III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, Bul. 22, WD, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, Bul. 11, WD, 1942), citations of the following units under the provisions of AR 260-10, as approved by the Commanding General, Sixth Army, are confirmed by the Department of the Army in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Company F, 136th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 9 to 11 April 1945 on Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands. At 1600 on 9 April 1945, Company F completed relief of a much larger unit in position on Skyline Ridge, Neuva Viscaya Province, Northern Luzon. The position was on a high, barren ridge, well out in advance of all other forces of the regiment in that sector, and constituted the right flank of the division. Three miles to the southeast was the left flank of the adjacent division. In front, were strong forces of the enemy. Company F was still engaged in consolidating its new position when the enemy, who had been watching from adjacent heights, suddenly opened up with heavy machine-gun and mortar fire in preparation for an attack. Throughout the remaining daylight hours, the men were pinned to their fox holes by the fierceness of the enemy fire. At nightfall, the company braced itself for the inevitable attack. At midnight, the enemy struck on the right flank of the position. Although the men of Company F laid down a barrage of artillery, mortar, rifle, and grenade fire, some of the fanatical enemy, attacking in superior numbers, succeeded in penetrating the position with light machine guns, fixed bayonets, grenades, and demolitions. The attack continued with unabated fury throughout the night.

Only as dawn came, were the men of Company F, by the toughest type of hand-to-hand fighting and heavy supporting fires of friendly 81-mm mortars and artillery, able to stop the attack and expel the enemy from the position. Many enemy had been killed, but as daylight came, it could be seen that the enemy had surrounded the position on all sides. Wire communications and supply lines had been cut and the company was completely isolated. The supply of food, water, ammunition, and especially grenades was nearly exhausted. The only means of resupply was by air. Although this means was utilized, many of the supplies fell into the hands of the surrounding enemy, and although the company did receive some water, small arms, and mortar ammunition, food and grenades were still lacking. Throughout the day, despite constant harassment by the enemy, the company labored in the sweltering heat to reorganize its position and prepare for further attacks. Reinforcements were on the way, but the men knew that they must hold the vital position alone until help could arrive. On several occasions, sorties were made to dislodge strong groups of enemy who had dug in near the flanks of the position. It was vital that these enemy be destroyed before nightfall and, with ferocious courage, small groups of Company F sallied forth. So fierce were their attacks that in one of these sallies 32 of a total enemy force of 40 were killed in their positions and the remaining 8 were forced to flee. As night fell, the company crouched in its fox holes awaiting the attack, outnumbered, but unafraid. At 0100, the blasting of grenades, mortars, and demolitions covered the entire position. The enemy swarmed in, only to be met with withering fire of friendly artillery and mortars and the ready bayonets of the heroic defenders. Using every means of fighting at their disposal, the men of Company F destroyed the enemy in such numbers that once more he was forced to withdraw. One hundred thirty-seven enemy lay dead before the position, however, the company had also suffered. Only a little more than half of the original 97 men were still in condition to fight. Throughout the next day, the gallant company withstood incessant hammering by enemy machine guns and mortars. Although completely surrounded and short on supplies, the company, realizing the importance of its position, prepared itself once more to withstand all the assaults the enemy could launch. Meanwhile, friendly reinforcements had moved into other commanding positions in the area and orders were issued to the battered but unbeaten men to withdraw. At dark, on 11 April, under a heavy artillery barrage, the company began its movement out of the position which it had held at so great a cost. The courage of the heroic company had succeeded in destroying twice its number of enemy, had held vital terrain protecting the flanks of two divisions and had prevented enemy interference with other friendly operations in that sector. The determination, unflinching devotion to duty, and superb courage displayed by each man of Company F, 136th Infantry Regiment, were major factors in the success of operations in Northern Luzon and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

2. Company G, 136th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 20 to 26 March 1945, on Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands. An important bridge had been blown out by an enemy demolition crew in the vicinity of Camp 3. To secure the area near the bridge in order that the engineers could construct a crossing, it was necessary to occupy high ground on both sides of the Bued River. Company G was given the mission of securing the right flank, by blocking the enemy movements from down the Piggan and Hill BM Middle area. In the late afternoon of 23 March 1945, the enemy made a determined attack upon the position occupied by Company G. They set fire to the dry cogon grass and forced temporary evacuation of the area. When the company returned, the enemy had occupied their positions and opened up with mortars, machine guns, and rifles. Company G immediately assaulted and, after a bloody, close-range fight, drove the enemy out and again occupied the position. The fight had been costly as Company G had suffered 16 casualties. At 0400 on 26 March 1945, approximately 50 enemy, armed with grenades and small arms, again hit Company G. They were supported by long-range mortars and artillery fire from enemy positions on commanding ground. Endeavoring to stop the fanatical rushes of the enemy, Company G brought intense protective mortar fire close in around their positions and shelled adjacent wooded areas. Despite the wall of mortar fire, the enemy continued their charges. Finally they set fire to the cogon grass in an attempt to drive Company G from the security of their fox holes and burn out machine-gun positions, but a sudden shift in the wind rendered the fire ineffectual. The men of Company G fought on stubbornly, hurling the enemy back each time he attacked. Not until 0700 was the attack completely repulsed. Within 20 yards of Company G's position, the bodies of 25 enemy dead, rifles, machine guns, and mortars were found. The determination, unflinching devotion to duty, and superb courage displayed by each man of Company G, 136th Infantry Regiment, were major factors in the success of operations in Northern Luzon and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

5. Company I, 136th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy during the period 26 to 28 March 1945, in the vicinity of Baguio, Northern Luzon, Philippine Islands. On 26 March 1945, our forces were making a drive on the city of Baguio in Northern Luzon, along the Kennon Road, which ran up a narrow defile bordered by towering mountains on either side. The positions of our troops were seriously threatened by enemy forces on a well-defined ridge east of the Kennon Road. This ridge was strongly fortified and was used by the enemy as a base from which to launch counterattacks on our forces. To relieve this situation, a battalion was ordered to seize this position and annihilate the enemy. Company I, an assault company, began its movement on the night of 25 March 1945. In order to reach positions from which it could attack, it was necessary for the company to scale the heights of a 5,500-foot mountain, and then proceed down the other side to the enemy position. All that night and all the next day, the company worked its way forward, despite the ever present menace of enemy observation. At 1215 hours, after 36 hours of movement over difficult terrain, the company found itself confronted with strong enemy opposition, honeycombed with fox holes and caves, defended by a company of the enemy. Because of the nature of the terrain, it was impossible to place artillery fire on the enemy strong points located on the crest of the objective. Only 60-mm mortars and light machine guns could be used in support. Later, when the men of Company I launched their attack, they encountered the full fury of the enemy's machine guns, rifles, and grenades from concealed positions commanding the crest of the hill. At 1630 hours, after a continuous fire fight which had lasted 3½ hours, Company I halted its attack and began reorganizing. During the night, the exhausted men were harassed by numerous infiltration attempts on the part of the enemy. On the following morning, the company, with renewed determination, moved forward and secured its objective, killing over 52 of the enemy. The determination, unflinching devotion to duty, and superb courage displayed by each man of Company I, 136th Infantry Regiment, contributed immeasurably to the success of operations in Northern Luzon and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF THE ARMY:

OFFICIAL:

EDWARD F. WITSELL
Major General
The Adjutant General

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER
Chief of Staff, United States Army

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Sergeant Pat J. Lindsay (Army serial No. 19176812), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company A, 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment, distinguished himself by gallantry in action, on 5 October 1944, near Driel, Holland. His unit was attacking in an apple orchard against heavy machine-gun and rifle fire from an enemy strong point. A comrade, trying to advance his machine gun to a better position, was seriously wounded. Sergeant Lindsay, supervising his squad in a nearby drainage ditch, immediately arose, crawled over the open ground under withering machine-gun fire, and pulled his comrade back 75 feet to the drainage ditch. The fearless, courageous, and unselfish act of Sergeant Lindsay was an inspiration to his platoon.

Lieutenant Colonel Carlos E. McAfee, O41629 (then major), Judge Advocate General's Department, United States Army, exhibited gallantry in action in the Philippine Islands while serving as assistant, G-3, Philippine Division, and as liaison officer between Bataan Force Headquarters and Headquarters Philippine Division from 24 December 1941 to 5, 11, and 26 January 1942. Colonel McAfee displayed exceptional courage and competence on numerous hazardous liaison missions. Through his efficiency and devotion to duty, he made a distinct contribution to the heroic defense of Bataan.

Private First Class Marvin D. Meyers (Army serial No. 42031808) (then private), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company F, 407th Infantry Regiment, 102d Division, displayed gallantry in action, on 2 December 1944, at Flossdorf, Germany. In a battalion attack on the village, when learning that his battalion commander needed a runner to reach another company, he volunteered to deliver the important message. Leaving his position of shelter, he ran into heavy enemy machine-gun and rifle fire which ranged over the field. Stopping midway in the flat, fire-swept terrain, he attended two badly wounded infantrymen and, amid the hail of enemy bullets, gave them first aid before continuing his mission. Private Meyers' heroic courage and determination demonstrated in the voluntary performance of his mission are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

In a determined attack to clear a forest area and force the enemy out of the woods, he advanced with his unit through heavy hostile fire, killing several of the enemy gunners. Coming again to the edge of the woods, then into open terrain under the full sweep of German fire, he suddenly saw a comrade fall from an enemy bullet. First Lieutenant Robert A. Alber, O1328104 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company A, 23d Infantry Regiment, on 15 April 1945, distinguished himself by heroic achievement at Merseburg, Germany. As leader of the first platoon, he led the company into the German-held town and secured the first objective. To locate a passage across a railroad line, which was under direct enemy fire, he led a reconnaissance patrol and upon finding a route, was immediately subject to heavy enemy automatic fire. Ordering a machine gun brought up, Lieutenant Alber personally operated the weapon while under direct enemy fire, knocked out the hostile gun position, and cleared the route for the advance.

Captain William M. Byrd, O1283019 (then first lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by heroic achievement at Hollandia Airdrome, Dutch New Guinea, on 24-25 April 1944. When an enemy shell hit a tree and burst directly over the aid station of the 1st Battalion, 21st Infantry Regiment, killing and wounding several medical personnel and patients, Captain Byrd, battalion communication officer, voluntarily left the safety of his fox hole and assisted the battalion surgeon in giving first aid and comfort to the wounded and dying men. With complete disregard for his safety, he worked throughout the night, often using a flash light, although it revealed his position to the enemy. Through his inspiring courage and heroic action, Captain Byrd upheld the finest traditions of the United States Army.

Captain Bertram Cohen, O650374 (then first lieutenant), Air Corps, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in action, on 6 and 7 December 1944, in the Philippine Islands. On this night, Japanese ground forces assaulted the camp area of the 324th Airdrome Squadron. Enemy patrols attacked the north line of perimeter defense commanded by Captain Cohen. When the enemy rushed this sector Captain Cohen gathered together a small detachment and took them to a new position beyond the perimeter, where he set up a concentration of fire with submachine gun, carbine and automatic pistol exposing himself to enemy fire. His actions repulsed enemy soldiers who were on the verge of blasting the perimeter positions with hand grenades. Captain Cohen's courage reflects great honor on himself and the military service.

Master Sergeant Arthur C. Kielblock, Jr. (Army serial No. 39321324) (then staff sergeant), Infantry, Army of the United States, performed heroic service, on 26 April 1945, while serving with Headquarters Company, 91st Infantry Division, in Italy. While proceeding on a reconnaissance toward the Adige River, he disregarded sniper fire and pushed on. Upon entering the town of Angiara, he joined forces with several Partisans in a fire fight with the enemy. They drove to the center of the town and apprehended 18 of the enemy. Sergeant Kielblock's heroic action was typical of the highest traditions of the United States Army.

Technical Sergeant Clifford C. Miracle (Army serial No. 35230883) (then technician fifth grade), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company I, 5th Infantry Regiment, distinguished himself by heroic action against the enemy, on 25 March 1945, in the vicinity of Lingenfeld, Germany. While his platoon was advancing through a large draw, the enemy opened fire from their well-dug-in trenches on both sides. Effective automatic and rifle-fire severely wounded the lead scout. Seeing the wounded man fall, Sergeant Miracle, the medical aid man, with total disregard for his personal safety, dashed through the pinned-down platoon and intense cross-fire to the wounded scout. While under direct observation and close-falling rifle fire, Sergeant Miracle promptly administered first aid and saved the life of the scout. This gallant action by Sergeant Miracle was an inspiration to all members of this unit and exemplified the highest traditions of the armed forces.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (Sec. II, Bul. 3, WD, 1944), the Bronze Star Medal (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named enlisted man:

Private Jack A. Bleffer (Army serial No. 36621595), Infantry, Army of the United States, a gunner with Company A, 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division, on 25 September 1944, distinguished himself by heroic achievement at Erde, Holland. During a severe enemy counterattack, he voluntarily took over his platoon when the commander was killed by enemy fire. Quickly placing all machine guns in position, disregarding the heavy enemy fire, he stood in the open amid the hail of enemy bullets, directing the gunners and placed concentrated fire on the advancing enemy troops. By his courageous leadership and heroic determination, Private Bleffer successfully organized the platoon and inspired the men to hold their position in the face of the strong enemy attack.

(This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) to Colonel Blakelock, for service during the same period, as published in General Orders 359, Headquarters United States Army Forces, Pacific, 27 November 1945.)

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Second Lieutenant Arthur A. Amron, O396697, Cavalry, Army of the United States, a member of the 48th Matériel Squadron, displayed gallantry in action on 25 February 1942 at Balanga, Bataan, Philippine Islands. His patrol attacked and eliminated the outguards near a strong enemy position in a church. Lieutenant Amron and another man then rushed the entrance to the church. Meeting direct enemy fire, they engaged the enemy gunners and, killing them, mounted the staircase to the observation post, destroying three more of the enemy with grenades and rifle fire and apparently clearing the enemy position. Suddenly automatic fire from a hidden enemy gunner struck Lieutenant Amron and hostile support fire began registering on the position from another area. Fatally wounded and unable to go with the patrol, Lieutenant Amron ordered the men to leave him and immediately withdraw from the area then under heavy enemy fire, thereby demonstrating indomitable courage and a regard for his comrades in keeping with highest traditions of the military service.

Private George H. Cooper (Army serial No. 64128), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company C, 102d Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action, on 20 April 1918, in the vicinity of Seicheprey, France.

Lieutenant Colonel F. Raymond King, O377203, Cavalry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action at Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 22 April 1945. While attacking Mt. Malepunyo, the advance of the 8th Cavalry Regiment was held up by intense enemy sniper, mortar, and machine-gun fire from concealed weapons. Colonel King, commanding officer of the 1st Squadron, fearlessly employed the radio of the forward mortar observer and, while in an exposed position, directed fire at the Japanese positions with such success that the squadron could advance. Colonel King, however, was fatally wounded by machine-gun fire. Through his sound judgment and courageous action, and with complete disregard for personal safety, Colonel King made a vital contribution to the successful operations of his squadron and upheld the highest traditions of the military service.

III. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Corporal Charles L. Boucher (Army serial No. 64,010), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company C, 102d Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action, on 20 April 1918, in the vicinity of Seicheprey, France.

Lieutenant Colonel Lester J. Chase, O298059 (then captain), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of the 13th Infantry, Philippine Army, displayed gallantry in action near Guagua, Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 4 January 1942. During an attack on the regimental sector, he demonstrated outstanding courage and leadership in directing operations against the foe. His exemplary conduct and disregard for personal safety were in constant evidence as he worked to reorganize the position. By his gallant action and devotion to duty, Colonel Chase contributed in a marked degree to the heroic defense of a position which permitted the successful withdrawal of several other units.

Sergeant Elias B. Denuna (209126) (then private), Infantry, Philippine Army, on 24 March 1942, displayed gallantry in action in Mindanao, Philippine Islands. During a bitter engagement in which his company finally was ordered to withdraw, he discovered an officer severely wounded and unable to move with the unit. Under the heavy enemy fire, Sergeant Denuna placed the officer on a tree limb for movement and then ran through the continuing enemy fire to tell of their location. Immediately he returned and, with great difficulty, began moving the stricken man toward the rear, until, finally, an aid party arrived and helped to carry the injured man to safety. Sergeant Denuna's courage under hostile fire in the face of the approaching enemy and his determination to aid his wounded comrade are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Corporal Arthur M. Hubbard (Army serial No. 64161) (then private), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company C, 102d Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action, on 20 April 1918, in the vicinity of Seicheprey, France.

First Lieutenant George A. Ortega, O1896845 (then third lieutenant), Corps of Engineers, Philippine Scouts, displayed gallantry in action on the Moron-Bagae road, on 3 February 1942. When numerically superior enemy forces threatened to encircle the 1st Regular Division, Philippine Army, Lieutenant Ortega and a special detachment blazed a trail through a gap between the Japanese forces and the sea. He organized the remnants of troops in the area and led a spirited attack against the enemy who were attempting to close the gap. Under heavy enemy fire and with complete disregard for his safety, he directed the fire against enemy mortar and automatic weapons and encouraged the men to hold their positions against fierce enemy assaults. The enemy attack was broken and the withdrawal gap secured. Through his marked heroism, initiative, and leadership, Lieutenant Ortega contributed materially to the heroic defense of the Philippines.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Silver Star (third Oak-Leaf Cluster) for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named enlisted man:

First Sergeant Theodore L. Dobil (Army serial No. 6908017) (then technical sergeant), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company K, 26th Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action, on 9 June 1944, at St. Anne, France, where his regiment was engaged in holding its initial beachhead objective. During the night, he was given the mission of contacting the British 56th Brigade at a prearranged point. After proceeding several hundred yards, Sergeant Dobil and his small patrol ran into the flank of an enemy counterattacking force. He and his patrol took this superior force under fire and disrupted their attack. Attempting to return to his command post, he was jumped by two Germans. In the ensuing fight, he killed both of the enemy and succeeded in reaching his commanding officer with information which proved valuable in repulsing the attack. Sergeant Dobil's actions were in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed services.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 1395, 20 November 1945, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

From 3 to 5 September 1944, the Division and the attached units in the area of Mons, under heavy pressure, destroyed an enemy pocket, including approximately 9,000 men of the 348th Infantry Division of the 18th German Air Army, and of the 6th Parachute Division. During this operation, the 1st Infantry Division of the United States Army and the attached units, after valiant efforts, captured more than 5,000 prisoners, killed or wounded 4,000 enemy soldiers and captured or destroyed more than 1,500 vehicles and 40 tanks. The Division also took the Commanding Officer of the 6th German Airborne Division, prisoner.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 1395, 20 November 1945, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The Division fought against the enemy in the northern flank of the German counteroffensive in the Ardennes in the area of Eupen-Malmedy. These counterattacks were launched by the enemy on 28 and 30 December 1944, but they were repulsed after heavy combat. This action prevented the expansion of the critical break-through. Independently of the strenuous defense, a strong base was established that later formed the pivot of attacks against western penetrations of the enemy. After the enemy counterattacks were efficiently stopped, the 1st Infantry Division of the U. S. Army and the attached units pushed forward to reduce the pockets and throw the enemy out of Belgian territory.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 514, 22 May 1945, as amended by Decree No. 3864, 28 April 1947, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation :

On 2 September 1944, at 0930, its reconnaissance elements crossed the Belgian border near Rume. These were the first American troops to enter Belgium and this marked the beginning of the liberation of the country. The Division fought violently and threw back the enemy on the Albert Canal. This Division liberated the towns of Tournai, Wavre, Tirlemont and Hasselt.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 514, 22 May 1945, as amended by Decree No. 3864, 28 April 1947, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation :

During the German offensive in the Ardennes, in December 1944, the 2d Armored Division was located in Germany, on the banks of the Roer River between Linnich and Julich. On 21 December 1944, it received orders to proceed to the region of Havelange, Avin Clavier. This movement of more than 100 miles was accomplished in less than 24 hours and on 23 December 1944, the Division established contact with hostile forces at Celles. From the 23d to the 28th of December 1944, violent engagements developed in the Celles salient and brought about the total destruction of the spearhead division of the Fifth Panzer Army. This victory blocked the German advance and prevented it from reaching the Meuse. From thence on, the Division pushed back the enemy forces and, after having retaken many communities of the Ardennes region, it liberated the town of Houffalize.

BELGIAN FOURRAGERE (1940), awarded under Decree No. 514, 22 May 1945, as amended by Decree No. 3864, 28 April 1947, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH SILVER STAR, awarded under Decision No. 246, 15 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation :

A unit inspired by the highest sentiments of duty. On 8 August 1944, it was charged with destroying a bridge 5 kms. back of the enemy lines, in the region of Lonlay l'Abbaye. It accomplished its mission with the most absolute contempt for danger. Finding the bridge occupied, the 2d Platoon attacked and accomplished its task under enemy fire, evincing the finest qualities of bravery and army discipline.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH SILVER-GILT STAR, awarded under Decision No. 247, 15 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation :

This magnificent Battalion is animated by the greatest sacrificial spirit. During a long offensive, which lasted from 14 to 28 November 1944 and which was to lead the 2d Armored Division from the Puffendorf to the Roer, they courageously attacked a powerful antitank pit, heavily mined and protected by heavy artillery. In spite of serious losses, they crossed the pit and followed up their initial success by seizing Ederman, Mertzhausen and Barmen, thus permitting the 2d Armored Division to attain its objectives.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 267, 22 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation :

A fine combat unit, spirited and animated by exceptional courage. It distinguished itself particularly during the operation in Normandy, near Grimesnil, on 29 and 30 July 1944. Its mission was to capture a road by which the German forces were withdrawing. It withstood, without weakening, the attack of an enemy column of 2,500 men and 90 vehicles, during more than 6 hours of fierce hand-to-hand fighting. In spite of the enemy numerical superiority of 4 to 1, it destroyed this enemy force, killing 450 men and taking 900 prisoners. This brilliant action contributed to the annihilation of the enemy forces in Normandy and success of the Allied landing.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 2509, 17 June 1946, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

During the period 13 to 19 December 1944, the 2d Infantry Division with attached units received the order to cease its participation in the great attack in which it was completely engaged. It was ordered then to play the principal part in the constitution of the "North Shoulder" of the Ardennes. This was accomplished by resistance, as a stone wall, the enemy attack, in a way to limit and check it and to give our forces the time and the opportunity to organize the struggle against the German plan. Its operation led to an absolute success under the most difficult conditions of pressure and climate.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 2509, 17 June 1946, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

During the period of 19 to 30 December 1944, the 2d Infantry Division with attached units engaged the enemy with success and occupied the position of the Elsenborn crest, from which it was never removed. In this position, it formed the angle of the "North Shoulder" of the Ardennes. All this was accomplished with a tactical cleverness so remarkable, with constant courage from all the noncommissioned officers, and such a power of resolution and judgment from the command that the operation of the Division became a force stimulating the confidence of higher echelons.

In August 1944, it was charged with the taking of Brest and by skillful maneuvers and despite severe losses, succeeded in breaking down, one by one, the resistances protecting the city. In spite of the strenuous return fire of the enemy, it seized the peninsula of Daoulas, the support of Plougastel, and plunged into Brest next, driving from it a strong force that defended itself by fighting street by street, house by house.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 267, 22 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

This is a magnificent Divisional Headquarters which showed an exceptional combat spirit. Setting up its "Command Posts" very close to the line of fire, it came into contact several times in the course of rapid Allied advance from the Seine to the Siegfried Line, with German elements and engaged them in battle. They threw back the enemy, liberating several towns and villages, namely: Quincy, Brye-Comte Robert, Mangy le Hongre, Levignan and Villers Cotteret. At Mons, in Belgium, the Headquarters of the 3d Armored Division bore, for 36 hours, the brunt of the attack of the elements of the Seventh German Army in retreat, and in spite of these attacks, it succeeded in holding them in, taking numerous prisoners and destroying a large amount of matériel.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 508, 15 March 1945, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

An elite Division which has remained faithful to the traditions of courage and sacrifice which it had already made during the last war, when it won the nickname "Rock of the Marne." Under the vigorous impetus of an energetic chief and skilled maneuverer, General O'Daniel, it fought without interruption for 169 days, from the Mediterranean beaches to the banks of the Rhine. Placed under the command of the Commanding General of the 1st French Army, for the operations of the Alsace pocket, it contributed greatly, by the power of its repeated attacks, to the victorious battle of Colmar. During the night of January 23 to 24, 1945, it succeeded in crossing, by surprise, the Fecht and Ill and in taking the first enemy position, in spite of a violent snowstorm and a field of action sown with obstacles. Allowing the adversary no respite and pushing its action harder and harder, it crossed the Colmar Canal in order to circle and conquer by sheer fighting, the city of Neuf-Brisach, thereby cutting one of the two remaining routes of retreat left to the German troops still defending the Colmar region. It captured during these actions, more than 4,000 prisoners thus concluding brilliantly the series of glorious operations which took place from the Mediterranean to the Rhine.

A magnificent unit possessing the highest military virtues. During the furious combat of 27 to 30 July 1944, the unit broke the German defense and captured Coutance, then the key position of Avranches. In less than 10 days, the unit decisively overcame the German counterattacks, freed Rennes, Vannes, and Nantes and confined the enemy to Lorient. Continuing its advance on a 300-kilometer front, it reached the Loire and seized Nantes on 11 August 1944. Its crushing action largely contributed to the success of the campaign in France.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 2509, 17 June 1946, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The 26th Infantry Division of the United States Army, operating in the 3d U. S. Army, crossed the Belgian border in the neighborhood of Arlon and Bastogne between 20 December 1944 and 26 January 1945, during the German offensive of the Ardennes. In spite of the tenacity of the enemy defense and the difficulties of the ground, in order to diminish the pressure made by the enemy forces on the vital center of communications of Bastogne, the division attacked with success. It then continued its attack and forced the German forces to withdraw from Belgian soil in that sector.

(For prior citation for the French Croix de Guerre with Gilt Star, see General Orders 11, War Department, 1924.)

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 1286, 3 November 1945, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A valiant regiment, already cited during the war of 1914-18. It was the decisive element in the attack launched by the 26th Infantry Division from 8 November to 11 December 1944, in Lorraine. During a night attack on 8 November 1944, the 104th Infantry Regiment broke through a long line of resistance toward Vic-Sur-Seille. Regardless of enemy reinforcements, it took Benestroff on 19 November 1944. The next day after heavy fighting, it took Hill 334, a heavy point in the enemy system of defense, and forced them to evacuate this strong line of defense. It took Guebling, Schwiex, and several fortified positions on 24 November 1944, after crossing several mine fields. On 8 December 1944, it broke a working system of the Maginot Line by taking Kalhausen, liberating the last French piece of ground occupied by the enemy in that sector. The 104th Infantry Regiment inflicted heavy losses on the enemy during these actions, including 1,428 prisoners, more than 3,000 wounded and about 700 dead.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 565, 27 March 1945, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A select regiment which demonstrated its tactical worth and fighting spirit under all circumstances. Under command of its chief, Col. James E. Rudder, it participated from 28 January 1945 onward, in close collaboration with the French armored formations in the operations of the siege of Colmar. During all the time of the hard engagements against a tenacious enemy, its efforts and sacrifices contributed in a great measure to the success of the maneuver which was to end 2 February 1945, in the capture of Colmar; and spared the city of the consequences of street fighting. It fought side by side with the French units, and demonstrated a comradeship in all instances which gave the best example of fellowship in arms and community ideals.

It displayed extraordinary heroism in the combat against the German Army from 4 to 10 September 1944, while operating under the command of the XIX Corps and it supported the 2d Armored Division during its march through Belgium over Tournai, Nivelles, Waterloo, Louvain, St. Trond, and Tongres. The action assigned to the division and its attached units in conquering resistance points of the enemy led to the liberation of that part of Belgium from the enemy forces which occupied it. A great quantity of matériel was destroyed and many enemy soldiers were put out of the fight by being killed or made prisoners.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 1393, 20 November 1945, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The 30th Infantry Division of the United States and its attached units were transferred from V to XIX Corps during the period from 17 to 21 January 1945, and then to the XVIII Airborne Corps from 22 to 25 January 1945. During the period in which they operated in these corps, they defended successfully the north flank of the German penetration into the Ardennes, in the surroundings of Malmedy, Stavelot, La Cleize, Stoumont, and Trois-Ponts in Belgium. The division and its attached units pushed back the violent and repeated attacks of the enemy and prevented the continuation of the breakthrough in the direction of Spa and Liege, the conquering of which would have meant the loss of important supply installations. During the last part of this period, the division and its attached units attacked and chased the enemy from the whole Belgian territory in its zone.

From 2 to 11 October 1944, in the vicinity of Scherpenseel, it hurled itself into the attack on the Siegfried Line which was protected by firm enemy positions. Due to its skill and bravery, these positions fell, one after the other. Despite severe losses and stiff combat, including hand-to-hand encounters, the regiment accomplished its mission brilliantly. Its actions contributed to the swift advance of the Allies into Germany.

In the course of the German attack on Mortain, on 7 August 1944, it withstood without weakening, the desperate impact of the enemy which was attempting to cut the communications between the American forces in Normandy and Brittany by trying to reach Avranches. Under an avalanche of fire which decimated the 1st Battalion, the survivors remained at their posts skillfully manipulating their antitank arms. They stopped the wave of enemy armored forces and neutralized the enemy which had penetrated into friendly lines after heavy hand-to-hand fighting.

An elite unit which, from its landing in the south of France, did not cease to give proof of the highest combat valor and of the finest offensive spirit. It particularly distinguished itself from 24 November to 2 December 1944 in the Vosges, where it contributed in a decisive fashion to the victory in Alsace. Executing a daring maneuver, it seized by surprise attack, the pass and town of Sainte-Marie-aux-Mines, in spite of a very difficult terrain and the savage resistance of the enemy. Following up immediately, it occupied Ste.-Croix-aux-Mines, Rombac-Le-Franc, and Haut-Koenigsburg, broke into the place of Alsace and seized Selestat 2 December 1944, at the cost of hard fighting. This established a wide breach in the German defense system. Next, with untiring ardor and energy, and in spite of desperate counterattacks, the unit carried on daily combat, which completely broke up the defensive organization of the enemy. In the course of these actions, it took more than 3,000 prisoners and seized a large amount of matériel. Worthy of the finest traditions of the American Army, the unit opened an important penetration route towards Colmar and for the 2d Army Corps, prelude to the complete liberation of French soil.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 1034, 4 October 1945, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

This elite division which had gone with great elan through the campaigns of Tunisia, Sicily, Italy, Holland, and France, again distinguished itself particularly in the battle of the Ardennes from 17 to 31 December 1944. Called upon as a reinforcement by the Allied High Command in the evening of 17 December at the time when they were in the vicinity of Reims, the division was able to take up combat positions in the region of Werbomont only 24 hours later and this under very severe climatic conditions. Progressing toward Ambleve and the Salm, the division opened and maintained a corridor for the elements of four American divisions which were surrounded in the vicinity of St. Vith, thus giving new courage to the engaged units. The division had prevented the enemy from piercing the north flank of the pocket created by the offensive of Von Rundstedt and thus succeeded in saving the city of Liege and its surroundings from a second occupation by the Germans.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 1034, 4 October 1945, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

After having excelled in defensive warfare at the banks of the Salm and the Ambleve, and after having repelled successfully the repeated attacks of the best German shock troops, the 82d Airborne Division with the 508th Parachute Infantry Regiment attached, in spite of extreme cold and excessively deep snow, went on the offensive themselves and advanced to the German border, capturing 2,500 German prisoners, including five battalion commanders. This fighting was extremely valorous as the organic composition of the division handicapped the unit considerably, not having at their disposal, as any other infantry division would have, heavy weapons to support their attack. During 23 days, under most painful and adverse conditions, the veterans of the 82d Airborne Division did not cease to give a wonderful example of courage and heroism, exemplifying their fighting spirit by several remarkably brilliant actions. By its valor, the division wrote another page in heroic annals of Allied airborne troops and rendered an important service to Belgium and to the Allied cause by establishing the necessary basis for the new pursuit of the enemy toward the Rhine River.

A fine infantry unit, which distinguished itself brilliantly by its tenacity and a spirit of sacrifice during the German offensive in Belgium from 22 to 25 December 1944. Charged with organizing resistance on the roads to retard the enemy progress, it fulfilled its mission brilliantly in the face of forces greatly superior in numbers and matériel, in spite of severe losses. It contributed to stopping the enemy and permitted, by its sacrifice, the resumption of the victorious Allied advance.

Crossing the Moselle at Thionville, under violent fire from the enemy, it rushed into the fortified position of Metz to overwhelm it from the north. 101ST AIRBORNE DIVISION

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 367, 22 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A splendid airborne unit which gave proof of extraordinary heroism in the course of the Normandy landing operations on 6 to 8 June 1944. It parachuted before dawn on the assault beach on 6 June and in spite of all sorts of difficulties, succeeded in regrouping. Attacked by important forces with violent fire, it nevertheless occupied positions of strategic importance for the landing of friendly troops. This action opened the way to La Douve and the Carentan road for the assault troops. In this way, it greatly contributed to the first phase of the liberation of France.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 828 dated 30 July 1945, as amended by Decree No. 1196, 22 October 1945, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

By its glorious resistance from 22 to 27 December 1944, in the hardest time of the Battle of the Ardennes, it kept, completely isolated, the key position Bastogne. The 101st Airborne Division with its attached units caused the failure of the enemy's plan. This required a deep penetration into Belgium and this division served as a pivot to the operations of the counteroffensive which liberated the invaded territories. During these operations, because of its courage, endurance, discipline and experience in fighting, the 101st Airborne Division pushed back the unceasing attacks of the elements belonging to eight German divisions, in spite of scarce supplies. These troops and their chiefs wrote one of the most beautiful pages of military history and earned the admiration of the world and the everlasting gratitude of Belgium.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 1196, 22 October 1945, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The 101st Airborne Division of the U. S. Army landed by parachute, seaplanes and small boats on 6 June 1944, on the seashore of France, and was one of the first units ready to attack the enemy in the campaign which later liberated Europe which was occupied by the Germans. It was necessary that small detachments enter into hard combat at many places to reunite themselves at the assembly points. They inflicted big losses to the enemy and the division had many losses itself while winning back important points, attacking and keeping centers of communication, bridges and high positions. The success with which these missions were performed prevented the enemy from using reinforcements which could have succeeded in preventing the landing of the VII Corps of the U. S. Army which finally participated in the liberation of Belgium.

A remarkable battalion whose brilliant conduct was greatly valued during the battles of Saint Vith and Manhay on 16 to 23 December 1944. Attacked by an enemy operating in force but filled with the desire to conquer at any cost, it remained in position and, with direct and accurate fire, kept the attackers from access to vital communications south of Manhay. Short of food, water and pharmaceutical products, the 589th Field Artillery Battalion endured three attacks without flinching, inflicted heavy losses on the enemy and forced him to retire.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 2509, 17 June 1946, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The units of the Antwerp X Antiaircraft Artillery Command played a heroic part in the organization and maintenance of the antiaircraft defense, with a view of opening the Antwerp Port on 28 November 1944. They caused the failure of the supreme attack of V-1 bombs thrown by the Germans located in the Trier area, as well as of the areas situated at the northwest of Nimegue. Due to the unceasing efforts of the personnel belonging to these units, the matériel destruction and loss of lives for the Belgian civilians as well as for the Allied troops was held to the minimum. Fighting day and night, these military personnel performed their duty in a remarkable way. This resulted in the liberation of the harbor of Antwerp and the forwarding of supplies of ammunition to five Allied armies. The heroic behavior of these units honors very much the Antwerp X Antiaircraft Artillery Command and the Allied forces.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 2509, 17 June 1946, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The units of the Antwerp X Antiaircraft Artillery Command, at the moment of the supreme offensive thrown by the Wehrmacht on 16 December 1944, established, without precedent against the attempts of destruction, an antiaircraft defense system of the harbor of Antwerp. The results of this heroic action, the success of which was of vital importance to the Allied cause in general, and for the maintenance of the liberation of Belgium in particular, proved so effective that the utilization of the harbor was never interrupted. The action of the officers and men, together with their unceasing efforts and their technical ability, closed the campaign with a result that outstanding success was obtained by the destruction of 97 percent of the pilotless aircraft engaged by the command.

An outstanding observation and spotting unit under the command of Col. J. D. Ellerson. This unit completed its observation and listening posts during the winter campaign on the rain and snow-swept peaks of the Mainarde, Monna Casale, and Monna Acquafondata. FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 267, 22 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A remarkable unit characterized by a spirit of collaboration, zest for battle, and magnificent military qualities. From 14 September 1944 to 8 February 1945, it operated with the I Corps of the First French Army. In spite of the violent enemy attacks, the difficulty of the terrain, and the atmospheric rigors, it tirelessly furnished the most valuable information. Thanks to this unit, more than 700 enemy artillery positions and other installations were located. Their magnificent aid contributed in a large measure to driving the Germans from the Belfort Gap and to the liberation of Alsace.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 3311, 3 January 1947, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The 18th Field Artillery Battalion was assigned to the 3d Armored Division from 1 to 8 September 1944, and during that period contributed in an important degree to the liberation of Belgium. On 2 September 1944, it resisted a Battalion of SS troops on the Mons road, which resulted in not only the defeat and surrender of the German unit, but also prevented a later attack upon the supply trains. On 3 September the members of the 18th Field Artillery Battalion acted as infantry to lead a tank attack against a strongly entrenched force on the outskirts of Mons.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 3311, 3 January 1947, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The 18th Field Artillery Battalion again distinguished itself during the battle of the Ardennes in December 1944 and January 1945. From its position on the north flank of that zone, it hurled back the German troops and advanced swiftly toward Malmedy and Stavelot in support of the 30th Infantry Division of the U. S. Army. It resisted the constant and fanatical break-through attacks of the enemy. On 24 December 1944, this unit received the command to go immediately into the Manhay-Grand Mesnil zone, to halt the advance of the German attack. By a night march in the snow, the battalion reached the position indicated and was attached to the 75th Infantry Division and placed in support of the 13th Armored Division. By its effective and accurate fire, the 18th Field Artillery Battalion helped localize the break-through and contributed in an invaluable manner to definitely stopping the German attack. Throughout the entire campaign, fighting to the limit of their endurance in adverse weather conditions and against constant attacks, all the members of the 18th Field Artillery Battalion conducted themselves with gallantry, devotion and determination, and contributed to the defeat of the common enemy.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 267, 22 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A unit skilled in maneuvers, full of dash, which stood out by the bravery of its fighters. It distinguished itself particularly at Mars-la-Tour, where an enemy airdrome was recaptured with a considerable quantity of fuel, at Saint Privat and Sainte Marie, by doing effective reconnaissance work for the 7th Armored Division, then in the capture of Metz, by neutralizing on the Vionville-Rezonville-Gravelotte-Rezerieulles Line, an important number of emplacements of heavy arms and again by bringing back valuable information about the enemy. By this series of daring and deep reconnaissance actions during the months of August and September 1944, this unit made it possible for the Third U. S. Army to advance rapidly across France up to the Moselle.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH SILVER-GILT STAR, awarded under Decision No. 247, 15 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A magnificent shock troop, eager and of wonderful courage. It particularly distinguished itself on 5 November 1944, at the capture of Berg, which defended the crossing of the Moselle. It attacked, without artillery preparation, positions strongly held by a trained and fanatical enemy. In spite of gunfire which was annihilating its ranks, this unit gave proof of wonderful dash and, aided by tanks, captured the position. It held this position despite terrific bombardment. In the course of the mopping up, it took 17 prisoners.

44th Engr Combat Bn

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 267, 22 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

An engineer unit possessing a remarkable combative value and a very pronounced sense of heroism. From 17 to 19 December 1944, during the violent German offensive of the Ardennes, it attacked and occupied the key position of Wiltz, Luxembourg, using extremely varied fire, despite heavy losses, and in spite of enemy attacks, thus turning aside the first German elements from the road leading to their objective of Bastogne.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 2086, 3 April 1946, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

A crack unit which successfully completed the Tunisian, Sicilian, Italian, French, and Dutch campaigns, and distinguished itself in the battle of the Bulge from 17 to 31 December 1944. In the evening of 17 December, when the division was in the vicinity of Reims, it was called out as a reinforcement by the Allied High Command; 24 hours later, under extremely severe climatic conditions, the division had assumed positions in the region about Werbomont. Advancing toward the Ambleve and Salm, it opened a corridor and kept contact with elements of four American Divisions trapped in and about St Vith, and by its magnificent courage, raised the morale of the units concerned. It prevented an enemy thrust in the north flank of the pocket created by von Rundstedt's offensive and thus saved the town of Liege and its approaches from another enemy occupation.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 2086, 3 April 1946, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The 82d United States Airborne Division, with its attached units, after having delivered a marvelous counter-offensive, thrust along the Salm and Ambleve, and after having withstood repeated attacks of the best German units, put up a stubborn resistance to all hostile measures. It progressed, in spite of the added difficulty of cold weather and a deep fall of snow, to the German frontier, capturing 2,500 prisoners, 5 of which were Battalion Commanders. Some deeds were extremely valorous, since its table of equipment presented a serious handicap, in not being able to utilize heavy equipment meant to support them in action like a normal division. For 23 days, under

With its valor enhancing the traditional spirit of the Allied airborne troops, it rendered immense services to Belgium and to the Allied cause, in establishing bases necessary for a new drive against the enemy and the Rhine.

A magnificent group, whose brilliant operational successes during the period from 20 August 1944 to 10 February 1945, while fighting with or in support of the 2d Armored Division (French), impel admiration. Boldly thrusting out deep reconnaissances east of the Mouldre around Crespierres and up to the Moselle near Charmes, it established a bridgehead and held it all alone. Toward Luneville and Baccarat, it engaged in protective and advance guard missions; first at Andelot and then from the Marne to the Moselle and in the La Mortagne area. It took the village of Mont, overran Vaucourt and reached the Emmersville, Gieslautern, Wadgassen line, where it held out stubbornly in spite of violent German counterattacks on 31 December 1944 and 1 January 1945. During the course of these operations, the 106th Cavalry Group showed tenacity and spirited operating efficiency of the highest praise. Never letting up in its drive, even when it had to battle against a determined enemy superior in numbers, it carried out all its assigned missions, seeking contact which the enemy was attempting to elude. This unit demonstrated the finest military attributes and incomparable battle attainments.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 873, 24 June 1945, as amended by Resolution No. 469, 18 February 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

Outstanding for its devotion to duty and fighting spirit, the 106th Cavalry Group successfully accomplished all missions with which it was entrusted from 5 to 20 August 1944, in cooperation with the 2d French Armored Division. On 8 October 1944, in particular, on the outskirts of Mons, three of its squadrons for more than 6 hours engaged an infantry regiment, which was supported by artillery, engineers and tanks, and inflicted heavy casualties. It took 218 prisoners and captured 40 vehicles. In a bold attack on 12 August 1944, on the flanks of an organized and determined enemy, it made a great contribution in the Caen-Falaise sector to the advance of the XV Corps easterly to the Seine. The esprit de corps and the heroism, both individual and collective, demonstrated by the 106th U. S. Cavalry Group exemplify the highest military traditions.

(Attached Infantry units are listed under Organic Division in par. 1 and attached nondivisional units are listed in numerical sequence in this paragraph)

In a brilliant military operation of four days, the 113th Cavalry Group progressed 130 miles on a front of 20 miles, crossing Belgium between Charleroi and Brussels, in order to reach the Albert Canal and the Meuse in the Tongres area, on a mission of combat reconnaissance, without the continuous support of the other combat units of the XIX Corps, who were temporarily immobilized because of the lack of gasoline. In spite of the unknown position of the enemy, the danger of being cut off from their Corps or immobilized in enemy territory because of the lack of fuel, the firm resolution of the 113th Cavalry Group to carry on its mission was never shaken for an instant. The bravery and intelligence with which this advance was effected permitted the Allies to seize the Albert Canal line rapidly, reconnoiter the fort of Eben-Emael, the Meuse, and thus free from German domination an area of about 2,500 square miles, including hundreds of Belgian villages and towns.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 3865, 28 April 1947, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

By a brave maneuver, the 113th Cavalry Group, under the XIX Corps, entered into the combat sector of the VII Corps and cleared a path, while contending with the stubborn resistance of the enemy on a particularly unfavorable terrain for mechanized cavalry operations. In spite of the difficulty of the mission, the presence of two important obstacles, the Albert Canal and the Meuse, and of being separated from the XIX Corps, the 113th Cavalry Group, operating with bravery and confidence, cleared the east bank of the Meuse and thus made possible the construction of a bridge, its crossing by the 30th Infantry Division, and the attack which ensued toward the northeast to skirt the defensive works of the enemy on the Meuse.

On the second day, it demonstrated the finest qualities of skill in maneuvering and contributed to the success of the action of this group, especially the annihilation of important enemy forces in the region of Montelmar. Under the forceful direction of an energetic chief and with remarkable daring, it preceded its group by more than 180 kilometers without hesitation. It occupied, by surprise, important positions and a network of communications in this region, inflicting on the enemy important losses in matériel, and captured more than 2,500 prisoners, three of whom were generals. During this period, it worked in close liaison with the local resistance elements and coordinated the activity of the Marquis who were associated with it.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 2086, 3 April 1946, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

A crack unit which successfully completed the Tunisian, Sicilian, Italian, French, and Dutch campaigns, and distinguished itself in the Battle of the Bulge from 17 to 31 December 1944. In the evening of 17 December, when the division was in the vicinity of Reims, it was called out as a reinforcement by the Allied High Command. 24 hours later, under extremely severe climatic conditions, the division had assumed positions in the region of Werbomont. Advancing toward the Ambleve and Salm, it opened a corridor and kept contact with elements of four American divisions trapped in and about St. Vith, and by its magnificent courage, raised the morale of the units concerned. It prevented an enemy thrust in the north flank of the pocket created by Von Rundstedt's offensive and thus saved the town of Liege and its approaches from another enemy occupation.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 2086, 3 April 1946, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

The 82d United States Airborne Division, with its attached units, after having delivered a marvelous counteroffensive thrust along the Salm and Ambleve, and after having withstood repeated attacks of the best German units, put up a stubborn resistance to all hostile measures. It progressed, in spite of the added difficulty of cold weather and a deep fall of snow to the German frontier, capturing 2,500 prisoners, 5 of which were battalion commanders. Some deeds were extremely valorous, since its table of equipment presented a serious handicap, in not being able to utilize heavy equipment, meant to support it in action, like a normal division. For 23 days, under the most trying circumstances, the veterans of the 82d Airborne Division did not cease to be an example of heroic courage, distinguishing their combat with several brilliant actions. With its valor enhancing the traditional spirit of the Allied airborne troops, it has rendered immense services to Belgium and to the Allied cause, in establishing bases necessary for a new drive against the enemy and the Rhine.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 267, 22 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A unit animated by the finest military qualities. It demonstrated an unshaken will not to yield to the enemy in the course of violent battles which developed from 12 to 14 November 1944 at Sanry-Sur-Neid. Capturing this town on 12 November, it had to meet, one after the other, six furious counterattacks carried out by doubled forces which brought the enemy, after street battles, to the interior of the town. It remained in possession of the town by totally destroying the attacking enemy forces. It inflicted more than 500 casualties, including those killed, wounded or prisoners.

737th Tank Bn

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH SILVER STAR, awarded under Decision No. 246, 15 July 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A battalion animated by the greatest qualities of courage and combativeness. It distinguished itself in a remarkable manner during the offensive operations in the Mortain sector during the period between 10 and 13 August 1944. It was given the mission of reestablishing contact with units momentarily encircled and, heedless of losses, broke through the enemy lines and was successful in extricating a battalion that was in a critical situation. Counterattacked in turn by forces greatly superior in number, notably by SS elements, it valiantly bore the blow, thus making possible the arrival of reinforcements, which, after 5 hours of furious fighting, broke the German resistance.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 332, 17 September 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A magnificent unit, tireless and full of bravery. During 1944, in spite of sharp resistance on the part of the enemy, it performed over 2,900 photographic missions at low altitude in unprotected planes. This action brought to the Allied Command the elements essential to the success of the landing and then of the Allied ground operations. This unit facilitated the rapid destruction of enemy communication lines and military installations. By its ability and spirit of sacrifice, it contributed greatly to the liberation of French territory.

BELGIAN CROIX DE GUERRE, awarded under Decree No. 1392, 20 November 1945, by Charles, Prince of Belgium, Regent of the Kingdom, with the following citation:

Exceptional heroism was displayed in combat during the period of 6th of June 1944, to the 30th of September 1944. During this time, the IX Tactical Air Command had the enormous task to assure the air-land cooperation for the benefit of the ground forces of the American and Allied Armies, at the moment of their victorious advance, which, from the Normandy beaches, led them to the initial phases of the liberation of Belgium. All along the hard period of combat operations, the intrepid pilots of the IX Tactical Air Command operated from bases situated immediately in the rear of the advance echelons of the ground forces, contributed strongly in opening a way for the land units in march, destroying the enemy centers of communication, harassing the concentrations of troops, machine-gunning and bombarding the columns of tanks and sweeping the sky of the enemy planes. The pursuit-plane bombardiers of the IX Tactical Air Command, in particular, displayed exceptional technical cleverness and science of combat at the time of their operations above Belgium. Due to their brilliant qualities and to their perseverance, they contributed in a large part to the rout of the enemy forces in Belgium.

Exceptional services were performed from the 16th of December 1944 to the 25th of January 1945. Its staff settled at Verviers and its tactical groups were distributed on the Belgian airfields or on airfields in the north of France. The IX Tactical Air Command bore all the weight of the Ardennes counter-offensive in December 1944. Without stopping, it sent its planes away on reconnaissance missions, in very perilous atmospheric conditions, directed formations of pursuit planes and pursuit-plane bombardiers against the enemy, throwing, ceaselessly, its intrepid pilots against the concentrations of troops, the communications, the columns of tanks, and the enemy lines of supply. During these operations, it succeeded in destroying a great quantity of planes, troops, and matériel of the enemy. The increasing efforts of the pilots and of the heroic airmen of the IX Tactical Air Command, as well as the heroism and military perspicacity of their chiefs, contributed in a large measure in pushing back and defeating the enemy.

the infantry columns and machine-gunning the tanks. They inflicted irreparable and decisive losses on the enemy at St. Vith and Vielsalm and Houffalize. The unceasing and heroic efforts of all the officers, warrant officers, and soldiers, from all the units of the XXIX Tactical Air Command, permitted this command to organize and execute the missions which were assigned to it. They contributed in a large part, because of their military virtue, to the liberation of Belgium.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 44, 8 August 1944, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

During April, May, and June 1944, it performed a very important part in the preparation and support of the Allied offensive actions which opened on 11 May 1944, in central Italy. It attacked the rear lines of the large opposing German forces in order to aid the French Army and particularly distinguished itself by the following actions: (1) On 12 May 1944, participated in the attack and destruction of an enemy division command post; (2) on 18 May 1944, attacked bridges and important communications lines; (3) on 24, 25, and 30 May 1944, it destroyed bridges completely, preventing any movement of enemy troops. Within that period, during which it flew more than 5,000 sorties, it dropped upon the enemy more than 10,000 tons of bombs, downed several fighter planes, and lost only 20 planes to the enemy due to antiaircraft. Skilled and formidable fighters, their results testify to the efficiency and tactical skill of the personnel and to the high competence and the experienced technique of the command.

missions and dropping over 13,000 tons of explosives on vital enemy centers which were stubbornly defended by numerous fighter planes and by a concentrated and murderous antiaircraft defense. In addition, it boldly parachuted supplies for the use of the French forces of the interior. By its sustained and effective action, it thus contributed to the collapse of the common enemy and to the liberation of France.

FRENCH CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM, awarded under Decision No. 332, 17 September 1946, by the President of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, with the following citation:

A remarkable reconnaissance unit, which was present on every Mediterranean battlefield from December 1942 to July 1944. The 111th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron contributed greatly to the destruction of enemy personnel with the number of reconnaissance missions executed over enemy lines in spite of heavy antiaircraft fire, with the value and accuracy of the information gathered, and with the adjustment of friendly artillery fire while in flight. Its excellent work made itself felt in the most critical situations in the battle in the Mediterranean Theater of Operations, notably in the early part of 1943. It protected ship convoys by taking bearings and destroying enemy submarines. During the campaign in Sicily, in 1943, at the time of the landing at Salerno and especially during the campaign in Italy, it gave excellent protection to the victorious advance of the French Expeditionary Corps from the Garigliano to Siena. It performed a series of brilliant feats of arms, the principal ones which were during the break-through north of Cassino. It destroyed enemy communication lines and numerous bridges, among others, that of Pontecorvo which was of capital importance, before and after the large scale offensive against the Hitler line. Moreover, in the midst of combat, it trained the French reconnaissance group 2/33 of which profited by methods that had proven their effectiveness. Through the courage and ability of its crews during the course of 2,350 missions, totaling 9,250 flying hours, it contributed greatly to the collapse of the Axis forces in the Mediterranean Theater.

and France. Due to the skill and courage of its pilots, many vital enemy objectives were destroyed in the break-through of the sector of the lower Garigliano. Their action permitted the French troops to accomplish their mission which was to capture Rome. On 20 May 1944, it dealt severe blows to the enemy communications system between Vallecorsa, Frosinone, and Ceperano. This prevented the enemy transports from escaping the combined Franco-American attack. By murderous attacks of its fighter-bomber Thunderbolts on the day of the invasion of the south of France, it collaborated brilliantly with the French troops, in spite of the desperate resistance of the enemy. From 20 January to 9 February 1945, it participated in the reduction of the pocket of Colmar, permitting the First French Army to drive the enemy from the left bank of the Rhine. This unit is cited as an example of successful work and continued collaboration between the French and American units.

In a bitter struggle, conducted often in the ratio of 10 to 1, it shot down 51 and 39 enemy planes, respectively, in the skies of France on 25 August 1944 and 12 September 1944. While on missions to machine-gun and bomb military objectives, it caused the additional destruction of 560 military transports, 490 locomotives, 1,120 cars, 14 bridges and 609 factories and military buildings. It greatly contributed to the collapse of the enemy forces and to the liberation of French soil.

It distinguished itself brilliantly during the period from 11 February 1944 to 15 January 1945, by performing numerous and perilous escort missions involving machine-gun fire on ground targets and dropping equipment by parachute. The principal builder of Allied air supremacy had, by 18 November 1944, shot down the impressive number of 426 enemy planes and inaugurated new combat tactics by machine-gunning ground targets in the heart of Germany. By its military valor and its remarkable courage, it hastened the liberation of French territory.

An elite group which entered the operations on 20 October 1943, until 1 March 1944, and protected the extensive strategical bombardment of the 8th Air Force. It established the magnificent record of never permitting the loss of an escorted bomber by an enemy plane. From 1 March 1944, to 6 June 1944, this group attacked all important centers of communication in northern France, especially the bridges of the Seine River and of the Loire River and the airports of Gael, Saint Omer, and Abbeville. It actively participated in the battle of Normandy and in the surrender of St.-Lo and Vire, including the capture of 20,000 German soldiers in the south of the Loire River. From 1 until 10 January 1945, which was a very critical period, it performed a great number of very successful missions in direct support of the 2d Armored Division. During that difficult period, it brought down 20 enemy planes and damaged 6 others.

From 11 to 15 August 1944, it neutralized the Falaise pocket with a deluge of fire and steel, always keeping planes in the air, in spite of difficulties of all kinds. On 17 August, it protected the French 2d Armored Division and opened for it the road to the capital. A magnificent fighter unit, full of dash, tenacious and brave beyond all praise. It distinguished itself brilliantly during the campaign of Normandy on 29, 30, and 31 July 1944, by continuously providing air cover and protection for the shock columns of four armored divisions. In spite of losses and enemy anti-aircraft fire which was very dangerous by reason of a low ceiling, it contributed greatly to the success of the decisive break-through of the American First Army to the west of St.-Lo. During these 3 days, it attacked numerous targets on the ground, destroying 94 tanks and over 300 vehicles, and stopped the enemy attack by destroying 13 Focke-Wulf 190's and Messerschmitt 109's. Besides, in response to the appeals of the French forces of the interior, in Brittany, it furnished aid and protection. By its presence in the sky above Brittany, it gave encouragement to the resistance forces in the peninsula.

A splendid unit, distinguished for its exceptional heroism, military valor and profound sense of duty. Its mission was to transport by plane-towed gliders, airborne troops charged with invading Normandy. It accomplished this dangerous, delicate, and essential task with sureness, precision, and speed, on the nights of 5 to 6 June 1944, and during the next 2 days. In spite of violent enemy resistance and numerous ground obstacles, it attained the specific ground objectives, with very light losses, thanks to the ability of the pilots. It made it possible for the airborne troops to regroup rapidly and inject timely confusion into the enemy zone exposed to the frontal attack of the bulk of the landing forces. Through the courage and ability of its pilots, it executed its mission brilliantly and contributed materially to the collapse of the Atlantic wall and to the liberation of France.

again distinguished itself from 20 to 28 August 1944, during the famous dash of the American 3d Army through France. It provided constant supplies of all kinds for the armored units dashing like arrows in pursuit of the enemy who was falling back of Metz. It piloted unprotected planes without armor or armament and landed on fields that had barely been liberated which were still full of mines, obstacles and shell holes. The crews of the 434th Troop Carrier Group completed 520 sorties and transported by night and by day in all sorts of weather about 3 million liters of gasoline, heavy oil and ammunition, and evacuated about 2,000 seriously wounded men from the front. Through their energy, their magnificent skill as aviators, and their coolness, these crews made a great contribution to the rapid liberation of the soil of France.

A magnificent formation which was animated with splendid courage and which gave proof of exceptional heroism and military valor. It distinguished itself brilliantly on the nights of 5 June and 7 June 1944, when the Allies landed. It successfully executed its delicate and dangerous mission on which depended the success of the airborne troop attack on the enemy rear lines in Normandy. It piloted planes with gliders without armor or armament. It arrived over the ground objectives in close formation, thus making it possible for the airborne troops to regroup rapidly and open combat immediately with all their means, in spite of a sharp enemy resistance. Through the courage and ability of its pilots, it made a remarkable contribution to the initial effort for the liberation of French territory.

The airborne invasion troops were transported in two missions. With unarmed and unprotected planes, towing heavy gliders, it took off from its base in Italy and crossed the Ligurian Sea. In spite of sharp enemy resistance, it crossed the coast of Provence and flew deep into the country in close formation, landing parachutists and gliders in a rather narrow zone which facilitated their essential regrouping for the success of the operation. I. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, Bul. 22, WD, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, Bul. 11, WD, 1942), the following unit is cited under the provisions of AR 260-15 in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 3d Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, is cited for exceptionally outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in crossing the Roer River and seizing a position in the vicinity of Stockheim, Germany, on 23 and 24 February 1945. This battalion, having accomplished the difficult crossing prior to other elements of its corps, and having suffered heavy casualties from enemy fire, in addition to personnel and individual weapons lost when several assault boats overturned in the torrential stream, attacked and seized an enemy-held trench system near the bank of the river. An immediate distribution of captured arms and ammunition was made to all unarmed personnel. The battalion, without hesitation, continued the attack through wooded areas containing enemy-held trenches and emplacements and on to the dominant terrain northwest of Stockheim, where a perimeter defensive position was organized. On 24 February, completely isolated and surrounded, this unit repelled six determined counterattacks by superior forces, which included tanks and self-propelled guns supported by intense artillery and mortar fire. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy. On being reached and relieved by other elements of the regiment, the determined battalion seized and secured three other enemy-held towns in rapid succession, further securing the exposed right flank of the division and corps and contributing directly to the rapid advance to the east of other attacking troops. Throughout this heroic action, the men of the 3d Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, distinguished themselves by great determination, outstanding aggressiveness, high combat efficiency, and indomitable courage in keeping with the highest traditions of the Army of the United States.

DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY
WASHINGTON 25, D. C., 5 December 1947

INDUSTRIAL MOBILIZATION PLANNING FIELD UNIT—Established..... Section I
BATTLE HONORS—Citation of units..... II

I. INDUSTRIAL MOBILIZATION PLANNING FIELD UNIT.—Effective as of 1 November 1947, the Industrial Mobilization Planning Field Unit was established at the Columbus General Distribution Depot, United States Army, Ohio, as a class II activity under the control of the Chief of Transportation.

[AG 323.31 (13 Nov 47)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, Bul. 22, WD, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, Bul. 11, WD, 1942), the following units are cited under the provisions of AR 260-15 in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 2d Battalion, 119th Infantry Regiment, and the following attached units:
Company A, 66th Armored Regiment;

2d Platoon, Antitank Company, 119th Infantry Regiment.

are cited for exceptionally outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 2 and 3 April 1945 in the vicinity of Pivitschied, Germany. Fatigued from previous action and badly in need of rest, late on 2 April the battalion launched a night attack up the steep and wooded slope of Teutoberger Wald, a formidable natural barrier, to seize and secure a pass through the enemy held obstacle and permit passage of elements of the 2d Armored Division in its drive to the Elbe River. The attack was launched in a cold, driving rain against a well-equipped and stubborn enemy force fighting from a cleverly prepared defensive position. After bitter hand-to-hand fighting accompanied by intense enemy fire, the battalion seized a position on the crest of the ridge and there turned back repeated counterattacks by the determined enemy. On 3 April, the battalion launched a combined infantry-tank attack, and, penetrating the final positions, inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy and seized a town on the enemy-held side of the ridge. In this heroic action, which contributed greatly to the subsequent rapid advance to the Elbe River, the men of the 2d Battalion, 119th Infantry Regiment, and attached units, distinguished themselves by outstanding aggressiveness, determination, and indomitable courage in keeping with the highest traditions of the Army of the United States.

I. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Technical Sergeant Dellyn A. Farmer (Army serial No. R3157111), Ordnance Department, United States Army, a member of the 693d Ordnance Company (Aviation) (Pursuit), distinguished himself by gallantry in action at Nichols Field, Rizal, Philippine Islands, on 9 December 1941, when a soldier in his platoon was seriously wounded by gunfire from enemy aircraft. With total disregard for personal safety, Sergeant Farmer carried the man for a distance of about 400 yards, crossing open terrain subjected to intense gunfire by enemy airplanes, to a ravine where medical attention was available. This unselfish act of heroic conduct on the part of Sergeant Farmer reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Captain Henry Schipper, Jr., O270166, Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by gallantry in action in the Southwest Pacific Area from 8 to 23 December 1941. As commanding officer of the 2d Battalion, 72d Infantry Regiment, Philippine Army, Captain Schipper displayed unusual fortitude and resourcefulness in directing his unit in the defense of Luzon, Philippine Islands, against the overwhelming forces of the Japanese invaders. Moving his battalion in to Urdaneta, upon the outbreak of hostilities, he engaged in 2 weeks of intensive training. When enemy artillery pounded the town behind him and set it afire and units on both flanks withdrew under the furious enemy onslaught, he gallantly led his men in a determined defense of their forward position. As he rushed a hostile machine gun, which was causing heavy casualties among his troops, he was shot and killed by the foe. Through his inspiring leadership, tactical ability, and unremitting devotion to duty, Captain Schipper made a conspicuous contribution to the heroic defense of the Philippine Islands.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Silver Star (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named officer:

Captain Robert C. Foster, O1011320, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action in the vicinity of St. Vith, Belgium, between 17 and 21 December 1944. When, as commanding officer of Company A, 31st Tank Battalion, he was leading his company toward the village and rounding a bend in the road, he discovered a German infantry column accompanied by three tanks. He engaged in a fierce fire fight at close range, in which 50 German infantrymen were killed and the 3 tanks were destroyed. In later enemy attacks, Captain Foster moved (dismounted) from tank to tank and directed his company's fire, which destroyed two more tanks and an 88-mm gun. He continued to lead and personally direct the fires of his tank company during the next 3 days and personally led a counter-attack which destroyed an enemy penetration. On 21 December, Captain Foster was killed by a German artillery barrage while standing on the deck of his tank directing artillery fire. Captain Foster's courage and gallantry were an inspiration to his men in the hard-fought battle for St. Vith.

II.—SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Captain Thurlow W. Davison, 62688, United States Navy, displayed gallantry in action in the Philippines on 29 and 30 April 1942. Volunteering to command the guide launch, he demonstrated exceptional courage and resourcefulness in directing the hazardous and difficult task of sweeping a contact mine field south of Corregidor. While the operation was under attack from a Japanese airplane, he skillfully directed several passes of the launch through the area. By his courageous leadership and unremitting devotion to duty, Captain Davison made it possible to accomplish the subsequent necessary movement of navy craft and army personnel.

Staff Sergeant Felipe P. Gargaritano (Army serial No. 6739271) (then private), Cavalry, Philippine Scouts, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action in the Philippine Islands on 23 December 1941. When the 26th Cavalry, Philippine Scouts, was withdrawing from Damortis, La Union, Luzon, Sergeant Gargaritano and a companion were selected to cover a bridge with machine-gun fire over which the regiment had just passed and blown up. When enemy troops appeared on the other side, he opened fire, killing several and forcing others to run for cover. He continued to fire until the barrel became so hot the gun failed to function and his assistant was struck by enemy mortar-shell fragments. He attempted to find a better position from which to continue his fire, but was forced to withdraw because of heavy enemy machine-gun and mortar fire. During the ensuing action, Sergeant Gargaritano was wounded in the left thigh, but managed to rejoin his regiment. Through his gallant actions and devotion to duty in giving the regiment time to withdraw, Sergeant Gargaritano made a noteworthy contribution to the heroic defense of the Philippine Islands.

Private First Class Sydney C. Stern (Army serial No. 12128004), Signal Corps, Army of the United States, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action, on 6 August 1944, while commanding a signal detachment from the 90th Infantry Division attached to a task force assigned the mission of capturing Mayenne, France. Busily engaged in establishing communications for the defense of the town, after its capture, he observed enemy troops launching a counterattack through a street which was not covered by friendly troops. Immediately deploying his men, he led them in an attack, which completely frustrated that portion of the enemy's attack. Private Stern's aggressive action, courage, and inspiring leadership reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

When approaching a heavily defended target at Dessau, Germany, Sergeant Fuller's aircraft received severe damage from enemy fighter attacks and the order was given to bail out. Upon discovering that the copilot's parachute had been damaged by enemy action, Sergeant Fuller, with complete disregard for his personal safety, volunteered to carry the copilot on his back. Although the overwhelming enemy attack rendered the position untenable, he rallied the men still remaining in his company and proceeded to evacuate the wounded, despite exposure to bombing attacks. I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers:

Colonel Russell J. Minty, O15201, Air Corps, United States Army. February 1944 to April 1945.

Rear Admiral Albert G. Noble, 10842, United States Navy. 22 to 29 April 1944 and 24 March to 4 May 1945.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Offa S. McCollum, O239683 (then major), Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy at Moron, Bataan Province, Philippine Islands, on 16 January 1942. During an attack in the regimental sector which he commanded, Colonel McCollum (1st Philippine Division), demonstrated outstanding courage and leadership in directing operations against the foe. His exemplary conduct and total disregard for his own safety were in constant evidence as he inspired his untrained and high-strung troops to assault and capture their objective. By his gallant action and devotion to duty, Colonel McCollum fully upheld the finest traditions of the military service.

First Lieutenant Gerald E. Steinberg, O1322483, Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 359th Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action, on 12 November 1944, near Petite-Hettange, France. In a counter-attack launched to prevent the enemy from consolidating certain gains, his company was stopped by heavy enemy fire from a hidden machine-gun position directly ahead, while mortar and artillery fire fell on the men pinned down in an open field. Lieutenant Steinberg jumped suddenly to his feet and, starting a lone attack on the machine-gun position, exhorted the men to follow. Charging on toward the position through the hail of bullets, he was struck by a direct hit of artillery fire. Making the supreme sacrifice in his heroic effort, Lieutenant Steinberg succeeded in his mission. The men, inspired by his example, carried his assault on to the enemy position, destroyed it, and thereby eliminated the enemy defense.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers:

Lieutenant Colonel Jackson E. Shirley, O33977 (then major), Cavalry, United States Army, as executive officer, of the 2d Squadron, 5th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on Los Negros Island, Admiralty Group, from 29 February to 3 March 1944. During three consecutive nights of attack by a vastly, numerically superior enemy force, he displayed outstanding disregard for personal safety, which steadied the personnel of a command in initial engagement with the enemy. During a period of 5 hours on the night of 3 March 1944, when the key personnel of Squadron Headquarters were subjected to a vicious attack, which surrounded and isolated the command post, his heroism in exposing himself to hurl grenades at the enemy and to fire direct into them was largely responsible for holding at bay and finally driving off a determined enemy. Colonel Shirley's heroic conduct was largely responsible for the success of the squadron in holding its beachhead and capturing the strategic Momote airstrip.

Second Lieutenant Ricardo C. Zablan, O21297, Infantry, Philippine Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action at Bataan on 28 January 1942. During an encounter with superior enemy forces at Barrio Bangad, Orion, Bataan, Lieutenant Zablan, platoon leader of the 1st Platoon, Company K, 32d Infantry, 31st Division, Philippine Army, displayed marked courage and resourcefulness in directing the action of his platoon. During the fighting he was wounded severely, making his right arm useless, but he remained with his men, rendering valiant service by firing his rifle with his left hand. When ordered to withdraw, he directed the orderly withdrawal of his troops before reporting to an aid station for treatment. Through his gallant action and devotion to duty, Lieutenant Zablan made a distinct contribution to the heroic defense of Bataan.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, Bul. 40, WD, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, Bul. 54, WD, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier General George R. Acheson, O17021 (then colonel), United States Army. March 1942 to May 1943. (This award supersedes the awards of all Army Commendation Ribbons to Brigadier General Acheson for service during the same period, or any portion thereof.)
- Colonel Michael Buckley, Jr., O15196, General Staff Corps (Field Artillery), United States Army. July 1942 to March 1944.

- Lieutenant Colonel Howard W. Greer, O35426, Infantry, United States Army. 7 October 1944 to 23 February 1945.

Colonel Irvine C. Scudder, O7393, Infantry, United States Army. 4 March to 17 May 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, Bul. 40, WD, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, Bul. 54, WD, 1942), the Legion of Merit (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named officer:

Brigadier General Alfred A. Kessler, Jr., O14903, United States Army. December 1944 to September 1947.

First Lieutenant Burnet R. Maybank, Jr., O755084, Air Corps, Army of the United States. April to July 1944.

VI. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (Bul. 8, WD, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class Dale T. Hunter (Army serial No. 15250761), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Headquarters Company, 33d Combat Team, on 5 August 1947, displayed heroism at Madden Lake, Canal Zone. When the training boat in which he and several other soldiers were riding suddenly flooded and sank, he helped several of the men to grasp floating boxes and cans for support in the rough waters. Then, swimming to exposed tree stumps some distance away, he suddenly heard one of the men call for help. Immediately he swam from his place of safety. Upon reaching the stricken comrade, he calmed him, kept him afloat, and brought him another floating can for support. Private Hunter then turned to swim back to the tree stumps, but, completely exhausted by his efforts in the wind-roughened waters, he was unable to reach safety, and drowned, thus making the supreme sacrifice in his heroic efforts and demonstrating soldierly qualities in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. 3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, Bul. 3, WD, 1944), the Bronze Star Medal (third Oak-Leaf Cluster) for meritorious service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named officer:

Colonel Alfred A. McNamee, O11236, Infantry, United States Army. May 1942 to May 1943.

VIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, Bul. 3, WD, 1944), the Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Lieutenant Leon Jean Boghossian, French Army, rendered valiant services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States from July 1943 to October 1944. During this period, as a member of the resistance forces in France, he aided in the organization of a strong Maquis group and personally directed sabotage efforts which severely hampered German troop movements. Later, he fought with the advance elements of an American regiment. Lieutenant Boghossian's conduct was a credit to France and a material contribution to the realization of the military objectives of the Allied forces.

Colonel Alfred G. Karger, O266810 (then lieutenant colonel), Chemical Warfare Service, Army of the United States, a member of the 8th Infantry Division, on 6 December 1944, distinguished himself by heroic achievement at Hurtgen Forest in Germany. Amid heavy enemy counterattacks, and continually and fearlessly exposing himself to the hostile fire on personal reconnaissance missions, he supervised movements of the chemical units to provide the best possible fire support against the furious day and night German counterattacks. Demonstrating his outstanding courage and leadership, Colonel Karger contributed substantially to the success of the forces in beating off the attacks and in holding the important positions at Bergstein.

Private First Class Clayton F. Ligman (Army serial No. 36283251), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, a member of the 2831st Engineer Combat Battalion, displayed heroism in France on 25 January 1945. During a concentrated enemy artillery barrage, Private Ligman, with a comrade, left his place of safety to aid a wounded man. While shells exploded nearby, he and his companion reached the wounded man and carried him from the area to a place of safety, where they administered first aid. Private Ligman's courage and disregard for his own personal safety in order to aid another soldier reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Captain Manuel F. Segura, O25551 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Philippine Army, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in the Philippine Islands on 20 December 1942. During the height of an attack on the strong Japanese garrison at Toledo, Cebu, a messenger was wounded while delivering a message to Captain Segura, an officer of the Cebu Area Command. Captain Segura, with complete disregard for personal danger, carried the wounded soldier across open rice fields in the face of heavy enemy rifle, machine-gun, and mortar fire to the advance command post. In the course of the action, he made two other trips over the same hazardous route, carrying back with him two wounded soldiers and vital information affecting the conduct of the battle. Captain Segura's display of courage and heroism was a source of great inspiration to the officers and men of the Cebu resistance movement and upheld the highest traditions of the military service.

Private First Class George E. Young (Army serial No. 39900656), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, a member of an infantry assault boat crew engaged in an assault crossing of the Rhine River, displayed heroic action in Germany on 26 March 1945. After completing his assigned trips, Private Young again braved heavy hostile fire to race his boat out to midstream and rescue two infantrymen, whose boat had been destroyed by enemy fire and who were drifting downstream into enemy waters. The outstanding courage displayed by Private Young reflects credit on himself and the military service.

I. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD, 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Brigadier General Macario Peralta, Jr., O1527 (then lieutenant colonel), Philippine Army, displayed gallantry in action, on 3 May 1942, while serving as Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, 61st Division (Philippine Army), on Panay, Philippine Islands. He demonstrated conspicuous courage and resourcefulness in leading a patrol deep into Japanese-held territory to obtain information concerning the disposition of enemy forces. As a result of data obtained from a prisoner captured in a hand-to-hand skirmish with an enemy foraging detail, General Peralta was later able to prepare plans to effectively meet an attack launched against the division's position. General Peralta's courage and devotion to duty reflect the highest traditions of the military service.

Sergeant Joseph J. Pogonowski (Army serial No. 35059106) (then corporal), Infantry, Army of the United States, as light machine-gun section leader, Company K, 134th Infantry Regiment, on 26 April 1945, displayed gallantry in action near Kehnert, Germany. He was on guard at his outpost when an enemy force of SS Troopers crossed the Elbe River in a predawn assault and attacked his position. Immediately, he gave the command to open fire. When the number one gunner was hit, Sergeant Pogonowski fired the weapon himself against the attackers. Seeing a German lieutenant waving his handkerchief and advancing as if to surrender, he watched him sharply. When the enemy officer tried to hurl a grenade into the position, Sergeant Pogonowski quickly killed him. Refusing to leave his position and inflicting heavy losses on the enemy force, Sergeant Pogonowski did much to frustrate an enemy attempt to evacuate large quantities of arms and personnel across the Elbe River.

II. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, Bul. 40, WD, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, Bul. 54, WD, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service during the period indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Paul W. McCollum, O315283, Infantry, Army of the United States. 14 June to 6 October 1944.

and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, Bul. 54, WD, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Colonel George R. Carey, O17587, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army. May 1945 to June 1947.

Lieutenant Colonel John H. Hay, Jr., O25290, Infantry, United States Army. 7 December 1941 to May 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Lieutenant Colonel Hay, for service from 19 February to 10 March 1945, as published in General Orders 26, Headquarters 10th Mountain Division, 15 March 1945.)

Lieutenant Colonel John R. Hellams, Jr., O277819 (then major), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. 21 October 1942 to 12 November 1943.

Colonel Robert J. Hoffman, O8646, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to April 1942.

Colonel William F. MacFee, O404827, Medical Corps, Army of the United States. October 1943 to February 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles F. Mitchim, O20577, General Staff Corps (Corps of Engineers), United States Army. May 1942 to August 1943.

Master Sergeant Walter A. Rube (Army serial No. 20261874), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States. March 1944 to September 1945.

Captain Jean P. Teas, Jr., O294204, Ordnance Department, Army of the United States. January 1943 through December 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel John D. Van Geem, O294126 (then major), Ordnance Department, Army of the United States. June 1942 to December 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Ellis W. Williamson, O34484, Infantry, United States Army. 10 October 1944 to 23 February 1945.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, Bul. 40, WD, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. Colonel Wilbur E. Dunkelberg, O12206, Infantry, United States Army. March to December 1942.

IV. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (Bul. 8, WD, 1926), the Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Moody W. Hall, O798493, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 6 September 1946.

V. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (Bul. 8, WD, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named enlisted man:

Master Sergeant Cecil B. Steele (Army serial No. 1976702), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, a member of the Shanghai Detachment, Station Complement, Army Advisory Group, distinguished himself by heroism, on 9 April 1947, in combatting a serious 15-hour fire which threatened to destroy valuable Government supplies and equipment at United States Army installations in Shanghai, China. At great personal risk, he voluntarily climbed a wet and slippery turntable ladder, which was in poor condition, to a height of approximately 70 feet, carrying with him a heavy pneumatic drill. At this precarious height and from an insecure support, Sergeant Steele drilled a hole through a heavily constructed brick wall. Despite flames, smoke, and gasses, he continued to enlarge the hole until it was large enough to get at the fire, thereby enabling firemen to effectively combat the blaze which had been raging unchecked. As a result of Sergeant Steele's heroic act, several hundred thousand dollars worth of Government property was saved.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (Bul. 8, WD, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Technician Fifth Grade Michael J. Halpin (Army serial No. 32202789) (then private first class), Signal Corps, Army of the United States, on 8 May 1945, without regard for his own safety, volunteered at Munich, Germany, to rescue civilians from a dangerous zone where exploding ammunition had caused nearby tank cars to burst and pour blazing gasoline over the yards. He made repeated trips into the flaming area to rescue the dazed and wounded people. Technician Halpin's action reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

VI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, Bul. 3, WD, 1944), the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Alfred W. Lawson, O4573674, Air Corps, Army of the United States. August 1942 to May 1945.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, Bul. 3, WD, 1944), the Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named enlisted man:

Private James A. Ryan, Jr. (Army serial No. 13177803), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company D, 502d Parachute Infantry, while acting in the capacity of platoon scout, displayed heroism on 6 June 1944 near Turqueville, France. He was fired upon by an enemy machine-gun outpost as he was crossing a hedgerow. Despite his exposed position, Private Ryan returned the fire and then reported to his platoon leader the location and disposition of the enemy. This information enabled the platoon to dispose of the enemy outpost without casualties. As the platoon continued its advance, Private Ryan resumed his position as scout and was again fired upon by an enemy group from behind.

a hedgerow. Private Ryan, despite a heavy concentration of enemy small-arms fire directed at himself, returned the fire and, disregarding all thought of personal safety, advanced across the open field, firing as he went, to the hedgerow behind which the enemy was situated. Here he courageously and aggressively engaged the enemy group until he was killed. Private Ryan's action enabled his platoon to continue its advance while the enemy fire was directed on himself.

The attack was launched in the zone of Company K, with an enveloping movement around the right flank, which was held by Company L, successfully penetrating the battalion position. Colonel Hensley, commanding officer of Company L, through his perseverance, courage, selflessness, and forceful direction, moving about under heavy rifle, machine-gun, and 88-mm fire, without regard for his own personal safety, organized and successfully launched his company in counterattack, throwing the enemy into complete disorganization and causing them to withdraw in confusion with a great loss of personnel and tanks. The calm courage under heavy fire displayed by Colonel Hensley was an inspiration to his troops and of great importance to the success of the action.

First Lieutenant Joseph Pessutti, O1046608, Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a forward observer of the 1125th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, on 29-30 December 1944, distinguished himself by heroic achievement near Forte de Marmi, Italy. Accompanying a patrol into enemy territory, where they encountered strong enemy resistance and withering fire which inflicted heavy casualties, he radioed artillery forces to fire on the enemy position. Then, despite a severe wound, Lieutenant Pessutti proceeded to lead the men from the precarious position, through icy waters and mine fields in enemy territory, to the safety of friendly lines. Lieutenant Pessutti's leadership and courage are in keeping with highest traditions of the military service.

Major Charles P. Samson, O22204 (then captain), Field Artillery, United States Army, as commander of Battery D, 24th Field Artillery (Philippine Scouts), on 1 March 1942, displayed heroism in action near Bagac, Bataan, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy shelling, he heard a man call for help and immediately left his position to investigate. Seeing a soldier who had been repairing telephone wires severely wounded by shell fire, Major Samson ran to the stricken man and, under the continuing enemy barrage, helped him to safety. Major Samson's personal courage and determination to aid his wounded comrade are in keeping with highest traditions of the military service.

Colonel Rinaldo Van Brunt, O16225 (then brigadier general), Infantry, United States Army. January to August 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Colonel Van Brunt, for service from 29 January to 15 February 1945, as published in General Orders 78. Headquarters United States Forces, European Theater, 1 May 1945.)

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named officer:

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bul. 43, WD 1918), the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named officer:

Major Lester I. Fox, O368002 (then captain), Medical Corps, Army of the United States, on 24 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, during an enemy artillery bombardment of Battery Crockett, where he operated a battalion first-aid station. When a shell crashed through the hoist room wall, setting fire to bedding and equipment and injuring several men, he left his station to aid the wounded. At the same time, assuming command of the battery, Major Fox organized the able-bodied men to beat back the flames which dangerously threatened the powder rooms. Two more shells burst within the battery, wounding most of the remaining men and severely injuring him and destroying his medical kit. Doggedly, he dragged himself about, helping the injured and trying to smother with a blanket the fires raging nearest the powder room doors, when another shell burst and further injured him. Through his outstanding courage and determination, as seen by a rescue detail who later entered to find him semiconscious and still by the doors to the powder room, Major Fox did much to prevent a terrible explosion and loss of life in the battery emplacement.

Accompanying a patrol into enemy territory, where they encountered strong enemy resistance and withering fire which inflicted heavy casualties, he worked to reorganize elements of the patrol. Assisting a severely wounded officer, Sergeant Baldan helped to lead the men from the precarious position, through icy waters in enemy territory and through minefields, to the safety of friendly lines. Under fire of an enemy counterattack supported by tanks, artillery, and heavy mortars, he, with a medical corpsman, reconnoitered a route for casualty evacuation, then led a medical section through an exposed area to an aid station. Later, driving through enemy territory in 2 jeeps to get 12 very seriously wounded men to medical care, Lieutenant Long and the soldier encountered heavy German automatic small-arms fire. Boldly breaking out and relying on speed and evasion, they daringly passed an alerted German outpost. Suddenly a barrage of enemy mortar fire bracketed the vehicle, fragments punctured a tire, and, unable to drive on, the group was overtaken by the enemy patrol and captured. Lieutenant Long, in his determination to aid the casualties, demonstrated outstanding initiative and personal courage that reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

GUY VERNOR HENRY

It is a genuine pleasure to sign this special testimonial of the admiration and esteem of your host of Army comrades.

You are one of the select few who have devoted more than fifty years of active military service to the defense of the United States of America and to the ideals of Freedom and Justice for which this Country stands.

Born in an Army frontier fort, son of an illustrious soldier, you have exemplified by distinguished accomplishments in positions of great responsibility, too numerous to recount here, all that is best in a public servant of the highest type.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named officer:

Brigadier General George H. Weems, O5297, United States Army. May 1946 to September 1947.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named officer:

Major General Walter M. Robertson, O3378, United States Army. March 1946 to September 1947.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded posthumously to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class Richard H. Huffman, Jr. (Army serial No. 36843603), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company I, 71st Infantry Regiment, on 1 May 1945, displayed gallantry in action at the Fern Pass in Austrian Tyrol. After a stubborn withdrawal over the rugged terrain, some of the enemy were surrendering to the lead platoon. Suddenly other Germans opened fire from a concealed position and those in the act of surrendering picked up their weapons and again leaped into action. As the firefight increased, Private Huffman, jumping into a pit, began firing on the enemy and, deliberately drawing the heavy enemy fire upon himself, covered the withdrawal of his comrades from the overwhelming hostile force. By his courageous action, in which he made the supreme sacrifice, Private Huffman enabled the men of his platoon to withdraw and reorganize.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Major Warren G. Fee, O386153 (then captain), Cavalry, S-3, Combat Command B, 4th Armored Division, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action on 29 September 1944. While determining front-line conditions on Hill 318, Major Fee dismounted from his tank and personally rallied and led back to positions from which they had been driven by German fire several elements of the 8th Tank Battalion and 51st Armored Infantry Battalion. This action of Major Fee resulted in retention of Hill 318 by the 4th Armored Division and provided jumping-off lines from which a counterattack, launched approximately 3 hours later, was entirely successful in complete defeat of the German attacking forces. Major Fee's disregard for his personal safety and his display of leadership in a critical situation were an inspiration to his fellow officers and men and in the highest tradition of the military service.

Captain Charles A. Frances, O412659 (then first lieutenant), Field Artillery, Army of the United States, a member of the 2d Battalion, 88th Field Artillery, Philippine Scouts, displayed gallantry in action in the Philippine Islands from 28 January to 13 February 1942. As a forward observer at the battalion observation post on Quinanan Point, Bataan, Captain Frances maintained highly effective observation under continuous enemy sniper fire and patrol action, as well as heavy rifle and machine-gun fire. Despite the extremely hazardous circumstances and dense jungle growth, he adjusted artillery fire and aided materially in the success of the battalion in furnishing necessary artillery fire support. Through his marked gallantry and devotion to duty, Captain Frances made a distinct contribution to the heroic defense of Bataan.

First Lieutenant William A. Kapuscinski, O1309939 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 121st Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action on 11 August 1944 near Pluirtuit, France. Continuing the attack against an enemy strong point, which had inflicted severe casualties on his platoon the preceding day, he led the few remaining men of his platoon, under heavy enemy fire, through barbed wire fences and mine fields before reaching an area from which they could assault the position. Aided by the covering fire of his men, Lieutenant Kapuscinski dashed 50 yards to the blockhouse, attacked it with grenades, and forced its surrender. Quickly consolidating his position, he aided in holding it against a determined enemy counter-attack. By his inspiring leadership and bravery, Lieutenant Kapuscinski enabled his battalion to make an effective penetration of the enemy defenses.

Technical Sergeant Warren S. Quinn (Army Serial No. RA6973402) (then sergeant), Air Corps, United States Army, a member of Provisional Signal Company, Bataan Defense Force, displayed gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 6 January 1942. During a severe enemy artillery barrage, he courageously operated a radio set and maintained communication with the covering force after all other personnel of his section had scattered to the rear. When ordered to withdraw, he, unassisted and under fire, evacuated all of the equipment of his section, saving the much needed supplies. Through his gallant action and unremitting devotion to duty, Sergeant Quinn made a distinct contribution to the heroic defense of Bataan.

Captain Jack J. Yelton, O746242 (then first lieutenant), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 55th Fighter Squadron, on 5 April 1944, displayed gallantry in action near Hanover, Germany, where his airplane was hit by flak, destroying the instruments, shattering the canopy, and wounding him. Regaining consciousness at only 1,500 feet, he sighted an enemy fighter as he pulled out and, closing on the airplane, sent a burst of fire that caused it to explode and crash to the ground. Immediately, he saw another enemy airplane and, despite his rough engines, sent it down in flames. After that, his engines stopped completely. Sighting a landing strip, he decided to crash land and, thrown clear in the crash, landed on the runway severely injured. Captain Yelton inflicted heavy losses and damage by his determination to carry the fight to the enemy.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 20 October 1942 (sec. Acting as military policeman at the scene of an automobile accident, he suddenly saw a team of runaway horses charging down the street, dragging the driver under the wagon perilously near the heavy wheels. Quickly, and at great risk to his life, Private Allan dodged through the heavy traffic and reached the reins of the first horse. Dragging for nearly 2 blocks beside the threshing animals, he doggedly held on and finally brought the horses to a halt. In saving the driver of the wagon from further injury and preventing harm to the surrounding civilians, Private Allan displayed soldierly courage and determination that did much to reflect credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Wylie Bell (Army serial No. 14155157), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism at the risk of his life in Alaska on 11 August 1947. When a fellow soldier, after being forced to release his handhold on the pontoon of a taxiing seaplane, fell into the near freezing and swiftly moving Naknek River clad in winter flying equipment and hip boots, Sergeant Bell unhesitatingly swam to his aid, despite the grave personal danger. Through his outstanding bravery in accomplishing the rescue of the stricken man, Sergeant Bell did much to reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Private First Class George J. Szabo (Army serial No. 15217542), Ordnance Department, Army of the United States, on 21 May 1947, heroically risked his life to save a brother soldier from drowning when a truck of a four-truck convoy plunged through the bridge guardrail into a river near Iri, Korea. When the vehicle plunged into the river, the driver and a Korean laborer were pinned in the cab. An attempt was made to reach the vehicle by boat, but was unsuccessful because of the swift current. Private Szabo then dived into the river, succeeded in reaching the vehicle, and freed the driver from the cab.

Adams* (Army serial No. 35712930), Medical Department, Army of the United States, a member of the 318th Infantry Regiment, 80th Infantry Division, on 14 September 1944, distinguished himself by heroic action at the Moselle River in Europe. Under fire of an enemy counterattack supported by tanks, artillery, and heavy mortars, he, with a medical officer, reconnoitered a route for casualty evacuation, then led a medical section through an exposed area to an aid station. Later, driving through enemy territory in 2 jeeps to get 12 very seriously wounded men to medical care, Technician Adams and the officer encountered heavy German automatic small-arms fire. Boldly breaking out and relying on speed and evasion, they daringly passed an alerted German outpost. Suddenly a barrage of enemy mortar fire bracketed the vehicle and fragments punctured a tire. Unable to drive on, the group was overtaken by the enemy patrol and captured. Technician Adams, in his determination to aid the casualties, demonstrated outstanding initiative and personal courage that reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Seriously wounded by an enemy mine, he continued to direct his platoon, assuring neutralization of the enemy strong point before he permitted himself to be evacuated. By his heroic action, Lieutenant Harden, made a distinct contribution to the success of the battalion's attack.

Staff Sergeant Joseph T. Sweeney (Army serial No. RA6893791) (then sergeant), Infantry, United States Army, as forward observer with the Cannon Company, 276th Infantry Regiment, distinguished himself by heroic achievement near Forbach, France, on 26 February 1945. When his forward observation post and communication wire were partially destroyed by a heavy concentration of enemy rocket fire, he dashed across open ground and, in full view of the enemy, repaired the wire. Regaining his post, Sergeant Sweeney directed supporting cannon fire which successfully destroyed the hostile rocket weapon.

2. Effective 31 December 1947, the Branch United States Disciplinary Barracks, Green Haven, New York, will be discontinued.

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following unit is cited under the provisions of AR 260-15 in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 363d Infantry Regiment is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 12 to 19 September 1944 in the assault upon the German Gothic Line near Monticelli, Italy. Chosen to make the main effort to penetrate the Gothic Line in the area of Il Giogo Pass, in order that the divisions of the American II Corps could debouch into the Po Valley and outflank the vaunted Futa Pass positions along the Florence-Bologna highway, the 363d Infantry Regiment stormed the bastion of Monticelli. The strongly prepared defenses on this rocky, rugged, and steep mountain feature guarding the pass were manned by the elite German 4th Paratroop Division. Supported by air bombing and intense artillery concentrations, two battalions struck initially without dislodging the enemy from their deeply dug, fortified positions. Small units began the slow, tedious process of working around one enemy position after another to gain a foothold. The 1st Battalion made the initial penetration and held out against strong counterattacks. Despite the fanatical defense, the enemy was driven back as elements of the division maintained constant pressure and cracked one strong point after another. With all battalions in the line, the 363d Infantry Regiment withstood the intense enemy fires and counterattacks. As the mountain mass of Monticelli fell to the 363d Infantry Regiment and the companion Mt. Altuzzo capitulated to units of a neighboring regiment, all enemy resistance in this portion of the Gothic Line collapsed and the road to the north was open. In gaining the vital objective, the 363d Infantry Regiment displayed heroism, endurance, and teamwork in keeping with the highest traditions of the Army of the United States. (This citation supersedes the citation of the 3d Battalion, 363d Infantry Regiment, as published in General Orders 89, Headquarters Fifth Army, 10 July 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces, Mediterranean Theater. Par. 3, WD General Orders 123, 1945, pertaining to the citation of the 3d Battalion, 363d Infantry Regiment, is rescinded.)

8th Infantry Division, on 9 August 1944, displayed gallantry in action near Dinard, France. To overcome a strong enemy position on ground overlooking the entire area, he led his platoon across an open field under heavy enemy small-arms, machine-gun, mortar, and direct artillery fire. Despite the fury of the enemy fire, and seeing the platoon on his right flank lose its leader and the men begin to waver, Lieutenant Korn reorganized them and continued with both platoons across the field. Severely wounded by mortar fire, he continued to lead the attack until he was no longer able to walk. By his gallant performance of duty, Lieutenant Korn contributed in a marked degree to the success of the attack.

VI. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named enlisted men:

Corporal Richard J. Garrity (Army serial No. 13217642) (then private first class), Signal Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism and voluntary risk of life at Inch'on, Korea, on 6 May 1947. While working with a line crew charged with the maintenance of telephone lines, Corporal Garrity, watching his companion, who was testing a line at the top of a pole, saw him suddenly hang limply against his safety belt with sparks jumping from his belt buckle. With complete disregard for his own safety, Corporal Garrity put on a pair of rubber gloves, climbed the pole, and pulled the live wires from the man's grasp. He then immediately procured a rope, which he tied around the unconscious man's chest, and lowered him safely to the ground. Through his quick thinking, courageous action, and disregard for personal safety, Corporal Garrity saved the life of his comrade and upheld the finest traditions of the military service.

Staff Sergeant Albert F. Wilson (Army serial No. 36360161) (then technician fifth grade), Medical Department, Army of the United States, a member of the 147th Quartermaster Battalion (DUKW), displayed heroism in southern France on 5 September 1944. Sighting a 6 by 6 amphibian truck speeding and being driven in a reckless manner, racing through narrow roads and villages, and forcing pedestrians and cars to flee, he voluntarily climbed to the front bumper of the jeep in which he was riding, leaped onto the bouncing truck, and successfully brought it to a halt hardly 20 feet from a group of small children who were in grave danger of being run over. The heroic conduct of Sergeant Wilson reflects great credit on himself and the Army of the United States.

II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated is awarded to the following—named officers and enlisted men:

VIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers:

Major Kenneth F. Hanst, Jr., O24733 (then captain), Infantry, United States Army, a member of the 110th Infantry Regiment, displayed heroism in combat against the enemy in Germany on 5 November 1944. Commanding Company A, he was seriously wounded during the attack on Simonskall by his unit. Despite his serious and painful leg wounds, Captain Hanst continued to direct the operations of his company until he was evacuated the following day.

Major Richard D. Melcher, O406956 (then captain), Inspector General's Department, Army of the United States, commanding Company K, 134th Infantry Regiment, displayed heroism in action in the vicinity of St. Lo, France, on 15 July 1944. When his regiment's attack was halted he went forward and found that heavy enemy fire had stopped it. It was decided that the best way to resume the attack was to blast a hole in the hedgerow to allow the tanks to pass through. Major Melcher advanced across an open field, exposing himself constantly to enemy fire, and set TNT. He then returned over the same dangerous route and detonated the charge with bazooka fire, thus enabling the supporting tanks to pass through and deliver fire on the enemy strong points. Major Melcher's heroic actions permitted his regiment to gain its objective.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named officer:

Major General Joseph M. Swing, O3801, United States Army, exhibited extraordinary heroism in action against the enemy in the Philippine Islands from 15 to 17 April 1945. As Commanding General, 11th Airborne Division, General Swing displayed superior tactical knowledge and inspiring leadership while personally leading repeated attacks against the strong Japanese defense position at Mt. Macolod, Batangas, Luzon. He flew many dangerous flights in liaison airplanes at low altitudes over the heavily defended ridges in order to make a thorough estimate of the enemy positions and of the terrain. Despite the protest of subordinates, he personally, and on foot, led tank destroyers forward through intense enemy machine-gun and mortar fire to place them in more advantageous positions, and directed their fire so effectively that the enemy-held ridge was taken without further delay. He then moved to the south flank where he found the front lines stalemated and weapons unmanned because of heavy enemy fire. With heroic disregard for his personal safety, General Swing strode fearlessly between tanks and machine guns, calling upon his troops to man their weapons and attack. Inspired by his fearlessness and heroic action, the troops attacked, silenced the Japanese fire, and seized and held the main enemy positions. Through his inspiring courage and valiant leadership, General Swing made a distinguished contribution to the liberation of the Philippine Islands.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers:

Colonel George W. Rice, O8850, Medical Corps, United States Army, January 1942 to September 1944.

Rear Admiral Arthur D. Struble, United States Navy. 30 August to 17 November 1944.

Colonel Herbert D. Vogel, O15520, Corps of Engineers, United States Army. January 1944 to September 1945. (This award supersedes the awards of the Legion of Merit, for service from 15 November 1944 to 12 February 1945, and a Bronze Star Medal, for service from 16 June to 24 October 1944, to Colonel Vogel, as published in General Orders 117, Headquarters United States Army Forces, Far East, 15 May 1945, and General Orders 17, Headquarters New Guinea Base Section, 1945, respectively. Par. 7, sec. VII, WD General Orders 66, 1946, pertaining to the award of the Legion of Merit (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) to Colonel Vogel, for service from January to June 1944 and February to September 1945, is rescinded.)

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded to the following-named enlisted man:

Staff Sergeant Wesley P. Ray (Army serial No. 6998555), Air Corps, United States Army, a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Squadron, Far East Air Force, on 1 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Agaloma Bay, Bataan, Philippine Islands. While under heavy enemy machine-gun and rifle fire, he saw two wounded men in the area between the fighting lines. Without regard for his own safety, and moving under the continuing, heavy enemy fire, he immediately went to the stricken men and carried them to a place of safety. Sergeant Ray's courage and fearless devotion to his comrades are in keeping with highest traditions of the military service.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers:

Colonel William H. Allen, O2782, Medical Corps, United States Army. December 1940 to October 1945.

Colonel Fred E. Gaillard, O10295, Infantry, United States Army. March 1943 to October 1945. (This award supersedes the award of a Bronze Star Medal to Colonel Gaillard, for service from 20 October 1944 to 29 January 1945, as published in General Orders 48, Headquarters 95th Infantry Division, 26 February 1945.)

Windom*, O275591 (then lieutenant colonel), Infantry, Army of the United States, executive officer of the 145th Infantry Regiment, on 23 and 24 February 1945, displayed extraordinary heroism in action at Intramuros, Manila, Philippine Islands, where a portion of the south wall was held by a strong Japanese force that had stood under repeated battalion attacks. Under enemy rifle, machine-gun, and mortar fire, he worked forward by quick rushes over the rubble and debris and reached a position from which he observed the enemy only 15 yards away. From the exposed position under the continuing enemy fire, Colonel Windom formulated a plan of attack against the wall, then, creeping among the debris, dashed to another wall and climbed up the rubble to the top. Running along to a point directly above the Japanese-held passages, he observed the placements and formulated a plan of attack against the south bastion. Retracing the fire-swept route, he returned to the regimental command post and arranged for supporting fire and a smoke screen. Again going forward, Colonel Windom assumed personal command of the forces attacking under his plan and, again scaling the south wall under continuing enemy fire, directed the successful attack against the strongly entrenched enemy force. Through his gallantry and brilliant leadership, Colonel Windom was an inspiration to his troops and upheld the finest traditions of the military service.

As commander of Company D, Fourth Marines, Captain Castle was supervising the reinstallation of damaged beach defense weapons in the east sector, Corregidor, at the time when the Japanese launched their landing attack against the island. During the intense bombardment supporting the attack, Captain Castle, by his example of personal bravery and outstanding leadership, encouraged his men to resist to the utmost against overwhelming odds, with the result that a larger number of casualties were inflicted on the enemy. When the crew of a machine gun, which had been firing against the advancing enemy, was so reduced by casualties as to be unable to continue to man its gun, Captain Castle personally manned the gun and continued firing until he was killed.

IV..SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers and enlisted man:

Second Lieutenant Vincente A. Hormillosa (O22217), Philippine Army, exhibited gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 21 January 1942. During a critical period of operations, the enemy made a deep penetration of the front of the 71st Division, Philippine Army, cutting lines of communication. Lieutenant Hormillosa, a member of the Division Artillery Section, 1st Regular Division, Philippine Army, volunteered to take a vitally important message from the division artillery commander to a regimental commander, although the mission necessitated his crossing hostile lines. He skilfully completed his dangerous task despite the gravest danger. By his gallant performance of duty, Lieutenant Hormillosa contributed in noteworthy degree to the courageous tradition of the defenders of Bataan.

First Lieutenant Edmund W. Hughes, O1319112, Infantry, Army of the United States, a platoon leader in Company G, 116th Infantry Regiment, 29th Infantry Division, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy on 27 February 1945 in the vicinity of Hockenukirchen, Germany. During an attack on this village, Company G was halted temporarily by enemy fire. Lieutenant Hughes, disregarding his personal safety while others were seeking cover, stayed on his feet and inspired his men to continue their attack. His unstinting devotion to duty, gallant action, and enthusiasm inspired the men of his battalion to rush into battle and take this village with a minimum of casualties. Lieutenant Hughes' actions are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Sergeant José Salindong (then private first class), Philippine Army, displayed gallantry in action at Mount Natib, Barrio Guitol, Balanga, Bataan, Philippine Islands, on or about 16 January 1942. He courageously volunteered to join a patrol on a mission to locate and destroy artillery and ammunition dumps of an enemy column which had been inflicting heavy casualties upon the reserve divisions of the I Philippine Corps. He displayed exceptional daring and resourcefulness in participating in the attacks against the objective, which was successfully destroyed. Through his valiant actions and devotion to duty, Sergeant Salindong made a noteworthy contribution to the heroic defense of Bataan.

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. (11, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department under the provisions of AR 260-15 in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 60th Field Artillery Battalion, with the 60th Infantry Cannon Company attached, is cited for conspicuous gallantry and heroism in battle on 21, 22, and 23 February 1943, in repelling an attack by vastly superior forces which were attempting to break through the Allied lines in the vicinity of Thala, Tunisia. The 60th Field Artillery Battalion with the 60th Infantry Cannon Company attached, completed a 100-hour forced march from Tlemcen, Algeria, in bitter weather, over tortuous and almost impassable mountain roads, a total distance of 735 miles, on the night of 21 February 1943. Without prior reconnaissance and adequate maps, under enemy fire, and maneuvering through a congested single, narrow road, the battalion immediately occupied battle positions, set up communications, established emergency observation posts, and was ready to deliver fire by daylight. Although enemy forces were established only 2,500 yards from battery positions, and there were but three platoons of friendly infantry in front of the artillery, its units maintained constant and steady fire on repeated enemy tank thrusts with such deadly effect as to disrupt them and beat them back. The cool and determined manner in which the 60th Field Artillery Battalion, with the 60th Infantry Cannon Company attached, entered into battle, after the accomplishment of an almost incredible forced march and despite the lack of reconnaissance and visibility, contributed in no small measure to the defeat of the enemy's attempt to break through the Thala defile. This gallant entry into battle and heroism with which fire was maintained, despite terrific enemy fire, are in keeping with the highest traditions of the American military service.

ARMY AUDIT AGENCY

1. Mission.—The Army Audit Agency is established for the rendition of auditing service on an Army-wide basis for the Military Establishment, and of auditing service pertaining to civil appropriations of the War Department as set forth in these general orders or as may be hereafter directed. Within the zone of the interior, the Army Audit Agency is charged with technical supervision and with operational performance of all audits as set forth in these general orders. Within oversea commands, the agency is charged with technical supervision of audit activities, and with the performance of audits to such extent as herein provided or as may be directed by The Assistant Secretary of War.

2. Organization.—The Army Audit Agency will operate independently as a functional activity of The Assistant Secretary of War, under the jurisdiction of the Chief of Finance. The agency will be responsible for its own organization, administration, and operation (using its own authority line) to the Chief of Finance and The Assistant Secretary of War. The Office of the Chief of Finance will provide for such space, supplies, and common services as may be required by the Army Audit Agency, except as provided otherwise herein.

3. Operations within zone of interior.—Within the zone of the interior, the Army Audit Agency is responsible both for operational performance of audits and for technical supervision. It will establish regional audit offices at such locations as are necessary for the accomplishment of audit operations, and will establish branch offices or suboffices of the regional audit offices as may appear necessary from time to time. Regional offices of the Army Audit Agency will be designated class II activities under the jurisdiction of the Chief of Finance. Announcement will be made in War Department circulars of the establishment and audit jurisdiction of the regional offices. The agency will have authority to make adjustments in the territorial jurisdiction of the various regional offices as may appear necessary.

4. Operations outside zone of interior.—In areas not within the zone of the interior, commanders of oversea commands or areas will establish audit agencies within their command for performance of audits and the exercise of operational responsibilities in connection therewith, except as provided to the contrary in paragraph 5d. Such agencies will be identified by designation indicating the command, for example, "Audit Agency, European Command." Any such agency and its personnel will be under the command jurisdiction and responsibility of the oversea commander. The oversea audit agencies will be separate from other organizations and functions of the command as provided for the Army Audit Agency in the zone of interior. Branch and/or subaudit offices will be established as appropriate. The Army Audit Agency will exercise technical supervision (as provided in par. 6), and such technical and statistical reports as may be required will be made to the Army Audit Agency for the information of The Assistant Secretary of War.

5. Responsibilities of Army Audit Agency within zone of interior.—Within the zone of the interior, the Army Audit Agency will exercise supervision over and will carry on operational performance of audits of the following categories:

a. Audits of military property and sales accounts, including laundry and dry cleaning accounts and records of reimbursement billing offices. Organization property records covering authorized allowances of equipment (par. 19, AR 35-6520 and WD Memo 35-6520-5) will not be audited unless specifically so directed by the War Department. Unit fund property records are similarly excluded.

b. Audits and examinations of civilian pay roll records.

c. Audits of industrial property accounts covering Government-furnished property.

d. Audits of current, completed, and terminated contracts, and, as required, audits and accounting surveys or reviews, for any War Department purpose, of contractors' accounts or claims. The audit offices herein established will perform such audits of contracts in oversea commands as may be required under the terms of contracts originating in the zone of the interior.

e. Audits of accounts pertaining to all activities under appropriations for civil functions of the War Department for cemeterial expenses and for the Alaska Communication System.

f. Classified accounts will be audited under the provisions of paragraph 4*d*, AR 35-6920.

6. Responsibilities of Army Audit Agency in oversea commands.—In oversea commands, the Army Audit Agency is charged with technical supervision of audit operations, such supervision extending to all of the types of audit enumerated in paragraph 5. Technical supervision will be exercised through the means of—

a. The issuance of technical audit instructions covering standard basic principles to be observed by auditors in the performance of their operational work. Such basic audit instructions may be implemented by oversea commanders by the issuance of such local instructions as appear necessary to meet conditions existing within the various commands, provided that in such local instructions there is no deviation from established principles.

b. Periodic visits of inspection and observation by representatives of the headquarters of the Army Audit Agency. Reports in connection with such visits will be transmitted direct to the Army Audit Agency for the information of The Assistant Secretary of War, copies of such reports being in all cases furnished the commands concerned.

7. Miscellaneous oversea activities.—In the case of oversea contracts or activities not within the jurisdiction of one of the major oversea commands, any required auditing will be performed direct by the Army Audit Agency through utilization of traveling or resident auditors. The cost thereof will be reimbursed to the Army Audit Agency from personnel and travel funds available to the activity concerned.

8. Special audits.—The Army Audit Agency will provide for audit of the American National Red Cross and such other special audits as are now performed, or as may be hereafter directed.

9. Nonappropriated funds.—The Army Audit Agency is not responsible for audits of nonappropriated funds.

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of AR 260-15 in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 31st Escadré de Bombardement (M), French Air Force, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action on 8 February 1945. In direct cooperation with the Allied ground offensive in France, when the American Seventh Army was operating to clear the Colmar pocket in upper Alsace of enemy resistance, the concentrated pattern of bombs dropped by the 31st Escadré de Bombardement (M) on the marshalling yards and station at Freiburg, Germany, aided the Seventh Army by denying to the enemy at that critical moment the use of this key communication center for the movement of vitally needed troop reinforcement and supplies from the Nazi homeland. Taking off from its Lyon base at 1255 hours, the escadré encountered dense stratocumulus clouds above 7,000 feet. Distinguishing themselves through extraordinary heroism and unswerving determination in the face of attacks by enemy fighters and intense and accurate anti-aircraft fire, which damaged half the bombers on the approach to the target, the Marauders by skillful employment of violent evasive action succeeded in maintaining a flawless bomb run before dropping 70,400 pounds of bombs. Despite adverse weather conditions, strong fighter attacks, and accurate ground fire, the formation blanketed the target with an excellent concentration of bombs, inflicting irreplaceable loss upon the enemy by smashing the vital objective. The preeminent role played by the 31st Escadré de Bombardement (M) set it above and apart from other units participating in the same engagement and insured the effectiveness of these operations as a whole. The success of this mission, so typical of the unsurpassed flying skill and conspicuous heroism of the 31st Escadré de Bombardement (M) was achieved by unusually remarkable leadership, unstinted effort, and superb performance of duty by all members of the organization. The extraordinary proficiency in action of the combat crews and steadfast devotion to duty of the ground staff, coupled with such fearlessness and determination in overcoming unusual obstacles which has consistently characterized its operations, reflect the greatest credit on the 31st Escadré de Bombardement (M), French Air Force, and confirm the most illustrious traditions of

1. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the acts of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded to the following-named officers:

Second Lieutenant Mariano Aspiras, O2082074 (then staff sergeant), Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy on 21 March 1942, while serving as communication sergeant and searchlight electrician at Fort Frank, Carabao Island, Philippine Islands. During a very heavy artillery bombardment, a 240-mm shell penetrated a tunnel roof, inflicting many casualties and disrupting communications with Fort Mills, on Corregidor. Lieutenant Aspiras cleaned the tunnel of concrete dust and smoke by quickly establishing suction fans in tunnel entrances, thus saving many seriously wounded from suffocation and facilitating their movement to aid stations. He then re-established communications with Fort Mills while under continuous enemy shelling. Lieutenant Aspiras' gallant actions raised the morale of the wounded and saved many lives.

Lieutenant Colonel José S. Diosana, O42174 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Philippine Army, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy at Malabang, Lanao, on 30 April 1942. In command of Company A, 61st Infantry Regiment, his unit was assigned outpost duty. The enemy, supported by tanks, airplanes, and artillery made a strong attack and began to encircle the regiment, which was ordered to withdraw. Not having received the orders; Colonel Diosana and his men fought on gallantly. About to be surrounded, he ordered a withdrawal and, because of his knowledge of the terrain and his ability, Colonel Diosana and his command made a successful escape with only slight casualties. By his gallant stand, the advance of the enemy was delayed and the troops were able to prepare new defensive positions.

First Lieutenant Inocencio F. Samson, O21254 (then third lieutenant), Infantry, Philippine Army, exhibited gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on or about 16 January 1942. During an advance at Natib Hill, Lieutenant Samson, commanding officer of Company K, 3d Battalion, 23d Infantry Regiment, 21st Division, Philippine Army, displayed exceptional gallantry and initiative in maintaining his men in an orderly and successful advance, despite numerous casualties and unfamiliar and rugged terrain. Under his inspiring leadership, they reached and occupied their assigned sector, preventing the enemy force from penetrating the main line of resistance. Through his outstanding courage and devotion to duty, Lieutenant Samson made a distinct contribution to the heroic defense of Bataan.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Master Sergeant William A. Migneault (Army serial No. 6131858) (then technical sergeant), Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, a member of Headquarters Battery, Harbor Defenses of Manila and Subic Bay, displayed gallantry in action at Fort Frank, Philippine Islands, on 21 March 1942. During a heavy enemy artillery bombardment, leaving his shelter and working amid the bursting shells, he successfully reestablished communications between Fort Frank and Corregidor. Later, when an enemy shell, penetrating a lateral tunnel, exploded inside, he immediately entered the tunnel, and during the continuing barrage, administered first aid to the wounded, and helped to install suction fans which cleared the air for the safety of the survivors. Sergeant Migneault's soldierly conduct and courage under heavy enemy bombardment reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Realizing the importance of reaching the drop area with his vital cargo, Lieutenant Shulman persistently endeavored to complete his assigned mission despite the hazards of fire and imminent explosion. His steadfast devotion to duty and heroic conduct exemplify the finest traditions of the military service and reflect the highest credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

Colonel Lawrence L. Clayton, O9679, Adjutant General's Department (Coast Artillery Corps), United States Army. 1 March to 29 June 1945.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. Colonel Harry S. Messec, O294263 (then lieutenant colonel), General Staff Corps (Field Artillery), Army of the United States. 2 May 1945 to 12 January 1946.

VII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated is awarded to the following named warrant officer and enlisted men:

Staff Sergeant Edward J. Coyle (Army serial No. 32000382), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of the Antitank Company, 120th Infantry Regiment, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in Germany on 26 March 1945. On guard at his post with an antitank gun squad holding a vital road block near Detmold, Germany, Sergeant Coyle, at dawn, observed four enemy soldiers crawling toward his position. He allowed them to approach within 50 yards and then fired a short burst from his machine gun. With complete disregard for his own safety, he then gave chase, throwing a grenade and closing with them. Sergeant Coyle's aggressive action caused the enemy to surrender at once and his courage on this occasion prevented the possible seizure of a position important to his regiment.

Sergeant Alexander Kozich (Army serial No. 16003825) (then corporal) Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a member of Battery D, 60th Coast Artillery Command (Antiaircraft), on 27 April 1942, distinguished himself by heroic achievement at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. His first sergeant, atop a concrete water tower from which he had an unobstructed view into the gun pits, was severely wounded by an exploding shell and lay helpless on the tower. Sergeant Kozich immediately left his shelter and, as the enemy shells exploded about him, displayed exceptional courage and soldierly conduct in an effort to rescue his comrade.

Warrant Officer Charles T. Martin (O48557) (then gunnery sergeant), United States Marine Corps, on 5 May 1942, performed heroic service at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. He voluntarily left his position of comparative safety to assist the rescue of wounded personnel trapped in an antiaircraft-gun position. Under intense enemy artillery fire, and without regard for his own safety, he successfully carried the wounded men back to a more secure place. Warrant Officer Martin's courageous action and devotion to his comrades reflect great credit on himself and the armed services.

VIII. The citation reads as follows:

The 1st Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 26 and 27 July 1944 in Normandy, France. The battalion played an aggressive and important role in the spearhead operation of the corps attacking in the western sector during the break-out west of St. Lo. Although it was at once opposed by heavy machine-gun fire and extensive mine fields on the first day of the attack, the battalion utilized its skill and courage to the utmost and advanced successfully to its objectives. By dawn of the second day, substantial gains had been made and held against furious counterattacks launched against the flanks of the battalion. Halting only long enough to allow a flank unit to come abreast, the battalion resumed the attack and drove stubbornly on to accomplish its mission of opening a vital gap in the enemy lines. In 2 days of combat, this fighting unit advanced 5,000 meters through strongly organized positions, spearheading a regimental attack that created a penetration through which all, or elements of, three infantry divisions and one armored division passed to initiate the rout of the Germans toward Coutances and Avaranches. The heroic action of the 1st Battalion 28th Infantry Regiment, is worthy of the highest traditions of the Army of the United States.

VI. MERITORIOUS UNIT COMMENDATION.—By direction of the Secretary of War, under the provisions of paragraph 14, AR 260-15, the Meritorious Unit Commendation is awarded to the following unit of the Army of the United States for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated. The citation reads as follows:

The 1639th Engineer Utilities Detachment is commended for superior performance of duty in Japan from 1 February to 15 September 1946. Although hampered by shortage of materials and a continuous turn-over of personnel, the unit accomplished difficult missions such as the installation of a 500-bed hospital laundry, installation of boilers and heating system in a group of 13 buildings, installation of an air conditioning system, modern sewage system, and renovation of a large theater at Zama, Japan. Despite many difficulties, the unit cheerfully accepted all assignments and maintained a high quality of workmanship. The excellent performance of the 1639th Engineer Utilities Detachment was due to exceptional esprit de corps and devotion to duty and has reflected much credit on the Army of the United States.

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department under the provisions of AR 260-15 in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 2d Battalion, 328th Infantry Regiment; Company C (less one platoon), 735th Tank Battalion; one section, Company A, 101st Engineer Combat Battalion; one section, Battery C, 390th Antiaircraft Artillery (AW) Battalion; and one platoon, Company A, 818th Tank Destroyer Battalion (SP), all comprising Task Force Hamilton of the 26th Infantry Division, are cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 23, 24, and 25 December 1944, in Luxembourg. The force was assigned the mission of taking the strongly held town of Eschdorf, Luxembourg, the possession of which was vital to further operations into the northern portion of Luxembourg. Moving out of Arsdorf in a motorized column, personnel of the force detrucked when met with direct, hostile tank fire and engaged in a marching fire fight. They moved steadily forward through a screen of machine-gun and artillery fire, destroying five enemy tanks and knocking out two others. On the following day, with aggressive bazooka teams leading the way, the 2d Battalion, 328th Infantry Regiment, and other units of the force accounted for five more enemy tanks and advanced to within 800 yards of the objective. On the dark morning of 25 December, with two tank-supported rifle companies spearheading, a surprise attack was launched on the town and, despite a hail of hostile fire, the assault elements fought their way to the edge of the town. At daylight, the enemy counterattacked heavily and virtually cut off the two leading companies. Although hostile tanks prowled through the town, firing point-blank into buildings held by the rifle companies of the 2d Battalion, and infiltrating bands of enemy foot troops used flame throwers, grenades, and automatic weapons in an effort to dislodge the two units, the heroic troops stubbornly held their positions from 0730 until 1800, inflicting heavy casualties among the enemy grenadiers and tank crews. Meanwhile, one other company had engaged the enemy and prevented the foe from completely surrounding the units in Eschdorf. Although in the 72-hour offensive the 2d Battalion, 328th Infantry Regiment, was reduced in strength by 30 percent, the personnel of the gallant task force fought through cold and snow with such courage and aggressiveness that the foe was driven from the town and the important objective taken, insuring the division's subsequent successful assault of the Sure River. In this combat operation, the men of the units making up Task Force Hamilton, through their extraordinary heroism, bold courage, and fighting determination, reflected the highest traditions of the Army of the United States.

III. MERITORIOUS UNIT COMMENDATION.—By direction of the Secretary of War, under the provisions of paragraph 14, AR 260-15, the Meritorious Unit Commendation is awarded to the following unit of the Army of the United States for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated. The citation reads as follows:

The Medical Laboratory, Army Ground Forces, Pacific (formerly the 18th Medical General Laboratory and the 6279th Middle Pacific Medical General Laboratory), is commended for outstanding devotion to duty in the performance of exceptionally difficult tasks on the Island of Oahu from 1 January 1945 to 15 September 1946. Assigned the mission of a general medical laboratory for the Middle Pacific Area, personnel of this organization diligently and skillfully performed their duties. Regardless of detrimental personnel losses, a high standard of scientific research and accomplishments was maintained. Personnel of this organization at all times maintained high standards of efficiency, discipline, military courtesy, and fidelity. Through the outstanding manner of performance of the Medical Laboratory, Army Ground Forces, Pacific, benefits of great value accrued to the Middle Pacific Area, the Medical Department of the Army of the United States, and the field of medical science.

I. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Corporal Leon W. Davis (18042322), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a member of Battery B, 59th Coast Artillery, on 24 April 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. While Battery Crockett was being shelled by enemy siege artillery, he refused to take cover, but remained at the gun pits amid exploding enemy shells to assist casualties. Corporal Davis, although severely wounded by an exploding enemy shell, lifted a helpless comrade and carried him from the battery over a precipitous cliff and an exposed path through the artillery fire to a medical aid station, before he fell unconscious from his own wounds. Corporal Davis' heroism and soldierly conduct are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Samuel E. Spitzer, O30039 (then first lieutenant), Judge Advocate General's Department, United States Army, displayed gallantry and heroism in action against the enemy while serving in France with the 489th Antiaircraft (AW) Battalion (SP). At le Pont Gilbert, France, on the night of 30-31 July 1944, elements of the 4th Armored Division successfully dispersed an enemy column and remnants of this column took refuge in the above-named town. Early in the morning, Captain Spitzer, in command of his platoon at the outskirts of the village, aware of the possible danger involved, laid aside his personal weapons and walked openly down the center of the town street, calling loudly in German for the enemy to surrender. The fact that Captain Spitzer was unarmed greatly impressed and induced the enemy to surrender virtually en masse. As a result of this intrepid and daring act, Captain Spitzer captured a total of 508 prisoners of war. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Captain Spitzer, for service during the same period, as published in General Orders 63, Headquarters 4th Armored Division, 23 October 1944.)

Staff Sergeant Charles J. Giano (Army serial No. 12182250), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism while participating in aerial flight as tail gunner on a B-24 type aircraft, on 10 April 1945. While withdrawing from the target area in the vicinity of Wittenburg, Germany, an anti-aircraft shell set fire to Sergeant Giano's aircraft and a subsequent explosion broke the airplane in two near the ball turret section. Before abandoning the tail section of the crippled aircraft, Sergeant Giano instructed a crew member, whose parachute had been lost in the explosion to attach his harness to the one available parachute and both men jumped together. The decisive action and exceptional courage displayed by Sergeant Giano on this occasion reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

VI. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the periods indicated is awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Kenyon* (Army serial No. 31488335), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82d Airborne Division, while serving with Task Force "Frigid," distinguished himself by heroic action during an airborne exercise on 1 April 1947 near Fairbanks, Alaska. A comrade's parachute drifted directly overhead and deflated from lack of air. His comrade, with the deflated parachute trailing, plunged downward, struck the tip of Private Kenyon's parachute, and dropped with increasing speed. Private Kenyon reached out and grasped the falling suspension lines of the disabled parachute as it fell past him. His own parachute having been struck and partly spilled by the falling body of his comrade, Private Kenyon displayed utter disregard for his own safety and at great risk clung to the suspension lines of the parachute of his comrade. Both men reached the ground safely a few seconds later. By his courageous action and quick thinking, Private Kenyon prevented his comrade from falling to certain death.

Major Charles Leonetti, O248284 (then captain), Corps of Military Police, Army of the United States, on 25 August 1945, displayed heroism at the Potsdam Railway Station, Berlin, German. Upon learning of the robbery of the passengers by three armed bandits, Major Leonetti immediately took action to apprehend the criminals. Seeing his approach, the robbers fired on him, but fearlessly evading their shots, drawing closer and closer on the criminal band, he opened fire on his attackers and completely subdued them. Through his aggressive, voluntary, and courageous action, Major Leonetti successfully protected the interests of the people and soon restored order at the station.

The citation reads as follows:

The 3d Medical Depot Company is commended for superior performance of duty and the execution of exceptionally difficult tasks in the Philippine Islands from December 1945 to September 1946. Concerned primarily with the segregation and transfer of surplus property to the Philippine Republic, this unit consolidated four medical subdepots, received turn-ins from hundreds of inactivated units, and absorbed some 12,000 tons of cargo from shipping in Manila Harbor. Later, an additional 5,000 tons were received and 10,000 tons were shipped out. In a 6-weeks period, 35,000 tons of property were rewarehoused, necessitating the handling of portions of this property several times. The skilful and expeditious execution of numerous tasks under frequently changing conditions have brought great credit on the 3d Medical Depot Company, the Medical Department, and the Army of the United States.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated is awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Harry B. Colburn, O534287, Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 10th Infantry Regiment, on 8 February 1945, displayed extraordinary heroism in action near Weilerbach, Germany, while leading an assault platoon to spearhead a regimental attack on the Siegfried Line. Under enemy machine-gun and artillery fire which blanketed the area, he successfully held his platoon together as it made a rubber-boat crossing of the swollen Sauer River. Organizing his defense on the other side, he saw enemy machine-gun fire, from a pillbox on his flank, inflict heavy losses on the platoon following his across the river. Immediately he determined to neutralize the enemy strong point and was joined by several volunteers for the attack. Running across wide-open terrain in the face of withering machine-gun fire, he and several of the men gained positions near the pillbox. While two men covered him with rifle fire he suddenly rushed the door, forcing the enemy back into an inner room. With a demolition charge, he started through the opening, but as he entered, the hidden enemy again opened fire, mortally wounding him. Lieutenant Colburn, by his fearless charge, enabled the men to surround the pillbox and force its surrender. Through his supreme sacrifice, he enabled the other elements of the regiment to cross the river and enlarge the important bridgehead.

Technical Sergeant William E. Branaman (Army serial No. 19078048), Cavalry, Army of the United States, a member of Headquarters Troop, 2d Constabulary Regiment, on 11 March 1947, distinguished himself by heroism in the railroad yard at Freising, Germany. While engaged in supervising the unloading of a tank car of gasoline, a fire suddenly broke out in the pump, exploding some nearby containers and scattering fire to within 2 feet of the open manhole on top of the tank car. With complete disregard for his own safety, Sergeant Branaman grasped a fire extinguisher, climbed to the top of the car, grabbed the blazing hose with his bare hands, painfully burning himself, and cast it away from the car. By his courageous action at the risk of his life, Sergeant Branaman brought great credit to himself and the military service.

Captain Harold H. Macurdy, O673400, Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 36th Fighter Group, on 12 March 1947, displayed heroism at Borinquen Field Beach, Puerto Rico, where he and several other men were swimming. An officer, carried out to sea by the very strong undertow, became weak and called for help. Captain Macurdy, swimming through the treacherous waters with several of the others, finally reached the stricken man. By sheer courage and strength, he alone was able to stay with the officer and, unable to buck the undertow, swam parallel to the shore to prevent the two from being carried out to sea. Finally, seeing boulders that extended into the water, he successfully propelled to the protection of the rocks. Exhausted by the extent of his physical efforts, Captain Macurdy, in saving his comrade, demonstrated courage that reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Technician Fifth Grade Robert D. Newcomb (Army serial No. RA44117427), Field Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself by heroism at Sendai Municipal Airport, Honshu, Japan, on 8 January 1947. During a jump operation, the parachute of a participant failed to open and he fell into the parachute of Technician Newcomb, causing the canopy to temporarily collapse. With full knowledge that his life was in danger, Technician Newcomb fearlessly grasped the suspension lines of the parachute of the falling man with his hands. When he could no longer hold the additional weight, he resourcefully wrapped the suspension lines and canopy about his legs and both men descended safely to the ground. Through his quick thinking, heroic action, and complete disregard for personal safety, Technician Newcomb saved his comrade from certain death and upheld the finest traditions of the military service.

Company, 423d Infantry Regiment on 16 and 17 December 1944, distinguished himself by heroic achievement. As driver in a rations convoy that was fired upon by German infantry as it drew near Auw, Belgium, Sergeant Decker ran to a nearby farmhouse and with small-arms fire helped to beat off repeated assaults by enemy infantry until the position was attacked by four German tanks. Breaking away from this overwhelming attack, he returned with one other man to St. Vith, where they again obtained trucks, loaded them with rations, secured armored escort, and set out over a different route. The convoy was attacked by German armor and the trucks lost, but Sergeant Decker and his companion successfully returned to St. Vith and, further demonstrating outstanding courage and determination, loaded trucks with rations to attempt again to reach the regimental position.

Major Ace E. Faulkner, O308907 (then captain), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in connection with military operations against the enemy on Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 17 to 21 January 1942. While serving with the 14th Engineer Battalion, Philippine Division, in the vicinity of Abucay Hacienda, Bataan, he displayed outstanding courage and initiative in voluntarily and alone reconnoitering an area in which the enemy had forced a gap between the Philippine Division and the 41st Division. Breaking away from this overwhelming attack, he returned with one other man to St. Vith, where he again obtained trucks, loaded them with rations, secured armored escort on his own initiative, and set out over a different route. The convoy was attacked by German armor and the trucks lost, but Sergeant Hall and his companion successfully returned to St. Vith and, further demonstrating outstanding courage and determination, loaded trucks with rations to attempt to again reach the regimental position.

He crossed more than a mile of open terrain under direct enemy mortar, artillery, and sniper fire to evacuate a seriously wounded man. Crawling the last 200 yards through a dense mine field, he found the soldier in a critical condition and, after giving him first aid, helped to return the man across the open terrain under continuous enemy fire to the forward aid station. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) is awarded to Major General Charles H. Corlett, O3746, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from June to October 1944.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) is awarded to General Thomas T. Handy, O4665, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 22 October 1944 to 31 August 1947.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal is awarded to Brigadier General Henry I. Hodes, O12845, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 4 January 1945 to 31 August 1947.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Major Wirt H. Corrie, O35942 (then first lieutenant), Air Corps, United States Army, as formation leader of twenty-four B-25 aircraft of the 42d Bombardment Group (M), displayed conspicuous gallantry in action on 6 October 1943 over Kahili Airdrome, Bougainville Island, Solomon Islands Group. As he led a minimum-level night-bombing and strafing attack against the Japanese aerial stronghold, his aircraft was seriously damaged by flak before the target area was reached. Realizing the importance of the mission and of his lead position Major Corrie, despite the damage to his airplane, refused to withdraw and initiated the attack, leading his formation direct across the defended area through a wall of antiaircraft fire. Major Corrie's courage and skill, his inspiring leadership, and disregard for personal safety contributed greatly to the success of the attack and reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

Staff Sergeant George F. Dixon (Army serial No. 6877880) (then sergeant), Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 29 December 1941. During an intensive bombing attack by over 90 enemy airplanes, Sergeant Dixon, a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, Harbor Defenses of Manila and Subic Bays, served with outstanding courage and fortitude in acting as an observer on the highest point of the island. Although more than 50 tons of bombs fell within a radius of a few hundred yards of his station, he voluntarily remained at his hazardous post, maintaining telephonic communication with the operations section and disregarding the authorization to move to the bombproof battle command station. When the telephone system was shattered, he kept a written record of his observations. By his conspicuous heroism and unfaltering devotion to duty, Sergeant Dixon inspired the whole command and fully upheld the highest ideals of the service.

III.—SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major Harry B. Packard, O18091, Field Artillery, United States Army, as commanding officer, Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 24th Field Artillery (Philippine Scouts), displayed gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 25 January 1942. During a rapid movement the 1st Battalion was halted because of traffic congestion near Balanga, coming under enemy shell fire which caused numerous casualties and considerable destruction. Major Packard went forward to the shelled area where he pulled many of the wounded from burning and wrecked vehicles and, despite continued hostile fire, succeeded in organizing rescue parties and in leading men who had taken shelter back to their trucks. Then, although wounded, he skilfully unsnarled the traffic jam which enabled the column to move on. By his resourceful conduct, complete disregard for his own safety, and unfailing devotion to duty, Major Packard made a heroic contribution to the defense of Bataan.

IV.—SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Claro B. Lizardo, O1046 (then lieutenant colonel), Infantry, Philippine Army, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, from 10 to 15 January 1942. As commanding officer, 42d Infantry Regiment, Philippine Army, he demonstrated exceptional courage in directing his men in successfully repulsing unrelenting attacks by numerically superior enemy forces near Abucay. He stubbornly refused to give ground remaining at his forward command post and skilfully leading aggressive counterattacks. By his inspiring personal conduct, resourceful leadership, and unfaltering devotion to duty, Colonel Lizardo contributed in noteworthy degree to the gallant defense of Bataan.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star (second Oak-leaf Cluster) for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Donovan Swanton, O5814, Infantry, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action in the Philippine Islands on 22 January 1942. While personally leading an attack near Abucay Hacienda, Bataan, Colonel Swanton, as commanding officer of the 51st Infantry (Philippine Army), was severely wounded in the leg when his inexperienced troops prematurely exposed themselves, drawing heavy enemy rifle, mortar, and automatic-weapons fire. Being the only American officer in the unit and no one present capable of taking command, he refused to be relieved or evacuated until his troops were disposed in defensive positions and the situation reported to his division commander. Through his gallant leadership, complete disregard for personal safety, and unremitting devotion to duty, Colonel Swanton prevented the probable annihilation of his command and made a conspicuous contribution to the heroic defense of Bataan.

V. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the periods indicated is awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal is awarded to Brigadier General John P. McConnell, O18728, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from July to November 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit (second Oak-Leaf Cluster) to Brigadier General McConnell, for service from 2 June to 14 October 1945, as published in General Orders 194, United States Forces, China Theater, 25 October 1945.)

H. SILVER STAR AND OAK-LEAF CLUSTER.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star and a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the periods indicated were awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following named officer:

1. Silver Star.—Colonel Frank Nelson, O5484, Cavalry, United States Army, a member of G-3, North Luzon Force, on 24 December 1941, displayed gallantry in action at Binalonan, Pangasinan, Philippine Islands. When the rear guard of the force, in the withdrawal to Bataan, became heavily engaged with the enemy at Binalonan, Colonel Nelson immediately proceeded to the front lines to help bolster the defense. During the enemy's coordinated infantry attack, supported by aerial action, tanks, and artillery, Colonel Nelson moved through the shell fire and aerial bombardment, without regard for his own safety, strengthening the lines and contributing greatly to the stubborn and effective defense of the position.

2. Oak-Leaf Cluster.—Colonel Frank Nelson, O5484, Cavalry, United States Army, a member of G-3, I Philippine Corps, on 24 January 1942, displayed gallantry in action near Maubon, Bataan, Philippine Islands. During the night, enemy forces infiltrated around the right flank of the First Division (Philippine Army), gained a position on the one available road, and severed communications with the elements on Maubon Ridge. Colonel Nelson immediately proceeded to the front involved and, without regard for his own safety and under aerial bombardment and hostile machine-gun fire, proceeded to make a reconnaissance of the area. Through his sound judgment and his soldierly bearing and leadership, Colonel Nelson encouraged the partially trained Philippine Army personnel to outstanding efforts and contributed materially to plans for a counterattack.

III. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following named officers and enlisted men:

Major Luis M. Alba, O26162 (then first lieutenant), Signal Corps, Philippine Army, distinguished himself by heroic achievement at Lyac Junction, Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 6 January 1942. As commanding officer, Division Signal Company, and signal officer, 71st Division, Philippine Army; he displayed outstanding courage and determination in maintaining signal communications with corps headquarters during a heavy bombardment of the forward division command post. By his inspiring leadership, he kept his operators at their posts and resourcefully made possible the continued maintenance and repair of telephone lines, despite unremitting enemy fire. Through his technical competence, heroic conduct, and devotion to duty, Major Alba upheld the high traditions of the military service.

Lieutenant Colonel Roy L. Bodine, Jr., O20484 (then major), Dental Corps, United States Army, on 15 December 1944, distinguished himself by heroic achievement at Subic Bay, Philippine Islands. As hundreds of American prisoners of war were leaping from the sinking and burning Japanese ship, Oryuku Maru, he courageously dived and swam about in the water, helping the men to a plank as they came up after their dive. With many holding to the board, he started them swimming to shore. When they finally reached shallow water and could wade out, Colonel Bodine immediately returned despite the danger of the sinking and burning ship and the falling debris, to help more of his comrades to shore.

Major Charles A. Cannon, Jr., O23835, Cavalry, United States Army, distinguished himself in France on 7 September 1944. As executive officer, 87th Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron (Mechanized), he supervised and coordinated operations against the hostile strong points of Verneville and Gravelotte, leading several phases of the attack with skill and resourcefulness and with complete disregard for his personal safety. By his outstanding leadership and courageous conduct in the face of heavy enemy fire, Major Cannon made a conspicuous contribution to the successful reduction of the protective fortresses surrounding the city of Metz.

Staff Sergeant Frank Fugita, Jr. (Army serial No. 20813132) (then sergeant), Infantry, Army of the United States, a machine-gun sergeant of Battery E, 2d Battalion, 131st Field Artillery, on 7 March 1942, distinguished himself by heroic achievement near Soerabaja, Java, where he was responsible for protection of two 75-mm-gun positions defending an approach to the city. In the face of a Japanese attack, moving from man to man and one gun position to another, he encouraged and assisted the crews in their determined efforts to stop the enemy advance. Seeing an enemy group about to flank his position, he raced across open ground to a fox hole, seized an automatic rifle, and delivered such effective fire that all the enemy group were killed or forced to withdraw. Sergeant Fugita's heroic conduct and courageous leadership under fire reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Corporal William H. Keener (Army serial No. 36969051) (then private first class), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of the Antitank Company, 276th Infantry Regiment, distinguished himself by heroism in action on 15 March 1945 near Petit-Roselle, France. With full realization of the risk of life involved, Corporal Keener volunteered to clear a path through an enemy mine field. In the course of accomplishing his mission, an explosion of a mine caused injuries which resulted in the loss of a foot.

Sergeant Dayton G. Mayo (Army serial No. 20815464) (then private first class), Army of the United States, a member of Battery E, 2d Battalion, 131st Field Artillery, on 7 March 1942, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in action near Soerabaja, Java. Voluntarily, he helped to move a 75-mm gun forward, under heavy enemy fire, to a position from which he and the remaining crew delivered direct fire against the foe, forcing the numerically superior enemy to delay his attack against the city. Sergeant Mayo displayed courage and determination, which reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Corporal Junius A. Navardos (Army serial No. 19056528), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of Headquarters Battery, 59th Coast Artillery Corps, distinguished himself by heroic achievement on 3 May 1942 at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy bombardment of Battery Geary, Corporal Navardos, in company with others, voluntarily left his place of safety and, under shell fire and threat of aerial attack, helped evacuate wounded, trapped, and dead from the demolished installation.

Staff Sergeant Novle W. Rogers (Army serial No. 20813990) (then sergeant), Field Artillery, Army of the United States, a member of Battery E, 2d Battalion, 131st Field Artillery, on 7 March 1942, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in action near Soerabaja, Java. Voluntarily, he helped to move a 75-mm gun forward, under heavy enemy fire, to a position from which he and the remaining crew delivered direct fire against the foe, forcing the numerically superior enemy to delay his attack against the city. Sergeant Rogers displayed courage and determination, which reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Private First Class Dempsey C. Skeels (Army Serial No. 38665530), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, 70th Division, distinguished himself by heroic achievement on 28 February 1945 near Strying Wendel, France. Exposing himself to enemy machine-gun fire, he distracted the hostile gunners while other members of his squad maneuvered to positions closer to the enemy. Deliberately drawing fire upon himself, Private Skeels, by his courageous action, enabled the men to work up close to the enemy machine-gun nest, knock it out, and continue their advance.

Corporal David C. Woods (Army serial No. 38036322) (then private first class), Field Artillery, Army of the United States, a member of Battery E, 2d Battalion, 131st Field Artillery, on 7 March 1942, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in action near Soerabaja, Java. Voluntarily, he helped to move a 75-mm gun forward, under heavy enemy fire, to a position from which he and the remaining crew delivered direct fire against the foe, forcing the numerically superior enemy to delay his attack against the city. Corporal Woods displayed courage and determination, which reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

The citation reads as follows:

The 6th Armored Infantry Regiment, with Company A, 16th Armored Engineer Battalion, attached, is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy at Mt. Prochia, Italy, from 31 December 1943 to 12 January 1944. This regiment was assigned the mission of seizing and holding Mt. Prochia, a key outlying stronghold before Cassino. The position's obvious tactical value made a stubborn enemy defense a foregone conclusion. Preliminary reconnaissance was meager, since the enemy was particularly sensitive to any activity in the area; however, at 2000 hours on 4 January, the regiment attacked. Enemy resistance exceeded expectations, and from H-hour until 0600 hours on 8 January, two powerful forces exchanged murderous blows. By sheer determination, refusing to stop at anything less than complete possession of the objective, the 6th Armored Infantry Regiment, with Company A, 16th Armored Engineer Battalion, attached, drove back the enemy and held the bitterly won ground. This action adds further laurels to a distinguished infantry regiment and reflects great credit on the United States Army.

2. Section VIII, WD General Orders 57, 1947, is rescinded.

ROTC UNIT—Field Artillery senior division ROTC unit established at University

BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units----- II

I. ROTC UNIT.—Effective the beginning of the 1947-48 school year, a Field Artillery senior division ROTC unit will be established at the University of Hawaii, Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii.

[AG 000.8 (17 Jun 47)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department under the provisions of AR 260-15 in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 180th Infantry Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in crossing the Mortagne River near Fremifontaine, France, between 15 and 25 October 1944. This battalion, heavily engaged during this period, encountered small-arms, mortar, tank, and artillery fire from a strongly defending and heavily entrenched enemy. Although worn by more than 8 week's continuous operation, in which it had advanced more than 400 miles, and suffering from exposure to cold and rain, the battalion attacked boldly and aggressively under enemy observation and intense fire and forced a crossing over the icy, deep, and swift Mortagne River. Despite heavy casualties, unfavorable weather conditions, and strong enemy resistance, the battalion attained the objective, secured the position, and successfully repulsed determined enemy counterattacks, thereby facilitating the main attack of the VI Corps in the direction of Beria-St. Die. The individual courage, high combat efficiency, and performance of duty of each officer and men of the 1st Battalion, 180th Infantry Regiment, in these hazardous operations are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit on themselves and the armed forces of the United States.

2. Company B, 11th Armored Infantry Battalion, is cited for exceptional heroism in action, during the period 29 October to 3 November 1944, near Palazzo, Italy. Having previously gained new positions atop Hill 721, Torre de Nerone, Italy, Company B successfully repelled six strong enemy counterattacks. During the first of these attacks, the enemy in battalion strength succeeded in almost completely surrounding the company command post, with enemy infantrymen penetrating to within 10 yards. Fighting aggressively and with grim determination, the officers and men of Company B gradually forced the enemy back down the steep slopes of Torre de Nerone, inflicting heavy casualties. The enemy attacked Hill 721 four more times during this period in approximate company strength, but because of the instantaneous and vigorous reaction on the part of the riflemen and machine gunners of Company B, and the closely knit defensive barrage, the enemy infantry did not penetrate the company's lines. On 3 November 1944, the enemy instituted a final effort to retake Torre de Nerone. The attack was accompanied by a 2-hour and 35-minute preparatory artillery and mortar barrage. When the barrage lifted and enemy infantry moved in to occupy the positions, they found a small band of officers and men, who in close combat forced them down the steep slopes for the last time. Company B suffered

AGO 100B—July 750702*—47

79 casualties during the 5-day siege and inflicted an estimated 200 casualties on the enemy. The successfully heroic action displayed by Company B, 11th Armored Infantry Battalion, against a stronger and determined enemy force exemplifies the highest type of courage, leadership, and esprit de corps, and is in keeping with the finest traditions of the Army of the United States.

3. Company K and the 2d Platoon, Company M, 7th Infantry Regiment, are cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on 29 February and 1 March 1944 in the vicinity of Ponte Rollo, on the Anzio Beachhead, Italy. Under pressure of a savagely prosecuted attack by numerically superior forces, which forced back adjacent elements, Company K held its ground. The initial hostile attack in the night by infantry and tanks was dispersed by the combined arms of the company, as were subsequent attacks the next day. Enemy forces succeeding in infiltrating into the company's position were destroyed or captured by company headquarters personnel. During this action, enemy losses were 35 prisoners of war, an estimated 300 wounded, and 3 enemy tanks disabled. In refusing to give ground, even when forward elements were overrun, Company K and the 2d Platoon, Company M, 7th Infantry Regiment, showed true courage and determination worthy of the finest traditions of the military service.

III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department under the provisions of AR 260-15, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 112th Infantry Regimental Combat Team, consisting of the 112th Infantry Regiment with the 229th Field Artillery Battalion, Company C, 103d Engineer AGO 75E—July 750702°—47

Battalion, Battery C, 447th Antiaircraft Artillery Battalion, and Company C, 630th Tank Destroyer Battalion attached, is cited for extraordinary heroism, efficiency, and achievement in action against the enemy during the Battle of the Ardennes from 16 to 24 December 1944. On 16 December 1944 the 112th Infantry Regimental Combat Team from Lutz Kampen, Germany, to Leiler, Luxembourg, was holding six and one half miles of the front line sector assigned to the 28th Infantry Division. During the period 16 to 18 December 1944, despite repeated enemy infantry and tank attacks involving the elements of nine enemy divisions, the 112th Infantry Regimental Combat Team held its ground. In this period it inflicted estimated casualties on the enemy of 1600, including over 200 prisoners taken and successfully evacuated. All elements of the 112th Infantry Regimental Combat Team were involved in this action. The 229th Field Artillery Battalion was engaged in direct fire on the enemy at a range of 150 yards. The Cannon Company of the 112th Infantry Regiment and Company C, 630th Tank Destroyer Battalion, by direct fire, succeeded in disabling 18 enemy tanks. Company C, 103d Engineer Battalion together with the 2d Battalion, 112th Infantry Regiment, repeatedly counter-attacked enemy penetrations. The Headquarters, Headquarters Company, and Service Company manned the lines and drove off by fire a number of groups of the enemy which had infiltrated into the rear areas. The kitchens, being overrun on night of 16-17 December 1944, the kitchen personnel fought with rifles to recover the positions. All this was done under withering small-arms and artillery fire from enemy positions throughout the entire front. On the night of 17-18 December 1944 under orders from higher headquarters, the 112th Infantry Regimental Combat Team was withdrawn to the high ground west of the Our River. This withdrawal was accomplished successfully in spite of strong enemy infiltrations throughout the entire sector. From 18 until 23 December 1944, the 112th Infantry Regimental Combat Team was continually engaged in rear guard action covering the withdrawal of the right flank of the First American Army. On the night of 23-24 December 1944 the action of 112th Infantry Regimental Combat Team was especially notable. Being ordered by higher headquarters to act as a covering force for units withdrawing to the American lines it held its position under furious enemy infantry and tank attacks until the Regimental Headquarters and 1st Battalion, 112th Infantry were surrounded. The 1st Battalion then fought its way clear to friendly lines bringing with it a number of vehicles and personnel of other units. The gallantry under extremely hazardous and physically trying conditions, the stubborn defense of the sectors assigned them, and the heroic conduct of all personnel of the 112th Infantry Regimental Combat Team, in 9 days of continuous fighting, exemplify the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

The citation reads as follows:

The 134th Infantry Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against the enemy during the period 28 December 1944 through 16 January 1945. On 28 December 1944, elements of the 134th Infantry Regiment, moving rapidly northward from hard-won positions at Habkirchen, Germany, relieved elements of the 318th Infantry south of Bastogne in the vicinity of Sainlez, Belgium, and attacked northward in conjunction with the 4th Armored Division to relieve the isolated 101st Airborne Division in the vicinity of Bastogne. When the Third Battalion became involved at Lutrebols, it was bypassed by the First Battalion which continued to fight northward to effect a junction with the forces at Marvie. The Third and Second Battalions continued to engage the enemy forces in the vicinity of Lutrebols, repulsing numerous counterattacks from the enemy in that sector. Enemy forces in-filtrating through gaps in a wide front penetrated to within 400 yards of the Arlon-Bastogne Highway, but were unsuccessful in severing this vital line of communication. Large numbers of enemy personnel and at least 25 tanks were destroyed. In the face of terrific artillery and mortar fire, the attack was resumed on the afternoon of 1 January 1945. By the afternoon of 3 January the enemy was cleared from the town of Lutrebois and the First Battalion, 134th Infantry Regiment, assembled in the vicinity of Marvie, prepared to continue the attack. At 0700 on 4 January 1945, the First Battalion attacked from the north towards the southeast in an effort to break the enemy position east of Lutrebois. Holding these positions won on 5 January 1945, the 134th Infantry Regiment repulsed numerous enemy attempts to infiltrate. Heavy concentrations of mortar and artillery fire continued to pour on the front line troops and on the rear areas. Constant attempts were made to break the enemy position but it was not until 9 January 1945 that an attack, launched at 1000, succeeded in establishing a coherent line. Launching an attack again at 0800 on 11 January 1945, the Regiment advanced to the northeast, encountering terrific small-arms, artillery, and mortar-fire and after a hard battle, the Regimental objective was secured. Elements of 4 enemy divisions, including 2 complete infantry regiments and large numbers of special troops were decimated by the 134th Infantry Regiment during the operation. A total of 427 prisoners of war were taken in addition to the large number of enemy killed and wounded.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (second Oak-Leaf Cluster) is awarded to Major General John T. Lewis, O7000, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 15 July 1945 to 1 March 1947.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated is awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Stephen C. McIntyre, O1295057, Infantry, Army of the United States, 17th Infantry, on 4 May 1945 displayed conspicuous gallantry in action near Zebra Hill at Okinawa, when the combat platoon which he commanded was forced to withdraw under heavy enemy sniper and machine-gun fire. Immediately, Lieutenant McIntyre again started forward, and moving alone along the open slope, still under hostile machine-gun and mortar fire, he successfully reached a forward observation post. Courageously holding his important position amid the hail of enemy fire, until mortally wounded, Lieutenant McIntyre provided an example of bravery and unflinching leadership in keeping with the high traditions of the military service. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal (Oak-Leaf Cluster) to Lieutenant McIntyre, for services during the same period, as published in General Orders 5, Headquarters 7th Infantry Division, APO 7, 11 January 1946.)

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated is awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

First Lieutenant Antonio Banta, O22129, Signal Corps, Philippine Army displayed gallantry in action on Bataan, Philippine Islands, from 23 to 26 January 1942. As Executive Officer, 41st Signal Company, 41st Infantry Division, Lieutenant Banta served with conspicuous courage and resourcefulness in leading his men in repairing communications facilities despite increasing enemy artillery fire and aerial bombing. Disregarding fatigue and constant exposure to danger, Lieutenant Banta skillfully installed new signal systems, and when a general withdrawal was finally ordered, successfully evacuated quantities of vital supplies in order to prevent their falling into enemy hands. By his inspiring conduct and unflinching devotion to duty, Lieutenant Banta fully upheld the highest traditions of the gallant defenders of Bataan.

Major Rhoads Mustain, O493652 (then captain) Medical Corps, Army of the United States, Surgeon of the 1st Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, on 16 August 1944 displayed conspicuous gallantry in action near Hyeres, France. Voluntarily leading a litter squad, going through intense enemy small arms fire, Major Mustain moved forward to evacuate a seriously wounded soldier. As they approached the stricken man, a member of the squad was seriously injured and the remainder forced to withdraw under the hail of enemy fire, but Major Mustain, with one other man, again moved forward, and twice returning under hostile fire, successfully evacuated the wounded men.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. Porchia, Italy, from 31 December 1943 to 12 January 1944. This regiment was assigned the mission of seizing and holding Mt. Porchia, a key outlying stronghold before Cassion. The position's obvious tactical value made a stubborn enemy defense a foregone conclusion. Preliminary reconnaissance was meager since the enemy was particularly sensitive to any activity in the area; however, at 2000 hours on 4 January, the regiment attacked. Enemy resistance exceeded expectations, and from H-hour until 0600 hours on 8 January, two powerful forces exchanged murderous blows. By sheer determination, refusing to stop at anything less than complete possession of the objective, the 6th Armored Infantry Regiment, with Company A, 16th Armored Engineer Battalion, attacked, drove back the enemy and held the bitterly won ground. This action adds further laurels to a distinguished infantry regiment and reflects great credit on the United States Army.

Captain Broadwater's cool conduct under enemy shell fire made it possible for our artillery to deliver its fire effectively.

Turner*, O1056581 (then second lieutenant), Signal Corps (Infantry), Army of the United States, as a prisoner of war at Stalag VI G, Hoffnungsthal, Germany, distinguished himself by heroic achievement on 12 April 1945. When friendly forces unknowingly by-passed the camp, Lieutenant Turner, unprepared and unarmed, daringly escaped from the camp, made his way through the territory occupied by hostile troops and successfully contacted a friendly tank destroyer battalion, elements of which he then personally led to the prison. Through his courage and daring in making his escape, Lieutenant Turner did much to bring speedy relief to the sick and wounded and to complete the release of his fellow prisoners.

I. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Sergeant Robert I. Heller (Army Serial No. 36825166), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company D, 393d Infantry Regiment, on 16 December 1944, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action at the Siegfried Line in the Ardennes, Belgium. In the predawn enemy attack, from a position which bore the brunt of the first enemy action, he directed his machine-gun fire on the advancing foe, inflicting heavy casualties. Despite intense enemy artillery, mortar, rifle, and machine-gun fire, he held his position in the face of repeated enemy attacks, again and again driving back the foe under his deadly fire. By his heroic stand, in which he ultimately made the supreme sacrifice, Sergeant Heller did much to repel the first furious assaults of the concerted enemy drive, thereby presenting an example of soldierly courage in keeping with highest traditions of the military service.

First Lieutenant Jerome L. Raider, O390078 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on Mindanao, Philippine Islands, on 8 January 1942. During an attack on the battalion sector which he commanded, Lieutenant Raider, a member of the 101st Division, Philippine Army, demonstrated outstanding courage and leadership in directing operations against the foe. His exemplary conduct and total disregard for his own safety were in constant evidence as he inspired his untrained and high-strung troops to hold their positions and repulse the assault.

2. By direction of the President, under provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Corporal Carl Karell, Jr. (Army serial No. 19056269), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 24 April 1942. When Battery Crockett, an adjacent gun emplacement, was hit and set on fire by enemy artillery action, he courageously left his position of comparative safety in Battery Geary, proceeded across a heavily shelled area to the burning emplacement, assisted in reducing the fire then raging, and aided in the removal of wounded and dead. This act of gallantry in action by Corporal Karell prevented a serious explosion and probably a large loss of life and was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS—Award-----	Section I
DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL—Awards-----	II
SILVER STAR—Awards-----	III
BRONZE STAR MEDAL—Awards-----	IV

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major Philip B. Larimore, O511609 (then first lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, commanding Company L, 30th Infantry Regiment, on 8 April 1945, displayed extraordinary heroism in action near Rottershausen, Germany. Leading his company's attack, he miraculously eluded the hail of enemy bullets concentrated on him and, in hand-to-hand fighting of which he was the center, killed a German officer at point-blank range. With the unit objective taken, he sent out a patrol. Learning soon after that it was surrounded by enemy forces, he determined to go to its relief. As he ran toward a tank in which to move up, enemy snipers opened fire, but leaping on the back of the vehicle, he ordered it forward and manned the turret machine gun. Firing into the woods and killing several of the enemy, he drew hostile fire on himself as his patrol used the diversion to withdraw. Moving across a clearing with the tank, firing and being fired on all the way, he was struck on the helmet by a sniper bullet and momentarily stunned. Leaping from the tank, he was again hit by enemy fire and severely wounded. Major Larimore, by his heroic leadership and courageous action in diverting the enemy, delivered his comrades from encirclement and greatly aided in securing the battalion objective. (This award supersedes the award of the Silver Star (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) to Major Larimore, for services during the same period, as published in General Orders 168, Headquarters 3d Infantry Division, 20 May 1945.)

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—1. Bradley*, O8307, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 26 August to 14 December 1944.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) is awarded to Brigadier General Marshall S. Carter, O18359 (then colonel), United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 20 March 1946 to 21 January 1947.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal is awarded to Colonel J. Hart Caughey, O19885, General Staff Corps, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 10 January 1946 to 21 January 1947.

4. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) is awarded to Lieutenant General Alwan C. Gillem, Jr., O3030, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 7 February 1946 to 1 April 1947.

5. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (second Oak-Leaf Cluster) is awarded to Major General Ernest N. Harmon, O5282, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 10 January 1946 to 30 April 1947.

6. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (second Oak-Leaf Cluster) is awarded to Lieutenant General Clarence R. Huebner, O4552 (then major general), United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 30 June to 13 December 1944 and 15 January to 8 May 1945.

7. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) is awarded to Major General Bryant E. Moore, O8633, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from 22 February to 8 May 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit (first Oak-Leaf Cluster) to Major General Moore, for services from 25 February to 11 May 1945, as published in General Orders 236, United States Forces, European Theater, 10 September 1945.)

III. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named enlisted man:

Technical Sergeant Arnold W. Almond (Army Serial No. 7086652) (then staff sergeant), Infantry, United States Army, a member of Company H, 422d Infantry Regiment, 106th Infantry Division, from 16 to 19 December 1944, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action near Schonberg, Belgium. In an outpost, as observer with the mortar platoon when the German offensive was launched, under great danger from the enemy at close range, he called for and directed mortar fire almost on his own position, delaying and helping to repel a strong enemy attack. On 19 December, under direct enemy artillery, small-arms, and automatic fire, he displayed further courage and leadership in action. On the bare forward slope of the hill, a position without cover or concealment of any kind, he encouraged and directed his squads and, in several heroic actions, demonstrated outstanding courage in the face of the enemy. Sergeant Almond's leadership and heroic efforts are in keeping with highest traditions of the military service.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commander in Chief, European Company, to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Marion W. Schewe, O29749, General Staff Corps, (Infantry), United States Army, while serving with the 225th Infantry Regiment, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action near Bliesbrosch, France, on 12 February 1945. While Colonel Schewe was supervising the reorganization of Company C, 255th Infantry Regiment, the Germans launched an attack with artillery and mortar preparation. Disregarding his own personal safety, he quickly reorganized the members of Company C for defense and, in the absence of an artillery observer, crawled forward to an advanced observation post and adjusted fire on the advancing Germans. As the result of Colonel Schewe's prompt action and personal example, this attack was repulsed when it had advanced to within a few yards of the position.

Following this heroic act, Private Mack then voluntarily accompanied and attended four serious stretcher cases which were being transported by truck over a mile of open terrain to the Malinta Tunnel Hospital.

Second Lieutenant Adorado Masigan, Infantry, Philippine Army, displayed heroic achievement in connection with military operations against the enemy on Bataan, Philippine Islands, from 24 to 28 January 1942. Lieutenant Masigan,

When a hostile attack forced the company on his left flank to withdraw, he skillfully moved his support platoon forward in the face of intensive fire and, despite heavy losses, resourcefully directed and inspired the most spirited resistance. When the Japanese infiltrated and succeeded in surrounding him, with a small number of his command, Lieutenant Masigan courageously led a break-through, subsequently reorganizing the remnants of his company and holding off the enemy from a new position.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal is awarded to Colonel Frederick A. Blesse, O6265 (then brigadier general), Medical Corps, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from March 1943 to April 1944. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit, for services from March to October 1943, to Colonel Blesse, as published in General Orders 122, North African Theater of Operations, 2 November 1945.)

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal is awarded to Colonel Dabney O. Elliott, O3669 (then brigadier general), Corps of Engineers, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from April 1943 to September 1944. (This award supersedes the award of a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit to Colonel Elliott, for services from 19 April 1943 to 5 September 1944, as published in General Orders 90, North African Theater of Operations, 10 September 1944.)

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal is awarded to Colonel George Mayo, O3913, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility from December 1943 to July 1945. (So much of sec. II, WD General Orders 15, 1946, as amended by par. 4, sec. IX, WD General Orders 26, 1946, as pertains to the award of the Legion of Merit to Colonel Mayo, for services during the same period, is rescinded.)

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class Joe D. Benedetto (Army serial No. 36649165), Infantry, Army of the United States, gunner of a machine-gun squad in Company H, 422d AGO 2454B—May 716130—47

Infantry Regiment, 106th Infantry Division, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action on 19 December 1944 near Schonberg, Belgium. Under direct enemy artillery, small-arms, and automatic fire, he manned his gun, delivering effective counterfire on the enemy forces to the front. From the bare, forward slope of the hill, a position without cover or concealment of any kind, he continued to man his gun until, receiving a direct hit from the enemy fire, his weapon was damaged and he severely wounded. Without regard for his safety, despite his wounds, Private Benedetto then stripped his gun and smashed its bolt and barrel assemblies before it fell into enemy hands, thereby displaying exceptional courage and a devotion to duty in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

III. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Major Seth R. Frear, O26166 (then first lieutenant), Infantry, United States Army, commanding Company A, 112th Infantry Regiment, 28th Infantry Division, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action near Wallendorf, Germany, on 17-18 September 1944. When an enemy counterattack seized a position covering a route of withdrawal for the 5th Armored Division, he personally led his seriously depleted unit through heavy enemy artillery and small-arms fire in a drive which forced superior numbers of the enemy from their positions and secured a bridgehead over the Sauer river. The conspicuous courage and leadership displayed by Major Frear reflect the highest traditions of the military service.

Colonel Grant Layng, O179604, Infantry, Army of the United States, commanding the 137th Infantry Regiment, on 11 July 1944, displayed conspicuous gallantry in directing an attack near Le Meauffe, France. As his regiment entered its first combat, he immediately went forward to the attacking units. Personally observing the situation and encouraging his men, he moved forward with the lead elements then opposed by an enemy strong point. Suddenly subjected to heavy enemy machine-gun fire, he immediately directed heavier weapons on the enemy resistance and exhorted junior leaders and men to move forward. Wounded by a machine-gun bullet, he continued in action under the enemy fire, coordinating action and arranging fire support at this critical point. Again seriously wounded as he moved to arrange the direction of mortar and cannon fire, he was then taken to an aid station where he refused medical attention until he could complete orders for the attack. Colonel Layng's exceptional fortitude and gallant, aggressive leadership reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Technical Sergeant Avin E. Stewart (Army serial No. 39001667) (then staff sergeant), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, on 5 May 1942, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Cut off from his organization by enemy action, he worked his way through the Japanese lines to a marine company engaged in a counterattack. Volunteering, he made a daring assault on a hostile machine-gun position, then seeing a man wounded, went to the soldier through heavy enemy fire, bandaged him, and returned the man to safety. Sergeant Stewart's heroic determination and personal courage reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class Perry J. Dupuy (Army serial No. 38376517), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company H, 422d Infantry Regiment, 106th Infantry Division, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action on 19 December 1944 near Schonberg, Belgium. On the forward slope of a hill without cover or concealment, he manned his machine gun, delivering accurate fire against the enemy. Despite the devastating barrage of enemy artillery, small arms, and automatic fire, he continued to fire his gun on the overwhelming enemy forces until, hit by an artillery shell, he was severely wounded. Without regard for his pain, struggling about the area under the heavy fire, he aided two other wounded soldiers and helped them to safety. In his sustained fire in direct support of the operation and by his aid to his wounded companions, under heavy fire, Private Dupuy demonstrated outstanding courage and a devotion to his comrades that reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

IV. SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Silver Star awarded to Major Wilfred F. Heinbach, Jr., as published in General Orders 64, General Headquarters Far East Command, 13 February 1947, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major Wilfred F. Heinbach, Jr., O387372 (then captain), Medical Corps, Army of the United States, distinguished himself in the Philippine Islands on 21 March 1942. When an enemy artillery bombardment resulted in the penetration by hostile shell fire of a tunnel lateral at Fort Frank, causing serious casualties, Major Heinbach volunteered to proceed by boat from his regular station at Fort Mills to the scene of the catastrophe to administer first aid treatment and to superintend the evacuation of the seriously wounded to the Malinta Tunnel Hospital at Fort Mills. Despite the hazard of intermittent and frequent artillery concentrations from concealed enemy positions in Cavite Province, from which over 400 rounds of 240-mm shells had been fired on Fort Frank the preceding day, this intrepid officer exhibited unselfish heroism and leadership of a high order in undertaking this humane and dangerous mission. The initiative, leadership, heroism, devotion to duty, and disregard for personal safety displayed by Major Heinbach in this exploit resulted in the saving of many lives through permitting the medical and surgical facilities of Malinta Tunnel Hospital to become promptly available for the care of the wounded.

V. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. VII. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Major Ernest C. Becker, O187617, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, a member of the 34th Engineers Combat Battalion, displayed heroism at Seoul, Korea, on 11 December 1946. During a highly destructive fire which destroyed the mess hall of the battalion, a Korean fireman was struck by a burning beam when the roof collapsed and spread burning timbers about him. With the realization that the victim lay beside a 55-gallon drum containing gasoline, Major Becker unhesitatingly ran through scattered embers and flames, picked up the man, and carried him to safety. Through his conspicuous courage and disregard for personal safety, Major Becker upheld the high traditions of the United States Army.

Technician Fifth Grade Clarence L. Cole, (Army serial No. 37758710), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of 465th Signal (Heavy) Construction Company, displayed heroism at Nagoya, Japan, on 24 May 1946. While working with a crew of linemen at Nagoya Airport, a lineman accidentally came in contact with a heavy copper wire carrying approximately 3,200 volts of electric current. Although realizing from experience the extreme danger involved, Technician Cole, with complete disregard for his own life, grabbed a pair of poorly insulated pliers and cut the wire with which the victim was in contact, despite a lethal charge which melted the jaws of the pliers. By his heroic action and quick thinking, Technician Cole upheld the high traditions of the service.

Private First Class Conrado T. Delfin, (Army serial No. 10319260), Philippine Scouts, a member of Service Battery, 24th Field Artillery, Philippine Scouts, displayed heroism at Camp O'Donnell, Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 16 December 1946. When an early morning fire broke out in the supply building of the 24th Field Artillery Battalion, Private Delfin, a member of the guard, knowing that the building contained artillery ammunition and that a man was sleeping inside, quickly broke in the door and entered. He seized a blazing box of cleaning material, threw it outside, and then, although the fire had spread to some containers of 105-mm ammunition, demonstrated a complete disregard for his own safety in beating out the flames which threatened to explode the many shells in the building. He continued to fight the fire, despite painful and severe burns, finally succeeding in completely extinguishing it. By his unflinching courage and devotion to duty, Private Delfin prevented probable loss of life and saved considerable property from complete destruction.

Technician Fourth Grade Harold E. Gilliam (Army serial No. 35426193), Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, a member of Company B, 542d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment, displayed outstanding heroism at the risk of his life on 16 September 1946 at Morro Bay, California. During landing craft operations off Morro Rock, California, an enlisted man was washed overboard by the heavy surf. Knowing his fellow soldier could not swim and despite 15-foot waves which made his own survival doubtful, Technician Gilliam, disregarding his own safety, dived into the water and, assisted by another soldier, managed to reach shore safely with the stricken man. The heroism displayed by Technician Gilliam is in keeping with the high traditions of the service and reflects credit on himself and the amphibious engineers.

Captain Norman N. Gross, O391529, Field Artillery, Army of the United States, a member of the 483d Chemical Mortar Battalion, on 19 July 1945, displayed heroism while supervising students in grenade practice at Camp Hood, Texas. He observed a live fragmentation grenade, with safety pin pulled and cap fired, fail to clear a safety partition of the grenade pit and fall among eight officers and enlisted men and against a full, open box of prepared grenades. While part of the group sought to flee the grenade pit and part of them froze, Captain Gross, at the risk of his own life, sprang forward, picked up the missile, and hurled it from the grenade pit. It exploded in air on clearing the safety parapet. Captain Gross's immediate and heroic action, at the risk of his own life, reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Major Alexander J. Leith, O336121, Infantry, Army of the United States, on 14 July 1946, displayed heroism on the Weser River in Germany. Seeing a woman struggling desperately in the water to keep from being swept by the swift current, he immediately plunged into the river and swam to her assistance. Although exhausted by his strenuous effort to reach her, he successfully kept her afloat until a police boat picked them up far out in the water. Major Leith's personal courage and quick action in an emergency reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Captain Harry V. Lemery, O1551444, Air Corps, Army of the United States, on 11 February 1945, displayed heroic conduct while a member of the 676th Bombardment Squadron at Dudkhundi, India. When a B-29 aircraft returning from a combat mission landed at the field, two 200-pound fragmentation bombs were dropped and damaged to the extent that the slightest jar might detonate them. Realizing that several aircraft remained to land and were dangerously low on fuel, and without specialized knowledge of bomb disposal methods, he immediately volunteered to disarm the bombs and clear the runway. The complete disregard for personal safety, prompt action, and calm courage displayed by Captain Lemery in an emergency reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Staff Sergeant Melvin E. Spradley (Army serial No. 37499525), Corps of Engineers, Army of the States, a member of Company B, 542d Engineer Boat and Shore Regiment, displayed outstanding heroism at the risk of his life, on 16 September 1946, at Morro Bay, California. During landing craft operations off Morro Rock, California, an enlisted man was washed overboard by the heavy surf. Knowing his fellow soldier could not swim and despite 15-foot waves which made his own survival doubtful, Sergeant Spradley, disregarding his own safety, dived into the water and, assisted by another soldier, managed to reach shore safely with the stricken man. The heroism displayed by Sergeant Spradley is in keeping with the high traditions of the service and reflects credit on himself and the amphibious engineers.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Technician Third Grade Ray E. Libhart (Army serial No. 39418559), Adjutant General's Department, Army of the United States, on 24 April 1945, displayed heroism in action near Meaux, France, Demonstrating calm judgment and personal courage, he aided the capture of two armed men who had robbed a French truck driver on the road at gunpoint. Despite their firing on him, he forced the escaping robbers to seek cover from his own accurate fire, making possible the capture of the first man. Technician Libhart then moved on toward the position of the second man, and after ordering him to throw down his gun and give up or face more his fire, accepted the man's surrender and turned him over to proper authorities.

VIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class Carl A. Aylesworth (Army serial No. 12239947), Infantry, Army of the United States, a machine-gun crewman of Company H, 422d Infantry Regiment, 106th Infantry Division, distinguished himself by heroic achievement on 19 December 1944 near Schonberg, Belgium. Under direct enemy artillery, small-arms, and automatic fire, he kept his gun crew supplied with ammunition in delivering fire on the enemy forces to the front. From the bare, forward slope of the hill, a position without cover or concealment of any kind, he continued to supply the gun crew until all available ammunition was exhausted. Struck by a bursting enemy shell, Private Aylesworth was killed as he helped to destroy the gun before it fell into enemy hands, thereby demonstrating a courageous devotion to duty in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

VII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 419th Armored Field Artillery Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 19 to 23 December 1944, during the German counteroffensive. The battalion, faced with demands which, except for superior technical ability and undaunted courage, could never have been met, remained in exposed and sometimes front-line positions in order to render vital artillery support to four units which were gallantly fighting the German attackers. Although enemy artillery fire fell almost constantly on the battalion command post and howitzer positions and swept all roads in the area over which reconnaissance parties, wire crews, and supply vehicles were forced to operate, the prompt and effective fires which the 419th Armored Field Artillery Battalion delivered over a 2,000-mile front for 4 days and 3 nights played a vital part in breaking up the enemy's strong attacks in the vicinity of Echternach, Konsdorf, and Breitweiler, Luxembourg. Fighting without rest 24 hours a day, the battalion delivered fire in support of the hard-pressed infantry. Observed fire wrought havoc on the attacking Germans and heavy casualties were inflicted. Almost ceaseless, unobserved fire interdicted enemy supply routes, river crossings, and approaches to friendly lines. From skilfully chosen positions, fire from the battalion's howitzers and those of other units were massed with good effect on the wide front. The 419th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, through its superior technical ability and high courage in the face of great odds, played a major role in containing the hostile offensive against the city of Luxembourg and in protecting other important installations and terrain against the fanatical German attacks. The superb teamwork of all its personnel, the prompt and accurate fires delivered, and the results gained are in keeping with the high traditions of the field artillery and reflect great credit on the armed forces of the United States.

DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL—Awards-----	III
SILVER STAR—Posthumous award-----	IV
SILVER STAR—Awards-----	V
LEGION OF MERIT—Awards-----	VI, VII

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Edward J. Downs, O1061038, Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of the 3d Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, displayed extraordinary heroism on 14 April 1945 at Schwelm, Germany. Leading his platoon in an attack against heavy enemy opposition, he spotted a group of Germans, armed with bazookas, entering a house just as the battalion tanks were starting down the street. Knowing that the enemy would easily be able to knock out the tanks, block the road, and delay the attack, he immediately began to warn the tank operators. Moving forward quickly through the hostile fire to the lead tank and exposing himself to the heavy enemy fire now concentrated on him, he successfully warned the tankmen of the trap. Severely wounded by an enemy shell during this heroic action, in which he helped the lead tank to spot and destroy the house harboring the enemy, Captain Downs prevented the loss of any tanks in the column and enabled the battalion to proceed to its important attack objective.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Cross awarded to Lieutenant Colonel Elton W. Ringsak, as published in General Orders 71, Headquarters Fifth Army, 30 September, 1943, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Elton W. Ringsak, O21409, Infantry, United States Army, while commanding officer, 2d Battalion, 6th Armored Infantry Regiment, on 4 January 1944, displayed outstanding gallantry and heroic leadership while participating in combat against the enemy in the vicinity of Mount Porchia, Italy. When his battalion was pinned down as a result of accurate enemy fire, he personally visited the units of his command, inspiring the officers and leaders, reorganizing the battalion, and directing their operations to a successful conclusion. Painfully wounded, he refused to be evacuated and conducted the reorganizing of the battalion until the objective was reached. While directing the preparation for the defense, Colonel Ringsak was gravely wounded, as a result of enemy artillery, and evacuated. By his gallant leadership and heroic disregard for danger, Colonel Ringsak was a source of inspiration to the officers and men of his battalion and his personal conduct of the operations assured the success of the attack.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Major General William C. Chase, O4739, United States Army. February 1945 to March 1946.

Colonel Rex V. D. Corput, Jr., O12700, Signal Corps, United States Army. September 1944 to December 1946. (This award supersedes the awards of the Bronze Star Medal, for services from 20 September 1944 to 25 January 1945, and a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit, for services from 27 January to 30 September 1945, to Colonel Corput, as published in General Orders 15, Headquarters Eighth Army, 16 February 1945, and General Orders 69, Headquarters United States Army Forces, Pacific, 23 February 1946, respectively.)

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Captain Clinton W. McKinley, O377719, Infantry, Army of the United States, while commanding Company A, 1st Battalion, 45th Infantry, Philippine Scouts, on 10 February 1942, distinguished himself by gallantry in action against the enemy on Bataan, Philippine Islands. During a coordinated attack against a strong Japanese force, he skillfully directed a flanking maneuver and personally led a platoon of the company through intense mortar and machine-gun fire to capture the enemy strong point which had been holding up the attack. By his courageous action and inspiring leadership under fire, Captain McKinley upheld the highest traditions of the service and brought great credit to himself and the armed forces of the United States.

V. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Corporal Harrison L. Avery (Army serial No. 19030274) (then private), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, on 21 March 1942, displayed conspicuous gallantry at Fort Frank, Philippine Islands. When an enemy shell, penetrating a lateral tunnel, exploded inside causing many severe casualties, he immediately went to the aid of the wounded. During the continuous enemy shelling, he entered the tunnel, carefully moved the wounded to more comfortable places, administered first aid, and carried food and water to the victims, doing everything possible to alleviate their distress. By his calm and courageous acts, Corporal Avery displayed soldierly conduct which reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Sergeant Mario A. Jurisprudencia (O66249) (then private), Philippine Army, displayed gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 21 January 1942. During a critical period of operations, the enemy made a deep penetration of the front of the 71st Division, Philippine Army, cutting lines of communications. Sergeant Jurisprudencia, a telephone operator, headquarters 71st Field Artillery, volunteered to take a vitally important message from the division artillery commander to a regimental commander, although the mission necessitated his crossing hostile lines. He skillfully completed his dangerous task despite the gravest danger. By his unflinching devotion to duty, Sergeant Jurisprudencia contributed in noteworthy degree to the courageous tradition of the defenders of Bataan.

Staff Sergeant Robert G. Quinn (Army serial No. 35631761), Infantry, Army of the United States, a mortar squad leader in Company H, 422d Infantry Regiment, 160th Infantry Division, on 19 December 1944, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action near Schonberg, Belgium. Under direct enemy artillery, small-arms, and automatic fire, he directed mortar fire on enemy forces and heavy weapons located directly across the valley. From the bare, forward slope of the hill, a position without cover or concealment of any kind, he continued to direct damaging fire on the enemy until, hit directly, his weapon was destroyed. Despite his severe wound caused by the enemy shell, Sergeant Quinn, then helping to organize remnants of several units into new fighting groups, demonstrated courage and determination in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Second Lieutenant Jack W. Stallings, Jr., O1341374 (then sergeant), Infantry, Army of the United States, 1st Company, 1st Regiment, 1st Special Service Force, on 23 May 1944, displayed gallantry in action against the enemy near Littoria, Italy. When three members of his unit were seriously wounded while disarming enemy mines during the drive out of the Anzio Beachhead, he immediately entered the mine field and, while under enemy small-arms and sniper fire, rendered first aid to the wounded. He disarmed a number of mines which facilitated evacuation of the wounded and, although painfully wounded himself, refused to be evacuated and continued in the attack. The courageous actions and devotion to duty displayed by Lieutenant Stallings reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Corporal Lawrence W. Post (Army serial No. 36810792) (then private first class), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of a machine-gun squad in Company H, 422d Infantry Regiment, 106th Infantry Division, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action on 19 December 1944, near Schonberg, Belgium. Under direct enemy artillery, small-arms, and automatic fire, he manned his machine gun, directing fire on the enemy forces to the front. From the bare, forward slope of the hill, a position without cover or concealment of any kind, he continued firing his weapon until out of ammunition and seriously wounded. He then helped destroy the gun before it fell into enemy hands. Corporal Post's courage and leadership are in keeping with highest traditions of the military service.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. AG 680.1 (26 Mar 47)

VII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 1st and 3d Ranger Battalions, with the following-attached units:

- 319th Glider Field Artillery Battalion;*
- Headquarters Battery, 80th Airborne Antiaircraft Battalion;*
- Battery D, 80th Airborne Antiaircraft Battalion;*
- Battery E, 80th Airborne Antiaircraft Battalion;*
- Battery F, 80th Airborne Antiaircraft Battalion;*
- Medical Detachment, 80th Airborne Antiaircraft Battalion;*
- Company H, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment;*
- 2d Platoon, Company A, 307th Airborne Engineer Battalion,*

are cited for outstanding performance of duty in action during the period 10 to 18 September 1943. These units, comprising a single ranger force, landed at Maori, Italy, with the mission of seizing the high ground controlling Chionzi Pass and of securing the left flank of the Fifth Army in its push northward into the plain of Naples. The position held by this force was vital not only for flank security, but also for observation of the plain and of the German supply routes and communications lines to the Salerno battlefield. During this period, the ranger force was subjected to almost continuous mortar and artillery fire and was repeatedly attacked by a determined enemy. Hostile forces were estimated to outnumber the rangers and attached units by approximately eight to one, but despite superior enemy numbers, the ranger force heroically fought off every attempt to dislodge it. Because of its limited strength and the large area assigned to it for defense, the force held the line thinly, marked by strong points with gaps covered by fire. Seven major counterattacks were repelled during the period and numerous enemy patrols were stopped, often in bitter, close-in fighting, with the ranger force using its mortars, artillery, automatic weapons, and grenades with devastating effect. The officers and men of these units fought without rest or relief and with limited food and water supplies. The continuous nature of the enemy fire and activity was such as to try the men to the limit of their endurance. Although overwhelming enemy forces drove almost constantly at the sparsely held positions, the determination and courage of the members of the 1st and 3d Ranger Battalions and their attached units offset the enemy superiority in numbers and made possible the successful accomplishment of a vital mission. (So much of par. 1, sec. XII, WD General Orders 36, 1944, as pertains to the citations of the 1st Ranger Battalion and the 3d Ranger Battalion, is rescinded.)

Captain Gordon R. Myers, O343608, Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 29 January 1942. Near Bagac, Bataan, Luzon, his provisional battalion was heavily attacked by a numerically superior hostile force which was attempting to penetrate the main battle position. Without regard for his own safety, frequently exposing himself to close-range enemy fire, he moved deliberately among his men, bolstering their defenses, encouraging them, and doing much to check the hostile advance. Through his courageous and skilful leadership, Captain Myers enabled his unit to stand against the superior enemy and to reinforce and finally to hold the important position.

Colonel Montgomery's courageous action and devotion to a fallen comrade reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Wounded by the hostile shell fire, despite the continuing enemy barrage, he remained at his task, completing the important work of line repair. Clark*, as published in WD General Orders 65, 1942, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). AGO 2191B—Apr. 716126°—47

Staff Sergeant James P. Davis (Army serial No. 37377391), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 549th Bombardment Squadron, 385th Bombardment Group, distinguished himself by gallantry in action as waist-gunner of a B-17 type aircraft on a combat mission to Berlin, Germany, on 6 October 1944. En route to the target, Sergeant Davis was seriously and painfully wounded when enemy fighters attacked the airplane. Despite his wounds and loss of blood, he remained at his guns and probably destroyed an enemy aircraft before he was killed by a burst of fire from an enemy airplane. The outstanding courage, determination, and heroic devotion to duty displayed by Sergeant Davis reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Lyle J. Fitzpatrick, O300496 (then lieutenant colonel), Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action, on 25 April 1942, while commanding the 63d Infantry Regiment, 61st Division, Philippine Army, on Panay, Philippine Islands. When his unit was ordered to destroy the machine shops of a sugar central, which the Japanese were using for ordnance repair and the manufacture of grenades, he personally organized and led a patrol of only 12 soldiers through the enemy lines. Under cover of darkness, he infiltrated the entire patrol past the guards and immediately placed improvised demolitions in key spot. During the explosions and confusion which followed, Colonel Fitzpatrick and his men were able to fight their way out of the central and return to their own lines without the loss of a single member of the patrol. The heroic conduct and bold leadership displayed by Colonel Fitzpatrick reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Harry J. Skinner, O890440 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, as executive officer, First Battalion, 62d Infantry Regiment, Philippine Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action at Mindanao, Philippine Islands, on 5 May 1942. He volunteered to lead a patrol to compel the enemy to deploy its force before reaching the battalion's defensive position near Dalirig. Near the village of Tangkulan, the patrol made contact and a sharp fire fight resulted. Lieutenant Skinner placed the patrol in positions to prevent further advance by the enemy and, arming himself with an automatic rifle, entered the village alone. Locating the Japanese command post and several other nearby installations, he opened fire, killing a number of the enemy. In the confusion which followed, he rejoined his patrol and withdrew to friendly lines. The bold leadership and fearless conduct under fire displayed by Lieutenant Skinner reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (Sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation to the following unit, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Forces, European Theater, is confirmed by the War Department in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 680th Glider Field Artillery Battalion is cited for extraordinary heroism, efficiency, and achievement in action against the enemy during the assault crossing of the Rhine River near Wesel, Germany, on 24 March 1945. Coming in by glider through the heaviest concentration of antiaircraft fire yet experienced in an airborne operation, the 680th Glider Field Artillery Battalion landed widely dispersed in open fields covered by enemy artillery, automatic weapons, and small-arms fire, under direct observation from enemy strong points throughout the area. With complete disregard for their personal safety, the members of this field artillery battalion unloaded their gliders under a withering cross-fire, assembled in small groups, and fought their way through occupied enemy strong points and field fortifications to the assembly area, using howitzers, bazookas, grenades, and carbines to reduce enemy positions. During the assembly, this field artillery battalion captured and destroyed an enemy 105-mm. artillery battery and a 155-mm. artillery battery and captured 150 enemy soldiers. With 19 killed, including both howitzer battery commanders, and 53 wounded during the assembly, the aggressive action of all members of this battalion enabled both howitzer batteries to occupy position and the battalion to assume its artillery mission within 1 hour of the initial landing. One hour later, this battalion had completed its survey and had established complete wire communication within the battalion. Within 5 hours after the initial landing, 9 howitzers were in position and 900 rounds of ammunition had been assembled at the position area. The efficiency and aggressive action of the 680th Glider Field Artillery Battalion, in the face of great odds and a defensively prepared enemy, cleared a large portion of the division area and resulted in the provision of adequate artillery support, which assisted materially in the ultimate success of the operation and subsequent exploitation of the gains achieved.

Sergeant Howard G. Hall (Army serial No. 33294700), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as gunner on a B-17 type aircraft. On 11 December 1943, while participating in a combat mission to Emden, Germany, Sergeant Hall sacrificed his life in rendering effective defense against aggressive enemy fighter airplanes while other crew members abandoned the stricken aircraft. Although seriously wounded himself, Sergeant Hall assisted the wounded radio operator from the airplane before he crashed to his death. The exceptional courage, inspirational fighting spirit, and sincere devotion to duty exhibited by Sergeant Hall reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

Sergeant Fred Schmidt (Army serial No. 36739281), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as gunner on a B-24 type aircraft. On 25 August 1944, while participating in a combat mission to Lubeck, Germany, Sergeant Schmidt lost his life in a courageous attempt to save his aircraft from fire. Despite painful wounds from antiaircraft fire, Sergeant Schmidt continued his attempt to extinguish the flames until the airplane exploded. Technical Sergeant Paul L. Zalaker (Army serial No. 18169348), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as engineer of a B-17 type aircraft on a combat mission to Karlsruhe, Germany, on 27 May 1944. Following a collision with another aircraft over the target, Sergeant Zalaker's airplane went out of control and the crew was ordered to bail out. With complete disregard for his personal safety, Sergeant Zalaker delayed his jump in order to assist the radio operator whose parachute had become entangled in the bomb bay doors. Sergeant Zalaker's honorable and heroic conduct is in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

Sergeant Delmar L. Anderson (Army serial No. 19113001), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as engineer on a B-17 type aircraft. On 5 March 1945, while participating in a combat mission against a highly important target at Berlin, Germany, antiaircraft fire severely damaged the aircraft and killed several crew members. The exceptional courage and unselfish devotion to duty displayed by Sergeant Anderson are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Staff Sergeant Leo J. Bianchi (Army serial No. 31213084), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as gunner on a B-17 type aircraft on a combat mission to Paris, France, on 26 November 1943. During the withdrawal from the target area, enemy aircraft inflicted severe damage on Sergeant Bianchi's airplane and wounded several crew members. When the signal to abandon the crippled aircraft was given, Sergeant Bianchi remained to assist his wounded comrades to escape. Despite intense heat and imminent danger of explosion, Sergeant Bianchi made his way to the tail compartment to aid the wounded gunner before bailing out himself. First Lieutenant Joseph S. Bingham, O802426 (then first lieutenant), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as copilot of a B-17 type aircraft on a combat mission to Berlin, Germany, on 6 October 1944. Intense antiaircraft fire over the target severely damaged Lieutenant Bingham's airplane and set fire to the nose and two engines. With complete disregard for his personal safety, Lieutenant Bingham remained at the controls to keep the aircraft on level flight while the crew bailed out. Lieutenant Bingham's heroic conduct and exceptional professional skill were contributing factors in the safe escape of his crew members and reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Second Lieutenant Richard L. Druhota, O828114, Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as pilot and airplane commander of a B-17 type aircraft. On 7 April 1945, while participating in a combat mission to Parchim, Germany, an aggressive enemy fighter attack set fire to Lieutenant Druhota's airplane and the crew was ordered to bail out. After assisting the copilot with his parachute, Lieutenant Druhota returned to the controls to level the airplane in order that the crew members in the nose could leave through the forward escape hatch. The skilful airmanship, courageous leadership, and self-sacrifice displayed by Lieutenant Druhota reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

Foppiano*, O757803, Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as navigator on a B-17 type aircraft, while participating in a combat mission over enemy-held territory on 10 May 1944. When the oxygen system was destroyed by antiaircraft fire, Lieutenant Foppiano sacrificed his chance for safety by relinquishing his emergency oxygen bottle to the critically wounded bombardier. Prior to bailing out of the burning airplane, Lieutenant Foppiano further endangered his life by assisting the wounded bombardier to escape. The heroic action exhibited by Sergeant Regan is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Sergeant Peter A. Riley (Army serial No. 13124970), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism while participating in aerial flight as radio operator of a B-17 type aircraft on a combat mission to Bohlen, Germany, on 11 September 1944. By his heroic conduct and devotion to duty, Lieutenant Schaudt upheld the highest traditions of the military service.

First Lieutenant Donald D. Sharps, O801214, Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as pilot of a B-17 type aircraft on a combat mission to Brunswick, Germany, on 11 January 1944. Immediately after leaving the target, Lieutenant Sharps' airplane was severely damaged by enemy fighters and several crew members were seriously wounded. Despite the immiment danger of explosion, Lieutenant Sharps deliberately sacrificed his chance for safety by attempting to crash-land the flaming aircraft in order to save the lives of his wounded crew members. The heroic conduct, decisive leadership, and devotion to duty exhibited by Lieutenant Sharps reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

Sergeant Philip A. Smith (Army serial No. 6942945), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as gunner on a B-24 type aircraft. While participating in a combat mission against a highly important target at Lubeck, Germany, on 25 August 1944, Sergeant Smith's aircraft was severely damaged by antiaircraft fire and several crew members were wounded. Despite the danger of explosion Sergeant Smith courageously attempted to extinguish the flames in the waist in order to permit his fellow crew members an opportunity to abandon the crippled airplane. Sergeant Smith's heroic action and outstanding devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Staff Sergeant Clifford R. Starkey (Army serial No. 36189601), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism in aerial flight as gunner on a B-17 type aircraft while participating in a combat mission to Regensburg, Germany, on 17 August 1943. Despite a painful wound received in an attack by enemy fighter aircraft on the approach to the target, Sergeant Starkey remained at his gun position and continued to deliver effective fire against attacking fighters during the withdrawal from the target area. Sergeant Starkey's courageous action and disregard for personal safety, in providing defensive fire while his crew members abandoned the crippled aircraft, reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Staff Sergeant James C. Weick (Army serial No. 32756747), Air Corps, Army of the United States, displayed heroism while participating in aerial flight on 25 August 1944. While serving as engineer on a B-24 type aircraft during a combat mission to Lubeck, Germany, Sergeant Weick's aircraft suffered a direct hit by antiaircraft fire which seriously damaged the airplane and wounded several crew members. After assisting in the removal of a wounded crew member from the nose, Sergeant Weick courageously fought the spreading flames until forced to abandon the disabled aircraft. Sergeant Weick's complete disregard for his personal safety in his heroic endeavor to aid his wounded comrades reflects great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

The courageous leadership, decisive action, and devotion to duty displayed by Major Lamb enabled the formation to successfully complete its mission and reflect great credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

Egnor* (A135679), Women's Army Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 300th Army Air Forces Base Unit, Headquarters Tactical Air Command, on 12 July 1946, displayed heroism at Langley Field, Virginia. On duty the previous night, she was awakened next day by the screams of a child and another person. Dashing from her quarters to a nearby sea wall, and seeing there a small boy floundering helplessly in the water, Corporal Egnor jumped immediately into the bay. Struggling with extreme difficulty through the moss-covered and debris-laden water, and though she severely injured her foot on a sharp object, she successfully moved the child to the bank where she was pulled to safety. Corporal Egnor's quick thought and action and voluntary risk of her life reflect great credit on herself and the military service.

Staff Sergeant Stanley Gojcz (Army serial No. 6127542), Air Corps, United States Army, a member of the 729th Air Materiel Squadron, on 13 July 1946, displayed heroism on the Danube River near Regensburg, Germany. Returning to the squadron base with a group of men crossing the river on a barge, he heard one of the men fall into the river. Immediately, he plunged into the water to aid the man, and struggling desperately in the swift current of the river, tried to reach him, but before he reached the stricken swimmer the man was pulled down by the undertow and could not be found in the swirling waters. Sergeant Gojcz was so thoroughly exhausted by his heroic efforts that it was necessary to drag him up the river bank. I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted man:

Lieutenant Colonel Elliott B. Cheston, O31976, Infantry, United States Army, while commanding the 3d Battalion, 319th Infantry Regiment, 80th Infantry Division, on 6 and 7 September 1944, displayed extraordinary heroism in action in France. During an attack by his battalion on Villey-le-Sec, a concrete fortress topped by a steel revolving turret and defended by many machine guns and one 75-mm gun, he found his troops stopped by a concrete dry moat 12 feet wide and 20 feet deep. From a position on the left flank of his troops he ordered a withdrawal to covered positions and, remaining himself in his advanced position, personally directed machine-gun and artillery fire on the enemy. Without regard for his own safety, he stood erect, drawing the hostile fire on himself to allow his troops to reach safety before he finally withdrew with his command group. The next morning, in a renewed attack supported by tanks, he again advanced with his leading scouts, designated, with tracer bullets, enemy machine-gun emplacements as targets for the tanks, and continued to lead his men in the successful storming of Fort Villey-le-Sec. Colonel Cheston's leadership and heroic actions are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

Technician Fifth Grade Jack L. Evans (Army serial No. 17153073) (then private), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company K, 357th Infantry Regiment, distinguished himself on 10 July 1944 by extraordinary heroism in action near Beau Caudrey, France. Although severely wounded, he refused evacuation to remain in defense of his company's hard-pressed position. Under enemy fire, and in complete disregard for his own safety, he crawled between the lines to bring one of his wounded comrades to safety. When a heavy German attack forced his company to withdraw to the next hedgerow, Corporal Evans remained in his forward position and continued to fire on the advancing enemy, even though he was weak from exertion and loss of blood. Feigning death, he succeeded in evading capture and after dark crawled to the protection of his company's new position. The courage, determination, and devotion to duty displayed by Corporal Evans brought great credit on himself, his organization, and his country.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Brigadier General Elliott C. Cutler, as published in WD General Orders 19, 1922, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Captain George W. Everett, O1302286 (then first lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action from 15 to 17 April 1945, near Flein, Germany. Seeing a patrol from his company pinned down by heavy enemy automatic and machine-gun fire, he commandeered a medium tank and, with two volunteers, immediately moved to relieve the unit. Standing atop the tank, he directed it over a wide and open field as the hostile fire ricocheted about him, manning the turret machine gun himself and directing operation of the tank cannon. Keeping up his fire as the tank moved between the patrol and the enemy, he diverted the hostile fire. The pinned-down patrol rejoined its platoon and capture of the hill was completed. On 17 April, during a night attack on Gagenberg when stopped by intense enemy fire, he flanked the leading platoon and exhorted his men to action in a bold advance. Overrunning two enemy machine-gun positions and continuing the advance, capture of the town was completed. Captain Everett's personnel courage and leadership reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles B. Hazeltine, Jr., O22896, Cavalry, United States Army, as commanding officer, of the 3d Squadron, 124th Cavalry, on 19–20 January 1945, distinguished himself by gallantry in action against the Japanese near Namhpakka, Burma. During the late afternoon of 19 January, leading elements of his squadron gained a foothold on a large hill mass which was the key terrain feature in the tactical plan to cut the Burma Road and deny its use to the enemy. Darkness set in before the hill could be captured and realizing that the Japanese would reinforce the position during the night, he quickly and skillfully organized a night attack and personally led it through heavy enemy artillery, mortar, and small-arms fire to capture the objective. The gallant and courageous leadership displayed by Colonel Hazeltine greatly inspired his troops and contributed directly to the successful accomplishment of the mission.

The citation reads as follows:

Combat Command R, 5th Armored Division, composed of the following units:

Headquarters Reserve Command, 5th Armored Division;

Detachment A, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3d Armored Group;

10th Tank Battalion;

47th Armored Infantry Battalion;

95th Armored Field Artillery Battalion;

Company C, 85th Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron (Mecz);

Company C, 22d Armored Engineer Battalion;

Company C, 628th Tank Destroyer Battalion (SP);

Company C, 387th Antiaircraft (AW) Battalion (SP);

Company C, 75th Medical Battalion (Armored);

Detachment, Company C, 127th Ordnance Maintenance Battalion, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 29 November to 8 December 1944 in Germany. During the severe battle of the Hurtgen Forest, this combat command played a heroic and highly essential part in the operation aimed at capturing the vital Roer River dams. Combat Command R, 5th Armored Division, spearheaded three important advances during the period, capturing Kleinhau on 29 November, Brandenburg on 3 December, and Bergstein on 5 December. In each instance, the men of Combat Command R, 5th Armored Division, were sent out front to capture the fortified town and hold it until friendly infantry could clear the adjacent woods. Under extremely unfavorable weather conditions and over terrain emphatically not suited to armored action, this command gallantly attacked through deadly mine fields against a determined enemy, well-intrenched, fortified, and supported by intense artillery and mortar fire. In conjunction with friendly infantry on the flanks, Combat Command R, 5th Armored Division, successfully captured the three important towns and cleared a fortified zone of enemy resistance on the Vossenach Ridge. Since Bergstein was most important to the Germans in connection with the defense of the Roer River dams, they defended it bitterly and made fanatic efforts to recapture it, once it had fallen. However, Combat Command R, 5th Armored Division, although reduced to 8 effective tanks and some 20 effective riflemen per company, employed the last available man, and heroically repelled almost continuous combined armored and infantry counterattacks against the heights of Bergstein for a period of 36 hours. In keeping with the highest traditions of the military service, the entire Combat Command R, 5th Armored Division, and attached units, by its undaunted determination, outstanding courage, and grim tenacity, captured and held, against the strongest German resistance, the important heights which dominated the Roer River dams.

V. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. II, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 3d Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 1 to 6 December 1944 in Germany. On 1 December 1944, the 3d Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, launched an attack in conjunction with other divisional units and advanced steadily against stiff enemy resistance. Two vicious enemy counterattacks failed to halt the battalion's forward movement and, subsequently, the objective was seized. The reserve company, attacked from the rear by strong hostile forces, fought desperately and repulsed the attack, suffering the loss of its commanding officer and an entire platoon. Isolated and cut off from adjacent units, the 3d Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, repelled repeated counterattacks for a 2-day period and assisted the advance of friendly units on the flanks with heavy fire. On 4 December, the battalion launched a strong attack in the vicinity of Bergstein. This attack proved to be of material value to friendly armor which captured the town the following day. The 3d Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, by expert supporting fires on the right flank, gave very valuable assistance in the capture of Bergstein. One of its companies, which followed the tanks into town, repulsed a severe counterattack on 6 December and inflicted such heavy losses that the enemy fell back in disorder. A fanatic counterattack was launched by the enemy, with innumerable foot troops following closely behind supporting tanks, against the battalion's positions. Courageously, the machine gunners and riflemen held their fire until the hostile force reached a position approximately 25 yards to their front. Devastating artillery, mortar, machine-gun, and small-arms fire was placed upon the enemy, resulting in 150 Germans killed and 35 captured. During the 6-day battle, the 3d Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, suffered heavy casualties, but, displaying an indomitable fighting spirit, the officers and men held their ground and killed, wounded, or captured a total of 800 Germans. The extraordinary heroism, tenacity of purpose, and esprit de corps displayed by the personnel of the 3d Battalion, 28th Infantry Regiment, are worthy of the highest praise. (Par. 5, sec. IX, WD General Orders 26, 1945, is rescinded.)

I.—DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Lieutenant General Lucius D. Clay, as published in WD General Orders 36, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant General Lucius D. Clay, O9318, United States Army. April 1945 to March 1947.

II.—SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major Hugh R. Nutter, United States Marine Corps, on 25 April 1942, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy artillery bombardment, he dashed across an area where shells were bursting to pick up a seriously wounded soldier in his arms and carry him several hundred yards to a medical station. By this valiant effort, in the face of great danger, Major Nutter brought great credit to himself and the armed forces of the United States.

III.—LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Colonel Clarence J. Hauck, Jr., O18360, General Staff Corps, United States Army. January 1943 to December 1946.

Colonel Frank J. Hills, O212764, Air Corps, Army of the United States. December 1942 to July 1944.

Brigadier General George F. Schulgen, O15999, United States Army. July 1945 to December 1946.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer:

Colonel Albert C. Harlander, O227347 (then lieutenant colonel), Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. March 1943 to August 1944.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Legion of Merit awarded to Colonel Maurice W. Daniel, as published in General Orders 65, Headquarters North African Theater of Operations, 9 July 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Maurice W. Daniel, O12766 (then brigadier general), Field Artillery, United States Army. 14 April to 2 May 1945.

V. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Flying Cross awarded to Lieutenant Colonel Robert E. Thacker, as published in General Orders 39, Headquarters Fifth Air Force, 23 February 1943, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926). The citation is as follows:

Lieutenant Colonel Robert E. Thacker, O35210, Air Corps, United States Army. 27 and 28 February 1947.

VI. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major Hugh R. Nutter, United States Marine Corps, on 15 December 1944, distinguished himself by heroic achievement in Subic Bay, Philippine Islands. The Japanese transport, on which he was a prisoner of war, was attacked by American airplanes and forced to beach. Realizing that a number of prisoners were too weak to swim, and disregarding all thought of personal danger, he towed one man to shore and immediately swam back to the ship to tow in another man before he became exhausted by this strenuous effort. The courage and selfless devotion to duty displayed by Major Nutter reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

VII. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 91st Bombardment Group (H) is cited for extraordinary heroism, determination, and esprit de corps in action against the enemy on 4 March 1943. On this date, the 91st Bombardment Group (H) took off from home base in England, as scheduled, to attack the railroad marshalling yards located at Hamm, Germany, in one of the first operations conducted by heavy bombardment units against targets within Germany. This unit departed the English coast on course and a few miles out over the English Channel encountered thick haze, high cloud, and icing conditions reducing visibility to less than 1,000 yards. Weather conditions continued to deteriorate to such an extent that only the determination and skill of each pilot in maintaining formation was responsible for the negotiation of the flight across the English Channel. Three other bombardment groups comprising the force engaged in this military operation were forced to abandon the mission because of the adverse weather encountered. Over enemy-occupied Holland, weather conditions improved and the 91st Bombardment Group (H), consisting of sixteen B-17 aircraft, continued on toward the assigned objective. Vigorous attacks by enemy fighters began almost immediately. In the face of vicious opposition from an estimated 60 to 75 fighter airplanes of the German Air Force, this unit demonstrated the utmost courage and determination, fighting doggedly to maintain course and position en route to the target. Although four B-17 aircraft were lost to enemy action and heavy antiaircraft fire was met from enemy ground installations, the 91st Bombardment Group (H) successfully reached the marshalling yards at Hamm, Germany. In the face of opposition from enemy ground defenses, this unit tenaciously maintained the bomb run and bombs were dropped, inflicting extensive damage on the German installations. The 12 surviving aircraft, having successfully completed their primary assignment and having destroyed 13 enemy fighters, probably destroyed 3, and damaged 4, continued to maintain formation integrity and completed the return flight to home base. The conspicuous courage and esprit de corps exhibited by the 91st Bombardment Group (H) in the face of extremely adverse weather conditions and opposition from the enemy, which resulted in casualties consisting of 1 killed, 5 seriously wounded, and 40 missing in action, were responsible for the successful bombardment of one of the first high priority objectives assigned to bombardment forces in the European Theater of Operations. The actions of this unit reflect the highest credit on the 91st Bombardment Group (H) and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 513, Headquarters 1st Air Division, 15 August 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater.)

2. The 92d Bombardment Group (H) is cited for extraordinary heroism, determination, and esprit de corps in action against the enemy on 11 September 1944. On this date, 36 aircraft of the 92d Bombardment Group (H) were dispatched on a bombing mission to the site of the vital synthetic oil plant located at Merseburg, Germany, one of the most heavily defended areas in enemy-occupied Europe. The aircraft were air-borne without incident and proceeded along the scheduled line of flight to enemy territory. Along the route, a considerable number of hostile aircraft dived out of the protecting glare of the sun to press home the first of a series of vicious attacks against the bombardment force. In the face of determined enemy opposition, the 92d Bombardment Group (H) continued on to the objective. As the bomb run was initiated, the formation was subjected to an intense and accurate barrage of flak. Refraining from the use of evasive action to insure the greatest bombing accuracy, aircraft of this organization incurred extensive damage from the antiaircraft fire. Immediately prior to bombs away, the lead airplane received a direct hit and was forced to leave formation. Despite the innumerable hazards and difficulties involved, the 92d Bombardment Group (H) tenaciously accomplished a second bomb run and bombs were released with exceptional accuracy in the target area. Enemy fighters resumed their attacks when the aircraft were out of range of the flak defenses. Without friendly fighter support, the 92d Bombardment Group (H) fought a running battle with the hostile airplanes along the flight back to base in England. When the enemy finally terminated the series of aerial battles, 24 bombers remained of the original total of 36 dispatched by this unit. One-third of the bombing force sent against the enemy by the 92d Bombardment Group (H) did not return from the operation of this date, although returning gunners claimed the destruction of eight hostile fighters and the probable destruction of two more. The exemplary aggressiveness and high degree of coordination evidenced by this unit in all phases of the attack against the important strategic objective were responsible for the successful completion of the mission. The gallantry, determination, and esprit de corps displayed by the 92d Bombardment Group (H) reflect the highest credit on itself and the armed forces of the United States: (General Orders 526, Headquarters 1st Air Division, 13 September 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater.)

3. The 305th Bombardment Group (H) is cited for extraordinary heroism, determination, and esprit de corps in action against the enemy on 4 April 1943. On this date, the 305th Bombardment Group (H) was assigned the task of leading a force of four heavy bombardment groups composed of B-17 aircraft to attack the Renault Motor Vehicle and Armament Works located at Paris, enemy-occupied France. Assembly of the 18 airplanes utilized by this unit was accomplished over England beneath broken cloud formations at 5,000 feet. The formation departed the English coast over Beachy Head and, with fighter escort, proceeded to the French coast where the escorting fighters were forced to turn back. Continuing, unescorted, in the lead position of the bomber force, the 305th Bombardment Group (H) determinedly executed the flight to the target area, maintaining a compact defensive formation. Although industrial haze was encountered, the target was identified and a bomb run was conducted at 22,000 feet in the face of antiaircraft fire. Bombs were dropped on the target with great accuracy and strikes were scored on at least 19 buildings of the works. As the 305th Bombardment Group (H) turned off the target, a column of smoke and fire was observed to rise approximately 4,000 feet in the air and, 5 minutes later, an estimated 75 fighter aircraft of the German Air Force attacked in formations of 4 to 6 directly ahead and level. F. W. 190's and ME. 109's repeatedly assaulted the group with determination and vigor. Displaying the highest courage and intrepidity, the 305th Bombardment Group (H) fought doggedly to maintain course and position on the return route to home base. In the ensuing aerial battle, this unit destroyed 26 hostile fighters, probably destroyed 6, and damaged 5 others. The determination and gallantry displayed by this unit were responsible for the completion of one of the most highly successful operations carried out by bombardment forces in the European Theater of Operations up to that date. Its esprit de corps was a vital factor in overcoming and defeating the enemy in aerial battle, although 30 officers and men were missing in the action. The actions of this unit reflect the highest credit on the 305th Bombardment Group (H) and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 522, Headquarters 1st Air Division, 10 September 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater.)

4. The 351st Bombardment Group (H) is cited for extraordinary heroism, determination, and esprit de corps in action against the enemy on 9 October 1943.

On this date, the 351st Bombardment Group (H) was assigned the task of leading a combat bombardment wing formation to attack an aircraft and aircraft components factory at Anklam, Germany. At 0732 hours, twenty-one B-17 aircraft of this unit took off, assembled in combat formation, and proceeded on course toward the continent. Over occupied Denmark, fighter aircraft of the German Air Force began to attack the formation with vigor and determination. Over 200 of the enemy were encountered lining up in groups of from 4 to 20 airplanes astern, preparatory to carrying out highly destructive attacks against the bombardment forces. Despite this overwhelming opposition, the 351st Bombardment Group (H) doggedly maintained course and direction en route to the target. Many of those attacks were viciously carried out at close quarters and, in addition, the enemy employed rocket projectiles from positions outside gun range. The courage and determination displayed by the 351st Bombardment Group (H) were responsible for the destruction of many hostile fighters and the successful execution of the flight to the target area. In the face of concentrated opposition from antiaircraft installations, this unit skillfully and courageously dropped its bombs on the target and regrouped to obtain maximum defensive fire power. On the return flight, enemy fighters continued to attack and harass the formation causing the destruction of many B-17 aircraft. The 351st Bombardment Group (H) succeeded in driving through these attacks and landed safely at home base in England at 1530 hours, having lost 5 aircraft and 51 officers and men. In the performance of this operation, this unit, demonstrating the highest degree of courage and determination, destroyed 26 enemy aircraft, probably destroyed 2, and damaged 13 others. The extraordinary gallantry and inspiring esprit de corps exhibited by this organization in carrying out its assigned task, despite the overwhelming resistance encountered, reflect the highest credit on the 351st Bombardment Group (H) and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 528, Headquarters 1st Air Division, 13 September 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater.)

5. The 357th Fighter Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action on two highly successful heavy-bomber escort operations on 6 March and 29 June 1944. On 6 March 1944, the newly operational 357th Fighter Group provided target and withdrawal support to heavy bombardment aircraft bombing Berlin, which was the deepest penetration of single-engine day fighters up to that time. The thirty-three P-51 aircraft went direct to Berlin and picked up the first formations of B-17's just before their arrival over the city. They found the bombers being viciously attacked by one of the largest concentrations of twin-engine and single-engine fighters in the history of aerial warfare. From 100 to 150 single-engine and twin-engine fighters, some firing rockets, were operating in the immediate target area in groups of 30 to 40, as well as singly. Each combat wing of bombers was being hit as it arrived over Berlin and, although they were sometimes outnumbered as much as 6 to 1, flights and sections of the 357th Fighter Group went to aid each combat wing as it arrived over the target, providing support in the area for 30 minutes. Upwards of 30 enemy aircraft at a time were attacked by these separate flights and sections and driven away from above and below the bombers. Some of the P-51's left their formations to engage the enemy fighters below the bomber level in order to prevent them from reforming for further attacks. Though fighting under the most difficult conditions and subjected to constant antiaircraft and enemy aircraft fire, so skillfully and aggressively were their attacks on the enemy fighters carried out that not a single aircraft of the 357th Fighter Group was lost. In driving enemy fighters away from the bombers, 20 Nazi fighters were destroyed, 1 probably destroyed, and 7 others damaged. On the withdrawal, one flight of five P-51's strafed a large enemy airfield in central Germany, damaging three twin-engine and single-engine aircraft on the ground and killing fifteen to twenty armed personnel before regaining altitude and returning to the bombers. On 29 June 1944, the 357th Fighter Group escorted heavy bombers to Leipzig, Germany. En route to the target, over 75 enemy aircraft attacked the bomber formation. The fifty P-51's of the 357th Fighter Group met the enemy's attack and so furiously and skillfully did they carry out their attacks that no bombers from the formation which they were protecting were lost, although twenty-two of the Nazi aircraft were destroyed and four damaged, the remainder were driven away. One P-51 in the 357th Fighter Group was lost. The extraordinary heroism, determination, fighting skill, and total disregard for personal safety displayed by the personnel of the 357th Fighter Group on these occasions are in keeping with and add notably to the most cherished traditions of the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 47, Headquarters 3d Air Division, 13 January 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater.)

6. The 381st Bombardment Group (H) is cited for extraordinary heroism, determination, and esprit de corps in action against the enemy on 8 October 1943. On this date, the 381st Bombardment Group (H) provided the low group formation of 18 aircraft in the lead combat bombardment wing designated to attack the important submarine and destroyer construction yards located near Bremen, Germany. Aircraft were dispatched and completed rendezvous in accordance with the briefed flight plan. Crossing over the English Coast, this unit joined the fighter escort as scheduled and proceeded along the route to the target. As the escorting fighters withdrew, having reached the limit of their range, between 150 and 200 German single-engine and twin-engine interceptors began a fierce and determined attempt to turn back the bomber force. Hostile aircraft came in singly, in pairs, and in waves of from three to eight, in line abreast and in dive astern, utilizing all possible tactics in a desperate effort to deter the bombers from their course. Single-engine fighters were especially persistent, closing in to 100 yards with machine guns firing almost incessantly and breaking away with half-rolls and chandelles. Twin-engine aircraft lobbed rockets from ranges of 800 to 1,000 yards, some closing in to as near as 200 yards with cannon firing. In the face of this almost overwhelming enemy opposition, the 381st Bombardment Group (H) demonstrated outstanding courage and consummate proficiency in exacting a heavy toll of the attacking force and maintaining a closely integrated formation. Upon reaching the target area, the bombardment aircraft were subjected to additional hazards and difficulties created by intense and accurate anti-aircraft fire. A straight and level bomb run was accomplished and, despite the extremely unfavorable conditions which prevailed, bombs were released with accuracy, inflicting extensive damage throughout the enemy installations. During the flight over the target, hostile aircraft continued to sweep through the formation, bringing heavy concentrations of fire power to bear against the bomber force. After leaving the area of the objective, gunners again and again repelled unrelenting, vigorous attacks for approximately half an hour, until rendezvous was effected with the withdrawal escort. The lead airplane having been lost to enemy action, the 381st Bombardment Group (H) then completed, without further incident, the flight back to base with the deputy lead aircraft in the lead position. Subjected to vicious and tenacious attacks by hostile aircraft, this organization expertly accounted for the destruction of 27 German airplanes, the probable destruction of 1, and the damaging of 5. The combined loss by this unit to fighters and antiaircraft fire was 7 bombers out of the original group formation of 18 and every returning aircraft sustained battle damage. Seventy officers and enlisted men were reported missing in action, two were killed in action, and two were wounded in action. The extraordinary gallantry, superior devotion to duty, and exceptional bombing ability displayed by this organization in completing its assigned task with singular success reflect the highest credit on the 381st Bombardment Group (H) and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 514, Headquarters 1st Air Division, 18 August 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, United States Forces, European Theater.)

7. The 388th Bombardment Group (H) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on three occasions over Europe. The target for the 388th Bombardment Group (H) on 26 July 1943 was a high priority tire and rubber factory at Hannover, Germany, which produced a large portion of the tires used by the German Air Force. This was the fourth combat mission flown by the group and took place at a time when the Luftwaffe was at the peak of its strength. The 17 fortresses of the 388th Bombardment Group (H) were attacked by enemy aircraft as soon as the continental coast was reached and, although the intensity of these attacks increased en route to the target, the courageous crews of the 388th Bombardment Group (H) stubbornly fought their way to the assigned objective. In the face of extremely heavy and accurate antiaircraft fire, which knocked 2 bombers from the sky and damaged 12 others, bombs were released with exceptional accuracy and vast destruction was wrought upon many highly productive buildings in the factory area; 52 percent of the bombs struck within 500 feet of the preassigned aiming point and 98 percent struck within 1,000 feet. The enemy fighters continued their vicious onslaughts during the withdrawal until the North Sea was reached, sending three more bombers down in flames. Throughout this gruelling aerial combat, the 388th Bombardment Group (H) maintained a tight defensive formation and, despite the overwhelming numerical superiority of the German forces, the valorous crew members of the group destroyed seven enemy aircraft, probably destroyed two, and damaged six more. On 12 May 1944, the 388th Bombardment Group (H) furnished the lead and low groups for a combat wing formation in a highly successful attack against the vitally important synthetic oil refineries at Brux, Czechoslovakia. Flak harassed the formations throughout this perilous flight, which was one of the deepest penetrations ever made into strongly defended enemy territory. In the target area, the antiaircraft fire was of the continuous, tracking type and was singularly accurate. Despite this damaging fire from ground defenses and fanatical attacks by hordes of enemy fighters, the crews of the 388th Bombardment Group (H) released their bombs with devastating effect upon installations producing the largest amount of synthetic oil available to the German war machine. In addition to delivering a crippling blow to a target of paramount importance, these gallant airmen destroyed 34 enemy aircraft, probably destroyed 14, and damaged another 21. The 388th "A" Group led a combat bomb wing, which was one of two comprising a special task force in the significant and epochal pioneering shuttle raid from England to Russia on 21 June 1944. Seven other aircraft of the 388th Bombardment Group (H) formed a composite group with another organization participating in this historical mission. Flying through hazardous cloud formations and expertly avoiding the heaviest concentrations of antiaircraft fire which were encountered throughout this dangerous journey, the 388th Bombardment Group (H) carried out a successful attack against the synthetic oil refineries at Ruhland, Germany. After destroying several buildings and plants at this high priority target, they continued on through adverse weather conditions and completed this momentous operation, which involved a 1,700 mile, 10-hour, high-altitude flight, by landing at assigned bases in Russia. The members of the 388th Bombardment Group (H) demonstrated exceptional fortitude, bravery, and courageous devotion to duty on these occasions by surmounting numerous obstacles to deliver telling blows to industrial objectives, which were invaluable to the enemy in his efforts to wage a successful war. The conspicuous gallantry, esprit de corps, and determination they exhibited in overcoming these difficult and hazardous conditions reflect the very highest credit on themselves and the Army Air Forces. (General Orders 1112, Headquarters 3d Air Division, 12 June 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater.)

8. The 492d Bombardment Group (H) is cited for extraordinary heroism, determination, and esprit de corps in action against the enemy from 20 March to 25 April 1945. During this period, the 492d Bombardment Group (H), employing B-24 bombardment aircraft, repeatedly performed highly specialized and extremely hazardous military air operations over Germany and German-occupied territory. In flights of individual aircraft, during the hours of darkness at very low altitude, personnel of this organization distinguished themselves by their determination and skill in accomplishing assigned tasks. Despite perilous flying conditions and opposition from close-range enemy ground defenses, the 492d Bombardment Group (H) dropped by parachute a total of 276 tons of arms, ammunition, demolitions, and stores to resistance groups operating behind enemy lines. Conducting operations from a forward base in France, the 492d Bombardment Group (H) continued to distinguish itself in special operations involving long flights into enemy territory dropping trained agents. Demonstrating a high degree of courage and proficiency, this unit executed missions in the face of vigorous enemy countermeasures, unfamiliar terrain, adverse weather, and difficulty in dropping agents at 600-foot altitude within a radius of 200 yards from the established pinpoint. Over this period, no agent was lost as a result of a faulty or misdirected drop. In addition to these tasks, the 492d Bombardment Group (H) displayed intrepidity and versatility in supporting the Royal Air Force in night operations involving deceptive measures of an extremely hazardous nature. The high esprit de corps, unflinching determination, and exemplary gallantry maintained by this organization in these military operations reflect the highest credit on the 492d Bombardment Group (H) and the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 529, Headquarters 1st Air Division, 13 September 1945, as approved by the Commanding General, European Theater.)

I..SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

First Sergeant Edward R. Browne (219523), United States Marine Corps, displayed gallantry in action on 13 April 1942 following a heavy Japanese artillery barrage upon Battery James, Fort Mills, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When personnel of the battery were trapped as they sought shelter in nearby tunnels, Sergeant Browne readily volunteered, although the position was under close enemy observation and steady fire, to rescue his comrades. Major Maynard B. Booth, O395521 (then first lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, conducted himself with valor on 14-15 December 1944. While attempting to evacuate American prisoners of war from Manila, Philippine Islands, the Japanese transport "Oryoku Maru" was attacked by American naval airplanes. The ship was set on fire and was sinking rapidly. Major Booth, disregarding all personal danger, remained aboard ship and gathered life preservers found in the burning, smoke-filled staterooms. He then proceeded to tie the life preservers on the helpless victims and assisted them off the boat. Major Booth's coolness and heroism were directly responsible for saving no less than 20 American lives.

Captain Manrique G. Camus, O34191, Medical Corps, Philippine Army, conducted himself with valor during the Battle of Bataan, Philippine Islands, as commanding officer, 41st Medical Battalion, 41st Infantry Division, Philippine Army. On 3 April 1942, although his clearing station was bombed and shelled incessantly, he managed to evacuate successfully more than 700 sick and wounded patients. On 4 April 1942, despite the shelling and killing of many of his officers and men, Captain Camus gave medical aid until all cases were safely evacuated.

Jean Dammig, French civilian, exhibited exceptionally heroic conduct by his courageous action in volunteering for, and successfully carrying out, a secret and dangerous mission behind enemy lines, which benefited the armies of the Allied Nations in the prosecution of the war.

Warrant Officer Donald C. Gibson (O48614) (then platoon sergeant), United States Marine Corps, performed heroic services at Corregidor, Philippine Islands on 11 April 1942, while serving as a member of the beach defense at Battery Point. Seeing a small craft overturn offshore, he and another marine courageously went to the aid of those struggling in the water, despite barbed wire entanglements, heavy surf, and the danger of hostile fire. Warrant Officer Gibson assisted in bringing a drowning man to shore, then returned for the boat with others clinging to it, and aided in towing it to safety.

Platoon Sergeant Preston S. Gilliam (278974) (then private first class), United States Marine Corps, a member of Company M, 3d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, displayed heroism on 3 May 1942 in helping to extinguish an ammunition dump fire at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. (Sergeant Gilliam's heroic achievement prevented serious damage to beach positions and made the area more tenable for the necessary movement of personnel.)

Staff Sergeant Lowell R. Hunter (268041), United States Marine Corps, distinguished himself by heroic achievement on 5-6 May 1942 while assigned to duty in the Navy Communications Tunnel, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a determined enemy attack, he left a place of comparative safety to place a large group of men into new defensive positions on the ridge near the tunnel entrances, and, on his own initiative, led rescue parties to evacuate the seriously wounded from beach defense positions. The leadership and courage displayed by Sergeant Hunter reflect great credit on himself and the Marine Corps.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Staff Sergeant Isadore I. Jackman (Army serial No. 13136814), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company B, 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment, on 4 January 1945, displayed extraordinary heroism in action at Flamierge, Belgium. His company was pinned down by enemy artillery, mortar, and small-arms fire, when two enemy tanks then moved up and began firing on the stricken defenders. Sergeant Jackman seized a bazooka from a fallen comrade, crossed open ground through the hail of enemy fire, and stopped squarely in front of the hostile tanks. Holding his exposed position before the vehicles, as enemy bullets now concentrated on him, firing his weapon alone, he damaged one of the tanks, while the other quickly withdrew before his lone assault. By his heroic action, in which he made the supreme sacrifice under the fatal enemy fire, Sergeant Jackman relieved the dangerous plight of his comrades and disrupted the entire enemy counterattack on the company positions.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Earle L. Johnson, O901581, Air Corps, Army of the United States. April 1942 to 16 February 1947. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Colonel Johnson, for services from April 1942 to January 1946, as published in General Orders 12, Headquarters Army Air Forces, 22 January 1946.)

III. Brigadier General Robert M. Cannon, O16163, United States Army. April 1943 to March 1945. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General Cannon, for services from 1 April 1943 to 1 July 1944, as published in General Orders 115, Headquarters United States Army Forces, China-Burma-India, 1 September 1944.)

Colonel Frank Dorn, O15278 (then brigadier general), Field Artillery, United States Army. May 1943 to October 1944. (So much of sec. II, WD General Orders 104, 1946, as pertains to the award of the Distinguished-Service Medal to Colonel Dorn, for services from April to October 1944, is rescinded.)

Colonel Ray G. Harris, O11686 (then brigadier general), Air Corps, United States Army. March 1942 to July 1945.

Colonel James H. Stratton, O12656 (then brigadier general), Corps of Engineers, United States Army. November 1943 to March 1945.

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Staff Sergeant John L. Albers (Army serial No. 32381059), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 549th Bombardment Squadron, 385th Bombardment Group, distinguished himself by gallantry in action as a tail gunner of a B-17 aircraft on a combat mission to Berlin, Germany, on 6 October 1944. While over the target, Sergeant Albers was seriously wounded when enemy fighters attacked the airplane. Despite his wounds, he remained at his gun and probably destroyed two enemy aircraft. The outstanding courage, determination, and heroic devotion to duty displayed by Sergeant Albers reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

First Sergeant Richard Duncan (163184), United States Marine Corps, displayed gallantry in action on 13 April 1942 following a heavy Japanese artillery barrage upon Battery James, Fort Mills, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When personnel of the battery were trapped as they sought shelter in nearby tunnels, he readily volunteered, although the position was under close enemy observation and steady fire, to rescue his comrades. Disregarding the imminent danger of collapsing walls and roofs, Sergeant Duncan heroically entered the tunnels, assisted in extricating trapped soldiers, and give first aid to the wounded.

First Lieutenant Harry J. Hogue, O364987, Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company D, Twelfth Quartermaster Regiment, Philippine Scouts, distinguished himself by gallantry in action on 20 March 1942 at Sainsain Point, Bataan, Philippine Islands. During a severe aerial bombardment and strafing attack by enemy aircraft, he voluntarily left a place of comparative safety to conceal equipment which was disclosing the bivouac area to the enemy. The gallant and prompt action displayed by Lieutenant Hogue lessened materially the damage inflicted upon the area and reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Michael E. Peshek, O6169, United States Marine Corps, displayed gallantry in action on 13 April 1942 following a heavy Japanese artillery barrage upon Battery James, Fort Mills, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When personnel of the battery were trapped as they sought shelter in nearby tunnels, he readily volunteered, although the position was under close enemy observation and steady fire, to rescue his comrades. Disregarding the imminent danger of collapsing walls and roofs, Lieutenant Peshek heroically entered the tunnels, assisted in extricating trapped soldiers, and gave first aid to the wounded.

V. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following named officer, enlisted men, and individual:

Staff Sergeant Robert F. Adams (Army serial No. 35318775), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 336th Bombardment Squadron, distinguished himself by gallantry in action as a waist gunner of a B-17 aircraft on a heavy bombardment mission to Amiens, France, on 30 December 1943. Damaged during the bomb run, the crippled aircraft fell behind formation and was attacked by enemy fighters. During one of the attacks, Sergeant Adams was shot through the stomach by a 20-mm shell and knocked across the airplane. Forcing himself to get up, he went back to his gun and continued firing at the enemy, probably destroying an enemy airplane. The courage and grim determination displayed by Sergeant Adams reflects great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Major Stockton D. Bruns, O328563 (then captain), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, commanding Battery I, 59th Coast Artillery, on 12 April 1942, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. He received a call from a battery position informing him that the kitchen had been hit by enemy artillery and that several men were wounded and were lying exposed to the enemy fire. Immediately he organized a party to go to the rescue of the wounded men. In the face of continued enemy shelling, crossing open terrain exposed to the enemy fire, Major Bruns helped place the wounded men on improvised stretchers and directed their return to the comparative safety of Battery Leach.

Staff Sergeant Wendell N. Garden (27875) (then corporal), United States Marine Corps, displayed gallantry in action on 13 April 1942 following a heavy Japanese artillery barrage upon Battery James, Fort Mills, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When personnel of the battery were trapped as they sought shelter in nearby tunnels, he readily volunteered, although the position was under close enemy observation and steady fire, to rescue his comrades. Disregarding the imminent danger of collapsing walls and roofs, Sergeant Garden heroically entered the tunnels, assisted in extricating trapped soldiers, and gave first aid to the wounded.

Jack T. Nile, as an agent with Strategic Services Section, Headquarters 3d Infantry Division, in action from 27 August to 1 November 1944 during the campaign in France, repeatedly distinguished himself by heroic accomplishments in a series of resourceful and courageous infiltrations of himself and others through enemy lines. The accuracy and volume of intelligence information Mr. Nile obtained through skillful performance of many hazardous missions was of great value in determining the enemy situation and was of material assistance in the rapid advances made by the division.

The citation reads as follows:

The Marine Night Fighter Squadron 541 is cited for extraordinary performance of duty in action against the enemy at Leyte, Philippine Islands, from 3 to 15 December 1944. During a critical period in the fight for the control of the Philippine Islands, the pilots and ground crews of this unit signally distinguished themselves by the intrepidity and unyielding determination with which they overcame exceptionally adverse weather conditions and operational difficulties engendered by lack of ground facilities and incomplete radar directional coverage. Their superb airmanship and daring resourcefulness displayed in outstanding night patrol and interception work, which forestalled destruction of airfield facilities, and in the completeness of cover provided for numerous vital convoys and Patrol Torpedo boat patrols, effectively thwarted enemy attempts to prevent consolidation and further expansion of the foothold gained by United States forces in the Philippines. Achieving a record unparalleled at that time, the unit, composed of but 15 aircraft and 22 pilots, flew 136 sorties totaling 298.6 combat hours, destroyed 18 enemy aircraft in aerial combat without unit loss or damage, and on numerous occasions pitted consummate skill and accuracy against overwhelming numerically superior enemy strength. The extraordinary performance of the air and ground personnel of the Marine Night Fighter Squadron 541 in overcoming the greatest of aerial hazards and maintenance difficulties reflects the highest credit on themselves and the military service of the United States.

XVI. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious services which aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following named individual:

Fay B. Smith, American civilian, club director, American Red Cross, performed meritorious services in England, Africa, and Italy from November 1942 to January 1946. Arriving overseas in England in September 1942, Miss Smith served in that country until November. She then sailed as a member of a task force for Africa. Later, she moved with the troops through Italy, serving as a club director in Caserta and in Rome until the end of the war. Miss Smith's organizing ability was an important factor in maintaining Red Cross clubs for the entertainment and relaxation of both officers and enlisted men, who were out of the lines for brief rests. Her ready willingness to accept trying living conditions and long hours of work impressed all with whom she came in contact. In December 1945, Miss Smith was transferred to the 88th Infantry Division and assigned to establish an enlisted men's club in Gorizia, Italy. Her remarkable organizing ability, ready knowledge of the desires of enlisted men, and devotion to duty resulted in the establishment of one of the finest enlisted men's clubs to be found overseas.

XVII. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TYPHUS COMMISSION MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9285, 24 December 1942 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1943) and AR 600-45, the United States of America Typhus Commission Medal for exceptionally meritorious services in connection with the work of the Commission during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following named officer:

Major Franklin S. Blanton, O259494, Sanitary Corps, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services in Japan from 30 October 1945 to 14 May 1946. Responsible chiefly for typhus control at all ports and repatriation centers, he worked unceasingly without relief and without regard for personal risk during months in training and supervising the activities of hundreds of Americans and Japanese in operations to combat the severe epidemic of typhus which swept through the country. His expert knowledge and vigorous and intelligent efforts helped direct to check this dangerous epidemic. Major Blanton contributed to safeguarding the health of American troops and to improvement of civilian public health.

XVIII. AIR MEDAL.—So much of section IV, WD General Orders 107, 1946, pertaining to "First Lieutenant Dexter C. Schnebley" is amended to read "First Lieutenant Dexter C. Schnebly."

I. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following officer:

Major Albert P. Dewey, O911947 (then captain), Air Corps, Army of the United States, from 20 to 22 August 1944, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action in southern France. Commanding a special mission behind the enemy lines, he and members of his unit, operating among elements of the German forces in the area, captured enemy prisoners and important equipment during sharp local engagements. Making a reconnaissance of the tactical situation, he traveled in a captured German staff car among formations of hostile forces in order to spot and report German columns and formations in movement. Despite the serious danger of discovery and apprehension, he infiltrated and marked German columns and reported locations of ammunition dumps for strafing by Allied aircraft. Through his exceptional leadership and outstanding personal courage, Major Dewey made a notable contribution to the conduct of Allied operations in southern France.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer and chief warrant officer:

First Lieutenant Alden B. Gordon, O749689 (then second lieutenant), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 331st Bombardment Squadron, 94th Bombardment Group, distinguished himself as a pilot on a heavy bombardment mission to Berlin, Germany, on 18 April 1944. During the course of the action, the airplane was severely damaged and set on fire by four successive waves of enemy fighters. Despite the flames which licked about his hands and face, he remained at the controls, holding his aircraft in level flight throughout the enemy attacks, while members of his crew made their escape. Only after the last living member had bailed out did he relinquish the controls and make his escape. The courage, skill, and conspicuous gallantry displayed by Lieutenant Gordon reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Chief Warrant Officer Charles R. Jackson (212786) (then sergeant major), United States Marine Corps, displayed gallantry in action on 13 April 1942 following a heavy Japanese artillery barrage upon Battery James, Fort Mills, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When personnel of the battery were trapped as they sought shelter in nearby tunnels, he readily volunteered to rescue his comrades although the position was under close enemy observation and steady fire. Disregarding the imminent danger of collapsing walls and roofs, Warrant Officer Jackson heroically entered the tunnels, assisted in extricating trapped soldiers, and gave first aid to the wounded.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. Despite exploding ammunition and the danger of exploding gas tanks, Private Trask worked fearlessly to assist the rescue and treatment of the injured crewmen, thereby reflecting great credit on himself and the armed services.

II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers and enlisted men:

Platoon Sergeant Frank W. Constantineau (280721) (then corporal), United States Marine Corps, performed heroic services on 29 April 1942 while attached to Company F, 2d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy bombardment, he voluntarily left a place of comparative safety to aid the occupants of an ambulance which had been hit in the open by shell fire. Although not a truck driver, Sergeant Constantineau obtained a truck and, at great personal risk, courageously drove the wounded men to the Malinta Tunnel Hospital.

Private First Class Dale D. Coulson (273590), United States Marine Corps, a member of Company M, 3d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, displayed heroism on 3 May 1942 in helping to extinguish an ammunition-dump fire at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Private Coulson's heroic achievement prevented serious damage to beach positions and made the area more tenable for the necessary movement of personnel.

Private First Class Arthur W. Jones (278393), United States Marine Corps, performed heroic services on 20 April 1942 while attached to Company F, 2d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. During a heavy enemy bombardment when six men were killed and many wounded, he left a place of comparative safety to administer first aid to his fallen comrades. Following this heroic act, Private Jones voluntarily drove a truck through the artillery fire to take four serious stretcher cases over a mile of open territory to the Malinta Tunnel Hospital.

Sergeant Richard H. Olson (278027) (then private first class), United States Marine Corps, performed heroic services on 29 April 1942 while attached to Company F, 2d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. He voluntarily left a place of comparative safety to aid those wounded when an ambulance was hit by an enemy shell in the open during a heavy bombardment. Sergeant Olson then courageously attended the disabled men as they were being transported over open terrain in the face of further enemy fire to the Malinta Tunnel Hospital.

Captain Joseph J. Reardon, O10107 (then first sergeant), United States Marine Corps, displayed heroism in action on 28 March 1942 during an enemy aerial bombardment of the James Ravine Area, Corregidor, Philippine Islands. When one of the beach defenses received a direct hit, Captain Reardon seeing that those injured could not leave the danger area, voluntarily and without regard for his own welfare and with Japanese airplanes still overhead, left his position of safety, assisted in rendering first aid to the wounded, and in removing them to cover.

Lieutenant Colonel William B. Reardon, O277800 (then major), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, as an officer courier for the Philippine Provisional Coast Artillery Brigade, distinguished himself by heroic achievement on 8-9 April 1942 at Bataan, Philippine Islands. Displaying great courage and outstanding devotion to duty in the face of heavy artillery, aerial bombardment, and strafing attacks, Colonel Reardon performed his duties with high efficiency and assured the prompt delivery of dispatches important to the defense of the Philippine Islands.

Platoon Sergeant Claude E. Simpson (285489) (then corporal), United States Marine Corps, while attached to Headquarters Company, 2d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, displayed heroism on 10 April 1942 in extinguishing an ammunition-dump fire at Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Sergeant Simpson's heroic achievement saved an important communications cable and minimized the loss of important ammunition supplies at a very critical period.

Private First Class David R. Spooner (280716), United States Marine Corps, a member of Company M, 3d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, displayed heroism on 3 May 1942 in helping to extinguish an ammunition-dump fire on Corregidor, Philippine Islands. Private Spooner's heroic achievement prevented serious damage to beach positions and made the area more tenable for the necessary movement of personnel.

Staff Sergeant Wilber E. Volz (Army serial No. 36448133) (then sergeant), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 710th Bombardment Squadron, distinguished himself on 27 March 1944. While under constant fire from German shore defenses, when the bomber in which he was a waist gunner crash-landed off shore in the Bay of Biscay, he assisted all other crew members to escape and then administered first aid to the wounded navigator. The courage and unselfish devotion to duty displayed by Sergeant Volz reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

Captain William E. Walter, O393366 (then first lieutenant), Signal Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 12th Signal Company, Philippine Scouts, performed heroism in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 5 and 6 April 1942. When a heavy enemy attack outflanked friendly positions, he personally organized points of resistance, led patrols against Japanese locations, and exposed himself to enemy rifle fire beyond the call of duty. Remaining in rear of withdrawing troops in disregard for his own safety, Captain Walter did much to bolster the morale of his troops and contributed materially to the defense of the area.

VIII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Brigadier General William I. Rose, as published in General Orders 116, Headquarters United States Army Forces, Far East, 14 May 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. XI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 5th Ranger Infantry Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy in Germany between 23 February and 4 March 1945. The officers and men of the 5th Ranger Infantry Battalion demonstrated steadfast courage, exceptional physical endurance, and an unswerving determination to overcome incalculable odds while executing a battle mission of great consequence to the success of Allied operations in the Saar River area. Effectively utilizing the element of surprise, the battalion infiltrated, under cover of darkness, through the enemy front-line positions and seized ground commanding the main German military supply route west of Zerf. Though strong hostile patrols had repeatedly been encountered and routed during the advance, the enemy, overcoming their initial surprise, unloosed a furious counterattack and pounded the rangers with intense mortar, artillery, and rocket bombardments. Launching two seemingly irresistible drives, one from the south with a strength of 200 men and another from the northeast with 400 men, the fanatical Germans drove forward to the very fox-hole positions of the defenders. The unconquerable troops of the 5th Ranger Infantry Battalion, manning every available weapon, cut down the foe and successfully repulsed both assaults, killing 100, wounding countless others, and capturing 75. Although suffering a 50 percent casualty loss and weakened by depleted ammunition and food supplies, the courageous rangers, after 5 days of fierce fighting, during which time their positions were incessantly shelled and assaulted, once more assumed the offensive. They unhesitatingly advanced through intense fire and seized the terrain key-point south of their former positions. In addition to accomplishing its primary mission, the 5th Ranger Infantry Battalion killed 378 enemy, wounded an estimated 550, captured 562, and destroyed 2 German armored vehicles. The unit's daring thrust through hostile lines and successful seizure of its assigned objective gave impetus to an armored break-through which overran Trier and brought elements of the XX United States Army Corps to the banks of the Rhine River. The matchless bravery, esprit de corps, and combat proficiency of the fighters of the 5th Ranger Infantry Battalion are in keeping with the highest traditions of the Army of the United States.

XII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM WITH BRONZE PALM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom with Bronze Palm for meritorious services which aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Hassain Nafci, Iranian civilian, as Director General, Iranian State Railways, from January 1943 to May 1945, was responsible for the installations, equipment, and 33,000 employees throughout the railway's 1,400 miles, over which 3,000,000 tons of supplies were shipped to Russia. Although obligated to adhere to Iranian regulations, and under pressure from Americans, British, and Russians alike, Mr. Nafci performed his duties so successfully that the railway's mission was completed with a minimum of friction.

Mohamad Saidi, Iranian civilian, contributed materially to the mission assigned the Military Railway Service as Under Secretary, Iranian Ministry of Roads, from January 1943 to May 1945. He was a member of the Board of Control and for 12 months was acting minister. As a responsible party in the formulation of policies of the railway, Mr. Saidi so successfully sponsored and supported recommendations of the Military Railway Service that none was ever disapproved by the Iranian Government.

XIII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious services which aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individuals:

Doctor Geroid T. Robinson, American civilian, performed exceptionally meritorious services from December 1942 to May 1943. During this period Doctor Robinson served as chief of the division, Research and Analysis Branch, Office of Strategic Services, in the European Theater of Operations. Directly as a result of his foresight and stimulating and vigorous leadership, there was achieved the first major preparation of objective studies for the purpose of implementing military and strategic planning among the Allies and contributing to their mutual understanding and harmonious relations.

James R. Wilson, American civilian, performed meritorious services in Italy from 12 August 1944 to 12 January 1946. As assistant field director for the American Red Cross and later as field director and liaison representative for Headquarters Mediterranean Theater of Operations, Mr. Wilson directed his energies unceasingly and untiringly in behalf of the thousands of soldiers in Caserta and outlying areas. His genuine interest and sympathy in the homesick and perplexed soldiers with personal troubles at home and his diligence and willingness to render service at all times, as well as his interest in providing dayrooms and procuring supplies for outlying units, proved an unbelievable stimulus for the enlisted men and a great morale-building factor. Mr. Wilson's ability, sound judgment, foresight, tireless energy, and insatiable desire to provide the ultimate in service to all military personnel and his selfless devotion to duty at all times reflect great credit on him and his organization.

XIV. SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—So much of section II, WD General Orders 80, 1946, as pertains to Lieutenant Colonel Jacobo Zobel, Philippine Army, as reads "Silver Star was awarded" is amended to read "a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster was awarded."

XV. LEGION OF MERIT.—So much of paragraph 2, section VI, WD General Orders 106, 1946, pertaining to Colonel John S. Baird, Air Corps, as reads "Colonel John S. Baird" is amended to read "Colonel John E. Baird."

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. II, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 121st Infantry Regiment and the following attached and reinforcing units:

- 1st Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment;
- Company C, 8th Medical Regiment;
- 12th Engineer Battalion;
- 56th Field Artillery Battalion;
- Company B, 86th Chemical Battalion;
- Company C, 86th Chemical Battalion;
- 64th Tank Destroyer Battalion (less Company B);
- 709th Tank Battalion (less Company C), are cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in action from 21 to 28 November 1944. During this period, they made a relentless and determined drive to overcome bitter opposition in the Hurtgen Forest and capture the town of Hurtgen, Germany. The bloody and bitterly contested advance, which taxed individual fortitude and stamina to the limit, represented the major offensive effort of the 8th Infantry Division and V Corps in effecting a break-through in this heavily defended sector, in order that further offensive action could be undertaken in the clearing of woods and towns west of the Roer River. Throughout the operation, the progress of the regiment was seriously impeded by an unusual combination of inclement weather and difficult terrain, with continuous rain and damp, penetrating cold constantly endangering the health of all personnel. The terrain was characterized by densely forested hills and deep mud, which retarded all movement of troops and vehicles. Fully aware of his defensive advantages, the enemy had prepared an elaborate system of mutually supporting fortifications, with extensive mine fields and well-placed booby traps claiming a heavy toll during the advance. Enemy artillery and mortar fire was made more effective by frequent tree-bursts in the heavily wooded area. Because of narrow muddy roads and other natural obstacles which prevented the effective employment of motorized support, the burden of assaulting fanatically defended fortifications was left to the determined infantrymen. Yet at no time did the regiment fail to advance, nor did it yield a foot in the numerous counterattacks launched by the enemy. Foot by foot and against great odds, the regiment and its attached and reinforcing units drove the enemy from log bunker and pillbox, passing through concentrations of artillery and mortar fire estimated at 3,500 rounds per day at the height of operations, and finally captured the strategically important town of Hurtgen in fierce house-to-house combat. Under some of the most difficult and hazardous combat conditions experienced during the war in Europe and despite its high casualty rate, the 121st Infantry Regiment and its attached and reinforcing units displayed extremely courageous fighting qualities in attacking a strongly fortified enemy in Hurtgen Forest. This gallant action contributed greatly to the eviction of the enemy from and around the town of Hurtgen, Germany, and later to the complete annihilation of the Germany Army.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Colonel Wayne L. Johnson, O333366 (then lieutenant colonel), Infantry, Army of the United States, commanding the 1st Battalion, 179th Infantry Regiment, displayed extraordinary heroism in action at Anzio Beachhead, Italy, from 16 to 20 February 1944. His forces were under continual enemy attack and artillery fire, and, on 18 February, when two battalions on his right were depleted in strength and forced to withdraw, he immediately went to the front, steadying the lines there while his battalion organized new positions. Crawling from place to place under the terrific enemy fire, he constantly reorganized the lines and encouraged the men to hold their positions against two more fierce infantry and tank assaults. Enemy shelling continued throughout the next day, and on the following day, believing another enemy attack imminent, Colonel Johnson was again at the front lines when they were subjected to a deadly enemy artillery barrage. Working to secure the defense against the expected attack, he was wounded severely by an exploding shell, but realizing the value of his knowledge of the situation, he continued, disregarding his terrible pain, to direct operations of the battalion until he could personally communicate his information to the regimental commander. Colonel Johnson, by his extraordinary heroism, skillfully secured the defense of his battalion and provided inspiration for his men as they turned back repeated enemy attacks during the critically important operations at Anzio Beachhead. (This award supersedes the award of the Silver Star to Colonel Johnson, for services on 18 February 1944, as published in General Orders 80, 45th Infantry Division, 18 April 1944.)

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Brigadier General Guy O. Fort, O952305, Army of the United States. 8 December 1941 to 10 May 1942.
AGO 1661B—Feb. 716118°—47

III..DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Rear Admiral Charles B. Momsen, United States Navy. November 1945 to October 1946.

Brigadier General Miles Reber, O15123, United States Army. March to September 1943 and March 1944 to April 1946.

I. TERRE HAUTE ORDNANCE DEPOT, TERRE HAUTE, INDIANA.—Section V, WD General Orders 146, 1946, is rescinded.
[AG 680.1 (26 Dec 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 417th Regimental Combat Team, consisting of the 417th Infantry Regiment, 901st Field Artillery Battalion; Company C, 301st Engineer Combat Battalion; Company C, 301st Medical Battalion; and Company B, 160th Engineer Combat Battalion, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy from 7 to 12 February 1945 in the vicinity of Echternach, Luxembourg. Members of this combat team led an assault across the swollen Sauer River into one of the deepest portions of the Siegfried Line. The river was at flood stage, the current so swift that attempts by engineers to erect a footbridge proved futile, and the crossing had to be made in assault boats. The alerted enemy covered the area with heavy artillery, mortar, and machine-gun fire. Many of the boats were overturned before reaching the far shore and heavy casualties were suffered. Despite all difficulties, the major portion of the 1st Battalion, 417th Infantry Regiment, succeeded in making the crossing on the first night. Under heavy fire, members of this battalion scaled the muddy, steep, pillbox infested cliffs, whose every approach was heavily sown with mine fields, and succeeded in capturing the high wooded ground near the river bank. Two strong infantry counterattacks, supported by armor, were launched by the enemy, but both were repulsed after bitter encounters. Although this was the combat team's first engagement in combat, the 1st Battalion was the only unit in this vicinity to reach its objective on its initial assault and hold the ground gained. By similar aggressive action, the remainder of the 417th Infantry Regiment made the river crossing on the second and third nights and established contact with the initial force. The swiftly flowing river prevented supplies being crossed by boat and it became necessary to supply isolated groups by air. Despite violent enemy attempts to dislodge it, the combat team held tenaciously to the bridgehead it had wrested within the Siegfried Line and secured a strong foothold, which facilitated the movement of other forces across the river and insured the success of an operation of major importance. In its initial appearance in combat and in the face of conditions which at times appeared prohibitive, the 417th Regimental Combat Team displayed outstanding heroism, determination, and an indomitable fighting spirit, which reflect great credit on all participants and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, Army Ground Forces, Pacific, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial.

[AG 250.4 (6 Feb 47)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. II, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 3d Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, with Company C, 774th Tank Battalion, and Company B, 629th Tank Destroyer Battalion, attached, are cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy. On the morning of 10 December 1944, from an assembly area near Grosshau, Germany, the battalion and attached troops attacked with the mission of capturing and securing the town of Strass, Germany, thus permitting the 5th Armored Division a place of debouchment from the Hurtgen Forest in its drive to the Roer River. Taking advantage of darkness, the battalion entered the town of Strass, completely surprising the enemy, but, when the enemy discovered the battalion had entered the town, intense resistance was encountered. The enemy maneuvered its supporting forces until it had sealed off the assault companies by completely surrounding the town. Despite constant artillery, mortar, and machine-gun fire, the 3d Battalion threw back daily counterattacks by numerically superior forces of enemy infantry supported by tanks and assault guns. During the 4-day period, which saw six battalion commanders in command because of wounds or death incurred in action, the battalion displayed its superb fighting spirit by refusing to allow itself to be defeated. Although without food for 3 days and without sufficient medical supplies to treat the ever increasing number of its own and enemy wounded, the battalion never lost its determination to succeed in the face of what appeared to be a desperate and hopeless situation. During this period, the 3d Battalion and attached troops lost 354 men killed, wounded, and missing, while the enemy suffered an estimated 550 casualties. Five enemy tanks were destroyed by our forces during this period. As a result of the outstanding courage and determination to succeed displayed by every fighting man of the 3d Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, Company C, 774th Tank Battalion and Company B, 629th Tank Destroyer Battalion, from 10 through 13 December 1944, a strong enemy force was repeatedly driven from the town of Strass, which enabled the 5th Armored Division to execute its drive toward the Roer River and seal off the vitally important Roer River Dam area. The aggressiveness and superb devotion to duty displayed by the 3d Battalion and attached troops against overwhelming odds and under extremely difficult conditions merit much praise and are in keeping with the finest traditions of the armed forces of the United States. (This citation supersedes the citation of the 3d Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, as published in General Orders 230, Headquarters 83d Infantry Division, AGO 1605B—Feb. 716118°—47.

I. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

First Lieutenant William H. Rierson, O754549 (then second lieutenant), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 79th Fighter Squadron, 20th Fighter Group, while flying a P-38 airplane in escort of a heavy bomber formation over Aachen, Germany, on 8 December 1944, distinguished himself by heroic action and his determination to destroy a numerically superior enemy. Following an attack by two ME. 109 aircraft, which set one of his engines on fire and inflicted severe wounds to his left arm and leg, Lieutenant Rierson continued a vicious onslaught against four enemy fighters which dove at him from above. Separated from the other members of his flight and disregarding the pain from his wounds, he maneuvered to an attack which destroyed one ME. 109 and severely damaged another. Finally, with his electrical system out, his left engine on fire, and his cockpit in flames, he was forced to jettison his canopy and bail out. Lieutenant Rierson's gallant acts reflect great credit on himself and are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service.

Captain Patrick A. Teel, O1304633 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, as platoon leader of Company D, First Ranger Battalion, on 8 December 1943, displayed conspicuous gallantry in action at Venafro, Italy. He went forward with two sergeants to a position on a forward slope, where they covered a nearby rock formation from which it was attempted to dynamite the enemy. Immediately after the blast, the Germans strongly counterattacked, driving into positions from which elements of an American company had withdrawn during the detonation. Captain Teel, with the few men, quickly began offensive action and, despite heavy enemy artillery fire, dislodged the foe from the positions. Through his prompt, aggressive action and personal courage, Captain Teel successfully led the men in holding the important positions until reinforcements arrived to drive the enemy from the area.

II. SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Silver Star awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to Colonel John R. Pugh, a second bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Colonel John R. Pugh, O18790 (then lieutenant colonel), Cavalry, United States Army, as aide-de-camp to the Commanding General, United States Army Forces in the Philippines, performed gallant services at and near Fort Mills, Corregidor, on 6 May 1942. On his own initiative and despite the personal risk involved, he went through an extensive concentration of enemy fire to assure that the Commanding General's motor launch was moved from the south to the north dock at Fort Mills, where it was needed for an important mission. Boarding the craft, and subject to heavy aerial bombardment, Colonel Pugh courageously moved it to the north side of the island of Corregidor and then to Bataan.

Mary Marie Buck, American civilian, performed meritorious services of great benefit to American and Allied troops in India from 1942 to 1946. Mrs. Buck administered a large leave center, with hostels, canteens, sports fields, cinema, library, and other amenities. She was notably successful in promoting mutual understanding and good will among American, British, and Indian troops. Her establishment was sponsored by several war agencies and particularly by the International Y. M. C. A., and the Government of Madras. It was Mrs. Buck's personal achievement to stimulate morale and inter-Allied harmony to an impressive degree.

Simone Hardy, American civilian, performed meritorious services from December 1941 to June 1943 as confidential secretary to the President's special representative in French North Africa. Her conduct under these circumstances was exemplary and she demonstrated marked courage and intelligence. Prior to the landings, Mrs. Hardy was required to maintain contact with the French underground organizations in North Africa, and because of her intimate knowledge of the language and customs, her tact, discretion, and courage, the liaison activity which she performed was of distinct value to the success of the military operations.

First Lieutenant Maurice C. Gephardt, O444185, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, rendered exceptionally meritorious services as a member of the staff of the United States of America Typhus Commission in the investigation and control of the epidemic of typhus in Japan from February to May 1946. He assisted in training personnel and in supervising programs in typhus control in Tokyo, Osaka, and Kobe, as well as other locations in Japan. I. TRAINING CENTERS.—1. Effective as of 6 January 1947, the Chemical Training Center, Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland, is discontinued.

2. Effective 15, February 1947, the following training centers are discontinued:
- Engineer Training Center, Fort Belvoir, Virginia.
 - Ordnance Training Center, Aberdeen, Maryland.
 - Quartermaster Training Center, Camp Lee, Virginia.
 - Transportation Training Center, Fort Eustis, Virginia.

[AG 354.11 (29 Jan 47)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. II, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 405th Infantry Regiment and the following supporting units:

1276th Engineer Combat Battalion;

Company A, 327th Engineer Combat Battalion;

Company B, (less one platoon), 327th Engineer Combat Battalion;

Forward Observation Parties, 379th Field Artillery Battalion;

Forward Observation Parties Company A, 3d Chemical Mortar Battalion, are cited for outstanding performance of duty in action on 23 and 24 February 1945, during the crossing of the Roer River at Rurdorf, Germany, and the establishment of a bridgehead in that vicinity. With only two possible crossing sites in the sector, one of which was rendered useless by the destruction of a dam and the resulting inundation of large portions of the river valley, the regiment was forced to cross in column of companies on a one-company front. When leading elements started crossing in assault boats at 0330, 23 February 1945, the enemy reacted quickly and laid down a terrific barrage on the single crossing site. Braving this deadly hail of fire and struggling against the treacherous current of the flooded river, the regiment succeeded in crossing by sheer courage and determination. Despite the loss of men and equipment in the icy waters, units were assembled quickly on the far bank and started for their objectives. Traversing over 2,000 yards of flat, soggy, partially inundated river valley, overrunning and capturing, frequently by hand-to-hand combat, a maze of strongly defended emplacements and trenches, passing through numerous mine fields and barbed wire entanglements, and constantly under direct fire and observation from the escarpment beyond, assault elements succeeded in capturing the town of Tetz and the high ground beyond the river valley. Beating off a strong counter-attack, the regiment continued its attack, driving through the Tetz-Boslar Valley and capturing the town of Boslar and the high ground to the northwest. Unable to proceed beyond Boslar because of withering fire from enemy tanks and infantry on the high ground to the northeast, the regiment dug in, with orders to hold at all costs pending the arrival of tanks, tank destroyers, antitank guns, and other supporting weapons, which had been unable to cross the river. Quickly launching a counterattack against Boslar, the enemy succeeded in penetrating the forward positions, but, after a vicious fight, was forced to withdraw. Later, another attack was launched against Boslar, but was stopped before it reached the town. Still later, a third attack was launched against the same sector, which was led by some 30 tanks and self-propelled guns, followed closely by about 200 infantrymen. Striking with great force, the enemy quickly overran forward positions and penetrated as far as the battalion reserve line. Forward elements and company supports, refusing to yield an inch of ground, allowed themselves to be overrun and then emerged from their positions to engage enemy infantry from the front, flanks, and rear. Fierce fighting raged throughout the town. Calling for artillery fire to be laid on their own positions, the defenders finally succeeded in clearing the town and forcing the enemy to withdraw. The enemy launched four additional attacks against Boslar during the night. Three were thrown back before reaching the town and the fourth, although penetrating it slightly, was finally repulsed by the same relentless, unwavering determination and repeated individual feats of heroism which characterized the entire action. Throughout the remainder of the regimental sector, the enemy launched numerous smaller counterattacks during the night, but all were thrown back with heavy losses. By dawn, all positions were completely restored and intact. Despite continuous and savage fighting without rest or respite for over 27 hours, members of the regiment climaxed a brilliant initial success by jumping off at dawn in continuation of the attack, which never once failed to capture a single objective. The conspicuous gallantry, esprit de corps, indomitable fighting spirit, and determination displayed by the members of the 405th Infantry Regiment and its supporting units are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army.

REPLACEMENT TRAINING CENTER—Band, Camp Lee, Virginia, discontinued;	Section
section I, WD General Orders 9, 1947, rescinded-----	I
BATTLE HONORS—Citation of unit-----	II

I. REPLACEMENT TRAINING CENTER.—1. Effective 1 February 1947, the Band Replacement Training Center, Camp Lee, Virginia, is discontinued.
2. Section I, WD General Orders 9, 1947, is rescinded.
[AG 354.11 (8 Jan 47)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following unit is cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 253d Armored Field Artillery Battalion (less Battery C) is cited for outstanding performance of duty, from 19 December 1944 to 19 January 1945, when it played an important part in the relief of besieged Bastogne, Belgium, in the subsequent bitter defense of that city, and later in the determined attack which finally broke the German defense ring encircling it. Battle-worn by 115 consecutive days in combat without rest, the 253d Armored Field Artillery Battalion, on 19 December 1944, started a 132-mile forced march, much of it in black-out, to join the 4th Armored Division near Virton, Belgium. During the week of 21 to 28 December which followed, it fought in freezing temperature through ice and snow and under almost constant enemy artillery and mortar fire and air attacks as part of that division, and also as direct support artillery for the 2d Battalion, 318th Infantry Regiment, both of which played such a gallant part in the relief of the besieged forces in Bastogne and received distinguished unit citations for their heroic actions. The 253d Armored Field Artillery Battalion was then immediately committed without rest to the intense fighting to defend Bastogne as the direct support artillery of the 6th Armored Division's 69th Tank Battalion and fired effectively for the battalion's Company C, which was cited for extraordinary heroism during the period 5 to 11 January. Here again the men of the 253d Armored Field Artillery Battalion displayed outstanding heroism by manning their weapons 24 hours a day in the bitterest weather, and by firing thousands of rounds of ammunition which contributed greatly to stopping the many savage attacks thrown at this key city by the Germans. As the vicious enemy attacks on Bastogne lessened and American forces started the reduction of the Belgian Bulge, the 253d Armored Field Artillery Battalion continued its important part in helping push the enemy eastward by providing excellent direct artillery support for the 69th Tank Battalion and the 2d Battalion, 134th Infantry Regiment, in the bitter fighting which finally removed the danger from the vital communications center of Bastogne, Belgium. In 1-month's time, the 253d Armored Field Artillery Battalion, with only two of its three firing batteries available, had been an integral part or in direct support of three units, whose exceptional fortitude and outstanding heroism had gained them distinguished unit citations. Its courageous men had continually emplaced and displaced their weapons under extremely trying and difficult conditions of weather and terrain and had fired thousands of rounds of ammunition, which assisted immeasurably in stopping numerous and dangerous enemy attacks and counterattacks against friendly troops. The unusual and brilliant record of the 253d Armored Field Artillery Battalion was an outstanding contribution toward the defeat of a formidable enemy during a highly critical period and exemplifies the highest traditions of the military service.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant Eric F. Wood, Jr., O517724, Field Artillery, Army of the United States, a member of the 589th Field Artillery Battalion, from 17 December 1944 to 22 January 1945, displayed extraordinary heroism in action in Belgium. His section, the rear element of the withdrawing battalion, was cut off and completely surrounded, his vehicle was destroyed by enemy tank fire, and hostile infantry covered the surrounding area with a hail of small-arms fire. Refusing to surrender, as enemy fire converged on him from all sides, he raced across a large open field into the woods beyond. Cut off from all possibility of returning to his own lines, far inside enemy territory in the Ardennes wilderness in the dead of winter, he rejected any temptation to surrender. Not content to maintain his liberty behind the enemy lines, in company with several other Americans in the area, he repeatedly initiated ambush attacks against enemy communications, supply columns, and patrols, accounting for the deaths of scores of the foe. Valiantly, Lieutenant Wood continued his offensive action until finally in a last fierce engagement with overwhelming forces he made the supreme sacrifice, where later his body was found surrounded by the bodies of seven of the enemy, mute testimony to the daring, the loyalty, and the intrepid gallantry of Lieutenant Wood in the service of his country.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the Commander in Chief, Pacific, to the following-named officer:

Colonel Luther R. Stevens, O232434 (then brigadier general), Philippine Army, commanding the 91st Division, Philippine Army, on 29 December 1941, displayed extraordinary heroism in action at Gapan, Luzon, Philippine Islands.

In a strong surprise move against the town, the enemy sent a heavy concentration of fire at close range against the defenders. Realizing the grave situation, and in the face of heavy enemy small-arms fire, Colonel Stevens moved calmly along the newly established line, encouraged the men to hold, to take careful aim, and to fire with greater effort. Colonel Stevens' vigorous leadership and courage were a source of inspiration to the men and served to stabilize the vital defense line.

III. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Major General Edmund W. Hill, O6770 (then colonel), United States Army. December 1941 to June 1942.

IV. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918); a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Second Lieutenant William W. Read, O423832, Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of the 192d Tank Battalion, displayed gallantry in action on 29 December 1941 when the half-track he commanded was destroyed by hostile fire near Concepcion, Tarlac Province, Luzon, Philippine Islands. Although he suffered the loss of a leg, Lieutenant Read heroically refused evacuation in favor of other wounded members of his crew and died before additional help could be guided to him.

V. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer:

Colonel Thomas S. Gunby, O11395, Field Artillery, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action near Wesel, Germany, on the night of 24–25 March 1945. Colonel Gunby, while executive officer, 17th Airborne Division, volunteered and was given permission to visit the artillery units of the 17th Airborne Division, despite the known presence of groups of enemy troops, tanks, and mines in the area at the time. Traversing terrain and roads unfamiliar to him, he succeeded in reaching the three artillery battalions, which had not been physically contacted by Division Artillery Headquarters since the glider and parachute landing made during daylight on 24 March, consulted with each commander, and finally returned to the artillery command post about dawn 25 March. Colonel Gunby's gallant action, made without regard for his own safety and with full knowledge of the risks involved, resulted in the close coordination of supporting fires during the first critical night in Germany and aided greatly in the prompt displacement forward of the field artillery battalions on the following day.

VI. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. Finding that gasoline soaked the area and that one engine was burning, he quickly posted guards to hold the people from the danger of serious explosion and, while operating extinguishers himself to fight the fire, directed removal of the crew members from the wreckage. Ralph E. Loper, American civilian, performed meritorious services in China from March to September 1945. As the chief industrial engineering and economic adviser on textile production to the China War Production Board and the Cotton, Cloth, and Yarn Administration, Mr. Loper exercised unusually sound judgment, vision, tact, and perseverance in dealing with Chinese Government officials and industrialists and in cooperating wholeheartedly with the American Military Command. He demonstrated initiative, ability, and skill under difficult and hazardous conditions and effected considerable improvement in China's wartime industry.

Nancy Mary Perks, British civilian, as aide to the Controller of Ordnance Services, War Office, London, from January 1944 to January 1945, assisted in arranging details for the transfer to United States Army control of British depots in the United Kingdom and the reception of visiting American officials. BATTLE HONORS—Citation of unit-----	II

I. CHAPLAIN BOARD.—Effective as of 30 December 1946, the Chaplain Board is discontinued at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, and concurrently established at Fort George G. Meade, Maryland.

[AG 334 (4 Nov 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 1st Battalion, 141st Infantry Regiment, is cited for heroism, gallantry, and esprit de corps during the period 15–16 August 1944 in France. During the 2 days of this action, the 1st Battalion successfully assaulted the most difficult beach in the 36th Infantry Division sector in a hazardous amphibious operation. Overwhelming the strongly fortified enemy beach defenses, the battalion moved forward rapidly in the face of concentrated machine-gun and mortar fire to seize the high ground dominating the beach. Killing or capturing all Germans in their path, the men of this battalion pressed on to seize immediate objectives with such speed and aggressiveness that the enemy soon became completely disorganized. Then moving east along the coastline, the 1st Battalion assaulted and captured numerous strongly manned German pillboxes, casements, and entrenchments. Capturing over 1,200 prisoners and killing 150 of the enemy, the 1st Battalion, 141st Infantry Regiment seized the bridges on the coastal highway, which were the final objective of this assault, and broke the enemy's power within the sector so effectively that the Germans were never able to reorganize their forces for a counterattack. 1. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Second Lieutenant Francisco P. Gador, F44003, Infantry, Philippine Army, while serving with the 73d Infantry, 81st Division, Philippine Army, distinguished himself by his gallant conduct on 2 and 3 May 1942 in Lanao Province, Mindanao. He courageously directed his mortar platoon in successive delaying actions near Inuma, Porig, and Gannassi. On 3 May, with only a section of his men surviving repeated Japanese attacks, he assisted in organizing and defending an outpost on Gannassi Hill to cover the withdrawal of the 73d Infantry. By his heroic acts, Lieutenant Gador made a notable contribution to the defense of the Philippine Islands.

Major General Innis P. Swift, O1969, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action at Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 3 May 1945, while serving as Commanding General, I Corps. Disregarding his personal safety when subjected to direct enemy rifle and artillery fire, he visited and remained with the most forward troops in their capture of a critical terrain feature in the Villa Verde Trail. His cool courage served as an inspiration to his troops and his advice and encouragement to the lower unit commanders contributed to the success of their combat. General Swift's courageous action is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named enlisted man:

Private First Class Leroy Burnett (Army serial No. 38668704), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 274th Infantry Regiment, 70th Infantry Division, displayed gallantry in action on 3 March 1945 in the vicinity of Stryng Wendel, France. With complete disregard for his own safety, Private Burnett crawled forward 50 yards from his fox hole with hand grenades and destroyed an enemy machine-gun nest. Private Burnett's gallant action, in the face of continuous enemy fire, inspired his battle-torn comrades to greater efforts and enabled them to move forward to their objective.

II. LEGION OF MERIT.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. I, WD Bul. 54, 1942), the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Colonel Harry A. Clark, O6141, Medical Corps, United States Army. May 1944 to July 1946. (This award supersedes the award of the Army Commendation Ribbon to Colonel Clark for services from 1 May 1944 to 31 December 1945.)
- Colonel Elbridge Colby, O8150, Infantry, United States Army. December 1941 to August 1942 and October 1945 to November 1946.
- Colonel Morris M. Frost, O152617, Air Corps, Army of the United States. December 1943 to August 1944.
- Brigadier General Francis A. March, O12138, United States Army. March 1942 to May 1945.

III. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. Private First Class Manuel R. B. Barroca (Army serial No. 39438243), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company B, 32d Infantry Regiment, displayed outstanding heroism at Tongduchon-ni, Korea, on 25 June 1946. When a sudden flood from a broken dam seriously endangered a comrade on an island 100 yards off shore in a nearby river, he and a companion unhesitatingly volunteered to battle the treacherous current in an effort to reach the stranded man with a lifeline. After 2 hours of intense struggle against the swirling waters, which hurtled bruising logs and rocks against him, Private Barroca reached his goal, effected the rescue, and then braved dangerous waters back to safety.

Second Lieutenant Robert T. Haring, O2020417, Infantry, Army of the United States, exhibited heroism on the Rhine River near Iffesheim, Germany, on 28 April 1946. A landing craft used in constructing a telephone open-wire river crossing sank near the right bank of the Rhine River with Lieutenant Haring and 11 enlisted linemen aboard. Reaching shore by a difficult struggle, Lieutenant Haring turned to see one of his men about to drown in the swift, treacherous current. Without hesitation or thought of his own safety, Lieutenant Haring dived back into the water, secured the drowning man by the hair, and was towing him to shore when he went under. 2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. Colonel Alexander H. Campbell, O5310, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, accomplished heroic achievement during the "March of Death" at Bataan on 14 April 1942. Finding himself the senior officer of a group of over 1,000 exhausted, bewildered, and footsore Americans, who had marched 3 days without food, water, or rest and himself suffering from extreme heat and exhaustion, Colonel Campbell encouraged a continuation of the desire to survive. When a soldier, maddened by thirst, dashed from the column toward a Japanese guard, Colonel Campbell leaped in front of the soldier and saved his life, receiving a bayonet wound from the infuriated guard.

First Lieutenant Edmund W. O'Connell, O1299619, Infantry, Army of the United States, distinguished himself on 23 November 1944 near Reuwiller, France. When the command post of his battalion had become surrounded by hostile infantry and enemy tanks had closed to point-blank range, he courageously rallied his men to a determined and effective defense. He repeatedly exposed himself to return the fire of small arms and tanks and only after being severely wounded would he retire from the foremost position. Lieutenant O'Connell's brave acts reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Major Thomas N. Powell, Jr., O362694, Corps of Engineers, Army of the United States, displayed extraordinary heroism in action at Cebu, Philippine Islands, on 14 April 1942. He volunteered to return to Camp X, which had been overrun by the enemy and was in rear of enemy lines, to recover four small chests of buried paper money. After successfully recovering the money, he executed demolitions on the Toledo Road at critical points in order to delay and hamper enemy movements of troops and supplies. While making preparations to dynamite a bridge, Major Powell observed a large enemy patrol approaching. Organizing a small Filipino force, he ambushed the patrol, and, anticipating that the sound of firing would bring additional enemy forces to the spot, hurriedly gathered more Filipino troops from hiding places in nearby woods, and prepared another ambush. An enemy battalion came down the road into the ambush, but fell back after losing many men. Major Powell's energetic initiative and heroic leadership resulted in recovering the much needed paper money, the destruction of bridges along an important highway in enemy hands, and the fighting of a successful action behind enemy lines.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

M. Wainwright, United States Army, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Captain Jak Amos, O358741, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 13 April 1942. During an intense enemy bombing of Corregidor, Colonel Arthur W. Parker was struck by a flying bomb fragment and fatally wounded. Captain Amos, seeing Colonel Parker fall, left a place of comparative safety and, without regard for his own safety, ran to Colonel Parker's assistance. Realizing that Colonel Parker was seriously injured, Captain Amos carried him to an abandoned truck and drove through the bombing attack to the hospital at Malinta tunnel.

VII. DISTINGUISHED-FLYING CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), a Distinguished-Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Lieutenant Colonel Edwin A. Bland, Jr., O432034, Air Corps, Army of the United States. 16 April 1944.

VIII. SOLDIER'S MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 2 July 1926 (WD Bul. 8, 1926), the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Staff Sergeant Lee R. Dockery (Army serial No. 20537556), Signal Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 15th Signal Operations Company, Fort George G. Meade, Maryland, unhesitatingly went to the aid of the unconscious driver when a passenger cab, struck by another moving vehicle, overturned and burst into flames. He succeeded in pulling the stricken man from the blazing car and in carrying him to safety. By his calm, quick thinking and courageous action, Sergeant Dockery brought great credit to himself and the military service.

Private First Class James A. Matthews, Jr. (Army Serial No. 12234745), Corps of Military Police, Army of the United States, a member of Company C, 796th Military Police Battalion, displayed outstanding heroism on 7 June 1946 in Vienna, Austria, while on duty with the International Military Police Patrol. Seeing an Austrian civilian struggling desperately in the nearby Danube River, he unhesitatingly jumped, fully clothed, into the deep, treacherous water and swam to his rescue. Four times he dived before bringing the stricken man to the surface. Although nearly exhausted, Private Matthews brought the body to shore and, still unaided, applied artificial respiration until the civilian recovered. By this selfless and courageous act, Private Matthews brought great credit to himself and the military service.

Master Sergeant Carl B. Myers (Army serial No. 6540623), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 21st Service Squadron, 15th Air Base Group, Sixth Air Force, on the night of 9 January 1943, while returning to camp from a routine inspection, saved six native children and their parents from death when their wood and grass-thatched home caught on fire in the village of Jaque, Province of Darien, Panama. Sergeant Myers displayed outstanding courage and utter disregard for his own life when he hurriedly entered the burning dwelling and carried two children to safety. He then returned and emerged with two more. A third time, Sergeant Myers entered the dwelling and carried to safety the remaining two children. By this time, the front and only door was engulfed in flames and the parents seemed lost. He led the village people, who had gathered, to the rear of the dwelling and tore down the back wall to rescue the parents from their fiery death. Sergeant Myers then organized a bucket brigade to prevent the fire from spreading to other buildings. His conduct throughout this action reflects the highest credit on himself and the military service.

Master Sergeant Millard F. Thacker (Army serial No. 6272960), Corps of Military Police, United States Army, a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Panama Canal Department, displayed outstanding heroism at the risk of his life on 18 August 1946 at Port of Chorrera, Republic of Panama. While fishing in the Calmito River, Sergeant Thacker saw a soldier fall into deep water while attempting to launch a native boat. The soldier was caught by the undertow of the incoming tide and rapidly carried out into the middle of the stream. Sergeant Thacker and another soldier jumped into a boat and paddled toward the man. About 40 yards away, it was apparent that the man was drowning and that the boat could not reach him in time because of the strong current. Without regard for his personal safety, Sergeant Thacker unhesitatingly dived into the river, which was infested with alligators, swam to the drowning soldier, and towed him to the boat. Sergeant Thacker's courageous act saved the life of his friend and reflects great credit on himself and the military service.

Technician Fifth Grade John Thompson (Army serial No. 37791573), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a member of Battery C, 571st Anti-aircraft Artillery Battalion, on 25 June 1946, heroically disregarded his own safety to aid a fellow soldier whose clothing had been set on fire by flaming gasoline. When his distraught comrade lay helplessly engulfed in flames from gasoline, which had been spilled accidentally on and around him, Corporal Thompson acted with calm courage to drag him from danger and smother the fire with his own hands and body. By this act, so bravely and unhesitatingly performed, Technician Thompson saved his friend from certain death and brought great credit to himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Oscar T. Wells, Jr., O555562, Cavalry, Army of the United States, on 1 May 1946, heroically risked his life to rescue two of his fellow officers who were in danger of drowning in the Little River near Belton, Texas. When his two friends were washed over a dam and sucked below the water's surface by a dangerous undertow, Lieutenant Wells unhesitatingly went to their rescue and, braving the swollen stream at the top of the dam, passed a rope to each stricken man in turn. By his prompt and courageous act, Lieutenant Wells saved the lives of his friends and reflected great credit on himself and the military service.

IX. BRONZE STAR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Metal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Second Lieutenant William C. Twombly, O890379, Infantry, Army of the United States, from 7 to 9 April 1942, on Bataan, Philippine Islands, voluntarily conducted a patrol behind enemy lines to obtain information of enemy activities and dispositions. Under cover of the dense jungle, Lieutenant Twombly led his men over a route of several miles through an area occupied by numerous Japanese units. By this heroic achievement, which resulted in securing intelligence of extreme value, Lieutenant Twombly reflected great credit on himself and the military service.

Crehan* (T496), Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 29th Troop Carrier Squadron, 313th Troop Carrier Group, on 24 September 1944, distinguished himself near Brussels, Belgium. As he was riding in a truck convoy, the column was attacked suddenly and subjected to heavy tank fire by a German raiding party. He leaped from his truck to a nearby ditch and, with small-arms fire, distracted the German gunners while the remaining operative trucks moved from their range. Without regard for his own safety and exposed to cross-fire from German tanks and Allied troops, he moved out again on the road and, in the continuing fire, helped the wounded men into trucks for evacuation to a hospital. Flight Officer Crehan's outstanding courage and devotion to his wounded comrades reflect great credit on himself and the military service.

XI. AIR MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942), an Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officer:

Pridi Banomyong, Siamese civilian, performed heroic services to the United States in connection with military operations against an enemy in enemy-occupied territory, from October 1944 to September 1945. During this period, he was in continuous communication with Allied forces. He assumed responsibility for protecting Allied agents in Siam and was so successful that, despite the presence of many Japanese in the country, not a single agent was captured. By his great qualities of leadership and undoubted courage, Mr. Banomyong organized a resistance movement which contributed greatly to the Allied war effort through its timely and accurate intelligence and which stood ready to strike the Japanese when called upon.

He brought about the establishment of the Cuban blood bank, financed during the period of the war with donated funds raised through his initiative. The bank collected and forwarded for use of the United Nations 500 units of dry plasma. These acts of Doctor Arostegui expressed his altruistic zeal for the Allied cause, made available Cuban aid to war sufferers, and were, furthermore, of valuable service by making it possible for residents of Cuba to increase their contribution to the war effort.

III. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 1st Battalion, 143d Infantry Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism, gallantry, and outstanding achievement in combat from 15 to 17 March 1945 in France. When the forward advance of the assault elements of the 36th Infantry Division and adjacent units were halted, as a result of stubborn enemy resistance, one rifle company and the heavy weapons company of the 1st Battalion executed a bold maneuver and attacked the strongly defended town of Miesenheim, France. After a 2-hour battle, they had secured the town, captured 70, killed and wounded an estimated 30 of the enemy, and destroyed an enemy antitank gun. Then, spearheading the division attack, they drove forward and, although having both flanks completely exposed, attacked in the face of intense enemy machine-gun and mortar fire to smash all enemy resistance and seize a bridgehead over the Falkenstein River. When the determined enemy attempted to overrun and annihilate the elements of the 1st Battalion at the newly seized bridgehead, one company fought tenaciously in the face of severe enemy tank, small-arms, mortar, and hand-grenade fire to hold their positions, while another company fought bitterly to gain contact with the other company and to completely destroy the enemy effort. Having secured the bridgehead, the 1st Battalion continued its attack against the enemy stronghold of Greisbach and, after crossing the flat fields to the front and encountering unusually heavy enemy artillery and machine-gun fire, reached the western edge of town, destroying 2 enemy machine guns and capturing 20 of the enemy. Whereupon the remainder of the 1st Battalion, in a swift and bold attack, advanced forward and seized the southern portion of the village. By bitter house-to-house fighting, the 1st Battalion had cleared the town, captured 100 of the enemy, and killed or wounded 50. Continuing forward, the 1st Battalion advanced swiftly, despite enemy tank, artillery, and small-arms fire, to drive toward Gunstett, the last enemy stronghold before Wissembourg. One company, in a brilliant maneuver, completely overwhelmed a vastly superior enemy force and succeeded in seizing a dominant terrain feature overlooking the town, destroying 1 enemy Mark VI tank, capturing 3 enemy machine guns, and killing and wounding an estimated 30 of the enemy. With both flanks exposed, the 1st Battalion reorganized swiftly and launched its attack. Having no artillery support, units of the 1st Battalion battered strong enemy defenses in Gunstett under intense small-arms and defensive artillery fire, while other elements of the 1st Battalion drove the enemy off the high ground overlooking Gunstett, taking 70 of the enemy as prisoners and killing and wounding 50. After a stubborn house-to-house fight, the 1st Battalion, by late afternoon, had cleared the town, allowing the remainder of the 36th Infantry Division and the armored units to cross the river and continue to the Siegfried Line. As a result of the sustained aggressiveness and determination exhibited by every man, the 1st Battalion, 143d Infantry Regiment, completely crushed all substantial enemy resistance along the division's axis of advance and so thoroughly disorganized the enemy that he was compelled to fall back to the Siegfried Line. (General Orders 403, Headquarters 36th Infantry Division, 15 September 1945.)

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—1. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Major General Percy W. Clarkson, as published in WD General Orders 98, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Major General Percy W. Clarkson, O4676, United States Army. July 1945 to August 1946.

2. By direction of the President, in addition to the Distinguished-Service Medal awarded by the War Department to Colonel Beverly C. Dunn, as published in WD General Orders 75, 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Colonel Beverly C. Dunn, O2830 (then brigadier general), Corps of Engineers, United States Army. April 1942 to January 1944.

III. SILVER STAR.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, Headquarters Fourth Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Sergeant Daniel G. Kreiling (Army serial No. 17011274) (then corporal), Air Corps, Army of the United States, distinguished himself at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 24 April 1942. When Battery Crockett, an adjacent gun emplacement, was hit and set on fire by enemy artillery action, he courageously left his position of comparative safety in Battery Geary, proceeded across a heavily shelled area to the burning emplacement, assisted in reducing the fire then raging, and aided in the removal of wounded and dead. Sergeant Kreiling's gallantry prevented a serious explosion and large loss of life and is in keeping with the high traditions of the military service.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded by the Commanding General, European Theater, to the following-named officer:

Major Frank G. Fellows, O307805 (then captain), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 22 August 1944, as air control officer and forward observer of the 2d Battalion, 67th Armored Regiment, and 3d Battalion, 41st Armored Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action near Bretieul, France. During a heavy enemy counterattack supported by tanks, artillery, assault guns, and small arms, his tank was hit and disabled by enemy fire. Seriously wounded by the charge, he ordered his crew to abandon the vehicle. Major Fellows remained in the tank and personally operated the radios to direct artillery fire and a flight of P-47 dive bombers against the enemy. Again his tank was hit and, because of the burning and exploding ammunition, he was forced to abandon it. Barely able to walk, under the continuing fire, he crawled 200 yards over rough terrain to an infantry commander to inform him of the positions of enemy units. While performing that mission, Major Fellows was again severely wounded by enemy mortar fire.

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following named officer:

First Lieutenant James F. Flowers, Jr., O1017690 (then second lieutenant), Infantry, Army of the United States, while commanding a platoon of Company C, 712th Tank Battalion, on 10 July 1944, displayed extraordinary heroism in action in western France. He led a combined tank and infantry assault to relieve a battalion surrounded by a strong force of enemy paratroopers. Again attacking on his own initiative, under heavy enemy mortar and artillery bombardment, he led his force against a strong hostile position. Suddenly they came under deadly antitank fire. With flames leaping from the turret, despite the loss of his right foot from gunfire, he assisted the crew members from his tank and, to meet the new German assault, quickly organized a defense with the surviving tankmen, using rifles, carbines, knives, and fists to drive off the foe. After the repulse of the attack, he ordered all men not too badly wounded to withdraw, while he remained with a seriously injured infantryman. The following day, with their area under a heavy bombardment of artillery fire, an exploding shell destroyed his second foot and again severely wounded his companion. Redressing their grave wounds as best he could, he struggled desperately to maintain hope and life for his comrade and himself, until friendly infantry drove off the Germans and again took the position. Lieutenant Flowers' courageous leadership, heroic conduct, and devotion to his comrades are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service.

II. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

Brigadier General Frederick McCabe, O4553, United States Army. July 1942 to December 1944. (This award supersedes the award of the Legion of Merit to Brigadier General McCabe, for services from September 1943 to 3 August 1944, as published in General Orders 11, United States Army Forces, India-Burma Theater, 1 November 1944.)

(This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Colonel Young, for services from 1 November 1944 to 6 January 1945, as published in General Orders 69, Headquarters 3d Infantry Division, 26 February 1945.)

SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named enlisted man:

Sergeant Virgil Rist (Army serial No. 6851321), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a member of Battery B, 59th Coast Artillery, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 24 April 1942. When Battery Crockett, to which he was assigned, was being shelled continuously by enemy siege artillery, Sergeant Rist, at the risk of his life, voluntarily and unhesitatingly led two other volunteers into the various compartments of the burning battery to carry the helpless, wounded men to safety. Despite the fact that the installation was on fire, small-arms ammunition stored there was exploding, and the powder magazine was threatening to explode, Sergeant Rist returned with his men to extinguish the fires, in order to keep the battery and the men of his section ready for action.

V. SILVER STAR (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Silver Star awarded to Technical Sergeant Clarence K. Chu Hing, as published in General Orders 147, Headquarters 26th Infantry Division, 26 June 1945, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918). The citation is as follows:

Technical Sergeant Clarence K. Chu Hing (Army serial No. 10100949), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company G, 101st Infantry Regiment, 26th Infantry Division, on 26 November 1944, displayed gallantry in action near Chateau Bonne, Fontaine, France. His platoon, leading an attack against strongly fortified enemy positions, was subjected to a withering hail of small-arms, machine-gun, and mortar fire from the chateau. Quickly, he directed the men to a covered position, reorganized those that remained, and, seeing that the tank destroyers had knocked out several of the enemy machine guns, again went into action. Despite a wound which he had received, he led the remnants of his platoon forward in an attack so determined that the men quickly overran the enemy positions and stormed the chateau itself, where they mopped up room by room, killing or capturing all the defenders. By his exceptional leadership and heroic conduct in the face of enemy action, Sergeant Chu Hing inspired his fellow soldiers and contributed greatly to the successful completion of the mission.

Exhibiting extraordinary flying skill, Captain Cole kept the crippled airplane airborne until another fighter crashed into it, throwing the airplane into a spin. Ordering his crewmen to abandon the airplane, Captain Cole delayed his own jump in order to assist a crewman in parachuting to safety. Major Lundquist's extraordinary ability and courageous actions reflect the highest credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

First Lieutenant Theodore J. MacDonald, O745133, Air Corps, Army of the United States. On 8 March 1944, while serving as pilot on a B-17 type aircraft during a combat mission over Hannover, Germany, Lieutenant MacDonald's aircraft was damaged severely by enemy fighter attacks and forced out of formation. Realizing that the crippled airplane could not be flown safely to England, Lieutenant MacDonald ordered his crew to abandon the airplane. When he discovered that the navigator had been wounded and his parachute destroyed, Lieutenant MacDonald gave up his own parachute and ordered the navigator to jump to safety. Lieutenant MacDonald then brought the doomed airplane to a successful crash landing. The extraordinary flying ability displayed by Lieutenant MacDonald and his courageous actions reflect the highest credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

On 12 August 1943, while serving as pilot on a B-17 type aircraft during a combat mission over enemy-occupied Europe, Lieutenant Keck's aircraft suffered severe damage from enemy fighter attacks. Although painfully wounded in the battle, Lieutenant Keck continued to fly the crippled airplane until further attacks forced him to order his crew to escape. While his crew escaped, Lieutenant Keck skilfully kept the bomber airborne. However, before he could make his own escape, the airplane crashed, carrying him to his death. Lieutenant Keck's extraordinary flying ability and his courageous devotion to duty reflect the highest credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

During the following years, Miss Ocampo secretly engaged in the collection and smuggling of relief supplies into the several camps of American prisoners of war and internees on Luzon continuously at the hazard of her life. Miss Ocampo's loyal and fearless efforts were a material support to the waning health of the prisoners and internees.

Ordering his crew to abandon the airplane, Lieutenant Irving struggled desperately to level the falling bomber. At 2,000 feet of altitude, Lieutenant Irving, while making his escape from the doomed aircraft, discovered a crewmember whose parachute had become entangled in the bomb bay doors. In choosing to remain behind in an attempt to free the trapped man, Lieutenant Irving lost his life. Realizing that the airplane could not be flown back to England, Lieutenant Hickey ordered his crewmen to parachute to safety. Upon hearing that several wounded men were unable to leave the airplane, Lieutenant Hickey successfully crash landed the crippled bomber, thereby saving their lives. The extraordinary flying ability displayed by Lieutenant Hickey and his courageous devotion to duty reflect the highest credit on himself and the Army Air Forces.

Staff Sergeant Lawrence S. Moses (Army serial No. 32503904), Air Corps, Army of the United States. A landing craft being used to effect a telephone open-wire crossing and transporting a 12-man crew sank near the right bank of the river. Reaching shore by a difficult struggle, Sergeant Forbush turned and saw his platoon commander going under. Unhesitatingly he dived back into the swift, treacherous current and helped the officer to shore. Still disregarding his own safety, he swam downstream, hoping to rescue two other men who had not reached shore and returned only when no hope remained. By this act of selfless courage, Sergeant Forbush brought great credit to himself and the military service.

II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious services which aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following named individuals:

Frank B. Brady, American civilian, performed services of great benefit to the Allied war effort, from January 1944 to May 1945, while serving as an instrument approach project engineer with Headquarters United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe. He carried out a highly complex technical assignment, which resulted in the provision of vital poor-visibility landing aids for military aircraft in the European Theater. Through his broad technical knowledge, skill, and good judgment, Mr. Brady was responsible largely for the completion of a large-scale instrument approach program, which proved of great value during a most critical period of the war.

Doctor George R. Harrison, American civilian, as organizer and chief of the Southwest Pacific Section, Office of Field Service, from March to July 1944, contributed materially to the application of the weapons of science against the enemy and forces of nature confronting troops in Pacific areas. Doctor Harrison served with marked ability in connection with the moisture and fungus proofing of electronic equipment, the modifying of lightweight radar equipment for island warfare, the investigation of radio-wave propagation characteristics under tropical conditions, and the development of electronic navigational aids, all of which activities were contributions of unusual importance to ultimate victory in the Pacific.

Judge J. Warren Madden, American civilian, while serving with the Army of the United States in various legal capacities concerned with the Allied control of Germany, performed meritorious services in Europe from July 1945 to June 1946. Through his scholarly legal ability, sound judgment, and his sagacious and firm presentation and negotiation of United States policies, Judge Madden made a notable contribution to the quadripartite government of Germany and to the successful administration of United States areas of occupation.

Angelita Alvarez Sobral, citizen of the Philippine Commonwealth, performed meritorious services during the Japanese occupation of the Philippines from April 1942 to November 1944. Miss Sobral, in the guise of a nurse, gained entry to Camp O'Donnell and smuggled food, money, and medicines to the American survivors of the Bataan Death March. Miss Sobral continued this activity for the American prisoners and internees in other camps on Luzon until late in 1944, thereby contributing materially to their health and welfare. Miss Sobral also regularly supplied the necessities of life for more than 2 years to two escaped American prisoners in hiding in the mountains of Luzon, risking certain torture and death at the hands of the Japanese if she were apprehended.

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in General Orders 1, Headquarters Pacific Air Command, 2 January 1946, are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 82d Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action over Japan on 31 July and 5 August 1945. At the time, the 82d Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron, based on Ie Shima, in the Ryukyus Islands, was charged with obtaining vitally needed photographs and carrying out visual reconnaissance of tactical targets, defense installations, and shipping in and around the islands of Kyushu, Shikoku, and Honshu, Japan, and with seeking out and destroying Japanese railway equipment and rolling stock. Both the mission of 31 July and that of 5 August required that the F-6 aircraft, with which the squadron was equipped, be flown to the limit of their range, deep into Japanese home territory, and that photographic and reconnaissance runs and strafing attacks be made at dangerously low altitudes, under conditions of poor visibility over mountainous terrain. Intense and accurate antiaircraft fire was encountered over the greater part of the enemy installations. On 31 July, 14 aircraft of the squadron were dispatched to make an armed photographic reconnaissance of lines of communication and transportation on the island of Kyushu. Nineteen box cars and freight cars were totally destroyed and approximately sixty were severely damaged by strafing attacks, while two railway passenger cars, nine locomotives, and four trucks were completely destroyed, and twenty-nine passenger cars, one locomotive, and seven trucks were heavily damaged. Exceptionally good low-altitude photographs were obtained of railroad installations, towns, and a factory, while ships, camouflaged buildings, a radar station, trains, aircraft on the ground, and vehicles were accurately pin-pointed by visual observation. On 5 August, sixteen F-6 aircraft made an armed photographic reconnaissance over southern Kyushu. Strafing attacks resulted in the destruction of 15 railway freight and tank cars, 3 passenger cars, 13 locomotives, 3 trucks, and 1 armored car, and severe damage to approximately 27 freight and tank cars, 15 to 19 passenger cars, 1 locomotive, 6 trucks, and another armored car. Three camouflaged freighters were damaged, hits were scored on other smaller ships, entrenchments, buildings, and troops were strafed repeatedly. Low-altitude photographs were made of damaged or destroyed railway cars, ships, and other enemy installations, while visual observation pin-pointed gun emplacements, landing strips, aircraft, bridges, lumber yards, and other potential targets. In these two missions, the pilots of the 82d Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron not only obtained intelligence of great value in the planning of our tactical strikes against the Japanese homeland, but also destroyed transportation facilities sorely needed by the hard-pressed enemy during the critical last days of the Pacific war. The outstanding courage and skill of F-6 pilots of the squadron and the tireless devotion to duty of the members of the ground echelon, who prepared the aircraft for these important missions, reflect great credit on the armed forces of the United States.

2. The 110th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Philippine Islands on 7 December 1944. In a desperate attempt to keep American forces from consolidating their gains on the island of Leyte, first battleground in the campaign to liberate the Philippines, the Japanese were sending shipload after shipload of troops to Leyte as reinforcements. When, on 7 December 1944, a large convoy, consisting of six troop transports and cargo vessels escorted by seven destroyers and destroyer escorts, was sighted in the Visayan Sea headed for Armoc Bay, Leyte, during the morning the 110th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron dispatched sixteen P-40 aircraft to attack. Despite poor weather conditions, which provided the enemy with some cover, pilots of the squadron located the convoy, the greater part of which had taken refuge in San Isidro Bay. Although heavy, intense, and accurate anti-aircraft fire was directed at them from shore positions, as well as from vessels, and escorting enemy aircraft strongly opposed them, the pilots of the 110th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron attacked two large transports, which were outside the bay, set one of the vessels afire, left it beached, and damaged the other. The squadron then returned to Tacloban airstrip on Leyte, where the ground crews worked feverishly to reload the airplanes with bombs and fuel so that the second strikes at the convoy could be made as soon as possible. After bombing and strafing the transport ship, which they had previously damaged, and setting it afire, the pilots of the squadron, still braving heavy flak, made a low-level bombing attack on a destroyer and sank it with two direct hits, then set afire two more cargo vessels. With their supply of bombs and ammunition exhausted, they returned to Tacloban, where ground personnel so speedily serviced and reloaded the airplanes that the squadron was ready for a third strike late in the same afternoon. Returning to San Isidro Bay, this time with twelve P-40's, the pilots of the 110th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron found that all the larger ships were either destroyed or in flames and that the enemy was attempting vainly to save what was left of the convoy and assembling stacks of supplies and munitions along the beach. Coming over their target at low level, the squadron struck at every personnel concentration, shore installations and supply dump in sight, demolished an ammunition dump, set fire to four supply barges, and strafed three other boats. Despite fierce anti-aircraft fire and enemy opposition, the 110th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron suffered no casualties on this last strike nor on the two preceding ones. In thwarting this attempt of the enemy to reinforce the dwindling and besieged Japanese forces on Leyte, the 110th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron made a major contribution to the success of American arms in a critical stage of operations in the Philippines. The gallant courage of the pilots of the 110th Tactical Reconnaissance Squadron and the skill and devotion to duty of the ground personnel are in keeping with the finest traditions of the United States Army Air Forces.

3. The Marine Fighter Squadrons 115, 211, 218, and 313 are cited for outstanding performance of duty in action in the Philippine Islands from 2 to 15 December 1944. During this period, at a critical stage in the operations on Leyte, first battleground in the campaign to liberate the Philippines, these marine fighter squadrons not only carried out their primary mission of providing aerial cover, but also gave close support to our ground troops and intercepted large and heavily escorted enemy convoys. Having moved, on sudden notice, from Emirau Island in the Bismarck Archipelago to Tacloban, Leyte, personnel of the squadrons worked day and night, under the most difficult conditions, to set up camp facilities and prepare the Corsair aircraft for their vital missions. Despite unfavorable weather conditions, the necessity of undertaking frequent night missions, and the fact that many of the pilots were suffering from malaria and other tropical illnesses, Marine Fighter Squadrons 115, 211, 218, and 313 flew a total of 596 sorties from 3 through 15 December. Of these sorties, 184 were close-support flights or bombing attacks on Japanese convoys and airstrips. Losing a total of 8 pilots and 23 airplanes, these squadrons destroyed 34 Japanese aircraft, sank 6 destroyers, and damaged another destroyer and a destroyer escort, sank 3 transport vessels and badly damaged 3 others, destroyed 9 cargo ships, and damaged 2 others. One of the outstanding feats of these marine pilots during this period occurred on 7 December, when Marine Fighter Squadrons 115, 211, 218, and 313 attacked a Japanese convoy of six transport and cargo vessels escorted by seven destroyers and destroyer escorts heading toward Ormoc Bay to bring reinforcements to badly besieged enemy forces on the island of Leyte. On the first strike of the day, harassed by the attacks of 10 enemy fighters and by intense and accurate antiaircraft fire, which caused the loss of 3 to 12 participating airplanes, the Corsairs damaged 2 of the destroyers. Returning to their base to be reloaded with bombs and refueled, they took off again and, this time attacking the troopships and cargo vessels, destroyed one transport and two cargo ships and left another ship in flames, despite fierce antiaircraft fire from shore positions, as well as from the enemy vessels. On 11 December, the marine squadrons intercepted another enemy convoy attempting to bring reinforcements to the west coast of Leyte. In conjunction with a tactical reconnaissance squadron, on that day and the next, Marine Fighter Squadrons 115, 211, 218, and 313 helped to destroy two transports, three cargo ships, and three destroyers, and damaged another merchantman and a destroyer. The gallantry and fighting spirit of the marine pilots and the skill and tireless fidelity to duty of the ground personnel, who so well carried out their arduous task of maintaining and servicing the aircraft under the worst possible conditions, constituted a major contribution to the success of the Leyte operations and initial American victory in the Philippines. The achievements of the Marine Fighter Squadrons 115, 211, 218, and 313 are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States.

BATTLE HONORS—Citation of unit..... II

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—1. By direction of the President, the authority empowering the commanding officers, Trinidad Base Command and Trinidad Sector and Base Command, to appoint general courts martial, granted in section III, WD General Orders 3, 1941, and section II, WD General Orders 28, 1942, respectively, is, except as provided below, rescinded effective 1 November 1946.

2. The commanding officer, Trinidad Base Command, formerly Trinidad Sector and Base Command, will retain and continue to exercise general courts-martial jurisdiction in all cases referred by him for trial, prior to 1 November 1946, until the final disposition thereof.
[AG 250.4 (30 Sep 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 3d Battalion, 124th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action near Aitape, British New Guinea, during the period 12 July to 7 August 1944. On 12 July 1944, the 3d Battalion, after a forced march of 12 miles, routed an enemy-held position east of the X-Ray River to secure a line of departure and to launch a counterattack to restore the line of the Drinimor River, which had been penetrated by a determined fanatical enemy force the previous day. The 3d Battalion, with an exposed right flank, led the attack and, by strong, aggressive action, reached its objective late in the afternoon of 13 July 1944. This battalion was subjected to intense automatic and small-arms fire from three exposed flanks throughout the night, as other elements of the combat team had been delayed by a strong enemy force and could not close in on the objective. On 14 July 1944, the 3d Battalion, in an advance to close the left flank of the unit on their right, met sudden, intensified enemy resistance from all directions. The 3d Battalion, fighting with sheer-determination under the most adverse circumstances, finally overpowered the enemy, killing 168 and severed and strongly secured the enemy's main supply route. This feat was accomplished so swiftly that an enemy supply train continued to advance down the trail direct into the strongest sector of the 3d Battalion's perimeter, resulting in 131 enemy dead littering the trail and river bed. Shortly before daybreak on 16 July, the 3d Battalion was attacked by a well-organized enemy force from the rear, followed by a similar attack supported by mortar fire on the right flank by an enemy force occupying positions previously prepared by friendly troops. The opposition in that direction was quickly neutralized and one company of the battalion counterattacked to the right and drove the enemy from their position where 416 enemy were killed. Early on the morning of 21 July 1944, the enemy launched a vicious coordinated attack on the front and rear defense of the 3d Battalion. There followed the most fanatical fighting up to this time, as the enemy attacked the well-defended positions of the battalion time and time again, only to be repulsed by a superior force. On 31 July 1944, the entire regiment, reinforced by an infantry battalion, launched a counterattack to the east toward Niumen Creek, to relieve the pressure on the extreme southern flank and to secure a position from which the enemy could be enveloped and cut off. The 3d Battalion on the extreme right flank of three battalions abreast, with the reinforcing battalion following, reached its objective early in the afternoon of 1 August 1944. Turning south, the 3d Battalion encountered well-prepared positions and the advance was halted because of bitter opposition. Following the engagement, 99 enemy dead were counted. The advance to the south was continued through dense jungle and rough and swampy terrain, with the 3d Battalion reaching the Afua Trail far in advance of the battalion on its right. On 5 August 1944, while attacking south on Niumen Creek, the 3d Battalion contacted strong dug-in positions, but by aggressive action digging the enemy from caves and spider fox holes in solid rock, continued to advance until 1500. Heavy mortar fire was received during the night and the enemy launched a vigorous counterattack, which was quickly repulsed by the 3d Battalion. Immediately afterwards, the 3d Battalion launched an attack fixing the enemy in position, while another battalion flanked to the enemy's left; then, a vicious coordinated attack was launched, destroying and routing an estimated reinforced battalion, accounting for 425 enemy dead. As a result of the strenuous action on 5 and 6 August, the whole enemy force was practically annihilated and the disorganized remnants of the force trapped. The 3d Battalion was in constant contact with the desperate enemy force during the period of 13 July to 7 August 1944. The aggressive action of the 3d Battalion, relentlessly driving the enemy through mud, swamps, dense jungle growth, and over rough, mountainous terrain during heavy prevailing rains, never allowing the enemy to consolidate and reorganize, played a major role in the liberation of Aitape and established another "stepping stone" for Allied armies to advance to the other strategic islands to the north. During this period, the 3d Battalion accounted for approximately 1,300 enemy dead. The conspicuous gallantry and outstanding performance of duty from 13 July to 7 August 1944, by all personnel of the 3d Battalion, 124th Infantry Regiment, reflect great credit on themselves and the battalion and uphold the highest traditions of the military service. (General Orders 156, Headquarters 31st Infantry Division, 20 September 1945.)

I. DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE MEDAL.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in the performance of duties of great responsibility during the periods indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named officers:

- Brigadier General Carl A. Baehr, O2604, United States Army. 12 February to 15 August 1944 and 27 January to 8 May 1945.
- Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, United States Navy. April through June 1944.
- Brigadier General Cortlandt Van R. Schuyler, O14905, United States Army. November 1944 to September 1946.
- Admiral Raymond A. Spruance, United States Navy. January to June 1944.
- Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, United States Navy. August through November 1944.

II. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by the War Department to the following-named officer:

First Lieutenant John R. Wempe, O687653, Air Corps, Army of the United States, a member of the 368th Bombardment Squadron, Eighth Air Force, displayed gallantry in combat on 22 February 1944. Lieutenant Wempe was co-pilot of his airplane on a bombardment mission to Bernberg, Germany. After leaving the target, the airplane, which he was piloting at the time, was attacked by six enemy fighters. The airplane was raked with gunfire and Lieutenant Wempe was hit and wounded mortally. Despite his wounds and with the airplane badly damaged and in flames, Lieutenant Wempe manifested coolness, loyalty, and bravery in keeping the airplane under control to enable his crew to bail out.

III. SILVER STAR.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the periods indicated was awarded by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer and enlisted men:

Lieutenant Colonel Alva R. Fitch, O18113 (then major), Field Artillery, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 20 January 1942. On the afternoon that Colonel Fitch was assigned to the command of the 2d Battalion, 91st Field Artillery (Philippine Army), the gun crews of his Batteries C and D were driven from their gun positions by the fire of enemy snipers. Although it was well known that the enemy was particularly on watch for American officers, Colonel Fitch gathered about 40 Filipino soldiers and led them through the area, completely clearing the area of enemy snipers.

Corporal Bobbie E. Griffin (Army serial No. 14054369), Infantry, Army of the United States, a member of Company E, 31st Infantry Regiment, displayed gallantry in action at Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 20 March 1942. Corporal Griffin, without regard for his own personal safety, crawled forward of the front line to aid Private First Class Jaquez, who had been seriously wounded, and, although wounded himself by a bursting mortar shell, dragged Private Jaquez with great difficulty back to his own lines. Corporal Griffin, by his prompt and gallant action, enabled Private Jaquez to reach timely and much needed medical aid.

Technical Sergeant Jacob J. Johler (Army serial No. 12002558) (then staff sergeant), Coast Artillery Corps, Army of the United States, a member of Battery B, 60th Coast Artillery, displayed gallantry in action at Corregidor, Philippine Islands, on 5-6 May 1942. During extremely heavy artillery and air bombardment of Battery Way, Sergeant Johler, with complete disregard for his personal safety, assisted in removing casualties under fire. When telephone communications at the battery were shot out, Sergeant Johler voluntarily carried messages to and from the battery and the Seaward defense command post, a distance of about a quarter of a mile, in the dark, over rugged terrain, and through intense artillery fire. When very heavy casualties reduced seriously the effective strength of the battery, Sergeant Johler, though a motor mechanic who had had no training on guns, voluntarily took over the hazardous position of chief of breech, a duty which required him to fire the gun while the other members of the gun crew took cover. Sergeant Johler continued to function at this post until he was wounded in the arm and body by shrapnel. Then, though wounded seriously himself, he assisted in caring for and evacuating the more seriously wounded.

IV. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 20 July 1942 (sec. III, WD Bul. 40, 1942) and Executive Order 9260, 29 October 1942 (sec. (This award supersedes the award of the Bronze Star Medal to Lieutenant Colonel Carmichael, for services from 10 January to 10 April 1945, as published in General Orders 36, Headquarters 76th Infantry Division, 16 April 1945.)

Colonel Carlisle C. Dusenbury, O11672, Infantry, United States Army. March to December 1945.

Lieutenant Colonel Floyd H. Long, Jr., O340997, Transportation Corps (Infantry), Army of the United States. July 1942 to February 1943 and May 1943 to May 1945.

He skillfully organized and directed a daring attack by which his forces, accomplishing their objective, obtained quantities of ammunition from the enemy to replenish their own depleted stock. Through his personal courage, leadership, and determination, Captain Gaerlan contributed in great measure to the accomplishments of Filipino patriot and guerrilla forces.

XII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL (OAK-LEAF CLUSTER).—By direction of the President, in addition to the Bronze Star Medal awarded to Captain Joseph G. K. Miller, as published in General Orders 77, Headquarters 8th Infantry Division, 6 October 1944, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period

Captain Joseph G. K. Miller, O24285, Field Artillery, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action at Germeter, Germany, on 3 December 1944, when a German fighter aircraft crash-landed within 400 yards of his observation post during an enemy low-level air attack. Noting that the hostile pilot was uninjured, Captain Miller ordered his driver to cover his advance and proceeded voluntarily across an unmarked minefield fully exposed to enemy fire and disarmed and captured the enemy flier.

Arnott*, as published in General Orders 3, Pacific Division, Air Transport Command, 11 January 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight during the period indicated was awarded to him by the War Department under the provisions of Executive Order 9158, 11 May 1942 (WD Bul. 25, 1942), as amended by Executive Order 9242-A, 11 September 1942 (WD Bul. 49, 1942). The citation is as follows:

Flight Officer William S. Arnott (T183610), Air Corps, Army of the United States. October 1944 to August 1945.

XVI. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III WD Bul. 11, 1942), citation of the following unit in the general orders indicated is confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citation reads as follows:

The 3d Battalion, 128th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy of Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 24 March to 31 May 1945. The 3d Battalion, during this period, attacked and vanquished the fanatical and aggressive enemy entrenched in seemingly impregnable fortifications controlling the Villa Verde Trail. The enemy timetable permitted them months of preparation, during which, they honeycombed the hills with elaborate systems of caves, prepared fortified emplacements for artillery and machine guns, familiarized themselves with the terrain, and cached huge stocks of supplies and ammunition. Dense forests, thick scrub and underbrush, and concentrated patches of razor-sharp kunai grass afforded the enemy the most ideal natural defensive positions ever encountered. Defense of these hills consisted of series after series of pillboxes heavily armed with machine guns and mutually supporting automatic and small-arms fire. These positions were so well-dug-in and protected that they were not seriously affected by our artillery and mortar barrages and had to be reduced one by one by organized assault groups. The commitment of the 3d Battalion, in a series of coordinated attacks against enemy-held hills, launched the unit into one of the bloodiest, most bitterly contested engagements of the entire campaign. In 1 4-day period, 220 Japanese were killed and many others were buried in the 44 caves and pillboxes sealed and overrun. Bangalore torpedoes, rocket launchers, pole charges, hand-thrown demolitions, and flame throwers literally blasted and buried enemy troops to annihilation as the slow, costly advance rolled on until these hills were taken. The capture of these hills isolated cut-off pockets of enemy forces and made possible the extension of the supply road. Further advance was impeded by the enemy's positions on another hill. This hill consisted of a series of steep gullies and ridges approximately 800 yards long, running parallel to the trail and south of it. Its commanding ground dominated over 1,000 yards of the trail and, until secured, prevented all forward movement. The 3d Battalion was assigned the mission of capturing this hill and establishing a roadblock on the trail from the south by this flanking movement. Again the battalion encountered stiff enemy resistance in well-fortified and mutually supporting caves, machine-gun pillboxes, and dug-in snipers. Accurate enemy indirect and point-blank artillery subjected our troops to heavy fire. Once again the experienced assault groups burned, blasted, and fought their way through pocket after pocket of these fortified positions. Again demolitions, rocket launchers, flame throwers, pole charges, close-in fighting, and hand-to-hand combat wrested positions from the tenacious enemy. In 4 days of ferocious assaults, fortifications were reduced and control of dominating hills established. When advanced elements of the division found themselves isolated, because of cutting of their supply line, elements of the 3d Battalion were rushed to that area. A new trail was cut to the isolated elements and, in a series of bloody, savage attacks, they completely annihilated the Japanese blockading the old supply route. During this phase, the enemy controlled a section of the Villa Verde Trail. A three-way pincer movement was initiated to eliminate this enemy group. Throughout this entire phase, it was a case of engaging and destroying installations, caves, and pillboxes, one by one. The fanatical enemy had to be killed to the last man, each determined to fight to the end. The onslaught of the American troops, closing from all sides, was so fierce that the spirit of the defenders of the Villa Verde Trail was broken forever. During the above-mentioned period, the 3d Battalion killed at least 741 Japanese, while countless others were smothered and buried in caves. The indomitable courage of the 3d Battalion, 128th Infantry Regiment, and their aggressiveness in battle against an enemy favored by both perfect defensive terrain and oriental fanaticism were determining factors in the conquest of the Villa Verde Trail. (General Orders 48, Headquarters 32d Infantry Division, 28 February 1946.)

XVII. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Morris Berg, American civilian, rendered exceptionally meritorious services of high value to the war effort from April 1944 to January 1946. In a position of responsibility in the European Theater, he exhibited analytical abilities and a keen planning mind. Mr. Berg inspired both respect and constant high level of endeavor on the part of his subordinates, which enabled his section to produce studies and analyses vital to the mounting of American operations.

XVIII. AIR MEDAL.—So much of section V, WD General Orders 100, 1946, as pertains to Captain Horace A. Stevenson, Air Corps, is rescinded.

GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL—Authority to appoint granted-----	Section I
BATTLE HONORS—Citations of units-----	II

I. GENERAL COURTS MARTIAL.—By direction of the President, the commanding officer, Camp Polk, Louisiana, is empowered, pursuant to the eighth article of war, to appoint general courts martial.

[AG 250.401 (19 Sep 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in General Orders 45, Headquarters First Army, 8 June 1946, are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 1st Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 16 to 19 November 1944, inclusive. Marking the opening of the American offensive through the Hurtgen Forest to the Roer River, the 1st Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, attacked northeast from Schevenhutte, Germany, on 16 November 1944, with the mission of seizing the strategic high ground around Hamich, Germany. The 1st Battalion immediately encountered extremely heavy enemy opposition of intense artillery and mortar fire, which, because of tree bursts in the dense forest, exacted an unusually high toll of casualties. Barbed wire entanglements and numerous antipersonnel mines protected enemy positions from which continuous machine-gun and other small-arms fire was directed. Despite the difficulty of advancing under these conditions, the 1st Battalion pressed forward, seized its objectives, and prepared defensive positions. The concentrated shelling made it impossible to bring forward reinforcements and supplies and seriously retarded evacuation of the battalion's casualties. During the following 3 days, the Germans, reinforced in Hamich with tanks and self-propelled guns, made repeated attempts to dislodge the 1st Battalion from its hard-won positions, but failed each time. The constant shelling continued to exact heavy casualties, but the battalion repulsed each enemy assault, engaging in desperate hand-to-hand combat when the Germans launched a final and desperate full scale attack on 18 November. Enemy mortar and artillery fire continued throughout 19 November, when the battalion was relieved. During the 4-day battle, the 1st Battalion, despite heavy casualties, advanced, secured its objective, and then repulsed repeated and determined counterattacks by the numerically superior enemy. The superb courage, combat efficiency, and tenacity of purpose manifested by each officer and man of the 1st Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, reflect the highest credit on themselves and the armed forces.

2. The 2d Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 18 to 26 November 1944, inclusive. During the November 1944, general offensive through the Hurtgen Forest to the Roer River, the 2d Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, was assigned the initial mission of seizing a strategic position in the vicinity of Hamich, Germany. Although opposed by fresh enemy troops and constant concentrated artillery, mortar, and small-arms fire, the 2d Battalion advanced and on 18 November 1944, captured their objective, after which, it repulsed a savage counterattack by means of bayonets and hand grenades in fierce hand-to-hand combat. The main body of the enemy attackers was turned back by the indomitable courage of the battalion's machine-gun platoons, which suffered extreme casualties in the bitter fighting. Over 250 German dead were left on the battlefield after the engagement. The 2d Battalion then advanced and achieved a prominent terrain feature near Eschweiler, Germany, and on the following day, under relentless mortar and artillery fire, continued the drive to Heistern, Germany. Despite heavy losses, the 2d Battalion drove forward until 25 November, when it captured an important rail line near Weisweiler, Germany, its final objective in the drive. During the 8-day period of sustained attack, the 2d Battalion attained its objectives by driving overwhelming enemy forces from well-dug-in strong points and strategic positions, inflicting severe casualties and destroying or capturing valuable equipment. The offensive broke a general stalemate, forced the enemy to retreat along the entire line, and enabled friendly units to resume their drive to the Roer River. The combat skill, indomitable courage, and grim determination displayed by the officers and men of the 2d Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment during this critical period reflect the highest credit on themselves and the armed forces.

3. The 3d Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 16 to 26 November 1944, inclusive. Originally assigned the mission of reinforcing the assaulting battalion on Hamich, Germany, the 3d Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, was committed prematurely when the attacking forces met stubborn resistance and suffered severe casualties. Moving to forward positions, on 16 November 1944, under heavy mortar and artillery fire, the 3d Battalion attacked the following day and reached the southern sector of Hamich. In fierce house-to-house fighting, the enemy was driven from Hamich and subsequently from a strategic knoll to the north. Repulsing a savage counterattack, the battalion called for artillery fire upon its own positions to destroy a large concentration of enemy tanks. After repulsing a second counterattack on 19 November, the 3d Battalion advanced and occupied the ridge line north of Hamich, which it held until 23 November. During this period, severe casualties were inflicted upon the enemy and over 100 prisoners captured. The 3d Battalion then resumed its advance northward to Heistern and, despite murderous enemy fire, captured its objective and repulsed three full-scale counterattacks. In so doing, the 3d Battalion skillfully accomplished its mission, thereby enabling friendly units, held back because of disadvantageous terrain and fanatical opposition, to resume the general offensive through the Hurtgen Forest to the Roer River. The fighting spirit, courage, and outstanding devotion to duty displayed by the officers and men of the 3d Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, reflect the highest credit on themselves and the armed forces.

During an extremely heavy aerial bombardment and shelling, Corporal Cohorn, without thought of his personal safety and at the risk of his life, volunteered with two other soldiers to replace a gun cable which had been destroyed by the bombardment. As a result of this courageous act, a weapon important to the defense of the area was put back into action.

V. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in the general orders indicated are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Troop C, 113th Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron (Mechanized) (Reinforced), is cited for distinguishing itself in battle by extraordinary heroism, determination, and esprit de corps in overcoming unusually difficult and hazardous conditions during the period 4 to 7 April 1945. With the 3d Platoon, Company F, attached, Troop C, 113th Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron (Mechanized) (Reinforced), was assigned the mission of carrying out a reconnaissance in force of a route between Paderborn, Germany, and the Weser River. During the initial phases of the action, Troop C reduced successfully several roadblocks defended by superior enemy forces. Heavily defended woods were encountered and were attacked by dismounted scout sections and towns were successfully attacked and taken in the face of prepared defensive positions, which were augmented in two instances with Tiger tanks. Troop C, during the major portion of the period, was in direct contact with the enemy 24 hours a day. When, near the town of Langenkamo, Troop B, 113th Cavalry Reconnaissance Squadron (Mechanized), was stopped by fanatical resistance from a roadblock, Troop C, moved through Troop B, demolished the roadblock, and captured the town, then moved on into the town of Rischenau through heavily defended woods and canalized roads. The enemy had 40-mm guns, two Tiger tanks, and about a company of infantry in defense of the town. Troop C moved in, attacked, and forced the enemy to abandon their positions. From there, Troop C moved toward the town of Falkenhagen in a night attack and, even though an erroneous report as to the occupancy of the town was received from an adjacent unit, struck with such force and esprit de corps that the town was taken from an estimated battalion of SS troops, augmented by two Mark VI tanks. As a result of this brilliant action, the 83d Infantry Division was able to move rapidly toward the area from which the attack across the Weser River was launched. (General Orders 590, Headquarters Seventh Army, 8 October 1945.)

2. The 1st Battalion, 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism, efficiency, and achievement in action against the enemy near Wesel, Germany, on 24 March 1945. After having been subjected to intense and damaging antiaircraft fire and landing on a drop zone swept with heavy automatic weapons fire from previously prepared enemy emplacements, the 1st Battalion, 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment, went into action to accomplish their mission, in addition to assisting materially the British 6th Airborne Division. Despite losses and attendant handicaps, this 1st Battalion acquitted itself in a thoroughly proficient and courageous manner. The efficient aggressiveness of this battalion in the face of great odds and a defensively prepared enemy resulted in the subsequent success of the airborne and land invasion of Germany. (General Orders 352, Headquarters United States Army Forces, European Theater, 28 December 1945.)

3. The 2d Battalion, 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment, is cited for extraordinary heroism, achievement, and gallantry in action against the enemy in the vicinity of Wesel, Germany, on 24 March 1945. Encountering heavy antiaircraft resistance, this battalion landed amid strong enemy positions. Despite the stiff resistance encountered on the ground, the battalion assembled and organized to reduce six 88-mm guns and capture 1,252 prisoners during the day's action. Although suffering severe casualties, both in the air and on the ground, the courageous and heroic action demonstrated by the members of this unit assisted materially in gaining the successful exploitation of the airborne invasion of Germany. Despite having lost an estimated 27 percent of their transport airplanes to hostile antiaircraft fire, the efforts of this 2d Battalion, 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment, made the over-all success of the mission possible. (General Orders 352, Headquarters United States Army Forces, European Theater, 28 December 1945.)

4. The 3d Battalion, 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy between 24 and 26 March 1945, during the airborne operation across the Rhine River, near Wesel, Germany. The battalion landed by parachute behind enemy lines in the Issel River area, northwest of Brunen, Germany. Intense antiaircraft and small-arms fire was encountered by the approaching airplanes and during the parachutist drops. Despite the fact the battalion was dropped 3,500 yards north of the predetermined drop zone and was engaged immediately by hostile fire from numerous, well-fortified and concealed positions, the battalion was quickly assembled and, after violent fighting, the landing zone was secured. The unit, fighting bitterly all the way and after taking 779 prisoners in the first day of action, moved to its predesignated landing zone to the south. On 26 March 1945, at 0800, the battalion, supported by 1 platoon of American tanks, assaulted the German positions on a 1,500-yard front across flat terrain affording no cover or concealment and against an enemy concentrated in farmhouses, barns, and dug-in positions. By 1600 the same day, the battalion objective, a strategic hill approximately 200 feet high with a 30-degree slope, had been taken. During this attack, the battalion destroyed 3 large ammunition dumps, inflicted severe casualties upon the enemy, and captured more than 280 prisoners, with a total loss to the battalion of 4 men killed and 14 wounded for the day. This gallant and heroic performance by officers and men of all ranks was an invaluable contribution to the success of the airborne operation. The courage, devotion to duty, and fighting spirit displayed by members of the 3d Battalion, 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment, are worthy of emulation and reflect the finest traditions on the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 352, Headquarters United States Army Forces, European Theater, 28 December 1945.)

5. The 126th Field Artillery Battalion is cited for extraordinary heroism and outstanding performance of duty in action against the enemy on Luzon, Philippine Islands, from 30 January to 3 June 1945. For the entire 125 days necessary to complete this operation, the 126th Field Artillery Battalion was in continuous direct support successively of the 127th, 126th, and, finally, of the 128th Infantry Regiments of the 32d Infantry Division. To do so, it was forced to position itself and its guns amidst treacherous terrain and precipitous cliffs, carving its final position by hand and by bulldozer from a hillside 4,000 yards west of Mt. Imugan, in order that it might support decisive infantry operations toward Mt. Imugan and Santa Fe in the ensuing 10 weeks. Only from this position and no other could fire support be effectively maintained against a fanatical and well-dug-in enemy, who subjected the unit to all kinds of harassment, registering continually upon its position with small-arms and artillery fire of all calibers and ceaselessly practicing well-developed infiltration tactics. Regardless of the extreme hazard and danger of necessity placed upon it and with a grim tenacity of purpose and even greater heroism, the 126th Field Artillery Battalion, with a magnificent esprit de corps, maintained both its position and its fires until the completion of the 32d Division's operations, covering its relief and withdrawal and being the last unit to leave the scene of the action. In this period, it fired more than 69,200 rounds of ammunition for a rate of better than 1 every 2 minutes. Despite this heavy rate of fire, it was successfully delivered without inflicting a single casualty upon the supported infantry, a support action rendered under all but impossible conditions. Wire communications and supply were maintained at a great cost to the battalion, which, in addition, being denied flank support because of a shortage of troops within the division itself, was forced to maintain its own security by constant patrolling action. Because of the extreme hazard of the position, casualties were heavy, both at the position and in the forward areas, where forward observers and liaison parties consistently operated, the battalion suffering more than all other artillery units of the division concerned. This brought about a critical shortage of personnel, resulting in officers and men maintaining themselves for periods as long as 37 days in the forward areas without relief and despite the need in many cases for hospitalization. Throughout this time, many acts of individual heroism and gallantry were performed by officers and men of the battalion, who so successfully completed their mission as to play a paramount role in the opening of the Villa Verde Trail, an action in which Japanese troops (commanded by General Yamashita) suffered more than 9,000 casualties. The skill in battle, accuracy of their fires, and selfless devotion to duty displayed by the officers and men of the 126th Field Artillery Battalion, during this critical phase of the Luzon campaign, not only reflect great credit on the members of the battalion but on the battalion itself, the 32d Division, and military service as well. (General Orders 45, Headquarters 32d Infantry Division, 28 February 1946.)

6. The 224th Airborne Medical Company is cited for extraordinary heroism, achievement, and efficiency in action against the enemy near Wesel, Germany, on 24 March 1945. After having been subjected to heavy flak resistance, which cost the unit 3 of its surgeons, miscellaneous supplies, and transportation, this airborne medical company established the divisional aid and clearing station within 55 minutes after landing. Of the remaining medical personnel, 13 were wounded, but refused evacuation in order to attend those requiring medical and surgical attention. Despite the handicaps and losses, the 24th Airborne Medical Company provided efficient and adequate medical attention to approximately 750 American and British casualties during the first 24 hours of the operation. The complete devotion to duty and absolute disregard for personal welfare demonstrated by the 224th Airborne Medical Company were responsible for the unprecedented low mortality rate for an operation of this nature (General Orders 352, Headquarters United States Army Forces, European Theater, 28 December 1945.)

7. The 315th Troop Carrier Squadron, 443d Troop Carrier Group, is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 5 March to 1 October 1944. During this period, the 315th Troop Carrier Squadron participated with distinction in the aerial invasion of Burma, the Mogaung Valley campaign, and subsequent intensive air supply and transport operations. On the night of 5 March 1944, this squadron towed gliders loaded with troops, ordnance, and equipment to air strips located far behind enemy lines in Burma, and, in the following week, ferried nightly into enemy territory large quantities of personnel and matériel, without loss of aircraft or personnel transported in the face of fierce enemy mortar and ground fire. Landings were made on crude, hastily constructed strips in enemy-held jungle territory, where Japanese aircraft and antiaircraft artillery positions were numerous and active. Weather conditions were execrable, thunder storms, rain, fog, and high winds being encountered perpetually, requiring most skillful piloting and navigation. After the completion of the air-borne operation and the evacuation by air of the personnel involved, this squadron at once undertook the task of supplying Allied ground forces in northern Burma, performing more than its normal duties and transporting such large quantities of war matériel that Allied forces were enabled to move forward to their objectives, despite monsoon torrents and determined enemy resistance. In addition to the intensive air dropping and supply ferrying operations, this squadron flew into Burma the fuel pipeline which provided vital gasoline and oil for forces in that area, completing the project far ahead of schedule. The constantly superior performance of the 315th Troop Carrier Squadron, 443d Troop Carrier Group, in action against the enemy, under severe handicaps of climate and terrain, made possible by the outstanding combat efficiency of its air crews and the exceptional maintenance and support given by its ground personnel, contributed in great degree to Allied successes in this theater and reflects the highest credit on the military forces of the United States. (General Orders 13, Headquarters Tenth Air Force, 9 January 1945.)

8. The 443d Troop Carrier Group is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action from 5 to 30 September 1945. Upon the capitulation of the Japanese and the cessation of hostilities in China, it was necessary immediately that Chinese forces be placed in position to control the beaten enemy and to enforce surrender terms. Because of the extreme urgency of the situation, travel by the fastest means was essential. The 443d Troop Carrier Group, consisting of the Headquarters 443d Troop Carrier Group, the 1st, 2d, and 315th Troop Carrier Squadrons assigned, and 322d Troop Carrier Squadron attached, was given the high priority mission of transporting from Chihkiang to Nanking an entire Chinese army consisting of 30,000 men. Within 1 week, this group moved itself by air from its former base at Dinjau, India, over the "Hump" to Chihkiang, China, where a field camp was established at once and operations begun under arduous field conditions. In 26 days, this group moved more than 33,000 Chinese troops and 700 other personnel to Nanking, the seat of supplies and equipment. Flying without adequate navigational aids over mountainous and rugged terrain and through unpredictable weather conditions, this group maintained a high flying safety record under operating conditions more severe than normally encountered in combat operations. An average number of 82 trips per day was completed. Approximately 8,000 hours were flown in the completion of this mission, which was accomplished 17 days prior to the original target date. During this mission, all personnel of the 443d Troop Carrier Group displayed exceptional determination, aggressiveness, courage, and flying skill, attaining operational results so outstanding as to aid considerably the Chinese Government in their occupation tasks and the United States armed forces in China in attaining the objectives allotted them by higher authority. The 443d Troop Carrier Group's superior performance of duty had profound effect upon the progress of the mission of American forces in China, is worthy of the highest traditions of the military service, and reflects credit in the highest degree on the armed forces of the United States. (General Orders 378, Headquarters Tenth Air Force, 11 October 1945.)

9. The 466th Parachute Field Artillery Battalion is cited for extraordinary heroism, efficiency, and achievement in action against the enemy near Wesel, Germany, on 24 March 1945. Jumping by parachute, north of Wesel, the 466th Parachute Field Artillery Battalion encountered some of the bitterest fighting in the accomplishment of the objectives assigned to the 17th Airborne Division. Landing in a drop zone completely covered by accurate fire from enemy artillery emplacements, this parachute field artillery battalion, after gathering ammunition and howitzer bundles off the fire-swept field, went into action to fire their first round within 30 minutes after getting to the ground. Although 1 battery of this parachute field artillery battalion had lost all of its officers, the battalion's fire control was established within 1½ hours and firing in direct support of a parachute infantry regiment. The 466th Parachute Field Artillery Battalion, in addition to accomplishing its assigned mission, succeeded in capturing 320 prisoners and capturing or destroying 18 field pieces and approximately 18 enemy machine guns. The proficiency and aggressiveness of the 466th Parachute Field Artillery Battalion, in the face of great odds and a defensively prepared enemy, resulted in the provisions of adequate artillery support, which assisted materially in the ultimate success of the operation and subsequent exploitation of the gains achieved. (General Orders 352, Headquarters United States Army Forces, European Theater, 28 December 1945.)

VI. MEDAL OF FREEDOM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Consul General Sam Woods, American civilian, rendered valuable services to the United States Military Attaché, Berne, Switzerland, through his untiring efforts in caring for the physical needs of American aviators, who made forced or crash landings in Switzerland, from August 1943 to May 1945. By his constant and solicitous visits to the sick and wounded, he contributed materially to their morale and comfort. By supplementing the work of the Military Attaché's Office during this trying period and giving first priority to these important tasks, Consul General Woods rendered patriotic services of unusual value to the American Army.

Major Miller P. Warren, Jr., O19280, Infantry, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action on 3 January 1942 near Porac, Pampangua, Luzon, Philippine Islands. A strong enemy force, screened behind a large moving column of civilian evacuees, infiltrated the defense position and launched a sudden and vicious attack. Major Warren stepped into the ensuing breach and, by his vigorous action and heroic example, inspired the troops and organized the defense so that the position was stabilized and the line was held.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (WD Bul. 43, 1918), a Silver Star for gallantry in action during the period indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officer:

Captain Leland W. Cramer, O21370, Cavalry, United States Army, displayed gallantry in action at Binalonan, Luzon, Philippine Islands, on 24 December 1941. Captain Cramer, commanding Troop A, was given the mission of protecting the left flank of the 26th Cavalry (Philippine Scouts). In making adjustments in the disposition of his troop, he completely ignored heavy enemy fire from ground and tank-mounted machine guns in order to personally place the most advanced elements of his troop. His courage, coolness under fire, and battlefield leadership were a source of inspiration to all the regiment and a major factor in the successful repulse of repeated enemy assaults on his sector of the regimental position.

Without regard for personal safety, Sergeant Kirlin refused to move to a safe position in the aircraft, preferring to remain in the forward compartment and administer first aid to the badly wounded pilot. Pohlad*, as published in WD General Orders 48, 1946, a bronze Oak-Leaf Cluster for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the period indicated was awarded to him by the Commanding General, European Theater, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944). The citation is as follows:

Second Lieutenant Carl R. Pohlad, O2016349 (then first sergeant), Infantry, Army of the United States, on 19 January 1945, performed heroic services in Schillersdorf, France. When two platoons were pinned down by heavy enemy small-arms fire, he advanced alone down an open street and, hurling grenades and firing his submachine gun, destroyed an enemy machine-gun position. Moving on with his submachine gun under the heavy, hostile fire, Lieutenant Pohlad drove the enemy from the other position and enabled the two platoons to advance and reach their objectives.

XI. MEDAL OF FREEDOM WITH BRONZE PALM.—By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9586, 6 July 1945 (sec. II, WD Bul. 12, 1945), the Medal of Freedom with Bronze Palm for meritorious service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy during the period indicated was awarded by the War Department to the following-named individual:

Elie Garcia, Haitian civilian, as First Secretary of the Haitian Embassy, handled all lend-lease negotiations between his government and the United States, from December 1941 to October 1945, in an outstanding manner. His services were marked by exceptional patience, energy, and a quick grasp of military supply and equipment problems. Mr. Garcia's wholehearted belief in, and support of, the Allied cause and his willing cooperation facilitated greatly the War Department in its dealings with his country.

XII. LEGION OF MERIT.—1. So much of section VIII, WD General Orders 13, 1943, as pertains to Colonel Charles L. Steel, Infantry, as reads "December 8, 1941 to March 17, 1942" is amended to read "8 December 1941 to 27 February 1942."

2. Paragraph 2, section V, WD General Orders 66, 1946, pertaining to Colonel Charles L. Steel, Infantry, is rescinded (see par. 9, sec. VI, above).

XIII. AIR MEDAL.—Section VII, WD General Orders 24, 1946, pertaining to Technical Sergeant William H. Kirlin, Jr., 93d Bombardment Group, 409th Bombardment Squadron, Army of the United States, is rescinded.

[AG.300.4-(4 Oct 46)]

IV. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), citations of the following units in General Orders 13, Headquarters Twentieth Air Force, 23 January 1946, are confirmed under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. The 6th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 9 to 19 July 1945. As a part of a specially trained force charged with the strategic blockading of the Japanese Empire, this group, in a series of valiant actions, laid mines with telling effect to help materially in the final destruction of the enemy's shipborne lines of communications. The execution of the mining missions involved extraordinary demonstrations of skill and extreme accuracy, since the location of all mines had to be pin-pointed to permit immediate assessment of results and eventual mine-sweeping operations by our own naval units. Despite the problems posed by a greatly accelerated program requiring combat flights every other night at levels of 6,900 feet to 8,600 feet over heavily defended enemy territory, and of complete reliance upon radar for the utmost precision required in mining through under-casts, the 6th Bombardment Group (VH) performed superbly its assigned missions and was instrumental in causing an estimated 60 percent of the enemy ships to be sunk or damaged between March and August 1945. On the night of 9 July 1945, 97 percent of the 31 aircraft airborne effectively mined their assigned target areas, with the loss of 1 aircraft. For tactical reasons, the aircraft were flown at reduced speeds and at low altitudes over the heavily defended areas of Yamata and Shimonoseki Straits, encountering as many as 25 searchlights coned on a single aircraft, coordinated with heavy, intense, and accurate flak. Despite these overwhelming obstacles, the briefed courses were held valiantly and the mines were dropped in the exact assigned positions, confirmed by radarscope photographs. The 6th Bombardment Group (VH) again took off on the night of 11 July 1945 to open a new phase of the attack on the enemy's shipping. Traversing vast expanses of water, exposed for 7 hours and 10 minutes over enemy territory on one of the longest missions of the war, and heavily loaded with mines, the group flew to the remote shores of Korea to mine the harbors of Rashin and Fusan. Although handicapped by a solid undercast at the target area, and entirely dependent upon radar, the operation was executed with such unerring precision and pressed with such determination that radarscope photos again revealed 90 percent of the mines were sown in the briefed area. The 6th Bombardment Group (VH) set out again on 19 July 1945 to intensify and maintain the blockade in seven of the vital ports and harbors of Korea and Japan by further sowing and replanting of mine fields. The determination of the crews to fulfill the assigned objective was again displayed when 94 percent of the mines, airborne by 31 aircraft were accurately dropped as briefed. This achievement contributed powerfully to the final and complete suffocation of Japan's shipping lanes. Inspired by a full realization of the strategic importance of their assignment and keenly determined to execute it with maximum effectiveness, the ground personnel and air crews of the 6th Bombardment Group (VH) coordinated their efforts into a smoothly functioning team. In the face of unusually difficult conditions and circumstances, which included the employment of unfamiliar and dangerous weapons and of techniques requiring the utmost care and precision, problems were attacked and overcome through spontaneous initiative, indefatigable zeal and effort, and long hours of unselfish devotion to duty. The combined efforts of all personnel of the 6th Bombardment Group (VH) were vital factors contributing to the ultimate success of the aerial mining blockade of the Japanese Empire, the severance of the enemy shipping lanes, and the smashing of her power to continue the war. The achievements of the personnel of this group bring great honor to themselves, the United States Army Air Forces, and to the entire military service.

2. The 9th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the Japanese enemy for the period 13 to 28 May 1945. During this period, this group, with consummate skill and high daring carried out lone extensive and highly effective aerial mining operations in the enemy's vital Shimonoseki Straits area and in the strategic harbors of northwest Honshu and Kyushu. In these operations, the group demonstrated the strategic potential inherent in aerial mine laying, blazed the trail for subsequent mining operations by developing precision techniques and highly successful tactics, and contributed significantly to the eventual complete blockade of the key water passage into the enemy's Inland Sea and the isolation of the important Japanese northern ports and harbors. During this period, the 9th Bombardment Group (VH) flew a total of 209 mining sorties in 8 effective missions. Attacking their targets every other night, averaging flights of 2,900 miles over great expanses of trackless ocean, frequently through extensive areas of adverse and unpredictable weather and in defiance of enemy antiaircraft fire and fighters, the air crews of the B-29s, performing with exemplary courage, precision, and technical skill, 92 percent placed of the 1,425 mines expended precisely in the predetermined strategic location. All mines were dropped from low altitudes averaging 5,500 feet. The concentrated and rapid tempo of the operations is illustrated by a series of three successive missions which were flown by the group. On 18-19 May 1945, 18 aircraft mined successfully the Inland Sea approaches to the Shimonoseki Straits. On 20-21 May 1945, 22 aircraft mined the outer approaches to the Straits, with 4 aircraft remaining the inner approaches. Again, on 22-23 May 1945, the Straits were the target for 30 aircraft, which dropped mines accurately in the briefed area. The Shimonoseki Straits area was the second most heavily defended zone in the Japanese Empire, since it was the main channel of entry for all shipping from China and Korea into the highly strategic Inland Sea, and a virtual life-and-death keypoint in the enemy war economy. The main attack of the 9th Bombardment Group (VH) was against this arterial waterway. Flying through hazardous concentrations of enemy defenses, solving difficult navigational problems, and developing and employing new modern mine laying techniques with uncanny skill, the group dealt grave and crippling blows to the movement of Japanese shipments of food, raw materials, manufactured war supplies, troop elements, and combat equipment, both to and from the enemy home islands through the Shimonoseki Straits. The personnel of the 9th Bombardment Group (VH) were keenly aware of the strategic importance of their assignment and contributed unselfishly to the splendid operational record established during this period. An average of 84.2 flying hours per B-29 aircraft on hand was achieved, and an average of 62.2 flying hours per air crew was logged. The ground personnel performed their duties with extreme devotion, even under the trying conditions existing, displaying exceptional initiative, self-denial, and untiring effort. The 9th Bombardment Group (VH) by its efforts, helped significantly to deny to the enemy the support of his conquered territories and of his possessions, to reduce drastically his productive power, to shatter his transport, and to curtail seriously his productive power and ability to continue the war. The combined accomplishments of the air and ground crews of 9th Bombardment Group (VH), in effecting the complete blockade of Japan, bring great honor to the United States Army Air Forces and to the entire military service.

3. The 19th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy for the period 9 through 19 March 1945. During this first phase of the low-level aerial attacks against Japanese industry, the group distinguished itself by its valor and skill and contributed decisively to the air operations which devastated Japanese war production. When the momentous and revolutionary decision was made to send the B-29s over their targets at unprecedented low altitudes of 5,000 to 10,000 feet, the 19th Bombardment Group (VH) interrupted its shake-down training to take part in the first all-out raids that were to provide the strategic key to the future bombing of Japan. Fully aware of the hazards involved in descending from previous bombing altitudes of 30,000 feet and above to levels which were expected to make the attacking aircraft dangerously vulnerable to concentrated enemy fighter assaults and antiaircraft fire, the air crews of the 19th Bombardment Group (VH) were, nevertheless, determined to do all in their power to give the new strategy a thorough trial. The astounding successes of these first low-altitude missions were due in large part to the implacable will of this group; which carried them relentlessly into the target zones, where they dropped their bomb loads with devastating accuracy. The 19th Bombardment Group (VH) struck five maximum-effort blows during the 10 action-filled days of this period, against the following cities, which represented the heart and sinew of Japanese war power: Tokyo, on 9 March; Nagoya, on 11 March; Osaka, on 12 March; Kobe, on 16 March; and Nagoya again, on 18 March. On these missions, the group unleashed 552 tons of incendiaries, carried in 116 sorties. Maintenance crews distinguished themselves, keeping each assigned aircraft flying for 67.3 hours during the 10-day blitz, with only 6 abortive sorties. These missions included the employment of intrepid group pathfinder aircraft, which went in over the selected targets, alone and ahead of the main striking force, to light up the areas to be bombed. Post-strike reconnaissance for this period revealed that the phenomenal achievement of these bold and epoch-making blows against the primary sources of Japanese military and industrial strength justified the new strategy and the risks hazarded with such valor by the air crews. Photographs demonstrate that the 19th Bombardment Group (VH) performed with superb courage and skill its full share in the destruction of 31.8 square miles of the most vital industrial regions of Japan. The 19th Bombardment Group (VH), in its iron determination to hit the target and in its successes, brings great honor to the United States Army Air Forces and to the entire military service.

4. The 29th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy for the period 19 to 26 June 1945, in the course of which it accomplished the destruction of high-priority industrial and military targets of the Japanese homeland. In 3 attacks involving 84 sorties, the crews of this group fought their way through desperate and persistent fighter opposition and heavy and accurate antiaircraft fire to fulfill, with exceptional valor, their part of a carefully planned series of missions against Japanese industrial areas, aircraft plants, and arsenals. On the night of 19 June 1945, the industrial area of Shizuoka was virtually eliminated as a factor in the Japanese war economy when thirty-one aircraft of the 29th Bombardment Group (VH), laden with 256 tons of incendiaries, made their bomb runs from an altitude of 8,800 feet in the face of heavy antiaircraft fire and also the dangerous threat of terrific thermals caused by the conflagration below, which sent smoke billowing to 20,000 feet. The accuracy of the bombing of this group, despite adverse conditions, contributed tellingly toward the remarkable record of destruction of 100 percent of the industrial center of the city. The 29th Bombardment Group (VH) struck again on 22 June 1945, when 22 aircraft engaged in a daylight precision attack on the Mitsubishi aircraft plant in Tamashima, on Honshu. This mission was part of a successful all-out effort to effect drastic reductions in Japanese aircraft. The group's formations fought through to the bomb run and released 162 tons of high explosive bombs from an altitude of 18,000 feet. In this attack, mounted in conjunction with other groups of the 314th Bombardment Wing, the target was reduced to a mass of wreckage, with destruction estimated at 85 percent. The Tamashima Mitsubishi aircraft plant was written off as a complete ruin, useless to the enemy. On 26 June 1945, 31 aircraft of the 29th Bombardment Group (VH) smashed the Chigusa arsenal at Nagoya, one of Japan's leading producers of weapons and shells. About 30 enemy aircraft delivered a total of 52 attacks upon the formations of the group, but paying with 6 fighters shot down and 1 damaged. Intense, heavy, and accurate flak also met the B-29s, inflicting varying degrees of damage on 18 aircraft, and major damage to 2 others. Despite this opposition, the formations bored in intrepidly upon their objective, releasing 202 tons of high explosives with superior accuracy. Nearly half of the Chigusa arsenal was destroyed in this individually undertaken mission, a remarkable achievement of the courageous effort and skill of this single group. The effectiveness of these attacks, carried through successfully, despite enemy opposition, dangerous thermals, adverse weather, and damaged aircraft, demonstrated the highest devotion and skill on the part of both air and ground crews. Maintenance personnel were taxed to the limit to keep the bombers in readiness for combat in these stepped-up, maximum-effort missions and all men, without exception, responded nobly with long hours of work of the highest quality. The outstanding heroism, skill, and devotion to duty displayed by the officers and enlisted personnel of the 29th Bombardment Group (VH) reflect great credit on themselves, the United States Army Air Forces, and the entire military service.

5. The 39th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 23 to 29 May 1945. With exceptional valor and superb skill, this group participated in three highly successful large-scale missions, which had for their formidable objective the destruction of two major industrial centers of Japan, Tokyo and Yokohama. The group accomplished its assignment with exceptional success, despite some of the most fanatical and effective air opposition ever mounted by the Japanese enemy. The opposition was intensified by the need to fly these strikes at medium altitudes, because of problems posed by incendiary bomb ballistics and by the unpredictable and excessive winds at high altitudes. This tactical necessity subjected the bombing aircraft to continuous attack from the largest concentration of enemy fighters and antiaircraft guns in the Empire. Shortly after midnight on 24 May 1945, 34 aircraft of the 39th Bombardment Group (VH) joined in a massive assault on the manufacturing districts of Tokyo. Forty-eight hours later, on 26 May 1945, an equal number of the group's aircraft participated in a second crushing strike at this powerful center of the enemy's war potential. These two missions devastated 22.1 square miles of the target area in this, the world's third largest city. Vicious fighter attacks, supported by intense and accurate antiaircraft fire, shot down one B-29 on each of these missions, and damaged a total of seventeen more. Again, during the forenoon of 29 May, another large-scale incendiary assault was launched, this time against the industrial and dock areas of Yokohama. The 39th Bombardment Group (VH) despite the losses and the damage sustained in its last two missions, mustered 25 aircraft for the attack. During the approach to the target, and flying at 17,000 feet, the formations were subjected to fierce and accurate antiaircraft fire, and to 37 enemy fighter thrusts. Two of the B-29s went down, and fifteen others were damaged. Despite these losses and continued harassment by the enemy, the group fought intrepidly through to the target, bombed with deadly accuracy, and aided in accomplishing the devastation of 6.9 square miles of the industrial district of the city. The great shipping center of Yokohama was written off the list of priority targets. No other missions were ever flown against it thereafter. The climactic successes of these three missions against two of the major industrial strongholds of Japanese war might was a fitting tribute not only to the coolness and skill of the gallant air crews of the group, but also to the maintenance personnel, who kept the aircraft in the air and sent damaged ships back into service in an incredibly short time. Acutely short-handed, continuously improvising to overcome a shortage of tools, equipment, and replacement parts, the ground crews repaired their wounded aircraft and managed to sustain them at an extraordinary level of mechanical excellence, though sometimes working continuously for 60 hours, pausing only for food and brief rests beside their airplanes. The valor, superior skill, and unremitting devotion to duty exhibited by the members of the 39th Bombardment Group (VH) are in the highest tradition of the military service and reflect great credit on themselves and the United States Army Air Forces.

6. The 504th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 27 July to 14 August 1945. As part of a specially trained and highly skilled force, it was assigned the difficult task of establishing and maintaining an effective blockade, by aerial mining, of the waters surrounding the home islands of Japan and Korea. The fulfillment of this important mission entailed many hours of hazardous flight and some of the longest combat missions ever flown over the vast waters of the Pacific Ocean and the Sea of Japan, through areas of adverse weather, over routes so widely dispersed, and over such great distances of Japanese-controlled territory that the crews were often without benefit of air-sea rescue facilities. The nature of the missions required the aircraft to fly individually and without escort, at night, at the low altitudes of 6,000 to 8,000 feet over formidable enemy anti-aircraft defenses, both en route to and from their targets and in the target areas. It was necessary, moreover, to reduce air speed during the mine run for tactical reasons, thereby increasing vulnerability to enemy attacks. On 27 July 1945, the 504th Bombardment Group (VH) mined the important ports of Maizuru, Sensaki, Niigata, and the key waters of the Shimonoseki Straits. With extraordinary indifference to enemy fighters and to heavy, intense, and accurate anti-aircraft fire, they sowed their mines with deadly accuracy; 96 percent were dropped exactly in the positions briefed. One aircraft was lost to enemy anti-aircraft fire, another went down on its way in to the target. Again, on the nights of 29 July and 1 August 1945, the tenacious and unerring night raiders of the 504th Bombardment Group (VH) struck at the frayed shipping lifelines of the Japanese Empire in two accurate mine laying blows. On 5 August 1945, they reached out daringly over vast distances to mine the areas of Rashin and Geijitsu in Korea, and to drive home devastating blows to shipping in the harbor waters of Tsuruga, Sensaki, Oura, and Hagi in the enemy home islands. The arduous flights to Korea were carried out successfully in the face of both strong ground and air opposition; 95 percent of the mines sown were placed in the designated areas. The prodigious effort to throttle Japan by sealing her off from outside supply continued with additional mine laying operations by the 504th Bombardment Group (VH) on the nights of 7 and 10 August 1945. Then, on 14 August 1945, Nanao, Maizuru, and the Shimonoseki Straits area were mined with such accuracy that the blockade and stranglehold on the Japanese Empire was virtually complete. This last mining mission of the war encountered heavy, intense, and accurate anti-aircraft fire and the crews repulsed successfully the desperate attacks of 42 enemy fighters, many of which were coordinated with the employment of more than 75 searchlights. The ground personnel of the 504th Bombardment Group (VH) ever conscious of the vital character of their assignment, sustained the operation with an inspiring display of untiring effort, oblivious to the difficult conditions under which they were frequently compelled to work, and demonstrating at all times a selfless devotion to duty. The combined efforts and accomplishments of both the air crews and the ground crews, during this period, contributed immeasurably toward the successful smashing of the enemy's will and ability to wage war. The valor and skill of the air crews and the efficiency and devotion to duty displayed by the ground personnel of the 504th Bombardment Group (VH) in accomplishing the assigned mission, bring great honor to the United States Army Air Forces and to the entire military service.

7. The 505th Bombardment Group (VH) is cited for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy during the period 17 June to 1 July 1945. As part of an intensively trained aerial mine laying force, charged with the destruction of Japanese shipborne lines of communications, this group, by its intrepid action in systematic mine planting, denied to enemy shipping the free use of the highly strategic Shimonoseki Straits, virtual lifeline to the enemy's vital Inland Sea area. The accurate placement of these mines demanded the highest skill and determination on the part of both the highly trained air crews and ground crews. To permit the carrying of heavier mine loads, each aircraft was stripped of nearly all defensive fire power. The 505th Bombardment Group (VH) struck at night, unescorted, and in defiance of enemy antiaircraft defenses and fighters, flying at reduced speeds for tactical reasons. The mines were dropped in priority mining target areas, which were 1,500 miles from base, entailing hazardous flights over vast expanses of ocean and often through extensive areas of adverse weather. Such was the precision, skill, and determination of the group that by 1 July 1945, enemy shipping through the vital Shimonoseki lifeline was reduced to a mere trickle of 10 percent of that which normally moved through the straits in the premining period. On the night of 17 June 1945, 20 aircraft (B-29's), flying at altitudes of 6,000 to 8,000 feet, planted mines squarely in Shimonoseki Straits and in its adjoining Moji Anchorage. Despite the narrowness of the target area, the crews of the 505th Bombardment Group (VH) pressed the attack with such accuracy and fixed purpose that 87 percent of the mines fell in the target area substantially as briefed. A dauntless force of 12 mine laying aircraft of the group delivered another paralyzing blow to the enemy shipborne lines of communications on 29 June 1945, this time dropping mines in the Hibiki Sea across the western approaches in Shimonoseki Straits. Flying at 7,000 feet, the 12 crews braved the known dense concentrations of antiaircraft fire of Yawata, Wakamatsu, and Kokurs, and not one aircraft deviated from its briefed mining run. Once again, radarscope photographs revealed that 85 percent of the mines had been planted unerringly in the briefed target area. This attack not only supplemented and intensified the effective blockade of Shimonoseki Straits, but also denied to enemy shipping the use of vital Wakamatsu Harbor and Dokai Bay. In a continuation of this devastating series of aerial mine laying operations, the 505th Bombardment Group (VH) hit again on the night of 1 July 1945, when nine B-29 aircraft placed their mines in the strategic waters at the eastern end of the Shimonoseki Straits. Dropping from 7,000 feet through an undercast, which obscured the target area, 100 percent of the mines were planted substantially as briefed, thus effectively closing the waterway to the already sorely beset enemy shipping. During the period from 17 June to 1 July 1945, the 505th Bombardment Group (VH) flew a total of 138 effective sorties and planted 1,998 mines with such a degree of accuracy as to accomplish its mission in an unprecedented manner. Imbued with a full grasp of the strategic importance of their assignment, ground personnel of the 505th Bombardment Group (VH) performed ceaselessly their important duties, often under difficult conditions, but always with inspiring initiative and energy, unflagging effort, and selfless devotion to duty. The coordinated efforts of air and ground crews rendered Shimonoseki Straits, the keystone target, useless to the enemy and contributed vitally to the overwhelmingly successful blockade of the Japanese Empire.

Captain Marvin A. Tannehill, O208952, Quartermaster Corps, Army of the United States. January to April 1942.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for meritorious services in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Major Howard C. Crawford, O308618, Infantry, Army of the United States. 7 December 1941 to 8 April 1942.

Second Lieutenant Clyde L. White, O890268, Infantry, Army of the United States. 7 February to 8 April 1942.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 9419, 4 February 1944 (sec. II, WD Bul. 3, 1944), a Bronze Star Medal for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against an enemy of the United States during the periods indicated was awarded posthumously by General J. M. Wainwright, United States Army, to the following-named officers:

Captain Charles F. Mueller, O349211, Infantry, Army of the United States, performed valorously in connection with military operations against the enemy on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 7 April 1942. Captain Mueller volunteered to proceed to a point about 2 kilometers north of Lamao for the purpose of relieving and withdrawing to the south a bridge guard detachment of four enlisted men (Philippine Scouts), who were then cut off from contact with American and Filipino troops. Upon reaching a point just south of Lamao, he was, because of Japanese artillery fire then falling on and in the immediate vicinity, forced to abandon his motor transportation and proceed afoot to this detachment. He, together with the enlisted men, withdrew through the artillery barrage. Captain Mueller's valorous action saved the detachment from capture or death.

Captain Robert K. Roberts, O385724, Infantry, Army of the United States, exhibited valorous achievement in connection with military operations against the enemy on Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 7 April 1942. In the action near Trail 8, a platoon of tanks supported the withdrawal of the 45th Infantry (Philippine Scouts). Enemy soldiers concentrated their efforts upon destroying these tanks. Captain Roberts, seeing a group of the enemy attacking a forward tank, came to the tank's assistance by picking off the attackers with his rifle. He killed two of the enemy and, by his accurate and steady fire, forced the remainder to retire.

WAR DEPARTMENT
WASHINGTON 25, D. C., 1 October 1946

MILITARY DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON—War Department Officer Procurement and Integration Bureau established----- I
BATTLE HONORS--Citations of units----- II

I. MILITARY DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON.—1. Effective 1 October 1946, the War Department Officer Procurement and Integration Bureau is established as a class II activity under the jurisdiction of The Adjutant General, in The Pentagon, Washington 25, D. C.

2. The Adjutant General will transfer the necessary personnel, military and civilian, from departmental to field status for duty in this activity.

[AG 020 (1 Oct 46)]

II. BATTLE HONORS.—As authorized by Executive Order 9396 (sec. I, WD Bul. 22, 1943), superseding Executive Order 9075 (sec. III, WD Bul. 11, 1942), the following units are cited by the War Department under the provisions of section IV, WD Circular 333, 1943, in the name of the President of the United States as public evidence of deserved honor and distinction. The citations read as follows:

1. Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 9th Infantry Division Artillery, is cited for conspicuous gallantry and heroism in battle on 21, 22, and 23 February 1943, in repelling an attack by vastly superior forces, which were attempting to break through the Allied lines in the vicinity of Thala, Tunisia. Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 9th Infantry Division Artillery, completed a 100-hour forced march from Tlemcen, Algeria, covering a distance of 735 miles in bitter weather over tortuous and almost impassable mountain roads on the night of 21 February 1943. Without prior reconnaissance or adequate maps, harassed by enemy fire, and forced to maneuver through a congested narrow road, nevertheless, the battery occupied battle positions, set up communications, established observation posts, and was ready to deliver fire by daylight. Although enemy forces were entrenched only 2,500 yards distant and there were only three platoons of friendly infantry in front of the artillery, the unit maintained constant and steady fire with much deadly effect and enemy tank units were dispersed and driven back. The cool and determined manner in which Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 9th Infantry Division Artillery, entered into battle, after an almost incredible forced march, contributed in great measure to the defeat of the enemy's attempt to break through the Thala defile. The gallant entry into battle and the heroism with which the volume of fire was maintained, despite terrific enemy fire, are in keeping with the highest traditions of the American military service.

2. The 752d Tank Battalion is cited for outstanding performance of duty in action, from 22 April to 2 May 1945, in the Po Valley, Italy. Supporting an infantry division in the victorious advance into the Po Valley, the men of this battalion participated aggressively in the assault on strong enemy positions, driving the hostile forces unrelentingly from Bologna to the foothills of the Alps. Displaying great courage and determination, the heroic tankmen utilized the full striking power of their tanks to smash strong points of fanatic enemy resistance, without regard for grave personal danger. On 23 April, in rapid and savage attacks that demoralized large enemy groups and prevented them from reorganizing, the determined tankmen effected the Panaro River crossing, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy, destroying great numbers of vehicles, and capturing over 400 prisoners. Pressing on toward the Po River, this battalion skillfully and effectively shattered the entranced enemy, overcame stubborn resistance, and covered the successful river crossing by the infantry. Continuing the advance, the tanks spearheaded the action into and beyond Verona, cutting up and smashing German defenses with a ferocious display of armored power. In an extremely hazardous and unprecedented advance during the night, the tankmen succeeded in capturing Vincenza, after a savage struggle overcoming road blocks, bazooka, sniper fire, and large caliber guns in house-to-house fighting. Without rest, the gallant men pushed on and blasted the fanatical enemy from town to town and, at the cessation of hostilities, were moving inexorably into the Alps. The fearless and indomitable courage displayed by the men of the 752d Tank Battalion contributed substantially toward effecting the capitulation of the enemy in Italy and is an everlasting credit and inspiration to the armed forces of the United States.
