I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Brigadier General Clifford Bluemel, O2642, United States Army, displayed extraordinary heroism and gallantry in action on Bataan Peninsula, Philippine Islands, on 6, 7, and 8 April 1942. At a time when all knew how hopeless the situation was, when his battle positions were disintegrating under the relentless pressure of enemy ground and air attacks and loyal and gallant men attempting to counterattack were so weak from hunger and disease they could not advance, he continued to resist. Braving enemy missiles, exposed to capture from infiltrating groups, ignoring his own physical condition, for 3 days, and at the end alone, he traversed his area, organizing a small group of resistance here, locating a field gun there, and never admitting the final moment of defeat was at hand. In General Bluemel's conduct was epitomized all the splendid American military traditions displayed by the defenders of Bataan.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Joseph E. Bastion, O2805, United States Army. May 1943 to June 1946.

Major General Charles E. Hurdis, O5229 (then brigadier general), United States Army. February 1944 to April 1946.

Brigadier General Charles B. Spruit, O8894, United States Army. September 1944 to May 1945.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Second Lieutenant Harry J. Dawe, O401480, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands.

During an air raid on 25 March 1942, Lieutenant Dawe, upon receiving information that a bomb had set fire to a 75-mm ammunition dump, immediately left the shelter of a bomb-proof tunnel and proceeded to the dump, picked up burning boxes of 75-mm ammunition, and threw them over the cliff into the water below. Lieutenant Dawe, with disregard of his own personal safety, remained at the dump until all burning boxes of ammunition had been removed.

Captain Jerry G. Toth, O23065, Infantry, United States Army, a member of the 45th Infantry (Philippine Scouts), distinguished himself by gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands. On many occasions he disregarded his own safety in a demonstration of aggressive leadership, especially on or about 7 April 1942, when he assumed the initiative and gallantly organized and led scattered groups against greatly superior enemy forces. His disdain for danger in his effort to fulfill his self-assumed mission resulted in the loss of his life, but in material gain for the Bataan defense. Captain Toth brought great credit upon himself and upheld the fine traditional ideals of the military profession.

Second Lieutenant Lee C. Tucker, O890142, Coast Artillery Corps, Army, of the United States, distinguished himself in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 5-6 May 1942. During extremely heavy artillery and air bombardment of Battery Way, Lieutenant Tucker, acting as emplacement officer, behaved with conspicuous gallantry. Despite the deadly fire of the enemy and heavy casualties in the pit, he continued to energetically direct rapid and effective fire against the enemy. With complete disregard for his personal safety, he removed the wounded while under fire. When casualties reduced the strength of the battery to a number below the operating minimum, Lieutenant Tucker assisted personally in loading, laying, and firing the guns. He continued to work with lead, and inspire his men, until he himself was seriously wounded on the morning of 6 May 1942. Lieutenant Tucker's intrepid performance contributed greatly to the volume and accuracy of the devastating fire the battery poured upon Japanese landing craft and their beachhead on Corregidor.

IV--SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Staff Sergeant Anderson C. Dark (Army serial No. 38128170), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company K, 339th Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action near Bologna, Italy, on 7 October 1944. When his platoon, after capturing an important forward position, lost contact with its company, he volunteered unhesitatingly for the highly dangerous mission of getting through to the company position, which was then under heavy attack. Sergeant Dark courageously infiltrated through enemy lines alone in the dark, successfully located the company, aided in repelling the attackers, and then gallantly led it forward to the relief of his platoon.

Captain Joseph J. Reardon (then warrant officer), United States Marine Corps, displayed gallantry in action on 13 April 1942 following a heavy Japanese artillery barrage upon Battery James, Fort Mills, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When personnel of the battery were trapped as they sought shelter in nearby tunnels, he volunteered readily, although the position was under close enemy observation and steady fire, to rescue his comrades. Disregarding the imminent danger of collapsing walls and roofs, Captain Reardon heroically entered the tunnels, assisted in extricating trapped soldiers, and gave first aid to the wounded.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Quentin L. Johnson, O1303512 (then second Lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 134th Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy in France on 15 July 1944. His company had been held up by an enemy strong point so located as to bring enfilade fire along most of its front. Lieutenant Johnson led a patrol approximately 150 yards through intense artillery fire to a location directly behind this strong point. Then, jumping up, he ran shouting toward the enemy position, hurling grenades directly into the strong point. Without pausing, he jumped into the enemy position and bayoneted the two German soldiers who were still alive. Lieutenant Johnson's heroic actions killed approximately 10 Germans and completely neutralized the enemy strong point.

V. SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Silver Star awarded to Major General Albert M. Jones, as published in General Orders 168, United States Army Forces, Pacific, 1 May 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded to him by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Albert M. Jones, O3186 (then brigadier general), United States Army, displayed gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, from 1 to 11 February 1942. General Jones, as commanding general of the left subsector of the I Philippine Corps, exhibited courage and leadership of the highest order in taking personal charge of operations during the heroic struggle around the "Big Tuol Pocket" and for the Tuol and Cotar River Basins. During this entire period, General Jones either remained at the most advanced command posts, which were under fire frequently, personally directing the operations or was visiting the actual front lines, which were within 50 to 100 yards of the enemy. General Jones' magnificent display of courage and leadership during this critical period so raised the morale of his green and unseasoned troops, whose morale was at low ebb, that they not only repulsed bloodily the enemy's repeated rescue attacks along the Tuol River Front, but destroyed the remainder of the enemy force in the "Big Tuol Pocket" on 12 February 1942.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel W. George Devens, O15903, General Staff Corps (Ordnance Department), United States Army. October 1943 to November 1945.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

- Major Fred M. Banks, O209378, Transportation Corps, Army of the United States. May 1942 through July 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Carl D. Bowen, O108770 (then colonel), Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. December 1941 to August 1946.
- Colonel James B. Edmunds, O10848, General Staff Corps, United States Army. July 1945 to June 1946.
- Brigadier General Grandison Gardner, O10193, United States Army. July 1945 through March 1946.
- Technical Sergeant Jesse G. Harris, Jr., (Army Serial No. 33004423), Detached Enlisted Men's List, Army of the United States. December 1941 to July 1944.
- Colonel David W. Heiman, O17094, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. September 1945 to August 1946.
- Lieutenant Commander Peter W. Hogue, United States Naval Reserve. July 1944 to December 1945.
- Commander Albert J. Hoskinson, K100011, United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. June 1942 to April 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Louis G. Kelly, O186474, Ordnance Department, Army of the United States. October 1945 to May 1946.
- Colonel Cedric W. Lewis, O3687, Signal Corps, United States Army. March 1942 through January 1945.
- Major Marvin Long, O919305, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. January 1943 through December 1945.
- Major August J. Mack, O167085, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. 6 August 1943 to 24 June 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel William E. Plummer, O261205, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Dudley J. Scholten, O900449, Air Corps, Army of the United States. May 1942 to November 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Aubrey L. Thomas, O507711, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. February 1944 to September 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Conway W. Weikert, O370269, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to September 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Colonel Theodore J. Sledge, O5817, Infantry, United States Army. 12 March to 6 May 1942.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General European Theater, to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Clarence E. Barnes, O227256, Infantry, Army of the United States. September 1944 to August 1945.

VIII. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major General Oliver P. Edgecumbe, British Army. February to May 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated, was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Aquinaldo José Senna Campos, Brazilian Army. July 1944 to July 1945.

Squadron Leader Edward C. O. Heath, Royal New Zealand Air Force. August 1942 to October 1945.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Rogatien Pusterle de Cidrac, First French Army. 15 August to 15 November 1944.

IX. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for heroic achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Adam J. Hrostowsky, O795056, Air Corps, Army of the United States. On 12 April 1944, while serving as pilot on a B-17 type aircraft during a tactical mission over Austria, Lieutenant Hrostowsky's aircraft suffered a direct hit from antiaircraft fire which seriously damaged the airplane. Lieutenant Hrostowsky immediately ordered his crew to abandon the airplane and, displaying great courage and exceptional flying ability, remained at the controls of the crippled aircraft in order to facilitate their safe escape. The heroic conduct of Lieutenant Hrostowsky, his utter disregard for personal safety, and his unstinting devotion to duty reflect great credit upon himself and the Army Air Forces.

X. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for heroic achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Staff Sergeant Jerry F. Girardi (Army serial No. 13093143), Air Corps, Army of the United States. On 25 August 1944, while serving as radio operator on a B-24 type aircraft, during a tactical mission over Lubeck, Germany, Sergeant Girardi's aircraft suffered a direct hit from enemy antiaircraft fire which seriously damaged the aircraft and rendered the intercommunications system useless. Without regard for personal safety, Sergeant Girardi removed his parachute in order to get to the waist position, convey the pilot's order to abandon ship, and to do what was possible to check a raging fire. Only after this was done did Sergeant Girardi return to the flight deck, put on his parachute, and escape the crippled airplane. The courage and coolness in the face of great danger displayed by Sergeant Girardi reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

XI. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1942 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Staff Sergeant Roy Coggins (Army serial No. 39428998), Cavalry, Army of the United States, as mess sergeant, Troop D, Eighth Cavalry Regiment, displayed outstanding heroism in Omiya, Honshu, Japan, on 31 May 1946. Hearing an explosion in the kitchen where two Japanese laborers were painting, he rushed immediately to the smoke and flame-filled staircase leading there, and, without hesitation and with utter disregard for his own safety, made his way swiftly down into the burning room, where he found a badly burned Japanese, whom he carried to safety. After calling for an ambulance, Sergeant Coggins returned courageously to the gas-filled kitchen, opened the windows, and aided in putting out the flames.

XII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Captain William F. Applegarth, O406705, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. August 1943 to November 1944.

Major Joseph F. Bangham Jr., O905466, Air Corps, Army of the United States. January 1945 to March 1946.

General de Brigada Oswaldo Cordeiro de Farias, Brazilian Army. November 1944 to May 1945.

First Lieutenant Gerald G. Gille, O676373, Air Corps, Army of the United States. April 1944 to April 1945.

Colonel Robert H. Givens, Jr., O256287, General Staff Corps (Field Artillery), Army of the United States. December 1942 to March 1943.

Captain Richard F. Hedrick, O890101, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. January to April 1942.

Sergeant Charles Hochberg (Army serial No. 32807346), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. April to September 1945.

Technical Sergeant Charles R. Kaelin (Army serial No. 6658007), Air Corps, United States Army. November 1942 to August 1945.

Corporal John T. Nelson (Army serial No. 14033863) (then private), Coast Artillery, Army of the United States. 1 March 1942.

First Lieutenant Marshall T. Smith, O890641, Ordnance Department, Army of the United States. December 1943 to May 1944.

Major Henry S. Wilson, O246336 (then captain), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. 7 to 22 December 1941.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Major Bienvenido M. Alba, O16939 (then lieutenant colonel), Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. 8 April 1942.

WASHINGTON 25, D. C., 1 October 1946

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT—Sangamon Ordnance Plant, Springfield, Illinois, discontinued ----- I
BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units ----- II

I. MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.—Effective as of 10 September 1946, the Sangamon Ordnance Plant (industrial facility), Springfield, Illinois, is discontinued as a military establishment.

[AG 680.1 (20 Sep 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 133d Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 3–4 October 1944, while participating in an attack on Mount Del Galletto, the village of Le Croci, and the formidable heights of Monte Laggio and Monte Venere, Italy. Instructed to advance northward over Mount Del Galletto, through the village of Le Croci, take Monte Laggio, with Monte Venere, as its ultimate objective, the 1st Battalion, 133d Infantry Regiment, moving forward at dawn on the morning of 3 October 1944, made its way quickly through sporadic resistance over Mount Del Galletto and entered the town of Le Croci. Advancing relentlessly, the unit soon encountered a determined enemy force at the foot of Monte Laggio. The enemy, using this heavily wooded hill as a strong point in his main line of resistance, resolutely defended the position. As intense firefight ensued throughout the daylight hours, with extremely accurate hostile mortar and artillery fire impeding the progress of the attack. During the night, the battle raged unabated and, in the early morning hours of the next day, enemy troops made a fanatical counterattack, which, though successfully defeated by one company of the battalion, resulted in numerous casualties. By dawn on 4 October, the battalion, though depleted by the heavy fighting of the previous night, reorganized and the forward elements cleared the crest of Monte Laggio. Facing them now was still another obstacle, a coverless terrain feature designated as Hill 947. Securing armored support, the battalion awaited the moment to attack and, after the tanks severely shelled the hill at close range, the infantry troops attempted to rush the position across 150 yards of open ground. Meeting intense machine-gun and sniper fire, the battalion was forced to withdraw to the cover of the woods to again wait for the tanks to shell the hill. After 15 minutes of concentrated fire by the armor, the foot troops attempted to assault and, despite the withering fire which raked the barren ground eventually swept up the hill, overrunning all the enemy's positions. After clearing Hill 947, the 1st Battalion, 33d Infantry Regiment, its ranks badly depleted by casualties and its commander and some of its officers wounded, made another lightning thrust and swarmed across the remaining 500 yards of open terrain to the base of Monte Venere. Again reorganizing, they pressed forward dauntlessly and step by step made their way in a vicious attack, securing the final objective, Monte Venere, after 2 days and 1 night of bitter and determined fighting. This accomplishment broke all organized hostile resistance in the area, and the courage and bravery demonstrated by the officers and men of the 1st Battalion, 133d Infantry Regiment, against some of the best troops of the enemy, exemplified the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 259, Headquarters Mediterranean Theater of Operations, 5 October 1945.)

2. The 3d Battalion, 1st Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding gallantry and extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy at Maffin Bay, Dutch New Guinea, during the period 23 to 29 June 1944. On 23 June 1944, while the bulk of the 3d Battalion, 1st Infantry Regiment, was preparing for an amphibious envelopment of Lone Tree Hill, a large carrying party from Company L scaled the sheer cliffs on the northeast side and scrambled over the boulder-strewn ledges to open a supply line to 20th Infantry troops holding the crest of the hill. Accomplishing its initial mission, despite high casualties caused by intense mortar and machine-gun fire that followed it up the hill, the carrying party turned to find the supply line closed by large groups of bypassed Japs. Assisted by heavy machine guns of Company M, assault teams from the remainder of Company L and Battalion Headquarters Company blasted a path through the strong enemy positions to reopen the supply trail. Throughout the remainder of the action, Company L secured the supply line to the top of the hill. By destroying strongly entrenched enemy positions located in almost inaccessible caves and rock crevices, knocking out 75-mm mountain guns, heavy mortars, and machine guns, by use of flame throwers, rocket launchers, gasoline, grenades, and demolitions, this company also cleared the enemy from the entire Rocky Point area. On 24 June 1944, the balance of the 3d Battalion was landed on the narrow beach west of the hill under intense artillery, mortar, and machine-gun fire from enemy positions carved out of the rocky hillside. Assault troops dashed across the beach to scale the clay bank that led to marshy flat land from which rose the sheer cliffs of Lone Tree Hill, but grazing fire from machine-gun positions dug in at the base of the cliffs, plus accurate mortar and artillery fire, forced them back to the shelter of the ledge. Crowded on the shallow beach and lying under the protecting clay bank, the troops were subjected to constant mortar and artillery fire. One enemy shell knocked out an entire mortar section, others sank or damaged several landing craft, including two which were evacuating wounded. Aid men and members of the beach party constantly exposed themselves to enemy fire in order to save the wounded. During 24 and 25 June 1944, the assault platoons made several attempts to advance beyond the bank, only to be driven back after small gains by withering fire. Mortar observers of both the rifle and the heavy weapons companies braved the constant enemy fire to take up positions on the exposed ledge and directed heavy and accurate fire on the enemy emplacements. On 26 June 1944, Companies I and K again went over the clay bank in an all-out assault on the enemy pillboxes, emplacements, and cave positions that rimmed the hill. Momentarily halted by the intense artillery, mortar, and machine-gun fire, the assault platoons surged forward in a two-pronged attack that carried them across the marshes to the base of the cliffs and up the steep slopes of Rocky Point, where contact was established with Company L. After scaling caves, destroying emplacements, and killing snipers in the by-passed areas, the 3d Battalion continued the assault on 28 and 29 June 1944, destroying scattered pockets of resistance and overrunning strong points until the entire Lone Tree Hill area was secure. In the drive to secure Lone Tree Hill, the 3d Battalion, 1st Infantry Regiment accounted for 297 counted enemy dead, plus an estimated 280 killed and buried in 36 demolished caves. Three 57-mm and five 75-mm mountain guns, 2 machine guns, 6 mortars, and numerous other weapons were destroyed or captured. The casualties of the battalion totalled 56 killed and 95 wounded. The tenacity and gallantry displayed by the men of the 3d Battalion, 1st Infantry Regiment in holding a narrow beachhead under constant and accurate enemy fire and storming strongly defended cliffs against the fanatic and well-entrenched enemy were in the highest traditions of the American soldier and reflect great honor on the United States Army. (General Orders 245, Headquarters 6th Infantry Division, 30 December 1945.)

3. The 60th Troop Carrier Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in the Mediterranean Theater of Operations from 28 March to 15 September 1944. In March 1944, when Allied missions, attempting to organize effective fighting forces in Yugoslavia, Greece, and Albania, called for an immediate, substantial, and steady flow of desperately needed supplies, this vital task was assigned to the 60th Troop Carrier Group. Overcoming almost insurmountable obstacles in accomplishing this important assignment, the 60th Troop Carrier Group distinguished itself through an outstanding performance of duty clearly exceptional in its nature, method, and degree of achievement. All missions had to be flown at night in unarmed and unarmored C-47 type aircraft over unfamiliar enemy occupied areas, where hostile antiaircraft fire and night fighters were expected and frequently encountered. Guided night after night by skillful navigators to drop zones pinpointed amidst towering mountains and ridges, alert and proficient crews, flying at dangerously low altitudes, released packages containing carefully apportioned supplies of arms, food, and medicine. Displaying unflinching courage and superior flying ability, group pilots landed skillfully on and took off in hours of darkness, often by instruments, from small hastily improvised landing strips hidden in deep valleys and under constant threat of enemy ground action. Making more than 600 such hazardous landings, airplanes of the 60th Troop Carrier Group unloaded quantities of critically needed supplies too bulky for parachuting, including jeeps and mules, evacuating on the return trip many Allied airmen, wounded partisans, and civilian refugees. From 28 March to 15 September, this group, flying more than 15,000 hours and completing nearly 3,000 missions, delivered more than 7,000 tons of weapons, ammunition, clothing, food, and medicine, dropped millions of news and propaganda leaflets, and evacuated thousands of military and civilian personnel. Despite weather, terrain, enemy night fighters, antiaircraft fire, and hostile ground action, which together exacted a toll of 10 aircraft destroyed and 34 combat crew members killed or missing, the 60th Troop Carrier Group steadily maintained its resupply service throughout this period, successfully sustaining highly effective resistance in the Balkan areas. The gallantry, self-sacrifice, and outstanding proficiency in combat displayed by the personnel of the 60th Troop Carrier Group in these operations reflect great credit on themselves and the military service of the United States. (General Orders 233, Headquarters Twelfth Air Force, 12 November 1944.)

4. The 143d Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion is cited for extraordinary heroism in armed conflict with the enemy from 18 to 24 December 1944. During this period, the battalion was charged with the defense of an important Allied city at the beginning of the Ardennes counterattack. When the enemy threatened to engulf Allied installations, the officers and men of the 143d Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion assumed an antitank role, successfully stemming a determined enemy armored attack after adjacent infantry and armored units had been forced to withdraw. Despite the severity of the attack, the members of the 143d Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion remained steadfastly to their posts with indomitable courage and tenacity of purpose, fighting the enemy on the ground, in the air, and shoulder to shoulder with the infantry during one of the most critical junctures in operations against the enemy in the Ardennes salient. The heroism and devotion to duty displayed by the personnel of the entire 143d Anti-aircraft Artillery Gun Battalion was indicative of an esprit de corps in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 206, Headquarters Ninth Air Force, 24 November 1945.)

5. The 189th Field Artillery Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 13 September 1943 at Salerno, Italy. During the first bitter 4-day battle on 9-12 September 1943, for establishment of the Salerno beachhead, success of the venture had not as yet been assured. The most critical day of the entire operation came on 13 September 1943, when the enemy launched its heaviest counterattacks. Success was within the enemy's grasp when he annihilated infantry elements holding the vital Sele-Calore Rivers corridor. The 189th Field Artillery Battalion, in position near the junction of the two rivers, stood alone between the strong enemy force and the beaches. As the enemy moved to the attack, the 189th Field Artillery Battalion formed a defensive line manned by the antitank platoon, machine gunners, cooks, truck drivers, ammunition handlers, clerks, and spare cannoneers. The Germans reached the river line and attacked in force with rifles, machine guns, mortars, tank fire, and artillery, but the 189th Field Artillery Battalion held fast. From 1800 hours until dark (2200 hours), the enemy attacked continuously in an attempt to overrun the battalion's position, but by grim determination and indomitable fighting spirit, the battalion repulsed all enemy assaults. The howitzer crews delivered almost continuous fire, mostly by direct laying and at very close range. By 2230 hours, the enemy admitted defeat and withdrew. The individual courage, gallantry, and esprit de corps displayed by the officers and men of the 189th Field Artillery Battalion exemplify the highest traditions of the military service. Successful accomplishment of an infantry role by the battalion prevented a disastrous and complete break-through and made possible the ultimate success of the Salerno Campaign. WAR DEPARTMENT

BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in General Orders 13, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 23 January 1946 are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 16th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 29 July to 6 August 1945. As a part of a specially trained and equipped force charged with the obliteration of the enemy's capacity to produce oil, it struck devastating and crippling blows on the Japanese oil industry. Its B-29 aircraft were equipped with a recently developed radar bombing device requiring highly trained crews on the ground and in the air. To allow for a heavier bomb load and increased speed, each aircraft was stripped of all defensive fire power except three .50-caliber guns in the tail. Attacking high priority oil targets 1,500 miles over great expanses of ocean, through extensive areas of adverse weather, the 16th Bombardment Group (VH) struck at night, unarmored and unescorted and in defiance of enemy antiaircraft fire and fighters, with such precision, accuracy, and skill that each assigned target during this period was left a heap of wreckage. On the night of 28 July, the Shimotsu oil refinery, an important refinery of crude petroleum, was blasted and virtually destroyed. Storage facilities for 927,000 barrels of oil were wrecked and 1,158,000 cubic feet or 90 percent of the original gasometer capacity was gutted. So accurately did the crews of the 16th Bombardment Group (VH) utilize their revolutionary equipment, that radar scope photos revealed 100 percent of the plotted tracks of their aircraft passing squarely over the target. The unerring night raiders of the 16th Bombardment Group (VH) struck again on 1 August, this time at the Mitsubishi oil refinery, an installation of the great petroleum complex at Kawasaki and of vital importance to Japan's continued conduct of the war. Braving heavy flak defenses, which necessitated maximum compressibility, 95 percent of the group's aircraft which were plotted split the target with their bomb runs. This mainstay of Japan's war machine crumbled into a tangled mass and was rendered completely inoperative under such technique and persistent accuracy by the bombers. Continuing its operations, the 16th Bombardment Group (VH) struck again on the night of 5 August at the Ube coal liquefaction company, one of Japan's leading producers of synthetic oil. Bombing at an altitude of 10,000 to 10,400 feet through an undercast which completely covered the target area, and in the face of enemy aircraft attacks and heavy antiaircraft fire, the airplanes located and completely destroyed the plant. Once again plots of the attacking aircraft showed that 97 percent of the force had bisected the target, and the damage wrought was so complete that a great part of the plant was sunk beneath the level of the sea. Realizing the strategic importance of their assignment, ground personnel of the 16th Bombardment Group (VH) performed their duties under difficult conditions, with inspiring initiative, untiring effort, and selfless devotion to duty. The combined accomplishments of air and ground crews in the period cited contributed greatly to the destruction of the major oil refining and storage capacity of Japan and drastically reduced its productive power and ability to continue the war, thereby bringing great honor to the United States Army Air Forces and to the entire military service.

2. The 330th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 3 July 1945. As part of a striking force charged with the destruction of three vitally important industrial areas in the Home Islands of Japan, it accomplished its mission with a degree of success seldom achieved in bombing operations and contributed importantly to the eventual destruction of Japanese war potential and morale. Because demolition and combustion of the targets required a type of incendiary bomb which could not be aimed accurately from high altitudes, the group was briefed to attack at medium altitude, thus becoming vulnerable to enemy fighter attacks, as well as to devastating antiaircraft fire. Adverse weather conditions not only added to the hazards and difficulty of the bombing operation, but compelled reliance on instruments in flying over the vast distance of ocean between the home base on Guam and the targets. Flying at night, often through unfavorable weather and without escort, this group searched out its targets by instrument on three successive missions and struck them with such devastating accuracy as to accomplish virtual obliteration of the industrial area objectives. In the single strike of 3 July 1945, 74 percent of the entire built-up industrial section of Tokushima, on the Japanese home island of Shikoku, was destroyed. The strike served notice on the enemy that no region contributing to the war strength of Japan could hope to be spared from the methodical and unrelenting attack of the B-29s. Forty-eight hours later, on the night of 5-6 July 1945, the 330th Bombardment Group (VH) struck the hydroelectric power center of Kofu, 20 miles northwest of Fujiyama. This source of power was permanently eliminated as a target and two-thirds of the industrial region was leveled in this magnificent demonstration of determination and bombing skill. Finally, on the night of 9 July, the industrial area was a heap of rubble and ashes by the attack of the 330th Bombardment Group (VH). The consummate skill shown by the combat crews was similarly and strikingly evident in the group's maintenance personnel, who, though constantly hampered by a shortage of tools, replacement parts, and general repair facilities, often worked up to 18 hours per day during this period to keep their aircraft at the peak of mechanical excellence. The outstanding achievement of the 330th Bombardment Group (VH) during this period of air operations show an unremitting devotion to duty, singular valor and determination, and exceptional professional skill, reflecting great credit on the personnel of the 330th Bombardment Group (VH), the United States Army Air Forces, and the entire military service.

3. The 331st Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 22 to 29 July 1945. During this period, the 331st Bombardment Group (VH), part of a force assigned the mission of destroying the Japanese petroleum industry, struck crippling and devastating blows at enemy petroleum installations with the aid of a recently developed radar bombing instrument. The attacks were pressed into the heart of the enemy homeland in unescorted B-29 aircraft which had been stripped of all defensive armament, except three .50-caliber machine guns in the tail. On the night of 22 July 1945, the 331st Bombardment Group (VH) attacked the Ube coal liquefaction plant at Ube, one of Japan's leading producers of synthetic oil. With the shipping blockade virtually cutting off the Japanese from crude oil, the Ube installation and its synthetic oil production were of prime importance to the enemy's war effort. Units of this bombardment group, in the face of Japanese fighters and antiaircraft fire, dropped their bombs, smashing storage facilities, pipe stills, conveyors, and other essential equipment. Radar scope photographs showed that 100 percent of the aircraft plotted on the bomb run had passed directly over the target, a testimony to the remarkable ability and coordination of crew members in using the new radar set. On the night of 25 July 1945, the 331st Bombardment Group (VH) attacked the Mitsubishi-Hayama Petroleum Complex at Kawasaki, the heart of Japan's industrial section. Anti-aircraft defenses guarding these refineries were the heaviest in the Empire. Fighter attack again was imminent. Weather was bad. Yet the radar bombing of this unit destroyed more than 700,000 barrels of storage capacity and wrecked industrial buildings, iso-octane units and other installations vital to an enemy already in serious need of aviation fuel. Three nights later, on 28 July, the 331st Bombardment Group (VH) made another attack over long stretches of water and through unfavorable weather conditions. This time, they bombed the Shimotsu oil refinery at Shimotsu, guarded by fighters and flak and hidden by natural terrain features. The refinery, housing some of the most modern petroleum equipment in Japan, was almost destroyed completely and reconnaissance showed that it was beyond repair. Made at great distances from the home base of the 331st Bombardment Group (VH), all of these attacks involved fatiguing and dangerous overwater flying, which tested to the limit the endurance, skill, and courage of aircrews. Adverse weather, enemy fighter attacks, and anti-aircraft barrages were constant hazards, and the response of aircrews under these circumstances manifested the spirit of the total war against Japan. Ground personnel of the 331st Bombardment Group (VH) displayed unusual willingness, ability, and initiative in maintaining an organization capable of dealing severe blows to the enemy. The achievements of the 331st Bombardment Group (VH), during this period, contributed greatly to the destruction of the major oil refining and storage capacity of Japan and drastically reduced the power and ability of the enemy to continue the war, thereby bringing great honor to the United States Army Air Forces and to the entire military service.

4. The 497th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy for the period 26 July to 2 August 1945. During this crucial culminating phase of the air offensive against Japan, this group participated in three crushing attacks within a period of 6 days against strategic enemy industrial centers producing components for the desperately beset Japanese war machine, attacks which played a great part in finally shattering the enemy's will to resist. On the night of 26 July 1945, thirty-three B-29 aircraft of the 497th Bombardment Group (VH) flew the hazardous 1,500 miles from Saipan to bomb industrial targets in the military and light metals center of Matsuyama. Attacking individually from levels of 11,000 to 12,000 feet, the aircraft, relying on radar to bomb through a partial undercast, delivered decisive blows on the objectives. Matsuyama was virtually eliminated as a target as a result of the attack by this and by other groups of the 73d Bombardment Wing, and 73 percent of the industrial area was left a ruin of rubble and ashes. With scarcely a breathing spell after this mission, 36 crews of the 497th Bombardment Group (VH) set out in coordination with other groups on the night of 27-28 July 1945, to deliver an assault on the urban industrial area of Ichinomiya, one of the strategic satellite towns of the Nagoya industrial complex. Flying at altitudes of 13,000 to 18,000 feet, the combat crews bombed by radar through an almost complete undercast with such excellent results that 75 percent of the production center was destroyed completely. Radar controlled enemy anti-aircraft fire failed to deter the crews of the group from carrying through deliberate and remarkably accurate bombing runs. In their third combat strike in 6 days, on the night of 1 August 1945, the 497th Bombardment Group (VH) sent an almost unprecedented maximum force of forty-seven B-29s, carrying incendiaries and flying at altitudes of 12,000 to 13,000 feet, against the industrial area of Toyama, a center of aluminum, ballbearing, and special steel production. Virtually the entire target was destroyed in an all-time high record of bombing performance, 99.5 percent of the industrial area was totally devastated. The Toyama industries were erased with a single blow from the list of possible bombing objectives. Throughout the missions of this period, the air crews of the 497th Bombardment Group (VH) faced the ever present hazards of long overwater flights and of ditching in unknown ocean areas the resistance of a desperate enemy and the added mounting strain of unrelenting strike after strike with a minimum of physical recuperation. Similarly, the ground personnel, laboring under the greatest pressure, wrought miracles of hard work with outstanding ingenuity and selfless devotion to duty to place the group's aircraft in readiness to fly again, despite operational and battle damage. The heroic efforts of both air and ground crews of the 497th Bombardment Group (VH) to carry out their mission of unceasing destruction of the enemy's power and will to wage war reflects great honor on themselves and the United States Army Air Forces.

5. The 498th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 1 to 7 June 1945. As superfortresses based in the Marianas entered the second and critical phase of air operations against Japan—the destruction of its urban industrial areas—this group on 1 June lead a daring and highly dangerous daylight incendiary attack on Japan's second largest city, Osaka, and succeeded in helping to devastate more than 3 square miles of vitally important industrial area. Over 1,500 miles of ocean wastes, thirty-nine B-29 of the group were airborne and thirty-seven of them fought their way through intense and accurate flak and the savage attacks of thirty-five enemy fighter airplanes to reach their objective. Each airplane was loaded with more than 12,000 pounds of incendiary bombs and the gallant group, with the loss of but one aircraft, successfully fought off the attackers and skillfully bored through the flak and the ever varying cloud conditions to the industrial target area to drop their bombs. The dogged determination and extraordinary bravery and skill of the air crews accounted for 1 enemy airplane destroyed and the successful completion of the mission, despite that fact that 21 of the group's airplanes were damaged. Four days later, on June 5, the 498th Bombardment Group (VH), again at full strength, struck at Kobe, another of Japan's industrial nerve centers, carrying thirteen thousand pounds of incendiary bombs in each of thirty-eight airplanes. Again, after, a long, gruelling flight, the air crews encountered in midmorning the bitterest of enemy opposition—36 Jap fighters and heavy anti-aircraft fire. Seven of the enemy were destroyed, two probably destroyed, and two were damaged, with a lost of two B-29s. Fifteen B-29s suffered battle damage, but the intrepid crewmen aided successfully in destroying nearly 4½ square miles of important industrial area. Again, in less than 24 hours, because of the herculean efforts and untiring devotion to duty of the ground, air crew, and maintenance personnel, the 498th Bombardment Group (VH) sent thirty-three B-29s airborne on the third incendiary strike at Osaka, adding high explosives to comprise the total of more than 13,000 pounds per airplane. The group bombed skillfully by radar through complete cloud cover over the target area, resulting in a total of nearly 13½ square miles of devastation in three raids. These highly effective displays of air might in rapid exhausting succession exacted the most gallant, superb effort on the part of all personnel, helped materially to shorten the war with Japan, and bring great honor to the record of heroism and accomplishment of the Army Air Forces.

6. The 499th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 22 to 28 April 1945. To the 499th Bombardment Group (VH) and accompanying group was given the heroic task of neutralizing Japanese aircraft and airbases within striking distance of Okinawa. Operating in this phase of the mounting air war against Japan, this group on the morning of 22 April sent 11 of its superfortresses in a medium-altitude attack, hundreds of miles from its base on Saipan, to bomb the airfields and installations at Izumi on the home island of Kyushu. Carrying heavy high-explosive bomb loads, the group's daring air crews flew through constantly variable weather and antiaircraft fire. Without regard for their safety and determined to press home the attack, the bombers covered the target area with high explosives. Again, on 26 April, the airbase hammering was on, with the group pointed toward Oita airfield in Kyushu. Twenty-three superfortresses were airborne through turbulent flying weather and fought their way through incessant storms to the target area, only to find it obscured completely by cloud cover. Bombing by radar, nineteen B-29s loosed more than 180,000 pounds of high explosives over the Oita installations. To complete a phase of Jap airbase destruction and to deal yet another blow at the kamikaze operation, the 499th Bombardment Group (VH) flew again on 28 April, aimed at Miyazaki airfield in Kyushu and dropped a record load of more than 260,000 pounds of bombs, rendering both runways inoperative and severely damaging the installations. Heavy antiaircraft fire was accurate, one B-29 was shot down and three were damaged, but the group air crews ignoring their peril, bravely and determinedly fought their way to the target area, where they achieved excellent results. In less than 6 days, 3 attacks had been launched against Jap airbases nearly 1,500 miles away, and with a high degree of success, necessitating the utmost cooperation between air and ground crews to keep the B-29s in combat condition. Untiringly, and with outstanding devotion to duty, the ground crews labored to keep the 499th Bombardment Group (VH) in the air. Heroically, the air crewmen drove through storms and fought off fighter attacks that numbered 100 to persevere with their all important purpose. To these dauntless and skillful men can be attributed a large share of the glory for the success of the Okinawa campaign. Their efforts and accomplishments are in the best traditions of gallantry of the Army Air Forces.

7. The 500th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy for the period 15 to 20 June 1945. During this significant phase of the air offensive against Japan, the air crews of this group delivered three highly successful blows against the Japanese Empire within a period of 5 days. These missions, performed with unrelenting and mounting deadliness, helped to serve final notice on the enemy that the B-29s could and would destroy every production center. On 15 June 1945, the 500th Bombardment Group (VH) participated in a powerful daylight attack against the important Osaka-Amagasaki urban industrial complex. Although adverse weather broke up plans for fighter cover, the group's B-29s, flying at altitudes of 16,300 to 26,900 feet, bored through to the briefed target and dropped their incendiaries through a complete undercast, with great accuracy despite enemy opposition, which cost two B-29s. On the night of 17-18 June 1945, this group participated with other groups of the 73d Bombardment Wing in the opening phase of the all out effort against the small component links of the Japanese war production machine. Flying at altitudes of 7,850 to 9,010 feet, the group's B-29s delivered a crushing incendiary blow on Hamamatsu, center of many small plants producing parts for military aircraft. With a total of 2.79 square miles of the industrial area eliminated, Hamamatsu was written off the target list. Almost immediately upon return from this mission, the air crews of the group again took off from their base on Saipan, on 19 June 1945, to perform their part of a night incendiary attack on military targets in Kyushu. This attack, which was concentrated on important shipping and rail targets, destroyed 1.37 square miles of enemy installations, achieving excellent results from levels of 9,000 to 10,000 feet. These outstanding missions, mounted in rapid sequence to gain the advantage of unrelenting pressure on the enemy, faced heavy hazards apart from Japanese fighter attacks and antiaircraft fire. The strain of 15-hour flights, largely over ocean wastes, carrying minimum fuel supply to permit capacity bomb loads, and the slight margin of safety left in case of engine failure or navigational error, called for the utmost courage and determination on the part of the bomber crews to keep at their hazardous assignments. During this period of concentrated aerial activity, the ground personnel of the 500th Bombardment Group (VH) matched the determination of the air crews by laboring incessantly and with magnificent devotion to duty to keep the aircraft properly in readiness for the rapid succession of strikes. This coordination between ground and air personnel attained brilliant results, which contributed vitally to the drastic reduction of the Japanese enemy's ability to wage war. The high courage and determination of the men of the 500th Bombardment Group (VH) reflects great credit on themselves and the United States Army Air Forces.

8. The 501st Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. During the period 6 to 13 July 1945, this organization delivered devastating attacks against Japanese petroleum installations on the island of Honshu to demonstrate the revolutionary capabilities of a new radar bombing instrument, which was undergoing its first test under battle conditions. Personnel of the 501st Bombardment Group (VH) demonstrated efficiency, courage, and devotion to duty in long flights over enemy waters and through adverse weather conditions, which often cut off all visibility. B-29 aircraft of this unit had sacrificed defensive fire power for speed and bomb-carrying capacity by stripping the airplanes of all armament except three .50-caliber tail guns. With this bare protection, aircraft were more than usually vulnerable to enemy fighter attack and antiaircraft defenses. On the night of 6 July 1945, the 501st Bombardment Group (VH) attacked the Maruzen oil refinery at Shimotsu, considered one of the most important refineries and oil storage points for the enemy navy in its home islands. Flying more than 1500 miles from their home base, aircraft of this group attacked the target in single bombing runs without defensive escort. Despite an undercast, which completely obscured the refinery, 95 percent of the installation was destroyed. On the night of 9 July 1945, the 501st Bombardment Group (VH) attacked the Utsubo oil refinery at Yokkaichi, one of the three most important oil refineries in Japan. This installation produced a significant portion of the aviation gasoline used by the enemy's air forces and, while it had undergone previous attacks, it was still capable of production. Radar photograph plots showed that 100 percent of the group aircraft had passed direct over the target against enemy antiaircraft fire and unfavorable weather conditions. The refinery was left in ruins. On the night of 12 July, the 501st Bombardment Group (VH) attacked the Kawasaki petroleum center, located in the heart of Japan's most important and most heavily defended industrial district. This target comprised the facilities of four leading oil companies and had a combined daily refining capacity of 7,000 barrels. Despite intense and accurate antiaircraft fire, 82 percent of the group aircraft that were plotted passed direct over the target and smashed warehouses, tanks, pipe stills, furnaces, and other vital equipment, thus delivering a serious blow to the enemy's ability to produce petroleum products. On all of these missions, ground personnel of the 501st Bombardment Group (VH) displayed outstanding ability, willingness, and ingenuity in carrying out their assigned tasks under extreme handicaps. They improvised equipment and methods of work while maintaining aircraft on a base still under construction and lacking many facilities. The achievements of the 501st Bombardment Group (VH) during this period contributed greatly to the destruction of the major oil refining and storage capacity of Japan and drastically reduced the power and ability of the enemy to continue the war, thereby bringing honor to the United States Army Air Forces and to the entire military service.

9. The 502d Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy. During the period from 5 to 15 August 1945, this organization struck crippling blows at the Japanese petroleum industry. The action demonstrated the high efficiency, courage, and resolution of 502d Bombardment Group (VH) personnel and characterized the spirit of air attack throughout the war. Particularly was this true, in view of the fact that this organization employed a recently developed radar bombing instrument and that it flew B-29 aircraft, which had been stripped of all defensive armament, except three .50-caliber tail machine guns. On the night of 5 August 1945, the 502d Bombardment Group (VH) attacked the Ube coal liquefaction plant at Ube, an important producer of synthetic oil. This installation was of major importance to the Japanese war effort, as the enemy had been virtually cut off by naval blockade to sources of crude oil. The aircrews of this organization employed their new radar bombing device so successfully that 94 percent of the aircraft plotted on the bomb run passed direct over the target. Later, reconnaissance of the area revealed that the installation was completely destroyed and that bombs had breached nearby dykes and permitted water to flood the area. On the night of 9 August 1945, the 502d Bombardment Group (VH) attacked the tank farm of the Nippon oil refinery at Amagasaki, one of the most heavily defended areas of Japan. Enclosed in a small area, 800 by 1,000 feet, this was an extremely difficult target to hit, even under favorable conditions of visibility. This organization, however, with outstanding precision destroyed 8 of 10 tanks in the Amagasaki farm. Radar scope photographs disclosed that more than 80 percent of the group aircraft plotted had passed direct over the target. On the night of 14 August 1945, the 502d Bombardment Group (VH) attacked the Nippon oil refinery at Tsuchizaki, an important petroleum installation, which had heretofore been considered inaccessible because of its great distance from any Allied air base. This mission of 3,740 statute miles was flown nonstop without bomb bay tanks. Despite the great distance, this group carried a bomb load which had previously been considered large for missions of shorter range. Braving the dangers of a long overwater flight without the protection of friendly fighters, the aircrews attacked the target and left it a smoking ruin. Later, reconnaissance revealed that every part of the installation had been hit by bombs and that the refinery was almost completely destroyed or damaged. Despite fatigue, the hazards of long overwater flights in adverse weather conditions, and the threat of enemy attacks, flying personnel of this organization demonstrated at all times a willingness to perform their duties at peak efficiency. Matching the aircrews in accomplishment were the ground personnel, who showed meritorious initiative, perseverance, and fidelity in carrying out their assignments, working long hours with incomplete facilities. The achievements of the 502d Bombardment Group (VH) during this period contributed greatly to the destruction of the major oil refining and storage capacity of Japan and drastically reduced the power and ability of the enemy to continue the war, thereby bringing great honor to the United States Army Air Forces and to the entire military service.

10. The 506th Fighter Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 7 to 10 June 1945. With exceptional valor and proud skill, this group participated in two highly successful, maximum effort, very long-range missions in escort of B-29s, which had as their objective the destruction of two important industrial centers of Japan, Osaka and Tokyo. Despite the appalling loss of 15 airplanes and 12 pilots on the preceding mission only 6 days before, and despite such adversity as the withering heat, which billowed in on winds laden with Iwo Jima's volcanic ash, morale remained exceedingly high. The group was more determined than ever and the required number of airplanes was airborne on schedule on 7 June 1945 and again on 10 June 1945. These intrepid fighter pilots flew vast distances over water to support the heavily laden bombers against some of the most fanatical and effective opposition ever mounted by the enemy. The opposition was intensified by the need for the bombers to fly these strikes at medium altitudes, because of the problems occasioned by incendiary bomb ballistics and by the unpredictable and excessive winds at high altitudes. This tactical necessity subjected the aircraft to continuous attack from the largest concentrations of enemy fighters and anti-aircraft guns in the Empire. Hurling themselves through the accurate anti-aircraft fire, these intrepid pilots met the vicious enemy fighter attacks so skillfully that only one B-29 was lost to enemy action, while eleven enemy aircraft were destroyed, four probably destroyed, and two damaged. The success of these missions against two of the major industrial strongholds of Japanese war might was a fitting tribute not only to the coolness and skill of the gallant pilots of the group but also to the ground personnel working endless hours to keep the aircraft in the air although acutely shorthanded and continuously improvising to overcome a shortage of tools, equipment, and replacement parts. The conspicuous determination, unremitting devotion to duty, and gallantry in the face of extremely adverse conditions and concentrated defenses of an aggressive and resolute foe displayed in the preparation and execution of these missions reflect the highest credit on the 506th Fighter Group and on the United States Army Air Forces.

IV. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in General Orders 254, Headquarters Ninth Air Force, 28 October 1944, are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Company A, 563d Signal Air Warning Battalion, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 3 to 8 August 1944. During this period, the members of Company A, 563d Signal Air Warning Battalion, distinguished themselves by extraordinary heroism in the face of the enemy when, after having been charged with the mission of establishing a forward battalion director post in the Mont St. Michel area, the company found itself in hotly contested territory, under fire from enemy artillery, and harassed constantly by enemy scouting parties and snipers. Although the company was not equipped or prepared adequately to meet opposition of this nature, the members of the unit, nevertheless, so located its light warning and ground observation posts that the company was able immediately to furnish radio control to aircraft in the area, directing them to targets of opportunity and furnishing early warning of enemy aerial and ground activity to Air Corps and anti-aircraft units in the area, as well as serving as a relay point for many signal activities in the sector after existing land lines had been destroyed through enemy action. Throughout this period, the fortitude, spirit of improvisation and high esprit de corps evidenced by the members of Company A, 563d Signal Air Warning Battalion, resulted in the rendition of distinguished service to the armed forces during an important phase of the campaign in northern France.

2. The 1st Pathfinder Squadron (M) (Provisional) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 13 February to 31 July 1944. As the first American medium pathfinder squadron to utilize precision blind bombing, the 1st Pathfinder Squadron (M) (Provisional) was responsible for the successful development and establishment of precision bombing as an integral part of medium bombardment technique in the European Theater of Operations. Only at the cost of unstinting labor and great hazard was this innovation in operations accomplished. A majority of the missions of the 1st Pathfinder Squadron (M) (Provisional) was undertaken at night or in ten-tenths cloud cover under the most difficult flying conditions, yet the squadron, nevertheless, achieved an enviable record for leading successful bombing attacks upon vital enemy installations. On 6 June 1944, the 1st Pathfinder Squadron (M) (Provisional) led six missions against highly important objectives in enemy territory and, despite poor visibility, enabled the full strength of the 9th Bombardment Division (M) to be hurled against the enemy. During the month of July, throughout a most critical period of the Normandy campaign, the squadron led 87 group missions against heavily defended targets with a success and precision which testified to the outstanding aggressiveness, courage, and technical skill of the members of the organization. The achievements of the 1st Pathfinder Squadron (M) (Provisional) constitute a most valuable contribution to the success of medium bombardment in the European Theater of Operations and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the Army Air Forces.

3. The 316th Troop Carrier Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 25 November 1942 to 25 August 1943. Throughout the course of the Egypt-Libyan, Tunisian, and Sicilian campaigns, the 316th Troop Carrier Group rendered distinguished services in its vital support of the British Eighth Army and the Ninth Air Force. During the Middle East campaign, during which refueling and rearming problems were greatly aggravated by the attenuated lines of supply through the desert, the unarmed and unarmored aircraft of the 316th Troop Carrier Group played an outstanding part in the success of both aerial and ground operations by transporting vitally needed supplies and replacements to advanced landing grounds only recently evacuated by the enemy. While the air echelons of the group were engaged in undertaking long and hazardous flights without escort over areas where enemy opposition was both anticipated and encountered, the ground echelons of the group, in addition to their normal duties, supported the air echelons of two heavy bombardment groups throughout important operations in the Western Desert. Living under conditions of great personal hardship and danger in the desert, and operating despite the difficulties of unfavorable climatic and weather conditions, as well as enemy aerial attack, the personnel of the 316th Troop Carrier Group, through their courage, perseverance, and deep devotion to duty, rendered an invaluable contribution to the success of Allied operations in the Middle East Theater of Operations.

4. The 322d Bombardment Group (M) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the European Theater of Operations from 14 May 1943 to 24 July 1944. Throughout this period, the members of the 322d Bombardment Group (M) distinguished themselves by their record of achievement both during the Air Offensive, Europe, and the campaign in northern Europe, and in the course of operation, the group demonstrated unusual ability and versatility in the perfection of new techniques of medium bombardment, which were of particular importance in the orientation and training of the 9th Bombardment Division (M) as a whole. After its initial low-level B-26 tactics had proved unsuitable for operations in the type mission upon which the aircraft were dispatched, the 322d Bombardment Group (M) embarked upon an intensive training program in medium-altitude formation bombing procedure, the success of which was instrumental in the adoption of the B-26 to play a vital role in aerial operations in the European Theater of Operations. The precision achieved in the development of blind formation bombing by the group was an important factor in the employment of the B-26 in operations of great success. In addition, the members of the group particularly distinguished themselves by their brilliant adoption of night bombing technique, which represented an important augmentation to the versatility of medium bombardment aircraft. The outstanding record achieved by the 322d Bombardment Group (M) throughout these operations; together with the extraordinary success which attended the many innovations in operational procedure, marked the group and its personnel with particular distinction. The perseverance, fortitude, and devotion to duty displayed by the members of the organization, despite the difficulties and hazards of untried ways, place the 322d Bombardment Group (M) among the ranks of those organizations which have contributed in large measure to the blazing of new trails for the Army Air Forces.

5. The 386th Bombardment Group (M) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in the European Theater of Operations from 30 July 1943 to 30 July 1944. During this period, the 386th Bombardment Group (M) attained the most outstanding record of all B-26 groups in the European Theater of Operations in terms of number of successful sorties flown, tonnage of bombs dispatched, and enemy aircraft destroyed, while, at the same time, maintaining the highest bombing accuracy score. The eminently successful concentrated pattern bombing first employed by the 386th Bombardment Group (M) on 2 September 1943, established subsequent operations over western Europe, while missions of the group carried out against the Amsterdam Schipol airdrome, the pilotless aircraft launching site in the Cherbourg Peninsula and Pas de Calais area, the attacks upon marshalling yards, aircraft installations, bridges, and communications and transportation centers, both prior to and during operations of the Allied ground forces on the Continent, were of the utmost importance to the campaign in northwest Europe. The untiring devotion to duty and extraordinary skill and courage demonstrated by the members of the 386th Bombardment Group (M) throughout the course of these exceedingly difficult and exacting operations reflect great credit on the entire organization and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT—Plum Brook Ordnance Works, Sandusky, Ohio, discontinued..... I

BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units..... II

I. MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.—Effective as of 6 September 1946, the Plum Brook Ordnance Works, Sandusky, Ohio, with the exception of the magazine area and classification yard, is discontinued as a military establishment.

[AG 602 (20 Sep 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Squadron, 12th Cavalry Regiment (reinforced by Weapons Troop, 12th Cavalry Regiment, Reconnaissance and Train Defense Platoon, 12th Cavalry Regiment, and 2d Platoon, 1st Collecting Troop, 1st Medical Squadron), is cited for extraordinary heroism in overcoming unusually difficult and hazardous conditions in action against the enemy at Leyte Province, Philippine Islands, from 28 November to 1 December 1944. Having fought to the top of the ridge running east from Mount Cabungangan, cutting their own trail in heavy undergrowth during a raging typhoon and constantly meeting a hail of fire from the enemy, the 1st Squadron found supplies difficult to obtain. The squadron was, at the time, after weeks of heavy fighting, down to 60 percent of its T/O strength. On 28 November 1944, while the squadron was attacking a strong Japanese defensive position to the northeast, it was attacked from the rear by Japanese, who had infiltrated during the night, and both supply and communications were severed. Without food, short of ammunition, and reinforcements 2 days march away, the squadron prepared to attack. Containing the force to the north and east, reversing its direction of attack, and after a 12-hour march through untracked jungle, the squadron surrounded and wiped out the Japanese attacking force by continuous day and night hand-to-hand fighting. Turning its attention to the original enemy force and employing hand-to-hand fighting, all resistance in the area was neutralized. By this action, the 1st Squadron, 12th Cavalry Regiment, reinforced, prepared the way for the advance of the division into Ormoc Valley. Every officer and man of the squadron displayed outstanding spirit, courage, determination, and an unflinching will to conquer. (General Orders 242, Headquarters 1st Cavalry Division, 22 December 1945.)

2. The 114 Engineer Combat Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 1 February to 4 June 1945. During this period, the battalion carried out its duties of supporting the advance of the division attack by means of engineer work, under conditions which demanded the utmost in devotion to duty to overcome the enormous difficulties presented by a combination of incredibly difficult terrain and a stubbornly resisting, fanatical enemy. The enemy, throughout the period, covered the hazardous operations with close-range, small-arms fire, as well as direct fire from mountain guns. In the close terrain, the enemy fought fanatically from caves and, since the infantry units were spread along lengthened lines of communication, the engineers frequently furnished close-in security for equipment and working parties. Engineer bivouacs were subjected constantly to enemy artillery fire and raiding parties. Dozer operators were harassed continually by enemy small arms fire from positions less than 50 yards away. To give maximum support to the infantry elements, engineer reconnaissance was carried well forward, with engineers accompanying patrols of the advance troops. One such engineer party was wiped out by an enemy ambush, but this did not stop the determined engineers from continuing their exacting tasks. Equipment and working parties were endangered constantly by slides and wash-outs and many men were injured by falling rock banks. Enemy artillery barrages held up work momentarily on occasions, but nothing daunted the engineers, who drove forward, despite the difficulties and dangers. The battalion maintenance personnel went as far forward as road conditions would permit, despite enemy observation and fire. The administrative personnel of the battalion worked long hours to insure adequate engineer supply and proper maintenance of reports. The tremendous accomplishments achieved by the 114th Engineer Combat Battalion were of vital importance to the division's success in overcoming fanatical Japanese resistance. (General Orders 42, Headquarters 32d Infantry Division, 26 February 1946.)

3. The 166th Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 15 December 1944 to 6 January 1945 on Mindoro, Philippine Islands. During this period, the 166th Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion provided the 90-mm defense of the airfields and beachhead installations on Mindoro. The enemy made persistent, fanatical, multiple attacks in an effort to neutralize the airplanes and fields being used to support the Luzon invasion. On no occasion was a hostile aircraft able to penetrate the defended area to cause any serious damage. Despite repeated attacks upon the battalion positions, terrain which hampered the efficiency of radar units, extensive use of window, and meager ammunition supplies, 25 airplanes were destroyed, while expending only 6,266 rounds of ammunition. In several instances, all four batteries successfully engaged different targets simultaneously, permitting radar units to search for new ones. The result of the battalion's deadly fire forced the enemy to attempt low-level runs, which were stopped effectively by automatic weapons. The courage, perseverance, and poise demonstrated by the battalion, in the face of a desperate enemy, and the ingenuity and proficiency with which it performed, despite being on continual alert and under the threat of exhausting available supplies, were conspicuous. These actions of the 166th Antiaircraft Artillery Gun Battalion reflect the finest traditions of the United States Army and will stand as a bright page in the Nation's military history. (General Orders 60, Headquarters Eighth Army, 29 July 1946, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

UNITS CREDITED WITH ASSAULT LANDINGS

General.....	Section I
List.....	Section II

I. GENERAL.—1. In accordance with the provisions of WD Circular 56, 1946, the units listed in section II below were designated by theater commanders as having participated in an amphibious or airborne assault landing.

2. When entering individual credit on officers' qualification cards (WD AGO Forms 66-1 and 66-2) or on service record of enlisted personnel (WD AGO Form 24A), this general orders may be cited as authority for such entries for personnel who were present for duty as a member of or attached to a unit listed herein and who actually participated in the landings named. (Attention is directed to the requirement that only one bronze service arrowhead may be worn on a theater ribbon, regardless of the number of assault landings credited to a unit in that theater.)

3. Under the provisions of paragraph 7, WD Circular 56, 1946, the designation of a combat assault landing is determined upon the approval of the theater commander, and eligibility of individuals to wear the bronze service arrowhead is established by this approval. Units not included in the list (sec. II) will comply with the requirements of the circular cited prior to the award of this device.

II. LIST.—The following units were designated by theater commanders as having participated in an amphibious or airborne assault landing:

[AG 000.8 (16 Aug 46) (28 Aug 46).]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (Sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

1. Company A, 136th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 3 to 4 May 1945, in the vicinity of Tebbo, Nueva Viscaya Province, Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands. The company was a portion of a larger force assigned to occupy an important position on Skyline Ridge. This position commanded the approach to the position near Tebbo. At 0400, 3 May 1945, Company A began their movements up the open, razorback ridge, which led to the enemy stronghold. At 0600, they had gained a position from which they could attack. This barren ridge line offered little cover from the vicious fire of the enemy machine guns and mortars. About 2100, weapons carriers were dispatched to resupply them with ammunition, but when the carriers had nearly reached the position, enemy mortars opened up from concealed positions. The fire from these mortars covered the entire position held by Company A, causing several casualties. The barrage lifted and the enemy launched three consecutive Banzai attacks. All were repulsed by the gallant men of Company A. Later, carrying parties resupplied them with ammunition and, by early morning, they were organized for an attack upon the main objective. On 4 May 1945, the weary men of Company A hurled themselves upon the enemy with such ferocity that by midmorning, the enemy stronghold was overrun. Sixty-nine enemy lay dead upon the position and several enemy light machine guns, mortars, and artillery were captured. The determination, unflinching devotion to duty, and superb courage displayed by each man of Company A, 136th Infantry Regiment, contributed immeasurably to the success of operations in Northern Luzon and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 6, Headquarters 33d Infantry Division, 6 January 1946.)

2. Headquarters and Headquarters Troop, 12th Cavalry Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy at Leyte Province, Philippine Islands, 20 December 1944. The 12th Cavalry Regiment was attacking south in the Ormoc Valley, Leyte, Philippine Islands. Two months of continuous combat had reduced the effective strength of all units to sixty percent of authorized strength. At 1230 hours, the Headquarters and Headquarters Troop was advancing west toward Lonoy to open a new command post. The advance guard discovered a Japanese battery of three 105-mm guns and three light machine guns in position. Seventy-five Japanese were serving the pieces and protecting the position. At 1345 hours, the troop attacked. The antitank platoon attacked west astride the trail running to Lonoy. The reconnaissance platoon, with elements of G Troop, made an envelopment to the north. After a short, intense artillery preparation, the attention of the Japanese was taken from the attacking forces. The antitank platoon met heavy opposition and was showered with shell fragments from three bursts. The reconnaissance platoon was able to creep within 50 yards of the main Japanese battery position, where it suddenly opened fire and, as the Japanese attempted to traverse their guns, both attacking forces and the command post group assaulted the position. After 15 minutes of desperate hand-to-hand fighting, 60 Japanese were killed and the Japanese battery was captured. This attack was led by the regimental commander in person. During mopping-up operations, a second Japanese battery position was discovered 500 yards to the west, containing 4 pieces of artillery and a number of machine guns. The same plan of attack was used and again successfully completed, after further close hand-to-hand combat. It was discovered that the second position also contained headquarters of a Japanese artillery battalion and an engineer battalion. During these 2 engagements, 250 Japanese were killed, 7 artillery pieces captured, 9 light machine guns, numerous rifles, and much artillery, ammunition, food, and command post equipment destroyed. At no time was communication lost with the forward elements or with the higher units in rear. Casualties suffered by our troops were 9 killed and 50 wounded. Headquarters and Headquarters Troop, 12th Cavalry Regiment, by its offensive spirit, courage, determination, and unflinching will to conquer, destroyed a battalion of the Japanese 1st Field Artillery at a critical time in the battle in the Ormoc Valley and aided materially in the successful conclusion of the campaign on Leyte. I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific, to the following-named officers:

Captain Walter A. Cushing, 121st Infantry, Philippine Army, on 20 September 1942, displayed extraordinary gallantry in action in northeastern Luzon, Philippine Islands. While leading a patrol to a hidden radio station in the mountains, he was attacked by a strong enemy unit. Realizing that his force could not otherwise escape, he voluntarily held the trail alone against the Japanese until the rest of the patrol could withdraw. Captain Cushing's inspiring leadership and indomitable courage, reflected in his supreme sacrifice, were in accord with the highest traditions of the military service.

Lieutenant Colonel Howard W. Hinman, O109321, Infantry, Army of the United States, commanding the 1st Battalion, 3d Infantry, Philippine Army, displayed extraordinary heroism from 30 January to 8 February 1942 in Bataan, Philippine Islands. He proceeded to eliminate a strong enemy penetration on a hill bounded on three sides by rivers and covered with tropical vegetation. Under fire almost constantly, he led his forces personally, moving from man to man on the firing line and from company to company, urging them forward and directing their movements. Colonel Hinman's qualities of personal leadership and gallantry inspired his newly trained troops and led to the successful elimination of the enemy pocket.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Milton B. Halsey, O5305, United States Army. March to September 1945.

Brigadier General Robert C. Oliver, O15275, United States Army. June 1942 to February 1944. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General Oliver, for services from 1 to 21 February 1944, as published in General Orders 99, Headquarters, United States Army Forces in China-Burma-India.)

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Robert S. Beightler, as published in WD General Orders 65, 1943, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Robert S. Beightler, O173673, Army of the United States. December 1943 to June 1944 and January to December 1945.

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class Raymond C. Schaeper (Army serial No. 33947759), Company K, 385th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 5 April 1945, displayed gallantry in action at Truppenhausen, Germany. He ran across an open space under heavy enemy small-arms fire to a burning house and, reaching it, carried out a severely wounded man. Moving again across the fire-swept area, though wounded by the enemy fire, he carried the soldier on to a first-aid station. Private Schaeper's courage and devotion to his wounded comrade reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Lieutenant Colonel Cornelius Z. Byrd, O17760, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Colonel Morris H. Forbes, O9036, Finance Department, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1944.

Sergeant Albert B. Weathers (Army serial No. 6573702), Air Corps, Army of the United States. June 1944 to March 1945.

IX. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Corporal Frederick C. Harris, Jr. (Army serial No. 42041648), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company A, 1st Armored Replacement Training Battalion, Fort Knox, Kentucky, displayed outstanding heroism on 1 June 1944 at Fort Knox, Kentucky. While on duty at the infiltration course, he noticed a fire starting near a box of nitrostarch stored under an elevated platform upon which a group of trainees were standing. Realizing the great danger, and with complete disregard for his own life, he immediately ran toward the platform, shouting a warning in an heroic attempt to extinguish the flames and avert an explosion. As Corporal Harris neared the platform, an explosion occurred, resulting in his death and the death of seven other soldiers.

X. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Staff Sergeant William C. Patterson (Army serial No. 36448741), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of the United States Army Recruiting Station, Chattanooga, Tennessee, on 26 April 1946, diving among submerged rocks into deep and icy waters of a lake, rescued three men whose car had plunged over the bank. To save one of the men, he swam more than halfway across the swift and treacherous waters, revived the man by artificial respiration, and steadfastly continued care and treatment of the men and their families. Sergeant Patterson's courageous actions and presence of mind reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

XI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Major James C. Blanning, O18442, Cavalry, United States Army. 15 December 1944.

Second Lieutenant Richard E. Harris, O890035, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. January and April 1942.

Captain Paul E. Moore, O248365, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. 9 to 12 January 1945.

States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Commander George R. Hogshire, United States Navy. 25 March to 14 April 1942.

Second Lieutenant Timothy J. Wholey, O340463, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted men:

Staff Sergeant Byron S. Gibson (Army serial No. 6287978), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron, performed heroic services on 7 February 1942 while serving with his Air Corps unit as infantry on Bataan, Philippine Islands. He voluntarily joined a party organized to assault, from landing boats, the enemy forces on the beach and in caves at Quinauan Point. Disregarding his own safety, Sergeant Gibson assisted in shelling the caves from an off-shore position fully exposed to enemy aircraft and then joined the successful assault on the beach, which eliminated the enemy penetration there, although the action was opposed by close-range enemy rifle and machine-gun fire and aerial bombing.

Corporal Merrill W. Riner (Army serial No. 19015797), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron, performed heroic services on 7 February 1942 while serving with his Air Corps unit as infantry on Bataan, Philippine Islands. He voluntarily joined a party organized to assault, from landing boats, the enemy forces on the beach and in caves at Quinauan Point. Disregarding his own safety, Corporal Riner assisted in shelling the caves from an off-shore position fully exposed to enemy aircraft and then joined the successful assault on the beach, which eliminated the enemy penetration there, although the action was opposed by close-range enemy rifle and machine-gun fire and aerial bombing.

Second Lieutenant Weeden H. Petrie, O422569, Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company D, 192d Tank Battalion, performed heroic services from 8 December 1941 to 6 January 1942 on Luzon, Philippine Islands. Under his leadership, Lieutenant Petrie's unit fought its way successfully across the Agno River and later met the enemy's night attack near Guagua, Luzon, where he was wounded fatally. Lieutenant Petrie's conduct reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

XII.—BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers, warrant officer, enlisted men, and individuals:

- George F. Phillips*, American Red Cross. October 1944 to May 1945.
- Evelyn Piper*, American civilian. March 1944 to January 1946.
- Staff Sergeant Andrew Prevuznak (Army serial No. 6669934), Infantry, Army of the United States. November 1942 to August 1945.
- Specialist (X) First Class Charles Provenzano (7105764), United States Naval Reserve. 10 to 30 September 1944.
- Louise B. Shepherd*, American civilian. May 1944 to January 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel R. J. Walker, British Army. 25 November 1943 to 10 January 1944.

Captain Frank W. Bovee, O329357, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Captain Paul T. Ashton, O397788, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroic conduct as a prisoner of war of the Japanese from 20 June to 28 July 1942 in Tayabas Province, Luzon, Philippine Islands. When advised that 300 Americans were undergoing most cruel treatment in a reprisal work camp, he, as a medical officer, volunteered to be sent there in an attempt to alleviate their condition. When Captain Ashton returned with the survivors of the camp, his own health was so impaired as to require several months' hospitalization.

Second Lieutenant Robert R. Floyd, O2039569, 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 17 March 1945, near Bologna, Italy, voluntarily joined a mission to rescue survivors whose airplane had crashed beyond Allied lines. Despite the dangers of enemy observation and a thickly sown mine field, he pressed forward heroically with the patrol toward the site of the crash. Lieutenant Floyd's courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class George N. La Fleur (301370), United States Marine Corps, while attached to H Company, 2d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, performed heroic services at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 20 April 1942. During a heavy aerial bombardment, he left a place of comparative safety to administer first aid to the wounded in the area. With great courage and devotion to duty, Private La Fleur then rode in a truck through artillery fire over open terrain to care for several serious stretcher cases being taken to the Malinta Tunnel Hospital.

First Lieutenant Patrick M. Neilond, O26616, Field Artillery, United States Army, as a forward observer with the 880th Field Artillery Battalion, performed heroic services on 2 April 1945 near Witzenhausen, Germany. When the advance of the supported infantry was halted by severe sniper action, he ran several hundred yards while exposed to this fire, located the enemy forces, and adjusted friendly artillery on them. Through his courageous and timely action, Lieutenant Neilond aided materially the infantry in continuing its advance.

Private First Class Willie Reems (279246), United States Marine Corps, while attached to F Company, 2d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, performed heroic services at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 20 April 1942. During a heavy aerial bombardment, he left a place of comparative safety to administer first aid to the wounded in the area. With great courage and devotion to duty, Private Reems then rode in a truck through artillery fire over open terrain to care for several serious stretcher cases being taken to the Malinta Tunnel Hospital.

Private First Class George B. Thornton (270022), United States Marine Corps, while attached to H Company, 2d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, performed heroic services at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 20 April 1942. During a heavy aerial bombardment, he left a place of comparative safety to administer first aid to the wounded in the area. With great courage and devotion to duty, Private Thornton then drove a truck through artillery fire over open terrain with four serious stretcher cases to the Malinta Tunnel Hospital.

Lieutenant Colonel John Winterholler (then first lieutenant), United States Marine Corps, on 5 May 1942, performed heroic services on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Learning that some wounded men were trapped in their anti-aircraft-gun position, he gathered volunteers from among his men and, although the gun and surrounding area were under an intensive enemy artillery barrage, went immediately to the emplacement and succeeded in moving the injured men to a more secure place. Lieutenant Winterholler's courageous action and devotion to his comrades reflect great credit on himself and the armed services.

Private First Class Phillip G. Chavez (Army serial No. 38557619). Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, on 19 February 1945, displayed outstanding courage near Behren, France. When bringing hot rations forward to his company, he was caught in heavy enemy artillery fire, which flattened one tire of his vehicle. Despite the bursting shells, he dismounted quickly, repaired the damage, proceeded again under the continuous barrage, and delivered the food to his comrades in action.

Technician Fifth Grade Maurice J. Kleiman (Army serial No. 12239845) (then private first class), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, on 6 January 1945, in Wingen, France, displayed heroism in action against the enemy. He made repeated trips into an exposed area, under heavy enemy machine-gun fire, to help carry wounded men inside the safety of a building. Despite mortars exploding nearby, Technician Kleiman then took a position in the doorway to guard against the enemy and remained at his post throughout the night.

XIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded by the Navy Department to Lieutenant Ferdinand V. Berley, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Ferdinand V. Berley, Medical Corps, United States Navy, as medical officer with Company E, 2d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, at Corregidor, performed heroic services on 24 April 1942. To render medical aid to a seriously wounded man, he voluntarily proceeded by truck, over a road swept by enemy fire and showered by exploding ammunition, to Battery Hamilton, which was gravely endangered by the threatened explosion of Battery Crockett. After preparing the wounded man for movement, he placed him on the truck and returned by the same hazardous route. Lieutenant Berley's personal courage in assisting a wounded comrade reflects great credit on himself and the armed services.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Private First Class Jeff E. Davis, as published in General Orders 92, Headquarters 34th Infantry Division, 11 May 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Private First Class Jeff E. Davis (Army serial No. 37640294), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 17 March 1945, near Bologna, Italy, voluntarily joined a mission to rescue survivors whose airplane had crashed beyond Allied lines. Despite the dangers of enemy observation and a thickly sown mine field, he pressed forward heroically with the patrol toward the site of the crash. Private Davis's courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Sergeant David H. Smith, as published in General Orders 94, Headquarters 34th Infantry Division, 15 May 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (Sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Sergeant David H. Smith (Army serial No. 33575475), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 17 March 1945, near Bologna, Italy, voluntarily joined a mission to rescue survivors whose airplane had crashed beyond Allied lines. Despite the dangers of enemy observation and a thickly sown mine field, he pressed forward heroically with the patrol toward the site of the crash. Sergeant Smith's courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

XIV. MEDAL OF FREEDOM WITH BRONZE PALM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom with Bronze Palm for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Eugenio J. Chevalier, Panamanian civilian, performed exceptionally meritorious services in furtherance of the war effort of the United Nations while serving as chief of the Panama Department, Office of District Postal Censor, Balboa, Canal Zone, and as liaison officer of the Government of Panama to the Office of District Postal Censor, from December 1941 until August 1945. Mr. Chevalier's marked executive ability, loyalty to the United Nations, discretion, and unflinching cooperation were of inestimable value to the military program of the United States and the Panama Canal Department.

Edmund F. Lindner, stateless Austrian, rendered meritorious services to the United States from May 1944 to May 1945 in concurrently administering the creation of underground newspapers and leaflets and the infiltration of agents behind enemy lines. Mr. Lindner's creative writing coupled with skillful briefing of personnel resulted in numerous desertions from the enemy ranks and the procurement of intelligence, which assisted greatly the conduct of operations in the Mediterranean Theater of Operations.

XV. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

John C. Bellamy, American civilian, performed exceptionally meritorious services as a meteorologist in the Pacific Ocean areas from December 1944 to March 1945 and June through August 1945. He developed new methods and formulas for analyzing upper-air data, which resulted in greatly increased accuracy of wind forecasts. Mr. Bellamy's achievements were a material contribution to the efficiency of B-29 bombing operations over Japan.

Laurence P. Bock, American civilian, as a member of an intelligence unit, contributed materially to the successful completion of a dangerous mission in enemy territory in the Balkans from 6 to 23 September 1944. Mr. Bock set up and maintained, under difficult conditions, a communications system, which provided an Allied headquarters with the only direct operational order of battle information from the country in which he was operating.

Nyles I. Christensen, as director of operations, American Red Cross, Southwest Pacific Area, from March 1943 to February 1946, displayed unusual initiative and executive ability. Making an exhaustive study of troop concentrations and the availability of local facilities in Australia and New Guinea, as well as subsequently in the Philippine Islands, he developed a comprehensive and efficient chain of rest areas, Red Cross clubs, and hospital services. Later, as Red Cross commissioner for United States Army Forces, Pacific, Mr. Christensen made an important contribution to maintaining high morale among units throughout the theater.

Ruth Cunningham, American civilian, as administrative assistant at Headquarters United States Army Forces in Australia, from February to August 1942, performed duties of importance with marked efficiency. One of the first women after Pearl Harbor to go overseas with the United States Army in an administrative capacity, she demonstrated exceptional ability in organizing and teaching schools of American Army procedure for Australian clerks to meet a critical personnel shortage. Miss Cunningham's constant superior performance was of great assistance to the United States Army.

Donald G. Fink, American civilian, as expert consultant, Office of the Secretary of War, while serving oversea for various periods from 1 July 1943 through 20 June 1945, performed meritorious services having a direct beneficial result on our military operations. As a special adviser to the Army Air Forces on the Loran navigation system; he served with distinction, exhibiting great tact and vision in initiating and perfecting operational policies and techniques, which improved greatly the effectiveness of long-range air navigation. Through his professional skill, judgment, and specialized experience, Mr. Fink made an outstanding contribution to the war effort.

Eric Gottlieb, American civilian, performed exceptionally meritorious services in the China Theater from March to September 1945. He furnished valuable help to the United States forces at Ma Chang Ping in supplying the Chinese armies in the southeast. Using a high degree of mechanical ingenuity, he exhibited the most outstanding and unrelenting energy in coping with the critical shortage of automotive parts. Through clever improvisation Mr. Gottlieb was of tremendous aid in keeping a large number of trucks on the road, hauling supplies vital to the troops, when otherwise the vehicles would have been deadlined.

Harry Herbert, American civilian representative of the Jewish Welfare Board, performed outstanding services, from June 1945 to July 1946, in the China-India-Burma Theater. He assisted in the receipt and distribution of Jewish religious supplies and literature and in the extension of religious assistance to members of the Jewish faith in India. In Shanghai, Mr. Herbert organized a home service through which members of the armed forces were invited to the homes of civilians and provided the Jewish soldiers with a full religious and social program.

Thomas W. Irving, as assistant director and director of operations, American Red Cross, for the China-Burma-India Theater, performed meritorious services from July 1944 to December 1945. He was directly responsible for creating and maintaining the high standard of welfare and recreation service for American troops in China. In Shanghai, Mr. Irving directed the creation of the American Red Cross facilities in the newly opened China coastal areas, where his valuable services reflected the highest interpretation of Red Cross responsibility to the military forces of the United States.

James R. Murphy, American civilian, rendered exceptionally meritorious services to the United States Government from March 1943 to November 1945. Undertaking a position of great importance, he made a distinguished contribution to the security of the United States armed forces and Government agencies abroad. Mr. Murphy's efforts resulted in the diminution and eventual elimination of grave danger to the security of American personnel, military installations, and operations.

Belle M. Norton, American civilian, performed services of great benefit to American troops in the Philippine Islands from December 1941 to February 1945. Despite the handicaps of advanced age and a frail physique, she was a constant visitor to American hospitals and prison camps in and around Manila, bringing food, clothing, medicine, and other welfare articles to the sick, wounded, and prisoners of war. Although imprisoned for a time by the Japanese and subjected to their abuse and mockery, Mrs. Norton zealously continued her courageous efforts and was a tremendous morale factor among the great number of Americans she so ably served.

G. Frederick Reinhardt, American civilian, displayed outstanding ability as political officer attached to Allied Forces Headquarters at Algiers and Caserta, Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Forces, and Headquarters United States Army Forces, European Theater, from December 1943 to January 1946. He performed duties of great responsibility in connection with political affairs intimately related to active military operations. Mr. Reinhardt's excellent knowledge of Mediterranean and European political conditions and personalities enabled him to make a highly valuable contribution to the Allied war effort.

C. E. Walter, American civilian, performed outstanding services on the staff of the commander of the Agusan sector, Visayan-Mindanao Force, Philippine Islands, from January to May 1942. He ably supervised coastwise shipping, improvised production of ordnance spare parts, and maintained communications with United States forces in Australia. A noteworthy contribution was his supervision of essential repairs to a naval motor torpedo boat, which participated subsequently in the sinking of an enemy cruiser. Mr. Walter contributed materially to the conduct of military operations in this area.

Doctor Joseph T. Wearn, American civilian, performed services of exceptional value to the United States Army in the China-Burma-India and Central and Southwest Pacific Theaters from 10 March to 15 May 1945. He investigated nutritional problems peculiar to these areas and gave expert professional advice and assistance, which contributed greatly to improving the nutrition of troops there. In addition, Doctor Wearn's study at first hand of the causes and effects of dermatosis and his recommendations based thereon, reduced, by thousands, the health casualties in those theaters.

Alfred M. Zisser, American Red Cross, performed meritorious services from July 1945 to June 1946. As supervisor of camp and hospital services, he covered all installations in western China. He then organized and maintained the American Red Cross assistance to prisoners of war, deploying men and supplies to all prisoner of war camps. Because of his outstanding organizational ability, Mr. Zisser was able to maintain communication and welfare services for the prisoners of war under extremely difficult circumstances. Arriving in Shanghai in November 1945, as director of operations for the American National Red Cross in China, he continued successfully the promotion and maintenance of services to Army, Navy, and Marine Corps personnel.

XVI. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain James A. V. Girsham, Northern Kachin Levies, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the investigation of the epidemiology of scrub typhus in Assam and Burma from April to November 1945. His knowledge of the native languages proved of great value in the relations of the Commission to the native villagers. His experience as a hunter and his familiarity with the birds and mammals of the region contributed greatly to the work of the Commission and permitted detailed investigations which would have been impossible without his assistance. In this fashion, Captain Girsham contributed importantly to the collection of much fundamental information concerning the endemicity and distribution of the disease, and to the collection of birds and mammals for the enrichment of museums and advancement of natural history.

XVII. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of paragraph 2, section V, WD General Orders 28, 1946, as pertains to Brigadier A. E. Hodgkins, British Army, as reads "Brigadier A. E. Hodgkins" is amended to read "Brigadier A. E. Hodgkin."

XVIII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of paragraph 3, section II, Headquarters Army Service Forces General Orders 22, 1946, pertaining to Colonel Herbert D. Vogel, Corps of Engineers, as reads "a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster was awarded" is amended to read "a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster was awarded."

XIX. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. So much of General Orders 258, Headquarters Sixth Army, 18 November 1945, as pertains to Colonel Frank T. Ostenberg, Coast Artillery Corps, as reads "Bronze Star Medal (Oak-Leaf Cluster) was awarded" is amended to read "Bronze Star Medal was awarded" (see par. 1, sec. VI above).

2. So much of paragraph 5, section VIII, WD General Orders 69, 1946, as pertains to Private First Class Fred A. Parra, Infantry, as reads "displayed extraordinary heroism" is amended to read "performed heroic services."

XX. AIR MEDAL.—So much of section XIII, WD General Orders 93, 1946, as pertains to Corporal Arthur L. Mosely, Jr., Air Corps, as reads "(Army serial No. 19188230)" is amended to read "(Army serial No. 19088230)."

XXI. BATTLE HONORS.—So much of paragraph 2, section VII, WD General Orders 34, 1946, pertaining to the 442d Regimental Combat Team (less the 552d Field Artillery Battalion), as reads "442d Regimental Combat Team (less the 552d Field Artillery Battalion)" is amended to read "442d Regimental Combat Team (less the 522d Field Artillery Battalion and less the 2d Battalion of the 442d Regimental Combat Team)."

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, Air Proving Ground Command, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial.

[AG 250.401 (4 Sep 46)]

II. BRANCH UNITED STATES DISCIPLINARY BARRACKS.—Effective 25 October 1946, the Branch United States Disciplinary Barracks, Fort Hancock, New Jersey, is discontinued.

[AG 252 (16 Sep 46)]

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Headquarters 69th Composite Wing and the 326th, 328th, and 332d Troop Carrier Squadrons are cited for outstanding performance of duty from 1 to 30 September 1945. During this period, the 69th Composite Wing was charged with a number of varied missions, including supply and evacuation by air of prisoner of war internment camps, air transport of American military units, ferrying of supplies and equipment of widely scattered bases in China, missions of mercy, and special transport flights to distant areas in French Indo-China, China, and Manchuria, where local conditions were unsettled and where the quality of reception by the Japanese was as yet undetermined. These missions were assigned to the 326th, 328th, and 332d Troop Carrier Squadrons. Though handicapped operationally by a transition from C-47 to C-46 type aircraft during the month and undergoing several changes, these squadrons evidenced exceptional energy and initiative in performing more than the duties assigned them. Hampered frequently by inadequate unloading and servicing facilities and flying through unpredictable weather over rugged terrain, these three squadrons flew a total of over 12,500 hours, transporting 5,346.9 tons of personnel and equipment vital to the success of the United States armed forces in this theater. A daily average of 27.8 loaded trips completed was maintained per day, and throughout the month of September, 4,218 sorties were accomplished. Tonnage transported was 124 percent of that committed. Because of the fact that personnel for loading was inadequate at some stations, in many cases aircrews unloaded and loaded their own aircraft, sometimes disassembling heavy equipment on their own initiative. Numerous changes in schedule were required each day because of alteration in priorities of air lifts, often necessitating reloading and rescheduling. Despite these handicaps, Headquarters 69th Composite Wing and the 326th, 328th, and 332d Troop Carrier Squadrons performed all missions assigned them with such distinction as to contribute substantially to the accomplishment of the mission assigned the Tenth Air Force. The success of these organizations in attaining and surpassing the difficult objectives allotted them is evidence of the energy and industry put forth by all personnel assigned. The outstanding performance of duty of these organizations has been of exceptional benefit to the American armed forces in China and reflects credit in the highest degree on the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 393, Headquarters, Tenth Air Force, 1 November 1945.)

2. Company F, 123d Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands. On 22 April 1945, Company F, 123d Infantry Regiment, was assigned the mission of attacking and seizing a high rugged ridge approximately 1,500 yards north of Mt. Lomboy, Mountain Province, Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands. This ridge provided the enemy with a key defensive position on the road to Baguio, and was so located as to place the enemy in a position which enabled them to cut the supply lines of our advancing regiment. Moving out of its position on Mt. Calugong, the men of Company F advanced their way up and down steep slopes and cliffs. By noon, the men were near exhaustion, water was nearly gone, and there was no means of resupply. At this point, Company F began to encounter enemy resistance, which increased with mounting ferocity as our troops drew closer to the enemy position. Approximately one-third of the company had become casualties from enemy fire. Realizing the supreme importance of their mission, the men of Company F refused to give up and they gallantly continued pushing on toward their objective. With the knowledge of no artillery support available, because of failure of communications, the men of Company F, completely exhausted, pushed to within 300 yards of their objective. Closing with the enemy, the men of Company F completely annihilated the enemy and seized the ridge. That night at 2200, the full fury and power of the Japanese were again turned on Company F, when the enemy launched a vicious counterattack on the company position, and, killing or wounding all our men on the north side of the company's perimeter, succeeded in penetrating our positions. Men rushed from other sections of the perimeter to attempt to fill the gap and, after 3 hours of the bitterest fighting, the enemy was annihilated. Throughout the remainder of the night, the gallant men of Company F clung tenaciously to their positions, despite continued attacks by the enemy. In the morning, the tired men arose from their fox holes and, in a final concerted effort, wiped out the remaining enemy in the areas, thus reopening the supply lines of the adjacent regiment. The determination, unflinching devotion to duty, and superb courage displayed by each man of Company F, 123d Infantry Regiment, contributed immeasurably to the success of operations in Northern Luzon and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 358, Headquarters 33d Infantry Division, 18 December 1945.)

3. Company G, 123d Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 23 to 25 April 1945 on Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands. On 23 April 1945 under a sweltering sun, Company G, 123d Infantry Regiment, began its tortuous battle up the steep slopes of Hill 4900. At approximately one-third of the distance to the top, the company encountered intense enemy fire. Although suffering casualties, the tired fighting men of Company G fought on stubbornly, but were compelled ultimately to give ground. Withdrawing a short distance, a quick reorganization was effected and once again the men arose and moved forward to assault the enemy position, but again they were halted by the fiercest type of resistance and were compelled to dig in. A reconnaissance revealed no other route to the objective, so, on the following morning, although suffering heavy casualties from enemy fire, heat, exhaustion, and lack of sufficient food and water, Company G, with grim determination, launched a third and ferocious attack on the enemy position. With every man in the company fighting his way up the extremely narrow ridge, even though an alarming number of men became casualties, those remaining stubbornly continued the advance, and, in a final concerted effort, routed the enemy and seized his positions. Having gained this initial advantage, the men refused to stop. After a hasty reorganization, Company G continued the fight and, with renewed vigor, the fatigued and weary men pushed on down the reverse slope of the hill, seizing the town of Tuba 1 day earlier than had been considered possible. Despite the fact that more than 50 percent of the company were casualties and the men were near the point of exhaustion from the sustained drive, intolerable heat, and the rugged terrain over which they fought, the remaining men of Company G, without consideration of lack of rest, food, and water continued the attack and began the tortuous advance up Mt. Santo Tomas, towering 7,100 feet in the air. At about 1815 on 25 April 1945, the company encountered heavy enemy resistance. Undaunted by intense enemy fire, Company G arose twice to assault the enemy positions, but unable to advance, the men were finally compelled to dig in. On the following morning after a long night of constant vigil, and of continuous harassment by the enemy, the weary and fatigued men moved once again toward their objective. Imbued with an utterly indomitable fighting spirit, they met the enemy and refused to be halted. Despite the heavy casualties suffered in the fiercest type of close-in fighting, the gallant fighting men of Company G continued on, completely wiping out an entire company, knocking out four machine guns and three knee mortars, penetrating the enemy position, and then continuing on to seize the summit of the 7,100-foot peak, thus securing the right flank of the troops advancing on Baguio. The determination, unflinching devotion to duty, and superb courage displayed by each man of Company G, 123d Infantry Regiment, contributed immeasurably to the success of operations in Northern Luzon and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 359, Headquarters 33d Infantry Division, 19 December 1945.)

4. The 306th Field Artillery Battalion is cited for its magnificent courage, heroism, and skillful performance of duty in action against the enemy on the Island of Leyte, Philippine Islands, during the period 24 to 31 December 1944. The 306th Field Artillery Battalion was given the vital mission of supporting the 305th Infantry Regiment in its attack on the last enemy escape route to the seaport of Palompon. This operation consisted of a pincer movement of one force driving over the mountain and another from the sea. On the night of 24 December, the 306th Field Artillery Battalion began its march from the Palompon Road Junction along the only road to Matagob, a distance of 10 miles over a single, narrow causeway, under persistent enemy sniper fire. Immediately upon arrival at Matagob, the 306th Field Artillery Battalion came under observed enemy artillery fire and promptly opened counterbattery fire while shells were falling in battery positions. The enemy fire was silenced and enemy field pieces destroyed within a few minutes of the initiation of artillery fire. The battalion's position was, of necessity, 2,000 yards in rear of the front lines and without defilade from the commanding terrain held by the enemy demolition parties, which were killed at close quarters by members of the battalion. On 25 December, the infantry advance in the mountains encountered strong enemy resistance and was held up temporarily. The enemy was concealed skillfully in numerous mutually supporting strong points. Massed artillery fire was placed on the enemy. These concentrations were so dense and effective that they stripped the terrain of all vegetation, caught the enemy in his well-concealed and dug-in positions, and inflicted severe casualties. After these fire missions were completed, the infantry was then able to continue its advance. This vital artillery support was accomplished, despite the fact that the 306th Field Artillery Battalion, was hemmed in by enemy groups in the surrounding hills, without infantry protection, continually fired upon by enemy artillery and mortar units, and subjected to persistent night attacks made by the demolition parties of a fanatical foe. About 0800 on 26 December, an enemy force, with estimated strength of a platoon, attacked the service battery, but was driven back after a sharp and decisive fight, leaving three dead. Substantial evidence was discovered later that the enemy had suffered heavy casualties in this short action. Later, an artillery patrol engaged the enemy about 1,000 yards from the battalion's position. After receiving several casualties, the patrol was withdrawn and the enemy taken under direct artillery fire. More than 50 Japanese were killed in this action. Another artillery security patrol, composed of 20 men from a firing battery, encountered an enemy infiltration party of approximately 50. The patrol, with grim determination, charged the enemy, killing 33 and routing the others. Only six members of the patrol were wounded. Lacking infantry protection, the 306th Field Artillery Battalion maintained its position for 144 hours in this infested area, displacing only when its immediate tactical mission had been completed. Though subjected to attacks day and night, this organization contributed materially to crushing the enemy between two friendly forces, enabling the latter to effect a junction and wrest from the enemy his last port, thus terminating all organized resistance on the Island of Leyte, Philippine Islands. The extraordinary determination, tenacity, aggressiveness, and esprit de corps displayed by the 306th Field Artillery Battalion in its isolated mountain position and fight against a fanatical enemy reflect the highest credit on this organization and the United States Army. 1. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted men:

Private First Class John P. Kenny (Army serial No. 32267922), 306th Infantry, Army of the United States, on 4 May 1945, on Okinawa, displayed extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy. From an advance observation post, seeing a company of Japanese moving toward the battalion headquarters, Private Kenny and his comrades opened fire. The enemy, determined to destroy the position quickly, covered the post in a hail of mortar and machine-gun fire; then, with fixed bayonets, they charged. Private Kenny, severely wounded, propped himself into position, and firing into the foe at point-blank range, assisted in stopping the attack. As the enemy resumed the assault he was still before them, and firing his rifle with deadly accuracy, he held his position. Suffering from his many wounds, he lapsed into unconsciousness as friendly force rushed up. Private Kenny's heroic stand, in the face of great odds, delayed the hostile advance and enabled his unit to organize a coordinated attack to accomplish the destruction of the enemy force.

Staff Sergeant Nathaniel M. Quinton (Army serial No. 38692006), Company A, 112th Infantry, Army of the United States, on 7 November 1944, displayed extraordinary heroism at Kommerscheidt, Germany. Following the heavy fire of German tanks against his squad at point blank range, he held his forward position in the face of attacking infantry. When the enemy platoon was only 25 yards away, he opened fire with his automatic rifle, killing twenty of the enemy and forcing the rest to withdraw. He repelled two more determined attacks; then, fired on by an enemy sniper as he rushed to another position, he dropped to the ground, and, hurling a grenade, silenced the enemy rifleman. He crawled on to a new position, and spotting a column of approaching enemy infantry, again opened fire and killed or wounded at least ten of the enemy. By his gallantry and indomitable courage under heavy fire, Sergeant Quinton alone inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy and disorganized a strong hostile attack.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific, to the following-named officers:

First Lieutenant Frank M. Brown, OS90107 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, commanding 2d Battalion, 22d Infantry, Philippine

Army, on 18 January 1942, displayed extraordinary gallantry in action at Abucay, Bataan. Seeing two marines lying wounded only a short distance from the enemy positions, he ran across open ground between the lines to the first marine. Moving him back to the Filipino fox holes, under heavy enemy fire he ran back for the second man and carried him a short way. Because of the man's severe wounds, he then dashed back alone to the Filipino lines, picked up a stretcher, and with another marine again ran back through the enemy fire, placed the wounded man on the stretcher, and carried him to safety. Lieutenant Brown's courageous conduct and devotion to his wounded comrades are in keeping with high traditions of the military service.

Colonel Harry J. Hawthorne, O385412 (then major), Air Corps, Army of the United States, commanding the 65th Bombardment Squadron (H), 43d Bombardment Group (H), displayed extraordinary heroism in the Bismarck Sea Battle on 2 and 3 March 1943. He led his aircraft through hazardous weather conditions on a daring low-altitude attack against a large enemy convoy. In the face of intense antiaircraft fire and fierce fighter opposition, his crew shot down two enemy airplanes, and his bombers scored numerous hits, sinking or damaging several Japanese vessels. By his indomitable courage and outstanding leadership, Colonel Hawthorne played an important role in that heavy blow against Japanese operations in the Southwest Pacific Area.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Charles R. Broshous, O18977, General Staff Corps, United States Army. March to October 1945.

Colonel James F. Collins, O16819 (then brigadier general), United States Army. July 1944 to May 1946. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General Collins, for services from November 1944 to June 1945, as published in General Orders 127, Headquarters United States Army Forces, Pacific. 21 August 1945.)

Colonel Frank Dorn, O15278 (then brigadier general), Field Artillery, United States Army. April to October 1944. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General Dorn, as published in General Orders 11, United States Army Forces, India-Burma Theater, 1 November 1944.)

Major General John L. Homer, O3115, United States Army. February 1945 to August 1946. (This award supersedes the award of a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit, to Major General Homer for services from February to October 1945, as published in WD General Orders 113, 1945.)

Colonel Eugene McGinley, O12318 (then brigadier general), Field Artillery Corps, United States Army. June 1944 to November 1945.

III. SILVER STAR.—I. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Captain Frederick F. Thomas, O345006, Cavalry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on Luzon, Philippine Islands, while assigned to the 13th Infantry, Philippine Army. At Urdanetta, in December 1941, he displayed remarkable courage leading his battalion in the defense of the approaches of the tactically important Carmen bridge. When his untrained troops disintegrated before vastly superior forces, he saved the remnants of his command by swimming across the treacherous Agno River. Again at Betis, Pampanga on 4 January 1942, Captain Thomas was able, by outstanding leadership and gallantry, to extricate the remnants of his personnel after his position had been overrun by enemy tanks.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded posthumously by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific, to the following-named enlisted man:

Private William M. Hennessy (Army serial No. 20900718) Company C, 194th Tank Battalion, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry near Barrio Piis, Tayabas, Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 25 December 1941. When a half-track, of which he was one of the crew, was ambushed and subjected to the intense fire of three Japanese machine guns at point-blank range, he assisted heroically in repelling the attack, thus ensuring the maintenance of contact between elements of two Philippine Divisions. Private Hennessy's conduct reflects great credit upon himself and the combat soldiers with whom he served.

IV. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bull. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Second Lieutenant Vernon C. Clark, United States Marine Corps Reserve, displayed gallantry in action while commanding a platoon of Company A, 1st Battalion, 1st Marine Parachute Regiment, on 28 December 1943, at Bougainville, British Solomon Islands. When his leading assault platoon was hit by fierce enemy fire following a strenuous march through dense swamp and jungle, he fearlessly exposed himself, led his men in a daring attack, and personally destroyed the occupants of two enemy emplacements. Because of Lieutenant Clark's heroic example, the platoon seized its objective and contributed greatly to the successful accomplishment of the company's mission.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bull. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Corporal William S. Ash (Army serial No. 18033904) (then private first class), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 6 May 1942, during a heavy enemy artillery and aerial bombardment, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. As he was running a shot truck forward loaded with a sensitive fused projectile, he was severely wounded, but with great courage and presence of mind he successfully brought the vehicle to a halt, thus insuring that the runaway truck did not detonate the sensitive fuse. Corporal Ash's heroic determination and fortitude reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Lieutenant Commander Malcolm McG. Champlin, United States Naval Reserve, as Naval Aide to the Commanding General, United States Army Forces in the AGO 605B

Philippines, displayed outstanding gallantry on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 20 February 1942. He voluntarily went forward to the front lines in order to ascertain if Naval gun-fire could be of assistance, and in so doing, advanced well beyond a line of enemy snipers in order to fully reconnoiter for possible artillery targets. Commander Champlin's conduct reflects credit upon himself and the United States Navy.

First Sergeant Harvie L. Farmer (Army serial No. 6359920), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 23 April 1942. Sergeant Farmer and two other soldiers voluntarily left the safety of Malinta Tunnel and traversed 800 yards of shell-swept ground to rescue a seriously wounded comrade. Despite the intense enemy artillery fire, Sergeant Farmer and his comrade were successful in the rescue. Sergeant Farmer's conduct on this occasion reflects great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

V. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Alvord Van P. Anderson, as published in General Orders 305, United States Army Forces, Pacific, 1 November 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942), and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Morris R. Nelson, O16490, United States Army. June 1945 to June 1946.

5. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Karl Truesdell, Jr., as published in WD General Orders 60, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Karl Truesdell, Jr., O19258, General Staff Corps (Air Corps), United States Army. June through August 1945.

6. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Lieutenant Colonel Charles V. Wilson, as published in General Orders 226, European Theater, 1 September 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Charles V. Wilson, O23564, General Staff Corps, United States Army. January 1945 to September 1946.

7. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Brigadier General Everett E. Brown, as published in General Orders 317, Headquarters United States Army Forces in the South Pacific Area 21 October 1943, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Everett E. Brown, O6303, Infantry, United States Army, September 1943 to June 1945.

8. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Leonard D. Heaton, as published in General Orders 73, Headquarters Hawaiian Department, 31 May 1943, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Leonard D. Heaton, O16960, Medical Corps, United States Army. November 1944 to June 1945.

9. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Hayden N. Smith, as published in General Orders 104, European Theater, 1 June 1945, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. 2. By direction of the President under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944) a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following named individual:

Platoon Sergeant Frederick G. McHugh (then private first class), United States Marine Corps. 15 April 1942.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to First Sergeant Matthew Dixon, as published in General Orders 17, Headquarters First Armored Division, 15 March 1944, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

First Sergeant Matthew Dixon (Army serial No. 34088201), Field Artillery, Army of the United States. January 1942 to March 1944.

VIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant Colonel Stephen C. Sitter, as published in WD General Orders 80, 1945, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Stephen C. Sitter, O20079, Medical Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Lieutenant Colonel Glenn P. Anderson, Jr., as published in General Orders 56, Headquarters Mediterranean Theater of Operations, 9 April 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Glenn P. Anderson, Jr., O21102 (then major), Air Corps, United States Army, distinguished himself by personal courage and conspicuous disregard for his own safety as A3 of the 64th Fighter Wing at the Salerno bridgehead in Italy. His command post, of necessity located well in front of our own artillery, was subjected to repeated enemy shelling. Colonel Anderson's courageous conduct was an inspiration to all about him and contributed much to the success of the operation.

IX. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers.

Second Lieutenant James T. Bryan, Jr., O721638, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 1 March 1945.

First Lieutenant William R. Graf, O388784, Air Corps, Army of the United States. October 1944 to July 1945.

X. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943), and AR 600-45 the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Joseph E. Smadel, O487235, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in the investigation of typhus fever during the period June 1943 to March 1945. First as Chief of the Virus Division, First Medical General Laboratory, in the European Theater of Operations and later as Chief of the Division of Virus and Rickettsial Diseases at the Army Medical School, Washington, D. C., Colonel Smadel provided special laboratory and biological supply services which were essential to the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission and to other organizations of the Army. By his original investigations, he advanced the knowledge of rickettsial infections, carried on new studies of the chemotherapy of typhus, and developed a type of vaccine against scrub typhus. Colonel Smadel contributed to practical typhus control and to the advancement of medical science.

I. SIGNAL CORPS PHOTOGRAPHIC LIBRARY AND LABORATORY.—1. Effective as of 1 September 1946, the Signal Corps Photographic Library and Laboratory is established as a class II activity under jurisdiction of the Chief Signal Officer, in The Pentagon, Washington 25, D. C.

2. The Chief Signal Officer will transfer the necessary personnel, military and civilian, from departmental to field status for duty in this activity.

[AG 020 (30 Aug 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 1st Battalion, 399th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance in combat during the period 16 November 1944 to 17 November 1944, near Raon L'Etape, France. Overlooking the important Muerthe River City of Raon L'Etape, in the thickly forested foothills of the Vosges Mountains, is a hill-mass known as Tete Des Reclus. This high ground, affording perfect enemy observation, barred an assault upon the vital communications city. On the rainy morning of 16 November, the 1st Battalion launched an attack to clear the enemy from these strongly fortified hill positions. Fighting through the dense, pine forest under intense enemy artillery, mortar, machine-gun and automatic-weapons fire, the 1st Battalion, after 3 hours of effort, drove across a trail circling the base of the hill-mass. A withering, 45 minute artillery preparation at this point proved ineffective against the deep, concrete- and log-covered enemy bunkers built into the side of the hills, and it soon became evident that basic infantry assault was the only feasible method for driving the enemy from their positions. In a fierce, close-in, small-arms fire fight, which increased in fury as they climbed the precipitous slopes, the 1st Battalion wormed its way toward the top of Hill 462.8, key to the enemy's defenses. Battling against fanatical enemy resistance, it finally reached the crest. Bitter, hand-to-hand fighting developed as the enemy hurled repeated counter-attacks against the inspired infantrymen. Once the 1st Battalion was driven from the hilltop, but rapidly regrouping, it regained its positions. At dark, the enemy finally withdrew, leaving the 1st Battalion in possession of high ground. Throughout, supplies had to be hand carried up the steep slopes under continuous enemy fire. Only the teamwork, coordination, and determination of all elements in the heroic 1st Battalion, made the success of this attack possible, opening the gateway through the Vosges Mountains to the Alsatian Plains beyond. (General Orders 206, Headquarters, 100th Infantry Division, 23 July 1945).

- Major Hugh de N. Wynne, O374104, General Staff Corps (Field Artillery), Army of the United States. July 1943 to January 1946.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named:

Captain William D. MacGibbon, O508201, (then first lieutenant) Infantry, Army of the United States. August 1944 to September 1945. (This award supersedes the awards of the Bronze Star Medal, for services from 20 August to 20 October 1944, and bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster to the Bronze Star Medal, for services from 15 August 1944 to 6 May 1945, to Captain MacGibbon, as published in General Orders 439, 36th Infantry Division, 14 November 1944, and General Orders 419, 36th Infantry Division, 26 September 1945, respectively.)

Chaplain (colonel) Maurice W. Reynolds, O11539, Corps of Chaplains, United States Army. July 1942 to December 1943.

Colonel Earl W. Thomson, O124147, Air Corps, Army of the United States. February 1943 to March 1944.

III. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for heroic achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers:

First Lieutenant Richard B. Malone, O765018, Air Corps, Army of the United States. On 31 December 1944, while serving as pilot on a B-17 type aircraft during a tactical mission over Hanover, Germany, Lieutenant Malone's aircraft was severely damaged by accidental bomb explosion. Exhibiting brilliant airmanship, Lieutenant Malone remained at the controls of his crippled aircraft in order to facilitate the safe escape of his crewmen. Immediately after the last crewman had escaped, the airplane went into a spin and exploded, carrying Lieutenant Malone to his death. The high degree of professional ability displayed by Lieutenant Malone, his courage, utter disregard for personal safety, and his unstinting devotion to duty are worthy of emulation by all and reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

First Lieutenant George C. Parker, O672401, Air Corps, Army of the United States. On 13 December 1943, while serving as pilot on a B-17 type aircraft during an operational mission over enemy-occupied Europe, Lieutenant Parker's aircraft suffered a direct hit from antiaircraft fire, which seriously damaged the airplane. Upon ordering his crewmen to abandon the ship, Lieutenant Parker remained at the controls in order to facilitate their safe escape. The courage, gallantry, and unstinting devotion to duty displayed by Lieutenant Parker are worthy of emulation by all and reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

IV. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By the direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men, who, on 17 March 1945, near Bologna, Italy, joined a mission voluntarily to rescue survivors whose airplane had crashed beyond Allied lines. Despite the dangers of enemy observation and a thickly sown mine field, they pressed forward heroically with the patrol toward the site of the crash. Their courageous actions reflect great credit on themselves and the military service.

Staff Sergeant Elmer L. Baum (Army serial No. 42028117), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.

Private Alfonso Chavez (Army serial No. 38070381), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.

Second Lieutenant J. T. Childress, O1999222, 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Captain Willis H. Davis, O411463, 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Technician Fourth Grade Sidney J. Fry (Army serial No. 33697344), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Private First Class Fred D. Gregorio (Army serial No. 33163340) (then private), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Private First Class Fred L. Henson (Army serial No. 34949091), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Private Clarence W. Higgins, Jr. (Army serial No. 42116668), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Private First Class O'Neal Istre, Jr. (Army serial No. 38490701), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Sergeant Joseph A. McAleer (Army serial No. 32196180), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Private First Class George J. Muschick (Army serial No. 35913893), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Second Lieutenant Robert Nicol, O2001834, 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Private First Class Roberto L. Osuna (Army serial No. 39138721), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.
 Staff Sergeant Lloyd W. Vogt (Army serial No. 36435313), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States.

Private First Class Barney D. McClue, United States Marine Corps, performed heroic services on 15 and 20 April 1942 while attached to Service Company, Fourth Marine Regiment, on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. On both occasions, he voluntarily left a place of comparative safety and, in the midst of heavy enemy artillery and bombing attacks, rendered first aid to the wounded, obtained a truck, and transported his fallen comrades to a field hospital. Private McClue's courageous actions were an inspiring example to his unit and contributed materially to the defense of the vital Philippine stronghold.

Platoon Sergeant Wilburn V. Van Buskirk (then private first class), United States Marine Corps, performed heroic services on 15 April 1942 while attached to Service Company, Fourth Marine Regiment, on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When a nearby installation received a direct hit during a bombing attack, he voluntarily left a place of comparative safety and, exposing himself to great personal danger, managed to reach and give aid to men injured by the exploding bomb. Sergeant Van Buskirk then obtained a truck and courageously drove the wounded along a route exposed to heavy artillery fire to the Malinta Tunnel Hospital.

III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 397th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding accomplishment in combat during the period 5 to 11 April 1945, in the vicinity of Heilbronn, Germany. Crossing the Neckar River by assault boat under heavy fire, the 1st Battalion secured a bridgehead in the face of unyielding resistance and inaugurated its block-by-block, house-by-house, and even room-by-room conquest of the key rail city of Heilbronn. Deadly cross-fire from automatic weapons emplaced in rubble heaps and cellars of ruined buildings slowed the attack; snipers in countless vantage points constantly harassed our troops; and thickly wooded hills on three sides afforded the enemy perfect observation for the direction of all types of artillery fire. Yet despite fanatical resistance, the 1st Battalion continued its implacable advance, repulsing repeated tank-infantry counterattacks and destroying group after group of infiltrating enemy infantry. Supporting armor and tank destroyers were sped across the river by a hastily installed pontoon bridge, which was as quickly demolished by artillery fire; casualties were evacuated and supplies brought forward by ferry under continuous shelling; and on 11 April, after 7 days of the most savagely prosecuted fighting on the entire western front, the 1st Battalion, 397th Infantry Regiment, virtually completed its capture of the city, because of the individual bravery of its members and the esprit de corps of the organization, reflecting the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 260, Headquarters, 100th Infantry Division, 29 September 1945.)

2. The 2d Battalion, 397th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding accomplishment in combat during the period 4 to 12 April 1945, at Heilbronn, Germany. On 4 April the 2d Battalion launched its frontal assault against Heilbronn, key German rail center and defensive bastion of the Neckar River line. Ferrying assault forces across the Neckar under intense concentrations of artillery and mortar shelling as well as small-arms fire, advance elements overran entrenched enemy positions on the east bank, inflicted heavy casualties, and established a precarious bridgehead. For 7 consecutive days, the 2d Battalion then fought its way forward street-by-street, house-by-house, and even room-by-room, overcoming fanatical enemy resistance and repulsing counterattack after counterattack as the enemy struggled desperately to hold Heilbronn at all costs. Enemy artillery fire on dominating hills surrounding the city pounded the river crossing site with unabated savagery, preventing the bridging of the stream and making it necessary to ferry supplies and casualties across the Neckar throughout the battle. Attempts to float armor across the river failed when improvised rafts capsized, and lacking tank support, the 2d Battalion doggedly inched its way forward until, on 11 April, final remnants of the defending forces were routed from high ground behind the city. Thus the 2d Battalion, 397th Infantry Regiment, by dint of resolute, unfaltering courage displayed by every man and the perfect coordination of all elements, crushed fanatical enemy resistance, breached the formidable Neckar defense line, and made possible the subsequent drive into Austria. (General Orders 260, Headquarters 100th Infantry Division, 29 September 1945.)

Lieutenant General Walter John Ganshof van der Meersch, Belgian Army. September 1944 to June 1945.

Colonel Carl Gösta Von Porat, Royal Swedish Air Force. December 1944 to May 1945.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Leo Sager, Swedish Army. July to December 1944.

II. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Second Lieutenant Kenneth V. Winegar, O731350, Air Corps, Army of the United States. December 1942 to October 1943.

III..DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Flying Cross awarded to First Lieutenant Robert N. Torrance, as published in General Orders 966, Headquarters 3d Bombardment Division, 11 November 1944, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for heroic achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926). The citation is as follows:

First Lieutenant Robert N. Torrance, O818780, Air Corps, Army of the United States. On 30 November 1944, while serving as pilot on a B-17 type aircraft during a tactical mission over Merseburg, Germany, Lieutenant Torrance's aircraft suffered a direct hit by antiaircraft fire, which forced it into a spin. Upon ordering his crew to abandon the airplane, Lieutenant Torrance attempted desperately to regain control of the stricken aircraft in order to facilitate their escape. Lieutenant Torrance was still at the controls when the bomber exploded. The courage and gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Torrance are worthy of emulation by all and reflect the highest credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

IV..BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Captain Edgar S. Rosenstock, O21159, Coast Artillery, United States Army. March to May 1942.

Field Cook Edwin J. Rotter, United States Marine Corps. February to May 1942.

First Lieutenant Hugh A. Tistadt, Jr., O5910, United States Marine Corps. April to May 1942.

Captain Raymond P. Zelinsky, O360060 (then first lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States. January to April 1942.

Private First Class James E. Hinkle (Army serial No. 38685420), 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 17 March 1945, near Bologna, Italy, joined a mission voluntarily to rescue survivors whose airplane had crashed beyond Allied lines. Despite the dangers of enemy observation and a thickly sown mine field, he pressed forward heroically with the patrol toward the site of the crash. Private Hinkle's courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Second Lieutenant Walter Kott, O890313, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 8-9 April 1942. Lieutenant Kott was in command of a company of Filipino soldiers, part of a covering force with orders to hold until daybreak. When news came of the fall of Bataan, he had been ordered to assemble his company and surrender to the enemy. When the enemy approached, Lieutenant Kott advanced to meet the Japanese with a white flag. The Japanese continued to advance, maintaining their fire. Although the weapons of his unit were stacked, Lieutenant Kott continued to expose himself, until killed in the attempt to protect his men.

First Lieutenant Reginald M. Polk, O402890, Signal Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroic conduct in operations at Bataan Peninsula, Philippine Islands, on 8 April 1942. Ammunition being destroyed preparatory to the surrender was causing extensive damage to the telephone central located nearby. Lieutenant Polk learned of this situation and promptly manned the switchboard alone, maintaining communications at a very critical period.

Second Lieutenant Dillo G. Sykes, O2007040, 168th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 17 March 1945, near Bologna, Italy, joined a mission voluntarily to rescue survivors whose airplane had crashed beyond Allied lines. Despite the dangers of enemy observation and a thickly sown mine field, he pressed forward heroically with the patrol toward the site of the crash. Lieutenant Sykes' courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

V. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers, flight officers, and enlisted men:

Company H, 397th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding accomplishment in combat on 8 and 9 January 1945 in the vicinity of Rimling, France. Under the pressure of a savagely prosecuted attack by numerically superior hostile forces, which forced back adjacent elements, Company H staunchly held its ground, threw back assault after assault, and, by its gallant and unyielding defense, prevented the encirclement of the battalion by the enemy. The initial hostile attack in the night by infantry mounted on tanks was dispersed by the deadly fire of the company's heavy machine guns and mortars, and subsequent daylight tank-infantry attacks were also repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. Attempts at infiltration by hostile soldiers wearing American parkas were thwarted and the opposing riflemen killed or forced to withdraw. Sixty-three prisoners were captured and an estimated four hundred casualties inflicted upon the attackers in the heroic action in which every member of Company H, 397th Infantry Regiment, reflected great credit on himself, his company, and the Army of the United States. The citation reads as follows:

The 2d Battalion (Reinforced), 47th Infantry Regiment, is cited for conspicuous battle action and outstanding performance of duty during the period 2 to 5 April 1945. The town of Oberkirchen, Germany, one of the key points in the enemy escape route and so situated that it controlled the road net vital to the enemy communications and supply, was assigned as an objective to the 2d Battalion (Reinforced) and at 0800 hours, 2 April 1945, the battalion jumped off to seize this objective. Advancing over 7 miles of difficult, hilly, and exposed terrain and under intense small-arms and mortar fire along the entire route, the battalion, Company G leading, passed through Welminghausen and ran into heavily fortified positions, and, after an extremely bitter and aggressive hand-to-hand fight, cleared the woods with the following results: 30 enemy dead, 8 enemy wounded, and 52 captured. The battalion continued onward with supporting machine-gun and tank fire from the 2d Platoon, 746th Tank Battalion, though still under intense enemy small-arms and now artillery fire, and entered Vewald, where Company G, under direct fire from three Mark IV tanks and artillery, drove the enemy from the town and caused the tanks to withdraw, after a hand-to-hand, house-to-house struggle, which caused the enemy the following casualties: 10 enemy dead, and 40 captured. The advance, which now came under heavy artillery and self-propelled-gun fire, continued to the objective, where, after an intense artillery barrage, Companies E and F advanced over exposed terrain, which was under deadly small-arms, mortar, artillery, self-propelled, and point-blank fire from five enemy tanks, entered the town at 1500 hours, and, by 1800 hours, completely cleared the town of enemy, after a bloody hand-to-hand encounter. An enemy counterattack, composed of 200 infantrymen and 6 tanks, was launched at 1900 hours, which overran part of Company E and penetrated two-thirds through town, isolating 2 platoons of Company E. At this point, the battalion called for, and received, all available artillery fire from the 84th Field Artillery Battalion and Cannon Company, 47th Infantry Regiment, on its own positions, which inflicted many casualties upon the enemy. Company F then launched a vigorous attack, which succeeded in making contact with Company E. The lines became very fluid, with enemy remaining in scattered groups in the town. Preparations were made for expected counterattacks, including the laying of mines by the 1st Platoon, Company B, 15th Engineer Battalion. At 0630 hours the following morning, the enemy launched another attack, consisting of 200 infantrymen and 5 tanks, in a last desperate effort to drive the battalion from the town. Three platoons were overrun in this attack and enemy tanks penetrated to the center of town. Bazooka teams destroyed 3 of the enemy tanks from a range of 20 yards and tank-destroyer fire from the 2d Platoon, 890th Tank Destroyer Battalion, accounted for for 1 more. Fierce and vicious hand-to-hand fighting and the extreme aggressiveness of the men of the battalion caused the enemy to withdraw in wild disorder, leaving 78 captured, many wounded, and the town safely in hand. During the period 2 to 5 April 1945, the 2d Battalion (Reinforced), 47th Infantry Regiment, assaulted and captured 3 towns, took 270 prisoners and hundreds of small arms and automatic weapons, destroyed 4 enemy tanks, and completely annihilated 1 battalion of infantry and elements of 2 other battalions. During this period, the battalion operated without flank protection on either flank, suffered numerous casualties, which were evacuated by Company B, 9th Medical Battalion, crossed more than 13 miles of heavily defended and difficult terrain; and engaged and annihilated a fanatical stubborn enemy by a magnificent display of gallantry, courage, and devotion to duty. (General Orders 133, Headquarters 9th Infantry Division, 24 July 1945.)

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT—Quartermaster Experimental Fuels Station, Louisiana, Missouri, transferred to Ordnance Department-----	Section I
BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units-----	II

I. MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.—1. Effective as of 26 July 1946, the Missouri Ordnance Works, Louisiana, Missouri, discontinued 1 February 1946, is reestablished as a military establishment (industrial) under the control of the Chief of Ordnance.

2. Effective as of 26 July 1946, the Quartermaster Experimental Fuels Station, Louisiana, Missouri, is transferred from the jurisdiction of The Quartermaster General and placed under the control of the Chief of Ordnance.

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 44th Field Artillery Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 26 July to 2 August 1944. As the artillery component of the 22d Regimental Combat Team which was attached to Combat Command A, 2d Armored Division, the 44th Field Artillery Battalion aided materially in effecting the break-through in the German line west of St. Lo, France. The resulting St. Gillis-Marigny gap, which the 44th Field Artillery Battalion helped to establish by penetration and thereafter held open, permitted the break-out of Allied armor, which played a major part in the complete collapse of the German western positions. Without previous experience and only the briefest indoctrination, the 44th Field Artillery Battalion entered the St. Lo break-through operation on 26 July as armored artillery in a highly mobile warfare at St. Gillis, Canisy, Le Mesnil Herman, Villerbaudon, Mayen, Percy, and Tessy-Sur-Vire. Throughout the operation, forward observers rode atop tanks and directed fire in close support of attacking infantry. Continuously displacing forward, the battalion was subjected to murderous enemy aircraft bombing and strafing. At Villebaudon, cannoneers were forced to attack enemy infantry in order to secure firing positions for their guns. Despite the unusual difficulties encountered and the extreme fatigue produced by 24 hours a day mobile combat, the esprit of the battalion remained superior throughout. Consistently and invariably, the 44th Field Artillery Battalion performed its mission as an intricate part of the command, delivering close supporting fire speedily and accurately with devastating effect upon the enemy. The superb courage, combat efficiency, and tenacity of purpose manifested by each officer and man of the 44th Field Artillery Battalion reflect the highest credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 69, Headquarters First Army, 26 July 1946.)

2. The 79th Fighter Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action during the period 16 to 20 April 1945. The 79th Fighter Group, flying as the only American fighter-bomber unit coordinating its efforts with the British Eighth Army's drive to pierce the heavily defended Santerno River line to reach Bologna and Ferrara, signally distinguished itself by the resolute manner in which it overcame hazardous conditions to contribute materially to the defeat of the German armies in Italy. Flying their P-47 type aircraft in daring minimum altitude attacks, only a few hundred yards in front of our forward positions, despite continuous enemy antiaircraft barrages of such intensity that 2 aircraft and pilots were lost and 19 aircraft were damaged, the gallant pilots of the 79th Fighter Group made their attacks with consummate skill and accuracy, in the face of the rapidly changing ground situation, which allowed less than an hour between the instant the target was received and the pilots were briefed and airborne. On no occasion was any target declined and on each mission the objective was struck at the time specified, although in two instances, pilots continued on to the attack after their aircraft had been turned completely over by bursting shells, while flying at a speed of 400 miles an hour at an altitude of 100 feet. Taking off from a short runway with obstructions at either end, forced to fly with their carburetor air filters closed because of blowing sand at their airdrome, and, as a result of which there was a loss of engine power, briefed at a central point rather than in the usual manner by squadrons on the complicated nature of the close-in targets to be attacked, pilots bombed, strafed, and rocketed such pinpoint targets as fortified houses, camouflaged pillboxes, and motor transport with devastating effect. In these 5 days of intensified effort, during which each pilot of the group flew approximately 8 sorties, the unprecedented total of 854 sorties were flown, resulting in the destruction or damaging of 173 fortified houses, 6 guns, 4 tanks, 8 armored cars, 84 motor transport, 8 bridges, 18 barges, and in numerous casualties to fleeing enemy troops. The extraordinary performance of the 79th Fighter Group's air and ground personnel in overcoming the greatest of aerial hazards and maintenance difficulties was typical of their esprit de corps and bravery and reflected the highest credit on themselves and the military service of the United States. I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approve 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific, to the following-named officer:

Major Joseph J. Hughes, O288858, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States, while serving with the Army Transport Service in the Philippine Department, displayed extraordinary heroism at Manila, Philippine Islands, on 31 December 1941. During the time that the wharf burned fiercely from fires started by enemy action, he secured a launch and, proceeding along the breakwater, towed barges, scows, and other loaded craft to a place of safety. Through a rain of sparks and flaming gasoline on the water, he plied the craft to rescue over 100 Filipino stevedores who were trapped on the burning pier. The courageous actions of Major Hughes accounted for the saving of many lives and great quantities of valuable property.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Brigadier General Robert J. Gill, O501560, Army of the United States. July 1945 to May 1946.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant General Lewis H. Brereton, as published in WD General Orders 7, 1943, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant General Lewis H. Brereton, O3132, United States Army. August 1944 to May 1945. (This award supersedes the award of a bronze Oak-Leaf cluster to the Distinguished-Flying Cross to Lieutenant General Brereton, as published in General Orders 87, United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe, 2 November 1944.)

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant General Albert C. Wedemeyer, as published in WD General Orders 73, 1943, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant General Albert C. Wedemeyer, O12484, United States Army. November 1944 to May 1946.

IV..SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Sergeant Lynn P. Beaumont (Army serial No. 18048995) (then private), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 60th Coast Artillery (Antiaircraft), displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on or about 5 May 1942. When the communications lines to the anti-aircraft command post were destroyed, he responded to a call for a volunteer to proceed through an enemy bombardment to procure essential information. With utter disregard for his own safety, Sergeant Beaumont accepted that hazardous mission and accomplished it heroically, despite severe wounds.

V..SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Silver Star awarded to First Lieutenant Charles W. Erhardt, as published in General Orders 29, Headquarters Philippine Coast Artillery Command, Fort Mills, Philippine Islands, 24 April 1942, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded to him by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

First Lieutenant Charles W. Erhardt, O370677, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 29 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action during a combined aerial and artillery bombardment at Fort Mills, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Without regard for his own safety, in a building which was registered on several times by enemy guns, Lieutenant Erhardt remained at his observation post to spot hostile positions, thus enabling American artillery to conduct efficient counterbattery fire.

VI..LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Orion V. Kempf, O17372, Medical Administrative Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Arch M. McKeever, O199234, Judge Advocate General's Department, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Major Havelock D. Nelson, O253369, Cavalry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

VII..LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

- Colonel Ralph C. Benner, O10275, Chemical Warfare Service, United States Army. April 1942 to July 1943.
- Lieutenant Colonel Arihur G. Christensen, O20871 (then major), Infantry, United States Army. 8 December 1941 to 9 April 1942.
- Lieutenant Colonel Walter C. Conway, O20735, General Staff Corps (Coast Artillery Corps), United States Army. July 1943 to May 1946.
- Colonel William P. Corr, O213954, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. October 1943 to June 1945.
- Colonel Edward V. Freeman, O11800, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army. May 1944 to July 1946.
- Colonel Walter L. Furbershaw, O182893, Military Intelligence, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1944.
- Lieutenant Colonel Hubert G. Hanson, O303662 (then major), Corps of Military Police, Army of the United States. May 1944 to January 1946.
- Colonel Hamilton Heard, O900829 (then lieutenant colonel), Air Corps, Army of the United States. June 1944 to September 1945.
- Colonel John I. Hincke, O15539, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to July 1944.
- Staff Sergeant Ralph J. Jacques, (Army serial No. 6582905) (then sergeant), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 1 January to 10 April 1942.
- Corporal Nils F. Larson, (Army serial No. 11039945), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 9 November 1944.
- Major John A. Layne, O540278, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. September 1944 to April 1946.
- Colonel Ernest O. Lee, O15517, Finance Department, United States Army. January 1945 to May 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Wallace C. Liberty, O331467, Infantry, Army of the United States. May 1944 to September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Ben B. Lyon, O885617, Air Corps, Army of the United States. September 1942 to August 1945.
- Colonel Elmer G. Thomas, O5995, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. December 1941 to September 1943.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer:

Colonel Jesse B. Matlack, O8639, Inspector General's Department (Field Artillery), United States Army. May 1944 to March 1945 and April to October 1945. (This award supersedes the awards of a Bronze Star Medal and a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster to the Bronze Star Medal to Colonel Matlack, for services from 4 May to 21 September 1944, as published in General Orders 322, European Theater, 29 November 1945, and General Orders 46, European Theater, 20 February 1946, respectively.)

VIII—LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942)

and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant General Salih Saib, Iraqi Army. December 1944 to September 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. Lieutenant Colonel Charles C. Aston, British Army. January 1944 to September 1945.

Colonel Ernest F. B. Cook, British Army. 4 January 1942 to 21 January 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Frederick Thomas Russell Darley, British Army. 19 February to 10 May 1945.

Colonel Sami Fettah, Royal Iraqi Air Force. January 1944 to September 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Abbas Ali Ghalib, Iraqi Army. December 1944 to September 1945.

Colonel E. P. J. Ryan, British Army. January 1944 to September 1945.

IX. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Robert C. Kyser, as published in WD General Orders 120, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Robert C. Kyser, O19535, General Staff Corps, United States Army. June 1945 to June 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General Kenneth P. Lord, as published in WD General Orders 124, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Kenneth P. Lord, O3172, United States Army. August 1945 to February 1946.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General William E. Lynd, as published in WD General Orders 20, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General William E. Lynd, O5156 (then major general), United States Army. July 1943 to July 1944.

4. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Lieutenant Colonel Jay Dee Vanderpool, as published in General Orders 111, United States Army Forces in the Far East, 6 May 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Jay Dee Vanderpool, O410776, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. March 1945 to May 1946.

5. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Henry R. Westphalinger, as published in WD General Orders 82, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Henry R. Westphalinger, O16130, General Staff Corps, United States Army. 11 October 1944 to 1 June 1946.

X.—DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for heroic achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Second Lieutenant Floyd E. Addy, O691932, Air Corps, Army of the United States, while serving as pilot on a B-24 type aircraft during a tactical mission over Laon Airfield, France, on 14 June 1944, his aircraft suffered a direct hit by antiaircraft fire which disabled two engines. Realizing that the airplane was too badly damaged to return to England, Lieutenant Addy ordered his crewmen to abandon the aircraft. Upon attempting to make his own escape, Lieutenant Addy noticed that the crippled aircraft was heading for a Belgian village. With utter disregard for personal safety, Lieutenant Addy returned to the controls and attempted a crash landing outside the village, however, the plane was too severely damaged and, in the ensuing crash, Lieutenant Addy lost his life. The courage, daring, and unstinting devotion to duty displayed by Lieutenant Addy are worthy of emulation by all and reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

Staff Sergeant Edgar G. Delp (Army serial No. 13130919), Air Corps, Army of the United States, while serving as tail gunner on a B-17 type aircraft during a tactical mission over Solingen, Germany, on 5 December 1943, was seriously injured by machine-gun fire from attacking enemy fighter aircraft. Despite his wounds, Sergeant Delp continued to defend his aircraft, his accurate and intense fire destroying one enemy aircraft and contributing to the destruction of several more. The courage and unstinting devotion to duty displayed by Sergeant Delp are worthy of emulation by all and reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

XI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant William F. Noble, O953162, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. 15 December 1944.

Major Samuel L. Heisinger, O358142, Judge Advocate General's Department, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Second Lieutenant Eugene A. Goff, O890426, Ordnance Department, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 8-9 April 1942. He was in command of a company of Filipino soldiers, part of a covering force with orders to hold until daybreak. When news came of the fall of Bataan, Lieutenant Goff was ordered to assemble his company and surrender to the enemy. When the enemy approached, Lieutenant Goff advanced to meet the Japanese with a white flag. The Japanese continued to advance, maintaining their fire. Although the weapons of his unit were stacked, Lieutenant Goff continued to expose himself until killed in the attempt to protect his men.

Second Lieutenant William G. Ricker, O1823208, Infantry, Army of the United States, performed heroic services in Germany, on 19 February 1945, by volunteering for a hazardous mission in leading a combat patrol into the enemy's lines, without any consideration for his own personal safety. He furnished his battalion with valuable information, which later enabled it to successfully launch its attack and take its objectives. Lieutenant Ricker made an outstanding contribution to the cause for which he sacrificed his life and to the highest traditions of the military service.

Private First Class Chrispin L. Miranda (Army Serial No. 39397927), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 19 December 1944 near Schonberg, Belgium, displayed extraordinary heroism. His company, in support of an attack against surrounding enemy forces, was caught by heavy enemy fire. Remaining at his position under a veritable hail of flying bullets and explosives, continuing to fire his weapon, he furnished effective support and was severely wounded when his mortar received a direct hit. Private Miranda's courageous devotion to duty reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

XII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers, enlisted man, and individual:

- Master Sergeant Morton W. Bloomfield (Army serial No. 32578034), Detached Enlisted Men's List, Army of the United States. December 1943 to May 1945.
- Mario Marcello De Leva*, Italian civilian. March 1944 to May 1945.
- Major Thomas E. Greve, O431823, Air Corps, Army of the United States. July 1944 to December 1945.
- Colonel Joseph E. Kramer, O108291 (then lieutenant colonel), Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.
- Major George R. Lennon, O919489 (then captain), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. July 1944 to November 1945.
- Captain Finn W. Roll, O1285308, Infantry, Army of the United States. June 1942 to November 1944.
- Captain Charles F. W. St. Quintin, Royal Navy. November 1944 to March 1946.
- Lieutenant Commander Stewart P. Seigle (then lieutenant), United States Naval Reserve. 9 to 20 September 1943.
- Captain Fred H. Sorrough, O560358, Air Corps, Army of the United States. April to September 1945.
- Major Arthur E. Strang, O331726, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.
- Major Harold B. Watton, O920055, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. October 1944 to December 1945.
- Colonel Edwin K. Wright, O15475, General Staff Corps (Infantry), United States Army. August to December 1944.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Captain Charles Wyatt, O261206, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. 1 to 6 May 1942.

Sergeant Maurice H. Freeland (Army serial No. 19013527), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron, performed heroic services, on 7 February 1942, while serving with his Air Corps unit as infantry on Bataan, Philippine Islands. He voluntarily joined a party organized to assault, from landing boats, the enemy forces on the beach and in caves at Quinauan Point. Disregarding his own safety, Sergeant Freeland assisted in shelling the caves from an off-shore position fully exposed to enemy aircraft. He then joined the successful assault on the beach, which eliminated the enemy penetration there, although the action was opposed by close-range enemy rifle and machine-gun fire and aerial bombing.

Staff Sergeant Joseph M. Burrola (Army-serial No. 20843294) (then sergeant), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 8 December 1941, performed heroic services while in command of a 37-mm-gun section at Clark Air Field, Luzon, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy bombing and strafing attack, the surrounding high grass caught fire and threatened to destroy his section and its ammunition supply. Without stopping his guns, and despite severe burns to himself Sergeant Burrola extinguished the fire and saved the position.

Private First Class Charles D. Lee (Army serial No. 34265519), Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 18 February 1945, performed heroic services near Etzlinger, France. During a withdrawal of his company in the face of numerous enemy tanks, Private Lee stopped to aid a wounded man, then, across 150 yards of exposed ground, carried him to safety. Private Lee's courageous action, under heavy enemy tank fire, was an inspiration to the men in his platoon.

Major Peter Mirakian, O1286165 (then captain), Infantry, Army of the United States, as commanding officer, Company B, 415th Infantry Regiment, performed heroic services on 31 October 1944 in Holland. He led his company across the strongly held Mark River in a surprise night attack and, maintaining his position throughout the next day under heavy hostile mortar fire, repulsed numerous enemy infantry attacks supported by tanks. Through his outstanding leadership and personal courage, Major Mirakian contributed greatly to the valiant stand of his unit and to the successful accomplishment of the battalion's mission.

XIII. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Thomas J. O'Donnell, American civilian. June to August 1944.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific, to the following-named enlisted man:

Sergeant Vicente Villamor (Army Serial No. 6611365), Philippine Army, a member of Company II, 57th Infantry (Philippine Scouts), on 15 January 1942, displayed extraordinary heroism at Mabatang, Abucay, Bataan, Philippine Islands. He penetrated into the enemy's main line of resistance, broke up its concentration, and frustrated a possible attack by the enemy. Without regard for his own safety, standing amid the heavy hostile fire, he engaged over a hundred of the foe, holding them at bay with the skilful firing of his rifle until reinforcements arrived. Through his courage and heroic determination, Sergeant Villamor relieved his company from the danger of a surprise mass attack by enemy forces.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General Lester J. Whitlock, as published in WD General Orders 18, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Lester J. Whitlock; O7138 (then major general), United States Army. September 1943 to March 1945.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General Charles A. Willoughby, as published in WD General Orders 17, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Charles A. Willoughby, O4615 (then major general), United States Army. September 1943 to March 1945.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Major Lee A. Louderback, O313660, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 31 January 1942. As commanding officer of the 2d Battalion, 41st Infantry Regiment, Philippine Army, he was placing his unit on the regimental reserve line when it was subjected to a heavy enemy artillery concentration. In his determination to see that his inexperienced troops took available cover, Major Louderback moved along the lines and inspected and supervised the proper disposition of his men. He continued his inspection, despite heavy enemy fire, until struck by shell fragments and instantly killed.

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Sergeant Rufus T. Clopton (Army serial No. 14045129) (then private), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, distinguished himself at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 1 May 1942. On that date, he continued to repair vital communications lines while under heavy enemy shell fire, despite the fact his original orders to do so had been withdrawn and contrary to requests by his superior that he take cover. Sergeant Clopton's total disregard for safety, in an effort to make the continuance of fire possible by his own command, was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military profession.

Technician Fifth Grade Lyle Eesley (Army serial No. 35001528) (then private), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Headquarters Company, 192d Tank Battalion, displayed gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 4 February 1942. One of our tanks was disabled in enemy occupied territory. Realizing that the crew would be killed or captured if not rescued at once, he voluntarily accompanied another tank to the disabled tank, leaped out, coupled the tanks together, then followed them back to our lines, firing with his rifle at any visible enemy. Because of Technician Eesley's gallant and courageous action, the disabled tank was brought back to our lines and the bodies of the crew recovered for proper burial.

Colonel James G. Monihan, O4593, General Staff Corps, United States Army, a member of G-3, Philippine Department, displayed outstanding gallantry in Limay, Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 31 December 1941. When several detachments of Philippine troops arrived to be directed to assembly areas and subsequent commitment on the east coast of the Bataan Peninsula, he courageously directed their employment, despite the continuous enemy bombing and strafing attacks. Colonel Monihan's heroic conduct reflects great credit on himself and the combat soldiers with whom he served.

Sergeant Carl H. Price (Army serial No. 6380394), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron serving on beach defense as infantry, on 7 February 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Quinaun Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands. After 3 consecutive days of fighting that drove the enemy onto the beach, he volunteered with five other men to attack, from landing boats, enemy forces which had taken cover beneath the cliffs and in caves. Without regard for his own safety, Sergeant Price, with the five other men, raked the enemy positions and cave entrances with machine-gun fire while fully exposed to enemy aircraft and small-arms fire from the beach.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Lieutenant Colonel David S. Babcock, O15339, Field Artillery, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.
- Colonel John W. Irwin, O10411, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.
- Captain Francis E. Maloney, Jr., O1636261, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. October 1942 to September 1945.
- Major William J. Priestley, O20301, Infantry, United States Army. January to April 1942.
- Lieutenant Colonel Roy E. Warren, O21584 (then major), Air Corps, United States Army. May 1943 to January 1944.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Colonel Stuart A. Beckley, O15137, Field Artillery, United States Army. July 1945 to June 1946.
- Major James M. Cochran, O21945, General Staff Corps (Coast Artillery Corps), United States Army. February 1944 to 3 July 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Horace B. Frederick, O303862, Infantry, Army of the United States. February 1945 to February 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Frank A. Hunter, O143666, Infantry, Army of the United States. May 1943 to June 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Gerald Johnson, Jr., O25035, Ordnance Department, United States Army. March to October 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Charles R. Jones, O5615, Transportation Corps, United States Army. October 1943 to January 1946.
- Chaplain (captain) Hugh F. Kennedy, O890457 (then first lieutenant), Corps of Chaplains, Army of the United States. January to May 1942.
- Colonel James T. Menzie, O6227, Adjutant General's Department, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.
- Colonel Carl H. Pforzheimer, Jr., O910676, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. May to August 1945.
- Colonel John C. Woodland, O8916, Medical Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to March 1946.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

- Captain Carey M. Smith, Medical Corps, United States Navy. March to May 1942.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Air Vice Marshal Albert de Niverville, Royal Canadian Air Force. November 1943 to August 1945.

Major General George P. Vanier, Canadian Army. December 1941 to September 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel T. G. Brennan, British Army. July 1942 to October 1943.

Lieutenant Colonel William W. Manton, British Army. July 1941 to June 1944.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Aimery Halle, French Air Force. September 1944 to August 1945.

VIII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Brigadier General Frayne Baker, as published in General Orders 37, United States Army Forces in the Far East, 12 May 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Frayne Baker, O134923, Army of the United States. November 1944 to June 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Paul I. Robinson, as published in General Orders 361, Headquarters United States Army Forces, Pacific, 28 November 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Paul I. Robinson, O17802, Medical Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to January 1945.

IX. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain John H. White, O425268, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 30 June 1944.

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Major Lyles G. Hardin, O331245, Infantry, Army of the United States. April to May 1942.

Captain Paul E. Pearson, O279297, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Captain Ralph A. Plate, O372081, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

XI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Colonel Armando De Moraes Ancora, Brazilian Army. November 1944 to May 1945.

Colonel Nestor Penha Brasil, Brazilian Army. November 1944 to May 1945.

Major Ricardo Buhay, O1363, General Staff Corps (Philippine Army), United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

Colonel Geraldo Dacamino, Brazilian Army. September 1944 to May 1945.

Lieutenant Martin Harwin, United States Naval Reserve. 9 to 20 September 1943.

Chaplain (captain) Hugh Francis Kennedy, O890457 (then first lieutenant), Corps of Chaplains, Army of the United States. November 1942 to June 1945.

Technician Fifth Grade Lucius D. Long (Army serial No. 34088147), Field Artillery, Army of the United States. February 1942 to March 1944.

Staff Sergeant Robert H. Major (Army serial No. 6394771), Medical Department, Army of the United States. December 1941 to March 1944.

Master Sergeant Andrew D. Martinez (Army serial No. 39167439) (then technician fifth grade), Infantry, Army of the United States. March 1942 to March 1944.

Colonel Glenn H. Palmer, O15118, Signal Corps, United States Army. October 1945 to April 1946.

Colonel Emilio Rodrigues Ribas, Jr., Brazilian Army. November 1944 to May 1945.

Lieutenant Charles Waters Thompson, United States Naval Reserve. 9 to 20 September 1943.

First Lieutenant Nicholas T. Zuckeo, O1328866, Infantry, Army of the United States. 10 March 1945.

Colonel Nicoll F. Galbraith, O11588, Field Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself on Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 8 to 31 May 1942. As a staff officer, he was dispatched by the commanding general to the Mountain Province to comply with the terms that all troops in the Philippine Islands must be surrendered or else the commanding general, his staff, and the garrison of the fortified islands, then disarmed, would be massacred. Accepting the unusual hazards involved in exposing himself as a direct target in frequent crossings of battle line, and by being in custody of a brutal enemy with little regard for human life, Colonel Galbraith's acts and conduct are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military profession.

XII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded by the Commanding General, 10th Mountain Division, to Technical Sergeant Max Bassinson, as published in General Orders 125, Mediterranean Theater, 4 July 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Technical Sergeant Max Bassinson (Army serial No. 37129745) (then sergeant), Field Artillery, Army of the United States. February 1942 to March 1944.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Colonel LeRoy Hudson, as published in General Orders 70, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 10 February 1946, a Bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. XIV. AIR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Air Medal awarded to Sergeant Willard A. Delavan, as published in General Orders 32, 9th Bombardment Division (Medium), 3 March 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Sergeant Willard A. Delavan (Army serial No. 11108169), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 14 February 1945.

XV. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

John J. Caragher, American civilian, while serving with the 1450th Army Air Forces Base Unit, Air Transport Command, performed meritorious services from December 1943 to January 1946. Mr. Caragher, as administrative assistant to the division personnel services officer, displayed commendable initiative, responsibility, and wholehearted cooperation in the activities of this program. His particular concern for the enlisted men in isolated detachments contributed to expanded divisional recreational facilities for men in these stations and to the maintenance of high standard of morale in the division. Mr. Caragher aided definitely in the success of the Alaskan Division at a time when its mission had been labeled impossible and when its objective was such as to be a material contribution to the successful prosecution of the war.

Doctor Charles B. Fahs, American civilian, performed meritorious services from October 1944 to February 1945. As chief, Far East Division, Research and Analysis Branch, Office of Strategic Services, Doctor Fahs succeeded in initiating and operating a unique, direct system of intelligence interchange which was of great value. The studies and research programs undertaken by him, and the accuracy of their execution, are considered most notable and were a significant contribution to the Allied victory.

Thomas A. Hendricks, American civilian, performed meritorious services from December 1944 to June 1946 in the United States, Europe, and Asia. As a mining and geology specialist, he secured highly scientific factual data, coordinated its employment in action against the enemy, and effected its further use for the benefit of Allied forces. Through his outstanding leadership, ingenuity, and organizing ability, Mr. Hendricks contributed materially to the success of engineer efforts in the European Theater, and aided greatly the development and operation of the National Resources Section, General Headquarters, in Japan and Korea.

Doctor William J. Youden, operations analyst, Army Air Forces, performed meritorious services in connection with military operations against the enemy from September 1942 to September 1945. He served successively with the Eighth Air Force in England, the Tenth Air Force and the XX Bomber Command in India, the Fourteenth Air Force in China; the Twentieth Air Force in Washington, and the XXI Bomber Command in the Marianas Islands. More than any other individual, Doctor Youden was responsible for the development of techniques of analysis of bombing accuracy, for visual and radar bombing, both daylight and night, which pointed the way to continuous great improvement in bombing tactics and results and furnished increasingly accurate planning factors throughout the 3 years of his service.

XVI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—So much of section IX, WD General Orders 66, 1946, as pertains to Major Rufus H. Rogers, Infantry, as reads "Major Rufus H. Rogers, O231742, Infantry," is amended to read "Lieutenant Colonel Rufus H. Rogers, O231742 (then major), Infantry."

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Paul J. Mueller, as published in WD General Orders 75, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Paul J. Mueller, O3808, United States Army. August 1945 to April 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Robert LeG. Walsh, as published in WD General Orders 52, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Robert LeG. Walsh, O4468, United States Army. December 1944 to May 1946. (Par. 4, sec. VIII, WD General Orders 60, 1946, pertaining to the award of a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit to Major General Walsh, for services during the same period, is rescinded.)

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

First Lieutenant Terence F. Aston, O334997, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 6 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Fort Drum, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy artillery and aerial bombardment, the periscope hood of his gun turret, hit by an exploding shell, fell and severely wounded him. He refused to leave for medical aid, but, under the heavy enemy barrage, continued to direct his gun until ordered to cease firing. He then supervised complete demolition of his gun and turret in order that nothing of use could fall to the enemy. Lieutenant Aston's courageous actions reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Leslie M. Blanford (Army serial No. R145171), Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, on 24 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When Battery Crockett, an adjacent gun emplacement was hit by enemy artillery, he immediately left his position, proceeded across a heavily shelled area to the burning emplacement, assisted in reducing the raging fire, and aided in removal of the wounded. By his prompt and courageous action, done without regard for his own safety, Sergeant Blanford aided in the prevention of a powder explosion which would have inflicted serious damage and heavy loss of life.

Major Theodore P. Crane, O193857, Infantry, Army of the United States, on 19 January 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands. On a reconnaissance mission, his party was fired upon by an enemy patrol, two men were killed, and another wounded seriously. Under continued fire of the enemy, without regard for his own safety, he carried the wounded man several hundred yards to a protected position. Major Crane's courageous action and devotion to his wounded comrade reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Technical Sergeant Virgil I. Young (Army serial No. 6353641), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a member of Battery E, 60th Coast Artillery, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 6 May 1942. During intense artillery and air bombardment of Battery Way, he assisted voluntarily, without regard for his own personal safety, in removing and caring for the wounded. He continued at this task until he received a mortal wound. Sergeant Young's courageous and gallant sacrifice saved many wounded men from bleeding to death.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Technical Sergeant Cecil Ammons (Army serial No. 6378247), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron serving on beach defense as infantry, on 7 February 1942, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy at Quinaun Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands. After 3 consecutive days of fighting, which drove the enemy onto the beach, he volunteered with five other men to attack, from landing boats, enemy forces which had taken cover beneath the cliffs and in caves. Without regard for his own safety, Sergeant Ammons, with the five other men, raked the enemy positions and cave entrances with machine-gun fire while fully exposed to enemy aircraft and small-arms fire from the beach.

Corporal James H. Farmer, Jr. (Army serial No. 18036340) (then private first class), Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, on 5 and 6 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy aerial bombing and artillery shelling of his battery position, he assisted in loading the wounded into a truck and voluntarily drove the vehicle over a heavily shelled road to the battalion air station. Without regard for his own safety, Corporal Farmer continued to drive over the hazardous route until all of the wounded were evacuated.

Colonel Wade D. Killen, O11131, Infantry, United States Army, as Chief of Staff, 102d Division, Philippine Army, displayed gallantry in action on 10 May 1942, in Mindanao, Philippine Islands. During a withdrawal of the division after a heavy hostile attack, he received information that a new enemy attack was imminent. Colonel Killen proceeded at once to the front, warned the front line units of the coming attack, and, by his leadership, coolness under fire, and personal disregard for danger, contributed materially to an orderly withdrawal.

Private Mark F. Smith (Army serial No. 6931450), Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, a member of Battery B, 59th Coast Artillery, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 24 April 1942. As a result of heavy enemy artillery fire, a soldier was wounded severely on a cliff in front of Battery Crockett, where Private Smith was on duty. Hearing cries for help, Private Smith ran to the wounded man and, with the aid of an officer and another enlisted man, was able, after much difficulty and despite his own wounds, to get the soldier to a first aid station.

IV...LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Major James C. Blanning, O18442, Cavalry, United States Army. 8 December 1941 to 9 April 1942.

Colonel Donald V. N. Bonnett, O8476, Infantry, United States Army. 26 January to 9 April 1942.

V...LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Miguel Aguilar, Philippine Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Herman R. Anderson, United States Marine Corps. December 1941 to May 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Walter E. Barton, O331824, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. April 1943 to June 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Oliver P. Easterwood, Jr., O906701, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. June 1942 to January 1946.

Colonel Thomas L. Ferenbaugh, O2820, Medical Corps, United States Army. September 1942 to February 1945.

Colonel Paul H. Griffith, O395594, Chemical Warfare Service, Army of the United States. September 1942 to November 1944.

Lieutenant Colonel Arthur L. Simpson, O901337, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. March 1944 to June 1946.

Major Walter A. White, O278768, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Clarence Bidgood, O19777, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. 8 January to 9 April 1942.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, awarded by the War Department to Major General Alan Colquhoun Duff, as published in WD General Orders 42, 1946, the second Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Major General Alan Colquhoun Duff, British Army. August 1943 to January 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel John Thorp, British Army. March 1944 to October 1945.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Chaplain William D. Cleary, as published in WD General Orders 92, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Chaplain (brigadier general) William D. Cleary, O11575, United States Army. February 1945 to April 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Percival A. Wakeman, as published in General Orders 30, European Theater, 4 April 1944, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Captain Joseph R. Coolidge, O954932, Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the Research and Analysis Branch, Office of Strategic Services, displayed outstanding heroism between Dalat and Saigon, Indo-China, on 25 September 1945. When the convoy which he was accompanying was ambushed by Annamese, he personally stopped three attacks, despite severe wounds. Captain Coolidge's courageous conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Joe Karr (Army serial No. 17004526) (then corporal), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a member of Battery E, 60th Coast Artillery (AA), on 6 May 1942, performed heroic services at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a sustained enemy artillery and aerial bombardment of Battery Way, he voluntarily took over the duties of breech operator on one of the guns. Under the continuing enemy fire, and until he was severely wounded by shrapnel, Sergeant Karr took on additional duties to assist in keeping the battery firing.

Private First Class Raymond E. J. Witte (Army serial No. 35834607), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company B, 274th Infantry Regiment, performed heroic services on 20 February 1945 near Etzlingen, France. Following a fierce enemy artillery barrage, in which several men were killed and gravely wounded, he volunteered to go back across open terrain through constant artillery and small-arms fire to bring up litters and then helped carry the wounded back. Private Witte's prompt fearless action undoubtedly saved the lives of the severely wounded men.

X. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers, flight officers, and enlisted men:

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class Raymond L. Higginbotham (Army Serial No. 38479625), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of the 306th Infantry Regiment, on 4 May 1945 at Okinawa, displayed extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy. From an advance observation post, seeing a company of Japanese moving toward the battalion headquarters, he and his comrades opened fire. The enemy, determined to destroy the position quickly, covered the post in a hail of mortar and machine-gun fire, then, with fixed bayonets, they charged. Private Higginbotham leaped from his fox hole and, hurling grenades and firing from the hip at point-blank range, shot down eight of the foe and stopped the attack. As the enemy resumed the assault, he still stood fast and, with grenades exhausted and his magazines destroyed by bullets, yielded his place only as friendly forces rushed up. Private Higginbotham's heroic stand, in the face of great odds, delayed the hostile advance and enabled his unit to organize a coordinated attack to accomplish the destruction of the enemy force.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Donald Armstrong, O2967, United States Army. February 1945 to July 1946.

Brigadier General William E. Bergin, O7127, United States Army. April 1943 to October 1944. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General Bergin, as published in General Orders 11, Headquarters United States Army Forces, India-Burma Theater, 1 November 1944.)

Major General Rapp Brush, O3031, United States Army. April 1944 to June 1945.

Brigadier General Hanford MacNider, O108101, Army of the United States. October 1943 to October 1945.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding

Colonel Willis E. Teale, O5227, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. September 1944 to April 1946.

Colonel Eugene H. Walter, O19836, General Staff Corps (Coast Artillery Corps), United States Army. July 1944 to June 1946.

Lieutenant Colonel Beverly H. Warren, O23394 (then colonel), Air Corps, United States Army. 2 June to 1 September 1945.

Captain Albert E. Whitaker, O1018592, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. February 1944 to August 1945.

Captain Charlton J. Wilmer, O401624 (then first lieutenant), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Colonel Ovid O. Wilson, O15887, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Colonel Harlan N. Worthley, O186809, Chemical Warfare Service, Army of the United States. September 1944 to January 1946. (So much of sec. I, Headquarters Army Service Forces General Orders 21, 1946, as pertains to the award of the Legion of Merit to Colonel Worthley, for services during the same period, is rescinded.)

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. V..DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Technical Sergeant Roy G. Wander (Army serial No. 12207478), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 25 May 1944.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for heroic achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Second Lieutenant Edwin J. Drucker, O755303, Air Corps, Army of the United States, on 22 November 1943, while assigned to the 461st Bombardment Group, served as copilot aboard a B-24 type aircraft, which developed engine trouble during a tactical training mission. Forced to leave the formation by the flaming engine, the pilot ordered the crew to abandon ship. When the parachute of a crewman became fouled, preventing his escape, Lieutenant Drucker, though he could have jumped to safety, unhesitatingly elected to remain in the aircraft to assist the pilot in making a crash landing. In the ensuing crash the pilot and crewman survived, but Lieutenant Drucker was killed instantly. The courage, gallantry, and utter disregard for personal safety displayed by Lieutenant Drucker in sacrificing his life for another, command the greatest respect and emulation by all. His conduct reflects the highest credit upon himself and the armed forces of the United States.

VI..BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. Horatio Ben Smith, American civilian. August 1945 to March 1946.

Colonel Guy H. Stubbs, O15253 (then lieutenant colonel), Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Major John M. White, Jr., O359905, General Staff Corps (Coast Artillery Corps), Army of the United States. February to July 1945.

Major John M. Wright, Jr., O23057 (then first lieutenant), Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. 15 December 1944.

Captain Curt A. Zimansky, O1317723, Infantry, Army of the United States. January 1944 to June 1945.

Second Lieutenant Americo F. Almeida, O553155, Chemical Warfare Service, Army of the United States. 20 March to 2 April 1945.

Master Sergeant Louvernus E. Jackson (Army serial No. 33136241), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. December 1944 to February 1945.

Captain David M. Snell, O367977, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in action at Corregidor on or about 25 March 1942. When Japanese bombing set off ordnance warehouses and dumps, thereby cutting communications, Captain Snell, without regard for his personal safety, worked his way to "Botton Side" and obtained parts necessary to put his guns back into operation. Again, on 14 April 1942, at Corregidor while under enemy shell fire, he directed the evacuation of wounded and the repair of communications.

Private First Class Emil Carpenter (Army serial No. 16017862), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, as chief of breech at Battery Way, performed heroic services on 6 May 1942, at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. For hours during a heavy artillery and air bombardment of the battery, he held to his position in the pit to fire the gun, performing his duties continuously and effectively until severely wounded by shrapnel. Private Carpenter's determination and courageous devotion to duty reflect a great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Robert J. Casey (Army serial No. 31232536), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company H, 422d Infantry Regiment, on 19 December 1944, performed heroic services near Schonberg, Belgium. In a counterattack made after 3 days of heavy fighting, he helped to occupy an exposed position under intense enemy small-arms, automatic, and artillery fire. Seeing a severely wounded man, he aided evacuation of the soldier from the danger of enemy action. Private Casey's courage and devotion to his wounded comrade reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Dennis R. Ferguson (Army serial No. 35756083), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, on 23 February 1945, performed heroic services near Stiring Wendel, France. Refusing to withdraw during a heavy enemy counterattack on his company, he remained in position and beat off the enemy attacks until all of his ammunition was expended. Through his courageous action, in the face of heavy enemy fire and attacking forces, Sergeant Ferguson enabled his company to hold the position it was defending.

Captain Howard S. Woodcock, O1167702 (then first lieutenant), Field Artillery, Army of the United States, a member of the 695th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, performed heroically on 17 August 1944 when by-passed German units opened fire on his unit near Chartres, France. Although his tank was in an exposed position and receiving accurate enemy fire, Captain Woodcock exposed himself to man his machine gun, thereby increasing greatly the accuracy of his fire.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Major Lawrence D. Cavanagh, as published in General Orders 56, Headquarters XII Tactical Air Command, 16 March 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Major Lawrence D. Cavanagh, O909081 (then captain), Air Corps, Army of the United States, as fighter control officer of the 64th Fighter Wing with headquarters located, because of the necessity of being on high ground, well in advance of our own artillery on the Salerno bridgehead, conducted himself with conspicuous courage during repeated shellings by enemy artillery, which caused much loss of personnel and equipment. By his courage and conspicuous disregard for personal safety in exposing himself beyond the call of duty Major Cavanagh was an inspiration to all those about him and contributed much to the success of the operation.

VIII. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Peter R. Davis, O678187, Air Corps, Army of the United States. April 1943 to August 1945.

IX. AIR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Air Medal awarded by the War Department to First Lieutenant Redding W. Bunting, as published in WD General Orders 10, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942). The citation is as follows:

First Lieutenant Redding W. Bunting, O694325, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 12 to 14 September 1945.

X. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Victor H. Fraenckel, American civilian, performed meritorious services in Europe as expert consultant, Officer of the Secretary of War, from March 1944 to January 1945 and March to May 1945. As special adviser on radio and radar countermeasures to the Commanding General, United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe, Mr. Fraenckel served with distinction, formulating many of the operational policies and techniques, which contributed greatly to the effectiveness of the radio countermeasures program in our strategic air effort.

Drewel Woodrow Gibson, American civilian, performed exceptionally meritorious services as assistant chief and chief, Civil Intelligence Section, The Panama Canal, from December 1941 to May 1946. His untiring efforts and complete co-operation with the intelligence agencies of The Panama Canal Department were of inestimable value in the success of the war effort to the United Nations. Throughout the entire war, Mr. Gibson's devotion to duty, ability as an interpreter, diplomacy, and intelligence contributed to the harmonious accord which has been reached between the Governments of the Republic of Panama and the United States and to their success in coping with joint intelligence problems.

Roderick Stephens, Jr., American civilian, rendered meritorious services in England, Guadalcanal, and Pacific Ocean areas, from June 1944 to August 1945. Having assisted in the design of the amphibious jeep and DUKW, and related amphibious devices, he instructed higher commands in the tactical and technical use of this equipment. Mr. Stephen's characteristic enthusiasm and drive contributed materially to furthering the success of amphibious warfare.

XI. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section VI, WD General Orders 57, 1946, as pertains to Lieutenant Colonel Heber E. Couchman, Adjutant General's Department, as reads "Adjutant General's Department" is amended to read "Judge Advocate General's Department."

XII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of section III, WD General Orders 86, 1945, as pertains to Colonel Oscar F. Carlson, Air Corps, as reads "Legion of Merit was awarded" is amended to read "bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster was awarded."

GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL—Authority to appoint granted..... I
BATTLE HONORS—Citation of unit..... II

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, Korea Base Command, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial.

[AG 250.4 (16 Jul 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 1st Battalion, 309th Infantry Regiment, with attached units, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 9 to 10 February 1945 in seizing the strategically important Schwammenauel Dam. This huge concrete, earthen structure impounding twenty-two thousand million gallons of water had a vital part in the German plan for the defense of the Roer River Valley. The sudden release of this tremendous weight of water was capable of causing a flood wave of considerable height, submerging the towns of Duren and Julich and inundating the entire Roer Valley to the Maas River at Roermond. Since late November 1944, the Ninth Army and elements of the First Army had been poised for a crossing of the Roer River, but the constant threat of such a catastrophic flood had held back the crossing. Attempts by the Royal Air Force to remove the dam by bombing had proved ineffectual. After meticulous planning and detailed thorough briefing of all participants, the 1st Battalion, 309th Infantry Regiment, having passed through elements of the 311th Infantry Regiment, launched a well-coordinated night attack over 1,500 yards of rugged, heavily wooded terrain and against determined enemy resistance and seized the northern part of the Schwammenauel Dam. In inky darkness and bitter hand-to-hand combat, the defenders of the dam and surrounding installations were mopped up. Patrols were sent across the dam to secure the far shore and allow entrance by engineering party and bomb disposal experts into the dam. Under the protection of the infantrymen, the engineer party gained entrance to the inspection tunnel of the dam and, after a thorough inspection, found that the huge structure had not been prepared for demolition. The enemy had, however, damaged the gate house and demolished the valve house, thus allowing a steady flow of the water impounded by the dam. The threat of a catastrophic flood had been wiped out. In its attack upon the dam, the 1st Battalion captured 153 prisoners of war and overcame local defenses consisting of strong points located in entrenchments, log bunkers, concrete buildings, and a flak tower. Since the fighting took place in inky blackness and was entirely at close range, bayonet and hand grenade were the principal weapons. The courage, daring, and tenacity of purpose exhibited by the 1st Battalion, 309th Infantry Regiment, with attached units, in this operation are worthy of emulation and represent the highest traditions of the Army of the United States. The citation reads as follows:

The 44th Field Artillery Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 6 to 14 June 1944. The 44th Field Artillery Battalion landed on the Normandy Beachhead on D-day at H-plus-4 hours. Denied a position area farther inland because of inundated terrain, the battalion occupied positions on the seaward side of the sea wall on a beach already under murderous hostile artillery fire. Immediately upon debarking from its landing craft, the battalion began to fire in support of attacking infantry. Although under continuous observation and handicapped by mines on the beach, the battalion remained in its precarious position, providing effective and desperately needed fire support. Subsequently, on 7 June 1944, near Ravenouville, France, the 44th Field Artillery Battalion maintained a constant outpost line and, on 3 successive days, beat back strong combat patrols, in addition to carrying on its fire missions. During two counterattacks on the nights of 7 and 8 June 1944, this battalion, by its effective and decisive delivery of fire at maximum rates, enabled the infantry units it was supporting to hold hard-earned terrain, thereby assuring success on the beachhead. The volume, rapidity, and accuracy of the battalion's fire on targets, often so close at hand that less accurate fire would have been disastrous, contributed immeasurably to the success of the operation which drove the enemy beyond the first favorable terrain feature, the Mentebourg-Quineville Ridge, thus assuring the Allied command a firm toehold on the Cotentin Peninsula. The extraordinary professional skill, courage, and esprit de corps of the officers and men of the 44th Field Artillery Battalion exemplify the finest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 73, Headquarters First Army, 30 July 1946.)

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Haydon L. Boatner, O15641, United States Army, April 1942 to August 1944. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General Boatner, for services from April 1942 to August 1944, as published in General Orders 11, Headquarters United States Army Forces, India-Burma Theater, 1 November 1944.)

Brigadier General Bruce C. Clarke, O16068, United States Army. July 1944 to February 1945. (This award supersedes the award of a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General Clarke, for services from 1 November 1944 to 9 February 1945, as published in General Orders 141, Headquarters United States Army Forces, European Theater, 1 July 1945).

Colonel Robert M. Love, O357894, General Staff Corps (Air Corps), Army of the United States. September 1944 to October 1945. (Par. 2, sec. VII, WD General Orders 61, 1946, pertaining to the award of a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit to Colonel Love, for services during the same period, is rescinded.)

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Harold R. Bull, as published in WD General Orders 16, 1944, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Harold R. Bull, O3707, United States Army. July 1945 to August 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Colonel Widd E. Cooper, as published in WD AGO 370B—Aug. 705554°—46

General Orders 103, 1919, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Wibb E. Cooper, O2819, Medical Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant General LeRoy Lutes, as published in WD General Orders 92, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant General LeRoy Lutes, O5413, United States Army. October 1945 to June 1946.

4. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Roscoe B. Woodruff, as published in WD General Orders, 4, 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Roscoe B. Woodruff, O3819, United States Army. October 1944 to February 1946.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Private First Class Clifford R. Arnold, (Army serial No. 6977999), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a member of Battery H, 60th Coast Artillery, displayed outstanding gallantry on 3 May 1942. When the antiaircraft gun he manned was out of action, he courageously left the comparative safety of the emplacement to man a machine gun against an enemy dive bomber until he fell mortally wounded. Private Arnold's heroic conduct reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Lieutenant Colonel William E. Dyess, O22526 (then captain), Air Corps, United States Army, on 7 February 1942, at Quinauan Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands, performed heroic action against the enemy. He voluntarily helped organize and lead an assault party against several enemy caves on a rocky cliff on the beach. Under close-range enemy rifle and machine-gun fire, attacking the positions from landing boats Colonel Dyess displayed qualities of personal courage and leadership which were major factors in the success of the mission.

Captain Roy I. Platt, O333101, Field Artillery, Army of the United States, on 24 January 1942, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy at Bataan, Philippine Islands, while on duty at a forward observation post. Although surrounded by hostile troops, he remained at his post directing the fire of his battery upon the enemy attack. After the forced withdrawal of his battery, although he was wounded several times, Captain Platt crawled through the enemy lines and reported to his commanding officer, giving valuable information on enemy strength and disposition.

IV. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major Henry J. Pierce, O384072 (then captain), Infantry, Army of the United States, commanding Company L, 45th Infantry, Philippine Scouts, on 25 January 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Abucay Hacienda, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy night attack, his company, deployed to cover a withdrawal to a reserve battle position, bore the brunt of a ferocious enemy fire attack and repeated bayonet assaults. Through his fearless and heroic example, Major Pierce inspired his unit and enabled it to hold its position until the mission was accomplished.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Dalcourte W. Thompson, O890124, Infantry, Army of the United States, as instructor, 3d Battalion, 32d Infantry, 31st Division, Philippine Army, displayed outstanding gallantry at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 7 April 1942. When he was wounded seriously and his battalion commander killed, Lieutenant Thompson continued heroically toward the front lines, conducted an inspection, and made necessary changes in machine-gun positions, until he collapsed finally and was evacuated. Lieutenant Thompson's conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major James H. Hazlewood, O276050, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to March 1942.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Joseph E. Bastion, O2805, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1943.

Colonel Pembroke A. Brawner, O10665, General Staff Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

First Lieutenant Winston H. Pickett, O927055, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. October 1944 to August 1945.

Colonel Roger G. Prentiss, Jr., O17825, Medical Corps, United States Army. 7 December 1941 to 15 April 1946.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Joseph M. Colby, as published in WD General Orders 29, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War

Colonel Joseph M. Colby, O17562, Ordnance Department, United States Army. September 1942 to March 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Daniel C. Fahey, Jr., as published in WD General Orders 124, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Daniel C. Fahey, Jr., O247716 (then lieutenant colonel), General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. September 1945 to May 1946.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Brigadier General Paul W. Thompson, as published in General Orders 6, European Theater, 18 January 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Paul W. Thompson, O17506, United States Army. April 1945 to April 1946.

4. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel James S. Willis, as published in General Orders 189, United States Army Forces, European Theater, 13 August 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services, during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. VIII. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for heroic achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Sergeant Joseph J. Harrigan (Army serial No. 31362398), Air Corps, Army of the United States, on 22 November 1944, while assigned to the 455th Bombardment Group, served as tail gunner on a B-24 type aircraft, which was seriously damaged by hostile fire during a combat mission over enemy-occupied Europe. Although severely wounded by the enemy attacks, Sergeant Harrigan remained at his station in order to defend the crippled aircraft. His courage, in the face of great danger, tenacity of purpose, and unstinting devotion to duty are worthy of emulation by all. Sergeant Harrigan's conduct was in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces and reflects great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

IX. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Kenneth L. Brown, O663475, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 22 June 1943.

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Howard Humphreys, O386259, Infantry, Army of the United States. 15 December 1944.

Corporal Myron R. Lugibihl (Army serial No. 38012170), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. 15 March 1942.

Major Hueston R. Wynkoop, O20790, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

XI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Robert F. Childs, O452336, Infantry, Army of the United States. January 1942 to March 1944.

Colonel Max H. Gooler, O15082, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to June 1942.

Major Robert L. Markland, O453845, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. June 1944 to September 1945.

Lieutenant (junior grade) Henry L. Roberts, 217658, United States Naval Reserve, United States Navy. October 1944 to September 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel William I. Wood, O22657, Air Corps, United States Army. August to December 1945.

Private First Class Feliciano R. Alderete (Army serial No. 38012247), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 15 March 1942, displayed heroism at Cabcaban Air Field, Luzon, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy bombing and strafing attack, in which a bomb demolished a shelter entrance, he, with one other man, cleared the entrance and revived six Filipinos by artificial respiration. Private Alderete's prompt action, performed without regard for his own safety, reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

XII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Colonel Daniel E. Hooks, as published in General Orders 68, Twentieth Air Force, 19 September 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Daniel E. Hooks, O20027, Air Corps, United States Army. August to December 1945.

XIV. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Catherine Irving, American Red Cross, performed meritorious services in connection with military operations at Oro Bay, New Guinea, from May to November 1944. As director of the division of psychiatry and sociology at the New Guinea Detention and Rehabilitation Center, she accomplished an exceptional task by instituting a program of psychiatric social case work involving American general prisoners with the center and a therapeutic program of psychiatric treatment. As a member of the clemency board at the center, Miss Irving was exceptionally valuable in advising the board which prisoners were restorable to duty, based on her tests, initial reports, and progress reports. She was the first person in this theater to initiate such a program and pioneered the work of the psychiatric case history of inmates.

XV. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Martha V. Ellesor, American Red Cross, performed meritorious services in oversea areas under operational conditions in connection with American Red Cross civilian war relief from January to September 1945. Miss Ellesor, in three round trips on the "M. S. Gripsholm," as special representative of the American Red Cross in repatriation responsibilities, showed superior abilities in maintaining a high standard of administration under trying, crowded, and difficult conditions. She also rendered especially valuable services in the January 1945 exchange of seriously sick and wounded prisoners of war on the Swiss border.

Doctor Edgar Johnson, American civilian, performed exceptionally meritorious services from June 1944 to September 1945 while assigned to the Research and Analysis Branch, Office of Strategic Services, in Europe. He prepared highly accurate intelligence studies of conditions in Austria affecting the strategic course of the war. Doctor Johnson later achieved a clear and workable denazification policy for Austria, as well as an excellent readjustment plan for zonal divisions, which assured the coextension of geographic with social and political sovereignty. This program was of great importance to the United States Army Forces.

XVI. SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of paragraph 2, section IV, WD General Orders 63, 1946, pertaining to Captain Edward E. McBride, Jr., Company B, 119th Infantry Regiment, as reads "Silver Star was awarded" is amended to read "a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster was awarded."

XVII. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. So much of paragraph 1, section VII, WD General Orders 71, 1946, as pertains to Colonel Otto M. Jenk, Ordnance Department, as reads "Colonel Otto M. Jenk" is amended to read "Colonel Otto M. Jank."

2. So much of paragraph 1, section VII, WD General Orders 71, 1946, as pertains to Colonel George Parker, General Staff Corps, as reads "(Signal Corps)" is amended to read "(Sanitary Corps)."

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

AGO 315B—Aug. 705554°—46

The 2d Battalion, 442d Regimental Combat Team, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action on 19 October 1944 near Bruyeres, France, on 28 and 29 October 1944 near Biffontaine, France, and from 6 to 10 April 1945, near Massa, Italy. The 2d Battalion executed a brilliant tactical operation in capturing Hill 503, to expedite the forward movement beyond Bruyeres, France and to erase the German threat from the rear. While two companies pressed forward against a formidable enemy main line of resistance, other elements of the battalion struck the enemy paralyzing blows from all directions, practically eliminating an entire German company and destroying numerous enemy automatic weapons. Attacking the strategic heights of Hill 617 near Biffontaine, France, on 28 October 1944, the 2d Battalion secured its objective in a 2-day operation, which eliminated a threat to the flanks of two American divisions. In the face of intense enemy barrages and numerous counterattacks, the infantrymen of this battalion fought their way through difficult jungle-like terrain in freezing weather and completely encircled the enemy. Methodically, the members of the 2d Battalion hammered the enemy, inflicting heavy casualties upon the defenders and wresting this vital feature from the surviving Germans. Maintaining its admirable record of achievement in the vicinity of Massa, Italy, the 2d Battalion smashed through and exploited the strong Green Line on the Ligurian Coast. Surging over formidable heights through strong resistance, the 2d Battalion, in 5 days of continuous, heavy fighting, captured a series of objectives to pave the way for the entry into the important communications centers of Massa and Carrara, Italy, without opposition. In this operation, the 2d Battalion accounted for more than 200 Germans and captured or destroyed large quantities of enemy matériel. The courage, determination, and esprit de corps evidenced by the officers and men of the 2d Battalion, 442d Regimental Combat Team, exemplify the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Commodore Andrew G. Bisset, United States Navy. September 1944 to July 1945.

Colonel Homer Case, O7090 (then brigadier general), United States Army. April 1944 to October 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Colonel Case, for services from 26 December 1944 to 16 March 1945, as published in General Orders 23, Headquarters 8th Army, 1 April 1945.)

Brigadier General Richard C. Coupland, O9792, United States Army. February 1943 to March 1946.

Colonel Clark E. Kittrell, O5228, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. January to October 1943 and October 1943 to June 1944.

Colonel William F. Maher, O3747, Field Artillery, United States Army. December 1941 to March 1942.

Brigadier General Edward Montgomery, O3211, United States Army. March 1943 to June 1946.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Colonel Bonner F. Fellers, as published in WD General Orders 45, 1942, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibilities during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Bonner F. Fellers, O12134, General Staff Corps, United States Army. May to November 1944 and May 1945 to March 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General James P. Hodges, as published in WD General Order 72, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General James P. Hodges, O10891, United States Army. September 1944 to June 1945.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General William M. Hoge, as published in WD General Orders 43, 1945, a bronze Oak Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General William M. Hoge, O4437, United States Army. March to September 1942.

4. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Colonel John D. Langston, as published in WD General Orders 56, 1922, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Colonel John D. Langston, O134195, Judge Advocate General's Department (Specialist Reserve), Army of the United States. November 1940 to September 1945.

III.—SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Private Charles J. Bryant (Army serial No. 19036241), Battery B, 59th Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 24 April 1942. During heavy enemy artillery fire, a soldier, Private Henriques, was severely wounded on a cliff in front of Battery Crockett. Hearing the cries for help and with utter disregard for his own safety, Private Bryant ran to the wounded soldier. Assisted by an officer and another enlisted man, he was able after much difficulty to get the wounded soldier to a first aid station. Because of Private Bryant's gallant and courageous action, the wounded soldier received timely and much needed medical care.

Captain Robert M. Chambers, United States Marine Corps, as a company commander with the Fourth Marine Regiment, displayed gallantry in action on 5 May 1942, at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Though painfully wounded by enemy shrapnel and small-arms fire, he refused to leave his troops and continued to encourage them and direct their advance. By his courageous and inspiring leadership under heavy enemy fire, Captain Chambers contributed much to a successful counterattack.

Corporal William A. Graham (Army serial No. 18043813), Battery E, 60th Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 6 May 1942. During an intense artillery and air bombardment of Battery Way, a hit near one of the guns seriously wounded 7 of the 10 men in the gun crew. A relief gun crew was called to keep the gun in action. Corporal Graham, gun commander of the relief crew, crisply ordered his men to positions and started firing as rapidly as possible. Effective fire was delivered upon the landing enemy for about 20 minutes, when Corporal Graham received a mortal wound and 4 other men were seriously wounded. Calling to the men still on their feet, Corporal Graham said, "Well, that's my ticket boys, but you keep on firing". His gallant action inspired his crew and firing was sustained until the gun was put out of action by enemy fire.

First Lieutenant Howard H. Irish, Jr., O393415, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 2 May 1942. He was on duty at the command post of Battery C, 91st Coast Artillery, when a heavy concentration of enemy artillery fire came down on the position, destroying the building in which the command post was located and driving the crews from their guns. Despite wounds and continued shelling, Lieutenant Irish assisted in collecting the scattered gun crews, reestablished the command post, and got the battery back in action. His coolness and courage in this action were an inspiration to his men and in keeping with the highest military traditions.

First Lieutenant Charles E. Roper, O363182, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 20 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Fort Hughes, Philippine Islands, when the fort commander's station was hit by bombs that killed three men and partially buried him and another man in the debris. After extricating himself and finding it impossible to free his companion, Lieutenant Roper made his way 200 yards to a telephone and requested help. Then, without regard for his own safety, he returned to the trapped man and remained to aid in the rescue work during two succeeding attacks by enemy airplanes.

IV. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Tiburcio Jaranilla, O890544 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States (2d Battalion, 81st Infantry, Philippine Army), displayed outstanding gallantry on the Agusan Trail near Davao, Philippine Islands, on 18 March 1942. When his runner was wounded in an attack against a Japanese outpost, he heroically dragged him to cover and administered first aid. When set upon by a force of the enemy, he killed four of them and drove the others away. Lieutenant Jaranilla's courageous conduct reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Sergeant J. D. Cowgill (Army serial No. 6569667), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron serving on beach defense as infantry, on 7 February 1942, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy at Quinaun Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands. After 3 consecutive days of fighting that drove the enemy onto the beach, he volunteered with five other men to attack, from landing boats, enemy forces which had taken cover beneath the cliffs and in caves. Without regard for his own safety, Sergeant Cowgill, with the five other men, raked the enemy positions and cave entrances with machine-gun fire while fully exposed to enemy aircraft and small-arms fire from the beach.

Captain Eugene J. Holmes, O392839, Army of the United States, on 1 March 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands. On duty at a gun position under heavy enemy counterbattery fire, he heard a soldier, who had been wounded while repairing telephone lines near the position, call for aid. Immediately, and without regard for his own safety, Captain Holmes ran to the rescue of the soldier and, while enemy shells fell about them, assisted him to a place of safety where he received medical aid.

V. SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Silver Star awarded to Lieutenant Colonel Austin C. Shofner, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded to him by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Austin C. Shofner, United States Marine Corps, on 15 April 1942 while serving with the Fourth Marine Regiment, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Constantly under fire, he organized first-aid parties, supervised evacuation of wounded men, and, under a heavy enemy artillery barrage, drove the last truckload of wounded men to the hospital. Colonel Shofner's leadership and courageous devotion to duty reflect great credit on himself and the armed services.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Clair M. Conzelman, O16442, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Feidel N. Cruz, Philippine Army. January to April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel W. Hinton Drummond, O17839, Medical Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Major Richard M. Riley, O348988, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Colonel Hamilton F. Searight, O10112, Field Artillery, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Captain George S. Wiggins, O298954, Infantry, Army of the United States. 8 December 1941 to 9 April 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Jasper E. Brady, Jr., O11596, Infantry, United States Army. 21 March to 9 April 1942.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated, was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Major Oscar Bodansky, O494407, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. February 1943 to April 1946.

Lieutenant Colonel Richard C. Chapman, O266055, Infantry, Army of the United States. January 1945 to March 1946.

- Lieutenant Colonel Frank P. Christensen, O216096, Transportation Corps. Army of the United States. March 1942 to May 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Edward T. Evans, O408091, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. February 1943 to March 1945.
- Master Sergeant Akira Itami (Army serial No. 37589267), Army of the United States. December 1944 to November 1945.
- Colonel Gordon B. Kaufmann, O914050, Chemical Warfare Service, Army of the United States. March 1944 to August 1945.
- Colonel Alexis Brenier McMullen, O153687, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 1 January 1944 to 16 September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel George A. Meidling, O294554, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. April to December 1945.
- Colonel Thayer S. Olds, O17179, Air Corps, United States Army. September to December 1945.
- Colonel Michael A. Quinn, O10882, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.
- Lieutenant Colonel Fred J. Reese, O356976, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. May 1942 through July 1945.
- Colonel Louis H. Renfrow, O160948, Dental Corps, Army of the United States. February 1942 to May 1946.
- Colonel Frank Richards, O9973, Finance Department, United States Army. December 1941 to February 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Thomas B. Roelofs, O360406, Infantry, Army of the United States. June 1944 to September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Arthur R. Spillers, O802022, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. April 1942 to January 1946.
- Major Glen A. Wilkinson, O908743, Army of the United States. March 1944 to June 1945.

VIII. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Air Chief Marshal Sir Christopher D. Courtney, Royal Air Force. August 1942 to May 1945.
- General of Brigade Canrobert Pereira Da Costa, Brazilian Army. As Secretary General, Brazilian Ministry of War.
- Major General Auguste Marie Brossin de Saint-Didier, French Army. March 1944 to July 1946.
- Air Marshal Sir Robert H. M.-S. Saundby, Royal Air Force. February 1942 to May 1945.
- General Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Red Army. As deputy to the Russian commander during the defense of Moscow and the advance to Berlin.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

- Brigadier Edwin Seymour-Bell, British Army. July 1941 to August 1945.

IX. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the Commander in Chief, United States Pacific Fleet, to Colonel Gordon A. Blake, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Gordon A. Blake, O18389, Air Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to October 1943.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Albert W. Foreman, as published in WD General Orders 69, 1943, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Albert W. Foreman, O942, Infantry, United States Army. December 1943 to September 1945.

X. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Staff Sergeant Charles A. Clark (Army serial No. 36336062), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 10 October 1943.

First Lieutenant Frank K. Hoffman, O740812, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 20 December 1943.

XI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Sam E. Carothers, O319883, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Captain Benjamin A. Benton, O359212, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 25 January to 9 April 1942.

Chaplain (major) Ralph W. D. Browne, O20862, Corps of Chaplains, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Major James N. Vaughn, O18074, Signal Corps, United States Army. 15 March to 9 April 1942.

Captain Charles E. White, O21779, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Corporal Clyde E. Longest (Army serial No. 34481645), Battery C, 333d Field Artillery Battalion, Army of the United States, on 17 December 1944, performed heroic services. Carrying an important message from the battalion commander to the forward guns, he encountered heavy enemy fire. Refusing to stop short of his objective, he proceeded without regard for his own safety, delivered the message, and, returning through the flying bullets and shrapnel, was struck and fatally wounded. Corporal Longest's determination to complete his mission, in the face of heavy enemy fire, reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

XII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Major Russell H. Barnes, O385710, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. November 1942 to May 1943.

Captain Lewis A. Clarke, O313267, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. March 1942 to March 1944.

First Lieutenant Robert Knight, O1999062 (then technical sergeant), Field Artillery, Army of the United States. February to May 1943.

Lieutenant Colonel Joseph L. Mastran, O23279 (then major), Quartermaster Corps, United States Army. February 1943 to June 1944.

First Lieutenant Joseph Mattioli, O890174 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Chaplain (lieutenant colonel) Stanley J. Reilly, O19654 (then major), Corps of Chaplains, United States Army. July 1944 to September 1945.

Major William H. Smith, Jr., O378776, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. July 1943 to July 1945.

Major Franklin O. Anders, O337596 (then captain), Infantry, Army of the United States. 7 April 1942.

Private William J. Faulkner, Jr. (Army serial No. 11066380), 805th Tank Destroyer Battalion, Cavalry, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding heroism in Tunisia on 19 February 1943. When his company was exposed to a severe enemy artillery concentration and suffered several casualties, he courageously drove a quarter-ton truck several times through artillery fire to evacuate wounded, thus saving the life of one man and benefiting greatly the others. Private Faulkner's conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Robert Mingle (Army serial No. 17083553), Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 18 February 1945, near Kerbach, France, performed heroic services. Voluntarily exposing himself to heavy hostile fire during an enemy attack, he went to a wounded soldier to give first aid, then, under concentrated artillery and tank fire; successfully evacuated the man to safety. Sergeant Mingle's courageous action and devotion to his wounded comrade reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

XIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded posthumously by the War Department to Captain Robert I. Wheat, as published in WD General Orders 17, 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously to him by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, under the provisions of the Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Captain Robert I. Wheat, O22918, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. 8 December 1941 to 6 May 1942.

XIV. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Major Harlos V. Hatter, as published in General Orders 99, Headquarters 45th Infantry Division, 8 May 1944, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the Commanding General, European Theater, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Major Harlos V. Hatter, O375864, Infantry, Army of the United States. January to May 1945.

XV. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. Paragraph 2, section VIII, WD General Orders 46, 1946, pertaining to Colonel Bonner F. Fellers, Coast Artillery Corps, is rescinded (see par. 1, sec. II above).

2. Paragraph 6, section VII, WD General Orders 14, 1946, pertaining to Brigadier General Tom C. Rives, United States Army, is rescinded.

BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units..... II

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, United States Army Forces, New Caledonia, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial.

[AG 250.403 (26 Jul 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Company A, 68th Tank Battalion, is cited for extraordinary gallantry, indomitable courage, tenacity of purpose, and high esprit de corps displayed in accomplishment of an unusually difficult mission during the period 14 to 15 November 1944 in Landroff, France. On 14 November 1944, at about 1300 hours, Company A, 68th Tank Battalion, reinforced by elements of the 44th Armored Infantry Battalion, launched an attack against enemy forces holding Landroff, France. By 1800 hours, the village had been secured and outposted, although enemy artillery and self-propelled guns maintained continuous heavy fire on the village and reconnaissance elements reported approximately 10 enemy tanks and heavy reinforcements of infantry maneuvering to join enemy forces on the high ground dominating the village. At 1900 hours, under the protection of direct fire from eight enemy guns, an enemy force of company strength, with two self-propelled assault guns, counterattacked, broke the outer defenses, and entered the village. Enemy armor was allowed to enter the village and then ambused and destroyed by tank destroyer and tank fire. Enemy infantry pushed the attack vigorously and in the desperate hand-to-hand fighting, the attack was beaten back only after the entire crew of one self-propelled gun was killed and the supporting infantry decimated. Another enemy attack was repelled at about 2400 hours by effective defending tank and automatic-weapons fire, maneuvering rapidly from one threatened point to another. A third counter-attack at about 0110 hours was halted in a similar manner. After intense artillery, assault gun, and mortar concentrations, lasting for 30 minutes, had been directed on the village, another coordinated enemy attack, employing an estimated force of battalion strength in the assault wave, was launched at 0200 hours. Despite strong friendly artillery support, the enemy, heavily armed with rocket launchers and automatic weapons, continued their fanatical attack. Although the extreme darkness prohibited effective employment of the 75-mm guns of the tanks, the enemy was beaten back three times in the bitter fighting which lasted until 0430 hours. Enemy infantry managed to infiltrate and, at one time, encircle and isolate the defenders, taking up positions with machine guns and rocket launchers in buildings and streets within the defensive perimeter and were repeatedly routed out by the courageous defenders in hand-to-hand fighting with pistols, knives, and grenades. Prior to daybreak, another force of enemy armor and infantry was observed preparing to attack, but was neutralized by fire from friendly artillery. After the artillery preparation, a platoon of medium tanks maneuvered to firing positions at close range and inflicted heavy casualties on the remaining enemy in the assembly area by direct fire. This action turned the enemy flank and forced the remnants of the unit into the fire of a friendly task force. It was estimated that the force before Landroff was of division strength and, in the bitter fighting, the bulk of one regiment was completely destroyed. During this action, Company A 68th Tank Battalion, sustained casualties amounting to 13 killed and 5 officers and 79 enlisted men wounded. The fortitude, tenacity, and indomitable will displayed by Company A, 68th Tank Battalion, are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit on the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 128, Headquarters Third Army, 21 June 1946.)

2. The 106th Engineer Combat Battalion is cited for heroism and outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Mindanao, Philippine Islands, from 22 April to 30 June 1945. During this period, this unit distinguished itself by the imposing part it played in the advance of the 31st Infantry Division from Kabacan through Central Mindanao to Impalutao. The battalion performed the engineer work in support of the rapid advance of the 31st Division across the jungle-covered mud, gorges, and rivers of Central Mindanao, which split Japanese forces in the area. Despite enemy artillery, mortar, machine-gun, and rifle fire, the 106th Engineer Combat Battalion worked with the most forward infantry elements and frequently with lights throughout the hours of darkness within enemy rifle range, building and repairing bridges and roads to speed the movement of men and supplies. Nearly every bridge abutment was mined with heavy demolition bombs, which were removed by the engineers without accident. A 425-foot infantry support bridge was built and maintained across the Pulangi River. From this point to the Mulita River, a total of 73 bridges were repaired or bypassed and, as the infantry moved forward, more permanent installations were built by follow-up elements of the battalion, who worked night and day often under fire. A 110-foot Bailey bridge was thrown across the Mulita and from this point to Malaybalay the lead company expended every effort and utilized the most ingenious emergency improvisations to successfully maintain close support for the fast-moving infantrymen. In order to supply the lead company, truck drivers and follow-up road crews worked tirelessly with little or no security and without regard for safety, despite enemy-harassing action. By extraordinary heroism, foresight, and technical skill, the officers and men of the 106th Engineer Combat Battalion, under difficult and hazardous conditions, made a material contribution to the successful advance of the 31st Infantry Division. Their action is within the highest traditions of the United States armed forces. (General Orders 13, Headquarters Eighth Army, 17 January 1946, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

I.—SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Captain Benjamin A. Benton, Jr., O359212, Air Corps, Army of the United States, on 12 February 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands. Seeing a nearby gun position hit during a heavy bombing and strafing attack, he rushed to the position, while the attack was still in progress and without regard for his own safety, and, under the continuing enemy air assault, assisted in evacuating the wounded. Captain Benton's prompt and courageous action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Newton L. Mathews, Jr., O348433, Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by outstanding gallantry in action at Abucay, Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 18 January 1942. As senior American instructor with an untried Philippine battalion, Lieutenant Mathews was given an attack mission to restore a break in our lines. With total disregard for enemy fire and with inspiring courage, he spearheaded the successful attack. Lieutenant Mathews's gallant conduct inspired the battalion which pressed the attack, despite his death from enemy fire.

Second Lieutenant Robert F. Needham, O385930, Company G, 194th Tank Battalion, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action on 26 December 1941. His platoon encountered and overran hostile antitank weapons on a mountainous trail in the Lucban section, South Luzon, Philippine Islands, but almost immediately thereafter his tanks were hit and put out of action by hidden artillery. Although badly wounded, he gallantly refused to be evacuated at the probable jeopardy of six other wounded men. They were removed successfully, largely because of Lieutenant Needham's self-sacrifice which resulted in his death in his tank the following night.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Leo E. Mahon, O1047646, Company F, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action at Wingen, France, on 5-6 January 1945. Shortly after assuming command of the company, he was severely wounded. Despite his injury, he continued vigorously to advance the attack under heavy fire until he was killed by a sniper. Lieutenant Mahon's courageous example inspired his unit to continue and accomplish its mission.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Captain Wilbur J. Lage, O397113, Infantry, Army of the United States, on 29 January 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands. He was detailed by his commander to make a reconnaissance with a Filipino officer and a noncommissioned officer to determine enemy strength and disposition. Evading an enemy patrol, which killed the Filipino officer and was pressing the pursuit, Captain Lage worked his way through the hostile outpost, reconnoitered enemy lines and dispositions, and returned to his regimental commander with valuable information.

Captain John E. Lamy, O386206, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, on 6 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, as surgeon for the Third Battalion, 57th Infantry, Philippine Scouts. While in bivouac, the battalion was subjected to an exceptionally heavy attack by enemy dive bombers and intense artillery fire and casualties were heavy. Captain Lamy suffered an eye injury from a bomb fragment, but despite his injury and the continued fury of the air attack, he provided medical aid to the wounded as they were brought to the aid station.

Private First Class Charles F. Schwab (Army serial No. 15017150), Battery C, 60th Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 26 March 1942. During a heavy bombing attack, the telephone lines of his battery were shot out and he, on duty as switchboard operator, volunteered to assist in finding and repairing breaks in the lines while the heavy bombing attack was still in progress. Because of Private Schwab's gallant and intrepid action, telephone communication was restored and the battery able to resume its part in the defense of Corregidor.

Brigadier General Joseph P. Vachon, O3233, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action on Mindanao Island, Philippine Islands, on 3 May 1942, while commanding the 101st Division and the Cotabato-Davao Force, Philippine Army. Upon learning that a battalion stationed on the Cotabato River at Pikit had weakened, permitting the Japanese to cross the river, General Vachon proceeded immediately to the area, with a company of troops, procured at Carmen Ferry such stragglers as were available, organized a new position without regard for his own safety, and stopped the withdrawal of friendly forces.

Lieutenant Colonel Jacobo Zobel, O951463 (then major), Philippine Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 4 and 5 April 1942. As commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, 41st Infantry, Philippine Army, he displayed outstanding courage and gallantry in attacking the enemy up the foot cliffs, out of the Pantingan Valley, without supporting artillery fire. This successful mission, accomplished on an exceedingly dark night and followed by additional successful attacks, was a result of Colonel Zobel's gallant leadership and was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

III. SILVER STAR AND OAK-LEAF CLUSTER.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star and a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the periods indicated were awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

a. Silver Star.—Brigadier General Clinton A. Pierce, O4937, United States Army, commanding the 26th United States Cavalry, Philippine Scouts, on 22 December 1941, displayed gallantry in action on Luzon, Philippine Islands. He maintained his command post well forward in the midst of severe action, exposing himself to hostile fire, and refusing to take available cover. General Pierce's courage was an inspiration to his troops and reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

b. Oak-Leaf Cluster.—Brigadier General Clinton A. Pierce, O4937, United States Army, as commanding officer, 26th Cavalry, Philippine Scouts, displayed outstanding gallantry at Binalonan, Pangasinan, Philippine Islands, on 24 December 1941. He courageously led his troops into a position which enabled them to repulse a strong enemy armored thrust with heavy losses, and later, with equal heroism, covered a crossing of the Agno River, ensuring the withdrawal of other units. General Pierce's conduct reflects the combat esprit of the soldiers he so ably led.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star and bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the periods indicated were awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

a. Silver Star.—Captain George A. Sense, O323095, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 24 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy artillery barrage, he heard a severely wounded soldier call from a cliff for aid. He reached the wounded man and, with the aid of two other men, lowered himself and the soldier by rope down the face of the cliff. Moving then through the continuing enemy shell fire and flying shrapnel, Captain Sense proceeded along a rough shore road with the injured man to an aid station.

b. Oak-Leaf Cluster.—Captain George A. Sense, O323095, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 2 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy artillery bombardment, in which a powder magazine of Battery Geary exploded, killing and wounding a number of men, he immediately proceeded to the stricken battery. Without regard for his own safety, under the continued enemy shelling and amid the exploding ammunition, Captain Sense organized and directed rescue operations.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star and a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the periods indicated were awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

a. Silver Star.—Private First Class Dean F. Walter (Army serial No. 18001656), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 14 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During an enemy air and artillery attack, he volunteered to drive a car through an area being heavily bombed and shelled, in order to take a wounded man to the hospital. Private Walter's conduct on this occasion reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

b. Oak-Leaf Cluster.—Private First Class Dean F. Walter (Army serial No. 18001656), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 29 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action during a heavy enemy shelling of Corregidor, Philippine Islands. After a machine-gun and searchlight position were hit by shell fire which killed and wounded a number of men, Private Walter, without regard for his own safety and while the area was still under artillery fire, rushed to the area to render first aid and assist in moving the wounded to the hospital.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942), and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier General Julius K. Lacey, O18006, United States Army. November 1943 to May 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Brigadier General Lacey, for services during the same period, as published in General Orders 394, Headquarters 1st Air Division, 15 May 1945.)
- Major John P. Lisack, O1698856 (then second lieutenant), Air Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to December 1942.
- Colonel John B. Luscombe, O12525, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army. 2 May to 20 October 1942.
- Lieutenant Colonel Raymond B. Marlin, O21899, General Staff Corps, United States Army. October 1945 to July 1946.
- Colonel Stewart F. Miller, O8377, General Staff Corps, United States Army. October 1944 to August 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel John S. Myers, O504162, Corps of Military Police, Army of the United States. November 1942 to June 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Edwin W. Nelson, O918246, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. September 1942 to May 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Edward J. Noons, O260289, Army of the United States. September 1940 to June 1946.
- Colonel Richard G. Rogers, O11898, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army. 1 September 1941 to 9 April 1942.
- Captain Jean W. Schmidt, L-200020, Finance Department, Army of the United States. February 1944 to July 1945.
- Major William A. Ward, Jr., O915489, Air Corps, Army of the United States. April 1944 to August 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, China Theater, to the following-named officer:

Colonel Ralph V. Plew, O18317, Medical Corps, United States Army. September 1945 to April 1946.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Group Captain H. A. V. Hogan, Royal Air Force. June 1941 to August 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Watts S. Humphrey, O901252, Air Corps, Army of the United States. June 1945 to January 1946.

Major Russell J. Hutchinson, O398176 (then first lieutenant), Air Corps, Army of the United States. December 1943 to June 1944.

Captain Jesse B. Wray, O304598, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. January 1942 to March 1944.

Captain James F. Coffee, O383331, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. April to May 1942.

Technical Sergeant Emil S. Morello (Army Serial No. 20900650) (then sergeant), Infantry, Army of the United States. 26 December 1941.

Captain George A. Sense, O323095, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Major Ruth M. Straub, N702908 (then first lieutenant), Army Nurse Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

First Lieutenant Milton H. Blick, O549257, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. October 1944 to May 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Bruce Buttles, O383283 (then captain), General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Sergeant Wilborn L. Dyess (Army serial No. 6397157), Infantry, Army of the United States. 16 January 1945.

Corporal Edward Bell (Army serial No. 15017214) (then private), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, as chief of breech of one of the guns at Battery Way, performed heroic services on 6 May 1942 at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. He remained in the gun pit continuously during a heavy and sustained enemy artillery and aerial bombardment, proceeding courageously with his hazardous work until severely wounded. Corporal Bell's actions inspired and encouraged the personnel of the battery and reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Staff Sergeant Julian B. Brown (Army serial No. 7084638), Army of the United States, rendered heroic services in supervising and directing the maintenance work on air fields and roads in Bataan, Philippine Islands, from 1 January to 9 April 1942. He supervised the organization of the last defensive line held by the 57th Infantry, Philippine Scouts, during the closing days of the defense. Sergeant Brown's services reflect credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Colonel Frank Nelson, O5484, General Staff Corps (Cavalry), United States Army, as staff officer of the 1 Philippine Corps, performed heroic services on 2 April 1942, at Bataan, Philippine Islands. He began a personal daylight reconnaissance to determine the usability of a jungle mountain trail in connection with future operations. Heavy enemy artillery fire blocked the road, but, without regard for his own safety, Colonel Nelson proceeded through the falling enemy shells and concentration of fire and gained important operational information.

Corporal Robert M. Pribbernow (Army serial No. 16008535) (then private first class), Battery B, 59th Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, on 24 April 1942, performed heroic services on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy artillery concentration, he stayed at his battery, despite falling enemy shells, and rescued the wounded and helped carry them to safety. Corporal Pribbernow's courage and devotion to his wounded comrades reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Otis E. Saalman, O348986, Infantry, Army of the United States, on 2 May 1942, performed heroic services on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When the powder magazine at Battery Geary was exploded by enemy artillery, he immediately left his position of safety, proceeded through the heavily shelled area to the emplacement, and, under continuing enemy barrage, assisted in rescuing the wounded and extinguishing the flames. Lieutenant Saalman's personal courage and determination reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Eugene H. Erwin (Army serial No. 34904954), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 4 April 1945, voluntarily accompanying a patrol as radioman, performed heroic services in Essen, Germany. Although exposed to heavy enemy machine-gun fire, he kept in constant contact with the command post and directed artillery fire which destroyed a strong enemy machine-gun position and a German tank and caused three other tanks to flee. Private Erwin's courageous actions, under heavy enemy fire and without regard for his own safety, aided greatly the advance of his platoon.

VIII. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Staff Sergeant Rosario J. Cali (Army serial No. 31328131), Air Corps, Army of the United States. March to April 1945.

Captain John J. Dorie, O667964, Air Corps, Army of the United States. March 1944 to June 1945.

Staff Sergeant Robert W. Kelly (Army serial No. 15353988), Air Corps, Army of the United States. July 1942 to May 1945.

Staff Sergeant Chester E. Ksen (Army serial No. 36571890), Air Corps, Army of the United States. November 1943 to June 1945.

Staff Sergeant Raymond C. MacWhorter (Army serial No. 33283789), Air Corps, Army of the United States. March 1944 to June 1945.

Technical Sergeant Francis E. Mahota (Army serial No. 32551075), Air Corps, Army of the United States. June 1943 to April 1945.

Captain Richard L. McClymont, O441812, Air Corps, Army of the United States. January 1944 to January 1945.

Sergeant August F. McLaughlin (Army serial No. 36067031), Air Corps, Army of the United States. September 1943 to June 1945.

Technical Sergeant Jack B. Meyers (Army serial No. 12057274), Air Corps, Army of the United States. August 1944 to June 1945.

Captain James P. Moran, O497709, Air Corps, Army of the United States. October 1942 to May 1945.

Major John M. Rice, O420679, Air Corps, Army of the United States. September 1942 to September 1945.

Corporal Donn B. Robbins (Army serial No. 17166617), Air Corps, Army of the United States. April to December 1944.

First Lieutenant Jerome Robbins, O800668, Air Corps, Army of the United States. August 1943 to June 1945.

Captain Glen S. Roberts, O434160, Air Corps, Army of the United States. February 1943 to March 1945.

Corporal Homer W. Scott (Army serial No. 32982416), Air Corps, Army of the United States. January 1944 to April 1945.

Technical Sergeant Henry R. Weller, Jr. (Army serial No. 18148932), Air Corps, Army of the United States. December 1943 to July 1945.

Technical Sergeant Lewis E. Wilson (Army serial No. 18126152), Air Corps, Army of the United States. March 1943 to June 1945.

IX. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Gero von Gaevernitz, American civilian, Office of Strategic Services, Swiss Mission, from February to May 1945, was the first American to learn of German intentions to negotiate a surrender in Italy. Thereafter, he took part in the meetings held in Switzerland and at Caserta, Italy, between representatives of Allied forces headquarters and the German emissaries. Mr. von Gaevernitz's vigilance, tact, and powers of persuasion contributed greatly to the successful outcome of the surrender negotiations.

IV. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul., 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul., 11, 1942), citation of the following unit as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific, is hereby confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

Team K, 989th Signal Service Company, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in the Southwest Pacific area from 20 October 1944 to 12 March 1945. Operating under extremely adverse conditions and often subjected to enemy fire, Team K rendered invaluable service in two major amphibious landings and the ensuing ground campaigns in the Philippine Islands. Going ashore with the second wave on A-day in Leyte, the team swiftly installed and placed their communications equipment in operation and effected the continuous, efficient transmission of highly important messages for the following 61 days. When enemy action and extreme weather conditions rendered a great number of wire communications facilities inoperable, Team K enlarged the scope of its operations to include 18 very high frequency radio link terminals, as important tactical commands were connected with the Commander in Chief and the advance command post of General Headquarters, although the team was forced to operate with only a fraction of the personnel normally required for commensurate activities. Members of the unit assisted in fighting off enemy airborne troops on 21 November and maintained operations despite the dangerous proximity of hostile forces. Again, during the advance down the central plain of Luzon, the team operated most effectively in maintaining close contact between the advanced combat elements, the Commander in Chief, and the chief signal officer. Immediately upon the entry of American forces into Manila, Team K placed in operation communications between the swiftly advancing units and headquarters to the rear and, although under enemy sniper and machine-gun fire, installed, operated, and maintained communications facilities for the handling of the majority of signal traffic in the capital. In addition, during the wanton destruction of Manila by the retreating enemy, the team participated in the daring rescue of prisoners interned in Bilibid Prison. Exhibiting outstanding technical proficiency, marked courage, and unremitting devotion to duty, Team K, 989th Signal Service Company, made a noteworthy contribution to the success of operations in the Philippine Island.

Brigadier General Alden R. Crawford, O18219, United States Army. January 1941 to August 1944.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Brigadier General Bernhard A. Johnson, as published in General Orders 60, Headquarters Persian Gulf Command, 29 May 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Bernhard A. Johnson, O166223, Army of the United States. October 1945 to April 1946.

4. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General James D. McIntyre, as published in General Orders 43, 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General James D. McIntyre, O7466, United States Army. June 1942 to September 1944.

IV..DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for heroic achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Second Lieutenant William H. Curland, O760589, Air Corps, Army of the United States, on 30 October 1944, as pilot on a B-24 type aircraft which was seriously damaged by enemy fire, remained at the controls in order to facilitate the escape of his crewmen from the blazing and doomed airplane. The courage and utter disregard for personal safety displayed by Lieutenant Curland are worthy of emulation by all and reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

V..DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Warren J. DeVos, O2001499, Air Corps, Army of the United States, 28 February 1945.

VI..DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Flying Cross awarded to Flight Officer Hans E. Habermehl, Jr., as published in General Orders 174, Headquarters Army Air Forces, India-Burma Theater, 22 July 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926). The citation is as follows:

Flight Officer Hans E. Habermehl, Jr. (T5847), Air Corps, Army of the United States. March to September 1945.

VII..SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class James D. Shockman, United States Marine Corps, on 6 May 1942, sighted a man in distress in waters near Fort Hughes, Philippine Islands. Without regard for his own safety, he plunged, with another service man, into the water and started swimming to the rescue within full view of the enemy. After he swam a short distance, Jap airplanes attacked, killing him in the performance of his heroic deed. Private Shockman's willing self-sacrifice was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

VIII..SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class George R. Bilhardt (Army serial No. 14038398), 59th Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, on 6 May 1942, sighted a man in distress in waters near Fort Hughes, Philippine Islands. Without regard for his own safety and within full view of the enemy, he plunged, with another service man, into the war and started to the rescue. Jap airplanes attacked, killing the other rescuer and preventing recovery of the drowning man. Private Bilhardt's outstanding courage on this occasion reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

IX..BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Captain John F. Presnell, Jr., O22890, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, displayed heroic conduct at Battan, Philippine Islands, on 5-6 April 1942. During an intense aerial bombing, on his own initiative and at the risk of his life, Captain Presnell salvaged vital engineer equipment from a wrecked supply train, which carried ammunition, food, and engineer supplies.

Corporal Louis O. Hodges (Army serial No. 34223049), Battery C, 333d Field Artillery Battalion, Army of the United States, on 17 December 1944, displayed extraordinary heroism near Schoenberg, Belgium. He was in charge of a machine gun located near the battalion when the position was surrounded by German armor and infantry. Realizing the serious need of his gun in a perimeter defense formed by the cannoneers, he resolved to move his weapon. Through heavy enemy fire, Corporal Hodges managed to carry the gun close enough to be recovered by his companions before he was struck by enemy mortar fire and killed in his valiant effort to strengthen his unit's defense.

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

First Lieutenant William C. Bryan, O390992, Infantry, Army of the United States. 15 December 1944.

Captain Marion L. Daman, O390000, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Captain John S. King, O854919, Transportation Corps (Chemical Warfare Service), Army of the United States. February 1943 to March 1944.

Master Sergeant Lester H. Koenig (Army serial No. 19178569), Air Corps, Army of the United States. May 1944 to March 1945.

Captain Harold P. Laird, O326678, Infantry, Army of the United States. June 1943 to March 1944.

Lieutenant Colonel Merle A. Meacham, O303610, Infantry, Army of the United States. 1 October 1942 to 1 January 1943.

Ensign George T. Peck, United States Naval Reserve. September 1944 to June 1945.

Technical Sergeant Fred Rosen (Army serial No. 32175945), Detached Enlisted Men's List, Army of the United States. April to October 1944.

First Lieutenant Charles L. Spencer, O378206, Transportation Corps (Infantry), Army of the United States. March 1942 to March 1944.

Lieutenant Colonel Dwight E. Gard, O301095 (then major), Finance Department, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Captain Henry W. Goodall (then lieutenant colonel), United States Navy. December 1941 to February 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Reginald H. Ridgely, Jr. (then major) United States Marine Corps. December 1941 to May 1942.

Captain Timothy E. Robinson, O299849, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. 8 January to 15 February 1942.

Captain Earl L. Sackett (then commander), United States Navy. December 1941 to April 1942.

Staff Sergeant William F. Bassak (Army serial No. 20225588), Infantry, Army of the United States. 7 and 8 January 1945.

Technician Third Grade Dixon D. Hedges (Army serial No. 38410214), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. June 1944 to May 1945.

Private First Class LeRoy V. Parks (Army serial No. 37744097), Company H, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding heroism near Etzlingen, France, on 3 March 1945. When communications were severed by heavy enemy artillery fire, he courageously left the relative safety of his covered position on several occasions to repair the breaks in the lines. Private Parks' heroic conduct enabled the mortars to continue their support of the advancing troops.

Private Raymond B. Enright (Army serial No. 18048998), Battery E, 60th Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding courage at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 6 May 1942. During an extremely heavy and sustained artillery and air bombardment, he voluntarily undertook to keep the runways to the guns clear of debris and, though repeatedly subjected to flying fragments, he remained in action. Private Enright's heroic actions reflect credit on himself and the military service.

Staff Sergeant Haren Barrett (Army serial No. 35653760), Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding heroism near Wendel, France, on 26 February 1945. Unhesitatingly, he crawled through an enemy mine field to rescue a soldier, who lay wounded in an area swept by intense enemy fire, then dragged him over the same route to safety. Sergeant Barrett's courageous act saved a fellow soldier from further injury and possible death.

Private First Class Louis J. Bradley (Army serial No. 32838368) Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself on 19 December 1944 by volunteering to participate in a motorized patrol of the 422nd Infantry Regiment near Halenfeld, Germany. The members of this patrol, by preventing an enemy ambush, saved the lives of many of their comrades. Private Bradley's unselfish conduct and disregard for his own safety reflect credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Technical Sergeant Roger R. Martin (Army serial No. 36477462) (then sergeant), Company H, 422d Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, performed heroically in action near Schonberg, Belgium, on 19 December 1944. Trapped in an exposed position, Sergeant Martin continued to man his machine gun and resisted until captured 2 days after the regimental area was overrun by the enemy.

XI. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive AGO 190B

Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Captain Kenneth J. Bouchard, O660025, Air Corps, Army of the United States. May 1942 to June 1945.

Sergeant Robert M. Carroll (Army serial No. 11067553), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 7 to 23 March 1945.

Technical Sergeant Eugene Dondes (Army serial No. 32417390), Air Corps, Army of the United States. January 1944 to September 1945.

First Lieutenant Harrey W. Rogers, O521525, Air Corps, Army of the United States. January 1944 to June 1945.

Private First Class Joseph Rotella, Jr. (Army serial No. 39704209), Air Corps, Army of the United States, August 1944 to March 1945.

XII. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—

By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1942) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel David M. Greeley, O492316, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services as executive officer, Field Headquarters, United States of America Typhus Commission, in England, France, and Germany, from October 1944 to March 1946. He was skilled and experienced in the professional and administrative aspects of investigating and controlling epidemic typhus and served with distinction not only the Commission, but also chief military and civilian agencies concerned with typhus control. Colonel Greeley's activities on an international scale strengthened greatly typhus control throughout western Europe.

XIII. LEGION OF MERIT.—Section III, WD General Orders 65, 1946, pertaining to Brigadier General Alden R. Crawford, United States Army, is rescinded (see par. 2, sec. III above).

CENTRAL BRANCH, UNITED STATES DISCIPLINARY BARRACKS—Discontinued-----	I
REGIONAL OFFICES—Established for Army Exchange Service and Army Motion Picture Service-----	II
BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units-----	III

I. CENTRAL BRANCH, UNITED STATES DISCIPLINARY BARRACKS.—Effective as of 15 July 1946, the Central Branch, United States Disciplinary Barracks, Jefferson Barracks, Missouri, is discontinued.

[AG 602 (15 Jul 46)]

II. REGIONAL OFFICES.—1. Effective 11 August 1946, there will be established regional offices for the Army Exchange Service and the Army Motion Picture Service in each army area and such other additional regional offices that may be designated by the War Department from time to time. These regional offices will be designated class II installations under the direct control of the War Department, to render service on an Army-wide basis.

2. The regional offices of the Army Exchange Service will render service on an Army-wide basis for class I and II installations as follows:

a. The regional offices will perform the necessary audits and management control surveys.

b. All other services, including those pertaining to financial and procurement activities, will be advisory, at the request of army commanders.

3. The regional offices of the Army Exchange Service will render service on an Army-wide basis for class III installations as follows:

a. Supervision over the operation of exchanges, including matters pertaining to financial and procurement activities.

b. The region offices will perform the necessary audits and management control surveys.

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 129th Field Artillery Battalion is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 27 May to 24 August 1944 at Aitape, New Guinea. Shortly before 27 May 1944, intelligence reports were received to the effect that Japanese forces, split by the landing of the 32d Division and attached units at Aitape, were attempting to remedy their precarious situation by marching on Aitape from their base at Wewak. This task had been assigned to a picked unit, the well-trained Japanese 18th Army, who early verified these reports by their aggressive and extensive patrolling. Had their attempted operation been successful, it would have endangered the whole strategy of the New Guinea Campaign. To avert such, into the breach was hurled the 129th Field Artillery Battalion, the only artillery unit in position to check the Japanese advance and rendered fire support to the 127th and 128th Infantry Regiments, then in defense along Driniumor River for a distance of 4½ miles. Unable to depend upon available maps, the battalion, overcoming unusually difficult and hazardous conditions, initiated extensive and painstaking air and ground reconnaissance. Forward observers on patrol with infantry elements encountered advance elements of the enemy force and brought devastating fire on targets of opportunity. In addition, the battalion furnished its own reconnaissance and local security, which successfully destroyed all preliminary attempts to enter the battalion perimeter. By 27 June, the situation was such as to require displacement of artillery pieces to the forward limits of the defective sector. On 10 July, after intense infantry and artillery preparation, the enemy launched a full-scale attack in strength. An immediate concentration of all howitzers of the 129th Field Artillery Battalion broke up this attack and forced the enemy commander to relaunch his drive in force at another point in the line. To this, the battalion also gave its determined and concentrated fire, expending some 1,300 rounds in little better than an hour's time and at a rate of better than 18 rounds a minute. Its complete ammunition supply exhausted, the battalion completed a successful and orderly night withdrawal and, in the next 36 hours, utilized its airplanes and radios to assist in a large measure the regrouping of all forces for a counterattack, infantry communication having been completely disrupted. Shortly thereafter, on 13 July, the 32d Division advanced in force against the enemy preceded by the heaviest of preliminary barrages and counterbattery fire. So successful was the execution against even the most fanatical of Japanese resistance that in an incredibly short time the Drinimor River line was resecured and the enemy forced to reorganize his heavily depleted units east of the river. After numerous feints at the original line, the enemy attempted a by-pass action through the hills south of Afua, only to be met by the same annihilating fire from the howitzers of the 129th Field Artillery Battalion, which had shattered his previous attempts. Eventually, his remnants withdrew towards Wewak, all threats to the success of the American Aitape operation broken. In this operation, which saw individual members of the 129th Field Artillery Battalion perform many recognized acts of heroism and gallantry, and exhibit the highest esprit de corps, artillery units contributed a decisive portion of the force which cost the Japanese in excess of 10,000 casualties. The 129th Field Artillery Battalion, at first alone and later the coordinating and intelligence force for all artillery units supporting the attack, maintained the finest traditions of the artillery, exhibiting only the best in training, discipline, and the delivery of accurate fire. Its action reflected great credit on itself, the 32d Division, and the military service. (General Orders 46, Headquarters 32d Infantry Division, 28 February 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, Sixth Army.)

2. The 454th Bombardment Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. Notified to prepare maximum number of aircraft for a mission against the Hermann Goering Stell Works in Linz, Austria, the ground crews worked enthusiastically and determinedly to have their aircraft in perfect mechanical condition to insure the success of the mission. On 25 July 1944, thirty-three B-24 type aircraft, heavily loaded with maximum tonnage, took off, and, assuming lead of the wing formation, set course for the objective. As was anticipated, their formation was intercepted by approximately 50 aggressive and persistent enemy fighters and, in the ensuing violent aerial battle, the enemy used rocket guns, 20-mm. cannon, and machine guns in a desperate attempt to disrupt this vital operation. Despite very intense, accurate, and heavy antiaircraft fire and fierce enemy interception over the objective, the gallant crews battled their way through to score many direct hits in the immediate target area, causing destruction and severe damage to the enemy plant and installations. Throughout the heavy opposition by the enemy, 2 crew members were killed, 13 injured by fighter and flak fire, and 11 aircraft damaged. Through their ability to maintain a tight formation to procure the maximum fire power available, together with the accurate gunnery of the gallant crews, they accounted for nine enemy aircraft destroyed, two probably destroyed, and three damaged. The material damage inflicted in the target area contributed greatly to the damage and destruction of the Hermann Goering Steel Works, seriously curtailing the production of tanks and armament. By the determination, airmanship, and exceptional courage of the combat crews, together with the superior professional skill and intense devotion to duty of the ground personnel, the 454th Bombardment Group reflect great credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 3604, Headquarters Fifteenth Air Force, 24 September 1944, as approved by the Commanding General, Army Air Forces.)

3. The 460th Bombardment Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. On 25 July 1944, this group was assigned the task of attacking and destroying the Zwoltaxing airdrome installations, which were being used for the assembly of ME109's, as well as for repair of enemy fighters and for enemy fighter operations. A successful completion of this mission would inflict a crippling blow to the already dwindling strength of the enemy air force. Throughout the day and night prior to the attack, the ground crews worked untiringly and enthusiastically to have their aircraft at the peak of mechanical perfection to insure the success of this vital operation. On 26 July 1944, twenty-four B-24 type aircraft, heavily loaded with thousand-pound bombs, took off, and as lead group of a wing formation, set course for the objective. Intercepted by approximately 30 enemy fighters, displaying outstanding professional skill, coordination, and courage, the gunners threw such an effective curtain of protective fire from the extremely tight formation that the enemy fighters were forced to break off their attacks and withdraw. Severe and adverse weather conditions were encountered and with the target completely obscured by dense cloud formations, the group was forced to drop to a lower altitude. Without hesitation, the group descended into barrages of heavy, extremely intense, and very accurate enemy antiaircraft fire. Three aircraft went down in flames, two were so badly crippled that they were forced to drop from the protective formation, and fourteen others sustained severe damages. Unwavering, despite the intense enemy opposition, these gallant crews continued through the enemy defenses for a highly successful bombing run, inflicting grave damage to vital enemy installations. Through this outstanding achievement, the enemy was deprived of one of its most important fighter assembly and repair bases, thus effectively and seriously crippling enemy operational efficiency at a time of great importance. By the great determination, outstanding professional skill, and gallantry of the combat crews, together with the superior technical skill and devotion to duty of the ground personnel, the 460th Bombardment Group reflect great credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 3604, Headquarters Fifteenth Air Force, 24 September 1944, as approved by the Commanding General, Army Air Forces.)

UNITED STATES ARMY TRANSPORT—Designations of Marigold and Wisteria as hospital ships removed..... I
BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units..... II

I. UNITED STATES ARMY TRANSPORT.—1. WD General Orders 35, 1944, designating the United States Army Transport Marigold as a hospital ship, is rescinded.

2. WD General Orders 40, 1944, designating the United States Army transport Wisteria as a hospital ship, is rescinded.

[AG 560 (18 Jul 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 366th Fighter Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 11 July 1944. On this date, the 366th Fighter Group was dispatched upon three consecutive missions in close support of the Allied ground forces for the purpose of destroying enemy pillboxes in the vicinity of St. Lo, Normandy. The ceiling was approximately 1,000 feet, and a light rain which fell during the morning hours developed into a driving rain throughout the day. Upon approaching the target area assigned for the first mission, the aircraft of the group descended to 100 feet and discovered an enemy tank column, whose presence had not been revealed to the ground forces. In the face of intense antiaircraft fire, and despite extremely adverse weather conditions, the formation vigorously attacked the tank column, destroying approximately one-third of its numbers and disrupting the remainder. When their ammunition had been expended, the aircraft returned to base and, after rearming, immediately proceeded to attack the remainder of the tank column, which had proceeded to a point approximately 200 yards from the Allied lines. This attack successfully destroyed and damaged the enemy tanks to such an extent that their mission was not accomplished. The third mission, undertaken by the 366th Fighter Group shortly thereafter, was carried out, despite a heavy rainfall. After successfully attacking the assigned objectives, the formation observed another column of enemy tanks, which were immediately engaged with great success from minimum altitude. The outstanding devotion to duty displayed by the pilots of the 366th Fighter Group throughout the course of these three consecutive missions, together with the extraordinary perseverance, tactical proficiency, and well-coordinated support of the ground forces, which they demonstrated were instrumental in striking a decisive blow at enemy armor during a critical phase of the Normandy campaign reflect the highest credit on the entire organization. (General Orders 254, Headquarters Ninth Air Force, 28 October 1944, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Air Forces in Europe.)

2. The 507th Fighter Group (SE) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the Japanese on 13 August 1945. On that date 48 aircraft of the group flew a very long-range fighter sweep from their base on Ie Shim (Ryukyu Retto) to Keijo, Korea. The fight involved was rendered unusually dangerous by the lack of weather information and by incomplete intelligence.

of the anti-aircraft defenses available to the enemy-held territory. Upon arriving in this remote target area, the group was intercepted by a force of approximately 50 enemy aircraft of various types. Combat was sought by the 507th Fighter Group (SE) despite its having been airborne approximately 4 hours in single-seated P-47N's. For half an hour, the engagement continued while this group carried on aggressive attacks with great skill. While sustaining the loss of but one airplane, whose pilot was later rescued, the 507th Fighter Group (SE) destroyed 20 enemy airplanes in the air and probably destroyed another. On the ground, one was destroyed and two were damaged. The enemy was literally driven from the skies over Keijo, Korea. Thus did the group distinguish itself in aerial battle deep in enemy territory while flying an exhausting round trip of 1,580 miles, requiring a full 8 hours of flight in single-place fighter airplanes. This extraordinary feat of combat efficiency was accomplished despite the extreme length of the flight and the accompanying drain upon the energies of the pilots. As the 507th Fighter Group (SE) engaged and overwhelmingly defeated the enemy in aerial combat, the enemy that day found his adversary to be a daring and determined foe, who, in this opening blow into virgin territory, produced devastating results with extraordinary heroism, although faced with uncommon difficulties, hazards, and uncertainties. The strength of the enemy's interception indicated his concern with the audacity of the attack. The entire action demonstrates the importance of the contribution of the 507th Fighter Group (SE) through the outstanding success of this mission during the final hours of hostilities, materially increasing at this critical period the pressure upon the enemy to cease his resistance and surrender. The exemplary courage and skilled airmanship demonstrated by the 507th Fighter Group (SE) on this very important mission reflect great credit on the group and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 43, Headquarters Eighth Air Force, 26 April 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, Eighth Air Force.)

INDUSTRIAL FACILITIES—Discontinued as separate installations and placed in stand-by status as substops of class II industrial installations.....	I
BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units.....	II

I. INDUSTRIAL FACILITIES.—Effective as of 28 May 1946, the following industrial facilities are discontinued as separate installations and are placed, without change of function, in a stand-by status as substops of the respective class II industrial installations indicated:

1. Storage area of the Cornhusker Ordnance Plant, Grand Island, Nebraska, as substop of the Nebraska Ordnance Plant, Fremont, Nebraska.
2. Storage area of the Plum Brook Ordnance Works, Sandusky, Ohio, as substop of the Ravenna Arsenal, Apco, Ohio.
3. Major portion of the New River Ordnance Plant, Radford, Virginia, as substop of the Radford Arsenal, Radford, Virginia.

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 128th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in the Caraballe Mountains, Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 23 March to 30 May 1945. Over what has been officially referred to as "some of the bloodiest fighting in the history of the United States Army," the 1st Battalion, during this period, attacked and vanquished the fanatical enemy entrenched in seemingly impregnable fortifications controlling the Villa Verde Trail. So long had the enemy been in preparation of its cave fortifications, so elaborate had been their preparations, and so skillfully were these enemy defensive positions located, that the entire operation for the 1st Battalion consisted of assaults upon fortified positions. In the reduction of this force's forward area near Salacsac Pass Number 2, the 1st Battalion killed 700 Japanese, demolished innumerable cave positions, and captured countless enemy weapons. On May 1945, the 1st Battalion, after nearly complete replacement of its personnel because of combat casualties, began the attack on Hill 508, the commanding ground in the division sector and the focal point of the elaborate enemy defensive system. By skillful and courageous use of the flame-throwers, demolition charges, and hand grenades, the assault forces literally blasted and buried enemy troops to annihilation as the battalion fought its way onto the hill. Because of the clever employment of the enemy's weapons for mutual fire support in breadth and depth, the most exact coordination between elements of the battalion was required. Many times fire direction was given by forward assault groups for adjoining attackers, in order to overcome the usual poor observation. Often during the assault on Hill 508, the attackers found that the Japanese tunnels and underground positions extended completely through ridges, all of which were virtually invulnerable to bombs and artillery. After 9 days of constant assault on the hill mass, during which the Japanese made innumerable counterattacks, the 1st Battalion overwhelmed the entire hill to complete the annihilation of the Sampei force. Upon examination of the conquered fortress, it was found that the main cave was approximately 200 feet long, with numerous compartments leading from the main tunnel. The 1st Battalion suffered 609 combat casualties in this extremely costly battle for control of this sector of the Villa Verde Trail area. The 1st Battalion fought against the enemy's key positions and his most determined troops, killing more than 1,400. Despite the casualties and adverse conditions, the officers and men of the 1st Battalion, 128th Infantry Regiment, never wavered from their determination to destroy the enemy and complete an extremely difficult mission. (General Orders 31, Headquarters 32d Infantry Division, 15 February 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, Sixth Army.)

2. The 43d Cavalry Reconnaissance Troop (Mechanized) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Luzon, Philippine Islands, during the period 12 March to 1 May 1945. At the outset of the battle to turn the southern flank of the Shimbu Line, east of Manila, this unit was given the mission of reconnaissance and protection of the right flank of the 43d Infantry Division, covering the area between the division's flank and the east shore of Laguna de Bay. By the aggressive employment of both motor and foot patrols, the troops ascertained exactly the disposition of enemy forces facing it. Increasing the activity and aggressiveness of its patrols and employing a battery of field artillery in its support, the troop developed its patrolling with such vigor that the enemy, upon being engaged, withdrew under heavy small-arms and artillery fire and abandoned several towns along the north shore of Laguna de Bay. This withdrawal opened a road net which later enabled a regimental combat team, screened by this troop, to sweep into the Santa Maria Valley, turn the south flank of the Shimbu Line, clear the enemy from the west shore of Laguna de Bay, and contact an adjacent division to the south. During the battle, this unit successfully patrolled over 75 square miles of enemy-held territory in 16 days, forced the abandonment of several occupied barrios, as well as a road net vital to future operations, and captured 6 field pieces, 6 mortars, 8 vehicles, 3 flame throwers, and a quantity of small arms, food, and ammunition. The troop killed 84 Japanese and captured 6, with a loss to itself of only 1 man wounded. The courage, aggressive fighting, and the results obtained by the 43d Cavalry Reconnaissance Troop (Mechanized) contributed materially to the success of this operation. (General Orders 248, Headquarters Sixth Army, 11 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

Major Andrew B. Zwaska, O20907, Infantry, United States Army. 1 January to 9 April 1942.

First Lieutenant George R. Brown, O890150, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 14 March 1942, at Cabcan, Luzon, Philippine Islands, during an enemy bombing of the regimental ammunition dump, voluntarily entered the area to extinguish fires started by high explosive and incendiary bombs. Amid rapidly burning grass and bamboo, in which many of the ammunition piles were afire, Lieutenant Brown valiantly fought the flames and helped to save the regiment's only supply of ammunition.

Staff Sergeant John A. Keeler (Army serial No. 20842517), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 14 March 1942, at Cabcaban, Luzon, Philippine Islands, during an enemy bombing of the regimental ammunition dump, voluntarily entered the area to extinguish fires started by high explosive and incendiary bombs. Amid rapidly burning grass and bamboo, in which many of the ammunition piles were afire, Sergeant Keeler valiantly fought the flames and helped to save the regiment's only supply of ammunition.

II. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. Lieutenant Colonel Henry L. Miller, O313305, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. July 1943 to September 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel William A. Orr, O21064 (then major), Corps of Engineers, United States Army. November 1942 to August 1943.

Janet Potts, American Red Cross. October 1944 to May 1945.

Staff Sergeant Edward A. Starz (Army serial No. 36809753) (then technician fourth grade). Detached Enlisted Men's List, Army of the United States. 29 August to 17 September 1945.

Walter Struwe. 2 to 27 April 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Raymond McK. Williams, O20399, Medical Corps, United States Army. 10 to 30 January 1945.

Major Calvin E. Chunn, O352221, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Captain Jack A. Comstock, O400866, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. 1 January to 9 April 1942.

Major William N. Donovan, O21042, Medical Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

Captain William Harris (formerly first lieutenant), United States Marine Corps. 24 April to 6 May 1942.

Major Arthur C. Peterson, O18151, Coast Artillery, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel John B. Rago, O278636, Dental Corps, Army of the United States. 20 January 1942.

Captain Edward W. Stewart, O401026, Infantry, Army of the United States. 8 February 1942.

Chief Quartermaster George R. Williams, United States Navy. 24 April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Henry W. Allard, O255267 (then major), Infantry, Army of the United States. January to April 1945.

Captain Cecil Calvert, O166409, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. September to November 1944.

Major Herman M. Levinson, O311313, Infantry, Army of the United States. February to May 1945.

Major Clinton E. McEntyre, O412865 (then captain), Infantry, Army of the United States. April to September 1944.

Master Sergeant Roscoe Rossier (Army serial No. 33139368), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. 10 March to 8 May 1945.

Captain Cecil J. Wardell, O1165583, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. 4 February to 18 April 1945.

Weldon Hester, American Red Cross field director, displayed exceptional heroism on 15 February 1945 in saving the lives of two wounded men struggling in the waters of Mariveles Bay, Philippine Islands, after their boat had been sunk by a Japanese craft. Despite swirling waters and imminent danger from the enemy, Mr. Hester unhesitatingly plunged into the dark, rough seas, rescued the first man, and, although almost completely exhausted from the heroic act, again immediately entered the water and courageously towed the other man to safety.

First Lieutenant William R. Slone, O360494, 131st Field Artillery, Army of the United States, displayed heroism near Soerabaia, Java, from 6 to 8 March 1942. When the enemy advanced toward the city and attempted to cross the Kali Brantas River, causing native infantry troops to abandon their positions, Lieutenant Slone, with great presence of mind, organized about 65 men of Battery E into a rifle party and led them to positions on the river, which they held under heavy mortar, small-arms, and machine-gun fire. This timely action prevented the enemy from crossing the river until the official surrender of Java.

Private First Class Charles H. Butler, Army Serial No. 14042429, Coast Artillery Corps (AA), Army of the United States, on 5 and 6 May 1942, on duty at a battery observation post, performed heroic services at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Under intense enemy artillery fire and aerial bombardment, he continued to work the data computers and voluntarily assisted in evacuating wounded from the gun pit, in carrying water, and fighting fires ignited by bursting enemy shells. Private Butler's courage and devotion to duty reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Staff Sergeant Arthur Davis (Army serial No. 11018516) (then private), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 5 and 6 May 1942, performed heroic services at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When many men were wounded in an intense, sustained enemy artillery fire and air bombardment on Battery Way, he volunteered his services in the heavily shelled gun pit. He assisted in evacuating the wounded, served on the rammer detail, swept off the azimuth scales, and kept up a patter of humorous comment among the men. Sergeant Davis's courageous and cheerful assistance to the gun crew, under heavy enemy fire, reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Technician Third Grade Max Freeman (Army serial No. 36839746) (then technician fifth grade), 274th Infantry Regiment, Medical Department, Army of the United States, on 25 February 1945, near Stiring-Wendel, France, voluntarily crawled over open terrain, through heavy enemy machine-gun and artillery fire, to help a severely wounded soldier. After administering first aid, several times pinned down by enemy machine-gun fire, he carried the patient back over an open field to the forward aid station. Technician Freeman's heroic conduct reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Nicholas Savchik, O1170964, Infantry, Army of the United States, as supply officer, 2d Battalion, 274th Infantry Regiment, displayed heroic conduct in action near Stiring-Wendel, France, on 27 February 1945. Despite heavy artillery and mortar fire and mined roads, Lieutenant Savchik personally drove a vehicle to insure the supply and evacuation of his hard-pressed unit.

Private First Class David L. Sterling (Army serial No. 32859175) Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself on 19 December 1944 by volunteering to participate in a motorized patrol of the 422d Infantry Regiment near Halenfeld, Germany. The members of this patrol, by preventing an enemy ambush, saved the lives of many of their comrades. Private Sterling's unselfish conduct and disregard for his own safety reflect credit on himself and the armed forces.

Private First Class Darrel E. Wilson (Army serial No. 16155514) Company M, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, heroically defended an infantry company withdrawal by staunchly holding his machine-gun fire on two German tanks attacking a position near Stiring-Wendel, France, on 5 March 1945. When the tanks turned their fire on his position, Private Wilson bravely continued to use his weapon, despite the odds against him, until the infantry had successfully withdrawn.

Private First Class Deciderio Yanez (Army serial No. 39278225), Infantry, Army of the United States, rendered heroic services as a heavy machine gunner near Stiringen-Wendel, Germany, on 5 March 1945. He remained at his gun and covered the withdrawal of his comrades, despite direct fire from enemy tanks and counterattacking enemy. Private Yanez's actions enabled his unit to withdraw with a minimum of casualties and were in accord with the highest military traditions.

III. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Major Benjamin H. Charles, as published in General Orders 82, Peninsular Base Section, 6 May 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the Commanding General, European Theater, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Major Benjamin H. Charles, O441608, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. December 1943 to November 1944.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Captain Albert B. Morrison, Jr., as published in General Orders 70, Headquarters 1st Armored Division, 21 July 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Captain Albert B. Morrison, Jr., O422189, Infantry, Army of the United States. August 1942 to March 1944.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Major Robert S. Kramer, as published in General Orders 101, Headquarters United States Army Forces, Pacific, 15 March 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Major Robert S. Kramer, O23729 (then first lieutenant), Corps of Engineers, United States Army, displayed heroic conduct on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 8-9 April 1942. When the Padang Line, held by the 14th Engineer Battalion (Philippine Scouts), was in danger of being completely overrun, Lieutenant Kramer, commanding a platoon, Company C, 14th Engineers (Philippine Scouts), hastily, and upon his own volition, organized a line upon which to rally the withdrawing battalion. His prompt and decisive action and cool leadership in rallying the withdrawing troops to reform a new defensive line succeeded in bolstering the fighting spirit of the battalion.

IV. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

- Lieutenant Colonel Cecil H. Scott, Jr., O408856, Air Corps, Army of the United States. April 1941 to September 1943.
- Staff Sergeant Furman W. Shaw (Army serial No. 13177143), Air Corps, Army of the United States, December 1944 to January 1945.
- Master Sergeant Earl L. Williams (Army serial No. 14064119), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 21 June to 31 August 1945.
- Technical Sergeant Louis K. Woodland (Army serial No. 33729116), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 21 June to 31 August 1945.

V. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious services which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated, was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individuals:

Edith Blumenfeld, an Austrian civilian employee of the 70th Quartermaster Base Depot, performed meritorious services from November 1944 to December 1945 in southern France. As chief civilian clerk of the Class I Branch, she was of great value as an accomplished interpreter, and efficiently carried on many of its administrative and clerical functions when experienced personnel were at a premium. Miss Blumenfeld added materially to the efficiency of the depot and to the successful accomplishment of its mission.

Doctor Harold C. Deutsch, American civilian, distinguished himself as chief of several agencies with the Research and Analysis Branch, Office of Strategic Services, in England, France, and Germany, from February 1944 to September 1945. Charged with the collection and analysis of social, political, and economic intelligence of certain European countries, Doctor Deutsch displayed outstanding scholarship and energy in directing the efforts of his agencies toward the sound solution of problems pertaining to the political and strategic planning in support of military operations.

George G. Jones, American civilian, performed meritorious services overseas as expert consultant, Office of the Secretary of War, from February to April and August to September 1944. As special adviser on communications problems to the Army Air Forces, Mr. Jones served with distinction, exhibiting great tact and high professional skill in the initiation and perfection of operational policies and techniques, which improved greatly the effectiveness of the Army Airways Communications System.

Colonel Pierre Jonglez, French Army, rendered exceptionally meritorious services to the Army of the United States from November 1944 to December 1945. In his capacity as chief of the 2d Bureau, Direction Generale des Eaux et Forets, he directed the cutting of forests under his jurisdiction in such a manner as to combine the best principles of forest conservation and requirements of intense military necessity. The production of cut fuel-wood for the armed forces of the United States, so necessary to the progress of the war effort, was furthered to an exceptional degree by the services of Colonel Jonglez.

Colonel André Lefevre, French Army, as Conservateur des Eaux et Forets, performed exceptionally meritorious services to the Army of the United States from November 1944 to December 1945. Colonel Lefevre made available for use of the American Army large quantities of French timber in the forests under his jurisdiction, thereby contributing to cordial French-American relations and greatly aiding the Allied war effort.

Eric A. Lindgren, American civilian, rendered meritorious services as an instructor in jungle training in southeast Asia, from September 1944 to October 1945. Possessing an outstanding knowledge and understanding of jungle countries and their native inhabitants, coupled with characteristic courage and perseverance, he performed duties of great value. Mr. Lindgren's accomplishments contributed materially to the success of the Allied war effort.

Doctor Edward S. Mason, American civilian, performed services of unquestioned aid to the United States Government from September 1941 to January 1945. He discharged his responsibilities of collecting, collating, and analyzing social, political, economic, and topographic intelligence concerning various regions of Europe with notable success. Doctor Mason's reports on conditions in Europe, compiled here and abroad, were of great value to the prosecution of the war effort.

Loran Haskell Sasseen, senior mechanic, Civil Aeronautics Administration, Fort Richardson, Alaska, on 21 September 1942, seeing a Royal Canadian Air Force airplane about 100 yards away crash and start burning, ran to the airplane. Although the airplane and surroundings were aflame and machine-gun bullets flying, Mr. Sasseen, uncertain whether all bombs had been jettisoned, succeeded in safely removing a disabled soldier from the wreck only a few seconds before a violent explosion blew the airplane to bits.

I. DETROIT TANK ARSENAL, CENTERLINE, MICHIGAN.—Effective as of 10 July 1946, the Detroit Tank Arsenal, Centerline, Michigan, is redesignated the Detroit Arsenal, Centerline, Michigan.

[AG 680.1 (13 Jul 46)]

II. MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.—Effective as of 1 July 1946, the Arkansas Ordnance Plant, Little Rock, Arkansas, is discontinued as a military establishment.

[AG 6801.1 (13 Jul 46)]

III. OFFICE OF SPECIAL SETTLEMENT ACCOUNTS.—Effective as of 1 July 1946, the Office of Special Settlement Accounts, a class II installation of the Office, Chief of Finance, 27 Pine Street, New York 5, New York, is discontinued as an autonomous organization and is concurrently reestablished as a division of the Office of Dependency Benefits, a class II installation of the Office, Chief of Finance, 213 Washington Street, Newark 2, New Jersey.

[AG 020 (12 Jul 46)]

IV. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units, as approved by the Commanding General, Mediterranean Theater of Operations, 3 July 1946, are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Company A, 2671st Special Reconnaissance Battalion (Separate) (Provisional), is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in Italy from 15 April to 1 May 1945. Company A, composed of officers and enlisted men who volunteered for extra-hazardous duty in the conducting of operations behind enemy lines, engaged in extensive operations in Italy under the direction of the 15th Army Group Headquarters. These men, organized into small operational groups, were infiltrated behind the enemy lines by parachute and, maintaining contact with their headquarters by radio, organized extensive partisan forces. In the final phase of the offensive of the 15th Army Group, they led these partisan forces in all-out attacks. The officers and enlisted men of Company A, 2671st Special Reconnaissance Battalion (Separate) (Provisional), despite the constant danger of attack and capture, by their courageous leadership and participation in the operations of these resistance forces were instrumental in causing them to organize and attack the enemy and were a constant inspiration to them, thus reflecting the great credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States.

2. Company B, 2671st Special Reconnaissance Battalion (Separate) (Provisional), is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in southern France from 1 to 15 August 1944. Assigned the mission to parachute into central and southern France in strategic areas in advance of the invasion forces, Company B, composed of officers and enlisted men who had volunteered to perform extra-hazardous duty, contacted French Forces of the Interior, arranged for their supply by parachute drops of arms, ammunition, and other supplies, and led them in operations as directed by Allied Force Headquarters. These men, along with French Forces of the Interior, established road blocks, mined roads, ambushed columns, attacked enemy installations, and received the surrender of over 10,000 German troops. The presence of Company B, 2671st Special Reconnaissance Battalion (Separate) (Provisional), deep in occupied France and their active participation and leadership in dangerous operations was a potent factor in inspiring the French Forces of the Interior to take such an active and important part in attacking the enemy in support of the Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Forces and Seventh Army invasions, thus reflecting great credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States.

3. Company C, 2671st Special Reconnaissance Battalion (Separate) (Provisional), is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in Greece from 15 August to 1 September 1944. The officers and enlisted men of Company C volunteered for extra-hazardous duty consisting of infiltrating behind the German lines, in uniform, by parachute or by sea, and leading resistance forces in attacks against the enemy. A total of 15 officers and 159 enlisted men were parachuted into strategic areas of Greece, or entered it by sea, and organized and led the Greek partisans in a campaign to cut off the lines of retreat of the German forces. The men of Company C, 2671st Special Reconnaissance Battalion (Separate) (Provisional), with their partisan bands, destroyed many bridges, blocked roads, attacked German convoys, and caused severe loss in enemy personnel and equipment, thus reflecting great credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States.

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named enlisted men:

Private First Class John D. Magrath (Army serial No. 31326858), radio operator, Company G, 85th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 14 April 1945, displayed conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty when his company was pinned down by heavy artillery, mortar, and small-arms fire near Castel d'Aiano, Italy. Volunteering to act as a scout, armed with only a rifle, he charged headlong into withering fire, killing two Germans and wounding three, in order to capture a machine gun. Carrying this enemy weapon across an open field through heavy fire, he neutralized two more machine-gun nests. He then circled behind four other Germans, killing them with a burst as they were firing on his company. Spotting another dangerous enemy position to his right, he kneeled with the machine gun in his arms and exchanged fire with the Germans until he had killed two and wounded three. The enemy now poured increased mortar and artillery fire on the company's newly won position. Private Magrath fearlessly volunteered again to brave the shelling in order to collect a report of casualties. Carrying out this task heroically he made the supreme sacrifice—a climax to valor and courage and in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Sergeant Harold O. Messerschmidt (Army serial No. 33779438), Company L, 30th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 17 September 1944 near Radden, France, displayed conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty. Braving machine-gun, machine-pistol, and rifle fire, he moved fearlessly and calmly from man to man along his 40-yard squad front, encouraging each to hold against the overwhelming assault of a fanatical foe surging up the hillside. Knocked to the ground by a burst from an enemy automatic weapon, he immediately jumped to his feet, ignoring his grave wounds, fired his submachine gun at the enemy, which was now upon them, killing five and wounding many others before his ammunition was spent. Virtually surrounded by a frenzied foe and all of his squad now casualties, he elected to fight on alone, using his empty submachine gun as a bludgeon against his assailants. Spotting one of the enemy about to kill a wounded comrade, he felled the German with a blow of his weapon. Seeing friendly reinforcements running up the hill, he continued furiously to wield his empty gun against the foe in a new attack, and it was thus that he made the supreme sacrifice, fighting his way deep into the enemy line. Sergeant Messerschmidt's sustained heroism in hand-to-hand combat with superior enemy forces was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Sergeant Joseph E. Muller (Army serial No. 32230455), as an acting squad leader, Company B, 305th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 15 and 16 May 1945 near Ishimmi, Okinawa, displayed conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty. When his platoon was stopped by deadly fire from a strongly defended ridge, he directed men to points where they could cover his attack. Then through the vicious machine-gun and automatic fire, crawling forward alone, he suddenly jumped up, hurling his grenades, charged the enemy, and drove them into the open, where his squad shot them down. Seeing enemy survivors about to man a machine gun, firing his rifle at point-blank range, he hurled himself upon them and killed the remaining four. Before dawn the next day, the enemy counterattacked fiercely to retake the position, Sergeant Muller crawled forward through the flying bullets and explosives, then, leaping to his feet, hurling grenades, and firing his rifle, charged the Japs and routed them. As he moved into his fox hole shared with two other men, a lone enemy, who had been feigning death, threw a grenade. Quickly seeing the danger to his companions, Sergeant Muller threw himself over it and smothered the blast with his body. Sacrificing his life heroically to save his comrades, Sergeant Muller upheld the highest traditions of the military service.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier General Ames T. Brown, O158593, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. December 1940 to September 1945.
- Brigadier General Herbert R. Dean, O144648, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. October 1940 to October 1945.
- Brigadier General Doyle O. Hickey, O10123, United States Army. September 1944 to April 1945. (This award supersedes the award of a bronze Oak-Leaf cluster to the Bronze Star Medal to Brigadier General Hickey, for services from 26 February to 7 March 1945, as published in General Orders 35, Headquarters 3d Armored Division, 14 March 1945.)
- Major General Junius Wallace Jones, O3554, United States Army. July 1943 to May 1946.
- Colonel Arthur V. McDermott, O166056, Judge Advocate General's Department, Army of the United States. September 1940 to September 1945.
- Colonel William W. Wanamaker, O12055 (then brigadier general), United States Army. April 1944 to May 1945.

III. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

- Technical Sergeant Leamon J. DeVault (Army serial No. 18029823), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron serving on beach defense as infantry, on 7 February 1942, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy at Quinaun Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands. After 3 consecutive days of fighting which drove the enemy onto the beach, he volunteered with five other men to attack, from landing boats, enemy forces which had taken cover beneath the cliffs and in caves. Without regard for his own safety, Sergeant DaVault, with five other men, raked the enemy positions and cave entrances with machine-gun fire, while fully exposed to enemy aircraft and small-arms fire from the beach.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles E. N. Howard, Jr., O18521 (then major), Field Artillery, United States Army, as commander, Second Battalion, 88th Field Artillery, Philippine Scouts, on 23 February 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands. Under heavy enemy artillery fire and repeated dive-bomber attacks, he kept his command post and fire direction center in operation. Seeing a fire, started by a bursting shell in a nearby cane field, rapidly approach a filled ammunition truck, Colonel Howard drove the vehicle, without regard for his own safety, through the falling explosives to a place of security.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer:

Second Lieutenant Floyd Davis, Jr., O2016268, Company C, 255th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action on 3-4 January 1945 near Gros Rederching, France. Then serving as an enlisted scout in the 3d Platoon, which had been overwhelmed by a German attack, Lieutenant Davis killed several of the enemy, feigned death for several hours, then fought his way clear to return alone with valuable information of the hostile position.

IV. SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Silver Star awarded to Lieutenant Colonel Hal C. Granberry, as published in General Orders 14, United States Army Forces in the Far East, 25 February 1942, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action was awarded posthumously to him by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Hal C. Granberry, O15358, 57th Infantry, Philippine Scouts, United States Army, distinguished himself on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on or about 7 April 1942. When the flanks of his command had been overrun by superior enemy forces and capture or destruction appeared imminent, he displayed most courageous leadership and complete disregard for his own personal security in extricating his units from the difficulties in which they were involved. Colonel Granberry's actions were a great credit to himself and upheld the fine traditions of the military profession.

V. SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Silver Star awarded to Major William B. Dinneen, as published in General Orders 28, Philippine Coast Artillery Command, Fort Mills, Philippine Islands, 22 April 1942, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action was awarded to him by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major William B. Dinneen, O331150, Dental Corps, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 5-6 May 1942. Although a dental officer, he established a first aid station at Battery Way during an intense artillery and air bombardment and administered first aid to about 60 wounded men. Whenever casualties occurred in the heavily shelled gun pit, he, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, assisted in removing the wounded. Major Dinneen's gallant action and timely first aid saved the lives of a number of men who would have bled to death.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Lieutenant Colonel Harry J. Harper, O16209, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.
- Captain Roderick K. Hendry, O378032, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.
- Colonel Pastor Martelino, O12670, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.
- Captain Andrew D. Shoemaker, O366248, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.
- Major Max Weil, O286922, Infantry, Army of the United States. January to May 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

- Captain Joseph R. Barker, II, O21155, Cavalry, United States Army. 8 December 1941 to 9 April 1942.
- Lieutenant Colonel Hal C. Granberry, O15358, Infantry, United States Army. November 1941 to January 1942.
- Colonel John O. Hoskins, O4854, Field Artillery, United States Army. 9 to 21 January 1942.
- Lieutenant Colonel Ulysses J. L. Peoples, Jr., O15214, Ordnance Department, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.
- Major Thomas N. Powell, Jr., O362694 (then captain), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. 8 December 1941 to 6 May 1942.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers, warrant officer, and enlisted men:

- Colonel William N. Amis, O11748, Air Corps, United States Army. 8 December 1941 to 9 April 1942.
- Lieutenant Colonel Alfonso Arellano, O1340, Field Artillery, Philippine Army. December 1941 to April 1942.
- Lieutenant Colonel John H. Awtry, O914010, Judge Advocate General's Department, Army of the United States. January 1945 to January 1946.

- First Lieutenant Allan L. Baiardi, O1591789, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. November 1944 to December 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel John E. Baker, O497789, Army of the United States. October 1942 to September 1945.
- Colonel William Berl, Jr., O112559, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. October 1940 to September 1945.
- Colonel Harry F. Besosa, O157429, Infantry, Army of the United States. August 1942 to September 1945.
- Colonel William H. Boughton, O243886, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. October 1940 to September 1945.
- Brigadier General Charles F. Bowen, O388151, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. October 1940 to September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Karl S. Cate, O505978 (formerly major), General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. September to December 1944.
- Colonel Russell C. Charlton, O205558, Adjutant General's Department (National Guard of the United States), Army of the United States. October 1940 to January 1946.
- Colonel Richard P. Davidson, O289215, Specialist Reserve, Army of the United States. August 1940 to September 1945.
- Colonel Rudolph Leslie Esmay, O165227, Cavalry, Army of the United States. December 1940 to September 1945.
- Major Hugh M. Flick, O1000362, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. July 1943 to May 1946.
- Colonel George C. Fraser, O132572, Air Corps, Army of the United States. May to September 1945.
- Colonel Einar B. Gjelsteen, O15143, Field Artillery, United States Army. December 1943 to September 1944.
- Lieutenant Colonel Harold M. Hayes O537499, Infantry, Army of the United States. May 1944 to September 1945.
- Colonel Robinson Hitchcock, O309266, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. September 1940 to October 1945.
- Colonel William B. Hooton, O303148, Air Corps, Army of the United States. February 1943 to August 1945.
- Colonel Otto M. Jenk, O14798, Ordnance Department, United States Army. June 1942 to January 1946.
- Major Abraham Kaufman, O368370, Army of the United States. 15 October 1940 to 2 September 1945.
- Warrant Officer (junior grade) Theodore M. Knight (W2105733), Army of the United States. June 1944 to October 1945.

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, Second Air Force, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial.

[AG 250.4 (28 Jun 46)]

II. RECEPTION CENTER.—Effective 31 July 1946, the following-named reception centers, under the jurisdiction of the appropriate army commanders, are discontinued:

Fort Benning, Georgia.
Fort McPherson, Georgia.
Fort Snelling, Minnesota.

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 117th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 7 August 1944 in the vicinity of St. Barthelmy, France. The enemy launched the first of a series of determined attacks, an aggressive attempt to drive to the sea at Avranches and to split Allied forces in France. In the fog-enshrouded early morning hours, the hostile troops made their first effort with paralyzing rapidity and crushing, numerical superiority. Many of the company positions were overrun and the line of defense was established at the regimental command post. Enemy tanks got close to the command post and a company of hostile infantrymen infiltrated behind, threatening to encircle it. Displaying outstanding courage and a tenacity of purpose, all troops of this group, including administrative personnel, fought heroically and dispersed the infantrymen to the rear, while others destroyed the leading enemy tank with careful bazooka fire. Upon learning of the seriousness of the general situation, the troops voluntarily moved to the front lines where, for the day, they fought with the front line companies and eventually repulsed the enemy attack. The devotion to duty displayed by this stalwart group reflects great credit on each participant and is in keeping with the highest tradition of the military service. (General Orders 199, Headquarters 30th Infantry Division, 20 October 1945.)

2. The 1st Battalion, 117th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 2 October 1944 in Germany. On 2 October, the 1st Battalion led the assault by the 30th Infantry Division through the Siegfried Line. From positions in the vicinity of Scherpenseel, Germany, the troops heroically began the advance to the Wurm River, the last natural barrier prior to the assault on the prepared defenses. Enemy observation was excellent, and as the troops of the battalion crossed the flat, open ground west of the river, enemy artillery and mortar fire caused many casualties. Exhibiting outstanding gallantry, they continued the advance to the river's edge and effected a crossing under heavy fire by the use of improvised "duck boards."

As they charged up the hill on the far side, the pillboxes opened up with devastating cross-fire. Mortar and artillery fire had very little effect on these concrete and steel structures, but direct-fire weapons had widened the embrasures. Special assault groups crawled close to the pillboxes and burned the enemy out with flame throwers, while, in others, they were forced out by accurate rifle fire and the use of hand grenades. Slowly the strong points in the line were reduced and, by nightfall, the objective of the battalion had been secured. Though casualties suffered by the attackers were many, they exhibited unexcelled individual courage in accomplishing this difficult mission. The brilliant success achieved was made possible by a display of courage and gallantry which distinguished all participants. (General Orders 200, Headquarters 30th Infantry Division, 20 October 1945.)

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General James K. Crain, as published in WD General Orders 78, 1919, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General James K. Crain, O1915, United States Army, July 1942 to July 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Major General Crain, for services from 1 March 1944 to 8 May 1945, as published in General Orders 151, European Theater, 29 July 1945.)

II. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Private George F. Fowler (Army Serial No. 6245121); Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action on 19 March 1942 near Pilar, Province of Bataan. Upon observing artillery fire falling near the outpost of the 32d Infantry Regiment, Philippine Army, apparently directed by an enemy airplane, he caused a machine gun to be mounted in the open and, when the gun crew were driven to cover by enemy fire, he personally manned the gun and directed fire against the airplane, driving it toward the enemy lines. Private Fowler's brave action arrested enemy artillery fire on the outposts.

Captain Joseph R. Barker, II, O21155, Cavalry, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action at Binalonan, Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 24 December 1941. During a heavy enemy ground attack, supported by air and tanks, Captain Barker, commanding Troop B, 26th Cavalry (Philippine Scouts), without regard for his own safety and with utter disregard for enemy fire, personally placed the elements of his troop in a defensive position. Captain Barker's coolness under fire and conspicuously gallant action inspired and encouraged his troops to make a determined stand.

Captain Frank W. Bovee, O329357, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, rendered gallant services in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on or about 25 March 1942. During an air raid, he received information that a bomb had set fire to an ammunition dump, whereupon, with complete disregard for his personal safety, he immediately left the bomb shelter and went to the dump, picked up boxes of burning ammunition, and threw them over the cliff into the water below. Captain Bovee's conduct on this occasion was such as to reflect credit on himself and the military service.

Corporal Richard H. Daniels (Army serial No. 19054549), Battery H, 59th Coast Artillery, distinguished himself at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 24 April 1942. When Battery Crockett, an adjacent gun emplacement, was hit and set fire to by enemy artillery, Corporal Daniels courageously left his position of comparative safety, proceeded across a heavily shelled area to the burning emplacement, assisted in reducing the fire then raging, and aided in the removal of the wounded and dead. This courageous act prevented a serious explosion and probable large loss of life and is in keeping with the high traditions of the military service.

First Lieutenant Hugh A. Derrick, O413951, Company A, 71st Engineer Battalion, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 6 February 1942. On that date, he engaged in mopping up actions at Quinuan Point with one of his platoons and displayed courageous and gallant leadership in the face of enemy fire, which included a descent by rope over a steep cliff and the rescue of a wounded sergeant. Lieutenant Derrick's acts were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military profession.

Lieutenant Commander Alfred E. Grove, United States Navy, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy on 10 April 1942 in the city of Cebu, Cebu, Philippine Islands. Although under constant-hostile air and naval fire, Commander Grove assisted in and directed the destruction of enemy warehouses, loaded cargo ships in the harbor, and large stores of food and supplies.

Captain George Kappes, O21124, Battery F, 92d Coast Artillery, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, displayed outstanding gallantry and leadership in leading his battery in an infantry night action against attacking Japanese troops on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 5-6 May 1942.

Corporal Edward J. O'Toole (Army serial No. 6980185), 60th Coast Artillery, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 5-6 May 1942. Corporal O'Toole, with two other soldiers of the Regimental Communications Section, made numerous trips across areas covered by heavy artillery and sniper fire to maintain the communications lines of his regiment. With total disregard for personal safety, Corporal O'Toole voluntarily performed the vital repair work needed to establish communications with the elements of the regiment. Corporal O'Toole's conduct on this occasion was such as to reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Private John F. York (Army serial No. 12007067), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 24 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When Battery Crockett, an adjacent gun emplacement was hit by enemy artillery, he immediately left his position, proceeded across a heavily shelled area to the burning emplacement, assisted in reducing the raging fire, and aided in the removal of the wounded. By his prompt and courageous action, done without regard for his own safety, Private York aided in the prevention of a powder explosion which would have inflicted serious damage and heavy loss of life.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Major Louis B. Besbeck, O262526, Infantry, Army of the United States, as battalion executive officer, displayed gallantry in action on 17 January 1942 on Bataan, Philippine Islands. Inspecting front-line positions, without regard for his own safety, he assumed the initiative to readjust personnel and weapons, contributing materially to the hard-fought engagement on Quinauan Point. Major Besbeck's timely actions reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Major Roy W. Day, Jr., O347781 (then first lieutenant), Medical Corps, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action at Clark Field, Philippine Islands, on 8 December 1941. Seeing wounded men on the field, without hesitation or regard for his own safety, he ran to their assistance, administered immediate and timely first aid, and assisted in evacuating the wounded. Major Day's prompt and gallant actions contributed a great deal toward saving a number of lives.

First Lieutenant Leonard Goldsmith, O890514 (then second lieutenant), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry at Fort Mills, Philippine Islands, on 5-6 May 1942. When the power plant of a battery was destroyed by enemy fire, he courageously secured another and drove with it through a heavy enemy artillery concentration. On a subsequent occasion, he left the safety of his covered position to assist in the removal of the wounded. Lieutenant Goldsmith's heroic conduct reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Corporal Parke H. Klinow (Army serial No. 17010872), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 5 and 6 May 1942, acting as elevation setter on a coast-defense gun, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. He took command of the gun after an enemy salvo seriously wounded the commander and, although wounded himself, kept a heavy and effective fire directed against Japanese landing craft. As other men were wounded, Corporal Klinow personally took over many of the duties necessary to keep the gun firing and, by his determined leadership, stamina, and coolness, inspired and encouraged the gun crew during the heavy enemy barrage.

Sergeant Bernard F. Mancini (Army serial No. 13002499), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 24 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When Battery Crockett, an adjacent gun emplacement, was hit by enemy artillery, he immediately left his position, proceeded across a heavily shelled area to the burning emplacement, assisted in reducing the raging fire, and aided in the removal of the wounded. By his prompt and courageous action, done without regard for his own safety, Sergeant Mancini aided in the prevention of a powder explosion which would have inflicted serious damage and heavy loss of life.

Major Frederick J. Yeager, O22969, Infantry, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 7 and 8 April 1942, as commander of Company A, 57th Infantry, Philippine Scouts. During an ordered withdrawal, he saw a soldier severely wounded by a mortar fragment, who had been overlooked in the evacuation of casualties. Without regard for his own safety and under heavy enemy mortar and rifle fire, Major Yeager returned to the wounded soldier and carried him away from danger. Again, on 8 April, while under heavy enemy fire, Major Yeager lifted a soldier who had fainted and carried him along a jungle trail to a place of safety.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

General Sir Frederick A. Pile, British Army. December 1941 to September 1944.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Mérit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Pierre J. A. Ameilhaud, French Army. November 1942 to May 1945.

Colonel Maurice Bourges-Manoury, French Army. September 1943 to September 1944.

Brigadier Samuel Finlay Clark, British Army. As Chief Signal Officer, 2d Canadian Corps, throughout the entire campaign in northwest Europe.

Major General A. H. Gatehouse, British Army. November 1941 to April 1945.

Brigadier Joseph Guy Gauvreau, British Army. As Commander, 6th Canadian Infantry Brigade, throughout the campaign in northwest Europe.

Brigadier Horace Vivian Darrell Laing, British Army. As Deputy Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, 2d Canadian Corps, throughout the campaign in northwest Europe.

Lieutenant Colonel Edward O'Shaughnessy, British Army. December 1943 to August 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Alexandré A. Pinon, French Army. June to September 1945.

Colonel Edward C. Thorne, Royal Canadian Engineers. October 1943 to January 1946.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Neil E. Johnson-Ferguson, British Army. 17 March to 30 June 1945.

Colonel Lorne Cuthbert Montgomery, Canadian Army. August 1941 to January 1945.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Dean S. Ellerthorpe, as published in WD General Orders 15, 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July

Colonel Dean S. Ellerthorpe, O15296, General Staff Corps (Coast Artillery Corps), United States Army. July 1945 to May 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Jervis Langdon, Jr., as published in General Orders 115, United States Army Forces, China-Burma-India, 1 September 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Jervis Langdon, Jr., O909372, General Staff Corps (Air Corps) Army of the United States. November 1944 to October 1945.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United State during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

First Lieutenant Arthur L. Benison, O357067, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

First Lieutenant Albert F. Chase, O397761, Infantry, Army of the United States. 4 May 1942.

Major William J. Dunmyer, O20675, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

First Lieutenant Jack M. Laro, O396705, Infantry, Army of the United States. 3 May 1942.

Major Homer H. Uglow, O20708, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

First Lieutenant Allan B. Walker, O890149 (then master sergeant), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. 2 January 1942.

Private First Class Robert H. Wilson (Army serial No. 17062020), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 19 December 1944 near Schonbert, Belgium, performed heroic services. His company, in support of an attack against surrounding enemy forces, was caught by heavy enemy fire. Remaining at his position under a veritable hail of flying bullets and explosives, continuing to fire his weapon, he maintained strong support until he was killed when his machine gun received a direct hit. Private Wilson, acting without regard for his own safety, displayed a courageous devotion to duty which reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

VIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individual:

Captain John Alexander Cameron, British Army. July 1944 to July 1945.
 Lieutenant Colonel Townes M. Harris, O242497, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States, February and March 1945.

Lieutenant (junior grade) Shelby Thames, United States Navy Reserve.
 October 1944 to July 1945.

Brigadier General Harry H. Vaughan, O205101 (then lieutenant colonel),
 Army of the United States. March 1942 to May 1943.

Florence Wick, American Red Cross. March 1944 to May 1945.

Major Neville L. Grow, O287535, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Captain William D. Craven, O461015, Infantry, Army of the United States. 16 to 19 December 1944.

Private Melvin R. Altendorf (Army serial No. 16008565), Battery E, 60th Coast Artillery (AA), Army of the United States, performed heroic services on 6 May 1942, at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Under heavy enemy fire, he performed the duties of elevation setter on one of the guns of Battery Way and, after his own gun was shot out of action, he voluntarily assumed duty on another gun of the battery. Private Altendorf continued his duties until seriously wounded. His actions reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Captain Thomas H. Fortney, O340841, Army of the United States, on 8 April 1942, performed heroic services on Bataan, Philippine Islands. In charge of a detail of men endeavoring to get five searchlights to Mariveles Harbor for shipment to Corregidor, he suddenly received orders to destroy the searchlights and report back to his battery. Accomplishing this, he then led his men to Sisiman Cove and there, exposed to the fire of low flying enemy airplanes, swam into the bay, where he found a barge. Returning to the cove, Captain Fortney transported all the men safely through the dangerous mine fields to Corregidor.

Staff Sergeant Wallace L. Timmons (Army serial No. 16003844) (then corporal), Air Corps, Army of the United States, rendered heroic services at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 28 March 1942. When an exploding enemy bomb set fire to an antiaircraft ammunition dump, he, with utter disregard for his personal safety, immediately took steps to extinguish the fire. Corporal Timmons' prompt and courageous action prevented serious damage to the installation and probable injury to surrounding personnel.

United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Major Durgin J. Deland, O1289704 (then captain), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, rendered heroic services as a heavy weapons company commander near Auw, Belgium, during 16-19th December 1944. He provided outstanding support for his battalion, enabling them to repulse severe enemy attacks and inflict heavy casualties on the enemy with very accurate mortar and machine-gun fire. Captain Deland remained with his company, despite severe injuries, throughout this critical period. His conduct was an inspiration to his men and a credit to the armed forces.

Private First Class Fred A. Parra (Army serial No. 33339953), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 19 December 1944 near Shonberg, Belgium, displayed extraordinary heroism. His company, in support of an attack against surrounding enemy forces, was caught by heavy enemy fire. Acting under a veritable hail of flying bullets and explosives, he continued effective fire support against the foe and aided in the removal of a severely wounded man. Private Parra's courageous devotion to duty reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Presley L. Tucker (Army serial No. 34636115), Company E, 274th Infantry, Army of the United States, on 16 January 1945 near Phillipsburg, France, performed heroic services. Helping to man a defensive outpost of three men, standing against repeated attacks by an enemy force of platoon strength, he fired his bazooka with such skill that it was a deciding factor in the successful defense of the post. Private Tucker, by his courageous action in the face of superior enemy forces, contributed greatly to his company's defense of the entire area.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Matthew J. Gunner, O3257, United States Army. June 1945 to June 1946.

Colonel John R. Hardin, O12283, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. June 1944 to May 1945.

Brigadier General Norman E. Hendrickson, O174936 (then colonel), Army of the United States. September 1944 to October 1945.

Brigadier General William H. Hobson, O3399, United States Army. October 1943 to October 1945. (So much of sec. III, WD General Orders 20, 1946, as pertains to the award of the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General Hobson, for services from October 1943 to October 1945, is rescinded.)

Brigadier General Reuben C. Hood, Jr., O17884, United States Army. January 1945 to May 1946.

Colonel Charles B. Thornton, O395758, Air Corps, Army of the United States. March 1942 to December 1945.

II. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Emile Hainault, French civilian, displayed gallantry in action in connection with military operations against an armed enemy in enemy-occupied territory during May and June 1944. As assistance to the organizer of a resistance circuit, Mr. Hainault, despite constant enemy activity, directed and participated actively in numerous courageous and valuable operations resulting in the immobilization of enemy reinforcements in the area. In the course of one of these operations, Mr. Hainault was captured and imprisoned. Upon interrogation, he heroically maintained silence, refusing to compromise any member of the circuit, and was executed. His work contributed immeasurably to the subsequent success of the entire mission and his act of heroism was a source of great inspiration to his associates.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Quartermaster Sergeant John E. Haskin, United States Marine Corps, as a platoon leader in a rifle company, on 5 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, when his platoon was halted by hostile machine-gun and machine-rifle fire. He charged the enemy position and, with hand grenades, destroyed the machine gun and crew. Sergeant Haskin was wounded fatally in the lone attack. The heroic action of Sergeant Haskin permitted his platoon to continue its advance and is in keeping with highest traditions of the armed services.

Captain William F. O'Connor, O229034, Infantry, Army of the United States, on 11 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy on Cebu, Philippine Islands, during an enemy attack which had thrown the command post personnel into confusion. Coolly moving about the area under fire and without regard for his own safety, he set about organizing the personnel into defense positions and carried on his work at the command post until ordered to retire. The actions of Captain O'Connor on this occasion reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

First Sergeant Darrell S. Staley, United States Marine Corps, from 24 April to 6 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Charged with the defense of a portion of the north shore facing Bataan Peninsula, he held his positions under heavy, daily artillery and air bombardment. Despite their extremely adverse conditions, the men, under his leadership, maintained a strong defensive force and inflicted heavy casualties on the attacking enemy forces. Sergeant Staley's determination, fighting skill, and personal courage reflect great credit on himself and the armed services.

Major Gordon A. Utke, O374804, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy in Davao Province, Mindanao, Philippine Islands, from 15 April to 10 May 1942. With a small detachment of Philippine Army troops, he moved from Jawab, Davao, about 30 kilometers around the enemy's south flank to Madaum in the rear. His band destroyed a sugar mill and other industrial installations used by the enemy, eliminated a number of important highway bridges, and disrupted enemy communications and supply routes. Under Major Utke's leadership, this action halted the enemy's advance along the Davao Gulf coast and prevented hostile use of a number of industrial installations.

III. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Technical Sergeant John F. Parvenik (Army serial No. 6137939), Company H, 101st Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry during an attack on Burgalstroff, France, on 18 November 1944. He courageously led his platoon in close support of the attacking riflemen and, during subsequent efforts by the Germans to recapture the town, constantly exposed himself to bursting grenades and withering automatic fire to direct the efforts of his men in repulsing the enemy attacks. Sergeant Parvenik's heroic conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

Chief Warrant Officer Charles W. Audet (W901831), Army Mine Planter Service, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 24 and 25 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. He volunteered to act as navigation officer of a small, armed motor launch, which was being directed on an important and extremely hazardous reconnaissance mission. Although the launch set out in almost total darkness and twice fought much larger hostile craft, its mission was successful, due, in large part, to the cool, calm way in which Warrant Officer Audet, under heavy enemy fire, skilfully performed his duties.

Private Clifton Carpenter (Army serial No. 16017855), Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, acting as breech operator on gun-firing, tip-fused personnel projectiles, displayed gallantry in action on 5 May 1942, at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When an enemy salvo, striking his gun pit just prior to its firing, poured concrete fragments into the bore of the gun, he immediately volunteered to remove the sensitive-fused projectile and clean the bore. Without regard for his own safety and under heavy enemy fire, Private Carpenter worked until the projectile was removed, the bore cleaned, and the gun again ready for firing.

Staff Sergeant Frank A. Harangody (Army serial No. 6914159), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron serving on beach defense as infantry, on 7 February 1942, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy at Quinaun Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands. After 3 consecutive days of fighting that drove the enemy onto the beach, he volunteered with five other men to attack, from landing boats, enemy forces which had taken cover beneath the cliffs and in caves. Without regard for his own safety, Sergeant Harangody, with the five other men, raked the enemy positions and cave entrances with machine-gun fire, while fully exposed to enemy aircraft and small-arms fire from the beach.

Major John E. Olson, O22125 (then captain), Infantry, United States Army, on 19 January 1942, when the command post of the 57th Infantry was struck by enemy artillery fire, displayed gallantry in action at Abucay, Bataan, Philippine Islands. Without regard for his own safety, through the falling enemy shells, he quickly went to the emplacement and assisted in establishing order and removing the wounded. Major Olson's prompt and courageous action, under heavy enemy fire, enabled the command post to speedily resume its proper functions.

Private First Class Harry W. Hinebaugh (Army serial No. 33898029), Company A, 141st Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 15 March 1945 near Hagenau, France, displayed extraordinary heroism. Seeing two men injured by an enemy mine, he crawled, without regard for his own safety, into the line of fire and carried the first soldier back. Although enemy explosives fell about him, he returned immediately to the second man and, while helping him to shelter, was seriously wounded by a German shell. Private Hinebaugh's heroic conduct and willing self-sacrifice for his wounded comrades reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Frank E. Brokaw, OS115, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., O900293, Air Corps, Army of the United States. April 1942 to March 1944.

I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and chief warrant officers:

Chief Warrant Officer Harold D. Anamosa (W2126214), Army of the United States. March 1942 to December 1945.

Chief Warrant Officer Garrison P. Grover (W2115951), Army of the United States. November 1943 to November 1945.

Colonel Henry C. Harrison, Jr., O8427, General Staff Corps, United States Army. July 1945 to June 1946.

Colonel Roy C. Hilton, O5554, General Staff Corps (Infantry), United States Army. February to April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Harolde Turner Loftin, O279030, Corps of Military Police, Army of the United States. April 1943 to March 1946.

Colonel Noel F. Parrish, O19992, Air Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1946.

Colonel Hugh L. Prather, O17810, Medical Corps, United States Army. August 1942 to March 1946.

Colonel Joseph C. Showlin, O918011, Ordnance Department, Army of the United States. September 1942 to November 1945.

Major Gene B. Starkloff, O515010, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. October 1943 to May 1946.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Colonel Charles L. Steel, O4835, Infantry, United States Army. 28 February to 9 April 1942.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer:

Major Geoffrey M. T. Jones, O443912 (then captain), Field Artillery, Army of the United States. August to November 1944. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal (Oak-Leaf Cluster) to Major Jones, for services from 10 to 18 August 1944, as published in General Orders 83, Headquarters Mediterranean Theater of Operations, 16 May 1945.)

VI..LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major General F. G. L. Weijerman, Netherlands Army. November 1940 to July 1944.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Brigadier General Rex W. Beasley, as published in General Orders 27, Headquarters United States Army Forces, Pacific Ocean Area, 2 March 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. Major Robert D. Scholes, O274896, Infantry, Army of the United States. 7 April 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Kenneth B. Bloomfield, O405854, Infantry, Army of the United States, commanding a tank company, performed heroic services from December 1941 to April 1942 on Luzon, Philippine Islands. He skillfully directed his units in operations southwest of Guagua in Luzon and in the Anyasen area in Bataan. Through the forceful direction and inspiration of his personal leadership, Lieutenant Bloomfield contributed greatly to the accomplishments of tank units under his command.

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Captain Lloyd P. Matthews, O250188, Infantry, Army of the United States. November 1943 to July 1945.

Major James McMinn, O405255 (then captain), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. December 1944 to February 1945.

Major Ernest L. Brown, O382701, Infantry, Army of the United States. 10 February 1942.

Colonel Armand Hopkins, O16083, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. 20 April 1942.

Captain Cecil LeBrun, O343741, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. 11 to 13 April 1942.

Sergeant Edward M. McCormick, United States Marine Corps. 2 May 1942.

Major Elmer E. Gray, O918893, Ordnance Department, Army of the United States. December 1944 to April 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Kenneth E. Resh, O354547, Transportation Corps, Army of the United States. May to November 1944.

Private Frank C. Bozric (Army serial No. 15017290), Battery E, 60th Coast Artillery (AA), Coast Artillery, Army of the United States, on 5 and 6 May 1942, performed heroic services at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy artillery and air bombardment, acting as elevation setter on one of the guns of Battery Way, he coolly performed his duty until wounded, then, after only cursory first-aid treatment, returned voluntarily to his important task. Private Bozric's resourcefulness and courageous devotion to duty reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Charles L. Eckstein, United States Marine Corps, on 5 May 1942, performed heroic services at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. He voluntarily left his position of comparative safety to assist in the rescue of wounded personnel trapped in an antiaircraft-gun position. Under intense enemy artillery fire, and without regard for his own safety, he successfully carried the wounded men back to a more secure location. Sergeant Eckstein's courageous action and devotion to his comrades reflect great credit on himself and the armed services.

Private First Class James L. Meagher (Army serial No. 33563179), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 19 December 1944, near Schonberg, Belgium, displayed extraordinary heroism. His company, in support of an attack against surrounding enemy forces, was caught by heavy enemy fire. Moving about under the veritable hail of flying bullets and explosives, he carried ammunition over the bare hillside to the gun crews. Private Meagher's courageous devotion to duty reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

XI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—So much of General Orders 71, Headquarters Communications Zone, European Theater, 8 May 1945, as pertains to Colonel John R. Hardin, Corps of Engineers, is rescinded.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel A. Robert Ginsburgh, O9747, General Staff Corps (Field Artillery), United States Army. October 1943 through May 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit (Oak-Leaf Cluster) to Colonel Ginsburgh, for services from 23 November 1943 to 1 December 1944, as published in General Orders 77, United States Army Forces, Far East, 13 April 1945, and the Bronze Star Medal, for services from 26 September to 20 October 1944, as published in General Orders 12, USASOS, 24 January 1945.)

II. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Charles I. Humber, Jr., O18584, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Brigadier General Alden R. Crawford, O18219, United States Army. January 1941 to August 1944.

IV. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Technician Fifth Grade Michael J. Halpin (Army serial No. 36627885), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 8 May 1945, without regard for his own safety, volunteered at Munich, Germany, to rescue civilians from a dangerous zone, where exploding ammunition had caused nearby tank cars to burst and pour blazing gasoline over the yards. He made repeated trips into the flaming area to rescue the dazed and wounded people. Technician Holpin's action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

V. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Second Lieutenant James H. Hart, O422617, Infantry, Army of the United States. 26 December 1941.

First Lieutenant Chester H. Tucker, O361870, Air Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

VI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Rodney S. Young, American civilian. May 1943 to October 1944.

Chaplain (major) Herman C. Baumann, O354828, Corps of Chaplains, Army of the United States. December 1941 to August 1944.

Major Daniel G. Amend, O343265, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. December 1944 to May 1945.

Captain Julius E. Feorene, O1647424, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. February to May 1945.

Major Raymond D. Hill, O22645, Infantry, United States Army. 18 September to 10 October 1944.

Lieutenant Colonel Gustave W. Oberlin, O105831, Infantry, Army of the United States, as commanding officer, 1st Battalion, 172d Infantry Regiment, displayed outstanding courage in the Lunga River delta area, Guadalcanal, on 18 April 1943. When the ammunition dump of one of his companies became ignited because of enemy action and endangered the lives of his men, he made his way, despite the explosions, to a position from which he could ascertain that they were safe, and then only did he make his way to the relative safety of a nearby creek. Colonel Oberlin's conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

Private Edward E. Chovan (Army serial No. 15017269), Battery E, 60th Coast Artillery (AA), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 5 and 6 May 1942, performed heroic services on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Acting as azimuth setter on one of the guns of Battery Way, he voluntarily took over additional duties to continue operation of the gun and, under heavy enemy fire, without regard for his own safety, continued his work until wounded by an enemy artillery projectile. Private Chovan's courageous devotion to duty reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

First Sergeant James E. Davis (Army serial No. 7008329), Headquarters Company, 422d Infantry Regiment, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy on 19 December 1944 near Halenfeld, Germany. He voluntarily joined a quickly organized motorized patrol which was to precede a motor column. Encountering heavy enemy artillery and small-arms fire and overwhelming forces of infantry, he proceeded, without regard for his own safety, to determine fully the extent of the hostile strength. By his personal courage and perseverance, Sergeant Davis did much to expose an enemy ambush before it could attack the column behind his patrol.

Technician Fourth Grade Fred W. Kadereit, Jr. (Army serial No. 37257644), Infantry, Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, performed heroic services on 18 February 1945 near Kerbach, France. Without regard for his own safety, exposed to enemy small-arms and artillery fire, he crawled 50 yards over open terrain to administer first aid to a wounded soldier. Though pinned down twice by the concentrated enemy fire, Technician Kadereit proceeded with the treatment and then successfully evacuated the patient from danger.

Technical Sergeant Alvan J. Scott (Army serial No. 32942333), Company H, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 22 February 1945, in Europe, displayed heroic determination. Through heavy enemy fire, he moved between the supply dump and the forward gun positions to carry up a vital supply of ammunition. Through Sergeant Scott's courageous devotion to duty, adequate artillery support was provided for the advancing rifemen.

VII. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Staff Sergeant Edgar A. Scheffer (Army serial No. 17055175), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 22 February 1944.

VIII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 2d Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82 Airborne Division, is cited for outstanding performance of duty and extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy on 19 and 20 September 1944 at Nijmegen, Holland. This battalion was given the mission of capturing the city of Nijmegen and the southern approaches of the vital Waal River bridges in that city. The enemy had strong, defensive positions in the park area and the approaches south of the highway bridge and had resisted all efforts during 3 days to eliminate their forces. With British tanks in support, the 2d Battalion moved to the attack at 1445 hours, on 19 September, along the main road to the city in the face of artillery and small-arms fire. In the city, the companies fanned out to their separate missions. The principal effort was directed against the approaches to the highway bridge. The lead tank was knocked out by direct fire. The troops fought their way through the town and flanked the bridge-plaza, while Company E commenced a frontal assault. By 1900 hours, all elements were in close contact with the enemy. Patrols from both sides were very active and snipers commanded all streets. Paratroopers rushed the fox holes and trenches and knifed or bayoneted the occupants. Fighting continued though the night. Both sides were using all available artillery. Burning buildings surrounding the bridge-park area revealed every attempt to penetrate the enemy defenses. By dawn, the situation was a stalemate with the enemy still determined to fight. At 0530 on 20 September, the battalion commenced a direct assault from all sides. Fighting with every available weapon, the troopers closed with the enemy. Many Germans chose to die in their fox holes rather than surrender and continued fighting even when their situation seemed hopeless. The battle was not won until 1800 hours, and all organized resistance was eliminated south of the bridge by 1915 hours. British tanks were enabled to cross to the north shore. In this engagement, the battalion suffered 82 casualties, but killed 115 of the enemy, captured 91, and wounded hundreds. The superb achievement of the 2d Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82d Airborne Division, in the battle of Nijmegen, was characterized by high courage, dogged determination, and superior tenacity, and reflects the highest traditions of the United States armed forces.

2. The 3d Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82d Airborne Division, is cited for outstanding performance of duty and extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy on 20 September 1944 near Nijmegen, Holland. Having jumped by parachute on 17 September 1944 and taken all objectives, this battalion was given the mission of spearheading a daylight crossing of the Waal River and attempting the capture intact of the vital railroad and highway bridges at Nijmegen. At 1500 hours on 20 September, members of this battalion launched 26 small canvas assault boats near the junction of the Maas-Waal Canal. When the boats were halfway across the river, they were met by heavy automatic fire from the opposite bank. Artillery fire, including aerial bursts, exploded among the boats and on the assembly area on the south bank. Only 11 of the boats returned for succeeding waves, while the troops of the first wave floundered ashore and charged up the banks in the face of intense grazing fire. They bayoneted the enemy in their fox holes and trenches and knocked out machine guns and flak towers in close combat with small arms, knives, and grenades, thereby permitting the successful crossing of the succeeding waves. After this gallant assault, the battalion swung in a wide arc to the northeast against strong opposition and completely contained the defending enemy forces at the northern approaches to the bridge. By 1840 hours, the railroad bridge was taken, and 2 hours later, all enemy resistance in the bridgehead was eliminated and the highway bridge was captured before it could be destroyed. The armor of the British Second Army was thus enabled to cross the Waal River and continue to the relief of the British airborne at Arnhem. In this magnificent accomplishment, the men of the 3d Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82d Airborne Division, conducted themselves with heroism, gallantry, and daring in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States armed forces.

3. The 47th Infantry Regiment with the following attached units:

Company B, 9th Medical Battalion;

Company B, 15th Engineer Battalion;

Company A, 746th Tank Battalion;

Company C, 899th Tank Destroyer Battalion.

These units distinguished themselves by extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in gallantly holding and extending the important Remagen bridgehead over the Rhine River in Germany from 8 to 19 March 1945. The 47th Infantry Regiment, and attached units, were ordered on 7 March 1945 to cross the Ludendorf Bridge over the Rhine, which had been seized intact by elements of the 9th Armored Division. The 2d Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, arrived at Remagen early on 8 March and immediately crossed the river. Committed to action at once, it passed through Orsberg and attacked toward Bruchhausen, where all resistance was overcome. The remainder of the regiment moved swiftly across the river during the day. The 1st Battalion seized Scheuren and the 3d Battalion took Ohlenberg, where some of the stiffest resistance in the bridgehead was developed by tanks, self-propelled guns, and well-organized enemy infantry. All battalions were immediately counterattacked, but these savage thrusts by the enemy were smashed after bitter fighting. Committed in the center of the bridgehead, the 47th Infantry Regiment was the first complete infantry regiment to cross the Rhine. It was to maintain its foothold and attack to the east, northeast, and southeast to deepen the vital bridgehead and protect the extremely important Ludendorf crossing. The infuriated enemy, who by this time had recovered from the initial surprise of the crossing, reacted savagely to the thrust of Germany. On 9 March, the regiment continued the attack eastward against the violent resistance of a determined enemy, amply supported by artillery, tanks, and self-propelled guns. Each gain was subject to numerous counterattacks. Integrated enemy units, including the 11th Panzer Division, were thrown at the bridgehead, and they concentrated much of their power in the center against the 47th Infantry Regiment. Although constant enemy counterattacks made rest impossible, the regiment slowly but surely cut its way forward over the hilly, wooded terrain. Infantrymen destroyed tanks, captured guns, overran anti-aircraft guns, and by 16 March, had forced the enemy out of Notscheid, after bloody house-to-house fighting. Allowing the Germans no time for rest, the regiment continued attacking and took Vetteschoss, building by building, and pressed courageously forward against ever increasing resistance to seize Hohnet. Finally, the autobahn was reached and the initial bridgehead line attained. As the keystone in the arch of the Remagen bridgehead, this gallant force had advanced 12,000 yards in 12 days against great odds. It had pitted its strength, its fortitude, and its bitterly earned combat experience against a desperate, aggressive, and, at times, a numerically superior enemy, and, by cool courage, driving force, and utter disregard for personal safety, had sustained and expanded the Remagen bridgehead on the east side of the Rhine River. The determination and indomitable spirit of the courageous officers and men of the 47th Infantry Regiment, with attached units, exemplify the finest traditions of the military service.

IX. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section III, WD General Orders 48, 1946, as pertains to Colonel John E. Banister, Quartermaster Corps, as reads "Colonel John E. Banister" is amended to read "Colonel John R. Banister."

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named enlisted man:

Technical Sergeant Beauford T. Anderson (Army serial No. 36272960) (then Staff Sergeant), Company A, 381st Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 13 April 1945, at Okinawa, displayed conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty. When a powerfully conducted pre-dawn Japanese counterattack struck his unit's flank, he ordered his men to take cover in an old tomb and then, armed only with a carbine, faced the onslaught alone. After emptying one magazine at point-blank range into the screaming attackers, he seized an enemy mortar dud and threw it back among the charging Japs, killing several as it burst. Securing a box of mortar shells, he extracted the safety pins, banged the bases upon a rock to arm them, and proceeded alternately to hurl shells and fire his piece among the fanatical foe, finally forcing them to withdraw. Despite the protests of his comrades and bleeding profusely from a severe shrapnel wound, he made his way to his company commander to report the action. Sergeant Anderson's intrepid conduct in the face of overwhelming odds accounted for 25 enemy killed and several machine guns and knee mortars destroyed, thus single-handedly removing a serious threat to the company's flank.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Daniel Noce, as published in WD General Orders 4, 1943, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Daniel Noce, O5226, United States Army. 10 May 1945 to 10 June 1946.

III. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer and individual:

Alewis Sommaripa, American civilian in the employ of the Office of Strategic Services, contributed gallantly to the success of American arms on 28 March 1945 during an attack on Gobelrod, Germany. He fearlessly took an unescorted light tank down the village's main street, calling over a loud-speaker system for the enemy to surrender. In 20 minutes, Mr. Sommaripa persuaded 1,000

Germans to lay down their arms, formed them into a column, and marched them off to the American lines.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Floyd A. Mitchell, O15535, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, displayed outstanding gallantry on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 15 and 25 April 1942. During extremely heavy enemy artillery fire, he assisted courageously in repairing the regimental telephone lines. On an occasion when two Filipino scouts lay wounded in an area under heavy artillery concentrations, Colonel Mitchell heroically made his way to where they lay and assisted them to safety. His conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

IV. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Corporal Angelo Borruano (Army serial No. 17014499) (then private), Battery H, 59th Coast Artillery, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 24 April 1942. When an adjacent gun emplacement was hit and set afire by enemy artillery, he courageously left the relative safety of his position, crossed an area under fire to the burning emplacement, and assisted in reducing the fire and the removal of the wounded. Corporal Borruano's promptness contributed materially toward preventing a serious explosion and further loss of life.

Private First Class Robert T. Bowers (Army serial No. 14040516), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 1 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Under heavy enemy shellfire, refusing to seek cover, he proceeded voluntarily to repair vital communication lines. By his efforts to make possible the continuance of defensive fire, Private Bowers displayed a courageous devotion to duty that reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Captain Frank William Ferguson, O6964 (then second lieutenant), United States Marine Corps, as platoon leader, Company O, Fourth Tactical Battalion, Fourth Marines, displayed outstanding gallantry at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 5-6 January 1942. Though wounded, he continued to lead his platoon in an attack against Japanese forces and, when his company commander was seriously wounded, assumed command of the company and directed its subsequent actions, despite further wounds. Captain Ferguson's conduct reflects great credit on himself and the United States Marine Corps.

Sergeant Martin W. Keane (Army serial No. 6707481) (then corporal), Battery H, 59th Coast Artillery, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 24 April 1942. When an adjacent gun emplacement was hit and set afire by enemy artillery, he courageously left the relative safety of his position, crossed an area under fire to the burning emplacement, and assisted in reducing the fire and the removal of the wounded. Corporal Keane's promptness contributed materially toward preventing a serious explosion and further loss of life.

Technical Sergeant John A. Shoaf (Army serial No. 6397667) (then staff sergeant), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on March 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy artillery bombardment, he saw a water barge break loose and begin drifting out to sea. Despite the falling enemy shells, and without regard for his own safety, Sergeant Shoaf organized and led a rescue party that returned the barge to its mooring, thereby saving a vital supply of fresh water for the garrison.

Corporal Alvin E. Stewart (Army serial No. 13037872), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, on 5 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Cut off from his organization by enemy action, he worked his way through the Japanese lines to a Marine company engaged in a counterattack. Volunteering, he made a daring assault on a hostile machine-gun position, then seeing a man wounded, went to the soldier through heavy enemy fire, bandaged him, and returned the man to safety. Corporal Stewart's heroic determination and personal courage reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Corporal Delbert H. Sutton (Army serial No. 18050403) (then private), Corps of Military Police, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 23 April 1942. Corporal Sutton and two other soldiers voluntarily left the safety of Malinta Tunnel and traversed 800 yards of shell-swept ground to rescue a seriously wounded comrade. Despite the intense enemy artillery fire, Corporal Sutton and his comrades were successful in the rescue. Corporal Sutton's conduct on this occasion reflects great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

First Lieutenant Emil M. Ulanowicz, O396758, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 25 March 1942. Upon receiving information during an air raid that a bomb had set fire to an ammunition dump, he immediately left the shelter of a bombproof tunnel and proceeded to the dump, picked up boxes of burning ammunition, and threw them over the cliff into the water below. Lieutenant Ulanowicz's coolness and complete disregard for personal safety on this occasion were an inspiring example to his men.

Captain Hugh G. Wandel, O384890, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 2 May 1942. He was on duty at the command post of Battery C, 91st Coast Artillery, when a heavy concentration of enemy artillery fire came down on the position, destroying the building in which the command was located and driving the crews from their guns. Despite wounds and continued shelling, Captain Wandel assisted in collecting the scattered gun crews, reestablished the command post, and got the battery back into action. Captain Wandel's coolness and courage in this action were an inspiration to his men and in keeping with the highest military traditions.

Sergeant Charles J. Wing (Army serial No. 19051161) (then corporal), Corps of Military Police, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 23 April 1942. Sergeant Wing and two other soldiers voluntarily left the safety of Malinta Tunnel and traversed 800 yards of shell-swept ground to rescue a seriously wounded comrade. Despite the intense enemy artillery fire, Sergeant Wing and his comrades were successful in the rescue. Sergeant Wing's conduct on this occasion reflects great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer :

Captain Edward E. McBride, Jr., O396114, Company B, 119th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 9 October 1944, at North Bardenberg, Germany, displayed heroism in action against the enemy. Through heavy hostile fire, without regard for his own safety, he ran across open terrain and climbed up on a moving tank to direct the gunner of the vehicle. He remained on the tank, continuing to direct its fire, until leaping down, he led his men in a final assault, which routed the enemy from their positions. Captain McBride, through his courage and exceptional loyalty to his men, undoubtedly saved many lives and was responsible for the rapid completion of the company's mission.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer :

Brigadier General Robert A. McClure, O6785, United States Army. February to September 1942.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers :

General Rene C. de Boysson, French Army. October 1944 to June 1945.

Brigadier General Jean Charles Louis Regnault, French Army. November 1944 to December 1945.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Brigadier General George D. Shea, as published in General Orders 12. Headquarters European Theater of Operations, 6 February 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows :

Brigadier General George D. Shea, O5465, United States Army. June 1945 to April 1946.

VIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer and enlisted man :

Staff Sergeant LeRoy F. Perry (Army serial No. 37619237), Infantry, Army of the United States. 24 February 1945.

First Lieutenant Whitmel H. Webb, O1116142, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. December 1944 through February 1945.

Staff Sergeant Kenneth W. Mize, United States Marine Corps, on 2 May 1942, performed heroic services on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When the powder magazine at Battery Geary, a nearby gun emplacement was hit by enemy artillery, he left his position immediately, proceeded across a heavily shelled area to the burning emplacement, assisted in reducing the raging fire, and aided in removal of the wounded. Sergeant Mize's prompt and courageous action, done without regard for his own safety, reflects great credit on himself and the armed services.

Private First Class Joseph D. Burns, (Army serial No. 31447826), Battery B, 17th Field Artillery Observation Battalion, Infantry, Army of the United States, on 9 April 1945, displayed heroism in action against the enemy. Under constant machine-gun and sniper fire, he proceeded voluntarily to an exposed position, where he directed accurate mortar fire on the enemy. Through his prompt action in support of the attack, done without regard for his own safety, Private Burns enabled his unit to advance and capture an important road block.

Private First Class Robert Zinner (Army serial No. 32178724), Company A, 135th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed marked heroism near Fondouk in North Africa on 19 April 1943 when, despite his own wounds and great danger from enemy artillery fire, he administered first aid on the battlefield to his stricken platoon commander. Although hit in the arm and leg, Private Zinner gamely used his one good arm to treat the officer and continued his courageous efforts, even after being struck again by a shell fragment and seriously injured.

IX. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 306th Infantry Regiment, and the following-attached units:

Cannon Company, 306th Infantry Regiment;

Third Platoon, Antitank Company, 306th Infantry Regiment;

Company D, 706th Tank Battalion;

1st and 3d Platoons, Company B, 302d Engineer Combat Battalion.

On 20 April, the 1st Battalion, reinforced, assaulted the north eastern slopes of Iegusugu Yama, a rocky peak which dominated the entire island of Ie Shima. This mountain had been selected by the enemy forces as their final defensive position and was well organized. Deep caves and tunnels honeycombed the entire peak and afforded protection for the defenders. The approaches to the position, covered by mutually supporting machine guns firing from concrete pill-boxes and from converted stone tombs were heavily mined and contained barbed wire obstacles and antitank guns. At 0915 on 20 April, the 1st Battalion, reinforced, crossed a line of departure 800 yards from the base of the peak and attacked this formidable defensive position. The enemy reaction was immediate and severe, and the zone of advance of the battalion was swept with small-arms and mortar fire. Across the almost coverless terrain, men worked their way forward on their bellies, crawling through mine fields and wire entanglements. Under the cover of point-blank fire from Company D, 706th Tank Battalion, and the Cannon Company, the foot troops, assisted by the engineers, methodically reduced each enemy strong point as they reached it. Concrete pillboxes and stone tombs succumbed to flame throwers and satchel charges only after bitter close-in fighting. By 1300, the attack had made considerable progress, but was still a hundred yards short of the base of the peak itself. A coordinated assault was ordered for 1430, with the reserve company passing through the right assault company to make the main effort. The attack jumped off on schedule after a 10-minute artillery preparation. Led by the fresh company, the entire battalion rushed across the last hundred yards to the mountain and stormed the hostile stronghold with a spirit which would not be denied. The enemy resisted fanatically from dugouts, caves, and concrete emplacements and the fighting raged at point-blank range until dark. Throughout the night, sporadic fighting occurred at close range, as the desperate enemy endeavored to dislodge the battalion. In addition to small-arms, grenades, and mortar fire, the Japanese employed suicide tactics. Enemy soldiers and civilians with satchel charges strapped to their bodies rushed the battalion's position and blew themselves up. After daylight, the battalion resumed the attack and by noon had completely captured its objective, the entire northern half of the mountain. The success of the attack of the 1st Battalion, reinforced, paved the way for the complete reduction of Iegusugu Yama and the capture of the entire island. In its 24-hour battle the battalion lost 73 casualties. Enemy casualties for the period were 450 counted dead and many others sealed in caves and tunnels. In this successful assault, the men of the 1st Battalion, and its attachments, displayed gallantry, resourcefulness, courage, and determination of the highest order in overcoming a strongly emplaced and fanatically stubborn enemy. Their actions are in keeping with the finest traditions of the United States Army. (General Orders 73, Headquarters 77th Infantry Division, 2 March 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, Middle Pacific.)

2. The 3d Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 17, 18, and 19 December 1944. On these dates, the men and officers of the 3d Battalion successfully repelled a vicious enemy panzer attack which had successfully penetrated adjacent units, thus exposing the right flank of the 38th Infantry Regiment. The 3d Battalion was ordered to a defensive position south and east of Krinkelt, Belgium. Moving from attack position in the Siegfried Line, the battalion moved approximately 6 miles on foot to meet the panzer threat. The battalion hurriedly set up and outposted the area later to be occupied by the 3d Battalion and the battalion on its left. Darkness was approaching and before a final consolidated position could be established, the enemy pushed a vigorous tank-infantry attack into the left of the battalion. Only through outstanding courage, skill, and fearless initiative, demonstrated by all members of the 3d Battalion, both individually and as a closely knit combat team, was the unit able to repulse the attack. Artillery, machine-gun, rifle, and bazooka fire deterred the enemy attack which was resumed the following day. Despite infiltrating enemy infantrymen's fire, the confusion that ensued, and lack of communications, the 3d Battalion successfully disengaged the enemy armor and infantry and covered the withdrawal of the entire regiment. In the 3 tumultuous days of fighting, the 3d Battalion suffered 111 casualties. Enemy casualties included 105 killed, an unknown number wounded, known to be heavy, 14 prisoners taken, 4 tanks destroyed by infantry, and 8 destroyed by artillery. The crews of the enemy tanks were annihilated as they emerged from the disabled armor in an attempt to assume firing positions. The courage, devotion to duty, and tenacity of each and every officer and enlisted man of the 3d Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, reflect the highest credit on the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 29, Headquarters 2d Infantry Division, 24 May 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, 2d Infantry Division.)

I. SCHOOL FOR GOVERNMENT OF OCCUPIED AREAS.—Effective as of 11 June 1946, the School of Military Government, Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, a class II activity under the jurisdiction of the Provost Marshal General, is redesignated the School for Government of Occupied Areas.

II. MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.—Effective 30 June 1946, the Fort Crook Ordnance Depot, Fort Crook, Nebraska, is discontinued as a military establishment.

[AG 680.1 (21 Jun 46)]

III. MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.—Effective as of 16 May 1946, the Gopher Ordnance Works, St. Paul, Minnesota, is discontinued as a military establishment.

[AG 680.1 (23 May 46)]

IV. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Companies B, C, and D, 307th Airborne Engineer Battalion, 82d Airborne Division, are cited for outstanding performance of duty and conspicuous gallantry in action against the enemy in Holland from 19 to 21 September 1944. Landing by parachute on 17 September, these companies showed exceptional versatility in the performance of both engineer and infantry missions. Their personnel fought as security troops, set road blocks on widely dispersed roads and railroads in the vast division area, and sent numerous combat patrols on reconnaissance into enemy-held territory. They removed demolitions from five bridges which had been captured intact. In the vitally important crossing of the Waal River on 20 September, Company C ferried two battalions of infantry to the north bank under heavy enemy fire. Fifteen of the 26 boats utilized were sunk in the first wave. As the boats were sunk, the engineers joined the infantry assault waves and participated in the hand-to-hand conflict to win the northern approaches of the highway bridge. At 1445 hours on 19 September, Company B, supporting an infantry battalion, commenced fighting in the assault on the city Nijmegen from the south and performed outstandingly in that 20-hour struggle. Meanwhile, Company D fought as infantry in the thinly stretched perimeter defense. In this battle for Nijmegen, Companies B and C sustained 43 casualties out of approximately 175 effectives. Superb courage, tireless endurance, and stubborn determination characterized the performances of these engineer paratroopers. The individual and collective heroism displayed by the officers and men of Companies B, C, and D, 307th Airborne Engineer Battalion, 82d Airborne Division, reflects high credit on the United States armed forces.

2. The 1st Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82d Airborne Division, is cited for outstanding performance of duty and extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy on 20 September 1944 near Nijmegen, Holland. Having landed by parachute on 17 September and taken all assigned objectives, the 1st Battalion, in conjunction with the 3d Battalion, was given the mission of making a daylight crossing of the Waal River, with the object of capturing intact the two important bridges at Nijmegen. Every available German unit had been massed north of the bridges in expectation of such an assault and the structures were prepared for demolition. In the face of heavy German fire, the battalion started crossing the river in canvas assault boats at 1600 hours. By 1840 hours, it had fought its way to the north end of the railroad bridge and eliminated all enemy opposition in that sector. After the battle, 267 enemy dead were found in this area. The 1st Battalion continued the attack to the east and captured Fort Lent, after a vicious 2-hour fight characterized by a frontal assault against fixed fortifications. The troopers attacked in the face of direct enemy fire, swarmed over the barriers, and eliminated the defenders with guns, knives, bayonets, and grenades. As a direct result of this action, all enemy forces were driven from the northern approaches of the vital Nijmegen highway bridge before its destruction could be effected and British armor was enabled to cross the river on its way to Arnhem. In this brilliantly executed mission, officers and enlisted men of the 1st Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82d Airborne Division, conducted themselves with heroism, gallantry, and daring. Their achievements were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army.

Colonel Robert M. Love, O357894, Air Corps, Army of the United States. September 1944 to October 1945.

VIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers, warrant officer, and individual:

Captain Clyde E. Ely, Jr., O331480, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. 14 December 1944.

Captain Vernald G. McIlhattan, O362731, Infantry, Army of the United States. 9 to 12 January 1945.

Alexis Sommaripa, American civilian. February to March 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel William S. Van Nostrand, O19522, Cavalry, United States Army. 9 January 1945.

Private First Class Charles W. Boyle (Army serial No. 19057065), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. 6 January to 6 May 1942.

Major Peter Koster, O890404, Judge Advocate General's Department, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

First Lieutenant Edward L. Krummel, O273130, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. 9 January to 9 April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Albert D. Miller, O15670, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

First Lieutenant Thomas B. Shone, O363513, Infantry, Army of the United States. 26 to 31 January 1942.

First Lieutenant John D. Stukenburg, O389605, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. 1 to 6 May 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Alf E. Uddenberg, O205708, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Captain John Z. Wheeler, O346792, Cavalry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Captain John H. Newsom, O890281, Infantry, Army of the United States. 9 to 12 January 1945.

Captain Alfred H. Samuelsen, O1542253, Medical Administrative Corps, Army of the United States. April 1944 to July 1945.

Ensign Lawrence N. Stevens, United States Naval Reserve. November 1944 to May 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Hiram M. Stout, O359662, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1943 to November 1945.

First Lieutenant Edwin W. Tucker, O355037, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. March 1944 to August 1945.

Captain Faustino F. Turla, Philippine Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

Major Napoleon D. Valeriano, Philippine Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

Major Salvador Villa, Philippine Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Major John B. Bennett, O229717, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Houston S. Farris, O309320, Cavalry, Army of the United States. 29 January to 9 April 1942.

Captain John McM. Gulick, O20669, Coast Artillery, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

First Sergeant Lyle W. Stevens, (Army serial No. 6826019), Medical Detachment, Army of the United States. 8 and 9 April 1942.

First Lieutenant Dalcourte W. Thompson, O890124, (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States. 15 March to 9 April 1942.

- Captain Olemens B. Ekstrom, O116505, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. February to July 1945.
- Private First Class Robert F. Weber (Army serial No. 35553321), Infantry, Army of the United States. 24 March 1945.
- Private First Class Richard P. Zantis (Army serial No. 36719090), Infantry, Army of the United States. 5 March 1945.

First Lieutenant John O. Johnstone, O1103241, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, demonstrated heroism while preparing and directing the unloading of explosive-laden amphibious DUKWS, on 15 August 1944, near Cavalaire Beach, France. Despite a shattering explosion, which rocked and later caused the sinking of the landing craft on which Lieutenant Johnstone and his platoon were being transported, he completed the unloading operation and then led his men through a hail of fire to the beach where they took their objective.

Captain Harold E. Costigan, O366150, Infantry, Army of the United States, as a tank platoon leader, performed heroic services on 26 December 1941 at Carmen, Luzon, Philippine Islands. Under his determined leadership, his platoon fought its way successfully through a strongly defended road block and by its aggressive action, delayed materially a strong enemy flanking movement. Through his initiative and personal courage, Captain Costigan contributed greatly to the outstanding accomplishments of his platoon.

Colonel Thomas M. Tarpley, Jr., O17325 (then lieutenant colonel), Adjutant General's Department, United States Army, on 23 April 1942, performed heroic services in Bataan, Philippine Islands. During the march of American prisoners from Bataan, two officers were overcome from heat and exhaustion and fell from the column. He went to their aid and, despite violent threats against his life, steadfastly refused to leave the men until he obtained a small native vehicle, by which they were carried safely to San Fernando. Colonel Tarpley's courageous action, in the face of possible enemy reprisals, reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Benes Torres (Army serial No. 38011205), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 15 March 1942, displayed heroism at Cabcan Air Field, Luzon, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy bombing and strafing attack in which a bomb demolished a shelter entrance, he, with one other man, cleared the entrance and revived six Filipinos by artificial respiration. Sergeant Torres's prompt action, performed without regard for his own safety, reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Richard Dismuke (Army serial No. 37641057), Company E, 385th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding heroism near Irrel, Germany, on 17 February 1945. During an attack against a strongly defended enemy pillbox and when only one of his platoon's automatic rifles would fire, he courageously traversed 400 yards of fire-swept terrain for a new supply of ammunition and, though wounded on the third return trip, bravely crawled the remaining distance to insure delivery. Private Dismuke's heroic conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Robert A. Eben (Army serial No. 33731514), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 5 February 1945, near Stiring Wendel, France, under heavy enemy fire, rushed to the aid of a soldier whom he saw fall direct before his position. He carried the soldier, who was get-away man for a patrol caught in a heavy concentration of mortar fire, back to the command post and revived him. Sergeant Eben's prompt and courageous action enabled the man to deliver information which led to the rescue of his patrol.

Corporal Charles A. Longo (Army serial No. 31381932), Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding courage near Behren, France, on 19 February 1945. When bringing hot rations forward to his company, he was caught in heavy enemy artillery fire, which flattened one tire of his vehicle. Despite the bursting shells, he dismounted quickly and repaired the damage, thus ensuring the expeditious delivery of food to his comrades in action. Corporal Longo's conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Garfield A. Ramsey (Army serial No. 33835075), Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 19 February 1945, near Stiring Wendel, France, performed heroic services. On contact patrol with three other men, he entered a woods and was suddenly pinned down under heavy, hostile machine-gun fire. Deliberately, he moved out and drew the enemy fire on himself, enabling his companions to withdraw. Then, hurling grenades into the enemy positions, he made his own escape. Private Ramsey's brave action prevented loss to the patrol and resulted in the bringing of valuable information to his commanding officer.

Private First Class Peter D. Reed (Army serial No. 32777674), Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, courageously defended his company's position against great odds near Kerbach, France, on 18 February 1945. Bravely manning a machine gun in the face of intense enemy fire, after others had become casualties or withdrawn, Private Reed and one other soldier fired back with such deadly effect that a strong German infantry attack was stopped and the company position was saved.

Staff Sergeant Abraham S. Triebwasser (Army serial No. 19159207), 276th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 10 and 11 March 1945, performed heroic service in France. When the only road to forward positions was cut off by intense artillery fire, he led several ration supply parties through dense woods, by compass, to front line troops who were without food. That night, under continued enemy artillery fire, heedless of danger, he voluntarily led the Ammunition and Pioneer Platoon forward to establish and hold a vital road block. Sergeant Triebwasser's action, done without regard for his own safety, reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to Major Eugene H. Anthony, as published in WD General Orders 58, 1946, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. 11, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Major Eugene H. Anthony, O373425 (then captain), Infantry, Army of the United States. 6 and 7 April 1942.

XI. MEDAL OF FREEDOM WITH BRONZE PALM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom with Bronze Palm for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Brigadier General Marcel Leloup, French Army, as Director General of the French Forest Service, rendered valuable assistance to the United States Army from November 1944 to December 1945. Through his skillful planning and cordial cooperation, the forest allocation program was directed in such a manner as to make large quantities of French timber available to the United States forces in Europe. General Leloup's services to the Allied cause were outstanding.

XII. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Tom F. Wayne, O19657, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, from August 1942 to April 1944 and May 1945 to March 1946, rendered exceptionally meritorious services with the United States of America Typhus Commission. He assisted in the formulation of plans for the establishment of the Commission and, as assistant military attaché in London, helped to develop the mutually beneficial American and British world-wide typhus control. Colonel Wayne's work in this field was of great value to the Commission in accomplishing its assigned mission.

XIII. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of paragraph 1, section II, WD General Orders 18, 1946, pertaining to General of the Army Henry H. Arnold, United States Army, as reads "March 1942 to November 1945" is amended to read "March 1942 to April 1944."

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named enlisted men:

Technical Sergeant John Meagher (Army serial No. 32261405), Infantry, Army of the United States, as acting platoon leader, Company E, 305th Infantry Regiment on 19 June 1945, near Ozato, Okinawa, in an attack against enemy bunkers and machine-gun nests, displayed conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty. In the heat of the fight, he mounted an assault tank and, with bullets splattering about him, designated targets to the gunner. Seeing an enemy soldier carrying an explosive charge dash for the tank treads, he shouted fire orders to the gunner, leaped from the tank, and bayoneted the charging soldier. Knocked unconscious and his rifle destroyed, he regained consciousness, secured a machine gun from the tank, and began a furious one-man assault on the enemy. Firing from his hip, moving through vicious cross-fire, which ripped through his clothing, he charged the nearest pillbox, killing six. Going on amid the hail of bullets and grenades, he dashed for a second enemy gun, running out of ammunition just as he reached the position. He grasped his empty machine gun by the barrel and, in a violent onslaught, killed the crew. By his fearless assaults, Sergeant Meagher, single-handedly broke the enemy resistance, enabling his platoon to take its objective and continue the advance.

Sergeant Alejandro Renteria Ruiz (Army serial No. 33442412) (then Private First Class), Company A, 165th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 28 April 1945 at Okinawa, when his unit was stopped by a skilfully camouflaged enemy pillbox, displayed conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty. His squad, suddenly brought under a hail of machine-gun fire and a vicious grenade attack, was pinned down. Jumping to his feet, Private Ruiz seized an automatic rifle and lunged through the flying grenades, rifle and automatic fire, for the top of the emplacement. An enemy soldier charged him and his rifle jammed. Undaunted, he whirled on the assailant and clubbed him down. He then ran back through bullets and grenades, seized more ammunition and another automatic rifle, and again made for the pillbox. Enemy fire was now concentrated on him, but he charged on, miraculously reaching the position and, in plain view, climbed to the top. Leaping from one opening to another, he sent burst after burst into the pillbox, killing 12 of the enemy and completely destroying the position. Private Ruiz' heroic conduct, in the face of overwhelming odds, saved the lives of many comrades and eliminated an obstacle which would have long checked his unit's advance.

Private First Class Dirk J. Vluc (Army serial No. 36155403), 1st Battalion, 126th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty, on 15 December 1944, when an American road block on the Ormoc Road near Limon, Leyte, Philippine Islands, was attacked by a group of enemy tanks. He left his covered position and, with a rocket launcher and six rounds of ammunition, advanced alone under intense machine-gun and 37-mm fire. Loading single-handedly, he destroyed the first tank, killing its occupants, with a single round. As the crew of the second tank started to dismount and attack him, he killed one of the foe with his pistol, forcing the survivors to return to their vehicle, which he then destroyed with a second round. When three more hostile tanks moved up the road, he flanked the first and eliminated it and then, despite a hail of enemy fire, pressed forward again to destroy another. With his last round of ammunition he struck the remaining vehicle, causing it to crash down a steep embankment. Through his sustained heroism in the face of superior forces, Private Vluc alone destroyed five enemy tanks and greatly facilitated successful accomplishment of his battalion's mission.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Technical Sergeant Anthony G. Pendel (Army serial No. 33406909), Company L, 393d Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 22-23 March 1945, at Waldbreitbach, Germany, in actions against enemy positions which covered a crossing of the Wied River, displayed extraordinary heroism. Moving against the first strong point, he dodged behind small buildings and trees, slipped up alone on two enemy sentries, knifed them to death, and then, in a surprise assault, led the capture of the house and four of the enemy. In succeeding acts, moving under heavy fire, with grenades and his rifle, he killed one enemy sniper and wounded another, captured a machine gun and the crew, and destroyed another machine-gun position in a house basement. Noticing a heavy concentration of enemy fire from a group of four houses, he took his rifle and grenades and, killing or capturing all the German gunners, reduced the positions one by one. By his sustained heroism, in which he personally accounted for 12 enemy killed and 28 captured or wounded, Sergeant Pendel assured a safe crossing of the river for his company and enabled his battalion to move rapidly on to its objective.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Private Rolland E. Chenoweth (Army serial No. 19020459), 21st Pursuit Squadron, Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action at Quinauan Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 5 February 1942. Private Chenoweth, attached to an infantry unit, was in position on the firing line when the tank crew of a supporting tank signaled that they had stopped on top of an enemy fox hole. Without hesitation and with complete disregard for his own personal safety, Private Chenoweth arose from his firing position and ran about 30 yards in front of his own line, fully exposed to enemy fire, to reach the tank. Still standing, he fired into the fox hole until incapacitated by a bullet shattering his left hand.

Private First Class Virgil E. Haisley (Army serial No. 16014423), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 2 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy near Bacolod, Mindanao, Philippine Islands. On withdrawal of the infantry forces, he remained behind alone, engaging the invaders in an attempt to slow the hostile advance and to extricate stragglers from the enemy hold. Private Haisley remained in position so long that he was surrounded and compelled to return from within the enemy lines at night.

Major Harry Cox Lang, O4440, United States Marine Corps, commanding officer, Company A, Fourth Marines, displayed conspicuous gallantry on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, from April to May 1942. Despite daily artillery bombardments and frequent air attacks, he exposed himself courageously in the course of his daily visits to all positions, thus contributing materially to strengthening of morale and esprit among his men to meet the subsequent landings on 5 May, when he met his death while directing the action. Major Lang's conduct reflects great credit on himself and the United States Marine Corps.

Major Francis Williams, O4533, commanding officer, 4th Tactical Battalion, 4th Marines, United States Marine Corps, displayed outstanding gallantry on Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 24 April 1942. Learning that a battery had been practically destroyed and set afire by a heavy enemy artillery concentration, he organized a rescue squad and, despite the imminence of an explosion from the magazine, courageously directed the removal of the wounded and extinguishment of the flames. Major Williams' conduct reflects credit on himself and the United States Marine Corps.

IV.—SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel George A. Hutchinson, O161910, Field Artillery, Army of the United States, Headquarters Y Force, United States Army Forces, China-India-Burma Theater, displayed outstanding gallantry in an isolated area of China on 16 October 1943. When a party of Americans, of which he was the senior, were suddenly attacked by a superior force of bandits, he dismounted quickly from his truck, returned the fire, and, though wounded, continued to expose himself in directing the actions of his men and stopping the attack. Colonel Hutchinson's courageous conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Colonel Malcolm V. Fortier, O5604, Infantry, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, from 8 January to 24 February 1942. As senior American instructor with the 41st Division, Philippine Army, his coolness under fire inspired the inexperienced officers and raw troops of the division to make a determined stand against all enemy attacks. He visited front-line units during operations to give instructions as to improving positions and placing of automatic weapons. On 22 January when an enemy break-through forced the withdrawal of the division command post, Colonel Fortier, although the command post was under fire from enemy snipers, remained at the old position to direct operations.

Lieutenant Colonel John J. Martin, O223193, Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 4 and 5 April 1942. As senior instructor of the 1st Battalion, 41st Infantry, Philippine Army, he displayed outstanding courage and gallantry in attacking the enemy up 300-foot cliffs and out of the Pantingan Valley without supporting artillery fire. This successful mission, accomplished on an exceedingly dark night and followed by additional successful attacks, was a result of Colonel Martin's gallant leadership and in keeping with the highest traditions of the military profession.

Captain Robert Pennell, O22139, Field Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 19 January 1942. On his own initiative on that date, Captain Pennell organized and led a patrol to investigate the reported presence of an enemy force in the Abo-Abo River Valley. By his courageous conduct in action and with total disregard for his own safety, Captain Pennell made a material contribution to the difficult Bataan defense.

Staff Sergeant Francis M. Sewell (Army serial No. 19048450), 60th Coast Artillery Antiaircraft, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 5 and 6 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During the night of Japanese landings on Corregidor, he made numerous trips, under heavy artillery and sniper fire, to repair communications lines which were destroyed constantly by enemy action. By his courageous performance of this voluntary work, Sergeant Sewell did much to maintain communications between the headquarters and elements of the regiment.

Major John B. Smith, O349344, Infantry, Army of the United States, as commanding officer, Company B, 45th Infantry, Philippine Scouts, displayed outstanding gallantry in the Philippine Islands on 18-22 January 1942. Charged with the seizure of Mt. Mataan and knowing its approaches were in enemy hands, he courageously and skilfully conducted a march thereto. His unit repulsed repeated attacks from front, flank and rear, and, though wounded, he heroically directed a successful retirement. Major Smith's accomplishment contributed materially to protecting the flank of a Philippine division.

Major Frank M. Turner, O402000, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action at Bataan Air Field, Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 8 April 1942. Without regard for safety, during the heavy bombing and strafing of the field and his battery, he assisted two wounded men of the battery into his command car and drove them to the aid station. Though wounded at the time, Major Turner refused hospitalization and returned to his battery. His actions and courage were an inspiration to his men.

V.-LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following named officers:

Major Stanley B. Bonner, O16797, Field Artillery, United States Army.
December 1941 to April 1942.

Major Coleman T. Caruthers, O298017, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Dwight W. Edison, O18786, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1942.

Major Stanley Holmes, O19521, Infantry, United States Army. January to April 1942.

Colonel Floyd Marshall, O8380, General Staff Corps (Infantry), United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942. (This award supercedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Colonel Marshall, for services from 12 March to 9 April 1942, as published in General Orders 15, United States Army Forces in the Philippine Islands, 28 April 1942; see also par. 1, sec. XII, below.)

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Colonel Joseph K. Baker, O12168, General Staff Corps (Cavalry), United States Army. January 1943 to March 1946.

Colonel Frank F. Carpenter, Jr., O15870 (then lieutenant colonel), General Staff Corps (Field Artillery), United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Colonel Howard N. Frissell, O6544, Infantry, United States Army. 9 February to 10 May 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Palmer W. Holmes, O229938, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. October 1942 to May 1943.

Lieutenant Colonel Richard C. Kadel, O239912 (then major), Ordnance Department, Army of the United States. December 1941 to February 1945.

Brigadier General Hans Kramer, O9300, United States Army. September to May 1944.

Colonel Don E. Lowry, O11274, Adjutant General's Department, United States Army. February 1942 to October 1945.

Technical Sergeant Ray C. McCowan (Army serial No. 6917358), Air Corps, Army of the United States. October 1944 to January 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Henry A. Murray, O549252, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. April 1944 to October 1945.

Colonel Anthony Q. Mustoe, O18000, Air Corps, United States Army. April 1942 to December 1943.

Colonel Charles E. Rayens, O5456, Infantry, United States Army. August 1943 to July 1945.

Colonel Arthur H. Rogers, O21655 (then major), Air Corps, United States Army. May to December 1943.

Colonel Jesse T. Traywick, Jr., O15818 (then lieutenant colonel), General Staff Corps (Infantry), United States Army. 8 December 1941 to 12 May 1942.

Colonel Ira G. Wagner, Jr., O283786, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. October 1944 to October 1945.

Lieutenant General Raymond A. Wheeler, O3064 (then brigadier general), United States Army. 7 December 1941 to March 1942.

Colonel William E. Wilkinson, O20529 (then lieutenant colonel), Medical Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to March 1943.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Colonel James W. Callahan, Jr., O5435, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Joseph L. Chabot, O2071, Infantry (then major), United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Colonel Louis R. Dougherty, O2494, Field Artillery, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Colonel Allen L. Stowell, O10310, Signal Corps, United States Army. 15 January to 9 April 1942.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Lieutenant Colonel Edward Doherty, O303412, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. May 1944 to March 1945 and May to November 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Lieutenant Colonel Doherty, for services from 15 September 1944 to 17 March 1945, as published in General Orders 79, Headquarters 44th Infantry Division, 27 April 1945; see also par. 2, sec. XII, below.)

Master Sergeant Edward A. Doocey (Army serial No. 20100017), Infantry, Army of the United States. 16 December 1944 to 25 January 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Bernard J. Rauch, O281272, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. December 1943 to October 1944.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel R. F. Angus, Canadian Army. October 1942 to August 1945.

Brigadier General Clement Blanc, French Army. September 1944 to September 1945.

General Le Couteulx de Caumont, French Army. August 1944 to May 1945.

Colonel G. J. G. Fisher, British Army. June to October 1945.

Major Burton R. James, Canadian Army. September 1944 to October 1945.

Colonel Raymond George Vieux, French Army. November 1942 to August 1944.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Captain Eric R. Griffiths, Canadian Army. December 1944 to October 1945.
Lieutenant Colonel Denis J. Purdon, British Army. July 1944 to August 1945.

VIII.—LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Earl Maxwell, as published in General Orders 492, Headquarters United States Army Forces, South Pacific, 6 April 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Earl Maxwell, O17805 (then brigadier general), United States Army. January to July 1945.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Arthur P. Moore, as published in General Orders 240, United States Army Forces, Pacific, 9 October 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1944) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Arthur P. Moore, O101105, Field Artillery, Army of United States. 30 January to 9 April 1942.

FORT WINFIELD SCOTT, CALIFORNIA—Designated as subpost of Presidio of San Francisco, California	Section I
MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT—Ozark Ordnance Works, El Dorado, Arkansas, discontinued	II
BATTLE HONORS—Citation of unit	III

I. FORT WINFIELD SCOTT, CALIFORNIA.—Effective as of 11 June 1946, Fort Winfield Scott, California, is designated as a subpost of the Presidio of San Francisco, California, a class I installation under the command of the Commanding General, Sixth Army.

[AG 323.3 (18 Jun 46)]

II. MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.—Effective as of 13 May 1946, the Ozark Ordnance Works, El Dorado, Arkansas, is discontinued as a military establishment.

[AG 680.1 (19 Jun 46)]

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul., 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul., 11, 1942), citation of the following unit, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Air Forces in Europe, is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 93d Bombardment Group (H) distinguished itself by outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in strategic support of the British Eighth Army in the Middle East campaign during this Army's advance from El Aghella to the Mareth line, and also in support of the Allied First Army in their December 1942 advance toward Bizerte. Within 24 hours following the receipt of a warning order to proceed with 24 aircraft to North Africa for a 10-day campaign in support of the British First Army, the 93d Bombardment Group (H) was airborne en route from England, carrying spare parts and personnel to maintain operations for that short period. For nearly 3 months, this group engaged in continuous and sustained operations with but little outside help and maintenance, demonstrating the high state of their efficiency and their splendid morale. Based 600 miles in advance of the nearest heavy bombardment group during this period, living under the most primitive conditions and in constant danger of enemy air attack, the 93d Bombardment Group (H) struck vital blows at enemy shipping and communications. Without fighter support of any kind and with very limited facilities for securing reliable weather information, they carried out long-range attacks, which necessitated extended flights over dangerous desert terrain, enemy territory, and the Mediterranean Sea. The 93d Bombardment Group (H), during the course of this campaign, sank seven enemy merchant vessels and damaged numerous other craft, including one cruiser, carrying out successful attacks against harbor installations through intense antiaircraft fire, both naval and shore based. On two separate occasions during this period, this group transported its ground personnel across enemy lines. The boundless enthusiasm and determination of this group, ground and air personnel alike, were demonstrated constantly on the ground, by the exhausting feats of maintenance performed under the most difficult of desert conditions, and in the air, by exhibitions of the greatest bravery, resourcefulness, stamina, and skill. Exceptional versatility and cooperative spirit were demonstrated constantly in the way in which combat personnel applied themselves to maintenance duties in addition to operational sorties, while many of the ground personnel filled in as gunners where wounds or sickness caused vacancies among the crews. By superior courage, initiative, skill, untiring efforts, and devotion to duty of all personnel of this organization, despite personal hardships and under the most difficult conditions, the 93d Bombardment Group (H) upheld the finest traditions of the United States Army and contributed greatly to the defeat of the enemy in the Middle East.

First Lieutenant John H. Allen, O890115 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States. Early 1942.

Major John M. Galbraith, O370929, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Captain William D. Gibson, O890565, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. 1 January to 6 May 1942.

Major William S. Gochenour, Jr., O359370, Cavalry, Army of the United States. 7 and 8 April 1942.

Major Loyd E. Mills, O382807, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Major Sidney E. Seid, O306201, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. 1 January to 9 April 1942.

Major James S. Smith, O272302, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. 25 January to 9 April 1942.

Chaplain (major) Robert P. Taylor, O384411, Corps of Chaplains, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Master Sergeant Warren W. Welchel (Army serial No. 20842600), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Colonel Theodore F. Wickord, O345291, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Albert C. Wolfe, O184383, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Major Frederick J. Yeager, O22969, Infantry, United States Army. 7 April 1942.

Lieutenant Colonel Aaron A. Abston, O21391, United States Army, commanding Battery G, 60th Coast Artillery, performed heroic services on 8 and 9 April 1942 at Bataan and Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Receiving orders to evacuate, he destroyed the permanent guns and personally directed and assisted the loading of vital equipment on a barge. Arriving at Corregidor during an enemy air attack, which threatened to sink the boat, Colonel Abston proceeded to unload as the enemy bombs continued to fall, and personally drove a truck until all the equipment was placed on shore.

Major Eugene H. Anthony, O373425 (then captain), Infantry, Army of the United States, commanding Company B, 57th Infantry (Philippine Scouts), at Quinauan Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands, from 3 to 7 February 1942, displayed heroism in action against the enemy. He exposed himself repeatedly to hostile fire, without regard for his own safety, in maintaining personal contact with his riflemen and encouraging the men in their duties. Through the inspiring leadership of Captain Anthony, his company was a valuable factor in operations against the enemy.

Captain William P. Cain, O310076 (then first lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 7 April 1942, along the San Vicente River, Bataan, Philippine Islands, when a hostile gun began firing into his company's position, voluntarily reconnoitered the gun position with a view to its destruction. Fired on by the enemy, entirely without regard for his own safety, he held his position and fired his machine gun with such accuracy that the enemy artillery piece was silenced quickly. Captain Cain's courageous action greatly aided defensive operations in the area.

Sergeant Wallace A. Hall (Army Serial No. 20843982), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 8 December 1941 performed heroic service while in charge of a 37-mm-gun section at Clark Air Field, Luzon, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy bombing and strafing attack, the surrounding high grass caught fire and threatened to destroy his section and its ammunition supply. Without stopping his guns, Sergeant Hall put out the fire and saved the position.

First Lieutenant Ben R. Morin, O413499 (then second lieutenant), 192d Tank Battalion, Infantry, Army of the United States, performed heroic services on 22 December 1941 north of Damarits, Luzon, Philippine Islands. He aggressively led his unit to meet an approaching enemy force and, in the vicinity of Agoo, engaged in the first American tank-versus-tank engagement of World War II. Lieutenant Morin's conduct reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Raymond J. Peoples (Army serial No. 20900741), Company C 194th Tank Battalion, Infantry, Army of the United States, on 7 April 1942 performed heroic services at Bataan, Philippine Islands. In the face of an enemy antitank barrage, he continued to fire from his disabled tank for 30 minutes to aid a column of troops caught in an enemy ambush. Through his prompt and courageous action, Private Peoples enabled the men to extricate themselves and assemble for further operations against the enemy.

Colonel Harry A. Skerry, O5584, United States Army, as staff officer of the I Philippine Corps, performed heroic services on 2 April 1942 at Bataan, Philippine Islands. He began a personal daylight reconnaissance to determine the usability of a jungle mountain trail in connection with future operations. Heavy enemy artillery fire blocked the road, but, without regard for his own safety, Colonel Skerry went through the falling enemy shells and concentration of fire and returned to apply his information in a successful maneuver of forces.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Edgar Nelson Bloomer, O223607, Infantry, Army of the United States. June 1943 to September 1945.

Brigadier General Herbert S. Clarkson, O3605, United States Army. April 1943 to July 1945.

Brigadier General Kenner F. Hertford, O15120, United States Army. February 1945 to April 1946.

Colonel Richard K. Mellon, O902002, Army of the United States. July 1943 to April 1945.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Thomas A. Terry, as published in WD General Orders 82, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Thomas A. Terry, O2355, United States Army. September 1945 to February 1946.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain William R. Wales, O799106, Air Corps, Army of the United States, as pilot of a cargo carrying aircraft over LaRoche, Belgium, on 23 December 1944, sacrificed himself gallantly to save crew members and other aircraft. His airplane, badly damaged and burning from enemy antiaircraft fire, presented a dangerous hazard to the adjacent formation. Captain Wales, disregarding his own safety, cleared the blazing airplane from the formation, ordered "abandon ship," and continued to control the airplane until all crew members, including the wounded, escaped, but too late to save himself.

IV. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (Sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Chen Yung-Tsi, Chinese Army. His regiment was assigned the mission of attacking and capturing the strongly fortified Japanese positions on Sung Shan Mountain, known as points 13, 14, 4, 5, and 3. Colonel Chen pushed the attack vigorously and skillfully and quickly took the first four-named strong points. However, in doing so, many of his best officers and men became casualties. Point 3 was a large strongly fortified area, but Colonel Chen, disregarding personal danger, moved in to attack it with his remaining troops. To encourage his troops and better direct their action, he moved freely around in the front lines. He was wounded seriously, but refused to leave the front and continued to direct the action for 24 hours.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Corporal Walter J. Cox (Army serial No. 38002584), Company I, 31st Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 19 January 1942. Company I, 31st Infantry, in crossing an open road, ran into enemy machine-gun fire, which covered the road, killing and wounding many men. Corporal Cox, as aid man with the company, moved onto the road, despite the machine-gun fire, to drag the wounded to positions where medical aid could be given. Although wounded by a machine-gun bullet in the thigh, he stayed at his task courageously until all the wounded men were removed.

Staff Sergeant Paul K. Heller (Army serial No. 33582242), Company B, 38th Armored Infantry Battalion, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action on 4 and 5 November 1944 near Meijel, Holland. He volunteered courageously to traverse an unmarked mine field under heavy artillery fire and eliminate a German machine-gun position, which endangered his battalion's advance. After accomplishing this, Sergeant Heller returned through the field and heroically led a combat patrol, Company B and Company A, successively, with minor losses, through the same danger area and to a successful accomplishment of their missions.

Technician Third Grade Firman G. Olson (Army serial No. 37050373), Company K, 422d Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry near Schonberg, Belgium, on 19 December 1944. When the lead scouts of his platoon entered a clearing in the woods and were wounded by a burst from an enemy machine gun, he ran courageously to where they lay, administered first aid, and, despite bursting shells and small-arms fire, dragged one to safety. Technician Olson's conduct reflects credit on himself and the military service.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942), and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel William T. Holloway-Cook, O247424, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. 8 December 1941 to 10 May 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Major Leroy W. Herrick, O204537, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. 8 December 1941 to 9 April 1942.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Brigadier General Claude M. Adams, O6412, United States Army. August 1942 to December 1943.

Colonel Samuel D. Avery, O6825, Medical Corps, United States Army. September 1939 to June 1946.

Lieutenant Colonel Donald C. Beere, O21893, Field Artillery, United States Army. December 1943 to February 1945.

Colonel Harrison C. Browne, O2759, General Staff Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Colonel George D. Campbell, Jr., O18783, Air Corps, United States Army. February to August 1945.

Colonel John G. Christy, O256819, Infantry, Army of the United States. September 1940 to September 1945.

Colonel William N. Cork, O148637, Infantry, Army of the United States. September 1940 to September 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Heber E. Couchman, O263480, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. October 1940 to September 1945.

Colonel Morris B. DePass, Jr., O10333, Infantry, United States Army. January 1943 to February 1945.

Lieutenant General Delos C. Emmons, O2617, United States Army. September 1943 to June 1944.

Admiral Frederick J. Horne, 2441, United States Navy. May 1943 to September 1945.

Colonel Cornelius C. Judwin, O11213, Cavalry, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1943.

Colonel Stuart C. MacDonald, O3854, General Staff Corps (Infantry), United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Master Sergeant John M. McMahan (Army serial No. 6398177), Field Artillery, Army of the United States. July 1944 to April 1945.

- Lieutenant Colonel Harold E. Nelson, O24487 (then captain), Corps of Engineers, United States Army. May 1942 to January 1943.
- Brigadier General Omar H. Quade, O3292, United States Army. May 1942 to March 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Richard W. Ripple, O20312, Infantry, United States Army. May 1945 to May 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Paul E. Schwehm, O328234, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. October 1940 to September 1945.
- Colonel James P. Smith, O915301, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. 10 June 1945 to 10 June 1946.
- Brigadier General Ralph C. Smith, O4723, United States Army. March 1945 through June 1946.
- Colonel William F. Spencer, O253167, Air Corps, Army of the United States. June 1943 to June 1946.
- Lieutenant Colonel Thomas H. Upton, O299867, Finance Department, Army of the United States. September 1940 to September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Willard H. Waterous, O176561, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. December 1941 to May 1942.
- Lieutenant Colonel Frank C. Winkler, O109002, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. December 1943 to August 1945.

Major Max W. Schaeffer, United States Marine Corps. December 1941 to May 1942.

Captain Arthur V. Burholt, O415796, Infantry, Army of the United States, as operations officer of the 192d Tank Battalion, performed heroic services in Bataan, Philippine Islands, in early 1942. He organized and conducted instructions of troops concerning combat cooperation with tanks, and, frequently under enemy fire, supervised and coordinated the tank effort in the Anyasen and Tuul pockets. Captain Burholt's initiative and professional ability reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Charles A. Lubke (Army serial No. 35903150), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 19 December 1944, volunteered to participate in a motorized patrol of the 422d Infantry Regiment near Halenfeld, Germany. The members of this patrol, by preventing an enemy ambush, saved the lives of many of their comrades. Private Lubke's unselfish conduct and disregard for his own safety reflected credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

IX. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

First Lieutenant Ernesto Colombo Espinosa, Honduran Air Force. July to November 1942.

Sergeant Armando Murillo Diaz, Honduran Air Force. 21 July to 3 August 1942.

X. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Captain Ernesto Caraccioli, Honduran Air Force. July to November 1942.

Captain Guillermo Flores Theresin, Honduran Air Force. 12 July to 18 November 1942.

XI. MEDAL OF FREEDOM WITH SILVER PALM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom with Silver Palm for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Pasquale Lai, Italian civilian. In Italy, March 1944.

XII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM WITH BRONZE PALM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom with Bronze Palm for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Angel B. Lagueruela, Chief of the Department of Public Safety, Havana, Cuba, rendered meritorious services to the United States Army on 6 February 1943. A violent explosion of high octane aviation gasoline occurred on an Army barge while at the docks in Havana Harbor, killing four men and wounding several others. Knowing that the vessel contained 6,000 barrels of gasoline, Mr. Lagueruela went aboard voluntarily, directed the quenching of the fire, and aided in saving the cargo and preventing further loss of life. His skill and engineering ability aided materially in salvaging the cargo and barge and were a valuable contribution to the American war effort.

XIII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Howard Kaleohano, American civilian, displayed outstanding heroism on 7 December 1941 by capturing and securing important documents from a Japanese aviator, who made a forced landing on the Island of Niihau, Territory of Hawaii. Several days later, when the enemy flyer had secured a pistol, Mr. Kaleohano steadfastly withstood bribes and threats of death for himself and his relatives to keep the documents from the Japanese aviator, who was killed subsequently.

Maurice Pate, American Red Cross. October and November 1944 and June-July 1945.

XIV..MEDAL OF FREEDOM (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Medal of Freedom awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to Richard Mazzarini, as published in General Orders 16, 16 January 1946, United States Army Forces, European Theater, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945). The citation is as follows:

Richard Mazzarini, American civilian. As Chief of the Secret Intelligence Branch, Office of Strategic Services, in Italy, from May 1943 to August 1944, Mr. Mazzarini displayed unusual administrative ability in coordinating the efforts of more than 500 agents in liberated and enemy-occupied Italy.

XV..UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Captain Henry M. Lemon, O539064, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, from 4 November 1945 to 9 April 1946, rendered meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the control and prevention of epidemic typhus fever in the American-occupied areas of Germany and Austria. Captain Lemon participated in the formulation of the program and in carrying out control measures, contributing direct to the safeguarding of American troops, as well as civilian populations, from outbreaks of typhus fever.

Major George Zinneman, O1543545, Medical Administrative Corps. Army of the United States, from June 1944 to March 1946, rendered exceptionally meritorious services as chief of supply and personnel section of the field headquarters of the United States of America Typhus Commission in England, France, and Germany. With excellent judgment and energy, he dealt with extensive problems of procurement and distribution of antityphus supplies, particularly typhus vaccine. Adding to efficiency in administration a knowledge of typhus prevention, Major Zinneman contributed to the successful checking of epidemics and the prevention of typhus fever in western Europe.

XVI..LEGION OF MERIT.—1. So much of section II, WD General Orders 15, 1946, as pertains to Lieutenant Colonel Joy Dow, Jr., Infantry, as reads "October 1943 to October 1945" is amended to read "October 1943 to October 1944."

2. So much of Headquarters Army Service Forces General Orders 13, 1945, as pertains to Colonel George R. Goethals, Corps of Engineers, is rescinded.

WAR DEPARTMENT

WASHINGTON 25, D. C., 17 June 1946

BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Company C, 142d Infantry Regiment, for heroism, gallantry, and outstanding achievement in combat from 1 to 10 February 1945 in Oberhoffen, France. The 1st Battalion was ordered to attack through the 2d Battalion's positions on the southern edge of Oberhoffen and seize the remainder of the stubbornly defended town. Under cover of darkness, Company C executed a brilliant flanking maneuver and advanced stealthily to a point about 300 yards north of a fork in the southern part of town, where Company A had been halted by fierce resistance. Striking swiftly and aggressively, elements of Company C surprised the hostile force, fought through to contact Company A at the fork, and, in scoring a decisive victory over the German troops, broke the deadlock in this sector. On the following day, as Company C pressed its advantage and drove toward the northeast section of Oberhoffen, the enemy launched a violent counterattack with five Royal Tiger tanks and an estimated 100 SS troops. The men of Company C not only held their ground in the face of the hostile onslaught and successfully repelled the counterattack, but also began pressing forward with renewed aggressiveness. When the company was relieved on 3 February, it had killed and captured more than 150 Germans and had completely cleared the northeast section of Oberhoffen. Four days later, the 1st Battalion relieved another unit fighting to clear the strongly fortified northwest portion of the town. Early in the morning of 9 February, Company C passed through Company A and, after intense house-to-house fighting, cleared all the houses in this sector. In the face of a determined counterattack by approximately 100 enemy infantrymen, elements of Company C were forced to withdraw a short distance, but, on the following day, attacked again and retook the lost houses, securing this section of Oberhoffen. During this 2-day action, the men of Company C, 142d Infantry Regiment, killed and captured approximately 175 Germans and helped smash the enemy's last hold on the town, thus ending the long, fierce battle for Oberhoffen. (General Orders 397, Headquarters 36th Infantry Division, 11 September 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, 36th Infantry Division.)

2. Company K, 143d Infantry Regiment, 36th Infantry Division, is cited for heroism, gallantry, and outstanding achievement in combat on 15 March 1945. As an assault unit of a large-scale attack, Company K was assigned the mission of attacking at night across exposed terrain to capture the town of Bitschhoffen, France. This town was known to be well-defended and surrounded by extensive mine fields. The men of Company K attacked twice, each time suffering heavy losses from mines and enemy defensive fires, and each time reorganizing for another assault. On the third assault, elements of the company attacking up to and through a mine field, succeeded in entering the town. Overwhelming German troops in the village, they then attacked from the rear those enemy forces engaged with the remainder of the company. By daylight, Bitschhoffen had fallen, an undetermined number of enemy soldiers were killed, 66 prisoners of war were captured, and the only supply route for two regiments was opened. (General Orders 160, Headquarters 36th Infantry Division, 1 May 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, 36th Infantry Division.)

3. The 1st Battalion, 142d Infantry Regiment, 36th Infantry Division, is cited for heroism, gallantry, and outstanding achievement in combat on 12 December 1944 at Selestat, France. The 1st Battalion was thinly spread on a broad front in defense of the important communications center, Selestat. Just before dawn, a heavy artillery concentration preceded a large-scale enemy attack against the city. During the bitter fighting which ensued, hostile troops gained control of a factory area on the north flank, seized a half-mile stretch of houses in the northeast corner of the city, and succeeded in isolating small groups of the battalion. While the isolated units fought valiantly to repel the attackers, other units of the battalion counterattacked. Only by blasting each house with tank fire and assaulting the strong points with small arms, grenades, and bayonets were the battalion troops able to dislodge the Germans. The fight for Selestat raged furiously throughout the morning, but by midafternoon the hostile troops were being forced out of the city. At the battle's end, the 1st Battalion had killed more than 200 enemy soldiers, captured 333 prisoners, and, including others known to be wounded, inflicted a total of approximately 700 casualties on the attacking force estimated at 1,000 combat effectives. The courage, individual aggressiveness, and distinguished heroism displayed by the officers and men of the 1st Battalion, 142d Infantry Regiment, 36th Infantry Division, resulted in the repulse of a strong enemy attack which, if successful, would have severed the Strasbourg-Selestat highway and opened the way for an attack against the rear of the Seventh Army. (General Orders 160, Headquarters 36th Infantry Division, 1 May 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, 36th Infantry Division.)

4. The 2d Battalion, 141st Infantry Regiment, for extraordinary heroism, gallantry, and esprit de corps from 7 to 19 December 1944 in France. During the 14 days of this action, the 2d Battalion held the most important single terrain feature on the exposed right flank of the 36th Infantry Division. The enemy hurled thousands of rounds of artillery and repeated infantry assaults against the battalion positions and each attack was thrown back with disastrous losses. On 12 December, the Germans infiltrated approximately 700 men to a point 2 kilometers behind the front lines and attacked the rear installations. By desperate fighting, the headquarters personnel of this battalion drove the enemy back and inflicted severe casualties. For the next 4 days, units of the battalion, cut off on three sides, withheld all enemy assaults and prevented the Germans from overrunning their positions. On 17 December, despite having lost 40 percent of its fighting strength, the battalion launched a tank-infantry attack against the center of German resistance. With outstanding aggressiveness, they successively stormed the three towns from which the enemy had mounted his entire offensive. The success of this brilliant attack, coupled with the overwhelming casualties inflicted on the enemy, definitely ended the enemy's offensive capabilities in the area. More than 600 prisoners of war were taken by the 2d Battalion, 141st Infantry Regiment, 150 of whom were wounded, and at the conclusion of the operation, more than 600 enemy dead were found in the battalion's area. (General Orders 175, Headquarters 36th Infantry Division, 15 May 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, 36th Infantry Division.)

5. The 3d Battalion, 142d Infantry Regiment, for extraordinary heroism, gallantry, and outstanding achievement in combat from 24 November to 3 December 1944 in France. Ordered to seize the vital German supply base of St. Marieaux-lines, which controlled the St. Marie Pass and the main road leading to the Ribeauville and Colmar sectors, the 3d Battalion was split into two forces. While one reinforced company attacked frontally, encountering a strongly fortified road block, two other rifle companies executed a bold flanking maneuver and took the German garrison in the town completely by surprise. After clearing hostile troops from the area and capturing 170 prisoners, the battalion pressed across precipitous mountain terrain to seize the commanding ground around Koenigsbourg Chateau. Then, spearheading the division's advance, 3d Battalion troops drove relentlessly forward toward Kintzheim and Chatenois, the first towns to the east in the Rhine lowland. While part of the battalion battered strong enemy defenses in Kintzheim under intense mortar, tank, and small-arms fire, the remainder of the organization occupied high ground overlooking Chatenois and directed the artillery on lucrative targets in the valley. During the night of 30 November, the enemy was forced to withdraw from both towns and the battalion was swiftly reorganized at Chatenois in preparation for an attack against a designated sector of the important railroad and communication center of Selestat. Despite heavy enemy shelling and stubborn resistance on the outskirts of town, elements of the battalion fought from house to house, neutralizing hostile strong points, and successfully clearing the assigned sector of Selestat. As a result of the determination and aggressiveness displayed by every man, the 3d Battalion, 142d Infantry Regiment, opened the way through the Vosges to the Rhine River Valley and, by this action, accomplished a feat which had previously been considered impossible. (General Orders 175, Headquarters 36th Infantry Division, 15 May 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, 36th Infantry Division.)

6. The 3d Battalion, 143d Infantry Regiment, for heroism, gallantry, and outstanding achievement in combat from 26 to 29 August 1944 near La Coucourde, France. With the mission of attacking, occupying, and defending the strategic Magranan Ridge overlooking the only available escape route of the German 19th Army, which was being rapidly pushed to the north, the members of the 3d Battalion attacked the well-defended enemy positions on the hillside in the face of intense small-arms and automatic fire and bitterly fought its way to the top to overcome all enemy resistance. The following day, when attacked by an enemy force of battalion strength, units of the battalion fought valiantly to repel the attackers and inflict upon them an estimated 30 percent dead, while other units of the battalion courageously beat off successive enemy tank and infantry attacks from the north. The members of the battalion directed thousands of rounds of mortar fire into the enemy, blocking the highway with the debris of destroyed vehicles and trucks. The enemy, determined to dislodge the battalion from its tenaciously held positions, on 28 August 1944 attacked with strong forces and each time the battalion drove the enemy back, inflicting tremendous casualties upon the attackers. On 29 August 1944, the enemy, in overwhelming numbers, desperately attacked the battalion and succeeded in infiltrating through and dividing it into small units. Although completely isolated from other units and faced with possible annihilation, the members of the 3d Battalion fought furiously to hold their positions and by midmorning had completely beaten the hostile forces, who suffered tremendous losses in personnel and equipment. During this action, the 3d Battalion, although suffering heavy casualties, captured over 600 prisoners, including the commanding general of the 198th Infantry Division, destroyed over 55 vehicles of all types, 100 artillery pieces, 2 tanks, and 2 tank destroyers, and wounded and killed an undetermined number. By the magnificent courage and distinguished heroism of every officer and man of the 3d Battalion, 143d Infantry Regiment, a major disaster was inflicted upon the enemy in his attempt to advance to the north. (General Orders 398, Headquarters 36th Infantry Division, 12 September 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, 36th Infantry Division.)

7. 111th Engineer Combat Battalion with 232d Engineer Combat Company (attached), for heroism, esprit de corp, and extraordinary achievement in combat from 23 October to 11 November 1944 near Bruyeres, France. When it was decided to attack through the Foret Dominiale De Champ and outflank the German forces in the Laveline-Corcieux Valley, this unit was called upon to build a supply road out of a mountain trail which rose 1,000 feet above the valley floor and progress through a dense forest to the division objective. Working directly behind the assault elements, the men of this unit labored unceasingly to build and maintain this road. Artillery fire crashed into the trees, showering shrapnel on the engineers, who had no protection as they worked. Enemy snipers infiltrating behind our lines caused casualties and some of the engineers engaged these Germans in a fire fight while the others continued to work. Tanks were called up and, though these heavy vehicles tore the bottom from the trail, the engineers were able to keep it open so that the constant flow of supplies to the nine infantry battalions engaged in the action and the constant evacuation of dead and wounded was never interrupted. Corduroy and planking were used, hundreds of enemy mines were removed, and gravel and paving stones were hauled from the surrounding country side. At no time during the 19 days of this action did the work cease. Even though the engineers sustained 57 casualties in dead and wounded, they captured 27 German prisoners and killed many more as they worked. Almost continuous rain and snow made their task more difficult, and yet by sheer determination and grit, these men accomplished this magnificent feat of engineering. Without this road, the division operation could not have succeeded and it is due to the extraordinary achievement of the 111th Engineer Combat Battalion with the 232d Engineer Combat Company (attached) that the 36th Division was able to outflank the enemy forces in the Laveline-Corcieux Valley and pursue a disorganized enemy to the banks of the Meurthe River. (General Orders 425, Headquarters 36th Infantry Division, 1 October 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, 36th Infantry Division.)

BATTLE HONORS—Citation of unit..... II

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer of each of the following air forces is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial:

Tenth Air Force.
Fourteenth Air Force.

[AG 250.4 (29 May 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater, is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 20th Tank Battalion (less Company B and 3d Platoon, Company D), with the following attached units and personnel:

Company B, 65th Armored Infantry Battalion;
Antitank Platoon, Company A, 65th Armored Infantry Battalion;
Antitank Platoon, Company C, 65th Armored Infantry Battalion;
1st Platoon, Company B, 220th Armored Engineer Battalion
Two ambulance crews (total four enlisted men), Company B, 220th Medical Battalion;

Four forward observer teams (total four officers, 15 enlisted men) 413th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, which constituted Task Force 20, distinguished themselves in combat by extraordinary heroism and gallantry during the period from 28 April to 1 May 1945. They displayed soldierly courage and irrepressible determination in their first combat mission by pushing an armored spearhead 45 miles beyond the Danube River to the outskirts of Munich, Germany, destroying a supply train, capturing almost 800 prisoners, and securing 4 bridges intact over the Amper River. On 29 and 30 April, Task Force 20 advanced against an enemy entrenched in elaborately prepared dugouts and firmly established behind the thick walls of an SS training center and an antitank school, which were defended by small arms, machine guns, hundreds of panzerfausts, and twelve 88-mm guns. More than 700 SS troops, who fought stubbornly and fanatically, were killed. The gallant action of the task force destroyed the main defenses of Munich and, by removing German resistance to the entry of American troops, assured the inevitable fall of that important city. The determination and indomitable fighting spirit of the courageous officers and men of the 20th Tank Battalion (less Company B and 3d Platoon, Company D) and attached units and personnel exemplify the finest traditions of the military service.

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer of each of the following service commands is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial:

First Service Command.
Fifth Service Command.

[AG 250.4 (10 Jun 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 78th Armored Field Artillery Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 29 and 30 July 1944. On the morning of 29 July 1944, the battalion was in position near an important cross road southwest of Notre Dame de Cenilly, Normandy, France. At 0830B, it was reported that an enemy force of approximately 200 infantrymen, supported by 15 tanks, was attacking an outpost held by elements of the * * * Infantry * * *. The outpost was forced to retire under extremely heavy mortar and small-arms fire, and when one of the four M10's attached to the outpost was set afire by mortar fire, the remainder withdrew. This withdrawal left the defense of the cross road the responsibility of the 78th Armored Field Artillery Battalion. The enemy infantry managed to get as far as the hedgerow separating them from the battalion's M7's before the advance was checked. A total of 126 enemy dead was counted along this hedgerow and 7 enemy tanks were destroyed. The battalion moved to a new position near St. Denis le Gast, Normandy, France, and prepared to furnish supporting fire to advanced units. At 0230B on the morning of 30 July 1944, a German armored column of more than 20 vehicles and cannon, accompanied by 350 infantrymen, penetrated the battalion's position along a road which separated its batteries. Sustaining the initial shock quickly and efficiently, firing 105-mm howitzers at ranges of 50 yards and less and using all available weapons, the battalion destroyed all the enemy vehicles, killed 100 of the enemy personnel, and wounded or captured the remainder. Simultaneously with this close-range fighting, Battery C, not reached by the enemy, plus three guns of Battery A and four of Battery B, fired indirect fire continuously for a forward observer on a German column to the northeast. In less than 2 hours, guns of all batteries were again firing on this enemy column. This accumulated fire resulted in the death of an additional 1,200 Germans and the destruction of 97 vehicles and cannon. The courageous performance of the officers and enlisted men of the 78th Armored Field Artillery Battalion and the complete devotion to duty, with utter disregard for safety, demonstrated by each individual contributed to the destruction of an enemy that was capable of annihilating the battalion's position. (General Orders 27, Headquarters 2d Armored Division, 5 May 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Headquarters 2d Armored Division, Camp Hood, Texas.)

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel John F. Mullen, O241971, Infantry, Army of the United States. September 1940 to September 1945.

Brigadier General George D. Shea, O5465, United States Army. October 1944 to April 1945.

Colonel Ralph Merrill Smith, O165672, Judge Advocate General's Department, Army of the United States. September 1940 to August 1945.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Sergeant Henry F. DeLong (Army serial No. 6933510), Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Pursuit Squadron serving on beach defense as infantry, on 7 February 1942, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy at Quinaun Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands. After 3 consecutive days of fighting which drove the enemy onto the beach, he volunteered with five other men to attack, from landing boats, enemy forces which had taken over beneath the cliffs and in caves. Without regard for his own safety, Sergeant DeLong, with the five other men, raked the enemy positions and cave entrances with machine-gun fire while fully exposed to enemy aircraft and small-arms fire from the beach.

III. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Chao Ti, Infantry, New 38th Division, Chinese Army in India, as regimental commander during the Burma campaign in May 1944, led his troops in a flanking movement on Zigyum, a well fortified strong point. Crossing the Mogaung River under heavy fire, they drove the enemy from their positions, killing a large number, taking an important hill, and capturing a great deal of equipment. Coordinating his attack with that of another regiment, Colonel Chao's brilliant leadership resulted in the capture of Kamaing. The courage and initiative of Colonel Chao reflect great credit on himself and the Chinese armed forces.

Colonel Ch'en Ming-Jen, New 38th Division, Chinese Army in India, as regimental commander during the North Burma campaign in April 1944, led his troops in a flanking movement below Kamaing to cut off the main Japanese supply line. He occupied Seton, despite the difficult mountainous terrain, prevailing monsoon conditions, short rations, and flooded river crossing, and established a road block, which he held for a month in the face of determined enemy attacks and heavy enemy artillery fire. The courage and leadership of Colonel Ch'en were a great inspiration to his officers and men and reflect great credit on himself and the Chinese armed forces.

Colonel Loh Shih-Chiu, 50th Division, Chinese Army in India, displayed great gallantry in action near Kamaing, Burma, on 27 June 1944. When the enemy forces which had occupied Kamaing were trapped between that city and the Seton road block, Colonel Loh chose to personally lead the attacking forces in their elimination. Moving south, his forces ran into some of the bitterest fighting in the entire North Burma campaign. When one of his battalions, which had been cut off from his forces, was fighting its way through overwhelming enemy resistance, Colonel Loh personally led a battalion in a hazardous flanking movement, which enabled the encircled battalion to break through. The courage and inspirational leadership of Colonel Loh reflect great credit on himself and the Chinese armed forces.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Richard N. Ransbottom, O1283672, 36th Armored Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding gallantry in action near Stolberg, Germany, on 8 November 1944. Trapped with his 15-man patrol within enemy lines by artillery, mortar, and small-arms fire, he was wounded critically by the first salvo. Despite his wounds, he directed the withdrawal of six survivors and insisted they leave him. Through sheer determination, Lieutenant Ransbottom crawled on his elbows for several yards toward our lines and, when found 8 hours later, gave valuable information of enemy positions.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel John B. Davenport, Jr., O19724, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. June 1940 to July 1943.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Vivian B. Collins, O116184, Army of the United States. March 1941 to September 1945.

Captain Charles R. Deeter, O478680, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. March 1943 to October 1945.

- Lieutenant Colonel James H. Frier, Jr., O243666, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. March to October 1944.
- Colonel Chester A. Furbish, O266646, Infantry, Army of the United States. October 1940 to September 1945.
- Brigadier General Arthur R. Harris, O3676, United States Army. April 1943 to April 1946.
- Brigadier General Joseph C. Hutchison, O209436, Army of the United States. November 1940 to July 1944 and September 1944 to October 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal (Oak-Leaf Cluster) to Brigadier General Hutchison, for services from 23 April to 12 August 1945, as published in General Orders 14, Southern Islands Area Command (Provisional), 24 September 1945.)
- First Lieutenant Harold K. Landry, O1642298, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. June 1943 to September 1945.
- Captain Richard A. Moore, O575674, Air Corps, Army of the United States. July 1944 to March 1946.
- Major Lawrence D. Prehn, O343457, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. December 1942 to September 1945.
- Colonel William E. Shepherd, O108833, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. May 1945 to June 1946.
- Colonel Delmar T. Spivey, O17278, Air Corps, United States Army. September 1943 to February 1945.
- Colonel Everett C. Williams, O5125, Field Artillery, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier Arthur T. Cornwall-Jones, British Army. July 1944 to November 1945.
- Lieutenant General Sir Alex Hood, British Army. June 1942 to March 1945.
- Lieutenant General Sir Montague George North Stopford, British Army. November 1943 to May 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- General of Brigade Sebastian Barriguete Andrade, Mexican Army. February 1943 to November 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel John Willem Hugo van den Wall Bake, Royal Netherlands Army. April 1944 to July 1945.
- Brigadier Edward C. Beddows, British Army. July to December 1942.
- Colonel Enrique Vasquez Benavides, Peruvian Army. As director of the Central Ordnance Service of the Peruvian Army.

- Major H. E. André Bourgoïn, French Army. December 1941 to January 1945.
- Brigadier Richard Llewelyn Brown, British Army. May 1943 to May 1945.
- Brigadier James Thom Durrant, South African Air Forces. August 1944 to May 1945.
- Major General Clifford Henry Geake, British Army. 1 July 1941 to 22 February 1943.
- Colonel Leonard Allan Hall, British Army. April 1942 to August 1945.
- Colonel Arthur Neville Hancock, British Army. May 1943 to August 1944.
- Brigadier Martin Hotine, British Army. October 1941 to June 1944.
- Colonel Charles A. Krug, Canadian Army. December 1944 to October 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Baron Alexander Willem Rijnhard Mackay, Royal Netherlands Army. September 1943 to July 1945.
- Colonel Kenneth Mackessack, British Army. December 1943 to May 1946.
- Brigadier J. L. Maxwell, British Army. July 1944 to March 1945.
- Colonel Willem Christiaan Posthumus-Meyjes, Royal Netherlands Army. September 1944 to July 1945.
- Colonel Frederik Justus Herbert Sniijders, Royal Netherlands Army. February 1944 to July 1945.
- Colonel Philip E. Stableford, South African Air Forces. May 1944 to May 1945.
- Major Frans van den Bergh, Royal Netherlands Army. November 1943 to July 1945.
- Major Jan Carel van der Mey, Royal Netherlands Army. February to July 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Johannes Hendrik Arie Pieter Langen van der Valk, Royal Netherlands Army. April 1944 to July 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Diederik Jan Anthonie Albertus Jonkheer van Lawick van Pabst, Royal Netherlands Army. July 1944 to July 1945.
- Lieutenant Commander David Roca Varea, Peruvian Air Corps.
- Lieutenant Colonel Peter G. Wreford-Brown, British Army Staff. January to October 1944.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated, was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Captain Paul Borresen, Royal Norwegian Air Force. January 1943 to August 1945.
- Capitan Jorge Ceballos C., Peruvian Air Corps. August 1942 to February 1944.
- Flying Officer H. W. Featherstonechaugh, British Army. April 1942 to June 1943.
- Lieutenant (acting captain) Denis John Halliday, Royal Engineers. September 1944 to May 1945.
- Captain Edmond Gunther Van Bloeme, Royal Netherlands Army. September 1944 to July 1945.
- Major Baron Hendrik Jan Robert Richard Melvill van Carnbee, Royal Netherlands Army. May 1944 to July 1945.

Major Harold C. Smith, O322114, Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States. December 1941 to April 1942.

Private Thomas J. Atchison (Army serial No. 36905600), Infantry, Army of the United States. 26 February 1945.

Corporal Henry Cheafsky (Army serial No. 33576738), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. 4 April to 5 May 1944.

Private First Class George O. Hendrickson (Army serial No. 36012570), Infantry, Army of the United States. 22 February 1945.

Staff Sergeant Moncer L. Young (Army serial No. 35559283), Infantry, Army of the United States. 17 February to 21 March 1945.

Havildar Ting Bawn, Detachment 101, American Kachin Rangers, displayed heroism in action against the enemy in the vicinity of Kadu, Burma, on 30 August 1944.

Staff Sergeant Stanley L. Rewinski (Army serial No. 31031025, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in action on 8 November 1944 in the vicinity of Moyenvic, France. When his section was held up by small-arms fire, he voluntarily accompanied his platoon leader in an attempt to flank the enemy position. Although wounded in the attempt by mortar fire, his example so inspired his men that the objective was soon taken. Sergeant Rewinski's action reflected great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Technician Fifth Grade Earl D. Alexander (Army serial No. 38077762), Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 25 February 1945 near Stiring Wendel, France, voluntarily and without regard for his own safety, advanced under mortar and small-arms fire to give first aid to a wounded man who lay close to the enemy positions. Refusing to leave the soldier, even after the company was ordered to withdraw, he courageously remained with him outside the American lines. When his unit again drove forward, Technician Alexander picked up the wounded man and carried him back to a covered position.

Private Donald E. Johnson (Army serial No. 31327221), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 19 December 1944 volunteered to participate in a motorized patrol of the 422d Infantry Regiment near Halenfeld, Germany. The members of this patrol, by preventing an enemy ambush, saved the lives of many of their comrades. Private Johnson's unselfish conduct and disregard for his own safety reflected credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Corporal Troy H. Kimmel (Army serial No. 35605969), Infantry, Army of the United States, on December 1944 volunteered to participate in a motorized patrol of the 422d Infantry Regiment near Halenfeld, Germany. The members of this patrol, by preventing an enemy ambush, saved the lives of many of their comrades. Corporal Kimmel's unselfish conduct and disregard for his own safety reflected credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Private First Class Edgar Wentz (Army serial No. 33851306), Company E, 274 Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding heroism near Spichern Heights, France, on 23 February 1945. When the enemy made repeated attempts to seize a pill box housing several of his wounded companions, he stopped the attack through the alternate use of grenades and his carbine. Private Wentz's courage contributed materially to the successful defense of this important position.

IX. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, Mediterranean Theater, 29 April 1945, is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 2d Battalion, 351st Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action during the period 27 September to 1 October 1944, near Mt. Cappello, Italy. The 2d Battalion was assigned the mission of wresting the strategically important Mt. Capello from a determined and numerically superior

German force. In the face of a withering hail of fire from all types of weapons, the 2d Battalion launched its attack down the barren, forward slopes of Mt. Guasteto, Italy, eliminating a strong reverse slope German position in four violent assaults characterized by bitter fire fights and vicious hand-to-hand grenade duels. Although outnumbered, the soldiers of this organization maintained their captured position, despite ruthless enemy counterattacks preceded by intense artillery and mortar barrages. Although suffering from severe losses and confronted by fanatical enemy resistance, the courageous officers and men of the 2d Battalion again resumed a full scale offensive and, advancing by infiltration, neutralizing resistance by furious hand-to-hand fighting within the German positions, gained a foothold on the barren slopes of Mt. Capello. Setting a commendable example of coolness and efficiency in the face of great danger, the 2d Battalion fought grimly, tenaciously maintaining its foothold, despite the murderous enemy fire and wave after wave of fresh enemy assault troops. In a notable display of combat skill, teamwork, and determination, the men of the 2d Battalion, because of shortage of ammunition, resorted to captured German machine guns and German grenades to meet the enemy onslaughts. Utilizing personnel from battalion headquarters at riflemen, because of its heavily depleted effective strength, the battalion, in a final all-out assault, drove the enemy from Mt. Capello, retaining this strategic terrain feature, despite final desperate enemy counterattacks. The timely capture of this key enemy position frustrated violent enemy efforts to hold terrain of vital importance. A dangerous enemy penetration between the 351st Infantry Regiment and another hard-pressed infantry regiment on the right was averted by the heroic determination, self-sacrifice, and unflinching devotion to duty of the officers and men of the 2d Battalion, 351st Infantry Regiment. The valorous performance of the 2d Battalion, 351st Infantry Regiment, reflects great credit on the personnel of the regiment and upon the armed forces of the United States.

First Lieutenant Arlis K. Anderson, O664864, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 26 July 1943.

XI. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major Leonard H. Raines, O484105, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 16 February 1943 to 10 January 1945.

XII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superceding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, Mediterranean Theater, 3 May 1946, are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 34th Field Artillery Battalion is cited for conspicuous gallantry and heroism in battle on 21, 22, and 23 February 1943 in repelling an attack by vastly superior forces which were attempting to break through the Allied lines in the vicinity of Thala, Tunisia. The 34th Field Artillery Battalion completed a 100-hour forced march from Tlemcen, Algeria, covering a distance of 735 miles in bitter weather over tortuous and almost impassable mountain roads on the night of 21 February 1943. Without prior reconnaissance or adequate maps, harassed by enemy fire, and forced to maneuver through a congested, narrow road, nevertheless, the battalion occupied battle positions, set up communications, established observation posts, and was ready to deliver fire by daylight. Although enemy forces were entrenched only 2,500 yards distant and there were only three platoons of friendly infantry in front of the artillery, the unit maintained constant and steady fire with such deadly effect that enemy tank units were dispersed and driven back. The cool, determined manner in which the 34th Field Artillery Battalion entered into battle after an almost incredible forced march contributed in great measure to the defeat of the enemy's attempt to break through the Thalia defile. The gallant entry into battle and the heroism with which the volume of fire was maintained, despite terrific enemy fire, are in keeping with the highest traditions of the American military service.

XIII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Jan F. Libich, American civilian, serving with the Office of Strategic Services, Mediterranean Theater of Operations, from June 1944 to May 1945, displayed marked ingenuity in creating and disseminating subversive material to enemy troops and civilians. Of special significance was Mr. Libich's contribution to the effectiveness of a clandestine newspaper and infiltration of the mails on the Italian frontier with propaganda.

Senor Francisco Bartes y Marsal, Cuban civilian. June 1943 to November 1945.

XIV. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section III, WD General Orders 19, 1946, as pertains to Colonel Chalmer K. McClelland, Ordnance Department, is rescinded (see par. 5, sec. VIII above).

XV. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—So much of section XI, WD General Orders 60, 1945, as pertains to Lieutenant Colonel Kermit R. Hansen, Infantry, is rescinded (see sec. IX above).

XVI. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—So much of section VIII, WD General Orders 43, 1946, as pertains to Major William T. Hawley, Medical Corps, as reads "Major William T. Hawley" is amended to read "Major William L. Hawley."

Brigadier General Donald J. Myers, O6127, United States Army. January 1945 to February 1946.

VIII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

Company E, 306th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy at Ishimi, Okinawa, Ryukyus Islands, on 28 May 1945. After 29 days of continuous action and with a strength of 3 officers and 97 enlisted men, 68 of whom were replacements, Company E, 306th Infantry Regiment, attacked a hill in the vicinity of Ishimi, Okinawa, on the morning of 28 May 1945. As the company reached the crest of the hill, it was met by intense rifle fire and exploding grenades. The grenades and rifle fire were coming from pillboxes, bunkers, and communication trenches on the other side of the crest. Without waiting for orders and without thought for personal safety, the company rushed over the crest and charged toward the enemy-held emplacements. As the company closed in for the annihilation, they were faced with a reinforced company of enemy in and about the positions. Firing from their hips and without slowing the advance, the company charged the positions. The entrenched enemy returned their fire and threw hand grenades at them. Although the bullets kicked up dust around them and the grenades hit dangerously close, they continued to move forward. When the company closed into the enemy positions, hand-to-hand combat ensued, which was ferocious in all respects. Men beat their way into the positions, using bayonets and rifle butts. One soldier, who had lost his weapon, was observed fighting off enemy opposition of an officer and two enlisted men. Undaunted, he was using his helmet to fight off the officer, who, with drawn sword, was pushing forward to kill him. As the encounter heightened in intensity, Japanese came out of their positions to meet the close-in attack. The company continued onward without pause, rushing position after position. Approximately 33 of the enemy fled in confusion, and the remainder of the dazed and beaten foe were killed during the course of the battle, totaling 148 counted dead on the scene. Four heavy machine guns, six light machine guns, nine knee mortars, eight Samurai swords, and one hundred and thirteen rifles were captured. This action cleared the way for the 2d Battalion to move to its objective and destroy the enemy completely. The indomitable courage and fearless aggressiveness of the men of Company E, 306th Infantry Regiment, are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 67, Headquarters 77th Infantry Division, 26 February 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, Middle Pacific.)

IX. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Stephen Galatti, American civilian, rendered noteworthy services as Director General, American Field Service, in England, North Africa, and Italy, from March to May 1944. During this period, by careful inspection of units in the field and thorough coordination with the British War Office and combat commanders, Mr. Galatti brought about effective improvements in the organization and operation of the exceptionally beneficial and famous volunteer ambulance service, which he had reorganized at the outset of World War II and behind which he had long been the driving force.

X. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Doctor Robert L. Cherry, surgeon (Reserve), United States Public Health Service, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in the control of the epidemic of typhus fever at Naples, Italy, from 20 December 1943 to 20 February 1944. As chief of a section for case finding and epidemiological investigation, he carried heavy responsibility. Doctor Cherry's excellent work contributed materially to the successful checking of this epidemic, thus protecting both civilians and American troops.

XI. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. So much of section IV, WD General Orders 72, 1945, as pertains to Colonel Boris Theodore Pash, General Staff Corps, as reads "1 to 29 April 1945" is amended to read "April 1944 to November 1945."

2. So much of paragraph 2, section III, WD General Orders 43, 1946, as pertains to Colonel William W. Haddock, British Army, as reads "Colonel William W. Haddock" is amended to read "Colonel Walter W. Haddock."

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major Paul Kronacher, Belgian Army. September 1943 to October 1944.

V. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man and individuals:

Eden Brenes, American civilian. September 1944 to August 1945.

Miss Gretchen Schuyler, American Red Cross. July 1944 to May 1945.

Major Paul J. Durbin, O374718, Infantry, Army of the United States. January to May 1945.

Louis A. Klewer, American Red Cross, while serving with the 119th Infantry, near Hebert, France, on 25 July 1944, displayed unusual courage during and subsequent to a bombing raid. Mr. Klewer assisted in locating, excavating, and rendering first aid to the wounded, despite the bursting of burning ammunition, and persisted in his efforts until the area was clear of casualties.

Captain Eldred K. Hutchinson, O1312164, Company H, 101st Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed heroic leadership near Moyenvic, France, on 8 November 1944, in attempting with one other to outflank and eliminate a strong enemy position barring the forward movement of his platoon. Although he was seriously wounded and unable to complete his effort, Captain Hutchinson's heroic actions inspired his platoon to move forward and destroy the resistance.

Staff Sergeant Robert W. Fish (Army serial No. 32640800), Company E, 274th Infantry, Army of the United States, courageously defended his company's position against great odds near Kerbach, France, on 18 February 1945. Bravely manning a machine gun in the face of intense enemy fire, after others had become casualties or withdrawn, Sergeant Fish and one other soldier fired back with such deadly effect that a strong German infantry attack was stopped and the company position was saved.

Captain Irvin Juster, O1308962 (formerly first lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself on 19 December 1944 by volunteering to lead a motorized patrol of the 422d Infantry Regiment near Halenfeld, Germany. The members of this patrol, by preventing an enemy ambush, saved the lives of many of their comrades. Captain Juster's unselfish conduct, forceful leadership, and disregard for his own safety reflected credit on himself and the armed forces.

Second Lieutenant Carl R. Pohlad, O2016349 (then staff sergeant), Company C, 410th Infantry Regiment, as a member of a patrol behind enemy lines, displayed heroic conduct near St. Die, France, on 16 November 1944. When the patrol was attacked by a superior force, in the vicinity of a large stream, he voluntarily remained behind as a delaying force and held off the attack by his accurate fire. After the group had crossed safely by boat, Lieutenant Pohlad crossed the stream by swimming, under heavy enemy fire, and rejoined them safely.

VI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 3d Battalion, 305th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in breaking through the much-vaunted Shuri defense line on Okinawa, Ryukyus Islands, on 15-17 May 1945. After 10 days of bitter fighting, the 3d Battalion, 305th Infantry Regiment, launched an attack against the enemy near Shuri Castle on 15 May 1945. The enemy was numerically superior, determined, and deeply entrenched in a maze of caves, tombs, pillboxes, and revetted installations. Despite murderous fire from all types of weapons and repeated counterattacks, on 16 May, this battalion reached a position from which it could direct an assault against the main Shuri line position. At 0415 on 17 May, the battalion launched an all-out offensive against this position in a predawn attack. So depleted was the effective fighting strength of the battalion that only 21 riflemen remained in the entire battalion. Cooks, bakers, drivers, headquarters personnel, and pioneers had been pressed into front line duty. Skillfully taking advantage of the element of surprise, the battalion forced a breach in the Shuri defense line in a violent bayonet assault, executed under cover of darkness. The enemy was forced into a withdrawal, which contributed ultimately to the Japanese evacuation of Shuri Castle. The assault element doggedly held their captured position against increasing enemy reaction until the first light of day. Harassed by pockets of Japanese bypassed in the surprise attack, and exposed to heavy fire, the battalion organized the position. At dawn, when all supporting weapons had been brought up, the gallant infantrymen resumed the attack, capturing a dominant ridge which secured our position in the break made so gallantly in the enemy line. No other battalion participating in this assault was able to effect a penetration of the enemy main defenses on these dates. During the 2-day action, 707 enemy dead were counted, 99 caves were sealed, 7 prisoners of war were taken, and 6 light and 6 heavy machine guns were destroyed. Officers and men of this battalion distinguished themselves consistently with great individual courage, extraordinary heroism, and exemplary devotion to duty. The action of the 3d Battalion, 305th Infantry Regiment, was marked by gallantry, fearlessness, and outstanding esprit de corps, and exemplified the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 30, Headquarters 77th Infantry Division, 19 January 1946, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

2. The 3d Battalion, 306th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 29 April to 6 May 1945 on Okinawa, Ryukyus Islands. On 29 April 1945, the 3d Battalion, 306th Infantry Regiment occupied a defensive position guarding the main avenues of approach from Shuri, several thousand yards to the south. In a desperate attempt to eliminate this salient, the Japanese expended thousands of rounds of heavy artillery, which pounded the position incessantly, causing severe losses. At 0200 on 3 May 1945, the enemy launched the first of a series of major night attacks. Following an intense preparation of artillery, mortar, and machinegun fire, the fanatical enemy assaulted the front and flanks of the battalion. Bitter grenade and bayonet fighting raged until dawn, when the last of the attackers were annihilated. The enemy renewed his artillery and mortar fire with unprecedented fury. At 2400, 4 May 1945, a fresh battalion of enemy infantry launched a three-pronged attack against the sorely depleted 3d Battalion. The personnel of the battalion met the foe at point-blank range with fixed bayonets and hand grenades, killing Japanese coming at them from the front, flanks, and rear. Outnumbered, the gallant troops held their ground tenaciously and, in the face of bitter opposition, denied this highly important tactical locality to the enemy. At dawn, hundreds of Japanese were found dead across the entire battalion front. The few remaining were forced to withdraw in confusion, pursued by artillery, mortar, and small-arms fire. The stubborn enemy continued to harass the position with heavy fire. No reserves were available and the situation became desperate. On 5 May, combat patrols went forward to mop up enemy troops entrenched on the forward slope of a ridge on the left flank. Over 100 Japanese were killed and many machine guns and mortars captured and destroyed. Throughout the day and night, the enemy continued to direct heavy fire on the battalion position. At 0230, 6 May, the desperate Japanese launched another vicious attack against the right flank and front of the battalion. At 0400, tank-infantry teams assaulted the position. In the face of intense fire, machine gunners and riflemen stood their ground heroically. Rocket-launcher teams, antitank gunners, and artillery fire destroyed three Japanese medium tanks within 250 yards of the front lines. Again the dwindling battalion repulsed the enemy in furious close-in combat. When the command post was overrun by infiltrating enemy, the command group personally fought its way out. In the early morning hours, three additional Japanese tanks were destroyed by antitank and artillery fire. The attack was repulsed with severe losses to the enemy. By this time, the battalion had lost one-third of its men and had killed over 1,000 Japanese. During the entire period, the fighting men of the 3d Battalion, 306th Infantry Regiment, exhibited unwavering fortitude and an indomitable fighting spirit, repulsing some of the most severe and determined counterattacks launched by the Japanese on Okinawa. By its heroic stand, it prevented the enemy from recapturing an important position and paved the way for the ultimate destruction of the famed Shuri defensive position. The unflinching devotion to duty and superb courage displayed by the members of the 3d Battalion, 306th Infantry Regiment, reflect the highest traditions of the United States Army. (General Orders 71, Headquarters 77th Infantry Division, 1 March 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, Middle Pacific.)

3. Company A, 306th Infantry Regiment, 77th Infantry Division, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy, during the period 7 to 14 May 1945, near Urasoe Mura, Okinawa, Ryukyus Islands. On 7 May 1945, Company A, 306th Infantry Regiment was assigned the mission of assaulting "Rocky Ridge," a rocky, cave-infested enemy strong point located approximately 1,000 yards south of Urasoe Mura, Okinawa. Capture of the ridge was of the utmost tactical importance, because it dominated the defense of Shuri, the main Japanese stronghold on the island. The ridge was protected by a strong enemy force firmly entrenched in the maze of tunnels and caves dug into the solid rock. On the left flank, it was reinforced by long-range rifle, machine-gun, and mortar fire. Numerous artillery pieces and flat trajectory weapons located in deflated positions in the hills to the left front could bring accurate and heavy fire on the hill. To the right front and right flank, covered and concealed positions offered excellent observation for batteries of mortars and automatic weapons of the enemy. At 0800, after a brief artillery preparation, Company A pushed forward in the assault. The company's ranks were already thinned by casualties sustained in its three assault landings in the Ryukyus chain and the ferocious fighting on Okinawa. The spirit of the officers and men was high and the attack moved rapidly. After an hour and a half of bitter fighting, the company reached its intermediate objective, a hill perpendicular to "Rocky Ridge." Here, the enemy was in position on the reverse slope and only by rolling hand grenades down the hill was Company A able to clear the way for the main assault on "Rocky Ridge." Again the company moved forward with three platoons abreast. The forward elements struck the defenses of the ridge almost immediately. Bitter fighting ensued against a numerically superior force. Men jumped into caves with the enemy and destroyed them in desperate hand-to-hand fighting. At 1030, the initial battle for the hill was won. The rocky terrain offered little protection, but defenses were organized immediately and shelters were made of the loose rocks. At 1035, after a terrific mortar and artillery preparation, the enemy launched his first desperate counterattack. In furious battling, the company clung tenaciously to its newly won positions and drove the enemy back. For the remainder of the day, defensive positions were prepared under constant, heavy mortar and artillery fire. Supply and evacuation were extremely difficult. So deadly was the enemy rifle and machine-gun fire that a man dared not expose himself, even for a moment. At the end of the day's fighting, over 150 of the enemy had been killed, and 3 heavy machine guns, 19 LMG's, 4 knee mortars, a 47-mm, and a 20-mm gun had been captured or destroyed on the position. That night, repeated counterattacks were driven off with fighting at point-blank range. Enemy in tunnels below the company's defensive positions attempted to dislodge the defenders by exploding powerful charges beneath them. For 7 days and nights, Company A clung tenaciously to the ridge and accounted for an additional 250 of the enemy. This, despite the loss of six of the seven officers in the initial assault and with but four noncommissioned officers remaining. The regiment, using this ridge as a pivot, was able to advance on both flanks and penetrate the outer defenses of Shuri. The courage, devotion to duty, and indomitable spirit displayed by the officers and men of Company A, 306th Infantry Regiment reflect great credit on it and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 70, Headquarters 77th Infantry Division, 1 March 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, Middle Pacific.)

II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Major William F. North, O343444, Corps of Military Police, Army of the United States. July 1944 to May 1945.

VIII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 80th Field Artillery Battalion, on 3 February 1945, supported the 53d Field Artillery Battalion, which was in direct support of the 63d Infantry Regiment, in a flanking movement to bypass Munoz and clear Highway 5 to San Jose. Following the infantry forward elements, the battalion pushed its way by bulldozer across soggy rice paddies, swamps, and deep irrigation ditches. Enemy machine-gun, mortar, and artillery fire were received on this move and a danger of tank attack was always imminent. For 3 days and 4 nights, the battalion was attacked repeatedly by infiltrating enemy infantry, all of which was repulsed. On the morning of 7 February 1945 at 0330, the remnants of a Japanese armored task force, attempting to withdraw from Munoz to San Jose, attacked the battalion position area and neighboring infantry units. Eleven enemy tanks, carrying infantry, and 10 personnel carriers were taken under fire by 50-caliber machine guns on the battalion perimeter. One tank was set afire and halted on the road, while the remaining vehicles deployed. The accompanying enemy infantry dismounted and vigorously attacked the positions of the 80th Field Artillery Battalion and elements of the 63d Infantry Regiment and 53d Field Artillery Battalion in the same area with small-arms, grenades, and machine-gun fire. Without hesitation, the cannoneers, except those necessary to man the pieces, deployed as infantry. Making use of bazookas, machine guns, and carbines, the men of the 80th Field Artillery Battalion repulsed the attack, and then, seizing the initiative, sent bazooka teams forward, deployed their 15-mm howitzers to more advantageous positions for direct fire, and, at dawn, engaged in a vicious artillery duel with the tanks, at ranges of 50 to 300 yards. Enemy tanks scored direct hits on several gun pits. When the last enemy gun was silenced, it was found that six enemy medium tanks, five light tanks, ten personnel carriers and two 105-mm howitzers with prime movers had been destroyed in the close proximity of the battalion position area. The 80th Field Artillery Battalion distinguished itself in action by its extraordinary heroism and exhibited such gallantry, determination, and esprit de corps as to make it outstanding in this engagement. The magnificent courage and devotion to duty by all members of the 80th Field Artillery Battalion are a credit and inspiration to the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 148, Headquarters 6th Infantry Division, 25 July 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

2. The 713th Tank Battalion, Armored Flame Thrower (Provisional), is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Okinawa-Shima from 9 to 22 June 1945. After completing 70 days of fierce fighting, during which seemingly impregnable enemy positions at Kakazu and Shuri were reduced, the 713th Tank Battalion, Armored Flame Thrower (Provisional), continued forward in the assault of the Yaeju-Dake escarpment, the final and most rugged enemy stronghold. Supporting two Army and two Marine divisions, the tanks of this battalion preceded the infantry and advanced under heavy enemy fire and in the face of violent suicidal counterattacks. In caves and crevices throughout the jagged face of the escarpment, the enemy had established mutually supporting gun positions, which delivered a devastating volume of fire against the advancing troops. The battalion tanks approached to within 50 yards of these fortified positions and proceeded up the face of the escarpment, burning out all positions as they progressed. Many times tank crews were forced to dismount under heavy Japanese fire to extricate their tanks, or to carry the flame gun hose attachment up the face of the cliff, so that they could burn out by hand those enemy pockets which were inaccessible to the tanks. After 4 vicious days of close-in fighting, during which the tanks fired a total of 400 missions, the infantry gained the top of the escarpment. Continuing to spearhead the attack, the flame thrower tanks advanced from crag to crag and assisted the infantry in burning out or destroying the remainder of the enemy troops on the island. Throughout the assault, detachments of Battalion Headquarters Company and Service Company ably supported the tanks by furnishing liaison teams to the infantry front line troops and by hauling 120,000 gallons of napalm up to the front lines. To conserve time, these gallant service troops refueled the tanks under enemy observation within 300 to 500 yards of the front lines. The aggressive and courageous use of this weapon inflicted an estimated 5,000 casualties upon the enemy, reduced our own casualties, and played a substantial part in bringing about final victory. This operation was the first in which a tank unit equipped with flame-thrower guns was used, and the great success in aiding the advance of our troops against the determined stand of the Japanese was due largely to the cool skill, relentless aggressiveness, and indomitable spirit of the men of the Armored Flame Thrower Battalion. The courage and perseverance shown by the members of the 713th Tank Battalion, Armored Flame Thrower (Provisional), are worthy of emulation and reflect the highest traditions of the Army of the United States. (General Orders 45, Headquarters XXIV Corps, 9 March 1946, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

IX. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Howard Coonley, American civilian, as deputy in charge of the American War Production Mission in China, from November 1944 to March 1945, was largely instrumental in setting up the organic law and divisional structure of the China War Production Board. Subsequently, he assisted ably in carrying out its mission. Mr. Coonley's constructive help and guidance to China's industry was reflected in better industrial organization, increased production of munitions, improved quality of product, and higher efficiency of operation.

X. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Nicholas A. Tierney, United States Naval Reserve, from October 1944 to December 1945, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in the investigation of the clinical aspects of epidemic typhus and scrub typhus fevers, and in the treatment of these diseases at field headquarters of the United States of America Typhus Commission in Egypt and in Bermuda. Working at hospitals in Burma under difficult conditions, he carried out a successful investigation of the use of paraminobenzoic acid in the treatment of scrub typhus fever. Lieutenant Tierney's achievements, resulting in shortening the period of illness and in saving lives, benefitted patients suffering from scrub typhus and contributed to the advancement of medicine.

XI. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section V, WD General Orders 14, 1946, as pertains to Colonel Hugh McC. Exton, General Staff Corps, is rescinded (see sec. IV above).

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Cross and a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster awarded by the War Department to General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, as published in WD General Orders 27, 1919, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, O57, United States Army, on 26 January 1945, while visiting the 25th Division in combat at San Manuel, Luzon, Philippine Islands, advanced within 75 yards of the enemy lines to a point where two men had just been killed and several wounded by Japanese fire and which was still under heavy attack by enemy small arms, mortar, and cannon. Hidden enemy machine gunners and riflemen were opposing the advance with deliberately aimed cross-fire which intermittently covered the area. General MacArthur's example, in the face of enemy fire, was a source of inspiration for the men of the 25th Division.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, Commander in Chief of the Military Forces of the Republic of China. May 1943 to September 1945.

Colonel Wendell W. Fertig, O254976, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. August 1943 to March 1945.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant General Delos C. Emmons, as published in WD General Orders 23, 1943, a Bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant General Delos C. Emmons, O2617, United States Army. June 1944 to April 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Richard J. Marshall, as published in WD General Orders 61, 1942, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Richard J. Marshall, O4635, United States Army. June 1945 to April 1946.

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Robert Jensen, Danish civilian, organized and maintained a maritime escape and supply route in Scandinavia from March to July 1944, carrying out many gallant, self-imposed missions at great risk to his life and that of his family until he was apprehended and killed by the Gestapo. At the cost of his life, Mr. Jensen rendered outstanding services to the Danish resistance movement and the Allied war effort.

V. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Paul Lindner. 1 March to April 1945.

Anton Ruh. March to June 1945.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and chief warrant officers:

Colonel Francis T. Colby, O247159, Field Artillery, Army of United States. June 1942 to November 1945.

Chief Warrant Officer John Crowley (W2139943), Army of the United States. April 1944 to May 1946.

Lieutenant Colonel Philip L. Gore, O295359 (then major), Field Artillery, Army of the United States. April 1944 to December 1945.

Colonel Lloyd E. Griffis, O18643, Air Corps, United States Army. May 1940 to September 1945.

Major Robert W. Jackson, O255320, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. 12 March to 9 April 1942.

Captain William R. Lyons, O546541, Medical Administrative Corps, Army of the United States. February to December 1945.

Colonel James F. Olive, Jr., O17326, General Staff Corps, United States Army. January to November 1945.

Chief Warrant Officer Eugene P. Pecor (W2102196), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. August 1940 through December 1945.

Colonel Joseph F. Sadusk, Jr., O330258, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. September 1942 to September 1943.

Colonel Francis R. Sweeney, O203012, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. November 1943 to December 1945.

Colonel Byron R. Switzer, O128733, General Staff Corps (Air Corps), Army of the United States. May 1943 to September 1945.

Commander Walter Wilds, 169039 (then lieutenant commander), United States Naval Reserve. May 1945 to March 1946.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Walter John Legg, British Army. November 1943 to August 1945.

Colonel Daniel Gallegos Montealegre, Costa Rican Army. May 1944 to August 1945.

Major Denis H. G. Salt, British Army. May 1943 to August 1944.

Colonel Jorge Sarmiento, Peruvian Army. June 1940 to April 1946.

Colonel Christopher Prileau Warren, British Army. March 1944 to August 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel H. John F. White, British Army. September 1944 to March 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel David Brunton Aitken British Army. 15 August to 15 November 1944.

Lieutenant Colonel Gordon G. Crean, British Army. April 1943 to May 1945.

Captain Philip Clivebrook Isitt, British Army. August to November 1944.

Captain C. T. Robertson, Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, January and February 1945.

Captain Brian Martell Silk, New Zealand Expeditionary Forces. 25 April 1943 to 1 April 1944.

VIII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Kenneth B. Bush, as published in WD General Orders 39, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Charles G. Holle, as published in General Orders 6, Headquarters Caribbean Defense Command, c/o Postmaster, New Orleans, Louisiana, 29 January 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Charles G. Holle, O12612, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. January to September 1945.

4. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel George L. Usher, as published in General Orders 383, Headquarters United States Army Forces, South Pacific Area, 13 March 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel George L. Usher, O8050, Air Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to October 1942.

IX. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individuals:

Harold J. Anderson, American Red Cross. August 1944 to March 1945.

Colonel P. A. L. De Mot, Belgian Army. December 1944 to July 1945.

Major O. C. Dixon, British Army. 15 August 1944 to 20 April 1945.

Robin T. Gordon-Walker, British civilian. November 1944 to June 1945.

Major J. F. Greaves (then captain), British Army. 30 January 1944 to 30 April 1945.

Major Richard S. Greenlee, O931606 (as civilian adviser), Army of the United States. 24 January to 8 February 1945.

Colonel Robert C. Samuel Hall, British Army. December 1943 to June 1944.

Captain Gunnar Flemming Juncker, British Army. 1 January 1943 to 15 May 1944.

Josef Kappius. September 1944 to April 1945.

Henry A. Lacy, American civilian. March to August 1945.

Captain Michael Anthony Petit, British Army. December 1943 to July 1945.

Captain C. T. Robertson, Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps. January to April 1945.

Major Courtney Smith, O357808. Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. July 1944 to May 1945.

Private First Class Clifford W. Taylor (Army serial No. 38564103), Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself on 19 December 1944 by volunteering to participate in a motorized patrol of the 422d Infantry Regiment near Halenfeld, Germany. The members of this patrol prevented an enemy ambush, thereby saving the lives of many of their comrades. Private Taylor's unselfish conduct and disregard for his own safety reflect credit on himself and the armed forces.

Corporal Anthony Telensky (Army Serial No. 31277265), Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself on 19 December 1944 by volunteering to participate in a motorized patrol of the 422d Infantry Regiment near Halenfeld, Germany. The members of this patrol prevented an enemy ambush, thereby saving the lives of many of their comrades. Corporal Telensky's unselfish conduct and disregard for his own safety reflect credit on himself and the armed forces.

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Lieutenant Colonel Sterling C. Holmes, as published in General Orders 133, 8th Infantry Division, 10 December 1944 a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the Commanding General, European Theater, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Sterling C. Holmes, O22855, General Staff Corps (Infantry), United States Army. January to April 1945.

XI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Company E, 1st Platoon, Company H, and 1st Platoon, Company C, 307th Infantry Regiment; are cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy. At 0415, 17 May 1945, near Shuri, Okinawa, Ryukyus Islands, Company E, with the 1st Platoon, Company H, and 1st Platoon, Company C attached, launched a night attack on Ishimmi Ridge, a strongly defended terrain feature commanding a 2,000-yard valley and a key position in the Shuri defense line. The ridge, 600 yards to the front, was vitally important to the offensive and had to be captured before further advances could be made. Repeated daylight attempts to reach this important terrain feature had failed.

Company E, the 1st Platoon, Company H, and the 1st Platoon, Company C, completely surprised the enemy and gained the objective by 0445 without suffering a casualty. The Japanese reacted violently to this surprise and by 0600, Japanese artillery and mortar shells started raining on the position. Vicious machine-gunfire tore up the hill from the front, both flanks, and the rear. The enemy counterattacked furiously and repeatedly, but was repulsed savagely each time, at times by bayonets alone. Friendly units on the right and left attacked, trying to come abreast of Company E, but were repulsed. Thus Company E and the 1st Platoon of Companies H and C still remained isolated and surrounded, their strength being depleted rapidly, yet they fought on with dogged determination to hold their positions. By 1000, all machine guns, both heavy and light, and all 60-mm mortars had been knocked out. The day was hot and by nightfall practically all water had been consumed. The said men had exhausted their supplies. That night, an attempt was made to send in water, ammunition, and medical supplies, but the supply column was almost completely annihilated. Throughout the night, heavy enemy fire continued. The men repelled repeated Japanese infiltration attempts. Dawn of the second day disclosed that hand grenades were all expended and the only effective weapons remaining were rifles and bayonets, yet they clung desperately to their position. Fear that they might be overwhelmed by numbers alone was widespread. Four large-scale enemy attacks were repulsed during the day with the support of accurate Cannon Company and artillery fire. Adjacent units attacked again on the second day in an effort to come abreast of Company E without success. That night a supply and exa-cuation party reached them, bringing the first medical attention and water the men had received in 48 hours. Dawn of the third day found Company E and its attached platoons still clinging to their positions. Late at night on the third day, Company E and the 1st Platoons of Companies H and C were relieved with 48 men of the original 179 remaining. These units had driven a wedge into the great Shuri Defense Line, and shortly thereafter, the Japanese started their withdrawal from the tremendously strong position they had fought so desperately to hold. The extraordinary heroism and dogged determination of this little band, Company E, 1st Platoon, Company H, and 1st Platoon, Company C, 307th Infantry Regiment, contributed in large measure to the subsequent advance of the entire division and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 492, Headquarters 77th Infantry Division, 20 December 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

2. Company I, 307th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy near "Chocolate Drop Hill," Okinawa, Ryukyus Islands, from 15 to 19 May 1945. On 15 May 1945, Company I, 307th Infantry Regiment, moved into the line 800 yards northeast of the town of Shuri, relieving units of the 306th Infantry, and prepared to attack "Chocolate Drop Hill." The enemy was well-entrenched in numerous caves and had successfully resisted all previous attempts to take the hill, from which they had a commanding view of all the surrounding area. Attacking at 0900 across open ground, with a platoon of medium tanks in support, Company I encountered the concentrated fire of the enemy's strongest defense line. This fire came from artillery, motars, antitank guns, dug-in tanks, and small arms. The men of Company I advanced through the enemy fire until they reached the forward slopes of "Chocolate Drop Hill." Fire from both flanks and the front inflicted heavy casualties and forced them to dig in there. Heavy enemy mortar and artillery fire continued during the night. At 0200, 16 May, the Japanese, armed with rifles and knee mortars, launched a fanatical "Banzai" charge on the second platoon. The attack was repelled and the enemy lost eight men. At 0600, Company I again assaulted the savagely defended "Chocolate Drop Hill" with three tanks in support, and again had to go through concentrated artillery, mortar, antitank, and small-arms fire. Displaying a dogged determination, the men of Company I enveloped the hill, destroyed two 47-mm antitank guns, two heavy machine guns, two knee mortars, and used satchel charges to seal numerous caves occupied by the enemy. Intense fire from "Dorothy Ridge," "Flattop," "Brown," "Three Sisters," and "Grey Mills" remained so heavy that Company I was forced to move back to its original position. After another long night of shelling by the Japanese, the attack was renewed on 17 May. Twice the men of Company I struggled to the top of the hill, only to be forced back by a numerically superior Japanese force. At 1730 on the third attack, they finally captured and held the hill, killing 23 Japanese, destroying a 75-mm gun, two antitank guns, two heavy machine guns, and three knee mortars. At 0200 18 May, the Japanese launched a strong counterattack on the hill, which threatened to annihilate Company I. Company I repulsed the attack and killed 86 of the enemy, including 5 officers, on 1 of whom was found a map of Shuri, which proved to be of the utmost value. After 3 days and nights of hard fighting, during which the enemy fire never ceased, and after eight attempts to capture "Chocolate Drop Hill," Company I was in command of the hill and holding it. Two days later, Company I captured "Brown Hill," and the main defense line of the enemy was broken at the cost of 96 casualties to Company I. The magnificent courage and outstanding performance of duty of the men of Company I, 307th Infantry Regiment, exemplify the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 12, Headquarters 77th Infantry Division, 9 January 1946, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

XII. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—

By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Gordon E. Davis, O522333, Signal Corps, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the investigations of the United States of America Typhus Commission into the epidemiology of scrub typhus in Assam and Burma from November 1944 to November 1945. He organized and administered the rickettsia laboratory of the Commission at Myitkyina, Burma, and developed techniques for the isolation of the causative organisms from mite and mammalian hosts, demonstrating thereby the vector of the disease in that region. By his personal scientific contributions, Colonel Davis increased knowledge and extended the possibilities of control of scrub typhus fever.

Captain Henry S. Fuller, O516411, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the investigation of the epidemiology of scrub typhus in Assam and Burma from November 1944 to November 1945. First as member and later as director of the mite laboratory, Captain Fuller reorganized and coordinated its activities in such a manner as to lead direct to the demonstration of the important mite vector of the disease and the development of a rapid survey technique for the estimation of the hazard from disease of particular areas of terrain. Captain Fuller's contributions were valuable to science, as well as to the control of a disease of military and civilian importance.

Captain John A. Knapp, O1693237, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of American Typhus Commission in Burma and Assam from May to November 1945. Through an intensive examination of clinical records at evacuation hospitals and general hospitals, and from the records of the Northern Combat Area Command, he assembled, analyzed, and made available information essential to the knowledge of scrub typhus fever among troops in Burma. Captain Knapp's contribution will be of permanent value in the medical annals of scrub typhus fever.

Captain Kenneth E. Stager, O875584, Infantry, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services as chief of the mammalogy and ornithology laboratory of the field headquarters of the United States of America Typhus Commission in Burma from February to November 1945. As an expert in the collection and identification of mammals and birds, Captain Stager contributed knowledge essential to the understanding of epidemiology of scrub typhus fever. Captain Stager's work was of benefit to the control of scrub typhus among troops and constituted a lasting contribution to science.

XIII. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section II, WD General Orders 15, 1946, as pertains to Colonel Charles G. Holle, Corps of Engineers, is rescinded (see sec. VIII above).

XIV. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—So much of section V, WD General Orders 24, 1945, as pertains to Henry B. Hyde, American civilian, Office of Strategic Services, as reads "February 1943 to August 1944" is amended to read "February 1943 to November 1944."

III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General John W. N. Schulz, O2327, United States Army. October 1943 to January 1946.

5. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Paul H. Streit, as published in General Orders 51, Pacific Ocean Area, 17 May 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Paul H. Streit, O6254, Medical Corps, United States Army. June 1945 to February 1946.

VI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, Wd Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Carl E. Bennet, American Red Cross. August 1944 to May 1945.

Doctor Thomas A. Murrell, American civilian. March 1944 to October 1945.

Hartley Rowe, American civilian. May to September 1944.

Doctor Edwin G. Schneider, American civilian. April to July 1945.

First Lieutenant Sorin N. Holland, O1329592, Infantry, Army of the United States. January to May 1945.

Technician Third Grade Leonard H. Klosner (Army serial No. 37073639), Medical Detachment, 274th Infantry Regiment, Medical Department, Army of the United States, displayed heroic conduct in action at Stiring Wendel, France, on 7 March 1945. He set up a forward aid station under heavy artillery fire and within range of small-arms fire. Although wounded by a direct hit of a shell on the aid station, Technician Klosner courageously maintained it in operation until the situation improved and he could be treated.

VII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 3d Battalion, 63d Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Luzon, Philippine Islands, during the period 23 February to 1 March 1945. The 3d Battalion, 63d Infantry Regiment, on 22 February 1945, was assigned the mission of securing the high ground northeast of Montalban, Rizal Province. This objective was a key position in the formidable and strongly defended Shimbu Line east of Manila. The objective was studded with Jap pillboxes and cave and tunnel positions, whose approaches were covered with artillery and heavy mortar fire, and was defended by skillful and determined Jap infantry. On 23 February, the battalion moved under cover of darkness across the Marikina River Valley, overran the Jap outpost line in a vicious night attack, and by dawn had stormed and taken its initial objective, a small hill to the south of the final objective, only after a fierce attack with bayonets and grenades. By late afternoon, the final objective had been taken, despite intense enemy artillery, heavy mortar, and small-arms fire. From 24 February to 1 March, the enemy attempted to retake the hill with eight determined infantry night counterattacks, supported by massed artillery and mortar fires from weapons ranging up to 155-mm guns and 150-mm mortars. Twice the enemy reached our dug-in positions, but were hurled back in bitter hand-to-hand fighting. At no time did the battalion give an inch of ground. The seizure of this objective cut off the main Jap line of communications through Montalban and bottled up the enemy in the Marikina River Gorge. Headquarters and communications personnel were subjected to direct attack to the same degree as were front line troops. Medical and chaplain personnel frequently carried out their duties under heavy fire. Because of the intensity and accuracy of enemy artillery and heavy mortar concentrations, all supply and evacuation had to be accomplished under cover of darkness over routes which were constantly being attacked by enemy night infiltration and demolition parties. Jap casualties during the period were 210 counted killed in the objective area. Friendly casualties were 12 dead and 37 wounded and injured. The magnificent esprit de corps displayed in this engagement by every officer and man of the battalion distinguished this unit to an extraordinary degree. The courage and unswerving devotion of duty of all members of the 3d Battalion, 63d Infantry Regiment, reflected great credit on the Army of the United States. (General Orders 160, Headquarters 6th Infantry Division, 13 August 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

2. The 3d Battalion and Companies A and B, 253d Infantry Regiment, are cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 17 to 24 February 1945, near Kleinblittersdorf, Germany. These troops were given the mission of leading the reentry of Seventh Army troops into Germany by effecting a crossing of the Blies and Sarre Rivers and attacking a well-organized and partially fortified enemy position. With gallantry and determination, the objective was quickly secured with very light casualties. The enemy then literally attacked from all directions with armor and infantry and, at one time, succeeded in penetrating the main line of resistance to dig in. By great courage, fortitude, and cohesion of the personnel of the 3d Battalion and Companies A and B, this and all other enemy counterattacks were eliminated. On the night of 18

February, the enemy succeeded in reaching Auermacher, thus cutting off the 3d Battalion and Companies A from B. The attacking enemy forces were stopped by Company A and eliminated by determined fire from the 3d Battalion and Company B, combined with that of Company A, while attempting to penetrate further south toward the bridge over the Sarre River. During this action, 120 Germans were killed, an unknown number wounded, and 210 were taken prisoner, at a cost to these units of 15 killed and 45 wounded. The outstanding courage, skill, and devotion to duty displayed by the officers and men of the 3d Battalion and Companies A and B, 253d Infantry Regiment, reflected the highest credit on the United States Army. (General Order 10, Headquarters Seventh United States Army, 7 January 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, Seventh United States Army.)

3. The 26th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron is cited for outstanding performance of duty in the Philippine Islands on 22 March 1945. At that time, the Sixth Army, hammering at the fanatically resisting Yamashita line on Luzon, and fighting furiously near the town of Baguio and in the approaches to the Cagayan Valley, vitally needed photographs of enemy installations and escape routes. On 22 March 1945, when the Sixth Army ordered that 25 photographic missions be made to cover all key Japanese positions on Luzon, the 26th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron, in order to carry out this tremendous task, pressed all available pilots into service and dispatched 21 sorties, 19 of which were successful, despite difficult weather conditions. Forced at times to dive through obscuring clouds to photograph their targets, the pilots of the 26th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron covered Japanese positions in all parts of Luzon from Legaspi in the southern part of the island to Ipo Dam, to Baguio, and to the northernmost reaches of the Cagayan Valley. Meanwhile, personnel of the photographic laboratory processed over 2,000 negatives and the next day delivered to the Sixth Army over 9,000 urgently needed prints. Much of the credit for the success of the day's missions, which constituted a vital contribution to the effectiveness of the Sixth Army's operations against the Japanese on Luzon, must be given to the men of the ground crews, who despite a shortage of parts and equipment, prepared the airplanes for their hazardous flights. The courage and determination of the pilots of the 26th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron and the skill and tireless devotion to duty of the ground personnel are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army Air Forces. (General Orders 2217, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 29 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

4. The Headquarters Company, 105th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. At nightfall on 6 July 1944, the Headquarters Company, 105th Infantry Regiment, was performing its routine duties at the regimental command post in the vicinity of Tanapag, Saipan. The command post was located approximately 2,000 yards from the front. Shortly after 0430 the following morning, after sporadic attacks against our lines during the night, a force of several thousand Japanese boiled out of a deep canyon and, by an overwhelming preponderance of force, overran the first and second battalions. Fired with realization that this attack would be the last blow the Japanese could strike in the defense of Saipan, the enemy pressed the attack with fanatical ferocity. By 0630, this force, still powerful despite heavy casualties, attacked the regimental command post. Personnel of the Headquarters Company, 105th Infantry Regiment, mainly clerks, cooks, drivers, and other technicians, together with the other members of the regiment then in the vicinity of the command post, formed a defense line in fox holes and drainage ditches half filled with water and held that line unwaveringly against repeated attacks by screaming Japanese resigned to death and bent only on causing the maximum of American casualties before they themselves were killed. Headquarters Company line fought without cessation for 10 hours, holding its position and permitting no enemy elements to penetrate its lines. For the first 5 hours, Headquarters Company was the only obstacle between the Japanese force and vital installations farther to the south in the vicinity of Flores Point and Tanapag Harbor. By their determined and tenacious stand in the face of overwhelming enemy force, they gave the division commander time to move up reinforcements for the counterattack. When the counterattacking forces from the division reserve reached the right flank of its line, Headquarters Company took up the attack and, within their zone of action, drove the enemy back 500 yards before nightfall. By actual count, the number of enemy dead found in the zone of advance of the counterattacking force was 2,126. The greatest density of these dead was found in the zone of advance of the Headquarters Company, 105th Infantry Regiment. The offensive and defensive combat performance of all members of this headquarters unit was accomplished in the highest tradition of the United States Army. By standing off a vastly superior enemy force, the Headquarters Company, 105th Infantry Regiment, broke the back of the enemy's final attack and by counterattacking as a part of the division reserve contributed materially to bringing Japanese resistance to an end on Saipan Island. (General Orders 21, Headquarters 27th Infantry Division, 19 March 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, Middle Pacific.)

5. The 1881st Engineer Aviation Battalion is cited for extraordinary heroism on Leyte, Philippine Islands, from 22 October to 7 December 1944. The 1881st Engineer Aviation Battalion landed at Leyte, Philippine Islands, on 22 October 1944, and went to work immediately on the Tacloban airdrome, on which construction had just been started by an engineer construction battalion. From then until completion of the airdrome, these two units worked together with maximum efficiency and harmony. During the early phases, enemy air attacks were almost continuous and a large portion was directed at the airdrome. Before a usable strip was available, Navy carrier airplanes were forced to operate from it because of the loss and damage to our carriers in the battle of Leyte Gulf. Under these difficult and dangerous conditions, the 1881st Engineer Aviation Battalion worked with utmost energy and zeal, by concentrating every effort on the airdrome during the intervals between air attacks. The men stayed on the job during alerts until the enemy airplanes were almost overhead. Twelve percent casualties were suffered by the unit during this job. This airdrome was the first one available for land-based airplanes in the Philippines and, from the moment the minimum length of steel mat was laid, the air traffic was tremendous. Despite this heavy traffic and still frequent air attacks, the strip, dispersals, and other facilities were rapidly developed by the outstanding work and efficient planning of the 1881st Engineer Aviation Battalion. (General Orders 266, Headquarters Sixth United States Army, 27 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

VIII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Ralph Block, American civilian, performed exceptionally meritorious services as general representative, United States Office of War Information, India, and in other positions of importance from August 1943 to August 1945. Charged with informing the Indian people of Allied aims, with directing psychological warfare from India to southeast Asia, and with other complex operations in furtherance of United States policies, Mr. Block displayed sound judgment, cooperation, and tactful coordination with outstanding success.

Edward P. Brooks, American civilian, as assistant to the deputy in charge of the American War Production Mission in China from March through June, 1945, ably assisted in reconciling differences between Chinese Government-owned and private industry. He made pertinent recommendations to the China War Production Board on matters concerning munition production, industrial development, and civil economy. Mr. Brooks' constructive advice effected considerable improvements in China's wartime industry.

Doctor Hugh L. Dryden, American civilian, performed meritorious services with the Scientific Advisory Group in Europe from April to June 1945. Doctor Dryden made an outstanding contribution to the fund of knowledge of the Army Air Forces with his research and analysis of the developments and use of guided missiles by the enemy.

Sam D. Irwin, American civilian, performed meritorious services as technical observer and service specialist in support of the United States armed forces in the Africa-Middle East Theater from 1941 to March 1946. He organized and directed a corps of civilian technicians whose services to the Ninth Air Force and Air Transport Command contributed in a marked degree to the efficient service records of these commands. When air transport service was inaugurated on the Central and North African routes, the high standards of maintenance established by Mr. Irwin and his personnel made possible the transportation of enormous quantities of matériel and personnel with a minimum of engine failures and fatal accidents.

Andrew T. Kearney, American civilian, as deputy in charge of the American war production mission in China from March through June 1945, contributed materially to reconciling differences existing between Chinese Government-owned and private industry. He was of notable assistance to the China War Production Board on matters concerning munitions production, industrial development, and civil economy. Mr. Kearney's translation of policies and plans into vigorous action made available a greater proportion of China's indigenous resources to the war effort.

Alexander C. Kerr, American civilian, as director of the United Kingdom and Continent, War Shipping Administration, from June 1942 to June 1944, facilitated greatly preparations for invading Africa and France. He was a key figure in handling tremendous volumes of cargo for the African invasion, in perfecting shipping allocations for the attack, and later in converting captured shipping to Allied use. Finally, through his broad knowledge and experience, Mr. Kerr was of immense value in planning the successful invasion of the French beaches.

Robert O. Lewis, American civilian, rendered meritorious services as director of the American Red Cross in the India-Burma Theater from December 1943 to December 1945. He ably planned and directed the establishment of recreational facilities for our military forces in camps and hospitals from the deserts of Karachi through the jungles of Burma. Mr. Lewis' accomplishments, despite the vast distances, terrain, and climate, enhanced materially the comfort and welfare of American soldiers on the Asiatic Continent.

Carmel Offie, American civilian, while serving as foreign service officer, United States Department of State, with the Office of the United States Political Adviser, from March 1944 to April 1945, contributed valuable information and advice to the Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean, and the Commanding General, United States Army Forces. Mr. Offie's broad knowledge of political, economic, and social conditions in the Mediterranean region proved to be of outstanding value in planning the operations which culminated in the surrender of the German armies in Italy.

Doctor Frank L. Wattendorf, American civilian, performed meritorious services in Europe and Asia from April to June and October to November 1945, while engaged in research of enemy developments of jetpropulsion, which was a substantial contribution to the future program of the air forces.

IX. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—So much of section VI, WD General Orders 58, 1945, as pertains to Private Jack D. Peak, Medical Department, as reads "Private Jack D. Peak" and "October 1944 to January 1945" is amended to read "Technician Fifth Grade Jack D. Peak" and "June 1942 to January 1945." (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Technician Fifth Grade Peak, for services from 8 June 1942 to 14 October 1944, as published in General Orders 230, General Headquarters, United States Army Forces, Pacific, 5 October 1945.)

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Virginia Hall, an American civilian in the employ of the Special Operations Branch, Office of Strategic Services, entered voluntarily and served in enemy occupied France from March to September 1944. Despite the fact that she was well known to the Gestapo because of previous activities, she established and maintained radio communications with London headquarters, supplying valuable operational and intelligence information. With the help of a Jedburgh team, she organized, armed, and trained three battalions of French resistance forces in the Department of the Haute Loire. Working in a region infested with enemy troops and constantly hunted by the Gestapo, with utter disregard for her safety and continually at the risk of capture, torture, and death, she directed the resistance forces with extraordinary success in acts of sabotage and guerrilla warfare against enemy troops, installations, and communications. Miss Hall displayed rare courage, perseverance, and ingenuity. Her efforts contributed materially to the successful operations of the resistance forces in support of the Allied Expeditionary Forces in the liberation of France.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Fred G. Sherrill, O236194, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. September 1942 to October 1945. (So much of sec. II, General Orders 15, 1946, as pertains to the award of the Legion of Merit to Colonel Sherrill, for services from September 1942 to October 1945, is rescinded.)

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Addison D. Davis, O2651, United States Army. April 1941 to February 1946.

Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin P. Haynes, O300060, General Staff Corps (Infantry), Army of the United States. August 1942 to November 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles Z. Meyer, O203309, Ordnance Department, Army of the United States. March 1942 to December 1944.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following named officers:

Brigadier R. B. B. Cooke, British Army. 1 August 1943 to 31 March 1944.

Major General D. A. H. Graham, British Army. 9 September to 12 October 1943.

Brigadier General Georges V. A. Granier, French Army. October 1944 to February 1945.

Major General J. L. I. Hawkesworth, British Army. 9 September 1943 to 10 March 1944.

Lieutenant General Sydney Chevalier Kirkman, British Army, Commander British 13 Corps.

General Sir Bernard C. T. Paget, British Army. January 1944 to August 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942), and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Major Ronald Jack, Canadian Army. January 1942 to September 1945.

First Lieutenant Jean Le Borgne, French Forces of the Interior. 19 September 1944.

Air Vice Marshal Bernard McEntegart, Royal Air Force, January 1944 to March 1945.

Colonel Etienne Paul Louis Plan, French Army. October 1944 to February 1945.

Colonel Maharaj Rajendrasinhji, Indian Army. November 1942 to July 1943 and June 1945 to April 1946.

Commandant (major) Jean Victor Sarrat, French Army. 25 July to 23 September 1944.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Yves Hirsch-Ollendorf, French Army. August 1943 to September 1944.

Captain Francisco Valencia Rodriguez, Mexican Army. January 1943 to June 1945.

V. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Clinton B. Allsopp, as published in WD General Orders 64, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Clinton B. Ailsopp, O404906, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. August 1943 to May 1945.

VI. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for heroic achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Second Lieutenant Harold E. McComb, O77528, 452d Bombardment Group, Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism while on a mission over Germany on 6 February 1945. When the aircraft in which he was copilot encountered heavy antiaircraft fire, one of the first shells tore through the cockpit and severed his leg just below the knee. Lieutenant McComb applied a tourniquet to his leg and rendered invaluable assistance to the pilot in extinguishing dangerous engine and cockpit fires. He then took over the controls while the pilot performed other necessary duties, remaining there until he became unconscious. After crash landing, the entire crew was captured and Lieutenant McComb died a few hours later in a German hospital. His courage and devotion to duty, despite his mortal wounds, were of material assistance in saving the lives of his fellow crewmen.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individual:

General De Division Marcel Allard, French Army. 4 September 1944 to 15 January 1945.

Brigadier Bryon T. Godfrey-Faussett, British Army. September 1943 to March 1944.

Brigadier Harold Arthur Hounsell, British Army. July to December 1944.

Lieutenant Colonel Albert F. Moe, O4461 (then major), United States Marine Corps. April to August 1945.

Harrison D. Straub, American Red Cross. January to May 1945.

VIII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation read as follows:

1. Company C, 253d Infantry Regiment, 63d Infantry Division, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 3 to 5 March 1945 at the rock quarry northeast of Bubingen, Germany. This quarry, the dominant terrain feature in the area and the last main enemy defense before the Siegfried Line, with its sheer cliffs, maze of tunnels, piles of loose rock, and covered routes of approach which greatly favored the defenders, was assaulted at 1400 on 3 March 1945 by Company C in conjunction with an attack by the 1st Battalion, 255th Infantry, attacking on the left to secure the woods northeast of the quarry. While attempting to seize the northern end of the quarry, they were halted for 2 days and nights by concentrated enemy mortar and machine-gun fire and suffered tremendous losses. At the same time, two companies on their left had been unable to advance because of the overwhelming fire power directed at them from the northern end of the quarry. On the night of 4 March, reconnaissance patrols from Company C succeeded in locating some of the well-camouflaged machine-gun positions. Later that night, the company, with less than one-quarter of its original strength and the men exhausted by 2 days and nights of violent action, renewed the attack. With great valor, skill, and determination, the assault was pressed home and the final heights were carried. The extraordinary courage, fidelity, and tenacity of purpose in pressing the attack and capturing this vital enemy position reflect the highest credit on the officers and men of Company C, 253d Infantry Regiment, 63d Infantry Division, and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 78, Headquarters Seventh United States Army, 16 March 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, Headquarters Seventh United States Army.)

2. The 1st Battalion, 305th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in breaking the final organized resistance of the Japanese Army on 21-22 June 1945 at Hills 79 and 85, Okinawa, Ryukyus Islands. Hills 79 and 85 had been chosen by the Japanese as the ideal location for a final stand, because they were really one long, continuous ridge of hard, jagged coral interspersed with fissures 10 to 12 feet wide. Every one of these fissures contained Japanese automatic-weapon positions, which permitted them to rake the approaches to the Hills with a deadly cross-fire. Because of the proximity of friendly units on the right and left, it was virtually impossible to use artillery support in the attack. The first battalion, whose ranks had been decimated by bitter fighting throughout the Ryukyus campaign, was made up of replacements with no combat experience. Handicapped by this fact, as well as by a narrow frontage which afforded no maneuver room, the battalion, nevertheless, launched an attack at noon on 21 June. Following a devastating preparation by 81-mm mortars, M4 tanks, SP 75-mm guns, and heavy machine guns, Company A moved across the line of departure and advanced 200 yards in the face of enemy machine-gun and mortar fire. At this point, the company was forced to halt. Reorganization was effected and, despite the vicious enemy fire, Company A continued to push forward. As the advance continued, the enemy tried twice to counterattack in force, but was beaten back with heavy losses. When Company A reached the base of Hill 79, Company C passed through it and continued the attack. Every enemy position had to be reduced systematically by riflemen, but this was accomplished successfully with a minimum of casualties and Hill 79 was captured. On the following morning, the battalion once more attacked and successfully captured the portion of Hill 85 within their zone of action. Troops rushed at double time with fixed bayonets in an all-out, aggressive attack, which overwhelmed desperate enemy resistance and the final defenders were wiped out at 1600. During this whirlwind 28-hour action, 986 of the enemy were killed and 13 captured, compared to 4 killed and 62 wounded in the battalion. The battalion accomplished a tremendously difficult mission in 28 hours, which even the most optimistic high commanders had estimated would take 3 days. The unflinching courage and devotion to duty exhibited by every officer and man in the 1st Battalion, 305th Infantry Regiment, are worthy of the highest praise and are in keeping with the best traditions of the United States Army. (General Orders 45, Headquarters 77th Infantry Division, 28 January 1946, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

3. The 1st Fighter Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty against the enemy. On 30 August 1943, the 1st Fighter Group was assigned the vital mission as escort to two medium bombardment groups which were attacking the important Marshalling Yards at Aversa, Italy. Crossing the Italian coast, their formation of 44 aircraft was intercepted by approximately 75 highly aggressive and persistent enemy fighter aircraft. Alone and unaided, the 1st Fighter Group gallantly engaged this formidable hostile force, beating off wave after wave of enemy airplanes attempting to pierce the fighter defenses to attack and break up the bomber formation. Despite the overwhelming superiority in numbers of enemy fighters, demonstrating the greatest skill in escort duty, with superior flying skill, determination, and aggressiveness, these courageous pilots fought a brilliant defensive aerial battle, destroying 8, probably destroying 3, and damaging 3 enemy fighter aircraft, while our own losses totaled 13 missing. Through their highly effective fighter cover, the bomber formation was enabled to complete a highly successful bombing run unmolested, inflicting grave damage to vital installations, and return to base without loss of a single bomber. By the superior technical skill and devotion to duty exhibited by the ground personnel, whose tireless efforts made this vital mission possible, together with the conspicuous courage, fortitude, and aggressive combat spirit of the pilots, the 1st Fighter Group upheld the highest traditions of the military service, thereby reflecting great credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 2901, Headquarters Fifteenth Air Force, 27 August 1944.)

4. The 8th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Philippine Islands from 19 November to 15 December 1944. During this period, the 8th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron made a major contribution to the success of the Leyte campaign by providing air force units with necessary photographic coverage for both current and future operations and by carrying out high and low altitude photographic reconnaissance missions for the Sixth Army, then battling for possession of the island. Operating from Dulag airstrip, which was only 3,000 feet long and partly under water, the unarmed aircraft of the squadron, harassed by antiaircraft fire and subjected to aerial interception on many of their flights, covered targets ranging from the islands of the Visayan group to central Luzon and, in addition, accomplished low oblique photographic missions over areas of concentrated ground action on Leyte. From 19 November to 15 December, pilots of the squadron made a total of 120 sorties, and of the 49 missions accomplished between 26 November and 15 December, 40 were successful. During the period 27 November to 5 December, the number of sorties which had to be flown each day always exceeded the number of available aircraft, making it necessary for many pilots to fly two missions daily. Throughout these operations, maintenance crews and photographic laboratory personnel worked at peak efficiency. On 19 November, the first day of the squadron's operation on Leyte, the photographic laboratory turned out 12,800 prints, an unprecedented number in comparison with the normal day's production of 2,000. Maintenance personnel worked under constant threat of enemy air attack of sniper fire from the outskirts of the airfields, and carried out their tasks with outstanding success, despite the fact that 15 of the squadron's mechanics had been sent to help another organization. One of the chief difficulties which beset the squadron during this period was the fact that, because there was no parking space at the Dulag airdrome, every evening the aircraft had to be dispersed to Tacloban airstrip on another part of the island, and in flying their aircraft from one strip to another, the pilots of the squadron were harassed constantly by aggressive Japanese fighter aircraft from nearby islands. In providing such effective photographic coverage for our forces during so important a phase of the battle for the Philippines, both air and ground personnel of the 8th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron demonstrated courage, skill, and teamwork in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 2217, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 29 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

5. The 25th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron is cited for outstanding performance of duty on 9 August 1945. At that time, the 25th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron was operating in support of the Okinawa-based air offensive against the Japanese homeland by completing priority mapping over Kyushu Island, Japan, and carrying out daily photographic coverage of all enemy installations within a radius of 750 miles from the squadron's base. It was on 9 August 1945 that activities of the squadron reached a peak, in the successful completion of 14 long-range sorties in a single day. Flying single-place, unarmed F-5 aircraft without fighter escort, out of range of Allied air-sea rescue facilities, six pilots of the squadron reached Kyushu, despite enemy fighter opposition, and completed priority mapping and airdrome photography, while two others made the first photographic reconnaissance of Saichu Island, south of Korea. The remaining six F-5 aircraft of the squadron covered all enemy installations on southern Honshu and Shikoku Islands. In this one day, pilots of the squadron photographed 94 separate enemy targets, including airdromes, harbors, and towns, the majority of which, because of adverse weather and the extreme distance which had to be flown, had never before been covered by Far East Air Forces photographic reconnaissance. In order to obtain larger scale photographs to insure more accurate interpretation, these pilots made their target runs at dangerously low altitudes, which increased the possibility of enemy interception or damage by anti-aircraft fire. To enable the squadron to achieve maximum results, maintenance crews and operations personnel worked day and night, while photographic laboratory men, whose normal production was 2,000 prints a day, turned out 10,368 prints and completed the distribution of the prints the next day. The photographs which the squadron obtained were of inestimable intelligence value in the assessment of enemy strength and constituted a valuable contribution to the success of the air operations against the heart of the Japanese Empire. The achievements of the 25th Photographic Reconnaissance Squadron are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 2217, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 29 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

6. The 42d Bombardment Group (M) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 23 to 30 June 1945. During that week, the 42d Bombardment Group (M), operating in support of the Australian invasion of the Japanese oil refinery center of Balikpapan, Borneo, Netherlands East Indies, carried out bombing and strafing strikes against enemy shore defenses and other installations. Because each of these round trips, among the longest-range combat missions ever flown by mass formations of medium bombers, involved a flight of more than 1,700 miles over open sea, it was necessary to use radio compartment fuel tanks and to make premission experiments to determine the feasibility of loading the aircraft to such an extent. Taking off from a damaged runway, and encountering tropical weather fronts on four of the flights, the B-25 aircraft of the group braved intense and accurate anti-aircraft fire to reach heavily defended Balikpapan.

papan. Without the loss of a single crew member or airplane, making minimum altitude attacks, the group dropped over 460,000 pounds of napalm and demolition bombs, 91 percent of which fell within the target area, and expended 415,000 rounds of ammunition in strafing. Crews of the 42d Bombardment Group (M) destroyed gun positions, warehouses, road blocks, fuel and ammunition dumps, a radar station, numerous vehicles, and 73 military buildings, as well as huge stores of gasoline and oil, which the enemy had placed strategically so as to be released into shallow pits on the beach and ignited when the Australian ground troops should make their assaults. Flying down the invasion beach under intense enemy fire, the B-25 aircraft of the group achieved such perfect timing and coordination in giving support to underwater naval demolition teams that not one man of the team was lost. So effectively did the group smash Japanese defenses at Balikpapan that the enemy was totally unable to contest any of the landings and the Australian 7th Division came ashore on an undefended beach. Credit for the success of the achievements of the group in this week of intense and dangerous operations is due not only to the bomber crews but also to operations, intelligence, and maintenance personnel, who spent long hours planning the missions and preparing the servicing the aircraft, despite inadequate facilities with which to work. In making such a significant contribution to the success of the Allied invasion and seizure of Borneo, one of the most strategically important islands in the enemy-held Netherlands East Indies, the 42d Bombardment Group (M) brought new honor to the United States Army Air Forces. (General Orders 2217, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 29 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

7. The 354th Bombardment Group (M) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action on 28 April 1945. When reconnaissance revealed the presence of a large number of Japanese ships dispersed along the river at Saigon, French Indo-China, as well as large storage depots, warehouses, and barracks in the vicinity, the 345th Bombardment Group (M) was ordered to carry out the first low-level attacks to be made on Saigon. Setting out from the advanced base of Puerto Princessa, Palawan, in the Philippine Islands, two squadrons of eight bombers each were dispatched on the mission. Although they could not contact the fighter cover that was to have been provided, and although three of the bombers were forced to return to their base because of mechanical trouble, the B-25 crews continued to the target. Several miles out from their objective, they encountered heavy barrages of antiaircraft fire, forcing them to use evasive tactics, which reduced the speed so necessary to the success of their attacks. Flying over flat terrain, which made it impossible to achieve surprise or avoid antiaircraft fire, one of the B-25 aircraft was hit and crashed on the edge of the target area, while two others were shot down by antiaircraft fire and interception during the target run. Despite the fact that all airplanes were damaged, the crews of the group demonstrated remarkable bombing accuracy in attacking the ships which were anchored in a narrow, winding river. Besides sinking a 500-ton freighter, a 2,300-ton freighter-transport, a 2,800-ton freighter, a 250-ton tanker, a 200-ton freighter, and a 2,900-ton troop transport, they damaged four other vessels totalling 3,000 tons, bombed and destroyed several warehouses and strafed and set afire oil storage tanks and barracks in the wharf area. Credit for the success of this mission, which severely depleted enemy shipping strength in the Saigon area, must go not only to the air crews, who fought their way so gallantly through heavy enemy opposition to make their attacks, but also to the personnel of the ground echelon, who worked long and hard hours to prepare the bombers for their mission. The achievements of the 345th Bombardment Group (M) on this occasion are in keeping with the highest tradition of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 2217, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 29 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

IX. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel John E. Gordon, O835035, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, while serving as chief of preventive medicine in the office of the Chief Surgeon, European Theater, of Operations, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in the control of epidemic typhus in the American occupied region of Germany from 19 May to 7 July 1945. His intelligent supervision of modern control methods checked the spread of typhus in the inner Reich, protected the advancing American forces, and prevented the dissemination of typhus with the return of repatriates into France. Colonel Gordon contributed substantially to an achievement which ranks as one of the greatest accomplishments of modern military preventive medicine.

X. AIR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of section XIII, WD General Orders 60, 1945, as pertains to Staff Sergeant Archie F. Aten, Air Corps, as reads "Air Medal was awarded" is amended to read "eighth bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster was awarded."

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Brigadier General John S. Allard, O199730, Army of United States. June 1944 to January 1945.

II. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel John P. Edmonson, O197276, Air Corps, Army of the United States. January 1943 to May 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Colonel Edmonson, for services from January 1943 to May 1945, as published in General Orders 23, Headquarters 8th Fighter Command, 27 August 1945.)

Colonel Oscar J. Gatchell, O3357, Ordnance Department, United States Army. January 1942 to August 1945.

Colonel Parry W. Lewis, O8640, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. September 1943 to June 1944.

Brigadier General James D. McIntyre, O7466, United States Army. September 1944 to April 1946.

Colonel William E. Morrison, O2237, Infantry, United States Army. January 1942 to August 1945.

Brigadier General Eugen G. Reinartz, O8529 (then colonel), United States Army. September 1941 to January 1946.

Lieutenant Colonel Delmer J. Rogers, O21740, General Staff Corps (Air Corps), United States Army. July 1944 to March 1946.

Brigadier General Edward M. Shinkle, O1341, United States Army. 8 January to 1 June 1942.

Colonel Thomas D. Stamps, O8560, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. January 1942 to August 1945.

Brigadier General Frederick S. Strong, Jr., O414433, Army of the United States. May to November 1945.

Colonel Horace M. Wade, O22592, General Staff Corps, United States Army. July 1944 to March 1946.

Colonel Charles W. West, O12774, Judge Advocate General's Department, United States Army. September 1943 to August 1945.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October, 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Major General Ernest C. Gepp, British Army. August 1943 to May 1945.
- Lieutenant General B. G. Horrocks, C. B., D. S. O., M. C., British Army. 10 November to 12 December 1944.
- Major General Howard Karl Kippenberger, D. S. O. and B. A. R., E. D., Second New Zealand Expeditionary Force. 1940 to 6 March 1944.
- Major General Charles Luguet, French Air Force. May 1942 to August 1945.
- General de Brigade Francois Henri Masnou, French Army. November 1944 to May 1945.
- Brigadier Eric Edward Mockler-Ferryman, British Army. December 1943 to August 1944.
- General Miguel J. Neira, Colombian Army. 1943 to 1945.
- Admiral Sir Dudley North, British Royal Navy. April to September 1944.
- Major General Jacinto Rios-Ochoa, Chilean Army. April 1942 to July 1945.
- General Leopoldo Piedrahita, Colombian Army. 1944 to 1945.
- Lieutenant General Jules Pire, Belgian Army. As a member of the Belgian Secret Army.
- Major General Maurice A. Pope, Canadian Army. April 1941 to October 1945.

2. By Direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260. 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Lieutenant Colonel W. E. Almond (then major), British Army. July to December 1943.
- Captain Jonkheer Willem Boreel, Royal Netherlands Navy. July 1943 to March 1945.
- Colonel Ernesto Buenaventura, Colombian Army. 1942 to January 1944.
- Colonel Pierre Auguste Charles Conze, French Army. November 1944 to May 1945.
- Colonel Jean A. Crespin, French Army. August 1944 to January 1945.
- Brigadier Norman Crockatt, Deputy Director, Military Intelligence, British Army. April 1942 to September 1945.
- General de Brigade André Marie Martial D'Anselme, French Army. November 1944 to May 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Jean Darrasse, French Army. April to October 1945.
- Colonel Jean Ursin Maximilien Marie Le Selier De Chezelles, French Army. November 1944 to May 1945.
- Wing Commander Norman H. Dimmock, Royal Air Force. 26 June 1942 to 1 November 1944.
- General de Brigade Paul Henri Dumas, French Army. August 1944 to May 1945.
- Colonel André Antoine Franchi, French Army. November 1944 to May 1945.

IV. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man and individual:

- Private Charles E. Hempsey, Jr. (Army serial No. 12066205), Infantry, Army of the United States. April 1945.
- Gerard Petron*, French civilian. 18 to 29 August 1944.

- Lieutenant Colonel Louis D. Barnes, O171887, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered heroic services on 14-15 December 1944 while held captive by the Japanese. When the ship aboard which he was confined was attacked and beached at Olongapo Harbor, Subic Bay, Philippine Islands, Colonel Barnes ignored his own safety to rescue fellow prisoners of war caught beneath fallen beams and menaced by advancing flames.

V. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers, enlisted man, and individuals:

- Captain William Applebaum, O26924, United States Marine Corps Reserve. April to November 1944.
- Leroy A. Brothers*, American civilian. 13 April to 1 September 1945.
- First Lieutenant Luther C. Cox, O789234, Air Corps, Army of the United States. September 1943 to April 1945.
- Colonel Arne D. Dahl, Royal Norwegian Army. April 1942 to May 1945.
- General de Brigade Paul Arsene Gerard Devinck, French Army. November 1944 to February 1945.
- Major General D. P. Dickinson, British Army. July 1943 to July 1944.
- Colonel Alfred Leon Jacobson, French Army. November 1944 to May 1945.
- Johan Koershuis*, Dutch civilian. 25 October to 25 November 1944.
- Group Captain D. C. R. MacDonald, Royal Air Force. December 1944 to May 1945.
- Intendant General First Class F. Monginoux, French Army. 21 December 1943 to 10 June 1944.

Flight Sergeant Ernest Payne, Royal Air Force. December 1943 to October 1944.

Max Wait, American civilian. December 1941 to February 1942.

Private First Class Charles R. Langridge (Army serial No. 36978601), Company G, 274th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed heroic conduct in action at Stiring Wendel, France, on 4 March 1945. During a company attack, the supporting fire of the machine gun section was halted, because of a scarcity of ammunition, when he volunteered to secure a new supply. Private Langridge crawled successfully several hundred yards within sight of the enemy under intense mortar and artillery fire and returned courageously with ammunition which enabled his section to resume its mission.

VI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 3d Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding gallantry and extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy at Maffin Bay, Dutch New Guinea, during the period 21 to 25 June 1944. On 21 June 1944, the 3d Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, began the attack to secure Lone Tree Hill. The objective was a precipitous hill composed entirely of coral rock, pitted with numerous caves offering natural defensive positions, covered with dense tropical jungle, and commanding friendly installations and communications in the Maffin Bay area. After a short advance under withering rifle, automatic-weapons, mortar, and artillery fire from the enemy's cleverly concealed and well-prepared positions, the battalion was halted and dug in for the night. For the next 3 days, the 3d Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, launched repeated assaults in a step-by-step advance toward the crest of Lone Tree Hill, which could only be reached by climbing steep slopes and precipitous cliffs offering little cover. The enemy, from his well-developed emplacements in caves and crevices, defended to the death and launched repeated and savage counter-attacks, both day and night. At times, fierce hand-to-hand fighting occurred in which the men of the battalion fought with bayonet and trench knives to hold their ground. Resupply of ammunition, water, rations, and plasma and evacuation were accomplished by reinforced carrying parties, who fought their way through despite heavy enemy fire from above and from flank positions which completely covered the supply line. Despite the exhaustion of 3 days and nights of constant fighting, with limited rations, water, and medical supplies, and in almost constant rain, a final assault was made at dawn 24 June 1944, which won Lone Tree Hill and held it against a last banzai attack that night. During the action, the 3d Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, lost 73 men killed and 181 wounded. Over 900 dead Japs were counted in the area after the battle. The battalion, by its distinguished performance of duty, captured a terrain feature of great tactical importance and overcame a fanatically determined and strongly entrenched enemy. The gallantry, tenacity, and undying spirit to close with and destroy the enemy displayed by all officers and men of the 3d Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, during this engagement, are in the highest traditions of the American soldier and reflect great honor on the Army of the United States. (General Orders 235, Headquarters 6th Infantry Division, 23 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

VII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Doctor Samuel A. Goudsmit, while acting as scientific chief of a special mission in Europe from May 1944 to December 1945, rendered meritorious services to the United States and Great Britain. Doctor Goudsmit's efforts and skilful collection of needed information personally leading or directing scientific teams to their targets, frequently under enemy fire, were important factors in the outstanding success of this mission. His ability, courage, intelligent planning, and devotion to duty contributed much to the furtherance of the war effort.

David Mayer, civilian operational analyst, affiliated with Headquarters Army Air Forces, India-Burma Theater, performed meritorious services from July 1944 to May 1945. During the difficult period when the Allies were assuming the offensive in the Burma campaign, Mr. Mayer worked long hours and gave freely of his knowledge in connection with operational analysis. Problems of operations and material were analyzed and solutions reached. The assistance Mr. Mayer gave to units of this command reflects great credit on himself and the Army of the United States.

Doctor Robert L. Stearns, as chief, Operations Analysis Section, Thirteenth Air Force, South Pacific Theater, performed meritorious services from October 1943 to April 1944. He supervised the analysis of "blind" bombing and other radar developments, developed new standards for bomb types and fuzings, and performed continuous accuracy surveys. This work increased materially the effectiveness of the air forces in the Pacific and reflects great credit on Doctor Stearns.

Mrs. Tamarath K. Yolles, American civilian, as an Army Medical Department parasitologist, performed meritorious services from 14 June to 1 August 1943. Having full knowledge that facilities and climatic conditions in French Guiana were detrimental to health, she volunteered for and conducted a malarial survey in that area, with the result that she acquired the disease. On the basis of Mrs. Yolles' thorough and efficient observations, procedures for the control of malaria in that area were made more effective.

VIII. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer.

Major William T. Hawley, O885063, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in the control of epidemic typhus fever in the American occupied regions of the Rhineland and western Germany from 1 February to 1 April 1945. As an organizer and director of case-finding teams, as a vigorous supervisor of the operations of the "cordon sanitaire" along the Rhine, and as an inspiring trainer of personnel, Major Hawley devoted untiring energy and expert knowledge to the extensive control measures which effectively checked outbreaks of typhus and protected the health of troops.

IX. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section III, WD General Orders 110, 1945, as pertains to Colonel Joel F. Watson, United States Army, as reads "September 1942 to July 1945" is amended to read "December 1941 to July 1945."

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, 39th Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Special Troops, First Army, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial.

[AG 250.401 (6 Apr 46)]

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Joseph V. Hodgson, O475398, Judge Advocate General's Department, Army of the United States. May 1944 to April 1946.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Major General Sir Donald Banks, British Army Director General, Petroleum Warfare Department, Ministry of Fuel and Power. March 1943 to November 1944.

Major General Alan Colquhoun Duff, British Army. January to September 1945.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, awarded by the War Department to Colonel John N. V. Duncan, as published in WD General Orders 40, 1946, a second Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel John N. V. Duncan, Royal Engineers, British Army. December 1944 to May 1945.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General Vincent J. Esposito, as published in WD General Orders 97, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Vincent J. Esposito, O16053, United States Army. June 1945 to March 1946.

V. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bull. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individuals:

General of Division Umberto Cappa, Italian Air Force. 9 September 1943 to 5 June 1944.

Divisional Admiral Emilio Ferreri, Italian Navy. 9 September 1943 to 5 June 1944.

David E. Mitchell, American Red Cross. July 1944 to May 1945.

Doctor Lauriston S. Taylor, American civilian. June 1943 to May 1945.

VI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 2d Battalion, 254th Infantry Regiment, 63d Infantry Division, is cited for outstanding performance of duty during the period 25 to 29 January 1945, in capturing the heavily fortified and defended stronghold of Jepsheim, France, in the Colmar Pocket. Attacking in subzero weather through fierce winds and deep, numbing snow, the 2d Battalion met stalwart, determined resistance from machine guns in pillboxes, small-arms fire, and heavy artillery fire. It was apparent that the Germans were stubbornly determined to hold this last stronghold in the Colmar Pocket, the key city of their well-planned defensive arc. The men of the 2d Battalion fought their way to the Blind River and waded the icy, swift-flowing stream under a devastating barrage. Slowly and grimly the men advanced, though suffering heavy casualties in the intense fire coming from three directions, took the concrete bunkers with the aid of tank destroyers, and eliminated the resistance before the town which had previously turned back entire regiments. Penetrating the flaming town, the men fought bitterly against the desperate and determined defender, neither giving nor asking quarter. In 2 days of house-to-house, floor-to-floor, and room-to-room fighting, the town was lost and regained three times. While enemy 88-mm guns from the woods to the east poured fire on the unit, the exhausted and frozen men fought violently to gain the last portion of the city still held by the enemy. So fierce and determined was their attack that the enemy marched out of their strongpoints and surrendered. The fierceness of their resistance lends credence to their statements that Jepsheim was being used as a corps headquarters. With the fall of Jepsheim to the 2d Battalion, 254th Infantry Regiment, the hub of German resistance in the strong Colmar Pocket was broken and another vital portion of France was liberated. The indomitable courage, fortitude, determination, and zeal of the men of the 2d Battalion, 255th Infantry Regiment, 63d Infantry Division, are a shining example to their fellow countrymen and reflect the highest credit on them and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 83, Headquarters United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main), 25 March 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

VII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Doctor Joseph Stokes, Jr., American civilian, rendered meritorious services in the Mediterranean and European Theaters of Operations from October to December 1944, as director of the Commission on Measles and Mumps, Army Epidemiological Board. Possessing a broad knowledge of the scourge to combat troops—jaundice—he ably undertook the application of certain immunizations at a time when it was becoming a serious hazard to the health of our soldiers, with consequent obstacle to operations. Doctor Stokes' experiments and their application in this field contributed materially to the success of the military operations of these theaters.

VIII. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. 11, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted men and individual:

Technician Third Grade Julius Dorkowitz (Army serial No. 32216508), Medical Department, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission at Cairo, Egypt, from December 1943 to July 1945. His expert performance of serological tests assured reliability of results and made possible extensive diagnostic surveys. In experimental investigations on both epidemic typhus and scrub typhus, Technician Dorkowitz participated in a manner which contributed to knowledge.

Technician Third Grade Robert A. Goldwasser (Army serial No. 10675203), Medical Department, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission at Cairo, Egypt, from December 1943 to July 1945. Through exercise of initiative and by application of his skill as an entomologist, he carried out studies which contributed new and important knowledge concerning the transmission of typhus fever. Technician Goldwasser's expert assistance in making surveys and training personnel advanced the Commission's typhus control program.

Technician Fifth Grade David L. Hogan (Army-serial No. 18086955), Medical Department, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission at Cairo, Egypt, from December 1943 to May 1945. Through his technical skill and devotion to investigation beyond the limits of routine duty, Technician Hogan contributed to the acquisition of new experimental knowledge of scrub typhus infection in gerbilles and of biochemical changes in typhus fever.

Doctor William L. Jellison, sanitarian, United States Public Health Service, while serving with the United States of America Typhus Commission in Assam and Burma, from 5 June to 25 November 1945, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in the investigation of scrub typhus fever. Applying his expert knowledge to problems of reservoirs and vectors of the infection, he provided much of the evidence which eliminated certain mites as vectors, gave a true evaluation of the rodent reservoir, and assisted in proving that trombicula deliensis was the only vector of the disease in the region of the epidemic of scrub typhus among troops along the Stillwell Road in the summer of 1945. Doctor Jellison's knowledge and experience were invaluable to the Commission and his work greatly advanced the understanding of the epidemiology of scrub typhus.

Technician Fourth Grade Robert E. Stearman (Army Serial No. 38003693), Medical Department, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission at Cairo, Egypt, from February 1943 to July 1945. As an original member of the clinical technical staff, he performed many skilled services. With no concern for the hazard involved, he worked constantly and energetically to advance the scientific researches and operations of the Commission's ward and laboratory. Technician Stearman set a fine example and reflected great credit on himself and the Commission.

Technician Third Grade Lucky D. Stephens (Army Serial No. 18102818), Medical Department, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission at Cairo, Egypt, from April 1943 to July 1945. By enthusiastic devotion to the operation of the Commission's ward at the Fever Hospital and by technical skill and originality, he contributed direct to study of typhus fever and to increase in knowledge of the nature and treatment of the disease. Personal risk of infection did not deter him from sustained effort. A leader among his associates, Technician Stephens advanced the program of the Commission.

IX. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section V, WD General Orders, 24, 1946, as pertains to Major Leslie C. Hollis, British Army, as reads "British Army" is amended to read "Royal Marines."

X. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—So much of section VIII, WD General Orders 35, 1946, as pertains to Doctor Joseph Stokes, Jr., American civilian, is rescinded (see sec. VII. above).

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Col. Jean De Milleret, French Army, Army Detachment of the Atlantic, commanding the Medoc Brigade in the successful operation on the Pointe De Grave, from 14 to 19 April 1945, continually inspired his most advanced elements by his utter disregard for danger in densely mined areas under heavy enemy artillery, mortar, and small-arms fire. On 19 April, under direct and intense fire, Colonel De Milleret personally placed the French flag on top of the Verdon lighthouse, inspiring his troops by this typically French gesture to the final effort which broke the German resistance on the Pointe De Grave.

Colonel Louis J. Dio, French Army, Commanding Officer, Combat Command D, 2d French Armored Division set an example of outstanding courage and exceptional military qualities while heroically leading his forces in France. After directing his command with unusual ability in Normandy, where, despite serious opposition, he overcame the enemy forces defending Alencon, he directed his troops with great spirit during the capture of Carrouges, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. Through keenly aggressive action, Colonel Dio was responsible for the destruction of about 800 enemy vehicles of all kinds and the death or capture of a large number of Germans.

Colonel Frederic Donnet, French Army, Army Detachment of the Atlantic, on 15, 18, and 30 April 1945, as Chief Engineer, by his outstanding professional knowledge and extraordinary courage contributed to the conquest of the German redoubts of Royan, Grave, and Oleron. Under direct and heavy fire, he personally led the mine clearing parties which made possible the successive capture of these strong German fortifications by tanks and infantry. Colonel Donnet's prodigious personal vigor and the heroic example he set the troops reflect the highest traditions of the French Army.

Colonel Pierre Fourcaud, French Army. February to June 1944.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Ivan L. Farman, O17922, United States Army. November 1943 to September 1945.

Brigadier General Raymond F. Fowler, O2832, United States Army. July 1944 to March 1946.

Major General Clarence A. Martin, O7007, United States Army. September 1944 to August 1945.

Colonel Telford Taylor, O918566 (then lieutenant colonel), General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. October 1942 to May 1945.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded to Major General Russel B. Reynolds, as published in WD General Orders 46, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Russel B. Reynolds, O8368, United States Army. June 1945 to February 1946.

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individuals:

Monsieur Georges Allaert, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Organisation Militaire Belge de Resistance. He was one of its founders. In March 1944, he was appointed national commander by the headquarters staff of the movement. Demonstrating great courage, he directed the dissemination of clandestine papers and information and, at great personal risk, organized shelter for Belgian patriots hunted by the enemy. The movement Monsieur Allaert led resisted enemy occupation most determinedly and by every possible means and was successful in assisting Allied personnel to reach the safety of Allied territory.

Monsieur Raoul Baligand, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Belgian Resistance Movement. As a member of the Belgian "Partisans," he took part in numerous operations against the enemy between the early part of 1941 and the liberation of his country in 1944. He was responsible for organizing and leading the operations which the "Partisans" undertook with regard to liberating the provinces of Liege and Luxembourg. Monsieur Baligand played a very active role in the liberation of the town of Liege and conducted himself with conspicuous courage and gallantry.

Monsieur Vital Bosschaerts, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Witte Brigade "Fidelio" of the Belgian Resistance Movement. He took command of the Witte Brigade after the arrest of the original leader of the movement. At the sacrifice of his professional career and with great risk to his personal safety, he assumed the heavy task of coordinating resistance in the Province of Antwerp. Monsieur Bosschaerts organized and directed the activities of the Witte Brigade, which distinguished itself in operations against enemy forces in the northern half of Belgium.

Monsieur Pierre Charles Jean Joseph Clerdent, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Armée de la Liberation. As one of the founders of this organization in October 1940, he was largely responsible for raising the many thousands of patriots who carried out all forms of resistance against the Germans. Monsieur Clerdent took over command in July 1942, and his outstanding ability and courage were the foundation of its success. In the final days of the occupation, fighting units were formed which played a very material part in operations against the enemy in the region of Liege.

Colonel Jean A. Crespin, commanding Divisional Artillery, French 2d Armored Division, demonstrated outstanding ability and gallantry in action in France. On 15 April 1945, during the conquest of the Royan Pocket, he played an essential part in the lateral artillery movement on the Seudre front. He moved and reorganized his forces under extremely heavy fire, shifting material indispensable to future attacks against the enemy, and setting up difficult deployments during the night. Colonel Crespin contributed materially to the complete success achieved the following day.

Monsieur Albert de Beuckelaer, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of Group G of the Belgian Resistance Movement. He was given the task of organizing the distribution throughout Belgium of material used for special operations. He was arrested on two occasions by the Gestapo, but each time returned to his duties, which he carried out to the end of the campaign with the utmost resource and courage. Undoubtedly, Monsieur de Beuckelaer was one of the most important elements on the headquarters staff of this group.

Monsieur Raymond Defenseca, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Resistance Movement National Belge. He was the first national delegate of the Movement National Belge and was entirely responsible for this organization until his arrest in February 1944. He was imprisoned under the worst possible conditions, but despite undergoing all the tortures which the enemy could conceive, Monsieur Defenseca stubbornly refused to divulge any of the secrets of the Movement National Belge and thus enabled the organization to carry on its offensive against the enemy.

General de Brigade Paul de Langlade gallantly commanded the South Axis Armored Groupment, Army Detachment of the Atlantic, in action in France. He landed in Normandy with a tactical groupment from the famous French 2d Armored Division and led it through Argentan, Paris, Dompierre, and Strasbourg. He added new honor to his already distinguished career when he directed his armored groupment on the southern Axis during the operations against Royan. On the evening of 15 April 1945, when some of his elements met powerful enemy resistance at Fontbedeu, he placed himself at their head under heavy fire in an attempt to break through the German defenses. By his courageous example, General de Langlade inspired his troops in the decisive assault which led to the final collapse of enemy resistance in the Royan Pocket.

Lieutenant Jean Del Marmol, Belgian Army, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Belgian Secret Army. He was a pioneer in the Belgian Secret Army and an officer of the headquarters staff from the early days of occupation until the time when he took up a command in the field and led his men against the enemy. He participated in the fighting in the Antwerp area.

where he showed great personal courage and devotion to duty. Lieutenant Del Marmol was largely responsible for coordinating the action of the Belgian Secret Army with that of the civilian resistance groups and thus insured an intelligent unity of effort.

Monsieur Fernand Demany, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Front de l'Indépendance et Liberation de Belgique. Until September 1944, he was national secretary. He became editor of the "Front," a clandestine journal, and was one of the authors of the pseudo "Soir," which was distributed all over Brussels on the evening of 9 November 1943, just before the real enemy-controlled "Soir" was due to appear. This extraordinary feat, ridiculing the Germans, provided the population of Brussels with one of its best examples of resistance and was an important factor in sustaining morale during the occupation. Monsieur Demany carried out his activities with total disregard for his own safety.

Monsieur Georges Gerard, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of Group NOLA of the Belgian Resistance Movement. He organized this group and led it after 1942. Although it numbered only a few hundred, it carried out successfully a large number of operations. Monsieur Gerard, at great personal risk, took part in these activities and his organizing ability and devotion to duty insured their full success.

Colonel Georges Jean Guillebaud, French Army, 23d Infantry Division, Army Detachment of the Atlantic, assigned as deputy to the Medoc Brigade at the beginning of operation "Independence" on 17 and 18 May 1945, distinguished himself repeatedly by his courage and devotion to duty. While personally leading elements of the brigade in attacks south of Soudac on 17 May, and in the Verdôm area on 18 May, Colonel Guillebaud set a superb example for the troops under him by his disregard for danger while under heavy enemy fire.

Monsieur Robert Leclercq, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of Group G of the Belgian Resistance Movement. He was one of its pioneers. As head of its intelligence service, he took over the leadership of this organization in March 1944, after the original chief and his principal lieutenants had been arrested by the Germans. Despite the fact that the enemy had precise information as to his description and was determined to eliminate him, Monsieur Leclercq carried out his task with complete disregard for danger. He never spared himself. His energy, determination, and qualities of leadership were largely responsible for the success of this group.

Captain Maurice Quinet, Belgian Army, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Belgian Resistance Movement. In August 1942, this officer attempted to escape to England, but was arrested and imprisoned by the Gestapo. In January 1943, he escaped, but was again arrested in March because of his attempt to arrange for the escape of three Belgian aviators. He was liberated in July 1943, when he became a member of the "F. I. L." and took command of "Milices Patriotiques." Captain Quinet's energy, devotion to duty, and great personal courage welded this organization into a highly effective body, which played a big part in operations against the enemy.

Lieutenant Urbain Reniers, Belgian Army, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Belgian Secret Army. While chief of the Belgian Secret Army in the Antwerp sector, he prepared the detailed plans for "counter-scorching" in this port. His leadership was accepted by all the Belgian civilian resistance groups in this sector, and his brilliant direction played a big part in insuring that the port was intact upon arrival of the Allies. The forces under Lieutenant Reniers' command contributed materially to the subsequent protection of the port and to the clearing up of German resistance, particularly in Merxem.

Monsieur Raymond Scheyven, Belgian civilian, served with gallantry in action as a member of the Belgian Resistance Movement. He was the head of the organization which obtained and distributed secret funds throughout Belgium, not only to resistance groups, but also to the families of workmen who, in order to evade service in Germany, took to the Maquis. Although a young man, his powers of leadership and organizing ability were exceptional. With complete disregard for his own safety, Monsieur Scheyven provided the means with which resistance, active and passive, was maintained.

Colonel Gabriel Jean Ythier, 101st Engineer Regiment, French Army, distinguished himself with gallantry in action on 31 March and 2 May 1945 in France during the assault crossings of the Rhine near Germersheim. Through his energy, leadership, bravery, and constant appearance at the scene of the most bitter fighting, he was able to communicate, exceptionally high morale to his troops and bring about success in the face of an enemy firmly entrenched in casemates. Later, having worked furiously for 2 days against great odds, Colonel Ythier succeeded in directing the construction of the first French bridge across the Rhine at Speyer, Germany, thus speeding the final drive against the enemy.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following named officers:

Colonel Boyd W. Bartlett, O27891, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. August 1943 to August 1945.

Colonel Harris Jones, O5222, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. January 1942 to August 1945.

Colonel Donald M. Keith, O33358, Judge Advocate General's Department, Army of the United States. October 1943 to April 1946.

Colonel Raymond J. Kelly, O140223, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. November 1942 to December 1945.

Colonel James C. Kimbrough, O6280, Medical Corps, United States Army. April to December 1945.

Colonel Lawrence C. Leonard, O14906, Ordnance Department, United States Army. January 1942 to August 1945.

Brigadier General Charles K. Nulsen, O2395, United States Army. December 1941 to February 1946.

Brigadier General Haig Shekerjian, O3089, United States Army. July 1943 to March 1944 and July 1944 to August 1945.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel David H. Baker, as published in General Orders 6, European Theater, 18 January 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July

Colonel David H. Baker, O18120, Air Corps, United States Army. October 1943 to May 1945.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Clyde H. Morgan, as published in WD General Orders 60, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Clyde H. Morgan, O8587, Ordnance Department, United States Army. September 1944 to December 1945.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Godwin Ordway, Jr., as published in General Orders 198, United States Army Forces, European Theater, 21 August 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Godwin Ordway, Jr., O16208, General Staff Corps, United States Army. January 1942 to April 1944.

VII. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant William B. Giandoni, O734522, Air Corps, Army of the United States, 15 January 1944 to 15 September 1945.

VIII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The March Regiment of the Foreign Legion, French Army, is cited for outstanding performance of duty against the enemy from November 1944 to May 1945. Within the first few days after the regiment's commitment to battle, all of its battalion commanders had been wounded in the course of carrying out their assigned mission of protecting the tanks and neutralizing pockets of resistance as divisional infantry for the French 5th Armored Division. With personnel accompanying the armor on foot or in half-tracks, and sometimes mounted on the tanks, the unit was constantly exposed to violent danger. Having each of its battalions assigned to a combat command, the regiment was engaged over wide areas of France, Germany, and into Austria. The 1st Battalion fought all the way from Montreux-Chateau, France, to the Arlberg Pass, and in the course of its operations, its two commanding officers were successively wounded.

The 2d Battalion, under three commanding officers, one of whom was killed in action, and the other two wounded, was almost continually engaged from Descendants, France, to Wangen and Lindau, Germany. The 3d Battalion, under two commanders, the first of whom was wounded in battle, was in combat from Chagney, France; to Hohenweiller, Austria. On 7 February 1945, the regimental commander died. Tired and worn out by the hardships of the campaign, he refused to leave his troops until ordered categorically by his superiors, but it was too late when finally he yielded. The same record of devoted heroism and sacrifice persisted throughout the command. From 15 November 1944 until the close of the European campaign on 8 May 1945, 27 officers, 81 noncommissioned officers, and 390 legionnaires gave their lives, and 1,278, of whom 36 were officers, were wounded, making a total of casualties of 63 officers and 1,713 legionnaires from among fewer than 2,000 combat troops. In its bitter and bloody march toward Allied victory, its leaders and men have shown themselves united in the same disregard of danger, knowing only the satisfaction of a well-accomplished mission. The March Regiment of the Foreign Legion, French Army, has justified fully the Foreign Legion's traditional reputation for unflinching bravery and given new meaning to the device inscribed upon its pennon: "Honor and Faith."

IX. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Claude G. Bowers, American civilian, performed outstanding services from December 1941 to September 1945 as Ambassador to Chile. By his active support to various United States Army missions to Chile, Mr. Bowers helped present a true picture of his country's military doctrine and contributed to a stronger and better coordinated hemispheric defense.

Robert T. Cole, American civilian. August 1943 to October 1944.

Allan Dulles, American civilian. February to May 1945.

George L. Howe, American civilian. March 1944 to May 1945.

X. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December, 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Walter L. Tatum, O218605, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, performed exceptionally meritorious services in forwarding the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the European Theater from August 1944 to June 1945. As chief of Civil Affairs Branch, Operations Division, Office of the Chief Surgeon, Colonel Tatum supervised the distribution of antityphus supplies to both civil and military authorities. His conscientious work in controlling typhus fever among civilians and displaced persons was of extreme importance to the health of the armed forces and was of material aid in the swift victory won by them.

XI. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Doctor James Craigie, research member, Connaught Laboratories, University of Toronto, Canada, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in improving typhus vaccine from January 1942 to December 1945. The ether-extraction method developed by Doctor Craigie in 1942 greatly increased the immunizing potency of typhus vaccine used for the protection of troops. Distinguished among investigators of typhus, Doctor Craigie made his discoveries available to the military and civilian organizations of the United States, as well as to those of his own country. Through contributions to science and by his cooperation on an international scale, he benefited the public health of the world.

XII. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—So much of section I, WD General Orders 37, 1946, as pertains to United States Forces in China as reads “United States Forces in China” is amended to read “United States Army Forces in China.”

XIII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of paragraph 5, section VIII, WD General Orders 88, 1945, as pertains to Brigadier General Richard G. Tindall, United States Army, as reads “Brigadier General Richard G. Tindell” is amended to read “Brigadier General Richard G. Tindall.”

XIV. AIR MEDAL.—So much of section VI, WD General Orders 10, 1946, as pertains to First Lieutenant Robert D. Thompson, Air Corps, as reads “O685884” is amended to read “O0808909.”

XV. AIR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of paragraph 4, section VI, WD General Orders 16, 1943, as pertains to Captain John A. Urick, Air Corps, as reads “Air Medal was awarded” is amended to read “second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster was awarded.”

I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated, was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Captain Jean C. Aron, French Army. August 1944 to February 1945.
 Lieutenant Cesar Chlais, French Army. 1 March to 9 May 1945.
 Captain Jean M. Dupertuis, French Army. August 1944 to February 1945.
 Colonel Jacques Longquetot, French Army. January to April 1945.

V. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943) superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 6th Cavalry Group (Mechanized) (Reinforced), consisting of Headquarters and Headquarters Troop, 6th Cavalry Group, 6th Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron; 28th Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron; Company B, 293d Engineer (C) Battalion; Company C, 602d Tank Destroyer Battalion, and Battery C, 253d Armored Field Artillery Battalion, is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in action from 9 to 13 January 1945 in the reduction of an enemy pocket in Belgium and Luxembourg, southeast of Bastogne. After having performed an exacting mission under difficult conditions for a period of nearly 2 weeks, the 6th Cavalry Group (Mechanized) (Reinforced) was committed the night of 8-9 January 1945 on a 5,000-yard front along the general line Villers-la-Bonne-Eau—Betlange—Farm Furhman with the mission of aggressive patrolling to follow up any enemy attempts to withdraw. When it became apparent on the morning of 9 January that the Germans had so organized the ground that it was impossible for the infantry on both flanks to advance, the 6th Cavalry Group (Mechanized) (Reinforced) attacked on its own initiative and over and above the requirements of its own mission, but in furtherance of the corps mission. In order to make this attack successful against a numerically superior and well-dug-in enemy, a special task force was constituted, composed of elements of the various components of the group. This task force spearheaded the attack, and the 6th Cavalry Group (Mechanized) (Reinforced), making full use of its mobility and fire power, captured the towns of Betlange and Harlange. The attack continuing through the night, despite bitter cold and deep snow, was delayed only by serious obstacles, including mines and blown bridges in the vicinity of Watrange. At daylight, 10 January, these obstacles were quickly bypassed and the 6th Cavalry Group (Mechanized) (Reinforced) drove on. Taking finely calculated risks, all leaders made maximum use of mobility and fire power in relentlessly seeking out and destroying the enemy. Open flanks were ignored by small units in the interest of speed. This speed, plus the aggressive fighting spirit of all personnel, made possible the capture of the towns of Lutremange, Watrange, and Tarchamps, and the zone assigned to the 6th Cavalry Group (Mechanized) (Reinforced) was cleared quickly. Having completed its mission, and by doing so, making possible the advance of the units on its flanks, the 6th Cavalry Group (Mechanized) (Reinforced), in furtherance of the corps plan, requested and was granted permission to advance far beyond its original objective. The group drove on and assisted in the capture of Sonlez. The outstanding action of the 6th Cavalry Group (Mechanized) (Reinforced) broke the back of the German resistance in the Harlange pocket, which had held up the corps advance for a period of 11 days. The determination and indomitable fighting spirit of these courageous officers and men exemplify the finest traditions of the military service.

VI. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Technician Third Grade Robert O. Belcher (Army serial No. 34899871), Medical Department, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the investigation of scrub typhus fever in Assam and Burma from June to November 1945. After assisting in the organization of the botanical section of the field headquarters of the Commission at Myitkyina, he was in charge of that section from September to November 1945. Technician Belcher developed techniques of study and made large collections of botanical specimens. His work contributed to increasing the understanding of the epidemiology of scrub typhus and to botanical science.

Technician Fourth Grade Lyndahl E. Hughes (Army serial No. 39927486), Medical Department, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the investigation of scrub typhus fever in Assam and Burma from April to November 1945. Technician Hughes contributed with skill and ability to the isolation of rickettsiae from mites and rodents and to the securing of scientific information on the extent and spread of the disease in Assam and Burma.

Lieutenant Commander Hollis S. Ingraham, Medical Corps, United States Naval Reserve, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission from December 1944 to August 1945. In villages in Egypt, in Saudi Arabia, and in French Morocco, he made extensive surveys of the typhus situation and participated in the application of control measures to prevent the spread of the disease. By scientific studies, he added to the knowledge of delousing by the use of DDT and of protection by vaccination. As an epidemiologist, Lieutenant Commander Ingraham contributed direct to the control of typhus fever.

Technician Fourth Grade Edgar W. Sundermeyer, (Army serial No. 37615195), Medical Department, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the investigation of scrub typhus in Assam and Burma from November 1944 to November 1945. His identification and classification of mites made it possible to determine the vector of the disease in the area examined. Technician Sundermeyer participated in the development of a method for the assessment of the risk of contraction of scrub typhus by troops entering a particular area. His contributions were of value to scientific knowledge and the practical control of scrub typhus.

Technician Fifth Grade Paul J. Weber (Army serial No. 37562024), Medical Department, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the investigation of scrub typhus fever in Assam and Burma from November 1944 to November 1945. He demonstrated outstanding ability in the rearing of mites in the laboratory. Technician Weber contributed direct to the final identification of the mite which transmits the infection and to the first experimental proof that the infectious agent is transmitted from one generation of mites to the next. This demonstration of transovarial transmission of the agent of scrub typhus constitutes one of the most important stages in the advancement of new knowledge of the disease.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Clarence S. Irvine, O16630, Air Corps, United States Army. December 1944 to August 1945.

Major General Vernon E. Prichard, O3882, United States Army. 14 April to 2 May 1945.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Louis Penard, 17th Colonial Engineer Regiment, French Army, fought gallantly in action at Rastatt, Germany, on 12 April 1945, and in other engagements. As field officer of rare merit, he gave ample proof of his courage in November 1944 by going personally into the front lines at Bonhomme Pass to encourage his troops under violent mortar and automatic-weapons fire. Again in January 1945, in the region of Selestat, he demonstrated extraordinary courage by participating in the assault with his unit at the time of the Colmar offensive, always in the most dangerous spot. In April, he continued into the Baden and Wurttemberg country and particularly distinguished himself at Rastatt, where, in order to direct the operations of his unit, Colonel Penard crossed several mine fields, escaping death by a virtual miracle.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant General Kenneth Stuart, Canadian Army. As the first Canadian Army member of the Permanent Joint Defense Board, Canada-United States.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (Sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

- Colonel Morgan C. Berry, O6886, Medical Corps, United States Army. April to November 1945.
- Major General Philip E. Brown, O7073 (then colonel), United States Army. 2 January to 16 April 1942.
- Colonel Andrew B. Cannon, O883870, Air Corps, Army of the United States. October 1944 to September 1945.
- Colonel Albert F. Christie, O4913, Infantry, United States Army. 8 December 1941 to 17 May 1942.
- Brigadier General Elliot D. Cooke, O6107, United States Army. December 1941 to December 1942.
- Major General Joseph N. Dalton, O4785 (then colonel), United States Army. 7 December 1941 to 26 February 1942 and 9 March to 20 July 1942.
- Brigadier General William E. Farthing, O7122, United States Army. December 1942 to July 1945.
- Colonel William B. Foster, O8953, Medical Corps, United States Army. January 1944 to February 1946.
- Staff Sergeant John J. Grier (Army serial No. 19080792) (then sergeant), Infantry, Army of the United States. March 1943 to December 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Kathleen McClure, L900128, General Staff Corps (Women's Army Corps), Army of the United States. March 1944 to February 1946.
- Colonel H. W. McCobb, O888039, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. March 1942 to July 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Paul D. Miller, O389083, Air Corps, Army of the United States. May 1943 to October 1945.
- Colonel Eric S. Molitor, O12115 (then brigadier general), Field Artillery, United States Army. August 1943 to August 1945.
- Major Orville O. Munson, O1101594, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. January to May 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Major Munson, for services from 1 June 1944 to 8 May 1945, as published in General Orders 69, Headquarters XXI Corps, 27 May 1945.)
- Colonel William L. Rehm, O914791, Army of the United States. January 1942 to January 1946.
- Colonel Lucius A. Salisbury, O101747, Inspector General's Department, Army of the United States, January 1944 to September 1945.
- Colonel Robert M. Springer, O12422, Judge Advocate General's Department, United States Army. December 1941 to February 1945.
- Brigadier General William W. Vaughan, O3649, United States Army. 16 March 1945 to 31 March 1946.

- Brigadier R. M. A. Welchman, British Army. September 1944 to May 1945.
- Major General Harold Augustus Wernher, British Army. 15 November 1943 to 11 June 1944.

Chief Controller Leslie E. Whateley, British Army. April 1943 to September 1945.

Brigadier Sir Lionel Ernest Howard Whitby, British Army. November 1942 to May 1945.

Group Captain Alfred B. Woodhall, Royal Air Force. July 1944 to February 1945.

3. By Direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Captain Paul Bernheim, Belgian Army. January to September 1945.

Commandant de Pret Roose de Calesberg, Belgian Army. September 1944 to June 1945.

Captain Wilfred A. Ebbutt, British Army. November 1944 to March 1945.

Wing Commander Colin Heard-White, Royal Air Force. June 1943 to April 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Joseph Alphonse Jacqmin, Belgian Army. October 1944 to June 1945.

Major George Schommer, Luxembourg Army. June 1944 to June 1945.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel James C. Davis, as published in General Orders 4, 22 January 1946, Headquarters Army Service Forces, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel James C. Davis, O907618, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. 15 December 1945 to 11 April 1946.

VII. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named flight officer:

Flight Officer Philip I. Lynch (T123943), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 17 November 1944.

VIII. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Earl S. McCain, O1544456 (then second lieutenant), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 24 May 1944.

IX. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Machinist Mate Second Class Matthew Fedrow, United States Naval Reserve, displayed outstanding heroism on Iwo Jima Island on 25 August 1945. Seeing an airplane crash and burn nearby, he went immediately to it and, without regard for his own safety, helped remove the injured pilot who was trapped inside. Machinist Mate Fedrow then assisted the flyer away from the airplane, cut the burning equipment from his body and extinguished the flames on his clothing.

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers, enlisted men, and individuals:

- Romeo Balaguer*, American civilian. May to November 1944.
 Technical Sergeant Douglas H. Borgstedt (Army serial No. 33180404), Detached Enlisted Men's List, Army of the United States. May 1943 through September 1945.
 Colonel William T. Campbell, Royal Scots, British Army. September to October 1944.
 Colonel Ales-Maurice Charles, French Army. July to October 1944.
 Lieutenant Colonel Roland W. Estey, O223121, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. November 1944 through May 1945.
 Staff Sergeant Thomas F. Flannery (Army serial No. 32627887) (then sergeant), Air Corps, Army of the United States: June 1944 to May 1945.
 Major Gaylord D. Fridline, O302374, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. 16 to 19 December 1944.
 Group Captain James L. F. Fuller-Good, Royal Air Force. February to May 1945.
 The Reverend John S. Holladay, American civilian. May to September 1945.
 Colonel Pierre Lalande, French Army. 10 February to 12 April 1945.
 Group Captain Alexander M. Rodgers, Royal Air Force. May 1943 to May 1945.
 First Lieutenant Rupert D. Starr, O526963, Infantry, Army of the United States. 18 to 22 December 1944.
Frederick L. Stone, American civilian. July 1944 to April 1945.
 Major General G. Surtees, British Army. 3 January to 7 May 1945.
 Colonel Ralph N. Thicknesse, Royal Ulster Rifles, British Army. December 1944 to April 1945.
 Lieutenant Colonel Joseph W. Walton, O202396, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. November 1942 to February 1943.
 Flight Sergeant Kenneth Warren, Royal Air Force. 1944 and 1945.
 Sergeant Prestley H. Williams, Jr. (Army serial No. 34722912), Infantry, Army of the United States. 18 to 22 December 1944.

XI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit as approved by the Commanding General, First Army, Fort Bragg, North Carolina, is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 29th Field Artillery Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in France from 6 to 13 June 1944. The battalion landed on the Cotentin Peninsula in Normandy on D-day, 6 June 1944, as a part of Combat Team 8, the first combat team to land in VII Corps sector. Reconnaissance parties and forward observers accompanied the leading elements of the infantry. During the landing operation, the entire personnel and matériel of one howitzer battery were lost when a mine sank the landing craft transporting this battery to the beachhead. The remainder of the battalion was debarked in an area 1,500 yards from its predesignated landing point, necessitating a rapid change in plans. Despite these apparently overwhelming handicaps, the battalion went into position to effect immediate fire support of the 8th Infantry. With only 43 percent of its assigned strength, because of casualties, shortage of landing craft, and the loss of one howitzer battery, the battalion delivered highly effective fire on the enemy and its installations. Throughout the 6 days following the initial landing, the battalion fired 262 missions and expended 10,029 rounds of ammunition. During the entire period, the enemy held the favorable dominating terrain. The loss of one of the battalion's airplanes and both pilots, because of enemy action, denied the battalion use of its organic aerial observation. However, aggressive, active reconnaissance neutralized the enemy's advantage. Although subjected to unrelenting hostile fire, all officers and men of the battalion demonstrated outstanding aggressiveness and professional skill in the fulfillment of their missions. The deadly accuracy of the battalion's artillery support contributed substantially to the steady and continuous advance of its supported infantry and the ever increasing toll of personnel and equipment exacted from the enemy. The extraordinary courage, determination, and esprit de corps exhibited by each member of the 29th Field Artillery Battalion exemplify the finest traditions of the military service.

XII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Doctor William McDowell Hammon, American civilian, as a member of the Commission on Neurotropic Virus Disease, Army Epidemiological Board, on Okinawa, Ryukus Islands, and later in Japan, from August to September 1945, ably conducted studies to determine source, spread, and immunization of sleeping sickness. He also assisted units of Military Government in case-finding, diagnosis, and application of control measures within their sphere of responsibility. Doctor Hammon's findings contributed materially to the advancement of military and civilian preventive medicine.

J. Gardner Lewis, American civilian, automotive technical observer and analyst, performed highly important and meritorious services while serving with the Alaskan Division, Air Transport Command, from December 1942 to March 1945. Under his direct control, extensive and prolonged tests were conducted on winterization equipment and supplies under the most severe and adverse Alaskan weather conditions. Mr. Lewis' study, analysis, and recommendations resulted in very important automotive advancement and material savings in operations and equipment.

Doctor Donald B. McMullen, American civilian, served as a member of the Commission on Schistosomiasis, Army Epidemiological Board, in the Philippines and Japan from April to December 1944. He ably initiated studies in mapping areas of infection and in developing methods for the destruction of the small, intermediate host of a worm parasite of the blood vessels. Doctor McMullen's accomplishments furthered materially the health of our soldiers and the success of operations in the Philippine and Japan areas.

Doctor Carl TenBroeck, American civilian, as director of two special commissions on dysentery, Army Epidemiological Board, from April to June 1943 in the Hawaiian Department, and from May to December 1945 in the India-Burma Theater, ably made intensive field and laboratory studies of this scourge among soldiers. Working under difficult and hazardous conditions, he evaluated means of control and treatment and trained others in remedial measures. Doctor TenBroeck's accomplishments furthered materially our knowledge of military preventive medicine.

XIII.—DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—So much of section IX, WD General Orders 31, 1946, as pertains to Captain Leland H. Henderson, Air Corps, as reads "Captain Leland H. Henderson, O745090, Air Corps, Army of the United States" is amended by adding "16 January 1944."

XIV.—AIR MEDAL.—1. So much of section IX, WD General Orders 113, 1945, as pertains to Colonel Richard T. Knight, Air Corps, as reads "Colonel Richard T. Knight" is amended to read "Colonel Richard T. Knight."

2. Paragraph 2, section X, WD General Orders 35, 1946, is rescinded.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR:

OFFICIAL:

DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS—Award-----	Section
LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER)—Award-----	I
BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units-----	II

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul, 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major Eric S. Kearsley, British Army, on 9 September 1943, near Salerno, Italy, accompanied his commanding officer on a reconnaissance to select positions to prevent enemy penetration along a highway into the town. Having found suitable sites, they sent their vehicle back to collect company guides. When the vehicle on its return trip was stopped by a road block, they realized that they were behind the enemy lines. A decision was made to return, working their way around the enemy flank, but Major Kearsley elected to remain with the hope of rescuing his men. Within a few minutes, using only his revolver, he captured three members of the road block crew who were moving back from their position and, shortly after, five others who followed. He then advanced on the road block and captured the three remaining Germans, killing one who had fired upon him. Directing the German driver to attach the crew's weapon to the captured half-track, he ordered his prisoners into the vehicle and, sitting in its rear, returned to the safety of his lines, towing an 88-mm gun and carrying 10 prisoners and 3 machine guns. Major Kearsley's courageous and heroic actions reflect credit on himself and the military service.

II. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Major Joseph Bonfiglio, as published in General Orders 54, Mediterranean Theater, 26 March 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Major Joseph Bonfiglio, O1285697 (then captain), Infantry, Army of the United States. October 1944 to May 1945.

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 2d Squadron, 8th Cavalry, reinforced by Reconnaissance Platoon, Headquarters Troop, 2d Cavalry Brigade; Reconnaissance Platoon, 8th Cavalry; Battery B, 61st Field Artillery Battalion; 1st Platoon, Troop C, 8th Engineer Squadron; 2d Platoon, 2d Collecting Troop, 1st Medical Squadron; Detachment, 27th Ordnance Company; and Company B, 44th Tank Battalion, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy at Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 31 January to 3 February 1945. Assigned the mission of spearheading the drive of the 2d Cavalry Brigade into Manila, the 2d Squadron, 8th Cavalry, reinforced by Reconnaissance Platoon, Headquarters Troop, 2d Cavalry

Brigade; Reconnaissance Platoon, 8th Cavalry; Battery B, 61st Field Artillery Battalion; 1st Platoon, Troop C, 8th Engineer Squadron; 2d Platoon, 2d Collecting Troop, 1st Medical Squadron; Detachment, 27th Ordnance Company; and Company B, 44th Tank Battalion, moved out as a completely motorized "flying squadron" from San Roque, over 100 miles from Manila, early in the morning of 1 February 1945. Pushing forward aggressively through the Japanese lines at Cabanatuan, the squadron reached Novaliches, a barrio 10 miles northeast of Manila, late in the afternoon of 3 February. Here Japanese resistance stiffened, as the enemy, surprised by this unexpected advance to threaten his stronghold in the city, frantically and fanatically defended his strong position behind the Tulahin River. The resistance at Novaliches was neutralized quickly and bypassed, as the inspired force drove forward ruthlessly toward its two main objectives in Manila: Malacanan Palace, seat of the Japanese-dominated Commonwealth Government, and Santo Tomas University, where some 3,700 Allied internees were held captive by the enemy. Entering Manila at 1840, 3 February, one troop reinforced, quickly seized Malacanan Palace, which it held despite Japanese counterattacks. The balance of the force, with a large part of the remaining troops closely engaged and cut off from the remainder at the Far Eastern University, nevertheless pushed its attack to hasten the liberation of the now threatened internees at Santo Tomas University. While enemy troops inside the university grounds, fighting from buildings occupied by internees, covered all routes of approach with machine guns, grenades, and rifle fire, the small force crashed through the barricaded iron gate. A short time later, joined by the force that had fought its way through the Japanese positions at the Far Eastern University, the squadron quickly destroyed the Japanese garrison, with the exception of 70, who because they were barricaded in one of the buildings and using a large group of civilians as hostages, were permitted to leave the grounds at a later date under an arranged truce. During the operation within the compound at Santo Tomas University, not a single Allied internee was injured or wounded. Whenever the Japanese fired from positions also occupied by civilians, the soldiers of the squadron repeatedly held their fire and risked further casualties to themselves to avoid possible injury to any internees. The officers and men of the squadron, completely disregarding the imminent danger of becoming isolated from the main body of the division troops and being annihilated by a numerically superior enemy force within the city, pressed their attack boldly and aggressively. Within a period of 72 hours, during which time they had fought continually without rest, the 2d Squadron, 8th Cavalry with reinforcements, had advanced through 100 miles of enemy-held territory to be the first troops to enter the city of Manila, to seize the seat of the Japanese-dominated Philippine Government, and to liberate safely 3,700 Allied internees at Santo Tomas University. (General Orders 218, Headquarters 1st Cavalry Division, 17 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

2. The 2d Battalion, 124th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Mindanao, Philippine Islands, during the period 22 April to 27 June 1945. The battalion landed at Cotabato, Philippine Islands, on 22 April 1945 and secured the area. Contact was established and forces committed in direction of Sarangani Bay and Nuro. The next day, the battalion was withdrawn from this action and directed to spearhead an infantry division advancing into the interior. This operation was aimed at securing the Sayre Highway, thereby cutting the main supply route and line of communications between the two enemy strongholds at Davao in the south and Cagayan in the north. The battalion embarked from Cotabato on the evening of 26 April 1945 in LCM's for Fort Pikit. The shortage of craft prevented the movement of organic vehicles and all weapons had to be hand carried. The battalion made a forced march of 16 miles immediately upon landing, the advance elements crossing the Pulangi River at its junction with the Sayre Highway during the night. A bridgehead was established and contact with the enemy was made at once. The entire battalion closed into the bridgehead at 1500 the same day, moving under adverse weather conditions and over difficult terrain. After only 3 hours rest, reports were received of an enemy force advancing south to the critical junction of the Sayre Highway and Highway Number 1 near Kabacan, endangering the entire operation. At 1800, the battalion moved north to contact and destroy the enemy. At 2300, after advancing 10 miles, the battalion met strong and determined opposition in a night fire fight. The engagement lasted through the night, the entire battalion being committed to halt the advance of a strong, fanatical force determined to destroy the critical bridgehead across the Pulangi River. The enemy was stopped and driven to the north by 0530, completely disorganized. The battalion had been without sleep for 3 nights, and had made forced marches by land and overwater movement by boat over a distance of 71 miles. Nevertheless, they reorganized, and at 0800, initiated a relentless pursuit of the enemy for an additional 5 miles. A captured field order identified the opposing force as a reinforced battalion supported by 75-mm guns. The enemy was completely disorganized from the fight and the aggressive pursuit of the battalion, and were destroyed in detail. The battalion was relieved on 29 April 1945 after 7 days of continuous fighting and marching without rest and moved in support of the lead battalion. Three days later, they were committed to the east on the Kibawe-Talomo Trail, the route of the enemy withdrawal, and for 3 days, fought a suicidal force endeavoring to get across the Pulangi River. The advance of the rest of the combat team was held up by a strong force in well-organized positions on ideal defensive terrain in the Pinalay Lake area. The battalion was then committed to this engagement, and for the next 4 days, attacked the position from the flanks and the rear. On the fourth day, supported for the first time by artillery fire, the battalion overran the position and was credited with 106 of the 187 enemy found killed. The next night, the enemy launched a counterattack against the battalion perimeter, which lasted throughout the night. The attack was repulsed and 73 of the enemy were killed in the engagement. On 15 May 1945, they were committed to the capture of Silae, an enemy stronghold protecting a crossing of the Pulangi River. They broke the enemy line and pushed forward to secure the town on the same day. The deep, swift-flowing river was crossed at two points, by use of field expedients, and the remainder of the enemy force was either destroyed or driven into the mountains east of the river. The battalion was relieved and assembled in Malaybalay on 27 June 1945. The aggressive action of the battalion, continually driving the enemy before them, never allowing him to reorganize or consolidate, played a major role in the liberation of Mindanao in advance of the highest expectations. During the period, a total of 67 days, the battalion was in direct contact with the enemy for 50 days. Of the remaining time, only 4 days were available for rest and recuperation. The battalion accounted for 430 enemy killed, 117 found dead, and 5 prisoners of war. The conspicuous gallantry and outstanding performance of duty from 22 April to 27 June 1945 by all members of the 2d Battalion, 124th Infantry Regiment, reflected great credit on themselves and upheld the highest traditions of the service. (General Orders 146, Headquarters 31st Infantry Division, 12 September 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

3. The 2d Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy at Luzon, Philippine Islands. At 1830 hours on 17 January 1945, the 2d Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, received orders to move out at 0730 hours, 18 January, to secure the road junction on the important north-south National Highway (Highway 3) 600 yards northeast of Sison, Pangasinan Province, Luzon, Philippine Islands, and block any movement to the north or to the south, cutting off an enemy force offering stiff resistance from fortified emplacements on Hill 355 and Mt. Alava, preventing this force from being reinforced and resupplied, and cutting the main route of withdrawal of enemy troops northward. At receipt of the order, the battalion was at Barrio Palacpalac, 4½ miles south of the designated objective. The battalion, with one platoon of Cannon Company and two platoons of Antitank Company, 169th Infantry Regiment, attached, moved out at 0730, 18 January 1945, against scattered resistance and secured the road junction and bridge at Bobonan at 0930, destroying a small enemy force of five riflemen equipped with demolitions. A guard was placed on the bridge to prevent further attempts to blow up this important point. Companies F and G moved forward from this junction and ran into stiff resistance from well-fortified automatic weapons positions and riflemen occupying the high ground to the west of Highway 3. The battalion commander requested tank support and, at 1300 hours, one platoon of the 716th Tank Battalion arrived to support the attack. With Company F astride the highway, Company E on the left, Company G on the right, and tanks in close support, the battalion attacked the enemy road block 500 yards north of Bobonan and knocked out 2 light machine guns, 1 heavy machine gun, and killed 23 enemy riflemen. At this point, extremely accurate artillery fire of 75-mm caliber was placed on the forward elements of the battalion from the high ground to the northeast and southwest. Under this heavy fire, the battalion moved northward and, 800 yards short of the objective, encountered another road block. Utilizing tank and infantry, 2 light machine guns and 1 knee mortar were destroyed and 18 enemy riflemen killed. At 1600 hours, still under artillery fire, the battalion moved into and secured the road junction northeast of Sison. The tanks withdrew on orders shortly after the battalion had secured its objective. As the battalion dug in defensive positions, the enemy artillery fire, now supplemented by 90-mm mortar fire, became intense and shortly before dusk, a particularly heavy concentration wiped out the defensive sector covering the road from Sison. One rifle platoon of Company G suffered 25 casualties. Intermittent artillery and mortar fire continued during the earlier part of the night. At 0500 hours, 19 January, an enemy force of approximately 100 men equipped with knee mortars, light machine guns, and rifles, moving northward from Sison, penetrated the battalion defense. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting ensued, during which, the battalion commander was killed. At 0530 hours, an enemy motor column, including artillery field pieces, ammunition caissons, horse-drawn carts, and approximately 600 men, drove into the battalion defensive position in a salient extending northeast from Sison. The enemy motor column was stopped at the road block by heavy machine-gun and antitank fire and as the foot column closed on the vehicles, friendly supporting artillery laid down heavy fire along the road to Sison. This fire inflicted heavy casualties on the foot column, destroyed many of the vehicles, and closed the escape route for the entrapped enemy. Intense close-in fighting continued, with the battalion's automatic weapons taking heavy toll of the numerically superior enemy. In the light of dawn, the antitank guns destroyed the remaining enemy vehicles and a counterattack by Company E destroyed or drove out the remaining enemy in the battalion defensive area. At approximately 0900, two platoons of tanks returned to assist in mopping up. Upon their reaching the road block, enemy mortars and artillery opened up with renewed energy, inflicting heavy casualties on troops and immobilizing two tanks, one of which burned completely. Upon order of the acting battalion commander, the tanks withdrew and an urgent call was sent for ambulances and medics. These were dispatched, but could not reach the battalion road block because of intense artillery and mortar fire. The battalion remained in position under this continued pounding and repulsed several small counterattacks throughout the morning. At 1230 hours, the order to withdraw was received and, still under heavy fire, the battalion effected an orderly withdrawal, taking their wounded with them. During this complete engagement, the battalion captured and destroyed large stores of food and ammunition in 3 dumps between Bobonan and Sison, destroyed 8 artillery pieces with caissons, 2 tracked prime movers, 1 staff car, 1 armored car, and 12 horses and carts. Enemy casualties were over 600 dead and an undetermined number wounded. The battalion casualties were 3 officers and 25 enlisted men killed, 2 officers and 109 enlisted men wounded, 3 enlisted men missing, and 2 enlisted men injured. Battalion strength, as of 17 January 1945, was 26 officers and 565 enlisted men present for duty and, as of 20 January 1945, was 19 officers and 436 enlisted men. The battalion had been in continual contact with the enemy since 9 January 1945, and had suffered heavy previous losses. The cold courage and fighting spirit exhibited by the 2d Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, under the most hazardous of conditions, won the admiration of all those to whom they set their inspiring example of gallantry and was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 408, Headquarters 43d Infantry Division, 1 July 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

its way to land's end through continuing fierce antiaircraft opposition. Despite the severe damage to many of the airplanes, the air crews of the 330th Bombardment Group (VH) brought them back to the home base over the 1,500-mile return route. In the successful completion of this mission, the 330th Bombardment Group (VH) rendered an invaluable contribution to the prosecution of the air war against Japan. The courage and determination of the air crews, combined with the devotion to duty and skill of the ground personnel, are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed services of the United States and reflect great credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 124, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 10 December 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

5. The 504th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. Alerted to provide two air squadrons for a daylight formation mission against the industrial area of Yokohama, Japan, the maintenance personnel worked unceasingly throughout the day and night, and prepared twenty-five B-29 aircraft for this important attack, despite the severe strain imposed on personnel and airplanes by the greatly accelerated pace of operations. Taking off from Tinian Island with heavy bomb loads in the early morning of 28 May 1945, the combat crews flew over the 1,500 miles of ocean between their base and the target. They penetrated a cold front where hazardous icing conditions were encountered. Throughout the flight, there was constant danger of ditching far at sea, and the greatest skill on the part of flight engineers, navigators, and pilots was necessary to conserve the limited amount of gasoline available in each airplane. Approaching the Japanese mainland, the squadrons assembled at a point within fighter range of enemy airfields and circled while joining their formations. They proceeded to the target area at an altitude of 18,000 feet, enhancing their bombing accuracy, but increasing greatly the danger from antiaircraft massed in this vital area of the Japanese homeland. Entering the bomb run, the airplanes were attacked aggressively by hostile interceptors. Powerful enemy ground defenses hurled repeated barrages of heavy, accurate flak, which ripped unceasingly through the formations from the initial point to land's end. Over the target area, before bombs away, the flak became even more intense and accurate. The deputy leaders of both squadrons were shot down. Despite this fierce enemy opposition, and the fact that 70 percent of the remaining B-29 aircraft were already damaged, the intrepid crews unwaveringly pressed on to the objective and released their heavy load of incendiaries on the assigned target. Leaving the objective, while still relentlessly attacked by flak batteries, the crews were able to see smoke towering to their own altitude of 18,000 feet. Later, reconnaissance showed that the industrial area of Yokohama had been virtually destroyed. The surviving crews were again faced with the long over-water flight, with most of their airplanes crippled from the recent battle. Through the professional skill and the exemplary determination shown by all members of this group, and the heroism and extraordinary devotion to duty demonstrated by the flying crews in the successful completion of this mission, the 504th Bombardment Group (VH) rendered an invaluable contribution to the defeat of the enemy, thereby reflecting great credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 115, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 28 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

6. The 505th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. Alerted for a daylight strike against the Akajima Aircraft Company's important Ota plant, a factory producing 40 percent of Japanese army fighter airplanes, every member of the group concentrated his professional skill and technical knowledge in the preparation and planning of the mission. Ground crews, with exemplary esprit de corps, redoubled their efforts in order that their B-29's would be in the best possible condition to make the long hazardous flight. Every effort of the group was directed toward making this trip, their second strike against the Japanese Empire, a complete success. On 10 February 1945, 21 aircraft, heavily loaded with high explosive bombs, took off on a difficult 1,500-mile flight over enemy-controlled open sea through treacherous tropical weather conditions to their target. Ever present was the constant threat of possible mechanical failure and subsequent ditching many miles at sea, with no adequate rescue patrol yet established. No emergency base was available for battle-damaged or distressed aircraft anywhere along the 1,500-mile return to base, past many enemy garrisons of unknown strength and capabilities. The difficulty of navigation over the great expanse of ocean with inadequate weather information added to the dangers of the flight. The mission was flown in altitudes over 27,000 feet, where winds in excess of 200 miles per hour were encountered and icing impaired visibility and made formation flying extremely hazardous. Despite these difficulties, they reached the Japanese coast according to plan. Hostile interceptors immediately attacked the bombers. Anti-aircraft fire was encountered at the initial point and en route to and over the target. A total of 75 interceptors made 84 skillfully coordinated and aggressive attacks on the superfortresses. Two of this group's bombers collided in midair, as a result of an attempted ramming by an enemy suicide airplane. Another aircraft fell from the formation in the target area. Impeded by headwinds of 195 miles per hour on the upwind bomb run, the airplanes required 41 minutes to travel the 46 miles from initial point to the target. During this time, the formations were under continuous attack. Undaunted, they pressed on and bombed the target with good results, causing great damage to one of Japan's most important fighter assembly plants. During the fight, three enemy aircraft were destroyed, six probably destroyed, and three damaged, at a cost of eight of the attacking bombers lost over the target and through ditching. Fifty percent of the returning B-29's were damaged in the fierce battle. Turning off the target, the formations were again faced with the long overwater flight, with a rapidly diminishing gasoline supply and the landing at home base scheduled late at night. Through the great determination, skill, and courage of the flight crews in successfully completing this mission, despite overwhelming odds, together with the high devotion to duty and mechanical ability of the ground personnel, the 505th Bombardment Group (VH) rendered an invaluable contribution to the Allied war effort, thereby reflecting great credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 115, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 28 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, United States Forces in China, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial, effective 1 May 1946.
[AG 250.4 (9 Apr 46)]

II. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, United States Army Military Government in Korea, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial.
[AG 250.4 (18 Mar 46)]

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named Officer:

Colonel Lowell A. Elliott, O10712, Chemical Warfare Service, United States Army. May 1943 to March 1946.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Thomas A. Roberts, Jr., O12678, Field Artillery, United States Army. December 1943 to August 1944.

V. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Brigadier General William H. Sands, as published in General Orders III, European Theater, 7 June 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General William H. Sands, O174202, Army of the United States. February 1941 to June 1944.

VI. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

AGO 3491B—Apr. 688781°—46

Corporal Donald E. Nelson (Army Serial No. 37542918), Cavalry, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding heroism at the risk of his life on 6 November 1945 at Hibbing, Minnesota, when, despite his seriously wounded leg, he gallantly saved a small girl from death or serious injury. Seeing the child push a doll buggy into the path of an approaching locomotive, he lunged valiantly from his crutches to save her. Although he fell painfully to the ground, Corporal Nelson grasped the infant's foot and pulled her back to safety.

VII.—BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individual:

Lieutenant (junior grade) Charles Cloatre, Medical Corps, French Navy. November 1944.

Richard J. Condon, American civilian. May 1944 to May 1945.

Colonel Jacques Debre, French Army. September 1944 to May 1945.

Group Captain Donald Evans, Royal Air Force. November 1943 to May 1944.

VIII.—AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Corporal Edward S. Ryba (Army serial No. 36968736), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 8 April 1945.

IX.—BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 22d Infantry Regiment, with the following-attached units:

Company C, 70th Tank Battalion;

Company C, 303d Tank Destroyer Battalion;

Company C, 4th Engineer Battalion;

Company D, 70th Tank Battalion,

is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in its determined drive to overcome bitter opposition in the Hurtgen Forest. On 16 November, the 22d Infantry Regiment, with attachments, opened an offensive with the mission of clearing a portion of the Hurtgen Forest of powerful enemy forces and fighting its way to the Roer River and Cologne Plain. Throughout the campaign, the progress of the unit was seriously impeded by an unusual combination of inclement weather and difficult terrain. Unseasonable precipitation and damp, penetrating cold were a constant detriment to the health and well-being of the personnel. The terrain was characterized by densely forested hills, swollen streams, and deep, adhesive mud, which retarded all movement of troops and vehicles. Fully cognizant of the decided strategic advantages which this area afforded for effective defense, the enemy had prepared an elaborate system of mutually supporting fortifications. The effectiveness of enemy artillery and mortar fire was considerably enhanced by the frequency of tree bursts in this heavily timbered area. Inasmuch as natural conditions and rigid construction of enemy strongholds frequently precluded the effective employment of aerial and motorized support, the burden of neutralizing fanatically defended enemy fortifications fell heavily upon the shoulders of the infantrymen, as exemplified in the capture of Grosshau, a town in which concrete and steel reinforced basements rendered each house veritably impregnable to repeated artillery and aerial attacks. The town was ultimately captured by an assault in which the infantry closed with the enemy in hand-to-hand night fighting. The 22d Infantry Regiment with attachments, cleared its portion of the Hurtgen Forest and reached its objective on 4 December 1944, opening a gateway to the Cologne Plain and the ultimate rapid conclusion of the European conflict. The individual courage, valor, and tenacity displayed by the personnel of the 22d Infantry Regiment, with attachments, in the face of superior odds, unusually hazardous conditions, and unfavorable weather were in keeping with highest traditions of the armed forces.

2. The 142d Infantry Regiment and 1st Platoon, Company B, 111th Engineer Combat Battalion, attached, displayed heroism, gallantry, and outstanding achievement in combat from 19 to 22 March 1945 in the vicinity of Ober Otterbach, Germany. After breaching the Moder River defenses, the 142d Infantry Regiment pursued the enemy through the Wissembourg Gap and, on 19 March 1945, advanced toward one of the most strongly fortified sectors of the Siegfried Line. While the 1st Battalion was attacking Ober Otterbach under intense enemy artillery, rocket, machine-gun, and rifle fire from German strong points on the surrounding hills, the 2d Battalion attacked west of Ober Otterbach and secured a foothold in the Siegfried defenses on Ebnung Hill. The enemy launched a violent counterattack to recapture the lost positions, and throughout the following day, the 2d Battalion fought gallantly and determinedly to hold its ground. When the 1st Battalion attacked a sector of the Siegfried Line northeast of Ober Otterbach and encountered intense machine-gun cross-fire from row upon row of mutually supporting pillboxes, the unit withdrew into Ober Otterbach and, at dusk on 20 March, moved west, parallel to the Siegfried defenses, to join the 3d Battalion on the Grassberg height. Fully exploiting the foothold in the enemy defenses which the 3d Battalion had established after hours of intense fighting, the two battalions attacked together with the mission of penetrating the Siegfried Line and seizing Dorrenbach to the north. Although the desperate enemy was determined to defend his positions at all costs, elements of the 1st Battalion smashed hostile opposition and, despite heavy losses, broke through this system of defenses to seize Dorrenbach. Meanwhile, the 2d Battalion was systematically clearing its sector of the German defense line. With the help of the engineers, the men of this battalion used beehive charges to blast the stubbornly resisting enemy from his fortifications, and, despite intense hostile fire from the cleverly arranged strong points, they reduced 54 pillboxes and captured approximately 250 Germans. As a result of the indomitable courage, determination, and esprit de corps displayed by every member of the 142d Infantry Regiment, this organization overwhelmed all resistance in one of the most stubbornly defended sectors of the Siegfried Line, killed 160 Germans, wounded 350 and took 679 prisoners. This magnificent accomplishment was directly responsible for the division's swift and uninterrupted drive to the Rhine River. The outstanding performance of duty, tenacity, aggressiveness, and extraordinary heroism of all personnel of the 142d Infantry Regiment and 1st Platoon, Company B, 111th Engineer Combat Battalion, attached, reflect the highest credit on the military forces of the United States.

in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Jack Reniff Bassett, principal electrician, Civil Aeronautics Administration, Fort Richardson, Alaska, on 21 September 1942, seeing a Royal Canadian Air Force airplane about 100 yards away crash and start burning, ran to the airplane. Although the airplane and surroundings were aflame and machine-gun bullets were flying, Mr. Bassett, uncertain whether all bombs had been jettisoned, succeeded in safely removing a disabled soldier from the wreck only a few seconds before a violent explosion blew the airplane to bits.

Simon William Muller, Ph. D., United States Geological Survey, performed meritorious services with the Alaskan Division, Air Transport Command, from August 1944 to September 1945. The scientific data on permafrost accumulated by Dr. Muller, the correlation of theoretical knowledge and practical application as it applies to construction under Arctic conditions, and the compilation of a bibliography of existing information of permafrost have been of inestimable value in developing the adaptation of engineering principles to prevailing frost conditions.

XI. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of section VI, WD General Orders 9, 1946, as pertains to Brigadier General Frank D. Hackett, United States Army, as reads "Legion of Merit was awarded" is amended to read "a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster was awarded."

XII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—So much of section XI, WD General Orders 88, 1945, as pertains to Staff Sergeant George O. Dunn, Medical Department, as reads "October 1944 to January 1945" is amended to read "June 1942 to January 1945." (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Staff Sergeant Dunn, for services from June 1942 to October 1944, as published in General Orders 230, General Headquarters, United States Army Forces, Pacific, 5 October 1945.)

WAR DEPARTMENT
WASHINGTON 25, D. C., 19 April 1946

BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The Boat Battalion, 532d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism on New Guinea from 4 September to 15 December 1943. The Boat Battalion, 532d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment, supporting an Australian division in operations against Lae and Finschhafen, made a major contribution to the rapid and conclusive defeat of the enemy in the Huon Peninsula area. With their small landing craft, they solved the problem of supplying advancing troops where swampy, river-rutted terrain precluded the building of supply roads, which enabled a maximum strategic advantage to be gained. After the assault on Red Beach 14 miles east of Lae, the battalion fought off attack after attack of strafing enemy airplanes, which attempted to destroy the LCM's and LCV's exposed in the open roadstead. In over 40 attacks directed at them, the battalion definitely destroyed 3 enemy airplanes and possibly were responsible for destroying 10 others. In some instances, boatmen were killed at their guns while fighting off headon attacks. Despite the nerve-wracking daylight hours of fighting and of constant alert, the boat crews were always prepared for the nightly missions to the forward areas, where they were to engage in resupply, movement of reinforcements and artillery, and evacuation of casualties. Even though daylight missions would have been exceptionally hazardous with coast defense guns, artillery, and mortars prepared to take their toll, the night missions were almost as dangerous. Japanese search airplanes were constantly sweeping the coast to attack convoys, which they could track down from the phosphorescent wakes of the boats. On the forward beach, always well within enemy rifle range, the boat battalion could generally expect a greeting of mortar and machine-gun fire when the noise of their motors could be detected. Members of the battalion willingly worked periods of 48 to 56 hours at a time, subordinating their comfort and safety to the accomplishment of the task at hand. At no time did they turn back when under fire or fail to complete a mission. At the final defense line before Lae, the battalion played its most heroic role. The Japanese were strongly entrenched behind the Busu River and a detachment of Australians had been cut off by sudden rising water on the enemy side near the mouth of the stream. Boats of the battalion were rushed to this point and in 63 continuous hours moved over 1,500 reinforcements to the precarious beachhead on the enemy side. During this time, they were in full view of the enemy and under a constant hail of fire. Eighteen days after the initial assault near Lae, the second large scale assault by the boat battalion was made at Scarlet Beach, 5 miles north of Finschhafen, with an Australian brigade. Here again under even heavier air attack from as many as 40 to 50 enemy airplanes, the boat crew performed similar coastwise missions in the advance toward the town. Then, after Finschhafen fell on 29 October, the threat of enemy counterattack from the north with large forces necessitated the immediate reinforcement of the brigade with the balance of the Australian division, which was still at Lae. Large naval craft could not be used to transport these troops with their equipment and supplies, so the boat battalion, with their tiny boats, willingly accepted the responsibilities and risk involved. Each complete round trip between Lae and Finschhafen required about 22 hours of running time for the small craft. Day after day, the boat crews made consecutive runs without rest or hot food, nearly always soaked by the heavy rains or baked by the sun. During the hours of darkness, the route could be marked by strings of tracer bullets as well as bomb splashes from enemy search airplanes intent on breaking or disrupting this frail channel of communication. Every available boat was used every day during the 5 weeks that it took to move the balance of the division with their equipment and supplies over the 70 hazardous miles between Lae and Finschhafen. Not a passenger nor a boatload of supplies was lost, even though on some trips boats were cut by shrapnel and men were blown overboard by concussion from bombs. Through the heroism, grim determination, conspicuous gallantry, and excellent battle discipline of its members, the Boat Battalion, 532d Boat and Shore Regiment, enabled Allied forces to achieve remarkable gains with minimum loss. (General Orders 249, Headquarters Sixth Army, 11 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

2. Company B, 325th Engineer Combat Battalion, is cited for outstanding accomplishment in combat during the period 17 to 21 December 1944 in the vicinity of Bitche, France. The company was assigned a mission of supporting the 3d Battalion, 398th Infantry Regiment, to reach the Maginot Line, west of the town of Bitche, France. The strong enemy fortifications on high ground west and northwest of the town were in such a position that they dominated the terrain. The main line of enemy defense was Fort Freudenberg, a large fortification, and Fort Schiesseck, which had 11 adjacent units, each unit with a gun emplacement or a series of guns ranging from 47-mm to 135-mm, and each having a 360 degrees traverse, making them mutually supporting. The walls of the fortifications were reinforced concrete from 3 to 10 feet thick. Some of the units had as many as five stories below ground level, with underground railroads which were used for supply routes. Taking advantage of a 45-minute barrage, the engineer demolition squads moved toward the forts at 1130 on 17 December 1944, with no terrain features for protection and only the craters made by the artillery fire for cover, which were under continuous mortar, automatic-weapons, small-arms, and heavy artillery fire. Each man in the demolition squad carried 30 pounds of TNT with him through the intense heavy fire. When the infantry was pinned down, the demolition squads went ahead and placed their charges against the pillboxes and neutralized them. This allowed the infantry to move up and occupy the pillboxes. While the demolition squads were in the attack, the remainder of the company established a dump of several tons of TNT in a pillbox at the line of departure, and after the first assault, they brought more charges of TNT forward in ¼-ton trucks. Heavy casualties necessitated rotating of assault teams so that the entire company performed in that capacity. The enemy had many booby traps in the pillboxes, which the engineer soldiers inactivated and there were no casualties of this source during the attack. On 19 December 1944, the forts were destroyed by placing 1,600 pounds of TNT, which destroyed the ventilating system and forced the remaining enemy troops to leave by an escape hatch during the cover of darkness. The fighting aggressiveness, courage, and devotion to duty displayed by members of Company B, 325th Engineer Combat Battalion, are worthy of emulation and reflect honor on the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 168, Headquarters 100th Infantry Division, 16 June 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

3. The 1st Battalion, 307th Infantry Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 30 April to 5 May 1945, in the vicinity of Urasoe-Mura, Okinawa, Ryukyus Islands. During this period, the 1st Battalion, 307th Infantry Regiment, distinguished itself by its skillful and fearless performance of an extremely difficult mission, assaulting and securing the escarpment, a vertical cliff some 250 feet in height, in the vicinity of "Pinnacle Rock." This coral rock fortress, honeycombed with caves, corridors, and pillboxes, heavily fortified, and fanatically defended, had held up the general advance for 12 days. Starting its attack at 0730 on 30 April 1945, the battalion advanced inch by inch against a hail of enemy fire directed from above, and it suffered heavy casualties. Fighting to within 20 feet of the top, the battalion withstood all attempts to dislodge it, and at dawn the following day pushed over the top, using 30-foot scaling ladders and cargo nets, fighting the enemy with grenades and hand-to-hand, and blasting and burning out caves with gasoline and improvised explosives. The "seesaw" struggle for the top of the ridge continued without let up night and day during 3 and 4 May 1945, with men standing on the brink to hurl boxes of grenades at the enemy, who replied with machine guns, rifles, and grenades, often from positions only 50 yard away. On 5 May 1945, the battalion advanced all the way down the south side of the escarpment, blowing and sealing caves as it went. The battalion used over 6,000 hand grenades, fired over 18,000 rounds of mortar ammunition, and is credited with having killed 1,150 enemy during the operation. It captured one 75-mm and one 47-mm antitank gun, 7 heavy machine guns, 22 light machine guns, 6 heavy mortars, and innumerable knee mortars and rifles. There was a total of 309 casualties out of a total of 705 who entered the action. The extraordinary tenacity, courage, initiative, gallantry, and determination to close with the enemy exhibited by the officers and men of the 1st Battalion, 307th Infantry Regiment, reduced a key defensive position, made possible a general advance by the entire command, and are exemplary of the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 11, Headquarters 77th Infantry Division, 9 January 1946, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

4. The 2d Squadron, 7th Cavalry, reinforced by 2d Section, Antitank Platoon, Headquarters Troop, 7th Cavalry; P and D Section, Service Troop, 7th Cavalry; Liaison and Forward Observers Party, 99th Field Artillery Battalion; 1st Platoon, 2d Collecting Troop, 1st Medical Squadron; Detachment, 603d Tank Company, is cited for extraordinary gallantry, outstanding courage, determination, and esprit de corps in cracking the Shimbu Line near Antipolo, Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 23 February to 11 March 1945. The squadron was assigned the mission of driving through a series of hills between Tay Tay and Antipolo and securing a high escarpment dominating the city of Antipolo and the surrounding area. All hills within the assigned sector had been systematically developed into a huge fortified zone during the Japanese occupation. No entrenchments were visible from the air, or even at close visual range, without intensive terrain study with powerful scopes. Assaulting aggressively, the squadron seized a key terrain feature and was promptly subjected to intense sniper and machine-gun fire from all sides. The locations of hostile weapons were practically impossible to determine and the squadron, refusing to withdraw, dug in amid an increasing rate of casualties. That night, and for 9 successive nights, the squadron was subjected to intense previously registered mortar, artillery, and rocket barrages.

Supply details fought their way in and out to fortify the position and thus reduce the mounting casualty rate. Before the position could be properly fortified, the aid station was destroyed and the squadron commander and two troop commanders were wounded. Enlisted and officer casualties mounted daily. Grimly determined to continue the assault and fulfill its mission, the squadron ranged in all directions day and night, blowing bunkers and caves and engaging in hand-to-hand fighting against infiltrating parties and counterattacking Japanese. A 47-mm antitank gun was destroyed just 30 feet from the perimeter after patrols had bypassed it on 3 successive days. All patrols endeavoring to remain outside the perimeter in temporary entrenchments were subjected to previously registered barrages from knee mortars, 90-mm and 150-mm mortars and medium and heavy artillery. Tons of demolitions were utilized in sealing caves containing hostile troops and artillery and mortar positions of all types. Rocket and artillery positions were repeatedly destroyed by 37-mm and 75-mm guns manhandled to position within the perimeter. Hill faces were burned with white phosphorus from artillery and mortar shells and all spoil of any nature subjected to direct fire. On the 10th day, the squadron moved forward, continuing a ferocious offensive plan of systematic reduction of hostile defenses. On the 14th day, the objective was secured and the area completely mopped up. In the reduction of this fortified area, the squadron, while sustaining over 30 percent losses, by its aggressive, determined efforts killed over 1,000 Japanese and destroyed more than 300 bunkers and caves containing numerous artillery, mortar, machine gun, and rocket positions. In fulfilling its mission, the 2d Squadron, 7th Cavalry, with reinforcements, contributed directly to the complete disintegration of organized defense over a wide area and the total destruction of Shimbu Line. (General Orders 232, Headquarters 1st Cavalry Division, 8 December 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

5. The 6th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. This group was alerted for a maximum effort attack to take off only 36 hours after return of their bombers from a maximum effort mission, on which a large number of the aircraft had sustained extensive battle damage. Tireless and efficient work by the maintenance crews readied twenty-seven B-29's by take-off time on 25 May 1945 for this important attack against the last remaining strategically valuable industrial section of Tokyo not yet destroyed. In addition to the extreme hazards of long overwater flight and great distances from friendly bases, the bombing problem was such that the approximate route and altitude of attack were known to the enemy with consequent massing of defenses. Attacking first after the pathfinders when the defenses had been fully alerted and not yet saturated by the raid, the 6th Bombardment Group's aircraft were picked up by effective searchlights and clearly silhouetted from the initial point through the target area. Extremely intense and accurate heavy antiaircraft, automatic weapons fire, and rockets, all effective against low-level attacks, buffeted the bombers. The enemy air defenses were at maximum force with 41 night fighters making 28 aggressive attacks against the group's aircraft. In fighting them off, the gunners destroyed eight and damaged three hostile interceptors. As many as 50 suicide airplanes were also employed by the enemy in defense of this most important target. Three B-29's of the group force were lost and 14 heavily damaged in fighting their way through almost insurmountable defenses to complete successfully their assigned task. Through the indomitable courage, skill, and extraordinary devotion to duty in the face of fanatical enemy opposition exhibited by the combat crews in destroying their objective after a most hazardous mission, and the determination and technical mastery of the ground personnel, the 6th Bombardment Group (VH) rendered an invaluable contribution to the defeat of Japan, thereby reflecting great credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. General Orders 115, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 28 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

6. The 9th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. This group was directed to mobilize a maximum force to attack and destroy the industrial area of Kawasaki, Japan, on the night of 15-16 April 1945. The target represented a highly important link in the component productive capacity of the enemy upon which industries in Tokyo and Yokohama depended. Because of its strategic location between two heavily defended areas, the objective was strongly guarded by masses of defenses, both on the flanks and in the immediate target area, making the approach, the bomb run, and the break-away from the target extremely hazardous. Through their efficient, coordinated, and unceasing efforts, the maintenance crews readied thirty-three B-29's for take-off. The flight to the Japanese Empire was made at night at low level by individual aircraft over long stretches of water remote from friendly bases, requiring the utmost in physical endurance and superior technical skill. All airplanes kept well on the course, despite severe turbulence which interfered with the functioning of mechanical navigational equipment. The 9th Bombardment Group (VH) was last over the target, and the enemy defenses were fully alerted to the approximate bombing altitude and direction of attack. As a result, exceptionally close coordination between enemy searchlights and heavy and light antiaircraft guns brought the bombers under powerful concentrations of continuously pointed fire on the route to the target, over the objective, and on the break-away. Intense and extremely accurate fire from flak boats on the flight to and away from the target added to the fierce opposition. The enemy air defenses were heaviest in the target area. Fifty-six hostile fighters, many of which made aggressive attacks, and a number of suicide airplanes were encountered. Two interceptors were shot down in flames, attesting to the accuracy of the group's gunners. Four B-29's were lost and six received severe damage from enemy air and ground defenses while fighting their way through to strike the vital target. Through the great courage and unyielding determination of the combat crews in destroying this target and the skill and devotion to duty of the ground personnel, the 9th Bombardment Group (VH) contributed to the ultimate defeat of the enemy, thereby reflecting great credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 115, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 28 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

area. During the mission, a total of 122 fighter attacks were made at the intrepid air crews of the 19th Bombardment Group (VH). Massed ground defenses hurled heavy, accurate flak barrages at the B-29 formations, rocking the airplanes repeatedly. Sixteen very heavy bombers, virtually half the attacking force, were damaged by the fierce flak opposition. In the face of this savage air-ground resistance, the courageous flyers pressed on to the primary target. Their heavy loads of incendiaries crashed down on the strategically important industrial area of Kobe with excellent results. Fighting their way through continuing severe opposition on the break-away and flight to land's end, they successfully accomplished the hazardous return to their base on Guam. In fighting off the aggressive Japanese interceptors, which had attacked continually in the target area, they destroyed 11, probably destroyed 1, and damaged 7. By reaching the aiming point through this unusually savage resistance to bomb accurately their primary objective, the flyers of the 19th Bombardment Group (VH) provided an outstanding chapter in the history of the Army Air Forces. The successful completion of the mission, possible only through the exceptional courage and ability of the heroic flight crews and the devotion to duty and technical mastery of the determined ground personnel, was in the highest traditions of the armed services and reflects great credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 124, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 10 December 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

8. The 29th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. During the invasion of Okinawa, Allied naval and ground forces were seriously harrassed by enemy aircraft operating from bases on Kyushu. The 29th Bombardment Group (VH) was alerted to furnish tactical support by striking against the highly important and heavily defended Omura airfield on Kyushu. Fully realizing the utmost importance of the mission, the ground personnel labored tirelessly and constantly throughout the day and night to bring their B-29's to the best possible mechanical condition. On 31 March 1945, 23 of the group's very heavy bombers took off on the long overwater flight to the objective through hazardous tropical weather conditions. Fighter escort was not available in the theater and the entire mission was conducted without protection. Despite the hazards of the long flight to the Japanese mainland, they reached landfall successfully and pressed on to the strategic airfield. Upon approaching the vital target area, the intrepid crews were met by fierce enemy fighter opposition. Attacking singly, in pairs, and simultaneously from all directions, over 75 aggressive attacks were made on the group. Over the target, heavy antiaircraft ripped through the formations of courageous, unwavering crews. Despite the difficulties and dangers of the alerted enemy defenses, which caused considerable damage within the formations, the 29th Bombardment Group (VH) fought its way through and dropped its bombs on the airfield with excellent results. Eleven Japanese interceptors were destroyed, while three were probably destroyed, and one was damaged. The aggressiveness, courage, and heroic determination of the air crews who flew the mission, together with the exemplary devotion to duty and technical skill of the ground personnel in preparing for this all-out effort, resulted in brilliant accomplishments by the 29th Bombardment Group (VH) on this important strike. By providing vitally necessary tactical support for our forces invading Okinawa, they rendered an invaluable contribution to the war effort of the United States, thereby reflecting the highest credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces.

(General Orders 124, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 10 December 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

9. The 39th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. In preparation for a maximum effort bombing mission against the highly important Otake oil refinery and storage area on the Japanese home island of Honshu, the ground personnel worked with untiring vigor and exceptional technical ability to bring their B-29 aircraft to peak operating efficiency. On 10 May 1945, 29 very heavy bombers of the 39th Bombardment Group (VH), assigned to lead the entire wing on this vital strike, took off from their base on Guam. Over more than 1,500 miles of open sea, undaunted by the dangers of the flight and the attack against a heavily defended priority target in the heart of the enemy mainland, they pressed on to the initial point. On the bomb run, approximately 43 aggressive fighter attacks were made on the bombers, which were flying without benefit of friendly escort. Gallantly fighting off this fierce resistance, the gunners destroyed or damaged 10 of the attacking airplanes. Hostile ground installations hurled intense and accurate heavy caliber antiaircraft fire at the B-29's throughout the bomb run and well into the breakaway. Fifty vessels of the Japanese fleet, anchored in the Inland Sea near the target, added a shattering concentration of flak to the savage fire of the ground batteries. Despite this fanatical defense, which crippled aircraft throughout the formation, the determined crews of the 39th Bombardment Group (VH) pressed on unswervingly to the objective. From an average altitude of 15,400 feet, they cascaded high explosives on the oil refinery with extreme accuracy. Every squadron hammered the target with direct hits, achieving devastating results. On this bombardment, one of the most successful precision attacks of the Pacific air war, a vital source of high octane gasoline for the Japanese war machine was rendered completely inoperative. The exceptional resolution and courage exhibited by the combat crews on this highly important strike against the enemy and the technical skill and devotion to duty of the ground personnel combined to form a brilliant chapter in the history of the armed services of the United States. Their actions reflect highest credit on the 39th Bombardment Group (VH) and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 124, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 10 December 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Jean Landouzy, French Army, displayed extraordinary heroism in action on 4 April 1945 in Germany. Placed in charge of the 23d Colonial Infantry Regiment at the height of operations in Alsace, he exhibited the finest military qualities of initiative and courage. In preparation for the attack on Karlsruhe, he went forward to the most advanced positions to obtain vital information necessary to the successful conduct of the campaign. Without a thought for the great danger he was facing, Colonel Landouzy appeared in the midst of the bitter and ferocious street fighting, which succeeded in wresting the city from the enemy's grasp. The value of his example of heroism upon the morale of his troops cannot be overestimated.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Ralph P. Eaton, O15871 (then brigadier general), Infantry, United States Army. August 1944 to July 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Colonel Eaton for services from 17 December 1944 to 13 February 1945, as published in General Orders 21, Headquarters XVIII Corps, 18 March 1945.)

Major General Harry B. Vaughan, O7962, United States Army. March 1944 to March 1945.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Private First Class Eric B. Adney (Army serial No. 39273571), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 9 November 1944.

Colonel Ben W. Barclay, O175425, Air Corps, Army of the United States. March 1944 to March 1945.

Colonel Jack W. Durant, O279497, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. October 1940 to April 1945.

Major Floyd W. Hough, O114626, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. October 1944 to September 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Major Hough, for services from 25 October 1944 to 8 May 1945, as published in General Orders 290, Theater Service Forces, European Theater of Operations, 6 October 1945.)

VI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individuals:

Commandant Daniel Barlone, French Army. September 1944 to May 1945.

Monsieur Raymond Croze, civilian engineer in the French Postes, Telephones et Telegraphes. August 1944 to May 1945.

Second Lieutenant Sterling Garwood, O1061698, Infantry, Army of the United States. 19 December 1944.

Instructor Lieutenant George Lawrence Hogben, Royal New Zealand Navy. 1 March to 6 June 1944.

Major Hubert V. Johnson, O330842, Infantry, Army of the United States. 16 to 19 December 1944.

Group Captain G. M. Rambaut, Royal Air Force. September 1942 to January 1944.

Lieutenant Colonel Dennis H. Thompson, British Army. 11 September to 10 October 1944.

VII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 2d Battalion, 413th Infantry Regiment, reinforced by the following units:

2d Platoon, Antitank Company, 413th Infantry Regiment;

FO Parties (3), 385th Field Artillery Battalion;

Liaison Party, 385th Field Artillery Battalion;

FO Party, Cannon Company, 413th Infantry Regiment;

2d Platoon, Company B, 750th Tank Battalion;

Medical Detachment, 2d Battalion Section, 413th Infantry Regiment;

FO Party, Company A, 87th Chemical Mortar Battalion.

is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty against the enemy in the vicinity of Duren, Germany, during the period 24 to 26 February 1945. In the first of a series of night thrusts, the battalion advanced across 2,000 yards of flat terrain crisscrossed by enemy entrenchments, to seize a railroad marshalling yard, its initial objective. Two hundred enemy troops were killed and captured in the attack. Quickly reorganizing, the 2d Battalion, 413th Infantry Regiment, repulsed, without yielding ground, three enemy counterattacks by German infantry supported by self-propelled guns and mortars. At 0300, 25 February, the battalion again advanced under cover of darkness to seize the next objective, a moated castle 3,000 yards away. Although all the approaches to the castle were defended and the surrounding woods occupied by enemy troops, the 2d Battalion, 413th Infantry Regiment, assaulted the strong point and engaged in hand-to-hand combat until all resistance was overcome and the garrison either killed or captured. At daylight, the battalion was counterattacked from the rear and front simultaneously by enemy infantry now supported by artillery, as well as self-propelled guns, flak guns, and mortars. Containing the frontal counterattack by fire, the American battalion destroyed the attacking force in its rear. Then by concentrating all fire power to the front, the second enemy force was annihilated. This success was followed up by an aggressive assault, which completely overran the main enemy defenses in the area consisting of elaborate entrenchments and 88-mm guns in concrete emplacements. The final action led to the break-out of American armor onto the Cologne plain. The initiative, courage, and aggressiveness of the 2d Battalion, 413th Infantry Regiment and its attached units are in keeping with the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

VIII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Doctor Ernest Carroll Faust, American civilian, as director of the Commission on Schistosomiasis, Army Epidemiological Board, on Leyte, Philippine Islands, from April to August 1945, ably directed the study of a worm parasite of the blood vessels. Working under difficult conditions, he established a laboratory and arranged field studies and experimentations, which, in turn, served as a basis for instituting diagnostic and protective measures. Doctor Faust's accomplishments furthered the control of a disease which threatened our military operations in this area.

Doctor Thomas Francis, Jr., American civilian, as Director of the Commission on Influenza, Army Epidemiological Board, served in various theaters from March 1944 to July 1945. As a leading authority on influenza and originator of its vaccine adopted by our Army, his counsel was constantly sought on this and measures to combat jaundice and gas gangrene. Doctor Francis' contribution to the control of influenza is of special significance and materially strengthens the future health of our military and civilian population.

Doctor John R. Paul, American civilian, director of the Commission on Neurotropic Virus Diseases, Army Epidemiological Board, in North Africa and the Middle East from April 1943 to February 1944. Working under the hardships of campaign conditions, he ably conducted experiments which yielded new information on the causes, modes of transmission, and measures for reducing the spread of sandfly fever and other maladies peculiar to this region. Doctor Paul's accomplishments represent a further contribution to the field of military and civilian preventive medicine.

the Mediterranean and European Theaters of Operations from October to December 1944, as director of the Commission on Measles and Mumps, Army Epidemiological Board. Possessing a broad knowledge of the scourge to combat troops—jaundice—he ably undertook the application of certain immunizations at a time when it was becoming a serious hazard to the health of our soldiers, with consequent obstacle to operations. Doctor Stokes' experiments and their application in this field contributed materially to the success of military operations in these theaters.

IX.—UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individuals:

Major David H. Clement, O404734, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services as surgeon in charge of the United States of America Typhus Commission ward in the 116th Evacuation Hospital at Dachau, Germany, from 10 May to 10 June 1945. Major Clement's devoted supervision of the care of patients suffering from epidemic typhus and his scrupulous attention to the accurate management of therapy with immune serum and with para-aminobenzoic acid contributed directly to humanitarian service and to the improvement in methods of treatment of typhus fever.

Doctor Herald R. Cox, American civilian, distinguished himself as a consultant to the United States of America Typhus Commission from December 1942 to December 1945. While continuing his notable work with the development of typhus vaccine, he also gave valuable aid in producing serums to treat diseases of the typhus group and in investigating the problems of a vaccine against scrub typhus. Doctor Cox's work was highly beneficial in the campaign against typhus fever and was a distinct contribution to scientific knowledge.

Edward F. Knipling, senior entomologist, Department of Agriculture, performed exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the activities of the United States of America Typhus Commission from December 1942 to January 1946. As director of the Orlando Laboratory of the Division of Insects Affecting Man and Animals, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, Department of Agriculture, Mr. Knipling planned and directed investigations in the development of insecticides and repellents for the prevention of disease in the United States Army. These studies, enlarging scientific knowledge, led to the effective use of DDT in the control of epidemic typhus fever and of dimethyl phthalate as a repellent for the prevention of scrub typhus. Mr. Knipling's contributions served as a basis for preventive measures, which were highly effective in protecting troops from disease and in controlling epidemics among civilian populations.

Colonel Edward S. Murphy, O238238, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, as assistant surgeon, First Army, from 6 March to 8 May 1945 in Germany, exhibited keen professional ability and untiring effort in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the investigation, prevention, and control of the spread of the deadly disease among American troops and countless thousands of civilian personnel in the occupied area. Colonel Murphy's organization of efficient control groups and institution of prompt preventive measures were responsible for the low incidence of typhus in his command.

Captain Maurice L. Steinacker, O1554828, Ordnance Department, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious services as chief of the botany section of the field headquarters, United States of America Typhus Commission, from April to November 1945. Captain Steinacker, an expert botanist, with great capacity for field investigations under campaign conditions, made extensive studies of the flora of the areas in which scrub typhus was a menace to the health of the troops. Captain Steinacker's work aided in the protection of the health of the troops against scrub typhus and was a definite contribution to the advance of scientific knowledge.

1. The 148th Infantry Regiment is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy at Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 9 January to 4 March 1945. In every phase of the campaign in which it participated, the 148th Infantry Regiment achieved spectacular success, carrying out its missions with courage and speedy efficiency. By its capture of the critical road junction of Plaridel by spearheading the drive into Manila from the north, advancing 137 miles in 24 days, by its liberation of the Americans interned at Bilibid Prison and the patients and refugees at the Philippine General Hospital, by establishing, under fire, the vital bridgehead across the Pasig River and by the major role it played in destroying the fanatical Japanese garrison in Manila, the 148th Infantry Regiment contributed immeasurably to the brilliant success achieved by the United States forces in the Luzon campaign. In every engagement, the regiment exhibited outstanding combat efficiency by uniformly inflicting severe losses on the enemy, while sustaining only moderate casualties. Each unit of the regiment performed its assigned duty with consummate skill and fidelity. Service troops worked unceasingly to supply the combat troops, the medical detachment performed innumerable acts of gallantry in caring for both soldiers and civilians, and the cannon company gave invaluable direct fire support. Over open ground, through city streets, the 148th Infantry Regiment met and decisively defeated the enemy wherever he chose to make a stand. Its brilliant combat record is a tribute to the courage and skill of every man in the regiment and exemplifies the finest traditions of the military service.

2. The 442d Regimental Combat Team (less the 552d Field Artillery Battalion) composed of the following elements:

232d Combat Engineer Company.

is cited for outstanding accomplishment in combat for the period 5 to 14 April 1945 in the vicinity of Serravezza, Carrara, and Fosdinovo, Italy. When the 92d Infantry Division with the 442d Regimental Combat Team attached was ordered to open the Fifth Army offensive by executing a diversionary attack on the Ligurian Coast of Italy, the combat team was ordered to make the main effort of the attack. It was done by executing a daring and skillful flanking attack on the positions which formed the western anchor of the formidable Gothic Line. In 4 days, the attack destroyed positions which had withstood the efforts of friendly troops for 5 months. This was accomplished in the face of skilled enemy forces nearly equal in strength to the attacking forces and who had at least 5 months in which to improve their position. The 442d Regimental Combat Team drove forward, despite heavy casualties. Allowing the enemy no time for rest or reorganization, the combat team liberated the city of Carrara, seized the heights beyond, and opened the way for further advances on the way to the key road center and port of La Spezia and to Genoa. It accomplished the mission of creating a diversion along the Ligurian Coast, which served as a feint for the subsequent break-through of the Fifth Army forces into Bologna and the Po Valley. The successful accomplishment of this mission turned a diversionary action into a full scale and victorious offensive, which played an important part in the final destruction of the German armies in Italy. The gallantry and esprit de corps displayed by the officers and men of the 442d Regimental Combat Team in bitter action against a formidable enemy exemplify the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

VIII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Doctor Robert F. Rinehart, performed meritorious service as a member of the Antisubmarine Warfare Operations Research Group, Trinidad Sector, The Caribbean Sea Frontier, from November 1942 to July 1943. He contributed many outstanding ideas and plans, some adopted locally, others used universally. Doctor Rinehart's contributions materially increased the effectiveness of the Army Air Forces antisubmarine warfare and were of great value in that phase of our military operations.

James Davidson Taylor, American civilian, performed exceptionally meritorious services as Deputy Chief of Radio, Psychological Warfare Division, in Europe from March 1944 to May 1945. He assisted in writing and producing D-day broadcasts, his voice was that used at the microphone. Throughout the liberation of northwest Europe and the conquering of Germany, Mr. Taylor's writing, producing, and other radio activities played an important part in the psychological warfare's contribution to the Allied successes.

John H. Thompson, American civilian, displayed meritorious conduct in North Africa and Sicily from June to August 1943. Assigned to cover the initial operations by American paratroopers, he accompanied the 82d Airborne Division in the invasion of Sicily and, altho injured in the jump, Mr. Thompson remained with it during the fierce battle of Biazzo Ridge, assisting the wounded.

IX. LIFE-SAVING MEDAL.—Under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 June 1874, as amended by the act of Congress approved 4 May 1882, a silver Life-Saving Medal was awarded by the Treasury Department to the following-named individual:

Walter H. Ahlstrand, civilian employee of the War Department at Fort Winfield Scott, California. In recognition of his services in bravely rescuing one man from drowning on 19 September 1945.

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—So much of section VIII, WD General Orders 8, 1946, as pertains to Staff Sergeant John P. Meyers, Corps of Engineers, is rescinded (see sec. III above).

I. UNITED STATES ARMY TRANSPORT.—WD General Orders 23, 1945, designating the United States Army transport Aleda E. Lutz as a hospital ship, is rescinded.

[AG 560 (3 Apr 46)]

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Russell A. Freas, Jr., O412670, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed outstanding courage and leadership on 16 December 1944 as commanding officer, Service Company 423d Infantry Regiment. As part of a counter-attacking force against Bleialf, Germany, his troops, fighting as riflemen for the first time, gallantly pushed the Germans out of town in their zone. Captain Freas personally led his men into many of the buildings, capturing a number of prisoners himself. His heroic actions played a vital part in retaking Bleialf and the capture of some 75 prisoners.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Philip K. Allen, O420522, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. May 1943 to October 1945.

Captain Augustus J. Bender, Jr., O1053910 (formerly first lieutenant), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. May 1943 to February 1944.

Colonel Carl A. Waldmann, O3447, Ordnance Department, United States Army. September 1939 to December 1945.

Colonel John D. Yeagley, O273252, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. February 1943 to November 1945.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Maurice E. H. Rotival, French Army. April to July 1945.

Air Marshal Sir Harold Whittingham, Royal Air Force. June 1942, to January 1944.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit in the Degree of

Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Hugh Arbuthnott, British Army. December 1944 to May 1945.

Wing Commander Reginald K. Budge, Royal Air Force. April 1942 to April 1945.

Colonel T. B. Bunting, British Army, May to November 1944.

Group Captain F. C. Daubney, Royal Air Force. April 1942 to April 1945.

Colonel Bohumil Bohuslav Ecer, Czechoslovakian Army. May to July 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel D. M. Findlay, British Army. September 1942 to April 1943.

Colonel Albert Laurent, French Army. October 1944 to July 1945.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel F. E. Louwage, Belgian Army. September 1944 to May 1945.

First Lieutenant Jean E. Poniatowski, French Army. August to November 1944.

Group Captain Frederick C. Read, Royal Air Force. April to September 1944.

V. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individual:

Major Carl H. Cosby, O383501, Infantry, Army of the United States. 16 to 19 December 1944.

John W. Gordon, American Red Cross. November 1944 to May 1945.

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer of each of the following commands is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial:

- Air Matériel Command.
- Air Defense Command.
- Strategic Air Command.
- Tactical Air Command.
- Air University.
- Fifteenth Air Force.

[AG 250.401 (29 Mar 46)]

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Jean Marie Leon Piatte, French Army, as Commanding Officer, 4th Moroccan Tirailleur Regiment, on 17 November 1944 in France, personally led his forces under violent enemy fire in their vitally essential mission to cross the Doller River. At that time, as well as upon countless other occasions, he was in the thick of battle checking on positions and giving encouragement to his men, completely unconcerned for his own safety. Colonel Piatte's extraordinary heroism was an illustrious reminder of the devotion which brought glory to France in the past and which is accompanying her restoration to preeminence.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Garland C. Black, O9697, United States Army. September to December 1944 and January to May 1945.

Brigadier General James W. Younger, O8335, United States Army. September 1944 to May 1945.

IV. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Charles M. Wesson, as published in WD General Orders 49, 1922, a second bronze Oak Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Charles M. Wesson, O1635, United States Army. October 1942 to October 1945.

V. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain James L. Manning, O461032, Infantry, Army of the United States, as commanding officer of Cannon Company, 423d Infantry Regiment, heroically directed his troops in repulsing heavy enemy attacks and in making a successful counterattack near Bleialf, Germany, on 16 December 1944. Members of his cannon company fought as infantry riflemen in a gallant defensive stand and participated in the counterattack which regained Bleialf. While coordinating defensive measures against a new German attack in front of the town, Captain Manning was mortally wounded.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Lieutenant Colonel Ainsworth Blogg, O174763, Infantry, Army of the United States. April 1942 to November 1945.

Colonel Theodore M. Bolen, O17888, Air Corps, United States Army. July to December 1942.

Colonel Walter A. Linn, O226048, Infantry, Army of the United States. June 1943 to March 1946.

Lieutenant Colonel John J. McDonough, O922655, Army of the United States. March 1943 to August 1945.

Private First Class John Pope (Army Serial No. 17130578), Detached Enlisted Men's List, Army of the United States. October 1944 to January 1946.

Staff Sergeant James E. Ritchey (Army Serial No. 39128007), Air Corps, Army of the United States. January 1944 to March 1945.

Colonel John A. Seitz, O274247, Field Artillery (General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. June 1942 to November 1944.

Major William G. Tharp, O302833, Infantry, Army of the United States. March 1944 to September 1945.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (Sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

General de Brigade Pierre Raymond Puccinelli, French Army. September 1944 to January 1945.

VIII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Westray Battle

Boyce, as published in General Orders 97, North African Theater of Operations, United States Army Forces, 27 September 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to her by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Westray Battle Boyce, L303512, Women's Army Corps, Army of the United States. September 1944 to January 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Joseph B. Crawford, as published in WD General Orders 49, 1943, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Joseph B. Crawford, O19215, General Staff Corps, United States Army. January 1945 to March 1946.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Max S. Johnson, as published in General Orders 35, European Theater, 14 March 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Max S. Johnson, O16745, General Staff Corps, United States Army. February 1945 to March 1946.

IX. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Leland H. Henderson, O745090, Air Corps, Army of the United States.

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Chaplain (captain) Harry W. Alexander, O463511, Corps of Chaplains, Army of the United States. 16 to 19 December 1944.

Major Allen B. Willand, O283828, Infantry, Army of the United States. 16 to 19 December 1944.

XI. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Second Lieutenant Clyde A. Gunderson, O690951, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 10 February 1944.

XII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 2d Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in the Cabaruan Hills, Luzon, Philippine Islands, during the period 17 to 23 January 1945. On 17 January 1945, the 2d Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, attacked a Jap defensive area in the northern part of the Cabaruan Hills on the flank of the main avenue of approach to the Central Plains of Luzon, Philippine Islands. The enemy force, an infantry battalion reinforced with artillery and antitank guns, was elaborately dug in on a series of low hills and ridges which were covered with masses of bamboo and heavy scrub. Approaches to these hill positions were open and offered little cover to attacking forces. The enemy's defense was in depth and highly organized. Not once during the action did the enemy withdraw from a position, but on the contrary, chose to die to the last man. For 6 days, the battalion pushed the attack against fanatical enemy resistance, making costly gains of from 500 to 1,000 yards daily. The enemy could not be shot out of his positions by artillery, air bombardment, or heavy mortar fire, but had to be dug out and burned out. Assaulting troops, closing in hand-to-hand combat, came under heavy fire at point-blank range. In one attack, the battalion lost two company commanders, two platoon leaders, and one first sergeant killed. By 23 January, this battalion, despite crippling losses, had secured its assigned objective, killing 879 Japs and destroying or capturing five 75-mm guns, three 37-mm guns, 18 machine guns, 1 tankette, and 1 scout car in the advance. No enemy prisoners of war were taken. The battalion suffered 45 dead and 105 wounded. Casualties included four company commanders and two first sergeants. By its heroic action, the battalion helped clear the way for the rapid advance of American troops through the Central Valley to Manila. The gallantry, determination, and self-sacrificing devotion to duty displayed by every officer and man of the 2d Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, exemplify the highest traditions of the Army of the United States. (General Orders 163, Headquarters 6th Infantry Division, 15 August 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

XIII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Charles D. Jackson, American civilian, rendered outstanding services as civilian deputy of the staff officer in charge of Allied psychological warfare activities in North Africa and France from May 1943 to March 1945. Mr. Jackson contributed materially to the successful operation of a joint Anglo-American headquarters and was an important factor in preparing press and radio announcements of the Italian armistice, in planning the psychological warfare in the Normandy campaign, and in rehabilitating information services in France, Belgium, and Holland.

upon the industrial area of Nagoya, bringing to 9.2 square miles the total area devastated in that highly industrialized city, the center of the Japanese aircraft industry. These three daring daylight missions were conducted without the protection of fighter escort against targets heavily defended by enemy flak and fighters. Flying through dangerous tropical weather conditions over great expanses of trackless ocean, the intrepid crews demonstrated repeatedly their conspicuous courage, professional skill, and devotion to duty. The combined achievements of these crews and of the ground personnel of the 40th Bombardment Group (VH) reflect great honor on themselves and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 13, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 23 January 1946.)

3. The 108th Engineer Combat Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 19 February to 1 May 1945. Question Mark Hill and Bench Mark Hill, vital points commanding the Pozzorubbio-Rosario Highway, taken by our infantry after fierce fighting and heavy casualties, were in imminent danger of being lost because of the extreme difficulty of supply. Engineer troops, working under enemy artillery, mortar, and small-arms fire, supplied the infantry with water by hand carry over a 7-hour long, tortuous mountain trail and constructed a supply road rising 800 feet in a distance of 2 miles over narrow hogback ridges that dropped precipitously 300 to 500 feet at many places. To support a wide envelopment, another 3-mile road was pushed under enemy fire from Alibeng to Hill 1802, an elevation of 1,600 feet. In the next phase of the campaign, constantly harrassed by enemy infiltration attacks by night and artillery and sniper fire by day, a 10-mile supply road was built from Rosario to Pugo. Working in advance of the infantry, the bridges of the Agoo-Pugo Road were opened and mine fields removed, enabling the infantry to make a surprise advance in force from positions many miles to the rear. To support one prong of the attack on Baguio, a road was necessary from Pugo to Tuoa. Although advised by higher headquarters that road construction over the mountains in that area was impossible, engineer reconnaissance patrols were operated deep into enemy territory, a road surveyed and pushed to an elevation of 4,400 feet in a distance of 8 miles, despite numerous enemy suicide patrol attacks to destroy road building equipment. Meanwhile, to support the advance toward Baguio along the coastal route, engineers cleared the road and repaired the bridges north of Aringay. Under cover of darkness and while the infantry enveloped the town of Bauang from the west, an engineer detachment removed enemy demolitions from two 640-foot spans across the Bauang River and seized and held the bridges against enemy resistance. The division front was now extended from San Fernando to San Manuel, a distance of 65 miles. To prevent an enemy salient, our troops had to be moved from Gaba to Galiano under observation of the enemy holding the Naguillian Road and Bilbil Mountain to the north. Despite almost nightly enemy attacks, the 13 miles of road were constructed in 15 days over the most difficult terrain. Meanwhile, other elements of the 108th Engineer Combat Battalion in a move to open up the tortuous and canalized Kennon Road, against determined and continuous enemy resistance and frequently without any friendly infantry support, destroyed enemy strong points commanding mine fields, removed the mines, and repaired bridges under cover of supporting fires provided by themselves. These and the many other roads built and repaired by the 108th Engineer Combat Battalion were vital supply roads capable of sustaining division loads and enabling the supply and evacuation incident to an operation of reinforced division. While contributing so enormously to the winning of the battle of supply, the engineers continued to perform other engineer functions, which were complicated and increased because of the great length of division front and rapidity of advance. The outstanding performance of duty and the bold, vigorous, and aggressive action displayed by the personnel of the 108th Engineer Combat Battalion, in the face of seemingly insurmountable difficulties, presented an inspiring example to other units of the division, exemplified their deep devotion to duty, and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the Corps of Engineers and the United States Army. (General Orders 315, Headquarters 33d Infantry Division, 24 October 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

4. The 444th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. During the period 10-14 May 1945, this group bombed three strategically important and heavily defended enemy installations with conspicuously successful results, which materially contributed to the destruction of Japan's productive power and ability to continue the war. Almost immediately after arriving at its new base in the Marianas, the 444th Bombardment Group (VH) was called upon to participate in a series of maximum effort strikes against the Japanese Empire. Working tirelessly and effectively despite the dual handicap of inadequate personnel and facilities, the ground crews provided a maximum number of aircraft in the best mechanical condition for each mission. On 10 May 1945, the important Oshima oil storage installation at Oshima, Japan, was virtually destroyed, denying to the Japanese an estimated 2,000,000 barrels of critical oil storage capacity. Within 24 hours, on 11 May 1945, 40 percent of the Kawanishi aircraft plant near Kobe, Japan, was bombed to rubble by aircraft of this same group. Demonstrating a remarkable ability to maintain a rapid pace of operations, the courageous crews of the 444th Bombardment Group (VH) participated in a major effort daylight incendiary attack on 14 May against the center of Japanese aircraft production, Nagoya, Japan. As a result of this raid, 3.2 square miles of vital industrial area lay in smoking ruins. These three daring daylight missions were executed in the face of heavy antiaircraft fire and enemy fighter opposition and were flown without fighter escort. The success of these operations is a tribute to the skillful, preserving, and tireless combat crews and ground personnel of the 444th Bombardment Group (VH). Their achievements reflect great honor on themselves and the Armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 13, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 23 January 1943.)

5. The 462d Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 23-29 May 1945. During this period, the final strikes against the heavily defended Tokyo and Yokohama industrial areas were carried out, completing the destruction of the militarily important sections of these cities. Striking in great force twice within a 48-hour period on 23 and 25 May 1945, the courageous crews of the 462d Bombardment Group (VH) contributed materially to the destruction of 22.1 square miles of vital industrial area in Tokyo, bringing to 56.3 square miles the total area devastated in this, one of the world's largest cities. Three days later, on 29 May 1945, this group participated in a bold daylight attack on Yokohama, which reduced to rubble 6.9 square miles of strategically important industrial area. The effect of these three missions upon the Japanese ability to wage war was immeasurable, and the loss to the Japanese in morale was a staggering one. Despite the fatiguing nature of the long, hazardous, overwater flights and the rapidity with which these missions were conducted, the crews exhibited an unwavering spirit of willingness to perform their tasks. On all missions, they braved intense and accurate antiaircraft fire. More than 75 aggressive enemy fighters were encountered by aircraft of the 462d Bombardment Group (VH) on these three missions, but the gallant crews pressed on to their targets, destroying 15 of the attacking aircraft and probably destroying 3. During this momentous period, the ground personnel worked steadily throughout the day and night, determined to get a maximum number of their aircraft in the best possible mechanical condition for each of these three missions. Their conspicuous effort, together with the high skill and determination of the gallant air crews, reflect great credit on the 462d Bombardment Group (VH) and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 13, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 23 January 1946.)

6. The 462d Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in connection with daylight precision bombing of the Kawanishi aircraft plant at Takarazuka on 24 July 1945. As part of an all-out effort to smash Japanese aircraft production, the 462d Bombardment Group (VH) and one other group from the 58th Bombardment Wing were given the assignment of destroying the Kawanishi aircraft factory, which manufactured components of a dangerous Japanese navy fighter airplane. As the result of unremitting efforts of the ground personnel, this group put 42 airplanes in the air for this important raid, despite the fact that 7 previous missions had been run during July and maintenance demands had been unusually high. Because a total of more than 600 American airplanes were operating over Japan that day, the enemy defenders were especially alert and the 462d Bombardment Group (VH) ran into a hail of antiaircraft fire at Kobe and Osaka on its way to the target area. The fire was so intense that 28 aircraft of this group were hit by enemy flak, but continued undaunted on their bombing run. Before retiring from the deadly area, the group dropped 205 tons of explosives on the Kawanishi plant. Subsequent photographs revealed that the aircraft factory had been 85 percent destroyed, thus materially reducing the Japanese power. The professional skill of the 462d Bombardment Group (VH), in the heat of the battle and in the face of the bitterest opposition, and the unyielding determination with which it gallantly carried out its missions are outstanding examples of leadership, esprit de corps, and tenacity of purpose and reflect the highest credit on the group and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 135, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 24 December 1945.)

7. The 468th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. During the period 23-29 May 1945, the destruction of the militarily important industrial areas of Tokyo and Yokohama was completed, despite the fierce enemy antiaircraft fire from these most heavily defended points of the Japanese mainland. On 23 and 25 May 1945, the heroic efforts of all personnel of the 468th Bombardment Group (VH) contributed materially to the destruction of an additional 22.1 square miles of vital industrial area in Tokyo, bringing to 56.3 square miles the total area devastated within that city, the center of Japan's war industry. Before the Japanese had time to recover from this staggering blow to their morale and war potential, this group participated in a daring daylight strike on 29 May 1945 against the city of Yokohama, a single attack in great force, which reduced to rubble 6.9 square miles of the city's most important industrial area. The success of this series of missions, flown as they were in rapid succession and over vast expanses of open sea, despite dangerous tropical weather conditions and intense enemy opposition, is a reflection of the exemplary devotion to duty demonstrated by the ground personnel and of the great professional skill, tenacity, and courage of the air crews. The achievements of the 468th Bombardment Group (VH) during this period of sustained effort reflect great honor on themselves and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 13, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 23 January 1946.)

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named enlisted man:

Corporal Harry R. Harr (Army serial No. 33256924), an acting squad leader of Company D, 124th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity near Maglamin, Mindanao, Philippine Islands, on 5 June 1945. In a fierce counterattack, the Japanese closed in on his machine-gun emplacement hurling grenades, one of which exploded under the gun, putting it out of action and wounding two of the crew. While the remaining gunners were desperately attempting to repair their weapon, another grenade landed squarely in the emplacement. Quickly realizing he could not safely throw the unexploded missile from the crowded position, Corporal Harr unhesitatingly covered it with his body to smother the blast. His supremely courageous act, which cost him his life, saved four of his comrades and enabled them to continue their mission.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier General Lawrence J. Carr, O12764, United States Army. December 1944 to September 1945.
- Colonel Arden Freer, O3927, Medical Corps, United States Army. October 1942 to January 1946.
- Colonel Francis C. Gideon, O23034, General Staff Corps, United States Army. December 1943 to September 1945.
- Colonel Terence J. Tully, O12823 (then brigadier general), Signal Corps, United States Army. April 1943 to September 1944. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Colonel Tully, for services from 4 July to 28 September 1944, as published in General Orders 100, Headquarters North African Theater of Operations, 30 September 1944.)

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of

Lieutenant Colonel George A. Logan, Jr., O349035, Infantry, Army of the United States. April to September 1944.

IX. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Doctor Henry B. Hazard, American civilian, as a representative of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, from February to December 1943 and February 1944 to January 1945, traveled more than 94,000 miles. He visited Iceland, England, North Africa, Italy, Middle East, Australia, New Zealand, New Guinea, and many islands of the Pacific, administering the coveted oath of American citizenship to more than 6,500 members of our armed forces. Never sparing himself, Doctor Hazard contributed materially to the morale and usefulness of many individuals.

Don S. Momand, American civilian, as clubmobile director, deputy, and later acting commissioner, American Red Cross, in Great Britain and Europe, from April 1943 to October 1945, contributed much to the success of the European campaign. Mr. Momand's able leadership and outstanding executive ability were displayed in all phases of Red Cross activity and were excelled only by his tact, devotion to duty, and a deep understanding of the needs of the American soldier.

X. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and section V, WD Circular 142, 1944, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Oral B. Bolibaugh, O4179, Medical Corps, United States Army, distinguished himself by exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission during the period 11 May to 10 June 1945 in Germany. He took charge of and administered the details for the control of an epidemic of typhus fever raging in the midst of thousands of concentration camp internees, who were in such poor physical condition from starvation and other diseases as to furnish an unusually fertile field for the spread of this dreaded disease.

XI. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section VI, WD General Orders 9, 1946, as pertains to Brigadier General David L. Ruffner, United States Army, is rescinded (see par. 5, sec. VI above).

XII. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of section IV, WD General Orders 46, 1945, as pertains to Major Frederic A. Borsodi, Air Corps, as reads "Distinguished-Flying Cross was awarded posthumously" is amended to read "a bronze Oak-Leaf cluster was awarded posthumously."

VIII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul, 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul, 11, 1942), citation of the following unit, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater, by 11th Indorsement, 200.6 GAP-AGP-G, 12 February 1946, is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

Company C, 237th Engineer Combat Battalion, is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy on 23 February 1945 in the vicinity of Mariaweller, Germany. Company C was assigned the difficult mission of constructing a bridge across a fast-flowing river during an assault crossing. The men of the battalion crossed the river with the leading assault waves after conducting a night reconnaissance across flat, open terrain in the face of heavy fire and over mined terrain. Heavy enemy mortar fire immediately began falling on the bridge site, and when only four bays of the bridge had been launched, a direct hit by a heavy enemy artillery shell caused a high number of casualties and completely destroyed the work already accomplished. After numerous gallant attempts to construct the bridge, it was decided to change the site of the bridge to a slightly more defiladed place, and the building material was carried by the exhausted men to a position 200 yards away from the original site. Antipersonnel mines were cleared from the approaches and the work was continued, despite harassing machine-gun, mortar, and observed artillery fire. At 2400 hours, 23 February 1945, after 20 hours of exhausting work in cold, turbulent water and under heavy fire, the bridge was opened—the first bridge in the corps zone of action. Throughout the entire action, the officers and men of Company C, 237th Engineer Combat Battalion, distinguished themselves by great determination, outstanding aggressiveness, and superior combat discipline, accomplishing an extremely difficult task, despite heavy losses of men and material and contributing materially to the success of the entire corps in an extremely important assault operation. The initiative, courage, and esprit de corps displayed by Company C, 237th Engineer Combat Battalion, reflect the highest credit on the armed forces of the United States.

(This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Colonel Dunne, for services from 20 September 1944 to 25 January 1945, as published in General Orders 15, Eighth Army, 16 February 1945.)

Colonel George A. A. Jones, O14845, General Staff Corps (Field Artillery), United States Army. December 1944 to January 1945 and February to September 1945.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant General John K. Cannon, as published in WD General Orders 15, 1944, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant General John K. Cannon, O10212, United States Army. June 1945 to February 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General Morris W. Gilland, as published in WD General Orders 83, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Morris W. Gilland, O12066, United States Army. July 1943 to October 1944.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant General Ennis C. Whitehead, as published in WD General Orders 10, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant General Ennis C. Whitehead, O10572, United States Army. June 1944 to December 1945.

IV.—SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Jerzy Maria Pawel Orski, G. S. O., O. C., Division Artillery, 5th Kresowa Infantry Division, Polish Army, displayed gallantry in action from 17 October to 17 November 1944 and from 22 December 1944 to 9 February 1945 in Italy while commanding the division's artillery and attached artillery regiments. Difficult mountainous terrain in the Apennines, heavy rains, snowfall, disadvantageous positions of his own group with enemy positions firmly entrenched above, and heavy enemy shelling did not deter him in his mission. By directing artillery fire from advanced observation posts, by his gallantry in critical moments, conscientious devotion to duty, and skillful leadership, he supported the morale of his troops while breaking down that of the enemy. Colonel Orski's command's efficient shelling of enemy artillery and mortars in advance of the infantry was of notable help in the capture of many strategically important localities and in the frustration of enemy attempts to break through defense lines during the winter containing actions.

V.—LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. Brigadier General Carl B. McDaniel, O15380, United States Army. 1 October 1940 to 15 September 1943.

XI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in General Orders 135, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 24 December 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Twentieth Air Force, are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 40th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 24 July 1945. In a daring daylight raid, this group led a bombing attack which destroyed the Sumitomo light metal industries at Osaka, an important source of duralumin and propellers used by Japanese military aircraft. Although the 40th Bombardment Group (VH) had already run several missions during the month, a total of forty-three B-29's were put in the air for this extremely important strategic strike through the untiring devotion to duty of the ground and maintenance personnel. This was the largest number of aircraft put in the air for one mission by this group up to that time. Upon approaching the target after a perilous flight over 1,500 miles of open sea, the group was greeted by barrages of the most accurate and intense flak they had ever experienced over Japan. The air crews, gallantly braving the withering fire which damaged 19 of their aircraft, pressed on to their objective.

The B-29's of the 40th Bombardment Group (VH) won through to the target, where they demonstrated superior professional skill and amazing calmness under fire by dropping 85 percent of their 240-ton bomb load within 1,000 feet of the aiming point. All four formations of the group bombed within a time interval of approximately 2 minutes, which is an outstanding precision bombing performance. The determination and extraordinary heroism with which the 40th Bombardment Group (VH) drove through almost impregnable antiaircraft fire and the coolness and high degree of professional skill with which the group destroyed their extremely important strategic target are conspicuously outstanding in the record of gallantry and accomplishment of the Army Air Forces.

2. The 444th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 24 July 1945. In one of the most accurate daylight precision bombing raids ever staged against the Japanese Empire, the 444th Bombardment Group (VH), in company with one other group from the 58th Bombardment Wing, destroyed the Sumitomo light metal industries plant in Osaka, which produced duralumin and propellers for Japanese combat aircraft. The group heroically flew straight to its vital target through one of the most dense concentrations of antiaircraft fire it had ever encountered over Japan. While the tight formation of B-29's was on its bombing run, 1 airplane suffered a direct hit and broke apart, with the loss of 11 crew members. Although there was grave danger that bombs from the doomed aircraft would explode in their path, the remaining bombers refused to break formation and held their course. In the flak-saturated skies over the target, 28 of the 42 remaining airplanes were damaged, but all won through to their objective. Aircraft of the group pinpointed 248 tons of 4,000-pounders on the metal works, which literally pulverized the buildings and equipment in the target area. When the badly crippled group withdrew from Osaka, the Sumitomo works was 95 percent destroyed. In carrying out this assigned mission of great strategic importance despite savage enemy opposition, the 444th Bombardment Group (VH) displayed unusual valor. In this accomplishment, the crews exhibited personal bravery, high professional skill, and a common devotion to duty, which stand as an example of the highest courage and best traditions of gallantry for the Army Air Forces.

3. The 462d Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in connection with daylight precision bombing of the Kawanishi aircraft plant at Takarazuka on 24 July 1945. As part of an all-out effort to smash Japanese aircraft production, the 462d Bombardment Group (VH) and one other group from the 58th Bombardment Wing were given the assignment of destroying the Kawanishi aircraft factory, which manufactured components of a dangerous Japanese navy fighter airplane. As a result of the unremitting efforts of the ground personnel, this group put 42 airplanes in the air for this important raid, despite the fact that 7 previous missions had been run during July and maintenance demands had been unusually high. Because a total of more than 600 American airplanes were operating over Japan that day, the enemy defenders were especially alert and the 462d Bombardment Group (VH) ran into a hail of antiaircraft fire at Kobe and Osaka on its way to the target area. The fire was so intense that 28 aircraft of this group were hit by enemy flak, but continued undaunted on their bombing run. Before retiring from the deadly area, the group dropped 205 tons of explosives on the Kawanishi plant. Subsequent photographs revealed that the aircraft factory had been 85 percent destroyed, thus materially reducing the Japanese air power. The professional skill of the 462d Bombardment Group (VH) in the heat of the battle and in the face of the bitterest opposition and the unyielding determination with which it gallantly carried out its mission are outstanding examples of leadership, esprit de corps, and tenacity of purpose, which reflect the highest credit on the group and the Army Air Forces.

4. The 468th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy. On 24 July 1945, this group and one other group of the 58th Bombardment Wing were ordered to knock out the Kawanishi aircraft plant at Takarazuka in a daylight precision bombing attack. This mission was of utmost strategic importance because the plant was known to manufacture components of a dangerous Japanese navy fighter. Inspired by the importance of the mission, both air and ground personnel worked tirelessly to insure maximum success of the strike. As a result, 42 airplanes of the group reached the target area. At the assembly point, the aircraft encountered continuously pointed fire that continued all the way into the target. The fire was so accurate and concentrated that twenty-three of the forty-two B-29's were damaged. Despite this savage fire the 468th Bombardment Group (VH) calmly and heroically held the compact formation necessary for maximum bombing accuracy and dropped 245 tons of explosives on the aircraft factory. When the group retired from the target area, the Kawanishi plant was 85 percent destroyed and was canceled as a future target for B-29 aircraft, thus materially reducing the Japanese air potential. By the conspicuous courage, leadership, and professional skill of its combat crews, together with the high technical ability and unflinching devotion to duty of its ground personnel, the 468th Bombardment Group (VH) on this occasion was able to inflict serious damage on the enemy. The gallantry, brilliant teamwork, and heroic determination displayed by the group reflect the highest credit on its personnel and exemplify the finest traditions of the Army Air Forces.

XII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bur. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

William T. Carlson (formerly captain, Army of the United States), from March 1944 to September 1945, made a material contribution to the elimination of enemy intelligence activity and to the ultimate Allied victory by protecting the security of interned American airmen on the European Continent.

Grant Pearson, Superintendent of McKinley National Park, from 1 October to 18 November 1944, planned and guided an expedition to reach the scene of the wreckage of an airplane of the United States Army Air Transport Command which had crashed high in the mountains of Alaska. Despite the formidable dangers inherent in the terrain and weather, Mr. Pearson led the party 35 miles from Wonder Lake to the site of the crash and back to the starting point without mishap to any individual.

XIII. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section V, WD General Orders 97, 1945, as pertains to Brigadier General John J. Kingman, United States Army, as reads "1 February 1938 to 30 November 1941" is amended to read "8 September 1939 to 30 November 1941."

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—1. By direction of the President, the authority empowering the commanding officer of each of the following ports of embarkation to appoint general courts martial, granted in section I, WD General Orders 45, 1942, is, except as provided below, rescinded:

Port of Embarkation, Charleston, S. C.

Port of Embarkation, Hampton Roads, Va.

2. The commanding officer, Port of Embarkation, Hampton Roads, Virginia, will retain and continue to exercise general courts-martial jurisdiction in all cases referred by him for trial prior to the date of this order, until the final disposition thereof.

[AG 250.4 (25 Feb 46)]

II. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Major Thomas B. McGuire, Jr., O437031, Air Corps, Army of the United States, fought with conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity over Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 25 and 26 December 1944. Voluntarily, he led a squadron of 15 P-38's as top cover for heavy bombers striking Mabalacat Airdrome, where his formation was attacked by 20 aggressive Japanese fighters. In the ensuing action, he repeatedly flew to the aid of embattled comrades, driving off enemy assaults, while himself under attack, and at times outnumbered three to one. Even after his guns jammed, he continued the fight by forcing a hostile airplane into his wingman's line of fire. Before he started back to his base he had shot down three Zeros. The next day, he again volunteered to lead escort fighters on a mission to strongly defended Clark Field. During the resultant engagement, he again exposed himself to attacks so that he might rescue a crippled bomber. In rapid succession he shot down one aircraft, parried the attack of four enemy fighters, one of which he shot down, single-handedly engaged three more Japanese, destroying one, and then shot down still another, his thirty-eighth victory in aerial combat. On 7 January 1945, while leading a voluntary fighter sweep over Los Negros Island he risked an extremely hazardous maneuver at low altitude in an attempt to save a fellow flyer from attack, crashed, and was reported missing in action. With gallant initiative, deep and unselfish concern for the safety of others, and heroic determination to destroy the enemy at all costs, Major McGuire set an inspiring example in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Private First Class Sadao S. Munemori (Army Serial No. 39019023), an assistant squad leader of Company A, 100th Infantry Battalion, 442d Regimental Combat Team, Army of the United States fought with great gallantry and intrepidity on 5 April 1945 near Seravezza, Italy. When his unit was pinned down by grazing fire from the enemy's strong mountain defenses and command of the squad devolved on him with the wounding of its regular leader, he made frontal, one-man attacks through direct fire and knocked out two machine guns with grenades. Withdrawing under murderous fire and showers of grenades from other enemy emplacements, he had nearly reached a shell crater occupied by two of his men when an unexploded grenade bounced on his helmet and rolled toward his helpless comrades. He rose into the withering fire, dived for the missile, and smothered its blast with his body. By his swift, supremely heroic action, Private Munemori saved two of his men at the cost of his own life and did much to clear the path for his company's victorious advance.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Field Marshal Sir Alan Francis Brooke, British Army. December 1941 to May 1945.

Marshal of the Royal Air Force Sir Charles F. A. Portal. August 1942 to May 1945.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and chief warrant officer:

Colonel Philip T. Boone, O220172, Infantry, Army of the United States. October 1942 to October 1945.

Colonel Richard D. LaGarde, O13358, Infantry, United States Army. June 1942 to October 1945.

Colonel Edwin H. Marks, O2579 (then brigadier general), United States Army. June 1944 to September 1945.

Colonel T. DeWitt Milling, O2620, Air Corps, United States Army. March to December 1942 and February 1944 to March 1946.

Chief Warrant Officer Sigmund W. Musinski (W2105651), Army of the United States. April 1942 to September 1945.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

General of Division Jacques Jean Francois de Vernejoul, French Army. September 1944 to February 1945.

Air Marshal Sir Douglas Evill, Royal Air Force. February 1942 to May 1943.

- Major General Leslie C. Hollis, British Army. December 1941 to May 1945.
- General Sir Hastings Lionel Ismay, British Army. December 1941 to May 1945.
- Major General Edward Ian Claud Jacob, British Army. December 1941 to May 1945.
- Major General Robert E. Laycock, British Army. October 1943 to May 1945.
- Air Marshal Sir William L. Welsh, Royal Air Force. May 1943 to November 1944.
- Lieutenant General Sir Colville B. Wemyss, British Army. January to June 1942.

VI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer, enlisted man, and individuals:

- Elma Ernst*, American Red Cross. August 1944 to May 1945.
- Staff Sergeant Joseph F. Mahala (Army Serial No. 6581771), Infantry, Army of the United States. April to July 1942.
- Colonel Xenophon H. Price, O3666, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. July to October 1944.
- Robert A. Redus*, American Red Cross. November 1944 to May 1945.

VII. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Technical Sergeant William H. Kirlin, Jr. (Army serial No. 13099531), 93d Bombardment Group, 409th Bombardment Squadron, Army of the United States, was radio operator on a B-24 aircraft during a combat mission over Holland, on 18 September 1944, when a flak burst severely damaged the airplane and wounded the pilot. Sergeant Kirlin applied a tourniquet to the injured officer and, to prevent him from bleeding to death, remained by his side, even when ordered to take up a safer position for the crash landing which followed and in which Sergeant Kirlin was killed.

VIII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 314th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action during the period 7 and 8 July 1944 in France. This battalion was assigned the important mission of assaulting and capturing the strongly fortified city of La Haye du Puits. Located at the junction of two arterial highways, the city was a vital point in the break-out plans of Allied forces from Normandy to the south. Although the city was protected by a chain of well-built and carefully concealed machine-gun nests and other formidable defenses, the 1st Battalion advanced through a heavy concentration of artillery and mortar fire and across dense minefields to launch the attack. The battalion suffered heavy losses, including many key leaders, but by nightfall, it successfully occupied strategic positions along the outskirts of the town. On 8 July 1944, the 1st Battalion renewed its vigorous attack while again subjected to shelling and withering machine-gun fire. Displaying an indomitable fighting spirit and tenacious aggressiveness, the battalion drove into the city and forced the defenders to abandon their positions. Although greatly weakened by severe losses, the battalion, undaunted and with undiminished courage, pursued the retreating enemy relentlessly, engaged them in vicious hand-to-hand fighting, and drove them from the city. The grim determination and courageous actions of the personnel of the 1st Battalion, 314th Infantry Regiment, in the pressing and vigorous attack against a stubborn enemy secured a vital communications center for the subsequent advance of the Allies and reflect great credit on themselves and military service. (General Orders 107, Headquarters 79th Infantry Division, 14 December 1944, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

2. The 121st Engineer Combat Battalion is cited for gallantry and outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 6 June 1944. On that date, the battalion participated, with assaulting infantry, in the attack of a fortified beach of northern France under most hazardous and difficult conditions. Beginning its landing with the leading elements of assaulting infantry, in the face of withering enemy fire, all companies of the battalion were landed early in the day while the beach was still under heavy, observed fire of artillery and small arms. With determination and fortitude, despite heavy losses in personnel, the 121st Engineer Combat Battalion accomplished its assigned mission of opening and preparing beach lanes and a beach exit with dispatch and cool efficiency. The outstanding performance of duty by this battalion was a substantial contribution to the success of the assault operation. The courage, teamwork, aggressiveness, and high esprit displayed by all of its personnel, and the excellent results accomplished, reflect the highest credit on the military forces of the United States. (General Orders 65, Headquarters 29th Infantry Division, 28 July 1944, as approved by the Commanding General, First United States Army.)

IX. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section IV, WD General Orders 58, 1945, as pertains to Colonel Wilfred F. Hall, Air Corps, as reads "Colonel Wilfred F. Hall" is amended to read "Colonel Wilford F. Hall."

X. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—So much of section VIII, WD General Orders 55, 1945, as pertains to Sergeant Edward A. Burns, Medical Department, as reads "October 1944 to January 1945" is amended to read "June 1942 to January 1945." (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Sergeant Burns, for services from 8 June 1942 to 14 October 1944, as published in General Orders 229, General Headquarters, United States Army Forces, Pacific, 5 October 1945).

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bull. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Private First Class James H. Diamond (Army serial No. 34872309), as a member of a machine-gun section, Company D, 21st Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, displayed extreme gallantry and intrepidity on 8, 9, 10, and 14 May 1945, at Mintal, Mindanao, Philippine Islands. When a Japanese sniper rose from his fox hole to throw a grenade into their midst, this valiant soldier charged and killed the enemy with a burst from his submachine gun. Then, by delivering sustained fire from his personal arm and simultaneously directing the fire of 105-mm and .50 caliber weapons upon the enemy pillboxes immobilizing his and another machine gun section, he enabled them to put their guns into action. When two infantry companies established a bridgehead, he voluntarily assisted in evacuating the wounded under heavy fire and, securing an abandoned vehicle, transported casualties to the rear through mortar and artillery fire so intense as to render the vehicle inoperative, despite the fact he was suffering from a painful wound. The following day he again volunteered, this time for the hazardous job of repairing a bridge under heavy enemy fire. On 14 May 1945, when leading a patrol to evacuate casualties from his battalion, which was cut off, he ran through a virtual hail of Japanese fire to secure an abandoned machine gun. Though mortally wounded as he reached the gun, he succeeded in drawing sufficient fire upon himself so that the remaining members of the patrol could reach safety. Private Diamond's indomitable spirit, constant disregard of danger, and eagerness to assist his comrades will ever remain a symbol of selflessness and heroic sacrifice to those for whom he gave his life.

Captain Seymour W. Terry, O1308021 (then first lieutenant), commanding Company B, 382d Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on Okinawa, Ryukyu Islands, was leading an attack against heavily defended Zebra Hill, on 11 May 1945, when devastating fire from five pillboxes halted the advance. He braved the hail of bullets to secure satchel charges and white phosphorus grenades and then ran 30 yards directly at the enemy with an ignited charge to the first stronghold, demolished it, and moved on to the other pillboxes, bombarding them with his grenades and calmly cutting down their defenders with rifle fire as they attempted to escape. When he had finished this job by sealing the four pillboxes with explosives, he had killed 20 Japanese and destroyed 3 machine guns. The advance was again held up by an intense grenade barrage which inflicted several casualties. Locating the source of enemy fire in trenches on the reverse slope of the hill, Lieutenant Terry, burdened by six satchel charges, launched a one-man assault. He wrecked the enemy's defenses by throwing explosives into their positions and himself accounted for 10 of the 20 hostile troops killed when his men overran the area. Pressing forward again toward a nearby ridge, his two assault platoons were stopped by slashing machine-gun and mortar fire. He ran fearlessly across 100 yards of fire-swept terrain to join the support platoon and urge it on in a flanking maneuver. This thrust, too, was halted by stubborn resistance. Lieutenant Terry began another one-man drive, hurling grenades upon the strongly entrenched defenders until they fled in confusion, leaving five dead behind them. Inspired by this bold action, the support platoon charged the retreating enemy and annihilated them. Soon afterward, while organizing his company to repulse a possible counterattack, the gallant company commander was mortally wounded by the burst of an enemy mortar shell. By his indomitable fighting spirit, brilliant leadership, and unwavering courage in the face of tremendous odds, Lieutenant Terry made possible the accomplishment of his unit's mission and set an example of heroism in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel William R. Peers, O21366, Infantry, United States Army. July 1944 to July 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Colonel Peers, for services from 1 May to 6 July 1945, as published in General Orders 155, India-Burma Theater, 16 July 1945.)

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Gilbert R. Cook, as published in WD General Orders 86, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Gilbert R. Cook, O3391, United States Army. December 1944 to December 1945.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General Mervin E. Gross, as published in WD General Orders 1, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Mervin E. Gross, O14907, United States Army. January to August 1945.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant General John L. DeWitt, as published in WD General Orders 59, 1919, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant General John L. DeWitt, O742, United States Army. September 1943 to November 1945.

IV.—SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Nathaniel R. Hoskot, O302774, Infantry, Army of the United States, while a prisoner of war near St. Lo, France, on 7 June 1944, displayed outstanding devotion to duty and gallantry in action. When five truckloads of American prisoners were attacked by American aircraft, the German guards took cover and refused to permit the captives to disperse. Disregarding his personal safety, Colonel Hoskot removed wounded men from burning trucks during three savage, strafing attacks and inspired fellow prisoners to assist him.

V.—LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Colonel John W. Anslow, O275451, General Staff Corps (Field Artillery), Army of the United States. April 1943 to January 1946.

Colonel James Barrett Brown, O177023, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. June 1943 to August 1945.

Colonel Lawrence L. Cobb, O10300, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army. November 1944 to January 1946.

Lieutenant Colonel Leo B. Crabbs, O130810, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. November 1942 to April 1944.

Major Stephen W. Dunwell, O907487, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. June 1942 to September 1945.

Technician Third Grade Oliver F. Egleston (Army serial No. 17077900), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. November 1942 to August 1945.

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Brigadier General Frederick W. Castle, O319375, Commanding General of the 4th Bombardment Wing, Eighth Air Force, Army of the United States, was air commander and leader of more than 2,000 heavy bombers in a strike against German airfields on 24 December 1944. En route to the target, the failure of one engine forced him to relinquish his place at the head of the formation. In order not to endanger friendly troops on the ground below, he refused to jettison his bombs to gain speed and maneuverability. His lagging, unescorted aircraft became the target of numerous enemy fighters which ripped the left wing with cannon shells, set the oxygen system afire, and wounded two members of the crew. Repeated attacks started fires in two engines, leaving the flying fortress in imminent danger of exploding. Realizing the hopelessness of the situation, the bail-out order was given. Without regard for his personal safety, he gallantly remained alone at the controls to afford all other crew members an opportunity to escape. Still another attack exploded gasoline tanks in the right wing and the bomber plunged earthward, carrying General Castle to his death. His intrepidity and willing sacrifice of his life to save members of the crew were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Private First Class Charles N. DeGlopper (Army serial No. 32581337), was a member of Company C, 325th Glider Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 9 June 1944, advancing with the forward platoon to secure a bridgehead across the Merderet River at la Fiere, France. At dawn, the platoon had penetrated an outer line of machine guns and riflemen, but in doing so had become cut off from the rest of the company. Vastly superior forces began a systematic decimation of the stricken unit, and put in motion a flanking maneuver which would have completely exposed the American platoon in a shallow roadside ditch where it had taken cover. Detecting this danger, Private DeGlopper volunteered to support his comrades by fire from his automatic rifle while they attempted a withdrawal through a break in a hedgerow 40 yards to the rear. Scorning a concentration of enemy automatic-weapons and rifle fire, he walked from the ditch onto the road in full view of the Germans and sprayed the hostile positions with assault fire. He was wounded, but he continued firing. Struck again, he started to fall, yet his grim determination and valiant fighting spirit could not be broken. Kneeling in the roadway, weakened by his grievous wounds, he leveled his heavy weapon against the enemy and fired burst after burst until killed outright. He was successful in drawing the enemy action away from his fellow soldiers, who continued the fight from a more advantageous position, and established the first bridgehead over the Merderet. In the area where he made his intrepid stand, his comrades later found the ground strewn with dead Germans and many machine guns and automatic weapons which he had knocked out of action. Private DeGlopper's gallant sacrifice and unflinching heroism while facing insurmountable odds were in great measure responsible for a highly important tactical victory in the Normandy campaign.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier General Gene W. Hall, O443517, Army of the United States. January 1944 to May 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General Hall, for services from 27 January to 20 May 1945, as published in General Orders 163, Headquarters India-Burma Theater, 24 July 1945.)
- Major General Robert W. Hasbrouck, O8588, United States Army. December 1944 to April 1945.
- Major General Keller E. Rockey, O838, United States Marine Corps. 30 September to 6 December 1945.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. XI. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and section V, WD Circular 142, 1944, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Thomas T. Mackie, O486832, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services as Executive Officer of the Field Headquarters of the United States of America Typhus Commission in Burma from September 1944 to September 1945. At a time when scrub typhus was an increasingly serious hazard to the health of troops and a threat to military operations, he established at Myitkyina a large laboratory and conducted extensive field studies and control measures along the Ledo Road and in other areas.

Under combat conditions, he supervised protective measures among troops. Colonel Mackie maintained valuable liaison with British medical and military organizations engaged in attack upon the scrub typhus problem. On visits to Chunking, he advised on the development of typhus control programs in China. With breadth of vision, courage, unflinching purpose and energy, and overcoming great difficulties, Colonel Mackie served both the welfare of the Army and the advancement of science.

Major James Pennoyer, O426135, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services with the United States of America Typhus Commission during November and December 1944 and from February to April 1945. Working under rigorous conditions as a consultant to the headquarters of large commands in France and as organizer and director of control measures in Yugoslavia, Major Pennoyer vigorously carried both missions to successful conclusions.

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 48, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named enlisted men:

Private William D. McGee (Army serial No. 35573768), a medical aid man with Company K, 304th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, made a night crossing of the Moselle River on 18 March 1945 with troops endeavoring to capture the town of Mulheim, Germany. The enemy had retreated in the sector where the assault boats landed, but had left the shore heavily strewn with anti-personnel mines. Two men of the first wave, attempting to work their way forward, detonated mines which wounded them seriously, leaving them bleeding and in great pain beyond the reach of their comrades. Entirely on his own initiative, Private McGee entered the mine field, brought out one of the injured to comparative safety, and had returned to rescue the second victim when he stepped on a mine and was severely wounded in the resulting explosion. Although suffering intensely and bleeding profusely, he shouted orders that none of his comrades were to risk their lives by entering the death-sewn field to render the first aid that might have saved his life. In making the supreme sacrifice, Private McGee demonstrated a concern for the well-being of his fellow soldiers that transcended all considerations for his own safety and a gallantry in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Private Joseph F. Merrell (Army serial No. 42179711), a scout with Company I, 15th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, made a gallant, one-man attack against vastly superior enemy forces near Lohe, Germany, on 18 April 1945. His unit, attempting a quick conquest of hostile hill positions that would open the route to Nurnberg before the enemy could organize his defense of that city, was pinned down by brutal fire from rifles, machine pistols, and two heavy machine guns. Entirely on his own initiative, Private Merrell began a single-handed assault. He ran 100 yards through concentrated fire, barely escaping death at each stride, and, at point-blank range, engaged four German machine pistolmen with his rifle, killing all of them while their bullets ripped his uniform. As he started forward again, his rifle was smashed by a sniper's bullet, leaving him armed only with three grenades, but he did not hesitate. He zigzagged 200 yards through a hail of bullets to within 10 yards of the first machine gun, where he hurled two grenades and then rushed the position, ready to fight with his bare hands if necessary. In the emplacement, he seized a Luger pistol and killed all Germans who had survived the grenade blast. Rearmed, he crawled toward the second machine gun located 30 yards away, killing four Germans in camouflaged fox holes on the way, but receiving a critical wound in the abdomen. Yet he went on, staggering, bleeding, and disregarding bullets which tore through the folds of his clothing and glanced off his helmet. He threw his last grenade into the machine-gun nest and stumbled on to wipe out the crew. He had completed this self-appointed task when a machine pistol burst killed him instantly. In his spectacular one-man attack, Private Merrell killed 6 Germans in the first machine-gun emplacement, 7 in the next, and an additional 10 infantrymen who were astride his path to the weapons which would have decimated his unit had he not assumed the burden of the assault, and stormed the enemy positions with utter fearlessness, intrepidity of the highest order, and a willingness to sacrifice his own life so that his comrades could go on to victory.

Private First Class Edward J. Moskala (Army serial No. 36615463), was with the leading element of Company C, 383d Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 9 April 1945, when grenade explosions and concentrated machine-gun and mortar fire halted the unit's attack on Kakazu Ridge, Okinawa, Ryukyu Islands. With utter disregard for his personal safety, he charged 40 yards through withering, grazing fire and wiped out two machine-gun nests with well-aimed grenades and deadly accurate fire from his automatic rifle. When strong counterattacks and fierce enemy resistance from other positions forced his company to withdraw, he voluntarily remained behind with eight others to cover the maneuver. Fighting from a critically dangerous position for 3 hours, he killed more than 25 Japanese before following his surviving companions through screening smoke down the face of the ridge to a gorge where it was discovered that one of the group had been left behind, wounded. Unhesitatingly, Private Moskala climbed the bullet-swept slope to assist in the rescue and, returning to lower ground, volunteered to protect other wounded while the bulk of the troops quickly took up more favorable positions. He had saved another casualty and killed four enemy infiltrators when he was struck and mortally wounded himself while aiding still another disabled soldier. With gallant initiative, unflinching courage, and heroic determination to destroy the enemy, Private Moskala gave his life in his complete devotion to his company's mission and his comrades' well-being. His intrepid conduct provided a lasting inspiration for those with whom he served.

Private First Class Frederick C. Murphy (Army serial No. 31426845), an aid man with Company E, 259th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, was wounded in the right shoulder soon after his comrades had jumped off in a dawn attack, 18 March 1945, against the Siegfried Line at Saarlautern, Germany. He refused to withdraw for treatment and continued forward, administering first aid under heavy machine-gun, mortar, and artillery fire. When the company ran into a thickly sewn antipersonnel mine field and began to suffer more and more casualties, he continued to disregard his own wound and unhesitatingly braved the danger of exploding mines, moving about through heavy fire and helping the injured until he stepped on a mine which severed one of his feet. Despite his grievous wounds, he struggled on with his work, refusing to be evacuated and crawling from man to man administering to them while in great pain and bleeding profusely. He was killed by the blast of another mine which he had dragged himself across in an effort to reach still another casualty. With indomitable courage, unquenchable spirit of self-sacrifice, and supreme devotion to duty which made it possible for him to continue performing his tasks while barely able to move, Private Murphy saved many of his fellow soldiers at the cost of his own life.

Private First Class Walter C. Wetzel (Army serial No. 36122654), an acting squad leader with the Antitank Company, 13th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, was guarding his platoon's command post in a house at Birken, Germany, during the early morning hours of 3 April 1945 when he detected strong enemy forces moving in to attack. He ran into the house, alerted the occupants, and immediately began defending the post against heavy automatic-weapons fire coming from the hostile troops. Under cover of darkness, the Germans forced their way close to the building where they hurled grenades, two of which landed in the room where Private Wetzel and others had taken up firing positions. Shouting a warning to his fellow soldiers, Private Wetzel threw himself on the grenades and, as they exploded, absorbed their entire blast, suffering wounds from which he died. The supreme gallantry of Private Wetzel saved his comrades from death or serious injury and made it possible for them to continue the defense of the command post and break the power of a dangerous local counterthrust by the enemy. Private Wetzel's unhesitating sacrifice of his life was in keeping with the United States Army's highest traditions of bravery and heroism.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier General James W. Curtis, O7973, United States Army. May 1942 to January 1946.
- Brigadier General Philip E. Gallagher, O11249, United States Army. June to December 1945.
- Colonel Earl E. Gesler, O3775, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. October 1943 to September 1945.

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—1. By direction of the President, the authority empowering the commanding officer, 17th Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Special Troops, Second Army, to appoint general courts martial granted in section I, WD General Orders 108, 1945, is, except as provided below, rescinded.

2. The commanding officer, 17th Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Special Troops, Second Army, will retain and continue to exercise general court-martial jurisdiction in all cases referred by him for trial prior to the date of this order, until the final disposition thereof.

[AG 250.4 (4 Jan 46)]

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Frederic W. Boye, O3895, United States Army. December 1944 to September 1945.

Colonel Irving A. Duffy, O16386, Ordnance Department, United States Army. July 1940 to November 1945. (So much of sec. VI, WD General Orders 64, 1945, as pertains to the award of the Legion of Merit to Colonel Duffy, for services from July 1940 to February 1945, is rescinded.)

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Major General Charles T. Harris Jr., O2215, United States Army. June 1942 to September 1945.

Brigadier General William H. Hobson, O3399, United States Army. October 1943 to October 1945.

Major Charles F. Mehring, O912836, Air Corps, Army of the United States. January to November 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Rafael J. Miranda, O192050, Cavalry, Army of the United States. January 1944 to October 1945.

Colonel Joseph F. Prola, O287395, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. May 1944 to January 1946.

Brigadier General Ralph Talbot, Jr., O2054, United States Army. February 1942 to July 1945.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942)

and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Contre-Amiral Pierre Barjot, French Navy. September 1944 to May 1945.

General de Corps d'Armee Roger Alexandre Leyer, French Army. September 1944 to July 1945.

Major General Albert G. E. Vandezande, Belgian Army. January to May 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Air Vice Marshal K. M. Guthrie, Royal Canadian Air Force. June to November 1944.

Colonel J. H. Whalley-Kelly, British Army. 7 September to 1 October 1944.

V. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Technician Fifth Grade Lamoine C. Moore (Army Serial No. 15014587), Infantry, Army of the United States, a prisoner of war in Germany, was marching with a column of fellow prisoners on 31 January 1945 along the Oder River when Russian tanks mistook the formation for enemy troops and opened fire. Disregarding the great danger, Technician Moore ran forward heroically in an attempt to identify the column, and in doing so lost his life.

VI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 20th Tank Battalion (Reinforced) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action during the period 28 to 30 April 1945 in the vicinity of Neuherberg, Germany. With soldierly courage and irrepressible determination, members of the 20th Tank Battalion (Reinforced) pushed an armored spearhead 45 miles beyond the Danube River to the outskirts of Munich, destroying a supply train, capturing almost 800 prisoners, and securing 4 bridges intact over the Amper River. Continuing the attack on 29 and 30 April against an enemy entrenched in elaborately prepared dugouts and behind the thick walls of the SS training center and an antitank school, which were defended by small arms, machine guns, hundreds of Panzerfausts and twelve 88-mm guns, our troops killed 700 SS troops who fought stubbornly and fanatically. This victory of the 20th Tank Battalion (Reinforced) destroyed the defenses of Munich, Germany, removing resistance to the entry of troops into the city. (General Orders 3, Headquarters Seventh United States Army, 2 January 1946, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

2. Company F, 137th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy at Saarguemines, France, on 10 December 1944. During the operations against Saarguemines, a key defense position guarding the approaches to the Siegfried Line and Germany proper, Company F effected a crossing of the Saar River against heavy enemy opposition, and in a brilliant flanking movement, executed under heavy enemy fire of all types, its left assault platoon fell upon a pottery plant while the right assault platoon deployed for an attack from the rear. Saarguemines was defended by a network of pillboxes, trenches, and antitank obstacles, and the pottery plant itself constituted the key to the southern and eastern defenses of the city. One squad of the left assault platoon advanced into a factory building while the remainder of the platoon was pinned down by withering fire inside the plant. The squad entering the building employed small arms and hand grenades to engage the enemy in a bitter fight, which relieved the pressure on the troops pinned down outside the building. During an intense 4-hour fire fight, Company F engaged two determined companies of SS troops which occupied the pottery plant and environs in close-in and hand-to-hand fighting among the maze of machinery, pottery baking ovens, and display shelves. In the fury of this action, the troops of Company F employed, in addition to their fire arms, hand grenades, trench knives, bayonets, and even pottery pieces. Enemy troops fleeing from the pressure of the left assault platoon into another building were surprised by the right platoon which had entered the factory from the rear. After recovering from the initial shock, the enemy, with superior numbers, counterattacked the right assault platoon, but the support platoon, with superb timing, crushed the counterattack. The enemy then increased the intensity of his artillery, tank, self-propelled, and 20-mm fire on the attacking forces, preparatory to launching a full scale counterattack. However, the company skillfully countered the thrust and pursued the enemy through the city from house to house, liberating 995 Allied prisoners of war along the way. Company F lost 13 enlisted men wounded. The enemy lost 43 killed, 75 captured, and 26 wounded. The company accomplished its assigned task under intense enemy artillery and small-arms fire, in disregard of personal safety and against a determined enemy in superior numbers and occupying strong defensive positions. The action is an outstanding example of group daring and courage. The extraordinary heroism, exemplary skill, inspiring resourcefulness, and superior initiative displayed in this crucial operation reflect the highest credit on the officers and men of Company F, 137th Infantry Regiment, and on the military service of the United States. (General Orders 60, Headquarters 35th Infantry Division, 19 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

3. The Shore Battalion, 592d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in the Admiralty Islands from 2 to 6 March 1944. On 2 March 1944, this battalion landed on White Beach, Los Negros Island, as an element of the task force. Its mission was entirely an engineering project which consisted of clearing the beach, building ramps out to amphibious craft, constructing a beach road net, developing beach dumps, and, with attached units, unloading troops, equipment, and supplies. Within 30 minutes after landing and while still in the process of organizing the beachhead, the beach was subjected to enemy mortar and sniper fire which continued spasmodically throughout the day. Despite numerous casualties, because of little or no cover, this unit carried on with courageous determination and complete disregard of danger to accomplish its mission. Only after all craft had retracted and darkness caused work to stop on the beach did this unit retire, and then not to rest but to take up defensive positions on the west flank of the task force perimeter. The positions had hardly been taken when the enemy began a series of infiltration and "Banzai" attacks, directed against the west flank of the perimeter, which lasted throughout the night. Amid considerable confusion, because of the lack of infantry training, with many troops seeing action for the first time, the officers and men of the Shore Battalion met every advance of the enemy with such determination, tenacity, and courage that the enemy was driven off on every occasion with heavy casualties. Enemy infiltration was particularly prevalent and hand-to-hand combat with knives and bayonets was evident everywhere. When the enemy action ceased at dawn, the battalion returned to its task on the beach, where it worked until night, returning then to the perimeter positions. During the night the attacks were renewed, but with the same intrepidity and valor the attacks were repulsed. The following day, when the infantry was held up by impassable terrain, the unit went out beyond the front lines to build roads in the face of sniper fire so that infantry and artillery force could be brought to bear on the enemy. Although working every day on the beach bringing in vital supplies and equipment, this unit returned every night to positions on the perimeter to fight the enemy. The unusual devotion to duty, grim determination, battle discipline, and conspicuous gallantry of the officers and men of the Shore Battalion, 592d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment, had a stimulating effect on all troops of the task force and reflect the highest credit on the United States Army. (General Orders 175, Headquarters Sixth Army, 26 August 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Technical Sergeant Morris E. Crain (Army serial No. 35728722), Company E, 141st Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, led his platoon against powerful German forces on 13 March 1945 in Haguenau, France, during the struggle to enlarge the bridgehead across the Moder River. With great daring and aggressiveness, he spearheaded the platoon in killing 10 enemy soldiers, capturing 12 more, and securing its objective near an important road junction. Although heavy concentrations of artillery, mortar, and self-propelled gunfire raked the area, he moved about among his men during the day, exhorting them to great efforts and encouraging them to stand firm. He carried ammunition and maintained contact with the company command post, exposing himself to deadly enemy fire. At nightfall the enemy barrage became more intense and tanks entered the fray to cover foot troops while they bombarded our positions with grenades and rockets. As buildings were blasted by the Germans, the Americans fell back from house to house. Sergeant Crain deployed another platoon, which had been sent to his support, and then rushed through murderous tank and small-arms fire to the foremost house which was being defended by five of his men. With the enemy attacking from an adjoining room and a tank firing point-blank at the house, he ordered the men to withdraw while he remained in the face of almost certain death to hold the position. Although shells were crashing through the walls and bullets were hitting all around him, he held his ground and, with accurate fire from his submachine gun, killed three Germans. He was killed when the building was destroyed by the enemy. Sergeant Crain's outstanding valor and intrepid leadership enabled his platoon to organize a new defense, repel the attack, and preserve the hard-won bridgehead.

Staff Sergeant Archer T. Gammon (Army serial No. 33156688), a squad leader with Company A, 9th Armored Infantry Battalion, Army of the United States, on 11 January 1945, near Bastogne, Belgium, charged 30 yards through hip-deep snow to knock out a machine gun and its three-man crew with grenades, saving his platoon from being decimated and allowing it to continue its advance from an open field into some nearby woods. The platoon's advance through the woods had only begun when a machine gun, supported by riflemen, opened fire and a Royal Tiger tank began sending 88-mm. shells screaming at the unit from the left flank. Sergeant Gammon, disregarding all thought of personal safety, rushed forward, then cut to the left, crossing the width of the platoon's skirmish line in an attempt to get within grenade range of the tank and its protecting foot troops. Intense fire was concentrated on him by riflemen and the machine gun emplaced near the tank. He charged the automatic weapon, wiped out its crew of four with grenades, and, with supreme daring, advanced to within 25 yards of the armored vehicle, killing two hostile infantrymen with rifle fire as he moved forward. The tank had started to withdraw, backing a short distance, then firing, backing some more, and then stopping to blast out another round, when the man whose single-handed, relentless attack had put the ponderous machine on the defensive was struck and instantly killed by a direct hit from the Royal Tiger's heavy gun. By his intrepidity and extreme devotion to the task of driving the enemy back, no matter what the odds, Sergeant Gammon cleared the woods of German forces, for the tank continued to withdraw, leaving open the path for the gallant squad leader's platoon.

Private First Class Anthony L. Krotiak (Army serial No. 36306223), an acting squad leader with Company I, 148th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, during an attack in Balet Pass, Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 8 May 1945, was directing his men in consolidating a newly won position on Hill B when the enemy concentrated small-arms fire and grenades upon him and four others, driving them to cover in an abandoned Japanese trench. A grenade thrown from above landed in the center of the group. Instantly pushing his comrades aside and jamming the grenade into the earth with his rifle butt, he threw himself over it, making a shield of his body to protect the other men. The grenade exploded under him and he died a few minutes later. By his extraordinary heroism in deliberately giving his life to save those of his comrades, Private Krotiak set an inspiring example of utter devotion and self-sacrifice which reflects the highest traditions of the military service.

Second Lieutenant Harry J. Michael, 0929268, Company L, 318th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, was serving as a rifle platoon leader when Company L began an assault on a wooded ridge northeast of the village of Neiderzorf, Germany, early on 14 March 1945. A short distance up the side of the hill, Lieutenant Michael, at the head of his platoon, heard the click of an enemy machine-gun bolt. Quietly halting the company, he silently moved into the woods and discovered two enemy machine guns and crews. Executing a sudden charge, he completely surprised the enemy and captured the guns and crew. At daybreak, enemy voices were heard in the thick woods ahead. Leading his platoon in a flanking movement, they charged the enemy with hand grenades and, after a bitter fight, captured 25 members of an SS mountain division, 3 artillery pieces, and 20 horses. While his company was establishing its position, Lieutenant Michael made two personal reconnaissances of the woods on his left flank. On the first mission, he killed two, wounded four, and captured six enemy soldiers single-handedly. On the second mission, he captured seven prisoners. During the afternoon, he led his platoon in a frontal assault of a line of enemy pillboxes, successfully capturing the objective, killing 10 and capturing 30 prisoners. The following morning, the company was subjected to sniper fire and Lieutenant Michael, in an attempt to find the hidden sniper, was shot and killed. The inspiring leadership and heroic aggressiveness displayed by Lieutenant Michael uphold the highest traditions of the military service.

Technician Fifth Grade Forrest E. Peden (Army serial No. 37503529), Battery C, 10th Field Artillery Battalion, Army of the United States, was a forward artillery observer near Biesheim, France, on 3 February 1945, when the group of about 45 infantrymen, with whom he was advancing, was ambushed in the uncertain light of a waning moon. Enemy forces outnumbering the Americans by four to one poured withering artillery, mortar, machine-gun, and small-arms fire into the stricken unit from the flanks, forcing our men to seek the cover of a ditch which they found already occupied by enemy foot troops. As the opposing infantrymen struggled in hand-to-hand combat, Corporal Peden courageously went to the assistance of two wounded soldiers and rendered first aid under heavy fire. With radio communications inoperative, he realized that the unit would be wiped out unless help could be secured from the rear. On his own initiative, he ran 800 yards to the battalion command post through a hail of bullets, which pierced his jacket, and there secured two light tanks to go to the relief of his hard-pressed comrades. Knowing the terrible risk involved, he climbed upon the hull of the lead tank and guided it into battle. Through a murderous concentration of fire, the tank lumbered onward, bullets and shell fragments ricocheting from its steel armor within inches of the completely exposed rider, until it reached the ditch. As it was about to go into action, it was turned into a flaming pyre by a direct hit which killed Corporal Peden. However, his intrepidity and gallant sacrifice were not in vain. Attracted by the light from the burning tank, reinforcements found the beleaguered Americans and drove off the enemy.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to General of the Army Henry H. Arnold, as published in WD General Orders 51, 1942, and a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster as published in WD General Orders 92, 1945, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). [AG 560 (7 Feb 46)]

II. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named enlisted man:

Sergeant Charles E. Mower (Army serial No. 36803996), Company A, 34th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 3 November 1944, was an assistant squad leader in an attack against strongly defended enemy positions on both sides of a stream running through a wooded gulch near Capoccan, Leyte, Philippine Islands. As the squad advanced through concentrated fire, the leader was killed and Sergeant Mower assumed command. In order to bring direct fire upon the enemy, he had started to lead his men across the stream, which by this time was churned by machine-gun and rifle fire, when he was severely wounded before reaching the opposite bank. After signaling his unit to halt, he realized his own exposed position was the most advantageous point from which to direct the attack and stood fast. Half submerged, gravely wounded, but refusing to seek shelter or accept aid of any kind, he continued to shout and signal to his squad as he directed it in the destruction of two enemy machine guns and numerous riflemen. Discovering that the intrepid man in the stream was largely responsible for the successful action being taken against them, the remaining Japanese concentrated the full force of their power upon him and he was killed while still urging his men on. Sergeant Mower's gallant initiative and heroic determination aided materially in the successful completion of his squad's mission. His magnificent leadership was an inspiration to those with whom he served.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942), and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942, (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer.

Captain Commandant B. E. M. Daems, Belgian Army. September 1944 to May 1945.

VI..BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel James M. Sullivan, O221873, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. 14-15 December 1944.

Captain Robert I. Wheat, O22918, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. 9-12 January 1945.

First Lieutenant Henry W. Hughes, O44032, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, as medical officer, performed heroic service while a prisoner of war in Germany. At Fuerstenberg on 6 February 1945, he risked his life to remove helpless patients from a barracks which was being shelled by the advancing Russians. While caring for his wounded patients at Bradenburg on 21 March 1945, he was killed in an air raid. His courageous conduct helped alleviate the suffering of his fellow prisoners.

Lieutenant Colonel Walter P. Manning, O20056, Medical Corps, United States Army, as medical officer, fearlessly exposed himself to bombing and strafing on 13 and 14 December 1944 at Subic Bay, Luzon, Philippine Islands, to give aid to wounded Americans aboard a Japanese prison ship which was under attack by aircraft.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. Chief Warrant Officer Arthur H. West (W2134039), Army of the United States. November 1943 to March 1944.

VIII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Gordon Thorpe Jackson, American Red Cross, rendered meritorious service from November 1943 to February 1944, in Italy, as field director with the 1st Ranger Battalion. During the bitter fighting on the Anzio beachhead, he provided comfort items. On numerous occasions, he voluntarily delivered mail and Red Cross items to front line companies. He assisted chaplains and the medical officers in administering to the spiritual and physical needs of battle-weary soldiers. When the tactical situation permitted, he established a rest center in some abandoned buildings, equipped them with bedding, writing materials, toilet articles, and other comforts. Mr. Jackson's work was characterized by cheerful assumption of his responsibilities to the American combat soldier he served and reflects great credit on himself and the American Red Cross.

BRONZE STAR MEDAL—Rescission of award-----	XII

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named enlisted men:

Private George J. Peters (Army serial No. 31297689), a platoon radio operator with Company G, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, made a descent into Germany near Fluren, east of the Rhine, on 24 March 1945. With 10 others, he landed in a field about 75 yards from a German machine gun supported by riflemen and was immediately pinned down by heavy, direct fire. The position of the small unit seemed hopeless, with men struggling to free themselves of their parachutes in a hail of bullets which cut them off from their nearby equipment bundles, when Private Peters stood up, without orders, and began a one-man charge against the hostile emplacement armed only with a rifle and grenades. His single-handed assault immediately drew the enemy fire away from his comrades. He had run halfway to his objective, pitting rifle fire against that of the machine gun, when he was struck and knocked to the ground by a burst. Heroically, he regained his feet and struggled onward. Once more he was torn by bullets and this time he was unable to rise. With gallant devotion to his self-imposed mission, he crawled directly into the fire which had mortally wounded him, until close enough to hurl grenades which knocked out the machine gun, killed two of its operators, and drove protecting riflemen from their positions into the safety of a wood. By his intrepidity and supreme sacrifice, Private Peters saved the lives of many of his fellow soldiers and made it possible for them to reach their equipment, organize, and seize their first objective.

Private First Class José F. Valdez (Army serial No. 33352446), Company B, 7th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, was on outpost duty with five others near Rosenkrantz, France, on 25 January 1945, when the enemy counterattacked with overwhelming strength. From his position near some woods 500 yards beyond the American lines, he observed a hostile tank about 75 yards away and raked it with automatic rifle fire until it withdrew. Soon afterward, he saw three Germans stealthily approaching through the woods. Scorning cover as the enemy soldiers opened up with heavy automatic-weapons fire from a range of 30 yards, he engaged in a fire fight with the attackers until he had killed all three. The enemy quickly launched an attack with two full companies of infantrymen, blasting the patrol with murderous concentrations of automatic and rifle fire and beginning an encircling movement which forced the patrol leader to order a withdrawal. Despite the terrible odds, Private Valdez immediately volunteered to cover the maneuver, and, as the patrol, one by one, plunged through a hail of bullets toward the American lines, fired burst after burst into the swarming enemy. Three of his companions were wounded in their dash for safety and he was struck by a bullet which entered his stomach and, passing through his body, emerged from his back. Overcoming agonizing pain, he regained control of himself and resumed his firing position, delivering a protective screen of bullets until all others of the patrol were safe. By field telephone, he called for artillery and mortar fire on the Germans and corrected the range until he had shells falling within 50 yards of his position. For 15 minutes he refused to be dislodged by more than 200 of the enemy, then seeing that the barrage had broken the counterattack, he dragged himself back to his own lines. He later died as a result of his wounds. Through his valiant, intrepid stand and at the cost of his own life, Private Valdez made it possible for his comrades to escape and was directly responsible for repulsing an attack by vastly superior enemy forces.

II. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named officer:

Captain Robert B. Nett (then first lieutenant), O1305818, commanded Company E, 305th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, on 14 December 1944, near Cognon, Leyte, Philippine Islands, in an attack against a reinforced enemy battalion which had held up the American advance for 2 days from its entrenched positions around a three-story concrete building. With another infantry company and armored vehicles, Company E advanced against heavy machine-gun and other automatic-weapons fire with Lieutenant Nett spearheading the assault against the strong point. During the fierce hand-to-hand encounter which ensued, he killed seven deeply entrenched Japanese with his rifle and bayonet and, although seriously wounded, gallantly continued to lead his men forward, refusing to relinquish his command. Again he was severely wounded, but, still unwilling to retire, pressed ahead with his troops to assure the capture of the objective. Wounded once more in the final assault, he calmly made all arrangements for the resumption of the advance, turned over his command to another officer, and then walked unaided to the rear for medical treatment. By his remarkable courage in continuing forward through sheer determination, despite successive wounds, Lieutenant Nett provided an inspiring example for his men and was instrumental in the capture of a vital Japanese stronghold.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain John F. Runyon, O1324872, Infantry, Army of the United States, heroically led Company C, 370th Infantry Regiment, in an assault on the German's Gothic Line near Montignosa, Italy, on 5 April 1945. While other elements of the attacking force were able to make only limited gains, he accomplished an advance of nearly 2 miles against strong enemy forces advantageously placed on high ground. Forced to withdraw when support of the deep penetration failed, he returned with the remnants of his company, leaving behind 26 enemy dead, uncounted wounded, and a trail of havoc, which included the destruction of six machine guns, four dugouts, and two observation posts. Captain Runyon's fearless conduct, soldierly skill, and great determination inspired his company in an exploit which opened the way for a successful onslaught by a fresh regiment.

IV. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier General Wayne R. Allen, O171232, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. January 1943 to December 1944 and 26 January to October 1945.
- Colonel Albert H. Burton, O16067, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. January 1944 to September 1945.
- Colonel Luke W. Finlay, O288773, Transportation Corps, Army of the United States. September 1942 to September 1945.
- Major General Harry F. Hazlett, O3642, United States Army. March 1942 to January 1946.
- Colonel Richard P. Heppner, O229224, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. December 1944 to October 1945.
- Colonel William N. Leaf, O15129, General Staff Corps, United States Army. September 1944 to September 1945.
- Brigadier General Pearson Menoher, O3805, United States Army. November 1944 to April 1945.
- Brigadier General George H. Olmsted, O199581, Army of the United States. January to November 1945.
- Brigadier General Elwyn D. Post, O15243, United States Army. September 1944 to July 1945.

V. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Clayton L. Bissell, as published in WD General Orders 64, 1943, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Ray T. Maddocks, O7291, United States Army. June to November 1945.

4. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General William E. Shedd, as published in WD General Orders 56, 1922, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General William E. Shedd, O2217, United States Army. September 1944 to September 1945.

VI. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Brigadier William M. T. Faithfull, British Army, displayed gallantry in action near Haminkeln, Germany, on 24 March 1945. In command of division artillery, he landed by glider in an area which had not been cleared of the enemy, quickly assembled and organized his unit, and brought supporting fire to bear. Brigadier Faithfull's spirited leadership and bravery during the subsequent 24 hours inspired his men and contributed materially to the successful completion of this airborne mission.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers, enlisted men, and individuals:

X. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 2d Emergency Rescue Squadron is cited for outstanding performance of duty from 1 to 15 April 1945 in conducting extensive search, evacuation, and ferry missions throughout the vast area comprising the Celebes and Molucca Islands in the Netherlands East Indies, the southern Philippines, and the China coast. Flying through adverse weather in low-speed, vulnerable, and practically unarmed aircraft, frequently without fighter escort, crews of the squadron landed in dangerously heavy seas, often under direct enemy shore fire, to pick up flyers in distress. From a rescue station which the squadron had previously established at Labo, Mindanao, deep within enemy territory, they furnished several thousand gallons of gasoline, stocks of arms and ammunition, food, medical, and other supplies to guerilla forces, who were thereby enabled to maintain and expand their activities and to provide valuable information and material aid to American ground forces in that area. The effectiveness of the operations of the squadron depended vitally upon the ground personnel who devoted long hours of determined and tireless effort toward keeping all aircraft in excellent condition for flight, despite frequent damage from enemy action and from water landings and take-offs. In 7 hazardous open-sea rescues in this 15-day period of intense and heightened naval and air activity, crews of the squadron saved 23 lives, while the activities of the rescue station on Mindanao enabled 53 men to be evacuated from enemy territory. The exceptional courage, skill, and selfless devotion to duty of the personnel of the 2d Emergency Rescue Squadron contributed directly to the success of the Borneo and southern Philippines operations. (General Orders 2042, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 28 September 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

2. The 3d Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance in combat during the period 3-8 August 1943 near San Fratello, Sicily. Scaling steep mountains and sheer rock walls, the 3d Battalion, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Ashton H. Manhart, marched for 14 hours across deep gorges and over mountain trails so precipitous that mules, bearing rations and ammunition were unable to negotiate the ascent and fell hundreds of feet to the ravine floor. Skirting two minefields, attacking, storming, and utterly disintegrating a powerful Italian delaying force in an 8-hour battle in the mountains, the troops of the 3d Battalion continued their advance under a broiling sun to seize Hill 673, a dominating terrain feature guarding the Palermo-Messina Highway. The men of the 3d Battalion held this hill position on short rations, with water virtually unobtainable, ammunition supplies at a low ebb, and the mule pack trains subject to decimation by the powerful enemy force surrounding them. After weathering a 45-minute TOT-artillery concentration, these valiant soldiers met and broke three successive counterattacks delivered by one of the elite regiments of the Italian Army reinforced with Wehrmacht elements. As the fourth counterattack surged forward, the 3d Battalion Command hurled all service troops into the line and distributed the light machine-gun and BAR-ammunition among the riflemen to conserve every round and ensure that every bullet would count. The enemy onslaught was repelled, but only after 2 hours of savage, hand-to-hand fighting with grenades, bayonets, and even with rocks. The weary 3d Battalion clung all night to the hard-won hill, digging in the wounded to prevent their being killed by shell fire, trapping goats, sheep, and cows to stave off hunger. As daybreak came on 7 August, battle-weary elements of the 3d Battalion were committed to attack another precipitous and strongly defended hill-mass, which they stormed under a protecting mortar concentration and with weapons seized from the enemy. With the major prominent terrain features in their hand, the troops of the 3d Battalion swept down on the key town of San Fratello, spurred to their utmost by the prospect of obtaining food and water from the enemy supply dumps, captured it in fierce, house-to-house fighting, and then marched 16½ miles into reserve. Displaying the utmost in tenacity, fortitude, and physical endurance, this gallant 3d Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, shattered an enemy regiment, killed, wounded, or captured 1,175 Italians and Germans, and broke the chain of mountain defenses that barred the advance to the Messina straits and to the continental mainland of Europe. (General Orders 393, Headquarters 3d Infantry Division, 11 December 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Headquarters Seventh Army.)

3. The 18th Fighter Group (TE) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Philippine Islands on 10 and 11 November 1944. On the night of 9 November, a large enemy convoy carrying reinforcements to Japanese troops on Leyte was discovered near Ormoc Bay, Leyte. When the 18th Fighter Group (TE), with its airplanes based on the island of Morotai in the Netherlands East Indies, was ordered to strike at the convoy with every available airplane, staff sections and ground crews worked all night to prepare the pilots and ready the aircraft for this highly hazardous mission. On the morning of 10 November, thirty-three P-38 aircraft of the group took off from Wama Strip, Morotai. Each plane carried one 1000-pound armor-piercing bomb and one 300-gallon belly tank. Arriving over Ormoc Bay early in the afternoon, the group came upon a large Japanese troop transport protected by two light cruisers and four destroyers. Although eight aggressive enemy fighter airplanes made desperate attempts to break up their formation, and although the ships below sent up an intense barrage of antiaircraft fire which brought down three of the P-38's and seriously damaged another, the pilots of the 18th Fighter Group (TE) completed their bombing runs on the transport and scored two direct hits, sinking the vessel almost immediately. In the action which followed, the group sank a destroyer with a direct hit, scored several damaging near-misses on the remaining destroyers and the cruisers, and left one destroyer with its deck in flames. Engaging the intercepting enemy fighters, two of the P-38's probably destroyed one and damaged another. The group then flew to Tacloban Strip on Leyte. The following morning eight airplanes of the group took off from Tacloban on a search of the area in which the engagement of the previous day had taken place. In the vicinity of the Visayan Sea, seven enemy fighters attacked the formation, and in the ensuing battle, two enemy airplanes were shot down, one other was probably destroyed, and the remainder were forced to flee. Attacked about 50 minutes later by an overwhelming force of 40 to 50 enemy fighters, the pilots of the 18th Fighter Group (TE), although outnumbered approximately 6 to 1, courageously turned to engage the enemy, destroyed six of the hostile fighters, and probably three more, and forced the remaining Japanese airplanes to retire. One P-38 was missing in the encounter. On these 2 days, the 18th Fighter Group (TE) not only struck a heavy blow at enemy naval strength in the Philippines but aided materially in preventing the Japanese from bringing more troops against our forces then engaged in the battle for Leyte. The superb daring and skillful airmanship of the pilots of the 18th Fighter Group (TE) and the devotion to duty displayed by the ground personnel exemplify the highest traditions of the United States Army Air Forces. (General Orders 2042, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 28 September 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bull. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Major Horace S. Carswell, Jr., O399757, 308th Bombardment Group, Air Corps, Army of the United States, piloted a B-24 bomber in a one-airplane strike against a Japanese convoy in the South China Sea on the night of 26 October 1944. Taking the enemy force of 12 ships escorted by at least 2 destroyers by surprise, he made one bombing run at 600 feet, scoring a near miss on one warship and escaping without drawing fire. He circled and, fully realizing that the convoy was thoroughly alerted and would meet his next attack with a barrage of anti-aircraft fire, began a second low-level run which culminated in two direct hits on a large tanker. A hail of steel from Japanese guns riddled the bomber, knocking out two engines, damaging a third, crippling the hydraulic system, puncturing one gasoline tank, ripping uncounted holes in the aircraft, and wounding the copilot, but by magnificent display of flying skill, Major Carswell controlled the airplane's plunge toward the sea and carefully forced it into a halting climb in the direction of the China shore. On reaching land, where it would have been possible to abandon the staggering bomber, one of the crew discovered that his parachute had been ripped by flak and rendered useless. The pilot, hoping to cross mountainous terrain and reach a base, continued onward until the third engine failed. He ordered the crew to bail out while he struggled to maintain altitude and, refusing to save himself, chose to remain with his comrade and attempt a crash landing. He died when the airplane struck a mountainside and burned. With consummate gallantry and intrepidity, Major Carswell gave his life in a supreme effort to save all members of his crew. His sacrifice, far beyond that required of him, was in keeping with the traditional bravery of America's war heroes.

Staff Sergeant Howard E. Woodford (Army serial No. 35397941), a battalion intelligence sergeant with the 130th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, volunteered to investigate the delay in a scheduled attack by an attached guerrilla battalion near Tabio, Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 6 June 1945. Reaching the line of departure, he found that the lead company, in combat for the first time, was immobilized by intense enemy mortar, machine-gun, and rifle fire which had caused casualties to key personnel. Knowing that further failure to advance would endanger the flanks of adjacent units as well as delay capture of the objective, he immediately took command of the company, evacuated the wounded, reorganized the unit under fire, and prepared to attack. He repeatedly exposed himself to draw revealing fire from the Japanese strong points, and then moved forward with a five-man covering force to determine exact enemy positions. Although intense enemy machine-gun fire killed two and wounded his other three men, Sergeant Woodford resolutely continued his patrol before returning to the company. Then, against bitter resistance, he guided the guerrillas up a barren hill and captured the objective, personally accounting for two hostile machine gunners and courageously reconnoitering strong defensive positions before directing neutralizing fire. After organizing a perimeter defense for the night, he was given permission by radio to return to his battalion, but, feeling that he was needed to maintain proper control, chose to remain with the guerrillas. Before dawn the next morning, the enemy launched a fierce suicide attack with mortars, grenades, and small-arms fire and infiltrated through the perimeter. Though wounded by a grenade, Sergeant Woodford remained at his post calling for mortar support until bullets knocked out his radio. Then, seizing a rifle, he began working his way around the perimeter, encouraging the men until he reached a weak spot where two guerrillas had been killed. Filling this gap himself, he fought off the enemy. At daybreak he was found dead in his foxhole, but 37 enemy dead were lying in and around his position. By his daring, skillful, and inspiring leadership, as well as his gallant determination to search out and kill the enemy, Sergeant Woodford led an inexperienced unit in capturing and securing a vital objective and was responsible for the successful continuance of a vitally important general advance.

II. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

First Lieutenant Daniel W. Lee (then second lieutenant), O1031190, was leader of Headquarters Platoon, Troop A, 117th Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron (Mechanized), Army of the United States, at Montrevel, France, on 2 September 1944, when the Germans mounted a strong counterattack, isolating the town and engaging its out-numbered defenders in a pitched battle. After the fight had raged for hours and our forces had withstood heavy shelling and armor-supported infantry attacks, Lieutenant Lee organized a patrol to knock out mortars which were inflicting heavy casualties on the beleaguered reconnaissance troops. He led the small group to the edge of the town, sweeping enemy riflemen out of positions on a ridge, from which he observed seven Germans manning two large mortars near an armored half-track about 100 yards down the reverse slope. Armed with a rifle and grenades, he left his men on the high ground and crawled to within 30 yards of the mortars, where the enemy discovered him and unleashed machine-pistol fire which shattered his right thigh. Scorning retreat, bleeding, and suffering intense pain, he dragged himself relentlessly forward. He killed five of the enemy with rifle fire and the others fled before he reached their position. Fired on by an armored car, he took cover behind the German half-track and there found a Panzerfaust with which to neutralize this threat. Despite his wounds, he inched his way toward the car through withering machine-gun fire, maneuvered into range, and blasted the vehicle with a round from the rocket launcher, forcing it to withdraw. Having cleared the slope of hostile troops, he struggled back to his men where he collapsed from pain and loss of blood. Lieutenant Lee's outstanding gallantry, willing risk of life, and extreme tenacity of purpose in coming to grips with the enemy, although suffering from grievous wounds, set an example of bravery and devotion to duty in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Sergeant John R. McKinney (Army serial No. 34574112), (then private first class), fought with extreme gallantry on 11 May 1945 in Tayabas Province, Luzon, Philippine Islands, to defend the outpost which Company A, 123d Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, had established near Dingalan Bay. Just before daybreak, approximately 100 Japanese stealthily attacked the perimeter defense, concentrating on a light machine-gun position manned by three Americans. Having completed a long tour of duty at this gun, Private McKinney was resting a few paces away when an enemy soldier dealt him a glancing blow on the head with a saber. Although dazed by the stroke, he seized his rifle, bludgeoned his attacker, and then shot another assailant who was charging him. Meanwhile, one of his comrades at the machine gun had been wounded and his other companion withdrew carrying the injured man to safety. Alone, Private McKinney was confronted by 10 infantrymen who had captured the machine gun with the evident intent of reversing it to fire into the perimeter. Leaping into the emplacement, he shot seven of them at point-blank range and killed three more with his rifle butt. In the melee, the machine gun was rendered inoperative leaving him only his rifle with which to meet the advancing Japanese who hurled grenades and directed knee mortar shells into the perimeter. He warily changed position, secured more ammunition, and, reloading repeatedly, cut down waves of the fanatical enemy with devastating fire or clubbed them to death in hand-to-hand combat. When assistance arrived, he had thwarted the assault and was in complete control of the area. Thirty-eight dead Japanese around the machine gun and two more at the side of a mortar, 45 yards distant, was the amazing toll he had exacted single-handedly. By his indomitable spirit, extraordinary fighting ability, and unwavering courage in the face of tremendous odds, Private McKinney saved his company from possible annihilation and set an example of unsurpassed intrepidity.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers

WAR DEPARTMENT
WASHINGTON 25, D. C., 1 February 1946

BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. 1, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 318th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 24-28 December 1944. Attacking on Christmas Day with a force less than half normal after several without rest, the battalion began its assault of the enemy positions encircling Bastogne, Belgium. Throughout the next 4 days and 3 nights, the depleted battalion battled its way in freezing temperature through the strongly held woods and villages separating the troops from the besieged forces in Bastogne. The intense resistance of the enemy and well-dug-in positions resulted in their annihilation only through constant use of the grenade and hand-to-hand combat. Suffering heavy casualties, constantly exposed to raking enemy machine-gun and sniper fire from flanking positions, the battalion fought on with an unrelenting determination that overcame all obstacles, routed the enemy, and established contact with the forces within Bastogne. The heroic aggressiveness of the intrepid infantrymen of the 1st Battalion, 318th Infantry Regiment reflects the finest traditions of the Army of the United States. (General Orders 183, Headquarters 80th Infantry Division, 18 July 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

2. The 3d Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 20 January 1945. On 20 January 1945, the 3d Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, was ordered to penetrate the Japanese defenses in the Sison sector and attack Mt. Alava from the rear (north). Other elements of the regiment were to be prepared to attack frontally from the south. The effective strength of the battalion had been reduced from heavy casualties and continuous fighting since D-day, 9 January 1945, to 350 officers and enlisted men. The attack was organized and launched as ordered at 1300. The approach to the base of the objective extended over 1500 yards of open terrain which was under enemy observation. The enemy was in greater numerical force than the attacking battalion, was well equipped with artillery, mortars, and ammunition, and occupied dug-in, well-organized positions. Despite heavy artillery, mortar, and machine-gun fire which caused many casualties, the battalion moved aggressively over the open terrain until it reached enemy positions on the foothills of Mt. Alava. It fought its way into these positions. In the meantime, the enemy reinforced his defenses from the garrison on the top of Mt. Alava. Although suffering severe casualties from small-arms fire in front, and from artillery fire from the north and east, the battalion continued to press the attack for 2 hours, fought through the enemy defenses, and overcame all resistance at approximately 1500. As the battalion was reorganizing for continued attack, the battalion commander was informed that other elements of the regiment had occupied the objective from the south with virtually no opposition because of the absence of the Mt. Alava garrison. During this action, the battalion sustained losses of 23 killed, 49 wounded, and 8 missing. From actual battlefield count, the enemy lost 240 killed. This heroic action on the part of the 3d Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, under most difficult and hazardous conditions, was the prime factor in the capture of Mt. Alava. The courage, fighting spirit, and devotion to duty exhibited by the members of this battalion were in accordance with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 344, Headquarters 43d Infantry Division, 19 June 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

3. The 7th Fighter Squadron is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action on 15 May 1944. On that day P-40 aircraft of the 7th Fighter Squadron flew as escorts for two Allied photographic reconnaissance aircraft coming in low along the shore of Japanese-held Biak Island, north of Dutch New Guinea, to obtain vitally needed preinvasion photographs. To provide maximum cover, the squadron was divided into two flights, one staying with the photographic airplanes under the cloud formation, and the other remaining above the overcast to thwart any enemy attempt at interception from above. When the top cover aircraft, flying at an altitude of 10,000 feet, were suddenly and aggressively attacked by a force of at least 18 enemy fighters, some of them diving from above and others zooming out of surrounding clouds, the pilots of the 7th Fighter Squadron were caught at an altitude disadvantage and were outnumbered nearly 3 to 1. Knowing that if they dived to gain speed and sought an opportunity to attack the Japanese from the rear, at least some of the enemy airplanes would get through to the reconnaissance airplanes below, the pilots of the 7th Fighter Squadron sacrificed speed and safety to pull up and engage the hostile fighters at point-blank range. In the ensuing battle, the P-40 pilots, fighting heroically against a fanatically aggressive and numerically superior enemy, destroyed seven of the Japanese fighters, probably destroyed another, and damaged others, and frustrated and routed the entire enemy force. Although their airplanes were battered by the fierce enemy attacks, their guns jammed, and their fuel supply low, the pilots of the 7th Fighter Squadron, some of them seriously wounded, did not leave the target area until the two photographic aircraft had completed their important mission and were headed safely toward their base. At no time during the entire engagement were the escorted airplanes subjected to direct attack or even effectively threatened. The photographs obtained provided very valuable information which contributed to the success of Allied amphibious operations against Biak 12 days later. The superb manner in which this mission was carried out was due not only to the valor and airmanship of the pilots of the group but also to the exceptional skill, diligence, and devotion to duty of the men of the ground echelon who had kept the airplanes in perfect combat readiness despite the difficulties attendant upon using a temporary tropical base. The achievements of the 7th Fighter Squadron on this occasion were in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 2042, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 28 September 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United Army Forces, Pacific.)

4. The 38th Bombardment Group (M) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action on 16 and 17 June 1944 in the Jefman-Samate-Sarong area of Dutch New Guinea. At that time, an estimated 90 percent of the Japanese aircraft in the New Guinea area were based on Jefman and Samate airdromes, and Japanese warships and merchant vessels filled Sarong harbor. The most important target in Dutch New Guinea at the time, it was the only base in that area which had not been subjected to minimum-altitude bombing and strafing attacks. On 16 June, twenty-two B-25 aircraft of the 38th Bombardment Group (M) set out on an 8-hour flight, involving a round trip of 1,350 miles over enemy-occupied territory and treacherous mountain terrain, to strike at Samate and Jefman airdromes. Twenty of the airplanes reached the target and attacked in a line-abreast formation of four squadrons, completely covering the island with their bombs and machine-gun fire. As they swept over the target through antiaircraft fire from heavy and medium guns on the ground and from a cruiser offshore, they shot down five enemy fighters which were taking off and destroyed five other fighters and a dive-bomber in aerial combat and probably destroyed one more fighter. The accurate fire of the gunners of the 38th Bombardment Group (M) prevented the enemy aircraft, which were dropping aerial burst bombs, from closing in on the attacking formation. Dropping 214 100-pound para-demolition bombs and showering the area with over 39,000 rounds of machine-gun ammunition, the group turned the area into a mass of flames and wreckage. The following day, the group hit at merchant ships and naval vessels which had been sighted in the harbor. Displaying great determination and courage, the crews of the 38th Bombardment Group (M) made daring low-altitude bombing and strafing attacks on the enemy shipping. Dropping forty-four 300-pound delayed-action bombs and expending over 24,000 pounds of ammunition, the group left the harbor filled with sinking and burning ships. Two 3,000-ton freighter-transport, three smaller cargo vessels, and six coastal craft were definitely sunk, and two 1,500-ton freighter-transport were seriously damaged, to make a total of more than 8,000 tons of shipping sunk and 3,000 tons damaged. In these 2 days, the 38th Bombardment Group (M) destroyed or irreparably damaged a large part of the Japanese air and shipping strength which could have been used against Allied forces preparing to advance through the Netherlands East Indies in the drive to the Philippines. The gallantry and skill of the air crews of the 38th Bombardment Group (M) and the efficiency and devotion to duty of the ground personnel who prepared the aircraft and crews for these raids reflect great credit on the Army Air Forces and the entire armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 2042, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 28 September 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

5. The 90th Bombardment Squadron (L) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action on 3 and 4 March 1943 during the battle of the Bismark Sea. On 2 March, a 22-vessel Japanese convoy had been sighted off the north coast of New Britain. Transport vessels, flanked by a powerful destroyer escort, were heading for Lae, New Guinea, to reinforce the Japanese garrison there with an estimated 15,000 combat troops. A 3-day battle ensued as aircraft of the Fifth Air Force, on 2, 3, and 4 March, sought out and struck at the convoy. Taking off from Port Moresby, New Guinea, on the morning of 3 March, twelve B-25's of the 90th Bombardment Squadron (L) came over the enemy ships and descended to minimum altitude to make individual strafing and skip-bombing attacks on the convoy. Although intense antiaircraft fire from the Japanese vessels damaged two of the bombers, and enemy interception damaged another, the squadron dropped thirty-seven 500-pound bombs and sank one of the destroyers, two 5,000-ton freighter-transport, and a 6,000-ton transport. Two other large transports, of 6,000 and 8,000 tons, were hit and left sinking. That afternoon, ten B-25's of the squadron made individual bombing and strafing attacks on the remaining merchant vessels and warships, dropping a total of twenty-three 500-pound bombs. One destroyer received three direct hits and was left sinking; four bombs struck a destroyer escort and broke it in two; an already damaged freighter was sunk; and another freighter was left burning and sinking. The next day, nine B-25's of the squadron took off to strike at the remnants of the Japanese convoy. Attacking a damaged destroyer, the only vessel afloat in Huon Gulf, the crews of the squadron scored two direct hits on the vessel, set it afire, and left it sinking. In 3 days, the Fifth Air Force had completely annihilated the convoy, dealing the most decisive single blow to Japanese operations in the Southwest Pacific Area up to that time. Without the loss of a single airplane, the 90th Bombardment Squadron (L) not only played a tremendous part in the destruction of the enemy force, but also conclusively demonstrated the value of the strafing and skip-bombing technique which later became standard attack procedure in the Fifth Air Force. Credit for the squadron's part in this unprecedented victory is due not only to the pilots and air crews who so intrepidly attacked the convoy in the face of terrific antiaircraft fire and enemy-fighter opposition, but also to the ground crews who kept the bombers in top condition for combat and the operations and intelligence personnel who planned the strikes and briefed the crews. The achievements of the 90th Bombardment Squadron (L) reflect great honor on the United States Army Air Forces. (General Orders 2042, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 28 September 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

6. The 295th Engineer Combat Battalion (Reinforced) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 27 to 29 July 1944, at St. Lo, France. Despite heavy enemy artillery fire, aerial bombardment, and strafing, this engineer task force constructed roads, bridges, and otherwise completed a route for vehicular traffic through the completely demolished town. The project necessitated the removal of large numbers of mines, booby traps, unexploded bombs, and artillery shells which littered the proposed route. Normal precautions for disposing of these explosives could not be taken because the highly critical bottleneck had to be cleared rapidly. Through the heroic and untiring efforts of this battalion, reinforced by the 1st Platoon of the 611th Engineer Light Equipment Company, the historic St. Lo break-through was made possible. Approaching the town, two men were killed while sweeping for mines, a third man was killed by direct enemy artillery fire, and another injured. Bulldozers then went in, but these were damaged by hostile artillery barrages. The battalion's maintenance crews repaired the equipment on the spot, while injured operators were immediately replaced and the work continued. Direct hits on the completed road and on the operating equipment further complicated the already difficult task. Men worked with little food for up to 36 hours without rest. Considerable electric arc-welding was required on the damaged bridges across the Vire River and this had to be accomplished during the hours of darkness, which invariably drew enemy fire. Despite enemy action by airplanes and artillery, the task was performed without interruption and, at 0615 on 29 July, the road through the town was opened for vehicular traffic. The esprit de corps exhibited in this mission by the 295th Engineer Combat Battalion (Reinforced) reflects high honor on the participating personnel and is in keeping with the finest traditions of the combat engineers. (General Orders 642, Headquarters Seventh Army, Western Military District, 9 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

7. The 347th Fighter Group (TE) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action on 7, 20, and 22 November 1944. In November 1944, when most American air units were of necessity being used in the reconquest of the Philippine Islands, the Japanese were developing great air and shipping strength in the Makassar area of Celebes, Netherlands East Indies. The 347th Fighter Group (TE) was given the assignment of attempting to destroy this strong Japanese position by means of extreme-range fighter-bomber strikes. In order to reach the target, the P-38's of the group, then based on Middleburg Island off the coast of Dutch New Guinea, would have to fly 935 miles to Makassar via a route still dominated by the enemy, be prepared to engage in sustained combat at any point, and return to their base. On 7 November, thirteen P-38 aircraft of the group were dispatched on a mission to destroy enemy air power in that area, so that subsequent strikes on enemy shipping could be accomplished without interference. Arriving over Mandai airdrome, the pilots of the 347th Fighter Group (TE) shot down 3 Japanese fighters, then proceeded to make a total of 63 strafing passes at airplanes on the ground and at airdrome installations. They destroyed 13 fighters and 4 twin-engine bombers on the ground and probably destroyed 3 additional fighters and 2 bombers. Although their fuel and ammunition supply was running low, they attacked and destroyed a large hangar before heading back to the island of Morotai. Having in one strike virtually eliminated enemy air strength around Makassar, the group returned on 20 November to attack a large concentration of Japanese shipping in the harbor. Flying through a hail of intense and accurate antiaircraft fire, the pilots of the eight P-38's made strafing runs on the vessels and succeeded in sinking five freighters and a fuel barge and probably sinking three additional freighters and a two-masted sailboat, besides setting fire to a freighter-transport and a gunboat. As they finally retired from the area, because of a shortage of fuel and ammunition, they encountered and shot down one enemy fighter. Two days later twenty-three P-38's of the group returned to Makassar to attack an enemy who this time was fully anticipating their arrival. Arriving over Mandai airdrome, they destroyed with a few strafing passes the aircraft that still remained on the strip. Then, when a large force of merchant vessels, many of them armed, and protected by a warship and six gunboats, was discovered in the harbor, the group pressed an attack. A withering barrage of antiaircraft fire brought down three of the P-38's, the first lost in this series of missions. In the furious battle that ensued, the group sank a freighter-transport, a gunboat, a three-masted schooner, and a seaplane at anchor; set fire to nine other merchant vessels; and caused one merchant vessel to be beached. In these three strikes, this group so effectively smashed enemy air and sea power at Makassar that the Japanese never recovered their strength in that area and were unable, therefore, to harass American forces moving into the Philippines. The superb airmanship and exceptional courage of the P-38 pilots of the 347th Fighter Group (TE) and the skill and devotion to duty of the members of the ground echelon who prepared both airplanes and airmen for these long and difficult missions reflect great credit on the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 2042, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 23 September 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

8. The 637th Tank Destroyer Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 6 February to 2 March 1945, at Manila, Luzon, Philippine Islands. During this period the battalion distinguished itself by a display of fearless courage, aggressiveness, and resourcefulness in brilliantly accomplishing many varied and difficult missions which required the complete and exhaustive application of every man and weapon through extended and intensive combat. As special security force in an extremely active area of approximately 8 square miles, north of the Pasig River and east of Manila Bay, every possible man was pressed into combat duty; cooks, truck drivers, mechanics, and headquarters personnel aided in manning every available weapon on a 24-hour basis day after day with little or no rest, and annihilated numerous pockets of fanatically resisting Japanese, destroyed many heavily armed infiltrating demolition parties, and rescued from the water under enemy fire scores of refugees escaping from Fort Santiago and other Japanese installations on the south bank of the river. Moving to South Manila, elements of the battalion began a 2-week attack with sustained direct fire on heavily fortified modern concrete and steel buildings; to assure maximum effect, tank destroyer crews often approached to within 60 to 75 yards of their targets, though afforded very little protection from heavy enemy fire and flying fragments of our own shells. Concurrently, elements of the battalion rendered distinguished service in reducing strong enemy positions at Fort McKinley and Nichols Field, and assisted in the advance of the overland movement to the Los Banos Internment Camp. Throughout the period cited, prodigious feats of transporting huge quantities of ammunition from dumps more than 100 miles away, and maintaining all equipment at peak efficiency despite intensive use, were accomplished only through the tireless efforts and unflagging application of every member of the supply and maintenance section. The courage, aggressiveness, and tireless devotion to duty displayed by all personnel of the 637th Tank Destroyer Battalion, which itself accounted for more than 450 enemy dead and 60 machine guns and artillery pieces destroyed, contributed greatly to the success achieved by our combat divisions in annihilating the defenders of Manila, and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 62, Headquarters XIV Corps, 14 August 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

9. Company D, 35th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy. On 12 April 1945, Company D, 35th Infantry Regiment, reinforced by one platoon of Company B, was assigned the mission of blocking the north and east approaches to the Putlan River Valley against an aggressive and numerically superior enemy force which was threatening Highway No. 5 and the right flank of the 25th Infantry Division. Characterized by bare ridges and a precipitous vegetation-choked ravine, the Putlan River Valley area contains some of the most rugged terrain in the Caraballo Mountains of northern Luzon. Fog and mist drastically limited visibility, and heavy rains rendered the road impassible. Supplies had to be manhandled for over a mile up into the rough country near the block. Because of the size of the area to be covered and its limited strength, even after reinforcement, being only about 145 men, Company D was disposed in three groups: the main body of the company occupied a ridge in the center, with an outpost consisting of a machine-gun section and a ten-man rifle squad about 300 yards to the north, and an outpost of similar strength on the summit of a small hill about a half mile to the south. On the 12th and 13th April, the enemy made only light infiltration attacks, and patrolled to determine Company D's strength and disposition. Shortly after dark on the 14th, after a 50-round mortar preparation, about a company of the enemy attacked. Company D's main strongpoint and the northern outpost received determined infiltration attacks, evidently designed to distract them while the enemy concentrated its forces in an effort to overwhelm the southeastern outpost. Before the attack began the outpost's sound-power telephone line was cut, and the only communication with the main body was by SCR radio, which in order to transmit and receive had to be set up and operated in an exposed position at the very summit of the hill. Despite the fact that five enemy machine guns were constantly sweeping the hilltop during attacks, and firing intermittently between attacks, radio communication was maintained, and 81-mm mortar fire was called for and directed to within 15 yards of the perimeter. Four all-out attacks were made during the night. In true banzai fashion, the attackers rushed the hill, advancing until they fell, showering hand grenades on the perimeter as they approached. Between all-out attacks, the position received sporadic mortar and machine-gun fire, while small infiltration groups attempted to penetrate the perimeter. Disregarding the heavy machine-gun fire, the outpost's personnel exposed themselves throughout the night in order to remain ever on the alert at their weapons, and although seven dead Japs were found within 5 yards of one position when dawn broke, none reached the perimeter. In all, 21 enemy dead were counted in close proximity to the perimeter, and several more were killed by patrols sent out to sweep the surrounding draws, while the outpost suffered 9 casualties. Not until 1200 on 15 April was the area cleared of the last Jap. During the afternoon, casualties were evacuated to the main position, and the outpost was restocked with food and ammunition under sporadic 90-mm and knee-mortar fire. Moving in under cover of dark that night, the enemy surrounded Company D's three strong points, and at about 2100 a force estimated at 300 men launched simultaneous all-or-nothing attacks. Fighting continued without a break until well after dawn. Five major attacks were made; in the intervals of comparative quiet, suicide infiltration parties attempted to enter and breach the perimeters to pave the way for follow-up attacks in numerically superior strength. By intrepidly sticking to their guns despite the enemy mortar and machine-gun fire, and by constant, unsleeping vigilance, the defenders detected and stopped all such attempts. The Japs, armed with rifles, machine pistols, and grenades, and supported by heavy knee-mortar, 90-mm mortar, and machine-gun fire from a grove of trees on high ground some 400 yards northeast of Company D's main strongpoint, threw themselves at the perimeter time and again, driving within grenade range by sheer force of numbers. Regardless of the tenseness of the momentary situation, with a well-nigh perfect fire discipline, all personnel of the defending force adhered to a well-conceived fire plan which effectively halted the Japanese attacks. Enemy dead were literally piled up only a few feet from the gun muzzles. Bitter fighting continued well into the day without a break. Patrols sent out to clear the area killed several of the enemy, and in the afternoon eight Japs, the last remnants of the attacking force, were caught and killed in a ravine southeast of the company's main position. During the night's fighting, over one hundred enemy were killed in the vicinity of Company D's strongpoints. Twenty-nine additional enemy dead were found in the grove from which they had supported their attacks, as well as one 90-mm mortar and eight machine guns. On the night of the 17th, a small group of infiltrations was driven back and six were killed. But so overwhelming and costly was the Japanese failure of the night of 15-16 April that they were not again able to threaten Company D seriously. Although reduced to less than 80 effectives through battle casualties, sickness, and exhaustion, Company D continued to maintain the block against sporadic mortar fire and night infiltration attack until 22 April, when it was relieved. Assigned the mission of blocking the passage of a numerically superior enemy force through an area too large for even a battalion to block yard by yard, the members of Company D, 35th Infantry Regiment, by the excellence of their tactical disposition and defensive plan, and by the calm courage and extreme discipline with which they executed the plan, accomplished their mission of protecting the division's right flank with complete success. (General Orders 419, Headquarters 25th Infantry Division, 22 August 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

1. PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.—1. Announcement is made of units awarded battle participation credit under the provisions of paragraph 21b (2), AR 260-10, 25 October 1944, in the Philippine Island campaign.

a. Combat zone.—Philippine Islands and adjacent waters.

b. Time limitation.—7 December 1941 to 10 May 1942.

2. When entering individual credit on officers' qualification cards (WD AGO Forms 66-1 and 66-2) or in service record of enlisted personnel (WD AGO Form 24), these general orders may be cited as authority for such entries for personnel who were present for duty as a member of or attached to a unit listed at some time during the limiting dates of the Philippine Islands campaign.

XII. NORTHERN SOLOMONS.—1. Announcement is made of units awarded battle participation credit under the provisions of paragraph 21*b*(2), AR 260-10, 25 October 1944, in the Northern Solomons campaign.

a. Combat zone.—Solomons Islands north and west of Russell Islands, Bismarck Archipelago, and adjacent waters, except that the Bismarck Archipelago and adjacent waters will be included from 22 February to 14 December 1943 only. Effective 1 October 1944, the combat zone is limited to Bougainville Island and adjacent waters.

b. Time limitation.—22 February 1943 to 21 November 1944.

NOTE.—Battle participation credit for this campaign may be awarded by the theater commander to units or individuals who actually engaged the enemy after 21 November 1944.

2. When entering individual credit on officers' qualification cards (WD AGO Forms 66-1 and 66-2) or in the service record of enlisted personnel (WD AGO Form 24), this general orders may be cited as authority for such entries for personnel who were present for duty as a member of or attached to a unit listed at some time during the limiting dates of the Northern Solomons campaign.

XVI. SOUTHERN PHILIPPINES.—1. Announcement is made of units awarded battle participation credit under the provisions of paragraph 21b(2), AR 260-10, 25 October 1944, in the Southern Philippines campaign.

a. Combat zone.—The Philippine Islands, exclusive of Luzon, lying south of latitude 13°35' north, and the adjacent waters.

b. Time limitation.—17 October 1944 to 1 July 1945, except for the island of Mindanao. Final date for the island of Mindanao. 4 July 1945.

NOTE.—Battle participation credit for this campaign may be awarded by the theater commander to units or individuals who actually engaged the enemy after the closing dates, 1 July 1945 and 4 July 1945, respectively.

2. When entering individual credit on officers' qualification cards (WD AGO Forms 66-1 and 66-2) or in the service record of enlisted personnel (WD AGO Form 24), this general orders may be cited as authority for such entries for personnel who were present for duty as a member of or attached to a unit listed at some time during the limiting dates of the Southern Philippines campaign.

XVII. LUZON.—1. Announcement is made of units awarded battle participation credit under the provisions of paragraph 21b(2), AR 260-10, 25 October 1944, in the Luzon campaign.

a. Combat zone.—The Island of Luzon, other Philippine Islands lying north of latitude 13°35' north, and the adjacent waters.

b. Time limitation.—9 January 1945 to 4 July 1945.

NOTE.—Battle participation credit for this campaign may be awarded by the theater commander to units or individuals who actually engaged the enemy after 4 July 1945.

2. When entering individual credit on officers' qualification cards (WD AGO Forms 66-1 and 66-2) or in the service record of enlisted personnel (WD AGO Form 24), this general orders may be cited as authority for such entries for personnel who were present for duty as a member of or attached to a unit listed at some time during the limiting dates of the Luzon campaign.

XIX. RYUKYUS.—1. Announcement is made of units awarded battle participation credit under the provisions of paragraph 21b (2), AR 260-10, 25 October 1944, in the Ryukyus campaign.

a. Combat zone.—The chain of islands lying between Formosa (exclusive) and Kyushu (exclusive), and the adjacent waters.

b. Time limitation.—26 March 1945 to 2 July 1945.

NOTE.—Battle participation credit for this campaign may be awarded by the theater commander to units or individuals who actually engaged the enemy in the combat zone after 2 July 1945.

2. When entering individual credit on officers' qualification cards (WD AGO Forms 66-1 and 66-2) or in the service record of enlisted personnel (WD AGO Form 24), this general orders may be cited as authority for such entries for personnel who were present for duty as a member of or attached to a unit listed at some time during the limiting dates of the Ryukyus campaign.

GENERAL ORDERS }
No. 11

WAR DEPARTMENT
WASHINGTON 25, D. C., 30 January 1946

BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 41st Armored Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 25 December 1944 to 16 January 1945 during the Allied operation against the German penetration into Belgium. The 1st Battalion, 41st Armored Infantry Regiment, fought and lived in snow and subzero temperatures in a sustained drive against the enemy from Ciney, Belgium, through Brazards, Conneux, Conjoux, Soinne, then through Grandmenil and Odeigne, Belgium, on to Houffalize to close the Allied pocket around the German salient in the Ardennes. The drive was launched through well-dug-in German infantry, organized in depth in successive strong points and roving antitank rocket teams, heavy enemy artillery fire, nebelwerfer, and small-arms fire from enemy positions protected by dense wooded areas. Despite the relatively short daylight hours and long nights spent in digging in defensive positions in the frozen ground, the cold, tired men of the 1st Battalion pushed doggedly forward in the face of severe losses of personnel. At times their hands and feet were so cold that they could walk and fire their weapons only with the greatest difficulty. Many suffered from actual frost bite, but those gallant, determined, armored infantrymen gained their assigned objectives at a cost of 8 officers and 316 enlisted men after capturing 575 Germans and killing or wounding 540 of the enemy troops. This bold and aggressive action of the 1st Battalion, 41st Armored Infantry Regiment, carried on under the most difficult conditions, did much to further the 2d Armored Division's successful offensive against the German bulge in Belgium and is worthy of the highest praise. (General Orders 81, Headquarters 2d Armored Division, 23 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Maine).)

2. The 1st Battalion, 120th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 8 to 12 October 1944, in Germany. This battalion was given the mission of capturing and holding an important enemy-held town located on vitally strategic terrain. Due to the nature of this terrain, the attack was made across an unprotected area within full view of enemy defenses, so that when the objective was reached, the enemy was still able to deliver accurate fire. Despite violent opposition and heavy casualties, the troops fought tenaciously and seized the town. Four counter-attacks were launched by the foe in the days following, and numerically superior infantry and armored thrusts were repulsed in bitter fighting. The enemy lost 38 tanks, and 125 troops were captured, in addition to an unknown number of killed and wounded personnel. The heroism exhibited by all members of the 1st Battalion, 120th Infantry Regiment, reflects great credit on themselves, and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 642, Headquarters Seventh Army, Western Military District, 9 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

3. The 1st Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment; Company C, 774th Tank Battalion; 1st Platoon, Company B, 629th Tank Destroyer Battalion; 1st Platoon,
AGO 2989B—Feb. 681720°—46

Antitank Company, 330th Infantry Regiment; and Mine Platoon, Antitank Company, 330th Infantry Regiment, are cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy from 9 January 1945 to 11 January 1945. With its weary ranks depleted after a week of constant exposure to severe cold, including 4 days of bitter fighting, the 1st Battalion, together with its supporting forces, was assigned the mission to seize and hold the town of Bihain, Belgium, and protect the right flank of the 83d Infantry Division in conjunction with the division's mission of establishing a bridgehead over the Langlir Ronce River. Despite the handicap of deep snow and extremely low temperatures, the assault companies of the battalion advanced over 900 yards across flat, exposed terrain. In the face of intense artillery, mortar, and automatic-weapons fire, this battalion succeeded in driving the enemy from his outpost positions east of Bihain. After a night characterized by heavy enemy shelling of the bitterly won position, the battalion resumed its attack on Bihain at 0730 hours, 10 January. Defending the town stubbornly, the enemy employed tank, mortar, artillery, and automatic-weapons fire and fanatically held their positions until either killed or overpowered by unrelenting pressure. Because of the exposed terrain, each house was an enemy fortification. Although the enemy fire caused heavy casualties among the attackers, it resulted only in an increased determination within the ranks to secure the objective. Evacuation of the wounded was extremely difficult because of the inclement weather conditions, the nature of the terrain, and the fact that the enemy artillery covered every approach to the town with heavy fire. On the morning of 11 January, the enemy completely blanketed the town with a ½-hour artillery barrage of great intensity and, at 0900 hours, an estimated force of 200 enemy infantrymen supported by five tanks attacked the town from the woods to the south. Once again the 1st Battalion displayed its indomitable fighting spirit and, although outnumbered, rose to new heights in completely halting the enemy attack. The final assault was crushed decisively, the enemy annihilated, and the five tanks destroyed. In these 3 days of action the 1st Battalion sustained 130 casualties against an estimated 525 for the enemy. Thus, as a result of the unswerving aggressiveness and outstanding courage of the men of the 1st Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment; Company C, 774th Tank Battalion; 1st Platoon, Company B, 629th Tank Destroyer Battalion; 1st Platoon, Antitank Company, 330th Infantry Regiment; and Mine Platoon, Antitank Company, 330th Infantry Regiment, from 9 through 11 January 1945, a fanatical enemy was dislodged from the town of Bihain, Belgium, and the right flank of the division was secured. The aggressiveness and superb devotion to duty displayed by each man of the 1st Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, and its supporting forces are in keeping with the finest traditions of the armed forces. (General Orders 222, Headquarters 83d Infantry Division, 3 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

4. The 1st Battalion, 334th Infantry Regiment, and supporting personnel of the 326th Field Artillery Battalion and Cannon Company, 334th Infantry Regiment, are cited for extraordinary heroism and determined action against the enemy in the drive from the Roer River to the Rhine River, 23 February-5 March 1945. The 1st Battalion, at 230830 February 1945, against positions well prepared over an extensive period of time, launched the Ninth Army offensive by crossing the Roer in assault boats. Heavy enemy artillery fire resulted in direct hits on the two boats, the loss of the battalion commander, and the loss of many engineer guides and boat personnel; however, the battalion completed the crossing ready to advance in less than ½ an hour. Under devastating enemy artillery fire, over flat terrain subjected to automatic-weapons fire from a dangerously exposed right flank, the 1st Battalion cleared Korrenzig by 0830 and Rurich by 1410. Before midnight on 23 February 1945, the 1st Battalion started a move 2,500 yards north to Baal to repel a strong counterattack supported by direct tank fire against the remainder of the regiment. At 240430 February 1945, the battalion regrouped in the southwest section of Baal, and amid severe artillery shelling and sniper fire, constituted a rear and left flank defense. By 1615 on 25 February 1945, the 1st Battalion had moved to and captured Hetzerath, 2,600 yards north of Baal, from a fanatically resisting enemy force. In addition to many dead and wounded littering the town, Hetzerath was cleared of over 300 prisoners. The night of 25 and 26 February 1945 were spent in consolidating positions and establishing contact with flank units. On 27 February 1945, the battalion, Company A riding on the lead tanks of the 771st Tank Battalion, constituted the lead elements of Task Force Church, which initiated the Roer-Rhine break through, and thrust forward 20 kilometers before dark. The many prisoners and civilians streaming to the rear were evidence of this battalion's aggressiveness. By 281700 February 1945, the 1st Battalion, brought up to the left flank of the 2d Battalion, which had passed through by pushing forward relentlessly on foot when the road was blocked, had destroyed or captured an enemy force east of Waldniel consisting of 500 troops and 7 tanks and self-propelled field pieces. At 010535 March 1945, the 1st Battalion again detrucked and assisted in clearing Boisheim. Again on 2 March 1945, at 1400, this tank-riding battalion led off, heading due east for the Rhine. East of St. Tonis, an encounter with a strong enemy force of 8 self-propelled 88-mm. guns and 200 infantrymen caused the loss of 4 tanks on which 1st Battalion personnel were riding. A total of eight tanks ridden by 1st Battalion men had been put out of action. Swinging north again toward Moers on 3 March 1945, the battalion passed through the 2d and 3d Battalions and broke up the Germans' last desperate counterattack west of the Rhine. The battle of Moers continued throughout 4 March 1945, with the 1st Battalion flanking to the left through heavy artillery and intense automatic fire. At 050255 March 1945, the battalion reached the bridge site where, at daylight, 400 enemy troops were cleared from surrounding buildings. In 10 days of almost continuous movement and combat, the 1st Battalion, 334th Infantry Regiment, and supporting personnel of the 326th Field Artillery Battalion and Cannon Company, 334th Infantry Regiment, in constant contact with the enemy, with the loss of the battalion commander and two rifle company commanders, despite fatigue casualties, made an assault crossing of the Roer River and, by forever keeping its spirit to advance and its will to fight, spearheaded the 84th Infantry Division in the rapid break through to reach the Rhine River. (General Orders 224, Headquarters 84th Infantry Division, 10 October 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

5. The 2d Battalion, 63d Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Luzon, Philippine Islands, during the period 23 June to 7 July 1945. The 2d Battalion began its advance on Mount Santo Domingo, 4,200 feet in elevation, guarding the entrance to Kiangang, last major Japanese defense position and supply base on Luzon. The advance through the rugged and wild mountain province was made along two parallel and tortuous mountain trails, blasted from the side of rock cliffs and flanked by dense jungle and rain forest. The trails were mined, cratered, and blocked by numerous landslides and tank traps. Eight gruelling days of bitter close-in fighting against stubborn resistance brought the 2d Battalion to within striking distance of the main enemy position. High winds and typhoon rains hampered engineer and pioneer operations and made supply and evacuation by hand carry extremely difficult. Well-trained enemy infantry in good physical condition and armed with a high percentage of automatic weapons, defended the knife-edged ridges of the positions, which were completely tunnelled through and honeycombed with caves. Jungle and vertical cliffs on either flank canalized the attack of the 2d Battalion. For 4 days, the 2d Battalion hurled attacks against this position until it was finally taken on 5 July by a savage assault with hand grenades, bayonets, and satchel charges. The enemy fought to the death, and friendly casualties were high. During the nights of 5-6 and 6-7 July, the enemy attempted to retake the position with fierce counterattacks which were beaten back. During the period 23 June to 7 July 1945, 345 enemy dead were counted on the front of the 2d Battalion and two prisoners of war were taken. The defeat was a decisive one and opened the way to the seizure of Kiaugan. Tons of ammunition and large amounts of vehicles, supplies, and equipment were captured along the route of advance. The losses of the battalion were 19 dead and 42 wounded. Every officer and man displayed the highest kind of fortitude, resourcefulness, and devotion to duty. The distinguished performance of duty by the 2d Battalion, 63d Infantry Regiment, exemplifies the true spirit of the American Army and reflects great credit on the military service. (General Orders 164, Headquarters 6th Infantry Division, 15 August 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

6. The 2d Battalion, 311th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 30 January to 7 February 1945. During this protracted period, the battalion captured Kesternich, Germany, against fanatical defense, and advanced at night over 4,000 yards of enemy-held terrain to capture Ruhrberg, Germany, on 4 February 1945. The 2d Battalion continued its attack at 0330, 5 February 1945, over very rugged mountain terrain to capture Woffelsbach, Germany, and the high ground to the west and north. Some 23 pillboxes were captured in this operation. On 7 February 1945, the 2d Battalion fought its way over 300 yards of mountainous forest, with slopes of from 30° to 60° to be overcome and defended by determined enemy in concrete pillboxes, wooden bunkers, and entrenchments. By its daring and vigorously persistent operations, this battalion outflanked the Straugh-Steckenborn segment of the Siegfried Line; successfully attacked and cleared the enemy from key terrain south and southwest of Schmidt, Germany, and thereby provided for the rapid reduction of the strongly fortified area protecting the Schwammenauel Dam, with a minimum of casualties. The courage, fortitude, and devotion to duty shown by the members of the 2d Battalion, 311th Infantry Regiment, for a protracted period of 9 days in the face of severe weather and a determined, entrenched enemy—3 days of this operation being over terrain impassable to movement of any type of motor vehicle, necessitating the hand carrying of all supplies, equipment, and ammunition—resulted in a 6-mile advance into the enemy territory and the capture of three towns with over 300 prisoners. (General Orders 324, Headquarters 78th Infantry Division, 30 June 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

7. The 2d Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. At 0830 on 7 August 1944, the 2d Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, launched an attack toward St. Joseph, France. By 0930, the leading company began receiving intense artillery, machine-gun, and small-arms fire. All through the rest of the day, heavy fighting went on and the two leading companies were able to advance another 300 yards before darkness came and defensive positions were prepared for the night. Before dawn on 8 August, the German artillery began a concentration which blanketed the entire battalion area and lasted for 45 minutes, and its intensity delayed the jump-off time of the battalion's attack. The battalion sector was some 1800 yards in width and ran through woods of varying density and over bald, open hills that were under direct enemy observation and subject to all their fire power. At about 0800, the battalion resumed the attack. Here the battalion bore the brunt of the division attack, being almost in the center of the division sector. It encountered the strongest of enemy installations, including permanent gun emplacements hewn out of the granite rocks of a quarry and an extensive series of fox holes and trenches reinforced by stone walls and barbed wire entanglements. Several times hand-to-hand combat was needed to reduce these positions. Even though outnumbered, it continued the attacks against fanatical opposition in the face of intense artillery concentrations, including multiple-barrelled rocket projectors, antitank guns, 88-mm guns, mortar, and machine fire. Through aggressiveness, determination, and sheer courage, by 1030 it had gained 600 yards of bitterly contested ground. Then the enemy counterattacked. The numerically superior enemy closed in upon the battalion and a furious hand-to-hand battle raged. Radio operators, runners, and liaison personnel all joined in the battle to muster every available weapon to force the enemy back. Finally, the fighting skill and spirit of the 2d Battalion showed its effect. Those enemies who were not killed, wounded, or captured were put to rout and their morale broken. Without respite the battalions' attack continued. When one company was suffering heavy casualties and became disorganized by fire from a self-propelled gun, the last remaining officer in the company, at great risk to his life, knocked it out with a bazooka. Such leadership and disregard for personal safety characterized the actions of all members of the battalion. By nightfall it had advanced to within 500 yards of the St. Joseph fortress, and by constantly pouring fire from small arms, mortars, and artillery into the fortress, they prevented the enemy from manning their gun positions atop the fortress, thus being able to clean up the outposts of the enemy that surrounded the fortress. The heavy shelling shook the fortress continuously throughout the night. The next morning, the German commander of the fortress, his troops decisively defeated and thoroughly demoralized, and seeing the hopelessness of his situation, surrendered the fortress. Battalion losses during the 3-day action were 154 killed, wounded, or missing. An estimated 261 Germans were killed, 428 taken prisoner, and 178 wounded. Five enemy assault guns, three self-propelled guns, five antitank guns, seven anti-aircraft guns, one tank, and seven mortars were destroyed. An undetermined but large amount of enemy small arms, ammunition, and food stores was captured or destroyed. Thus, during the 3-day period from 7 through 9 August 1944 the 2d Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, with a notable display of courage, combat skill, and determination broke stubborn enemy resistance at St. Joseph and the approaches to St. Malo, decisively defeated the enemy, and prevented them from denying our entry into the St. Malo-Dinard area. The undaunted courage and unswerving devotion to duty shown by each man of the battalion reflect the highest traditions of the armed forces. (General Orders 231, Headquarters 83d Infantry Division, 5 December 1945, as amended)

8. The 3d Battalion, 137th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in France from 18 to 21 November 1944. On the morning of 18 November 1944, the 3d Battalion, 137th Infantry Regiment, launched an attack toward high ground north-east of Harprich, as part of the 35th Infantry Division offensive designed to break the winter offensive line established by the Germans on the axis of Nancy, Sarreguemines, and Mannheim. The first objective was seized at 0915 hours, after the battalion had forded an icy stream and had driven through barbed wire entanglements at the muddy approaches to the town of Bening. Pausing momentarily, the troops pressed on under increasingly accurate shellfire, across open terrain, and entered the town of Bistroff. Bitter house-to-house fighting ensued, until 1230 hours when possession of the town was secured. Marshy terrain in that vicinity defied all efforts to move either track or wheeled vehicles. In anticipation of an attempt to retake Bistroff, antitank mines were hand carried under cover of darkness and placed astride the two roads leading into the town. At 0600 19 November, Company K launched an attack on Hill 315, the outstanding terrain feature in this area, studded with gun emplacements which denied the use of nearby roads to our forces. Simultaneously the Germans counterattacked the town of Bistroff in company strength, supported by two Mark V Panther tanks. Both tanks were disabled by the well-placed antitank mines, and the 3d Battalion riflemen, with artillery support, placed withering fire among the enemy ranks, stalled the enemy attack, gradually turned it, and forced the Germans back with heavy casualties. In the meantime, Company K achieved a tactical surprise and, supported by a heavy machine gun platoon, stormed the dug-in positions on Hill 315. The capture of this hill pierced the enemy defense line, and enabled armor and other units on the right to advance and seize Gros-Tenquin. At 0700 20 November, the 3d Battalion moved toward the enemy stronghold of Freyhouse, across soggy terrain and under artillery and mortar fire, seized several intervening fortified positions, and that afternoon launched an attack which carried into the outskirts of Freyhouse. The enemy reacted strongly with well organized counterattacks. By nightfall, one platoon of Company K was established in a group of houses in the town. Other units of the 3d Battalion, supported by two tank destroyers, attacked at 0700 the following morning, advanced relentlessly across an open field swept by machine-gun fire, joined the platoon already in the town, and, without respite, proceeded to drive the bitterly resisting Germans from Freyhouse, thereby eliminating the last major obstacle before Sarreguemines. The extraordinary heroism, exemplary endurance, and teamwork displayed by the members of the 3d Battalion, 137th Infantry Regiment, fighting under adverse circumstances against a determined and resourceful enemy, are in accordance with the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 56, Headquarters 35th Infantry Division, Camp Breckinridge, Kentucky, 6 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

9. The 3d Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. On the morning of the 10th December 1944, from an assembly area near Grossshau, Germany, the battalion attacked with the mission of capturing and securing the town of Strass, Germany, and thus permitting the 5th Armored Division a place of debouchment from the Hurtgen Forest in its drive to the Roer River. Taking advantage of darkness, the battalion entered the town of Strass, completely surprising the enemy; but when the enemy discovered the battalion had entered the town, intense resistance was encountered. The enemy maneuvered its supporting forces until it had sealed off the assault companies by completely surrounding the town. Despite constant artillery, mortar, and machine-gun fire, the 3d Battalion threw back daily counterattacks by numerically superior forces of enemy infantry supported by tanks and assault guns. During the 4-day period which saw six battalion commanders in command, because of wounds or death incurred in action, the battalion displayed its superb fighting spirit by refusing to allow itself to be defeated. Although without food for 3 days and without sufficient medical supplies to treat the ever-increasing number of its own and enemy wounded, the battalion never lost its determination to succeed in the face of what appeared to be a desperate and hopeless situation. During this period the 3d Battalion lost 293 men killed, wounded, and missing, while the enemy suffered an estimated 550 casualties. Five enemy tanks were destroyed by our forces during this period. As a result of the outstanding courage and determination to succeed displayed by every fighting man of the 3d Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, from 10 through 13 December 1944, a strong enemy force was repeatedly driven from the town of Strass, which enabled the 5th Armored Division to execute its drive toward the Roer River and seal off the vitally important Roer River Dam area. The aggressiveness and superb devotion to duty displayed by the 3d Battalion against overwhelming odds and under extremely difficult conditions merit much praise and are in keeping with the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 230, Headquarters 83d Infantry Division, 4 December 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Third United States Army and Eastern Military District.)

10. The 3d Battalion, 398th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding accomplishment in combat during the period 3 to 12 April 1945 in the vicinity of Heilbronn, Germany. After crossing the Neckar River by assault boat, the battalion secured a bridgehead and prepared to hold its position when intense enemy artillery and mortar barrages landed with almost pinpoint precision on the crossing site, making further use of assault boats impossible and isolating the battalion. Simultaneously wave after wave of hostile troops, an entire regiment in strength, counterattacked, and the weight of the numerically-superior foe forced the battalion to withdraw to the river's edge. Despite heavy losses, remnants of the battalion reorganized and, when the Germans stopped to dig in, attacked again and retook most of the lost ground. Every night for 5 nights the enemy attacked, trying desperately to regain the east bank, but each time they were thrown back. On one occasion, after a 3-mile-long column of enemy troops and vehicles poured into the lines, the Germans charged with reckless and fanatical zeal, and succeeded in making a slight penetration. Committing its reserves, the battalion stopped the attack and reestablished its lines. By the individual heroism and intrepidity of the officers and men of this command, the depleted battalion held the bridgehead for 8 days and nights under continuous and savage shelling, enabling the division to push other troops across the river and insure the success of the vital operation. The accomplishment of the 3d Battalion, 398th Infantry Regiment, reflects the highest traditions of the Army of the United States. (General Orders 277, Headquarters 100th Infantry Division, 9 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater (Main).)

11. The 25th Liaison Squadron is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Philippine Islands from 17 April to 1 June 1945. During this period, members of the 25th Liaison Squadron, flying light, highly vulnerable liaison type aircraft, rendered invaluable support to American air and ground forces cam-

paiguing on the island of Mindanao. Frequently braving enemy ground fire, pilots of the 25th Liaison Squadron aided two divisions by carrying out photographic and reconnaissance missions, locating enemy positions ahead of advancing ground troops, directing tactical aircraft, pin-pointing targets with smoke grenades, leading transport aircraft on drop missions, and bringing messages and information to rapidly moving forward elements. With but little interruption throughout this period, the 25th Liaison Squadron maintained a daily courier schedule for evacuating casualties from front lines to hospitals or to larger airfields for evacuation from the island. In all, airplanes of the 25th Liaison Squadron flew a total of 2,536 hours in a single month, an average of 126 hours for each available pilot, and, during the entire period, carried a total of 2,444 passengers and 125,000 pounds of freight, mail, and supplies. To maintain this grueling schedule, practically all maintenance work and briefing was carried out at night. Many times the photographic section worked all night to meet photographic requirements, while the squadron's medical personnel rendered invaluable assistance to the ground forces medical troops in evacuation work. By the skill and courage of its pilots, and the tireless devotion to duty of its ground personnel, the 25th Liaison Squadron played a major part in the conquest of Mindanao and the consequent liberation of the southern islands of the Philippines. By their achievements in the Mindanao operations, personnel of the 25th Liaison Squadron brought great credit on themselves and on the United States Army Air Forces. (General Orders 2186, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 10 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

12. The 65th Troop Carrier Squadron is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Philippine Islands on 23 February 1945. On that day, American and Filipino forces undertook to liberate 2,100 Allied civilians and prisoners of war interned in the Japanese prison camp at Los Banos, at the southern end of Laguna de Bay, Luzon. The plan of operations called for a ground attack from the north, an amphibious attack from Laguna de Bay, and a paratroop attack, as well as guerilla infiltration. The mission of the 65th Troop Carrier Squadron was to transport the air-borne troops and to drop them within a small target area in the proximity of the prison. Taking off in complete darkness from Nichols Field, Luzon, early in the morning of 23 February, the formation of nine C-47 aircraft headed toward Manila Bay, then turned and came back over the target. Although the small dropping zone was surrounded by trees on three sides, and a high-power electric line extended diagonally across the area, the air-borne troops were placed in the proper area, close to the compound, without injury, and were successful in neutralizing gun positions and entering the prison within 15 minutes after the first parachute had opened. All the internees, suffering from malnutrition and various diseases, were successfully released, as American and Filipino forces achieved complete surprise. By effecting the precise timing necessary to the success of this operation, and by dropping the paratroops into the target area as quickly and efficiently as possible, the crews of the 65th Troop Carrier Squadron played a major part in the successful liberation of several thousand men, women, and children in desperate need of help. The courage and skill of the personnel of the 65th Troop Carrier Squadron are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 2186, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 10 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

13. The 82d Engineer Combat Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 12 and 13 April 1945, near Magdeburg, Germany. Although taxed strenuously while supporting the 2d Armored Division's long and hazardous drive from the Rhine River, this battalion accepted with great determination its mission of bridging the Elbe River. Even though it was impossible to make a detailed reconnaissance of crossing sites, the officers in command made a prompt decision, and operations began. Two bridges were approaching completion when intense enemy artillery fire destroyed both of the crossings. At this point, all troops were evacuated from the far shore, and general casualties were sustained. The battalion remained at the site, handling assault boats until evacuation was completed. Then, a third attempt to establish a crossing was made and resulted in the first bridgehead across the vitally important river. The skill, courage, and efficient efforts of the officers and men of the 82d Engineer Combat Battalion assured the successful assault, despite fierce enemy resistance. Their achievement contributed materially toward the completion of the Allies' mission and was in keeping with the highest standards of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 642, Headquarters Seventh Army, Western Military District, 9 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

14. The 166th Engineer Combat Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty against the enemy from 7 to 10 February 1945. For 72 hours, the gallant men of this battalion battled the overwhelming difficulty of concentrated enemy artillery fire and the raging, flood-swollen current of the Sauer River, near Dilligen, Luxembourg, to maintain a constant flow of infantrymen and supplies to the hostile shore. Limited to night reconnaissance by constant surveillance from the Siegfried Line, they employed assault boats to transport the first company across. With daylight and the attack developing, the battalion attempted to construct footbridges, only to have them either destroyed by direct, hostile artillery fire or swept away by the torrential current. All else failing, the engineers brought up 450 assault craft and, despite heavy losses suffered in men and matériel, continued to ferry men, food, and ammunition across the river until the entire regiment and their equipage had been unloaded onto the newly established bridgehead and sufficiently secured against all enemy attack, except by artillery, these intrepid soldiers constructed a Class 40 ponton bridge downstream for the movement of reinforcements and supplies to the infantrymen assaulting the Siegfried Line. The 166th Engineer Combat Battalion's indomitable fighting spirit, indefatigable efforts in the face of almost insurmountable odds, and their unflinching devotion to duty are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 294, Headquarters Third United States Army, 14 October 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Rear).)

15. The 247th Engineer Combat Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 2 to 23 October 1944, in the vicinity of Marlenberg, Rimberg, and Aachen, Germany. Against intense enemy mortar, artillery, and small-arms fire, this unit undertook its vital mission of constructing four bridges across the Wurm River, so that infantry and tank groups could cross the river and attack. Although the battalion was forced to deploy as infantry upon reaching the sites; and despite heavy casualties, the first bridge was completed 2 hours after construction began. This permitted tank support to launch an attack. The following day, while still under artillery fire, a Bailey bridge was built near the same site. On 4 October, after fighting as infantry for 2 days, the unit completed the fourth and final treadway bridge. Without a rest period, the battalion then assumed the offensive as infantry, and moved against the Siegfried Line. For 4 days and nights of continual combat, they drove from Kerkrade, Holland, into Aachen, Germany, to capture 22 pillboxes and 196 prisoners. The heroic achievement of the 247th Engineer Combat Battalion, which enabled the 30th Infantry Division and the 2d Armored Division to drive to the Roer River line, was in keeping with the finest traditions of the combat engineers and the armed forces. (General Orders 642, Headquarters Seventh Army, Western Military District, 9 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

16. The 348th Fighter Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Philippine Islands on 24 December 1944. On that day, four P-47 squadrons of the group were assigned to provide protection for twenty-two B-24 aircraft making a raid on Clark Field, Luzon, then one of the principal Japanese strongholds in the Philippine Islands. Taking off from an airstrip on the island of Leyte, the airplanes of the 348th Fighter Group rendezvoused over Masbate with the bombers, which were flying from Palau. Two of the P-47 pilots, dispatched on a preraid reconnaissance, reached the target area 25 minutes ahead of the main striking force without being detected. Finding the air filled with Japanese airplanes at altitudes of from 10,000 to 16,000 feet, they unhesitatingly dived into the nearest enemy formation and, in the ensuing battle, destroyed 3 enemy aircraft and damaged another. Then, before the remaining Japanese could close in on them, these pilots radioed full information to the main American force on the number and disposition of the enemy formations, the weather, and possible targets. As the American bombers approached Clark Field under a cover of P-47 aircraft at 20,000 feet, enemy fighters began to attack. Soon, a series of fights between elements and flights of P-47's against 2-airplane flights and single aircraft of the enemy raged at altitudes of 2,000 to 20,000 feet for 10 to 15 miles on either flank of the Liberators' approach. Despite increasing antiaircraft fire, two of the Thunderbolt squadrons provided close protection for the bombers, engaging the enemy fighter aircraft only when they broke through the cover to attack the bombers. In a 45-minute battle, the P-47 pilots destroyed 32 hostile aircraft and probably 2 others, or more than half of the airborne Japanese fighters, and thereby enabled the American bomb squadrons to destroy grounded aircraft, large hangars, extensive supply dumps, and repair installations without suffering a single casualty. Of the Thunderbolts which participated in this perfectly coordinated strike, four were lost, with one pilot crash-landing safely. Credit for the outstanding success of this mission must be given not only to the pilots of the group but also to the maintenance, operations, and intelligence personnel who readied the airplanes and airmen for the flight. In helping to deal a smashing blow at the center of Japanese air power in the Philippines and thereby pave the way for the invasion of Luzon some weeks later, the personnel of the 348th Fighter Group brought great honor on themselves and the United States Army Air Forces. (General Orders 2186, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 10 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

17. The 403d Troop Carrier Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Philippine Islands from 17 April to 30 June 1945. When Eighth Army units, after landing on the island of Mindanao, quickly overreached their supply lines, and prolonged rains rendered ground routes impassable, it became necessary that air transport be used to resupply ammunition, rations, and medical, engineering, signal, and fuel supplies to the rapidly advancing troops. Assigned on sudden notice to take part in the Mindanao operations, the 403d Troop Carrier Group, then engaged in transport activity over an area ranging from Australia to the Philippines, had to set up a temporary advance base to meet Eighth Army requirements. To accomplish their vitally important task, C-47 crews of the 403d

Troop Carrier Group, frequently subjected to severe enemy ground fire, flew at dangerously low altitudes at minimum air speeds to carry out dropping missions, and made uplift flights to guerrilla-built jungle air strips or badly damaged pre-war landing fields. These hastily constructed fields, averaging less than 2,500 feet in length, made landing and take-off especially hazardous, while the absence of radio communications in many of the areas of Mindanao forced the pilots to determine from visual markings whether the strips were American- or Japanese-held. To reach ground force units in the mountainous districts, aircraft of the 403d Troop Carrier Group had to wind through valleys and dodge treacherous peaks in ever-changing weather. One of the most noteworthy achievements of the 403d Troop Carrier Group occurred on 20 and 21 May, when these transport planes landed at Libby Field in the midst of a fierce battle for the possession of the field, and, in 2 days, evacuated 343 wounded, although ground action was in progress less than 200 yards away. Despite the hazards which confronted their activities during this entire period, only 2 aircraft were lost and no personnel of the 403d Troop Carrier Group were injured, although 12 of the airplanes were damaged by enemy fire. Ground crews of the 403d Troop Carrier Group demonstrated exceptional skill and devotion to duty in maintaining and servicing the aircraft, working 24 hours a day to keep the airplanes flying. During this period, the 403d Troop Carrier Group completed a total of 6,128 flights, delivering a total of 1,696,864 pounds of supplies and equipment in dropping missions, and 9,685,248 pounds in uplift missions, and evacuating 4,799 battle casualties. In making it possible for the Eighth Army to continue its drives through Mindanao, the personnel of the 403d Troop Carrier Group made a decided contribution to the successful liberation of the islands of the southern Philippines and brought great credit on themselves and the United States Army. (General Orders 2186, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 10 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

18. The 451st Bombardment Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. Notified to prepare their aircraft for a vital mission against the Markersdorf Airdrome, Vienna, Austria, in a counter air operation, the ground crews worked with enthusiasm to insure the mechanical perfection of their airplanes for the forthcoming mission. On 23 August 1944, twenty-four B-24 type aircraft, heavily loaded with maximum tonnage, took off and set course for their destination. En route, the formation was intercepted by numerous enemy fighters in a well coordinated attack, emerging from protective cloud covering 6 to 10 abreast and employing 20-mm cannon in their violent assaults. The highly aggressive enemy fighters made suicidal attempts against the bombers in a desperate attempt to break up and destroy the formation, to prevent the successful completion of their vital mission. Displaying outstanding courage, professional skill and fortitude, the gallant crews battled their way through the overwhelming enemy opposition to the target, where, under continued heavy opposition, they completed a highly successful bombing run. Through their superior ability to maintain a tight protective formation and to direct heavy defensive fire against the fierce attacks of the enemy, the group accounted for 29 enemy aircraft destroyed or damaged in the air. The excellent bombing pattern on the ground installations inflicted grave damage to important buildings and supplies, and 12 enemy airplanes were destroyed on the ground. Throughout the aerial battle, the 451st Bombardment Group lost nine heavy bombers, with others severely damaged by heavy enemy fire. Through this outstanding achievement, a telling blow was struck at the fighter aircraft concentrations in the Vienna area, thus effectively and seriously crippling enemy-operations efficiency at a time of great importance. By the outstanding courage, professional skill, and unwavering determination of the combat crews, together with the superior technical skill and devotion to duty of the ground personnel, the 451st Bombardment Group has upheld the highest traditions of the military service, thereby reflecting great credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States of America. (General Orders 3757, Headquarters Fifteenth Air Force, 2 October 1944, as approved by the Commanding General, Mediterranean Theater.)

19. The 475th Fighter Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Philippine Islands from 25 October to 25 December 1944. Operating from 3 airstrips on the island of Leyte, pilots of the 475th Fighter Group destroyed 158 Japanese aircraft and probably destroyed 26 others in aerial combat during this period, assisting in wresting air supremacy from the enemy early in the course of the Philippine operations. Prior to the arrival of their airplanes at Leyte, pilots of the group, which had arrived in the Philippines shortly after the initial assault, borrowed aircraft of another organization and, of their own volition, made fighter sweeps over nearby enemy installations, while more than 200 officers and men of the unit worked for 2½ days throughout enemy bombing and strafing attacks to service United States naval fighters and attack bombers at Dulag airstrip, although necessary equipment and parts had to be borrowed, improvised, or salvaged. On 7 December 1944, the group flew 91 sorties to give patrol protection to American landing operations in western Leyte, and destroyed 28 enemy aircraft in numerous battles. On 25 December 1944, escorting heavy bombers over enemy-held Clark Field, Luzon, pilots of the 475th Fighter Group destroyed 26 enemy aircraft to bring the total aerial victories of the group to 500. In addition, the 475th Fighter Group destroyed numerous enemy airplanes on the ground and seriously damaged enemy airfield installations. Of the pilots who participated in these operations 2 were killed, 5 were reported missing, and 4 were wounded, while 14 of their aircraft were destroyed. Credit for the brilliant achievements of the group during this critical 60-day period must go to not only the pilots but also to the maintenance crews and other ground personnel without whose skill and tireless devotion to duty these victories would not have been possible. In making this outstanding contribution to the successful completion of the first phases of the Philippine liberation campaign, the personnel of the 475th Fighter Group upheld the highest traditions of the United States Army Air Forces. (General Orders 2186, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 10 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

20. The 687th Field Artillery Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period, 16-22 December 1944 in Luxembourg and Belgium. On 16 December 1944, the 687th Field Artillery Battalion, less Battery B, was reinforcing the 28th Infantry Division from positions south of Wiltz, Luxembourg. The enemy launched a strong attack early on the morning of 16 December which penetrated the infantry and surrounded the battalion. The battalion was heavily shelled. The howitzer crews, on 16 December, with great courage and determination fought off repeated enemy attacks against their positions. Battery B was returned to the battalion. It arrived and was emplaced on the night of 16 December 1944, having passed through enemy territory. Throughout 17 December 1944, Battery B placed a barrage around the positions of Battery A and C, enabling them to beat off a determined enemy attack and to displace to more advantageous positions. On the night of 17 December, the Battalion Headquarters and Battery B were surrounded but they broke out, made a night march through enemy territory, and went into position with Batteries A and B near Wiltz, Luxembourg, to support the defense of that city. All observation posts had been overrun and the personnel were missing. On 18 and 19 December, the battalion was the only artillery in the sector and, with outstanding initiative and admirable fortitude, supported the defense of the city of Wiltz. The supply lines were cut but the battalion trains fought through with ammunition and supplies. The batteries were in position in column and as the enemy attacked the first battery, it withdrew under the protecting fire of the remaining batteries. On the night of 19 December, the battalion command post was captured and heavy casualties were suffered 25 yards of the remainder of the battalion. At 2200 that night, the battalion was attacked on all sides and fought courageously for several hours. The battalion command post was captured and heavy casualties were suffered by both sides. On 20 December 1944, the battalion fought its way to Bastogne and there reorganized. At 0200 on 21 December, Battery A was attacked from the south and by 0330 was engaged from all sides by machine guns, small arms, mortars, and grenades. At 0815, six enemy tanks encircled the position in the fog and attacked. The second section gun was destroyed after knocking out a tank at point blank range. After heavy fighting, the battery was overrun. The cannoneers withdrew only after dismantling their howitzers. The battalion then deployed four howitzers in antitank positions and defended them as riflemen against incessant attacks. The supported infantry withdrew at 2000 on 22 December 1944, and the three remaining howitzers in the battalion remained to cover the withdrawal, firing continuously for 45 minutes after all communication had been lost. In one 11-hour period, this 3-gun battery fired over 1,200 rounds against the enemy and was the only organized artillery in the sector. At 2300, the three remaining howitzers were withdrawn to a position south of Neufehateat, Belgium. The individual leadership, courage, valor, and tenacity of the personnel of the 687th Field Artillery Battalion, the success with which the battalion retained its fighting efficiency in the face of superior odds, and its courageous stand are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces. (General Orders 8, Headquarters 61st Field Artillery Brigade, 4 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

21. The 868th Bombardment Squadron (H) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Netherlands East Indies on 7 May 1945. On that night, B-24 aircraft of the 868th Bombardment Squadron (H) made the second of three long-range strikes at enemy installations on the island of Java, Netherlands East Indies. Prior to undertaking this series of missions, which involved a round trip of approximately 3,000 miles, a number of experimental flights had been made to determine the minimum amount of fuel that could be used, so that a maximum bomb load could be carried. Having successfully made a similar raid on 27 April 1945, the 868th Bombardment Squadron (H) dispatched a formation of 10 Liberators on 7 May to attack shipping in the naval and commercial basin at Soerabaja harbor, Java. Flying through a heavy barrage of accurate anti-aircraft fire which damaged 3 of the aircraft, and held in the rays of 17 searchlights for approximately 15 minutes, the 868th Bombardment Squadron (H) dropped 500-pound general-purpose bombs and scored hits on 5 vessels, AGO 2989B causing extensive damage and destruction, starting 5 large and 8 small fires in the basin area. Two bombs struck submarine sheds, and one string of bombs hit a quay along the edge of the basin. Fires were visible for half an hour after the Liberators had left the target area. The superb courage and daring of the air crews in fighting their way through heavy enemy opposition to complete this extremely long and hazardous mission, and the exceptional skill and tireless devotion to duty of the members of the ground echelon who carried out the pre-mission experiments and readied the bombers for the strike are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army Air Forces. (General Orders 2186, Headquarters Far East Air Forces, 10 November 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

22. Company C, 83d Chemical Mortar Battalion, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 10 to 27 September 1943, near Chiunzi Pass, Italy. This company landed at Maori, Italy, with the Ranger Force on the night of September 8 and 9, 1943, with the mission of seizing the high ground controlling Chiunzi Pass and of securing the left flank of the Fifth Army. The holding of this position was vital for flank security, for observation on the plains of Naples, and for observation on German supply routes and communication lines to the Salerno battlefield. During this period, Company C exhibited unusual gallantry and determination in manhandling mortars and supplies to mountain tops. The men worked continuously, night and day, keeping the unit supplied. Mortar crews were cut down to one and two men per gun, and the remaining men fought with the Rangers and went on combat patrols. Subjected to almost continuous mortar and artillery fire, and repeatedly attacked by a determined, numerically superior enemy, Company C maintained extremely heavy fire and filled in all gaps in the Ranger line. Company C men fought side by side with the Rangers, using their automatic weapons and grenades with devastating effect. Company C mortar fire was of necessity brought to within 50 yards of friendly units as seven major counterattacks were repelled during the period, and numerous enemy patrols were stopped, often in bitter, close-in fighting. Company C's mortars kept the German Army supply route under continuous effective fire, although the supply route was 2,000 yards beyond the authorized range. The men and officers of Company C, 83d Chemical Mortar Battalion, displayed extraordinary determination in supplying their mortars, which were at the top of the mountain, with ammunition and spare mortar parts. Despite limited food and water supplies, and the continuous nature of enemy fire and activity, this company maintained its courage and determination throughout an extended onslaught by an enemy determined to wipe out its positions and made possible the successful accomplishment of a vital mission. (General Orders 647, Headquarters Seventh Army, Western Military District, 16 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

23. Company L, 180th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 19 and 20 April 1945 in Nurnberg, Germany. After two infantry companies, attacking a well-fortified castle guarding the approaches to the walled "Inner-City" of Nurnberg, had been stopped by fanatical enemy resistance, Company L was committed in an attempt to clear the enemy from the castle. When two frontal assaults were repulsed, Company L maneuvered around the left flank of the area in an effort to gain entrance to the castle. Infiltrating into the walled city, Company L met a deadly hail of fire emanating from a museum to its rear. One platoon sent to clear this resistance was twice denied entrance. Doggedly attacking a third time, the platoon seized the building, capturing 70 enemy and eliminating the strong point. Using hand grenades, pistols, rifles, and submachine guns, the members of Company L then assaulted the castle, engaging the enemy in 30 minutes of close combat, killing and capturing the entire garrison of 126 fanatical defenders. Resuming the attack on the following morning, Company L wedged through the enemy ring and continued its advance, clearing an area of 500 square meters, capturing an additional 80 enemy and crushing all remaining resistance. The heroism, combat proficiency, and brilliant achievement of Company L paved the way for the eventual reduction of the ancient Nazi shrine, and are exemplary of the finest traditions of the Army of the United States. (General Orders 358, Headquarters 180th Infantry Regiment, 9 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

24. The Intelligence and Reconnaissance Platoon, 329th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy from 4 to 16 September 1944. On 4 September 1944, the Intelligence and Reconnaissance Platoon crossed the Loire River into enemy-held territory, with the mission of scouting enemy positions and movements. After about 6 days of extended patrolling through an area some 70 miles wide and 100 miles deep south of the Loire River, the platoon received word through French informants in Issoudon, France, that a large force of approximately 20,000 Germans was moving eastward in an attempt to escape through the Belfort Gap into Germany. Racing through enemy territory, heedless of the threat of capture or annihilation which faced them at every turn, the Intelligence and Reconnaissance Platoon boldly effected a contact with the commander of the German forces and convinced him of the desirability of surrendering his force to the American Army. While the platoon leader returned to the regimental command post for instructions, the platoon was charged with the mission of maintaining contact with the enemy force and restraining the local FFI from making any premature show of force. Armed with but a few rifles, machine guns, and pistols, this courageous group virtually contained the entire enemy force by their sheer audacity and bold and aggressive patrolling. Constantly patrolling the area, tracking down rumors of other enemy groups, being sniped at by isolated enemy armed with burp guns, and having their vehicles sabotaged by collaborationist French, the Intelligence and Reconnaissance Platoon held on to their prize until arrangements could be made to have the German commander meet with an authorized American representative. This meeting occurred on 11 September 1944 at the Intelligence and Reconnaissance Platoon command post at Romorantin. Arrangements were made to have the German force proceed to three assembly areas along the Loire River where they would formally surrender and turn in their weapons. The long trek to the river began with the Intelligence and Reconnaissance Platoon acting as guides, flank guides, and liaison agents with the French forces along the way. Only the timely intervention of the men of the platoon prevented frequent outbreaks by the FFI who were not familiar with the situation or the terms of the surrender. Finally, on 16 September 1944, at Beaugency, France, the German commander surrendered himself, his troops, and all of their equipment to Major General Macon, Commanding General of the 83d Infantry Division, acting on behalf of the Army commander. The outstanding gallantry of this intrepid group of soldiers in arranging and executing the first and largest mass surrender of the war up to that time is without parallel in the annals of military history. The courage and devotion to duty of every man of the Intelligence and Reconnaissance Platoon, 329th Infantry Regiment, reflect the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded posthumously by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

First Lieutenant Raymond O. Beaudoin, O1996633, Army of the United States, was leading the 2d Platoon of Company F, 119th Infantry Regiment, on 4 April 1945 over flat, open terrain to attack Hameln, Germany, when the enemy went into action with machine guns and automatic weapons, laying down a devastating curtain of fire which pinned his unit to the ground. By rotating men in firing positions, he made it possible for his entire platoon to dig in, defying all the while the murderous enemy fire to encourage his men and to distribute ammunition. He then dug in himself at the most advanced position, where he kept up a steady fire, killing six hostile soldiers and directing his men in inflicting heavy casualties on the numerically superior opposing force. Despite these defensive measures, however, the position of the platoon became more precarious, for the enemy had brought up strong reinforcements and was preparing a counterattack. Three men, sent back at intervals to obtain ammunition and reinforcement; were killed by sniper fire. To relieve his command from the desperate situation, Lieutenant Beaudoin decided to make a one-man attack on the most damaging enemy sniper nest 90 yards to the right flank and thereby divert attention from the runner who would attempt to pierce the enemy's barrier of bullets and secure help. Crawling over completely exposed ground, he relentlessly advanced, undeterred by eight rounds of bazooka fire which threw mud and stones over him or by rifle fire which ripped his uniform. Ten yards from the enemy position he stood up and charged. At point-blank range he shot and killed two occupants of the nest, a third, who tried to bayonet him, he overpowered and killed with the butt of his carbine, and the fourth adversary was cut down by the platoon's rifle fire as he attempted to flee. He continued his attack by running toward a dugout, but there he was struck and killed by a burst from a machine gun. By his intrepidity, great fighting skill, and supreme devotion to his responsibility for the well-being of his platoon, Lieutenant Beaudoin single-handedly accomplished a mission that enabled a messenger to secure help which saved the stricken unit and made possible the decisive defeat of the German forces.

Private First Class Martin O. May (Army serial No. 32595682), Company H, 307th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, gallantly maintained a three-day stand in the face of terrible odds when American troops fought for possession of the rugged slopes of Iegusuku-Yama on Ie Shima, Ryukyu Islands. On 19 April 1945, after placing his heavy machine gun in an advantageous, yet vulnerable, position on a ridge to support riflemen, he became the target of fierce mortar and small-arms fire from counterattacking Japanese. He repulsed this assault by sweeping the enemy with accurate bursts, while explosions and ricocheting bullets threw blinding dust and dirt about him. He broke up a second counterattack by hurling grenades into the midst of the enemy forces and then refused an opportunity to withdraw, volunteering to maintain his post and cover the movement of American riflemen as they reorganized to meet any further hostile action. The major effort of the enemy did not develop until the morning of 21 April. It found Private May still supporting the rifle company in the face of devastating rifle, machine-gun, and mortar fire. While most of the friendly troops about him became casualties, he continued to fire his machine gun until he was severely wounded and his gun rendered useless by the burst of a mortar shell. Refusing to withdraw from the violent action, he blasted fanatical Japanese troops with hand grenades until wounded again, this time mortally. By his intrepidity and the extreme tenacity, with which he held firm until death against overwhelming forces, Private May killed at least 16 Japanese, was largely responsible for maintaining the American lines, and inspired his comrades to efforts which later resulted in complete victory and seizure of the mountain stronghold.

II..DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

XI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 1st Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Luzon, Philippine Islands, during the period 15 to 17 January 1945. At 2030 hours on 15 January 1945, the 1st Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, was ordered to break contact with the enemy on Hill 355, make a rapid cross-country movement through the enemy lines, and to establish a road block on the North-South National Highway No. 3, denying the enemy use of the highway and preventing any withdrawal to the north. The block was to be established about 1½ miles northwest of Pozorrubio, Pangasinan Province, Luzon, Philippine Islands. The battalion commander was informed that the establishment of the block before darkness on 16 January was of urgent necessity. The battalion disengaged the enemy on Hill 355 at 2100 hours on 15-16 January. Although it was raining heavily and the night was pitch black, the disengagement was made in an orderly manner, with only one casualty. The battalion, after marching all night through muddy rice paddies and across two swollen rivers, arrived at Labney. After a short rest, the march was resumed in combat formation cross country through rugged, hilly terrain. At 1200 hours, 16 January 1945, enemy resistance was encountered just west of the Maloquai River. The battalion bypassed this strong point in order to reach the objective before dark. The block was established on Highway No. 3 at 1700 hours on 16 January 1945. From 2100 hours, 16 January 1945, this position was heavily attacked by the enemy in reinforced company strength. The attack was of such ferocity that the perimeter was penetrated. The men in the perimeter fought until their ammunition was exhausted, then engaged the enemy in hand-to-hand attack and literally drove them from the perimeter. The entire area was cleared of the enemy by 1030 hours on 17 January 1945. During this action, the battalion sustained casualties of 2 officers and 16 enlisted men killed and 2 officers and 15 enlisted men wounded. Enemy known dead: Ninety-six. Enemy morale at the start of the attack was exceedingly high. Despite the fact that the battalion had been constantly engaged since D-day, 9 January 1945, and although the strength of the battalion was down, because of heavy casualties, to approximately 550 men and officers, and that the entire command was extremely fatigued from the long and difficult march and loss of sleep, the objective was reached, the block established, and a strong force of the enemy decisively defeated. This heroic action was a deciding factor in sealing off the enemy-escape route to the north. It also flanked the heavily fortified positions on Hill 355, which was later taken from the rear. The courage, fighting spirit, and devotion to duty shown by the members of the 1st Battalion, 169th Infantry Regiment, are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army. (General Orders 343, Headquarters 43d Infantry Division, 16 June 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

Master Sergeant Ruth L. Zeigler (Army serial No. A303805), Women's Army Corps, Army of the United States. September 1943 to September 1945.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period 15 January to 2 February 1945 was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Jorge Carmona Y., Army of Chile.

Brigadier General Arnaldo Carrasco C., Army of Chile.

Major General Alfredo Portales M., Army of Chile.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Carlos De Magalhaes Fraenkel, Brazilian Army. As chief of the commission to receive lend-lease material from the United States since March 1943.

Major Luis Rafael De Oliveira Sampaio, Brazilian Air Force. As a member of the Brazilian Air Minister's Cabinet.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Brigadier General Harlan L. Mumma, as published in General Orders 68, Headquarters Caribbean Defense Command, 12 October 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Harlan L. Mumma, O4508, United States Army. April 1942 to August 1945.

V. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

Service Unit Detachment No. 101, Office of Strategic Services, is cited for outstanding performance of duty from 8 May to 15 June 1945 in capturing the strategic enemy strong points of Lawksawk, Pangtara, and Loilem in the Central Shan States, Burma. This unit, composed of approximately 300 American officers and men, volunteered to clear the enemy from an area of 10,000 square miles. Its subsequent activities deprived the Japanese 15th Army of the only East escape route and secured the Stilwell Road against enemy counterattack. Although Detachment No. 101 had been engaged primarily in intelligence and guerrilla activities, it set about the infantry mission of ousting a determined enemy from a sector long fortified and strategically prepared. These American officers and men recruited, organized, and trained 3,200 Burmese natives entirely within enemy territory. They then undertook and concluded successfully a coordinated 4-battalion offensive against important strategic objectives through an area containing approximately 10,000 battle-seasoned Japanese troops. Locally known as the "Kachin Rangers," Detachment No. 101 and its Kachin troops became a ruthless striking force, continually on the offensive against the veterans of the Japanese 18th and 56th Divisions. Throughout the campaign, the Kachin Rangers were equipped with nothing heavier than mortars and had to rely entirely upon air-dropped supplies. Besides a numerical superiority of three to one, the enemy had the advantage of adequate supplies, artillery tankettes, carefully prepared positions, and motor transportation. Alternating frontal attacks with guerrilla tactics, the Kachin Rangers remained in constant contact with the enemy during the entire period and persistently cut him down and demoralized him. During the vicious struggle for Lawksawk, 400 Rangers met 700 Japanese veterans supported by artillery and, in a 12-hour battle, killed 281 of the enemy while suffering only 7 casualties. They took Loilem, central junction of vital roads, despite its protecting system of bunkers and pillboxes after 10 days of unremitting assaults. Under the most hazardous jungle conditions, Americans of Detachment No. 101 displayed extraordinary heroism in leading their coordinated battalions of 3,200 natives to complete victory against an overwhelmingly superior force. They met and routed 10,000 Japanese throughout an area of 10,000 square miles, killed 1,247 while sustaining losses of 37, demolished or captured 4 large dumps, destroyed the enemy motor transport, and inflicted extensive damage on communications and installations. The courage and fighting spirit displayed by the officers and men of Service Unit Detachment No. 101, Office of Strategic Services, in this successful offensive action against overwhelming enemy strength, reflect the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 278, Headquarters United States Army Forces, 16 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, India-Burma Theater.)

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section III, WD General Orders 110, 1945, as pertains to Brigadier General Harlan L. Mummy, United States Army, is rescinded (see sec. IV above).

I. UNITED STATES ARMY TRANSPORT.—Section I, WD General Orders 65, 1943, designating the United States Army transport Algonquin as a hospital ship, is rescinded.

[AG 300.4 (8 Jan 46)]

II. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named enlisted man:

Technical Sergeant Vernon McGarity (Army serial No. 34495398) (then staff sergeant), a squad leader with Company L, 393d Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, was painfully wounded in an artillery barrage that preceded the powerful counteroffensive launched by the Germans near Krinkelt, Belgium, on the morning of 16 December 1944. He made his way to an aid station, received treatment, and then refused to be evacuated, choosing to return to his hard-pressed men instead. The fury of the enemy's last great Western Front offensive swirled about the position held by Sergeant McGarity's small force, but so tenaciously did these men fight on orders to stand firm at all costs that they could not be dislodged despite murderous enemy fire and the breakdown of their communications. During the day the heroic squad leader rescued one of his men who had been wounded in a forward position, and throughout the night he exhorted his comrades to repulse the enemy's attempts at infiltration. When morning came and the Germans attacked with tanks and infantry, he braved heavy fire to run to an advantageous position where he immobilized the enemy's lead tank with a round from a rocket launcher. Fire from his squad drove the attacking infantrymen back, and three supporting tanks withdrew. He rescued, under heavy fire, another wounded American, and then directed devastating fire on a light cannon which had been brought up by the hostile troops to clear resistance from the area. When ammunition began to run low, Sergeant McGarity, remembering an old ammunition hole about 100 yards distant in the general direction of the enemy, braved a concentration of hostile fire to replenish his unit's supply. By circuitous route, the enemy managed to emplace a machine gun to the rear and flank of the squad's position, cutting off the only escape route. Unhesitatingly, the gallant soldier took it upon himself to destroy this menace single-handedly. He left cover and, while under steady fire from the enemy, killed or wounded all the hostile gunners with deadly accurate rifle fire and prevented all attempts to reman the gun. Only when the squad's last round had been fired was the enemy able to advance and capture the intrepid leader and his men. The extraordinary bravery and extreme devotion to duty of Sergeant McGarity supported a remarkable delaying action which provided the time necessary for assembling reserves and forming a line against which the German striking power was shattered.

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942).

citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 3d Battalion, 331st Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy at Hamm, Germany. After having completed relief of 2d Armored Division, 3d Battalion, 331st Infantry Regiment, was assigned the mission of seizing crossings of the Lippe River, intact. As the leading elements approached the bridges leading into Hamm from the north, the enemy succeeded in destroying the highway bridge but leading elements pushed over the fire-swept 500-foot railroad bridge and cut the wires leading to the demolition set under the bridge. The remainder of the battalion continued to cross and take up positions south of the river. Supplies were hand carried through almost continuous fire over the railroad bridge and casualties were evacuated over the same difficult route. At 1100, 2 April, the enemy launched the first of a series of counterattacks in which he committed large forces of infantry and armor in an attempt to drive the men of the 3d Battalion out of the bridgehead. The counterattacks, characterized by individual fighting at close range in the subways of the railroad station, in houses, and in the streets, were repulsed by maximum use of rocket-launcher teams, mortar, artillery, and all available weapons combined with the eager and bold aggressiveness of the troops. During the night, infiltrating enemy, attacking under the cover of darkness, were driven back. The enemy attacks the following day were even of greater strength and ferocity. Cooks and ammunition carriers who had carried food and ammunition to the troops shouldered weapons and fought. The troops, isolated by accident of terrain and limited approaches over natural barriers, held their ground tenaciously and, in the face of bitter opposition, refused to give ground or be demoralized by the direct fire of the enemy. During the 3-day period, the men of the 3d Battalion, 331st Infantry Regiment, exhibited unwavering courage and fighting determination in establishing the bridgehead at Hamm and repulsing the determined counterattacks, without yielding a yard of ground. As a result of the battalion's vigorous attack and spirited defense, the enemy suffered stunning losses in men and matériel, and a bridgehead was provided for future operations into the Ruhr Valley. The unflinching devotion to duty and the courage displayed by each man of the battalion reflect the highest traditions of the armed forces. (General Orders 227, Headquarters 83d Infantry Division, 23 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

2. The 15th Fighter Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. On 7 April 1945, the group led the first long range escort mission of XXI Bomber Command B-29's against the Japanese mainland. The flight necessitated careful and coordinated planning, and required outstanding flying and tactical skill to navigate more than 800 miles from their base on Iwo Jima, rendezvous with the bombers, escort them over the highly important Nakajima aircraft factory, Musashino Plant, near Tokyo, and return to their newly won base. The objective was within the most strongly fortified and heavily defended enemy zone in the Japanese Empire. More than 75 airfields guarded the city. The target was located within the inner anti-aircraft defenses of the Japanese capital. Ground crews worked brilliantly and tirelessly to prepare the airplanes for this mission, which presented problems never before encountered in the Pacific. The group dispatched this maximum effort of fifty P-51 aircraft from Iwo Jima only a short time after the island was secured from the enemy and before the runways were suitable for proper operation. The heaviest opposition encountered up to this time was met over the target area, both from hostile fighters and from flak. One hundred and sixty-five aggressive enemy interceptors made 531 attacks on the bomber stream protected by the gallant and intrepid fighter pilots, but only one B-29 was lost to enemy aerial action. The P-51 pilots of the 15th Fighter Group flew fearlessly through extensive and accurate flak and destroyed 17 enemy aircraft, probably destroyed 1, and damaged 6. The protection afforded by fighter escort allowed the B-29's to fly by daylight at lower altitudes than was previously practicable. The exceptional achievement of this organization, resulting from outstanding leadership, professional skill, courage, and devotion to duty, reflects the highest credit on the 15th Fighter Group and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 106, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 13 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Twentieth Air Force.)

3. The 21st Fighter Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. Notified to prepare the maximum number of fighters to escort B-29 aircraft for the first time in the vitally important strike on 7 April 1945 against the huge and heavily defended Nakajima aircraft factory, Musashino Plant, just outside of Tokyo, the ground crews worked with enthusiasm and determination to have all possible aircraft in commission. The group had landed at Iwo Jima just a few days before and, shortly after their arrival, they were attacked during the night by more than 200 desperate Japanese armed with mortars, grenades, and rifles in a fierce Banzai charge. The group sustained casualties of 14 killed and 50 wounded. Undaunted by this critical loss of personnel, additionally handicapped by the limited and damaged repair and maintenance facilities, and using a crudely repaired runway wrested from the enemy only a few days before, this group worked steadily throughout the day and night to prepare for its first escort mission from Iwo Jima. On 7 April 1945, after an overwater flight of more than 700 miles, 46 of the Group's P-51's met 104 superfortresses off the coast of Honshu and escorted them to the heavily defended primary target. Immediately engaged by more than 125 aggressive enemy fighters and at the same time subjected to heavy and intense antiaircraft fire, the pilots skillfully and courageously warded off repeated attacks to enable the heavily loaded B-29's to successfully drop their bombs without a loss due to enemy fighter action. The intrepid fighter pilots attacking enemy airplanes only when they threatened the bombers, destroyed four enemy aircraft and probably destroyed five. The conspicuous gallantry, determination, and esprit de corps of the 21st Fighter Group in the face of extremely adverse conditions and concentrated defenses of an aggressive and determined foe reflect the highest credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 106, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 13 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Twentieth Air Force.)

4. The 54th Fighter Group, United States Army Air Forces, on temporary duty in the Aleutian Area is cited for gallantry in action and outstanding performance of duty during the period 27 May to 4 November 1942. In the defense of the Aleutian Area, they carried out constant air alerts over our most advanced bases, and the pilots exhibited the greatest bravery and resourcefulness by distinguishing themselves in combat after long overwater flights in single engine airplanes, under the most adverse weather conditions. During this time, the group operated within an assigned strength of only 60 men per squadron, but not one forced landing due to poor maintenance has marred the record of any of its hazardous missions. In view of the fact that the normal operating strength is much greater, AGO 2838B

this high standard of combat readiness was accomplished only by a relentless discharge of duty by the ground crews. During one period, the 54th Fighter Group performed continual strafing missions over Kiska, a place infested with heavy enemy antiaircraft fire and with Japanese Zero fighters. To carry out these missions and to return to their base, entailed flights of about 500 miles. The personnel of the 54th Fighter Group kept a fighting spirit second to none and has shown that it can take punishment as well as give it to the Japs. The self-sacrifice made, the intense loyalty displayed, and the unrelenting devotion to duty shown by this group will always be worthy of emulation. (General Orders 44, Headquarters Eleventh Air Force, Seattle Washington, 2 December 1942, as approved by the Commanding General, Army Air Forces, Washington 25, D. C.)

IV. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and section V, WD Circular 142, 1944, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Captain William W. Bolton, O1684269, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered outstanding service in connection with the carrying out of extensive epidemiological surveys. He investigated and controlled the spread of typhus among displaced persons and German civilians, and directed the protection of Army personnel in the area of northern Germany extending from the western border east to the Elbe River, during the period 6 March to 14 June 1945.

Colonel Richard P. Johnson, O18940, Medical Corps, United States Army, performed meritorious service during the period 21 April to 12 May 1945 in connection with the work of the Commission, including the control of typhus among civilians and the protection of Army personnel in the area of northern Germany occupied by the 2d Armored Division.

First Lieutenant Joseph C. Ogg, O512179, Signal Corps, Army of the United States, rendered important service in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission from 19 March to 14 June 1945. He played a prominent and effective part in the investigation and control of typhus among displaced persons and German civilians in the area of the Ninth United States Army.

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, Army Air Forces Technical Base, Dayton, Ohio, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial.

[AG 250.401 (18 Dec 45)]

II. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named enlisted man:

Master Sergeant Vito R. Bertoldo (Army serial No. 36068156 (then private first class), Company A, 242d Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, fought with extreme gallantry on 9 and 10 January 1945 at Hatten, France, while guarding two command posts against the assault of powerful infantry and armored forces which had overrun the battalion's main line of resistance. On the close approach of enemy soldiers, Private Bertoldo left the protection of the building he was defending and set up his gun in the street, there to remain for almost 12 hours driving back attacks while in full view of his adversaries and completely exposed to 88-mm machine-gun and small-arms fire. He moved back inside the command post, strapped his machine gun to a table, and covered the main approach to the building by firing through a window, remaining steadfast even in the face of direct 88-mm fire from tanks only 75 yards away. One shell blasted him across the room, but he returned to his weapon. When two enemy personnel carriers led by a tank moved toward his position, he calmly waited for the troops to dismount and then, with the tank firing directly at him, leaned out of the window and mowed down the entire group of more than 20 Germans. Some time later, removal of the command post to another building was ordered. Private Bertoldo voluntarily remained behind, covering the withdrawal of his comrades and maintaining his stand all night. In the morning, he carried his machine gun to an adjacent building used as the command post of another battalion and began a day-long defense of that position. He broke up a heavy attack launched by a self-propelled 88-mm gun covered by a tank and about 15 infantrymen. Soon afterward, another 88-mm weapon moved up to within a few feet of his position, and placing the muzzle of its gun almost inside the building, fired into the room, knocking him down and seriously wounding others. An American bazooka team set the German weapon afire, and Private Bertoldo went back to his machine gun, dazed as he was, and killed several of the hostile troops as they attempted to withdraw. It was decided to evacuate the command post under cover of darkness, but, before the plan could be put into operation, the enemy began an intensive assault barrage, and Private Bertoldo remained at his post and buried white phosphorus grenades into the advancing enemy troops until they broke and retreated. A tank less than 50 yards away fired at his stronghold, destroyed his machine-gun, and blew him across the room again; but he once more returned to the fight and, with a rifle, single-handedly covered the withdrawal of his fellow soldiers when the post was finally abandoned. With inspiring bravery and intrepidity, Private Bertoldo withstood the attack of vastly superior forces for more than 48 hours without rest or relief, time after time escaping death only by the slightest margin while killing at least 40 hostile soldiers and wounding many more during his grim battle against the enemy hordes.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.--By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Brigadier General Roland P. Shugg, O4476, United States Army. 19 November 1944 to 8 May 1945.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.--By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Brigadier General Charles P. Cabell, O16121, United States Army. March 1942 to October 1943.

Brigadier General Charles H. Caldwell, O16250, United States Army. January 1944 to November 1945.

Colonel Edwin Cox, O221851, Infantry (General Staff Corps), Army of the United States. May 1944 to February 1945.

Colonel James S. Crawford, O8853, Ordnance Department, United States Army. December 1941 to June 1942.

Master Sergeant Daniel M. Dribin (Army serial No. 13105711), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. October 1942 to October 1945.

First Lieutenant Albert B. Friedman, O544041 (then technician fifth grade), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. July 1943 to December 1944.

Master Sergeant Peter L. Hancock, Army serial No. 39252063, Air Corps, Army of the United States. May 1943 to March 1944.

Colonel John B. Harrington, O6359, General Staff Corps, United States Army. February 1944 to October 1945.

Colonel Henry W. Isbell, O9978, General Staff Corps, United States Army. September 1942 to October 1945.

Technician Third Grade Walter W. Jacobs (Army serial No. 33746671), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. November 1943 to October 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Raymond B. Jewett, O320901, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. February 1942 to April 1944 and July 1944 to September 1945.

First Lieutenant Mary C. Lane, L1000920, Signal Corps, Women's Army Corps, Army of the United States. January 1943 to October 1945.

Colonel George E. Martin, O16802, Infantry, United States Army. 10 to 31 December 1944 and 11 January to 31 May 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Evans G. Nash, O314655, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. March 1942 to August 1945.

Technical Sergeant Donald Garson Schine (Army serial No. 11091932), Signal Corps, Army of the United States. April 1944 to August 1945.
Colonel Ronald M. Shaw, O16103, General Staff Corps, United States Army. April 1944 to September 1945.

Brigadier General William L. Sheep, O2821, United States Army. December 1940 to September 1945.

Captain Edward Stansbury, O1288135, Infantry, Army of the United States. October 1943 to September 1945.

Major James C. Taylor, O1633006, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. April 1943 to August 1945.

First Lieutenant David Edward Wagner, O1644874, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. February 1944 to August 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Robert T. Walker, O378050, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. April 1944 to August 1945.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Chief Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Marshal Michal Ralo-Zymierski, Polish Army. As Chief of large elements of the Polish underground forces and as Commander of the Polish forces formed in Russia.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. 1, WD Bul. 54, 1942) the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Commander, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Brigadeiro do Ar Ajalmar Vieira Mascarenhas, Brazilian Air Force. February to July 1945.

VI. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period 19–20 November 1945 was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Captain William J. Bennett, O866551, Air Corps, Army of the United States.

Technical Sergeant George F. Broughton (Army serial No. 11049238), Air Corps, Army of the United States.

Colonel Clarence S. Irvine, O16630, Air Corps, United States Army.

First Lieutenant William S. O'Hare, O866340, Air Corps, Army of the United States.

I. MEDAL OF HONOR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty was awarded by the War Department in the name of Congress to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

First Lieutenant Frank Burke, O1288033, Army of the United States, fought with extreme gallantry on 17 April 1945 in the streets of war-torn Nurnberg, Germany, where the 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, was engaged in rooting out fanatical defenders of the citadel of Nazism. As battalion transportation officer, Lieutenant Burke had gone forward to select a motor-pool site, when, in a desire to perform more than his assigned duties and participate in the fight, he advanced beyond the lines of the forward riflemen. Detecting a group of about 10 Germans making preparations for a local counterattack, he rushed back to a nearby American company, secured a light machine gun with ammunition, and daringly opened fire on this superior force, which deployed and returned his fire with machine pistols, rifles, and rocket launchers. From another angle a German machine gun tried to blast him from his emplacement, but Lieutenant Burke killed this gun crew and drove off the survivors of the unit he had originally attacked. Giving his next attention to enemy infantrymen in ruined buildings, he picked up a rifle, dashed more than 100 yards through intense fire and engaged the Germans from behind an abandoned tank. A sniper nearly hit him from a cellar only 20 yards away, but he dispatched this adversary by running directly to the basement window, firing a full clip into it and then plunging through the darkened aperture to complete the job. He withdrew from the fight only long enough to replace his jammed rifle and secure grenades, then reengaged the Germans. Finding his shots ineffective, he pulled the pins from two grenades, and, holding one in each hand, rushed the enemy-held building, hurling his missiles just as the enemy threw a potato masher grenade at him. In the triple explosion the Germans were wiped out and Lieutenant Burke was dazed; but he emerged from the shower of debris that engulfed him, recovered his rifle, and went on to kill three more Germans and meet the charge of a machine pistol-man, whom he cut down with three calmly delivered shots. He then retired toward the American lines and there assisted a platoon in a raging, 30-minute fight against formidable armed hostile forces. This enemy group was repulsed, and the intrepid fighter moved to another friendly group which broke the power of a German unit armed with a 20-mm. gun in a fierce fire fight. In 4 hours of heroic action Lieutenant Burke singlehandedly killed 11 and wounded 3 enemy soldiers and took a leading role in engagements in which an additional 29 enemy were killed or wounded. His extraordinary bravery and superb fighting skill were an inspiration to his comrades, and his entirely voluntary mission into extremely dangerous territory hastened the fall of Nurnberg in his battalion's sector.

Sergeant Mike Colalillo (Army serial No. 37588843) (then private first class), Company C, 398th Infantry Regiment, Army of the United States, was pinned down with other members of his company during an attack against strong enemy positions in the vicinity of Untergriesheim, Germany, on 7 April 1945. Heavy artillery, mortar, and machine-gun fire made any move hazardous but Private Colalillo stood up, shouted to the company to follow, and ran forward in the wake of a supporting tank, firing his machine pistol. Inspired by his example, his comrades advanced in the face of savage enemy fire. When his weapon was struck by shrapnel and rendered useless, he climbed to the deck of a friendly tank, manned an exposed machine gun on the turret of the vehicle, and, while bullets rattled about him, fired at an enemy emplacement with such devastating accuracy that he killed or wounded at least 10 hostile soldiers and destroyed their machine gun. Maintaining his extremely dangerous post as the tank forged ahead, he blasted three more positions, destroyed another machine gun emplacement, and silenced all resistance in his area, killing at least three and wounding an undetermined number of riflemen as they fled. His machine gun eventually jammed; so he secured a submachine gun from the tank crew to continue his attack on foot. When our armored forces exhausted their ammunition and the order to withdraw was given, he remained behind to help a seriously wounded comrade to safety over several hundred yards of open terrain rocked by an intense enemy artillery and mortar barrage. By his intrepidity and inspiring courage, Private Colalillo gave tremendous impetus to his company's attack, killed or wounded 25 of the enemy in bitter fighting, and assisted a wounded soldier in reaching the American lines at great risk to his own life.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Carl F. Greene, O9965, Air Corps, United States Army. August 1923 to September 1945.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Harold A. Barnes, O8822, United States Army. October 1942 to November 1945.

Brigadier General Stanhope Bayne-Jones, O170753, Army of the United States. February 1942 to August 1943.

Major General Roger B. Colton, O2975, United States Army. September 1944 to September 1945.

Lieutenant General Harold L. George, O10791, United States Army. April 1942 to May 1945.

Brigadier General Harold R. Harris, O731186, Army of the United States. October 1943 to September 1945.

- Brigadier General Raymond A. Kelsner, O9232, United States Army. May 1938 to August 1945.
- Colonel Ray J. Laua, O255689, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. April 1943 to October 1945.
- Major General Ralph J. Mitchell, O673, United States Marine Corps. November 1944 to May 1945.
- Brigadier General Edward S. Ott, O7132, United States Army. 30 August 1944 to 29 April 1945.
- Colonel Marcus B. Stokes, Jr., O15613, Transportation Corps, United States Army. December 1942 to September 1945.
- Colonel Tracy S. Voorhees, O502928, Judge Advocate General's Department, Army of the United States. November 1942 to September 1945.
- Vice Admiral Russell Willson, United States Navy. December 1942 to December 1945.
- Major General Roscoe B. Woodruff, O3819, United States Army. June 1942 to October 1944.

IV..DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant General Robert C. Richardson, Jr., as published in WD General Orders 87, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant General Robert C. Richardson, Jr., O1903, United States Army. June 1943 to August 1944.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General St. Clair Streett, as published in WD General Orders 16, 1944, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General St. Clair Streett, United States Army. February to September 1945.

V..LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

- Colonel George W. Bicknell, O162814, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. January 1944 to October 1945.
- Brigadier General Milton O. Boone, O8127, United States Army. August 1942 to August 1945.
- Brigadier General Sidney L. Chappell, O3518, United States Army. July 1944 to September 1945.
- Major General Roger B. Colton, O2975, United States Army. August 1941 to June 1943.

- Technical Sergeant Francis M. Cordiner (Army serial No. 36376713), Infantry, Army of the United States. November 1944 to October 1945.
- Colonel William M. Creasy, O16397, General Staff Corps, United States Army. December 1941 to May 1943.
- Colonel Charles H. Donnelly, O287435, Field Artillery, Army of the United States. October 1943 to November 1945.
- Colonel Francis H. Dryden, O912849, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. August 1942 to January 1945 and May through September 1945.
- Captain John B. Earle, United States Navy. June 1943 to September 1945.
- Colonel Snowden A. Fahnestock, O107930, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. July 1942 to June 1944.
- Second Lieutenant Philip J. Farley, O1999709, Air Corps, Army of the United States. November 1944 to September 1945.
- Colonel Claude W. Feagin, O10820, Cavalry, United States Army. December 1944 to December 1945.
- Major Nathaniel C. Floyd, O530608, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. August 1943 to September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Edwin V. Foran, O472630, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. August 1944 to July 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Sarell E. Gleason, Jr., O924782, Military Intelligence Service, Army of the United States. April 1944 to October 1945.
- Brigadier General Alexander O. Gorder, O7213, United States Army. February 1944 to November 1945.
- Colonel Samuel Gordon Green, O183191, Ordnance Department, Army of the United States. September 1944 to September 1945.
- Major General William M. Grimes, O3149, United States Army. October 1944 to June 1945.
- Brigadier General George E. Hartman, O6538 (then colonel), United States Army. December 1941 to October 1943.
- Lieutenant Colonel Charles C. Hilliard, O492574, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. April 1943 to December 1945.
- Colonel Richard C. Jacobs, Jr., O10908, General Staff Corps, United States Army. March 1943 to September 1945.
- Colonel Ray J. Laux, O255688 (then lieutenant colonel), General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. February to July 1942.
- Brigadier General William L. Mitchell, O12832, United States Army. June 1942 to September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel William R. Perdue, O476636, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. July 1943 to September 1945.
- Colonel William H. Quarterman, O7476, Field Artillery, United States Army. March 1943 to September 1945.
- Colonel Harold L. Richey, O19172 (then lieutenant colonel), General Staff Corps, United States Army. July 1942 to October 1944.
- Major General William Ord Ryan, O14590, United States Army. 28-31 August 1945.
- First Lieutenant Wolfgang G. Sklarz, O886870, Infantry, Army of the United States. December 1944 to October 1945.
- Colonel Henry C. Wendler, O316602, Air Corps, Army of the United States. November 1943 to February 1945.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel George Barton Maxwell, British Army. January 1943 to October 1943.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. 1, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Jean Chatenoud, French Army. August 1944 to May 1945.

VII. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Edward A. Brown, Jr., as published in General Orders 174, United States Army Forces, Pacific, 17 September 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Edward A. Brown, Jr., O18355, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. December 1941 to August 1944.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General Charles C. Hillman, as published in WD General Orders 60, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Charles C. Hillman, O3517, United States Army. August 1944 to September 1945.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Lieutenant Colonel Hugh Sawyer, as published in General Orders 151, 18 December 1944, Mediterranean Theater, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Hugh Sawyer, O20813, General Staff Corps, United States Army. November 1944 to December 1945.

4. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Captain Horace S. Schwerin, as published in WD General Orders 33, 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9620, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Captain Horace S. Schwerin O595818, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. December 1943 to September 1945.

VIII. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

General de Brigade Aerienn Jean Ludy Piollet, Ministere de L'Air-Cabinet, French Air Force, led the First French Air Force Bombardment Wing, rearmed by the Allies, into combat against the enemy. At the head of this unit, he obtained excellent results in the bombardment of critical objectives in northern Italy. Twice wounded in combat, General Piollet played an outstanding role in the Allied war effort.

IX. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Chaplain (captain) Thomas J. Scecina, O384411, Corps of Chaplains, Army of the United States. 2 June 1942 to 3 September 1944.

X. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and section V, WD Circular 142, 1944, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the Commission was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and individuals:

Brigadier General Stanhope Bayne-Jones, O170753, Army of the United States, in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission, from August 1943 to August 1945, rendered exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in safeguarding the welfare of our armed forces. Convinced that typhus fever was a serious threat to American Forces sent abroad, he participated with characteristic intelligence, vision, and energy in the establishment of the United States of America Typhus Commission as a Joint Army, Navy, and Public Health Service organization with which to combat this military scourge. Throughout the existence of this organization, he was chiefly responsible for its highly effective administration and operation, and as Director of the Commission ably directed all of its complex activities. Under his strong and inspired leadership, the United States of America Typhus Commission spearheaded the attack on typhus fever and related diseases throughout most of the world. The Commission assisted the armed forces in the development of new methods and procedures which effectively protected American troops against these diseases, and controlled the outbreak of the disease among civilians of foreign countries. Through his activities as Director of this Commission, General Bayne-Jones made contributions of great significance to the fundamental knowledge of typhus and to the security and future welfare of America and the world.

Colonel L. Holmes Ginn, Jr., O17341, Medical Corps, United States Army, performed meritorious service in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission, during the period 8 May to 10 July 1945, in the Rhine Provinz Military District, Germany. As surgeon of the Fifteenth United States Army, Colonel Ginn exhibited keen foresight and rare judgment in planning and directing effective typhus fever control measures throughout the Army area.

Doctor Louis A. Reihl, staff member of the International Health Division of Rockefeller Foundation and member of the Rockefeller Foundation Typhus Team, rendered meritorious service in connection with the control of typhus fever in North Africa and in Italy during the period from July 1943 to April 1945. In North Africa, Doctor Reihl was a member of the group which proved the practicability and effectiveness of the application of louse powder to persons fully clothed, thus developing a revolutionary method for the control of typhus. During the epidemic of typhus at Naples and in southern Italy during the winter of 1943-1944, Dr. Reihl was responsible for the operation of mass-delousing stations and the check and survey of the efficiency of delousing in the civil population. The thoroughness with which he carried out these extensive duties was a definite factor in the control of the epidemic at Naples. Later, in connection with the Allied Control Commission, Dr. Reihl continued to assist in typhus control in Italy through the remainder of 1944 until about April 1945. His contributions, extending from research through field trials to practical application in an epidemic situation, have greatly strengthened modern methods of typhus control.

Captain Glen V. Ryan, O348023, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, Headquarters United Kingdom Base, while attached to Headquarters Seventh Army from April to June 1945 performed exceptionally meritorious service in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission. As head of a provisional typhus case-finding team, Captain Ryan, through his indefatigable efforts, great enthusiasm, and outstanding initiative, carried out an effective typhus control program in the Seventh Army area. Working long hours and covering great distances Captain Ryan uncovered, diagnosed, hospitalized, and treated hundreds of typhus cases, performing necessary control measures. At the Dachau concentration camp, it was found necessary to dust the entire population of 36,000 inmates as well as the living quarters, and this was accomplished in less than 6 days by his able and skilled direction. The effectiveness with which he carried out his typhus control work is attested by the dramatic cessation of new cases at the end of the incubation period following the initial dusting. The results achieved by Captain Ryan prevented the spread of the dreaded disease in an environment highly favorable to its rapid development and materially lessened the typhus control problems of the Allied Nations on the European Continent.

Doctor Leonard A. Scheele, Senior Surgeon, U. S. Public Health Service, rendered exceptionally meritorious service in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission during the period 1944-1945 in the European Theater of Operations. As Chief of Preventive Medicine Section, Public Health Branch, G-5, Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, Doctor Scheele took an important part in the development of policies, the determination of plans, and the accumulation of supplies essential for typhus control among refugees and displaced persons in zones of northwest Europe regained from the Germans by British and American forces. Through his personal qualities, he inspired cooperation and coordination between agencies, international as well as American, civilian as well as military, and groups concerned with typhus control in these regions. His contributions aided directly in preventing the spread of typhus in northwest Europe.

Colonel William S. Stone, O18277, Medical Corps, United States Army, rendered exceptionally meritorious service in the investigation and development of new, effective methods of typhus control and in their successful application in North Africa and Italy in 1943 and 1944. As early as 1941 Colonel Stone, then major, assigned to Preventive Medicine Division, Office of the Surgeon General, was a leader in the search for improved methods of delousing with special reference to the control of typhus fever in troops and among the civilian populations which constitute the reservoir of this dangerous disease. A method of fumigation and effective louse powders resulted from this work. In 1943 and 1944, as Chief of the Preventive Medicine Division of the Medical Section of Headquarters, North African Theater of Operations, Colonel Stone, in collaboration with the Rockefeller Foundation typhus group, stimulated and aided investigations and field trials from which revolutionary methods of delousing persons fully clothed were developed. His planning, procurement of supplies, training of personnel, and furnishing of instruction and information demonstrated his foresight and competence to meet the occurrence of typhus fever in North Africa and the outbreaks of the disease in Italy, particularly when the epidemic of typhus at Naples in the winter of 1943-44 became a threat to the success of allied military operations. The control of this epidemic of typhus fever at Naples is one of the greatest achievements of modern military preventive medicine. Colonel Stone's contribution to this achievement is in the first rank. His work, enriching scientific and practical knowledge of typhus control, has conferred an enduring benefit upon civilian public health and upon the Army.

XI. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of section IV, WD General Orders 115, 1945, as pertains to Major General Henry D. Russell, is rescinded.

I. UNITED STATES ARMY TRANSPORT.—1. Section II, WD General Orders 27, 1943, designating the United States Army transport SS Seminole as a hospital ship, is rescinded.

2. General Orders 46, 1944, designating the United States Army transport Jarrett M. Huddleston as a hospital ship, is rescinded.

3. General Orders 41, 1945, designating the United States Army Transport Frances Y. Stanger as a hospital ship, is rescinded.

[AG 560 (5 Jan 45)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 308th Bombardment Group (H) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy between 24 May 1944 and 28 April 1945. This group preyed relentlessly on the Japanese sea shipping lanes between the Japanese homeland and her conquests throughout southern Asia and adjacent insular territories. During most of this period, the 308th Bombardment Group (H) was the only organization among all the Allied forces in a position to conduct interdiction operations against this vital supply line. Operating from bases in China, the Group swept the East and South China Seas, the Straits of Formosa, and Gulf of Tonkin through all kinds of weather, sinking and damaging nearly three-quarters of a million tons of vital Japanese shipping. They sank 107 merchant vessels and sank 12 enemy naval vessels, including 3 cruisers and 7 destroyers. They probably sank 29 vessels and damaged 48, for a total of 427,252 tons of shipping sunk, 102,765 tons probably sunk, and 187,045 tons damaged. Pressed by the constant need for economy of operations, from air-supplied China, the Group forsook the usual high altitude style of bombing to attain accuracy and minimum expenditure of bombs. Heroically and deliberately, the combat crews developed and employed low altitude tactics that brought their slow, heavy bombers down to within 400 feet of their targets during attacks. This exposed their aircraft to murderous fire from the armed merchantmen and naval vessels they attacked. On a number of occasions, the crews carried out attacks at 400 feet over entire convoys of 8 to 12 armed merchant and naval ships. Throughout the cited period, the Group was forced to fly much of its own gasoline and bombs over the "Hump" (Himalaya Mountains) into China, and in the same period was forced to evacuate from three bases before the advance of enemy ground forces. For several months the Group launched its sea search missions from a base behind enemy lines in east China. The phenomenal achievements of the 308th Bombardment Group (H) in its interdiction of these vital enemy shipping lanes are the result of extraordinary heroism, gallantry, determination, and esprit de corps demonstrated by the members of this organization. Their attainments are consonant with the finest traditions of the American military service. (General Orders 62, Headquarters Fourteenth Air Force, 26 May 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, China Theater.)

for a mission against the highly important and heavily defended Nakajima Aircraft Factory, Munshing Plant, near Tokyo, the ground crews worked steadily and untiringly throughout the day and night to have their B-29 aircraft in perfect operating condition for this important strike. On 27 January 1945, 19 superfortresses of this group, heavily loaded with high explosive bombs, took off on their hazardous 1,500-mile flight over enemy-controlled open sea to the target. The crews manning the relatively untested aircraft were in constant danger of mechanical failure and consequent ditching many miles at sea, with no adequate rescue patrol as yet established. No emergency base was available for battle-damaged or distressed airplanes anywhere along the 1,500 miles return to bases past numerous enemy island garrisons of unknown strength. The mission was flown at an altitude of 26,000 feet where severe frosting was a constant threat to formation flying, and battle damage often resulted in depressurization and consequent frostbite in temperatures averaging minus 55° centigrade. Winds in excess of 200 miles per hour further complicated the many difficulties of navigation over open sea. Inadequate maps and charts for target recognition, and nonavailability of accurate weather forecasts in the face of the most adverse and rapidly changing weather encountered in any theater presented almost insurmountable difficulties to the pioneering crews. In addition, no fighter escort was available at this early period. As their formation reached landfall, it was engaged by waves of persistent and highly aggressive enemy fighters which made an unprecedented number of 544 attacks on the gallant crews. Repeated barrages from antiaircraft rocked the B-29's. Despite the long and tiring flight to the target, the heavy flak, and fierce fighter attacks, the intrepid crews continued grimly and steadfastly on their assigned course. Briefed not to bomb the Nakajima Aircraft Factory if cloud cover prevented visual bombing, this formation, still engaged by more than 10 times their number of hostile interceptors, because of bad weather had to turn at the last minute to the alternate target, the highly concentrated and well-defended industrial area of Hamamatsu. This vital and strategic area was bombed by the formation with excellent results, and large fires were observed over the target area. During the flight these crews destroyed 34 enemy airplanes, probably destroyed 9, and seriously damaged 12. The combination of hostile aircraft and ground defenses cost the group five airplanes lost, and all but one B-29 was battle damaged. Through the determination, outstanding professional skill, and heroic courage of the combat crews in the face of overwhelming odds, together with the devotion to duty and mechanical ability of the ground personnel, the 497th Bombardment Group (VH) rendered an invaluable contribution to the Allied war effort, thereby reflecting great credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 106, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 13 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Twentieth Air Force.)

patrol as yet established. No emergency base was available for battle-damaged or distressed airplanes anywhere along the 1,500 miles return to bases past numerous enemy island garrisons of unknown strength. The mission was flown at an altitude of 29,000 feet where severe frosting was a constant threat to formation flying, and battle damage often resulted in depressurization and consequent frostbite in temperatures averaging minus 55° centigrade. Winds in excess of 200 miles per hour further complicated the many difficulties of navigation over open sea. Inadequate maps and charts for target recognition, and nonavailability of accurate weather forecasts in the face of the most adverse and rapidly changing weather encountered in any theater presented almost insurmountable difficulties to the pioneering crews. In addition, no fighter escort was available at this early period. As their formation reached landfall, it was engaged by waves of persistent and highly aggressive enemy fighters which made a total of 107 attacks. Repeated barrages from antiaircraft rocked the B-29's. Despite the long and tiring flight to the target, the heavy flak, and the fierce fighter attacks, the intrepid crews continued grimly and steadfastly on their assigned course and bombed the target area by radar with excellent results, considering the size of the force employed. Despite the intense antiaircraft fire and aggressive fighter opposition, the formation, by the highest professional skill was able to return to the base with only one airplane lost and five seriously battle-damaged. The gallant crews destroyed 3 enemy aircraft, probably destroyed 8, and caused major damage to 10 more. The conspicuous courage, airmanship, and intrepid determination of the combat crews, together with the superior technical skill and devotion to duty of the ground personnel of the 498th Bombardment Group (VH) are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service, and reflect great credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 106, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 13 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Twentieth Air Force.)

4. The 499th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. Alerted to prepare maximum aircraft for a mission against the highly important and heavily defended Mitsubishi Aircraft Engine Plant, Nagoya, the ground crews worked steadily and untiringly throughout the day and night to have their B-29's in perfect operating condition for this important strike. Their target, it was estimated, was producing at this time from 30 to 40 percent of all Japanese airplane engines. On 23 January 1945, 17 superfortresses of this group, heavily loaded with high explosive bombs, took off on their hazardous 1,500-mile flight over enemy-controlled open sea to the target. The crews manning the relatively untested aircraft were in constant danger of mechanical failure and consequent ditching many miles at sea, with no adequate rescue patrol as yet established. No emergency base was available for battle-damaged or distressed airplanes anywhere along the 1,500 miles return to bases past numerous enemy island garrisons of unknown strength. The mission was flown at an altitude of 27,000 feet where severe frosting was a constant threat to formation flying, and battle damage often resulted in depressurization and consequent frostbite in temperatures averaging minus 55° centigrade. Winds in excess of 200 miles per hour further complicated the many difficulties of navigation over open sea. Inadequate maps and charts for target recognition, and nonavailability of accurate weather forecasts in the face of the most adverse and rapidly changing weather encountered in any theater presented almost insurmountable difficulties to the pioneering crews. In addition, no fighter escort was available at this early period. As their formation approached the target area, it was engaged by 125 enemy fighters which made a total of 233 attacks on the gallant crews. At the same time, the formation was subjected to intense antiaircraft fire. Despite the long and tiring flight to the target, the heavy flak, and the fierce fighter attacks, the intrepid crews continued grimly and steadfastly on their assigned course and released their powerful load of high explosives on the target with excellent results. In the face of this overwhelming combination of enemy aircraft and ground defenses, by their superior airmanship and professional skill they were able to leave the target with but six B-29's seriously damaged. The outstanding courage, conspicuous gallantry, and expert tactics of the combat crews and the grim determination and technical mastery of the ground personnel of the 499th Bombardment Group (VH) reflect the highest credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 106, Twentieth Air Force, 13 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Twentieth Air Force.)

5. The 500th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. Notified to prepare maximum aircraft for a mission against the highly important and heavily defended Mitsubishi Aircraft Engine Plant, Nagoya, the ground crews worked steadily and untiringly throughout the day and night to have their B-29's in perfect operating condition for this important strike. At the time of the attack, this plant was estimated to be producing from 30 to 40 percent of all Japanese airplane engines. On 23 January 1945, 17 superfortresses of this group, heavily loaded with high explosive bombs, took off on their hazardous 1,500-mile flight over enemy-controlled open sea to the target. The crews manning the relatively untested aircraft were in constant danger of mechanical failure and consequent ditching many miles at sea, with no adequate rescue patrol as yet established. No emergency base was available for battle-damaged or distressed airplanes anywhere along the 1,500 miles return to bases past numerous enemy island garrisons of unknown strength. The mission was flown at an altitude of 26,000 feet where severe frosting was a constant threat to formation flying, and battle damage often resulted in depressurization and consequent frostbite in temperatures averaging minus 55° centigrade. Winds in excess of 200 miles per hour further complicated the many difficulties of navigation over open sea. Inadequate maps and charts for target recognition, and nonavailability of accurate weather forecasts in the face of the most adverse and rapidly changing weather encountered in any theater presented almost insurmountable difficulties to the pioneering crews. In addition, no fighter escort was available at this early period. As their formation approached the target area, it was engaged by 160 aggressive enemy fighters which made a total of 253 determined attacks on the intrepid crews. At the same time, the formation was rocked by heavy and accurate antiaircraft fire. Despite the long and tiring flight to the target, the heavy flak, and the fierce fighter opposition, the gallant crews continued grimly and steadfastly on their assigned course and released their powerful load of high explosives on the target with excellent results. Although one B-29 was lost and 10 of the bombers seriously damaged, the formation destroyed 15 enemy airplanes, probably destroyed 8, and seriously damaged 6. The heroic determination and combat efficiency of the airplane crews, together with the professional skill and intense devotion to duty of the ground personnel, of the 500th Bombardment Group (VH) reflected great credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 106, Headquarters, Twentieth Air Force, 13 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Twentieth Air Force.)

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier General Robert Q. Brown, O18520, United States Army. February 1944 to May 1945.
- Colonel John U. Calkins, Jr., O114357, Infantry, Army of the United States, August 1944 to September 1945.
- Brigadier General Clyde D. Eddleman, O15842, United States Army. September 1944 to October 1945.
- Colonel Ray W. Ireland, O909835, Air Corps, Army of the United States. June 1942 to September 1945.
- Major General Walter E. Lauer, O7486, United States Army. August 1943 to November 1944 and January to March 1945.
- Major General James E. Moore, O15650, United States Army. 25 February to 15 June 1945.
- Colonel Harry Reichelderfer, O7547, Signal Corps, United States Army. September 1944 to September 1945.
- Brigadier General Donald C. Swatland, O460112, Army of the United States. April 1942 to September 1945.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Alexander R. Bolling, as published in WD General Orders 86, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Alexander R. Bolling, O7548, United States Army. 19 November to 21 December 1944 and 4 February to 8 May 1945.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated, was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Colonel Walter F. Adams, O4628, Infantry, United States Army. May 1941 to November 1945.

- Brigadier General George C. Beach, O4053, United States Army. December 1941 to September 1945.
- Colonel Charles H. Bryan, O12386, General Staff Corps, United States Army. January 1941 to July 1943.
- Lieutenant Colonel Paul T. Carroll, O19146, General Staff Corps, United States Army. October 1944 to September 1945.
- Colonel James W. Coutts, O18875, Infantry (then lieutenant colonel), United States Army. December 1941 to June 1944.
- Colonel George H. Foster, O111732, Signal Corps, Army of the United States. December 1940 to November 1944.
- Colonel Kenneth B. Hobson, O18763, General Staff Corps (Air Corps), United States Army. June 1943 to September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Lawrence P. Jacobs, O334362, General Staff Corps (Signal Corps), Army of the United States. September 1944 to September 1945.
- Colonel Minton W. Kaye, O17391, Air Corps, United States Army. September 1940 to January 1945.
- Major General Bruce Magruder, O2185, United States Army. April 1942 to September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Robert M. Mann, O299347, General Staff Corps (Cavalry), Army of the United States. April 1944 to September 1945.
- Major James A. McDonald, O1284001, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. December 1942 to September 1945.
- Master Sergeant Antonio E. Padilla (Army serial No. 6830725), Air Corps, Army of the United States. 27 July to 15 August 1944.
- Colonel Edward J. Rehmann, O5060, General Staff Corps, United States Army. April 1943 to September 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Fred C. Smith, O341580, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. February 1944 to July 1945.
- Major General George V. Strong, O1908, United States Army. June 1944 to July 1945.
- Lieutenant Colonel Albert W. Tolman, Jr., O519436, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. November 1944 to October 1945.
- Colonel Max R. Wainer, O2421, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army. February 1942 to August 1945.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. 1, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Officer, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Edward Bonnycastle Mayne, South Africa Intelligence Corps, Union Defense Force. 1 September 1943 to 1 March 1944.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit, in the Degree of Legionnaire, for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Raoul Laurent A. C. de Fraitteur, Belgian Army. September 1944 to June 1945.

Major Franz Dethy, Belgian Army. September 1944 to May 1945.

V. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Harold D. Kehm, as published in General Orders 104, European Theater of Operations, 1 June 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Harold D. Kehm, O15138, General Staff Corps, United States Army. March 1943 to April 1944.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Brigadier General Charles T. Myers, as published in General Orders 265, Mediterranean Theater of Operations, 11 October 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to him under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Charles T. Myers, O15288 (then colonel), United States Army. November 1941 to December 1943.

3. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General Arthur W. Pence as published in WD General Orders 29, WD, 1943, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Brigadier General Arthur W. Pence, O12042, United States Army. August 1944 to September 1945.

4. By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded by the War Department to Colonel Joseph W. G. Stephens, as published in WD General Orders 97, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Joseph W. G. Stephens, O4622, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army. August 1943 to January 1945.

VI. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918) and the act of Congress approved 15 December 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 61, 1942), a Silver Star for gallantry in action was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Rene Fernand Raoul Deleuze, Headquarters I Corps, French Army, fought gallantly in action from 4 to 6 February 1945, in France. In command of the tactical groupment, he displayed great audacity and complete disregard of danger. Always at the head of his troops and observing the battle from the foremost and often most exposed positions, he rapidly advanced from Soultz to Rouffach where he made contact with elements from the north, thereby cutting off enemy forces withdrawing from the Vosges Mountains. During this bold operation, his courageous leadership was responsible for the capture of nearly 1,500 prisoners and considerable booty, and contributed to the liberation of Alsace.

VII. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Pierre Louis Bodet, French Air Force. 22 February 1945 and 15 March 1945.

VIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer, enlisted men, and individual:

Master Sergeant Lawrence H. Bayer (Army serial No. 39293829), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States. 1 June to 23 September 1945.

Sergeant Alfonso J. Colaiacovo (Army serial No. 32158863), Air Corps, Army of the United States. February to May 1945.

Peggy Furse, British civilian. March 1944 to July 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Ovid O. Wilson, O15887, Infantry, United States Army. 14 and 15 December 1944.

IX. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Tallmadge L. Boyd, O269266, General Staff Corps, Army of the United States. June 1942 to January 1945.

Brigadier General Ivan L. Farman, O17922, United States Army. 5 to 26 August 1944 and 2 July to August 1945.

First Lieutenant Morgan G. Higham, O810086, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 23 June 1945.

X. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 66th Armored Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in the period 18 to 28 November 1944, during the bitterly contested advance of our troops to the western banks of the Roer River. The gallant members of the 1st Battalion, committed to 11 days continuous action against and immediate contact with a powerful, well prepared enemy fighting desperately on his home soil to ward off military disaster, advanced from Loverich to high ground northeast of Merzenhausen in a series of tank and tank-infantry battles that comprised a major portion of the greatest engagement fought in the west. Coming up against the highest caliber of German equipment and troops, and breaking through one of the most elaborate defensive positions ever prepared, the 1st Battalion, 66th Armored Regiment, by individual acts of heroism and brilliant teamwork decisively defeated the enemy and inflicted personnel losses equivalent to twice its own original number, although receiving in return unprecedented casualties in men and equipment. The determination of the tank crews, their professional skill, and their persistent courage and powers of endurance under the most adverse conditions of terrain and weather and in the face of a desperate foe paved the way for future operations that spelled the collapse of German military might. (General Orders 74, Headquarters 2d Armored Division, 6 October 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

2. The 1st Battalion, 359th Infantry Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism in the face of the enemy in the vicinity of Pretot, France, from 3 to 8 July 1944. The 1st Battalion, 359th Infantry Regiment, launched an attack against a numerically superior force in order to secure the right flank of the division and to capture the key point in the enemy defense, Hill 122. After 3 days of bitter fighting, during which time many of its leaders became casualties, the 1st Battalion pressed to the base of the strategic hill. Without time for sorely needed rest or recuperation, the Battalion secured the right flank of the division by assaulting and overrunning in the face of unrelenting fire, enemy positions on the right side of the commanding site. As the battle-weary soldiers approached the far crest of the hill, they encountered a strong, determined force of paratroopers and SS troops. Without support of tanks, tank destroyers, and antitank guns, the 1st Battalion repelled successive, vicious counterattacks and drove these assailants from the summit of the hill. When the units ammunition supply became depleted, a hand-carrying party was dispatched to bring up the critically needed ammunition; but, after completing one successful trip, the detail was prevented by enemy infiltration and intense fire from delivering additional supplies to the forward elements. Though repeated efforts were made later to deliver ammunition to the 1st Battalion, it received no such supplies for 30 hours. A large, hostile force supported by five tanks, artillery, and mortars subsequently counterattacked and drove a deep wedge between the 1st Battalion and the 3d Battalion, completely severing all communications. As wave after wave of enemy troops attacked the 1st Battalion's positions with the intent of destroying the unit, the officers and men, suffering from cold, thirst, and hunger, and their stamina taxed to the breaking point, held tenaciously to their hard-won positions, repelled the attackers, and inflicted heavy casualties upon them.

Though the 2d Battalion later closed the gap between the other two battalions, which allowed tanks to bring up vital supplies to them the enemy continued to engage the 1st Battalion in fierce fire fights, and, in one final effort to drive the battalion from the commanding site, overran friendly antitank positions and threatened to encircle the unit. The members of the battalion held steadfastly to their positions and, with incredible vigor, hurled back this last enemy assault. The intrepid leadership of the officers and the conspicuous gallantry displayed by the men of all ranks who participated in this difficult mission aided materially in capturing Hill 122, thereby destroying the enemy's main line of resistance and affording friendly forces invaluable observation. (General Orders 707, Headquarters 90th Infantry Division, 3 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

3. The 1st Battalion, 376th Infantry Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in action in Germany, during the period 14 January to 18 January 1945. The 1st Battalion, 376th Infantry Regiment, was ordered to capture the towns of Tettingen and Butzdorf and thereby breach the Siegfried Line Switch of fortifications protecting the Saar-Moselle Triangle. Employing lighteninglike tactics and surprise, the objectives were captured with light casualties, and strong defenses were set up. At approximately 0300 on 15 January, the enemy launched the first of a series of counterattacks when 400 enemy infantrymen swarmed down the hills and surrounded the towns in a desperate effort to regain the vital ground. The Germans were driven back after sustaining staggering casualties. Seven more determined attacks by numerically superior forces were repulsed in a like manner. Carrying parties braved intense artillery, mortar, and sniper fire to bring up ammunition and medical supplies. To deceive the enemy as to the true strength of our forces, the gallant defenders maneuvered rapidly from house to house through holes blasted in the sides of buildings with satchel charges and bazookas, all the time directing heavy fire upon the Germans. At one time, 35 enemy tanks were counted in the streets of the 2 towns, but the men of the 1st Battalion, disregarding point-blank fire from the tanks and despite these overwhelming odds, courageously resisted and repelled every attack. In spite of heavy casualties and the fact that the men occupied front-line positions for 5 days without sleep, they bitterly contested every foot of ground, tenaciously held the positions, killed approximately 850 Germans and captured 150, and destroyed 8 tanks and 11 half-tracks. The unconquerable spirit displayed by these men in the face of superior odds, and their self-sacrificing devotion to duty are worthy of the highest emulation. (General Orders 255, Headquarters 94th Infantry Division, 29 September 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

4. The 17th Armored Engineer Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 22 December 1944 through 17 January 1945, in which the spearheading armored elements of the German Ardennes break-through were first stopped and annihilated and then the remaining enemy forces in the western half of the bulge cut off from their retreat to Germany. The gallantry, superior professional skill, brilliant team work, extreme individual ruggedness and will to close with the enemy by the members of the 17th Armored Engineer Battalion during this period materially assisted the 2d Armored Division in all its advances against a determined, tenacious enemy, as well as overcome almost insurmountable obstacles imposed by weather and terrain. The men of the 17th Armored Engineer Battalion, in heroic infantry fighting, repeatedly attacked fortified towns and heavily defended enemy road blocks in the face of murderous fire from German tanks, assault guns, artillery, and dug-in infantry armed with mortars, machine guns, and other small arms. In spite of the almost continuous dismounted combat, no essential engineer functions were neglected. An extremely cold Ardennes winter provided ice conditions which made tank operation impossible, and heavy snows which completely blocked the few inadequate arteries of traffic, covered mines, and made their removal additionally hazardous. The superhuman efforts of the 17th Armored Engineer Battalion, together with the daring and determined spirit which knew no limitations despite extreme exhaustion and battle weariness of the individual engineer, culminated in the encirclement and virtual annihilation of the German 2d Panzer Division and in the advance south to line up with the Third Army south of Houffalize, thus cutting the German salient in half. (General Orders 79, Headquarters 2d Armored Division, 31 October 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, European Theater (Main).)

5. Company A, 532d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism at Nassau Bay, New Guinea, from 29 June to 2 July 1943. After a hazardous midnight landing in tremendous surf, the boat crews of Company A, who had been charged with placing a combat team ashore in enemy territory, left their wrecked craft and prepared themselves for the inevitable fight for the beachhead. With rifles and with machine guns torn from their landing craft, they joined in a desperate 12-hour battle and, suffering heavy casualties, held the portion of the perimeter which bore the brunt of the enemy attack. In the grim fight which at times involved hand-to-hand combat, the amphibian engineers, as individuals and as a group, displayed extraordinary resolution and courage. As a unit comprising one fifth of the American forces on Nassau Beach, their courageous action was the factor which saved the entire force from destruction by a superior enemy force. In the adaptability, determination, and willingness to sacrifice, which they displayed, company A, 532d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment lived up to the highest combat traditions of their corps and of the Army of the United States. (General Orders 272, Headquarters Sixth Army, 2 December 1945, as approved by the Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces, Pacific.)

6. The Boat Battalion, 592d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment, is cited for conspicuous and heroic action against the enemy at Leyte, Philippine Islands, from 5 November until 10 December 1944. The boat battalion, then operating 170 small craft unloading ships at White Beach, Los Negros, Admiralty Islands, and landing combat patrols at various points on Leyte and Samar Islands, was called upon to supply front-line troops by landing supplies at Pinamopoan Point. For 4 days, the officers and men of this unit determinedly landed on the rocky beach, in the face of the direct fire of a machine gun which the infantry could not locate. Each day, as the ramps of the LCM's were lowered onto the beach, the machine gun would open fire directly into the well deck of the craft. Despite the fact that the boat crews were not responsible for unloading their craft, they voluntarily and with complete disregard for their own safety, unloaded the boats while the coxswains remained at the helm to keep the boats on the beach. Later the unit participated in the assault landing at Ipil, carrying troops and supplies for the final attack on Ormoc. Although the landing was made against only moderate enemy shore resistance, a fierce enemy air attack developed later in the day, which forced all craft off the beach. The LCM's of the battalion remained close inshore despite the desperate attempts of the enemy pilots, and furnished supporting fire which destroyed two enemy planes and helped discourage any sustained attack on the beach. The enemy planes then attacked the shipping offshore scoring a direct hit on one ship and setting it afire. Two naval craft attempted to aid the ship but were driven off by the planes. Without hesitation the boats of this unit got under way to assist. The enemy planes then made two desperate attacks on the craft in an attempt to drive them off. In addition, shore batteries opened up, and it was due only to the superb handling of the boats and their machine guns that no direct hits were suffered and at least one enemy plane was destroyed. As a result of this heroic action, the LCM's effected the rescue of 16 survivors. On the following day, while returning to the near shore with battle casualties and other personnel and without naval escort, the LCM convoy was spotted by enemy planes and attacked constantly for over an hour. Again the skilful handling of the boats and deadly fire from their guns accounted for four enemy planes and prevented serious damage. In all, this unit accounted for 11 planes destroyed and several probably destroyed, which in itself is an enviable record. The determination, conspicuous heroism, and high esprit de corps of the Boat Battalion, 592d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 176, Headquarters Sixth Army, 26 August 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, Headquarters Sixth Army.)

7. Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2d Battalion (less the Assault Gun Platoon), Company E, and the 3d Platoon, Company B, 67th Armored Regiment; Company I, 41st Armored Infantry Regiment; and the 1st Platoon, Company C, 238th Engineer Battalion, are cited for exceptionally outstanding performance of duty on the night of 29 to 30 July 1944 in the vicinity of Grimesnil, France. During the climax of the St. Lo break-through operation, this task force, assigned the mission of securing and holding an important escape route for German units trapped during the operation, moved into position shortly before midnight on 29 July 1944. At about 0015B hours on the 30th of July, a force of approximately 2,500 German troops from the 2d and 17th SS Panzer Divisions, together with a column of over 100 vehicles, drove from the north into the task force positions in an attempt to force their way through and escape to the south. For over 6 hours this task force engaged the enemy in vicious hand-to-hand combat. The friendly force, outnumbered five to one, beat off successive frontal and enveloping attacks with hand grenades and bayonets. Both friendly and enemy tanks maneuvered and fired at each other at less than 50 yards distance. At dawn, the remnants of the enemy forces retreated to the north in great disorder, leaving behind over 100 destroyed vehicles, 800 dead, and 1,000 prisoners, many of whom were wounded. The outstanding heroism of this small group of men was responsible for maintaining the entrapment of large German forces. Their gallant efforts prevented the enemy from opening an escape route which would have enabled thousands of German troops to escape to the south and become available to counter the Allied drive which swept through France, Belgium, Holland, and on to the German border. (General Orders 82, Headquarters 2d Armored Division, 24 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater (Main).)

Brigadier General James H. Walker, O12730, United States Army. July 1944 to October 1945.

V. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

Company G, 30th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 20–22 September 1944 near Fauconney, France. In a 2-day battle waged on the steep, densely wooded slopes of "Potato Masher Hill" in cold, fog, and rain against a battalion of fanatical enemy troops, Company G, 30th Infantry Regiment, commanded by Captain Hugh E. Wardlaw, Jr., smashed into an iron ring of German defense and held on grimly and tenaciously, despite overwhelmingly unfavorable odds and the absence of armored or artillery support. Although two other companies had attempted the assault on this rocky hill mass only to be hurled back to their line of departure, the men of Company G drove forward with such impetus and fury that they seized a spearhead position on the slopes, but were promptly encircled and isolated by the ubiquitous enemy. Completely surrounded, their wire communications slashed, cold, wet, and weary, with only a day's supplies available, the troops weathered five counterattacks of fanatical violence. With all officers except the company commander dead or wounded, they battered their way forward against a wall of mortar and automatic fire, then dug in on the summit of the irregular hill position and held it against every weapon and stratagem the enemy could bring to bear on them.

Fighting hand to hand against an enemy of such fanatical temper that one German blew himself to bits with a hand grenade rather than surrender, the men of Company G held on with resolute intrepidity. Under incessant tree bursts, surrounded, unable to protect their wounded and dying, they clung to the high ground with epic tenacity until reinforcements arrived. Through their steadfastness and heroism, 152 of the enemy were killed, wounded, or captured, the German defending battalion was shattered, and the 30th Infantry Regiment was able to roll up a powerful enemy ridge line of defenses which had barred the advance of the Allied forces into that sector of the Vosges. (General Orders 383, Headquarters 3d Infantry Division, 14 November 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, 3d Infantry Division.)

VI. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and section V, WD Circular 142, 1944, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Raymond E. Bellamy, O446243, Sanitary Corps, Army of the United States, rendered meritorious service in connection with the work of the United States of America Typhus Commission during the outbreak of epidemic typhus at Naples and in southern Italy during the winter 1943-44. Captain Bellamy organized and administered a special delousing service. By the very thorough manner in which this service operated under his direction, louse infestation of the population was decreased and the risk of the spread of the disease was reduced. His accomplishments contributed greatly to the success of the typhus control program in southern Italy.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (SECOND OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of section III, General Orders 44, XII Corps, 3 June 1945, as pertains to Brigadier General Ralph J. Canine, is rescinded.

VIII. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—So much of section X, WD General Orders 117, 1945, as pertains to Captain Robert E. Bellamy, Sanitary Corps, is rescinded.
