THE CHIEF OF INFANTRY Major General Robert H. Allen

WAR DEPARTMENT Office of the Chief of Infantry Washington

September 4, 1925.

To the Management, The Infantry School News, Fort Benning, Ga.

Four years ago the Infantry School News made its initial appearance at Fort Benning. One of its important missions, then as today, has been to keep Infantrymen throughout the Army informed of the local and general news of our great Infantry School.

The Infantry School News has accomplished its purposes well, and I am pleased to have been given this opportunity of extending to those who have its management in charge my sincere congratulations on the splendid record that has been made, and best wishes for its future success.

> R. H. ALLEN, Major General, Chief of Infantry.

STILL THE INFANTRY

In the full panoply of modern warairplanes and all the other up-to-theminute devices-the French have met up with the Riff tribesmen only to find themselves not so tremendously better off than these hardly hillmen with their knives and rifles.

The Moroccan lesson is that, while the flying machines and the other modern tricks are handy and useful, it is the MAN WITH THE GUN who still carries the burden of the fighting. Harried as he is by the air bombers, the Riff rifleman forces the French infantry to come up to do the actual work of dislodging him. In the last analysis the defeats of the Riffians have been due less to superior French I better begin on the calf?—Mugwump.

equipment than to superior French discipline and military skill.

What was said long ago that "infan-What was said long ago that "intantry is the quenn of battles," and General Morand's apothegm, "Infantry is the Army," remains as true as ever. For all that the planes and the Big Berthas, teh gas and the flammenwerfers did in the World War, it was infantryman with rifle and bayonet who fought and decided the issue.

Refore dreaming of a time when air.

Before dreaming of a time when airplanes will do all the fighting, it is well to take account of these lessons— S. F. Chronicle.

Sergt. Casey Regimental Mascot Fails To Answer At Roll Call

The verdict of a harsh world today stands refuted in the case of Sergeant Casey, for almost all his life a regular with the Sixteenth Infantry, U. S. Army, and boasting a record of never once having gone A. W. O. L.

But for once Sergeant Casey's familiar figure did fail to greet the Officer of the Day at reveille on the parade ground of Governor's Island. At daybreak yesterday as the bugles blared and the colors were run up his name was entered in the guard book

So today Casey was honored with an armed escort—grimly prescribed alike for the culprit in arrest and for the dead

Casey's record for attendance for long had been the regiment's pride. His fall plunged the Sixteenth in gloom. Yet there was elation thru-out the line of arme, men who marched with dragging steps behind their erst-while comrade.

For that record was still unsullied. Casey, instead of roistering in forbidden places when he should have been in ranks, had been lying quietly in the little tent he occupied alone. The mail orderly, a particularly buddy of Casey's, noticed that he was dead.

Casey ran away from a good home with a traveling circus to join the Sixteenth. Few had been longer with the regiment. His rise to an old-timer's estate in that gallery of old-timers—the non-commissioned staff—is typical of the Sixteenth's great record in five wars. Ordered by an unfeeling War Department to stay back in the States when the regiment sailed for France, Casey, ever the true soldier, uttered no protesting word to his superiors. Nevertheless he was among the first to troop down the gangplank "Over There."

It is a matter of record that Casey never missed a formation or movement of the Sixteenth. He stood every call and parade since he enlisted. He was never seen in the orderly room except on business or known to take a drink more potent than the water provided by a beneficient Government. Battlescarred he was, but they were honorable scars.

Today the entire muster of the Sixteenth turned out to do honor to the memory of Sergeant Casey. From colonel to lowly K. P. or abandoned mule skinner, the regiment with slow, sorrowing steps marched in mournful parade behind the lumbering caisson which bore the flag-encased body.

At the little cemetery on Governor's Island where only especially beloved buddies are laid to rest, the cortege halted.

Over the neat little mound which rapidly took shape as the last notes of Taps died away they placed a simple headpiece on which was carved:

THE SESQUICENTENARY OF ARMY STARVING

Current apprehensions lest the Budget Bureau should cut the army appropriations for next year to the starvation point occur, by interesting coincidence, on the 150th anniversary of the first complaint of the kind, made by no less a person than the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army, against the niggardliness or inefficiency of the Continental Congress.

It was on August 15, 1775, that

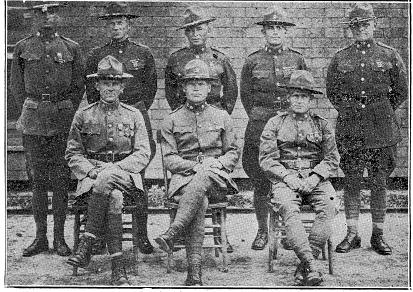

It was on August 15, 1775, that Washington at Cambridge, wrote to Elias Poudinot that he had of ammunition only eight rounds to a man; yet with that meager supply he had fourteen miles of potential battle front to guard. He added that he no longer dared expend a single round of powder in firing a morning or evening gun.

In those depressing circumstances

In those depressing circumstances occurred one of the most curious incidents of the Revolution. A member of the Massachusetts Committee of Safety, despairing of success, turned traitor, deserted to the British lines, sought an interview with General Gage and told him all, advising him that with such lack of ammunition Washington could make no stand against him if he made a resolute sortic against the American lines. But the perfectly true story seemed to Gage so incredible that he refused to believe it or to act upon it, but reckoned it to be a ruse of the enemy and locked the informer up as a spy!

It is surely not to be feared that the present Congress will treat the army as badly as did its Continental predecessor, a century and a half ago; at least not to such an extent as would make us dependent upon a foeman's increduity for our salvation.—New York

THREE YEARS OLD.

Another mile-stone passed along the road of Progress.

Another year slips into the past, its trials and tribulations added to the score of experience.

The infant—the child—the youth, guided by the standard of Service stands stronger, now as the toll of time chalks up another tally.

We are full of hope for the future and what it may have in store for us. We live and breathe the INFANTRY and subscribe to the ideal, "With the Infantry, honorable victory or none." Our standard is set, we strive to keep steadfast to its purpose and worthy of its trust.

We look back but for a moment and see many friends made and a firmer basis of confidence established. With the Infantry School and its changes and improvements we have taken another step forward.

We are grateful for the help that our many friends have given us and hope to show our appreciation by deeds well done.

VIEW POINT.

Let us walk up the sidewalk of life. We stop the first passerby and inquire of him where the other side of the street is. He replies as he points -"Just over there." Patiently we cross the street and make the same inquiry and receive the same answer as before. In desperation we pause and deliberate. Where is the other side?

We must first look thru the eyes of others if we would find our answer. We must realize the viewpoint of the other person. And so it is with every walk of life. any of us fail to get the view point of the other man and go for their reply let us apply the rule of view point. Strive to see the object thru the eyes of others before passing judgment. Couple our judgment thus gained with charity and evalute the result with equity.

The human equasion is an essential you about it."

that must be considered. We should not steel our eyes to the facts that may be seen by others and which are invisible to us.

Before we condemn, stand shoulder to shoulder and look carefully from his viewpoint, we may then see the light that moulded the thought in the other person. Determine from his plane how we ourselves look and allow credit for the facts in the case.

We are prone to use our own judgment as the standard-don't forget how our side of the street looks to the man over there. He is justified from where he stands—take his position into consideration. He has a right to his own opinion.

Find his viewpoint.

September 9, 1925.

Upon the occasion of the publication of the third anniversary number of the Infantry School News, it gives me distinct pleasure to express appreciation of the valuable work done by the News in carrying the message of the Infantry School to the service and in knitting the command here together.

Activities on this post are so many, and so varied in character, that a good weekly journal is essential to the maintenance of the Infantry spirit at top-notch. We do so many things, and find our duties scattered, that the development of our post life and the progress of our labors as a whole need a central medium of expression and of record.

Such a medium and such a journal, the Infantry School News is furnishing with increasing excellence as time goes on. Sound policies and gradual growth have insured your success. To the Infantry School News and its staff, past, present, and future, we all owe a debt of gratitude.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INFAN TRY SCHOO LNEWS:

Student officers of years gone-by have had tender recollections of "Calculator" the dog who was the most faithful soldier of them all. Never did the class form, in any course he happened to be attending, but Calculator was at his post in line. No coach on the firing line in Rifle Marksman No coach ship was ever as steady as he. He could maneuver through the complicated platoon movements of company drill better than many a green right guide with bars on his shoulder. When he died, we regretted his passing because we knew coming classes would lack a splendid friend. Every student officer who ever gave him a "lift" from town or saw him put-down-three-and-carryone into the post office at mail time, has kind remembrances of Calculator. We assembled a fund to erect for him permanent memorial.

monument will be erected to Calculator State Froth.

(The NEWS invites comments from in the vicinity of the new Officers' Club, on the front steps or thereabouts. The new building for the Officers' Club is still in the blue print stage. The "Calculator Fund" awaits use. I have read in an older issue of the NEWS that the old flag pole is no more. A new one has replaced it. more. A new one has replaced it. Yet, it appears, the old concrete base in the center of the road circle still stands where the flag-pole used to be.

Like a good soldier, Calculator should promptly be recognized. I purpose putting his memorial on the old flag base, which will be near the new Officers' Club (when it is built) and every resident of Benning will become acquainted with Calculator's service in the pioneer days at Benning, when we all of us shared together the hardships of the rough road to town and the barren wastes of the dusty plain.

NEW INFANTRY BARRACKS APPROACH FINAL STAGE TOWARD COMPLETION

Central Heating Unit and Barrack Building Refinished As Interior Work Continues

The new Central Barracks and Central heating plan are virtually finished except for the final touches on the exterior and the interior trimmings and floorings. The contractor who is building the new addition to the New Era at Fort Benning has kept a large force of workmen on the job to finish the construction on contract time.

The heating unit, which is to be steam fired by crude oil is installed and being tested. The finishing touched now being applied. All the steam pipes connecting the heating plant with the barracks are encased in heatproof conduits which will minimize the heat loss to the heat thus carried into the big barracks.

The barracks proper are almost finished. The exterior construction is completed being dressed and cleared and pointed. The interior is fast being brought to a state when its completion may be numbered in days. The flooring and moldings, doors and windows all being installed.

The barracks are of the most mod ern in design and construction. All possible labor saving devices have possible labor saving devices have been arranged. It is hoped that the start in the housing of the personnel of Fort Benning will continue now that is had, at last gotten under way. The work done by the splendid person-nel of the Infantry School deserve adequate shelter.

Benning's Finest Have Big Time In Stilwell Park

Gilbert and Sullivan's old comic opera has a song telling what really human persons cops are when they are not on duty. Yesterday afternoon, in the Post Park, beside the brilliantly colored Totem Pole, the Benning M. P. Company had a barbecue and smoker and demonstrated that the cop company member has "a capacity for inncent enjoyment—just as great as any honest man's."

Cases of soft drinks, tons of barbecue, cigarettes, cigars, and other things to please the inner man were on hand. The cook's particularly enjoyed the evening because their duties were made lighter, and they got away from the kitchens. For the general enjoyment there were three snappy boxing bouts put on, four rounds of two minutes each:

Pvt. T. McCafferty Vs. Pvt. D. Pom-erance, both M. P.'s. Won by McCafferty by a knockout.

Pvt. Frazier Vs. Pvt. M. Ardur both M. P.'s. Won by Pvt. Frazier. Arduro,

NEW BROWNING GUN IS PRAISED IN AIR DEFENSE

Claim Machine Gun Is Superior To Existing Anti-Aircraft Artillery

New York—A new model of the Browning 50-caliber machine gun, now being given a thorough tryout in con-nection with anti-aircraft tests, is nection with anti-aircraft tests, is hailed as an important addition to the national air defense.

The new gun, incorporating features which army attaches claim give it marked superiority over existing anti-aircraft artillery, is expected, when placed in actual test against "invading" aircraft at Fort Tilden, to offer a far more effectual defense than the which, in here, were three-inch land batteries which tests recently concluded here, "defeated" by air invaders.

Capable of hurling 550 projectiles a minute, each weighing one-eighth of a pound, the gun is regarded as the plus-ultra development in anti-aircraft gunnery. An important advantage claimed by its developers is the elimination of the time fuse which hitherto, in a trial barrage, had reduced airplane shooting to virtual guess work.

VICTIMS OF PACIFISM.

Just what preparedness for war means is told, in a manner that should impress every American, in the dispatches of James O'Donnell Bennett rom a reserve officers' training camp. The incidents related of the world war proved that unpreparedness brings death to men who fight against mili-Ignorance caused officers to tarism. Ignorance caused officers to fire shells that did not explode be-cause they had no fuses. These shells were fired to enable infantry to advance without heavy loss of life. Many lives were lost because they gave no protection. Unpreparedness in that case was actual aid to militarism, yet those who profess most fervent hatred of militarism insist that we shall not train our men to resist it.

Men take training because they want to be prepared for what may come and do thir part well. Patriotism would impel them to serve in defense of their country and they undergo training in order that they may win, that they may be equipped to defend themselves and that their lives may not be use lessly sacrificed. Those who have experienced war want no more of it; have a horror of it. Yet their desire to be ready in the event that it should come again is misconstrued as betraying love of fighting.

By thus interpreting the motive of young men who go to training camps every summer, pacifists slander the best of our citizens and oppose the formation of a body of men that would shield them from harm if war should come. The worst delusion prevalent is that by opposing preparedness pacifism prevents war and saves life. By fostering the opinion that peace-loving nations like this could not and would not fight, it encouraged the militarist nations to make war. It sent Britain to war with a small armk, ill provided with artillery, and it delayed for years formation of a large army trained and equipped to take the offensive. Dur-ing those two years the allies suffered terrible defeats and lost hosts of men, all victims of pacifism. After the United States intervened fourteen months elapsed before American troops took the offensive, and during that period the allies suffered immense losses of men, victims of pacifism. In the Argonne battle the American army was

INTERESTING POINTS ABOUT FORT BENNING

By Major Verdi

The newcomer to Fort Benning will find may points of exceptional interest in addition to the perhaps incomplete list below which testifies to the greatness present and future of the Infantry School.

Although only in its infancy it is now the greatest Infantry School in the world. It:

Has the Greatest Infantry Reservation in the United States.

Has the greatest aggregation of Infantry Officers in the United States if fantry Officers in the United States if not in the world.

Has the greatest annual aggregation of National Guard Reserve Officers of the army for service school instruction.

Has the greatest narrow guage railcoad mileage used for strictly military ourposes in the United States.

Has the only authorized war strength 2 Battalion) Infantry Regiment in he United States.

Has the biggest concentration of colored troops in the United States.

Has initial units of the finest army hospital quarters in the United States

Has the Infantry Board of the Unit-ed States army, testing and devising new battle equipment for future soldiers.

Has the biggest American Legion membership of any military post to date reported to the local post.

The largest aggregation of highly specialized non-commissioned officers of any United States post.

Its local paper, The Infantry School News, has the largest circulation of any paper sustained by military personnel, which incidentally is the largest paper, in the county in which it is published.

It has the largest French seventy-five type motorized Field Artillery unit for infantry demonstration purposes.

It has the biggest collection of heavy and light tanks available for similar purposes.

So many other statements could be made to evidence the progress being made here not only to advance instructional methods but also to improve general surroundings, that a few points here and there can be conceded to those who may be inclined to say some of the records here visible.

But the list is sufficient to establish the leadership of the Fort Benning post and the Infantry School.

Sunday night ,just after midnight, a couple of packing cases in the miscel-laneous storeroom of the Department of Military Art, filled with tally pads and shellaced pad-holders, smouldering into flame as a result of spontaneous combustion, due to the excessive heat of the past week. Building 72514, just west of the Officers' Club, where the blaze began, started to emit smoke from the eaves, in dense black clouds.

Among the buildings of the academic area, closely packed as they are, and dried out and seasoned by the heat without in summer and the hot stoves within in winter, the fire would have caused a general conflagration very difficult to check. However, Private Avery A. Owens, Battery "A", 83rd F. A., walking post at the time, discovered the traces of danger. He fired his pistol, attracting the attention of Captain Pleas B. Rogers, 24th Infantry, who was passing.

A still alarm to the Fire Department brought the post apparatus to the scene and on the job just as the smouldering boxes burst into flames which were promptly extenguished with little difficulty, thus preventing a general conflagration.

His assignment to the command of infantry was made in or-der to equip him with a wider detailed knowledge of all branches of the service and to groom him for still higher command.

General Eltinge was Deputy Chief of Staff in the A. E. Wearing the Distinguished Service Medal, the French Legion of Honor, the British Commander of the Bath, and many other foreign decorations, General Eltinge laid them all in his trunk and got down to hard work learning the bottom of the doughboy work, as taught by the staff of instructors at The Infantry School. He went out on the machine gun range went out on the machine gun range and watched the typewriters rattle. He saw squads receive their fire directions from their leaders and watched the tracer bullets stretch their lines of phosphorus light across the sunlit fields. He observed the infantryman prime and hurl grenades. He heard the zoom of trench mortar bombs, and the shriek of the one pounders.

The important place Columbus has in Military history is of small account compared to that resulting from the location of the World's Greatest Infantry School, Ft. Benning.

There are other historic and interesting facts connected with Columbus, such as:

When the new republic of Texas needed a president, Columbus promptly furnished him—Mirabeau B. Lamar. Columbus had the distinction of furnishing more soldiers to the Southern Confederacy, in proportion to popula-tion than any other city. It was in Columbus that the beautiful custom of the Southern Memorial Day, a custom that soon spread throughout the South. originated.

Celumbus, in 1867, established the first system of municipal public schools in the South. It adopted manual training while other cities were simply dreaming on the subject. CUTTING RUMOR

We again have the yearly rumor about reducing the Army. In about-five years several people have forgotten a lesson learned a year or two before. The National Defense Act has Announcement has been made that never been fully carried out. Congress since the completion of the 24th Infantry swimming pool early in the down almost every session.

There is a limit beyond which the representatives of the people should never be permitted to go. It is more than an injustice to ask the youth of the nation to flock to the colors in an emergency, and after a few days trainting to be thrown into the blaze of bat-tle without any reasonable chance. We are a peace loving country, but short-sightedness in preparing for de-fense has caused us to pay for our victories with row upon row of little white crosses.

The regular army is a small body, too isolated from civilian thought and contact, bound tightly by official censorship in speech and action, and tosolution is specifical and testing without political significance or power whatever. Therein lies the crux. Just where the danger-line lies the professional soldier knows, but with that the political economist seems very little concerned. Too much whittling away at the bone and sinew will eventually break down the structure. All will be serene until the next storm breaks. Then a thoroughly frightened nation will again spend its billions of dollars, wave its starry banners, and sorrowfully bury its dead, exactly as they have done heretofore.—Gridiron.

THE LEGION FOR DEFENSE

The local commandery of the Military Order of the World War did well the other evening in adopting a definite and emphatic resolution in definite and emphatic resolution in favor of a yearly defense test day by congressional enactment. The subject will be brought before the coming national conventions of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Military Order of the World War and the American Legion; and there is ample reason to expect that action similar to that of the District of Columbia commandery will be taken at all of them.

We do not know of any elements of itizenry whose opinion and recommendation in the matter is entitled to more consideration than theirs. "He jests at scars that never felt a wound." They who have no practical experience of war speak lightly of the need of preparation for defense. A few years ago we heard of the rainbow vision of issuing a call at sunrise and at sunset having a million men marshaled in arms. But the men who have been there know better. They know how long and tedious a process they know four and effective army and they know, too, the awful handicap that is borne by troops that are sent to battle unprepared. The veteran's judgment as to the need of defense test days by far outweights the civil-

It is an odious assumption that veterans of our wars are wanton militarists. As a rule there is no man who hates war and desires to maintain peace quite so earnestly as the former soldier. He has experienced war's horrors as no civilian has ever done. He knows it sagencies its perils. He has himself endured them. ceivable that he is so great a fool as to wish to suffer them again? Is it tolerable or decent to impute to him the monstrous brutality of wishing needlessly to impose them upon his fellows? The history of America is eloquent. We have had a number of soldier presidents, chosen expressly because of their military achievements; but not one of them involved the nation in war. On the contrary, several of them, the greatest soldiers among them, went far out of their way to avoid and to prevent wars in which knees!"—Chicago Phoenix.

there was danger that we should be involved. Every one of our serious wars has occurred under a civilian wars has occurred under a civilian president—for McKinley, though a gallant soldier, was elected as a civilian record—and has been voted by civilians and not by soldiers in Congress.

There is no body of men in the land whose judgment on the question of preparation for national defense is entitled to more respect, or is more rationally and consistently pacific—not pacifist, but pacific—than the American Legion and the other great organizations of veterans.-Wash. Post.

ORIGIN OF ARMY TITLES.

A captain commands and a company and his title is derived from the Latin word for head, "caput." His second in command was his lieu-tenant, the man who held the (tenant) the company in place (lieu) of the superior officer. Next came the sergeant, one who served (servir). Several companies to-gether form a column commanded by a colonel (column). The spelling still exists although the pronounciation was changed long ago. The titles of the other two field officers were taken from the company titles as roots, and the second in command became a sergeant major, or big sergeant. The word sergeant was dropped several hundred years ago and this officer became a major.

The whole Army, many columns, was commanded by a colonel general. Gradually the colonel was dropped and he became a geenral. His second in command was a lieutenant general and again the company sequence was used and the third officer was a major gen-

LOCAL TANK N. C. O. IS HONOR MAN AND NOTED FOOT-BALL AND BASEBALL STAR

Staff Sergeant Ansley Smith, Hdqrs. Co. 15th Tanks holds distinguished cross for valiant action.

Sergeant Ansley Headquarters Company, 15th Tank Battalion, has been playing baseball and football with the Tanks for the past four years. He has come to the front during the latter half of the Inter-mural League and racked up the highest batting average in the league. He hit 487 during the second half of the Inter-mural Baseball League. Smithy, as he is affectionately called by all the members of the Tanks and most of the camp, started his career with his home team at Danville, Alabama about fifteen years ago. "Smithy' is noted for the number and variety of growls he can spring at some of the Umpires' decisions during a game, all of which were made through esprit de corps, loyalty and fight for his organization, and meaning harm to no

He enlisted in the Army in 1913 and was assigned to the 16th Infantry stationed in Texas. It wasn't long before the scouts, always on the alert and looking for the good ones, spotted "Smith," whereupon he became one of the Regimental nine. He stopped the old apple back of the plate on this team for four years or until the hike into Mexico. Soon after returning from Mexico his organization went overseas. He went through the whole show with Company "C" of the 16th Infantry, a part of the 1st Division. He gathered more laurels in France. Twice wounded and awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, by General Orders No. 15, War Department, 1919, for bravery in action. Once when wounded it was necessary to give him a direct order to report to the hospital before he would leave the front lines.

Soon after his return from over-seas he was discharged and re-enlisted with Heardquarters Company, 15th Tank Battalion and has remained with that organization.

Lessons Gained In 1917 Put To Good Use By War Department

The War Department has distributed to the various corps area and branch commanders copies of a proposed Mobilization Plan which will be used in case of sunnen national emergency.

The order calls for the working out of tables utilizing the reserve officers in their district to bring up the present regular army organizations up to a full war strength.

A limited number of regular officers also will be assigned to the inactive units, together wit hnon-commissioned officers, to fill the necessary key posi-will be similarly provided for.

The move contemplates that the three active infantry divisions maintained would be immed immediately available to move out, needing only the recruits to fill the units to full war strength. As volunteers with previous military experiences can be relied upon to fil lup these commands, the policy contemplates that these three divisions will always be available for actual front line duty when needed, the remaining six regular divisions to follow them up as soon as possible with mobilization of the national guard and organized reserve divisions to proceed in order thereafter.

In the World War, when the regular army began its mobilization, the policy followed practicaly amounted to breaking up each existing regiment and three consistent battalions and then recruiting each battalion up to regimental strength. The result was regimental strength. The result was that virtually no unit of the regulars was immediately available for service.

McNULTY SAYS HIPPOLOGY HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH THE VOLSTEAD ACT

The sun had set behind the Alabama Hills when I found McNulty sitting o nan old prune box outside the Mess Hall. The cook had scraped out the last pan and turned it over to the K. P.'s and the old Mess Sergeant was "at ease" for the moment.

"Mac," says I, sitting down on the doorstep. "What do you know about the Infantry School, what do they teach anyway."

"Well," says he, "If you'll listen to the students the main subject seems to be what General Sherman did about war."

"Yes, I have been on maneuvers myself," says I, "But what do you know about the curriculm."

"What's that!" says Mac, almost falling off the prune box, "Have they started building something else." that!" says Mac, almost started building something else."

"No Mac," says I reassuringly," not until the new theatre is finished, I hope; but what I wanted to know is what subjects do they teach. For instance is there any dispute here between fundamentalism and evolution."
"None whatever," says he, "It has been by everyful, that been proven here by careful study that both theories are correct according to the Bible."

"Why how do they figure that," says I.

"Well," says Mac, "Doesn't the Bible plainly relate how Eve made a monkey out of Adam, and doesn't that prove that both sides are right in their argument.

But the great thing that the School teaches is Camoflage," says Mac. "The Instructors spend their nights and their light allowance in hunting through the dictionary for words of many syllables under which to hide the every day doin's of a soldier. And the students worry themselves gray headed over some such word as logistic and finally when they find that it isn't in their Algebra or Trigonometry some little bird with glasses comes along and tells them to read their Stable Sergeant's Manual and their Mess Sergeant's Manual and the life of Napoleon and think thew hole thing over and they'll have the answer.'

They used to have a course here called Transportation and there were three solutions to it; one was the Howard solution; another was the Ford Formula, but the most popular of all was a commutation ticket over the called Transportation and there Central of Georgia."

"Then a very interesting study which will be continued for many more years here, especially among the Company Commanders will be Shelter. Professor Mc Carl of Washington has a Theory of Relatives that has a direct bearing on this study but his decisions are more or less empirical and may prove wrong some day."

"Now equitation, while it will never be popular in the Refresher Courses might be made more agreeable if this

"Hippology contrary to a popular impression among some of the younger students has 10thing to do with a common form of evasion f tone Volstead Act."

"But these Monographs, Mac," says

I, 'What are they?"
"Well," says he, "the theory is this.
A student is given the choice of a battle to write about. He gets a bunch of reference books and maps and sits down to write. And the result is supposed to be the story of some famous battle profusely illustrated by one map; but what actually happens is something like this: After he has finished his long account of the battle, he turns it over to a stenographer along with the reference books and she begins to type it."

"Pretty soon she finds she needs a dictionary. In a little while she also discovers she needs a Grammar and when she is about half way down the first sheet she comes to the conclusion that if she is going to translate the hieroglyphics she will need the Rosetta Stone from the British Museum. The British Museum not being a circulating library, she does the only thing possi-ble. She throws the longhand notes away and writes the story of the bat-tle herself."

"But Mac," says I, "How can she write the story of a battle without any experience?"

Experience is it!" says he. "Well now let me tell you young man the average stenographer at the Infantry average stenographer at the Infantry Instructors are interested in at that School or elsewhere has been through time of the year is a Road Map."

faced more more engagements and powder than any student in the school not excepting the Refresher Class. And what is more," says he. "She generwhat is more," says he. "She generally knows more about Tactics and overcoming obstacles than the best of them and I have no doubt could outgeneral the Chief of Section himself on a Tactical Walk, more especially if he happened to be single."

"What about the map?" said I, thinking he had forgotten it.

"Don't be foolish," says he, "the only map that either the student or the Instructors are interested in at that

RED DIAMOND ENGINEERS TURN PAGE OF THEIR HISTORY

The first engineer organization at 10, 1920. Its purpose was to act as a demonstration unit for the Infantry School (and to act as a training unit for the engineer non-commissioned officers. The latter project has since been aropped and indeed almost forgotten. It is questionable whether the idea was really entertained seriously at all.) This company under the command of Captain Roy M. McCutchen, gave demonstrations of river crossings, and field fortifications. It furnished as well a large number of special duty men for numerous other activities of the station.

At that time the spring of 1921, there was urgent need for a new highway bridge over Upatoi Creek. The old highway bridge was regularly submerged by floods and occasionally carried away as well, and the Post suffered greatly from the consequent disfered greatly from the consequent disruption of traffic, Captain McCutchen C. of E. the Post Engineer, drew up plans for a new bridge which was to be flood proof. Standard A. E. F. truss sections were secured from Fort Humphreys, and Company E, Seventh Engineers was sent from Camp Jack-son to superintend the work. With the assistance of details from the In-fantry and other organizations on the Post piles were sunk, the superstructure erected, and the bridge built in the remarkably short time of 3 months.

The reduction of the Army at this time caused the combining of D and E companies of the Seventh under the new designation of Company A. The remainder of the regiment was placed on the inactive list, with Company A, for its active associate.

The demonstration work began by Company D, has been continued for each succeeding class. All types of bridges have been shown together with various stream crossing expedients. Likewise in the Field Fortification demonstration trenches of various pro-files are on display, together with all sorts of trench auxiliaries. Bangalo tarpedoes and their effects are also shown, and a fifty foot belt of barbed wire is erected. Since the departure of Captain Mc-Cutcheon the commanding officer of the Seventh Engineers has also assum-ed the duties of Engineer Officer and Engineer Property Officer, of the Infantry School. Under the former designation he has been in charge of the construction of the McAndrew Range, and until last winter of the maintenand until last winter of the maintenance of the roads o fthe reservation. The actual work on these jobs has usually been performed by details from other organizations. Under the latter title the commanding officer has maintenance denot of Figure 2 depot of Figure tained at Fort Benning, a depot of Engineer material and material, both for the supply of the school and of the company. An idea of the magnitude of its operation may be gained from the fact that during the fiscal tude of its operation may be gained the fact that during the fiscal year 1924-1925, there passed through it engineer supplies and equipment of equipment. State Lawmakers Want National De-fense Act Carried Out As Contemplated

The rock-ribbed state of New Hempshire comes to the fore with a resolu-tion passed by the state governing bodies putting themselves on record to stand for the National Defense Act and its provisions. The Green Mountain Boys of Revolutionary days fought for their homes and country and their present day descendants still Fort Benning was Company D, of the Seventh Engineers which arrived April their veins. It is hoped that other states may follow the suit of this grand state.

> In addition to its demonstration work the company as a unit has performed numerous other functions notable among these were logging in the late spring of 1924, and again in the winter of 1924-1925.

On the latter occasion the lumber was obtained for the ties for a narrow gauge railroad to the gravel deposits on Upatoi Creek. This railroad was also built by the company during the period from March to September of the present year. Though only a little over two miles long this work enterior. tailed a great amount of labor. The country is very ill adapted to railroad construction, being very hilly and broken up by an almost endless series of gulleys; and there was consequently necessary what for a narrow gauge line seems a disproportionate amount of earth work. To add to the difficulties hard pan cropped up in almost every cut, and had to be blasted.

Hand in hand with the construction of the railroad was the installation of the gravel pumping apparatus at the end of the spur. This including the end of the spur. This including the construction of the electric power line, and the building of a dam for the water supply of the pumping station has all been done by details from the Twenty-ninth Infantry, working under the direction of 2nd Lieutenant P. A.

A recent acquisition of the Seventh Engineers is a Mobile Map Reproduction Train, such as is ordinarily part of the Engineer Topographical Battalion of an Army. This unit is mounted on Mack Trucks, is fitted to all kind of lithographic map reproduction in one or more colors. It consists of four departments Photographic, Process, Transfer and Press. During the past year although the Plant was in operation less than four month over 70,000 maps and charts were printed and furnished to various activities in the garrison. This year after the completion on numerous improvements which are now in progress a lot more is expected.
The Seventh Engineers were well represented at the Chattahoochee Valley Fair of 1924, their exhibit including the Map Reproduction Train, a section of the Heavy Ponton equipment, and a miniature of various types of military bridges. The models were later taken to the State Fair at Macon. A detachment from the company accompanied both exhibits. In the Defense

DON'T LET THE PESTS GROW.

Since the heavy rain of the 9th of August, and the intermittent rains which have followed, the mosquito pest has been bothering the post and the NEWS felt some relief might be secured from itching and scratching if all Benning residents realized what each one of them could do to reduce the annoyance. Accordingly the situation was gone over in detail by a representative of the NEWS and the responsible of ficials, the conference bringing out the following facts.

The woods and swamps near the post are being better covered than ever before. Oiling and draining is getting better and more and more effective. Mosquitoes rarely travel far. The principal sources of the post mosquitoes are near the residences, and are what are tecnnically known as "man-made" breeding places. If the people being bothered by the pests, realize that they themselves canput a stop to the trouble, the trouble will disappear, for all persons will look to their own comfort. Hidden in the dense vines of one house, was found a coal scuttle, three-quarters full of water and the water 100 per cent full of wigglers. Under the broad leaves of another vine was an empty pickle jar. One quarters occupant who complained of mosquitoes had a lawn and a dog. He watered his lawn, and his sleeping dog made a hollow in the ground. The water ran into the hollow, and mosquitoes began to grow. Even on the inside of quarters, breeding pools have been found, a mere spoonful of water in an empty building, nicely cleaned before the man moved out. Vases holding cut flowers, where the water was notfrequently freshened, have been discovered to furnish homes for the wigglers and to produce mosquitoes right inside the screens.

If the youngsters cannot grow, we will have saved ourselves a lot of swatting and slapping, if not scratching and itching. But not all. Here mosquitoes live from three to six or eight weeks. We might stop all increase in the post family and still have the grown-ups with us for two months or more. We like to plant thick vines close about the houses; but at the same time we are providing shade for ourselves we are providing shade for the adult mosquitoes, who don't like the sun any more than do the members of the porch brigade. If the vines were a little less thick, and a little farther from the houses, the mosquitoes would not like to sleep through the day among their broad leaves, and the empty bottles and cans could not hide from sight. No one throws cans and bottles about. But they get there just the same, and we ought to be able to find them. It is no disgrace for a water-holder to be on the front grounds; but it is a sign of carelessness to let it stay there.

These matters are of continual concern at this post, because mosquitoes breed the year around in this climate. The rainy fall season is soon to be upon us, a season particularly appropriate to the increase of the mosquito population. If the principal sources of our present pests are man-made, they can be manunmade whenever the occupant of any quarters decides he doesn't want mosquitoes on hi sfront steps to do evening parades on his ankles, wrists, and neck.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE HOLDS FORT SPORT FANS ATTENTION

FOOTBALL CANDIDATES
BEGIN THEIR PRACTICE
AS SEASON'S START NEARS

Strenuous Measures Applied to Condition Blue Contenders For Coming Ordeals.

Football practice for the Infantry School team and defenders of the President's Cup, has entered its second week. Hot weather to the contrary notwithstanding, light track suits have been discarded for regular gridiron togs, with shoulder guards, and headgear for the candidates are settling down to real work.

Now that the baseball title series is a thing of the past, progress will be more rapid and the squad fuller. The Infantry School Detachment, which locked horns with the 24th Reds for the baseball honors, contained many men ordered to this post for the specimen ordered to this post for the specific purpose of strengthening the Big Blue Tide. Wold Chief Ryan, slippery "weenie" Wurst, tall Bill Jackson, sent here from Snelling, Eustis, and the North, have laid aside the willow and mit for the pigskin. Also to be reckoned with is Sergeant Stanovitch who worried the Infantry so much last October when he plunged so much last October when he plunged into plays for the Third Corps eleven. The incoming students give promise of much exceptional material; but it is the enlisted, President's Cup team, thta counts the most—and that should perform as well behind "Blue Streak". Smythe as can those with bars on their shoulders.

There are few gaps to be filled. There is a wealth of clay for the coaches to select in stopping the holes made by departures. The training schedule steps off in full vigor, somewhat according to the following lay-

8:00-8:10—Supplying exercises.

8:10-9:00—Group work in playing positions.

3:15-3:25—Physical training.

3:25-3:40—Group work on playing positions.

3:40-4:05—Covering kicks and forward pass defense.

4:05-4:15—Verbal instructions by coaches.

COACH McEWAN CALLS FOOTBALL PRACTICE AT MILITARY ACADEMY

Captain McEwan, head coach of the Army football team, called the first football practice September 1st. This leaves very little time, of course, for actual football practice ,averaging during the month of September about

The attention of the coaches this year will be directed, particularly, towards trying to win the other important games—Yale, Notre other important games—Yale, Notre Dame and Columbia. This, of course, as everyone can realize, will be rather a difficult undertaking, and was noted by Captain McEwan, specially, when he stated at the Rally, "The dearth of material in the new Plebe class is the greatest since 1913. This, in connection with the small amount of time available, the fact that it is necessary one and a half hours per day. LITTLE WORLD SERIES DRAWS RECORD CROWDS AS 24TH REDS WIN

I. S. D. Loses Chance in Final Game Of Post Series.

Staging a strong come-back after their mid-season slump, the baseball players of the Infantry School Detachment almost wrested the Post title from the 24th Infantry Reds, sending the deciding series to the full five games.

The Reds took the first two games, thus adding to their eleven game unbroken winning streak in the second half of the regular schedule. But the Green Hats took their measure in the third and fourth contests, only, however, to go down to defeat before Trammel in the final contest.

In the first game, hard hitting by the Reds and costly errors, sent the victory to the west end of camp by a decisive score, checking in on the scoreboard in almost every frame. The score: Reds411 110 021—11 12 2 I. S. D.000 030 010— 4 10 4 Batteries: Trammel and Dawson; Wurst, Tolle and McCarty.

In the fourth game, the Reds wavered badly in spite of hefty hitting by the dark sluggers. The veteran Duff had filled a hole neatly the previous day, pitching with the canny experience of an old-timer. Thornell in the fourth game had the Reds eating out of the hollow of his hand. Some that it looked like fielding practice.

With the score of games tied at two-all, the final contest gave promise of being a keen one. Young Thornell returned to the box for his second game in two days, the third of the series. The towering Trammel pitched in his fourth game in five days. Both lasted the contest. There was good hitting on both sides—including a long one by F. Williams of the Reds, and a fence surmounter from the bat of Thornell himself in the ninth. Yet the game was entirely won on mis-plays. In the third, McCarty—who had been catching right along with three shattered fingers—was beaned by a fast one out of the box. When Waller came in from left to take his place, left became the weak spot, instead of a strong one.

LOCAL GOLFERS SHINE IN 4TH CORPS AREA TRY-OUT TOURNAMENT

Capt. Allison Barnett and Lieut. Harris Prove Ability in Atlanta.

Last week-end, Lieut. Col. Augustus B. Warfield, Q. M. C., took a group of Benning golfers to the Druid Hills course, near Atlanta, to engage in the tryouts which would determine the personnel of the Fourth Corps Area team at the Army Championships at Fort Leavenworth. Against the best military drivers and putters of the entire area, two Infantry School players snared the only two places on the Fourth Corps team. Captain A. J. Barnett of the Department of Experiment and Lieutenant F. Harris, 29th Infantry, headed the list, and secure the honor of playing on the Kansas course. This success of the golfers from the junction of the Upatoi and the Chattahoochee, coupled with the presence here in the post of Col-onel J. J. Lindsey, President of the Army Golf Association, is considered by local officers as a first sign of progress towards creating an Army progress towards creating an Army golf leadership for the Infantry School

INVADE BLUE COACHING PROGRAM AT THE FORT

Many Spectators Witness Changes in Coaching Style as Candidates Go Through Antics.

With new candidates appearing on the field almost daily, the Infantry School football squad continues increasing as the work goes on. The twice-a-day system of practice, interrupted in the late mornings when the sun gets hot, with blackboard diagrams and lectures on basic theary, is showing tangible results. The linemen are picking up the new principles of defense and offense, and are charging with more snap. The backfield rangers snap through the shifts with a "hip-hip-and-hip" in almost mid-season form.

An innovation in teaching the various systems used for the different plays, which has proved very successful, is the adaptation of the Army "ca dence" system used in close order drill of troops. In this drill, the troops themselves give the commands, count out loud, and shout in unison, so that each man gets the timing into his system, using ears as well as eyes, mouth as well as muscles, to speed up the general co-ordination of action. This general co-ordination of action. This drill has been tried on the offensive plays, and the effect has been immediate, thus again demonstrating that many of the tricks old in the profession of arms, devised by persons skilled in training men, may be well applied in other fields.

Substantial galleries are gathering to watch the practices, comprised of both persons from the post an doccasional visitors from town. When signal drill is on tab, the audience is requested to withdraw a resonable distance; but in general the presence of spectators is encouraged—and they are turning out in goodly numbers.

The new candidates recently reported for duty are: Captain S. O. Neff, 24th Inf., Ryan, I. S. D.; Giles, I. S. D.; Geo. McKelvy, Tanks; E. J. Thomas, 29th Inf.; Geo. Franz, 29th Inf.; Geo. Buck, I. S. D.; Sharp, I. S. D.; Ricker, 29th Inf.; L. D. McMillan, 83rd F. A.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE FOR JUNIORS BEGINS

Youngsters Turn Out For Early Prac-tice Like Their Older Brothers Not to be outdone by their older

Not to be outdone by their older team-mates, the youngsters of the garrison are out for football practice daily. Dressed in every discribable kind of football gear the warriors fun through their practice like veterans. The line and back field are being coached by experts of boydom who live on the reservation. The spectators are on the reservation. The spectators are family dogs who just can't understand whether to take part in the scrimmage or not; but they bark just the same and voice their enthusiasm.

The schedule of the junior team has not been announced but we look forward with interest to any announcement from them.

The team may not have the regulation number of players, maybe more or less depending on whether the anxious mothers will consent but nevertheless the game goes on with all the speed and pep of the game played on the big grid iron

With lagging footsteps the children of Fort Benning will answer the clanging of the school bell on October 1st, the opening day for registration of the Post Schools. It is learned from Chaplain Lennan that the same faculty will be present this fall term as was here during the Spring with the exception of Miss Abbott, who has gone to far-away China as a Missionary. Her place will be filed by Miss Barnes who many will remember taught here two vears ago.

Miss Mizell will teach the Second and Fourth grades.
The Kindergarten class is problematical as the establishment of such a course depends upon the registration of children of the kindergarten age. If the numbers warrant the course will be instituted. It is urged that parents bring their young ones so that the proper arrangements may be made.

"Many of us can remember the time when we complained that the army was isolated and narrow and afforded little opportunity for outside contact. The situation in this respect is entirely changed and a large part of our army now finds itself isolated from the army and domiciled for years at a time in civil communities."

General Wells' remarks straight from the shoulder and contained much fruitful advice. Primartained much fruitful advice. Frimarily they were intended to orient the officers as to the various situations which confront them, in their new work at the Infantry School.

"I have said that we attempt to make the course of instruction as practical as possible. Some things definitely prescribed by War Dept. orders and Training Regulations. In such matters we follow the prescribed methods. The right way in such instances is clear. Other things may be matters of opinion. With respect to these, it should be remembered that the school has passed through some years of experience and that the faculty has studied available practice and has not adopted methods without reason and without heed of the skill and experiences of authoritative leaders.

SEPTEMBER, 18, 1925.

OUR CONSTITUTION

Our Constitution, September 17, 1925.

What is the Constitution? It is the rule of life and the cure of all ills of American life.

Where did it come from?

The Magna Charta, the English Bill Rights, the Mayflower Compact the Declaration of Independence, and the Articles of Confederation. These are the documents that furnished inspiration for the writers of the time tried Constitution.

The Magna Charta (1215) contained the inspiration of a people who desired freedom and a proper government. It contained rules for taxation, the trial by jury, habeas corpus, and the back bone to the struggling Colonists.

The English Bill of Rights (1689) furnished the freedom of speech, that the right of petition could not be denied, that laws could not be set aside failed completely. Chaos ruled. Those governing body, the frequent meeting ton and tried to call a general assemof Parliament to consider laws for public good and that excessive taxation or bail could not be imposed.

In America, the documents that helped mould were the Mayflower (1620), the Articles of Confederation, and the Declaration of Independence.

The Mayflower Compact although it did not provide a form of government acted to strengthen the feeling of the people and pledged the signers to the observation of laws of the government. Upon this Compact may be placed the start of the first signs of self government in our history.

With the Declaration of Independence we have the beginning of the American nation. It forms the cornerstone and the foundation of the present United States. It is an immortal docuthe colonies with a central thought of independence and freedom. It carried with it the seeds of democracy, the spirit of equality and that governments are instituted among men who derive and abulwark against which theory and a bulwark against which theory and idealism dash themselves hoplessly are instituted among men who derive are instituted among men their just powers from the consent of the governed. It advanced the principles of true democracy that for good reason the people may abolish an old form of government and institute a new and better form.

The Articles of Confederation formed the necessary link between the Declaration of Independence and the present Constitution. The end of the Revolutionary War found in this country thirteen indepent nations with territory extending along the Atlantic ocean from New Hampshire to Georgia. These little domains were all inspired with the love of freedom and independence. They were intensely proud and jealous of the rights and privileges of the status thus given them. The leading figures of the new local self government. It furnished domains strove to secure a form of government that would fit the situation and not deprive the states of the newly gained privileges. The Articles of Confederation failed to satisfy the need of national government and it or repealed with out consent of the inspired called upon General Washingbly of delegates from the various colonies to meet at Annapolis to take steps toward an objective that would bear fruit in the form of a stable policy of government. Insufficient attendance at the meeting caused the body to issue a call for the states to send representatives to meet together in Philadelphia on the second Monday in May, 1787. The proposed convention was approved by the existing Congress and the Articles were to be revamped and revised. In September of the same year the masterpiece of government was finished. It was signed and submitted to the people thru the Congress assembled. Since its acceptance it has stood the weathering of time and the trials of civil war and national strife. Today it stands as ment for it marks the amalgamation of the cure-all for governmental ills. It stands with but nineteen amendments in an endeavor to destroy it and set up a pet hobby for personal gain. It is the LAW-it is the true Americanism.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS PLAN BIG ENCAMPMENT AT ST. PETERSBURG

Local Representatives To Attend Gathering

The William Schley Comp of the United War Veterans are busy making train and hotel reservations for the FURNISHED—No. 1304 18th St. Five ten members that are to represent the local camp at the National Encampment to be held in St. Petersburg, Florida, September 27 to Oct. 1st.

It is expected that thousands will attend the convention. Arrangements have been made by the St. Petersburg Camp to entertain the visitors with Arrangements many novel sightseeing trips and other special features.

Plans are underway to allow the visiting Veterans to visit Cuba upon the completion of the convention. The party is to be sponsored by Cuban business interests it is learned.

The Columbus party will leave the city on the 25ht of September on the Veterans Special which will arrive in Jacksonville on the 26th where they will be the guests of the city for the day. They will leave that night for the convention city.

The Georgia Department of the Veterans went on record July 3-4th at their state convention to introduce resolutions to the National Convention to the effect that they were in favor of a twenty-five year retirement for the enlisted men of the Army. The other and important resolution which is to be introduced is for an increased army personnel to meet the training requirements of the National Defense Act as passed by congress in that year. The Spanish War Veterans are in favor of adequate appropriations to support the commissary sales so that the system be placed on a basis to permit sales to the enlisted men of the army of the commodities necessary for them to combat the ever increasing high cost of living. A separate pension bill is also in their list of objectives.

It is understood that 25 per cent. of the local Camp members are also members of the American Legion. The New Department Commander of the Legion is a Spanish War Veteran so that the liaison carries on to the National Officers of both organizations.

The Narrow Gauge railroad spur which is being constructed by the company operated its first train over the trestle at Hemmel Creek on Monday September 15, 1925. This was one of the many problems met, however with the trestle completed there is yet a switch to be built at the gravel shute, this will be completed within the next few days.

The Engineer Map Reproduction plant is having trouble with the zinc plates. These plates have been in stock probably since 1918, due to age and various other agencies they have been unserviceable for the work required of them. A new shipment has been requested from the Chief of the Engineers Office.

The following named enlisted men have joined the company this week: Private Jack W. Hoffman, who is a graduate of the New York and Georgetown Universities, specializinz in law and accountancy. Hoffman should be a very valuable man for the company. Private Voorhies Richardson, a previous service man recently discharged from the Seventh Cavalry at Fort Bliss, Texas, as a sergeant. The Company while not as large as some of the other organizations in Fort Benning, feel that all the previous service men who join us and show themselves to be real soldiers will be amply taken care of.

First Sergeant Henry L. Gensch who has been confined in the station hospital for the past few days is rapidly improving and expects to be out in the next few days.

Blue Tide Shaping Up as North Georgia Aggies Game Looms

Berry, Mack and Wilbur Turn Out To Join Blue Tide Squad

With only a week to go before the opening game of the football season, the contest with the North Georgia Aggies from Dahlonega on September 26th, the host of football candidates are hard at it, progressing now to light and heavy scrimmages, which are producing the usual number of minor early season injuries.

A veritable host of players are tearing up the dust on the field daily.

Practice starts at 8:00 a. m. and con-Practice starts at 8:00 a. m. and continues for an hour and a half. Then, when the Georgia sun begins to get hot, the souad goes to the showers, and afterwards goes through an hour of skull practice, learning the plays and developing theory. In the afternoons at three, they are all out on the turf again, and stay at work until four-thirty.

Cadence and timing of team action is coming along very finely. The caches growl, of course. But that is what coaches are for: to find faults and to correct them. Yet the gallery and to correct them. Yet the gallery of spectators have seen a mass of material welded into seven elevens remarkably similar in performance and ability. The new candidates are good, so good that the "big" men of last year's team seem lost in the multitude of big men. Four of the old President's Cup backfield, Smythe, Buck, Swantic, and Daniel cavorted behind the line of one of the elevens. But they were not very conspicuous, bethey were not very conspicuous, because the other sets of backs look just as good.

The same may be said of the line. There seems a multipicity of tackles, guards, and ends. No man's position is secure. The gridiron will be No Man's Land. A place there will have to be won by hard fighting, keen intelligence, speed of action, and smooth team-work.

Combinations are improving. In actual scrimmaging, the men begin to see and to feel the importance of the individual assignments they learned last week in skull practice and signal drill. If they fail to play their parts, the man gets through: the "hole" is apparent. Then the coaches get their chances to growl—which coaches like

The first session of the 1925-26 Company Officer's Course was held Tuesday at the Officer's Club Hop Room at 10:30 A. M., when they were welcomed by The Commandant, Mayor Dimon of Columbus and Colonel Cocheu, The Asst. Commandant.

In their addresses of welcome the speakers outlined the course at The Infantry School, its purpose and aims. Mayor Dimon welcomed the students to the City of Columbus and hoped that they would enter into the various Clinic activities and that they would Civic activities and that they would feel that the two communities joined in the desire to make their stay here a pleasant one.

at the Infantry School, as a member of the Company Officer's Class 1925-26. This native officer from Mindanao in the far away Philippines has recently received two exceptional commenda-tions from his superiors for conspicuous heroism and military ability in action against native Moros.

On March 5th, Major Paulino Santos, Adjutant of the Philippine Constabulary, wrote him concerning his splendid conduct in an encounter against the outlaw Pagumpatan and his marauding band. The action resulted in the death of Pagumpatan and six of the outlaws and in the capture of their native stronghold. The letter transmitted the official congratulations of the Chief of the Constabulary, saying:

"He commends the coolness and courage displayed by both officers and men fighting against vastly superior numbers."

As recently as July 1st, Lieut. Dio-quino was again commended by his Chief through Colonel C. E. Nathost, Chief of Staff, as follows: "You are congratulated by the Chief of Constabulary for exceptional bravery and courage in leading your men over the cotta wall at the recent engagement with Sultan Sa Raya and in being the first man to win through the main dug out of the cotta. Several of the Philippine Scout Officers present commended highly your formation and control of your company and it is unnecessary to say that the Chief feels very proud of it. You are congratulated on your fine work."

This conspicuous display of courage and military ability won for Lieut. Dioquino the honor of being detailed as a student officer at Fort Benning. Major Gen. Frank McIntyre, Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs who has general supervision over matters per-taining to the Philippines recognized this splendid performance of duty and ordered the Lieutenant here.

COLONEL W. C. JOHNSON UNABLE TO ACCEPT FOREIGN DECORATION

(Continue | from Page 1) Philippine Constabulary, has arrived and also Athletic Officer of The Infantry School, has been notified by The Adjutant General of the Army, that the United Kingdom of the Serbs Groats and Slovenes have conferred upon him for conspicuous service the Serbian Order of The White Eagle, and that unless a special act of Congress is passed he will not be able to accept or wear the decoration. How-ever, it will be kept in the archives pending such a time as it may be bestowed.

> During the World War, ional permission was granted officers of The United States Army to receive and wear decorations from foreign governments who were associated with The United States in that conflict. This permission expired one year after the end of the war. Since that time it is necessary for an officer of the army to have a bill introduced into the Congress and passed allowing him to re-ceive gifts of gratitude or decorations from foreign Princes, Crown Heads or States. It was not learned just what States. action Colonel Johnson intends to take in the matter of the present Serbian Decoration.

Colonel Johnson is known as one of the most decorated officers of the Army, having made a brilliant record over seas during hostilities where he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, and after the armistice in his part in the management of the Inter-Allied Games. Graduate of the School of the Line, of the General Staff School, of the Army War College, and of the University of Vermont, he has been active in his profession since he was first commissioned in the Infantry in 1899 and since he first entered the Spanish War in May, 1898, in Company "A" of the First Vermont Volunteers teers. He came to Fort Benning and the Infantry School fresh from a de-tail on the War Department General tail on the War Department General Staff in Washington, where he was in charge of all policies regarding Army athletics at large, and also was well known locally as president of the Washington Amateur Baseball Team. He was one of the leading members of the Dumbarton Tennis Club in the Army of the Dumbarton Tennis Club in Washington, and played on the Army Tennis Team which defeated the Navy in Washington in June, for the championship of the two services.

REASON

The kite flown on the end of a string soars upwards as the string is let out. It meets the opposing winds and flies higher. If the string breaks, the kite shudders and sinks to the ground, helpless. Yet the string alone did not keep the kite up. It prevented the kite from getting beyond control.

The kite flies just as long as it is held to the earth by something. The ground and permits easy control. Just the kite falls. The graceful flyer cannot soar alone.

And so it is with us.

Reason is our kite string. It keeps us in the air. It connects us with the ground and permits easy cotnrol. Just so long as reason guides us to do our job well, with our contact with the ground present, we will succeed. Let us but soar upward, like the kite, and disconnect ourselves from reason-then we fail, sinking to the depths and our efforts have been for naught.

If we strive upward with reason and the opposition is stiff, like the wind against the kite, we will rise, but only as far as our reason permits us.

But the kite cannot fly alone without a wind neither can we succeed without struggle and difficulty. These are the cross currents that when overcome send us higher in the sky \mathbf{of} human endeavor.

If we listen to the call of reason we will climb; but if we deaden ourselves to the pull on the string and sit back and rest on our present achievements, we climb no more but remain awaiting the break in the string—the penalty to the disregard of the urges of reason.

OUR WALKS.

Walks on the post are rare sights. Usually when you go on foot for any distance, you must get your feet dusty in dry weather or muddy in wet weather. A few trifling stretches of concrete footways only serve to accentuate the trackless nature of the rest of the post. And where there are wooden walks, you step along surpris- fore exist alone."

ingly once in a while to find your own name staring you in the face, stenciled on a board taken from the cratings of your shipment of household goods and made to do service to patch splintered planks.

From the post office corner extending toward the Officers' Club, the old wooden walk has now been torn up and bricks and gravel are being laid in place to furnish a permanent dry nath. Just another little sign of progress, and of partial improvement which keeps cropping up here and there about the post.

CHIEF OF STAFF TESTI-FIES BEFORE PRESIDEN-TIAL AIRCRAFT INQUIRY

The Infantry Stressed As Main Arm In War Service By Staff Chief

Major General John L. Hines, Chief of Staff of the Army was one of the important witnesses to appear before the President's Air Board this week. The Air Board has for its chairman, Mr. Dwight W. Morrow and eight members, among whom are Major General Harbord for the Army and Rear Admiral Fletcher for the Navy.

General Hines testified before the Board, that the Air Service was to assist the ground forces. To aid the land and sea forces and to protect its own forces from attack by the enemy. He advocated a small air force so organized that it could quickly expand in case of emergency and be adequate to the situation. He explained the need for a proper geographical distribution of the force so developed. The position occupied by this country and the relative naval power of the other nations are factors which should be considered in determining the proper defense in the air.

The General pointed out in no uncertain terms the need for an increased personnel and adequate equipment; but was opposed to a unification of the air service of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

"Wars in the future as in the past will be won by slow movable forces on the land—the Infantry," said the General. "The Air arm will always be an auxiliary service, its purpose to be the eyes and help of the Infanenemy—the man on the ground aided by the auxiliary arm, armed with his rifle and bayonet will do that. The Air arm cannot operate without some land or water base, it cannot there-

STEPS TAKEN TO PREVENT PROPERTY LOSS AT SCHOOL

Removal of Government Property Must Be Accompanied by Pass

In order to safeguard the removal of government property and former government property a circular has been issued that drivers of vehicles of any description carrying such property off the reservation must be provided with a permit which will be pre sented to the guard at the entrances of the reservation. This permit will show that the driver has authority to take the property off the reservation. The pass will also show the number of pieces and kind of property being removed.

If the driver of the vehicle has no permit, the guard will immediately turn the driver of the vehicle back to the place the goods were secured. permits will be signed by the officer causing the removal of the property.

The Provost will instruct the guards as to the new regulation to see that it is properly carried out.

RAMBLING WITH MORPHEUS SIXTY MONTHS AGO

By Major Verdi
The sun had stood stationary for hours directly overhead and concentrated all of the heat of the northern hemisphere on the spot occupied by the beaver board tar paper roofed pine shack in which late in the afternoon I endeavored to work. A few asbestos bees droned at my A few asbestos bees droned at my windows and the smoke from my pipe sank heavily to my desk and from it to the floor. The only human activity visible through the dancing heat waves which ceaslessly ebbed and flowed was that of a squad on the distant parade ground. Their machine like precision and withmic motion finally ceased when and rythmic motion finally ceased when the evening gun boomed forth notice that another drill day was over.

It was then that Morpheus glided noislessly thru my open door and unrolled a screen of most soothing color upon which appeared a half forgotten vista—a sluggish creek, monotonous cotton fields and a distant city enveloped in slowly settling smoke from many in-dustries and river craft all linked together by what seemed to be a dusty ribbon upon which many glistening ob-jects each surrounded by its own dusty cloud were moving under closely gather-

Rain began to fall, dust holes became mud holes, the moving objects floundered from side to side and many seemed stuck hopelessly as they blocked the way of others. Ant like objects crawled out and began pulling and hauling in attempts to dislodge their conveyances; many failed completely and were obscured by darkness just as I realized that Reminiscence and Morpheus had conspired to remind me of incidents in the daily lives of pioneers on their way to and from Benning.

VACCINATION NECESSARY AND COLUMBUS SCHOOLS

Hours Set For Innoculation and Vaccination By Surgeons.

School requirements, both in Columbus, Ga., and at the Children's School on the post, include the vaccination of all pupils as a protection against small pox.

Vaccinations for the families of military personnel may be secured without charge at the following times and places:

Attending Surgeon, New Hospital: Mondays, 9:00-9:30 a. m. Fridays, 2:00-2:30 p. m.

Attending Surgeon, Downtown: Daily, 9:00-12:00 a.m. 1:00-4:00 p.m. (except Sat. Sun. and holidays.)

The Sanitary officials on the post will shortly make arrangements for giving the "Schick Test" for diphteria, the hours to be announced later. This operation involves material of considerable value, and considerations of expense require that it be done in very large groups. Consequently, announcements will be made for definite assemblages for this purpose, which will not be repeated.

Surgeons state that the "Schick Test" for diphtheria susceptibility has passed so far beyond the experimental stage as to be of proved value. Children under six months of age need not take the test, for they are nearly without exception immune. Between the ages of six months and six years, it is practically certain, all children are remarkably susceptible to diphtheria. Between the ages of six years and twelve, the susceptibility is likely, but not near so certain as for the younger tots. Above the age of twelve, the natural human immunity now developed against diphtheria

It is, indeed, with a great deal of regret that the Company receives news of the pending resignation of 1st Lt. James B. Cullum, Jr., who expects to leave the army to become a member of the faculty of a nationally known preparatory school in Pennsylvania.

Lt. Collum came to the Seventh Regiment during October of last year, coming to this station from Head-quarters of the 8th Corps Area at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. During his short stay with the organization, he has won the unreserved respect and admiration of both officers and men; his pending separation from the service is therefore considered a matter of personal regret by very member of the command.

When the Infantry School's redoubtle Blue Tide turns out to face the eleven from Stetson College, (Fla.), in the first grid battle of the season, on Saturday next, the "galloping" Engineers will be prominently represented by Prof. Patrick Mallory, who, it is expected will hold down the keystone position of the doughboy line. Mallory, though a new man to the service lory, though a new man to the service, is not a new man to the gridiron; during the 1917 and 1918 seasons, he played on the University of California's ed on the University of California's team, while a student at that institution, and during the 1923 season, he was a member of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association's squad, playing as a semi-pro. That he has won a place on the School's first string this year, is sufficient testimonial to his proficiency.

Now comes to the organization from the post hospital that Sgt. Gensch, who has been incarcerated as a patient in that institution for the past two weeks, is improving rapidly—and expects to be out and ready for data within out and ready for duty within possibly two more weeks. The Sergeant proudly told a visitor from the Company the other day that he had been allowed to eat one or two full meals during the past week, something which is denied patients, as a rule who are suffering from Sgt. Gensch's trouble—gastritis. The or ganization wishes him a speedy recov-

With Old Man Winter hovering in the offing, members of the organization are watching with much interest the progress being made by Sgt. McGriff, Cpl. Hall, and Pvt. Mullin, who have been detailed to survey the camp and designate foundation lines for the new barracks upon which work, it is hoped, will be begun in a short time.

Three men have been definitely assigned to duty with the Reproduction Plant, namely Pfc. Malcolm, and Pvts. Bufkin and Layton, who are receiving instruction in the work of the plants under the tutelage of the detail from the 29th Engineers, Washington, who were recently attached to the organization as instructors.

"Lest we forget"—Sgt. Dowling, chief and general manager of the Reproduction Plant, is now putting out a the "Red Diamond Engineer"—in type-written form, which he publishes on the bulletin board daily. The "sheet" is debulletin board daily. The "sheet" is devoted chiefly, largely and mainly to the doings of the "Littlest World's Series" ('Scuse us, "I. Editor, The Infantry School News, Fort Benning, Georgia. Dear Ed:_

There are four Infantry School graduates at this educational center. The members of the R. O. T. C. are being daily exposed to the doctrines of the Doughboy school and a great many are catching the disease.

We four officers have read the 3rd anniversary issue of the News and we want to compliment the editor and his capable staff on this tangible result of their efforts. A copy is being handed the editor of the Davidsonian, our local paper, for his consideration.

The first thing that caused comment among the assembled gathering of afore mentioned officers was the appearance of the stadium as depicted on your cover page. One, a graduate of Basic 1921, expressed the opinion that he'd need a guide a Fort Benning now.

Of special interest was the photograph of the winners of the swimming Of special interest was the The officers pored over this pic ture as if trying to recognize an old face. The swimming pool itself proved of more than passing interest in view of the excessive heat and prohibition weather obtaining in this locality.

When the article covering the completion of the new theater was read at least one of the four officers mentioned re-lieved his soul by making forceful re-marks not exactly in keeping with the doctrines of the church controlling this college. The other three are still wondering with regard to the unexplained cause of the eruption.

Basic 111, 1921, sounded off about old calculator. He should be informed that that Old Doughboy is goold calculator. ing to be remembered in a manner as his fidelity to the Infantry School.

The picture of the new Howard bus on the back inside cover page only tended to convince those of us who had to formerly travel the Daily Risk between the post and Columbus that we are missing something. We took a ride on one of the old type—once.

After having thoroughly perused the News we are of the unanimous opinion that you folks at the Infantry School are putting on "lots of dog." The Postry directory on the back cover conex directory on the back cover confirms this. We've cussed the Biglerfirms this. ville Special and we've made uncomplimentary remarks about instructors in general; we've wondered why so and so wasn't done and who was the author of such and such and such a fool order. All of this was done in the past. Now we are rooting for the school and every phase of its activities—with emphasis on the continued prosperity of the News. Our perspective has changed. We've forgotten and apparent injustices.

The men of Headquarters Company, have been puzzled for the last year or two why Sergt. Geo. A. Gilbert (Better known as High) don't get himself a set of hinges so he can lower "it" without bending his legs. For he always has a new model.

The men are still wondering, how Sergt. High managed to keep it down while he was pugging for heavyweight champion belt of Ft. Benning.

We notice that High preferred a Fire Belt from the Fire Shop rather than one from the Infantry Athletic Association.

The Company also still wonders what High is going to do since Chiese

BLUE TIDE READY FOR OPENING GAME WITH STETS

Careful Conditioning and Training Shows Up As Test Nears

Work by the football week has been going through a perfectthe first crashing scrimmages of last week, individual variations from the desired team-play began to break out. On the twice-daily sprinkled field, the candidates went through their twice daily workouts. Mornings were devoted to perfecting individual assignments on the scheduled plays. Afternoons on the scheduled plays. Afternoons were devoted to successive scrimmages. The four "first" teams are still in the field. Conditioning carried on since September 1st has told well. Except for minor troubles, no injuries of any sort have developed. And "Doc" Tolorn has been right on the job. Head of the state of the s son has been right on the job. He hopped aboard an infected foot of "Red" Lindsey's, and the foot is in shape again, in cleated shoes once

Among the coaches the problem for choosing a first line aggregation is still the mooted problem. Each of the four "first" teams has its string of adequate substitutes, and the balance is even and close, substitutes bidding hard for places on the teams, and each team bidding hard to be the "First" team. When the coaches are asked for a line-up of the eleven in the Stetson game this Saturday, or for the Loyola game, they ponder and say we might as well print the entire squad. That would not mean much. So we'll give what appears to be something fairly logical, with the mental reservation that the coaches don't talk and we have made it up ourselves:

Right Tackle: Mack (180), Hesse

Right End: Neff (150), Sweeney, (150), Tomzak (165).

-McQuarrie Half-backs: Swantic (175) Daniels (130), Dudley

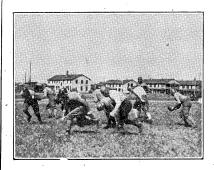

Full-backs: Douthit (165), Ryan (170).

Whoever goes into the game Saturday against the strong Stetson College collection of football chasers, these men will almost certainly be in action. It is the intention of the coaches to use as many as possible of their four "first" teams so as to get a line on the combat conduct of their players. Some show up well in practice and lack the kick in conflict. With others it is The Benning Stadium will be christened by the entire mass of pigskin players.

buell, at back, displayed a brand of football that surprised everyone. Mc-Evan mentioned his work as being the best of the afternoon.

Saunders, regular tackle, is out for two weeks because of deficiencies in studies. This is rather a hard blow, since it means that he will be out of practice until a day or two before the Detroit game.

His place is being taken care of temporarily by Connors, whose work was closely watched yesterday. He is tall and rangy and should prove a great value a little more experience.

Daly, at center, is constantly improving, especially in passing.

A long drill in kicking and forward passing took place before the scrimmage. Both Yeomans and Hewitt practiced punting.

The scrimmage itself was rather hard, though many dummy plays alternated with the full-speed.

McEwan himself was much elated at

TO BE GIVEN BY EXPERT
AT BENNING POOL

Water Fans To Meet Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 4:30 P. M. At The Pool.

Advanced instruction in swimming will be given in the post swimming school by an officer recently arrived at Benning with long experience in aquatics. Later in the season it is planned to collect the best men swimmers and to form a swimming team. but this action awaits more favorable circumstances and the settling down process which follows the first burst of confusion incident to the opening of the academic year.

At present efforts are being confined to collecting those women and girls most interested in water sports and to developing an advanced swim-ming class including the most waterwise of the post and town merimaids. The coach in charge has come to Georgia with a successful record as a developer of a championship swimming club last year in a single season from a mediocre group. He desires to meet water fans on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 4:30 p. m. in the post pool. Striking ability is not required; merely an enthusiasm and some water sense. The idea is to give progressive instruction and to create slowly and thoroughly that technique without which first class swimmers do not exist.

Plans are taking shape for securing downtown facilities in order to continue swimming instruction, for the men's team that will be formed, and for the girl's club, throughout the winter.

2nd Bn. Gathers at Fort Swimming Pool Monday.

General superiority on the part of their watermen, enabled the personnel of the Second Battalion of the 29th Infantry to march back up the hill holding premier honors in the Regimental Swimming Meet held last Monday morning, with their Major carrying the cup awarded the Battalion with the highest point score. The Seconds nosed out the First by 31-27. Seconds nosed out the First by 31-21. They also brought up with them the Individual Point prize, awarded to Private Michael Juba of Company "G" who secured a total of 10 points by winning the 50-yard breast stroke and the 440-yard free style.

It was the second battalion's day. In the breast stroke, they took all three places; in fact the finals contained none by 2nd Battalion men. In the 440-yard swim, Juba and Launiking wear well out in front most of the tis were well out in front most of the way, Juba pacing along evenly with a strong overarm stroke. Potts of Co.

Plant Turned Over to Quartermaster.

Saturday morning, just before noon, the contractor who has been building the future home of the 29th Infantry, turned over the keys to the first sec-tion of the new barracks and the heating plant to the Construction Quartermaster for acceptance. It is under-stood that the Quartermaster has formerly accepted the buildings.

Just before the final clean-up of the new buildings, the heating plant was tested for fuel consumption and general efficiency. It was found that the boilers exceeded the required standard by several points. The present system includes two boilers that may be added to as the building program continues.

This type of barracks, although new to the United States has been used in Panama with great success. During Panama with great success. During the recent hot spell it was found that the buildings were remarkably cool.

Telegraph instructions from the War Department were received on Tuesday, September 29, by 1st Lt. James B. Cullum, Jr., that his resignation, announced last week as pending, had been accepted by the Secretary of War.

The Lieutenant was to have left Ft. Benning Thursday morning, traveling overland by automobile, for Pottsdown, Pa, at which place he has accepted a position on the faculty of the Hill Preparatory School. He will teach mathematics.

While regretting, of course, the departure of Lt. Cullum, the company as a whole extends to him the best wishes for every success in his new field of endavor Damage to tentage and equipment of the Engineer camp estimated at more than $3,000.00 was caused by the storm which visited the post on Thursday afternoon, September 29. The center of the story, a tornado traveling at a velocity estimated at more than 100 miles an hour, and covering a path not more than 100 yards wide, struck the Engineer area broadside as it came up over the hill on the southwest side of the post. Little was left standing in its wake. All the supply tents and the administration tents, seven in number, all of the large wall variety, were completely demolished, and practically torn to shreds. Four squad tents, each occupied by four members of the command, were lifted from the ground completely and dropped the ground completely and dropped several yards from their original moorings. Clothing and equipment were scattered promiscuously over the Engineer and adjacent areas, some of it not having been recovered as yet Two other squad tents were so badly damaged that they had to be salvaged. Damage to property in the supply and administration tents, although a complete check-up has not yet been made, was estimated at considerably more than $1000.00. Losses by individ-ual members of the command were also considerable.

Following the storm, few of the men had dry bedding left, and still fewer of them dry clothing for a change. However working with the spirit which typifies the "galloping" Seventh, everybody turned to with a will after the deluge, and, by drawing dry blankets from the supply sergeant, all were fairly comfortably quartered for the night.

By noon the following day, visitors to the camp would have been unable to tell, from appearances, that a demolishing storm had so recently visited the area; all tents had been re-erected, and business was proceeding as usual.

Every storm, of course, must have its hero In this instance, it was Pvt. Mullins, chief chainman on the survey-Mullins, chief chainman on the surveying squad. He saved the government several hundred dollars by materially contributing to the safety of three or four transits during the storm.

According to Sgt Dowling, in charge, the map reproduction plant is now, after a complete overhauling, actually functioning something like normal form, several jobs of more or less major importance having already been turned out.

The present successful operation of the plant is due, in a large measure, to the untiring and competent efforts of Cpls. PENNY WISE AND POUND FOOL-ISH

It is a serious indictment of the Army administration that Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., brought in a speech at Gettysburg. He specifically declared that Congress and the budget officials are starving the Army, that the cavalry and artillery are improperly horsed, "hundreds of them are twenty years old or more," he says of the horses, that the Regular Army is housed in rickety cantonments with leaky roofs and, strangest of all, that there are not nearly enough modern gas masks to equip the regular forces.

Here is a statment made by a man of responsibility, a member of the Senate Committee, on Military Affairs and one of the two senators from the Empire State. Isn't the answer to it that we should either have an efficient army or admit that the Government is not equal to the task? Either ensure that there shall be no war, or keep an Army that deserves the name, what-We have heard all ever its size. about the curse of militarism and quite agree with those who emphasize the somewhat obvious fact. But we have also heard the pronouncements official and unofficial in the past, that there was to be no more war, and then we have had war. Don't we all understand by this time that a policy of starving the Army, of keeping it half alive and half efficient, is one that pretty recent history condemns sharp-

If there is one fact of common knowledge, it is that "economical" unpreparedness has always been followed by war-time expenditure that saddled unborn generations with the penalties of a folly of which they were guiltless. If there is any magician in Congress or in Washington that can guarantee against the need of an army, all right, Let him go to it. But until he gets to work, let us have an army that is not denied what it ought to have. Ιf Senator Wadsworth is mistaken, that can easily be shown, but it will not be shown at all through silence.

"THE OLD SWIMMIN' HOLE"

Sometimes here at the Infantry School we think we have more than our share of summer weather. in one respect the long stretch of warm months is a distinct advantage It enables us to have nearly 6 months of use for the swimming pool. Now, at the beginning of October, water elsewhere is too cold for aquatic sports. Here we have some weeks of swimming still ahead of us.

Swimming is an all round sport. It exercises all muscles of the body. It is suited to all types of persons, the strong and the weak, the husky and the lithe. It may be indulged in by experts who make up teams for racing, and by amateurs who paddle around for their own enjoyment. It may be indulged in by more or less large and formal groups, and by small groups. You don't have to find a companion of near your own ability, as in golf or tennis. You don't have to collect a set of balanced athletes, as in making up a baseball or basketball team. You can just go ahead by yourself, if you have to.

Now, when the fall frosts are striking the leaves from the trees in other sections of the country, we are still swimming easily. The 29th Infantry has commenced the systematic instruction of its entire personnel. Other units are maintaining a keen interest in the sport. At Fort Benning, we have three organization commanders particularly interested in swimming; the chief of the 29th who wants every doughboy a swimmer, and the senior artilleryman and tank officer may be seen in the post pool every afternoon.

With such an excellent place for enjoying this sport, and good water safety measures for the prevention of unnecessary perils, The Infantry School places swimming among its -Boston Transcript most enjoyable activities.

CAMP VAIL CHANGES NAME TO FORT MAMMOUTH BY ORDER

Home of Signal School To Be Permanent Military Post

The War Department, it is learned, has designated Camp Vail, New Jersey as a permanent military reserva-tion to be known as Fort Mammouth. The Signal Corps has long desired this change in order that their status might be more agreeable.

The new Fort takes its name from the trustworthy battle of the Revolution which was fought in that vicinity.

It is understood that a radical departure from the building policy has been inaugurated in the bids that were recently submitted to the contractors for construction of the new quarters for officers at Fort Monmouth. The principle cause of the departure is the present wave of economy.

The bidders have been given the floor space required and the number of rooms for the different types of officer's quarters and they have been asked to submit their own plans and specifications with their bids. This departure from the plans on file with Quartermaster General allows the bidder to take advantage of the local market price and to keep the buildings with in the Congressional limits of

This change in policy has some very desirable features, one that fits the case at Fort Monmouth, is the fitting of the general character of the new quarters to the civilian dwellings in the neighborhood. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR NEWS

Christian Endeavor activities in Fort Benning will under go a complete re-organization in the latter part of October. A program is being planne which it is said will completely eclipall previous efforts of the organization.

Last Thursday night, Sept. 24, the first of a series of social gatherings was held at the Protestant Chapel. About thirty-five young people from the St. Mark Methodist Church Epworth League of Columbus paid a welcome visit to the Protestant Chapel. They came armed to the teeth with stunts and games of all descriptions. The Chaplain told a few stories and Rev. Barnhill of St. Mark's made a few pungent remarks. Music was furnished by Paul Killeen's Holy Roller Seven of the 29th Infantry

The chief need of the Christian Endeavor Services which take place at 5:30 p. m. Sundays is the lack of a pianist. Anyone in the post who would like the privilege of brightening up the C. E. song service will please show up at the next meeting.

Pvt. Croft of "D" Company, 29th Infantry is making a hit by his weekly talks and sermons at the chapel. Other talented lay workers are coming to the front at the chapel.

LINE AND AERIAL ATTACK SMOTHER FLA. AGGREGATION

Fleet Backfield Too Fast For Visiting Team

Traveling surefooted over the unscarred velvet sod of the New Doughboy Stadium last Saturday, the Phantom Blue team scored almost at will over their opponents from Stetson University of Florida.

The home team scored almost within the first five minutes of play and used many reserves who continued the work of tallying up the score until the dusk of evening closed around the scene of the Infantry's athletic center.

The Stetson team fought valiantly against a superior football force and displayed untiring gameness thruout the game. They went down before the Blue Tide fighting and with colors flying. The big play of the afternoons game came when the Stetson boys got the ball in the when the Stetson boys got the ball in the last quarter and with sheer gameness and football stragegy crosses the Blue line for their lone tally. With but three minutes to play the Stetsonites launched an aerial attack that was perfect and with three successive passes crossed the line for goods. The stands revered their line for score. The stands roared their approval.

"Dutch" Smythe, of the backfield once again justified the title of All-American back. "Dutch", the D'Artignan of the Benning Backfield Musketeers, was ablely seconded by McQuarrie and Daniels.

It is bard to nick an individual etar.

It is hard to pick an individual star from the line, for the front presented a wall too tough to break down and too strong to overpower. The machine-like precision of the line gives rise to much favorable speculation for the future.

For the first game of the season weather taken into consideration, the attendance was good. The bleachers were well filled with soldiers and civilians alike. It is believed that if the enthusiasm continues in the future as it has in the past, the backers of the Blue tide will flock to the Stadium and fills its stands to overflowing.

KENTUCKY ELEVEN TO BE REAL TEST FOR BIG BLUE TEAM

Blue Grass Boys Will Make First Appearance at Benning.

Transylvania from Lexington, Ky., comes to the Infantry School Saturday to play the Doughboy team on its home grounds. The Kentuckians come to Benning fresh from their victory over the University of Cincinnati where a new type of football was tried out. This game will no doubt be the first real test that the Blue Tide has been put to this season. The Transylvanians will settle for all times this season the strength of out line and the prowess of our backfield.

No longer will there be any doubt as to whether prior games were won by line or backfield. This game will need the com-bined efforts of the entire team and will be just the test that Benning needs to realize her strength or weakness. There is much speculation as to what the blue grass boys may have in their bag of tricks but the coaches are confident that our two prior games have brought out Benning's ability to analyze any-thing that our opponents may spring. The last three days have been devoted

Boiler From Souther Field Put To Work At New Theatre

With its forty foot smoke stack, the boiler which has been salvaged from the Air Service field at Americus, Ga., is about to be put in place in the concrete lined excavation that is to be its new Drinks, Drugs and Cigars.

The steam boiler will heat the home. new Theatre and it is believed will also furnish heat for the Post Gymnasium which is next door.

For several years the boiler has been laying idle at Souther Field, which was a war-time flying field. Fort Benning was allotted the task of salvaging and using such material as could be gotten from that place. A company of the 24th Infantry under its officers went overland to the big field and the answer to the heating problem of the New Theatre is the result.

No more gaping, grinning stove doors that baked one side while the other side froze. You will now be able to sit thru a movie in comfort and enjoy a pleasant evening watching a super production such as is promised for the coming season.

As a part of the instruction of the Advanced Officers' Class at the Infantry School, the Engineers on Monday and Tuesday afternoons of this week staged two major demonstrations, one in bridge construction and river crossing, and the other in field fortification.

The bridge construction demonstration was held on Monday afternoon, at which time a standard pontoon bridge for heavy transportation, and Lampert and Kapok foot bridges were thrown across the Chattahoochee at a point just below Engineer Hill.

After the bridge demonstrations, which were put over in record time, the pontooners then showed the Colonel's class how the Engineers put the doughboys over the river when there isn't time to throw across a bridge. Using a pontoon of the 29th Infantry for purposes of demonstration, three pontoon boats carried the troops across to the Alabama side, where they were landed un-der cover of a smoke screen provided by the 1st Gas Regiment; following the landing, a surprise attack was simulated; then a quick withdrawal was made, and the troops brought back to the Georgia side in the hoats.

On Tuesday afternoon, demonstra-tions in field fortifications, including the construction of trenches, erection of barbed wire entanglements, as well as demolition of the enemy's fortifica-tions were staged for the benefit of the Colonels in the trench area four miles southeast of the post.

Other demonstrations, for the benefit of the other classes at the Infantry

IT'S UP TO YOU

Recently news dispatches have indicated the possibility of a budget cut of several millions of dollars, from the amount submitted by the Director of the Budget. Those who are students of national defense are becoming them and peace, and safety. alarmed at the thought of such a thing. It may safely be said that our national defense is in peril of being reduced to omy that weakens an efficient machthe state of uselessness.

Each year the War Department sends forward, after careful study, its recommendations for appropriations to the Director of the Budget. The Director of the Budget in turn cuts out what he believes to be non-essentials. Now a further cut is contemplated of the figures submitted by the Director.

The time element has entered into the situation. No longer have we huge supplies left over from the wartime stock. Deterioration has taken place. Surplus property has been sold. Ammunition is running low. The temporary quarters need attention as their time limit for existence has passed. Detached enlisted men have been recalled from a commutation status marksmanship pay has been cut. The growth of the National Guard and R. O. T. C. has been retarded by insufficient appropriation.

The authorized strength of the Army is 125,000 enlisted men. The figures have not been cut, but the appropriations have been so small that a reduction of the personnel has been necessary. The one man who is best prepared to state the conditions of the army, the Secretary of War, in his report to the President, has stated that reduction of expenses has reached rock bottom. If the Secretary's statement cannot be regarded as a fact, just whom must we turn to for facts?

The question is up to the people of the United States to inform their representatives in Congress as to their needs for national defense. It is in their hands alone. Those who are indifferent and who are unfamiliar with the situation should be enlightened to their duty.

We, of the Army, who know of con- tached,

BRITISH ARMY ADOPTS NEW SERVICE RIFLE

Weight Reduced in New Doughboy Weapon

Information has been received that Lord Onslow, Under Secretary for War, of the British Empire has planned a new rifle. The main feature of the new piece is the reduction in weight. The war-time rifle that served the British Army so well in the World War was thought too heavy so the experts were assigned to develop one of lighter type. This has been done. The Doughboy's load has been reduced by one pound. The new rifle is to weigh nine pounds, with bayonet at-

ARMY SALESMAN SORRY TO LEAVE BENNING

Although he may never be accorded official recognition, by way of be-"cited in orders," Donnie L. Spradly, discharged recently from the Service Company of the 29th Infantry, after completing, with credit, a one-year enlistment, merits, beyond all shadow of a doubt, the title, "Cham-pion Recruiter of the Fourth Corps Area" for the current month.—While waiting for his train at the union station in Columbus, 'he passed away the time by "selling army" to a Fort Benning officer, when chanced to be on duty at the station in civilian clothes, as a member of the reception committee welcoming the incoming student officers.

According to the story told by the officer in question, First Lieutenant C. B. Lenow, 15th Tank Battalion, he was talking with a member of the Columbus recruiting party, who was showing some of the pamphlets being sent out by the 6th Cavalry at Ft. Oglethorpe, when Spradly came up and joined the party, announcing that he had just been discharged, and that, as soon as he had been home and at tended to some personal business, he intended to re-enlist. During the conversation which ensued. Lt. Lenow, jostingly, asked the recruiting sergeant if he thought that he could get in the army. The sergeant replied that the lieutenant seemed a little under weight.

It was then that Spradly opened up with his "selling talk." He proceed-He proceed ed to waive the under weight problem as being entirely negligible, explaining the old one about taking on a big feed of bananas and then drinking a gallon of water, citing his own case as a typical example of the efficacy of the scheme. Spradly, it seems, weighted only 117 pounds when he applied for enlistment a year ago; but nothing daunted, when informed that he was too much in the feather weight class, took the banana-and-water treatment with the result that he "weighed in" O. K. when the time, came to be examined.

By way of concluding his remarks on the matter of weight, the enthusiast paid honorable tribute to the effectiveness of "army slum" as a builder of bone and muscle, again offering him-self as an example. Spradley weighed 140 pounds upon discharge as compared with his meagre 117 upon enlistment a year previous. He prophesied a like improvement for the lieutenant, should the latter decide to enlist.

After being satisfied that he could overcome his underweight handicap, the lieutenant proceeded to offer the usual objections which always occur to the half-hearted applicant for enlistment. Spradly, Lt. Lenow said, was ready with an answer calculated to overcome them all, clinching every argument by citing some of the specific advantages to be gained from a "hitch" in the army.

When Spradly had left to board his train, after expressing the hope that Lt. Lenow would "take on" for a year at least, the lieutenant sent one of the members of the recruiting party out to tell him after he was on train that he had definitely decided to enlist, as a result of the glowing and enthusiastic description service and its advantages, to which he had just listened.

It is almost needless to say that an investigation revealed the fact Spradly made for himself an enviable record while with the Service Company of the 29th. Although a recruit, and a young one, he learned the ways of the service during his one year, and developed in so short a time into a soldier able to take his place alongside many of the more seasoned ones.

The only regretable fact is that Spradly is not returning to Benning,

THE STORY OF A STROKE OF LIGHTNING

For several months as we have been sweltering neath the rays of the burning sun and the entire bounds of Dixie has been suffering one of the worst droughts seen in years and we have longed for, prayed for, and begged for relief from prayed for, and begged for relier from this disastrous situation. We even went so far as to resolve that we would be satisfied with any draw backs if we could only get rain. Last week the rain came and with it the mighty wind playing havoc along its path. Down rain came and with it the mighty wind playing havoc along its path. Down went sheds, poles, and out went telephones. The following day at the Signal Office, one man spent the entire day with the telephone receiver to his ear and when the day had closed and the sun had sank beneath the western hills, a total of 186 telephone troubles had been recorded, and all requesting had been recorded, and all requesting preference in repairs. When we take the old receiver dawn and find the the old instrument is dead, we feel like lambast-ing the Signal Corps and tearing the old instrument which is no good to us, from the wall and throwing it into the lake, but we fail to realize that one hundred and eighty-five others are in the same fix. The signal Corps personnel without even a murmur, even working on their own time, went at the repair work their own time, went at the repair work with a vim while all the time calls galore were being received at the Signal Office that the phone is still out of order. But with all the slowness which many were prone to believe the Signal-Corps moved, yet investigation revealed that the repair work was handled with more rapidity than is some of the repair work of the Southern Bell. work of the Southern Bell.

The moral of this story is that while we may be greatly handicapped by lack of phone service, yet the Signal Corps does not control the lightning and the storms and the various technicalities which put the phones out of order, and when the trouble report is received neither is it sleeping on the job.

Correct Dress for Riding

THE REMOUNT has heretofore consistently declined to publish unsigned articles. However, in the present case, it could not resist the temptation of departing from its traditional policy. The writer of the article herewith presented, who for personal reasons desires to withhold her name, is well known to the Editor as an accomplished writer. She knows her subject thoroughly, and has presented it in a wholly readable manner. The article, while mildly critical of the riding costumes worn by some women riders, is couched in most friendly terms, and is designed to be helpful to inexperienced riders, who will no doubt profit by the very practical suggestions of a riders, who will, no doubt, profit by the very practical suggestions of a horsewoman of wide experience.—The Editor.

In the past six years interest in riding, showing and owning good horses has been increasing tremendously in the Army. Since the war practically every post of the mounted service, and numerour infantry posts, have organized horse shows. Not only the officers, but the wives and daughters, are turning out with greater enthusiasm each year for these shows, and a decided improvement is shown from year to year in the type of horse owned and exhibited by the officers.

I have had the good fortune to attend seven Army shows in the past five years, and two things have made a great impression on me at each show. First, the number of women who come into the ring and give their horses a remarkably good ride over the jumps; and the atrocious costumes that some of these women wear! costumes that some of these women wear!
Unfortunately many of them have absolutely no idea about correct riding apparel, and they turn themselves out looking perfectly ludicrous. There seems to be a strong penchant for red or green sleeveless coats with "jockey caps" to match. I suppose they think that this gives the impression that they are going hunting. They don't realize that if they appeared in the hunting field in this outfit, the entire field would be convulsed outfit, the entire field would be convulsed with laughter, or if they appeared in an eastern show ring they would "get the gate" before they got a horse's length into the ring.

Nowadays there are Army officers stationed all over the country on various civilian details. They are getting oppor-tunities to show in practically every horse show belonging to the National

Ready-to-Wear Dry Goods and Notions

Because we are going into this game with so much enthusiasm, and getting so much pleasure out of it, let us take up much pleasure out of it, let us take up the matter of dress for women and teach them how to turn out properly. It seems to me that this matter could be handled very well by the committees in charge of the various Army Horse shows throughout the service, by having, in future, "appointments" count 10, 15, 20 or 25 per cent in all the ladies classes. Convince them that no matter how handsome their mounts may be, they can't get into the them that no matter now handsome their mounts may be, they can't get into the ribbons if they appear dressed in high heel slippers, golf stockings, husband's breeches—several sizes too large—and a nifty blue coat, with striped shirt, necktie and knitted tam-o'shanter to match.

Correct riding apparel, amongst real sportsmen and sportswomen is as rigidly adhered to by them, as is the regulation military uniform by an officer of the Army. The average Army woman seems to go to the other extreme; they wear beautiful evening gowns to the hops, appear in smartly tailored suits on the streets, wear appropriate clothes on the golf course, and in all their other daily activities, and then turn out on horseback in perfectly atrocious costumes. After all, they are more conspicuous on a horse than anywhere else, and for that reason should be far more particular about their riding than for any other pastime.

All women who are interested in horses and riding would enjoy reading Ivy Maddison's book, "Riding Astride for Girls," and Lida Fleitman's book, "Comments on Hacks and Hunters." Both of these books contain very good chapters on "Dress" but they go in for correct appointments for the hunting field, and for showing horses in the big formal shows, where appointments are very important, and differ for various classes, such as showing road hacks, showing park hacks, showing hunters, or ing park hacks, showing hunters, or riding as a member of a hunt team. Most of the Army women can only have one winter, and possibly a summer habit, so have to show in the same clothes that they take their daily rides in However, if they have proper clothes for their daily rides they are quite appropriate for informal shows as well, so they do not need need to aspire to "Black Squire's Hat with hunting cord cord,

Skirt coat, Broad cord breeches,

Calf boots with patent leather tops

Tan doeskin gloves,
Hunting crop with thong Flask and sandwich case."
which is a quotation from one of Miss which is a quotation from one of Miss Fleitman's paragraphs on dress.

To a person who has been raised in a sporting community, has followed the hounds, and attended some of the big shows, the most ridiculous costumes of all are the red and bright green sleeveless coats, and so-called "jockey caps," so popular in the Army. I suppose less coats, and so-called "jockey caps," so popular in the Army. I suppose women get these ideas from hunting prints. It is a desecration of an old, traditional "uniform" of the hunt, and should never be abused by women, nor worn any place but in the hunting field, where it is not worn by women.

COMPANY OFFICERS CLASS BREAKS FIRING RECORD

Completing their record firing on the target range yesterday afternoon, the Company Officers' Class at The Infantry School made a very exceptional series of scores, and broke all previous records for class firing. The average for the 177 members of the class was 303.5 out of a possible of 350, which overtops the former high average of 302.11. The individual high man was Captain Adrian Brian high man was Captain Adrian Brian, who made 335 points, equaling the former record score over this range made in the fall of 1924 by Captain Lloyd S. Spooner, 1st Inf., crack shot of the Infantry Team in National Matches, high man on the A. E. F. Rifle team in 1919, and holder of a first blees tight the Presidents Matches the Captain the Presidents Matches and the Matches the Presidents Matches Matches the Presidents Matches the Presidents Matches the Pre first place tie in the President's Match in 1922.

Instruction methods in rifle marks manship have been constantly improving at Fort Benning, with constantly bettering of scores. When the new course of firing was established, a score of 290 qualified a firer as Expert. This requiremet was successively raised to 293, 300, and finally to 306, where it now stands. Ninety-four members of the Company Officers' Class qualified as Expert Riflemen, and all the rest as Sharpshooters (52) or Marksmen (31).

Most interesting among the comments made on the completion of the work were those from some of the foreign officers attending The Infantry School as guests of the government. Lieutenants Sardinias and Sedano, of School as guests of the the Cuban Army, expressed themselves as immeasurably improved by the thoroughness and suitability of the instruction. Each bettered his previous records with the rifle, Lieutenant Sedano making the grade to qualify as "Expert Rifleman" for which achievement he is receiving the congratulations of his friends, although he, with true Latin courtesy, attributes his suc-cess entirely to the work of his instructors.

BENNING OBSERVES IMPROVED NEW TYPE PONTOON FOOT BRIDGE

Post War Pattern Pontoons Floated This Week in Engineer Demonstration For Advanced Class

Newly designed Kapok pontoons, a post-war development, were used by Company "A" of the 7th Engineers Monday afternoon in throwing a temporary bridge across the river in the course of a demonstration for the Advanced Class at The Infantry School. This is the first time such a bridge has been used.

Three separate bridges were put over the Chattahoochee just below Engineer Hill, a Heavy Pontoon Bridge, a Lampert Foot Bridge, and the Kapok. The heavy Pontoon bridge rests on clumsy flat bottomed boats which are difficult to transport. The Lampert Foot Bridge is built of a runway resting on light temporary boats with canvas stretched and folded over wooden frames, and can be sunk by a single rifle bullet penetrating the fabric of one of the boats.

The Kapok Bridge, on the contrary, is light and easy of transportation. Its pontoons are made of balsam wood stuffed with cotton padding. Shot and shell will not sink them in any appreci-able time, for the internal stuffing keeps whole afloat practically until the structure is shot entirely to pieces.

TANKERS TAKE THE AIR

Late Saturday morning an object was noticed in the sky to the north-west which resembled a giant bir.d Shortly there after there was a fluttering of wings, a whirring noise, and this monster of the air settle down directly in rear of the 15th Tank Battalion Headquarters. 15th Tank Battalion Headquarters. Captain L. D. INFANTRY SCHOOL NEWS

LOYOLA AND FORT "Mc" BOW BEFORE BLUE

SEVENTY-SEVEN POINTS SCORED WITH TWO TEAMS SATURDAY

Blue Tide And Reserves Both Victor-

Rolling up a total of seventy-seven points in two separate games on two foreign gridirons last Saturday, the Infantry football team at Fort Benning began to show true mid-season form.
The wolves of Loyola College in New Orleans went down to defeat before the Big Blue Tide by a score of 45-0; and the 22nd Infantry at Fort McPherson felt the power of the Infantry Reserves to the tune of 32-7.

Head Coach Milburn and Line Coach Zellars, who made the trip to the Mississippi River city, had the satis-faction of seeing their protegees outclass the colegilans they faced in posiclass the colegilans they faced in positive fashion. Using alternative lineups, the Benning pigskin carriers swept down the field almost at will, being held for downs only twice, completing five forward passes out of seven attempts—two of them for touchdowns by Sweeney—and furnishing end runs by the flashy Smythe and little "Bebe" Daniels for ten, twenty-four, and fifty-six yards. Thru the line McQuarrie and Swantic plunged like a major offensive, making ten, thirteen, twenty, and even forty ten, thirteen, twenty, and even forty yards between the tackle positions.

A thing to behold was the Infantry line, a charging line with collective power and individual head-work to open things up for the ball-carriers. The line made the holes, the backs went through and spilled the secondary defense, and line plays were as big ground gainers as end attacks. Against such a line, Loyola was powerless, making first down only once, and then via the aerial route. And the antivia the aerial route. And the anti-aircraft work of the Doughboys was effective too, for the New Orleans collegians completed only two out of seven attempts.

Perhaps the most encouraging thing about the entire performance against the Wolves of Loyola was the almost equal performances put on by alternative Players. The new athletic policy of developing enlisted players great number of candidates. Soldier and officer took turns in positions, and the results were indistinguishable. One backfield, composed of Smythe, Mc-Quarrie, Swantic, and Douthit, is occasionally checked out to make way for another workable set composed of Dananother workable set composed of Daniels, Buck, Hendrix, and Cole. Dwyer and Lindsey alternate at center. On the ends, Capt. Neff and Lt. Cornog give place occasionally to Kgelstrom and Sweeney. At the guards, the major force is enlisted, three out of four, Bertelman, Stanovitch, and Lapine fitted in with Lt. Schaeffer. And so on

Last week's victory over Loyola was a striking preliminary to the rest of the season. Loyola is no mean oppon-ent, having just vanquished Southent, having just vanquished South-western in summary fashion. But the Infantry is better than ever before, and showed it in positive fashion.

THE FORT "Me" GAME

At the same time part of the squad was tearing the New Orleans gridiron asunder, a group of reserves piloted by Captain McKenna, Lt. Jenkins and Lt. Bragan, assailed the 22nd Infantry at Fort McPherson. The brand of football displayed by these "reserves" is another indication of the successful outcome of the new army athletic policy. With the doughty aid of "Chief" a mid-summer arrival from Snelling, and lanky Mitzen at half-back, the Infantry crew ran crashing over their opponents. A fifteen yard forward pass gave the McPherson home team its only score. The rest of the game was the property of the soldiers from Benning.

FULLY DEVELOPED INFANTRY SQUAD READY FOR TRANSYLVANIA

Out at the Fort, things have come to such a pass that the poor football fan cannot tell at all who is going to be in the lineup. When the coach wields a third string line to a first string back-field and jumbles the other aggregations of his four "first" teams about, you never know what is going to happen. Then the amazing thing is that the flashy backfield, accustomed to making gains behind such forwards as Stanovitch, Lapine, Mack, Berry, and Dwyer, makes the same sort of gains behind players thought by the sideline dopester to be slightly inferior.

Again the coaches fool us. There is such a string of capable substitutes that checking the fifty or sixty odd players that dash from the bench to the scrimmage is as bad as finding John Smith in the New York Telephone Book. The Atlanta Georgian sports writer, Randy Edmundson, who saw the reserves at McPherson on Sunday, said: "If these players are the third and fourth teams, everybody is wondering what the varsity must be like.' And there you have it.

Following the policy enunciated by the War Department that the enlisted team should in general supplant the all-star officer team of ex-college lights, the Infantry has indeed encouraged wider participation in the keenest of athletic sports. When the Benning staff found itself charged with the duty of collecting and training the best army team to prepare to defend the President's Cup in the challenge round against the Navy or the Marines —which ever might be eliminated in the preliminaries—the work put out brought a phenomenal list of regimental pigskin luminaries to the banks of the Upatoi. The Doughboy Stadium and its Columbus and Benning occu-pants are assured finer football than any seen in times past.

Head Coach Milburn may announce one lineup, and jank every man at the end of the first quarter, and order into battle different teams every quarter. Yet each aggregation will perform like a varsity. It has got so that lineups are more nothing in the beginning. can mean nothing in the beginning except that these players will start the game. The alternates—we cannot call them "scrubs"—will be sure to be there in force. Here is, then, a Benning order of the day for the Transylvania game on Saturday:

Much care has been exercised in getting the two polo fields into the best of shape for the two series. The grass is green and velvety and surprisingly free from dust as has been the case in years past. Despite the long and severe drought the fields have been for nearly a month busy with the candidates for the various teams that will take place in the series.

As usual, the 29th Infantry and the 83rd Field Artillery will furnish teams, while the student officers will make up their own quartet. The other Officers playing from headquarters, the Staff and the Instructors will form what is to be known as the Freebooters Team.

Major Smith, the Cavalry representative at the School is in charge of the general developments and instructions of the players from the school and Freebooter teams.

The new mounts are in the pink of condition and the old line faithfuls are champing at the bit for the first throw-in of Sunday's game.

The scores of the Petrel elevteams. The scores of the Petrel eleven so far this season have been: Oglethorpe 7, Howard 6; Oglethorpe 7, Ga. 13; Oglethorpe 20, Center College 0.

The three stellar Petrel players, Maurer, Kilgore, and Campbell, are now performing together for the third successive year, and they grow better as the months roll on. Perhaps not quite in the same class as Tech, Auburn, and Georgia, the Oglethorpe agregation is propertialess. gregation is nevertheless powerful, speedy, and dangerous.

So far this season the Infantry gridiron lights have met more or less second rate opponents, but demonstrating against them, nevertheless, a wealth of strength and a neat and varied attack. 6th INF. JOINS ROLL OF STADIUM BACKERS ON DEDICATION WEEK

Colonel David Stone, Former Refresher Student Forwards Regimental Donation

Colonel David L. Stone, D. S. M., commanding the 6th Infantry at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. has forwarded to The Infantry School a check for one thousand dollars, representing the contribution of that historic organization toward the completion of the Doughboy Stadium, Colonel Stone was a member of the Refresher Course in the fall of 1924 where he came to know intimately the value of the great Infantry memorial project. The enthusiasm he took with him to his new outfit. The 6th Infantry has now the privilege of placing its coat of arms on one complete bay of the Stadium with its scaling ladder, alligator, and silver Initially organized under an Act of Congress of July 16, 1798, the 6th In-Congress of July 16, 1798, the 6th Infantry has a conspicuous record and a long list of distinguished battle honors. It fought in the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War, at Santiago in the Spanish-American War, in the Philippine Insurrection, and in the World War, besides a host of Indian wars. During the Seminole War, the regiment appeared in this section of the country where it bore the brunt of the battle of Lake Okeethe brunt of the battle of Lake Okee-chobee, December 25, 1837, an event commemmorated by the alligator on its coat of arms.

Its distinctive service under General Scott in Mexico at Churubusco and Chapultepec is commemorated by the scaling ladder, of the type with which the walls of Chapultepec were sur-mounted by the doughboys of the Sixth.

During the World War, the regiment was again in this neighborhood, co operating with the 11th Infantry to form the 51st and 52nd regiments, and to make up the fighting foot units of the famous Fifth Division. Their major battle achievement was the crossing of the Meuse River under German fire, an accomplishment which was rated by General Pershing as one of the finest feats of arms of the A. On the shield of the regiment the silver cross on a red field commemorates this event, a reproduction of the arms of the ancient lors of Dun.

HON. DWIGHT F. DAVIS NAMED WAR SECRETARY AS WEEKS RESIGNS

Youngest Cabinet Member Holds D S. C. as War Time Regimental Com-

Day before yesterday, in the National Capitol, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Wm. H. Taft administered the oath of office to the youngest Cabinet member, the Honorable Dwight F. Davis to be Secretary of War to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of John W. Weeks, who retires to private life.

The new Secretary has been acting for some time past as the Secretary of War due to illness of Mr. John W. Weeks, who on Tuesday presented his resignation to the President with much regret. Last spring, due to the illness of the Secretary, Mr. Davis was appointed Acting Secretary of War to fill the temporary vacancy.

The new cabinet member, a lawyer,

Nor should we forget Douthit, who is rarely given the ball, but is probably the most valuable "taking out" back for interference we have ever perform hereabouts. Because the gains are more frequently credited to others who carry the ball, Douthit is too frequently overlooked, though his work it usually is, that makes the gains pos-

In addition, the doughboys have an alternate backfield, Cole, Daniels, Hendrix, and Buck, of the first order. Its performances have been praltically on a par with those of the "A" team. It is a Benning product.

The Infantry line is far stronger than it ever has been. The line is practically new this season; but it has showed its mettle.

Whether this new and stronger line, and these backs improving as the weeks go by, are the equals of the Oglethorpe group, it is not possible to say. No two teams have ever met in Benning grounds with such equality of and prospects as these wto.

Predictions cannot be made as to the outcome. Oglethorpe will have to play ball to win. Infantry will have to play a better and harder game to win, than that which the Infantry has had to put forth this year.

Combortable and it was here that the Captains used to stay. There was a real door and a flight of steps and considerable protection over head. I remember one night I was in Captain Charley Muller's dugout, we being old friends in the 10th Infantry, and a shell hit right on top of the dugout. "Well," says Mullel, "That was another of those 6 inch shells." "You are getting to be a regular artillery man, Muller," says I. "Recognizing a shell by its sound." "It's very simple," says he, "The 3 inch shells don't come this far back and the 8 inch shells come right on through." 8 inch shells come right on through."
"And this," said McNulty, "Is a battalion headquarters and in that dugout is where the Major used to live. Two flights of steps there were and plenty of cover overhead. Even the cook for the officers mess wasn't afraid to sleep in it and one night the Chaplain took

And how about the Generals, asked the student cook, "Did they have dug outs too?"

"I don't rightly know," said McNulty, "But I did hear it said that it took an orderly half an hour to find the Brigade Commander one day in his dugout and I did hear one time that the Head of the S. O. S. was having him a dugout made but the war ended before they got it finished."

"And so the size of the whole thing is this," said McNulty "The Higher the Rank the Deeper the Dugout; but don't blame it on our own officers for the first trenches and dugouts were given us by the Frenchies and the others the Ph. 1878 308-Needham Bldg.

THE CONCRETE MIXER

Faithful Little Machine Turned Out All Concrete for Stadium

Dug out from the cavernous depths of a Quartermaster warehouse and borught in to the sun, the squatty little concrete mixer faithfully turned out the mixture that now is the Doughboy Memorial Stadium.

In the "News" this week there appears a picture of that same little machine in action. Originally it was steam driven and presented a very formidable appearance to the novices assigned to the stadium job. The steam boiler was soon found to be in-adequate to the needs of the "Builders," so with the usual acumen a heavy duty electric motor was unearthed and duty electric motor was uneartical and harnessed to the sturdy little machine and when all else failed and the patience and wits of the "Builders" was tried to the utmost they fell back on the Concrete mixer and as if by its example took heart once more and wheels were again set in motion.

Today if you wander over the reservation you will see the mixer somewhere performing its duty. Now that its main duty is over, other machines have been gotten from Muscle Shoals and the little machine now sits retired awaiting the time when all other mixers fail so that it may once more justify its name, "Old Faithful."

Germans left behind them in their haste and ach and everoney of us took what w could get and were thankful.

(Reprint from The Remount)

(Continued from Last Week) Fox hunting has been one of the most popular sports in England for over two hundred years, and following the stag, buck or hare with hounds dates back even farther, there being a record of runs with a pack called the "Royal Buckhounds" in 1362. Foxhunting has also been popular around Baltimore, Philadelphia, throughout Virginia, New York and the New England states almost since the establishment of the very early colonies. The "pink coat" most since the establishment of the very early colonies. The "pink coat" is the livery of the hunt, and is only worn by the Master, hunt servants and male members of recognized hunt clubs. The colors of their particular hunt club are worn on their coat collars, and initials of the hunt club on their buttons. The pink coats are only their buttons. The pink coats are only worn after the hunting season is formally opened; and in horse shows when showing three horses as a hunt team or in special classes for hunters. The pink coat is worn with a silk hat, white cord or leather breeches, and lack boots with brown tops. Only the Master of Hounds, Huntsman and Whips wear the velvet caps.

H., wore pink coats. No other women ever wear them.

I don't know whether to begin at the ton and work down, or begin at the bottom and work up, in giving my ideas as to what constitutes a correct informal habit.

I think I'll take the general appearance first. When you are dressed to ride you want to appear neat, inconspicuous, and businesslike, and, as Miss Maddison says, "Try to look as much like a man as possible. Any distinctly feminine touch to your costume makes it just that much less smart. Don't weaken and fluff your hair out over your ears, or wear a hat, though becoming, is not mannish. This is the one time in your life when you must not attempt to look pretty." If women would only realize how smart even the plainest of them look, and how stunning a pretty woman is, turned out correctly, in a well tailored habit, surely they would abandon their beribboned hats, lace collars and strange jackets for the conventional habit.

The derby is always the smartest

Whips wear the velvet caps.

Three women, as far as I can ascertain, have held the office of Master of Hounds: Mrs. T. H. R. Hughes who took over the Neuadd Fawr hounds, England, in 1902; Miss Edith Somerville who became Master of the West Carberry hounds, Ireland, in 1903, and hunted them for twelve years. Mrs. Allen Potts, M. F. H., is still hunting her own pack in Virginia. These three women alone, holding office as M. F. hat a woman can wear, and aside from ed in the back of the hat brim, the case they are not good for astride other end attached to the hanger in habits. A black coat is always good, the collar of the coat.

If you don't want to wear a derby, there are many style's of men's soft hats which are becoming and appro-priate for riding. Caps of any description, and particularly "jockey caps," are atrocious; they are worse than a lace boudoir cap would be on the golf course. Hats with wide soft brims are a nuisance as they flop up and down on a rider's face if there is any wind or the wind gets under them and blows them off altogether. A hat should fit well enough to stay on withing hat must be worn.

The hair should be drawn straight back from the face, over the ears, or behind the ears, and done up in the back in as small and neat an arrangement as possible. Hair ribbons are only worn by children. Neither rouge nor lipstick should ever be used. You'll probably acquire some good natural color by the time you return from your but it is rather dressy and for those who have only one coat I should advise a dark grey whipcord, pepper and salt mixture, brown whipcord, or gray or brown in a man's herringbone suiting. Wool O. D. is not at all bad for breeches, coat, or complete habit, but we see so much of it every day in the men's uniforms that I think another color is preferable. The coat should color is preferable. The coat should not be belted, should be fitted slightly at the waist, and hang to within about two inches of the knees, so as to give a long slim appearance when dismounted. The neck opening should be fairly should fit well enough to stay on without an elastic, but if it doesn't the elastic should be worn inconspicously under the knot of hair at the back of the head, and not under the chin like a five-year-old child. For summer wear, a straw sailor, or panama with narrow brim, is comfortable. There are also light colored felt hats available. A plain, tailored, mannish looking hat must be worn.

a long sim appearance when dismounted. The neck opening should be fairly high, like a man's coat, and the buttons should be small and inconspicuous. As I have already said, and shall probably repeat, a mannish appearance when dismounted. The neck opening should be fairly lacktriangledown E, of the Infantry School, on this, the Dedication Day of the Doughboy Memoriaal Stadium, having received a sacred trust and having put forth a memorial-built by the Infantry—to the memory of our fallen comrades that will stand as a lasting tribute, do give thanks to our brothers at arms and our loyal supporters.

Our battle history for centuries has been written in the blood of sacrifice. Our Army has offered the greatest sacrifice—the dead and wounded on the field of honor.

We know of no more fitting offering to the heroic display of manhood—a perpetual monument to those who held duty first. A tribute to the infantry dead by those living who follow in their footsteps-ever carrying on high, the Torch, proclaiming the motto, "Follow Me."

A DEED DONE

the Dedication of the Doughboy Memorial Stadium.

It is more than that.

It is a day when we may say that a deed is DONE

First came the thought, then the planning of the details to put that thought into such a form that it might be carried out, then the actual work of doing that which would produce the finished product.

We now have the product.

The Doughboy Memorial Stadium is a memorial to the heroic fallen doughboy and to an idea carried to its completion. It is a deed done.

Let us take from the building of this Doughboy Memorial Stadium, a thought.

To do a thing well requires time and energy. An undertaking that is half done is time and energy wasted. We should strive to do our work well so that it will not be necessary to go over it and expend time and energy to make it right.

If it requires a few more minutes to do a thing better, it is time well expended-you need not to expend the time required to go over your task making it right-you have saved time and energy that can be used in doing something else.

The way you do a task is a direct reflection on your character. If your Tomorrow is the day set apart for idea has been faithfully carried out and the job well finished it is bound to be good. It is done and need not be gone over to add a touch here and there to bring it to a completed state. You may dismiss it from your mind and go whole heartedly with a clear mind on to the new appointed task.

It is a simple thing to do your work thoroughly so that when it is finished it is done. Do not always be afraid that the pin will fall out because you should have used a nail. The old adage applies "Never send a boy to do a man's job!" Don't patch up a job when the same energy used will put up a new thing in its place that will not require further attention. Build into your character the ability to do so that when you have finished you know that nothing further is necessary. It is easy and may mean the difference between success and failure.

This Muscle Ennie fellow is too high ranking as he was nothing but a sargent during the war and now he is telling the king what to do. Thats all right as far as it goes and people in histery has often told kings what to do and got away with it as takes for inst. this rellow Bismark and the the cardinal of Richeloo. But you never herd of no diplomat telling a woman what to do and getting away with it. Women are suttle creatures, Ed, and if you double-x them they will get back at Muscle Ennie has resently been appointed a 'Cousin of the king' which is the same as a Kentucky Colonel in this country. He is getting pairilously near to his downfall when he begins to put on airs over their as these Italian fellows are awful cranky about democracy and brotherhood and as soon as a man begins to get too ambitious off goes his noodle. Remember Seezer? Next thing you know some friend of the Princesses will fix it for Muscle Ennie to attach some such degree as king or emper to his name and that will be his emper to his name and the swan song in Italy.

Well, Ed, I will sign off for this time. Oct. 7 i am going up to Pitchburg to see the 2d world serious game and i will give you a full report on it.

"Ye Olde Printe Shoppe Gossippe" Sergeant Paul Dever, foreman of the Hand Composition department, was discharger recently on the grounds of dependency, following the recent death of his father. The Print Shop personnel wish him well in civilian life.

Aside from the usual rush of Fall printing and the fact that Utilities is going to install a sink in the shop, nothing unusual is anticipated for the ensuing week.

However that may be, our little friend Nance has at last acquired one of those underslung air-cooled pipes. Like a Franklin, you don't have to put any water in 'em. Hot smoke is evidently too many for his interior this hot weather.

And speaking of acquaintances, Mr. Hard Boiled Hug is now sporting a real live COW. As yet we haven't run across any ads for lost stock. Some animals are quite popular between paydays. WE WONDER—Why Mr. Marks drives home so slowly?

If Miss Wash's middle name is Maria?

What size Mr. Hug's new trousers

Who cut Miss Cetler's hair?

Why Jiggs Cooper can't drive his own flivver home?

Any of the fellows in the company who are thinking that "two can live as cheap as one" can come to the lower squad room and look over the photograph gallery that one of the men has collected in the last few weeks. All sizes, shapes and nationalities.

HISTORY OF DOUGHBOY STADIUM PROJECT

In the early part of December, 1923, the newly appointed Athletic Council met with Colonel Bjornstad and at that time the members of the Council were acquainted with tentative plans of a simple Stadium to be used for various sports at The Infantry School. During the week of January 18th, 1924, the Infantry School Recreational Project was announced. Its main function being to foster a Stadium idea, draw being to foster a Stadium Idea, draw plans for an Athletic Centre. This was done. Plans were submitted and a series of blue prints drawn up. In early February of the same year upon the visit of Gen. Fanrsworth, then Chief of Infantry, the idea was sub-Chief of Infantry, the idea was submitted to him for approval which carried with it plans for a memorial stadium and associated projects. The Chief of Infantry approved of this project at this time. The plans of the Stadium Project were made public to the personnel of The Infantry School and instantaneously independ on the and instantaneously indorsed, on the 5th of March. The Secretary of War on March 10th set his approval on the Stadium Project and ground was officially broken. Orders from Headquarters during the week of March 14th created the Recreation Centre Board appointing Colonel Bjornstad as General Manager. During the week of May 2nd, General Wells with Colonel Bjornstad, dug the first shovel full of dirt at the Memorial Stadium site.

May 20th, 1924, General Pershing on the first clear day of his visit, ac-companied by the Commandant and his Assistants poured the first concrete into the Doughboy Stadium foundation.

Owing to uncertain weather conditions concrete was not poured into the erected moulds until the morning of September 16th when at 6 o'clock 90 soldiers began their siege of labor pouring 100 feet of concrete into the pouring 100 feet of concrete into the first section of the South Stands. For Fifteen hours these men labored and at 9:24 P. M., that night they had in the first section of the South Stands. poured 16 rows of seats 100 feet long, stopping but momentarily to grab a sandwich and a cup of coffee.

Construction work on the forms was continued until October 16th when at 6:15 A. M., the second 100 feet of stands was started. Working constands was started. Working tinuously throughout the day "Builders" completed their se second pouring three hours earlier than in the first section.

The construction

pouring continued until the last week in September, 1924 saw the pouring of the last section of the south stands.

After a meeting on December 24th the Recreational Centre Board open its sale of boxes to the entire service.

Week after week Infantry Regiments sent in their contributions to the Memorial Stadium Project. On January 15th, 1925, the Cavalry forwarded to the Commandant of The Infantry School a check for $1000.00. Money has been pouring in steadily the last contribution to be received being from the 6th Infantry received at Fort Ben-ning October 12, 1925.

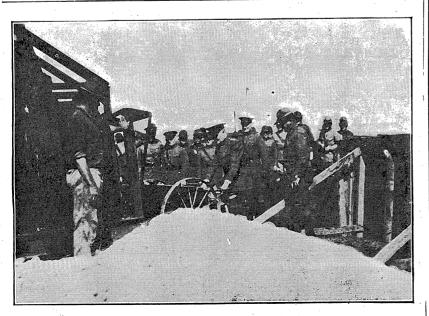

Saturday, September 26th, The Doughboy Memorial Field was christened by the Blue Team when they defeated Stetson University of De-Land, Florida, 51 to 7. October 10th, 1925, The Doughboy Eleven once more met success in its encounter with Transylvania, whom they defeated 33-0.

The week of August 21st, 1925 saw the approval of Plans for the new Post Exchange building which will form the west end of the Doughboy Stadium. Excavation for the cellar of this new building is well under way Dedication of the Doughboy Memorial Stadium will take place Saturday October 17, 1925, at 1:30 P. M.

It has been some time since this organization has been heard of through this column, which proves we are on the jump. When we came back from the jump. our march to Florida we were kept busy for a while cleaning the Georgia clay and Florida sand from our material. Then we were chosen to compete for the Knox Trophy which kept us on the jump. Now we are pre-paring to take the Gunner's Examina-tion and in order to turn out a large number of Experts we have to brush up a little.

We had another man leave us last McCallum left us via the $$$$ route.

In the recent rain storm we had there was one man who stayed indoors until the waters subsided. Poor Sands his feet are so big we cannot get boots to fit them.

Strange things happen but this beats ne. "Sparky" Gardner left on a 3 nonths furlough 2 months ago. He months furlough 2 months ago. He left and was not heard of for some time. The 30th of last month he showed up and reported for duty which shocked every one. We have yet to shocked every one. We have yet to learn whether it was hunger or a broken heart that sent him back so soon.

There is one man in this organization who prefers doing Post" to "Burning slum". He answers to the name of Nahring.

Cox wont wear khaki chevrons. He claims they are too hard to be seen.

Mac Antley formerly a member of this organization later of the Q. M. at Screven fell in love with "B" Battery on his last hitch. He is flipping hot cakes with the same skill he did when he was with us before.

In order to hasten the return of the detachment from the railroad construction camp to the Post, a detachment of 12 men were sent out from camp on last Saturday to assist in the installaton of the gravel pump, which has been giving more or less trouble recently. It is expected that the entire company re-assembled again within about two weeks.

Sergt. Dowling and his cohorts, assisted by Corpl. Hall and a corps of carpenters, have been engaged during the past week in the construction of a new shed for the trucks of the portable Map Reproduction plant. Although the new structure is of a somewhat skel-etonized nature, it is devoutly hoped that it may be earnest of more permanent structures to come—for the purpose of housing the budding engineers hereabouts, rather than equipment.

With the opening day of the Chattahoochee Valley Fair, Monday next, well-nigh upon us, the Engineers, who expect to "step out" with a number of unique exhibits, are given over as a body to an unwonted and feverish orgy of activity—reminding one of the fabled "Feast of the Sparrow Hawk," in the "days of old, etc."

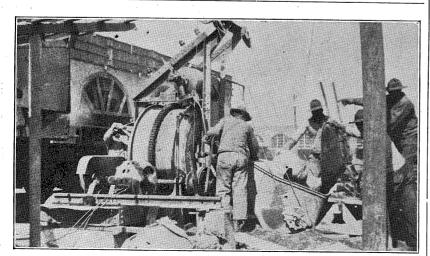

The central attraction of the Engineer exhibits, of course, will be the Map Reproduction plant. Movement of the trucks of that organization to Columbus was begun on Wednesday, October 14, under the supervision of Sergt. Greenfield, in charge of Engi-Sergt. Greenfield, in chargeneer Motor Transportation.

Pvt. 1Cl. Phillips, better known as "Chief," spent several days as a patient in the post hospital during the past week, suffering with an infected hand, the result of a burn received while working on a motor. The "Chief" made the unfortunate mistake of taking hold of a hot exhaust pipe. We are very glad to welcome him back to the company after only a short stay in the hospital.

During the current week the heavy ponton equipment has been given new coat—or several coats—of paint.

During the performance of this operation, Corpl. Letlow set world's record for swishing the brush. He painted two whole boats in an hour, or one boat in two hours, or all of them in two hours, or something like that; anyway, what he did was never before heard of "on land or sea."

Life these days is decidedly drab and matter-of-fact. Private Mullin, who is a veritable source of continuous Meeting their fiercest opponents of the early season in the Doughboy Stadium last Saturday afternoon, the Big Blue Tide of the Infantry School defeated Transylvania College of Lexington, Ky., conquerors of Cincinnati, by a score of 33-0, in a game much closer and harder than the score would indi-

A break of luck in grabbing a block ed kick just on the goal line, gave the Infantry a good start. But the collegians were not discouraged and fought harder and harder as the game progressed. Unable to gain consistently through the doughboy line the Transylvania team resorted to forward passing and skirting the ends.

The aerial game which had enabled them to defeat Cincinnati broke down against the Infantry anti-air defense, against the Infantry anti-air defense, however long or wide their passes might be. It was no unusual thing for one of their heaves to be knocked down by the Infantry "safety" and the few passes they did complete netted sensational gains. The vast proportion, nevertheless, bounded on the whitewash lines or were publied by whitewash lines or were nabbed by whitewash these claudoughboy backs.

"Bebe" Daniels, the fleet 130-pound halfback from the 29th Infantry, who showing better and better form, all season, pulled ball carrying of stellar grade. He engineered an off-tackle play in the third quarter for a sixteen yard run to a touchdown that takes rank as a classic. He started for the end, cut inside at right angles, swayed to the right to dodge the secondary defense, and swept speedily down the side line for a pretty run and a neat score.

The work of the team as a whole was very satisfactory from the stand-point of developing material for the President's Cup eleven. The enlisted line charged harder than the line of the "A" team. The enlisted backfield, pilotted by Lieut. Cole of the 29th Infantry, and including the Indian Hendisted Days of the 19th Infantry, and Days of the 19th Infantry and Days of the 19th Infantry. fantry, and including the Indian Hendrix and Daniels and Buck of last years President's Cup champions, shone in striking fashion. Their ground gaining was fully as good as that of the "A" team. Buck drives into the line hard and intelligently. Daniels has acquired many of the Smythe proclivities, and Hendrix has learned many of the McQuarrie tricks. Hendrix goes through the melee with his eyes open, sidesteps neatly so as this eyes open, sidesteps neatly so as to slip into the momentary gap in the scrimmage line, and pivots out of grasping arms. He is also a kicker of no mean ability.

The performance of the squad as a whole indicates a tangible degree of improvement, as it should be at the improvement, as it should be at the end of the preliminary games and approaching the dangerous mid-season opponents. Oglethorpe's crew, which meet the Infantry Saturday on the occasion of the dedication of the Doughboy Stadium, is a dangerous outfit. A 20-0 victory over Center College to the credit of the Oglethorpe Stormy Petrels proves them to be far different proposition from Stetson, Loyola, and Transylvania, strong, well trained, and hard fighting as they proved to be. A week of solid work is in store for the Infantry before the Oglethorpe contest, which, from the dope sheets, is still anybody's game.

VISITING TEAMS FEEL AT HOME AT WEST POINT

A very fine custom has grown up at the start of football games, among the Corps of Cadets at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y. Both wings of the West Point Sta-

As they come through the gates in the stands onto the field, the entire Corps of Cadets rises and the entire Corps of Cadets rises and stands while the famous West Point Band plays the most popular football song of the visiting team. At the same time, the colors of the visiting team is run up on their flag staff.

DEDICATION GAME WILL DRAW BIG SPORT CROWD

garding Crowds

A warning has been sent out by the authorities at the Infantry School that the spectators at the dedication of the Memorial Doughboy Stadium and the dedication football game Saturday afternoon, be in their seats by 1:30 P. M. on that afternoon. The Provost Marshal is busy making plans for the handling and parking of cars at the Recreation Center. The Military Po-lice are ready to police the roads and to direct the autoists to their parking space that has been set aside for them.

The troops that will attend in a body will have a rehearsal so that they may get to their seats with the least possible trouble and waste of time. Every possible detail is being worked out.

Crowds at sporting affairs are interesting things. Leave out horse-racing, where the betting element attracts spectators. Leave out automobile racing, which is on the decline. Leave out Dempsey-Firpo matches for heavyweight championship of the world, which are rare exceptions in the pres-ent days of procrastinating pugilists. Leaving these out, we find a general truth. Athletic sports attract crowds in direct proportion to the number of contestants on either side and the degree of teamwork and co-ordination required. Football undoubtedly draws the biggest crowds, with eleven players on a side. Baseball is next, with nine on a side. Rowing races—like Pough-keepsie and the Yale-Harvard contests —come next, with eight men in a shell. Basketball is probably the next, with five court men on each team. And did you ever go to a track meet, and notice the comparatively empty stands. Even at the Olympics, except for the gala occasion of the formal opening day, occasion of the formal opening day, the stands are only sprinkled with spectators—and the contests are practically confined to individual competition. The Franklin field relays draw big crowds, by dint of drawing very wide entry lists, and also by reason of the fact that four men are on each relay. Nurmi's appearances are also somewhat of an exception because as somewhat of an exception, because as in the Dempsey-Firpo affair, all possible spectators will turn out to see a world-beater well advertised. The general truth is true; sports attract spectators in proportion to the number of players on each side.

To take a single example, Columbia University once went to Princeton to contend with that college in Cross Country honors. The two institutions clashing with spiked shoes were among the six leading schools in the east. On the same day, also on Princeton's home grounds. Princeton met a fifthrate college in a football contest. The route of the cross-country run was devoid of onlookers, even at the finish line only a small group was collected The football stands were jammed with rooters. The elevenman teams were a greater attraction than the one-man efforts in the cross country run.

At a football game, you see and anpreciate the dashing ground gaining of flashy backs like Smythe and Mc-Quarrie, the sensational forward pass receiving of ends like Sweeney and Kgelstrom. But what you really like to watch is the fine co-ordination of individual efforts, the smoothness of collective power. You get that to a superlative degree from watching the working of a well-trained eleven-man

DOUGHBOY TEAM IN FIRST INTERSECTIONAL GAME

INFANTRY SPIRIT PREDOMINATES ON DEDICATION DAY

Athletic Center Added to Recreational Project by Gala Ceremony

Dedication day has at least come to the Doughboy Memorial Stadium. The object for which infantrymen have striven for months and months has at last been accomplished.

Saturday, October 17th marked a 27-7 football victory for the Infantry Big Blue Tide over the Stormy Petrels of Oglethorpe University. It saw the physical completion of the magnificent physical completion of the magnificent structure of steel and concrete, which in its flexibility and sturdiness, as General Allen said, typifies the essen-tial character of splendid infantry.

Within its confines there gathered distinguished guests, including the Chief of Infantry, the Quartermaster General, former Assistant Commandant Brig. Gen. A. W. Bjornstad, and the newest student product of the school, Brig. Gen. LeRoy Eltinge, who com-pleted his refresher course at Benning within the month.
In addition there were assembled vast numbers of spectators. The ceremonies commenced with a formal march-in of the fighting troops of the command, the war strength units of the 29th Infantry, the 24th Infantry, the 15th Tank Battalion, and the 83rd Field Artillery. After standing massed on the gridiron for the initiation of (Continued on Page 2.)

The pony class which opened the now Wednesday evening was competed for by children under the age of twelve years. It was won by Bobby Frakes, the red ribbon was presented to "Cowboy" Bobby Dunphy. BIG BLUE TIDE MEETS CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY AT DOUGHBOY STADIUM

Catholic University Heavy Team for Saturday's Game

Catholic University, located in Washington, D. C., is a new gridiron invader in this section, coming to face the Big Blue Tide of the Infantry School this Saturday with the heaviest team the Infantry has met this season.

Hitherto, the doughboys have outweighed as well as outplayed their opponents. This week they will have the novel experience of being outweighed. If they are not also to be out-played, they must depend on speed and power instead of upon bulk and size. Nor is the average all, every dough-boy will be outweighed. From end to ond, the Catholics average 1881-2 lbs., sixteen pounds per man more than the Infantry with Bertelman out of the lineup. Their backfield is lighter, all of the ball carriers weighting between 160 and 165. It is a fast ground-160 and 165. It is a fast, ground-gaining quartet, with proven ability at running back kicks and proceeding around the ends.

Maurer inside the flanks last Saturday, will have their hands full. Playing against Villanova in Washington last Saturday, decisive conquerors of Rutgers, Foley of the Catholics netted substantial gains around the ends on occasion. His kicking of a wet ball on a muddy field was a feature of the victory, making phenomenal yardage on his punts and putting a field goal between the posts for the score that made the game safe in the tight minutes of the third quarter.

In their right end, Mayer, the visi-tors have a flank defense of the first order. He recovered a fumble that order. He recovered a fumble that paved the way to a touchdown march by Adams and Manfreda, and stopped play after play. He is known as one of the finest linesmen in the vicinity of the District of Columbia.

Catholics heavy line covered itself with glory, presenting a stonewall defense whenever Villanova secured the ball in dangerous areas. The doughboy forwards will have to be on their mettle to out-charge and out-fox the forwards of the Red and Black.

The General was keenly interested in the practice of the big Infantry Team and watched the Coaches put the boys thru their paces. His interest got the better of him and he assembled the Infantry squad and complimented them on their past victories and their sportsmanlike conduct. He cautioned them to remember that they had a double mission to perform—to represent the Infantry and also the Army against the best of the Navy and Marine teams. He recalled to them that the eyes of the athletic world were upon them in their approaching game for the President's Cup, and that the hope of the Army was in their hands.

A composite company from the 29th Infantry escorted the Chief of Infantry to the Upatoi Bridge and formed line on the road side and stood in silent salute as the General left the garrison. A salute from the Doughboys to their Chief.

the exercises, they took their places in the stands and blotted out the in the stands and blotted out the white of the solid concrete with the long lines of khaki. The guidons and colors which had been massed ahead of the troops, fluttered from the top most rows of seats.

The real feature of the day was the spirit of the crowd, the enthusiasm of the assembled doughboys, the com-bined singing of football songs by the crowded multitude of soldiers, and the splendid organized cheerng by the troops.

The dreams of months have come true, the dreams of a really powerful team, the dreams of a suitable playing field, the dreams of a memorial stadium, and—most important of all! -the dreams of unshakable morale and the fighting infantry spirit cheering a fighting infantry eleven.

Months of labor had had their re-ward. Months of subscription campaign, and months of hard toil by the Benning doughboys, were justified. The feeling was everywhere evident The feeling was everywhere evident that the Doughboy Stadium was a monument to the Infantry of today as well as to the fallen Infantrymen of 1918. As General Wells remarked: "Just as Wellington said that the battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of England, so might men of the future sav that our battles of the future will have been won on the gridirons of America, and more especially on the stadium grounds of Benning and The Infantry School."

1. There are embellishments yet to be added but for all practical purposes another unit of our recreation center project has been completed. Doughboy Stadium, the tribute of living Infantrymen to their dead comrades, now takes its place in the athletic facilities of our School. It is appropriate to now record the fact that the erection of the Stadium has been made possible by the generous contribof Infantrymen and their utions friends and by the willing labor of soldiers at Fort Benning. sport, develops the spirit of team-work, cooperation and leadership, attribute indispensable to an Army. Wellington said that the Battle of Waterloo was won on the cricket fields of England. Likewise perhaps it may be said that the Battles of St. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne were won on the football fields of America.

Please accept my own congratula-tions and those of the War Dept on the completion of the Doughboy Stadium period the Infantry was given Fort Benning as its educational center period the officers and men stationed there have themselves improved the Post until it has become an Infantry Home period, the whole Infantry has appreciated the importance of making this home one of which it can be proud period Entirely out of their own conributions the members and friends of the Infantry have erected this structure which is like a memorial to their glorious dead and an athletic center for the living period I wish to express my deep admiration for the esprit de corps the Infantry has displayed and my regrets that I cannot be present at the ceremonies.

Major Denson's Garden Receives Official Recognition

Reaping the fruits of much labor Major Denson, Qtrs. 14-448, is now the proud possessor of an order from the Commandant of the Infantry School to the effect that the lawn and grounds of the above mentioned quarters are an object to gladden the eye of those who pass by the Major's door.

As one passes up the walk to visit banks of flowers and stately shrubs meet the gaze. While about the door adding to the welcome there trails the bean vines and other decorative greens.

The grass, despite the hot summer sun, is green and closely clipped. One thing is certain, that the occupant of that house has expended much labor and time to bring the grounds up to their present state. It is true that there are many other splendid gardens and lawns on every hand but there abounds in this one plot a poetry of nature that caused official comment to be set to record.

If the cold winds so recently descended upon us have dulled the beauty of this garden, you have to gaze but elsewhere on this page and see a picture of what can be done with ones afternoons to help beautify the Infanbut try School.

A COMPLIMENT

Recently, there appeared on the editorial page of the Camp Lewis News an article that included the Infantry School News among the Army's best papers. Ever since the Camp Lewis News was first published it has exchanged with the Infantry School News and the editor of the Infantry School News feels highly complimented that another service paper has derived any inspiration from "News" and has been able to use any of its articles. The "News" likewise has picked up many and valuable ideas from the columns of the Camp Lewis paper and it is hoped that the cooperation that has been so successful in the past may continue in the future.

Evidently Mis' Cynthia's memory is short or her years are few for we are not so antique ourself and our memory is not remarkable except at meal time and yet we can remember a day when all one could see of Mi Lady was the back of her neck where her veil didn't reach.

The long skirts of that day swept everything before them, literally, and the feminine headgear resembled a roof garden.

She hid the light of her countenance beneath a bushel (more or less) of mosquito netting and the general Shape she was in, seemed Terrible.

And yet she was as fascinating as usual and for that reason she may have been comfortable.

We are not going to comment on Mis' Cynthia's remarks on men with marcelled hair. We have already said enough.

It is perfectly proper to wear canvas or cloth leggins, or leather puttees, with high, flat heeled heavy tan shoes, but, of course, they never look as well as boots. Cloth or canvas leggins will not give the grip that leather against leather does, and puttees have a mean habit of turning around one's leg while riding.

BLUE TIDE DEFEATS LAST YEARS S. I. A. A. CHAMPS

STORMY PETRELS FAIL TO TERRIORIZE DOUGHBOYS

Oglethorpe's Scalp Added to Infantry Belt

Infantry's hardest game to date, marking the transmission from preliminary contests to the fierce mid-season clashes which are difficult to win, resulted in a striking victory over Oglethorpe University by a score of 27-7.

Before the kick-off the doughboy supporters were very doubtful of the result. The Stormy Petrels arrived to face the Big Blue Tide with the strongest team in their history, a team that had stopped the mighty Wycoff of Georgia Tech and had staged a phenomenal series of line drives against the Golden Tornado.

Yet, no sooner had the kick-off been downed and Oglethorpe started its offensive from scrimmage, than the khaki stands knew they had a real eleven. It had been no great feat to check their previous opponents, and to defeat Stetson, 51-7; Loyola, 45-0; McPherson, 32-7; and Transylvania, 33-0.

It was a great feat to stop three successive line plunges by the powerful Kilgore on the first three plays of the day. Not an inch did he gain, and the attack stopped short.

Thereafter it was McQuarrie, Smythe, Swantic, and Douthit against a remarkably well drilled line, gaining with adequate regularity, picking up a few yards here and a few there, and once in a while many yards.

Veteran as he is, McQuarrie shone. His first touchdown was made by keen headwork when the hole in front of him closed up and Oglethorpe left the gate open at one side. His second touchdown was made carrying a big defensive player on his back for nearly five yards.

Smythe made his advances for twelve, thirteen, and sixteen yards, when he gained at all, and once he went 43 yards and only stopped when run outside the boundary and into a water bucket on the side lines.

Infantry faced an exceptionally good team, but the Infantry was at its very best and consistently forced the attack into enemy territory. The single Oglethorpe touchdown was achieved by a neat play off-tackle behind perfect interference by means of which the speedy Maurer went 53 yards for a touchdown.

24th INFANTRY TEAM KEEPS PACE WITH BLUE TIDE RECENT VICTORIES

Members of the football team of the 24th Infantry are receiving congratulations for their return to winning form and their re-entry into the scoring column, after nothing-nothing games against Tuskegee and Alabama Normal, with a decisive victory over Morris Brown in Atlanta last week end.

In two seasons, the 24th gridsters have had their goal line crossed only once, and then in a game they won with ease. Their scores follow:

24th Inf. 0, Morris Brown 0. 24th Inf. 58, Baptist Jericul 0. 24th Inf. 40, Alabama Normal 7. 24th Inf. 41, Clarke Univ. 9. In 1925:

24th Inf. 0, Tuskegee 0. 24th Inf. 0, Alabama Normal 0. 24th Inf. 19, Morris Brown 0.

The next scheduled home game is with Clarke University on the gridiron of the Doughboy Stadium on Armistice Day.

In the Morris Brown game, last week end, the 24th team displayed exceptional condition and splendid results from the hard working through which Captain Eberle has been putting them. Eleven men started the contest, and played through to the finish. In four quarters of only 12 minutes each, it is difficult to run up a big score. The 24th had the ball almost on Morris Brown's goal line when the first half ended. The local team pushed the attack all the way, and the ground gaining of the two Williams's in the backfield was the feature of the performance,

CLEAN UP AT BENNING PLACES POST AMONG SHOW PLACES OF SOUTH

That part of the Post coming constantly under the eyes of our visitors and friends took on the aspect of a Municipal Golf Links during the past week. As one oldtimer exclaimed, "I never saw Fort Benning look cleaner or finer since I first came here back in 1919." Due to the splendid work done by the Police Officer, the clean-up of the Post was done in a very systematic way and as a result, Benning today looks like the private estate of one of our Florida Millionaires.

Now that the efforts of the Police Officer have given us the start in the right direction it is up to every individual of the garrison to do his bit toward helping the good cause along by keeping rubbish, etc., from accumulating around his own front and back door.

Many visitors will be coming to Benning in the near future and it is up to us to show our home in its holiday attire at all times just as it is today.

PROJECTION EXPERT ARRIVES TO INSTALL THEATRE EQUIPMENT

Mr. Hill, it will be remembered, is the inventor of n any improvements for the motion picture projection system which makes use of high tensity electrie lights which surplants the carbon arc system. The light is far superior from a safety Fire is far less possible with angle. his device.
The Fort Benning Theatre has very large throw as he calls it—the distance from the machine to the screen. This installation will be a crowning feature for the expert.

It is also understood that the interior lighting is to be handled by Mr. Hill who intends to install an indirect sys tem that cuts out the eyetiring glare but completely lights the house.

There are several other interesting features that he will install while here that are not to be announced at the present time but which he promises will be most astonishing in nature.

It is estimated that Mr. Hill be busy on the work at the New Theatre for about a month. He intends to make this job his "best ever" and when it is completed it will rank with the finest in the Army if not the best.

I don't like sleeveless coats, but they are permissible. Lots of women who dress very well for riding wear them, and have told me that such and the climate is very hot, you are going to be the wind in India and other hot countries. If such a post was so hot in summer that to be hot while riding, and I don't see how sleeves in a light coat can make any appreciable difference in comfort. The few women who go in for polo of course wear sleeveless coats, but they have to have absolute freedom for their arms. In any case a sleeveless coat does not belong in the show ring. A lot of people, if they read this far in this article, are going to say all very well, but good riding clothes are expensive." Yes, I admit it, but I can't think of any place where your money goes farther than in riding clothes. You can put a hundred dollars into an evening dress, and wear it this winter and next winter. By the time you've worn it two seasons, you begin to get tired of it; it's begun to look a little shabby, and you are get-ting self conscious about appearing so many times in this same old dress. It's probably gone out of style into the bargain. The same holds true of an afternoon dress, suit or coat, but styles don't change in riding habits. You go to a good habit maker this year, and put one hundred dollars into your riding habit; with a reasonable amount of care that habit will be in service anywhere from five to ten years from now, and will still be a smart, good looking habit.

I wouldn't advise parents to buy an expensive habit and good boots for a growing child, ofr they'll probably be out-grown in a year. Also, these women who "think they'll try riding and see how they like it" had better not order a habit and boots until they decide whether they are going to become enthusiastic riders, or are going to ride ten or twelve times a year. If they are of the last named they don't belong in the show ring. Any woman who rides well enough to enter the show ring should feel that she must be dressed properly. If she will buy good boots and have a good taller one. good boots and have a good tailor, one who specializes in riding habits, make her habit she will certainly get her money's worth in the wear of her clothes, and besides that will have the comfortable feeling that she is well dressed in any company.

Before closing I want to say a few Before closing I want to say a few words about your horse's appointments for the show ring, particularly saddle classes. I have seen lots of women enter the ring with their horses turned out in a heavy French military field bridle, white halter shank, and large white saddle cloth. Now one thing desired for a ladies' saddle horse is quality, and no horse can show his is quality, and no horse can show his quality wearing a French field bridle; they are heavy, clumsy looking bridles (though very good for the service they are intended for), and have a particularly bad feature in that extra throat strap which goes all around the horse's neck, about an inch behind the crown piece. It gives a horse a thick, coarse appearance at the throat, just where you want him to look fine. The white halter shank is quiet inappropriate for a ladies' saddle horse in the ring, and a ladies' saddle horse in the ring, and tends to shorten the appearance of the horse's neck, which should look long. If your horse has a short back and is well ribbed out, why cover up these two good points with a white saddle cloth? Show all of the horse you can to the judges. Don't suggest to them that there is something there you want that there is something there you want to hide. Show your horse with as little extra equipment on him as pos sible. A light bridle, and plain saddle are all he needs. Any sort of martin-gale advertises to the judges that he has bad tricks of some sort, and he's apt to lose out on manners if nothing else.

A GOOD CUSTOM

There has grown up in a small way a nice little custom which is not only worth fostering, but worth while to those who follow it.

Officers living at the Fort are inviting luncheon guests on the days of football games, friends from town, all proceeding to the Doughboy Stadium together.

The procedure is convenient.

It saves the commuters the necessity of going back to Columbus to pick up their families.

The transportation pools of officers leave so many automobiles in the city, that there is always plenty of motor power left for the wives.

HIGH LIGHTS IN 24th INFANTRY HISTORY

Regiment Dates Back to War of 1812

While the organization of the 24th Infantry dates from June 26, 1812, the present regiment (colored) dates from March 3, 1869, and was formed by a consolidation of the 38th and 41st Infantrys (colored) at Fort McKavitt, Texas. The regiment engaged in much fighting with the Indians and made for itself a splendid name. In 1872 it was transferred to the Rio Grande districts, where the duties were much less hazardous, though filled with the usual trials and tribulations of frontier

The next few years were spent in exploring the then unknown plains of Texas and New Mexico under General (then Lt. Col. Shafter), and in 1880 the regiment moved to Indian Territory to take charge of the thousands of Indians on the reservations in that country. After several years of guarding Indians the regiment in 1896 was sent to Fort Douglas, Utah where it stayed until it left for the Spanish War in April. 1898.

The regiment arrived in Tampa, Florida May 2nd, 1898 and on June 14th sailed for Cuba, arriving off Santiago on the 19th. On the 27th, march was made toward Santiago. Entering the battle zone the regiment, crossed the San Juan river, continued the advance up San Juan hill, and in conjunction with the 6, 16th and 30th regiments of Infantry captured the San Juan Block House.

On the 15th of July, the surrender of the City of Santiago being completed, the regiment volunteered for duty at the yellow fever stricken hos-pital at Siboney. The services of the men of the regiment were heroic at this death stricken place and deserving of highest honors. It should be noted in passing that of the 456 men who marched to Siboney, only 24 escaped sickness. So depleted was the regiment that when forty one days later, on August 26th, it marched to the train, there were but nine officers and 198 men present in ranks.

Arriving back in the States the regiment was sent to Fort Douglas, Utah and Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming where it remained until it was order Wyoming ed to the Philippine Islands where it arrived July 23, 1899. The record of events is one of which the regiment is well proud, and is replete with valor-ous and daring personal and organious and daring personal and organizatal feats.

In 1902 the regiment returned fo the States, where it was split up into several groups stationed in the far west, and so remained until 1905 when it again sailed for the Philippines. There was still considerable hospitality in the Islands so that the regiment again did its full share of arduous duty.

During the spring of 1908 the regiment returned to the United States, and was sent to New York State for Returning again to the Philippine Islands in 1912, the regiment was stationed there until the latter part of 1915. The next station was at Fort D. A. Russell for a short period when was sent to the scenes of its early history on the Mexican Border. The regiment took part in General Pershing's Punitive Expedition into Mexico in 1916, returning to Columbus, N. M. in February, 1917. The usual border particularly approximately approximately provided to the control of the control der patrol duties were performed until 1921 when the regiment was ordered to its present station at Fort Benning. With such a history behind it, it is not to be disputed that the regimental motto "Semper Paratus" is well earned and lived up to.

"I told the lady what was what last night."

"And how did you come out."

"On a stretcher."

Regimental Hdgrs. Co.

All the boys are back from the Fair and believe me they sure were glad to get back.

Pvt. Sistare leaves us this week per E. T. S. after putting in one year he claims he is thru, but we are not so sure as to that.

Pvt. Williams left us yesterday via the dependency route.

Larry Mitzen has only a few days think it over as he gets out on the 5th of November, and he still says he is undecided as to whether he will take on again or not. We think though that he will take out another stack as he has led the life of Riley on this last hitch.

Two new recruits joined us this week the entire company wish them the best of luck and we are all pulling for them.

We are still watching for the day to come that we move to the new barracks, they sure would be nice these cold mornings.

Howitzer Company
Private Ralph Smith who is now on pass at Eclectic, Ala., was unable to return to his company at the expiration of his pass due to important business. Private Smith is interested in Florida Real Estate and his enterprises along this line has been on a large scale.

Pvt. Calvin Reid was honorably discharged last Monday at the expira tion of one year services with the 29th Infantry. Pvt. Reid has returned to civil life and will assist his father at his farm at Campbelle, S. C.

that isn't all. Pomerantz is very quiet about it. We continue to grab off prizes and honors for the Battalion.

Speaking of honors, Pomerantz is leaving us this week. If it is not an honor to have him go at least it is for the good of public service. Some one step up this way Sunday morning and watch all the smiling faces in the company.

Our Battalion Sergeant Major has finally left us. Sergt. Biggerstaff is now at the University of Tennessee, teaching military tactics and science.

1st Bat. Hdqrs. & Hdqrs. Co. Jew Kenter has been Honorably Dis-charged per the purchase route, he must be doing pretty good business in the Weenie Stand that he owns up in Rose Hill.

Pvt. Reiman is getting in trim for the Football season as he sure does make some mean gains around the ends in the mess hall with such interferences as Black and Reese. Pyt. Giles is geeting in trim also for the team as quarterback he sure threw out some mean signals for the slum and bread.

Pyt. Moody is on the sick list with a stiff knee from trying to make a gain thru Black and Reiman and Reese with the Slum Dish the pass to Vines was incomplete when Black hit him low for slum.

Company "B"

Our crack volley ball team, led by Sergt. Stark, a sheik of Tennessee, defeated the crack volley ball team of Company "A" 29th Infantry, last Sunday in two exciting games by a score of 21 to 5-and 21 to 20. Both games or 21 to 5 and 21 to 20. Both games were witnessed by a big crowd.

The entire personnel of this company wishes to extend to Companies "A", "B", and "C", who took part in the Escort of Honor Platoon to Generals Allen and Hart, its hearty appreciation in their behavior and discipline manifested. Captain J. H. Rustemeyer, who commanded the Escort of Honor Platoon was highly commended by Colonel Gowen and the Battalion Commander, Major Griswold, in the spirit displayed by the men who took part.

Company "D"
Stonewall Jackson Horton alias Red the Tinsmith opines that there are too many rules and regulations in this man's army. You shouldn't be so much of a Bolshevist, Red.

The top kick and John D. Brown of "B" Company sure got all wet at the football game Saturday.

"Baby" Willworth the pride of "D" company manages to break away from the Bakers and Cooks school and the post theatre long enough to pay the company a flying visit.

Ye scribe does not expect to be a member of the Gold Brick platoon much longer. Yoho for the mule skinning. Get back there, Agnes.

Five good ways to make yourself a popular soldier:

Go in for supper without a blouse. Ask the colonel for a cigarette. Try to chisel show fare after spong-ng all your next pay day.

Tell the top kick he is all wrong. Raise a rough house after tattoo.

Company "H"

Changes in the company have been numerous within the past month, as Captain Lyons leaving the company. Lt. Williamson taking command.

Sergt. Joyce owes 2 bits company lls. (It almost broke his heart, for the thought that box of Burts was a

The Guild has various worthy accomplishments to its credit among them being a donation of $250 to the Post School, the furnishing of a complete layette to the Women's Ward at the hospital, the buying of a handsome Piano for the chapel, and other smaller improvements in and around the chapel. The Guild also donated $100 to start the Chapel Building and furnishing fund. The money for these things was raised very successfully in The Protestant Chapel Guild of Fort and initiative of the ladies. A large applied will held its monthly meeting attendance is desired at this meeting to help forward the good work.

As the past week was a week of gala affairs, such as the "Foot-ball Classic" the Fair and a few other things including rain, we didn't have much time to devote to snooping therefore we will not require very much space this week, just allow us to mention that our "Allstar Volley Ball Team" is as good as ever, in fact we don't believe that we can be beaten by any one team in this neck of the woods. Of course we must call your attention to our efficiency, our last week's report showed twelve thousand copies of printing received and in return fifty three thousand copies finished and delivered, hard to

Mrs. Smith, our typist, left last week on a well-deserved 15-day leave for Florida, and the typewriter remained silent for a couple of days, but it has resumed its old tune in the hands of Miss McGlaun, who seems to be at home with us.

Corpl. Merritt seems to have taken a sudden interest in typewriting or perhaps he is taking vocal training. At any rate he will make good because he has thrown his heart into it. Sergt. He wonders why Sergt. Pool carries an empty glass-case half of the time when he can't see without the glasses. Sergt. Crawford has grown a moustache, and his camouflage is complete to the extent that he isn't recognizable when he comes around, and we are missing him. In fact, the boys don't talk about George any more.

Quartermaster Detachment

Sergts. Benton and Warren have turned from their furloughs and have settled down to another three year grind. Sergt. Webster is also back in our midst, but doesn't stay that long.

Tech. Sergt. Smith is enjoying a few days furlough touring or rather detouring Florida. With repairs being made on all roads in general it is no longer touring but detouring.

The Chattahoochee Valley Exposition was good and enjoyed by all members of the detachment who attended.

Pyt. "Chesty" Hackler has quit boxing, and is going out for the Battalion Football Squad. Be sure no one finds your face to step on, Chester.

Some one had better inform Pfc Chambless not to rob the babies of their paraphenalia the next time he attends the County Fair as an escort to the Tanks. He came back with a graduated bottle.

Pluvius Fails to Dampen Infantry

Staging a powerful comeback after being out-scored for the first time this season, the Big Blue Tide last Satur-day fairly swamped the husky eleven om Catholic University by the score of 26-7.

The team that had matched 120 yards gained from scrimmages on the first half against the 176 of the Infantry, stepped a meager 28 yards in the second half to the 131 of the doughboys.

Infantry scored first, by a touch-down march punctuated with neat runs by Smythe and line plunges by Swan-tic and McQuarrie. But the Brook-landers returned strong, and by virtue of a run-back of twenty yards, a few small gains, a forward pass for twenty yards, and a second forward pass for forty yards, followed by a kicked goal, took the lead: 7-6.

The rest of the game was either a mid-field see-saw on even terms, threedowns-and-kick many times in suc-cession, until the doughboys shook loose for three fine assaults bunching first downs in quick succession for three more touchdowns.

Two of these came in the last quar ter, and demonstrated the sustained power of the Infantry—a new thing on Benning gridirons, and a thing due to the fine work of the reserves who were doing heavy duty that day: McGuire, Lapine, McaFdden, Hesse, McCoy, Matthews, Davis, Dunlop, Dudley, Buck and Daniels.

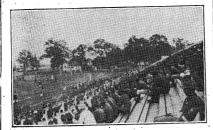

McQuarrie forced his way time and again through grasping Catholic arms. Smythe out-ran the visitors on the flanks. But the neatest play of the day was staged by "Bebe" Daniels, side-stepping, hip-shifting half-back, and Lapine from guard. On Catholics 26 yard line, Daniels flashed off-tackle, slipped through, dodged the secondary slipped through, dodged the secondary defense standing up, and made for the goal. Lapine broke out of the melee, crossed in front of him and hit the safety hard, while Daniels stepped over his heels and dented the final whitewash.

CHEERING SECTIONS PROVE IN-NOVATION AT FOOTBALL GAMES

Cheering has come to Benning. The boom-boom of the artillery yells resound against the stands. The syncosound against the stands. The synco-pated roars of the 24th Infantry beat across the gridiron. The yells of the 29th Infantry and its songs told the world that "We Lead the Way." About mid-field sat the Tanks—sat and sang and yelled. All through the game they kept it up. When the fight was close they yelled harder. When the fight was closest, they yelled the hardest.

Undeterred by the rain, they stood fast and sang through the driving sheets of water. The Infantry spirit is here to stay. It did not come for a moment on dedication day, and evaported. The sturdy Tanks form the ate. The sturdy Tanks form the strongest nucleus of the Infantry spirit. Their enthusiasm and their support form a fine example for others to follow.

HISTORICWARPAGEANT ARMISTICE DAY EVENT AT INFANTRY SCHOOL

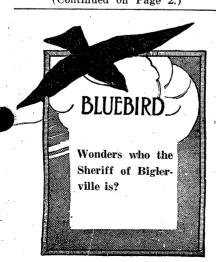

Large Attendance Expected At Stadium to Witness Production

With the announcement last Saturday of the second annual presentation of the World War Pageant, to take place at 8:00 P. M. on Armistice Day, the Infantry School takes rank as a producer of one of the feature events of the South.

This pageant is a symbolic represensation of the events from 1914 to 1918; the first flares of militaristic ambitions, the over-running of Belgium, the stand of Britain and France against the invader, and finally the arrival of the Americans to turn the balance in favor of the defenders of the frontiers of freedom.

It was, it is pointed out, the tremen-It was, it is pointed out, the tremendous weight of American manpower which vitiated the Teuton power when the United States divisions drove through the tangled Meuse-Argonne and landed astride the German railway at Sedan. As General Pershing said: "We had cut the enemy line of communications and perhaps was left. communications and nothing was left but surrender or an armistice."

In this pageant, the millions of Yankee doughboys who went "over there" will be represented by massed trops from the crack Infantry School demonstration units taking the stage for the finale. Armistice Day will be (Continued on Page 2.) grand finale.

TENNESSEE MEDICOS TO BE NEXT TEST FOR DOUGHBOY TEAM

Two Teams Journey To Memphis For Saturday's Game

Two teams left Fort Benning Thursday afternoon for Saturday's game against the Tennessee Medico's to be played in Memphis. The coaches realizing that substitutions in this game will be many, took along two complete teams, so that the players will be in shape for the two coming games.

The squad left Columbus in a special car so that the players will arrive at their destination in the best possible shape for the coming test. The trip will be made by way of Birmingham. Practice will be had on the new gridiron on Friday. The team will return Saturday night arriving in Columbus Sunday evening.
The coaches expect a hard game with the Medicos, for though the Medicos have not been winning consistently this year, in all previous games they have enforced the one year rule, in order to get more conference games. However, against the Infantry they expect to play Freshmen, as well, this will enable them to have a much will enable them to have a much stronger team, in as much as several very good football players are in their first year of Medicine. This makes it certain that the Doughboys will have to fight just as hard as usual to bring home the bacon.

THE BENNING WAY

He was an imposing looking gentlemen with a bright colored ribbon in his button-hole. He drew deeply on The way in which you impart knowlhis cigarette before he answered, "Yes, I've served in the Regular Army before the World War." He gave his name and it was at once recognized. He is a well known financial power in the east and holds a commission in the reserves. The traveling man from Chicago who has just entered the Pullman smoker asked his opinion on the Mitchell case. The answer was forth coming at once and the gentleman once more held the floor.

"Last summer I was in command of an Infantry Reserve Regiment at Ft. Niagara, N. Y. The regiment was completely officered by officers of the football games and dances. Reserve Corps, a splendid aggregation they were, too. The older officers were freshening up and the youngsters were picking up the latest dope that officers, Regular the had to give them. Graduates, Yes, sir, it's the way they have at Benning down at the Infantry School that counts. Why, one day my orderly brought in my boots and belt and he watched me as I looked them over. His face brightened and he volunteered, 'Sir, they are shined the way they do'em at the Infantry School, Yes, Sir, that's the approved way.' That young soldier's remark made me think.

"Just what is this Benning thing, Colonel?" asked the gentleman who had gotten on at one of the worlds greatest winter resorts.

The Colonel replied giving him full details as to the Infantry School and its scope and the magnitude of its effect on the whole scheme of National Defense.

"Yes, the range work, the bayonet and the whole show was done the Benning Way, why even the cook announced to me that the beans cooked in the approved Benning Style."

This talk kept up until the advent of some other passenger who not in on the topic remarked about the freight traffic tieup and embargos.

There is a big thought in this conversation-one that should be dwelt upon and remembered.

The Infantry School is a basis school for The Infantry arm of the service. edge after graduation from the Infantry School is received as the Benning Way and so believed.

Be sure that it is the Benning Way. Be sure that you're right.

A SOCIAL OPPORTUNITY

Perhaps we should not try to serve as social secretary to the garrison, but the soft impeachment is worth risking in a proper cause. Last week this space was devoted to Emily Post-ing the agreeable custom of inviting student officers to luncheons prior to The next thing wrong with the picture - or rather the next suggestion we have to make in the line of etiquette concerns the Armistice Day evening pageant of Benning the World War.

Presentation on the improvised "stage" of the Doughway Stadium will take only approximately half a hour, starting promptly at eight o'clock and ending smoothly as last year.

It is desired to have this annual event a feature amongst the folk of this section of the country, an incident and a point for patriotic pilgrimages in celebration of the success of American arms.

We can start in a modest way by interesting the people of Columbus, considerable numbers of whom will be included in the civic, veteran, and loyal organizations specially invited. can assist the cause by inviting to the post, either for dinner before, or for a social evening after the conclusion of the representation, civilian friends or student officer acquaintances living in the city.

A half hour performance is a brief affair and might seem to persons not fully appreciative of the import of the pageant scarcely to warrant the nine mile trip, even over the smooth concrete road. Combined with an evening social gathering, it will draw greater groups of spectators.

Now-go to the telephone!

THAT THE NAME "JUST GROWED"

Biglerville Mess Hall, which was the scene of a special costume Hallowe'en dance last week-end, has the proud distinction of being the only place on the post with a name that "just growed."

Other spots have been named for In Other spots have been named for Infantry officers on the World War, streets and hills for Vibert, Wold, and Wickersham, for Cook, Davis and Riley. The baseball playing ground was deliberately dubbed for Hank Gowdy of the 165th Infantry and the New York Giants. The football stadium was dedicated to the Doughboy dead. The ancient "Red Bone Road" of pre-military days on the Benning pre-military days on the Benning plain, has been rechristened "First Division Road" though that unit never trod its ruts and deep sand.

Gilbert Creek, the Upatoi, and Lumpkin Road retain their pristine titles. "Red Row" still struggles with the elements so that its fading paint may keep Wold Ave. from climbing Hospital Hill.

But "Biglerville" is neither an artificial name, nor a hold-over from civilian plantation times.

When the first big classes were here in the winter of 1920-1921, and the Basic's numbered three hundred and ten, construction gangs were making Block 21 and Block 23 emerge from piles of lumber and roofing paper.

When Block 21 was first opened, anl Columbus-commuting students ed move to the post, families were permitted to occupy the quarters originally designed for bachelors. "studes" tumbled off the Toonerville Trolley on the way back from Davis Hill, their comrades shouted out the names that first came to their minds: "Next Station Stop is SQUAW CAMP."

In that frantic spring of 1921, the Basic class was wrestling with map problems on the Gettysburg sheets. Finally, two names emerged from among the multitude of appelations. Block 23 began to be called "Taneytown," and Block 21 "Biglerville," from Finally, two names two towns on the Gettysburg quadrangle where Sergt. Hill won his D.

Traditions die and nicknames pass away, unless something be done perpetuate them.

officers and their families living in "Biglerville" decided to give a big party to the rest of the camp. So a committee headed by Colonel G. Maury Cralle, Infantry, then a student officer, broadcast invitations all over the garrison for a great, grand, and glorious "Biglerville Barn Dance," the affair to be held in the recently finished mess hall, then unused.

Advertising pays.

The name Biglerville has remained It has wormed its way into official maps and formal orders and memoranda. The mess hall alone is still so called. The rest of Biglerville, now occupied by bachelor officers and nurquarters, being more known among the hostesses of unmarried house guests as "Eligible Alley."

"Biglerville" stays, because Biglerville was well advertised.

The growing list of Army publications has been swelled by the addition of two splendid publications—the "El Morro News" and the "Black Panther"

DIPHTHERIA SAFEGUARD TO BE GIVEN FORT CHILDREN

Program Outlined By Sanitary Officer Included Test Of Youngsters

Children of the post at Fort Benning will be protected against the dangerous disease of diphtheria in accordance with a program being put into effect by the Sanitary Officer. The first step starts Saturday morning of this week with the giving of the Schick test. This simple test is given all children between the ages of 6 and 12 years, and those who have at some time received the preventive applications but have never been examined to determine the effectiveness of the immunization.

Diphtheria, it is said, comes in cycles every fourth year. For three years there have been practically no cases in this neighborhood, and the Sanitarians at the Fort are determined that the expected swing of the cycle shall be checked by proper preventive measures.

To secure immunization of children, the youngsters are first given what is called the Schick Test to determine whether or not they are susceptible to the disease. If the results of this test show a susceptibility, they are immed-iately immunized with toxin antitoxin which is a practically certain preven-tative, but which, since it does not fur-nish complete protection, for soveral nish complete protection for several months after it is given, ought to be given before the acute danger of the disease appears. Neither the Schnick Test nor the administering of the toxin antitoxin, it is said, is harmful or painful in the slightest degree. Postponed on account of the deluge last week-end, the regularly fortnightly drag hunt of the Officers' Club at Fort Benning will be held this coming Sunday, with "boots and saddles" at the Polo Club at eight o'clock sharp. Coffee will be served as an eye-opener from 7:30 on, and the usual club breakfast will follow the hunt, to be steaming on the serving tables at 9:30. In order to provide opportunities for riders of average ability, the course has been arranged so that jumps may be detoured, and the pace will be not be too fast.

In case of inclement weather, the Fort Benning telephone operator will be notified in advance whether or not the hunt will be held, and from 6 a. m onwards will be able to advise those who call him to make inquiries regarding possible postponemont.

The Engineers participated in the review of the command on Wednesday of this week to the extent of ponton section, composed of pic picked pontoneers, equipped with all the paraphernalia prescribed for actual campaign. This contingent comprised all the men on duty at the Post, with the exception of those authorized to be left in the camp area; the men on duty at the railroad construction camp, in order that no hinderance might be thrown in the way of the early com-pletion of work at that place, were left on the job, with the exception of several specially proficient teamsters, whose services were needed in the parade. The bridge builders passed in review mounted in the ponton boats, drawn by four-line teams.

Pvt. 1st Class James Gilbert left for his home in Taylor Valley, Va., on Tuesday of this week, where he was called to attend the funeral of his brother, a mine foreman, working a night shift, who was killed during an accident early Monday night.

Pyt. Gilbert expects to remain in Virginia for 15 days. The Company, as a whole extends to him its sincerest sympathy in his bereavement.

With the Chattahoochee Valley Fair and Exposition now viewed historically rather than currently, the Engineer Map Reproduction Plant is again installed in its sheds in the camp area, where routine work is being ground out "as usual." The personnel whose good (?) fortune it was to spend the week in the suburbs of Columbus are unanimous in declaring in favor of Benning as a camp site.

We wish particularly to call attention to the following poem by Pvt. 1st Class James Gilbert. It is typical of the feelings and reactions of the men of the company who worked on the recently constructed railroad from the time of its beginning until completion—of those who not only saw it come into being, but who actually helped to bring it into being.

Railroad Blues

Just out from Old Fort Benning On the banks of the Upatoi The Engineers have a Railroad Camp As fine as you ever saw.

'Twas about the first of April When the railroad was begun, And now, in the late October The job at last is done.

Now the railroad is completed And the gravel washer too, And from Camp to Camp the Dough boys Can travel fro and to.

There are Two Good Places to Eat-At Home and the

BLUEBIRD TEA ROOM

The Engineers and Doughboys Labored side by side,
And stuck to their work with patience In hopes they would get a ride.

One day down the track came creeping The train amid smoke and steam, And across the little bridge it crept While it's lonesome whistle screamed

We had a Civil Engineer A man among them all Handsome and friendly and full of cheer

Our old friend, Corporal Hall.

The Captain and Lieutenant too. To us were mighty fine,
They had us build the little bridge
Out of Long Leaf Georgia Pine.

We all of us toiled and labored And never missed a call, Beginning in the Early Spring And ending in the Fall.

Of course when a guy is on K. P. The days seem mighty long;
But if you just go ahead and Tough it

It will keep you from doing wrong.

Now, boys, that my tale is ended And our job is all complete, you like to work and want to learn The Engineers can't be beat -Jim Gilbert.

7th ENGINEERS EXHIT AT CHATTAHOOCHEE FAIR

More than 2,000 persons per day visited the tents housing the Engineer exhibits at the Chattahoochee Valley Fair, since the opening day, according to estimates of the personnel who were on duty at the Fair grounds. That interest among the spectators ran high, was evidenced, it was said by the num. ber of questions asked concerning, not only the manifold exhibits, but also the work generally of the Engineer arm of the service.

Included in the exhibit were many of the tools and implements used by the Engineers, both in the field and in camp, minature models of four types of permanent bridges for heavy traffic, an actual heavy pontoon bridge, and a Lampert and a kapok foot bridge, constructed on the grounds, a board taining more than 100 pictures of jobs done by the Seventh Engineers—every-thing from trenches to railroads—and three of the five trucks of the Map Reproduction plant.

While interest in all the exhibits was intense among all visitors, that taken in the work of the Map Reproduction Plant seemed to be greatest. The plant began turning out complete iobs on Thursday, maps of local areas being reproduced on the grounds and distributed among the visitors.

On duty with the exhibits were ten picked men from the Company, whose duty it was to entertain the visitors to the tents. explaining the uses of the various implements on display. INFANTRY SCHOOL LOSES SPLENDID SOLDIER BY RETIREMENT

Master Sergeant Bennett Leaves Army After 30 Years

After thirty years of service in the regular army, Master Sergeant James P. Bennett was placed on the retired list at Fort Benning on Tuesday of this week. Foreign duty, counting as double time stretched his twenty-five years to the thirty necessary for retirement.

Sergeant Bennett first enlisted July 16, 1900 and almost immediately went across the Pacific, where he spent 5 years and 2 months in the Philippines and China, taking an active part in the attack on the walled city of Pekin by Company "B" of the 9th Infantry to which he then belonged.

He has completed nine enlistments with an excellent record. During the World War he was commissioned a Captain, and then returned to ranks to take advantage of the privilege of retirement.

Sergeant Bennett first came to Fort Benning in 1922 and has been assistant to the supply officer at Headquarters and steward of the Post Exchange. In 1923, he purchased the old Land estate below Green Island Ranch on the river road about 10 miles north of Columbus, where he will now settle down in the poultry business.

Since coming to this neighborhood. Sergeant Bennett has made a host of friends in the post and the city and he has the good wishes of all who ever knew or served with him.

Marching decisively 21-6.

Marching doughboy legs outsped the prancing Rockne protegees. Smythe and McQuarrie chalked up longer gains, with a single exception, than anything the visitors could show. Douthit was all over the place, snaring a fumble, intercepting a forward pass, and paving the way to touch-downs. Dunlop starred in the line, collecting two fumbles and opening a wide breach for McQuarrie to drive to a score.

Mack, acting as field captain, pepped things up, with his play and with his banter. The loquacious Irish met their equal. As Mack said, you've got to out-talk them as well as outplay them, and the doughboys, led by Mack's apt repartee, out-talked the tarkinest team that has ever tried out the Doughboy Stadium.

Kgelstrom was brilliant in receiving forward passes, taking one that later led to a score, taking another beyond the visitors' goal line for the initial tally. He also blocked a punt behind the whitewash and earned a touchdown that bad officiating vitiated.

Transylvania's attack that sank Cincinnati could not frighten the Infantry. Oglethorpe's fight could not down the Infantry. Catholic university's heavy and powerful team which Saturday played the Quantico marines to a 13-6 score, could not stop the Infantry assault. Rockne's speed and deception could not deter the Infantry. A team that never fails to make at least 26 points against teams like these, and that comes through strong enough to get the habit of scoring two touch-downs each fourth quarter, is a team indeed

WORLD WAR PAGEANT DRAWS RECORD CROWD ON ARMISTICE DAY

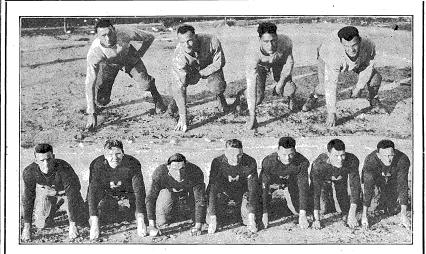

6,500 Civilians and Soldiers Give Tribute At Exercises

Long before the starting time of the World War Pageant the south stands of the Doughboy stadium were filled to overflowing by both civilian and military spectators. The seven hundred additional seats which were placed on the running track were taken almost before the ushers could direct the guests to their seats. As the lights went out announcing the start of the big spectacle hundreds were crowded at both sides hoping to find a seat. Many resolutions were made to get to "Fort doings" early in the future because of prompt starting.

Starting promptly at 8 o'clock the 29th Infantry band thrilled the crowd with the strains of "Dixie." The lights with the strains of "Dixie." The lights were then turned on and the pageant which was put on by the Infantry School Glee Club was launched for its second successful showing which it is believed far exceeded its prior production.

nah, the soldier players will be given their last battle practice before facing the redoubtable Quantico Marines in Washington a week hence.

President's Cup Buck is getting back in form again, as his work last Saturday testified. Coach Milburn has developed Green, Bennett, and Dudley as ground-gaining pinch-hitters for the officer backfield, on which Sergeant Swantic has already been starring all season. Line Coach Zellars has trained his linesmen in a manner that lives up to his reputation. The much-touted officer line, the forward wall of the Big Blue Tide, with Texas, West Point, and Villanova veterans, has been gradually supplanted by soldier linesmen of premier quality. Kgelstrom, Sweeney, Lapine, have been holding berths all season. Hesse, McCoy, Maguire, Lindsey, Stanovitch, are forwards worthy to stand in place of Berry, Mack, Dunlop, Schaefer, and Dwyer.

The great objective now is the President's Cup. The team is being pointed toward that game. The final battle practice comes Saturday.

KEEN INTEREST SHOWN IN SERVICE CLASSIC GAME NOVEMBER 21st

(Continued from Page 1) thereby won the honor of facing the doughboys under the eyes of the Commander-in-Chief of both services. The team they faced was not the same as that from the entire fleet which gave the Infantry such a scrap in Washington last November.

Advance dope on the game indicates the usual bitter contest that always results from a match between two teams from separate services. The Quantico Marines are not, however, the all-star team that has made marine history on the gridiron. This is a sea-soldier team, not an officer team. It defeated Catholic University 13-6 two weeks ago, the same brilliant Irishmen who lost to Benning's four-touchdown team, 26-7. Against the Marines, the Catholic aerial attack was effective. Against the Infantry, it broke down completely except for a single sixty-yard gain. In fact, the Catholic never consistently threatened the doughboy goal area.

Parris Island was hailed as possible President's Cup material. The Carolina Marines rated their eleven as superior to the Quantico aggregation. Against the Carolinians, the soldier eleven from Fort Benning displayed their usual four touchdown proclivities, and made first downs in startling succession.

Over-confidence can lose. The best teams sometimes do not win. But superior team-work, superior coaching, and superior material is usually victorious. The doughboys will have to fight hard and play well, if they are to include the President's Cup in their Washington to Benning baggage.

Those who know the team and its unshakeable morale, know they fight hard and play well.

HEADLIGHTS

A motorist stopped in at the office today and left the following card:

"A card of thanks to the gentlemen who do dim." A Motorist.

That man wrote volumes when he penned that card. He expressed himself and also the minds of others in those few words.

As we ride along the road at night it is a small thing to reach forward and dim our lights and in return have the other fellow follow suit. You may believe that your lights have patent lenses on them and don't need dimming or that your lights are directed down on the road. Just try the dimmers out and give the other man notice that his lights are blinding you, he will in most cases return the favor.

There are many of us that believe that our lights are proper and are much surprised when the other motorist signals us to dim. The manager of the motor repair section of the Post Exchange has arranged to have an expert mechanic at the repair shop evenings who will test out your lights and make the necessary adjustments. The test is a simple one and will take but a few moments of your time. It is better to spend a few moments having your lights adjusted so they illuminate the road without glare, than it is to have a ruined car because some one runs into you because of being blinded by your lights.

The next time you drive at night dim your lights and see how quickly the other driver will respect your wishes. Remember that to dim first is to let him know that his lights blind you. Try it.

Courtesy is as acceptable on the road as it is at home. Prevent accidents due to your thoughtlessness. Take advantage of Mr. Austell's offer and have your lights tested.

Remember the old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Use your dimmers.

If you have a spot light have it focused on the right edge of the road, then you may see the road edge and have your dimmers on as a guide to the on-coming motorist.

Practice safety first.

Blue Bird interviewed Mr. Lolyd H. Cook, Jr., upon his recent arrival at Fort Benning and found the young gentleman looking over his new dominion. He expressed himself as being extremely pleased with Fort Benning and its many interesting sights.
He has decided to join the Academic Staff of the School and when he is Staff of the School and when he is not trying to put five rosy-pink toes in his mouth he will try to freshen up the Machine Gun course. He was extremely glad to see all the trees being planted and only wished that he had time to do a little gardening himself. DEFEAT HANDED PARRIS IS-LAND MARINES BY DOUGHBOYS

Leathernecks Swept Aside By Big Blue abiT

Parris Island Marines met their annual defeat at the hands of the Infantry in Savannah Wednesday by the score of 26-7, although they put up the strongest fight they have ever staged against the doughboys.

It was a soldier team that went to the sea coast town, and it was a soldier leam that outcharged the Marines and made possible far reaching gains by McQuarrie and Smythe. President's Cup Buck was in his element again and made just such phenomenal ad-and made just such phenomenal advances as he made against the scouting fleet in Washington last year.

After a single exchange of kicks at the opening of the game, the Infantry staged an attack, rendered dangerous by fine forward pass completion by Kgelstrom, and resulting in an early touchdown. "Bebe" Daniels dropping the point. Following this, the touchdown. "Bebe" Daniels drop-kicking the point. Following this, the marines started a drive of their own checked by the doughboy wall on the 22-yd. line, and reversed into a second touchdown mark. Then followed the feature play of the game, a 50-yard forward pass, Wetja to Peters, with a 20-yard run to a touchdown.

The rest was an Infantry game, starred by fine drives by Buck, Smythe, and McQuarrie, and splendid line charging by Colby, Bertelman, LaPine, lindeed McQuarries McQuarries and splendid line charging by Colby, Bertelman, LaPine, Lindsey, McCoy, Hesse, Maguire, and company. The end-men, Kgelstrom company. The end-men, Resistron Davis and Sweeney shut in the danger-ous end runs of Levy. The marines forward passing attack, though productive of their single early touchdown, was completely stopped or choked down to short yardage. In the final quarter they put on a splendid stand on their one yard line and took the bell away from the Infantry, to the applause of the crowded stands.

Infantry completed three out of six forward passes, and intercepted two. Parris Island completed eleven out of raris island completed eleven out of nineteen, though many of these were for very short yardage, (1-2-2-3-7-7) and one for a 2 yard loss. All in all Infantry gained 283 yards from scrimmage and the Marines 222 yards.

"K" COMPANY 24th INFANTRY DEFEATS AMERICUS INSTITUTE

Soldiers Down Students

The small matter of being separated from their home base doesn't faze the troops of "K" Company 24th Infantry when it comes to foot-ball. With their I. S. A. A. membership tickets safely tucked away in their trunk lockers, they have organized a Company team and have scheduled games with a local prep school at Americus, Georgia.

Their first game was played on Saturday, Oct. 31st on their own field at Souther Field as part of the celebration of their regimental Organization Day (November 1st). The game was pronounced the cleanest game of the season experienced by the Coach of the Americus Institute, and the result was a victory for the Soldiers, 6 to 0.

DOUGHBOYS GET FIRST DEFEAT FROM TENNESSEE DOCTORS

Blue Machine Stalled in Sea of Mud

Playing in a sea of mud created by constant rains, the previously unde-feated Infantry eleven took from the Tennessee Doctors the shut-out score, 7-0.

The medical line, averaging 188 pounds, outcharged the doughboys' for Smythe and McQuarrie ward wall. Smythe and McQuarrie were stopped. Buck contributed one brilliant run for 35 yards. But the embryo physician Saunders put on the feature exhibition of the day, gaining brilliantly and scoring the only tally by a single run a third the length of the field, starting for end, cutting off-tackle, and finding a clear course. Footbal teams, it seems, are like race horses. Some are mud larks and some are not. Infantry was completely mired. The Medicos were not.

CONGRATULATIONS FOR PAGEANT PRESENTATION

Columbus Local Patriotic Organizations Sent Expressions to President of Club

> Following the success of the World War Pageant on Armistice Day, there has come the aftermath of appreciation. Miss Anna Caroline Benning, president of the Lizzie Randolph Randolph Chapter of the United Daughters of Confederacy, sent a huge bunch of white chrysanthemums to Mrs. Karlstad as president of the Glee Club in appreciation of the splendid work of that organization.

> From the Benning Camp of the United Confederate Veterans, the following letter was sent to the Glee Club over the signature of the Commander,

E. L. Wells:

"In behalf of the old veterans of Benning Camp, U. C. V., who were so fortunate as to be among those present at your wonderful Armistice Day Pageant, I wish to make known to you and your co-workers the great pleasure you gave us. It was a thrilling and inspiring spectacle, each feature smoothly and efficiently worked out. Our talk during our homeward ride would convince yo uthat enthusiasm is not an emotion exclusively of the young. You have our sincere thanks, our appreciation also of the courtesy shown in placing us in such a choice location. We felt that we were IN it! location. We felt that we were IN it! We know you are enjoying the consciousness of successful achievement."

Mrs. Karlstad, president of the Glee Club, who also sang the Marseillaise in the role of France so splendidly, has been receiving showers of congratulations, and keeps insisting that praise belongs to the members of the club and not to herself.

"Everyone," she says, "helped out and contributed exceptional efforts in a cordial and willing manner. It was wonderful the way they all helped. Each one did his or her part, and then a little bit more. People on the outside contributed to the work."

THE RED CROSS

The American Red Cross has one outstanding purpose—service to humanity in accordance with the International Treaty of Geneva and its own charter from the Congress of the United States.

It operates through its National organization and more than 3000 Chapters in cities and towns.

It continues its obligation to assist the men disabled in the World War, and their families, and to help the men of the regular Army and Navy with their family and individual problems. Since the Armistice it has expended $53,000,000 in this work. It aids more than 100,000 disabled veterans and their families each month. It is serving 249,000 soldiers, sailors and mar ines now in active service.

For great emergencies it has an enrolled reserve of 41,000 nurses. It has on duty 1000 public health nurses demonstrating the tremendous importance of safe-guarding the health of the community.

During the year 67,281 women, girls and boys received instruction in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick, helping them protect the home from disease.

To reduce unnecessary deaths from drowning and accident, the Red Cross during the year trained 21,000 men, women and youths in water rescue and resuscitation, and 18,000 persons in First Aid to the Injured.

Volunteers have produced 1,317,716 surgical dressings, 173,822 garments and 97,450 pages of Braille for the blind, in addition to many other services rendered.

In more than 500 communities where there is no other family welfare agency, the Red Cross is supplying this service.

SOCIAL CUSTOMS OF 29th INFANTRY

To be born with a silver spoon in one's mouth no longer is the exclusive privilege of the upper ten thousand, for is the established custom of the 29th Infantry to present such a prize with the regimental coat of arms to the new born child of any enlisted man of the 29th. There are many other im-pressive social ceremonies at the various momentous periods of the soldiers At the christening of the child of an enlisted man the regimental colors are available to make the sacred occasion more impressive. When an enlisted man is put on the retired list, a regimental commendatory order is issued and published in the command a battalion or regimental parade is held in his honor and the regimental commander congratulates him at the end of this ceremony at the reviewing stand, the regimental band serenades him before his departure from post, a special dinner is given and the regiment presents him him a regimental ring or other appropriate memento. When an enlisted man is sick he is frequently visited at the hospital by his company officer, and a man from his unit sees him daily. Upon his death the company and regimental commanders each write a letter of condolence to the next of kin, flow-ers are sent and the company attends the funeral at the Post in a body, ac-companied by the regimental band. If will not be left on the ground.

the enlisted man is buried at the post his grave is decorated every year on Decoration day and photographs of his grave and funeral are sent to the enlisted man's relatives,-Recruiting News.

My Dear General:

In behalf of the officers and enlisted men of the 20th Infantry, it is with pleasure that I take this occasion to make a formal request that a Bay in the Doughboy Stadium be reserved for that regiment.

While the funds are not at present available, I have, by recent correspondence, received adequate assurance that said funds will be forthcoming in the not too distant future.

One has only to visit this splendid school, for even a very brief period of time, to become thoroughly imbued with the wonderful Infantry spirit that with the wonderful infantry spirit that prevails amongst its entire personnel. With this knowledge in mind, I now feel certain that both the men and women of our regiment will some day experience a sensation of mingled joy and pride when accorded the inspiring opportunity of viewing the colors of Syke's Regulars flying from the ramparts of Doughboy Stadium.

Wishing you continued success in your present undertakings, I remain Most sincerely yours,

Dear Munson:

1 am greatly delighted with your letter of November 16th, informing me that your regiment desires to reserve for itself a Bay in Doughboy Stadium

I have notified the President of the Infantry School Recreation Center Project of the fact of your subscription and have instructed the President of the Athletic Council to at once assign you one of the remaining bays and hoist your colors on the next gala occasion.

Of course I realize that you have not yet had time to raise the subscription money, and wish you to feel that the fact that you are "in" with "Syke's Regulars" means more to us than the money, for which we will await your regiment's convenience.
I greatly appreciate last Saturday afternoon, winning by the decisive score of 47-0.

Never has the Doughboy Stadium seen such clearly demonstrated superiority, and this is all the more remarkable in that at the last meeting of the two elevens, the Tennessee grid-sters won easily, 39-0. Last Satur-day, however, the tide turned. In-fantry gained 452 yards from scrimmage to Carson and Newman's 11 yards. Infantry ran back kicks 191 yards to Carson and Newman's 23 yards. And these figures do not include McQuarrie's brilliant dodging through the secondary defense and running of 70 yards to a touchdown in the first quarter on an intercepted forward

More than three quarters of the game was played with the soldier team that swamped Parris Island the preceding Wednesday in preparation for the wamped Parris Island the preceding Wednesday in preparation for the Quantico Marines on November 21st. Kgelstrom, Hesse, McCoy, Maguire, Lapine, Dwyer, Colby, Sweeney, and Davis did wonders on the forward line. Swantic, Dudley, and a new man named Green performed brilliantly in the backfield the backfield.

The outstanding feature of the game, however, was Buck's phenomenal ground gaining. Getting ready for the contest in Washington, he even out-did his work in Savannah three days before. "President's Cup" Buck, they call him, because of his work against the Navy last year. "President's Cup" Buck, he should be again.

Without disparaging the work of Smythe and McQuarrie, who did splendidly, it is necessary to pay trib-ute to the flying sergeant who shifted past opponents, pivoted out of the arms of tacklers, sped down the field like a madman, and drove his legs like pistons as he plunged through the line. He carried the ball from scrimmage and running back kicks, a total of 156 yards, to McQuarrie's 141 and Smythe's 145 yards. His play through tackle for 52 yards and a touchdown was a marvel.

The protection you need is not included—Personal liability. Fire, theft and collision may be ignored— total loss in these only means that you've lost the cost of the car. If you can't afford that amount of loss, however, you should protect the investment..

A judgment for personal injuries is, however, "something else again, Mawruss."

About 15,000 persons have been injured yearly for the past three years by automobiles. Each accident is a potential damage suit; single judgments running to $50,000 have been awarded by the courts.

Saturday, November 21st at 2 P. M. the husky warriers of the 24th Infantry will meet the fast Florida A. and M. team on the velvet of the Doughboy Stadium. Thursday marked the closing of the drive for funds known as the Red Cross drive for funds known as the Red Cross Call, conducted by a Committee headed by Lieut Col. J. M. > Returning from Washington after defeat at the hands of the Marines and a twenty-four hour Pullman ride, the Infantry came back to the Garrison Monday night. At the railroad station in Columbus stood two empty machine gun buses, open to the chill air of the coldest night so far this winter.

> Into it they piled and started along the empty road to the Fort, sure of having done their best to retain the President's Cup and also sure that the Marines had outplayed them. It was a sad home-coming.

LOUISIANA TECH SEASON'S FINAL DOUGHBOY VICTIM

Ten Touchdowns Mark the Closing Game in Doughboy Stadium.

However uneven the score, it was an interesting afternoon when the Big Blue Tide thundered down the gridiron for the final game of the season and conquered Louisiana Tech by the smashing score of 66-7.

Almost every man on the Doughboy squad got into the game, some of them playing in strange positions, Kgelstrom at fullback. Dwyer at guard. Bertle-man at tackle. But, heavy as the vis-itors were, they had not the well-direct-ed skill or the marks of hard training the soldier eleven showed.

In the stands a continuous noise tes-tified to the continuance of the Infan-try spirit. Constant cheers greeted the succession of brilliant runs and neat forward passes. Rounds of applause went to the conspicuous players of the Louisiana Team. All during the interval between halves, the Tanks and the 29th Infantry sang their heads off All (Continued on Page 8.)

THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving Day, 1925, finds those of the Infantry School assembled as one large family giving thanks to the future that has inspired those who Almighty for the many blessings that have been bestowed upon them.

We are thankful for the continued progress which has marked the years of our existence here at Fort Benning fantry, whose motto is "Follow Me," since its establishment in 1919. As we look back on those lean years of struggle and hardship of those who established Fort Benning, we cannot but be thankful for the foundation so firmly laid.

Just as the Pilgrim Fathers who nobly fought the elements for their in the past will continue to be showered existence in those pioneer days have on the Infantry School in the years to created a foundation for our nation so come.

these Infantrymen have built up a character that is so plainly visible today.

We are thankful of the vision of the hold the destiny of the Infantry School in their hands. For the everlasting patience and coolness of mind, integrity of thought and character of our Infantry leaders who believe in the Inwe give most humble thanks.

We are thankful for the untiring efforts of those who are responsible for the progress that the Infantry School has made in the realm of instructional institutions, and hope that the prosperity and good will that has prevailed

Army meets the navy Saturday, November 28, at the Polo Grounds, New York, in the twenty-eighth meeting of these two teams. To date, the Army has won thirteen and Navy twelve, the other two being ties.

The fact that, out of twenty-seven games played to date, only two have resulted in ties, shows how hard fought hand to cheer them. The gray-clad Cadets this annual classic is. It is do or die and their blanketed Army Mule are althis annual classic is. It is do or die with each team.

This year, more than ever, the Navy is primed to win, especially since a victory will place them once more on an even footing with their greatest rivals.

Army, however, under McEwan, tied the 1923 game and won the game in Baltimore last year, 12 to 0, and they are determined that the old Mule will drag the Navy's goat back up the Hudson.

McEwan realizes though that this year the Navy has a very fine team. They are fast and powerful; have three fine team. fine backs in Flippin, Shapely and Hamilton; and have one of the heaviest lines in years. The Navy will outweigh the Army team an average of ten pounds.

The Navy's kicking game is far superior to the Army's, though in the last ten days, that side of the Army game has received a great deal of attention with some improvement. It is It is

ARMY AND NAVY
IN ANNUAL CLASH probable that either Hewett or Trapnell will do the punting, although Yeomans may have the call when he is in the game.

The Cadet Corps, of course, will be on hand, to lend their usual color to the game and to cheer the Army to victory. As usual, both they and the to Brigade of Midshipmen will give short marching exhibitions immediately after entering the Polo Grounds. These are spectacles, of course, that never fail to thrill the thousands who are on ways a vivid contrast to the somberer blue of the Middies and their Goat.

It is the one day of the year that the Cadets are free. There is no accdemic instruction: they leave West Point early for the game; and after the game they are granted leave until midnight. It is the one day of the year, the only football day and game, that the Corps rises to its greatest height and gives to the team out on the field in front of them, the highest support end encour-agement that any college can give its football team.

While not definitely decided on his line-up McEwan will probably start the

INFANTRY SPIRIT PREVAILS AT FORT AS TEAM RETURNS

and true No returning team has ever received such an ovation on the Benning plain. All the tiresome trip to the national capital and back again, all the bitter losing fight in the Griffith Stadium, all the work of the season was justified by the rousing reception given those who had carried the Infancial transfer a wall against 1 pfontry's try colors so well against Infantry's strongest foes.

Staunch Jock McQuarrie had up eight days of leave to see his Alma Mater meet Annapolis, so that he might come back and help a battered and injured backfield in the final game of the season. Undeterred by defeat the Infantry spirit is still strong in the team and in the supporters.

Last Saturday afternoon the 24th Infantry football team outclassed the Florida A. & M. aggregation and handily chalked up a 27 to 7 victory. It was a game full of thrilling and brilliant plays with "Mule" Harrison and C. Williams sharing the honors as the outstanding stars for the home team for these boys carried the old pig skin in good fashion. Branch on end played a wonderful defensive game but was forced to retire in the third quarter due to injuries. The visitors put up a good fight throughout but they showed their best in the final quarter when they opened with an aerial attack that was hard to stop. A 40 yard pass Bragg hard to stop. A 40 yard pass Bragg to DeVeaux gave them their lone touch-different story to tell.

The 24th Infantry made 14 first downs, one with the aid of a 5 yard penalty, while the college aggregation were only able to have the line moved four times and each of these were made on forward

WASTED HIS LEAVE, LOST FOREIGN SERVICE CREDIT, BUT SAVED (?) SOME MONEY

An officer of the Army bumped a native while automobling just before his tour of duty was up in Honolulu. He handed the boy a greenback and forgot it.

Shortly after his return to the states he was served notice of suit and took leave to return to the islands to defend. Lost the case and returned to the U.S. after appealing. Case again came up for trial. He again took leave, lost and appealed. Case came up third time. His leave credit was exhausted; was unable to get leave on half-pay and finally had to surrender credit for foreign service, applying for station in Honolulu to get back for trial

He won the third trial, but lost:
(1) Leave credit; (2) foreign service credit; (3) time; (4) trouble; (5) attorneys fees; (6) expense.

He could have saved all of these by an investment in PERSONAL LIABILITY insurance.

The Infantry School Athletic Association will meet this afternoon to arrange the schedule for the Intermural Football League and to outline the policies under which the games are to be played. The following organizations will play for the Inter-mural penant; the 29th Infantry, the 15th Tank Bn., 83rd Field Artillery, Infantry School Detachment.

ANIMATED SCORE BOARD TO SHOW ARMY-NAVY GAME

Gowdy Field Is Scene of Miniature Contest

Promptly at 1 o'clock the animated score board will show the play-by-play results of the big annual contest between the Army and Navy. The score board created much interest last week when it was used to show the Infan-try-Marine game in Washington. Di-rect wire from the Polo grounds will give the detailed play.

As a special attraction the 29th Infantry band will play several of the latest West Point songs and Corps hymns.

FREEBOOTERS DOWN 29th INFANTRY QUARTET

Freebooters, polo players chosen from instructors and headquarters desk hounds, took their spurs off the mahogany and waved the red score flag on Shannon Field last Sunday, conquering the previously undefeated quartet of the 29th Infantry, 3-2.

Company Officers' Class First In Line For The General's Double-O of Uniforms and Equipment

Now is furbishing time. Brass is being polished. Leather is being shined. Dust is being brushed off the "inspection" overcoats and uniforms kept safe and sound in the storage closet.

Saturday of this week there commences sturday of this week there commences the Commandant's annual show-down scrutiny of officers' equipment and cloth-ing on which the fate of the universe depends. That afternoon the Company Officers' Class filed before the keen eyes of the General, so that he may determine if the shoes be of the exact shade of the cap visor, if the belt be purchased from Peel or from the Quartermaster stock, of the leggins be stock models or tailormade.

Ever since the students received their first intimation of orders for Benning they have been scanning phrases of Garrison Regulations and consulting informal sources of data. Should the gray gloves be marked with black stitching or should they be all gray? Does the Ordnance Department furnish a saber satisfactory for officers or must the best Toledo steel be used? Will the pocket gap of the overcoat do, or must a new slit be made for the saber hook? Discussion waxes furious

BENNING TANK BOSS SLATED FOR BIG JOB LOCAL LEGION

Major E. S. Miller Nominated Unopposed For Position As Vice-Commander of Chas. S. Harrison Post

Unopposed nominee for the position of Vice-Commander of the Charles S, Harrison Post of the American Legion, of Columbus, Major E. S. Miller, commanding the 15th Tank Battalion, will represent the Benning garrison on the list of officers of that veteran organization.

At Tuesday's meeting, for the first time in the history of the local post, there developed a contest for the position of commander. Of the two nominees slated to succeed Mr. Terrell S. Hill, retiring commander, Mr. T. G. Reeves and T. E. Adams, the latter is well known to the Benning garrison, having devoted large portions of his time to efforts for the welfare of soldiers of the reservation. In the frantic days of bonus applications, he practically lived at the fort and put in many hours assisting in the filling out of bonus applications.

Major Miller's nomination is in line with the local policy of having a Benning representative among the list of officials of the Legion Post. Captain M. S. Eddy was at one time commander of the Post. After his departure for another station, Colonel E. G. Peyton, was made vice-commander and continued in that office even after his transfer to Washington Major Miller is generally regarded at Fort Benning as an excellent representative, one who will cooperate well with the civilian elements and who will also look well to the interests of the soldier members.

AUTOMOBILE RULES FOR THE GARRISON RECENTLY REVISED

"He Who Runs (a car) May Read" What the Traffic M. P.'s Are Reading

From the Print Shop there has come a newly revision version of Garrison Regulations No. 30-250, Motor Regula-tions, which tell in twelve printed pages the detailed rules regarding the owner-ship, identification, and operation of motor vehicles within the limits of the reservation. In general these Regula-tions follow the best civilian practice with regard to lights, brakes, tags, registration, and traffic, modified in certain respects to confirm to the special circumstances of military life.

Officers and soldiers living in the garrison limits or in town, and civilian employees, are required to secure owner's permits for their cars but Columbus commercial firms and civilians doing business on the reservation do not require such permits. Persons other than owners habitually driving on the reservation require driver's permits, which must be applied for by the owners of the cars the cars.

Rigid supervision has been established over the purchase and operation of motor cars by enlisted personnel. A soldier's immediate commander must secure permission from headquarters before the car is obtained. His investigation and his request for a permit is required to indicate the reliability of the prospective owner, and assurance that the car Chaplain Thomas J. Lennan, Fort Benning, Ga.

My dear Lennan,

We note with very great pleasure that you are approaching another great occasion in your work at Fort Benning. The Solemn Military Mass which you have celebrated each Thanksgiving Day has become known throughout the Army. We all rejoice that you are able to do it so thorough. ly well. I have a feeling that your successor will want to continue this fine feature of your program.

I have not written you since your orders for foreign service were issued but I want you to know that we release you from service at Fort Benning with great reluctance and only because your turn on the foreign service roster has been reached. You have rendered a service at that important center which has been far reaching in its effect upon individual lives and which has reflected great credit upon the corps to which you belong.

May God bless you as you go other equally important duties.

Very sincerely yours, (Sgd.) JOHN T. AXTON, Chief of Chaplains.

"FOLLOW ME"

"Alas, alack, ah me, ah my!" we all declare. "The sales commissary is going out of business, because there are no funds permitted for use in carrying a stock of those exceptional articles we all used to buy there."

Stop! Listen!

Last July there was an officer in charge there who had accumulated a good supply of those things we wanted to buy and needed to buy at commissary prices.

Bang!

Instructions come from Washington that such a stock of "exceptional" articles must not be carried. "The officer in charge will be held responsible,' said the message, along with the other usual phrases which hurt.

Thirty thousand dollars worth of stock on hand. It had to be sold, or the officer who had built up the stock would have to make good. He disposed of some of it. Then we all started saying: "Alas, alack, ah me, and oh my," and we all went somewhere else.

Now there is "exceptional" stock to the value of about four thousand dollars on hand in the commissary. If those things are not sold, the officer in charge will find his pay vouchers four thousand dollars minus.

Approved solution:

The personnel of the garrison will visit the commissary and buy whatever they need from what is left and thus assist the officer who did a lot to help them before the restrictive lighting struck.

OUR MOVIES

U. S. Army Motion Picture Service

Turnines the Best of Movies
For several years the motto: "Always a good show at War Department Theatres' has been used by the U.S. A. M. P. Service. For years it has lived up to that motto. The Service furnishes motion pictures to the entire service, every post, station, garrison and camp shares the fruits of the what has been built up into a smooth running organization that now gives the Army turu motion pictures a proper and wholesome form of recreation,

The pictures are of the finest that can be obtained. There is no picture too great that cannot be shown at the War Department theatres. The pictures are changed daily and the admission charge is far below that on the outside. The soldier participates in the gain that his attendance at the movies produces. Twenty percent of the profits are returned to the station that made the profit for use of the enlisted personnel of the garrison. By purchasing coupon books thru the first sergeant of the various organizations you save twenty-five cents on each $1.50 book.

At the present time Fort Benning is building a new theatre that will be the Army's finest. Word has been re-ceived by Mr. Hill, who is installing the projection equipment that the seats are due to arrive the latter part of November. Preparations have been made to handle the situation as soon as the seats arrive.

Mr. Roger Hill, the Army Motion Picture Service expert installed the wiring and set up the new machines and has completed the projection booth. He has left for Washington leaving sufficient work outlined for the Construction Quartermaster so upon his return two weeks before the house opens he will be able to continue where he left off. He seemed much pleased with the conditions here at The Infantry School. When he returns, it is understood that Mr. Smith, the Manager of the Potomac Branch of the U.S.A. M. P. Service, is to return with him the onening of the theatre. Smith is keenly interested in the con-struction of the house and wishes to be the ground when the big opening takes place.

COLUMBUS Vs. 83rd FOOTBALL TOMORROW IN TOWN STADIUM

Gunners From The Fort Will Start Five of Big Blue Tide in Season's Preliminary

Eighty-third Field Artillery has the beginnings of a football team that should stack up well in the intra-mural season, starting with five of the "Four Touchdown Doughboys" squad: Lapine, veteran of two President's Cup matches; Wargo, one of "Zipper Jake's" protegee's in the line; McMillan, McAuliffe, and Schulte, who were working for backfield Supplemented by less experienced players from the ranks of the caisson riders, these will face an ex-star aggregation of Columbus residents in a benefit game Saturday, Dec. 5th, in the Municipal Stadium. Among their opponents will be such gridsters as the brilliant full back Thomason of Georgia, and Strupper, called the best half-back who ever her colors of the Golden Tornedo.

wore the colors of the Golden Tornado, or Georgia Tech.

Coached by Lieutenants Campbell, Crawford and Enderton, the artillerymen have entered this contest in order to try out their plays and developed green players against doughty opposition. green players against doughty opposition. Their best players will be playing in novel positions. Lapine was used by Major Milburn at Guard, because the Milburn-Zellars combination had fast and light running guards; but on the battalion team he is to play tackle. Schulte is a good end; the Big Blue Tide had a wealth of premier ends, and so he was groomed for a halfback post; but tomorrow he will be back at the position he knows best knows best

Paying a splendid tribute to the sportsmanship of the players on the Big Blue Tide and to the extraordinary Big Blue Tide and to the extraordinary co-operation given him by the organization commanders, Major Milburn appeared before the Athletic Council to render his final report as head coach of the Infantry, football team.

"Never," he said, "have I asked an officer on this post for anything regarding the team or any of the football men, but that he has acquiesced willingly and cheerfully."

When the Athletic Council suggested a vote of thanks to the major, he interposed an objection and said the vote should be for the team and not for the coaches.

The spirit of the players, he remarked,

Commandant's Inspection of New Gravel Crusher and Railway Extension Provides Quantities of Material for Future Buildings

> Another very essential milestone has Another very essential inhestone has been passed in the development of Fort Benning. The officers and organizations of the Army were to furnish the "dough" and the local troops were to furnish the "doughboys." To stretch the contributions to the Recreation Center Fund still further than they normally would go, it was planned to use sand and gravel on the reservation in the building of the stadium, the Gowdy Field Stands, the Post Exchange, and the New Officers' Club. These beds were drawn from beds of limited size readily available.

> Now practically unlimited quantities of sand and gravel have been opened up in a new location. It is possible to say that regular operations of the new gravcreek will build up a veritable mountain of sand and gravel that may be used to continue the work on the Recreation Center Project, and to materially reduce the governmental cost for concrete roads for future permanent quarters so as to make possible greater progress than the funds available for the War Department Housing Programs will nor mally permit.

The new, favorable situation has been The new, tavorable situation has been brought about by the completion of the new gravel washing plant, about two miles north of Davis hill, and the opening for regular traffic of the extension of the narrow gauge railway to that point. Teams and wagons could the provided guitable transport. not have provided suitable transport over the sandy tracks and the tiring grades. The "Toonerville Trolley Line" had to be extended, to the creekside point where Colonel Bond's upstream survey located the available deposits.

Members of the 7th Engineers, alway ardent supporters of doughboy projects went to work with a will. Last January they became loggers, and cut and piled for seasoning 9,000 railway ties. Then they began the task of laying the new line, finding the easiest grades, making cuts and fills and building one splendid trestle across a brook bottom, dropping from the summit of Davis hill on the main line at 450 down to the level of the Uptaoi about 300, until finally the Toonerville engines were able to draw the "Benning Special" to the very water edge at the spot selected.

At that great sand and gravel cluster continually fed by the stream, there was erected the gravel washer, operated by

In three ways, the new railway extension and gravel crusher yield valuable results:

In the future, lump sums will be turned over to the Recreation Fund for the benefit of the personnel of the reservation.

Our activities in handling this menu business come in conflict with certain free lances operating from other printing shops downtown. These agents, we are informed, quote prices somewhat in excess of those the News is able to quote. These agents, we are informed, pay the downtown printers the usual profits and take their commissions out of their increased prices.

Would you rather pay a higher price and have the profit go to a civilian downtown?

Or would you rather pay a lower price and place your printing business where it will help the Infantry School News and other recreational activities of the garrison?

Starting from the Officers' Club at 7:00 p m., those attending will proceed by automobile to the hunting grounds where it will be "fight and foot." Old clothes will be the rule. We have watched with growing interest the All-American, An-Southern, An-State and owner An-Star Football Teams; at first we took these selections seriously as representing a mythi-cal All-star team from each section out we woke up to the joke when we read that list that left "Ready Money" trange out; and now that we know that it is all in fun we have a list of our own to submit; we have consulted no well known writers or coaches, in fact we have just let our conscience be our guide so here you are:

	All-Tied Team

Kraul	C	lnf.
Duvail	R · G	QMC

Mitchell	Ř E	OMC
Bertelman	Q	Tanks
Marsh	L H B	OMC
Allison	R H B	Engrs.
Buck, A. A.	F B	U. S. A.
	* * *

No two better Endmen could be found than Lennon and Mitchell—they would be especially effective if allowed to do a Buck-and-Wing between jokes. Lennon comes from Minnesota where they almost win a Conference Championship every year and Mitchell is always willing to show a proof of what he can do.

Sproule and Peach at Tackle should be ideal as they have the reputation of being willing to Tackle anything and getting away with it.

Kraul at Center with Bolton and Duvall at Center with Botton and Duvall at Guard should make the "line" practically unbeatable. Kraul has been passing the "ball" for years and making his "line" good as well. Duvall's "line" was so good that he turned professional and went to the Billeting Official Anyone who has tried Billeting Office. Anyone who has tried breaking through at the Q. M. C., knows how the Bolton "line" works.

Putting Bertelman at Quarter is our own idea—We don't believe that this fast and clever little player has ever had a chance. In the line he always had at least two players in front of him and by the time he had laid them out the ball would be dead.

"Pinky" Marsh, we have placed at Left Half as we know his wonderful ability at throwing the "ball." The only difficulty is to find anyone who can handle the "ball" that "Pinky" throws.

Allison, while not so well known locally, comes to us with a fine reputation from the Baltimore Nightingales and is bound to make a name for himself. He should come in handy at re-turning the "ball" as Sergt. Foster says he is a great "kicker."

Now Buck, A. A., must not be confused with "President's Cup" Buck. "Almost Any" Buck is our choice for Fullback as we saw the need of one extra good "kicker" on the team, and who can beat a "buck" at kicking?

"Blamed if I kin figger where these triple thret footballers are so dern smart," says Ezra Cottontop, as he cut himself a "chaw" of "apple", and grabbed a horseshoe, "I'm perty lamin' good at triple thretin' myself. I kin throw nigh-uns, leaners, an' ringers right 'round the 'stob'."

Due to a previous engagement, we deeply regret the inability of our Company Commander, Captain J. H. Rustemeyer, to be present at our Christmas festival. However, Lieuts. Hussing, Dwyer, Schaefer and Holloman will be with the gang. When our outfit staged a demonstration of close order drill for students of the Company Officer's Class, it look ed like a national event. The regimental and the fort publicity officers had their camera men out taking pic-tures and got some good ones. Our reputation as the rack close or-

GUNNERS GRIDSTERS INITIAL FOOTBALL CONTEST LOST 23-7

Lapine Leads 83rd Field Artillerymen Against Ex-Collegians of Columbus Against Superior Odds

Small in size and light in weight as compared with their towering opponents, the football eleven of the 83rd Field Artillery went down to defeat last Satur-day afternoon before a scratch team collected from ex-collegiate stars in Co lumbus, losing by a score of 23-7.

Huge and powerful Thomason, running the downtown team, starred for the victors. Strupper, the best half-back Georgia Tech ever had, counted 96 yards in the first half. These and similar individuals outplayed the good teamwork of the gunners. Their team work work of the gunners. Their team work was poor, but as skilled individuals they managed to elude their smaller opponents from the artillery battalion, and to over-run the lighter line of the gunners.

A touchdown in the first quarter was followed by a safety secured by a blocked kick. Two more touchdowns followed kick. Two more touchdowns followed, with the Artillery fighting hard. And then in the final quarter the red-jerseyed team came through splendidly and marched down the field in a direct attack for the final score of the game.

tack for the final score of the game.

McMillan contributed a brilliant run of 41 yards. Schulte and Bouquin checked gains through the big linesmen opposing them. Samlavich ran beautifully and forward passed with distinction, even though so injured that he had to be temporarily withdrawn from the game.

Although the Artillery had only one of Coach Milburn's first string, Lapine, and only four of the sixty-odd squad of the Blue Tide, they put up a fine battle, playing in a manner as worthy as the cause for which they booked the game, the accumulation of funds to complete the memorial games on the Columbus Municipal Studium nicipal Stadium.

Varsity Candidates Indulging in Active Scrimmaging as Squad Increases With New Material Turning Out For Successive Practices

"Br-r-r-ng-ng!" The siren has tooted for scrimmaging of basketball candidates. Long shots, short shots, ball handling, change of pace, cuts for the attacks, given in preliminary work for a week, have been suplemented by actual playing through five minute periods.

Daily the squad grows. Every afternoon at four o'clock new candidates appear

MORE POLO

There will be polo on Sunday, December 13 on Shannon Field at 2:30 P. M. in the form of a "Round Robin" between the 29th Infantry Polo Club, 83rd Field Artillery Polo Club and the Freebooter. Eight periods of play.

TANKS VICTORIOUS OVER SPEIGNERITES IN INITIAL CONTEST

Football Game in Montgomery Last Sunday Was a Battle Royal With Narrow Margin of Two Points At The End

Eight to six sounds like baseball. It was six to six, and Swantic sat on the sidelines, not in grid togs. He begged to play in spite of his injuries. The coach refused him. He begged again. The coach refused again. He begged again. Swantic played.

In the meanwhile, and afterwards, Dudley staged the game of his career, sweeping quickly around ends or dashing through the line like wildfire. Two Alabama players, one Michigan and one Alabama players, one Michigan and one Penn State luminary, made the eleven of the Speigner Prison staff worthy opponents of the powerful Tanks. Walls, son of the warden, ex-crimson-tider, was their star. The crowd of 3,000 applauded. The hosts dispensed hospitality in true southern style.

POLO SCORE LIKE LONG ODDS AT RACES

Crack! and a polo ball soared fifty yards, and as high as a drop-kick clearing the crossbar. Douglas scored a goal for the students Sunday, in the midst of a splendid late-game rally. But it was only a rally, and only one goal. Like good Democrats, the Students took the short end of 16-1 figures, for the rapid riding and the accurate hitting of the 29th Infantry overwhelmed them. Bur-29th Infantry overwhelmed them, Burress and French and Elkins playing with precision and power.

D. A. R. TO PRESENT A BRONZE TABLET TO FORT BENNING

Marker To Be Erected To Commemorate Visit of La-Fayette To This Place in 1825

Official authority has been received from Washington for the Commandant to accept and erect on the reservation a bronze tablet offered by the Geor-gia Daughters of the American Revolution to commemorate the passing of General Lafayette through the site of Fort Benning on his tour of the United States in 1825.

Down the First Division Road to its junction with the Lumpkin Road, and thence directly west across the 29th Infantry area and on toward the Bradley farm, there once stretched the old "Federal Road" authorized by an Act of Congress in 1805, opened as a bridle path in 1807, and completed as a main traffic route in 1811. This was the main emigrant route for settlers moving westward from the Atlantic seaboard toward the lower Mississippi valley.

Along this road, in 1825, came General Lafayette, then "the only surviving General of the American Revolution." At the edge of the Chattahoo. At the edge of the Chattahoochee, he was turned over by his escort of Georgians to a group of Alabamans and given good cheer for the remainder of his triumphal tour. Hearing that this soldier of France who volunteered in the cause of America liberty, had crossed the site of the reservation where Americans are now being trained to lead citizens in de-fense of those liberties he fought to se-cure, the Georgia State Daughters of

Later he led a few men into a dugout and captured thirteen prisoners. He then contured thirteen prisoners. He then continued the advance until the day's objective had been reached and the pla-

They grow men tall in Tennessee, and so the captain in the stands had little difficulty in seeing the six-feetplus sergeant from Lewisburg on the gridiron of the Doughboy Stadium, wearing the big number "47" on the back of his blue jersey. It is probable that this tablet will be placed on the old flagpole pedestal at the junction of Wold Ave. and the First Division Road, and that the three other niches on that octagonal concrete block will later be used for similar tablets to commemorate other histor-ical facts connected with Fort Ben-ning. There have been mentioned the military and civic record of General Benning after whom the Fort is named, the location here in Indian days of the ancient village of Kasheta, capital of the Lower Creek Confederation of the Lower C capital of the Lower Creek Confederacy, the route of the Federal Road, the Battle of Hichity in the Creek Wars. THE AIDE PAID

A short time ago the aide to one of our general officers, driving at night, was blinded by the headlights of an approaching car and ran into a farm wagon carrying a family, but no lights. He stood suit and lost the decision. Appealed and lost again, though local laws required all vehicles to carry lights at night. Due to his associations, personal and official, he had the very best advice and strong military influences to back him. Nevertheless for a long and wearisome period his monthly income was reduced by large partial payments on this judgment, court costs and attorney's fees, in addition to which he had to take leave three times to appear in a court of an adjoining state where the accident occurred.

He called on us later to protect him against personal liability, as well as every other coverage he had heard about.

"FOLLOW ME"

The following extracts are recom mended for the consideration of all good sportsmen and good doughboys who have seen games played by soldiers this fall:

At a certain university in the middle West a few days ago, the student body, supposedly celebrating a football season, which had been unusually successful, gathered in a mob by night, burned an empty building, assaulted several police officers with clubs and axes. cut the hose of the firemen to shreds, blockaded the streets, hooted and insulted the mayor of the city when he attempted to disperse the mob, and were only dissuaded from burning their own grandstand when appealed to by various dignitaries of the school and the captain and the coach of the football team whose victories were being observed. Any grand jury that could be impanelled would have had no excuse in the world in refusing to return hearts" played basketball in absolute indictments against the participants for assault with deadly, weapons, malicious trespass, resisting officers of the law, and wanton destruction of property. From later press comments the Sunday and never swore even once.

whole incident seems to have been passed over as a "college prank."

"Paying a splendid tribute to the sportsmanship of the players on the Big Blue Tide, Major Milburn appeared before the Athletic Council to render his final report as head coach of the Infantry team. Their conduct was perfect. The soldiers were a credit to the Army in appearance, behavior and sportsmanship."-Infantry School News.

If they don't stop talking about us, we'll have to give Mr. W. C. Woodall, who writes the "GOOD MORNING" column in the Enquirer-Sun and Mr. W. W. Ellison, sports editor of the Ledger, some sort of a Christmas present to make up for the free advertising they are giving the Infantry School News. A FABLE by A. Sop.

Once upon a time, on the Day that a Uniform inspection was being held, a Young Officer, dressed in Full Uniform with Overcoat and Saber, was found at some distance from the Scene of the inspection, wandering around in a dazed manner, and repeating over to him-self, the Numbers: One, Two, Three, Four, Five. Every time he got to Five a terrible chill seemed to strike him and he would tremble violently.

A kindly gentlemen thinking this a case of Aphasia or Moon-stroke hurried him to the Hospital, where he was examined with the following Astounding results.

According to the Card in his Warnock Cap, he was Captain I. M. Dizzy, Relying on the name tag on the inside of the pocket of his beautiful Creeks Brothers overcoat he was Captain C. U. Later, Q. M. C.

But stranger still, on removing his nicely Tailored Iseenher blouse he was found to be 1st Lieut. Letsme Out, Inf.

And the Immaculate waist band of his brand new Taughts Breeches proved that he must be Major V. Olstead,

But this was Nothing to the Kick they got out of his Mixwell boots which proved that he was Colonel Phil Strait,

The only identifying Mark on his Sam Browne belt was a nice New price tag, which had not been removed.

The only Distinguishing thing about his Saber was that it looked suspiciously New.

About this time the Surgeon asked for the time. The Orderly answered "ONE". At this the patient beauty "ONE". At this the patient heaved a contented sigh and died with a Happy smile on his face.

On his "unmentionables" they found the initials B. V. D., but the Surgeon refused to put this on his Death Certificate, claiming he had already three people in the Cemetery under those ini-

Although, actually we have not been engaged in any athletic contect of a engaged in any athletic contect of a championship nature, we were exceptionally victorious in a furious basketball encounter with Company "C," 29th Inf., last Sunday, winning 21-10.

This has given the immediate spectators an idea of the calibre of the material we have, notwithstanding the fact that there of our best players fact that three of our best players Pvts. Trott, Westbrook, and Davis have been discharged per E. T. S.

Immediately following this victory our volley ball players, headed by Sgt.

Stark and Pvt. Burris, forced the teams of Cos. "A" and "D", 29th Inf. to succumb to a most overwhelming triumph.

Our slogan is in part that of the Regiment, "We aim to lead the Way."

Company "C"
Quite a number of the men of this organization are taking furloughs for the holidays.

Our pugilists in this company are hard at work training for the 29th Infantry tournament. If hard work counts for anything there should be several new champions in this com-

Company "D"

It is with great regret that we note the departure of Guy Paul the blue streak pitcher, outfielder and genial good fellow, for his home state, Louisiana. "Charlie" as he was better known, was one of the stand-bys of the first battelion baseball team and the first battalion baseball team and will be greatly missed next summer.

William Ehrenfield was recently promoted to the grade of corporal filling the vacancy created by the promotion the Corporal Veale to the grade of sergeant.

Joseph Lidouer has been appointed acting corporal. Acting corporal Li-douer now leading the third squad, was an enlisted man in the German navy not so long ago.

Leonard Crawford was discharged Saturday. Crawford said that if he had a sword he would have tried to beat it into a plowshare, because he is going back to the farm.

2nd Battalion Hdgrs. Company The Second Battalion Heauquarters Company, easily won the rapid fire match which was fired on the Range last Thursday afternoon. The score made by them was 1008 out of a pos-sible 1200. This score was 85 points above any other company in the Regiment. The Service Company was second with 923. The winning team made an average of 126 for all ranges or 42 for each range.

The winning team was composed of Davis, F. C. Davis, E. C., Kgelstrom, Strogond, Sawvitski, Johns, Dixon and Dowda. Davis, F. Kgelstrom and "High" Davis proved that they are both as accurate with the Springfield as they are on the receiving end of a forward pass, good athletes and good soldiers.

Now that the Intra-Mural Football Season has opened up we again have that sport as the live topic of the day. The Second Battalion has acquired some fine material. The way the men are getting into shape it appears as if we are bound to have another cham-pionship team this season. Let's go Team.

Company "E"

The Company is organizing a basket ball team. The team has not been pick-ed out yet, but we have some very promising material. We hope to have the best team in the regiment, at least we'll show 'em some hot stuff.

There are nine huskies out for Battalion Football, and we expect to see eight of them playing in all the games —maybe! From the looks of some of them they have certainly been doing some hard practice. One has a black eye, and another hurt his foot kicking —some kicker—but it is believed, from authoritie george, that he kicked the authentic soures, that he kicked the ground instead of the ball. However, that is all part of the game and our men do not allow it to worry them. In fact, nothing worries them!

The new Supply room is going up like the tower of Babel, under the supervision of Sergt. Davis and his ex-slum-slingers.

All of us were very, very sorry that it rained yesterday. Our day was utterly spoiled. We had all eagerly looked forward to "strutting our stuff" on the same of t the parade ground, but we met with bitter disappointment.

Company "F"
The Blue Pennant still flies high at the Orderly Room. We believe our record of five months straight is a Regimental Record, and this time it was not an inspection anybody could "get set" for. The Lt. Col. just strolled out of his office unconcerned like, and we hear our competitors were caught with their "Breeches adrift". Well, we're glad to have it without making a "Three day break" for it. It means more.
Our First Sergeant came back Wed-our first Sergeant came back Wednesday from a two months furlough. The whole area looked glad to see him. As a Top Sergeant we admit Sergt. Reddy is the right sort, even if we do have to "Walk the straight and narrow."

If this starts a fight, we'll battle it out with Dagers and Bow-men and Lances or other Sharp tools until the last Word.

Company "H"
Privates Denney, Henderson, Reid,

Reese, Thomas, Prestenbach, and Cpl. Kirkland were discharged last week, and Privates Gilreath and Boulton this week. Cpl. Kirkland re-enlisted.

All except the latter mentioned intend to try civil life for a while.

15th Tank Battalion Notes

Company "A"
In all walks of life men and women are called upon to contribute some of their earnings to worthy causes. To the several demands placed on us in the past few months Co. "A" has come across as follows:

Athletic Association-100 per cent. Red Cross (100 per cent. donations, not memberships).

Army Relief (donations) 100 per

Tank Bn. Weekly (subscriptions)

100 per cent.
When the Battalion Athletic Fund needed assistance the company also came across with 100 per cent. donations and chipped in $32.75.

The company is solid 100 per cent. behind anything the battalion does or wants done.

The company appreciates the efforts being made by its members on the foot-ball squad. Some of them are new and inexperienced; but they are out trying all the time and though they may not make the big team they are may not make the big team they are doing their best for the battalion.

The outfit is awaiting the return to full duty of Lt. "Jimmy" Shields—with much pleasure.

The company, along with the rest of the battalion, is finding it hard to pull off demonstrations, firing problems and bettelion regions this rest, with most battalion reviews this week, with most of the company on detail; however, we will pull through.

Oh! yes we'll have to put Cpl. Willingham's name in the paper. Willie's making the line buck out on the football field.

Company "B"

Pvt. Aldrich and the famous Tank Mule "Stella," are working the farm once more. We should never want for fresh vegetables as long as Aldrich is with the Battalion. Aw Shaw.

Pvt. (William Mitchell) Borucki is working hard, preparing the case which he intends to present to the aviation recruiting officer. We hate to lose the Colonel but someone has to put the aviation on its feet.

The tanks have always been able to boast of at least one superior photographer. Captain Lucas has left, but his understudy "Snap 'em Quick" Coney is always on the job to preserve Coney is aiways tank history.

Both officers and enlisted men of Co. "B" are glad to see Corporal Holliday re-enlist for another tour in this organization. He is an efficient non-arrival athlete and we wish him well.

1st Sgt. Hicks to Rookie: "And remember son, this is not an outfit. It is an organization, and always remember to refer to it as such."

Company "C"

Our 1st Sergt, is sojourning in the Post Hospital for a few days. The other day while at football practice he happened to get in front of one of the four "Horsemen" on the first teamand emerged with a knee about as big as a good sized telegraph pole. We all wish him a speedy recovery for the intra-mural season is about to open and we need him in the line.

Handsome Harrison could not stand the strain any longer and has treked to South Georgia to spend two months with the cows and chickens.

Three cheers for the Recruits. They are about to become full fledged soldiers. They have completed their preliminary training under Lieut. Hanson and are now doing duty with the Company.

The sad news is about to overtake us once more. Clothing settlements are now being figured. Better start watching your jawbone for you need a few of your dollars to pay Uncle Sam for over drawn clothing accounts, and that hurts the old bank roll.

(2) If orders have already been given, but not already executed, to make satisfactory arrangements with the tailors to cancel the order.

(3) If orders have already been given and executed to the extent where the tailor cannot cancel order without loss, to direct completion of the coats with standing collar and to purchase from tailor sufficient clothes, from same material, to manufacture new type collar when authorized."

I. S. D. NON-COMS ELECT 1926 OFFICERS

"I move that Sergeant James S. Fuller be unanimously elected." A chorus of "Ayes" and the Non-commissioned Officers' Club of the Infantry School Detachment had secured a capable and popular President for the coming year Corporal Roy Dotson and Sergeant Edgar L. Hendricks quickly became Vice President and Secretary-Treasurer respectively. Sergeant Fuller, Ser geant George H. Hesse and Sergeant Herbert O. Richardson were chosen members of the Board of Governors, completing a group of officers which assures the Club efficient management and successful achievement in 1926.

The designation of a committee to give a dance for the benefit of the Garrison School Fund and some good "chow" brought the regular December meeting of this club to a close.

COURT QUINTET FIRST VICTORY

Columbus Y Team Bows in Second Half to Superior Team Play of Benning Basket Shooters

Before a crowd consisting of about 200 members of the 24th Infantry, and about an equal number from other about an equal number from other units of the garrison, the basketball team from the west end of camp battled three-quarters of the way through a close contest last Friday evening with the Columbus Y, and won out by a final spurt.

In the first half their ball handling was uneven, but later they passed back and forth in pairs in a fashion ade-quate enough to hang up a victory. Bell particularly shone with his pass-ing to Trammell for shots, although when Brown passed to him or he tried a long shot or so, he demonstrated caging accuracy of his own.

Prior to the commencement of the feature contest of the evening, two teams designed as "Ladies of the 24th Infantry" took the floor, distinguished by ties or the lack of them on their middles, and showed a good rudimentary knowledge of the game though middies, and showed a good rudimentary knowledge of the game, though little precision at basket shooting. The "cheerful men with happy hearts" who themselves played in absolute silence, and both sections of the spectators' stands, refused to take the contest seriously, and gales of laughter greeted good shots and bad, good blocking and failures in attempts to block. The Red's (tieless) won over the Blues 6-1. the Blues 6-1.

BETTER SHOOTING BY 83rd POLOISTS

"The poor artillery" with few available polo players and a shortage of mounts stepped off on high last Sunday afternoon and dipped the colors of the able 29th Infantry quartet in the initial chukker of the round-robbin contest. Although they lost a succeed-ing chukker to the same regimentals later in the session, they justified themselves splendidly by holding the powerful Freebooters to 1-1 and 0-0 tie scores.

Polo as played between the 29th In fantry and the Freebooters is not a social pink tea, according to observations made on Shannon Field the same after-noon whenever the round-robin brought these together in a "chukker." Hard riding and keen rivalry between the cuartets was evident in every race for the ball, in every tangled stick, and in every feat of "riding-off." The large group of soldier spectators—about the stands—not to speak of the sedate elite in the hundred automobiles got all stirred up, and many a play brought forth cheers and shouts: "Go it, Steve!" or "Come on, Doughboys!" And it was noted that the playing was just as good as the rivalry was keen.

With McFadden, Vangroski, Hillery, and Mandeau as a nucleus from the Infantry squad and with many other promising prospects including Blackmon and Frazier, described by one of the coaches as "a good pair of tackles" and by the other as "two good line plungers," a strong team is being developed, altho when interviewed Lieut. CHRISTMAS PARTY FILLS GYMNASIUM WITH TOYS AND JOY

Santa Claus Arrived on Schedule with Presents for All the Good Youngsters of the Garrison.

Calesthenics, apparatus work for student officers, basketball for team aspirants, were swept off the floor of the Garrison Gymnasium ready for the annual visit of Santa Claus to Fort Benning, bringing toys for the youngsters and the Christmas spirit to the reservation.

The huge room was crowded with tots and totlets. Fathers and mothers were there too. Nuts and candy and horns and whistles put everyone in the right mood of holiday gayety—and then St. Nick came whisking in.

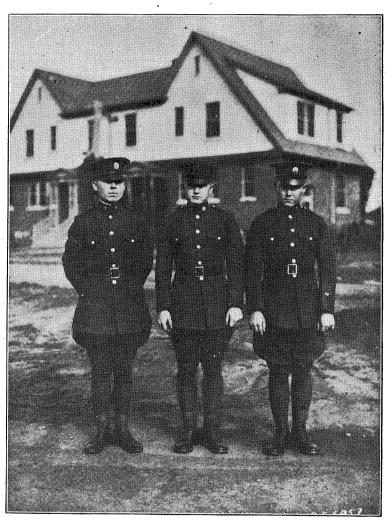

There was no snow but good old Santa found a big white cloud and drove it down on a hard North wind—with its big pack carrying toys for all.

Six hundred young throats sent up squeals of delight. Twelve hundred young hands clapped with happiness, and twelve hundred eyes opened wide to see the size of the pack he brought.

After a brief greeting, he set quickly to work and a regular succession of balls and trains, dishes and dolls, drums and games, Teddy Bears and toys passed from his genial hands into the outstretched fingers of happy children. Under the tall tree they filed, each getting his or her little package properly named and tearing open the Christmas wrapping to the accompaniment of cheerful shouts

"BROTHERS IN ARMS"

Sgt. William Taylor. Pfc. Chas. C. Taylor Pvt. Seth Taylor of Fort Benning and Rochelle, Ga.

Up to the recruiting officer's desk stepped a sergeant of the Medical dedachment. "I have a brother at home. Can he get into the Army?" he asked. "I think the army'll be a good place for him." The brother came, then another, until the Taylor family had three representatives at Fort Benning. Twelve soldiers at this garrison hail from this Georgia town of 1445, Rochelle. Two more Taylor brothers aim to enter the service when they attain the proper age.

CHRISTMAS WISHES FOR THE COMMAND FROM THE GENERAL

Commandant of the Infantry School Writes Holiday Greetings to Personnel of the Garrison

NINETEEN HUNDRED and twenty five years have come and passed since the first Christmas day. Generations and generations of peoples have lived their lives in a rapidly changing world. Nations have risen to heights of opulence and power, and nations have perished. The ideals of many ages have been transmitted to us and have helped to form a great era of civilization and power.

IN THE PASSING of the years, but few of these ideals have remained unchanged. But there is one!

ON THE FIRST CHRISTMAS day was born a spirit of Fellowship and Comradeship which has survived all Time; an inspiration to Service.

SERVICE IS THE greatest word in our English language. With Fellowship and Comradeship, it forms the ideal which has inspired the great soldiers of all the ages.

BECAUSE MEN SERVED faithfully in the Crusades, the Christian religion and our modern civilization were saved Because other men served faithfully, a New World was found and the seeds of our great Nation were sown on fertile ground. Because of the same Service, our arms have been carried victoriously thru every crisis which has threatened our national life.

THERE IS NO OLDER calling than the profession of arms; there is none more honorable. There is no truer Christian than a true soldier. Soldiers are gathered here today to celebrate Christmas, and the Fellowship, Comradeship, and Service for which the day stands.

I WISH ALL OF YOU the happiest of Yuletides. May the same spirit fill the homes from which you come. May the hearts of those loved ones in your homes be filled with pride because of your splendid Servic.

I AM PROUD to have been your Commandant during the past year. May the path ahead be that of true soldiers, inspired with the high calling of the honorable profession of arms.

B. H. WELLS, Brigadier General, Commandant.

an honorable discharge in his hand (Character: "Excellent.") and found himself a private citizen. Straight for Chicago, the big Pole decided to head. He told the World about it.

"I'm through for good!" said he.

That was about Thanksgiving time. The day after Christmas he was back in uniform, back in good old "B" Company of the Tanks. The intra-mural football season was on. His outfit seemed to need him, and back to the Benning gridirons came Swantic.

This powerful fullback who has carried the number "32" with a crash into many a hostile line, who has twice gone to Washington for the premier classic of the services, the President's Cup contest, is one of the last of our old timers. As ages go, particularly among Infantry gridsters, he is still very young. But he has given a full measure of service—enough to tell us that there is still more service in his stout limbs and sturdy heart.

Swantic is one of the few pigskin carriers now on the Benning plain.

Enlisting originally in Company 'B' of the 15th Tanks at Camp Meade, he first arrived at this station in 1920 when the whippets and the Mark VIII's initially rumbled off their flat cars to prepare to give those famous demonstrations to "Basic Two" on Cook's Ridge

Letter from Chilkoot Barracks Tells of Doughboy Interest in Infantry Grid Record

Major Milburn has received a letter from Captain Edwin S. Beall which shows how widely our "Four Touchdown Doughboys" were followed aat distant Army posts. The Chilkoot Post has carried regular accounts of the results of our games. Now comes this personal message to the Head Coach whose work was primarily responsible for our work was primardate achievements:

Chilkoot, Barracks, Alaska,

November 21, 1925.

Dear Major Milburn: First Let me congratulate you on the excellent results you are obtaining with the team this year. We are two weeks behind with the news up here but hope the Marine game has been won. I have seen, and am surprised to see that every officers up here and the enlisted men, very much interested in the Infantry team. We have arranged to get the results by Friday we had a game "For Blood," between the companies here which my company won 6 to 0. The betting was two to one against us. Capt. Curry (Benning '23) whom you may remember commands the other company. Only game in Alaska this year.

I have a man, who graduated with an A. B. degree at Rio Grande college in Ohio was captain of the team and after Ohio was captain of the team and after he graduated he took the coaching course under Rockne then won the state championship with his high school team in 1923 in West Virginia. Corporal Wiseman is a very fast man and plays somewhat like Smythe. He probably weighs about 170. His tour of duty up here expires next June. All the officers here are of the opinion that he would be exceptionally good material for the Infantry ceptionally good material for the Infantry

Please give to all whom I may know my best regards and may things run smoothly for you and may you be suc-cessful in all the things you undertake or desire.

Sincerely, Edwin S. Beall, Capt. 7th Inf.

REVISED REEL CART RETURNING FOR TEST

Under the direction of the Signal Corps, the army has designed a new type of reel cart for carrying field telephone wire by communications units, specially built to overcome the deficiencies of the present type of knock-down cart, known as RL-16. Four years ago the Department of Experiment and the Infantry Board made an extensive test of the RL-16 cart and recommended several changes, including the elimination of the knockdown principle and additional strength. The new model cart has now been completed, and after prelim-inary tests at the Fort Monmouth (Camp Vail) Signal School, will be shipped to Benning for practical service tests. This cart, it appears, has been built,

This cart, it appears, has been built, heavier than the old one, with the particular purpose of making it capable of being trailed behind trucks at relatively high rate of speed, as well as behind Infantry animal-drawn vehicles. Its wheels are of the artillery type and the wire reel is hung low so as to give greater steadiness over rough ground.

Model (to artist who is painting his picture): Could you put a cigar in my mouth?"

Artist: Yes, but it would cost you ten cents extra.

Infantry School News, Fort Benning, Ga., Dear Sir:

Mrs. Lattin and I find we cannot get along without the Infantry School News to give us information about Fort Benning and our friends there. So, please start me off with a year's subscription, beginning with the first issue you published in October. Send me the bill, and will pay by return check.

Although my orders do not so define my status, I am really Signal Corps Liaison Officer with the French Signal Corps, keeping the American Army informed so far as possible, concerning their signal equipment, and their their signal equnipment, and their methods of handling signal communi cation with their Signal Corps and other line troops. Have attended the Signal Corps maneuvers in central France, at LaCourtine which may be familiar to some of the Infantrymen who were stationed there during the War. Not long ago I followed the signal troops during the northern man-euvers in France, between Reims and Laon, ending at what still remains of the old HUNDING Line. At present am on duty with the central development and supply section of the French Signal Corps, in the Invalides, in Paris. Next week I begin taking the laboratory courses of the Ecole Superieure d'Electricite, as well as observing the training of the new recruits of the Signal Corps, at MontValerien, near Paris. In April I take a one month's course for French staff officers, at the Signal School at Versailles, and during May, June and July I will follow the regular three months course in signal communication, for signal and communication, for signal and communications officers of all arms. Next September I expect to be back at the American Signal School, where I can continue my efforts begun at Fort Benning as Signal Corps Liaison Officer with the Infantry School, to coordinate the signal activities of the Infantry and Signal Corps.

As we predicted before we left Fort Benning, we certailly miss the Infantry School, and hope that sometime fate and the powers that be, will return us to that station.

> Sincerely, JAY D. B. LATTIN, Capt. Sig. C.

YOUR MOTHER
You may travel this wide world over You may seek but you will never find Another pal like your mother One so loving and kind.

Palaces, pleasures and pearls Are things that money can buy. Compare them with the love of mother On whom we can rely.

She is often filled with sorrow For the pitiful things that we've done. You will find her a friend on the morrow

But one like her-no, not one.

And when you were a little lad So helpless and so small You often wanted things so bad And mother gave you all.

What a loving pal is mother When you are led astray.

Just stop and think how she loves you And then turn the other way.

THE HOSSES

(Knowing Rudyard would never recognize this I won't applicate at all.) I've taken my falls where I found them I've had some rough rides in my time Fooling with horses at Riley,

Some of the lot there were prime.

I've ridden them just as I drew them,

In fact I've ridden them all
And the best of the lot had a galt like as not,

That was mostly walk, stumble and fall.

Now I are nt no 'and with the 'orses For takin' them all along, Just when you think that you know them

Then you're most like to be wrong. There's times a policin' is due you, Times when you knew it is not

But the things you will learn from the bays and the browns Will help with the sorrels a lot.

was a young one at Riley, Shy as a girl to begin, Old Aggie Austin she made me, And Aggie was rougher than sin Older than me was my first one, Just like a mother she were, Aggie was rougher than sin.

Show'd me the way to make men earn their pay And I learned about horses from her

Then they assigned me to Bold Boy, Or I might have rode Aggie once more

And they told me to watch out for fire works,
If someone should hollar out 'Door.'

He was tame as a dog when I mounted.

But he soon came to life with a vim And shook out his hump when we went o'er a bump,

So I learned about horses from him.

Chamberlain then was my next one A very nice horse in his stall, seemed that his bad reputation, Could be hardly deserving at all. He could walk, trot, and gallop—and then some,

s I think of those days I can see It's a logical guess that the Pony Express

As a mail man had nothing on me.

Oh! I've taken my spills where I found them,

And drawn my insurance besides, So everything taken together I've been well repaid for my rides. And the end of it's sittin' and thinkin'

If this is peace what can war be,
The best borse to be found's on a Merry-Go-Round

So learn about horses from me.

"FOLLOW ME"

Dear Santa Claus: They tell us that way up north you have lots of things for good boys who behave themselves and do what they of the United States Army Motion Picare told like good soldiers. We have ture lots of guns and drums and footballs Though these have been in existence down here. We have a little train on for sometime, it is not sufficiently well narrow tracks and many tents to play known that these can be purchased for house in. But there are a lot of things we would like to have. Two years ago at a saving of twenty-five cents on you sent us down a few brick houses for those of us who have officers' soldiers suits but we haven't enough to go round. Last year you sent a piece of a barrack building, and we also got a lot of presents that we put together to make a Doughboy Stadium for football and Gowdy Field for baseball.

We think we have been good boys down here and hope that your presents will not be gone by the time you get way down here in Georgia. We should like some buildings to put our things in. We should like some good houses to live in. Our roads are rough, and some concrete roads and walks would be nice for us to run our automobiles and velocipedes on, instead of the muddy paths and streets we now have. Way up north where you live, there are lots and lots of nice buildings But we are so far down South that we are afraid you'll forget all about us, or that your reindeer will be tired and not able to pull your big bunch of presents for good boys this for.

The other day the older folks said there were going to be a lot of nice new soldier suits made up where you are, and we should like to have some We are playing soldiers pretty hard, our soldier suits aren't very nice, but we could get along with them alright and would rather have new houses and walks. Can't you send down something good right away this Christmas.

Please send us plenty of things, Santa.

Orphan Benning.

"Zipper Jake" has been putting the old stuff into the I. S. D. gridsters, and from the way they looked at a recent long scrimmage practice it is apparent that though their uniforms are of that colo rwe can never call them "The Great Green Team."

"FOLLOW ME"

Special attention is directed to the article in another column relative to the propriety, value, and convenience Coupon Books, ('USAMP's) cash or credit from orderly rooms at every dollar and a half. Using these books you can see ten shows for the price of seven or eight.

Information from New York promises that the ultra-liberal, and possibly pacifist weekly, THE NATION, is going to publish a full account of the acquittal of the Americus man who shot a 24th Infantry soldier September first because a sidewalk eight feet ten in ches wide wasn't broad enough for both of them.

We admire the courage of the Editor of the Camp Lewis News who tries to tell the General how to run the Post, and suggests that the Engineer unit be diverted from other duties and set to work repairing a certain much used and badly conditioned road within the limits of that garrison.

It will help us to fulfill for ourselves the hope of Bobby Burns, "to see ourselves as others see us," if distant mail subscribers will send us clippings "stories" of newspaper articles and which mention Fort Benning.

With Squirrel, Silvers, and Swantie gone, we wonder what is going to happen to the Tanks when they want to form an "S" swimming team, for these three with Steer and Sweeney certainly were five "S-Swimming-Soldiers!"

Officers living in Block 19 do not now have to motor all the way to town to learn what "guano" means—especially when the wind is from the west and wafts across the golf course.

Married men are especially asked to bring their families to the Wednesday evening soldier dances at the Service Club which are run for the particular asked for a full account of the Armisbenefit of the garrison personnel.

"FOLLOW ME"

The device of the Infantry School is thoroughly symbolic of the ideals and the role of the institution it represents. A shield of azure bears a bayonet argent surmounted by the motto: "Follow Me." The shield itself is of a type borne by the foot soldiers of old. The color is the distinctive Infantry blue. The bayonet is the paramount Infantry weanon.

By the bayonet, or the threat of the bayonet, is ground captured, the line advanced, the battle won. The cavalryman with his shock action and saber. the artilleryman with his big guns, the aviator with his far-seeing eyes and deadly bombs, are indispensable, but after all they exist only to aid the Infantryman, who with his cold steel meets the enemy face to face and conquers him man to man and hand to hand. In all conflicts the primary tactical principle of the offensive, which alone is decisive, is to go forward with the fixed determination of driving home the bayonet of the Infantry.

The High Command and staff may plan and direct the action, but the man with the bayonet leads and finishes the attack and he holds ground gained. He is the first to pierce the enemy line, and his final position marks the limits of the ground actually taken. Infantry determines the victory; Infantry pays the greatest price in casualties; and Infantry has the place of honor. Infantry leads, the others follow. The manpower of the Nation is organized that Infantrymen with the bayonet may push on and close with the enemy. If the bayonet could speak, what else would it say but "Follow Me."

Our motto is appropriate, for it breathes the very spirit of the bayonet and of those who wield it-the Infantry. "Follow Me" is the prescribed command by which the corporal leads his squad, the basic Infantry unit. It is a distinctively American command, found in no other army, and typical of the manner in which American troops are led, not driven, into action

This is the emblem of the Infantry School. As the Infantry leads the other arms on the field, so does the Infantry School lead the Infantry instruction of the three-component army, regulars, guardsmen, and reserves. Amid the woods and hills and plains of the Fort Benning reservation, the School is developing and training officers and non-commissioned officers to be leaders of men. The School is teaching the best modern applications of tactical principles. The School is preparing for our army a better Infantry. The School says with confidence to the regiments of Infantry, as the Infantry itself says to the Army as a whole "Follow Me."

(Copies of this editorial are available for distribution for framing and hanging in recreation halls, orderly Requests rooms, and residences. should be made at the Infantry School News office.)

OUR CHRISTMAS STORY

On our way out from town the other day we were surprised to OVERTAKE a motorcycle cop traveling at LESS than thirty per.

We were mystified until we looked up the road and then we understood. It was almost Christmas time and we had run up on a beautiful little illustration of the Three Wisemen following the Star.

The First Wiseman, a dashing young officer, loafed along at about 29 3-4 miles per hour, in a Speed Baby easily able to ramble out ninety per.

The Second Wiseman, a Howard taxidriver, struggled manfully to keep his restless Six-Twix within the legal limit.

And the Third Wiseman, the gay M. P., had disconnected one of the spark plugs to keep the chained meteor he was riding from running over the taxi.

Maybe you have heard that there was Wiseman: well in this case Fourth there was—and we were him, for—

NOVEL PAPER CHASE SCHEDULED FOR MEN WHO "LEAD THE WAY"

29th Infantry Officers and Ladies Arranging for Mounted Event Next Tuesday Morning

Indoor formalities are to be super-seded by an open air ride over hills and plains and trails as the regular monthly social function for the offi-cers and ladies of the 29th Infantry. Tuesday morning next, horses will be assembled at the regimental Officers' Mess, coffee will be served prior to mounting up, and a competitive paper chase will start promptly at 8:00 o'clock.

Only good trails will be followed, and riders may proceed as slowly or as fast as desired—provided they be not pushed too hard. GOWDY'S COMING NOW AWAITS ONLY WASHINGTON O. K.

Columbus, Ohio, American Association, Baseball Team Slated to Have Early Training Season on Gowdy Field

Every member of the garrison at Fort Benning is keenly interested in the coming of Hank Gowdy to Gowdy Field, bringing his Columbus (Ohio) baseball team for training purposes to the banks of the Chattahoochee. "Hank" wants We want him.

to come. We want him.

If Washington approves, the deal will go through. The successful accomplisego through. The successful accomplisement of this plan will undoubtedly be a fine thing for baseball in this region. Not since Toronto used the Driving Park for training, has a big team used this region for a training area. Good baseball is always desired, and good baseball will be seen daily on Gowdy Field if Ser-geant Hank of the "Fighting 69th" brings his men down here.

It is hoped that a special exception may made to the general War Department order to permit this stimulus to baseball on the reservation. In 1923, it was officially announced that no contests could be staged at any military fort unless half of the teams, contestants, or entrants in each separate race, game, or bout were army personnel. There or bout were army personnel. There had been trouble in various localities because fights had been put on at Army posts, and outside contenders were appearing to the exclusion of the soldiers. The Army desires to foster army athletics. So the rule was established.

If the rule is maintained, Gowdy's Co lumbus team may still train here, but may not play outside teams at games for which admission is charged. In view of the desire to stimulate sport at Benning, and in view of the special relations existing between "Hank" Gowdy and the field that is named after him it is expected that an exception will be made to the general rule. It will be rememexpected that an exception will be made to the general rule. It will be remembered that it was possible to have a clash at Fort Benning between the Senators and the Giants last spring. What has been done, may be done again, say the folks at Benning.

Great credit is due the athletic management at the fort for position this year.

agement at the fort for putting this venure through. And it seems that the requisie permission will be granted by the Washington officials.

HOLIDAY OFFICE REGULATIONE

Students and instructors will not be the only ones to enjoy their Christmas holidays. Following last week's order holidays. that work in the Acedemic Department would be suspended from Christmas to New Year's, new instructions have been issued to the effect that heads of administrative offices may excuse daily at noon from December 23rd to January 3rd, inclusive, such administrative per sonnel as can be spared. It is stipulated however, that work must be kept up to date, and that at least one officer warrant officer shall remain on duty during the afternoons. Message Center distributions from Headquarters will be made at 8:30, a. m. and 10:30, a. m. during this holiday period.

"When you get through reading about the Air Service, and go up in the air and come down to earth, do not forget that it is the poor bloomin' Infantry (P. B. I.) that has all the work to do. The Doughboy, ever since America, has fought, bled and died for his country, and will continue to fight, bleed, and win victories for American arms just as long as we are Americans."—Army and Navy Courier.

THE CHURCH IN THE ARMY

More than half a million increase in the voluntary attendance of officers and enlisted men of the Regular Army at stated services of worship in army posts during the past fiscal year is indicated by the anual report of Colonel John T. Axton, Chief of Chaplains, as submitted to the Secretary of War. By the law of averages it appears that submitted to the Secretary of the law of averages it appears that every member of the military establishment attended church on an army post thirteen times during the year. The report does not take into consideration the large number of officers and enlisted men who regularly worship in civilian churches near their stations.

The report calls attention to the fact that most of the services were held in improvised places of worship such as dance halls, gymnasiums, recreation rooms, theatres and service clubs and in many instances in the open air. Provision has been made for suitable church buildings on relative few military reservations.

29th Infantry News Notes

Regimental Headquarters Co. Yes, sir, Regimental Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry, has a real scrapper, known all over the camp as "Cyclone Akers," Sergeant Akers, downed First Dill in the first round of the fight in Columbus last Friday night, and only for the bell would have been victorious, but did the good work in the second round, the first thirty seconds, when he put his opponent to sleep. Sergeant put his opponent to sleep. Sergeant Akers is found at every leisure moment taking exercises of all kinds to keep in good shape to down them all, and we all believe in him.

We are all starving. We quit eating to be sure of having room for the wonder ful dinner that is being arranged for Christmas. It is going to be more than regimental headquarters would think, having over twenty varieties of good things to eat. We have been getting real good things of the best variety in the second things of the second things o real good things of the best variety since in the new building, and it seems to get better every day, many thinks to Mess Officer Prather, and Mess Sergeant James Derybshire.

Howitzer Company
Privates Johnson Norman and Otis L.
Workman left the company today on a ten day furlough and will spend the holi-Holidays at their home in Elk Valley,

Company "A"
Three of Company "A"s stalwarts were members of the First Battalion team that the battled I. S. D. to the finish last aturday. Outweighed by 15 pounds a man, and against older an dmore exbitter end, and twice held their opponents in the shadow of the goal posts. The work of Mandeau and McCarthy players from last year, and Caldwell, a new man stood out.

Lt. Bragan took Christmas leave. He well be missed by the Company.
We were very much disappointed by the postponment of the rifle matches. We had expected to prove that Company "A" leads the way in shooting. At present we are tied for the lead having won two out of five matches, aas has Company "C" also.

Company "B"
Sergeants Forney B. Mintz and Leoh
Mintz left on a 30 day furlough, in order to attend the wedding of their sister at Ash, North Carolina.

We deeply regret our 1st Sergeant, John D. Brown, will not be able to eat Christmas dinner with us on account of his brother, who will pay him a visit from

Company "C"
Saturday we received the banner for the best shooting company in the regiment. Corporal John Jordan received a gold watch and ring and Private Sandone received a ring for the highest scores in the target season. Our motto is not "We aim to lead the way" but "We lead the way." Our aim is good and we follow the ball.

Headquarters Co. 2nd Battalion
The Company received letters of commendation from the School Committee and the Regimental Commander last week on the spirit put into the last Demonstration of the functioning of a Batta-lion Headquarers and Headquarters lion Headquarers and Headquarters Company in the field. The Battalion Commander and all members of the Company felt quite proud and pleased that the efforts put forth in the demonstration were not in vain. It sure is something to know that we show the student officers of the Infantry how to do things and show them right.

Company "F"
Well again the 2nd Battalion starts off with the same pep as they had in the Season of "24" by winning the first game of the Inter-mural Football" season, assisted by Maguire, McCoy, and Carlin from good old Comany "F."

Among the new men that came to the Company from the Recruit Center we find that we have one man that has just left the 21st Infanrty. We wish Frank J. Pickett luck in the 29th.

Lt. Smithers of this Company is leaving us for a few days to spend Christmas with relatives in Florida.

Company "H"

As our regular reporter is on a job of Company Fatigue that is very urgent, new hand will submit a few demarks, Quite a few of our boys are going on holiday leave, and several more are left. But the Company has something in store that will be quite a surprise, and appreciated very much.

Our building program is fast nearing completion, and then the Supply Sergeant (Frank Lavendar) can find out where everything is. At present he is holding back on the boys, and saying: "Everything is tore up and I can't find it."

The Company extends its sympathy to our Mess Sergeant Cody, as his baby is very ill.

Another one of our recruits, Private Another one of our recruits, Private Osborn, got discharged Saturday on account of under age. (We have lost another good man.) We have lost quite a few through that route lately. If they keep on getting out Corporal Gilgar will be the only one on Recruit Drill.

The 2nd Battalion won its first game from the hard fighting Artillery men.

The 2nd Battalion won its first game from the hard fighting Artillery men Friday, by the small score of 6 to 9.

We expect to play the I. S. D. Saturday. Look out, Green Backs, we are coming through!

RIFLE ROOKIES SHOOT WELL IN 29th

This may account for the fact that the two leaders in the Tyro Match for enlisted riflemen of the 29th Infantry who have not yet qualified on the range are from Company "A." Private Detweiler Company "A." Private Detweiler heads the list with the excellent score of 90 out of a possible 100, closely followed by Private Brantley and Private Gilreath, Company "H," with 87. GREEN MAKES RUN NINETY-TWO YARDS FOR TOUCHDOWN

I. S. D. Victory Over First Battalion 39-0, Featured by Strong Defense of the Greenback Team

Doughboy stadium saw its first touchdown from kickoff Sunday, when Green of the I. S. D. Greenbacks, standing on his own 8 yard line grabbed the ball and dashed 92 yards straight down the center of the field for a score. This hap-pened in the first quarter of the game with the First Battalion of the 29th Infantry. The Detachment's team was already leading 7 to 0, and before the final whistle blew increased its total to 39.

Meanwhile a stonewall defense held the Doughboys helpless. Three first downs, all in the closing minutes of play when the I. S. D. had run in all its sub-stitutes, represented their entire offen-sive. A well conceived and cleverly excuted passing game, with Carpenter starring on the receiving end; a powerful and deceptive running game, in which Green's line plunging, Woidyla's dashes off tackle, and Buck's end runs from kick formation stood out prominently; and an impenetrable defense by the entire line proved too much for the 1st Battalion, and turned the game into a

For the Battalion, Mandeau, Hillery, and Butcher played strong defensive games in the line and Vangroski did yeoman service in the backfield. Allen and Romploski bore the burden of the offensive and against a weaker defense might have made better progress.

The final result was forecast soon after the initial kickoff. Receiving the ball on their own 20 yard line the Detach-ment made four first downs in four ment made four first downs in four plays, driving to within 10 yards of a score. Here the Doughboys braced and took the ball on downs. After an exchange of punts, the Greenbacks marched 50 yards for a touchdown, a pass, Green to Carpenter, and Green's line plunges featuring. SECOND BATTALION OPENS GRID SERIES WITH CLOSE VICTORY

Artillerymen Keep Score Almost Even and Press Heavier Opponents from First Whistle to End of Contest

Starting their initial contest of the intra-mural football series with the odds against them in weight and reputation the 83rd Field Artillery put up a striking exhibition against the Second Battalion of the 29th Infantry, although they finally lost by the score of 9-6. They finally lost by the score of 9-6. They played like a well drilled team, and great credit is due their coaches.

Probably most notable of all was the fine work displayed by the agile gunners against their heavier opponents from the Infantry regiment. Making only four first downs to their opponents sixteen, they nevertheless stood firmly time and again, forced the doughboys to the aerial route, nabbed fumbles from kicks and scrimmages in a manner that showed their pep and drive, and evened the count on touchdowns. Lapine and Dunn were towers of strength in the tackle positions, and McAuliffe and Samlavich carried the ball well enough—with Bouquin's help—to even the touchdown tally of their opponents. Lester starred at end.

Each eleven put up splendid goal-line defenses, the Battalion taking it away on their own 2-yard line, and the Gunners duplicating the trick in the last moments of the game on their 2-yard line, when Kgelstrom was twice stopped by the line, and Dunn beat down two forward pass-The two touchdowns scored resulted from hefty heaves, Samlavich to Schulte for the Artillery, making the final whitewash over 18 yards in the first quarter, and Kgelstrom to "High" Davis over 21 yards for the Battalion in the second quarter.

The margin of victory in points came from the educated toe of Kgelstrom during the initial quarter. After heaving to Davis for 19 yards and carrying the ball himself on successive plays, Kgelstrom found he had advanced from mid-field to the Artillery 10-yard line. Lester threw him for a three yard loss; he gained four at left end; he lost one; and then, standing on his own 15-yard line he lifted the deciding counts over the crossbar.

Thereafter the game was an equal battle, the better gaining of the Second's being off-set by many fumbles of their own and brilliant running and tackling by Samlavich and McAuliffe. In spite of the disparity of the first down addition the teams were well matched, and it was only through the air that either side could cross the scoring line. In fact, although the defenses against forwards were generally excellent, each touch-

Greetings from Comrades in Arms

By Reyburn Engles
CAPTAIN, QUARTERMASTER CORPS

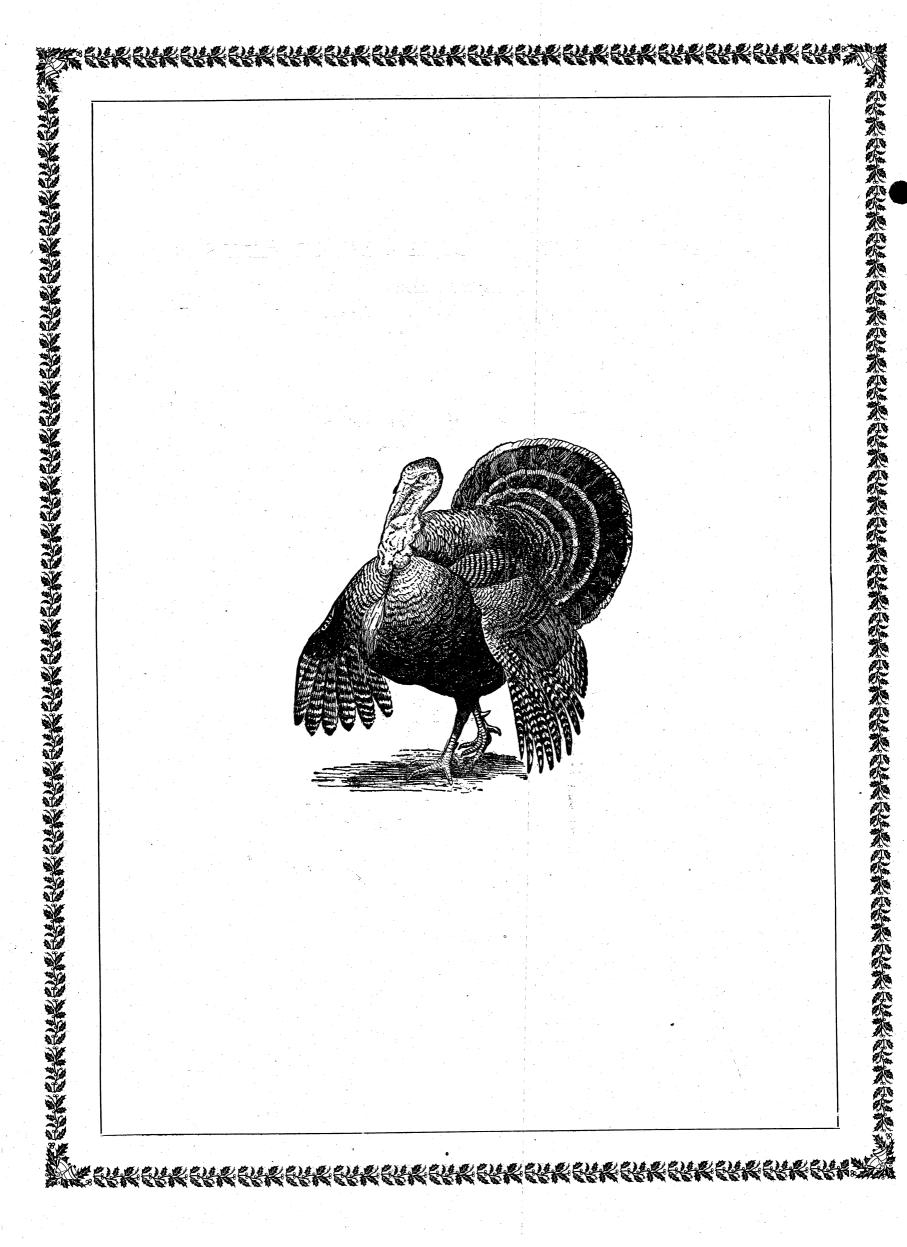

HAT shield of Gold "That Stripe of Blue"—
That plain Bayonet is all you see.
But that's enough to thrill one through—
Just read that "Motto" "FOLLOW ME."

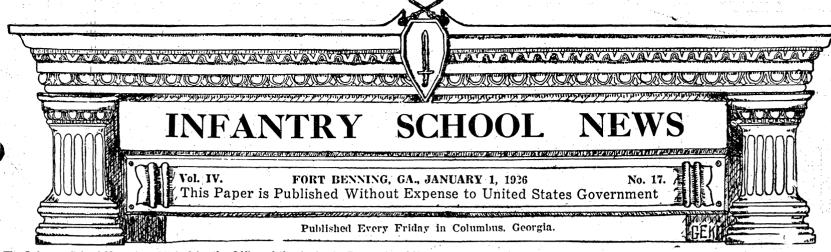

It stands forth boldly in the light—
It fronts us in the hall at night.
The grandest thing we ever see—
The "Doughboy's Motto," "FOLLOW ME."

It occupies a choice spot— And always helps to cheer a lot, When things get blue—we always see That good old Motto—"FOLLOW ME."

We often wish—and hope—and pray— That soon again will come the day, When we'll rejoin the Infantry— And serve that Motto—"FOLLOW ME."

SPLENDID SPIRIT OF EIGHTY-THIRD HIGHLY PRAISED

Battalion Commander Sends Unusual Holiday Commendation to Artillery Coaches and Players.

That the spirit of the game, and not the result, is the thing that counts in proved by the letter of commendation addressed to the members of the fighting football team of the 83rd Field Artillery by their battalion commander. Last season they were hopeless tailenders. This season they have done splendidly. The gallant fight of the gunners against odds in their two games in the intra-mural series will long be remembered. Major Donaldson's Christmas Greetings to his team was sent to each football player and coach, and copies were posted on every battery bulletin board. The letter follows:

Headquarters, 83rd Field Artillery Fort Benning, Ga.

December 23, 1925.

Subject: Christmas Greetings
To: 83rd F. A. Football Team.
1. You have fought two battles for our Battalion—and plucky fights they were—though the scores at the end did not show a victory, the entire battalion is proud of the team and coaches. The Battalion Commander has had phone calls from many sources complimenting the team on the brand of football and commenting on the spirit, sportsman-ship and nerve of the team. You have played a brand of football that increases the prestige of the battalion.

2. The whole Battalion thanks you—and wishes you a Merry Christmas and a successful 1926

SAVANNAH POLO CLUB TO BE HERE THIS WEEK

Few people will admit that when they first looked at a polo mallet, they thought you ought to hit the ball on the end of the mallet instead of the side. why call it a mallet?

So confesses Major Lester Karow, of Savannah, for himself and for the other Savannah, for himself and for the other regular, reserve, and guard officers of Savannah who first took up the game a little over a year ago under the tutelage of Major R. D. Johnson, F. A. Since that the tutelage of Major R. D. Johnson, F. A. Since has indulged in field and indoor, in mallet and skull practice, and has engaged in four formal games with excellent results. They know the game like experts and have collected a capable string of ponics.

For the holiday season, Major H. J. M. Smith, has succeeded in bringing the Savannah team to Benning for games Friday and Sunday afternoons of the coming week, to play the Freebooters on the first date and the 29th Infantry on the Sunday.

COMPANY "H" HAS FEATURE CHRISTMAS CELEBRATION

Hosts to the Regimental Commander and his staff, and their families, as well as the company officers and non-coms and their families, Company "H" celebrated Christmas with a "H" celebrated Christmas with a splendid dinner in an exceptionally well decorated mess hall. Mess Sergeant Lavender and the cooks, Caho, Black. Nixon, Mincey, and Dargas Black, Nixon, Mincey, and Dargas turned out a meal that would have done credit to Oscar of the Waldorf and his staff. And the eye was pleased as much as the stomach because Corporal Sutherland and Privates Bow-man, Duff, Martin, Meadows, and Meadows, and Shoemate had been busy with well selected and finely arranged trimmings for the walls and ceiling.

FIRST BATTALION MACHINE GUNNERS GO COON HUNTING

"D" Company Spends Evening Behind the Hounds Trailing Through the Woods After Coons

Company "D", 29th Infantry celebrated the Christmas holidays last Saturday night by a coon hunt in and around the Experimental Range. The Officers Club kindly lent their club dogs for the chase, and so well did they do that three separate coons were treed and then caught.

The outfit left the company street about dusk and hiked out to the dog kennels where they were joined by Captain Harrison and Sgt. Tweed with several coon hounds. Inside of an hour, the dogs had treed two coons, and in another half hour these had been successfully captured. About two hours was needed to secure the last one, but he was finally added to the night's bag.

Over one hundred men attended the hunt, and so high were their spirits that it appeared that they would scare all the coons over into Alabama. However, developments showed that the noise seemed to attract, rather than repel the curious animals.

After returning to the company a light lunch was served the hungry hunters in the mess and everyone knocked off with a feeling that the evening had been full of pleasure. It is believed that this hunt being so successful other outfits will soon be following suit.

Captain W. A. Burress and Lt. H. W. French, both of Company "D" arranged the details of the hunt and were naturaly on hand to participate in the fun. And all felt, as one man said, they certainly did a good piece of work when thy made up the idea.

TRAINING THE BACKBONE OF THE TWENTY-NINTH

"The back-bone of the army is the

"The back-bone of the army is the non-commissioned man."
So said Rudyard Kipling. So say the officers of the 20th, starting a school for non-com's next Monday, meeting mornings from 7:30 to 11:30 and afternoons from 1:00 to 3:00.

Nothing but studies for the students.
Execut for the regular Saturday merry.

Except for the regular Saturday morning inspections, those taking the course for the walls and ceiling.

Decorations were not confined to the mess hall, either, for the same gang had been busy fixing up a glittering tree in the Recreation IIall.

Gifts to the men of the company included cigarettes for each and a package of Motion Picture coupon books, age of Motion Picture coupon books, good for ten shows, just the number of holidays, and just the thing for the after-Christmas flatness of pocketbooks.

Got a new Day Room Orderly. There is no one shooting free pool with Bryant, O. as Day Room Orderly.

Mock has taken over the Barber Shop since Purvis got discharged. So far there are no men with slashed throats so I think he will be alright.

B' Battery is planning on taking up a collection and having a marble bust made of E. Johnson. It is to rest on a golden pedestal in the Hall of Fame. He can stand on a scale and ring the bell. He can love 20 games of pool in an hour and smile over the loss. He can sit in the middle of the Fort Benning swimming pool and it will overflow its banks. He can argue with the Battery Painter and get the best of the argument.

Battery "B" is sort of mopping up on the supernumeraries this month. So far half have been copped by "B" Battery.

Once there were two boys arguing over a dog. They finally agreed that the one telling the biggest lie should get the dog. While they were contesting a minister came along and with a kindly smile asked them about the contest and they told him but the mina kindly smile asked them about the contest and they told him, but the minister said: "Boys you should not tell lies, I never told a lie in my life," whereupon the boys replied: "Mister, you gets the dog."

A casual visitor will receive the surprise of his erring young life if he strolls down to Engineer Hill. A squad of ponton boats resembling the seacraft of ancient days in their splendor and the modern battleship in their size greets his eye first. Being then duly filled with awe and admiration for all things supernatural the visi-tor strolls further and sees a brance new orderly room all spruced up in the latest mode. Then he gasps. A visit within its portals convinces him that there can be no other like it.

And if he lets his eye wander off he sees a new kitchen, a new mess hall, a new stable, a bath house and the nucleus of what is to be a supply room. Such changes on Engineer Hill are for the betterment of the 7th Engineers in particular and Fort Benning in general.

Of the twelve men that were picked out of the entire U. S. Engineer Corps to take a special six months course in some branch of engineering at Ft. Humphries, Va., two of them, Sgt. Thomas H. Brock and Pvt. 1st Cl. Cleo Phillips are from our own fighting 7th. They left Ft. Benning Thursday with the best wishes of the entire company for their success.

Pvt. 1st Cl. Patrick Mallory in due appreciation of his invaluable services in the past has been transferred to the supply department. Pvt. Mallory feels duly grateful to the powers that be for his phenomenal rise. Mere words would not express his overwhelming appreciation.

"FOLLOW ME"

Nothing is quite so stirring and satis-"Rock 'em an' sock 'em," says Zipper Jake. Hit 'em hard, but hit 'em fair, hit 'em fair!"

A player came from the hospital to play with his team. The captain of the opposing eleven called his eleven together. "Don't hurt him," he said. "We're here to play clean. If you can't stop him without hurting him, let him go!" The hospital-escaper finished the game without serious damage.

An injured player was tackled. The old injury caused him to wince as he hit the dirt. "Sorry, old man," said his opponent, and helped him to his feet.

A dangerous linesman was being smothered. His opponents combined against him. One of them picked him up, and said: "Nothing meant, but we've got to stop you."

A player started to protest a decision "Don't talk," said his captain. "Play the game!"

In war, the fighters at the front play fair. A wise guy in Berlin and another wise guy in London may be saying that all Britishers or all Germans are devils; but up in the trenches Heinie is respected. He's the fellow that lost that dog that came over No Man's Land, one dark night. And in the Rhineland, though orders said you musn't fraternize, you cannot resist the temptation to talk with the bird at the next cafe table. He might have been opposite you on the Somme. Why, that might have been his dog!

It's just the same in football. Some chaps in the stands may be rabid. They may be stronger fans than sportsmen. They sometimes say things of which no player would be guilty. On the gridiron, the game is hard, but it is played at Benning with a fine sporting spirit. To Kgelstrom, Buck, Lapine, Lindsey, and Romploski, must go the credit for the splendid exhibitions put on during cheer leaders and say: the last two weeks. They are the captains of the teams, and their examples yield the fine contests we have seen on the gridiron-fine in every sense of the word.

Our idea of a good football team is Kgelstrom.

Polo fans will be pleased to see appearing weekly in the Columbus Ledger a series of articles telling how the mounted game is played, written at this garrison by Major Smith and Captain Whisner, in consultation with Col. J. R. Lindsey, Cav., with illustrative diagrams by Captain Liston. Excellent description of the technique of a game too little understood by a majority of polo spectators, these articles will be useful to audiences and serve to indicate how the game is being widely popularized by the army in civilian circles as well as military personnel. It is rumored that a New York organization, distribut. ing sport feature articles to newspapers throughout the country, is taking the series up and preparing to spread them through all localities where military teams are playing the game.

BENNING OFFICERS SECURE ELECTION

Word has reached the garrison that at the recent meeting of the United States Infantry Association held in Washington, two Benning officers were elected to high posts in that associa-tion. General Wells was chosen Vice-President, and Colonel Singleton was selected as one of the members of the Executive Council. Others formerly identified with this station elected to office include: Colonel A. J. MacNab, and Major W. A. Ganoe, chosen with Colonel Singleton for the Advisory Council.

Colonel MacNab was one of the originals at Benning, having been in charge of the Rifle Section of the Department of Military Art when the first big classes were put through the full eight months course was instituted. He was who devised, tested and perfected, and proved the desirability of the present new scheme of instruction in Rifle Markmanship which has revolution-ized target accuracy in the Infantry. Major Ganoe first came to Benning in 1921-1922 as chief of the Editing Board preparing Training Regulations for publication. He then remained as head of the military history instruction, and later went to the Leaven-worth school. He is now in the His-torical Section of the Army War Col-

Before sitting down to the breakfast with music he knew he had carned the nickled stirrups, and Mrs. Bishop the riding whip, offered for the two to lead the ladies and gentlemen home.

Coffee before eight forty-five fortified the riders. The 29th Bugle Corps sounded in rapid succession: "Boots and Saddle" and "Prepare to Mount" and "Mount" and "Forward." The assembled company guidons fluttered and dipped in solute. At pine one the and dipped in salute. OUR NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION We hereby resolve not to make up any funny jokes about the Commandant.

Not to visit Alabama without a pass.

Not to use any Canteen Checks at the Commissary.

Not to ask the Utilities for any plumbing fixtures—for a few months * * *

Not to try and get a good square meal over at the Cafe for less than a Dollar.

Not to try telling our silent (?) partner any more lies—three a day ought to to be enough.

By the way, isn't the Charleston just a development of Walter Camp's Daily

"Yes Sir," said Ezra Cottontop, as he watched his sixteen year old daughter starting off to school, "It's gettin' harder every day, to keep them gals of mine in clothes."

Stable Sergeants had better watch their issue of forage for the next few months. The Quartermaster has been hauling a lot of bailed excelsior out o the Utilities yard lately.

This idea of the Girl Colleges providing smoking rooms for the students comes a little too late as everyone has grown quite used to the sight of the girls "rolling their own" in public.

We received a very sincere compliment today; a friend of ours asked of us if our stuff was original. The only writer we've had to copy from as yet is Noah Webster.

29th Infantry News Notes

Regimental Hdgrs. Company

Regimnetal Headquarte.s Company has had a Merry Christmas, and all are ready to start the New Year for better progress than has been in the

A wonderful dinner was arranged by our Mess Sgt. James Durbershire, who has been trying to make up some of the best menu's that have ever been prepared by any organization in the service, and has succeeded, giving us the finest Christmas dinner that has ever been in this organization, and did we eat. Well we sure didn't starve!

Howitzer Company

Howitzer Company is contemplating turning out a crack basket ball team this season. The company team startthis season. The company team started Sunday with their first practice and the basketeers promise to give other teams on the post a fast battle.

Company "A"

Christmas has passed and Company "A" is celebrating the return to normalcy. Quite a few, while vastly enjoying Christmas dinner, were heard to declare they never would eat again.

Cpls. Clark and Schmengle took Christmas furloughs.

Cook Thomas R. Walden, a shiek of Columbus, will be discharged Tuesday per Expiration Term of Service. Pyt. Walden will try selling real estate in Florida and will regret the loss of his services.

The Christmas spirit gripped this Company and everybody came out of the mess hall with a big smile. Our basketball team will soon be in shape and any company wanting to book games should communicate with Corporal Magagna.

Company "C"
Quite a number of the men are applying for their packages at the Order-ly Room. It seems that there has been a tie-up in the delivery of Xmas mail, probably because "C" Company is getting on many bundles for Uncle Sam to carry.

Hdqrs. Company 2nd Battalion The Second Battalion made a practice march on the 23rd. We kept a fairly good pace but everyone wanted to go faster even till we returned.

For the past two weeks the whole battalion has been looking forward to the game with the I. S. D. Knowing the strength of the Detachment team we were an on edge. But Saturday's game proved our better team and the most likely winner of the pennant race. Let's Go Second Battal.on!

Company "E"

A pleasant surprise awaited the men in this organization as they went in for the morning meal on Christmas Day. Many of us had hung our socks on the stove dampers on Christmas Eve and were rather disappointed on finding them empty next morning. The first glimpse of the mess hall explained it all, though. Santa had been too busy to visit each tent individually so he had-left all-our presents in the mass hall. The room was decorated in true holiday fashion with pine branches and crepe streamers of red and green. At the rear end was a background of white crepe paper extending the full width of the kuilding and in large letters was "A Merry Xmas to All!" Up at the other end was the Christmas tree and the gifts. When the meal tree and the paper were selled and was over all the names were called and as each man stepped forward at his name he was handed his present. Much fun was had by all. There were gifts for every taste, and not one was forgotten. For the childish, playful fellows were little wagons, dolls, butterflies, etc. The noisy boys got drums and whistles: Sgt. Davis also got a new whistle to replace the one he wore out trying to get Henderson and Red Hughes outside for formations. For those who hate to walk there were cars and trolleys. We have enough taxicabs and street cars in the Company now to put Howard out of busidischarged shortly, so we gave them trains to ride home. For the shieks trains to ride home. For the shicks there were powder-puffs and lip-sticks. All the buglers were given new bugand the cooks received cooking utensils.

We will long remember this Christmas, and will always think of our Company Commander with gratitude, for it was his generosity that made this possible. We all hope that his this possible. We all nope that his Christmas was merry indeed.

We hear Pinero is punching the bag regularly now. He is getting himself in trim for the boxing tournament. There is some good puglistic material in this Company. A better bunch of men than Corporals Myers and Oikari and Pvts. Pinero and Davis, G., will be hard to find in one company.

The game between the Second Battalion and the I. S. D. last Saturday was a dandy and Company "E" came in for a full share of the honors. Two company "E" men played in the back-field and we had several men on the bench. rarin' to go in case they were needed. Both of our men, Corpls. Taylor and Oikari, did some brilliant playing. Taylor had his finger broken, but he says that it takes more than that to stop him.

Company "G"
We now have a new jelly bean in hte Co. as Pvt. Fry is following Cpi. II ffman' example.

Talk about speed, we have it. Pvt. Osborne completed a thirty day furlough in five days.

Pvt. Lemmons returned from a fifteen days furlough and wishes to state he appreciates "G" Co.'s mess. Pyt. Fat Sanders is leaving on a thirty day furlough to extend his greeting to a newly born Colt.

Company "G" is in deep sorrow, Tennessee has called Harrison Daniels nesse has calle back to her hills.

On the Rear Platform

(By Sylvia Blascoer)

The Great Coat leaned her arms on the cold, wet, rear railing. "Oh dear," she sighed. A teasing purf of rain and wind rufiled the soft fur at her throat, and in the dim light from the brakeman's lantern a long wisp of golden brown hair waved from beneath the little Blue Toque. The Great Coat sighed and then sniffed hurriedly.

"I wont get my handkerchief! I wont! It's this rain and not tears. It is rain. What do I care if I did have the state of the stat to leave just when things were were getting peppy. What do I care if Ted did say he liked the cream chiffon and I was going to wear it tonight. I don't care! I was born to be an old maid school teacher, and I had no business with a cream chiffon dinner dress on any way." She sniffed again. "It is the rain! Nasty stuff! It falls and falls, unconcerned with Christmas, house parties or eternity. It swells like creeks and rivers, and washes away bridges, and it takes curls out of poor school teachers hair when they are trying to look pretty. Oh why was I ever born look pretty. Oh why was I ever born to be a school teacher in a soulless county school!" and the Great Coat had dropped on its collars that did not fall from the sky. The Little Blue Toque was the sky. The Little Blue roque burrowed deep in the soft fur, and a raged in the Great Coat's heart.

A light touch on the shoulder made her jump. "Pardon me, Madame, I was afraid you were asleep and it is her jump. raining, you know." A voice, a mas raining, you know." A voice, a masculine voice, spoke in her ear. The Great Coat sniffed again in surprise.
"No, I am not asleep—I—I wish I were dead!" The Blue Tcque peered culine from under the Great Coat's arm and saw two neat Tan Oxfords and the end of a pair of light Grey Trousers, and conscious of its tear—beg pardon—rain traced face did not raise its head.

Once Tan Oxford disappeared from vision. It had stepped back at her answer. "Not dead, please," the one Tan Oxford said. "Surely not that on the night after Christmas!"

The Blue Toque answered after a sniff. "Yes, because it is the night after Christmas, and it's raining—and I'm a school teacher—and I had to leave before the party broke up—and I have got to teach a room full of cold-in-the_head children that six times nine is fifty-four, and I don't care if they go through their lives counting on their fingers till they are stiff with rheumatism. Just because a parcel of old men said school had to open on Monday I'm in this poky train when I want to be anywhere else! I hope there is a peculiar kind of pergatory for school boards and education supervisors with the reddest, hottest fire of all for our supervisor."

The Tan Oxfords laughed. "It is hard,"

"Hard" the Blue Toque quivered with emotion, "Hard! What do you know about it to say hard. The chances are you sit at a cleared top desk and smoke twenty-five cent crears until golf time." The Great Coar could stand it no more. "If I sit here I'll mo off and run." She started for a rear coor hurriedly. "I'm going in to concentrate on the very hardest thoughts I can score up for edu cators in general, with a druble one 10r mine in particular. Good night.

The Tan Oxfords chuckled. " am sure we will appreciate any thought from you.

The Blue Toque jumped. "We! We?" 'Yes," answered the Tan Oxfords," supervisor of this district."

The rear door slammed on the retreating Great Coat.

TANK TEAM WINS AGAIN DEFEATING THE FIRST'S BY TWO TOUCHDOWNS

Romploski Unable to Conquer His Team's Heavier Opponents in Wednesday's Intra-Mural Contest

Wednesday's game was won by the Tanks, defeating the First Battalion, 19-6.

One point separated the score board tallies. The Tanks had scored seven points in the first quarter on their third try, following a pretty eighteen yards try, following a pretty eighteen yard run-back of a punt by Dudley, ten yards on four downs, an eleven yard run by Lindsey, and a sneaked forward pass Lindsey to Hart for twenty-yard run to touchdown. The first had scored six points in a strong second quarter come-back. Receiving the ball on the 46 yard line on an out of bounds punt, Romploski—aided by an eight yard run by Allen—carried the ball to the Tanks' sixteen yard line, where it went over. The Tanks soon had to kick, and as the regimental stands cheered their heads off, Allen, McCarthy, and principally Romploski wriggled through the big tanks for three successive first cipally Romploski wriggled through the big tanks for three successive first downs and a six yard twist through the line for a touchdown. The numbers against the sky said seven to six. The Tanks were not so confident.

On the second play of the second half, Wright made the longest run from scrimmage of the intra-mural series thirty-five yards around his own ies, thirty-five yards around his own right end from his own thirty-four yard right end from his own thirty four yard line. The ball was evidently lost on downs on the eleven yard line, but the touchdown was scored on the next drive largely by the penalty route, and the Tanks were well in the lead. They added to the lead as the quarters changed. The Firsts had checked their drives twice in the third quarter, but were unable to make first down themselves. In the final quarter they fought on more even terms, the Firsts getting two first downs to the Tank's one in one in that period. The ball carrying of Romploski, twisting through linesone in that period. The ball carrying of Romploski, twisting through linesmen and away from tacklers, living up to his reputation as the first hattalion whirlwind, was the feature of the game.

GAME OLD GUNNERS FIGHT THE TANKS TO THE VERY END

Artillery Loscs, 6-0, in Pre-Christmas Contest as Intra-Mural Series Progresses

It was almost the end of the third quarter when the Artillery got their first First Down, and the Tankers had meanwhile chalked up thirteen. Yet the score was only 6-0.

It took the tank drivers the entire first half to score their touchdown. Once they drove for a tally, and lost the ball on a fumble on the gunners' 8-yard line. Again they drove in just as close, and lost the pigskin on downs. Again they drove to the 13 yard line, and again lost the ball on downs.

A punt carried the ball to midfield. It changed hands four times. Finally from their own 22-yard line the Tanks started an assault. Five successive first downs barely edged out, a seven yard plunge, and an end run for seven by Sweeney carried it over for the only score of the afternoon.

The second half started like the first, with the Tank assault which the gunners stopped, and a second assault likewise stopped by the fine line work of Lapine and Wargo and the hard tackling of McAuliffe and McMillan. Then on a bobbled pass back from center for a kick, the splendid Schulte made the first First Down for the Artillery. After another exchange of punts—in which Schulte excelled—the Artillery showed their fighting spirit and staged a comeback that menaced the Tanks all the rest of the game.

It was a fine, and hard fought con-It was a fine, and hard fought contest, between a splendid little team and a heavy, strong team. The Tanks won the game, but the Redcoats won the applause of the neutral spectators, staving off defeat and coming back strong. Games like this have made the intramural series famous

GARRISON CHAMPS EDGE OUT VICTORY OVER DETACHMENT

Second Battalion Wins Football Con-test Over amantry School Green-backs by Score of 13-7

A fumble for the winning touchdown. Unusual, perhaps, but it happened Saturday in the Doughboy Stadium. The doughty Doughboys of the 2nd Battalion had driven the I. S. D. Greenbacks to within 9 yards of their goal line, 3rd down and 6 to go. Kgelstrom, brilliant quarterback for the Infantrymen, dashed around his own left flank to the 5 yard mark, where he was tackled fiercely by one of the detachment backs. For once hard the detachment backs. For once hard tackling brought disaster, for the ball slipped from "Kelly's" arms. It bounced over the goal line, where Mc-Guire, vigilant doughboy tackle, promptly fell on it for a touchdown and six points which eventually proved the margin of victory.

At the time, early in the fourth quarter, this break seemed to be only ing insult to injury as the Battalion was leading 7 to 0, but a gallant rally in the closing moments of the game netted the Greenbacks a touchdown, which with the extra point matched this lead. Final score, 2nd Bn. 13, I. S. D. 7.

From the opening whistle the well filled stands were treated to as fine an exhibition as could be asked for. The first half was scoreless and marked by great defensive work. The two lines were so evenly matched that practically every attempt at rushing was futile. The backfield men were also on the alert and all but two passes, one by each team, were knocked harmlessly to the ground.

These netted the only first downs of the half.

This Week's Contests With Wofford, Charlotte Y. M. C. A., and Right Way Five of Macon

Although the basketball schedule is still in an amorphous state and not vet ready for the full light of day, the first contests have been announced as follows:

Jan. 2—Wofford College
Jan. 5—Charlotte, Y. M. C. A.
Jan. 8—Right Way Five of Macon.
Last week Major Van Vliet, the

ARMY ATHLETICS BASIC POLICIES NEWLY DEFINED

War Department General Order Made Public This Week Favors Amateur Principles

For two years the General Staff has been working to get army athletics recognized on an amateur basis by the Amateur Athletic Union and the American Athletic Federation The result has finally been achieved. In the same General Order which announces the new policy, the old rule which restricted sporting events on military reservations to those in which half of the contestants in any one game, event or bout are army personnel has been suppanted by a new rule which mentions this restriction simply in the discussion of boxing contests

"Athletics for all" is the objective set forth. The encouragement of athletics for sport's sake, and the foster-The encouragement of athing of Amateurism are announced as primary aims. Professional contests are not barred, but the distinction between "amateur" and "professional" must be made clear at all times. This order is considered a step towards populariz-ing athletics in the army, so as to have every officer and man in the service en gage in some sort of athleic activity.

The War Department order reads in part as follows:

Athletics for all is the objective of etics in the army. Mass games and athletics in the army. Mass games and group athletes should be developed to the highest degree. Competitive athletes are most desirable, but due to the fact that army athletics are necessarily self-supporing and that conditions vary

Generals McCoy and Rhodes Commencing Doughboy Refresher Course This Week

Two former cavalrymen have arrived at Fort Benning to learn the best trade in the world—the Doughboy trade. Brigadier Generals Frank R. McCoy and Charles D. Rhodes with splendid records in the mounted branch of the service came for the Refresher Class which began January 5, 1926, in order to fit themselves for the command of higher units containing infantry. These officers will remain here about a month.

FINE POLO FURNISHED BY VISITING SAVANNANS

Major Karow of the Georgia National Guard swept over the ground, westwards towards Alabama. The whites and the towards Alabama. yellows were at war. Like a good cavalryman he dashed towards his objective He swung his weapon and the missile sped straight for its goal.

The Savannah Polo Club had scored first and led the Freebooters on the New Year's game on Shannon field. But the Benning riders came back strong, and before the contest was over had amassed a winning margin at 13-5.

Fair weather permitted the first of the scheduled games with the guests, but rain and mud necessistated the calling off of the contest against the 29th Infantry setfor last Sunday, when town and garrison had grown eager to observe the splendid mounts of the Savannans in action.

Thoroughbred racers, fine ponies, and famous mounts to the number of twenty came back by box car from the sea coast city to try their hoofs on the Benning turf. As Captain Collier said: "When they start, they're gone!" Time and again these able polo artists outran the local horses and even "Hicks"—known as the fastest in the garrison-was often outdistanced.

Yellow jacketed Freebooters won, but chiefly by virtue of fine team play on the part of Forsythe and Nichols and long hard strokes by Major Smith who proved his right to a high national rating by driving the ball all the way up to his forwards time and again and executing remarkable strokes with apparent consumate ease.

Benning Basketeers now have their full schedule to hand. The next contest is tonight's clash with the fast traveling "Right Way Five" of Macon whose aggregation, rating for years among the very best of the top notchers in the South has been cutting a wide swathe.

Reinforced this season with Red Simmons and Smokey Harper of Mercer's title winning quint, the Macon group snowed under the Savannah team two weeks ago by the score of 45-19. Facing Olsen's "Terrible Swedes" of Coffeyville, Kansas, last week, they suffered thir Kansas, last week, they suffered thir first defeat in some time, and it was only phenomenal work on the part of Swede Olsen himself in the last half, which enabled the traveling Kansan to turn a first half total of 18-11 into a final victory at 34-28.

Cheered by the startling increase in form and accuracy showed against Charlotte "Y," the Infantry is all ready and set to go:

First of the organizations of the garrison to support the Infantry School News on the new "block subscription" arrangement, the Service Company of the 29th Infantry comes through with sixty-two en-rollments at the rate of one dollar per year, copies to be delivered through the orderly room. If the rest of the troops follow suit, there will be hundreds of copies being read and sent home each week. Fort Benning will be known in every hamlet and town.

SERGEANT DOUGLAS P. LAPINE Headquarters, 83rd Field Artillery

Last June, the 83rd Field was mak ing a practice trek to "St. Joe."
Cuthbert, while the organization cuthbert, while the organization was preparing an over-night stay, two sergeants ambled into town. They told the residents about the regulation radio outfit carried with headquarters, of the

That night, the sergeants said, the bivouacking soldiers would do a broad-casting stunt. Let the village choir come and meet the microphone, "Mick" would send their sweet warblings through the southern evening air to towns and cities far away. Let the village spell-binder come also. That night the rural residents trooped down the dusty road. But where was "Mike" and how could the battalion make good on the fantastic promises of the joking sergeants?

"Mike" was brought forth. The villagers strutted their stuff. The songsters wove a spell of music. The artillerymen sat around and listened to a fine, though impromptu, entertainment. That night, the sergeants said, the fine, though impromptu, entertainment.

And one of the two sergeants was Lapine.

Although in a military sense, Sergeant
Lapine is a radio expert in the 83rd Field Artillery, skilled electrician and transformer man formerly with the General Electric Company of Pittsfield, Massachusetts, he is of course best known to the garrison as one of the two Benningites who filled both tackle positions on the nationally selected All-Service Football Team this fall. Two-time veteran of President's Cup contests, this brown-haired, blue eyed citizen of North Adams, born in Northcitizen of North Adams, born in North-bridge, twenty-seven years ago, is dis-tinctly an Infantry School gridiron product. Only five feet eight inches high, and weighing only 158 pounds, at first, he seemed too frail for the heavy teams beside the Upatoi, and contest after contest saw him injured. Then he learned to direct his line play as well as he directed the 45 bullets which made him a marksman on the pistol range.

Now rating with the best, selected with Columbus all-stars to play Macon last week, able boxer, 1921 middleweight wrestling champion of the corps area, member of the soldier dance committee, chairman of the Holy Name Society, this twenty-seven year old sergeant on his second enlistmnt in the crack demonstration artillery battalion is one of our star athletes. His fine sportsmanship is chiefly responsible for the high repute of the gunner' intra-mural eleven, which he captains.

ARMY ATHLETICS BASIC POLICIES NEWLY DEFINED

(Continued from Page 1) greatly in the different corps areas and departments, it is impracticable to describe a definite program of competitive athletics for the Army. Annual corps area and department games may be held wherever practicable and should be made as representative as possible. Where local conditions make inter-corps area meets possible, such meets or competitions are most desirable. Participation of individual members of the Army, as well as Army teams, in games and competitions conducted by civilian agencies should be encouraged.

2. General policy of the Army relative

a. Amateurism will govern the conduct of Army athletics, and will be strictly adhered to with the exception that professional exhibitions and events may be conducted with the approval of the commanding officer. Such professional events will be clearly advertised and announced as professional, and be distinct from amateur events. Amateurism will be encouraged in the Army.

b. Athletic competitions and exhibitions, in which competitiors participate as individuals, may be held at any time, by any command of the Army, in which the events may be open to members of any or all of the following organizations: Regular Army, National Guard, Organized Reserves, Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and Citizens' Military Training Camps. Prizes will be in accord with amateur standards; no money prizes will be given. Such competitions are "closed meets" as they are strictly limited to personnel connected with the Army. If in such military meets it so happens that amateurs compete against persons who may have previously violated amateur rules, it will in no way tend to professionalize such amateurs. Professional exhibitions and events may, however, be arranged by a commanding officer as part of the program of such a meet or as a separate program when they are clearly advertised and announced as professional. For such professional events cash prizes may be given.

g. National Collegiate Athletic Association rules will govern Army Athletics. Where the National Collegiate Athletic Association has no rules for a paric Association has no rules for a par-ticular sport, Amateur Athletic Union rules or the rules of the special governing body for the sport will be given. In the event of professional exhibitions, the rules which habitually govern such events may be used.

4. General provisions for local restrictions.—Due to existing differences in local laws, the War Department is unable to lay down general restrictions for the conduct of Army Athletics. The general policy of the War Department is to approve only such local restrictions in the conduct of Army athletics. in the conduct of Army athletics as will prevent Army reservations from being used for the evasion of local laws. There are two general classes of questions frequently referred to the War Department for decision, both of which deal with the relation of Army athletics to local laws

a. The first class of questions has to do with the conduct of boxing under any conditions. In questions of this class the policy of the War Department has been announced as follows:

(1) Boxing as an athletic exercise and as a sport should be encouraged. Care must be exercised that it does not lose its character as an exercise or sport. lose its character as an exercise or sport.

(2) The following will govern in permitting boxing contests:

(a) A post within the limits of a city or other municipal corporations will comply with the local ordinances with respect boxing contests. (b) A post not within the limits of a city or other municipal corporation will comply with the State laws with respect to boxing contests.

ritory or the District of Columbia will comply with the laws applicable to such Territory or District.

(d): If there be no local laws or or dinances to the contrary, boxing exhibi-tions may be open to the public.

(e) In order that contests and exhibitions, particularly boxing, shall have no color of professionalism or commerno color of professionalism or commer-cialism, the contestants will, as a rule, be restricted to the military services (Regular Army, National Guard, Organ-ized Reserves, Navy, and Marine Corps.) foregoing rule, and where the public is charged a fee to witness a contest or exhibition, not more than one-half of the contestants in any one event or bout shall be from outside the military ser_ Care will be observed that outvices. side contestants are of good reputation both as individuals and as athletes. b. The second class of questions deals with the conduct of baseball or analogous sports on military reservations on Sundays. In such questions the policy of the War Department has been that Sunday baseball when no admission fee is charged will be allowed on all mili-

"FOLLOW ME"

In the midst of a conversation the other day, a student officer said to the Editor:

"I'm not trying to 'red apple' you, because you're not an instructor. But I can tell you that the class here is seriously very favorably impressed with one thing about the Infantry

"I wish there were some way of telling officers all over the army the one we have come here.

"We had heard about 'Benning' and we knew it was a great place to learn the dope. But we were all a little afraid of it.

"We had doubts, to ourselves, about how we would get on as students. We available, and we thought of them as something sheer and efficient, perhaps high and mighty, and perhaps hardboiled, with little mercy on the ignorant.

"But the thing that stands out in our minds is not the fact that they know their stuff, that the work is now arranged so that it is regularly put across in a systematic manner, that we of these are learning a lot-or any things.

"The one thing we all feel most deeply is the splendid courtesy and the fine patience of the instructors. We never ask a question-however foolish it may seem to those who know the answer-but we get an honest and courteous reply.

"I wish all those who are coming to Benning could know this in advance It'd save them a lot of worry."

In the current issue of the Dearborn Independent there appears a cartoon showing the ladies of this garrison getting their tresses bobbed while the booted and belted officers wait for their hair cuts.

Paper chasers scattering bits of blue and white for the mounted folk to follow had better beware of the range officer now. He'll vice-command the entire American Legion after them instead of just the rag pickers of the guard house garrison.

WHY NOT MAIL THE NEWS HOME?

"FOLLOW ME"

We reverse the motto and follow someone else for a change, taking the following from the editorial columns of the Camp Lewis News:

"The editor would like to call several matters to the attention of the various organization editors and their separate battery, company and unit reporters. It is with respect to the news you are submitting from week to week. In the first place, we see numerous items thing that has impressed us all since referring to the coming of some new man, a recruit, a replacement, or a reenlisted man to a certain outfit. The reporter mentions that several new men have come and they will lighten the burden on those already there. Generally the man's home address is omitted, or where he came from, or any other knew the instructors were the best information concerning him. It would be a fine thing for the reporters to inetrview these men, get their home address, their last place of service, where they were enlisted, and any information about their experience, aptitude or accomplishments in any direction. The publication of such items would be news to the rest of the men and of interest to the man himself.

There is considerable news of a real nature lying around your barracks if you go after it systematically. Of course if you wait until Wednesday morning before you think of it and then sit down to jog off a few items that you happen to think of or remember, you cannot expect to be much of a reporter. Each organization issues orders and memos, and there are things going on around every organization that are never reported. The editor has had to go after the pictures and write-ups appearing in our columns lately. If they belonged to your outfit, why didn't you write them up? They like to see these items; it encourages them, and it helps to boost your outfit also. Every reporter ought to be out after the biography of some of the splendid types of men in their outfit. There are soldiers there with wonderful records. Why not give them a little credit for their good work, their long service, their special accomplishments? There was a recruit that came to the artillery the other day who is exceptionally tall. He looked like a remarkable fellow. The reporter in his battery ought to get his picture and a write-up on him. We will be glad to do this at any time it will help you, for what helps you helps us. Be on the lookout for news all the time."

"FOLLOW ME"

The editor of the Fifth Corps News evidently has forgotten his military duty of obedience. Having received a press announcement from the War Department General Staff with regard to a forthcoming general order on army athletics, he published it in brief resume in his issue of January second, although the document was marked for publication January fourth and broadly and boldly stamped: "FU-TURE RELEASE: NOTE DATE! How do you get away with that sort of stuff, my friend of the scissors and paste?

GALUHN IS GONE

After more than thirty years service in the army, Albert A. A clatter burst from the piano, and "Dave Griffith" hurled himself and his "gamine" through the rough prancing of Parisian apache measure. Informality was the mood, and a cute rendition of "Cecilia" charmed the group until all listeners wanted to steal her. The Colonel's recruiting brought the barbershop harmony from masculine throats. NEW REGULATIONS FOR RETIREMENT

From Washington comes sheet of paper, folded, and covered with four numbered pages of print, Army Regulations 615-395 specify in the latest authoritative guise the manner of computing the thirty years' service required for retirement from the active to the retired list of enlisted men, where they remain for life at three quarters pay plus $9.50 per month for commutation of clothing and rations and $6.25 per month in lieu of quarters, fuel, and light.

In this little pamphlet the question of "double time" is clearly explained, and the problems of service in the National Army, the Philippine Scouts, the Officers' Reserve Corps (active duty), and the U. S. Volunteers, and as a warrant or commissioned officer, are all set down in succinct language. A little pamphlet but it means a lot.

It is Uncle Sam's insurance policy for those who have served him long and well, not life insurance but "old age" insurance and good for life.

What are its provisions? exceptions? better read it carefully. If insured by some fine "certificate" plan you may not be protected, but the note holders are, at your expense.

The protection you need is not included—Personal liability. Fire, theft and collision may be ignored—total loss in these only means that you've lost the cost of the car. If you can't afford that amount of loss, however, you should protect the investment.

A judgment for personal injuries is, however, "something else again, Mawruss."

About 15,000 persons have been injured yearly for the past three years by automobiles. Each accident is a potential damage suit; single judgments running to $50,000 have been awarded by the courts.

Such a judgment against a member of the services might be paid by installments out of his pay. We can protect you against this hazard at a surprisingly small expense. What kind of car have you?

29th Infantry News Notes

This is school week for the Wednesday the non-com school started off as described in last weeks paper. Next Monday the Communications School opens up, teaching radio, telephone, and signal work. The same day a school begins for those who cannot read or write. With winter rains and muddy roads and walks, the indoor work is just the thing to prime everyone for the outside season which will start when the ducks start northward again.

Regimental Headquarters Co. Sgt. Akers, of the Regimental Headquarters Company, Twenty-inth Infantry, our fighting "Cyclone," will meet in a real fight, at the Policeman's ball, Jimmy Gordon, from Minneapolis, Minn., on January 7th, 1925. They say he is getting so good that the horses in the stables at the corral have been trying to break out, on account of the steady practice of Cyclone, who, you remember, laid his opponent to sleep in the second round in the last fight he had in Columbus. He does not talk about this fight, but by his good working out, he seems to be able to meet the best. We all believe in him, and will say that he is one of the best scrappers in the camp.

Private Ray H. Mitchell, a member of this organization, left us Wednesday January 6, being discharged on account We will miss Private of dependency. We will miss Private Mitchell, as he was one of the best natured soldiers in this Company. Good luck, Mitchell.

Privates Thompson and Shaw, have decided that the trousers that they are wearing are too narrow, and have decided to join the bell bottoms, to help shiek the country. Stay in Columbus, boys, because you wont have so far to go, when you re-enlist.

Regimental Headquarters Company is coming to the top, watch out or we'll live up to the Regimental Insignia, which says, "We lead the way."

Howitzer Company

New Years' Day the Regimental Com-mander and his staff were our guests for Mess Sergeant Marshall Bag well and Cooks tockers and Powell sure put on a fine meal and we were glad the big ones had a chance to see how well the Howitzer Company kitchen staff can come through.

We have been showing the student officers the real stuff lately. The only war strength howitzer outfit in the army, our have the honor of strutting their stuff as "hundred per centers" in marks-manship for the benefit of all ranks from lieutenants to brigadiers.

Any men in the company having articles to be published in the Infantry School News see Fountain. Come on, oys, lets put the old Old Service Company on the top every week.

Company "A"
The outfit is full of returned furlough hounds. It seems as though everyone just had to get to the old town during the holidays and see the best girl, and eat home-made turkey.

Cpl. Levan has decided to try it on the outside a while. Best of luck, Fred. Sgt. Saltell leaves this week by purchase. He'll be back, and we hope the two of them will be with us again.

We all noticed and hope everyone else noticed too, that the First Battalion met admittedly superior opponents, fought them off their feet for a while and scored by a straight ball carrying—none of this sneaking through the air stuff—we sure earned every single yard that we got. We are proud of the whole lot of them.

We have a fine picture of the outfit showing one hundred and sev-enty-one student captians how it is done. You'll see it in the Infantry School News before long. And then all the time Sergant Stary can spare from his job of shouting "March" and "Arms" he is bat-tling the volley ball around and getting others to do the same, showing him their And then all the time stuff to maintain our reputaion as volley ball sars.

Although we have been continuously busy on special assignments we have found time to spruce up the appearance the company area and quarters. "That's "B" Company's park!" they all say as they go by our neighborhood nowadays.

Mess No. 5 Wins Coveted Prize

For having the best mess hall for the month of December Co. "M" won the regimental pennant on New Year's day. As the last day of the contest neared the feeling was high in the var-ious mess halls. Each morning the Officer of the Day made an inspection of the five mess halls of the regiment and after a rigid search rated the companies. All during the month the various messes were nip and tuck, one company in the lead one day and some fly or a speck of dust robbing it of the lead the next.

Mess No. 5, with a grim determina tion to win, fell to and in the last few days of the contest crept slowly to the lead by a small margin of points. Co. "M" ammassed a total of 4553.5 points during the month; its nearest opponent received 4547.5.

The pennant will be presented at a regimental parade.

Just a bit back, the Tank Battalion gave a demonstration for the Field Officers Class of the Infantry school in the Tank Park and down in rear of the 24th Infantry. ELECTRICAL CURRENT COST CHARGES SET

Real economy is necessary in the use of electrical current in order that con-sumption shall not exceed the small allowances permitted by existing regulations and available funds for the purchase of juice.

Lamps usd must be within the "watt" limits specified. Lights not in use must be turned off. All the way from generals down to soldiers of the first three non-com grades, exact allowances are established. To exceed the allowance means the payment of a bill for excess. For quarters where no allowances are available, definite ratings have been set, showing how much per month must be paid for lights, electric fans, irnos, per-colators, griddles, and roasters. All of this data is in Garrison Regulations 30-1600.

OUR EQUESTRIENNES IN THE SADDLE AGAIN

Monday morning the Ladies Riding Class of the garrison will resume its lessons in horsemanship at nine o'clock. Many new aspirants for saddle perfection have indicated their intentions of joining up, and the staff of instructors has been making preparations for such re-arrangements as may be necessary to fit each fair rider to her proper class, in accordance with her degree of previous instruction and experience.

WOFFORD COLLEGE DEFEATS INFANTRY IN SEASON OPENER

Basketball Five Succumb to Superior Defensive Play of Visiting Collegians

After two minutes of hard play last Friday night, Kgelstrom dropped one into the basket and the Infantry took the lead. The Wofford basketeers followed with a vengeance, for their running guard Smith evened the count, and their star forward Lindsey lifted one from mid-field through the net. Thereafter, the visitors were never headed.

At half time the score stood 13-9, in favor of the collegians. In the second half, even fine playing by Kgelstrom and Sweeney could not overcome the superior defensive play of the Wofford court artists, who stayed close and blocked quick, with an uncanny knack of intercepting Infantry plays. Newnan's ball handling was brilliant, but a running guard cannot win games singlehanded.

Forward Passes Bring Gunners Spectacular Touchdown But Two Are Nabbed for Long Scoring Runs by Opponents

By taking quicker advantage of their opportunities, the heavy green team of the Infantry schol detachment conquered the scrappy Red Artillery in Saturday's game in the Doughboy Stadium, winning by the score of 22-6.

From mid-field, two aerial heaves by Samlavich to McAuliffe brought the ball to the four yard line, where short plunges put it over, and the Artillery headed the I. S. D. by a clear touch down. But in the second quarter, the greenbacks massed five first downs for a score of their own. Green intercepted a forward for 51 yards and a touchdown, and Samlavich was nailed back of the line for a safety.

Thereafter it was a battle royal, Buck and Green executing neat delayed plunges, McAuliffe, Samlavich, McMillan, and Bouquin driving splendidly, Lapine and Dixon featuring in the forward lines, Carpenter playing end like a million, and Schulte kicking long and true.

But a second intercepted pass, when Woidyla pulled an artillery toss off its trajectory and ran 59 yards for another touchdown, gave the I. S. D. a clear margin of victory, with the final score: 22-6.

On attack, the gunners showed stronger than at any time this season. The I. S. D. has been called a strong defensive team, and was the heavier team, but in the last half the Artillery made eight first downs to the I. S. D. three. The intercepted passes spelled defeat.

BASKETEERS BEAT CHARLOTTE BLUES TO THE FINAL GUN

Infantry Scores Victory Against One of Premier Court Fives of the South in Last Ten Seconds of Play

Father Time scored a bull's eye. He scored two, in fact. Toward the end of the first half in last Tuesday's game in the big gymnasium between the Infantry team and the strong five from the Charlotte (N. C.) Y. M. C. A., the score stood 14-10 in favor of the visitors, The early four-point lead established by Kgelstrom's initial tally and "Red" Newman's pretty dribble for a score had been swept into the discard.

McDonald of the Charlotte Blues had been dropping them in as if he had in invisible chute built to the rafters. Sweeney and Hagelstein helped out, but Charlotte still led. Led and held the ball ball in the safety side of the court. Then Quarrie came through, counting four points in two field goals, the last just before the pistol barked to mark the end of the half and leave everyone breathless with suspense. The score was tied, 14-14, and the game was still on.

In the second period, Hagelstein, Kgelstrom and Newman put the doughboys in the lead for the first time since the early stages of the contest. But the visiting Andrews, canny and experienced veteran was slipping them through the hoops like a fiend. His five field goals and one foul shot from difficult angles and long distances sent the Charlotte crew out in front. Post helped him out with a fine toss. Sweeney slipped an overhand one through. Newman counted twice, once on a long one, and once on pretty passing from McQuarrie and Hagelstein. Post scored for the guests. The score was 29-26. One minute to play.

Hagelstein tried one, was fouled, and deliberately tallied both points. Score 29-28. The fight continued Infantry passing improved. Charlotte defense tightened. McQuarrie got the ball. Everyone was covered. No one to receive a pass. He stood way out. It was a long shot, but "Jock" was inspired. He made it, and as he made it, Father Time pushed the second hand across the dot. The pistol barked. The game was won, 30-29.

Training Management Weapons Technique Take the Lead with This Week's Instruction

During the past week the members of the National Guard and Reserve Officers' Refresher Class have had an active time, covering in precise and condensed fashion the approved army technique in 37-mm. Gun and 3-inch Trench Mortar fire and laying, in direction of musket-ry by groups of riflemen, in automatic rifle training, and in the general policies regarding training management.

Most interesting of all the subjects covered, perhaps, were the hours devoted to training management. The mission of the military is the rapid and efficient training of civilian manpower, and particularly the development of regulars, guardsmen, and reservists capable of giving such training rapidly to large numbers on emergencies. Membership in Charles S. Harrison Post Being Crowded With Garrison Personnel In Annual Check Up

An officer of this garrison said: "Yes, I belong to the Legion, and to this local post, too." So he pulled out this local post, too." So he pulled out a membership card, signed by J. R. Fitzgerald, Adjutant, but it was dated January 30, 1923. He could not vote. He was inactive, a back-slider.

This happened at the Monday evening membership committee meeting under the chairmanship of Chaplain Lennan. The Twenty-Ninth, (headed by the regimental commander) and the Experimental and Academic Departby the regimental commander) and the Experimental and Academic Departments were there in force. Brief talks were delivered by Judge Lynch, Captains Dumas and Pearson, Mr. Adams, U. S. W. V. Commander Gallagher, and Legion Commander Reeves.

SPANISH WAR VETS OF COLUMBUS CAMP BOOST 25-YEAR BILL

Local Camp Takes the Lead Initial Bouts of Regimental to Secure Retirement Parity Between the Army and Navy

In the Knights of Columbus Hall, in Columbus, Tuesday evening, a middle-aged man arose and read a paper. His name was Gallagher. His reading met with general and spontaneous approval. He announced that he had secured the backing of the national organization. The United Spanish War Veterans have committed themselves to the following:

(1) The national defense act will call for a small increase in the strength of the regular army, both officers and men, with no reduction of present pay or allowances, the local veterans feel that they are in a position to know the needs of the army in order that it may maintain an efficient organization to meet an emergency in time of national danger. And they in time of national danger. And they believe it their duty to leave no stone unturned in the effort to have necessary laws passed to meet these needs.

(2). The Spanish War Veterans have always advocated an earlier retirement. for enlisted men, and some years ago such a law was passed but for some reason (or no reason at all) the army was not included, with the result that now the navy has the early retirement and the army whose duties are fully as strenuous must serve thirty years. The situation will of course be corrected some time, but why should the men who served in the Spanish war, the China and Philippine campaigns, be compelled to serve this extra time. They guarded Alaska and Panama; then the Mexican border, and when their hair was turning grey the world war came their way. They have lead the most strenuous lives of any army we ever had and now is the time to make their period of service the same as their "bu dies" in the other arm of the service.

AMERICAN LEGION

"For God and country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community state and nation; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

LATELLITES

SERGEANT EMORY A. DANIEL Company "H" 29th Infantry

A young sergeant stood before the battalion commander who was investigating a little affair of an honestly borrowed automobile and an attractive femme, over which an argument had arisen.

"And now," asked the Major, "What have you to say?"

"Well, it seems just like I'm running into hard luck right in a row," replied the blue-eyed sergeant "All in a week, I get into this row, and I break a piece of hone in my less and we less that bone in my leg, and we lose that game down in Memphis!"

Just like that it went into the record. And the investigation came to a halt.

But don't you see, a broken leg and a serious interview on the carpet were combined with a football defeat. The first time the Infantry gridsters lost their right to their designation as "Four Touchdown Doughboys" Daniel took it so hard that it was a piece of personal hard luck, as hard on him as breaking his leg.

Now Daniel is not one of those sergeants who got their warrants by being athletes, as we sometimes hear of it hap athletes, as we sometimes hear of it happening. He is a sergeant in his own right, as a soldier. On September 24, 1923 when he was first given the three chevrons, this little Macon athlete, was only twenty years and five months old. He had had less than two years of service. But "H" Company, where he belongs found him a good instructor in machine our mechanics and technique. longs found him a good instructor in machine gun mechanics and technique. Trained to be a baker of bread by profession at the age of 18 he became a regular doughboy of Benning enlisting in the 29th Infantry on December 31, 1921.

He is a first class machine gunner, He is a first class machine gunner, and this summer qualified as an expert pistol shot. Every bit of his five feet and six inches is well liked about the garrison, because he is what they call "a good egg." Rather of a youngster still, in spite of his twenty two years and number nine shoes, both full of prance and step, with springs in his legs.

Against Transylvania, toward the end of a sustained Infantry attack this fall, of a sustained Infantry attack this fall, Daniel was given the ball for a run around left end, and thrown for a slight loss. Another time he was given a trial, and made good, cutting inside the boxed end, inside his interference, and slipped off-tackle straight for the incoming. Transylvania defense. He side-stepped one of them. He side-stepped another. one of them. He side-stepped another. Only the safety man was ahead of him, to the left. Lapine was almost along side to the right. Lapine dove over and took out the safety. Daniel jumped over Lapine's flying legs to complete a 27 yard run for touchdown.

Asked afterwards, who it was who had hit the safety man, did he know, Daniel nit the safety man, did he know, Daniel said: "It was Lapine, Sir, an' he sure did hit him didn't he?"

Daniel knew who it was, and didn't fail to notice. He didn't fail to give Lapine credit. He smiled his wide and winning smile, and showed the trait for fine sportsmanship and keen enthusiasm that has made him among the most popular of our home-grown ath-

SPECIAL UNIT BOXERS

"It is about time the Special Units were heard from in regimental athletics" are words that are familiar to many of us. This season will be a transitional period Their first athletic venture will be in the boxing field. Seven boxers have been chosen to carry their colors to the front, most of whom will be novices. However, their inexperience does not dampen their enthusiasm or confidence. They are all eager for the bell and they assure the spectators that they will give them the highest caliber of amateur boxing possible under service conditions.

Among the boxers will be Private Rinaldo who will represent them in the first weight. He is a fighter who, by his aggressiveness will compensate for his inexperience his inexperience.

Private Ellsmore will tip the scales for the featherweight. Ellsmore isn't very old at the game but he is very shifty and has a right hand lead which will wor ry his opponent considerably.

In the lightweight class the Special Units will not be handicapped for Private Cucchi will wear their colors. He is a heady shifty point fighter. He was outpointed last year in the last round. This season he has been training faithfully. When the bell rings, he says, he will be in condition to go not only 4 but 10 rounds.

Private Townsend will be in the welterweight class. He is a new man and is learning very rapidly. Watchout for him, he is a find!

The middleweight class will have a boxer who has had some ring experience. He needs no introduction to the fight fans for he is no other than Sergeant Aikers, better known as "Cyclone Aikers." Lest we do injustice to his reputation

Lest we do injustice to his reputation we will not eulogize his capabilities.

For those who like a hard hitting two fisted fighter, the Special Units have a man in Private Averitt for the light heavyweight class. He is a two fisted hard hitting fighter of the Jack Dempsey have a brookent will eat-Nothing but a knockout will satisfy him.

Private Taylor will be in the final class. He is a fast two handed fighter for a heavyweight and with a little con-dition he will make his opponent step to

When occasional yellow journals are finding fault and politicians are complaining about the army this and the army that, it is gratifying to find Representative Guy U. Most interesting in this work, perhaps—although all the students were keenly concerned—was Major Paul B. Clemens, 128th Infantry, National Guard, from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he is Assistant Superintendent of Public Schools and member of the Board of Education. Socialist antagonists in the home town tried to obstruct the granting of permission for him to come to Benning. Here he is learning training tricks from members of the profession which has instructed men from the beginning of

For example, last Monday morning, the class heard lectures on training management, and went through practical work with paper and pencil making out programs and schedules. Also, the class saw demonstrations of proper parade and field equipment of rifle companies, staged by Company "C", 29th Infantry, crack war demonstration infantry regiment of the Army, and of condensed training methods. In forty minutes, a complete check was made of the capabilities of non-commissioned officers in battlefield initiative, of the training of runners, of extended order drill of a platoon, of instruction in first aid, Army regulations, articles of war, and uniform regulations as these apply to small troop units. All of this in forty minutes, showing the citizens the speed and efficiency of modern training meth-

NON-COMS OF TWENTY-NINTH SPEED UP ON SCHOOL WORK

This week the selected soldiers of the 29th Infantry, who have been undergoing special training to fit them for full accomplishment of the duties of non-commissioned officers, have been contours, measuring strides with pace tallies, and indulging in sneaking and

On the schedule was physical training, group games and precise calesthenics, to start the morning work. Then came work in drill and command, manual of arms, and extended order, taught by the famous army master-and-pupil method, so successful in the new system of rifle marksmanship, each student giving commands and correcting mistakes.

Every morning every student stands rigid inspection, in accordance with both War Department and Garrison regulations. Then there follows work in map reading on the Fort Benning Fire Control Map, involving use of co-ordinates, reading of contours, and the solu-tion of problems in visability. In the sketching work, which came next, after strides had been measured over varied ground—of which there is lots at Benning, the class did practice trials with drafting instruments and lettering words and captions for maps.

Sneaking and peeping involved problems for individual platoon scouts, and the operation of reconnoitering patrols, including the penetration of enemy wire by night.

ALL OUT FOR DANCE AT SERVICE CLUB

Wednesday night's dance at the Service Club was the best attended and most successful that has been held in some time. With the 24th Infantry Orchestra playing jazzy foxtrots and dreamy waltzes the dancers were in fine form and tripped the light fantastic with grace abandon. Notable among those dancing was a large number of oldtimers, including Sergeants Still, Gullett, Smith, McClosky and Poster. The better halves of these well known noncoms were also there, but these ladies are mentioned in separate sentence because there might trouble if they were listed as "oldtimers

The weekly hops at the Club are really very enjoyable affairs and if members of the garrison would attend them in larger numbers could be made even more en-Mrs. William Gullett, the genial hostess is greatly to be congratulated upon the success of the dances.

Army statistics show that nine times as many single men volunteer for war service as married men. It has been suggested that this is because single men don't know what war is.

WASTED HIS LEAVE, LOST FOREIGN SERVICE CREDIT. BUT SAVED (?) SOME MONEY

An officer of the Army bumped a native while automobling just before his tour of duty was up in Honolulu. He handed the boy a greenback and forgot it.

Shortly after his return to the states he was served notice of suit and took leave to return to the islands to defend. Lost the case and returned to the U.S. after appealing. Case again came up for trial. He again took leave, lost and appealed. Case came up third time. His leave credit was exhausted; was unable to get leave on half-pay and finally had to surrender credit for foreign service, applying for station in Honolulu to get back for trial

trial

He won the third trial, but lost:
(1) Leave credit; (2) foreign service
credit; (3) time; (4) trouble; (5)
attorneys fees; (6) expense.

He could have saved all of these by an investment in PERSONAL LIABILITY insurance.

Are you taking such a chance?
If so, you'd better let us hear from you, giving description of your car.

WEEK-END CONTESTS WITH STRONG FIVES

The Doughboys' first basketball trip of the season resulted in an even break. On Saturday night they tack-led the Atlanta Athletic Club in At-lanta, but found them too tough a morsel to disgust. Kgelstrom, Newman and the rest fought hard but such experienced veterans as Stephens, Boss and company were not to be overcome on their home court. The final score was 42 to 22. Kgelstrom lead for the Infantry with 9 points, while Bennett, Boss and Stephens divided scoring honors for the Atlantans.

Sunday the team journeyed out to Fort McPherson intent on gaining revenge at the expense of the 22nd Infantry quint, and this they did in great style. With Kgelstrom and Hagelstein scoring 11 points each, and the guards confining the opposition to long tries at the basket, a 34 to 13 victory over, their fellow soldiers resulted. Terrell and Vedescol, McPher-

Mass singing is being developed to such a marked degree that Colonel Waite C. Johnson decided to invite General Wells and other officers.

Comments from the party and the rousing applause spoke well of the enjoyment the singing caused. One offier was heard to remark that never before had he heard such volume and qualify except on a monster organ. He believed that the regiment could outsing the Cossacks who are noted for their prowness as chorus singers.

These song fests are held twice a week, on Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Capt. W. F. Gent Joins Regiment

After having served as Recruitnig Officer in New York since October, 1922, Captain W. F. Gent has been assigned to the 24th Infantry and joined with his family on Monday, living in Block 23, and being assigned to com-mand Company "A."

Regimental Monograph Policy

At a recent officer's call the officers of the regiment were informed that in order that their general knowledge and observation might be developed and that they might be more able to address large civilian audiences with the utmost ease, monographs would be prepared by various officers, and a time for presentation set. All officers will be required to prepare special assignments, like those now in vogue at the Infantry School. It is the Colonel's desire to have his officers of his regiment apply themselves to professional reading and to be able to discuss topics of the day.

Lieut. Custer Will Return.

Lieut. Earl Custer upon return from leave of absence in Florida has been relieved from assignment with Company "K" and duty at Souther Field at Americus, Ga., and has been assigned for duty with Company "B."

TANKS TRIM I. S. D. LOSERS FUMBLING BRINGING DEFEAT

ing a First Down

Sunday's Intramural football game proved that it is not necessary to make a first down to win. The Terrible Tankers formula read something like this: Gain 40 yards on an exchange of kicks, recover your opponents' fumble on the half yard line; then buck the ball over. Add a strong defense for the remainder of the game, with special attention paid to following the ball and intercepting passes; and the result will be victory.

By following this formula closely and perfectly the Tanks nosed out the I. S. D. 7 to 0, thus eliminating the Greenbacks from the race for the garrison championship. The only score of the game came early in the first quarter. The Detachment kicked off. Failing to gain the Tanks kicked to the I. S. D. 40-yard line. Soon the Green-backs returned the kick to the Tanks 44-yard strip, and from here Wright kicked to within 2 yards of the Green's goal line. Green's return kick was downed on the 20 yard strip, from which point, the Tanks being helpless at rushing, Sullivan attempted a drop kick. The try was short, but was fum-bled by Buck and finally recovered by the Tanks within half a yard of a score. Sullivan carried it over on the first attempt and Wright added the extra point via the placement kick route.

The Detachment came back strong after receiving the kickoff and marched seadily down the field to within a yards of the last white line, but again a fumble, recovered by a Tanker, brought disaster.

The rest of the game was the same story. The Jreen-jerseyed crew ran and passed for a dozen first downs, while the Tankers could make but three, but on every occasion another fumble or an intercepted pass brought the advance to a help the advance to a halt.

2nd BATTALION WINS ONE-SIDED CONTEST FROM 1st BATTALION

Lone Touchdown of the Game is Losers' Defense Breaks Down Before Scored by Tankers Without Mak- Fierce Drive of Last Year's Garrison Champions

"There goes our football team," sadly remarked a 1st Battalion rooter as Romploski,, bruised and battered and with two ribs cracked, was carried from the field during the intermission between the halves of Monday's game with the 2nd Battalion. And, be it known, it was little less than the truth known, it was little less than the truth that he spoke, for with this dashing back in the game, knocking down forward passes, making tackles in all parts of the field, carrying the ball without interference for good gains thru the enemy line and inspiring his team mates with a kindred fighting spirit, the First Battalion made a re spectable showing against their more experienced opponents; holding the score to 19 to 0 at half time. In the second half however, the game became an utter rout and when the welcome final whistle blew the 2nd Battalion Doughboys had piled up 52 Meanwhile the Firsts were were helpless and hopeless on offense.

It would be useless to describe the slaughter in detail. Brilliant dashes and passes by Kgelstrom, beautiful receiving of passes by High Davis, smashing drives by Oikari, Taylor and Luteran featured the varied and deceptive attack of the winners, while only Romploski could make any impression, on their defense and even he was shold to one first down, during his stay in the game. McFadden, for the losers, put up a hard fight throughout.

McQUARRIE REPEATS LAST SECOND SHOT AS DOUGHBOYS WIN

Rightway Five from Macon is Beaten 38 to 36 in Fast Game Requiring Extra Period for Decision

A good act is always worthy of an encore. At least so thinks Jock Mc-Quarrie, and none will be found at Benning who disagree. Having downed the Charlotte Y with a midcourt goal in the final seconds of play, Mac decided that he liked it, and so when the Doughboys and the Rightway Five of Macon reached the closing seconds of an extra period deadlocked at 36 all, he grabbed the ball in the middle of the floor and nonchalantly tossed it thru the basket. Back to their places dashed the players, but before the referee could put the ball in play the timekeeper's gun went "Bang!" the timekeeper's gun went "Bang!" and the game was over. Chalk up another win for the Infantry.

From the opening whistle to the end the gymnasium was in an uproar. Brilliant shot followed brilliant shot with such rapidity that there was grave danger of some of the spectators dying of heart failure. The Infantry scored first, but the visitors came back strong and at half time led 26 to 22. The second half was fast and furious altho the pace seemed killing. Gradually the Doughboys crept up on the invaders until near the close of the period they were only two points behind. Red Newman netted a spectacular long one, and the score was tied. No further scoring before the gun. An extra five minutes brought no scoring until McQuarrie did his stuff.

ONE POINT VICTORY SCORED OVER FAST HOWARD QUINTETTE

After Trailing Visitors Througho First Half Doughboys Score 25 to 24 Win in Final Period Throughout

If there is an epidemic of heart failure in the garrison the responsibility will rest squarely on the shoulders of will rest squarely on the shoulders of the Infantry basketball team. For the third time in three games in the gymnasium the Doughboys allowed the visiting five to gain an early lead and then proceeded to nose out a victory in the final period. This time the victim was Howard College. After Newman sent the Infantry off to a good start with a pretty goal from the floor the invaders ran wild for the greater part of the first half and secured an apparently safe lead of 13 to 2. Then something happened, Red Then something happened. Red Newman began dropping them in from all angles, Kgelstrom ran the floor in beautiful style and fed the ball to Red and Buck with neatness and precision, while McQuarrie and Smythe held down the opposing score. Result: Howard 15, Infantry 14 at half time.

Beginning the second period Buck and Kgelstrom netted goals from the floor and the Doughboys were in the lead for the first time. The invaders rallied and beautiful shots by Lowry and Wilking again put them 3 points to the good. Each team made a foul goal. Newman, Buck and Kgelstrom scored from the floor, while Lowry dropped another thru for the visitors.

Close guarding prevented further scoring, the last two minutes being profitless for both teams.

For the Infantry Newman led the scoring greatly aided by Kgelstrom's floor work. McQuarrie played his floor work. McQuarrie played his usual strong game at guard. Howard College, in Lowry, has perhaps the best center shown by a visiting team this year. Wilking played well at guard.

CHAPLAIN LENNAN ABOUT TO DEPART FOR PHILIPPINES

Foreign Service Takes Away Old Timer and Strong Benning Booster and Active Worker

Five years ago, when Biglerville (Block 21) was still partially occupied by officers' families and Taneytown (Block 23) was just being completed, a new Chaplain reported to Fort Benning.

In those days, Catholics of the garrison used to have to make the nine-mile trip to town over the old road to Father Moylan's church to attend mass weekly, as the regulations require. were very thankful when a Catholic chaplain came to the junction of the Chattahoochee and the Upatoi, even the first few services had to be held in the hall used for a Protestant chapel whose oiled wood floor was hard on the knees and clothes of kneeling worship-

As time went on, they were gladder that this particular priest had come to Benning, the entire Post was glad.

Down in the I. S. D. the soldiers swear by Father Lennan who coached their baseball team through successful seasons in the down-town industrial league and into the inter-unit games on the reservation. In the American Legion, they all know Father Lennan as a vigorous worker. In the 24th Infantry, they know him as the man who ran schools for them. In the 29th Infantry, they know him as the foster father of type-writing and educational classes. All over the garrison, they know him as the man who has put the Childrens' School into an efficient state, raised funds, se-

"EL BANDIDO" RETURNS TO STARTLE AND AMUSE ON DOUBLE APPEARANCE

Infantry School Glee Club Will Present Operetta for Local Entertainment Week After Next

February fourth and fifth have been set as the dates for the process.
"El Dandido" as the next feature production of the Infantry School Glee Club. One of the performances will be for the enlisted personnel of the com-mand and the other for permanent and student officers.

Ever since the strains of Armistice Day pageant finals drifted off on the early winter air, the Infantry School Gllee Club has been organizing and re hearsing for its mid-winter show. play selected is a unusical coinedy of the Robin Hood type, depicting the activities of a pair of twin brothers, one a painter and the other a bandit.

As these two in turn pass among the inhabitants of a small Spanish town, the similarity of their visages causes a train of confusion and exciting complications. A distracted inn-keeper and his wife, who entertain first one of these brothers and the other, add to the hilarity. An army captain tries to straighten the tangled threads of identity, as does a pompous provincial governor who demonstrates that not even superior rank can tell with certainty whether or not he knows the accused or can state who he is.

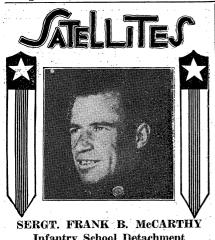

Costuming for the show is elaborate and colorful. The music is light and whimsical. The lines are witty and laughter producing. The Glee Club has marshalled its tuneful voices and promises a first class performance. ises a first class performance.

STUDENT OFFICER WINS GOLF CUP

Making 87 on the first eighteen holes, making 87 on the first eighteen noies, and following this with the fine score of 77, Captain D. E. Wheeler of the Company Officers' Class, subtracted his handicap of 15 and won the beautiful cup presented by Mr. F. B. Gordon, President, for competition among the company officer members of the Columbus army officer members of the Columbus Country Club.

Other good scores turned in were: Capt. John S. Moore, 29th Infantry, 140; Captain J. W. Howder, Q. M. C., 141; Major J. L. Bradley, Adv. Class, 144; and Major E. Butcher, Academic Dept., and Captain Stewart, Adv. Class, tied at 145

Semi-annually this trophy is competed for by personnel from this garrison, and this fall's tournament just closed brought out a banner field of twenty-three.

Infantry School Detachment

Early last September Magoni was on the coaching line of Gowdy Field, with the I. S. D. playing the Reds for the Garrison championship. For years he had done the same, cheered the detachmenteers and encouraged them to clout the ball. But only one of the old "Big Three" was still in the line_up. Hyland was missing from his post at shortland was missing from his post at short-stop, discharged per ETS. Subukaty Subukaty was missing from his post at first base, also discharged per ETS. But "Mack" McCarthy was behind the bat, and the entire team, and all those in the stands knew it.

Amid all the ups and downs of the Green Hats, McCarthy was steady. Catching with the steadiness born of long experience, and keeping his team on the move, to him went the tribute of the ser-Although the I. S. D. lost out in the final play-off, the playing of Mc-Carthy was the prime feature. He ripped out a home run in one game with the sacks loaded. He split open a finger in the next game. On the morrow he was back at the plate. Again he split a finger, another one; and again some adhesive tape bound the digits together and he was back once more. He caught in his old decisive style, his presence alone and the reputation of his powerful arm discouraging all attempts at pilfering sacks.

In the final game of the series, the break came in the third inning. "Mack" at the bat was hit in the head by a fast one from the opposing pitcher. flopped, but was up again, wanting to continue, but the surgeon sent him to the hospital where it was found he had sustained a fracture of the skull. With the medical corps litter and the ambulance went the I. S. D's final real hopes of

Born in New York City, and living in Northhampton, Massachusetts, this twenty-eight year old sergeant came to Benning from "G" Company of the 19th Infantry as a machine gun instructor in 1920, after a varied career as a baseball player round about Ohio and as a member of the forces that pacified the West Virginia coal district in 1919. He has two hash marks on his left sleeve and is only one year from another.

McCarthy was married three years ago and is living in Red Row with his wife and husky and happy young son. and nusky and happy young som. In the Academic Department they know McCarthy as a machine gunner; in the Department of Experiment they know him as a man capable of trying out the new automatic weapons.

There is one other claim to fame enjoyed by the old reliable Mack. In a baseball game between the I. S. D. and baseball game between the I. S. D. and the Second Battalion of the 29th, there occurred an unusual play, for in successive half innings with a score tied the bases were loaded with one out and the batting side was retired on a double play. McCarthy was the key man who unlocked the double performance, taking unlocked the double performance, taking a throw from the box and whipping it to first to complete the duplicate retirement and making the feat "one for the book."

Especially interesting is the inclusive ness of the sections with regards to athletics, following the recent War Department policy of "athletics for all" and exemplifying the sporting spirit of Benning, with its company, battalion, unit, and garrison teams in all sports.

"Athletic training in organizations will be carried on throughout the year by ev ery officer and enlisted man. It will be conducted with the object of raising the physical condition and efficiency of units as against the development of in-dividual experts. To this end, mass dividual experts. calisthenics and mass athletics will be stressed."

It shall hereafter be the editorial policy of this paper to devote space primarily to a complete and accurate record of outstanding events in the garrison. Advance notices of entertainments and activities will not be written at length. It is felt that athletic, military and personal achievements make the major bids for comment. Unless a future event is of outstanding importance, and is such that a very large number of readers on the reservation and elsewhere will be interested in it, our advance notice shall consist simply of a single line in one of the appropriate columns: "Announcements," "Theatres," "Monographs," "Chapels," and Sport Page Box of "Games This Week."

Personnel of the reservation interested in events that are to transpire will confor a favor on the Editor by advising him at least a week in advance of the time, place and date of such events.

In the lists of athletic "Games This Week," we desire to include inter-company, inter-battalion, inter-unit and all such intra_mural games, as well as the extra-mural games to be played by the Infantry teams.

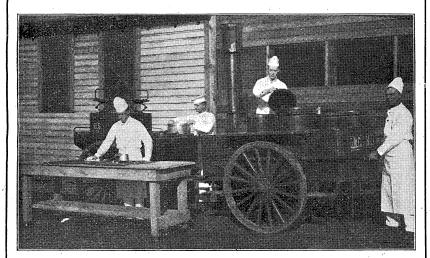

In the lists of "Announcements," we desire to include social events, of the Officers' Club, of the Bridge and Card Clubs of the garrison and the regiments, of the Women's Club, of the American Legion, the Spanish War Veterans, the Odd Fellows, the Sojourners, and all similar organizations, including such downtown lodges and clubs as are regularly attended by Benning people.

Major Green of the Red Cross came into the office to say that when his organization gave a Christmas entertainment at the Station Hospital for those invalided during the holidays, the nurses, doctors, and students hopped to with will and cooperated like a million dollars to make the affair an agreeable

FIRST TO GIVE 100 PER CENT. SUPPORT

Members of the School for Bakers and Cooks have earned the distinction of being the leaders of the garrison in support of the "block sub-scription" plan of the Infantry School News. Every soldier in the outfit is now a paid-up subscriber, and this is the first unit to reach the 100 per cent. status.

At the Officers' Club, John Augustin will tell you that the commissioned personnel look upon Father Lennan as a prince of good fellows and as a fine "padre."

Father Thomas J. Lennan leaves the Infantry School shortly for foreign service, with a host of loyal friends behind him and a wealth of good wishes. Gradand a weard of good wishes. Oracluste of St. Charles College, Elliott City, and of St. Mary's University, Baltimore, both in Maryland, with the degrees of A. B., A. M., and S. T. B., ordained into the priesthood in 1911, teacher at St. Charles College, 1911-1912, and active chargement of St. Andrews Church in Bal clergyman at St Andrews Church in Baltimore, 1912-1917, he entered the military service in 1917, and after a short tour at the Coast Artillery post of Fort Caswell, N. C., was assigned to duty in Panama, with the cosmoline crew at Fort Amador.

He remained on the Canal Zone for three years, coaching the successful Amador baseball team, acting as Secretary-Treasurer of the Service League, and doing much to improve the tone and repute of army athletics in Panama. In 1921, he came to Benning and immediately started work. He took an old wooden mess hall in the academic area and transformed it into an attractive chapel, decorated in excellent taste. He instithted the custom of holding a Military Mass on Thanksgiving Day, with specially composed music, a feature event of this garrison which has been commented upon by journalists from Augusta to Denver and Sacramento. Plain-spoken, yet tactful, energetic yet gracious, quiet yet efficient, Father Lennan has done a remarkable work here at Ft. Benningof a religious character, and of a general character. When he was absent for three months in 1924 at the Chaplains' School, then held at Fort Wayne, Michigan, fellow clergymen remarked that Father Lennan was "a steadfast booster of the doughboy and his school."

When he leaves us in February go to the Philippines and contemplate screnity on Corregidor, remote from the "projects" and progress at Benning, we shall regret that the Chaplains Corps keeps such a thing as a foreign service roster; but we shall know that his heart is still with us. The work he has organized, the schools he has fostered, things he has initiated, will continue for our advantage and the advantage of those who come after us. "An institution," says the adage, "is the length and shadow of a man." Such men as Chaplain Lennan have helped to build Benning and the results of the work they do shall endure when our names have passed from the lists of the army from the lists of the army.

ANNUAL PHYSICALS ARE NOW IN PROGRESS

Medical officers of the army, at all posts, camps, and stations, are trying this month to determine if the army is fit to fight. Their verdict will decide if the shock troops are having much or little success in the continual war on enlarged waist lines or attentuated limbs. Sam Browne belts must fit, regardless of anything else. Examinations of officers at this garrison commenced this week, with weighing and stretching an measuring and listening in by the saw-bones in building 129, Old Hospital, Block 7. Records of previous convictions must be brought in the form of year-old let-ters telling of defects formerly found correction and measures taken for thereof.

Rumor has it, in the form of press dispatches, that remedial action is being taken in some instances, shape of change-of-station orders for officers who seem over-worked.

What would you think of a Civil War eteran who didn't belong to the G. A. R. or the U. C. V.

Bert Lennon should give the American here a big boost; he comes from the state that built up Veteransville, Minn.

If you don't like the American Legion on account of the way it is run don't stay outside and "holler" about it; get inside and try and show the bunch how it should be run.

"FOLLOW ME"

Of course it happened in France and naturally it happened in the Infantry. Sergeant Frame, the Company Range Finder Sergeant in the M. G. Company, a "Yankee" born and bred, had an intense aversion to Mules and thereby hangs a tale. (We don't mean the mule.) Frame was laying out a range for the rifle companies and had some three or four kilometers to walk so the Captain, thinking to do Frame a favor told the Stable Sergeant to have a mule saddled Stable Sergeant to have a finite saddled and ready for the Sergeant to ride on. Frame on learning of the Captain's kindness (?) reported to him at once "Sir", said he, "I won't need that mule; it's not far to walk."

"That's alright" said Charley Muller, "Yan're optitled to a mule so long as

"You're entitled to a mule so long as you are a Range Finder Sergeant."

Frame was a good soldier but he tried once more. "Captain," said he, "Is that an order for me to take that mule?"

"Well, Sergeant, you can consider it an order if you want to," said the Captain.

"Alright Sir," said the Sergeant, dutifully, with a military salute, "But I would just as soon walk over by myself."

There's many a "high hat" that covers "low brow."

It certainly is the irony of fate, when one is being jostled and squeezed so much in a subway that even to turn around is impossible, tolook up at the advertisements and see a sign "For space in this car apply to Messers. Ad & Co."

A marraige epidemic has struck the company for no apparent reason, or perhaps it is because of Sergeant McGriff who seemed to have set a bad example. Two more men have announced their intention of supporting members of the less intelligent sex in idleness for the rest of their natural lives. But an end must come to everythnig, as Brutus said to Caesar.

'A furlough isn't what it's cracked up to be, especially when one runs out of funds. If anyone is in doubt let him ask Sergt, "Hank" Hankins. The Sergt says that the best part of his vacation was the total absence of any bugle calls.

Why Worry About A Car?

Why Worry About A Car?

You either own one or you don't. You always have two alternatives. If you don't there is nothing to worry about, except getting one. If you do, you have two alternatives; either you insure it or you do. not.

If you insure it you don't need to worry. If you don't, there are two alternatives; either you sustain an accident or you don't. If you don't, you needn't worry. If you do there are two alternatives; either you get damages, or you pay the other fellow. You have two alternatives each way. You either get paid by him or you don't. If you do, you're lucky. If you don't, you may sue. If you don't get a judgment, you're out of luck. If you do, have nothing you can attach and you're still out of luck. If you pay his damages, no need to worry. If you don't, he may sue you. If he loses, thats his worry. If he wins—

Have you cash to pay the judgment of damages? If you have, you're lucky. If you have not, are you judgment, proof? Can he collect? These are the answers to the last two questions, no alternatives available. If you are in the Services, No to the first, and Yes to the second. Better let us pay for you.

2nd BATTALION WINS INTRA-MURAL PENNANT BY BEATING TANKERS

Boys From the 15th Tanks Put up Desperate Resistance Before Yielding to Doughty Doughboys, 14 to 7

One of the hardest things to do is to break a habit whether good or bad. The 2nd Battalion Doughboys have become confirmed pennant addicts and Wednesday afternoon insisted upon taking another swig out of the championship bottle, in spite of the efforts of the Terrible Tankers to effect a reformation. Led by the crafty Kgel-strom the cosmoline slingers from the 29th passed and smashed their way to a 14 to 7 victory in the finest exhibi-tion of football yet presented in the Doughboy Stadium.

Early in the first quarter the Infantrymen scored. After an exchange of kicks on which the 2nd Battalion gained, "Kelly" let loose a series of passes that had the Tankers dizzy. Lateral passes, short passes over the line and long passes to the ends followed in rapid succession. Some of these were knocked down, some fell harmlessly, but three of them found Daniel waiting to receive. These three coupled with Kgelstrom's 14 yard run from a fake pass netted a 45 yard advance and placed the ball within a foot of the Tanks' last white line. Kgelstrom bucked it over and Daniel dropkicked goal. No more scoring in the first half.

The doughboys second touchdown came in the third quarter. Starting on thir own 45 yard line, Taylor and Daniel made a first down; a pass, Kgelstrom to Daniel, and Kgelstrom's 5 yard smash put the ball on the Tank 22 yard strip. Kgelstrom attempted another pass, but was dropped by Hart for a 7 yard loss. Undismayed "Kelly," on the next play cooly heaved one to Luteran, who ran 14 yards more for a touchdown. Daniel yards more for a touchdown. Daniel again dropkicked the point.

Up to this point the Tanks had been practically helpless on offense, but they rallied gamely and after receiving the kickoff never let loose the ball un-til it was downed behind the 2nd Battalion's goal. Sweeney was the star of the drive. He ran back the kickoff 23 yards, he threw a pass to Mays for 13 and another to Bowe for 19, he skirted end for 18 and first down on the 19 yard line. He made 3 of the necessary 10 for the next first down, and completed the score by dashing 9 yards over the goal line. Bennett added the point from placement.

Tanks tried hard to score again, and on 6 occasions nearly did so. Play remained in doughboy territory, but the final punch was lacking. Three times the rifle carriers held for downs twice they intercepted passes, and once they recovered a fumble. Each time Kgelstrom kicked out of danger. As the game closed the doughboys started a counter offensive that netted them two first downs and put the ball in Tank territory as the whistle blew.

FORT MAC DOUGHBOYS LOSE TO BLUE FIVE IN ONE-SIDED GAME

22nd Infantry Basketeers Fight Hard But Are Unable to Cope With Superior Speed and Teamwork

Three times Terrill, of the 22nd Infantry, dropped the ball thru the net for goals from the floor, each time giving his team a two point lead over the Benning Doughboys; but this was early in the first half of Tuesday's game in the gymnasium, and soon Buck, Newman and company got busy and piled up an overwhelming score against the boys from Fort McPherson. Final score, Benning Doughboys 51, 22nd Infantry

Only in the first few minutes did the visitors hold the Blue five on anything like even terms. Buck went on a scoring rampage and dropped five thru in the first half, while Kgelstrom, Hagelstein, Newman and McQuarrie added one each Newman also caged three from the foul line and McQuarrie two. Meanwhile Terrill added one more two pointer to the three collected early in the period and the intermission found the Blues leading 23 to 8.

The second half was repetition. Red Newman caged six from the floor, Hagelstein made three, and Buck continued his early pace, getting four more before relieved in the closing minutes by Rose, a fast youngster from the I. S. D., who, amid great cheering, added two more points to the Benning tally sheet with a neat shot. To match this the visitors neat shot. To match this the visitors could show only four floor goals, two each by Terrill and Tedisco, and two fouls converted by Tedisco.

The entire Infantry five was in good form. Buck's shooting was remarkable. Newman, quiet during most of the first period came to life with a vengeance in the second half and starred with fast

ARTILLERYMEN LOSE TO 1st BATTALION AND DROP TO CELLAR

Rejuvenated Doughboys Led By Rom-plosoki and Vangroski Gain 13 to 6 Decision Over Gunners

The wise guys had the 1st Battalion football team figured out for a celllar championship of the intra-mural league, but the Doughboys could not see it that way at all, and last Saturday dropped the Gunners of the 83rd Field Artillery to the bottom with a dull sickening thud. This result was not obtained without a grim battle, however, the caisson riders refusing to admit defeat and struggling desperately until the final whistle ended a thrilling game with the Infantrymen on the long end of a 13 to 6 count.

Shortly after the game began the Artillery rushed the ball over for a touchdown, principally due to a 74 yard punt by Schulte and a poor return kick by the Doughboys which went outside only 23 yards from their goal line. At this point the "I told you so" prophet began to predict crushing defeat for the 1st Battalion, but reckoned without their host. Romploski, as usual, began a series of terrific drives at the Red line, and found unexpected assistance in the shape of Vangroski. Through gaping holes opened by Butcher, Kearns and McFadden these two backs galloped for repeated gains. The Gunner defense tightened at the critical moment, how-ver, and it was not until late in the second period that Romploski snatched an Artillery pass out of the air and dashed thirty-five yards to the 20 yard line. He Vangroski carried the ball over.

The Third quarter was scoreless, but featured by a last ditch stand of the Doughboys after brilliant runs by Schulte and McAuliffe had put the gunners with-in 1 yard of a score with three tries in which to push the ball over. In the fourth period Romploski and Vangroski aided by several nice runs by Allen carired the ball for 61 yards and the winning touchdown. Allen then added the extra point. Valiently but vainly the cannoneers tried to score again, a sturdy defense stopping every threat.

STRETCHING DOLLARS EXTENDS BUILDING AT LOCAL GARRISON

Use of Reservation Sand, Gravel, Lumber, and Salvaged Materials Increases Possible Construction

In the Washington Times, in the course of an article showing how the army is stretching its meager funds cover more construction than could ordinarily be achieved, Fort Benning comes in for special comment as a conspicuous example. Although available appropriations have been very small, work has gone on, and more has been accomplished than was expected from the original lay-out.

Materials have been salvaged from worn-out buildings and dug from creek beds and cut from forests. Local sup-plies obtained from the reservation have taken the place of purchased supplies. Urgently needed construction has been completed on a larger scale than could have been done if allotted money had been spent for these things in the open market. It has been con-servatively estimated that in the construction work done in the past year, there has been saved the sum of $327,-655.

By substituting soldier labor for hired civilian labor, salaries have been saved to an amount estimated $484,150.

As a result, more than three-quarters of a million dollars has been saved the government. Work and materials government. worth that much have been done without expenditure of money. The consequence has been that the construction work done at Fort Benning during the year has been three-quarters of a million dollars better and greater than the funds available would have permitted.

A catcher gets hurt, and Kjelstrom steps behind the bat and holds up the receiving end in superior fashion. One pitcher after another fashion. One pitcher after another gets clouted to the showers, and Kjelstrom walks on the mound and checks the assault of the rampaging 24th wallopers.

At basketball, this twenty-four year old sergeant makes one of the famous forward pair of the Infantry team. At forward pair of the Infantry team. At football he captains the Second Battalion eleven, thrice successive victors over the "terrible" tankers. Sometimes at left end, and sometimes at half-back, he can receive forward passes from he can receive forward passes from Smythe or throw them to Davis or Daniel with equal facility.

Kjelstrom comes from all over the mid-west, having been born in Rerbury, Idaho, having lived in Brigham City, Utah, and having relatives at Grand Junction, Colorado. He came to Benning on January 11, 1921, to enlist in Company "G" of the 29th Insentry after a previous hitch with list in Company "G" of the 29th Infantry, after a previous hitch with "F" of the 20th, and a football career at Fort Benjamin Harrison. As soon as he arrived, he demonstrated that he had not a single coffee cooling habit in the world. For two years now Kjelstrom has been with the Head-guerters Company of the Second Ratquarters Company of the Second Bat-talion, 29th Infantry, but he has kept right on qualifying annually as an expert rifleman with that surety of co-ordination and accuracy of sight that makes him such a dangerous shot on the basketball court.

Kjelstrom demonstrates to perfection the natural quality of leadership, that thing which develops team-work and gets results, and brings people right along with him. The men of the outfit look up to him, his words are respected and his example followed. Married and living in block "W" still may be seen often where the buddies gather, measured and quiet according to the trait of his Norweigan blood, and a stellar example of personal influence.

Leading Citizen Soldier on Duty With The War Department General Staff Visits Garrison

National guardsmen and reservists, and members of the Advanced and Company Officers classes turned out in force Wednesday afternoon for an addition to the regular schedule, a special lecture delivered by Lieutenant Colonel H. Edmund Bullis, O. R. C. now on duty with the Operations and Training Section of the War Department General Staff in Washington. Taking as his subject, "The Organized Reserves," Colonel Bullis discussed for an hour the relations of the citizen soldiers to the professional soldiers of the nation, their organization, their war-time plans, and their peace-time functioning.

Colonel Bullis has been on active duty in Washington for a year, charged with particular study and recommendation of all operations and training matters which in any way relate to the reserves. He first came to Washington from New York a member of a special committee of reservists on active duty to make recommendations to the staff the subjects of active duty train-

TRIGGER SQUEEZE RETURNS TO FORT FOR SHORT STAY

Colonel Alexander Macnab at Benning on Official Business Renews Recollections of Former Detail Here

Early this week, Colonel Alexander J. Macnab, from the office of the Chief of Infantry, was at Benning for a short while on temporary duty, for the first time since 1922 being at the garrison where he shot quail and taught his dogs: ,'Fire' and "Movement."

He came by direction of the Secretary of War to observe automatic rifle tests and demonstrations conducted by the Infantry Board, being particularly interested in the performances and technique of the Thompson, Garrand and Pedersen weapons. Riding out on the Benning Boulevard, he wondered what had become of his tame ducks what had become of his tame ducks trained to be decoys. As he passed the old tree, at Block 15 he noted the departure of the Gun Club which he founded and fostered, and saw that golf balls rather than clay pigeons, shotgun bullets were being driven from that spot. There are still traps, but no one dare shout "pull." Wild turno one dare shout "pull." keys have had a free and easy life since his departure, for he was seemingly the only one able to spy them out and shoot them down.

Most interesting to Colonel Macnab, perhaps, was the target range south of Biglerville (Block 21) where as chief of the Rifle and Pistol Section of Military Art he first starred with his instruction methods in rifle marks-manship, qualifying the entire Basic Classes of 1920-1921, and so impressing the authorities that his principles were adopted by the War Department and taken over intact as the new Training Regulation which has revolutionized rifle accuracy in the Army.

In addition to his work with the Infantry Board, for which he interrupted a leave of absence being spent in the southwest, Colonel Macnab engaged in consultations with Colonel K. T. Smith regarding plans for the organization and development of the Infantry team for the National Matches this year.

PAINTING THE SCHOOL ROOMS

Paint instead of chalk dust was flying through the air. Fathers instead of sons and daughters were occupying the Children's School. Saturday afternoon all who had youngsters at Saturday tending classes, assembled and wielded brush and bucket with as much skill as a staff sergeant manipulates a pen and ink-well.

When the class rooms needed paint the garrison parents turned out to do the job themselves, with that co-operation which has featured every activity on the reservation with regard to the school. Master Sergeant and Private stood side by side in painter's overalls, and under the direction of Sergeant June swiftly covered wall and ceiling with a new coating of white. Following were the volunteers elevated to the grade of Painter, Specialist, First Class, for the period of the emergency only:

HISTORY OF ROLL COLLAR FOR MILITARY UNIFORM

Following is the official statement by the War Department relative to the change of the uniform collar.

Due to the discomfort occasioned by wearing of the high standing collar, the question of changing to a more suitable type of collar has been agitated in the Army for many years. The change to a roll collar was officially considered when this country entered the World War, but it was deemed undesirable to alter the uniform at that time because of the nature of the emergency.

After the termination of the World War the question was again widely dis-discussed in the Army. The War Depart-ment believed that the roll collar was preferred by many officers of the Army but it was loath to order its adoption due to the expense involved in the purchase of the new type of uniforms to officers not only of the Regular Army but also of the National Guard and the Organized Reserves. No officers are furnished uniforms by the Government but they must purchase the same from their own personal funds. The War Department also considered it inadvisable to adopt a new type of uniform for com-missioned officers without affording the same relief to the enlisted men. Due to the great stock of uniforms remaining on hand from the World War such a change in uniform of the enlisted men would have necessitated expense to the Government. The War Department did not feel that it should request additional funds for such a purpose when every effort was being made to reduce expenditures to a minimum.

On July 27, 1925, the Secretary of War definitely approved the roll collar coat and overcoat for officers of the Air Service, it being deemed essential, due to the nature of their duties, that the change from the standing to the roll col-lar be adopted for that branch of service as soon as practicable.

The new type of collar worn by the Air Service officers was widely approved throughout the Army and informal investigations made by the Chief of the Militia Bureau and other Army authorities demonstrated that the great majority of the officers of all components of the Army of the United States desired a change to the roll collar.

The detailed specifications and regulations for the change will be very carefully considered prior to the promulga-tion of the order. The regulations will be so worded that the change will be gradual, permitting officers to wear out the present type of uniform prior to the purchase of the new roll collar uniform. It is believed that the present overcoat can be altered to meet the new regulations with little additional expense to individuals.

So far as enlisted men are concerned the change to roll collar will involve no additional expense to the Government. ach soldier is issued one so-called special measurement uniform for which he from his clothing allowance. Regulations hereafter will state that this uniform will have the roll collar. No attempt will be made to alter stocks of uniforms now on hand. Such uniforms will continue to be issued until exhausted.

POLOISTS RESUME RIDING IN COMPETITIVE GAMES

After nearly four weeks of inactivity in competition, due to rain and mud, the Benning poloists were out on Shannon Field Sunday afternoon. They all came out, and all wanted to play, from Second Lieutenant Prather of the 29th Infantry to Brigadier General Frank R. McCoy of the Refresher Class. Even Captain Coulter, of the Students, gave up basketball refereeing and donned his checked cap again. So, all were given opportunities in two games of four periods each, with the Free-booters using two completely different line-ups.

Partially with the aid of a ricocheted shot by a gunner off a horse's hoof and through the wrong goal, and partially by virtue of Coulter's four goals, the green shirted Students turned back the artillery, six goals to one:

83rd Field (1)		Students (6)

Uncles	No. 2	Coulter
Stewart	No. 3	Fry
Carpenter	Back	Brian
Cools: Coultor

Goals: Coulter 4, Fry 1, Stewart 1 One for Students by Artillery.

Demonstrating, as General Allen on the Rhine, and Generals Rawlinson and Haig of the British Army have demonstrated before, that polo is not exclusively a young man's game, General McCoy rode well and stroked sure and accurate shots. But the Freebooters, with alternate line-ups, could not match the brilliant 29th Infantry four who celebrated the first appearance of their new blue shirts by winning eight to nothing:

BLUES LOSE THREE TO ALBANY, MERCER AND RIGHTWAY FIVE

Second Road Trip of Doughboys Proves Disastrous, All Games Going to Opponents by Large Margins

The Infantry basketball five is mighty glad to find itself at home again after a disastrous invasion of foreign fields this week. Last Saturday the Albany Y handed the doughboys a 49 to 31 trimming, Monday the Mercer Bears downed them 46 to 26, and Tuesday the Rightway five of Macon completed the debacle, snowing Major Van Vliet's protegees under to the tune of 56 to 24.

At Albany the Infantrymen got off to a quick start and led the home team through most of the first half, but a rally by the "Y" boys put them in front, 22 to 15, at the intermission. Beginning the second half with a rush the Albany lads soon took complete command of the situation. Skinner dropped them thru from every angle and Hardy was not far behind. For the Infantry Red Newman was the star, making 12 points and running the floor in fine style. The game was somewhat rough and was marked more by individual playing than by teamwork.

Monday night's game in Macon was Mercer's from the start. Led by Phoney Smith, the university team was never in danger. The doughboys, as always, fought hard and refused to admit defeat until the final whistle, but to no avail. Newman again led his team with 13 points, while Buck tallied 6.

The Rightway gang went into Tuesday's contest with the memory of that 38-36 defeat at Benning lingering in their minds, and took full vengeance. Crook Smith, Ricks and Simmons ran wild and piled up point after point. The Rightway guards watched Newman closely, but Red managed to amass 10 points, again leading his team. Kgelstrom bagged 8.

BLOCK FOURTEENERS NOW WALK AND RIDE ON CONCRETE WAYS

Work on Roads and Paths Gives Dry Feet and Mudless Fenders to Travellers Near Permanent Ouarters

"It is still impossible to go any appreciable distance in the reservation," magazine article some time ce. "without meeting mud in wet weather or dust in dry.

Now the residents of the permanent quarters can walk on concrete, for the paving on Block 14, on the hill reaching paving on Block 14, on the hill reaching northwards from the General's quarters, is in place to last as long as the buildings can. The job was started by the Construction Quartermaster, Capt. Wm. McK. Scott, Q. M. C., who started with an allotment of $10,754 for the whole job. He made the survey, established the grade stakes, bought the cement and poured part of the concrete, completing about 450 feet of road and garage ramps. He also laid sidewalks in the central portion of the loop, some sidewalks tral portion of the loop, some sidewalks to main and kitchen house entrances on the east side of the loop, altogether 600 feet of three foot walk and 2850 feet of five foot walk.

When Captain Scott had poured approximately 350 yards of cement, and the empletion of other construction rendered his transfer imminent, the Commandant directed the Recreation Center to take up the task. First the straight stretches were put in, then the loop iself, until the amount of concrete laid for the job reached the completion figure of 1550 yards. That so much could be accomplished with so little money, has been due entirely to the Benning policy of stretching the dollar to the limit, and cutting expenses on labor and material. The 62, 000 sacks of cement alone used up the Sand to the amount of 800 yards and 1500 yards of gravel were hauled in from the reservation. Salvaged lum-Salvaged lumber was used for the forms. Labor came from the garrison personnel.

Following is the organization of the crew assigned to complete the job:
Lt. Col. P. S. Bond, C. E., (In Charge);
Capt. Jas. Sproule, Inf. (Field Engineer); Lt. E. W. Peach, 15th Tanks (Asst. Field Engr. & Procurement Manager);
Let Lt. G. S. Denderick, 24th Lef. (Co. Field Engr. & Procurement Manager); 1st Lt. G. S. Deaderick, 24th Inf. (Super intendent); Mstr. Sgt. Wm. Stratton, I. S. D. (Asst. Supt.); Cpl. Chas Siskrom, Co. "B," 15th Tanks (Foreman in charge of form work an dsidewalks); Pvt. Saml Martin, Co. "B," 15th Tanks (Asst. Foreman and Tractor Driver); Pvts. Ottand Edelston, 29th Inf. Before a classy gallery at the Columbia Country Club last June, two groups of players wielded rackets and smashdrives around the tennis courts. The Army was playing the Navy for the Leach Trophy, emblematic of the championship of the services. Paired with Major Robertson in the doubles in a match which was the closest of in a match which was the closest of the tournament, and playing number four in the singles on the Army team, selected after strenuous tryouts, was the only enlisted player on either side. Sergeant Buck won his match in the singles, coming from behind and bril-liantly defeating his Navy opponent two sets to one

A swimmer of parts. A practised basketeer. A third baseman of skill and accomplishment. Yet his chief reputation rests on his ability as a reputation rests on his ability as a half-back, and he shone so brilliantly against the Navy in Washington a year ago that they have begun to call him "President's Cup Buck."

During the War, at the age of eighteen, he donned the khaki early enough for the best of them, enlisting in the Air Service, and serving with the 17th Air Service, and serving with the 17th Aero Squadron until April, 1919. In the middle of September, 1920, he came back into uniform, to do excellent service in Company". of the 8th Infantry with whom he returned from Germany. Savannah was his home town, but his folks moved to Mismi town; but his folks moved to Miami, and so in 1923, he decided he would rather be at Benning beside the Chattahoochee than at Fort Screven beside the Atlantic, and re-upped for the I. High school and college athletics (Buck was two years at Georgia Tech) are child's play to Buck, for he has developed principally in army athletics developed principally in army athletics and stands as our prime example of the advantages a good soldier with ability at sport can secure for his improvement in athletic circles. He is a hard worker. He has been known to leave the garrison before reveille on a Saturday morning, ride on the train all day, play the hardest game of the season with the Infantry basketball team that night, catch another train team that night, catch another train back to Benning, and then on Sunday turn out in football togs for a crucial

But his accomplishments have brought him the athlete's satisfaction of having played the game fair and hard and having done his work well. Last November he went to Savannah for the Armistice Day game with the parries Island Marines, a feature event. Parris Island Marines, a feature event staged by the American Legion. He staged by the American Legion. He was appearing as a veteran on a day for veterans. He was coming back again to his home town, with a football reputation made in Washington when he helped decisively to win the President's Cup from the Navy. He played the game of his career, carrying the ball for greater yardage than even the famed All-American West Pointers, Smythe and McQuarrie. ers, Smythe and McQuarrie.

"FOLLOW ME"

"At high noon, Friday, January 8, 1926, Governor Roland A. Hartley placed his signature to the school bill sponsored by Camp Lewis, which was passed by both houses of the state legislature without a dissenting vote, and became effective at The State of Washington makes us all its debtor by this act and takes its place amongst a few of the states in the union which provide for admission to the public schools of children residing within the boundaries of said states, but living on federal reservations, without payment of tuition. Heretofore these children have been outsiders and their parents have frequently been compelled by school districts to pay tuition as has been the case here at Camp Lewis. This has worked a hardship upon the parents and has actually prevented some children from attending school. It has cost the camp also many thousands of dollars each year to assist the parents in the schooling of their children which money could have been used to great ad... vantage for other purposes. The government has consistently refused to appropriate any money for such purposes considering this is a matter which belongs distinctly within the province of each sovereign state. At the same time children living on these reservations have been regarded by the local school districts as non-residents, and hence a financial burden which they were unable to This bill is a happy solution of the problem which provides that all expenses attached to the schooling of these children shall be borne by the state current school fund, and county school levy, within whose boundaries they may be. The bill passed is now a law, making it unnecessary hereafter for us to pay any tuition for the schooling of children in the public schools of this state. All parents and all concerned at Camp Lewis are especially grateful to the State of Washington for this generous consideration of our needs. We hope that other states in the union will copy the example of this state, making it no longer a penalty for parents to have children while in the federal service."

"FOLLOW ME"

Enlisted men whose children attend school on the reservation have grouped themselves under Master Sergeant June Service Company, 29th Infantry, into a reserve pool and hold themselves available for service when necessary. Last Saturday afternoon the entire force gathed in the school building and, before night fall, had bestowed on every class room a fresh coating of paint. This is the co-operation that counts.

The assistance of everyone in the post is always acceptable whether the donation be funds or service. The children's school is one of our most worthy local institutions. Keep it in mind. Ask about Show your interest. Chaplain Lennan is leaving and his temporary successor, Captain G. E. Kraul, is carrying on until the arrival of the new Chaplain sometime in June.

If no other opportunity presents itself whereby you can become an active partner in the work of the Children's School, remember you can attend those forms of entertainment, the proceeds of which are donated to the Children's School fund. But in the meantime, as Captain Kraul says: "Ask the children-Catch some of their enthusiasm—They are our satisfied customers."

ANNUAL TANK STUNTS PERFORMED THURSDAY BY LIGHTS AND HEAVIES

Student Officers See Whippets and Heavies Cross Rough Country, Ford Streams and Pass Ravines

Thursday the 15th Tank Battalion staged a show of the care. handling. equipment, operation, and value of light and heavy tanks, for the benefit of the General Officers refresher class and fifteen visiting National Guard Field Officers from twelve different states.

After a preliminary inspection of the huge engines of war and their necessary equipment the student officers observed a demonstration of the manner of transporting the light whippets and the forty-ton heavies, most of which had seen service in France in the Meuse_Argonne and on the Somme with the British in the final conquest of the Hindenburg Line. The heavy tanks were run up ramps and loaded on flat cars at the Line. railway siding and the light tanks were moved under their own power on top of army trucks of the standard pattern except for reinforcement of their rear springs.

The feature of the morning work was the operation of the tanks over rough ground and across country, surmounting obstacles by virtue of their own weight and carefully adjusted power. They passed through sand which dripped in treams from their ever-moving caterpiller treads. They crashed against three-foot trees and thundered on their way through wooden areas. They crossed a creek of running water over two feet deep and rumbled onwards. The climax of the performance was their progress on steep ground. Under perfect control, they passed from side to side of a steep ravine, with a slope averaging 36 degrees, and at times getting as steep as 40 degrees. By neat manipulation of the operating mechanism these monsters were enabled to be driven up a sharp declivity and proceed on their way, as if they were bringing their heavy armament irresistibility against a well-select ed enemy position.

We note with surprise that you are a young soldier and desire to pursue the Law. In this vicinity we so often find the Law pursuing the young soldier. Combat Train Pay day comes but once a month, and the Bugler that blew pay call this morning was heralded with great joy.

We are all sorry to see Sgt. McVicker leaving the outfit. Due to his great kindness and his ability as a supply sergeant he will be greatly missed in the organization. Although "Pinky" re-enlisted about a year ago, circumstances have made him decide to buy out. Here's wish-ing him the best of luck on the outside.

Speculation as to who our new supply sergeant will be does not seem to be running very high. Somebody must have a cinch on the job. Maybe he comes from Boston.

Re-enforcement of the floor in the Day Room is being contracted for by the firm of Carr & Co. The work seems to be progressing very nicely. Just a case of more work than money, I guess.

Battery "B" took the Combat Train on for a defeat in their basket ball game last Saturday. The score was 17 to 15. Everybody starred.

Battery "A"

Now that the basket ball season has returned, things are getting lively, the Battalion league opened with a bang, Battery "A" lost to Battery "C" by a score of 17 to 4. It is a bad policy to win the first game, but that does not mean that we intend to loose all the games, so watch out, we may fool you.

Peculiar things have been and are being pulled off every day, but the most peculiar thing of all is about a certain sergeant who confines himself to his room and devotes the largest part of his time to the "Charleston." He will open up a school shortly, four lessons for $6.00. Cpl. McCann who is going to be the first pupil has consented to give an exhibition at 2:00 P. M. next week. Everyone is requested to attend. No admission charge. TEA will be No admission charge.

INCOME TAX EXEMPTIONS

Individuals who have to pay income taxes are advised, before hitting the adding machine and juggling figures, that two important decisions have been made in Washington since the last tax returns were made out.

The Court of Claims decided that an officer need not take up as income the money he receives as commutation of quarters, or the "rental value" of the quarters he occupies.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue decided that commutation of rations money paid enlisted men in lieu of rations in kind does not constitute income and need not be recorded on the tax re-

Colonels Clemens and Kimbrough Address Classes Giving Concrete Advice on Civilian Components

After this paper went to press last week, two exceptionally interesting lectures were delivered to the Company Officers' Class on Thursday by Colonel Paul P. Colonel Clemens is active in the 128th

Colonel Kimbrough is a Georgian from Hamilton. now a regular officer on duty with the Georgia National Guard in which he has always rendered splendid service. Then he went into the Georgia Guard again, and a student officer long with the Macon Volunteers speaks enthusiastically and at length of the fine attitude and accom-plishments of the Colonel in the state

Colonel Kimbrough dwelt upon the importance of the Guard during the first three months of possible mobilization, and indicated that though raw militia has been ineffective, trained militia has been invaluable and has represented the basic American doctrine of defense by citizen soldiers. He pointed out the meager 150 hours available for training each year, and showed how the citizen guardsmen to their bit in time of peace, neither for pay nor for glory, but simply from loyal obligation. BENNING BEATEN BY BERMINGHAM BOYS IN BITTER BATTLE

Recent Conquerors of Atlanta Athletic Club Have Hard Time Downing the Doughboys 41-27

Buck's eye for the basket was bright while McQuarrie and Berry stuck close to their men on defense, but brilliant shooting by Caldwell, Vincent and Newman of the Birmingham Athletic Club five proved just too much for the battling Doughboys, and Saturday night's contest in Birmingham went to the home town boys, 41 to 27.

As the clubmen had recently defeated the strong Atlanta Athletic Club by quite a large margin it was expected that the game would prove little more than stiff practice for the home five, since the infantrymen were overwhelmed by the Atlantans earlier in the season. Major Van Vliet's charges, however, presented a strong defense and made a real fight all the way. Buck made a real light all the way. Buck was the high score man of both teams gathering 13 markers. The soldier guards, McQuarrie and Berry, covered closely, but Caldwell scored 12 points while Vincent garnered 10 and Newman 11.

BENNING GOLFERS JOIN NATIONAL ASSOCIATION AND IMPROVE COURSE

Colonel Warfield Announces Affiliation With Big Golfing Body and Special Aid From Greens Section

With the opening of the early spring season, the Infantry School players of the ancient game of old Scotland have been putting their course in perfected shape and have now affiliated with the National Golf Association, notably with the Greens Section of that organization.

Increased interest in drives and putts has stimulated the formation of a regular golfing team representing the Infantry School, and Colonel Warfield announces that a series of home-and-home contests will be played this season with the clubs located at La-Grange, Albany, Columbus and Ma-

COL. WILLIAM GRAYSON VISITS LOCAL FORT TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Arranges for Annual Parris Island Game With Infantry Gridsters in Savannah and "Maine" Celebration

Across the Upatoi Bridge came the State Commander of the United Spanish War Veterans, visiting The Infantry School for the first time, and escorted by Major Uhl of the head-quarters staff and Mr. John I. Gallegher, past-commander of the William Schley Camp of that patriotic organization.

He signed a five-year contract for annual football games between the Parris Island Marines and the Infantry's Big Blue Tide, made a tour and inspection of the garrison, and concluded arrangements for a novel celebration this week of the anniversary of the sinking of the battleship "Maine." He saw war tanks in all the weight of their armament, little anti-aircraft machine guns peppering away in tests on the Hook Range, away in tests on the Hook Range, and our magnificent athletic plant, Gowdy Field, and the Doughboy Stadium dium.
With Mr. Gallegher, he settled the manner of commemorating the loss of the warship which precipitated, on February 15, 1898, the Spanish War. It is planned to have special ceremo-nies downtown, and large numbers of buglers who will blow taps, as the lights are dipped for thirty seconds, and the farewell call of the army resounds from street corners and from

With Captain Zellars, he settled, in the name of the Savannah Stadium Committee appointed by the Mayor and Council of that city, for five years of contests on armistice day between the sea soldiers and the doughboys, as when our veterans of the war and the gridiron, Lindsey, Buck, Kjelstrom, Davis and the others helped the coastal city celebrate the winning of the World War.

PHYSICALLY FINISHED

Last Saturday afternoon nine medical afficers assembled at the Old Hos pital building to devote a strenuous afternoon to completing the annual physical examinations for the garrison, to make sure that the officers were capable of undergoing the severe mental strain of assimilating knowledge at the Infantry School and of enduring the physical strain of wearing the new type of uniform. The last of the six hundred appeared before them. About tweive commissioned gentlemen appeared, and the medicos were free—for the rest of the storm last season. About twelve commis-

Tuesday and Wednesday, February 16th and 17th, the Infantry School Glee Club will present in the Fort Benning Garrison Theatre, the musical comedy "El Bandido" by Mary H. and John W. Dodge, an amusing and tuneful piece laid in Spain and relating the complicated adventures of twin brothers, an artist and a bandit, who upset the quiet life of a pleasant Spanish town. A pompous provincial governor comes to straighten out affairs, after an important army captain, and half the population have tried to resolve the difficulties. And the piece ends properly, lovingly and hilariously.

Specially brought to Benning for this occasion, Mr. David Hargis Mil-ler, brother of Major E. S. In November, 1925, the center on the Infantry team left the gridiron in Griffith Stadium near the close of the game for the President's Cup. But not the work of this linesman, who came dejectedly down the sidelines to find the friendly and opposing stands find the friendly and opposing stands rise to their feet and give him a rous-

The young sixteen-year recruit and the sturdy player were one and the same: "Red" Lindsey of the 15th Tanks. After a tour with the M. P. outfit at Merimac, France, where "Red" reports intensive action on a "restricted" front, Lindsey sifted across the water and received a discharge at Camp Pike. MAJOR PARSONS ABOUT TO LEAVE

Due shortly for foreign service, and already under orders to sail for Manila, Major Albro L. Parsons, M. C., is preparing to leave the garrison.

Here in the relatively warm wint-ers of eastern Georgia, the mosquito lead as happy life and is active pracfreezing blasts to exterminate his kind. The drainage on the reservation is even yet not of the best. Lake Malone sits serenely in the center of the garrison. Swamps abound within mosquito-flying distance. The biters were joyful and well fed until Major Parsons arrived from the Army Medical School and the Medical Field ical School and the Medical Service School in the summer of 1921.

Four and a half years of work by this active doctor have rendered ex-istence a troubled thing for the mos-quito population of Fort Benning. Devoting himself to this problem and serving generally as sanitary officer serving generally as sanitary officer, Major Parsons went about his work and got things done. Sometimes we did not like to be told that an empty tomato can under our quarters porch bred the pests, or that our company kitchens were not as clean as he would like them, or that the vines we grew about the orderly rooms or on our house fronts served as more effective sun shades for mosquitoes than for mosquitoes that the mosquitoes the mosquit But that was that. Major Parsons did his work and now leaves for Manila where we hope he finds plenty of mosquitoes to scout out and capture, for that is a job he likes and does well.

YOUNGSTERS OF FORT LEARNING A. B. C.'s AT CHILDREN'S SCHOOL

Wooden Buildings House School Sup-ported by Parents and Well Conducted by Practised Teachers

Have you noticed about 7:55 these cold mornings the little tots and the larger boys and girls heading towards the north end of the garrison? Each has a little bundle of books and the majority little pink or blue lunch

These are our school children. They gather in two temporary frame buildings near the main theatre. At recess time you can count nearly 170 under the care of six of the finest grad-uate teachers in this section of the country.

Thirty little tots from the kinder garten take their morning romp with their efficient guardian Miss Joyner, now in her second year at the school. Their class room work is as interesting to grown ups as to the kiddies. In one corner of their room is a twoseater merry-go-round donated by Loewenherz Bros. of Columbus, Ga., also a see-saw just completed and presented by Captain Osborne of the Ord-nance. They use little drinking cups donated by Mr. Louis H. Davis, Sport Shop of Columbus. And those donations do help!

The remainder of the pupils are divided between the First to the Seventh grades, with equally excellent instruc-tion in each grade. Miss Grimes, six tion in each grade. Miss Grimes, six years at the school, has the first grade and in addition is in charge of all work. Miss Lind, three years at Benning, has the 2nd grade pupils, and Miss Schimek, with four years service. the 3rd grade. Miss Mizell, two years here, teaches the 4th and 5th grades and Miss Barnes now in her third year instructs the 6th and 7th grades.

The teaching methods employed are progressive and up-to-date, according to the city standards, so the Columbus
High School enters our 7th grade graduates without examination.
To Chaplain Lennan is due all credit for the present sound financial condition and the generous support given the school.

Tuition fees of $5.50 per month per child for grade pupils and $3.00 for kindergarten instruction are paid in advance by officers, warrant officers, and civilian employees. Tuition fees for enlisted men's children have been reduced to $1.00 for grade scholars and $3.00 for kindergarten. Other operations from those for the control of the co ing funds come through donations from enlisted men's dances, etc. This year a total of approximately $200 was voted by the local Athletic Association, representing profits on soft drinks at Varsity Football games.

Especial pride is taken in the new manual training department being established for the older boys and the ing funds come through donations from tablished for the older boys and the sewing and art classes for the older girls, initial equipment for the manual training department having been do-nated by the Woman's Guild.

Plans have been prepared for a new permanent concrete school building similar to the Wynnton School in Columbus. An effort is now being made to secure a donation for such a building from outside sources. However, there is nothing definite as yet. If the effort is not successful, other means will be employed. We must put our children in suitable class rooms at the earliest date. The present rooms are the best available but leave much to be desired.

"FOLLOW ME"

This week marks another epoch in the history of Fort Benning, for Thursday night, the 18th, the War Department Theatre will open with "The Merry Widow" in the new theatre building. One more unit of the Recreation Center Project will have been completed, from modern projection booth, over the sloping floor with fifteen hundred-odd seats flanked by modern radiator wall heating installations, right up to the edge of the stage. A temporary wall now carries the silver sheet across which the most famous actors and actresses of the screen world will display their acting skill and their personal pulchritude for the entertainment of Infantry School audiences. In the course of time a modern stage will stand behind that wall, which will then be torn down. But at present, the theatre as a movie theatre is complete, built by Benning people in the Benning way.

For the aid given from Washington experts, for the funds advanced to defray part of the cost, for the vision of those in charge who conceived and pushed through the idea, for the hard work which raised the concrete and steel structure on the Georgia earth, all Benning personnel of the present. and the future should be appreciative and grateful.

THE LITTLE BRONZE BUTTON

(By Pyt. John Jensen, 25th Inf.) Out in a little western town, At the close of day and the sun was down

A village meeting was about to begin When a railroad train came steaming in The train shouted with thrilling cries, "I have on board a man who dies." A call went out for medical aid: On the station floor a man was laid.

The doctor came, quite out of breath; Found paralysis would be the cause of death, Curious to know, curious to see, Just who the stranger might be. But no one knew, and no one there Offered to give or offered to share. A traveler, perhaps, without a home-Maybe a man who likes to roam

Though his eyes were closed, his lips were sealed, He heard them say, "In Potter's Field'

He tried in vain to lift his hand. That a little button they might understand.

For the precious little emblem, world known,

Was the sweetest of all for him to own Carried to the morgue limp and dead, Uncushioned marble his evening bed.

The night grew dark, then morning came Still no one knew the stranger's name; The sexton, busy with pick and hoe Preparing a place in pauper row. The townsmen slowly passing by, When the village squire happened to spy A little bronze button, which seemed to sav This town should be shedding tears to day.

Then over the form he carefully bent, He could see quite plainly what the emblem meant;

Behold, this man did not live in vain, He was a soldier in the War with Spain He hall be laid beside comrades brave For a stricken people he helped to save: Then a different grave, in a different row, Flowers, prayer, heads bent low.

Taps sounded on silent air Beautiful smiles-somewhere The flag was raised, casket closed— The highest honor a Soldier knows. He sleeps beneath stars in blue, The greatest thing a man can do; For a little bronze button had this to tell.

He was there when tyranny fell.

GENERAL OFFICERS LEAVE

Brigadier Generals Frank N. McCov and Charles D. Rhodes completed last Saturday their special refresher course and left in the afternoon for their new stations, the former to take over Fourth Infantry brigade in the Second Division, and the latter to sail for Panama and command of the Twentieth Infantry Brigade at Camp Gaillard beside the Culebra Cut.

Dear Ad:

I am married and live in Columbus, Georgia, and am trying to raise a family on my pay as a sergeant. I have tried every way I know of to save enough money to buy an automobile. Do you think a budget would help me? Sgt. Phil A. Strate.

Dear Phil:

We are sorry that you have not been able to buy an automobile. However, we know quite a number of soldiers who get along very well with Fords.

You ask if we think a budget will help you. We don't believe anything will help you except a mracle.

requiring members of the Garrison to show clear title to automobiles before issuance of permits, it has seemed to have become necessary to build sidewalks to accommodate the pedestrians.

Dear Ad:
We had an argument in the Day Room the other day and want you to settle a question for us. The question is: what is the correct position of the 1st Sergeant at Guard Mount?

Pvt. Willie Shoote.

Dear Willie:

This is a question that was settled many years ago; but for some very good reason it was never included in the Training Regulations.

The only correct position for a First Sergeant at Guard Mount is in an Arm Chair in the Orderly Room with his feet on a Desk.

BENNING BEAUTIFUL

Colonel Warfield was host at an informal "stag" party on the Quartermaster Lawn Friday and Saturday of last week. The subject most generally discussed was: "Benning's Beautiful Bum-galows." The Colonel chose for his text: "The Lord helps those who help themselves and the Commandant will do likewise." In a moment of weakness the Colonel so far forgot himself as to offer Sgt. McNulty free access to the Quartermaster lumber

"Seems like to me," said old Earl Cottontop, as he laid aside the evening paper, "that this here Mussolini thinks there is only one syllable in Italy and he is IT."

THE AIDE PAID

A short time ago the aide to one of our general officers, driving at night, was blinded by the headlights of an approaching car and ran into a farm wagon carrying a family, but no lights. He stood suit and lost the decision. Appealed and lost again, though local laws required all vehicles to carry lights at night. Due to his associations, personal and official, he had the very best advice and strong military influences to back him. Nevertheless for a long and wearisome period his monthly income was reduced by large partial payments on this judgment, court costs and attorney's fees, in addition to which he had to take leave three times to appear in a court of an adjoining state where the accident occurred.

WONDER WHAT THE LIEUTEN

ANT THOUGHT?
A squad of Ethiopian Foot Troops was dismantling some unused tents. As is apparently usual to the race, their movements were as a poem—in slow motion. Beautiful to behold—but lack-

Then of a sudden the corporal in charge uttered a sharp cry. He had been quietly digging beneath the floor-boards of a tent. To the amazement of the workers he held a loft a larg roll of money.

Amazement was succeeded by instant Within a proverbial second activity. the tents were down and the floorboards flying in every direction. The place The place was a bee-hive of action. The search was on!

The school instructor landed on the cuie with both feet. The Colonels made many obvious remarks; it was a wonder ful opportunity for a good crack now and then. The whole demonstration of "how it should be done" was a recruit performance.

After the two-hour agony was over the Louie "squads-righted" for the woods. He was going to get to the bottom of this

The Company Commander had made a change in Cooks; the new cooks couldn't cook anything without the Mess Sergeant showing them how. The Mess Sergeant had fallen in love and couldn't stay around the kitchen long enough to watch the Cooks cook. This morning most of them hadn't had anything to eat, because the new cooks couldn't cook to suit their enlightened tastes.

Company "B"

This organization started the new year off properly by having twenty eight orderlies selected at Battalion Guard Mount, out of a possible thirty-one, during the month of January. This was a splendid accomplishment, capacially when you take into consider. especially when you take into consideration the keen competition the other organizations of the Battalion present, for this signal honor each day. We feel, and rightfully too, that guard duty is one of the most important duties a soldier has to perform in time of peace; therefore, the members of this company are thoroughly instructed in both general and special orders and are duly impressed with the importance of neat regulation dress and equipment while in performance of this duty. old saying that: "Competition makes perfection" is correct. Each platoon in the company makes every effort to outdo its fellow rival and in so doing the entire company profits. The platoon standings for January is as follows: 1st Platoon: 10. 2nd Platoon: 6. 3rd Platoon: 12. Total 28.

Every man who is bucking for orderly is thoroughly inspected by his platoon Sergeant, after which he reports to the first sergeant, or some of the company officers who inspect and question him, correct any deficiencies noted. This system has proven successful because it has created not only a personnel pride but a pride of organization as well which couldn't have been developed any other way. We may never equal this record again but we will always have the satisfaction of knowing that when we are beaten in the future, the winner will have, to be bette rthan above average.

Likewise, no post football conference should be complete without an all intramural eleven. We may not have a well known sport scribe to do our selecting but we have men who are well versed in football sense, men who, in addition, have seen every game and who are not seen every game and who are not influenced by any biases or ancient reputations that the men may have earned on the post team. All men are picked for their face value, and not potential value, and for their performances for their respective teams. It might be added that this selection is not based on that of one individual but represents the most popular selection from these teams that were lection from those teams that were submitted to the writer. There were 7 such teams submitted. Here is the way the final teams line up:

First Team

Davis, 2d Bn., Sweeney, Tks, ends; Hesse, I. S. D., McGuire, 2d Bn., tackles; Bertelman, Tks., Lapine, 83rd, guards; Lindsey, Tks., center; Buck, I. S. D., Bennett, Tks., halfbacks; Green, I. S. D., fullback; Kjelstrom, 2d Bn., quarterback.

Second Team
Carpenter, I. S. D., Hart, Tks., ends;
McCoy, 2d Bn., Butcher, 1st Bn., tackles; Newman, 2d Bn., Mattingly,
Tks., guards; Martin, 83rd, center; Oikari, 2d Bn., Dudley, Tks., half-backs; Romploski, 1st Bn., fullback; Samlavich, 83rd, quarterback.

Some of us will wonder why some men whose performances were so obvious in some of the games were omitted. It is too bad that all the men can't be selected and that there are only 22 men picked. I can mention are only 22 men picked. I can mention here some of the men who stood out but who were not picked enough to carry them on the 1st or 2nd teams. For instance, Elliot of 2nd Battalion, Blackman of 1st Battalion, Wargo of the Artillery were mentioned for guard but not enough to put them on the team. Dixon of I. S. D., and Berish of 2nd Battalion were mentioned for centers. Willingham of Tanks and Willingham of Tanks, Vangroski of 1st Battalion, were menvanglosk of its Battanon, were neu-tioned for tackles; Caldwell and Schulte of Artillery, for ends; Taylor was mentioned for halfback. Of this who received a unanimous choice.

We know that some will differ from we know that some will their from this selection. We grant that every one is entitled to his own opinion but we place more faith in one than in another."

The seven teams mentioned were, it is understood, chosen by seven officers, none of whom were actively connected with any of the intramural teams, but all of whom are either coaches or experienced football play-

EXCITED POLO PERIODS WITH CLOSE BATTLING ENTERTAIN SUNDAY CROWD

Improved Playing of Students and Artillerymen Produce Best Mounted Action of Present Season

Closer and more skilled polo graced Shannon Field last Sunday afternoon than on any previous occasion this season. Profiting from constant prac-tice with their rivals of the doughboy regiment, the S3rd Field Artillery put up a strong fight against the Free-booters, although the latter won, 3-1. By virtue of long and hard hitting by Fry and Coulter, the Students team broke into the smooth playing of the 29th Infantry, and the latter only won, 6-5, by tieing the score in the final chukker and winning in the extra

GEN. BRIANT H. WELLS LEAVES FORT BENNING FOR HIGH ARMY POST

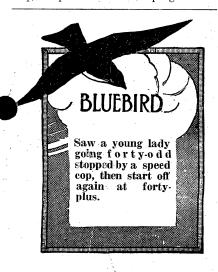

Commandant Will Go March Eighth to Chiefship of General Staff Division

Announcement was made in Washington last Saturday that Brigadier-General Briant H. Wells had been selected by General Hines for the very important post of Chief of the Supply Division of the War Department General Staff, and that orders would be issued relieving him as Commandant of the Infantry School on or about March 8th. The position to which he goes has twice reposition to which he goes has twice re-cently been the stepping stone to the office of Deputy Chief of Staff. It is felt that he will follow the same route as Generals Nolan and Connor. General Wells came to Fort Benning in November, 1923, from Washington, where he had been head of the War Plans Division, drew the major programs for military mobilization and operation

The General leaves with regret, saying he considers the task he has filled here "the finest command in the army," and declaring that the spirit of co-operation and progress has been very strikingly exemplified by all ranks. "All," he remarks, "have put their shoulders to the wheel and pushed together for a better Benning.

Since General Wells came to Benning, the Recreation Center project has been organized and the Stadium Builders under Colonel Bond have completed Gowdy Field, The Doughboy Stadium, the War Department Theatre, numerous stretches of walk and concrete roadway, and the Infantry School has taken a leap in spirit and athletic progress.

VETERANS OF 1898 PAY FINE TRIBUTE TO DEAD COMRADES

Memorial Exercises Held in Main Theatre. Col. Cocheu Delivers Address

Veterans of the Spanish American War gathered in the garrison theatre last Sunday and paid tribute to those of their comrades who gave their lives for the love of country and the overthrow of tyranny. A splendid program, beginning with musical numbers reminiscent of 1898 and ending with the sad notes of taps, held the attention of the large gathering of veterans and friends from start to finish,

Chairman J. I. Gallagher of the Memorial Committee, opened the exercises with a short prayer for divine blessing and few words of welcome. Mr. J. Homer Dimon, Mayor of Columbus, introduced the principal speaker of the occasion, Colonel Frank Cocheu, Assistant Commandant of the Infantry Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School, in a characteristically happy manner. Colonel Cocheu, after rendering the homage due to the departed heroes, warned his hearers against the dangers or the nostrums and curealls of the professional pacifist and closed with a strong plea for national preparedness to the end that the lives of our youth may not again be sacrificed on the bat-

Annual Presentation of Spanish Operetta by Glee Club Splendidly Received

From the moment when Captain George King's shadowy form loomed against the footlit base of the curtain and the orchestra broke into the swinging notes of the overture, "El Bandido" swept onwards toward a striking success. Red, yellow and green costumes of joyous villagers flitted across the deep black of bandit robes and masks. Mrs. Barbara Dale Karlstad's soprano voice lilted through tuneful songs. Mr. Miller's tenor carried a smooth stream of music that enraptured the audience.

The dancing of Mrs. Rice and Mrs. Brian supported by six of the most charming and agile maidens of the reservation, performing on dancing toes to the delectation of the crowd made the audience call for encore after encore. Captain Dager, as the innkeeper; Lieutenant Carraway, as a clumsy and aspiring servant, and Captain Saulnier, as a self-adulating official, brought laugh after laugh.

SPLENDID THEATRE OPENING EFFECTED IN NEW STRUCTURE

Garrison Crowds Into Concrete Building to Celebrate Com-pletion of Finished Unit

Day by day in every way, Benning is becoming better and better. Instead of the rickety roof, cracked floor, and drafty walls of the converted cow barn used as a moving picture theatre at this garrison from time immemorial, the people of the Infantry School now actually have a concrete theatre building with 1543 comfortable seats sloping down a curved floor from the modern Powers curved floor from the modern rowers projection machines to the silver sheet one hundred and sixty feet from lenses to screen. From the draped and decorated lobby with the splendid booth Sgt. Wall built to the extensive radiators of the besting system the house is of a the heating system, the house is of a high order.

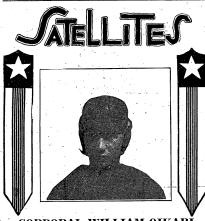

General Wells stepped out to make the dedicatory remarks, was greeted with unanimous applause of the audience, paying vociferous tribute to the departing commandant who has made possible this additional unit of the Recreation Center. He told of the initial idea of including a modern movie theatre in the project, of the energetic push given construction when Colonel Bond and his crew of builders took hold, of the conformity of the entire idea with the Benning principle of working together and working hard for the betterment of this station, its facilities, entertainment, and recreation.

Captain Neff rendered "Mandalay" and Captain King's special orchestra played overture and exit march, and carried the tuneful strains of famous carried the tuneful strains of famous music all through the presentation of the picture, "The Merry Widow" full of life and action, beauty and power. When the crowd filed out the long aisles at the conclusion, there was a universal feeling of satisfaction. Mr. M. W. Smith and Mr. Roger Hill, of the Army Motion Picture Service were on hand, and the garrison expressed its gratingle and the garrison expressed its gratitude for their cordial and essential co-operation in making the new theatre.

CORPORAL WILLIAM OIKARI Company "E" 29th Infantry

Shortly after the opening of the intramural football game with the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, President's Cup Buck, of the Infantry School Detachment Greenbacks got off a long spiral punt which fell into the waiting arms of a slight individual in a blue jersey. The I. S. D. ends were almost upon him, but he shook off one, stiff armed another and dashed across several white chalk lines before finally brought to earth. "Who's that guy?" asked a Detachment rooter. "Why, that's 'Okry'" replied a better informed comrade. "Huh, Never heard of him," grunted the first, but before the game was over he had learned enough about Oikari to know that the lineup.

Corporal William Oikari, Co. E, 29th Infantry, in his first year of real football, proved himself a played of exceptional ability. He participated in every game of the champion 2nd Battalion outfit, and every minute he played was one too many for the opposition. Weighing only 136 pounds, he hits the line hard and low, running with the high knee action characteristic of the best line plungers. In an open field he is shifty and elusive. It usually took more than one tackler to bring him down. On defense he is steady and sure. His fighting spirit is a big asset to his team.

Previous to coming to Fort Benning, this 22 year old Swede from Minnesota had never been a regular member of any football team, altho in his high school days he was substitute quarterback while weighing only 97 pounds. His athletic skill is not confined to football alone, as he is a basketball player of marked ability and a member of the 2nd Battalion five. In track he specializes in the hurdles and last year won the Battalion title in that event.

Oikari's home is in Chisholm, Minnesota, where he was born and raised. In October, 1920, he enlisted at Fort Snelling for the 49th Infantry, and served with "B" Company of that regiment until the reduction of the army caused his discharge on September 5, 1921, as Private 1st Class, with character "Excellent." He could not shake off the lure of the Service, however, and on August 7, 1924, took out another stack and was assigned to Co. "E" 29th Infantry, where he has been ever since. He went out for football that fall, but a severe knee injury kept him off the gridiron much of the time. On December 9, 1924, his ability as a soldier was rewarded with the two stripes of a corporal. In the target season of 1925 he officially showed his prowess as a rifle marksman.

Oikari is one of the most promising young athletes in the army, and is counted on by the Big Blue teams to replace some of the older stars who must soon fade. The development of clean hard fighting athletes like this young Minnesotan goes far to vindicate the athletic policy of the War Department and of the conduct of intramural sports at Fort Benning.

Master Sergeant Wolf, chairman of the Pinochle Committee, presented the prize in a short talk in which he praised highly the skill of winners of a tourney in which such great players as "Blanco" White, "Spud" Pregowski and Otis Glenn were among the entrants.

"FOLLOW ME"

It is the function of a paper to give voice to the ideas and sentiments of the people it serves. Never in the history of the Infantry School News has it been possible to express so surely the opinion of the Infantry School personnel as upon this occasion. The impending departure of General Wells, our commandant, is viewed with unanimous regret.

It was General Wells who stretched government funds to the limit and accomplished more with meager money than any one dreamed could be done. It was General Wells who pushed the improvement of the garrison in every possible way, from encouraging the beautification of lawns, to the completion of permanent construction. It was General Wells who saw that sand and gravel and lumber from the reservation could help along our building program. It was General Wells who cleared out unsightly rubbish piles, fostered athletics, encouragd drag hunts and polo contests, engineered the President's Cup contests with the Infantry representing the army, made possible the new theatre, created the Armistice Day World War Pageant as a feature event in this section of the South, and created Gowdy Field and the Doughboy Stadium.

Steady and sound, efficient and kindly, facing facts and clearly envisaging the future, General Wells has made his mark indelibly on The Infantry School. It is not for us to speak of purely official matters, the improvement of instruction and military training activities. But we may speak of the things which come close to our hearts. We can repeat with sincerity the words of the Chief of Infantry upon the dedication of the Doughboy Stadium, who said that General Wells was "that central dynamo that generated the force required to carry the magnificent project to completion," and added: "Others to whom we owe a debt of gratitude may be lost in the dim vistas of the future, but the name of Briant H. Wells will be connected with the recreation center for GLEEFUL BANDIDO generations yet to come."

Since General Wells arrived the place has been positively transformed and bettered. Here at Benning a great work is in progress. Everything which he has done for the efficiency and the happiness of this command will have lasting results on the future value of the basic branch of the military service. Men who achieve things of major value in the army, as General Wells has done, are true public servants, adding stones to the structure of national strength that will endure through the centuries. fine commander with remarkable leadership and a splendid mind, we salute you, General Wells and wish you the future success we know you will achieve in the higher circles of the army.

We regret exceedingly that illness prevented Captain Malcolm Rice and Captain Andrew D. Bruce, 29th Infantry, and Master Sergeant William Ruppel Infantry School Detachment, all holders of the Distinguished Service Cross, from being present when the photographer took the picture printed on the first page of this issue.

BENNING GRADUATES

Since the Infantry School was started, a continuous stream of graduates has passed over the bridge across the Upatoi trained to prepare American military manpower for battle action in the basic arm of the service. Altogether their total reaches 2,674, of whom 1,762 are Infantry officers of the Regular Army, totaling half the strength of those now on the active list.

Analysis of the status of the graduates reveals, naturally, a greater number of doughboy than other officers, but the distribution reaches out to all branches and activities. These officers are now on duty with the General Staff in Washington, at various Corps Area Head-quarters, at R. O. T. C. colleges, at Reserve regiment and division headquarters, with National Guard units as instructors, and with regular combat troops. Wherever they go, they carry the Benning doctrine and technique. Reports of doctrine and technique. Reports of commanders submitted to the War Department constantly include tributes to the fine influence being exerted by these graduates towards a more efficient state of military training. Following is the classification of Infantry School graduates as prepared by the Office of the Chief of Infantry:

BIG MOTORCADE IS FEATURE OF BLOCK FOURTEEN OPENING

Completion of New Concrete Road Celebrated Tuesday by Gala Motor Procession

Benning latest "dollar stretching" feat was fittingly celebrated Tuesday noon, when a big motorcade passed over the rewly completed concrete loop in Block Fourteen. Breaking all army precedents the Commandant yielded the place dents the Commandant yielded the place of honor behind the band to the officers and enlisted men whose hard and cheerful labor produced the splendid piece of hard surfaced roadway. Men who had toiled unceasingly and seemingly thank-lessly, learned from this courtesy that their efforts are sincerely appreciated by all.

Your choice of words is very unfortunate. You should not say "the lowest kind of a non-commissioned officer." If you were a corporal very cer." If you were a corporal yourself you would say, "A Corporal is the Junior Non-Commissioned Officer in the army."

Service Company The boys report that they enjoyed the show "El Bandido" very much, even though they did have to stand up. If the attendance and applause were any criterion, it was a complete success.

The Spare Parts basketball team is well on the way to a championship. They defeated the Ordnance and 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, by decisive scores. They may meet more resistance in the next games, but already they have demonstrated their ability, and with plenty of moral support we believe they will come through. Turn out, all you Spare Parts boys, and give them a hand.

By defeating the 1st Battalion Quintet to the tune of 16-5 Monday night and the Ordnance Quintet to the tune of 31-9 Tuesday night, the Special Units basket ball team made a good start in their race for the Post Championship. They ex-perienced no difficulty in white washing the army mechanics who placed an un-tried team on the floor. However it was a different story with Lt. Schaeffer's protegees. They held Lt. Dabezie's pupils to a 4-2 score for the first half but in the second period the confidence of the 1st Bat. was completely shattered by the shower of baskets by Lotz and Cunningham and the close and careful guarding of Sullivan. No one stood out for the 1st Bat., the whole team put up a game fight and, like Trojans, submitted to defeat (without a whimper.

REFLECTIONS AT NIGHT

"D" Company's track meet was the stellar athletic event presented on the 29th Infantry Parade ground last Wed-nesday under the supervision of Lt. Harry W. French.

Our two mischievous non-coms were sadly disappointed last Saturday and Sunday by being restricted to the com-pany street over the week-end. That is tough luck for one of them sure missed the trip to Atlanta which he had plan-ned—so fondly and carefully.

Company "F"
Corporal Ebersberger just blew in off furlough Monday. Looks fine, and says he sure had a great time, but he is glad to get back to duty again.

Well, well, look what happened! 34 points in the Bn. Field Meet. Take a glimpse at these places we got:

Won the Tug of War (pulled Co. "E" all over the lot).

Won First Place in the Relay Race against E. and G.
Pfc. Dean First Place in the 440 dash

Sgt. Simpson First Place in 220 dash. Pvt. McLennan First Place in 220 Low Hurdles.

Cpl. Chambers Second Place in Shot Put.

Pvt. Armstead Second Place in Broad Jump

Pfc. Stinson Third Place in 880 run. Pfc. Lane Third Place in Potato Race.

Pfc Brown, Arthur P. Third Place in Sack Race

That gave us 34 points, while our nearest competitor, Co. "E" was next with 29 points. Rather a good start for the week, when an outfit can do that on a Monday morning with the week-end hangover still tangling our feet, eh? Youghta hear the Mess-Sergeant and Company Clerk voice their growls about drilling this week. It sure is tough to Gold Brick for so long and then have to do a few Squads Right and Left. However, they will live thru it, we hope.

Private Derbyshire, formerly Cook and Mess-Sergeant in this outfit, was trans ferred down here from Regimental Headquarters and Headquarters Con-Headquarters and Headquarters company last week. Welcome to our party Jim, and lets hope you like it as you did when you were here before.

Our galloping mechanic, "Rabbit"

Our galloping mechanic, "Rabbit" Crawford turned out for drill this week, and he likes it so well that he asked to be sent back to duty, says he has been away from a rifle so long that he feels both hands and both feet are lefts, and his fingers all thumbs. Go to it Rabbit ol' kid, you used to flip a rifle with the best of them, and we think you can do it again.

Cpl. Carnes, acting Supply Sergeant since Sgt. Kruse went to the hospital. thinks he is running a paper factory. He turns out about a bushel basket full of paper work every cay, and says if the days were longer be could get out more. Watch out Carnes, remember the allowance of paper has been cut down. We'll have to get an extra supply of paper and forms if you keep it up.

Company "G"

As this is battalion week for the Second Battalion, we have not much to offer except to say that the boys are looking forward to having a better drilled outfit.

We had a battalion field meet and the speedsters sure put out. Of course there were a few who entered events new to them, like the hurdle race which developed some skinned shins.

Lt. Cole, has left our bunch, going to company "E" and we shall miss his Company sunny smile.

Company "H"

Sergt. Craine our regular reporter has gone on a thirty-five day furlough. We all wish him a happy one while in the hills of Mississippi.

Private Bostick has left us on a sick leave, hope he is better when he returns

Sullivan, Fort Hamilton, N. Y. "ARMY POSTS AND TOWNS" is authorized by the Secretary of War.

The tin-foil contest is still on. The fight seems to be between the third and first grades with the former still in the lead. Frederick Duncan, of the first grade, brought nine pounds to school last week. Good for Fred!

Albro Parsons, of the third grade, is leaving for the Philippines. He has been with us three years and we hate to see him go. We hope he will enjoy his school in the Islands and come back to us some day.

We always claimed Major Parsons as our Medical Officer-when we had a case of mumps or measles he would come over and keep an eye on the other child-

When the transport sails on March twelfth with Chaplain Lennan, Major and Mrs. Parsons and Albro on board, it will take four of our very good friends.

Battalion Volunteers paint the school. The post school house was badly in need of a coat of paint. It needed to be dressed up and made attractive. Due to many activities at the Fort there were no soldiers available for the work, and there was a lack of funds with which to employ labor. It looked like the job must go for the present at least. Finally some one suggested that volunteers be called for, to do the work on their own time. The enlisted men living on the reservation and having children attending school had worked faithfully on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons on their own time, but it remained unfinished. On last Saturday afternoon if one had gone to the school building quite a number of men from the Fifteenth Tank Battalion would have been noticed in-dustrially applying paint brushes and otherwise engaged on the building. They were volunteers who had come forward at the call to work on their own time to make the place nice and attractive for the "kiddies." This voluntary act of men in this Unit is a highly commendable one which is much appreciated by all parties concerned, and it has come to the attention of many high ranking officers of the post. It is quite a coincidence that every company in the a coincidence that every company in the Battalion was represented, and these men who so freely gave their services are: Private Chas. E. GUARDSMEN GRADUATE AFTER FIVE WEEKS INTENSIVE TRAINING

Twelve Different States.

The fifteen National Guard Field officers who came in January for one of the Infantry School's many training courses wrote finis to their work here last Saturday morning at 11 a. m. when their graduation exercises were held. Filled with the Benning ideals for Infantry training and action, they separated and are carrying the doctrines of the Infantry School into twelve different states.

In settling the accounts of the departing officers a novel system was tried out which will prove a boon to all future student officers leaving the garrison. Formerly each officer was required to visit the Officers' Club, post exchange, commissary, etc.; pay his bills and obtain a clearance from each activity. Now accounts are turned in to the Finance Officer and collected by him from the pay of the departing student, saving him much travel, trouble and delay in settling his accounts.

TWENTY-NINTH AND STUDENT POLOISTS WIN SUNDAY GAMES

Eighty-Third Field and Freebooters Defeated on Shannon Field in Mounted Double-Header.

Speed and snap was the order of the day when the 29th Infantry crossed mallets with the 83rd Field Artillery, and the School Students with the Freebooters, on Shannon Field last Sunday afternoon. Displaying flashes of his rapid riding and accurate stick work, Burress materially helped his team establish a commanding lead; Elkins and French were in fine form; and Adams strikingly exemplified his recent rise to first rank rating. In spite of good performances by Uncles spite of good performances by Uncles and Carpenter, the Artillery could not stop the regimental representatives, and the 29th won, 5-0.

Fifteen players got into the saddle when the Students lowered the colors of the Freebooters, 5-3, the former taking an early lead that the big boots could not overcome in spite of remarkable shooting and stroking by Nichols and splendid team play by Nichols and splendid team play by Whisner and Smith. Nichols got loose with one exceptional run, and smashed a knock-in shot right back over the line, but between the posts. It lookline, but between the posts. It looked for a moment that the yellow shirted Freebooters would over haul the green garbed Students in the fifth and sixth periods, but the defensive work of the youngsters was too close, and a long angular placement Student shot refused to be placed and missed each post by inches as it rolled between and re-asserted the Student lead.

MERCER COLLEGIANS OUTLAST INFANTRY AND WIN FAST TILT

Doughboys Get Off to Great Start, but Superior Condition of Macon Boys Tells in Second Period

Same day the Doughboys may win game of basketball from the Mercer Bears, but this much to be desired event will not be celebrated this year. For the second time this season the Macon lads trailed the Blue colors in Macon lads trailed the Blue colors in the dust, this time in the garrison gym last Saturday night. With all pre-cincts heard from the count was 41 for Mercer against 30 for the Infantrymen.

Contrary to their custom the local boys gained an early lead. The first three minutes of the game developed into a beautiful passing duel, with both teams setting a new record for missed shots, easy shots, hard shots, missed shots, easy shots, hard shots, long shots and short shots, were all in vain. Finally Kjelstrom took a neat pass from Buck and broke the ice with a "crip" from under the basket. Encouraged by this the Doughboys piled up four more field goals and took a 10 to 0 lead, before Dunn for the visitors scored their first two points. The rest of the half was fast and furious Kielstrom continuing to shoot rious, Kjelstrom continuing to shoot well, aided by nice passing by Buck and Newman. McQuarrie at center stuck to his opponent like a leech and Berry at guard had an uncanny knack Berry at guard had an uncanny knack of grabbing the ball at critical moments and heaving it out of danger. Smith and Green, Mercer stars, were completely covered, but Dunn scored three more field goals and one from the circle, while Long got in one pretty toss from long range. Intermission score was 22-14, with Benning on the long end.

The first half was slow compared with the second period. Long, Baptist forward, ran wild and caged 7 field goals. Smith came to life with 3 from goals. Smith came to fire with 5 from the floor, Parks copped 2, and A. Haywood, substitute for Dunn, netted one. Kjelstrom carried the burden of the Infantry offense, dropping three through the rim before forced out by form representations. Nowman, secret four personal fouls. Newman scored once from the field. For more than half the period the Doughboys were leading or within a point or two of their rivals, but the terriffic pace told. The Macon boys seemed in better condition and simply ran the Infantry off its feet. Mercer's passing was the finest seen in the gym this year.

FEATURE EVENTS HONORING GOING OF GENERAL WELLS

Staff Dinner, Big Reception, Drag Hunt, and Farewell Assembly Scheduled

When the news reached Headquarters a week ago last Saturday that General Briant H Wells was to be detailed in the important position as Assistant Chief of Staff in Washington, an officer stepped promptly up to Captain Forsythe, who keeps a calendar of coming events, and said:

"Put this down right away. The staff is giving a dinner for the General, the evening of March fourth."

At the same time, the telephone rang, interrupting the conversation, and a voice said:

"There will be a farewell reception to General and Mrs. Wells in the Gymnasium on Friday, March the fifth."

Within a few moments, an officer dashed up on horseback, as wildly as if he were carrying battlefield messages for Wellington, and dusted his way through the door to say:

"The General's the keenest horseman we have. The Polo Club is staging a special drag hunt and hunt breakfast in his honor the Sunday before he goes, Sunday the twenty-eighth."

In came the second highest ranking officer of the school, who walked right through to the Commandant's office and asked:

"General, until you leave, you are actually in command. So I'll have to ask your permission to have the garrison turn out the afternoon you go away. They all want to give you a send off, and I want to help arrange it."

And so the major events were scheduled before General Wells could blink his eyes.

MEMORIAL TABLETS TO BE ESTABLISHED AT CROSS ROADS

Next Tuesday Afternoon Commemorative Exercises Set For Historical Circle

Special representatives of the local chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution met Tuesday noon at the Public Library in Columbus, to arrange for the ceremonials relative to the unveiling and presentation of a bronze tablet commemorative of the visit of La-Fayette to the site of the Fort Benning reservation, which are scheduled to take place on Tuesday next at three o'clock.

Following were those who attended: Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, Mrs. John Blackmar, Mrs. A. N. Murray, and Mrs. Laurens Crowell of the Oglethorpe chapter: Mrs. Wheeler Tolbert, of the George Walton chapter; Mrs. H. C. Huggins and Mrs. Cornelia Dudley of the Button Gwinnet chapter; and officers of the garrison designated by General Wells

In April, 1825, while on his triumphal tour of the United States, LaFayette passed along the old Federal Road thru the site of the Infantry School, then the only surviving general of the Revolution. The beautiful tablet to be erected bears these words:

East and West
Through This Place
Along the Old Federal Road Built in 1811
There Passed in April, 1825
LAFAYETTE Soldier of France and Volunteer in the Cause of American Liberty
"At the first news my heart was enrolled."

This tablet was secured by the joint effects of the Georgia State Daughters of the American Revolution and the Oglethorpe, George Walton, and Button Gwinnett Chapters. Formal permission was secured from the War Department at Washington by General Wells to have this erected on the reservation, and for the ceremonies there will be a great gathering of local patriotic, civic, and educational organizations.

It is the first tablet to be erected in what has been designated as the "Historical Circle" at the fort, which will later commemorate other local events. The stadium builders at the fort have been busily fixing the circle with a new curb and sidewalk.

Other tablets will commemorate the fight between Georgia Militia and Creek Indians in 1836, the only actual armed fighting which has ever taken place on the ground of the reservation; the location of the peace town of the Lower Creeks at "Kasihta" where Block 15 and the General's house now stand and the civic and military record of General (Continued on Page 2.)

UPATOI ENTRANCE HAS NEW HOUSING FOR BRIDGE GUARD

Salvaged Material and Soldier Labor Combined by Quartermaster to Finish House

One of the first things you see on entering Benning has been the unsightly guard shack at the Upatoi Bridge. It was the first which engaged the attention of General Wells, and he has directed consistent attention to it until now, just on the eve of his departure, it will be hauled away and leave in full view a brick and concrete guard room of permanent construction. The building is of brick, slate roof with white stucco gables. The trimming has been made to conform with the color scheme started in Block 14, continued in renovating Headquarters and to be continued in repainting in Block 15. It contains a guard room in front, opening onto a large porch; the guard room opens on one side into a squad room where four bunks can be placed. It opens in the rear into a bathroom which is also connected to the squad room. Coal storage is provided in the rear part of the building which is 20x28' over all. There will be no coal boxes or outbuildings in connection with the guard house.

The guard at Outpost Number One will move into their new home on Monday, March 1, 1926. The final touches to the House at Upatoi Bridge will be added during the current week, the completion being assured by the Quartermaster on February 27th.

ter on February 27th.

The Outpost building was planned in the office of the Quartermaster and has been constructed under his supervision, carried on largely with soldier labor, augmented and supervised by the civilian force of the Quartermaster. Although details from other organizations have been used from time to time, the bulk of the soldier labor has been furnished from the 24th Infantry.

NEW COMMANDANT HAS FINE RECORD IN STAFF AND LINE

Brigadier General Edgar T. Collins Rendered Distinguished Service in the Army

Brigadier-General Edgar T. Collins, selected to succeed General Wells as Commandant of the Infantry School, comes from Fort Hoyle, Maryland, where he has been commanding a Field Artillery Brigade of the First Division, since leaving the General Staff upon his promotion to the grade of brigadier in November, 1924. He was here at Benning taking a Refresher course when he actually was advanced to the grade of general officer.

General Collins was born in Williamsport, Penna., on March 7, 1873, and in 1893 appointed to the Military Academy at West Point from his home state. He was first commissioned in the Infantry in 1897, with which branch he continued, receiving promotion through successive grades until he entered the World War as a Major of Infantry, holding the temporary rank of Colonel in France and becoming a permanent Colonel in 1920.

He had graduated from the Army School of the Line in 1910, as an Honor Graduate; from the Army Staff College in 1911; from the Army War College in 1917. At the commencement of the World War he served as adjutant at the Plattsburg Barracks Officers' Training Camp, where he had previously served under General Wood in one of the first of the Plattsburg civilian camps. He then became Chief of Staff of the 78th Division, observer with the French and British armies, Chief of Staff of the 85th Division, assistant to the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-5, at G. H. Q. of the A. E. F., and Chief of Staff of the Sixth Army Corps.

Returning from overseas, after a tour of duty as instructor at the Army War College, General Collins was assigned to the War Department General Staff, first in the War Plans Division, and then in the Operations and Training Division.

General Collins has received Legion of Honor from France and the Distinguished Service Medal from the United States, with the following citation:

ed Service Medal from the United States, with the following citation:
"For exceptionally meritorious services. As Assistant to G-5, General Headquarters, and later as Chief of Staff of the 6th Army Corps, he demonstrated rare military attainments, performing his difficult tasks with unremitting zeal, and rendering services of conspicuous worth to the American Expeditionary Forcess."

We publish each week full summaries and line-ups of all Intra-mural basketball games.

24TH INFANTRY CONCERT

The concert presented by the Infantry last night was a decided success. The program, lasting almost two hours was both novel and interesting. hours was both novel and interesting. The mass singing by a gigantic male chorus of over 500 voices, brought thunderous applause of appreciation from the audience. The introduction of the Tuskegee Institute Quartet was received with much enthusiasm. This quartet being now internationally famous after its European tour and its various after its European tour and its various appearances before the radio microphone was forced to give several encores to satisfy the delighted audience. The band and orchestral pieces were both splendidly rendered.

The 24th Infantry Glee Club and quartet ventured outside of the usual in choral singing and gave their interpre-tation of several well known selections.

However, it is believed that the mass singing made the deepest impression on the audience. The rendition of the "spiritual" "Steal Away" was superb and thrilled the listeners deeply. After the last notes died away there was a perceptible hush over the spell-bound audience, then a crash of applause that was answered by the repeating of the chorus. It is hardly possible to set down in the modern vernacular, the depth and beauty of 500 male voices divided into the various voice parts singing that old colored "Spiritual!" Those who attended the concert are at a loss themselves to find a fitting simile to adequately express the majesty of tone and control exemplified by that piece. Captain Neff, with baton, drew forth the utmost from his singers. The crash of blended note and soft fading and lingering effects only find comparison in some monster cathedral organ under the master touch of a maes-

It is hoped that the 24th Infantry will consider a return date so that those who were unable to attend may avail themselves of the opportunity.

Modern composers are fast realizing importance these of called spirituals and have termed them as the basic American music. The popularly termed "jazz" has for its origin the colored folk song and plantation melody.

The mass singing as presented by the 24th Infantry covers all the major points of the spiritual which is so well suited to their voices. The peculiar tonal quality of the negro voice is well illustrated in the selections that will be offered. The blending of the various parts into an inspiring musical gem—the soft appealing notes gradually mounting in volume until the auditorium fairly shakes with the colorful music remind one of some gigantic cathedral organ.

The director, like some noted organist played upon their voices and with the wave of his hand called forth his interpretations just as the organist pulls upon his stops and the console. The ease with which the tempo and action ease with which the tempo and action changed was indeed startling. This was particularly notable when the massed regiment hummed the Suwanee River, sweeping through the melody like the tuneful playing of a great stringed orchestra. chestra.

The arrangement of seating the audience was made a matter of careful study so that the location of the singers with relation to the audience might be just right to secure the best results. It has been brought out that the further away from the singers one gets the more perfect the blending of the voices and the tonal quality is at its peak. Reserved seats therefore were in the rear of the theatre instead of the front as is the custom at most performances.

Capt. S. O. Neff who arranged the program and has trained the club and has for several months been the leader of the mass singing is a director of long standing When at the Oklahoma Nor-mal college, Capt. Neff organized and trained a group of singers some thousand strong. His magnetic personality lead this chorus to state wide fame. Later Capt. Neff became a member of the Apollo club and sang with the quartet that represented that society.

The worth of the quartet was at once recognized and an attractive vaudeville offer was accepted and the club went on tour for that season. Capt. Neff has, since his entrance into the army, been prominent in musical circles and has appeared in several local musical comedies. The exceptional quality of C Mess. The exceptional quanty of capt. Neff's voice has won him much distinction while a member of the garrison at Fort Benning. He has also appeared before several of the prominent civic clubs in Columbus.

Capt. Neff has accomplished wonders with the natural voices which have been given him to build up into a body.

The power and attack of the massed voices sent "Follow Me" booming up the sloping seats with a clearness of enunciation never previously equalled in this garrison.

Chorus We're of the Infantry! We're of the Infantry! Doughboys who, in rain or cold, Can advance and then can hold! True to the Infantry! Brave as the Infantry! War or peace, in work or pleasure, Who is there will take our measure? Let's go! Let's go! Let's go! Let's go! Forward! Follow me!

NON COM GUARDSMEN SHOW GOOD PROGRESS IN COMMUNICATIONS

Week Devoted to Study of Telephony in Many Phases and the Operation of Message Centers

Guard Non-commissioned National Officers who are taking the signal com-munication course learned this week that a telephone may be used for many purposes other than getting the wrong number. Under the instruction of Captain McCoy and Lieut. Bolt, graduates of the Vail Signal Corps School, the entire period was devoted to the study of eele phony in its many phases.

Beginning Monday with practical work in the nomenclature and principles of operation, the students spent a strenuous five days with the use of code and phonetic alphabet; the operation of message centers; the transmitting and receiving of messages; the principles of the telephone circuit; and the operation and construction of the induction coil and transmitter. One hour of each day was set aside for code practice.

Tomorrow there will be a test to ascertain just how much the guardsmen have learned. Indications are that the Benning system of instruction is bringing its usual good results and that the non coms will be well qualified to carry away with them a knowledge of communications that will prove of great use in the instruction of guard units.

HOW THE COLLAR GOT ROLLED

When Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War, approved the adoption of the roll collar to replace the stiff, uncomfortable high band on army coats, the ten year battle between the "pro-chokes" and the "anti-chokes" was terminated.

For more than a hundred years the band collar, or choker, has been a tra-ditional fixture around the necks of the national fixture around the fleeks of the many innovations and experiments of the Napoleonic age of military glory, and found its way into armies all over the world.

The choker reached its pinnacle of prominence in the American army in Jackson's time. An order issued then placed the regulation height at not less than three nor more than three and a half inches. In 1812, regulations pre scribed that the collar should "reach the tip of the ear and in front as high as the chin permits in turning the head."

Judging from the pictuers of soldiers of that period it would have been necessary to "about face" to look around, so high was the collar. With the end of the second war with England the choker shrank to normal proportions, but it was not discarded.

Uniforms changed too. flashy colors, red sashes, coats with white facings, and caps shaped like pots sur-mounted by feathers and pompons. In the wars with the Indians a hat like a topper or stovepipe was worn.

Blue was the standard color of the regular forces for many years. This, though visible at a greater distance than any other has made no difference what any other hue, made no difference what-ever in the days of the short range musket, for the soldier was in sight long before he was within range. When Pick-ett made his famous charge at Gettysburg, scarcely a musket was fired until the opposing lines were within two or three hundred yards of each other. The Civil War saw a change in the collars of the Union forces. It was possible then to button the neck hand so that it was the same old choker, or furl it back into a roll. The style was soon abandoned, however, and it was not unabandoned, however, and it was not until this country entered the late war that the roll collar began to be seriously considered by the War Department. The change was considered inadvisable due to the existing national emergency, and it was not until after the termination of hostilities that the question was again brought up. brought up.

Officers of the Air Service found that the choker hampered their movements while flying, and on July 27, 1925, the Secretary of War definitely approved a roll collar for that branch of the Army. The new neck piece was widely acclaimed,

BENNING IN THE MOVIES

Arrangements have been completed to put The Infantry School on the map in the movie world, so that our activities at the garrison will be spread on silver sheets from end to end of the country.

On March 2nd, 3rd, and 4th, a camera On March 2nd, 3rd, and 4th, a camera man from the Grantland Rice Sportlight feature service will be in the garrison taking reels of athletic activities, mass games, competitive contests, track meets, football affrays, baseball clashes, with the Doughboy Stadium, Gowdy Field, and other facilities to form the background

Somewhat later a representative of the Fox film company will be taking an extensive series of shots of all training, experimental, instructional, and athletic activities, to be incorporated into a big picture of "A Day at Fort Benning" showing how we train officers of all three components in the things a dough-boy should know.

and informal inaestigation showed that the great majority of officers of all the components of the military establishment also desired the change.

Accordingly the uniforms of both officers and men will be altered to conform with the new regulations, which will be so worded that the change will be gradual, permitting army men to wear out the present type of uniform.

The Gentle Manner. By How I. Apreshate, New York: Double Cross & Company. 1926.

Here is an excellent little biography showing how any man may rise to great-ness even in that brusque and business like army trade, by means of gentleness and devotion. The story is of the life of a young lieutenant in the military service, not very long out of The Point. and deeply regretting the superiority which Military Academy training gives him over his comrades.

He spent but one month with troops before he realized how much he resembled his company commander, with seventeen years of service, rather than his colleagues commissioned from civil life, without the advantage of four years by the floods and ebbs of the Hudson

Once he lapsed from his gentleness of manner, and told the assembled platoon that he was hard-boiled, he was! that was his only mistake of that fash-ion, except possibly for the occasion when he double-timed his outfit past his (newly) married quarters one morning when the apparent necessity of stirring sluggish circulations gave an opportunity to wave at the wife from the head of a column of men.

His gentleness of manner, and the fine conscientious spirit, as detailed by his biographer, is perhaps on no occasion better exemplified than that when, the company seeming somewhat inexpert be fore the inspecting officer, he conducted a short-arm inspection, or rather an exhibition of how a short-arm inspection should be carried on—and all because the kindly medical officer had made some suggestions as to the inapitude of the soldiers of the unit. It was a splendid demonstration, and one that showed the gentle and innocent manner of the rising young lieutenant who knows how to slide the slides back, with automatic pistol, or otherwise. It illustrated his selfsacrificing spirit, and is a high light in his career.

One of the other high lights spoker of by the biographer in this little book of the lieutenant who aspires to future high command, and seems slated for it. deals with the care with which young officer and gentleman has picked the feminine associates of his prospective bride. Intimates count for much Many a man has been ruined by the friends of his wife, and the acumen displayed by this officer in deciding advance who her friends would be, deciding in ould be, demonstrated not only foresight and vision amounting to clairvoyance, but also a stern determination and rigid sense of discipline of a martial, though not marital, character.

A certain soldier lad recently absented himself without proper leave from his organization and station for a period of three days, in violation of the statutes made and provided, and his company commander, feeling that the provisions of the 104th Article of War could not properly be applied in his case, determined to try the soldier by court-mar-tial. Accordingly, the charge sheets with the necessary accompanying papers were prepared; the case was duly investigated; the offender was hailed before the summary court and given the limitconfinment at hard labor for nine days.

Before the stern demands of justice were fully satisfied and the case finally disposed of, however, behold the mass of papers that were stacked up on the summary court officer's desk: Charges. in triplicate; statements as to previous convictions, in triplicate; statement as to company punishment, in triplicate; statements of two witnesses, each in triplicate; indorsement of the commanding officer, referring the charges for investigation, in duplicate; report of investigation, two pages long, in triplicate —a total of 20 sheets of paper, legal cap size. Thirty-two holograph signatures adorned the imposing sheaf of documents before the case came to trial and when the summary court wound up the record of trial with three flourishes of his pen, he brought the grand total up to 35. If any person doubts the up to 35. If any person doubts the statistics, let him peruse his manual for Courts-Martial.

Quite an army of papers, one would say. Enough, considered by and large, to convict almost anybody of nearly anything. Yet there was nothing in the whole procedure not called for by regulations. One of the very finest things that could happen to the military ser-vice would be the sudden and complete failure of the white paper supply.

Perhaps some day, some true patriot in the person of the Adjutant General, the Chief of Staff, or what not, will arise, cut the Gordian knot and free us from the chains of bond and onion-skin. The fame of that person will go reverb-erating down the corridors of Time; compared with his glories, the exploits of Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon and Washington will pale into utter insignificance. -Army and Navy Journa!

It was moving day in Blocks Fourthe and Fifteen. Long time ago, the Officers' Club took pity on the unsheltered gasoline burners, furnished the funds, and built garages, charging rent from the occupants until the construction was paid for, then turning the structures over to the government.

One by one they went up. One by one they were occupied, by persons adjacent with autos, or by persons more distant when those adjacent traveled on Shank's mare. Payments came in, even when the road building operations prevented use of the galvanized iron roofs and sides.

Tuesday of this week a general reassignment went into effect, garages now being occupied by cars belonging to those in whose yards they stand. But one poor house has no home for its auto, the house of the Executive Officer of the garrison.

"FOLLOW ME"

Here is a suggestion from the Camp Lewis News, which we consider an active and thoughtfully edited service journal of the first rank:

"It is customary in the army when calling upon your fellow officers and their families to leave your cards in their quarters to note the fact that you have called upon them. In this manner a large number of cards accumulate each year, which are usually destroyed. There is a very good custom in vogue in the service of presenting these cards to the Chaplain, who in turn sorts them out and returns them to the persons whose names appear on them. In return for this service the recipients pay to the Chaplain for his Fund one cent per card. The Camp Chaplain will be very glad to do this for the benefit of all concerned if they will send their cards to his office."

Some might not think it worth while to get old calling cards back at a price below what they might have to pay for new. But all would be willing to help the various chaplain's funds along, in this fashion, by giving over the cards that might otherwise go scrap-basketwards, or by paying a cent apiece to the chaplain's fund, in the form of a tribute tax to the support of religious activities in proportion to the amount they engage in worldly and social activities.

When four mentions appear in one week, all correct, we never receive a word of praise from the people concerned, but rather a complaint because one other item was not articled in these columns. Such is the journalistic game, and we are hardened to immunity-unwilling to argue cases and glad to get frank and pertinent criticisms of our policies and conduct.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you," Laugh and you laugh alone-The first is when it's the joke of a friend The last when the joke's your own.

"FOLLOW ME"

This is completion year at the Infantry School. Within approximately the last twelve months, Fort Benning has seen the completion of the brick quarters in Block Fourteen, the erection of the stands at Gowdy Field, the finish of work on the Stadium, the rise of the new Station Hospital, the final laving of the concrete road around Austin Loop, the opening of the War Department Theatre the achievement of a section of the cuartel barracks, the first of its kind in the country. Nor is this all, the narrow gauge railway has been extended on a spur around Davis Hill and across Hemmel Creek to the level of the Upatoi whence almost inexhaustible quantities of sand and gravel may be brought for the pushing of future building.

This is a notable series of achievements, made possible only by Benning energy and the Benning spirit. The vision and executive business sense of the Commandant, the special aid and cooperation of the Quartermaster and his technical force, the energetic labor of troops, the driving energy of the Recreation Center Board and the "Builders," and the way in which, as General Wells has remarked, "all put their shoulders to the wheel and push together"-these are the things which make the Benning spirit and leave tangible evidences of the faith of those who labor here in the future of the Infantry School.

SHOOTING FOOLS IN C. O. CLASS FIRE BRILLIANTLY

Superiority Problem is Featured by Continuous Stream of Well Di-rected Bullets

Tuesday morning of this week, "C" Company of the Company Officers Company of the Company Officers Class broke all existing records for the performance of the fire superiority problem In this test a rifle section has its target designated to it in battlefield manner and begins firing. the number of shots per minute making hits reaches a certain figure, the red flag is lowered and the section may advance by bounds, alternate squads covering the target while other squads leap forward, hit the dirt and take up the shooting again.

From the first disappearance of the red flag, it never came up again. The "C" Company students kept up their went fire and kept it accurate, and right on towards the enemy. Surprise targets, hidden targets, changes of fire direction, reduction of rifles on the line —these meant nothing to the shooting ability of the company officers, who finished the "run" in the fastest time ever made and kept the enemy heads down from the first moment of the action.

A selected rifle section from each of the companies of the Company Officers' Class competed in the problem. Co, "B's" section was led by Captain Fry, with Captains Hawkenson, Garrison and Forney as squad leaders Co. "C's" section was under command of Captain Woolfley with Captains McChrystal, Poage and Parks leading the squads.

Captain Woolfley's section advanced practically all the way to the targets, never being held up by the red flag that prohibits the advance of any fraction of the section, and gaining more ground than any section has been able to win in the past four years Co. "B's" section was a close second, but was finally held up through the exhaustion of its armunition

BENNING HUNTERS WINDING UP RIDES WITH BIG FIELDS

Spring Weather Brings Out Larg Crowds Ever—Special Hunt for General Next Sunday Out Largest

In larger number than ever before this season, the riders of the garrison turned out last Sunday morning to enjoy the fine spring weather, and followed the hounds on an enjoyable drag hunt. It was announced that a special farewell hunt would be staged next Sunday morning to honor General Wells leave Fort Benning during the week that follows.

Under perfect conditions of weather and ground, with the early sun lightly tempering the chill morning air, the field started promptly at the usual hour of eight o'clock after the customary draft of coffee. Heavy going under foot for some weeks has kept the hounds in the kennels, and Sunday morning they were keen on the scent. The first cast was made at eight-ten carrying the riders over an eight mile course, with four over an eight mile course,

After the hunt the mounted hunters returned to the Polo Club where Captain Huber, Assistant Hunt Director, se an exceptionally enjoyable breakfast, with everyone in a receptive mood. Unexpectedly General Wells took the floor and called attention to the fact that Captain A. S. Harrison, recent Assistant Hunt Director, was leaving for another station. General Wells pointed out that these hunts do not just happen, and that Captain Harrison has devoted great energy and much time to the proper training of the dogs and to making a vast number of preliminary arrangements for the enjoyable events these hunts have been. The assembled ladies and gentlemen gave Captain Harrison a rising vote of thanks and gratitude.

GARDENING NOTES

From now on, the Infantry School News will print weekly notes on gardening, when to plant roses, how to fix the vines, and so on, prepared by the garrison gardener specially for this paper.

"Home Beautification Through Land scape and Flower Plantings."
By Jack B. Ross
Post Gardener

Wherever there is soil, plants grow and produce their kind, and all plants are interesting, especially flowers. When a person makes a choice of what plants he shall grow and in what place he will grow them, he then becomes a gardener.

Every family therefore, may have a gar den. Even though the space to be plant ed is small, it may be made a thing of beauty. The satisfaction of a garden does not depend on the area, nor on the cost or rarity of the plants, but on the taste of the person. One must first learn to love plants and nature, and then to cultivate the happy peace of mind that is satisfied with little.

In a vast majority of cases a person will be happier if he has no rigid or arbitrary notions, for gardens and gardeners are moodish, particularly with the novice. If plants grow and thrive, then he should be happy, but if they do not grow or thrive then he has learned a lesson from the book of experience, and will have better luck the next time. The joy of gardening lies in the mental atti-tude and in the sentiments.

One can not expect satisfaction in the planting and developing of an area unless he has a clear conception of what is to be done. This necessarily follows, since the pleasures that one derives from any enterprise, depend chiefly, on the definiteness of his ideals and ability to develop them. One cannot make a plan of an area, unless he knows what he wants to do with it.

The greatest defect with our flower growing is our stinginess with it. What I want to say is, that we should grow flowers freely. When we make a flower garden, we should have enough flowers to make the effort worth while, and the easiest way to spoil a good lawn is to place a flower bed in it, and the most effective way to show off flowers to the least advantage is to place the bed in the greensward. Flowers need a background. If flowers are to be grown in the lawn, let them be of the hardy perennial kind which can be naturalized in the sod, and which grow freely and to advantage in the grass, or flowers of such a nature that they will make attractive clumps of themselves. Lawns should be free and generous and the more they to get materiare cut up, the meaner they look. If intricate jobs.

you intend to have a flower garden, then make it worthy of the name.

There is no prescribed rule as to what you may place in an informal flower bed Rather place in them the or border. things you like. If you please yourself with it, it is sure to please others be-cause it is different. The greater part of a flower bed, perhaps, should consist of perennials as they come up of themselves every spring and are hardy and reliable. Wild flowers are particularly effective and allow for sowing with them the more well known, easy growing annuals, such as, marigolds, China asters, petunias, phlox, sweet peas, etc. The following are some of the things a person should know about flowers

(1) When the plant matures and when it naturally begins to fail.

(2) The time of the year in which it normally grows and blooms, and whether or not the plant can be forced in any other season

(3) Whether it prefers a situation dry or moist or wet, hot or cool, sunny or shady.

(4) Its preference as to soil, whether very rich, moderately rich, sand or loam.

(5) Its hardiness as to drouth, frost, wind or heat. (6) Whether it has any special requirements as to germination, whether or not it transplants well.

(7) Whether it is especially liable to attacked by insects or diseases.

(8) Whether it has any special inability to grow two years in the same flowering position and ground, without thinning, transplanting, etc.

Prepare the surface earth well to make a good seed bed. Plant when the ground is maintain in the ground are grown to the ground the gr is moist if possible, and preferably just before a rain when all danger from frost and extreme cold weather is over, and in soil that will not bake. Care must be taken to avoid the sowing of slow germination seed too deep, and to water them very carefully so as to prevent washing them out of the soil. The depth to which seed are to be planted varies, with the kind, the soil, and the preparation. A good rule to follow is to sow the seed four times as deep in the soil as the seed are large. Sow fairly thick to allow for thinning out the less hardy plants.

The following are some of the flower seed that may be sown now: Gladiolus, sweet peas, mignonette, pansies and phlox. Care must be taken to prevent he chilling of the seed in the cold soil If the person planting the seed thinks that the soil is too cold, the planting should be put off until a later date. Test the soil by digging up a bit of it and holding it in your hand. If it is very cool, do not sow your seed. Chilled seed are of very slow germination and not of good flowering strain.

PULLING TOGETHER

Down in the Quartermaster's Office are a number of gentlemen not in the military service, called civilian employees, meither rendering nor rating salutes. But they have that "everlasting team-work of every bloomin' soul" that makes for success in all operations, business or military.

One of their number gets in financial difficulties, and the rest of their own volition subscribe funds sufficient keep his children in school until they graduate from the seventh grade this summer, instead of being taken out and made to lose a year.

One of their number had a family bereavement and another was thinking of taking up a slight collection for a mourning floral tribute, but before he could circulate the idea, the group came of their own accord and contributed nearly three times the amount he had thought of trying to raise.

This is the spirit of the office which renders service for the line, helps the Commandant put over his building projects, and the Recreation Center Board to get materials and expert labor for

According to a rumor received from the cook of a headquarters company who secured his information from the top soak of a machine gun battalion, an army is an organization maintained to pre-serve peace as long as possible and completely ruin it when necessary. composed of large groups of men bounded together with two common purposesto stand inspection and curse the bugler. It represents a nation, and is directed from a general headquarters, but its maximum respects are paid to its ser-geants. The chief features of any army are the setting up exercise before mess and the setting up exercise after pay dav.

Branches of Army life are numerous and interesting. Much can be said in favor of all of them. But all have one Much can be said in drawback—they start with reveille. Nothing in the Army excites quite so much suspicion and adverse comment as a reveille. It comes as a shock to every enlisted man the first day after he has signed up and he never quite recovers from the nauseating impression. If reveille could be moved up a few hours or eliminated entirely the Army would enjoy a much better patronage. Fatigue duty, K. P., and other departments of military duty are dubious enough, but reveille is the toughest. It will probably never shake off the stigma that has branded it since the day of the first

According to the top soak of the machine gun battalion, it is quite probable that the fashion of maintaining armies will be continued for several years. The idea has been in vogue for quite a few centuries and appears to have merit. Just at present the need of an army is not pressing, but the top soak figures that one can never tell what the future hath in store at reduced prices. He advises all civilians to keep up the study of guard mount, policing company streets, peeling onions, masticating beans and other important features of military duties as the need of a trained armed force might arise any time. asserts, however, that no hopes should be entertained for a change in the present system of holding reveille ceremony in the morning. And that, to date, the general staff has not recommended the hiring of hare-lipped buglers.—Camp Lewis News

A young officer recently assigned to the regiment had been assigned several different jobs, all of them in addition to his other duties, and finally one day an order came from headquarters assigning him as Post Exchange Officer in addition to his other duties. He immediately ent to headquarters and requested permission to see the Colonel.

Stepping into the Colonel's office and saluting smartly, the young officer said: "Sir, I have a request to make." "What is it?" asked the kindly old man. "When I die I hope to have the Colonel will have printed on my tombstone. "Died, in ad dition to his other duties." The young Lieutenant was relieved of all duties and is now driving a milk wagon,

UNITED SERVICES INCREASES DIVIDENDS

The January meeting of the Board of Directors of the United Services Automobile Association, after consider-ing the results of operations for 1925, directed a substantial increase in the dividend payable to members. The new dividend rate will vary from month to month, as well as with the month to month, as wen as with the forms of protection carried. Most members carry Public Liability, Property Damage, and Fire and Theft. The dividends on these will average, under the new schedule 25 per cent. of premium paid.

The report of operations for 1925 shows the following items: 2496 Claims paid for total of $52, 148.39.

Direct cash saving to members (dividend checks issued plus premium discounts) $46,874.23.

These savings are in addition to a surplus to the Policy-Holders, the joint property of the members of $50,393.52.

Catastrophe losses are completely guarded against by reinsurance treaties covering Public Liability, Fire and Transportation.

John Girauso, a recent addition to the company from the band of Caruso. Girauso gets up before daybreak every morning to exercise his vocal cords and when he reaches high "C" everyone knows that it's time to get up.

But daily rehearsal is necessary for Giaruso. As it happens he is a singer of note. He has sung in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and New Orleans. His rich baritone has been heard in Italy, France, England and in this country. And now the musically inclined in Columbus will have an opportunity to hear him.

Born in Genoa, Italy, 18 years ago, Girauso first showed his musical ability while yet a ihild. At the age of 8 he sang as a soprano in churches and concerts in Genoa. The best professors were his teachers.

In 1922 he toured France and Eng land singing with several opera companies and at musicales. He came to this country and joined the Metropolitan Opera Co., singing with among others, Titto Ruffo, the great baritone. The following year found him with the Chicago Opera Co. At the close of the season he went to New Orleans to study voice culture with Professor De Fonteyues. He was then often found on broadcasting pro-

Last November, having been left an orphan and without friends, Garuso enlisted for the 29th Infantry and has been at Fort Benning ever since. He expects to continue his studies with Prof. Gaskell of the Chase Conserva tory of Music in Columbus.

THE FUTURE OF THE ADVANCED CLASS

Serious consideration is now being given to the question as to what is to be done with the Advanced Course at the Infantry School. Time was, when these classes consisted almost exclusively of colonels and lieutenant colonels, with a smattering of majors Now high-ranking captains may take that course. The fact is that few field officers are now available for detail for that work.

In the Infantry there are 322 field officers who have completed that course. There are 501 field officers who have not completed a Benning course including the 57 who will graduate in June. Of this number 445 are ineligible for the instruction, because they are over 50 years of age or be cause they are graduates of Leavenworth. That leaves only 75 Infantry Leaven field officers available for future sessions of the advanced course, 3 colonels, 7 lieutenant colonels, and 65 majors.

EXAMINATIONS FOR COMMISSIONS

It is estimated that there will be about 150 vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant in the Regular Army after this year's class of West Pointers is commissioned. To fill these vacancies, examinations will be held in various parts of the United States, in Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, Panama and the American Forces in China. Successful applicants will be commissioned in the Infantry, Cavalry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, Air Service, Corps of Engineers and Signal Corps. Information neers and Signal Corps. Information relative to the scope of the examination may be obtained at any military post or station, or directly from the Adjutant General's office, War Department, General's office, Washington, D. CARPENTRY FOR THE KIDS

Youngsters of the garrison will soon be able to help their fathers repair the temporary wooden houses now usd for quarters. Those of the fifth, sixeh and seventh grades are starting today to take afternoon work in carpentry under the able supervision of Sergeant Russell V. Wall, I. S. D., skilled craftsman of the I. S. D., the signs of whose work appear in and about the Department of Experiment, all around the Wilcox Range, and in many a parlor on the reservation. Fundamentals of tool handling and care start the course, which will proceed through to more complicated capacity and cabinet work.

GUARD CO. OFFICERS ARRIVING TO TAKE BENNING TRAINING

Infantry School Course to Begin Next Monday, with 60 National Guard Officers Enrolled

Streaming into the garrison there are now arriving about sixty national guardsmen and reservists of the civilian components of the army, to take the annual three months course.

Ever since the Infantry School was founded, the instruction in doughboy tactics and technique has been given to Reserve Officers and National Guard Officers from all states, as well as to the Officers from all states, as now appersonnel of the regular army. The courses are shorter, covering three months instead of the eight months given to the members of the regular eseight months tablishment. But nothing is slighted, and the work is just as strenuous.

Officers taking these courses specialize in some one weapon, and in addition to certain basic and general subjects, elect to do the major part of their work in Machine guns, or Howitzers, or Rifles, though they all have the same course in tactics, drill and command and in organization, and in those problems peculiar to the civilian components.

The housing problem is a rather serious one. Crowded at best, with most of even the regular student officers being required to find accommodations in the city of Columbus, the Fort is unable to offer shelter to all of the three months guests from the guard and reserves. Some of them are bachelors, or will come here in that status. Some will bring their families. But even for the bach-elors, there are not sufficient quarters available, and it has been requested that Columbus pople assist in providing rooming facilities for both bachelor and married officers of these classes.

RED CROSS CONTRIBUTIONS REACH HIGHEST TOTAL EVER

When the final returns were compiled regarding the results of the Red Cross campaign recently brought to a close, it was found that the total subscribed by the personnel of this garrison was the highest on record. When the money was transmitted to the Columbus Chapter, in co-operation with which the local garristarted the drive, to cover the reservation as the downtown folk covered the city, the chairman wrote to Colonel Walling in charge of the campaign at the fort, as follows:

Columbus. Ga. January 14, 1926.

DEPOSITS

What does a soldier do with his money? A question often asked, but which few seem to be able to answer, the soldiers themselves least of all. But the Chief of Finance, in his annual report, just received at Ninth Corps Area at the Presidio, has accounted for something over a million and a half dollars during the past year. Figures released by his office show that during the year 26,942 enlisted men deposited 1,384,686.69 with the Government, which will be held on deposit until their discharge, and interest paid at the rate of three per cent. compounded semi-annually.

During the year of 1925 22,319 soldiers, upon separation from the service withdrew their deposits, amounting to $1,320,743.73, plus interest paid which amounted to the tidy sum of $32,484.34. At the end of the year there still remained on deposit to the credit of the enlisted men $2,282,433.86 the number of depositors being 11,575, or approximately one in every ten in the service. The average amount to the credit of these men is $197.19.

Deposits may be made with any Finance Officer at any time in sums of five dollars and multiples thereof, and the War Department encourages soldiers to take advantage of this opportunity for their benefit.

ELECTRICAL WIRING IN THE GARRISON

Due to the inflammable character of the majority of the quarters at this station, stringent regulations and strict compliance therewith must be maintained with regard to electrical installations and wiring.

School headquarters has recently issued rules which state that no changes, installations, alterations, additions, or repairs will be made to the electrical system, interior wiring, or electrical fixtures without prior official approval electrical Fuses and fuse boxes must be respected, and handled by authorized personnel.

The somewhat peppery retired Army officer was playing his dogged best for the club's Summer Medal, but at one hole he was kept waiting for a few minutes by a woman who sauntered carelessly down the fairway, crooning to her baby.

83rd Field Artillery

An interesting experiment in fire adjustment by airplane has been carried out by the artillery. Battery "A", 83rd Field Artillery, firing shell from emplacements near the water tanks on Ebbert Hill had its fire directed on several objectives by an observer flying over the target areas. Communication between plane and the battery was carried out by use of the radio telephone. In the morning the shots were spotted with referenle to the target by an air service officer and appropriate commands to the battery were then determined by the battery commander. In the afternoon, artillery officers were sent up as observers and sent commands based on their observations direct to the battery. Using this method a more rapid adjustment was obtained. It is thought that in time of war, an artillery officer adjusting his battery from the air will be the normal procedure when ground observation is difficult and weather is such that observation from the air is practicable.

The little fellow with the big feet, Pvt. Goldfish, has composed a new song entitled "Oh little track wrench, where art thou?"

It has come about that the spirit of football, in the olden days, was great deal different than at the present time. A couple of "Old Timers" were heard discussing a football game which was played in The Islands with the University of Havana. It appears that they had a player who was a great ball carrier. They wanted that man out of the game. So, one of our, at the present time, most highly esteemed Staff-Sergeants, was sent in to see what could be done. The first play after he went in, the great backfield man was taken out of the game. Which reflected a great deal of merit on the playing ability of said soldier, until it became known that the cause of the removal was hydrophobia, same being caused from a severe bite on the right leg given by the above mentioned soldier. In the old days anything was fair, but is that what they called "Football." Ain't it grand to be a re Ain't it grand to be a recruit?

A BASHFUL RECRUIT'S FIRST DANCE

Not having partaken of the feminine charms for some time it was with fond hopes and great expectations that I entered the portals of Service Club No. 1 last Thursday. The bright lights re-minded me of the dance emporiums of Philadelphia. Many of my brothers-in-arms, were already there, also looking for pleasant diversian. Here's where I shine, says I.

A persual of the dumber was first in order. The inventory brought forth the daintiness of the girl in brown, the curves, more or less graceful, of the one in Scottish plaid, the beauty of the one called Mary. With great expectations and following the directions as laid down in the Book of Etiquette I waylaid the nearest bit of femininity. She turned me down flatter than our cook's hot cakes. I pleaded with the one in light green and was rewarded with a snub. Iren's face had "no" on it even before I got within the prescribed thirty paces of her. Twas not mine to reason why, I was getting rather discouraged and somewhat disappointed. The hospitality of the glorious South had been preached to me since the first time I fell out of the cradle and I was not finding it so.
The committee announced that the next dance would be a Ladies' choice. "Here," says I, "is where I shine." Now we would get a chance to show these natives dancing as she is twirled in God's within asking distance. Mary glanced at me (or perhaps she merely happened to be looking at the space which occupying at the time), but that's all she did. By the time the dance was she did. over I decided that for the rest of the evening I would be as a bench warmer. I slumped down in my chair in utter dejection. I could see John, the mess Sergt. stumbling across the floor. Two girls were doing calisthenics, I mean the Charleston. Even the pillrollers were circumnavigating the floor and I was only a part of the landscape. Dance after dance came and went and my position as a wallflower was unchanged.

At midnight it was decided to call it a day so I wended my weary way back to what we call home. The flag will fly at half mast in honor of the one who ever suggests to me that I go to another

THE OUTER MAN

It has been considered desirable to permit civilian tailors and representatives of equipment firms to display their goods at various times in the garrison (generally at the Officers' Club). It is contemplated that some time the garrison will have its own tailors in the Officers' Club and the Post Exchange who will be able to make superior uniforms in every way. Until that time civilian tailors and equipment firms are allowed to come here in order to give all officers an opportunity to make the best selection of uniforms and equipment.

The Commandant finds it impossible to admit some of these firms and exclude others. The uniforms and equipment displayed by these firms for sale vary from extremely high class and suitable wares to the very cheapest and shoddy. While the Commandant does prevent the sale of non-regulation and off color uniforms he can not inspect all the de-tails of the uniforms and equipment displayed. The fact that outside and equipment firms are authorized to display their goods is not to be con-sidered as a recommendation that their goods are high class and should be pur-It is expected that officers will use good judgment in making their pur-chases. DOUGHBOYS FAIL TO WIN IN TWO STARTS ON LAST ROAD TRIP

Jewish Progressives and Chattanooga Railites Defeat Blues by Com-fortable Margins

Change of scenery does not agree with the Infantry basketball team. Another jaunt into hostile territory brought two more defeats last week. Thursday night at Atlanta the Jewish Progressive Thursday Club, boasting one of the most powerful quintets in the south trimmed the Blue, collecting 35. The boys from Benning led by two points at half time and held their own through the first ten minutes of the second period. McQuarrie was forced out by four personal fouls and a few seconds later Kjelstrom went to the side lines for the same reason. Lack of reserve material of the same caliber as reserve material of the same caliber as the regulars proved fatal, as the J. P. C. led by Joe Finkelstein went wild and began netting the ball from every angle. Buck and Kjelstrom were Benning's leading scorers, the former tallying 13 points and Kelly making 12. McQuarrie played a strong defensive game. Finkelstein scored half his teams total.

Chattanooga Railites, Tennessee state champions, handed out the second defeat Saturday night, 45-23. The Noogans outclassed and outplayed the Doughboys all the way. Redd, former Chatta-nooga University star, led the attack with 21 points, and played the floor in with 21 points, and played the floor in fine style. Cate shone on defense. For the Infantry Newman guarded his men closely. Kjelstrom with 10 points was the big gun of the Blue attack. McQuarrie, until he went out in the second half on fouls played well. Full details:

Tomorrow night marks the close of the basketball season for the Infantry five, that aggregation which commenced its season with a lap-over with the intra-mural football series, and has been marked by two unusual features.

Several of the Basketball games have several of the Basketball games have been rendered notable by the one-goal margins of victory scored over visiting fives. In many of the other games, the visitors have been the first to score, and throw a scare into the Benning fans, until the old Buck-Kjelstrom combination in the forward line got into action and started the scoring machine in the true Infantry spirit. In the last games, however, the one against Mercer on the local court, and the one against the famous Jewish Progressive Club in Atlanta. the doughboys were actually leading at half-time, and fell victims to whirlwind finishes, by their opponent.

Albany has faced the Infantry once already this season, on the Albany court, with the decision against the Big Blue team to the score of 49-31. The court conditions in the Albany home town were such as to appear to militate against the visitors, that being one of the famous "cracker-box" courts of the South which our friend Bill Ellison likes to take as a subject of his diatribes.

Atlanta Athletic Club and Birming-ham Athletic Club have both conquered the doughboys. The former defeated Albany, but Albany defeated Birming-ham—rated by far the strongest of the three—in a game which was one of the upsets of the South.

On their home court, the soldierofficer combination is resolved to take revenge for the former defeat at the hands of the Albany quint, which, it must needs be stated, has won eleven out of nineteen games this season, and has selected opponents of the very finest

Near the bridge a bat-tery from the 83rd Field Artillery will be in readiness to render the salute prescribed for the occasion.

SOLDIER OUT-RACES HIS OWN ENGINE TO SAVE A BABY'S LIFE

Pvt. Joseph H. Wiggins, Q. M. C. Sprints Ahead Train He Was Unable to Stop

While doughboys of the 29th Infantry were practicing sprints in preparation for a regimental track meet on Wednesday, March the third, another member of the Fort Benning command showed fleetness of foot, outdistancing his own railroad engine to save the life of an eighteen months old baby.

Official commendation has just been published by Brigadier-General Briant H. Wells, Commandant of the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., calling attention to an act of heroism obscurely performed by Private Joseph H. Wiggins of the Quartermaster Corps at that station. There were no cheering crowds to witness his brilliant running, only two witnesses; but the feat performed by witnesses; but the feat performed by Private Wiggins is now on every mouth. About nine o'clock on the morning of February 19th, the eighteen months old baby of Sergeant Frank Lavender, Co. "H," 29th Infantry, crawled out of his large through a hole in the screen door home through a hole in the screen door and was attempting to cross the tracks of the narrow gauge railway used at Fort Benning to convey student officers to distant maneuver areas of the reservation. Downhill along the rails came an engine and three cars, of the type used by the A. E. F. in the trench areas of France.

Private Wiggins was at the throttle. Private Wiggins was at the throttle. He jammed on the brakes, but the slope of the down grade was too great. It was apparent that the train would not stop before it hit the child. So, without thought of his personal safey, Wiggins leapt from his cab, sped along the rails, cutdistanced his own engine and spatch. outdistanced his own engine, and snatchoutdistanced his own engine, and snatched the child free from the track just a fraction of an instant before the grinding wheels rolled over the spot where the baby had been lying, so small and so weak as to be unable to save itself.

Sergeant Lavender from saw the act of heroism, and started to find out who Wiggins was. But the engineer clambered back in his cab, and later when the Quartermaster spoke to him about it, Wiggins remarked: "I him about it, Wiggins remarked: "I didn't have time to answer any dee fool local garrison, bettering relations be-tween town and fort, and fostering all civic enterprises of the electrical city. didn't have time to answer any dee fool questions. I had to get that load of sand and gravel out where I was going."

Plans for New Building at Benning Are Inspected During Whirlwind Visit

Off the train in Columbus stepped a man in uniform. He asked for the bus stand. He walked to Tenth and Broad, and inquired for the bus to the Fort. As the big Howard carryall stopped at the new bridge guard room, the sentry on duty opened his eves wide.

Captain Forsythe was busy at his desk near the entrance door to head-quarters. He noticed an officer come in and stand; but did not look up because the papers in hand had to be signed immediately. Then a casual glance as he reached for a pencil, revealed two stars on the khaki sleeve in front of him. Two leather soles hit the floor like a flash. Major General Charles McK. Saltzman, Chief Signal Officer of the Army, visited Fort Benning very informally Wednesday afternoon, stopping off for a short time between trains to ride out to the Infantry School and have a consultation with General General Wells

He consulted with officials at the garrison on general problems connected with moving and still pictures, and with telephone and radio installations. For many years valuable telephone equipment and the telephone central (Continued on Page 2.)

GENERAL COLLINS TO REACH FORT BENNING ON TUESDAY EVENING

General Wells' Successor Coming From Fort Hoyle to Assume Command on Wednesday Morning

Following closely upon the departure of General Wells for his new station in Washington where he will be on duty with the General Staff, Brigadier General Edgar T. Collins, recently detailed as Commandant of the Infantry School will arrive to assume his new duties. General Collins will reach Columbus at 8:45 p. m., Tuesday, coming from Fort Hoyle, Maryland, where he has been in command of a field artillery brigade, following a tour of duty on the General Staff in Washington.

Colonel Cocheu, Assistant Commandant and Colonel Eaton will meet the new Commandant upon his arrival in Columbus and escort him to the quarters of Colonel Cocheu, where General Collins will be a guest until the Commandant's quarters are ready for his occupancy.

The official salute and welcome for the arriving General will take place at 9 a. m., Wednesday, a Battery from the 83rd Field Artillery firing the prescribed

I lost it."

It was up at Raritan Arsenal, where Magoni had gone for special technical instruction, and a stokes bomb went thru the air taking with it an entire finger, but the stocky soldier kept right on just as if he had only cut his hand a bit.

He came here from Hancock when the Infantry School was first established, and has been smoking his long pipe and talking about bananas ever since, one of the finest weapons instructors in the academic department. Never a baseball game has been played, or any other athletic contest for that matter, but Jazz Magoni has been there rooting for the I. S. D., the man with a line repartee, a voice like Caruso, and the stuff that makes a regular morale booster. He doesn't care a rap whether Gowdy Field will hav a roof to keep the sun off the stands, for he is always on the coaching line, pepping it up, and living up to his reputation as the Nick Altrock of the I. S. D.

His military record reads like a list of non-commissioned grades in the Army: Discharged as corporal, character, "excellent"; discharged as sergeant, character, "excellent"; discharged as staff sergeant, character "excellent"; and now master sergeant and jazz king of the garrison. Sport fans know his interest in athletics. Student officers know his knowledge of machine guns and his willingness to help them out. Few know that he comes from West Springfield, Massachusetts, up on the right bank of the Connecticut River; but everyone knows we would rather have him here.

have been housed in a wooden building, subject to complete destruction in case of a fire. It has been planned, as a part of the general building program of the fort, to erect a modern telephone exchange building which would also contain adequate quarters for the signal corps personnel. It is now hoped that when Benning receives its share of the current appropriations for the erection of army buildings out of the proceeds of the sale of old military reservations, it will be possible to erect this structure. General Saltzman went over the plan in detail with Lieutenant Green, Signal Officer, and also studied the telephone installations and system of the garrison before catching his train for Atlanta.

NEW SHOULDER RIFLES UNDERGOING TESTING AT THE INFANTRY SCHOOL

Self-Loading Weapons Being Tested to Determine Military Value

The Infantry Board has for several months been conducting extensive tests of two types of self-loading shoulder rifles. While for many years there have been repeating sporting rifles sold commercially, none of these has been satisfactory as a military weapon. The requirements for safety, ruggedness, and positive action which are essential to a military arm have not so far been satisfactorily met in commercial types.

In order that these essentials be assured it has been necessary to materially increase the weight of the piece.

The types now being studied by the Board represent some of the latest features in development of this style of Both types are designed to fire the service ammunition and weigh somewhat more than the Model 1903 rifle, but less than the Browning automatic rifle.

The question of arming the infantry

The question of arming the infantry soldier with a self-loading rifle is one which has arisen from time to time over a long period. Within the past few years, since the war, considerable progress has been made along the lines of developing a suitable type, so that the question may now be studied with more nearly definite data at hand.

Whether it is desirable to replace the present automatic rifle with one of the self-loading type, whether all riflemen will carry a self-loading weapon, or proportion of magazine rifles will remain and whether the adoption of a self-loading rifle will too seriously affect ammunition supply, are some of the questions attending the general problem of the adoption of a new weapon. A satisfactory study of the question requires considerable thought, long tests and careful weighing of advantages against disadvantages.

It is expected that much light will be shed on this interesting and important subject during the tests now in progress and that as further development of the self-loading rifle proceeds it will become clearer just which features are to govern in the final discussion

(Some idea of the rigidity of these tests may be gained from an attempt to discover the sturdiness of the operating mechanism. One of the auto-loading rifles was fired from a machine rest in bursts until the barrel was worn beyond any reasonable accuracy. For over an hour, the firing continued. The weapon got so hot that the wooden stock sizzled, and smoldered, and burned completely away until not a bit of the stock was left. And the loading and firing mechanism still functioned regularly in spite of the intense heat—Editor).

Owing to the decorating of the gymnasium for the final reception for General Wells tonight, there have been no intramural basketball games this week. The schedule will be resumed Monday night and continued on to the finish, which will be one week later than here-tofore announced.

With about one third of the schedule completed the race for the garrison championship is beginning to take form. Last year's pennant winners, the 2nd Battalion five, are now the only undefeated outfit, and present dope favors them to repeat. The rifle toters from Major Bowen's battalion lost three of last year's stars and prophets had them down for a low finish this year. These Doughboys have a spirit of fight and cooperation, however, that is hard to beat Few teams could lose such men as Kjelstrom, Hendricks and Franz, without fatal consequences, but the Daniel, McCallister-Davis-Ellis-Felber combination looks to be the class of the league and should win.

Engineers, I. S. D., Special Units and Medical Detachment have met with one defeat each. Engineers beat the I. S. D. but lost to Special Units, who were defeated by the Medical Detachment The Medicos dropped their game with the 2nd Battalion after holding the Doughboys to a 7-3 count in the first half. Of these teams the I. S. D. appears the most formidable The Detachment boys are heavy and fast and need only more team play to threaten the 2nd Battalion's supremacy. In Wigley and Danielski the Engineer have a great forward pair, and will prove hard to beat. Medicos boast of some good shots, but their play, particularly on defense seems somewhat loose. Special Units were lucky to beat the Engineers.

The rest of the teams have not shown formidable scoring ability. All of them play with the spirit and determination of heroes, but so far in the season they have been weak.

All this, however, is merely "dope." Should results prove it entirely wrong, this would not be the first time a sports prophet went astray. Remember that Goliath was doped to beat David.

"ARMY POSTS AND TOWNS" will be off the press this Summer. The pre-publication price of $2.00, recently offered by Captain Sullivan, is withdrawn, effective April 15th. Practically all of the data are now ready, gathered directly from post Adjutants and Quartermasters, and covering the subjects: Quarters, (kind and number), stoves, heat, transportation, schools, the post town, hospital facilities, private cars, servants, commutation conditions, churches, markets, hotels, roads, mounts, golf, hunting, fishing, climate, clothes, and a history of every post, station, camp, hospital and depot in the Army.

Because of the delay in publication, Captain Sullivan will, until the book is delivered, send free to any subscriber the data on any post desired. This offer is made especially for the benefit of subscribers at the Service Schools who want to know about the post to which they are assigned. The subscription price until April 15th remains at the promised price of $2.00; thereafter it will be $3.50 per copy. For information, sample proof sheets or to subscribe, write Captain Chas. J. Sullivan. Fort Hamilton, N. Y. "ARMY POSTS AND TOWNS" is authorized by the Secretary of War.

The old Army is passing. The gruff, hard-boiled, middle-aged non-commishard-boiled, middle-aged non-commissioned officers are given way to younger men, "gentlemen rankers," as Kipling would call them. Today, say Army authorities here, the military establishment abounds with youngsters holding the highest enlisted grades up to and including the the desired and including the state of the cluding that of master sergeant, the very highest.

Before the World War the sergeants and first sergeants usually were timers" who had to their credit at least ten years of service; service in Cuba, Panama, Alaska, China and the Philippines. The war took an enormous toll of these men, and hundreds more re-tired. Few of the hardy soldiers who fought in the Spanish-American War against Aguinaldo in Luzon are left The Army today is composed primarily of young men.

This is accounted for by the rapid turnover. The present day soldier is not a professional military man. He enters service just as one would enter a college, and for much the same reason.

The schools of Uncle Sam's Army are among the finest in the country. Practically every line of human endeavor is taught, from the raising of horses to medical and radio science, engineering, cooking and the many mechanical trades. Each year thousands of young men who have completed courses offered to its personnel by the Army, purchase their discharge for a nominal sum and return to civil life. Nearly all of their applications are based on the offer of more lucrative positions by commercial concerns, and it is a cardinal principle of the Army that it shall not stand in the way, in peace time, of an enlisted man who has the opportunity to better his position in life.

is for this reason that the old Army is passing. Promotion is rapid and it is common to find a "top-kick" or a staff sergeant in his first enlistment, and under twenty-five years of age. The military service loses many of its technically trained men before their enlistments expire, but the commercial world gains and thereby the Army increases its prestige as an educator and builder of men—G-2, 9th C. THE DISCIPLINED SOLDIER

You can always tell the disciplined soldier from the recruit. Look at the next one you see. You will see first that he is neat; that he carries his head up, and looks the world in the eye. He is confident. Usually he is cheerful. He is good and he knows it; and if you look him over carefully, you will know it, too. He is the kind of man one can depend upon in a fight. He is worth three or four men who are disciplined by fear. If you know him well you will also find out that he is loyal to himself, his comrades, and his leaders. When told to do a thing he goes and does it, and reports that fact. He doesn't turn in a lot of excuses. He does his best at all times because it is a satisfaction to himself. He is like a good footbell player. He is like a good football player who jumps to action at the calling of his signal. He is a man that can be depended upon by his comrades and by his leaders.—Sergt. R. Grinstead, Head-quarters Co., 31st Infantry.

A REG'LAR

By L. B. Cullen Jones

There's a reekin' rollin' river That makes a far frontier,. In a sullen desert country, Where you pray that God is near.

There is someone there a waitin'! He is ridin' all around, He patrols the Southern border, While you're sleepin' safe and sound

And those feverish boilin' islands, In the Eastern tropic zone, Where the natives mark your headpiece For a choice spot in their home.

There is someone there in khaki, With a rifle shinin' bright, He is marchin' while it's daytime, And a guardin' you at night.

There's a lonesome, icy snowland, Up north of fifty-eight, It's a frozen hell in winter That you comfort lovers hate.

There is someone there a scoutin' And a-skeein' up and down He is keepin' law and order; In each distant minin' town.

Don't forget that, strip of water, Thru' the neck of jungle cut,
It's no place for white 'uns either,
You wouldn't live there but—

There is someone there a-waitin'
For a frolic or a fray;
He is oilin' up his trigger—
For you need that water way.

While you swim in worldly pleasures,
He's on duty night and day;
He's a trooper or a doughboy,
He's a Reg'lar—U .S. A.
—The Sentinel

The winter had been terribly cold in the Michigan backwoods; even the hardy snowshoe rabbits were starving to death for want of their only food, the pungent bark of the poplar tree, now long buried under the twenty foot drifts of snow. Even the Indian braves were shattering age old traditions and helping their weary squaws at bringing in pine knots and birch bark. Our hero the Kalamazoo Kid, so well known that we use but his nickname, had found so much hard work as his portion,

The drifts reaching right to the gables and the kid every day after breakfast had to pick up his trusty old shovel, and climb out the upstairs hall window and dig twenty feet thru the snow heaps, to uncover the door of the woodshed and bring in great armfuls of stovewood. And then with his tapeline and compass he doped out the lay of the cowshed and once more with the aid of his shovel he'd uncover the door of the haymow. And then with a fork full of fodder he would appease the starved bellowing cattle.

As we've said this hard work grew so irksome, our hero decided to "vamoose." So one day without "so long" or farewell, he strapped on his snowshoes and beat it. All day thru the snowdrifts he floundered, his blood chilled by the blast of the North wind, and then just as the red sun was descending and threatening to leave him in darkness the welcoming sight met his eye of a light in an old Grand Trunk depot.

Our hero was lucky enough for the very next day after dinner, a train pushed it's way thru the drifts and stopped at the station a minute. Already the kid had arranged at the bank to draw out all his wampum he'd saved thru the years long gone by, by depositing fresh eggs and skunk furs. And now we must pause for a moment and explain the backwoods way of barter. You must know that the banks of the north are not all of them snow banks or sand banks. When the lumber jacks, farmers or trappers have garnered the fruits of their labors they can go to the bank and deposit whatever their labors have gained them. And so had the Kalamazoo Kid each month when the hens were all layanded it unto his savings. Likewise when the skunk furs were all dried and relieved of their not too nice odor he brought them all into the bank and turned them all in to the teller. Sometimes when the weather was warm or too much time had elapsed 'teen his visits, the teller would find in his check that he'd tried some bad cents to deposit. In the bank book no credit was given for dol-lars or cents or for produce. Instead there was marked in the book, the value in Indian Wampum.

Of course when the bank paid him off, they paid him in good U. S. money and when he had purchased his ticket he found he had left from his savings One Hundred and Five hard earned bucks of which one hundred was in one bank note. In the City of Kalamazoo where he arrived the next day after breakfast put up at the Y. M. C. A. and planned where his next move would take him. That day, while he wandered around, he spent only two or three dolwandered lars, and that night as he made his way home, he still had the most of his money. As he made his way up a side street, which was lighted by only one street light, he met a young man in the dark who stopped him and told a sad story, of hunger and freezing and want, for he said he'd no home and no money. The stranger's sad story so touched, his heart that the kid never faltered. In his pocket his right hand he plunged and a bill he pulled out for the stranger. "Sure I'll help you" said he right away "Take this dollar and buy you a supper."

When the Kid had returned to his room, feeling proud of the good deed he had done he drew out all his "jack" from his jeans and all he had left was a One! A one dollar bill, yes that's right; to the stranger he'd given a hundred!

And that is the reason the Kid, the very next day joined the army, and right to this day if you try, to borrow from him any money, or get him to do any business, that involves the exchanging of the state of the st bills. It will do you no good to approach him at night, not even in a room that's well lighted, for the Kid has to have good day light so the wrong kind of bills can be sighted.

-Hanna of the Engineers.

Combat Train

One more recruit added to the long list of the Combat Train. This one comes with a reputation of being a baseball player of no mean ability. His metal will soon be tested however.

Baseball is the main topic of conversation around the Orderly Room door at the present time. We have hopes of winning the Battalion Championship again this year. Our cup is getting lonely without any company, so let's go and get another, and relative the monotony of the one we won last year.

Pvts. Arnold and Gibson are no more They saw fit to be other than soldiers and have left. I expect the Battery will have a terrible time trying to get along without them. Gibson's radio-like talk will be missed in the Day Room and Arnold's working qualities will be an ideal to some of the men.

At last Garretson is "Going to make it." He is getting made Pvt 1st Cl it." He is getting made Pvt. 1st Cl. along with Pvts. Barrett and Wright. Well, here's luck, boys, but don't spend all your money in one place.

Information is required as to why O'Donnel draws so many Show Tickets and always has McGroarty, Carr, Brown, and Wallace, along with him, when he starts for the show. He must be showing the above a good time. It might be mentioned that Doornob Flynn also is mentioned on the above list. Any info in regard to the above would be greatly appreciated by the scribes.

It is strange how junk will get piled around the area. Most any day one can go by Hdqrs, and see along the Parking row an old thing with "Buick" on the front of it. Some Corporal in Hdqrs. drives it around when it runs. He'll be going around a corner with it some and he'll find himself with nothing but the steering wheel left in his hand. It's a shame to let anythin glike that loose around the area. What would the

I must contradict myself as regards to my third paragraph. Just as I was writing these few lines who comes galloping in but Mr. Gibson and Mr. Arnold. Here is a short description of their entrance into the fair domains of our Orderly Room. It is a short play and will be given in one act.
Soft knock on the Orderly Room door.

First Sergt. "Come in."
Enter the two absentees. Both remove their hats at the same time. Arnold hangs back, but Hoot Gibson, born leader of men, and no mean spokesman at all, takes the lead. He hangs his hat on a convenient nail in the wan.

"Well, whatcha saying, Sergt., How's everything? I suppose you know we everything? I suppose you know we was gone Well, we know we're in the wrong. Whatcha want us to do."

First Srgt.: "Where have you been?"

Hoot: "Sergt. that's just what we came in to tell you. We went riding with a fellow and he was a liquor man but we didn't know it. And we all got pinched. And of course last night they found out we was all right and they found out we was all right and they turned us loose. We tried every way to get out last night, but there wasn't any trucks running, so we came out this morning. Whatcha want us to do?"

First Sergt.: "Wait till the Captain comes in, he'll talk to you. Go to the kitchen right now." And they went.

"FOLLOW ME"

Language is a remarkable thing. It lives on the lips of men. Editors may delete. Teachers may prescribe. But the phrases go on forever.

Take the names of two of our prominent athletes. It is Sergeant "Daniel" and it is Sergeant "Kjelstrom' that you see on the football field. But those names have been spelled "Daniels" and "Kgelstrom" for so long that it has become a habit-service records to the contrary notwithstanding. "Daniel" is a very common Southern name, borne by the Superintendent of Schools in Columbus, and by a Professor at Georgia Tech, and the Sergeant is a Macon lad. But the corrupted spelling keeps appearing, inspite of all efforts to get the "s" left off in sport stories for downtown papers and in the Infantry School News.

"Kjelstrom" is spelled with a "j' and not with a "g"-it conforms to the usual Norwegian orthography, and "Kelly" is a Norwegian by blood. But it has been as difficult to get that "j" into print as it is to keep his feats from weighing in the balance at a football game. Our former Assistant Commandant never saw his name spelled "Bgornstad" instead of "B. J."

From time immemorial, the garrison at the Infantry School has been speaking of "intermural" athletic contests. The spelling "intermural" is of course, wrong. "Intra-mural" means "within the walls" and is a word describing games between companies, battalions, or other units at the fort, as distinct from games against outside teams. When the 83rd Field Artillery plays the Columbus All-Stars, it is an extra-mural game. When the 83rd Field Artillery plays the Second Battalion, it is an intra-mural game,

A distinguished banker of New York, trustee of a large university, high ranking officer in the Reserve Corps, and graduate of Leavenworth, has said that the chief fault he could find with the army was its carelessness in the use of the English language. General Pershing issued a War Department General Order on the subject. Let us at least do our part of the job by spelling correctly the names of two of our distinguished sergeant athletes and of our intra-mural contests.

"FOLLOW ME"

Blue Bird is feeling pretty cocky these days, since his report of the new specifications for the lapel collar uniform—published in the Infantry School News before they appeared in any other service paper - has been copied by other publications.

LARGE FIELD OF HUNTERS TURN OUT TO SAY FAREWELL

General and Mrs. Wells Honored By Riders of the Garrison Last Sunday Morning.

Coffee and French pastry fortified inner man-and woman. Saddles were slung. Boots made contact with dies. The field moved out, and the Boots made contact with sadcast was made at eight-ten. Over a hundred riders turned out last Sun-day morning for the farewell drag hunt to General and Mrs. Wells prior to their departure.

Down the Lumpkin road they went to Gilbert creek. Down Gilbert creek, they streaked, to the edge of the Chattahoochee. Then they travelled back to the Polo Club, where they arrived, after an hour and forty-five minutes riding in the clear, cool morn-ing air, broken by four checks, but ready for the breakfast which Captain Paul F. Huber, Assistant Hunt Direct-or, had spread out for them.

In the main room of the club, decorated in hunting fashion with bear skins, and with fox, cat, and coon skins, and with fox, cat, and coon hides from this winter's kill of the Officers Club, there were tables laden with flowers and with strawberries and cream, and squab on toast, and hot rolls, and potatoes, and coffee. There was an orchestra which enlivened the meal with the strains of "Drink, pup-py, drink" and "D'ye ken John Peel, with his coat so gay."

HIGH GERMAN GENERAL VISITS LOCAL FORT DURING PAST WEEK

Lieutenant General of the Teutonic Army Extended Courtesies of the Garrison

Wednesday morning a detail of the 83rd Field Artillery crossed the Upatoi bridge and boomed a salute to a high officer of an ex-enemy nation. Into the garrison along the Benning boulevard came Lieutenant-General hermann Schirmer, recently retired from the Germany army, visiting "the finest Infantry training school in the world, bar none," as Mr. Weeks remarked some time since.

Under the guidance of Lieutenant-Colonel William McCammon, of the Advanced Class, and Captain Paul Leiber, of the Academic Department, was escorted to the various points of the reservation and given a full and free opportunity to inspect the and installations and the operations.

Down in the Tank area, he walked in and out of a baby tank and of a big heavy, and took a jolting ride much interested in the huge land machines of a type in which the scientific Germans were completely outclassed during the World war. Then he visited the Artillery park and was shown the arrangements there, in which he displayed particular interest, having been originally an artilleryman prior to his appointment on the German General Staff, where he served during the World war. He was taken through the stables and to the offices of the weapons section of the Academic Department.

Thursday morning, General Schirmer inspected the storerooms of the weap ons section, and observed field firing. Then he proceeded to Columbus, After patiently pursuing the Infantry for almost a year, we finally bumped into a Machine Gun barrage. * * *

Boys of Company "D," you are machine gunners and you shouldn't object to a little harrasing fire.

We got the habit in an old Company Machine Gun outfit ourself.

Ye Scribe of Company "D" objects to the title "Barracks Banter." What would you suggest buddy: "Tent Topics" or "Pyramidal Paragraphs."

And so you often wonder if the old column is intended to be funny. Well we don't know what it is intended to be; but we've always thought it was funny—we thought it was funny Editor ever started printing it.

GARDENING NOTES

From now on, the Infantry School News will print weekly notes on gardening, when to plant roses, how fix the vines, and so on, prepared by the garrison gardener specially for this paper.

There is a knack in the handling of plants that it is impossible to describe in print. All persons can improve their practice through diligent reading of useful gardening literature, but no amount of reading and advice will make a good gardener of a person who does not love to dig in a garden, or who does not have a care for plants just because they are plants.

To grow a plant well, one must learn to know its natural habits. Some persons learn this as if by intuition, acquiring the knowledge from close discrimination of the behavior of the plant. Often they themselves, are unconscious of this knack of knowing what will make the plant to thrive, but it is not at all necessary to have such an intuitive judgment to enable him to be even more than a fairly good gardener. Diligent attention to the plants' habits and requirements, and a real regard for the plants welwill make a person a success fare. ful plant grower.

Having suited the situation to the plant, and having prepared the ground well and made a resolution to keep it well, special attention must be given to such matters as these:

Guarding from insects and disease dogs and cats, rabbits, mice and etc. Protecting from weeds.

Pruning if necessary, and when it is necessary

Staking and tying of sprawly garden flowers.

Persistent picking of over mature flowers, developed seed pods, dead and straggly branches, dead leaves and so forth from the plant in order to conserve the strength and to prolong the flowering periods.

Watering in dry weather. (Not sprinkling or dribbling. Use the irrigation system in watering all flowers and plants in real hot weather.)

severe cold spells.

Keeping the place tidy, trim and well cultivated.

In the transplanting of flowers and all plants recently started from seeds, important that the ground be thoroughly pulverized and well packed. Plants will do better if they are transplanted into soil that has just been prepared to receive them. If it is possible it is a good idea, to transplant seedlings during light wet weather or just before a rain, particularly if it is very late in the season. Firm the earth well around the roots. This prevents air spaces and serves to draw up the moisture that is in the undersoil, or sub-soil.

In removing a plant from one posi-tion to transplant into another flower ing or growing position it is well to water the plant some time in advance of the time before removing, say an hour or two. This enables one to take out a good root ball of moist soil, which must remain around the roots and be placed in the new flowering position with the plant. See that the watering before removing is done far enough in advance of the transplant-ing that the soil will not be muddy but well moist. Allow the water to settle and distribute itself before removing. Do not allow a plant to remain out of the soil for a very long while. If it is allowed to remain out be sure that it is kept well watered and well protected from heat or cold. Heat will wither or scald the plant and cold breezes will chill it. Both and cold breezes will chill it. Both is the best that can be obtained. It is are harmful to the plant as to growing fast in color, it can be procured in

For no good reason he claims Tennessee as his native state and Cumberland city his birthplace. On February 15th he birthplace. On February 15th he transferred to the 7th Engineers, where, of course, every good man finally comes.

Private Louis Kingsbury enlisted in the 13th Engineers at Fort Bragg in 1921 and was discharged three years later as a Sergeant. Two years after that he decided to take another hitch so he tied up for the 7th in his home city New Orleans, La.

Pvt. Wilson H. Palmer and all others whose chief stock in trade is their ability to wield a paint brush, will hereafter be S. O. L. The company is now blessed with, or is unfortunate in having, a paint sprayer that works like a fire hose. All you have to do is to press a button and the job is done.

In another section of this paper Pvt. Hanna tells us of some of his amusing, and embarrassing, experiences.

and as to flowering. Watering of young plants should be done at dusk preferably, or just after nightfall. Never water a young plant just transplanted in the heat of the day.

In transplanting young plants, some kind of a dibber or trowl should be used to make the holes. Dibbers, or sharp pegs make holes without removing away of any of the earth. transplanting with a dibber, a hole is first made by a thrust of the tool, and the earth is then pressed in against the roots by the hands, feet or some other thing made for the purpose. The hole is not filled by putting in dirt from the top.

It is not too late for the transplanting of the many young seedlings that will require thinning and transplanting. Most plants may be transplanted with success up until the middle of March in this part of the country. Some of the plants that require transplanting and thinning out now are: Chrysanthemums, Shasta daises, Bachelor buttons, Sweet Williams, Iris, Cannas, etc. This should be done as soon as possible in order to have them in before the warm weather be-Plants grown in greenhouses, hot beds, indoors and etc. should not be transplanted out until the middle of March at the least. Allow the plants to harden off before trying it. This may be done by gradually giving them more air and gradually cutting down the heat where they are growing.

COTTON UNIFORMS

Any enlisted man having drawn his full initial and maintenance allowance of cotton coats and breeches, as shown in Table 1, paragraph 3, A. R. 615-40, may, under paragraph 5 (e) A. R. 615-40, purchase additional cotton uniforms if he so desires

In order ot obtain an absolute uniformity thruout the command in cotton uniforms purchased under the provision set forth above, these uniforms must be procured from one source.

A Board of Officers recently convened by Headquarters found that the imported cotton cloth known as "Chino"

quantity and it will pass the service tests of sunshine, perspiration and laundry. Although it is not of olive drab color, it is the most suitable cotton khaki cloth for the uniforms of officers and enlisted men. The Board also finds that after laundry the olive drab cotton cloths on the market are no more olive drab color than is the "Chino" khaki. The Board recommended that this imported "Chino" be adopted as the standard the cotton uniforms cers and men of for of the officers and men of this garrison. The findings and recommendations of this Board of Officers are approved and the Post Exchange is designated as the agency with which organization commanders will deal directly for the procurement of uniforms for their men

The Post Exchange has made arrange ments for the supply of the enlisted men's uniforms with the Sigmund Eisner Company. All uniforms are to be of the lapel collar type. They are to be individually measured and a fit in all cases is guaranteed.

ANOTHER DECORATION FOR COLONEL JOHNSON

Colonel Wait C. Johnson, commanding officer of the 24th Infantry, will soon be forced to put an extension on the breast of his coat so as to give room for his many ribbons and decorations, as Congress on February 22, 1926, passed a Senate bill granting permission to certain American officers to accept foreign decorations bestowed in recognition of their service to the Allied cause. Among the decorations which may now be accepted is the Cross of the Order of the White Eagle (4th class), conferred on Colonel Johnson by the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

Two former Benning officers, Major Albro L. Pagens Med. Corps. and Albro L. Parsons, Med. Corps, and Captain William McFarland, Med. Adm. Corps, are also granted permission to accept decorations under the provisions of the bill just passed. Major Parsons is authorized to wear the Cross of the Order of the White Eagle (4th class), bestowed by Serbia; and Captain McFarland will now become a Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor.

FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE UPATOL By I. M. Preshate, New York Double Cross Company, 1926

When you read the Dumas book about the "Three Musketeers" you are surprised perhaps to find that there were four of them. So with our "Four Horsemen" of the equitation corral—they are really the equitation corral—they are really five, but one of these does not affect the perpetual chin strap that holds the jaw in place and makes the words come grittingly out of the teeth, whether it be the kindly tones of the youth who built the mountain which warm spring has the mountain which warm spring has made turn color like the moon of green cheese, or the stern voice of he to whom everyone, orderly or officer, is merely "young man."

a "young man."

The expert who does not wear the chin strap, talks in terms that no automobilists would understand. To him a "curb" is a blemish on the hock, instead of something against which to park the sin-six or the wobbly-four. To him a "wind puff" is not a gale, at sixty per, driving athwart the windshield, but rather a bump on a horse's leg. He is the fifth horseman, like D'Artagnan of the Musketeers, one of them, but not counted in the tally.

These others, these four described in the volume we presume to be reviewing, may be taken like animals at an auction—for "wind and work" or else merely "at the halter." But, in equestrian phraseology, when it is a case of "at the halter" there is nothing said, and we who review books must say our say, particularly when it is a case of four horsemen who bring fire, famine, flood, and war down the mazes of the Upatoi Trail, even from the reaches of the Marne even from the reaches of the Marne Road to the Santa Fe route.

Pegasus had wings. We have heard that the scratchy-looking War Dance has them too. But most of the animals we students ride, in the corral or out, fail to fly They never belonged to the gire. to fly. They never belonged to the air service, and never will now that spurs are barred from aviators boots. It gives a feeling of confidence, however, to be told we can "Dominate that old bird," as one of the Riley emigrants has told us we can.

But there is the gentle young lieutenant who sings of whooping steel on the Central of Georgia, the one who outdid Mahomet and built a mountain where none had been before. Not down river did he drive the stables clean, but onto the heights of the Benning plain, where his mountain rose in crescent splendor until the golfer of Lake Malone began to scatter the precious stuff over green and fairway, and even over lawn. One of the well selected incidents upon which the writer of this volume has fastener tells of a lady equitator, equitatress, or equestrienne who let her horse loose and made the bashful lieutenant ride and made the bashful lieutenant ride home behind her; and of how the lieutenant enjoyed the ride so little that the next day he spoke very brusquely to another lady who freed her nag—shall we say in hopes of a chance to have him mounted up behind —and instead of emitting his usual gracious "That's fine!" told her she better get that horse or she'dhave to walk home, for by G—racious, he wouldn't. racious, he wouldn't.

Cheerfulness we all like to see. like to hear of it in those we know, even when it has not come under our personal observation. One of these four horsemen, it seems, is pleasant as can be. He dismisses his classes in the mornings, with the words: "Good morn-

GARRISON PERSONNEL HONOR FRENCH HERO AT SPECIAL MEETING

Daughters of the American Revolution Present Tablet to Commemorate Lafayette's Visit.

Smooth strains of the "American Hymn" came from the able 29th Infan-Band. "Follow Me" beat against the March wind. The fluttering banners of Infantry, Artillery, Engineers and Tanks marched into position, and the bugles blared "To the Color."

Lieut. Fay led the three hundred assembled spectators in an invocation. Hon. Lucius H. Chappell, historian of Columbus, spoke briefly on the rich traditions of local history, touching on the importance of knowing the past of our neighborhood and of various neighboring neighborhood and of various neighboring facts of interest. Hon. Peter A. Brannon, head of the department of archives and history of the State of Alabama, who came from Montgomery especially for the ceremony, talked interestingly on the old Federal Road, built from "military contingencies" funds by army engineers, and the route of the first New York-New Orleans postal service in 1818.

"The Marseillaise" shattered the silence. Down across a nearby lawn and close by the concrete pedestal marched Barbara Dale Karlstad, accompanied by Captain Frank Barber, Inf. in a French Zouave uniform, and Major Frank Green in horizon blue. She sang the marching song of the French Revolution as only she can sing it.

As the last strains of the music died on the spring air, there arose Mrs H. Fay Gaffney, special representative of the Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution, as well as Regent of the Oglethorpe Chapter. In a finely molded and eminently suitable address, she formally presented to the garrison and the government an attractive bronze tablet to stand permanently at the corner of Wold Avenue and First Division Road, Briefly, clearly, and gratefully, General Wells then accepted the tablet which was unveiled by the regents of the Columbus Chapters of the D. A. R., Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney (Oglethorpe), Mrs. Wheeler Tolbert (George Walton), and Mrs. T. D. Power (Button Gwinnett) Mrs. T. D. Power (Button Gwinnett).

Doughboys of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry are celebrating their victory in the Organization Day Field and Track meet held in the Doughboy Stadium Wednesday morning. The 2nd Battalion has, for the past two years, hogged most of the athletic honors in the regiment but this time were forced to be content with finishing second to their comrades from the 1st Bn. EXCEPTIONAL POLO STAGED LAST WEEK IN FAREWELL GAME

Twenty-Ninth Four Edges Out Victory Over Student Riders

On the score board, the columns made a perfect balance, such a one as would satisfy any expert accountant. The score was tied. Captain Coulter for the School Students had laid a pretty lackhander between what Zipper Jake calls the "woven wicker pilons" and tied the count at 3-3.

But the 29th Infantry was in the midst of a late game rally and would not be denied. Trailing all through the hard and fast contest, in which superior play at Back by Lieu. French had held the dashing Texan Duke of the student four out of danger, the regimentals came back with a crash. Flians executed a hauwith a crash. Flinns executed a beau-tiful backhander, setting up a pretty shot which Burress smashed across just before the final pugle blew, and the 29th Infantry had won, 1-3.

GOBS OFF GRIDIRON FOR ANNUAL GAMES IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Navy Department Formally Announces Its Withdrawal From President's Cup Competition.

In November, 1924, there was a brilliant game of football in the Griffith Stadium. Carroll of the Navy and Buck of the Army vied with each other in ball-carrying. The sea and land service were locked in a mighty struggle for the silver trophy put in competition by President Coolidge as representative of the en-listed championsh p of the services. The Infantry won, and won largely because with a six-point lead, 12-6, they managed to stave off a powerful Navy drive that rushed downfield, and was finally checked on four downs within the five yard line, while the eight thousand spectators held their breaths until their ribs ached.

In Novmber, 1925, when the Navy announced that they would not enter the Scouting Fleet team in an elimination contest with the Quantico Marines to determine which should have the honor of meeting the doughboys in the title go, an airship tender group in Norfolk rose to the occasion. They said the Navy should be represented, and played, on Armistice Day, a fine game against the leathernecks who eventually won and faced the Infantry on the gridiron of Griffith Stadium at the end of the month. The Marines won, and won largely because they in their turn staved off a series of drives within their five now.—The Kaydet.

DOUGHBOYS AVENGE DEFEAT AT ALBANY BY BEATING Y HERE

South Georgians Feature with Shots, but Lose to Blues in 46-30 Game.

Doughboys turned the tables Saturday night in the gymnasium and took ven-geance on the Albany Y five for that 49-31 defeat in Albany. Displaying a faster and more versatile attack the Infantrymen had little difficulty in turning the South Georgians back, 46-30, though the ability of the visitors to connect with long shots kept them in the running for the greater part of the contest. Their 30 points were scored almost entirely by long range heaves, as the Blue defense was nearly impenetrable. Berry and McQuarrie in particular sticking to their men like leeches and grab-bing the ball off the backboards on every unsuccessful hostile shot. The Albanians seldom had an opportunity to follow up when their long distance tosses failed to connect with the hoop.

Play started slowly, both teams work-Play started slowly, both teams working cautiously and guarding closely. Three minutes after the opening whistle Buck took a neat pass from Kjelstrom and scored the first basket. Smith evened the count a few seconds later with a spectacular toss from the extreme left side line. Buck scored again and the Infantry as in front never to be headed again. Buck did most of the scoring for the Benning gang in the first period, while Dann and Cherry for Albany found the netting for two beauties each Intermission tally was 18-13.

Kjelstrom was the whole show for the Infantry in the second half, making eight field goals, many of them very difficult ones. He was materially assisted by the good floor work of Buck and Newman. Skipper Smith saved and Newman. Skipper Smith saved Albany from being completely outclass-ed by his brilliant dribbling and snoot-ing. His teammates, however, gave him little assistance and played somewhat listlessly.

Now the Navy Department has formally announced that it will not enter the competition for the Cup this year, leaving a clear field for the Marines and the Infantry to renew their rivalry on the next to the last Saturday of Novem-ber. There had been some discussion as to whether the Navy and the Infan-try should play off a preliminary to see who should meet the Marines, or whether the Navy and the Marines should play off to determine which of the sea seroff to determine which of the sca solvices should defend the cup against the charging assault of the land soldiers. Pending the outcome of the discussion, a game had been scheduled between the a game had been scheduled between the Navy enlisted eleven and the Infantry doughboys on the Benning gridiron on October 16th. That game has now been cancelled, and the date is still open.

INFANTRY CAGEMEN CLOSE NET SEASON WITH GOOD RECORD

Facing Strong Opposition Throughout Schedule, New Team Showed Fine Form

Seven games won and nine lost. 500 points scored against opponent's 587. Not a great record, perhaps, but in view of the fact that it was made by a new Infantry team against the strongest opposition in the South, Benning can be proud of its basketball representatives.

When Major Van Vliet called for candidates early in December he faced the task of replacing Franz, last year's great running guard, and Lt. Dabezies, former West Point star who held down the pivot position on the 1925 Doughboy team. With Buck and Kjelstrom, reliable forwards, and McKenna, guard, on hand prospects seemed bright. Mc-Kenna, however, had the misfortune to Kenna, however, had the misfortune to break his jaw, leaving only two regulars as a nucleus. "Red" Newman, 1925 Army star and All-Eastern selection filled one of the vacancies, "Jock" McQuarrie, of football fame, plugged another gap, and after much experimenting a fifth cog in the machine was discovered in Captain K. L. Berry, whose play at standing guard featured the latter part of the season. These five: Buck and Kelly forwards. Mag at center, and and Kelly, forwards, Mac at center, and "Red" and "K. L." at guard, made a first string combination of great first string combination of great strength, with Sweeney, Smythe and Hagelstein as the leading reserves. Eight games were played in the garri-

Only one victory was scored abroad—at rort McPherson—while seven games were dropped to the enemy. High lights of the season were the defeats of the Charlotte Y and the Manual Property of the Charlotte Y and the Charlotte Y Charlotte Y and the Macon Rightway. Five. In these games the visitors gained an early lead and apparently had victory clinched, but on each occasion the Infantry cameback in the second perthe Infantry cameback in the second per-iod and won out in the final minute on long shots by McQuarrie. The Right-way game required an extra five minute period for decision. On the road the best showing was made against the Bir-mingham Athletic Club, rated by many as the strongest five in the South. The Clubmen expected little opposition, but the soldiers made them fight every minute of the game. Against the Jewish Progressive Club, in Atlanta, Infantry led until near the middle of the second half, and might have won had not Mc-Quarrie and Kjelstrom been forced out by personal fouls.

"Red" Newman was the high scorer for the season, making 141 counters. Kjelstrom was a close second with 137, while Buck, kept out of several games by injuries, was third with 110. Complete Infantry Record:

BENNING RINGSTERS TO TRADE WALLOPS WITH GEORGIA BOYS

University Mitmen Will Meet Soldier Fighters Tomorrow in 7 Bouts

The garrison gymnasium has choing to the resounding thud of hook, jab and uppercut this week as Benning's amateur boxers, coached by Lieutenants Mack and Potter, get up steam for to-morrow night's matches with the fight-ing forces from the University of Georgia. The coaches have chosen represen-tatives in seven classes and as Lieut. Potter is an experienced ring manager of several years standing and Lieut. Mack was formerly a member of the West Point battlers, the Infantry School is assured of putting its best into the ring. The choice of soldier mitmen was somewhat limited by the fact that all professionals are barred, thus eliminating "Red" Keenan, "Cyclone" Akers and other well known doughboy fighters. Prominent on the list, however, are the names of the 83rd Field Artillery football stars, Samlavich and Lapine.

Many of Georgia's best known athletes will come for the scraps. Luckie, Hatcher, and Smith are gridiron performers, while Marks, who fights in the featherweight division, is a long distance runner on the varsity track team. It is said, however, that he does little running in the ring, but stands and hits hard.

Following are the entrants for the

Bantamweight — Georgia, Humphries 114 and Harden 108; infantry school, Jervason 115.

Featherweight—Georgia, Marks 123, Freeman 121, Neisler 121 and Birchmore 122; infantry school, Elsmore 125 and Vallory 125. Lightweight—Georgia, Smith 127 and

NEW COMMANDANT CAME TO SCHOOL MIDDLE OF WEEK

Brigadier-General Edgar T Collins Assumed Command on Wednesday

At nine o'clock Wednesday morning, Colonel Cocheu, Colonel Helms, and Colonel Eaton, stepped outside of headquarters with Brigadier-General Edgar T. Collins to accompany the latter as he received the formal salute fired by Battery "A" of the Eighty-Third Field Artillery in honor of the new Commandant of the Infantry School.

He had arrived the evening before on the 8:45 train from the north, where he had been met at the station by Mayor Dimon, of Columbus: J. Edgar Chancellor, Homer R. Mc-Clatchey, L. H. Crowell and S. C. Harris, constituting a committee of distinguished citizens, and by the three officers already named.

officers already named.

After spending the night at the quarters of Colonel Eaton, President of the Infantry Board, he arrived at Headquarters early Wednesday morning and assumed command, signing General Order No. 11, The Infantry School. 1926.

In the morning, after receiving the salute, he went to the Hook Range and observed rifle fire at free balloons, part of the tests in anti-aircraft firing being conducted at the School. He returned to Headquarters to meet Mayor Dimon, City Manager Crawford, Mr. McClatchey, and Mr. Crowell, president of the Columbus Rotary Club.

Following this he inspected the recent installations at the new War Department Motion Picture Theatre and the Doughboy Stadium, and then returned to his office again to meet a delegation of members of the Kiwanis Club, Mr. Frank Girard, Rabbi F. L. (Continued on Page 2.)

COMPLETE TURN-OUT FEATURES DEPARTURE OF GENERAL WELLS

Three Miles of Soldiers in Double Line Guard Last Ride of Commandant

Seldom if ever has there been a guard of honor for a Brigadier three miles in length.

Yet such was the turn-out from the garrison when Brigadier-General Briant H. Wells took his last ride along the Benning Boulevard as Commandant of the Infantry School.

Under grey clouds and dripping skies,

Under grey clouds and dripping skies, General Briant H. Wells left Fort Benning last Saturday, honored by every officer and soldier of the entire command, proceeded in a formal motorcade to the railway station in Columbus, and departed for his new post of duty as assistant chief of staff in the war department at Washington, D. C.

Wet weather and holiday schedules could not interfere with the desire of personnel of city and garrison to render him an unusual tribute. The huge garrison flag flew in spite of the weather. Pennants fluttered through the rain from Gowdy Field and the Doughboy Stadium, which General Well's has pushed to completion. As he stepped from the quarters of Colonel Cocheu, where he has been staying since his household effects were packed, bugles blared the general officer's salute and the colors of all organizations on the reservation dip-

Many came because the invitation had been extended generally. Many others came to see what all the shooting and sky-coloring was about. All saw red and green tracer ammunition flare across the sky Monday evening like livid fingers of light. Three seconds, and seven streaks of light were in the air. A Thompson sub-machine gun, firing .45 ammunition was used, and the tracer bullets set a continuous curtain of color against the clouds.

The main purpose of the development work had been to find a tracer ammunition useful for target designation, and the range has been increased now from 700 to 1000 yards. Those who attended the night demonstration were much impressed with the brightness of the illumination, and seemed of the opinion that such ammunition might do away entirely with the necessity of soldiers having to carry Very pistols as extra equipment.

ANOTHER STRUCTURE REACHES COMPLETION IN BENNING PROGRAM

Local Labor and Materials Add Needed Bridge on Upatoi Trail and Water Supply

Last spring the wooden bridge across Amory Creek, on the Stonewall Road between the Filter and Pumping Plants, fell through. It would stand no more patching and replacement of timbers because it was all rotten. A bridge to permit traffic to the intake pumping plant was necessary. Furthermore this bridge is a link in the Upatoi Trail. Shortly before the bridge gave way, Shortly before the bridge gave way, we had a flood equal to the Pershing flood. During the high water the operators were carried back and forth to and from the intake pumping plant in a row boat. The water lacked only about three feet of filling the intake pumping plant and cutting off the water supply of the Garrison. When the replacement of the bridge became necessary, it was observed that the old bridge site would also serve as a dam site. Amory Creek at this point is higher than the intake on the Upatoi Creek.

To fill the need of an auxiliary pump

To fill the need of an auxiliary pumping plant and a bridge on the Stonewall Road we have constructed a combination affair. The bridge consists of two concrete walls built twenty one feet up from the bed of Amory Creek. The road bed of the bridge is eighteen and one half feet above the foundations and a two foot wall forms rails on both sides. The pump house is located on the upper side of the dam with intake section line extending down into the reservoir. There are three thirty six inch pipes through the dam, the first of these is on a level with the bottom of the creek for the purpose of permitting the creek to continue its flow in the regular way. A sliding gate closes this pipe and ten feet higher up are the other thirty six inch pipes piercing the dam and emptying into the spillway. They form the overflow channel when the lower pipe is closed. By closing the lower pipe the reservoir behind the dam fills up and a considerable volume of water is accumulated, forming an emergency supply.

Agreement in Congress on War Dept. Housing Bill Re-Opens Construction Prospects

In Washington, the Senate and the House of Representatives have both passed a bill which will permit the resumption of construction work on permanent quarters at Fort Benning. Some slight amendments to the bill as it originated in the Senate will have to be ironed out in conference, but the main features seem to be agreed upon by both houses of Congress.

For some years the War Department has been trying to get the legislators to permit the proceeds of the sale of surplus real estate to be used for the building of new quarters and barracks. Something like twenty million dollars is in sight, though it appears that but five million of this will be made available.

Members of the Staff consider Benning, Riley, Lewis, Sam Houston, and Schofield Barracks the stations which require the most immediate attention. It

ARTILLERYMEN HAVE COLONEL ATTACHED NOW

Colonel George L. Taylor, 365th F. A., Arrives for Inactive Duty Training

With a splendid record as an engineer officer during the World War, Colonel George L. Taylor, a retired engineer in civil life, now a Colonel in the Field Artillery Reserve Corps, arrived at Fort Benning yesterday for a month of "inactive duty" training as a member of the 83rd Field Artillery.

Following nearly three months of training at Fort Bragg, under General Albert J. Bowley, Colonel Taylor comes here to observe and learn the practical cooperation of the gunners with doughboy outfits. His stay is entirely at his own expense, and without pay or remuneration from the government.

Colonel Taylor is commander of the 365th Field Artillery of the 94th Division. His home is at Alstead Center, New Hampshire. He comes to Benning for the new type of "inactive duty training" created for reserve officers who can afford, and desire, to serve the government in perfecting the organization and military education of the reserve forces of the nation. This type of training was voluntarily accepted by the reserve officers, and actually established at their own request, a committee of reserve officers sitting in Washington last spring having recommended such a measure to the operations and training section of the War Department Geueral Staff.

PRIVATE THOMAS MOSELEY Motor Transport Company No. 100

On June 11th, 1913, under the personal command of General Pershing, United States Infantry and Cavalry advanced against hostile natives on Bagsak Mountain on the Island of Jolo Jolo. Lieut. Edwin H. Rackley of the 51st Scouts fell badly wounded under raking musketry fire. To his side there came a soldier with twelve years of service in the 9th Cavalry and with the Medical Department at Fort Duchesne, Fort Leavenworth, and in the Philippines. He dressed the wound and carried the Lieutenant with the firing line all day initil relieving troops came up, then toted his officer back to Pouyakabao, and thence to the dressing station at Bun Bun.

This is what the man he saved, now retired says: "While he informed me there was lots of rabbit in him and he might slip over the hill, he was dauntless and never had the slightest fear for himself and was at all times deeply concerned over me. After having had him under me for about one year, I found Moseley to be an excellent soldier in every respect, and one of the most loyal, faithful men I have ever known.'

In due course there came down through channels a commendation, a Certificate of Merit, signed March 14, 1914, by Secretary of War Henry Breckenridge and President Woodrow Wilson; and then by Act of Congress, July 9, 1918, this certificate was replaced in November 1995 by a Dictinguished Sawing Medal 1925 by a Distinguished Service Medal, one of the most honorable decorations in the power of our government to confer.

Moseley came to Fort Benning in 1921 from Washington, D. C., with M. T. C. 27, and has been medicating and transporting ever since. He knows how to handle a big Liberty on a convoy over bad roads where others break rear axles, and his come home intact. He served at the logging camp as medical representa-tive, and kept the detachment free from disease, and there was the guide, mentor, and friend of the entire detachment.

If there was a baseball game on, "Dad" Moseley was the inveterate umpire. If there was a lull in recreation, it was "Dad" who started the gang pitching horse-shoes and slung a mean iron himself. If there was anything a young soldier wanted to know, it was "Dad" Moseley who gave the lessons in military courtesy, discipline, sanitation, adminis tration, behaviour and the other basic essentials of the profession, which are ingrained in the soul of a sturdy old Eight enlistments stretch back to the day in 1901 when Thomas Moseley came into the 9th Cavalry as a recruit. Three tours of duty in the Philippines, one during the insurrection, one during the Moro troubles, and one in the Land Transportation Corps at Manila during the World War, represent honorable service to the nation by as excellent a soldier as ever wore the uniform.

29th and 24th, but also the sister services, the 83rd field artillery, the 7th engineers, the 1st gas regiment and the 15th tanks, had their precious bits of silken color out in the drizzle to pay the final tribute.

A complete war strength company from the 24th Infantry, bearing the guidon of company "A" and commanded by Captain S. L. Eberle, presented arms, and then wheeled into column with the 24th Infantry band to march ahead of the general's car to the Upatoi bridge, where the final honors of the garrison were paid, to the accompaniment of eleven guns from four crashing seventy-fives of Battery "B" of the 83rd field artillery.

Lining the roadway were Miss Grimes and children from the children's school which General Wells has fostered. Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts with Captain Hathaway, their scoutmaster. At Vib-bert avenue, there began a three mile double line of officers and soldiers, each of whom saluted with sorrow and deference as the big limousine passed on its way. First were the instructors of the way. First were the instructors of the academic department, then the student officers, field officers, captains of the regulars, and members of the reserve and national guard class, bearing the shoulder patches of the most famous combat divisions of our army.

After the line of student officers terminated the student officers terminated the student officers terminated the student of the studen

After the line of student officers ter minated, there, were on both sides of the roadway, officers of the school detachment, the tanks the artillery and every organization of the garrison.

At the bridge, the company of the 24th Infantry lined the roadway to the right. On the left, facing the railroad track were the caissons and guns of battery "B" of the 83rd field artillery, spick and span as if for inspection. The official party descended from their cars while the general took his salute and took a last look at the new home of the bridge guard, the last completed unit of the many constructions he has fostered. Then the motorists resumed their journey at a slow pace between the files of soldiers that stretched for three miles or soldiers that stretched for three lines along the edges of the splendid road completed during General Wells's ad-ministration. On the bridge were the officers of the 29th Infantry. Beyond them were the members of the 24th Infantry, motor transport, company No. 100, and the veterinary detachment.

Next in line were the personnel of the Infantry school detachment, grizzled non-commissioned officers, expert in-structors on whose work and keen perception and patience, much of the success of the Infantry school depends. top of the hill, were the soldiers of the quartermaster corps, whose "service for the line" has made possible much of the success of the Infantry school and great deal of the building operations.

Lined up after these, and each also saluting in turn, were the gunners of the 83rd Field Artillery, the headquarters detachment and batteries "A" and "C". Then was company "A" of the 7th engineers, they who built the Hemmel creek trestle and the narrow gauge rail-way extension which leads into vast way extension which leads into vast quantities of sand and gravel for future building operations, and opens up new areas of instruction for the school.

In order, were headquarters of the 15th Tanks battalion, and companies "A", "B" and "C", headed by Major E. S. Miller, standing by the side of the road and rendering his salute like any private in the ranks. Next was the unit of the first gas regiment, and finally the file on file of the 29th Infantry, reaching by hundreds up the slopes and around the curves to the big sign that marks the edge of the reservation.

Heading the column was the general's car, with himself and Mrs. Wells, Colonel and Mrs. Cocheu, and Lieutenant J. A. Nichols, A. D. C. Then came the car of Mayor Dimon and County Commissioner Rhodes Browne and City Commissioner R. E. Dispulses all presistant missioner R. E. Dismukes, all persistent friends of the fort and personal friends of the general. Following these were two official automobiles with Colonel and Mrs. Helms, Colonel and Mrs. Delaplane, and Major and Mrs. Ford in the first, and Colonel and Miss Halloran, Colonel and Mrs. Warfield, and Major and Mrs. Dunlop in the second.

Officially invited to places of honor in the motorcade, were various members of the Fort Benning headquarters staff driving their own cars, Colonels Eaton, Goodrich, Williams, Bond and Singleton, Majors Uhl, McGregor, Spiller, ton, Majors Uhl, McGregor, Spiller, Thomas, Lennon, Sandlin, Hooper, Keatley and Huber, and Lieutenants Green and Stetler. Also occupying places of honor were Colonel George F. Baltzell, honor were Colonel George F. Batzen, 22nd Infantry, of Fort McPherson, and Major W. H. S. Allston, K. C. B., Brit-ish army, assistant military attache at the Washington embassy, and Major Courtney Hodges.

The procession entered the city Columbus at 2:40 and was escorted by two motorcycle policemen west on Eighth St. to Broad, down Broad between flutst. to Broad, down Broad between Inte-tering lines of flags, and up Twelfth St. to the railway station. Waiting at the depot, was Company "G" of the 29th Infantry, commanded by Captain Wil-liam G. Burt, to pay the final honors, selected by reason of the fact that for twelve years General Wells commanded that company as a captain, in years gone by. This organization and the 29th Infantry band rendered the final formal salutes, and played the ruffles in honor of the departing commander. Then the entire party entered the railway station at exactly three o'clock.

The 29th Infantry band had marched under the sheltered platform and played "Follow Me" and "Farewell to Thee" and other livelier tunes, lest the note of sadness predominate too strongly and take away the happiness of a well deserved promotion to higher responsibili-ties at the nation's capitol.

For ten minutes, General and Mrs.

Wells held an informal reception on the station platform, long lines of military personnel, members of his staff and of the regiments and citizens of Columbus, Rotarians, Kiwanians, Daughters of the Rotarians, Kiwanians, Daughters of the Revolution and others filing by for a last grip of his hand and a last good wish. Mrs. Ford was not the only one to weep. The train was ready, so the small party boarded the Pullman and found their drawing room laden with floral decorations, candy, and magazines formished by the Fort Benning officers' furnished by the Fort Benning officers club and by individual friends.

As the conductor shouted "All aboard" and the train started to pull out, the 29th infantry band swept splendidly into the heartpulling strains of "Auld Lang Syne"—the traditional army leave taking song, and the assembled crowds closed in behind the final car to wave good-bye to the General and Mrs. Wells, who stood on the rear platform sur-rounded by flowers and waving their waving their farewells to the garrison and the city.

THE LAST SALUTE

Last to salute the General on the garrison, was one of our pristine Satellites: Sergeant Emory A. Daniel, Company "H", 29th Infantry, on the right of road, where his organization was lined up Saturday afternoon at the end of the three mile line of soldiers.

Opposite him, on the left of the road as the departing motorcade proceeded to-ward the railway station, Corporal Edward the railway station, Corporal Edward P. Sawyitski leaned against the big sign which marks the limit of the reservation, and swung into the position a soldier and executed the hand salute as required.

On the right, on the side where Genon the right, on the side where General Wells rode, was the Macon lad Daniel, representing good soldiering as an expert machine gunner of "H" Company, and good spirit as a Benning gridiron product for the first water.

As a student at the Illinois General where he studied, among Hospital, other things, entomology, bacteriology, physiology, and pharmacy, Private John W. Mitchell specialized in the fine art of nursing and graduated as a male nurse.

Born in the blue grass state about 23 years ago, a graduate of his home town high school, and an accountant by profession, Private Mitchell, while still quite young, answeredthe call to the colors and enlisted in Headquar-vate in this company who wants to know whether the salute that was fired in honor of General Wells as he left the post last Saturday was fired at the General in order to run him out of camp. It can be stated for the en-lightenment of said private that those guns were fired not at the General but at the clouds to break them up so the rain would stop and the sun come out to smile down on the General as he was leaving.

All we have to do now to win the intra-mural championship is to beat the 2nd Battalion. All the others will be mere practice games for our team.

SIGN TO INDICATE HISTORY OF TANK ON UPATOI BRIDGE

Battle Scarred British Heavy to Be Marked with Facts of Record in Overseas Battle

At five-fifty on the morning of September 29, 1918, the Australians went over the top against the Hindenburg Line in the final Somme Offensive which crashed in the center of the German forces. With them went the Second American Corps, including the 301st Tank Battalion, attached for the assault to the 27th Division, the New York Guardsmen.

It was in the Le Catelet-Bony sector and the attack was to include the Belli-court Tunnel and the little town of Bony. Thorough reconnansance in advance by members of the 301st Tanks, prepared the way. Every American Tank had its tape out over the front line towards the Boches, and one man was killed and two wounded in the process of laying the tape.

The entire valley was covered with a dense mist. Smoke from the barrage made operations very difficult. Yet the Germans evidently expected trouble, for deed seemed to have expected Tanks, for they laid down a heavy artillery fire, and the Tanks had to start fighting even before they reached the terminals of their tapes.

Tank No. 9594, Mark V. Star, which had been drawn from the British the same month, was under the command of same month, was under the command of Second Lieutenant Claude E. Gass, who had been with the 65th Engineers and then with the Tanks at Camp Meade. It proceeded over a mile into the enemy fire and when almost astride the Hindenburg trench proper, it received a direct hit from enemy artillery and was disabled until after the fight it was repaired and returned to the rallying point

The mark of the hostile hit is still to be seen on the tank, which now stands on a concrete base on the high ground facing the entrance to the Fort Benning garrison at the Upatoi Bridge.

One of the last official acts of General

One of the last official acts of General Wells was to approve of the preparation and erection of a sign which indicates something of the historic and heroic record of this huge piece of machinery. The Utilities shops of the Quartermaster are now making a temporary sign with detailed information. Later, there will be prepared and placed on the tank itself a big copper tablet, similar to those which will adorn the Doughboy Stadium, with wording as follows:

On September 29, 1918 during the World War under the command of 2nd Lieut. Claude E. Gass, this Tank attacked the Hindenburg Line with

DISTANT RELATIVES

Nelson and Wilson were descussing relatives in general, and, having exhausted the anvil pounding of the close relations, started to hammer merrily at the more distant family connections. "Have you any distant relatives?"

Nelson was asked.

"Yes, I have two brothers."
"What! Do you call brothers distant relatives?"

"These brothers are rich, you know," sadly explained Nelson—Kansas City

Corporal Lemay and Pfc. White of this organization have returned from furlough and buckled down to soldiering again, and right here it might be said that they sure know how to sollier too.

Pfc. McKinish turned in his fur-lough today. Red says he had a good time and would like nothing better than a 9 months' furlough this year. Cpl. Caraway and Pvt. Johnson took

Pvt. Caldwell showed that he could use those long legs of his to advan-tage by winning the high hurdles in the Regimental meet last Wednesday.

Company "A" has been pulling demonstrations for the benefit of the school quite frequently lately.

The new radio has been working in fine shape and some of the boys, especially Runyan, have been missing sleep lately.

Company "B"

In the Field and Track meet held on Organization Day, March 3rd, 1926, Company "B," scored a total of 31 1-2 points, thereby giving the 1st Battalion a big margin over the 2nd Battalion, who only scored 49 points.

It is needless to mention the appreciation of the company for the mem ciation of the company for the members of the company who took part in the meet for their co-operation and spirit. Sgts. Butcher, Kern, Wilson, Cpls. Barr, Magagna, Duppass, Pvts. McCullough, Vanatta, E. S. Lookhart, J. B. Evans, Romploskie and Berthiaume all scored, which no doubt helped the 1st Battalion over the top. Set Look Mintre can be always soon.

Sgt. Leob Mintz can be always seen setching pretty damsels. Wonder sketching pretty damsels. Wonder what he would do if the Ziegfield Follies would come to Columbus.

It is rather a sad time for some of our sheiks or "Drug Store Cowboys" here of late. The reason for this is, their hair must be cut off. It is a shame though, for any one with hair like Corporal Rose, Corporal Milner and Private Pitre would naturally like to keep it:

Sergeant Ten Broeck returned from Florida and a sixty day furlough. He says that he didn't find the "Spring of Youth" but did find plenty of Nox-

We now have graduates from the Regimental Non-Com. School. And we sure are pleased, for one of them will sure make a good man to put charge of quarters.

"FOLLOW ME"

While the entire garrison was interested in the departure of General Wells, we were likely to have overlooked last week the large number of distinguished visitors in our midst.

Lieutenant-General Hermann Schirmer, of the German General Staff during the World War, came to pay his respects and to learn more about his specialty, the accompanying weapons which help the rifle-armed doughboy along.

Major-General Charles McK. Saltzman, Chief Signal Officer of the United States Army, came and went very informally and very modestly, and discussed with Lieut. Green the plans for the newtelephone central and signal detachment building.

Colonel Alfred T. Smith, of the General Staff Corps, arrived to deliver two confidential lectures on the subject of mobilization and national defense plans.

Colonel George L. Taylor, 365th Field training" at his own expense, to learn more of the co-operation between doughboys and gunners.

Dr. Peter A. Brannon, director of the Department of Archives and History of the tate of Alabama, came to discuss the historical points of interest connected with the reservation.

Major W. H. S. Allston, of the Rifle Brigade of the British Army, assistant military attache in Washington, arrived over the week end to orient himself on the instruction work being carried on.

Colonel Charles Baltzell, commanding the 22nd Infantry at Fort McPherson, Ga., was down for the final events for the departure of General Wells.

Reserve officers and guardsmen from practically every state of the Union arrived to take training, bearing the shoulder patches of famous combat divisions like the Yankee Division, the First Division, the Rainbow Division, and the 77th Division, ("New York's Own.")

Our recent commandant, General Wells ,has frequently said that Fort

Benning is the finest command in the army, offering in addition to actual duty with the tangible TO SELECTED SOLDIERS with troops and contact with the tangible facts of military service, splendid training, athletic, and recreational facilities,

The Cavalry School

Progress. professional advantages, and contacts with army people and movements and programs of broadening and lasting value.

If we recall the social events of the past week, the extra-mural athletic contests with the University of Georgia in boxing, with Albany "Y" in basketball, the intra-mural basketball series in full swing, the prospective baseball with the Quantico Marines, the enormous turnouts at the drag hunt on Sunday the 28th, the splendid polo that afternoon between the 29th and the Students, the organizational track and field meets in the Doughboy Stadium on Wednesday and Thursday mornings-the new War Department Theatre in full operation, we begin to realize how advantageously we are situated.

General Wells used to remark that no officer should want to leave Benning because he did not like it. It should only be left for cogent reasons, and then with regret, because from the standpoint of professional opportunity and personal entertainment, it has everything to offer that can be found anywhere in the army, and all of this beside the Upatoi.

"FOLLOW ME"

"While on a 10-day trip over Georgia, I had the opportunity of inspecting the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., and it is really remarkable, the splendid work that is being accomplished by the commanding officer, Gen. Wells, who seems to have the knack of making much out of very little, and from odds and ends is erecting, at little cost to our government, Artillery, arrived for "inactive duty tions."-William L. Grayson, Com-

During the interregnum, from Saturday to Tuesday, Mike Lavin says that Lieutenant Nichols was wandering around like a lost child looking for a new papa.

We are told that the 24th Infantry is tremendously interested in the exact amount of sizal hemp produced in Yucatan.

Many years ago, before most of us Many years ago, before most of us had even been to high school, a soldier of the army thought he had better leave animals alone. He wanted to get away from the horse-shoeing game. From 1903 to 1917, he was at it all the time, and everybody else's job looked better than his. During the World war he became a wagon master but went back to Riley and master, but went back to Riley and the horse-shoeing game afterwards.

As a result of his experience, and his accurate knowledge of the game, Sergeant John Thomsen now enjoys the distinction of being perhaps the most expert individual on horse-shoeing in the United States Army. When the American military poloists went to Miami for winter training, it was Thomsen they took along to look after the hoofs of their mounts. When they went to England to cross sticks with the best of the Britishers, it was Thomsen they took along.

Thomsen is now at Fort Benning, giving a comprehensive course to members of local organizations, as well as to four soldiers from outside posts, two from Screven and two from Mc-pherson. There is an hour of school a day, and the rest is demonstration and practical work. The students are divided into basic and advanced groups, and each has to complete a cergroups, and each has to complete a certain number of assignments in a satisfactory fashion. They not only learn about, but learn how to put on, the bar shoe, the toe and heel shoe, the plate and the bayel heel and the root plate, and the bevel heel, and the rest They learn to know a corn when they see it, and what to do with it. And so they will continue until the end of April, when Sergeant Thomsen must go back to Riley.

They are rated on their class work on their practical performances, on their ability to handle horses, and on their industry. Privates are there learning the game, and specially attached, though not enrolled, are stable sergeants and horseshoers, getting advanced dope and perfecting ing, at little cost to our government, splendid improvements. I was, of course, disappointed in finding that the 29th Infantry should be living in tents during the winter months on this reservation. The work that this school is doing is wonderful to contemplate and I wish that I could have stayed there longer and made more observations."—William L. Grayson, Commander, Department of Georgia, United Spanish War Veterans.

Last night, on taking the car back to the garage, I found that whoever it was that had been occupying it had left there, on the rear seat TWO LEFT HAND Gloves. Both of the gloves were of the same size: No. 8, make: KANT-RIP, color: Red-Russet-Sienna; and apparently had received about equal wear.

In lieu of all these, I am willing to will and bequeath these gloves to one of the U. S. Veteran's Hospitals, for the use of any disabled veterans who lost their right hands in line of duty.

GARDENING NOTES

ANNUAL FLOWERING PLANTS By Jack B. Ross Post Gardener.

The annual flowers of the seedmen are those which give their very best flowers in the year in which the seed are sown. True annuals are those plants which complete their entire life-cycle in one season. Some of the so-called annuals will continue to bloom, even second and third years, but the bloom is so poor and sparse after the first year, that it does not pay to fool with them. Some perennials may be treated as annuals by starting the seeds very early. Some examples of these varieties are: pansies, Chinese pinks, Antirinnium or Snap Dragon. Any annual will bloom in Georgia, particularly, if the seeds are sown when the weather becomes thoroughly settled and all danger of frost is over.

If flowers of any annuals are wanted extra early, seeds should be started un-der cover. A greenhouse is not necder cover. essary for this purpose, although better results are to be expected with such a building. The seed may be sown in boxes and these boxes then placed in a sheltered position on the warm side of a house. At night they should be covered with boards or matshould be brought inside. In this simple way seed may often be started from one to three weeks ahead of the time they may be sown out of doors, moreover, the plants are very apt to receive better care in these boxes and therefore will grow very rapid. Of course if very early sowings are de-sired, seed should be sown in the kitchen, hot-bed, cold frame or green house. (The Post Gardener is always house. (The Post Gardener is always glad to give what assistance he is able to give, to those who wish to start flowers extra early, by sowing them in the greenhouse for them.) In starting seeds ahead of time it should be remembered that to sow them in too deep a box is not at all advisable. Three inches of dirt is sufficient and in some cases when seed are sown extra early half this amount is

Some annuals do not bear transplanting well, such as poppies, lupinus, etc. It is best therefore to sow them where they are to remain. In their flowering positions out in the open garden or bed. A few annuals thrive in partial shade, but most of them prefer a sunny situation.

Any good garden soil is suitable for annuals. If not naturally fertile, and the soil around Fort Benning isn't, it should be made so by a liberal appli-cation of well rotted stable manure, Bone meal, leaf mould or some of the better commercial fertilizers. The spading should be at least one foot deep. This brings the sub-soil to the top. The upper six inches should be given second turning. This pulverizes the soil and makes it work better, also works the manure and sub-soil together. After the soil has been well leveled and "fined" it should then be firmed down well with a board. This prodown well with a board. down well with a board. This pro-motes capillarity, by which the surface of the soil is better supplied with moisture from below. Always mark and label the kinds, and positions of all seed sown.

If the flowers are to be grown about the edge of the lawn, make sure that the grass roots do not run under the flowers. Allowing the grass roots to do so robs the flowers of food and moisture. It is well to run a sharp spade along the edge of the bed every two or three weeks to cut any grass roots that may have run under the flowers. If beds are made in the turf be sure to make the bed three or four feet wide to prevent grass roots from running under it.

It is surprising how few of the un- 9th inaugurated a policy of monthly common or little known annuals really common or little known annuals really have great merit for general purposes. There is nothing yet to take the place of the old time groups, such as amaranths, zinnias, calendulas, balsm, annual pinks, candytufts, bachelor's buttons, wallflowers, larkspur, notunios tons, wallflowers, larkspur, petunias, snap dragon, lobelies, coreopsis or calopsis, California poppies, sweet sultans, phloxes, mignonettes, scabiosas, nasturitiums, marigolds, China aster, pansies, verbenas, stocks, alyssums, and other good plants.

A garden is not complete that does not contain some of the "everlasting" or "immortelles." These "paper flowers" are always interesting to children. They are not so desirable for the making of "dry boquets" as for their effects in the garden. A good variety of these "paper flowers" are: xeranthe-mums, helichrysums, globe amaranths, etc. Rhodanthes and aerocliniums are also good and reliable.

BRITISH OFFICER SPENT WEEK-END AT FORT BENNING

Military Attache Arrives for Brief Inspection and Survey of Infantry School

In the course of a tour of the service schools of the army, having come from Leavenworth, Sill, and Riley, there arrived at Fort Benning last week-end Major W. H. S. Allston, K. C. B., of the British Army.

This officer of the rifle brigade, now bearing the red tabs which indicate his connection with the staff, is the recently appointed assistant military attache at the British embassy in Washington. of Major and Mrs. Robert H. The initial luncheon, held atQuartermaster Detachment mess hall was a pronounced success and the chapter officials feel assured that the new policy will result in a large membership increase in the near future. Addresses at this first meeting were delivered by Colonel A. B. Warfield. School Quartermaster and President of the Chapter and Captain Edw. Turgeon, Q. M. C., Secretary Treasurer.

The menu supervised by Lt. Wm. A. Foelsing, commanding the Quartermaster Detachment, elicited most favorable comment, particularly on the part of the civilian members of the chapter who attended from Columbus. Georgia, in great numbers.

WASTED HIS LEAVE, LOST FOREIGN SERVICE CREDIT, BUT SAVED (?) SOME MONEY

An officer of the Army bumped a native while automobling just before his tour of duty was up in Honolulu. He handed the boy a greenback and forgot it.

Shortly after his return to the states he was served notice of suit and took leave to return to the Islands to defend. Lost the case and returned to the U.S. after appealing. Case again came up for trial. He again took leave, lost and appealed. Case came up third time. His leave credit was exhausted; was unable to get leave on half-pay and finally had to surrender credit for foreign service, applying for station in Honolulu to get back for trial.

He won the third trial, but lost:
(1) Leave credit; (2) foreign service
credit; (3) time; (4) trouble; (5)
attorneys fees; (6) expense.

He could have saved all of these by an investment in PERSONAL LIABILITY insurance.

TEAM SELECTED FOR AUGUSTA SHOW

-Personnel of the garrison, ladies and officers, who are to attend the Augusta Horse Show on March 23, 24, and 25, leaving the fort on Sunday, the 21st, and returning on the 26th, have been selected by Major H. J. M. Smith, the officer in charge.

Following are those chosen: Mrs. A. L. Singleton, Mrs. F. V. Schneider, Mrs. J. F. Landis, Mrs. R. H. Bishop, Mrs. E. N. Frakes, Mrs. C. B. Dunphy, Major H. J. M. Smith, Capt. G. A. Pollin, Capt. W. A. Burress, Capt. E. O. Sandlin, Capt. C. B. Dunphy and Capt. P. B. Rogers.

All government animals have been made available for the team, and the entrants are working out twice weekly, on Wednesday and Saturdays, on three horses apiece. Captain Rogers is charged with the selection of mounts, which is now narrowing down rather closely.

In previous horse shows in the vicinity, at the Chattahoochee Valley Exposition, at the Georgia State Fair in Savannah, and at the Atlanta Horse Show, the Infantry team has always made a very good showing, and present prospects and progress are very encouraging.

Under this column heading there will be published for some few weeks the text of various Infantry songs that have been written in an attempt to find words and music representative of the spirit of the doughboy. Contributions will be gratefully re-

"THE CALLER"

(With Apologies to Same, and Incidentally, E. A. Poe)

Oft when in an evening's lull while I'm studying dumb and dull, Over many a map and problem, the Gods to bore,

While I'm wondering, often blundering Suddenly there comes a stumbling, And someone lightly fumbling, fumbling at my door, 'Tis some caller, I mutter Ye Gods, how many more?

Ah, distinctly they were heard, and each separate muttered word,

Wafted through my tight closed door, And the low and constant murmuring of each caller's voice

Filled me—chilled me to chaotic thoughts of flight

For eagerly I wished them gone; vainly I had sought to con From my text some bit of lore And now some caller at my door.

But presently my heart grows stronger Waiting then no longer—open wide the door I fling

When with many a joke and jest In there steps the mirthful guests And the callers, never ceasing, still are coming-

Still are coming,
Just within my study door,
Open now, for ever more.

OUT OF SCHOOL

They do vigorous riding in the equitation classes at the Infantry School these days, hurdling, and going over very rough country. Tuesday afover very rough country. Tuesday afternoon, when the company officers class was going down some steep slides, one of the mounts fell and hurled his rider to the ground. CONFIDENTIAL LECTURES ON WAR MOBILIZATION

Colonel Alfred T. Smith, of the general staff corps, now on staff duty with troops at the headquarters of the third corps area in Baltimore, was last week at the Infantry school delivering special confidential lectures on mobilization and war plans. These plans were originally drawn up in 1923 in conformity with the provisions of the national defense act of 1920, revised in accordance with the successive diminutions in the size of the army, tested in the defense tests of 1924 1925, and again revised to conform to the facts brought out in those tests. The war department theatre was crowded on the occasions of his lectures, which were packed with essential facts and definite information on this very important subject.

During his stay here, Colonel and Mrs. Smith were the guests of Colonel and Mrs. Cocheu at the local fort, and attended the exceptional round of social events given in honor of General Wells and others given especially in their honor by various garrison personnel.

INCOME TAX

Recent last minute legislation in Washington alters the income tax sit-uation so as to increase the exemp-tions formerly enjoyed by those required to manipulate adding machines before March 15th.

Exemptions for single men are increased to $2,000.

Exemptions for married men are increased to $3,500, with additional exemptions of $400 for each unmarried dependent child under eighteen years of age.

If your gross income is over $4,000 a return must be submitted even though deductions and exemptions are sufficient to prevent the necessity of paving a tax.

Commutation of quarters, and rental value of quarters in kind will not have to be taken up on the returns will not For enlisted men receiving commuta-tion of rations, such money commutation is not classed as income and need not be taken up.

MORE DRY FEET IN GARRISON

It was after four o'clock, but the little gang of workmen kept working right on. They poured the last concrete. They scraped and smoothed it over. They lined it crosswise, and the final strip of fifty feet was finished.

A concrete sidewalk now reaches from headquarters to Finnegan street past Colonel Gowen's quarters, where Colonel Kerth used to live, toward the Doughboy Stadium, and then you duck under the stadium arches onto dry ground, and at the fire station the walk begins again and—except for the roadways-reaches uninterruptedly to within a stone's throw of the new cuartel section of the regimental bar racks.

DAISY ASHFORD'S YOUNGER BROTHER

By I. M. Preshate. New York: Double Cross and Company. 1926 Once upon a time, this book tells us, there was a small boy going to school. He was a rather old young boy, and much work had made him weary. Classes were not always held in the tiny low-ceilinged, stove-heated buildings, but sometimes out of doors, and once the warm Southern sun was so kind and mild that he lay down and blithely went to

There was a toy railway, with cars and a real steam engine, but much smaller in size than those that rush Florida-wards on the Central of Georgia. He didn't like the present Santa Claus had given him, for there wasn't any real glass in the sides of the cars and the breeze and the cinders used to blow in and cause his eyes to blink and make him sleepy. So, one day, when he had been made monitor and told by the teacher to see that all bad boys came to class on time, he checked them over and found them all present. But he didn't believe in the game called "follow me" (or "tag" as some folks call it), and thought his classmates all big enough to take care of themselves. So he let them go to the train, and he went home.

He was a nice boy, but he did like to play hooky. He often got up early in the morning and instead of taking the train for the nine mile ride to the school, he wandered down the broad Main St. of he wandered down the broad Main St. of his little village and spent the forenoon looking in shop windows to see what Santa Claus might bring him next year. In his family was a girl about the same age as himself, not quite as old perhaps, but it is certain she was not his sister. I have heard her name was Daisy Ashford, but I think not. She came down the street and saw him there, brought him home and fed him his lunch and told him to hurry right off to school—he could take one of the big blue busses very easily. But the careless chap wasn't a bit afraid of the truant officers, and a little later she found him again walking about the streets of the village. For school, he was not very keen, but he did like the kindergarten, that place where you have little blue strips of paper which are so friendly and French and all the way through are so pretty and blue, however much you move them around, and the little red strips of paper which are so dangerous and Germanic and all the way through, whenever you see them, are always red and always the same. For several minutes he used to talk to his classmates about the red strips of paper and the blue strips of paper, and about the blue strips of paper and the red strips of paper, and about nothing else, and he and they had such fun all the while.

But he was a very careless, little boy, and used to worry his nurse-maid—for it seems she must have been either a nurse-maid or a fairy godmother, and not a sister at all—because he didn't care whether school kept or not.

MIND YOUR P's AND Q's

A company officer was shifted from Captain Rogers' platoon in equitation, where he might get instruction more suitable to his lesser experience and ability. But the student officer thought the riding in Major Smith's platoon was quite advanced, and said: "This isn't the bolo squad; it seems to be the polo squad."

FIRST DIVISION VETERANS GROUP HAVE BIG DINNER

All Organizations of Garrison Contri-bute to Celebration Some Officers Formerly with the First

On the records of the First Division, there stand the names of places France where that unit earned glory for itself: Lorraine, Picardy, Cantigny, Montdidier, Soissons, St. Mihiel, Montfaucon, Germont, Cunel, Buzancy, Beaumont and Sedan. This was the outfit of which General Pershing said that its spirit was never broken by hardship or casualty, by battle or depression.

From almost every unit of the garrison of Fort Benning, there came of-ficers last Saturday evening to join together in dinner at the Ralston and renew old memories at the same moment as the First Division men in New York were holding their great annual reunion. Student officers were there, from the Advanced Class, from the Company Officers Class, and from the Guard and Reserve Class. Members of the instructional staff of the Academic Department were there, and officers from the 29th and 24th Infantry regiments. The Engineers, the Tanks, the 83rd Field Artillery, the Quartermaster Corps, and the Medical Corps were represented.

In the group were persons whose service with the Division overlapped so as to touch upon every bit of over-seas experience from the initial baptism of fire to the stay in Germany. With the others there sat Lieutenants William Ritter and Garry M. Gredinge, O. R. C., only recently assigned to that historic outfit in accordance with the policy of using reserve officers to fill the gap between peace strength and war strength of our fighting troops.

From Washington, through the air sped a radiogram from General ing, saying: "My greetings and Pershing, saying: "My greetings and best wishes and continued congratulations to all who had the fortune to serve with that wonderful division." From the Chief of Staff's desk, Major-General John L. Hines sent the mes-sage: "Please express to the officers sage: Please express to the officers who served with the First Division my cordial greetings and good wishes on the occasion of their reunion. I share with them a warm feeling of share with them a warm feeling of justifiable pride in the splendid achievements of that Division on World War battlefields."

From Governor's Island, in New York harbor, Major-General C. P. Sum New merall radiogrammed:

"Please express to our comrades of the First, my heartfelt greetings on this occasion of your annual dinner. The bonds of brotherhood between us grow stronger with the passing years. May the spirit of the First Division strengthen us in the future as it did in the days of battle. Let us not forget our gratitude to our wounded and our consecrated task of honoring the memory of our dead."

Brigadier General Frank Parker was also heard from, as follows:

"Gratitude and faithful memory to We shall miss you tonight, but we shall all be together in spirit and thought as we always have been and always will be." the veterans of the First at Benning.

FORT BENNING CHILDREN'S SCHOOL COMPLETES PLAYGROUND

Where virgin forests and plains once held sway, great cities now thrust upward their massive structured and concrete. Yet the tures of steel and concrete. Yet the erection of any one of these has been accomplished with no more enthusiasm than has marked the erection of the new Children's School playground.

Situated on the south side of the school area on the ground formerly occupied by the Photographic shop of the Department of Experiment it say the Department of Experiment, it ers nearly 600 square yards and fills a long felt want. For the first time in the history of the school, the children have a safe place to play during their recess and noon periods.

The equipment was made and donated by the Ordnance personnel through the untiring efforts of Capt. Osborn. Some of the material was furnished by the Quartermaster Corps and some by Capt. Sproule and Lieut. Peach of the Recreation Center construction

The equipment installed and in use consists of sand boxes, swings, see-saws and circular swing. To complete the playground the Fort Benning Women's Club has donated funds for the purchase of two steel slides which should be in place by the 1st of April. AMATEUR ARTISTS DEFEAT GEORGIANS IN SQUARED CIRCLE

Infantry School Boxing Team Trys Intercollegiate Rules Successfully

Freshman football star at the University of Georgia, young Haley stepped into the ring to face the long and strong Taylor of the infantry school. Inside of the first thirty seconds, Taylor was on the floor for the second time, and this time for the count of ten, thus making the only actual knockout of Saturday's boxing card at Fort Benning when the infantry school met and defeated University of Georgia boxers four bouts to

With the exception of a hard and fast go between Hooks and Pinero, which the former won on a judges' decision, it was the only bout the visitors won. The other knockout was a technical one, Referee Lieutenant Payne having stopped the lightweight set to save Manning from being too inordinately pummelled by the redoubtable Cucchi, champion of the 29th infantry in that class. But though beaten, the Georgians were game and fast fighters. They stood toe to toe with the doughboys and handed back blow for blow, even when

The evening's entertainment opened with the bantams, Jervason of the service company and Humphries of Georgia, the latter a little lanky and awkward, but evidently a keen lover of the game, for he took many a hard blow, and when most closely pressed, still hit back, hit back after he had been knocked down, hit back when he saw his blows landing lightly and unnoticed, and hit back however much Jervason got under his guard.

In the featherweight class, the freshman Freeman faced Elsmore, a stocky little fellow who was runner up to Red Keenan in the 29th infantry champion-Keenan in the 29th infantry champion-ship bouts. Both fighters were light on their feet and danced so freely that the crowd applauded the "Charleston" as they were doing it. Yet they did much more than merely dance. In the second round Elsmore landed two hard hooks with left and right, got Free-man shaky, and then drove him all over the ring, until the latter was leaning on the ring, until the latter was leaning on him and holding at every opportunity, but striking out whenever he thought a chance offered. The experience and power of Elsmore were too much for him, however, and the judges decided the bout in favor of the doughboy.

In the lightweight class, Manning of the gridiron started off as if he were go-ing to give a lot of trouble to Cucchi, of the service company, and regimental champion. Their first round was mark-ed by fast hitting and fast dodging, with the points about equal until near the end Cucchi jammed several across in rapid succession. In the third round, Cucchi started hard and strong and was so obviously merely unnecessarily punish-ing his opponent that the referee stopped the fight.

Samlavich, star quarterback on the brilliant artillery football team, wore the infantry school colors in the welter-weight class, and came on strong and hard against a somewhat larger looming opponent, a lad by the name of Carter from Columbus. Samlayich forced the fight most of the time and took several rocking blows on the head one after the other without being deterred from his advances. He was a little wild in his own blows, and was severely punished at times, but fought back vigorously enough to get a draw from the judges at the of the third scheduled round referee could not choose between them. and ordered another round, which likewise ended in a draw.

Another gunner gridster carried the infantry school colors in the middleinfantry school colors in the middle-weight bout, Lapine, captain of the artillery football team, and the sergeant from Northhamption, Massachusetts, and president's cup tackle, showed himself the match of Johnson, star quarter of the Georgia freshman football team. A right cross knocked him down in the first round, but he held his balance steadily in front of the more rapidly moving Georgian, and in the second round drove in with a will and hit to the head with speed and power. In the third round, Lapine got an early advantage with a couple of rocking blows, and maintained his supremacy all the way from then on, to win the round and the bout.

The heavyweight battle was a good ne. Pinero of "E" company of the 29th, regimental champion, was matched with Hooks, freshman football halfback, and former star of the Americus High school, well known to the Blue Devils of Columbus, for such they used to be called in those days. They were a little slow in getting started. Each seemed to be measuring the other's style, but their occasional exchange of wallops made one wonder how such big men could hit so fast. Pinero took the initiative, but did not always cover properly and Hooks landed a larger number of blows, by virtue of sudden and vigorous counter-at-tacks, by which he earned the judges' decision.

The heavyweight battle, between Taylor and the husky Haley, with the punch like a pile-driver, has already been de-scribed. It was short, and the feature of it and of the evening was the power behind the few blows Haley got over in the first lightning-like exchanges of the first thirty seconds. By them he knocked Taylor off his feet backward, and then knocked him down to stay for the tenth sweep of the referee's arm.

Between the middleweight and lightheavy bouts, Red Keenan and Chief Otalvaro took the squared circle for their own. They had volunteered to an exhibition, the same number of rounds and length of rounds as the regular bouts of the evening. Captain Zellars, athletic manager, had said he could not pay them, and that he had nothing to offer. They said they'd put on a show for the fun of the thing for the everfor the fun of the thing, for the exercise, and their love of the game. For three rounds they hit and clinched, and hit like steam-riveting machines in the clinches, and stepped free each time with smiles on their faces, and parted with the best of good nature, earning the hearty applause of the crowd.

BENNING LOSES PREMIER GRIDDER TO PHILIPPINES

Lieutenant Claude M. McQuarrie Due to Leave Soon for Foreign Service

"Come in and look over our football equipment," said the head of the Special Order Department of the Post Exchange to "Jock" McQuarrie one morning.

to "Jock" McQuarrie one morning.
"No use," replied the star of Benning gridiron battles, "I'm going to the Philippine."

Orders have not yet been issued from Washington, but it is settled that Lieut. Claude M. McQuarrie, the Montana man-mountain, is due for foreign service and will be sent to the Islands.

The Infantry School loses it best veteran athlete, who has been identified with gridiron and basketball contests at the junction of the Upatoi with the Chattahoochee ever since the first big classes came to the Bennnig plain. Back in 1920, McQuarrie came down from West Point to take the basic course, and immediately got into football togs and was the mainstay of the backfield. When Curry hit the line, and Gee and Twining stopped the rushes of Auburn backs around the end, and a team of old timers fought in vain against the best team that Auburn ever had, Shirley, Shirling, and the rest, it was McQuarrie's remarkable punting that sent the ball out of danger time and again.

He played football in the days when temporary stands were at the old Driving Park and Florida and Dahlonega were early opponents. He played basketball in the elongated shed attached to the old theatre building. He was the brilliant center of Major McDermott's first firs fighting five.

For a time he went away on R. O. T. C. duty, and there coached the Citadel eleven. But back to Benning he came and this season played the most brilliant game of his career. As a West Pointer he made All-American full back in 1919, but his performances there could not match his work this season.

Not only in individual ability, but also

Not only in individual ability, but also as the brains of the team McQuarrie has been a valuable asset to Benning gridirons. In spite of pre-season dope which rated the heavy I. S. D. and the all-star Tankers as favorites in the intra-mural contests last January, it was McQuarrie's team, captained by Kjelstrom which for the third successive time won the garrison championship.

As a basketball man, McQuarrie has been a tower of strength. As back guard, filling the gap left when McKenna was compelled to withdraw from the court, McQuarrie shone. Twice in the last few seconds of play, against Charlotte "Y" and against the flashy Right Way Five of Macon, it was McQuarrie who lifted the basketball into the air and through the hoop for the counts that meant a win for the Infantry.

His fine sportsmanship and his close knowledge of sport have made his name known throughout the South. Far away in the sunny tropical Philippines, he may know that citizens and soldiers remember him as one who has contributed in extremely large measure to the building up of Infantry football supremacy, and of the Infantry spirit. A clean player, and a hard player, who always enjoys the game, McQuarrie used his head as well as his strength, and set a splendid example to all who have ever donned court or grid shoes with him. "Kelly" Kjelstrom is his enlisted protoptype, and it is to be doubted if two finer players ever crossed the Upatoi Bridge.

When McQuarrie faced the attack of

DOUGHBOYS PREPARE HOT RECEPTION FOR VISITING MARINES

Rabbit Fountain's Crew All Primed and Cocked For Series With Quantico Leathernecks.

When officials of the Quantico Marines asked whether to bring an enlisted or an all-ranks team to Benning for the three game series that begins tomorrow on Gowdy Field, Zipper Jake wired: "Bring the best you've get. Bring your band, Sergeant Jiggs and even Goettge." And judging from the form being displayed by Rabbit Fountain's big squad of ball tossers, the visiting leathernecks will have to be good to win.

The second week of outdoor practice finds the Infantry team shaping up as one of the best in several years. Many candidates for each position has given the whole gang a lot of pep, and the spirit of energy and dash displayed every afternoon on Gowdy Field is impressive. Pitchers warm up as if for a World Series game. Infielders of after elusive grounders and sizzling liners with the effort of real competition. Outfielders rush to the far limits of the pastures to drag down the skyscraping fungoes. Over all sounds the crash of bat socking the old apple as batter after batter tries to hit it a mile. Coach Fountain simles contentedly and the Zipper says: "Lots of steam. We'll rock 'em and sock 'em."

Tuesday afternoon, following a long session of batting practice, two teams were formed and the first game of the season—a four-inning affair— was on. Team No. 1 was composed of Dunlop, 1b; Cummins, 2b; Durban, ss; Buck. 3b; Kjelstrom, If; Davis, cf; and Douglas, rf; with McNeill behind the bat. On team No. 2 were Cherry, 1b; Meehan, 2b; Mallory, ss; Heckert, 3b; Olmstead, If; Farrell, cf; and Christianbery, rf., with Meinzen wearing the mask and pads. Rathel hurled the first inning for both sides; Carnes, portside star of the 2nd Battalion, worked the next two; and Schulte, standby of the 83rd, finished on the mound. No official score was kept, but notable hitting was done by Heckert, Buck and Douglas.

ert, Buck and Douglas.

After the game an infield made up of Dunlop at first, Cummins at second, Durban at short and Heckert on third went through a long fielding drill, and a snappy one it was. Slow rollers were gobbled up and heaved to first with rifle-like accuracy. Hot bounders were smothered and tossed to the waiting Dunlop. Rapid two-plv killings were demonstrated. Meanwhile the outfielders shagged fungoes and pitchers who had not participated in the game—notably Grady Tolle, of last year's Blue team; "High" Davis; and Cammeron, promising twirler from the 7th the Marines in the President's Cup game in Washington last November, a photographer snapped a picture of an Infantry attack, where McQuarrie was driving through tackle as interference McQuarrie's face was happily toward the camera, and the shutter clicked just as he drove his left shoulder into the opponent ahead of him. The smile on his face is typical of his spirit, enjoying the game, playing it hard and without animus, and doing his job in perfect style—as he always has, whether punting long spirals down the field, carrying the ball through the melee, or making a way for a team mate to gain the yardage and score the touchdowns for which the Four Touchdown Doughboys were noted.

Though the 29th may turn out the regiment with band and all to attract attention for its track and field meet, though Private Wiggins of the narrow gauge line may win his race with death, the 15th Tank take the palm. They stage a track and field meet in silence and unadvertised. Last week, they marched into the Doughboy Stadium and staged their own track and field meet without letting the garrison at large know anything about it, until afterwards.

It was a pity, for Sweeney put on a splendid performance. That same speed that enabled him to circle left end and count a dangerous touchdown, put him in front in four races. The first of our list of Satellites finished in front in the 100, 220, 440, and the 880, besides lifting himself over the bar for a second place in the pole vault. His effort and that of his teammates put Headquarters company out in front with 52 points, enough to win the meet, for "B" Company got 38 points, "A" Company 12 1-2 points and "C" Company 12 1-2 points

BIG DEMONSTRATION BRINGS HUGE CROWDS ONTO BOUTON HILL

Defensive Operation Staged for Student Officers Largely Attended Last Saturday

From Bouton Hill to Rivet Ridge ran the general defensive line. On the left, dug into fox holes to form a strong point, lay the doughboys of Company "E" of the 29th Infantry, commanded by Lieutenant Edwin D. McCoy, veteran of the 90th Division overseas. On the right, cresting Rivet Ridge, lay Company "G" under Captain William G. Burt, who commanded a U. S. air detachment with French aviation. At 9:30 last Saturday morning, the crowd of students and military and civilian spectators near the monument on the hill named in honor of Major A. E. Bouton, killed at Soissons in 1918, heard firing to the front, and saw squads in observation on Smith and Elliott Hills withdraw to the respective front line companies. The enemy was coming on in force, the white very light signalled.

STUDENT OFFICERS "FOREIGN LEGION" IN HOWITZER WORK

Capt. Leiber Forms Cosmopolitan Group Representing All Guests From Other Forces

It has been told how, when student officers seemed not to understand various precautionary instructions with regard to the weapons they were handling, Captain Paul E. Leiber, Instructor in the Weapons Section, got a group of officers of linguistic ability, and had the "Don't's" explained to each in English, French, German, Cach, and Spanish. The class thought it funny, and paid attention.

But the class asked the Captain to for a real Foreign Legion, so he made up a gun crew of officers of branches other than Infantry, which represents the extensiveness of the training being given at the School, and the variety of places to which it goes. But two hundred and twenty-five pounds must be as hard to carry around on two army shoes as they are to send under the surface diving for pearls. So his next enlistment, beginning August 25, 1924, was in the 15th Tank Battalion, where he had a machine to bear him here and there, almost as big as he is

Seven years and twenty-eight days of service, and "Big Bertha" becomes a First Sergeant. In a shorter time than that he made a reputation on the gridiron. His playing on the Big Blue Tide when they beat the Navy 12-6 for the President's Cup in 1924, was commented upon as one of the outstanding features of the game outstanding features of the game. When he came back to the bench at the end of the Marine-Infantry game in Griffith Stadium last November, he received an ovation.

Big he is, but many a safety man staying back to receive a punt has been surprised to find none other than "Big Bertha" pounding down his way, sometimes even ahead of the fleet-footed ends. His momentum has been of use on the Four Touchdown Doughboys, and momentum, you recall, means weight multiplied by speed.

QUARTERS SITUATION NOW FULLY EXPLAINED UNDER NEW PROGRAMME

(Continued from Page 1.) be made available to swell the $725,000 in prospect cannot definitely be said. At any rate the prospects are good for further construction after the first of the new fiscal year, that is after July first

Following is an extract from the Annual Report of the Secretary of War for 1924, which will explain the fundamen-tal attitude of the War Department and the efforts of high army officials for progress in improving housing condi-

"40,000 members of the Army are now under unsuitable shelter. Some of them have been under canvas, summer and winter, for many years. Some of them are under temporary roofs and within flimsy wooden walls built during the war and for temporary use only. A decent housing arrangement should be made for the army. The quarters of the troops should be built so as best to take advantage of all existing structures and locations still of use. They should be built so as to conform to the present tactical organization of our forces, and located so as to fit as closely as possible to the distribution of troops required by the fundamental training program and defense plans of the nation. They can not all be built now, although they are needed now. But they can be built on a consistent plan of construction extending over several years, so as to spread the burden of expense as thinly as possible and to release for sale and profit to the Government the posts no longer required. We have already disposed of a large number of posts. We have transferred properties to the value of about $52,000,000 to other departments of the government. We have sold properties to the value of about $30,the 000,000, and the money turned in to the Treasury. money The Army should be credited, in some reasonable manner, with these sums and permitted to make expenditures gradually so as to put itself on a reasonable basis in to put itself on a reasonable basis in regard to the housing problem. I would not go so far as to ask for appropriations equivalent dollar for dollar with the amounts realized form abandoned properties. But I do feel that those proceeds at least entitle the War Department to some recognition and consideration. If we take definite steps, we can proceed toward adequate shelter, taking care of the most urgent difficulties and the most critical localities first. I submit to your most earnest consideration the entire problem of housing our troops, which is now one of the most embarrassing questions confronting the Army."

"In working out the housing program it has been necessary to consider the cost and the need for economy, and also the tactical requirements, so that con-trol and administration might be as simple as possible and conform to the tactical mission of the Army. The cuartel or quadrangular system of barrack construction has been decided upon by the War Department, as it has been esti-mated that this form of construction will cost $5.30 per man per year less than detached troop, company and battery bar-racks heretofore constructed at military posts. The distribution of shelter has been carefully studied so as to arrive at a working basis which will retain as much of the existing property as is consistent with the training duties of the Regular Army in connection with the National Guard, Organized Reserve, and training-camp projects. The only project involving permanent construction of any magnitude authorized during the past fiscal year was the continuation of construction work at Fort Benning, Ga., at which place plans and specifications were prepared and contracts let at the beginning of the year for 14 additional sets of officers' quarters and a hospital group consisting of a hospital building with a separate kitchen and mess and 29TH INFANTRY SHOW boiler house, capable of furnishing ac-commodations for 102 patients. It is expected that from time to time additional wards will be added which will increase the patient accommodations. The total cost of the two projects above mentioned will be approximately $400,000. There has also been made available available $385,000 for the beginning of the construction of a cuartel barracks to house one regiment of infantry. Other plans have been held in abeyance pending the presentation of the entire problem to Congress, when it is hoped a permanent working basis will be arrived at to insure needed construction on a continuing program which will spread the expense over a considerable period of time and accomplish the needed improvements in an economical manner both as to funds and as to deterioration of existing shel-

HUNTERS AND HOUNDS GO A-GALLOPING OUT FIRST DIVISION ROAD

Blues.
Eastwards towards the mounting sun the hounds led the hunters from the Polo Club last Sunday morning, generally in the areas adjoining the First Division Road, until after an hour and a half of riding the riders returned for the hunt breakfast at the Polo Club, where Captain Huber had a hot blaze in the fireplace and a hot meal steaming on the tables. The crispness of the air and the glow of exercise on the cheeks were con-ducive to an entertaining morning in the saddle and at the club.
