start off right by making sure you get the name—its spelling and pronunciation—correctly. Sometimes, in the haste of a formal report or an informal introduction, a man tends to slur his own name. If you've any doubt how the name is pronounced, ask him a simple question and straighten yourself out at once.

Here's where "association," as used by the psychologists and memory-training experts, enters. Even if your man merely makes a brief, official report, observe him closely and fix his prominent characteristics in mind. A longer interview, of course, furnishes greater opportunity for such observation, but in any event it can and must be made. You may note that Sergeant Gross is tall and slender—the negative association will recall his name next time you see him. Private Hardy may be sun-tanned, wiry, broad-shouldered. However foolish or far-fetched the association, its purpose is served when the sight of a certain face or figure inveriably calls to mind the corresponding name.

Once the man has left, you can pull out his credentials or records and refresh your memory on the correct way to spell his name, his physical characteristics, or any other information you want to associate mentally with him.

By following this procedure whenever a soldier reports for the first time or a new man joins your company, it won't be long before you can address every member of your command by name. And you've made more than a good start in building the "esprit de corps" of the outfit that's going to follow you into battle.

—Col. J. S. Roosma,
CO, 1st STR.

America Will Be Pantry Of The World

Besides the people of the United States, millions of additional hungry mouths today are calling to and depending on America for food. And when this war is over, America will have to feed many millions more . . . as many as three hundred million more.

To supply today all these staggering demands, and in anticipation of future needs, our formers throughout the nation are going all-out to exceed many fold previous productions.

The states of North Dakota and Idaho, Montana, Washington, Minnesota and Oregon alone have produced 342,668,000 bushels of wheat. This sounds enormous, but add to this the production of all remaining farmers in the United States and the figures become unbelievable.

Another small army of new farmers like the civilians, who never before had to plant their own food, because of the surplus, are now using every inch of fertile soil to grow their own vegetables and fruits. These civilians by planting their own victory gardens are aiding our government to win this war, because this will release millions of bushels of vegetables and fruits for our fighting men, our Allies, and the starving people of the nations that are being set free by our armies of occupation. The more lands we conquer, the more people we will have to feed, and we feel it our duty as patriotic citizens of this great democratic nation to keep these people with a sufficient supply of food. Starving people are revolutionary because empty stomachs make people restless and drives them to all kinds of crime to feed their loved ones and themselves.

It is to our benefit to keep all people happy and well fed; this will win their confidence in our sincerity to defeat the Axis dictators, and we will need their support and cooperation. By obtaining their confidence will mean the release of many of our fighting men to enter new fields of conquest instead of policing conquered areas.

—Frank I. Ciofalo, Major, M. C.,
Regimental Surgeon, 1st Stu. Tng. Regt.

Global War Calls For Total Sacrifice

This global war involves all the continents, all the oceans, all the islands, all the people around the whole wide world. The contending forces are powerfully armed and the issues at stake are vitally important to all mankind.

There are now more men and women under arms today than ever before, and more destruction of foods and supplies than ever before. Victory and defeat are on a huge and unprecedented scale. There are mass movements of troops with mass production, also mass flights over incredible distances, even mass bombardments and mass executions.

This war is producing the fastest planes, the heaviest battleships, the most powerful guns, the longest range submarines, the most deadly poison gas, and more important of all, the most remarkable remedies for the wounded.

It demands great men with heroic deeds. It calls for vision, faith, courage, selfless devotion to duty, and the will to liberate the needy and oppressed peoples of the conquered nations.

We, the people of America, who have always been accustomed to surpluses and luxury are now willingly undergoing scarcity, rationing, and doing without many pleasures, and conveniences to which we were always accustomed.

Our people are undergoing hardships, and are willing to tighten their belts more and more each day, just as long as our armed forces are supplied with the necessary foods and implements of war to win victory and freedom for us all.

This is indeed the right time for greatness of character and greatness of effort. Let us not fail our fighting men in this hour of need, and let us put all our might behind our country, and our fighting men in all theatres of operations who are spilling their blood to help us remain free.

—Major Frank I. Ciofalo,
Regimental Surgeon, 1st Stu. Tng. Reg.

USO Presents—

TALKING LETTERS HOME, A PICNIC, AND SERIES OF MONDAY NITE DANCES

By PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

Ed's, Note: All times are Eastern War Time.)

Probably thousands of soldiers stationed at Fort Benning these past months have sent home "talking letters" to mothers, wives and sweethearts, but the new plan adopted at the Army-Navy YMCA-USO sends not only the recording but also a picture of the serviceman while he is making the record. . . . The recording sessions are held every Tuesday from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. during which time between 35 and 50 servicemen are taken care of, according to Mr. G. W. Avison, director.

A recent story about the new service at the YMCA-USO relates that almost 90 per cent of the soldiers who send recorded letters home also "throw in" a bit of crooning. . . . The records are three-inch discs, and photographs, snapped by Pfc. J. L. DeLaney, candid cameraman of Fort Benning, are enlarged to four by five inches.

* * *

A picnic to the old Phenix City waterworks and a skating and bowling party at Idle Hour Park highlight the week's program at the Phenix City USO. . . . The picnic will begin at 5:30 p. m., Saturday from the club and will offer swimming, boating, games and Victorettes. . . . Reservations will be held for 50 soldiers. . . . The skating and bowling partly will leave the USO Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. and will be on a "Dutch treat" basis.

* * *

A series of Monday night dances for the 300th Infantry has been scheduled at the Army-Navy YMCA-USO. . . . For these affairs, which start at 8:30 p. m., the USO will furnish the hall, the refreshments, and the girls, the 300th will provide the manpower.

* * *

All men of the 7th Armored Division are invited ot the dance tonight at the Ninth Street USO which will be the official welcoming of the unit to Fort Benning and Columbus. . . . The soiree will be formal and will begin at 9 p. m. . . . Music will be provided by the orchestra of the 31st Armored Regiment. . . . The dance will be sponsored as a combined effort of all the USOs in Columbus.

* * *

The Town Hall program Sunday at 3 p. m., at Ninth Street USO will be entitled "World at War" and will be concerned with the global aspects of the conflict. . . . Miss Grace Hunter, dramatic soprano of Columbus, will give a recital Tuesday at 9 p. m., in the auditorium of the Ninth Street USO. . . She has returned from her studies at the Boston Conservatory of Music.

Coincidence------

IS A STRANGE, STRANGE THING AS THE STORY OF MIKE AND SONJA SHOWS

By CAPT. F. M. SCHILLING
1st STR.

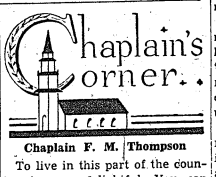
There are still a lot of people in the world who use the word "coincidence" when they can't explain the unconscious powers of the mind, or a strange series of events. Em does, although she isn't quite sure if it's only by chance that things often happen in the mysterious way that they do.

The other night, for example, she jumped out of the chair when the telephone rang, laid down the book she was reading, remarked that "it's mother calling from New York," and answered the phone. Of course it was her mother, alright, but how did Em know? She couldn't explain. I couldn't either for that matter. We share the phone with two other families. Em didn't have any prearranged plan for a telephone conversation with her mother. Then how could she possibly have made the remark, "It's mother calling from New York"? Did the telephone have a different ring to it? Was she concentrating on something that concerned herself and her mother at the very second that the phone rang? How did she know? Em had been so sure when she picked up the receiver. Fellows at the company remarked that they had experienced the same thing at one time or another. Would you call this "cincidence"?

The strangest story about "coincidence" cncerns a pal of mine who saw action with me at Mistretta. A big husky Irish lad he was. Mike Flaherty was his name, and he was as tough as his name sounded. He was tops as a soldier, one of the best in the business. If he hadn't tried a body block on a piece of lead he'd probably be wearing sergeant's chevrons right now. He might have been wearing them last year if it hadn't been for a girl. Mike was big and tough until it came to women; then he changed into a clumsy, gawky, long-legged youngster who was as sentimental and love-struck as only a twentyone year old can be. He had it bad. But I'll admit, the object of all his devotion was pretty nice. Mike showed me her picture once. She was a honey, except for the fact that she made Mike unhappy. He told me all about it one night while we were still in Africa. It's a pretty long story.

While our outfit was stationed in the States Mike met Sonja. He was sort of lonely one night and just dropped in at the U.S.O. to see was was doing. He peeked into the ballroom to look at the dancers . . . then he saw her. Of course he couldn't do much talking that night. There were at least fifty fellows to every girl, he explained later. But he did fix himself up with a date for the following Saturday, and he hitchhiked all the way to Boston to keep it. He started to commute back and forth between Boston and the camp after that. The forty-odd miles were nothing for a fellow who knew he was in love. Mike was in love with Sonja. He worshipped the ground she walked on, if I'm any judge of the disease. He called her his little "svenska flicka", or more often, his "princess".

Mike told me about how and why they had parted. I guess it was mainly because she was already engaged to a captain in the Air Force. But the kid didn't let that stop him. Love is love, as I see it, and the kid didn't let the rank of his competition scare him. But Sonja wasn't changing her mind. It finally looked as if Mike was out-classed. One more try and he'd walk out of the picture without getting burned. That's what he thought at the time. Even when he tried to joke about it while we were together on the desert I could see he didn't mean it. Mike didn't get burned, he just got cremated, that's all.



The last time he went to Boston he sent ahead the little message that he was coming . . . red and white roses tied with a blue and white ribbon. According to Mike this was supposed to stand for a whole lot. The red and white roses meant "I'll love you forever". The blue and while ribbons were the colors of Sweden; wasn't she his "svenska flicka", his "princess". But the flowers didn't make an impression. She didn't hurry down to the lobby where he was waiting. He sent up another messenger to get her answer to his flowers. That may sound screwy, but Mike said the flowers were really asking her to meet him in the lobby after work. Sonja hadn't bothered to recognize his question. The other times she had always sent back a note saying "The boss is leaving early tonight, I can meet you in fifteen minutes", or "The district manager is checking the books. I'll be a little late, darling". This time there was no answer. The messenger came back with a plain white index card. Across one side was written, "Thanx, Sonja".

Mike went over to the drug store in the other end of the lobby and phoned up to the office. "It's Just no use, Mike", he heard her say. He tried to explain. He tried to plead. It was no use. Sonja wanted a few weeks without seeing him to make up her mind. As far as she was concerned now, the captain was still leading the race for her heart. She'd let Mike know in a few weeks just how things turned out. She would let Mike know just as soon as she was sure of herself. She said she liked Mike an awful lot, but she wasn't sure. It would take time. She'd let Mike know. She'd let him know by writing a note. Mike would understand when he received a note in which she signed her name and dotted the "j". That sounded strange, so I asked Mike what it meant. He told me that in all the notes and letters he had received from her the "j" in Sonja had never been dotted. This would be the sign that she loved him. Mike would come back to claim her when the "j" was dotted.

That's about all Mike told me of his love life. The kid never got a chance to find out whether Sonja cared for him. A week after that last trip to Boston our outfit left the country. And now Mike was dead. I came back to the States on a hospital ship; it's only my arm that's hurt. I came back to a hospital not so far from Eew England. One day while Em was visiting me we made up our minds to go to Boston and have a talk with Sonja the first chance we got. That was a week ago.

I was given a leave starting last Saturday. My arm is pretty well healed by now. Of course I wanted to go home to Vermont to spend a little time with my folks, but Boston isn' so far out of the way. Besides, I sort of wanted to hurt Sonja by telling her just what a strange smile the kid had on his face when he died.

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

To live in this part of the country is very delightful. You can go places without much thought or preparation. There is no need for ear muffs, overcoats, blankets, hot water bottles, mud chains; you can travel very light.

That is the way most of us would like to go through life; free from all care encumbrances, saved from all hardships; content to let others hold the sack, be responsible for th etraining of the young, welfare agencies, schools, churches, good government. No doubt this way affords a lot of satisfaction.

But one can travel too light for his own good and the good of society. The gentry who have only to button their coats to be on their way are not the most desirable citizens. Weights serve a useful purpose. Ballast keeps the ship on even keel, in fair and foul weather.

Men need ballast. The "ball and chain" is more than an inane description in one's wife. The married are more reliable than the unmarried. And those who possess a home and children more so.

It is the people who are settled, under obligation, have civic duties to perform, that make a town, a city, a worth while place to live in. That is a loss suffered by folks in the army. They are here and there—ships that pass in the night. It is a great loss. For there is nothing finer than to build yourself into the life of a community and share in its hardships as well as in its benefits. Paul illuminates out thought when he writes:

Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ.

Sgt. McDonald's Basket

T. P. URGES SARGE TO READ UP ON WORLD'S LITERARY MASTERS

By S.-Sgt. TOM McDONALD

During the long period of my career in which I have served in the capacity of private secretary and "yardbird extraordinary" to my commanding officer, Colonel T. P. Swampwater, many and varied have been the trials and tribulations I have been called upon to undergo.

During "Siesta" this afternoon, while I was vitally absorbed and at the same time attempting to improve my mind with an ardent perusal of Hemingway's "The Killers," I was suddenly propelled back to reality by Private Sawgrass emotionally shouting "Attention! Attention!" and pointing wildly toward the office entrance with his thumb.

Silhouetted in the doorway and startingly prevalent was none other than Brigadier General Auspur G. Quagmire. After careening violently in my swivel chair and landing one foot in the waste basket I managed to assume the position of attention, totally unaware that Hemingway's "The Killers" was huddled very unvicariously upon the floor.

"My commanding officer, Sir, is now over at the W. A. C. mess hall investigating a rumor that our "sister-soldiers" have learned to make synthetic chewing gum out of old bath caps and sorghum syrup."

"Indeed!" replied ol' one-star, raising his eyebrows. "And why in tarnation didn't he let me know about it?"

"He intends to, Sir," I admitted, not unaware that Private Sawgrass was disappearing behind the northside filing cabinet, a spot he usually retired to when sleepy, perplexed or frightened.

"Well, Hell and Highwater, Sergeant! You tell that chewing gum patriot to get me a report through channels on his investigation by tomorrow morning or I will raise hell. Also add the recipe as a supplement.

Yes, Sir," I answered, silently kicking the waste basket with my free foot, an unintended action which immediately drew the General's attention. With cold incalculable vision he leaned over and made a reconnaissance of my situation. Slowly recovering himself to his position of "ramrod" attention, he focused one of his eyes on me and softly snarled:

"Soldier, how long have you been in the Army?"

"I'm a recruit, Sir," I gulped, sensing trouble and hoping for the best. But the best wasn't in the deal. With a greedy animal-like leer the great man threw back his shoulder and replied:

"I believe you, Sergeant, implicitly! Nobody but a recruit could work for T. P. Swampwater and stay in his right state of mind. So just as a personal favor Sergeant, I will arrange to have your supply sergeant issue you another shoe in place of that waste basket."

"I have my other shoe, Sir," I pleaded.

"Well, where in the hell is it?" he growled.

"In the waste basket, sir."

"Well, get it the hell out! I'm utterly exasperated. What in the hell goes on around here?"

"Nothing, Sir," I stammered, yanking my foot out of the basket minus the shoe.

"By the great horned spoon!" the ol' boy yelled. "You don't have on any socks."

"Yes I have, Sir, it's on the other foot."

"Other foot! Gadamighty, do you mean you only have on one sock?"

"Yes, Sir," I replied, "the G. I. laundry is saving my other one for posterity."

"Well, it beats me, Sergeant, it utterly beats me. I'm going to let Swampwater worry with you, after all you're his problem, not mine."

"Yes, Sir," I answered as I bowed my head.

"I'm going now, Sergeant. The state of affairs in this office is utterly preposterous. But, don't you dare forget to tell Swampwater to report to me about that chewing gum!"

"Yes, Sir," I answered.

Then as the General turned, I sensed the approach of disaster. Utterly unaware of Hemingway's "The Killers" he suddenly tripped on the book and fell headlong against one of the nearby cuspidors scattering tobacco juice in all directions.

Leaping to his side I helped him to his feet and offered him his hat.

Silently and without further ado he yanked the hat out of my hand, wiped off the tobacco juice with his sleeve and stalked out of the office red with rage.

Hobbling, quickly to the nearest window I noticed that he was headed in the direction of the W. A. C. mess hall.

With a strange sinking feeling in the pit of my stomach, I hopped over to the northside filing cabinet and from the dark dark backside, I could see Private Sawgrass's eyes staring at me in anticipation.

"Move over," I muttered, squeezing into the remaining darkness with great uncertainty.

Kay's Husband Says—

THERE'S NO USE MAKING UP BEDS ONLY TO MUSS THEM AGAIN

In addition to my food difficulty, the house here on the post offers problems which lessen the pleasure I enjoyed a year ago when Kay went off to the North.

That period of a month ago was indeed a vacation for me. Cronies who felt that home was a place one went to only as a last resort reported faithfully to keep me company and many problems were solved in these conferences.

* * *

Glass rings (which came off when Kay came back) decorated the tables. Leather chairs acquired a distinctive greenish mould. Anyone knows, of course, that it was much too hot to change clothes upstairs, and, naturally, the clothes taken off downstairs had a way of remaining here and there about the living room. Men take that sort of thing for granted.

* * *

My bed on the porch off the living room was smoothed out when I expected guests, but I seldom expected them so it usually presented a friendly tousled appearance. One of the things which it seems to me women waste so much time on is the making of beds and my chief gripe against our company commander when I was in the Infantry School was his foolish insistence that beds be made. What earthly use is there, say I, of making a bed in the morning just to unmake it to sleep in at night?

We were writing and preparing the "Cheers From the Camps", Columbia Broadcasting System program, right at that time too, and script writers, directors and what not found in my place a haven. Some of the best parts of that show, particularly the religious note, were conceived amidst piled up ash trays and general disorder. In fact, this was more than a house. It was a home that showed definite signs of having been lived in.

* * *

But this year there is Jean, an energetic, efficient soldier's wife who makes her home in ours. She supervised also the colored man who comes in once a week. Ash trays are emptied, floors are scrubbed, beds are made, things are picked up. My one note of defiance occurred this morning when I told her not to let him touch the top of my bureau where I have my one orgy of disorder and where I know where every last thing is.

* * *

Kay complained last year about the accumulation of soda bottles but I smoothed her out when the PX made a magnificent refund for the whole lot. This year such things are frowned upon, and there is no such accumulation to show.

To top the whole thing off General Rosenberger tells me that the General doesn't like the piles of stuff on my desk nor the disorder on the desks of the other former newspapermen in the office. I'm worried for fear that women and the Army together are going to remove the last vestige of freedom I've enjoyed all these years. The reaction or the swing of the pendulum might be terrific. Right now I envy a nice, interesting beachcomber.

High Jewish Holidays Slated

The High Jewish Holy Days, Rosh Hashonah or the New Year and Yom Kippur, Day of Atonement, will be celebrated respectively from sundown Wednesday, September 29 to sundown Friday, October 1, and from sundown Friday, October 8 to sundown Saturday, October 9, Chaplain Samson A. Shain, Jewish chaplain at Fort Benning, announces.

A complete schedule of services for the celebration of these holidays will be announced later.

Officials at post headquarters are calling the attention of unit commanders to a War Department circular which states in effect that members of the Jewish faith in the service desiring to attend services on the post or in adjacent communities may be permitted to do so and may be absent from the post for such period as will enable them to be at their place of worship as publicly announced, provided no serious interference with their military training is occasioned thereby.

G. I. Theater

The past week or so was crammed with action on the entertainment front: Doughboy Stadium was the scene of the first two performances of "Camel Caravan" . . . they gave out cigarettes for free. And a few days before the Caravan came in the ASTP's "Priorities" was presented, unveiling some fine talent. Most outstanding being Sgt. Ed Bennetti, an old favorite. OC Paul Hilliard and his frau Lucille Hilliard, both well known on the concert stage. Then there was Alta Riffle (T-5) of The Infantry School WAC Detachment and here is where we start losing our critical head and go overboard 'cause we think this little vocalist is as poised and talented a little performer as we have ever seen. More about her at a later date. Posies too for Cpl. Murray Austrain for whipping together a solid little band in less than two weeks time. That takes more than just work.

S-Sgt. Owen J. Remington, of the Public Relations Office, is doubling in brass these days. Not only does he write and produce this Post's big weekly broadcast, "Listen It's Fort Benning" but he now stages two little 'live' shows each week (Tuesday and Thursday) at the Patio Grill.

The Post's Special Service Office valiantly flaunts the heroic banner borne by all good troops . . . 'Taint so, an alert crew will have the seats dried, the stage set and the show will go on!!!

Lawson Field presented a bevy of beautiful babes from six to sixty (so we've heard) and they sang and danced all over the place.

The next big attraction scheduled is "High, Wide and Handsome," a musical featuring Dick Rogers and his band and Duke McHale, who had Broadway eating peanuts out of his hand just a few seasons ago. It comes in on the 28th of this month.

AND ELSEWHERE—

The cast of the Army's own show, "This Is the Army" concluded its cross-country tour and picture assignment which lasted a year and a half in all and returned to their old stompin' ground where the show was originated. . . The 300 soldiers who tok part in the production will remain at Upton to complete their military training and then will be formed into two overseas units.

It is not too late to enter the National Theater Conference's Playwriting Contest for men and women in the Armed Services. Deadline is Sept. 1st. Over $1,000 in cash prizes for winning full length jobs, one-acters, blackouts and sketches. Scripts should be mailed to National Theater Conference, Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio.

Camp Kilmer was the scene of show biz's latest innovation when "Run, Little Chillun" a new B'way production was given a two day tryout to a strictly G. I. audience. The play was presented under the auspices of USO Camp Show's Inc. by arrangement with the producers who believed that an audience of service men would prove a better gauge than that which might be obtained from trial performances on the road.

Organizations planning to utilize WAC talent in their entertainment programs would do well to consult Memorandum—W635-15-43, headed Participation of Members of WAAC-WAC in Theatrical Performances.

1st STR Officers Find Physical Ed Streamlines Figger

Assigned officers of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, are beginning to feel the benefits of the stringent physical program recently innovated. Officers formerly deskbound by endless streams of paper-work are now regaining their sylph-like figures through a controlled athletic program instituted and supervised by the regimental commander, Colonel John S. Roosma.

From 1st to the 4th battalions, 1st S.T.R. officers are spending fixed periods of time each week engaged in joint athletic activities.

Novel Way To Stop Hiccoughs But— We'll Take Vanilla

Candido 'Pancho' Rosado, a private in the 5th Company of the Sixth Basic Training Regiment, had a fit of hiccoughing in the regimental barber shop. When the attack failed to respond to the numerous methods suggested by the barbershop's customers, one of the barbers suddenly turned on Pancho, wielding a razor.

His rage appeared genuine as he slashed at the bewildered Pancho. Pancho ducked the swipe and started on the offensive. Suddenly he stopped and the barber smiled.

The hiccoughs also had stopped and Pancho also smiled.

Colonel Rooks Gets Food Job

Officer To Assist In Coordinating In 4th Service Command

Col. R. M. Rooks, commandant of the Bakers and Cooks School at Fort Benning will act as assistant in a plan to co-ordinate all activities for the distribution and conservation of food within the Fourth Service Command, it was announced today by Col. William F. Riter, Atlanta, chief of the quartermaster branch, who has been named as Director of Food Service in the command.

The food service program will include supervision and inspection of all Army messes; conservation, distribution, preparation and consumption of food; technical training of mess supervisors; cooks and bakers and mess management.

A food service supervisor will be appointed at each Army installation under the jurisdiction of the Army Service Forces all through the Army, to coordinate all activities for the distribution and conservation of food, it was announced.

Also named as an assistant in carrying out the program in the Fourth Service Command was Capt. Milton O. Lee, Food and Nutrition Officer, medical branch at headquarters of the Command. Col. Riter, Col. Rooks and Captain Lee recently attended a conference in Chicago, together with food service supervisors from Camp Blanding, Fla., Camp Shelby, Miss., Fort Jackson, S. C., Camp Rucker, Ala., and Camp Forrest, Tenn.

Latest 1A in the major leagues is Les Webber, Brooklyn relief pitcher, who was reclassified from 4F. Webber expects induction before the season ends.

War Prisoner Camp Enlisted Men Decorated

Before a mass retreat formation, 29 enlisted men of Headquarters Detachment, (CMP) Prisoner of War Camp, were decorated by Colonel George M. Chescheir, commanding officer of the Camp, situated in the Harmony Church Area of Fort Benning.

The good conduct ribbon for efficiency and faithful performance of duty was given to Sergeant W. R. Fowler, 1st Sgts. F. Suprenant, Technical Stg. Antonio L. Lopardo, Staff Sgts. Edwin E. Currence, Stephen Monaco, Robert L. Noedel, Minifield W. Purvis, James M. Southerland, Jr., and John K. Williams.

The American Defense ribbon awarded to men in service from Sept. 8 to Dec. 7, 1941, was awarded to 1st Sergeants Frank Morrow, Reuben L. Satterfield, Thomas Smith, Augustine F. Suprenant, and Staff Sgt. Robert L. Noedel. Other men receiving this award were 1st Sgts. Thomas Allen, Albert H. Krick, Technical Sgts. Robert L. Templeton, Staff Sgt. James F. Starks, Sgt. Edward G. Randal, Technical Fourth Grade Wilbur E. Anding, Paris R. Garett, Robert R. Palmer, William E. Randall, William E. Watson, Cpls. Frank Silverman, Strayer G. Schwartz, Technician 5th Grade Robert J. Cianchetti, Pvts. Joseph M. Jennings, Jr., James D. Johnson and Joseph Schechter.

QM Quarter Hour Changed

"The Quartermaster Quarter Hour" one of Fort Benning's oldest radio programs, has been shifted to a new time on Station WRBL in Columbus. Starting last Monday, the broadcast is aired on Monday evenings at 7:15 (EWT).

The fifteen-minute informative program has been aired for more than a year from the studio in Service Club No. 1 with the same cast, consisting of Col. Stephen B. Massey, post director of supply and Staff Sgt. Carl Neu, of the public relations staff.

Neu conducts the interview each week with Colonel Massey supplying a wealth of behind-the-scenes information on the varied activities of the quartermaster branch of the Army Service Forces. In the 60 programs that have been presented to date, the Q. M. official has discussed everything from dehydrated foods to war dogs.

Next Monday night at the new time of 7:15 on Mondays, Colonel Massey will again discuss dehydrated foods, telling of the latest developments in that field and how the war-time discoveries of the Quartermaster Corps will influence post-war food problems.

400 ASTP Men Arrive

Approximately 400 new ASTP trainees arrived during the last two days and have been assigned to the 1st and 2nd Companies of the 5th Training Regiment of the Infantry School, according to an announcement by Colonel Kenneth S. Whittemore, commanding officer of the regiment.

The trainees came to Fort Benning from various posts, including Camp Upton, N. Y., Fort Dix, N. J., Fort Snelling, Minn., Fort Logan, Colo., and Fort McPherson, Ga. Among the men who will receive their basic training with the 5th are representatives of a number of universities and colleges, such as Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cornell, Harvard, Yale, Minnesota, Alabama, Citadel, Princeton University of Pennsylvania, St. Mary's and the College of the City of New York.

Major Lionel C. Bell commands the 1st Battalion and it is expected that an additional 600 men will arrive within the next few days to bring the battalion up to full strength. The two companies already received their full complement of trainees are commanded by Captains E. N. Ross, Jr., and Burk Y. Herrin.

Chinese Soldier Made Colonel's Orderly Thrice

Pfc. Leong Yow of Company B, 300th Infantry, has been on guard duty three times since joining this Infantry School Regiment and on each occasion has been selected as the Colonel's Orderly. That in itself is something of an achievement.

Pfc. Yow, who is Chinese, knows what bombings are all about. Less than three years ago Yow was still a Chinese citizen residing with his family in Canton, China. He lived through daily bombings from the Japanese Air Force and witnessed the bayonet murder of a Chinese child by the sons of heaven.

He managed to get to America and obtained work in his brother's grocery store in San Francisco. In the short time he has been in this country he has picked up a working knowledge of English, and now, although still retaining some of the singing qualities of his native tongue, speaks English in a way that would put many an American to shame.

Yow was inducted at the Presidio Monterey, San Francisco, in October, 1942, completed his basic training at Fort McClellan and came here to Benning with the first group to form the 300th Infantry in December, 1942. At the present time he is in a heavy weapons platoon and hopes some day to lob many a devastating shell from his 68-mm mortar on the sons of heaven.

Yow's mother and sister are still in China. His brother is with the Air Force in Tennessee.

Contrary to a widespread misunderstanding, soldiers serving in the A. S. T. P. will not be required to serve any longer than men in any other branch of service.

During a recent month 9,000,000 pounds of candy were bought by the Quartermaster's Depot at Jersey City.

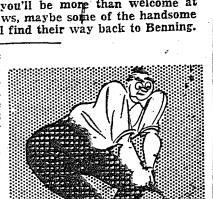
BY SGT. CARL NEU

IT WILL BE a great thrill for this scribbler at least to watch Alice Marble and Mary Hardwick volley across the nets at the Officers' Club courts on Sunday night when they play their exhibition here. It'll seem like old times. We were fortunate enough to have a ringside seat on the night of January 8, 1941 (in pre-Army days) at New York's vast Madison Square Garden when Alice and Mary opened their nation-wide pro tour with Don Budge and Bill Tilden. They played beautifully that night, and Marble won by the English lass gave our girl a great battle and it was a thrilling match. Then, when they teamed up for mixed doubles with the two maestros, Budge and Tilden, the competition was even greater. It was a thrilling night of tennis.



We've always been a great admirer of Alice Marble's brand of tennis, even way back in Forest Hills days when she was winning the national singles crown. She strokes more like a male player than any woman we've watched and that includes quite a few of the more recent top-notchers. Her coordination is perfect, she plays with a fire and spirit and plays always to win. Her service is terrific, and her motions on the court belie the fact that she is a woman. Yet, she is a very lovely lady off the court, and one of the finest examples of our long-time belief that a woman can be an athlete and a feminine lovely at one and the same time.

Mary Hardwick, too, is a great player although she never reached Marble's peak. But she can always give a good account of herself, and has beaten Alice on numerous occasions during their exhibitions in the past two years.. It was Mary who once said that tennis is a truly international game and a tennis racket can serve as an interpreter all over the world. And she's right, if you'll remember peace-time days when many different nations used to be represented in the Wimbledon and Forest Hills events. Yessir, it'll sure bring back memories Sunday to see Alice and Mary play again.

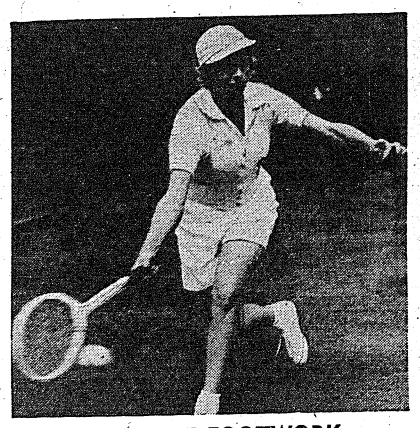
LATEST BALLPLAYER of note to arrive at Fort Benning is Boyd Bartley, the sensational rookie shortstop that Branch Rickey grabbed off the Illinois College campus in June to plug the infield gap on his faltering Brooklyn Dodgers. Bartley was the talk of the country right then, but his stay in Dodger livery was short because he needed more seasoning and after playing a couple of weeks in the big time, the Bums sent him to Montreal for development. But then, Uncle Sam stepped in and called up Bartley from his ROTC list. Now, he's going through the Infantry School officer candidate course in the 3rd STR. Here's hoping that the kid shortstop is assigned here and sticks around long enough to play some ball at Gowdy Field next year. If he caught Rickey's eye that way, he ought to do the same for the optics of soldier fandom.

EVEN THOUGH Benning was not informed until middle of this week about the event, there's still time for any crack swimmers or divers at the post to enter the big affray up at Emory University in Atlanta over this week-end. The affair is the southeastern A. A. U. Servicemen's Meet, and there'll be competition in seven events. There are also a few events for service women included on the program. No A. A. U. registration numbers are necessary, so if you're an aquatic star and expect to be in Atlanta on Saturday night, you'll be more than welcome at the Emory U. pool, and who knows, maybe some of the handsome prizes that are being offered will find their way back to Benning.

IT LOOKS LIKE there may be a post golf league formed to operate during the early fall months. Although the regimental links campaign is getting a late start, there are now three units with full-fledged squads ready for inter-regimental competition, and a fourth club is expected to form shortly. The 176th Spirits and 124th Gators have already met in an informal match, and now the 1st Training Regiment has tossed its hat into the golf ring. If and when the 300th Infantry gets its team organized, a compact four-club league will be formed to determine the regimental golf champion of the fort. The idea sounds swell and it would give athletes in tre grand old sport to share some of the limelight that is usually accorded the baseballers and gridmen.

OUTDOOR SPORTSMEN in the Academic Regiment have just about the nicest set-up we've heard about in a long time if they want to make use of it on a furlough or pass. The regiment has a rest camp in Destin, Florida, not too far from here which is strictly for enlisted men and their families who want to get away from the Army a bit and enjoy a rough, simple life. It's evidently a swell place to fish, swim and just rest. The camp sets back a mile and a half from the main road and is situated near waters that abound in blue-fish, mackerel, red snappers, flounders and crabs. Deep sea fishing, closed now to civilians, is permitted for soldiers who need only produce their dog-tags. That's really a set-up of which the regiment may well be proud.

CRACK COLORED nines from at least five other camps are expected to come here during the third week in September for the Colored Southeastern Servicemen's Baseball tourney, which will be sponsored jointly by the F. B. A. A. and the Columbus Sportsmen's Club. Camp Wheeler, Camp Blanding, Gunter Field, Tuskegee Army Flying School and Tuskegee Army Hospital have already signified their intentions of entering the affair. Five of Benning's best service teams will probably make it a ten-team tourney, with half the games to be played at Gowdy Field and the remainder in Golden Park in Columbus. It should produce some crack games to top off the diamond season of 1943, undoubtedly the greatest in the fort's history.



FOOTBALL NEWS is slow breaking, even though at least three elevens are hard at work on their training. Reason is that everyone is knee-deep in schedule problems, but we promise that by next week, there'll be plenty of good news for the fort football fans. Looks like there'll be just the three big teams in the conference this year, but they'll probably play one another twice instead of once as last year. Many colleges are playing home-and-home games this fall with the mortality rate amongst grid teams being so high. Besides, the local tilts, though, there will probably be a good sprinkling of outside games to spice up the schedule and some of them may be with leading college elevens in the southeast. All you can do is wait and hope.

SHORT SHOTS—All-star teams in all post diamond leagues will be picked and announced in the Bayonet in a couple of weeks. . . . Hear that Billy Conn now tips the scales at 215. Remember when experts said that if he could add 15 pounds to his 175, he would beat Joe Louis. . . . Hot rumor this week was that Lew Jenkins, the former lightweight champ, was here at the post. Truth is that it's Lew's brother, Francis, and he's in the 176th but not a boxer. . . . It won't be long till another bowling season rolls around now that the post alleys are getting their annual repair job. . . . Garnet Mercer, Prof baseballer, replaced Capt. Bob Homan as manager of the Prof softballers when the captain went off to school last week. . . . Football isn't even here yet, but we've already heard of a team ordering it's basketball uniforms. How the time does fly, and how this column rambles on until someone writes "30," so here it is until next time.

Lawson Grabs Laurels As Pitcher Loses No-Hitter

Varchminn Defeated In District Finals For Softball Title

Lawson Field defeated 1st Academic company, Parachute school, by a score of 1-0 at Pittman Field in Bibb City Friday night in the final game of the district softball tournament.

Everything happened in this game—from a team winning the championship on no hits, to a round of fisticuffs. The setup was the deciding game of the district softball meet with a trip to the state tourney in Atlanta awaiting the winner.

Lawson managed to get one run across home plate in the first inning via a Parachute School error, and that was all the scoring for the night. Both teams "goosegged" from there, and as a result, Lawson Field grabbed the title without making base hit.

PITCHES HITLESS BALL

Earl Varchminn, Parachute pitcher, and one of the best ever seen here, was the victim, losing a tough one in which he pitched hitless softball. His only mistake was walking a batter in the first inning.

In the first of the seventh, a Lawson batter bunted, and the ball was fielded on the first base line by Varchminn.

In the first of the seventh, a Lawson batter bunted, and the ball was fielded on the first base line by Varchminn.

ONLY ONE HIT

The Parachute team secured one hit off the pitching of Rajobbie against Lawson's no safeties. Five errors marred the play, three by the winners and two by the losers.

Lawson Field players, who were presented the winner's cup by District Commissioner Hugh Bentley, are now invited to take part in the state meet in Atlanta, the dates to be announced later.

Paratroopers Are Up In Arms Over Story Of Softball Tilt In Bayonet

By PVT. FOUNTAIN MEADOWS
The Parachute School

There was peace and quiet on the muscle-clad campus of The Parachute School on the afternoon of Thursday, Aug. 19, 1943. Sweetness and light reigned. Life was beautiful and the softball title was in the bag.

ASSAULT BY PRESS

And then what happened? Stukas? Spies? Sabotage? No. We were assaulted in the rear and on the flanks by the press. Boom it went with "Softball Ace Wanted Story in the Bayonet So Naturally We Oblige" written by (in VERY large letters) Pee F. Cee Woodall. The Nazis in Poland, the low countries and France. The Japs at Pearl Harbor. Same thing. Stealthily we were stalked in our sleep—the sleep of the innocent.

But no more!

Aux armes! Awake! We have been undone, calumniated, castigated, lambasted and generally made to appear as immodest and publicity-mad guys. We are not. We lay no claim to undue advertisement of our prodigious prowess. It speaks for itself, John.

WRITER UNKNOWN

We do not know this, this Woodall person. And we can't, for the life of us, figure out his infantile attitude. We prefer not to flatter his exercises in incidentalia. To do him bodily harm, above all, we disdain. We merely suggest that, if he has time, he re-examine his attitude toward us and refurbish it—for everybody's good temper and health.

"Put that in the Bayonet" was what Varchminn, our Volatile Valloper, said at the end of that game (won by us). We ask all fair-minded people if that sounds like mugging the spotlight? Of course, it's all in how you say it. We assure you that venom is the last quality you will find in the calm, reserved voice of Sgt. Varchminn.

SARGE IS SAD

Sgt. Lawrence is sad—he goes around mumbling to himself and clenching and unclenching his fist. The whole team is sad. A kind of sadness though that breeds determination to see justice triumph.

This may be a plot to take our minds off the game—our eyes off the ball and our fists where they should never be. Have no fear—by the righteousness of our cause ye shall know us. Virtue and Varchminn will see us through. Well, anyway, it was a moral victory.

Veteran Court Star To Play For Eagles

When the Sixth Regiment basketballers don their trunks and take to the gymnasium floor for practice this fall, one of the top contenders for a place on the team will be 1st Lt. Runa S. White, executive officer of the 13th Co.

Lt. White has had five years playing and coachin gexperience, counting to his credit four years of intercollegiate play and one year of semi-pro play.

In 1940, Lt. White, forward on the Tennessee State College team, was chosen as All-Smoky Mountain Conference forward. The next year he played with the Tennessee Real Estators, a semi-pro team.

Alice Marble Plays Mary Hardwick Here Sunday In Tennis Exhibition

Hardwick

1938 — Won Scandinavian Championships — Singles and Doubles—at Helsinki; beat Helen Wills Moody at tournament in Weybridge, England. First time she had been beaten since 1927. Also beat respective champions of Australia, France and the United States.

1939—Toured Jamaica with British Team, beating Sarah Palfred twice. Won every tournament in which she competed in England. Represented Great Britain in Wightman Cup Match.

1940—Won tournament in Los Angeles, Palm Beach, Miami, Hot Springs, St. Louis, etc. Since 1937 has never been beaten by a British player. Since 1935 has been, what he calls, "My Favorite Partner" of King Gustav of Sweden.

1941—Made her professional debut at Madison Square Garden on January 8th, playing against Alice Marble and toured the United States, in company with Donald Budge, Bill Tilden and Alice Marble. She played in over sixty cities and the tour lasted five and one-half months. During this time she played so well that she won many victories over the present world champion.

Provided funds for two mobile canteens through tennis matches for England.

1943—Made tours of army, navy, and air force camps at bases for the entertainment of the officers and men in the forces in the southwest, the middlewest and the east.

Also gave tennis clinics and exhibitions in high schools and colleges throughout the country.

January 30. Married Cpl. Charles Hare, U. S. Army, formerly world ranking tennis player, who was No. 1 on British Davis Cup Team in 1937, 38, and 39. Romance that began in England in 1934 when both were promising junior tennis players.

Officer's Club Is Scene Of Match In Nation-Wide Tour

visits to two of the large WAC training centers at Daytona Beach, Fla., and Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. From Oglethorpe they go to Fort Monmouth, N. J., where the three weeks tour which has carried them to eight different states in the mid-west, southeast and east will be concluded.

Both Miss Marble and Miss Hardwick have played matches for soldiers previously at various Army camps throughout the nation, but this is their first opportunity to perform for the Women's Army Corps. The tennis clinic and physical fitness lecture which will follow the matches is expected to be very beneficial to WACs at Benning.

WACs MAY PLAY

Although the exhibition will consist chiefly of a singles match between Miss Marble and Miss Hardwick, an attempt is also being made to arrange a doubles match between the two stars, playing with partners drawn from among the tennis players in one of the local WAC units.

Both of the visiting stars started playing the game at the age of 15, and have been in the tennis limelight ever since 1936 when Alice Marble won her first national singles title. She repeated in 1938, 1939, and 1940. Four times winner of the national doubles crown with Sarah Palfrey Cooke, Miss Marble has also captured the national mixed doubles crown four times, each year with a different partner.

FAVORED BY KING

Mary Hardwick came into real international prominence in 1938 when she defeated famed Helen Wills Moody to win the Scandinavian crown. She has never been beaten by a British player since 1940 and is considered by King Gustav of Sweden as his "favorite partner".

Both players made their pro debut at the same time when they began a nationwide tour with Don Budge and Bill Tilden in January of 1941 at Madison Square Garden. Both have also devoted much time to the war effort in various capacities.

HEADED PROGRAM

Miss Marble headed a national physical fitness program as a dollar-a-year worker in 1941 and 1942, has given numerous war bond speeches and is a major in the Women's Hospital Reserve Corps. Miss Hardwick has played many matches for British War Relief as well as the "Mary Hardwick Fund" which provides mobile canteens for her home town in England.

Mary Hardwick is now the wife of Corp. Charles Hare of the United States Army, whom she married early this year. Hare, formerly a ranking player on British Davis Cup teams, is now attending special service school at Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Virginia.

Marble

1936, 1938, 1939, 1940—National Singles Champion.

"Dynamite" Gill of the Anti-Tank Co. has fought most of the top featherweights in his day and, despite the fact he's over the 30-year-mark, Coach Reeves expects big things of him. Rudy Garcia of 2d Bn. Hdq. is another vet of over 100 fights in the pro business. And Dan (Hurricane) Davis of L Co., has fought in numerous tournaments up and down the Pacific coast.

300th Ringmen Prep For Bouts With 176th Foe

Big Battle Listed For September 3 In Stadium Ring

The 300th Infantry boxing team will make its first public appearance of the new season Friday night, Sept. 3, against the 176th Infantry Spirits at Doughboy stadium.

It is possible that another exhibition or two will be scheduled before Sept. 3, but at the present time the clash with the 176th is No. 1 on the 300th schedule.

REEVES COACH

Lt. Roger Reeves, coach of the boxing team, is anxious to line up a few preliminary bouts for his fighters. They probably would be held in the regimental area.

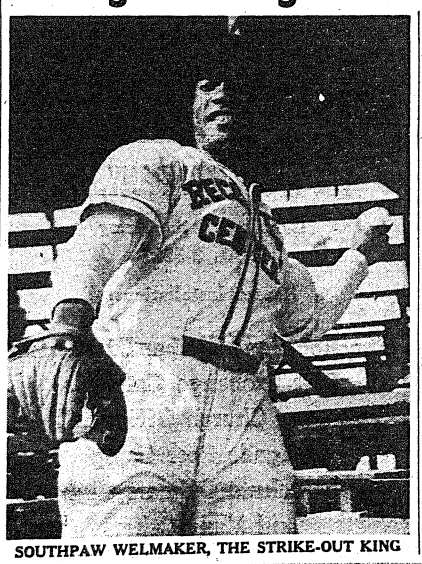
Lt. Reeves also announced that beginning this week at least one workout per week would be held in the open at the Co. H trainasium.

OUTSIDE RIVALS

Additional matches against teams outside Fort Benning also are being planned. Lt. Reeves hopes to line up exhibitions against Camp Rucker and the Atlanta Ordnance. Lt. Bill Fannin, former boxing coach of the Benning post team, is now coach at Camp Rucker.

As things now stand, the 300th team has quite a bit of talent for weight classes under 150 pounds. Lt. Reeves, at 210 pounds, is the only fighter over 160 pounds.

FRANCO ACE



Most publicized member of the team is Raul (Torpedo) Franco of Co. K, who was the only winner when the 300th took on the 29th Infantry last winter. But most of the fighters are veterans of many Golden Gloves fights and several have fought as pros.

Want to know how to strike out 49 batters in 23 innings within 24 hours? Just ask Roy Welmaker, crack southpaw of the colored Reception Center nine, because he did just that over this past week-end.

STARTS WITH 19

Starting Saturday night at 7 o'clock in a league game at the post against the Infantry School Truck Regiment, Welmaker fanned 19 batsmen as he went the nine-inning route to lead his team to victory.

The very next day, the Reception Center nine travelled to Atlanta for a pair of games with the Sunshine Stars, a fast pro club. When the first game started, Welmaker was again on the mound and this time he struck out 20 batters in nine innings as the soldier club won, 6-1.

Then to complete his amazing iron man stunt, the clever southpaw hurled five innings of the nightcap which ended in a 2-2 deadlock and whiffed ten batsmen were 49—and all within 24 hours. That's pitching in any league, any time! Of course, Welmaker isn't exactly a novice at the art of throwing curve balls, having previously pitched for the Atlanta Black Crackers, Macon Peaches, Philadelphia Stars and Homestead Grays, prior to his induction into the army.

His duty time is spent as an ammunition sergeant in the 764th Tank Battalion, and in his spare time he cavorts at shortstop for the Tanker nine in the TIS League. It wasn't many years ago that Sergeant Dib was cutting down base runners from the shortstop berth on Connie Mack's Athletics and later for the Boston Red Sox. He's the only veteran major leaguer playing at the post this year. (Signal Lab photos.)

Lucky Seventh Baseball Nines In Post Debut

Service Co. Club Wins Pair Over Past Weekend

Taking the field for the first time on this post, the 7th Armored Division Service Co. copped two weekend tilts in unofficial intra-division competition before 200 baseball hungry soldiers at Engineer Field.

Division Hq. Company's nine and a fighting 87th Recn. Bn. club didn't have quite enough in their Benning debut, each dropping close decisions to the Servicemen, 8-5 and 6-5 respectively.

LOSE EARLY LEAD

The Division Hq. gang relinquished an early inning lead as the Service Co. Tigers loosed some heavy lumber in the fourth to knot the count at four all. The fifth frame saw the Servicemen push across another run to move in front and a big, four-run sixth inning settled the issue.

First baseman Kersey Pruitt proved the big gun in this barrage, tripling with the sacks full. Bob Klunk, after a shaky start, survived the rough spots and pitched fine ball the rest of the way to earn the win. The Hq. club used three men on the hill, none of whom could stem the Tigers' bid.

The 87th Recn. Bn. Prowlers came close to marring a perfect weekend party for the Division Service Co. outfit, stalemating the Tigers at five tallies apiece going into the eighth. Pruitt started this frame with a sizzler to left center. Toger hurler Leo Thiel, who had aided his cause in the early stanzas by singling twice with the bags crowded, struck out Pruitt stealing second on the whiff.

An Army Wife Shops In Columbus

By Phyllis

Columbus women, wise in the ways of fashion and values, shop for lingerie, fur coats, suits and dresses in the shop which caters to discriminating women, namely KAYSER - LILIENTHAL, INC. Presently the collection of fall crepe frocks is outstanding. These dresses have been recently selected from the most reputable wholesale houses of New York and many are pictured in Harper's Bazaar and Vogue. Many soft, rich toned black, brown, magenta, aqua, moss green and violet crepes have been designed with particular attention to necklines. The practical straight line, or slightly peg-topped skirts seem to be the most popular, although I did notice a very attractive rather modified type of dirindl skirt in one simple black dress. Beading and colorful jewels at the throat decorate many of these beautifully tailored creations. Still other gowns feature striking touches of flame, aqua and french blue to add the final attractive touch to the outfit. Wise shoppers will, on reading this tip, visit Kayser-Lilienthal's and emerge better gowned than ever before.

Keeping your tiny daughter looking fresh and neat is almost an all day job in itself. A plentiful supply of inexpensive frocks may be found at MONTGOMERY WARD'S which will certainly fill out your daughter's summer and fall wardrobe. Serviceable broadcloth, gingham, dimity, chambray and dotted swiss are just a few of the materials available in this attractively styled assortment of young girls' dresses. Both you and your daughter will be delighted with the unusual decorative touches added to many of these frocks. The different pastel and bright shades will catch the eye of your color-loving daughter the minute she enters this family store. You, being the most practical of the two, will notice the reasonable price tags on many of these dresses which are suitable for play. The dressier outfits are equally attractive and equally inexpensively priced. Shopping at Montgomery Ward's is certain to please both you and your young daughter.

The E. ROTHSCHILD FURNITURE COMPANY is the ideal shopping place for those of you who seek an inexpensive but attractive bedroom suite of maple. The chifferrobe, dressing table complete with mirror and bench, combine with the double bed to make a notable addition to any, as yet, unfurnished bedroom. The chifferobe, fashioned along the simple lines so suitable to maple, has three large drawers with two smaller drawers for socks, handkerchiefs and the like. The nicely designed dressing table has similar drawers on either side and a movable mirror. The maple bed, itself, is available with either "Poster" or "Panel" ends. Purchasing the panel ends for the bed makes the reasonable price for the complete outfit, even more reasonable. If you want an attractive and comfortable bedroom suite which will be, at the same time, comfortable, visit H. Rothschild, Inc., as I did and see for yourself.

Parents visit the MILLER TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY when shopping for shoes for their growing boys and girls. For in this most reputable shop they realize the idea is not to just sell a pair of shoes, but to sell shoes which are correct for the individuals needs and tastes. Of help to parents when little Johnny says, "It feels fine, Mom' is the X-Ray machine which shows just how his feet are placed inside the shoes. Realizing, too, that youngsters often subject their shoes to a great deal of wear and tear, only the sturdiest and most practical materials are used. Play shoes and shoes for "dress up" are designed especially to avoid pinching in young toes and the sales personnel takes special efforts to see that "size"-conscious little Janie is not trying to squeeze into the same size shoe she wore a year ago. So if you have any growing youngsters with a number 18 shoe ration coupon still to be used visit Miller-Taylor's and be confident of complete satisfaction.

The Young Columbus Shop on the second floor of J. A. KIRVEN COMPANY is presently especially interested in outfitting young girls who will soon be off to school once again. Knowing that wool sweaters and skirts are as popular with shopping mothers as well as their daughters, this shop has a large array of these practical outfits in all the popular shades ranging from brown through all the hues to a bright scarlet. The skirts are in plain, striped or plaid combinations, while the sweaters are one all-over tone. Plaid, checked, striped and plain suits, especially suitable for cool fall days, have been tailored with the figure and tastes of the younger set uppermost in mind. Tailored blouses to add the final touch to fall suits are reasonably priced so getting together a complete school wardrobe for younger daughters will not be too much of an expense when shopping at Kirven's.

Ten Bouts Scheduled For Finale Of Spirit Tourney

Steve Kopacki, Typical 176er, To Battle Vanette In Heavyweight Go

BY CORP. MARV MATHRE

Tonight finals in the 176th Regimental Tournament will be held in Doughboy Stadium with the initial bout to begin at 8:45. There will be ten bouts on the card with six being for individual championships and the remaining four, consolation and exhibition contests.

Pairings for tonight's bouts should produce some highly colorful battles. On the card is an exhibition bout between "Champ" Aguirre, former Virginia, North Carolina, and 29th Division titlist, and William Seitz, from Richmond, Va., a one hundred and twelve pound veteran.

FEATHERS BATTLE

The featherweight battle will be between "Toughy" Thompson, the up and coming newcomer, and Godfrey Eley, former Virginia Golden Gloves champion.

In the lightweight class it will be Red Bootwright and Sam Rakich, both winners on Tuesday night. Rakich packs a terrific punch while Bootwright is a tricky boxer.

MILLER FIGHTS

Lloyd Miller and Bob Dunning will fight for the welterweight title. Miller is a clever and hard punching fighter but may have trouble with the Indiana protege.

Hugh Miller, former runner up in the Junior National AAU Tournament, will fight Thomas Isphording for the middleweight title. Isphording fought Tuesday night but Miller has not fought up to this time in the tourney.

HERKIMER ACE

The states of Maryland and New York will be represented in the lightheavy weight battle. Franco, from Herkimer, N. Y., and former clubmate of Lou Ambers, will oppose short and chubby Ryan, winner on Tuesday night in a colorful fight with Tabakin. Franco is a wicked slugger but the veteran Ryan might stage an upset.

In the top event of the evening and in the heavyweight class, "Swede" Vanette, from South Bend, Ind., and former state AAU champion will square off against Steve Kopacki. Vanette, a powerful fighter, will undoubtably have plenty of trouble against green but very durable Kopacki.

CONSOLATION BOUTS

Other fights will be held for consolation titles in various weights. Winners of tonight's bouts will fight against the 300th Infantry on Sept. 3rd.

Last Tuesday night before an estimated crowd of thirty-five hundred boxing fans the preliminary bouts were held. In the thirteen bouts staged, four ended in technical knockouts with other receiving close and hard fought decisions.

The ping-pong champion of Harmony Church Area is Private First Class William H. Boyd of Headquarters & Headquarters Detachment, Truck Regiment of the Infantry School. At Service Club No. 5 last Wednesday evening, the little champion received the first prize after a tournament that sparkled with interesting, exciting and sensational matches.

Boyd met Corporal Harry Scott in the final match of the evening. Although Scott proved himself a worthy opponent he couldn't quite stand the speed at which Boyd forced all of his opponents to play. Boyd played a dynamic game with a wonderful assort-

In addition to all this, the Benning shops also did 5,576 metal and wood repair jobs, and performed 539 repair tasks on typewriters and other office machines.

TPS Tossers Clinch Second-Half Crown In Benning League

Mike Hogan and his Parachute School nine clinched the second-half title honors in the Fort Benning League on Tuesday night at Gowdy Field when they tumbled the 53rd General Hospital entry, 12-6. It was the sixth win in a row for the chutists, and put them three games out in front of the loop with only two scheduled tilts remaining.

It was a repeat performance for the chutists who also grabbed the first half gonfalon in the post loop. At the end of that campaign, the TPS nine lost three in a row to the Academic Profs in the post title series, but they hope to do better in their next chance. Pete Bardin, ace right-hander, was the winning pitcher Tuesday as the chutists swept to their second crown of the season.

Panthers Start Grid Drills As 53 Men Report

3rd STR Colored Eleven Prepares

It was first call for all football aspirants of the Panthers, representing the Service Battalion of the 3rd STR, Monday last. Fifty-three veterans and newcomers answered the initial call.

Among Panther veterans returning for their second year of gridiron activities are Fighting Frankie Phillipson, New York City lad already known as a fleet triple threat man of last season. Bill Young, speedy halfback who was lost to the Panthers last year due to an early knee injury is also getting set for action. Other backfield prospects for the Green and White clad lads are Danny Williams, George McCloude, Charles Powell, James Griffin, John Massenburg, and Betro Polk.

FLASHY NEWCOMER

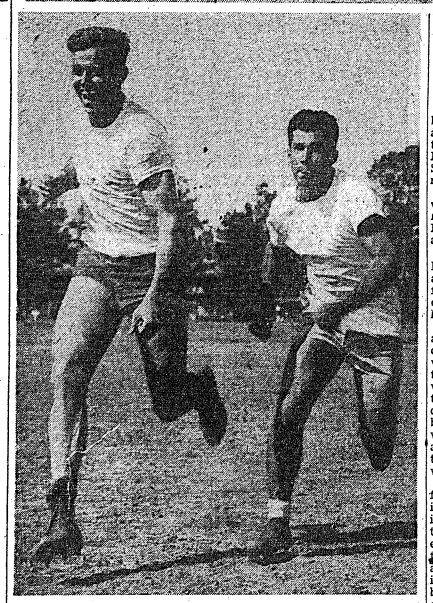
A newcomer to the Panthers backfield is Henry H. Kennedy, former ace with Xavier Univ. and Dillard Univ. Kennedy has seen plenty of gridiron action and should round out the Panther backfield.

The line will see such veterans as Roscoe Burton, Charles H. Jackson, Timothy Still, Kenneth Bell, Joe Davis, Arnold Palmer and Edward Pullen, plus a host of newcomers who are expected to fit into the Service Battalion gridiron set-up.

SAME MENTOR

Capt. Norman P. Hogenson, Panther mentor of last year will again hold down the coaching berth with the 3rd STR eleven. Capt. Hogenson saw 3 years service with Willamette Univ. in Salem, Oregon, also coaching at Baker High school in Oregon for 4 years.

First Lt. Willard W. Hawke, Univ. of Oregon backfield ace for 3 years and a stellar halfback of the West Coast Army All-Star team of last year, will also be on the Panther coaching staff. Lt. Hawke saw action last fall against such teams as the Chicago Bears, Green Bay Packers and many other pro teams in the country.



DRAKE NAMED

Assisting the coaches will be 2nd Lt. Robert L. Drake, former Morgan State College end. Lt Drake was outstanding in his gridiron endeavors, being chosen on the CIAA team in 1940 and 1941. Tall, hard hitting Lt. Drake was also given a berth in 1941 on the Negro All-American. His presence with the team will lend much to an outstanding Panther football team.

First Lt. Jack Gushin, Panther Athletic Officer, promises to pit the Benning footballers against some of the outstanding colored elevens in the Southeast.

Prendergast Is Hero As Eagles Defeat Spirits

Southpaw Ace Blanks League Leaders To Make Tie For Lead

BY CORP. MARV MATHRE

The 6th Eagles come up again to put the TIS League into a two-way tie and a mad scramble for second half honors on Sunday night. Previously it was the Gators who fell before the Eagle onslaught. Now the Eagles and the vaunted Jim Prendergast set back the 176th Spirits into a first place deadlock with the Academic Profs.

Prendergast pitched brilliant ball as the Spirits attempted vainly to retain sole possession of their league lead. Hurling a shut out game the big cocky lefthander scattered six Spirit hits to win, 2-0.

COOPER LOSES

Cooper, Spirit pitcher, hurled a fine game but the failure of the Spirits to hit gave the ace right-hander his second loss of the season. The Eagles garnered only seven hits. Although the hitting was about even on both teams the Eagles bunched their hits while the Spirits scattered six hits from the first to the ninth inning.

The first Eagle run was scored in the second inning with Gallican hitting a single. Kemether followed with a single and Gallivan scored on a long fly to left field. The Eagles tallied again in the fifth inning as Shiver and Prendergast singled. Shiver scored on a passed ball.

Kissell, whose home is in Corning, N. Y., was found guilty of murdering Alexander on the night of January 9, 1943. Both were former paratroopers. Two other paratroopers who are alleged to have been implicated in the murder face trial at a later date. The body of Alexander was found in the Chattahoochee River on February 28, 1943, and after an investigation by military police at Fort Benning, Kissell was brought to trial.

Mom–

stay in a booth for many endless minutes, talking up a storm to the girl of his dreams and oblivious to the mounting costs—only to walk out of the booth and say for the edification of all and sundry, "Aw shucks, I forgot the most important thing. I'll have to write her a letter."

The telephone pay station is, it seems, one of the most popular places for soldiers to spend the money which jingles in their jeans. It is not unusual for a soldier to come into the station, plank down a wad of dough and say, "I just won $26 in a card game. Ring my number in Portland, Oregon, and don't stop me until I've talked up all this money. I'll pay you in advance." Another soldier talked to his girl in Detroit for no less than 46 full minutes.

Foreign calls are often handled. An officer candidate who had just won his gold bars called up his family in Puerto Rico to tell them the happy news. The conversation, carried on in Spanish, soon brought in his bride-to-be as well. A Brazilian Army officer visiting the post solicited the aid of the attendants in getting news from his home in Rio De Janerio, from which he had no news in the three months he had been away. Equal to the occasion, the attendants proceeded to get his family on the line in far-off Rio, and enabled him to carry on a cherished conversation in Portuguese with his loved ones. Needless to say, the attendants were recipients of profuse gratitude from the visiting officer.

FRIENDS OF SOLDIERS

Soldies come to look upon the attendants as friends, advisers and confidents. They bring in their wives or girls and introduce them to the ones instrumental in providing visits from a distance over the long lines of the telephone company. They bring in yet-bald babies and make the attendants who handled their calls for them at the time of the birth feel as if they actually had something to do with the child's arrival.

Ofttimes, fan mail thanking them for their work and paying glowing tribute to their efficiency finds its way to the ladies who assist the soldiers in their calls. Apparently considered the possessors of the wisdom of Pallas Athena, these attendants are requested to give information as to how warm the baby's milk should be heated, or other varieties of personal advice. At times, the attendants have even helped soldiers compose telegrams, despite the fact the charges for same goes into the coffers of a competitor of sorts.

The three attendants, Miss Minora Crocker, Miss Louise Torbett, and Mrs. Odell Adams, all of Columbus, and the supervisor, Miss Norma Fleming of Columbus, as well as L. A. "Jack" Wood, manager of the Southern Bell Telephone Co., at Fort Benning, consider Fort Benning soldiers to be astonishingly patient on the whole.

Soldiers wait sometimes several hours for a line to be cleared for their connection, and are usually very good-natured about the wait, they say. "When the boys begin to fidget a little and show signs of becoming impatient, we just kid them a little," the attendants say, "and they just kid right back and pay no attention to the little waits they have to undergo. Fort Benning soldiers understand the difficulties of getting calls through during wartime, and they are really excellent sports."

'High, Wide 'n Handsome' Opens at Post Saturday

Comedians, dancing, singing, beautiful girls in a stellar cast and Dick Rogers and his orchestra add up to "High, Wide, and Handsome", newest USO-Camp Show scheduled to play Fort Benning.

"High, Wide and Handsome" will open at the post Saturday in Doughboy Stadium at 8:45 p. m. It is booked for the same place and same time Monday night. The show will move to Sand Hill Tuesday, where it will play in Theater No. 7 at 7:30 and at 9:30 p. m. The remaining two performances will be in Harmony Church, in Harmony Bowl Wednesday at 8:45 p. m. and in the Third Student Training Regiment Amphitheatre Thursday at 8:45 p. m.

Appearances wil be in the nearest War Department theaters should any of the outdoor performances be threatened by unfavorable weather, Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer in post headquarters, announced. Admission is, of course, absolutely free to all military personnel.

The Rogers orchestra, a favorite of America's dancing youngsters, has six pieces of brass, five reed and three rhythm. The band is also good for "listening" with novelty and comedy routines blended with arrangements of the Benny Goodman swing-school type.

A pianist and vocalist, Rogers was formerly with Will Osborne. While with that organiaztion, Rogers wrote his hits, "Pompton Turnpike", "Between 18th and 19th on Chestnut Street" and "Wouldst I Could But Kiss Thy Hand, Oh, Babe".

Other names in the show include Bert Walton, comedian, and Anna Grimm, his stooge; Diane Moore, comedienne; Roberta Remon, dancer, and Duke McHale, dancer.

Boston Tommy Has Time Getting His Point Across

Seems No One Ever Heard Of His Magazine

Most everyone has heard that typical example of gentle New England humor concerning the manservant who announced to his Bostonian master that awaiting to see him were "three reporters and a gentlemtn from the 'Transcript.' "And those of more esoteric tastes are familiar with T. S. Eliot's 'Ode to the Readers of the Boston Evening Transcript' of whom the poet says they 'sway in the wind like a field of ripe corn'."

In the field of American letters The Spur occupied the same position in the magazine category which the Transcript did in the more localized sphere of the newspaper. Both of those truly august publications have more or less lately expired in a world which sets an ever diminishing premium on a figurative "exclusiveness" along with that group of people which those who did not belong to it called "society."

The Spur was very "old guard" indeed. It was founded at the very dawn of this century by a Vanderbilt and a Mackay and concerned itself entirely with the doings and diversions of the sort of people Edith Wharton wrote about and it wouldn't budge an inch. If she had the requisite number of quarterings a woman's picture might be published in Spur despite her having been divorced but never —— never because of a Reno sojourn.

When I joined the staff we had, besides the New York office, a representative on Cockspur St. in London and others in Paris and Zurich. Of all American publications Spur was the one which was known and respected by the intransigeant grandees of England and the Continent.

EMINENT SUBSCRIBERS

The subscription list read like a composite of the Social Registers, the Almanach de Gotha and Debrett. Her Serene Highness the Margravine of Hesse Darmstadt, Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Kent, the Prince and Princess of Piedmont, the Cardinal Patriarch of Ragusa, the Honorable Mrs. Wheatwillis-East, Cabots, Stuyvesants, Dwights, Horrys, Chapins, Crowninshields, Calverts and Randolphs and so on but definitely not ad infinitum for there was most definitely a "finium" for we published no picture of "pin up girls". Mediatized royalties don't admit going in for that sort of thing.

Members of our rival "Town & Country" staff used to maliciously claim that no one ever read "The Spur" but merely kept it on the drawing room table to give a rarefied atmosphere to the establishment. We in turn used to make cutting observations about the pre-occupation of T&C with "that crowd" which disported itself amid the imitation zebra stripes and cellophane palm trees of El Morocco and the mendacious smartness of The Stork Club and Twenty One. Our readers were the sort of peoepople who considered the Ritz slightly vulgar and whose Crane-Simplexes and Stevens-Duryeas were more apt to be seen outside the Plaza at tea time. M.F.H's the Plaza at tea time. who looked as though they'd escaped from a Peter Arno cartoon wrote us indignant open letters pro and con the bobbing of horses' tails and ladies straight from the pen of Mary Petty sent notes from Tuxedo Park inquiring where they might find whalebones for their lace collars. There was a general flavor of Propperts Saddle Soap, Major's Cement and Florida Water about the whole thing.'

ADS ENCHANT HIM

The real estate advertisements used to enchant me. These were largely illustrated by photographs and concerned with castles on islands off the Kentish coast, villas at Mentone and shooting boxes in the Adirondacks whose interiors were furnished largely with such a myriad of antlers, bearskin rugs and a pot pourri of stuffed animal life general as to give them the look of so many surrealistic Noah's Arks.

The photographs in the fore part of each issue preceding the table of contents and called "Spur of the Moment" pertained to horse faced Royal Italian Duchesses sipping creme yvette with one of the Khedivial family and the Pretender to the Throne of Poland on the Terrace of Shepherds at Cairo, the Agha Khan being apparently ignored by the Queen Mother at Ascot and cavortings of our native patriciate at Newport, Piping Rock, Bar Harbor and Southampton.

Crises of a violent nature were very rare in the offices of The Spur and the only one which stands out in my memory is the occasion when proofs intended for the Communist "Daily Worker" were once delivered to our office by the muddle headed devil of the printer who functioned for both publications. The offensive sheets were picked up with tongs, dropped out the window and the office sprinkled with holy water and 4711 Eau de Cologne.

The public which The Spur served, never large but now nearly as extinct as modesty and good manners subscribed to the currently unthinkable heresy that there is no such thing as "good" publicity and its members strove as hard to keep their names and pictures of themselves and their possesions out of print as the average taxpayer does to get same in.' They made an exception, however, to The Spur seeming to consider it not as a public print but rather like a sort of circular letter whereby they could keep informed of the movements and geographical situations of their friends in clubs on the Bund at Shanghai or Hongkong, boar hunts in the Carpathians or shoots in Scotland.

OPEN SESAME

All this sort of thing definitely made for cachet and when a member of Spur's staff was introduced to an ambassador at a reception the official smile became a trifle less impersonal when he learned of one's connection. Fashionable hotel's reserve crumbled and the reticence of de luxe liners sunk when that open sesame was murmured.

Why but a complete dunderhead wouldn't enjoy such eclat? I did. I loved it: But I always had too much joie de vivre to allow such a rarefied atmosphere to dull my taste for more catholic pleasures. I performed my work competently and with modest distinction but withal, I was too busy enjoying myself to have time to become a gentleman.

The United States Army manifests a benevolent and understandable curiosity concerning the past accomplishments of its prospective members and naturally, when I was given a form to fill out I listed my several past editorial posts with The Spur near the end.

One day during my basic training I was told that Captain Blinker wished me to communicate with him. I inquired who this officer was and received a rather vague reply to the effect that he had something to do with Public Relations. This gave me quite a lift. "Hmm—" I thought," "this army is certainly on the ball. Here I am only a few weeks in it and, hearing what a superior brand of mouse trap I make they're already beating a path to my door." I decided that there must be, after all, something in the much touted determination of placing G.I.'s in jobs to which they're best suited. I thereupon scuttled off to the telephone and called the Captain's number.

CAPTAIN BLINKER

"Hello — Captain Blinker? This is Private Devine speaking. I was told you wanted me to call you."

"Oh yes—yes—. Let me see—you've had editorial and writing experience, haven't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"What publication were you with last?"

"The Spur, Captain."

"What did you say?"

"Spur."

"I'm sorry I still don't hear you."

"SPUR MAGAZINE."

"Dear me—I have a very poor connection. Would you mind spelling it?"

"Not at all. S-P-U-R."

"Oh — FUR — I get you now. You know it's funny I thought you were saying "Spur" all the time."

"I was, sir."

"Yes, yes, I get you now 'Fur' er—that must be one of those furrier's trade journals."

"Yessir, I suppose it must be," I allowed, utterly defeated.

"Well—thanks for calling, Devine—good-bye."

Some time later I had to appear before a committee of officers (for no discreditable reason I make haste to say) and the highly pertinent question was put to me concerning my previous experience. I obliged with an autobiography which went along smoothly until my peroration which revealed that I had served as associate editor of The Spur when one of my interrogators interrupted.

"The Spur—? Oh yes—one of those racing sheets I expect."

I suppressed a little gasp of outraged vanity and hurriedly cast about for words in which I could succintly and respectfully correct this appalling misapprehension. The senior officer of the group, a colonel, apparently "old Army," spared me the effort by hastily correcting his colleague's misconception.

This could go on indefinitely but it won't. O tempora o mores indeed. Cicero only thought he was hurting. If only I had worked for Click, Snip, Clack, Snoop or The Police Gazette, the house of my glory would have been builded on a rock.

Reiterating the shortage of housing facilities in Columbus, Captain J. A. White, Fort Benning building officer, said the situation has become very acute and urged all persons in town to make available for rent rooms which they did not absolutey need.

These may be reported to the U. S. Army Bileting Office, third floor, Columbus Bank and Trust Company, located at Twelfth street and Broadway, or by phoning Columbus, 8213.

Captain White added that the housing situation is probably more acute than ever in the overcrowded city.

Stamp Club

On September 14, the Post Office Department in Washington will issue a five cent stamp honoring Belgium, one of the European countries that have been overrun by the Axis. This will be number six of the series.

* * *

It has been announced that only twenty million of each of the flag stamps will be issued. This is a very low number, even for a commemorative, and it looks as though the price on this particular series will rise very rapidly. Even now, while the stamps are still being sold in the post offices, the wholesalers are offering one and one-half and two cents apiece for fine used copies.

* * *

If that letter you're going to send by air mail weighs more than two ounces, don't seal it up too tight, because wartime postal regulations require that the contents be inspected. And while on the subject of wartime restrictions, don't try to export any stamps without proper authority from the Postal Censorship authorities in New York.

A lot of people like to trade stamps by mail with other collectors, but it's a very good idea to step carefully and keep an eye on the law. It is all right to send stamps into Canada, but this is the only exception. Otherwise, though, it is necessary to secure a permit.

* * *

Of course, there is an absolute ban on all of the Axis countries, and also on certain "neutrals." If any of you collectors desire complete information relative to exporting philatelic material, get in touch with the Fort Benning Stamp Club, and we can give you the information you will need.

* * *

The next scheduled meeting of the Club is August 10. See you then.

Captain Grubbs Commands 54th Air Base Squadron

Captain Wallace E. Grubbs, formerly Lawson Field plans and training officer at Fort Benning, has been named commanding officer of the 54th Base Headquarters and Air Base Squadron.

Arriving at Lawson Field in March 1942, as a second lieutenant, Captain Grubbs first held the position of base armament officer, following which he was appointed adjutant of the recruit detachment. In September, 1942, Grubbs became base ordnance and chemical warfare officer, and upon activation of the 1013th Guard Squadron was named to head that outfit.

As commander of the base headquarters squadron, he succeeds Major George W. Gorman, who has taken over duties as base supply officer.

18 Third Reg't Men Advance

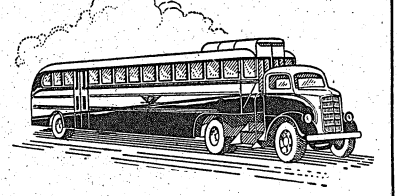
Eighteen officers of the Third Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, were accorded promotions during the past week which included one advancement of a captain to major, promotion of 13 first lieutenants to the rank of captain and the elevation of four second lieutenants to first lieutenant.

Receiving his majority was Capt. James H. Goddard, since last April commanding officer of Company E of the Service Battalion. A reserve officer, Major Goddard entered upon active duty in January, 1942, enrolling in the basic course of The Infantry School.

The new captains in the regiment, who were promoted to that rank from first lieutenant are as follows:

Capt. Carl E. Wordley, assigned to the personnel section of Regimental Headquarters; Capt. Alfred H. Armborst, assigned to the 13th Company; Capt. Robert H. Jordan, Second Company; Capt. Robert J. Poblicki, Fourth Company; Capt. Jerry P. Hirschberg, Sixth Company; Capt. Gordon D. Simonds, Third Company; Capt. John L. Davidson, Fifth Company; Capt. Hugh K. Condy, 16th Company; Capt. Howard R. Cole, Sixth Company; and Capt. John S. Gorrell, 19th Company.

Capt. Jack D. West, commanding officer of Company C., Service Battalion.



Promotions to first lieutenant included:

Lawrence M. Alexander, 21st Company; Marvin W. Frasier, an assistant adjutant in the personnel sectio nof Regimental Headquarters; Frederick N. Dugan, 10th Company, and John E. Person, Jr., Fifth Company.

Fort Army Wives Busy As Men Prepare for War

Like Penelope and her women, the Army wives of Fort Benning keep themselves busy while their menfolk are at the wars. But, unlike the girls of ancient Greece they do not spend their nights ripping out their knitting.

Mrs. Walter S. Fulton, wife of Benning's commanding general, manages the Post Thrift Shop, an interesting enterprise conducted by the Army wives. The shop occupies extensive quarters under Doughboy Stadium and contains an amazing variety of chattels military and domestic.

Here the officer may buy furniture, pots and pans, rugs and dishes to furnish his quarters and, at the end of his assignment at Benning, he may sell these back to the Thrift shop again. In view of the present shortage of non-essential goods together with the reluctance of persons of so unsettled an existence as military folk to invest in costly new furniture, this undertaking is a valuable asset to the Post.

Besides furniture, clothing and equipment is sold at the Thrift Shop and many a G. I. has bought himself very slightly used extra shirts and trousers for a fraction of what he'd have to pay for new things. Sporting goods, books, in fact almost anything, is apt to be encountered in this happy hunting ground for bargain hunters.

Anyone may send anything to this shop to be sold, but while the consignor may set his own price, it must be under the current retail figure of regular markets. The shop retains a small percentage of the selling price as commission. The revenues of this establishment have been contributed to several worthy causes such as the obstetrical ward in the Station Hospital, the furnishing of day rooms, etc.

WELCOME NEWCOMER

The Women's Club of Fort Benning sees to it that newly arrived officer's wives are welcomed to the Post and their settling here facilitated. They are invited to join the club and everything possible is done to assimilate them into the community and make them feel at home.

One very valuable undertaking of the Women's club is the establishment of a nursery school, instituted during Mrs. Reynolds Kelly's presidency, where the children of officers may be cared for each morning, thereby releasing the mothers for war work under the aegis of the Red Cross. The school occupies a pleasant little nine-covered cottage on the main post, and here children of pre-kindergarten age are trained to get along with their contemporaries, allowed to model with clay, do finger painting, and just plain play on the swings and slides provided for them.

The Fort Benning Auxiliary, in charge of Mrs. Leven C. Allen, wife of the Infantry School's commanding officer, is part of the Muscogee County Chapter of the American Red Cross and, while its membership varies with the fluctuation of military personnel, at present the number is over 300. For the current month 34 staff assistants, 37 "Grey Ladies" and 31 Motor Corps workers. To those who fancy Red Cross work of this sort to be mere dilettanteism, it may cause surprise to learn that 90 per cent of all surgical dressins are made by these women, throughout the country who give their time cheerfully to this eminently worthy cause.

Although the past July saw membership in the Fort Benning group rather low, due to recent troop movements out of the post, the Production Corps of Fort Benning's auxiliary under Mrs. William Denton supplied 10,260 dressings to the Station Hospital and 7,500 to the Red Cross.

KNIT AND SEW

Besides those engaged in the making of surgical dressings, a group of workers under Mrs. James R. N. Weaver are employed in knitting and sewing work which provides essential clothing in consequence of major catastrophes in whose alleviation the Red Cross has always been heroically conspicuous.

Of all the functions of the Red Cross that which comes in most direct contact with the individual soldier is the branch known as the "Grey Ladies." This band of women, chosen for their attractive personalities and emotional balance, is allotted to attend the needs and comforts of hospitalized service men which are outside the scope of the medical and nursing staff. Here at Benning the ranks are supplemented by a certain number of women from the neighboring community of Columbus who belong to this organization.

These people attend to such personal needs of sick and convalescent servicemen as the writing of personal letters, mending of their clothes and aiding them in recreational pursuits such as games, hobbies and arts and crafts. They see to it that the men have cigarettes and reading matter, talk to them and keep them company. They are called upon to buy birthday and Christmas presents for the soldiers' families and friends and generally act in loco parentis for these disabled men.

Grey Ladies as an organization date back to 1918 during the last war. Mrs. Hugh Eliot heads the local band of Grey Ladies at Fort Benning each of whom is required to put in 100 hours of work, at least, in the course of a year.

Most of the Army wives at Fort Benning are on the "go". Another active group at the post includes 31 members of the women's Motor Corps at Fort Benning, headed by Mrs. Eliot Watkins. These people provide transportation for servicemen in any extraordinary emergency not covered by government facilities. For example: One of their most frequently performed tasks is carrying to the hospital's maternity ward servicemen's wives who are about to be confined. They also, when necessary, will drive visiting members of soldier's families when other means are not available. A typical example of the utility of this agency is the recent case of contributors to the blood bank. Organizational transport might not be provided since the blood donation was an extra-military act and the Women's Motor Corps was impressed into service to take donors to and from their various units.

Home can be place where you escape the cares of the world or where you learn to care for the world.

We all fight to keep the country from going to the dictators. But how many raise a hand to keep it from going to the dogs?

LT. JOHN H. L. BUFFINGTON of Newark, N. J., spent 12 months in Alaska looking for a scrap but didn't even hook up with a man-sized cold. On the day he reported to the First Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School, he became mixed up in a dog fight and was severely bitten. It is the only injury he has received in the six years he has been in the army. (U. S. Signal Corps photo.)

Mr. O. G. Cox, of Post Ordnance Office has a very painful hurt to his left hand. There seems to be some question as to just how it happened.

That's a beautiful diamond Dorothy Cook is wearing. When can we announce date and the name of the love-of-your-life?

Mildred Feinberg, secretary to the Post Inspector, is having a wonderful time in New York. Seems Mildred had been planning this trip "off and on" but mostly "off" for two years, so we are glad to know that she has actually gone.

Last week Nell Blackshear, Senior Hostess at Service Club No. 4, was invited by the USO-Travelers' Aid of Montgomery, Ala., to hold a three-day institute and training session for Volunteer Hostess and the young ladies volunteering their services for entertaining soldiers.

Problems of morale, social enterprises, what to talk to soldiers about, how to meet the situation of "not dating" soldiers, housing of soldiers' families, transportation problems, and a complete hostess set-up was fully gone into at these meetings.

Mrs. Blacksshear was especially commended for her splendid programs and for her willingness to co-operate with the workers in Montgomery. Captain W. H. Shepperd, commanding officer of Gunter Field, Ala.

They Make Dollar Tickers Sturdy, Yassuh

They build 'em rugged—these dollar watches;

At least that's the experience of Pvt. John C. Roalfs of Bristow, Ia., and a military police member of Division Service Company of the Seventh Armored Division at Fort Benning, for his one-buck watch has falen 100 feet from a windmill in Iowa, withstood the sands and storms of the desert, and still ticks right on.

This time-keeper, now three years of age, is a little tarnished, but it has kept Army time for 17 months. It has been worn by its owner in the swamps of Louisiana and Texas while on maneuvers. It has served M. P. Roalfs during all his duties on and off his posts.

It was while home on a furlough that Pvt. Roalfs dropped the "ticker" from a windmill. It twirled and twisted around in the air as it fell turned upside down and backwards until it made its landing on the fertile Iowa sod—but it just kept a-tickin' on.

There are pleas on every hand for closer teamwork. We'll have it when we realize that teamwork is a relationship and not a technique.

3rd STR Alumni Plan Reunion On August 28

A grand old reunion party of members of the former fifth Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment is scheduled for the Brigade Rest Camp Saturday, August 28. The party will honor Lt. Col. and Mrs. Burnell V. Bryant who are to leave this station shortly.

The affair will get underway at 8 p. m and will be informal.

Col. Bryant is the former commanding officer of the Fifth, a battalion noted for its morale, mud and mess hall fires; its sand, shavetails and Sibly stoves; its high standards and high percentage of graduations.

Arrangements are in charge of Captain Clifford Barbanell. Those wishing to attend should call him at 6409 not later than Tuesday, August 24.

4th SC B&C AC's Conclude 2-Day Confab

Meeting Correlates Operation of Schools In Service Command

A two-day meeting of all assistant commandants of Bakers and Cooks Schools in the Fourth Service Command was concluded Saturday at the Bakers and Cooks School at Fort Benning, parent school in the service command.

Purpose of the meeting was to coordinate plans for running the schools in the command and to correlate the ideas developed at the various schools. The latest methods of teaching officers and enlisted men by ideas recently developed by the office of the Quartermaster General in Washington, D. C., and the Subsistence Laboratory in Chicago, were discussed.

Among the phases discussed at the meeting were the use of the M1937 field range for cooking and baking, the cooking and preparation of dehydrated foods, operation of bakeries, and mess supervision and inspection. The ideas and information developed at the conference will be passed on to the instructors in the various schools in the command, who will in turn pass on the information to students.

ROOKS LEADER

Colonel John M. Rooks, commandant of the schools for Bakers and Cooks in the Fourth Service Command, was in charge of the meeting. He was assisted by Lt. Col. Grover M. Ford, executive officer. Captain Robert J. Dickson, assistant commandant of the parent school at Fort Benning, was host to the visitors.

Thomas Hennessey, civilian bakery specialist from the Quartermaster General's Office, was one of the principal speakers.

The assistant commandants of Bakers and Cooks Schools other thna Fort Benning who attended the meeting were Major Joseph N. Clemons, Fort Jackson, S. C.; Capt Bernard J. Crombie, Maxwell Feld, Ala.; Captain Ormond K. Cummings, Fort Bragg, N. C.; Capt. Otto E. Shrigley, Camp Shelby, Miss.; First Lieut. Jesse F. Causey, Jr., Miami Beach, Fla.; First Lieut. Claude A. Thompson, Camp Blanding, Fla.; First Lieut. Eugene F. Voit, Camp Forrest, Tenn., and Second Lieut. Donald S. Van Meter, Camp Sibert, Ala.

Those in attendance from the parent Bakers and Cooks School at Fort Benning other than Colonel Rooks and Lieutenant Colonel Ford were Captain Dickson, First Lieut. Leo G. Hibbard, Second Lieuts. John E. Mezger and John C. Townsend, and Warrant Officer Daniel E. Siroty, Captain Abraham Pfefer, assistant commandant of Bakers and Cooks School No. 2, Fort Benning, and Second Lieut. Charles A. Laird, also were in attendance at the meeting.

WAC-tions

This month when the sick and lame celebrate their birthdays at the Station Hospital there will be a special committee of 20 WACs to entertain them with Corporal Eugenia Grammis doing some special solo work. This party will be in the South Sea Island manner with flowers laes for each of them.

A nice big hand for the flower garden Cpl. Pauline Hodulick has cultivated in her spare time at the Sand Hill Service Club. You know Pauline was a farmerette before enlisting in the WAC so she just has to keep her "growing" hand in practice.

There's an extra special story behind the new flag in the day-room and also the one behind Lt. Gaine's desk. They are special gifts from Pvt. Dorothy Eble, who fell heir to some money, wanted to share it with her buddies so the flags. And what an addition they do make to the Headquarters and the day room.

Have you WACs seen the service pins you can buy for your folks back home? Nice little tricks with as many as three service stars on them if there are that many in any branch of the service in your family.

Congratulations to Anna Thompson who left Saturday for Finance School. She is the first WAC to be selected from Fort Benning to attend this school and the entire company is that proud of her. She hopes that after successful completion of her course at Wake Forest College, Wake Forest, N. C., she will be returned to Benning.

When Louise Martin and Emory Lade went to the Ralston Hotel Saturday morning for their wedding breakfast, lo and behold! there were three wedding cakes waiting for them. One from the Bakers and Cooks School, one from the groom's company mess and one from the Hotel Ralston. What with all the important guests they had for their breakfast it was a good thing so many cakes were sent.

* * *

All that noise you hear at WAC headquarters is just Sergeant Helen Spears wrestling with her new morning report.

* * *

Sgt. Mabel Lahe had a nice furlough to visit the folks back home in Philadelphia, and what should she bring back to Lt. Gaines, her Co, but another dog to add to her "wolf pack".

* * *

Sgt. Peggy Ryan, secretary to Col. Rosenberger, has returned to her desk after being seriously ill with pneumonia.

TELEPHONE QUIZ
Question: "What's a Person-to-Person call?"
Answer: "One on which you want to talk to a particular person—the girl friend, for instance. Charges begin when the person you called comes to the telephone."
Question: "What's a Station-to-Station call?"
Answer: "One on which you'll talk to anyone who answers the called telephone. For example, on a call to the homefolks, you'll usually talk to the person who answers—Dad, Mother or Sis. Charges begin, however, when the called telephone is answered."
Question: "Is there any difference in cost?"
Answer: "Yes, a Station-to-Station call costs less."
Next time you place a long distance call, remember this difference in the type of call, and tell the operator whether you wish to speak Station-to-Station or Person-to-Person. And if you are calling collect please notify the operator when you place the call.

CUSTOM-TAILORING IN THE MILITARY MANNER
Remember---NOT ALL MILITARY UNIFORMS are uniform!
Not all right fielders are Babe Ruths. Not all football players are Tommy Harmons. Not all painters are Rembrants.
And the same is true of uniforms. There is something about a Smith-Gray Made-to-Measure Officer's Uniform that not only makes the wearer look the part—but imports a certain look!
Call it the consummate skill of Smith-Gray master tailoring. Or the wizardry of Smith-Gray fitting. Or the dress-parade smoothness and figure-trim styling.
But, confidentially, there is something more—a "know-how" that is an integral part of the 98-year-old Smith-Gray tradition for UNIFORM PERFECTION.
We have expert tailors on the premises and are organized to give exceptional service to men slated to receive their commissions. Come in at your convenience.

Lunch In Field Is No Picnic For Mess Men

Problem of Serving Hot Food on Time Is Difficult One

Student officers of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, lavishly praise the tasty lunches served them in the field whenever an all-day problem keeps the class from returning to barracks at noon.

But they rarely give a thought to the difficulties of transporting hot food, cold drinks, and a rather complete mess set-up, out to instructional areas in remote corners of the reservation, and on time for the hungry hundreds lined up at chow call.

The system of serving complete meals "on location" functions so smoothly only because Captain Howard G. Jones, 1st S. T. R. Supply Officer, and his assistant, First Lieut. Ervin G. Ochs, give it lots of thought. In fact, they spend several hours a week studying the training schedules of all companies in the regiment for the succeeding seven days, planning the transportation to carry the right Kitchen out to the right class at the right time.

Maybe it's just as well that students don't realize on how many occasions their appetites, sharpened by hours of outdoor work, nearly remained unsatisfied. Sudden demands for transportaton had left Captain Jones approaching the critical noon hour with only on truck where three or four were needed to carry lunches out to companies in the field. Frantic telephoning by the Captain miraculously produced the additional vehicles required, and the classes off somewhere in Georgia's pine woods or red-earth hills never knew how close they came to starvation.

ONLY ONE DETAIL

And that's only one detail the Regimental supply office has to contend with. Broadly speaking, its responsibilities include housing, feeding, clothing, and furnishing student equipment and training literature to the thonsands of officers and men in the 1st Student Training Regiment, commanded by Colonel John S. Rooms. Further complicating the problem are the six different kinds of classes for which the Supply Officer must provide. It's a man-sized job—several of them, in fact—asserts Captain Jones.

RSO draws material from the Quartermaster of The Infantry School property officer and issues it to the battalions and companies of the regiment. Supply problems are complicated by the fact that there are six types of classes—basic officer, advanced officer, officers' communication, officers' motor maintenance, enlisted radio operators, and enlisted motor mechanics—in the 1st S. T. R., and students in each course must be issued the equipment and instructional booklets to fit their particular needs.

MANUALS DISTRIBUTED

Thousands of copies of field manuals and technical treaties pass through RSO each month. They cover all phases of military learning, from how to roll a full field pack to the maintenance of 2 1-2-ton and heavier trucks—in all, 107 separate titles. Basics receive the greatest number of books per student—forty—while interests of other classes are less varied. The Supply Officer also issues training equipment carried by individual students, from straight edges to semi-automatic rifles.

A unique baggage service is operated by RSO, to pick up and deliver the belongings of arriving and departing officers, at express and railroad stations. A detail of four men is permanently assigned to this work, since from 400 to 500 student officers come and go each week.

Not the least of the Supply Officer's activities is clothing and feeding all enlisted men, both cadre and students, in the 1st S. T. R. Daily, the regiment draws rations from post Quartermaster, then distributes the food to company messes. On one occasion, Captain Jones had wheedled for the regiment promise of assorted fresh fruits and vegetables—only to find that beans and dried eggs were all that remained in the warehouse. Little emergencies like that keep a supply officer from becoming bored.

2 WAC Officers Join Lawson Field Headquarters Unit

Two officers have been added to the staff of the 772nd Post Headquarters Company, Women's Army Corps, stationed at Lawson Field, Fort Benning. They are Lt. Margaret Wade, company mess and supply officer, and Lt. Juanita E. Johnston, assistant special service officer for the field.

Lt. Wade served with the WAC at Bergstrom Field, Austin, Tex., and Lt. Johnston was assigned to Lawson Field upon completion of

RECEIVES SILVER STAR — Lieut. Col. John Ranier Weaver, of Fort Benning, is shown receiving the Silver Star from Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, at a battalion parade of the 300th Infantry. The award was made for gallantry in action in North Africa. Colonel Weaver is the son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. J. R. N. Weaver, of Columbus. His father has been a Japanese prisoner since the fall of Bataan. (U. S. Army Signal Corps photo.)

OFFICER GETS SILVER STAR

Col. Weaver Rewarded For Gallantry In North African Campaign

The Silver Star for gallantry in action has been awarded to Lt. Col. James Rainer Weaver of the General Tactics Section of The Infantry School. Presentation of the award was made by Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, at a battalion parade of the 300th Infantry.

The award was made to Col. Weaver for the part he played in the landing operations of the U. S. forces in North Africa, November 8, 1942. He was in charge of four beach making boats which were assigned the task of locating and marking the narrow beaches for the night landing of troops. The coast in the area assigned his boats is poorly charted, rocky and has a bad surf, and it was essential that the assault boats hit the right spots from the transport area which was seven miles off shore.

The boat which he was in had a naval specialist with four men aboard in addition to two army scouts. It was one of the eight such craft marking the beaches at Fedala, Safi and Port Tyranteg in French Morocco, about 16 miles from Casablanca.

Colonel Weaver was born in 1914 in Manila, Philippine Islands, and is the son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. J. R. N. Weaver, Lockwood Ave., Columbus, Ga.

General Weaver, now a prisoner of the Japs on Formosa Island, commanded the armored forces during the battle of the Philippiens and was decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross shortly before the fall of Bataan.

WEST POINT GRAD

Colonel Weaver was graduated from West Point in 1936 and assigned to the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning, where he served for two years. The following year he was assigned to The Infantry School, where he was promoted to first lieutenant.

Also in 1939 and in 1940 he served as assistant adjutant general and executive officer of the Headquarters of the First Division, a period which included the maneuvers at Fort Benning. He served with the 518th M. P. Battalion of Fort Jay and with the Special Service School at Lexington, Ky. Prior to that, she was a company commander at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Lt. Wade, a native of Woburn, Mass., served with the women's Navy Auxiliary during World War I, and left a position as accountant with the Massachusetts tactical department to enter the WAC.

The new assistant special service officer, Lt. oJhnston, is a graduate of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, where she majored in home economics. Before enlisting in the WAC last September, she served as home demonstration agent with the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Lt. Johnston is a native of Auburn, Ala., where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Johnston, reside.

16th Infantry at Fort Devens, commanding companies in each unit. He was promoted to captain in 1940.

In 1942 he was promoted to major and served as assistant intelligence officer of the Amphibious Corps of the Atlantic Fleet stationed at Quantico, Va.

Later in the same year, and during a portion of this year he served in the same capacity with the Amphibious Force of the Atlantic Fleet. He was promoted to lieutenant colonel in February of this year, and is assigned to The

Just like he'd found someone waiting for him, someone a million times nicer than Sonja could ever be. Em sort of calmed me down a bit, but I knew she didn't feel any too friendly to this "svenska flicka" we were about to meet. Em hid her feelings better than I did. It wasn't long before the train arrived in Boston.

Sonja wouldn't be through for the afternoon, we figured, so Em and I headed straight for the office in which she works. We took the elevator up to the fifth floor and noticed the company's sign down the hallway when we got off. I knocked on the door with my good hand, then walked right in. "I'm a friend of Mike Flaherty, the fellow who used to call on Sonja," I said boldly. "Is she in?". The man behind the huge mahogany desk looked at me a moment. It seemed ages before she spoke. "Won't you sit down?", he said.

Well, he told us the story. Sonja read a letter from the captain one afternoon after the mail came. Then she was sure, so very sure that Mike was the only person she could ever care for. She finally decided she loved Mike, though no one will ever know now. She had started to cry, then asked if she couldn't take a few minutes off to run across the street to the telegraph office. She wanted to wire the Air Force captain not to bother to come. She loved Mike. She had gone out of the office with a few happy tears still on her cheeks. "I love Mike", she had said as she ran out of the door. A few minutes later there was a screeching of brakes, a girl was gently carried to the sidewalk. A crumpled piece of paper was found in her hand. A scribbled "I love you, Mike".

When the manager mentioned the date I began to understand. Allowing for the difference in time between Boston and Mistretta it had happened at practically the same moment. The young girl with tears still in her eyes ran into the path of a taxi at the same time that a young paratrooper walked into the path of an enemy rifle bullet. It was too strange to believe. It couldn't be true. Perhaps that explains the strange smile on Mike's face just before he died.

I have almost forgotten to mention the strangest thing of all. When I took the papers out of Mike's left breast pocket to send home I found that card Sonja sent back to the kid in answer to his flowers. A plain white card with "Thanx, Sonja" written on it. The bullet had pierced the paper. Now I understand how it all happened. The hole was directly above the "j". Sonja had dotted her name and Mike understood . . . by "coincidence"?

Housing Crisis Grows In City

USO Plans Drive To Round Up All Available Rooms

When the term "critical" is applied to the housing situation in Columbus, it's gross understatement, say Travelers' Aid workers, who are faced with the task of finding living quarters for some 75 to 100 persons each day.

With the overwhelming desire to be with their soldier-husbands every possible minute prompting them, army wives stream into Columbus each day to look for rooms —which now are unavailable.

To meet this demand—and to supply even more permanent residents with living quarters—the USO housing committee, headed by Rabbi Herbert S. Waller, is sponsoring a concentrated drive this week to round-up every available room in this community.

In asking citizens to rent out rooms, the committee is also prepared to point out how they can evict tenants if ever the room is needed.

PATHETIC STORIES

General Wood Gets New Post

Transferred to Fourth Command Headquarters

Brigadier General Eric Fisher Wood, Commanding General Internal Security District 4 for the past 18 months, has been transferred to Headquarters Fourth Service command for duty. General Wood's headquarters in his new assignment will continue to be at Fort Benning, temporarily at least, according to his announcement.

Succeeding General Wood as commander of the Internal Security District 4 is Lieut. Col. Herbert D. Mendenhall of the Corps of Engineers, who has been serving under General Wood at Fort Benning.

A civilian engineer in civilian life, Colonel Mendenhall is a

Midnight Curfew Put Into Effect On Reservation

Curfew restrictions established for military personnel in Columbus and environs were effected at Fort Benning starting Wednesday it was announced by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, post commander.

Except in the event of some special occasion authorized by post headquarters, the order directs that other recreational facilities for military personnel on the Fort Benning reservation must be cleared and closed by 1 a. m. EWT.

No radio or other musical device will be played in any apartment after twelve midnight, the order states. All such instruments played in quarters which are separate housing should be reduced in volume in order to avoid disturbance to adjacent quarters, it continues.

Benning School Opens Sept. 13

Registration Dates September 8-10

Registration of pupils at the Fort Benning Children's School will be held September 8, 9 and 10, and classes will commence Monday morning, September 13, Lt. Jack H. Campbell, post school officer, advises.

The course of instruction includes first through seventh grade work, and tuition is free to children of all post military personnel, both officers and enlisted men. Kindergarten instruction will be offered for children too young to attend first grade but over four years of age.

Mental examinations for prospective first grade pupils are slated for Monday afternoon, September 10.

The following staff assignments for the coming year were announced by Lt. Campbell: Annie Lou Grimes, acting principal and 1st grade teacher; Nellie O. Porter, kindergarten; Margaret Ellison, 1st grade; Emily Stephenson, 1st and 2nd grade; Eva Lou Mathews, 2nd and 3rd grade; Susan Colquitt, 3rd grade; Bess Lockhart, 4th grade; Rachel Marshall, 5th grade; Josephine Halliday, 6th grade; Lois Wells Moore, 6th and 7th grade; and Lillian Wells, 7th grade.

ON LIMITS

Two establishments in Phenix City, Ala., formerly declared "off limits" for military personnel ,have now been approved for patronage by soldiers, it was announced at Fort Benning Post Headquarters. The "off limits" ruling has been lifted from the establishment operated by L. A. Lovick, formerly known as Wood's Cafe, 1503 Third avenue, Phenix City, and the establishment operated by O'Neill Clegg, formerly known as The Bird's Nest, on the Opelika Road in Phenix City.

Eleven Soldiers Suffer Injuries In Van Mishap

Five in Station Hospital; 40 Escape Unscathed from Bus

Four Fort Benning soldiers injured when a five-ton trailer van used to transport military personnel from the post to Columbus overturned on Lumpkin road Tuesday evening are still in the Station hospital, but none is injured critically, it was announced Wednesday.

Of the 11 officers and enlisted men injured, First Lieut. Gerry O. Stewart, 17th company, 1st STR, Infantry school, who suffered a possible fracture of neck and spine, was most seriously hurt, according to hospital authorities.

The others still under treatment are reported in good condition. They are First Lieut. Donald H. Benway, Infantry school, who suffered contusions of the abdomen; Second Lieut. Maurice C. Alexander, 13th company, 1s STR, Infantry school, lacerations of left elbow and leg, and S-Sgt. Linard Dunigan, Company C, ISSC, lacerations and mild contusions.

Forty other riders were uninjured in the accident.

Others injured:

Capt. Frank J. Novak, 15th Company, 3rd battalion, 1st STR, Infantry School. Lacerated scalp.

Staff Sgt. Nathan A. Dowden, Company F, ISSC. Lacerations left elbow.

First Lt. George W. Booker, 2nd company, 1st STR, Infantry School. Head injuries.

Pfc. Clifford G. Brown, headquarters, 1st battalion, 176th Infantry regiment. Contusions of left elbow.

Pfc. Denny E. Foster, Negro, Company E, Truck regiment. Lacerated left knee.

Private Amos of the Truck regiment, who has been released from the hospital, was the driver of the vehicle. Private Foster, the assistant driver, also was in the cab of the truck, which was badly damaged when the truck overturned.

Occuring during a busy hour when scores of cars with military and civilian personnel leave the post for their homes in Columbus and vicinity, the accident attracted hundreds of passersby.

However, military police arrived on the scene shortly after the mishap and routed traffic on its way while three ambulances took the injured to the hospital. Military police are investigating the accident.

Post Limits Use of Water

The watering of lawns and gardens and the washing of private vehicles at Fort Benning has been suspended until further notice, it was announced today.

In the Daily Bulletin issued by the post commander, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, all personnel were directed to abide by the new regulations. It has been requested that as much water as possible be conserved on all government wash racks similarly.

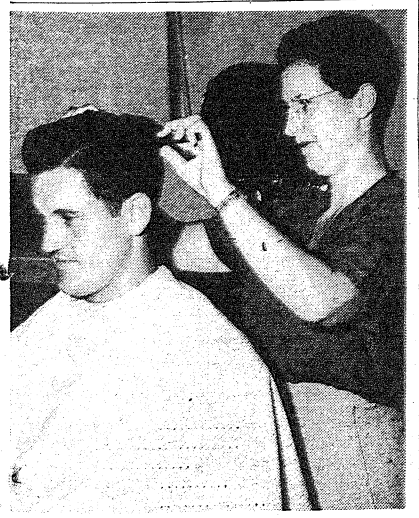
Although Fort Benning does not face a water crisis, it was explained at the Post Engineer's office that need to maintain substantial pressure so as to serve all buildings on the reservation necessitated the order to curtail excessive use of water.

Colonel Rooks Of B&C School Sent To Atlanta

Colonel John M. Rooks, commandant of all Bakers and Cooks Schools in the Fourth Service Command who has been stationed at Fort Benning, has left for a new assignment at Fourth Service Command Headquarters in Atlanta.

In his new assignment, Col. Rooks will serve as assistant director of food service in the Service Command. In Atlanta he will be assistant to Colonel William F. Riter.

Serving in his capacity at Benning for two and a half years, Colonel Rooks has supervised the activation of a parent B and C school at Fort Benning and nine sub schools which are operating throughout the southern states.



Succeeding Colonel Rooks as commandant of the several Bakers and Books Schools is Lieut. Col. Grover M. Ford, who has been executive officer to Col. Rooks.

PAPER CHANGES NAME

The Three Hundreth, regimental newspaper of the 300th Infantry has officially changed its name to The Saber, which henceforth is the name by which the regiment will also be known.

ENGINEER ANGEL—Pride and joy of the lads who build for Uncle Sam is lovely Elaine Luban, whose perfect facial features may someday bring her a fortune . . . An Army wife as well as a civilian employe in the Area Engineer office, she is a former Hollywood model and has dabbled at both the sfage and the cinema. . . . That wistful pose you see above is but one of many which could catch her rare and exquisite type of beauty. . . . We'll wager that no movie mag has ever presented a cover girl or glamour girl portrait that was any lovelier than our Pin-Up Girl of the Week. . . . Born in far-off Oregon, Elaine migrated to California with her family some seven years ago, and now claims the sunshine state as her home. . . . She's been at Benning just about eight months, coming here to join her hubby. . . . First and only job at Benning was as private secretary to Mr. William W. Daughtrey, safety engineer at the post. . . . Prior to Army days, lovely Elaine was a professional model in Los Angeles (you can understand that), and played in a couple of shows that were produced by her husband in Hollywood. . . . Just before that she went to Hollywood High School where she was a classmate of luscious Alexis Smith, one of the newer film stars. . . . Elaine bears a remarkable resemblance to Alexis and during schooldays, they were often confused by their classmates. . . . Although not particularly interested in a film career, our Elaine was twice interviewed by film magnates for important roles, once by the Howard Hughes office, and a second time by a Cecil B. DeMille agent who wanted her for the part eventually played by Paulette Goddard in "Northwest Mounted" . . . Her histrionic ability is to be expected since her father for many years was a leading singer and actor on the famed Chatauqua Circuit. . . . Despite her fragile type of beauty, Elaine is a remarkably versatile young lady. . . . She can act, sing (studied voice for a couple years) plays the piano, and is quite adept with a draw ing pencil. . . . As a matter of fact, although she hopes to return to Hollywood and home at war's end, she's much more interested in art than in pursuing a film career. . . . This week's angel also swims and enjoys a fast game of badminton and is an ardent basketball and baseball fan, rooting especially hard for the Academic Prof teams, whose games she seldom misses. Oh, yes, about her husband. Well, if you haven't already guessed, the lucky guy is Sgt. Milton Luban, press impressario of the Academic Regiment and former newspaperman, actor, writer and producer of note on Broadway and in Hollywood. . . . He's seen a lot of the modern beauties in his time, but to him Elaine's queen of them all, and we're quite willing to agree! . . . VITAL STATISTICS: Height—5 foot 7 inches. Weight—125 pounds. Bust—34 inches. Waist—25 inches. Hips.—36 inches. Eyes—Blue, green or gray according to milady's mood. Hair—Dark blond. Complexion—Fair as fair can be. Truly a gem of beauty in our midst! THERE ARE A LOT of ways of clipping a soldier. You might give him a wallop on the jaw or you might separate his from his finances. A pleasanter fashion is the one employed by Miss Tereacy Chambers of Cullman, Ala., who took up her duties this week in the regimental barbershop of the 300th Infantry of The Infantry School Troops Brigade. Her customer of the moment is Cpl. Lewis Majewski of the Medical Detachment. Miss Chambers replaces Mrs. Annie E. Taylor who, with her husband, has set up a shop in the 7th Armored Division. Bridge Building Record Broken By Gator Unit

A new Infantry School record for bridge erection was set recently by "E" Company of the Second Battalion, 124th Infantry regiment, when they did the job in nine minutes and five seconds.

The problem, No. 477, was the last before going on a month's bivouac. "E" Company was selected to raise the bridge, and "G" Company was the attacking party using assault boats. "H" and "F" Companies supplied the enemy detail.

The big part of the problem was the bridge. The detail worked under Lt. Roslund, company commander.

Capital Official Sees Hospital

Major Barton Inspects Convalescent Program

Major Walter E. Barton, Director of the Reconditioning Division, Office of the Surgeon General of the War Department in Washington, has concluded a tour of inspection of Hospital Unit No. 2, at Fort Benning, according to an announcement by Col. William L. Starnes, commanding officer of the Unit.

According to instructions received by Col. Starnes from the War Department, Major Barton was to "visit the hospital to observe the operation of the convalescent training program."

"The program for convalescents at your institution has attracted favorable comment. It is desired to study the features that may be generally applied to stations elsewhere," the letter stated.

During the day Major Barton inspected the new chicken ranch, where 2,000 chickens will be raised; attended lectures and news summaries, and took part in a discussion as to the value of bombs in warfare. He expressed satisfaction in the results the hospitals was making in restoring soldiers to full time duty, and their plans for the future.

Lieut. Gaines 1st WAC Officer Sworn In Here

The First WAC officer at Fort Benning to be sworn into the Army of the United States is Lieut. Gail A. Gaines, commanding officer, WAC Detachment, Station Complement.

Lt. Col. J. D. Rosenberger, Jr., post adjutant and director of military and civilian personnel, administered the oath of office. Lt. Gaines is one of more than forty WAC officers now stationed at Fort Benning.

Bond Drive Kick-Off Tonight

Street Dance, 4 Bands, Fire Works Feature Program

Featuring pin-up girls, four dance bands, and a fire works display, Fort Benning's first street dance and war bond rally tonight will be one of the biggest affairs to hit the post recently, Major George Fink, post war bond officer, disclosed today.

The rally, which has as its purpose the launching of post participation in the Third War Loan Drive, will feature local dance bands from the 124th Infantry, and 31st Armored regiments, plus a hill-billy jive group from the 176th. In addition, Dick Rogers' band, now at Fort Benning with the USO show, High, Wide, and Handsome," will make a late appearance at the rally following his regularly scheduled performance.

Serving as partners for soldiers will be civilian girls and Wacs from the various post detachments. Included will be all four of Fort Benning's own pin-up girls, Elizabeth Morgan, Edna Lynch, Winona Andrews, and Elaine Luban. Two free busses have been arranged through the courtesy of Howard Bus Lines and will pick up girls in Columbus at 8 p. m. at the bus terminal in town and bring them to the post. Similar return transportation has been assured.

The affair will begin at 2 p. m., with shooting of fireworks, followed immediately by music and dancing in the area directly in front of Service Club No. 1 on Ingersoll St.

SALES STUNTS SLATED

Starting with music by the 31st regiment orchestra, the different groups will alternate, playing fifteen to twenty minutes each. Between band numbers several sales stunts have been arranged which will be announced via the loudspeaker system.

Otherwise bond sales will be handled at the different tables scattered around the dance area, where bonds may be purchased for cash or by pay reservations. Each girl will seek to interest her dancing partner in buying a bond.

During the later portion of the evening Dick Rogers will bring his dance band and a group from

Bring On The Girls' In Alabama Sept. 7th

A GI's prayer will be answered Tuesday, Sept. 7, when USO-Camp Shows will play "Bring On the Girls" in the Alabama outdoor theater at 8:45 p. m. for paratroopers of the area.

"Bring On the Girls" features one of the world's leading magicians besides offering music, comedy and dancing.

Headlining the show is Hardeen, brother of the late Harry Houdini, whose fame and reputation have been second only to that of his illustrious brother. Hardeen has been one of vaudeville's great headliners for thirty years. He has appeared in all the great theatres of the world and amazed millions of people with his incredible feats of legerdemain and baffling escape tricks.

Working in and out of Hardeen's act is the comedy team of Faye and Mason, interpolating highlights of fun and frolic, and piling on laughs with Herbert Faye's amusing antics and Ruth Mason's clever patter.

Contrasting the dances of today with those of yesteryear is Maryette Evans and Her Family. Maryette's parents demonstrate the dances that were popular in the "good old days," while Maryette and her brother show how it's done today. They finish with the entire family executing the latest steps and routines.

From musical comedy and radio comes lovely Alice Tyrrell to charm with her sweet singing. Alice's voice is one of unusual range, and she is equally expert at delivering rhythm and torch songs as well as ballads. A Washington, D. C., girl, she has been seen in the musical shows, "Meet the People," "Count Me In" and "New Faces," and has sung on Rudy Vallee's and Mary Astor's radio programs.

In the event of threatening or inclement weather "Bring On the Girls" will be moved inside to a War department theater, Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, special service officer, announced.

Frying Pan Area In SOS For More Cooks

Cooks are wanted in the frying pan area.

Well, it's only natural that cooks should be wanted in the general vicinity of a frying pan, but at Fort Benning Ga., they actually advertise for the combination.

In the Daily Bulletin, published at Post headquarters, a notice appears stating that vacancies for cooks exist in the 541st Parachute Infantry, which was activated in the "frying pan area" of the post. The area is so called because of its heat and the scarcity of shade trees.

Army cooks who are expected to volunteer for service with the paratroopers probably will be in the soup if they don't keep the frying pan sizzling, whether in the area or on the range.

Italians At Fort Benning Available For Farmers

500 Prisoners of War to Help Harvest Crops In This Area

Fort Benning now has Italian prisoners of war available for farm work in this area, it was announced Saturday by the post Public Relations Office, in reporting that Benning has established and will supply a prisoner of war camp near Americus which will furnish agricultural workers for that section.

The Seventh Armored division is furnishing guards for eight such camps in Georgia, it was also announced.

Approximately 500 Italian prisoners of war will be available for farm work within a radius of 35 to 40 miles of Columbus, according to Col. George M. Chescheir commanding officer of the Fort Benning prisoner of war internment camp. Information received here is that the men will be paid 80 cents a day in canteen checks and the difference between that sum and the prevailing farm wage, which the employing farmer pays, will be refunded to the United States treasury.

Friday, post officials were informed that Fort Benning must establish and have ready by 4 p. m. Saturday a camp at Americus, Col. John P. Edgerly, post executive officer announced. Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply, and Col. A. J. Bain, post engineer, took details of men to Americus to take over the work.

CAMP COMPLETED

Late Saturday Brig. General Walter S. Fulton, commander of the Post, returned from Americus where he had gone to supervise the work, and reported that the task had been completed on time. The camp is at Southern Field, Army Air School.

It was also announced at headquarters of the Seventh Armored Division that the 48th Armored Infantry Regiment would furnish guard details for eight temporary prisoner of war camps during the present harvesting season, probably from three to five weeks. The guard details will be under the general command of Col. George H. Malony, commanding officer of the regiment.

GERMAN PRISONERS

All prisoners of war at the Americus camp which will be supplied at Fort Benning will be Germans, coming either from Anniston, or Opelika interment camps, it was announced.

War department policy will not permit spectators to gather to watch the men be taken in trucks out to work, nor will spectators be allowed to watch the men at work, it was pointed out.

Psychology Back in Saddle Boston Tommy Observes

BY PVT. THOMAS DEVINE

I see phychology's back again. Happened to pick up a copy of a publication called "Yank" which contained a piece on the topic based on an Infantry Journal book. Well—plus ca change, I always say.

When I was of the eunesse d'ors back in the 1920's psychology was very smart. Everyone of any pretense to fashion had a favored phychologist. We used to call it "getting psyched" and anyone who didn't have a fixation, or an inhibition at the very least, was considered definitely hoop-skirt.

The best sellers of the day were Havelock Ellis, Krafft-Ebing, Iwan Block et al. Just as in a previous epoch fashionable people used to go to Bad Homburg Bad Nauheim, Aix les Bains and Vichy to take the waters so in the 1920's did they fly to Vienne for an emotional massage. You could no more toss a brickbat out of a Viennese window without hitting a psychologist in those days than you could swing a cat in Miami and not injure a realtor.

Emotional normality was definitely bad form and the greater one's deviation from the ordinary the more distinguished. Dull and unimaginative persons had such pedestrian things as shoe fetiches and oedipus complexes but people of real style had considerably more imagination. One friend of mine developed a hysteria against a contact between glass and paper and would froth at the mouth were anyone to remove an electric bulb from its wrappings in his presence. His wife, not to be outdone, developed an idee fixe against china buttons and would go into a swoon at even the mention of this banal item of the notion counter.

Anyone of a mentality exceeding four cylinders spoke the shibboleth until it came to the point where the most macabre and baroque eroticisms were a topic of drawing room discussions. It would have been considered not at all strange for one guest to whisper to another at a social gathering: "Keep this quiet, my dear, but I'm told that man who just came in is NORMAL" and her interlocutor would certainly gasp "Oh how DREADFUL, I can't believe it! He comes from SUCH a good family. His mother was one of the Leominster Slocums."

HOT STUFF IN '20'S

Yes, as I said, psychology was considered very hot stuff in the 20's but like Delsarte and Coueism it went its way and became lost in the more remote stretches of Flatbush and the Bronx. The 30's, immersed in the Hey Diet and Technocrazy, considered psychology as dead as Queen Anne.

Thus, you might have knocked me over with a bull dozer when I encountered this article in "Yank." I thought "My heavenly days, have they dug that up again after it's been decently buried for these fifteen years?" However, since they have, I might just as well tell you that I know all about it and took considerable pleasure in picking the whole thing to pieces. If the Infantry Journal wants to know anything about psychology—well—just let them come to me—I could tell them things they'd never believe —much less PRINT.

In the first place the article tells how easy it is to panic G.I.'s and cites instances such as cries of "Gas" or "We're cut off." They don't know the half of it. I've seen panics caused by the sound of a mess sergeant's whistle and mass exoduses at high speed on the mere whisper of the term "detail."

"You can stay up all night," the article goes on to say, "and keep awake provided you keep using some muscles, at least the speaking muscles." Well—I've no quarrel with that thesis, in fact they practically took the words out of my mouth (Unpleasant trick.) Many's the time and often I've found myself utterly exhausted at the end of a day of not particularly hard work. I'd feel like dragging myself home, collapsing on my bunk and staying there. Let, however, someone suggest popping in town and having a few nips at Bob's place. I instantly un-wilt and can be the life of the party until all hours of night or, at least, as long as I can get anyone to listen to me.

HOW TO BE BRAVE

"How to be brave and safe" says our informant, "that is the greatest psychological problem for the soldier" ain't it the truth? It's just the old business of wanting to have ones cake and eat it and about as easy of solution as perpetual motion. Bravery decreases in exact ratio to the increase of civilization. The more effete we become the more we depend upon paying for the bravery of the policemen. In fact, in our society an exercise of personal valor is penalized. Pop a wise guy in the eye and likely as not you'll be tossed into the cooler.

Bravery is a nebulous and incalculable thing anyhow. Although not essentially heroic I expect that vanity or self esteem would probably preclude my running away in combat action. On the other hand I have a deep seated aversion to mice and am not at all sure that the same factors would militate against my fleeing from the scene of action screaming "Women and children last" if faced by one of these obnoxious rodents, I am perfectly well aware that the creatures cannot do me bodily injury but such arguments are completely inneffectual and merely make me feel like doing mayhem to anyone who employs them.

"Men in the army" we learn, "especially those who recently come into the service, are apt to feel hungry and think the hunger is for food, but actually it is for other satisfactions which throughout their lives have been intimately associated with eating. They may not realize it, but often the truth is they have become homesick. They are longing for those upon whose presence and affection they have long depended. Because they are not completely aware of what it is they need. They may smoke or drink to excess or may eat quantities of candy or ice cream."

I'D SUE

Now this statement is directly in restraint of trade and if I were the P.X. I'd sure "Yank" for printing it. What's more it isn't so. My home is, so to speak in a storage warehouse and I'm sure that I am not longing for any such locale every time I sneak over to the soda fountain for a fudge sundae, maybe it's because our barracks bear so close a resemblance to one. As for drink: I drink considerably less now than I ever did back in civilization what with auntie's ruin at $1.35 a half pint. No—I've always maintained that poverty makes more saints than moral restraint. The only kind of sin worth bothering about in my estimation costs a lot of money to indulge in.

You might know that in an article of this kind sex would pop up like a jack-in-the-box and surely enough it does. Thus "Most men chose a partner (I suppose and trust it means a wife) not solely for the relief of purely sexual tensions but for the satisfaction of much more complex needs." Dear me, what an admixture of prudery and prurience.

Now I'm no misogynist and the American woman has always found in me a staunch advocate but I'd just like to know what this guy means by "complex needs." Complex needs forsooth —complex rubbish or, as the French would say "Quelle blague" Why only the other day I was observing to a friend of mine that life on an army post is a perfect refutation of the indispensability of the feminine gender. How veraciously penetrating is the adage of the old New England horn book "Woman, woman, thou wert made the peace of Adam to invade.

STITCH AWAY

If this lad, with his "complex needs" is alluding to washing ironing, sewing, darning, etc. just let him wander through a squad room and glance about. He'll see the G.I.'s scrubbing their clothes, wielding electric irons and stitching away like mad with a mean needle, chattering gaily away the while with a blithe loquacity which makes the members of the Sauk Center Ladies Uplift Society appear like a congress of deaf mutes by contrast.

Maybe "complex needs" means being scolded about dropping ashes on the floor and laid out about not hanging up ones things when one enters the house or given hell for using the tank type vacuum cleaner as a paint spray.

No—let me tell you the absence of ladies bears its own compensations. When I go to take a shower in the evening I don't have to bother about drawing the shade. If I feel uncivil before breakfast, which is a prerogative that should have been included in the Bill of Rights, no one demands that I behave like a Christian human being and it is not incumbent upon me to kiss the G. I. sitting across the table before I commence to eat.

No—this person is quite definitely off the ball in the matter of psychology. I could do very much better myself as I said before but why should I? Psychologists are worth big money. Should I tell the army all I know for $50.00 a month. I'm not dreaming of it.

Hundreds of 7th Armored Division men met and were entertained by visiting WAC's from the Harmony Church area when they participated in a full evening's fun at the Sand Hill Service club last week.

The program which included a "blind date" session conducted between 7th Armored Division men and the visiting women brought many laughs. The program was arranged and sponsored by the 7th Armored Division's own Special Services section. Assisting Lt. W. D. Karrenbauer of Special Services were Sgt. W. W. Jones and Cpl. Chris Woessner, Division Service company's baritone who acted as master of ceremonies.

Visiting women, all non-commissioned officer's who vied with 7th Armored Division soldiers in the blind date and quiz program included: T-5 Maryland Pales, T-5 Alta Riffle, T-5 Elizabeth Sidlouskas, T-4 Helen Owens, T-5 Dorothy Saxton and T-4 Glenna Popp. They are assigned to the Second Student Training Regiment, WAC Detachment, TIS.

Seventh Armored men who joined in the question and answer exercises were: Pfc. William S. Byrd, Headquarters Battery, 434th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, Sgt. Jesse B. Shumake, Company C, 48th Armored Infantry Regiment, Pvt. Grant R. Odom, Service Battery, 440th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, T-5 Chester Kopp, Company D, 40th Armored Regiment, Second Battalion, Pvt. Robert A. King, Service Battery, 434th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, and Pfc. James Wilson, Service Battery, 440th Armored Field Artillery Battalion.

Music for the entire evening's program was furnished by the 31st Armored Regiment band, led by S. Sgt. Charles De Pasquale. The band, whose members had considerable practice in the desert, has become more and more popular within the Division.

Cpl. Chris Woessner, whose singing in "Off Limits," the 7th Armored Division's big success at Camp Polk, Louisiana, sang "Let's Get Lost" previous to a short dance period arranged especially for the contestants in the show.

Lieut. Christain 15th Company CO

After an absence of about four months, 1st Lieutenant Charles D. Christian formerly a tactical officer in the 15th Company, 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, has returned as company commander. He relieves Captain D. D. Durham, who has been assigned to another officers advanced class as a student. Captain Durham commanded the 15th Company for a period of four months.

Since the opening of the advanced class in the 15th Company, five of the officer-students have been promoted. They are, from captain to major; Woodrow M. Dumont, Robert W. Jenkins, Fred W. Collins; from 1st lieutenant to captain: M. A. Hubble and R. T. Linder.

1st STR Unit Comprised of Vets Of Actual Warfare

Just about every important theatre of operations, as well as Army posts all over the United States, have representatives in the new Officers Advanced Class now in the 16th Company of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School.

Comprising a good cross-section of the Infantry, with a few members from other branches mixed in, the 16th boasts officers from armored divisions, more generally known as the "rattletrap. Infantry," from the new light jungle and mountain divisions, replacement pools, IRTC's, and from both the tactical and academic staffs here at Fort Benning.

Many members of the class are veterans of foreign service. Some have seen combat in North Africa, and others have served in Panama, Hawaii, and Alaska. One member of the class, 1st Lieutenant Randolph Eddy, has experienced both extremes of climate and terrain, having served in Panama and Greenland.

Academic Reg't Band Is Busy

'Sa busy band, that outfit of Cpl. Soddy Haines of the Academic Regiment of The Infantry School.

It played at the Rotary party given by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton at the Officers Club last week. It played at the Officers' Club dance Thursday and has been booked for that affair for the next two months.

And Saturday nights—Master Sgt. W. L. Chaffin, regimental sergeant major who does the bookings is swamped with from three to six requests for each week-end. The band averages 15 bookings a month.

Army All Ready With Turkey Day Feed Menu

G.I.'s attention! Would you like to know what you are going to have for Thanksgiving dinner this year?

Well the food experts of the Quartermaster commisary can tell you right now, because the 1943 Thanksgiving menu has already been prepared and passed the approval of the post menu board.

And here it is. You'll lead off with fruit cocktail, cream of celery soup, olives, mixed pickles, celery hearts. Then will come roast turkey with sage dressing, cranberry sauce, giblet gravy with rice, mashed potatoes, green peas, creamed corn, and tomato and lettuce salad with mayonaise. To top off the meal, there'll be pumpkin pie, ice cream, cookies, apples, oranges, and grapes. And for sidearms, of course, there's hot rolls and butter, crackers, coffee and lemonade.

Not bad, for this food-short year of 1943. Actually, according to Capt. Marcus E. Cooper, subsistence officer on the staff of Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply, there's only one item missing that was provided a year ago.

That item is baked ham. But who wants ham, anyway, when there's a pound of turkey per man dished out. Reason that ham has been eliminated from this year's menu is that the supply officials felt a large amount of meat, such as would be required at Benning, could be diverted to the rationed civilian populace to make their Thanksgiving menu a little more attractive.

The requisitions for the food listed above are now being prepared in Captain Cooper's office, and will be forwarded to the Quartermaster Market Center in Columbus by September 10th. That means that it won't be long afterwards that Benning's supply of turkey will be ordered and ear-marked for G.I. consumption on Thanksgiving day.

The cost of the Turkey Day menu this year, in case you're interested, will be 95.52 cents, the additional amount over a regular day's ration being taken care of by Uncle Sam with the annual "turkey ration" which is issued for both Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Wearing Uniform Nothing New to 3rd STR Aspirant

O. C. Grant Donned Gold Braid 15 Years Under Kleig Lights

Putting on a uniform was no new experience for Officer Candidate James E. Grant of the Seventh Company in the Third Student Training Regiment when he entered the Army a few months ago.

In fact, Grant has been wearing uniform for 15 years as a naval officer, a cavalryman, AAF officer, and even as an officer of foreign nations.

Grant, however, was not a soldier of fortune. His job was to do character and straight parts for the movies from 1928 on, and he wore the uniforms and interpreted the roles before Hollywood movie cameras.

While in Hollywood, he became a member of Actor Victor McLaglen's famed Light Horse Troop, which appeared before exclusive horse shows and benefit affairs throughout the country performing thrilling drills and stunet riding feats.

Grant broke into the entertainment business as leader of his own dance orchestra in California. He forsook this pursuit to become a dancer and while following this vocation met George Raft, who, at the same time, also was a hoofer.

Grant estimates that in the 15 years he has been associated with the moving picture industry he has appeared in about 700 pictures. Some of the pictures in which he was working before coming into the Army still have not been released.

At one time, Grant owned a 40-foot pleasure cruiser which, he said, he kept at the same wharf with Errol Flynn's famous yacht.

Maneuvers Intrigue A Tiger City Slicker

Slit Trench Easy To Dig After He Learns Spade's Use

After months of basic training, advanced training, and super-advanced training (not to mention various other assorted types authorized by the War Department) we found ourselves in the middle of a dense forest "somewhere in the United States."

"Maneuvers. Hmmmm that sounds like fun," we thought. About that time our first chow call in the field was given so we all maneuvered, as fast as possible, over to the mess truck. There we were, second in line, as the 1st sergeant made the announcement, "Everyone fall out to police up the area from here into Podunk and back." Podunk being only ten miles away, we fell out quite willingly and picked up cigarette butts, tin cans, candy wrappers, chewing gum and a blonde—at which point we ran like hell back to the chow line only to find that our place had switched from second to something like one hundred and twelve.

Never having spent much time in the field, and not being field soldiers in the first place, we found that our new life afforded many opportunities to become efficient in various things absolutely unknown to us before. We come from a city, where spades are good bids in a bridge game and picks are small instruments used to chop ice for cocktails. You can well imagine our consternation then at being handed said instruments and not recognizing them for what they were. However we soon lived this disgrace down, learned to handle them expertly, and could dig a slit trench or fox hole in only six hours time. (This was later shortened to two hours when we found out that the metal part of the spade is the end that goes into the ground).

During operations we live under tactical conditions. This means that when we hear a horn blow—three blasts for air attack—four for ground attack, and five for something-or-other (we always get them mixed up) we are to grab our weapon and run like mad in any direction, always making sure to follow someone else so we can blame them in case we're wrong.

TOTAL BLACKOUT

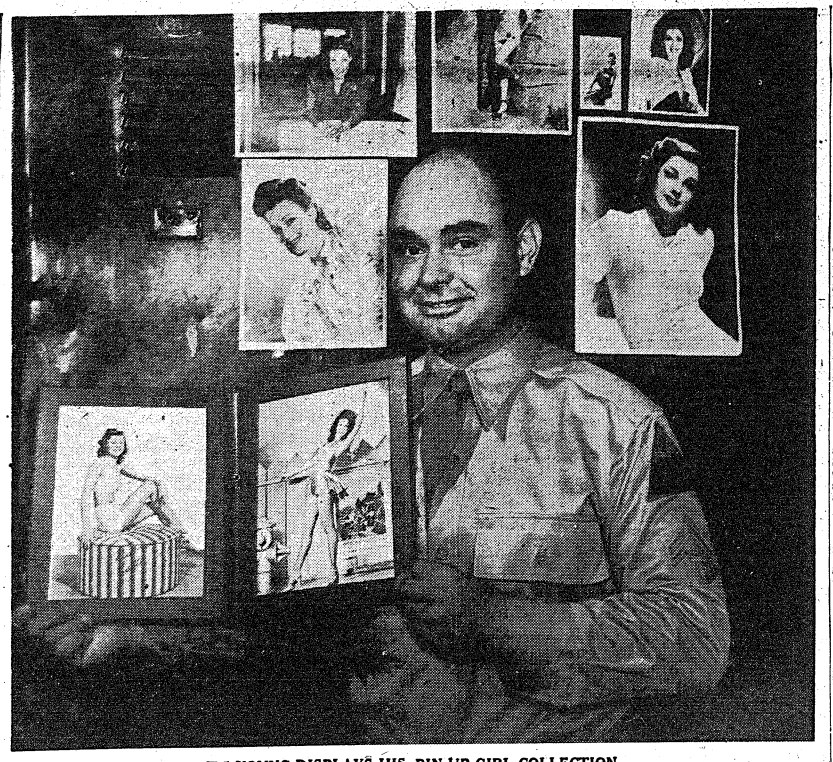
During tactical operations we are not allowed to have any tentage up during the day, and at night we operate in total blackout. This makes it necessary for us to put our tents up at night with only our sense of touch to guide us. It is fairly easy to pick out an area which is not covered with underbrush or blackberry vines (if there is such an area in Tennessee) but not always so easy to see just what we are getting into. We'll never forget the night we picked a cozy little place, which had a nice carpeting of "something" to protect us from the hard ground, and awoke the next morning to find we had spent the night in a growth of poison ivy under which reposed a neat little ant hill. However the ant bites and slight case of poison ivy which resulted didn't bother us much as we could hardly distinguish these from the chigger and mosquito bites which already covered large areas of our body.

After each tactical operation we have a "rest period" of two or three days duration. "Rest period" can be liberally translated to mean "time in which to catch up on all of the work not accomplished during the operation." During these periods a certain percentage of personnel is allowed to visit towns near our bivouac. Somehow we never seem to be included in that happy lot going to the city so we accept our defeat with the grace bestowed on us by patrician parents, wash our face, change our undershirt, dress in our khakis with the barracks bag crease, put on our second best pair of GI shoes and off we go to town. The typical town near which we manage to bivouac during rest periods has a name something like Blue Gumbo, Periwinkle Junction, or Shady Point. (The latter so named as it is completely devoid of vegetation of any sort). This typical town is usually inhabited by 5 men, 8 women, 2 children, and some few thousand dogs, cats, goats, and chickens. The only entertainment afforded is that derived from the gossip around the cracker barrel in the village store, and refreshments consist of the purchase of a moist five cent cake and warm drink—any one of a million substitutes for Coca-Cola. Of course all of this happy picture depends on whether or not we are lucky enough to get transportation into said settlement. Most of us are not too fastidious by this time and we never mind riding behind a mule or on a wagon load of fertilizer.

NO FIELD SOLDIERS

We have already mentioned the fact that we are not field soldiers. This sad detail is lamented by one and all but we manage to keep our pride by holding glorified titles under the general classification of "typewriter commandos". Typical of the sub titles (and there are many) is "supreme commander of the strategic map," which belongs to us. As SC of the SM we are the T-4 who instructs the T-5 in the proper method of plotting areas to be used for kitchen sumps.

There are many drawbacks to being a typewriter commando in the field as we are expected to know our own job as well as that of the "Tough Old Field Sergeant" who has more service stripes, wound stripes, commendations and campaign ribbons than we have pairs of fatigues (although we work in G-4) and who has served in many foreign lands such as Brooklyn, Madagascar, Shanghai and Oklahoma.



This account of our experiences would hardly be complete without a detailed description of our manner of bathing. We are allowed one quart of water per day under tactical conditions and of this we have to portion out a sufficient amount in which to shave, brush our teeth, wash off a small area on our face, and clean our vehicle—this leaves enough to moisten our tongue when we get to the point where we can't close our mouth. During rest periods we are allowed a considerably larger amount (as much as we can secure from the kitchen—undetected) and this affords us the opportunity of a real "bath". We borrow a helmet from our best friend (when he isn't looking) and fill it and our own to the brim; we then get out our wash cloth, soap, and towel and disrobe. The next step isn't always the same but it's usually one of three things: we either drop our wet wash cloth on an ant hill; spill all of our water from one helmet onto our towel; or discover that the order has been given to "prepare to move out in five minutes." Somehow we never seem to mind too much though and if we have managed to clean out one ear fairly well we feel refreshed for at least the next 24 hours.

ONLY 98 PER CENT WORK

We don't want to leave our readers with the impression that maneuvers are all work and no play—there's only 98 per cent of work. On week-ends there is always at least one movie at Headquarters and everyone attends. We go early so we can pick the softest rocks to sit on and an area where a minimum of weeds get down our neck. We can't see very well without our specs (and we never remember to take them), and the movies shown are always the type with the action laid in a dark room or under moonlight conditions so we really can't distinguish one character from another but nevertheless we do enjoy ourselves.

This is about all we have to report. We would like to take time to tell you about some of the really serious work we have accomplished here but that would be a long and laborious task and would not amuse our readers as much as we hope this account will. Also we mean no offense to any of the residents of this state and we have truly enjoyed being among them and visiting their cities and towns. This article is really a satire on Army life in the field and does not present a true picture of the fun and good times enjoyed by all the men.

NOTE to our readers: This paragraph had to be added to get us by the censors.

T-5 YOUNG DISPLAYS HIS PIN-UP GIRL COLLECTION

7th Armored T-5 Is Whiz At Figures And 'Figures'

He Claims Title As King of Pin-Up Girl Pic Collectors

T-5 Winston K. Young isn't filling out income tax returns as he did before he came to the Army. Instead, between you and me—and the other girls—he's the man that could hurriedly put the "pin up editor" wise. All in all Cpl. Young, of Service Company, 7th Armored Division Headquarters, owns approximately 700 autographed photographs of the prettiest women in the world—the Hollywood queens.

Young, only child of Mrs. Pearl B. Young, of Gonzales, Texas, is constantly sought out by fellow soldiers. They know full well that Cpl. Young has "power" with the beauties of the screen. It was he who kept them guessing while out in the desert whose photo would come next. Everyday nearly one or more of the stars write him and this stockily built Texan whose yen for figures—mathematics, please—finally led to his being placed in a job in the Finance section of the division.

He began making his collections some two or three years ago. Ann Miller very generously told Cpl. Young that movie actresses were human. Furthermore she gave him a studio permit—made him feel at home. Among the favorites of his are Carol Landis, Ann Sheridan, Esther Williams, Joan Blondell and Joe Carrol Dennison.

This fad of Cpl. Young's has made him known to all his fellow workers and men in the company. Everyday now someone yells at the Corporal, "What did we get today"? He shares with the men of the Company if he gets more than one photo. He has also sent many of them home to his mother for safekeeping.

Starting out as an experiment, the Bookmobile, operated by Hazel Reed, librarian in Service Club No. 5, to serve colored soldiers in the Harmony Church Area, has become one of the most anticipated events of the week.

Designed to serve those soldiers with text books, reference works and fiction in this area who are at too great distance to avail themselves of the opportunities of the Library, this Bookmobile is run each week.

Due to unforeseen transportation problems this week the soldiers are indebted to Chaplain Levi L. Stanmore of the 3rd Student Training Regiment, who loaned car and driver in order that his men have the reading material required for their studies as well as recreation.

Vacations are still in progress at the Motor Transport Division. Joyce Vincent has just returned from New Orleans. Maude L. Ball is on leave. James B. McCoy is in Atlanta getting his son in school.

The Ordnance Division has two distinguished civilians on temporary duty as auto advisors. They are Mr. Amick and Mr. Burnett.

* * *

Jennie Mae Robinson and Eula Mae Dokas, Civilian Personal Division, post headquarters, have returned from an exciting vacation spent in Panama City, Fla. Present at the launching of the "Victor Herbert", built and launched at the General Jonathon Wainwright ship yards in Panama City, they had the interesting experience of seeing Mrs. Wainwright christen this boat to the tune of "Kiss Me Again", and "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life", two of the most popular tunes by this famous American composer.

All employes working on this boat who had not missed one day from work on her were rewarded by being the first to ride on her as she slid down the ways on to the water docks for completion and commissioning.

Other distinguished visitors were the governor of Florida, several congressmen and state and city officials.

* * *

Louisiana might mean maneuvers to thousands of soldiers in the Army, but to Grace Holmes it means home-sweet-home, and Mary Edith Andrews is that happy because some people in an Armored Division are getting leave. Edith Fritz is back from a week in Birmingham visiting friends, and that's Ordnance news for this week.

* * *

It's goodbye to Jack A. Moore this time for sure, as he leaves for Washington this week to do government work. After 14 years at Benning—two and one-half of it spent on civil service—Jack is going to continue his work for the government in Washington.

* * *

Down where the ocean breezes blow is where Jennie May Robinson and Eula Mae Dokos are spending their vacation, Panama City is the locale selected by these two from Civilian Personnel for their resting-up for a hard winter.

* * *

* * *

Interesting news from two former employees at the sub-depot. Ernest H. Bram, propeller mechanic, and William Schepp are with the Army Air Forces in England.

* * *

Welcome to all these new employees at the Sub-Depot: Herbert L. Abercrombie, former University of Georgia football player, is in the Engineering Section; Glenda S. Moderno, leather and vancas worker in the parachute department, as is Gardned B. Jones. Edith McLaughlin and Young H. Hood are in the mechanical aerial repair department; Inez B. Register, aerial repair;

Former Orchestra Leader Master of Divers Jobs

The duty roster doesn't list the variety of jobs T-5 George Phillips, former orchestra leader and foundry worker does perform. He is assigned as a wire corporal in A Battery, 440th Armored Field Artillery Battalion of the 7th Armored Division, but between times he paints and plays an accordian or a violin.

If there's an odd job that requires any particular skill Corporal Phillips may be relied upon. He has done his share of KP and guard duty, as well. He has walked paint and decorate everything within sight almost.

A master with pen and brush Cpy. Phillips has done commercial sign painting, interior decorating, portrait painting and any type of lettering and drawing. His handiwork is conspicuous in and around his battalion area.

Phillips before being inducted into the Army conducted his own orchestra in East St. Louis, Mo., having played for radio stations in that section. The all-string orchestra was called "Trail Blazer Band." Two of his brothers, Cpl. Willie Phillips, of the III'd Armored Division, and Charles Phillips, a second class seaman, were members of the band, which played evenings after the men had completed a day's work at the foundry.

In the band were two more soldiers, Pvt. Rudy Pospishil, of the 23rd Engineers, Camp Pickett, Va., and Cpl. Jerome Swachil, 109th Infantry, Camp Livingston, La.

The mandelon player, painter, artist, sculptor, steel worker, a man of talents extraordinary, whose band was disorganized, is undisturbed. He continues his work, with less pay, and furnishes music too. In short, he is the answer to the first sergeant's prayer—a man to do the job.

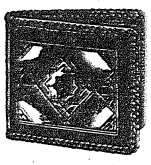
Raymond B. Riley, Jr., also in aerial repair, while Shirly Fling and Edna E. Ellis are also new. Edna is typist in Headquarters and Shirly in supply. The new messenger boy is Theo H. Jones.

* * *

Ruth Chapman is visiting her soldier-husband in Little Rock; Susie Weatherly is in Atlanta, and Carolyn Vaughn is in Anniston, so the Civilian Personnel Branch at Headquarters is sort-of depleted.

* * *

Marie J. Bragg of Post Ordnance is spending her vacation at home. Seems she doesn't want to get too far away from the post ordnance and Fort Benning.



* * *

"It is incompetent men alone who will treat a soldier in the ranks with contempt or cruelty"—William Duane, Adjutant General USA, in "A Handbook for Infantry," 1814.

World War II Entered Its Fifth Year Sept. 1

World War II entered its fifth year yesterday, a year which well may see the bonds of a fascist-Nazi-ridden Europe unsprung.

The anniversary was not marked by an inspiring victory pep talk by Der Fuehrer from a Munich beer hall. Nor did Hermann Goering promise "our cities will not be bombed." Herr Gobbels was quiet.

Those three once had a partner—among certain others. This fellow ran out a couple of months ago. Whether or not he was ever anything more than a liability has always been a moot question, but none the less Mussolini disappeared from the scene. He saw the handwriting on the wall.

They also had a timetable once. That timetable had promised great feats for the Third Reich. As a matter of fact it did work—for a while. Then something happened—Allied strength grew and was unleashed.

Now we do not hear anything of a Nazi-Fascist timetable. They are not going anywhere. Their only hope is of staying as long as they can hold on.

Hitler's panzers invaded Poland Sept. 1, 1939. Great Britain, France and Canada declared war on Germany two days later. But Poland was ravished quickly. The winter Hitler didn't make much war news.

The Allies had the Maginot Line. The Germans had the Siegfried Line. We had the "phony war" complete with loud-speaker systems rigged up on both sides, each espousing its own cause and appealing to the other to give up the hopeless conflict.

Spring came and with it the German invasion of Denmark and Norway "for their protection." Later the Nazis overran the Low Countries. France was soon swamped, and Memorial Day, 1940, in this country was a sad one.

The big headlines then were based on the Dunkerque evacuation. Things looked pretty grim for the Allies—the democracies. Mussolini plunged Italy into the war, but the first act of the Italian troops was to destroy the bridges connecting Italy and France.

The Axis then turned its attention to the rich Balkan states. Italy was given the job of wresting Greece from the Greeks. Mussolini had many a headache from that campaign. Meanwhile Germany drew the Yugoslavian invasion.

All this time the Luftwaffe was doing yeoman service for the Reich over England. But the stout Britons held out. They took what the Axis dealt, and the Royal Air Force distinguished itself.

On June 22, 1941, Germany invaded Russia without renouncing the "non-aggression" treaty of 1939 or declaring war. British and United States aid was at once promised Russia.

Hitler had a timetable for the Russian war, but the Russian people had other plans. He had a pretty hard winter that year and eyed North Africa and the Suez Canal. Fighting began in the desert.

Late that winter Japanese hornets stung a lazy giant out in the Pacific. Big news was made that fateful Dec. 7 at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Things went rather well for the Japrats until they expanded to a point where their supply lines were straining. Then the tide turned.

Meantime Germany and Italy declared war on the United States along with the Japanese declaration. That was just a formality. The Axis had been sinking American shipping all along. Now the cards were on the table.

Our country entered the war pretty cocksure. Reverses in the Pacific soon taught us that it was not a "talking" war. We stepped up production, began supplying our forces better and at the same time sending more Lend Lease equipment to the United Nations.

The past year has seen initial Axis gains steadily shrink. The Germans and Italians have been driven out of North Africa. Hitler still has a bear by the tail in Russia. Continental cities now under the Axis heel are suffering rains of bombs rather than English cities.

Now the German war lords have the nerve and bad memories to stamp bombing as "brutal and inhuman."

The Continent is straining at its chains. Norway, Denmark, the Low Countries, France, the Balkans—patiently waiting for the imminent invasion by United Nations forces which will set them free.

IT WILL COME. And that is why the German hierarchy is not making any promises this anniversary of the war. That is why the Nazis have dug in.

When they are out of the way and the Continent is liberated, then the United Nations will unloose its full fury in the Pacific and write the final chapter of World War II.

Yankees Should Know Brazil Much Better

The recent visit of General Eurico Dutra the Brazilian War Minister and the presence of a group of officers from that country who are undergoing training at Fort Benning together with the warm relations between the Brazilian Government and our own behoove Americans to know considerably more about that largest of Latin republics in this hemisphere. Of all the countries in South America Brazil has manifested the most consistent friendliness toward us and shown more respect for our culture while the others have looked to continental Europe for spiritual inspiration.

While there are, no doubt, various and ramified reasons for this happy peculiarity it seems reasonable to suppose that two major factors are responsible. One is that our national interests have complemented rather than conflicted with one another. Brazil has found us an excellent customer for her agricultural products and she is turn has assimilated great quantities of our industrial commodities.

A second consideration is that Brazil seems not to have subscribed to the creed that the United States seeks political hegemony over the Latin republics and has not viewed us with the suspicion with which the smaller and less self-confident states used to do.

While Brazil was colonized in the 16th century by the Portuguese the territory had little importance in its own right until the Emperor Napoleon invaded Portugal. As the French monarch's armies approached the gates of Lisbon the Queen Regnant and her son The Prince of Portugal with an enormous train of courtiers embarked in a vast fleet of vessels lying in the Tagus and sailed off to their South American dominions under the protection of an English squadron.

This government in exile opened up the ports of Brazil which had formerly excluded all but Portuguese shipping to world trade and the Braganzas and their court built Rio de Janeiro from grubby frontier seaport into one of the most beautiful capitals in the entire world.

When they putting down of Bonaparte enabled their return the Prince of Brazil (which style was then the prerogative of the heir to the Portuguest throne similar to that of Prince of Wales in England) was made regent. The populace however, desired independence and Dom Pedro, the Regent, proclaimed Brazil an independent empire in 1822. The first Emperor abdicated (1831) in favor of his son Dom Pedro II who reigned until 1889 in which year a bloodless revolution occurred and a republic was proclaimed which has obtained until the present day.

Out of a population of 88,680,000 in South America nearly one half are Brazilian nationals. While it is true that many of these speak only native Indian dialects the same condition prevails in all the other republics. None the less, although the number of Portuguese speaking people in South America is so formidable this factor is usually completely overlooked by our latter day Horace Greeleys, who point to South America as a land of opportunity for North Americans. These persons stress the study of Spanish exclusively as a means of fostering trade and cultural relations apparently forgetting in their preoccupation that Portuguese, a quite kindred tongue is spoken by a proportion of the population which is at once nearly a half of the total.

Housing Conditions In Columbus Are Bad

Although the government, the Army and other interested agencies have warned soldiers not to bring their wives and families to Columbus without previously securing quarters for them these admonitions have been utterly disregarded and local housing conditions are worsening. An official of the U. S. O. says it is not unusual for seven or more women to spend the night on sofas and chairs of the club and want ads for apartments are referred to in a news item as "pathetic."

The situation may be "pathetic" but it also denotes a stupidity of the advertisers and an insufferable inclination on the part of irresponsible people to cast their responsibilities into the lap of society.

Obviously a soldier and his family want to be together but by any sane standard it is absurd that every military man can move his establishment every time he transfers himself. In no other country in the world is such a circumstance tolerated and it never was before in this country.

During the last war when a man went away he recognized it as one of the hardships of the situation that he must forego home ties and such things as "guest houses" at military posts were completely inconceivable. Nowadays the families of enlisted men plant themselves in guest houses and, according to one of the hostesses, often decline to move at the expiration of their allotted time. One sees women at the cafeteria with tiny infants in their arms to the discomfort of other patrons and certainly with no good effects on the children.

Worst of all is the circumstance of the railways where these same adolescent mothers travel in day coaches overnight and, indeed for several days at a stretch. No matter how crowded the cars are these women naturally get a seat, nearly invariably at the expense of some service man.

One of the western railways has imposed restrictions on travel and in some sections service men are allowed to enter cars before the civilian public. However this is little help since when the old and infirm and women carrying children enter, the men in uniform feel morally obliged to relinquish their seats anyhow. Unpopular though such a measure might be it would certainly make for a more efficient prosecution of the war if government were to regulate civilian movements.

Parents have two jobs—not only to bring their children up the right way but to see they have the right world to grow up in.

No children are hopeless unless father and mother are.

USO Presents—

CHANGE IN USO DIRECTORS AND DRIVE TO PROCURE HOUSING FACILITIES

By PVT. SHELDON A. KEITEL

Program director at the Phenix City USO since last spring, Mrs. Kathleen Smith has taken over the same duties at the Salvation Army USO, 1323 Broadway, Columbus . . . Capt. Richard Bergren, director of the Phenix City USO, has been named director of the Salvation Army USOs in the Fort Benning area . . . He will retain his offices and directorate in Phenix City and in addition will assume charge of the Columbus unit . . . Replacing Mrs. Smith in Phenix City will be Mrs. James Scott . . . Mr. Scott has been appointed associate director of the Columbus club.

* * *

In the face of the acute housing situation in the Columbus-Fort Benning, the USO housing committee is launching a concerted drive for housing facilities for soldiers . . . Appeals will be issued to Columbus householders and landlords to register more rooms at reasonable rental rates . . . Protection will be provided landlords against undesirable tenants . . . The Travelers' Aid, component unit of the United Service Organizations, has offered billeting to soldiers in Columbus when it is available.

* * *

A music appreciation forum will be held every Monday at 8 p. m. (EWT) in the Army-Navy YMCA-USO . . . Starting last Monday, Pfc. J. L. DeLaney of Fort Benning led the discussions which include composers, performers, instruments and musical form . . .

This Khaki'd World

G. I. AMA GRIPE

The hurtingest guy in Benning these days is Corp. E. Barry Sturmer, wavy-haired Adonis of the Special Service Office, who just can't seem to learn from experience. Every time he has to take a group of G. I's out to Abe Straus's swell swimming pool (nope, we ain't hissing) he can't resist going swimming. And every time he goes swimming he gets a gorgeous case of red nose and running eyes. Come Monday a.m. and he looks like we imagine the denizens of Phenix City dives used to look without makeup. Not that we were able to find any dives in Phenix City, durn it, but it's just a figger of speech.

* * *

Sgt. Pont over in the Parachute School claims to be the shrimp-eating championship of Ft. Benning. Restarateurs in Atlanta lay in fresh stocks of the delectable sea-food when they hear he's headed up nawth.

* * *

Why doesn't somebody ever tell me these things? Sgt. Malone who so deftly handles the mike on the Reception Center Chorus broadcasts, gets bars—as a chaplain. And when I think of the language I've been using around him for these many months! Tssk tssk.

* * *

Guess we're just a failure as a colyumist. For past two weeks we've been begging and praying for you G. I.'s to send along some of the personality stuff from your regiments, companies, platoons, squads. But nothing has come in yet. Watsa matter—nothing interesting happening in this whole doggoned camp? Just jot down something—anything—and send in to the Public Relations Office. Or call us and give us the dope—Ft. Benning 3535.

* * *

Pvt. Marty is a bit worried these days. He's been transferred to the 515th and is afraid they're gonna make him wear his jump boots again—and he's figured that in the course of a year it takes 15,234 extra strokes to keep those things polished up over ordinary G. I. shoes.

* * *

We're still griped as —oh, as anything—over the practice of "cinching" food at mess tables lately. Haven't any of you guys got any good gripes? Pass 'em along.

* * *

Another thing we're griped about is the magnolias. When we came to the Sunny (and how) South we were told they swelled enough to chase a guy out of a room, if he happened to have a tree growing in a room. But the doggoned things never smelled a bit. Then somebody told us that the whatever-they-are that follow the blooms would turn a very beautiful pink and then they'd smell. But to date, no smell from the magnolias. Any of you Rebels want to make anything of it?

* * *

Story in "Bayonet" last week said that an officer had delivered some 80,000 lectures in a few months. Getting out pencil and paper, that would figure out to some hundreds of lectures every day. And everybody knows there is only 24 hours in a day and even us guys in the Army have to take time off to sleep now and then. A bit of investigation showed it was just a slip of the typewriter—he had lectured before 80,000 or more persons, is the way it should have gone.

* * *

Capt. Samuel E. Lowry is going around these days looking very, very closely at the shirt-fronts of all the boys in the Headquarters Detachment, Sec. 1, mess hall. Seems he had a watermelon on the ice for a week and finally decided he'd slice it up—only to discover that some villain had eaten the thing. He's looking for watermelon stains on the boys' shirts now.

Food—For Thought

Observed congregated near the Mess Hall, a group of 'Dogfaces' engaged in a very animated confab.

FIRST ROOKIE: I said the mess was a mess. Who says it's otherwise?

THE OLD SARGE: I'll admit that this mess hall isn't quite on the ball and that they have a lot to learn . . .

SECOND ROOKIE: You can say that again. Tell me this, tell me this, why do we get beef stew all the time? I thought the Army was supposed to get the choice meats.

THE OLD SARGE: Well don't let any one tell you otherwise, recruit. You've got a lot to learn, and I'm the one who can learn you. So here goes—The Army has the most experienced meat selectors in the country and they make certain that only the best prime beef is purchased.

THIRD ROOKIE: Then why do we always get beef stew — beef stew—all the time?

THE OLD SARGE: I'm coming to that. The Army grew so fast that it was impossible to have experienced cooks in charge of each mess hall. Right now, we have a man in our mess who is anything but experienced, if he was, he would know how to make the best use of the meat we receive. As it is, he just takes the easiest way out by cutting up the beef into small pieces and making beef stew. But in time, he'll learn that a quarter of beef has some tender meat that is good for dry roasting; some that is less tender but good for braise roasting and the remainder is not tender enough for roasting and should be used for beef stew.

FIRST ROOKIE: Looks to me like it's all in knowing how.

THE OLD SARGE: That's right. The success of a mess depends on the Mess Sergeant's knowledge of cuts and how to cut the different meat. There is a chart now being issued, illustrating the correct methods of cutting beef.

SECOND ROOKIE Sometimes the roast beef is dry and tasteless. Why is that, Sarge?

THE OLD SARGE: Once again, it's all in knowing how. Some cooks try to roast beef in too much of a hurry. They slam it in a real hot oven (over 400 degrees) which naturally dries and shrinks the meat. Then some of them do their roasting too soon before chow time and as a result it stands around and by the time we 'come and get it', it's all dried up and the main substance is lost. Boy, I had a good roast the other day. The oven was medium (about 280 degrees), it wasn't removed from the oven until fifteen minutes before chow time. It was just right, juicy, tender and not shrunk up a bit.

THIRD ROOKIE: What about all this cutting down on our portions? We don't get all the food we use to on our plates.

THE OLD SARGE: That's right, the portions have been cut down. However, you can always go back for seconds. There's a darn good reason for cutting down on the portions. In the good old days, it didn't matter how much was piled on your plate nor how much food you wasted. But, believe me, chicken, the situation is different these days. The shortage caused by the huge demands for food by troops overseas and peoples in foreign nations (both our Allies and the nations we conquer) not to mention our folks at home, particularly the little folks, the kids who some day will be doing their bit for their country just as we are. You see, you guys, conserving food is as important as conserving ammunition, in fact, food is ammunition. So, keep that in mind and do what you can to help conserve food.

Materialism, like sleeping sickness, is a disease that eats away your life while you are unaware of it.

Chaplain's Corner . .

TAKING THE JOY OUT OF LIFE

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

It doesn't take much. A fly in the soup spoils the whole dinner. Turkey and all the trimmings may follow, but the measly fly has done his work. A few mosquitoes ruin a perfect vacation. The weather may be fine, everything conducive for an ideal time, but the pesky mosquito did the mischief. A dab of mud on the floor throws some women into hysterics. A half baked pan of biscuits has laid the foundation for many a divorce case. A pig in a farmer's melon patch has started a feud which has lasted for generations, embroiling the whole countryside.

All this seems very silly for grown-ups. We agree. But in a larger sense there are other things that mar our peace of mind, just as silly. Envy, jealousy, hatred, revenge, are nothing more than measly flis, dabs of mud, a pig in a melon patch, yet think of their vicious tendencies.

Take revenge, what a thief and a robber of joy, an acid eating away and corroding all that is beautiful and pleasing in the human heart. Harbor revenge, it is you who suffers, not your enemy. You are the one who loses sleep and whose life is made wretched.

Incorporate into your life the philosophy of an early sage. "If you hate a man, let him live." That is, go your way and let him go his way. Old man time will fix things up to your satisfaction.

Don't let a pesky mosquito wreck your life. There are enough legitimate troubles, concentrate on them.

GENERAL GUAGMIRE PUZZLES SARGE AND WE CONFESS SARGE PUZZLES US

BY S. SGT. TOM McDONALD

In the course of the usual military affairs there comes a time in every officer's life when someone has to fill out an efficiency report on his standing as a warrior.

In the case of T. P. Swampwater, Colonel, Infantry, this significant task had often fallen upon the broad shoulders of General Auspur G. Quagmire, Brigadier General at large, a harsh, respectful old gentleman who never let duty interfere with pleasure.

So when he came beaming into the office this morning, I knew exactly what was up. The only time he ever "beamed" was when he could use the upper hand with T. P., a phenomenon which afforded him immeasurable detail. This gathering "personality lowdown" on his old crony afforded him no greater glory.

As on previous occasions, Auspur picked his calling time to correspond with an almost empty office and Colonel Swampwater's conspicuous absence was prone to move the ole boy to almost unheralded daring.

Having had a previous misunderstanding with the "higher brass", I did not make my presence known when he entered, but took refuge behind the filing cabinet instead, a vantage point which afforded me no end of first-hand observation with a maximum degree of concealment. Since Prvate Sawgrass had gone with the Colonel to call on the Corps of Engineers (about a requisition that was put in during the fall of 1932) I was all alone in the office with our distinguished visitor.

After rolling his eyes cautiously around the room, the ol' boy took out his handkerchief and vigorously rubbed the silver stars on his collar, at the same time marveling at their lustre.

After carefully completing this job he strolled over to Colonel Swampwater's wastebasket and emptied the contents on his desk. I recalled as he did so that the basket had not been emptied at all during the past twelve months, a fact that invoked me to marvel a bit at the contents.

There were, besides innumerable chewing gum wrappers, a ball of green twine, 4 hairpins, 13 discarded T.O.'s, a requisition that had been lost in April, and several Valentine cards from some of the Colonel's many admirers.

The Valentine cards immediately caught the general's eyes. Trembling eagerly at their envelopes, he carefully read each one clear through Then he sat down at Colonel Swampwater's desk and carefully copied the contents of each card on the efficiency report, grinning like a laughing baboon all during the operation.

Next he put everything back in the wastebasket, put the efficiency report in his hip pocket and tip-toed out of the office, at the same time leaving me to puzzle at the strange leer on his face.

Kay's Husband Says—

IT IS COMFORTING TO KNOW POST ENGINEER ALWAYS ON SPOT

Kay can go away on a vacation so long as we live at Fort Benning and I will not have one fear that I would normally have back in civilian life.

Should a faucet begin leaking, as they always seem to do, or if any one of the other many thousand and one things about a house go wrong, which always seem to be happening, Col. Bain, Mr. Ford and their men, I know, will come running. In fact, they would run faster if they knew my shortcomings better.

* * *

Now my sister, even as a child, was pretty handy with a saw and hammer, and I came to depend on the fact that women were good to have around a house when things went wrong. I don't hold with those who feel that a man should spend his time tinkering with burnt out lamp cords. To me that's a woman's work.

* * *

Anyway, Kay learned early that if anything were to be fixed without calling for outside aid, she'd have to do it. My last attempt was back about 1934. She had wanted to iron something at night, but something was wrong with the cord. I felt a surge of manly supremacy and attacked the thing with a knife, a screwdriver and more gusto apparently than skill.

* * *

I completed the task and beamed with righteous pride. I thought that Kay looked skeptical, but she had some faith in me—then—and she plugged it in. Just like that any every light in the four family apartment house went out. I could hear persons stumbling and cussing and I fear that I acted the coward. Me? I just went to bed.

Most newspapermen, if seems to me, have trouble with mechanical problems and math. I know while she's away, for example, she's probably worrying about the state of the family finances, but as for me, I just have faith that the bank will let me know when I run out of funds.

But to return to the subject, it really is pleasant to know that I can live peacefully while she's away with the knowledge that Fort Benning has a completely efficient post engineer.

TO THE ASHES OF HAMBURG

By Cpl. Marty Margolit, 22nd Co., 1st STR.

Hamburg lies in smould'ring ruins,
The hungry flames rise to the skies,
Fed by the vengeance of trodden people—
Fanned by a spirit that never dies.

They came last night and the night before,
An angry, shrieking, vengeful host,
With motors roaring and young hearts pulsing,
As they left the English coast.

Like a vast, unceasing stream of hornets
The bombs poured down in this vale of hell,
Consuming the earth in shattering thunder,
As Hamburg perished in the ominous spell.

A bomb for Dunkirk, a bomb for London,
A death-dealing bomb for the men of Dover,
A bomb for freedom, a bomb for hope,
A bomb for oppression the whole world over.

As the sins of a father visit his child,
So the crimes of a people shall visit their land,
And the vise that is freedom shall crush out their hearts,
Powered by the muscles of liberty's hand.

Ghost talk in Hamburg's ashes tonight,
Ghosts who saw Warsaw perish in fire,
Ghosts who died in the grave of Lidice,
Ghosts on whom Hitler vented his ire.

But they laugh, these phantoms from the dead,
For their day of atonement is near,
And the onyx hearts of the gory Huns,
Palpitate with chilling fear.

And the world awaits with an impatient prayer,
That day, preserved for immortal fame,
When the evil that is Nazidom
Shall die in freedom's burning flame.

TOMORROW

Whilst skies are black with the smoke of war,
The weak cast down their heads in dark despair,
Their faith in God and man exists no more,
And there is naught for which the cowards care.
Shaken with fear, they fail to understand
That the horrors of war will someday cease
And suddenly as they rose to smite the land
Where men had but one desire—peace.
These fools will die many, many times,
Ere peace will bring an end unto their sorrow,
But wise men will wait till clarion chimes
Announce the entrance of a new tomorrow.

Unending Vigilance Keynote Of Jungle Warfare—Col. McGowan

Japs Carry On Nuisance Raids After Organized Resistance Breaks

"From his very first contact with the enemy in the South Pacific until every Jap in his sector has been annihilated or captured, the American military leader must maintain a 24-hour-a-day alertness and uncleasing vigilance. For with their training and experience in jungle fighting, the Japs can continue to harrass and destroy long after their organized resistance has been broken."

That is the observation of Lt. Col. Francis J. McGowan, who recently arrived in the Third Student Training Regiment of the Infantry School, from service in the South Pacific and currently is on temporary duty with the Second Battalion. Colonel McGowan served throughout World War No. 1 as an enlisted man, having been turned down as an officer candidate because of his extreme youth but he is the possessor of three medals from that conflict, the Distinguished Service Cross, the Purple Heart and the Silver Star. His home is in Waltham, Mass., and he has been active in the Massachusetts National Guard since 1915.

The battalion of infantry which Colonel McGowan led to the beaches of a hotly contested island in the South Pacific was bombed nightly for four and a half months and was subjected to sporadic raids even after the Japs had abandoned their lines and fled to the hills. And for more than three of those four and a half months, while the Jap lines were still holding, the two forces, when not actually engaged in hand-to-hand struggle, were blasting at each other across a strip of jungle which usually was only 10 feet wide!

"Under such conditions", Colonel McGowan asserts, "the safety of every command depends upon the alertness of its officers 24 hours a day. Their minds must race at a mile-a-minute clip."

COL. McGOWAN

EXHAUSTING

Jungle fighting is "exhausting and slow moving," the Colonel declares. A large section of the American public was puzzled by recent press dispatches in which high ranking military men hailed as significant gains of 200 yards by American infantrymen against the Japs in New Guinea. In combat, Colonel McGowan contends, this is a tremendous jungle advance. "Against no enemy resistance whatever," he revealed, "it took us all of one day to move a force of battalion strength for a mile in Pacific jungle.

About one of the most effective equipment items a man can have in these conditions is a sheath knife, Colonel McGowan went on. By the time he left the islands, he said, most of the men in his command had such knives, many of them improvised affairs.

In combat, Colonel McGowan said, the "Japanese used many of the tricks with which the American public is now familiar through stories brought back by correspondents. When his force arrived, however, the Jap artifices were an old story and the Americans were prepared for them. The Japanese, for example, never shouted out orders in his name at night for the simple reason they never learned his name. The Americans, aware of the fact that a dwarf Jap at all times might be within earshot, called each other by nicknames and gave their orders in slang which was meaningless to the Nips. The enemy, however, continued to employ such cunning as to call out (in English) for the platoons to "fall back," etc. The ruse was never a success, however.

Coolnel McGowan said that during the course of the jungle fighting it was the practice of his battalion to work and slash through the Jap positions during the day-light hours. "At night," he added, "every man in the battalion became part of the defensive system."

Asked how his men withstood the heat, the colonel pointed out the battalion already had had 10 months of service in the tropics and were fairly inured to most of the climatic conditions encountered on a Pacific island. He admitted, however, that they got a great deal more moisture than they had looked for. "A rain of 20 minutes would completely fill a foxhole," he revealed. "The air was so damp, particularly at night, that if you hung out any clothing it would get as wet as if it had been thoroughly soaked and then wrung out." The hordes of red ants, lizards and snakes did not add to the comfort of the men, moreover, the colonel added.

BOMBER ATTACK

When Colonel McGowan's battalion landed at the island and was on its way ashore in the landing barges, it was attacked by a force of 32 Japanese bombing planes. The colonel added a note of comfort, however, with the disclosure that only one of those bombers got home, due to the accuracy of anti-aircraft fire from the shore and the transports.

In jungle fighting, the colonel said, he can not emphasize too strongly the neecssity of the leader's being thoroughly familiar with all the weapons of the Infantry. "By that I mean he should know how to shoot quickly and accurately," he explained. And dexterity with the bayonet is an absolute "must" in the jungle fighter's storehouse of combat training.

His battalion put the flame thrower to good use, the colonel disclosed. The grenade also was used often and at terrifying short ranges. Soldiers frequently headed grenades for a distance of only 15 feet to knock out a Jap position and they had to hit the ground with more force and speed than they ever did in training in order to escape being killed or wounded themselves.

Colonel McGowan said he can not stress too much the necessity for platoon leaders to condition themselves physically. All their resources will be required to battle the weather and fatigue. "We experienced considerable difficulty with water discipline," the colonel said. "Future leaders ought to train themselves rigidly to handle water supplies intelligently."

Anyone, moreover, who somehow becomes incapacitated in the jungle, is "simply out of luck," the colonel said, adding "the failure of only one man on a patrol can endanger the entire patrol."

CAT NAPS ONLY

After his battalion had been on the island a few weeks, his officers learned to discipline themselves to get sleep whenever possible. At various intervals during the battlefield's 24-hour day, they would catch an hour's sleep. "In this fashion each man could get from four to five hours' sleep out of every 24," said Colonel McGowan.

Jungle fighting produces numerous and varied leadership problems, the colonel points out. "It's just too bad if an officer can not keep abreast of the tactical questions either through fatigue or 'battle inertia'" he said. "Battle inertia" was defined by the Colonel as a kind of numbness to external conditions which can descend upon a person as the result of the din of battle and the death all about him.

Native guides used by the Americans on scouting expeditions were literally able to smell the Japs, the colonel went on. The natives were all cooperative with the Americans and anxious to get at the Japs themselves. There is not a single case of fifth column activity among the natives.

"They were all bent on revenge," said the colonel. "When the Japs came to the island, they allegedly raped the women and impressed the men into slavery. There were many particularly frightful cases of mutilation, too. One native who acted as a guide for us saw his wife and mother carried off by the Japs. To get his revenge, he not only worked for us but carried out a little individual assassination among the Japs himself. Once he boasted to our men that he made a practice of killing one Jap—a day and when they scoffed at him he retorted with the ears of the Japs he had personally slain."

It was admitted by the colonel that few Jap prisoners were taken by the Americans although conscientious efforts were made to take prisoners. "Otherwise," he explained, "we would have no way of knowing what they were doing behind their lines."

JAPS TALK FREELY

Oddly enough, captive Japs talked freely, the colonel said. Apparently, he said, none of the Jap soldiers had ever been instructed as to how to talk when taken prisoner because it was presumed, confidently they never would be taken prisoner and would commit suicide rather than surrender.

"They usually were sullen when they were brought before us but we allowed them to rest and then gave them food to cook for themselves. After a while they would talk. Most of them expected that we would torture them.

The island campaign of his battalion was of value not only because of the mission it accomplished but because of the battle lessons learned through the "trial and error" method, the colonel believes.

For one thing, the campaign proved that although the Japanese soldier had the edge on the American because of his long training in jungle warfare, American ingenuity and inventiveness eventually triumphed.

The campaign also taught lessons in the conservation of rations and emphasized the necessity of men using their rations only at the directions of their officers. On the island, because of the transportation difficulties, the men could have only two meals a day, one between 8 and 9 a. m. and the other between 2 and 3 p. m.

The Japs were successful in continuing to subsist after they had been beaten back into the hills and their supplies seized, the colonel revealed. They obtained their food by raiding the native villages they passed through their retreat.

How valuable the Japs considered the island seized by the Americans was demonstrated in the persistent efforts they made to resupply the forces and to restore them to fighting trip. Reinforcements and material were sent to the island in several transports but all the efforts failed.

Colonel McGowan related how one transport, badly damaged in a running sea battle, limped to shore where the Japs hoped to beach the craft and salvage the troops and supplies. As it neared the beach, however, it ran into vicious, and terribly accurate fire from shore artillery and attacks from American bombing and fighter planes. The decks soon were piled high with Japanese caught in the strafing attacks and the vessel was quickly in flame.

Other landing efforts were made, all terminating in failure. One craft got close enough to shore to turn loose barge-loads of Japanese soldiers. The landing party was destroyed almost to the last man before the barges were beached.

Brazil's War Chief Sees Post Training

General Dutra Visits Parachute, Infantry School on Inspection

When Maj. Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra, Brazilian Minister of War returns to his country, he will carry with him a host of new ideas concerning the organization and training of the Brazilian Army, many of them gleaned during the day and a half which he and his party spent at the Infantry and Parachute Schools last week.

Prior to coming to Fort Benning, Gen. Dutra visited Fort Knox and also the Tennessee maneuvers. Following his tour of the maneuvers, he said he had observed several things which he intends to apply to the Brazilian Army.

At the Infantry School, he saw five problems and demonstrations including the Village Attack, Combat Firing, Antitank firing with 37-mm and 57-mm guns, Antitank Platoons in Defense and Antiaircraft firing at Radio Controlled planes. He was impressed by the fire of the 37's and 57's particularly at moving targets.

He was also quite intrigued by the radio controlled miniature planes, particularly when he was given the controls of one of them.

A physical training demonstration which concluded his tour, provided an eye opener. In this demonstration, he saw hand-to-hand fighting with knives and bayonets, done in such a realistic fashion it was a marvel no one was hurt. His tour also carried him to the Communication and Automotive Schools.

At the Parachute School, he observed with keen interest, the work on the jump towers, watched parachutists bail out of planes during routine jumps and even donned a parachute pack. He suggested, however, that he was a bit too old to do any jumping.

Before leaving, Gen. Dutra said that Brazil is preparing to send an army to the fighting front. He added:

"The people of my country are not only willing but anxious to fight Germany and Italy. Various popular demonstrations in numerous cities of Brazil have shown this conclusively."

Asked as to the theater of war in which Brazil would prefer to fight, he said, "Only military considerations can decide that." This was interpreted to mean wherever the Brazilians could serve the cause of the United Nations. That, however does not include Japan because Brazil is not at war with the Japanese.

The whirlwind tour of the general and his party which included Maj. Gen. Leitao de Carvalho, Brazilian member of the Joint U. S.-American Defense Commission and Maj. Gen. J. G. Ord, U. S. member of that body took them to the Parachute School.

538th Infantry Qualifies Many As Vehicle Drivers

More than twenty-five per cent of the personnel of the 538th Armored Infantry battalion have qualified as Army heavy vehicle drivers, and every man has driven at least four hours during the first eight weeks of training, Lt. Walter J. McDermott, Battalion motor officer announces.

Every enlisted man in the battalion is being put through an intensive program of instruction and practical work in driving and motor maintenance, including driving heavy trucks over an "obstacle course" especially constructed to reproduce combat driving conditions in every particular.

"We have achieved this unique record in training drivers by breaking down instruction into separate stations, which makes it possible for our men to be learning about maintenance of their vehicle.

Drafting Ban On Soldier Rates

In support of federal rent regulations designed to stabilize prices and curb inflation, Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, Fort Benning commandant, is preparing an order to prohibit military personnel stationed at the post from paying more than legal maximum rents and from renting any accommodations without reading and signing the landlord's copy of the OPA registration form, or, in case of hotels and rooming houses, examining the posted rent in the room, it was announced Saturday.

In addition, soldiers will be instructed to pay no rent unless they receive a receipt from the landlord showing the amount paid and the term of occupancy.

To stabilize occupancy, General Fulton will incorporate in his order the requirement that any tenant of his command should notify the OPA Rent Control office in the Flowers building if the landlord attempts to evict them for any

Five Officers From Iceland Join ASTP Unit

Colonel Kenneth S. Whittemore, commanding officer of the Fifth Basic Training Regiment, the Infantry School, announced today that among the officers reporting for duty are five who have just returned from Iceland after 22 months service in that far northern outpost.

The officers are Major John W. MacDonald, Captain William G. Sullivan, First Lieutenants Harold E. Snyder, James H. Moore and Jean P. Tillman.

Have a "Coke" = Cead Mile Failte
(A HUNDRED THOUSAND WELCOMES)

...or how Americans make friends in Ireland

Cead Mile Failte—a hundred thousand welcomes—says the kindly Irishman when he meets a stranger. The American soldier says it another way. Have a "Coke", says he, and in three words he has said Greetings, pal. It's a phrase that works as well in Belfast as in Boston. Around the globe Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the high-sign between friendly-minded people.

"Coke" = Coca-Cola

OF BASEBALL'S BIGGEST GATE

MOST AMAZING sports story of this war or any other war is the tale of the War Bond Baseball game played in New York's famed Polo Grounds last Thursday in which our own Major Hank Gowdy took part as manager of a team of Army All-Stars who lost to a combined Yankee-Giant-Dodger club, 5-2, before the highest priced crowd in history—an $800,000,000 gate.

Never before and probably never again will so much money be socked into admission prices for a sports event—and all of it aimed directly at the Axis punks who don't even know what sports can mean to a nation at war. Calm New York is still talking about the game and so is everyone else who has stopped to realize what an event it really was.

Major Gowdy came back from the game over the week-end jubilant over the results, even though his team lost, and we gleaned most of the story from him and then added bits by reading clips from the New York papers. It really must have been tremendous when you consider that some of the close to 50,000 fans paid as much as a million dollars a sock for reserved seats—and it was worth every penny of it, considering that they'll eventually get back their money with interest and then some.

The show itself, according to Gowdy, was wonderful. Brodaway entertainers from Berlin to Cagney, and from Merman to Berle, were out in full force, with nostalgis, pre-war Jimmy Walker as master of ceremonies. But withal, it was a baseball show that actually brought tears to the eyes of the onlookers as members of the Hall of Fame paraded before their eyes.

There was Jack (Red) Murray, Roger Bresnahan, Frankie Frisch, Eddie Collins, Babe Ruth, Honus Wagner, Walter Johnson, Tris Speaker, George Sisler, Duffy Lewis, all walking out to their old positions as they were introduced by Jimmy Walker. It brought a gulp to the throat of many a fan, and a gulp to Hank Gowdy, too, because "Old Goldenrod" had played with EVERY one of those famed stars, some of them as long as 30 years ago.

In the actual ball-game, the TIS special service officer piloted the New Cumberland (Pa.) Army Base nine against the metropolitan stars. Lippy Leo Durocher managed the big leaguers when Mel Ott took sick and could not make the game. To augment the Cumberland nine, however, Gowdy had several former major leaguers now in service, including Hank Greenberg, and Birdie Tebbetts of the Tigers, Johnny Beazley of the Cards, Sid Hudson of the Senators, Danny Murtaugh and Tommy Hughes of the Phillies, Enos Slaughter of the Cards, and several others.

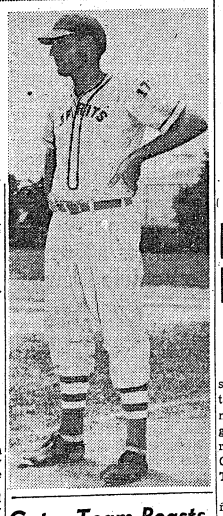
Faced with the problem of picking a starting line-up, Gowdy decided to give the kids from Cumberland a break before the big crowd, and with the exception of Greenberg at first base, he started the Cumberland team intact, then later in the game worked in the stars. Twice in the late innings, the Gowdy club had runners in scoring position but lacked the punch to put them over. The result didn't matter, though, because the fans had come to see a show and that's what they got with interest.

Gowdy had no notice of the game whatsover when he got a last-minute call from Lt. Col. Larry MacPhail, the former Brooklyn impressario. The TIS major, of course, accepted the chance to help out and a few hours after the call was on his way to New York by plane to do his part in attracting baseball's biggest gate.

Best sidelight of the big game was printed in the N. Y. Journal-American, so guess it can be repeated here without divulging any military secrets.

It's the story of six different generals, in various service commands, trying to locate Danny Murtaugh, of the Phillies, who had just been inducted a couple days before the game and misplaced temporarily.

Finally, the unsuspecting Murtaugh, still in civilian clothes and with a half dozen cigars in his breast pocket, stepped off a train in New York and into the arms of a general and a whole company of M.P.'s much to the little second-sacker's surprise.



"I thought for a minute they thought I was Eisenhower," said Danny afterwards.

But a pretty fair country writer in England once wrote "All's Well That Ends Well"—and all this ended well with more than 800 million bucks in Uncle Sams war-bond treasury, and Major Hank Gowdy returned to Benning safe and sound after one of the most exciting jaunts in his entire baseball career.

Spirits Open Series With TPS Tonight

SPIRIT STARS READY—Rarin' to go in their second-half play-off series against the Parachute School are these four tossers on the 176th nine. Above are three valuable stickmen in Shuffle Lohr, regular left fielder; Bill Richardson, fleet center fielder; and Walt Poland, hustling first baseman. All three were potent factors in the Spirit drive to the TIS title. On the right is Pat Cooper, the great right hand pitcher who hurled the club to its clincher win last Sunday over the 124th Gators. Cooper slammed a homer with two aboard to sew up his own game. (Signal Lab photos by Sgt. Mel Stock.)

LEFTY WISSMAN SLATED TO HURL FOR 176th AGAINST MIKE HOGAN

Lefty Wissman, former Rochester Red Wing hurler, will oppose an old International League rival, Mike Hogan of the Baltimore Orioles, on the mound tonight at Gowdy Field when the 176th Infantry Spirits open a five-game play-off series against the Parachute School at 7 o'clock.

Close to 6,000 fans are expected to watch the main post rivals open their battle with diamond supremacy of the post for the last half of the seaeson at stake. The victor in the five-game series will then oppose the Academic Regiment Profs, first-half post champs, for the fort's 1943 baseball crown.

7-GAME WIND-UP

The final series between the Profs and the Spirit-Chutist winner will be a seven-game affair and wind up the greatest diamond season in Benning history with a typical little world series atmosphere. That series will start three days after the second-half play-off is concluded.

After tonight's opener at Gowdy Field, the rival nines will rest tomorrow night to make room on the heavy sports schedule for the 176th-300th fights in Doughboy Stadium. The series will resume Saturday and continue on consecutive nights thereafter until one team has captured three triumphs.

ALL NIGHT TILTS

All games will start at 7 o'clock in Gowdy Field, which means there will definitely be games on Saturday and Sunday evenings, with the fourth and fifth games slated for Monday and Tuesday if necessary. The Parachute School will be the home team in tonight's opener, and after that, the clubs will alternate in the "home" dugout on the first-base side of the diamond.

The Spirits, who captured the Infantry School League crown on Sunday last with a 5-2 win over the second-place 124th Gators, will rate as a slight favorite in the series opener with Wissman on the mound. The clever southpaw has been a big factor in the 176th pennant drive with his steady mound work which included a pair of wins over the Academic Profs. In Hogan, however, Wissman will face a capable opponent who also starred in the International, winning 17 games for Baltimore two years ago.

HOGAN BUSY

However, Hogan will be handicapped in that he has been unable to pitch many games during the second-half race in the post loop. Faced with the loss of

Marble Tops Hardwick In Singles, 7-5, 6-2

Famed Players Team Up To Divide Two Sets With Men

Blonde Alice Marble, queen of American tennis, gained an impressive two-set victory over her long-time adversary, Mary Hardwick, in their exhibition match at the Officer's Club courts on Sunday night before an overflow throng of 1,500 spectators. The scores were 7-5, 6-2.

After a short intermission, the distinguished visitors then played a two-set match with two of Fort Benning's top players, Maj. Jack Butler and Lieut. Dan Canale. Instead of pairing for mixed doubles, a novel touch was added with the women playing the men.

MEN EVEN SCORE

Marble and Hardwick took the first set easily by a 6-3 score, but Butler and Canale rallied to win the wind-up set, 7-5. Butler is a former post champ and has long rated at the top in post court circles, while Canale, last year's Notre Dame captain, is current post champ and also holds the Columbus city title.

The Marble-Hardwick singles battle produced some splendid tennis that was reminiscent of their previous tilts at Forest Hills and all over the country on a nation-wide pro tour two years ago. Both started off in stride and it was not until the seventh game that the British lass became the first to break service when she took a lead at four games to three.

MARBLE FLASHES

Marble rallied, however, to break Mary's service, and even the score and then went on to win the set with some beautiful passing shots and clever backhand efforts. The second set was Marble all the way with Hardwick winning only the third and sixth games as she bowed graciously by the count of 6-2.

The girls opened strong in the doubles match with the men sweeping three games before the men finally won on Canale's service. But the women regained their stride and swept to an easy win on steady rallying.

The second set was different, however, and produced some of the most brilliant tennis of the evening as Butler and Canale really took off the wraps and proved themselves quite capable of battling the women both at the net and in back court. Butler, particularly, produced some neat backhand efforts and drop shots, which combined with Canale's power enabled the post players to come out on top in a hard-fought set and even the affair.

Spirit Golfers Edge Out 124th

Kupisch Nets 76 To Pace 176th

The 176th Infantry golf team edged out the 124th Infantry linksmen 16-11, last week at the Officer's Club course.

In winning, the Spirits gained revenge for an earlier defeat by the Gators and made necessary a grudge match to be played at a later date.

KUPSICH TOPS

Scoring honors of the day went to M. C. Kupsich of the 176th who shot a 76, followed by Major Terry B. Patterson of the Gators with a 78.

The number one match was unusually close as but one hole separated the teams. Kupsich and Lee gained the advantage early in the first nine and held tenaciously to the lead, halving the last nine holes. Bilowich nearly came through on the 18th, but his putt for an eagle 3 hung on the lip.

GATORS LOSE

The second match found Taylor and Arrigo taking 3 points from Lt. Col. Earle M. Shine and Bishop of the Gators.

The final match told a peculiar story as Jim Todd and Ralph Vigiano both won their individual matches for the 124th, but dropped the four ball, 2-1, to Gruber and Ambrosia.

Tennis Star Gets Personal Physician To Treat Cold

Not only did Alice Marble, famed tennis star, come to Fort Benning to appear before soldiers in an exhibition match, but she came face to face with her physician, now in the Army, who has treated her for several years.

Miss Marble on Monday had developed a slight cold from her tennis match on Sunday with Mary Hardwick. So the court queen went to the Station Hospital at Fort Benning for treatment.

The physician attending her turned out to be Major Milton Reder, of 470 Park avenue, New York City, who had been Miss Marble's personal physician while he practiced in civilian life.

Gator Team Boasts New Mystery Man A La Gargantua

A human mountain of muscle, all rolled into an invaluable football machine, has been discovered by Major "Red" Milton, 124th Gator grid coach.

The latest addition to the already powerful Gator squad, has played with and against the leading professional football teams in the country. He stand 6' 1" tall and weighs 240 pounds, and cavorts at a tackle position.

"Big Red" is withholding his identity, but issues a warning to the Spirits and Sabers that his new tackle is tremendous. He plans to utilize the player's experience in teaching a few new tricks to the rest of the Gator line.

Gator Ace Christie Earns Silver Bars

Lewis W. Christie was recently promoted to 1st Lt. according to an announcement by Col. John D. Hill, 124th Infantry regimental commander.

Lt. Christie, star hurler on the 124th Infantry baseball team, joined the regiment early in the spring of 1943 and whs assigned as assistant regimental personnel officer.

Christie was the property of Dallas in the Texas League and had four years pro-ball experience. Pitching for the 31st Division, he won 30 games and lost but 2 during the 1942 season.

Dodger 'Find' Is In 3rd STR

Boyd Bartley Came Straight to Majors

Boyd Bartley, sensational young shortstop who came right out of the University of Illinois into the major leagues is among the group of sport celebrities which recently moved into the Third Company of the Third Student Training Regiment.

Bartley began his spectacular rise in the baseball world playing four straight years with the Fighting Illini as shortstop, finishing his college career as team captain and leading hitter in the Big Ten. During his last season at Illinois, Bartley pasted the horsehide for a phenomenal average of .471.

On May 22 of this year, Leo Durocher signed Bartley to the Brooklyn Dodgers. A few days later he went into the starting lineup and played regular shortstop until June 20 when he was farmed out to the Montreal Royals of the International League on a 24-hour recall basis. The reason for the move, Bartley admitted, was that his hitting had not developed.

CALLED TO COLORS

Boyd was with the Royals until July 8 on which date he received his call to arms. By this time his hitting had recovered from the slump and his average was poking its nose over the .300 level when his orders arrived.

Bartley's rapid rise to major league caliber can be compared with that of another University of Illinois ball player, Lou Boudreau, now shortstop and manager of the Cleveland Indians. Wally Roetteger, Illini coach, has remarked on several occasions that Bartley is potentially a greater ball player in all departments than the Indian pilot.

GOOD CONDUCT MEDALS

Master Sergeant William R. Fowler and First Sergeants Frank Morrow, R. L. Satterfield and Thomas Smith were awarded Good Conduct medals at the recent awarding of decorations at the Prisoner of War Camp in the Harmony Church area at Fort Benning. They also received the American Defense ribbon.

All-Star Nines Will Be Announced Next Week in Bayonet

In next week's issue of the BAYONET, the 1943 all-star selections in three Fort Benning baseball leagues will be published. Blanks were distributed by the BAYONET sports editor yesterday to the coaches of all teams in the Infantry School League, the Fort Benning League, and the Service League.

Players will be chosen for all four infield and three outfield positions as well as one utility man for the inner cordon and one for the gardens. One catcher will be selected in each loop, but three pitchers will be named. There is also a space on the blank where the respective managers can fill in the name of the player in their league whom they considered most valuable to his team during the campaign.

Lefty Francis Gets Sweet Revenge By Downing Profs

BY SGT. FORREST KYLE

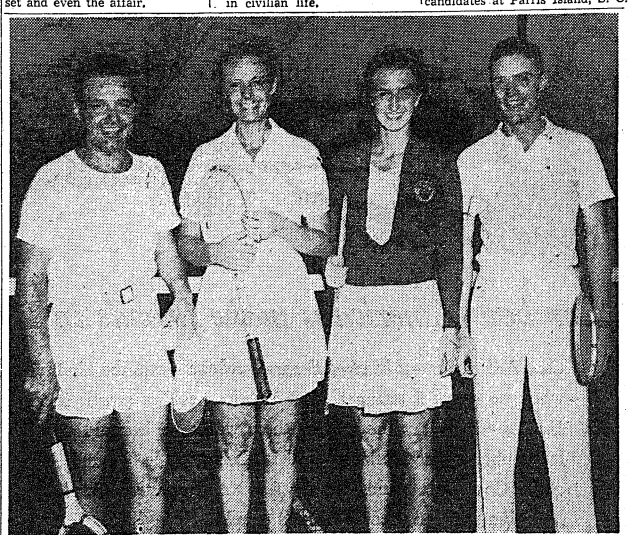
It took three games to do it, and it took 10 innings of the final tussle, but the 300th Sabers finally bested the Academic Profs last Friday night at Gowdy Field by a score of 7-6.

The Sabers came from 'way back to tie up the score after it appeared it just wasn't in the cards for the Sabers in general and Lefty Francis in particular to subdue the Profs this season.

5-RUN RALLY

But a startling five-run uprising in the eighth inning by the Sabers knotted the score and they shoved over the winning tally in the 10th.

One was out in the last of the 10th when Kunkel singled. Francis attempted to sacrifice but popped to the catcher. Palo drove a single into left and Kunkel held up at second. Val Van Horn, Saber catcher, then sliced a double down the right field line and Kunkel dashed home with the winning run.



PROFS LEAD

Previous to the late inning fireworks the Profs had built up a 6-1 lead. The only Saber run before the eighth was a long home run which Francis deposited over the right-center field fence in the second inning. Other than this smack, the 300th made no particular impression against the offerings of Bobo, starting Prof hurler.

The Profs nicked Francis for two runs in the ifrst, fourth and sixth. Then in the eighth, two hits and three miscues by the usually reliable Profs produced five runs for the Sabers and tied up the score.

BOBO RETIRES

Bobo wasn't around when the Sabers struck in the 10th. He had retired in favor of a pinch runner after opening the Profs' ninth with a single. Dickinson came in and, after retiring the Sabers in the ninth without damage, was frisked for the game-winning tally. It was an especially pleasant outcome for hard-working Lefty Francis, who, before receiving his commission, was a crack hurler for the Profs.

Post Grid Conference Is Formed

Six Games Slated For Stadium

Six top-flight gridiron attractions have been carded for Doughboy Stadium's cleat-marked turf this fall according to the announcement made this week that the 1943 Fort Benning Conference would consist of only three teams, but that the clubs would play each other twice during the campaign.

"BIG THREE"

The 'big three' of the gridiron this fall will be the 124th Infantry Gators, the 176th Infantry Spirits and the 300th Infantry Sabers. All three elevens have been working for more than two weeks now and prospects are that each will feild a strong, hard-hitting team. The Gators, 1942 post champs, expected to defend their laurels with a powerful array of both old and new talent.

Representatives of the three regiments met with post athletic officials last week to draw up plans for the coming campaign. The six conference games were scheduled with three in October, two in November and one in December. In between loop dates, all three clubs will meet strong outside opposition, both at the post and away.

124TH VS. 176TH

The official conference opener will bring together the Gators and the Spirits in a clash at Doughboy on Sunday afternoon, October 3rd. The following week, the long-awaited 124th-300th feature is carded also on a Sunday. The third battle of the first round-robin will take place on October 17th when the Sabers face the Spirits.

In the second round-robin, the Gators and Spirits will tackle one another again on November 14th, while November 21st is the date set for the return engagement between the 176th and the 300th. The big climax game of the year will bring together for the second time the Gators and the Sabers on Sunday, December 4th.

DANIEL FIELD TILT

The only other game definitely carded for the stadium grid at this writing is an October 31st meeting between the 124th Gators and the Daniel Field Eagles from Augusta, Georgia. Daniel Field played here last fall, bowing to the 29th Infantry Blue Devils in a thrilling game.

Last fall, the Fort Benning Conference was a six-team affair with three elevens drawn from TIS installations and three from the 10th Armored Division. The 7th Armored, however, is not expected to field any grid machines, which means that all three entrants will be Infantry School units from the school troops brigade.

HEAVIES BATTLE

The heavyweight bout may be the most exciting of the evening with Reeves, the 300th tutor, stepping into the ring against Swede Vanette of the Spirits. Reeves, from Syracuse, N. Y., was heavyweight champ at T. C. U. and also has done pro boxing in upstate New York. Vanette hails from South Bend, Ind., and is former state AAU champ in the Hoosier country.

Pairings in the other six bouts also promise some exciting bouts with almost every match rated as a toss-up. There is little advance information on the strength of either team, since the rivals have had the chance only for intra-regimental bouts since organizing their squads over a month ago.

STRONG CARD

In the first bout of the evening, the flyweight event, the 300th will enter Virgil Flowers against Bill Seitz, a one hundred and twelve pound veteran. Then will come the Franco-Aguirre head-liner, followed by the feather-weight tussle with Joe Garcia fighting for the Sabers against Godfrey Ely. Ely is a former Virginia Golden Gloves champ.

The lightweight affray pairs Dan Davis of the 300th against Vernon Thompson of the 176th. Ray Smith is the Saber entry in the welterweight class while Lloyd Miller will come in from the Spirit corner. Rudy Garcia is the 300th middleweight and is slated to mix blows with Hugh Miller of the Spirits. Miller was once runner-up in the Junior National AAU tourney. The light-heavyweight clash lists Boomer-ang Gilmore as the Saber entry against Tony Franco of the 176th squad.

THREE-ROUNDERS

All bouts will be three-rounders of two-minute-per-round duration. At least four exhibitions are planned to spice up the program with two of them slated between Saber and Spirit punchers while each unit also has an intra-unit bout scheduled.

Third man in the ring for the 176th-300th clambake will be Johnny Wilson, veteran referee who is a former post lightweight champ himself, and also coached the Benning team at one time.

176th Boxers Clash With 300th In Stadium Ring Friday Night

The ring battle of the year, pitting the 176th Infantry Spirits against the 300th Infantry Sabers, will take place in Doughboy Stadium tomorrow night at 8:45 p. m. with a full card of eight bouts listed in the team match. Four crack exhibition bouts are also on tap providing one of the tastiest boxing menus that post fans have had in many a moon.

The arch-rivals have had large squads of potential ring stars working out for over a month now in anticipation of tomorrow night's melee in the Doughboy ring. Roger Reeves, former Texas Christian and pro slugger, is coach of the Saber ring-men, while Lieut. Edward Hipp, once a Davidson College puncher, is preparing the Spirit sluggers.

TWO HEADLINERS

Two bouts stand out as headliners on the attractive card. They are the bantamweight and heavyweight clashes. In the bantam go, the 300th will send its famed Raul Franco into the ring against Freddy (Champ) Aguirre of the 176th. Both are former Golden Glovers with plenty of experience and both have captured previous Army titles outside of Fort Benning.

Franco is a West Coast puncher from sunny California and last year won the bantam crown at Camp Robinson, Arkansas. Aguirre is a Virginia-North Carolina Golden Gloves titleholder, and also captured the 29th Division crown in his weight over a year ago at Fort Meade, Maryland.

"Sabers" Adopted as Nickname For Athletic Teams of 300th Infantry

Sports writers on post papers need grind their teeth no longer when writing of 300th Infantry sports because the teams of the regiment have at long last a short, easily written name, the "Sabers." 300th Infantry teams have been the bane of sports writers' existence because up to now it has been impossible to describe them without using up practically every letter in the alphabet with names like the Three Hundredthmen, or the Three Zero, Zero Men!

CHOSEN FROM 20

The name was chosen from a list of twenty or more as the most appropriate and original for the 300th Infantry, a recently activated regiment.

At first glance, "Saber" may appear incongruous when applied to an Infanthy outfit. However a knowledge of the history of the name will help to dispel this impression. To the Army, all weapons with a long blade, hilt and handle are considered sabers. Foot soldiers used swords or sabers in many of the important battles of history.

HISTORY PROVES

Cntrary to the popular opinion, sabers are not the exclusive property of the cavalry. The bayonets used by the Infantrymen in Guadalcanal are direct descendents of the swords or sabers employed by the foot soldiers of old, the only difference is in the handle.

Lucky Seventh Slates Table Tennis Tourney

A gala table tennis tournament with the Seventh Armored Division's top paddlers participating will get under way shortly, according to Lt. Henry A. Wicker, Division Athletic Officer.

While plans are being made to run the tourney in four consecutive elimination nights beginning Sept. 21 at the 7th Armored Division Service Club, individual units are busy selecting and seeding their four allotted ping-pongers, two singles and a duoble team. Players surviving eliminations will take the floor the night of the 7th to scrap for the division paddle title.

According to arrangements made by Lt. Wicker and Stl. Bill Klunk, cash prizes totaling $45 will be an added incentive to the contestants. First place singles pays $15; second place pays $10, the third slot winner receives $5. Top doubles pair will split $80 for first place, with runners-up awarded $4.

The Service Club promised to him during the nights the tourney is in progress, four tables going at once. Matches will begin at 7:30 p. m. best two out of three games deciding the match.

Pvt. Wilmer Rhine, 31st Armored Regiment, will defend the division crown he donned at Camp Polk last fall and there will be many crack exponents of the fast table game bent on lifting the crown from Rhine's head. Cpl. Ben Mendelson, 434th F. A. Ban., is assisting in arranging the tourney.

Lt. Ed Berlinski, former football star at North Carolina State, has been reported by the War Department as a prisoner in Germany.

Gator Gridiron Progress Slow In Early Work

Coaches Woeful As 124th Team Fails To Show Sparkle

BY CORP. ED FOGG

The second week of Gator football practice found the squad with but little improvement over the first week. The coaches led by Major Red Milton, each had a tale of woe to spin, as the fundamentals and ground work progressed very slowly.

The Gator headcoach looks for dark days ahead until the team settles down to real hard work. He cut 25 men off the squad, bringing the total to 42 candidates now on the roster.

ENDS NOT TOUGH

Sam Sharp, coaching the ends having trouble getting the men to get rough and tough. He said, I could use four or five ends that were really willing to mix it up." From an observers viewpoint, Warren MacIntosh, Johnny Soltas and Frank Marion looked very good. Dan Melton popped up for practice Monday, he played with Chattanooga two years ago and shows plenty of promise and speed.

"Big Red" put the team through light scrimmages, working all the men and showing up spots that need plenty of work. The backs seem to be far back of the lineman, who have gotten in shape quickly. The guards, working with Bog Fitzgerald are going through their paces with enthusiasm. In dummy drill, Mike Aulenti, and Green Howard, had the pads grunting with their smashing body and shoulder blocks.

TACKLE TERRIFIC

Six tackles with Jack McKewen at the helm, set a terrific pace in contact work. It seemed to be Shine Berasi and Alabama Twe that were leading for tackle positions, but Davant, Bultrowicz, Dalton, and Green are really pushing those two.

Bill Corey's centers, Poulos and Keller, round out a strong line, that is bound to be powerful enough to open holes for the backs if they ever get going. Pass defense was a particular weak spot. The defensive backs were very slow reacting to the receivers' wrinkles and deception and allowed many more passes to be completed than the throwing arms of Todd, Cestary and Calos warranted.

CESTARY TOSSES

Roy Cestary in throwing, heaved the ball with terrific speed, but as yet the All-Conference Star hasn't got his sights aligned. The one man that had the pass defense down pat was lamar Davis. He is coaching the backs on this subject and sure displayed the right way to do it. George Ivosevich and Homer August grasped the technique. George, tall and rangy, also looked good in pass receiving, getting away from the backs with fine deception. Augie just outran the defense and caught many passes in the clear.

Spirits—

two regular catchers in mid-season, Hogan was forced to go behind the bat and has functioned as a backstop most of the last half. He will also catch several games in this series whenever he is not on the mound.

When Hogan pitches, versatile Freddy Hatfield, the regular shortstop, will don the mask and pads and be replaced in his infield slot by Mike Troch, a utility man. That is the line-up expected to take the field against the Spirits tonight. Saturday night, Pete Bardin, another crack right-hander, will hurl for the TPS nine with Hogan catching and Hatfield shortstopping.

LOSE HURLERS

TPS will be handicapped in the mound department, having lost two of its star pitchers in the past ten days. Both Bucketfoot Vaughn and Lefty Swarthout have been transferred and the mound duties will have to be handled principally by Hogan and Bardin.

It is in the mound department, also, that the Spirits hold their edge. After Wissman, Pat oCoper and Frank Schultz are expected starters. When Schultz pitches, Whitey Deliman will take over his outfield slot. Pete Crumpler, another righthander, will be in the bullpen for the 176th throughout the series, while Walt Poland and Dick Epstine, two southpaws, can also be used either as starters or firemen.

Since only one officer can be used in the inter-league playoff, Skeeter Reed, a captain in the Spirit regiment, will have to relinquish his second-base slot in order to permit Lieut. Sparky Sahara to remain behind the bat. Reed will be replaced by Bill Erb, who has been in the garden lately, while Shuffle Lohr will return to the outfield.

Elmer Niebler Aids in Prof Victories With His Terrific Hitting in Pinches

Fleet Outfielder Delivers Hits When Needed

BY PFC. J. C. WOODALL

Two on, two out and the Profs trailing by two runs in the last half of the ninth inning. The crowd seethes with excitement as Elmer Niebler, Prof star, strolls to the plate. Some of the Gowdy fans are making their way to the exits assuming the game is in the sack for the Eagles.

Prendergast, cagy Eagle pitcher and one of the best hurlers in the league, measures his opponent and lets go. The throw is a little wide and the ump bases "ball one." Prendergast takes another look at Elmer, makes his wind-up and flings. "Blam"! cracks Elmer's bat. Two men come dashing over to tie the score.

SAVES GAMES

The crowd filters back and sits down again. The tenth inning goes by with no score. Ditto the eleventh. In the twelfth, the Profs tally a marker and there's a game saved—thanks to Niebler.

Here's another—the Profs and the 300th Infantry are fighting a grudge battle at Gowdy Field. Lefty Francis, former Prof., is doing the hurling for the Infantrymen, and his team is leading by four runs. With the bases full, Johnny Russo triples to drive in three runs. Then this man Niebler calmly socks a homer off his old teammate. The Profs go on to win 8-7.

OLD STORY

It's an old story at Benning—that of Elmer Niebrel's bat winning another game for the Profs. Niebler is perhaps the most valuable player to his team in the TIS league, batting a magnificent .359, with 34 run-batted-ins, and 11 doubles to his credit. He's so versatile that he has played almost every position for the Profs. In short, Elmer has done everything except kiss the sponsors. His wife might object to that.

HERE'S INSIDE

Now, we'll give you the inside on Niebler. Here goes.

Act 1—The curtain goes up at Rockaway Beach, N. Y., where E. Niebler, Sr., is putting his 11-year son, Elmer F., through baseball fielding practice. "My father was fond of baseball—and his aspiration was to make me a good player," reminisces the sergeant.

Four years later, George Freund, manager of the Cedar Manor team team of the Queens Nassau league saw Elmer in a sandlot game. He immediately acquired Elmer and Cedar Manor marched to the championship with our outfield hero batting well over .300 and fielding sensationally.

Elmer then performed for Andrew Jackson High School, Queens, threee years in a row. "Though never winning the championship, we were close enough, ending in second place," the sergeant recalls.

Next, he went semi-pro where he "smoked" (playing red-hot ball) for the Frank Medico Pipe Co. team in the Queens Alliance League, New York City. "We were knocked out of the championship in the finals," Niebler says.

The Jersey City Giants (International League) the following year gave Elmer a Florida trip, taking him to Fort Pierce for spring training. The Giants then sent him to the Salisbure, N. C., team in the N. C. State league where he "hit .360 until breaking a bone in my foot." Niebler was a vital spark in the drive for the pennant, playing fine ball at two positions—second gase and outfield. "After breaking the bone in my foot, my batting average kept going down like Dabbs!" he twirped as Dabbs entered the office.

UNCLE CALLS

In '41, "I was packed to go to the Jersey City training camp but 'Greetings from the President' sent me to another camp—Fort McClellan, he came to the Academic Regiment.

Niebler sparkled on the Profs' championship team of last year, playing outfield and third base. He hit .322. One of Niebler's noteworthy events was knocking about a 420 ft. homer with the bases loaded in the eighth inning while playing for the Salisbury team. This win broke a tie for the lead and from there on, his team couldn't be headed in the pennant race. Another event occurred here the other day in a practice game with the 300th Infantry. Niebler smacked three homers in three trips to the plate. Still another event happened when the Prof. five visited Albany to play Turner Field and an adoring feminine fan audibly commented on "what lovely eyes" Niebler had.

AND THEN—

Baseball, strange to say, led our sergeant, bright eyes and all, into matrimony. Years ago, while in New York, he spied a beautiful girl in the stands with a girl-friend acquaintance. The girl-friend introduced him to Sophia Helko from Brooklyn. From there on, romance blossomed. The grand finale—they married this year.

Writer Sticks Neck Out; Picks All-Star Softball Team and Awaits 'Boos'

Varchminn Termed "Most Valuable" Player In Post Softball Circuit

BY PFC. JOHNSTON C. WOODALL

The condemned man ate a hearty breakfast. He looked at the front page of his favorite newspaper and saw that he was scheduled for a hanging.

Newspapermen were lolling around. Smoke was heavy in the air. Tension was mounting every minute as the clock steadily ticked away.

The condemned man was the least nervous of the group.

He stretched and stifled a yawn and then gave the following advice to his listeners, "Don't ever stick your neck out."

And to think your correspondent would stick his neck out?

Get your bayonets clean, sharpen your sabers, clean your guns. I have done it!

Here is the all-star Fort Benning softball team and I'm expecting a fine chorus of "Boos!"

MOST VALUABLE

The most valuable player in Fort Benning is Earl Varchminn, a pitcher who chunks no-hitters in practically every game. Earl is with the 1st Academic Company, Parachute School, and has the fastest ball no the post. He boasts a fine change of pace and is unerring in his accuracy. He's positively uncanny. As a hitter, he smacks the ball whole-heartedly.

SOLTAS PICKED

For the catching spot, we've relegated T. M. Soltas of the 124th Infantry Gators. The lad has played in the finals of two national tourneys in Detroit and knows his softball. He's tough, aggressive, a fine team man and hits a thundering .345 average in the Post league. Besides that he is a former teammate in football of famous "Fireball" Frankie Sinkwich and the companion end for All-American George Poschner while at Youngstown, Ohio. Give me Earl and Soltas for the battery and the outfielders and infielders could serve tea and ginger snaps while there two were working.

INFIELDERS

For the first place slot, Winnick of Lawson Field is the choice. Winny is a fielder par excellance and hits equally as well.

Utt of the 1st Academic Company, Parachute School, is the selectee for the keystone sack. "Utt" the ball goes when Utt takes a swing.

Tony Giaimo of the Academic Regiment is the natural choice for the shortstop position. He is the best fielding infielder that we've viewed all year making stops and putouts that look impossible. As a hitter, here's your illustration. In the Gator-Prof game, he clouted two homers to put the game in the bag.

"Cappy" Capella, the league home-run king, is the choice for the hot-sack position. Cappy takes a tremendous swing and his ten or eleven homers shows one that he connects—and how! Capella has a fine throwing arm and tosses a peg to first base like a bullet. He fields in A-1 style.

OUTFIELDERS

In the outfield, we had to convert a first baseman to the center field position. No team would be complete if Lawrence of the 1st Academic Company, Parachute School, was excluded. So the big boy with the dynamite-laden bat can cavort in that position.

Brunner of the 176th Infantry and Husiar of the same outfit are the selections for left field and right field. Both these Spiriters clout the ball with a murderous venom and are both "on the ball" defensively.

Last but not least of the all-stars is Redden of the Lawson Field Fliers. Redden is a natural shagger and can hit that rock.

Another condemned man has laid aside his trusty typewriter and is awaiting his fate.

Boston Tommy Defends G. I. Barbers' Artistry

Says Soldiers' Gripping Utterly Without Foundation

Yesterday I went and had a hair-do at the GI barbers down the line in my cuartel. He coiffed me in 8 minutes flat and I hereby take my Remington in hand to say a good word for this craft whose practitioners were panned by a Bayonet reader some time since.

Certainly one of the most outstanding differences between the male and female mentality is demonstrated by their sharply contrasting attitudes toward their coiffures.

Women, almost without exception have such an overweening passion for having their hair fooled about with that a major industry has grown up to gratify this weakness. Almost no inducement is required to get the girls into the "Shoppes" where these "beauticians" (God save the mark) operate other than that the owner be known as Yvette or Emil and have a certain number of terrifying looking articles of headgear which look like props for a Flash Gordon cartoon. The more futuristic looking gadgets the better and far from being terrified by this impediments the ladies seem to have a masochistic passion for these horrific instruments though the same girls would shudder and their flesh creep at the sight of the torture instruments of an 18th century prison ship of which these "aids to beauty" are but a modern version with chromium plate added. It is, in brief, nearly incredible what a girl will go through to increase her animal magnetism.

The hatred of the average son of Adam for the barber shop is quite as if not more intense than the love of his mother, wife or sister for its feminine equivalent. These establishments still, with pristine simplicity, refrain from adopting a more pretentious title like "tonsorial parlor" in the highly feasible supposition that it would scare off an already reluctant patronage.

Simplicity ends with the name, however, for in every other respects the American barber shop is one of the wonders of the modern world what with its massaging machines, silver spheres glistening mirrors and snowy porcelain gadgetry. Only the premises of a fashionable physician excel it in wonder evoking devices.

Until I was about 5 years old I used to be sent to my mother's hairdresser for my "dutch clip." There were no "beauticians" in those days. Miss Vatter was a pretty and straightforward young German woman and her establishment had a delicious odor of orris root, tar soap and Coryllopsis of Japan. She thought I was "cute" (as indeed I was) and made a great deal of me. Hence it was with vociferous reluctance that I was dragged at last to a barber shop for the first time and given what was called circa 1909 for some reason beyond me a "pony hair cut."

Psychiatrists tell us that many of our most fundamental quips, quirks, idiosyncracies, frustrations, inhibitions and fixations are derived not pre-natally but rather during our pre-adolescent years. It is not difficult for me to believe this and I'm sure my detestation of barbers dates from my initial visit.

RESENTED TALK

Not that the barber was intentionally unkind but he discussed me with the loungers about the shop, commenting on my appearance and resemblance to someone or other's kid. While the observations were not derogatory I resented being talked about like an inanimate object. None the less I attended the barbers at stipulated intervals thereafter all my whinings and complaints to the contrary notwithstanding.

As I grew older and evolved from the cute to the repulsive stage of development in the time-worn manner of human beings the barbers gave me shorter shrift and were wont to swear under their breaths and get back at me for squirming by sadistically pulling the short hairs on my neck with the clippers. Not of a forgiving nature I held this against them and, while they could never usurp the place of private enemy No. 1 in my mental file, which was the prerogative of the dentist, they ran a very close second.

This emotional attitude continued until I became a young man at which time, although achieving no affection for the barber person I came to recognize his essential place in the social scheme. It was during those lush years after the last war that the barber shop attained its full bloom and maturity. From a place where one merely went for a shave or haircut or to dish the neighborhood 'dirt these establishments became sybaritical menages where you had to put up a struggle to escape with anything so simple as a haircut and a shave. In one lush New York establishment I figured out it was mathematically and psychologically impossible to escape even after only having had a haircut for less than a dollar after the requisite tips had been distributed.

The only surviving institution of which I know in this country where you not only are not urged to any further indulgences than a haircut but actually cannot get even a shave is a place in Boston which belongs under a glass case. None of your revolving chairs of porcelain and leather which can be raised or depressed at the touch of a foot lever. These barber chairs are Victorian fauteuils in the French taste with elongated snake legs and unholstered with plus. A mahogany sink and cabinet with marble top and great ornate mirror above is the "period" none of the furnishings post-dates the 1860 and the personnel of the shop belong to the same epoch. Not only is the place distinguished by an absence of electric clippers but no clippers at all are used: only a scissors. The place describes itself as "——Barbers and Wigmakers and, as I said before, all that occurs there is the cutting of hair and making of wigs. What's more a haircut only cost 35 cents.

I always supposed that 30 minutes was the minimum length of time require to cut a male head of hair whole the tonier joints took about 45 what with those little nuances and refinments practiced by the master craftsmen. Toward the end of a haircut these maitres will give a little snip to the starboard, retreat and gaze anxiously at the result, they will then advance, clip a few hairs to leward, back off again and stare worriedly at the effect; head cocked to one side. Only after this process has gone on for five minutes or so will they extract a small looking glass which is held behind the patrons head with a verve reminiscent of a ballerina performing the Mirror Dance in the ballet of "Faust."

The only known case on unwritten record where anyone has had the moral courage to criticise the practitioner's art is an occasion when, in an emergency, I hastily entered a strange barber shop on 23rd Street. After spending 45 minutes in the chair I was shown the back of my head. (As I remarked: it's all done with mirrors.) The stern view look like one of those monsters you see on sixteenth century maps which used to frighten mariners and long delayed the discovery of America.

I began to bellow like the Devil in a gale of wind. The barber excused himself on the score that my head was peculiarly shaped hence the unconventional effect. I protested that it retained its same shape for over a third of a century yet thus far I'd had no overtures from Hollywood to pinch hit for Bela Lugosi. However, there was nothing to be done and only after scuttling out of the premises in high dudgeon did I discover from a spectator outside that it was a "Barber College" and I'd served as a guinea pig for some aspiring tyro.

FIRST G.I. CUT

After being conditioned for so many years to the excessive solicitudes and refinements of civilian barbers it was with considerable trepidation that I visited one of the G.I. variety. It was in my infancy as a Fighting Tiger when I first arrived at Sand Hill. All of us tigers were restricted to our company area and when our company commander said we must all have haircuts by the following Saturday we had no recourse but to attend the G.I. barber.

When my turn came I got into the chair with a maximum of reluctance. I hardly had time to gasp "Don't clip the sides" when I was out of the chair with the job finished and only 35 cents poorer in consequence. I didn't dare look at myself in the mirror in the presence of the other G.I. clients but flew back to the barracks to view the ruins.

To my amazement and gratification my crowning glory looked just as chic and soigne as it ever did on my emergence from the most Babylonian establishments of New York, London or Paris. Why I had the Seven Sutherland Sisters backed into a corner.

Thus has it been ever since and it was with no vexation that I recently observed a notice posted on our company bulletin board to the effect that the G.I. barbers would be permitted henceforward to charge 40 cents per shearing.

On my last visit to the G.I. barber I questioned the artist as to how they could be so proficient and do the job in such a brief space of time.

He contends that it is all a big conspiracy on the part of civilian barbers to make the customers think there is something esoteric and difficult about hair cutting. Claims that any barber worth his salt can do it in ten minutes and there's no reason in the world to take any longer. God speed you worthy G.I. barbers. May you live to be a century in years and have innumerable handsome and clever children.

The leading hitter for the army team at Santa Ana, Cal., is not Joe DiMaggio but Merle Hapes, a former halfback with the New York football Giants.

LT. JOHNSON, ANC

Nurse Rounds Out 25 Years Service

From across the Pacific to Fort Benning came Lt. Alice J. Johnson of the Army Nurse Corps in January, 1942, to round out 25 years of nursing Uncle Sam's soldiers. Thursday, August 26, she celebrated her silver anniversary in the Corps.

This Army nurse who has lost few days from duty because of illness was on her way to France in World War I, just exactly one month after her enlistment in the Nurse Corps and since that time has seen duty in the Philippines, Hawaii, San Francisco, Indianapolis, San Antonio, Texas, St. Louis, and a tour at the Military Academy at West Point before taking up her duties at Fort Benning's Station Hospital.

ASTP Students Take Wac's For River Boat Ride

The 1st battalion of the Sixth Training Regiment, ASTP of The Infantry School played hosts to a group of WAC's this week on The Steamer George W. Miller, on the Chattahoochee river. The occasion of this moonlight dance on the river was in celebration of the first cadre to complete a training period and the beginning of a new cycle of work for the men. Technical Sergeant Chester Maliszewski, battalion sergeant major, was in charge, assisted by the company first sergeants.

This was the first river excursion for a number of the men who found it amusing to watch the large paddles in the stern of the craft churn up the muddy waters of the Chattahoochee.

Housing—

They are quick to add, however, that in most cases, some kind-hearted Columbus person moves over to make room for the transients.

One mother and her small daughter who live in a two-room garage apartment offered to vacate their bedroom and move into the kitchen in order to rent their bedroom to a soldier and his wife and another mother whose husband is in Africa, said that by moving her small family around, she could make one room available because she knew, she said, how important it was for the army wives to be with their husbands.

Other Columbus people have slept on pallets on the floor and rented their own beds.

Mothers with babies find it especially difficult to find homes in this crowded city and have to wait doubly long in the office the USO-Ta while their babies, innocent victims of war, get hot and fussy and the exhausted mothers reach the point of collapse.

Each night the USO-Ta exhausts its file of available rooms and each day, must wait for the telephone calls from landlords who have available space in their homes.

Next week an effort to secure space will be made through a series of radio addresses designed to give information to Columbusites about the urgent need for their help and protection of their own interests.

Army Seeks Ski Troops

Soldiers with an aptitude for outdoor life and experience in mountains are needed for the Army's 10th Division now being formed at the Mountain Training Center at Camp Hale, Colorado, according to advices reaching Fort Benning today from headquarters of the Army Ground Forces.

Aimed at training the soldier to fight in the mountains and in the snow, the program will give a thorough knowledge of skiing and snowshoeing, and teach men to live in the snow for extended periods of time and how to be self-sustaining while out in the open.

Soldiers who feel they can qualify for this type assignment may write to the National Ski Patrol System, 415 Lexington Avenue, New York, N. Y., which will forward a questionnaire to be filled out and returned. A board of experts will examine the information submitted on the form and decide whether the applicant is considered qualified for the mountain troops.

Among the types of previous experience desired are mountaineering, forestry, rock-climbing, hunting, guide work and skiing. However, a genuine interest in outdoor life, as evidenced by activities engaged in, is considered a good starting qualification.

Civilians who have mountain and outdoor experience, or who are skiiers, also are eligible to write to the National Ski Patrol System and fill out the questionnaire. If approved, such civilians can volunteer with the assurance they will be assigned to the Mountain Training Center.

Red Cross Helps Soldier Cut Red Tape In Emergency

"Arrived here half hour before Mother died. Thanks for speedy furlough and money", (signed) Tandak" is the story of how the Army and Red Cross work together cutting red tape and helping men with their emergencies.

At 9:30 Saturday night, Pfc. William L. Tandak, 1st Parachute Training Regiment, received a wire from home, East Chicago, Ind. His mother was dying. He should come home at once.

Contacting Fort Benning Red Cross representatives, Tandak explained his situation. Immediately wires began to buzz.

First his organization commander, Captain R. H. Budd, was contacted about furlough arrangements. Then a train reservation was obtained. Tandak was short of funds. A loan took care of that, and he was on his way the same night.

Arriving in East Chicago the next day, he rushed to his mother's bedside. The race had been close, but for speed and coordination shown between the Army and the Red Cross he would have been too late.

Victory Ideas By Civilians To Reap Cash

War-Winning Brain Child Worth $5 To $250 Prize

Ideas and suggestions of civilian employees are worth $5 to $250, provided they are constructive and will speed winning of the war, it was revealed today by Captain Reymond A. Parkins, chief of Army Service Force civilians at Fort Benning.

The plan, which was adopted by the War Department last June, is now being put into operation at Fort Benning with distribution of eight Victory Ides boxes to different offices on the post. The boxes will be located, one each, at Post headquarters, station hospital, finance office, post engineer office, quartermaster office, ordnance service command shops, ordnance shop, and rail transportation office.

Captain Parkins added the awards will be paid for suggestions pertaining to administration of any War Department civilian activity, which result in economy and improvement in operation of the activity. Each suggestion will be reviewed by a local suggestion board composed of Lt. John J. A. Lyons, assistant personnel officer and chairman; W. A. Ford, post engineer office, and Mary Harris, Post quartermaster office.

Explaining exactly what constitutes a suggestion, Captain Parkins added that it must outline methods by which improvement is to be effected. It can refer to a process, a procedure, a machine or a piece of equipment.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

In general a cash award may be granted when an idea results in one of the following:

(1) Conservation of manpower, material, time, or space.
(2) Elimination of unnecessary procedures or records, or improvement of existing methods.
(3) Improvement of conditions affecting safety and health.
(4) Increased productivity.
(5) Elimination of excess, or improvement of existing tooling or equipment.
(6) Improvement of quality.
(7) Invention of a mechanical device, which if adopted proves to be of value.
(8) Conservation of critical material and utilization of material previously scrapped.

However, suggestions relating directly to their work from personnel engaged in engineering, experimental or other types of technical, research or professional work whose work includes the development of new ideas are not eligible.

Suggestions may be written on any sheet of paper, and should include full outline of the plan, with sketch if necessary. These may be placed in victory boxes or mailed directly to the local chairman, Lt. Lyons, post headquarters.

There is no limit to the number of ideas which may be submitted, and the suggestor will be notified in all cases as to the committee's decision. In cases of duplication, the first received will receive the prizes.

Ideas of exceptional merit will be forwarded to the War Department Board, where they will be eligible for further recognition.

Engineer Recruiting Office To Interview Men Friday

Captain Wesley A. Williams of Atlanta, recruiting officer for the South Atlantic division of the Army Corps of Engineers, will interview applicants for voluntary induction or enlistment in the corps of engineers Friday in the post office building in Columbus, Captain James A. Baird, area engineer at Fort Benning, announced today.

Enlisted men in the army who were specialists in these lines in civilian life may also be transferred to the Corps of Engineers, and will be interviewed by Captain Williams provided such enlisted men have permission of their commanding officers, Captain Baird stated.

The interviews will be held all during the day Friday, and will be in oom 222 of the post office building, Captain Baird stated. The primary reason for Captain Williams visit is to facilitate interviews with prospective applicants who may find difficulty in getting to the area engineers office at Fort Benning, he said.

Civilians who have had experience in the trades of construction industry fall into two categories for joining the corps. Those from 18 to 37 years of age are eligible for voluntary induction, while those between the ages of 38 and 50 will go into the corps strictly as volunteers. Many ratings will be available to men coming into the engineers and qualified applicants also are eligible for officer candidate school, Captain Baird said.

TIS ON AIR

The Infantry School at Fort Benning, was on the airways during the weekly Army Hour Sunday, this time in a script on "The Training of a Leader" dealing with Officer Candidates. Program Production Chief of the Bureau of Public Relations, Garry Breckner, wrote and directed the broadcast from Holliday Hill and Hook Range. At the conclusion of the program, officers who have been graduated from Office Candidate School and are now serving averseas, broadcast from their bases.

Colonel Spann Has Dual Job

Holding down a dual role as executirve officer for the ASTP Basic Training Center as well as the Student Training Brigade of the Infantry School is Colonel William (Bill) Spann.

Colonel Spann, a native of South Carolina, entered the Army in 1916 from The Citadel. He served in France with the 1st Division during World War I for approximately two and one-half years and saw considerable action in that theater of war. Following the war he came to Fort Benning as an instructor in the Infantry School, later he attended the company officers course and upon his graduation was assigned to duty with the North Dakota National Guard where he served from 1924 to 1929. He again returned to Fort Benning this time as a student in the officers advance course.

A tour of duty with the Headquarters, 1st Corps Area followed, then assignments with the 35th Infantry in Hawaii, the 17th Infantry at Fort Levenworth, Kan., the 16th Infantry at Fort Devens, Mass., and Camp Blanding, Fla. Prior to his assignment to the Infantry School in March of this year he commanded the 123rd Infantry at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Weekly Salvage Day Planned

Beginning Thursday, September 9, and every Thursday thereafter for the duration, a post-wide salvage day will be observed by the supply division in an effort to facilitate the collection of scrap metals, paper, tin cans and other items from homes on the Fort Benning reservation.

The plans were announced this week by Col. Stephen B. Massey, director of supply, who stated that the details are now being completed by Capt. Herman E. Klein, post salvage officer. A directive explaining the entire new proceedure will be issued the early part of next week.

Under the new set-up, collections will be made every Thursday under the supervision of the police and prison officer. Containers with the various items to be salvaged will be placed in front of the homes and be picked up sometime during the day on a regularly scheduled basis.

By concentrating the scrap collections on one day of the week, considerable savings in gas and wear on tires of Army vehicles will be effected, and it is expected that the system will make it much easier for residents of the post to save the various items when they can expect regular pick-ups.

Colonel Massey also stated that all military organizations will be urged to clean house on scraps once a week and deliver the items to the salvage yard probably also on Thursdays.

The supply chief also reiterated that the demand for paper, tin cans and all scrap materials continued unabated.

Colombia Officer Takes TIS Course

A contrasting color stands out from the sea of khaki and olive drab of the officers making up the new advanced class in the 3rd Company of the 1st Student Training Regiment. It's the distinctive sea-green uniform of Captain Julio M. Jaramillo, who came all the way from Colombia, South America, to study advanced infantry tactics under the internationally-known faculty of The Infantry School.

From 1929 to 1933, Captain Jaramillo, a native of the capital city of Bogota, attended the Escuela Militar de Cadetes, the "West Point" of Colombia. Graduating as a 2nd lieutenant, he chose Infantry as his field and has served in this arm ever since. Promoted to 1st lieutenant in 1936, he attained his present rank in 1940.

A confirmed equestrian since his cadet days, Captain Jaramillo occasionally finds time at Fort Benning to ride horseback as a diversion from the intensive training he is undergoing in the finer points of the foot soldier's art. He's also fond of rifle marksmanship and expects to indulge in that sport aplenty before he leaves the School.

Most everything we do these days requires a bit or a great deal of walking, as the case may be. Walking to the commissary, walking to church on Sundays, window shopping along Broadway, calling on acquaintances, and even walking up and down stairs at home makes it essential that we all wear shoes which will endure and at the same time be comfortable and becoming. The Florsheim, I. Miller, College Bred, Vitality, Rice O'Neil and Madamoiselle footwear displayed at the MILLER-TAYLOR SHOE COMPANY, attract everyone, first of all with the smart look of perfect craftsmanship and high-quality materials. Walking shoes, dress shoes, sport shoes and evening slippers in this display will suit to a "T" those of us who will be satisfied only with the fall shoes which will afford us the best value on our No. 18 shoe coupon. Soft suedes and fine leathers in shades of black or brown will complement the fall costumes of us all when we shop in this ever-popular shoe store.

I've written many times of the fine quality dresses, suits and coats at KAYSER-LILIENTHAL, INC., so presently I want you to find out about some smart lingerie to wear underneath these outfits. Miss Swank slips are renowned for their appropriate slogan, "Straight plus bias"::: thus they never twist or slide up. In this shop are satin or crepe slips in white, black, cameo, and off-white shades. An especially popular slip in this display is crepe, trimmed with dainty Swiss eyelet embroidery. Brief panties of Pechglo material with a touch of lace trimming make a nice accompaniment for any of the slips I've mentioned. Pechglo is especially wearable as it is knitted and will not develop runs. For the days ahead several Miss Swank slips will assure you a smooth and attractive foundation for your new Fall costumes.

Chatter concerning pots and pans may not be intriguing to all of you, but I've no doubt many of you will welcome a bit of news concerning a new shipment of new kitchen necessities displayed in the basement of SEARS ROEBUCK COMPANY. These saucepans in various sizes are triple coated enamelware in white with a brilliant red trimming. The bottoms have been so treated they'll heat up in a jiffy and yet not burn, that is, unless you forget to give the contents a stir occasionally. Those of you who have been fortunate and ambitious enough to own a Victory Garden will find the large enamelware kettles a definite aid when canning the results of your hours of hoeing and watering. These kettles have a six quart capacity and well-fitting covers to match. A complete set of small, medium and large sized saucepans, plus a kettle, will be a worthwhile but not expensive addition to your household.

Gators' Private King Master Tap Dancer

Soldier Learned Art From Gene Kelly Of 'Me And My Gal' Cast

"The bells are ringing for me and my gal" has been religiously reverberating from the lips of Pvt. Paul J. King of Co. L., 124th Infantry, since Judy Garland and Gene (Harry) Kelly's latest musical moved into Fort Benning and surrounding towns. A product of the theater, Paul takes great pride in singing the praises of his former dancing and singing maestro, Gene Kelly for his portrayal of "Harry" in the picture, "For Me And My Gal."

Pvt. King, the first professional dancer to tap his way into Gatorland, started wriggling his educated toes at the age of 12, under the guidance of a local dancing teacher. The boy proved so talented that two months later, he made his first stage appearance. In the years that followed, Paul attended Jack Steiffer's Dancing School and Gene Kelly's Studio, both in Johnstown, Pa., for advanced dancing and acrobatic training and also appeared on various radio programs, theaters and night clubs. Some of the more popular presentations in his repertoire were: a miniature step act, chain and table act and a roller skate dance with a twirl-a-rope twist.

Born in Windber, Pa., King acquired his scholastic training in his home town which still remembers the ill-famed Johnstown flood of seven miles away. Besides his dancing activities, Paul worked for the Kroger Grocery Co., in Detroit as a clerk, after his high school days ended. Prior to his enlistment in the army on March 17, 1943, Pvt. King advanced himself to manager of one of the chain's stores.

Comparatively a newcomer to the Army as well as the Gator regiment, "Pvt. Buch King" picked up his Army vocabulary during a 13 week basic training stretch at Camp Joseph T. Robinson in Little Rock, Ark. The Gator hoofer joined the outfit in July of this year and was assigned to Co. L.

When the war is over, Paul intends to return to Johnstown, Pa., where a certain blue-eyed, blonde, whose curves are of the Christy Mathewson variety, is anxiously awaiting to hear him sing, "The preacher's waiting for me and my Gal".

Veteran of 32 Years, Sgt. Cox Retires to Texas

After 32 years in the Army, M. Sgt. Charley Cox of Co. D., Academic Regiment, is heading for Texas, home and retirement.

Originally retired in August, 1941, he has served two extra years because of the war.

Sgt. Cox, who has held every rank in the enlisted grades since he signed up in the artillery in 1911, served overseas with the 54th C. A. during World War I. In 1926 he switched to a tank regiment, and in 1932, came to The Infantry School, where he was assigned to the automotive section.

Born in Chiesman, Tex., Cox is single, and plans to go to San Antonio, where his family lives.

Allied Ball Welcomes 7th

An Allied Ball to welcome the "Lucky 7th" Armored Division to Fort Benning and to dedicate formally a new outdoor dance pavilion ... was held Wednesday night at Service club No. 2 in the Sand Hill Area. The ball was staged through the combined efforts of the Service Club and the Division Special Service Office.

Mrs. Winfred Baker, hostess, and Miss Emily Halloran were in charge of arrangements for the ball which was open to the entire division.

Maj. Alexander Veazey, assistant special service officer of the post dedicated the new pavilion to the "Lucky 7th" and Brig. Gen. John B. Murphy, commanding officer of the Combat Command "A" voiced the response.

Theme of the program was carried out by a pageant of Allied Nations. Military maids from Columbus each were escorted by two enlisted men, bearing the colors of a friendly nation. As the band struck up a tune the group marched from opposite sides to the center of the platform split, marched down the sides again and returned to form a V of flags at stage center.

Miss Edwina Woods was in charge of the Military Maids in the absence of Mrs. Hugh Roberts.

After the pageant the Allied flags were massed at one end of the platform while company and regimental guidons were flown from poles surrounding the platform, lending a gay cosmopolitan air to the affair.

Pfc. Butterbaugh Fatally Injured

Private First Class William O. Butterbaugh, Jr., 29, a member of Company F, 48th Armored Infantry Regiment, of the Seventh Armored Division, was fatally injured Monday night during a mishap at a temporary prisoner of war encampment near Americus, Ga.

Butterbaugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Butterbaugh, Sr., of Amsbury, Pa., is reported to have been fatally injured when, during a storm, a machine gun was being moved and fired accidentally.

The soldier was serving as a guard at the temporary prisoner of war encampment where some troops of the Seventh Armored Division are guarding the prisoners while they engage in agricultural work.

Butterbaugh was inducted into the Army on March 11, 1942. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Colonial Dames At Dedication Of Day-Room

Organization Presents New Furnishings To Sixth Regiment

Col. Robert Sharp, commanding officer, and his staff were hosts to members of the Columbus chapter of the Colonial Dames of America at the dedication of a Cadre Day room for the Sixth Training regiment last week.

Part of the ASTP basic training center of the Infantry school, the Sixth regiment is located in the "old CCC area" in the Harmony Church section of Fort Benning. The day room, smartly appointed and handsomely furnished, was a gift by the Columbus Colonial Dames chapter, and their visit to the regimental area was in the nature of a tour of inspection for the ladies.

They were guests of the regimental commander at supper, viewed the changing of the guard and then repaired to the day room for the brief, informal ceremonies of dedication. Lt. Col. M. C. Higgins, executive officer of the regiment, was chairman. Expressions of gratitude were voiced by Colonel Sharp and Sgt. Walter R. Hearn of the cadree. Mrs. Robert M. Lewis, president of the local Colonial Dames chapter, replied for the organization.

Officers of Colonel Sharp's staff in attendance were Majors Walter H. Pierce, Troy N. Hutto and Edward C. Donaldson. Captains George M. Miller, Perry N. Riley, Edgar Barrett, John S. Ledgerwood and Robert Welch were also in attendance. Miss Annie Young, former Red Cross official in Columbus attended as the coordinator in the establishment of the day room. Captain Barrett and 2nd Lt. Siinto S. Wessman of the Sixth regiment's 1st battalion who were instrumental in putting the monetary gift of the Colonial Dames into day room equipment were also present.

The ladies expressed great satisfaction with the interior decoratio nof the lounge. A large console radio, innumerable easy chairs, card tables, many games, an extensive magazine rack full of the best in current reading material, a ping pong table set, and a number of bridge and table lamps will provide the men of the Sixth with many happy hours of restful relaxation from the cares of their duties.

Cpl. Washburn Assumes Work Of Lt. Malone

Cpl. William Washburn, Jr., of Fort Benning's Reception Center, has been assigned to the special service office, according to an announcement by Lt. Col. Ulric N. James, commanding officer of the Center.

Corporal Washburn takes over the duties formerly performed by Lieut. Van J. Malone, recently commissioned in the chaplain's corps, who lhas left for a four weeks' course in the Chapiain's School at Harvard.

A native of Memphis, Tenn., Cpl. Washburn was educated in the public schools of Memphis and holds the B. S. degree in sociology from the LeMoyne College, of Memphis.

A talented musician, Cpl. Washburn worked his way through college serving as assistant instructor at LeMoyne and until his induction into the Army was acting director of the Pilgrims of Jordan, radio group of station W. S. M. Nashville.

Employed by the State Department of Education at Nashville, Cpl. Washburn worked in the free text book division for three and one-half years.

Just recently completing a course in song leadership under the direction of Prof. Arthur Hall of Yale, the corporal is a member of the Reception Center Chorus, and will prepare the radio scripts for all local broadcasts as well as announcing the programs over the air in his new assignment.

Cpl. Jimmy Reese, former big league infielder, has been given a discharge from the army as overage. Cpl. Reese was stationed at Camp Campbell, Ky.

124th Infantry Expands Scope of Its Activities

For a considerable period time the Gator regiment has been eating, sleeping, living and demonstrating the soundness, technique and practicability of the famed Infantry school way, better known as the "School Solution." Until recently the regiment's paramount purpose of existence was in helping to produce the finest infantry leaders.

As demonstrative troops it performed numerous problems and demonstrations directed and managed by the Infantry school. Working under the supervision of the world's best instructors, all specialists in their field, it has built for the regiment an enviable record synonymous with out regimental motto, "Efficiency and Accomplishment.

The response and reaction from Army Brass Hats all over the far flung theaters of battle, praising highly the aggressiveness, courage, spirit and capabilities of many O. C. graduates, has been more than gratifying to the Gator men who feel that they have played no small part in the success of the Benning alumnae.

In recent months, the 124th infantry under the command of Col. John D. Hill, regimental commander, has raised the curtain on another important stage of activities; tht is, unit training, calisthenics and road work, squad tactics, complete and minute to the smallest detail and weeks upon weeks of field work.

Each battalion, besides pulling regular TIS problems, has been participating in bivouacs and maneuvers, the likes of which haven't been seen since the Carolinas.

The past weekend brought several more changes effecting the entire personnel within the regiment. The 1st battalion and Cannon company returned to Gatorland from Upper King's Pond after spending a solid month in the field, while the 2nd battalion and Anti-Tank company, vacated the 124th area for the "Teent City" of Clear Creek, thus commencing their third week of field work. The 3rd battalion, completing a two-week bivouac at Clear Creek, treked over to Upper King's Pond and pitched pup tents.

The last two week's stay at King's Pond and vicinity, climaxed months of preparatory training for all First battalion personnel. Working under the regimental plan which was incepted under the direct supervision and approval of the Infantry school technique of training, the men were tested for individual and squad tactics. Each squad was sent out into a simulated battle area and demonstrated the "School Way" of carrying out the mission to a successful conclusion. During these squad tests, the squad leader was entirely on his own.

When the missions were over, critiques were held, all squad leaders were graded and checked on the control over the unit, soundness of plan, technique of issuing orders, use of cover and concealment, speed in making decisions, aggressiveness and initiative, teamwork, use of fire and movement and insurance of security. While the mortar and machine gun units were carefully checked on speed in occupying positions, accuracy and speed of getting fire data, technique of adtroops, correct target designation justing fire, checking for safety of and fire orders.

When all the figures were submitted to Major Richard D. Sutton, regimental operations officer, it was discovered that Company C totaled the highest score in the battalion, and that Private Orlando Stiles, of Company D, had won individual honors, as acting corporal of the 4th squad heavy weapons platoon.

Colonel Reed Commands Unit In 3d Regiment

Lt. Col. John R. Reed, formerly with the Academic Department of The Infantry School, has assumed command of the First Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment, succeeding Col. Edward P. Passailaigue, who now commands the Second Student Training Regiment.

A reserve officer, Colonel Reed was commissioned upon completion of his ROTC training at Pennsylvania State College. He entered upon active duty with the rank of captain in March, 1941, coming to Fort Benning where he was appointed a map reading instructor in The Infantry School's Academic Department.

Later he was named secretary of the General Section of the school and after serving six months in this capacity, he took the advanced course and was assigned to the Logistics Committee. He was instructing in supply when he was transferred to this regiment. His promotion to major came Feb. 1, 1942, and he was advanced to lieutenant colonel May 29 last.

No stranger to Fort Benning before entering upon active duty Colonel Reed was here early in 1940 to take the National Guard Reserve Officers course—a three-month period of study and work in the field.

HELEN ALYCE OWENS wasn't content with being an active Red Cross worker and a state democratic committeewoman at home in New Jersey. So she enlisted in the WAC, asked to become a cook, and eventually landed in Fort Benning as T-4 Owens, first cook of the WAC detachment in the Harmony Church area. (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo).

Italian Prisoners Cheer Armistice

Cheers of "Viva L Roosevelt" and "Viva la America" sprang from the throats of Italian prisoners of war at the internment camp at Fort Benning Wednesday afternoon as the men were told that peace had come to Italy.

Several hundred new prisoners arrived yesterday fresh from the battlefields of Sicily, and they along with those already at the camp received the news with cheers. Excitedly many of them asked if they could now see their relatives in New York, Brooklyn and Chicago.

Those prisoners of war who had been out working on some 20 farms during the day had heard the news. Some of the new arrivals had heard it, too, but they did not believe.

It was only when Col. George M. Chescheir, commanding officer of the camp, told the "padre," Lt. Roderick McEachen, to speak to them in their native tongue that they actually believed what they had mistrusted before.

There were cheers, too, when Chaplain McEachen granted a request that had been made by the men after they learned of the armistice. He told them, in Italian, that the colonel would allow them to hold a Te Deum—Thanksgiving—mass on Sunday.

The news of the armistice coincided with the arrival of the new contingent of war prisoners. These men were making their first real stop since being taken prisoner in Sicily. Haggard, unshaven and ragged and with obviously crushed spirit, nevertheless their eyes shone as they were convinced that the war was over for Italy.

"Next it will be Germany and Japan and then we can go home," one man shouted. Another made an unprintable comment about Mussolini.

Colonel Chescheir escorted public relations officers through the internment camp so that they might see what was taking place.

The bedraggled new arrivals were being taken through the processing machinery where they shed their old clothes and are issued new clean apparel, are inspected by doctors and generally registered at the camp.

Many of the men had rags wound around their feet in place of socks to protect their feet from clumsy, worn out shoes. One man, not knowing that Uncle Sam was going to issue him new socks, began winding the rags about his feet after he had been examined by the medicos.

Everything is issued to the war prisoners, down to a toothbrush and a razor, and those who arrived Wednesday will have appointments today with barbers, Colonel Chescheir said.

Maybe it was the news they received and maybe it was the new clean clothes, the bath and shave. Perhaps it was a combination of both, but the contrast between the men waiting their turn and those who had been newly outfitted was unbelievable unless it were seen.

The one group looked wretched, the men barely dragging their feet. Those who had gone through the process had a spring in their stride, their new white undershirts practically glistened against their tanned bodies, and they whistled, sang and saluted every American they saw, officer and enlisted man alike.

But their being cleaned up was not all. From the showers they went to mess halls, and there on the tables were meat, potatoes, macaroni and peas, fruit salad and a cold chocolate milk drink. In one mess hall 200 or more men jumped to their feet at rigid attention as Colonel Chescheir entered, but when he motioned them to resume their eating they lost no time in indicating that they had not been used to the kind of food they were being served here.

Capt. Delany to Observe 30th Army Anniversary

Officer Joined Up At Age of 16; Told 'Em He Was 21

Discharged from the railroad because of his extreme youth, and discouraged because he couldn't carry on the family tradition of railroading, a 16 year old boy traveled to Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and joined the Army where he could pass as 21. But on Sunday, Sept. 12, the boy will celebrate his 30th anniversary in the Army at Fort Benning. He is Captain B. F. Delany, Ordnance, assigned to Motor Transport Branch at the post.

At a time of life when most boys are reading thrilling stories of Texas rangers, and seeing "Hop-A-Long Cassidy" ride again, Capt. Delany was "toting" a six-shooter and patrolling the Mexican border between Texas and Mexico from Del Rio to Brownsville, a long way to ride a horse. Being a member of the 3rd and later the 6th Cavalry, the then Pvt. Delany with all the agility of his sixteen years took his place in the saddle with seasoned riders of Uncle Sam's best.

Going later to France where he served for 23 months, he returned to the States and served tours of duty at Fort Sam Houston and Fort Brown, Texas; Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., Fort Myer, Va.; and Fort Riley, Kans. He was assigned to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and was commissioned a captain in the Ordnance Branch in July, 1942.

Coming to Benning from the Fourth Service Command in Atlanta he took up his duties with the Motor Transport Branch where he is executive officer for the ordnance automotive group.

In reviewing his military career, Capt. Delany has several records of which he is justly proud. One is that he has never had to make up time for being AWOL or misconduct. The only illness he has experienced was pneumonia.

UP FROM RANKS

After serving in the Army for 11 years, Capt. Delany took the necessary steps to correct his age on his service records, deducting five years from the 21 he enlisted at to arrive at his real age. Now he is celebrating 30 years of active service in all the grades from private, bugler, master sergeant to captain.

For a number of years he served as sergeant instructor of cavalry in the North Carolina and Tennessee National Guards. He is an expert shot with both rifle and pistol, and has graduated twice from the Army Cavalry School at Fort Riley.

An expert ball player he has played Army baseball and basketball for more than 20 years.

Capt. and Mrs. Delany and their two daughters live in Columbus but he has one brother Harry H. Delany who resides in his old home town 1909—11th Street, Portsmouth, Ohio.

INSIGNA SALE BAN

The sale of military insignia by private firms or individuals will be banned effective October 18, according to a War Department ruling which cancels previous authorizations to civilian enterprises to sell such devices.

All metal, cloth and plastic insignia will be banned from the stocks of civilian stores.

All firms and individuals previously authorized by the War Department to sell insignia have been advised to discontinue the sale of all military insignia on October 10.

3 Powerful Clubs Represent Benning

All-American George Poschner to Play For 176th Infantry Gridmen

Fort Benning's biggest football campaign in history is just around the corner as baseball prepares to evacuate the sports page and make way for the grand old grid game.

With a bumper crop of last fall's collegiate stars already on hand for the daily workouts, the 124th Gators, 176th Spirits and 300th Sabers are rapidly developing into grid machines that will spell trouble for every outside opponent on their schedule.

Latest rah-rah star to report is George Poschner, Georgia's All-American end of last fall, who gained eternal fame for his spectacular work on the receiving end of Fireball Frankie Sinkwich's passes throughout the regular season and in the Rose Bowl victory of the Bulldogs last January.

POSCHNER TO 176TH

Poschner, just graduated from O. C. school twelve days ago, has been assigned to the 17th Infantry and reported Tuesday morning for his first workout in Spirit togs. Along with Poschner, the Spirits also gained another valuable lineman from the 1942 Bulldog eleven in the person of J. P. Miller, second-string guard on the Rose Bowl eleven.

The arrival of Poschner and Miller brought to four the number of ex-Bulldogs who will cavort in Doughboy Stadium this fall. Lamar (Racehorse) Davis and Jim Todd, fleet Georgia backs, already are vital cogs in the 1943 plans of the 124th Gators, last fall's post champions. Two of Alabama's Orange Bowl heroes, Sam Eharp and Jack McKewen, are also wearing Gator colors this season.

MATERIAL GALORE

To list the famed collegiate gridders here at the post would be nigh impossible right now, since all three major elevens have plenty, with the possibility of still more being added before the first referee's whistle is tooted.

The Gators, Spirits and Sabers will all operate as members of the Fort Benning Conference and will play each other twice in Doughboy Stadium. In addition, all three clubs are rounding out their schedule against outside collegiate and service opposition.

GATORS VS. NAVY

The 124th eleven will meet a pair of powerful Navy elevens on foreign gridirons, travelling to Jacksonville on September 25, and to Memphis on November 21 for games with Naval Air Technical Training Center clubs in those cities. In addition, the Gators will meet Daniel Field and Newberry College's Indians.

Big game of the Saber campaign will be its October 16th clash with Georgia Tech in Atlanta. The Yellow Jackets, heralded as one of the best in the country this fall, will provide a stern test for the 300th gridmen, but Saber fans are confident their club can battle the Techmen on even terms.

The Sabers will also meet Daniel Field and have one or two other collegiate deals brewing. The 176th, too, will oppose the Daniel Field eleven and has just about clinched a game with the University of Miami. Complete schedules of all three elevens should be available in the very near future.

Meanwhile, all three clubs are being put through their daily paces by all-star coaching staffs who are aiming at creating three of the most powerful grid machines in the country this fall.

September War Bond Cash Sale At $100,000 Mark

Rally, Street Dance Netted $4,800; Private Buys $5,000 Bond

Cash war bond purchases for September already exceed $100,000 at Fort Benning and the post figure for the month including pay reservations, may reach $500,000, it was disclosed today by Major George Fink, War Bond officer while discussing prospects of the 3rd War Loan Drive.

In addition to the war bond rally and street dance last week which netted $4,800 in bond sales, several individuals, officers and enlisted men have made purchases in the four-figure column. Heading this group is Private Otis G. Renner of the quartermaster office, with a $5,000 bond; others include Major Frederick A. Smith-Peterson, quartermaster office, $1,000; and Lieut. Ibbie Jones, WAC, Detachment, Station Complement, Section I, $1,000.

However, the bulk of the amount will be purchased by military organizations and post activities, it is expected. One of these, the First Student Training Regiment of the Infantry School, is already a leading investor with the purchase of $39,025 in bond securities.

Major Fink added that pay reservations contribute approximately $200,000 monthly toward this national program, and cash purchases at the local post office amount to between $60,000 and $100,000. With these figures in mind it is very likely that Fort Benning will reach the $500,000 mark for September which would be a post record for a 30-day period.

September 11 Last Day to Apply For Ration Book 3

Don't forget to sign and mail in that application for ration book 3, all you military personnel who are on separate rations.

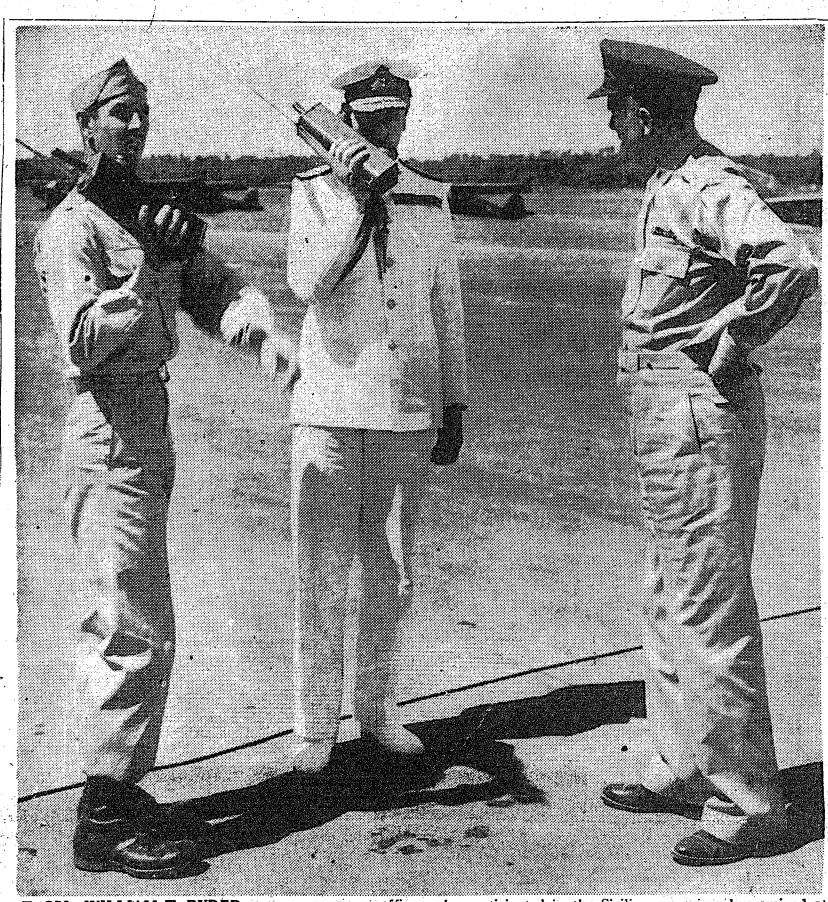
That little warning was issued today by Sgt. Louis Lipp, secretary of the Ft. Benning branch of the Muscogee rationing board, as he pointed out that a special dispensation was granted extending the mailing deadline to Sept. 11 only. Previously it had been set for Sept. 1.

Those failing to get their applications in before the deadline will have to go to Columbus to make an application before the rationing board officials there, he warned.

Brown coupons for meats will go into effect on Sept. 12, he said, while others in the book will go into effect later.

WAC Lt. Gaines Sent To Adjutant General's School

1st Lt. Gail Gaines, commanding officer of the WAC Detachment, Station Complement, has been ordered to Washington to attend Adjutant General's School and departs for the capital today.



Lt. Gaines, who holds the distinction of having been the first WAC officer at Benning to be sworn into the WAC after its change to a component of the Army of the United States, came to Benning with the 43rd WAAC Post Headquarters company last March as its executive officer. She assumed command of the company in June. The 43rd Company was later redesignated as a detachment.

Lt. Gaines is a graduate of OCS, Fort Des Moines, Ia. She served at Daytona Beach, Fla., and was a member of the original cadre of the 43rd company and assisted in its activation.

Before her departure, Lt. Gaines said she hoped her new assignment would serve as a stepping stone to the foreign duty she desires.

THE HOUR OF CHARM is aptly named when you consider that lovely Vivian Blair sings with the Phil Spitalny orchestra, which this Sunday night will dedicate its hymn to the men of the 300th Infantry here at Benning. The Saber regiment was accorded this honor, incidentally, because Vivian is the wife of Lt. Frank G. King, an officer in the 300th regiment. The program will be heard over NBC at 10 o'clock Benning time.

LT. COL. WILLIAM T. RYDER, veteran paratroop officer who participated in the Sicilian campaign, has arrived at Ft. Benning to assume command of the 542nd Parachute Infantry, is shown above (left) at Benning with Lord Louis Montbatten, famed Commando leader recently appointed Allied Asiatic chief, and General George C. Marshall, American chief of staff, mentioned as the United Nations' choice to lead our forces in the impending invasion of western Europe, while the latter were visiting the post last year. (U. S. Signal Corps Photo.)

Veteran Officer Says Yankee Jumpers As Good As They Think

The American paratroopers are just as good in combat as they think they are in every day life and are just as cocky.

That is the way Lt. Col. William T. Ryder who jumped and fought in the Sicilian paratrooper invasion sums up the actions of the men he went into combat with.

Back to Fort Benning as the commanding officer of the newly activated 542nd Parachute Infantry, Col. Ryder has nothing but praise for the parachutists and the equipment they used.

"We used to wonder what these men with their cocky swagger, their polished boots and wings would do under fire," the colonel said. "We know now that they're just as good as they think they are. Some of the men jumped and fought even though they were wounded on their way. Some of them found they had jumped in the wrong place, but they showed plenty of initiative and they went up and down the roads raising plenty of hell with the Italians."

BEHAVE LIKE VETS

"The men behaved like veterans even though it was their first time under fire. That proved to us that their training program had been thoroughly sound."

Col. Ryder served a dual purpose in the Sicilian operation as a liaison officer between the troop carrier wing and the parachute units and also as a parachute observer attached to a regiment which had trained at Fort Benning.

After eight days in Sicily by which time their positions had been consolidated he returned to Africa where he wrote his report which he brought back to this country. Here he made a few lectures and then reported to his assignment at Benning. A week ago Thursday night he appeared on the "We the People" network radio program.

Col. Ryder's name is synonomous with parachuting and in his brief seven years since leaving West Point he has written a brilliant chapter in the history of modern warfare.

PIONEER JUMPER

As a young first lieutenant with the 29th Infantry he was one of a few pioneers who volunteered to begin the United States Army Parachute troops, and it was he who commanded, instructed and trained the first platoon of jumpers. Later he helped organize and design the program for the 501st Parachute Battalion, the first unit of this size. More battalions came along and finally the Parachute School was formed from the provisional organization in May, 1942, with Col. Ryder as assistant commandant. Up until this time he had been charged with the task of directing the entire training program:

During the early days of parachuting Col. Ryder personally developed many of the training devices which are still used in the school, one of them bearing his name—"Ryder's Death Ride," a misnomer since it is credited with saving many future possible injuries.

Last summer he said goodbye to friends and bobbed up in England where he went as an observer for this country's airborne command. He went through their parachute training program and qualified by British standards, then returned to this country and airborne command headquarters in Fort Bragg.

From there it was to North Africa where he assisted in the planning and training for the Sicilian operation, and it is this background that he brings to the new 542nd.

He and Mrs. Ryder and their daughter are living now on the main post.

GEN. GRINER HERE

Brig. Gen. George W. Griner, Jr., commanding general of the 13th Airborne Division, inspected the 513th Parachute Regiment in the Alabama area last week, it was announced today.

He viewed the training activities, attended field meetings and discussions and watched the men in training generally.

Manpower Expert Making Survey Of Post Personnel

Brigadier General Marshall Magruder, chairman of the Fourth Section of the War Department's Manpower Board, is at Fort Benning for a few days, surveying the utilization of military and civilian personnel at the post.

General Magruder and two members of his board, who are touring military installations in the Fourth Service command are studying the personnel situation in the Station Complement and Reception and Induction Center at Fort Benning.

Due to recent limitations on military and civilian personnel, the Manpower Board is observing local conditions in various sections to aid other commanders in their personnel problems. Accompanying General Magruder are Col. Robert Crosby, Field Artillery, and Lieut. Col. James T. Gammon, Inf., members of the board.

Operatic Singer To Be Heard In Chapel Sunday

Mrs. Allen Anthony Putt, wife of Lt. Col. Putt, will sing at the Main Post Chapel at Fort Benning Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock (EWT).

Before her marriage Mrs. Putt as Hazel Hayes was widely known in the musical world for her concert and opera singing.

A dramatic soprano, she made her debut at the age of 18 in the title role of "Aida" with the San Francisco Opera Company. She has also sung roles in "Tosca", "Tannhauser," "Lohengrin," "Jewels of the Madonna" and many other operas with leading opera companies. She has also appeared as soloist with the Boston and Philadelphia Symphonies.

Mrs. Putt will sing "The Lord Is My Light" by Alliston for the offertory and "Hear, O My People" by Stevenson arranged with soprano obligato, with the chapel choir.

PIN-UP GIRL

Departing from the usual custom, this week the "pin-up" girl moves inside the paper to make room for more important news here. We knew you'd find her anyway, so turn to page 7, please!

Colonel Hite Killed Tuesday In Jump Mishap

Officer Termed Expert Without Peer; Served With Original 501st

Funeral services for Lieut.-Col. James C. Hite, 29, commanding officer of the 515th parachute infantry, who was killed Tuesday in a jumping accident, will be held Friday at 1:30 p. m., EWT, at the Fort Benning main post chapel.

Father Flannagan will officiate. The body will be shipped to Los Angeles, Cal., for burial.

Active pallbearers will be Col. Ridgely Gaither, commandant of the Parachute School; Lieut.-Col. J. W. Coots, assistant commandant; Lieut. Col. H. J. Jablonski; Captain Paul Vaupel, and Major J. B. Brice.

One of the original members of the old 501st battalion, Colonel Hite was described Tuesday night by friends who with him started the army's parachute training program at Fort Benning, as one of the ablest battalion commanders of the parachute troops, without a peer at his job.

A graduate of the University of Washington, he was 29 years old, is survived by his widow and a 2 1-2-year-old daughter, Gay Ellen, who live on the main post.

Colonel Hite's death is the sixth fatality in the 3 1-2 years of the parachute training program at Benning. During this time hundreds of thousands of training jumps have been made.

The colonel came here from the 15th infantry at Fort Lewis, Wash., upon the request of Brig. Gen. George P. Howell, who at that time was executive officer of the first battalion of parachute troops to be organized.

A reserve officer, Colonel Hite was then a first lieutenant, and he became personnel adjutant, then adjutant of the 501st battalion.

Later he was with the 502nd battalion which became the 502nd regiment. He then went to Washington with the army ground forces headquarters, but was transferred back to Fort Benning in May of this year when the 515th parachute infantry was activated.

He entered the service at Seattle where he was an area director for the National Youth administration.

Servicemen's Income Tax Law Clarified

The Bayonet publishes below the second of a series of two articles by Lt. Col. F. A. Dickey, fiscal officer of the Infantry School, and Lt. John W. Inzer, post income tax officer, in which the authors present a digest of the latest income tax laws complete with interpretations prepared for military personnel at Fort Benning.

The first article was published in the August 19 issue. Since its publication, the Treasury Department has ruled that members of the Armed Forces need not make a declaration of estimated income for 1943 by September 15 and need not make the quarterly payments due either on that date or by December 15. Lt. Inzer recommends that servicemen at Benning postpone until March, 1944, paying months originally due in September and December. He further recommends that those affected clip and file for future reference the two articles published in the Bayonet or articles that are clear and comprehensive concerning income tax for servicemen published in the September issue of the Infantry Journal.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX 1943 For Members of the Armed Services

20. For the purpose of estimating your 1943 tax the Bureau of Internal Revenue has provided two forms. The first form, known as the "short form," is for estimating tax on incomes not over $10,000. It is very much like the "short form" 1040A used for incomes not over $3,000, in making your 1942 income tax return and involves the use of a tax table. The second form, known as the "alternate form or "long form" is very much like the 1040 form used in making 1942 tax return. Both forms are self explanatory and by now a form has probably reached you from your Internal Revenue Collector.

21. Following the data regarding the "Current Tax Payment Act of 1943" published in the August 19 issue of "The Bayonet", you have probably been able to estimate your 1943 Income Tax.

You should now compare the amount of the 1943 tax with the amount of the 1942 tax and if the 1942 tax is not greater than the 1943 tax proceed as indicated in paragraph 5. If the 1942 tax is greater than the 1943 tax proceed as indicated in paragraph 6.

22. Where 1942 is not greater than 1943.

(1) If your 1942 tax was $50 or less, the amount of your whole 1943 tax is what you will pay less any payments you have made on the 1942 tax.

Example: 1942 tax $40. 1943 tax $90. You paid $10 March, $10 June, still owe $70 (90-20). You pay $35 September, $35 December.

(2) If your 1942 tax was between $50 and $66.67, the amount you will pay is your 1943 tax plus the difference between $50 and your 1942 tax, less any payment.

Example: 1942 tax $60. 1943 tax $90 plus $10 (60-50) or $100. You paid $15 March, $15 June, still owe $60 (90-30). The "plus $10" does not have to be paid until March 1944 $5, and March 1945 $5,if you wish. But you will pay $30 September, $30 December.

(3) If your 1942 tax was $66.67 or more, you will pay 1943 tax plus 25 per cent of 1942 tax (but the 25 per cent can be paid 1-2 March 1944 and 1-2 March 1945 if you wish), less any payments.

Example: 1942 tax $120. 1943 tax $200. Your 1943 tax liability is $200 plus 25 per cent of $120, or $30, total $230. You paid $30 March, $30 June, still owe $140 (200-60). You pay $70 September, $70 December.

23. Where 1942 tax is greater than 1943 tax.

First you will recompute your 1942 tax eliminating your earned net income, that is, you eliminate the first $3,000 of net income regardless if its source. If your net income was more than $3,000, you eliminate earned net income up to $14,000. This will leave for recomputation two items:

(1) Earned net income over $14,000.

(2) All unearned income.

You now compare your estimated 1943 tax with the amount of your recomputed 1942 tax.

(1) If your 1942 recomputed tax is zero and your 1943 tax is zero, you pay nothing but will file a return to protect a refund of amounts paid on 1942 tax. The refund will be due in March 1944 or you can leave it to apply on your estimated 1944 tax.

Example: All your 1942 income was earned (salary less than $$14,000), your 1943 tax is zero (you were a Captain with two fogies, $2640, married $1200 exemption, Service exclusion $1500.) You don't owe anything but you have a refund or credit of payments made on 1942 tax.

(2) If your recomputed 1942 tax is zero and your 1943 tax is less than $50 and more than zero, you will pay the 1943 tax, less payments.

Example: 1942 income was earned (Civilian salary and Service pay totaled less than $14,-000.) Your 1942 tax $60, 1943 tax $42. Recomputed 1942 tax is zero. You pay $42 less payments ($15 March, $15 June, $30, or $12. Pay $6 September, $6 December.

(3) If your recomputed 1942 tax is zero and your 1943 tax is between $50 and $66.67, you will pay your 1943 tax plus the excess of your 1943 tax over 150, less payments.

Example: 1942 tax (80 (earned income less $14,000). 1943 tax $65. Recomputation of 1942 tax is zero. Your tax liability is $65 plus $15 (65-55) or $80. You paid $20 March, $20 June which applies against the $65 leaving $25 which you may pay $12.50 Sept., $12.50 December. The "plus $15", you may pay $7.50 March 1944, $7.50 March 1945, if you wish.

(4) If your recomputed 1942 tax is zero and your 1943 tax exceeds $66.67 you will pay 125 per cent of your 1943 tax, less payments.

Example: 1942 tax $250 (all earned income). 1943 tax $160. Recomputation makes 1942 tax zero. Your liability is $200 ($160 plus 25 per cent of $160, or $40). You paid ($62.50 March, $62.50 June) $125 on 1942 tax which is credited against $160 leaving $35 which you pay, $17.50 September $17.50 December. You may if you wish pay the "plus 25 per cent or $40" as follows: $20 March 1944 and $20 March 1945. No interest charged.

(5) If your recomputed 1942 tax is more than zero and your 1943 tax is more than $66.67, you will pay your 1943 tax plus the difference between your recomputed 1942 tax and your 1943 tax, plus 25 per cent of your 1943 tax, less payments.

Example: 1942 tax $6,800 (Net income $20,000. $15,000 was civilian salary and $5000 was rents, dividends, etc.) 1943 tax $80. Recomputation eliminates $14,000 so you figure it on $6000 or about $1200 tax. Your liability is $80 plus $1120 ($1200-$80), plus $20 (25 per cent of $80), total $1220.

24. You should now be ready to fill out the return form 1040-ES. Put on the 1st line of the form the gross tax you are to pay (amount of tax you should pay before you deduct any withholding tax on civilian salary or any victory tax withheld) then fill out the rest of the form as explained on the form.

25. Keep all your papers, data, work sheets and your copy of form 1040-ES, you will need them when you make your final 1943 tax return in March 1944.

26. Lt. Colonel P. A. Dickey is available for consultation in Room 215, The Infantry School Building or phone FB 2925. Lt. John W. Inzer at Post Headquarters, phone FB 3411.

27. Just a few things more:

There is the "windfall tax," which applies to the situation where your income for 1942 or 1943, whichever is the lower, exceeds by more than $20,000 your highest surtax net income for any of the four years 1937, 1938, 1939, or 1940 whichever you may select. You had better hire a lawyer.

The new law makes no change in the deferment privilege authorized in Section 513 of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act. Forms may be had from parties named in paragraph 26.

JOINT RETURNS:

(1) If only the husband has taxable income, he should file a separate return and take the entire married exemption of $1,200 unless—

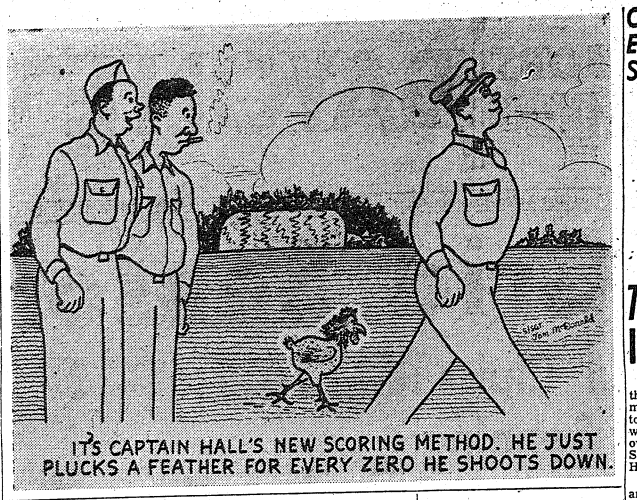
(The wife has losses or is entitled to other deductions of which the couple wish to take a tax advantage; in that event a joint return is indicated.

(3) If the wife works (or has taxable income from other sources) and husband does not have any taxable income (for example, if his military income is less than $1,500 and he does not have any other income) she should file a separate return and take the entire married exemption of $1200, unless—

(4) The husband has losses or is entitled to other deductions of which the couple wish to take a tax advantage. (Note that only the spouse who actually supports the children can take the credit for them as dependents.) Thus in (4) a joint return would be preferable. You should remember that the law provides that where a joint return is filed, the liability of each spouse is joint and several; that is, the wife as well as the husband is personally liable for the whole amount.

If the wife works at a civilian job, so that she is subject to the withholding tax, she has already had to file an election as to how she would take the married exemption, so far as withholding is concerned, on the basis of all or half, or none. That decision is not final, however, so far as her tax liability is concerned; it relates only to the amount that will be withheld from her salary. In computing the actual tax liability, the married exemption can be split in any way the couple desires.

For purposes of the new law, if a joint return is made for either 1942 or 1943 but not for both years, you total up the taxes of husband and wife for the year in which separate returns were made for the purpose of determining the tax for that year. But if the separate returns are made in 1943, any additional liability by reason of the higher tax in 1942 continues to be joint and several; the husband and wife moreover, can still file separate returns even though they file a joint Declaration of Estimated Tax.



28. Well, there you are. Fly at it! I know you want to get the job done before September 15th.

29. Grateful acknowledgement is made to Mr. Butler and his force of Collectors of the Columbus, Georgia office of Internal Revenue, also to the Infantry Journal.

26 Luckies Get Commendations

Desert Maneuvers Work Rewarded By Silvester

For meritorious service rendered during recent desert training and the move to Fort Benning, Maj. Gen. Lindsay McDonald Silvester, commanding the "Lucky 7th" Armored Division, awarded 26 officers and men certificates of commendation in a ceremony Saturday morning in front of division headquarters.

Music furnished by the 40th Armored Regiment band and a brief speech by the commanding general completed the program.

Five officers and 21 enlisted men received citations for their "outstanding achievement under difficult conditions."

The following officers and men of Combat Command "B" received certificates for meritorious service rendered by the division during the recent move to Fort Benning: Maj. Frank J. Ryder, Jr., Capts. Henry G. Elliett, Jr., and Nils Jacobson, 1st Lt. Henry W. Hays, Mr. Sgt. Alexander Baginiski, Technician Fourth Grade Jerry W. Michaelis, Technicians Fifth Grade William K. Gordon and Vincent J. Di Angelo and Pvt. Sol Myers.

Eight enlisted men in the 147th Armored Signal Company earned recognition for their "untiring efforts and expeditious handling of communications" during desert training. They are: Staff Sgt. Carl W. Wiborg, Sgt. Charles A. Cook, Technicians Fourth Grade Sim A. Hardy, Jr., Thomas Jenkins, and Leonard F. Swida, Technicians Fifth Grade William P. Hickey, Robert B. Jones and Eric F. Pearson.

Cpl. William H. Poyner, Hq. Co., 1st Bn., 81st Armored Regiment, earned a certificate for "outstanding performance of duty on all tasks assigned him." Staff Sgt. Pearle K. Tooly, mess sergeant for Co. "A", 77th Armored Medical Battalion, received a commendation for efficient mess management during the move from the desert.

Also cited for their service in the division during the move were the following enlisted men of the Seventh Armored Division Supply Battalion: Staff Sgts. Clarence Cigelski and Lloyd W. McCann and Sgts. Philip G. Doring and George G. Griedl.

NEW CHAPLAIN

The 300th Infantry regiment of The Infantry school will again have a Catholic Chaplain sometime around the first of next month. Chaplain John D. Janco now attending the Chaplain's School at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., has received instructions to report for duty shortly after his graduation from the school on September 25.

Cavalrymen Take TIS Basic Course

The Infantry School at Fort Benning, in a class by itself as a school for the development of officers, is also in a class by itself as the melting pot of the armed forces of this and other nations. Officers from numerous armies of the United States have been or are in attendance at its classes, some as observers and some as students.

It remained for the ASTP Basic Training Center to uncover a whole company of cavalrymen now engaged in infantry training. The trainees were sent to the infantry and Cavalry ROTC Officer Candidates' Pool and their status calls for 13 weeks of rifle company drill. All are members of the 9th Company, Fifth Basic Regiment.

Their basic training includes 12 mile marches, something a cavalryman seldom is called upon to do. All of them come from colleges which have Cavalry ROTC. Some members of the famous Black Troop of Culver Military Academy are here.

33rd Engineers Erect Pavilion For 7th Armored

After blazing trails and roads through some of America's wildest wastelands, the 33rd Armored Engineer Battalion of the 7th Armored Division at Fort Benning found the task of erecting a new outdoor dance pavilion for the division service club relatively easy.

The removal of an old wooden platform was necessary before the engineers could begin building the new pavilion which was completed in time for a gala United Nations Ball held Wednesday, Sept. 1.

Work was started August 12 under the supervision of Maj. Francis B. Eberhardt, assistant division engineer. Warrant Officer Magnus S. Mindrebo, Sergeants W. W. Smith and Miles Cortwright plus a detail of 12 men from all the engineer companies built a concrete floor 100 feet by 45 feet.

The new smooth-finish dance floor has a protective covering of wax and may be used for roller-skating, basketball, and outdoor concerts. After each use the floor is resin-coated and washed down to save it from abuse.

Medicos Invest $2,000 in Bonds At Big Rally

A War Bond rally highlighted the regular monthly party of the Medical Detachment, Section I, and before the cash register stopped ringing $2,000 worth of death to the Axis had been tucked away.

The rally marked the beginning of the Medical Detachment's participation in the Third War Loan Drive. Master Sergeant W. C. Thompson was master of ceremonies, and music was furnished by Sgt. Natale Pintello, his accordian and his orchestra.

Technical Sergeant Seth Taylor, former professional referee, was the third man in the ring during boxing and wrestling matches between Station Hospital No. 1 and Station Hospital No. 2. Master Sergeant W. C. Cullifer was in charge of refreshments during the evening's entertainment.

Men of the Medical Detachment were urged to make this War Bond drive the best in the history of the detachment by Major J. B. Joyner, commanding.

William A. Sackel, Jr., six foot, ten inch private managed to get into the army despite his four inch excess of height. On attempting to transfer to the airborne artillery, however, he was re-examined and discharged.

Never take it for granted that a weapon is not loaded; inspect it yourself.

Some day we will all be "pushing up daisies." What are you pushing up meanwhile?

Officer Fires Expert Seventh Straight Time

1st. James J. Dwyer of the 3rd company, Basic Training Regiment, fired "expert" for the seventh consecutive time during range firing by the 1st battalion of his regiment last week. He scored 160 out of a possible 210. His first expert shooting occurred at Schofield Barracks in 1934.

High score for the regiment was made by Cpl. John J. Amato, also of the 3rd company who racked up 196 hits.

7th Armored In Radio Debut

With the ruffle of drums and the wail of sirens the Seventh Armored Division made its air debut to Columbus and vicinity last week in a half hour radio show over WRBL and WGPC from Service Club No. 2 in the Sand Hill area.

Highlighting the broadcast was an official welcome to Fort Benning from Post Commander Brig. Gen. Fulton, given by Col. John P. Edgerley, executive officer, and the reply by the "Lucky 7th's" own commander, Maj. Gen. Lindsay McDonald Silvester.

Gen. Silvester thanked both the populace of Columbus and Post authorities for their aid and cooperation in making the "7th" feel at home. He particularly expressed his thanks to the railroads for their "all-out" cooperation with the Army in moving men an dmaterial. He also noted appreciation of the work of Mrs. Winifred Baker and Miss Clark, Service club hostess and librarian respectively.

Under the direction of Staff Sergeant Charles Pasquale, the 31st Armored Regiment band provided a melodic background for the broadcast. Staff Sergeant Carl Neu and Sergeant Bill Cope announced the program.

The program opened with the band playing a medley of two original marches, "The Tankers' Song" and "Song of the 31st," After an original arrangement of "Shantytown" and the speeches, Cpl. Chris Woessner of Division Service Company stepped to the mike to sing "Let's Get Lost." The 31st's "Men of 'Steel'" then closed the show with "Kansas City Mood" fading into their theme.

At Camp Lejeune, N. C., a marine band of female personnel has been formed, thereby releasing men for combat duty.

Truck Regiment Men Awarded Decorations

Formal presentations of Good Conduct, Excellent Driver, and Excellent Mechanic Awards have been made to over 150 men of the Truck Regiment, Infantry School.

The impressive ceremony, first regimental formation for this organization, was held at Edwards Field, adjoining the regiment's Third Battalion area, and many visitors were on hand to witness the proceedings.

With the forming of the group of men selected to receive these awards, Captain George S. Williamson, Regimental Adjutant, read the orders to the persons assembled in formation who represented every unit within this, one of the army's largest Truck Regiments, and included Commanding Officers and staffs of each of the regiment's four battalions.

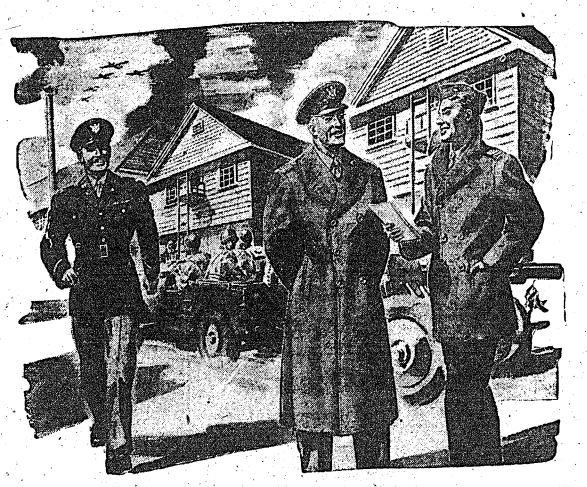
Lt. Colonel Edward G. Herlihy, the regimental Executive Officer, read the names of those persons who were the recipients of the awards and at the conclusion of this announcement, Colonel Vida, accompanied by Lt. Col. Herlihy, Captain Williamson, Captain Codshalk, Regimental Claims Officer; Lt. Everett Bell, Regimental Supply Officer; Lt. Floyd M. Fuss, Regimental Motor Officer, and Crief Warrant Officer George Goldsmith, passed through the ranks of honoree congratulating the men and pinning the awards on their breasts.

Finishing the ceremony with a short talk, the colonel congratulated the men on the efficiency and faithfulness to duty evidenced by them, saying: "We're proud to have men like you in this organization and the best tribute we can pay you is to say that you are good solders and we are looking forward to your leading the way for others to carry on in your steps."

With these words and the pinning on of the awards, official recognition was given those men who had by their conduct merited the Good Conduct Medal, and to those other persons who, by driving with an accident free record for three months or more and passing all tests relative to their duties with satisfactory marks, were eligible for Driver Awards. The last group consisted of those persons who have deserved recognition due to their superior ability as well-trained mechanics and, though fewer in number, gave promise of greater numbers to follow in one of the most important jobs in an outfit of this type.

Former Enlisted Man Captain

Announcement has been made of the promotion of Walter Franklin Gleason from the rank of first lieutenant to captain.



Capt. Gleason, a member of the Adjutant General's Office, Academic Department of The Infantry School served as an enlisted man for over 17 years, during which time he served three years in China and three years in Alaska. Selected to attend officer candidate school, he reported to Fort Benning on May 10, 1942. On May 15, 1942 he was apointed warrant officer (j.g.) He received his commission on August 5, 1942, and was assigned to the Academic Department. On October 5, 1942, he was promoted to first lieutenant.

CUSTOM-TAILORING IN THE MILITARY MANNER

STYLE NOTE FOR 1944

In Berlin or Tokyo . . .
the Best-Dressed U. S. Officers will wear
SMITH-GRAY UNIFORMS

In victory parades in 5 wars since 1845, Smith-Gray Officers Uniforms have made the "best front" on every front.

They are the pride of their wearers because they are tailored with pride by master craftsmen to whom custom-tailoring "in the military manner" is a sacred tradition.

It's the way Smith-Gray Officer's Uniforms are styled and fitted and tailored in the vital hidden parts as well as in visible parts—to hold their shape through long wear and abuse—that have won the acclaim of all who take pride in appearance.

We As a Nation Must Regain Shooting Eye

A worthy contribution to the United States at war has been made by a New Haven (Conn.) arms maker in the form of an advertisement in the current issue of Life magazine.

It is an appeal, coming from O. F. Mossberg and Sons, Inc., that all civilians who own .22 calibre rifles share them with their neighbors and teach them how to use the weapon. The nation-wide training program is sponsored by the National Rifle Association, Washington, D. C.

Intended to train the maximum of citizens in this country in the use of small arms, the rifle training program is invaluable to civilian defense units, state guards, war plant guards and watchmen, and prospective servicemen.

We feel it is especially necessary that men coming into the service have at least rudimentary knowledge of the weapons they will be called upon to fight with. Today LESS THAN TWO PER CENT OF THE INDUCTEES KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT RIFLED ARMS, the advertisement states.

Ammunition for the rifle training program is made available by proper government departments through the National Rifle Association. In a war which sees every trooper in a theater of operations armed, it is essential that every man be thoroughly familiar with his piece.

To expect that an inductee who comes into service entirely ignorant of firearms to be a crackshot and a competent armorer after a few short months of training is a huge order. However, it can and is being done.

But imagine how much easier the task becomes when the services induct a man who all ready has fired, cleaned or made some repairs on a gun.

America has had hundreds of rifle experts who have been immortalized in history. Daniel Boone and Sgt. Alvin York of the last war are two outstanding names which come to mind at once. Although planes, tanks and the old standby artillery are capturing most of the big headlines these days, remember this: many a Yank has been in a precarious corner in this war with nothing between him and the enemy but HIS rifle.

Lessons We've Learned Since Pearl Harbor

1: Our enemies—Japs and Fascists—are not supermen. They are damned good offensive fighters but like all men who are taught to die for their country, they aren't as strong as democratic men who are taught to die for their country, they aren't as strong as democratic men who have something to live for.

2: The Italian is just as ready to fight as the German.

3: Our equipment is the world's sweetest.

4: Our training is good, and most guys in combat wish they'd paid more attention to it.

5: You can't win without air support, but air power is indecisive without infantry and artillery. There is no substitute for artillery preparation and infantry occupation.

6: Lone Ranger tactics in fighter planes are magazine stuff; planes fight most effectively in squadrons, not solo.

7: Water is always scarce; a fighting man must condition his body to much less water.

8: It is a fatal error to shoot unless you have something to shoot at and destroy; you just give away your position.

9: Our soldiers work best when they know not just what to do but why they are doing it.

10: The best way to help a wounded man is not to stop and give him first aid but to press forward and cover the medics, who are equipped to give expert help.

11: The proper way to move forward is still either bent over or crawling. The man who runs standing up is a dead duck.

12: Tank destroyers should be used like artillery, not like tanks.

14: K and D rations are better than Spam, and there is no substitute for the sugar report.

Soldier Scores Pay Day Drinking Habit

Habits are characteristic items of behavior. This foregoing statement simply means, the little things you do or say, the result of your thinking, whether favorable or unfavorable, are merely the repetition of things said or done. These things have heretofore been practised so often proportionately that they definitely become part of one's character. (Keep in mind your character is what you really are, not what others may think of you, which is ninety-nine times out of every hundred based on prejudices of some kind.)

Habits may be natural or acquired. Natural habits are those which we possess without any or very little effort on our parts. They are the habits provided us by Mother Nature, chiefly as protection. A concrete example is the winking of the eyelid when the eye is seemingly in danger. Natural habits are really inseparable parts of our physical beings. (Mind you, I am not going so far as to say, they are inherited for that is a matter on which authorities throw little or no light). The other habits are those that are acquired. They are the ones which you, through some effort on your part whose stimulus might have been one in a million causes, have come in possession of.

With at least fundamental knowledge of "habits" we have the working basis for thought on the subject. With sufficient knowledge of the subject which embraces cause, what can stop us from getting the desired effect? I am simply implying you may break or make habits at will.

Consider, for instance, two common habits affecting us as soldiers today. One, the well known habit of going to town every pay day and taking alcoholic beverages excessively in an attempt to evade reality and the other willfully abusing, without cause, those with whom we come in contact with in our daily routine. Let us take all this apart and see what's what. In the first case one indulges in drinking himself shamelessly drunk, the first day of every month or whatever the time may be, and doing so repeatedly makes it seem to him something he cannot do without. That is the perfect example of continuous doing. If this person would refrain from taking the quantity of liquor that causes him to lose his sense of responsibility, the results would be quite different.

In the other case he has made it his business, through some narrow thought of his own, that he has the right to be insulting and abusive. Whether or not this thought comes about conscientiously or otherwise the result is sure, "practice makes perfect." The soldier who conforms to this line of thought and makes being insulting and abusive a habit will have to suffer and pay in some way for his actions. Here again, as in all cases, anything one does repeatedly becomes a part of the subconscious and becomes a habit.

Again, in conclusion, let me repeat that all habits excluding the natural ones can be brought under our control. Stop for a moment before you take that extra glass of whiskey, that small bit that is going to throw you to the sidewalk. Stop and consider that which you are about to say or do to which you have not given sufficient thought grounded on sound reason. Promise yourself today that you will check up on yourself in an attempt to correct all undesired habits and further make sure you acquire habits of sound judgment.

There is no hard and fast line between yesterday, today and tomorrow. It takes more courage and will power to act in accordance with your own judgment, than to be guided by the opinion of others.

"MY MUM"

One who's done so much for me,
For her I nightly pray.
To give me strength eternally,
Love's all, I can repay.

She tended me, when fever 'rose,
And kissed my finger cut.
Nothing large or ever small,
A mother's heart can't touch.

She suffered untold agony,
When I had aches or pains.
And smilingly through sleepless nights,
Her angelic voice explained.

So I can keep expressing
My love unendingly;
Please God look over Mother,
Like she has over me.

The Happy Little Redhead

Good post-war plans won't come from people reading pre-war lives.

We can't help the past. But we don't have to repeat it.

It's because we've cut so many corners that we've got things out of shape. The cure? Go straight. Keep on the square.

There are: patriotic Americans—out for their country; selfish Americans—out for themselves; scheming Americans—out for control; and apathetic Americans—out of the picture.

If we rest on our laurels we may soon be resting under them.

Intellectuals, these days, are trying to think us into right living. But they've got it the wrong way around. We will have to live ourselves into right thinking.

People, like boats, toot loudest when they're in a fog.

There is close relationship between hard work, a light heart and a clear head.

They say "you can't change human nature." That's the grandfather of all fallacies—the standby of standpatters—the alibi of backsliders—the foundation stone of the "isms."

LT. JERICHO GETS I NTO HOT WATER INVENTING ORDER S FOR FOXHOWL

By S-SGT. TOM McDONALD

Monday at our headquarters is usually a visiting day among the officers and men attached here for duty. These little courtesy calls are sometimes in "line of duty" and sometimes social depending mostly upon what one was last doing the previous Saturday.

In Colonel T. P. Swampwater's case, he usually made a social call on Monday morning provided he had finished his Saturday's assignment and a "line of duty" call if he hadn't finished it.

This was due to the fact that if he hadn't finished it, he always had to call on the officer working with him on the assignment so that he could remind him what the assignment was about, so that he could recall just where he left off with it.

But on the other hand Colonel Swampwater's assignments were usually of such a nature that he could finish them early or else turn them over to Private Sawgrass or mayself to clean up their losse ends. Thus this left him free for Monday morning social calls or to accept calls from his fellow officers.

To begin with, he started last Monday morning off by paying General Quagmire a "social call" to discuss the previous "peanut brittle" party. (If the call had been a "line of duty" call, it was the Colonel's policy to call on a subordinate officer so as to give no occasion for the use of harsh words from higher ranks detrimental to his morale).

On getting back to his office, he immediately summoned me and inquired if any officer had been in to pay a call on him while he was out.

"Yes, Sir," I replied, "Lt. Jericho dropped by on a social call to tell you that he had heard a rumor that Major Foxhowl was leaving."

"Indeed," mused the ol' boy. "No doubt he is going overseas for combat duty. I hat to see Foxhowl go. He owes me 30 cents from last July. I'll miss him extremely."

"Yes, Sir." I answered.

"Sergeant, go tell Captain Marshen to report to me. I want to tell him the news."

"Yes, Sir," I replied, at the same time departing hastily to summon Captain Marshen to the Colonel's lair."

After the captain arrived and went in to report, there was an interval of peace and quiet and then he came out of ol' T. P.'s office and stopped by my desk.

"Sergeant," he says. "Is it true that Major Foxhowl is being ordered overseas to join the commandos with secret orders to be dropped in Germany by parachute to harass their communications?"

"I just heard he was leaving, Sir," I said.

Without further ado the captain dashed hastily out and a few minutes later in came Lt. Skylock with a very serious frown on his noodle.

"Sergeant," he says. "Lt. Dooling just informed me that Captain Marshen told him that Lt. Jericho told Colonel Swampwater that Major Foxhowl was leaving immediately for India to assist Lord Mountbatten in setting up an American ranger regiment to train Chinese commandos to fight the Japs."

"You'll have to ask the Colonel, Sir," I said, "I don't know any of the details."

"Nevermind, Sergeant," I've simply got to rush out and tell the news to Captain Hillrocks. He'll be tickled to death."

By now I was becoming extremely curious concerning Major Foxhowl. So it was no surprise to me when in barged Lt. Jericho, Captain Marshen, Captain Hillrocks, Lt. Dooling and Lt. Shylock to call on Colonel Swampwater for further news.

"As I said before, Gentlemen, I shall hate to see Foxhowl leave. He is an officer and a gentleman even if he can't play poker. Suppose I call him to come by the office so we can arrange a farewell party for him."

"Excellent idea," replied the colonel's visitors as the ol' boy wrapped himself around the telephone and dialed for the major.

After a short conversation, the colonel turned and added that "Foxhowl would be right up."

A few minutes later, in he came and Colonel Swampwater shook hands with him and Lt. Skylock, Capt. Hillrocks, Capt. Marshen, Lt. Dooding, and Lt. Jericho followed suit in that order.

"When are you leaving, Foxhowl?" questioned ol' T. P. as everyone else listened attentively.

"I'm not going anywhere, Sir" replied Foxhowl."

"What!" Roared ol' T. P. "You aren't going anywhere. Did the War Dept. change your orders?"

"I never had any," replied the major.

"What about that, Skylock?" said Capt. Hillrocks.

"Dooling told me," replied Skylock.

"Capt. Marshen, didn't you say that Foxhowl was leaving," asked Dooling.

"No," defended Marshen, "the colonel here told me."

"Sergeant!" yelled Colonel Swampwater. "Where is Lt. Percho, he was here just a minute ago?"

"Follow me, Sir!" I replied walking briskly over to the northside filing cabinet and pointing to the dark backside where only a pair of big eyes could be seen.

"Jericho!" thundered ol' T. P., "before you come out from behind that cabinet tell me who told you that Major Foxhowl was leaving!"

"Mrs. Quagmire mentioned it, Sir, at the last peanut brittle party the general gave. She said, 'The way the war is going now many of you fine officers will be going overseas and I simply won't have enough guests for our "peanut brittle" parties'," replied Jericho.

"But what's that got to do with Major Foxhowl?" glared Colonel Swampwater.

"I just figgered he would be one of those leaving, Sir," said Lt. Jericho from behind the cabinet.

BROKEN MELODIES OF LIFE

Chaplain F. M. Thompson

Life is a series of broken melodies. The laughter in the baby's eyes soon turns to tears. Some never even laugh. The song of youth is filled with discords. The finest friendships are severed. Every home has its seasons of heartache, despair. The most favored of God will at last lie still under the words of the preacher.

"The silver cord is loosed,
The golden bowl is broken...
And man goeth to his long home."

This is a tragic picture, make no mistake. The mistake comes in thinking it is the whole picture. We overlook the time element.

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard" everything.

The clash of cymbal, crash of organ and the doleful beat of drum are often meaningless, disturbing. But in agreement with other instruments the unrelated noises become a part of a glorious piece of music.

So with our days on the earth, they abound with strange happenings, jarring sounds, no harmony. But Time, the great adjuster, interpreter, will record an unbroken, a perfect melody. And the

"Sweetest melodies are those that Are by distance made more sweet."

Kay's Husband Says—

MAGAZINE ARTICL E TREATING HUBBY SHORTAGE MAKES HIM SHUDDER

As if I don't have enough troubles with Kay away I have to go and sit down for a quiet evening of reading, more or less so I can say I did that while she was gone and be honest about it, only to get upset by a condensed version in Reader's Digest of an article by Amram Scheinfeld called "The Husband Shortage", originally published in Colier's.

* * *

For instance it says "males are inherently weaker in resistance to disease and death." That's not bad. For all of me they could have put a period after the word resistance. The article is full of little things that are troublesome to my ease of mind. The writer says that because of a shortage of men in Europe girls have had to tolerate the double standard which works in man's favor. I dislike writers who make such sweeping statements, because if I had that person here right now we could make that go for a whole night's argument.

* * *

What really has me worried, though, is the suggestion that our present and future—shortage of men might actually bring about polygamy in this country. (It's not likely to come about, I gather for some time, so Kay will be back in time to put in her objection.) Everyone has probably heard the old wheeze that a synonym for monogamy is monotony, but to anyone what at first blush thinks that polygamy might offer certain advantages I advise caution.

My sleep is going to be disturbed just thinking about it. The fact is that 17 out of 100 men right now for one reason or another choose to remain bachelors. It's no use counting on those 17 guys even under polygamy, so just think what a strain that puts on the 83 of us left who chose marriage as a way of life.

* * *

With one wife there is always a chance that she will go away on a trip and for a brief period of time a man can renew his touch with bachelorhood, or there is always a chance that a man can persuade one wife that he needs to get away from it all. But what chance would he have trying to get away with anything like that were there two, or worse yet, three or more?

* * *

And a man might spend years convincing one woman that there is nothing wrong with coming home late for dinner or in bringing home two or three gents unexpectedly that he had just met at Joe's Place. But to have to spend all that energy in several homes would just wear out a man's nerves.

Just think what happens when a man questions his wife's judgement about how she is bringing up junior. What in heaven's name would happen if he were to begin making snappy comments to one wife about how much better the other one handles a similar situation?

* * *

The threat is real, according to this article, and will happen unless the clergy, lawmakers, social scientists of all kinds and women bestir themselves. I'm going to get busy writing those that I know, and Kay better get back here and get to work too.

* * *

There was one ray of hope for me personally. Before the war there were six per cent more men than women in the West and I have a nice little brick house in Denver, but this writer comes along and suggests that women, not men, go West. That's why I say, why do writers like that have to come along at a time like this when I have enough to worry about already?

This Khaki'd World

By Pvt. G. I. GRIPE

The G. I. laundry's a wonderful thing—
To it we sing, to it we sing.

When a man's laundry comes off their lines
Size 12 socks have been changed for nines.

And often it makes us feel quite rotten
To see linen hankies exchanged for cotton.

And it does little good to stew or fret
When another guy's drawers we sometimes get.

But what we never can figure at all,
Is why the things are always too small?

Such things, of course, are minor contentions,
For the laundry has the best of intentions.

But here's the thing that's got me beat—
Now how in the heck are we gonna keep neat

When a very specific order comes out
(And an order's an order, don't ever doubt)

That limits the number of clothes per week
That we can send who cleanliness seek?

The G. I. laundry's a wonderful thing—
To it we sing, to it we sing.

That's a right salty little tike selling papers around the Patio Grill these nights. He asked Sgt. McAlley of ISD to buy one the other night and when Mac pulled the usual line about "I can't read," the kid cracked: "Well, you got a face like a goat, you can nibble at it then."

Mac bought, and read, not nibbled.

A couple nights later another of the urchins wanted to be allowed to sing with one of the bands that comes in to the P. G. each Tuesday and Thursday night. How a white kid ever could get such black feet was a mystery. But the little rascal had a really appealing voice—and he must have picked up a sawbuck a least, as the G. I.'s tossed a rain of coins at him.

Officers and enlisted men who draw night duty at Post H. Q. now are being issued revolvers and the officers are having to squeeze out a few hours each week to brush up on their pistol practice. Sgt. Roy "Red" Burns (We've always wondered why they call him Red when his hair is practically a wheat-color. Could be the brick color his face turns when he gets his Irish up?) had to make a hurried trip to Atlanta the other night with some important dispatches and did his best to borrow Pfc. Sheldon Kietel's gun. Whatsa matter Red, afraid of the slickers up there?

Well, we still aren't getting any response in our pleas and anxious cries for items from you guys scattered around this camp. Guess you've gotten so accustomed to seeing that Sgt. McDonald's stuff and those stories by Capt. Schilling that you just automatically skip over reading the editorial page. You're missing something though, if you miss our little colyum, fellers—we're just plain devilish and we'll gripe and scream about anything or anybody. Well, almost, anyway . . . Heh, heh.

Have you heard the new wolf song: COMING IN WITH A WINK AND A HOPE.

Sgt. Carl Neu running around these days shaking his head skeptically and cynically. He figures nobody is going to be listening to WDAK, new radio station in Columbus, broadcasting Benning events of the day at 7:30 a. m. EWT. Aw, cheer up, Sgt. Neu, there are a few ill-mannered bozos around this post who are nasty enough to say they'll listen to anything you don't broadcast. The meanies.

50 Ex-TIS Instructors Make Excellent Students In Course

Former Pedagogues Know Teaching's Tough And Give Prof A Break

Any class of students which includes a large proportion of former teachers might be expected to look upon the efforts of their instructors with a somewhat jaundiced eye.

That is not true so far as the Officers Advanced Class in the 18th Co., 1st S. T. R. No. 32 is concerned, according to its tactical officers. Far from displaying boredom or a critical attitude, this group, which includes about fifty former officers of The Infantry School, has been making a reputation for itself for its spirit of enthusiasm, co-operativeness and friendliness toward the man on the platform.

But Captain William E. Huxford, tactical company commander, has his fingers crossed.

"They are still only in their sixth week," he points out. "And I'm afraid if they hear they have a reputation for being "good boys" they'll do something to change it. After all, they are only human.

"But, confidentially, they are one of the best behaved classes we've ever seen here. I guess everybody knows that officer classes, especially those taking the advanced course, are inclined to be a bit blase. That was especially true when advanced groups had a preponderance of majors and lieutenant colonels, who regarded some of the material taught as a bit too fundamental.

INTEREST KEEN

"We could argue with them about that fundamental part, but at any rate, the Advanced Class in the 18th Co. has been showing keen interest in the instruction all along the line. That is due to some extent, I believe, to the fact that so many former instructors are in the class. They, of course know the difficulties under which the instructor and demonstration troops operate, and their attitude is to 'give the guy a break'".

Of the fifty former school officers in the class, fifteen were instructors in the Academic Department of the School, 33 were in the Student Training Brigade, ISSC, and six came from the 124th Infantry, a school troops regiment.

"But the rank picture has changed too," the youthful skipper says.

"Instead of a high saturation of field officers, this class has a big majority of company grade officers. They apparently feel that they have something to learn. There are 108 captains and 54 first lieutenants, against 27 majors, three lieutenant colonels and one full colonel."

NEW FACES SEEN

Captain Huxford thinks a third factor may account for the attitude of the class. About five per cent of the total registration have never been at The Infantry School before, and therefore do not have any reason to complain that a lot of the instruction is repetition. This figure includes fifteen officers of the Chemical Warfare Service and a half dozen from the Airborne Infantry.

The Captain's opinion is confirmed by reports from the Academic Department itself. The class has been complimented several times by its instructors. And a former tactical company commander, now a member of the class, says the group compares favorably with any class he has seen.

"They handle themselves well in the classroom, seem to follow the instructional pattern well, and don't fight the problem. They fall in more promptly, behave well in ranks and keep horseplay to a minimum."

To which Captain Huxford adds: "They have a good academic rating too. If they hold to their present line, I predict an unusually low number of losses due to academic failures."

Ex-Private Is Back With 7th As Lieutenant

Once in a while the flood tides of life yield a break. And now Lt. P. J. Glazer, assigned to the 489th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, believes he has had one. Anyway he came back, after officer's training to the 7th Armored Division wheer he received his basic training.

When Pvt. Glazer was attached to the 40th Armored Regiment here he applied to the examining board for admittance to an Officer's training school. He answered the routine questions, gave the required answers. He preferred to return to the 7th Armored Division and to the Field Artillery.

It was while on leave that Pvt. Glazer had a telegram stating that he had been accepted by Officer's Candidate School. He was enrolled at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma.

On Tuesday, January 6, 1942, Lt. Glazer received the congratulations of Maj. Gen. Lindsay McD. Silvester, Commanding Officer and took his place as an officer in Battery C of the 489th Armored Field Artillery.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Glazer, Sr., 889 Faxon Avenue, Memphis, Tennessee.

46 States Adopt Maternity Aid Plan For Soldiers' Wives

With receipt of Pennsylvania's acceptance, 46 states of the union have signified willingness to cooperate with the federal government in its plan to provide maternity aid for wives of servicement, according to a United Press dispatch. The essential points of the Government's plan is published herewith for the information and guidance of troops stationed at Fort Benning.

Under the program, the wife of any serviceman in the four lowest grades—those earning up to $78 a month—can obtain free pre-natal, maternity and post-natal care. She is free to choose her physician. The federal government will pay doctors a fixed fee, ranging from $35 to $50, and hospitals the actual cost of patient care. The state must pay all administrative costs.

Benning Major Saves Child From Whirlpool

The story of how a major at Fort Benning dove fully clad into a treacherous whirlpool in the Upatoi creek to save the life of a three and a half year old boy came to light today—but not from the modest major.

He's Major William W. Choppin, commanding officer of the 53rd Sub Depot at Lawson Field, and the rescued lad is Roger Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Dodds, Baker Village. Mr. Dodds is foreman in the sheet metal department at Lawson Field.

Mr. and Mrs. Dodds and another couple and their children were visiting at the Choppin home which is on Upatoi creek near Eelbeck when they heard the children screaming. Rushing down the steep bank, they found that little Roger Lee had been swept downstream. Major Choppin had run to the bank by a different route and was just in time to see the lad bobbing about in a whirlpool in a deep part of the creek. He dived in and pulled the boy to shore.

None the worse for his experience, the boy, who is too young to realize how dangerous his predicament was, said, "It was fun but the water got in my eyes."

Veteran Sergeant, World War I Hero, Dies at Benning

Master Sgt. William Stratton, U. S. army, retired, died at Station hospital, Fort Benning, Monday after an illness of only three days, although he had been in declining health for the past two years.

Sergeant Stratton resided with his wife, Mrs. Louis Stratton, on Forrest road, where they had made their home for the past 18 years. He was 61 years old, and was born at Louisville, France, August 30, 1882, when he lived until the age of 12, when he sailed with his parents for America.

They made their home in Washington, D. C.

Sergeant Stratton was with the Sixth engineers when that organization was attached to the Fifth British army in March, 1918, and served with honor and courage as is testified to by a citation for bravery and the receipt of the Purple Heart medal.

Besides his widow, he is survived by a son, Winston Stratton, of Washington, D. C.; a daughter, Mrs. Will Waldecker, of Washington, D. C.; two sisters, Mrs. W. F. Malboeuf, New Haven, Conn., and Mrs. Rose Vidou, West Haven, Conn.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday morning at the post chapel at 11 o'clock, EWT, with Chaplain T. G. Proctor, Jr., officiating. Interment will follow in the post cemetery. Full military honors and Masonic rites will be accorded.

Pallbearers will be selected from members of the company in which Sergeant Stratton served. The body will remain at Oaklawn chapel until time for the services. The family requested that flowers be omitted.

Fifth Reg't Wives Give Bridge, Lunch

The ladies of the 5th Regiment, ASTP, were hosts at their second luncheon and bridge party entertaining at the Sand Hill Officers club. Mrs. Lionel Ball and ladies of the First Battalion were in charge of the party.

At the July meeting the ladies of the regiment decided to meet once a week at the Red Cross room to make surgical dressings. Five of these meetings have been held and 150 hours of work done, the Second Battalion ladies leading in the number of hours. For unusual accomplishments, the regimental commander's wife pinned medals on four ladies—Mrs. John Kaine, Mrs. E. W. Philips, Mrs. M. F. Weller and Mrs. Paul Taylor. They have all been present at least five times with a minimum of one hour each day. PN medals represented "5" for Fifth Regiment and although they have no intrinsic value are badges of accomplishment. Each medal is hung from a red, white and blue ribbon tied with a double knot through which is slipped a small wooden bar suggesting a tourniquet.

The guest of the day was Mrs. Wilson McK Spann, wife of Colonel Spann, commanding officer of the ASTP basic center.

Next month the party will be sponsored by Mrs. Edwin J. Nowicki and ladies of the Fourth Battalion.

Dance For Officers Slated for Cherokee Lodge September 17

A dance for all officers at Fort Benning will be held at Cherokee Lodge Friday September 17, between 9 and 12 p. m. EWT under the auspices of the Columbus Officer Entertainment Committee. The committee will invite 200 local girls to the dance, and the 124th Infantry Band will furnish the music. A small fee will be charged. All officer personnel at Benning is invited to attend.

Cooling Lemonade Proves Booby Trap

It was almost 4 p. m. With sweating hands and bared bayonets, some 180-odd student officers gingerly probed for hidden mines. Occasionally there was the faint clink of metal striking metal and trembling fingers slipped into the sand, searching for a suspected booby trap. Suddenly—everything stopped for tea!

Only it wasn't tea, but lemonade, and the 17th Company of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, threw caution to the wind as the dehydrated officers started to gulp lemonade with never a thought that the booby trap for which they had so carefully searched could have no better habitat than the cool and welcome drink. Not only the chow-hound who reached for the first cup, but the entire class as well, was nearly knocked over by the resounding blast that followed his incautious act.

And only minutes before, this same group of officers had timidly suggested to the instructor that he replace the safety pin in a harmless booby trap before they moved out of the bleachers for the hourly break and the lemonade—which at the time no one even suspected.

Nevertheless, the lemonade must have had a soothing effect on the jangled nerves which are natural hangovers after playing with the diabolical traps. When the 17th cleared a mined area the potential Battalion CO's and Staff Off exploded only two of the boobies, coming within a breath of equaling the previous record of "No Casualties" set by one of the Officer Candidate classes.

Sgt. J. D. Hissong Warrant Officer

Staff Sergeant John D. Hissong, parachute repair specialist of the First Academic Company of the Parachute School, Fort Benning, has been appointed warrant officer, junior grade, in the Army of the United States.

His new assignment is with the Service Company of the 541st Parachute Infantry at Fort Benning, where he will supervise the repair and maintenance of parachutes.

Mr. Hissong is 25 years old and entered the Army in March, 1941. His sister, Mrs. R. G. Knott, lives at 623 Brighton Street, Toledo, Ohio.

In consequence of the success in recruiting men of Japanese descent for the Army the WAC has decided to accept women of like ancestry.

Enlisted Men Big Factor In Saber Eleven

300th Will Count Heavily On E. M. For Strong Team

Scattered quite liberally through the ranks of the 300th Infantry football squad are officers, who, particularly during their college days, made quite a name for themselves on the gridiron.

Since none has been away from a college gridiron too long, it's natural to presume all will carry on in the army as during college days.

But there is one item which can't be overlooked. The number of officers who can be on the field at one time is limited.

BIG FACTOR

That's where the enlisted man comes in. How well he comes in quite likely will determine the strength of the 300th Sabers this season.

The enlisted men who stand a good chance of rating the first team haven't the well-publicized background but a few facts have turned up about several of them.

GEORGETOWN ACE

The most experienced of the E. M. is Sgt. Dean Robinson who has been kicking around various gridirons for 10 years. After four years at Millersburg (Ohio) high, he played four years with Georgetown college and then followed up with a two-year stint with the professional Columbus, Ohio, Bulldogs. Robinson is an end.

Vic Richardson has had one year's experience with the 124th here on the post, not to mention four full years with the Tallahassee, Fla., high eleven.

THREE GOOD BACKS

Three more who have looked good in early scrimmages include John Simcox, Henry Waller and Anthony Encher, all backfield men. Simcox played a year with Long Beach, Calif., junior college; Waller has had a year with the Scranton, Pa., semi-pro Blue Devils, and Encher put in four years with the LaSalle high eleven of Chicago.

Sgt. Eason has a year's credit with the Fort Benning post team and Sgt. Oliver Knoll played four years at fullback for the Lacrosse State Teachers college.

Undoubtedly there are others who will come to the fore as the team rounds into shape. As a matter of fact, they must. Even the greatest of grid heroes had plenty of assistance for the lesser-lights. And so it will be the enlisted men who round out the Sabers' starting eleven.

Foreign Nationals At Benning Catch on Fast

They learn rapidly, these foreign born nationals who have been assigned to the First Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School. While a walk through the company streets filled with varied uniforms might well make one wonder if he was still in the United States, there was little in the conversation to make him believe otherwise.

For instance, officers from the tropics now address their friends with "What's up, Joe" instead of the customary Spanish phrase, "Que Pasa." They also find they get better service by asking the bartender for a bottle of beer, as they became very impatient with the man behind the counter when he brought them a cola or orange drink whenever they ordered "Cerveza."

The Frenchmen too have learned that they get their food sooner if they use the well-known American phrase "Tip the Table" (pass everything down) rather than to attempt to call all the items of food on the table by name.

MAJOR DIXON

Captain Stanley Lee Dixon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Dixon of Hominy, Okla., has been promoted to the rank of major it has been announced.

Major Dixon is the executive officer of the 1st battalion, Second Student Training Regiment of The Infantry School.

114 Seventh Armored Men In AST Work

Taking advantage of Uncle Sam's offer to further their education, 114 enlisted men of the "Lucky 7th" Armored Division are "burning the midnight oil" in the nation's leading colleges today.

Every organization of Maj. Gen. Lindsay McDonald's fighting 7th is represented in the Army Specialized Training Program to train men for specific army needs. Potential engineers, linguists, psychologists, etc., are rounding out their educations in order to do their part in bringing the war to a speedy close. For this program is part of the army's credo that intelligence, courage and thorough training are going to win.

Former members of the "Luck 7th" are now attending college on Detached Service in schools ranging from Texas Tech to Boston U.

But before these men march back to school, a thorough screening is made as the first step in picking qualified students. Next Field Selection Boards interview applicants, make recommendations, and send enlisted men's Personal Data Forms to the Service Command concerned.

A careful survey of all Personal Data Forms is underway now in this division in order to send as many more men as possible to school. Some of these, due to their requirements will be ordered to (STAR) Specialized Training and Reassignment Units. Others will be sent to a basic course.

Title Swim Meet Slated For Russ Pool

Spirit Gridmen Rounding Into Shape Slowly

Squad Still Green, But Spirited Says Coach Lee Pollock

"We're getting shaped up as time goes by. The squad we have now is a little green, but the spirit's here and that's what counts." So spoke Coach Lee D. Pollock as he looked over his 76th gridders as they worked out in Doughboy Stadium the other morning.

Assisting Pollock are Lts. Joe Thomas, Harry Hales, and Eddie Hipp, all experienced hands. With two daily workout the 75-man squad is rouding into shape. Of course, it is much too early to select a starting eleven, but the mentors are lining up a nucleus around which to build the grid machine.

LINE MATERIAL

At the ends, Connie Adams and Hales are holding forth with such tackles as Frank Heidel, Bill Burns, Art Preston, and Hipp at their side. Promising guards include John Shea, Aubrey Gibson, George White, Lee Gehr, Chet Smith, and Jim Bailey. Likely pivotmen are Izzy Valorini and Bill Brantly.

As is the line, the backfield is wide open at this time. Joe Koshoffer and Mary Mathre are doing some quarterbacking with Ed Balser in the fullback slot. At the half-back position, backfield coach Thomas is trying Leo Mulrine, Ed Liebner and Pat Ranzone.

SEVERAL COLLEGIANS

Among the Spirit gridders several have had considerable college experience. Head Coach Pollock was captain of Pennsylvania Military College's 1936 edition, while Thomas was holding down a backfield post for Dayton University. Hales and Hipp attended Southern institutions, the former at the University of North Carolina and Hipp at Davidson College.

Another Carolina product is Burns from little Presbyterian College, alma mater of Bobby Riggs of tennis fame. Ronzone performed four years for Indiana U, while Gehr attended Drexel in Philadelphia for a like period. Another four year college player now in Spirit togs is Vallarini, late of Upsala College in New Jersey.

Ev Balser wore the colors of Akron University for three seasons and Mathre ran at St. Cloud Teachers College for two campaigns. John Ryan and Phil Everling have both seen action as freshmen at University of Virginia and Missouri, respectively.

At this point the schedule is incomplete, but Captain James Brown is aiding Pollock in arranging addition contests.

At Keesler Field, Miss., a 9-hole miniature golf course has been opened next door to the bowling alleys. So spacious is the course that 36 men may play pee-wee golf at the same time.

Buckley Tops 300th Golfers in Tryouts

In its first tryout qualification round last Saturday at the Fort Benning links, the 300th Infantry Sabers showed surprisingly good form. Of the seven who were able to appear for the match, one scored in the seventies, three in the eighties, two in the nineties and only one over one hundred.

Star golfer of the squad is Jim Buckley whose qualification score last week was 72. Buck was intercollegiate champ for five years running at Illinois College and during his recent furlough surprised the gang at the local club by establishing a new course record of 69.

Panthers Invade Alabama For Bouts With Tuskegee

Will Help Dedicate New Stadium At TAFS Friday

In the second of the series of inter-camp boxing bouts, the Fort Benning Panthers will travel to Tuskegee, Alabama, tomorrow evening to meet the Bent Beezer Club, representing the Tuskegee Army Air Field, in twelve fast-moving bouts.

OUT FOR REVENGE

The Panthers will be out in full force to avenge their defeat of last month in bouts held at Doughboy Stadium. The glove-clad Panthers will send such notables as Jimmy Mitchell, Danny Harris, Winfield Schoonmaker, Orie Smith, Bill Young and Floyd Guidry, all veterans in the boxing game, into the ring.

Newcomers who will represent the Green and White team will be Joe Corbin, Tiger Peterson, Roscoe Burton and Perry Livingston.

PACE FIGHTS

Georgie Pace, former world bantamweight champ and Benning's most popular fighter, will head the feature bout, meeting Ed Perry, Ohio slugger in an expected fast five rounds.

The Panthers have been undergoing a rigorous training session under the leadership of two of Benning's top-notch pugilists, Timothy Still and Eddie Jackson.

At Tuskegee Army Air Field tomorrow, the dedication of a newly built stadium will herald the fighters to new glories as a crowd of over five thousand is expected to witness the exchange of blows.

Gator Golfers Top 1st STR Links Foe

In one of the closest matches in the current series of golf contests played at the main post course, the 124th Infantry Gators defeated the 1st. Student Training Regiment, 19 1-2 to 16 1-2 last Wednesday.

Mike Bilowich and Vernon Willoughby, playing the number one match, set the pace in scoring with Willoughby nosing out Bilowich 74 to 76 and gathering 2 to 1 points. Bishop won 3 points to continue an undefeated record for three matches.

The Gators won three of the four-ball matches to gain the winning margin of three points.

Sabers Punch Way to Victory Over Spirits

By SGT. FORREST KYLE

Gaining decisions in four of the six bouts, the 300th Infantry Sabers beat out on 8-4 decision over the 176th Spirits last Friday night at Doughboy stadium in the opening intra-regimental boxing match of the new season.

Two other bouts involving light-heavies and heavyweights were scheduled but a regulation preventing competition between officers and enlisted men forced the cancellation of the final two fights on the day of the bouts.

GARCIA WINS

The 300th led all the way, although the Spirits had a chance to tie up the score in the final scrap of the evening. Rudy Garcia of the 300th, however, out-punched Hugh Miller of the Spirits all the way in the middleweight division to assure the Sabers victory.

There were no knockouts in the six bouts.

The closest tussle of the evening pitted the 300th's pride, Raul Franco, against the Spirits' Fred Aguirro, in the bantamweight class. Both boxers have many amateur championships to their credit and Aguirre further enhanced his reputation by outfighting Franco to get the judges' nod.

CLOSE SCRAP

Virgil Flowers, 300th flyweight, had too good a left hand for Billy Seitz of the Spirits and, thanks to points accumulated in the third round, gained the decision in the opening bout of the program.

Joe Garcia, Saber featherweight, was an elusive target in the three rounds against the Spirits' Godfrey Ely and boxed his way to victory.

Aguirre brought the 176th into the victory column in the third bout but Dan Davis, Saber lightweight, made the score 6-2 for the Sabers when Vic Thompson of the Spirits was disqualified for backhand blows. Davis was well out in front on points when Thompson disqualified himself.

MILLER ON TOP

Lloyd Miller put the Spirits back in the running with a decision over R. C. Smith of the 300th in the welterweight class. Miller had too much height advantage and reach for the stubby Saber fighter.

Rudy Garcia then made the Sabers' triumph certain with a clear cut decision over Miller in the final bout on the ard.

Scholastic Track Ace Seeks Bars

One of the South's finest high school track athletes has found his way to the 21st Company of the 3rd STR. He is candidate Joe F. Burley of Haynesville, Louisiana.

Starting on his track career at Summerfield High School in 1934, Burley tried everything the track team had to offer, finally settling down to concentrate on the mile.

In 1938 he ran the mile in four minutes, 30 seconds which set a new scholastic record for Louisiana and has not been equalled to date. He was also anchor man in the record breaking mile relay team. Quick to recognize his ability, Louisiana State University offered him a four-year scholarship but he was unable to accept it.

Shortly afterward, Burley went into the army and served in Nome, Alaska, before coming to OCS.

Profs Prepared To Defend Flag In Big Series

Academics Impatient As Battle For 1943 Diamond Title Looms

By SGT. MILTON LUBAN

With two weeks of practice, including an exhibition game, the Academic Profs are impatiently awaiting the umpire's signal to start the big series against either the Parachute School or the 176th Infantry for the 1943 Fort Benning baseball championship.

The one game the Profs played was against the 31st Armored Sandies, twice victors over the Columbus Foxes. The Profs proved they were ready for the play-offs by massacring the Sandies, 20 to 0, with Joe Dickinson and Rudy Rundus dividing the pitching. Dickinson gave up two hits in five innings while Rundus allowed one hit in four.

Either of these two hurlers will be Manager Herb Moore's choice for the first game, with the other pitching the second. Bill Bobo will be the moundsman for the third game and Lefty Lehner will take over in the fourth.

The Prof line-up is still a bit uncertain due to the fact that only one officer can play if TPS furnishes the opposition, while three can play if the Spirits are the finalists.

PRASSE IN RIGHT

In the event of the Parachutists playing, the Profs will open with Lehner at first, Zientara at second, Russo at short, Niebler at third, Fenno behind the plate and Cox, Dabbs and Prasse in the outfield. When Lehner pitches, Moore will take over first, Fenno will replace Prasse in the outfield and Plunk will do the catching.

If the Profs meet the Spirits, Moore will play first all through the series and Prasse will stay in right field. The rest of the line-up will stay the same.

Gators' Toughy Is Ex-Wrestler

"Firpo" Wilcox Met All Famed Matmen

If you decide to get tough with some Gator, look at him closely first. If he, by any chance, resembles Gargantua, then you'd better grab your pants and go home. He's John "Firpo" Wilcox, former high-ranking grunt and groan specialist.

His statement, "It takes ten years of constant practice to make a top-flight wrestler," should give you an idea of what is meant. Firpo has had those ten years and more, so by his own standards he is one tough parcel!

16 YEARS AS PRO

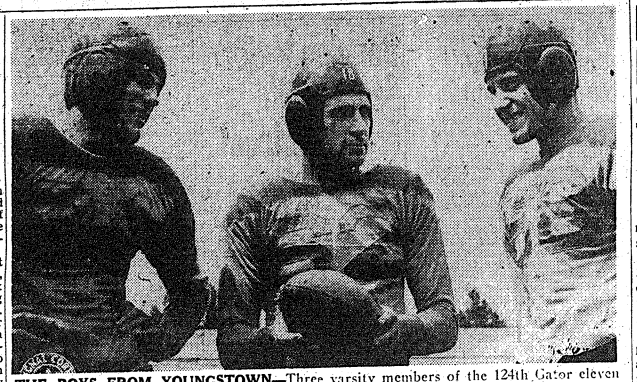
A chronological description of the life of the man mountain would include 16 years of professional wrestling, and 14 years of college and pro football and boxing, and a part time career as a steel worker and rigger.

Private Wilcox's athletic life began at Oklahoma University and was followed by many years of professional athletics that took him to all 48 states and into Canada, Mexico and South America. In South America he worked as a labor foreman and interpreter on an oil line through uncharted jungles.

MET BIG-TIMERS

In his wrestling days, John has met all the big timers: Jimmy Londos, the Greek Adonis; Ray Steele, Ed "Strangler" Lewis, and most of the other big-name behemoths. Asked who he thought the best, Wilcox unhesitatingly, simply and with a slightly pained expression answered, "the Strangler!"

The Gator mauler was drafted ten months ago and says that he has one more big fight and he's in the midst of training for it right now while at Fort Benning.



Saber Golfers Lose First Links Battle

In its first match of the golf season, the 300th Infantry team was roundly trounced 21 1-2 to 5 1-2 by the superior play of the 176th last Monday at the Fort Benning course.

Originally scheduled for the previous Saturday, the match was transferred to Monday. However, the 300th because of Infantry School problem commitments was unable to produce its previously planned team on that day.

Despite the bad trouncing at the hands of the 176th and a terrific downpour that drenched the players from the 10th hole on, the 300th team showed promise of becoming a top flight aggregation as the season progresses.

THE BOYS FROM YOUNGSTOWN—Three varsity members of the 124th Gator eleven this fall hail from Youngstown, Ohio, home of famous Fireball Frankie Sinkwich. 124th Gators Will Face Two Strong Naval Elevens on Enemy Gridirons

Squad Shows Big Improvement With News of Games Against NATTC Foes

By CORP. ED FOGG

Inspired by the news that they would meet two of the nation's most powerful Navy teams during the fall campaign, the 124th Gators really "dug in" this past week and showed tremendous improvement in their practice cessions on the gridiron.

Necessary schedule details have now been completed and it was announced over the week-end that the Benning eleven will meet the Jacksonville Naval Air Technical Training Center club in the Florida city on September 25th, and the Memphis NATTC eleven in Memphis on November 21st.

MYERS IS COACH

Jacksonville will have an eleven composed of many of the big-time stars of last fall's powerful Middie club which rated among the top service teams in this nation. Although a new team, Memphis will be coached by Denny Myers, last fall's Boston College tutor, and promises a first-class eleven.

Coach Milton in a statement said, "this past week marked the turn in the road for the squad and the men have settled down to the hard work ahead and are working with a vengeance."

HARD SCRIMMAGE

The squad was held to conditioning exercises, running through plays passing and dummy practice until Friday, when "Big Red" gave the word to start head-knocking. Two teams faced each other and the fruit of the preceding days practice was realized, as play after play was run with power plus.

There is still a shortage of ends, but those that are in the fold have taken Sam Sharp's word and have toughened up their play. Passes from Roy Cestary and Jim Todd were clicking in spite of an improved pass defense. Warren MacIntosh and Johnny Soltas speared many of the heaves for substantial gains.

DAVIS INJURED

Deathly silence reigned after an off tackle slant, when "Racehorse" Davis failed to get up. Relief followed after though as news reached the squad that he had just pulled a muscle and was being subjected to heat treatments. This curbed the splendid work the fast Gator back has been doing lately. He has not only taught the other backs the correct way, but his play has demonstrated his teachings.

The line continues to stay ahead of the backfield and during the scrimmage Friday, Mike Aulenti had the honor of drawing the first claret. Mike, Green Howard and Bob Fitzgerald are giving the Gators a stonewall in the center of the line with their stalwart guard play.

GREEN IMPROVES

Most improved tackle seen this week was big Bill Green. The big man, who is the closest contender of Jack McKewen for the largest man on the squad, has bettered his play to the extent that he is well in the limelight for a coveted starting position.

The new Gators have been taken on. A back and an end from the University of Indiana have been assigned to the regiment and have reported for football practice. Bob White, the back, and Johnny Nash, an end, played with Indiana for the past three years. Their addition is expected to help out where the Gators have appeared weakest so far.

This week, the Gator mentor plans to put his team through the hardest practices this season with scrimmages practically every day.

1st STR Wolves Defeat Spirits In Golf Match

Willoughby, Wallace Lead Winners With Excellent Scores

The 1st Student Training Regiment 'Wolves' defeated the 176th Infantry 'Spirits' 20 - 16 in a golf match last Friday. This was the second victory in three matches for the 1st STR.

The best golf was played by the one and two men of each team—Willoughby and Wallace of the 1st S.T.R. who turned in scores of 74 and 77, respectively, and Kupsick and Lea of the 176th who shot 74 and 79, respectively.

Last week Willoughby lost to Kupsick one down in a hard match but retaliated this week to defeat the Philadelphia pro by the same score. Wallace registered one of the best shots of the day by sinking a difficult 30-foot putt on the 11th.

Lea hit a beautiful 8-iron dead to the pin on the short 16th for a birdie 2 but couldn't regain the two-hole advantage Wallace held over him. Only two weeks before Lea had sunk a spectacular hole-in-one on the same hole.

The 1st Student Training Regiment fielded the team of Willoughby, Wallace, Moser, Cook, Logan, Crawford, Haezel and Arnold. The Spirits were represented by Kupsick, Lea, Taylor, Frevel, Ambrosia, Arrigo, Bruber and McManus.

Squad Physical Mark Set in 3rd STR Unit

A new squad record for the Third Student Training Regiment was set recently in the Physical Fitness Test when the Fourth Squad of the Second Platoon of the 11th Company registered an average of 98.27 per cent.

Eleven members of the company scored 100 per cent, while 16 others had 99 per cent. The company average was 96.21 per cent.

Best time for the 300 yard run was turned in by Harrel Frost, a former Texas high school quarter mile star, who was clocked in 41 seconds.

Chunky little red headed Patty Berg, Minneapolis golf pro, was sworn into the Marine Corps Women's Reserve 24 hours after she won the All-American Women's Golf Championship at Chicago.

Natators Set For Big Show September 19

Team Competition, Event For WACs Also Listed

Fort Benning's 1943 swimming and diving championships will be held in Russ Pool on Sunday afternoon, September 19th, at 2:30 o'clock, it was announced this week by Lt. Col. Charles C. Finnegan, post athletic officer.

Both team and individual championships will be contested, with a handsome trophy being awarded to the unit capturing the team title. Other special prizes will be awarded by the Fort Benning Athletic Association, sponsors of the title meet, to winners and runners-up in the various events.

EVENT FOR WACS

A three-man team real event has also been listed and the members of the winning team, all of whom must be from the same unit, will be awarded gold swim medals. An additional feature will be a 50-yard freestyle event for WACs on the post.

Lt. Arthur T. Monohan, assistant special service service officer and former scholastic swim coach, is in charge of a committee arranging details for the championship meet. He will also serve as referee and official starter.

150-YARD RELAY

Four individual races and a diving event will be held. The races will be a 50-yard freestyle, 50-yard backstroke, 50-yard breaststroke, and a 100-yard freestyle for soldiers. There will also be the 150-yard freestyle relay.

All diving will be done from the 10-foot standard board at Russ pool with five dives counting in the final point-scoring. Three will be set and two optional.

All entries must be made on the official entry blank printed in this issue of the Bayonet. Filled-out entries should be sent to the Fort Benning Athletic Association, main post bowling alley building. No entries will be accepted after Wednesday, September 15th.

Rules issued for the big swim event are:

1. No entries will be accepted after September 15th.
2. No lifeguards who have served at Russ pool at any time this year are eligible to enter.
3. No soldier will be permitted to enter more than two (2) events, not including the relay.
4. Official uniform for men will be trunks only.
5. Intercollegiate swimming rules will prevail.
6. Points towards the team championship will be awarded in the individual events on a

SABER LINKS ACE—When the 300th Infantry sent out a call for golfers to make up the regimental golf team it unearthed a sensation in the person of Jim Buckley.

A par golfer by habit, Buckley is self-developed with some aid from canny Jack MacDonald, Scottish pro. Buck was intercollegiate champ at Illinois College and during his recent furlough surprised the gang at the local club by establishing a new course record of 69.

In his few appearances to date on the Fort Benning links Buckley has lived up to his reputation, playing the course either at par or close to it.

An unassuming soldier, Buck isn't impressed by his own prowess. He plays the game because he likes it, and if he happens to play it well that's a matter of secondary importance to him. (Signal Lab Photo by Sgt. Don Kortemeier.)

300th Team Meets Georgia Tech Squad

Sabers Will Field Strong Team For Game in Atlanta Against Engineers

By SGT. FORREST KYLE

Georgia Tech, already tabbed as certain to be one of the gridiron powers of the nation this fall, will provide the highlight game of the 300th Infantry Sabers' football schedule.

The clash with the famed Jackets will be staged at Grant Field, Atlanta, on Saturday, Oct. 16th.

Even though the 300th's schedule is still incomplete, Georgia Tech automatically becomes the "big" game; the game for which the Sabers will point during the next month.

STRONG SQUAD . . . . . .

The Sabers hardly will be lambs led to the slaughter come next Oct. 16th for Head Coach Bob Friedlund and his two right-hand men, Ermal Allen and Joe Routt, have assembled a squad which should compare favorably with any service team in the country.

More than a month of daily sessions already are behind the Sabers. The first actual competition for the Sabers will come the 26th of this month in a practice game.

The 176th Spirit and the 124th Gators, incidentally, will furnish four Fort Benning conference games for the Sabers. Another game is booked with Daniel Field on an Augusta gridiron while negotiations are now being carried on for games with other colleges.

EX-COLLEGIANS

The three Saber coaches have quite a number of former collegiate and professional luminaries from which ot fashion a starting lineup. As a matter of fact, the coaches themselves have a brilliant background. Friedlund was a crack end for Michigan State, captained the Blue eleven in the North-South game at Montgomery and last fall performed on Col. Bob Neyland's Eastern Army All-Stars.

Routt was an All-American guard at Texas A. & M., and Allen scampered to fame at Kentucky. Both played on All-Star Army elevens.

Along the forward wall, the Sabers have left and experience. In addition to Friedlund, the leading end candidates include Sgt. Dean Robinson of Georgetown, John Gilmore of Maryland, Thad Chalin of North Carolina State and Bute Simmons of Texas A. & M.

HUSKY TACKLES

Four husky tackles scrapping for a starting job are Roger Reeves, 210-pound ex - Texas Christian gridder; Jim Robinson, 235 pounds from Texas A. & M. Manuel Fromm of Penn State, a 225-pounder, and Bill Southwick, 220-pounds, from the University of Nevada.

There is no lack of talent for the guard posts, either. Loyd Sims, out of Oklahoma A. & M., was an All-American mention in addition to being a national intercollegiate wrestling champion. Before entering the service he was sought by the Chicago Bears. Then there is Blaine Sterner from Bowling Green, Ky., and, of course, Routt.

Vic Richardson, who once snapped 'em back for the 124th, probably will draw the same assignment for the Sabers.

ALLEN FLASHES

Allen, who looked unusually good in a recent scrimmage, is expected to be the Sabers' breakaway runner. He probably will share the tailback spot with Al Solari, U.C.L.A. back who made the longest run against Georgia in the last Rose Bowl game.

Three members of Tennessee's 1942 backfield also are on the roster, namely: Bill Meek, Bill Nolting and Ike Peel.

Others battling for jobs are Hal Edge of Georgia Tech; Johnny Sibeon of Long Beach, Calif., Junior college, Oliver Knoll from La-Crosse State Teachers, Tony Encher from LaSalle high of Chicago and Henry Waller of Scranton, Pa.

Scattered through the roster are others who don't have so many press clippings but who may edge into the limelight once the season gets underway.

Hoosier Grid Star Trains In 1st Regiment

Lt. White Led Indiana To Wins Over Purdue, Nebraska

Competitive athletics, recently instituted by Colonel John S Roosma, Commanding Officer of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, is just the sort of physical training program the regiment's tactical officers have needed, avers 1st Lieutenant Eugene White of the 9th Company.

And Lieutenant "Gene" White ought to know—he starred in the twin tough sports of football and wrestling at the University of Indiana before the bugle called him to an even tougher game and one that he's playing "for keeps."

Building a winning team is right in Lieutenant White's line. In 1941, he captained the successful Indiana eleven that licked Nebraska 21 to 13, and Purdue, their traditional rival, 7 to 4. That season an injury suffered in the hard-fought Notre Dame tussle kept him from actively participating in more than 4 games.

The year before, Lieutenant White, as right guard, played in every game. He made all of Indiana's plage kicks and sent the pigskin spiralling over the posts for a field goal to give his team a 3-0 victory over Purdue in 1940. That year he was also active in wrestling and won his varsity letter in that sport. Cost—an injured knee.

Called to active duty, Lieutenant White arrived at Fort Benning late in May, 1942, to attend the Officers Basic Course. Ever since graduating in September, he has been a tactical officer assigned to the 1st Student Training Regiment. Despite the endless responsibilities of his position, Lieutenant White still finds time for an occasional softball game. And now he's look forward to organizing a touch football team as the season gets under way.

HARD-HITTING first baseman on the crack 31st Armored nine, of the "Lucky Seventh" Armored Division, is Bill Joyner from Trenton, N. J. His timely batting and fancy fielding are one of the big reasons for the recent wins the Sandies have racked up over the Columbus Foxes. Joyner formerly played in the Eastern Shore League and batted a comfortable .402 in 7th Division competition at Camp Polk last year. (7th A. D. photo Reinish.)

Big Panther Sports Year Is Concluded

3rd STR Service Unit Hangs Up Good Record

The fact that the Service Battalion, Third Student Training Regiment, is ruonding out a year of creditable participation in athletics has only served as an inspiration to the Panthers can find little time for celebration.

Fro mthe standpoint of contests won, the average by-stander certainly would not say ours has been a successful year for the scores have failed to favor the Panthers on many occasions. On the other hand, when the situation is viewed and the morale effect, sportsmanship, and other inevitabl but intangible benefits takne into account, this has been an outstanding year in the development of this organization.

PANTHER MENTORS . . ..

Much credit for the success of the Panther program must be given to Lieutenant Jack Gushin. It was he who presented the idea of such a program to Colonel Robert H. Lord, Regimental Commander, and Major Francis J. Fishburne, the Service Battalion Commander.

The support and cooperation of Master Sergeant Samuel Sellers was also an important factor in the inauguration of such a program and his many years of experience in he field of athletics has proved invaluable.

PHILLIPSON ACE

Synonymous with the mention of Panther football, basketball and baseball is the name of Frankie Phillipson, former Brooklyn school boy star. Much credit is due Phillipson for his outstanding display of athletic ability and sportsmanship. There is also Henry (Hank) Blackburn of Chicago who attended and played flashy basketball for Xavier University, New Orleans, La.

James Griffin, who hails from Stamford, Conn., has shown ability as a clever basketball and baseball star and is out this season to show what he can do as a grid team member. Eddie Jackson, former Golden Glover and pro heavyweight, is deserving of a great deal of praise for his tireless efforts with the leather throwers of the battalion and it is expected that a great deal more will be heard from these fighters during the next few months.

8. In the event of a large number of entries in any event, trial heats will be held. These will be decided on a time basis.

Benning's Own 'World Series' to Open Sunday Night at Gowdy Field

Fort Benning's own "world series" will open on Sunday night in Gowdy Field at 7 o'clock with the Academic Regiment Profs, first-half post champions, opposing the winner of last night's 176th-Parachute tilt in the second-half playoff series.

When the Bayonet went to press last night, the second-half winner had not yet been decided, but it was announced that the "world series" of Benning baseball will open Sunday night, regardless of which team captured the second-half laurels.

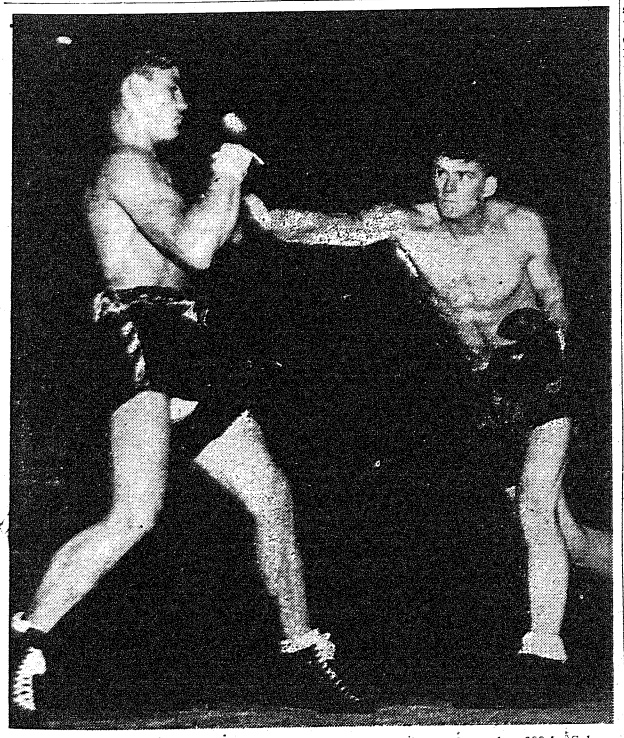
The final series to determine a 1943 diamond champ will be a seven-game affair with the games being played on consecutive days, barring rain. In event of rain, the scheduled game will be played on the following day. All games will be held in Gowdy Field, starting each night at 7 o'clock.

Ramazotti's Homer Keeps Spirits in the Title Series

Bob Ramazotti and Lefty Wissman, two of Benning's finest diamond performers, teamed up again Tuesday night to pull the 176th Infantry back from the depths of defeat and earn the Spirits a thrilling 2-to-1 win over the Parachute school to even the post's second-half title series at two-all.

Ramazotti won Tuesday night's tile for the infantrymen when he slammed a 345-foot home run over the left field fence in the last half of the eighth to score "Shuffle" Lohr ahead of him, and the crowd went wild.

Up until that terrific blow of the Spirit shortstop, the TPS nine had the game won on the basis of a single run scored in the seventh frame. Pete Bardin, hurling for the chutists, had the Spirits well in tow, and it looked as if the paratroopers were just about "in" as second-half post champs.



But Ramazotti, a splendid competitor, changed the entire outcome of the game and possibly the series with his drive. After Bardin had retired one batter at the start of the fatal frame, Lohr managed to work the TPS hurler for a walk. Then on a one-and-one count, Bardin tossed a high curve to the ever-dangerous Ramazotti and the "Ram" poked it out of the park to put the Spirits right back in the series.

Had it not been for Lefty Wissman's steady mound work, however, the chutists would have sewed up the game long before. The crafty southpaw gave up six hits over the nine-inning route but was stingy in the pinches. He struck out 11 paratroopers and kept them under control except in the seventh.

In that frame, Frank Mancuso, brother of National-leaguer Gus, opened with a Texas league double down the rightfield foul line and advanced to third on an infield out. He then scored on Dale Porterfield's timely single to give the TPS nine a temporary lead.

Wissman was superb the rest of the way as he hung up his second win of the series. The great southpaw has now accounted for both Spirit wins, and undoubtedly will be in the bullpen tonight for emergency service in case Cooper falters.

For Bardin, the defeat was a heartbreaker. The splendid right-hander pitched his second full game in four days, coming back with only a two-day rest after beating the Spirits Saturday night by a 5-to-4 count.

PIN-UP GIRL OF THE WEEK

RUSS POOL RAVE—The lads down at Russ Pool, which provides the scenic background for our pin-up shots, came forward last week with their own selection of a swim queen for pin-up honors. Heeding their advice, we photographed her on a chance and here's the result! Right nifty, we'd say. Her name is Virginia Gold and she hails from out Chicago way. Hubby is an officer candidate named Howard Gold, who you might remember gained the title of "Mr. Chicago' in 1941 for his male form. We bashfully suggest that Mr. Chicago's missus ought to rate some kind of a title for similar reasons. We can't tell you much about Virginia, because she appeared for the photo, then disappeared right away, and we haven't been able to find her since. But the pic speaks for itself. We're sure you'll pay most attention to the swim suit with its modernistic motif, but just in case you're interested in the wearer, we'll tell you she's slim, petite, olive-skinned and dark-haired. A glistening beauty, no less, and now let the picture speak for itself. (Signal Lab Photo by Sgt. Don Kortemeier.)

Bayonet Dummies Smile Happily as Frenchmen Thrive on U. S. Lemonade

A student officer in the 12th Company of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, found the following story in a rare and questionable edition of the late Rudyard Kipling's 'Just So Stories' in the Fort Benning Library:

"Once upon a time, Dearly Beloved, there lived in a place called Norton Field twelve swinging dummies who were the happiest swinging dummies in the world. Their faces were lit up with a broad smile, and they always said a very polite 'How do you do' to all soldiers who passed by.

"One day, there came along the Master of the Bayonet. He looked ferocious and talked ferocious and viciously stuck bayonets into the dummies, and swore at them, and the dummies began to lose their happy smiles.

"Now, just about the same time, there lived all over the shores of the big American Ocean 84 Frenchmen who got an inspiration. They built a raft made of bayonets, large ones and small ones, interlacing them and loading them with B.A.R.'s. (Dearly Beloved, you must not ask how they managed to interlace zayonets; this is an awfully important military secret and would give valuable information to the enemy.)

"Anyway, the Frenchmen sailed forth, and the big American Ocean, firing the B.A.R.'s as they went along. (Do not ask what B.A.R.'s are, or why they were being fired: Remember about military secrets).

UNORTHODOX USE

"By and by, the raft came to ..orton Court, and when the Master of the Bayonet saw all those bayonets put to such an unorthodox use, he looked more ferocious and swore louder than ever, and the dummies looked sadder and sadder, and the Master of the Bayonet became hotter and hotter, and pretty soon the ocean began to dry up, and the Frenchmen were stranded on Norton Field, and the Earth itself began to dry up, and became dusty, and the swinging dummies and the Frenchmen became also hot and parched and thirsty.

"Just about then, a captain of the angels happened to be flying by. His name was Captain Reid, and how he became an angel and could fly lightly around is another military secret that would give aid and comfort to the enemy. Anyway, he took pity on what he saw, and he immediately caused it to be brought forth a large truckload of lemonade and the Frenchmen drank and drank and drank, and the lemonade was so good that they forgot their native wine, and just revelled in the lemonade, and the Earth began to feel happy again, and the Master of the Bayonets went away, and the swinging dummies once more began to smile, and this is why, Dearly Beloved, if you happen to walk past Norton Field on a sunny morning, you will find there twelve swinging dummies who will politely take off their caps and say to you 'How loy ou do.'"

Our discoverer has a picture to show all this — the swinging dummies and the Master of the Bayonets and the Frenchmen and Captain Reid as an angel, but the man who prints the paper says there is no room for it in this issue.

Double Shift Communications Course Given

Infantry School Expects Big Increase In Enlisted Enrollees

Growing importance of communications was emphasized again this week when the Communications Section of The Infantry School announced a two-shift program for the Enlisted Communication Course.

The first class of the day will begin at 5:45 a. m. and conclude at 12:45 noon. The second class will begin at 1:45 p. m. and end at 7:35 p. m.

By November 1, enrollment in the enlisted men's course is expected to be doubled. A large number of additions has been made to the staff of enlisted assistant instructors.

First to feel the effect of the stepped-up program was the 24th Company of the 1st Student Training Regiment, which has started on a "round the clock" "schedule." When re-organization is complete, the company, commanded by 1st Lieutenant Grant H. Creiss, will quarter two enlisted communication classes of about 200 men each.

The enlisted communication class that started the early morning shift on Monday was the guinea pig for the expanded setup. When they were awakened at 3:30, most of the men decided that they had been put on the "night shift." But they derived some consolation from getting up at such an early hour, aside from being able to watch the sun come up over the Georgia hills— they could look forward to an afternoon of "bunk fatigue" plus plenty of time for study.

Bowling King of Post Has Seen Good Deal of World

Sergeant Trott Saw Service In Russia, Chine, Phillipines

Ranking first sergeant of the Academic Regiment — under the sergeant-major—is Eles J. Trott, first sarge of E Company, who has almost completed 27 years of service since he enlisted at the age of 15 in 1917. His unofficial but perhaps even better-known title is "Bowling King of Fort Benning."

Trott came into the army from Knoxville, Tenn., and saw quite a bit of Ohio, Texas, Massachusetts, and Minnesota before he sailed with the 27th Infantry to Vladivostock in 1918, to serve 17 months in Siberia. He learned how to speak Russian and traveled as far inland as Amsk on the Trans-Siberian Railroad. Most exciting part of his stay in Russia, however, was his eyewitnessing of several clashes between the White Czarist troops and the Red army.

BALL ON CORREGIDOR

In 1920 Trott's outfit started for home via Shanghai, China, and Nagasaki, Japan, stopping off for a while in the Philippines. Here Sgt. Trott had the unique experience of playing baseball on Corregidor Island, later to become a battleground for bigger stakes. He wound up that year in San Francisco, California.

While he was at Fort Crooke, Neb., during 1921, he was catcher on a baseball team that won 52 out of 55 games!

ALL-ARMY TACKLE

He arrived at Fort Benning in 1925 to find a home in the I. S. D., peace-time name of the Academic Regiment, where he made All-Army tackle while playing for the I. S. D. football eleven.

However, one look at the trophy case in the main barracks will suffice to prove that Sgt. Trott's great fame as an athlete rests mainly on his bowling activities. It was Trott, as a matter of fact, who helped design the Post Bowling Alley, of which he was once the manager. He captained the I. S. D. team for ten years, during which time the team won eight out of ten championships and finished second the other two years.

POST BOWLING ACE

In addition, he was a member of the post bowling squad and played against teams from the leading cities of the south—Birmingham, Pensacola, Montgomery, Mobile and New Orleans.

His lifetime average, as recorded here at Fort Benning, is 189, while his high score in bowling is 277.

ALL-STAR TEAMS

Inasmuch as a few coaches have not yet returned their ballots on the all-star baseball selections, announcement of the final choice for the mythical nines in three post diamond loops will be delayed until next week's edition of the BAYONET. Look for the all-star teams then!

Red Sox Oppose Reception Center In First Playoff Battle Tonight

The titans of Fort Benning's colored baseball circles will clash at Gowdy Field tonight at seven o'clock in the opening game of their playoff series for the 1943 Service League title when the 1st STR Red Sox oppose the Reception Center tossers.

The Red Sox swept to the first-half title without a defeat and were tumbled only once in the second-half. That defeat was at the hands of Roy Welmaker and the Orphan nine which won the last-half crown without a loss.

The series will be a five-game affair with the Service League trophy awarded by the F. B. A. A., going to the winner. It will be played on consecutive days, with the first three games slated for tonight, Friday and Saturday at Gowdy at 7 o'clock. The fourth tilt, if necessary, will be at 2 o'clock Sunday in the big park, while a fifth game will be played at Reception Center Field Monday night if needed.

Stage, Radio Personalities In First STR

Several Participate In Recent NBC Army Hour TIS Program

The War Department's official Radio Hour over NBC and its 170 station hook-up recently featured Fort Benning and its now famous Infantry School. Switching about the world from Camp McCoy in Wisconsin, Algiers, Sicily, New York and many other news cast hot spots, the Army Hour was heard from coast to coast by thousands of America's top notch fighting men. For those of the armed forces who could not be within knob turning distance of a radio, the entire program was recorded and will be shortwaved overseas for one full week.

Many of Fort Benning's more famous personalities contributed their part to the success of the program. From the First Student Training Regiment came the voice of Lieutenant Martin Olsen. In palmier days of peace this lad from the 13th Company was considered one of Chicago's ace character actors. One of his more famous parts being that of "Daddy Warbucks" in Little Orphan Annie.

Lieutenant George E. Fuller, also of the 13th Company, First Student Training Regiment, contributed his share to sheparding the Army Hour to success. Lieutenant Fuller is known for not alone his radio work but also his accomplishments on the legitimate stage. He likewise has gained himself a favorable reputation as a show manager, having managed exhibits at the Cleveland, San Francisco and San Diego Expositions. His most famous military role being that of announcer for the great Army War Show.

As narrator for the Army Hour the Infantry School was fortunate in having the golden voice of Lieutenant "Don" Kearney the Sixth Regiment's claim to radio fame. Don's voice has been heard from coast to coast over most national hook-ups. Prior to gaining his commission via Benning's obstacle and G.T. courses Lt. Kearney was with the Army War Show as advanced publicity man. At the present time Lt. Kearney is Public Relations Officer for the 6th Regiment.

Col. Burkhalter Feted on Natal Day By Associates

But when he entered the hall he beamed surprise as the regimental officers and their guests, including Mrs. Jane Burkhalter and "Billie" Burkhalter, sang "Happy Birthday to You!"

Sixty bright candles burned cheerfully on a huge, four-tier birthday cake as the tall veteran soldier, towering over the entire assemblage, took his place at the head of the table.

For the Colonel, the occasion marked his forty-third year since his introduction to the uniform of the United States Army, during which time he has risen from buck private to the full colonelcy and seen action in the Philippine Insurrection and in World War I.

Harry N. Burkhalter, Jr., a West Point graduate, has recently been made a full colonel in the Air Corps. William, the second son, who was present at the surprise party, is fifteen and is a familiar figure on the post as pitcher for the "Zientras" junior baseball nine.

Guests at the birthday celebration included Maj. Harry (Hank) Gowdy, former major-league baseball star, who is now special service officer of The Infantry School.

Lt. Frank Kovacs, U. S. pro tennis star stationed in Australia, flew 600 miles to Sydney the other day to play a special exhibition match with Aussie star Jack Crawford only to find that the match had been cancelled. Australian net officials called the tilt off in fear that a match with Kovacs might endanger Crawford's standing as an amateur.

ASTP Basics Begin Pouring Into 6th Reg't

After months of preparation, thousands of rumors and numerous indications that "they'll be here any day now," the first group of ASTP trainees has finally arrived in the 6th Regiment, Basic Training Center of The Infantry School.

They've been swarming into the 1st Battalion at the rate of over a hundred a day and with the unit now nearly filled with its full contingent of a thousand men, the 12-week training cycle under the direction of Major Edward Donaldson, battalion commander, will probably get underway some time next week.

Almost every state in the union and every walk of life is represented in the group of men who are pitching into army life with a gusto typical of the spirit behind the ASTP program.

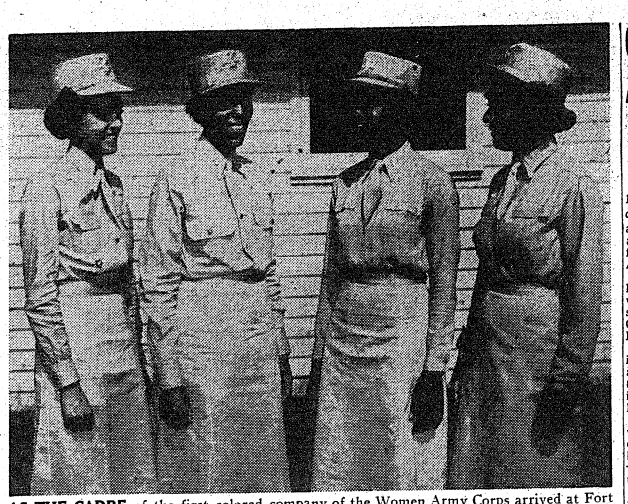
During the week the men have been receiving orientation lectures on army life, have been getting a taste of K.P. and learning how a well-made army cot looks after properly done up. Although many initially found it difficult to attune themselves to the Georgia heat, all indications now point to a quick hardening of the men with but rare cases of loss of duty because of the weather.

What impressed most of the officers of the 1st Battalion was the high calibre of men in the unit. Their alertness and quick response promptly dispelled any of the usual premonitions cadre men customarily entertain about new troops.

Good to see, too, was the smoothworking reception work that functioned without a hitch. Trucks whisked the men from the depot in Columbus with the least possible delay. Processing work under the direction of Capt. Edgar Barrett, battalion adjutant, was carried on as if it had been done for years, instead of for the first time.

But probably most gratifying of all is the new spirit now prevalent in the 1st aBtalion. With the long-awaited trainees finally here, the organization has taken on new life. The place is a bee-hive of activity . . . with everyone from the CO down to the bottom man determined that the 1st Battalion will set the pace in the regimen.

Stamp Club



The next country to be honored by the Overrun Countries series of five cent U. S. stamps will be France. This stamp will bear a design similar to the others, except that the appropriate flag will be inserted, and will be placed on sale at Washington, D. C., on September 28th.

* * *

The last meeting of the Fort Benning Stamp Club was rather disappointing. Most of our staunchest supporters failed to show up, and as a result, nothing much was accomplished. We hope to see a little more interest, and a little better attendance at the next meeting on Sept. 10. If the next rally doesn't amount to anything, it will be an indication that either the club is dead or the club is hibernating. And it is our opinion that a club that has to hibernate is pretty near dead anyway.

* * *

We read that a lot of collectors are yelling for the U. S. to issue a stamp illustrating the Stars and Stripes. However, this doesn't seem to be such a good idea. Such a stamp would be liable to be associated with the set of flag stamps which honors OVERRUN nations, and we don't want any such insinuation. The United States is not, has never been, and never will be overrun by the Axis or any other foreign power.

AS THE CADRE of the first colored company of the Women Army Corps arrived at Fort Benning, the officer join with the mess sergeant to discuss plans for the unit. The cadre of three officers and 12 enlisted personnel will be supplemented shortly to bring the unit up to a strength of about 150. The WACs will replace soldier personnel in the colored Reception Center at the post. Shown above, left to right, are Second Lieut. Patricia A. Gunter, Nashville, Tenn., executive officer; Second Lieut. Lucille Y. Mayo, New York, N. Y., the commanding officer; Second Lieut. Ella L. Clayton, Miami, Fla., mess officer, and Sergeant Rosalie Gravely, Bluefield, Va. (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

Colored WAC Assigned Here

Cadre of 3 Officers, 12 Enlisetd Women Form Company Cadre

A cadre of three officers and 12 enlisted personnel of the first company of colored WACs to be assigned in Georgia has arrived at Fort Benning becoming the fourth company of the Women's Army Corps at the post.

Under the command of Second Lieut. Lucille Y. Mayo, the unit will replace colored enlisted personnel on duty at the Reception Center and other installations at Fort Bening.

A special detail will be included in the company, which is designated WAC Detachment, Station Complement, Section 2, to assist in an educational program at the Reception Center.

Two officers of the company who are to arrive shortly and 16 enlisted personnel, all of whom have civilian teaching experience, will act as instructors at the Reception Center's basic training school.

Other jobs to be filled by the new WAC company are those of general clerks, hospital orderlies, truck drivers, cooks and bakers for the company, classification specialists and tailors for the Reception center.

The advance unit of the company arrived at Fort Benning from Fort Des Moines, Ia. The remaining enlisted and officer personnel is expected to arrive in a short time.

Lieut. Mays, 30 years old, of New York, who is commanding officer of the company, is a graduate of Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York. Lieut. Mayo has been a teacher at Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, Ga., and at Shaw Uuniversity, Raleigh, N. C.

Lieut. Mayo was the first WAC to arrive at Fort Huochuca, Ariz., where she formerly was assigned in the motor transport branch.

Second Lieut. Patricia A. Gunter, 24, of Nashville, Tenn., whose husband is in the Army serving in North Africa, is the executive officer of the WAC company.

HUSBAND OVERSEAS

Lieut. Gunter, formerly a dental hygienist at Meharry Medical College hospital in Nashville is the wife of Marcus Gunter, formerly a technician at Vanderbilt Hospital in Nashville. Staff Sergeant Gunter is in a band overseass, where he has been for 16 months.

Second Lieut. Ella L. Clayton, 27, of Miami, Fla., is the mess officer of the company.

Lieut Clayton in civilian life served as secretary-and cashier for the AFRO American Life Insurance Company in Miami and also in the same capacity for the Central Life Insurance Company.

She is a graduate of Booker T. Washington High School in Miami and also attended Florida A. and M. College at Tallahassee, Fla.

3rd STR Farm Produces A Bumper Corn Harvest

30-Acre Tract Yields 11,000 Ears Of Choice Grain

Those tasty roasting ears which have appeared on mess hall tables throughout the 3rd Student Training regiment for the past several weeks are the products of the 30-acre farm which was put into operation by Service Battalion officers and men immediately after its acquisition from the Second Student Training Regiment two months ago.

Capt. Jack D. West, commanding officer of Company C of the Service Battalion, who took over the active supervision of the farm upon the recent departure of Capt. Hughe D. Coleman, has estimated the corn harvest from the tract at 11,000 ears.

Not a bit of this corn has gone to waste, either. It was discovered that about 50 bushels of the corn had dried out to the extent that it would not bepalatable when served as roasting ears so this was converted into cornmeal to be apportioned among the companies by Capt. William Bessinger, regimental mess officer.

OTHER STAPLES

While corn represents the major crop harvested thusfar, the farm also has produced many other staples which have been enjoyed by the men. There were, for example, 500 watermelons and two bushels of canteloupes, four bushels of squash, and two bushels each of tomatoes and beans.

These small harvests are but the forerunner of greater quantities to come. It has been revealed by Captain West that another four acres of beans and snap beans have been planted and will bear soon and that a full acre each have been planted with onions, black-eyed peas, watermelons and mustard greens. Fractions of acres that have been planted are as follows: half, canteloupes; half, tomatoes; half, sweet potatoes; one and half, butter beans; a fourth each, lettuce, beets, carrots spinach; three-fourths rutabagas; half turnips; half, radishes.

19 Georgians With Lucky 7th

Assigned to the "Lucky 7th" Armored Division, now garrisoned at Fort Benning after several months of desert training, are 19 officers who are Georgia residents.

Traditionally lucky to be assigned to Maj. Gen. Lindsay McDonald Silvester's hard-hitting fighting unit, they feel doubly lucky in being located in their home state. Two of the officers are literally at home because they live in Columbus, just outside the military reservation. They are Lt. Col. Henry Dehnke. Trains Headquarters Co., and Maj. Frank G. Lumpkin, Jr., 40th Armored Regiment.

Two others are Atlanta residents: Capt. Fred O. Jackson, 1705 Gordon street, aide-de-campe to the commanding general; and Capt. Pugh E. Kyle, 973 Clifton Road, assigned to the 48th Armored Infantry Regiment.

Adel, Ga., has given two men to the division's 87th Reconnaissance battalion: 1st Lts. Earnest E. Mabe and John W. Wells, Jr.

The remaining 13 officers from the Peach state include Capt. William F. McKemie of Ft. Gaines and Warrant Officer Louis Platus of Americus, 31st Armored Regiment; Capt. Ben. R. Freeman of Greenville and Lt. Col. Samuel L. Irwin, 48th A.I.R.; and Maj. Arthur Cannon, Jr., of Covington, battalion commander of the 87th Reconnaissance.

Others assigned to division headquarters are 1st Lt. Henry M. Hays of Camilla, Maj. Reginald Hodgson of Athens, Maj. John V. Maxwell of Augusta and Lt. John P. Neal of Dalton.

Assigned to the 40th Armored Regiment are 1st Lt. John W. McKinstry of Savannah, Capt. Lovett I. Newell of Albany, and Maj. Fred C. Sweat of Waycross.

513ers Making Training Film

Members of the Second Battalion of the 513th Parachute Infantry participated in making a training film which will be utilized in the regiment and other units when eight officers and five enlisted men made a special jump, followed by ground tactics.

The jump, jump-mastering and the tactical ground maneuver were under direction of Capt. David Rosen. Cameras recorded the leap from the plane while another camera on the ground followed the men down and then recorded on film the setting up of a machine gun and assembling of the riflemen.

Materiel and equipment bundles were sent to the ground by parachute before the men jumped. They then assembled the equipment and went through their exercise for the film.

7th Armored Men Go Back to School

"Back to School" is more than just an autumn advertising phrase to 26 enlisted men in the Seventh Armored Division. To these men, going "back to school" means combining class work with actual experience, in mechanical courses they will follow for the next ten weeks.

Nine enlisted men will take the basic wheeled vehicle course while 17 men study an advanced tank maintenance course.

Men chosen for these schools are usually picked by company commanders because of the interest or aptitude shown in their work. Upon ompletion of their detached service at school, the soldier-students return to their organizations better prepared to do the job they have in winning the peace.

Time was when "Back to School" connoted such things as saddle shoes and blazers, or tryouts for the team, but in Maj. Gen. Lindsay McDonald Silvester's "Lucky 7th" stalwart warriors know that it means "back to work" for the day of battle and eventual victory.

Post Artists Exhibit Work In Atlanta

Paintings by 11 soldier-artists of Fort Benning now are on display at the High Museum of Art in Atlanta, and will remain on public view through Sept. 15.

Hailed by critics in Atlanta as outstanding, it is acclaimed "one of the most interesting shows recently made available to the public." One highlight of the exhibit is a sketch of a huge mural by Sgt. Anthony Maniaci of the Academic Regiment, from which Staff Sgt. George A. Cook is making the murial. Sergeant Cook also is represented with a portrait and a dozen water color scenes.

All of the soldiers were professional artists before entering the army. Capt. Frank Irvine, formerly of Detroit, is famous for his dog portraits, of which several in "wolff pencil" technique are on display.

Others represented include Tech. Sgt. Arend Behrends, with a water-color; Staff Sgt. Alfred W. Bell, block print and water-color; Sgt. James Bordonaro, mural design; Sgt. S. L. Borazzo, marine water colors; Sgt. Charles Squires, mural design, and Sgt. Whitney Steward, air-brush design. All are of the Academic Regiment.

Corp. Kenneth Jackson, of the 176th Infantry, has contributed several oil paintings while Pvt. Edward Scollin, of the ASTP, has on display several pastel landscapes.

Pin your faith on any of the attractive costumes proudly displayed by KAYSER - LILIENTHAL, INC. You'll find they have not only the unusual designs you seek, but the finest quality materials necessary in a really worthwhile value. Painstaking workmanship guarantees your frock or suit will be perfect in every detail, even those not evident to the casual observer. In this Fall collection, perfect for fashion-wise women, there is a complete lack of "gingerbread" or "spinach." For the most part frocks are highlighted by a single sparkling jewel or several unusual buttons, but no gobs of ruffles or ruffles and spangles and jewels on the same dress. No, indeed, these frocks depend on their perfect lines and exquisite detail for their main points. At Lilienthal's suits and coats, too, depend on their workmanship, line and color tones to give the well-dressed appearance most of us consciously seek.

A thoughtful gift for servicemen are the leather goods sets at CHANCELLOR'S. All of the wallets and cases are fashioned of hand-bordered cowhide and each has a cellophane-covered section on the front for listing the name, division, regiment and company of the owner. A very complete case contains two decks of cards, pencil, score pads and instructions for gin rummy and contract and auction bridge. Another convenient case has a writing pad, notebook, envelope and paper, stamp container and a blotter all compactly fitted inside a cowhide container. Perfect for military men is a folder which has space for four pictures instead of the customary two. In fact, each and every one of these nicely made leather articles will prove to be both useful and attractive to the men in service. Then, too, they're all reasonably priced and being of leather will look richer in tone as they are used.

Oftentimes a wee snooze in the middle of the afternoon is what we all need to help us carry on the rest of an active day. Naturally an honest-to-goodness comfortable pillow or two helps a great deal. If your couch, daybed, sofa, or whatever you've been fortunate enough to find, is a bit on the hard side, soften it up a bit with attractively toned pillows. MONTGOMERY WARD COMPANY has ever so many pillows which are both sturdy and pretty. They'll withstand a good deal of wear and tear and at the same time add a bright touch to your room. Light floral patterns in chintz materials and darker shades in heavier upholstery materials have been made into well-filled cushions. The trimmings on these bits of comfort at Ward's are either self-trim or looped fringe in matching and complementary colores. You'll find several of these soft pillows will be a worthwhile addition to your house furnishings.

Dead Jap's Diary Reveals Story Of Nips' Crack-Up

Book Found on Body Of Officer By Yanks Under Col. McGowan

How the Japs slowly cracked under the relentless drive of American forces on a Pacific island is related in a between-the-lines but nevertheless vivid fashion in a diary found near the body of a dead Japanese officer whose defenses were captured by a battalion led by Lieut. Col. Francis J. McGowan. Colonel McGowan recently came into the Third Student Training Regiment of the Infantry School after several months' service in the South Pacific. He now is on temporary duty with the Second Battalion of the regiment.

The diary was kept by one Lieut. Okagina and it reflects how the calm confidence he possessed upon his arrival at the island gradually vanished when promises of reinforcements and supplies failed to materialize and the American army continued to slash through. His references to the lack of food are interesting as well as the apparent satisfaction he derived from the deaths of two fellow-officers, which eliminated his "rivals."

JAP CONFUSED

Added to the last few entries are some notes by Colonel McGowan which tend to explain the confusion that was in the officer's mind as he wrote. The transcript which follows is a literal translation made by a Filipino soldier—hence the incompleted sentences, hanging phrases and other peculiar constructions:

Arrived in ——— Nov. 15, 1942.

Dec. 24—Ukada Nebreus died of illness. In the end, those who are weak will die, he always was the most eager to drink water.

Dec. 25—Sawsda and Vahuda died of illness, malarial fever affected his mind and he acted very peculiar after eating his meal, he died suddenly. This death increased the total of those killed in action and from disease to the large total of 18 men. This makes approximately the total of losses received in the occupation of Hong Kong and Java. Even in the face of the enemy the man's mind was entirely occupied of the thoughts of eating. We are waiting for the Spring-Sprout to come out, and we dream of the job of reducing the island more than ever. The airfield at Munda is finished and friendly planes will come over in large numbers.

Dec. 26—Asaba Kazuo also died of illness, it may be because he was unreasonably overworked.

Dec. 27—Oba Junia died from illness, it was not that he lacked energy but he was drenched by the rains that come over every afternoon in his life in the jungle.

Dec. 28—1st Lt. Fomia died of wounds received the day before. Now without seeing the fall the island his spirit sleeps eternally in the jungle. My tears overflow.

Dec. 29—Yamamoto Kyoichi died from a wound, such the weak soldier with weak wills are of no good, for they die from a slight wound. His wound was trifling with hardly any bleeding, now the casualties are 25 men.

VICTORY IN '43

Dec. 30—By the 15th of next month transportation of supplies and troops will be carried out and we shall gain superiority, after that the 16 from the rear will pass us and after bombardment by planes and artillery we will carry out a general attack. In two months all of ——— will return to our hands, then the enemy will not be able to hold the Tulagi area, I believe that a decisive victory for Japan on the spring of 1943 will take place and shall be everlasting life in military history.

Jan. 1—Two officers of the company have died, one ill and the other at the front, there is now no one to be my rival as company commander. I went to see the CO, Sgt. Mjr. and Sr. Sgt. and had a long talk. I learned many things I would not ordinarily have learned, such as deficiency and ordinary training of troops,—guard duty maneuver and lack of education, as company commander there is much of this I can put to use.

Janu. 2—I am waiting for Battlion Commander Maj. Nokiri. I am anxious to see him and see what type of person he is. As I was ill I stayed at Battalion HQ. The total of those who have died now are 31.

Jan. 3—Supplies are gradually improving, we only have to endure this 10 days more.

Jan. 4—In the evening the main forces of the Battalion arrive, although it is called the main force it consists of only 59 men. The battalion must have taken a very serious beating.

Jan. 5—Thirty-six more men departed for a battalion of the Oka unit.

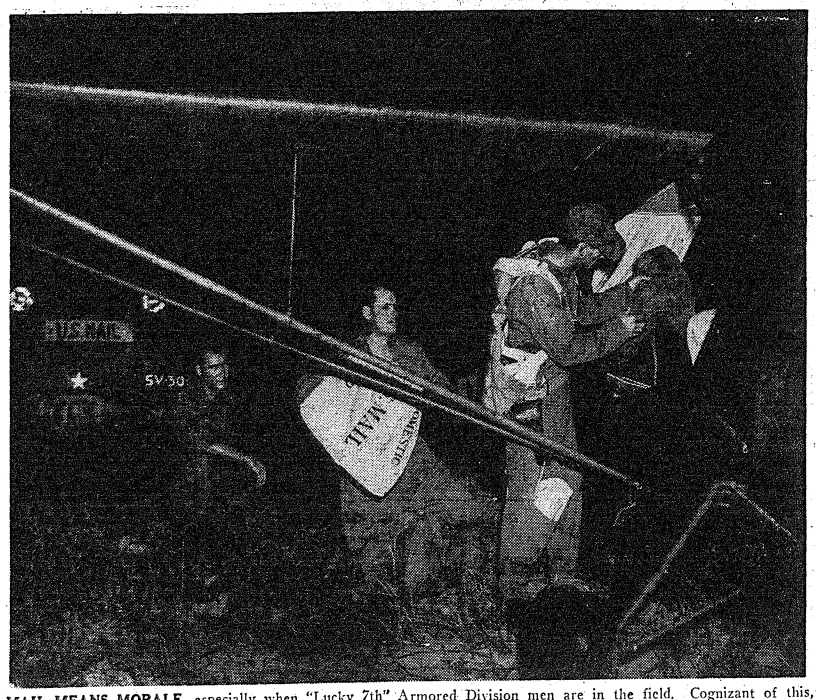
Jan. 9—Hearing of conditions in each company from the NCO's it seems that supplies are not coming, characteristics are revealed which are not known under ordinary circumstances, such as the true nature of human beings. In a certain company the company commander lost almost all of his prestige by giving two cigarettes each to the men of his command, thanks to my equality like an ordinary soldier those under my command shall share alike, supplies have started to come in, and under my system of fairness men brought me many things extra, there was good feeling all around, Tukazana of illness.

FOOD SIT WORSENS

Jan. 10—Major Mishimura again drew men from the reserve unit this afternoon, although I am company commander of the main forces, of the main forces of the company there are only 19 men in all, it is really terrible to see the electric lights on the—enemy airfield. The food situation is worse.

Jan. 14—Communications cut off from rear, we don't know what is going on.

(It was on this date that the Americans launched a full-scale attack.)



Jan. 17—I have a very empty stomach so I killed some large ants and ate them, they really were very good tasting, we really don't know what is going on here, and the enemy situation is not clear either, at 1 o'clock the enemy artillery started firing on us.

(During this period, a Japanese regiment, upon its refusal to surrender, was shot to pieces.)

Jan. 20—The fifth and eighth company commander killed yesterday. The eighth company retreated backwards, to receive a naval bombardment also. It is also too much.

Jan. 30—At 10 o'clock we were on special alert. Today's chow: Special Ants.

(Lieutenant Okagina's body was found Feb. 4th.)

TIS 'Bird Dog' Eulogized As Man's Best Friend(?)

No, lady! That urgent whistling which has resounded from the near and far reaches of the Ft. Benning reservation was not intended to perplex your poodle. Or even attract your attention! Officers, you may recall, are gentlemen.

That whistling, from the pursed lips of a hundred officers was both a plea and a tribute. A plea for haste and a tribute to. . . a man!— The company "bird-dog."

It might be noted here, to eliminate any confusion, that there's a vast difference in execution between the whistle directed toward a female and that to a man. The female type starts on a sustained high note, drops down and slides off on a note of awed appreciation. In words, it would be a reverent, "Oh, boy!" The male type is repetitious, starting low and rising to a note of imperious command. In words, it might be interpreted as "Come here!" or, more lengthily, "Here, bird-dog!"

Long un-honored and un-sung, but seldom un-whistled, the bird-dog at last is coming into his own as an important cog in the Ft. Benning educational machine. For it's the company tactical officer who points out the area or areas where knowledge-hunters may meet their quarry. Which may explain how the tactical officer got his nickname! He's the one man who knows where the trucks have been dispersed. And after a long days' instruction, he's the one man the class of officers want to see more than any other at that particular moment. He can expedite their return to civilization, a shower and food. Hence, the whistle!

And so we honor him today. . . as one of man's best friends. Never petted, yet always at our beck and call. Bearing responsibilities which no student officer can assume, the bird-dog is a pointer to education and a guide to civilization.

In recognition of his faithful service student officers now pay him additional spontaneous tribute with the organized yell:

Yea, bird!
Yea, dog!
Yea bird-dog!
Arf! Arf Arf!

To first lieutenant: Donald J. Donley, instructor, Academic Department, TIS.

1st STR Mess To Doll Up

Hundreds of members of the 4th Battalion of the 1st Student Training Regiment, commanded by Col. John S. Roosma, are going to find their already tasty meals and cheery dining rooms even further improved in the near future. Lt. Col. William B. Zeller, the Battalion Commander, has under way a program that will provide as pleasant an atmosphere as possible for the men while eating their meals.

Housing enlisted motor mechanics and radio operator students at The Infantry School, the mess halls of the 4th Battalion serve hundreds of hungry soldiers daily. Plans are now being made to repaint the messes, hang curtains in the dining rooms, and get all kitchen personnel into complete, duck-white cook's uniforms.

Methods of feeding the men cafeteria-style are constantly being improved. The importance of properly preparing meats and vegetables is being impressed upon the cooks. Minute timing is being employed to assure that food comes piping hot from the ovens just when meals are to start—not an hour ahead of time. Oven, stoves, and pressure cookers are constantly being checked for correct operating temperatures to insure proper cooking of vegetables and meats, to prevent excessive shrinkage, and to prevent food values and precious vitamins being cooked out of vegetables.

Ultimate goal of the 4th Battalion mess management is to provide well-cooked food, prepared in clean, sanitary kitchens, and served in bright, attractive mess halls.

Lucky Division Works To Check Food Waste

From "shaving" spuds to making croquettes of leftovers, the Seventh Armored Division at Fort Benning is continually waging war on food waste. No housewife could be as waste-conscious as a Seventh Armored mess sergeant. He is always on the lookout for new kinks in waste prevention.

An examination of several mess halls chosen at random reveals that enlisted men are practicing food conservation to the extent that approximately 99 per cent of the food prepared is eaten. Less than one per cent is left on the plates.

Tasty preparation of food and skillful mess management utilize every bit of food drawn on rations every three days so that the soldier enjoys it. Rations must be used as they are drawn regardless of individual preference in the menu.

Mess Sgt. Joseph Regan of 669 Second Ave., Troy, New York says: "I try and prepare the food so that the men will eat it. . . If they prefer fried to scrambled eggs, I fry 'em. If raw raisins seem unpopular I make raisin cobbler or use them in a salad." That is Division Hq. Co. mess, but even in the line companies the story is the same.

Sgt. Tooly has also acquired the habit of putting aside morsels of unused food for a hungry ambulance driver or guard just off duty. He is careful about saving scrap grease in the kitchen too. After rendering anw making maximum use of it he turns it over to a civilian agency for fine rendering at the rate of six pounds per day. Other mess sergeants do likewise.

A former lumber camp and hotel chef, Sgt. Tooly learned his art from a French cook who taught him food combinations which please the palate and make use of odds and ends. By following the motto "A Good Cook Always Tastes, Never Wastes" Sgt. Tooly earned a citation from Maj. Gen. Lindsay McDonald Silvester, commanding the division for the most efficient mess hall in the Seventh Armored.

As a further aid to food conservation, rations are based on the actual number of men eating each meal instead of on the morning report of men present for reveille. With some soldiers skipping breakfast or taking lunch out now and then, this saving amounts to approximately 46 rations or $26.96 per day in a headquarters company. In line companies the saving is not that great due to the different type of work engaged in by the men. But even that amount multiplied by battalion, regiment, or division makes it veident that Uncle Sam cannot afford to be indifferent to the problems of mess management.

Thus stalwart soldiers of the "Lucky 7th" wage war on the home front while preparing for the fray abroad, among the best fed soldiers in the world.

Life in Aleutians No Pink Tea Veteran Asserts

Life in the Aleutians is no pink tea party. For that you can take the word of Cpl. Paul Simmons, a member of the cadre of the 9th Company, 6th ASTP Basic Training Regiment.

Cpl. Simmons spent eleven months on one of the small islands in the Aleutians and was with the U. S. forces that landed on Kiska Island. The island on which he was stationed for most of the time was bombed four times by Japs. Was he frightened?

"Nope. I figured that with all the territory around for the Japs to bomb, there really was no reason why one should hit me.

"The job up there was tough," the corporal added, "and cold. We worked from dawn to dusk building groads, airfields, buildings—anything to keep us busy."

The best news he received were his orders transferring him to the Infantry School and assignment to the ASTP Basic Training Center. But now that he's back in the States, he'd like to go to war again.

New Soldier Vote Poses 'Mechanical' Problems

machinery has been set up for the men and women of the armed forces at home and abroad to vote in 1944's elections but—how can they decide for whom to vote?

The voting machinery itself needs oiling but additionally the armed services must find a way of getting political news to their members if they are to know why and for what they cast a ballot.

When—or if—such a way is found, it will be a tightrope-walking job. The services won't want to be accused of playing politics by slanting the news or giving one side more space than another.

Now the army and navy daily send their forces throughout the world a 2,000-word roundup of top non-political news. After the campaign starts, statements a presidential and vice presidential candidates make undoubtedly will be carried as news, since they will be of prime, general interest.

But the army and navy will have a job keeping its men and women—more than 11 million by the fall of 1944—informed on the issues and personalities in the various congressional races all over the country.

* * *

Yet without good information how will the service men and women be able to decide between the merits of the incumbent senators and representatives and the host of newcomers seeking their jobs?

Nevertheless, America's foreign commitments and the whole trend of the peace for which the war is fought may depend upon the make-up of that next congress. The 11 million service votes could tip the scales of the future.

Last September congress passed a law enabling service members to vote in federal elections. If state legislators approved, they could vote in state and local elections, too.

This wartime measure stipulated that any member of the armed services—who was a registered voter or was eligible to register—could vote in a federal election notwithstanding his state's law on the registration of qualified voters.

Nor would any member of the armed services, under the law, have to pay a poll tax even though that was the law of his state.

This was the procedure: A member of the armed forces would write a postcard—provided by the army or navy—to his secretary of state, asking for a ballot.

* * *

The law said the postcards had to be made available as soon as possible after February 1 in any year in which there was an election for senators or representatives.

Although 1943 is an off-year for such elections, a couple were scheduled because of vacancies due to death. So the services sent plenty of post-cards abroad.

Plenty of them got into the hands of men and women whose states were not holding elections but, having the cards, the service people sent them to astonished secretaries of states, asking for ballots which did not exist in elections which were not to be held.

Now Democratic Senators Green of Rhode Island and Lucas of Illinois, authors of the law, have it. This bill would do several in congress a new bill to amend things:

Permit the army and navy to provide their overseas forces with the proper ballots at the proper time. The votes would be microfilmed and returned as V-mail to the proper secretaries of state.

The new measure also would permit American civilians abroad to vote just as the armed forces with their ballot—obtained from the nearest military commander—sent home as V-mail.

Also it may face a stiff fight on two points which brought strong opposition in the original: No poll tax required and freedom to vote in spite of state laws relating to registration of qualified voters.

this time, however, in a different direction. He'd like to be 'IN' on the invasion of Europe.

4th SC Hdq. Sets Up Food Service Program

To further eliminate waste and make the handling of food for the soldiers training in the seven southeastern states more efficient, all phases of this activity have been placed under the control of a Food Service Program at Headquarters, Fourth Service Command in Atlanta.

Colonel William F. Riter, chief of the Quartermaster Branch, has been named director of the new food control organization. His assistant directors are: Colonel J. M. Rooks, former commandant of the Bakers and Cooks school with headquarters at Fort Benning and Captain Milton O. Lee, Sanitary Corps, as food and nutrition officer.

The purpose of the Food Service Program is to assemble all activities of the problem under one head, Colonel Riter explained. The new organization whose personnel is derived from the Quartermaster Branch and Medical Branch, will have charge of: (1) the supervision and inspection of all Army messes; (2) will have charge of the conservaion, distribution, preparation and consumption of all Army food in the southeast; (3) will supervise the Bakers and Cooks Schools where are trained food technicians, such as mess supervisors, cooks, bakers, and other personnel working in the actual preparation and serving of food; (4) will control the operation of the Quartermaster bakeries established at various posts to bake bread for the soldiers and relieve the load on commercial bakeries serving civilians (5) Army menu supervxision at posts and camps will be directed by the Food Service Program staff.

Explaining the menu planning, Colonel Riter pointed out that the Office of the Quartermaster General prepares a Master Menu, copies of which are furnished each post. A menu planning board at each post compiles menus approximately 70 days in advance, using the Master Menus as a guide. As the post menu boards complete their monthly menus, they are sent to the Food Service Director here, whose staff checks them for their conformity with the Master Menu, as far as available supplies are concerned, to see that the rationed foods come within the point limit, to determine if fresh fruits and vegetables are specified for use wherever possible—to save canned produce—and that the nutritional value of each menu is sufficiently high.

The setup of the new organization continues from the director, Colonel Riter, to food service supervisors in every post, camp and station. Each post supervisor will have his own staff, the size of which will be determined by the number of men on the post and the corresponding duties required to handle the job.

NEW STAFF SGTS.

Two non-commissioned officers of the WAC Detachment, Station Complement, Section One, have been promoted to staff sergeants. They are Technician Fifth Grade Isabelle A. Gilmore and Technician Fourth Grade Miriam M. Myers.

To occupy people's territories is not enough. We must move into their hearts and minds.

Captain Twohig Gets New Post

Officer Installed Post Record System

Capt. Joseph F. Twohig, commanding officer of the Army Post Office at Fort Benning, who gained fame for installing the intricate record system at the post has been ordered to a new post at New Orleans, it was announced today.

A veteran of 30 years in the post office in Boston, and also a veteran of World War I, Capt. Twohig worked out the system now being widely copied by other Army Post Office units whereby deliveries of 95 per cent of all mail addressed to soldiers has been effected.

Under this system, every organization on the post is required to send in a card for every active member of that organization. These cards then are kept in a "live" file and when a man or a unit moves, the cards are kept on hand in order that the men may be traced when mail continues to come for them.

At a post where turnover of individuals is much greater than in a city of 300,000, this was no mean task to work out. The APO also has the task at Fort Benning of supplying cards to members of organizations that are due to be sent out, so that they can notify correspondents of change of address; trains postal unit organizations for service with forces about to be sent overseas; handles all investigations; and maintains a 24 hour a day information service for any unit that is trying to locate a man on the post.

Soldiers Bring Home to Injured Comrade in Arms

There's always a little envious note about the barracks when a happy soldier takes off on a furlough. But then, there is always the consolation that furloughs aren't rationed and every G. I. has a card for one, that is almost every G. I. has that hope.

There wasn't any immediate hope for Pvt. Joaquin Carrera of Co. E, 300th Infantry. Carrera was seriously injured in the line of duty last June and has been confined to Station Hospital since. He's likely to be there for some time.

His comrades decided to do something about Carrera's bad break, knowing that he had planned so long on a furlough to his home in Texas. They enlisted the aid of Lt. John Y. Burgess, their commanding officer and then went to work.

Through popular subscription they raised enough money to send back to Texas for the expenses involved in bringing the soldier's mother to Fort Benning. Carrera will have a furlough with his mother after all.

The answer for slackers and quitters is not to fire them from their job but to fire them for it.

Benning's Italian War Prisoners Celebrate Capitulation With Mass

The entire complement of eight hundred Italian prisoners of war, interned at Fort Benning Sunday celebrated a Te Deum mass, offering of Thanksgiving, to mark the capitulation of their homeland to the Allies and also to express their gratitude for the good treatment they have received as prisoners of war.

The request for the mass was made by the prisoners themselves last Wednesday, the day they arrived and the day that peace between America and Italy was announced here. The Rev. Roderick MacEachen, who was assigned to the Vatican in 1918 and is the chaplain at their camp, this morning led them in communion, mass and the singing of Te Deum.

Father MacEachen said that the prisoners, upon their arrival here, said they considered themselves especially fortunate. They embarked on their trip from North Africa on August 15, the date of the Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary and they arrived at their camp here on September 8, the date of the Feast of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin Mary. These two occasions are the most important feasts of the Madonna and the prisoners of war said that the coincidence of their traveling dates was symbolic of their good fortune, as prisoners of war.

In the impressive ceremony in their cantonment, a special altar was built by the prisoners of war. One prisoner of war, who was an accomplished craftsman, fashioned a wooden frame for the altar with intricate carvings and woodwork.

On the altar with Father MacEachen were two prisoners of war to serve as altar boys. They led their comrades in prayer and, at several points in the mass, spontaneously prayed audibly "Viva l' America." The mass of prisoners joined in the chant.

In his sermon to the prisoners of war, Father MacEachen lauded Italy for the role it played for nineteenth centuries spiritually. Father MacEachen told the troops that their country had led the world in that century in works of literature and the arts which "made Italy glorious."

He told the prisoners of war that by their abiding faith in religion that they were bound to resurrect that glory to their freedom would one day come to their homes and families. "Faith shall make you free," the father observed.

The prisoners of war joined in the ceremony at sunrise. They first joined in chanting the Litany of the Blessed Virgin, then celebrated mass and received communion.

Upon completing the mass, the prisoners of war went to their mess halls for a hearty breakfast, enjoying cereal, bacon and eggs, toast and coffee.

Weekdays the prisoners of war work on farms in this environ, harvesting peanuts to allay the labor shortage.

Although this group of war prisoners arrived only Wednesday, they already have been out harvesting crops.

Father MacEachen, in 1918, was engaged in post graduate work in Rome. Due to his work in the clergy, which had been commended to the Pope, Father MacEachen was called to the Vatican for an assignment. During the peace conference he served as private secretary to the papal legate to the conference.

He then returned to this country where he joined the theological faculty at the Catholic University of America in Washington.

THE REV. RODERICK MacEACHEN, chaplain of the Italian prisoner of war camp at Fort Benning, is shown above as he performs rites during communion at a Te Deum mass at the camp on Sunday, September 12. The mass was requested by the 800 prisoners of war that they might express their thanks for the good treatment they have received from the Allies and for the peace. U. S. Army Signal Corps photo.)

Bazooka, Anti-Tank Rifle Grenade Get Bickford Premiere

Powerful Arms Do Their Stuff As Movie Cameras Grind Away

Two of the U. S. Army's potent secret weapons, the Bazooka and the antitank rifle grenade, made their public debuts Tuesday afternoon before a battery of newsreel and still cameramen on Bickford Range as the War Department officially lifted the shrouds of secrecy which surrounded the two weapons since their invention.

Fort Benning's famed Infantry Board, which is charged by the War Department with studying organization, technique, and equipment of Infantry troops, staged a three-hour demonstration for the press and high ranking Benning officers. Among the spectators at the show were Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of the Infantry School, and Brig. Gen. George P. Weems, assistant commandant, who are ex officio members of the Infantry Board.

During the realistic demonstration, the Bazooka, "ugly duckling" among the Infantry's weapons, and the rifle grenade pulverized formidable targets and proved the versatility of the weapons as capable defense for the individual infantryman against tanks or as anti-personnel weapons.

GO THROUGH PACES

Five newsreel and five still photographers recorded the battle-like demonstration for pictorial presentation of the weapons to the public. As the cameramen made their "shots," demonstration troops of the 176th Infantry Regiment, under the direction of the Infantry Board, put the two weapons through their paces.

Prior to the actual demonstration, Colonel Ingomar M. Oseth, director of the Infantry Board presented a chronological story of the development of various types of weapons for anti-tank defense.

"Ever since the armored tank became a factor in warfare, the Infantry has dreamed of an individual weapon, light enough to be carried and operated by the individual doughboy and yet powerful enough to defeat the armor of hostile tanks at close range," Col. Oseth declared.

Col. Oseth described the individual anti-tank rifle which the Germans had developed during World War I, that was capable of dealing with tanks at that time.

GRENADE RIFLE

After tracing the need for a more potent projectile to use against armor plated vehicles, Col. Oseth described the U. S. Army's antitank rifle grenade.

Although this type of grenade, which is adaptable to either the Springfield or Garand rifles or the carbine, has been used in Benning problems for some

Share the Ride Plan at Post Off the Beam

Gas Ration Board Threatens Reduction Of Coupon Books Here

With the "share the ride" plan not working as efficiently as it should be at Fort Benning, sharp reduction of gasoline coupon books will have to be made and another reduction in tire permits must be made unless the conditions are corrected.

That was the warning issued today by Sgt. Louis Lipp, chief clerk of the Fort Benning branch of the Muscogee rationing board, as he also issued a warning against unlawful tire changing and stated that Fort Benning automobile users were in some instances being victimized by "black market" tire dealers.

An excellent record was set originally when the "share-ride" plan was instituted at Fort Benning, with a survey showing that automobiles entering and leaving the post were carrying an average of 3.8 persons each as passengers. Now, however, casual checkups show that the trend is toward fewer passengers per car, and many automobiles are entering and leaving without passengers, Sgt. Lipp said.

"We have been warned that if the trend continues, Atlanta will

All-Benning Cast to Be Seen in 'Cat and Canary'

Who killed lawyer Roger Crosby?

Who is the homicidal maniac known as the "Cat"?

Who will inherit the wealthy estate of Cyrus West when the twenty-year old will is read to the six surviving relatives?

All these mysteries and many more will be answered tonight and Friday when an All-Benning cast is presented in the Columbus Civic Theater's production of the famed murder comedy, "The Cat and the Canary," at the Chase Playhouse, 220 Tenth St. in downtown Columbus.

WAR BOND SHOW

The show had its premiere last night before a swanky Columbus audience which turned out for a War Bond benefit, admission being a $25 war savings bond per person.

Tonight and tomorrow night for a half-price admission ticket of twenty-five cents, all men in uniform will be admitted. This reduced price for soldiers was put in effect by the Civic Theater so that large groups of Benning men might witness the show.

EATON DOES SET

"The Cat and the Canary" is the first fall production of the Columbus theater group which consists of both civilian and military personnel from Fort Benning. Tonight's show, however, is the first one that has been an all-Benning production. Even the sets were done by a soldier, St. Sgt. James Eaton of the Infantry School.

The mystery melodrama is being directed by Emily McNair Zimbalist, wife of Officer Candidate Efrem Zimbalist, now working for his bars in the 3rd STR of the Infantry School. Mrs. Zimbalist is a well-known Broadway actress who was starred last winter in the USO production of Rose Franken's "Claudia." The road show played at Benning last December.

ACTIVE INTEREST

Since arriving at Benning to be with her husband, Mrs. Zimbalist lent her efforts to the war bond effort, and has also taken an active interest in the Civic Theater. She quickly agreed to take over the director's job for "The Cat and the Canary" when she found that it was to be an All-Benning production.

Playing the lead roles in the show are Mrs. Terry Ryder, wife

Baker Village News

MRS. RUBY YOUNG — PHONE 5338

The Baker Village Nursery school housed in the Administration Building began its fall term on Monday. Any child between the ages of two and six years of age may attend. The hours of school are from 10:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. (EWT) Monday through Friday. A child is given fruit juice and a well-balanced noon meal, and the school has facilities for each child taking his nap.

The tuition for one child is $3 per week, with reduced rates for more than one child.

Mrs. Ray Simpson was hostess at a tea in her home to the Nursery School Mothers' club last Friday. Mrs. Simpson is the Club's chairman. Many plans for the improvement of the Nursery school in the coming year were discussed.

For further information about the school, interested parties may call Mrs. Simpson—3-2028; Mrs. Knapp—3-2012; Mrs. Hays—2-1897.

SUNDAY MASS

For the benefit of the newcomers Mass is held each Sunday morning at 9:15 E. W. T. in the auditorium at the Administration building. Confessions are heard before Mass.

NUESERY TEA

Tea for all the mothers of the Nursery School will be held next Tuesday, Sept. 21 from 3 to 4:30 p. m. EWT, at the home of Mrs. W. M. Knapp, 27 Allison Ave. The tea is given in honor of the mothers of the new children in the Nursery School and will give all the mothers, old and new, a chance to get acquainted.

Miss Ann Wade of Columbus will be at the Recreation room in the Administration building on Tuesday, Sept. 21, at 2 o'clock (EWT) to meet with any of the mothers who would be interested in piano lessons for their children. Anyone interested but unable to attend this meeting can contact Miss Wade by phoning 7170 or by seeing Mrs. Lutz at the Recreation office.

There is quite a demand for girls to keep children for mothers. We have a list on file at the Recreation office but it is not sufficient to take care of the number of calls we have. If there are other girls who have not registered with us, and would like to do so, we woud and would like to do so, we would files. Sign up at the Recreation Dept.

We are happy to welcome the following newcomers: 1st. Lt. and Mrs. Zenus E. Finnegan, 28 Court; 2nd Lt. and Mrs. Jordan E. Scotti, 48 Fox; 2nd Lt. and Mrs. John O. Fitzsimmons, 103 Court; 2nd Lt. and Mrs. Wm J. Peterson, Jr., 45 Court; Mr. and Mrs. Allen T. Davis, 24 B; Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin J. Stewart, 2C; Sf. Sgt. and Mrs. Harry B. Hartman, Jr., 47 B; Master Egt. Quinton D. Davis, 12 A; Mrs. Cola Allen O'Neil and family, 26 D; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jackson, 18 D; Sgt. and Mrs. John H. Lockamy; 6 A; St. Sgt. and Mrs. Roy Entreken, 142 D; Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Watkins, 109 D; Mr. and Mrs. Estle T. Hampton, 14 A; St. Sgt and Mrs. Melvin Phelps, 30 B; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ford 85 H.

FAREWELL SHOWER

Mrs. G. W. McIlwain of 109 D has left the village to join her husband at Fort Knox, Ky. She says she has enjoyed living here and would like her friends to know how much she has appreciated them.

A handkerchief shower was given for Mrs. McIlwain in the home of Mrs. Randler. Mrs. Cooper rendered some lovely vocal and piano solos. Games were also enjoyed. A two course luncheon was served after which everyone expressed good wishes to Mrs. McIlwain and many new friends in Kentucky.

STORK SHOWEE

On Wednesday, September 8 a stork shower was held in the Recreation room in honor of Mrs. Gill. The afternoon was spent in a program of games in keeping with the party, opening of gifts and serving of a delightful lunch. The following ladies were present:

Mesdames Herman Weinstein; George Berner; Thomas Gloystein; Harry Hartman; W. Rottari and daughter Judith; J. C. Kelly; R. H. Sutton; William Simovic; C. Culbreth; H. J. Hall; J. K. Glaze; W. W. Maloney; M. C. Shivers; L. L. Maxey; H. G. Lutz; E. C. Davis; and guest of honor, Mrs. Gill.

RECREATION ROOM

The Recreation Department would like to inform the residents of Baker Village and Benning Park that the Recreation room and game room have been redecorated and furnished and are available to you for small parties. You are invited to visit these rooms to see what is available to you. The auditorium is also available for large parties and may be secured by contacting either Mrs. Young or Mrs. Lutz.

GIRL SCOUTS

The Girl Scouts are very busy these days with a new project of selling Christmas cards in which to build up their treasury to enable them to get necessary scout equipment. They have secured quite a number of sales to date but are hoping for many more. They are asking the residents to cooperate with them in this activity. Any girl who sells ten boxes of these cards is entitled to a year's subscriptiion of the American Girl Scout Magazine.

The Bingo party held on Saturday, Sept 4 was well attended and proved successful. These bingo parties are held the first Saturday night of each month. Mark the date on your calendar and plan to come out for an evening of fun. Rosters and other announcements will be given out to remind you of the next one to be held October 2.

Personnel Expert Serves First Student Regiment

'Right Man In Right Job' Is Motto Of Lieut. Labelle

"The right man in the right job" is, for 1st Lieutenant Henry A. Labelle, classification officer of the 1st Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, a goal worth bending every effort to attain.

Ever since graduating from the University of New Hampshire over seven years ago, he has devoted himself wholeheartedly to the science of personnel placement. Men, after all, are the basis of any organization, and Lieutenant Labelle's wealth of experience as a civilian and military classification specialist is in no small degree responsible for the efficient performance of the 2,700-odd enlisted students and cadre who make up the 1st S. T. R.

Almost immediately after taking the oath that makes him a member of the armed forces, each ned soldier is thoroughly interviewed as to his education and civilian experience, and given tests to determine his mechanical aptitude and how quickly he can learn. These findings are entered on the individual's qualification card which, together with his service record, accompany the man throughout his Army career. Through additional training, the recruit acquires new skills, which are duly entered on his card. These qualifications determine the soldier's first assignment and later re-assignments.

CONTINUOUS EYEING

As long as he is in uniform, a man is continually classified and reclassified. Accuracy of this classification often determines the outcome of battles — if a replacement sent to the front lines can't drive the weapons carrier or fire the machine gun has records say he can, the combat unit he joined is going to discover that mistake only at the cost of much bloodshed and possibly annihilation.

Classification expedites the training of enlisted men sent to the First Student Training Regiment to attend one of The Infantry School courses for motor mechanics or radio operators. The classification section first checks the correctness of every entry already on each soldier's qualification card. Experience has shown that the higher a man's score on the mechanical aptitude test, the more successful he can expect to be in his studies at the school. Men found to have low scores are taken in hand for individual help, so that many students who might otherwise "wash out" become capable radio operators or motor mechanics.

Units within or without the First S. T. R. frequently call for the services of a student with some particular occupational skill, or entertainment ability, or familiarity with one or more foreign languages — merely a few of the endless requests received. The Classification Section then searches its files of qualification cards, or runs them through a sorting machine, to secure a list of men with the required ability. Personal interview of these "possibles" then selects the student best able to fill the bill.

Finally, when a student completes his training at The Infantry School, this fact is fully recorded on his qualification card. When the soldier gets back to his home organization, he can then be placed in the job that makes best use of the new skills he has learned at Fort Benning.

SCIENTIFIC SELECTION

A similar process of scientific selection is followed whenever the 1st S.T.R. needs a replacement to perform one of the intricate tasks that are the duty of its permanent cadre. After a careful study of qualification cards and service records, Lieutenant Labelle or one of his trained assistants interviews each man under consideration. How long was he employed at his civilian occupation? Did he like the work? How much money did he make at it?—the answers to such questions indicate a man's skill on his job. Personal interviews also bring out such important factors as personality, health, and appearance, which written records can barely convey. Final decisions are made only on the basis of thorough research into each individual case.

Assigned and student officers at the 1st S.T.R. likewise have their qualification cards — the "Form 66-1"—which must be kept up to date. From these records, Lieutenant Labelle has assembled a "rare bird" file—officers skilled in German, or Japanese, or slavic languages, or in judo or jiu-jitsu, or jungle warfare, or one thousand and one other special hobbies, occupations, sports or languages which the Army seeks.

When a call came for officers to fill important but difficult assignments as mountain or ski-troop leaders, linguists, special service officers, or generals' aides, the Classification Section prepared a brief but complete description of each outstanding officer candidate. On the basis of these qualifications, selections were made.

CLASSIFICATION WISE

Lieutenant Labell has given the section he heads not only an unmatched, infectious enthusiasm for classification, but also the advantage of his long, thorough training in that field. After a year as placement and guidance counsel for young folk, he served five years as senior registrant for the United States Employment Service in four New Hampshire towns—Manchester, Nashua, Berlin, and Keene. During the course of these activities, Lieutenant Labelle made several intensive job-studies in the field, an opportunity for research afforded few placement specialists.

Service Club No. 1 Reopens On Friday

Service Club No. 1 on the Main Post will reopen tomorrow at 12 o'clock noon, Miss Mary Farmer, director of the club, has announced. The Garrison Library and the Service Club Canteen, however, are still open.

he club was closed at 9 o'clock Tuesday night for the purpose of renovation and repairs in the main lounge and other parts of the building not including the library and canteen.

300TH PARADES

All units of the 300th Infantry participated in a regimental parade on the review field Wednesday, Sept. 15. The newly acquired regimental colors, a background of Infantry blue with the arms of the United States in gold as a centerpiece, made their first appearance.

WACs Awarded Service Ribbons

Presentation of service ribbons Sunday to members of the WAC detachment, station complement, Section 1, by Brig. Gen. Walter S. Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, was another milestone in the achievements of the Women's Army corps, first branch of women in the armed forces of World War II, to receive these ribbons.

The moss green and gold service ribbon is in recognition of service rendered before he corps became the Women's Army corps Sept. 1. In special formation on Gordon field, Sunday, Sept. 12, presentation was made to each individual member of the corps eligible to wear this service ribbon, by General Fulton. More than 100 WACs received the ribbons at Benning.

First Lt. Jeannette Miller, who has just assumed cohmmand of the detachment was one of three officers to receive this medal. Second Lt. Dorothy Phillips and Second Lt. Caroyn Pratt were the other two officers receiving their ribbons from the general.

After presentation of ribbons, to each WAC member the company passed in review before General Fulton and members of his staff, including Col. John B. Edgerly, executive officer; Lt. Col. J. D. Rosenberger, Jr., post adjutant, and Lt. Col. C. A. Will, plans and training officer.

Railways Get 1200 New Troop Sleeping Cars

Fifteen hundred specially designed steel, troop railroad cars will be added to the nation's rolling stock according to word received by Fort Benning transportation corps authorities.

Of these 1,200 will be troop sleepers, with 3-tier bunks, which fold up during the day into seats, and 300 will be kitchen cars, squipped with latest devices. Both types are designed for maximum light and ventilation, and can, with minor changes, be converted into freight cars for postwar use.

The cars built to Army and Navy specifications will not free sleeping cars for civilian use, but should alleviate the strain on rolling stock, which is reaching a nationwide peak.

Company Fund Buys Extra Mess Goodies

Headquarters Company of the First Student Training Regiment, The Infantry School, is setting a fast pace in the "Mess Drive" started by Colonel John S. Roosma, regimental commander. Lt. George J. Hopkins, the commanding officer recently assigned to Headquarters Company, is doing wonderful work in improving the food quality and general appearance of the mess hall, and in reducing food wastage.

The men who mess in this company are continually reminded of the necessity of reducing food wastage and it now has become second nature with every man to eat everything he puts on his plate.

As we all know, there is nothing which contributes to making a soldier feel more at home than a good, clean mess hall with victuals cooked like "Ma" used to. Headquarters Company has done much to brighten the atmosphere and improve the food. There is enough seasoning, sauces, confitures and other palatable extras on each table to start a grocery store. Special attention is given to the cooking and preparation of the food both by Lt. Hopkins and Lt. Applegate, the mess officer.

The interior of the mess hall was repainted and plans are afoot to paint the stools all one color. Every meal hour, a radio keeps the men entertained with dance programs or news reports.

Typical of the meals they receive is the one the men had the other day. Each soldier had one-half fried chicken (not one was less than three-quarters of a pound), a salad, iced water and grape drink, lima beans, giblet gravy, peas, potatoes, topped off by butterscotch dessert with whipped cream.

When asked how he could afford to do all these things to improve the mess hall, Lt. Hopkins had a very sound response which should be heeded by all company commanders.

"What have you got a company fund for?" You know how a soldier likes those extra goodies and a pleasant place in which to eat. Then too, originality and advanced planning of the cooks is one of the primary factors in satisfying the soldier's desire for variety and tasty meals. Our cooks take pride in their work and feel that they've accomplished something if

WE APOLOGIZE

In its last issue BAYONET was way out on a limb.

Last week, and on page one at that, the BAYONET printed a picture of Vivian, lovely songstress of Phil Spitalny's all-girl Hour of Charm orchestra, which last Sunday dedicated its hymn to the 300th Infantry.

Now that was all right. In fact Vivian (in real life Miss Hollie Shaw) is even better than all right.

But we labeled Vivian as Mrs. Frank G. King, wife of Lt. Frank G. King of 300th Infantry. And that's not so. The real Mrs. King is pictured above. She's one of Spitalny's gang (and, thank Heavens, a good friend of Vivian's).

Marksman Puts 8 Bullets In Same Hole Of Bull's Eye

Scoring detail on McAndrew Range please note: Next time Second Lt. Robert L. McCanna, of the 11th Company, First Student Training Regiment, fires the M-1 rifle for record, don't waste time scanning the target for the rest of his string of eight shots. The other seven went through the same hole in the center of the bull's eye that his first shot punched.

One of the West Point graduates now taking the basic course at the Infantry School, Lieutenant McCanna gained fame as an outstanding rifleman at the Military Academy, which awarded him his varsity "A" in that sport. He fired in every match but one during the 1942 and 1943 seasons and placed third for Army in the Army-Navy match at Annapolis last spring. That time Army outshot the midshipmen, themselves no mean opponents, by 1389 to 1381.

Such accurate shooting left no doubt in Lieutenant McCanna's mind that the Infantry would be his branch of service. After he puts the finishing touch on his marksmanship at Fort Benning, he's going out to hunt the biggest game of all.

The human body contains a larger proportion of calcium by weight than any other of the inorganic elements.

ESTIMATED TIME OF ARRIVAL

Before the United States Ninth Air Force B-24 Liberator bomber on which he was navigator took off for the attack on Ploesti oil refineries in Rumania on August 1, First Lieutenant Stanley D. Werts, of Sioux Falls, S. D., predicted the time the mission would require. Some of the members of the crew talked of starting a pool on it, but the idea was dropped when everyone wanted to bet the way the navigator had prophesied.

The Liberator had a rough trip, getting an unexpected pursuit attack after leaving the target, and winding up with only one engine operating and only two and a half gallons of gasoline in the tanks. It landed, however, within two minutes of the time Lieutenant Werts had predicted.

More than 740 cargo ships were put into service by the United States Maritime Commission in 1942.

Lt. Lyons Gets Captaincy

First Lieut. John J. A. Lyons, assistant chief of the civilian personnel branch at post headquarters, Fort Benning, has been promoted to the rank of captain.

A native of Albany, N. Y., Capt. Lyons also is Army Emergency Relief officer of post headquarters, a position he assumed in September, 1942.

As a member of the enlisted reserve of the Army, Capt. Lyons was called to active duty at Fort Benning on December 12, 1940, and served with the 24th Infantry until April, 1942, when he was assigned to post headquarters as assistant adjutant. He was assigned to his present job in February, 1943.

General Murphy Proves 'Man's Man for A' That

7th Armored Officer Won Silver Star The Hard Way

It might be the Irish in him, but, as Bobbie Burns put it "A man's a man for all that," which is probably one reason why Brig. Gen. John B. Murphy is one of the best liked and most efficient commanders in the Seventh Armored Division today.

Son of a small town physician and a true soldier for the past 25 years, General Murphy, who is the new leader of the "Lucky 7th's" Combat Command "A," is both respected and admired by men of his command.

Although he entered the army as a second lieutenant from the United States Military Academy at West Point, it's been a long road from a gold bar to the silver star he now wears on his collar and cap. Promotions in the "old army" came rather infrequently, especially in peacetime.

But now, after 25 years of professional soldiering this Iowa-born Texan who calls Amarillo "home" has achieved the secret ambition of every real soldier in making brigadier general.

General Murphy, former G-1 of the Armored Command at Fort Knox, graduated from West Point in 1918, just ten days before the ill-fated armistice was signed ending the last world war. It was 11 months afterward that he made first lieutenant, while attending Field Artillery School at Ft. Knox, but it was 16 years later before he wore captain's bars.

TOURS GLOBE

In the meantime his duties took him virtually on a Cook's tour of the globe. For three years after the last war (1923-1926) he served abroad with the 8th Field Artillery Battalion. Again in 1935 he left the country for three years service in Hawaii, only this time with the 25th Infantry division as a captain.

Upon completion of his duties there in 1938 General Murphy was selected to attend the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, from which he was graduated the following year.

He became G-1 of Armored Command Aug. 1, 1941, and served in that capacity until April 15 of this year. Within a year and a half after he was made major (1940) he was promoted to colonel at Fort Knox in 1942.

His welcome to the division in desert training was somewhat of a surprise to this scholarly soldier. Arriving at 7th A. D. Headquarters, he found the commanding general with a military band out to greet him. En route from Armored Command headquarters he had been appointed brigadier general.

Thus, his "homecoming" to the "Lucky 7th" was soon made the occasion for a simple yet impressive star-pinning ceremony carried out against the backdrop of California mountains and scorching sands.

Back at Fort Knox the general (then colonel) had just been hoping for assignment to the 7th because he had watched its double-time activation and progress from Armored Command headquarters. Even then he had great interest in what he believes today is the finest armored division in this country.

LEARNED A LOT

Of his work with the 7th Armored he said recently, "I enjoyed my four months of desert training and found maneuvers very interesting. I got more out of it than the boys did, and I think we both learned a hell of a lot."

This modest, efficient general of 45 is a typical American leader in that he keeps himself in top physical condition. When he has time, he likes to go horseback riding. While stationed at Fort Benning as commanding officer of Co. "A" 83rd Field Artillery, he played the No. 2 position on the post championship polo team of 1929.

It was a Texas cowpony that gave him balance and confidence in the saddle as a boy but he learned the military seat at West Pointt. The general also enjoys a good game of golf when time permits.

As befits a man who has been a keen student of military science all his life, his favorite indoor sport is reading. When interviewed by the division public relations reporter he said he was currently enjoying the second volume of "Lee's Lieutenants," by Douglas Southall Freeman. Aside from Time and Life, Readers Digest, and the daily papers, most of his reading is confined to what he terms "professional stuff" such as field and training manuals.

Like many scholars, the general is also a teacher, having taught at Ohio State University as assistant professor of military science and tactics for half a decade between 1930 and 1935.

It's a well-rounded life this new leader of the "Lucky 7th's" Combat Command "A" has led. Scholar teacher, sportsman and military scientist . . . he is all of these. But first and foremost Brigadier General John B. Murphy is a soldier . . . and servant of the people.

Horace Heidt Glee Club Man In 7th Armored

Pvt. John A. Hanson, whose base voice won him a scholarship at the Chicago Conservatory of Music, besides, being an up and coming engineer in the 7th Armored Division, continues to entertain the men as well.

Pvt. Hanson graduated from the Chicago Conservatory of Music in 1935. He has appeared on radio programs both on the C.B.S. and N.B.C. stations in Chicago. He was before his induction a member of Horace Heidt's Glee Club.

Pvt. Hanson is a clerk in the supply room of Headquarters Company, 33rd Armored Engineed Battalion.

It is expected that the nation's requirements for oil will be four and a quarter billion barrels in the first three months of next year.

Bayonet Observes First Anniversary

With this issue, the BAYONET proudly celebrates the inauguration of its second year of publication as we bring forth Volume 2, Number 1.

In making plans for the BAYONET, we were faced with the tremendous task of representing a great diversity of interests. Unlike many more posts scattered through the length and breadth of the land where the ratio of officer personnel is relatively small, the population of Fort Benning is composed of thousands of officers here to attend refresher and advanced courses in the Infantry School as well as officer candidates seeking their commissions. Then too we boast a huge staff of civilian employes and hundreds of women and childdren making up the families of officers and enlisted men stationed here. The latter contribute much to the life of the post, and, since we are a post newspaper, we have with justification regarded them all as members of our great post family, and their activities have been recorded in the columns of the BAYONET.

While making no attempt to hand ourselves a bouquet of orchids, we are proud of the fact that the BAYONET as come to be regarded, among other things, as a post family newspaper, something of which we could not in the past and cannot in the future lose sight. Our circulation has grown considerably since last September 17, another fact of which we are proud.

We sincerely hope that in the year to come we shall be able to make many improvements which will make the BAYONET a bigger and better post newspaper, adequately and accurately reflecting the current history of all components of Fort Benning. We are open to suggestions and sincerely hope that any and all will come forward with constructive criticism which will help us along toward our objective.

The BAYONET takes this opportunity to voice a note of thanks to all contributors who have been so cooperative in helping us along a road which has had its thorns as well as its roses. With their continued cooperation we know we cannot fail.

King Football Makes His Entry

The Bayonet is pleased to sense that the year is at that gorgeous season when cool mornings warmed by hot noon suns become chilly nights and when the national pastime has an infant competitor for the sporting world's attention.

In plainer words we are expectant of a great gridiron season—a season which promises to show us some fine football games at Fort Benning this year.

What may be lacking in campus razzle-dazzle will certainly be made up by good, clean football play on service fields. The class buzzer will be replaced by the Army bugle, and the familiar "football queens" and co-ed cheering section will not be present for thousands of the nation's grid stars this season, but the game will go on.

When the season opens here at Fort Benning, there will be, however, crowds of cheering soldiers—brothers-in-arms of the football gladiators. And there will be color from the military bands, which will replace the uniforms bedecked and beribboned varsity bands led by majorettes.

Many colleges and universities called off football for the duration last year, and many more have done so already this year.

It is up to the services to keep the game alive, and they are doing it.

Back Is The Hunter, Home From The Hills

We're back from the bivouac, boys, we're back from the bivouac. It's cleen coveralls for us and a shower every night, and beer in the evenings. And we've got those bivouac blues.

We sleep in beds, the last ant and spider have been shaken from our blankets. We've got time to write letters, but where is that sign reposing a lonely tent: "Deposit mail here"? We're back from the bivouas, boys, and we've got those bivouac blues.

We tried and tried, but it's no use. We got back "home" late Saturday night, and we had hopes of losing ourselves—but we got back into our very baracks and we could not lose them. Where are those words at the end of a night patrol problem when you got back to point No. 3, thinking it was point No. 4, and you had a decent prospect of spending the night roaming through the final protective lines of a machine gun section? We're back from the bivouac, boys, and we've got those bivouac blues.

The swimming pool is clear and green at the Officers' Club in Fort Benning—but there's a creek out yonder, and its water is a golden yellow and a rope stretches over the creek. All you have to do is give way to primeval instincts: hands and feet right over the middle of the creek, without any apparent reaeson to go either forward of backward, until finally you drop blissfully into the yellow waters—preferably with somebody else's rifle slung around your neck. . . . We're back from bivouac, boys, and we've got those bivouac blues.

There is a village over yonder, and we took and retook it, and we got killed in it. And we searched the church and the hotel and the bank and found nothing but old booby traps in either of them. But there was a bar too, and did they let us search the cellar of the bar?—They did not.

It rains on Agony Hill and what do we do? We go home and get dry. But out there—oh, the pure, unadulterated joy of walking for days on end in overalls soaked in nature's own rain.

A Flat is the road to Norton Court, flat is the road to the gas chamber, flat even seems the road to Agony Hill. But it's over there, boys, that they've got—"Hills, hills, hills, hills, marching up and down again, and there's no discharge in the war."

More Bonds Needed To Crush Huns in Italy

Optimistic Americans who expected a lark in Italy after last week's capitulation by the Italian government have been quickly disillusioned by the apparent determination of the German government to resist Allied occupation of the peninsula.

The Nazis' stiff resistance is however, in our opinion, a blessing in disguise to us Americans. It should teach us that we are not going to win this war in a walk, that we are not going to be marching through Berlin by this Christmas, that we are going to shed plenty of blood and sweat and tears before Italy is completely ours; and that every penny we can scrape together will be needed to back the present and future attacks on Hitler's Europe.

Even the men on the bench . . . the soldiers over here . . . must join in. For while our fellow soldiers are digging, sweating, and bleeding to gain and hold another yard, it's our job to see that they get everything they might need. Nobody is going to want for another tank to support the left flank or a grenade to throw at the enemy. They must get this equipment regardless of what we have to sacrifice at home.

The same day that Italy capitulated, Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau announced plans for a home front push to aid the battle crew . . . the 3rd War Loan Drive—fifteen billion dollars to be raised, largely, in $18.75 and $37.50 purchases between September 9 and October 2. Calling on the Army for the first time Secretary of War Stimson announced that the help of every soldier, private to general, was expected, and needed badly. Mere presence in uniform is not enough . . . we must pour both wealth and energy into the scrap.

But Fort Benning soldiers welcome the opportunity. We can lend $500,000 with ease. Let's give our team another vote of confidence . . . for our buddies overseas . . . make it $1,000,000. And we'll remember that $18.75 and $37.50 purchases are going to win the fight. Give the 3rd War Loan a shove along the way soldier . . . buy an extra war bond today.

Medical Progress Reduces Fatalities

The interval since World War I has brought us many remarkable advances in medicine and surgery, and these advances are now paying our fighting men huge dividends by saving thousands of lives of our wounded in combat throughout our many scattered battlefronts.

Some of these advances are the sulfa drugs, blood plasma and the new aneesthetics, which have contributed greatly in the reduction of our war wounded casualties.

Today we have a different type of warfare, where deadlier weapons are used, such as incendiary bombs, bigger and heavier guns, powerful tanks, and faster planes, and these are causing more numerous and more severe wounds than in any previous war.

Aiding our fighting men, is a better organization of our medical forces in the field, and a better and faster evacuation of our wounded with better and faster administration of first aid. This no doubt is also contributing to the saving of thousands of lives.

In the first World War, the fatality rate was 7.7 per cent. Today with more deadlier weapons used by our enemies we have only a 4 per cent fatality.

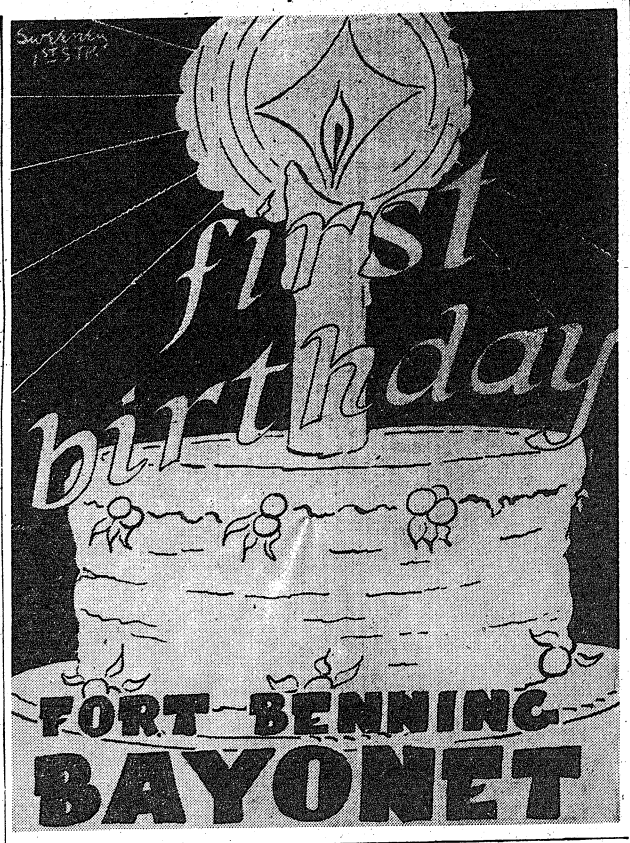
In the Solomons, deaths from abdominal wounds were less than 5 per cent, while in previous wars the mortality rate with this type of wound was 50 per cent or higher.

Wound infections and gas gangrene in this war have been relatively infrequent, largely as a result of routine use of the sulfa drugs. Tetanue toxoid now given to all our armed forces before entering battle, has protected our men against this deadly condition contracted by filthy wounds.

Everybody wants to have a world that works. Working together works. Nothing else will.

The politician is primarily concerned with how he's going to come out in the next election. The statesman thinks first of how the nation will make out in the next generation.

The answer to all the people who are burned up about Washington is—more of them on fire for the nation.



There is one thing more important than having a good man in the White House. And that's having a good man in EVERY house.

The post-war world will be just the same as the pre-war world if the post-war people are.

We will have that brave new world when we are brave and new ourselves.

When people are generous to a fault it is usually their own fault they are generous to.

USO Presents—

HOUSING CAMPAIGN, RELIGIOUS MOVIE, AND VARIETY SHOW

By PFC. SHELDON A. KEITEL

The Traveler's Aid-USO campaign to obtain housing in the Columbus area for servicemen is bearing fruit in that some 200 new rooms have been offered for rent to soldiers and their families, Miss Bunnie Dillashaw, acting director of the TA-USO, announced. She pointed out, however, that many of the rooms have been offered on only a temporary basis while members of a household are on vacation and that the need for permament rooms or apartments is still urgent. . . . The number of applications for housing have not decreased, she said.

* * *

The new USO "troops in transit" lounge will be decorated shortly and will be ready for opening about Oct. 1. . . . Furniture will be selected on the basis of local taste and will reflect the personality of the community . . . In addition an emergency room will be equipped with regulation bed, first air kit and medical supplies.

* * *

Through the efforts of the National Catholic Community Services division of the Ninth Street USO the religious motion picture "The Eternal Gift" will be exhibited at Fort Benning for six days during the latter part of September, Mr. Eugene Bergmann, director, announced. . . . Showings will be on the Main Post, Sand Hill, Harmony Church and at Lawson Field.

While renovations and remodeling at the Salvation Army USO at 1323 Broadway in Columbus, Mrs. Kathleen Barrow, program director, announces she is not planning any major attractions to supplement her program. . . .

There will be, however, a joint swimming party and picnic given with the Phenix City USO Saturday afternoon at the old Phenix City waterworks. . . . Mrs. Barrow can accommodate 15 soldiers from her club, and she cautions men who want to swim to bring along their trunks.

The usual program holds sway with motion pictures Friday night, a Fort Benning dance band Saturday night and Edgar White, pianist, on Sundays as the highlights. . . . The Dunkers' Club and Hostess Hours are big Sunday features.

* * *

Watch for the variety show in the near future at the Phenix City USO. . . . Plans for the program are now being completed, and soldier talent is being solicited. . . . If you can entertain, see or telephone Sgt. Wagner of the Lucky 7th Armored Division at 7527 who will arrange for an audition and book you on the program. . . . Mrs. James Scott, program director, promises a big-time show when the variety show is presented later this month.

This Khaki'd World

By PVT. G. I. GRIPE

Put on your khaki bonnet
With the blue braid upon it;
And we'll hitch old dobbin to the shay.
For now that gas is rationed
Your new car's old-fashioned;
It's the buck-board leads the way.

* * *

Put on those G. I. high boots,
Say goodbye to zoot-suits
Cause you're in the Army till the end;
Quit your belly-aching
It's no time for faking
You're a soldier now, my friend.

—The Shadow.

Sgt. Milton Luban, the sage (hey, and we always thought that was the stuff they put in dressings), of the Regimental Mirror, called to say he was going to the hospital with his back again. Back with the back, he says. Well, says we, they can never accuse you of having a strong back and a weak mind. But he throught it too corny to print in his colyum. But we are always glad to have some bit of jokerie, even if we have to make it up ourselves, so here it is. Hot stuff, eh? Well, if you think you can do better, come in and give it a whirl. We're anxious to get some of you G. I.'s sending us your stuff. And also nonsense. Gets sort of lonesome trying to do this all by myself. . . .

* * *

Tech. Sgt. Dan Brooker of B&C School is always down in the front row when the 176th Hillbillies are scheduled to play at the Patio Grill. And sure enough, before the evening's over, he asks Corp. Britton Tabor to have the boys play "Low and Lonely." Corp. Tabor is beginning to hate the song.

* * *

* * *

A group of Company H men, out in the 124th Infantry, are hurting badly these days. It seems that they found a boat that had sunk in Clear Creek while they were on bivouac. With no little difficulty, they dragged it out and beached it to dry out thoroughly. On their return to the camp site some time later, they took along paint and calking material. But the boat was missing and nobody could figure out what had happened to it until the kitchen crew finally pointed to a blazing fire and one of the kitchen crew remarked cheerfully "boats certainly do burn good, don't they?" Now the boys who worked so hard to get themselves a boat are doing a bit of burning on their own account.

Out in the Third Student Training Regiment, they're pretty proud of Officer Candidate J. M. Robertson, of the 14th Company. He was out on a problem recently and saw a large blacksnake lying on a ledge just above him. Slipping a blank cartridge into his rifle, he advanced cautiously to within a few inches of the snake's head and squeezed the trigger in proper fashion—the explosion, they claim, blew the snake's head off. Not to be recommended, however, in cases of poisonous snakes.

Chaplain's Corner

WHAT'S YOUR TROUBLE?
Chaplain F. M. Thompson

The Old Testament observes that a man is born unto trouble as the sparks fly upward. No need to search the long ago for that bit of information. It is very evident from our birth onward.

* * *

I know the thought is, most of our troubles are imaginary. As the wise man said: "I've had many troubles in my life, but the worst of them never came." And the old lady who always felt bad when she felt good because she knew she would beel bad for feeling good.

* * *

But whether unreal or not, they loom large in the minds of many people, and advice, "Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you," availeth little.

* * *

And some are very real. The mother whose life is wrapped up in a wayward son, daughter; the father who is without work and little ones depending upon him; old folk whose savings have been swept away—these are worthwhile griefs, worries.

* * *

What's the answer?

Always expect the worst and you will be gloriously disappointed.

Mail-Call

Dear Editor:—

We see in the latest of the Boston Tommy opera that the learned gentleman from the Bay State has a much higher talent for writing than for reading or for remembering what he has read.

In his article appearing in last week's Bayonet Boston Tommy took issue with my latter to the editor in criticism of post barbers which was published one day last Spring.

(Editor's Note: — The original letter to this column was used in the Bayonet of May 20, 1943.)

Boston Tommy is wrong in his inference that this writer complained because he was rushed through his haircuts. Goodness, no, it is pleasurable to get in and out of a barber's chair as expeditiously as possible. Ht is wrong if his reference to the feminine attitude toward coiffures was directed toward us.

Furthermore, he is entirely out of pasture if he feels we might like our hair-do's garnished with gadgets and "props of a Flash Gordan cartoon."

Our assertion was simply this: When we desire a haircut, we want just that. We do not wait a long sales spiel on our great need of shamoos or tonics when we know well there is no crying want for them.

We thought the issue closed. Obviously Boston Tommy things otherwise.

Very well, my fine and facetious fellow. Come out from behind the fog bank. Choose your weapons—scissors or razor.

Kay's Husband Says—

HE WINDS UP VACATION COLUMN BY REGISTERING GRIPES ON WOMEN

This is the windup of my stint in substituting for Kay because she'll be back and she can write her own column for next week.

Since I have thought that a few women would read this thing in her absence I intended making this last one a compilation of my gripes about women en masse. You know—why should women complain because men like to read while they eat? Why should a man open an automobile door to let a woman enter and then risk his life by walking into a stream of traffic to enter the other door?

Why do some women look askance when I fail to remove my hat in an elevator which is just as much a public conveyance as a bus? See what I mean? I was going to try to rile women into starting a movement or a crusade.

* * *

No, I'll end it with a serious note. Kay is going to handle women's publicity again for the Bayonet and it moves me to explain that while the G. I. is the basic reader of this paper, we have felt that we must also fill the needs of ALL potential readers—and that includes a lot of women. And because Fort Benning proportionately more officers' wives as readers than does any other camp newspaper.

* * *

I suppose every professional newspaper editor curses the necessity for what he calls women's stuff—the "soc" pages (jargon for society), puerile love serials, cooking pages, advise to the lovelorn and all the rest of it.

Most editors actually feel that women readers have about the same intelligence as men readers, if not more, but circulation figures don't lie and no one dares break with tradition. As a consequence they go on printing stuff for women which in many instances is nauseous even to the women's editor or the "soc" editor.

Well, the Bayonet will continue to cater to women, but as we have from the start, we'll do it on what we think is a sound basis. Luncheons, teas, incidental marriages, who's giving a party for whom, fashions and all the traditional women's interest fare is out.

* * *

But the Bayonet recognizes that among the officers' wives and among the enlisted men's wives there are activities which are a vital part of Fort Benning. The Red Cross volunteers and the Staff Assistants, the Grey Ladies, the Motor Corps, all efforts through clubs to bring the women of military personnel together for worthwhile activities such as the nursery school which has made is posible for mothers to work for the Red Cross—these things will bring a salute from the Bayonet.

* * *

We hope you will pardon us if we add that it is pleasing to be told that our recognition of these activities has furthered the causes we have mentioned. It is further evidence that the Bayonet has become a worthwhile addition to the post and that all our efforts are not in vain and that our judgment is not always wrong.

I have come to feel that the army wife generally, there are exceptions of course, is a pretty swell person who can hold her chin up, take knocks, display her independence, stand even waiting in line a the PX for meat, gather her children up as her husbands sails overseas into possible death and accept her lot courageously, and for the most part stand the equal of any other woman in any other group.

That's a lot for me to say in praise of women. But what I wanted to explain is that we on the Bayonet feel that way and that is why we try intelligently to publish legitimate women's news. Take over, Kay!

Sgt. McDonald's Basket

COL. SWAMPWATER PINCH-HITS AS MAC GOLDBRICKS IN HOSPITAL

By T. P. SWAMPWATER
Colonel, Infantry

Due to Sergeant McDonald's unpredictable absence it has occurred to me, Colonel T. P. Swampwater, to conduct his column for him and in my amiable military manner to try to improve upon it.

To you uninforme dreaders who suspect that Sergeant McDonald has gone over the hill, let me take this occasion to clear up such an erroneous conclusion.

* * *

The truth of the matter is, my official aide had finally managed to goldbrick his way into the station hospital. And, if I may add, during the past several weeks, I have noticed that he has ben extremely interested in the "cute nurses" he has encountered at the main post theatre and other points of interest, but by the immortal "shades of Salome" it never occurred to me that the Sergeant would actually go to the extreme of getting sent to the hospital just so he could be near them.

* * *

This conduct on his part has undoubtedly been due to the strict discipline and manner of obtaining objective is that he has been imbued wit hwhile under my command.

During the past several months there has been a tendency on the part of the majors and lieutenant colonels to concentrate too much on illuminated belt buckles.

* * *

Such "sense of neatness" constantly held before the junior officers and enlisted men is indeed refreshing, but we should also add a word of warning to the field officers who salute their subordinates by pointing to their own right eyebrows with a rather lax forefinger. This as we all know does not invoke good discipline.

* * *

Men who have been making this mistake have also been allowing their chests to droop. A factor which causes me to remind you that no matter how shiny your belt buckle is nobody can see it if your bay window droops down over it.

On the asset side of the ledger I find most of the conduct extremely amiable and full of promise.

Naturally such minor divergencies as young officers like Lt. Jericho sneaking off to the ice cream parlor during ten minute breaks can be corrected by perseverance and raising the voice.

In conclusion, let me say I think all military personnel should chew more imported chewing gum and share their peanut brittle with all their friends. Such conduct will be beneficial to all military morale and enable both young and old to be more amiable in their conduct of the war.

People who expect a superman to solve their problems have been taking the comics too seriously—and their own responsibilities not seriously enough.

CHAPEL IN THE GROVE

The sky above is the gilded dome,
The trees are the chapel walls—
And about the spot where I kneel to pray
Are the proud and garnished halls.

The lights that glisten from heights above
And shine of that altar fair,
Are the sunbeams falling from Heaven,
Piercing the morning air.

The choir that sings each Sabbath morn
Are the birds in the treetops high,
The organ that swells above their note
Is the wind with its soft low cry.

The songs we sing are the beautiful hymns
That my mother taught to be—
Like, "Jesus Lover of My Soul"
And, "Nearer My God To Thee."

'Tho' I leave my chapel and wander far,
At the end of each weary day—
Those leafy walls will rise again
Wherever I stop to pray.
