At noon comes the hour for lunch, however, it is a common sight to see most of the students sneaking into their respective kitchens to see how the food they prepared "came out." They view the results of their labor with fear and doubt and then taste it. What a relief! It is surprising how much better things taste when you are the cook in question. Then the students go home to lunch with much bragging and pride and attempt to show friend wife how cooking really should be done. (Incidentally, the wives don't seem to take such instruction in the proper spirit—if they laugh at you, you're lucky, if they don't, look out!)

At 1:15 P. M. the students reassemble in the lecture hall where demonstrations of various ways of preparing and cooking food are carried out, first by the instructor and then by the class. Much tasting and wise nodding of heads go on at this time.

The day invariably closes with a brief examination, which Captain O'Connel so naively describes as "Five very simple, easy, little questions." For some reason the class does not give the same interpretation to the words, for they have yet to find anything "very simple" or "easy" or "little" about, around or in these questions. However, after much scratching of heads and pencils, the answers, more or less correctly written, are handed in and the day is over.

Many and varied are the questions

BIG IMPROVEMENTS IN MAIN THEATRE

Many of the patrons attending shows at the Main Theatre asks "Why all the scaffolding?—What are they doing?" The loyal patrons, as well as the other public spirited citizens of this Post, are entitled to know what's doing in their chief amusement resort.

A ceiling of celotex is being installed in the first section in front of the proscenium arch, also, over the lobby. Celotex is a water-proof, fire-proof substance. It is made from sugar cane which has been treated and firmly pressed together. The main object in using it is because of its exceedingly light weight, and the fact that it has a tendency to reduce reverberation of sound. The latter, of course, being its most important use, which it is contemplated will greatly aid acoustics. This work is being done by Mr. E. E. Huie, under the supervision of Captain William F. Heavy and Sergeant Patrick Mallory, of the 7th Engineers.

Another great improvement is under way. The entire interior of the theatre is being decorated. It is contemplated that this decoration will excell any public building on the post. The colors used are similar to those of some of the finest theatres in the country. The object being to make patrons feel a true theatre atmosphere. It is believed better at this time to refrain from describing these decorations so that Benningites will be treated to pleasant surprises as the work progresses. We might add here that the contemplated scheme is the result of a study of theatres in Washington, New York and At-

The Fort Benning chapter of the Sojourners Club held its annual election of officers last Monday evening at the monthly meeting held at the Polo Club.

The following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, Captain E. M. Steward; Vice-President, Capt. L. R. Boyd and Capt. E. S. Barker; Secretary, Capt. F. E. Ambrose; Treasurer, Capt. W. T. Scott; Trustees, Maj. H. A. Bootz, Maj. E. E. Lewis, Maj. D. H. Torrey, Capt. C. L. Bolte and Master-Sgt. George R. Still.

The entertainment feature of the evening was in charge of Major Green, who held a guessing contest based on the states of the union and the capitol cities. Prizes were awarded to the following officers: First, Capt. W. G. Murphy; second, Lieut. H. Brandhorst; third, Capt. E. M. Steward.

WINTER ELIMINATION BOUTS WILL BE HELD ON FEBRUARY 6

(By R. E. Feree)

After a lean January, during which month the mit slingers were a silent crew, the month of February promises enough glove slinging to satisfy any and all fight bugs. The first month of the present year of grace, owing to the recent order prohibiting large assemblies to gather, was slim indeed to the pocketbooks of the fighting gentry. With the exception of Jacksonville and Miami there was not a boxing club south of Charlotte that dared to open its doors to the boxing public. Promoters reasoned that the influenza scare would keep the luke warm devotees at home. "As the will of man is by his reason swayed" few people will tempt fate or purse when everything points to a loss. January had all the earmarks of adversity hanging on for dear life.

With the last of the Xmas bill paid, February looks as if it will be the banner fight month of the entire year. First, the big fights get under way again on Tuesday, the 5th. Just who will be the shining light in the windup is the question that is still worrying the Post promoter. Possibilities are Ptomey and Johnny Walker, the latter from the 6th Cavalry, Fort Oglethorpe. Walker Smith and Young Jack Dempsey of Atlanta; another which has had a bit of advance notice in the Columbus press is a possible return fight between Eddie Burl and Red Keenan. Gunner De-Pratt, the hard hitting machine gunner, will not be ready by the 5th, owing to an injured knee, the result of the famous Tank-2nd Battalion classic football game held in December. The big boy's hands are again in good shape but his housemaid's knee is slow to respond to treatment. Just as soon as he rounds to he will be asked to meet Glenn Chancey, Mike Firpo, Battling Finch and his nemesis Maxie Peltz.

On February 6th, the night following the big fight, the amateurs will get under way for their winter elimination tournament. Here is the chance many of the embryo pugs have been awaiting. Scores of youngsters have requested a chance this past year to appear in the professional bouts. To take care of them all would have been quite a task with but two fight nights a month. One feature that kept so many out was the desire to develop those who had shown promise in the past two years. It is true the fans want new faces but it follows that if the stars of the years to come are to be developed then the opportunity must be given them now.

Tentative plans call for amateur bouts to be held on every Wednesday night during the month of February. Battalion boxing teams are in the process of formation calling for all weights from the bantam to the heavyweight. A silver trophy will be awarded to the unit scoring the most points during the tournament; in addition gold medals will be given to the winners of the various classes and a silver medal to the runners-up in each division. In this con-

The Dramatic Club

The Author

In the drab current of contemporary American Letters, there are a few literary figures which emerge like gigantic, lonely rocks—hard, defiant, solitary—exclusive—. Edna St. Vincent Millay in Poetry, Dreiser in Zolaesque realism, at once depressing and stimulating, Eugene O'Neill in Drama, as an echo of his time and manners.

There is something elusive—ecrie in this man's work that reminds one of Barrie and, yet, etched against a background of relentless, observative realism which is like the heritage of Ibsen.

Like Wilde or Maupassant or Shaw, some think that he is a belated representative of fin-de-siecle Decadence. Others hail him as the All-American genius, who will defend American letters against Old-World arrogance. The artistic, emotional growth of this distinguished writer is not easily plotted as a steady curve—he is erratic, fitful, but his power of artistry is superb, in every medium, and his dramatic workmanship equal to the best in contemporary Literature.

O'Neill has a distinctive dramatic manner—the craftsmanship of dramatic writing usually requires a time-consuming—though necessary—introduction; O'Neill has the gift of opening his Scenes almost—explosively—he flings his play into his Audience.

The Play

"ILE"—a play by Eugene O'Neill.—This powerful playlet is really an episode of a brief hour—a dramatic, sudden incident aboard an ice-bound Whaler, the "Atlantic Queen."

There is an atmosphere of chill depression of solitude, of abandonment about this silent ship—life is hushed in the vast silence of Ice and gray wintry skies. For two years, the ship has been cruising in those bleak Northern waters. For a year, she has been ice-bound. Bad luck pursued the crew; they have failed to get whales and the precious sperm-oil, the "ile" of the Play! The Crew is becoming restless, weary—raw nerves are on edge, but they are driven by the iron hand of a relentless Captain. This remarkable figure—sinister, yet simple, strong, dominates the Play—like a threatening shadow.

The quest for "ile" has become an obsession with him; for years he has maintained the reputation of never returning with an empty ship. In his simple, rugged soul, there is a fierce pride in this record—and a demoniacal determination, to which he will sacrifice everything.

His wife is on board; she has imagined the Sea as a fresh, romantic adventure and has dropped instead into a brutal and forbidding setting. Sensitive—her nerves have reached the breaking point in her dreadful surroundings.

It isn't good form to tell an ending! The Play is strong, direct, masculine—etched clearly against the gray of the Arctic with the simple. Heavy strokes of a wood-cut.

The Players

The Play is taking shape rapidly under the deft, plastic direction of Major Truman Smith. He has assembled a clever cast: Captain Keeney, the master of the Whaler, is played by Captain P. E. Peabody. This is positively a stellar role! I have dropped in at rehearsals and Capt. Peabody's performance is already remarkable. Mrs. Keeney, the Captains wife has been assigned to Mme. R. H. Chance; this is a delicate and difficult characterization. The Mate, in the stage directions described as "a rangy six-footer with a lean weather-beaten face"—is ably represented by Captain P. B. Rogers. Major P. Stivers will play the Steward—an old derelict. Ben, the Cabin-boy will be covered by Lieut. H. Grubbs. Joe, the Harpooner, and spokesman of the mutinous crew, will be played by Capt. A. R. MacKechnie. The Crew will be outlined by Capt. R. A. McClure, Capt. R. H. Chance and Capt. P. R. Good. Mme. T. Smith will assist in prompting. Capt. R. Hall will do the Sets and Scenery.

The Time

The play will be presented at the 3rd Series of the Dramatic Club, in the evening of February 8th, at the Main Theatre, at 8:30 P. M.—(W).

lanta. It is being supervised by Mr. W. G. Shine, who is an expert theatre decorator. Assisting him are a crew of the following qualified painters selected from personnel of Fort Benning: Privates Russell Cruise, James Fischer, Dewey Thompson, Hugh Guffie, James Davis and Lester Gordon. These men have already proven their worth. They are doing excellent, careful work, and are entitled to credit for the conscientious manner in which they are "putting out."

Still another pleasant and by all means most important surprise awaits our patrons. It is something which will add materially to their pleasure while watching shows. It will even add to the comfort of those who feign to spend their hard earned money to come to the theatre and enjoy a couple hours uninterrupted siesta. If you cannot guess what this most worthy improvement is, ask some of the theatre personnel, and maybe they won't tell you. This affords good meat for a guessing contest. All we can say now is that you had better come to the theatre every night and watch the improvments progress.

"STRANGE CASE OF CAPTAIN RAMPER," a Defu production staged in Europe, containing an entire foreign cast. This timely story concerns an aviator-explorer who set out for the north pole, only to have his plane crash amid the wastes of Artic ice. His mechanic dead, he lived alone with only the polar bears to remind him that there were other living things in the world. After fifteen years he was found by whalers and mistaken for a strange Arctic ape man, was taken back to Europe and sold to a circus as a side show curiosity. A great scientist restores his mind and he emerges as the lost aviator, Ramper. He sees modern civilization around him with new eyes—its misery, cruelty and disgusting humans. This is considered one of the most weird and fascinating of films coming out of Germany.

"Cross Country Run." Fables.

SATURDAY, JAN. 26

"KID COWBOY," starring Tom Mix in seven reels of rippin', roarin', rootin', tootin', hootin', shootin', action. Instead of the usual sterio type western this story takes in the sackcloth clad Nomads and sheiks of the African desert, where only the hardiest survive the tremendous strain of life's terrible obstacles.

"Is Everybody Happy." Charlie Chase.

SUNDAY, JAN. 27

"WHITE SHADOWS OF THE SOUTH SEAS," starring Monte Blue with Raquel Torries, in a thrilling drama of adventure and passion in the unknown wilds of mysterious South Sea Isles. This is considered one of the most amazing pictures ever screened. In addition to a most absorbing plot it presents a great variety of thrills, such as struggles in the ocean's depth with monsters of the sea, and sanguinary combat on land between savage natives and greedy white men. The story was actually photographed in the Virgin Isles of the unexplored south seas. This picture is considered one of the best of the year.

"Limberlegs." Sportlight.

MONDAY, JAN. 28

"SAILORS WIVES," featuring Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes in a sensational drama of flapper wives and dapper dadies. It is the story of a highly intelligent girl who faces total blindness in the near future and decides to crowd in her short span of life the excitement of an ordinary life time. It deals with the socially elect and contains highly emotional scenes which carry you to a climax as startling as it is pleasing.

"Tarzan The Mighty No. 2." Most exciting serial ever shown in our theatre.

TUESDAY, JAN. 29

"THE SPIELER," starring Allen Hale and Renee Adoree in a story of carnival life. She was a Diving Venus, he a side show spieler, and while he warned all to beware of thieves, he was, himself a thief until love dawned in his hardened heart. This story contains romance, intrigue, mystery and murder, and gives you an intimate understanding of the tears behind the tinsel, and the hearty smiles beneath the painted masks of those who strive to entertain the masses.

"Motorboat Mamas." Sennett.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 30.

"THE WIND," starring Lillian Gish in a thrilling story of the southwest in the early days. It is the story of a beautiful daughter of a ruined southern aristocrat. She is compelled to seek a home with her cousin on a desert ranch. On the train she meets a handsome stranger who tells her she will never be able to endure the loneliness and the terrific windstorms of the prairies. Two cowboys fall in love with her; her cousin's wife grows jealous. Through circumstances she is forced to marry the man she does not love. During the thickening plot a tornado ravages her home—her husband is away and her former suitor, appearing on the scene, endeavors to take advantage of her predicament, and is shot. The storm clears, and so does the plot, but only after a series of gripping events have transpired.

"HIS PRIVATE LIFE," starring Adolph Menjou with Kathryn Carver in a refreshing comedy drama characterizing a swank sophisticated Parisian Boulevardier. Menjou essays the role of the man round-the-town; he claims that he is through with women, but no sooner are the words spoken than he promptly falls for one. It proved a hard conquest, and Menjou suffers more discouragement than encouragement in winning the lady fair. This condition spurs him on, and so arduous is his suit, that the lady finds his love is not to be denied. Many laughs and much pleasant excitement is experienced throughout the story. Menjou, the shiek, nuff sed.

"Wireless Lizzie." Walter Hiers.

FRIDAY, FEB. 1.

"THE GOOD-BYE KISS"—a Mack Sennett comedy of flaming romance of youth, starring Johnny Burk with Sally Eilers and Matty Kemp. A goof, with his girl, drives up in a dilapidated buggy—a motorcycle causes the cantankerous horse to run away, the girl is rescued just as the vehicle is about to be hit by an on-roaring express train. The next exciting scene takes place at the gang plank of an ocean-going liner—they land in France—the blast of a ton of dynamite adds to thrills already suffered, then there is an air raid and spies, lots of other things that will keep you stirred up every minute. Of course, tying all of this comedy action together is a captivating romance. If you like comedy, don't miss a minute of this picture.

THREE IMPORTANT EVENTS OF NEXT WEEK

Three events of next week are being looked forward to by the people of Fort Benning as a means of entertainment and enjoyment other than the regular weekly social affairs.

The first of these to swing into light is the basketball game Saturday night at the big gymnasium, when the Saint Louis Americans, a quintet reported as being an aggregation of loop tossers who know their basketball, meet the Musketeer five. The Saint Louis team is reported as being one of the best teams of the country and one that will make a creditable showing against any team in the country. But we also know that we have a group of neat basket tossers that have always given a favorable showing of themselves.

Sunday morning, after having partaken of doughnuts and coffee, the baying of hounds and the tramp of horses' feet will be heard at various places about the reservation when they are hot on the trail in pursuit of the scent on the drag hunt. While Wednesday night another group of hunters will assemble at the Officers Club before winding their way about through the woods and near the creeks in their hunt for an animal who has to be exceedingly careful and wary this season of the year when hunters are on the trail to keep his hide from adorning the walls of the club. Nevertheless, there are plenty who know the ways, wiles, and haunts of Mr. Coon and once his trail has been struck it will be an exceedingly smart coon that escapes from the clutches of the hunter.

Time—2:15.

On Monday afternoon the Infantry School Womans Club had the privilege of presenting for a second time Miss Agnes Kendrick Gray, distinguished young poet of Atlanta and New York, in a programme of her original poetry. Miss Gray was a guest of our club one year ago and ever since that afternoon when she thrilled us with the beauty of her voice and the beauty of her poetry we have hoped to recapture a bit of that rapture. Our anticipations were delightfully realized when she read to us again on Monday. This must have been a busy twelve months for our poet for her programme was almost entirely of new poems written since her last visit.

Beautiful in conception and exquisite in form were these new poems, revealing in many instances a deepening insight into life. There were poems of travel, charming in their picturesque foreign setting, vivid with the quaint characteristics and individual charm of France, Spain, Italy, England, Ireland. She is a cosmopolitan imagist whose interest and sympathy is as wide as the world. She gives clear-cut, colorful pictures, perhaps of the ships of Venice, perhaps of fishing boats of Picardy, perhaps of a rock wall off the coast of Spain, perhaps of a dusty road leading to Firrenzi, perhaps of a sun dial in a flower garden, or five days around their master's hearth, or a shop-girl back of a basement counter; an aviator scanning the elements before his flight; no matter what, she gives you a glimpse of and a love for what ever she speaks of. She stamps with genuine sincerity every emotion she expresses; and she creates within you that sympathetic feeling that she has for that of which she writes

In her earlier poetry there was a delightful bouyancy that is less evident as she turns to sonnets very difficult in form, and more serious in sentiment. Her poems have won many prizes, which is gratifying and encouraging, for it is good to know that ones work receives the approval of the critics.

Miss Gray divided her readings in three divisions, the first group being continental in theme and setting, the second having aviation as the central idea, and the last group being concerned with nature, having to do with gardens, rain, the stars, death, and persons, places or episodes that are distinctly American. At each interval in the reading music of exceptional beauty was rendered.

Mrs. Madge Porter played two lovely piano solos, "A Spanish Serenade" by Dent Mowray, and "Toccata" by Albert Jonas and it so happened that this music followed immediately Miss Gray's poems of Spain, which was most appropriate.

At the second intermission Mrs. Marion Boyd, accompanied by Mrs. Porter, sang "Ishtar" by Charles Gilbert Spross. This song was perfect for Mrs. Boyd's lovely lyric soprano voice and was most enthusiastically received. After the third group of poems which ended with "The Penny-Whistler in Washington Square" Mrs. Boyd concluded the delightful programme with two songs, "Rain" by Curran and "Ho! Mr. Piper" a darling song of a child who calls the Piper to play in the hopes that his playing will summon the fairies—and it does! Mrs. Boyd's interpretation of this song was so charmingly convincing that her audience saw the fairy trip, and the fat elf bow as clearly as the child in the song, and they chuckled with spontaneous delight. The exquisite poetry and the beautiful music fitting so charmingly into each other, presented as it was by these three artists, will make this meeting of The Womans Club one that will not soon be forgotten.

After the program Mrs. Everett D. Barlow and Mrs. Alonzo L. Littell were hostesses at a charming tea. The table was overlaid with a handsome filet cloth and had for its centerpiece a silver bowl of pink carnations and snapdragons with feathery fern, around which four tall green tapers burned in silver holders.

Mrs. Daniel G. Berry and Mrs. Harry W. Wells presided over the silver tea services. The Students Club, The Reading Club and The Century Club of Columbus were met with us on this occasion.

The Literary Club will meet next Monday at the Polo Club at 2:00 sharp, at which time Mrs. Leon Norris will present her program of contemporary biographical literature, as previously announced.

Major and Mrs. Frank Green entertained informally two tables of bridge on Wednesday evening at their home. Lieut. E. L. Stewart held 100 honors in two suits in one hand. He held 4 aces and the five honors in clubs. Needless to say, he got his bid! Mrs. Henry W. Brandhorst won high prize for ladies, two lovely hand embroidered linen guest towels, and Lt. W. H. Vinson won high prize for gentlemen, a thermos bottle. After the game ambrosia, cake and coffee were served.

Miss Edith Dexter Becomes Bride of Popular Fort Benning Officer

The wedding of Miss Edith Dexter, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. Amory Dexter, of Columbus, Ga., and Captain Everett L. Rice, of Fort Benning, was solemnized at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Trinity Episcopal Church, Dr. S. A. Wragg performing the impressive ring service in the presence of the many friends of the young couple.

The church was beautiful in its decorations of stately palms, ferns, clusters of magnolia leaves and graceful sprays of southern smilax.

A beautiful program of prenuptial music was rendered by Mr. E. H. Vonderau, while just preceding the entrance of the wedding party, Capt. C. L. Rutledge sang "O Promise Me."

To the first strains of Lohengrins wedding march, the bridal party entered and approaching the altar took their place awaiting the bride and groom.

The lovely young bride was given in marriage by her father, Dr. C. Amory Dexter, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Capt. Stonewall Jackson.

The maid of honor, Miss Mary Dexter, sister of the bride, preceded the bride. She was charming in her youthful gown of green chiffon with hat and shoes to match, carrying an arm bouquet of yellow roses.

The bride was lovely in her wedding dress of brown transparent velvet made with bodice of gold brocaded chiffon. She wore a hat of felt and velvet and gloves and shoes to match. Her costume was completed by a bouquet of yellow roses showered with lilies of the valley.

The ushers were Capt. R. A. W. Pearson, Capt. J. B. Sweet, Capt. F. L. McCoy, Capt. Curtis DeWare, Lieut. B. A. Byrne, Lieut. L. A. Diller.

The bride is of the oldest and most distinguished Georgia families and has been very popular in civilian and army circles in Columbus for some years.

Captain Rice is a member of a distinguished Virginia family. He has been an instructor at the Infantry School for several years.

Following the ceremony, Capt. and Mrs. Rice left for Washington and other eastern points on a short wedding trip. Upon their return, they will reside in Columbus' exclusive residential section of Overlook.

MR. STUDENT OFFICER

Do you know that—the first order to arrive for the student officers of last year's classes was received at Fort Benning about February 17, 1928, and that it was printed in the Infantry School News of that week? At that time quite a number of officers of the classes were ordered to duty with the 29th Infantry upon completion of the school year; there were about thirtyo fficers at Fort Benning who received orders to attend the Infantry School for the year 1928-29.

Do you know that—the second order which was issued by the War Department which transferred student officers from the Infantry School at the close of the school year, was FIRST received by the Infantry School News; that there were about forty student officers on this one order, and that the NEWS furnished each officer in the field at Fort Benning, a copy of his order?

Do you know that—the Infantry School News will receive copies of the various orders issued which will concern the student officers of the classes this year?

Watch the subsequent issues of the NEWS for important announcement concerning this important phase of the life of the student officer.

SMALL PROBLEMS FOR INFANTRY

(By I. Gotta Ess)

Jan. 23, 1929.

Dere Ike—

In mentioning all the elite of the instruktor corpse I fergot to tel you about Byrne and Stayer. There's two reel hombres, Ike. One specializes in wires and buzzers and the other in wounds and bandages. Both are the "berries" in there line. Doc is right good at sendin a feller home when he sneezes and I exepkt to wring a "prescriptshun" outen him purty soon. He's already given me a double-handful of those lil black pills—fer nothin! They are potent, but Im still workin toward that perskripshun. I need it.

Incidendly if they dont kwit takin me out all bundled up in uniform "A" and runnin me round on horse-bak an gettin me all hotted-up and then lettin me set still to make my ess, Ill get phew-monia yet—and get that perskripshun. Most of us want shirts and hats when mownted with a coat of sum kind strapped on the saddle to put on when we make our ess on settin still. Fix that up, will you Ike?

Sum of the bunch thet got a "U" in Ben Ferises "fog" problem took unholey joy in seein him take "all the horse had to give" when he rode out with us Toosday. I kaint ride so hot, either but at least I kin grin an hear it, Ike. If Gershwin ever sees Ben's shoulder-shock-absorbtion movement, he will write another Rhapsodee in Blue. Pinky Burus rode beside Ben, and Pinky almost cried to see Ben lap up punishment. That was probably a "hypothetical" demonstration, eh, Ike? We wud like to hear this lad St. John put out sum more gas. He really admits whut his stuff is, Ike, and this gang likes frankness. He was good and almost got a Hand.

Major Hill put on a problem today an after the boys had solved all three guesses (without Abbot gettin the Maj. to change any one of the sitooations) he put out a solution. Well, Ike, it separated lots of men fum the boys, but that class liked the way Hill did his stuff. He had sumthin to put out and he put out the whut-when-where-how and why and MADE em like it. Thats whut this gang needs wunce in a while on these problems—strength-courage to face death by chokin—and a determination not to change sitooations to soot the heklers. They gave him a big Hand. First hand ever give out on a marked problum. The class now moves him up with Ryder-Roberts-Byrne-Doc-St. John et. Al Smith.

Ike—you are now famus. Charley Rider mentioned you offm the platform today. Sed he was still able to fight em and fool em, with apologhees to I. Gotta Ess. Reel worth is offen appreciated, Ike. I appreshiate Ryders ability and sportsmanship, and he aknoleges you have sum value in the skule. I wont promis not to sock him eny more onless he lays offm tanks. He did this morning.

A frend uv mine sed if I didnt kwit this colyum I mite find myself out uv luk with the instruktor corps. Well Ike, Ive seen five sets of such corpses, and they haint yet got that small. Wun uv em remarked it was a bit hot at times, but thet the instruktors corpse did wurse to each uther in thet "murder board' they hev, in whitch each does a monygraf to the bunch on why his solution shud be O. K. as a skule solution. Ennyhow I hev still got my sense uv humor, an Im leevin this Post with said sense, next June. Im gettin a bit more of a better kind out of this course, whitch Im gonna USE utherwise later on. Ike, H. J. M. Smith is goin to live the Life of Riley an this class says he deserves enny Life he Likes. Whut with the Medico-Communicatshun-Gas-Calvary etc. bein so good—and now gettin out of Benning, the Infantry will have to step out to get the Hands these men are drawing. Yes, Ike, Axel Howkensen travels on ONE road in problems but he comes out Bening Bullevard in the A. M. and goes home over the old road at night. Inkonsistent, Ike, isnt he? I see whare sum cuss copyed my "style", Ike an rote me an my moskeetos up in a "Moyngraf Letter." Plagiarism is deceetful Ike, but as it was a fren of mine whut did it I let is pass.

Pete Bonham put on 97-100ths. of a pip of a monygraf this morning but the buzzard kawt him too soon. I got my monygraf bak fer me to kerect an Ike, it wuz wurse than writin it. I tuk thirty minutes to reckernize it and then I grabed up a flok of wet commas an slung em in where theyd do most good. A feller ought to get a credik uv 10 points to kerect such a job.

Well Ike, dont ferget to fix up that ridin in shirts an hats and caryin a coat, will you. These marked problems are hot enuf in themselves. I dont claim to hev started sumpin but Ike, you look at our buletin bohrd. Its got more poems, odes to tacttics, Swahn-Songs of Monygrafers an pictures uv instruktorfokes on it than it has oficial dope. Sum say the bohrd shows improvmunt.

Elam Stewart is improvin, Ike, he only missed one word in my last letter. Hope this letter finds you and the flu strangers, Ike. Keep outen the movies (these modurn wuns heet yure blud) an when you sneze, find sum Dok like Stayer an let him pour brown ink down yure beezer and send you home.

Yours hopin fer an ess,
"Rite on the Nose."

Voice from Above: Down in front!
Hero: (baring his hairy chest) And I'm proud of it.

TANKERS AND HOWITZERS ARE WINNERS IN WEDNESDAYS SOCCER GAMES

Two fast games of soccer were played at Gowdy Field last Wednesday afternoon. In the first game "B" Company of the Terrible Tankers, defeated "H" Company of the 29th Infantry by a score of 3 to 0.

The second game was a fast and hard fought contest between the Howitzers and "D" Company of the 29th Infantry. The Howitzers nosed out the Machine Gunners in the final half to win 2 to 1.

SIDELIGHTS

Three machine-gun busses had just transported the National Guard and Reserve Field Officers Class out to the 29th Infantry Parade field, where they were to inspect a Communication platoon.

The busses had started to back around. One had left the field already. The other two were on the verge of pulling out.

Suddenly an officer—one taking the course in his native state—detached himself from the group of students inspecting the communication equipment. In spite of the spread eagles that his shoulders bore, he detached himself with alacrity. One arm was extended in a commanding gesture.

"Hold that bus!" he cried, at no bus in particular, but in the voice of a Stentor.

The bus held. Both of them held.

The eagles finally came to earth at the side of one of the busses. The driver, and the corporal beside the driver, leaned forward to hear the command, conception of which occasioned so much peremptory action.

"Gimme a match!" the Colonel said.

The corporal gave. —P. L. C.

A CORRECTION

In last week's issue of the News there appeared an article concerning the chief of infantry's combat squad, 29th Infantry. It was stated that "G" Company had won this honor in two successive years, which was in error. The records show that in 1925, Company "E" was selected for this honor; in 1926, "G" Company; in 1927, "B" Company; in 1928, "G" Company.

AROMAS FROM THE COOKS AND BAKERS SCHOOL

A Diller a Dollar
A ten o'clock scholar
What makes you come so soon
You used to come at 10 o'clock
And now you come at noon.

Lt. "Duke" Gilbreth seems to like this old nursery rhyme. Some one should read him the one about "Early to bed and early to rise."

Lt. McElroy had a trip to the infirmary the other day, and returned with a thumb in a sling. Some seemed inclined to think that it was just carelessness on "Macs" part in cutting up the beef, but others more charitably inclined believe that he was afraid that there would not be enough meat for the mess, and was simply trying to help out. Thats loyalty for you.

"Teacher" received a beautiful "red" apple the other day. Grapevine rumors credit Lt. March with this nefarious attempt.

Capt. Murphy on being questioned as to some biscuits that he had made, modestly admitted that he was an excellent biscuit maker. "The crusts were hard and they did not rise much, but they were fine—certainly I ate them."

Lt. Hurt wishes to challenge pie makers to a contest. On his first attempt the pies were ready for the table five hours after the start. "The pies were all right, but I couldn't make the stove get hot."

Lts. Gailbreath and Hocker claim the world's championship in potato peeling.

So far no members of the class have received offers to come to New York and cook at the Waldorf-Astoria (advt.)

After a strenuous morning tossing 2 or 3 hundred pounds of dough around, and beating it and rolling it into biscuits and whatnots, no member of the class feels any surprise at the swimming feats of the German baker who recently swam the English channel.

The course is proving to be a fertil field for producing family arguments as to how, why, when and where foods should be cooked.—R. H. Brown, Jr.

ONE YEAR AGO

While looking through books, papers, and magazines, with no particular object, or even so much as a story in mind, this issue of the News of a year ago came to light. Having a little curiosity (though they say curiosity is what killed the cat) it was decided to see what was happening at the Infantry school at this time of the year.

The first thing we see is the picture on the front page of Brig.-Gen. Ralph M. Immell. Reading the story we find General Immell to be the Adjutant General of Wisconsin and heading the troops of that state; that he is probably the youngest officer to have ever held that important position and at that time of writing was a student of the Infantry School.

Sharing the front page with the picture of General Immell were two interesting stories. One was the announcement of the formal opening of the new stage at the main theatre, which, according to critics, compares favorably with the stages in the leading theatres and opera houses of the larger cities where grandeur of stage and stage setting is considered to be the latest in design and significance.

Two one-act plays were presented at the formal opening, they being the "Trial By Jury," and the "Drums of Oude." These plays were considered, so it is reported, to have been among the best offerings of the Dramatic Club of the last school year.

The other story to share honors with the front page was the opening drive of the Army Relief Society. It is useless to discuss what the society is and it's purpose. All of Benning knows something of the order and the work done by it.

On the second page we note the retirement of Sergeant Whitner of the Twenty-fourth Infantry, after having served honorably and with the colors for thirty years.

Still thumbing the pages we come to the society page and find that Brig.-Gen. Rosenbaum, who is attending the Refresher Course, has been honored with a bridge dinner at the Log Cabin. The announcement of Mrs. Laura Mauk of the engagement and approaching marriage of her niece, Miss Mae Parent to Captain William Maine Huston; the honoring of Miss Hayes, a bride-elect, with a bridge party and linen shower by the Misses Young.

Continuing our prying instinct we see an article under the caption, "Tactical Topics," by E. F. H. The author of this column, is now a student of the General Staff Command School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

On the sport page, it is found, that a polo tournament is to be in March. The tournament to be played between the teams of the garrison to decide who for a time at least will rule supreme in things polo. In another column of the page we find that Olson's Nordics had a few nights previously won a victory over the Musketeer five at the big gym while, for the last game of the week the quintet from Schofield was to invade the banks of the Upatoi, having as their purpose to carry away the big side of score in their engagement with the Musketeers. —B. THE CAT HUNT SUNDAY MORNING

(By Lt. R. H. Brown, Jr.)

On Sunday morning about forty intrepid souls, having lashed gondolas to the feet of their horses, paddled forth into the dark in search of the elusive wild cat, which the old inhabitants claim once infested this region. The spring like weather we have been having lately induced many, who have failed to appear when the mornings were bitter with frost, to arise and bedeck themselves gaily and join the merry throng of hunters. Alas the dripping fog soon took the curl out of beautifully marcelled hair, and twisted gay hats into weird and fantastic shapes.

The hunt sloshed its way slowly to Harps pond, scene of many a royal battle. For the nonce, optimism reigned supreme. "My! How the scent would stay on the ground in weather like this!" That may have been the correct dope, but personally we believe that the "cats" had too much sense to be out on a day like Sunday. We also believe that the hounds sized up the situation in like manner. In fact we are quite sure of it, for on looking at the map, the course that the hounds took after reaching Harps pond, was a nice arc which led directly back to the kennels. Of course they may have been following a cat, and the cat may have lived at the kennels, but somehow we doubt it. It does not seem logical somehow or other.

Even Capt. Collier appeared too affected by the fog. We missed having him deliver his cheery bulletins from the front. Not once did he urge the hounds on with ferocious bellowings. His optimism for once seemed to have deserted him.

For the next hunt we respectfully submit the following: That the cats rounded up by the M. P.'s in their great drive against cats, be liberated in sight of the hounds, perhaps in this manner we might have the royal and ancient "cat" hunt from going down to ignoble defeat.

29TH INF.

ADDITIONS TO BARRACKS BEING BUILT

Additions are being made to the newly built barracks of the 29th Infantry. This consists of concrete structures attached to the lower porch and designed to meet the needs of a vegetable store room and garbage receptacle.

The upper part of the structure will be enclosed by screens to keep flies and other insects away from the garbage cans. The vegetables and other perishable food items will be kept in the lower part in order to take advantage of the coolness which it will afford during the summer months.

The work is being done by Murch Bros., St. Louis, Mo., and should be completed in a few weeks, at approximately the same time that the Quartel barracks will be finished.

COLOR GUARD SELECTED FOR 29TH INFANTRY

Six First Class Privates from the rifle company of the 29th Infantry have been selected by the Regimental Commander to act in the capacity as Color Guard. These men have been selected for their exceptional soldierly qualities and appearance. Besides the honor attached to the appointment there are many material advantages, namely, no K. P.'s, acting corporal on fatigue details and on the days when required to perform the duties of Color Guard, they will be relieved from all other duties.

The men selected are Lyons, Talmadge, T., Company A; Johnson, James, C, Company B; Berryhill, Theo., Company C; Melton, John T., Company E; Shumaker, Carl B., Company F; Rossar, Robert W., Company G.

As the status of these men change, as it undoubtedly will due to promotion, a replacement will be submitted to the regimental commander by the battalion commander.

ACTIVITIES OF INFANTRY REGIMENT DEPICTED ON SCREEN

Keeping pace with the regimental policy of "leading the way" in all activities pertaining to infantry troops whether it be recreation or some new wrinkle in drill or maneuvers, the 29th Infantry theater, under the able direction of Sergt. Bauer, is doing pioneer work in the picturization of the organization at play and work.

The actual taking of the pictures is done by Sergt. Hopkins of the A. and R. section, who goes around on a still hunt for "shots" that he thinks would interest the personnel of the regiment. After being developed these pictures are thrown on the screen at the 29th Infantry theatre as an added bit of entertainment for the show-goers.

So far "shots" have been taken of regimental reviews, garrison review for American Legion Commander McNutt, demonstration of 83rd Field Artillery, 2nd Bn.-Tank Football game and Maj. Taylor's equitation class in riding and jumping Additional pictures will soon be taken of some of the games of the regimental basketball and soccer leagues.

DETAILED AS CHAUFFEUR

Corporal John R. Johnson, Howitzer Company, is the man chosen from the 29th Infantry by the regimental commander as a candidate for the position of chauffer for the Commandant.

Johnson has over twenty-four years service in the army and enthusiastic members of his company claim that most of that time has been spent sitting at the wheel of some internal combustion machine, mostly antiques, when he got them. He drives with a fiendish grin on his face and a hideous glitter in his eyes than can only be gained by years of experience on the public highways.

It is also reported that he has missed many a man in his time but Johnson modestly avers that it was due to the agility of the pedestrian and not to his own skill in driving.

SECOND BATTALION NEWS

Company "E"

Company "E" had the following men to go on furlough last week: Pfc. Chatman, Hicks, Tucker and Private Maynard. The following men returned from furlough: Pfc. McCoy, Bache, Jones, L. D., and Privates Wood and Blount.

Private Gus Schiewe has been appointed Corporal in the company.

Private Maynard has re-enlisted for three years more in the company. He likes this place so well that he asked the recruiting officer if there was any chance of him reenlisting for ten years. I think he thought that if he re-enlisted for ten years he probably would receive about three six bit bonuses. I understand he is taking his three months furlough and will spend his vacation on 30th street, Columbus, Georgia. He says he thinks he can get "nected" up during that time.

Sgt. (Shorty) New is back with us, after about two months of Special Duty as Drum Major. It seems that he and the "stick" could not agree with each other. Well anyway Shorty we are all glad to have you back with us again.

"E" Company won their third game of basketball easily from Company "G" last week and we are expecting to close the series next week by mopping up on Company "F" in the same manner.

Private Lamb was discharged about a week ago and was telling all the fellows he was going to take on again but he decided he would try the outside for awhile. So he packed his suit case and went to Atlanta and got him a job in a mattress factory. He worked there two days and he was fired for laying down on the job. Now he's back and going to re-enlist in the company next week.

—I. M. Y.

Company "F"

The "F" Company quintet went down before the "G" Company five last week. This brings the organization's percentage down to .666, since "H" Company and Headquarters 2nd Battalion teams have been defeated by the local boys in prior contests.

Old Inbad was at the game which our boys lost and he said that it looked as if something was wrong. They all seemed "dead on their feet," you might say.

Then there was the high wind, but it, of course, had a detrimental effect on both aggregations, as the score (21-19) shows. During the closing minutes of play "F" Company had many shots at the basket, but the ball would just roll around the rim, tantalizingly and drop off the wrong side.

The inclement weather has delayed the progress of the Second Battalion Company league. There are several contests to be played as yet, before the final round begins. To date "E" Company, last year's champions, look as if they were headed the invincible way again.

"Hi" Chambers has been wondering if he could take the place of Andy Gump. Well "Hi" we can't say, but personally I believe you could.

This company has been fortunate in getting previous service men. The latest addition is none other than Nolan F. Farmer who transferred here from Fort Omaha, Neb. Farmer was a Sergeant there and has the appearance of being a fine soldier.

Company "H"

Corporal Coates and Pfc. Colombo were discharged recently. Corporal Coates signed up for another hitch and from latest reports we hear that Pfc. Colombo is not re-enlisting just at present. Shhh! He has found a sweet little girl down in Mississippi. We hope both of you men succeed in your future enterprises.

Our gratitude is overflowing for the responsible persons who caused the organization to be furnished with that new floor paint. Our supply room is now enhanced with a shiny, slippery, polished floor. And it won't be long before the whole barracks will be the same. Careful with those hobnails, men.

SOUTHERN COLLEGE FIVE HAND MUSKETEERS FIRST DEFEAT IN EIGHT GAMES

(By Al Durden)

Won seven and lost one. Not so bad when matched against the fastest basketball teams in the country. That is the remarkable record hung up by the Benning Musketeers during the past two weeks.

It took the Southern College five of Lakeland, Fla., to stop the Musketeers. After winning seven games in a row the Musketeers dropped Saturday night's game to the Floridians in a fast and closely contested game at the Post gymnasium. The final score was 34 to 28 in favor of the collegians.

At the close of the first half the doughboys were on the top side of the score with a three point margin, with the score standing, Infantry twenty-one, Southern College eighteen. The first half represented some of the prettiest, cleanest and fastest basketball to have ever been shown on a local court. Both sides passed, blocked passes and shot goals from angles that seemed nigh impossible and at no time was it safe to predict the outcome of the score or as to who would be the winner while to the personal knowledge of the scribe was the score tied on no less than four occasions.

The beginning of the second half looked as if it was to be a repetition of the first. In less than a minute after play the collegians crept one point nearer to the score of the musketeers when a technical four was looped through the goals to be followed a few seconds later with a long shot from near the center of the court by J. Spivey. A few minutes later the soldiers again scored, placing them again in the lead only a few seconds later to see their score tied then passed by the collegians, and as in the first half the see-saw business continued for three times till the collegians were finally so far in the lead that they were never again threatened.

For the second time this season Roosma saw his team mate, Kammarer, overshadow him on goal shooting. Of the twenty-eight points scored by the soldier quintet fifteen were at the hands of Kammarer. He shot them from all angles, corners and distances with practically every one going through the goal with a swish, which in turn donated a basket made without so much as even touching a rim. Not only in basket shooting did Kammarer shine Sat. night but also in floor play. He was literally all over the floor passing, blocking, cutting and again passing and shooting whenever the occasion called. Strickler at center came next in scoring with seven points and was followed by Roosma with four and Stampa with two.

For the collegians the Spivey boys were the outstanding players so far as scoring was concerned and from the result of the score it looked as if they were engaged in a personal contest to see who, when the game was finished, would emerge the victor. To J. Spivey goes the Southern boys credit for high score with a total of eleven points, while he was closely followed by M. Spivey with ten points. Both of these boys showed a fast brand of basketball and at the same time showed an excellent eye for the basket.

An unusual number of fouls were called, both sides committing them often and freely. Each side had players ejected for exceeding the limit of fouls called and others at the conclusion of the game were nearing the danger line.

Cincinnati "Y" Aggregation Lose Good Game to Infantrymen; Visitors Play Clean Brand of Basketball

(By Al Durden)

Benning basketball fans suffered a severe nervous attack when they learned that Johnnie Roosma would not be in the Musketeer line-up against the Cincinnati "Y" cagesters Friday night at Fort Benning. The Benning Musketeers eased the fears of the local fans and fully demonstrated that they are not a one-man team, by handing the visitors a nifty defeat, minus the services of the Benning ace.

Friday night's game proved to be a close affair, with the soldiers nosing out the visitors in the final half, to win 28 to 22. The first half ended with the score 12 to 11 in favor of the Wildcats. In the final half the Musketeers took the lead away from the visitors to lead by a six point margin at the finish.

Kammerer and Stamper led the scoring, Mal accounting for 13 points and Stamper nine. McAllister and Franz proved to be too fast for the visitors' defense, their floor-work putting the ball in scoring position on numerous occasions. Strickler played a star game at center, besides playing a great defensive game.

The clean playing and good sportsmanship of the entire visiting team was highly commented by players and spectators who witnessed the game. At no time during the game was the decision of the referee questioned, and though losing a hard fought game, they accepted their defeat as true sportsmen.

COMPANY "D" WINS OVER "H" IN SOCCER

The strong D company soccer team defeated H company by 3 to 0 in an intra-company game at Gowdy Field Sunday before a crowd of approximately 150 persons.

D company jumped into the lead after 18 minutes of play, when Rundon, center, got hold of a great pass from Vattorizzi and whipped the ball past H company's goalie to score the first goal of the game.

The second period started with H company employing an eleven-man defense, but after 14 minutes of play Rundon finally broke through center with a brilliant display of dribbling to score another goal. Hardly had the ball been kicked off when Rundon got control of the ball again and through a series of wonderful passes, broke through again and scored the third and last goal of the game.

The game was featured with exceptional playing by Vattorizi and Rundon, while Peters and DePratt starred for the Machine Gunners.

DEMONSTRATIONIST DOUGHBOYS TURN TO GOLF

(By Al Durden)

One of the latest additions to the ever increasing number of improvements being made at Fort Benning is the golf course, belonging to Company "A," of the 29th Infantry.

Where the idea originated from no one knows, but members of "A" Company became very much interested in golf a few weeks ago. A couple of enthusiastic soldiers laid out a four hole course in the company street. With one old golf ball and a couple of condemned axe handles for drivers, they began to indulge in this ancient pastime during their leisure hours.

In a few days there was more golfers than there was room on the small course. The course spread from the company street out into the 29th Infantry parade ground, from a four-hole affair it was enlarged to nine holes with plenty of distance between. A shortage of used axe handles caused ambitious golfist to turn elsewhere for golf clubs. Accidently or otherwise an ambitious young Johnny Buck discovered that small sweet-gum bushes that were large and curved at their base, made good clubs. Sweet-gum bushes have suffered severely in the past few weeks.

Each squad now has at least one golf player, each platoon is represented by a golf team. Daily challenges are hurled and accepted. Hard fought matches with the entire company in the gallery is the result. It is a fact that axe handles and sweet-gum sticks are not the proper material for golf clubs, but Jones or Farrell never held a more interested audience or took part in any harder fought, hair-raising matches than does the owners of these original golfing irons.

It is only a matter of time until some dandy is going to invest his pay-day allowance in a set of golf clubs. No platoon will allow their champions to be handicapped like that. A collection will result in regular equipment for the players of the respective teams. No doubt from the little four hole course built by two recruits in the company street, there will be a nice large course for the many enlisted men of the garrison who know and would like to play the game.

OFFICERS PURSUE COURSE FOR BAKERS AND COOKS

asked Captain O'Connel during class. They range from, "How do you make home-brew?" to "Is antiscorbutic a food or a vitamin?" One question that particularly pleased the other day was, "Sir, how can you prevent soldiers from eating fast, all of my men bolt their food?" The class answered that one with suggestions as follows (a) "Put rocks in their food; this works well with horses that bolt their food." (b) "Make them chew in cadence. The mess sergeant, in addition to his other duties, should beat time with a baton, each soldier should chew once, only, on the down beat. This, if done correctly in rythm, gives a pleasing touch to the gastronomic symphony and accomplishes the results desired. Of course, when time is limited the mess sergeant may increase the cadence as desired, normally about 120 beats to the minute."

It is regretted, and very much feared that this cooking school for officers will be attendant with dire results as far as the domestic happiness of those taking the course are concerned. Practically all of the students report trouble in the kitchen at home. Even such small matters as entering the kitchen and criticizing the good wife's method of making rolls, and quoting the Army Cook Book doesn't seem to be taken in the proper spirit, many officers reporting that they have been forced to leave the kitchen forthwith, accompanied by a rolling pin or other utensil that may be within reach of the wife.

Seriously speaking, the course is excellent. It is well planned, covers all phases of cooking and mess management and makes an officer well qualified in every respect to handle a mess and rations correctly. It is a course of instruction that has been badly needed in the army and a long step in the right direction towards improving the messes of the army. Every officer who is fortunate enough to be detailed to this school will find it well worth while.

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

The great objection to the shell game where you guessed which shell the pea was under was not in the loss of your money, but the reflection upon your mentality, which brings us to marked problem No. 1. Estimate of the Situation, Bonneauville and Gettysburg sheets, Capt. Liston operating the shells, company officers class among those present. Of course the answer was to envelop. (I don't know whether Benning proclivity for enveloping is based on experience or policy, but at least it is a conviction.) The point was, however, should you develop the enemy's right flank, or their left flank. Step right forward, ladies and gentlemen, the hand is quicker than the eye." Me said right flank, so the answer was left. Personally I don't believe that fifty million Frenchmen could be wrong, and if that he treason make the most of it!

We will now go on to animal and stable management. As one officer put it, there is something understandable about that subject. Whether he referred to the theory of the subject, or to a personal understanding, I don't know. I must say, however, that whatever future impressions I may receive in this course. Messrs. Smith, Rogers and McClure certainly put in a good opening word for the horse. I hope he lives up to it! Rogers who was pinch hitting for Dr. Mallan placed us on a most intimate footing with the horse. Rogers had one of those exporatory charts, each sheet another inward. Really you have no idea, but we won't go in to it here.

While we were sitting in the equestrian amphitheatre down galloped two miles. Arriving at an advantageous position from which to view the scholastic work, they took one look and with a four-legged about face galloped madly off. "What ho," called a subaltern, "the advanced class is lost again!" Speaking of being lost we will now go on to the subject of indirect laying of machine guns. It is a delightful subject. You are always delighted when you get anywhere near the answer. And my, how those two Collins', one Wharton, and one Nevin have put out. They act as though there was still hope. In addition thereto, in case the Literary Digest should start a poll me cast one vote for Joe Collins, he knows his Brownings.

In closing, I have been asked by some of the parishoners to say a few words of praise.

First, the bachelors wish to thank Capt. Jones for giving them food to eat. It would appear from the statement handed to me that former chefs of Biglerville Mess must have gotten this subject confused with animal management.

Second, a vote of thanks from the same, for the opening of the road to Block 21, which after being closed for a week has only ten additional mud holes in it.

Third, a vote of thanks to the higher authority who "persuaded" Capt. Evans to purchase a new hat.

WINTER ELIMINATION BOUTS WILL BE HELD ON FEB. 6

nection contestants belonging to spare part units are eligible to enter, in fact cordially invited. Their chance at the medals is as good as any member of a battalion team.

One purpose of the tournament, besides the diversion it offers, is the opportunity to get a close up of the latent talent that is hidden away in many of the outfits. There is many a youngster on the Post, who after the lights are out, with his pillow his only confidant, swears he could knock the lights out of half the dubs he sees taking good white money in the fortnightly bouts. Here is the big chance of the year. There is no limit to the number of entries from each outfit. Look below and see in which division you belong. Start in now and get the linament, shoes and trunks, collodion and grease. If you want to enter for sweet sport's sake and retain your amateur standing all well and good; if you hanker after the lucre attached to the game and wish to break in, now is the chance. If neither appeals to you, then as preacher says, "forever hold your peace."

On the 6th all entries from the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 29th Infantry get under way; on the 13th the Tanks and 83rd Field Artillery tie up; on the 20th the loose ends and the 24th Infantry battle it out, while the 27th has been designated as a grand finale, a night in which a man to win a championship might have to wade through three bouts.

In the point system adopted any man winning the final in his division scores five points for his organization. A runner up, or the man who lost to the winner, is entitled to three points. In case of a tie the Athletic Association will offer duplicate cups. The U. S. Army Boxing Rules will govern the meet.

The various divisions and the weights are listed herewith:

Bantam	118
Feather	126
Junior lightweight	130
Lightweight	135
Junior welterweight	142
Welterweight	147
Middleweight	160
Light heavyweight	175
Heavyweight	over 175

No one will be permitted to engage in the tournament who has participated in any of the professional bouts held at the Post since July 1, 1928.

Representatives of the various units listed in the tournament are as follows:

Capt. Bent, Special Units.
Capt. McGill, 24th Infantry.
Capt. Reed, 29th Infantry.
Capt. Bassett, 1st Bn., 29th Inf.
Lieut. Finney, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf.
Lieut. Barr, 15th Tank Battalion.

Get in now. It is the greatest sport in the world to lose that grouch.

Bill Shakespeare who weighed in at 160 once said:

" 'Tis the soldiers' life
To have their balmy slumbers waked with strife."

'Tis admitted that the days of balmy slumber were in order, in what seems to have been ages ago. However, since the army adopted the "Guisemont," slumber has been confined to night hours only. Notwithstanding the change, it is believed, though the doubt may be entertained by many, and their cause may have the earmarks of reasoned sincerity, that if one is looking for a combination of strife and slumber no better place or time can be found than an entry in the amateur boxing tournament.

INFANTRY SCHOOL DETACHMENT

To further add to the comfort and pleasures of the members of the Infantry School Detachment, a new, modern equipped victrola with five dozen popular records, has been installed in the recreation room. An eight tube Crosley Show-box model radio set, another addition to the recreation room, furnishes evenings of interest and pleasure to many of the Detachmenteers.

Several members of the Detachment who have been answering chow call regularly for the past three years, have been discharged lately. After receiving that much talked-of piece of paper, these youngsters took just one peep at the great "outside" and then did an about face and headed for the "Recruiting Officer." These Detachmenteers are well known and are given the glad hand for another stack. They are Sgt. Rackert, Corp. John Foster and Pvt. Lonnie Crawford.

It will be of interest to the many friends of Pvt. Decker, formerly of the I. S. D., who was injured in a motorcycle accident in Columbus nearly one year ago, to know that he is recovering from a final operation, and that he will be fully recovered in a few more weeks. He is now at his home in Albany, N. Y.

CO. "B," 29TH INF., IS 100 PER CENT. OUTFIT

In union there is strength. The truthfulness of this age old adage is fully demonstrated by Company "B" of the 29th Infantry. New members soon learn that Company "B" is a one-hundred per cent. outfit in whatever undertaking they take part in and that every man is expected to do his bit.

In athletics the company is fore-most in the regiment. Their basketball team has gone undefeated during the past season. When their team played, members of the company who were not active members of the team did their bit by attending all games and adding their moral support from the side-lines.

Among the members of the fighting First Bats football team of the past season, none fought harder than those of company "B." When the team played every member of the outfit that was free from duty, could be found in the stands of the Stadium, and their cheers were the loudest.

On the drill field, on guard, on demonstration or on pass, members of this organization are one hundred per cent. in dress, bearing and courtesy.

Company "B" is not the best, for the Demonstration Regiment is composed of thirteen companies of doughboys that would cause the wisest of judges to hesitate before picking the best, but Company "B" is a shining example of the units that combine the Demonstration Doughboys. —Al Durden.

FEB. 1 TO FEB. 7, INCL.

FRIDAY, FEB. 1

"THE GOOD-BYE KISS", a Mack Sennett comedy of flaming romance of youth, starring Johnny Burk with Sally Eilers and Matty Kemp. A goof, with his girl, drives up in a dilapidated buggy, a motorcycle causes the cantankerous horse to run away, the girl is rescued just as the vehicle is about to be hit by an on-roaring express train. The next exciting scene takes place at the gang plank of an ocean-going liner—they land in Frace—the blast of a ton of dynamite adds to thrills already suffered, then there is an air raid and spies, lots of other things that will keep you stirred up every minute. Of course, tying all of this comedy action together is a captivating romance. If you like comedy, don't miss a minute of this picture.

"In the Bag." Fables.

Pathe News.

SATURDAY, FEB. 3

"THE GLORIOUS TRAIL," starring Ken Maynard. Stringing of the first telegraph wires connecting east with west furnishes the theme for this story. Ken acts the part of a government engineer. Land barrons endeavor to obstruct his progressive work by inciting Indian uprisings and paying renegades to pilfer. Much of this picture was taken in Wyoming in the Souix reservation. Plenty of exciting action. A simple love story runs through the plot.

"Collegians No. 7."

SUNDAY, FEB. 3

"SHOW PEOPLE," starring Marion Davies with William Haines in a unique comedy of film life. It is the story of a Southern girl who goes to Hollywood under the guidance of a guardian; she aspires toward stardom and meets with discouragement at every studio. A comedian takes a fancy to her and starts her out in the slapstick comedy line—she starts to rise—it goes to her head and she becomes arrogant. Just about as her luck changes thrilling events occur and she awakens. A pleasing romance enters into the plot. This is considered an excellent picture.

"Jungle Round-Up." Oddity.

Metro News.

MONDAY, FEB. 4

"THE RIVER PIRATE," from the Saturday Evening Post story by Charles Francis Coe. It is something new in melodrama of the underworld, depicting the modern pirates of our coasts who ply their daring trade among the shadowry recesses of wharves, docks and warehouses along the great New York harbor. Victor McLaglen plays the part of a burley ruffian; Nick Stuart acts as a fine boy who gets into bad company; Loy Moran is the daughter of a detective. The story possesses mystery, romance and intrigue. Its captivating plot is cleverly unwound.

TUESDAY, FEB. 5

"HIS LAST HAUL," starring Tom Moore with Sena Owen in a thrilling underworld drama. It is the story of a keen witted, fast thinking master crook. It follows him through his stealthy enterprises and shows how he cleverly evades the law. He meets a "straight" girl and decides to change his mode of life only to find that both himself and the girl have been ordered arrested. How the tangle of love and the law finally becomes unraveled, furnishes absorbing entertainment.

"That Night." Laurel-Hardy.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 6

"NOISY NEIGHBORS," featuring Eddie Quillan, Alberta Vaughn and the Quillan family in a farce drama. This story takes you first into the realms of high society and then wafts its breezy way into the tinsel, glitter and turmoil of circus life. Coated with comedy at every angle, its plot portrays the inner soul of those who suffer mental agonies while they strive to entertain. A most pleasing romance runs throughout the story.

Metro Goldwyn Mayer News No. 48.

THURSDAY, FEB. 7

"PHYLLIS OF THE FOLLIES," featuring Alice Day and Matt Moore in an amusing film of chorus life. A wealthy batchelor loses $50,000 to a chorus girl in a breach of promise suit and "swears off" on actresses forever. While at his lawyer's office the batchelor answers the phone and carries on a flirtation with a girl who proves to be the lawyer's wife. The batchelor sends the lawyer away and keeps a date with his wife; the wife taking a safety measure, has a chorus girl pose for her and complications ensue. The plot thickens and tense situations occur which mount to a captivating climax.

"A Misfit Sailor." Christie comedy.

FRIDAY, FEB. 8

"SOMEONE TO LOVE," featuring Charles Austin with Mary Brian. This is a show possessing romance, comedy, drama, laughs and a climax of fast melodramatic action. It is the story of love at first sight between a girl whose parents are wealthy and a man who is just getting along in the world. Two lotharios, who are angling for rich marriages, enter into the story and the plot thickens. Information concerning the girl's wealth leaks out and still more difficulties ensue. It is not until several other truths find their way to those involved, that the would-be matrimonal tangle starts to unravel through impulsive action which carries the audience along with intense interest until the final smashing climax.

"Static." Fables.

Pathe News No. 11.

INFANTRY SCHOOL DETACHMENT

Major Louis Falligant, detachment commander, has returned to duty after being confined to his quarters for the past week with an attack of flu.

Ist Lt. Henry Fay has been promoted to the grade of Captain. The members of the detachment extend hearty congratulations and best wishes to Captain Fay upon his promotion.

Cold winter evenings, a red hot stove, cozy easy chairs, all of the latest magazines, radio selections from everywhere, the latest model radiola on the market with all of the most popular records, four excellent pool tables and nothing to worry about but reville and breakfast. These are the hardships imposed on members of the Greencord outfit during the winter evenings.

Take it easy Sgt. Rackert. It is reported that you told a very prominent officer that you killed 150 quail in one hour. What did you do "Bill?" You must have "gassed 'um."

Just got to hand it to Sgt. Spud Murphy and Corp. Woidyila. They must use magic but they certainly keep the detachment area neat and tidy at all times. There was a time when members of the I. S. D. were referred to as camoflouged civilians but a look at the area and the bearing of the members of the detachment today is ample proof that the I. S. D. is composed of soldiers prefaced by the word excellent.

On Friday evening Capt. and Mrs. Richard H. Eanes entertained at Biglerville one of the largest and loveliest dinner parties of the season. They had forty-six guests seated at one long table. Baskets of pink carnations were used alternately with pink tapers, making a most effective decoration. Pink place cards and nut cups carried out the color scheme in further detail. Those present were Col. and Mrs. F. C. Baker, Col. and Mrs. Woodson Hocker, Maj. and Mrs. Morrison C. Stayer, Maj. and Mrs. Harry L. Dale, Maj. and Mrs. Edgar E. Hume, Maj. John S. Sullivan, Maj. and Mrs. Charles E. Coates, Mrs. I. S. Coates, Maj. and Mrs. S. A. White, Maj. and Mrs. Patrick F. McGuire, Maj. and Mrs. H. C. Conner, Capt. and Mrs. Meagher, Capt. H. F. Mrs. I. H. Herwig, wife of Major Herwig, of the Q. M. C., stationed now in Atlanta, was the guest of Maj. and Mrs. Albert S. Peake last week-end. On Friday evening they honored Mrs. Herwig with a charming dinner party at Biglerville. The table had for its centerpiece a large compote filled with colorful fruits and candies of harmonizing color were used down the length of the table. There were twenty-eight guests.

On Tuesday afternoon the Artillery Bridge Club met with Mrs. I. L. Foster at her quarters. There were two tables of players and four tea guests. Mrs. James T. Dawson won first prize, Mrs. Julian Baumann, second. After the game chicken salad, ripe olives, hot-buttered biscuits and coffee were served.

Master Van Foster celebrated his fourth birthday with a delightful little party on Wednesday, January 30th. Soon after four o'clock the dining table was surrounded by a circle of happy children with beaming eyes and smiling faces, for there was a lovely snowy white Angel Food cake with four pink candles on it in the center of the table, and gay balloons and small baskets filled with hard colorful candies at each child's place. Soon fresh strawberry ice cream was served, and after wishes were made over the candles the cake was cut. After refreshments the children enjoyed some Uncle Remus stories and played with Van's many toys.

Capt. and Mrs. N. D. Woodward were hosts at a beautiful buffet supper on Friday evening at their home, honoring Mrs. Woodward's sister, Mrs. T. H. Hall, Jr., of Macon. The table had for its centerpiece a pot of pink geraniums surrounded by slim pink tapers in silver holders. Later in the evening tables were arranged for bridge and the prizes were won by Mrs. James Taylor and Capt. Richard O. Bassett. Mrs. Hall was given as a guest's prize a lovely desk set. On Wednesday Mrs. Lawrence W. Young was hostess at a lovely luncheon at her home honoring Mrs. Wills, of Virginia, who is spending the winter with her son and daughter, Maj. and Mrs. F. C. Phelps. The first flowers of spring, jonquils and forsythia, formed the lovely yellow centerpiece of the long table, at which the guests were seated. Covers were laid for Mrs. Wills, Mrs. Harris Pendleton, Mrs. Daniel G. Berry, Mrs. Lawrence Reed, her guest, Miss Blackford, of Asheville, N. C., Mrs. John F. Franklin, Mrs. Hinson, of New Jersey, who is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Roosma, Mrs. Harry E. Wells and Mrs. Alfred Brandt.

I told him if he didn't I'd get married, and I guess he thought he couldn't afford that.

WOMAN'S CLUB

Place—Polo Club.
Date—First and Third Mondays.
Next Meeting—February 6th.
Time—2:15.

On next Monday afternoon a program of unmistakable appeal will be presented to the members of the Womans Club. It is concerned with the South in superstition, song and story. Mrs. Charles W. Ryder will give a most fascinating discussion of voodooism. These queer, uncanny beliefs that play so large a part in the lives of certain groups of people have formed the backbone of the drama of Paul Green, the books of Julia Peterkin, the stories of Joel Chandler Harris, to mention but a few, and the public has become intensely interested in Voodoo. "Magic Island" by Seabrook is an example of the quick popular appeal of the subject. Mrs. Ryder is a student, and her reserach in this field will undoubtedly be most interesting.

Mrs. Frank Green will give a resume of the life of Frank L. Stanton, the late Poet Laureate of Georgia, after which Mrs. Ruth Drane Tatum, gifted singer of Columbus, will sing a group of his famous songs including "Mighty Lak a Rose," "Sweet Miss Mary" and "Jest Awearyin' fer You." Mrs. Tatum sang very successfully in Atlanta's Light Opera and won second place here in the last Atwater-Kent audition. Her southern voice is ideal for these dialect songs.

Mrs. Green will give an intimate story of the life of Joel Chandler Harris, revealing charming individual traits that one who has not known him personally would be unable to give. Then a Georgia girl who has told Uncle Remus tales to thousands of people will tell you a few.

After the program tea will be served.

THE LITERARY CLUB

The Literary Club enjoyed a most interesting meeting on Monday when a program of contemporary biographical literature was presented.

"The Naked Truth" by Clare Sheriden was interestingly reviewed by Mrs. Benjamin G. Ferris. She brought vividly before us the most daring woman in Europe who told the "naked truth" about her life. Clare Sheridan as a lonely, neglected, cruelly-treated child; as a debutante; as a wife and mother; a widow left to support herself and two children; as a sculptress whose work has found honored place in various galleries (She did Lord Oxford, Lenin, Trotsky, Charlie Chaplin among others); as a reporter of national and international affairs; as an interviewer of earth's most conspicuous people (among them Queen Marie, Mussolini, Michael Collins, Mustapha Kemal, Prime de Rivera and Obregon); her experiences as a traveler, a lecturer and a writer. The book is a wonderfully moving story of a woman who has an utter disregard for convention but has courage and endurance and determination that smack of inherent greatness.

"The Devil" by Alfred Neumann was skillfully reviewed by Miss Lily Blackford. In this biographical-historical medieval novel there is the psychology of the modern, making this book one of gigantic proportions. "The Devil" is Oliver Necker master barber of Ghent, who is intimate counsellor, vertitable guardian of the throne of King Louis XI of France. Louis XI was one of history's most satanic kings who held his power by craft and intrigue; and the way in which he rules and is ruled by Oliver, each becoming indissolubly merged with the other through love, hate, treachery and war, is the dominant idea of the book. Three motifs are interwoven—intrigue, love and death. The love story is a haunting, amazing triangle in which the king takes Anne, Oliver's beautiful and beloved wife, as his mistress only to have her lost to them both by her illness and death. This loss of his wife led "The Devil" to betray his king and join a confederacy to kill him, but the mystic affinity between them triumphed over jealousy and Oliver shifted to the side of the king in time to save him and to victimize his confederates. The motif of death emerges in the middle of the book gaining steadily till it dominates in the end. Louis feared death with an unnatural and enveloping horror and he called upon Oliver, in whom he saw at the last the form of the devil, to save him—to take upon himself the king's sins and keep death at bay. Oliver, diabolical in every other way, possessed a great love, and he makes it appear that he and not the king has been responsible for the cruelty and terror of his reign. In the king's name he does acts of clemency and nobility and in his own he decrees outrageous injustice—so that when the king dies, he makes the queen have him thrown into prison, condemned and publicly hanged. By so doing he insures the safety of the king's line as rulers of France.

"Leonardo the Florentine" by Rachel Annand Taylor was charmingly reviewed by Mrs. O. W. Hoop. It is a book filled with Italian art, Italian history, Italian personalities, Italian cities past and present, Italian Renaissance into which the life and work of Leonardo da Vinci is injected in overshadowing proportions. We see the great Leonardo as the superman of the Renaissance, the mystifying genius of all time. He was so perfected in mind and body that he could do anything easily. He was an engineer, a musician, an architect, an inventor (he had built a model airplane except for the motor 400 years before airplanes were invented) and master painter. As a scientist he anticipated Bacon's discoveries by 100 years. He was a philosopher, a mathematician and military engineer of renown. He was "Artist and savant, courtier and seeker, sceptic and mystic, sensuous but not sensual, beautiful and strangely beloved, Leonardo is the superman of the Renaissance, harmonizing all its conflicts and expressing all its vehement aspirations and insatiable curiosities."

Here's to Napoleon, the man who was always scratching himself.

CORP. FREELAND F. NEWMAN
Company "G," 29th Inf.

Corporal Newman, better known as "Big Newt" the man with a smile every time you see him. Newt is a happy go lucky boy, and all around athlete and an expert rifle shot.

Corporal Newman first enlisted at Columbus, Georgia, September 15, 1923, and "G" Company was the lucky outfit to get the big hearted Newt. Besides being an excellent soldier on the drill field and range or around the company, Newt played baseball with the Post team for the past five years and played with the Meritas team in Columbus, Ga. Newt brought home many close fought battles for the Post team and also for the Kelleys of the 2nd Battalion. Newt was the leading twirler at Fort Benning for the last few years, and a member of the Post football team and one of the star players of the 2nd Battalion. Corporal Newman is in charge of the company basketball team. They played their first game Monday afternoon at the Post gym against the 2nd Bn., Hqrs. Co., 29th Infantry, and beat them, the score being 30-21.

Big Newt is getting a try-out with Nashville team of the Southern League, and we hope Newt all the best of luck in the world. Corporal Newman is only 23 years of age. His home is in Columbus, Georgia. —War Set.

We've often wondered why women kiss each other when they greet. Maybe it's because some of them would never get any practice otherwise.

MORE STUDENTS IN BLUNDERLAND

The Problem and the Monograph sat down in A. H. 2.
"I'm hungry," said the Problem, "and I'll tell you what we'll do—
"What do you say, old Monograph—let's have a Student-stew?

"A luscious mess of Students, with a foaming stein of beer,
Some butter, bread, and vinegar; although I greatly fear
The present crop is tougher than the ones we got last year."

"I like my Students barbecued," the Monograph replied,
"But I can eat them any way—hard-boiled, or stewed, or fried;
So let's get them all together, and take them for a ride.

"If they're too tough we'll soften them by bouncing on a horse,
Then cover them with hooey and a little applesauce,
And grill them for an hour or two (although that makes them cross.)"

"Oh Students," said the Problem, "won't you come out for a ride?
"We'll show you Davis Hill, where Reds and Blues once fought and died;
And we'll attack, or we'll defend, whichever you decide."

A school of Students hurried up, with compasses and maps,
And playing cards, and poker chips, and cubes for shooting craps.
"It's all a game of chance," they said; "we'll get it right—perhaps."

They rode on for an hour or so, jumping o'er logs and ditches.
"I wouldn't choose the cavalry," said one, "for any riches;
I think this saddle's worn a hole completely through my breeches."

"The time has come," the Problem said, "for us to eat our dinner;
I feel that I'm becoming quite indubitably thinner;
I think I'll take this fat one first; he'll do for a beginner."

"Oh Students," said the Monograph, "I think that notion's fine;
The Problem's appetite is no more ravenous than mine;
So if you're ready, Students dear, we can begin to dine."

"But surely not on us, we hope," the Students then besought,
"That would be dreadful, after all the battles that we've fought;
We've tried hard to please you: do you think you really ought?"

"I think 'twill rain, Napoleon, after a little while;
And are there any crocodiles along the River Nile?
The Monograph responded, with a vague and secret smile.

"I feel for you," the Problem said—a tear was in his eye—
"You have my deepest sympathy; you are so young to die."
He swallowed three large Students, as he heaved a heavy sigh.

The moon was shining brightly as the Problem rose to go;
"I hate to leave this lovely spot; I have enjoyed it so."
He walked toward the picket line, regretfully and slow.

"Well, Students," said the Monograph, "I think we'll have to run;
"If you are ready, we'll go home." But answer came there none;
And that was scarcely strange, because they'd eaten every one.

BOOKS STILL MISSING FROM ACADEMIC LIBRARY

Two weeks ago there appeared in the columns of this paper an announcement stating that certain books were missing from the Academic Library of The Infantry School. To date these books are still missing, their whereabouts an unsolved mystery.

The absence of these books is causing quite an annoyance, disappointment, and inconvenience to both the personnel of the library and people who go there for the sake of getting books containing information pertaining to the subjects which these books cover.

Evidently these books were taken at a time when the clerks on duty were busily engaged. However, it is not meant to say that the parties carried them away with the intention of never returning them. In it's stead it is presumed that the books were loaned to them by one of the clerks along with other books to be used for reference work in the reading room of the library. It is also presumed, that the reader had books that were his own personal property but was in a hurry and accidentally got one of the missing books mixed with some of his own books and did not discover the fact that he had brought away a book without signing for it; that there being several other things in mind when starting to work in the morning he had forgotten the book he had "unofficially borrowed" and as a result that some time during the day it had been placed on the book shelf along with his other books.

The librarian would appreciate it if both officers and organizations would make a careful survey of their books to see if the missing books are among theirs. They will be easy to identify as they are marked "Property of the Academic Library, The Infantry School."

For the convenience of all the names and authors of the books are given below:

"The Story of Mankind," by Van Loom; "A Subaltern of the Somme," by Mark VII; "The Battle of Getysburg," by Paris; and "England's Happiness in a Lineal Succession," by Annonymous.

NEWS FROM COMPANY "A," 7TH ENGINEERS

A flood of suggestions having been received in the past week or two, we will endeavor to use a few of them.

A correction on some unknown's article in last week's News: Pvt. James Fisher is none other than our own sorrell-topped Corporal James J. Fisher. Incidentaly, and from observation, we would say that "Red" is the one that is getting that baby blue paint spread on the ceiling of the main theatre. His fatigue clothes are beginning to look like the eye soothing little overalls, that adoring mothers are now buying for active tots of four years or so.

All members of the Soccer team that trimmed "D" Company last Saturday are desirous of getting a carload shipment of old fashioned greaves (used by the ancient Spartans to protect their shins while battling with the Greeks.)

As there are two complete basketball teams in this outfit it has been suggested that the "second" team play preliminary games when the big five are scheduled.

A rather delicate suggestion was the one offered by a timid long-termer. When double-timing backwards is your right hand your left hand? A question yes but an answer has never been given.

We maybe accused of plagiarism, but we will try a well known method of announcing arrivals and depatures:

Arrivals—Tech. Sgt. A. H. Schier, H. & S. Co., 2nd Eng., Fort Logan, Colorado, attached for duty. Pvt. Henry J. Calogne, duty or what have you.

Departures—Pvt. John Kelly, discharge, by purchase. Pvt. John H. Hitchens, discharged, by purchase. The boys at the school will certainly miss Hitchens but no more than we will. Pvt. C. S. Brewer, leaves a gap on the Soccer team that will be hard to fill.

FORMER DOUGHBOY WITH BURRUS MOTOR COMPANY

Hdqrs. Company

Pvt. Stambaugh has utterly disregarded the "danger line" and started training for the championship of the Awkward squad." He will enter the ring under the monicker of "Baby Tornado." (One blow and he is done for.)

Sgt. Langston, our mess sergeant, was in the hospital for a couple of days. We sure thought we were out of luck for a mess sergeant but "Andy" had an ace in the hole and returned looking better than ever. Glad to see you back with us "Andy."

Pvt. Grace, otherwise known as John D., has the recreation room in a No. 1 shape and the crusaders of the cushion are showing their prowess on the long greens every night.

Pvt. Robertson, Crown Prince of the Radio Section, reported that all is well in the land of dots and dashes except for some static from Pvt. Perks and Sam Miguel.

The personnel of the third floor are going to get a petition up to have the buglers moved from headquarters. Every night when they sound "Tattoo," it wakes the tired ones up from their sleep. They also claim that "First Call" is useless, for the mounted orderlies are already up, and so are most of the others. Who could sleep when the cowboys get into action?

Lights out. Everyone sleeping. Crash, bang, bam, biff, boom, crash. Everybody is now awake. Earthquake? No. Artillery? No. Just Pvt. McLendon turning in for the night quietly and peacefully. (Apologies to "Time.")

"Red" Watson put in for permission to hunt and the first sergeant asked him where he wanted to hunt and "Red" replied, "Anywhere." Then when asked what he wanted to hunt he replied, "I want to find the guy that got that deck of cards with five aces." "Red" got no permit to hunt. I suppose that they were afraid that he would kill too many guys.

If a stranger was to step into the Court Section, at the 29th Infantry Headquarters, he would instantly sense that something unusual had happened, and naturally would be somewhat curious as to its cause. So as to ease the mind of our gentle readers, we are happy to state that no other than our honorably Henry Wilkerson (Court Clerk) has returned from a forty-day furlough. Many sighs of relief can be heard from the other members of the Court section.

Curiosity has set deeply in the hearts and minds of certain society men of this organization as to what will be the outcome of the final bout which will determine who will be the champion card sharks of The Loyal Order of Stuck Hogs.

Howitzer Company

We have been painting the floors with the new "glue" which has caused much inconvenience. "Tommy" Broom wants to know if any one ever heard of a human fly who weighed two hundred pounds and furthermore states that any one who thinks they can keep him in his room by painting the floor outside has another thought coming.

Pvt. Hill is back from furlough and though he hasn't his "uke" with him we hope to be able to arrange for some music somehow.

Pvt. Radford, who has been with us a short time, is to be discharged soon.

This has been our busy week. Guard, demonstration, experiments and so on ad infinitum. The "Top" has been tearing his hair and wondering where all the men who lined up for pay last month have gone to. We suggest that he have a "dry run" pay day and while they are all together line them up and march them out on demonstration.

FIRST BATTALION ITEMS

1st Bn. Hdqrs. Co.

Pfc. Taylor claims that Cpl. Maddox is the best meat cutter in the regiment. He thinks that with his own great ability as a talker and salesman, coupled with Maddox's great meat cutting ability, they should be able to establish one of the largest and most successful butcher shops in the world.

We have some new faces in the company. Pvts. Satterlee, Hendry, Rodriquez and Fowler have finished with their experiences at Recruit Cnter, and are now learning the rudiments of a soldier at Recruit School.

"Big" Stepp says that the proper way to hunt rabbits in the tall weeds is to watch ahead and when you see the weeds waving from the efforts of some rabbit making his get away, halt the rabbit, call it to attention, walk up and then shoot its head off.

"Papa" Atcheson is home again. He says that he had a good time on his furlough as long as it lasted.

It is rumored that Cpl. Maddox has web feet. He was seen wading around in a pond of water in the company street. As yet no one has been able to entice him into taking off his shoes.

Cpl. Peyton's box has turned into a radio. The other night while trying for distance he picked up the washing machine in the laundry.

Cpl. Lovelace, our company "shiek," is spending his nights in the city of Columbus again.

Sergeant Groves, out rabbit hunting Wednesday last past, with the true instinct of a born huntsman and economist, slipped upon bunny with his No. 9s, but bunny had died of old age during the Christmas holidays and was evidently lying in state. Orphan Annie and the Sergeant evidently don't know what their nose knows until too late. The sergeant fired, but jerked the trigger and flinched. The bunny got one volly over his dead body. —"Red."

Company "A"

Pfc. Kindur was discharged and reenlisted but is not going to take his furlough until the first of February. Pfc. Kindur has over ten years' service and was in France during the World War. He also has battle service with his overseas service. He has been in "A" Company for the past nine years and states that when the present enlistment is over he is going to re-enlist again for "A" Company. During this nine years of service with "A" Company he has been a cook and I believe that he is about the best in the regiment. Glad to see you re-up Joe.

Our new Color Guard is back from an emergency furlough and is sporting his bright star on his right sleeve. Pfc. Lyons also served in "A" Company for one enlistment. He was discharged as Corporal.

Some things that "A" Company personnel would like to know: Why and when is our Supply Sergeant going to buy the car that he has been talking about for the past three months? Why Mugsey has been staying around the company? Why Rosebud is anxious to see Bob? Why Freeman and Reeser are in town every night? And what Cpl. Sheriff's score is on the golf

Now, since Al Durden has told you about our golf course, I will tell you how it has progressed. We have an eighteen hole course on the 29th Infantry parade ground and two men already hold a record of a hole in one. Almost any time of the day, when we are not on duty, you may see our personnel playing golf. We are planning a tournament between the platoons and the winner will challenge any team in the post.

Company "C"

The writer regrets that there was an error made in the news from the organization for last week, to the effect that Corporal Aiken was in love and intended to purchase his discharge and settle down in civilian life. We realize that love makes one's mind changeable, Corporal, but we really thought you were in earnest when you made your intentions known.

The company has been worried for some time over Private Greens' condition. He has, for the past week, walked around the barracks with his head bowed, tears in his eyes, and would sit for hours and gaze out of the window. After endless hours of investigation, on the part of Bugler Sapp, it was revealed that Bugler Green lost his best pal and companion, caused by the death of his pet mule at his home in "Smut-Eye" Alabama. We are very sorry to hear of your loss, Green, but that mule could not live always. A mule's life is very short, and you know your pet was crippled.

Company "D"

Pvt. McDonald, R., has arrived back from furlough and brings back the good tidings that Guin, Alabama, is still on the map.

Rabbits seem to be the "rage," as several fellows are seen returning with their belts laden down, and a yarn telling of how many they shot to pieces. —Swan.

print again after an absence of a few weeks. Corporal W. B. Smith has officially resigned as company scribe due to the fact that said Cpl. is a very busy man these days and cannot be bothered with such a mental task. He looks tired. (?)

Sgt. Gilbert N. Stragand (the N stands for Nickels) is now a big bear, or is it bull, in Wall St. He has started to play the stock market in hopes of becoming the second J. P. Morgan. We hope he doesn't have any serious financial reverses or we might have to sell or mortgage the supply room.

Oh yes, we have three very new corporals in the forms of Ex-Pfcs. Boyka, Rich and Sales. We are all in an uproad as to which is the senior. Right behind them come our five men sporting a stripe on each sleeve, "Chick" Evans, Horseshoe Ryals, Moon Udell, Ramona Kelly and the well known Slum-Burner Ages are the lucky men. We want you to continue to do your best, men, and prove you are worth them.

Ray Hanna better stop using the phone so often or he is liable to receive a nice little bill all his own. Perhaps we should install a private phone for his benefit? How about it?

SECOND BATTALION ITEMS

Company "E"

The Company has been busy during the past week pulling demonstrations and ended up Saturday with a very rigid garrison inspection by the battalion commander, both in quarters and outside. The company was in excellent condition.

Beginning next week we are having competition drill and Sgts. (Shorty) New and Easterwood say that the other platoons will have to snap out of it to beat them.

We have two men on special duty with the Military Police Section, I. S. D., for a period of two week's probation, to be transferred if they are satisfactory. They are Privates Cottle and Pendergraph, and we feel pretty sure that they will make the grade, for they are number one soldiers.

Private Roorda has returned from a three months' re-enlistment furlough. His last hitch was in the Hawaiian Division, Hawaii, T. H., and he thinks that Ft. Benning is the finest post in the army.

Privates Hicks and Hornsby are back from furlough and are doing duty again.

We have four new men assigned to the company who are now in Recruit Center but will be turned to duty next week. They are Recruits Morgan, Wilson, Stringer and Gatman.

Cpl. Googe has been placed on special duty with the recruit school, relieving Cpl. Furman, who has been on duty there for some time.

Robert asked McCoy: "Well, well, Mack, how come your eye is all bruised up like that?" McCoy: "Oh, I was coming home from a party last night, and some awkward fool stepped on my eye." It seems as if McCoy crawled home.

Company "F"

Pvt. First Class Carl B. Shumaker, of this organization, has been selected as one of the Color Guards, Shumaker has been in this company about two years and has spent most of his enlistment as our recreation room manager. He is an excellent soldier and is fully capable of filling the new position awarded him.

"Chief" Otalvaro has announced that he is going to New York to manage the Square. He thinks that he can do a better business than any one they could select.

Company "G"

Sergeant Swaney and Corporal Smith, F. A., are taking the two count exercise with their right arms so that they will be in good shape for next month to take out another stack.

Private Vicknair is using Lemay's personal tools now. Lemay is over seas.

Lieuts. Donegan and Gailbreath are taking the course at the School for Bakers and Cooks. They handle the dough right.

Gen. Sherman said war was H— but Sgt. Sherman don't seem to think so because he has taken on again and we are glad to have him stay.

Private Brown on his first Guard. Officer of the Day to Brown, "I want your special orders sentry," so Brown took his special orders out of his pocket and gave them to the O. D.

The company is sorry to hear that the Captain is sick in hospital. We hope to see him out soon, as we miss him around the company and on the drill field.

—War Set.

Company "H"

On Wednesday, January 23rd, about 6:15 A. M., the following named officers and enlisted men of this organization conducted a pig hunt: Captain Nichols, Lieut. Killpack, Lieut. Brown, Sgts. Cody, Berish, Martin, C., Pyles, Cpls. Godfrey, McCann, Fracher, Acting Cpl. Robinson and Pfc. Ballard. All the "oink" hunters left Fort Benning about 6:30 A. M., out Lumpkin road to Mill creek, and the hunt was carried on in that area. Mounted, of course. During the course of the hunt, Sergeant Berish found a little piggie, apparently lost and hunting a home. Securing a firm (?) hold on one of its legs, he proceeded to start to the wagon where the pig was to be conveyed back to the company. He claims that the pig bit his horse on the leg, and rather than lose his mount and have to walk home, the pig was gladly given freedom. However, after some thirteen hours, three fine pigs were caught. Corporal Godfrey is to be given much credit for the capture. Sergeant Cody, the acting mess sergeant on the hunt, is credited with having tried to issue out an initial allowance of chow and calling it a day. However, a happy and riotious time was had by all and voted another hunt be held in the near future.

DATE SET FOR REGIMENTAL BASKETBALL TOURNEY

February 4th is the date set by Capt. O. W. Reed, newly appointed A. & R. officer, for the commencement of the tournament which will decide the regimental basketball championship.

Each battalion will be represented by the company team winning the most games in the battalion league recently concluded.

In the 1st battalion the probable choice will be Company "B" as they have a grand average of 1.000, winning two games and losing none. The 2nd Bats' hope is "E" Company, who also remain undefeated. The Howitzer Company will be the entrants for the spare parts.

The trophy for which these teams will battle is donated by the regiment and is a beautiful silver chased basketball mounted on a small platform of the same metal.

The games will be played in the post gymnasium. The choice of referees to be announced later.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS SHOWS UP EFFECTIVELY IN DEMONSTRATION

With struts screaming under the terrific strain, an enemy plane comes diving down out of the clouds. Where no menace had existed but a few minutes before, there was now a stream-lined terror rushing down with flaming guns, vomiting forth steel jacketed bullets that crashed and tore their way into the ranks of the clawing, panic-stricken soldiers that shortly before had been a regiment in orderly march to the front.

Back and forth the raider "strafed" them and then tiring of the game or perhaps fearing retaliation at the hands of other and unfriendly planes; he climbed swiftly for altitude and was gone, followed by a few hurried and ineffectual shots aimed at him by the pitifully few survivors.

Such as above was a scene typical of the Western Front during the World War. Ground troops had no adequate protection against air attacks. And, aviators knowing this, attacsked with impunity any body of troops they sighted.

But this is now all changed. The machine gun with the new anti-aircraft adapter has been brought to such a degree of effectiveness that it affords ample protection to a body of troops armed with a normal complement of these guns and constitutes a real menace to raiding air-men.

The present deadly efficiency of the weapon was strikingly displayed last Wednesday by "D" Company, 29th Infantry, under the command of Capt. R. A. Case, in a demonstration held before the student officers.

The company was in road formation when the target, representing the fuselage of an enemy plane, and towed by a combat plane at the end of a twelve hundred foot line, was sighted. It was allowed to come within 1000 yards before the signal for anti-aircraft fire was given. Within the short period of five seconds, the guns had been trained and bullets were zipping and crashing through the target.

The gun crews were stout in their contentions, with doubting members of the enlisted personnel of the air force present, that enough hits had been registered to bring down the plane before it possibly could have reached the gun position.

Much of the experimentation needed to perfect this deadly weapon has been done in Fort Benning. Capt. Leonard R. Boyd, of the Department of Experiment, worked out the theory and technique of the gun which brought about its evolution from a comparatively ineffective anti-aircraft gun, to its present form of potential deadliness.

The gun is a recoil operated Browning Machine Gun, water cooled and mounted on a cart having wire wheels with rubber tires. It uses a 30 Cal. bullet in belts of 250. The first and last fifteen bullets are of the tracer type and with a few tracers alternating with ball ammunition spaced throughout the belt. This gives the gunner an idea of where he is firing. Aiming through sights is impractical due to the vibration of the gun barrel, and is done instinctively by the man at the trigger.

This method of firing is likened to that done with the six-shooter of the "Old West" and calls for perfect co-ordination between the eye and trigger hand.

The gun in going into action need not be dismounted from the wheels but is merely uncoupled from the rear cart. The gunner then literally flings himself on to the shoulder piece, jams it under his arm-pit and commences firing. The whole being a matter of split seconds.

In indoor training and preliminary work, a twenty-two calibre automatic rifle is used, strapped along the side of the machine gun barrel. The reason for using this smaller calibre bullet is the tremendous saving in the cost of ammunition expended and also the element of safety in that the carrying range is smaller and will not endanger the lives of people passing in the near vicinity of the range. This method of training is greatly valued for use in Armories.

—O. W. R.

MAJOR BROOKE TAKES OVER HUNTER RANGE

Major John R. Brooke, Jr., who comes to the Twenty-ninth Infantry from Washington, D. C., has been designated by the regimental commander as the officer in charge of Hunter Range.

His principal duties there will be to co-ordinate the firing on the range and to give the firing of the recruit school priority over all others.

Major Brooke, while in Washington, served with the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, and his principal mission in the 29th Infantry is to supervise the small-bore marksmanship of the regiment.

SECOND BATTALION TESTS

A progressive series of competitive tests have been started in the battalion in the school of the soldier, squad, platoon and cmpany for the purpose of further improving the high standard now existing in those subjects. Particular emphasis will be placed on smartness and precision in the execution of close order drill, position of the soldier, saluting, cadence and steadiness in marching, manual of arms, at a halt and when marching and the position of the soldier.

SHELL AND PTOMEY TO MEET IN MAIN GO NEXT TUESDAY; PHILLIPS AND ASHER IN SEMI-FINALS

Straton Smith	vs.	Young Sewell	4 "

February 5th the mit slingers get back in the running again. Most of the Benning contingent are raring to go for January was a lean month for those who, through the prowess of their fists, are able to pick up some white money now and then.

In looking over the card offered for the initial 1929 show, especially the last three bouts, it looks as if the matchmaker is looking ahead for outdoor windup possibilities. Billy Shell, a Columbus boxer, well known to every patron of Benning's boxing treats, was practically unknown this time a year ago. Last February Billy was one of the many Columbus hopefuls who could be found hanging around the dressing room praying for a chance to appear in one of the many three round bouts that were staged at the time. One Columbus paper stated that Shell had won 14 straight short affairs at the post, but from Shell's own words he lost the first five in which he appeared and then got lucky and won the next ten. From July 1st, 1928, to present date it seems Billy has fought every chance he could get. After he cleaned up all that Benning had to offer, except Ptomey, he, with his manager, a Mr. Jordan, also of Columbus, hit the roads and toured Texas, Oklahoma and California. While on this hit and miss, self appointed tour, Shell, from his remarks, engaged in 11 contests, winning 8 of the number by the knockout route and the remainder by decision. Why, then, it will be asked, did he leave California and return to Columbus? Mates, it is the old, old tale. Any one connected with boxing is acquainted with the insurmountable difficulty the preliminary boy has to break in as a headliner. Reason the matter out. What promoter is going to gamble on booking a boy that has never been in a windup? It is true they all break in some time as headliners, but it is just as hard a row to hoe as the theatrical game on Broadway. How is it finally accomplished? Tex Rickard made the word popular: Ballyhoo!

How did Shell and his astute manager put over the ballyhoo? It is possible that while touring the country this couple met up with many of the boxing moguls who know the racket from every angle. Shell was a month with Armando Emanuel the light heavyweight, who gave Tommy Loughran, the champion, a big scare, but who collapsed in the seventh when he met Mickey Walker. Maybe it was Emanuel who whispered to Billy one of the ways to break in, and once in, stay there.

Last Sunday night Shell and Jordan put across their plan in big league style. Walking into the office of the Enquirer-Sun and finding the Sports Editor with a world of time on his hands (nothing happens in the sport world on Sunday), they unfolded the story that appeared in the Monday morning edition of the paper. Summed up it was a defi to the world in general. Billy would meet anybody, anytime, any place, for any sum. What is next? The fan reads, ponders, weighs, and decides. If Shell is really in earnest, why not? Thus you have the cash customers' view. Now for the promoter: It is the old story, supply and demand. If Shell's challenge remains unanswered the public reasons that someone is afraid to meet him; he is far from a set up. Well, why delve into the human brain? Shell put across his stuff and nothing remains but to wait until next Tuesday night. The demand will be supplied. Shell may spring a lot of California wrinkles on an unsuspecting audience, and again he might take a back spring into some one's lap. He can hit; so can Willie. It is believed that an outlay to see the encounter is a justified expenditure.

Shell is the first of the new blood to get a crack at the windup purse. Following on his heels we find two feathers who have shown marked promise this past year. They are none other than Pinkey Phillips, who exudes confidence with each breath, and the quiet Babe Asher. This go will settle for all time a much mooted post squabble. Again it is possible the winner will show enough form and boxing skill to work his way into a windup at a later date. Were this match to end in a knockout the winner undoubtedly would gain enough prestige to enter the column of headliners without any ballyhoo whatever.

A new comer at the post will bear a lot of watching Tuesday night when Grady Martin unloosens his artillery. The new pug in camp is dubbed Saginaw Seeley. The stranger has appeared on two previous cards, winning both starts with comparative ease. In meeting Grady Martin, Seeley will be up against the official trial horse of the Benning shows. The Columbus letter carrier is able to stand up and swap punches with the best around this neck of the woods. His only real setback was against Spencer Carter of Fort McPherson, a future opponent of Seeley if the latter gets by the mail man.

Straton Smith has a real task, also, to face when he lines up against Young Sewell the big brother of Baby Sewell. Tut Tut Taylor, the Medico, has been assigned a three-rounder with Seaweed Wilson, of the 29th. While the reliable and much improved Grumpy Gordy has the chance to let loose all his pent up fury against that sterling Tanker halfback, Louis Joris.

There is enough local interest packed into the coming card to make it worth while. True, it is devoid of any outstanding visitor but as a home talent treat it is worth any one of the three prices you have your choice to pay: 50c for a Ringling circus seat; 75c for the pretty gray loge perch or the 5th and 6th row ringside; or, if you made a hit this pay day you have the privilege of placing your chin in a water bucket right up against the ring for one long green back.

For those who have donated their all to the goddess of chance a free seat is in order for the amateur scraps which start February 6th. Look for the dope on the amateur shows elsewhere in this issue.

It is a matter of history that Jack Dempsey fought his first fight for a lamb stew. You have a chance for a gold medal. See amateur boxing notes.

February 5th the big time mit slingers get under way again. On the 6th the boys who rough it for the medals get their chance.

INFANTRY SCHOOL BASKETEERS WIN THREE VICTORIES THE PAST WEEK

The past week has been one of continual triumphs for the Infantry School basketball team. Matched against three of the fastest basketball teams in the country, the Musketeers turned in three victories for the week.

The first game for the week was played Thursday night between the Musketeers and the Stormy Petrels of Oglethorpe University at the Fort Benning gymnasium. After a thrilling first half with both teams battling on even terms, the Musketeers opened the last half with an offensive attack that swept the Petrels to defeat by the final score of 35 to 26.

Saturday night brought the St. Louis Americans, a team composed of all-star basketeers of All-American fame. Working with the speed and smoothness of a well oiled machine, the Musketeers handed the far-famed Cagesters from the "Show-Me" state, the surprise of their lives when they played rings around them to win easily 62 to 40.

In this game the Musketeers got away to a four point lead in the first half minute of play and were never headed. The first half ended with the soldiers leading 22 to 15. Came the final half and the slaughter. Roosma, Kammerer and Stamper really stepped on the gas. Franz and Strickler flashed through and around the visitors defense like phantom shadows. Forty points were scored by the Museteers during the half. The game ended with the Musketeer five on the big end of a 62 to 40 score. Johnnie Roosma led the scoring with 29 points.

Monday night saw the return of the Indians to the land of their fathers. Led by Chief Crazy Bull, the Red-skin warriors from the "Great open spaces" of the West, came to Fort Benning with the remarkable record of winning 27 straight games in as many starts this season.

In one of the greatest basketball battles ever fought at the Infantry School, the Musketeers broke the winning streak of the World Famous Indians, winning 36 to 33.

The game was featured by lightning playing and phenominal shooting by both teams. Some of the longest shots ever witnessed on a basketball court was sank by Kammerer and Sky High. At no time during the game was the teams separated by more than four points. For most of the time the score was deadlocked or divided by one point. This game left no doubt that the Musketeers of this season are the greatest basketball aggregation in the history of Fort Benning.

AMATEUR BOXING TOURNAMENT

1st and 2nd Battalions, 29th Infantry, Start the Simon-pures on Their Way

Wednesday night, February 6th, the first of the Fort Benning amateur boxing shows will get going in full swing. On this night the battlers from the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 29th Infantry, square off and start the leather throwing.

From the present outlook it might be well near the midnight hour before the final three rounder is decided. If all who enter, and the list is growing every day, get a chance to show their stuff the tournament might not be definitely settled until late in March. In this connection there is ample time to complete the test even if the entires double the present number. Not one man will be denied an opportunity to compete.

Last week's Infantry School News carried a complete story of the coming tournament. One omission was the weighing in time which will be at 6:00 P. M. the 6th; another, and one which many have inquired about was the price of admission. No charge will be made for any of the amateur shows.

As the tournament progresses watch this paper. At the present time a tentative schedule calls for bouts February 6, 13 and 20th. There will be no show on the 27th owing to the Sharkey-Stribling fracas down in Miami. With the start of March it is believed the elimination process will have been completed and the way clear to get the finals run off.

The Army Boxing Rules call for three two minute rounds, an extra round in case of a disagreement between the judges. Eight ounce gloves, a referee and two judges.

I want some notebook paper.
What size, please?
Oh, I don't care, just so it fits.

It used to be the skeleton in the closet, which each family was supposed to have—and was prepared to deny strenuously! While there are no statistics available on the prevalence of domestic skeletons—it is reasonably certain that in the bosom of each family, there is a secret spot, which may sometimes trouble their conscience—that is, the memory of those occasions, in which gifts from friends and relatives, on Birthdays, Marriages, Confirmations and what-not?—were sometimes not received entirely in the same spirit in which they were given! Then came those furtive moments, when one had to pretend to be overwhelmed with gratitude while one really was speculating how to get rid of the Horror—discreetly or otherwise.

While the title is a trifle obvious, there is something thoroughly human about the Play "The Teeth of the Gift Horse" by Margaret Cameron. It is a very plausible situation which might have happened just around the corner!

A smart and modern young couple have evidently subscribed to the "International Studio" and have furnished a fashionable Home with subdued hangings, Period furniture and tapestry panels. A devoted and lovable Aunt, however, has a fatal penchant for hand-painted pottery. It appears that she has donated some of her handiwork to her favorite nephew—needless to say, that there was no place for this kind of native object d'art and the gift was forthwith disposed of. Now Auntie appears suddenly upon the scene!!! It isn't good form to tell an ending, you know, so you must come and see for yourself.

I have dropped in on rehearsals: this is going to be a corking good show! The Play is taking shape rapidly under the clever and enthusiastic direction of Mme. A. S. Peake.

The Players

There are a number of amusing and delightful roles, in this Play, although the dramatic weight is about equally distributed. There are two outstanding figures, of course, Aunt Marietta Williams, played by Mme. W. Livesay, and Florence Butler, the young wife, played by Mme. E. L. Brine. The role of the Aunt is delightful—an old fashioned, lovable character which will win many friends. Florence Butler is the smart, chic, young matron—modern, efficient and yet solicituously tender for the feelings of the little Aunt. Richard Butler, beau-ideal of the young American husband—devoted, affectionate and just a trifle hen-pecked!—will be in the capable hands of Captain C. K. Fales. Anne Fisher, friend and counselor of Florence. Florence, is a fashionable, modern woman belonging to that smart, sophisticated, clever age, which Aunt Williams will never quite learn to understand. This sharply etched role will be played by Mme. E. M. Steward. Katie, the Irish Maid—one of the most effective parts, will be played by Mme. R. A. Case; this is rather a difficult role—it isn't easy to talk a genuine brogue, in a continuous performance. Devlin Blake, friend of the Butlers, is a debonair gentleman, collector of objects d'art and connoisseur of rare potteries; this part will be played by Captain A. St. John. Mme. J. A. Ladd will assist in promptlng.

I understand that the Martin Furniture Co., of the City, will furnish the Set.

The Time

The Play will be presented under the Auspices of the Dramatic Club, at its 3rd Series, in the Evening of February Eight, at half-past eight o'clock.—C. A. W.

ADVERTISE IN THE NEWS

If you have something for sale advertise in the Infantry School News. We have a circulation of approximately 2,000 and represents a population of nearly 6,000 officers, enlisted men and their families.

THE STUDENT—(By H. M. G.)

The outstanding events of the week were the reception and show put on by Messrs. Smith, Rogers, McClure, Brian, et al. Believe me, this horsey crowd sling a wicked scholastic course. They don't do it with mightily training regulations, blackboards, azimuths or sighting bars. They give you a good ringside seat and then trot out a snappy horse show, beginning with feeding and ending with the broom. I met every one connected with a stable except the stable sergeant's daughter.

Right in the midst of our morning chill Rogers announced that coffee would be served. You could have knocked me down with one strand of timothy or two of prairie grass!

Getting down to basic principles learned I noted the following:

First, that very little was asked or expected of a mule because he was too wise. What a useful lot of wisdom!

Second, that to a horse you are just a stuffed shirt. Dumb, the professor said. We will let it go at that.

Third, that "horse laughs" originated during the grooming by the first company officers' class held at Fort Benning. Lieuts. Brimmer, Hester, Rees and Stone of the present class were completely deafened by the horses' mouths being too close to their ears (the lieutenant's ears, that is. One can't be too careful about ears in a case like this.)

Fourth, that before feeding a horse you must feel, taste and smell his oats, bran, hay, alfalfa, etc., to ensure that it comes up to the standard of purity and morals required by the Bureau of Standards. However, the instructor cited examples of horses in France during the war that lived on corn meal and Cognac. (I noticed a shortage at the time.) He also said that during Jackson's Arctic expedition horses lived on corn beef and Brussel sprouts. (How they got Jackson from the Shenendoah Valley to the Arctic is more than I know, unless they got it out of one of those monographs we have been hearing so much about lately.) At any rate it all goes to prove that in case you have a cold in the head and your tasters off it doesn't really matter, provided you have the Cognac and the Brussel sprouts.

Its a swell course and the boys certainly know their oats.

Battery "A"

The battery as a whole regrets very much the loss of two of our best men, Privates Scoggins and Granger. Guess there was too much circingles and blankets and not enough chow.

We understand that Sergeants Peters, Brown and Privates Williams, Siegel, Tutchtone and a few more of the prominent sportsmen of the battery are contemplating a large hunt in the near future and we are looking forward to a great feast when they go into action.

Private First Class Polequin was discharged Sunday per ETS. and we are very sorry to say he didn't take on another "stack" with us. We believe that he had a tough time making up his mind as Lieutenant Bartlett used up ten pencils and five note books trying to show him that the Army was the best proposition in the world.

We hear that 1st Sergeant Combs bears a grudge against all Kewpie dolls since he has found out that they are not enough protection against listeners and observers when he is trying to carry on a secret conversation with one of the opposite sex.

We wish to advise Private Harvey that he should buy up a large supply of chewing gum and stay on the job, or acquire "radioitis" or take up preaching if he wishes to stay in the race.

Battery "B"

The big day on which Battery "B" appeared and functioned at full war strength has passed and can be marked down as successful. We all learned something. We all know now that it takes practically the whole battalion in peace time to make a Battery "B" in war time.

The B C detail which did not work very well on Thursday, was at it's best on Friday. We found out why: Private First Class Hodge had persuaded the Sergeant at the Hospital to let him off for a day and was seen riding the reel-cart.

Our basketball team has played very well so far and we are expecting further success.

The young Lochinvar of our battery, Private Lewis, was seen last Sunday riding in a limousine with two of the fairer sex in the battalion area; too bad that the limousine belonged to the M. P.

The morale of the men of this battery has improved to a great extent since we have "maneuvres limbered" with a band; we might suggest to have music while the men are grooming, so that we would see also pleased faces around the picket line.

The men of the battery are curious to know the meaning of so many NCO meetings. Since they also have various NCO schools in the afternoons we presume something important is coming off shortly. We only hope it is not the chevrons.

We are pleased to see that the "gold brick" section of our battery has returned from the hospital, but much to the disappointment of our first sergeant they were all marked "quarters."

Many of our men have been trying to crash the gates into this "gold brick section" but Corporal Bailey, the chief of the section, claims that his section is up to authorized strength and cannot enlist any more men at present, but mutual transfers can easily be obtained. Those desiring a rest period and not having sufficient funds to take a furlough, should take this opportunity and see Corporal Bailey.

We understand that Corporal Darby has written the Bethlehem Steel Corporation for a new steel leg No. 1 to replace his wooden on. Loaning out shavings for tooth-picks has weakened it considerably.

Battery "C"

It is reported that Corporal Goodwin is becoming very popular with the fair sex in Columbus. Judging by the number of telephone calls he receives with effimnate voices speaking when asking for him we can readily say that it must be true that he has a large cortege of followers.

Sergeant Chewning states that Corporal Chapman is developing some of those traits shown by Shylock in the Merchant of Venice.

The standard of stupidity by which the battery personnel judges each other centers around Private McDuff who is now the headquarters clerk.

Two new men have joined the battery, their names being Privates Wiggins and Parker. Weare glad to have you with us fellows as it is a grand old life, and a grander outfit.

It is reported that Pvt. Horn, who was discharged the earlier part of the month, has re-enlisted in the Q. M. C. of this post. He'll soon be back with us. They just can't stay away.

Private Garner states that when he enlisted and joined the battery eighteen months ago, that at that time he only had twelve months before he would be discharged, but now he still has eighteen months to do and that he is thinking of retiring. May you live a long and happy life Snag.

The battery amateur basketball players are setting quite a record for themselves, having won both of their games played last week and are going in to win the pennant to be awarded the team winning the most games in a very stiff schedule which will comprise two games to be played by each battery every week in February.

Corporal Winslow states that the only reason that he cannot star at playing basketball is that the ground is too close to his head.

Famous words: "Private Curry will you make me a martingale."

It is reported that Sergeant Hall Sundayed in Columbus and enjoyed an enormously excellent time.

Hdqrs., Hdqrs. Bat. and Combat Train

The recent shake-up in the battery has left some who had plenty, with nothing, and gave those who were without, a little more. After the dust had settled, LaPine claims he has the best job. Socially it's not so much, but agriculturally its very "Up-Bringing." It's guaranteed to grow hair on a cue-ball.

Beanpole has gone to New York where he will no doubt get his tonsils sun-burned from looking up at the high buildings. As usual when Cpl. Cole leaves, there was the flood of tears and lamentations in the North Highlands district. One great consolation is that he will soon return.

Our disabled saddler, Cicero Fuller, had better get busy and make "that" bridle. That's all right, Cicero, 95 years from now no one will ever know that you made bridles.

Cherry returned from furlough to find that he had been promoted from orderly to Corporal. Some one said that he was of no value as an orderly, hence the promotion. Stay in there Larrup and show the usual smoke, and how.

Our dashing orderly room clerk, since his promotion to PFC., is out now for greater scalps, namely the Peroxide Blonde. How about dealing the scribe "in."

Corporals Arnold and Cormier made a dashing trip to the city last Saturday night via the ten o'clock bus. What causes that? Means and ways of said call from the city gets them sooner or later, and from all indications preferably later.

PFC. Bolton was out for a little canter Sunday afternoon, all shieked up like some crown prince. Why not try wearing a helmet and boxing gloves, Bolton?

Much interest is being taken throughout the battery in regards to artists with the cue ball and cue. During a very hotly contested game last Sunday Sergeant Koski, for some reason was framed. Or at least Waino had it figured out that way. Better get you a time keeper, Koski.

ENGINEERS HOLD FIRST PLACE IN SOCCER LEAGUE

The past week has been featured by fast and hard fought soccer games among the teams of the Intra-Mural soccer league of the garrison.

The Engineers finished the week in first place, winning three games in a row, their victory over the Howitzer Wednesday afternoon giving them an undisputed claim to the top position.

The Machine Gunners of "H" Company seem to be jinxed. In four starts they have been unable to win, but each game has been lost by one point after a hard fight.

Special Attraction at Main Theater Wednesday Evening

JAZZ AND HARMONY TREAT FOR FORT BENNING

University of Alabama Glee Club at Main Theater

"There will be a hot time in the old town" of Fort Benning, Wednesday night, Feb. 13, when the University of Alabama Glee Club stages its enthralling performance on the stage in the Main Theatre. Many people picture a Glee Club as having long, drawn, sober faces which put out sentimental or sweet music; not so with the college club, and particularly the U. of A.

Their's is a most versatile program with something doing every minute. They jump from spmphony to jazz, to classic, to college songs, and to negro spirituals. The periods between these jumps are enlivened with instrumental outbursts, such as a banjo quintet, a trio of guitar or an octet composed of these two instruments. Most everybody likes xylophone; Mr. Cameron is reputed to play this instrument with a deftness that is most captivating.

This Glee Club is composed of twenty-six members, all of whom are live wire college students. They have traveled and given concerts throughout the South to such an extent that their performances can honestly be termed professional.

Newspaper press reports from cities where this club has shown have been most high in their praise, making varied comments concerning them as follows: "They gave a hot time in the old town," "A most versatile program," "Startled the crowd," "Brought more encores than members of the club could fill," "Outbursts of harmony and jazz enlivened the city." With such recommendations as these, it is certain that the Benning audience will spend a most enjoyable evening on this occasion.

Reserved seat tickets will be on sale for officers at Officers Club and for enlisted men at Service Club No. 1. The sale of these tickets will start at 1:00 P. M. Saturday and continue until 6:00 P. M. Wednesday, February 13, after which time all unsold tickets will be on sale at ticket booth of the Main Theatre.

GEN. G. H. ESTES STUDENT AT INFANTRY SCHOOL

Will Take Refresher Course.

Brigadier-General George H. Estes, a former resident of Columbus, arrived at Fort Benning last Tuesday. He will take the refresher course for the next month. After completion of the course, he will take command of Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

General Estes is a native of Alabama. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia and the United States Military Academy. Upon graduation from West Point, he was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry. He was assigned to the 20th Infantry, and saw service with this organization in the Philippines, Cuba and Hawaii. During the world war, General Estes was on duty with the 76th division (national army) at Camp Devens, Mass., remaining there until detailed to general staff duty in Washington in January of 1918. He received appointment as brigadier-general in the early part of 1918, and was then assumed command of the 35th infantry brigade of the 18th division at Camp Travis, Texas. He remained in command of that unit until it was demobilized in 1919.

General Estes was in command of the 65th Infantry in Porto Rico from 1924 to the summer of 1927, when he was assigned to duty as chief of staff of the ninth corps area at the Presidio of San Francisco. Upon completion of his foreign service in Porto Rico, he was succeeded by Colonel G. W. Helms, formerly executive officer of the Infantry School.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS LEFT FORT BENNING LAST SUNDAY

Secretary Davis and Asst. Secretary Davison Spend Three Days Here as Guest of Commandant.

The Secretary of War, the Hon. Dwight F. Davis, and the Assistant Secretary of War, the Hon. F. Trubee Davison, left early last Sunday morning, after making a three-day visit at the Infantry School, the guests of the Commandant, General Edgar T. Collins.

They arrived at Fort Benning on Thursday of last week. That afternoon a review of the combatant troops was held in honor of the Secretary of War, after which the distinguished visitors were taken over the garrison and were shown the various building projects now under way.

Practically all of last Friday and Saturday, the Secretary and the Asst. Secretary spent in hunting on the Fort

Insignas Presented to Combat Squad

Col. Pendleton, the commanding officer, presented insignas to the members of the chief of infantry's combat squad Tuesday at the regimental review. In making the presentation, Col. Pendleton congratulated the squad on the soldierly abilities and their hard work in connection with the winning of the coveted honor. The squad formed in front of the commanding officer and staff for the occasion, and immediately following the presentation, the squad formed to the right of the reviewing officers, while the regiment passed in review.

Care of Animals Movie Interests Men

A moving picture depicting the care and equipment of animals was shown at the regimental theater Wednesday. The picture was taken at the cavalry school at Fort Riley. The films portrayed the manner in which animals should be groomed and other duties incidental to the proper care of our equine comrades. The picture was highly instructive and was much enjoyed, especially by the men from the mounted organizations of the regiment.

Corporal Josey Appointed Drum-major

Corporal L. E. Josey, Company "G," was appointed the new regimental drum-major last week by the commanding officer. The appointment to this much coveted position was based on stature, soldierly bearing, neatness, and general appearance. The new appointee has all of the above qualifications; he is well over six feet in height. He is also an athlete of no mean ability, having been captain of his company football team during the past season. Although Josey has had little experience in wielding the baton, it is quite apparent that he is a very apt student, and will no doubt be an expert in that line before long.

Non-Coms of 29th Honored as Orderlies for Sec. of War and Assistant

Two sergeants of the Twenty-ninth Infantry had the honor of being appointed orderlies for the distinguished visitors, the Secretary of War, the Honorable Dwight F. Davis, and the Assistant Secretary of War, the Honorable F. Trubee Davison, who were here in Fort Benning for a two-day visit last week.

The two non-commissioned officers appointed were selected on a basis of soldierly qualities, appearance and past record. Sgt. Frank G. New, Company "E," was the orderly picked for Mr. Davis, and Sgt. F. Mintz, Company "B," acted as orderly for Mr. Davison.

Hdqrs. Co., 2nd Bn.

After Saturday's inspection we are lucky to appear in print at all. We stood it though and taken as a whole we were not so bad. We are glad to get that kind once in a while to keep us awake and pepped up.

Someone said that Chick Evans should draw a compass and carry it with him. He wanders off and gets lost and it takes him days sometimes to find his way home. How about it Ray?

The three Musketeers Holland, Carnes and Lamastus are in an uproar about something and the company sleuth has been unsuccessful in his attempt to fathom the mystery.

Wonder what "Fat" Palmer is going to do with that "thing" he has bought recently. It has four wheels and no brakes. He should jack the horn up and run a new car under it. We'll auction it off for you, Fat, and buy you a wheelbarrow with the proceeds. Alright?

Breezy Lavender has at last reached the pinnacle. His claim to the title is well deserved. Lavender works at his hobby more than any man we know of and therefore we truly believe he deserves credit. Ask any one in 2nd Bat. Hq. Co.

Well, Hinote has gone and we fear that before he returns many of us will have become used to bathing in cold water, although we hope not.

Company "G"

Old soldier Richardson is back, after spending a three-months' furlough in Louisiana. Reports are he had a fine time. We are glad to see the old man around.

We are glad to see Captain Deane out of the hospital. The captain is now at his home sick in quarters but we hope to see him with us again soon.

Well we have a fine boxing team and I hope we get over the 1st Battalion on the 6th of this month.

Pvt. Brewer from second platoon was picked to be the best drilled refruit at 29th Infantry Recruit School. Fine work Brewer, keep up the good work.

Talk about a mess sergeant, we've got one now, "Sergeant Sherman," the best we've ever had and he sticks around the mess hall at meal times. Keep the fine work going, Sherman.

Pvt. Cooper, J., the company sheik, is back with us again. Look out Columbus, the heart crusher is coming back on the job.

The company has been worried about Pvt. Norris, who is at the hospital with double pneumonia. Norris is getting along pretty nicely now, though.

Cpls. Covington and Landry left Fort Benning on a thirty-day furlough to Louisiana. We wish them a fine time.

Corporal Kirkland gave the command "Right Dress." Recruit Brown said, "Corporal, I ain't no girl."

Hdqrs. Co.

At last the world is about to know the great secret of knowing how to keep from being embarassed in society. Pvt. 1cl. Fuller, the composer of the song hit, "Your The Grape Fruit Juice in My Eye," has consented to have this little rule of "Eddiket" brought to the light of the world for the benefit of the human race. Pvt. Stambaugh too, here you are, "Eddiket" Rule No. 87659, to keep peas from rolling from the knife first soak in a can of grade "A" syrup, the knife, not the peas, then draw the knife from the syrup and in a harsh voice give the order "right dress," immediately the unsuspecting peas will line up and the rest is left to the lady or gent wielding the implement of conveyance, for the benefit of Pvt. Darnell we will call it the knife.

Our dashing cowboy, Pvt. Stockberger, is back for duty again after a long rest in the hospital. 'Tis reported that he was muscle bound between the ears. That is very doubtful for such a thing to happen in so void a place.

In closing "Slim" Cameron wishes it announced that he heartily endorses the Old Gold cigarette because it doesn't make him cough when he reaches for a Lucky and then when the Lucky don't hurt his wind he always takes his mile stroll for a Camel in order to enjoy his Fatima after supper.

—R. T. Murphy

Company "A"

During our attraction last week, we had a recruit who happens to be Jewish and Bob Birdsong, who for no reason at all started a show all of their own. The members of Company "A" were well entertained by these two boys and believe that there is quite a bit of talent in the company. Recruit Winnick seems to be a natural commedian.

Company "A" was the escort company for the Secretary of War on January 31, and the company commander was highly complimented on the performance of the organization. Motion pictures were taken of the escort by the 29th Infantry News Reel and will be shown at the theatres in the near future.

The company was inspected by the national guard officers class on Saturday, and from all indications we believe that the inspection was highly satisfactory.

SATURDAY, FEB. 9

"THE DANGER RIDER," starring Hoot Gibson in an interesting spectacle presented by Carl Leammele. It is a fast moving story of jail birds and a beautiful girl in a convict colony. In this story Hoot poses as a notorious ex-convict in order to gain admission to the reform ranch run by the girl. When the criminal, whose name he has taken, appears on the scene, Hoot has to act mighty fast to get himself out of trouble, and at the same time save the girl from several of the ex-convicts and others who are plotting against her. This story is captivating.

"Do Gentlemen Snore." Max Davidson.

SUNDAY, FEB. 10

"WINGS," starring Charles Rogers with Richard Arlen, Clara Bow and backed by an unexcelled cast. This is considered one of the strongest pictures ever produced. It was taken at San Antonio, Texas, with the assistance of the United States Army; over two hundred aeroplanes were used; an exact duplication of a sector of St. Mihel was constructed under the supervision of those who actually fought there. In addition to the rousing thrills presented at the field of battle, both in the air and on the ground, are tempting snaps of the world-wide-known "Follies Bergere of Paris," with its fair damsels. Coupled with the follies picture is the passing show of weary soldiers seeking diversion and portraying the uniforms of England, France, Australia, Canada, Belgium, Japan, Italy, Servia, Portugal, Brazil, India and Greece. This is precisely the same picture which shown on Broadway at almost prohibited prices and drew packed houses.

CHARLES (Buddy) ROGERS-CLARA BOW IN THE PARAMOUNT PICTURE "WINGS"

A special music score has been secured by the Main Theatre management, and will be used under the direction of Sergeant Ralph R. Wright, musical director, for the presentation of this picture.

MONDAY, FEB. 11

"NED McCOMB'S DAUGHTER," starring Irene Rich with Robert Armstrong and Theodore Roberts in a thrilling melodrama. It is a rum running story laid on the coast of Maine. A prohibition agent is murdered, his body hidden in an apple filled crib; inforcement officers arrive to search the cellar for liquor and nearly discover the crime. There is a rum running episode resulting in a pitched battle—two children are kidnapped—there is a thrilling race in the night—bootleggers are eventually captured, but only after fierce struggles. This picture is so chucked full of thrills that you will grip your chair arms until your finger nails pain you.

TUESDAY, FEB. 12

"COURT MARTIAL," starring Jack Holt with Betty Compson in a gripping drama of love versus duty. In this picture are presented attractive sequences in gorgeous technicolor. The story relates the adventure of a young army captain, who attempts to capture a beautiful girl who is leader of a band of outlaws. There are beautiful ball rooms and tender love scenes, also clever ruses and tragedies in soul-stirring adventure on mountain tops where man meets man at the edge of dangerous precipices. This is an unusually captivating picture for Mr. Holt.

"Growing Pains." Our Gang.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 13

"SALLY'S SHOULDERS," from the newspaper story by Beatrice Barton, starring Lois Wilson. It is a tale of the jazz regime. It's appealing theme has to do with a struggle of an unexperienced young girl who shoulders many hardships in an effort to support her family; she risks her own romance and happiness in her sacrifices to save a wasteful brother and an ungrateful sister. A quiet home is converted into an inn—good patronage is turned away by a wild crowd of flask-toting youngsters. There are scenes in the "night owl," a notorious roadhouse. Liquor is transferred from this place to Sally's basement in order to avoid a raid by prohibition officers —the ruse is discovered, her place raided and padlocked — additional hardships beset Sally. Eventually, after many trials and tribulations, the plot unwinds to the satisfaction of the audience.

"UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA GLEE CLUB" presents two hours of comedy, jazz, symphony and harmony. Something doing every second. These fellows are chucked full of energy and enthusiasm. You will enjoy their program. This show is entirely separate from the motion pictures.

THURSDAY, FEB. 14

"THE MASKS OF THE DEVIL," starring John Gilbert with an all star cast, in a romance laid in the world's most romantic city, Vienna. It is a story showing the conflict between the wickedness and nobleness of human nature and depicts a man without a conscience, seeking and finding women that appeal to him. He continues his devilish activities until pure and honorable love set his passions aright.

EVA VON BERNE and JOHN GILBERT IN "THE MASKS OF THE DEVIL"

Gilbert plays the part of the devilish as well as the honorable nature. The story is firey and forceful.

"Hot Soup." Cameo.

FRIDAY, FEB. 15

"GERALDINE," starring Eddie Quillan and Marion Nixon in a great comedy of American youth, from the story by Booth Tarkingtn. It is the story of a girl who lacks attractiveness—a young man takes an interest in her and gives her pointers in dressing. A former spark, with whom she was in love, sees her in a notorious dance hall staging a party—she is given liquor, it goes to her head—the place is raided—this former spark tries to save her, but is beaten; when arrests are made he poses as a girl, is thrown in jail into the woman's ward; in the meantime the girl's father is notified that she has been arrested. The following day the young man is brought up before the court for impersonating a woman—affairs start to untangle and present a most pleasing climax. The story is chuck full of wit and humor as well as drama.

The Dramatic Club

THE PLAYS TONIGHT

The Plays of Tonight

The Dramatic Club will present tonight, at half-past Eight o'clock, at the Main Theatre, the 3rd Series of its delightful entertainments, which have become a feature of the social life of this garrison. The Plays are "Ile," by Eugene O'Neill, the "Teeth of the Gift Horse," by Margaret Cameron and "The Maker of Dreams," by Oliphant Down. The first two plays have already been reviewed in previous issues of the News.

The Third Play

The romantic Shepherd and Shepherdess of the XVIIth Century, who flit gracefully through the Gobelins of the Louvre or gleam in the brocades and satins of Watteau and Fragonard, reappear in the Italian Comedia as Pierrot and Pierette—the eternal and careless lovers. They have an imperishable place in operatic creations; they run through the sentimental street-songs of Italy—until Pagliacco sounded the somber note of tragedy that vibrates in the love stories of the Latin Race.

Yet—Pierrott and Pieretta will always remain the embodiment of romantic illusion, of enchantment and young love with its wistful make-believe, its pathetic blindness and illusion.

"The Maker of Dreams" is spun around Pierrot and Pierette, two dancers in a company of "Strolling Players"—somewhere in Old England—once upon a time. They are both young. Pierette is lovely but Pierrot does not see it. He is the restless seeker of new sensations, blind to delights so near at hand. Pierette is devoted, self-effacing—womanly attentive to the domestic, practical tasks while he roams in quest of adventure.

Suddenly appears the "Manufacturer"—a figure from the story-book of children and fairy-tales, a kindly old man "the sort of person that children take to instinctively"—says the Play! He becomes acquainted with poor little Pierette and seems to divine her story and her secret—that she loves the negligent Pierrot. Who is the mysterious stranger—older than the Ages and yet as sprightly as Youth!

The Players

This delicately woven Play contains only three roles Pierette, Pierrot and the Manufacturer. The story is simple and charming that the famous English Actress Hilda Trevelyan played it with preference; it was first presented in 1912 at the Royal Theatre of Glasgow.

Pierrot will be played by Lieut. R. C. Oliver. This is an appealing role—the young gay philanderer who is, at heart, a good fellow. Pierette, of course, is a stellarrole. Miss Maxine Hall will play it. I have dropped in on rehearsals: Miss Hall plays a charming role with taste and refinement; a natural grace and youth combine to make a stunning Pierette!

The difficult evanescent figure of the "Maker of Dreams" is in the capable hands of Capt. E. Bush. Through the delightful phantasy runs the haunting melody of a piano accompaniment, as finely spun as the Play itself: Capt. J. K. Rice will play the Score, as the erratic Musician. Mms. J. K. Rice will assist in prompting.

The imaginative, illusory character of the Play will find expression in a clever and colorful setting.

Besides playing an important part, Lieut. R. C. Oliver has directed this clever Play.

BOXING AT FORT BENNING

The Ledger congratulates Captain J. J. Wilson, promoter of boxing at Fort Benning, upon the character of exhibitions given at the Fort. Tuesday night six bouts, totaling thirty-four rounds, were staged in the big gymnasium aud the sport was clean throughout.

A noticeable feature of the matches was the conduct of the men at the ringside. The large room was packed with soldiers and, of course, they were all anxious for the soldier boxers to win decisions. But during the matches in which civilians took part the sportsmanship of the spectators was very fine.

The contests were staged in an atmosphere different than that usually found at boxing matches. The Fort authorities do not permit smoking in the gymnasium, and the result is very gratifying. The air is pure and vision is good, all of which adds to the enjoyment of those at the ringside.

Boxing is part of the training of a soldier and the army is giving considerable attention to glove contests. There is no finer exercise, and we hold that the training in boxing and baseball, which every American soldier in the World War had received, had much to do with the record made by our troops at the front.

SMALL PROBLEMS FOR INFANTRY

(By I. Gotta Ess)

February 4th.

Dear Ike,

I missed writin you last week, but our "Ink" was sik an I had coal to tote an' everything. Ike, there is a Major Lewis, who has features like Geo. Washington, who puts on four monygrafs a day, one before each stewgent an sorta links em up. He belongs to the 4th. Sect. an has a sense of humor. In fak, youd never know he wuz in the Section with Lange. Axel Hawkensen fooled Lange when he finished 8 mos. campaign with Lee in 8 seconds and robbed our wild-haired Major of a chanct to lean on the buzzard. It was good to see our Majors face fall.

Ike, this course is gettin quite hi-falutin with its terms, first "data" pronounced like dayta, then de-tail with a aksent on the tail, and now Senay is emasculating german divisions with automatics.

Truman Smith hez muved away fum Lange. He states he wants to be where he can enjoy sum of the monygrafs. Ike, these monygrafs hez ruint my digestyun. We used to get an hour for lunch. Now, at 12 or 12:12 Maj. Lange passes out papers for a crazy game called "ask me anuther" in whitch we students answer kwestions about recent monygrafs whether the monygrafer has stated the answer or not. An whuts more we are again fed to the 4th. Section for meat, as they aktully grade us on our profishensy in Pelmanism. Shades of Svengali!

Maj. Rader spoke last week on areplanes an whut they carry:—viz: masheen-guns, bombs and bums. Also Doc Cook (not the North Pole one, another) held forth on the Einsteinism of taktiks, in which he explained that the preponderism of mass is a collection of molecules in a ticklish area with a view to startin sumthin. Guess he means cooties. Ike, Eh? Enyhow he anserd 4 of the kwestyuns submitted by stewgents and wrapped up 41 others in smiles and teknikal fraces and left em on the platform. Ike, he's all right but he cant turn loose fum his tesorans and put out meat for well-meaning men.

Ike, why is it that when the big-bugs cum over to heer a lektur, ALL the instruktors are on the rail-birds-row, and when no big-bugs cum over, an instruktor hez to fite his own way thru it, alone? (Cor-ordination) Charley Ryder put out sumpin good last week, Ike. Ran him a reel war, with sojers, staff and everything. It was a releef to aktully see how it works on the ground instead of in sum of these instruktor's minds. The 29th. Inf. boys put out for us in great style. Roberts two-tone voice sownded forth last week on Regt. in Defense, an it wuz good but Roberts dont like defense, yu ken see that. He an Charley Ryder are fond of attak. (With tanks). On Monday (this week) Maj. Hill ran Roberts Regt. in defense. It wuz another "NO argument-problem" Ike, and wuz right good. We now hev a new stewgent trik. All the "Yes-men" gang up in frunt of the instruktor when he puts out the skule solution and nod there heds and shout "right" an so forth on that PART of the problem they hit on the noze, It makes em feel good and besides an instruktor apreshiates knowin thet a few men agree with him. Ike, sum one hez sent Abbut a blak-han letter. He haznt askt a kwestion in a week. An, Ike, Quinn hez quit his 10-minute-to-twelve kwestions, so we are doin fine. Get busy on thet shirt-hat-short-overcoat plan Ike! fer mownted problums.

Also Ike, fix up my gasoline-allowance fer me, My gas bill fer Major Hill's problems is sumpin feerce. He starts them enywhere fum Cusseta to Myamy. The Asst. Commdt. let us off, Ike, on Friday at 11:00 A. M. THAT helped morale and almost caught up on the time we lost on Maj. Lange's cross-word-puzzles. If it wuznt fer the Asst. Comdt., Ike, this crowd would be mawled to deth by ambishus instruktors.

Plez Rojurs sung his way into fame when he rid up to Sulfur Springs singing "Tro—hut," Ho -o-o-o, in tenor, but with a base look on his fase. The class helped him out a bit on the Ho-o-o-o-o. Plez wuz so far away fum the stables he looked sik.

Ike, my frend Elam Stewart did right well, last letter, but whare I sed "I cud grin a bear it" he put "grin an hear it," an you know Ike, thet Bob Dark is the ony wun whose grin can be hurd.

Now thet we are gettin some "motor-muvement" of trupes, lets give Plez bak all his horses an try it, eh, Ike? My ol lizzie eats gas, an Im in favur of Unkle Sam ridin me out to sum uv these problums. Cook hez wore out one flivver on Maj. Hill an his new one stuk up like a sore thumb in the brambles and sand spurs of Suffer Springs. Stivers wuz with Maj. Hill weighin out the castor-oil, fer the boys. They tuk it O. K. an as per uzual. Its O. K. when you are told whut youre getting AND "Whut I want out of you gentlemen is so and so."

Slim Stephens riz up last week, Ike, an sed he had a flok of "Horseshoes" but wuz game to take a few more ef they'd put out the faks on sum of these problums an not fule him eny more with abstrakt disertations on subjeks whitch hev not yet bin taught in the course.

The map-room hounds are now dangerous, Ike. Ef you go up there with enything, you cum out with nithin, and short a few teeth. Personal propurty means nuthin in the map-room. Ted Wessels is up there every noon-night-holiday an Sunday, layin spagetti along the Eyetalian frunt. I askt him "Hows spageti today, Ted?" An whut he sed cant be printed, Ike, but its season is fast approaching.

Elam Stewart rote me an ast me cud I spare four bits fer the Inf. Skule News. Now Ike, yu see its like this. When I go in to turn in my weekly "hooey" I pinch wun, so why shud I spend the prise of wun of Maj. Hills problums? Besides, having moved to the Editorial page last time, I hev got to break out on the frunt page befor I shed four bits. That is two weeks for the gas-meter.

Doc Stayer hez got the crowd all on there feet now, with very few indisposed. I spose the Taktikal Twins will knock em all haywire for him in a week or two and poor Doc will hev it all to do over agen. Keepin us fum goin nutty is Doc's bigest job. Doc is agin the monygraf bizness, I think. Whitch shows thet he appreshiates how much it detraks from lernin how to be an ofiser an a trupe-leader. (?)

Enyhow, Ike, when I lead trupes again, Im not woryin wether im pointin at a map with my rite or left hand, or wether the letters on the map ar an inch-an-a-haf high. Jus give me a map (NOT USCGS.)

We are now heering all the pursonal experiences of the monygrafers, Ike, and they ARE modest. Each wun refers to himself as "the Cumpny—Kumander" an blushes, an lays a barage around himself of 4,000 shells to the skware inch etc. and then dont TELL us whare he wuz at durin this formation. Dont worry, Ike, WE know whare they wuz.

Well Ike, yu now owh me a long letter, so set bak an lets hev your opinyun on the sitooation. Fix up thet shirt-hat-coat-mounted bizness, Ike, dont delay eny longer.

Yures hopin fer an Ess,
"Rite on the nose."

P. S. Tack apeered befor us last week. He did right well on Outpost, but he lost ground by giving us HOME WORK! Were givin him wun more chanct.

Voice over the Phone: Central, I want a policeman badly.

Operator (sighing dreamily:) Gee, kid, so do I.

A FEW NOTES PICKED UP HERE AND THERE

Major W. L. Roberts, Inf., instructor in the second section, has been appointed as coach of the Inf. School basketball team for next year. Major Roberts is a graduate of West Point and was picked on an all-star eastern team in 1913.

The company officers classes will have a series of "little" monographs from March 7 to March 22. The talks will be of fifteen minutes duration. Detailed announcement will appear later.

The fights at the gymnasium Tuesday night drew the record attendance of 1375, according to the records of the athletic office. This is the largest number of people to witness a fight card in the gymnasium. The basketball game between the Inf. School and the World's Famous Indians drew an attendance of over 1200, which is a record crowd to witness a basketball game at Fort Benning.

An article about the record of Willie Ptomey appeared in a recent issue of the Montgomery Advertiser. It was an article that appeared in a recent issue of the News, written by Al Durden, sports editor.

The outstanding noticeable event of the week: the completion of the tennis courts. More about this later.

We understand that Sgt. Clark, the golf instructor, is slated to appear in a future golf tournament in Atlanta.

The graduation exercises of the National Guard-Reserve Officers class will be held Wednesday, Feb. 13, at ten o'clock, in Assembly Hall No. 5. General Collins will address the class and present certificates to the graduates.

WOMAN'S CLUB

Place of Meeting—Polo Club.
Date—First and Third Mondays.
Next Meeting—Feb. 18.
Time—2:15.

On last Monday afternoon a very interesting program was presented at the regular meeting of The Womans Club. The theme was "The South in Superstition, Song and Story." Mrs. Frank Green, who grew up in Atlanta and knew personally both Frank L. Stanton and Joel Chandler Harris, gave a delightful sketch of the life of each of these famous Georgians. She told episodes in their lives that revealed their individuality and gave the background out of which certain famous poems of Stanton and letters and stories of "Uncle Remus" grew. After her life of Stanton, Poet Laureate of Georgia, Mrs. Ruth Drane Tatum, of Columbus, sang most beautifully Stanton's well known songs: "Jest Aweary-in' for You," "Sweet Miss Mary" and "Mighty Lak a Rose."

Then Mrs. Charles W. Ryder gave a most fascinating paper on "Voodooism" in which she revealed many rites of Voodoo, the origin of many customs with which all of us are familiar, the worship of fetish, the art of the conjurer, the mysterious powers of red flannel, stump water, asafoetida, rabbit foot, cross mark, moonlight, screech owls, snakes, etc. She gave an interesting discussion of the antiquity of folk lore and illustrated by the famous tar-baby story, and the story of the will-o'-the wisp.

After Mrs. Ryder's exposition of "hoodooing" is was most fitting to have "Uncle Remus" for he has crystalized these ideas in his immortal stories. After Mrs. Green's charming talk on Joel Chandler Harris, Mrs. W. H. Vinson told two Uncle Remus tales—"Brer Rabbit and his Famous Foot" chosen because of its rich store of Voodoo, and "Brer Rabbit, He's a Good Fisherman."

It was the pleasure of the club to have as honor guests at this program Mr. Julian Harris, eldest son of "Uncle Remus" and his distinguished wife, Julia Collier Harris, whose excellent book "Life and Letters of Joel Chandler Harris," was the source of much of the material used in Mrs. Green's paper.

At the conclusion of the program Mrs. Edward G. Sherburne and Mrs. Palmer Earle were hostesses at tea.

The Literary Club meets next Monday, at which time Mrs. Charles W. Ryder will present at program of fantasy in contemporary literature.

General Orders
NO. 2.

VISIT OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR

1. The Honorable Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War, upon completion of his recent visit to and inspection of this command and station, expressed himself as eminently pleased with everything he had observed. He stated that because of its established and known reputation for excellence he had expected much at The Infantry School, but that the fine appearance and marching of the troops, the evident high state of discipline and morale, and the marked evidences of accomplishments in all that pertains to training, to the upkeep of the Post and to the creation and maintenance of athletic and recreation facilities, had all greatly exceeded even his highest expectations. He was in fact so favorably impressed with all that he saw that he specifically directed that his commendation be published to the command.

2. This high commendation can only be the source of deep gratification and pride on the part of each individual and organization of the command, and the Commandant desires to express his appreciation of the continued efforts of individuals, organizations and activities by means of which alone such fine results can be attained and maintained.

3. This General Order will be read to each organization at its first formation after receipt and a copy will be posted on each organization or activity bulletin board for a period of ten (10) days.

By command of Brigadier General Collins:

D. H. Torrey,
Major, A. G. D. Adjutant.

FREEBOOTERS AND ARTILLERYMEN ARE VICTORS IN SUNDAY'S POLO GAMES

After a lay-off of six weeks, Benning poloist went into action at French Field last Sunday afternoon, two fast and highly interesting games being played by the teams of the garrison.

In the first game the Galloping Gunners and Demonstrationist Riders staged a pretty battle for four chukkers, each team scoring two goals. In the fifth chukker the Artillery staged an offensive drive that broke down the Doughboy defense and scored three goals during the chukker to take the game by a 5 to 2 score.

In the second game the Freebooters and Students played a fast game that was featured by hard riding and clever stroking by both teams, the Freebooters winning 9 to 6.

Is your son's education at college of any real value?

Yes, indeed. It has entirely cured his mother of bragging about him.

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

The outstanding event of the week for the company officers' class was the two-day holiday given to the advanced class. We haven't gotten over it yet and there is no telling when they will get over it. It seems its been a hard winter at Thompson's corners for the boys, so they up and gave them this holiday.

Without wishing to insinuate anything, I might mention that the company officers' class has also been under a terrific strain lately. In the first place "C" Company was gassed. You can hardly look at a "C" Company man now without having him burst into tears. To make it trying for all concerned "B" Company is accused of doing it. "B" Company offered to match Horan against McBride or Gregory against Rogers, winner to take all, or all that was left. As additional satisfaction "B" Company will throw in Pat Crowell.

"B" Company doesn't want to get into bad order with its neighbor. Remember the gas officers' story of the nigger who didn't put his gas mask on during a gas attack because he thought the accompanying smell, as it were, was his dugout partner Henry.

We will now move forward to other trying situations. We had another "estimate of the situation" graded test in tactics. The advance party of those who attack when they should have defended, was led by Captains Craig and Chapman. Chapman wants to know the best thing to do when you get a U. Both he and posterity would be glad to receive worthy suggestions.

Other trying situations were seeing Dietz drive a four line team of mules. They were good mules, too. No. 3 oats also proved very trying as a breakfast food for the three who tried them during the late horse and feed examination.

But the shock cases that Major Stayer has had to work over the hardest outside of bridge hours, occurred during Major Rhett's conference on combat in the woods. Major Rhett had just mentioned the effectiveness of these wood tactics during the Indian wars of 1757, when he had occasion to use the word alternate. There was a sudden hush throughout the crowded hall. The major had mispronounced the word. He had placed the accent on the wrong syllable! I don't know what kind of a military offense you would consider this. I suppose it would be like wearing button shoes with the uniform.

At any rate, one can see that we have been under a very trying strain, and further, we have a machine gun examination on Friday and another on Saturday. So any day or days after that, excluding Saturday and Sunday, will be entirely satisfactory.

WHY NOT CEIL ENTIRE AUDITORIUM IN MAIN THEATRE?

This question has been asked. Acoustics are the chief consideration in the installing of improvements in the auditorium of the Main Theatre. The advice of theatre architects has been followed: the ceiling and decorations are now being installed with the view, not only to beautify the theatre but also to improve acoustical properties.

You undoubtedly recall having hollared into a long tube or tunnel and hearing it roar—the auditorium of the Main Theatre is sixty-five feet wide by one hundred and sixty-four feet long; if a ceiling was constructed covering all of it, it would form a tube or tunnel of these dimensions, and the consequence would be the amalgamation of sound to such an extent that words spoken on the stage would be unintelligible to the audience.

Our finest theatres are so constructed that there is a dome or circular space at the top which absorbs the vibration produced by sound. This permits sounds emanating from the stage to reach the audience distinctly, and uninfluenced by the vibration of previous sounds.

In an effort to make sound travel in the Main Theatre to its best advantage, improvements are being made as follows: The first section in front of the proscenium arch has been ceiled with celotex, a vibration absorbing material. This has been raised as high as the metal super-struction of the building would permit. The theory being that when sound leaves the stage it is deflected out into the audience and vibrations are absorbed by this section of the ceiling. The space toward the front of the theatre from this section, acts as a well, and vibrations which have not been consumed by the celotex enter this well and become absorbed in space.

Another element which enters into the acoustics is the scheme of decorating. You will observe that panels are being placed along the walls; these panels serve two purposes: First, they are decorative and, second, vibration absorbing. They will be filled with a substance known as craftex, which has properties very similar to the celotex used on the ceiling. The walls in between these panels are being covered with a flat paint which will aid in the defection of sound. It is presumed that the panels alone will not suffice, consequently, craftex is being put on the walls below the cement shoulder which runs practically the length of the building.

The insuring of perfect acoustical properties is a matter largely of experiment based upon theory. A careful study of these theories has been made in the Main Theatre, and it is hoped that the work now being done will materially improve transmission of sound in this building. We can promise this; that when the decorating is completed it will give the building a true theatre atmosphere.

PTOMEY WINS OVER BILLY SHELL WITH K. O. IN FOURTH

Pinkey Phillips Loses to Babe Asher

(By Al Durden)

Before the largest crowd of fight fans ever to witness a fight card in the gymnasium of the season, Willie Ptomey, all-service middleweight champion, knocked out Bille Shell, of Columbus. in the fourth round of a scheduled ten round fight at the Fort Benning arena last Tuesday night.

Though game and willing the Columbus south-paw was completely outclassed and helpless before the army ace. For two rounds Ptomey toyed with Shell much the same as a cat with a mouse. In the third round Ptomey unleashed a furious attack that ended with Shell taking the count, the bell saved him. Ptomey lost no time in the fourth. As a tiger stalks its prey, Ptomey shuffled forward with both fists flying. Shell went down once under a crashing left to the jaw. He was up at the count of nine. Ptomey ripped a left to the stomach that doubled Shell up like a jack-knife, a right hook to the jaw dropped him for the fatal count.

In the semi-windup Babe Asher and Pinkey Phillips fought ten fast and furious rounds that were chuck full of action from start to finish. Asher was awarded the decision but a draw would have been popular. Though Asher seemed the harder hitter of the two, Phillips was on the aggressive at all times and was boring in at the final bell. Both boys are a credit to the army fight game.

K. O. Gordy added another scalp to his belt with a two round knock-out over Louie Joris of the Terrible Tankers. This is Gordy's second knock-out in as many starts.

Tut Taylor and C. Weed Wilson, bantams, fought three fierce rounds with Wilson taking the verdict. Wilson had the Medic on the verge of a kao in the two opening rounds, but he held on and came back in the final stanza to rock Wilson from pillar to post.

Young Seeley won handily over Grady Martin, of Columbus, in a six rounder. Seeley came close to a knock-out in the final round, the bell saving Martin. Young Sewell, of Columbus, and Stratton Smith, of the Tanks, fought four whirlwind rounds to a draw. This fight was fast and full of action.

The card was one of the best ever witnessed here and the large crowd of fans were highly pleased with the evening's program.

ENGINEERS LEADING IN BENNING SOCCER

The past week has been one of continual triumphs for the Engineer soccer team. Three games and three victories give them a total of seven games won and none lost for the season and places them far out in front in the league. Their nearest competitors from the Howitzer company have played only four games, winning three and losing one. Their defeat was at the hands of the Gin-Ears. The Howitzers are confident of breaking their winning streak in their next meeting.

"D" Company of the 29th Inf., is in third position with two wins and three losses. The machine gunners deserve better luck as two of their games were lost on exceptionally bad breaks.

The Tankers have only managed to win one game out of four played, while "H" Company of the 29th Infantry has not entered the win column this season. They are holding down the cellar position with six losses and no wins.

WHO'S WHO!

PFC. JAMES MAITLAND

Private First Class James Maitland, winner of the marathon race held Thanksgiving day, was recently commended by the Commandant on his athletic prowess. His time for the four and one-third mile jaunt was 24 minutes, 57 3-5 seconds. The race was hotly contested by a runner from the Tanks, who was neck and neck with Maitland until the last turn around the track, when the Infantryman, by a final sprint, forged ahead to capture the trophy. Besides being adept in the long races, Maitland is counted well when the dashes are run. In the post meet last year, he placed in the 220 yard dash and was a member of the winning mile relay team.

Private Maitland is modest when it comes to referring to his running ability. He declares that prior to the time he entered the army he had never run, what you might term as a "real race." He added, however, that when he was in school back in Henderson, New York, he didn't have much trouble in keeping the "fast boys in sight."

During his first enlistment he was placed on special duty with the M. P. Company and did not have an opportunity to show his ability along the cinder path.

Besides being an athlete, Maitland is an expert rifleman, both with the Springfield and the automatic. He has been in Company "F" 29th Infantry for the past four years.

Battery "B"

We again fired a salute. This time we had the honor of welcoming the Assistant Secretary of War. We surely get practice, but firing salutes is a pleasant interruption of the daily routine. Some of us had pay day. We surely paid out for clothing. One luck is, though, this pleasant day comes but twice yearly.

We received from Uncle Sam six recruits to be trained in his army. Boys, you came in the best battery of the best battalion, and you are welcome.

There is a new building being built where our paint and oil sheds were. It took an ordnance tractor to move the last. Charlie P. Waldrop could easily have moved this little house with a mule team.

Private First Class Fields is becoming a real short timer and within a few weeks it will be Mr. Scopes again. We believe to express the feeling of all the men in the battery as we write that we want you to re-enlist and stay with us. This is the last appeal, boy.

The rehearsal was playing compared by what we did on Tuesday. We had a real day, and we hope our superiors are satisfied with the work we all did.

Our camouflage was alright. To prove this we give you some of the remarks we heard from the officers' class:

This is A Battery, as we saw B Battery in abetage in the woods. They cannot fool me, said one. I see the two guns. (This gentleman surely did not see the other two guns.)

A good idea to keep the sun out of the gunner's eye. This gives you an idea, but shortage of space does not allow us more room for this.

We understand Cpl. Davis, Pfc. Harper and Giddens have joined the caterpillar club, as they were seen flying of a caisson.

We knew that Sgt. Lein has a pressing club, but it was a surprise for us to learn that we had in the battery a womenhaters club.

Again it was necessary for the battery clerk to get out the roster to check off names when the female president of the club called the roll over the telephone.

Again mentioning the salute, we noted that Cpl. Freddie Davis was left in the battery all by himself; the reason must have been that we were firing blanks.

Battery "C"

Private Zeman has gone to Fort Sill, Oklahoma, where he will take the Battery Mechanic's course.

Corporals Fairbrother and Goodwin spent the week-end in the city. We do not know how they manage to get by with it, but some how or other they do.

Sergeant Barksdale is reported to have spent the week-end in Fort McPherson, where he was visiting our embryo lieutenant, Private Beck, who is going to West Point Prep School.

Sergeant Hall states that if the total number of times he had been pillaged in the past month were match sticks and were placed end to end, that they would reach from Fort Benning to New York City.

Private McDuff is under the deluded impression that the words "Requisition" and "Application" mean the same thing. I would hate to see you requisition a marriage certificate, "Lad."

We do not know to whom the aliases Mr. Jenkins and Mr. Peacock refer, but it was observed that a certain party took lots of offense at the mere mention of said aliases.

Corporals Nugent, Driver and Chapman motored to the city Saturday evening and returned, stating that a pleasant time was enjoyed by all, and how.

The amateur basketball team of this battery is building up qite a record for themselves, having played three games of a series and having won all three games, thus taking the lead in the series and they are out for the pennant, so Red Paschal would have you believe.

Ye scribe having had this little job wished onto him by his would be successor Private McDuff, hopes for some kind of bad luck to happen to said Private McDuff; say for instance that he gets out in company and has forgotten his handkerchief or that he runs up against a pat hand.

Battery "A"

The battery has been demonstrating its efficiency by firing at moving targets the past week and from the reports received the faster the targets were moved the more hits the battery as a whole registered. We understand the section chiefs have asked permission of the battery commander to shoot at clay pigeons next with the 75's since their gunners are so good.

Last Monday while firing on the range the executive officer gave the command "salvo left," Sergeant Temples, chief of the 2nd section, who must have been thinking of his past, was heard to repeat the command to his section in these words: "Sal go left." Why left Sarge? Sometimes right is the shortest way out of a hole.

Private Roper, who plays the part of No. 4 in the 1st Gun Section, was asked by the executive while on the range last week to give him the reading of the combination fuse after he had cut a shrapnel. Roper, after hesitating, handed the shell to No. 3 to read and told the executive there wan't any reading on the fuse but only figures. Bushwa Roper, we know to our sorrow that you can read 3 plus 4 equals 7.

We wish to announce that Sergeant Regan has a wrist watch for sale "cheap," that is not only guaranteed to run but has circulated over more territory and returned home more times than any other watch in captivity. Why sell Sarge, Christmas is only ten months off?

Private Thurston says there are plenty of things to ride in the artillery besides horses—and not half as dangerous. Be careful Arthur, the supply of sick books might run out.

Corporal Chapman says that not all the acrobats are in the circus, as he saw Corporal Sailers stand on his head the other night so lang that he had to borrow bus fare home.

Mr. Oscar: Come out some time with your wife and meet my wife.
Mr. Wilde: I haven't any wife.
Mr. Oscar: Well, come out anyway and meet the maid.

Jonah to the Whale: Open your mouth a little wider, please. This won't hurt you much.

National Guard-Reserve Class

PRESENT MEMBERSHIP OF CLASS FROM ALL PARTS OF COUNTRY

A Farewell Word From the Class

(By Col. C. C. Chambers, Inf. Res.)

The membership of the National Guard and Reserve Field Officer's class represents a typical cross section of the so-called "Civilian Components" of the army of the United States. There are twenty of us and we are from practically every corner of this great republic; from the granite hills of the native state of our Commander-In-Chief, the President of the United States, to the sugar plantations of far off Hawaii; from ice bound rivers of northern Wisconsin to the levees of the turbulent Mississippi in southern Arkansas; from the fir-clad slopes of majestic Mount Ranier in Oregon where, "men are men and women are glad of it" to the red clay cotton fields of sunny Georgia, our host state, where we have found men to be friendly and hospitable and women gracious and beautiful.

Occupationally as well as geographically, we cover a wide range; agriculture being represented by a farm manager and a sugar planter; manufacturing, by a saw-mill operator and a paint manufacturer; merchandising by a shoe retailer and a wholesale baker; a pharmacist, a florist and a manufacturing sales agent; transportation, by a railroad executive; a post office official and an automobile dealer; craftsmanship by an interior decorator and two construction contractors; the professions by a lawyer, a banker, a soldier, and abstractor and a pedegogue.

This wide coverage, so to speak in area and interests represented, is to my mind, symbolical of the nation-wide reputation and prestige of Benning. Not only in military circles is the Infantry School known and respected as the best organized and most ably conducted of our service schools, but in the civilian educational world there has been considerable favorable interest expressed in the sound pedagogical doctrine and effective teaching technique which is being practised here.

The primary mission of the Infantry School is, of course,, the technical and tactical military education. The splendid manner in which this mission is being carried out is shown by the great improvement in methods and procedure of training organization and management which we have all noted in the Infantry units of all components of the army during the past few years.

But I feel that the helpful and constructive influence of the "Benning Applicatory System" of education is being felt more broadly than within the confines of the military establishment. The hundreds of National Guard and Reserve officers who have been enrolled in various courses here have taken back home with them, not only military knowledge to be passed on to their units, but many practical lessons in sound organization, wise planning, careful preparation, forceful presentation, skilful instruction and sympathetic examination, which are as valuable to them as business men, as they are worth while to them as soldiers.

All of the present field officers class have been impressed with the simple, direct common sense, basis of all the instruction. The basic principles have been given to us in such simple logical form that we have not become confused in a maze of technical and theoretical possibilities and text books elaborations. The subject matter has been splendidly organized and outlined

WIDE SCOPE OF CIVIL PURSUITS IN NATIONAL GUARD RESERVE CLASS

(By Paul L. Cromelin)

It is most interesting to take notice of the wide scope of civil activity represented by the twenty members of this class. The entire class only twice duplicates any single vocation, with the exception of farming. For farming, besides having one dyed-in-the-wool representative, claims two other members of the class as its followers in conjunction with other employment.

Manufacturing is represented twice by Lt. Col. Manford G. Henley, of Indianapolis, Indiana, a manufacturer of paints, and by Lt. Col. Francis V. Logan, a manufacturer of—ah—ah—of Boston, which means that we know not of what.

Contracting is also represented twice by Lt. Col. Albert Nathness, originally of Norway, but now the leading contractor and builder of West Menomonic, Wisconsin, one of those towns that one reads about. The other devotee of this profession is Major John J. Ostrander, of West Detroit, Michigan. Major Ostrander specializes in sewer construction, one of the few newer reform movements that our most eminent Dr. John Roach Stratton has overlooked.

Major James H. Rayburn, of Cotton Plant, Arkansas, is both abstracter and realtor, besides being an aviator in his spare moments. We are not quite sure just what powers the title abstracter carries with it, but we imagine that such a gifted person must be one who is able to prove that we do own the lot that we have just bought. Thinking back sadly to our flurry in Florida real estate, we are convinced that Major Rayburn has an immense advantage over just an ordinary realtor, like the one, for example, that we listened to.

Major Samuel Brown, of Camden, N. J., is an interior decorator. We once knew a fellow in the Navy who was in the habit of boiling down G. I. Varnish for the alcohol that he could get from it. But probably he was an entirely different type of interior decorator.

Major Charles E. Pell, of St. Albans, Vermont, lists his occupation as "Post Office, U. S." As in the case of the purple cow, we would rather "see than be one." However, we imagine that Major Pell is the power behind the post-cards up in the Maple Sugar country.

Colonel Lewis C. Pope, of Dublin, Georgia—if you please, sh!—is both sawmill operator and farmer. We hate to pull an old saw and suggest that the Colonel has been through the mill, but the facts confront us.

Major Ralf C. Paddock, of Frankfort, Indiana, is both farmer and shoe retailer; which the sideline, we do not know. But being a Hoosier, we imagine that the Paddock farm produces rubber with which to save the soles of its owner's Hoosier brethren.

Major Harrie S. Mueller, of Wichita, Kansas, is a florist, and probably to no small extent responsible for the popularity of sun flowers in the civilized sections of the United States.

Major Ogden J. Ross, of Troy, N. Y., has more initials after his name than that Butler chap of Columbia University. This is how he lists his occupation. "Sec. to V. P. & G. M. of D. & H. R. R." To those unused to anagrams this is most confusing, but we have decided it. It means "Yes Man to the Boss!"

Captain William Rice McElroy, of Pittsburgh, Pa., one of the four Pennsylvanians to come here clean from Pittsburgh, is manager and owner of the McElroy Co., a national sales company for radio manufacturers. We would think that owning a company would be first in most of our estimations, but Captain McElroy evidently thinks that managing is the more important thing, and owning purely a secondary matter.

Colonel Andrew T. Spalding, of Honomu, Hawaii, is a sugar planter. Colonel Spalding first saw the light of day in Scotland, but not allowing himself to think of it, he set his feet in the path of the sun until he reached the Pacific. Doubtless his morning porridge tastes a wee bit sweeter to him by growing his own sugar for it.

Colonel Charles C. Chambers, the ranking officer of the class of 1929, and rather proud of the fact that the class affectionately calls him their "Top-Sarge," is the executive officer of Culver Military Academy, at Culver, Indiana.

Major Edward A. Conley, of Marshalltown, Iowa, is the manager of Conley's Daily Bread Bakery. We imagine that back in I O way, the Major might be found baking the hot-rolls for breakfast, for he is certainly one of the few early birds to arrive each morning at the class room.

Major William Fish, of New Brighton, Pa., is the acting divisional adjutant of the 28th Division, Pa. N. G. We once heard of a chap who had a pet fish, and being of a curious turn of mind, he decided to find out what the

MEMBER NAT'L. GUARD CLASS FINDS OLD FRIEND AT FORT BENNING

Major Ogden J. Ross, 105th Infantry, N. Y. N. G., a student member of the National Guard and Reserve Field Officers Class, has found at least one old friend since his arrival at Benning. An inanimate friend to be sure, but one which has brought back to him many vivid memories of World War days.

The object we speak of is the tank that is placed on the hill overlooking the entrance to the post. This tank is seen by everybody entering the post, and is visited by almost everyone who stays at Fort Benning for any considerable length of time.

The battalion to which this tank belonged supported the 27th Division in the War, and this particular tank supported in one engagement the 105th Infantry, Major Ross' regiment, in which he was then a Captain.

The 27th and 30th American Divisions in this engagement against the Hindenburg line — Sept. 29-Oct. 20, 1918—were a part of the British Fourth Army in a push on a front between Cambrai and St. Quentin.

The American Divisions occupied a front between the towns of Bellicourt and Bony, and it was on this front that the only possible passage for tanks could be found. Here the Escaut river passed through a tunnel leaving a space of a thousand yards or more as the only route available for the tanks.

Major Ross says that "realizing this fact the Germans mined the entire area through which the tanks had to pass and made it pretty hard sledding for them."

This engagement cost the 105th Infantry fourteen officers and about two hundred and fifty men on the death list alone, while the 106th Infantry, of Brooklyn, N. Y., on their right suffered more severely.

and presented to us with such forcefulness and skill and enthusiasm that it has held our interest and admiration from the very first day.

The demonstrations have been very impressive and instructive, more so because they have been conducted under actual training conditions with the human equation always present to emphasize the "hits and misses" that always occur in combat and which are unfortunately nearly always overlooked in map problems and carefully rehearsed demonstrations.

The cordial welcome which has been extended to us on every hand and the delightful hospitality we have enjoyed at Benning have emphasized the splendid "Esprit de corps" of the Infantry and have made us mighty proud of our comradeship in the Army of the United States.

In spite of the fact that we haven't been able to enjoy the pleasures of "Monographs" and Wednesday afternoon golf with the advanced class, we have rubbed elbows and chatted with them at the Officers Club or the machine gun range and on Houston Hill and have found them delightful "school mates." We keenly regret that we cannot stay on and add our applause and congratulations when they get their diplomas in June.

The class has asked me to express for them through the Infantry School News sincere appreciation for the many courtesies extended to us by the entire Post from the Commandant on down to our genial company clerk and the two faithful drivers of the Biglerville buses. Our especial appreciation is extended to the Assistant Commandant and his splendid corps of instructors, to our company supervisor, Maj. Wilson, and our medical officer, Maj. Stayer, and to the demonstration troops of the 29th Infantry and the Infantry School Detachment, and lastly we would pay tribute to the many ladies of the Post who have entertained us so delightfully in their homes and have strengthened our conviction that there exists no more charming hostess than an army wife.

reaction would be to said fish if its daily water ration was cut down a wee bit each day. After standing quite a few of these reductions, the fish decided that it might as well prove the experiment, so it jumped out of the old ancestral bowl, and from that day on followed around at the heels of its master much in the manner of our pet dog. All went well until one day the fish fell over a log into a stream and was drow[illegible] We haven't the slightest idea of [illegible] relation this has to Major [illegible] Fish, but it just sounds like [illegible] story.

Major Christopher Sterry Long, of Pontiac, Illinois, is an automobile dealer, and from the confident manner that he wears so easily, we feel positive that he is certain that when better Buicks are built, General Motors will have somehting to say about it.

Lt. Col. John H. Manning, of Raleigh, North Carolina, is an attorney-at-law; his innate modesty forcing us to say for him, that he is excelled in his profession only by the excellent Ephraim Tutt, of Tutt and Tutt.

Major Henry E. Roper, of Bernie, Missouri, is a farmer. What's more, he comes right out and says he is. Major Roper, successively and successfully, manages to beat Major Conley to the class room each morning. Fact is, a couple of times he has darned near caught us still in bed.

Major James C. Shirley, of McMinnville, Oregon, is a druggist. The first thing that we notice on entering the class-room is a cigar. Behind the cigar is a band. And behind the band is Major Shirley.

WALKER SMITH WILL MEET TERRY ROBERTS IN MAIN EVENT TUESDAY NIGHT

Blondy Parker and Danny Davis in Semi-final Event

Battling Sam	vs.	Grady Pritchard	3 rounds
Seaweed Wilson	vs.	Krafty Kline	3 "
Grumpy Gordy	vs.	Jimmie Jackson	4 "
Fiske Williamson	vs.	Rough House Glover	6 "
Danny Davis	vs.	Blondy Parker	10 "
Walker Smith	vs.	Terry Roberts	10 "

Thus we have next Tuesday night's boxing card. All told there are 36 rounds of milling scheduled, running from the feathers to the heavyweights.

It is true the coming bill does not carry the local interest that the Ptomey-Shell fracas possessed, but weighing each bout on its merits it can be truthfully recorded that those who turn out Tuesday night will get plenty of action.

Battling Sam, who starts the fun with Grady Pritchard has been grooming for a fight the last seven months. Sam disappointed the crowd last July with a covering defense against Young Bolte, but seeing the error of his ways has spent the interim developing a slashing offensive. Sam stacks up against an entry from the Bray Candy factory, one Grady Pritchard. If all that the Bray people state is true then Sam is due for a seven year lay-off.

Seaweed Wilson electrified the assembly at the last fight with a two handed attack against Tut Tut Taylor, the promising medico. His smashing victory earned him a return engagement this time with that hard hitting southpaw, Krafty Kline. Kline always puts out; Wilson has a new lease on life. Tab this one as full of nine minutes of action.

For a time it looked as if Grumpy Gordy would have to watch the next scrap from the bleacher seats because, like Billy Shell, he had no one to meet him. "From out of the kitchen came Ruth." Over at the School for Bakers and Cooks there is in the neighborhood of 140 embryo hash slingers gathered from far and wide. Among the list are pugs, ex-cops and former bartenders. Mention fight to that crew and your wish is gratified. When the word seeped through the bakery that one Gordy wasnt' happy unless he saw blood there was more than a slight commotion. From the lot out stepped Jimmie Jackson, alias one round Moses, alias knock 'em dead Mosely. "Bring on this Grumpy" says Jimmie Moses Mosely Jackson. The threat was enough. Grumpy and the baker, who is as long as his name, will get together for 12 minutes of fighting and at least three minutes of rest.

Fiske Williamson, of the 24th Infantry, who has shown a world of promise, will step into the six round game on the coming card. Fiske lines up with Rough House Glover, of Macon, Ga. Before the holidays Al Hayes of Atlanta always obliged the matchmaker with colored boxers when the occasion warranted, but Al, finding Atlanta any-

REGIMENTAL SERGEANT-MAJOR OF 29TH INFANTRY PASSED AWAY LAST SUNDAY

Master Sergeant Floyd D. Belmeyer, regimental sergeant-major of the Twenty-ninth Infantry, Fort Benning, passed away at the Post Hospital on February 10th, after an illness lasting since January 26th.

His loss will be mourned by the entire regiment, who were appreciative of the sterling qualities of the deceased soldier. He was a natural executive, an able administrator and possessed those qualities of leadership necessary in the successful soldier. He was a soldier of the old school and by his unfailing courtesy and soldierly conduct, he won and held the respect of every officer and man in his regiment.

At the time of his death, Sergeant Belmeyer had held the rank of Master Sergeant for over ten years. He first entered the service in 1911 and was assigned to "C" Company, 8th Infantry, Angel Island, California. In 1914 he re-enlisted for the Twenty-ninth Infantry and has been with the "demonstration" regiment until his untimely death.

He was born March 5, 1890, in Quincy, Ill., and is survived by a brother, J. Irving Belmeyer, living in the same city.

Funeral services were conducted in the Protestant Chapel in Fort Benning by Chaplain Wright at 1:30 P. M. on Tuesday.

After the completion of the services, at which the members of Headquarters Company were all present, the funeral procession, escorted by nineteen selected men from "G" Company, commanded by Master Sergeant Reddy, Service Company, marched to the intersection of Vibbert Avenue and Lumpkin road, where the cortege halted and the band played appropriate music.

The pallbearers, escort and other persons in the funeral procession formed on the side of the road and rendered the prescribed salute as the hearse left the post.

The body, escorted by Sergeant Claude Langston, Headquarters Company, left Columbus on the 3:50 P. M. train for Quincy, Ill., where it will be interned.

The active pallbearers were all selected from "G" Company and are: Privates First Class Day, M. C.; Latham, T. L.; Chauvin, W. J.; Perzigian, Sarkin; Smith, L. C.; and Biggs, H. S.

The honorary pallbearers included all non-commissioned officers of the first two grades in the Twenty-ninth Infantry.

Among the mourners attending the services were the Regimental Commander and practically all officers of the regiment.

ASSIGNED TO DUTY HERE

Capt. William E. Alger (P. S.), a student officer, has been assigned to duty with headquarters, Inf. School, upon the completion of the course this year.

Special Show at Main Theater Next Week

ARMY MOTION PICTURE SERVICE WILL STAGE THEATRICAL REVUE

For the past six months the Motion Picture Service at Washington has been planning and working upon adding, from time to time, special theatricals in addition to the regular motion pictures. Their efforts have lead them to New York and Philadelphia in quest of stage talent that would present to the various camps, that type of theatrical entertainment most liked by members of the military service.

The particular show coming to Fort Benning was selected and trained in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where large theatrical agencies maintain. It is reported that in the preparation of this show, a number of acts were reviewed and from them were chosen the best characters for their voices, forms, cleverness and professional stage training.

There are eight dancing girls who, it is claimed, know their stuff and present the latest Broadway struts. In addition, there are seven vaudeville artists, four of whom are girls. These seven are the fun makers of the show. We have been told that they will bring to us the most up-to-date wise cracks and jokes on the market.

The troupe will show at Fort Benning two nights, Friday and Saturday, February 22nd and 23rd. Their performance will be combined with the motion picture show in the same manner in which like performances are staged by Keith, Lowe and other circuits in big cities.

A., 1897; Army War College, 1917 and 1920; Army Staff College, 1911; honor graduate, Army School of the Line, 1910.

He was called there last spring by the serious illness and death of his father, and since that time has been engaged in settling up affairs of his father's estate. He has been assigned to duty with regimental headquarters.

ENTERTAINMENT BY GLEE CLUB MUCH ENJOYED

A large audience greeted the University of Alabama Glee Club at the Main Theatre Wednesday evening. The collegians put on an excellent program, which was much enjoyed by everyone. The boys were very liberal in responding with appropriate encores. It is hoped that Fort Benning may be on the club's itineary next year.

WYNNTON SCHOOL TO GIVE PLAY ON FEBRUARY 26

The children of Wynnton school will present "Cupid-up-to-date" at the Columbus high school on February 26. There will be sixty youngsters in the play, many of whom are children of student officers at Fort Benning. The play is sponsored by the P. T. A. of the school. Announcement as to tickets, etc., will be made in the near future.

thing but a good fight town, shook the dust from his heels and headed for Memphis. Since his departure it has been necessary to establish liaison with Macon and Albany for talent. Glover will be the first here since Sylvester Davis came over from Macon to give Cecel Williams a boxing lesson.

Danny Davis and Blondy Parker are the principals in the semi-windup. Blondy has been preparing for this mill just one month. No excuse can be offered if he finds himself in distress before the end. After seeing Billy Edwards, the 18 year old kid from Savannah, step 10 hurricane rounds with Tanks Grantham, fighting as hard in the last round as the first, the post boxers realize that endurance is the biggest asset in the boxer's repertoire. This will decide the junior welterweight champion of this locality.

Walker (Louisiana) Smith will, for the first time, find himself starred as the headliner over the ten round distance. Smith has been asked to meet Terry Roberts, of Charlotte, N. C., a hard nut for any one to crack. Gunner DePratt took the former artilleryman in four rounds, but it must be admitted that Roberts was a dangerous opponent up until the last punch. To those close up at the scrap it seemed as if Terry was waiting for an opportunity to cross that right to the jaw. He landed two vicious body punches that were forerunners of what was to come but DePratt called it a night before the strategy that Terry had in mind could be put in force.

Against the knockout at the hands of DePratt is the record that the Charlotte boy has compiled. An outstanding name, and for that matter an eventful fight, was a ten rounder with none other than the late Harry Greb. Added to this we find Terry going ten rounds with our own Willie Ptomey, another ten with Styles Attaway, a like number with Kid Williams, and all told over 200 scraps. Truly it will be test for young Smith.

"GERALDINE," starring Eddie Quillan and Marion Nixon in a great comedy of American youth, from the story by Booth Tarkington. It is the story of a girl who lacks attractiveness—a young man takes an interest in her and gives her pointers in dressing. A former spark, with whom she was in love, sees her in a notorious dance hall staging a party—she is given liquor, it goes to her head—the place is raided—this former spark tries to save her, but is beaten; when arrests are made he poses as a girl, is thrown in jail into the woman's ward; in the meantime the girl's father is notified that she has been arrested. The following day the young man is brought up before the court for impersonating a woman—affairs start to untangle and present a most pleasing climax. The story is chuck full of wit and humor as well as drama.

"LIGHTNING SPEED," starring Bob Steele in a story particularly well adapted to this athletic star. It is based on the adventuresome exploits of a dare-devil newspaper reporter who becomes involved in a gang of metropolitan yeggmen while in pursuit of his duty. The manner in which he becomes enmeshed in the activities of the underworld, his down-fall, and his final conquest furnish an absorbing story with a lot of action to it.

SUNDAY, FEB. 17

"THE LEATHERNECK," starring William Boyd. It is ostensibly a story of the marines. The locale shifts from France to northern Russia and then to TienSin where a severe courtmartial takes place. The story depicts the remarkable friendship of three marines; in Russia one of them falls in love with a girl of the nobility—they are married—a revolution takes place—her father and brother are killed, and she is kidnapped. His buddies hit upon the trail of his abducted wife and follow it; later the husband arrives and finds the abductor willed, one of his buddies insane, and the other dying, but no trace of his wife. The story terminates to the satisfaction of all concerned.

"THE SHOW GIRL," starring Alice White with a sparkling cast in a story laid among the brilliant lights of Broadway. It concerns an humble Irish girl who makes good in the night-clubs of New York, and then in a big revue. She bucked up against the varied intricacies of show life, and plugingly dances her way into fame. Some of the latest dances and costumes are exhibited in this picture. It is replete with snatches of comedy.

"Tarzan The Mighty No. 5."

TUESDAY, FEB. 19

"THE AIR LEGION," starring Ben Lyon and Antonio Marino in a spectacle epoch of the United States air mail. It is filled with crashing thrills and is the story of a boy whose nerve cracked like the plane beneath in the raging storm, and then the streak of yellow was wiped out by the touch of love and faith. The romance is furnished by the short-skirted girl who worked as postmistress. The flying scenes have been skillfully filmed, they not only give an impression of great height but also of terrific speed. There are effective crashes during the course of this production, and also flashes of flyers making their way through the horrors of a thunder storm. The plot is excellent and its action awe inspiring.

"Imagine My Embarrassment." Charlie Chase.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 20

"THE WOMAN FROM MOSCOW," starring Pola Negri in a highly emotional Russian drama. The story is laid among European aristocracy, and includes a baronial estate in Russia and high society homes in Paris. These are the locales that witnessed many of Miss Negri's real life tragedies. The story centers about the heroine falling in love with the man she believes guilty of having murdered her fiancee, and against whom she had sworn vengeance. This plot gives Miss Negri a genuine sympathetic role without distortion with tragic and dramatic story. It is considered an outstanding production.

This meeting promises to be one of the very best of the year. Col. George V. Strong will give a talk on The Disarmament Conference and husbands of club members are invited to enjoy this meeting with us. Mrn. John F. Holland, whose skilled playing on the violin has been a sensation among music lovers here, will play a group of selections. Partridge, who has for years been prominent among our Fort Benning singers, will sing on this occasion.

After the program tea will be served.

The Literary Club met on Monday at the Polo Club at which time Mrs. Charles W. Ryder presented a charming program of fantasy in contemporary literature. First on the program was Mrs. Frank Green's excellent review of "Bambi" that exquisite nature idyll, a story of a deer in the Danube Forest. It is a book of unusual qualities and is so sympathetically written that the reader becomes as one of the wood folk, thrilling with the beauty of life in the forest and fearing danger brought about by man's presence. One who reads Bambi will enjoy hunting less, especially if he hunts deer. It covers the life cycle of the deer from the time he is born in a shadowy glen to the time he, as the lordly old stag of the forest, takes a fancy to a young fawn just as the old monarch had chosen him to teach his the secrets of long life in the woods.

Then "Jingling in the Wind" by Elizabeth Madox Roberts was reviewed by Mrs. W. H. Vinson. This fantastic story of Jeremy, the Rainmaker, is as totally unlike "The Time of Man" that powerful realistic novel that made literary history two years ago, as black is unlike white. The author has been criticized severely for her new novel which has found favor with but few critics. Nevertheless it has merits of its own and its merry sporting at modern scientific research, education, sociological conditions, religion, medicine, literary style, human nature in general was amusing.

Mrs. Lee M. Hester concluded the program with a review of Ben Jonsons "Valpone" as adapted by Stefan Lweig in German and translated by Ruth Langner into racy contemporary English. This version was most successfully put on by The New York Theater Guild last year and Mrs. Hester, having seen it in New York, was able to make the characters live before us. This play represents types rather than individuals and they bear the name of the vice or virtue which they incarnate, for instance "Valpone" is the "sly fox," a scoundrelly thief; "Mosco" the gadfly, Colomba, the dove; El Toro, the vulture. It is a tale of plot and intrigue in Imperial Venice where the drama of human vices and frailties, greed and lust, trickery and roguery take place. This review was extremely well done.

Mrs. Paul R. Goode will present a program of Realism at the next literary club meeting.

(By H. M. G.)

Last week was certainly not breakfast food to us as the hen said of its best effort. We started all right, but along about Thursday a storm signal went up and we were told that we would take the machine gun indirect laying examination. For four hours we sat and searched a map for tiny little points, and teeny little angles and teensy little numbers. Hour after hour, adding and subtracting, adding and subtracting, hour after hour. "We had to get the ile, Annie."

Much later in the day we had what was listed as Signal Communication-Codes and Ciphers. Some one gave us a collection of little disks on a tube. The some one told us to take them off the tube, and then having done that to put them back again. It was either that for us, or cutting out paper dolls.

The next day we had the trials and tribulations of a war correspondent at the front. It was listed as machine gun combat practice examination or a war diary in one sitting. Joe Collins was at the micraphone.

The two companies of the company officers class were standing peacefully in a group, in fact there was even some fraternizing, when suddenly a voice rang out, "You are fired on by the enemy." One would hardly suspect a friend.

With these restrictions I give up my seat to the gun positions. We tarried in this situation long enough for Joe to inform us that we had put the guns in the wrong positions. Thus having assimilated real war conditions, we now moved on to further trials. For three hours Lieut. Van Houten and his brave crew performed nobly. A short time before the union's whistle blew Joe announced that we would write a full critique on the problem. From what I hear it was full all right, but what of I wouldn't like to say.

Some one complained that the problem didn't do justice to us. But like the photographer's reply to the old maid's complaint on her picture, it isn't justice we want but mercy.

Now we have a new weapon, the 37 m.m. It was remarkable how every one seemed to take to this sawed off cannon. Rickey Rice stood sponsor for it; said a lot of nice things about it, especially that it had no sighting bar. The class was most favorably impressed and, in fact, endeavored to assist in some way in its rearing Caswell, for instance suggested in the interest of brevity that in the fire order instead of singing out high explosive or low explosive, you say simply high or low. Lt. Caswell, of course, didn't realize, not having served in but one foreign army, that high, low is a yodeling command of the Swiss army.

Capt. Chapman advanced a hopeful suggestion that certain data obtained by the sergeant should be given to the corporal, otherwise said our stalwart captain "it would all be for naught." Lace collars are to be worn by the gunners.

The daily exercises for the past week, month and year were opened and closed with a question by Captain Rarey.

The Dramatic Club

The Plays of Friday Night

Soiree Chic

In the days when Kipling was fashionable as the exponent of the stern qualities of the Anglo-Saxon — qualities, which sometimes cracked badly in the withering Tropics?—there was much ado about the British Army Officers, in Indian border stations, who clung to the social amenities to the point of dressing meticulously and formally, in the wildest and woolliest surroundings.

This is a very elevating thought, but we needen't take any back seat. The American Army Officers have had to do quite the same thing under much more trying circumstances and have managed to keep up appearances in the tar-paper shacks of the Cantonment period!

Nous voila! The Dramatic Club Nights are a brilliant demonstration of that dauntless and hardy spirit. Noblesse oblige! Smartly gowned Ladies, glittering evening wraps, the somber black-and-white of the Tuxedo, the subdued murmur of an eager and polite audience combine into a colourful setting of what has really become the smart event—La Soiree Chic!—of the Garrison—a brave game of make-believe, a little wistful perhaps, against the background of Block 16 and 40?

The Plays of Friday, February 8th, complete the Fourth Series of the Presentations of the Dramatic Club. The Club is to be congratulated on a most entertaining Evening. In the previous weekly reviews, I have already covered the literary tendency and the plot of each play. The expectations suggested by the early rehearsals were fully realized; the artistic performance was high; there were, as usual, a number of impressive stellar roles, which easily detached themselves.

I regret to say that a sustained din of conversation, from the Lobby, thoroughly annoyed the Audience and the Players, in the early part of the Show, Late arrivals, evidently—? There must have been some delay in serving Dinners? In keeping with the professional atmosphere of this School, I take the liberty of suggesting that the Hors d'oeuvres clear the initial point at 6:45 P. M.

The First Play

"The Teeth of the Gift Horse" was warmly received and considered most entertaining. This smooth and fashionable Comedy revolves around the central figure of Aunt Williams, delightfully played by Mme. W. Livesay. As a rule, young women dislike elderly roles—but Aunt Marietta is one of those persons who never grow old. Mme. Livesay played this delicate character with a great deal of natural charm and was warmly applauded by an appreciative audience. Mme. E. L. Brine gave a splendid performance as Florence Butler, the young wife, who disposed of the precious vases. Florence is the fashionable, modern young Matron who maintains a smart, decorative Home. Mme. Brine—very chic in cerise! played this role with dash and cleverness.

Mme. W. Livesay

Mme. Brine was splendidly supported by Mme. E. M. Steward, an Anne Fisher, friend of the Butlers. Anne is an elegant, sophisticated member of the "smart younger set" which Aunt Williams will never quite fathom. Mme. Steward's smooth, intelligent performance was a very material contribution to the success of the Play; her acting was delightfully natural. Richard Butler, the typical—is there such a thing? —American husband, affectionate, indulgent and a trifle hen-pecked, was most convincingly played by Capt. C. K. Fales; this popular Gentleman received a spontaneous ovation, later on, when he became a mere spectator within the Audience. Katie, the Irish Maid, is one of the most effective Parts of this Play; it is rather difficult to maintain a brogue for any length of time; it must be like talking in a foreign tongue! Mme. R. A. Case was very amusing, in the deft comedy, of the shrewd Irish woman. Devlin Blake, the debonair collector of objects d'art was ably played by Capt. A. St. John. I must be indiscret and tell that the Captain threw a veritable apple of discord into his feminine audience! I overheard a young lady, near my seat, wonder if Blake was the "boy friend"! The Play calls him an old friend of the Butler's, perhaps a sort of esthetic adviser. If the Play were cast in France, he might, possibly, qualify as the amide-maison. There is really no difference between "Boy friend" and "ami de maison"—merely a matter of technique. For further details, I recommend any contemporary French novel—perhaps "Cheri" by the inimitable Colette? It is rather risque and consequently most entertaining. (Levroult. Paris. Frcs.12.25cts.)

The Second Play

"Ile"—the tragic episode, by Eugene O'Neill, was played to a tense and fascinated audience. The grim atmosphere of the Play wove around them. With the chill breath of fate, the play swept to its terrible ending—with the relentless finality of things pre-ordained. Capt. E. P. Peabody drew the somber figure of Capt. Keeney, with bold, masculine strokes. A good make-up, excellent voice and intelligent characterization combined into a first-class performance which swept the audience into prolonged applause.

Mme. R. H. Chance

He was superbly supported by Mme. R. H. Chance, as Mrs. Keeney, in the role of Anne, the master's wife. This tragic and helpless role requires the utmost in artistic restraint and the application of the finest shading. Mme. Chance gave a plastic and gripping performance which will long be remembered, in sheer artistry and dramatic perfection.

The crew of the Whaler contained a number of picturesque characters: the Steward—an old failure, bitter on a World which has given him nothing but abuse, was very capably played by Major P. Stivers, in perfect make-up. Capt. P. B. Rogers played the Mate—a frank, hardy Sailor —with convincing force. Lieut. H. Grubs gave a good performance as Ben, the Cabin boy. Joe, the Harpooner and spokesman of the mutinous crew, was ably played by Capt. A. R. MacKechnie. Capts. R. A. McClure, R. H. Chance and P. R. Good, as the Crew, furnished a convincing and realistic background.

Capt. P. E. Peabody

The Third Play

It seems to be the clever tendency of the Dramatic Club to present, in the same evening, different types of Plays —the fashionable Comedy, the psychological Drama and the Phantasy—all varying expressions of a single Art, like a versatile Painter who is equally skilled in murals, portraits and still-life?

"The maker of Dreams"—a veritable fairy-tale of imagination, formed a stunning contracts to the relentless, masterful realism of the preceding "Ile." The delicate artistry of this Play impressed a delighted audience and called for prolong applause. A highly original, colourful setting struck a modern and unexpected note. Miss Maxine Hall gave a most vivid and charming performance as Pierette. The talented and attractive young Lady delighted her audience with a fascinating blend of sheer grace and elusive sentimentalism—a true portrayal of romantic and feminine Pierette.

Miss Maxine Hall

Lieut. R. C. Oliver played a fine Pierrot in a very natural and attractive manner—altogether a most effective and tactful picture of a difficult character. Captain E. Bush as the Maker of Dreams played the mysterious stranger in a most convincing manner; the paternal, kindly character of this friend of lovers was skillfully presented.

The tactful, musical accompaniment of Capt. J. K. Rice was a valuable and inseparable element of this clever Play.

The Directors

In the colourful action of the Players, the important role of the Directors is sometimes overlooked. The monotony of rehearsals, the slow plastic direction to bring out every shade of performance becomes a real task, which calls for tact, patience and energy. Mme. A. S. Peake, in "The Teeth of the Gift House," Major T. Smith in "Ile" and Lt. R. C. Oliver in "The Maker of Dreams," must be congratulated for having made possible the display of talent and taste in their excellent Plays. On behalf of these Players, I eagerly seize this opportunity to discharge a debt of obligation to one of those obscure and highly necessary persons, who keep the wheels moving—never in evidence except when things go wrong, indispensable—invaluable—boon and refuge of nervous Directors; Lieut. C. F. Burback, who runs the machinery of back-stage, the lights, the drops, the sets, the property and decorations.

Battery "B"

Our new 37 MM guns, with the pet-name "Babies" did their work very well. After some practice our men no doubt will do the same.

Boys, we have in the recruit center a new man with the profession, orator. He will have to show his stuff around the battery. We have some amateurs in this line ourselves. Just walk into the supply room with some nonsensical question and Sergeant Lein will tell you more in two minutes than you will forget in two weeks.

Another two orators with less authority though are Pvts. Cassidy and Monte. Anything you want to know just ask one of these two, they know it all.

When the executive gave the command "March Order," the number five of the third section, Private Nelson, asked his chief of section whether he had to take in the barber's pole. This is not as bad as one of our privates first class some years ago. He wanted to go to the North pole with Commander Byrd and took a barber's pole with him to be sure that at least one pole should be found.

While we were having chow one of our recruits was seen sitting at the table at attention without eating. When we asked him, why he did not eat, he explained to be waiting for Corporal Nahring to give him the command, commence eating by detail. John, you have them trained right.

We knew we had some sheiks in the battery. The mess sergeant has joined the ranks too. Another good man going wrong.

We have some boxers in this battery too. We will await the end of the murder after they have met the Tankers. If the tanks cannot hit harder than the horses in our battery can kick we will come out all right.

Sgt. Lein is one of the most busy men of our battery but found time enough to make the following as a remembrance to the days he was seeing the whole world through a porthole:

The Equipment sounds off:
I certainly got a drag on this battleship, said the anchor,
Anyhow I am the Big Noise, boasted the 14-inch gun,
Yes, but you are not so hot, said the boiler,
I keep things moving, boasted the propeller,
My job is on the sides, remarked the davits,
You mean you have got a handover, sneered the lifebouy,
Ah, anybody can see through you, remarked the davits,
Don't I do all the uplift work? inquired the hoisting gear,
Nobody can say I ever gave them a bum steer, bragged the Helm,
Yes, but you look to me to guide you, reminded the compass,
You have your good points, said the Helm,
Pipe down, pipe down, said the gangway, if it was not for me where would anybody get off at (Our Navy)

Now, boys, we have 75 MM, 37 MM guns, pistols and horses, we want someone to boast on these. Some of you boys, writing to young ladies far away at home, no doubt are used to boasting and should sound off.

There was some rumor that the horse Romeno would be I and I'ed. Pvt. Barbier said he did not know what that meant, but whatever they do to his horse he wants the same done to him. That is the right way for a soldier to feel towards his horses.

Cpl. Davis got one of the dark complected remounts. He gave it the name of Lisa as it reminded him of his best girl at home.

It was told that Cpl. Morphis was seen moving backwards every time a schrapnell exploded. He was looking through field glasses and was afraid to be hurt by a piece of steel.

When one of our recruits was ordered to get out the aiming stakes, he remarked that the mess sergeant had not given him any.

Hqrs., Hqrs. Bat. and Combat Train

Much excitement was caused last Sunday over the odd cause Sgts Dodd and McAuliffe had in securing a new ten, both being old heads in the supply game. We all wonder why the fire?

Cpl. Summar reported back from 45 days well spent somewhere in Tennessee. The mess hall was Foot's first stop. Glad to have you back with us Summar, but sorry you missed out on the promotions during your absence.

A much disputed pool argument ended last week with Pvts. Rogers and Siers taking each other for Ivory. No duobt the ivory is there but why break all the cue sticks?

Most every one realizes that Santa Claus comes once a year, but last Saturday Cpl. Douglas acted as old Santa making a small donation to the good cause.

Pvt. LaPine seems to be brooding over his loss. No Emmy not his rating or best pal, but his position. Sorry Doug that Brunner had to return and put you to so much grief.

Pvt. Bond was seen up Winton drive way last week-end. And how? How about a little more info 'bout the blonde? And did you get Chill-ie over the radio.

Pfc. Crabb, outstanding dwarf corporal of the battalion, seems to like his new duties, since being promoted to corporal. That's the spirit George and show 'em that it does not take a switchboard operator to hold horses.

Pvt. Kline was promoted to Pfc. Seems that you can't keep a good man down, at least that is Kline's motto.

Corporal Arnold and Pfc. Crawford was out giving the ladies a treat last Sunday night. From all indications Arnold had a mud battle with all the North Highlands mud he brought back to camp with him.

A letter was received from Ex-Pvt. Reed up Tennssee way stating that he was having a grand and glorious time. Guess the finals are lasting very well, then for the nearest recruiting office.

Pvts. Powell and Jones, J. F., were seen in town last week-end and they said they had been to church. Hard to believe boys, but guess that we will have to take your word.

Sgt. Hamblen was discharged on the 30th of January, taking on another stack for three more years. Sorry bean-pole but your chances now as a future stable sergeant are shattered for three more years.

The battalion basketball team motored to Columbus last Saturday night, returning with a victory over the Rose Hill fast team by a mere margin of 27 to 25, with Headquarters battery being as of yore, well represented.

Corporal Cole has the position now of recruit instructor. And has new faces most daily to growl at. How about the rest period and what causes that?

Battery "C"

It is reported that a large portion of the earth flew up and hit Private Dewitt Martin in the eye. Judging from exterior appearances, we can readily say that it must have been an extremely large and ample piece that found its way to his countenance.

We wonder what Sergeant Hall is delving in matrimony for. A certain corporal observed said sergeant purchasing an iron and a pillow case several days ago. Who is the lucky damsel and won't you introduce her, Sergeant.

It has been ascertained by various means, that our most elegant and intellectual battery clerk, Private McDuff, can ask more questions than a questionnaire regarding facts about the earth. Just ask his fellow key punchers.

Why all the sadness Corporal Goodwin. Didn't you know that it was too good to last for an inevitable period? You must realize that the second party of the first part has some legal claim upon first party of the first part and that all others must remain as laid.

Privates Norris, Harden, Ives and Williams have gone on furloughs. Ye scribe cannot see the logic of going on leave when the clothes are summer and the weather freezing cold and the ready mazuma at par, but here's wishing you the best of times and the most of agreeable weather.

Private Harvey is now enhanced in the citadel of pool sticks and balls. Boys you had better take your best shot along with you now as you have got the percentage against you and if that is not enough, well he visited the poultry house last week. Nuf Seyd.

Private Toses Varnum was the recipient of a very welcome visitor from the Everglades of Florida last week. Judging by the apparel worn by said visitor, ye scribe can readily see that Florida is the place that he is looking for, as it certainly must not be very cold there.

Corporal Flippo has a grudge against Corporal Winslow, who has now taken over the duties of recruit instructor. We do not know the cause of said grudge but could make a very close guess and bet our bank roll that we would guess correctly.

What were you boys arguing about just now.
About the size of my head.
Oh, yeh, the bone of contention.

ELECTRICIANS DEFEAT MUSKETEER SECOND STRING CAGESTERS

The Levy-Morton Electricians defeated the Musketeer second string in a fast game of basketball at Columbus last Monday night.

With only one regular in the line-up the Musketeers were unable to check the offensive drive of the Electricians. The end of the first half found the soldiers trailing 25 to 16.

Fat Franz upheld the honor of the service, his dribbling and pasning being the feature of the game but without Roosma, Stamper, Kammerer and Strickler, the drive of the Electricians could not be stemmed.

Besides playing a star game, Franz, was the clown of the court. His fancy backhand passing and trick dribbling kept the fans in a continuous up-roar and when the "Round Boy" sank a basket from far beyond the center of the court the crowd shook the building with their roar of applause.

Lineup and summary:

Levy-Morton	Pos.	F'ld	F'l	Pts

INTRA-MURAL BASKETBALL SERIES WILL OPEN TONIGHT

The opening of the intra-mural basketball series will be held tonight at the gymnasium. Officials have been appointed for the series of games which will continue until March. Games scheduled for this series have already been announced in Athletic Memorandum, dated January 25.

"Did you know that Joe was married?"

"No, I didn't even know he was broke."

CO. "A" 7TH ENGINEERS SOCCER CHAMPIONSHIP

Making a clean sweep against all opposition the Engineer Soccer team ran away with the garrison championship, finishing the season with nine victories against no defeats.

The Engineers now lay claim to the 4th Corps Area soccer championship and will play any team wishing to dispute their claim. They further offer to simplify matters by meeting any opponents on their own grounds.

Should any of the posts in the area be represented by a soccer team the Engineers are very anxious to arrange for a series of games. They also further fling the gauntlet down to any of the college teams that would be interested in arranging for games.

With the rifle season a short ways off, the news that three men would be sent to the Engineer Rifle Team this year has stirred up a good deal of interest among the expert riflemen of the outfit. Sgt. Kingsbury made the team in 1927 and we hope to place all three men this year. More on this subject later when the men get down to shooting.

It was noted recently that association football is the correct name for our beloved soccer. A hunt through the dictionary revealed that "soccer" is considered slang. In our opinion "soccer" packs a great deal more punch and pep than the more dignified "association football." Anyway it will always appeal to the soldiers of Fort Benning an an appropriate title for the game.

A little gold pig has strayed from it's fold. For information as to the rewards, etc., see Corp. D. C. Greenfield.

A notice in a recent issue of the Army and Navy Journal telling of the work being done by the Engineers in revising the fire control maps in Fort Benning, was noted with pleasure.

THE GYMKHANA

Will be held at Shannon Field at 1:30 P. M. Saturday. All events are amusement events, requiring no skill or preparation. All officers, ladies and enlisted men have been invited to participate or attend as spectators.

First Modern Child: My father took me out in the woodshed last night.

Second Modern Child: Heaven's you don't mean he struck you?

First Modern Child: Oh, no, he just wanted to get me alone and apologize for objecting to my behavior.

I. S. D. NOTES

Company has arrived at the Detachment during the past week. Forty-eight members of the National Guard N. C. O. class have been assigned to the I. S. D. during the school period. These men represent approximately every National Guard organization under the Stars and Stripes and judging from their appearance and military bearing they are a credit to their organizations and fully demonstrate the efficiency of the military training and instruction of our National Guard.

Members of the second section are expecting something unheard of to happen. The un-easiness has been caused by the report that Corp. Chink Morris actually so far forgot himself as to give Jack Ryan a perfectly good Cinco cigar.

Numerous visitors have commended on the beautiful shrubbery growing about Post Headquarters and the Officers Quarters. Credit for this work goes to the Inf. School Det., Sergt. Shirling and Corp. Willingham of the Greencords are in charge and supervise the work carried on at the garrison nursery.

Sergt. John Parello has returned, after spending a three months' furlough at his home in Vermont. He states that he had a wonderful time and enjoyed every day of his visit. But that after all is said and done that it feels good t obe back with the old gang again.

Harry Manning, printer, comedian and sleight of hand artist, is now a member of the area brigade. Here is hoping, Harry, that you don't let Corp. Cody peddle you any Columbus real estate.

Corporal Copley, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident on the Glade road a few weeks ago, has returned to duty, fully recovered from his injuries.

NEW DRESS UNIFORMS HAVE APPEARED AT FORT BENNING

To First Sgt. Crane of Company "H" 29th Infantry, goes the honor of being the first enlisted man of Fort Benning to appear in the new dress uniform.

Sgt. Crane visited Columbus last Saturday wearing one of the new uniforms. Sgt. Crane's appearance was the subject of favorable comment by many.

COL. PENDLETON COMMENDS SERVICE COMPANY ON THEIR APPEARANCE DURING REVIEW

Owing to their exemplary appearance on the parade ground during the recent review held in honor of Secretary of War Davis and the Assistant Secretary of War Davison, the Service Company, under the command of Capt. G. B. Wescott, received a letter of commendation from Colonel Harris Pendleton, Jr., Regimental Commander, Twenty-ninth Infantry.

In his letter the Colonel stated that he was very well pleased with the appearance of the animals, harness and other equipment and particularly with the good line of march which showed the results of hard drill and good discipline.

REGIMENTAL COMMANDER WITH DISTINGUISHED VISITORS REVIEW REGIMENT

Colonel Harris Pendleton, Jr., Regimental Commander, at the weekly review of the regiment, last Tuesday, had as his guests, Brig. Gen. M. E. Walker and Brig. Gen. G. H. Estes.

The regiment, less Service Company, passed before the Regimental Commander and his distinguished visitors in true Twenty-ninth Infantry style and won many favorable comments from the visiting generals.

Immediately after the review, the regiment formed in a hollow square and a platoon from "A" Company, under the command of Lt. Frederick Pearson, went through a series of movements in close order drill and manual of arms.

After a short session of this, the platoon was then turned over to Sergeant James Sheriff who then put them through a series of movements in quickening and cadence drill, which was very spectacular.

The two visiting generals were visibly impressed by the excellency of the drill and commended the men very warmly.

STAFF SERGEANT HERMAN L. FINK ACTING REGIMENTAL SERGEANT-MAJOR

Pending the selection of a regimental sergeant-major, Staff Sergeant Herman L. (Trotsky) Fink, Service Company, is acting in that capacity. This is due to the vacancy left in that position by the untimely death of Master Sergeant Floyd D. Belmeyer.

Sgt. Fink, who came to the Twenty-ninth in June, 1920, is known as the "pinch-hitter" of the Regimental Headquarters Non-Commissioned Officers' Staff. For the past ten years while in the Army, he has held the grade of Sergeant or higher.

In his duties in the personnel section, he showed the excellent qualities and efficiency that led later to his selection for his present position.

FIRST BATTALION BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP WON BY "B" CO.

"B" Company, with a percentage of 1.000, were acclaimed as the champs of the First Battalion Basketball League just recently finished.

They won all of their games handily and in most of them were not even pushed to bring home the bacon.

"E" COMPANY WINS 2ND BATT. BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

By winning seven and losing no games, Company "E" took the championship in the Second Battalion Basketball League. Due to the fact that "E" Company had the battalion title already cinched, the final game of the series between "E" and "F" Companies, who were runners up, was not played.

Final standing of league:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Company "E"	7	0	1.000
Company "F"	5	2	.714
Company "G"	4	4	.500
2nd Bat. Hq	2	6	.249
Company "H"	1	7	.124

In team scoring "E" Company carried off the honors with "F" Company second; "G" Company, third; Second Bat. Hq., fourth; and "H" Company, fifth.

Oikari, "E" Company, was the highest individual scorer, with 101 points to his credit; then followed Smith, "F" Company, 81 points; Stamper, "E" Company, 79 points; Baugh, "G" Company, 72 points; Barron "F" Company, 60 points; Latham, "G" Company, 57 points; Rich, Second Bat. Hq., 53 points; Robinson, "H" Company, 46 points; and Taylor, "H" Company, 28 points.

In giving these individual scores, the two highest scorers in each company were picked.

JUNIOR OFFICERS LYCEUM

On Saturday morning, February 9th, Colonel Pendleton continued his series of informal talks on the functioning of the War Department, to the Junior officers of the regiment. Col. Pendleton talked on the financial side of the War Department, from the preparation of estimates, by the chiefs of branches, to the actual expenditure of the money on an Army post.

The Colonel first explained how the estimates for the coming year were drawn up by the various chiefs of branches and how these were then cut and pruned to fit the limiting figure set by the Director of the Budget. The estimate for the year having been determined, it is sent to the director of the budget, who includes it in the book of the budget.

The book of the budget is then submitted to the President, who in turn submits it to Congress. It is acted upon, first by the House and then by the Senate. During its progress through Congress it may be altered, or entirely changed. After being passed by Congress it is sent to the President for approval and signature.

The Appropriation bill as passed by Congress must now be broken down under its general headings. Due to the fact that several branches of the service may come under one of the general headings, there is a committee, of which the Chief of the G-4 section is the chairman, to apportion the money fairly and evenly.

This committee having decided who shall get how much, then allots the money in quarterly installments to the financial operating agency of the War Department, the Finance Department.

Col. Pendleton also pointed out how each chief or head of a department, who was allotted money, withheld a certain proportion of it for a reserve in case of emergency. Colonel Pendleton showed how this led to the gradual building up of a surplus which had to be expended in the last few months of the fiscal year.

COMPANY TEAMS BATTLING FOR REGIMENTAL RIFLE CHAMPIONSHIP

The excellency of the shooting in the inter-company league of small bore rifle teams, which is under the supervision of Major J. R. Brooke, is very marked.

This shows the foresight on the part of the various companies of the regiment, who had erected, immediately after the Christmas holiday season, small-bore gallery ranges in the attics, where the men were enabled to practise shooting and which also give them another form of recreation.

The regimental league was instituted by Colonel Pendleton, Commanding Officer, in order to stimulate interest in this firing and as a method for improving the marksmanship of the regiment.

A competitive schedule was arranged with each company having a team participating. The winner to be awarded a suitable trophy denoting the regimental championship, and which has been purchased from the A and R Funds.

Considerable interest has been shown and the teams are keenly battling for the trophy. The competition is developing marksmanship to a high degree. Among the men having high individual scores are 1st Sergt. Davis, "E" Co., Sgt. Kjelstrom, 2nd Bn., Hq. Co., Sgt. Larrimore, "B" Co., and Sgt. Hopkins, Regt. Hq. Co., the latter having made a possible in the sitting position. Sgt. Hopkins will be remembered as the man having the highest score in the regiment during the regular target range season in 1928.

A regimental rifle team will be picked from the men showing up well in the league, who will fire in telegraphic matches with the Third Infantry on the 21st of February and with the 16th Infantry on February 26th.

Major Brooke, who also has charge of the regimental team, is trying to schedule matches with the rifle teams of the various colleges and universities in the Fourth Corps Area.

Present standing of league:

Company	Won	Lost	Pct.
G	3	0	1.00

E	2	1	.667

WILLIE PTOMEY ASSIGNED TO UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA AS BOXING INSTRUCTOR

"Weary Willie" Ptomey, all-service middleweight champion and a terror to the hopes and ambitions of the promising middleweight fighters of today, is no longer Weary Willie, instead he is now Prof. William Peak Ptomey, boxing instructor of the University of Georgia.

Ptomey, accompanied by his wife, left Fort Benning immediately following his fight with Shell on Feb. 5th, for their new home at Athens, Ga. There is no doubt that the bulldog fighters will soon rival their football and baseball honors. If there is a fighter that knows the game it is Ptomey. He has fought three hundred and forty battles in the ring during the past nine years. He is one of the cleverest middleweights in the game today and with his well earned knowledge of ring technique he should prove a capable instructor and coach.

SOJOURNERS CLUB TO HOLD MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

The local chapter of the Sojourners Club will meet at the Polo Club at 8 P. M. Monday, Feb. 18. A number of important business matters will be taken up at the meeting, and all members are urged to be present.

A NIFTY STABLE OF BOXERS AT FORT BENNING

(By Al Durden)

Although the loss of Ptomey will be felt at the Infantry School, still Capt. Wilson has a nifty stable of fighters to bear the Benning colors in the ring.

Gunner DePratt has started training again after a long lay-off with a broken wrist. Fightdom knows this doughboy. When he hits them they stay hit and it looks like the doughboy has lost none of his driving power while on the injured list.

Billy Smith, Benning light-heavy, shows promise of making some of the top-notchers sit up and take notice. Billy is the Dempsey type, with a weaving, bobbing style of fighting combined with a ripping, tearing two-handed attack that has been bringing quick knockouts in his recent fights.

Seeley, a new-comer, is looking good in the middleweight division. His last three fights have been easy victories. Blondie Parker tops the heap among the welters but his suppremecy is loudly disputed by Danny Davis and Tanks Grantham. In the light-weight division Asher and Phillips are capable of holding their own against out-side invaders. Both boys are fast and clever and willing to mix at all times. Asher holds a shade the advantage with his tremendous hitting power. Red Keenan rules in the bantam class. This fighting Irishman has met every bantam of note in the South in the past five years and his wins far out-number his losses. Keenan is in great shape now and rearing for a chance at Eddie Burl, all-southern champ.

SPENT LEAVE IN FLORIDA AND CUBA

Private (Bozo) Smith, Oliver, has just returned from a vacation from Columbus Hotel, Columbus, Georgia, and his expenses were paid by the Columbus Hotel. In the last few days the third platoon has been watching the first platoon trying to get all of the fine points, as we are getting ready for the competition drill next week.

If Sgt. Dalby and Corp. Miscar wish to know anything further in regards to close order drill or drill of the platoon they will have to consult Sgt. New or Sgt. Easterwood of the first platoon. Well good luck to the lucky platoon.

Pvts. Ivey, Page, Hensley and Paulson have taken furloughs to their homes during the week.

Pvt. McCarther has been placed on post special duty as painter at Post Theatre.

Old Inbad, the soldier, says that if conversation is revealing, he wonders what the following discloses.

A sergeant's voice on the telephone: "That you, Sergeant Williams? You say it is—well I just called in to tell you that I am leaving on the eight-ten for Atlanta, in five minutes. What time am I returning? Well, that's tentative, sometime before morning, I guess. Goodbye. What's—better be there for reveille? Sure, you know me, sergeant."

It is now about two hours later. The telephone rings and the first sergeant lifts the receiver. "Sergeant Williams, please," the voice of a private first class requests. "What's that? Oh this is him speaking. Well I just called in to say that I wouldn't be in before night. And by the way I saw the sergeant a moment ago. He said he'd just been to Atlanta. What tha—say, Central. how come yuh cut me off that way?"

We had good luck with the boxing team last week. We won six out of seven of the bouts. The team consisted of ten men. The following named men are the winners: Cpl. Maksimoski, Pvts. Ferbus, Guthrie, Hooper, Lee and Neely. Pvts. Deeters, Fischer and Cpl. Newman were members of the team but did not get to fight last week. Little Moore lost. "Too bad, how sad, you might get him some other time Moore."

The men in the company are glad to see the Company Commander around with us again.

Pfc. Hill, of the Company Cook's Staff, was sent down to recruit center to act as mess sergeant. Show the recruits how it is done, Hill.

The company is sorry to hear of Lt. Donogan going on special duty at recruit center. We sure miss the lieutenant around the company.

Rather suddenly Private Nanney has become a short timer. From what we hear it is believed that he will be taking orders from a "ranking fool" very soon. God bless you, Nanney. We can't.

Private Carver (one of the windjammer boys) has, for some time, been making wise remarks about being a short timer, but from what we hear it is believed that it is all off as his "old man" spent his purchase money for a mule, but that isn't the half of it. He wrote "Son Carver" asking for money to have the mule shod. Better luck on your next hitch, Carver, old boy.

BOXING TOURNAMENT OPENED LAST WEEK; RESULTS OF TWO MEETS GIVEN

The first of the amateur boxing shows scheduled for this and next month was held in the post gymnasium Wednesday night of last week. The opening night brought entries from the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 29th Infantry in the ring. This card resulted in more of an elimination contest between the fighters of the latter outfit, rather than one between the two.

On Wednesday night of this week, the 83rd Field Artillery and the 15th Tanks met with a large number of spectators on hand. The Tankers returned more winners but the caisson riders made the victors know they were in a real mixup.

Next Wednesday night is the last of the elimination bouts, at which time all the smaller organizations will clash, immediately prior to the contests between the 24th Infantrymen. Men who desire to enter, no matter to what organization they belong, will be able to get under the wire if they report to the gymnasium at 6 P. M. on the date in question.

Tech Sgt. Mitzen is strolling around the company with his mitt all swathed up in bandages, no kidding, this married life certainly is terrible. Perhaps it was not the married life, maybe he tried to lift a radio set and sprained the limb. No saying just what may have happened. All we can do is hope for his hand to heal up quickly so as he can talk again.

A little advice for people with warm hands in our company. Always reach for a Lucky instead of a mitt.

Friends, foes and infantrymen, loan me your ears and ability. Our comrade, Pvt. Stockberger has eye trouble and is seeing things that he don't see. Are we going to stand by and see him suffer? No, someone please donate a pair of dark glasses, someone with artistic ability print a sign and someone please donate a dog to lead him around the streets and highway and byways of the country. Do anything, but don't let our comrade suffer. —R. T. M.

The commendation received on the performance and appearance of transportation of this organization at a recent review is very gratifying to the officers and enlisted men alike. We hope that the encouragement thus received will be an added incentive to do still better work in the future.

News this week is as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. We expect, however, to be able to unfold to our readers in the near future an unusual story of a whirlwind romance. We have been reliably informed that our supply sergeant has contracted a severe case of love at first sight, and when that boy sets out on the trail of that elusive thing called love, in the language of the slums, "Its some chase."

The Miller twins have returned from furlough and report that they received a royal send-off when they took their leaves of the old home town. If this story be true, the band was out in full regalia and all the fair maidens shed great tears; while the native sons gave one long sigh and smiled cheerfully, for the sheiks were departing and left the field clear for native talent.

Pfc. Taylor has returned from furlough and has been placed on S. D. at the remount stables vice Sgt. Morrow, who is now in the hospital.

INF. SCHOOL DETACHMENT HOLDS ELABORATE BANQUET

Green Cords Celebrate Anniversary

(By Al Durden)

An elaborate banquet, followed by a highly entertaining vaudeville program, was enjoyed by the members of the Infantry School Detachment in celebration of the Detachment's 20th anniversary last Wednesday night at Fort Benning.

The banquet was held in the Detachment mess hall, which was brilliantly decorated for the occasion. Streamers and spangles entwined and interlaced along the walls and draped from the ceiling bearing the Greencord colors of white and green, formed a wonderful setting for the brilliantly lighted and heavily laden banquet tables with their coverings of immaculate and snowy white linens.

Promptly at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, members of the organization, with many of their friends from other units, were assembled in the large mess hall to begin the evening's journey through Pleasureland by the route that is admittedly the shortest (the in-side route). The trip, though short, was thoroughly enjoyed by Detachmenteers and guests as they drifted along through heaps of: roasted milk fed chicken, giblet gravy, candied sweet potatoes, green peas, corn fritters, shrimp salad, cherry pie, cherry ice cream, parkerhouse rolls, oyster cocktails, celery, olives and at the finish the trail led through a tunnel filled with heaps of cigars and cigarettes that the travelers were forced to smoke as they continued their journey.

Throughout the course of the dinner, the diners enjoyed the strains of music ably rendered by the ever-popular Twenty-ninth Infantry orchestra.

From the wonders of the mess hall the trail was lengthened finally ending at the Twenty-ninth Infantry theatre, where a threatre party was given.

The program rendered by these artists, who, with one exception, were local talent of our neighbor city, Columbus, was far superior to many of the entertainers who have in the past graced the stage of this movie house.

Each number from the opening number till the finale, was well rendered and brought rounds of applause. In fact, if the performers had been able to have responded to all of the encores daylight the following morning would have found them cavoring about stage, singing and dancing.

Mr. Al Bartee, clever black-face comedian, kept the audience in a continuous uproar. His monologues, piano and dance numbers were well selected and put over with a dash and sparkle of humor that is sure to make even those who have highly resolved never to smile again, break their resolutions and let the wrinkle of smiles spread over their countenance To say that he was a "wow" is putting it mildly.

Then for those who are ever in favor of "Blues' numbers,, Miss Pauline Mitchham was indeed a godsend. This young lady sang with a voice that was indeed pleasing. Not only was her singing something to please but the action and expression she put in each of her numbers was far above that, that would or-

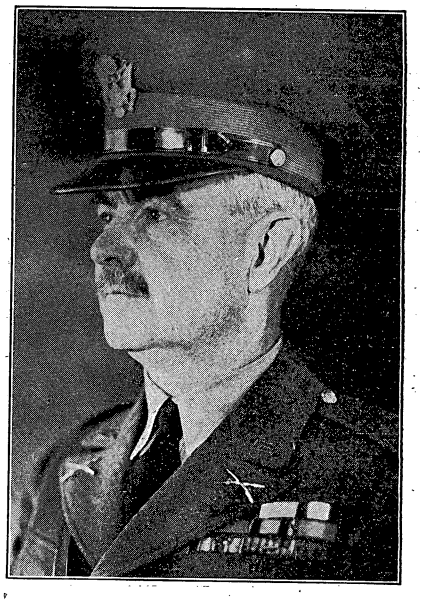
DIRECTOR OF INFANTRY BOARD RECEIVES PROMOTION TO BRIGADIER-GENERAL

Has Been Stationed Here Since Summer 1927; Holder of Congressional Medal of Honor

Brigadier-General Charles D. Roberts, who as colonel of infantry, was director of the Infantry Board at Fort Benning, received his promotion to the grade of brigadier-general the first of this week. General Roberts was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the promotion of Brig.-Gen. F. L. Parker to the next highest grade, and will rank from February 10.

General Roberts was honored with the prescribed salute for his rank on Thursday morning by Battery "B" of the 83rd Field Artillery. The Commandant, General E. T. Collins and staff, were present for the ceremony, which occurred on the field south of Gowdy Field. After the firing of the salute, the battery was inspected by General



Roberts, accompanied by General Collins and staff.

General Roberts, a son of Lt. Col. C. S. Roberts, 13th U. S. Infantry, was born at the Cheyenne Indian Agency, Dakota Territory, on June 18, 1873. He was appointed to the U. S. Military Academy from Wyoming, where he was then resident in Cheyenne. Upon graduation in June 1897, he was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry.

After a few months of service at Columbus Barracks, Ohio, he accompanied his regiment to Tampa, Florida, and thence to Cuba, where he was engaged with his company in the battle of El Caney and the seige of Santiago. He was awarded the Medal of Honor for gallantry in the battle of El Caney.

Returning to the United States in August, 1898, he again was on duty at Columbus, Ohio. He was appointed a captain, 35th U. S. Volunteer Infantry in July, 1899, and in November, 1899, reached the Philippine Island with that unit. After various engagements in Northern Luzon and in the vicinity of San Miguel de Mayumo he was captured by the Filipino Insurgents in May,

SERGT. HENRY BOGER RETIRES

Sergeant Henry Boger, Headquarters Company, 24th Infantry, was retired from active service on the 19th, after thirty years of service. This faithful non-commissioned officer was congratulated in General Orders, Headquarters 24th Infantry, by Colonel Galleher, and the evening of the 19th he was honored by a special dinner at Headquarters Company mess. At this dinner, which practically all the officers of the regiment and at least ten men from each company attended, several speeches were made, all referring to the long and faithful sevice of Sergeant Boger.

Sergeant Boger was presented with a fine watch by the men of the regiment, and made an excellent reply to Col Galleher's presentation speech. Chaplain Thomas closed the ceremonies with a fine talk to the recruits of the regiment who were present, citing Sergeant Boger's retirement as what they could expect from faithful service to Uncle Sam. The Sergeant leaves the regiment with its congratulations, and with its best wishes for his future.

CHANGES

Capt. Stanley G. Saulnier is back with the regiment again, after spending several months' leave in and around New York City. Capt. Saulnier was called away by the death of his father, and found that his continued presence there would be necessary in order to settle the estate. A leave was granted him for this purpose. He is attached to headquarters.

Mrs. Albert B. Helsley is home again, after a prolonged visit to relatives in Detroit and Chicago. She states that cold winter weather there seems worse than ever before, but in spite of that she thoroughly enjoyed her visit.

Captain E. M. S. Steward departed on the 19th for Walter Reed General hospital, Washington, D. C., for observation and treatment of a minor trouble. Mrs. Steward will remain here while the captain is away. He will probably return in about one month.

Captain Albert B. Helsley is relieved from command of Company "G" and, in addition to his other duties, becomes the regimental recreation officer, vice Captain E. M. S. Steward relieved.

Captain James P. Lyons relieved from command of Company "C" and becomes assistant regimental adjutant. Captain William G. Murphy assigned to command "C" Company.

1st Lt. Derr Hazelhurst assigned to Company "B."

Captain George T. Shanks is assigned and takes command of Headquarters Company.

1st Lt. William S. Keller is assigned to command Company "G."

We had our regular monthly dance either last Friday, or Saturday night, we forget just which it was, but all the regiment was out and as usual we had a great time. The Polo Club was the place, and as there had been quite a few dinner parties, the Club Room was comfortably filled. Right in the middle of it the 29th Stables burned and most of us went over there, (we still like to see a good fire) then came back and danced till midnight. But as there is no great need for hurry we usually hang aound making merry for an hour or so. Then we have our chauffeurs drive our cars up and we all very reluctantly depart.

CAPTAIN M. E. CRAIG MARRIED ON FEBRUARY 14

Much cordial interest in both civilian and military circles was centered on the wedding of Miss Irma Claire Revell of Columbus, and Captain Malcolm Everett Craig, of Fort Benning, which took place on Thursday evening, Feb. 14, 1929, at the home of Lt. and Mrs. Pierce Camp, in Druid Hills, Atlanta.

Immediately following the ceremony, Capt. and Mrs. Craig left for a short honeymoon trip, and later, after his completion at Fort Benning, they will spend their honeymoon in Europe, visiting many points of interest.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Revell, and has endeared herself to a wide circle of friends in Fort Benning and Columbus.

Captain Craig is one of the most popular young officers at Fort Benning. He has been stationed here for three years and is at present a student officer of the Infantry School. He is a graduate of Cornell University and a member of the S. A. E. fraternity.

"THE CAMERAMAN," starring Buster Keaton in a riotious comedy. It depicts the trials, tribulations and troubles of a news reel man in busy New York. There is a captivating love romance and a spectacular Tong war with machine gun embellishments. The cameraman gets mixed up in a parade and is almost arrested; he tries to film a boat race and gets mixed up with a churning propeller—he is almost drowned, is dragged over the streets and then he goes to Chinatown, where he finds himself in a Tong war; he hides in a pipe to dodge the bullets and is used as a huge battering ram by a Chinese attacking army. "LONE STAR RANGER," starring Tom Mix with Tony, his highly trained horse, in a thrilling western without a dull moment in it. It is the unraveling of a love and adventurous story in the life of that great organization "The Texas Ranger" who keep pace in the lone star state. Billy Dove, who plays the feminine lead in this picture, was formally with Florenz Ziegfield's Follies at the Amsterdam Roof in New York. This story is taken from the noted novel of the same name by Zane Grey.

"MOTHER KNOWS BEST," starring Louise Dresser with Madge Bellamy and Barry Norton. It is a story of stage life and tells of a child of the stage who is guided to the heights of stardom by her mother and her own talent. The mother, with a powerful driving force of character, let nothing halt her daughter's career. This picture carries the audience to the flashy choruses behind the great footlights then to the dressing rooms, back stage and through the autocratic offices of theatre managers down into the humble, as well as classy boudoirs of stage folks. It is an adaption from Edna Faber's widely read novel.

The locale is a typical college town where intense rivalry exists between two large universities. Two families devote all of their energies in an effort to raise rival football heroes. The story carries you from the rivalry of the fathers down twenty-five years to the continuation of the family feud between sons. There is intrigue, sportsman-like fighting and romantic mix-ups, as well as clever touches of college comedy.

Most uncouth inroads are made against her and she suffers untold humiliation at the hands of brutal assailants. Finally a thrilling escape is made into Canada. The story is exciting from start to finish and carries an absorbing plot.

ROAD SHOW COMES SOUTH; WILL BE AT MAIN THEATRE

On Friday and Saturday, February 22nd and 23rd, Mae Russell will present, at the Benning Main Theatre, Biff Carr's Melody Maids.

This show has played in the various war department theatres in the vicinity of Washington and is traveling to all army posts in the Potomac branch which covers the southeastern section of the United States. It is reported that this show has been thoroughly enjoyed at eastern stations where it has already been presented.

It is a revue of dancing, comedy and music; it is not a tab show in the sense that "tabs" are known; on the other hand, of course, it is not a Rio Rita or a George White's Scandle, consequently, patrons do not have to pay $3.00 to see it. Reports are that the girls are young, and there isn't a "has been" in the entire troupe. There are several sketches done in the musical comedy manner. Some of the girls in the line do specialties. Myrna Ries presents an Hawaiian specialty in the modern way. Teresa Casmero does a graceful and skillful toe dance, while her sister, Irene, steps off into a Spanish castanet number to the rhythmic clack of the castanets wielded by her nimble fingers. The entire troupe of dancing girls stage the latest dance craze—"The Raccoon." Biff Carr, the jovial jester of ceremonies, appears throughout the show, giving a bit of comedy here and there and adding to the general jollity of the entertainment. Smith and Jerome, two dark face buddies, do a military bit that, for pure comedy, is a knockout. Boots Coughlin, the ingenue, and Louise Perry, the Prima Donna, offer songs, both in solo and comedy.

There will be an entire change of program Saturday night.

In view of the favorable reports received from stations where it has shown, it is quite certain that Fort Benning will be treated on this occasion to two evenings of very enjoyable entertainment.

WOMAN'S CLUB

Place—Biglerville.

Date—First and Third Mondays.

Next Meeting—March 4th.

Time—2:15.

On last Monday afternoon the Womans Club enjoyed an exceptionally good program. Col. George V. Strong, a most brilliant and distinguished officer, gave a very elucidating talk on The Disarmament Conference. Col. Strong has represented the Army at each of these conferences in Geneva and his discussion of the aims of the conference, the representatives of the twenty countries who assembled in "Aquarium" of the Palace of Peace, the attitudes of the nations towards each other, and towards disarmament, the multitudious ramifications of the subject of disarmament and the futility of it all under existing conditions, made a lasting impression on all who were so fortunate as to hear this fascinating talk. There was national selfishness, hate, fear, suspicion, distrust underlying so much of what was proposed that one had to go back to final analysis of every proposition and when thus examined, it was nearly always objectionable beyond all consideration. Col. Strong brought out the human factors in distinguished group, and his wit and humor brought chuckles that we never had expected to hear when so high-sounding a subject as "The Disarmament Conference" was discussed.

There was a charming musical program. Before Col. Strong's address Mrs. John F. Holland, gifted violinist, played "Cavatini" and "The Swan," accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Methvin, of Columbus, and Mrs. Frank H. Partridge charmed her audience with her lovely lyrical singing of Anna Case's "Song of the Robin," "The Winds in the South" and a Lily Strickland lullaby.

At the conclusion of Col. Strong's talk Mrs. Methvin sang a group of lovely songs, "Farewell to Summer" by Noel Johnson, "Grass and Roses" and "Melba Waltz" with Mrs. Burrus, of Columbus, accompanying on the piano and Mrs. Holland playing the violin obligato.

Mrs. Charles L. Steel and Mrs. Clarence T. Davis were hostesses at tea. The table was overlaid with an elaborate canton cloth and had for its center piece a lovely silver bowl filled with daffodils, surrounded by silver candlesticks holding jade tapers. Mrs. Charles D. Roberts and Mrs. Harold Bull presided at the tea table.

The Literary Club will meet next Monday at Biglerville at 2:00, at which time Mrs. Paul R. Goode will present a porgram of Modern Realism.

SMALL PROBLEMS FOR INFANTRY

(By I. Gotta Ess.)

Feb. 20, 1929.

Deer Ike,

Last week wuz a big week Ike. Col. Hopps got Pop Goode of the 29th. Inf. to represent an intelligent officer an Pop tried it quite suksesfully. In fak Pop wuz sech a sizeable ol bean that no one denied thet he wuz intelligent. (Publicly.)

Maj. Brett hez finished his tank corse. It wuz rite good, Ike. Enny fellow whut kin teech how to use tanks and how to combat tanks in the same corse is broad enuf to get a hand outen this mob. He did. He also showed us tanks in ruff ground. He drove one, personal, himself, an ran it in a ditch an cum out pulling the ditch after him, an over trees an evcrythin. We also saw tank marksmanship on on Sakett Hill, Ike. Thet gang of Maj. Miller's sure smacked the enemy fer a loop. Bokoo hits, an whut impresses you, Ike, is the disipline, ability and purposefull methods of working those tank birds have. They went about there bizness with much grease, no frikshun, an no noise except there motors. A sweet outfit, Ike, go look em over.

Major Wilson hez joined our list of high-lites by puttin over a corse in transportation thet takes 100 hrs. at Levinsworth, in five, an whuts more, makin it almost plane enuf fer Dick Winfield to understand.

Ike, we used to go to work at 8:00 A. M. but now we hev to wate until Maj. Cadwallader cracks open his steel desk, as the instruktor cant be herd above the morning rore of rending steel plates.

An Ike, the sekutery of the Inf. Association rote me sayin I wuz going to Manila-Panama-24th Inf.-Org. Reserves-Instruktor Inf. Skule-or Natl. Guard—but I fuled em Ike, I jumped my gallopin ash-can and went to Columbus. He also rote me thet I owe him three buks. Ike we are gettin much dope fum Maj. Livesay an Capt. Peabody on supply. As Peabody hez it "We got to get the ile, Annie" (apologies to "the Student") an we got so much uv it one morning, thet sum wun sugested "Best go to bed Annie" would be more apropriate. This wuz about 11:40 A. M.

Ike, artillery is grate stuff. Maj. Marr hez run two illustrative wars with it now, an Im torn between sendin two batries or one, up forward to get both ranges. I spose in a marked problum a good gess would be to bunch em, eh, Ike. We have two new Professors in the class, Ike. Prof. Waltz and Pendergrast. Both elected to teech here next yeer. Sence they wuz elekted neether wun hez asked a kwestion or "fought" a problum, an it looks like both will be a tremendus suksess. We wish em luck. Its reely an honor to be selekted to put over the good wurk here, much as we joke about it, Ike, an these two are known for being serious thinkers.

Ike the word "bulk" hez jined the farfamed school list of revamped English. It is "BOOLK" now, so watch yure step next time you pronounce wurds like bulk-head, etc. Ike, I went over to the display of uneeforms in Assembly Hall No. 4 an I wuz undecided wether to buy a blue cap an get started on my blues, or buy an imported barathea uneeform. They both cost the same, but one covers moren the other.

Well Ike, I see by the papers thet the 3-10-15-20 ycar bill is on it's way thru. Sum say it will make about 600 more majors than we have now. An whut's more it wont rase enny-ones pay for quite a while, an those leaves cost more then Capts. bars and bars are all the reminder we hev of the good ol days, an so thets the 5-5-3 of it Ike—bild yure krusers akordingly. Im sunk ennyhow.

Spring is here Ike. Bits of grass, rain, a few orders, my dogs stay out nights, Im varnishing my ol Heddon bait-rod, skule is bearing down on us a bit, many snore during indoor sessions; an look at the golf-course! Snip-snip-Ike, three months more an a well-eddicated lad will chek out fum the Upatoi bound fer at leest a month's leave an then bak to wurk with many new ideas fer the boys. Much as we growl an rant about our labors, Ive heard the worst of em admit thet the corse is doing them good, an thet they like it. Seems to be a stewdent privelege to snort at things. Maj. Slats Arms hez assigned all the Advanced Class to their new jobs at the end of skule, an the list wuz up on the buletin bohrd. He put Ben Hensley in the 24th Inf. but Ben said he wuz to be ade to a General, an Dager sed "Lemonade" an Ben run him cleer over to the Club. The boys are gettin skittish. Ike, we got anuther Holiday Fri. AND Sat. as a reeward fer puttin our outposts down on the Upatoi, insted uv Randall Crik, witch shows our desires to do a lil bit MORE than necessary are apreshiated. WE wuz SO good on that problum they even inkluded the Cumpny Class in thet holiday.

Ed Herlihy figgered out Maj. Bradleys problem, an put it down on the map exactly like the skule solution, but Ed got interested in wunder in whether they wuz bass in Silver Run er not, an when he wuz called on, he give the anser to Charley Ryders Attak problum an attaked to the REAR.

We hed an examination in truk-movement of trupes this morning, Ike. It wuz a tikilish problum, an the class hez since voted to go bak to Plez Rojurs mounts. "Mount-up" now sounds better than "Crank-up" to us, an even A. T. Smith dont hev to figger out truk-tons to get a ride.

An RP plus two EPS an an IP ekuls a "U" on the Upatoi, Ike.

Well Ike, throw anuther hanful of salt in the ocean fer me, Ill be up to Atlantik City about June 14th, an whuts more a position in rediness wont do at all, Ill attak, even if I get "all wet."

Yures hopin fer an Ess,
Rite on the Nose.

P. S. Ike, I hope you got a copy of Academic Bulletin No. 1, "Process of Mechanization." It has met with much approval in the class; both the idea of collateral reading, and the subject selected.

WHO'S WHO!

FIRST SGT. JIMMIE JOHNSON
Howitzer Co., 29th Infantry

Twenty-four years ago Jimmie Johnston, tired of the hum and bustle of the city life of Boston. Just turning twenty-one years of age, this youngster picked the army as his profession and a peep into his records today show that during the past twenty-four years he has followed the trail of his chosen profession and today the Army points to him with pride as the type of man that the army builds.

One hitch with the cavalry only strengthened Jimmie's love for his chosen profession. He re-enlisted with the 12th Cavalry. Three years later he was discharged, but lost no time in taking on another stack, this time with the 11th Cavalry. Three hitches with the cavalry and he re-enlisted for the Ordinance Corps at Watertown Arsenal at his old home, Boston, Mass.

Finishing his three years with the Ordinance, Jimmie fell for the vamp of the service, the Infantry. First it was the 29th, our own Demonstration outfit, from the 29th to the 33rd Infantry, back again later to the 29th Infantry. He served with the Demonstration outfit in Panama and holds the distinction of being the first man to be appointed private first class in the 29th Infantry. This happened in 1916 while a member of Rgt. Hdq. Company.

Sgt. Johnston served in Cuba during the Cuban pacification, served in the Philippines on two occasions for a period of time covering approximately four years. During this time he was stationed at Forts Stocksonburg, Wallace and William McKinley.

During his second year in the service he qualified as sharpshooter with the service rifle. Since that time he has qualified as expert regularly and has been an expert pistol shot continuously for the past seven years.

When the 29th Infantry was first designated as a war strength regiment at the close of the war, Sgt. Johnston was sent to Fort Slocum for the purpose of securing recruits for the regiment. He was in charge of a detail of 7 non-commissioned officers. At the end of three weeks Sgt. Johnston and his detail of non-coms at Fort Slocum, had shipped approximately 1,300 recruits to Fort Benning for the 29th Infantry. He was personally selected by Major Weeks, who was in charge of all recruiting for the U. S. Army at this time and was highly commended by him for the work he did.

Sgt. Johnson has held the grade of non-commissioned officer in the army for the past eighteen years. At the present time he is First Sergeant of the Howitzer Co., 29th Infantry. In referring to this organization the word excellent is the only appropriate word that could be used in referring to the members of the organiaztion, their appearance, their military bearing and their Top-Kick.

When asked what he intended to do upon retirement, Sgt. Johnson said, "When I retire I will do nothing but rest, but that resting place will be some where in hailing distance of the home of the olive-drab Doughboy."

WRITING HOME

Many a young soldier, after he has definitely broken the home ties and acquared new interests, fails to write home. This neglect frequently distresses his parents or others who may be interested in the soldier's welfare.

Frequently company commanders receive anxious letters of inquiry from parents or other relatives as petty detail and not of sufficient interest to require their attention. Such is not the case. It is in these small matters that an officer has the opportunity to demonstrate his really helpful spirit towards his men.

A way to handle the matter is to have the soldier in for a talk about it. Explain to him the distress of the home folks in the matter of not hearing from him and the duty he owes to them. Another way is to announce at an assembly of the company, without mentioning any names, that a letter of inquiry has been received from the parents of a man in the company; that every young man ought to have enough interest in his parents to write to them once in a while; and that any man who fails to do so is neglecting his duty towards them.

Either of these methods will produce the desired results, if tactfully handled, and the neglect will soon disappear.

Something must be said on the other side of this question, too. If the truth were known, a lot of the absence without leave and the subsequent desertion from the army, could be traced directly to letters the soldier receives from home.

From the opening to the closing lines these epistles are filled with gloom—never a bright spot anywhere.

One such letter may have little effect. But when the soldier continues to get them week after week they prey on his mind and lower his morale. Finally he beats it back home to find out what it's all about. Arriving there, he finds affairs no different than when he left. He finds exactly the same conditions which obtained when he shook off the home ties to join the army—perhaps he left to get away from them.

In answering some of the letters to home folks of soldiers who make inquiries about them, an officer might, with propriety, enjoin them to write something pleasant and put a ban on the gloom in their letters.

TACTICAL TOPICS
(By E. F. H.)

"Better be damned than mentioned not al all."

The Infantry School News, under the active management of Editor Stewart, has developed into such a live publication that we no longer feel that "Tactical Topics" is essential to prevent the wholesale cancellation of subscriptions. With our actor friend "H. M. G." turning out his entertaining colmun, with "I Gotta Ess" lambasting the Faculty and with "H. F. L.'s" "Student in Blunderland" classics, there is already enough in each issue to save the harrassed student officer from being forced to fall back on his Friday night lesson assignments for want of something interesting to read.

In this connection, we wish to say a word in praise of the Infantry School's attitude on the great American principle of freedom of the press. We ran "Tactical Topics" in some twenty-six numbers without once being censored or called on the carpet for sacrilege, lese majestie, or similar high crimes and misdemeanors. We mentioned some rather important people too. We confess to using a certain amount of discretion in our treatment of delicate cases involving instructors and others in positions of authority over us but, had it not been for the broad spirit of tolerance which prevailed along the Upatoi, we would have been in hot water more than once. Military authority, as we have learned by experience, is often quite sensitive to comments which seem to imply that its acts are not all wise and all consistent. "Tactical Topics" desires to take this opportunity to speak a word of appreciation of the Infantry School attitude, in that it has not clothed its competent instructor personnel with an aura of sanctity. Think of how Lynn Roberts or Phil Peyton would feel in that kind of a uniform.

Heavy Casualities in the Leavenworth Sector

We have recently conducted an investigation of the C & G S S Records of the so called Vestal Virgins of the 1927-28 Advanced Class and are now ready to announce that all save one of the immaculate priesthood, who completed the Infantry School course with clean slates, have fallen from their high estate. In addition to those already checked off in this column, the illustrous names of Marshal Vachon, Demosthenes Fagg, Cicero Overstreet, Epaminondas Kraft and Light Horse Harry Eisenschmidt have featured in recent casuality lists. Even the mighty Father Callahan, who devoted his summer vacation to the study of musty files of Tactical Principles and Decisions, went down under the heavy barrage of "U's" that the school laid down just after the holidays.

The Last Leaf

The sole survivor of this promising group, which came to Leavenworth seeking new worlds to conquer, is the Reverand J. J. O'Hare, erstwhile golf champion of Fort Benning. Champion O'Hare, who attributes his success to hard work, Doc Cook and natural ability, modestly disclaims the title of Outstanding Military Genius of last year's Advanced Course. He seems particularly anxious to avoid publicity pending the announcement of the C & G S S instructor detail for next year and we have it on good authority that his exalted position is becoming so embarrassing that he intends to violate all the nine principles of war in the next pay problem.

While on this subject we might mention that the mortality among the quartette of former Benning instructors has also been high. George King, Johnnie Walker and Leatherstocking Febeiger all know how it feels to have the ships of their hopes and fears torpedoed by the G & G S S "U" boats. Major Almond, a well-known authority on the howitzer platoon in war and peace, has weathered the storm to date but we fear that his reputation for infallibility is tottering on the brink. In a recent exhibit, the futuristic tactical artists of the Faculty had painted a picture which was intended to convey to the initiated the idea of a withdrawal under cover of darkness, which the intrepid Major mistook for a new Thermapolae and stood his ground like Wellington at Waterloo, Jackson at Bull Run, Lee at Antietam and other famous historical examples. The papers have not been returned but we fear for the worst. As one of our Infantry School "U's" was acquired in Major Almond's subject, we could look upon his impending downfall with composure were it not for the fact that we staked our own tactical reputation on the same solution.

Great Lingerie Mystery Baffles G-2 Experts

The following notice appeared in the General Service School's Daily Bulletin in early January:

"Found: One pair of ladies pink crepe de chine bloomers. Owner may receive same by calling at the Information Office."

As may well be imagined, the notice created a sensation in Leavenworth's Mid-Victorian atmosphere and an army of detectives of both sexes immediately started working on the case. Meanwhile the more timid of the officers wives shun the Lost and Found Department as they would a leper for fear that their innocent quest of their children's lost school books, sweaters, gloves, skates, etc., will be misunderstood.

Ex-Club Representative Dusenbury, a prominent young man-about-town, who returned from Christmas leave the day before the announcement, was suspected of knowing more than he seemed inclined to tell but a severe grilling by Police Sergeant Devore disclosed no information on the decisive points in issue. The best minds of the Faculty have fallen down on the case and the shrewdest investigators of the student body have failed signally in their attempt to G-2 the "what, when, where, how and why" of this interesting and unusual tactical problem. Former Benningites smile to think how easily a similar mystery would have been solved by Sherlock Shamotulski in consultation with Dan Card

The Last Straw

We understand that this year's monographers were assigned their subjects before the Christmas vacations but were prohibited from working on them during the holidays. We hasten to congratulate the Faculty on having achieved the ultimate by hitting upon the only device not hitherto employed to make the monograph period the happiest of the whole school year.

Just as we were about to go to press, we were handed an order detailing us as an instructor at the Infantry School, in the distinguished company of Professor McCunniff, Archer Davidson and O. N. Bradley. The thought that we are soon to associate on terms of equality with Evan Lewis, Roy Hill, Otto Lange and other academic supermen, of whom we have always stood in the greatest awe, so overwhelms us that we are not prepared to issue our formal acceptance statement at this time.

We rejoice, however, that Tactical Topics has ever maintained that the approved solution, however dumb it may appear on the surface, is correct, and that it has been a staunch advocate of the doctrine of the unfallibility of the instructor. We shall continue this position. Moreover we consider the monograph an experiment, noble in motive, that deserves to be perpetuated. We pledge our best effort to an endeavor to make two of them grow where but one has grown before. We also advocate the seven day week for student officers and promise to use our influence toward the institution of Sunday morning conferences to take up the slack over the week-end.

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

The outstanding event of the week is the Washington-Marshal holiday. I can say for this dual celebration that its announcement had one of the most cordial receptions given to any public charity in years. Down in the village families made merry. Some prepared to go to Warm Springs, others expected to have meat on both days. But we are all mighty thankful and from now on we will do our durndest to think tactically.

What with holidays, assignment orders and promotion bills this has been a hectic week. Just enough assignment orders have come out to put the rest of us in a very receptive mood. Some one with a ready imagination made about a dozen ficitious Fort Benning assignments and had the list circulated. Some of the recipients of these orders acted as though they were about to be married, others seem to prefer another ceremony.

In addition to the hot air mentioned, the week has been filled with gobs of copious rain. (This statement, I am sure, will come as quite a surprise to most of you.) The school, like all good generals, proceeded to make use of the instruments at hand. So when the rain had reached the flood stage, a demonstration was given of the sea worthiness of tanks. The demonstration was quite a success. The test for water proofness of student officers, however, was not so successful.

The operation of these tanks under the most trying conditions has led many officers living in Wynnton to consider turning in their cars, or whats left of them, for light tanks. These officers believe that tanks can possibly go through Brown street. That's expecting a good deal of a tank, but even if a few are lost they will fill up some of the holes and the others might make it.

Academically speaking we have been getting initiated into the intricacies of the 37 M. M.

In our spare moments we signal communicated. We have done this in every way from forming contact with the back of somebodies neck to the approved methods. In applying the tests for telephones, Lt. Edmands, who usually has very little to say, stated that when he blew into the transmitter the bell should ring. Either the lieutenant is boasting or else he could make a lot of money on the outside starting fires. What a help in the morning, three breaths and your furnace is lighted!

Dave Barrett has asked to be allowed to take extra instruction as a switch board operator.

McGoofus Smith caused the sub course students to have a late session. He had several unexpected questions that he couldn't control.

The class will now rise and sing, "It aint going to rain no more."

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

How many of you took note of the cartoon on the cover page of last week's Infantry School News? Uncle Sam is extending his hand in congratulation to the boy Scouts upon the nineteenth anniversary of the movement. And well he may since it is the greatest institution in the world for the training of boys and young men in character building. It is America's accepted program for boy development. There is scarcely a village in the United States that does not have its Boy Scout Troop and yet the movement is only nineteen years old. If the Boy Scouts of America today were placed touching hands they would form a chain across the continent from New York to San Francisco. Marching in close formation they would require the larger part of a week, day and night, to pass in review. And there are now fifty-seven other countries in which the scouting program has been adopted.

What does this mean to you? To me it means simply that more than a third of a million boys, in our own land, are pledged to the proposition of making themselves physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

Scouting is a way of living. It teaches a boy that what he does counts for more than what he says. It builds character through habit and citizenship through service. It develops cooperation through cooperating. It learns to do by doing. Its outdoor activities make for health and enrichment of the boy's life. In a word, Scouting is a process of making real men out of real boys, by a real program. Scouting is non-sectarian, though its ideals accord with the ideals of the church, and is based upon a pledged allegiance to the service of God, and the brotherhood of men. It builds better boys through influences and ideals which operate from within the "Gang."

Now, to come right down to the aim of this article, let us have your boy, if he is past twelve years of age, as a member of Troop 11 of Fort Benning.

During the past year Troop 11 has decreased in membership owing to transfers, etc., until now only eighteen names remain upon its roster. Those registered for this year follow:

Waine Archer, Earl Barkhurst, Henry Barkhurst, Willis Buckner, Samuel Card, Elting Coates, Woodrow Deffebio, William Floyd, Clarence Harvey, Charles Hildreth, Harold Jones, Harold Marr, Marcus O'Neal, Gregory Squires, William Squires, William Stayer, Willard Wilson, John Wright.

Upon the invitation of the editor of the News this column will be a regular feature of the paper. Watch it weekly for information regarding activities of scouting in general.

VETERNARY DETACHMENT INSTALLS NEW RADIO

Snuggled down in a shady, cozy spot below the Infantry School stables, is a small detachment of men that are hardly known to the personnel of the garrison. Should a horse or mule become sick or be injured the animal is hurried to the vetinary hospital where expert aid is given and seldom does a sick or injured horse or mule fail to recover.

The Vetinary Detachment, composed of fifteen men, go quietly about their work attending to the needs and wants of our dumb friends and the few casualities that occur among the horses and mules of the garrison is ample proof of the efficiency of this detachment.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." This old adage has proven true many times. It will never happen in the Vetinary Detachment. During the past few weeks a radio has been installed in the recreation room. Musical selections and other news of interest are picked from the air nightly. A reading room with all of latest books and magazines furnish pleasure and recreation during the long winter evenings.

Father (speaking to prospective son-in-law) The man who gets my daughter will get a prize.

WILLIE PTOMEY WINS OVER JOHNIE WALKER

Thomas Kaos Detroit Fighter as Soldiers Feature Montgomery Fight Card

Weary Willie Ptomey, left-hooking, right-crossing soldier of the Infantry School, fired volley after volley of his famous punches into the face and body of Johnnie Walker, rugged Chattanooga fighter, to win the decision by a wide margin in the ten-round main-go of the fight card staged at the Mongomery, Ala., auditorium last Monday night.

It was a battle that sizzled with action, Walker only giving ground when Ptomey piled wide, curling hooks into his face and body. It was a steady stream of blows that hit the rugged Walker from the third round until the end of the tenth when Walker was led from the ring punch drunk and groggy under the beating the soldier had handed him.

In the semi-windup a new army star made it's appearance on the horizon. Doubting Thomas, Fort Benning lightweight, who substituted for Dannie Davis, knocked out Billy Brindle, of Detroit, in the fifth round of a scheduled eight-round fight.

Thomas floored Brindle early in the fifth for the count of nine. Brindle came back only to go down for the count under a terrific right to the jaw.

CYCLONE SMITH WINS SLASHING TEN ROUND VICTORY OVER TERRY ROBERTS

Fight fans of Columbus and Fort Benning witnessed one of the fightienest fight cards ever held at the Fort Benning fight arena last Tuesday night. From the opening bout until the final round of the main go every bout on the program was slam full of action from the word go.

"Cyclone" Walker Smith made his initial debut in a ten-round battle and there is no doubt in the minds of the fans who witnessed the fight that his coming out was one grand success. Matched against Terry Roberts, a ring veteran of five years' experience, few fans conceded the young doughboy a chance to win.

Unleashing a weaving, bobbing two handed attack that left Roberts dazed and baffled, Smith came near ending the fight in the opening round and only Roberts' bull-dog gameness and his ability to absorb punishment robbed the soldier of a knockout victory.

Early in the opening round Roberts attempted to corner Smith. Roberts almost went through the ropes when Smith side-stepped his rush. Before Roberts could recover Smith drove a left to his stomach and then crossed a terrific right to his jaw that dropped him in a heap. Roberts staggered to his feet at the count of nine, but Smith's over-eagerness robbed him of a victory. Instead of measuring his man, he rushed in with a volley of wild swings. Roberts fell into a clinch. The bell ended the round.

Smith took every round. His murderous two-handed body attack punished Roberts severely all during the fight. Time and again Roberts reeled and rocked under the impact of Smith's wicked one-twos, but always his ring craftiness saved him from a kao against the raging doughboy's over-anxiousness.

In the tenth it seemed that Smith had surely turned the trick. A smashing overhand right dropped Roberts. How he ever regained his feet no on knows, but he did. Again Smith rushed when he had his man ready for the kill, and again Roberts fell into a clinch. Smith fought desperately to finish his man but the bell ended the fight with Roberts a bloody, groggy, beaten fighter but still on his feet.

Only a few more fights, and the "Louisiana Cyclone" will surely be heard from beyond the boundaries of the Upatoi, for with his natural fighting ability and powerful hitting power, offset by lightning foot-work, this boy is sure to go a long ways in the fight game.

Davis-Parker Fight is Sensation of Season

The ten-round semi-final between Blondie Parker and Danny Davis, welterweights, was one of the fastest and furiousest battles ever staged here. Both boys showed a world of speed and hitting power. In the third round Parker dropped Davis with a sweeping right to the jaw. Another that would have ended the fight grazed Danny's jaw as he staggered to his feet. The bell saved Davis in this round.

Coming back in the fourth Danny held the Greencord Blonde to even terms. The fifth and sixth were fast and furious. Davis evened the count in the seventh, rocking Parker from pillar to post under a barrage of hooks and jabs.

The ninth and tenth were the rip-snorting, slam-bang affairs that kept the fans at fever heat. The referee's decision, a draw, pleased fans and fighters.

K. O. Gordy Presented Silk Bathrobe

As he entered the ring for his fight with Jimmie Jackson of Fort Bragg, K. O. Gordy of the Q. M. Det., was presented a beautiful silk bathrobe by Capt. Wilson. It was a gift from his buddies and the members of the Q. M. Det.

Gordy ripped into his man from the first gong, finishing the fight in the third round with a clean knock-out. This is Gordy's third knockout in as many starts.

Seaweed Wilson, of the 29th Infantry, handed Crafty Kline, of Columbus, a neat trimming in a fierce four-rounder. The boys are feather weights and the fight was fast and fierce.

Fiske Williamson took a decision over Ruffhouse Glover, of Macon, but he had a wonderful busy evening with the small piece of ebony from the Central City.

Battling Sam was knocked out in the third round by Pritchard.

MUSKETEERS FINISH BRILLIANT SEASON; WIN SEVENTEEN, LOSE SEVEN GAMES

(By Al Durden)

A glance at the 1928-29 records of the basketball team of the Musketeers will offer ample proof that the soldiers of the Infantry School are entitled to high places of honor among the cage quintetts of the country. The team representing the Infantry School this year was by far superior to anything turned out here in previous years and that is saying a great deal, considering the teams and records they have made in the past years. But the record of wins and the teams over which they have won put aside all dispute.

During the season just past they played a total of twenty-four games, winning seventeen and loosing seven. During this series of games two were lost to Olson's Sweedes in the early part of the season. However, later in the season the Musketeers took the scalp of the World Famous Indians, who had beaten the Sweedes, in one of the grandest games ever witnessed on the local court. Probably the biggest upset of the season was when the Southern College five handed Benning their defeat. They had successfully met on the three nights preceding the teams representing the Cincinnati Wild Cats, the Birmingham Comets and the Saint Louis Americans. Auburn took one game by a one point margin at Auburn after having played an extra period. In the return game the Musketeers easily clipped the "Tiger's" claws. Albany "Y" managed to split even in their tilt with the Infantrymen, while the best Levy-Morton could do was to take the third game of a four-game series.

The Musketeer's attack centered around Johnny Roosma, who, during the season just closed, shot a total of three hundred and twenty-five points. In the twenty games in which he was a participant, Johnny sank 149 field goals and fifty-four from the free line strip, giving him an average of 18 points for each game. Not only as a basket sharpshooter did Roosma shine, but on defensive work also. Several threats that looked as if the opponent was going to score were broken up by the Benning ace.

Stamper, playing opposite Roosma, displayed a brand of basketball that was far above par. Seeing action in twenty-three games, the trim Doughboy sank a total of 71 field goals and 19 from the charity strip, making him a total of 161 points for the season. His fast floor work and accurate passing were big factors in the tallies of Roosma and Kammerer.

Kammerer, at guard, was second to Roosma only in shooting. During the season just closed it is believed that he shot more long range shots than any other man who played here during the season. Paired with "Fat" Franz, clown of the court, at the guard position was a combination that kept terror in the ranks of the best teams to show here this season.

Strickler at center set aside an idea that is prevalent that to be a successful center great height is necessary. Particularly was this proven in the game against the World Famous Indians. Opposing him at center was a gentleman who was only nine inches taller than he and just about twice his size. Strickler played rings around the giant and was the star of the game.

Second Stringers Good

The Musketeer second string is composed of a squad of budding stars that show ample promise of taking their place in the front line in case of a vacancy. McAllister, at forward, shows promise to being a second Roosma. His floor work and shooting are of big league calibre. Isham, at center, has broke into the game several times this season, and on each occasion the big fellow has given a good account of himself. He should be ready to step with the best of them in another season. Reddock has been playing a nifty game at guard on the few occasions he has broke into the game. His work is away above the average, and he should be heard from next season.

Newman has played a brilliant game all season and has proved capable of playing any position. He was regular first string man last season, but has played in 16 games this season as utility man. His playing this season has been of a high standard. Oikra is well known to the football, fight and basketball fans of the garrison. As a member of the Musketeers this season, he has played a fast, steady game of basketball, and has proved to be a useful cog in the Musketeer machine. "Baby" Webb, playing his first year with an army team, broke into four games and has given a good account of himself on each occasion. He will most likely be labelled a regular before his first three years have rolled around.

Total scores and average of Musketeers for season:

	Games	F.G.	F.	Tls.	Av.
Roosma	20	149	54	352	18
Kammerer	22	91	33	215	10
Stamper	23	63	19	161	7
Strickler	14	31	18	80	5.7
Franz	22	23	19	65	3

Battery "A"

We wish to lay claim to the distinction of having the bravest and most courageous 1st Sergeant in the Battalion, and who shall say nay when we tell you that he was the first enlisted man in the Artillery to purchase one of the famous blue uniforms. (This to the credit and excellent discipline of the organization). He attended a wedding in town last week and upon entering the room where the ceremony was to be performed was surprised to hear the bride ask the groom if he was the preacher.

We have received only one new man in this battery in the past six months and during this period the batttery has at all times been far above authorized strength, due to the fact that "they" all re-enlist, which speaks well for the officers, non-commissioned officers and the battery as a whole. Private Graham, who came to the organization the latter part of January, has been received with open arms. He has twenty-three years previous service to his credit, and as a baker and cook he can not be excelled.

Private Thurston, who is on special duty in the cafe, Service Club No. 1, was heard to ask our Supply Sergeant for a pair of roller skates to save his soles. What kind Arthur?

Private Usher, who has soldiered in every post Uncle Sam lays claim to, has been trying to find out if the government has established any new camps the past year, as he is again ready to go prowling. Slim, why not try the Foreign Legion. We understand they ask no questions and with your line you would soon be a major.

Corporal Overby, who hails from Arkansas, has written to the governor of that state, asking if he will be disfranchised as a citizen of said state if he reads Darwin's works, since they passed the anti-evolution bill.

Would you call it absentmindness when three men of this organization started in a car for Albany, Georgia, and woke up in Birmingham, Alabama, or auto-intoxication?

Corporal Coffin says he is off the stock market for life, after taking a "flier" in Chevrolets and Georgia mules. What's the matter "drawback," did they both go down at once?

Battery "B"

Although "B" Battery won but two of the bouts with the Tankers last week we feel confident that these two gladiators of the square ring will bring home the honors again this week when they again enter the arena.

Since the return of Sergeant LaCroix much activity has been noticed in and around the mess hall. Was it interior decorating that you were studying while on furlough?

Again there is a severe epidemic of equipment and clothing marking going on in the battery. Will it ever end? Will this disease always be worrying the recruit and old soldiers alike?

Corporal Wilemon, now on re-enlistment fourlough, is sick with the flu. Boys don't you think it would be a good idea to send him a line? A friendly message would cheer him up a lot.

The B. C. detail have taken up the study of the wig wag system. Pvt. McClendon, always to the front in anything that his section may take up, was noticed practicing in his sleep.

Boys, don't miss next week's paper. There is to be a very good article by the man of all trades, better known as Jack.

Battery "C"

Corporal Winslow states that he is deriving much benefit out of instructing the recruits, including himself.

Sergeant Miller was observed trying some of Colonel Lindbergh's stunts. While watering the horses at the gravel wash on Upatoi creek Monday, said Sergeant's horse decided that he would like to have a bath and said Sergeant being astride horse at this time soon found that the water was extremely cold and not to his liking. It is understood that it was a very nice nose dive, Eh Sarge.

We don't know what the top-kick was referring to at supper Monday evening but evidently it must have been something quite agreeable as there was quite a unanimus laugh at Sergeant Hall's benefit.

Private McDuff states that the weekly drill schedule is like a cross work puzzle. He can't seem to find any head or tail to it.

Our new gun shed now nearing completion is an exceptional piece of work, having been built entirely by the carpenters and nail hitters in the battery (all the nails not having been made of steel or tin) and a vote of thanks should be given Sergeant Gehm, who has been in charge and somewhat of a superintendent of the construction of the shed.

Corporal Goodwin is now in the battery, after having been in the hospital, and we all look forward to many phone calls for said Corporal in the near future, as he is quite popular with the fair sex and keeps the line busy after retreat.

Private Varnum states that he never knew that tooth brushes grew, but such was the case when he laid his own down and picked up someone else's, which was extremely larger.

The Corporals of the Battery were observed to be very industrious the other evening. We wonder just what was the result of so much energy shown on their part, and what was the cause.

Recruit Stewart is making an investment in China ware this month of $11.83 charged for broken dishes while on K. P. the other day.

Private McDuff, after serving a week's extra duty for missing Reveille, has purchased an alarm clock to help the bugler arouse him each morning for this formation.

Private Frank Williams, better known as "Big Hearted Frank," and Private Douglas A. Ives are visiting in New Orleans this week.

Private First Class Lyle H. Norris departed a few days ago for his home in Livermore Falls, Maine, at which place he will visit for the next sixty days.

It is understood that Private (Uncle Ed) Vogel is very fond of horses, as he intends to buy out should we happen to get tractors back. If "C" battery continues to keep horses Uncle Ed has decided to retire from the army in this battery. He has already gotten in eight months' service.

Hdqrs., Hdqrs. Bat. and Combat Train

John C. Lane, after spending two months in civil life, has returned seeking another stack. The outside is not at all rosy, as some one had stated. Ask Lane, he knows.

Sgt. McAuliffe received a letter from Ex-Cpl. Derrick last week, stating he was sailing on the 16th, Hawaii bound.

Since starting construction on the new barracks, Headquarters Battery looks as if it shall soon be cut off from all outside communication. Sgt. Dodd remarked that it made him home sick to see so much ploughed up ground.

Two well known members of the battery stepped out in society last week-end, starting from the Mecca Cafe. The trip was a success, considering all socially speaking.

Since being promoted to Corporal, Shiek Phillips makes his trips to town now nightly. Never do to see you a Sgt. Phillips, you would get a pass to come to camp.

The battery spent last Tuesday out Harp ponds way on an all day road march, in preparation to our hike some time in the near future. Every one seems to be all upset and rarin' to go. Bring on the hike, when do we leave, is heard daily.

"So your father knows the exact month he will die, does he, the exact year, month, and day?"

"Yassuh, he ought to. The jedge tole him."

SPORTOPICS

By Al

Only a few short months ago and Benning fight fans mentioned Walker Smith, Babe Asher, Blondie Parker and Pinkie Phillips as mighty good preliminary boys.

Today "Cyclone" Walker Smith is attracting the attention of sport writers and fight critics over the country. A weaving, bobbing, shifty fighter with a tremendous wallop in either mitt he is now referred to as a sure comer. Today he is a prominent contender among the South's light-heavies.

Babe Asher and Pinkie Phillips attracted the attention of fight fans here a few months past when they staged a three-rounder that was a hummer. Later they fought a six-rounder. Again the fans begged for more. A few weeks ago they stepped ten rounds at top speed and Benningites never witnessed a faster, cleaner fight. Asher's tremendous hitting power gave him the decision. Both boys stepped the distance at top speed and were going strong at the finish. Between their own fights they have cleaned up on all outside opposition.

Blondie Parker, another of the amateur class of the past few months, is one of the hardest hitting welters in his class today. He is fast and shifty and with his rangy build has the makings of a great battler.

In his first ten-rounder here last Tuesday night he stepped the full distance at top speed against Danny Davis, 29th Infantry welterweight and a veteran fighter, and finished strong. The fight was one of the best ever witnessed here and ended in a draw.

Benning is now represented by one of the niftiest stable of fighters in the country.

AMATEUR BOXING TOURNAMENT

Wednesday night, February 20th, saw the end of the elimination bouts of the Amateur Boxing Tournament which has been running at the Post Gymnasium every Wednesday night this month. All told there was a total of 23 scraps that brought out some excellent talent. It was a free for all affair the night being set aside to take care of the timid ones who failed to enter the earlier tests. From the sidelines it appeared as if the late entries, after sizing up the talent that put out on the 6th and 13th, decided that it was not so hot after all and decided to try their luck.

There were more gloves thrown this past Wednesday than one will see in two life times. From the first to the twenty-third bout it was slam and more slam. Fifteen of the number showed excellent promise, but to pick out any particular star would be an injustice to the rest. Below is the result:

There will be a meeting of the unit boxing instructors in the near future to arrange the card for the quarter and semi-finals which will run off March 6th and 13th. All told 70 men have qualified guaranteeing some stiff competition when they get going again. The break until March 6th will give all contestants sufficient time to round into the best of condition.

It is believed the finals will get under way either March 20th or 27th. Some divisions like the welterweight and middle class owing to the large entry list, will take some little time to eventually reach the two finalists.

THE PROMOTION BILL

The text of the promotion bill that passed the Senate last Saturday is as follows:

That the aggregate number of commissioned officers of the Regular Army and Philippine Scouts on the active list shall not exceed the number now or hereafter expressly authorized by law, and all such officers, except officers of the Medical Department, chaplains, and professors, shall be designated as promotion list officers. The number of promotion-list officers in each of the grades below brigadier general shall be such as results from the operation of the promotion system prescribed in this act, and shall not be otherwirse limited: Provided, That except as otherwise in this act prescribed, the aggregate number of promotion-list colonels and lieutenant colonels shall not exceed 15 per cent., and number of promotion-list field officers shall not be less than 26 per cent., of the maximum aggregate number of promotion-list officers authorized by law.

SEC. 2 That all promotions under this act shall be subject to such examination as shall have been required by authority of law. Promotion-list officers in the grades of second lieutenant, first lieutenant, captain, major, and lieutenant colonel shall, except as otherwise prescribed in this act, be promoted to the respective next higher grade when their names appear first in their grade upon the promotion list, and when, under provisions of this act, they are credited with 3, 10, 15, 20 and 26 years of service, respectively. The promotion of majors credited with 20 years of service shall be deferred so long as necessary to prevent the limitation of 15 per cent. hereinbefore prescribed for the combined grades of colonel and lieutenant colonel being exceeded, and no officer shall be promoted to the grade of colonel until he shall have served at least two years in the grade of lieutenant colonel: Provided, That promotion-list officers not promoted from the grade of major under the foregoing provisions shall be promoted to the grade of lieutenant colonel when, under provisions of this act, they are credited for promotion purposes, with not less than 20 years of service and are also not less than 52 years of age, and officers so promoted under this proviso shall be promoted to the grade of colonel when credited with 26 years of service, or as soon thereafter as they shall have served not less than two years in the grade of lieutenant colonel and shall be additional numbers in the grade of lieutenant colonel and colonel and shall not be counted in computing the maximum percentage hereinbefore prescribed for such grades: Provided further, That in the application of the foregoing proviso each United States Military Academy class shall be treated as a unit as of the average age of the members of the class. In so far as necessary to maintain the prescribed minimum of field officers, captains credited with less than 15 years of service shall be promoted in the order of their standing upon the promotion list.

SEC. 3. Provides for promotion Air Corps officers.

SEC. 4. Length of service for promotion under this act shall be computed as follows:

MASTER SERGEANT NORMAN C. MASON APPOINTED REGIMENTAL SERGEANT MAJOR

Master Sergeant Norman C. Mason, formerly with the Service Company, was last Friday appointed Regimental Sergeant-Major of the 29th Infantry, filling the position vacated by the recent death of Master-Sergeant Floyd D. Belmeyer.

Sgt. Mason, who is a veteran of the Spanish-American and World wars, first came to the Twenty-ninth in 1922. During his stay in Fort Benning, he has, by his excellent qualities and strict adherence to duty, earned both the respect and liking of the entire regiment.

His initial enlistment was with the 6th U. S. Volunteers in July, 1898, with which regiment he saw active service in Porto Rico. In the following year he went to the Philippines with the 37th U. S. Volunteers, staying there until the termination of the Filipino insurrection.

During the World war he served with the First Mobile Ordinance Repair Section, First Division, which was the only section of its kind to have actual battle experience, taking part in the St. Mihiel Offensive, Battle of the Marne, Meuse-Argonne and Cantigny.

He also saw service with this unit in England and later, after the signing of the Armistice, was stationed for nine months in Germany with the Army of Occupation.

FIRST BATTALION BRICK BARRACKS READY FOR OCCUPANCY

The final additions to the 29th Infantry Cuartel are completed and stand ready for occupancy by the various organizations of the First Battalion, not already housed there.

The ceremony of turning over the keys to the company commanders by Captain MacKachnie, regimental supply officer, took place on the afternoon of February 18.

The removal from the tent area to the barracks will take place at the convenience of the company commanders. In the meanwhile work is going on in the installation of shelves, bins and fixtures in the quarters.

ORGANIZATIONS USING VEGETABLE AND GARBAGE CELLARS

On February 19 the organizations of the regiment began using the permanent vegatable and garbage cellars which have recently been completed.

The line of garbage stands which formerly disfigured the area has been cleared away and the coal bins have been placed in close proximity to the kitchens and out of the way.

REGIMENTAL PHOTO SHOP MOVES OVER 29TH CANTEEN

The regimental photo shop has moved to the second floor of the regimental canteen. The move is a strategic one on their part, as it brings them closer to the center of the "demonstration regiment" activities. And it also affords them a place that is more suitable for photographic work, due to the larger windows and the facilities for building a skylight.

The building vacated by the photo shop will be utilized as the new home of the Fort Benning Masonic lodge.

SQUAD SELECTED FOR REGIMENTAL RIFLE TEAM

Major Brooke, who is in charge of the smallbore rifle shooting in the regiment, has selected a squad from among the men competing in the Regimental Smallbore Rifle League, from whom will be picked the Regimental Rifle Team.

These men are hard at work practicing every day for the coming matches with the 3rd and 16th Infantry on the 21st and 26th of February, respectively.

The men comprising the squad are Sgt. C. M. Hopkins, Hq. Co.; Sgt. W. C. Kjelstrom, 2nd Bat. Hq. Co.; Sgt. F. C. Davis, 2nd Bat. Hq. Co.; Sgt. L. A. Beck, A Co.; Sgt. A. B. Larrimore, B Co.; Pvt. A. Vetter, B Co.; 1st Sgt. E. C. Davis, E Co.; Cpl. J. C. Dean, E Co.; Cpl. S. A. Clay, E Co.; Sgt. Simpson, G Co.; Cpl. H. F. Hicks, F Co., and Pvt. E. Madarias, G Co.

"F" COMPANY UNDEFEATED SMALL BORE RIFLE CHAMPS

As a result of winning all of their matches in the Regimental Small Bore Rifle League, which has recently completed its schedule, F Company, with a percentage of 1.000, captured the championship.

The official percentages, which was announced by Maj. Brooke on Wednesday, gave F Company as champs, with G Company as runner up with .714.

The matches aroused keen interest in the regiment and were hotly contested. A suitable trophy will be donated the winners sometime this week.

The members of the winning team are: Sgt. Simpson, Sgt. Courtney, Cpl. Hicks, Cpl. Barnes, Cpl. Miller, Cpl. Johnson, Cpl. Cheslot, Pfc. Murphy, Pvt. Dasserelli, Pfc. McKay and Sgt. Friend.

Final standing of league:

Company	Won	Lost	Pct.
F	7	0	1.000
G	5	2	.714
B	4	3	.571
2nd Bat. Hq. Co.	4	3	.571
E	4	3	.571
C	2	5	.286
Reg. Hq. Co.	1	6	.143
A	1	6	.143

"E" CO. WINS REGIMENTAL BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

For the third consecutive year, E Company has won the regimental basketball championship without the loss of a single game. A contributing reason for this is the fact that four members of the company team are also on the post team and are exceptional players. The last game of the league season, between B Company, champs of the First Battalion, and E Company, was not played due to the fact that the First Bat champs failed to appear, thus giving E Company the regimental championship by forfeiture.

A beautiful trophy was awarded the winning team by the regiment.

1st Sergeant Davis, of E Company, who played on the team the first year that they won the championship, coached the present team. The players in expressing their appreciation for the enthusiasm and earnest cooperation of their company commander, Captain Cecil L. Rutledge, said, "Who couldn't win a championship for such a company commander. A word from him between halves puts pep in all of the players.

The squad consists of:

Swede Oikari, the basket shooter from Minnesota.

Shiek Stamper, the kid from the Kentucky sticks.

"Fat Franz" the square-head from Erie.

Slum-burning McCallister from the wet town of Phenix City, Alabama.

"Chink" Miscar from Rhubard, Louisiana.

Billy Goat Liebel from New Orleans.

"Ace in the hole," Regan, the E Company hair butcher.

"Gasoline" French, from somewhere in Alabama.

Wallace, history unknown.

FIRST BATTALION NOTES

1st Bn. Hdqrs. and Hdqrs. Co.

At last, we are moving to the "New Barracks" this week. Every one is wondering just how it will feel to live in our new home.

Pvt. Kilpatrick has decided to go out for football. The other evening he made a flying tackle at "Little" Stepp across the ditch in front of our recreation room. His foot slipped slightly, his head went down and his feet went up. There is quite a long place where the grass is torn up in the lawn. Apparently he decided to hunt wild hogs and started rooting for them.

There is a couple of new "Peanuts" in the company this week. Cpl. Sheppard is now a sergeant, and Pfc. Hinkley is a corporal.

It has been estimated that if all our men ate as much as our barber, that our ration allowance would have to be raised about a hundred dollars a month. For this reason we will be unable to have our own mess when we move to the barracks.

Our new game in the company is tag. Usually when some one is tagged a generous grunt can be heard from the one tagged. "Hoot" Thompson is our coach, and I might say that he is an adept at the game.

We have a new pool shark in our company. Pvt. Smith, who is now taking recruit drill, has been using our best pool players just to practice with.

—"Red"

Company "A"

Our drill platoon under the supervision of 1st Lt. Frederick Pearson and Sgt. Sheriff was highly complimented on its efficiency and all members were commended by the battalion commander.

At last we will occupy a section in the new barracks and I believe that all concerned will be thankful that we are leaving the tent area, although we have always been in tents and some of the members hate to leave.

Now that the blue pennant has been done away with we can say that "A" Company was the first company and the last to hold it.

Discharges for the week are: Pvt. Russell and promotions are: Pvt. Freeman was appointed corporal.

—G. C. R.

Company "B"

Our "Intelligence boys," Ogden and Villere seem to have the impression they can make mess sergeants via K. P.'s Any afternoon or week-end they may be found in the kitchen washing dishes, mopping floors, peeling spuds or going through some of the daily routine of our famous K. P.s

Our "yellow peril" Private Dixon, is again out of the hospital and attending intelligence school.

Pfc. Lewis W. Jones was recently appointed corporal. Congratulations Corporal Jones.

There seems to be the impression throughout the company that we have four young ladies as members of our organization. Can it be possible? Yes indeed! Sisters Dixon, Ogden, Pearce and Rogers. Just how they received this title remains a mystery.

—C. A. N.

Company "C"

Privates First Class Williams and Coward were discharged per E. T. S. this week and departed for parts unknown. Both were good soldiers and of excellent character.

Sergeant Biggerstaff was discharged February 19th, per E. T. S., and reenlisted for this organization. Sgt. Biggerstaff joined this organization in Feb-

SECOND BATTALION NOTES

Headquarters Company

More news on which to comment is the fact that we have two new corporals, ex-Pfc.'s Elkins and Udell. We want to congratulate you boys and hope you do your best to deserve them. This is indeed a surprise.

The boys wearing the new stripes are none other than Pvts. Franks, Reynolds and Shinn. Franks is the new student clerk, Reynolds is the buckinest man in the outfit and Shinn is makin wonderful progress at Fort Monmouth, N. J. These boys certainly deserve their new ratings.

Ah ha, the scribe has at last found a scoop. It was rumored that the well known Cpl. Palmer was caught in the act of holding up a dish and the company sleuth later on verified the fact, which was quite a blow to the company. His arm must be getting stronger.

The men attending the radio school are making excellent progress and several of the men are already six and seven word operators. We hope that the rest of them catch up and make the class all at least ten word operators. Snap into it boys.

Well people, time is short and life is sweet so rather than take any more time I will stop and save some news for next week. —J. R. Patterson.

FIRST BATS TAKE LEAD IN BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

Fort Benning's Intra-Mural Basketball league opened February 15th, with two games at the garrison gymnasium. In the opening game the Artillerymen downed the Special Units Quintet in a hard fought game, 27 to 20.

The second game of the evening was a nip and tuck affair between the Tankers and First Bats. The First Bats nosed out a victory in the final minute of play to win over the Tankers 41 to 40.

Several fast and hard fought battles have featured the past weeks play. At the present time the First Bats top the heap with two wins and no losses.

CAPT. B. F. CAFFEY, JR. PRESENTED DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL

Infantry School Instructor Decorated at Formation on Tuesday

Capt. B. F. Caffey, Jr., an instructor of the Infantry School, second section, was formally decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal last Tuesday morning. The occasion for the presentation of the decoration was a review of the 29th Infantry. The regiment was formed on the parade grounds at nine oclock Tuesday morning. Upon the arrival of the Commandant, General E. T. Collins and staff, Colonel Harris Pendleton, Jr., regimental commander, accompanied by the colors, escorted Captain Caffey, to a position directly in front of the Commandant and staff. Upon arrival at the prescribed position, Major D. H. Torrey, post adjutant, read the citation, after which General Collins, after a few remarks, pinned the medal on Captain Caffey.

Following this ceremony, Colonel Pendleton, with the colors rejoined the regiment, while Captain Caffey took a position to the left of the Commandant, after which the regiment passed in review.

The citation was as follows:

Benjamin F. Caffey, Jr., captain, then major, Infantry, Unted States Army. For exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services. He rendered valuable services as Assistant to the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, and later as Acting Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, 1st Division; Assistant to the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, 1st Army; Assistant to the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, 8th Army Corps; and Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, 36th Division, participating in all the operations of the 1st Division and 1st Army. By his remarkably keen foresight, his rare qualities of leadership, his fearless courage and sound judgment and ability, he contributed immeasurably to the success attained by the commands with which he served and rendered service of great value to the American Expeditionary Forces.

dinarily be expected of one who is not a member of the legitimate stage.

Then, there was the dainty and petite Miss Janice Williams, who danced several numbers with a grace and rhythm that completely won the entire audience to her. Her classical number, an Egyptian Dance, was one that required the unusual in training and performance to render as Miss Williams gave it. Each step and motion of the body showed only grace and not, as if often the case a group of movement nearing coarseness. Turning from the classical number Miss Williams gave a terpsichorean triffle and song number that was equally as pleasing.

To Miss Gertrude Handley goes a considerable amount of credit for the performance of both Miss Mitcham and Miss Williams. Her piano accompaniment was perfect and we believe we would have been pleased had she rendered a few numbers as her own contribution to the program.

To Captain Henry H. Fay, Master of Ceremonies, goes a great deal of praise for the success of the program. The precision with which the program was carried out is due to his careful planning and work. His originality of introducing of all the performers relieved a coldness and formality that usually follows one another.

Among the guest of honor present for the occasion were: Colonel Daniel G. Berry, commanding officer of the Special Units; Major Henry A. Bootz, assistant executive officer of the Infantry School; Major D. H. Torrey, adjutant of the assistant executive officer of the Infantry School; Major Rose, assistant executive officer of the Infantry School; Major Jones, commanding officer of the 83rd Field Artillery and Capt. R. H. Sherman, adjutant of the Special Units.

1900. Released in July, 1900, he was detailed to perform Internal Revenue and Customs duty for a few months. Thereafter, he rejoined the 35th Volunteers with which he served until he returned with the regiment to the United States and was mustred out of the Volunteers in May, 1901.

For four years from June, 1901, Colonel Roberts was Acting Judge Advocate of the Department of Texas, at San Antonio, Texas. He then joined the 7th U. S. Infantry with which he served at Fort Missoula, Montana, and Fort Wayne, Michigan, until May, 1909. He went to the Philippines with his regiment in June, 1909, serving on company duty except for a few months when he was Acting Judge Advocate of the Department of Luzon.

Upon his return to the United States in 1911 Colonel Roberts attended the Army School of the Line and the Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where, upon graduation, he was assigned as an instructor in Military Art and Law. In April, 1914, he was relieved from duty at the schools to join his regiment in the expedition of Vera Cruz, Mexico. Upon his return therefrom he, in December, 1914, again was assigned as instructor at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he remained until March, 1915. There followed a tour of duty in the Panama Canal Zone to May, 1917, he having in the interim been detailed at the Plattsburgh Training Camps from May to September, 1916.

After our entry into the World war Colonel Roberts was first on duty at Fort Benjamin Harrison, commanding the 46th Infantry during the period of its organization from June to August, 1917. He then was detailed as Chief of Staff with the 81st Division then at Camp Jackson, South Carolina. He remained on that duty during the entire period of the war. He visited the Western Front from December, 1917, to February, 1918. The division sailed for France in July, 1918, and was engaged in the St. Die Sector and in the Meuse Argonne Offensive, returning to the United States in June, 1919. Colonel Roberts was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services as Chief of Staff at that Division.

In August, 1919, Colonel Roberts was detailed as a student at the Army War College, at Washington Barracks, D. C. Upon graduation therefrom in June, 1920, he was detailed as executive officer in the Office of the Chief of Infantry. In August, 1921, he was assigned to command the 34th Infantry and was transferred successively to command the 64th Infantry and 26th Infantry in March, 1922, and July, 1922. In October, 1923, he was assigned to duty at the Culver Military Academy. He was detailed as Chief of Staff of the First Corps Area, with headquarters at Boston, Massachusetts, from July, 1924, to the summer of 1927. Thereafter he was detailed to his present duty as senior member of the Infantry Board at Fort Benning, Georgia.

The following are the citations by which Colonel Roberts was awarded the Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Medal:

For Medal of Honor:

Roberts, Charles D., second lieutenant, 17th Infantry. Gallantly assisted in the rescue of the wounded in front of the lines and under heavy fire of the enemy.

For Distinguished Service Medal:

Roberts, Charles D., colonel, (Infantry), General Staff Corps, U. S. Army. He displayed unusual ability as chief of staff of the 81st Division in its organization, in the conduct of its operations in the St. Die Sector, and on Nov. 9, 10 and 11, 1918, near Verdun, where the division was enabled to advance some 5 1-2 kilometers over marshy ground under heavy fire.

29th Infantry Will Celebrate Organization Day

DEMONSTRATION REGIMENT HAS ELABORATE PLANS FOR ANNUAL EVENT

Final preparations are being completed for the celebration of Organization Day, which this year will be celebrated Saturday, March 2, instead of on March 3rd, as is gen rally the custom, due to the fact that the latter date falls on a Sunday.

The day which marks the organization of the Twenty-ninth Infantry, twenty-eight years ago, will be fittingly celebrated by the "demonstration regiment." The program of events that has been formulated for this auspicious occasion promises to be replete in fun amusement and entertainment.

The festivities which will inaugurate the gala occasion will begin at 10:15 A. M. at Doughboy Stadium, where a "Gymkhana" has been arranged that will surpass all previous efforts in that direction.

The officer in charge has arranged a series of events that, beginning with a chariot race, will continue for the entire morning.

Monetary prizes will be awarded the winners of the contests, which will no doubt add to the zeal and efforts of the contestants.

In the chariot race the entries have been busy for the past few weeks in furbishing and decorating their carts as, besides a prize for the winner of the distance event in which they are entered, there will also be a prize for the most elaborate or amusingly decorated chariot.

Another event which will hold the center of the stage will be the "old soldiers' " race in which entrants must have at least fifteen or more years service, to be allowed to compete.

This is an event which will be watched with keen interest on the part of the regiment, as it will either give truth to or refute the arguments of the "old timers" who have for years held the center of the floor in barrack-room discussion, in which they bemoaned the degeneracy of the present generation and with verbosity unconfined, told of the mighty deeds they performed while in their youth.

It is rumored that since learning that their veracity will be put to the test, these yearlings of a bygone age, have been strenuously at work unlimbering rusty joints and perparing for the great event. Rub-down liniment and massage lotions are becoming increasingly scarce in the Post Exchange since they have begun their wholesale purchases.

The other events will include an Obstacle Race, Sack Race, Eating Contest, Three-legged Race, Pillow Fight and Wild Pig Contest.

In the last event, in order to keep it strictly in the amateur class, all mess-sergeants will be barred, as the prize for capturing and retaining hold of the pig will be the "snorter" itself or the remains thereof. All the rest of the regiment are heartily invited to enter this contest.

Following this athletic program, the men will be banqueted in their various organization mess halls and the remainder of the afternoon will be given up to their own devices.

The last and concluding part of the program will be a special show at the Main Theatre, where Lew Beckridge, with a company of eighteen people, will entertain the members of the Twenty-ninth Infantry and their families, with a series of song and dance hits.

This company has previously played at the Post and when here before, were accorded an enthusiastic reception.

DRIVE ON FOR AMERICAN LEGION MEMBERSHIPS

This month the annual drive for American Legion membership is being conducted by the local post. Some of the organizations have already enrolled to 100 per cent. of their eligible quotas.

Next week the actual percentage of membership of each organization in the garrison will be announced in this column. The following letter has been sent to all qualified men, asking them to join this well known and much esteemed legion post. Renewal dues or new applications may be turned in to any of the officials noted below.

February 26, 1929.

Fellow Soldier:

You are eligible for membership in the American Legion. As you know, this is an organization which one cannot "crash the gate" to get in. You must have been in the service during some period of the World War. In addition, the local post is the largest army-civilian post of the American Legion in the country. Many of your comrades are already identified in its ranks. We would like to count you among our members.

The regular meetings are held as follows:

First Tuesday of each month—Legion Hall, Broad street, Columbus.

Third Tuesday of each month—Assembly Hall No. 4, Fort Benning.

The annual dues are much lower than at most places—only three and one-half dollars per year, ($3.50.) This includes national, department, and local post dues, together with the subscription to the American Legion magazine.

Join with us.

Sincerely,

W. A. Collier, Capt., Infantry,
Vice-Commander.

George Gilbert, Staff Sgt., Hq. 15th Tank Bn., Junior Vice-Commander.

Raymond Bishop, Capt., Inf.,
Membership Committeeman.

William Gulette, Mr. Sgt., 29th Inf.
Membership Committeeman.

Last Tuesday night the regular meeting was held in Assembly Hall No. 4 and in spite of the rain, a large number of veterans from both the post and Columbus were present. Major C. W. Willoughby, of the Advanced Class, gave a very impressive monograph on South America and its interests to the present day veterans of the World War.

The serving of refreshments at each meeting is an innovation enjoyed by all members.

DRAMATIC CLUB WILL PRESENT THREE PLAYS ON MARCH 8th

Friday evening, March 8th, the Infantry School Dramatic Club will present three, one-act plays at the Main Theatre, "The Advantage of Being Shy," "A Cup of Tea" and "Thread o' Scarlet."

In their emotional reaction on the audience the plays are widely different. In "The Advantage of Being Shy," directed by Major William Alexander Smith, we have a light comedy, smooth and swift in the unfolding of the plot. The entire setting is in the studio of a pretty girl who poses as a doctor of shyness, i. e., making bold, agressive men out of shrinking youths. One youth and five maids find themselves in her office at one time. This young, timid man eventually turns the laugh on all of them, and ends the doctor's practioneering forever. He pulls the remarkable stunt of fooling five girls and getting away with it.

In the cast are: Mrs. Clarke K. Fales as Iris, Captain Percy G. Black as Tom, Mrs. Lawrence A. Dietz as Helen, Mrs. John D. Forsythe as Janet, Miss Helen Young as Olivia, and Mrs. Frank H. Partridge as Miss Blakely.

Major Emil W. Leard directs an experienced cast in "A Cup of Tea." Lt. Lee M. Hester as a poet, Mrs. Albert S. Peake, as his wife, Jane, Mrs. William F. Heavey as another man's wife who is influenced by the poetry written to her, and Lt. Wallace M. Allison, her husband.

This play has always been popular as light comedy. But behind the laughs we see the power that lies in a woman's hand when she has the gift to use it. The powerful character portrayed by Jane fascinates us. She reflects our ideal of wifely ability and strategy. She here wields the same power that has placed three ordinary men dictators of most of Europe, and the same power wielded by her sisters made two presidents of the United States. You will laugh when you see the play. But don't miss this display of a woman's intellect, which time after time, in just this manner, has rocked the world.

"Thread O' Scarlet," one of Bell's best plays, directed by Mrs. Truman Smith. The characters include Major Everett D. Barlow, Major Stephen H. MacGregor and Major Albert S. Peake as three village tradesmen, Captain David D. Barrett as landlord of an inn, Captain Roger Williams, Jr., as a village rounder, and Captain William B. Tuttle as a traveller.

This is a powerful, gripping drama, and from the very first, as the sinister plot unfolds, you can feel that murder is afoot, and murder there is, and the manner in which these actors bring the play to its climax has aroused your forebodings to such an extent that you feel like jumping up and pointing out the murderer, but then you would pick the wrong man. The climax comes with the last spoken words, and as the curtain slowly descends the full horror of the

THE "BIG SMILER", DIAMOND STAR OF THE OLD ARMY IS NEARING RETIREMENT

(By Al Durden)

Jimmie Pierce and his sunny Irish smile. No doubt many old-timers will look again upon the features of the "Big Smiler," and drift back o'er the years of memory to the doings of other days, probably it is a baseball diamond where two baseball teams are battling for the regimental championship. The score is close with his team leading by a run. The last inning rolls around, the opposing team makes a last desperate rally putting a runner on second with two down. The batter is set and tense, the long loose limbed twirler winds up and cuts one down on the inside corner. Crack, the white pellet flashes down the third-base line. For a moment the crowd is silent, as the runner dashes for home. The third-baseman takes the hard hit grounder with a wonderful one-handed stop. The batter is speeding to first. A moment later and the ole horse hide sinks into the first-baseman's mitt like a rifle shot, the ump's hand with thumb up flashes over his shoulder, "you're out." The "Big Smiler" had scooped a bad one and nipped a rally in the bud with a rifle-shot throw to first for the final out. That was Jimmie Pierce, the "Big Smiler," the same Jimmie and the same smiler that will soon retire from active service after thirty years as an athlete, soldier and gentleman in the service of the U. S. Army.

The outbreak of the Spanish-American war found Jimmie and his sunny smile living the every day life of the small town youngster at his home in Moline, Ill. When the call for volunteers was sent forth o'er the country, Jimmie was among the first to answer. Too young to en-list in the army, he managed to get by the naval recruiting officer. Du-

KELLYS TAKE LEAD IN INTRA-MURAL BASKETBALL LEAGUE

By a sensational win over their comrades of the First Bats, the Kelly Basketeers of the 29th Infantry took the lead in the Benning basketball league during the past week, winning 4 games and losing none.

Close on the heels of the Kellys the First Bats continue to fight valiantly, only one defeat being charged against them and that at the hands of the mighty Franz and company.

The Galloping Gunners are in third place but were handed a nice drubbing by the lowly Tankers in their last meeting. The Tankers and Spare Parts are deadlocked for cellar honors. Each team has won one and lost four. The Spare Parts came back to spill the dope and lick the Tankers after the Tankers had downed the Galloping Gunners.

How they stand:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Kellys	4	0	1.000
First Bate	4	1	.750
Gunners	2	3	.400
Spare Parts	1	4	2.00

FORT BENNING DRY CLEANERS

SPORTOPICS

By Al

Football, basketball and soccer have reigned supreme at the Infantry School during the winter. With winter over and spring just ready to cover the earth in her beautiful mantle of green, another sport, the king of sportdom is ready to mount the throne.

Baseball. Already the big league teams have arrived at their southern training camps. Daily newspapers show sport pages covered with lengthly articles headed with glaring headlines and the gist of each article is that magic word, baseball.

Already the foot-slogging Doughboy, the Terrible Tanker, the Special Units and the Caisson Riders of Fort Benning have began to think baseball, talk baseball and a few ambitious ones have scrapped up scrub teams and have actually been playing baseball.

Pitching wings of last season are getting their daily work outs, batting eyes that have been watching nothing smaller than the football or basketball all winter, is learning to follow the course of a speeding baseball.

It is a certainty that this season should be one of the greatest in the history of Fort Benning baseball seasons. The Special Units have consolidated, forming an aggregation of ball players that are going to be dangerous against all opposition. The Tankers boast of the addition of several stars to their original team of veterans. With their fiery leader, Buckley, to lead on this season, the Caisson Riders will begin where they left off last season and they should be well up in the running. The Second Bats of the 29th will take the field this season with most of last year's championship team in the line-up. They have been considerably strengthened by the addition of several prep-school stars. Last year the First Bats showed a team of youngsters with a world of possibility if properly coached. This season those youngsters are still in the line-up and anxious to get going. With McGaha to steady the twirling staff and a capable coach the First Bats should prove the sensation of the season. The Reds and Blues of the 24th Inf. will have most of last year's players, while several new men that come highly rated, will be out for practice.

Everything for the tables will be furnished. Home-made refreshments and lovely prizes. Tables $2.00. Please send checks to Mrs. Jesse Ladd or Mrs. Charles Steel.

Young Wife: Aren't you the same man I gave some biscuits to last week?

Tramp: No, mum, and the doctor said I never will be again.

BENNING'S KAO KING WILL FEATURE CARD OF MARCH 12

The many admirers of Gunner De Pratt, light-heavy king of the Doughboys, will witness their favorite in action again at the next fight card which will be held at Fort Benning March 12.

Gunner has been out of the game for the past three months owing to a broken left arm in his battle with Maxie Peltz at Savannah, Ga. With the injured arm completely recovered the big soldier is back in tip-top form again.

At the present time his opponent for the coming fight has not been selected but fight fans may rest assured that Capt. Wilson will arrange to bring the best light-heavy in the country for the hard-hitting Doughboy.

One of the generals replied: "Aw, let her play; she can be the widows and orphans."

AT THE MOVIES

MARCH 1 TO MARCH 8, INCL.

FRIDAY, MARCH 1

"BEGGARS OF LIFE," starring Wallace Berry with Louise Brooks and Richard Arlen in an exciting story portraying the little known haunts of the American tramp. This melodrama treats of an orphan girl who, in a moment of mortal fear, shoots her foster father—the killing is discovered by a young hobo who reluctantly helps her escape; she dresses in rough clothes—a brakeman throws them from a moving train, the girl's ankle is injured—they are seen in a hobo camp. Though every effort possible is made to conceal her identity as a girl, the tramps finally discover who she is and the reason for her plight. Most uncouth inroads are made against her and she suffers untold humiliation at the hands of brutal assailants. Finally a thrilling escape is made into Canada. The story is exciting from start to finish and carries an absorbing plot.

"High Seas." Fables.

Pathe News No. 17.

SATURDAY, MARCH 2.

"THE CLOUD DODGER," starring Al Wilson, the thrill-mad ace of the twentieth century. This is a plunging, crashing, zooming romance of the air in which the pilot takes unheard-of daring risks. The story starts on the ground where a thrill mad member of the younger generation, out riding with his sweetheart, is pursued by a motorcycle officer—he beats the cop to the aviation field and takes off into the air—the chase is picked up by a police plane, and breath-taking incidents occur. Among the high lights: a plane dives beneath a bridge, another one is wrecked from the clouds and a hair-raising battle takes place on the wing of a plane.

Topics of the Day No. 1.

SUNDAY, MARCH 3

"FAZIL," featuring Charles Farrell with Greta Nissen in a colorful story of sheik love. It tells of an Arabian prince who meets and falls in love with a French girl while on a diplomatic mission to Venice; their honeymoon is a song of love, but when he takes her back to his desert domain the ancient customs of his country regarding women bring about serious conflicts between them. Finally, she escapes and serious consequences result from his pursuit to catch her. The end of this story is startlingly dramatic. The locale of this picture is Arabia, Venice, and the classy environs of Paris; the love scenes between the bronzed men of the desert and the pale Parisian blond are very effectively staged.

M. G. M. News No. 55.

"Early to Bed." Laurel-Hardy.

MONDAY, MARCH 4

"OFFICE SCANDAL," starring Phyllis Haver with Leslie Fenton in a continuous round of comical situations. Newspaper life in itself is a grind, but to the mind having a keen sense of humor many of the most disheartened moments around the paper-strewn editorial rooms reveal situations that are as amusing as they are uncanny. This picture brings to light the ridiculous side of editorial intrigue. Photoplay magazine characters this picture as "a very funny comedy of newspaper life."

"Tarzan the Mighty No. 7."

TUESDAY, MARCH 5

"THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson in a picture which parallels the story of his own life. It depicts the rise of the son of a synagogue choir singer who deserted his home to become a dispenser of jazz. He was torn between the desire of his father, that he succeed him in the synagogue and his own desire to shine on Broadway. The story is thrilling and highly emotional. It fulfills the old formula of the showmen: "makes 'em laugh, makes 'em cry and makes 'em swet." This picture has endured a big run in New York.

"Fun in the Clouds." Arthur Lake.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6

"HEY RUBE," starring Gertrude Olmstead and Hugh Trevor in a thrilling melodrama of the colorful denizens of the gilded wagon. It depicts the swirl and riot of carnival life and is enriched by a whimsical love story between a young concession spieler and a small town girl. Thrills in this story are plentiful, the scenes wherein Trevor swings from a rope attached to the pinnacle of a ferris wheel and rescues a girl from among the flames at the top of a high dive ladder, are breath-taking in their suspense. Similarly, the high diving through a film of fire represents something new in cinema thrills.

M. G. M. News No. 56.

THURSDAY, MARCH 7.

"NAUGHTY BABY," starring Alice White with Jack Mulhall in a comedy of "ritzy" hotel life. It is the story of a check room girl—one of the flapper face and figure type who has champagne ideas on a homebrew income. A youthful heir to a fortune provides the champagne possibilities. She lays her snares to capture wealth and doesn't stop at two-timing; she has three other boys on the string, an Irishman, a Jew and an Italian. One of them treats her to swell autos, another borrows jewels from his uncle's pawn shop, while the third, an assistant to a modiste, supplies her with most gorgeous gowns. The story is breezy and replete with laughs from beginning to end.

"The Super Sex." Sport.

FRIDAY, MARCH 8.

"SINNERS PARADE," starring Victor Varconi with Dorothy Revier in a tense society drama exposing the sensational events in the lives of men and women who pose as saints by day and revel as sinners at night. The plot revolves around a girl who, during the day, is a demur school teacher, but the instant darkness descends she becomes the center of attraction at a night club; some of the parents of her pupils learn of her double existance and arrange a raid to expose and ruin her career. The leader of the raid has two children, a girl, who is a pupil in the school where the cabaret girl teaches, and a son, who is a clerk in his father's bank; both of these children lead double lives and are caught in their mother's raid. The sequence illustrates how the night club manager gets tipped off, the manner in which the news spreads, how guests dispose of their wet goods, the methods taken to conceal prominent persons and other interesting side lights on a raid.

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

Another weapon fired and put away in cosmoline. The 37 M.M. has gone to join the serried ranks of the other Benning museum pieces. No undue mirth marked the passing of this truncated cannon, for the course has been good, well unfolded and culminating with an examination that was comprehensive, square and understandable. Five rounds for Rickey Rice.

In rebuttal to the above, when we began this course Rickey Rice boasted that the 37 M.M. used no sighting bar. It was a worthy boast. But, Rickey, if it wasn't for that "lone pine tree to your front" I don't know how you could have put the course over.

That examination was today. Tomorrow you might think is another day, but it is just another examination. Tomorrow is signal and wire communications. Signal and wire communications is an art, or something, that requires a lot of men with the mysterious look of medical officers on their faces, some dental tools in their pockets, a lot of wire, a lot of country to roam over, a few decrepit telephones, and some coal words like "magic operator," or "modern operator," but these are not really necessary as you never get that far. Brother Sweet has made strenuous effort to inculcate, but it seems that half the class knew all about this subject before, and the other half doesn't know enough about it to be able to express its ignorance.

Our old friend, "alternate" came up for a little acriminous discussion yesterady. From the day I was led to believe that one of the prerequisites of graduation would be the placing of the accent upon the "ter" in alternate I have done my best by this modern order of military thought but when good men like Major Freehoff put the accent on the "al." I am going back and vote the old Democratic ticket too.

During the same session yesterday Zak decided that he needed to know that day what was the definite policy of the school since the 3rd Section teaches unlimited sectors of fire for M. G.'s and the 1st Section restricts them. Zak had to know, he said he wanted to take it away with him. A sort of souvenir I suppose of the occasion. At any rate the instructor explained a great length and breadth. When he got through he asked Zak if that answered his question. Zak said it did not!

This might be a good place to welcome Major Harding back to Benning as an instructor. Congratulation, and we are mighty glad to have you with us again.

ENGINEER NOTES

Due to the death of his father, our scribe, R. B. Reynolds, is not with us this week. News from Detroit to the effect that he would return shortly was received Monday. Accept our sympathy "Fat."

The "DeLane" of the Engineers who gained a decision over Reynolds of the 15th Tank Bn. in the Special Units elimination last week is none other than our own Killeen, the complaisant (?) mail orderly. New Orleans papers please copy.

On Saturday, March 2d, 1929, the Engineer basketeers will invade Fort McPherson with the fixed purpose of humbling that aggregation. Here's luck fellows. We know you'll give a good account of yourselves at Fort Mac.

The Engineer "Soccer" challenge has not been accepted at this writing. A game is pending with the Atlanta Soccer Club of Atlanta, Ga., for this Sunday afternoon in Atlanta.

Something new on "Engineer Hill." We now have a chicken farm, the feathered variety, and fresh eggs are expected to be available in large numbers. Sergeant Kingsbury has taken charge and his flock is increasing rapidly. More news of this at a later date.

Four recruits have entered our ranks within the past week. They are learning the fundamentals of the service under Corporal John L. Huff, who has had much experience with this kind of work. They have all been moved into one squad and there is much activity from after Recall until late at night. That's the spirit fellows. Keep it up. Good luck, Corporal.

ing the Cuban trouble he served on blockade duty in Cuban waters until the end of the fracas. Discharged from the navy at the end of the war, Jimmie returned home. A few months later he again looked up an army recruiting officer and this time he was accepted and was assigned to Co. "A," 19th Infantry.

Sgt. Pierce served through the Philippine Insurrection with the 19th Infantry, taking part in the engagement at San Blas, Passi and Antique on the island of Panay. He returned to the United States and was discharged in June, 1902.

During the period between 1902 and 1907, Jimmie refused to answer the call of the service and remained in civilian life. In 1907, he re-enlisted and was assigned to the 5th Infantry which was stationed in Cuba at that time. He returned to the states with the organization which after participating in the inaugural parade for President Taft, proceeded to its home station at Plattsburgh Barracks, N. Y., on Lake Champlain.

During the Mexican border unpleasantries, Sgt. Pierce was a member of the 22nd Infantry, moving from Fort Sam Houston to Texas City, Texas, where the regiment was made part of the 6th Brigade of the 2nd Division. He was with the regiment at Douglas, Ariz., when Pancho Villa made his unsuccessful attempt to capture Agua Prieta the Mexican town just across the border from Douglas.

In 1916, he left the 22nd Inf., going to Company "L" of the 7th Infantry, stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas. Later when the 60th Infantry regiment was organized he became a member of that organization where he was appointed first sergeant and later promoted to Regimental Supply sergeant.

Master Sergt. Pierce served with the A. E. F. during the World War, as a member of the 60th Infantry. He participated in the St. Mihiel and Meuse Argonne offensive. When the armistice was declared the regiment moved up for duty on the lines of communication with station at Esche, in the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg and while there he was taken ill and evacuated to the general hospital, Treves, Germany, returning to the United States in October, 1919, as a casual and was discharged at Camp Merritt, N. J., on Oct. 14, 1919. He immediately re-enlisted and was assigned to his old outfit, the 60th Inf., at Camp Gordon, Ga. From the 60th he next enlisted for the 14th Infantry in Panama, C. Z. He later transferred to the Q. M. C. and was stationed at Gatun and in the Dept. Quartermaster at Quarry Heights. Tiring of the tropics, he re-ed up for the 22nd Infantry at Ft. McPherson, Ga., joining them in October, 1923.

In 1926, Jimmie and his Irish smile arrived in Fort Benning. He came to the Infantry School Det., and during the past three years the "Big Smiler" has won a warm spot in the hearts of the Greencords with his sunny disposition and true sportsmanship. He is the type of soldier that has made the American Army the most refined, highest cultured and bitterest fighting army the world has ever known.

During the years spent in the service, Sgt. Pierce has always cast a weather eye to the future. Upon his retirement, he has a beautiful home "Down New Orleans Way" that is all bought and paid for many moons ago, and here Mr. Sgt. and Mrs. Smiling Jimmie Pierce intend to spend many, many happy days.

Quite a surprise to the "Old Timers" to know that Jimmie was a married man. Well he is but in Mrs. Pierce's own words is assurance, "Don't worry for I am Irish too."

Don't think you are a bargain because you are half off.

A spark from a defective flue ignited tent 19 a few days ago. A certain corporal who is an experienced fire-fighter lost no time in going into action, climbing upon the tent he loudly demanded a fire extinguisher. Red McClain responded with a jug that proved to be empty. Not to be outdone the corporal took a bite of Pic Nic Twist tobacco and smothered the fire with three well aimed shots. During the excitement a well known non-com who slept in the tent, cooly removed his Victrola and his favorite record that tells in glowing words of the mighty race that one Al Smith ran.

The big event of last week was the Colonial dinner-dance given by the Officers Club at Biglerville on Feb. 21st. At one end of the hall the historic home of Washington, lovely Mount Vernon, was reproduced very convincingly, and it was as though we dined and danced on the lawn between Mt. Vernon and the Potomac. During the latter part of the dinner, from the rear of Washington's home came the melodious voices of the darkies singing "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginia," "Old Black Joe," and "Kentucky Home." At an intermission, a group of dancers in costume danced the Virginia Reel.

There were several very large dinner-parties. At one of the largest, the long table had for its center-piece a replica of Washington's monument, daffodils and yellow candles being used attractively at appropriate intervals down the length of the table.

Major and Mrs. Daniel H. Torrey were hostes to a very delightful group. Their guests were seated at one long table on which lovely silver bowls of daffodils alternated with silver candelabra holding yellow tapers for decoration. The color scheme of yellow and green was further carried out in place cards and nut cups. Their guests were: Col. and Mrs. Kingman, Maj. and Mrs. Fletcher, Maj. and Mrs. Wilson, Maj. and Mrs. Truman Smith, Maj. and Mrs. McCants, Maj. and Mrs. Hill, Maj. and Mrs. Hall, Maj. and Mrs. Cook, Maj. and Mrs. Bootz, Maj. and Mrs. Ferris, Maj. and Mrs. Ladd, Maj. and Mrs. Hoge, Capt. and Mrs. Beebe, Miss Lassaigne, Capt. and Mrs. Heavey, Capt. and Mrs. Rutledge, Capt. Baker.

Maj. and Mrs. Samuel A. White entertained sixty-six friends on this occasion. Their table was decorated in green and white, white carnations and fern in silver vases alternating with silver candlesticks holding tall green tapers, being effectively used. The same colors were repeated in their nut cups and place cards. Their invitation list included: Col. and Mrs. Baker, Col. and Mrs. Knight, Col. and Mrs. Berry, Col. and Mrs. Brandt, Col. and Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Palmer, Maj. and Mrs. Chynoweth, Maj. and Mrs. Humes, Mr. and Mrs. Offutt, Maj. and Mrs. Freehoff, Maj. and Mrs. Coates, Madame Coates, Maj. and Mrs. Conner, Miss Harding, Maj. and Mrs. Stayer, Maj. and Mrs. Dale, Mrs. Linthicum, Maj. and Mrs. Falligant, Maj. and Mrs. Leard, Mrs. King, Maj. Wiley, Maj. and Mrs. MacGregor, Capt. and Mrs. Gocker, Capt. and Mrs. Eanes, Capt. and Mrs. Gilhus, Capt. and Mrs. Perry, Miss Perry, Capt. and Mrs. Rudolph, Capt. and Mrs. Wood, Capt. Lueking, Capt. and Mrs. Meagher, Miss Waite, Lt. and Mrs. Wilson, Miss Fowlkes, Lt. and Mrs. Miley, Lt. and Mrs. Bremmer, Lt. Buckley, Lt. Carnog, Lt. Day, Lt. Jeter, Lt. Rawls, Lt. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick.

Maj. and Mrs. E. E. Lewis had for their table decoration a basket of daffodils and narcissi with fern, and antique crystal candelebra holding pale yellow tapers. Their guests were Col. and Mrs. Goodrich, Maj. and Mrs. Randolph, Maj. and Mrs. Connolly, Capt. and Mrs. Fortier and Maj. Sullivan.

Col. and Mrs. Harris Pendleton were hosts to nineteen friends. Their table was made lovely with a profusion of daffodils, and tapers of a corresponding shade were used at appropriate intervals.

Capt. and Mrs. John E. Dahlquist honored their guests, Mrs. Dampier and Mrs. Williams, of Minneapolis, with a delightful dinner party. Daffodils and yellow candles were used with yellow nut cups for table decorations and the place cards recalled chivalrous colonial gentlemen and ladies of the old days. In their party were Maj. and Mrs. Stephens, Maj. and Mrs. Willoughby, Capt. and Mrs. Navas, Capt. and Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Dampier, Mrs. Williams, Capt. Wharton, Capt. Reinhardt, Capt. and Mrs. Johnston, Lt. and Mrs. Robinson, Lt. and Mrs. Vinson.

Capt. and Mrs. John D. Forsythe entertained very beautifully at dinner at their home Thursday evening before the Colonial ball. Red was the color note of this party, carnations and candles making the table festive. Covers were laid for Col. and Mrs. Reed, Maj. and Mrs. Phelps, Maj. and Mrs. Patch, Maj. and Mrs. Peake, Maj. and Mrs. Rose, Capt. and Mrs. Williams, Capt. and Mrs. McAllister, Capt. and Mrs. Brine, Capt. aand Mrs. Grady, Maj. There were quite a number of guests who entered into the spirit of the Colonial ball and came in very charming costumes. The most exquisite of all the Colonial ladies was Mrs. J. D. Forsythe who was indeed a picture of loveliness. Honorable mention for the best couples should be made of Maj. and Mrs. Ferris, Col. and Mrs. Kingman, Lt. and Mrs. Finney. Conspicuously lovely ladies were Mrs. E. L. Brine, Mrs. E. D. Barlow, Mrs. A. J. Nichols, Mrs. A. S. Peake, Mrs. Emil Leard, Mrs. A. L. Littell, Mrs. E. S. It was our pleasure once to have a program out here presented by the Students Club of Columbus and it was a most worthy and excellent program. This program on Monday will draw from the Students Club, the Orpheus Club, the Reading Club, the Century Club and perhaps others, and promises great variety and interest. After the program tea will be served.

THE LITERARY CLUB

On last Monday the Literary Club met at Biglerville and Mrs. Paul R. Goode presented an excellent program of Realism in today's writing. In her introductory remarks Mrs. Goode gave a very comprehensive exposition of the aims and purposes of realistic writers, the influences that have shaped their attitudes, and the method by which they strive to reflect the religious, social, political, psychological, heroic or romantic interests of our present day. The literary expression of any period is explained by the life and thought of that period and since this is a skeptical age, when new scientific developments may have upset one's faith, revelations of psychology may have a disillusioning effect, the writers who sense the spirit of the times tear away the mask of hypocrisy and reveal fundamentals. They have found much that was unpleasant—so much that the term "realism" is almost synonomous with the depiction of every form of unpleasantness—and they have written of life as they have found in the hopes, perhaps of righting social evil, or political or spiritual as the case may be. "Realism means the picturing of people and things as they are without adding or detracting and without drawing conclusions; the presentation of life as it actually is rather than its romantic and idealized version." If the unpleasant predominates in the realistic writing of today these writers are following examples set them by Homer, Aristophanes, Boccaccio, Rabelais, the Bible, Shakespeare, Chaucer, Swift, DeFoe, Fielding and others recorded among literary masters. It does seem as if vice and crime, that which is obscene and distasteful, predominates almost to the exclusion of the good and the beautiful not only in novels but in biography, poetry and drama. This is due perhaps to the special evils of our own age which have their source in a lack of restraint and a violation of old laws and conventions—a revolt against all forms of control, good and bad. This is shown by the works of Theodore Dresser, Sherwood Anderson, Sinclair Lewis, D. H. Lawrence, John Dos Passos, Ernest Hemingway, Carl Sandburg, Aldorco Huxley, Eugene O'Neill to mention a few of the best known.

In conclusion Mrs. Goode said that modern realists were pursuing honest methods, whether or not they are on the right and that if their tragedies leave us oppressed rather than exalted it may be due to a lack of genius on the part of the author rather than a faulty method. At any rate it is the lesser writers who disgust us, seeking to attract attention where they can't compell it.

Mrs. Truman Smith gave a scholarly review of "Lola and His Times," by Mathew Josephson. The interpretation of his name "Lola" meaning "clad of earth," it was interesting that he had a passion for naturalism being founder of the School of Naturalism in France and revolutionized the world of letters. Romanticism was tore away from him by miserable poverty. He became a realist, with socialistic tendencies. He was scientific in obtaining truth and recording it, methodical in way of writing it. His aim was to picture the entire movement of humanity and his realism is terrific and well night unbearable. His own way of stating his object in writing can not be improved on "To tell the truth and still hope."

"The Rebel Generation" by Jo Van Ammers-Keiller, was most interestingly reviewed by Mrs. John D. Forsythe. This novel, a best seller, is considered the most remarkable novel of today by a number of eminent critics. It is the story of several generations of a rather prominent family in Leyden. The theme is the emancipation of woman—and it gives us cross-sections of the lives of this Dutch family in 1840 when woman had a very subordinate place in the sun bowing to the husband and father's will in all things and having no life outside the home and no choice even of her husband; in 1873 when the girls and boys of the original family are grown up and have taken their places in life, their daughters shaking off some bonds, entering professions, the boys utilizing more than their father, the scientific progress of the world. These parents who had rebelled against the order of things in their parents' days are themselves intolent of and unsympathetic with the desires and ambitions of their children; and lastly in 1923 when the grandchildren of the original family are now the parents of "the rebel generation." Their children are groping, adjusting. There is constant misunderstanding or rather no attempt to understand the point of view of the younger generation. The parents in each gencration are narrow-minded, prejudiced, averse to new ideas—and the youngsters always rebel.

An example of realistism in drama was presented by Mrs. Robert H. Chance who read "The Sisters Tragedy" by Richard Hughes. This play showed the terrific effect of unwise religious teaching on a brooding girl. Mrs. Chance, by her gift of dramatic art, made the characters very real.

REGIMENT MAKES NEW HIGH IN N. R. A. SHOOT

With "Old Jupe Pluvious" empting his watering can on the range, the small bore rifle team stepped out and hung up what they believe will be a high score in regimental circles. Despite the rain and shifting winds and varying light the match closed with the amazing score of 3355 out of the possible 3500. The 7th Infantry won the N. R. A. Regimental team match last year with 3344, then thought to be somewhat of a sensation. However, when Captain Lindroth and his team-mates dried their faces and shook the rain from their hats, it was found that they had topped last year's winning socre by a good margin of eleven points.

The team, headed by Capt. E. G. Lindroth, was as follows: Captains C. L. Steel, Jos. L. Tupper, J. P. Lyons, W. B. Wilson, E. F. Paynter and Sgts. Larkins, Hightower, Fletcher and Bradford.

Captain Steward Recovering

News seeps in from Washington that Captain E. M. S. Steward, now at Walter Reed Hospital, has undergone a minor operation and is doing very well. Captain Steward left the regiment week before last for observation and treatment, leaving his family here. It is rumored that he will be with us shortly.

Company Scribes Burst Forth

The regimental scribes, so long clamoring to be heard at last are rewarded and so they take their pens in hand:

Headquarters Co.

1st William J. Miller has been on the sick list for the last few days. He is much better at present.

We have had two recruits to join the company lately. Privates Ezel Careuthers and Ralph Deese.

New quarters are being built for the men who sleep at the Quartermaster corral. The quarters were needed very badly. The men are proud to know that the quarters are being built.

Private Gus Hoard has been transferred to the M. T. C.

Staff Sgt. William H. Ransom is on a two months' furlough. He is visiting relatives in Baltimore, Md., and Washington, D. C. J. S.

NINE GARRISON TRACK RECORDS HELD BY TWENTY-NINTH INFANTRY

In a bulletin issued by the Headquarters of the Infantry School, it was recently announced that the records made by the winners of the various events during the Garrison tack and field meet held at Doughboy Stadium last November, will be regarded as garrison records.

Private Darnell has gone "air-minded" and says that upon his discharge from the army, he will purchase an airplane (they quit giving them away) and sell hair tonic to bald headed eagles. "Pop" sure will have some "hair-raising" adventures if he don't "faw down and go boom."

Our model soldier, Pvt. N. R. Wright, has returned from a furlough and reports that the first night he was home there was so many girls followed him on the streets that he was arrested for holding a parade without a permit.

Cpl. Devoice received a very nice Valentine the other day and he is very anxious to know who the donor was so that he can repay them, twofold. The same Corporal saw a couple of kids playing blind man's bluff the other night and he thought they were taking the "Old Gold test."

Twenty-Ninth Infantry Celebrates Birthday

"E" COMPANY HIGH SCORER IN GYMKHANA

(By Al Durden)

Saturday, March 2, 1929, was a gala day for the members of the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning. The Demonstration regiment celebrated its 28th birthday with appropriate exercises in which every officer and enlisted man of the regiment participated.

The program of events which took place at the celebration held in the Doughboy Stadium, Saturday morning, began with the gymkhana. This was a burlesque field and track meet and proved to be a highly amusing as well as entertaining affair to the officers and men of the regiment.

Led by the regimental band, the organizations of the regiment marched to the stadium, arriving there about 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Colonel Harris Pendleton, Jr., commanding officer of the regiment, addressed the regiment. In the course of his address, Colonel Pendleton praised the members of the command for the high state of efficiency that existed in the unit during the past year.

General E. T. Collins, the commandant of the Infantry School, then was introduced by Colonel Pendleton. General Collins spoke in terms of highest praise of the high standard of work carried on by the Demonstation regiment in its work at the Infantry School.

Has Interesting History

One hundred and seventeen years ago there was a Twenty-ninth Infantry that fought in the War of 1812. After the close of the war it was consolidated with the Sixth Infantry and completely lost its identity.

When the Civil war came in the 60's another Twenty-ninth Infantry came into existence; and again, as after all wars, the army was reduced and this second Twenty-ninth infantry was consolidated with the Eleventh infantry.

Owing to the policy of the War Department, we can claim no relationship to either one of these old regiments with their splendid war records.

Following in the foot-steps of its two former ancestors, the Twenty-ninth Infantry was born in war—that is as a result of the Spanish-American war in 1898. At that time the United States had 25 small two battalion peace time infantry regiments.

After the fall of Cuba and the occupation of Porto Rico by surrender, more soldiers were needed to put down the insurrection in the Philippine Islands.

On February 2, 1901, congress enacted a law authorizing five additional regiments of infantry—our Twenty-ninth infantry was one of the five — and on March 3, 1901, at Fort Sheridan, Ill., the first officers and men were brought together and our own Twenty-ninth infantry came into existence.

Companies Organized

All companies of the First Battalion were organized in March, Company "E" in April, Companies "F," "G" and "H" in May, and the companies of the Third Battalion in June and July.

In nine months after the completion of the organization, the regiment was in San Francisco and sailed in April, 1902, for the Philippine Islands.

The regiment did two tours of service in the Philippine Islands. The first time it was scattered all over the Visayan group of islands.

On the Island of Cebu, which is about 120 miles long, about the distance from here to Atlanta, there were stationed Regimental Headquarters, Companies C, E, F and K.

On the Island of Negros, Companies G, L and M.

On the Island of Penay, Companies B, D, H, and I.

On the Island of Bohol, Company A.

In those days there was no regimental and battalion headquarters companies, no service nor Howitzer companies and companies D, H and M were rifle companies. Our command posts, special weapons and machine guns came as a result of the World War.

Run Down Outlaws

The regiment was here two years, during which time companies E, F and H had four months of field service running down a band of outlaws on the Island of Mindanao.

For service in the Visayan Islands and Mindanao the war department awarded a campaign streamer for our regimental color.

During the second tour of service in the Philippines the regiment was stationed at Fort William McKinley, six miles from Manila. After two years the regiment was again back in the United States, stationed in three battalion posts in New York state, where it remained until 1915.

At this time the dark war clouds had settled over Europe and the rumblings of the God of War often disturbed the rest of the American Eagle.

The importance of the Panama canal and its adequate protection was a vital

LOCAL RESERVE OFFICERS ATTENDING NIGHT CLASSES AT FORT BENNING

Last week nineteen Georgia and Alabama reserve officers met at the third of a series of lectures and troop leading problems, which is being conducted for their benefit by regular officers at Fort Benning.

Captain A. J. Nichols, commanding Co. "H," 29th Infantry, after giving a lecture on the tactical handling of a machine gun company in attack, demonstrated the application of tactical methods to a specific situation, which was illustrated on the sand table.

The problem dealt with a battalion of infantry attacking an intrenched enemy position. The machine gun company had the mission of supporting the attacking rifle companies. How the machine gun company executed its mission, from the time that the battalion commander issued the attack order to the moment that the riflemen swarmed over the enemy position, was illustrated step by step by Captain Nichols, who discussed each action of ths machine gunners as it occurred. Although the reservists represented several different combatant and other arms, their discussions and solutions of the various situations confronting the machine gun company commander were exceptionally good.

Prior to the evening's problem, the reserve officers were the guests of Company "H," 29th Infantry, for dinner. An inspection of the machine gun company's equipment and quarters followed the dinner.

The reserve officers' night classes began last September, when Major J. T. Rhett, of the academic department, presented a lecture on army organization. Two other tactical conferences have been held for the reservists: The rifle pla-

FORT BENNING FEELS EFFECTS OF RECENT FLOOD

Fort Benning this week experienced the novel sensation of being semi-isolated from the rest of the world.

Torrential rains of unusual volume flooded the reservation and surrounding territory, and filled the Upatoi and its tributaries to the flood point. The rushing waters, the highest since 1924, had risen to a depth of 38 feet at the main highway bridge by 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and reached its highest stage at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning, when a depth of 40 feet was registered. The water at that time was flowing over the sills of the bridge, two inches below the floor, and endangered the structure to such an extent that all traffic over it, except vehicles carrying provisions for the post, was suspended.

The danger to the bridge first became apparent at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon when military police at Out-guard No. 1 reported that a strip of bank about 8 feet thick and 40 feet long had fallen into the stream with a tremendous crash.

Company "A," 7th Engineers, and a detachment of 50 men from the 15th Tank Battalion were rushed to the scene and under the direction of Capt. William F. Heavy, Engineers, began the construction of a log mattress to cover the bank of the stream near the abutment of the bridge to retard the rapid erosion of the bank. At that time, the stream was 18 feet below the bridge but was rising at the rate of 1 1-2 feet per hour. The current was also increasing at a rapid rate and was then estimated at 9 miles per hour.

Despite the rapid rise of the water, the Engineers had anchored the bridge and completed the protecting log mattress, while the Tank detachment had placed more than 500 sand bags in position around the bridge abutments by 10 o'clock Monday night.

All night the water rose and by 7 o'clock Tuesday morning was within 5 feet of the bridge floor.

Although the protecting mats and sand bags were in position, they were not completely effective, due to the rapid rise of the water and the swift current. Erosion around the abutments of the railroad bridge caused rail traffic into the post to be suspended Tuesday. The railroad bridge was undermined and displaced about 8 inches out of alignment.

A detachment from the 29th Infantry and the 7th Engineers worked several hours on protective works around the railroad bridge.

All student classes were dismissed and all civilian employes residing in Columbus were excused in order that they might return to their homes before the threatened break of the bridge occurred. Fort Benning school children attending Columbus schools were rushed to the post by the Howard Bus Line and were met at the bridge by their parents.

The high waters threatened for a time to cut the power lines running into the

OFFICERS' CLUB EXTENDS COURTESIES THEATRE PARTIES

Arrangements have been consummated which will enable officers desiring to give theater parties at the Main Theatre to secure seat reservations through the Officers' Club. These will be made for parties of six or more for usual occasions; ten or more persons for exceptional occasions. In order to insure thoroughly satisfactory accommodations persons desiring reservations are advised to make them several days in advance. These may be made either with the secretary, Officers' Club, or the mess officer, Biglerville mess.

This accommodation will greatly simplify the problems of hosts or hostesses who desire to first entertain their guests at dinner at the Biglerville mess and then take them to the theater.

The scheme embodies several highly desirable features: first, at the same time that arrangements are made with the Club for a dinner party, theater reservations may also be secured, and second, the club will deliver the theater tickets to the host at the dinner tables, charging for them on the club bill.

Through this arrangement a host or hostess will be saved many of the details which make the giving of a dinner and theater party laborious. At one phone call tables and food are arranged for and theater tickets and accommodations secured so that parties are insured seats together at the show house regardless of the time they arrive.

These courtesies are made possible through the cooperation of the Officers' Club with the Main Theatre. Those desiring to take advantage of them may be assured every consideration possible to make their parties successful.

question. More soldiers were needed to properly guard the Canal Zone. The 29th Infantry was selected for this important duty and on March 17, 1915, sailed from Weehawken, N. Y., and four days later was guarding the Panama Canal and continued on this duty for nearly three and one-half years.

In September, 1918, the United States had nearly two million men over-seas and still more were needed.

The 29th Infantry left the canal zone, took station at Camp Beauregard, La., where preparations were at once made to prepare the regiment for services over seas.

The 29th Infantry was split in two parts to organize the 84th Infantry, the 29th and 84th forming the 34th brigade and with the 33rd brigade formed the 17th Division.

An epidemic of influenza broke out in the division and delayed its departure over-seas, meanwhile the armistice was signed and the "Thunderbolt" division demoblized. The 29th Infantry ceased to belong to it on Feb 4, 1919.

The first battalion of the 29th Infantry arrived at Fort Benning March 22, 1919, and the remainder of the regiment arrived in October of the same year.

The first troops furnished for a demonstration for the Infantry School was in February, 1920. The first Organization Day was held in 1922.

The first colonel of the 29th Infantry was William M. Van Horne, born in 1482. He began his military career at the age of nineteen and served as a private during the Civil war for over three years. He retired in 1901, a brigadier general. This distinguished soldier—our first regimental commander—gave over forty years of service and devotion to his country, twenty-four years of which he spent in the grade of captain.

Organization Day 1929
The Gmykhana

The first number of the program of the Demonstrationist gymkhana, held at the Doughboy Stadium Saturday morning, was the chariot race. Machine-gun carts took the place of the famous iron battle wagons, but with their fancy decorated bodies and still more highly decorated drivers, no one would ever have guessed the origin of chariots or drivers. Instead of the famous war-horses of the Julius Ceasar days, two husky doughboys were between the shafts. At the crack of the starter's pistol, Company "G" took the lead and held it until within one yard of the finish when one of the "hosses" fell down and forced Newman to drag the works the remaining yard, allowing Company "A" to take first place with "G" second.

The old soldiers' race was interesting as well as amusing. They ran fifty yards, turned a hand spring and raced back to the starting point. The speed and their ability to turn hand-springs surprised the spectators, who yelled themselves hoarse as Sgt. Tommie Tompkins, of the Howitzer Company, nosed out Corp. Clay, of Company "E," for first place, with Simpson of "G," taking third.

The pie eating contest was fast and mushy, with Pvt. Capps, of Company "D," eating his pie and licking off his face before his opponents realized what it was all about.

The obstacle race progressed nicely until the contestants came to the barrels they were supposed to crawl through. Several barrels were bursted, while one soldier wedged himself in so tightly that a saw was necessary to undress him. The race was won by Smith, of Company "A," with Thurman, of "E," second, and Wright, of Rgt. Hq., third.

Pvt. L. J. Martin, of "H" Company, dressed in the flowing costume of Brutus and driving an animal that resembled the "Missing Link," took first place for the most comical chariot make-up.

A green pine pole, skinned and greased and raised about six feet above the ground was used as a battle ground for the pillow fighters. This exhibition kept the large crowd in a roar of mirth from beginning until the final bout, when the same Pvt. Martin that proved to be the ugliest chariot racer of them all, challenged Costello, of Company "F," winner of the pillow fight. The challenge was accepted and much to the surprise of the spectators, the little clown scored a perfect kao over the former champ.

After the fun of the morning the regiment returned to the new brick barracks, where chicken dinners with all of the fancy trimmings were fed the merry-makes of the morning.

The final event of the day was a basketball game in the afternoon between the battalion teams. This game proved to be hard fought, but Franz and company, of the Second Bats, proved a bit too strong for their younger brothers of the First Bats, the final score being 52 to 30 in favor of the Second Bats.

At 5:15 o'clock Saturday afternoon, the regiment assembled at the Main Theatre, where a musical comedy by Lew Beckridge Vaudeville Troupe, furnished two hours of fun and laughs.

MACHINE GUNNERS HOSTS AT BARBECUE

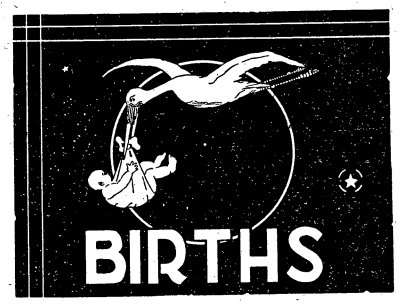
An event not scheduled as part of the official program of the 29th Infantry's organization day celebration, but which was lent official dignity by the presence of the commanding officer and other high-ranking officers, was the barbecue dinner given by Company "H," 29th Infantry.

A perfect day added enjoyment to the affair, which was held at the regular barbecue site on a high bank overlooking the Upatoi, where the sumptuous feast was spread on long, glistening-white tables.

The piece de resistance was wild pig —several wild pigs, in fact, which had perished during an unwarranted attack upon some innocent machine-gunners who happened to be passing their haunts in the woods.

The wild pig, barbecued all night over a glowing bed of hickory coals to a delicious crispness, was flanked by prodigious quantities of many other good things produced by the culinary art of the company's kitchen force.

Besides the regimental commander and Mrs. Pendleton, the company entertained about thirty other guests at the barbecue.



Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Johnson, 4521 Regent St., Philadelphia, Pa., announce the birth of a daughter, Mary Chastine, on February 24th.

The baby is a granddaughter of Col. and Mrs. Waite C. Johnson, of Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

"SINNERS PARADE," starring Victor Varconi with Dorothy Revier in a tense society drama exposing the sensational events in the lives of men and women who pose as saints by day and revel as sinners at night. The plot revolves around a girl who, during the day, is a demure school teacher, but the instant darkness descends she becomes the center of attraction at a night club; some of the parents of her pupils learn of her double existence and arrange a raid to expose her and ruin her career. The leader of the raid has two children, a girl, who is a pupil in the school where the cabaret girl teaches, and a son, who is a clerk in his father's bank; both of these children lead double lives and are caught in their mother's raid. The sequence illustrates how the night club manager gets tipped off, the manner in which the news is spread, how guests dispose of their wet goods, the methods taken to conceal prominent persons, and other interesting side lights on a raid.

The outstanding event of last week was the Organization Day dance, given by the officers and ladies of the 29th Infantry on Saturday evening at Biglerville. This hospitality was extended to all officers and ladies of the garrison. Back of the receiving line, silver trophies were banked to remind us of successful achievements of the regiment, and on the columns were shields which bore further testimony of honors carried off by various units of the 29th. In the receiving line were Capt. McAllister, Col. and Mrs. Pendleton, Col. and Mrs. Brandt and Maj. Young.

Music was furnished by the regimental band and dancing was enjoyed by a very large group 'till a late hour.

There were several very delightful dinner parties before the dance.

Major and Mrs. Screno E. Brett entertained very beautifully a large party at Biglerville. Their table was especially pretty with its lovely baskets of jonquils, daffodils, fern and Breath o' Spring. Yellow candles were effectively used at artistic intervals. PRACTICAL PATRIOTS

The other night a group of men from Columbus and vicinity assembled in a class room at Fort Benning. They were in civilian dress and at first glance, there appeared to be nothing to distinguish them from any other two-score business men. They ranged in age from young men who had recently attained their majority, to middle age, or perhaps a little past that mark.

They sat around a large table on which moist sand had been molded to represent a piece of ground. Sprinkled over the miniature landscape were little houses, trees, roads and bridges. Guns also, there were—little machine guns.

The sand miniature was a battle-ground and over it raged a combat which the gentlemen who sat around it in civilian dress were directing with the same intense earnestness which would characterize leaders of men in real combat.

As the battle progressed, its directors seemed to be clothed in the garb of leadership and authority; in uniforms of army officers with glittering insignia of various ranks upon their shoulders.

They were officers, in fact, reserve officers of the Army of the United States. Some of them of moderately high rank had fought on bloody fields in the World War. Others, newly commissioned, may never have such experiences. Every one of them, whether veteran or novice at the military game, was giving a voluntary service to the nation at some sacrifice, or, at least, inconvenience, to himself. At least one of them had driven nearly forty miles over almost impassable roads through a drenching rain.

Of such are the men of the reserve, men who serve in peace or war, regardless of the cost to themselves. The country has little to fear while it has such citizens at its call.

May there be more and more of them.

NEARLY MAROONED

The sinister threats of the recent high waters against Fort Benning's intercourse with the civilian world brought home with convincing realism the realization of the inter-dependency of modern communities, whether they are military or civil.

To be true, had all highway and wire communication been severed, Fort Benning would have suffered little more than inconvenience as long as its subsistence and fuel supplies lasted. But to be suddenly deprived of electric light and cooking facilities in this modern day would be regarded as a calamity by most people. We could not readily adapt ourselves to the rather crude domestic arrangements of a few generations ago.

And to be confined to the limits of an army post ,even if it has an area of 97,000 acres, would chafe the freedom-loving American automobile owner beyond endurance.

LEGION MEMBERSHIP DRIVE ON

The annual membership drive for the local American Legion post is well under way. If you are a veteran of the World war and eligible to join the Charles S. Harrison Post No. 35, Depatment of Georgia, you have received a written invitation to join this great service organization. Act on it now and help Fort Benning uphold its membership quota.

Watch for announcement of the next meeting—a surprise program with refreshments will be in order.

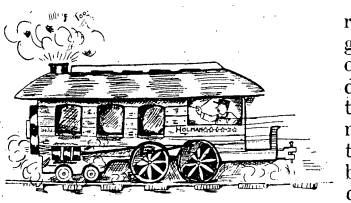
"Do you have to work long hours, Bill?"

"No, Jack. Only the regulation sixty minutes."

COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

SEVEN GOLD STARS



Down on the railroad tracks below Broaway a curious engine puffed its ponderous way, hauling strings of freight cars to and fro. Sometimes it dragged many cars, sometimes only one or two. Whether there were few or many, it mattered not to the odd but powerful contraption which went pompously about its business of shunting cars to warehouse doors, there to be loaded with the products of Columbus mills and then hauled away.

Like a player at solitaire, the methodical machine distributed cars as if they were cards and then, finding their arrangement not to its satisfaction, went around and gathered them up again.

A grotesque thing it was, indeed. It looked like the result of a violent head-end collision between an obsolescent locomotive and an old-fashioned horse car which left the latter hanging blanket-like over the sides of the engine's boiler. The tender might have been overlooked in cleaning up the debris from the wreck, for there was none.

Upon closer inspection, it is apparent that the thing was built that way and one is struck with admiration of such an ingenious method of utilizing worn-out horse cars and elderly engines. One surmises that there was once a coat of paint, but its hue has long since succumbed to the dingy layers of soot. Faintly discernible along the side is the name of a railroad. Under a window at the rear of the cab, in bright gold letters, is a man's name, followed by six gold stars.

Leaning out of the cab window is the engineer. His gray hair and his weather-lined face give him a befitting appearance of experience and competency. Good-humored little wrinkles hover around the keen blue eyes, and I venture a question.

He is not unwilling to talk about his hybird power plant. From his first words it is evident that he is very proud of his mighty machine. He has been its master for many years and knows well its strength and vagaries. His affection for his iron horse is not unlike that of a soldier for his charger.

The engine, he says, was designed and built a good many years ago to fulfill certain requirements. And the principal requirement imposed upon the builders was to produce a locomotive which would not frighten horses! Humane consideration for the then ubiquitous horse was not, however, the motive which inspired the departure from conventional switching-engine designs. It was to save the railroad company from possible damage suits arising from frightened runaway horses. So, to deceive Dobbin, the builders cleverly concealed the locomotive by making it look like a street car. Street cars had been in use long enough then so that most city horses looked upon them with indifference, if not scorn. But a hissing, smoke-belching steam locomotive, was a different proposition and even the blase city horse was unable to control his emotions upon the approach of such a fire-breathing monster.

The camouflaged locomotive may look queer to some people, but it can handle twenty-five loaded cars with ease, the engineer announces proudly. He invites me into the roomy cab and shows me a bewildering array of valves, gauges and levers. There is a short coal box at the rear and a saddle-type water tank is hung over the boiler. The engine, he says, weighs forty-five tons and is on a short wheel-base so that it can make the short turns on the city streets.

I ask about the name and the stars on the side of the cab. The name, it appears, is his own. It was placed there by the railroad company in recognition of the engineer's long and faithful care of his engine which no one else may operate. Each of the six stars, also placed there by order of the company, signifies five years of loyal service to the railroad. There will be seven of them soon.

A reminiscent glow appears in the old engineer's eyes and then fades as he glances at his watch. "I'm sorry, sir; I must go now," he says. I climb down from the cab. He pulls the throttle gently and the monster moves. The negro fireman yanks the whistle-cord and the monster shrieks. As it glides smoothly away, its image of grotesqueness fades momentarily and in its place appears the fantasy of a huge elephant trumpeting and moving at the goad of its mahout while from the howdah on its back my new acquaintance waves good-bye.

* * * * *

Since my first meeting with the veteran engineer, I have seen him many times. Sometimes, when his iron steed had paused to refresh itself with a ton or so of water, we had time for a little chat, but more frequently his response to my greeting was, perforce, limited to a friendly wave from the cab as his engine went by.

The other day I saw him again, but at the throttle of an engine of more orthodox design. Or so I thought until I heard a familiar wheeze as the engine puffed toward me. It stopped.

"It's the same one," called my friend, the engineer, before I had time to utter the question which he doubtless saw on my face. "Do you like it better this way? I think it looks better," he added, with more than a trace of pride.

I am not sure that I do like the engine in its rejuvenated form. Without its modest covering, it looks somewhat naked. It is suggestive of a once-staid, past-middle-aged spinster suddenly become modernistic and frantically seeking rejuvenescence by lopping off her hair and skirts.

And then I espy the seventh gold star after my friend's name which indicates that he has passed his thirty-fifth year of faithful service to his company.

"Yes," I reply to his question, "I like it better—much better."

This is the first of a series of sketches of scenes of quaintness and charm in our neighboring civilian community. The second will appear in an early issue of The Infantry School News.

BURSTING OF HARPS POND RELEASES THOUSANDS OF FISH STORED THERE

Many thousands fish, which a thoughtful government had stocked in Harps pond for breeding purposes, were suddenly given their freedom from the confining walls of the pond and are now no doubt gamboling in and around the lower reaches of the Upatoi and Chattahoochee rivers happy in their newly acquired liberty, the result of the bursting of the Harps pond dam last Tuesday.

The giving way of the dam was due to the torrential rains which swept the region for the past few days. The pond, when it was discovered to be in danger, was the scene of a heroic struggle on the part of a fatigue detail consisting of three hundred men from the Twenty-ninth Infantry, who all of Monday night and Tuesday morning valiantly struggled to stay the encroaching waters by bolstering up the natural banks of the pond with sand bags and large blocks of stone. But the battle was lost t no avail, and the visionary meals of delectable fish which the boys had dreamed of for those days in the future when the scaly animals would be full grown, will be still visionary, and some fortunate fisherman down on the Chattahoochee will have cause to thank the storm, the futile efforts of the rescurers and a sanguine government which had in the first place stocked the pond.

7TH ENGINEERS

In spite of the fact that heavy rains made boat drill difficult, there were two boats on the river during the latter part of the week for use by the newcomers who were being taught some of the rudiments of that important branch of engineer work.

Colonel Berry was our guest Saturday morning for a boat ride in one of our palatial yachts. (More often spoken of as Pontoon boats.) He was accompanied by Captain Heavey, our company commander, Mrs. Heavey, Mrs. Fowlkes and Lieut. and Mrs. Daley. A good time was enjoyed by and all and Colonel Berry seemed greatly pleased with the work of the 7th Engineers. Come again and soon Colonel, you're always welcome on Engineer Hill.

The soccer team was scheduled to play the Atlanta Soccer Club Sunday but the game had to be cancelled, due to the fact that it was impossible to get the field at Fort McPherson.

The Engineer basketball team lost two hard fought games to the 22d Infantry team at Fort McPherson, Ga., over the week end: Saturday night, 31-27; Sunday afternoon, 46-35. Both games were fast and hotly contested throughout. The whole Engineer team played brilliantly. Reeves was the individual star. Collins also had an eye for the basket. For the 22d Infantry, Tedesco and Graham furnished plenty of trouble and bad news for the Engineers. They are as fast a pair of forwards as we have seen. The games were refereed by Lt. McQuarrie, who is well known at Benning and elsewhere.

The team received very courteous treatment from the men of the 22nd Infantry. They went to a great deal of trouble to make us comfortable and show us a good time. Many friends were made and we left with a warm spot in our hearts for Fort Mac.

Battery B

We are all glad to see Sgt. Phillips back from his furlough. We do not doubt all seems strange to him after 60 days of civilian life, but within a few weeks he will be again acclimated.

The rain has transformed the area into a beach and we heard some of the recruits inquire by Corporal Kersey whether they got bathing suits issued or whether they had to buy them.

The section of Goldbricks, with its new chief, Corporal Nahring, is doing fine work in the hospital. They have a bugler, a gunner, six cannoneers and six drivers, and are thus better supplied than any section in the battery. Maybe some of them could get a permanent job as goldbrick. What about this Thomas?

There was another cyclone of floating stripes in our battery. Gantt, Nahring, Giddens and Seifert drew the lucky numbers. Keep them boys.

FORT BENNING FEELS EFFECTS OF RECENT FLOOD

post from the city and kept Capt. Steele's utilities men busy clearing wires and cutting off poles which had been washed out by the stream.

The flood also threatened the telephone and telegraph lines running out of the post and Capt. Washburn had a detachment of Signal Corps men on the alert to restore communication. Wires were damaged in several parts of the post by the high winds which accompanied the heavy rins Monday.

Even if the bridges had been destroyed, their loss would have occasioned nothing more than inconvenience, as the garrison was well prepared for such an emergency. Company "A," 7th Engineers, although a combat organization, had bridge train equipment in readiness and could have placed a pontoon bridge across the stream within a couple of hours. Signal Corps and Quartermaster personnel were likewise in readiness to make temporary repairs to their respective utilities.

Capt. Buckbee, post commissary officer, stated that he had supplies sufficient for the garrison for 15 days. The most serious inconvenience would have been the severing of the electric power lines, which would have deprived the greater part of the officer personnel of their cooking facilities.

The recession of the waters began early Wednesday morning and by 8 o'clock the bridge was open for light vehicle traffic.

Early Monday night, range guards reported that the flood waters were breaking over the big dam at Harp's pond. A large detachment of men from the 29th Infantry was rushed to the scene. Over 3,000 sand bags were used in a valiant attempt to stem the torrent but the flood was so swollen by the heavy rains that a gap 80 feet wide and 30 feet deep was torn out by the swirling waters.

Thousands of trout, bream and other game fish which had been planted in the pond for breeding purposes, were carried down to the Chattahoochee on the crest of the roaring flood.

29TH SMALL BORE RIFLE TEAM LOSES 2ND MATCH OF SEASON

The Twenty-ninth Infantry Small Bore Rifle team lost a match with the Sixteenth Infantry by the very close score of 2521 to 2554, in a telegraphic match fired last Wednesday.

This is the second match in which the newly organized "Demonstration regiment" rifle team has participated, both times making the same score of 2521.

Both of the teams against which they fired are considered by authorities on this subject to be among the leading contenders for the National championship.

Cpl. Hicks, for the losers, showed up remarkably well with 374 points to his credit, with Sgt. Davis scoring second with 366.

"DEMONSTRATION REGIMENT" HOUSED UNDER ONE ROOF

For the first time in a period of nine years, the Twenty-ninth Infantry is completely housed under one roof. This happy condition is the result of the movement into the new barracks of the organizations of the First Battalion and other companies which had been occupying the tent area.

Despite the fact that these men were the last to obtain quarters in the Cuartel, they are fortunate in that the newly built additions which they are occupying embody many new features that are lacking in the old sections.

ORGANIZATIONS IN 29TH RATE HIGH IN SANITARY INSPECTION

In the competitive rating of the garrison messes by the Medical Inspector for the month of February B and C companies have tied for first place with three other organizations of the post. The rating given all five messes was excellent.

Owing to the movement into the new barracks, A, D and 2nd Bn. Hq. companies were not given rating for the month.

PERCENTAGE RE-ENLISTMENTS HIGH IN TWENTY-NINTH INF.

According to an announcement made recently by the headquarters of the Infantry School, the Twenty-ninth Infantry had a percentage of re-enlistments of .31 for the month of February, 1929.

This means approximately one out of every three men who were discharged E. T. S., re-enlisted for the same organization.

MANY MEN RESPOND TO CALL FOR STUDENTS OF EQUITATION

The number of men responding to the notification made by Uncle Sam, that he would redeem one of his recruiting campaign promises and that all mounted enlisted men and all other men of the "demonstration regiment" who were desirous of doing so could grab themselves "hosses" and report to the 29th Infantry corrals, was very gratifying. Here under the direction of Major T. F. Taylor, who will be assisted in this task by Lt. W. G. Skelton, Lt. J. G. Van Houten and Lt. D. G. Strickler, they will learn the rudiments of horsemanship.

A large class was formed and for the past week, the embryo horsemen have been faithfully at work learning how to climb aboard a horse and stay there without the outside assistance of ropes, wires and other such artificial aids.

It is the concensus of opinion among the fence-rail orators, who with vociferous admonishments to "Dominate your hoss, Pete," "Unhook your arms from around that animal's neck, he ain't a lady," and other such gems of wisdom, assist the regularly appointed instructors; that, give the boys time and they'll be the pride of the regiment, providing they don't come to grief before then by their too enthusiastic efforts in high diving.

FIRST BATTALION NEWS

First Battalion Headquarters and Headquarters Company

We are in the "New Barracks" now. The first few days seem to be one continual police detail, but things are beginning to look fairly shiny now, and every one seems satisfied and well pleased with our new home.

Pvts. Kilpatrick and Thompson have what they call "A Weak Sister." She may be weak as compared with them, but let me tell you a little secret. Don't you try to get too familiar with her 'cause she isn't as weak as you might think.

Corporal Shaver became a trifle peeved the other night playing a little game of cards. It seems that he and his partner only lacked 5 points of winning the game and their opponents lacked some 200 points. Well, they couldn't make their five points before the opponents from the third floor made their two hundred. Cpl. Shaver was heard to remark that he wasn't going to set around all night to make five points, but he couldn't seem to help himself.

Company "D"

The "D" Company soccer team brought home another victory Sunday morning. The game was hotly contested from beginning to end. It was a matter of endurance, and the Tankers were unable to keep the pace set by "Bur Head" Walters and his "Gang." The winning score came in the extra period played after the game, the score being a tie.

"Bear Creek" Willard has joined the company, after sixty days of fun and frolic in the old home town. Look out P. A., for "Bear Creek" has a new pipe.

Sgt. McGaha reports that the hospital is a fine place for a "gold brick" but not for a "He Man." Glad to see you back in the ranks again "Mac."

Saturday morning was a fine morning for ducks, but nevertheless the "Nebraska kid" Beeman, and "Sparkey" McCullars managed to steal away from the hospital long enough to fall in line with the company for a garrison inspection.

Cpl. Faircloth reports that he is having a fine time in the old home town. We are afraid that sixty days will pass away too kuick to suit him.

Cpl. "Happy" Fournier says that his rocking chair will need "non-skid tires" before he will be able to enjoy the thrill of having his favorite "chair" after moving into the new barracks.

SPECIAL UNITS ITEMS

Howitzer Company

The Howitzer Company holds another record now, that of fire fighting, known in some circles as smoke eating. At 6:50 P. M. on the evening of Feb. 24 this organization was notified that there was a fire in the vicinity of Fisk range. One-fifth of a second later six squads were lined up in front of the barracks calmly waiting for transportation. Some say the extreme speed was due to the commanding way the First Sgt. blew his whistle, but according to one witness, it sounded very much like an acting corporal calling out a two man fatigue detail. At any rate, due to the extreme speed with which company exercised in getting into action, the fire became disheartened and was easily subdued.

We have a new wrinkle that beats scraping bunks in preparation for painting. We boil them in lye water. The vat used in this operation may be used for making slum after the bunks have been cleaned.

Our ex-drummer boy, Pvt. Blalock, is back with us, after quite a long furlough, which, sad to say, was not authorized and has recently taken up his residence in Whitmire's Hotel.

Headquarters Company

Quite a commotion was created the other day when the report was circulated that Cpl. Devoice was going to get discharged on account of being under age, but the Cpl. says that it was only a false rumor. Sure glad to hear that you are going to stay with the aviators "Goods." "Spuddie" would take a nose dive if you weren't around to watch him.

Our master mind and Willie Hoppe's only rival, Cpl. Funk, in company with "Announcer" Price did a Jim Tully to the city of sunshine to witness the Shar-Strib fracas. Cpl. Funk says that Strib was all right in a way but he didn't weigh enough. What a whale of a difference just a few pounds make.

Sgt. Langston read in the paper where Ho was elected Secretary of War in China and now he wants to know "What Ho?"

Willie Harrison was training for a "Strangler" Lewis hold on that greased pig that was to be turned loose on Saturday, but oh, he nearly choked himself to death and is now recovering from a very sore throat. Willie, remember the Luckies.

Pvt. Stockberger says that he should have been a professor in college. Yeah, you would do Stocks. You are absent minded and everything else that is required to be a professor.

SECOND BATTALION NEWS

Headquarters Company Second Battalion

Folks we have moved into the new barracks and the hardest part of the work is done. The boys are very much pleased with them and the new men especially. They have already worn a path to the producer of that "Next to Godliness" feeling. (Shower room.)

Credit is due to our two best men, no other than the company commander and our 1st Sgt. The remarkable way in which they handled the men during the moving is to be remembered. Getting the most out of men with little or no growls is an art with them. No two men in the outfit are thought any more of than Lt. W. B. Cochran and 1st Sgt. W. D. Harvey. May they long be with us.

The two toughest men in the company have taken up the strenuous game of dominoes. Cpl. Hedge and "Cy" Perkins were about to go 'round and 'round about the outcome of said game the other night and now each man demands a second when they engage in that grueling pastime.

There is a man in the world who believes in the old saying that an army travels on it's stomach. It is none other than Cpl. (Boob) Holland, our mess Sgt. The boy has the knack of feeding the men well and yet not running into the hole. We are very glad to have in the company men with these wonderful qualities as it makes life in the outfit all the more pleasant. Keep up the good grub Roscoe and you can borrow anything your heart desires.

Company H

In the event that they haven't been published before we wish to make known some of the results of the 2nd Battalion Drill Test. "H" Company took 3rd place. That doesn't sound like such a lot but we're rather proud of the fact that we beat out one rifle company and finished only 4 points behind the winner. The morning of the test, as we practiced assiduously, Pvt. Giles, our past master of the art of close order drill, sought to revise training regulations by executing "Hand Salute" at the command, "Resume March."

Though we aren't very good at obstacle racing or three-legged racing, we have a gift for comedy, as proved by Pvt. L. J. Martin in his role of charioteer at the regimental Gymkhana. Heard Capt. Nichols and Lieut. Killpack discussing the possibility of hiring him out to Ringling's or Barnum & Bailey.

Immediately after Gymkhana "H" Co. moved on to the picnic ground on the Upatoi just off the Marne road. There a tremendous barbecue awaited. Pharr and Cpl. Brunner know their barbecue as attested by the compliments of the regimental commander and other officers present.

The crowning event of the day, however, came when that peer of mess sergeants (really the best in the regiment, I mean he actually is, my dear) turned the wolves loose on 15 gallons of ice cream.

—Buffer Disc.

Company E

Organization Day for the 29th Infantry on March 2, 1929, was another red letter day for Company "E." In the Gymkhana this outfit led the way with twenty-one points. The "Gold Dust Twins" (Easterwood and Smith, O.) driven by the little charioteer Walker, placed third in the chariot race and won second in decoration. "Pollock" Furman skipped into second place in the obstacle race, and if he had not spent so much time lighting his cigarette he might have taken first honors. "Gloomy" Gochenauer was second in finishing his

After thirty years of service, or the equivalent, 1st Sgt. Marshall Johnson is expected to submit his application for retirement about April 11th. Though his presence will be missed by many of his friends and associates, we all wish him well in his civil life career. The same might be said of Sgt. Allen, as he too is in the limelight for retirement. The entire service of both of these men has been with Company A.

"Coming events cast their shadows before." The fact that so many of the "Old Timers" are about to retire from the regiment will, no doubt, be the cause of stiff competition for efficiency in all military phases on the part of every soldier and, in the final conclusion many grades will be changed for the better. Remember, comrades, "competition is the mother of efficiency." Let's go.

Company "B"

The hardest thing for the company to do is to get Bill Murphy to keep his hands still when talking.

If any one has something to sell (Jaw Bone) see Will E. Wright.

What the company wants to know is how to get the jinks off of Pvt. Spence, Jefferson.

Company "C"

Captain J. P. Lyons, formerly in command of the company, has been appointed Assistant Adjutant, Captain William G. Murphy is now in command of the company.

The company sponsored a dance at the 24th Infantry Service Club on February 22, which was very successful.

The company mounted guard Saturday, February 23, and was confronted with a mystery of the disappearance of a certain amount of java, but Sergeant Williams picked up clues starting from the ground (not terra firma) but coffee grounds.

Company "F"

1st Sgt. Steger, Arthur, has been assigned to the company, relieving 1st Sgt. Gunn. We are sorry to lose Sgt. Gunn but "The King is Dead, Long Live the King."

Cpl. Page, our most wise corporal at school on Thursday, instructed that at the command "forward march" we should all step off with both feet at the same time. Explain yourself, corporal. It cannot be done. I tried it and liked to broke my neck.

Company "G"

Wise old owl sit in an oak, the more he saw the less he spoke, the less he spoke the more he heard 24th Infantry imitate that bird.

Service Co.

Say, did you hear about our dance Monday night, February 11? Well, I didn't. I was there and it was hot. Well, Fess Wood was there with his jazz hounds and they were barking all over the place. You know Fess knows his stuff. Saw there were some fellows in our outfit who just couldn't make up their minds to step out on the floor but somehow these same parlor sheiks just couldn't resist those intoxicating strains that were filling the house with laughter that reminds you of a kid party. They stepped right out—and how. Anyway, everybody seemed to get a kick and carried home pleasant thoughts to begin the new day.

We hope when Private Bell returns from Talladega, Atlanta and Montgomery with the other members of the basketball team he will report three victories.

We're sorry, Corporal Ford, you didn't make the team, and wish you luck next time.

You know we're going to miss our mess sergeant. He had no business dogging that bull-eye around like that.

The reason we cut that last sentence so short chow call was going and to miss a chow call in Number 5 is straight out foolishness.

ADDITIONAL 29TH INFANTRY NOTES

pice. He failed to lick the berries off the pan and had to go back and lap 'em up. But we still maintain that he is the post champion pie eater, for anyone that can eat thirty-seven doughnuts in one meal sure is a formidable opponent. This same "Gloomy" Gus ended up second also in the pillow fighting contest. He apparently couldn't ruffle his feathers because he had his mind on more pie.

The company comedian, Boling, had too much interference in the sack race. Instead of clearing the way for him they blocked his speed, but we'll win next time, won't we, George? The three-legged race was a run away for "Chink" Miscar, the Louisiana kid, and "Shiekie" Stamper, the boy from Kentucky sticks. This makes two years in succession that they have crossed the line first, for last year they also showed their heels to the field. Corp. Clay got his directions mixed when he turned a somersault, and started off in the wrong way, but even at that he ran second in the Old Soldier's race.

At two-thirty in the afternoon, the Second Battalion trampled all over the First Battalion in the basketball game. "Squab" Franz states that they had to win, because the big show was at camp. And it was a big show, even though it was free. A sure enough high class vaudeville at the Main theatre and all for nothing.

Then to top the day off Cooks McDuffie and Rust put out one of their "Christmas Day Special" feeds, and "boy it 'shore' tasted fine."

SPORTOPICS

Benny Regan, of Atlanta, and "Red" Keenan, of the 29th Infantry, will mix and mingle for eight rounds in the semi-final of the Gunner DePratt-Maxie Peltz fight card that will be held at the Fort Benning arena on the night of March 12th.

The "Redhead" is back in tip-top form again and has been showing his old time speed combined with plenty of dynamite in either mitt, in his daily work-outs at the gym.

DEPRATT-PELTZ MEET TUESDAY NIGHT; KEENAN AND REAGAN IN SEMI-FINAL

Gunner DePratt swings into action again, after a long lay off. The pride of "H" Company, 29th Infantry, who has not appeared at the Post since last October owing to a pair of bad hands, coupled with a football knee, heads the boxing card at the Post gym next Tuesday night, March 12th.

The start of the Gunner's trouble can be laid to one Maxie Peltz, of Portland, Oregon. The last time the Gunner donned the leather mittens he faced the said Maxie at Savannah, Ga. After a little less than twenty minutes of the fastest fight Savannah fans ever saw, DePratt heard the referee toll the fatal ten count.

After nursing his injuries carefully the past four months the machine gunner announced that he was ready again to go the distance. With the announcement came the request that Peltz be brought forward as an opponent. To those who know, this was the first time that DePratt has ever asked for any particular opponent. Bring on anyone has been his motto heretofore, but he reasoned that no matter whom he met, the image of Peltz would always be in front of the skeptical. To clear the closet of this skeleton he asked that his conqueror be the first one considered.

Peltz, who has been sojourning in Cuba and Miami, has been writing to the post every week to get another crack at Ptomey. When the match with DePratt was broached he accepted at once, adding that in the event he stopped the Gunner again he would get the chance he wants at Willie, at Athens, Ga. Its a triangle that ought to be entertaining while the participants have their health.

Backing up the feature event are some attractive bouts for those who like to see heavy hitting and plenty of action. The semi-windup of eight rounds between Red Keenan and Bennie Reagan will please the old timers who remember their slashing nine round fight some three years ago. Both of the bantams are aging a bit, but what they lack in speed is more than made up in their hitting abilities. This alone is worth a long green one.

Doubin' Thomas will be on display in a six-rounder with Ginger Jernigan, of Columbus, Ga. Both boys started boxing about the same time, pushing their way up gradually through the three and four rounders, until now they are the outstanding lightweights of the preliminary boys. If Jernigan's knockouts were computed he would rival the record made by Billy Shell, before the latter tasted Ptomey's waspish sting. Ginger is a terrific hitter, as can be attested by Watta Guy and Whispering Moore. The latter is still mumbling his words after the defeat Jernigan handed him three months ago. Thomas can sock like a middleweight, but he will be handicapped by a seven inch reach when he faces the city youth.

The next one of importance on the card is one that will find its way into the archives of the future. Grumpy Gordy, the Quartermaster find, who has been bowling them over like the Upatoi flood waters, takes on a youngster well known to every devotee of the game. Gordy, after four knockouts in a row over, good, bad, and very bad pugs, tackles the cyclone dodger from the 15th Tank Battalion, the one and only Bull Montondon. The four rounds these light heavyweights furnish on Tuesday night are bound to be full of long, looping, larruping wallops. Only a prophet without a future would attempt to pick the winner.

Seaweed Wilson, in a three-rounder, will have the chance he has been waiting for, when Kippered Herring faces him. On a cold night last winter, with a small house at the Springer, Herring tapped Seaweed on the chin for the full count. The knockout has been buzzing in Wilson's head ever since; even the size of the purse, which totaled $1.12, was less a blow than Kippered's hard right swing. Seaweed has been improving rapidly, judging by his last two fights.

One of Dick White's proteges makes his professional bow in the opener with Gloomy Gochenauer. The newcomer answers to the name of Jack West, weight 145. In meeting Gloomy, he is facing a boy who is making his second appearance. Come what may it is the opener and it will suffice while the crowd it getting seated.

If any of you paid $25 to see the Stribling-Sharkey jab, hook, and clinch affair and felt disappointed, here is a chance to get even, for the most you can pay for a card of whiff, bang, slam, is one hundred cents. If this is a bit too high space has been reserved for half this price.

CANDIDATES FOR INFANTRY SCHOOL BABESBALL TEAM BEGIN PRACTICE MONDAY

Next Monday afternoon promptly at 2:15 o'clock candidates for the Infantry School baseball team will report to Capt. J. J. Wilson at the baseball field opposite the Post Exchange filling station, for practice. Owing to the improvements under way at Gowdy Field, it will be some time before the field there can be used, but in the meantime Capt. Wilson will put the Doughboy squad through their paces on the old diamond on the opposite side of the road.

This year's list of candidates promises to be large, which means that the battle for regular berths will be hard fought, as only eighteen men will be carried on the team. Seveal of the veterans of past seasons will find the going rough when they clash with some of the flashy youngsters who are going out for a berth.

At this early stage of the season, ye scribe is picking "Long Cy" Perkins, of the Engineers, to break all previous mound records formerly held at the Upatoi station. This boy has been in the making in the "B" Loop for the past two seasons. Given a chance with the first string this year he should prove an ace-high twirler for the Doughboy team.

Besides the wealth of young twirling material that will be out for the team, there are several of the old reliable mound artists who will answer the call, among them being Wee Grady Tolle, Ole Man McGaha, Johnnie Rossma, Carnes and Harkey. Tommie Thompson and Mick McCarty are capable of holding down the receiving end on anybody's old ball club. The fight for infield positions promises some fast action, with Buckley, a slight favorite at first base. Second base will be a scramble between Shotgun White, Cooper and Johnnie Hyland. The short field is owned by one "Fat" Franz. Third base will be the cause of quite a bit of argument between Cobb, Cleveland and Reddock.

The outer gardens will be well taken care of this season with such men as Kjelstrom, McCartney, McAllister, Ryan, Douglas, Estridge, Hicks, Ashe and Woidyola out for positions. A flock of younsters and new-comers will be out and of these it is too early to begin to pass opinions.

FREEBOOTERS DEFEAT GUNNERS WHILE STUDENTS WIN OVER DOUGHBOYS SUNDAY

With a heavy field and threatening skies the Infantry School poloists braved wind and weather last Sunday afternoon to stage two games of polo on French field.

With the field wet and heavy from the recent rains, the games were rather slow, compared to the usual brand of polo played by the Benning malletmen.

In the opening game the Students downed the Demonstrationist Four in a hard fought contest, 6 to 4. Both teams showed to some extent, in the performance of man and mount, the effects of the irregular practice, due to recent inclement weather.

The 29th Infantry used the following lineup: 1, Skelton; 2, Halloran; 3, Hedekin; 4, VanHouten. The Student team used seven players in various combinations: Forsythe, Jeter, Royce, Cornog, Smith, Burress and Harris.

Goals were made as follows: Harris, 2; Forsythe, 2; Royce, 1; Jeter, 1; Skelton, 3; Hedekin, 1.

The second game lineup was: Freebooters: 1, Lockett; 2, McClure; 3, Lyman; 4, Sweet. 83rd F. A.: 1, Clark; 2, Guernsey; 3, Murphy; 4, Crane.

The Freebooters took the offensive throughout the greater part of the game. They made, besides the four goals, nine hits over the back line to two by the Artillery. Goals were made by the following: McClure, 3; Lockett, 1; Murphy, 1.

At the beginning of the second game, the two teams about to play and the officials rode across the field in the line to salute Brigadier-General Edgar T. Collins, commandant of the Infantry School, who was present.

Lts. Jacobs and Grubbs officiated.

DOUGHBOYS WITNESS SHARKEY-STRIBLING BATTLE

(By Al Durden)

While fight fans from every point of the compass were pouring into Miami, Fla., to witness the Battle of the Palms between Stribling and Sharkey, Fort Benning furnished its quota of enthusiastic followers of the sock and slam profession.

Most noticeable among those present on the night of the battle was none other than Corporal J. Funk, Hdq. Co., 29th Infantry, the notorious Pvt. B. Brown, of Hdq. Co., 15th Tank Battalion, and "Cyclone" Walker Smith, light-heavy pride of the army.

"Cyclone's" version of the affair is very short and to the point. To quote him word for word would be as follows: "If Stribling and Sharkey are the leading contenders for the world's heavyweight title, and they were both stepping at top speed during the fight, I feel plenty good, for I know that it won't be long before "Cyclone" Smith and the state of Louisiana will be owning the world's heavy-weight championship.

When interviewed, B. Brown was so enthused over the fight that the best he ever managed to stutter was that he saw Jack Dempsey and Scarface Caponne. When asked about the Stribling-Sharkey act he seemed to agree with "Cyclone" Smith.

Corp. J. Funk seemed to have really enjoyed himself. He took a hop in an aeroplane, went swimming in the salty waters of the Gulf, actually put his hand on Seagrave's racing car, came very near having an automobile accident with Estelle and Jack Dempsey, saw the famous Scarface Caponne and wound up by deciding that "Cyclone" Smith is the proper man to show the "Boston Strongman" what a left hook and a right cross will do to an ambitious title chaser.

NEW GRIDIRON RULE IS ADOPTED

Adoption of a new gridiron rule making fumbled balls dead at the point of recovery, when recovered by the defensive team, has been announced by tthe national football rules committee as the chief result of a two day secret session.

The committee's decision which approves a recommendation having a wide spread support of football coaches, was made public by W. S. Langford, secretary.

"The new rule," said a formal statement, will not apply in case of forward passing, or to backward passes, which are intercepted before striking the ground, nor will it apply to blocked kicks which will play as heretofore.

Three other important changes were announced, effective for the 1929 season.

The former rule restricting the kicking side from advancing the ball in case of subsequently recovering it, has been extended to cover free kicks and kickoffs Formerly it applied only to punts.

In the hope of having the try for point after touchdown, constitute more often a triple threat play. The rulemakers have moved the point from which the try is to be made from the three to the two yard line.

The rule to restrict the use of the so-called "screen pass," not regarded as altogether effective last season, was amplified to provide that no player of the side in possession of the ball shall interfere with an opponent until the ball has been touched, except in the case of an actual attempt to catch the ball.

Furthermore, except on passes completed behind the line of scrimmage, such players as are ineligible shall be penalized for interference if they obstruct the right of way of deefnsive players.

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

Really things are happening much too rapidly around here. What with floods, and holidays, and weak bridges and further possibilities, if you know what I mean. It keeps one agog! And what a lot of water has passed under the bridge. Great gobs of alluvia speaking literally, but figuratively a lot of ancient history.

I never saw a place where one, or it, becomes ancient history so rapidly as here at Benning. Really if you don't have some protuberance in the ground named after you thereby getting mentioned on the Fort Benning Fire Control Map, however in the past tense or else buy a blue uniform, nobody remembers you from one bulletin to another.

Out of this forgotten past came the corrected indirect laying machine gun examination papers, Capt. Harry Collins, head man. The papers were placed in our boxes about noon. Personally I decided to eat my lunch first and then look. Really you don't know the half of it. The examination, I mean. My lunch is nothing to speak about publicity. But seriously wives, you should have seen your prides and main supports getting their faces in order while they took a surreptitious look. But when the old S could be seen still waving on high, you could hear P & S (pride & support) borrowing, "What did you get old man?" The only disappointment seemed to be that there weren't enough U's to commisserate with judging from the subject and the subjected, that Harry Collins must be a smart fellow. We put over a barrage under him that was hotsy-totsy, and now his yam.

Also in the dim past of three days ago, the belated cross word puzzle known as a training schedule examination was returned. I never saw so much red in my life, those papers looked like a fireman's delight. Some positively bordered on the course. It would appear that we took most of the course in the last few days, but only in appearance I assure you. We did take a wire and signal communication examination. We had a bit of wire splicing to do, circular in nature. Myers of the Mounted Service must have been dreaming of the great northwest, and fiery steeds, and cinches and Number 3 oats, for he spliced his wire around the chair of the man in front of him. After nearly everyone had gone and Capt. Sweet was about exhausted, Myers began negotiations looking towards Sweet allowing him to turn in both chair and wire, which were now in a complete state of union. Sweet said he was willing to do all he could for a friend or enemy, but that the chair was golden oak and wouldn't match the rest of the furniture in Block 23. It seems that the furniture of Block 23 is the wild grape.

Capt. Hilliard also had an embarrassing time during this exam. In testing one of the phones he had to speak.

Blanton bought a bit of his Alma Mater, fair Harvard, to this exam when as operator, instead of challenging (oh shades of robust sentivels!) with the word "waiting?" he queried, "Are you there, old thing?" Really Stanley.

On Monday when Assembly Hall No. 4 was about to become Ark No. 2, with Major Bull understudying for Noah, a lot of those back seat proletariate bellowed out that they couldn't hear. Major Bull in the same quiet tone, said that there would be a ten minute break. Before the last syllable was out the back rows were empty! In the afternoon Lieut. Byrne in the middle of a deluge called out, "can you hear me back there?" This was too easy, mouths opened wide to emit a mighty bellow but before they could make a sound Byrne went on, "for if you can't, I can talk louder." Only the rain was heard. This boy Byrne will need watching. He seems to be able to talk on any wave length, and at great frequency. He's got military perspective, which is the mental allcation of things military in their proper scale of importance to each other. He has a sense of humor, too. I predict that he will go far, or be hung en route.

We may have had floods this week, but next week we have fifteen minute talks. You know "they snickered when I got up to speak, but from the first word I held them spellbound." I think flabergasted would be a better word. Listen wives this hasn't been a very ludicrous winter for you, but don't let those P & S kid you. You can attend these 15 minute talks. The instructor said so. He also said, in brief, that the talk is to be given something else like this: You come bouncing upon the platform and as the left foot strikes the ground, you smilingly say in a voice as clear as a bell, "my name is Oscar Hockheimer. My subject is sandwiches I have consumed." Then for fifteen minutes without moving a muscle, or caving in at the knees, you radiate personality, ooze facts, drip wit, on, on to a smashing finale that brings them madly to their feet. How mad will depend upon circumstances. Don't miss it wives!

HANDBALL CHAMPS APPEAR

The singles and doubles finals of handball were played off the other day and the conclusion of the games found Bob Fortier, student, victor over young Kammerer, 29th Inf.

In the doubles, Al Jones and Harry Collins, trimmed Pop Goode and Kammerer.

Joe Collins refereed the games.

Handball has become quite a fad among the indoor athletes at the post and plans are now under way for the construction of a new court in rear of the post gymnasium.

Infantry Team Will Train at Fort Benning

POST ATHLETICS RECEIVE GIFT OF $4,000

Fort Benning athletic activities received a strong impetus last week through the action of Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, physical director of Princeton University, who sent a check for $4,000 to the commandant to be used for the promotion of physical training.

Dr. Raycroft is the custodian of the remainder of a fund which was accumulated during the World War for the promotion of athletics and recreational work in the war-time army and which he now administers for the benefit of the peace-time establishment.

Dr. Raycroft has manifested particular interest in the Infantry School and has previously placed large sums at the disposal of post authorities for the promotion of physical training. Some of this money provided for gymnasium apparatus and other improvements to the post gymnasium.

Some time ago, Dr. Raycroft, in order to assure the improvements which are now being made to the gymnasium building, offered to equal any sum to the extent of $4,000, which the War Department might make available for such work. Government funds in the full amount were made available for the repair project. Dr. Raycroft, nevertheless, provided the $4,000 sum which will now be used for other recreational purposes, principally for the promotion of a basic course of physical training at the Infantry School and for providing means for the training of instructors.

Dr. Raycroft is a national authority on physical training. During the war, when it became necessary to call civilian talent to assist in training the millions of men who were called to the colors, Dr. Raycroft was chosen as the head of a commission to direct this work.

CALCULATOR FUND COMPLETE; PHOTOGRAPHS OF DOG SOUGHT

Calculator, once the best-known canine character at Fort Benning, is to have a monument. Four or five years ago, the beloved little vagabond, who hitch-hiked and panhandled his way into the affections of nearly every officer and soldier on the post, was a familiar figure both here and in Columbus. Calculator was nobody's dog in particular; he seemed to belong to the whole command, so the story goes. He could not be a one-man dog for in him was a nomadic streak that urged his restless little body from house to house and from fort to city and back again. Many are the tales of how Calculator waited on "jaw-bone corner" for transportation to wherever his caprice dictated. When an automobile which suited his fancy came along, Calculator would plant himself in the road and refuse to move until the car stopped. Then he would hop in and calmly take his seat as a passenger. Perhaps he would honor his travelling companion by accepting an invitation to dinner, but, the meal over, he would be on his way again. Calculator never accepted too much hospitality from the same household.

When Calculator died in 1925, his hundreds of army friends began a movement to collect funds to erect a monument to his memory. As sometimes happens to such an enterprise, this dragged along for a considerable length of time and has only now reached the stage where the fund is complete and in the hands of Captain Edward E. Walker, who is designing the monument.

Captain Walker's design includes a bronze tablet bearing a likeness of Calculator in bas-relief, and he is now endeavoring to obtain a good picture of the little dog to use as a model for the memorial tablet. Captain Walker requests that persons who have photographs of Calculator send them to him for temporary use to aid in making the design for the monument, and states that all pictures will be returned to their owners.

GLEE CLUB WILL GIVE MIKADO

With one of the largest choruses and principal lists that it has ever effered, the Infantry School Glee Club will present, on the evenings of March 22nd and 23rd, at the Main Theatre, Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado."

As the name indicates, the story is of old Japan, skillfully woven with plot and humor as to please the taste of any listener. Rare musical motifs and elusive bits of comedy flit in and out the piece as it is unfolded.

Most of the costumes of the chorus and principals were brought from Japan and under the direction of the Costume committee, the subtle effect of the Orient, has been caught and all through the two acts and changing scenes the glory of Fuji and the dainty cherry blossom makes a fitting color setting for the vocal presentation.

The cast for this year's offering of the Glee Club has been very carefully chosen, and the leading characters are admirably fitted to portray the individuals they are designed to represent in this classic comic opera.

Hazel Barker as "Yum Yum," Marion Boyd as "Pitti Sing," and Helen Norris as "Peep Bo," play the parts of the three little girls in a most pleasing manner.

Captain Cecil Rutledge, playing the part of "Nanki Pooh," needs no introduction to Fort Benning audiences.

Captain L. R. Boyd, playing the part of "Pish Tush," and Lieut. J. R. Greene, the "Pooh Bah" of the cast, are both well known in dramatic and Glee Club circles. In the characterization of "Ko Ko," the comedian of the play, a new member of the club is presented for the first time in the person of Captain H. B. Crowell, who puts into the production the laugh compelling qualities which are essential to an opera of this kind.

Another new and delightful personality is presented for the first time in the part of "Katisha" which is to be played by Virgil Rothrock, and the dignified "Mikado" is portrayed in a convincing manner by Lieut. A. D. Rothrock.

Most of the action centers around "Nanki Pooh," the son of the "Mikado," who is disguised as a wandering minstrel, and who has fallen madly in love with "Yum Yum," the ward of "Ko Ko." Since "Ko Ko," who is the Lord High Executioner, is also in love with "Yum Yum" and wishes to marry her, the plot presents a number of complications which are worked out in a very unusual manner.

The Glee Club has spared no trouble or expense in the production of this operetta with the result that the garrison will be offered two evenings of unusual and diverting entertainment.

The Infantry School Glee Club has, in the past, produced two other operettes of the Gilbert and Sullivan cycle and it is safe to say that the present offering is the "Magnum Opus" of the five years existence of the Club.

FORT BENNING WOMAN JOINS HOLE-IN-ONE ELECT

During the progress of the flag tournament on the garrison links last Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Evan E. Lewis, wife of Major Lewis, became a member of the elite of golfdom and realized the ambition of every true glofer by making a hole in one. Further distinction is attached to Mrs. Lewis' remarkable performance because she is the first Fort Benning woman to make such a record on the local links.

Mrs. Lewis, at the time she made her phenomenal drive, was a member of a foursome which comprised, besides herself, Lt. Archer, Lt. Curtis and Mrs. Archer, the two latter being paired against Mrs. Lewis and Lt. Archer. The four had reached the fourth hole and Mrs. Lewis drove off for the fifth hole, 107 yards distant. Straight for the distant hole, the ball sped in a graceful arc, dropping on the green a few inches in front of the pin and then rolling into the hole.

News of Mrs. Lewis' feat quickly spread over the links and almost disrupted the tournament as the players surrounded her to offer their congratulations.

The hole-in-one honor was not the only one which Mrs. Lewis took during the tournament, for she and her partner, Lt. Archer, won first prize. For Mrs. Lewis, it was a perfect day.

HORSE AWARDED MEDAL

The bay Government mare, Virginia, of The Infantry School Stables, has been awarded the Horse Association of America Medal as the best playing Fort Benning polo pony of the 1928 season. This medal is awarded every year to the outstanding polo mount of each club in the country.

Virginia, who is a Kentucky bred animal, was trained by Capt. J. D. Forsythe, former Assistant Adjutant of The Infantry School and now a member of the Advanced Class. She is a member of the Freebooters string during the present season. She is a fast, smooth and reliable pony, always a willing player.

RIFLE-SHOTS ARE ASSEMBLING AT POST

Fort Benning will be the training ground of the infantry's rifle team which will be a contender for national shooting honors at Camp Perry, Ohio, this fall. About eighty of the best rifle marksmen of the infantry will be selected to take the three months' intensive training course which will begin at Fort Benning March 19th. Progressive eliminations will reduce this group to about thirty men and from these men will be selected the ten shooting members of the team which the infantry hopes will retrieve the national championship laurels which were lost to the Marine Corps last September.

Fort Benning's unexcelled range facilities, the variable climatic conditions which severely test the rifleman's skill, and the fact that here is the center of all progressive infantry activities, with a large number of experts in technic of weapons, marksmanship, and training methods, are all important factors which led to the choosing of the home of the infantry school as the best place for the training of a championship rifle team.

Major Bradford G. Chynoweth, at present on duty with the infantry board at Fort Benning, has been designated by Major General Robert H. Allen, Chief of Infantry, as captain of the 1929 infantry team. Major Chynoweth, through his duties with the infantry board, is familiar with all the newest developments in small arms, ammunition, and marksmanship training methods. He is a distinguished marksman and has been prominent in competitive marksmanship fields for many years. He was a member of the Cavalry-Engineer team which won the national team match in 1913. In 1921, he was a member and acting coach of the infantry team.

One of Major Chynoweth's training objectives will be to develop a team of rifle shots who will be unaffected by the strain of competition or the rivalry between contenders but will go calmly about their business of making bull's-eyes.

While the group from which the infantry team will be finally selected will comprise about thirty men, there is no limit to the number who may apply and be given try-outs for membership in the preliminary group, according to Captain Joseph L. Tupper, of the department of experiment, who is receiving applications for enrollment in the preliminary group. Any officer or enlisted man who has a good shooting record may compete for membership in the final try-out group which will leave for Camp Perry in June and will remin there until the completion of the matches late in September.

REGIMENTAL CONCERT DELIGHTS AUDIENCE

An enthusiastic audience attended the regimental concert, after the movies last night at the Main theatre. This concert has become an annual affair in the garrison and the mere mention of it is sufficient to fill the big auditorium to capacity.

With over seven hundred and fifty members of the regiment grouped on the stage and the remainder in the seats in front, the audience was treated to an unusual sight.

After the "Kilties" march by the regimental band, the first spiritual was sung, led by Private Hart. Backed by a booming bass contrastic harmony "Study War No No" reacted on the audience and brought out a thunder of appreciative applause as the last notes died away.

Following this Pvt. Carter in his inimitable baritone led "All God's Chillun Got Shoes." Carter opened in a distinct minor which was backed by the regiment in full tone. It is seldom that an audience is greeted by such natural organ-like effects. The pat of feet throughout the theatre, beating time with the marked rythm of the spiritual, alone, gave evidence of the effect that the piece had upon its listeners.

Joseph Stevens, better known throughout the garrison as "Steve," offered the novelty of the evening in the shape of a harmonica band. Under "Steve's" leadership the old mouth organ took on a new meaning and the repeated calls for encores gave proof of the wholesome delight of the audience.

To appreciate the spiritual is to hear them sung by the people who brought them into existence and to know a little of the background from which they have been naturally developed.

Being in fact a folk song, the spiritual traces its origin back to African slave trade in the American colonies. The background is based largely upon a religious strain of a transplanted people giving vent to their feelings through natural religious channels coupled with the native musical ability of the race. The great composer Dvorak realized the value of the spiritual as a true American folk-song and gave much study to them. He announced at the completion of his study that the racial native influence coupled with the basic ability of the race to natural harmonic blending was unsurpassed in the field of vocal music. He was so swept away by the spiritual that he wrote symphony based upon the negro spiritual theme.

The selections in the second part of the program "Its Me Oh Lord," "Steal Away" and "Sine On Me," as rendered by the regiment left no doubt in the minds of the audience as to the truth of the above.

Perhaps the best known of the spirituals to the audience was "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," led by Pvt. Fendale Williams. In this number the real feeling of the spiritual was illustrated. The harmony was improvised and changed as the mood of the singers changed, giving the assemblege the full effect of the emotional effect of these primitive melodies.

Pvt. Alfred Williams, the regimental basso profundo, conducted the mass spiritual singing and brought rounds of applause for his singers. Due to the services of Captain Raymond G. Sherman, formerly in charge of the United States Army band, the regiment has shown marked musical vocal improvement as was evidenced last night.

The program was well chosen and grouped to show the ability of the singers and ably staged and offered by Captain Albert B. Helsley, Regimental Recreation officer.

TECH. SGT. GLOVER RETIRES

As is the custom of the regiment upon such occasions, the regimental officers and members of the organization of the soldier retiring, assembled at a farewell dinner Monday evening in honor of the honorable retirement of Technical Sgt. Benj. L. Glover.

Sgt. Glover, beginning his career in the army with the 25th Infantry, soon transferred to the band and remained with that organization until retirement. He joined the 24th Infantry in the fall of 1914 and has served continuously with that organization until War Department orders terminated his active service.

At the completion of the dinner, Sgt. Glover was presented with the usual regimental gift, a gold watch and chain as a lasting remembrance of his associations with his comrades in the regiment.

By Al

When Gunner DePratt fought Maxie Peltz at Savannah, three months ago, his left arm was badly fractured at the wrist in the second round. With his left useless, DePratt refused to quit. He lost by a knock-out in the seventh round. No one ever heard the doughboy use the injured left for an alibi. He credited Peltz with a victory. When the Gunner's arm was strong again and he was ready to fight he asked for a return match with Peltz. Last Teusday night at Fort Benning, Fightdom saw the fighting doughboy stop Peltz with a single punch in the second round.

Probably "Red" Keenan was through. If he was he came back with a "bang," for the two smashes that finished Benny Reagan in the first round last Tuesday night, carried dynamite and T. N. T.

Saginaw Seeley, Benning middleweight, will fight Ralph Taylor, of LaGrange, Ga., at LaGrange on March 22nd. Seeley has only shown here twice but made a hit with the fans, winning his fights easily.

MAR. 15 TO MAR. 22, INCL.

FRIDAY, MAR. 15

"JAZZ MAD," starring Jean Hersholt with Marion Nixon and George Lewis in a tale of the lure of intriguing jazz and of young moderns keeping pace with syncopated strains. A noted composer comes to America to sell an opera which he has written. He meets with reverses—his daughter and her wealthy fiance become involved in an unfortunate manner. A series of dramatic events lead to a climax that is as pleasing as it is unexpected.

"Cure or Kill." Fables.

SATURDAY, MAR. 16

"HEADIN' FOR DANGER," featuring Bob Steele in a mighty thriller of the bad lands of old Mexico. It is the story of an adventure-eager youth who arrives in disguise at a small Mexican town ten miles from his father's mine. He starts walking the remaining distance; en route he is overtaken by El Toro, notorious bandit, who forces the youth to exchange clothing—clad in the outlaw garb, he is attacked by the federals. An attractive senorita enters most effectively into the story and romance, under most thrilling circumstances, ensues. The youngster risks danger with a smile, plunges headlong into adventure and battles his way through. You'll see him fighting with sword, fist, and a black-snake whip. This is a picture requiring remarkable athletic skill. It is particularly interesting at the present moment, when our sister republic, Mexico, is embroiled in the throes of civil war.

"Collegians No. 10."

SUNDAY, MAR. 17

"THREE WEEK ENDS," starring Clara Bow with Neil Hamilton and Harrison Ford in a new thriller from the pen of Elinor Glyn. Why spend "three we ks" learning to love when "Three Week Ends" teaches "It" in one evening? Clara Bow snaps things up in this story of a little east side girl who gets a job dancing in a cabaret and dances right into the hearts of a rich play-boy and a poverty-stricken salesman—she gets away with a lot on the play boy, but she gives and gives to the salesman. There are pathos, fun, romance and melodrama in this story.

"All Parts." Charlie Chase.

Metro News No. 59.

MONDAY, MAR. 18

"SQUARE SHOULDERS" is described by photoplay as follows: "A splendid picture without a leading woman. The story is simple, direct and full of the natural drama of a boy's hero-worship of his father. A drunken bum, an ex-war hero believed dead, stumbles across his own kid selling papers. Ashamed of his condition, the hobo conceals his identity, but makes the dream of the newsie's life come true. Louis Wolheim gives a penetrating character study of the prodigal father."

"Tarzan the Mighty No. 9."

TUESDAY, MAR. 19

"TENDERLOIN," starring Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel in a highly emotional story involving cabaret life and ganster feuds. It depicts "double-cross" haunts of underworld characters; staging love scenes, battles between police and bandits, schemes and counter schemes between crooks seeking to despoil each other, and the love story of a girl and a boy struggling madly to free themselves from the tentacles of crime.

"A Woman's Man." Arthur Lake.

WEDNESDAY, MAR. 20

"RED LIPS," a Carl Laemmle film featuring Charles Roberts and Marion Nixon. This picture presents the contrast of a youth of unusually high ideals who falls in love with a girl whose philosophy of life is of the most extremely modern type. They are both of college age, the suscept ble kind. The girl's love of pleasure exerts marked influence on her companion. The boy's room mate takes a hand and saves the almost ruined youngsters from themselves. This story is an adaption from a novel by Percy Marks, author of the widely read novel, "The Plastic Age."

Metro News No. 60.

THURSDAY, MAR. 21

"THE SCARLET LADY," starring Lya de Putti with Don Alvarado and Warner Oland. This is a marvelous drama of Russia in the days just previous to and during the sanguinary revolution. A beautiful Russian girl of the lower class is the sweetheart of one of the leaders of the Red forces; during a meeting in a underground rendvous the Cossacks raid the place, the girl escapes, seeking refuge in the bed room of Prince Nicholas—the Prince being amused at the girl's entreaties permits her to remain in the house; eventually she becomes a sort of major-domo; in this capacity, she unwittingly insults the Prince's fiance and is ordered to leave. The Prince realizes that he loves her. Plot, intrigue and counter-plot follows in the throes of the revolution. This is considered an excellent melodrama.

"Casper's Night Out." Toots and Casper.

FRIDAY, MAR. 22

"THE BUTTER & EGG MAN," starring Jack Mulhall with Greta Nissen in a peppy comedy of great Broadway. It is the jocular presentation of a small town sucker with big ideas who buys a theatrical "flop," pits it over, thanks to a bit of luck, and then outslicks the city slickers by selling it back to them. This is the filmization of the stage play by the same name which was presented at Fort Benning last year by the Dramatic Club and successfully succeeded in bringing the house down with continuous roars of laughter.

"Monkey Love." Fables.

Hall, who did a lovely dance, followed by a funny one; Mrs. Robert Chance, who gave a very polished performance in a monologue playlet; Mrs. John K. Rice, whose "Ask Me Another" song and dance included popular songs of some two or three decades. Mrs. Lovett and Mrs. Goode won the Angel Food cakes, Mrs. Curtis and Mrs. Kelley the sponge cakes.

The Literary Club met on last Monday, at which time Mrs. Lee Hester presented a program of regional or folk literature, which was intensely interesting.

Mrs. E. S. March reviewed "Mamba's Daughters" by DuBose Heyward. She has met this brilliant young writer and it was interesting to get her reaction to his personality and his spirituality. She gave a very sympathetic review of this Southern folk tale though she comes from a different section of our county. "Mamba's Daughters" is a stirring novel of the black people and white of romantic Charleston. It has pathos, humor, drama, realism and idealism. It depicts the hopes, yearnings, despairs and successes of black and white alike of three generations. It shows the Wentworth family "quality white folks," the Atkinson family, rich newcomers who have social aspirations in this most aristocratic city, and the way their lives were affected by their relationship to their negroes. The book is full of social and spiritual values and it brings out the race problem showing how much can be done to lift the individual but the great difficulty comes in the elevation of the masses.

Mrs. Ira A. Rader reviewed "Joseph and His Brethren," that powerful epic of the soil by H. W. Freeman, young Englishman. It pictures a farm in Suffolk which has so tremendous a grip on the lives of a father and his five sons that no matter how they try to escape, love for this spot of earth overshadows all else and they return to plow its fields, to care for its lambs, etc. The father is a hard over-bearing unappreciative man who makes the life on the farm very difficult and though the boys, one by one, break away, the sight of fresh furrows in a field, young pigs, or lambs, in short every vista from cab or train window brought a flood of memories of the beloved farm and caused a speedy return to it despite the accompanying hardships. The father, through spite, left the farm at his death, not to his sons who deserved it, but to his young housekeeper-wife, who soon married a worthless fellow and drove the rightful heirs away. Under his trifling regime the farm went to rack and ruin and the brothers returning bought it for Joseph, their young half-brother and began its glorious rehabitation.

Mrs. Hester reviewed "Happy Mountain," a folk novel of the Tennessee Mountains by Mariston Chapman. It has been said that the purest Anglo-Saxons on earth are found in the Southern mountain folk. Cut off by natural barriers from contributory French and German influence, these folk have preserved words of that England of the fifteenth century. Quaint idioms, homemade words and a dialect all their own make up the language of the people of "Happy Mountain." The hero, a young mountaineer, sets out in search of adventure. Still on the Lord Lowe" moved by spring, youth, and poetic longing to see something of the world beyond the mountains sets out in search of adventure. He has his share of vagabonding, learns the scents and colors of the plains and with the coming of winter returns to the mountains and the girl he has left behind. A unique incident in his travels is his visit to a great city library where he is bewildered by the thousands and thousands of books. One who reads this book will be impressed with this incident. The book sets forth the dreams and aspirations that ever have come to men and been denied woman.

The Literary Club will have only one more meeting, the program of which will appear in next week's issue of the News.

Additional Society

Mrs. Harry Dale has been hostess at a series of luncheons and bridge parties on the Wednesdays of the past three weeks. She has honored her mother, Mrs. Linthicum, and a number of guests of friends who are now visiting Benning at these charming parties. Mrs. Dale is a gracious hostess and her parties are always delightful.

All Benning is excited over the approaching performance of "The Mikado" by the Glee Club on March 22nd and 23rd, which is only one week off. The Glee Club is one of the oldest (if not the oldest) of the organizations on the post and each year its performances have been most excellent. Those of us who have been here a long time recall with pleasure "El Bandito," "Pinafore," "Trial by Jury," "Lela Wala"—evenings filled with haunting melodies, colorful costumes, excellent dramatic and vocal expression. "The Mikado," with its picturesque background and its exceptionally gifted "principals" will perhaps eclipse all the former performances of this talented club.

MRS J. B. KELLY

Funeral services for Mrs. J. B. Kelley, who died at the Fort Benning hospital Thursday night, were held at the Protestant chapel Friday afternoon. Chaplain Wright conducted the service. The body was buried at the Fort Benning cemetery.

Mrs. Kelley is survived by her husband, Sgt. J. B. Kelley, of the 83rd F. A., and their little son, John, and her father, A. J. Cameron, of McRae, Ga.

STAMP COLLECTORS ORGANIZE

A group of Fort Benning amateur philatelists met last week and organized a club for the purpose of pursuing their fascinating hobby more efficiently. While the group is still small, it is believed by the club's founders that there are enough people at Fort Benning who are interested in philately to form a good-sized club.

The founders' club is meeting once a week at the homes of its members. The next meeting will be held Friday, March 15th, at 4:15 p. m., at the quarters of Major D. H. Torrey, the club's president. Prospective members are welcome to attend these meetings. There are no dues or expenses of any kind in connection with membership in the club, according to its founders.

Some of those promoting the new organization are: Maj. D. H. Torrey, Maj. E. E. Hume, Maj. M. C. Stayer, Maj. S. A. White, Capt. W. E. Alger, and Lt. L. D. Hixson.

DUTY, HONOR, COUNTRY

Tomorrow, March 16th, will be the one hundred and twenty-seventh anniversary of the approval of an act of Congress which authorized the founding of the United States Military Academy.

The act, approved March 16th, 1802, authorized the president to organize and establish a Corps of Engineers to consist of five officers and ten cadets of engineers and forty of artillery, to be stationed at West Point and to constitute a Military Academy.

The Academy was formally opened on July 4th, 1802, with ten cadets present. During its early years, the Academy had a hard struggle for existence and several times narrowly escaped being abolished.

From the modest beginning of 1802, has developed the splendid West Point of today with its corps of twelve hundred cadets.

During its career of more than a century and a quarter, it has produced most of the country's great soldiers and many of its statesmen and eminent leaders in civil pursuits.

Its cadets come from every part of the country and from every walk of life. It is the home of democracy where the poor man's son and the rich man's son share an equality of position, treatment, and opportunity. Nowhere is equality of obligation and opportunity more firmly established. Nowhere are standards of honor and rectitude higher or more jealously guarded.

It is the pride of a profession which is peculiarly devoted to ideals of duty, honor and service—the ideals which are so tersely expressed by the motto of West Point—DUTY, HONOR, COUNTRY.

ORDER

One of the attributes of the military mind is a sense of neatness and order. This desirable characteristic is more highly developed in some individuals than in others and the manifestations of its presence differ accordingly.

With some, the expression of this sense of tidiness takes form in fastidious attention to external personal appearance. This care makes a pleasing impression on the observer, and if consistently kept up, is usually accepted as an indication of habitual neatness.

True though this evidence may be in most cases, it is by no means infallible, and it is remotely possible that the external neatness exhibited to the public view may be serving as a mask for innate slovenliness.

The real indication of traits of neatness or disorder is expressed by the natural environment of an individual when he is not under constant or critical observation. A disorderly, untidy house and its surroundings are mutely expressive in describing the habits of the occupant. A tidy, orderly house and yard are equally eloquent.

There are quarters in this garrison whose appearance and surroundings reflect the qualities and character of their occupants to such an extent that the orderly-minded observer almost feels that he has had an introduction to them even if they are total strangers. There are others which have no such attractive appeal.

How a military person can tolerate untidiness is beyond understanding, for there is a suspicion which is not without foundation, that something is lacking in the development of the character of an untidy individual, whether civilian or soldier.

Tidiness, like charity, should begin at home.

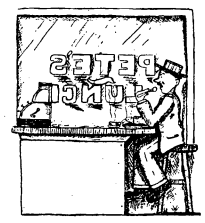
COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

TATERS 'N POSSUM



"Taters 'n Possum." This was the legend chalked on the brick front of a little restaurant on a street a square or two off Broadway. As I paused to read the scribbled announcement and the gaudily painted menus which obscured the front window, my nostrils were assailed by a savory, and to my northern nose, exotic odor.

To one of insatiable curiosity concerning the environment, occupation and viewpoint of the other low, the place looked inviting. The appetizing smell floating through the screen door clinched the invitation and I went in.

I found myself in a modest place which caters to lcerks, workmen and persons of small means. It is not fashionable. There is none of the gewgaw decoration that is usually affected by small obscure restaurants. It is just a clean, business-like arrangement of a place devoted solely to the processes of eating.

Down one side of the narrow room runs a counter at which hurrying patrons may perch on high stools. On the other side, bare of linen, are several white-topped tables whose shining surfaces beckon invitingly to the more leisurely and fastidious customers.

I seat myself on one of the high stools from where I have a commanding view of the whole establishment. Back of the counter, near the window, is a small gas stove on which food is prepared as ordered by the customer. On a shelf nearby repose several piles of substantial-looking pastry and slabs of pie under glass covers. On the wall facing me, is a placard bearing in large letters an announcement that all transactions in this place are on a strictly cash basis. Flanking this card, are others which give brief information concerning combinations and prices of various short orders.

But, tasty as they no doubt are, it is not for its short orders that I have come into the little restaurant; it is for its 'possum 'n taters. And there before me, in a large bake pan on top of the stove, is the browned flesh of the little southern marsupial, steaming in its succulence and garnished with golden sweet potatoes baked in the rich essences which are still oozing from the tender tissue.

Presently a platter (one eats from a platter here) of this southern viand swimming in thick brown gravy, is receiving my undivided attention. Rich, juicy, tender, and done to a turn, it almost melts in the mouth. A gustatory delight; an indefinable gamy, palate-pleasing flavor; something between roast pork and wild fowl. At last the platter is empty. For the moment there is the complete satisfaction of the well-fed man.

"How d'ye' like it, suh?" asks the head waiter, who is also the chef, the dishwasher and the proprietor.

He is flattered by the compliments which exhaust my epicurean vocabulary and is glad to enlighten me when I wish to know the source of supply of his specialty. He explains how the little nocturnal creature is found in hollow trees; how it is hunted at night with dogs and lights, and how, when caught and held by the tail, it feigns death.

"It sulls when you catch it and it won't hurt you none," he confides.

As I lower myself with some difficulty from the high stool, I hope that the creature that I have just dined on will continue to "sull," for there is a growing suspicion that I have made more than a slight error in computing my capacity for 'taters 'n possum.

"Come back and see us again, suh!" the proprietor says cheerily, as he rings up fifty cents.

"Perhaps I shall," I call over my shoulder as I go out.

This is the second of a series of sketches of scenes of quaintness and charm in our neighboring civilian community. The third will appear in an early issue of The Infantry School News.

A FRIEND OF FORT BENNING

Fort Benning is indeed fortunate in having such a friend as Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft, physical director of Princeton University and a national authority on physical training.

Dr. Raycroft's friendship for the Infantry School has been demonstrated repeatedly in a most effective manner. Through his interest in Fort Benning, thousands of dollars have been placed at the disposal of post authorities for the development of physical training of our officers and enlisted men.

The effect of the doctor's friendship for Fort Benning will eventually be felt throughout the army, as he is particularly interested in the development of courses of physical training without equipment for company officers classes.

Physical training necessarily occupies a large part of the life of the American soldier in order to keep him in fighting trim. By providing facilities and instituting methods to make physical activities more attractive, Dr. Raycroft renders a great service to the individuals in the army and to the nation as well.

CANDIDATES FOR INFANTRY RIFLE TEAM ARRIVE AT FORT BENNING FOR TRAINING

The following non-commissioned officers, who will try out for the Infantry Rifle team, have arrived at the Infantry School: Sgt. Wendlandt, Fort Snelling; Sgt. Loper, 28th Inf., Ft. Ontario; Sgt. Lee, 12th Infantry, Fort Howard; Sgt. Cobbler, 38th Inf., Ft. Douglas, and one sergeant from the 4th Infantry at Fort Geo. Wright.

He: I won't graduate from college this year.

She: Why not?

He: I didn't go.

Everybody Sends Their Dry Cleaning
—to—
FORT BENNING DRY CLEANERS

THE TENTS OF KEDAR

A rainy night. We've rattled out to Fort Benning through a drizzle, then bumped and crashed along the incomparable trails they call roads, stood stood about for a little while in the billeting office, received a key to a tent, splashed to the tent. Enter black boy, who builds fire. (Note: This never has become a habit, however, with this particular black boy. Most of the time since we've built our own.

Physical examination day. Wonder whether these durned medicos will find me this time. Heart racing, blood pressure pounding. The medico turns out to be human, as they usually do. He kids us a little, and we kid back and tell a story or two, and the old heart bits its proper stride. O. K. They won't scrap the old hulk this hitch. Well, I'd have hated not to be able to wear this new uniform.

Days pass—several of them. We've been on our first wildcat hunt, and by the grace of God and the good horse Bjornstadt, did not get unloaded. That puts us one or two hundred points ahead of the Prince of Wales. We've heard heard the commandant deliver an address of welcome.

Chuckles from the cat hunt. The Adviser General, Mr. Lenahan of New York, can't keep his horse from kicking Colonel Marshall's steed. Colonel Marshall gets bored after the second or third kick, and mentions it. The Adviser General retires to the rear rank, and mutters he is too doggone busy back in little old New York to learn to ride like these idle army officers. A sweet young thing inquires why he doesn't stay home, in that case. It seems a dandy idea.

Swinging one of these Springfield rifles around. It must be eighteen pounds they weigh, not eight. Dragging a machine gun. Dreaming about cans, plungers and springs and extractors and ejectors and breeches and bolts. A test in platoon drill. Not as dumb as we'd feared, but plenty rusty.

So ends the third week. Well, there are eleven more of them. And somehow, we know already they are going to pass too swiftly.

National Guard Non Coms

Dit.. darr..dit.dit.....Sounds goofey, doesn't it? Well that is just part of a conversation I overheard between two of the members of the National Guard N. C. O. Class. It seems that these boys just get in the habit of talking in dits and darrs. It seems to have given some of them rather strange mental illusions. Mr. Sgt. Charles F. Bricker, of the Md. N. G., was detected gunshoeing around Special Units headquarters the other day, trying to collect longevity pay. Better luck next time, Sergeant.

Since Sergeant Robert Gergel has been promoted to the grade of Technical Sergeant he has been going around the Detachment area uttering sounds that come close to something like this: "Oi, Oi, I'm leffink." When asked why he was "leffink," he replied, "before, I was Sergeant mit oud a doubd, bud now they only hef me a Sergeant only Technicaly, Oi, Oi, I'm leffink, mongee beeziniz on de paper woik, I'm leffink."

Some of these men, when they return to their civilian habitat, will become accupied with radio operation in some one of the radio's many usages in the commercial world. Some of them were radio workers before they came to attend the Communication Course at the Infantry School. These men will be better fitted for their same positions, if not for higher ones, than when they came here. Others will probably tie square knots in the nerve system of the Western Union system. These will be the men who strive to perfect themselves in the wire section. They will learn to diagnose telephone trouble, locate it, and remedy the trouble and its cause.

Some of the promotions follow: Sgt. Carlton A. LeBeau, N. Y. N. G., to Mr. Sgt; Sgt. Carl B. Manley, Vermont N. G., to Mr. Sgt.; Sgt. Orville L. Walters, California N. G., to Mr. Sgt.; Sgt. Robert Gergel, Penn. N. G., to Mr. Sgt.; Corp. Robert E. Booker, Mississippi N. G., to Sergeant; Corp. Elmer A. Brittingham, Maryland N. G., to Sergeant; Private Wilfred H. Waycott, Mo. N. G., to Corporal; Private Martin L. Dalton, Virginia N. G., was also promoted to the grade of Technical Sergeant.

Hqrs., Hqrs., Btry and Combat Train

Kid Pacetti, of the coal-dust squad, has just returned from a wild and hectic night in the city. He does not remember clearly what it all was about, but he knows he stayed in the best hotel in Columbus—in fact, its owned and operated by Columbus. He says its very modern. Fireproof, bell-hops with blue uniforms and brass buttons, and a special taxi, with attendants. What more can any man want? He says that the funny part of it is that he spent the night in the place and did not have any baggage. And he didn't have to pay until he checked out.

Doug and T. Bond have paid the first couple of payments on a hot Chrysler roadster, over the week-end. Of course they haven't any papers to show for it. Which all goes to show all contributions are gladly accepted; smaller ones in proportion.

Cpl. Arnold, our knock 'em dead sheik Cpl., is confined to the hospital with a case of flu. Only hope you shall soon be back with us, Arnold, to share Cpl. Cole in the duties of city social activities.

Pvts. Wilson and Langford gave the ladies a treat Sunday by visiting Columbus. They were seen on the corner of 12th and Broad, looking over traffic.

Another member has been added to the Scorpions Club. With the arrival of Pvt. E. Bond, formerly of Fort Sill. Pvt. Bond comes to our fold with a very nice record of some ten years' service, being discharged as Cpl., Sgt. and Staff Sgt. Not such a bad recruit to have, and from all indications, some stripe holers had better begin showing some speed to keep the skids from under 'em as Bond is nothing else but a class "A" soldier from all angles. McCallum says that Bond looks like a curver from Curvers-ville.

Benny Powell was in much despair last week-end. Upon going to town he found his home all wrecked and no forwarding address was left. He started a wild hunt for the missing link, that would have been a credit to Sherlock Holmes. All in vain, but suddenly the clouds that had been hovering for some 20 hours were lifted by the arrival of a letter; the sun came out, and everything was fine. Ain't love just the grandest thing?

Sunday morning the old dope bucket was completely turned over by the defeat of a fast, cleverly played basketball game with Battery "C" to the tune of 19-18. Seems like another old cup for the fighting gang. When cups are in sight these boys are right in there to the last minute fighting and showing why Headquarters Battery has so many cups.

Cpl. Cormier is now on the sick list. We all hope to see you out again soon, Cormier, and as usual showing the old spirit.

REBUILDING BUCKEYE-KEYSTONE ROADS, WASHED OUT BY FLOOD

For the past week a daily detail of 125 men from the Twenty-ninth Infantry has been repairing and rebuilding the roads from the First Division road to Harp's pond, which were washed out by the recent downpour of rain.

The work, under the direction of Major E. D. Barlow, is progressing very rapidly and it is thought will be soon completed. The road will be stronger and better than ever before and it is thought will bear up under unusual weather conditions or heavy traffic.

SPECIAL UNITS NEWS

Headquarters Company

The baseball bug has left its mark upon the company and daily and gayly they can be seen stirring and erring for a berth on the company team. "Bucky" O'Neil says they couldn't get a berth on the Central of Georgia. Wal, now, I don't know about that. "Slim" Cameron shut his eyes yesterday and smacked one over by the "skimmers" coal box; Montana is about to produce a big league player by the looks of that wallop; atta boy Mon-taaaa-na.

"Red" Watson was going to take a stack in the navy but he saw where they prefer Barrymores' Gilberts and Arrow Collar ad men. He said that he might get sea sick so thought he would stay in the army.

Well, J. D. Grace, as recreation room orderly and Pete Coleman intending to re-enlist, what could possibly go wrong with the country now? Oh yes, and "Slim" Cameron is about to make his debut into the leagues.

The company journeyed to the 1st Gas Co. the other day to get the well known third degree, otherwise known as "Tear Gas" test. We took it all right, no blindfold either. Cpl. Devoice said that he didn't cry that much at his mother-in-law's funeral. "Stocky," he said that his wife didn't cry that much when she wanted a fur coat; and Pvt. Robertson says, "Ooh, what an eye wash."

In closing, we wish to announce that the "Barber Shop Quartet" will sing that hard boiled ballad, "You Could Tell She Was a Soldier's Daughter, For She Was Always Up in Arms," words and music by Ima Nutt, Eyetalian Komposer.

(Bull Dog Edition): "Duke" Parvin says that he is going to the Royal, get right up in the front row and cough just as much as possible to see if they will request him to go to the box office and get a carton of Old Golds.

Howitzer Company

Sgt. Tom Tompkins has put the quietus on the bill before Congress for the last 53 years. I believe it is bill No. H2. It states that all enlisted men should be retired at the end of 25 years with the colors.

Sgt. Tompkins entered in the old soldier race and did purposely and with premidiated action run 50 yards and turn a flip-flop without touching the ground and return to the starting point in the phenomenal time of 13 seconds. Legionaires take notice to such hindrance to much needed legislation.

Our chariot won first place for simply being a chariot that must have moved Ceasar in his grave. In other words it was a chefdoeuvre.

A very enjoyable dinner was served to the company with the stirring strains of the company orchestra filling the atmosphere. By the way this organization has the only one in the regiment, composed solely of its own members. The instruments are various and unique, consisting of drums, small, medium and large, fiddles, of various makes(mostly home made), harmonicas, jews harps, combs, bells, mandolins, etc. Sgt. Yearty is symphony leader.

The boys in the hospital were well remembered on that day. Baskets with turkey and the trimmings, also fruit and smokes were moved by hand into positions favorable for attack by the men of the Howitzer Company sick on that day. Owing to a couple of operations going on at the hospital on that day the orchestra could not participate to lift the morale of the attacking force.

FIRST BATTALION ITEMS

Company "C"

Sergeant McFarland can be seen most any morning on the bayonet course giving Private Fullard instruction in the gentle art of "bavoneteering." Rumor has it that these two close buddies are about to leave for Mexico.

Our well-known Supply Sergeant, ex-Corporal Hayes, injured his finger on the bayonet course. However, he is still able to write to K. C. so we believe after all the wounded finger is only a blind to keep off the bayonet course

Everyone is wondering what has come between the two close buddies, Manhart and d'Entremont. They haven't been to town together for over a month. Guess we will have to ask Margaret about this.

It is noted that our well-known tailor, William Kuminski, has been wearing colored glasses. Some one asks, how come? We finally saw he had one black eye and he didn't step on it either.

Our barber, better known as B. L., came in from bayonet exercise last Saturday with one leg shorter than the other. After resting a few minutes he dressed all up in civvies and hied himself to town. Monday he was on the job again as spry as an old fox. It seems funny how he gets that way. Some say he sleeps too long in a short bed. I give up.

Sergeant Decuir would like to know why every bayonet season our one and only "Pug" Dey gets water on the knee. Convenient, isn't it, "Pug."

Corporal Aiken is worried because the captain set the age limit for bayonet at thirty-five and he lacks only one year of being under the limit. Cheer up, Aiken, you will be over the age limit by the time you complete this enlistment.

Sergeant Brown, who recently stated his sixteenth year on the same warrant as Sergeant, will be able to show the recruits some of the tricks on the bayonet course before the season is over. Keep it up, Jimmie, you will soon have the range to show the boys, too.

SECOND BATTALION ITEMS

Headquarters Co., 2nd Battalion

Sgt. Gilbert N. Stragand and Cpl. Bill Smith have at last received Chicago on their radio. The guns were heard all the way to the third floor. All jokes aside, the boys did get England and it was as clear as a bell. Congratulations men, some radio.

The rug in Cpl. Holland's room sure makes the place look like home. All he needs now is a Morris chair and a smoking jacket and we can put him on the retirement list.

Sgt. Lee Wadford has, for the past few days, been scrubbing the floor of his room, trying to get it white. He said that from the looks of the thing, the concrete was mixed with tobacco juice. No doubt.

Sgt. Kjelstrom was sweating blood the other day. He was down on his hands and knees holystoning his floor. He agrees with Sgt Wadford about the floor being mixed with the juice of that well known plant of the nicotine variety.

Sgt. Bennett is the original thorn. He has been going to Columbus and, after capturing the hearts of many young school girls, he calls them up and tells them he is restricted and cannot come down there to see them. Shame on you Sgt., you cruel heart-breaker.

Pvt. Peed joined a pressing club the other day and he forthwith took all of his earthly possessions to the tailor shop and had them creased. He even wanted the breeches pressed that he was wearing.

Cpl. Udell, our grammarian, and Cpl. Elkins, our great student of etiquette, have condescended to have a Pvt. in their room. He, meaning the Pvt., is none other than Ryals, a believer in shrubbery.

Pop Henley made a ten pound sandwich yesterday and took it up to the garret with him. He musn't be coming out for a few weeks from the looks of things. Starting to be a hermit.

Red Carpenter is wondering what is written in the birthday almanac on page nine. Ask your scribe Red, he knows.

Cpl. James Roscoe Johns, another Shriek (Shiek) has been letting his appearance deteriorate. He is letting his shoes wear out so he can get on his feet again. Here's sympathy, friend.

Now folks the writer has the first invitation to the theatre in three years and rather than see it wasted he will accept.

—J. R. Patterson.

Company "E"

It has been reported that Corp. Bean Pole Millikan has been renting his right arm out to boys in the company for the purpose of boning their rifle stocks.

Zed C. Buford, our mess sergeant, is sure hitting the bayonet dummies in form this year and says he can make it in 35 flat with 100 per cent.

We all regret that Sgt. "Fat" Franz has to do guard Saturday and Sunday; he said if they had just waited a couple of days longer he would have been o. k. for he goes on special duty Monday with the post baseball team.

Sgt. Arevalo should get honorable mention in this contest, as he is one of the hardest and most consistent dry shooters in the army.

Sgt. Easterwood is on his way to Co. A to see Sgt. Sheriff about a competition drill between the first platoon E Co. and the crack drill platoon of A Co. We feel superlatively confident of the result of the contest—in our favor.

Uncle Zed Buford, our mess sergeant, has returned. Glad to see you back Zed, although Swede Oikari did exceedingly well in your absence. Still once in a while he got his wires crossed during his tour of duty and had on his bill of fare, stewed door knobs, boiled G. I. cans, cosmolene and other such dainty tid-bits. All that saved us from his machinations was the careful overseeing of one of the cooks, who looked out for our welfare.

—I. M. Y.

Company "F"

This organization has been very unfortunate in loosing two of our best men: Pfc. Earl Budatz and Pvt. Joseph B. Cox, via the purchase route. These two were very fine soldiers and in addition, Pvt. Cox was a fine football player. The whole company is wishing these two the best of luck in civilian life.

Boy, oh boy! Company "F" sure can pluck the "bulls eye" with the .22 cal. rifle. Our team won first place in the regimental competition meet. They were undefeated.

Company "G"

Well, we have a fine volley ball court. The men are turning out strong to make the company team. We would like to play other teams in the post. Just call 526, Company "G," 29th Infantry and ask for Sgt. Simpson and we will step right out with you.

We have two new mechanics in the company, Pfc. Vicknair and Pvt. Medaries. We are glad to have these men on the job.

Recruit Tuten said to Cpl. Spires, "Say Cpl., don't they have what you call a drag-hunt here in the post." Cpl. Spires replied, "Yes, but why do you ask that, Tuten?". Tuten said, "Well, you see I lost my O. D. shirt last week."

—Warset Simpson.

Company "H"

It has been noticed lately that the rifle companies have started their bayonet practice. We wish them luck and hope that they make as good a showing as last year.

While they have been taking their strenuous exercise in one fashion ours has come in another. Captain Nichols has inaugurated a series of practice marches with full "humps." Finished the second this A. M. When the company returned to the barracks there was a contest to see who could approximate the number of miles marched. The course had previously been clocked with a speedometer. The guesses ran from five to fifteen miles. The answer was 9.3.

There is a foot inspection after each of these hikes. Application has been made to the 1st Gas Regiment for gas masks to be worn when the dogs are unleashed. Strangely, no one seems to envy the inspecting officer his job.

Sgt. DePratt, the redoubtable "Gunner," is training steadily for his bout of the 12th. We hope that by the time this is published that he will have knocked Maxie Peltz for one of those widely known rows.

THE CAMPAIGN OF POURQUOI CHERIE

Monograph Series 3-69 M

(By Lt. Col. A 1 Bn.)

Lange pp. 23 (1) "The Psych. of the Salmon"

Gentlemen—I will endeavor to give you a picture—or at least a postal card of one of the most brilliant Campaigns in the History of War, the Campaign of Pourquoi (pron:poorkwa sherry) (1) with its illustrious opponents Colonel Gisement and Major Matters. Gisement, one of the greatest Captains of all times was placed in supreme command of the native troops. By so doing he violated immediately the Principle of the Mass (2) since he only obtained one squad after months of expensive recruiting.

Genesis VI-9 (2) & Ann. Rept. of the Stand. Oil Co. of N. J.

His opponent, Major Matters had taken the Co. Officers Course at a famous Service School, at Ft. B....g (?) and was consequently (of course! naturally!! no doubt!!!) an exceptionally well trained Officer. He will hereinafter be referred to as the party of the second part or Maj. M., abbrev. M. M.

Diff & Int Calc. III pp. 7 (3)

M. M. finally succeeded in collecting his Staff S-1, S-2, S-3, S-4, S-5, S-6, S-7 etc. [S(S-1)2—12]3)2(3). The Siamese Military Observer who followed this Campaign reported subsequently to his Government, that "the Organization of M. M. was believed to be slightly top-heavy" (4).

Fujiama pp. 23 (4)

The Plan of the Opponents was characterized by great simplicity. Gisement decided on a wide turning movement, a double envelopment and a frontal attack, with the main effort most any place.

Ryder Vol. X pp. 23 (5)

M. M.'s early training, however (Ft. B....g) had given him a preference for enveloping the left flank, which amounted to a deep and violent passion. (5) For the present, however, he decided on the most general strategic movements imaginable, designed to avoid the enemy. THIS MARKS AN EPOCH MAKING DEPARTURE IN THE CONDUCT OF WAR! This grandiose conception of totally ignoring and avoiding the Enemy, in the initial stages, resulted in Gisement's marching all over the Country and fatiguing his men thoroughly. (6)

Liston. Tec. Princ. Vol V p. 12 (6) Pol. Gazette. No. 11 (7)

The military Editor of the "Police Gazette' stated that "the real objective of M. M. was to tire out his opponent." (7) (I quote from Lewis "Boudoir glimpses of the Near-Great"—on account of his unique methods, M. M. upon retirement, was engaged by the Goodrich Rubber Co. of Akron, Ohio."—)

The ensuing Campaign, which was to follow and—finally—culminate in the Battle of Pourquoi Cherie, is extremely complicated and consisted of an endless series of marches as shown in Overlay 11 Special Map. VII. The march performance of Gisement is one of the most brilliant pages in the Annals of Mod. History (8) His heroic troops were able to maintain a rate of 1¼ miles per hours, with 30 min rest periods. It should be noted, at this point, that the heavy hob-nails of the troops frequently obliterated the initial point, into a soft pudgy mass. This caused endless delays. They were frequently unable to clear it; the place was just littered with Company equipment: wardrobe trunks, manicure sets, hip-flasks etc. etc. (9)

Beebe pp. 345 (8)

Lewis (9) "Intim. Chats w. or w. o."

In June, however, Gisement received peremptory orders from his Home Government, in Confidential Radiogram 4789 Ser.- D-27"

Quote. Find the Enemy stop fix him stop fend stop fight stop unquote" (10)

Cook Ph. D. Vol VI pp. 23 (10)

By wide turning movements he managed to surround the evasive M. M. and pin him to the ground, near the village of Pourquoi Cherie (poorkwa sherry) (11)

Lange (11) "Sent. & am. Diction"

The terrain in which this decisive battle was fought is difficult indeed: there was broken—or slighted dented—ground, interspersed with merchantable timber; the whole place was littered with co-ordinates, bench-marks and control points, with an occasional 50 ft contour thrown in—My Goodness!—it was just awful! (11½)

Stivers pp. 67 "Notes on Home Cooking" (11½)

The opposing forces were arranged in two roughly parallel lines—there was nothing lady-like about those lines! The flanks were refused, in fact, it was a characteristic of those units to refuse a great many things.—A frontage of 157¾ Yds were assigned to each man; consequently, they might be considered as slightly over-extended. The Boundaries between Squads, however, were carefully outlined with white tape; the limiting points were shown by flags, during the Day, and, at night, by green Lanterns. Morale was high, at times, reaching an elevation of 20 feet.—(12)

Shamotulski Vol. X pp. 69 (12)

After a 2¼ min study of his Map, Gisement decided to envelop the enemy's left. Now M. M. had the same happy thought! This resulted in a rotary movement, known hereafter as the "tactical pin-wheel" (!) (See Glossary) This was a clear-cut application of the principle of Surprise; they never got over it.

Considerable delay was occasioned, however by the rebellious attitude of certain sub-ordinate Comdrs, who returned the written Attack Order, for correction, because the term "main effort" was mentioned. (13)

Stephens "Songs of Rebellion." Vo. V (13)

After revolving around each other for four days, both sides decided to suspend hostilities and draw Cards, for the Winner. Gisement had an extra Ace up his sleeve.

LESSONS

A conservative view would indicate that both opponents violated every known principle of War and personal Hygiene. It was something awful! The spelling and pronunciation of Pourquoi Cherie, in dispatches, was especially faulty. Both leaders, however, were eminently successful in applying the principle of Surprise in turning each other's left. This was terrible and should never have been done; it borders on immorality. I thank you for your kind attention!

GUNNER DEPRATT SCORES KNOCKOUT OVER MAXIE PELTZ IN SECOND ROUND

Red Keenan Stops Benny Reagan in First Round of Semi-Final

One of the largest assemblage of fight fans in Benning ring history, filled the garrison gymnasium to over-flowing last Tuesday night to witness the second meeting of Gunner DePratt, army ace, and Maxie Peltz, phenominal Pacific coast fighter, who has been cutting a wide swath among the middleweight division during the past winter.

Smarting under the sing of a knock-out at the hands of Peltz at Savannah, Ga., four months ago, DePratt had begged for another chance. Before meeting Peltz, Gunner had fought his way to the top among the best boys of the middleweight division in the South, piling up an impressive string of knock-out victories. His knock-out at the hands of Peltz was one of the biggest ring upsets of the season. When the fighters were rematched the bout attracted wide attention with the result that fight fans from far and near assembled at the Upatoi station to watch Tuesday night's battle.

Peltz entered the ring first and was given a big hand by the large crowd. A mighty roar went up as the Doughboy Ace entered the ring. After the usual examination of taped hands, seconds quickly tied on the gloves, both boys came to the center of the ring for the referee's instructions and then returned to their corners to await the bell.

Both boys sparred for an opening. Peltz landed a sweeping left to Gunner's stomach. Gunner mised a terrific right to the jaw. They clinched and wrestled into the ropes. Peltz landed a high right to Gunner's head as they broke. Gunner set Maxie back with straight left jabs to the face. Unable to get by the Gunner's tantalizing left, Maxie resorted to tactics and began dancing around the Gunner. Sensing an opening Peltz rushed but a right cross staggered him into the ropes as the round ended.

Both boys came out fast in the second. Peltz landed another sweeping left to the doughboy's mid-section. A short right sent Peltz into the ropes. Peltz came off the ropes like a thunderbolt, only to catch the Gunner's left full on the button. At the count of eight Maxie lurched to his knees only to go floundering and fluttering over the ring floor very much like a chicken with its neck broken. It was ten minutes later before Peltz knew that the fight was over.

Red Keenan Wins

In the semi-final, Red Keenan, bantamweight champion of the 4th Corps Area, met Bennie Reagan, of Atlanta. This fight was watched with interest by many of the old fight fans who remembered the last meeting of this pair of bantams here two years ago when, after nine fierce rounds of fighting, Keenan was forced to quit when an ugly cut over his eye was opened up and started spurting blood. Tuesday night Red reaped revenge in large quantities.

With the tap of the gong, Bennie was across the ring and after the red-head. Bennie jabbed a left to the face, but Keenan ducked under a terrific right and drove his own good right to Bennie's stomach like a rifle shot. Bennie crumpled under the blow but staggered up at the count of nine. Working like a big leaguer, Keenan feinted with his left and then drove a smashing uppercut to Bennie's chin that lifted him off the canvas. The referee could have counted one hundred and ten.

Prelims

For six rounds Doubting Thomas and Ginger Jernigan, welterweights, fought without either backing up or giving ground. This fight was the kind that fans talk of for days afterwards. Both boys are fast, clever and hard hitters and this was by far the best six rounder ever witnessed here. We are still trying to agee with the referee, who gave the decision to Jernigan, but we just can't see anything better than a draw or if a favorite, Thomas.

Just got to hand it to Grumpy Gordy. For four rounds he withstood the cyclone rushes of Bull Montondon, and time and again Grumpy dropped wallops on Bull's jaw that caused that fighter's knees to buckle. On the other hand Bull was right in there willing and anxious, rushing and flailing and the crowd was highly pleased when both fighter's hands were raised.

Learning that those big shoulders of Herring's carried worlds of dynamite when a long right put him to sleep in their first meeting, Seaweed Wilson, nifty doughboy lightweight, changed his style of battle in their second meeting which took place at Fort Benning Tuesday night and handed Herring a drubbing he will always remember. Out generalling his slower opponent and making him miss wild swings time and again, Wilson wound up by dropping his man twice in the final round, winning a neat decision and the bell robbing him of a K. O.

Young West, a pupil of Dick White, of Columbus, promises to be heard from in the future. In his first fight here againnt Gouchenauer, of the 29th Infantry, the lad from the Electric City took an easy decision. The long range boy is by far the best looking prospect to show in these parts since the days when Dick White was burning up the middleweight division.

Tuesday night's fight program was one of the best ever witnessed here and the crowd was a record breaker. Why? Because the brand of fighters that represent the army colors and the fighters that are booked here are fighters that fight, and that is what brings joy to the heart of the fight loving fight fan.

INFANTRY SCHOOL BASEBALL SQUAD OPENS TRAINING

First Game Will Be Played Against Foxes at Gowdy Field March 27th

In answer to Captain J. J. Wilson's call for candidates, thirty ball tossers reported for baseball practice last Monday afternoon. It is too early for comment on the playing ability of the new men who are out this season but several of the youngsters have shown good form during the light practice that is being held during the first week.

A likely-looking string of slab artists reported Monday. Several of the Doughboys' star hurlers will probably not report for practice before next Monday, among them being McGaha, Roosma, Tolle and Perkins. With prospects of at least one good twirler among the new material and with four regulars of last season back in uniform, the pitching for this season should be well cared for.

Supporting this nifty string of twirlers, the Doughboys are blessed with a wealth of catchers. McCarthy and Tommie Thompson rank second to none in this neck of the woods, while the addition of three new candidates who promise to be in the fight for a regular berths, further strengthens the receiving end.

The infield and outfield positions are going to be hotly contested and to the player that can sock the old apple the hardest and farthest will go the berth, for Capt. Wilson is of the old school and his motto is "Make the pitcher put it in there, and when it is in there hit it." It takes hits to make runs and it takes runs to win ball games.

One of the first men to arrive at the field in uniform last Monday afternoon was Benning's Grand Old Man of Baseball. Sergt. Logan Duff, with twenty-eight seasons of baseball to his credit, was back in harness and feeling fit as a fiddle. Sgt. Duff will assist Captain Wilson in coaching the young twirlers and if necessary the "Old Man" can still step out on the hillock and do his stuff.

The first game of the season will be played at Gowdy Field March 27th between the Doughboys and the Columbus Foxes. This will be the first of a seven-game series betwen the teams. The Infantry School baseball schedule has not yet been completed but it is an assured fact that the schedule this season will afford plenty of baseball and tough opposition.

SOLDIER-FARMERS DELAYED IN SPRING PLANTING BY INCLEMENT WEATHER

Coming out of their winter hibernation, the men on special duty at the 29th Infantry Regimental garden have for the past month been earnestly scanning the weather reports impatiently waiting for a break in the almost continuous down-fall of rain which has been sweeping the region for the past few weeks, in order that they might begin spring ploughing.

Not only are the soldier-farmers worried about this interruption of their favorite pastoral pursuit, but the mess-sergeants of the regiment are all anxiety, for they cannot forget those delectable fish dinners which have been lost to them forever by the bursting of Harp's pond and fear that Jupe Pluvius will also deprive them of the luscious melons, cantelopes, tomatoes and particularly that odoriferous member of the lily family, "alium cepa," or in other words the onion, to which the men of the regiment are so partial. Much could be said in justification of this much maligned vegetable which is so publicly scorned, and consumed with such avidity in private, but that will be left for more facile pens.

The men working in the garden under the supervision of Corporal Nathan Murphy, Service Company, have for the past few years been producing banner crops and it is hoped that despite the handicap under which this rainy spell has placed them, this year will be no exception. Those sharing in the fruits of the harvest are, besides the companies of the regiment, those officers and non-commissioned officers who have contributed to the regimental garden fund.

29TH INFANTRY AND FREEBOOTERS WIN AT POLO

Last Sunday's polo games resulted in victories by the Freebooters over the Students, score: 9-8, and by the 29th Infantry over the 83rd F. A., score: 5-4. As the scores indicate the games were hard fought and close.

The teams which lined up Sunday were, in general, those which will probably play in the Senior Division of the Garrison Polo Tournament, which begins on March 24. These teams are as follows:

Freebooters: 1, Lt. Lockett; 2, Capt. McClure; 3, Maj. Lyman; 4, Capt. Sweet.

29th Inf.: 1, Lt. Skelton, 2, Capt. Halloran; 3, Lt. Jacobs; 4, Lt. Van Houten.

83rd F. A.: 1, Lt. Grubbs; 2, Lt. Guernsey; 3, Capt. Crane; 4, Lt. Bartlett.

Students: 1, Capt. Forsythe; 2, Lt. Smith; 3, Capt. Burress; 4, Capt. Harris.

In Sunday's game for two chukkers, the Students used another team, as follows: 1, Capt. Leuking; 2, Lt. Jeter; 3, Lt. Royce; 4, Lt. Cornog.

The Garrison tournament will have a Senior and Junior Division. The dates set at present for the Senior Division are March 24, 27 and 31; for the Junior Division the dates are April 3 and April 7.

The competition will probably be closer this year than ever before. The majority of the practice games in the past few months have been close as to score and all the teams seem to be well matched.

The drawings for the tournament dates have not been made but will be announced in the next issue of the News.

REGIMENTAL SMALL-BORE BORE RIFLE TEAM FIRES TWO MORE MATCHES

Thursday and Friday, March 14th and 15th, saw the strong regimental small-bore rifle team of the Twenty-ninth Infantry again in action, their opponents being the 10th Infantry and 26th Infantry teams.

The match fired on Thursday was against the powerful aggregation of the 10th Infantry, Fort Thomas, Kentucky; that on Friday was with the riflemen of the 26th Infantry of Plattsburg Barracks, New York.

As the matches were fired on the home ranges of the contesting teams the results are not yet known, but the "demonstration" boys are not worrying about the outcome.

The team has been reorganized since firing its match with the 16th Infantry and for the past few days has been practicing hard for these last two matches of the season.

During the practise sessions, several fine scores have been fired, the best of these being made by Sgt. C. M. Hopkins, who scored 377 from a possible 400.

The men who now compose the squad are: Sergeants C. M. Hopkins, E. C. Davis, E. F. Davis, W. C. Kjelstrom, L. A. Beck and David Hamscher; Corporals H. F. Hicks, Clyde Taylor and S. A. Clay.

AMATEUR TOURNAMENT CONTINUES

The Post Amateur Boxing tournament, which has been running every Wednesday night since the 6th of February, furnished seven thrilling encounters among the feathers, middles and light-heavies, on Wednesday night, March 13th. The simon-pures show better form as the tournament progresses, each bout of three rounds being a slam bang affair. It will be a long time before a better bout than the Macksinowski-Gable scrap will be seen. It took four sessions to decide this affair, which went at a terrific pace every second of the go.

The results of Wednesday, March 13th, are as follows:

Feathers

Winner, Parks, "A" Tanks; loser, Koski, Hq. 83rd F. A.

Winner, Luce, "B" 83rd F. A.; loser Scerovitch, "A," 29th Inf.

Winner, Killeen, "A," 7th Engineers (Bye.)

Middleweights

Winner, Maskinowski, "G," 29th Inf. loser, Gable, "C," 29th Inf.

Winner, Thompson, "A," 7th Engrs.: loser, Poe, "H," 29th Inf.

Winner, Poche, Hq. 15th Tanks (Bye)

Lightheavies

Winner, Costello, "F," 29th; loser Garris, "B," 29th.

Winner, Holyfield, "C," 29th; loser, Hooper, "G," 29th.

Winner, Osteen, "B," Tanks; loser, Lewis, I. S. D.

On March the 20th the semi-finals will be staged, which, judging by the classy boxers still in the going, assures a close run for the cup. The finals are scheduled for March 27th.

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

The subject that impressed me most this past week was equitation. One might think I had a leaning for this horsey stuff since I have always spoken very feelingly and very highly of it. I shall continue to speak equally as feelingly of it, but not so highly. To tell you about the course. I belong to the retired group, which is the group to which is assigned those who have retired from something. Thus we have an ex-artilleryman, an ex-scout, an ex-tanker, an ex-sailor and so forth. In addition to that we have the principle of mass, or rather the principal masses. In the order of rank, Capt. Alger, and Lt. Hollister. What the order is on the hoof I don't know. But to get back to this riding business. We are under the tutelage of Major Smith. On Monday, before our lesson began, he announced that he was going away for a couple of weeks. I can say that the ride he gave us, he may be away but he won't be forgotten.

The next is a request number. I have been asked to publicly award the class decoration, that of the fur lined sighting bar, to Capt. Bolte for being one of the best instructors the class has had. Anyone who can enliven the slumber hour for that bunch has mob leadership.

As predicted in the announcement of last week, the 15 minute talks are the sensation of the year. I would like to say here that we got off to a large start in this subject by hearing certain members of the advanced class give their monographs. They were excellent and deserved the big hand they got. The officer who had difficulty in swallowing, and the one who perspired copiously we gave the biggest hand to. Their monographs may not have been any better but they seemed more natural to us.

Over in the company officers fifteen minute talks everybody gets a hand and then the rending begins. Wives, you can rest assured that everything you wanted to tell him about his little speech but didn't have the heart to, has been told him and how! Limb from limb and the bones picked over. Maybe you better not come after all. Just believe or try to believe as much as you can of whatever he tells you about how the fellows received it.

Turning to other trials, I understand the Glee Club has Pat Crowell for a director, also that their show is the Mikado and not the World War and, and we are glad to say it too, they are turning out some great stuff.

A FEW NOTES FROM THE MEDICAL DEMONSTRATION DETACHMENT

The members of the Demonstration Detachment are enjoying excellent music these nights, as they have just bought a new Crosley Showbox radio. It sure looks as though the whole detachment are "radio bugs," as one of our sergeants stayed up until seven o'clock last Sunday morning to get K. Z. K. Z.

Scopes (Bell) of the Demonstration Detachment says if he had a pencil and some paper he would be able to figure out these new setting up exercises and coordination drills.

Sergeant Norville, who was assigned to the Demonstration Detachment a short time ago, says that the only thing missing to make the outfit be like Carlisle is the rifles. Cheer up, Sergeant, we are living in hopes that we will get them.

Corporal Yutmeyer sure thinks he is the whole cheese since he has sprouted out in the new blue uniform. At that we don't blame you corporal, as it sure is nice.

Pvt. Joyner was heard to say that he will buy one of the blue uniforms when the privates get the stripes down the leg like the N. C. O.'s. Go to it John, you might make it yet.

Pvt. Davis, of the Demonstration Detachment, who has been on a furlough at Pensacola, Florida, says it is nice to be back as they did not meet him with a band.

Thanks for the oranges, Crews. We don't forget our old pals and we are glad to see our old friend don't forget us. We wish we could be down in the land of sunshine and alligators with you.

Say Mabel, you had better stay away from Pete or else you are going to be led astray.

Corporal Yutmeyer wants to know why we have an organization day.

We wonder what was wrong with Private Vose the other night, as he sure did have a brannigan for Giggling Gertie.

Privates Hughes used to throw the discus for his Alma Mater but Private Joyner thinks that all he ever threw was the bull.

Private Thompson is still putting on avoirdupois and he has gotten to the stage where he claims he no longer sees his feet. When asked why he didn't diet, the darn fool asked what color are they now?

Cpl. Yutmeyer — Say, Scopes (Pvt. Bell) what is the difference between this cat and the planet Mars?

Scopes—I don't know, what is it?

Cpl. Yutmeyer—I know this cat is inhabited.

Scopes says that he believes that he can take the static out of the radio by running the ground through a block of ice.

Our First Sergeant celebrates a birthday on the fifth, but not one that you could notice.

Privates Webb, Neal, Vaughan, Orgeron and Bryant are back with the Demonstration Detachment. We welcome them, especially the new men.

Sergeant Norville has finally decided to purchase a new automobile so he won't have to get up so early in the morning to catch the bus.

OLD-FASHIONED SQUARE DANCES AT SERVICE CLUB

In an effort to draw out the stay-at-homes of the post and get them to take a more active part in the social activities which serve to enliven the evenings for the enlisted personnel, Mrs. Inez Brittain, Club Hostess, has planned a series of good old-fashioned square dances, which will be held at the club every Monday night in addition to the Thursday night affairs which have proven to be so popular.

The first of the new dances, for which an excellent orchestra has been engaged. will be held on Monday, March 18.

These dances will, it is hoped, draw forth both the older and younger members of the post from their winter's retirement and give youths of a bygone generation an opportunity to display to the youngsters the steps that went over so hot in the gay nineties before the world went jazz crazy.

It will be an open affair and anybody wishing to do so, may bring guests who will be warmly welcomed. A small admision fee will be charged.

Vol. VII. FORT BENNING, GA., MARCH 22, 1929 Number 27

Floods Over

Fort Benning Back to Normal

Fort Benning is just now returning to normal after some trying experiences resulting from flood waters of unprecedented height, which cut the post's communication with the outside world for several hours and temporarily crippled its principal utilities. The saturated earth was unable to carry off the heavy rain which poured down for several days last week and the streams in the vicinity rose rapidly. All day Thursday, the Upatoi rose and by Friday morning it had reached the highest mark of the preceding week. Early Thursday protective works were begun around the highway and railroad bridges leading into Fort Benning across the Upatoi. The bridge was anchored by heavy cables and hundreds of sand bags were used to revet the banks near the bridge abutments and along the fill which carries the main highway. At the request of Colonel Charles L. Willard, post quartermaster, the Central of Georgia railroad placed several cars loaded with coal and steel rails on the railroad bridge to weight it down and hold it in place.

The current of the stream was much swifter than it had been during the previous week's flood and a crew of men was kept busy dislodging trees, logs and debris which floated down stream and lodged against the bridge. To reduce the pressure of the current against the bridge and to free it from the great quantities of debris which constantly piled up against it, the handrails, side boards and a portion of the footpath decking were removed. This bridge material was piled at what was believed to be a safe place some distance from the bridge but it was later washed away by the swift current when the water overflowed the highway.

Rising steadily at the rate of 1 1-2 feet per hour, the water by 5 p. m. Friday was flowing over the handrails of the highway bridge, the floor of which was 3 1-2 feet under water.

Telegraph and telephone communication which had been interrupted several times during the day was finally severed at 5 p. m. Power lines running into the post had been broken earlier in the day by falling poles but were repaired by utilities men and lifted over the rushing water on pontoon boats anchored in the stream. Although the lines were repaired, no electricity was available because of trouble at the sub-station in town.

By 6 a. m. Saturday the Upatoi was 45 feet deep at the bridge. Seventeen inches of water covered the floor of the military police station on the south side of the bridge and the highway on the city side of the bridge was inundated for several hundred yards. The fill which carries the concrete roadway was cracked and washed out in several places.

During the night, the rapid rise of the Chattahoochee river stopped the swift current of the Upatoi and caused its waters to back up and spread out into a big muddy lake. Water overflowing it to the pumping station of the post water supply system submerged the motors and pumps in 40 feet of water and cut off the garrison's water supply. An auxiliary gasoline pump, with a capacity of about 600 gallons a minute was at once placed in operation but its supply was insufficient to meet the needs of the garrison and the shortage of water became acute. By restricting the use of water to the minimum necessi-

Mikado Here Tonight

Promptly at 8:30 o'clock tonight the curtain will rise on The Infantry School Glee Club's presentation of the famous Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera, "The Mikado." With new stage and scenic effects which have been executed by garrison talent working under the direction of Captain L. E. Norris: with a glittering array of imported and specially designed costumes; with a scintillating cast of old and new talent and a trained chorus of forty-six of the best voices in the garrison, the current production of the local Glee Club is certain to make a profound impression on what promises to be one of the largest audiences ever to witness a production by garrison talent.

For over three months the Glee Club has been earnestly rehearsing in an effort to make "The Mikado" the best theatrical production ever staged at Fort Benning. To this end no effort or expense has been spared, and this evening's performance will carry the audience for two hours to a provincial little village in Japan where a humorous representation of Oriental life will be enacted.

The dialogue of "The Mikado" is laugh-compelling, and, since the entire play is satirical in character the audience must be constantly on the alert to enjoy, fully, the irony of each situation. The acting of the principal characters is superb, and the entire opera is certain to please every member of the audience.

While some of the music of the opera is classic in character, the majority of the selections are famous throughout the world as being unusually tuneful. The time is about evenly divided between dialogue and music, and, from the spoken words, the audience will have no difficulty in following the theme of the plot.

"The Mikado" will be produced tonight and tomorrow night only, and the curtain will rise promptly at 8:30 for both performances.

Quits Army

Red Lindsey Becomes Business Man

Approximately ten years ago a husky crimson-topped recruit applied for enlistment in the 15th Tank Battalion at Fort Benning. He was accepted and later was assigned to Company "A" of that organization.

Soon after his enlistment, this recruit became rather generally known as "Red, the Terrible Tanker." His athletic prowess in all forms of soldier sport soon won him many friends throughout the service. He was the embodiment of the "Tank Spirit." His record as an athlete and as a soldier will take place second to none.

"Red" Lindsey, as he is affectionately known, served his first enlistment in the field artillery. This was for the period July 13, 1918, to June 30, 1919. He has been a member of Company "A," 15th Tank Battalion for over nine years.

"Red" has qualified repeatedly as a pistol expert and a first class gunner with tank weapons. His rise to fame, however, and his immense popularity are attributed to his general athletic activities and his clean, good sportsmanship.

Lindsey was a playing member of the Fort Benning football team for five years. During this period he was associated with such former stars as McQuarrie, Smythe, Gee and played against many of the college teams in the Southern conference. He was recognized as the best service team center in the country and selected for the all army team in 1927.

He has been a valuable and important member of the 15th Tank Battalion football team for nine years. He was in no small way responsible for the three successive post championships won by that team.

Sergeant Lindsey participated in other forms of athletics, being one of the mainstays of the Tank baseball team for some years. He was a member of the winning tug of war team at the last post track meet and placed in the shot-put event on the same occasion. He has in his possession letters of commendation from General Farnsworth, Colonel Kent, a former C. O. of the 29th Infantry, and from Major Miller, commanding the 15th Tank Battalion.

"Red" purchased his discharge from the service on March 18, 1929, after nine years and eight months of especially commendable service. His loss will not only be felt by the battalion but by the football fans of the post who will miss his fiery head at Doughboy stadium.

Lindsey has accepted the offer of a position as manager of a Jacksonville Florida, restaurant and will be engaged in that enterprise in the future.

He leaves behind him at Benning and elsewhere in the service, many loyal and admiring friends who wish him well in his new endeavor.

MAJOR TERRELL VISITS BENNING

Major Henry Terrell, Jr., of the arms and equipment section of the chief of infantry's office, was an official visitor at Fort Benning during the past week.

A FIFTEEN MINUTE TALK

Gentlemen—I feel like an Indian mutineer Anno Domini 1856 who is strapped against the mouth of a Cannon and beholds an uncouth Irish cannoneer with a gleaming fuze. Nevertheless I am obliged by the Dictates of a soul-less organization, to wit Committee H—to inflict myself upon you. I have selected as my subject a non-controversial matter—namely the reduction of the Hump.

A hump, according to academic and medical Dictionaries is a protruding Mass; this does not apply in our well-known case—it is not protruding but ingrown. I must stop a minute—or possibly two, in order to master a wave of emotion which sweeps through me, a flow of tears that well into my eyes, I must stifle several groans and rise above a crushing weight of despair—when I reflect upon the pitiful condition of the members of the Hump, the submerged and inundated victims of circumstances —(Pause, in which orator struggles with emotions!)

Gemm'en—I have wrote to my Congressman in which I traced the status of one of many groops. He replied that my exposition wuz one of the most remarkable documents he had ever seen and entirely unintelligible — that boy knew his onions! I also enlisted the sympathy of my fraternity Local Lodge No. 785 Order of Union-Pacific Brakemen. We are forging right head. Organization counts every time. Gemm'en I want you to reflect upon an injustice that cries to the heavens—do you realize that those submerged victims were snared into the Service and in each and every instance suffered heavy financial losses? There is the case of Lieut. A..... ....., age 51, who was President of the Austro-Iberian Collar Button Co., Inc., and pulled down a salary of $18,000 per annum and then some. Our private and confidential tabulations indicate that 973 of this class held responsible positions in our major Industries at an average annual salary of $9,000.00. This abnormal condition can only be remedied by a radical revision of the promotion-list. We have taken up this matter with the American Federation of Labour and received a confidential reply outlining a simple—and ekitable scheme! The ratings and Efficiency reports of all Officers are to be recast on the basis of the following percentage: Age, 15 per cent.; weight, 10 per cent; (1) previous practical experience in civil life, 60 per cent.; (2) compensating factor to cover losses in salaries, 10 per cent.; collegiate degrees (incl. U. S. M. A.), 5 per cent.

Note (1) The ability of having held down a job, in civil life or otherwise. (2) The salary quotations, in civil life, are to be taken from bona-fide statements of applicants and require no further pro f.

Gemme'en—I calls that a solution! Everybody oughter to be satisfied. Now if you throw in constructive service of ten years for the Boys and they are fixed without infringing upon the earlier Classes. Fair play all around, is my motto. You betcha! Another thought, Gents before I close, this institution ought to be put abreast of other Colledges of Learning—what give degrees. I propose an M. A. for the Company Officers and a Litt. D. for the Advance Class. The Leavenworth Boys ought to be fixed with a Ph. D. or a D. D. Gents, when this is accomplished then we shall look back upon our Alma Mater with undying devotion—that noble cluster of Academic Halls upon the brow of yon Hill, the Georgia Sands, the rustling Pines, the babbling brook, the Georgia Central, the Post Exchange, and, in after-years, when we rock grand children upon rheumatic knees and our eyes are dim with the melancholy thoughts of age, we can look back upon a noble Battle of Minds—or, when that specter stretches its bony hand—Section 24b, Act June 4, 1920, we can descend upon a startled and admiring World and with the Diplomas conquer a commanding place in eager Directorates of basic Industries—Ga—ga—ga—ga—ga.

FLOODS OVER

ties, the meager supply was conserved until the larger pumps resumed operation several days later.

The first effects of the flood were felt by the garrison on Friday morning when traffic over the bridges was suspended. Electric power lines were out of commission by noon. Telephone and telegraph lines were dead by 5 p. m. Water supply was reduced the next day.

Sufficient electricity to light the station hospital and post headquarters was generated by an auxiliary plant in the post laundry.

While the Upatoi bridge was submerged, Company "A," 7th Engineers maintained a ferry service across the stream, using pontoon boats for the purpose. Early Saturday morning Lt. Henry Dahnke, with fatigue details and road equipment, placed the First Division road in passable condition and opened communication with the Buena Vista road.

Hundreds of spectators thronging on both sides of the Upatoi kept military police busy directing traffic and preventing interference with the working parties.

Although the flood imposed a great deal of inconvenience upon the garrison, the situation was enlightened by examples of skill and ingenuity and by many amusing and entertaining incidents.

Several small boats were built in the utilities shops in the space of a few hours and were used by mechanics in their work.

Early Friday morning, Captain Mabbutt was receiving the plaudits of spectators as he stood on the railing of the bridge twirling a rope over his head and skillfully lassoing logs and pulling them to shore.

When news of the failure of the power lines reach the post, there was a rush to the post exchange to buy candles. There was great disappointment when it was found that the stock of candles amounted to only three dozen and that not more than two candles would be sold to a customer.

There was a similar rush for cooked canned foods and many officers and their families dined from tin cans that evening.

In order to save water, shaving was not permitted for several days. The resulting crop of whiskers was wild, weird and wonderful.

PROMOTIONS ANNOUNCED

Promotions this week were: First Lieutenant Waine Archer of the 29th Infantry to Captain; First Lieutenant Walter E. Smith to Captain, and Captain John E. Copeland to Major.

THE TENTS OF KEDAR

The machine gun class has been considerably edified for a week at the sight of Capt. Irwin E. Farington, of California, with one arm tied up and a T-base on his back shooting on the 1,000-inch range—and outshooting some of the two-armed bozos. Captain Farington's left shoulder was broken when he was thrown at the last drag hunt, when his horse struck boggy ground.

First Lieutenant Lloyd E. Kelly, who has outdistanced all competitors in the matter of asking questions, has puzzled some of his auditors. It has seemed impossible for an instructor to win an argument with Lieutenant Kelly. This is easily explained when it is known that Kelly is a traffic cop in Washington, D. C. Nobody ever has been known to win an argument with a traffic cop. We only hope President Hoover doesn't get embroiled with Kelly some day en route to a cabinet meeting. It's a safe bet the president wouldn't arrive until the cabinet meeting was over, and would leave a trail of unanswered questions behind him at that.

Business of policing up has been noticed even in the tent area since it became known that the commandant looked with marked disfavor on pyramids of ginger ale bottle and tin cans in the yards of the commissioned personnel.

"THE BUTTER & EGG MAN," starring Jack Mulhall with Greta Nissen in a peppy comedy of great Broadway. It is the jocular presentation of a small town sucker with big ideas who buys a theatrical "flop," puts it over, thanks to a bit of luck, and then outslicks the city slickers by selling it back to them. This is the filmization of the stage play by the same name which was presented at Fort Benning last year by the Dramatic Club and successfully succeeded in bringing the house down with continuous roars of laughter.

"Monkey Love." Fables.

SATURDAY, MARCH 23

"THE BUSH RANGER," featuring Tim McCoy in a rapid moving story of a modern Robin Hood who risks all for love and adventure, stares death in the face and laughs at it. The story is laid in the wilds of the Australian Bush back in the times when highwaymen and criminals infested that land. The story is a romance teeming with thrilling action throughout the picture. McCoy's weapon is an Australian stock whip which he uses with remarkable skill to disarm his enemies, tie up his pursuers, and effect excapes from the cliffs. The Australian boomerang is also used. A trained kangaroo features in this story. This film is a classic in excitement.

"Skating Home." Frances Lee.

SUNDAY, MARCH 24

"WEST OF ZANZIBAR," starring Lon Chaney with a splendid supporting cast in a strange story laid in the African jungle. Chaney plays the role of Dead Legs Flint, a sinister white Voodoo, and former stage magician who, paralyzed from the injuries he received in fighting with a man who had robbed him of his wife's affections, trails his enemies through the wilds, terrorizing a tribe of savages with his strange magic, and eventually accomplishing fearsome revenge. Several hundred natives take part in the weird voodoo ceremonies, wearing African devil masks and other strange accoutrements. A number of highly spectacular exhibitions of mystery enhance tense dramatic situations.

MONDAY, MARCH 25

"HONEYMOON FLATS," starring George Lewis with Dorothy Gulliver in a gay and frolicsome comedy which is swift and sophisticated. It centers around sheiks, shebas, wise crackers, and a "loving" mother-in-law. It jocularly weighs the weighty problem: should mothers-in-law be outlawed? You've probably heard that marriage is "no laughing matter"—this spirited comedy shatters all such phony ideas. The mother-in-law ordered the word "obey" left out of the marriage ceremony, and then she tried to boss the newly-weds and the war commenced. It is really hard to determine the greater battle, husband versus wife, or son-in-law versus mother-in-law. If you enjoy comedy, see "Honeymoon Flats."

"Tarzan the Mighty No. 10."

TUESDAY, MARCH 26

"MARRIAGE BY CONTRACT," featuring Patsy Ruth Miller with Lillian Gray in a story which is a powerful thrust at companionate marriage. It is a timely and vital subject dealing with this purported menace to civilization. An average boy and girl marry on a companionate theory and retain their individual and economic freedom, also the right to dissolve their marriage at any time during a stated period. Upon return from their honeymoon he goes out with boys and she with girl friends —she meets with an old flame—he comes staggering home at three a. m.—a quarrel, fervored through jealously, ensues—they part—she marries a much older and wealthier man—and he goes his way; of course, the result is disastrous. As time waxes on, nature honestly asserts itself and wounds become partly healed. They learn only too late the futility of endeavoring to change the natural for the whimsical ideals of some of our misguiding theorists. The story is a strange melodrama.

"Hold That Bear." Cameo.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27

"THE WHIP," starring Ralph Forbes and Dorothy Mackaill in a filmization of this Drury Lane melodrama which was first produced almost a century ago. It revolves around a horse race portraying, in a most thrilling manner, many incidents in the paddock, on the track and among sporting society. The high lights are Ritzy women, racing silks and Paris satins, society, intrigue and scandal, a shooting, a train wreck and a sensational finish that will make you grasp the arms of your chair.

THURSDAY, MARCH 28

"SCARLET SEAS," starring Richard Barthelmess with Betty Compson and Loretta Young in a story of villainy and intrigue laid on the great Main. It is the story of a red blooded Salty who "takes his love where he finds it." Stark drama is presented when fate casts him adrift in a raging sea with the navy's sweetheart as his sole companion. In this story there is red mutiny, flaming passion, blazing schooners, and a score of cut throat mutineers. There are many strange happenings which cause breathtaking, hai raising moments. It is a most intriguing melodrama.

"Hubby's Week End Trip." Sennett.

FRIDAY, MARCH 29

"NOTHING TO WEAR," featuring Jacqueline Logan with Bryant Washburn, Jane Winton and Theodore Von Eltz in a story involving feminine beauty both of face and form, and masculine agressiveness prompted by coquetry, passion, and the blase. It deals in a farcical manner with some of the secrets of high society white wash. It is the light type of farce which affords a pleasant evening's entertainment.

"The Big Game." Fables.

Reluctantly we are compelled to chronicle the facts that our Dramatic Club is bringing its season to an end. On April 10th three one-act plays will be presented. Then, as a fitting finis to its most excellent record, a four-act play will be given early in May. This will be all for the season. Then our social calendar drops off sharply, and a short while later, upon the termination of the graduation exercises, with its dance, practically comes to a standstill for the summer.

All of us will miss the dramatic plays. These colorful events somehow draw the members of the garrison closer together. We like the spirit which prompts everyone concerned to put forth their best efforts to please us. We appreciate the hard work and sacrifice, mental strain and uncertainty which goes with the perfect presentation of one of these plays. And we take please in knowing that they have rehearsed during most of their spare time for three weeks so that we might have two hours of pleasure. The only reward they get is our approbation, (and this is all they want.) We have been unstinted in our approval of the plays. It is doubtful if they could have been presented any better by the best professionals. And across the footlights there is a deep sense of fellowship and mutual appreciation.

The plays given on April 10th will be of one-act each: "Gas, Air and Earl," by Bloch; directed by Mrs. E. G. Sherburne. "Melancholy Baby," by Octavis Roy Cohen; directed by Captain Stanley G. Saulnier. And a one-act play written and directed by Captain William Hones. More about these plays in a later issue of the News.

A MESSAGE TO AGUINALDO

Twenty-eight years ago tomorrow, the successful conclusion of one of the most fantastic and daring schemes ever conceived by an American soldier took place.

Aguinaldo, the Filipino insurgent leader, with an armed following, was secreted in the province of Isabela on the Island of Luzon, from where he conducted revolutionary activities with little molestation.

Attempts to capture him and thus break the power of the revolt had failed.

Brigadier General Frederick Funston determined to capture Aguinaldo himself. Accompanied by his aide, three other American officers, three Filipino ex-insurgent officers and eighty Macabebe scouts, General Funston embarked on the gunboat Vicksburg at Manila and nine days later landed with his party at a lonely spot on the coast at one o'clock in the morning. There they assumed the strange roles that General Funston had planned. The five American officers and the three Filipino ex-officers became in appearance the prisoners of the Macabebes who posed as a body of insurgents conducting important prisoners of war to the rebel leader. The march over ninety miles of rough trails through hostile jungle country to Aguinaldo's headquarters in the little town of Palanan required eight days. The party was under constant observation and had to play their respective roles with realism to escape suspicion.

So well did they play their parts that Aguinaldo welcomed the "reenforcements" with their "important prisoners," whereupon the Macabebes charged his headquarters, killed some who resisted and made Aguinaldo and several other insurgent officers prisoners.

The insurrection was broken. Like Rowan, whose exploit was immortalized by Elbert Hubbard's epic, Funston had delivered his message.

THEY ALSO SERVE

Out of all the mess and inconvenience imposed upon the garrison by the flood conditions of the past week there should remain at least one pleasant memory of the whole disagreeable affair.

We are accustomed to receive as a routine the services of those whose inconspicuous, even obscure, duties make it possible for us to enjoy such conveniences and adjuncts of modern life as our telephones, telegraphs, electric lights and power, water supply and sanitary systems, railroad and highway communication, and other daily necessities whose existence we never seem to appreciate fully until we are threatened with their loss or are actually deprived of them.

Only those who directed them, or who had an opportunity to observe them, realize how faithful and unceasing were the labors of those humble toilers who endeavored to protect their respective utilities from damage or destruction.

Working night and day with little sleep or rest, these men met with fresh ingenuity every onslaught of the flood and saved their charges from total destruction. When the water receded, they repaired the damages and restored services as quickly as it could be done.

In a few days normal conditions will be restored and the annoying experiences of the past week will be forgotten.

While our memory is still fresh, let us express our thanks to the soldiers and civilian employees whose faithful and efficient services reduced to a minimum the inconveniences which Fort Benning experienced as a result of the floods.

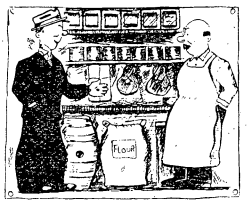
COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

CROESUS THE DREAMER



At a road junction near the outskirts of the city there stands a small unpainted building with a shaky porch drooping precariously across its front. Its narrow door opens into a gloomy interior whose dimness is but little relieved by the faint light which seeps through the unwashed panes of the one small window.

Should one, overlooking a small weatherworn sign, peer for a moment or two through the door into the semi-darkness beyond he would see that the place is a little grocery store. That is what I did the other afternoon and, my curiosity aroused, I mounted the two or three steps to the porch and went in.

Two men sat smoking stogies and chatting. One of them, a large heavily-built man with a shaggy fringe of white hair, arose and came forward to meet me. An opaque film obscuring one eye gave him a somewhat sinister appearance in the dusky light. He addressed me pleasantly, however, and I ordered a bottle of a nationally-known beverage of southern origin.

As I sipped my drink from the bottle, my eyes became accustomed to the dimness and I was able to survey the little place.

What an assortment of things there was! There were bundles of brooms, kegs of pickles, kegs of nails, buckets, boxes and barrels against the walls. In one corner was a barrel containing sugar; next to it was one of pickled meats. In another corner was a barrel of "plain water meal." This, I later learned, was a coarse corn meal crudely ground between the stones of a small water mill.

On the shelves which lined the walls was a miscellany of canned goods. There was coffee in paper bags with the same flamboyant labels which I remembered having seen in advertisements when I was a boy. There was an assortment of chewing tobacco and a larger one of snuff. There were some corncob pipes and a few tins of smoking tobacco. On a high shelf was a row of glass chimneys for oil lamps. Dangling from the ceiling on a rusty wire was a cast-iron ring with scroll-like ribs which proved to be a horsewhip holder.

Then there was a glass show case with a cracked top which contained one of the most curious exhibits ever seen outside a museum. Starting at one end with coarse heavy socks, it ended at the other with a collection of candies very much like those that I used to eat behind my geography book in school. Between the socks and candy were buttons, pins, needles, thread, purses, patent medicines, headache powders, cathartic pills, liniments, machine oil, cologne and other such things.

Having finished my drink, I bought a nickel's worth of the old-fashioned barber pole stick candy, which I saw in the show case, as an excuse for conversation. Commencing with the weather, the talk turned to the grocery business and the personal affairs of the old man.

We talked of many things and I learned that the old grocer was an inveterate speculator in the stock market. He talked glibly of cotton, pork, lard and other commodities of exchange. He knew to a dollar what the company whose product I had just drunk had paid on a recent dividend. "Two million eight hundred and eighty thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars; over nine dollars a share," said he. He told me of the phenomenal rise of this stock from forty cents a share to its present value of more than a hundred dollars a share.

"Were you fortunate enough to get some of it at the low price?" I asked.

"No, I haven't any at all," he said.

This, it seemed, was also the case with the other stocks whose fluctuations he discussed so fluently. He had made fortunes in the stock market but they were only imaginary, as the old speculator had never invested a cent. The only reason, he said, was that he had never had the money with which to back his hunches. But some day, he was going to make his fortune. In the meantime, he was perfecting his "system."

The old man's face glowed as he warmed to his subject, and, far from being sinister as I had first thought it to be, his expression had the kindly benevolence of one who visions vast wealth with which to do great and good deeds.

It was growing dusk by this time; an hour had slipped by in pleasant conversation with the simple kindly dreamer of wealth, so I wished him luck and went on my way.

A NIGHT IN JAPAN

In any group of people there are certain to be some who are gifted with natural talents or who have acquired accomplishments that distinguish them in some manner from their fellows.

Cultivated accomplishments are, perhaps, found more frequently among groups of service people, not because of any natural superiority, but because of their opportunities for broadening travel and observation among the peoples of the world.

In every large group of army people such as we have at Fort Benning, there are a great many whose superior talents and accomplishments seek expression in the arts. A number of such will tonight and tomorrow night present one of the best known operettas, the Mikado.

That the Fort Benning cast will give a most pleasing and accurate portrayal of the characters of this play, the scenes of which are laid in old Japan, is a certainty, for in addition to their individual characteristics which render them suitable for their parts, practically all of them have served or visited in the land of the cherry blossoms.

In attending either of the Fort Benning Glee Club's two performances, local devotees of musical and dramatic art will assure themselves of a satisfying evening of delightful entertainment.

Sgt. Allen Retires

After an equivalent of 30 years service in Co. "A" 24th Infantry, First Sgt. Earnest Allen has been retired. Serving for thirty years in the army is a very commendable thing in itself but to have served for that entire period in one company of the same regiment is one that is a rarity which should not be allowed to pass without comment.

The officers and non-commissioned officers of the regiment met, as is their custom, in the mess hall of Sgt. Allen's company to pay honor to the retiring first sergeant and presented him with a gold watch and chain as a token of their esteem and affection.

The retirement order follows:

GENERAL ORDERS
NO. 7.

1st Sergeant Earnest Allen, R1022803, Company "A," 24th Infantry, will be retired on March 20, 1929, after the equivalent of thirty years service by paragraph 4, Special Orders No. 61, War Department, dated March 15, 1929.

First Sergeant Allen first enlisted for Company "A," 24th Infantry, October 8, 1903, and has served continuously in this organization since that date.

His service is as follows:

Company "A," 24th Infantry, Oct. 8, 1903, to Nov. 17, 1905.
Company "A," 24th Infantry, Nov. 18, 1905, to Nov. 17, 1908.
Company "A," 24th Infantry, Nov. 21, 1908, to Nov. 20, 1911.
Company "A," 24th Infantry, Nov. 21, 1911, to Nov. 20, 1914.
Company "A," 24th Infantry, Nov. 21, 1914, to April 1, 1919.
Company "A," 24th Infantry, April 2, 1919, to March 31, 1922.
Company "A," 24th Infantry, April 1, 1922, to March 31, 1925.
Company "A," 24th Infantry, April 1, 1925, to March 31, 1928.
Company "A," 24th Infantry, April 1, 1928, to date.

First Sergeant Allen served in the Philippine Islands during 1906, 1907, 1912, 1913 and 1914. On the Island of Leyte, P. I., against hostile Pulajanes, during 1906 and 1907. In Mexico during the Punitive Expedition from April 30, 1916, to January 28, 1917. In action against Villesters, at Juarez, Mexico, from June 15, 1919, to June 16, 1919.

This non-commissioned officer has served loyally, honestly and faithfully, and for steady application to duty, fidelity and good service, is rewarded by honorable retirement.

The quiet, efficient, pleasing personality and ever present spirit of cooperation which has marked the daily routine of Sergeant Allen's duties will long serve as a standard of comparison by those who have served with him.

The regiment congratulates him on this successful conclusion of his career in active service and its good wishes accompany him upon his retirement to civil life.

By order of Colonel Galleher:

E. G. LINDROTH,
Captain, 24th Infantry,
Asst. Adjutant.

Scotch Flag Golf Tourney

Promptly at 1 o'clock last Monday Colonel Paul Galleher teed off to a long drive which opened the 24th Infantry Mixed "Scotch" Flag Golf tournament.

The players were Col. Galleher, Major Fletcher, Captains Archer, Charles Steel, Paynter, Doll, Scott, Walker Lyons, Tuttle, Mesdames Helsley, Kelley, Scott, Earle, Tuttle, J. J. Wilson, Walker, Doll, Paynter and Archer.

"Scotch" Flag or Tombstone golf seems to bid fair to a very popular sport in the regimental realm of sport. The various handicaps being alloted, the teams started out to distance, just as far as their handicap and golfers luck would carry them. When the stroke allowance was run out, the elusive golf ball was staked with a flag and the winners declared. Those who had advanced their ball farthest with their alloted strokes were as follows:

1st, Capt. Scott and Mrs. Kelley; 2nd, Lieut. and Mrs. Eearle; 3rd, Capt. Steel and Mrs. Paynter; 4th, Lieut. Kelley and Mrs. Scott; 5th, Capt. Lindroth and Mrs. Tuttle; 6th, Capt. Walker and Mrs. Helsley; 7th, Capt. and Mrs. Archer.

During the tournament there were several high lights—many of them. We remember these:

A field officer was noticed coming down the fairway toward the 18th hole (might have been the 19th hole) without his flag but with a large piece of adhesive tape over his right eye. He explained, somewhat defiantly, that a horse had kicked him.

Post orders declare that water will be used for cooking and drinking only, however, there was a distinct and flagrant violation on green No. 1 when Eddie Walker gave his fair partner and himself a shower bath while trying to "explode" his ball out of a water filled trap.

"Lac Malone" rose to record high water due to the number of golf balls driven into it by Jim Lyons.

Yes, and there were others.

SECOND BATTALION BASKETEERS; HOLDERS OF SEVEN CONSECUTIVE GARRISON BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIPS

Winners of the Battalion basketball championship seven consecutive years. Seven years without feeling the sting of defeat. That is the record held by the Second Battalion basketball team of the 29th Infantry.

When the honors for this remarkable record are distributed among the companies of the Demonstration regiment, to Company "E" goes the largest share. For three consecutive years "E" Company has held the company basketball championship of the regiment. Of the members of the battalion championship team five are members of Company "E." Four of these men were first string players with the famous Infantry School Musketeers that held the center of the spotlight in Basketballdom during the past season with sensational victories over some of the fastest professional and amateur basketball teams in the country.

The four former members of the Musketeers are: Fat Franz, team captain; one of the best guards in the game today. His dribbling and passing were unequalled during the past season. Sgt. Franz has been a member of the team for the past six seasons. Stamper, playing his second year, is a pupil of Johnnie Roosma, and his work at forward combined with his phenomenal basket-shooting, has been one of the big features of the season. McAllister, star guard, completed his fourth season and besides playing a great game at forward on the battalion team, he also starred in the same position with the Musketeers. Oikari had a great year at forward, his long shots adding the winning score in several games, while his passing and floor work was a big asset to the smooth working Doughboy machine.

Playing opposite Franz in many of the games during the past six years has been the well-known and popular "Kelly" Kjelstrom. His work this season has been of the high standard variety that has carried the Seconds Bats to the top each year.

Barron, Miscar, Baugh and Dilley are youngsters playing their first year; their showing has been excellent and leaves no doubt in the minds of the supporters of the Second Bats that the championship is safe for another seven years.

29TH RIFLEMEN WIN TWO LAST MATCHES OF SEASON

Showing the results of the intensive system of training which they had undergone at the hands of Major J. R. Brooke, regimental small bore rifle instructor, the 29th Infantry rifle team brought to a successful close their 1929 small bore rifle season with victories registered over the 10th Infantry and 26th Infantry teams in telegraphic matches fired on March 14th and 15th.

The first match on Thursday, March 14th, with the 10th Infantry was a comparatively easy win for the "Demonstration" boys, with a score of 2524 against their opponents 2496. The match was featured by the shooting of Sgt. L. A. Beck and Corporal H. F. Hicks, members of the winning team, who both tied for high honors with a score of 369 out of a possible 400.

On Friday, the Benning riflemen again demonstrated their skill by taking into camp the 26th Infantry of Plattsburg barracks, New York, by the score of 2527 against 2493. Corporal Hicks, for the second time, lead the scoring with 371.

2ND BATTALION 29TH INF. HOLDS COMPETITIVE TESTS

In the recent competitive training tests conducted by the organizations of the Second Battalion, "F" Company won two of the three events.

They were adjudged the winners in squad drill and company drill by Lt. Col. Alfred Brandt, Major L. W. Young and Lt. H. W. Brandhorst, who judged the competition. "G" Company was winner of the platoon drill test, second in company drill and third in squad drill.

The tests aroused much interest in the Battalion. Others of a like nature will be held in the near future. The standing of the companies at the conclusion of the tests was as follows:

Company drill—1, Company "F" excellent; 2, Company "G" excellent; 3, Company "H" excellent; 4 Company "E" very good.

Platoon drill—1, Company "G" excellent; 2, Company "E" excellent; 3, Company "H," very good; 4, Company "F" very good.

Squad drill—1, Company "F" excellent; 2, Company "E" excellent; 3, Company "G" excellent; 4, Company "H" very good.

CHAPEL GUILD MEETING

29TH INFANTRY TURNS OUT FOR RIFLE TEAM

A large number of officers and men of the Twenty-ninth Infantry reported Monday morning to the team captain for preliminary instruction in preparation for the hard struggle before them as candidates for the Infantry Rifle team.

The team will consist of the ten best marksmen in the infantry and men from practically every army post in the country are pouring into Benning, where they will endeavor to prove their right to represent the "Doughboys" at the National matches.

The men from Fort Benning who are trying out for the team have a slight edge on the outsiders as the trials will be held here and men shooting on their home range will have a slight advantage.

Of the Fort Benning candidates, several men of the Twenty-ninth have chances of winning positions on the team, as among them are the members of the regimental small-bore rifle team, who have just completed their season. They have been hard at work practically all winter under the supervision of Major J. R. Brooks, regimental small-bore rifle instructor, and have brought their marksmanship up to a high standard. The following named officers and enlisted men have been recommended as candidates for the Infantry Rifle team:

Corporal Gale Kinsler has departed from the fold on a thirty-day furlough to the hills of Tennessee. Here's hoping that he returns with many tales of good times to be had running up and down the ridges chasing the merry hound.

" 'Tis quite an extremity," says Private William P. Jackson, "when there is water everywhere and not a drop to drink."

This battery lost the championship basketball cup to Headquarters battery, but even if defeated we do not hang our heads because we are certain that they had to put out all they had, as both games were highly contested and there was very little margin in both games.

Private Harvey claims the one and only aquatic horse in this organization. While out riding Sunday he claims that his horse decided that it would like to take a bath and forthwith leaped into a somewhat cold stream, thereby causing both rider and horse to take a bath. Private Harvey states that it would have been perfectly agreeable to him if he had been notified by the horse of its intentions, as he would have dismounted.

Private Lewis A. McKenzie has returned to the organization, after having spent a thirty-day furlough at his home in Tennessee, recuperating from a serious attack of pneumonia.

Sergeant Pippin G. Gannon, our one and only "PIP" has been detailed on special duty as range guard and we guess that it will result in him being transferred to the Infantry School Detachment. We are glad to see you get it but the Third Section will certainly miss you.

Hdqrs. Battery and Combat Train

Being confined to the post last weekend by the raging muddy waters of the 'Hoochee and Upatoi had little to do with hindering the many friends and men of the battery from brushing away the dark clouds. A smoker was given by the battery, which was very cleverly put over from start to finish. The widely known golden voiced Bird-Song was the first to please all with many selections accompanied by Hill, being followed by Foots Summar, with his black face skit, entitled Hot-Dogs. Sergeant Regan, of Battery "A," with his stringed instruments, rendered many selections, which were enjoyed by all. One-Lung Woo gave a side-splitting demonstration of a love song in Chinese. Only one comment could be made of your number, encore. Although Sgt. Chink Koski was seen leaving in tears, bringing back old memories. A short talk was given by Sgt. "Red" Lindsey, of the Tankers, of much interest toward future athletics. Sandwiches and cold drinks were served, Cue-Ball Smith getting the bad breaks.

All together, Ray, Ray, Ray; Ray, Ray, Ray! For what, you ask? Our new skipper, of course. Last week Sergeant J. J. McAuliffe, better known as "Mc," was appointed 1st Sergeant of Headquarters Battery. Sergeant McAuliffe needs no introduction to any old timer in the post, being an all around athlete for the past five years, and still going at a fast clip. Headquarters in the future shall be heard from more frequently under the guidance of our new skipper.

The final and deciding game of basketball was played last Sunday, Headquarters Battery defeating Battery "C" to the tune of 17-13, and cinching another rag known as trophies. Cpl. Fuzzy Douglas and his squad of basketeers played like real champions. Much credit is due Fuzzy, as well as other members of the team.

Battery A

We did not know that we had twins in the battery until Privates Siegel and Williams were reported trying to leave the post on the same pass. Better luck next time boys; why not try disguising as the battery truck.

Corporal Chapman, upon being asked what was the most embarrassing moment of his life, replied that it was when, after renting an "eat 'em up Chrysler" and telling the girl it was his own, he couldn't make the windshield wiper work.

Pvt. Terrell: "Father, I want to buy out of the army and get a job where I can use my head."

Father: "What, there's too many plumbers already without you taking it up."

1st Sgt. Combs: "May I have the next dance with you."

The Blonde: "If you press me."

1st Sarge: "Wait until we start dancing."

Private Mills, who is somewhat of an inventor, chemist, etc., has at last hit upon an idea which he claims will make him rich; that is if he can find a way to condense shampoo suds back into soap.

Sgt. McCann: "Loan me ten dollars."

Sgt. Brown: "Stop talking shop."

We know why Private Duncan always stands up in the bus. He is Scotch and has just had his pants pressed.

Private First Class Lambert, who hails from Cusseta, says the reason they rope off the aisles at a wedding is so the bridegroom can't get away. He should know for, as Omar the Tentmaker did not say, he took unto himself a wife last Sunday. Congratulations from the battery "Pert" and with your help we know the caissons will continue to roll.

Skipper of the Battery: "Sergeant why are all the men buying out?"

1st Sergeant: "Circingles and blankets, Sir."

Battery C

Private McDuff is now doing battery duty, after having taken a fling at clerking in battalion headquarters. It is understood that his monthly raw oysters (rosters) were rather spoiled, so therefore the withdrawal from said headquarters.

CYCLONE SMITH WILL MEET BILL BRITTON IN TEN-ROUND MAIN-GO AT FORT BENNING, MARCH 26TH

Red Lawson	vs.	Andy Aussttinn	3 Rounds
Gabby Gable	vs.	Fuzzy Douglas	3 Rounds
Moon Johnson	vs.	Raven Poe	3 Rounds
Grumpy Gordy	vs.	Tuffy Thompson	4 Rounds
Soldier DeMars	vs.	Billy Shell	6 Rounds
Blondy Parker	vs.	Ginger Jernigan	8 Rounds
Walker Smith	vs.	Billy Britton	10 Rounds

Just for a change the fans on Tuesday night, March 26th, will have a total of 37 rounds of whiff, bang, slam... On this card an extra three rounder has been added to accomodate one Red Lawson and his arch enemy Andy Aussttinn both registered members of the 24th Infantry. Red and Andy have had a bit of difference over the relative merits of their own particular ability. Then again, 'tis said there is something in the dark which neither will divulge though the secret might out before the third round is over.

The second three rounder on Tuesday night will see one of the products of the Amateur tournament swinging into action. Gabby Gable who swings a mean assortment of haymakers tackles Fuzzy Douglas of the 83rd Field Artillery. Gabby may prove one of the finds of the year, then again Fuzzy who has a few bouts to his credit, might show Gabby that the professional racket is not all peaches and cream.

Grumpy Gordy will have to look to his laurels since Moon Johnson of the 83rd Field turned pro. Moon is another ex-amateur, anxious to try for gold rather than glory. This middleweight, who meets Raven Poe, has an attack that is unique in the boxing game. Close observers of his method are undecided whether it is a road scraper let loose or a rum runner dodging the new Jones law.

At first it was felt that Grumpy Gordy would not grace the next card. When this information was transmitted to the Biglerville fireman the roar that resulted had a decided effect on the matchmaker. It seems the fans have become so accustomed to seeing Grumpy that if he were left off the card a decided slump in the patronage would occur. Then again it is whispered that the said Gordy has pledged the sum of $52 to a local merchant for an Easter outfit. Summing it up would mean no fight no suit.

Hanging around the Post gymnasium for the past two months, a youth of generous frame, who answers to the name of Tuffy Thompson, home address Fort Bragg, N. C., present occupation, student Cooks and Bakers School, this youth ever since his running mate Jimmy Jackson was KO'd by Gordy, yes, morning, noon, and night, this Tuffy person has been clamoring for a go with the Biglerville favorite. Again we have a bout the result of which fate holds in her tender hands. Thompson is the husky that challenged black-browed Grumpy while the latter, sullen and ferocious, sat in his corner waiting for the bell the night he met Louis Joris.

Back again comes Billy Shell. This time Billy takes on Soldier DeMars, another member of the School for Bakers and Cooks. At first it was decided to send DeMars in against Willie Ptomey but the former asked for a chance to test his staying powers over the six round distance. The fans will have an opportunity to size up the newcomer, with the Ptomey-DeMars angle as a future possibility.

The next, between Blondy Parker and Ginger Jernigan, ought to prove a riot of action. Neither needs the slightest introduction. Tab this as worth the price of admission alone. Will Jernigan be able to land those rights and lefts on weaving Parker? Will the Columbus boy be able to cover up when Blondy shoots those fast snappy right crosses. Space alone prevents us from weighing the pros and cons. Eight rounds seems six minutes too much, for unless past dope is all wrong this affair will end before the eighth. We pass when it comes to picking the winner.

As the dish of the evening the Walker Smith—Billy Britton tit bit is offered. If the patrons let their memory rove a bit it will be noted that Benning has combed the entire southeastern belt for middle and light-heavys. Atlanta, Jacksonville, Savannah, Macon, Charlotte, Mobile, Montgomery, and Miami have all sent their boxers to the Post. At the present writing it so happens that for future attractions boxers north of the cities mentioned must be brought here. Memphis, Tenn., is sending down this Britton person, recommended by Mickey Wingfield, his manager, and our old friend Al Hayes formerly of Atlanta. From press reports backed up by the official boxing periodical, "The Ring," this Memphis mauler is all that his advance notices imply. It will be the test of Smith's career. Get your ticket now. There's a dollar's worth of entertainment assured.

FORT BENNING POLO TOURNAMENT WILL OPEN AT FRENCH FIELD SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Next Sunday will see the first games of the Senior Division of the annual Garrison Polo Tournament. In the first game, scheduled for 2:15 P. M., at French Field, the 29th Infantry team will play the 83rd Field Artillery. In the second game immediately following, the Students will play the Freebooters.

The remainder of the Senior Division games are scheduled as follows:

2:15 P. M., Wednesday, March 27: 1st game, 83rd F. A. vs. Freebooters; 2nd game, 29th Inf. vs. Students.

2.15 P. M., Sunday, March 31: 1st game, 83rd F. A. vs. Students; 2nd game, 29th Inf. vs. Freebooters.

The team winning the highest percentage of these games will be awarded the Dierk's Trophy, which is donated by the Dierk's Jewelry Company, of Columbus. The individual players will also receive silver goblets, donated by the Officers Club.

The Junior Division will be an elimination tournament and is scheduled as follows:

2:15 P. M., Wednesday, April 3: 1st game, Freebooters vs. 29th Inf.; 2nd game, Students vs. 83rd F. A.

2:15 P. M., Sunday, April 7: 1st game, Winners of April 3 play off; 2nd game, Losers of April 3 play off.

The winning team of this division will receive as individual trophies silver goblets donated by the Officers' Club.

It has been decided to play all the games of the tournament on the flat and not on a handicap basis. Though there is a difference of several goals between the highest and lowest goal teams, it is expected that the games will be hard-fought and close. Past practice games of the season have, in general, been won by only one or two points.

All the games of the tournament will be of 6 chukkers of 7 1-2 minutes each.

Parking spaces have been set aside for members of the Officers' Club along the sides of the field. Those who arrive first will have the first choice. Enlisted men may park at the ends of the field. Civilians, holding tickets for the season will have parking spaces assigned to them and so marked. The grandstand is reserved for the use of officers and enlisted men. It has been requested that those who take grandstand seats do not leave their cars in parking spaces at the same time.

In spite of the few practice games which have been held since the first of the year members of all teams will be glad to get the tournament underway. The first game this year is scheduled just three weeks later than the first game of last year's tournament.

It is expected that the teams will line-up for the Senior Division games as follows:

83rd Field Artillery: 1, Lt. Grubbs; 2, Lt. Guernsey (team captain); 3, Lt. Murphy; 4, Lt. Bartlett.

Students: 1, Capt. Forsythe (team captain); 2, Lt. Smith; 3, Capt. Burress; 4, Capt. Harris.

29th Infantry: 1, Lt. Skelton; 2, Capt. Halloran; 3, Lt. Jacobs (team captain); 4, Lt. Van Houten.

Freebooters: 1, Lt. Lockett; 2, Capt. McClure; 3, Maj. Lyman (team captain); 4, Capt. Sweet.

INFANTRY SCHOOL RIDERS TAKE HONORS AT HORSE SHOW

Riding and jumping as though born in the saddle, the Infantry School Riding team at the Augusta Horse Show, held at Augusta, Ga., March 14 and 16, won 44 ribbons out of a possible 75. These included 1 champion, 1 reserve champion, 10 blues, 11 yellows and 10 whites.

The splendid showing of the Infantry School Riding team was the out-standing feature of the Augusta Horse Show, the leading turf classic of the season in the South, against a field of the country's leading riders and mounts.

One champion and one reserve champion were picked from the Benning mounts. Miss Gale, with Captain Rogers up, was picked as the champion polo mount. Portlight, with Lt. Van Houten up, was picked as reserve champion in the hunter class. Of the sixteen mounts taken to Augusta, each won one or more ribbons. The high winner was "Hindoo," who has taken first honors for three consecutive years. The splendid condition and performance of the Infantry School Show horses was commented upon quite frequently by officials and competitors alike.

Thursday, March 14th, came with dark storm clouds and a slow drizzle of rain The show which was scheduled to open at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, did not open until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Friday proved to be another good day for ducks and riders and mounts were inactive. Saturday came bright and clear with a slight breeze and worlds of sunshine, a perfect day for the show.

The Infantry School team boasted no individual star, the work of every member of the team was classed as excellent. The splendid showing made by the ladies and officers from the Infantry School was the subject of favorable comment by officials, rival exhibitors and all who attended the show.

The members of the team were: Major H. J. M. Smith, Major Chas. B. Lyman, Capt. Pleas B. Rogers, 2d Lt. Hayden Y. Grubbs, 2d Lt. John G. Van Houten, Mrs. J. D. Patch, Mrs. W. M. Hoge, Mrs. J. D. Forsythe, Miss Susan Brandt.

The hospitality which the team received in Augusta was wonderful. Nothing was left undone to make the visit a success. The members of the team performed excellently in the show ring and many of the visitors congratulated the ladies and officers on their wonderful showing.

The members of the team are unanimous in expressing their thanks for the cooperation received from the personnel of Fort Benning in preparation for this show.

RESIGNATION OF LIEUTENANT BROWNING

The 29th Infantry this week lost one of its most popular young officers through the resignation of 2d Lt. William W. Browning, of Company "B," who is leaving the service to accept a responsible position in civil life.

Lt. Browning was graduated from West Point last year and joined the 29th Infantry soon after his graduation.

DOUGHBOYS SHOWING MID-SEASON FORM AS MOUNDSMEN PUT THE ZIPPER ON FAST ONES

"Step in there and put steam on that ole apple." That is what Captain Wilson is telling his twirlers, and they are certainly steaming them. "Base hits." "Meet it square on the nose." Is his advice to the batters, and they have been meeting it.

Buckley and Cooper are leading with the willow. Kelly, Roosma, White and the remainder of the gang are rounding into shape nicely. The out-look now points to a team of hitters this season.

There is a wealth of pitching material on hand this season. Already Bozo Smith, Futch and a youngster named Hadley have began to show worlds of speed and plenty of hook to their curves "Ole Man" Duff, with twenty-nine years of baseball back of him, is still shooting them down the alley with the old zipper on them. Tolle and Perkins will be out within the next few days, while Johnnie Roosma began practice last Monday, which means that he will be ready to take his regular turn on the mound by the opening of the season.

In the infield a battle royal is being waged. At first base it seems that Buckley will have easy sailing unless a dark horse shows up. Down at the middle sack there is an awful scramble with Shotgun White, Cooper and Browning fighting it out for a regular berth at the central station. Short-stop is owned by the one and only "Fat" Franz. At this station there is no argument. Over at the hot corner, Cobb, Cleveland and Reddock are pawing up big heaps of gravel as they battle for the right to defend the far corner station.

The outfield positions are still unsettled except left field, which will be patrolled by Kelly. "Big" Douglas will most likely attend to the right garden with center still open. The next week will probably work the squad down to war strength and fill all positions.

There is no question about McCarty and Thompson being able to attend to the catching, as this pair of receivers are numbered among the best in this neck o' the woods.

Only one short week and the Doughboys go into action at Gowdy Field. Wonder how many will be absent in the stands when the Ump says, "Play Ball."

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

How many of you remember the flood? I sort of feel that it is necessary to remind you of the fact that we had a flood. It is getting so around here that nothing seems to last over the week-end. (I am speaking of events), Last Friday we were laying in gobs of food-stuffs and trick stoves, and hanging around the Upatoi bridge watching anxiously and hoping for the best. Now it is Wednesday and nobody cares, with the exception of wives who, from the best patriotic motives, gladly saw their husbands off to the school again. Really Spartan of them, and I understand also that they said a few words about it in their prayers.

At any rate the flood is last week and today offers a springtime bill in our passing show. Speaking of spring, which must have caused that last outburst, we were out on a graded test this morning under that famous raconteur, (I hope word comes out of the press safely) Capt. Bolte, A Company was attacking yon hill. We were told to observe for security, surprise and simplicity. I may say that however secure the enemy might have been from surprise, there really was simplicity. What I started out to say was that suddenly as men and shots and students rushed by, the order was given to fix bayonets. As the charging waves of troops advanced I noticed one soldier with his rifle in one hand and a bunch of violets in the other. After all one should prepare I suppose for any eventuality.

Speaking of eventuality, or as we know them now, fifteen minutes at the stake, we have had more of the same, or a great deal more in fact. By the way, Lieut. Brimmer, who talked over his fifteen minutes, asked me to explain to the officers of Group 1 that he would have been glad to have stopped if he had known how.

(Lt. Daugherty took fourteen minutes for his introduction. It would appear, in this course of instruction that endings have not received the attention they deserve.)

I understand that Lieut. Hollister thought that fifteen minute talks were like vaccinations, as long as you had a certificate of past scars you didn't have to take another. At any rate he showed a newspaper clipping at which he was one of the speakers. The clipping read: "The speech of Lieut. Hollister was very earnestly rendered by one who obviously was not accustomed to public speaking." Which ought to rate a special dispensation, if not a wound stripe.

SEVENTH ENGINEERS

Company "A"

Services rendered by Company "A", 7th Engineers during the recent floods have proved again the versatility of its members. A few of these services supplied with pontoon equipment alone, include: Use of the boats for ferry service when the Upatoie Creek covered the bridge at Outpost No. 1 thereby enabling members of the garrison to make the trip to town over the customary route. A trip to Fort Mitchell, Alabama, by boat to give aid to a train and any possible refugees from lands under water in that part of Alabama, a long and strenuous trip that was made in record time. Pontoon boats were furnished the telephone and electric light companies so that their lines could be supported above water. The crews of all these boats deserve the highest commendation possible. A personally signed commendation from the Commandant expressed appreciation for the splendid efforts of the company in those hectic days of early March when it became necessary to reinforce the banks of the Upatoie with sand bags, log mattresses and such.

The return of the sun and renewed interest in baseball go hand in hand. McCarty, Perkins, Rowe and Callahan are all expected to star with the Post baseball squad. The Company league for the post can look out for stronger defense of the baseball trophy. A lot of new material accounts for that prediction.

With the departure of Corporal John H. Collins, discharged per E. T. S., the company loses one of its best all-around athletes. Collins was equally at home on the basketball court or baseball court or baseball diamond. He held the captaincy of the 1929 basketball squad.

GARRISON INVITED TO HEAR MONOGRAPHS

Interesting discussions of campaigns of the World War will be presented by members of the advanced classes before the company officers' classes during the coming week.

Captain Norman D. Cota will present his monograph on the Gallipoli Campaign, February 19, 1915-January 9, 1916, at 11 a. m. Tuesday, March 26.

Following Captain Cota, Captain Richard D. Daughterity will discuss the operations around Verdun, January 1-July 1, 1916.

On Thursday, March 26, Major Leven C. Allen and Capt. Edward S. Johnston will deliver their monographs commencing at 11 a. m. Major Allen's subject will be the Palestine Campaign. June, 1917, to the end of the war.

Captain Johnston will recount the personal experiences of the company commander of Company "E," 28th Infantry, during an enemy raid on the 28th Infantry the day before the battle of Cantigny.

Members of the garrison and their families are invited to hear the lectures, which will be held in Assembly Hall 4.

I. S. D. NOTES

Quite a few of the Greencords are out for regular berths on the Infantry School baseball team. From the way these ball sharks have been going after the ole hoss apple at practice it looks very much as if they will be numbered among the regulars when the final day comes. They are McCarthy, catcher; White and Cleveland, infielders; Woidyla and Douglas, outfielders; Duff and Tolle, pitchers.

Well after three years of yearning for the day when he could look the world in the face and shake off the bonds of army life, Pvt. Ashe, of the I. S. D., was discharged. After one day of looking the world directly in the eye, he double timed down to the recruiting officer and took on another stack for three more years.

Vol. VII. FORT BENNING, GA., MARCH 29, 1929 Number 28

Commended

Commandant Compliments Glee Club

The Infantry School Glee Club, which recently closed its production season with the presentation of The Mikado, has had official commendation added to the praise of critics and spectators of its recent production.

Brigadier General Edgar T. Collins, in a letter to Captain Lewis C. Beebe, president of the Glee Club, says:

March 25, 1929.

Captain Lewis C. Beebe,
President, Inf. School Glee Club,
Fort Benning, Georgia.
My dear Captain Beebe:

The Glee Club achieved such a notable success in its presentation of the operetta "The Mikado" at the local theatre on Friday and Saturday evenings, last, that I cannot permit the occasion to pass without some acknowledgment from this command.

Because of the delightful entertainment it has so invariably provided, the Glee Club has long since firmly established itself in the hearts of the people of this community. Never has it attained or deserved greater success than in its most recent production.

To present in such finished form a play of this character inevitably required months of patient and untiring preparation and rehearsal. However, the management and the cast may now find recompense for their devoted efforts in contemplation of the truly exceptional success ultimately realized and in thought of the genuine pleasure they so generously afforded others.

On behalf of the Infantry School and in its name I wish to convey to the Glee Club this expression of grateful appreciation and thanks.

Cordially yours,
EDGAR T. COLLINS,
Brigadier General, U. S. A.
Commandant.

Although The Mikado was the last of its productions for the season, the Glee Club will continue its Tuesday evening meetings for social purposes and to formulate plans for the next season.

On Tuesday evening, April 2d, the Glee Club will give a dance at Biglerville for its members and their families. Capt. F. E. Ambrose is chairman of the dance committee.

GARRISON INVITED TO HEAR MONOGRAPHS

Operations of various units during the World War will be discussed in the presentation of monographs by members of the advanced officers' class next week to the company officers' class.

On April 1st, beginning at 11 a. m., Captain Welcome P. Waltz will discuss the operations of Co. "C," 3d Machine Gun Battalion at Cantigny.

Captain Joseph Rustemeyer, following Capt. Waltz, will discuss the operations on the western front, May 27-June 8, 1918.

On April 2d, Captain Raymond P. Cook will deliver his monograph on the 2d Division in the Aisne-Marne offensive, July 18-25, 1918, and Captain Thomas E. Roderick will talk about his personal experiences while with the machine gun company of the 58th Infantry during the Aisne-Marne offensive.

Officers of the garrison and their families are invited to attend these lectures, which will be given in Assembly Hall 4.

Garrison Honors Foch

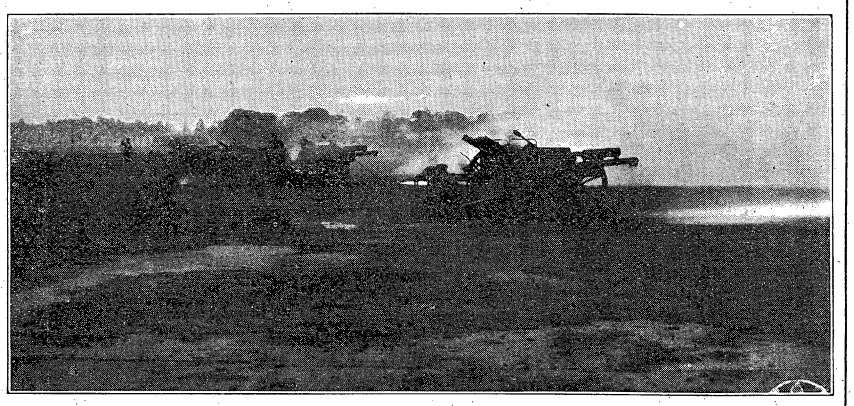
At daybreak Tuesday, Fort Benning began with a twenty-one gun salute the simple ceremony which paid tribute to the memory of Marshal Ferdinand Foch and which continued until sunset on the day of the funeral.

Battery "C," 83rd Field Artillery, was designated as the battery to fire the initial salute of twenty-one guns and the single gun each half hour until sunset.

Before dawn the battery was placed in line south of Gowdy Field, in readiness to fire at break of day. After the salute was fired, one gun was left in position to fire the half-hourly guns. Relief gun crews operated this gun until the last shot was fired at sunset. From reveille to retreat, the garrison flag was displayed at half-staff.

Similar honors to the former commander of the allied armies were rendered at every American army post.

LAST HONORS TO MARSHAL FOCH



Battery C, 83rd Field Artillery Battalion, firing salue of 21 guns to the Marshal of France at daybreak Tuesday.

RESERVE OFFICERS DIRECT ATTACK

Last night, in the sand-table room of the Infantry School, about twenty Georgia and Alabama reserve officers led an attack of an infantry company against an intrenched enemy.

Captain H. J. Liston, Infantry, an instructor in the Infantry School, first discussed the tactical principles applicable to the situation confronting the opposing forces and then outlined the tactical methods which might be used in the handling of the attacking force.

Officers were then assigned to command and the attack proceeded under their direction, each phase of the situation being discussed and analyzed before proceeding to the next.

An innovation of last night's class was the grouping of artillery officers who directed the fire of supporting artillery fire during the attack under the direction of 1st Lt. I. L. Foster, 83rd Field Artillery Battalion.

Last night's conference was the fourth of a series of lectures and troop leading problems which began at Fort Benning last September.

The next meeting will be at 7:30 p. m., April 11th, in the sand-table room at the Infantry School. Major J. D. Patch, plans and training officer of the 29th Infantry, will discuss the operations of the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, south of Soissons, July 17, 18, 19 1918.

HARPS POND DAM BEING REBUILT

Reconstruction of the Harps Pond dam, which was partially destroyed during the recent floods, began Tuesday under the direction of Captain William F. Heavey, 7th Engineers.

The work, which will be completed in about one month, is being done by Company "A," 7th Engineers, assisted by details from the 15th Tank Battalion.

Instead of a concrete core dam which was originally contemplated for the reconstruction project for which insufficient funds are available, an earthen dam with a driven pile center will be built.

The work of driving piles was begun Wednesday when the stream was diverted and a pile driver with a 1,300 pound hammer was placed in position by the engineers.

The reconstructed section of the dam will be about fifteen feet in height and will contain about 1,800 cubic yards of earth. An additional spillway, constructed of timber, will carry off about three times as much water as the old one and will give a large margin of safety for the dam during future floods.

DETAILED TO THE FIANACE DEPARTMENT

First Lieutenant William S. Kellar, 24th Infantry, has been detailed to the Finance Department, effective March 31st.

Lt. Kellar will report to the Finance School at Washington, D. C., for a six weeks' course of instruction and will then proceed to Chicago, Illinois, for duty at Headquarters Sixth Corps Area.

Scores High

Twenty-Ninth Infantry Sets Record

Comparison of shooting records of the Twenty-ninth Infantry with others recently announced shows that this branch of instruction is at a high standard in the Twenty-ninth.

Exact comparison of the records of the Twenty-ninth with those of other regiments is difficult because of the greater number of men in the two war strength battalions of the Demonstration regiment, nearly twice as many men firing all classes of weapons as fired in the largest of the other regiments.

Despite the much larger size of the Twenty-ninth, the percentage of qualifications in firing of all weapons, and especially of the rifle, is as great or greater than many, and the actual number of failures was less than in many regiments of one-third its size.

The scores of the 1928 firing season show a decided improvement over those of 1927, although the ammunition used in 1928 was a year older.

The average score of the men firing rifle course A in 1927, was 274.05; in 1928, the average score was 287.37, a gain of 13.32 points per man.

The percentage of qualifications with the rifle in 1927, was 93.20; in 1928, this was raised to 98.78 per cent., an increase of 5.5 per cent.

The same increase of proficiency was apparent in the records of the riflemen of machine gun companies who fired special course C. The average for this class of riflemen of Company D for the 1928 season showed an increase of 21.8 per cent. over that of 1927; that of H Company gained 6.69 per cent. over the 1927 record.

Comparison of automatic rifle records for 1927 and 1928 is difficult as different courses were fired each year.

The 1927 record appears to be the better one, as every company, with one exception qualified 100 per cent. of its automatic riflemen with high scores.

Pistol firing records show a decided increase of proficiency in the use of this difficult weapon. In 1927, the average percentage of qualifications for the regiment was 71.31 per cent.; in 1928, it was 88.64 per cent., an increase of 17.33 per cent.

In the use of the machine guns and howitzers, the Twenty-ninth is especially adept.

The 1928 season closed with 100 per cent. of both machine gun companies qualified, a slight increase over the 1927 record which was 98.61 per cent. for the regiment. Gunners' scores were high in 1928, one company's average score increasing by 12.84 points.

The Howitzer Company's records show a corresponding proficiency in the use of its weapons, 100 per cent. of its gunners qualifying in both 1927 and 1928.

THE TENTS OF KEDAR

Record firing for the rifle classes of the national guard and reserve company officers' course ended Tuesday, thereby bringing to a sad and dusty end many bright dreams of glory.

I shot a bullet into the air;
It fell to earth, I know not where;
An expert I had hoped to be;
Alas, I'm just a marksman, me.

Capt. Benjamin M. Smith, Alabama national guard, alias "Alabam," alias "Bench Mark," president of the 1929 class of reserve and national guard officers at Fort Benning, is a man of varied talents, as his friends know. But only recently, as a result of circumstances which we can only surmise—probably overwork and worry—Bench Mark became convinced there was a fire somewhere in the tented area. Without a thought of personal danger, he seized a fire bucket and dashed from tent to tent, seeking the Fire Demon. Doors were thrust open and the hawklike eyes of Alabam peered within, seeking signs of a conflagration. At last devotion to duty was rewarded. The fire chief saw the glaw of embers. He cut loose with the entire contents of his bucket, thereby extinguishing his own stove, and making no improvement whatever in the cot of his tent mate. But none could question the purity of his intentions.

First honors as interrogator in the machine gun course have been relinquished by First Lieutenant Lloyd E. Kelley of Washington, D. C., to Capt. I. E. Farrington of California. After a searching and traversing barrage of questions by Farrington one morning on Wagner Range, Kelley exclaimed in a loud voice. "I give you the crown." A movement to crown Farrington with pine cones at the first favorable opportunity is understood to be under way.

Second Lieutenant Daniel J. Lenahan, who recently volunteered his assistance to help the engineer officers stop the raging Upatoi, has found a new field of helpfulness. Lenahan now has offered to teach the fine points of polo to the ponies of any players of the regular service who feel they haven't quite mastered the game. To date, strangely enough, he has received few acceptances of this benevolnt offer.

There are two Captains Mason in the machine gun course. One is Capt. J. W. (Noisy) Mason of Ohio, the other Capt. F. W. (Quiet) Mason of Oregon.

POME TO GEORGIA

The Georgia corn is potent,
The Georgia sun is hot,
But when it comes to floods and such,
Old Georgia rates a lot.
The innocent young streamlets
Stand up on their hind legs,
Big roaring rivers overnight,
All full of dirty dregs.
They wash away our schedule,
They cover up our bridge,
Our brave M. P.'s are flooded out,
There's no lights up the ridge.
By candlelight and stovepower
We eat our simple chow,
Georgia, at floods you lead the world—
We'll say you do, and how!

CHILDREN'S PLAY-GROUND PROPOSED

Construction of a children's playground in the area between Block 23 and Block 21 has been proposed by a group of officers of Block 23.

PERSONNEL SECTION, HDQRS., SPECIAL UNITS

Some people seem to think that there is something unlucky about the number 13. It has proved to be anything but that for the personnel of the Personnel Section of Special Units. On September 13, 1928, General Orders No. 29, Headquarters, The Infantry School, were published creating a new unit at the Infantry School. (We are all familiar with a news item that appeared in the Infantry School News some time past, which gave the different small units placed under the control of one headquarters.) In it's infancy, the work of starting the personnel clerks off on the right foot, was somewhat of a difficult job. After seven months of hard work on the part of everyone concerned, the Personnel Section has gained recognition as a smoothly working machine, functioning in every capacity with the ease of an organization that has labored together for years rather than months.

The impression one immediately gathers when entering the Personnel Section office, building number 86, block 7, is that there before him lies an office that literally breathes "efficiency" from every angle. The desks are all arranged in convenient, orderly fashion, with the absence of unnecessary litter and papers from the desk tops very pronounced. Lost motion seems to be something for some other office, but not for this.

Now comes the task of ascertaining the persons who have made these things so up-to-date. We walk into a little room on our left, and we find Captain Frank L. McCoy, 24th Infantry, sitting at a desk, very busily engaged over some papers. He glances up, and with a smile, asks of what assistance he might be to you. When told that you would like to ask some questions of him about how he ever got his office force into the harness so quickly and efficiently, he smiles and replies, "Why I have had a very easy time with the office force. You see, I have some good clerks out there." Well, he is very modest but we don't quite take it all for the absolute truth, because, you see, we know a little about Captain McCoy, and his methods of doing things. So much for the Personnel Adjutant.

Let us pass on, at Captain McCoy's hint, to the desk just outside the Personnel Adjutant's desk, and see who this is sitting behind the desk with the sign on it that tells us that a Sergeant Major presides. Kessengir! By Jo, the best personnel clerk in this neck of the woods. Don't get me wrong. I am speaking of Sergeant Richard S. Kessengir of the I. S. D. To him falls quite a bit of responsibility. To him falls the lot of keeping tab on the output of the clerks, and at the same time serving as the right hand man to the Personnel Adjutant.

cluding Lewis Stone, Hobart Bosworth, Dorothy Sebastian, John Mack Brown and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in a new film by Michael Arlen, depicting a love drama of London society. In this story Gilbert plays the part of the son of a British nobleman who is warned by his father that his infatuation for Diana may spell ruin to all of his ambitions and cast disgrace on the family. Miss Garbo plays the part of Diana, a pleasure loving English girl, who exercises a special fascination over all men of her acquaintance. In this role she is seductive and magnetic. The theme is an absorbing melodramatic one of romance and the vicissitudes evolving from love misdirected. It is presented against an entrancing European background. One of the high lights of action in it is the spirited Oxford-Cambridge boat race on the beautiful Thames.

While she changes clothes in his cabin, he saunters to the Casino; later she arrives at the Casino in time to see Curtis evicted and brutally kicked, she emotionally takes his part only to find him yellow and worthless. A series of incidents occur involving these people in intrigue, and difficulties. Beautiful Catalina Island, where the "flying fishes play," afforded the picturesque tropical setting for this story.

SIC SEMPER MONOGRAPHIS

COAT OF ARMS
ADVANCED CLASS 1929

Crest—On a wreath of the colors a derby, brown, bearing the inscription "Dunce" proper.

Shield—Argent, on a bend sable, between in sinister chief a "red light" and letter "U" surrounding a push pin of glass, natural and in dexter base the armorial "M I" vert with paternal buzzer glues; one pointer argent.

Motto—Monographia Ad Nauseum.

History

The shield in silver with a black bend commemorates six weeks of battle. The heraldic pointer on the bend is symbolical of members of the royal blood. In contradistinction and when disgrace has occurred, is the ugly and degraded letter "U,"—a label which in itself is descriptive of those who backed a losing side,—the object being, of course, to distinguish the getter and not to penalize the giver. The push pin of glass is becoming Moore and Moore famous inasmuch as they have a remarkable facility for maintaining the continuity of battles fought in the Assembly Hall No. 2—Lange area. The red light symbolizes an impolite restriction placed on the opposing forces only five minutes prior to a cessation of hostilities. The M I (matters of major importance) is descriptive of a method used by members of the royal blood to call attention, heraldically, to those who made beautiful but distorting mists of conversation without conclusive proof, that the bird's eye view of the bull is more desirable than the bull's eye view of the bird. The buzzer of gules is used to denote the fact that battles must be won, or lost, within twenty-five minutes—much complicated ingenuity was lavished in devising this harmonious arrangement.

The crest symbolizes the nine hundred copies of twisted mimeographs surmounted by the well known conical brown derby. Similar headgears are worn during many of the class pageants and tournaments, and are escutcheoned with a new name, an Anglicized version of the Italian for blockhead.

The motto summarizes this descriptive account and is characteristic of a succession of productions showing alike the ignorance of orators and the indifference of listeners.

Place—Biglerville.
Date—First and Third Mondays.
Next Meeting—April 1st.
Time—2:15.

On next Monday afternoon the Womans Club expects to enjoy the program which two floods have interfered with. The City Federation will present their excellent program as hitherto announced, and in addition Mr. Mullendorf, one of the most skilled pianists in the South, will play a group of famous selections. The last flood came on the date that this wonderful musician was to have been the main attraction on our program, and it is our exceptional good fortune that these excellent programs could be merged and we are assured of having an entertainment of marked quality at our next meeting. Our club year is drawing to a close and plans for next year must claim the attention of the club soon. The nominating committee will submit a roster of officers for the consideration of the club at the next meeting.

After the program the club members and their guests from the cultural clubs of Columbus will enjoy an informal tea.

The Literary Club had its last meeting for this season on Monday afternoon. Mrs. Leon Norris presented a most interesting group of contemporary writings of miscellaneous types.

Meade Minnegerode's "Cordelia Chantrell" was given in comprehensive resume by Mrs. Samuel A. White. This novel is of Charleston before and during the Civil War and the characters and locals are accurately depicted. It is a dramatic romance of extremely important people who loved and hated with a vengeance. The old French rhyme found in the first pages of the book foreshadows the intimate working out of the plot. It was particularly interesting to hear Mrs. White discuss this book, for she is a Charleston girl, knowing all about the charming traits of this old aristocratic city and recognizing the first families with their idiosyncrasies and interpolating intimate features of the St. Cecelia Balls and other Charlestonian customs.

"Nothing beware of Chantrell fair, Chantrell dark bring misery stark."

John Riddle's "Meaning No Offense" was reviewed in an original and thoroughly fascinating way by Miss Katherine Banks of the Junto Club of Columbus. This bo k and its author are more or less riddles, there being interesting conjecture as to John Riddle's identity—but never mind whether that is exactly his own name or not, he has written cleverly of authors and critics and has parodized the late best sellers in a fascinating way. Most of us recall his so-called ridicule of Frances Newman's last book, "Dead Lovers Are Faithful Lovers" under the heading "Dead Novelists Are Good Novelists," which was thought by some to have had some bearing on Frances Newman's sudden death. In Miss Banks a vivid new personality was presented to our literary circle and she was as interesting a study as the book she reviewed.

Last on the program was "Prima Donna" by Pitts Sanborn which was brilliantly reviewed by Mrs. Charles W. Ryder. This very new book is, as the title suggests, the story of a gifted girl whose career as a great singer carried her from her small home town to the great musical centers of the world, where her life was influenced by great teachers and directors and lovers. In her wide experience she developed certain qualities that made for her intimate operatic success though they failed to qualify her for that inner happiness for which the soul seeks. She came to realize, as all artists ultimately must, that Art and not happiness is the goal—and she was able to put her career first and, by so doing, accomplished success and incidentally did some very magnanimous things.

THE MARSHAL PASSES

To those who played even the most minor part in the stirring events which historians now refer to as the World War, there was something particularly touching in the simple military tribute paid by this garrsion to the memory of the great soldier who headed the Allied armies in the greatest war in history.

As the twenty-one gun salute to a marshal of France burst at dawn last Tuesday morning, the elapse of years was for the moment forgotten and one seemed to be living again in the tenseness and patriotic fervor of 1916-'17 and '18.

The rumblings of war; the assembly of a gigantic army; the training camps; the secret departures for overseas; more training camps; the great day of moving into battle; the Great Adventure for many; the Armistice; the return home; all passed in swift and silent review.

As each gun boomed on the half-hour, the solemnity of the occasion became more and more firmly impressed. Half the world was mourning the passing of the great soldier who had brought it to safety out of its hour of peril.

Millions of men's lives have been entrusted to this man; tens of millions of prayers follow his soul into the Great Beyond.

The Marshal has passed but he will live forever in the memory of the civilized world.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION

The old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," seems to express pretty well the views of an enlightened school of modern medicine.

This school of thought regards the problem of keeping well as important a one, or perhaps an even more important one, than the problem of getting well when one is sick.

To be sure, this branch of medical science does not advocate the neglect of curative measures in the combatting of diseases but it does advocate the elimination of diseases by preventive means. In other words, it seeks to prevent the effect by eliminating the cause.

This school of medical thought believes that a great many ills can be avoided by intelligent application of simple preventive measures. It seeks to bring the layman and the doctor together in closer understanding and to so educate the layman in health matters that he will be able to cooperate intelligently with the doctor in applying preventive means to reduce or eliminate many of the diseases which unnecessarily afflict mankind.

The accomplishments of such men as Gorgas, Reed, Pasteur and many others, offer abundant proof of the soundness of this theory.

Here's To Your Health, is the title of a series of weekly health talks written in non-technical language by Major E. E. Hume, Medical Inspector of Fort Benning, at the special request of The Infantry School News, in which this feature will appear exclusively.

These talks are of particular value and interest to every man, woman, and child in the garrison. By preserving the copies of The Infantry School News in which these articles appear, one will very soon have a handy reference file of authentic medical information of particular value in the prevention of illnesses peculiar to this locality.

COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

THE BACKYARD ZOO

A little way off one of the main thoroughfares leading to the north of the city, there is a row of small frame houses in a more or less advanced state of disrepair, which serve the dual purpose of housing a variety of small business enterprises and providing living quarters for the proprietors of these establishments. This arrangement of utilizing the front of the house for business transactions and the rear for domestic purposes seems to be an efficient way of cutting down operating and living expenses at one stroke and probably has other advantages as well.

One day, while passing these houses, I noticed on the front of one of them a gaudy and evidently "home-made" sign which called attention to the "Worlds Most Strange and Wonderful exhibition" inside.

"Mulligan's Zoo" will suffice for a title. That, of course, was not its name.

I made a mental note of the place and determined to visit the "Worlds Most Strange and Wonderful exhibition" at the first opportunity.

Having an hour at my disposal the other day, I decided to spend it in a visit to Mulligan's Zoo. The proprietor, whom I shall call Mr. Mulligan, was leaning on the front gate, which he politely opened when he saw that I wished to enter.

"Yes, sir. Come to see the zoo? Come right on in," he said. He led the way, not into the house, as I had expected, but around to the yard in back and conducted me to a lean-to shed made of innumerable pieces of scrap sheet iron and tin which covered several small cages.

In one of the barred cages was a small brown monkey which alternately scowled and chattered at us. A pair of geese honked and hissed and several pouter pigeons strutted and cooed in their cages nearby. In another a small turtle lay motionless, half submerged in a pan of water. Coiled up in one of the screened cages, a medium-sized rattlesnake regarded us fixedly from its beady eyes. The other cages were empty.

"I haven't got much left. I sold most of my animals an' things to a fellow over in Alabama last week. I think he's goin' to buy the rest of 'em, too," said Mr. Mulligan, forestalling my question about the vacant cages. "I used to have about the best collection in the country. I can show you all the write-ups about it. Crowds of people an' all the ladies used to come to see it. Kind of sorry now that I'm a-sellin' it." Mr. Mulligan sighed regretfully. "Business hasn't been so good lately an' this fellow made me a good offer. Before I decided to sell anything, I went to a meeting of the city commissioners an' tried to get them to put up a building some place so that everybody could enjoy the zoo but they didn't take no interest." Mr. Mulligan spat disgustedly.

"What else did you have?" I inquired.

"Well, I had some of the finest things you ever seen. I had chickens with silk hair, dancing rats, alligators, fancy pigeons an' a lot of other things. I had some gophers. Do you know, there are lots of people that never seen a gopher? I had some bats, too. Lots of people don't know what a bat is like. Oh, I had so many things you'd be surprised. I had a lot of snakes, besides that feller there."

"It must have been a fine collection," I remarked, "it would take you a long time to replace it, wouldn't it?"

"No, not very long," Mr. Mulligan replied. "I'm the fastest workin' fellow you ever saw. Why, I can work faster'n electricity. All you got to do is tell me what to do an' in no time I've got it done. There ain't a thing slow about me," Mr. Mulligan added modestly.

"Just let me tell you how I got that rattlesnake you see over there. A thousand people saw me risk my life to capture him an' protect the city of Columbus. It was like this. One day somebody seen a snake over there in those lots an' in no time a big crowd had gathered an' was standin' around an' lookin' scared. Two or three fellows tried to capture him but they didn't know how to look for him an' got scared off. An' then I come along an' pushed through the crowd an' says, 'Let me get that snake, mister.' So I went out there alone while two thousand people watched me. I looked around an' I didn't see anything. Then I heard him rattle. You know, a rattlesnake's got a peculiar rattle; he fools you an' you can't tell where the noise is a-comin' from.

"Well, this snake he rattles again an' a woman screams. 'Stand aside an' be quiet, sister,' I says. An' then I look around for Mister Snake but I can't see him; a rattlesnake's got a most deceivin' nound. I walk out in the field an' the crowd is all still an' quiet.

"I see a log over there,"—Mr. Mulligan leaned forward and shaded his eyes as if peering into the snake's hiding place,—"an' I think he might be there because snakes hang around logs."

"I listen,"—Mr. Mulligan cupped his hand behind his ear,—"he rattles again an' I'm sure he's behind the log."

"I get down on my hands an' knees,"—Mr. Mulligan dropped down on his hands and knees,—"an' creep up to the log. I raise my head real careful-like an' look over the log an' I see him a-layin' there lookin' me right in the face."

"I don't move for fear of scarin' him, so I casts my eyes first this way an' then that way to see what his disposition is. Then, just as quick as lightnin', I reach over with my left hand an' grab him by the neck." Mr. Mulligan illustrated his capture of the snake in elaborate pantomime.

"Three thousand people cheer as I stand holdin' the rattlesnake by the neck, an' they sure give me plenty of room when I carry him across the street. Then I took out his poison while the crowd watched me, an' there he is!" said Mr. Mulligan, pointing dramatically to the lone snake in the cake, "that's what I saved Columbus from!"

"What are you going to do with him?" I asked.

"I think that Alabama fellow is goin' to buy him an' the rest of the things. The only reason he didn't take him before was because he took a sudden dislike to snakes after we had went to a friend's house to sort of celebrate him buyin' the zoo. He ought to be over it by now. Yes, I'm sure he's goin' to buy him, an' anyway if he don't, I'll sell him to somebody else." Mr. Mulligan gazed at me thoughtfully. "Maybe I'll give him away," he said.

A sudden fear that he might be considering me as a founder of a home for rattlesnakes smote me and I remarked hastily that I must be going.

Mr. Mulligan's voice now took on the half-mournful, half-resentful tone of a public-spirited citizen whose proffered benefaction has been coldly repulsed by an unappreciative community. "Yes, sir," he said, "Columbus has lost its chance."

JUNIOR OFFICERS LYCEUM

On Saturday, March the 16th, Col. Pendleton continued the junior officers lyceum with an informal discussion of questions that had come up as a result of previous lectures.

The regimental commander compared the former system of promotion by examination, the present system of promotion by vacancy, and the proposed system of promotion by length of service. The Colonel gave a vivid description of the "old" Army, and of studying for examinations. The Colonel pointed out that those officers who availed themselves of the opportunity for study were the officers who came to the front in the Great War.

The regimental commander expressed the belief that promotion by length of service would lead to the loss of prestige of increased rank. He also advocated a return to the old system of promotion by examination as beneficial to the individual officer, and to the Army as a whole.

FOOD POISONING (PTOMAINE POISONING)

The term "ptomaine poisoning" was formerly frequently heard and is still in use but the average individual has but a hazy idea of what it is. A better term is food poisoning. Two very different conditions are known by this name. First, there is a serious infection due to the use of meat from a diseased animal. Such meat has no distinctive odor, taste or appearance, despite popular opinion to the contrary. Secondly, there is a disease called "Botulism," occurring not in fresh foods but in those that have been improperly preserved. Canned foods (including vegetables and fruits) are most often at fault, particularly those preserved at home, when heating has not been for a sufficiently long time or at a sufficiently high temperature. A can that shows bulging (due to gas within) or holes, even pin holes, should be rejected and its contents not used for food.

When actual decomposition of food sets in there is sufficient unpleasant odor and taste to make the food so unattractive that it will not be eaten. The so-called "high game" formerly popular was dangerous because it was eaten despite nature's warnings that it was unsafe. It is therefore not so much decomposed, as infected food, that may be dangerous.

While under certain conditions it is possible for vegetable and mineral foods to cause illness, it is the foods of animal origin that are the chief offenders in food poisoning. Chief among these are milk and meats. Such products must, for safety, be derived from healthy animals, handled by persons free from disease, protected while being transported and finally properly kept after delivery. In the army care is exercised in the acquisition of satisfactory products and in their storage while awaiting sale or delivery. Once delivered, it is necessary that the owner protect his property in accordance with the laws of health.

It is common knowledge that milk and meats should be kept cold. Milk will absorb the taste of other foods kept in the ice box and should therefore be kept covered and preferably in a separate compartment from such foods as fish, cheese, and certain fruits and vegetables with characteristic odors. The compartment below the ice is ordinarily the coldest in the refrigerator and is an excellent place for milk. Milk is sometimes kept too long instead of being used while fresh. If several partly filled bottles are kept on hand, the oldest may be the last to be used. Of course, during the time it is kept, bacteria keep on growing and ultimately will produce souring even though the milk be kept on ice.

Meats are very perishable. They must be removed as soon as possible from the paper or other wrapping and air allowed to reach them while in the refrigerator. The oxygen in the air helps to prevent spoiling. Such spoiling often begins when the housewife is delayed in going home from the meat shop and the meat left too long in the wrapped parcel. Meats keep better after cooking, as the heat has helped to destroy many of the bacteria that cause spoiling.

Headquarters Company

Corporal Lovelace has had a touch of Flu and is sure pressing his blankets in fine shape since he has been back from the Hospital and marked quarters.

Corporal Peyton and Private Arnold are enjoying the hospitality of the hospital at the present time due to the fact that the flue is making an unwelcome visit with them.

Sergeant Perkins was disturbed several times the other evening while trying to sleep. Seems as though every time he would drop off to sleep the telephone would ring. Very disgusting isn't it Sergeant.

Privates Hendry, Rodrieguez, and Satterlee have completed the required recruit instruction and are now doing Company duty. "Yea", Private Hendry was initiated into the Ancient and Honorable Order of Bucks by receiving a K. P. the first day.

Corporal Hinkley left Monday for Greenville, South Carolina, for a try out with the Greenville baseball club. With him he took the good will of every man in the company. "Good Luck," Hink.

Private Pippin returned from the hospital last week and is performing the duties of Company Clerk, with him as his assistant he is honored by having Private Satterlee.

Company "A"

We have been in the new barracks for some time and I am sure that all the members of the company are glad that they are not in tents since this rain.

Our "Crooning Doughboy" sang "Lilac Time" at the Main Theatre Sunday night and is to sing over radio in a few days. Bob Birdsong is also a good athlete, he was on the All-Army ballfootball team and has played baseball with the Post team. He is also a good basketball player. Bob hails from "Ole Miss."

Jack Harper, who lost practically all of his teeth in the football game between the 1st Bat. and the 2nd Bat. is having his teeth put back in. Jack is also a very good track man and the 1st Bn. track team will miss him in the next meet due to an injury that he received in a football game last season.

Cpl. Hamscher was promoted to the grade of Sergeant and Pfc. Johnson, J. H. was promoted to the grade of Corporal. Sgt. Harris who has been on detached service was transferred to the Recruiting Service.

Company "B"

Upon serving their term of enlistment Pfc. Juan A. Guzman and Pvt. George Paul were honorably discharged last week. It is believed neither will re-enlist although Guzman thought he would be compelled to, because of the high water. When the M. P.'s refused to allow him to cross the river he returned to the company begging for a bunk. Poor Goose. He nearly had to sleep out in the cold, cold water.

The present disaster is quite realistic in "B" Company as we are being fed (can you call it that) "A La Field Service."

Company "C"

Pfc. Stewart returned Sunday from a furlough of forty-five days which he spent in Greenville, S. C. He can now be seen back at his old position of "Slinging Slum."

The writer desires to know where the 3rd Squad, 1st Platoon, was on the night of March 15th, 1929. How about it, Darmofal.

A great number of men of the company have inquired as to the condition of Sgt. Hayes' finger. I am very glad to announce that it is improving rapidly. In fact, much too rapidly, I fear he will be forced to hurt it again in order that he may be excused from bayonet training.

Pfc. Lokken is back with us again after spending six months on special duty, with the Officers Mess. He was relieved at his own request, and I fear about three days on the bayonet court will make him remember that little request for a long time.

Corporal Rayl is very busy receiving and recording, applications for the Old Soldiers Home. His assistant, Corporal Taylor, has not, for the past week, been on duty, but will resume his duties Monday.

Company "D"

Pfc. Crawford has reported back from furlough, he claims that the reason his furlough papers were in such bad shape that he fell in the river, we wonder how that happened.

The boys are glad to see Sgt. Veale back on the job. Sgt. Veale has been on a two month furlough visiting his folks in Buckhead, Georgia.

The fact that no one could go to town Saturday made it awfully hard on Pvt. Crews and Pvt. Williams.

Our rocking-chair specialist, Cpl. Fournier has been trying out our new recreation hall furniture. We hope he is well satisfied. The rest of us are all for it.

Cpl. Swan is on furlough and stated in a letter that he is having a wonderful time. We all will be glad to see him return.

Company "E"

The company has been busy running the bayonet course this week and we are expecting to qualify 100 per cent. this year on the course. We have an excellent chance, for we have one of the best instructors in the army, Captain Rutledge.

"Fat" Franz is certainly doing his stuff on the bayonet court this season and seems as if he will come out in first place when the course is run for record. He was high man last year. One hombre in the company "Polack" Furman, though he had high place cinched last year until the round boy "Franz" ran the course like a scared rabbit, taking first place.

We have one boy in the company that may not qualify this year on the bayonet course. It is none other than "Spud" McCoy. Of course there is a reason, and "Spud" calls it a good one. He says he finds it hard to keep his mind on duty since he met his future wife-to-be, down at North Highlands, Columbus, Ga.

One of the men in the company came in the orderly room one morning last week and wanted to find out what "Slum Burnin" McCallister was doing in the real estate offices down town.

It was learned later that he was applying for a five-room bungalow. "Swede" Oikari has agreed to bear one-half of the expenses on this bungalow, as he is thinking of getting hitched up himself sometime soon.

Company "G"

Corporal Thomas seems very much in love, as every spare moment he has he writes nothing but love letters. If that will keep you oscillating, keep it up, Corporal Thomas.

Corporal Maksimoski has made a wonderful showing in the middle weight amateur tournament. He has won every battle so far and believe me he has had some hard customers to deal with. We are all proud of you, Corporal, and we will be with you in the next battle to back you up with our cheering.

Cpl. Clyde Taylor is on the regimental small bore rifle team. He has been making some nice scores. Stay with them, Clyde. We'll try to feed you.

Sgt. Johnson, our supply sergeant, says he thinks he will break the record on the bayonet course this year. He made it in 80 seconds with an average of 84 per cent. last year.

As we were having garrison inspection Saturday morning Private Whitby was picked by the company commander as one of the neatest men in ranks. The captain asked him what he used to shine his shoes and Private Whitby innocently replier, "Sir, I scrubbed them and put a light coat of linseed oil on them." The captain immediately gave him a pass.

Company "H"

Though the high water, and singularly, the dearth of water, may be bemoaned here and elsewhere, the situation has its bright aspects according to members of the company. Chins were never held as high as those unshaven ones at the Saturday morning inspection. Sgt. Harkey's sable visage stood out above them all.

The Saturday nighters weren't an downcast as might have been expected over the lack of bath water. Some said that it is merely an old Spanish custom anyway and to miss one S. N. B. would be allright. The necks around here are beginning to assume an ebon hue too, and the nightly prayer (?) has become one for H2O.

SPECIAL UNITS NEWS

Howitzer Company

Sgt. "Major" Betz has returned from furlough just in time to enjoy the beauties and conveniences of the Chattahoochee river at flood stage. He being of web-footed ancestry seems very much at home, though he is still wondering just how they anchor one of those pontoon boats.

We have installed a buzzer system so that the company commander may, when out of humor, summon the entire staff and inform them of their deficiencies. Our Mess Sgt., Tom Tompkins, has already admitted that he is more than a little deaf, though we understand that the buzzer in the kitchen was the cause of his being arrested for speeding.

Sgt. "Crip" Yearty has a rather unusual experience while boat riding in Columbus, when his mount was struck by a fast moving flivver, catapulting him into the icy flood waters. We who have been confined to the limits of the garrison would have appreciated such a baht, though we expect it was rather disagreeable to Sgt. Yearty.

Sgt. Roper had a very fine ol' time in getting to town last week-end for the wearin' o' the green occasion, but after much fast head work Sgt. Roper reported in, although some few hours late. From all indications all had a grand and foine toime.

Cpl. Cole was very much peeved last week, being caught in town and could not return due to so much—no not water, but social affairs. Better take along a bathing suit next trip, Beanpole.

Line Batteries Take Notice. Anything pertaining to harness, leather or whatnot can be readily taken care of by out standing Saddler LaPine. Doug says that what it takes to wield a wicked awl, he has got. And how?

Talk of baseball has began to buzz around the battery with many already predicting the position they are to play. Sounds like some big league gossip to hear all the home runs already being banged out. Cpl. Arnold says that he shall take care of second base, but we all hope not like he did last year in a certain game down town. How about that Burr-Head? Was it one of your off days or the curves?

Farmers take notice—McCallum says that he has a cow with three spigots, and much argument has arisen between ye city slickers and McCallum.

Next Sunday the battery quartet will render that famous little song entitled: There is no water, as the water washed it all away.

Battery "C"

Private Edwin D. Wold has returned from a furlough to Louisiana where he has been recuperating from a serious attack of pneumonia. He states that a grand time was had by all and how.

Sergeant Thomas M. Hall, our most esteemed Chief of the First Section, is in the hospital. Here's hoping to an early recovery, Sarge.

This battery was honored by being designated as the one to fire the salute for the late Marshal Foch. The Post was awakened to the booming of guns at an early hour but not as much so as some of the men who were awakened when their bunks capsized at about 4 o'clock a. m. We take pride in our battery, although at times the horses and the guns are exasperating.

Sergeant Johnson states that the B. C. detail could not fire as Gunners. Communications Corporal Fair brother was on guard and the gun was rusty, referring to the aiming circle.

Private Paschal must have had a lucky streak or an exceptional piece of good fortune as he received one of the coat sweaters given by the battalion to the members of last year's baseball team.

Corporal Goodwin says, "Boy, boy, how she could love is no name." This statement was made after having been to the movies, but it was thought for a while that he was referring to some one of our acquaintance, and as yet we are not entirely convinced that this is not the case, as said corporal is quite popular with the fair sex.

WALKER SMITH KAYOES BILLY BRITTON IN THIRD ROUND AT FORT ARENA TUESDAY NIGHT

Twenty-five hundred fight fans packed the Fort Benning arena last Tuesday night to witness one of the classiest fight cards of the season. From the opening gong of the first preliminary bout until the final toll of the referee's fatal ten over Billy Britton, the entire card was filled with action.

For two and one-half rounds Fightdom watched the "Louisiana Cyclone" swarm all over Billy Britton, Memphis fighter, with a devastating two-handed attack that was climaxed in the third round with a deadening right to the solar plexus that stopped Britton cold.

Weaving and bobbing in with a two handed body attack, Smith took the offensive from the opening bell. His short smashes at close range to the head and body had the Memphis battler worried before the end of the first round. Near the end of the second round Smith crossed a right to Britton's jaw that dropped him for a short count. As Britton wilted under the right, Smith shot a left that barely skimmed the top of Billy's head, the force of the swing carrying Smith over the ropes and into the laps of the ringside fans.

The third round was short and sweet while it lasted. Britton landed a right to Smith's head as the soldier weaved in close but failed to slow him up. Smith forced Britton into a corner from where Britton started in to slug his way out. Smith ducked Britton's sweeping right as he stepped in close sinking a terrific right to Britton's stomach that floored Britton for the count and added another scalp to the Louisiana Cyclone's heavily laden belt.

Semi-Final a Blaze of Action

Pandemonium is much too mild a term to describe the bedlam that reigned supreme in the crowd during the slashing eight round battle between Blondie Parker of the I. S. D. and Ginger Jernigan, of Columbus, welterweights.

The first and second rounds were fast and furious with both boys showing a willingness to mix. The third made the first and second resemble a petting party. Jernigan started the fireworks when he dropped Blondie with a choppy right hook to the jaw. Blondie came back fighting and it was was anybody's ole fight until Jernigan landed a terrific left to the button that sent Parker to the Land of Nod as the round ended. How Parker's seconds revived him is a mystery but when the bell clanged for the fourth, Blondie was in there throwing leather. For three solid minutes Blondie, who probably didn't know whether he was boxing or swimming, punched and pounded Jernigan about the ring, and three times sent him to the canvas with terrible right hooks to the chin.

Following the fourth round both fighters slowed up but during the remaining four rounds the crowd was kept at high tension with fast and furious flurries that threatened to end in a kayo.

The draw verdict awarded by Captain Wilson at the end of the fight met with the hearty approval of the entire audience. It would have been an extremely tough break for either of the fighters to have been named the loser after such a wonderful exhibition of fighting spirit and gameness.

There has been heretofore a suspicion among the fans that Blondie Parker "could not take it," that he would curl up when the going got rough. Fight fans who saw this youngster stagger back from the brink of slumberland and fight his way to a draw in one of the greatest ring battles ever witnessed at Fort Benning last Tuesday night, know that no gamer fighter ever pulled on a glove than the blond-headed Greencord battler.

Preliminaries

Billy Shell of Columbus caught a Tartar when he was matched with Soldier DeMars of Fort Bragg. DeMars showed the Columbus southpaw more gloves than he ever saw before. Flashing a beautiful one-two, DeMars rocked Billy from pillar to post to take a clean-cut decision.

K. O. Gordy handed Tuffy Thompson of Fort Bragg an awful beating but failed to knock him out. In the final round Thompson was groggy and bleeding but managed to stay the limit.

Raven Poe was entirely too good for Moon Johnson. Poe won on a technical knockout in the second round.

Fuzzy Douglas of the Galloping Gunners outslugged Gabby Gable of the Demonstration outfit. Gable gave Fuzzy an awful lacing in the second round but the rangy gunner came back to wallop the daylight in the final round to take the decision.

Red Lawson was in poor condition and ran out of steam in the third round, allowing Tiger Austin to win a decision over him. Both fighters were from the 24th Infantry.

The next fight card will be held in the outdoor arena on the night of April 9th.

24th REDS TAKE TWO GAME SERIES FROM TUSKEGEE INST.

The strong Tuskegee baseball team invaded the home of the Happy Hearts at Fort Benning, last Monday and Tuesday but were unable to break into the win column against the Reds in the two game series.

Monday's game was a close, hard fought affair that looked very much like a victory for the visitors on several occasions.

Leonard started on the mound for the Reds but his curve was pickings for the visiting batters. Leonard gave way for Stokes after the third inning when Wolridge poled one to the flag pole for a homer with a runner on ahead of him. Stokes had his fast one working but his control was poor. Stokes was yanked for Vance in the seventh with the score tied at four all. Vance's underhand delivery was a complete puzzle to the opposing batters and during the final three innings their hitting was confined to one bingle. Vance fanned in the eighth inning, but dashed for first when the catcher dropped the ball. Vance went all the way to third when the throw went to the right field fence. He scored the winning run on McDuffie's long sacrifice fly to center.

Bookin, a southpaw, twirled a good game for the visitors and with proper support would have scored a win. Errors were responsible for his loss.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
24th Infantry	5	9	5
Tuskegee	4	9	6

Batteries: Leonard, Stokes, Vance and Hampton; Bookin and Powell.

Tuesday's Game

With Vance pitching steady ball backed by errorless support, the Tuskegans were blanked Tuesday afternoon 5 to 0.

The entire Red team played big league ball, holding the visitors helpless during the entire game.

This was the first series for the Reds this season and the ease with which they took both games from the Tuskegee team is ample proof that the Reds have a powerful aggregation of ball players this season.

Johnson at third base seems to be faster this season than he was last year and his throws to the bags are fast and accurate. Hampton quickly showed the visitors that stealing was taboo at Fort Bening, when he nipped a couple of their speed kings trying to pilfer the middle sack.

"Cat" Hayward, who has played third base for the Reds for fourteen seasons, failed to show up at the opening game. It is rumored that "Cat" will be back in harness within the next week.

POLO

The standing of the four teams competing in the annual garrison polo tournament is now as follows:

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
Freebooters	2	0	1.000
83rd F. A.	1	1	.500
29th Inf.	1	1	.500
Students	0	2	.000

The first games took place at French Field last Sunday afternoon. Of these, the Freebooters took the first from the Students by a score of 10 to 2, running away from their opponents except during one chukker. The second game was much closer, the 83rd Field Artillery gaining a victory over the 29th Infantry by one point only, score 5 to 4. This was a hard fought battle from start to finish and might well have gone either way until shortly before the final whistle.

Wednesday's first game seemed to a considerable extent the deciding game of the tournament. It was between the 83rd Field Artillery and the Freebooters and was won by the latter. The score was 6 to 5. This also was a very exciting struggle, in which first one team and then the other was ahead. In the fourth period the Freebooters piled up a two goal lead. In the last chukker, the Artillery, with Guernsey, the team captain, carrying the ball, made five desperate tries to score, all but one of which missed.

Wednesday's second game was another heavy defeat for the Students by the 29th Infantry by a score of 8 to 1. During the first half of this game the Students were unable to prevent the Infantry from scoring almost at will. All of the eight goals of the 29th were made in this half. In the last half the Students tightened up and held their opponents to no further goals, making one for themselves.

As the teams now stand, the Freebooters will win the championship unless defeated by the 29th Infantry next Sunday. In that case the two teams will be tied as to per cent. of games won. It has been decided in such an event to award the championship to that team which has the largest number of goals scored. The Freebooters now have 16 goals to their credit. The 29th has 12 goals. In order to win the championship the 29th must defeat the Freebooters on Sunday by a margin of five goals. A four goals margin will tie everything up and a play off would then be necessary.

SECOND BATS WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

Benning amateur leather pushers finished the post amateur boxing tournament last Wednesday night at the garrison gymnasium. After a series of highly interesting and hard fought bouts, the Second Bats, of the 29th Infantry, topped the heap of the Benning battlers with a total of six first places.

The amateur tournament was watched with interest by the fight loving fans of Fort Benning, for in the amateur timber are the makings of future army fighters. Wednesday night's bouts were witnessed by a large crowd of enthusiastic fight fans. The bouts were ran off fast and they were filled with the kind of action that pleases the gore loving fight fan.

The results of the tournament was as follows: Bantamweight class, Martin, Co. "H," 29th Inf.; featherweight, Luce, 83rd F. A.; junior lightweight, Gullis, Co. "E," 29th Inf.; lightweight, Azbell, 15th Tank Bn.; junior welterweight, Harbour, Co. "F," 29th Inf.; welterweight, Lucas, 15th Tank Bn.; middleweight, Maksinowski, Co. "G," 29th Inf.; heavyweight, Hunter, Co. "H," 29th Inf.

The winners in each division were given gold medals. The losers received silver medals.

Places for units: Second Bats, 6 firsts, 1 second; Tankers, 2 first, 4 seconds; Artillery, 1 first, 0 second; Engineers, 0 first, 0 second.

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

Whata Week! Trench digging in the morning, equitation in the afternoon, and a war in between. Trench digging, according to the curriculum, is engineering, but according to the boys who are engineering holes on one of Benning's best hills, it ain't even that.

After finding out by personal experience that it would take a company officers' class eleven years during peace time or one H. E. shell at any time, to complete a battalion trench area, we were given an examination on how many shovelfuls of dirt, and why, could be taken out by eight men with three shovels, two picks, one aze, two saws and a bobbin of wire plus three flat feet. That was the instructor's question. My question is, if it takes a student officer four hours to calculate the construction of a battalion trench area and the enemy is due in four hours, what may be said of the battalion's condition upon the arrival of the enemy? Quite right, class. But we will let Capt. Gregory give the answer.

Speaking of public speakers, the following bit of what-of-it was garnered by ye scribe during a second innoculation which he underwent of machine gun instruction. But to continue, Capt. Wharton had just concluded his lecture to the National Guard class on machine guns. Turning to Capt. Joe Collins, who stood in silence near by, he said: "Capt. Collins, would you like to say something to the class?" As Joe advanced rapidly, Wharton added, "It's twenty minutes to twelve."

But to get back to the war. It seems that the Reds were attacking Bradley's landing with the intention of pushing as rapidly as possible through Georgia. That was the situation as given to Col. X. at 1.28 3-4 P. M. Tuesday, the 26th. Requirements—your orders and actions down to the minutia. To assist Col. X and his sun-kist subordinates to an unruffled solution of the problem the 29th Infantry was to be officered only by members of the student personnel. This I might mention, is the big yearly recreational feature for the 29th Infantry. In addition there were four thousand student observers. These were mounted and divided into groups and told off to observe the action of particular students commanding units of the 29th Infantry.

Really you would have thought they were from the Inspector General's Department and that we were holding a lot of war back from them. I suggest that the next time we have one of these affairs that the observers be informed that while dirt under the fingernails is to be deplored, it has no tactical relation to war, except possibly as an indication that it is a dirty war.

Turning to peace, shame has come among us. One of those sturdy old qualities that meant so much to Buffalo Bill, Paul Revere and other famous horsemen has been painfully violated by one of our brother students. It seems he has a quilted seat. I don't know whether I am quite plain, which is not entirely my fault. There is a certain delicacy about this subject. I am talking about equitation. If you were a sailor I could explain that abaft this officer's beam he has a quilted seat inserted where he rides. But not being a sailor I will have to let the subject drop.

LIEUTENANT REES GOES TO KENTUCKY

Vol. VII. FORT BENNING, GA., APRIL 5, 1929 Number 29.

Major-General Fuqua Named Chief of Infantry

REAPPOINTED CHIEF OF STAFF

General Charles P. Summerall, recently re-appointed by President Hoover as chief-of-staff of the army. He is the only full general now in active service and was an outstanding combat officer during the world war.

NEW CHIEF OF INFANTRY

Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, Chief of Infantry

The appointment of Colonel Stephen O. Fuqua as Chief of Infantry, with the rank of major general, to succeed Major General Robert H. Allen, upon the expiration of the latter's four-year detail on March 28th, was announced by the War Department a few days ago.

Major General Fuqua has been stationed at Fort Jay, Governor's Island, New York, for the past two years and was in command of the 16th Infantry at the time of his appointment as chief of the doughboy branch.

During the World War General Fuqua was assistant chief of staff of the 37th and 28th Divisions, was in the operations section of the staff of the First Army and was chief of staff of the 1st Division. He remained with the 1st Division as chief of staff while it was in Germany and after its return to the United States until 1921.

After leaving the 1st Division, he became successively assistant chief of staff of the Third Corps Area, assistant chief of staff of the Hawaiian Department and a member of the training sections of the staffs of the Eighth and Second Corps Areas.

For his distinguished services in the World War he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, the Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor and the French Croix de Guerre. His Distinguished Service Medal citation reads: "Colonel Stephen O. Fuqua (Infantry), General Staff Corps, U. S. Army.

"In charge of the troop movement subsection of G-3, 1st Army, from its organization until he became chief of staff, 1st Division, he was responsible for and supervised the movements incident to the concentration of troops for the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives of the 1st Army, which involved many thousands of men and was accomplished with the greatest success. His untiring, painstaking, and energetic efforts had a marked effect on the success of these major operations."

General Fuqua was born in Louisiana on December 25th, 1874. His military career began during the Spanish-American war in which he served as captain of the 2nd U. S. Volunteer Infantry in Cuba. Upon the outbreak of the Philippine Insurrection, he joined the 29th

CLASSES AT BENNING TO BE REDUCED

A reduction in the size of the student officers' classes at the Infantry School will go into effect at the beginning of the school year 1929-1930. The combined classes of the advanced and company officers' courses will number about 150, of whom about 70 will be in the advanced class and about 80 in the company officers' classes.

It will be the policy of the chief of infantry to limit the number of students in both courses to about 150 in future years. At the opening of the school year of 1930-1931, a further change will be effected in the size of the advanced and company officers' classes, although the total number of students attending the school will remain the same. After 1930, it is expected that the advanced class will be reduced to 50 and the company officers' classes increased to 100.

According to school authorities, the reduction of the classes will result in increased efficiency of instruction. It is also expected that competition for the fewer number of details to the school will be general throughout the infantry and that a school detail will be hence-

COMPLETES DETAIL

Major General Robert H. Allen, Ex-Chief of Infantry

Completing a four year term as chief of infantry, Major General Robert H. Allen was succeeded on March 28th by Colonel Stephen O. Fuqua, whose appointment as major general took effect on the same date.

General Allen was appointed chief of infantry on March 28th, 1925, and during his term of office did a great deal to increase the efficiency of his branch. The promotion of marksmanship has been especially stressed in the infantry during General Allen's administration. In 1927, the infantry developed a rifle team which won first place in the national team matches, a distinction which the infantry had not enjoyed since 1920.

General Allen is himself a distingushed marksman and took more than a personal interest in marksmanship instruction and competition in the infantry. During the 1928 national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, General Allen was daily on the firing line coaching and encouraging the team which the infantry had pitted against the other branches. No member of the team was more keenly interested in the matches than General Allen, who sat at a telescope in the rear of the firing line and followed every shot to the target. He was captain and coach of the A. E. F. and Inter-allied rifle team in 1919.

A man of distinguished appearance and commanding mien, General Allen, nevertheless, has always been recognized as a friend of the enlisted man. He is proud of the fact that he began his military career as an enlisted man yet he is the kind of an officer who can give a soldier a friendly pat on the back without relaxation of discipline.

General Allen enlisted in the 8th Cavalry June 8th, 1893, and served as private and corporal in Troop D until he accepted a commission as second lieutenant of infantry November 4th, 1895. He was promoted to first lieutenant August 11th, 1898; to captain March 25th, 1901; to major July 1st, 1916; to lieutenant colonel December 1st, 1919, and to colonel July 1st, 1920.

On August 5th, 1917, he was promoted to colonel, National Army, and given command of the 356th Infantry, which he led overseas and commanded in battle during the battle of the Meuse-Argonne. General Allen especially distinguished himself at the crossing of the Meuse on November 10th and 11th, 1918, of which operation he was in charge. For his exceptional services during this engagement and for his services overseas from July 22d, 1918, to August 6th, 1919, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal and a silver star citation.

General Allen is an honor graduate of the Army School of the Line, 1920, standing first in his class, and a graduate of the General Staff School, 1921.

FRIDAY, APRIL 5

"RED HOT SPEED," starring Reginald Denny in a speedy comedy drama of speed and traffic laws and a girl who would not drive slow. A young assistant attorney energetically starts a campaign against auto-speeders—a beautiful and spirited society girl convicted of speeding is parolled in his custody; their plight results in a merry rollicking tale of motor trouble and heart trouble. He haled her into court for breaking speed laws—and then courted her for breaking his heart. The story is one of speed spiced with love, chucked full of trouble and hilariously punctuated with laughter producing incidents. You will enjoy it.

"Gridiron Demon." Fables.

Pathe News No. 27, showing Mexican army digging in and recent flood scenes.

SATURDAY, APRIL 6

"KING OF THE RODEO," starring Hoot Gibson in a stirring picture actually filmed on Soldiers' Field, Chicago, during the National Rodeo which was recently held there. Hoot personally competed in events of skillful horsemanship at this show. In addition to showing authentic pictures of this great contest, a nifty plot forms the interest sustaining vehicle—he fell in love with an eastern girl in a filling station, courted her from the saddle of a bucking bronco, and kissed her for the first time in a taxi. A highly recommended western.

"A Dumb Waiter." Sennett.

SUNDAY, APRIL 7

"FOUR SONS," starring Francis X. Bushman with an exceptional supporting cast in one of the most interesting of pictures based on the great war. This story is quite different, in that there is a preponderance of human drama over battle scene action. It depicts in a most faithful manner the effect which the war had upon family ties and carries the observer through trials and tribulations suffered by the home folks. The picture is seen from the German viewpoint where home life is most beautiful. The story opens in a Tyrolian village, showing a happy family in their old home—the war comes—3 of the brothers answer the call to arms, while the fourth, who had previously sailed for New York, marries a beautiful American girl and prospers. When the war breaks out he is torn between love for his fatherland and love for the country of his adoption—he joins the American colors and sails to fight against his fatherland; on the battle field he encounters the only surviving brother. Following the war his mother embarks for America—difficulties develop at Ellis Island, and the scene shifts to the tremendous environs of New York. The story ends most happily, but throughout there is never a moment that doesn't pull at the heart strings.

M. G. M. News No. 65.

Margaret Mann in "Four Sons"

MONDAY, APRIL 8

"The GATE CRASHER," starring Glenn Tryon with Patsy Ruth Miller in a hilarious comedy-romance with a mystery plot. It is the story of a hick amateur detective who falls in love with a stage star, follows her to New York and ferrets out who stole her jewels. It takes you into the Follies and other places where you would like to be, and causes a perfect cyclone of fast moving comedy with trick disguises and ludicrous situations.

"Tarzan the Mighty No. 12."

TUESDAY, APRIL 9

"SINS OF THE FATHER," starring Emil Jannings in a highly emotional melodrama. Jannings plays the part of a German-American who starts as a waiter, becomes a saloon keeper, then a wealthy bootlegger. He serves a prison term—good behavior wins an early release, and he leaves, a broken down old man. The story carries you onto the New York stage, into the dens of highjackers and into hilarious night clubs. It is borne on a theme of romance that is most absorbing.

"A Gym Dandy." Cameo.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10

"MANHATTAN COCKTAIL," featuring Nancy Carroll with Richard Arlen in a story tingling with a back-stage romantic melodrama. The locale is the bright lights of New York City, and the vivid atmosphere of theatrical back-stage with colorful emphasis on the rehearsals and dancers. The story is one of the interest absorbing type which keeps you stirred up every moment.

M. G. M. News No. 66.

THURSDAY, APRIL 11

"THE AIR CIRCUS," starring Sue Carroll with David Rollins in a story of Young America's attempt to emulate Colonel Lindbergh and conquer the air. The theme has to do with commercial aviation and the efforts of two boys (typical of the horde that nowadays tries its wings) who step out of life in a mid western town and take up the study of flying on the Pacific coast. It depicts most vividly the experiences a student goes through in learning to fly. There are many breath-taking and thrilling scenes among the crowds. The high spots are deftly smoothed n the wings of romance.

"School Begins." Our Gang Comedy.

FRIDAY, APRIL 12

"THE FLOATING COLLEGE," starring Sally O'Neill with William Collier, Jr., in a peppy collegiate romance in which these stars put over a fast one on old man gloom. The story, laid mostly at the Coral Beach Bathing Club on the California Coast, describes the campaigns of two sisters to annex the affections of the handsome young swimming instructor. The younger sister uses the direct method system popular nowadays with the younger generation, but the older sister complains to their father that her sister is making a fool of herself over the young man, and suggests that she be sent off on the floating college cruise, thus leaving the field. Numerous complications set in during a hilarious succession of college gaieties. The picture terminates in a totally unexpected climax. It is that type of pleasing story designed to relieve one of any tendency towards the blues.

"The Laundryman." Fables.

On Tuesday evening the members of The Infantry School Glee Club had a charming frolic in the form of a program-dance at Biglerville. A program with a typical Japanese sketch at the top bearing the captions "A Night in Japan" was given each guest, and interspersed with the oriental dance music were selections by the outstanding stars of "The Mikado," some in the lovely form presented so successfully recently at their excellent performance, and some in ludicous caricature which caused wild merriment among the audience. The song, "The Little Maids of Japan," so beautifully sung by Marion Barber Boyd, Hazel Rogers Barker and Helen Norris, was taken off in April Fool fashion by Major Barlow, Capt. Boyd and Capt. Norris. They wore kimonos, flowers in their hair, carried fans and did the burlesque in great style. As an encore they did a take off of "Braid the Raven Hair"—that lovely song where the two little maids helped Yum Yum dress for her wedding. Capt. Leon Norris was the dainty Yum Yum and the way Maj. Barlow and Capt. Boyd completed "her" toilet was a scream! Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. Barker, Mrs. Norris and Captain Rutledge sang some of their loveliest songs and it was a source of genuine regret that Lieut. Greene, Capt. Crowell, Lt. and Mrs. Rothrock, who took major parts in "The Mikado," were unable to be present, for all were on the program of the Mikado finale frolic. Dance music was furnished by the 29th Infantry orchestra and during the intermission ice cream, cake and coffee were served.

The guests assembled at 1:00 and found their places at a long table which was decorated with green pottery vases of white iris and gild ozelia. The place-cards were "hula-girls"—a reminder that the charming hostess goes soon to Hawaii. After an elaborate luncheon, tables were arranged for progressive bridge. Mrs. W. H. Vinson won first prize, a double deck of new modernistic cards, Mrs. L. R. Boyd, second, a rubberized card table cover, Miss Louise Hosic, third, a novelty score pad. Miss Boyd was given an Elizabeth Arden lip stick as guest's prize. Those enjoying this delightful party were: Mrs. Berger, Mrs. Herlihy, Mrs. Curren, Mrs. Roosma, Mrs. Dark, Mrs. Overfelt, Mrs. Wayne Smith, Mrs. Boyd, Miss Boyd, Mrs. McCord, her mother and sister, Mrs. Hosic and Miss Louise Hosic, Mrs. Wessels, Mrs. Vinson, Mrs. Conrad.

Silver baskets held pink and white mints and at each guest's place was a pink nut cup holding salted nuts. The place cards were tiny ballet dancers whose shirts were hearts, clubs, spades and diamonds. These charmingly different place cards were brought from Paris by Mrs. Pearson last fall. After the game, luncheon was served. Mrs. Adrian Brian won an Italian pottery vase, Mrs. Frances G. Bonham won a kirk silver meat fork, Mrs. William G. Freehoff, a kirk letter opener. The honorees were given beautifully decorated boxes of bath tablets. Those included in this hospitality were: Mrs. Dooley, Mrs. Ferris, Mrs. Sherburne, Mrs. Freehoff, Mrs. Rader, Mrs. J. L. NEWS FROM THE MEDICAL DEMONSTRATION DETACHMENT

The Medical Demonstration Detachment celebrated its first anniversary last Saturday night with a stag dance. Music was furnished by the detachment's new radio. Solo dances were put on by Privates Black and Joyner. A good time was reported by all those present.

It has been rumored around the barracks that Pvt. Allison, the detachment barber, is about to enter the matrimonial kingdom. So that is the reason of the one-way pockets, Sam.

Pvt. Gilbert, our popular baseball player, was overheard to say that the only thing that kept him out of the big leagues were the managers.

Pvt. Black—Say Woodham, do you know the difference between the head on the Statue of Liberty and your head

Pvt. Woodham—No, what is the difference?

Pvt. Black—There is no difference as they are both empty.

Pvt. Bell has gone home on a ten-day furlough to settle an estate. Well. Scopes, did you take enough paper and pencils along to figure it out?

Sgt. Gustafson, our first sergeant, is about to become the owner of a new Hudson coupe. Who is going to be chuffer, Sgt?

We overheard one of the men of the detachment say that he knows how to get nice long letters from home. When asked how, he stated that all you have to do is give them a hint that you are going to buy a ring for your sister.

Cpl. Yutmeyer says that now he knows why we have an organization day.

We see that Sgt. Norville is still riding the bus. Maybe you had better put a quarter in the meter, sergeant.

Privates Jennings, McCloud, McCormick, Gilbert, Adams and Magee were assigned to the Medical Demonstration Detachment within the last week. Welcome, boys.

Conversation heard at the mess hall:

Pvt. Stephens: Say Bryant, you have reached for everything on the table. What is the matter, haven't you a tongue?

Pvt. Bryant: Sure, but my arms are longer.

Now that all the wards in the old hospital are closed, except ward 7, the Demonstration Detachment can get down to work again. It is about time, as some of the boys are forgetting their squads east.

APRIL SIXTH

Tomorrow, April sixth, twelve years will have passed since the United States made the decision to actively support the Allies with men and guns and ships of war. It was a momentous decision, indeed, for rich and potentially powerful as the nation was, it was unprepared for war.

The decision having been made, a problem of appalling immensity confronted the country. The task of organizing, training, equipping and transporting an army of millions; the production of weapons and ammunition; the building and arming of ships; the supplying of the thousands of other necessities required in modern war was confidently undertaken by a peace-loving nation unused to the ways of war.

Blunders were made—and paid for in treasure or blood—but soon two million American soldiers were beside their allies overseas while two million more were ready to join them to carry on the fight for the preservation of principles of right which a peaceable nation had imposed upon itself as a task.

The spirit of the undertaking was expressed by President Wilson in his address to Congress which he concluded by saying: "To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured. God helping her, she can do no other."

SIGNS OF SPRING

All about us we see the signs by which Nature announces the arrival of spring. The ground is green with young grass; trees and shrubbery teem with buds and blossoms which scent the air; gorgeous arrays of color mark the early blooming flowers; the birds are with us again, borne on the balmy breezes.

Another indicator of the arrival of the vernal season is with us but Nature has nothing to do with this harbinger. He is the soldier who, on the first warm day, dons a shirt of lavender, green, pink, or whatever other boisterous color he may favor, and swaggers about, serenely unconscious of the startling effect of such splotches of color against the sober tone of the service uniform.

Akin to this gaudy individual is the back-to-nature man who seems unable to endure the thralldom of cravats and buttons but must needs expose his throat or perhaps a hairy chest to the soothing spring breezes and the disgusted gazes of the passers-by.

Whether these gross infractions of propriety, custom and regulation are committed through ignorance or intent makes little difference; the appearance, and it is a bad one, to express it mildly, is the same.

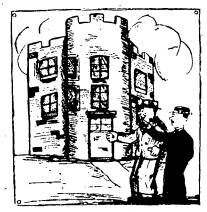
COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

SILO CASTLE



At the junction of two main highways near the southern edge of the city, there was once a dairy farm. All that now remains of what must have been a good-sized establishment are the cement floors and foundations of the barns, a few troughs and a large concrete silo. For months I had passed this place nearly every day, barely glancing at the huge hollow concrete shell which stood like the turrent of a medieval castle amid the ruin and decay of its former grandeur.

One day, I noticed that the place had lost some of its deserted appearance and that a workmen's scaffold had been hung on the outside of the silo. The purpose of the scaffold became apparent in the next few days. Holes began to appear in the thick wall of the silo and slowly assumed the shape of windows. Then notches were cut in the top of the silo which gave it the crenellated appearance of a castle tower. Presently other operations began around the base of the silo. These soon shaped themselves into the walls of a building which joined and partly embraced the silo at one corner. When the structure was finished, there was a sturdy little cement-coated brick building with a tower at one corner which resembled a restoration in miniature of a stronghold of the middle ages. Curtains appearing at the windows and other indications made it evident that somebody was living in the structure. The occupation of a silo as a dwelling seemed to me to be a little bit out of the ordinary and I awaited an opportunity to satisfy the curiosity which the castle-like arrangement aroused. It came one day when I saw a man out in front of the place whom I rightly judged to be the lord of the castle. He was tinkering with a compact little piece of machinery enclosed in a metal jacket about the size of a large water bucket. A question or two disclosed that the little machine was an automatic, electrically operated water pump which supplied water under pressure for the miniature castle.

Questions about the "castle" itself were affably answered and soon I was invited in to see the place. I accepted the invitation with alacrity.

Excusing himself for a moment, the lord of the castle made a rapid reconnaisance of the interior to see if everything was "all right," and then bade me to enter.

I found myself in the castle's living room, a room about twenty feet square, or nearly so, for into one corner protruded the bulky wall of the former silo. Through this wall a door had been cut which gave access to the interior, no longer the dark, smelly inside of a silo, but a light airy room used as a bedroom. It was perfectly round and about eight feet in diameter. There was room, with little to spare, for the double bed and a dresser.

"Makes a good room, it's cool in summer and warm in winter," remarked the lord of the castle, whom, for the sake of brevity, I shall call Mr. Lord. "There's plenty of ventilation with these four windows here, and you can see that it is easy to keep clean; there are no corners to catch dirt," he said.

After we had thoroughly inspected the two rooms on the lower floor, Mr. Lord conducted me to the floor above to which a stair led from the living room. The arrangement upstairs was similar to that of the ground floor, one square room and one round room. The third floor of the tower, which is one story higher than the square or newest part of the castle, is reached by means of a ladder which runs up the inside of the second story round room.

Mr. Lord's arrangements for heating and ventilating his castle are quite simple. A single stove, set in the living room on the ground floor, suffices to heat the entire castle in the coldest weather, he said. Ventilation is accomplished by opening a window on each floor which causes a rapid circulation of air. "Comfort the year 'round," according to Mr. Lord.

As we passed outside, Mr. Lord pointed to a round, cement-lined pit, about ten feet in diameter and as many in depth, and half filled with water. "Our bath," he said. The "bath" was the pit of a twin silo which had once stood beside the castle's tower.

Business reverses, caused by ill health after Mr. Lord had been established for sixteen years in Columbus, were indirectly responsible for his becoming the lord of the miniature castle. A period of five years spent in sanitariums and health resorts after the collapse of his business left him with scanty means. "I had to get something cheap," he explained. He glanced thoughtfully over his estate as he named the sum it had cost. "I think I got a lot for my money," he said. "Yes, I think so, too," I agreed, as I bade him good-bye.

This is the fifth of a series of sketches of subjects of quaintness and charm in our neighboring civilian community. The sixth will appear in an early number of the Infantry School News.

MACHINE GUNS ON HIKE

Company "H," 29th Infantry, spent three days last week on a combined practice march in full field equipment, a bivouac camp and a series of platoon and company problems. The company, in three platoons, accompanied by small detachments of the Service Company, Regimental Headquarters Company and Medical Corps, left its barracks Thursday morning and marched to King's pond, where it arrived about eleven o'clock.

A bivouac camp was pitched and the men spent the remainder of the day at rest. Friday morning the company executed several platoon and company problems. The afternoon was spent in swimming. A night problem which involved three platoons in different localities began shortly after dark and was just nearing completion when it was interrupted by heavy rain.

An excellent dinner was served Friday evening, at which the company entertained several guests who motored out from the post.

The company broke camp Saturday morning for its return march to barracks, where it arrived about three o'clock.

A new type of experimental rolling kitchen was used during the march and camp and gave good service. Communication with the garrison was maintained by a radio operated by a detail from Headquarters Company.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

Mosquitoes and the Diseases They Transmit

Everyone knows that mosquitoes are troublesome with their annoying bites and persistent habits. Nearly everyone nowadays knows also that mosquitoes may carry disease. A comparatively few individuals know just what these diseases are. There are many varieties of mosquitoes; all bite but only certain ones carry disease. The most important diseases transmitted by the insects are malaria, yellow fever, and dengue fever. Yellow fever, formerly a curse of nearly the whole continent, particularly the warmer portions, has been practically banished from the earth. Our Army is proud to remember that it was Major Walter Reed, Medical Corps, the distinguished father of Lieut. Col. W. L. Reed, 29th Infantry, and in whose honor Walter Reed Hospital is named, with his coworkers, who made this possible by their discovery that the mosquito is guilty of transmitting the disease and that it may be borne in no other way. Without this discovery there would have been no Panama Canal. Dengue fever, sometimes called "breakbone fever" on account of the sensations of the sufferers, is transmitted by the same type of mosquito. Dengue frequently occurs in Georgia and other Southern states.

The other mosquito borne disease is malaria, sometimes called "ague" or "chills and fever." People used to think that it came from going out into the "night air" or that vapors or "miasms" arose from swamps and gave them malaria (the word really means "bad air.") We know now that it is the mosquito in the night air that is to blame. If not properly treated malaria is a most serious and even fatal disease. In India a hundred million individuals have it each year and of this number nearly two million die, and even in the United States it causes great havoc. We depend on several means of preventing the disease. Screened windows and doors and mosquito bars are used to protect us against the insects. At Fort Benning mosquitoes breed in every month of the year, though of course they are more numerous in warm weather. The insects lay their eggs in stagnant water. By draining we try to eliminate such bodies of water, particularly those of the type in which the malarial mosquitoes live. Even the tiny pools of water which may be contained in discarded cans or bottles are likely breeding places for mosquitoes and care should be taken to dispose of such receptacles so as to prevent their use for this purpose. The recent floods added many new mosquito breeding places. Where it is not practicable to drain out the water, oil is placed on the surface. The young mosquitoes (called "wigglers" or "wiggle tails") have to come to the surface to breathe and if there is a film of oil on the surface, they are suffocated. On a post as large as this one, with almost innumerable pools and ponds, it cannot be hoped to oil all possible breeding sites. So it remains necessary to see that our screens and mosquito bars are in good repair. There are many so called "repellants," that is, substances which have an odor objectionable to mosquitoes and are therefore supposed to repell them. Probably the best of these is oil of citronella, but no repellants are dependable and are apt to give us a false sense of security. The mosquito which when standing on the wall or elsewhere seems to "stand on its head" is of the type which carries malaria. The other mosquitoes, when at rest have their bodies parallel with the surface on which they are standing.

Next week's subject Sun Burn.

Prizes for that contest are handsomely painted pictures of the "Grump" in his favorite fighting pose, autographed by the kid himself.

Service Company

Corporal Charles Hopke and Pvt. 1cl. Edward L. Carpenter, two old timers who took out a stack of chips in this game of soldiering some thirty years ago, have now only a few months to go These old timers have soldiered in many climes and have participated in many stirring adventures. They will retire within ten days of each other and yet this is the first time they have soldiered together. It is rumored around the barracks that they intend to go into the chicken business together, in competition with Sgt. Huffenberger, our big chicken and egg man. Another rumor has it that they are to go into partnership with the tailor, Joe Gillman.

Howitzer Co.

Cpl. Hamer, Pfc. Yawn and Pvt. Peele have just returned from 30-day furloughs spend in various parts of Alabama, North Carolina and Georgia. They all report a good time, and judging from their looks they must have had plenty of good times.

Cpl. J. R. Johnson was discharged per E. S. T. and has not re-enlisted yet.

Cpl. Alston departed on a 30-day furlough April 1, which he intends to spend with the Tennessee Ridge Runners.

Pvt. Daniel was called home on an emergency furlough, due to the illness of his mother.

FIRST BATTALION NEWS

1st Bn., Hdqrs. and Hdqrs. Co.

The bright sunny days seem to have ushered into our company an insect that is expected every year at the coming of warm weather. This particular one isn't a new species of insect life at all. It has been creating a commotion among the athletes and would be athletes of the country for many years. It's name is familiar to nearly every one, but for the benefit of those few who haven't recognized it by now we will recall it's name once more. It is the Base Ball bug. This so-called bug is sure performing it's duty in an excellent manner among the boys of our company. Baseball is all you can see during the spare moments in the early evening, and after dark if you pay close attention to the little groups of men gathered together, you will undoubtedly hear more about baseball.

Company "A"

Our company baseball team has started out good. We have played two games and won both. Looks like we are going to win the championship again this year.

Cpl. Bishop has relieved Sgt. Ferguson as supply sergeant and Pfc. Durscherl has relieved Cpl. Freeman as company clerk.

Pvt. Earle was discharged and stated that he is going to try some other post for this hitch.

29TH INFANTRY REGIMENTAL SMALL BORE RIFLE TEAM CONCLUDES SEASON

With two victories and two defeats the 1929 shooting season for the 29th Infantry small bore team closed a few days ago.

This is the first year that the 29th Infantry has ever had a small bore rifle team.

In the last two matches the 29th Infantry team came into its own and handily defeated the 10th and 26th Infantry teams, thus demonstrating the improved marksmanship that they had acquired by days of hard practice under the tutorship of Major J. R. Brooke.

The members of the team are to be congratulated upon the manner in which they took their earlier reverses and the grim determination with which they settled down to work and turned out a winning team. The teams in the future who will represent the 29th Infantry will not labor under the handicap which faced the pioneers, as they will have veterans from the year before to form the nucleus upon which to build.

Several of the team members will try this year for positions on the infantry team which is being formed at Fort Benning.

Maybe some of Cpl. Bower's friends would like to know where he is. He is in the Service Co., 20th Infantry, at Ft. D. A. Russell, Wyo. Cpl. Bower was company clerk of Co. "A" for six years.

Cpl. Hensley, Pfc. Hale and Pfc. Lyons was discharged. Pfc. Lyons was color guard. Pfc. Garrett was appointed in his place. —Buddy.

Company "D"

Cpl. Tiner seems to be in very bad condition over his best girl back home entering the halls of matrimony, and we are sure it will take him years for time to cure a broken heart, and I am sure by what he states that he will retire in the army, and has only twenty-eight years to do. Good luck to you Cpl.

Our chief adviser, Pvt. Gordon, in love affairs, flat tires, etc., is growing a very healthy mustache, and I am sure he will make a big hit with his Columbus girls now. Good luck to you Gordon.

SECOND BATTALION NEWS

Company "F"

The company is a working bunch at the present time, getting ready for the baseball season and the three track meets that are to take place the latter part of April. Most of the contenders should be in pretty good condition, as the bayonet course is a good place for conditioning work. We are all looking forward to a brilliant success of our teams in both events.

Company "G"

The company has been busy running the bayonet course last week and we are expecting to get over high this year. We have a fine chance, every one is putting out. Let's keep up the good work.

All you can hear around, outside of quarters is keep off the grass, not only Company "G," but all over the post.

Rugler Baker is breaking into the movies. The last picture Baker played in was Square Shoulders. Atta boy, Baker.

DETAILED TO COLOR GUARD

Private first class Arlie Pinkerton, of Company "B," has been detailed a member of the regimental color guard to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Private first class James Johnson, also of Company "B."

COMPANY RECEIVES CHAMPIONSHIP TROPHY

Company "F," 29th Infantry, whose small bore rifle team won the regimental championship without losing a match, last week received the championship trophy cup at a presentation ceremony which followed a regimental review.

The presentation was made by the regimental commander, Colonel Harris Pendleton, Jr., who expressed his satisfaction at the beneficial effects of the competitions in the regimental small bore league which was organized at his suggestion several months ago. The convenient facilities which the league's members have at their disposal added greatly to the interest of this branch of marksmanship which many enjoy as a recreation.

TRANSFERRED FROM THE 83RD

First Lieutenant Harry M. Schwarze, 83rd Field Artillery, will depart from Fort Benning about July 1st to take station at Ardmore, Okla., for duty with the 359th Field Artillery, Organized Reserves.

HEADQUARTERS, SPECIAL UNITS

I said in this column last week that I would use some of the other members of the Personnel Section as subjects for discussion this week. Now I don't think that they like being subjects at all, that is, they had rather see the other fellow squirm. All that makes little difference with me. It would take all the powers of a machine gun platoon to keep me from writing this week about Sergeant Patrick.

On November 26, 1903, at Sanford, Mississippi, the Magnolia state was increased in population by one (1), for then and there, was born our Sergeant Windell Patrick, Infantry School Detachment, Fort Benning, Georgia. Later his family moved to Wiggins, and that is where he hails from. Sergeant Patrick was graduated from high school at Collins, Mississippi, and when he was 21 years and 8 months of age, he enlisted in the Army on August 18, 1925. Patrick was first assigned to the Quartermaster Detachment. After he had been there for a few months, he transferred to the Finance Detachment, this station, for the purpose of attending the Finance School, at Washington, D. C. However, he had the hard luck to fall ill and go to the hospital, and remained there until the school had been in progress for about three weeks, and therefore, missed the chance to attend. Later on in that year, he transferred to the Infanty School Detachment, and has been there continually since that time. He was discharged on August 17, 1928, and immediately took on another stack with his beloved Uncle Sam, with his warrant as Sergeant continued in force.

In the early spring of 1927, he was placed on duty with the Personnel Section, The Infantry School Detachment, as Detachment Personnel Clerk. After the Special Units was organized, he remained on the same job, and is still putting out high grade work. He is an excellent typist, and knows Personnel work from ack to zed. He is always good natured, and never clouds the atmosphere with grouchy words or sullen actions. I might say that Sergeant Patrick is a soldier in the truest sense of the word. He is affectionately known by his associates as "Pat."

Our hats are off to you "Pat," and as usual, you have got to take this with a grin and a drink of water.

—B. B. Swayze.

THE TENTS OF KEDAR

The tents have offered a variety of climatic conditions in the last week; hot, cold, dusty, rainy, and—er, on one or two evenings—wet and dry. The dry ones were not so popular.

Choir practice was indulged in frequently in the company street in the two days before Easter, volunteer songsters bursting into song on the slightest provocation, or no provocation at all. The thought that "Old Soldiers Never Die" found its way to vocal expression so often one night that all those not singing wished heartily that old soldiers would die, and make it snappy, too.

The question of what sort of a class ring the 1929 national guard and reserve officers shall get now racks the brains and harries the emotions of the three-month student. Of course, it is no laughing matter. Fancy the humiliation of arriving at home with a $15 ring, set with a big moonstone, only to find out that our best people are wearing onyx this season. One shudders at such a horrid possibility. Some headway, it is understood, has been made by a minority faction who favor gallstones set in brass. Sort of symbolic, you know.

Next week's issue will contain the definite announcement of the date of the reserve and national guard officers' dance. You didn't know there was going to be one? Well, there is, and that right shortly. A committee, composed exclusively of the best minds, has gone into a huddle over the situation, and the girls of Columbus may as well look to their evening wardrobes and get out their warpaint. If this dance has nothing else, it will offer variety, with officers from all parts of the United States, and Texas, Hawaii and Porto Rico also are represented.

After tearing off his A uniform and assuming his D, and back to A and on to D for a half day recently, a harried student was heard to remark, "Well, they may not teach me much about the military, but I sure will be all set for a job in a Shubert chorus when I get through Fort Benning."

Course half over as this week ends. Another seven weeks and we will be back with our long-suffering families again, picking up the threads of civilian existence where we dropped them in February: Odd as it may seem, there have been no reports of businesses going on the rocks by reason of the absence of their best talent at Fort Benning. But doubless there has been a lot of quiet suffering in the business world. And certainly the stock market has been awfully nervous. The loss to Commerce, of course, being Uncle Sam's gain.

COLLEGE DETAIL

First Lieutenant Albert T. Wilson, 29th Infantry, has received orders detailing him for duty at Lafayette College, Easton, Pennsylvania.

BENCH MARKS AND AZIMUTH

Maps are printed in four colors;
Woods and grasses are in green.
Contours brown are drawn all over,
So the names of things ain't seen.

Mapping students don't you bother,
Azimuth don't mean a thing.
What you need is declination,
Then your contours form a ring.

Elevations seem to bother,
Some don't seem to see the light,
Hills and valleys, how to find them,
Keep you guessing all the night.

Streams are blue and so are marshes,
Works of man are all in black.
Sit up nights and work your problems,
'Till you think your head will crack.

Our Instructor's name is Jackson,
All these maps to him are clear;
But we are a bunch of dumbells,
Working nights till we feel queer.

Troops are marching toward the river,
Two and one half miles an hour,
Can you figure where they will be,
When they stop at zero hour?

Nineteen point two dash ten point six,
Is a place you must find.
It seems an easy thing to do,
If you find you have the time.

I study hard, I study late,
This fact you may seem to doubt.
I know I could pass the test,
If I could figure it out.

FORTY ROUNDS OF FIGHTING NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT

Raven Poe	vs.	Fuzzy Douglas	3 Rounds
Sackett Harbour	vs.	Winnie Waldron	3 "
Seaweed Wilson	vs.	Lefty Kline	4 "
Billy Shell	vs.	Grumpy Gordy	6 "
Doubtin' Thomas	vs.	K. O. Henry	6 "
Soldier DeMars	vs.	Young Jack Dempsey	8 "
Gunner DePratt	vs.	Johnny Walker	10 "

Forty rounds of boxing is on the schedule to open the outdoor fistic season this coming Tuesday night, April 9th. The balmy, summer weather of the past fortnight, at this writing, shows no sign of a let up. However, if there is a change to a rainy spell the bouts will be moved indoors.

There are so many boxers at the Post crying for work, in addition to the new group that developed during the amateur tournament, that it has been decided to stage as many bouts as can be comfortably put across in an evening.

Raven Poe, the machine gunner, who flashed a nice brand of milling on the last card, opens the bill with Fuzzy Douglas of the 83rd F. A. Douglas of late has become the official trial horse for budding cauliflower followers. Poe might have the same trouble of getting away from Puzzy's snaky left as Gabby Gable did. One angle to this scrap is the hirsute adornment the machine gunner carries. Petter Maher and John L. Sullivan were the last of the bruisers to wear a mustache. Shades of the 90's!

Sackett Harbour, champion junior welter of the amateur clique, the boy who has flattened every one he has met, takes a flyer next Tuesday against Winnie Waldron, a boxer who is being groomed by Ginger Jernigan. Sackett is a socker extraordinary. Whether he can stand up under the small gloves or not is the question. Again if he swings the five ounce mits with the same deadly effect as he handled the pillows, used by the simon pures, then the issue will be decided pronto. Watch this hombre hit.

The Wilson-Kline scrap of four rounds is a little personal matter that has been brewing ever since Wilson dropped Kline a month ago. Since then Seaweed has not been safe in North Highland; the Kline clan apparently has his number. Four rounds ought to decide.

The next is one to remember. After an uninterrupted string of victories, both here and at other clubs, Grumpy Gordy is booked over the six round route with the only man who has ever floored him. Billy Shell has been taking licking after licking. He has lost three in a row to Ptomey, Ralph Taylor and Soldier DeMars. Now, reasons the Grumpy one, is the time to step out and even up that knockout that Shell has placed on his record. Some will think that Gordy is taking on a bit too much in meeting Billy, but when the battles of the past month are considered, the fact stands out that the said Gordy was the headliner in a ten round mill at Dothan, Ala., only a few weeks ago.

The editor cuts this chatter down to two columns, so perforce the comments on the three remaining scraps must be condensed. Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., home of the 6th Cavalry, furnishes two mixers next Tuesday night. They are Sergeant Johnny Walker and one youth styled K. O. Henry. The latter faces Doubtin' Thomas, the youngster who works like a dynamo. Six rounds on the card has been set aside for these two lightweights. Henry is reputed to be mighty good, however, just how good Oglethorpe boxers are remains to be seen.

Soldier DeMars, who gave Billy Shell very little chance to use his famous left two weeks ago, is facing Young Jack Dempsey, of Atlanta, in the semi-final of eight rounds. Here is Atlanta's favorite at last. No edition of an Atlanta paper is complete without a story of Young Jack. He is busier in the Queen City than Grumpy Gordy is in the Chattahoochee valley.

The windup between Gunner DePratt and Johnny Walker narrows down to Sergeant of Infantry meeting Sergeant of Cavalry. The three stripers tangle over the ten round distance, with no quarter asked. Walker had been the big noise around Chattanooga and Oglethorpe for the last four years. Hardly a week passes unless the Cavalry Post sends a challenge into Benning for a meeting of their stars, Walker and Tedesco, with Ptomey and DePratt. Walker's great fight with Willie Ptomey at Montgomery last month earned him the top line on the coming bill. Some interesting doping will be in order while the four remain around the 160 mark.

Get in line for a permanent reservation for the outdoor tilts. Twice the number of ringside seats are now available.

HUBBARDS WIN

The Hubbard Tinware baseballers of Columbus, kicked the ole dope bucket to the four winds at Gowdy Field last Sunday afternoon when they took a ten-inning baseball game from the Doughboys 6 to 2.

A defeat at the hands of the Toronto Leafs early in the week was no surprise, but when a team that is looked upon as a set-up, steps out and walks away with the bacon, fans sit up and take notice.

Against the Leafs it was a pure case of stage fright on the part of the army twirlers. Sunday the army twirlers were going good but army batters simply waved their bats and refused to hit. The same batters that smashed out eleven bingles off Toronto twirlers, garnered exactly three measly hits hits off Littleton, an unheard of sand-lot pitcher for Hubbard Hardware, Sunday.

After two batters had got on the path in the opening frame Sunday afternoon, D. Newsome's single to right took a bad hop, getting away from McCarty and going to the fence for a triple and scoring two runs. The Doughboys came back to tie it up in their half, White scoring on Buckley's triple and Buckley scoring from third on a wild pitch.

For eight innings each side went scoreless. The tenth brought disaster. D. Newsome popped up for the first out. Clardy's fly back of first fell fair when Cooper and Kelly both went for it and then halted and allowed it to go for a hit. Mule White singled, sending Clardy to second. Dick White strolled on four bad ones, filling the sacks. Littleton popped up to McCarthy and everyone felt better with two out. Hurley took the joy out of life with a screaming triple to right. Three runners registered. Skeeter Newsome brought Hurly home with a booming triple to left field. Clayton was removed from the box and Cyrys Raymond Perkins went in to end the slaughter by making Grider pop up to Buckley. The Doughboys waved through their half of the tenth to no avail.

FREEBOOTERS WIN GARRISON POLO TITLE

The defeat of the 29th Infantry by the Freebooters by a score of 4 to 1 last Sunday afternoon at French Field, won the Garrison Polo Championship for 1929 for the Freebooters. The final standing of the four senior teams was as follows:

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
Freebooters	3	0	1.000
83rd F. A.	2	1	.667
29th Inf.	1	2	.333
Students	0	3	.000

At the conclusion of Sunday's games, the Commandant of The Infantry School, Brigadier General Edgar T. Collins, presented individual silver goblets to the members of the Freebooters team: Maj. C. B. Lyman (team captain), Capts. McClure and Sweet, and Lt. Lockett. Maj. Lyman also received for the team the Dierk's Trophy, which is awarded to the polo winners annually through the courtesy of the Dierks Jewelry Co., of Columbus.

On Wednesday afternoon the first two games of the Junior Division were played. The 29th Infantry team won from the Freebooters by a score of 10 to 0 and the 83rd Field Artillery defeated the Students by 5 to 4. The second game was very exciting. The Field Artillery scored three goals before the Students made any. In the fourth period the Students tied the score and in the fifth gained another goal. The final chukker, however, saw the Artillery tie the score again. When the final bugle sounded, the score was still tied but the play was continued and before the ball had a chance to reach the boards or go over the end, the Field Artillery put through the winning tally.

On Sunday the final games of the Junior elimination tournament will be played. The 29th Infantry will meet the 83rd Field Artillery in the first game and in the second, the Students and Freebooters will play.

INFANTRY SCHOOL BASEBALL TEAM DROPS OPENER TO TORONTO, 12 TO 2

The Benning Doughboys pried the lid off the 1929 baseball season at Gowdy Field, March 29th, dropping the opener to the Toronto Leafs by the count of 12 to 2.

The score tells little of the story of the game. Instead of being a one-sided affair as the score would make one believe, the Doughboys out-hit the visitors almost two to one and only one error was committed by the army players.

Cy Perkins opened on the mound for the Doughboys and was a bit nervous in the first frame. Davis, first man up, popped out. Cy failed to get the range, walking Webb and Sexton in succession. Price hit one to the right field fence that scored both runners. Price was out trying to stretch the double to a triple.

Franz led off with a screaming double to left. Shotgun White singled, Franz going to third. Buckley's single scored Franz. Kelly dropped one over second that looked like a sure hit. White raced for third. Madsen made a sensational catch and doubled White off second. McCarty ended the inning with a long fly to left field.

The Doughboys shoved over another to tie the score in the second frame. Cooper singled, going to second when Reese fumbled Cobb's slow roller to second. Thompson walked, loading the sacks. Perkins whiffed. Franz singled, scoring Cooper. White forced Cobb at the plate. Buckley whiffed.

For four innings it was a nip and tuck affair without either side threatening to score. Perkins weakened in the sixth, four bingles and a walk scoring four runs. Gilbert relieved Cy and retired the next two batters. Gilbert went up in the seventh, hitting the first batter and walking the next two, a wild pitch scoring Syze. Tolle went to the hillock. He proved to be suffering from a wild attack. McHenry strolled on four bad ones, filling the sacks. Cobb fumbled Martin's grounder, Sexton scoring. Madsen doubled, scoring Price and McHenry, Martin stopping at third. Allison, a southpaw, relieved Tolle. Navasol fanned. Doyle fanned. Davis singled, scoring Martin. Davis caught off first for third out. The remainder of the game was a nothing to nothing affair, Allison holding the AA leaguers helpless and hitless during the eighth and ninth.

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

In the spring a young man's fancy turns to assignment orders, at Benning. And judging from all the other signs and symptoms, the expectations range from an appointment as Queen of May to the advance party for a firing squad.

A stranger with a piece of paper in his left hand, rushed up to student Dumbjohn and said, "you are ordered to Oop La!" and Dumbjohn with a sickly grin on his face asked: "R. O. T. C. or N. G." and the stranger replied, "Yes," and then Dumbjohn called up and said: "Mary, we are ordered to Oop La." And Mary cried and Dumbjohn said: "And that goes to show."

What it shows I don't know but it does prove a great deal, a very great deal in fact. It proves for example that great military principle, "Many are well off, but few know it." Also in the words of the prophet, "It is easier for a tank to get past Major Ferris' Very pistol-final protective line than for the chief of infantry to satisfy a student officers' class.

Getting back to personalities, I have just a few ash cans to throw over the parapet for the evening hate.

Deception—Barret looking unconcerned for a horse.

Nerve—Edmands telling the instructor that he was posting on the right diagonal.

Joke—Major Smith asking the fourth group in equitation to laugh while they performed. Only Lon Chaney does both Major.

War of movement — Hollister versus horse.

William S. Hart of Benning. Hostetler.

Tom Mix—McGoofus Smith.

Understudy of Raray—John C. Newton.

Model Youth—Hackney, who sits near Pat Crowell and Chapman and still doesn't throw things.

Sunny Jim—Brimmer.

Prize Question—McFadyen to instructor: Why do other horses bite my horse? It was suggested it might be because of political differences.

Bad Habits—Graves smokes horrible cigars.

Instructor's Favorite — Riggins, answers all questions, occasionally correctly.

Pat Hockheimer—Cornog.

DRAMATIC CLUB TO PRESENT PLAYS

Two plays will be presented by the Dramatic Club on Wednesday evening next. In the one directed by Captain Stanley G. Saulnier, colored Birmingham will be seen as only Octavis Roy Cohen can picture it—he wrote the play, a snappy comedy. Its action revolves around the wife of a cabaret owner, who is dangerously jealous of a dancing girl working in the place. This action almost immediately become tense, and the prospect of razor play is ominous. Mr. Permanent Williams, the owner of the joint, attempts to keep peace in the family. At first he doesn't have much trouble, but the situation quickly gets out of control as far as he is concerned—so far out of his control does it get that Mr. Williams finally takes to flight. But not far does the gentleman get, for he is cut down in a surprising climax at the end, and this end comes just in time to save him from dying of pure fright.

Actors in the play, which is staged and directed by Captain Saulnier, will be: Mrs. V. G. Huskea, Mrs. Roy Hill, Roy A. Hill, Raymond G. Sherman, Judson M. Smith and a few extras. The title of the play is "The Melancholy Dame."

The other play, one of Bloch's best, is directed and presented by Mrs. E. G. Sherburne, and her selection of the cast include the following players: Landon Reed, Helen Schmidt, Isabella Dietz, Billy Breckenridge and Louis Falligant. The title, "Gas, Air and Earl."

The action begins when a rather weak, widowed mother forces her only daughter into a promise to marry a man the daughter already loves. The mother doesn't know this though, and, when later it develops that the man is not what he was thought to be, the fidelity of the girl is superb. She is brilliant, and the repartee carried on with the man in the case—an ordinary chauffeur—makes the play, and makes it, as has been stated, one of Bloch's best.

Capable and experienced directors are putting on these plays; they have assembled casts whose sharpness of intellect and great natural talent for acting assures success. The plays will be at least up to the standard of those presented by the Dramatic Club in the past. Knowing this it is unnecessary to say more.

Captain William R. Bent will handle the stage fittings and props. The plays will be presented at the Main Theatre, Wednesday, April 10th, in the evening.

WILL DRIVE TRUCKS OVERLAND

Nine 1 1-2-ton cargo trucks, which are at the Jeffersonville Quartermaster Depot awaiting delivery to the 15th Tank Battalion at Fort Benning, will be driven overland by a detachment from Headquarters Company, which will leave for Jeffersonville, Indiana, Sunday morning. Eight class "AA" bodies will also be delivered by the convoy.

The detail which will drive the truck train to Fort Benning comprises First Lieutenant Harry E. Reed, Technical Sergeant Charles M. Harkins, Sergeant Clarence B. Johnson, Privates first class Carl W. Peterson, Lonnie Harris, Albert L. Bryant, John R. Fields, Bennie R. Ray, Thomas Hopkins, Elmo D. Cochran, Jewel Hopkins, Charlie Stallard and Private Benjamin F. Rowan.

Vol. VII. FORT BENNING, GA., APRIL 12, 1929 Number 30

Bayonets Win

Co. B., 29th Inf. Handy With Doughboy Weapon

By qualifying nearly one hundred per cent of their total strength in the bayonet course which they recently completed, "B" Company, 29th Infantry, Capt. N. D. Woodward, commanding, established a record that will stand for some time.

A comparison of the records for 1928 and 1929 shows a decided increase in proficiency throughout this company which now leads the regiment in this class of infantry instruction. In 1928, when they qualified the highest percentage of men of any company in the regiment, they had 184 men on their roster. The number of men then completing the course was 148. Those of the 148 who qualified totaled 133 or a percentage of 89.865.

In 1929, they had 188 men in the company. The number completing the course was 170. Of this number, 158 qualified as experts, giving a percentage of 92.941.

The performance of Company B is an exceptional company record and it is considered doubtful that any of the other companies which have not completed their work on the bayonet course will better or equal the record set by Company B.

DRAMATIC CLUB'S FINAL PLAY

The Dramatic Club will drop the curtain for the season when, with Mrs. R. H. Chance, directing, it presents at the Main Theatre on April 10th and 11th the three-act play "Pigs." All details of the procedure to be followed with reference to admissions, seating, etc., are not now available, but it is more than likely that the play will be open to the general public.

With the smoothness and acuity, which is characteristic of all the productions of the Fort Benning Dramatic Club, two plays of one-act each were presented Wednesday night to a crowded house.

In one of these plays we were taken over to Birmingham to a cheap negro cafe. The former wife of the owner of the place was a dancer in the cabaret, her husband was a musician there. The owner's present wife didn't know this, nor did the dancer's husband. He knew, however, that his wife had been married before and evinced such a keen desire to find her former husband that Mr. Williams—the owner—remained right on the edge of a nervous breakdown. The jealousy of Mrs. Williams finally brought things to a climax, when she demanded that this former wife be fired. Jonquil, the erstwhile wife, immediately told it all, whereupon Mr. Dill rose up and came towards his wife's former hushand. Mr. Williams attempted to escape but was nailed cold by Mr. Dill, who only saved Mr. Williams from dying of pure fright by asking how he could get a divorce from Jonquil.

The part of the jealous wife was played by Mrs. James Taylor. Mrs. V. G. Huskea was the dancer, Jonquil. Lt. Judson Smith played the owner of the cabaret, while Raymond Sherman was Jonquil's present encumbrance. Couples dancing in the place were Lt.

Maneuvers For Students

BLUES WIN WAR

At three o'clock this morning, the Blue force had passed the Reds and accomplished its mission. The problem was officially ended at 6 o'clock this morning.

A maneuver problem involving the entire 29th Infantry, two batteries of the 83rd Field Artillery, and the entire regular army student officer personnel began yesterday afternoon and is scheduled to be completed today. The maneuver is one of a series which will be worked out before the close of the present school year by the student officers. Similar problems have been executed before but this is the first time in recent years that the opposing forces have been actually represented by troops.

Yesterday afternoon a Blue force comprising the First Battalion 29th Infantry, with Battery A. 83rd Field Artillery Battalion, First Platoon Howitzer Company 29th Infantry and one-half Pioneer Platoon Headquarters Company 29th Infantry attached, was marching north on the Lumpkin Road under orders to rejoin its regiment at Columbus at once, to participate in the defense of that town against an attack from the Alabama side which was expected early this morning. When it reached Cottage Mills, it received reliable information that a hostile force consisting of infantry and artillery of unknown strength had crossed the Chattahoochee River at Bradley Landing and was advancing on Fort Benning.

In view of this information, the direction of the march was changed at BM 283, and at 4:50 P. M., the command was halted, with its head at the road junction one-half mile northwest of Harp's Pond.

The Blue commander later received information that the hostile force, estimated as a reinforced battalion, had passed through Fort Benning and was advancing east.

The Red situation opened at 4:50 P. M. yesterday with the Second Battalion 29th Infantry, Battery C 83rd Field Artillery Battalion, Second Platoon Howitzer Company 29th Infantry, and one-half Pioneer Platoon Headquarters Company 29th Infantry having just crossed the Chattahoochee River at Bradley Landing and halted with the head of its leading element at CR 403, two miles east of Shack. A small detachment was covering the left flank at the crossing of Upatoi Creek at Fort Benning.

The Red Commander's mission was to cover the right of an attack which was to be launched from the Alabama side this morning to capture Columbus, by preventing hostile reinforcements from south of Upatoi Creek joining their forces in Columbus. When the Red force arrived at Fort Benning it received information of the composition and location of the Blue force which had halted near Harp's Pond.

In order that the students might receive the fullest benefit from the problem the troops were disposed in mass formation and the students required to issue the necessary orders for their formations and places in the columns during the approach march, to provide for reconnaissance before and during combat, and for their deployment and missions in combat. The entire exercise was designed to permit the students to exercise actual tactical command and required them to make decisions and execute them according to the tactical situations.

Student officers were assigned to actual command of all units down to and including the section and also filled key positions in the smaller units. An unusual feature was the organization of two troops of Cavalry composed of student officers, the Blue Cavalry consisting of 31 troopers and the Red Cavalry of 32.

Commanders and staffs of the Blue forces were:

First Place

Twenty-Fourth Infantry Wins Small Bore Honors

First place in the Fourth Corps Area was awarded to the team representing the Twenty-fourth Infantry in the Corps Area small bore rifle matches, it was announced today after the telegraphic scores of the matches fired several days ago had been verified.

The Twenty-fourth also takes second place in the United States in this match, as among the twenty-one teams, representing nine corps areas, which fired in this event, only one team made a slightly better score.

The score with which the Twenty-fourth won first place in the Corps Area and second place in the United States was 3,358 while that of the 121st Engineers, of Washington, D. C., exceeded it by but ten points.

The match scores consisting of slow and rapid fire were fired in the kneeling, sitting and prone positions. The five highest scores in each position and class of fire were selected as the record scores for the match.

Ten shooting members composed the Twenty-fourth team. They were Captain J. L. Tupper, Captain J. P. Lyons, Captain E. F. Paynter, Captain W. B. Wilson, Captain E. G. Lindroth, Captain C. L. Steel, Sergeant Smith Bradford, Headquarters Company, Sergeant F. Hightower, Company F, Sergeant Geo. Larkins, Company E, and Corporal J. Fletcher, Company F.

By defeating the other Fourth Corps Area teams in this match, the Twenty-fourth wins the right to represent this Corps Area in the national telegraphic matches which will be fired during the last week in April between teams representing each corps area.

This is the second important match fired recently in which the Twenty-fourth finished near the top. Last month, firing against twenty-one regular teams, it finished the match in second place with a score of 3,678, only five points behind the winning team of the Fourth Infantry.

OFFICERS WRITE ON MESS MANAGEMENT

The April issue of the "Infantry Journal" contains three articles of particular interest to the officers of the Twenty-Ninth Infantry. The three articles appear under the general head of Messes and Mess Management."

The article by Major Hume, Post Medical Inspector, discusses the system of sanitary inspections of all troop messes of the garrison. To the personnel of the garrison who are not directly connected with these inspections it is interesting to note that monthly inspections by the medical inspector for:

"Cleanliness of surrounding grounds, general appearance and orderliness, tables, dishes, care of bread, stove and oven, kitchen utensils, sinks, store rooms, food, ice box, dish towels, mops and brooms, garbage disposal, food handlers, windows, floors, flies, appearance of mess attendants, character and quality of meals, insects, etc;"

have set a high standard of sanitation, quality and variety of food surpassed perhaps nowhere else.

Colonel Pendleton's personal concern with the messes of his regiment is expressed in an article by Captain Ulsaker, regimental mess agent. He treats with the development of the ration to conform to the modern teaching of food experts that, in the interest of good health, food should be taken into the stomach in certain proportions of proteins, carbohydrates, fats, mineral matter and vitamines. To this end the intent of Congress in raising the ration allowance.

The article by Lieutenant Skelton shows how the regimental requirements were carried out in the battalions by following a table of minimum components for each meal to insure a proper quantity and variety of food for each day.

BENNING BOY BROADCASTS

Willie Hones, Benning '29 (perhaps), well-known poet, playwright, and impersonator of student life at Benning's Big Boy's School on the turbulent Upatoi, presents playlet revealing intimate views of the faculty of his Alma Mater (to be, maybe.)

Willie wrote the play one evening while preparing for a marked problem the next morning. His inspiration came, so he says, from noticing the pathetic efforts of the instructors to interest the students in the free education for pay problems peculiar to Benning. With the same genius that marks the theme itself, Willie has entitled his composition "She Didn't Want Her Boy To Be A Soldier, So She Made Him Be An Officer Instead."

Both characters are played by the versatile and inspired Willie.

The Play

Scene: Assembly Hall 1, 2, 3, or 4, Riley Ridge, Bench Mark 39 or Lone Pine Tree.

Time: 11:50 A. M. any Wednesday or Saturday.

Tune: "Frankie and Johnnie."

Major Importance:

Dear Madam, I beg to inform you
That you've come to the very best place
To find for your son education
Which will make him an infantry ace,
For of all our instructors,
Not one can do wrong.

Colonel Marshall who hires our tutors
Will tolerate none but the best
And his excellent corps of instructors
Are happy and never depressed
They'd better not be,
'Cause he'll smack 'em down.

Chink Hall is full of worries,
And his brow is often damp,
As he hands orders to Partridge
To sign with a rubber stamp.
They frame up the orders,
So they can't be wrong.

Colonel Kingman, Chief of 1st Section,
With an iron hand rules he,
And the notes for his gentle teachers
Are kept by Dave Hardee.
These gentle teachers
Are tactical sharks.

Our tactical Titus is not the one
Who once burned out the Jews,
But another lad who makes students mad
By smoking out flocks of U's.
For he's an instructor
He can do no wrong.

Of all the hills at Benning,
Of all the hills I've ever seen,
My pride and joy is a lad named Roy
With a tactical mind that's mean.
He knows his stuff
And admits it, too.

To find 'em and fix 'em and fight 'em,
We've hired Doctor Cook,
He gets his information from
A most authentic book.
He can't be wrong,
He wrote the book.

He put the Tack in Tactics,
Our little Willis did

DRAMATIC CLUB'S LAST PLAY

Paul Serff and Miss Mullins, Lt. Theodore L. Dunn and Peggy Lampke, and Lt. Wayne Smith and Mrs. Wayne Smith. Captain Stanley Saulnier directed.

Mrs. E. G. Sherburne directed the other play; a swift action comedy, dealing with the troubles of a widow without no great source of income. To augment this condition she endeavors to marry her daughter to, a man who, she supposes, is an earl. A little later she discovers her Earl to be no Earl at all, and attempts to get the daughter out of the entanglement. Too late! the young lady had fallen hard for the young man who had become, by this time, her chauffeur. All the Earl's girl admirers quit him cold at this point—except the daughter of the house. A litle later they would have been glad of the opportunity to recultivate his friendship. This, when it was disclosed that he was a famous writer gathering local color.

The cast was Landon Reed, Helen Schmidt, Isabella Dietz, Billy Breckenridge and Louis Falligant. The perfect rendition of the play by this cast; their unconscious actions in living their parts, reflected the superb directing of Mrs. E. G. Sherburne.

The spirit of hearty cooperation given both directors by their casts was inspiring, nothing was left undone that could aid in a perfect presentation, everyone worked, and worked hard. The directors: Captain Stanley G. Saulnier and Mrs. E. G. Sherburne, stated that with such support the directing of these two plays had been a pleasure.

TRANSFERRED TO THE I. S. D.

FRIDAY, APRIL 12

"THE FLOATING COLLEGE," starring Sally O'Neill with William Collier, Jr., in a peppy collegiate romance in which these stars put over a fast one on old man gloom. The story, laid mostly at the Coral Beach Bathing Club on the California Coast, describes the campaigns of two sisters to annex the affections of the handsome young swimming instructor. The younger sister uses the direct method system popular nowadays with the younger generation, but the older sister complains to their father that her sister is making a fool of herself over the young man, and suggests that she be sent off on the floating college cruise, thus leaving the field. Numerous complications set in during an hilarious succession of college gaieties. The picture terminates in a totally unexpected climax. It is that type of pleasing story designed to relieve one of any tendency towards the blues.

"The Laundryman." Fables.

"Pathe News, No. 29."

SATURDAY, APRIL 13

"OUTLAWED," starring Tom Mix in seven reels of action. It is a story laid in the great West where man meets man on an equal footing regardless of his station in life. In this story Tom, with his wonderfully trained horse, accomplishes feats which only the most highly accomplished equestrian is capable of. There is plenty of ropin', ridin' and shootin'.

"Collegians No. 12."

SUNDAY, APRIL 14

"TRAIL OF 98," starring Dolores Del Rio and Ralph Forbes in this memorable novel from the pen of Robert W. Service. This story is noted for preserving for posterity, a true insight into the great northland in the declining years of the nineteenth century. It depicts with unerring accuracy the period when thousands of men spurred on by the lust of gold, defied death and battled the forces of nature to obtain the precious yellow metal from the virgin soil. The story starts in Frisco in the summer of 1897 and travels northward to Dawson City, thence to the little known Yukon where the entrancing plot entwines itself. The story in itself has great sense of appeal; on the screen it shows you visually what the pen can only feebly describe. If you have read the book you will not want to miss this picture, if you have not read the story you owe it to yourself to learn its historical significance.

"M. G. M. News No. 13."

MONDAY, APRIL 15

"APACHE", starring Don Alvarado and Margaret Livingstone in a story laid in the latin quarter of Paris, France. It is a romance laid among the denizens of the Parisian "bowery" where intrigue is paramount and where human lives combat terrible strife in their struggle for existence. The story is tensely melodramatic and carries you into dance halls and dens where only the fearless are game to present themselves.

"Tarzan the Mighty No. 13."

TUESDAY, APRIL 16

"ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE", starring William Haines in a story which is quite a departure from his former laugh makers. This is a screen adaptation of this famous play by Paul Armstrong and concerns the tricks, trials and vicissitudes of a notorious safe cracker. It shows, in a most intriguing manner, the clever exploits of expert thieves and how, when the heart strings are properly touched, the spark of goodness lights the way to an honorable existance. A romance is cleverly brought into the story. Jimmy shows himself not only to be a most accomplished robber, but also a keen and efficient business man. He becomes the cashier of a big bank, and conditions cause him to use his skill at safe cracking in order to avoid disaster. The story is very absorbing.

"Whose Baby." Arthur Lake.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 17

"THE CAVALIER," starring Richard Talmadge and Barbara Bedford in a story of adventure adapted from the novel "The Black Rider" by Max Brand. It is one of breathless speed concerning adventurers who came from Spain to settle in the New World. The Cavalier is a man of supreme and superb nerve, strength and skill; in his deviltry he reaches the pinnacle of brave adventure doing a number of amazing stunts. His wits are keen, his sword bright and his skill unerring, yet, his heart is tender for the oppressed and the unjustly persecuted. He makes himself feared by the rich and adored by the poor. The romance angles of the story depict the heat of Spanish love. The high lights contain the clash of swords in the darkness, captivating Spanish dance, and acts that only a Robin Hood would be capable of performing.

"M. G. M. News No. 65."

THURSDAY, APRIL 18

"PREP AND PEP", featuring David Rollins and Nancy Drexel in a comedy drama of youth depicting the making of man in a famous military school. It tells the story of mother's boy who achieves honor through sheer grit and the will to win. In this boy's fight for supremacy he is forced to combat difficulties. He bucks up against the personal element in the class room and on the parade ground. A captivating romance enters most affably into the story.

"Taxi for Two." Dan, the Taxi Man.

FRIDAY, APRIL 19

"STRANGE CARGO," featuring Lee Patrick with June Nash and George Barraud (the last being a highly reputed actor from the English stage). This is a keen mystery story laid in the intriguing tropic waters of the far east. A princely yacht far out from land is the scene of strange happenings, lights flicker and go out, the compass acts peculiarly, then swift mysterious murder; the body of Sir Richard, owner of the yacht, disappears—who is guilty? the Hindu Yogi? the anarchist stoker? the fugitive doctor? the vengeful brother? or a jealous rival? All are under suspicion, all deny their guilt. Who committed the murder? How did the body disappear? Where did it go? All these strange happenings will keep you in dire suspense until they are finally unraveled on the scren.

On next Monday afternoon the Infantry School Womans Club will bring its year to a close with a most interesting program. We have on this post a most gifted and successful young writer. Her stories, novelettes and lyrics are published constantly in a number of very popular magazines and in the New York Times. She has standing contracts which take her writings as fast as she can create them. Her pen name is Beatrice Vandergrift." Would you like to know who she is? Would you like to hear a story or two and some lyrics she has written? Would you like to hear Mary Pendleton Forsythe tell a bit about art applied to Fort Benning needs? Would you like to hear Marion Barber Boyd and Alice Miller sing, accompanied by Bee Holland on the violin and Madge Porter on the piano? Would you like a last chat over tinkling glasses of tea with friends whose association you have enjoyed this year in the Club? Then, come next Monday and let's end the year with a bang!

BENNING BOYS BROADCAST

And when it comes to slaying Reds
He is the hard-boiled kid.
But he looks so mean,
He's misunderstood.

Sereno Brett the tanker
Is due a vote of thanks
For trying to dispose of all weapons
Except his pre-war tanks.
They ought to be good,
But they mostly "ain't."

Little Willie Roberts
And Jimmie Bradley, too,
Are keen on teaching students things
They know they shouldn't do.
They have tactical minds,
So they can't be wrong.

Sherburne ruins advance guards,
Liston plays with sand.
Stivers also tries to teach.
Lord, "ain't" nature grand?
They're s'pposed to be instructors,
So they can't be wrong.

DeWare instructs in pistol,
A weapon he can't shoot,
While Maddox plays with hand grenades,
He's a most explosive brute.
They're dangerous men
In a social way.

'Way out on Maxey Ridge
Where fair machine guns blow,
There thrive the little Collins kids,
Harry J. and Joe
They know their stuff.
They told me so.

Rucker loves to launch attacks,
Leard is aggressive, too,
And any student who takes their tests
Is sure to get a juicy U.
They know their stuff,
But won't be outguessed.

Pearson's signal teachers
Some cooking have tried to learn,
'Cause I heard him say to Bernard A.
"Don't let the Sweet, Rice, Byrne."
Their signal axis
Needs another half turn.

Little Willie Livesay
Who teaches supply of troops
And sends the kitchen section
With food for combat groups.
He is an instructor.
He can do no wrong.

Stonewall Jackson is a mapper
And Gisemonts are his meat
But when he makes a little sketch
It's off ten thousand feet.
But he claims it's caused
By a touch of heat.

Bill Hoge sure loves his trenches
And he's full of nasty tricks,
Like issuing innocent doughboys
A million spades and picks.
They're apt to revolt
And heave a few bricks.

St. John is not an apostle,
He only handles gas,
In simple ninety-word formulas,
He lachrymates his class.
He's a chemical shiek
And a gas alarm.

Major Stayer, The medico,
His life is fitted with toil.
The student he doses with tactics,
Interspersed with castor oil.
He knows his stuff,
He knows his oil.

For military history
Evan Lewis has a bent.
He loves to read of bloody fights
Into which the ancients went.
Without a flock of war
He's not content.

Otto and Truman are speakers,
As everybody knows,
They love to chatter of the monograph,
Which reminds us of the Two Black Crows
They have a buzzer
And a pretty pose.

When issuing his orders
Our Oscar stands and Hoops
And puts the fear of God into
The timid combat troops.
The Reds are driven off
In groups.

In the matter of training,
Rhett surely handles the Bull.
And when they finish talking,
The average brain is full.
But they are instructors.
They can do no wrong.

Randolph and Freehoff,
With Copeland as their aide,
Handle groups of combat troops
Like in "The Big Parade."
Just incur their dislike
'n get a rotten grade.

Peabody deals in pork and beans
And cabbages and prunes
And any fresh Class I supplies
The soldier importunes.
He's bluffed it thru
For many moons.

Another gallant teacher,
Charlie Bolte is his name,
Brought the great Hochheimer
To pinnacles of fame.
It's a dirty joke.
Just a crying shame.

You've heard of the great air Rader,
Fort Benning's foremost ace,
Who teaches tactics of the sky
With a ministerial face.
He flies in hot air.
He knows his place.

With the chariot and the crossbow,
The cavalry has passed by,
So Smith teaches ancient tactics
With a horse tear in his eye.
We'll buy your flowers,
So please don't cry.

The caissons they go rolling,
So does the normal barrage,
And the battle rages fiercely
When Marr is out of abbatage.
His favorite target
Is a big mirage.

The overworked printing presses
And mimeographs, perchance,
Must threaten death to Landis
And his office boy Robbie Chance.
The presses I mention,
They don't press pants.

The boys who edit manuscripts,
Are coffee coolers tried and true,
Clarkie Fales and Jimmie Cole
And Herbie Perrin, Too.
They dare not tell,
Just what they do.

Now I hope that you like these teachers,
That their virtues fill you with joy.
Just send to us that young man of yours,
And we'll whittle him down to a boy.
We'll make him as hard
As Helen of Troy.

This story has no moral,
This story has no end.
This story only goes to prove
That instructors must be men
Who know their stuff
And put it across.

READY!

The telephone in the guardhouse rang. "Sir, this is Sergeant Blank speaking. There's a fire in the woods along the Marne Road."

"Thank you, Sergeant," said the officer of the day, as he hung up. The officer again took the telephone and asked for a number. "Company commander, please. Not there? The first sergeant, then." A moment's pause. "Sergeant, this is the officer of the day. There's a fire in the woods along the Marne Road. Send fifty men over, please."

The officer called another number and requested that two trucks be sent to the guardhouse. In the meantime, a sergeant of the guard had been despatched to see to the issue of suitable tools and equipment for fighting a forest fire.

Shrill whistles sounded in the barracks across the way. In less time than it takes to write this, an officer arrived at the guardhouse at the head of a detachment of fifty men. Almost simultaneously, two trucks arrived to carry them to the scene of the fire, two miles distant. Tools were issued and the soldiers were aboard the trucks bound for the fire in a few moments.

The whole procedure, from the time that the first call came in until the fire-fighters were on the road to the fire, did not consume more than five minutes. Within an hour, the fire was extinguished and the soldiers were back to their normal duties.

The incident was an admirable illustration of the versatility of our army and its instant readiness to perform efficiently any duty that may be assigned to it, whether it is to destroy an armed enemy or whether it is to save life and property.

GARDENS, HEALTH, BEAUTY

If it were possible to conduct a poll at Fort Benning for the purpose of ascertaining the most popular book of the season, it is probable that the seed catalog would head the list, with the gardening tool catalog a close second. Everywhere the effects of the mass study of the gorgeously colored books are seen.

The passion for gardening seems to be shared by all, with little distinction as to sex, age or rank. The instinct to get close to Mother Earth is universal. One sees whole families grubbing in the friable earth of a newly spaded garden plot. The same amount of digging that is being expended in family gardens would be sufficient to construct a defensive trench system around Fort Benning.

Men grown gray in service spade and hoe with the vigor of youth. Captains, majors and even colonels, attired in motley arrays of old clothes, perspire over future roses and radishes.

Gardening brings them all together in a democracy of tillers of the soil. It gives them healthful outdoor exercise of a useful, as well as pleasant, character; an afternoon of gardening insures a good night's sleep, for from it comes that pleasant fatigue produced only by honest outdoor toil.

And last, but by no means least, the plots of the amateur gardeners are brightening up and beautifying the post.

COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

THE HARD MR. HARDMAN

Having to wait an hour the other day while a minor adjustment was being made on my car, I spent the time in strolling about, looking in shop windows, admiring shiny new automobiles, and doing the other aimless things that one does to occupy enforced idleness.

Presently I found myself in a shabby neighborhood some distance off the main thoroughfare from which I had wandered. Flimsy houses, tiny stores, sidewalk lunch counters, a junk yard, and a soft drink stand, built of second hand lumber, made up the immediate surroundings. The refreshment stand was evidently a new enterprise for the sound of hammering behind its windowless front indicated that the little shack-like building was not yet complete.

I looked in and saw a man nailing up some shelves. His back was toward me so I waited until he stopped hammering before addressing him. He turned around, and darted a swift look at me from a pair of small eyes set deep in a most unprepossessing face. He responded pleasantly enough, however, to my question about the stand. "Just gettin' ready to make a new start," he replied with a twisted but friendly grin. "They can put a fellow down but then can't keep a good man down," he said.

Just what this assertion had to do with the little stand was not clear to me so I assumed an air of interest and waited for him to continue. He was not at all averse to talking and seemed pleased to have an attentive listener to his confidences.

His name, that is, his real name, does not matter in this story. Mr. Hardman is the title I shall use whenever it is necessary to refer to him by name. I choose this appelation because it seems to suggest itself.

It seemed that Mr. Hardman's contempt for organized society with its hampering laws had inspired his defiant remark. He had had several brushes with the forces representing them and the latest had left him somewhat embarrassed financially. Hence the new drink stand.

I nodded sympathetically and Mr. Hardman forthwith accepted me as a confidant. He began a monologue which covered what Mr. Hardman probably considered the high lights of his rather checkered carer. Most of this, it appeared, had been spent in trying to circumvent the restrictions which society places upon persons of overly vivid imaginations, and in paying the forfeits which the same society inexorably claims of those who do not conform to its conventions.

"I'm the only man in Columbus that they won't have on their chain-gang. They pinched me for violatin' the prohibition law a few months ago. They didn't find nothin' on me and I pled not guilty. Cost me fifty dollars and four months on the gang, they couldn't do nothin' with me at all. I just don't take nothin' from 'em and I sure told 'em where to get off. Well, after they had me there three weeks, they turned me loose; just couldn't do a thing with me; I was too hard for 'em.

"The next time they pinched me, I had five gallons with me and I pled guilty. Well, if I've ever served any time or paid any fine for it, I ain't heard about it yet."

Mr. Hardman launched on a new theme. "You know, I don't like these here honest people," he said, "they look honest but they ain't. I like a man what's a man. I been where there's men, too. I served four years with real men and I'm proud of it."

"In the army?" I asked.

"Naw, in the pen," replied Mr. Hardman. "You see, it was like this. Me and another fellow done the slickest night job you ever seen. Red clay all around outside and a-rainin' hard and not a track in the place. Not even a finger print. It was a jewelry store on the main drag and we made a pretty good haul. I don't know how they done it but the cops got both of us in three days. I guess luck broke good for them and bad for us.

"They stuck us in the county jail. While we was waitin' there for trial, one day somethin' happened to the jail." Mr. Hardman grinned as if in pleasant recollection. "Maybe the wall just sort of fell out by itself but anyways there was a big hole a-lookin' at us. It looked real welcome and we thought that it would be a shame not to use it so we walked through it. I heard tell later that it cost the county fifteen thousand dollars to make their jail tight again." Mr. Hardman laughed with evident pleasure at the discomfiture of the county.

"Well, we were only out a week when they nabbed us again. Seems like there's always a cop where you don't want none. They give us a four-year stretch which we done at Milledgeville. There's men what's men in there. I got along all right.

"I guess they were glad to get rid of me, 'cause when I left I sold the warden my imitation leather suit case for real alligator skin. He found it out before I got away and said 'If I don't watch out, you'll sell this jail to somebody before you go.' He sent a deputy with me to see that I got on the right train. I learned a lot there. I'm proud of it."

"Did you learn that it's better to obey the law?" I asked.

Mr. Hardman snorted scornfully. "No, I didn't; I learned a lot of new ways to beat it. And I didn't learn none of it from books, neither. I ain't got much of an eddication from books and I think you can learn better without books.

"Let me tell you about a fellow I know that thought he could learn somethin' from books. He wanted to learn how to open safes. I told him the best way to learn was to get in with some expert and help out on a couple of jobs. Well, he thought different and he bought a book that was supposed to have been wrote by a good soup man. Paid twenty-five dollars for it. Well, he studied that book until he thought he knowed it by heart and then went out and tried a job by hisself. He's still up in Milledgeville; got a year to do yet. That shows you can't learn nothin' out of books.

"Now that reminds me of another fellow—" Mr. Hardman's monologue seemed about to start for a non-stop record. I looked at my watch ostentatiously and said that I must go.

"Well, come in and see me again, you'll find me gettin' along all right. You can't keep a good man down. And if you ever want any—" he mentioned something that has no longer any legal standing—"I'll get it for you."

Mr. Hardman extended a grimy, but friendly hand, which I shook and departed.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR EDGAR ERSKINE HUME, M. C.
Medical Inspector

SUNBURN

Sunlight has a highly beneficial effect on health. It is used in the treatment of a number of diseases and special facilities for its proper use are provided in most hospitals and sanatoriums. Exposure to sunlight causes burning, tanning and freckling. Tanning is beneficial, burning is injurious. Prolonged exposure to bright sunlight may even be dangerous to those not accustomed to it, the results being much more serious than sunburn. Headache, inflammation of the eye lids and even symptoms of meningitis may follow.

One of the diseases caused by too much exposure to the sun is one similar to snow-blindness. Here at Fort Benning we have cases resembling this affection caused by the intense glare from the white sandy soil.

The nearer we approach the tropics, the more ultra-violet rays does the sun light contain. In this locality the light is very rich in ultra-violet rays—the rays which cause sunburn and tanning. Such rays do not penetrate ordinary glass, hence though we may feel the heat we do not become tanned or burned when sitting inside a sunny but closed window.

Care should be taken with the advent of the warm weather season to accustom ourselves gradually to sunlight. After a tan has been acquired sunburn is not to be feared except after excessive exposure. For example, the opening of the swimming pool each year results in many persons of all ages having to seek medical treatment due to sunburn. The reflection from the surface of the water has the effect of increasing the severity of the sunburn while swimming or boating.

This could be avoided if they would not spend too much time in the sunlight during the first few swims. Hikes and drills may result in painful sunburn if hats are not worn.

Once sunburn is acquired it is best treated by remaining out of sunlight until the blisters have healed and by applying a soothing lotion, cold cream, vaseline, camphor ice or the like. In order to avoid infections it is best not to open the blisters, or if they have broken, to be sure that only clean cloths or dressings touch the raw surfaces.

Sunlight for the treatment of disease and as a general aid to health should only be used under the advice of a physician, for this form of radiant energy is too powerful to be used indiscriminately.

In general, however, it may be said that the light in the early morning is the best, for then it has less heat rays but plenty of light rays.

Next week's subject—Poison Oak.

FIRST BATTALION NEWS

Headquarters Company

We are all mourning the loss of our 1st Sergeant, William R. Sanders, who has been assigned to special duty as acting 1st Sergeant of Company "D". Battalion Sergeant Major Groves, has assumed the duties of 1st Sgt., and is the center of ever increasing admiration by the Company as a whole.

Ace Wilkinson discovered much to his discomfort, that the Army rifle has the kick of an Army mule, while taking the McNab for the Infantry Rifle Team. For proof of his discovery he is nursing a black eye and a skinned nose.

The number of comedians in our company was increased by one when, Slater (Red) Elkins, completed the required Recruit instructions and was turned to Company duty the first of the week. Red's biggest job at the present is to supply the fellows with laughs, and if acting a clown will make them laugh, he is performing his duties in an excellent manner.

Cpl. Jess (Hong-Kong) Goodin has been appointed manager of our base ball team, succeeding Cpl. Giles.

Cpl. Hinkley returned rather unexpectedly from Greenville, S. C., where he has been on a tryout with the Greenville base ball club, even though he failed to make the grade there he bids fair to reap some honors with the post team.

Pvts. Fowler and Hartison accompanied Pvt. Elkins in the first big event of a soldiers life, that of being turned to company duty. Welcome, boys, to the outfit.

Company "A"

The company's prize shot with the 22 calibre rifle, tried his luck on the bayonet course. He came out of the pit, over the rail and hit the first spotter—then came the dawn—alas—he made a short thrust then a long thrust at the head dummy and went to pieces. Now they call him Bolo Hudson.

Corporal Sheriff holds the record in the company as far as the company has gone. He ran the course in 37 seconds and made 100 points.

Corporal Whaley, who recently re-enlisted, and has been on a ninety day furlough, came back on the 8th.

Pfc. Durcherl, our new company clerk was appointed corporal. We think that Corporal Durscherl has well earned the appointment as he has previous service and some of it in the air service. Congratulations Corporal Durscherl.

Company "B"

We have made several new appointments, and they are all men we believe will prove worthy of their new rank. We have confidence in all of them, the appointments are as follows: Cpl. William T. Kern, appointed Sergeant; Pfc. Keith Rankin, Emanuel A. Tarver and Henry E. Enfinger, appointed Corporals; Privates Owen O. Branch, Edward R. Buckels, Alvin McCain, Percy G. McNeal, Dixon D. Ogden and James L. Vanatta, appointed Privates First Class; Pfc. David E. Page has been rated specialist, 4th class, to fill the vacancy left open by Pfc. August Vetter.

Corporal Osborne T. Ward and Pfc. Scott W. Carver have submitted their application for purchase discharge, Corporal Lewis W. Jones will be discharged per E. T. S. April 14. We regret very much the loss of both the former. We consider Pfc. Carver one of the best buglers in the regiment and are sure that you will agree with us on that.

It has been rumored that Pfc. Ogden will take Carver's place on the Bugle Corps, luck to you Ogden and we hope you will prove worthy of relieving the best bugler in the regiment.

The Company completed the bayonet course this morning. We ran one hundred and seventy-one (171) enlisted men, out of which we qualified one hundred and fifty-nine (159). Some record eh? Our record for last year was 89.9 per cent and for this year 92.9 per cent. can you better it?

Company "C"

We are very sorry to say that our own Gene Austin Manhart, is in the hospital suffering from a fractured wrist, received while playing baseball Sunday. We're all hoping Gene will soon be back with us.

It seems a great number of our men are limping since hearing there was to be a hike.

It has been said that our Company Barber, Tyler, better known as B. L., has been making plans with our friend, "Windy" Johnson. Maybe they're going to Mexico, or "join the circus."

Under the supervision of the Supply Sergeant, the mechanics have overhauled and painted the company truck. Now won't we step out when we hit that maneuver camp?

Private Nowling left last week on a 15-day emergency furlough, we're hoping he will find everything well at home.

Corporals Roberts, Creekmore and Private Caldwell were discharged last week by the E. T. S. route, and took on another three year stack and departed for points north to spend their three months furlough and their seventy-five berries.

Corporals Aiken, Taylor, Smith, W. F., and Rayl, or better known as the "Dirty Four." have decided that our own Corporal Dey, better known as "Pug," is able to stay with us sometime yet. They were figuring on seeing what could be done about getting him in the "Old Soldiers' Home." Now I don't think "Pug" is as bad off as they think he is.

Our baseball team is coming along fine having won three out of four. We all wish them the best of luck this season.

Company "D"

The company hates very much to lose 1st Sgt. Heldreth, who has been with the company for several years, and helped pull them through many difficulties, but he is being replaced by 1st Sgt. Sanders of 1st Bn. Hqrs. Company, and I am sure that the boys are all for him.

The company track team is going strong this year and under the supervision of our athletic Cpl. Reddock, they should all pull through.

SECOND BATTALION NEWS

Headquarters Company

Corporal Wm. B. Smith, our beloved Battalion clerk, left this week on a sixty day furlough which will be spent somewhere in the Everglades of the land where it's always June. Namely Florida. We all hope you have a good time and wish you the best of luck.

We wonder why Corporal Elkins, our new Battalion clerk, went to Columbus in such a hurry the other night after a very mysterious phone call. Come on, "Steve" let us in on the great, dark secret.

Corporal Holland, the much famed mess sergeant, has been doing plenty of extra figuring lately. He wonders when this night work is going to stop. Live in hope, Corporal. Remember the darkest hour is just before the dawn.

Company "E"

We have Sgt. New, Arevalo, Corp. Clay and Private First Class Hawkins, trying out for the Infantry team and hope that they make the team to Camp Perry this summer. Sgt. Arevalo can be found most any evening out on the porch of the barracks doing the old trigger squeeze. I believe he even sleeps with his rifle at night. Atta boy, Natalio, we are all for you.

All the track men better watch their step in the next meet for one (Burr Head) Corp. Smith, Olien L., has been seen leaving the barracks every evening in his track outfit.

Sgt. Easterwood, the smiling Irishman and Corp. Smith, Olien L., the smiling Scotchman, are really getting good with their dukes. I refereed a bout between the two boys last Sunday morning and it was a whirlwind bout. One time during the fifth round Corp. Burrhead Smith looked a little groggy when the smiling Irishman drove a right hook to "Burr Head" Smith's jaw. Smith countered with a swift kick with his right foot to Easterwood's pit of the stomach and the referee had to part them to stop the bloodshed. Then Easterwood appeared to have lost his temper for he grabbed a dumbbell and started after Smith and Smith ran from the ring for dear life. It was a good fight after all.

Company "F"

The latest find in this organization is none other than Hansell Allison. Allison came to this organization about seven months ago. He was first noticed on the football field where he first started his army athletics, now he is pitching baseball on the Post team and is making a hit with all the baseball fans. The Columbus Foxes couldn't do a thing with him in the game last Sunday. Allison will also be a help in the Intramural league.

Company "H"

The many friends of Sgt. "Tree" Pyles will be pleased to know that he has taken on his third stack and is now on a three months furlough. Just like railroadin', they all come back for more, and we are glad to have them do so.

Cpl. Pughline, Pfc.'s Singleton, Johnson and Pvt. Pharr are slated for discharge this month. 'Eres 'opes as 'ow they will sign up again. Singleton and Pharr being old-timers, their time until retirement is being clipped down gradually.

It is gratifying to know that the men are receiving something new in the way of having a few night problems. The writer does not remember any having happened in some time, hence the 'war' is becoming somewhat more instructive and presents new phases every month.

We still live in anxious expectation until we shall get those new snappy Melton overcoats.

SPECIAL UNITS NEWS

Howitzer Company

This organization has just finished a visit at King Pond, Ochille and all points north and east. The camp at King Pond was very satisfactory, however, the weather was so chilly at Ochille Creek that sleep was impossible. On the return march from Ochille, Pvt. Blalock mounted a white horse and successfully commanded the 1st Platoon. You will remember that a portion of the famous generals were always mounted on white steeds.

While halted temporarily at Ebert Hill, our "Top" (James P. Johnson) became a hero, when he stopped a runaway team thereby saving our precious supply of water. By the way Sgt. Johnston has mentioned that his correspondence has become burdensome due to the publicity received through these columns, so if any of his friends who wish to commend him for his heroic act will expect no letter of acknowledgement as the cost is prohibitive. J. N. C.

Regimental Headquarters Co.

It seems as though the entire Headquarters Company was in town over the week-end occupied in that old French game of "Cherchez LaFemme." Many and varied are the tales of conquest that are broadcast the length of the squad room. Certainly there will never be any weeping because of no worlds to conquer, for if one is to believe all the stories told, each conquest is absolutely the first encounter, on the part of the conquered.

Well, there is one comforting thought connected with pay-day, when you wake up the next morning it will be only thirty days until pay-day.

Pvt. Grace announces that he will buy anything, absolutely anything, provided he can buy it jaw-bone, and he doesn't care how much it costs, if he can sign for it, and it will be collected through the company. If any one has an old pair of skiis or an ice boat, here is a wonderful chance to sell them.

Pvt. LaBonte has been promoted to the official title of Headquarters Company Kibitzer. It was felt that something should be done for him due to the fact that he has lost so much weight helping the "peep at the hole card" boys sweat pairs.

One of our recruits was told that if, in playing poker, he was caught bluffing he would lose the pot, and he objected very strenuously because he said that he very often won pots by bluffing.

"In the spring a young man's thoughts turn to love." Judging by the number of discharges via the pay-before-you-go plan it would seem that the Army places no restriction on a young man's thoughts at least. Joe Gauze.

Hqrs., Hqrs. Bat. and Combat Train

Last week the Battery made a short hike into the hills for three days, all reporting a wonderful time even if there was no rain to make it worth while.

Social dates with the fairer sex are some time heavily laden with expense, but not half so much as the one experienced last week by Doug LaPine. Of course we all understand that it was a very important one Doug, but "it" was rather dear.

Squirrel McCallum was last week promoted to Corporal. Now who said you could keep a good man down?

Sgt. Sweger madly rushed in to town last week returning with a hot Dodge touring. Look out for the drug-store cowboys now.

The old pill is being tossed around considerably since the arrival of spring, the boys are just getting limbered up for another race for your so called champ-rag. We have some new faces in the line-up for the coming season, Wrenn, who has donned the old catcher's mask down Oklahoma way will do the receiving, while there are several new flingers who have plenty of that old stuff called smoke and speed.

Pfc. Tilley last week purchased his discharge after spending two years with us. Sorry to see you go Tilley, but a tie greater than the Army was calling so here's luck to the future family.

Pfc.'s Butler, Wilson and Pvt. Williams are now on leave somewhere in the Everglades of Florida. Butler said he was going 'gator hunting, while Wilson and Williams are of the sheik type so you can guess what can be expected from them.

Pvt. Cotney has just returned from a week-end leave up LaGrange way, relating to all about the hearts he crushed while away.

Who said Clara Bow was not in town? Sgt. Roper was seen with a titian-haired flapper in town last week, and McCallum said he could almost swear "IT" was Clara Bow.

Fuzzy Douglas tripped into town last week to take a nice K. O. at the hands of Grumpy Gordy. Seems as if Fuzzy was out of his class, trying to step with a man like Grumpy. Better luck in the future Fuzzy.

Sgt. Koski (better known as the man who has so much business over at the stables) was out racing his motor last Sunday. Even if it was Sunday a nice time seemed to have been had by our famous chink.

With the arrival of the annual horse show, including jumping and fancy riding, Pvt. Powell seems to be getting into excellent shape. He has been seen in the riding-hall quite frequently here of late. That a boy Bennie, we are all pulling for you.

Battery "C"

Sergeant Miller went to the Carnival in Columbus, the other evening and after having returned began to expostulate about the elephant. He asked what the snout was and was informed that that was the elephant's trunk. He is stated to have remarked that the one in the rear must be his vanity case.

Private McDuff is taking many three day passes and it is reported that he is making a killing. We don't know just what this phrase means but judging from appearances he would soon need a can opener to open up his eyes.

Private 1st Class, Robert A. Noell, is now enjoying a 30 day furlough in the city of Fine View, otherwise known as Buena Vista, Ga. Ye scribe is hoping that he does not see too many wonderful sights as some of them might include snakes and monkeys which are not caused by viewing the scenery.

NATIONAL GUARD CLASS

Anyone visiting Blocks 21 and 22 between 6:30 and 8:00 A. M. is shocked to note the effect the steady diet of eggs at the Biglerville Mess is having upon student officer constitutions; crowing is heard everywhere, and even arrival at the Academic area is unable to mitigate the barnyard chorus. (Ask Major Toole. Now we know what he meant when he said that Co. "E" sounded like a flock of geese when "falling in.") First thing we know some egg-maddened student is going to try to fly off the top of the building, and then the Infantry School will have to referee a nice lawsuit against Biglerville.

The secret is out! The annual Easter Egg Hunt put on for the amusement of the Student Officers, on each Easter morning, was not held this year because our friend and champion, Major Stayer, in his role of school medico, was afraid that an "Egg nausea epidemic" would break out and perhaps result in serious consequences.

DOUGHBOY ACE DEFEATS CAVALRY FIGHTER IN SLASHING TEN-ROUND BATTLE

Gunner DePratt, pride of the doughboy fighters, battered his way to a decision over Johnny Walker, cavalry ace, in a ten round battle at the Fort Benning Arena last Tuesday night. The fight which was witnessed by approximately three thousand fans, was fought in a steady drizzle of rain that drenched fighters and fans and kept the ring floor water soaked and slippery.

It was just a case of a good cavalryman meeting a doughboy that was just a little bit the better man. For the first four rounds Walker more than held his own with the footslogger, in fact in the third round the cavalryman turned loose a two handed attack that staggered DePratt under a volley of lefts and rights to the jaw and forced him to dive into a clinch to check the cavalry charge.

The fifth round proved to be the turning of the tide, anxious to follow up his advantage of the previous rounds, Walker waded in to swap punches with the Gunner; and force the issue. Like a bolt from the blue, the Gunner's left dropped on Walker's chin, at the count of nine Walker came up groggy. DePratt's right was short by a hair as Walker fell into a clinch, the bell ended the round.

The rain soaked floor slowed up both boys, the sixth and seventh rounds were DePratt's by a good margin, but both rounds were a bit slow. In the eighth round Walker went down under a smashing left hook to the jaw, he came up groggy but managed to ward off a knock out by holding and covering up until the bell. The ninth and tenth saw Walker take an awful beating but he gamely stood by his guns and was still fighting on his feet at the final bell.

The semi-final of eight rounds between Soldier De Mars of Fort Bragg and Young Jack Dempsey of Atlanta, was a slam, bang affair with both boys throwing leather. De Mars took a popular decision, clearly taking the lead during the entire mill. This fight was fast and full of action and was a crowd pleaser.

Doubting Thomas battered K. O. Henry of Fort Oglethorpe from pillar to post for five rounds, in the sixth and final round K. O. was disqualified for holding and hitting after having been warned on two previous occasions by the referee. Thomas was an easy winner, having taken every round.

Owing to the threatening weather the six-round bout between Shell and Grumpy Gordy was halted in the second round to allow the main go to be put on. After the main go was over Shell and Gordy resumed where they had left off. Shell found Gordy a tough customer, although he landed his left to the Q'Emmers jaw on numerous occasions, the soldier always countered with a right that hurt. At the end of the bout both boys hands were raised as the crowd cheered.

"Light Horse Harry" Wilson of the 29th Infantry, outfought, outslugged and handed Lefty Kline of Columbus, the licking of a life-time in their four-round battle. Wilson carried dynamite in both mitts and but for the visitor's bicycle the fight would have ended early.

Sacket Harbour of the Demonstrationists, fighting his first professional fight, handed Waldren of Columbus, a busy package for three rounds. Waldren, a veteran, who has been fighting for several years, was expected to take the footslogger in jig time, but at the finish he was very fortunate to get a draw.

"Raven" Poe, the only soldier fighter in ring history to wear a moustache, tickled Bunny Myers with his whiskers and then shot over a left hook loaded with H. E., for a clean knockout in the second round of their battle. This Poe boy will bear watching among the middleweights.

Tuesday night's card was by far one of the best fight programs ever featured at Fort Benning. Although J. Pluvius acted a bit careless the ardour of the fans was not dampened in the least.

DOUGHBOYS TAKE OPENING GAME FROM FOXMEN 6 TO 5

Capt. Wilson's Doughboys kicked the ole dope bucket to the four winds at Gowdy Field last Sunday afternoon and defeated the Columbus Foxes 6 to 5.

Lefty Carnes opened on the mound for the Doughboys and twirled good baseball during the four innings that he was on the hillock. Allison relieved Carnes after the fourth inning and his portside slants proved even more baffling than those of Carnes.

The Foxes shoved over a pair of runs in the first inning on Cooper's error, a fluke hit to right field and a double that shoved both runners across.

The Doughboys came back to even the score in the third when three hits shoved over a pair of markers. Carnes was touched up a bit in the fourth and with a free pass to first combined with one error the Foxes hung up another pair of runs.

The Doughboys took the lead in the sixth and held it until the Foxes knotted it in the seventh frame. Buchanan, twirling for the Foxes lost his own game in the eighth inning when he walked Allison with the bases loaded to force in the winning run.

The twirling of Allison was the feature of the game, only two bingles being made off his delivery. He also struck out five Foxmen, including Samuel Stuart and the mighty Millsaps among his list of victims.

Cooper led the Doughboy attack with the willow, getting three safe hits out of four times at the bat. Shotgun White came in for a big hand from the fans when he singled to drive in two Doughboy runs in the sixth inning.

SPORTOPICS

Fandom has its favorites in every branch of sports. Mostly the champion holds the spotlight in the eyes of fandom. Occasionally this is not the case. Take Dempsey for instance, as a champion. Fandom was long in learning the real Dempsey. When fandom learned to know him they learned to worship him and when Tunney took the title away fans of fightdom refused to let him go but still claimed him as their own and today, three years since Dempsey lost his crown, he is still the idol of fightdom.

Baseball has its Ruth and Johnson and other stars of the diamond, still fandom clings to the memory of their favorites long after their days of glory on the diamond are past, while others fade away and are forgotten within a remarkably short period.

Almost a decade ago Christy Mathewson held the spotlight in the baseball world. He was one of the greatest pitchers in the history of baseball and was also one of the greatest favorites fandom ever knew. The "Big Six," as Mathewson was known, was a victim of the much dreaded T. B., every effort was made to ward off the dreaded disease. Mathewson went away to the mountains to try and regain his health in the great out-doors.

Fandom rejoiced when the message came one day that "Christy" was well on the road to recovery. His return to New York was welcomed by a multitude of friends and admirers, sport writers over the entire country devoted many columns telling fans of the great game that "Big Six" had won.

A few months later and then came the message that Mathewson had gone back to the hills, that he was ill again. He lost in the final game. In every corner and nook of the United States, fans received the message of Mathewson's death with sorrow and regret. They still refuse to give him up, always when mention is made of the great men of the diamond, that of the "Big Six," is always mentioned. He is still one of their favorites and his memory will live long in the hearts of baseball fandom.

YE PRINTE SHOPPE GOSSIPE

Ye Printe Shoppe Gossipe has been conspicuous by its absence from the News columns the past few months. But the hum of the Linotypes, the roar of the presses and the pounding of mallets continue.

Private Mann has just returned "home" from a three months' furlough spent in Griffin, Ga. Upon his return he has been appointed foreman of the hand composition department and Corporal Short, who had been gracing that title, is now manipulating the keys of our historical Model 5 Linotype.

Corporal Pash, formerly of the stock room, formerly of the bindery, etc., etc., has been promoted, or maybe its demoted, to the position as secretary to Superintendent Smith. In other words, he is now our most amiable office clerk.

Civilian Louis Rowe still has his, and so has Private Thagard; but Private Dillard (Don't get us wrong—we didn't say sergeant) has shaved his off. It must have been too hard to keep a supply of stove polish on hand, a most suitable and at the same time economical mustache wax, we've been told.

Corporal Charley Dollar bought out of the army some time ago. He was last seen on Broad street in Columbus proudly displaying a railroad ticket which Louis Rowe argues was at least a yard long. —R. M. J.

FOXES WIN FROM DOUGHBOYS 5 TO 2

The Columbus Foxmen evened the count with Capt. Wilson's Doughboys at Gowdy Field last Wednesday afternoon, taking a hard fought game 5 to 2.

Cy Perkins was on the hillock for the Doughboys but failed to hold the visiting Foxmen. After he had given up three hits and walked a batter in the first inning allowing the Foxmen to score two runs, he was relieved in favor of Lefty Newman.

Newman took up the burden with one man on, one out and three balls on the batter. Newt's first pitch was wide and the batter strolled, Neibert doubled scoring Etheridge, Newman settled down and retired the side without further scoring.

For the next three innings the Foxmen went hitless, two batters reached first by the free transportation route but each time the next batter hit into a double play which was executed with perfect precision, Cooper to Franz to Buckley.

In the fourth inning Cooper picked one of Kelly's offerings and sent it to the flag pole for a circuit clout, two errors by the Columbus infield combined with a hit sent Thompson across with another Doughboy marker in the fourth.

After the Doughboys had scored two runs in the fourth, as has been related, the Foxes came back in their half of the fifth to register a pair. Holbrook led off with a walk, Kelly popped up, Danielly flied out to center, Jake Daubert lined one to deep right for three bags scoring Holbrook, Millsaps duplicated with a triple to center sending Daubert home. Sad Sam lifted one to Kelly in deep center. This ended the scoring for the remainder of the game.

Three lightening double plays were executed by the Doughboy infield. Buckley made a spectacular catch of Daubert's liner over first that was labelled for three bases. Kjelstrom in center field pulled down a couple that looked like sure hits, his catch of Stuart's drive in the fifth was pure larceny.

Freeland Newman, twirled his farewell game for the Army. Big Newt will leave Monday for Dayton, Ohio, where he will be a member of that club this season, Newt is still the property of Louisville but has been farmed out to Dayton.

Newman leaves a host of friends in Fort Benning, who will watch the work of the big southpaw with no little interest and wish him the best of luck and success in the professional ranks.

IN A SWIMMING SUIT, there is no place to cover up defects, no matter how small they are. That's why it's very important that you get a good one. And that's why we offer you the Spalding!

Spalding Swimming Suits are made with the care and the skill that has made Spalding athletic equipment the official equipment for every game that's played. They feature new and correct styles. They're designed and cut, not only to look right, but to give the 4 extra inches of stretch and body freedom that let you cut through the water as if you had fins!

Naturally, Spalding Suits are not cheap. Surprisingly, they're not expensive. Most models are only $5 and $6—and that's very little to pay for perfection.

SPECIAL UNITS NOTES

At Dupont, Georgia, July 29, 1904, little Tommie Pierce was born, thereby adding another Cracker to the population of Georgia. In the later years, Tommie's family moved to Jesup, Georgia, and that is where Sergeant Thomas F. Pierce, Company "C", First Gas Regiment, hails from.

Sergeant Pierce first enlisted in the Army March 19, 1923, at the age of nineteen years, seven months, three weeks and one day. He was assigned to Company "F", First Gas Regiment, and served three years in the organization and being discharged on March 18, 1926, as a Sergeant,, with character excellent, having completed his three year term of service. Sergeant Pierce decided that he would like to get into another company of the First Gas Regiment, and when Company "F" was re-designated as Company "C", he decided then and there that he would re-enlist for that organization. So the day following his discharge, he took out another stack with Company "C" and finished out another three years, being discharged on March 18, 1929 as Sergeant, character excellent. Pierce says that the only thing that bothers him, is that they didn't change the company back to "F" again, because he thinks he would like to try another hitch in that organization.

Sergeant Pierce serves in the capacity of Company Clerk, working in the Personnel Section, Special Units Headquarters. He is a very able and efficient typist and clerk, working quietly, but swiftly in anything that he undertakes. If Company "C", First Gas Regiment ever loses Sergeant Pierce, they will most certainly lose one of the most efficient soldiers that they have.

The writer must stop in order to dodge ink wells and typewriters, as Sergeant Pierce has just discovered what all of the sudden energy around the southeast corner of the Personnel Section is for. He said that if everything that was known about him by the writer were published, he would most surely go to jail.

The STUDENT

(By H. M. G.)

It's quite impossible, in these piping times of peace, to keep up with all the wars going on around here. We started with a couple of well-mannered, modest map maneuvers. These begin in the classroom but may end anywhere. They are under the control of a director who tries to keep them as true to life as possible by refusing to decide who wins. I might say here, that I have had some first hand information that it is the cavalry that wins wars.

To get back to map wars. Before we can get them on the press we have an all night Field Maneuver, and the map wars, in consequence become about as interesting as a bilious staff officer. However, whether we catch up to these wars or not, I would like to say a few words about some people of prominence in the scholastic circles of Benning. Major Stayer, decorated by command of the student body with the royal order of the Gisemont for his delightful lectures, his pink pills, but most of all for his sympathy and understanding to the meek and lowly.

While we are in this charitable humor, what about giving a hand to two of our own? Brothers Horan and Hostettler, a couple of a good hombres that have satisfied both the Reds and Blues. To get down in the ranks, I see that a couple of the foreign representatives at Benning are tied for first place in the competition to see who will be policed the most number of times in equitation. The score now stands as follows: Villaluz 2; Graves 2.

The other day as the result of fair wear, and tear, mostly wear, however, I joined the sub-course in equitation. You take this course either from the sitting or reclining position. While a decision was being reached as to whether we should sit under an oak or a hemlock the class watched the last group in equitation. I took down the following comments.

Day—Riding with a spare tire.

Overfeldt—Confused posting with leap frog.

Speaking of riders, Hollister says that he is tired of all the publicity that he is getting and from now on wishes to be anonymous.

To get on with the Cavalry, however, we had a conference today on Cavalry Reconnaissance by Major Smith assisted by Capt. Gocker. The Major designated a definite seating arrangement for certain members of the class. Of course in the Cavalry a seat is a seat, if maintained, and I mention this because a definite seating policy would be a great help to Washington at this time.

The repairs, which have been made under the direction of the Recreation Center Board, include a retaining wall for the sand beach, concrete drainage ditches on three sides of the pool to carry off surface water, and painting of the woodwork of the pool. The area around the pool has been carefully cleared and will be seeded with grass, giving the place the appearance of a park.

THE STUDENT—(By H. M. G.)

I didn't put in for this war as first choice and my side lost, but I'll say this for Field Maneuver No. 1, Harp's Pond —Water Tanks, it was one of the most instructive, true to life, tear provoking and rip roaring wars Benning has pulled in years.

They say that a lot of battle plans of the Civil War were largely based upon commanders' knowledge of each other from West Point association. For those who were looking for it, a gob of character information was spread over the landscape that night from Harp's Pond to the Water Tanks.

I don't know the official name of this war. It might have been "Position Warfare vs. Open Warfare," according to the remarks of one of the judges. Personally, I think "The Goldfish War" would be more appropriate. I never saw so many umpires and spectators in my life. I was with the commander of the Reds, Major Bailey, and I am sure there must be hundreds now who know whether the major has his tonsils still with him or not. What a world, Major! A thousand questions, a thousand skeptics, staggering details and not a friend.

I might mention for those who kept the home fires burning, and liked it, that a Blue force under Major Allen was trying to get from Harp's Pond to Columbus without our catching him. There were four ways he could come! I thought the school should have provided more, so that each one of us could have had his own personal solution. However, we disagreed as much as four ways permitted. The pleasant part of this war was that you could break a leg or a neck without getting messed up over it. It was a gentleman's affair except for the conduct of one horse who put his foot in Caswell's mess kit.

To get on with the war, it took four thousand questions and eight thousand decisions to get us away from the water tanks. We had everything operating from unit journals to alternate positions. If the enemy had opened on us with artillery he would surely have ruined a lot of overhead.

Well, to try and get back to that war again, we started off at five and for an hour we raced along with the army stretching out behind us at increasing distances. At the first halt, up puffed a major, who had been relegated—among the fort troops. "Present my compliments to the battalion commander," cried the irate major, "and say that his pace is too damn fast."

Along about dusk we halted at a bunch of scrub trees from which extended long, low, leafless branches. At this place we established the Battalion C. P. I mention these trees because from dusk until we moved out at midnight, weary troopers with nothing much to report poked their features into these branches and then did a lot of lugubrious cussing. The cussing wasn't very good and when their horses tried to step on your face, the antipathy between the staff and line became more marked.

Along about 10:00 P. M., a stern voice from out of the night cried out, "Where is the Battalion Commander, I have captured two prisoners?" It appeared to me, the way everything was being turned over to the Battalion Commander, that they were trying to make this a personal war between him and the enemy. Well, the two prisoners, flanked by armed guards, were shoved into the presence of our leader. Someone asked them a question. From one of the figures came the trembling words, "I sho don't know what it's all about." Lights were quickly flashed. The enemy had turned dark. Our capture consisted of two orderlies from the 24th Infantry.

About this time the war began to take on a realistic touch. The weather turned bitterly cold, and as per instructions we had no blankets. Fortunately for the sake of our ones at home, or at a bridge game, business began to pick up a bit. Troopers dashed up with an elan that I haven't seen since they used to play "The Heart of Maryland" on the stage. I am sorry Major Smith wasn't there to see it too. At any rate it appeared that there was graphic information of the enemy. He was reported to the north, south, east and west. While the Battalion Commander was arranging these rumors in his unit journal according to their azimuth one of the S's suddenly cried out "What was that?" From afar off came the beating of hoofs, louder and louder they sounded to that hushed group who realized that this steed driven to the limit of horseflesh bore one who must have impressive tidings of the enemy. Then as our men rose from behind hedge and thicket, the cry of that intrepid rider swept over the hills, "The Blues are coming, the Blues are coming!" Major Senay had arrived. Really you have no idea of the startling effect, for a moment one could not be sure whether it was Horatio at the bridge or the meloncholy Dane.

The call to arms had aroused every unit. Men who had formerly lain shivering around their bivouac too cold to bid their hand, now sprang into action. Even the communication cart of Headquarters Company seemed to feel the wave of enthusiasm that had swept over these pine clad hills, for it marched immediately behind the advance guard. I assumed that the purpose of placing the cart with its mile of wire so far forward was so that prisoners could be immediately tied in bundles of ten, thus simplifying future handling and paper work.

The troops were quickly thrown into column and with a swinging step advanced to meet the foe. Suddenly from a dense woods in front a burst of flame shot out. From this point on it was anybody's war, depending on who is telling the story. I have in mind one officer to whom the war might properly be awarded. He fought on both sides. Having lost his own platoon he milled around until he located another, which happened to be an enemy platoon, which he gallantly led up to the conclusion of the problem wehn his error was pointed out, with emphasis.

In conclusion I am reminded of another war known scholastically as Major Tack's Terrain Exercise Marked Problem No. 8, but among the proletariat as Tack's Bunion Derby. Explanation by mail only. Tack's Bunion Derby has been placed on exhibit in the Chamber of Horrors just ahead of the other two exhibits.

"MORGAN'S LAST RAID,"—A historical romance featuring Tim McCoy It is not a Western, but a southern story. The scenes are highly spectacular and sensational. McCoy plays the part of a valiant defender of the southern cause and leads a band of raiders through the war torn areas separating the North from the South. "We Faw Down." Laurel-Hardy.

SUNDAY, APRIL 21

"THE WOLF OF WALL STREET," starring George Bancroft with a strong supporting cast in a timely story of the great stock market. It depicts in a most interesting manner the great manipulation of stocks and bonds in the biggest stock market in the world—Wall Street. Through the medium of a romance it shows the intrigue and cut-throat methods used to raise and lower the value of stocks and the cold blooded schemes used to throttle "big" men, making them penniless. The "Wolf" is compelled to borrow fom his arch enemy. A poor boy invests at the right time and becomes so wealthy that he dominates. A faithless woman enters into the plot. The story is considered one of this year s outstanding productions.

"Tarzan the Mighty No. 14."

TUESDAY, APRIL 23

"INTERFERENCE," starring Evelyn Brent with Clive Brook in a filmization of the stage play by the same name which ran an extended engagement in London and New York. with one of them, the other practices vile blackmail to wreak revenge. For a time she is the victor with her high-handed methods. The reprobate finally puts an end to her practices. The plot weaves itself to towering climaxes. It is a most absorbing picture.

"Careless Hubby." Cameo.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 24

"THE POWER OF THE PRESS," starring Jobyna Ralston and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in an intriguing drama of newspaper life featuring a big murder mystery, a political campaign and a love story of unusual interest. It concerns a cub reporter who becomes immeshed in politics. To complicate matters he falls in love with a girl whose reputation he ruined with a story implicating her in a murder. A district attorney is murdered. Both candidates for mayor are involved. To the tune of clicking telegraph instruments and the roar of the presses the reporter solves the mystery, wins the election for his candidate and gains fame for himself. It is a very interesting story.

"M. G. M. News No. 70."

THURSDAY, APRIL 25

"SILKS AND SADDLES", starring Marion Nixon with Richard Walling in a most interesting horse race story. It is filled with scenes of the turf and many events which lead up to an important horse race. This story does not hesitate to expose the evil phases of the sport, made up by the gambler parasites who live off the races. The theme involves a disgraced jockey and a girl who had faith in him and saw him come back. Thrills of the turf lead to a smashing climax. Noted Belmont Park, Long Island is the scene of the story.

"The Boy Friend." Roach stars.

FRIDAY, APRIL 26

"LADY OF CHANCE," starring Norma Shearer in a captivating story of romance and adventure. A witty young miss takes the hearts and bank rolls of lonesome young men in an innocent manner by employing the old badger tactics. All goes well until she meets a young fellow who looks like "easy money." She marries him for his bank roll then finds he hasn't any. Encouraged by her sharp wits he amasses a fortune. Her former crook friends appear on the scene for blackmail purposes; they threaten to "tell all." After a sequence of intriguing incidents the plot unravels to an absorbing climax. This story is considered decidedly entertaining.

Writer Features Woman's Club Program

On Monday afternoon the Infantry School Woman's Club brought the most successful year of its history to a close with one of the best programs of the season. The annual election of officers took place with the following results: Mrs. Oscar W. Hoop, president; Mrs Campbell King, first vice-president; Mrs. Harry A. Wells, second vice-president; Mrs. Frank Green, recording secretary; Mrs. Edward G. Sherburne, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Emil W. Leard, treasurer; Mrs. Leonard R. Boyd, auditor. After interesting reports of the various committees as to their accomplishments during the club year the retiring president, Mrs. Edgar S. Miller expressed the appreciation of the club for the excellent work of Mrs. John D. Forsythe as leader of the Arts and Crafts Club; Mrs. Philip B. Peyton and her able committee composed of Mrs. C. W. Ryder, Mrs. P. R. Goode, Mrs. L. M. Hester, Mrs. Leon Norris for their service to the Literary Club; Mrs. Walter I. Scott for her leadership of the Cooking Club.

The feature of the program was the presentation of Mrs. Kenneth F. March, the gifted "Beatrice Ashton Vandergrift," whose pen name is familiar to those who read Munsey's, Argosy-All Story, Holland's, Children, The Woman's Home Companion, St. Nicholas, The New York Mail, The Times, The Tribune, The World. The successful young writer has found ready market for her stories and poems since she was a tiny girl of five and now has more attractive offers than she has time to fill. She comes from a line of writers; her father's diaries having been published in The Saturday Evening Post and National Geographic; her cousin, Fanny Vandergrift, herself, a successful writer, was the wife of the great Robert Louis Stevenson and Mrs. March as a wee tot with her father used to be guests in their home at Lake Saranac before the Stevensons went to Samoa. Our author is a very versatile writer, having written many delightful short stories, lyrics which voice every emotion, a novelette which the Universal Moving Picture Corporation wanted to buy to star Reginald Denny; and she is under contract now for a novel of South American life for Munsey. She chose for this program a story of this locale: "A Soldiers Son", published in the January issue of Holland's. We see Fort Benning's brick and plaster houses with drooping gables and vine covered porches, our polo ponies wheeling in swift turns at the lead of riders in yellow jackets, in blue; we see the creamy walls of our new hospital; and we see into the heart of a loving, trusting, ignorant country girl and an irresponsible soldier. The story is well told, in entertaining style, and it brings smiles and heartache in quick succession. She read a group of exquisite lyrics, lovely in choice of word, of poetic form, and of thought. She was a revelation to us who have seen her pursue the even tenor of her way for these three years that she has lived in our midst, having time to pick out potatoes, care for her baby, play a game of bridge or what you will, filling her moments apparently as casually as the rest of us and yet writing, writing, writing, for ready publishers.

There was charming music on this occasion. Mrs. Hammond McD. Monroe played beautifully three piano solos before the reading of "The Soldier's Son" and after it Mrs. Leonard R. Boyd sang a group of three songs with violin accompaniment by Mrs. John F. Holland and piano by Mrs. Edgar S. Miller. After Mrs. March read her lyrics the program was concluded by a group of musical numbers, Mrs. Boyd singing, Mrs. Holland playing on the saw, and Mrs. Miller accompanying at the piano.

After the program Mrs. William F. Freehoff and Mrs. Jared I. Wood were hostesses at tea. The tea table was lovely with its gorgeous Chinese cloth, its handsome silver bowl of dresden flowers and its tall tapers in silver holders. Mrs. Edward G. Sherburne presided at the tea and coffee services.

DRAMATIC CLUB

The Club presents the play, "Pigs", on the 10th and 11th of May, bringing its season to a close. Mrs. R. H. Chance directs this play. The cast has been selected and things are well under way. The public will be admitted to these plays and the evening of the 11th will probably be designated as Columbus night. There will be enough seats for all on both nights.

The Dramatic Club has more than 500 members. It is self supporting, and 110 people have taken part in the presentation of the plays this season. In general, in the past, seats have been available to members of the Club only, by a new seating arrangement, it is planned for this final play to provide anyone from Fort Benning—and from Columbus—a seat in any part of the house that he may wish.

The Dramatic Club will hold an important meeting (business) on May 14th and it is earnestly requested that each member of the Club hold this date open, details of this meeting will be announced in a later issue. —R. F. H.

A FIVE THOUSAND FOOT BOOKSHELF

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, who served as president of Harvard University for forty years, once stated that a five-foot bookshelf was sufficient for the average man.

This remark of the doctor's has been widely quoted and often misquoted and misinterpreted.

The noted educator did not mean that an individual's library should necessarily be limited to the number of books that could be stored on such a short shelf.

Dr. Eliot meant that a person could obtain a broad knowledge of history, arts and sciences by the reading of a few carefully selected books.

The doctor compiled a list of books which included only those which he thought essential to the acquirement of a background of general information sufficient for the cultural needs of the average person.

These books, he said, could be easily held by a five-foot shelf.

Here at Fort Benning, there are two excellent libraries whose combined shelf space probably is a thousand times greater than Dr. Eliot's famous shelf.

At present there are more than 20,000 books in the two libraries. All of them have been carefully selected and are admirably suited to the needs and desires of the personnel of the garrison.

Here the military student, the historian, the casual reader or the one who reads for self-improvement will find a variety of books which are his for the asking.

There are many hours of the average soldier's day which can be pleasantly and profitably employed in self-improvement by reading good books.

Here is opportunity unlimited—use your libraries!

POISON IVY

There are found in the United States about thirty plants that contain poison. Some of these cause illness or even death when eaten, such as certain species of mushrooms ("toad stools"), while others on coming in contact with the skin cause severe inflammation. One of the most common groups of the last type of plants is known as poison ivy. There are really sixty to seventy species of such plants and they grow in all parts of the United States. True poison ivy is a creepy or clinging type of vine which may be found in the woods or shady places growing up the trunks of trees, stumps, fence poles, etc. It possesses three leaflets and is thus to be distinguished from the Virginia creeper and other harmless creepers which have five leaflets. The leaves are usually reddish in color when small but change to bright green when fully grown. Thus plants often show green leafy stalks and a top of small reddish leaves. Poison oak is a small bush growing in swampy places, more common in the West than in the eastern portion of the country. It is also known as poison sumac, poison elder or poison dogwood.

Poison ivy grows in great profusion at Fort Benning as many persons in the command have cause to know. The part of the plant to be feared is the resinous juice. This sticky sap, exuding from all parts of a bruised plant, when it comes in contact with the skin, causes intense irritation associated with swelling and often producing large blisters. The inflammation occurs in sharply defined patches, elongated streaks, and irregular shapes corresponding with the original area of contact. A common location of the blisters is between the fingers. While original areas are most affected, it is possible for the poison to be transferred to other parts of the body, such as the face, there to cause less severe forms of blisters. The inside of the hands and the scalp but are rarely affected. The water from poison ivy blisters is not itself poisonous as is sometimes imagined. Besides the irritation to the skin there are other effects of the poison, such as fever, loss of appetite and other signs of digestive disturbances. Some persons are exquisitely susceptible and are affected by merely being near a plant and even without actual contact. Others are more resistant. Hence the same amount of poison will produce very different effects in two individuals.

The skin eruption may sometimes be prevented even after handling poison ivy plants by free use of alkaline soap and water or water containing washing soda. The common laundry soap has sufficient free alkali to answer the purpose. Washing the hands in gasoline may also prevent poison ivy but it must be remembered that gasoline is itself very irritating to some people.

Poison oak inflammation usually begins from several hours to several days after contact with the plant. There is redness, great burning or itching, and the formation of numerous little blisters. It lasts from one to four weeks. Many persons having once been poisoned are thereafter highly susceptible and may remain so for life. Other individuals are able to overcome this sensitivity to the plant.

The breaking out is treated by application of one of several lotions or ointments. It is best to consult a physician so that treatment suitable to the type of poison may be instituted.

Next week's subject—Rabies.

COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

TOMMY

I saw him first from a distance. He carried with difficulty the large basket which seemed to be much too heavy for him. As he drew nearer I saw that he was a boy but a boy whose face belied his tender years. Though that of a boy, his face had yet the appearance of age. But it was not the kind of face that is mellowed by the passage of years nor was it the sophisticated type of face. To me it seemed to express in the lack-lustre eyes, the sallow, wrinkled skin and the long lines around the pale loose-lipped mouth and sagging chin, the toil-worn weariness, the privations of generations of progenitors whose cycle of life consisted of birth, toil and death.

He was dressed in faded overalls, a man's shabby sweater, a cap and worn shoes. And he was far from being clean.

He was selling, or trying to sell, cold hamburger sandwiches and slabs of anemic-looking lemon pies. The market was poor—it was only half past ten in the morning—and his potential customers were too busy to heed his meek solicitations.

I purchased one of his sandwiches, which I neither wanted nor ate, as this seemed to be a good opening for conversation.

He was quite friendly. He told me that he was selling sandwiches "for a lady uptown." If he sold all of them—and there were several dozen—he would get a dollar. The dollar he would give to his mother just as he had given her the two that he had made the day before by shining the shoes of soldiers at the fort several miles from the city.

He earned a few dollars now and then by working nights in a lunch wagon and these also went to his mother. Every cent that he earned, except a few cents used occasionally for bus fare, he gave to his mother.

"Haven't you a daddy?" I asked. He nodded. Daddy it seemed also worked and brought home money for mother and his two little sisters. They didn't see much of daddy because he went to work every morning at five o'clock and worked until five o'clock in the evening.

Daddy was always very tired when he came home and went to bed early. He made lots of money though—$14.40 every week—which he gave to mother.

"Don't you go to school?" I asked. "No suh, I ain't never been to school," and sensing, perhaps, my incredulous wonder, he naively added "I c'n spell my name an' c'n write it too, an' I c'n read house numbers."

"How old are you, Tommy?" Tommy's other name, by the way, is an American name—has been since Colonial days.

"I'm sixteen," he replied.

Tommy picked up his basket and went on his way, his puny little body bent over by its weight. As my eyes followed his laboring steps I thought of the pitiable struggle of a family of five trying to exist on $14.40 a week and the paltry earnings of a stunted, undernourished illiterate boy.

"Poor little Tommy," thought I, "an American boy sixteen years old, not far in years from manhood, who has never been to school!"

And then I found myself wondering why we are asked to contribute to institutions whose sole purpose is to cram our ideas down the unwilling throats of heathen in distant lands.

FUNERAL OF COLONEL FRANK C. BAKER

Funeral services for the late Colonel Frank C. Baker, Medical Corps, whose death occurred suddenly at Fort Benning last Friday, were held from the Catholic Chapel at one o'clock, Sunday.

The services were attended by a large group of people, among whom were Major General Briant H. Wells, Brigadier General Edgar T. Collins, with his staff, other high-ranking officers, with their staffs, officers and nurses of the Medical Corps, and friends of Colonel Baker.

At the conclusion of the services in the chapel which were read by Chaplain Thomas L. McKenna, a military funeral procession was formed and marched to the Upatoi bridge, where a brief final ceremony was performed.

As the flag-draped coffin appeared after the services in the chapel, the 29th Infantry, which was formed in line opposite the chapel, presented arms while the band played the hymn "Nearer My God to Thee."

A caisson was waiting in front of the chapel and after the coffin was placed on it the honorary pallbearers arranged themselves beside it and the active pallbearers took position just in rear of the caisson.

The honorary pallbearers were: Colonel Harry E. Knight, Colonel Harris Pendleton, Jr., Colonel Willis P. Hill, Major Morrison C. Stayer, and Major Edgar E. Hume.

The six active pallbearers were: Master Sergeant P. H. Risley, Technical Sergeant S. J. Scott, Staff Sergeant T. O. Williams, Staff Sergeant L. D. White, Staff Sergeant E. Theurich and Staff Sergeant L. Brazier. Following the pallbearers was a black charger in mourning caparison.

Brigadier General Edgar T. Collins, commandant, and his staff, Lieutenant Colonel George C. Marshall, assistant commandant and staff, officers and nurses of the Medical Corps, Dental Corps and Veterinary Corps, Colonel D. G. Berry, commanding officer of special units, and staff, Colonel P. C. Galleher, commanding officer 24th Infantry, and staff, and Major E. S. Miller, commanding officer of the 15th Tank Battalion, and staff, and Major L. E. Jones, commanding officer of the 83rd Field Artillery Batallion, took places in the order named.

The procession, headed by the band and the escort of the 29th. Infantry, marched to the Upatoi bridge where final honors to Colonel Baker were rendered when Company A 29th. Infantry, fired three volleys and a bugler sounded taps.

The body was then transferred from the caisson to a hearse and taken to Columbus where it was placed aboard a train to be shipped to Washington, D. C., escorted by Chaplain McKenna.

Colonel Baker at the time of his death had been in command of the Station Hospital, Fort Benning, since August 24, 1927. He was a distinguished medical officer and was decorated for exceptional services rendered during the World War while in charge of an evacuation hospital in France.

Colonel Baker was born in Washington, District of Columbia, on November 9, 1877. He graduated with the degree of M. D. from Georgetown University in 1899. He began his military career as a Contract Surgeon in which capacity he served from the 20th of March, 1900 to the 28th of February, 1901. He was appointed Assistant Surgeon on the 4th of February, 1901 and accepted on the 1st of March, 1901; he was appointed a captain in the Medical Corps 4th of February, 1906 and served in the grades of major, lieutenant colonel and colonel which latter grade he reached on the 20th of February 1927. Colonel Baker served as a colonel, Medical Corps, in the National Army from the 19th of July, 1918 until the 24th of March, 1920. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal with the following citation:

"As commanding officer of Evacuation Hospital No. 6, at Chateau-Thierry, from June to August, 1918, Colonel Baker so promptly arranged his hospital under most difficult conditions and with great resourcefulness and good judgment made such use of the inadequate means at his disposal that he was able to receive and evacuate after splendid treatment and in perfect order a large number of wounded from the Marne offensive at a time when that section of France was greatly demoralized."

"Spud" hied himself into town t'other day to complete his hope chest and returned late at night with two pair of socks, three boxes of matches, a straw kelly, and a wild story of having purchased a banana split. Such dissipation, tch, tch!

Having learned the touch system by chauffeuring a typewriter, Pvts. Martin and Baker profited by the phrase "Learn while you earn." They were observed at a soda fountain in town, leaning on the counter eagerly discussing the Einstein theory (?) with two of the table hops. A small amout of currency changed hands, and the two con-men departed blithely to the movies. Such gall is divided into three parts, and the greatest of these is charity.

Pvt. LaBonte was overcome by this beautiful Georgia moon-shine t'other night and declared that in terpsichorean ability he was second only to Ted Shawn. Attired in a becoming costume of dark blue fatigue clothing, he started to the Service Club but was convinced that the better idea would be to entertain the squad room with songs, which he and Pvt. Knight did, far, far into the night —if entertain is the proper word.

FIRST BATTALION ITEMS

First Bn. Hdqrs. & Hdqrs. Co.

Cpl. Sanders and our mounted orderlies had quite a time keeping the names of horses connected with their respective owners while on the problem Thursday night. There were perhaps twenty or thirty Student Officers and as many horses stationed with 1st Battalion Headquarters, Cpl. Sanders knew neither the officers nor the horses, and the only horses ever called for were Dynamic and Magneto, so Cpl. Sanders took it for granted that all of the horses were named either Dynamic or Magneto and when asked to bring Magneto out for an officer, the first horse he came to was the one he attached the name Magneto to. When daylight came there was a bit of confusion when it was discovered that no officer was astride the horse originally allotted him. Yet more disaster was in store when it dawned upon the oficers that their mess-kits were on their original horse. However a hasty search produced the lost articles and when "chow-call" sounded every one was in line eager to be served next, and after being served seemed happy and contented as they munched on the well-earned "chow."

Company "B"

The Company has suffered the loss of our well known 1st Sergeant, John D Brown, for a short period to come, due to the fact that his immediate family is suffering with scarlet fever. Sergeant, our best wishes for a speedy recovery for your entire family.

Leo. J. Romploskie, one of our best cooks and football players, is soon to be discharged per E. T. S. We feel certain that he will re-enlist and take a furlough for the sole purpose of beating camp this year. Life has been very miserable for everyone around him for the past month or so, due to his perpetual worrying in regard to camp. Somehow he received a false report that camp would be quite early this year and it certainly has kept him worrying, wondering whether or not he would be discharged in time to beat it.

It is a mystery just what was on Pvt. Villere's mind the other day when, standing by the cooler with the water turned on, he asked Pvt. Brookshire where he could obtain a drink of water. If it becomes much worse we will be compelled to call a Section VIII board on him. O-H-H-H-H!

Company "C"

Corporal "Joe" Darmofal started to check out at noon yesterday for the purpose of attending the show last evening, but the charge of quarters did not see fit, so our "Little Joe" spent a long, unhappy evening in the Recreation Room.

Our baseball team lost their game Saturday but came home with honors Sunday. "Ed Bensen" probably had a date Saturday, at least he did not arrive at the game in time to make his usual heroic appearance in the ninth inning.

The rumor that has been started about our barber "B L." and Johnson, is untrue. They are the best of friends and are now making plans for some business deal in the future.

Sergeant d'Entremont and Corporal Gene Austin Manhart have been seen wandering off to town together. We wonder if Margaret is getting along alright.

Company "D"

Cpl. Faircloth has returned from furlough and stated that his next enlistment will be in civilian life, after being on a sixty day furlough at home in Troy, Alabama.

Pvt. Estes reported for duty today and we are sure that he will make his thirty years now.

Cpl. Patrick O'Donoghue and Sgt. Charles McGaha, our two Irishmen are expected to enjoy the Passover holidays.

SECOND BATTALION ITEMS

Headquarters Co., 2nd Battalion

We were on a problem of how to stay on our feet when we could not see even a few feet away, but Sergeant Wadford said he did not mind as long as Sergeant Stragand had to go too, and by the way Sergeant Stragand has at last found the only musical instrument for him is an accordian. He can put a Scottish Highlander to shame for a'that ably assisted by Pop Villa of the Regimental Band.

Speaking of winning a war, we couldn't help winning when even the fire-flies were on our side confusing the enemy by their display of glowing fire that looked so much like cigarettes being smoked by about four battalions instead of one. If the student officers got as much kick (it's supposed to be instruction) as the men did we could win any war, any where, any time. Having been raised (or reared) in the South that war reminded this soldier of an opossum hunt on an enlarged scale.

Company "E"

Company "E" participated in the regimental problem Thursday night "The Battle Royal," April 11, 1929. Our mission in the great problem was being rear guard of the machine gun and Howitzer Co., and the advance guard for the artillery. Sergeant Dalby had his platoon guarding the wagon train and they thought they would have it pretty soft whe they left camp but they had to pull the train out of a bog and it kept the boys continually busy skinning mules and pulling wagons out of the mud.

When only a quarter of a mile away from camp we heard about our wagon train being stuck in the mud. Corp. Millikan heard the news at the same time for he is always thinking about eating. He worried all the way into camp, afraid he would not get any breakfast that morning but the train came in at 3 A. M. and everyone had a good feed. The two cooks, Shaw and Buckner, did fine on the trip, a wagon tongue broke on the chow wagon and they stepped forward and carried the broken wagon tongue back for two miles and exchanged it for a new one and returned and fed the boys a real meal.

"E" Co., being the advance guard for the artillery escorted it through the war zone, as no other advance guard could have done, without a casualty and then the big war was called off. Everybody gathered at Harmony Church and had a couple of hours sleep and one thing we want to mention in particular is, the 2nd Battalion was in high spirits when Major Young told the troops they could come in on the train and "E" Co. arrived in Fort at 8 A. M. Friday morning.

Company "F"

Some of the fellows in this company were asking if we were going to Mexico by the time the hike was half over. Believe me it was something that you very seldom see and always read about during the first few miles through the woods and swamps. All of us were walking on our imagination for it was entirely too dark to see where you were going. The hike was a great success and the battle between the Reds and Blues was similar to hunting wild game in Africa. If ball ammunition had been used there would have been many casualties on both sides. Everyone enjoyed the hike very much all but the loss of sleep as it was too cold to sleep out in the field.

Company "G"

Pvt. Nims while down at the carnival, went up to a soft drink stand. Two men were standing there talking about their cars and one told the other that he would have to get a shot of 600-W. So Nims told the lady that he would have the same thing that the other fellow got, a shot of 600-W.

Sgt. Brown, our mess sergeant, gets discharged this week. He has fifteen years' service in the Army. Sgt. Brown is planning on going to Jefferson Bar-

Battery "A"

The battery received a taste of what war may be like during the maneuvers last Thursday, Thursday night and Friday. From reports received the men played several roles that are not in the "book," such as moving the guns and caissons while the horses rested and probably were laughing.

Private North, the day room orderly, was heard bawling out Private Garrison, the battery barber, Monday for taking a five day furlough and locking up the barber shop. It seems as if Private North had to purchase a mirror so as to keep that school girl complexion on account of said barber shop being closed. Lucious, you should reimburse L. R. the price of the mirror, at least.

The battery ball team looks very promising this season and we feel safe in predicting that the Battalion Cup will be in our day room when the season closes.

Corporal Doggett, who is one of the short timers, comes forth with this alibi of why he goes to town so often. Says he is "cubbing" the position he intends to accept when he is discharged. Ben, we always thought that the other party did the accepting except during leap year.

Sergeant Brown and Corporal Chapman spent the week end in Atlanta, so we hear, trying to find out what the well-dressed man will wear during the coming season. Therefore we expect to get an eye full of sartorial splendor soon.

From the looks of things Sergeant Owen has gone in for dramatics and will play the role of Uncle Tom in Uncle Tom's Cabin this season. Sarge, what variety of little Eva will play opposite you, blonde or brunette?

Sergeant Regan says if you don't think war can be——tough try walking five miles at night over strange terra firma in front of a chuck wagon with a lighted candle. Sarge, you win, but remember the doors at the hospital are always open.

ODE TO THE MIGHTY CHATTAHOOCHEE

"There ain't no water it all got washed away,
And as a result the horses can't eat hay.
We are forbidden to bathe, but shave we must,
Therefore we are using emery dust."

Corporal Coffin, bridge instructor extraordinary, of the battery, lays claim to having the best squad of bridge players in the Battalion and does hereby issue a challenge to any and all who may think they can play the game.

Private Thurston upon being asked what was the attraction in town replied that he had gone into the hotel business. What? No ice water today.

racks, 6th Infantry. We wish him and his family good luck in their future.

A few little things that happened last week while on maneuvers, Pvt. Manley was the Company runner. The Company Commander sent Pvt. Manley to the Battalion Commander with the message that the flankers were flanking and the cooks were cooking. Runner Manley fell in the well and the Battalion Commander did not get the message so they had to start the thing all over again, then Pvt. Bates was sent out with the message and Bates put it over fine.

Company "H"

Saturday morning one of this organization's former Company Commanders, the Deputy Chief of Staff, Major General Wells, inspected the company throughout and was very well pleased with the condition of the quarters.

Pvt. Pharr received his discharge yesterday, his second. It is hoped to see him back before the News goes to press.

"H" Company is out for full honors in the horse show this month. Any other company competing against us will have to step out and shine, for our undaunted determination is not waning in the least.

PARKER-JERNIGAN IN RETURN BOUT TUESDAY NIGHT

Phillips-Thomas in Semi-Windup.

Goofy Gilman	vs.	Gisemont Gulley	3 Rounds
Fuzzy Douglas	vs.	Raven Poe	3 Rounds
Saginaw Seeley	vs.	Ralph Taylor	6 Rounds
Doubtin' Thomas	vs.	Pinkey Phillips	8 Rounds
Blondy Parker	vs.	Ginger Jernigan	10 Rounds

Four real scraps with a possibility that the fifth might be better than average is what the card for Tuesday night, April 23rd, has to offer to those who like their diversion watching the glove artists.

The coming bill, from the promoter's standpoint, is in the nature of an experiment. In the past eight months the fans have been watching Ptomey, DeI'ratt and Walker Smith rotate as headliners. Parker, Asher, Thomas, Davis and DeMars have been knocking at the door of stardom, but their noise has met with but feeble response.

This brings up the mooted question of what makes a star, or better still just what brings the cash customers to the gate? Boiling the question down, relieving it from all ifs and ands, the biggest and best reason a boxer is a box office attraction, is the fact that he can hit hard enough to send an opponent to a horizontal posture. The sooner a box fighter realizes this feature the sooner he will get to the point of seeing real money for his labor. The world is full of jab, hook, and clinch boys who spend years learning to dance in and out, only to wind up as a night watchman at a concrete mixer.

In featuring Parker and Jernigan as headliners on the coming card the thought was uppermost to bring out everything in Parker, the Benning boy. Blondy, when he is in the best of condition, and at present he is in better shape than at any time of his career, when he is right he is poison to anyone he meets. Here is one of the many boys who are developing at Benning that can actually sock and sock plenty. Run down the whole list and you will find no one who hits harder and faster. It has been less than a month ago that Parker dead to the world, from running into contact with one of Jernigan's right handers, came back and dropped the Columbus 'Adonis three times in less than two minutes.

The rematching of Parker and Jernigan was bound to come. Many will doubt the wisdom of giving both boys the glare of a windup, but a first class 140 lb. boy is one of the needs of the Post. If Parker wades in and drops Jernigan for the full count then the I. S. D. boy is made, for the South is full of classy boys scaling at the same weight. Let Blondy win by a knockout and he will be in line for Sammy Buchanan, Abe Luckey, Cole, Baby Stribling, and boys of this calibre.

The experiment, therefore, on the coming bill is to see if the military cop is ready to step in and take his place as a windup boy with DePratt, Smith and Co. Every one who doles out his money for the coming fray ought to be ready to give the youngster the encouragement he will need. As the gullible goof wisely said "all a fellow needs is a start," it remains for the Benning fans to get in line and root for one of their own.

Lamp the semi-windup between Thomas and Phillips. There will be very little time for abstract reflection when these two knights of the leatehr padding get together. This is a windup attraction in itself. Both men realize that to reach higher planes a punch must be developed that has sufficient force to bring the paid attendance out of its seats. Pinkey has been spending many hours with this object in view. Thomas looks better with each flight. A knockout for either boy will place him in line for better purses.

Saginaw Seeley ties up with a newcomer at Benning, Ralph Taylor of LaGrange. Taylor is a veteran of the game having met Ptomey, Ted Goodrich, Styles Attaway and Johnny Flynn of Chattanooga. Seeley and Taylor recently met at the latter's home town with Saginaw on the short end, but eye witnesses of the battle thought Seeley was the victim of a home town decision. If they repeat, another batle is sure to be seen.

The fourth go of the evening that is recommended as worth seeing is the scrap between Poe and Douglas. Raven has been knocking them loose from their moorings with short choppy right handers, but Fuzzy has a long, lean left that demoralizes heavy hitters. Let Poe get over this obstacle and Billy Shell will be trotted out for him.

It is noticeable that Grumpy Gordy's place on the bill has been left vacant. There is a pug in camp looking for Grumpy's scalp. At this writing Gordy's whereabouts is unknown. It is barely conceivable that Gordy would duck any one but at 9:00 A. M. Thursday morning he was being paged and the "out of town" reply was the only answer.

Goofy Gilman and Gisemont Gulley, both novices, open the bill at 8:00 P. M. sharp. Comments withheld.

TOPOGRAPHERS AND TROOPS DO NOT AGREE

The unimproved road leading east from Harp's Pond is said to be impassable for wheeled vehicles and the new maps will show the "road" as a trail: "impassable for wheeled vehicles."

However, on the night of April 11-12, the 2nd Battalion of the 29th Infantry and one battery of the 83rd Field Artillery, with their trains, demonstrated that this trail could be negotiated by troops and trains during the blackest night. The moral must be that the possibility of a trail is directly proportional to the will of the commander and the training of the troops.

FLORRID CHECKS DOUGHBOYS AFTER MERZ IS DRIVEN FROM BOX

Last Thursday the Doughboys invaded the Fox lair at Columbus and came very near taking the Foxes' pelt before the home-town fans who were out to witness the Foxes in action. A last desperate rally in the eighth inning gave the Reynards two runs and won the game 4 to 3.

Lefty Allison, Doughboy portsider, held the Fox wrecking crew well in hand, keeping their bingles well scattered except in two innings when hits meant runs. Otto Merz twirled good ball for the Foxes until the third inning when the Doughboys jumped on his offerings to lash out four hits and score three runs. Florrid relieved Merz and that youngster silenced the soldiers' heavy artillery.

Both teams gave a wonderful exhibition of fielding, Allison, twirled a nifty game against the leaguers and but for the fatal eighth when a lucky hit and an infield bobble gave the Foxes the break, he was complete master of the situation.

The Doughboys' runs came in the third frame. Cobb led off with a single to right, McCarthy fanned, Allison singled to center sending Cobb to third, Franz popped a bunt over the pitcher's head that went for a hit, Cobb scoring. Shotgun White sacrificed both runners up a notch, Buckley doubled to right sending Allison and Franz across the rubber. Kjelstrom flied out to Neibert.

The Foxes went into the eighth trailing the Doughboys by one run. Lew Neibert led off with a triple to center, Neibert scored when Cobb fumbled Culbreth's easy grounder and then heaved wild to first. Kohlbecker flied out but Florrid doubled to center sending Culbreth home with the winning run. The next two batters went out to the infield. This ended the scoring for the rest of the game, the final score showing the Foxes on the large end of a 4 to 3 contest.

FOX SLUGGERS GO ON RAMPAGE AS DOUGHBOY PITCHERS PASS IN REVIEW

After holding the Columbus Foxes on even terms in the first three games of their four game series, the Benning Doughboys' pitching staff went to pieces before the Fox wrecking crew at Gowdy Field last Sunday afternoon in the fourth and final game of the series and when the smoke of battle cleared away the Foxes had collected seventeen hits and scored eleven runs. During the melee the Doughboys failed to make connections with the home plate.

Carnes opened on the Hillock for the Doughboys and pitched shutout ball for three innings. In the fourth, the Foxes scored a pair of runs off a walk and two hits. In the fifth, Carnes was sent to the showers, Clayton relieved him but was wild as a March hare. Tolle took a turn on the mound and seemed to be in good shape but was yanked for Futch, a barrage of hits greeted the new hurler Paschal relieved Futch in the seventh and slowed up the slaughter. Paschal proved to be effective in the seventh and eighth, the leaguers being unable to solve his delivery. In the ninth Lance picked one of Paschal's fast ones and sent it over the right field fence for a circuit clout, the next three batters went out in order.

Kjelstrom played a great game in center field, his catch of Millsap's drive in the first inning was by far the greatest running catch ever witnessed at Ft. Benning, the drive would have been good for a home run but for Kjelstrom's phenomenal catch.

Buckley starred for the Doughboys at first base and also accounted for two of their five hits, his last drive was against the right field fence for three bases.

Well anyway that bad game is out of our system, next will come the Auburn Tiger from his lair at Auburn, Ala.

APRIL ACTIVE ATHLETIC MONTH

The garrison athletic program for the month of April promises to be the feature program of the season.

The first event will be a marathon race, which will be held Sunday, April 21st. Teams representing organizations of the garrison will compete. The course which covers a distance of 7920 yards, will be the same that was used in the baby marathon held here in November, 1928.

The first race was won by the teams representing the Fifteenth Tank Battalion, although Maitland of the Second Bats broke the tape.

Races will begin and end at the Doughboy stadium. The starter's gun will put the runners on their way at 9:30 o'clock, Sunday morning.

A garrison road race will be held on Wednesday, April 24th, commencing at 2:30 P. M. The following units are expected to enter teams: 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry; 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry; Special Units, 29th Infantry; 83rd Field Artillery Battalion; Fifteenth Tank Battalion and the Special Units, The Infantry School.

A suitably engraved trophy will be presented the winning team. Gold medals will be presented the first eight contestants finishing and a cup to the individual winner of the race.

A garrison track and field meet will be held on Saturday, April 27, at the Doughboy Stadium, commencing at 1:45 P. M. The following units are expected to enter teams: 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry; 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry; Special Units, 29th Infantry, 83rd Field Artillery Battalion; Fifteenth Tank Battalion and the Special Units; The Infantry School.

Following is a list of events:

HAPPY HEARTS FACE TOUGH BASEBALL SCHEDULE

The 24th Infantry baseball schedule for the months of April and May, show that fifteen games will be played at Gowdy Field. Among the teams that will play here are the strongest professional and amateur colored baseball aggregations in the South.

Games scheduled at Gowdy Field during this period are as follows:

April 20, 21, 22, and 23: Birmingham Black Barons.

April 24 and 25: Morris Brown University.

April 26 and 27: Morehouse College.

May 1 and 2: Miles Memoriam College.

May 3 and 4: Georgia State Industrial.

LACROSSE TEAM ORGANIZED

A post lacrosse team has been organized and is now practicing several times a week in the stadium.

"Could you pass the bread?"

"I think I can. I moved pianos all summer."

THE TENTS OF KEDAR

The season has arrived when it makes some difference whether you have screens on your tent or not. Up to now, it merely has been a nuisance, as the presence of screens prevented forcing an entry to one's home when the door got locked with the key on the inside or down in the academic area. Now screens are at a premium, to ward off the early rising fly.

Saturday night, April 20, the national guard and reserve officers of the 1929 class will hold a dance at Biglerville. Pure unadulterated ice cream and cake, and punch of similar innocence and good character are promised to revelers.

In addition, those attending the dance will have an opportunity to look over our sideshows of this and that. Visitors are promised at least a glimpse of Big Dan Lenahan, the subway builder and yachtsman of New York, whose palatial houseboat in the East River is well known in Sixth avenue society; Noisy Mason of Ohio, Baron von Manteuffel, first sergeant of "E" company; the playful Mr. Miller, who likes to chew his friends' arms and ears off in his lighter moments; Captain Graham of the rifle troops, who apparently possesses more unusable and unsalvageable military property than anybody in the American army; John Enlow and Bob Hamlett, the headless horsemen, who will ride for Company "F" in the big night ride April 24; to say nothing of Lieutenant Strohm, who in a heedless moment picked his own pocket of $240 one night recently, and then had to go into a huddle with himself and organize a pursuit.

These are but a few of the attractions, all of which are free as air to guests.

The Waiters' Club at Biglerville has organized a pressing and cleaning service at cut rate prices. Don't know anything about how good these boys may be as pressers, but if they don't move faster than some of them do between the kitchen and the mess hall, a whole lot of us will have to attend dances and such in kilts or bivvidees while waiting for our breeches to come home.

INFANTRY TEAM CANDIDATES WORKING HARD

Training of the candidates who are competing for places on the rifle team which will represent the infantry in the National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, next September, is well under way.

Two hours each morning are devoted to "dry shooting," at ranges of 200 and 300 yards on the 24th Infantry parade ground. A half hour of physical drill follows the dry shooting and completes the morning work.

In the afternoon, the candidates are taken to the rifle range where firing with service ammunition is held from 1 to 4 o'clock.

Special attention is being given to rapid fire drill and to the development of a cadence in aiming and firing, both in slow and rapid fire, for each rifleman.

Many high scores have been made. Captain K. L. Berry and Captain J. P. Lyons have both made scores of 50 firing offhand. Captain Richard O. Bassett has shot a possible at 1000 yards. Possible scores at rapid fire are made frequently.

In the first group match fired last week, Pfc. John H. Burnsell, Company G, 29th. Infantry, made the highest score of the enlisted men firing at 200 yards slow fire and 200 and 300 yards rapid fire.

DELEGATE TO INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

Major Edgar Erskine Hume, Medical Inspector, will depart April 18 for London, England. He has been appointed the delegate of the United States Army at the International Conference of Military Medicine. He is also delegate to the meeting of the Royal Institute of Public Health at Zurich, Switzerland.

Work on the new fill and spillway at Harp's Pond is now near completion. The wooden spillway at the weak spot in the old fill will prevent another washout such as the one caused by the floods of last month. Reports that there are still quite a few fish left of those planted in the pond back in 1927 will be good news to the sportsmen who had been planning on fishing trips there when the pond was opened for fishing. Only one injury has marred the work as yet. Allie Ramsey took the weight of the pile driver on his trusty right hand but through some sort of miracle escaped with a badly bruised paw. He is out on the job again though.

A great piece of bridge building was the reconstruction of the bridge at Ochillee by a detail from the company working under the direction of Staff Sergeant McGriff. The job was finished in record time.

Theater expenses for the next month will be considerably lightened for Corp. "Chief" Philips. He has been awarded the free pass to the Main Theater won by this company for high percentage of sales in show books. "Chief" took the honor for outstanding work at Harp's pond that was highly commended by Major Bootz.

Sgt. Kingsbury is now working out with the Infantry Rifle team getting in shape for the tryouts of the Engineer Rifle team. Kingsbury's presence on the 1929 Engineer Rifle team was requested by the captain of this year's team. King made the team in 1927 and has been well remembered for his work in the matches at Camp Perry.

Win Praise

SKILLFUL DRIVING COMMENDED

One of the outstanding features of the recent night maneuvers was the skillful driving and handling of the animals of the 2d Battalion, 29th Infantry, which represented the Blue force. The successful accomplishment of the Blue commander's mission was due in no small measure to the efforts of the enlisted men of the machine gun, howitzer and service companies, and the battery of the 76th Field Artillery, who led their animals at night with the carts, wagons and guns, over roads and trails hitherto considered almost impassable for wheeled transportation.

Lieutenant Colonel George C. Marshall, assistant commandant, was so impressed by the performance of the animal-drawn transportation units that he sent a letter of commendation to Colonel Harris Pendleton, Jr., commanding the 29th Infantry, in which he praised the resourcefulness and skill of the enlisted personnel of these units.

Colonel Marshall's letter is as follows:

THE INFANTRY SCHOOL,
Office of the Assistant Commandant
Fort Benning, Georgia.
April 12, 1929.

The Commanding Officer,
29th Infantry,
Fort Benning, Georgia.

My dear Colonel Pendleton:

I wish to express to you, for the Academic Department, appreciation of the splendid manner in which the members of your regiment carried through their part in the night maneuver completed today. The interest displayed by them and the cheerful spirit exhibited during the arduous work involved contributed materially to the success of the exercise.

I wish particularly to thank and commend the teamsters and other members of the wagon train of the 2nd Battalion for their skill and resourcefulness in making the passage from Harps Pond to the Cusseta Road.

Sincerely yours,
G. C. MARSHALL, Jr.,
Assistant Commandant.

In an official bulletin published to the regiment, Colonel Pendleton added his commendation of the work of the regiment to that of the assistant commandant's and stated that: "He also wishes to express his keen admiration of the manner in which the work was done by all concerned. A daylight examination of the route covered by the Harp's Pond column indicates that only by expert driving could the march have been made from Harp's Pond to the Cusseta Road."

STUDENT OFFICERS FIRE RIFLE COURSE

Ninety-six students of the National Guard and Reserve Company Officers Course have completed firing the record rifle course and have qualified as marksmen or better, according to a recent announcement of Headquarters, Infantry School. Nine of the officers qualified as expert riflemen, twenty-two as sharpshooters and sixty-five as marksmen. The highest score, 316, was made

29th Infantry Polo Teams Close Season

On September 1st, 1928, the polo squad of the 29th Infantry consisted of one player from the previous team, and seven horses suitable for playing. Four new players with previous experience, and two beginners joined the squad. Thirteen horses, of which ten were remounts with little or no training, were added to the string and segregated in the polo stables with suitable personnel for their care. A qualified officer was placed on special duty in charge of the polo stable, with the additional duties of being in charge of the entire stable area, and of training all remounts assigned to the regiment.

The regimental commander placed polo on a semi-military status and the squad was excused from all afternoon duties so far as possible. With this backing, each player considered polo practice as a military duty and worked horses two to four hours daily, including Sundays. Due to this intensive training, nine remounts and two other horses were trained and played throughout the season; and the playing of the previously trained horses was generally improved. Six remounts played throughout the tournaments, and were considered average, or better, playing horses.

The total handicap of the squad was two goals. In the senior tournament the first team played three teams with handicaps, respectively, of seven, six, and four goals, and won second place, playing on the "flat." The second team, with a handicap of zero, won second place in the Junior tournament.

The results of the season were very satisfactory, considering the disadvantages which had to be overcome. The main result is that the 29th Infantry team now occupies a commanding position for the next season. Only one player is leaving the squad; and nine remounts are being added to the string, of which seven are blooded, and four are partially trained. All of these remounts have been taking basic training since January 1, or earlier. An important result of the polo season from a military viewpoint is that the standard of training for horses in the mounted companies of the regiment has been definitely raised.

The polo season for Fort Benning begins in the fall and ends with an April tournament to decide the Senior and Junior championships.

The personnel of the two teams comprised:

1st Team—Lt. W. G. Skelton, Capt. M. E. Halloran, Lt. B. R. Jacobs, Lt. J. G. Van Houten.

2nd Team—Lt. D. G. Strickler, Capt. M. E. Halloran, Major T. F. Taylor, Lt. D. D. Hedekin.

RABIES AND YOUR DOG

By CAPT. DANIEL H. MALLAN, V. C., Assistant Veterinarian, Ft. Benning

Rabies is an acute, contagious and almost without exception, fatal infectious disease, the clinical picture of which is characterized by disturbed consciousness, increased nerve irritability and by subsequent symptoms of paralysis. The disease is usually transmitted by the bite of an affected animal to other animals as well as man. The infectuous virus is a filterable microorganism.

Rabies occur in all parts of the world among dogs, cats and carnivorous wild animals, especially wolves and foxes. Other animals and human beings are seldom affected, and then almost exclusively after having been bitten by the above named carnivorous animals. It has been stated that about 80 per cent of the observed cases have been found in dogs. In North America rabies is very common and has been increasing in prevalence during the last ten years. According to obtainable figures 9100 positive cases of rabies occurred in 34 states of the union from 1920 to 1923 and in the same period 21,000 persons were compelled to take the Pasteur treatment and 132 persons died from rabies.

The natural infection is brought about in the majority of cases by man or animal being bitten by a rabid animal, whereby the virulent saliva is innoculated through the wound into the underlying tissues, muscles or nerves; in rare cases the contagion has been introduced by licking of wounds and skin abrasions. In old veterinary records there is a report of an English dog fancier who had just finished shaving when his pet bull dog licked his face and twelve days later both developed rabies and died. The contagion, be it ever so virulent and concentrated cannot penetrate through the uninjured skin.

The breed or the sex of the animal as well as climatic factors are without influence on the susceptibility. The more frequent appearance of the disease during the summer time is quite sufficiently explained by the greater intercourse between the animals and the same fact explains the frequent appearance of the disease in densely populated districts.

At the initial stage of the disease, most dogs show a remarkable uneasiness, scratch with the forefeet, frequently change their place of rest, walking uneasily around in the yard or in the room, suddenly stopping, becoming attentive and without any cause barking and biting at the air, the so-called "fly-catching. If resting on the ground, they frequently become startled and attempt to catch imaginary flies, growling at the same time. The excitability is then decidedly increased. Animals when approached in a friendly way become excited and snap at the caressing hand and any other objects or their companions.

A peculiar change of appetite or taste is observed, as the animals scarcely touch their favorite food or let it drop again after having it in the mouth. Later they reject all food, although they chew all objects within their reach. It is noticed that the affected animals swallow with greater difficulty, stretching the neck forward in swallowing. At the same time, they repeatedly seek water, but in spite of all exertions they can swallow small amounts of it only with difficulty. At this time, salivation is present and continues to become a more prominent symptom.

At about this stage of the disease, the dogs want to get away from their usual quarters, when they will run aimlessly around and sometimes cover long distances without resting. If the rabid animals on their journey encounter other dogs, they will attack them without cause or noise and if possible bite them in the head. If the attacked dog runs away in fright, the diseased animal will continue its journey, but if it resists, the rabid dog will fight furiously and while the attacked dog howls, snarls and barks, the diseased animal will hardly make a sound. The desire to bite and the aggressive behavior are shown toward other animals. Human beings are less in danger, as rabid dogs mostly avoid them and generally only attack them when irritated or excited by threats. If approached with a stick or a bar and teased, the dog will make a mad attack and hold the stick or bar between its teeth and shake it. The nature of the object held out makes no difference, as the dog will bite red hot iron or burning coals without hesitation.

Such attacks of rage are followed by periods of depression. After an animal has been wandering aimlessly around, or, if shut up, has been raging, it finally falls down exhausted and remains unconscious on the ground, breathing with difficulty. Soon it will rise, remain standing at one place with staring eyes, dilated pupils and a changed expression of the face indicating fright, until, owing to some outside influence, such as sight of other animals or some object, but sometimes without any visible cause, the attack breaks out again.

The bark becomes hoarse and double and accompanied by loud, long-drawn howls. This hoarse barking is so characteristic that the trained ear may suspect a case of rabies from it alone. At this stage swallowing becomes very difficult and as a result the affected animals do not touch food or water at all.

As the disease continues, symptoms of an already existing paralysis become more conspicuous, such as total paralysis of the muscles of the lower jaw, tongue and eyes. The mouth is kept open most, if not all, of the time, the dry and discolored tongue hangs out of the mouth paralyzed and the saliva flows in long threads from the lips. Paralysis of the muscles of the hind limbs and the tail are now seen, which causes the animal to stagger and tumble. The paralysis continues until finally the animal is unable at rise. Exhaustion now increases rapidly and the animal dies within a short time, usually in convulsions.

In contrast to this typical form of violent rabies there is the form usually called "Dumb Rabies." In this form the animal is weak from the beginning and neither barks nor bites. This form is generally fatal in 3 to 4 days, whereas in the violent form the animal will live sometimes as long as 10 or 12 days.

FRIDAY, MAY 3.

"BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES," a U. F. A. production, made in Germany from many thousand feet of motion picture film taken under the direction of the German Imperial government during the world war. These films have been whipped into an absorbing narrative depictig the entire war from a German point of view. It begins with the assassination of the Austrian Crown Prince at Sarajevo, and leads successively up to the cessation of hostilities. Such colossal figures as the Kaiser, Hindenburg, Ludendorff, Von Tirpitz, Joffe, Lloyd George Wilson, Foch and Pershing, constitute but a few of those who play conspicuous roles. Among the great battles pictured are those of the Marne, Ypres, Verdun, the Somme, Masurian Lakes, the German-Austrian advance toward Russia in 1915, Osonzo, Salonika, and last, but not least, the American advance through the Argonne. Army personnel who have seen this picture consider it the best war picture ever shown.

EXCELLENT MOTION PICTURES COMING TO BENNING

While the pictures shown during the first four months of the year have been unusually good, the program arranged for the next two months is considered the strongest of the year.

Practically every good picture which had been requested by our movie fans has been secured. Outstanding among these is the picture entitled "Behind the German Lines," a photoplay of particular interest to people of the military service. It is a German film actually photographed during the World War by the U. F. A. Company under the direction of the imperial German Government. One of our officers describes it as "better than 'Wings'."

In addition to the usual arrangement of short subjects, such as News Reels, Comedies and Fables, most welcome is the News starting May 14th. On every Tuesday night, Grantland Rice Sportlight films, will be screened. These give, in a most interesting manner, detailed descriptions of various sports such as football, baseball, golf and other games.

Out of the sixty-one feature pictures booked, twenty-one of them are considered pictures which should be shown at a twenty-five cents admission charge, however, those displayed week day evenings will cost Benningites the usual fifteen cents.

Foremost among the pictures coming here during May and June are the following:

Lion and Mouse, Captain Lash, Behind the German Lines, Red Dance, Cohens and Kelleys in Atlantic City, Dream of Love, Glorious Betsy, Abie's Irish Rose, State Street Sadie, The Awakening, Submarine, Redskin, The Terror, The Flying Fleet, Girl on the Barge, Wild Orchids, Woman Disputed, Bellamy Trial, Godless Girl, Sun Rise, Blockade, Desert Nights, Chinatown Nights, Lady of the Pavements, The Letter.

IN MEMORIAM

Today is Southern Memorial Day. Flowers bedeck the graves of the South's dead and a small replica of the flag for which he fought adorns the grave of each Confederate soldier.

This memorial custom of decorating the graves of soldiers on a designated day was originated by a Columbus woman, Miss Lizzie Rutherford. It was first formally observed on April 26, 1866, and for more than half a century has been carried on by the women of the Confederacy.

Originally, the memorial day was dedicated to the memory of the soldier dead alone but it is now observed in memory of all, without distinction as to race or creed.

From this event of Southern origin has grown the national custom of decorating graves on a day dedicated to that purpose, although it is observed on different days in the North and the South. April 26 was chosen for the South's Memorial Day because its flowers are in full bloom at that time and also because that date marks the surrender of the last of the Confederate armies, under General Joseph E. Johnston, in 1865.

Today the South pauses again to render affectionate homage to the memory of those who wore its Gray and whose gallant deeds will survive longer in the memory of man than will the differences which led to the conflict in which they sacrificed their lives.

PROTECT YOUR PETS

Several weeks ago, the announcement was made that immunization treatments for the prevention of rabies were available at the post veterinary hospital for cats and dogs owned by members of the garrison. At the same time, instructions were issued which require that such immunization treatments be administered to all cats and dogs on the post before April 30.

It is safe to presume that many of the domestic pets of the garrison have not yet received this treatment, although the end of April is not far away.

Rabies is generally fatal to the animal which it attacks and, until death, an animal afflicted with this disease is a menace to other animals and to human beings as well. A fully developed case of rabies in man is almost certain to result fatally. Fortunately, the Pasteur treatment, if given in time, will prevent the disease from running its course in man.

The Infantry School News presents this week two articles, each written by an authority on the subject of rabies and its effects upon animals and human beings. These articles should be especially interesting and enlightening to fanciers of dogs and cats and to the parents of small children who have these domestic animals for playmates.

The immunization treatments are easy to obtain and will prevent all danger from this disease.

If you value your pets, protect them!

COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

HISTORY FROM HEADSTONES

A LITTLE beyond the north end of the business section of Columbus there is a cemetery. It is as old as the city itself and at one time probably was some little distance from town, as distances went in those bygone days. Now it is being crowded by the growth of the city; a street car line and a busy boulevard, passing by it, lead to a remote residential district. Its isolation is gone, yet it preserves a semblance of dignified aloofness by a low hedge and portions of a wall which partly surround it.

It was a quaint old cannon standing in the lower section of the cemetery that attracted my attention as I was passing by. As I strolled toward it, I saw rows of little white stones, which, by their uniformity in shape and size and their orderly arrangement in platoon-like rows, I recognized, even at a distance, as markers of soldiers' graves.

Soldiers, living or dead, have something in common, so I paused to read the inscriptions on the little headstones. Some were difficult to read because of the moss or mould which filled the sunken letters. None were indecipherable, however, and as I read the concise military epitaphs, each stone seemed to become a tablet on which was engraved a page of American history. Presently, their mute eloquence carried me in fancy back through the sixty-eight years which have passed since the beginning of the bloody conflict between Americans of the North and of the South.

It was May, 1861. Just a few weeks previously, within the past month, Fort Sumter had been bombarded; Virginia had followed the lead of Georgia and six other southern states in secession from the union; the Confederate congress had passed an act recognizing a state of war between the Confederacy and the United States, and had issued a call for 32,000 volunteers, in addition to the 21,000 who had already enlisted.

Excitement and anxiety reigned. But, said Howell Cobb, an eminent Georgian of his time, "The anxiety among our citizens is not who shall go to the war, but who shall stay at home."

The Columbus Guards were assembled and Paul J. Semmes was their captain. In the same month, May, he became a colonel and in December, 1861, he was commissioned a brigadier general. His gallant career ended at Gettysburg, in July, 1863. Richard Potter, a lieutenant of the Columbus Guards, served a little more than a year before he was killed at Malvern Hill, July 1, 1862.

In the next year, 1863, Colonel Augustus Gordon was killed while leading his regiment at Chancellorsville, Virginia, May 13.

The war comes nearer to Columbus as the stones give a brief account of the patriotic Banks family. Lieutenant Eugene Banks was killed at Resaca, Georgia, May 15, 1864. Captain Willis Dunstan Banks died of wounds at Atlanta, August 1, 1864; Private Watkins Banks was killed at Atlanta, ten days later.

Of the four soldiers in this family, Private Elbert Augustus Banks, who fought with Nelson's Rangers, alone survived the war and died in later years.

Nearing the close of the war, another stone tells briefly of the defense of Richmond, where Major M. G. Bass, 59th Georgia Infantry, died of wounds, October 16, 1864.

With a little imagination, one can read a chronological summary of the war between the states from a few headstones on soldiers' graves.

Other names of Georgia patriots of this period include Colonel J. N. Ramsay and Colonel Charles J. Williams, both of the 1st Georgia Infantry, and Colonel Mark A. Blanford, of the 12th Georgia Infantry.

Then there is Brigadier General Henry Lewis Benning, after whom our own Fort Benning is named. "Old Rock," he was affectionately called by his soldiers. "This was a man," reads his epitaph, a fitting one, indeed, for a gallant soldier and gentleman.

Beside him is his son, Captain Seaborn Jones Benning, who recovered from his battle wounds and died after the war.

Lieutenant Colonel W. S. Shepherd served in the City Light Guards 2d Georgia Battalion, the 7th and the 12th Confederate Cavalry, and the 35th Georgia Infantry, the latter in Benning's 20th Georgia Brigade.

One can only surmise the service of General Daniel McDougald and that of George A. Hays, Southern Cross of Honor, for with more than military brevity, the inscriptions have been curtailed to record only their names.

The Confederate Navy is represented here by Major James H. Warner, probably a marine, and by John Dunlop, an Englishman who distinguished himself in the memorable actions of the Virginia, formerly the U. S. S. Merrimac, March 8 and 9, 1862, and who died in the Soldiers' Home, a few months later.

There are many others, and in the short time I spent there, I saw the graves of two brigadier generals, three colonels, one lieutenant-colonel, two majors, four captains, four lieutenants, and a great many soldiers. Twenty-nine of the latter are marked "unknown." An imposing honor roll for Columbus, indeed.

Eighty-three regiments and one separate battalion of infantry, two regiments of cavalry, one regiment and one separate battery of artillery and one regiment of engineers, are represented by the little white stones which mark the last camp ground of their dead. Of these organizations, which were raised by eleven southern states, twenty-three regiments and one separate battalion of infantry, two regiments of cavalry, one regiment and one separate battery of artillery and one engineer regiment, belonged to Georgia.

In addition to this formidable list, there are the 7th and 12th Confederate Cavalry, Columbus Guards, City Light Guards, Nelson's Rangers, S. D. Lee's Corps, Waddell's Artillery, Thompson's Cavalry, Jackson's Escort, Rowan's Battery, Jefferey's Battery, Howard's Battery and Benning's Brigade.

In fancy, I see this array of southern soldiers responding to the call of their states, some resplendent in elaborate uniforms of old militia regiments, but most of them in somber, but trim, gray, as they marched gaily away to the defense of their Cause; I see them on long marches over hot, dusty roads, or plodding wearily in drenching rain and knee-deep mud; I see them on the battlefield, lines of gray blending with the pall of smoke which grows thicker with every volley. After a while, the noise of battle is stilled and the smoke clears. A line of gray still holds its ground. The figures in the line are very still, as they lie there in their once-trim uniforms which now are tattered and soiled and moist with the blood of the brave American soldiers who have died in defense of their Cause.

My reverie is interrupted by a little negro boy, carrying a brush and a pail of slaked lime, who inquires, "Does you want yo' grave whitewashed, mistuh?"

"Not today, thank you," I reply. And then I discover that I have spent two hours reading Civil War history from the headstones in Linwood Cemetery.

THE DRAMATIC CLUB

The Play The Dramatic Club will close a brilliant and successful season with the presentation of a delightful comedy, in three acts, "Pigs," by Anne Morrisson and Patterson McNutt.

This clever and amusing play was first shown on Monday, Sept. 1, 1924, at the Little Theater, New York City, under the management of John Golden—that veteran impresario. It promptly became a favorite with theater-goers, that year.

Mme. R. H. Chance—whose remarkable performance in "Ile" is still remembered—has lent her talent and experience in directing a carefully selected cast in what will become the piece-de-resistance of the dramatic season.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By CAPTAIN M. P. RUDOLPH, M. C., Medical Inspector

RABIES

Rabies, which is often spoken of as hydrophobia, and as "Mad Dog," is primarily a disease of carnivorous animals, but every mammalian animal is susceptible. Of the domestic animals it is most common in dogs. It also occurs in man who always contracts it from some lower animal, usually the dog.

It is an acute disease caused by a specific micro-organism, which gains entrance to the body through an open wound or a break in the skin. In other words it is a wound infection. The fully developed disease in man is practically always fatal.

The disease exists practically all over the world. It is commonly supposed to prevail only during the hot months—during "dog days", but it is, in fact, found the year round, and is actually more prevalent in cold weather, due, no doubt, to the fact that people tend to consider dog or other animal bites as less dangerous during the "dog days."

The active principle of rabies occurs principally in the saliva and in the central nervous system. It may be in the saliva from three to seven days before the animal shows symptoms of rabies. This is an important fact to remember, as it is, therefore, sufficient to watch a dog for ten days that has bitten a person or other animal. If no symptoms of rabies appear in the animal in this length of time there is no danger to the bitten person of developing rabies, and the Pasteur prophylactic treatment is unnecessary.

When a member of a family has been bitten by a dog the first impulse of the householder is to kill the dog or demand that the dog be killed at once. As a general rule a diagnosis of rabid animal cannot be made at that time, and it can never be known whether or not the animal was rabid.

Fortunately for man the disease has a rather long period of incubation, although this period varies somewhat according to the virulence of the particular infection, the site of the wound, and the distance of the wound from important nerve trunks.

In the detection of rabies it is very important that the biting animal be apprehended and observed carefully for a period of ten days. By that time a definite diagnosis can be made, and there is plenty of time left in which to protect the individual by the Pasteur prophylactic treatment.

In the prevention of rabies in man it is important; (1) that all wounds from dog bite be presented to a physician for the proper treatment; (2) that all dogs be immunized against rabies by the proper vaccine treatment at least once each year, and that all dogs not so treated be disposed of for the good of the community.

The Pasteur prophylactic treatment should be given to all persons who have been bitten by dogs that are rabid or that become rabid; and in all doubtful cases, such as exposure to the saliva of a dog that subsequently becomes rabid, and where the dog has not been identified or apprehended.

The greatest peace of mind comes from the definite knowledge as to whether or not the animal is rabid, and this can only be established by the apprehension, quarantine and careful observance of the suspected animal.

JUNIOR OFFICERS' LYCEUM TWENTY-NINTH INFANTRY

Under the personal tutelage of Colonel Harris Pendleton, the regimental commander, the junior officers of the 29th Infantry have just completed their first year's course in the Junior Officers' Lyceum.

This course was inaugurated by Col. Pendleton as a part of the work to be completed during the second training period of the regiment. The purpose of the course was to afford the junior officers a basic knowledge of the military establishment of the nation, and of the subject of national defense.

The scope of the course was such as to cover all those matters which are necessary for a young officer to understand, in order that he may visualize his position and responsibilities, and plan his future course with a view to progressive development.

In general the subject scovered were as follows:

a. Organization of the War Department.
b. Organization and functioning of the War Department, General Staff.
c. Financial system of the War Department.
d. Tactical training.
e. Administrative training.
f. Our military school system.
g. Leadership.
h. Professional reading.
i. Command and Staff functions.
j. Infantry combat.

While the course was somewhat in the nature of an experiment on the part of the regimental commander, it has been of so much value to the younger officers that it is hoped that the course will be continued next year along the same lines.

EIGHTY-THIRD FIELD ARTILLERY

THE MIDNIGHT RIDE OF THE EIGHTY-THIRD

By Private Edward B. Mills, Battery "A"

With apologies to Henry W. Longfellow's "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere."

Listen, folks, lest you have heard
Of the midnight ride of the Eighty-Third.
On the twelfth of April in 'twenty-nine,
'Twas just that night we fell in line;
Every soldier transformed into a gay war-bird.

Our Battery pulled out for a night's road march
From the camping grounds at Harp's Pond—
And since the night was dark, we lit a torch,
Because of blackness we're not very fond.
We fell into column, as we rolled along—
Happy as children singing a song.
Rolling and bumping, oh my, oh me!
Traveling along on a sham-battle spree
Is much more fun than you'd think 'twould be!

So the Battery was off on a march through the wood
On a very dim road that was not very good,
'Twas so awfully bad that we had carriages "canned",
For caissons and horses mired down in the sand.
And all of the time, 'twas as dark as could be
Only the lights that we had aided us to see
How to untangle the horses and set them free.
'Twas here that we lost a lot of our time
Altho I have utilized it in making this rhyme!

After getting the horses clear, we continued our way
Over the rough, bumpy road that was bad.
As the carriages rolled on, you could hear the guys say
In a voice that was certainly not sad:
"Watch out for that tree; don't run in that hole—
We don't want to be spilled out here!
Pull to the right; let the wheels roll
In the ruts—Hey, watch out in the rear!"

So the column moved on, very slow in the dark,
Advancing towards the enemy's stand.
You may take it from me, 'twas quite a lark
Excepting of course, that quick-sand!
And then, as we rolled, everything was all right
Until the C. O. sent back this command:
"No smoking, no talking; we're nearing the fight."
'Twas then we struck no man's land.

It was twelve by the old wrist clock
When we crossed the last of the road;
We heard the crowing of a farmhouse cock,
And alas! the loud croaking of a toad!
So we knew we were near a house
And the swamp was just behind.
Ahead? We had no idea what—
But wished that a camp they would find!

'Twas one by the same wrist clock
When the Battery struck old Cusseta Road,
And as we pulled upon the road, the caissons did rock
With such a wigglesome bunch for a load!
So along the surface of the old macadam
The horses feet beat a tattoo—
Holding their distance with never a jam
Until the old halt whistle blew.

Many good drivers pulled in their steeds
And parked them on the road on the right,
For then we were where all of our deeds
Would be determined by brawn and might.

We waited in readiness for the signal to come
That would usher us on in the night.
But we never did get it, for the war was done;
We were beaten out of that fight!
So it was two by the old wrist-clock
When we went into camp for the night,
Nor did anyone wake when the crow of a cock
Made the gallant steeds prance in fright!

And now, that my tale is done,
I'm hoping that you're glad you've heard
All that transpired in this march of fun—
This midnight ride of the Eighty-Third!

29TH INF.

Headquarters Company

Pfc. Brannon has gone into intensive training for the beauty championship of the 29th. He made a trip to the hospital t'other day, and came back with his face covered with bandages. Some say that he has had his face lifted, and the entire company is waiting breathlessly for that day when he again exposes his countenance to the eyes of his public.

Pvts. Madere and Seely were squeezing lemons Sunday, and Medere made a mistake and tried to extract juice from Seely's finger. After Seely had left for the hospital, Pvt. Robinson, not to be outdone, gayly retaliated with a mash of the finger for Madere, blood spurted freely, and needless to say the lemonade that day was quaffed with some slight misgivings.

Pvts. Carter and San Miguel met in a one round, no decision eating contest last week. Both contestants weighed in underweight, and Carver won due to the fact that his arms are longer, and he could reach further. A return match is being considered, but it is doubtful, for Sgt. Langston, is afraid that such contests would run the mess account over into next year. —Joe Gauze.

Howitzer Company

We can now produce conclusive evidence that we are improving day by day in at least one way. Last year a representative of this organization won fifth place in the Marathon road race, this year Pvt. Jackson won fourth place. If this rate of improvement continues we should win first place in 1932.

Sgt. Morrow, who was a casualty in one of our soccer games this season, and who has been convalescing since, was a visitor Sunday and says he will soon be with us again.

This communication school isn't so bad, but we predict that the hospital will have some new occupants as soon as it is over.

We had quite a time last week deciding who could take equitation. It seems as if Sgt. Cummings must have won first place as his name heads the list. Sgt. Cummings says it was allright about equitation but he already had a diploma for "care and cleaning of equipment."

—J. N. C.

First Battalion Hdqrs. Company

Pvt. Nathan (Pop) Lemay has been confined to the hospital since Friday night with what is diagnosed as appendicitis. This is hard on Pop as he will more than likely be in the hospital after his term of service has expired. He will be discharged the 28th of this month; it is our opinion that no one would relish the thought of being in the hospital at any time, much less after they have earned a discharge.

Company "B"

Our baseball team has participated in several practice games with the "Pill Rollers," and has shown good form. We have wonderful faith in their ability, and are certain of a glorious season. The team suffered the loss of one of their best, in Private Dixon, who was injured above the eye by a pitched ball last Saturday. May a speedy recovery be yours, Pvt. Dixon.

We believe our Company has contributed more than its share to the Battalion track team in the following men:

Private Bobo—High jump.

Pfc. White—Broad jump and 220 yd. dash.

Private Ramey—220 yard dash.

Private Blackstone—Shot put.

Private Brymer—One-half mile.

All of these men are expected to place in the Post Field and Track Meet to be held April 27, 1929. The entire First Battalion is showing wonderful form in track this year. Do your best men, we are all behind you, and are certain of results.

Company "C"

It is believed by the writer that our First Sergeant deserves a little notice this week as his name has never appeared in this column. About the only thing that we can say is that he and his dog are having some time since the family has been staying in town; they are the best of friends and cannot be separated for long or a yell goes up.

Corporal Ketterer, our Company Clerk, is getting to be a real short-timer and we are wondering if what he said is true. He says that he is quitting but we believe that he will be with us for some time yet.

Corporal Manhart, our assistant supply sergeant, is among the short-timers also, and we believe that he is going back to Indiana to make his future home with some fair maiden on the banks of the Wabash.

Private 1cl Howard Upton, was appointed corporal last week. We are all glad to see him get it, as he is an excellent soldier.

Sergeant d'Entremont is getting to be a short timer. He has been in the company for six years. We believe he will have to visit Boston, Mass., before he can put up three more years with us.

Second Battalion Hdqrs. Company

What's the matter with Sgt. Terry lately? He's been sticking around the company pretty close the past few days as though he were afraid of its running away and leaving him to starve. What's the trouble Newt?

Our sheik Bennett hasn't answered the phone for so long that he has forgotten how. A few weeks ago he was constantly at the phone and now he runs and hides when he hears it ring. What causes that, I wonder?

"Slim" Wynn, the running drink of water, participated in the battalion track meet Saturday. Although he didn't make first, his points counted. Good work, Wynn, the company is proud of you. Miller, a newly made soldier, was entered in the meet. Says he will show them when he gets off recruit drill.

Something rotten going on in the company. "Stump," one of "The Three Musketeers," went to Columbus without the other two. Wonder what broke up the trio. Some sweet little Sheba I suppose.

Our first sergeant has been walking on air the last day or so. Has everybody noticed the brand new Plymouth coupe that is parked out in front of the barracks. If you want the first sergeant just look out the front door and you will see him. —A. C. E.

Company "E"

Sgt. Franz was discharged on the 17th to accept a position with the Meritas Mill base ball club in Columbus, Ga "Fat" was offered a try out with the Columbus Foxes but turned it down for the offer from the Meritas Millers. Franz is one of the greatest all round athletes that has ever been in Fort Benning and we sure hated to see him leave

"Spud" McCoy, the notorious sheik of Company "E," is desperately in love at the present time and he says he don't know what to do with himself. He says the only thing that keeps him from eloping with his girl is he could not get a mule to ride.

Sgt. Melandro Arevalo, seems to be grieving something awful since he was relieved from the Infantry Rifle Team last week. He says "every dog has his day and every pup has his day, and I am going to have mine when I take my furlough home in the Philippine Islands." Melandro is either seeing things at night or some one is certainly playing dirty tricks on him. He complains of finding all kinds of junk in his bed every time he leaves his room and returns, from cut up shoes, shoe brushes, broken glass, broom sticks, G. I. cans, mustard, molasses, frogs, dead snakes, turtles and what not. Safety first: He is trying to get a lock put on his room door now.

Lee Lambert, the Louisiana sheik, who was discharged by purchase the 20th says he is going back to his home in La., and play with the owls and crocodiles; he says the exciting life around Fort Benning, is too much for him. —I. M. Y.

Company "G"

Private Weber was sent out by his platoon leader with a patrol. The lieutenant told Weber to take the two buglers with him so Pvt. Weber saw someone coming through the woods and he gave the buglers orders to load and Bugler Baker said, "Corporal, what do you want me to do, load or blow taps?" Pvt. Weber said: "Oh, h—; I forgot you men were buglers."

Pvt. Jones, W. M., is from hospital to SERVICE CLUB DANCES

The Service Club last Monday night was the scene of a very interesting gathering of the younger set of the Post and Columbus. Mrs. Inez Brittain, the hostess, entertained with an old-fashioned "Square Dance," with music furnished by a string band.

The band played such old familiar melodies as "Old Dan Tucker," "Billy in the Lowground," and others. A good time was had by all, and the young people were unanimous in their praise for the success of the dance. Sergeant Wade of the 15th Tank Battalion kept the dance going with his fight-promoter's voice, while the sixteen young couples swung into the figures he announced to the rhythm of the music.

Mrs. Brittian announced that there would be another square dance next Monday night at the Service Club, and that it promised to be even more of a success than that of last Monday night.

duty. Glad to see you back, Jones.

Pvt. Derouselle came in second in the five mile run. Fine work, Frenchy, old boy. Pvt. Higgins was No. 12 and Pvt. Blackwood came out No. 15. Fine work men.

Old Soldier Brunsell just joined the company five weeks ago and has been promoted to Corporal already. Fine work, we are glad to see you get it, Corporal. He is also a member of the rifle team.

Two of the men of the company have been promoted to the grade of sergeants. Cook Davis, the man that knows his stuff in the kitchen and dining room, and Cpl. Blankenship of the 2nd platoon. Glad to see you men get it. Both men reenlisted and they had it coming.

Corp. Coates and Corp. Minor recently returned from furloughs with a knowing grin on their faces and a tell-tale manner about 'em that says they had one riotous time while on furlough.

The friends of Pfc. Clifford Singleton will be pleased to know that he has taken on his third stack and for Fort Benjamin Harrison this time. Another efficient soldier that will be missed by the company.

Sgt. McCauley is back from the hospital for duty. I wonder how long for this time? Corp. Brunner has returned from furlough along with Pvt. James "Dopey" Stewart. Nix! Men. We can't be expected to believe the stories you tell. Can't fool us old soldiers.

Range season being very near, the wild, wild animals hereabouts are looking for holes to escape the scattering of machine gun bullets, the death dealing terror of everything in sight. We will have around 100 novices this year to be introduced to the tripod and gun. Best of luck; we've had ours.

I. S. D. NOTES

At the monthly meeting of the Noncommissioned Officers Club, of the Infantry School Detachment, Friday night, Major Louis A. Falligant, Detachment Commander, was elected a life member and Honorary President of the Club. The vote was unanimous.

The members proposing this action stated that it was in recognition of the conscientious work of Major Falligant in maintaining the high state of morale and efficiency of the Detachment, as well as his sense of fairness in his dealings with the members.

An interesting address by Captain Henry Fay of the Infantry School Detachment, followed by a real "Dutch lunch," with all of the necessary trimmings, including a barrel of ice cold punch, completed the evening's highly enjoyable program.

Spud Murphy left his cob pipe in the bath house a few evenings ago, when he went back for it the pipe was gone. Spud returned to his tent grieving over the loss of his pipe; his grief turned to joy when he found the pipe sitting on his pillow, puffing after its walk from the bath house. Spud now claims the distinction of having the strongest pipe in Fort Benning.

Carl Mays, who made history for the I. S. D. with his famous submarine biscuit, was discharged last week. The Detachment food-inhalers breathed a sigh of relief when Mays held up his good right hand for another stack with the Greencords. Mays is chief Baker for the Detachment and the reason his biscuits are called submarine biscuits is caused from the way the Detachmenteers sink them.

It would not be a bad idea to build the Special Units new brick barracks on the site where the Detachment is quartered. Have you noticed the beautiful shrubbery and flowers that have sprung up overnight in the area?

After trying two Fords, an Auburn and a bicycle, Pfc. Knox has purchased a motorcycle. He now sings "That's My Weakness Now."

N. C. O. CLUB IS THANKED BY MAJOR

The President,
N. C. O. Club, I. S. D.
Fort Benning, Georgia.
Dear Sir:

Please convey to the members of the N. C. O. Club, I. S. D., my sincere appreciation of the honor bestowed upon me at your last meeting, at which time I was elected a life member and Honorary President of the Club.

I place the compliment you have tendered me above any decoration or honor that may ever be offered me, because it is a vote of confidence and unswerving loyalty—the two elements essential to successful leadership.

The personnel of the N. C. O. Club, I. S. D., exemplifies the finest type of American soldier. To have the confidence, loyalty and support of such an organization is an honor that all officers desire; to be a life member and Honorary President is the happiest attainment of my professional career.

There are a few things in this world that are above the purchasing power of the dollar. This is one of them.

Cordially yours,
LOUIS A. FALLIGANT,
Major, Infantry.

This is an honor which was never before extended a Detachment Commander while he was actually in command of the Detachment, and this, considered in connection with the fact that the Infantry School Detachment, with a strength exceeding 400, is the only organization in the Army whose membership is composed mostly of non-commissioned officers, speaks well of the harmonious relationship existing between the members of the detachment and their commanding officer, which is always the best criterion upon which to base an estimate of the morale, discipline, and efficiency of an organization.

PARKER WINS BY LARGE MARGIN

Blondy Parker proved his ability to go the limit of a ten round schedule last Tuesday night, and fight the whole way through, by the decided drubbing that he gave Ginger Jernigan. Parker had the fight in his own cellar throughout the contest, shooting lefts and rights with such regularity that Jernigan must have thought it was raining gloves. Twice Parker knocked him through the ropes, but twice the Ginger lad was back, weakly trying to defend himself from the ever-present right of Parker's.

Parker carried the fight to Jernigan throughout the bout, and on several occasions threw caution to the winds, trying for a knockout. The fans though, were not to be presented with such a treat. Jernigan can take more than he can give, and this fact alone enabled him to stay until the final curtain.

Pinky Phillips surprised the local fans very much when he stayed the whole eight rounds with Doubtin' Thomas in the semi-final go. All the dopesters had it doped out for Thomas to win before the fourth gong. Phillips had to put on three extra pounds, while Thomas took off the same amount, but still there existed a difference of three and one-half pounds between the two.

Thomas took the fight all the way, but at times was greatly puzzled by the battling green cord. On three different occasions, Thomas caused Phillips to sag in the knees, but the game youngster came back erect, without touching the canvas a single time, and managed to make the fight more or less interesting, even though the contest was one-sided. The fight was Thomas' by a large margin.

Billy Shell, on a moment's notice, substituted for Ralph Taylor, who it seems, must have met with some kind of accident on his way from his home. Saginaw Seeley, his opponent, gave a good account of himself, while Shell showed that he was not in the best of condition, which made the fight about even. This boy Seeley will undoubtedly rise to the top-notchers if he keeps fighting like he has for the past. Per an agreement previously made by Captain Wilson with Shell, no decision was awarded.

Raven Poe passed another milestone when he defeated Fuzzy Douglas in a three round prelim. Douglas was unable to do anything with his left, and naturally the Raven stepped in and let him have it on the button, and down went Fuzzy for the count of seven. He was up and vainly trying to jab the moustache man with his left, but Poe had seen his opportunity, and kept on the lookout for an opening. When said opening appeared, he immediately took advantage of it, and for the remainder of the fight was on the aggressive side. Naturally he was awarded the decision.

Plaster Pecot plastered Tut Tut Taylor from pillar to post during the second bout of the night. His long reach and legs saved him from many a threatening blow offered by Tut Tut. The bout, however, was very tame, and little action worthy of mention was staged. There were no heart aches when the referee held up the hand of the Plaster King as the winner over King Tut.

LACROSSE

Lieutenant L. H. Evans has had the Infantry LaCrosse team at practice for the past two weeks, and promises to put a good team on the field of play. Several of the members of last year's team are out in addition to the many other good players who have recently come to the post. Every afternoon except Wednesdays and Saturdays, a hard practice is held in Doughboy Stadium at 4:15 o'clock. On Wednesdays and Saturdays, the practice begins at 1:15 P. M.

The first game of the season will be held at the post on April 26th and 27th with the Georgia LaCrosse team. The place and time of the game has not yet been announced, but will be announced later in the bulletins.

Lt. Evans has scheduled games with Georgia Tech for the 3rd and 4th of May, at Atlanta, and for the 10th and 11th at Fort Benning.

The game is gradually but surely gaining a foothold at the Fort, and it is expected that the fans will take more interest than last year.

ENGINEERS TRIM GINNERS

The Engineers defeated the fast Lummus "Ginners" on Swift Field Saturday by the close score of 4 to 3. Jones, recruit hurler of the Engineers allowed 1 hit and 2 runs in 2 innings and was relieved in the third by Perkins, the hurling ace of the bridgebuilders. Perkins who is just out of the hospital, allowed 3 hits and 1 run in 7 innings, the run being Johnson's circuit clout in the ninth with two out and no one on.

Giglio and Perkins shared pitching honors with 13 strikeouts each. McCarty led the assault on the "Ginners" by connecting safely three times in four trips to the plate.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
Engineers	110 000 110	4	7	1
Lummus	020 000 001	3	4	4

Batteries: Jones, Perkins and Rowe; Giglio, Stratford, and Burke and Smith.

Maitland, Co. "F", cut fifty four and one-fifth seconds off his own record for the Post road race.

Of the trophies awarded, four individual medals, one individual cup and the team trophy, found a home in the Second Battalion.

Out of twenty men entered in the Post Race nineteen finished. We wonder if our second team, to the finish mark, did not rob some other team out of a second or third place with a total of fifty-three points.

LADIES' GOLF CHAMPION-SHIP TOURNAMENT IN MAY

The Infantry School ladies' post championship golf tournament for 1929 will be played on the Fort Benning golf course during the week of May 6-10, according to an announcement made by the officers' club this week.

Eighteen holes of qualifying rounds will be played on the opening day. Pairings will be made immediately after the qualifying play and match play eliminations will begin Tuesday, May 7. Flights will consist of eight players and a sufficient number will be organized to care for all entries. Registrations will begin Monday, April 29, at the golf shop.

Awards of prizes will be made to the medalist of the qualifying rounds, the winners of each flight, the runner-up of each flight and the winners of each consolation flight.

"GOLF GOSSIP"

The difference between "bunk" and "bunker"—on a golf course—is a matter of preference, but it is believed that a lot of the golf-gossip of this garrison may be of more than passing interest.

* * *

The ladies of the garrison are about to have their annual "airing"; their Post championship is to be held during the week of May 6 to 10.

* * *

Ham: (in the newly reorganized traps on No. 5, after his fifth attempt to reach terra firma)

"Some people certainly have a funny way of providing 'recreation'."

* * *

Friends, the mystery is solved. We just found out that:

(a) the sand traps are intended as "hazards"—not as alibis;

(b) one's foot prints, and all other attempts at "snake killing" in traps and bunkers should be concealed (smoothed—leveled) so that our sins shall not be discovered (by the Air Corps) and by the other victim's ball; they even say "the other victim" may appreciate such noble effort on our part;

(c) single players have no voting rights, and five or more in one skirmish line are absolutely "de classe," those of the legal number—twosomes and foursomes—having full power to veto their existence then and there.

Henceforth, our motto shall be "Crescit Sub Pondre Virtus."

The weekly tournaments seem rather popular, and will be held—without further announcements—so long as this interest is shown by members.

* * *

The tournament for this week-end will be a handicap sweepstake, and will be open throughout Saturday afternoon and all day Sunday, affording eligible members an opportunity to "try their luck" more than once in the same tournament, by signing up for each 18 holes.

The entrance fee will be 25c for each round, and winners will be declared on the following Monday.

Play may begin on either No. 1 or 10; members are urged to organize "foursomes", and to post their scores on the Club score card each time, in full.

HAPPY HEARTS WIN 2—LOSE 2

The Black Barons, of Birmingham, journeyed forth to Fort Benning last Saturday to play a four game series with the 24th Infantry base ball team. In the opener of the series, the 24th Infantry incorrigibles took the game by a 1 to 0 score, in one of the tightest fought games ever witnessed on the reservation. Sachet, long lanky pitcher for the Barons, held the 24th batters hitless throughout the game, the lone run being allowed by a walk and followed by a wild throw to first by the catcher, who after retrieving a slow roller down the first base line, was unable to throw true to the bag.

TANKERS AHEAD ON TRACK

The Fifteenth Tank Bn. placed thirty-three men for the semi-finals and finals in the track meet to be held Saturday afternoon from 1:30 until completion. The Second Bn., 29th Infantry, placed fifteen, the First Bn., 18, 83rd Field Artillery Bn., 6 and the Special Units, the Infantry School, 1.

It looks as though the Tankers have the meet under their wing at the present writing, yet the First Battalion, 29th Infantry, have a good chance to win the meet by taking at least six first places and a number of seconds. It may be that the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry will take first places in the right events to pave the way for the First Battalion to take the day. Where there is hope, there's a chance, but a very slim chance.

The most interesting of the field events will be the tug-o-war between the First aand Second Battalions of the 29th Infantry, they having taken first place in the field trials Wednesday. The First Battalion under the coaching of Lt. Adams, have a perfectly co-ordinated team, while the avidorpuois is with the Second Battalion. Lt. Adams deserves a lot of credit for the manner in which he has coached his team to work. There is little if no shouting of "heave" on his part. He merely talks to them, but when he speaks, they move.

If fair weather prevails, there promises to be an interesting field and track meet Saturday afternoon. Let us all be there and enjoy it.

Vance, pitching for the Happy Hearts, allowed four hits and struck out six men during the nine inning melee, with his team mates allowing no runs. Vance pitched the best game that he has ever started, and much for the best of his teammates, who were threatened from time to time by the Black Baron batters with possible hits, though by the splendid fielding of the 24th Infantry, were turned to put-outs.

The second game was no less interesting than the first. Both teams were held scoreless until the fifth inning, when the Barons squeezed one run across. They repeated this action in the eighth stanza for their total of two runs. However, Stokes, pitching for the 24th Infantry, allowed only four hits, and struck out six Barons, while his opponent of the mound, Salmon, allowed nine hits, and struck out five Infantrymen.

The Twenty-fourth got their lucky break in the ninth spasm when a hit or two and an error allowed them to score two runs, making the score stand two all, and in the ninth inning, gleaned a hit to right field, followed by Trammel's long curving drive to left, scoring the winning run.

The Black Barons, however, came back undaunted Monday afternoon, and gleaned several hits off several pitchers, and with the aid of several errors by the 24th Infantry, won the third game by a five-four count. Trammel, on the mound for the locals, was unable to find the plate, giving up four bases on balls, and the while keeping himself in the hole with the batters, making it easy for them to pick the one that would mean a hit on anybody's field. He was relieved by Hodges, who was in turn relieved by Lee.

The Infantrymen from the West End rallied in the latter part of the game to score two runs in the seventh and one in the ninth, by running in pinch hitters. It looked like the Happy Hearts would come through with a long lucky streak in the ninth scene, but were repelled by fast fielding and good pitching. All in all, this series of games was the most interesting series of those that have been played at Gowdy Field this season.

The Black Barons evened the count in games won in the four game series Wednesday afternoon, by a ninth inning rally. The 24th Infantry gained the lead on two different occasions by untimely errors of the Barons, and by poling out a few that were too hot to handle. Satchel, who pitched a hitless game in the opening bout of the series, was unable to do anything with the Happy Hearts, and was relieved in the sixth frame when his team failed to support him. The "Black" Diamond came to his rescue and held the West Enders scoreless for the remainder of the game.

Vance, twirling for the 24th pitched good baseball, allowing only seven bingles, while his team mates gleaned six from Satchel and Diamond.

SPORTOPICS

By Al

During the past year, several soldier athletes of the Infantry School of Fort Benning, have broken into the limelight of Sportdom.

Gunner DePratt, Walker Smith and Weary Willie Ptomey have swept through the ranks of the South's leading professional prize fighters, leaving a jumble of sore jaws and black eyes. Weary Willie Ptomey has been appointed boxing instructor at the University of Georgia.

Gunner DePratt has attracted the attention of scribes and promoters with his death-dealing smashes in either mitt. With a string of knockouts as long as he is tall, which includes the best middleweights in Dixie, it is little wonder that the Gunner is being sought by four of the country's leading fight promoters. We are sorry to lose him but still it won't be long now.

Walker Smith, light-heavy, is the youngest of the trio. Twenty-two years of age and with only two years' experience in the fight game the Louisiana Cyclone has broken into the headlines with a string of victories over some of the best boys in his class. He first attracted the attention of fightdom with a one-round knockout over Al Fortenberry of New Orleans; a few weeks later he battered Terry Roberts of Charlotte, N. C., to a pulp in ten rounds; in his last battle he stopped Billy Britton, of Memphis, in the third round.

Lefty Newman, star army twirler of last season, has been plucked by the Louisville baseball club of the American Association. Newman was farmed out to Dayton, Ohio, but with Louisville in a slump and Newt going like a house afire, he has been recalled to Louisville.

THE TENTS OF KEDAR

At the time of going to press, Lieutenants Bob Hamlett and "Escobar" Evans, night riders, still were lost in an impenetrable forest and fears were entertained that Capt. Charles L. Hughes of Utah would organize a rescue party. Hughes' specialty is saving others against their will and without their knowledge or consent. At a certain stage in the evening Hughes usually succumbs to a rescue complex and spends the rest of the night trying to put his comrades to bed. This fatherly instinct is said to be the result of years of sheep-herding in the Mormon desert.

Class dance was generally hailed as a big success, to the great relief of the committe in charge, Captains Hopkins and Schauffler and Lieutenant Wardinsky, who had feared lynching at the hands of an infuriated populace. The committee explicitly denies any knowledge of who the light-fingered gentry in the ladies dressing room were, and is prepared to boil them in oil if caught.

This class is rapidly approaching its swan song. Too soon we will be mere civilians again, but not without considerably more knowledge of the great old game of soldiering.

Some of us, of course, will have swell rings to remind us of this three months of war. Almost all will have dandy big bales of chits as souvenirs.

A couple of jugheaded riflemen were butting their heads together one day last week while holding TNT bombs in their hands. Good Captain Maddox expressed the feeling of the class when he said he wouldn't care if they were blown up but it seemed a shame to take a chance on killing innocent bystanders.

Captain Morang, the Bulle of the Woods, missing Midget Mee of his squad, instituted a search and found the little scoundrel hiding in the bore of a 37 mill meter gun.

THE STUDENT—(By H. M. G.)

I haven't the remotest idea what to write about. The company officer's class is no help, being in a slough of despondency (whatever that is) over no orders. I do know a "Columbus Close Up." Next week is to be Columbus' forget-me-not week. Any week I think would have done. However, it's a pretty custom.

Speaking of customs—and customers, Capt. Venable says that in golf you meet the very best people.

In the society column I have the name of Capt. Whaley. It seems that our popular Marine has been moving in the best circles. He will be very glad to give you all the details if you ask him.

Speaking at large. We note the following entries in the unit journal for the indoor sport week April 22 to 27:

Barrett—Has quit eating ham.

Conny—Like the Reds, his questions seem to be on an aggressive mission.

Crowell—See critique of Major Ryder's problem.

Hackney—Tonsilitis.

Rarey—Author of that famous book "100 Questions and Never Mind the Answer."

Collette—Has affairs of state in the mornings.

Grimes—Symphony of motion.

I am about to burst into a platitude, or something equally robust. "It is not the brightest scholar, or the most model that makes the best leader." That's a hot lot of news. However, what I am debouching on to is, Pat Crowell. You see our Pat knows all the F's. Not only the F of frolic but the F's of that master tactical mind, find'em, fix'em, fool'em, etc. But when a lad is suddenly thrown in at the last minute in a field exercise, made battalion commander, given an involved situation to solve, takes positive action and max's the problem, why the least you can do is to give the lad a hand. The moral is, bigger and better frolics. However, bear in mind the story of little Hiawatha, the Indian maid. She didn't get much kick out of playing around with the boys after she was hugged by a bear.

During the problem, Major Cook, who was acting as cicerone, rode over to the class and announced that a mounted group of the Blues had come under fire, and that the umpires wanted to rule out a couple of staff officers. However, a compromise was reached by substituting one orderly and a mule. Nothing was said about the condition of the mule.

While we are still on the battlefield the class wishes to confer the order of the concertina (it may be music to some but it is just engineering to me) upon Major Ryder for the clarity and definiteness of his teachings, and an A plus personality.

Speaking of teaching, Capt. Kenny of the Air Corps, gave a delightful talk on how the Air Service expects to tie in with the Infantry scheme of things in the next war. He said in effect that the horse would be a serious handicap to the infantry. Later we had Major Smith on Cavalry security! It was the Major's farewell patrol around the Infantry lines too. Bon voyage, major, and the best of commands. We'll never forget Sorday's Cavalry Corps.

The Infantry School News

Vol. VII. FORT BENNING, GA., MAY 3, 1929 Number 33

Gen. Collins Leaves For New Post

Commanded Fort Benning Since 1926

Brigadier General Edgar T. Collins, who commanded the Infantry School from March 9, 1926, until May 1, 1929,

Brigadier-General Edgar T. Collins who will command the 23rd Brigade, Philippine Division departed Wednesday morning at 10:30 for Washington, D. C. General Collins will spend a short leave of absence in Washington before his departure for San Francisco, from where he is due to sail for the Philippine Islands in the latter part of May.

On Tuesday evening, the garrison tendered a farewell reception to General and Mrs. Collins at Biglerville, where the commissioned personnel and ladies of the regiments, separate units, the Academic Department and student officer classes, participated in the farewell ceremony.

On Wednesday morning members of General Collins' staff and a few intimate friends met the commandant at his quarters to wish Godspeed to the General and Mrs. Collins. A group of the noncommissioned officers on duty as range guards, stood in formation near the porch of the commandant's quarters, and to each of them, the general spoke a few words of a farewell. A composite company of the 29th Infantry formed a double line along the walk leading from the commandant's quarters to the roadway and presented arms while the general passed to his car.

The general was then escorted to the Upatoi bridge by the band and troops of the 29th Infantry, and as he arrived at the bridge, a battery of the 83rd Field Artillery fired a farewell salute.

General Collins will assume command of the 23rd Brigade, Philippine Division, Fort William McKinley, upon arrival in the Philippines.

New Commandant To Arrive Tomorrow

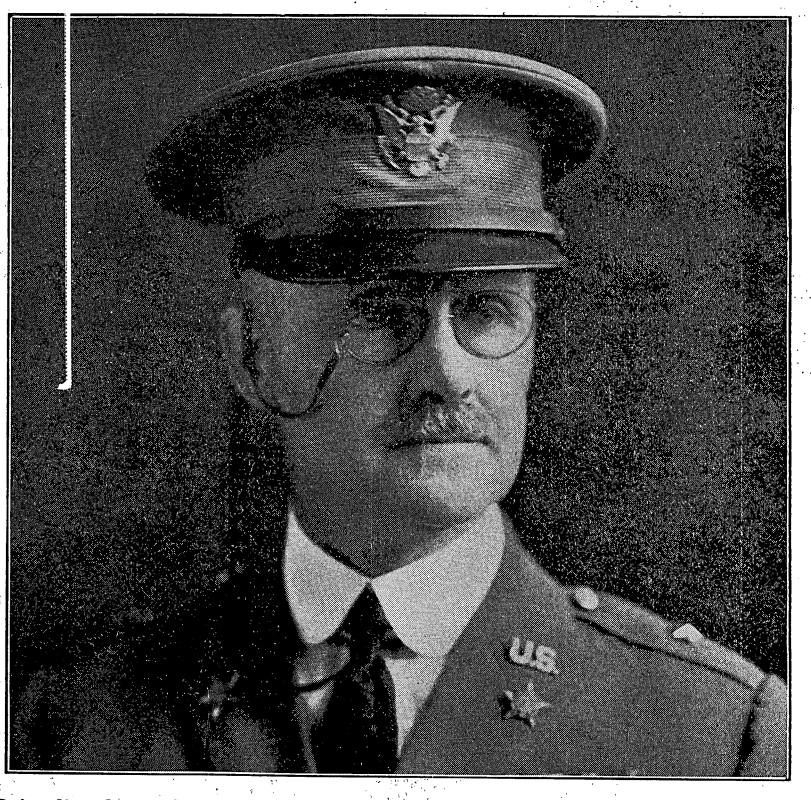
Gen. King Succeeds Gen. Collins at Infantry School

Brigadier General Campbell King, who succeeds Brigadier General Edgar T. Collins as commandant of The Infantry School, is expected to arrive at Fort Benning tomorrow about 12:30 P. M. General King left Washington on Tuesday and is making the trip to Fort Benning by automobile. He is expected to arrive in Atlanta today and will be met there and accompanied to Fort Benning by Colonel Harry E. Knight, Executive Officer. Since 1925, General King has been on duty in Washington, D. C., where he was assistant chief of staff, personnel division, War Department General Staff. Gen. King, in 1924, attended a short course of instruction at The Infantry School.

General King was born at Flat Rock, North Carolina, August 30, 1871. He attended Harvard University and studied law in Atlanta, Georgia, prior to 1897 when he enlisted in the 5th U. S. Cavalry with which regiment he served as private and corporal.

In July 1898 he was appointed a second lieutenant in the regular army. He was assigned to the 1st U. S. Infantry and served in camps in Alabama until early in 1899 when he was ordered to Cuba with his regiment. In the summer of 1900 he accompanied the 1st U. S. Infantry to the Philippine Islands where he participated in numerous engagements against insurgent forces on the Island of Samar during the Philippine insurrection.

He returned to the United States with his regiment in 1903 for service at Fort Wayne, Michigan, and in 1904 commanded a company of guard troops at the World's Fair, St. Louis, Mo. He then served for four years at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, as a student officer at the Infantry and Cavalry School and the Staff College and as an instructor at the Army Service Schools.



Brigadier-General Campbell King who will command The Infantry School

Upon completion of his tour of duty at Fort Leavenworth, he rejoined his regiment, the 1st Infantry, at Vancouver Barracks, Washington, where he remained until 1910, when he was sent to Washington, D. C., as a student and later became an instructor at the Army War College.

In the latter part of 1912 he returned to his regiment and went with it to the Hawaiian Islands for a three-year tour of duty at Schofield Barracks. Upon returning to the United States he again was ordered to Fort Leavenworth as an instructor at the Army Service School, after more than seventeen years of service as a member of the 1st Infantry.

From the summer of 1916 until the the entrance of the United States into the world war he served in Texas with troops of the 7th U. S. Infantry; as an instructor in the business men's training camp at Fort Sam Houston; as an inspector-instructor with the Texas National Guard; and as adjutant of the

Tickets for the play to be presented on May 10, 11 went on sale at the post and in Columbus, Wednesday afternoon. In the Officers Club, the Main Theatre and at the Post Office are posted picturesque, hand painted placards, painted by a master of the art, depicting the theme of the play. And the plot, as will be noted from these paintings, deals principally with "Pigs."

Heretofore it has been the general policy of the club to limit admission to its members. These members pay a substantial membership fee, and in addition, pay for admission, and the plays have been presented primarily for them. It was decided that for this last play the public, even though they pay no membership fees, would be admitted, and so the play is being presented on two nights in order to accomodate all those desiring to see it. There is no particular limit on the kind of ticket sold. Anyone may buy a ticket for any part of the house that is available.

PREPARING FOR HORSE SHOW

The afternoons of May 13th, 14th, 16th and 18th hold forth quite a bit of interest for the personnel of Fort Benning. On these afternoons the seventh annual transportation and horse show of the Infantry School will be held. The program is so arranged that there will be a full and interesting afternoon each day of the show.

In looking about the corrals of the organizations, one may see soldiers slyly working away at some piece of harness or equipment—all preparing for the contests of the show. Some have already saddle-soaped their leather equipment so that it would wring forth the jealousy of a Royal Mounted Escort.

"D" Company of the 29th Infantry keeps an eye on her regimental rival, "H" Company. The two form a clique and organize a system by which they can keep tab on the Service Company. Then when the Doughboys put all their heads together, they finally figure some means by which they can check up on the 83rd Field Artillery. From all surface observation, the competition promises to wax hot.

The officers and ladies of the garrison are seen out bright and early almost every morning, exercising their mounts that they will exhibit in the show. They take them over the course each day, trying to teach the horse well-behaved manners, and at the same time, keeping the muscles in trim to put them over the bar without a fault.

In a few days the trophies to be given the winner of each class will be on display at the Main Theatre. This will be the most beautiful set of trophies ever collected for the transportation and horse show at the Upatoi station. The winners of these trophies will be amply rewarded for their untiring efforts in preparation for the events. A trophy and a ribbon will be given the entry taking first place in each class, and a ribbon goes to those placing lower than first.

HEADQUARTERS, SPECIAL UNITS

In my first report from Special Units Headquarters, I made the remark that the figure thirteen meant very little in the working of these headquarters.

Private First Class, Specialist 5th Class, Sam Ross, 100th MTC, QMC, is the subject, (or rather the object) in this series of thirteens. Private Ross first enlisted for Company "K", 25th Infantry, on December 13, 1913. He has since that time been discharged four times, once as Private, once as Private First Class, once as Sergeant, and once as First Sergeant. He now has in fifteen years service.

On Friday 13, 1926 (notice the year is twice thirteen) a board of officers convened to determine whether Ross' request for reduction to private be allowed. The board made its report at exactly 10:13 o'clock, and his request was granted. He was again made Private First Class Specialist Sixth Class on Company Order Number 13, June 1, 1928. He reported for duty as company clerk at Headquarters, Special Units on October 13, 1926 (twice 13 again), and has been giving the kind of work that characterizes the personnel group at these headquarters since that time. Upon being interviewed, Private Ross states that there are thirteen members in his immediate family, and that he would ride in an automobile with the figure thirteen on it, holding a black cat, ride under a ladder, spill salt in his lap and kiss a cross-eyed girl all at the same time.

FORT REPRESENTED IN EXHIBIT

Fort Benning was represented in the exhibition of the Garden Club of Columbus held at the Country Club this week by an exhibit arranged by Mrs. R. H. Fletcher, Mrs. C. L. Steele and Mrs. A. B. Helsley.

NEW COMMANDANT TO ARRIVE TOMORROW

12th Provisional Division. In April, 1917 he was ordered to Bloomington, Indiana, as professor of military science and tactics at the University of Indiana.

In June 1917 he left for France where he served almost continuously with the First (regular army) Division until September, 1918, as assistant division adjutant, as division operations officer, and after November 1917 as division chief of staff.

He served in several defensive sectors with the First Division and participated in the Montdidier-Noyon defensive, including the capture of Cantigny, the Aisne-Marne offensive south of Soissons, and the St. Mihiel offensive. Returning to the United States in July, 1919, he reverted to his regular army grade of major and was ordered to the General Staff College at Washington, D. C., as an instructor. While on this duty he also completed the course at that institution.

C., for duty as assistant chief of staff, personnel division, War Department general staff, on which duty he remained until his assignment to the command of The Infantry School.

General King has been awarded the following decorations: Officer of Legion of Honor (French), Croix de Guerre with Palm and Silver Star (French), Commander of the Order of the Crown (Italian), and the Distinguished Service Medal (United States), the citation for the latter reading as follows:

"He served with distinction as chief of staff of the 1st Division in the operations near Montdidier, the advance south of Soissons, and in the attack on the St. Mihiel salient. Later, as chief of staff of the 3rd Army Corps during the Meuse-Argonne operations, by his splendid tactical judgment he rendered especially meritorious service."

FRIDAY, MAY 3

"BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES," a U. F. A. production, made in Germany from many thousand feet of motion picture film taken under the direction of the German Imperial government during the world war. These films have been whipped into an absorbing narrative depicting the entire war from a German point of view. It begins with the assassination of the Austrian Crown Prince at Sarajevo, and leads successively up to the cessation of hostilities. Such colossal figures as the Kaiser, Hindenburg, Ludendorff, Von Tirpitz, Joffre, Lloyd George, Wilson, Foch and Pershing, constitute but a few of those who play conspicuous roles. Among the great battles pictured are those of the Marne, Ypres, Verdun, the Somme, Masurian Lakes, the German-Austrian advance toward Russia in 1915, Osonzo Salonika, and last, but not least, the American advance through the Argonne. Army personnel who have seen this picture consider it the best war picture ever shown.

SATURDAY, MAY 4

"THE BLACK ACE," starring Don Coleman, who was a sergeant at Camp Lewis during the world war, in a story of the great Southwest. It portrays a Texas ranger ordered into a wild district to arrest a criminal known as the Black Ace. He discovers that all evidence points to his own foster father as being the criminal. A half breed desperado has the father in his power. The plot unwinds to a pleasing as well as thrilling climax. In addition to the dramatic angles, it possesses enjoyable comedy hits.

SUNDAY, MAY 5

"RED DANCE," starring Dolores Del Rio and Charles Farrell in a highly capitvating story laid in strife-torn Russia. It is from the story by H. L. Gates and Eleanore Browne, whose travel and experiences in that country of mystery gave them the basic information upon which to build a most intriguing plot. Ivan Linow, a native of Russia, adds true nationalistic color to the theme. The story is a tense melodrama revolving about the idea that "love is a woman's only cause." The story will lead you from the dens of plotters to the exalted habitations of well-to-do-pleasure lovers.

"Gold." Color Classic.

MONDAY, MAY 6

"TROPICAL NIGHTS," starring Patsy Ruth Miller and Malcolm McGregor in a film suggested by the Jack London story "A Raid on the Oyster Pirates." The story is laid among the little-known savage South Sea Islands. It is a real thriller concerning pearl divers, derelicts from the Seven Seas, beach combers, native dancing girls, and a marooned chorus girl from the states. There are scenes of love, murder and intrigue. One of the most thrilling scenes under water shows a diver, with his foot caught in a giant clam shell, fighting an enormous octopus.

TUESDAY, MAY 7

"COHENS AND KELLYS IN ATLANTIC CITY," starring George Sidney with a splendid cast of clever comediennes. The squabbles of the business partners, Cohens and Kellys and their wives, makes hilarious comedy. In this picture they are in the bathing suit business—how they stage a $10,000 bathing beauty contest at Atlantic City against their will makes a very interesting story chuck full of funny situations. If laughing or feasting your eyes upon bathing beauties is at all injurious to your equilibrium, stay away from this picture.

"Cash and Carry." Curiosity No. 7.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 9

"DREAM OF LOVE," starring Joan Crawford and Nils Asther in a modernized version of the famous old French play, "Adrienee Lecouvreur," in which Sarah Bernhardt starred for many seasons. It is a story of emotions and passions, played in a most colorful manner. Royalty, court life, and revolution form its background. It takes place in the glittering intriguing environment of a picturesque Balkan Kingdom and traces the rise to fame of a wandering gypsy girl who wins the plaudits and admiration of the crowd, but is forced to sacrifice her lover because he is of royal birth. As a result of the world war, revolution overturns the government, and conditions change.

"M. G. M. News No. 74."

THURSDAY, MAY 9

"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel in a powerful romance of the Napoleonic Era. This historic drama relates a chapter in the lives of the famous Betsy Patterson and Jerome, brother of Napoleon Bonaparte. It depicts the manner in which they meet, fall in love, and finally marry in spite of Napoleon's fierce opposition; and how their happiness is nearly destroyed by Napoleon's political ambitions. This picture is full of suspense and thrills, and is all the more interesting because it is the true story of two great lovers of history. This picture is considered one of the outstanding films of the year.

"Night Owl." Cameo.

FRIDAY, MAY 10

"JAZZ MAD," starring Jean Hersholt with Marion Nixon and George Lewis. It is one of love beats, heart pangs and throbs with gripping, tearful, laughing, moments. The story revolves around a talented old musician who, failing to sell his beautiful symphony descends to play in a comedy jazz orchestra to earn a living. His daughter arranges to have his companion played by one of New York's famous orchestras; this revives his spirits and helps win back his former prestige as well as gain his daughter's happiness. Dazzling, jazzling lights and shadows of vaudeville and night club life are vividly portrayed. The story contains none of the murder elements of many of our heavy melodramas, but it does not depict near tragedy in light-hearted jazz surroundings.

"Cure or Kill." Fables.

Farewell Reception for General and Mrs. Collins

On Tuesday evening, April 30th, General and Mrs. Edgar T. Collins were tendered a lovely farewell reception at Biglerville by the officers and ladies of the command. Biglerville was enlarged by the addition of temporary porches to take care of the huge gathering and the exterior was banked in southern pine studded with electric lights. An improvised bandstand was placed in front of Biglerville, its framework hidden by pines and lined with lights where the 24th Infantry band played during the evening. At the south end of the long room a divan and a group of chairs for the general's party were artistically placed between two decorative features which symbolized the foreign service which our commandant and his lady are soon to enjoy. At the general's left, on a synthetic sea, was a large replica of a transport with flags flying and on the right of the receiving party was a typical landscape of tropical isles basking in the beauty of the eternal sun's afterglow. Mrs. Collins, in her shimmering silver dress and huge bouquet of gorgeous roses fitted charmingly into the picture.

The various units of the command assembled, each at its appointed hour, and with their commanding officers went en masse to say farewell. To expedite matters, each commanding officer expressed for his command appreciation for the cooperation General Collins has given during his sojourn here and the best of good wishes for their happiness and well-being in their new station, to which the general responded very graciously, and the formality of shaking hands with every one was dispensed with in order that a delightful programme dance might be enjoyed. At the north end of the room the 29th Infantry Band was placed on an elevated stand and they rendered delightful music during the entire evening. After a couple of dances the floor was cleared and a group of prominent singers of the Glee Club presented special selections from The Mikado among them, "The Song of the Lord High Executioner," "A Wandering Minstrel I," and "Three Little Maids of Japan," which was soon followed by a burlesque cleverly done by Major Barlow, Capt. Boyd, and Capt. Norris. At a second intermission a notable feature in the life of this garrison was reflected in laughing parody. It was a take off by members of The Dramatic Club of the extensive riding done here, and took the special form of an early morning hunt. Sleepy officers and shivering ladies took part on riotously funny horses and no types were spared from the red-coated whips to the dowdiest habited recruit of a beginner's equitation class. Wise cracks were made at various prominent Benningites from Colonel Marshall on down and from the resounding merriment they hit their marks. Twas all in merry sport and was so original and unique that it will be fun to remember it long. After the programme dancing was enjoyed till a late hour.

On last Tuesday, April 23rd, Mayor J. Homer Dimon honored General and Mrs. Edgar T. Collins with an elegant dinner party at "Countryside," his charming summer home, the occasion being a farewell party before their departure for the Philippines on May 1st. The home was festive with lovely flowers, California poppies being used in lavish profusion in the living room, pink and white roses in the music room, and red and white carnations in the dining room. The guests were seated at one handsomely appointed table the centerpiece of which was quite unusual. A long crystal tray was made for the occasion on which the name "Collins" was perfectly formed, of large red strawberries from the host's own garden. Surrounding this was a wide row of dark green strawberry leaves and on the outer edge, a row of white sweet peas forming all in all an unusually artistic centerpiece. Red candles glowed in silver holders and at each end were silver bowls of carnations. Covers were laid for twenty.

AU REVOIR

One of the features of army life which bind us heart and soul to our beloved service is the gift of dear and life-long friendships which compensate in large degree for the lack of many material comforts enjoyed by people of equal station in civil life.

Early in our careers, we make those contacts which grow into everlasting friendships. As time goes on, we find our lives enriched by the precious attachments which are the outcome of association with those of kindred tastes and temperament and who are bound together by the ideals of a common profession.

Wherever duty may take us, there we are certain to find friends among those with whom we serve.

We live among them and enjoy their comradeship until duty takes us again to new scenes. The ordeal of parting from those whom we hold dear is made no easier by its frequency nor by the ethics of the service which frown upon a display of emotions at such a time.

In time of war, such a situation is faced with a philosophy peculiar to the army.

In time of peace, we find a modicum of comfort in the assurance that sometime in our service, even though it may be years hence, we shall meet our friends again and renew those associations which have endeared them to us.

And so to those who leave us we say: "Au Revoir."

ARMY ATHLETICS

The American soldier of today is an active individual. He has to be in order to keep up with the variety of duties and training which demand dexterity and physical fitness in their performance.

Keeping physically fit is as much a part of a soldier's job as is guard duty or any other military task.

To the majority of young soldiers, the physical training is an enjoyable part of the day's work. Indeed, the active young soldiers of our army today spend most of their spare time in some physical activity. In this they receive all encouragement, for the army does not seek especially to develop a few star athletes but prefers to direct its athletics toward the harmonious physical development of all. It endeavors to give each soldier the physical training suitable to his needs and ability and encourages him to participate in sports to his liking.

The soldiers at Fort Benning are particularly fortunate in this respect, for here they have a recreation center with facilities for a variety of activities which are equaled by few, if any, colleges.

Another unit, a group of handball courts, is being added to the recreational establishment which already includes the prettiest baseball field in America, a stadium suitable for everything from track meets to pageantry, a modern gymnasium, indoor and outdoor boxing arenas, and a swimming pool of splendid proportions and impressive beauty. In addition to all of these, there are hundreds of horses to ride over miles and miles of trails through virgin forest.

With all of these facilities at his disposal, the Fort Benning soldier enjoys recreational opportunities which are unavailable except to the very wealthy in other spheres of life.

COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

MONDAY AUCTION

IT was a Monday morning. A small mixed crowd of whites and negroes was gathered on the sidewalk in front of the old-fashioned courthouse building. Looming head and shoulders above them, a tall, gray-haired, rather elderly man seemed to be delivering a harangue. His argument was punctuated frequently by gestures and sometimes he paused to point directly at some person in the crowd, as if especially emphasizing a part of his speech for the benefit of that individual. "Atlanta, Chattanooga, New York; you can get 'em all. Hear the machine guns in Chicago, listen in on San Francisco. You might even get China. Look at the pretty color on that, ain't it a beauty? What am I bid for this high-class set? Who'll start it off? What am I bid?"

The old man was auctioning a radio set which lay on the ground before him.

"Ten dollars!" came a voice from the rear of the crowd.

"Ten dollars, the gentleman says. Ten dollars for this wonderful set! Why that's just like giving it away!" The auctioneer's voice took on a plaintive tone. "Ten dollars bid! Who'll make it fifteen? Will somebody bid fifteen? Only fifteen dollars. Fifteen, fifteen, fifteen! Am I bid fifteen? Ah, yes, the gentleman over there bids fifteen dollars. Going at fifteen dollars, who'll make it twenty?"

"Sixteen," somebody in front bids. The bidding climbs slowly and eventually the radio set is "sold to the gentleman over there" for thirty-five dollars. "And a wonderful bargain you got, mister. That's an eighty-five dollar set."

The auctioneer consults a paper which he holds in his hand. The crowd makes way for him as he walks toward the curb and steps up on the running board of a small car parked there. It is a prototype of a small popular-priced car whose very ubiquity would have brought fame to its manufacturer had not its many other merits done so. Unquestionably, it has seen better days. The passage of many seasons and rough usage have left their imprint upon it. Bits of wire have replaced minor parts here and there; a piece of adhesive tape has stopped a leak around the radiator cap; another strip of tape covers a crack in the wind shield. There are other evidences of the ministrations of the "handy-man."

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," says the auctioneer, "here is a nice little family car just waiting to be took home. It's got four good tires and a license. Runs good, too. Sam, crank her up and let the ladies and gents hear her run." A man in the garb of a garage mechanic goes to the front of the car and gives the crank several turns. Nothing happens. Sam walks around to the side of the car and does something to the throttle lever on the steering wheel. He cranks again and is rewarded by a faint wheeze and a little cough from the "little family car." Sam wipes his brow and cranks again. A series of staccato explosions erupts from the motor and the little car sways and shimmies while water drips from the front of the radiator like perspiration from a dancer's brow. The auctioneer signals to Sam to stop the engine. When the echo of the last salvo has died away, the auctioneer gets down to business.

"What am I bid for this car. You all heard how good she runs. What am I bid?"

"Five dollars," calls a voice from the center of the crowd. The auctioneer is hurt. "Why, the tires are worth more than that," he protests in a querulous voice. By wheedling and coaxing, the price is gradually run up to twenty-seven dollars and another name is added to the roster of owners of "the little family car."

The auctioneer again consults his list. "Right over this way, ladies and gentlemen," he says as he moves a few feet to one side and mounts a small box. Before him is a table littered with an assortment of articles such as might have accumulated in a small tailoring or presser's shop. There is a tailor's pressing iron, a pair of scissors, an ironing board, a copper vessel which looks like a boiler but which may be something else, a book of little square samples of cloth and two or three suits of clothes and miscellaneous articles of secondhand clothing. A large mirror and a pair of cheap wooden chairs stand beside the table. The mirror is streaked by several silverless patches and one of the bunches of plaster grapes which formerly adorned the frame has been plucked off.

The auctioneer repeats his formula: "What am I bid? Will somebody make me a bid on these things?"

"One dollar," calls somebody. Several people snicker. The auctioneer looks sad.

"Why look at these pants," he cries as he holds a pair of worn trousers up to the view of the crowd, "these pants alone are worth four dollars."

"Dollar an' a half," comes a bid. The old man becomes melancholy.

"There's three suits that you could sell for five dollars apiece, besides all the other stuff. Come on now, folks, quit joking. What am I bid? Who'll make it two dollars," he coaxes. After a good deal of wheedling by the auctioneer, the bids rise to six dollars and the lot is sold to a shrewd-looking individual who opens up a little sale of his own on the spot and sells the mirror and several garments at a substantial profit.

"Got some more cars to sell, folks," the auctioneer announces, after consulting his list again. He points to a small coach of the moderate price class. "Look her over, folks. It's got good tires and the upholstery looks pretty good. Got a license, too. What am I bid? Somebody give me a bid." The crowd presses closely around the car and somebody makes a bid of ten dollars.

"Why, the license is worth more than that," the auctioneer protests. "Sam, start her up and let the folks see how good she runs." Sam gets in and kicks the starter. The car is in gear and gives a jump forward. There is a scramble of those in front to get out of the way while those in rear laugh. Sam yanks the gear shift lever and kicks the starter again. The car lurches to the rear. There is a mad scramble in the rear and loud laughter in front. Sam disengages the gear and finally gets the motor going. The demonstration is convincing; the motor does go, although noisily, and the bids jump to fifteen dollars, closing at thirty-five. It looks like a good bargain.

A little closed car of uncertain age is next. Its decrepitude is apparent even to the auctioneer. "This would make a dandy playhouse for the kids," he says. "If I had any kids, I'd buy this and give it to the kids for a playhouse." The "playhouse" is sold for seventeen dollars.

Two other cars are sold for comparatively small sums. One of them has no license plate. "Drive it right off," advises the auctioneer, "if you can get by the city cops, you can give the country p-o-o-leece the go-by."

The sale is over and the crowd disperses, a few of them pausing to purchase bright yellow ice cream sandwiches from a sidewalk vendor.

"It's as good as a show, isn't it?" remarks a man at my elbow, who like myself, has been an interested spectator at the auction.

"Yes, it is," I agree, and as I leave, I resolve to attend the entertaining Monday auction again at the first opportunity.

THE DRAMATIC CLUB

Blackmail in Medbury!

Would you believe it? Of all places—Medbury, Indiana! That State of mid-American virtues—that state of solid farms, of Chautauquas, of rip-roaring revivals—and blackmail! That insidious, poisonous crime which suggests the Camorra, Eugene Sue, the shadowy underworld of depraved Metropoli, the tortuous ways of hidden sin, the rattling of the skeletons and the merciless hand of the extortioner, the blackmailer!

Picture a dreamy mid-land town, oozing mid-victorian virtues, on a background of knitted macassars, needle cushions with encrusted shell-bases petit-point samplers that show the alphabet coming-and-going and perhaps! a cast-iron deer on the front lawn! In this setting of bourgeois respectability, a tranquil pool of main-street complacency there grows the evil flower of blackmail—like Baudelaire's "Fleurs du Mal"—or something equally exciting.

What it is all about!

At least, I thought so when I read the second Act of "Pigs," that delightful comedy to be given on Friday and Saturday Night, May 10th and 11th.

Imagine my utter amazement when I found that the blackmailer is none other than young Mildred Cushing, of the Play—a delicious blonde, reared in the bosom of a respectable family,—an appetizing blonde, I daresay, who will capture her audience by grace and very obvious good looks. When I probed in the depths of this appealing character, I found the soul of a desperate woman, who turned to blackmail only on the spur of defending her lover, of helping him. Unquestionably a noble motive. She wants two-hundred and fifty dollars!

Of course, you would like to know what this tremendous sum is for? When you see the play "Pigs"—you will understand the charming Mildred and will forgive her—The denouement will positively startle you. I haven't gotten over it myself. It has something to do with "Pigs" You will probably hear them squeal. At the Hendricks Farm, just before daylight—you will see Mildred with a lighted lantern in her hand, while Dr. Springer a veterinary, is mixing stuff in pails in a real pig-pen. A little later—Lenore Hastings and her Beau Spencer Atkins drift non-chalantly on the scene—they have been motoring. It must be something like 4 A. M.—still, they are non-chalant and probably lighting a "Lucky Strike"—and that was another revelation for me! Apparently, they are quite up-to-date in Medbury and certainly know their gasoline.

You must see "Pigs!"

Needless to say, you will hear all about Lenore when you attend the next performance of "Pigs." Professional ethics forbid me to divulge any further details.

Just one more delightful little item—: —there is the red thread or scandal weaving through this delightful play. One Hector Spencer—pet-son of Grandma Spencer, devotee of the pool-halls and loafer extra-ordinary appears to have had a liaison with Tillie—! The baby fortunately remains off-stage during the entire performance; its effects are felt, rather than heard, which is quite enough. The delightful Mildred, of course, who has her pert nose in everything, knows about this passionate interlude and—well, you really must come and see it all, in "Pigs"—Friday and Saturday Night, May 10th and 11th—at the Main Theatre.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR EDGAR ERSKINE HUME, Medical Corps

SNAKEBITES AND WHAT TO DO IF BITTEN

Several species of poisonous snakes are found on the Fort Benning reservation, the most important of which are the rattlesnake and water moccasin.

Snakebites usually occur at a distance from habitation so that it is important for every person to know what to do if bitten. Most snakebites are inflicted upon some part of the leg or arm. If bitten by a poisonous snake, everything depends on carrying out the following procedures promptly:

1. Apply a ligature or tourniquet above the bite. This should be applied tightly at first, but must be partially released for a few seconds at five to ten minutes intervals so as to maintain the necessary circulation in the limb. There is no particilar advantage in making an incision nor in applying permanganate of potash solution or crystals or any other of the chemical agents commonly recommended for this purpose.

Above all avoid the use of alcohol or any stimulant of that kind. These by strengthening the circulation, may tend to help the distribution of the venom throughout the body. Caffeine for example in the form of strong black coffee, may be given if symptoms of giddiness or weakness develop.

2. Bring the person who has been bitten, as soon as possible, to the station hospital where the anti-snakebite serum can be administered. If this serum be given in 12 to 24 hours the chances of its being effective are good. But remember that the earlier it is used, the more completely effective it is, and the quicker recovery from ill effects. Meanwhile the ligature or tourniquet should be kept in place but care should be taken to release pressure at intervals. Otherwise congestion of the limb due to prolonged binding may favor initiation of gangrene.

If the above directions are carried out, a person bitten need not become alarmed. There is no part of the reservation so remote that a person bitten by a snake cannot reach the hospital in time for treatment to save him from serious consequences of snakebite.

Next week's subject: "Red Bugs or 'Chiggers'."

THE TENTS OF KEDAR

Great mystery shrouds the subject of what Major John P. Butler of New York, official spokesman for the national guard and reserve officers, said to General Collins the night of the fareweli reception. With the possible exception of General Collins, nobody knows. Even the officers five feet from Major Butler have no clews. Gazing directly at General Collins, the Major began a convulsive movement of the jaws, accompanied by a smile. Apparently the General understood what it was all about, for he smiled in return and nodded his head. Then he uttered a few equally confidential remarks and the assembled menagerie moved back.

Lieutenant Story's new mess jacket was easily the sensation of the tent area that night. His bright auburn hair added a touch of glory not to be had at any tailor shop. Only a tin cup and a fez were needed to make the thing complete.

Captain LaRouche of California has been awarded the asbestos mittens for extracting the largest amount of gloom out of any given situation. Captain LaRouche is a firm believer in the old adage that there is no silver lining without a corresponding cloud, and that the clouds usually bulk so large and the silver linings so small that they have no commercial value.

Another record has been won by Lt. Joseph D. Alexander of Chicago and Cicero, Ill. (There are two Alexanders; this is the one who hasn't any girl friends at Mrs. Young's.) Joe has been late in starting for the area every morning for the last seventy-seven days, and expects to keep his record in this regard spotless.

GOLF-GOSSIP

By V. G. H.

The previously announced plan for the week-end tournament was changed to a bogey-par event at the request of members who wanted "something different." This change was more than acceptable, if the number of players signing is a sufficient proof of its popularity, there being 74 participants, the largest field to date.

While the weather was not the ideal kind for golf, yet some very creditable scores were registered, and even though most of the "class A" nobles struggled with "80's", Capt. "Art" (Nevins), of the Academic Department, surprised himself with a very satisfactory 73; the sad part of it was that a black cat crossed his path on the way to the golf course and his noble effort contained but six or seven pars (of the paying kind), while most of the winners—scoring as high as 93—had their rabbit's foot working in grand style and brought in enough of the bogey-pars to "get in on the bacon."

The winners, in the order listed, were:

Lieut. Donegan, Capt. Huskea, Major Bradley, Capt. Meagher, Capt. Hickson, Lieut. E. H. Wilson, Capt. Beebe, Capt. Peabody, Mr. A. Brandt, Col. Wells, Lieut. Warlick, Capt. Norris, Capt. Chance.

There were 17 prizes in all, some of the players taking "eagles" and "birdies" in addition to placing in the regular pay-column.

Another week-end event will be held this Saturday and Sunday, details of which can be secured at the Post Golf Shop, or by phoning 56.

We have often wondered why our only lady golfer who accomplished the rare feat of making a hole-in-one, Mrs. E. E. Lewis, did not receive due credit for same.

Major Livesay assures us that it was only due to a "stiff left arm"—during the week-end tournament—that his "93" did not have enough of the "smiling-pars" in it to put him on the "pay-roll." (Now, you tell one, Major Ryder.)

There were two "eagles" and four "birdies" recorded during the last tournament (for pay purposes), and several more of the "normal kind" were also chalked up but Sgt. Clark declared these "out-of-bounds" and of no pay value. Some ventured the opinion that horse-shoes and rabbit's feet ought to be included among the sales articles at the Golf Shop branch of the Post Exchange. (Ask the Pro., he may have some now, friends.)

Capt. Hickson would lead us to believe that Cuba is not conducive to good golf; however, we note that his name is on the "pay-roll" of the last tourney—so why discourage the rest of us, brother?

It was reported that some "sinners" still fail to level their "snake-killing" efforts in sand traps and bunkers; many claimed that had their ball not found a six-inch-deep track of some No. 13 spiked gun-boats in the traps that they decided to "visit," they would not have been obliged to rely on St. Peter having an impaired hearing at such times. Come now, friends, let us get together on this; in-grown hair, heebie-jeebies, stiff arms—mind—or wind, and the numerous other proclivities of us dubs, are "fair, just, and logical" reasons for a poor medal score to any "fair-minded and open-hearted" person, but such neglect has all the ear-marks of a premeditated crime against good sportsmanship, even if some of us do fail to get a speaking acquaintance with the rules and customs of this worthy game.

The ladies' Post Championship qualifying play is to begin Monday, May 6; Sgt. Clark has 120-some odd lady-golfers recorded; about six flights of eight each have already indicated their interest in this annual classic, the largest field any relatively private club can show, and the golf commitee is pleased to have so many of the ladies of the garrison take interest and enter the event.

Headquarters Co.

Pvt. Seely, in his recent fight with Billy Shell, seemed to get the worst of the decision, judging by the papers. But the papers did not know the inside of that fight. Seely showed lots of intestinal fortitude by entering the ring. He met with an accident the Sunday before which nearly severed the middle finger of the right hand, rendering the right practically useless. He is to be commended for such showing.

"Spud" finishes his term Sunday. He has avowed most strenuously that he is not going to re-up, but is going to Kentucky and make a million. He does not say how he is going to make a million honestly, but it is rumored that he has a belle, whose father has that sum. The squad room will seem empty with Spud gone, for he has kept everyone interested in the stories of his ham and egg fighters.

Lest there be any argument about it, let me state that spring is here! Tra-la! And to present absolutely unquestionable proof—"Bucky" has been seen garbed in his summer negligee, instead of his heavy woolens. And when "Bucky" sheds his woolens there is no more argument whatsoever.

Pvts. Stambough, Stockberger and Mowyer will finish their first hitch on different days during the next week, and of the three it seems as if only one will re-up. Losing three cowboys at one time is news, but the story is lacking.

Company "A"

"A" Company has finished the record course in bayonet training. Our baseball team played a game in Columbus with the Hubbard Hardware Company but the Hubbard team was too much for the Company team.

Company "C"

Pfc. G. E. Jeffreys was discharged per E. T. S. Saturday and departed for parts unknown.

To whom it may concern: The "Pool Room" Quartette is requested to sing "On the Banks of the Wabash" or "In Honolulu," any place other than the company barracks.

Pfc. Johnson is studying the manual for army cooks, secretly, and will be prepared to fill the first vacancy that occurs.

Company "E"

We have just about finished with the bayonet course and are hoping to be near the top when the final check is made.

Corporal Evans has transferred to headquarters as regimental secretary. We are sorry to see him leave but are glad to know he is getting something better. Evans says no one is allowed to fire a gun around his home until after 9 A. M. for fear some one might be shot while eating their breakfast in a persimmon tree.

John Chonka has joined the company from recruit center, he has 12 years wearing the khaki of Uncle Sam's defenders. Glad to have you with us John.

Our blonde headed battler "Doubtin' Thomas" sure gave Mr. Phillips a good trimming in the last bout here. This was Tommy's twenty-sixth fight and he has only lost two out of the twenty-six.

Company "F"

The company track team did their bit by taking the battalion championship again this year. Quite a few of them placed in events in the post meet. Considering the amount of practice the whole team made an excellent showing.

Pvts. Hooven and Klubeck were honorably discharged this week and have left for parts of the world unknown We are all wishing them the best of luck in civilian life.

Company "G"

Cpl. Johanson was sitting around batting about 300 in front of the quarters. He left his pipe on the bench and a few minutes later came back and asked Rct. Livingston if he had seen a pipe around there. Rct. Livingston said, "Yes I just saw a man go in the kitchen with a pipe." But it happened to be a man from a hardware store. Joe said: "Oh, no, he can't be the man I'm looking for.

We received some good news from ex-Corporal Newman and he is getting along fine. He said he was burning them down the plates. "Stay with them Newman."

Well we have one more old timer to come from the 22nd Infantry. Pvt. Pippin, but it won't be private long, because the old timer knows his training regulations. We are glad to have you with us Pippin.

"Company "H"

An average platoon from this company was turned out for an inspection of standards last Saturday. It is very gratifying to know that we can turn out on short notice and be up to any standard set for us. As in the past, so shall it be in the future: "Ready, at any time, any place, for anything."

We organized a baseball team on "very" short notice and last Friday claimed the large end of the score in a game against Hdqrs. Co., 15th Tank Bn. With a little more practice and our new equipment broken in, we are going out to take high score in the games of the battalion.

Pfc. Johnson is to be discharged this week. Next week will se Sgt. DePratt, Cpl. Maudlin and Pfc. Neal, W., with their "finals." We hope to see all of you men back with the company soon after. But, should civilian life call, the best of luck and a prosperous life be yours.

24th INF. NOTES

A few days back, on the 29th of April to be exact, at 1:30 P. M. as many of the officers and ladies of the regiment that could get away assembled at the golf club for a mixed "Scotch" flag tournament. All was lovely till we arrived in the immediate vicinity of the lake. This slowed the game down perceptibly; caddies were dispatched to the club for a re-supply of balls and we proceeded slowly around the accursed frog pond.

Lt. Forse and Mrs. Helsley won first place in the match, Captain Tuttle and Mrs. Paynter were second, and they were barely ahead of Colonel Galleher and Mrs. Scott who were in third.

The 24th Infantry Small Bore Team completed and forwarded the records of N. R. A. champion gallery rifle regimental team match on the 30th of April.

It will be remembered that the 24th won the championship of the Fourth Corps recently, when they fired a score of 3,358. This was excelled by only one team in the United States; the 121st Engineers of Washington, D. C., who fired a score of 3,368.

In this last match the 24th finished the same course that they fired in the corps match with a score of 3,384. This, as will be noted, is sixteen points above the 121st Engineers, previous record. The final outcome of this match will probably not be known for two weeks.

The 24th small bore rifle team is composed of the following shooting members: Captains, J. L. Tupper, J. P. Lyons, E. F. Paynter, W. B. Wilson, E. G. Lindroth, C. L. Steel, Sergeant S. Bradford, George Larkins, 1st Sergeant Jennings, Corporal J. Fletcher, Privates Baugh and Hightower.

SERGEANT LEE RETIRES

On April 8th, 1929, as promulgated by General Orders No. 8, Headquarters, 24th Infantry, Technical Sergeant Joseph H. Lee, Band, 24th Infantry, was rewarded for his many years of faithful service, by being placed on the retired list. Lee had served all of his enlistments in the 24th Infantry, approximately 14 years of which were with the band.

He has not a gray hair in his head, and looks as young an spry as most of the youngsters. Besides he is a talented musician, he is an excellent field soldier and is an expert with the rifle and pistol.

His order of retirement follows:

Headquarters Twenty-Fourth Infantry, office of the Regimental Commander.

Fort Benning, Ga., April 8, 1929.

General orders No. 8.

Technical Sergeant Joseph H. Lee, R1022681, Band, 24th Infantry, will be retired this date, after the equivalent of thirty years service, by paragraph 13, Special Orders No. 77, War Department, dated April 3, 1929.

Technical Sergeant Joseph H. Lee, first enlisted for Band, 24th Infantry, June 11, 1903.

His service is as follows:

Band, 24th Infantry, June 11, 1903 to November 16, 1905.

Band, 24th Infantry, November 17, 1905 to November 16, 1908.

Band, 24th Infantry, November 17, 1908 to Jan. 13, 1912.

Band, 24th Infantry, January 24, 1912 to Jan. 23, 1915.

Technical Sergeant Lee served in the Philippine Islands during Philippine Insurrection, on the Island of Leyte from 1906 to 1908 and in Mexico during the Punitive Expedition from August 5, 1916 to February 5, 1917.

This non-commissioned officer has served loyally, honestly and faithfully, and for steady application to duty, fidelity and good service, is rewarded by honorable retirement.

The regiment congratulates him on his successful conclusion of his career in active service and its good wishes accompany him upon his retirement to civil life.

E. G. LINDROTH,
Captain, 24th Infantry, Asst. Adjutant.

Battery "B"

Battery "B" turned out last Saturday for a mounted inspection by the battalion commander. We made a good showing. The hearty words he spoke to us are very much appreciated.

Our ball team is doing fine. So far we have won four games straight. That is the kind of ball that wins championships. We get these results without any practice, we wonder what our team could do if they would have some evenings off to practice.

The pool tournament furnished plenty of upsets. Some of the old stand-bys and favorites have lost. Even the "expert" Monte, with three months of training, was eliminated by Sergeant Gantt

The section "one for all and all for one" lost one good soldier.

Sergeant Hockemeyer's horse "Beebe" is no longer with the B. C. detail.

The battery is being overhauled. New barracks for the Artillery must be still far away; we are rejuvenating our old homes again.

TANKERS TAKE TRACK MEET

By taking the lead in the first event of the afternoon, that of the 120 yard high hurdles ,the Fifteenth Tank Battalion paved the way for their easy victory in the track and field meet last Saturday afternoon. By taking all four places in this event, the Tank Battalion scored eleven points, and only gained two points on the First Battalion for the rest of the meet. Coached by Lieutenant Johnny Roosma, the Tankers have labored for the past three months in preparation for the track and field meet. They have been amply rewarded in defeating their arch enemies, the First and Second Battalions of the 29th Infantry.

The whole affair was well arranged. There were judges, judges' assistants and assistants for the assistants for every event on the program. The officers appointed to these posts were always on the job, keeping time and officiating around the course. Captain W. B. Tuttle having charge of the whole affair, lined the officials and contestants up in a column, headed by the officials, with the First Bn., Second Bn., 15th Tank Bn., 83rd Field Artillery Bn., following in order, commanded by their respective coaches. The band played a march, and the column proceeded around the track, and halted in front of the commandant's box, where they were presented to General Collins after which they were moved off the field at the double. After that the fireworks began.

Possibly the prettiest and closest 100 yard dash ever seen on the Post was exhibited when Thompson of the 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry, shaded out Jorris of the Tanks. It was almost a toss-up to decide the winner, yet it could be plainly seen that Thompson breasted the line first, even though it broke across the chests of both men. They were followed in close order by Ramey, 1st Bn., and Blount, 15th Tank Bn., respectively. Their time was 11.0 seconds.

Ramey, 1st Bn., 29th Infantry stretched and groaned out a new Post record for the 220 yd. dash, followed in line by Allison, 2nd. Bn., 29th Infantry; Thompson, 83rd Field Artillery Bn., and Murphy, Special Units, 29th Infantry. This race was not of much interest to the fans, as they practically already knew who would win it. His time was 25.0 seconds.

Thompson, 83rd Field Artillery Bn., led the field for the length of the 440 yard measure. He undoubtedly had the prettiest stride of any of the participants of the whole track entries. At no time did he seem to exert himself to within a shadow of his limit. Even at the finish he was able to pack on a little more speed, even though he was already leading the field by fifteen yards. This boy should not be satisfied with just Post records, for with his ability as a distance runner, he could easily break some other records. Smith, 1st Bn., 29th Infantry, Saunders, 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry and Ates, 15th Tank Bn., took secod, third and fourth respectively. Time 55 3-4 seconds. (Post record).

In the 880 yard run, there waxed quite a bit of excitement, as the entries played at the game of "see-saw" in occupying positions. This is the race that was lost by the man who should have won. This man Orloff from the 15th Tank Bn., ran the hardest race of all the contestants, and led the field at nearly all times, but just about 20 yards from the finish, he became exhausted and fell to the side of the track, with not the ghost of a chance to win. This paved the way for Maitland, 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry to come in with the lead. Delano and Howe of the 1st Bn., 29th Infantry places second and fourth respectively while Smith, J. W., 15th Tank Bn., placed third. Time 2 minutes and 15 seconds.

A new Post record was set for the mile run by Smith, S. A., 15th Tank Bn., when his followers on the track managed to pocket Maitland, 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry, who finished a close second, after having freed himself from the unintentional trap. Howard, Special Units, the Infantry School, placed third, while Winfrey, 83rd Field Artillery Bn., trailed for fourth. Time 4 minutes, 58 seconds.

Carlyon, Haynie, Woodman and Horton, 15th Tank Bn., wo nthe 120 yard high hurdles. While Carylon showed that he had speed to spare, his closest opponent displayed the best hurdling form. Trey placed in the order above named. Time 18.0 seconds. (Post record.)

Woodham displayed speed, form and stamina to win the 220 low hurdles for the 15th Tank Battalion, and received quite an ovation for his splendid run. Lambert, 83rd Field Artillery Bn., came in second, with Haynie, 15th Tank Bn., a close third. Time 29 seconds. (Post record).

Reddock, 1st Bn., 29th Infantry, displaying his ability to do the "monkey twist" over the bar in the pole vault event. At no time did he seem to be anywhere near his limit, clearing the bar by at least six inches at its last position of 10 feet, 6 inches. Smith, S. L., and Siler, 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry, placed second and third, while Williams, 15th Tank Bn., stayed on the ground floor to place fourth.

In the running high jump, a new Post record was set by Record, when he cleared the bar at 5 feet, 5 inches. Phillips, 83rd Field Artillery Bn., placed second; Hill, 15th Tank Bn., third; and Bobo, 1st Bn., 29th Infantry, took the cellar position.

Again Reddock came into the limelight among the jumpers when he leaped 18 feet, 2 7-8 inches to place first in the broad jump. Thompson, 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry was his closest opponent. Durschel, 1st Bn., 29th Infantry, placed third and Armstead stayed in the edge of the sawdust for the fourth position.

In the discus throwing contest, Darmafol flung the cart wheel 105 ft., 9 1-2 inches for a new post record. This little fellow hails from the First Bn., 29th Infantry, but none of his team mates came anywhere near his mark, allowing Smith, T. J., Thomas and Howard, 15th Tank Bn., to take the other three places respectively.

Thomas tossed the javelin 155 feet, 10 inches to win the first position for the 15th Tank Bn., and to also set himself a Post record. Heath and Tharp, 15th Tank Bn., placed second and third while Costello brought up the rear for the 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry.

The judges rolled out a 15 pound shot, and Thomas, 15th Tank Bn., again displayed his muscular ability by "putting" it 37 feet and 1-2 inch. Now they say that he put it, but it looked like heaving. One puts his hands in his pockets, and heaves an anvil, like that. Darmafol, 1st Bn., and Costello, 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry placed second and third. Tharpe, 15th Tank Bn., placed fourth.

In the prettiest relay race ever witnessed by the writer ,and many others, the Second Bn., relay team won the 1 mile relay, with yards to spare. Although had some one of the 2nd Bn., team lost just a second or two, the 1st Bn., would have nosed them out. The Fifteenth Tank Bn., team placed third with the 83rd Field Artillery Battalion trailing the field. Time, 3 minutes, 2 2-5 seconds. (Post record).

The tug-o-war team from the First Battalion, 29th Infantry, coached by Lieutenant Adams, showed that brain is mightier than brawn when they outpulled the Second Battalion team. It may be a tricky way to pull, but it is perfectly legal for the tuggers to switch their holds and throw the other team off their balance. This is just what Lt. Adams

DE PRATT AND WALKER TO MEET

Manhattan Henton	vs.	Phizz Costello	3 Rounds
Raven Poe	vs.	Bronx Hawkins	3 Rounds
Grumpy Gordy	vs.	Corn Griffin	4 Rounds
Babe Asher	vs.	K. O. Henry	6 Rounds
Blondy Parker	vs.	Battling Smith	8 Rounds
Gunner DePratt	vs.	Johnny Walker	10 Rounds

Tuesday, May 7th, Gunner DePratt and Johnny Walker will meet for the second time at the Fort Benning arena featuring a cord which appears, on paper, to be second to none shown this season.

On April 9th last the same pair were booked over the ten round distance in the same ring. Under a heaven that literally wept all through the fight, these two stood toe to toe for ten rounds and socked each other with rain - soaked gloves. The first half of the mill was Walker's by a good mile; he sent left hooks and right crosses at the Gunner's unprotected side boards until the scorer lost all count. While Johnny was playing the tattoo, alternating rights and lefts, DePratt was sending out sleep producing lefts, but his judgment of distance, or rather Walker's clever foot work made the blows lose all their potency on thin air.

Like Ruth along came the fifth round. By this time the fans lost all hope of the Gunner winning. Then out of the mist shot DePratt's famous left. Did he slip, was he pushed, or was he just leaning when that left connected? From that point on DePratt breezed out in front and won going away.

The angle to the coming fight, and the one the cash customers are going to pay to see, is whether that blow landed by DePratt was just a stroke of luck, or whether the luck was all Walker's in keeping away as long as he did. On a dry deck will Walker tie up DePratt's murderous left hook and beat him down with his own lethal assortment of punches? Against this argument or angle, call it what you will, is the untarnished, hard earned coin of the 29th which, speaking from the rooftops, announces to the world in general that any one believing that the cavalryman from Fort Oglethorpe will answer the bell in the eighth round can cash in on his judgment by quietly stipulating the amount he has to throw away.

A sweet little warm up scheduled for eight rounds as a semi-final is on the bill. In this chapter of the evening's entertainment one, Battling Smith, also of the 6th Cavalry, Fort Oglethorpe, is slated to meet the pride of the I. S. D., Blondy Parker. Mr. C. H. Stanley, who looks after the affairs of the Oglethorpe boxers, is on record as stating that Smith is a better prospect than Walker. "All Smith knows," stated Stanley, "is fight. Unless Parker is a world beater he is in line for a little surprise when this rollicking cavalryman lets loose."

K. O. Henry comes back on the next bill with Babe Asher of the 29th. It is true Doubtin' Thomas gave the knocker-out a little lesson in the game, but again the alibi sticks out like a sore thumb—the wet ring slowed up his style. There may be some truth in the statement for in the racing game some stake horses look like selling platers on a wet track.

After a search that took in seventeen counties, an opponent was located for Grumpy Gordy. The youth answers to the name of Corn Griffin, home address, 15th Tank Battalion Area. Corn is under the wings of the world's best absorber and the south's wildest swinger, none other than Cyclone Bull Montondon, cross country runner par excellence. In locating Griffin for Gordy it is reported that Montondon stated that "if he couldn't lick Gordy he would find some one who could." This might be worth watching.

Phizz Costello, the school's model as a bayonet expert, tries the five-ounce game on the coming bill with Manhattan Henton, husky blacksmith from the 83rd Field Artillery. Both tip the beam in the neighborhood of 180. These two are graduates of the recent amateur tournament, possessing real kicks. They have the opening act assigned to them.

Bronx Hawkins after seeing Raven Poe polish off three in a row, arrived at the conclusion that the machine gunner is not so hot. Accordingly when he expressed a desire to stop the upward climb of Poe no time was lost in giving him the chance.

'GINEERS TRIM GINNERS

Sergeant Willard's bunch of husky baseball players made it four in a row when they defeated the Lummus "Ginners," on the Engineer diamond, Saturday, by the score of 8 to 4.

The high lights of the game were home runs by Briner of the Engineers and Blanton of the "Ginners." Briner, Mallory and H. Johnson each pulled double plays unassisted.

Good, the newest addition to Sergeant Willard's hurling staff, started the game for the Bridgebuilders and pitched a good game until the seventh inning when he became too liberal with free passes to first base. Jones, the big boy from Tennessee, came to his relief and held the "Ginners" to two runs for the rest of the game.

Giglio started the game for the "Ginners" but received poor support from his team mates. He was relieved by McFarland, a knuckle ball tosser. McFarland held the Bridgebuilders to two hits and one run for the three remaining innings.

Score by innings:

Lummus	1-0-0-0-0-0-1-2-0—4
Engineers	3-0-0-0-0-4-0-1-0—8

Batteries: Giglio, McFarland and Smith. Good, Jones and Rowe.

BULLDOGS BITE DOUGHBOYS

The Infantry School lacrosse team met and played two games with the University of Georgia Bulldogs, dropping both games after hotly contested battles. The Infantrymen seemed to be lacking in the final punch to score at the right times, but played a brilliant defense.

The superior passing of the Bulldogs and their cat-like flips for the goal enabled them to score seven counters against the Infantry School's lone tally, in the first game. Numerous substitutions were made by both teams, both coaches seeming to try to get a line on just what men were best qualified. The stands became hilarious at times when there seemed to be a bit of comical play, but to the participants, it was anything but that. Mack and Kammerer were the outstanding butterfly chasers for the Infantrymen, while Couch and Strickland showed flashes of brilliant play for the Canines.

Those who saw the second game, were of the opinion that the Infantry team showed marked improvement over the previous day. They opened the attack by fast and accurate passing, and a quick throw to the goal by Veale to score the first counter of the game. Couch playing the position of third attack for the Bulldogs, played an even more brilliant game than the day before. His passing was perfect, and his ability to elude an opponent became uncanny. He paved the way for his team mates to take the game with a count of five and two. Cowan, playing hard for the Infantrymen, broke through in the latter part of the first half and made a hard try for goal, and counted the Infantry's last point.

The team will journey to Atlanta for today and Saturday, where they will play the strong team from Georgia Tech. Tech will come to Fort Benning some time in the near future to return the two games.

TANKERS TAKE TRACK MEET

had his men do. This was the best co-ordinated team that ever showed in this neck of the woods.

At the close of the field and track meet, the commandant presented the medals and trophies to the winners. The commandant stated that at no time or place, or under any circumstances, had he seen a meet of this kind that would measure up to the standards of the meet he had just witnessed.

To each individual placing in the first three positions, a suitable medal was presented, which had a representative sculptured design for the event the medal represented. The first place medals were gold, the second of silver and the third of bronze. All were mounted on blue ribbons.

The winning team, the 15th Tank Battalion, was presented with a large silver trophy. The trophy was in the form of a track man, stretching at the finish of a heated race, which was very representative of the meet held that afternoon.

The winners of the tug-o-war were presented with a shield of silver mounted on wood, and the winner of the 1440 (mile relay) were presented with a small trophy resembling that of the winning team of the meet.

THE STUDENT—(By H. M. G.)

The outstanding shock of the week bore the Olympic title of "Physical Training—The Athletic Officer—Calisthenics and Gymnastics." This Greek comedy was held in the Post Gymnasium on last Monday. You could tell it was comedy as soon as the gladiators made their grand entry. Can you imagine one hundred and fifty of our best people in panties? Then if you have any imagination left concentrate on 140 panties doing skippings, wiggles and—really, one didn't know at times whether one was in Greece, or the streets of Cairo. Some thought the act could have been improved by giving Alger a fiddle and making it a Roman holiday.

Following this number the instructors of the 3d section gave demonstrations of grace, dexterity and nerve on the parallel bars, rings, poles and ropes. The nerve especially was commented upon. Really a great deal is expected of our 3d section, everything in fact, from telling little boys strange stories about sighting bars, to floating through the air on rings.

Speaking of floating through the air on rings, or having that intention, one of our most "invited-out" instructors according to the matrons, eligible bachelor according to flaming youth, and darn good fellow according to the gentry, was giving a demonstration on the rings for the benefit of the class. He really did beautifully up to the half way mark which was the second ring, when the results of too much tomato sauce, bisque, or tartar sauce, caused an abrupt waning of "grace, dexterity and nerve."

These games fashioned after the Grek and Keystone Comedies are held Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays by Capt. Duff, carpenters permitting.

The rest of the week was given over to scouting and patrolling on two continents, A. H. 4, and Riley Ridge by Major Roberts. These hills hadn't seen such patrolling since grandpap stalked the revenue officers. Major Stayer put on an excellent demonstration with his medical evacuation show and Major Sherburne started us all over again with an advance guard. A marked problem and a river crossing got rained on.

DETACHMENT QUARTERMASTER CORPS NEWS

On last Friday evening, April 26, 1929, a smoker was given by the members of the Detachment, Quartermaster Corps, in their dining room. A wonderful program was furnished by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Columbus, Ga., in the persons of "Old Man Sunshine," and "Old Man Jazz." Refreshments were served and everyone had a good time. All the latest hits were rendered in song and piano selections, as well as some of the old favorites. Both of these entertainers are members of the Radio Station WRBL staff. Mr. Jimmie Bishop, commonly known as "Old Man Sunshine," was formerly a member of Al G. Fields' Minstrels, and is, as his name implies, sunshine personified.

Mr. Jimmie Bishop states that he is always glad to come out to Fort Benning to entertain at any time that his services are desired. He was an entertainer overseas during the world war. Mr. White is a master of the ivories, and well earns his title of "Old Man Jazz."

Vol. VII. FORT BENNING, GA., MAY 10, 1929 Number 34

Gen. King in Command

Brigadier General Campbell King, who succeeded Brigadier General Edgar T. Collins as commandant of the Infantry School, arrived at Fort Benning and assumed command Saturday, May 4th. General King was accompanied by his wife and daughter and by Colonel Harry E. Knight, executive officer, who met the general and his family in Atlanta and travelled with them by automobile to Fort Benning.

General King was met upon his arrival at the Upatoie Bridge at 12:50 p. m., by members of the headquarters staff and by an escort of troops from the 29th. Infantry and a firing battery from the 83rd Field Artillery. As the general's car reached the south side of the bridge, Battery C, 83rd Field Artillery, Captain D. L. Crane commanding, fired the prescribed salute.

Members of the staff and other officers who had assembled to greet the new commandant were then presented to General King. Among those who met the general at this time were: Colonel Harris J. Pendleton, Jr., Colonel George C. Shaw, Colonel Daniel G. Berry, Colonel Charles L. Willard, Major Roland M. Hollock, Major Daniel H. Torrey, Major Henry A. Bootz, Major Edward C. Rose and Major Lloyd E Jones.

General King then inspected the escort and the battery. The escort, which comprised the band and a composite company of the 29th Infantry, was commanded by Captain Michael E. Halloran.

The inspection over, General King was escorted to the quarters of Lieutenant Colonel George C. Marshall, assistant commandant, where he was a guest until the commandant's quarters were made ready for his occupancy.

CAPTAIN GOODE HONORED BY RESERVES

Captain Paul R. Goode, assistant plans and training officer of the 29th Infantry, was presented with a saber by the Columbus Reserve Officers Chapter at their annual dinner at Fort Benning Monday evening.

The gift is a token of the reserve officers' appreciation of Captain Goode's active interest in bringing the local reserves into closer contact with the regular service and in promoting a series of instructional conferences which has been conducted at Fort Benning since last September.

Captain Goode has arranged a week-end contact camp which will be held at Harp's Pond Saturday and Sunday for the local reserve officers. Among the several instructional conferences which will be given during the encampment will be "The machine gun company in attack," by Captain A. J. Nichols, 29th Infantry; "The rifle company in attack," by Captain C. M. Ulsaker, 29th Infantry; and "Artillery in attack," by Lieutenant I. L. Foster, 83d Field Artillery.

DRAMATIC CLUB MEETING

Next Tuesday—the 14th—7:30 P. M. at the Officers Club the Dramatic Club will hold a meeting of much import; the election of its officers for the coming season.

It is hoped that all members will be present, all offices have to be filled and it is planned to have enough candidates running so the occasion will take on the aspect of an election in a Texas cow-town. (A law in Texas that all fights are free on election day). Come out and pick your man; and at the same time try to find out all the scandal you can on his opponents; speeches will be made in which such information will fit nicely. You must know by now that when a person runs for office in these United States that his past, insofar as his foot-slips are concerned, becomes good first-page stuff. If he, by chance, happened to exist before Volstead, he is certain to be placed on the ballot as a Wet or a Dry. This has absolutely nothing to do with his chances of being elected, but it does give us all something to argue over. Who wants an election without argument?

FORMER MEMBER I. S. D. DEAD

We learn from the columns of the Tientsin, China, Sentinel, of the death of Don R. Gaston, Service Company, 15th U. S. Infantry, on April 3rd, last. He was formerly a member of the Infantry School Detachment, and while here, held the grade of Master Sergeant, serving in the capacity of Personnel Sergeant Major of Fort Benning. He was well known and highly esteemed by many friends here, who extend sincere sympathy to the friends and relatives of the deceased.

HOSPITAL HONORS FORMER SURGEONS

In tribute to the memory of three former surgeons of the Fort Benning Station Hospital, three wards have been named in their honor.

Ward A has been renamed Ward Conrad E. Koerper, in honor of the 1st Lt. Col. Conrad E. Koerper.

Ward B will be known as Ward James W. Van Dusen and Ward C will be known as Ward Colonel Frank C. Baker.

Big List of Entries for Next Week's Exhibition

With a list of entries exceeding last year's record, all is in readiness for the Infantry School's seventh annual transportation and horse show which opens Monday afternoon and which promises to excell in splendor and spectacularity any similar event ever held at Fort Benning.

The winner of each event will receive a handsome trophy and the usual ribbons will be awarded for places in the events. The collection of trophies will be on exhibition at the Garrison Theatre Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

24th INF. NOTES

Captain Edward Walker belongs to the regiment, and having been Manchued from the Officers Club, he reported to the 24th for duty.

Record pistol firing was in progress on the pistol range. Promptly, and with dispatch, Eddie was placed in charge of it. Things ran along very smoothly indeed, and the firing was nearing its end when three officers, who had not yet finished, appeared on the range and asked Captain Walker if they might finish their record cards which he had in his possession. He assigned two of the officers to targets, telling them the particular scores to be fired, then turning to the other officer he said: "Your name is—."

"Saulnier, Sir," quoth the officer, "Stanley G."

"All right, Captain Saulnier, you may fire rapid fire on target number six, shoot at the bulls-eye, off to the right you will see a bobbing target, pay no attention to it, we will fire at it later in the day—firing one shot at a time." Captain Walker continued:

"Here is a magazine loaded with five cartridges, insert it in your pistol and when I give the command, fire five shots in fifteen seconds on the target, trying, of course to hit the bulls-eye with each shot."

Captain Saulnier loaded his pistol, took his stance on the fifteen yard firing point, and awaited the command.

"Ready," cautioned Eddie, "commence firing!"

Carefully the powerful automatic was brought down and aligned on the target; aligned as only a trained soldier could align it. Five times she hurled her 200 grain missile through the target and into Captain Wilson's bullet-stop behind, and her last timed roar blended with Walker's "cease firing, unload."

"Let's walk down and see what you did," said Eddie.

It was plain to be seen that there were no hits on the target, a careful search revealed not a one, and when Captain Walker turned pained and questioning eyes on Captain Saulnier that officer admitted that he believed he had fired on the bobbing target after all. He had. He hit it too—five times. Captain Walker looked at the bobber over and said; "The only mistake you made, Captain, is that you fired rapid fire on a slow fire target, which happened to be the wrong target too, and," he continued gently, "you only shoot one shot at a time on the bobbing target, and when you turn and shoot at an angle like that you endanger shooters on the same firing line with you."

No attempt was made to explain this peculiar incident, and we do not offer any. This is one of those painful happenings which we like to keep covered up, a family skeleton so to speak, so we have decided to say nothing about it outside the regiment.

GOLF GOSSIP

Our annual golf classic, the ladies' post championship of Fort Benning, Ga., brought out a very creditable field of 40 entries, and in spite of the unfavorable weather conditions during qualifying rounds the enthusiasm shown was most gratifying.

Mr. R. T. Foster, of Dinglewood, Columbus, a student officer's wife, took medalist honors with a 92, Mrs. Wm. F. Donegan and Mrs. H. W. Brimmer following closely with a 94 and a 97, respectively. In justice to the majority of our lady golfers it must be admitted, however, that the previous tournament experience of the above mentioned ladies gives them a distinct advantage in events of this nature.

The last week-end tournament for gentlemen was a club handicap bogey event, a total of 83 entries signing up, the largest number to date.

The following named ladies placed in the championship flight, in the order shown: Mrs. R. T. Foster, Mrs. W. E. Donegan, Mrs. H. W. Brimmer, Mrs. V. G. Huskea, Mrs. W. G. Livesay, Mrs. J. E. Dahlquist, Mrs. H. R. Bull, Mrs. T. F. Wessels.

The Gormandizers, one of the garrison family golf clubs, who conduct a bi-monthly battle over the Benning links, had a delightful picnic supper at the conclusion of their last Sunday's game, and judging from the way most of them wielded their eating implements during this phase of their battle, it would seem that "Guerra el Cuchillo"—the knife of the table variety—is their motto. Colonel Goodrich, one of the members, is reported as willing to loose the caddy fee if Mrs. E. E. Lewis will continue contributing the "macaroni a la Lombardi," Mrs. Walter T. Scott her famous cake specialties and Mrs. V. G. Huskea her own kind of strawberry ice cream.

In the match-play eliminations, following the qualifying rounds of the ladies' post championship golf tournament, the following battled their way through the first rounds of the championship flight: Mrs. Foster won 6 up and 5 to go over Mrs. Dahlquist, Mrs. Brimmer was 3 up and 2 to go over Mrs. Bull, Mrs. Huskea won a 2 and 1 battle over Mrs. Wessels, the latter a veteran tournament player, and Mrs. Donegan scored a 6 up and 4 to go victory over Mrs. Livesay. Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Donegan and Mrs. Brimmer are the outstanding favorites, and while this is the first championship effort for Mrs. Huskea, her admirable "Irish fighting-spirit" and no mean ability as a golfer will give her more than a "fighting chance" to battle through to the semi-finals. In the next round of this flight Mrs. Foster will pit her long tournament experience and courage against the powerful drives and equally splendid play of Mrs. Brimmer, while in the second bracket Mrs. Donegan, who has already established championship records on the Pacific coast and in the northwest, will meet Mrs. Huskea's fighting spirit, an admirable factor in any competitive event.

In the Commandant's (2nd) flight Mrs. Ryder fought a very interesting battle with Mrs. Shamotulski to win 1 up in the upper bracket, while in the lower one Mrs. Archer vanquished her

FRIDAY MAY 10

"JAZZ MAD," starring Jean Hersholt with Marion Nixon and George Lewis. It is one of love beats and heart pangs, and throbs with gripping, tearful, laughing moments. The story revolves around a talented old musician who, failing to sell his beautiful symphony, descends to play in a comedy jazz orchestra to earn a living. His daughter arranges to have his composition played by one of New York's famous orchestras; this revives his spirits and helps win back his former prestige as well as gain his daughter's happiness. Dazzling, jazzling lights and shadows of vaudeville and night club life are vividly portrayed. The story contains none of the murder elements of many of our heavy melodramas, but it does depict near tragedy in light-hearted jazz surroundings.

"Cure or Kill." Fables

"Pathe News No. 37."

SATURDAY MAY 11

"DESERT RIDERS," starring Tim McCoy with Raquel Torres and Bert Roach in a filmization of the novel by Ted Shane and Milton Bren. It is a story of brain and brawn laid in the great wastes where only manly men and strong women survive. In this story Tim McCoy plays the part of the hero, Raquel Torres, that of the heroine, and Bert Roach, the villain leader. It is a tale of rousing action from start to finish.

"Feed 'Em and Weep." Roach Stars.

SUNDAY MAY 12

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE," starring Jean Hersholt with Nancy Carroll and Charles Rogers in one continuous round of hilarity. This film adaptation of the well known stage play by the same name is considered even more comical than the original. It is a most clever, humorous handling of the problem of racial prejudice which does not hurt the feelings of either race, but imbues the audience with pleasant refreshed feelings. A description of this play would be ambiguous; sufficient to say that it portrays in a most human manner the characteristics of the Celtic and Hebrew races. It will cause tears to flow, but they will be the result of laughter.

MONDAY MAY 13

"HONEY," starring Polly Moran with Harry Gribbon, Bert Roach and Flash, in a hilarious maze of martial mix-ups. Consider all the comical situations which could befall a bride and groom, multiply them by four and add a dog and the answer will be this picture. Trouble forms the ludicrous plot which begins when a jilted lover presents the bride with a pet which had been instructed not to let any man come near the girl. The dog attends the ceremony much to the chagrin of the groom and guests. Imagine being newly married and prohibited from kissing your bride and you have one of the many unfortunate predicaments that occur throughout the story. It is just one laugh after the other.

"The Mystery Rider No. 3."

TUESDAY MAY 14

"STATE STREET SADIE," featuring Conrad Nagel with Myrna Loy in a mystery story possessing many hair-raising scenes. The picture has to do with the pursuit of the murderer of a policeman in which the slain cop's daughter, Sadie, turns sleuth. She is in "cahoot" with a handsome stranger whom she loves while doubting his sincerity. Each believes the other to be crooked until unexpected happenings proves their mutual reliability. It is the type of crook play that sets the blood tingling, and is a living commentary on the fact that no crook can long escape payment to society for the crimes he has committed against it.

"South Sea Sagas." Sport.

WEDNESDAY MAY 15

"HARD BOILED," starring Sally O'Neill in a crackling dramatization of the modern show girl beset by the pitfalls of the show world on blazing, daring Broadway. A scheming little follies chorine satisfies her ambition to marry for money. The manner in which she actually falls in love with the millionaire play boy whom she has captured through sheer cupidity, makes one of the most delightful of evening entertainments. You'll see the hard, callous, merciless, steppers of the chorus, the millionaires who fondle, fool and forget 'em, and the pleasures as well as the hardships endured by both classes.

"M. G. M. News No. 76."

THURSDAY MAY 16

"THE AWAKENING," starring Vilma Banky in a tremendously moving human story. The plot is laid in Alsace during the peaceful days just before the war and the strife-torn period following. It depicts in a most human manner the conflict of emotion between a lovely peasan girl and a dashing German officer. The plot is very similar to the one contained in that absorbing picture, "The Red Dance," but is adapted to the Alsatians instead of the Russians. The German officer comes to a quiet village and accosts the village belle with whom he starts a flirtation—her lover becomes enraged, and village gossips start talking. The girl is ostracized and persecuted on account of her relations with the officer. Though her conduct has been above reproach, slander hounds her. The plot thickens to a tremendous climax which unwinds itself in the course of bloody hostilities.

"THE AWAKENING"

"Election Day." Our Gang.

FRIDAY MAY 17

"THE QUITTER," featuring Ben Lyon with Dorothy Revier and Fred Kohlen in a powerful and thrilling drama of a youth's regeneration through love. The story concerns a doctor who is in an auto accident with his mother. The mother is seriously injured. In an effort to save her life he must perform an operation but faints during the preparations and the mother dies. The physician leaves in disgrace and falls lower and lower. He hangs around a race track. While there he offers valuable advice and gains some respect, a girl becomes interested in him—her lover is jealous and is in the act of shooting him when the girl shoots the lover—the doctor performs a serious operation saving the lover's life, thereby regaining his honor. This drama contains many exciting incidents such as a thrilling horse race, a wild night in a cafe, and a severe auto accident.

Unique Reception for General and Mrs. King

In a beautiful natural amphitheatre near the water tanks the officers and ladies of Fort Benning gathered on Wednesday afternoon to greet General and Mrs. Campbell King and Miss Barbara King and extend to them a most cordial welcome to their new home. Sections for spectators were taped off and cushions were placed on the grass so all could be comfortably seated.

The General and his party were seated on a reviewing stand where they saw the various activities which are characteristic of the life of this command, pass in review. The 29th Infantry band was placed on the hillside and played a prominent part in the afternoon's program, rendering selections especially appropriate for each event in the pageant. A very excellent master of ceremonies spoke into a microphone from some secluded dell and the amplifiers brought to the thousand on the hillside every syllable of his clever speech. He most cordially welcomed General King and his family to the post which he said nature had done much more for than either the War Department or Congress.

He spoke of the genial climate which invites out-of-door work and play the year round and thought it fitting that in the great "out-of-doors" the new commandant should get his first acquaintance with the activities that characterize the off-duty life of his command.

He then introduced Col. Harry E. Wells and his golf players. From beyond a ravine appeared men and women in sporty golf togs—at least one hundred to represent the four hundred who play golf on our 18 hole course. Col. Wells apologized for not having a fuller representation, saying some of his regular devotees of the ancient game "had gone to the dogs and would later appear with the hounds." He introduced a few of his official helpers in managing the golf affairs of the garrison and mentioned the fast that since Mrs. E. E. Lewis had made a "hole in one" Maj. Lewis had become the "Mr. Gann" of Ft. Benning. He spoke of golf as one of the chief recreational and social features of the life here, and invited the General and his family to join them on the links.

Maj. Truman Smith next presented his tennis players to the General saying that much progress had this year been made in facilities for this excellent sport and recognizing in Gen. King a fellow-player led us to expect a big "racket" to be raised in Bennings "younger" sport.

From an adjacent hillside as the band played "School Days" came trooping a band of school children—a few of the 800 children that belong to our post, and little Miss Louise Ryder presented them to the General inviting him to come again to see them at school. He has already shown his interest by visiting them. Little Anne Chunn presented Mrs. King with an armful of flowers, whereupon the General gave her a kiss.

The "Voice of Ft. Benning" then announced the polo players—that sport which recognizes no peer. He spoke of our players as loved and admired at home and feared and respected abroad. Bursting from the wooded hillside came Maj. Charles B. Lyman and his polo players on spirited ponies who dashed and circled, each team in its line through the woods, assembling before the reviewing stand where Maj. Lyman presented the various teams clad in their representatve red and yellow and blue jackets.

In quick succession came Major H. M. J. Smith and his riders. The "Voice" had said that "the best way to see Fort Benning was from the hurricane deck of a horse" and when 150 gallant riders exhibited their skill coming down the steep hillside, crossing the ravine, following their leader as he dashed along an invisible bridle path, one was convinced that many were of his opinion. Maj. Smith appropriately presented his equestrians, bespeaking the eminent place they occupy in the sporting life of the community and cordially invited the commandant and his family to join in this exhilarating sport.

A different type of music resounded through the trees—and voices singing "O, a'hunting we will go," while from the deep woods dashed a pack of baying fox hounds followed by hunters in scarlet coats. These were presented by Capt. Dan Mallan who reviewed the various types of hunting done here, the pack and the long favorable hunting season—a joy to our many nimrods.

Merriment rang through the trees as "the voice " spoke of plans having been perfected to bring a sample of junior officers quarters from Block 16 as typical of the home life of many at this post but the shack collapsed before they could load it, and as the quartermaster had no funds for repairs available, they would have to defer this exhibition till it had been assigned to another officer and adequately repaired by him.

Capt. Paul E. Peabody preented his fellow Thespians of the Dramatic Club in a take off of a Sunday morning hunt—proving to all spectators that there is more than one way to be "horsey."

Capt. Lewis C. Beebe, president of the Glee Club gave in brief the history and accomplishments of this group and presented his singers in two tuneful choruses from "The Mikado."

Last came the 24th Infantry band and a group of singers from their regiment who sang "Everybody talkin' 'bout Heaben ain't goin' there," "These bones gwin a rise agin" and "Shine on me."

General King then responded very graciously, expressing his appreciation for the kindly thought, that had prompted, and the skill and cooperation that had made possible the demonstration, the wealth and magnitude of which he said were overcoming. He recognized it as an indication of the morale and spirit for which he said Fort Benning is famous and assured us of his support in full measure.

Then at twilight came, the thrilling martial music of "The Star-Spangled Banner." And as every man, woman and child stood at attention no other sound was audible throughout the woodland.

After the program punch and cakes were served and friends exchanged greetings before motoring home.

Honoring Miss Alice Torrey, whose marriage to Lt. W. B. Griffith, Jr., will be a beautiful event of early June, Misses Harriette Wells and Sue Brandt were joint hostesses at a bridge party and miscellaneous shower at Miss Wells' home on Tuesday afternoon. Yellow flowers were attractively used throughout the house for decoration. There were five tables of progressive bridge, Miss Helen Young winning first prize, a double deck of cards, Mrs. Malcolm R. Kammerer second, a set of Vogue Tallies and score pad, and Miss Torrey, the consolation. At the conclusion of the game a dainty ice course was served. After the refreshments the hostesses brought a tray laden with gifts and presented it to the lovely bride-to-be.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Leigh Bell entertained at one of the prettiest bridge parties of the month, Gay spring flowers were used effectively in the living room where cards were played. The tea table was particularly lovely The long table was overlaid with a handsome tea cloth and had for its central decoration a lovely silver bowl filled with pale pink and white flowers. At each end of the table was placed an antique silver candelebra holding five green candles. Asparagus fern was daintily used around each candelebra and the center bowl. There were four tables of progressive bridge and Mrs. Jerome Harris won first prize, Mrs. J. E. Bechtold second and Mrs. George E. Fingarson the consolation.

Garden flowers were used in artistic profusion to decorate the cabin, but yellow was the individual color note of the long prettily appointed table at which the guests were seated. WHY NOT?

This is addressed to the soldier who habitually rushes away from the garrison to spend whatever spare time or money that he may have on hand.

It is natural for one to seek diversion in surroundings other than those in which he spends his working hours. The young soldier does not differ greatly from other young men. When his day's work is over, he wants amusement, and so he rushes headlong to the city in search of it, overlooking the fact that most of the very forms of entertainment which he desires are available to him right here in his own garrison at no cost at all or at prices within his modest means.

Here there are theaters with a variety of attractions equal in every way to the programs of theaters elsewhere, and at a fraction of the cost. Why not see the best shows here?

Here there are restaurants which cater, at reasonable prices, to the ever-present appetite of the American soldier, which, apparently, can be appeased only by frequent and copious quantities of food, in addition to the three square meals furnished every day by Uncle Sam. Here he is assured of wholesome food, prepared under hygeinic conditions by cleanly people who understand soldier chow. This is seldom the case in the restaurants which the soldier can afford to patronize elsewhere. Why not eat all your meals on the post?

The urge for change is in most of us and even the little trip to the city satisfies to some degree this nomadic desire. Why not take a big trip while you are about it? Go to one of the post libraries and take a trip with Shackelton or Byrd to the antarctic regions or to the north polar regions with Peary, Franklin, Greely, Amundsen or a dozen others. Go to Africa with Livingstone and Stanley; to Tibet with Younghusband; to the South Sea Islands with O'Brien; or to our own Philippine Islands with Funston, Forbes or Worcester. Or choose your own travelling companions for a journey by land, sea, or air to the most distant lands. Why not travel? It will cost you nothing, this way.

If you prefer adventure, you can enjoy the campaigns of any army you may choose; you can stalk wild beasts or you can get the thrill of the man-hunt.

Look around and see how many attractions you have right here on your own post that are superior to most of those within the soldier's means elsewhere.

Why not spend more of your spare time on the post? Try it for a month or two and see how much you have gained physically, mentally and financially. Why not?

"PIGS"

There are many kinds of pigs, even though Ellis Parker Butler says: "Pigs is Pigs." There are fat pigs and lean pigs, wild pigs and tame pigs, little ones and big ones, short ones and tall ones; there are even two-legged pigs.

"Pigs" will be formally introduced to the best people of Fort Benning tonight and tomorrow night.

"Pigs", which will be seen on the stage of the Garrison Theater, is the last of a series of plays with which the Fort Benning Dramatic Club is closing a very successful season. With the cream of the club's histrionic talent in the cast and its ablest director in charge of the play, the final presentation promises to eclipse all past performances of the amateur artists.

Even if one is not fond of pigs he will be sure to enjoy "Pigs" as presented by the talented artists of the Fort Benning Dramatic Club.

COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

GROCERIES AND—

HERE and there, the area of Columbus outside the business district is dotted with tiny trade centers which seem to appear at random in the most unexpected places. A little grocery store, sometimes flanked by two or three other small business enterprises and sometimes standing alone, usually is the center of the miniature commercial quarter.

More often than not, the little store and its fellows are housed in aged, unpainted wooden buildings of the crudest architectural design, and to the casual observer there is little in outer appearance to distinguish one from the other. Frequently, too, one sees such a store located in a neighborhood which does not seem to promise a lucrative return for the most modest of business enterprises and one wonders what keeps it going.

Many of these little places, I have found in my peregrinations about town, are, in reality, dual establishments, with the grocery as a coordinate, and sometimes a subordinate, activity. This latter may have been the usual case in the ante-Volstead period, for nearly all of these places have a room or two in the rear of what is now the salesroom, which may have been used as a secluded taproom before the Great Drought. Traces of fixtures and arrangements suitable for such uses may be seen occasionally from the front rooms of some of these places.

Now most of these back rooms, perhaps all of them, have been converted to other uses; many of them are used as living quarters for the proprietors and their families; some are used as workshops for whatever activity is conducted in conjunction with the grocery; and some are used for both purposes.

Just a few blocks north of the business district, I came across one of these quaint little stores the other day. It is in a one-story, weather-beaten building whose unpainted walls are spangled with a galaxy of advertisements which probably serve to cover many a crack and hole. I went up the steps which lead from the earthen sidewalk into the store.

To the left of the door was a glass show case containing a display of miscellaneous small wares and stale candies. On the right were barrels and shelves and piles of boxes and bags. At the rear was a counter serving as a shelf and catchall. Through a doorway near the end of the counter, I could see into the room beyond. Three beds, a washstand, a stove, a table, and a brick fireplace, were visible from where I stood. Two women were sitting before the fireplace engaged in some kind of work.

A mild mannered little man, wearing a heavy-old fashioned gold chain across his vest, asks if he can do something for me. Before I have time to reply, a woman emerges from somewhere in the back. She is middle-aged, slightly built, and is dressed in a long, faded blue calico dress which brushes the floor. Her straight black hair, drawn tightly back from her forehead, accentuates the thin lines of her face; her lips are tightly compressed, her eyes, bright and shrewd, and it seems to me, somewhat flinty, peer through gold-rimmed spectacles. She asks me primly what I want.

"Why, er—a package of chewing gum," I reply hastily.

"Is that all?" she asks as she takes my money. I assure her that it is for the present and she turns quickly to another customer who has just come in.

The meek little man with the big watch chain is standing near and notices my interest as I watch the two women in the back room bending to their task which seems to have something to do with a couple of chairs.

"They're making cane bottoms for those chairs," he says, "want to see how it's done?"

"Yes, I should like to," I reply. We go into the room where the women are working. Long fine strips of cane, which are attached to the chairs, wave and thrash about as the women's nimble fingers cross them over and under and between other strips. Their hands move in quick accurate little movements and the cane steadily bridges the gap between the frames of the chair seats with a series of little octagons joined together in a lace-like design.

"Pretty good, ain't they," the man asks. I agree that they are and remark that this is the first hand weaving I have seen since leaving the Orient. I ask where they learned the art.

"Our father learned it to us. He done it for fifty years right here in this store before he died," the man replies, "I used to be pretty good at it too, but I can't see well enough to do the fine work any more."

He shows me the long strips of cane which lie in hanks or coils on the counter in the front room. There is quite a large amount of it and I am told that all three of the women, sometimes assisted by the man, work at the weaving which is more profitable than the grocery business which they inherited from their father.

"When he died, he left the store to me and my three sisters," he says, as he accompanies me to the sidewalk. "The youngest, that one you see in the store, is the boss. She's a good business man, too. Nobody can get ahead of her. She tends to all the business. I don't have to bother about it at all. She wouldn't let me if I wanted to." The mild little man sighs. "Sometimes she's a little sharp, though I guess she means well," he confides.

He twiddles his watch chain nervously. "Sometimes it's the very devil to get along with the three of them. They don't give a man his place." He glances over his shoulder and then leans toward me and whispers: "Sometimes I think I'll run out, but then I change my mind 'cause she runs the business and I don't have anything to worry about. Excepting how to get along with those three women. I ain't figured that out yet although I've been trying for thirty years."

"Women sure are the devil," he remarks sadly; and I go away with a profound sympathy for the meek little subject of the petticoat autocracy.

A SOLDIER'S LETTER

Soldier! Don't forget to write to the mother whose son belongs to the finest army in the world.

Sunday, May 12, has been designated Mother's Day as a reminder of the tender duty that every soldier owes to his mother.

Write to her on Mother's Day and let that letter be followed by others at frequent intervals.

She's proud of you, soldier. Don't neglect her!

THE DRAMATIC CLUB

Mrs. Shirley Hurt, who plays Mildred Cushing in "Pigs."

A Gala Performance

The memorable performance of the "Mikado", as the final and conspicuously successful presentation of the Glee Club, has set a standard of artistic finish which will be hard to equal—nevertheless, the final presentation of the Dramatic Club, at the close of a brilliant season, has every promise of becoming an equally outstanding tour-de-force; a peak-performance which will long be remembered.

As one reflects upon the limited technical means available to the artistic clubs of Ft. Benning, the many demands made upon the personnel—it is astonishing, and extremely creditable, how finished the dramatic performances have been in the current repertoire and how painstaking and devoted the efforts of the players! Heretofore, the club has offered a series of one-act plays, very wisely, as a sort of varied menu. On this last evening, however, a three-act comedy will be shown—an ambitious project, indeed, but with every guaranty of becoming a gala performance of highest merit.

The play "Pigs", by Anne Morrison and Patterson McNutt, has had a very successful run of months in New York City. The plot is rather moth-eaten and might have been a standard story for the Saturday Evening Post—the mortgage on the old homestead—Yes! Yes!—the last minute arrival of the money to stave off foreclosure—it is all there; venerable hokum—but the characters are alive, etched with a devastating clearness and a keen eye for the foibles of the great American Home—delight and despair of Mr. Mencken and all the other renegades.

The Play

Mrs. R. L. Chance
Directress

Mr. Atkins, a small-town lawyer, none too successful—success of the American variety meaning money—maintains a most respectable home. His wife is delightfully old fashioned and most devoted; a perfect mother; an altogether lovable person; a type which, alas, is rapidly vanishing. Of course, they have children—two boys, which is quite conservative. As in all impecunious families, one boy has gone to college while the other is probably at manual high, doing something more useful, preparing to become a self-made man and, some day, getting interviewed by the American Magazine. A couple like the Atkins—slightly crushed and brow-beaten—always have some parasite foisted upon them—le voila!—a mother-in-law and her apple-of-the-eye, son Hector! A maligner, a loafer, a pool-hall devotee, an incubus, a cad—and amorous! Imagine an amorous loafer, with affairs—successful affairs? Rather—

Enters the heroine! Mildred Cushing—resourceful, insolent, pert, human; a delightful flapper but already showing qualities of domestic domination which will make her a formidable wife. She is in love with Tommy Atkins, the Cinderella, who hasn't gone to college, but seems to have a penchant to become a veterinary; at least, he has a patient way with animals and seems to be able to cure them successfully. There are some pigs around slightly tinged with cholera, or mumps, or the hoof-and-mouth disease—anyway, something appropriate to pigs. Junior wants to buy them, a bargain at $250.00. But where to get the money? Poor sacrificing mother is willing to pawn her wedding diamonds. Mildred, with masterful decision, operates a successful attempt at blackmail, directed against Lenore, a girl affianced to the other Atkins boy. Mildred seems to have caught them at something or other? Mildred, you know, has a nose for little, embarrassing secrets like that. She is wise to that sly bird Hector, you bet! Behind all this excitement looms the shadow of the mortgage. Shall I continue to tell you? Professional ethics prevent me from divulging details. You must come and see "Pigs", at the Main Theatre, Fort Benning. At half past eight o'clock, on two successive nights, Friday, May 10th and Saturday, May 11th. Tickets for sale at the same old stand, you know—50 and 75 centavos, at the Post Exchange, the Clubs and at Humes in the city.

Mme. S. R. Hurt is playing a stellar role, as Mildred Cushing, with great charm and vivacity. Mme. R. F. Chance is directing the play—a wonderful combination, you say? You bet they are. And let me tell you, Lt. Le Grande A. Diller, who shares honors with the delicious Mildred, gives a finely shaded performance. Behind them is a very clever cast of very clever people. Mme. J. K. Rice is delightful as Lenore Hastings. Mme. Frank Green, as Ellen Atkins, and Mme. M. E. Halloran as Grandma Spencer, show fine character acting.

PURE WATER

Water is a prime necessily of life, an essential article of diet. As it comes in contact in nature with many surfaces and many substances, it is particularly liable to contain impurities. Pure water is a chemical curiosity and does not exist in nature. Public opiinon has now advanced to such a stage that people demand safe water for drinking purposes. Nearly all cities in this country have now provided it for their inhabitants, some supplies of course being better than others. The water at Fort Benning from the post supply is safe, as is also that of the city of Columbus. The dangers mentioned below are those incident to unguarded water sources, particularly in rural or out of the way communities. Those who are going on leave to such places should be on their guard.

Water should be without color, taste or odor. It may be derived from several sources: (1) Rain, being kept in cisterns until used; (2) surface water, from rivers or smaller streams, being used raw or filtered; (3) springs or wells, which tap the ground water. Each source is liable to its own dangers. Cisterns are satisfactory if kept clean and water tight so that the ground water, which may be pollued, may be kept out. Rivers and streams are particularly subject to contamination by body wastes. No stream that flows through an inhabited area may be considered safe without the use of some method of purification. Lakes and ponds are a source of safe water only if they are protected from impurities. Wells and springs afford good water if the ground water is free from contamination, not otherwise. There is a popular misapprehension that spring water is always safe. In more than one city people purchase bottles of some well known spring water for table use thinking it safer than the tap water, when ordinarily just the reverse is true. Mineral springs and wells are no exception to this rule. Rivers do not necessarily purify themselves every seven miles as often stated. Wells and springs are particularly liable to be infected in limestone soil, as impurities may be carried for comparatively long distances through cracks and crevices in the rocks. When in doubt, boil the water. This is a simple process that may prevent serious outbreaks of disease. The flat taste of boiled water is due to the air having been driven out. By shaking boiled water in an open vessel the air (and taste) may be restored.

The diseases that may be transmitted by polluted water include: typhoid fever, cholera, dysentery, and hookworm disease. Some of these will be discussed in later articles.

CHILDREN'S DANCING CLASS

The children's dancing class, conducted by Miss Daisy Reed, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Walter L. Reed, 29th Infantry, comprised thirty-six children of various ages. The classes were held in the Polo Club, twelve lessons being given through the winter months. The costumes in the last dance were very attractive, portraying nursery characters with whom all children are familiar. Miss Reed, who can be seen near the center of the picture in the back row, expects to conduct a similar class next winter.

THAT BUSHY TREE

We went out on the range one day,
The sergeant said, "Now 'follow me';
The target is out to your front
—That bushy tree."

We fired at another range
And other targets you could see,
But ever was the reference point
—That bushy tree.

In combat drill, with quadrant sight
Whatever might the problem be
Our universal aiming point
—That bushy tree.

Oh when I leave this busy earth
From up on high I'll watch with glee
While other soldiers shoot to hit
—That bushy tree.

Headquarters Company

Pvt. Martin snared a thirty-day furlough and took off for North Carolina, arrayed like Solomon, to give the natives a treat. Great are the moans of the shop girls in Columbus, for with Martin gone, they have lost their greatest benefactor. Their only consolation is the fact that he is spreading his ray of sunshine around the backwoods of the Old North State.

Pvt. Marler entertined a few of his friends with excerpts from his fan mail, some languishing maiden in Mississippi. He was going over strong until some one noticed that his letter was dated November, 1928. One letter from her in seven months, but the effect lingers on, like tequila, just read the letter again, and all the old pash flares up. Whoops!

And speaking of tough luck, our new barber arrived at two o'clock, and work was rushing because of the inspection. At six he started to turn the water off, and the faucet broke, cutting an artery in the palm of his hand. The recruit, remembering his Boy Scout training, immediately made a tourniquet from his handkerchief and Cpl. Funk rushed him to the hospital. (This was one time when no fear was felt regarding those staunch upholders of law and order, the M. P.'s) At the hospital it was necessary to take three stitches in the wound.

Howitzer Company

Ordinarily Thanksgiving Day comes but once a year and then in November. However, several of us are going to celebrate Thanksgiving when this equitation is over and we hope it won't be long either.

Flo Zeigfield missed something when he failed to look up this organization. Our 1st Sergeant (James P. Johnston) was able to fill an order for six real good-looking men to act as ushers for the horse show. If we can find six more as "good looking" as the first six we'll start a beauty chorus that will knock them cold.

The "Back Home Movement" has started again. Pfc. Maurer, Pfc. Mazzal, Pfc. Lydick and Pvt. Waldrop were discharged this week and so far not one of the group has raised his hand and reached for the "six bits" yet. The only explanation we can offer for such a record is that due to the recent rains, the prospects for a bumper blackberry crop are good.

Pvt. Corey is back from a much enjoyed furlough and has ambition toward becoming a flying cadet. Some how or other flight sergeons are hard-hearted for seemingly no reason at all, however, we wish you the best of luck, Corey.

Company "A"

Our baseball team is working hard. We are now ready to toss our hat into the ring for games with any other team in the post.

We have three contestants in the final tryouts for the Infantry Rifle team. Sgt. Hamscher made the squad last year and again this year. Cpl. Dawson and Sgt. Beck also have been doing some very good shooting and are going to push some of the other men that are trying out.

"A" Company had the honor of escorting General Collins out of the post on May 1st.

Company "B"

We expect our First Sergeant, John D. Brown, to be with us again soon. His family is rapidly recovering from scarlet fever, with no signs of dangerous complications. Sgt. Brown has promised us that he will be back in the company for duty Monday morning.

The company baseball team played the 7th Engineers Monday afternoon, to the sorrow of the Engineers, the final score being 9 to 4.

Private Brookshire has discovered a new method of beating his way through the army. He joined the drum corps.

Company "C"

The Company baseball team is going strong, although they have only three afternoons each week for practice. They are developing a wonderful infield with "Frog" d'Entremont at first, "Dusty" Rhodes at second, "Ike" Isaacson at third and "Gorilla" Labuzan at shortstop. "Big" Rhodes is at the receiving end and is doing fine although he has had only a few afternoons practice behind the bat. "Stumpy" Foster, Ray, better known as "Don Trent," and "Lefty" Navarre patrol the outfield. M. W. Smith, "Lefty" Navarre and "Spur" Stephens, take turns at the mound. The latter returned from furlough Sunday and is due for the mound in the next game. The infield is credited with three double plays in yesterday's game of seven innings. Labuzon to Rhodes to d'Entremont.

Company "E"

Any one desiring a haircut see Pvt. Snell our assistant hair butcher. He can cut your hair with a knife and fork and guarantee that you will be conscious all the time he is working. He says he can give you any kind of a trim you want, with your hat on or off; makes no difference.

Sgt. New, Cpl. Clay, and Pvt. Hawkins are still blazing away on the Infantry rifle team and are making high scores. Keep up the good work boys.

Our supply sergeant, Frank Hinds, sure is looking bad these days—looks like someone would recommend some tablets for him.

Company "E" was again called to furnish one of their crack platoons for the purpose of firing a salute over the Confederate soldiers' graves in Columbus. Lt. Vinson was commanding the platoon and Sgt. Dalby was platoon sergeant. The firing squad attracted much attention, especially among the youngsters who were grabbing the empty cartridges as they fell. —I. M. Y.

Company "G"

The recruit instructor in the company told the recruits if the commanding officer of the company or any other officers asked them their name to come right out with a snap and say "Private so and so." A platoon leader asked one of the recruits what his name was and the John came out with it. "Private so and so, sir." The lieutenant asked him if that was his name and the recruit replied, "No, sir, the corporal told me to say that." "Oh, I see," said the lieutenant.

Corporal Hodges has returned from furlough and only has about a week to do. He is going back to civilian life again. Well, we are sorry to lose a fine corporal like you, we would like to have you stay with us, but mother knows best.

Pvt. Deloach was put on a job painting around the company and Deloach asked Higgins where they got the paint from. Higgins told him it came from the Q. M. C. Then a few minutes later Deloach was seen going to the Q. M. C. paint shop.

Cook Johnnie Gouldman is a short timer, but Johnnie likes his uncle and is going to stick around.

Company "H"

Everybody is digging their khaki and bathing suits from under the moth-balls and getting them in shape, for it can't be long until old Sol's rays of sunshine concentrate on Fort Benning.

Something new is being encountered in river crossing. It will be quite a novelty when the boys get back home and can shoot a pontoon bridge across the creek and take the cows to pasture.

Cpl. Matthews is back from the hospital and intends taking a sick leave; having just returned from ninety day furlough, he is doomed to quite a long rest between chow calls.

BARBECUE

Company "D" and 1st Battalion Headquarters and Headquarters Company gave a barbecue yesterday, honoring Captain R. A. Case, 29th Infantry, who has been ordered to Fort Sill, Oklahoma. Captain Case has been in command of "D" Company since July 1, 1928.

Sandwiches and cakes were served as refreshments during the morning. Barbecued meats were served for lunch. Different games were played by the enlisted men, and all reported an enjoyable day.

BENEFIT BASEBALL GAME

The annual baseball game between student officers and officers of the permanent personnel of the garrison for the benefit of the Fort Benning Children's School is scheduled to be played on Gowdy Field today, beginning at 2 P. M.

THE TENTS OF KEDAR

Captain Bonjean, of Illinois, the only officer who ever won an expert rifleman's badge with a .22 rifle, turned out for the pageant for General King, arrayed like the lilies of the field, in harmonious shades of gray done into a golf costume. Inasmuch as the captain has not appeared on the golf links since coming to Fort Benning, his choice of costumes caused some comment. Ordinarily his favorite occupation on Sundays and holidays is lounging about as a lingerie model.

Tents are about ready to come down and await another crop of national guardsmen and reservists. Did it ever occur to you what a fine thing it is tents can't talk? If they could, ours probably would be up at the academic area all the time, making sworn statements.

A smoker is planned for the instructors before the national guard and reserve company officers class becomes a thing of the past. It is felt that these gentlemen, who have struggled so patiently and manfully at bone-drilling, ought to get some sort of consolation prize.

One of the appalling things about this climate (so-called) at Fort Benning is the way, after raining all through your leisure period, it can suddenly clear up just in time to go out on an all-day terrain exercise.

Lieutenant W. H. C. X. Y. Z. Corcoran, of California, who has the gadget complex, feels sure if the powerful reserve and national guard officers just got together they could get the War Department to authorize the wearing of class pins on uniforms. Heh, heh, Corky, why not include Christmas tree ornaments, too?

DE PRATT WINS DECISION

Gunner DePratt took the decision from Sergeant Johnny Walker last Tuesday night in a very onesided contest. Walker's statement that the fight would be different in a dry ring, was true. The ring was as dry as a bone, and enabled Mr. Walker to get on a horse and stay away from the Gunner's onslaught. The fans were very much disappointed that he did not stand to his guns and fight, as he is reputed to do, but Johnny seemed to have different ideas about how to stand to when not in the Cavalry contests.

At no time was the Gunner in any danger of oblivion by the highly touted Fort Oglethorpe idol. The pride of the 29th Infantry and of Fort Benning, repeatedly kept his left working like a piston, landing almost at will about the face and body of Johnny, but never being able to catch up with him long enough to put over the final punch.

W. L. (Young) Stribling, who arrived at the ringside during the early part of the show, was asked to and accepted the responsibility of the third man in the ring. He very ably carried out his part of the program, and did his best to make the fight more interesting, by continually cautioning Johnny to fight. After being introduced to the fans, Stribling received quite an ovation of applause, and many requests to referee the bout. Then shouts from all over the Arena came for Captain Wilson to "Let 'Young' referee," "Give us Strib," etc. Nothing was left, but for the young Macon fighter to step in the ringand do his bit, which he did very creditably.

ROUND ONE

They both came out of their corners circling, ducking and thrusting for an opening. This continued for the whole of the round, with neither gaining an advantage or landing a telling blow. A draw would be a safe bet on this round.

ROUND TWO

Both men tried long distance fighting, but when DePratt led with a left, Walker ducked and fell into a clinch, with no danger done. Stribling parted them, and Walker immediately tried to fall into another clinch, and the Gunner sent a telling left hook to the face followed by another to the same place that only stung Johnny. They clinched. Breaking away, the Gunner hooked with left and crossed with rights furiously, while Walker tried to tie him up, yet little damage was done. Walker shot a dangerous left that grazed the Gunner's jaw, and received a left and right in quick retaliation for his efforts. The bell. Depratt's round.

ROUND THREE

They circled about for a short time, Walker trying to stay away, but the Gunner stepped in with a left jab to the face and Walker fell into a clinch, taking a right to the ribs. The referee parted them and Walker sought an advantage and found it when DePratt missed. Walker jabbed two times in succession with his left in Gunner's face. These did not worry the Infantryman though and he let drive a hook that landed fairly on Johnny's chin. They then exchanged lefts. At this time De Pratt tried for the wind, and two light blows landed on Walker's trunks, however, they were not allowed as fouls. They tried long range fighting again, exchanging lefts, but at the bell Gunner landed a terrific left to Johnny's solar plexus. Bell. DePratt's round.

ROUND FOUR

DePratt came to the center of the ring, and proceeded to jab and hook the Cavalry man to shreds. After enough of that, Walker fell to a clinch and landed a right to the Doughboy's ribs, with no effect. Gunner then discovered that he had a right hand, and proceeded to lace Johnny for a while with it. It was at this time that Mr Stribling looked toward the box seats and whistled audibly. Good reason too, those rights were terrific. DePratt's round.

ROUND FIVE

DePratt hooked and slammed Johnny for a mile or more, with the bicycle man continually running away. DePratt then missed one that would have pleased the fans with a knock out, but the fates would not allow it to land. Walker then stepped in and took one to the face to land a left to the face and a right to the ribs, followed by a quick left to the solar plexus. It was then that Walker stepped into a wild swing from below to catch it on his trunks, but Stribling would not allow it as a foul, admonishing Johnny to fight and stop alibing.

ROUND SIX

In this round DePratt opened up with lefts and rights, giving said Johnny Walker all that he wanted. Walker ran away, as he had been doing in the rest of the fight, but the Gunner gunned for him and landed a solid blow to the mid section that made Mr. Walker and his manager grunt considerably. Walker then hung on until pulled away by the referee and absorbed a few more to the disgestive sector. DePratt's round.

ROUND SEVEN

DePratt crowded Walker to a corner, and landed a left hook that set Mr. Walker down for no count, but kept that left working in and out from face to body until Johnny took another seat, this time for the count of one. Walker made some sort of protest of a foul to the referee, and even the referee looked at him with surprise, the blow having landed fairly on the chin. DePratt made a final effort to end the fight then and there, but was unable to connect, missing with right and left. DePratt's round.

ROUND EIGHT

DePratt kept after him with a left that was threatening, but toppled him momentarily with a right. Then Walker took the notion that he would stop running, and ducked into a beautiful left to land a few light rights that could be called rabbit punches. After taking a few more left hooks, Walker proceeded to land a couple of lefts, only one of them worth mentioning. He then decided not to fight any more, and hung on until the bell. DePratt's round.

ROUND NINE

DePratt chased him from pillar to post in this round, trying to land a left that would count. Walker continued to back off and duck, but Gunner finally clinched him. DePratt kept motioning Walker to come in and fight, but you couldn't fool him that easy. Gunner's round as usual.

ROUND TEN

Walker came in and took the offensive for the second time of the fight, and managed to show that he could fight if he but would. He repeatedly traded lefts with the Gunner, and slipped over a few pretty ones. None of them phased DePratt though, but when the fight ended, Walker was still fighting, and trying hard to slip over the last one.

In the first fight of the night, Phizz Costello, met Manhattan Henton, and gave the fans a thrill by his ability to punch. From the opening bell, the rangy Phizz carried the fight to his opponent, and clouted him from First Sergeant Norbert L. Craine to Mr. Pat Murphy. He has a dangerous right hand, all the while possessing the ability to jab with his left at will. Every round belonged to him. We hope to see more of this Demonstration Doughboy in the future, and predict success for him.

With the second curtain, same Raven Poe, minus his moustache, meeting and defeating Bronx Hawkins. Hawkins was willing to fight, and had a dangerous right hand, but the Raven would not let him have a chance to use it, beating him to the punch in almost every start. The first two rounds were fast and furious, with the last being only moderate. Poe took all three of the schedule rounds, and was awarded the decision. Poe should soon be ready for the four round classes, to say the least. One thing that he will do, and that is fight.

Bull Montondon, fight promoter of the Fifteenth Tank Battalion, lived up to his promise when he matched his protege, Corn Grifin, against Grumpy Gordy, and defeated the versatile Grumpy very decisively. Grumpy was surprised in the opening round, when his opponent came rushing and tearing him from all angles. At no time was the Tank entrant in danger of defeat at the hands of the notorious Gordy, carrying the fight to his excellency at all times Never did he give the Q. M. idol a chance to back off and stamp his feet and shake his head. Had he done so, he would probably have been defeated, for who can stand before an on-rushing bull! Corn was loudly applauded when his hand was raised in the end.

In the six round billed issue, Babe Asher suffered deefat at the hands of K. O. Henry, of Fort Ogle Thorpe, Ga. Henry was again repeatedly cautioned by Captain Wilson about holding and hitting. Captain Wilson looked upon these as unintentional fouls, which they probably were. Henry seemed to be doing all that he could to prevent their commission, but would invariably get his left in back of Asher's head. The bout throughout was very one-sided, Henry taking every round. Henry is a sweet fighter, and never falters in his main objective, which is to punch. The only thing that Asher had that was effective was a smashing left hand. Henry himself stated that he had a dangerous left, and had he landed at the right times, would probably have resulted fatally for the Oglethorpe boy.

It was a shame that Blondy Parker had to let those fouls slip as he did. The boy had the fight won in every round, with a possible exception of the first, which could have been called a draw, until he fouled in the third and seventh stanzas. Battling Smith, however, showed good sportsmanship when he refused to claim the fight on a foul. After taking a minutes rest in each instance, he resumed the fight, but was unable to be effective on the charging, slashing Parker. It is an undisputed fact that the Blond head can win from Smith at any time, as he undoubtedly would have done Tuesday night, had it not been for those marring fouls. Parker seemed to be in the best condition that he has been in for the last four months, and more willing to fight. A draw, however was a popular decision, and brought very few comments from the ringside. Some palooka, however, from about the last seat in the bleachers, had quite a bit to spout off about—yet no one payed him any marked attention.

REDDOCK HIGH MAN FOR SECOND YEAR

Ladies and gentlemen, and fellow baseball fans; over this bar, we have Willard I. Reddock, Company "D", 29th Infantry. To some of us, that name and address means little or nothing, but to the field contestants in almost any track and field meet, to merely breathe that name would dishearten any of the aspirants for fame in that line.

In the recent track and field meet, Reddock placed first in all three classes of jumping, scoring points for his team, and entitling him to a string of gold medals and a trophy for the individual high score. When the commandant had finished pinning medals on him and congratulating him, he looked as though he might be a walking advertisement for a jewelry establishment.

Reddock not only took the individual trophy as high point scorer for the last meet, but for the one held a year ago. So you see, it is nothing at all for him to come out and take home the trophy. Incidentally, he holds the record for the pole vault (11 feet), the high jump (5 feet, 5 inches) and the broad jump (18 feet, 2 7-8 inches) for Fort Benning. Besides all of this, he ran one-fourth of the 1440 yard relay, and his team placed second. He is also an exceptionally good basketball player, having played part of the past season with the Post team, and later with the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry team.

His organization should be, and is exceedingly proud of his accomplishments on the field and track. Men of his type are morale boosters, and as such are admired by all.

DEPRATT RAISES FIGHT STANDARDS AT BENNING

(By Swaze)

When Albert DePratt came to the Upatoi station in the late Spring of 1926, the boxing cards of the semi-monthly bouts held on the post, were very slow. It was very rare for the promoters to be able to bring good fighters here for the cards, and naturally, the cards flunked. Then the Gunner took the notion that he could train some of the boys to bloom out and make a name for their organizations. This resulted in there being a delegation from Company "H", 29th Infantry journeying to the Gym every afternoon, for weeks at a time. This resulted in most of the boys that had been trained by him, taking the championship in their weights in the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry tournament.

Then with his own ability as a fighter and a K. O. King, DePratt began to topple over everything that came in sight. This immediately attracted the attention of the fans, and they began to clamor for him to meet better and better boys. It could be noticed that there were more and more fans out to see the cards, all waiting to see the Gunner in action. The promoters eventually sensed this, and DePratt was the larger portion on the Fistic Menu from then 'til now.

I am not alone in my opinion in this good two-fisted, leather-slinging aggressive fighter. Many men who know, have repeatedly said that Gunner DePratt has done more for the fighting game in and around Fort Benning than any other fighter that has ever been a member of the garrison. He has always been a willing fighter, always giving the fans just what they were looking for. In his three years at Fort Benning, DePratt has lost only three fights, and only one of them on a Benning Boxing Card.

Upon being interviewed last Tuesday night, DePratt stated that he would re-enlist the next morning for his old outfit, having been discharged per expiration of Service last Sunday. All the members of the garrison, of the 29th Infantry. cmf 29th Infantry, and especially of "H" Company, are well pleased that they are not to lose this good fighter, soldier and gentleman. Our hats are off to the Gunner for his many accomplishments since he has been at Fort Benning, and wish him the continued success and prestige that he has gained.

opponent, Mrs. Randolph, by 7 up and 5 to go.

The remainder are as follows:

The Director's (3rd) flight: Mrs. J. Taylor won 7 and 5 over Mrs. Macklin, and Mrs. Goodrich has a 3 and 1 margin over Mrs. Chunn.

In the Doughboy's flight, the 4th of the series, Miss Daisy Reed, daughter of Lieut. Col. Walter L. Reed, 29th Infantry, with a true "Spirit of the Bayonet" conquered Mrs. D. S. Wilson 6 up, with every "doughboy" of the "29th foot" cheering her on to victory, while in the second division of the same battleline, Mrs. Sankey, of the Dental Corps, vanquished Mrs. Doll, of the Main Theater Division of Benning activities, by a 6 and 4 victory.

In the 5th flight the Debutants' Mrs. McCammon, of a student officer's family, retaliated by a 2 up victory over Mrs. Walter T. Scott, of the academic department's instructor contingent.

At the time of going to press a very interesting battle is being fought in the 1st consolation flight between Mrs. Dahlquist, of the Student personnel, and Mrs. Bull, academic department. They completed their 18 holes in a tie, and called their battle on account of darkness on the 22nd hole, still a tie and both going strong. They were both initially in the championship flight and were vanquished by more experienced tournament players in the early elimination match play, but if their present battle is not a true indication of future championship material we are certainly missing a good guess. How about it, friends?

And, speaking of the pageant, if you think the Benning golfers didn't help fill in the ranks of the other garrison activities just ask Capts. Dahlquist, "Bill" Tuttle, Washburn, Mrs. Brimmer of the present championship flight, and about 300 others not in the golfers' line up, and at least 50 per cent. of the members of the general's reception committee, which include such ardent golfers as Colonel Pendleton, Colonel Knight and Colonel Marshall. (Who dares to dispute that golf is not the premier recreational activity of the Upatoi garrison?)

THE STUDENT—(By H. M. G.)

Gentlemen, as you have been often informed, the school has only a solution on most subjects, but believe me, on pageants to generals, the school has "the" solution.

Those of you who failed to arrive at those flowing bowls, known as the water tanks, missed one of the best shows, real welcomes and an honest-to-goodness-glad-you-are-here that's been given to anyone in a long time. It's hard to believe that the little hollow just below the water tanks could have furnished such a picturesque setting for this pageant. At the foot of it every form of sport and social activity, except afternoon bridge fortunately, known to the garrison, passed in review in welcome to General King and his family.

The pageant ran the gamut from golfers to spirituals, with a cleverly staged hunt as one of the many novel features in between.

And thus our new commandant was welcomed by all, even including the poor relations in Block 16. Everyone, in fact, except by his paying guests, the student body.

While our sports are generally indoor ones, and while our further stay at Benning is brief, we too would like to extend our sincere welcome to General King and his family.

We will now start the indoor sports.

Cornog—Brought peace to B Co.

Douthit—Gave away good cigars in a moment of joy.

Collette—Had reservations.

"Capt. Watkins"—Met the best people at the river crossing demonstration, including Newton who wasn't introduced but was socially inclined. The Captain, besides a bit of teeth, was of an inquisitive nature. The following subjects were covered: Steel, on "targets I have missed." Alger, "Mindanao, a bolo, and how." Mulkey, on "She aint what she used to be." Major Ferris and Capt. Harry Collins were also presented to the captain.

Experimentor McFadyen is now trying out a few question.

The National Guard officer who wrestled with Griffith certainly knew his equitation.

School problem: When does three equal less than one? When Wilson, Cornog, and Evans gang up on Crowell.

Seventh Annual Horse Show Closes

Brilliant Spectacle Sets New Standard of Achievement

The Infantry School's Seventh annual horse show has met all expectations and promises. No exhibition of similar nature ever before held at Fort Benning has approached this year's spectacle in splendor and spectacular displays of perfect horsemanship. No large event has ever been conducted more closely to schedule. With the exception of a few minutes interruption by showers late Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, the events of the exhibition have been run off with clock-like precision.

Major H. J. M. Smith, Cavalry (left) Capt. Robert A. McClure, Infantry. Major Smith was manager of Fort Benning's seventh annual horse show and Captain McClure was secretary.

No other horse show has ever exhibited more beautiful examples of animal-drawn transportation. Never before has there been keener competition for places in every event. It would be difficult to say which event was the most attractive; all were attractive, from the exhibition of the greenest pony, to the most elaborately polished and plated vehicle. Every event and the exhibition as a whole showed the result of a great deal of time and painstaking effort on the part of the individual contestants and the management of the show. In short, the seventh annual horse show was the best ever staged at Fort Benning and it will not be excelled in beauty or staging for a long time to come, if at all.

Beautiful trophies, prizes and ribbons were presented to the winners of places in the various events. Brig. Gen. Campbell King, the commandant, made the presentations and added his congratulations to the prize winners. Col. Harris Pendleton, Jr., acted for the commandant in the presentations whenever General King was occupied elsewhere.

Another feature which added to the enjoyment of the horse show, was the announcing of entries, scores and winners through a system of loud speakers which made the voice of Capt. Crowell the announcer, clearly audible in every part of the stadium, even when the band was playing.

FORT BENNING POLO TEAM TO PLAY IN WAR DEPARTMENT MEET

Fort Benning has been invited to enter a team in the War Department polo tournament which will be held in Washington in the early part of June. The invitation will be accepted and a group of riders will be selected to go to Washington to compete in the tournament.

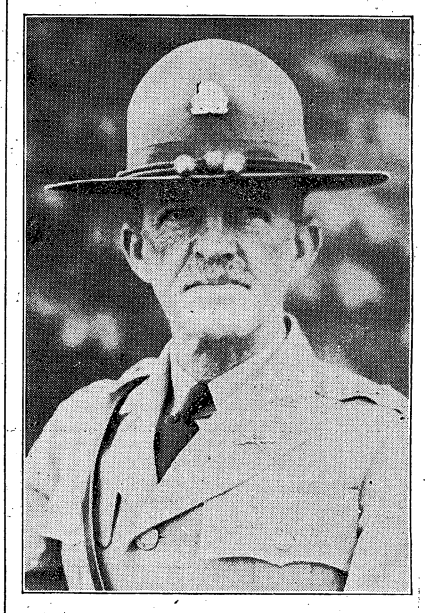
The Fort Benning players probably will play against teams representing Fort Humphrey, Fort Myer, the 3rd Cavalry, the 16th Field Artillery, the War Department and Middleburg in the War Department meet which will follow the completion of the inter-circuit tournament.

Fort Benning Regiment Defeats 20 Others in Shoot

Colonel Paul C. Galleher, commanding the 24th Infantry, received official announcement this week that the national regimental small bore championship match which has fired several weeks ago was won by the 24th Infantry, with a score of 3382 out of a possible 3500. This score was 15 points higher than that of the nearest competitor, the 121st Engineers of Washington, D. C.

The 24th won its match in competition with twenty other regimental teams which represented each Corps Area in the United States. Each team fired the match on its own range and the targets were then sent to Washington, D. C. for scoring. The three high teams in the match were the 24th Infantry, 3382; 121st Engineers, 3367; and the 7th Infantry 3340.

The members of the 24th Infantry winning small bore team were, Captain C. L. Steel, Captain E. G. Lindroth, Captain W. B. Wilson, Captain J. P. Lyons, Captain E. F. Paynter, 1st Sgt.



Colonel Paul C. Galleher, 24th Infantry

Julius James, Sgt. Scott Bradford, Corp. James Fletcher and Pvt. Tommy Baugh.

This is the third small bore match in which the 24th Infantry has recently won distinction. Last month its team competing against twenty-one other teams won first place in the 4th Corps Area and second place in the United States with a score of 3358. This match was in the nature of an elimination match for the selection of teams to represent the corps areas in the national match which has just been won by the 24th. As in the match just fired, the 24th Infantry and the 121st Engineers finished in first and second places respectively. In a match fired last March, the 24th Infantry finished near the top of the list, making a score

THE TENTS OF KEDAR

The heat in tents is most intense,
The flies are aggravating,
That's why my text for Thursday next
Is: "I am emigrating;
To cooler climes, to other crimes;
Dakota, Oklahoma,
Alaska or North Yakima
Shall gaze on my diploma."
Goodbye, Colonel Marshall,
Goodbye, General King;
I've drawn three months pay
And I've learned everything."

The above pitiful effort at verse, scrawled in an illiterate hand, was found under the editor's door early Thursday morning. It is believed to be the work either of an anonymous second lieutenant or one of the big Southern cockroaches that give proof summer has really come.

All unawares we have been harboring artists' models in the tent area. The smiling faces of Lieutenants Benton and Festner blossomed out in the show window of a downtown photographer one day last week. Address furnished on the receipt of self addressed envelope and ten cents in stamps or coin.

The end of school will not mean freedom for all. Several dashing young officers are leaving the service of Uncle Sam only to enter the holy bonds of matrimony. Among those slated for orange blossoms are Captain Crowley of Massachusetts and Lieutenant James (Greasy) Gillen, the Brooklyn navy yard boy.

To do the thing properly, one should sob in a dignified way over the approaching dissolution of sacred ties of fellowship, the furling of the tents of Kedar, all that sort of thing. We realize this. But we can't do it. Ten minutes more and we gotta go to class. 'stoo bad; swan song won't come; we can only quote Barnacle Bill the sailor:

"G'bye."

24TH INFANTRY WINS NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP

of 3678, which was only five points lower than that of the winning team of the Fourth Infantry.

The match scores, consisting of slow and rapid fire, were fired in the kneeling, sitting and prone position. The five highest scores made in each position and class of fire were selected as record scores for the match.

TENNIS POPULAR AT FORT BENNING

Tennis is fast gaining a foothold in Fort Benning circles. During the past two months, it has made rapid strides, and promises to be one of the most popular sports of all. Since the old courts were not sufficient to accommodate the demands that were made for them, the Officer's Club decided to do something about it.

Now when they got started, they decided that it would be best to have it done right, so they turned the supervision of the project over to Major Landis, who has been very energetic and instrumental in having the new courts constructed that you may see out by the Golf Shop. Of course, it takes time for any tennis court to be made into a fast one. Daily details, however, have been continually working on them, and now they are ready for play.

Those of the officers and ladies of the garrison who have entered the garrison tournament, have been using them for practice, and pronounce them to be of a high grade. The courts are bordered by good, high mesh wire backstops. These courts are a vast improvement over the rather shabby looking courts that have been in use in Fort Benning for a long time.

On every hand, one can hear enlisted Major Landis further stated that more courts would be built if necessary to accommodate the enlisted men.

SOLDIERS WRITE PRIZE LETTERS ON MOTHER'S DAY

Following the suggestion of their company commander, Capt. A. J. Nichols, the 183 men in Company H, 29th. Infantry wrote letters to their mothers and relatives at home on Mother's Day, May 12.

Capt. Nichols also sponsored a competition for the soldiers' letters and offered a prize for the two best Mother's Day letters written by members of his company. The letters written by Private Lawrence E. Wilburn, whose home is in Union, South Carolina, and Private Eugene Hunt, whose home is in Albertville, Alabama, were selected as the best of those submitted in the competition.

Private Wilburn's letter, winner of first prize follows:

My Darling Mother:

I am writing this so that it will be in your hands by or on Mother's Day. I don't want you to think just of the words that are written in this letter, but take this poor attempt of mine as a token of love and appreciation of the things you have done for me. I could never express in mere words my appreciation for the things that you have tried to make me see and do in the right way. As I look back on the days that have passed and see how much you worked and suffered to make me happy, my heart overflows with love for you and sometime in the near future I hope to show you in some way that I have tried to live up to the ideals that you set for me. Mother, darling, if in some way I could repay just a litle for some of the troubles then I would feel happy. If I could be there for Mother's Day and wear the red rose to church with you, then I would feel that Mother's Day has really been complete.

Your loving son,
Earle.

Private Hunt's letter, awarded second place in the contest is as follows:

Dear Mother:

It seems to me that May 12th should be considered just about the most important day in the year, because that day has been set apart—by the people of America at least—as a day in which to honor Mothers in a special way.

I consider it a very great blessing to have a Mother to write to, you know there are so many who are not so fortunate in that respect.

Men everywhere should join enthusiastically into this beautiful tribute to Mothers—this they can accomplish in part by writing them nice letters on that date. Of course it is impossible to fully express in a letter that deep appreciation—which is in the heart of every man—for the unselfish love that his Mother has heaped upon him from his childhood.

Mother, I am very proud of the fact that you are enjoying fairly good health, even though you are two years past your three-score and ten allotment.

Many of the world's most famous men were great simply because they had great Mothers to urge them on. Doubtless many others less great, but not less noble of heart, have been spurred to noble deeds by the true friend that never fails you, your Mother.

I have heard fellows say, "If I only had a Mother to write to, I'd write her every day." Of course that is more than would be necessary, but still it shows that they remeber her as having been more than an ordinary friend.

Mother, I might write on until my pen dropped from my hand from sheer fatigue, but what is the use—cold ink and paper can never express true love in any way.

May Mother's Day be the pleasantest day that you have ever experienced.

Your loving son,
Pvt. Eugene Hunt,

FRIDAY MAY 17

"THE QUITTER," featuring Ben Lyon with Dorothy Revier and Fred Kohler in a powerful and thrilling drama of a youth's regeneration through love. The story concerns a doctor who is in an auto accident with his mother. The mother is seriously injured. In an effort to save her life he must perform an operation but faints during the preparation and the mother dies. The physician leaves in disgrace and falls lower and lower. He hangs around a race track. While there he offeers valuable advice and gains some respect. A girl becomes interested in him—her lover is jealous and is in the act of shooting him when the girl shoots the lover—the doctor performs a serious operation saving the lover's life, thereby regaining his honor. This drama contains many exciting incidents such as a thrilling horse race, a wild night in a cafe, and a severe auto accident.

"A Day Off." Fables.

"Pathe News No. 89."

SATURDAY MAY 18

"LAND OF THE SILVER FOX," a Rin Tin Tin story, featuring Leila Hyams with Carroll Nye and Tom Santschi in a story teeming with action. The story is laid in the far north among the fur traders where the Northwest Mounted Police hold sway. It concerns a renegade killer who is pledged to "get" the young trapper who has saved Rinty from a cruel master. The manner in which the dog saved the trapper's life is most interestingly thrilling.

"Match-making Mamas." Sennett Girls.

SUNDAY MAY 19

"FLYING FLEET," starring Ramon Navarro in a story of romance and thrills. There are parachute jumps from flying planes, sensational maneuvers in the sky, the wreck of a great plane at sea, and a rescue by an aeroplane carrier. Through it all runs an intensely human story of six young naval officers, pals through all hardships, and the inexorable rule of the survival of the fittest. The love interest is between Navarro, as the young flying lieutenant and charming Anita Page. The terrifying aerial stunts are performed by the navy's famous "suicide squad" of sky acrobats. Intimate scenes show life in the naval service aboard the aeroplane carrier ship "Saratoga" and at the flying base of the navy. The complete training of an aviator is shown. This is considered a splendid picture.

RAMON NOVARRO in "THE FLYING FLEET"

"M. G. M. News No. 77.."

MONDAY MAY 20

"WHAT A NIGHT," starring dashing Bebe Daniels in a big comedy melodrama. Excitement, thrills, laughter and love make up the adventure which is portrayed in this story of newspaper life and newspaper doings. Crooked politicians, gang leaders, reporters, and the attractive Bebe herself, make up the characters. It is the tale of a big "scoop" which the newspaper unsuccessfully fights to accomplish until Miss Daniel's blundering efforts as a reporter uncover the necessary ideas. Though the play is fast comedy, it possesses a mystery element which creates suspense that holds until the last foot of film.

"The Mystery Rider No. 4."

TUESDAY MAY 21

"THE GIRL ON THE BARGE," starring Jean Hersholt and Sally O'Neill supported by an excellent cast. The plot concerns a hard drinking but a religiously devout Scotch barge captain. His attractive daughter falls in love with the pilot of the tug boat which draws the barge upon which she lives. The enraged father causes the pilot's dismissal —the girl suffers a severe beating and deserts the barge only to be dragged back to her unhappy home. How the pilot's bravery during a terrific storm in which the barge is threatened with destruction, saves the lives of the captain's family and wins his admiration, makes a most exciting climax to the picture. The story is from one of Rupert Hughes' most popular stories. It was actually taken along the Erie Canal in New York.

"Muscle Marvels." Sportlight.

WEDNESDAY MAY 22

"THE DEVIL'S APPLE TREE," a Tiffany Stahl Production, featuring Dorothy Sebastian with Larry Kent and a strong supporting cast. The title itself is quite explanatory of the play which combines the traditional Garden of Eden plot with the elusive wiles of the eternal feminine of today. It shows in a most picturesquely absorbing way the manner in which the fatal apple affected the lives of ancients and how the same fateful conception affects humanity of the present generation. You'll like this picture.

"M. G. M. News No. 78."

THURSDAY MAY 23

"WILD ORCHIDS," starring Greta Garbo with Lewis Stone and Nils Asther in a tense drama replete with action and thrills. The tropic island of Java is the locale. The young bride of an American business man attracts the loving eye of a Prince who tries to capture her through elusive tactics—his carefully laid plans result in the young wife being left alone with him while a tropical storm keeps the husband away. Developments follow rapidly and furiously—the deception is discovered and the husband plans a frightful revenge. The Price faces a hungry tiger—he supposes that his rifle is loaded. A climax is reached which will make you grip the arms of your chair.

"Movie Hound." Cameo.

FRIDAY MAY 24

"CLEAR THE DECKS," starring Reginald Denny in a rollicking comedy of the high seas. An explorer who has just returned to civilization from Africa, falls in love with the first pretty girl he sees; he trails her to a ship and arranges to exchange places with another passenger. Two jewel thieves on board endeavor to steal the girl's pearl necklace. The manner in which the explorer becomes mixed up with the affair causes more ludicrous situations than you can imagine. He is judged insane, is imprisoned, manages to escape, and one mix-up after another follows. Reginald Denny; 'nuf sed. If laughter is injurious to your health don't see this picture.

"Barnyard Politics." Fables.

"What makes you think he is tight?"

"Is Hill's bride much of a housekeeper?"

"I hardly think so. This morning I found her trying to open the ice box with a can opener."

General and Mrs. King Are Entertained at the Polo Club

Honoring Gen. and Mrs. Campbell King Col. and Mrs. Harry E. Knight entertained fifty-four friends at dinner on Wednesday evening. The Polo club was converted into a gardeen where southern smilax wound over trellises and gateways and pedestal baskets filled with roses made lovely every entrance. The al fresco effect was further carried out by the use of Japanese lanterns over all lights. The tables were arranged in a huge hollow square, the guests being seated along the outside while the hollow was filled with palms and potted plants, artistically grouped around a lighted sparkling fountain. Pottery bowls filled with pink Radiance roses, pink sweet peas and fern were used for centerpieces and silver candlesticks in graduated lengths forming pyramids of lights were used down the length of each table. The tall pink tapers were tied with green tulle from which fell a shower of rose buds. Rose medallions were on each place card and the nut cups were dainty pink flowers with green bases. Handpainted menu cards were in attractive feature. Each officer found at his place a "Doughboy" in action, and at each lady's place was an artistic reproduction of a typical Benning landscape—a glimpse of a stream leaping through a rhododendron bower, under which was written "Books in running brooks,
Sermons in stones,
And good in everything."

THE FORT BENNING LADIES' GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Our first successful annual classic of the links is over, and the undefended crown of the Fort Benning lady golf champion rests gracefully on the fair brow of Mrs. Robert T. Foster, a resident of Dinglewood, Columbus, Ga., wife of Lieut. Robert T. Foster, Infantry, a student officer, and we hasten to congratulate our champion for her enviable ability and sterling sportsmanship in securing an undisputable title to this coverted honor.

The field in the championship flight included many of undeniable ability, and several of previously established championship calibre.

The results in the remainder of the flights were as follows, the winner of the flight, the runner-up and the winner of the consolation flight for each being listed in that order:

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT
Mrs. R. T. Foster—1 up.
Mrs. Wm. E. Donegan.
Mrs. Wm. G. Livesay—1 up.

THE COMMANDANT'S FLIGHT
Mrs. Waine Archer—5-3.
Mrs. C. W. Ryder.
Mrs. Singer—6-5.

PRESIDENT'S FLIGHT
Mrs. James Taylor—3-2
Mrs. C. D. Chunn.
Mrs. C. P. Hall—7-6.

DIRECTOR'S FLIGHT
Mrs. W. E. Sankey—2-1.
Miss Daisy Reed.
Mrs. Wm. B. Tuttle—3-2.

DEBUTANTE'S FLIGHT
Mrs. J. E. McCammon—1 up.
Mrs. J. I. Meagher.
Mrs. A. B. Helsley—6-5.

MEDALIST: Mrs. R. T. Foster—92.

In the quarter finals of the championship consolation flight Mrs. Dahlquist and Mrs. Bull fought a very close battle, mention of it having been made in this column last week. It was finally won by Mrs. Dahlquist by a 1 up on the 23rd hole, and we gladly reiterate our assertion of the previous week that if these two fair golfers are not of true championship caliber we certainly miss a good bet.

The prizes of this tournament are now at the garrison golf shop, and the above listed ladies may call for them at their convenience.

In the course of her match with Mrs. Sankey, Miss Daisy Reed assured us that she never enjoyed playing 18 holes in the rough as she did these. (A true fighting "doughboy spirit"—we would say.)

In conclusion, we believe it deserving of mention that, while all winners are to be congratulated for their success, we are more than proud of our entire field of lady golfers who displayed splendid sportsmanship and co-operative spirit during the entire tournament.

GOLF GOSSIP

While some of our golfing gentlemen believe that their official club handicap is an impossibility under normal conditions, we note that some have "played out of the money column" at the low end of the "bogey" figures in the last week-end tournament so—not to penalize such effort—the tournament committee decided to make the "bogey" figures permit such a possibility, and make them 68 to 78 for this week-end, permitting every one the usual advantage at the upper end of the figures, and allowing those who are about to improve their club handicap an opportunity to do so without the penalty of being "out."

Well, friends, our Pro went and did it again; playing in a "high-powered" foursome the other day he went wild on them and turned in a "horrible" 67 for the 18 holes, and then ranted around because he three-putted two or three holes. (Yeh, they say that he had gravy spilled all over his chin when they came in; he must have "collected.")

We hear that Col. Wells is wondering when his partner is going to play with him. (Now, just what does he mean by that, Capt. Liston?)

Does anyone know how to banish elephant's tracks from putting greens? —if so, please, advise our Greens Committee and proceed to No. 16 green.

DUTY AND THE SOLDIER

An editorial writer of a prominent daily newspaper, expressing his views on lawlessness and the modern tendency of the individual to shirk responsibility, illustrates his argument with a story of an incident which is said to have occurred in the army during the World War. The story is of an American private who had been detected by his lieutenant in some minor dereliction of duty. The soldier excused his fault by asserting that he had no individual responsibility; that in the absence of the officer, he felt relieved of all obligation toward his duties.

Curiously enough, the writer seems to agree that the distorted viewpoint of the soldier was justified; that the private soldier has no responsibility and no freedom of initiative; that it is the duty of an army officer personally to see that every soldier executes each order; that the soldier cannot be expected, in the absence of his officer to carry out orders that he has received, or to assume responsibility upon an occasion calling for the application of common sense and good judgment.

What a sorry army ours would be if the private soldier had no sense of responsibility toward his duties; if he performed his tasks and carried out his instructions only when under the direct supervision of his officers!

What a sad condition of affairs would exist if the officer had no confidence in the soldiers under him; if he knew that his men would abandon their duties as soon as his back was turned; if he felt that his presence was the only assurance that orders would be obeyed!

It is unfortunate that intelligent but uninformed writers should help to strengthen the ignorance and prejudices concerning our army which exist in the minds of many of our citizens.

They do not seem to understand the distinction between lack of individual responsibility and the voluntary subordination of the individual to the common interest.

They do not seem to understand that the development of initiative and adaptability in every individual, from the highest general to the newest recruit, is one of the basic training principles of our army.

They do not seem to understand the reciprocal loyalty and respect that exists between the enlisted men and the officers of the United States army.

Yet these same writers and citizens demand efficiency in the army and would be among the first to criticise the lack of it.

TIME AND TOLERANCE

A few evenings ago a large assemblage sat in a local theatre viewing a motion picture which portrayed scenes behind the lines of the army of our most powerful foe a little more than a decade past.

It was an interesting and enlightening picture, especially for a military man.

Aside from the interest which the picture held, one was impressed by the calm demeanor of the spectators. Had this picture been exhibited only a few years ago, its appearance would have caused an outburst of hysterical hatred.

But the other night the animosities of ten years ago were forgotten and one saw in the picture the story of a nation in arms and defending what it believed to be a righteous cause; one viewed dispassionately the scenes of combat and followed the animated diagrams and maps of various battles with an absorbed interest which left no room for war-time emotions even had such dormant sensations been aroused.

Time is a wonderful healer of wounds and quarrels—if given enough of it, we eventually will be able to tolerate the other fellow's ideas.

NO BREAD TODAY

AS I was strolling along upper Second Avenue the other day, I came to a little two-story brick building which seemed to be somewhat out of place in the block of frame dwellings which flank it on both sides. I slowed my pace as I glanced at its narrow front where a short flight of cement steps leads up to a double door which opens directly into a long room or hall. I had noticed these details when my attention was attracted by a small boy who went around the side of the building with a purposeful stride as though intent upon some important errand. He stopped at a door, stood for a moment looking at something that I could not see, and then turned around and walked away. I fancied that he was disappointed about something. I was still looking after him when I saw a woman, leading a small child, go around the side of the building, pause a moment at the door and then turn away just as the boy had done. There was no mistaking the expression of disappointment on her face.

Curious to see what it was that seemed to reward hope with disappointment, I went around to the side of the building and looked in the door. I did not need to look further, for there at the door was a placard, two placards, in fact, which told me why the woman and the boy had gone away dejected and empty handed.

"No Bread Today," said one of the cards. "No More Old Clothes," said the other. I, too, turned away. I wanted to know more about this place so I went around to the front and up the steps into the hall, or meeting room, as it turned out to be. A row of wooden benches nearly fill the space from the front door to the platform at the rear of the room. At the center of the platform is a small stand which serves as an altar. On its right is an American flag, on its left is the banner of a world-wide religious organization whose devoted little bands are so often seen marching to the tune of "Onward Christian Soldiers" or holding services on a street corner.

A man and a woman are tacking sprigs of evergreen on the walls. Another man is sweeping. A couple of little girls are helping wherever they can.

The man who has been tacking up the decorations, lays his hammer down and greets me cordially. I tell him that I have seen the signs at the side of the building and that I am curious to learn something about the place.

He explains about the signs first. "There is no bread today because it is Tuesday, and most of the bread is usually gone by Monday night. We distribute about three thousand loaves of bread a month from that side door." The bread, he tells me, is donated by Columbus bakeries from their week-end left-overs. The woman steps down from her ladder and joins in the conversation. "Quite often the children who come here for the bread are so hungry that they cannot wait until they get home to eat it; they bite greedily into the loaves as soon as they get them," she informs me.

"Our supply of old clothes has been exhausted for some time," says the man, in explanation of the second sign, "all that we have left is a pile of rags." The old clothes, he says, are donated irregularly by patrons and friends of the institution. The demand for them greatly exceeds the supply.

The distribution of bread and clothing is only a small part of the work of the relief work which is carried on at this place. Open house is kept at all times for the unfortunate and destitute humanity which comes and goes in a never-ending stream. Temporary relief in the form of food and shelter, disposes of the majority of these cases of distress, "Sometimes we get cases which require a long time to settle satisfactorily. One of such was that of a seventeen-year old girl and her three children who had been with us since her husband deserted her last March. We found a home for her just last week," the man tells me.

I intimate that I should like to see the building and its facilities for taking care of its "guests." The man leads the way to a large bare room, which, he says, is used as a mess hall when there are several people to be fed. We go next to the "men's quarters," in a large basement room where several cots are arranged along the walls. There is no other furniture. A shower bath adjoins this room. Every lodger here is required to bathe before accepting hospitality.

"Sometimes a man will object to this rule, but we are firm and allow him to leave if he does not wish to obey it," says my guide. "We have another rule, too, that is not always popular. It is: 'He who eats must work.' We have a wood pile and several other places where useful work can pay for meals."

From the basement we go to the "women's quarters," a room in rear of the mess hall on the first floor. Like the men's quarters, it is furnished with spartan simplicity. A woman, with three small children beside her, is sitting on the edge of a cot. She is dumb with suffering and sorrow and stares fixedly into space. The three tiny tots seem to share her depression. After a great deal of coaxing, I finally get a smile from one of the little girls.

"She came in this morning. Her husband deserted her after beating her," my guide tells me when we are out of ear-shot. "She is destitute and probably will be with us for some time."

We go to the second floor and I am shown the living quarters occupied by my guide and his wife, and a few spare guest rooms.

I have seen the entire "Army Home," as it is called by my guide, who has turned out to be the ensign in charge of the local Salvation Army Corps.

I linger to chat a few minutes with the ensign and his wife and I learn that in addition to the obviously severe financial limitations under which the "Home" is operating, it faces an impending disaster in the form of a threatened foreclosure of a mortgage on the building.

As I bade them good-by, I thought what a pity it is that a worthy philanthropic institution has to struggle under the handicap of insufficient funds while illegitimate, law-defying activities bring wealth and ease to their promoters.

But the Salvation Army will, no doubt, face this situation with the same Christian fortitude with which it faced its early persecutions and the same modest valor that won the admiration of the army during the World War.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

By MAJOR EDGAR ERSKINE HUME, Medical Corps
Medical Inspector

HOOKWORM AND LARVA MIGRANS

Hookworms affect the health and vitality of millions of people living in warm climates. In badly infected communities hookworm disease stunts the growth of children, cripples agriculture, handicaps the progress of the race and is a great economic disadvantage. No warm country is free from the disease. In 1904 the Army Commission found that 90 per cent of the population of Porto Rico were infected. Tests made at Fort Benning showed that about 15 per cent of the command and more than a fourth of all recruits were infected. The degree of disability which the worms produce depends on the physical condition of the victim. Robust and well nourished individuals are able to resist the harmful effects of the parasites much better than weak persons. Children show the ill effects more quickly, as a rule, than adults.

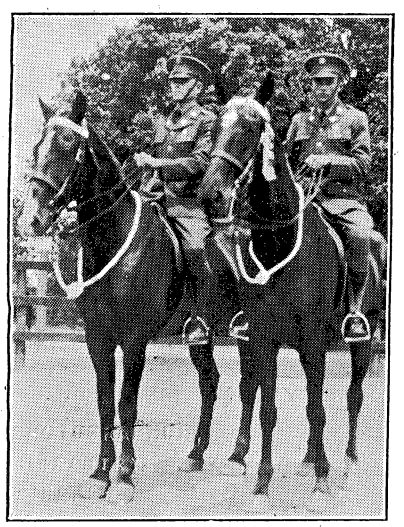
Hookworms live a dual existence, one in human beings and one on the surface of the ground. They are small round worms about half an inch long and about the size of a common pin. In the human intestine the worm devours blood and tissue and forms a poison which is injurious to the person harboring them. The worms lay an enormous number of eggs which pass out of the body with the waste products of digestion. The eggs hatch in about twenty-four hours outside of the body in the presence of favorable conditions of moisture, warmth, and oxygen. The worms thenceforth live in the upper layers of the soil for as long as a year while awaiting an opportunity to enter the body of a human being. The parasite can pierce the unbroken skin and pass into the blood vessels. The first stage of the disease is an irritation of the skin known as "ground itch," the soft skin between the toes being the part most commonly affected. It takes about two weeks for the worms to migrate from the skin to the intestine, where they spend the remainder of their existance. While this is the common mode of hookworm infestation, it is also possible for the individual to become infected by swallowing drinking water or solid food that has been contaminated by the worms. Remembering the above we readily understand the importance of cleanliness. If the hands are carefully washed before meals the last mentioned mode of infection may be avoided. But to protect ourselves against the more common form of infestation, the one beginning with ground itch, it is essential that children and others avoid going bare foot. To go without shoes, in a climate like this one, is to court the danger of having the hookworms in the upper layers of the soil pierce the skin of the feet, enter the body and produce hookworm disease.

An individual who has become infected with hookworms may be freed from the parasites by comparatively simple treatment requiring only about two days. A laboratory test will show whether or not one is infected.

LARVA MIGRANS

Much is heard at Fort Benning about larva migrans, a skin disease, usually in children, that is characterized by the presence of a living worm under the skin, which by its movements at night causes intolerable itching and pain. The parasite that causes this trouble is a type of hookworm and the passage through the skin and under the skin is the source of the condition described. It is to be avoided by not allowing children to play in soil or sand which may have been contaminated by dogs, as the parasite in this instance is really a type of dog hookworm. If the condition has appeared in a child or adult, it is highly important that medical advice be asked promptly since attempts may be made to destroy the worms before they have reached the intestine.

PERFECT PAIR JUMPING



With a perfect score of 100 per cent., Pfc. T. J. Gordon and Pvt. E. L. Harp, of Hdq. Co., 2d Bn., 29th Infantry carried away the individual honors at the 29th Infantry Horse Show.

Jumping on public mounts, Coffee and Jimmy, these two men went over eight jumps at a height of 3 feet 6 inches in perfect form. The men are to be congratulated both on the training of the mounts and their own horsemanship.

MAYOR COMMENDS OUTDOOR RECEPTION

Among the guests who enjoyed the unique outdoor reception given to Gen. and Mrs. Campbell King and Miss Barbara King last week, was Mayor J. Homer Dimon, of Columbus. Mayor Dimon was so impressed by the beauty of the spectacle that he wrote to Lt. Col. George C. Marshall, assistant commandant, and expressed his admiration and enjoyment of the pageant in the following letter:

Col. Geo. C. Marshall, President
Officers Club,
Fort Benning, Ga.
Dear Col. Marshall:

I wish that I had at my command words to express the extreme delight and pleasure afforded me on last evening at the "water tanks," the occasion of the reception given by the Officers' Club in honor of General and Mrs. King.

The reception was unique and inspiring. The brain flash and thrill will always remain with me, registering a great achievement. The ideal location, the spectacular formation and faultless execution do credit to those who planned and executed and performed.

I thank you again, again and again. My chief regret is that Mrs. Dimon and "Clayton Estes Read" could not have been present.

Cordially yours,
J. Homer Dimon.

(His honor, the mayor, refers in the last paragraph of his letter to a recently arrived grandson, whose parents, Capt. and Mrs. George A. Read, Jr., are in the Philippine Islands, where Capt. Read is on duty with the 57th Inf.)

ENGINEERS COMMENDED FOR RIVER CROSSING DEMONSTRATION

Several hundred spectators witnessed a recent river crossing demonstration during which Company A 7th Engineers, built a pontoon bridge across the Chattahoochee river at Fort Benning.

The demonstration was conducted for the benefit of student officers at the Infantry School.

Capt. W. F. Heavey, commanding the engineer company, was commended by the assistant commandant, for the efficient work of his company. Colonel Marshall's letter is as follows:

Fort Benning, Georgia
May 7, 1929.

The Commanding Officer
Company "A," 7th Engineers,
Fort Benning, Georgia.

My dear Captain Heavey:

I want you and the officers and men of your command to know that the hard and excellent work which assured the success of the recent river crossing demonstration, is greatly appreciated by the Academic Department. The fact that this difficult affair was carried through without untoward event, particularly without accident, makes the efficiency of your performance the more marked.

Faithfully yours,
G. C. Marshall, Jr.,
Assistant Commandant.

THERE'LL BE A TEN MINUTE BREAK

When weary heads begin to droop
And tired brains scarce keep awake
How welcome the instructor's word
"There'll be a 10 minute break."

The lecture may be hard and long
The subject much attention take
But every hour there's relief
"There'll be a ten minute break."

When we return to civil life
In various ways our living make
Oh would that then we'd also hear
"There'll be a ten minute break."

—Julius Festner, 1st Lt. Inf. Res.

TRANSFERRED TO AIR SERVICE

Lieut. Delma T. Spivey, recently on duty with Company A, 29th Inf., has been transferred to the air service.

Lieut. Spivey will report to the Air Corps Primary Flying School for duty and training late in June.

29TH INF.

Company "C"

The company is very busy preparing for maneuvers. The mess sergeant and supply sergeant, who have been on a vacation since last maneuvers, have resumed their duties and are certainly moving around.

Shortly after word was received that the company would hike out to Sulphur Springs, several men of the company requested passes for the week-end and a great many rode the sick report.

Corporal Ketterer was discharged Saturday, per E. T. S., and re-enlisted for the air service at Kelly Field, Texas. His many friends wish him the luck and the success that he deserves.

Pfc. Watson, our own little "Sunny Boy," has discontinued his daily trip to Columbus. We wonder why?

Corporal Manhart, our friend and advisor for the past few months will be discharged June 3rd, per E. T. S. We sure hate to see him leave; his smiling disposition will be missed around the orderly room.

Hdqrs. and Hdqrs. Co., 2nd Bat.

Well folks, for some reason or other there have been no news notes entered from this company the last two or three weeks. Some one is bound to ask the whyfore of this. Our company Scribe, Joseph Robert Patterson, has been discharged and has reenlisted. He didn't reenlist for the army though; stated that he would try a "stack" in civilian life. We wish him lots of luck. While we are telling you folks about the men we are losing I must tell you that the famous personage, Metro Boyka, a corporal, has been discharged this date. We wish that he has the same good luck that we wished for one J. R. Patterson.

We, the whole company, are overjoyed at the notice that was given us Saturday, the long waited order that permits us to don our khaki took effect Wednesday. Whoopee!

Everybody is pleased that maneuvers are so close upon us, for that means that we will soon be shooting on the range. We are going to ketch'em plenty bull's eyes this year.

What do you folks know about it? About what, you may ask? Well, here it is: Two of our privates first class, that have been on special duty for so long have come to do k. p.'s along with the rest of our boys. Hope they will like the change.

Men of this company are wondering why our supply sergeant is so restless these days, well, here is the secret: We We all know that he misses his roommate, Col. Smith, but it is not that that is troubling him so. He is the man that has the shortest time, of any in the company, to do. Can't say as I blame him, I would be restless myself. He is kind of doubtful as to whether he is going to reenlist this time; none of the rest of us are though. He is another of those that are going to retire within the service of Uncle Sam. Can't blame him for that either, as this is a mighty good place to be. Is there anybody that disagrees with me? No? Well, it is approved then. No further comments.

Oh yes, one more thing, we had two of our me nto place in the regimental horse Show, Pfc. Terrell Gordon and Pvt. Harp; congratulations boys.

Company "E"

Corporals Hobson Horton, Smith and Pfc. Basham were discharged by ETS last week. All decided to go back to the plow except Corporal Horton, who remained with the outfit. Corporal Horton is one of the most efficient NCO's of the company. "Kentucky" Joe Basham said he just wondered if the old coon dog would know him after an absence of three years.

Our radio bug, Corp. "Bean Pole" Milikan, says no more army after he completes his course with the radio school. The bean pole sure has an eye for the business. He is so tall and thin it does not take the radio long to soak clear through him.

E Company has furnished a commandant's orderly for the past five straight days, from the regimental main guard. That is quite a record for one company.

Pvt. Lewis, student clerk has been promoted to corporal and has taken over the work as company clerk at regimental headquarters. He has only been in the service seven months. One of our first cooks, McDuffie, has transferred to Co. F as a cook. Uncle Zed and Mc agreed to disagree.

We have with us one Robert Birdsong, who transferred from Co. A. Any one wishing to hear some good singing, just lend an ear to the 3d platoon of Co. E and hear Birdsong.

Grasshopper Oikari, is hopping around these days as busy as a man could possibly be. The Swede is making a fine assistant mess sergeant of himself. Our mighty man Hoot Gibson has been promoted to 1st cook and we are sure glad to see it.

Our supply sergeant, Frank Hinds sure is looking bad these days—looks like some one would recommend a tonic for him.

Company "E," lost Captain Rutledge May 6, 1929. He has commanded Co. E, since May 28, 1927. We have lost a fine company commander in Captain Rutledge but we are also getting a good one in his place, Captain M. R. Finney. Captain Finney has been coach in athletics in the Second Battalion since he has been in the 29th Infantry, which accounts for the high standard of athletics that now exists in the battalion.

Our black face comedian, George Boling, had just done an odd job for his brother while on furlough. On being asked what he would like, he suggested a drop of whiskey. His brother handed him the drink saying: "That's another nail in your coffin, George." "Well, brother, you old catfish, while you've got the hammer handy, drive in another."

Gadgett Miller (our ex-supply sergeant), had a dog around the company last week. One of the boys after inspecting the dog said: "Gadgett is he a good rabbit dog?" Gadgett said: "I'll say he is, you should have seen the way he went after my girl's new sealskin coat."

Sgt. Arevalo says the fellow that said you get out of anything just what you put into it, probably never played a slot-machine in Columbus, Georgia. Pvt. Snell, our assistant hair butcher, shaves a fellow like lightning. He never strikes twice in the same place. Shiek Stamper, the Kentucky red head, was called upon Saturday, 11th to umpire at the bases for the game between the 24th Inf| and the Sunshine babies. He made a good showing by helping the 24th Inf. win the game.

Company "F"

Since the departure of Inbad the Soldier, this outfit has been badly in need of a representative for the Infantry School News. The undersigned has been burdened with the job and those men in the company who have ideas or suggestions are requested to assist in compiling the weekly news.

The May discharge list is growing longer every day and seems to be a record breaker. Some of the fellows have re-enlisted and some of them are trying their luck on the "outside." Needless to say, the company wishes all of them successful careers in whatever they attempt.

In a practive game, Sunday, a baseball team composed of players from F and G was defeated by C Co. Barron and Allison twirled and Hawkins, the headquarters platoon representative, took 'em off the bats. This battery did very well, allowing only five hits—but errors in the field proved disastrous. Given a little more practice this outfit will be playing major league ball.

Company "G"

The following named privates first class of this organization have been promoted to the grade of corporal: Louis C. Smith, Thomas L. Latham, Walter J. Chauvin, Abel P. Galliano. This might be good news to the girls in Columbus, Ga., however the men of the company are glad to see you get it, corporals.

There are not many cars around the company now; the married men are walking instead, all except Sister Wiggins; the old Chevrolet is still running and that's all.

The second platoon has a new platoon sergeant. Sgt. Folsom has taken Warset's place, while Warset has been placed on S. D. as camp supply sergeant for the maneuver camps.

The company mess is coming along fine. Sgt. Davis told the men to let him know what they wanted and he would do his best to get it. Pretty nice, Sergeant, keep up the fine work, we are with you 100 per cent.

Ashes to ashes and dust to dust, we don't want black shoe polish; we want yellow, or bust.

General King inspected the Second Battalion Saturday morning and congratulated officers and companies for the way they tured out. The pressing club is sure helping out.

Private Higgins said to Private Joyner, "What struck you on your first visit to Columbus, Ga." Joyner replied, "A blackjack."

Bugler Baker was telling his bunking pals in the squad room about a few things that happened in town last night. "You know I went into a cafe and just as I got in there a fellow was choking a woman and there were a crowd watching them and one of the men asked me why someone didn't stop them; I told him that we thought it was a new dance."

Cook Gouldman has at last seen the end of his three year contract but he likes it so well here he has taken on another stack. We are glad to see you back with us Johnnie, and we wish you a happy time while on furlough.

Corporals Taylor and Brunsell are still blacking their sights with the infantry rifle team.

Private Mansfield said to Bugler Foster, "I'm not going to step out with Hazel any more," said Foster: Why not Kid? said Mansfield: "Well she did not invite me to her wedding."

Sgt. Folta told Sgt. Blankenship that he did not have to work in coal mine to catch a cold.

Private first class Woods is a long distance runner; he sure makes it to the mess hall in time.

We are glad to see Sgt. Swaney back from furlough; he tells us he had a fine time.

Corporal Price stopped one of the recruits in the day room and said, "Say, Buddy, didn't I run across your face before." The recruit replied, "I don't know corporal, this is the only face I've ever had."

A couple of the old timers left the company last week to try civil life, but they all come back sooner or later.

The commanding officer of the company received a letter from ex-sgt. Holland saying be had a good job and asked the captain to tell the men in the company that an excellent discharge is a thing that counts in civil life.

Well, we have a pressing club in the company now. Gee, that is the best thing that ever happened in the company. You will see the old bunch dressed to step out now.

They have to hand it to the 2d Bats for the way Co "H" turned out for the horse show. Boy, they had the world stopped with that machine gun cart and equipment. They could make a jewelry store look sick. The little mule looked just like a horse and the squad was

"F" Company moved into their new barracks a day or so back. This finishes us up. At last we are all under cover of a wooden roof, we made 'em ourselves, and we didn't make them on Government time either. Oh, well, we just naturally got tired of sleeping under canvas and in those slab-sided huts, so the regiment fell to and built its own barracks; painted 'em too.

We came out fairly well in the Horse Show. Got second on the Escort Wagon. We might have won this event had it not been for the 29th Infantry who put in a nickel-plated wagon and copped the blue ribbon. We got several other prizes which helped matters some, but this conveyance from the 29th kinda rankled in our soul. Watch out for us next time, we are coming to the Hoss Lionization then loaded for bear. We don't at all mind the 29th geting away with the blue ribbon on that wagon. Had we been giving the awards there would have been no second place behind that wagon. It was too far ahead of anything out there to have a second. But had everyone been able to foresee the dressed up entries there would probably have been two kinds of competitors in each class; one of strictly regulation and the other allowed to exceed regulations as much as they wished, and awards made in each class.

SERGEANT JOHNSON RETIRED

The 24th Inf. bade farewell to another of its "old army" soldiers a few days ago when Master Sergeant Marshall Johnson, of Headquarters Company, retired after serving the equivalent of thirty years i nthe regiment. Sergeant Marshall served for more than twenty-three years with company A and saw combat service with his company in the Philippine Islands in 1906 and 1907 and with the Punitive Expedition into Mexico in 1916 and 1917.

The high esteem in which Sergeant Marshall is held by the 24th. Inf. is indicated in the retirement order issued by Colonel Paul C. Galleher, commanding officer of the regiment. The order follows:

Headquarters 24th Inf.
Office of the Regimental Commander
Fort Benning, Georgia
April 23, 1929.

General Orders, No. 9:

Master Sergeant Marshall Johnson, R1022802, Headquarters Co., 24th Inf. will be retired this date, after the equivalent of thirty years service by paragraph 24, Special Orders No. 91, War Department, dated April 19, 1929.

Master Sergeant Johnson first enlisted for Company "A," 24th Inf. Feb. 27, 1904 and served continuously in that organization from that date to include Feb. 28, 1929 and in Headquarters Co., 24th Inf. from March 1, 1929 to date.

His service is as follows:

Company A., 24th Inf., Feb. 27, 1904 to Nov. 20, 1905.

Company A., 24th Inf., Nov. 21, 1905 to Nov. 20, 1908.

Company A., 24th Inf., Nov. 21, 1908 to Nov. 20, 1911.

Company A., 24th Inf., Nov. 21, 1911 to Nov. 20, 1914.

Company A., 24th Inf., Nov. 21, 1914 to April 1, 1919.

Company A., 24th Inf., April 2, 1919 to April 1, 1922.

Company A., 24th Inf., April 2, 1922 to April 1, 1925.

Company A., 24th Inf., April 2, 1925 to April 1, 1928.

Co. A & Hq. Co., 24th Inf., April 2, 1928 to date.

Master Serg. Johnson served in the Philippine Islands, from Feb. 20, 1906 to Feb. 15, 1908 and from Jan. 1, 1912 to Nov. 20, 1914; on the Island of Leyte, P. I., against hostile Pulajanes, during 1906 and 1907; in Mexico, during the Punitive Expedition from April 30, 1916 to Feb. 5, 1917 and in action against Mexican Rebels, Juarez, Mexico from June 15, 1919 to June 16, 1919.

This non-commissioned officer has served loyally, honestly and faithfully, and for steady application to duty, fidelity and good service, is rewarded by honorable retirement.

The quiet, efficient, pleasing personality and ever present spirit of cooperation which has marked the daily routine of Sergeant Johnson's duties will long serve as a standard of comparison by those who have served with him.

The regiment congratulates him on this successful conclusion of his career in active service and its good wishes accompany him upon his retirement to civil life.

By order of Col. Galleher
E. G. LINDROTH,
Capt. 24th Inf.
Asst. Adj.

CAPTAIN MANSFIELD BACK TO DUTY

Captain Frank Mansfield is back for duty with the regiment. He has been up to the big hospital at Washington where some minor operation was performed.

We are right glad Frank came back instead of going on a sick leave, he will be around this summer when all the target practice comes off and will doubtless be in a position to observe targets at very close range, yes, very close indeed.

"THE STUDENT" GOES TO SCHOOL

Capt. Harry M. Gwynn, whose column, the Student, has been enjoyed by readers of the Infantry School News for the past several months, has been assigned to duty at the University of Penn. at Philadelphia upon completion of his course with the Company Officers class.

Additional 29th Inf. Notes

dressed to kill. Fine work neighbors, we are glad to have you all around.

A certain fellow in the 2d platoon was asked his orders. The officer of the day said, "Sentry are your orders divided into two classes?" "No, Sir, I got them all myself, Sir."

Company "H"

Pfc. Pratt is to be discharged on the 13th. Here's hoping to see him back with the company soon after, or we sure will miss that good ol' co'n pone. But, should the outside call, and you continue your culinary efforts, the best of luck and hope the next time you're seen, it will be head chef in the biggest night club in the country.

Corporals Pieters and Ryan are slated for finals soon. When Corporal Pieters was asked if he was going to re-enlist, his answer was most emphatic, but in what direction, we refuse to say. One can never tell what one will do until the time comes for one to do it. Anyway, we have no doubts that they all come back for more.

Cpls. Pieters and Ryan were discharged this week. Two very good men whom we hope to see back with us before the end of the month. The company was somewhat elated to learn that Sgt. DePratt had re-enlisted wth this company. Pvts. Brown and Gatewood have decided to try civvy life for a while and are awaiting their discharge by purchase. Pvt. Rainer has left us by the purchase route.

This company will, as usual, turn out for the post horse show in full regalia and bring home the ribbons and loving cups that are an annual event in our history.

On May 10th, every man in the company wrote to his home, the letters to reach there on or before Mother's Day. It is very gratifying that so many men of the company showed their appreciation for what their parents have done for them, by remembering them on Mother's Day.

GOOD CARD FOR FIGHT FANS TUESDAY

Seaweed Wilson	vs.	Lou Magnolia	4 Rounds
Corn Griffin	vs.	Butch Seronski	4 "
Grumpy Gordy	vs.	Hefty Hooker	4 "
Eddie Brault	vs.	Big Bill Thompson	6 "
Saginaw Seeley	vs.	Marshall Cardwell	8 "
Walker Smith	vs.	Glenn Chancey	10 "

Six Fort Benning bruisers will battle a like number of outside mit slingers when the next card, booked for Tuesday night, May 21st, gets under way.

Every one of the six visitors is a stranger to the local fight fans. If a line were drawn from Jacksonville, Florida, through Ellijay, Ga., thence to Macon, straight ahead to Atlanta, doubled back to LaGrange, and then tied in a knot at a point two looks from the Upatoi, one would get a fair idea of the region that will furnish the six new faces on the coming bill.

Glenn Chancey, who tops the show with Walker Smith, is the Jacksonville resident. Chancey needs little, if any introduction, for his name has been before the boxing public continually for the past year. At the time Stribling fought Sharkey in Miami, the name that was coupled with Strib's in all the dispatches was the same Chancey. On his way to Miami to prepare for the fight, Stribling stopped off in Jacksonville and sparred a four round exhibition with Glenn for the benefit of the fans of that city.

The accounts from the camp where the Macon flash put in his training licks usually carried the lines. Stribling worked six fast rounds today with Glenn Chancey." Up to the eve of the fight this same Chancey was the big noise for the semi-windup. Then trouble hit the Jacksonville boy in large gobfuls. The moment Chancey got into the public eye the sharks of the game started a squabble over his contract. Two months later the courts decided the issue. In the meantime Glenn lost his semi-windup and many more lucrative engagements.

Now for a close-up of the boy selected for Smith. Three times he has met Mike Firpo, the Florida caveman. Twice Chancey got the nod; his third effort resulted in a decision for Mike. It was the same Firpo that knocked out Maud Farley in Atlanta recently; the same boxer who has fought Battling Finch four times. In addition to Firpo, the visitor has met and defeated the following: Bob Godwin, Len Carpenter, Ed Beasley, Earl Hudson, Red Boyette, Joe Knight, Brady O'Hara, Jeff Glaze, and Tony Varrecila.

If Walker Smith is able to overcome the Chancey obstacle, then there is no use waiting any longer in matching him against the best in the country. His opponent Tuesday night is really the outstanding light heavy in Georgia and Florida. Much depends on the coming fight from the Smith viewpoint. Is Walker better than we think, or has he up to the present been shoving over the setups? His fight with Chancey will decide.

Saginaw Seeley has a tough assignment cut out for him in the semi-windup of eight rounds. This Cardwell is the boy that has polished off such boxers as Dallas Hunt, Billy Shell, Kid Harris, Young Jack Dempsey, Ted Cole and a score of others. Seeley and Cardwell both weigh in at 150. This will be a hummer sure.

If you haven't met Big Bill Thompson of Macon, then it is a certainty that you have heard of him. Down at the 15th Tank Battalion Area there is a contractor, named J. D. Mangham, who is building a new home for the Tankers. Every blue print consulted by the contractor is blurred with the record of Big Bill. Every other order given by the builder is preceded with an account of what Big Bill has done, will do, and how he will do it. Thompson will meet that brusing southpaw, Eddie Brault, in a six rounder. There has been more chatter already spilled about this fight than one would hear about twenty bouts. Even the Mercer University baseball team, which played at the Post last Wednesday, seemed more concerned about Big Bill winning his fight than they did about winning the ball game. Over in Macon they are strong for native sons.

Grumpy Gordy is on the card. It was necessary to make a special trip to Ellijay to get Hefty Hooker, a neighbor of Young Jack Dempsey, to take on Grumpy in a four rounder. Young Jack thinks a lot of Hefty and mentioned his name when he fought here with DeMars. A sparring partner of Glenn Chancey is listed with Corn Griffin the new addition to the 15th Tank Battalion. Chancey's punching bag was christened Butch Sorenski. Seaweed Wilson in another four rounder meets Lou Magnolia of Athens, Ga., picked by Willie Ptomey as a coming champion.

In looking over Benning's offerings on the next card, the fact stands out that the six boys representing the Post are of the type that swing leather every minute they are in there. Don't miss the coming show; action seems certain.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT SHOWS FAST GAMES

The Infantry School Tennis Tournament is well under way, with the contests becoming more heated each day.

To date, the hardest contested sets were fought out in the mixed doubles. Colonel Marshall and Miss King defeated Major T. Smith and Miss Torrey 6-2 and 7-2. The count was deuce and somebody's add so many times that it would take a nadding machine to keep the count. Several times the matter was so serious for either opposition that it was dangerous for one to sneeze.

The tournament is attracting more attention than any tournament held here previously. Tennis is truly an aristocrat of athletics.

Mens' singles: Hedekin 6-6 vs. Daniels 1-3; Lane 2-6-6 vs. Landis 6-1-3; Graves 6-4-4 vs. Heavey 1-6-3; Wessels 6-6 vs. Overfelt 1-2; Bobby Withers 6-6 vs. Moore 3-3; Wessels 6-6 vs. Dewitt 1-0; Cralle 6-8 vs. Lane 3-6; Smith 6-4-6 vs. Graling 1-6-3; Major Withers 4-6-8 vs. Graves 6-0-6; Bassett 6-6 vs. Randell 3-1; Whaley 6-6 vs. Cralle 4-2.

Ladies singles: Mrs. Cook 6-6 vs. Miss Perry 1-0; Mrs. Brimmer 6-6 vs. Mrs. Doll 0-0; Miss King 6-6 vs. Miss Torrey 3-3; Miss Brandt 6-6 vs. Miss Newbaker 2-0; Miss Wells 6-6 vs. Mrs. Vernon 4-1; Mrs. Wessels 6-6 vs. Miss Wells 1-3.

Mixed doubles: Capt. Whaley and Mrs. Brimmer 7-2-6 vs. Major Landis and Mrs. Cook 5-6-3; Col. Marshall and Miss King 6-7 vs. Major T. Smith and Miss Torrey 2-5.

Mens' doubles: Bobby Withers and Major Withers 8-6-6 vs. Graling and Smith 6-8-2.

DOUGHBOYS TRIM AUBURN FRESHMEN

The Infantry team defeated Auburn Freshmen last Saturday in a game that was marred by errors on both sides. Smith, pitching for the invaders, was unable to find the plate, passing seven men on balls. However, he struck out four men against the veteran Carnes' two.

The game was very slow from the opening gong, the Freshmen earning one run and the Infantry two, however, other runs were made on errors, wild pitches and fluke plays. Kjelstrom took the batting honors for the day, hitting two doubles to the right and left field fences.

The Infantry team showed exceptional form considering the practice that they had had for the past three weeks. During that time they had had but one day's practice. It looks as though the Infantry will put out a winning team yet. Still no one can say that they are anywhere near the worst now; just hard luck, that's all.

PERMANENTS BEAT STUDENTS BY CLOSE SCORE

The student officers' and permanent officers' baseball teams met last Friday afternoon, and a hilarious time was had by all. One of the reasons for such excellent playing by both teams, is that they play only once a year, and they have all the rest of that time for practice. The students were charged with two errors, while the Permanents were charged with eight.

Of course, the opening round had to have its little scene of horse play. As the two teams marched in, led by the 24th Infantry Band, the umpires were trying to figure some way in which to get to their places. As a last resort, they climbed into a tank, and were driven to the plate. The two squads from "H" Company, 29th Infantry, tried to check the advance of the tank by their machine gun fire, but the tank came on unscathed and undaunted. The umpires safely delivered, the tank retired from the field, followed by the machine gunners.

HAPPY HEARTS TAKE TWO FROM SUNSHINE BABIES

The Happy Hearts from the 24th Infantry took the three game series from the Sunshine Babies of St. Petersburg, Florida, winning two. All three of the games were marked by too many errors by both teams. Cutting the errors from the games, they would hav been exceptionally good games with close scores.

In the first game, played Thursday of last week, The Happy Hearts held the opposition to a lone tally until the seventh frame, while they were collecting fourteen hits and eleven runs. In the seventh, the Sunshine Babies went hog wild and began to bust the pill to all parts of the lot, to pile up four runs.

They repeated this performance in the eighth, to run the count to nine, but were unable to count in the ninth to tie the score. It was lucky for the 24th, too, for they seemed to have slipped into a hitting slump, with slim chances of ever recovering.

The batteries: 24th Infantry, Vance-Gilchrist. Sunshine Babies, Pelham- G. Williams. Score: 24th Infatnry: 11. Sunshine Babies: 9.

Friday, the Sunshine Babies showed a reduction in errors from seven Thursday to three Friday, while the 24th Infantry had an increase from two Thursday to six Friday. McCrary, taking the garden position for the Happy Hearts, piled up two errors against his account before he could be relieved by Seats in the seventh.

The Sunshine Babies scored one in the second stanza and two in the fourth to make the count three nothing. The Happy Hearts counted one in the fourth and two in the sixth to tie the score, but in the fateful seventh, Grant reached first on an error by Seats, who had relieved McCrary, and reached third on J. Johnson's bingle down the third base line. Johnson stole second and scored on Stanton's safety to left. This brought the score to five three, with the Sunshine Babies leading. The 24th Infantry in their half of the final scene, were unable to count. Seats gained a hit through second, but was caught trying to commit larceny on the second bag. Gilchrist and Stokes were retired in order by the versatile Jack Johnson, pitching for the Alligator tribe.

Batteries: 24th Infantry, Stokes-Gilchrist. Sunshine Babies; J. Johnson-G. Williams. Score: 24th Infantry: 3, Sunshine Babies: 5. (Seven innings).

The 24th Infantry cut their error column down to two while the Alligator Tribe added four to theirs in the final game of the series Saturday. Trammel held the Florida contingent to six scattered hits while his mates gleaned fifteen from Pittman. The game was very uninteresting after the fifth chucker, the Happy Hearts having proven their sovereignty by that time. Trammel continued to pitch good ball, striking out four men, issuing no free tickets, while his buddies coaxed two passes and none of them kicked the bucket.

Batteries: 24th Infantry, Trammel-Gilchrist. Sunshine Babies, Pittman-G. Williams. Score. 24th Infantry 9. Sunshine Babies: 1.

ROOSMA STARS INFANTRY-MERCER GAME

Johnny Roosma came back to the mound in Wednesday's game when the Infantry played Mercer, and won his game, even though the boys from Macon failed to have mercy upon him. They hit him for seven bingles, only one of them being for more than a lone bag, and it was for only two. It was only the almost perfect fielding of his team that saved him from defeat, while he kept the hits scattered. Only one error was charged against the Infantry, and that when Cooper tried for a hard one, caught it and then dropped it. Hard luck was all one could call it.

Reddock, a new man at the third station, played a perfect game, and took the hitting honors by getting two of the three allowed the Infantry.

The Macon team made five errors; Infantry being credited with one earned run. The game was close from the start to finish with danger of either side winning with the break. Labuzan, playing the garden spot for the Infantry for the first time, robbed Macon batters of hits, and was instrumental in a beautiful double play when he received Walker's fast roller over second, forced Campbell at second and then threw to first to retire Walker.

The score by innings:

Infantry .... 0 0 0 0 1 0 1 0 x—2

GEORGIA TECH TAKES LACROSSE GAME FROM INFANTRY

The Infantry LaCrosse team was defeated again last Saturday afternoon by the strong team rrom Georgia Tech. In the first half of the game, neither team was able to score, the ball being in the possession of the Infantry the majority of the time. The inability of the Musketeers to shoot goals is all that kept them from scoring, they had several chances for goals, but the throws went wild. Tech's defense was rather weak from the start.

The Jackets came back in the second half, with the determination to score, and proceeded to do so in the beginning of that half. Several tries were blocked by the Infantry goal keeper, Dunn, who played an exceptional game at this position.

After having several more of their tries for points blocked by the consistent Dunn, the Jackets slipped one over after about fifteen minutes of the second half had begun. This was to be their last, as the Infantry took the ball in their possession, and proceeded to keep it there. Serf broke through in the last few minutes or play and scored Benning's lone point by a brilliant piece of running, twistig, and finally, a perfect throw to the goal.

The Yellow Jackets were in better condition than the Infantry, which fact alone, gave them the edge on the battle. This and their good passwork, were outstanding features of the game.

PERMANENTS BEAT STUDENTS BY CLOSE SCORE

which. As he wound up to deliver the first ball, he switched the ball for another "ball" and grooved the plate with it. Collette, the first batter up, took a mighty slice at it, but his home run blew up. The ball turned out to be a wolf in sheep's clothing, or rather an orange in a piece of denim. Well, after Collette got the orange juice out of his eyes, and the seeeds from his ears, the game proceeded in good order. He got a hit, a slow roller where the pitcher could not field it. Good revenge.

The students scored one in the second and two in the fourth, to make their count of three. The Permanents were unable to score until the fifth, when Kammerer led off with a hard drive through third, stole second, went to third on Buckley's fast one to second and scored on Nevins' sacrifice.

In the sixth, Privett hit for McKechnie, and the ball went smack through the ptcher's legs, repeated with the second baseman, and passed up the fielders like a pay car passing up a tramp. He drove Roosma home, who had gleaned his only hit just ahead of him, and came home himself, all in, tieing the score.

Buckley then got his sole hit of the game, a three bagger, and was driven in by Nevins, who failed to get a hit for the whole game, but drove in two runs.

The heroes of the game: Nevins and Privett, for accounting for all four of their team's runs. The Student team, for completing a double play with nearly all handling the ball.

Score: Permanent Officers, 4; Student Officers, 3.

THE STUDENT—(By H. M. G.)

The week opened with a ball game between the Permanent personnel and the Undergraduates. As predicted by a press agent, there debouched from a tank the figure of a perfect tank 36, and the umpiring was on. According to the press agent, hilarity was to be the order of the day, but somebody took the game seriously and the result was not much fun but some very good baseball. The exception to this statement was the playing of McGoofus Smith who insisted on bouncing the ball to first base and off his bat. Captain Conmey and Collette for the out-of-towns covered themselves with a couple of days fame. The professional air of Lt. McClure crouching behind the bat was also a matter of comment. There was some doubt as to whether he was crouching or resting, but that is a mere detail. As a matter of fact it was the Nehi uniform that he wore that held the eye. This uniform was of a grape complexion with a pin stripe running through it. I understand that it was this sartorial creation that distracted the professional attention of McGoofus Smith. At the bat, Captain McCord defended, McFayden attacked, and so Ireland was saved. Did you notice Fingarson's side wheel paddle motion on circling the bases, or rather the one base that he did circle. It looked mechanized to me. Rees played well, thereby confounding his former associates; and Squire Foster made only one error due to too much equitation at an early age.

Notes from the little red school house: During the hands-above-head periods of Maj. Brett we listened to a very human and capable advocate of a not so human article. We have now reached the point where we are ready to buy a few shares of tank future.

Dan—Wanted to know where aviators came from. Evidently doesn't believe in Santa Claus.

Evans—Failed to raise his hand.
Virture—Is its own reward.
Orsinger—Got 100 per cent.
Boyle—Believes in consistency.
Black—Has become attached to Ga.

You have heard so many strange situations of late that I am now going to tell you a bed time story. This is a sad little story, the only sad little story in fact that the tactics section—hasn't given us. It makes no never mind whether you attack or not, and not a tut tut for the defensive. So, once upon a time, on a certain day to be exact, the Black Serff of Holland digging cold Steele into his Hackney rode to a Bower, where he waited for a lady of Virtue to Caum. (So far, terrible.) Special situation: But Moore came than were expected, in fact, Tripletts, wha was to be Dunn? Solutions will be placed in your boxes. However, with a wild cry the Black Serff sprang upon a Craig that overhung the Bower, and the green grass grew all around.

"Hold" he cried as sore as a Boyle, "if one of you advance, I'll Skinner." Evidently he didn't like advances. "Before one of you can Wear my crown of Sunstones you must tell me if you have loved before. If you lie you die." The girls were certainly having their Upson downs.

"Well," said Faith tenderly, "I once loved a Baker and I can still smell the sweet Odor of his bread."

"And I" murmured Hope with her eyes cast down in maidenly modestly (I don't know the exact date of this story but it must have been a long time ago). "I once loved a sailor. I can see him standing in the Riggin, while he looks proudly down upon his shipload of Salmon and Stourgeon."

"As for me," answered Charity pertly, "I am too young for that stuff." (Remember this is an old story.)

One of these three must the Black Serff choose. Required: orders and actions of the head man. Solution: Picking up a Sharp Stone he slew Faith and Charity. (The what and how. The why follows.) Then laying them in their little Graves, together with the Toole of his misdemeanor, he folded the Navy's Hope in his arms and as they rode off on his Hackney, he was heard to murmur, "At least, you know how."

INFANTRY TEAM SQUAD SELECTED FOR CAMP PERRY

Selection of thirty members of the Infantry team squad was completed this week by Major B. G. Chynoweth, captain of the Infantry team, after extended try-outs which have been in progress since March. 101 candidates for places on the Infantry team squad were comprised in the group which began shooting on the Fort Benning rifle ranges in March, and which has now been reduced by eliminations to 30 members. This group will continue firing at Fort Benning until June 4, when it will be in readiness to depart for Camp Perry, Ohio where the National matches will be held during September. Fifteen additional members of the team squad will be ordered to Camp Perry direct from their stations and will join the Fort Benning group at Camp Perry. These men are all excellent shots and due to their proficiency in marksmanship, they were not required to participate in the try-outs at Fort Benning. Excellent scores were made during the final tryouts on the Fort Benning range, the highest being made by Sergt. McWillie James, 25th Infantry whose total was 833, 3 points higher than that of Sgt. A. One Hundred and Thirty-eight Officers Complete Course

Graduation exercises were held Thursday in the Main Theatre, Fort Benning for 138 members of the national guard and reserve company officers courses who successfully completed the prescribed 3 months course at the Infantry School. Ninety-seven are graduates of the rifle course and forty-one of the machine gun and howitzer course.

At 10:30 Thursday morning, the graduating officers assembled in the Main Theatre where the graduation exercises took place. The program began with the Infantry song "Follow Me" played by the 29th Infantry band and was followed by an invocation by Chaplain Frank L. Rosenthal, O. R. C. The classes were then addressed briefly by Brig-Gen. Campbell King, Commandant of Fort Benning and by Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, Chief of Infantry. The graduates were then presented with their diplomas by Gen. Fuqua.

A benediction pronounced by Chaplain Daniel J. McCarthy, O. R. C. and "Auld Lang Syne" rendered by the 29th Infantry band, completed the program. Following are those who were awarded diplomas:

CHIEF OF STAFF TO VISIT FORT BENNING

Official information has been received that General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the army, will arrive at Fort Benning May 31 for a two-day visit.

Plans for the reception and entertainment of General Summerall include a pageant depicting the outdoor recreational life of Fort Benning which will be given at Ebbert Hill on the afternoon of the general's arrival.

General Summerall's inspections will include observation of the work of the student officers at the maneuver camps at Harmony Church and Sulphur Springs.

General Summerall will depart from Fort Benning June 1.

Major General Stephen O. Fuqua, Chief of Infantry

Maj. Gen. Stephen O. Fuqua, Chief of Infantry, arrived from Washington Wednesday for an official visit and inspection tour at Fort Benning, which will last several days. General Fuqua arrived in Columbus at 8:10 Wednesday evening and was met at the depot by Colonel George C. Marshall, Assistant Commandant, and Captain F. H. Partridge, Secretary of the Infantry School, and was accompanied by them to Fort Benning, where he will be the guest of Colonel Marshall until his departure early next week. This is General Fuqua's first visit to Fort Benning since his appointment as chief of infantry.

At 9:00 A. M. Thursday a salute was fired in honor of General Fuqua by Battery "B," 83rd Field Artillery.

At 10:30, General Fuqua attended the graduation exercises of the national guard and reserve officers class, which were held at the Main Theatre. In his address to the graduating class, General Fuqua expressed his great pleasure at having the opportunity of congratulating the officers of the national guard and reserve classes on their achievement in graduating from the school. He also expressed the hope that they would not let their military careers end with the awarding of their diplomas. The general told of a number of appointments which he had held which have made him familiar with the problems of the national guard and reserves. He pointed out that their contact with civilian life greatly influenced the attitude of the people toward military life. Because of the comparatively small number of officers who have enjoyed the advantages of the Infantry School, the graduates will necessarily become teachers for others, he said.

The general spoke of the reserve officer's training corps as especially worthy of support. He stated that every man in the R. O. T. C. is a brick in the wall of national defense.

The general pointed out the high standard of conduct and ability which is established and demanded by the army. He also mentioned the fact that no other profession trains a man so thoroughly as does the army, and in no other line of endeavor are the mental, moral, and physical standards so high.

The general warned the class against the fallacious doctrines of pacifism, and

FRIDAY MAY 24

"CLEAR THE DECKS," starring Reginald Denny in a rollicking comedy of the high seas. An explorer, who has just returned to civilization from Africa, falls in love with the first pretty girl he sees; he trails her to a ship and arranges to exchange places with another passenger. Two jewel thieves on board endeavor to steal the girl's pearl necklace. The manner in which the explorer becomes mixed up with the affair causes more ludicrous situations than you can imagine. He is judged insane, is imprisoned, manages to escape, and one mix-up after another follows. Reginald Denny—'nuf sed. If laughter is injurious to your health don't see this picture.

"Barnyard Politics." Fables.

"Pathe News No. 41."

SATURDAY MAY 25

"TRAIL OF THE HORSE THIEVES," starring Tom Tyler with Frankie Darrow in a story concerning cattle rustlers in the bad lands. A vagrant cowboy, blinded in a desert sand storm, wanders into the rendezvous of a band of horse thieves—they become suspicious and decide to throw him into nearby quick sand—he escapes, and when nearly exhausted, is found by the daughter of a neighboring rancher. He learns that the thieves are preying upon this rancher's cattle and accepts a job. Plot and counter plot ensue, causing exceptionally thrilling action. One of the most outstanding dramatic high lights is a scene where Tyler is forced by bandits to enter the treacherous quick sands in which he is gradually sinking to his death only to be saved after a terrific struggle. There is a captivating romance angle.

"Spare Ribs Reforms." Toots and Casper.

SUNDAY MAY 26

"WOMAN DISPUTED," starring Norma Talmadge in a strong drama of love and laughter throbbing to the heart beats of humanity. The story is laid in Lemburg during the terrible struggle between Austria and Russia. It concerns a beautiful girl, her two lovers, Austrian and Russian officers, and nobility. The powerful romance angle tells of a girl who, under terrible strain, sacrifices all but life for love and country. Many men desired her, two men disputed her, one man won her, but only at a terrific cost. It is fast moving, powerful, and unconventional. There is exotic love, exciting adventure, delightful romance and mysterious intrigue. All pictures laid in Europe have proven most entertaining to our audiences. This one is considered outstanding.

"Pathe Review."

"M. G. M. News No. 79."

MONDAY MAY 27

"MARQUIS PREFERRED," starring Adolph Menjou in a rich, romantic comedy. The story is laid in a magnificent French chateau. Many scenes of Paris streets and parks are included. The story concerns a bankrupt nobleman who agrees to let his tailor, valet and chief find him a wealthy wife—just as they accomplish this feat the marquis falls in love with a penniless American girl, and his efforts to reconcile his love with his promise, make up a most amusing theme. Following are the basic elements of the plot: A marquis overwhelmed by debts and pressed by creditors; schemers endeavoring to gain riches through intrigue; and the uncovering of a plot which leads into a mystic maze of comical situations. Chester Conklin himself adds emphatically to the comedy angle.

"Mystery Rider No. 5."

TUESDAY MAY 28

"BLINDFOLD," starring Lois Moran with George O'Brien in a story of intrigue amid luxurious settings. It tells how jewelry thieves are brought to earth by a patrolman after they had murdered the brother of a girl to whom he is engaged—he has to buck not only the criminal activities of the gang but also their lawyers and "fixed" witnesses. The story leads you through humble, luxurious city life, police stations, jewelry stores and court rooms. It is one of those types of plot which binds your eyes to the screen from the opening of the curtain to the gripping climax at the termination of the story.

"Covering Ground." Sport.

"Topics of the Day."

WEDNESDAY MAY 29

"THE CASE OF LENA SMITH," starring Esther Ralston who is backed by a strong cast. The story is laid in Austria-Hungry, bounding between Vienna and a small Hungarian village. Starting with a prologue in 1914, the scene shifts back to the girlhood of a mother who watches her son march off to war. It pictures her love affair, her suffering, and sacrifices for her son. Peasantry and military offiicals are involved.

In this story Miss Ralston plays a dual role; first, that of a spirited Hungarian peasant girl of twenty, and second, as a woman of luxury and wealth arrayed in vivid Viennese costumes. It is an absorbing melodrama.

"M. G. M. News No. 80."

THURSDAY MAY 30

"THE SIDE SHOW," featuring Marie Prevost and Ralph Graves in an intensely thrilling adventure drama against a most colorful circus background. This story is an excellent illustration of how physical limitation is no great handicap when there is will to do. The story concerns a dwarf who has graduated from side show artists and become the owner of a big circus. Keen competition develops between his show and another, and during the efforts to gain supremacy, intrigue and most uncanny means are employed. This plotting causes a continuity of gripping situations. The story revolves about a pathetic, almost tragic, love theme. For this picture, some of today's greatest side show freaks were collected by the producers at Hollywood. The climax is considered one of the most awe-inspiring situations ever presented upon the screen.

"The Flag." Great Event-Technicolor.

FRIDAY MAY 31

"CAUGHT IN THE FOG," starring Mae McAvoy and Conrad Nagel in an amusing mystery comedy. The locale is a millionaire's palatial yacht off the Florida coast. A lady and a sheik bandit come aboard with the intent of stealing a string of pearls—they encounter the owner who summarily beats up the bandit and forgives the girl, making up his mind to gain possession of her. All of them are thrown headlong into an onslaught of crooks and cops. Pandemonium, fun, and furore ensue. Combine mystery with comedy and you have an ideal picture which not only holds your attention in a vise-like grip, but, also relieves the nervous strain by shaking loose the laughter ducts of your tear producers.

"Flying Hoofs." Fables.

Treasure Hunt Given by Major and Mrs. Lewis

On Wednesday afternoon Maj. and Mrs. E. E. Lewis entertained forty-eight friends in a novel and exceptionally delightful way. At 3:30 the guests assembled at Lewis quarters on Austin Loop and there got an inkling of a treasure hidden somewhere. Each group had a trail to scout, and it was one that could be gone over in cars, so the hunt soon began. At the various stations, further directions always lured the treasure seekers on, and finally all trails led to a picturesque picnicing place on the Upatoi where the guests were served a most delicious picnic dinner. If there is anything that can create a sensation almost equal to making "a hole in hole" it is to get an invitation to dine with the Lewises, for Mrs. Lewis is as famous for her delectable dinners as she is for her golf. Those included in this hospitality were: Gen. and Mrs. King, Mrs. Lott, wife of Gen. Lott of Atlanta, Col. Marshall, Mrs. Singer, Mrs. Clyde Abraham of Ft. McPherson, Maj. and Mrs. Fletcher, Maj. and Mrs. Ferris, Maj. and Mrs. Lyman, Maj. and Mrs. Truman Smith, Maj. and Mrs. Patch, Maj. and Mrs. Chynoweth, Maj. and Mrs. H. M. J. Smith, Maj. and Mrs. Rader, Maj. and Mrs. Schmidt, Maj. and Mrs. Hoge, Maj. and Mrs. Leard, Maj. and Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Bull, Capt. and Mrs. Rogers, Capt. and Mrs. Fortier, Capt. and Mrs. Roger Williams, Capt. and Mrs. Jackson, Capt. and Mrs. Mallan, Capt. and Mrs. Forsythe, Capt. and Mrs. McClure, Capt. De Ware.

General and Mrs. Campbell King entertained at dinner at Biglerville on Thursday evening. Their table had for its centerpiece a low bowl of pink Killarney roses and pink sweet peas, and surrounding it were silver candlesticks holding slim pink tapers tied with pink tulle from which fell a shower of sweet peas. Covers were laid for fourteen and the guest list included the commanding officers of the larger units of the garrison and their wives. Those present were: Gen. Villa, Col. and Mrs. Daniel G. Berry, Col. and Mrs. Harris Pendleton, Col. and Mrs. Paul C. Galleher, Col. and Mrs. Harry E. Knight, Col. George C. Marshall, Mrs. Singer, and Maj. R. M. Hollock.

Beebe, provided charming entertainment.

Master Harrell Strickland celebrated his seventh birthday with a dandy party on Tuesday May 21st. At 4 o'clock about twenty of his friends gathered and after playing various prize winning games on the lawn they were taken to the dining room where each found a gay paper hat, a balloon, a basket of salted nuts, a plate of ice cream and a huge square of birthday cake at his place.

On Sunday afternoon, the officers and ladies of the 24th Infantry gave Col. Galleher a surprise birthday party. They had planned to have a regimental flag golf tournament followed by a picnic supper, but the heavy rain in the early afternoon necessitated a change of plans, and an informal supper party was held at the Polo club. General and Mrs. King and the officers and ladies of the 24th Infantry honored the Colonel on this happy occasion.

GOURMANDIZERS ENTERTAINED

Last Sunday afternoon, with a most disrespectful and optimistic disregard of J. Pluvious, the Fort Benning Gourmandizers took possession of the garrison golf course and proceeded to have a merry go of it; the regular "cast," consisting of Major and Mrs. E. E. Lewis, Major and Mrs. C. W. Ryder, Major and Mrs. W. G. Livesay, Capt. and Mrs. John E. Dahlquist, Capt. and Mrs. Walter T. Scott, Capt. and Mrs. James Taylor, Capt. and Mrs. V. G. Huskea, Capt. and Mrs. E. J. Buckbee, Capt. and Mrs. E. E. Walker, with Capt. and Mrs. Hugh A. Wear from Columbus "pinch hitting" for "Doc" and Mrs. W. E. Niles, produced a "play" worthy of Hollywood's most capable talent.

Colonel Galleher, Capt. and Mrs. Waine Archer, Lieut. Walden S. Lewis and Miss Elizabeth Archer, kindly consented to join as "extras," and from all accounts shared equal honors with the best talent of the entire "cast."

However, but about 3:30 p. m., J. Pluvious was so outraged that he proceeded to "wash" them off the course, whereupon most of the players proceeded to the quarters of Major and Mrs. Livesay to participate in a "royal feast"; here the "heavy lead" was taken by Capt. Taylor as the "serenading Gaucho" (with a cream puff in each hand); Mrs. Livesay as "Maid of the Mountain Stream" rendering a piano selection of "The Indian Love Song" with most enviable technique; and Mrs. Hugh A. Wear as "The Jolly Maid of Main" also made the "ivories hustle" to some very delightful music. Capt. Dahlquist, as "The Merry Man from Minnesoti," exhibited some remarkable talent as an exponent of "The Hula Maid," (much to the chagrin of "Doc" Niles who was not able to "figure the square root of such evil contortions".)

Capt. and Mrs. Huskea, acting as "directors" for the occasion, vouch to all (including the absent members of the "regular cast") that the setting was "most appetizing," due principally to the kindness of Major and Mrs. Livesay in permitting the use of their "studio," and to Mrs. Walter T. Scott for the contribution (without participation) of such delicious cream puffs.

The next event by The Gourmandizers will be "staged" this Sunday under the "able direction" of Capt. and Mrs. Dahlquist, at the same time and at the same starting point.

IS COURAGE OUT OF DATE?

An eminent contemporary writer, in an article on the Civil War, appearing in a recent number of a popular weekly magazine, says:". . . there will be no more great leaders. The necessity and field for great leaders have vanished; greatness, now, is a discreet science."

Further on his dogmatism takes this form of expression: "There will never be another war so purely valorous, because valor itself, it is beginning to be seen, is not a practical virtue. Machinery and chemical war have taken its place. Courage is not so habitual now as cunning—yes, men are sensible rather than brave. That is, beyond question, an improvement."

Only a few weeks ago, half the civilized world paused to pay tribute to the memory of a great leader who had directed millions of its men to victory in the greatest war the world has ever known.

Certainly there was necessity for a great leader in the dark days when the allies were so hard pressed; certainly there was a field for a great leader; and certainly such a leader appeared in that crisis, just as leaders have always appeared and always will appear in times of stress.

The meaning of the statement that "greatness, now, is a discreet science," is not clear. Perhaps the author has discovered that his boyhood vision of a general gallantly leading a charge with drawn sabre is not an accurate one, therefore, he comes to the conclusion that there are no more great leaders.

Valor did indeed, characterize the Civil War, but no more so than in many other wars before and since that sanguinary conflict. Valor is not merely a war-time virtue; it is something that lives constantly in the hearts of men; it is manifested almost as frequently in the crises of everyday life, although seldom as spectacularly, as on the battlefield.

Valor must, then, be a practical virtue, else it would cease to be an attribute of mankind. The introduction of "machinery and chemical war" in modern combat certainly calls for no less courage on the part of those who have to face them than was required of soldiers before these deadly instruments of wholesale slaughter appeared on the battlefield.

The hundreds of awards of decorations for bravery, frequently made in recognition of such acts as the capturing of machine gun nests single-handed by men armed only with a rifle, pistol or a hand grenade, refute the statement that courage is not now habitual and that men are sensible rather than brave.

As instruments of warfare become more deadly, more personal courage must be required of the men who must face them. This is particularly true of the infantryman, whose unarmored body is the target of rifle and bayonet, machine guns, cannon, tanks, aerial bombs, chemicals, fire, and every other deadly weapon of modern combat.

The infantryman, armed with a rifle and a bayonet, not only faces these things, he advances against them and holds his ground despite all their efforts to blow him out of it or to suffocate him where he stands.

Does it take courage? It does, and plenty of it.

Courage, indeed, is not out of date.

GRADUATES!

The graduation of the national guard and reserve officers from the three month course at the Infantry School, marks another step toward binding together the three components of the Army of the United States.

These graduates, now conversant with the very latest infantry training methods, will apply them in the training of their own national guard and reserve units, and each of them will enjoy a new prestige by virtue of his graduation from the Infantry School.

By training a group of reserve and national guard officers each year at the Infantry School, the regular army is steadily raising the efficiency of the citizen components and bringing them nearer to the standards of the homogeneous force which is the ultimate goal.

COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

PEANUTS, FIVE CENTS

IN MY quest for adventure and search for new friends, I usually forsake the beaten paths and main thoroughfares, and so it happened that, on an obscure side street, I met the one-legged peanut man. I was attracted first by the queer cart with its sloping top, which stood on the bare parking strip near the fire plug at the corner. From a little tin pipe at one end of the cart, a thin streak of smoke or steam floated lazily in the warm air. Beside the cart stood a high stool and leaning against it was a crutch. No one was in sight, although the peanut stand, for such it proved to be when I examined it, seemed to be ready for business. Across the street the furnace of a gas works belched its lurid flame against a leaden sky. In the distance, on the other side of the street, a switching engine puffed languidly. An automobile, speeding across the bridge, was the only other sign of life.

"Queer location for a peanut stand," thought I, "and quite a confiding trust its owner must have in his fellowmen." As I examined the odd push-cart, I could see through the glass top of one of its compartments, neat rows of paper bags filled with peanuts. In another compartment were more peanuts. At one end of the cart was a little pile of charcoal which I supposed was the fuel which generated the heat in the copper roaster or broiler in the corner of the cart. It was from this receptacle that the little pipe drew its tiny cloud of vapor.

I was looking at an assortment of pots and pans and cylinders under the cart when a voice at my elbow said, "Peanuts, five cents." I turned and saw an old man regarding me hopefully. He had only one leg and he stood on it without the aid of his crutch which was still leaning against the cart where I had first seen it. His hat was badly battered and his greenish black coat and baggy trousers were shabby. His one shoe had seen better days.

"Why yes, give me two bags, please," I said, fumbling for a dime.

"Hot day, isn't it," observed the peanut man, as I lingered muching some of the peanuts I had just bought.

"Yes," I replied. "M'm, these are very good nuts," I remarked craftily, hoping to lead him into conversation. I had struck the right chord, for his eyes gleamed with pleasure.

"I parch them myself," said he.

"How do you do it?" I asked, and then he showed me how the raw peanuts were roasted in the cylinder over the glowing coals of a charcoal fire. He also gave me an extensive outline of the history of a peanut from the soil to the consumer.

"How is business; is this a good place for a stand?" I asked, leading the conversation into more personal channels. Here again I had struck a responsive spot. Business, he said, was poor and so was the location of his stand. The site of his stand was not of his own choosing, he explained. It had formerly been located on one of the city's busiest streets and there he had done a profitable business until a clean-up wave had struck the city and he had been obliged to move his stand to its present location. Since then his earnings had been very small. "If I get a loaf of bread and my cup of coffee every day, I thank God for His blessings," said the old man simply and with no trace of affectation or self-pity.

He lives alone in a tiny room over a store, he told me, and prepares himself whatever food he is able to buy. He seemed assured of my friendly interest, for he continued his confidences. In the next twenty minutes, he sketched the story of his life which began in Germany sixty-four years ago. He came to America with his parents when he was a child. After a few years in grammar school, he went to work as a mechanic in one of the building trades. He married an American girl and reared three sons. About thirteen years ago, misfortune began to overtake him. A team of horses that he was driving ran away, dragging him and injuring his leg so frightfully that it had to be amputated. Hospital bills exhausted the little reserve that he had accumulated.

When the United States declared war, his wife left him. "Because I was born a German. But I am an American and proud of it!" The old man beat his chest for emphasis. Two of his boys went overseas with the A. E. F. Only one of them returned. He never hears from the other two or from his wife.

Some sentimental verses which he had written and had had printed on postcards at considerable expense, did not bring him the returns he had expected. Then his only means of support, his peanut stand, was ordered off the main street because it was unsightly. When the river overflowed during the spring floods, the muddy stream deposited his stand a couple of blocks down the street and ruined his stock of peanuts.

But with all his cup of woe the old man is not dispirited. He was about to undertake a new enterprise, he told me, as an adjunct to his peanut business, from which he hoped to make enough money to recover from his losses.

"Wait till you see it," he said with enthusiasm; "it's the best thing you ever saw."

"What is it?" I asked curiously.

"I've written for it, it ought to be here most any day now"—"Yes sir, peanuts, five cents," he said, ignoring me for the moment and turning to a customer who appeared just then. He stowed the nickel away in a little tin cup along with a few other small coins.

"What is this new thing of yours?" I reminded him.

"Oh, just wait until you see it, it's the best thing your ever saw—"

"Well," I interrupted him, "what—"

"It's a razor blade sharpener, magnetic, it is. Everybody'll want one."

This is the story of my friend the one-legged peanut man. I see him frequently. I go out of my way to visit him at his stand and make small purchases of his wares, although I am not especially fond of peanuts. I have never used a razor blade sharpener but I expect to become the owner of one before long.

The new enterprise is still in the visionary stage for the wonderful sharpening implements have not yet arrived, although they are due "Most any day." In the meantime, at his lonely stand, the old man calls to an occasional passer-by, "Peanuts, five cents."

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

BY CAPTAIN M. P. RUDOLPH, Medical Corps, Medical Inspector

RED BUGS, OR CHIGGERS

The true chigger, jigger or chigoe is found in Mexico, Central and South America, and in tropical Africa. It is only by accident found in the United States. It causes a rather serious skin condition which may have serious results, even to the loss of toes and similar unpleasant disabilities.

Fortunately no such results may be feared from contact with the parasite locally known as red bug or chigger, although much discomfort and physical annoyance may be experienced by contact with it.

The group of very small insects, common to this and other sections of the United States, usually termed chiggers, jiggers or red bugs, belong to the flea family. They are also known as harvest mites, and certain sand fleas are often inaccurately called chiggers.

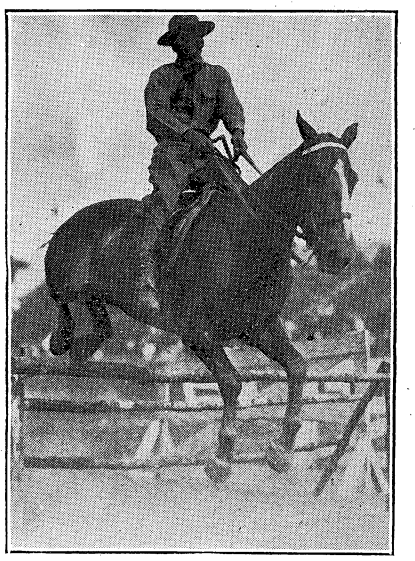
The red bug or chigger is a very small parasite, so small it can scarcely be seen with the naked eye. It is reddish in color and when viewed with a magnifying glass it is found to greatly resemble the flea.

Red bugs or chiggers are found in many sections of the United States, but they are more prevalent where there is a dry, sandy soil. The parasite itself is commonly found on a vegetable host, such as grass, weeds, shrubbery, and decaying wood. Man acquires the parasites when walking through grass and weeds, sitting on the ground, picking flowers, or by any occupation or diversion which brings him in close contact with nature.

When the parasite gets on man it burrows into the skin with the object of obtaining blood for its sustenance. It engorges itself with blood, which partly accounts for its reddish color; this engorgement produces swelling of the parasite which is irritating to the skin, and the skin is further irritated by the parasite releasing certain irritating substances; a local irritation and inflammation is set up which is manifested by a very small, dark spot near the center of a hive-like swelling that itches intensely. The parts of the body usually affected are the hands and arms and the feet and legs; those parts to which the red bugs have easy access. The number of individual bites may vary from one or two to fifty or more at one time. Under the same conditions some individuals are affected more than others, both as to number of bites and severity of reaction, while some few individuals seem to be entirely immune from red bugs and their bites.

The red bug, or chigger, annoyance can be largely prevented by individuals wearing boots, or shoes and leggins when walking through grass and weeds, or otherwise subjecting themselves to conditions in which the pest is known to prevail. Thick woolen stockings afford some individuals protection. Dusting the bare feet and legs, hands and arms, with powdered sulphur will often keep the parasite at a distance. Anointing the bare feet and legs with kerosene, letting it dry for about two minutes, then carefully removing all the excess with a dry cloth, is the best deterrent known. In using this method of prophylaxis, care should be taken to remove every bit of kerosene that can be removed with a dry cloth before covering the skin with clothing.

The bites themselves may be treated with strong salt water baths, or the application of a salty ointment, such as a mixture of salt and lard, or salt and butter, in the proportion of one part of table salt to two parts of lard or butter. The salt treatment is widely used and is excellent in results. The bites may also be treated by the application of kerosene directly to the bite, using a small pledget of cotton on a match stick, and being careful to leave the part exposed to the air until the kerosene is thoroughly dry before covering the part with clothing.



One of the colored soldiers of the 24th Infantry jumping in good form at the Fort Benning horse show.

There is, ordinarily, no danger from red bug or chigger bites. It is possible, of course, to have an infection occur from scratching the affected areas, but such complications are so rare as to be negligible for all practical purposes. If the skin is broken by scratching, the wound should be cared for in the same manner as a scratch acquired in any other manner.

29TH INF.

Headquarters Co.

Pfc. "Babe" Asher, our diminutive leather pusher of "Pinkey" Phillips fame has furled his tent and departed for more promising fields. He is going to West Point with Captain Goode, as orderly, and he has promised results while in the Captain's garden.

Pfc. Stambough ran true to form after many protestations in the negative, and took on another stack of thirty-six months. The reason for his "re-ing up" has been discovered. He happened to notice the calendar and saw that it was time for the spring ploughing, so decided that he would rather work here.

Pfc. Watson received his discharge at noon, and at 12:01 was reported as crossing the Alabama bridge, headed in the general direction of Texas. "Red" was one soldier who saved money during his enlistment, but his system would not work for everyone, as he was a firm believer in the touch system and would borrow anything and everything, thereby saving dinero on toilet supplies, which in three years makes quite a sum.

All the men who are not on maneuvers this year are, strange to say, making a great growl about it. They are all tired of the dry runs which they go through three times a day, and which are humorously called "chow." Many are the plans that are devised so that they can get to maneuver camp, and escape this simulation of eating.

The recruit, much to the surprise of the company, came back from his gross nine day furlough, covered with dirt, glory, red bugs and a firm intention of much eating. Must have had a good time, for he says nothing about any of his conquests. The odor of eau-de-rodent is very strong.

Hdqrs. and Hdqrs. Co., 2nd Bn.

Station LOST broadcasting: What was that that St. Sgt. Kjelstrom has been raving about? What? He wants to know what it is that he has done to make them send him to maneuver camp this year. Just a tough break I guess.

Cpl. Smith has dropped from out of a clear sky, from a sixty day furlough, and what's more, all of the sixty days are not up either. I wonder what it is that causes all of these boys that go on furlough hurry to back to camp. Is it the regular feed or is it lonesomeness for his khaki clad buddies, Anyway Smitty, we are glad to see you back.

What have we on the market this time? Well, we neglected to tell you folks about our new Sergeant. Who is he? None other than our new mess sergeant, Sgt. Holland. Congratulations, Sergeant.

1st Sgt. Harvey, who has a new car, and who has seen the speedometer pass the 500 mile mark, proceeded to make a trip Sunday. Well, we hope he had a good time and are sorry that it had to rain. Hope you are pleased with your new car, sergeant. While we are talking about cars, Segt. Kjelstrom has one too. Seems that everybody has the fever.

Pvt. McKeel and Pvt. Selvia have been rated specialists 5th and 6th class, respectively. Keep it up, boys you are doing fine. Pvt. Henley has received the long awaited private first class, to go along with his specialist 6th class rating. Seeing that he is our company mechanic, we all think that he deserves it.

Next week we will have something in regards to ball games within the battalion. We have hopes and some very good chances to make a very good showing.

Sgt. Strangand says that he wished that this last month would hurry and pass off so that he can reenlist. Stick around Sgt.

Company "E"

Co. E has organized their baseball team and it looks good. We have a game in the company every day in the week and three on Sunday. We have the baseball spirit. Birdsong, a good outfielder and better, has transferred to our fold and will help us out wonderfully. Corp. French, one of the high boys of the company (6 ft. 2 inches) is still going strong. He was out for football and basketball and now he is out for the baseball team; let's hope he shows his stuff in this sport. That is the spirit "Big Boy."

Bugler Campbell has just arrived from a pleasant furlough back home in Carolina with the following story: He was preparing to check out at the hotel. He had collected the bed linen, light globe, towels, etc., and packed them in his grip. As he opened the door on going out his eyes caught the notice: "Think, have you forgotten anything?" Eddie then went back and got the Gideon bible.

Pvt. Bass was over at the weekly dance last week having a large time dancing. Suddenly his girl stopped in the middle of the floor and said: "Darling, I can't dance another step, your feet are killing me."

The North Highlands sheik, Roberts, asked his girl if she believed in the hereafter? She replied: "Yes, why." "Well, how about a little necking? That's what I'm here after," said our sheik.

Our top kick "High" Davis has just returned from a four day's furlough in Blountstown, Fla., where he enjoyed a pleasant time fishing.

When "Cabbagehead" Padgett reported in here from Tennessee, "Fly" Hornsby said, "Let's walk down here, Cabbage head, I want you to see our football field." "That's fine, I've always been anxious to see a field of footballs in full bloom." said Padgett.

Company "F"

Our candidate for the most notable personage of the week—Richard E. Feagin, who has inaugurated a method by which anyone may ascend to their bunk with ease. With the aid of two footlockers, four blankets and a portable typewriter, Richard has constructed an ingenious contrivance which resembles a cross between the leaning tower of Pisa and an Egyptian pyramid. Noted experts acclaim it as a marvel of modern science.

An anonymous suggestion has been made that some of the trophy cups adorning the shelves of the recreation room be used in the mess hall to replace the temporary "drinking cups." Other than being used for practical purposes, the trophy cups would lend an air of distinction to the mess hall.

Corporal Armstead and Private Allison are having a fine success in their campaign to raise funds for the purpose of sending Bull Pollard to the DeVaux Singing Academy of Paris. Bull is well known for his singing ability and with a few years of voice training he should create a sensation in the musical world. Anyone desiring to contribute to the fund should see Cpl. Armstead personally or, if desired, mail their contribution to him care of Dept. 46. Canteen checks, cigarette papers and cigar coupons are acceptable.

Company "G"

Corporals Thomas, Galliano, Smith, F. A. and Pvt. Norris who have recently returned to the Company from a well spent furlough, report that they had a fine time.

Pvt. Taylor, E. B. said to Pvt. Brown, A. W., "I saw you walk into a beauty parlor." Brown replied, "Oh, yes, just a force of habit, it used to be a saloon."

Cpl. Price asked Pvt. Campbell if he snored. Campbell replied, "Only in my dreams, Corporal."

Pvt. Medaries to Pvt. Vicknair: "I consider Hoover the greatest man in the good old U. S. A. today." Pvt. Vicknair: "Yes, but there is one man he has to take his hat off to." Pvt. Medaries asked who it was, and Vicknair replied, "Well that is his barber." "That is right," admitted Medaries.

Pvt. Rossar said to a recruit who joined the company, "Say, haven't I seen your face before?" The recruit replied, "If you did, you saw it right where it is now."

A certain Sergeant in the 1st platoon was down at the swimming pool and a lady came by close to where the sergeant was standing. He said, "I beg your pardon, lady, You just dropped your handkerchief," The lady said, "Great heavens, that is not my handkerchief, that's my bathing suit." It wasn't Sgt. Swaney, he said he did not know where the swimming pool was.

Dad Richardson has just gotten back from a three day's pass, Rich is good for a long time now.

Sgt. Sherman was out on the parade ground giving the recruits instructions in markmanship. He gave the men orders to take 200 yards elevation and Pvt. Holland said, "Sergeant, where do you want us to take it to."

1st Lt. Soule is taking a course in cooking and baking; we sure miss the lieutenant around the supply room.

Sgt. Wiggins said to Buck Folsom, "I call my car the loose leaf." Buck asked, "Why is that Wiggins?" "Well, it is like a Paige," replied Wiggins.

Supply Sergeant Johnson told the men in the company that the Q. M. C. had a new kind of hat strap they had to put out to the soldiers in Fort Benning. Pvt. Edwards asked, "Sergeant, do you think I will be able to get one?" Johnson, "Well yes, you're a soldier aren't you?"

The following named privates of the company have recently been appointed privates first class: Arthur W. Brown, Willie J. Hatchett, Henry G. Hammond, Alexander Walinski, Henry H. Hurst and Mack Joyner.

Company "H"

Pvts. Howell and Gatewood have left us by discharge and are not expected back. Pvt. Jackson, M. and Cpl. Stout are going this week.

The most outstanding event in the week was the inspection of this company's quarters by Brigadier General Villa of the Italian Army. Quite a distinction for the company, even if only for less than an hour.

Great feed we're getting as evidenced by the fact that we got "peaches" for dinner Sunday instead of "pickles" as the menu read. First time a mistake has occurred for the good of the majority concerned.

The company is rapidly preparng for range this year. We expect to shoot up some of last year's records to a higher notch in qualification circles.

29TH INFANTRY PLEASED WITH NEW MESS SYSTEM

The collective purchasing of subsistence supplies and the coordination of messes by an officer assigned to those duties has proven to be efficient and economical, according to a recent announcement from headquarters of the 29th Infantry, which is in part as follows:

"Through the combination of purchasing power together with co-ordination of messes, a substantial saving of mess funds is effected and used to purchase fresh eggs, milk, butter, fruits and vegetables. It eliminates inferior foods and resultant wastage. It allows the mess sergeant to remain at his mess—result, higher mess efficiency. Simplifies mess accounts, lower prices through competitive bidding. Insures the full benefit of the ration to the soldier which is the ultimate aim.

Some of the results of this system are:

(a) Real butter is served each meal.
(b) Hot breads are served at each supper meal with a sweet, such as jam, jelly and syrup.
(c) A desert is served every dinner, which is prepared pastry or pudding.
(d) The use of fresh meat is restricted to dinner.
(e) One raw fruit or vegetable is served daily.
(f) The use of left overs is restricted to supper.

The advantages of this system of mess supervision are obvious.
supervision are obvious."

We wonder why Bugler "Tex" Harper has been seen crying recently; some say a "mean" old train took his girl friend away. Cheer up old boy, she'll be back.

We wonder why the company snickered when the Top-Kick said, "Corporal" McGuire on last Saturday's noon formation.

Our old friend "Spud" Murphy has the blues so bad he can't sleep. Look out "Spud," the Hawk has his eye on you.

The company lost an old-timer (1st Sgt. William Ellis) via the retirement route. Good luck Sarge, our very best wishes accompany you.

Company "E"

Pvt. 1 cl Fred D. Jackson, departed May 21, 1929 with one month's vacation, to visit reltaives in Philadelphia, Pa. The entire company wishes him a happy and successful vacation.

There is something peculiar about "E" Company; all of the four men discharged during the past five months reenlisted. About fifty to be discharged between now and December 31, 1929 and all signify their intention of reenlisting. They either like it or can't do any better; rather say they like it and want more of it.

"E" Company and the Black Foxes played a very interesting game of baseball in the Golden Park, Saturday May 18, 1929, score 11-5 in favor of the Foxes.

Company "F"

The company was host for the regimental dance held Wednesday night at the Service Club. A great crowd was out and all seemed to have an excellent time. Music was furnished by the 24th's orchestra and that is saying enough. These dances are certainly a fine thing for the regiment; keeps our dandy boys at home on those nights. We always have a good crowd of our friends from town, and maybe you think they don't like the sandwiches and coffee.

Our First Sergeant, Smith, seems to be about the best we have ever seen. We have a company now that is hard to beat. The company commander has bought us a new radio-victrola; we have just moved part of the company into the new barracks. In a few days we will move the rest. Then we will fix up our new recreation room and watch us go.

Sgt. Harrod says the regimental garden is getting under way, and that before long we will have more stuff to eat from down there than we can use in the regiment. He says the high water set the garden back about two months, but things are booming now.

Sgt. Ballard and his gang are hard at work on the swimming pool and in a few days we will be in the water almost all the time that we are not on duty. Mighty fine to have a pool all to yourself, to go in any time you care to.

Pretty soon we will have all the construction work done in the regiment and we wonder what will become of Sgt. Whitesides. He has been building barrack so long that he won't know how to do anything else. Guess he will go to the Constructing Q. M.

Our company clerk, Taylor, says that some of the boys are getting in pretty deep on the clothing allowance. Better watch out, boys, mighty hard to dig down and pay out good money for clothes.

Company "G"

About two weeks ago Private Romalus Lewis, Company "G" 24th Infantry, who is on duty as janitor at the Infantry School, found a pocket book containing some $60.00 in the officers' latrine. He immediately reported what he had found and turned same over to the officer who lost it and was given $10.00. Keep up the good work Lewis, honesty is the best policy after all.

Battery "A"

Now that we are in khaki we feel much better, although there is still a touch of spring fever in some of us. But Private Lindsey doesn't attribute that drowsy feeling to spring fever. He assures us that it is something down town that makes him feel that way. Sleepy, don't you know?

The other day Private Homer L. Watson was heard to remark that he enjoyed "coasting" while his horse was in a trot. We were very much in the dark as to his reason for substituting "coasting" for "posting," until Private L. B. Todd, eminent amateur detective, dug up some of Watson's fingerprints from the handle bars of the old battery bicycle.

Ask any "A" Battery soldier if we haven't got it down pat doing foot drill. Their answer will invariably be "Yes" and then they will begin reciting the events to prove it. It seems that some few mornings ago the top kick gave three commands, namely, "Fall in! Squads right! March!" And the battery moved off very smoothly, fully as easily as when the command "Count off!" is given. And you must remember that on this occasion, the latter command was omitted. Lots of confidence you have in us, Sergeant Combs.

Corporal Duggett, eminent authority on things mathematical, seems to be stuck at last. He will tell you himself that trigonometry is something easy compared to this problem. It seems that the professor is trying to figure that if a squirrel can run up the hollow of a tree in a given time, and back down in half that time, how long will it be before the squirrel will be sticking his head out both ends at the same time?

"Which will it be for supper—bread, or biscuits?" asked Private Clanton, dining room orderly, of the mess sergeant.

"Oh," answered Graham, "we have biscuits in abundance."

Some fifteen or twenty minutes later Clanton approached the sarg again. "But say, man," he inquired dutifully, "you didn't tell me where that bundance is."

Private Guillory has another specimen of the reptile family. This time it is, as usual, a sleek black fellow. We wonder how it is that Jimmie can master this snake as he does, and then encounter so much difficulty in dominating Kirksey and Bozo.

Perhaps Gene Ahern gets his ideas and inspirations for his "Major Hoople in our Boarding House" from a certain character here in our outfit. We ain't naming no names, but his initials starts off with Corporal "Hoover" Neely. Tell us about that big debate you had in Montana in 1890, Hoover.

SMITH—CHANCY BOUT CALLED DRAW

Walker Smith last Tuesday night jabbed and gored Chancy for the better part of the ten-round schedule to take a draw in the end. Smith never let up on his aggressiveness until the eighth round, which gave the Jacksonville boy the first round he had earned during the whole fight. During the earlier rounds of the bout, Smith had either taken them all, or they were draws—about fifty-fifty each way.

Chancy had a left that was a little too long for Smith's comfort. At almost all times, the blonde head had his left in Smith's face, or working in on the body, but to little effect. Smith kept coming in to land harmless blows to the face and body. Only at three different times, did the footballer land anything that came near upsetting the cool Jacksonville boxer. These were seemingly wild left hooks, that eventually landed on the side of Chancy's face. One time in the first round, when Smith landed one of these, it looked as though it would be the curtain for the lad from the coast. The bell put an end to all differences though, and Chancy was back in the second, fighting more cautiously than ever.

The better condition of Chancy was about all the advantage that he carried. He doesn't seem to be much of a hitter, but able to take all that Smith had, and to keep that left working in and out like a piston on a manifest freight. In the late part of the fight, when Smith had spent most of his energy trying to put over the finishing blow, Chancy showed that he was no ham—and—fighter. He was cool all through the fight, but in these last three rounds, he showed that he could fight and think at the same time. He kept his head up, and cooly laced Smith about the face and body, while Smith was outwardly storming and trying to put an end to the fracas there. It could safely be said that Chancy outgeneraled the lunging Smith, and that a draw was a popular decision.

The semi-final affair was somewhat of a shock to the Benning fans. Marshall Cardwell was too much for the favorite, Saginaw Seely. Seely was never in a position to land anything that was effective, but was always in the way of fast rights and lefts, that were being continually fed to him by the flashy Cardwell. It may have been that Seely was a little off his form, but it seems that he would have been outclassed, even in the best of shape.

Cardwell was fast and effective, hitting Seely almost at will. Only in the second round did the rugged Seely have an even break, the round probably being a draw. Cardwell had won the first by a whoop and a holler.

It seemed that Cardwell suddenly thought of something that he had left undone, when in the fourth round he came out of his corner and halfheartedly poked at Saginaw. Then when things were quieted down on the outside of the ring to give him time to think, he circled once or twice, landing light lefts and rights to the body, and when the opportunity presented itself in his presence, he crossed with a driving right that sent Seely sprawling to the canvas to take the fight. Seely's head had hit the floor with such force that it was necessary to take him to the hospital to have an examination made. Nothing very serious, however.

One might call the Eddie Brault-Big Bill Thompson bill no fight. Big Bill's manager had been clamoring for a match with Brault for the past several months. They were told repeatedly by Captain Wilson that there wasn't a half chance for the kid. Yet they insisted. Thompson weighed only 114, while the least that Eddie could make was 121. They wanted the fight to go on any way. After Eddie had floored the enormous Bill twice in the first round, he was quite willing to leave the ring, at the instance of Captain Wilson, and leave the field to Brault. It was best that it should happen that way, for we would certainly have hated to see the kid beaten up just for the mistakes of an older person.

In the third bout of the menu, The Grinnin' Grumpy Gordy and Hefty Hooker mixed and mingled, much to the delight of the spectators. Both contestants seemed a little at loss in the beginning of the fracas, but settled down to business for the remainder of their portion of the bill. There were moments when either one could have scored a K. O., but failed to see his advantage, and would not follow through with the right message. Gordy truly put up the best fight of his whole ring career, but was unable to earn the decision, Captain Wilson raising the hands of both fighters in the end. This was a fair decision, neither boy having the advantage at anytime. Sometimes, Grumpy looks as though he will make a fighter.

Dutch Sernoski was not able to pass the physical examinations. Captain Wilson announced a long name that was wrong with him, but when his friends objected that he was not that near dead, he explained that it only meant that he had the hiccoughs. Marquette, o the 29th Infantry substituted for him, meeting Corn Griffin, Grumpy Gordy's victor a fortnight ago. Corn showed even better form than previously. He was in there slashing and punching from the opening. It was easy money for him, Captain Wilson stopping the fight in the third round, and giving Marquette the gate. It may be that Marquette was a little off his training, but it seems that this fellow Corn is the real stuff. If he keeps the pace that he is now traveling, it will not be long before he breaks into the six round bills.

In the opener, Lou Magnolia was no near match for the slippery Seaweed Wilson. Wilson had him guessing all the way. At times, Lou would make a pass at the Seaweed, but would only hit the wide open spaces. Wilson's ability to duck dangerous blows was uncanny. Then too, he would come into Lou, covered all the way, unleash an awful right, and then cover again. He had Lou going from the opening to the close.

PINKIE PHILLIPS

While Walker Smith and his cofighters were hammering away, trying to hold up their part of last Tuesday night's boxing program, Pinkie Phillips was doing the same in an Atlanta ring. It has been hard to find competition in the Benning ring for Phillips, so Captain Wilson arranged for him to go to Atlanta to fight eight rounds with the pride of Atlanta, Ernest K. O. Maddox.

The Atlanta papers stated that this was one of the best fights witnessed there for several moons. The two boys seemed to have a mutual understanding that they would slug from the opening gong. We have not seen Maddox since the fight, but we have seen Pinkie. He has one of the most beautiful shiners ever sported around this neck of the woods. When asked about the cause of that black eye, Phillips remarked, "Shucks, feller, you orter see Maddox."

It is stated that Phillips floored his man at least five times during the fracas, never being knocked off his pins himself. This is one of the distinctions that Pinkie enjoys. He has never been floored a single time during his whole boxing career, his fights mounting somewhere near the sixty figure. This is an enviable record for any boxer to hold, and should be something for the other boxers to shoot at.

In getting a draw with Maddox, Phillips has made a great stride in boosting his own stock. When he met Maddox before, it was to lose the decision to him. This has been preying on his mind for a long spell, and he has been clamoring for a chance to get another whack at the K. O. kid. The Fort Benning fans will look with favor on the possibility of Pinkie Phillips returning to the Benning ring, because of the fact that he is one of those who fight from the first gong until the referee holds up one of the contestants' hands, or both.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT NEARS CLOSE

The Infantry School tennis tournament will come to a close Sunday afternoon. The finals will all be played off on courts numbers one and two Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of the Officers Club. Evenly matched finals will be the order of the day. Some claim that we are likely to see a new post champion, but at the present title Lt. Hedekin is in no danger of relinquishing his crown.

Then there is this Bobby Withers, the boy who handles the ball as if it were something over which he had complete and undisputed control. This is the lad who has the so-called "Spanish serve." Form is life with him, and judging from all angles of the form, he should have a valuable life.

The women's singles will have all the action one can desire. Several of the ladies who have entered the tournament are tricky servers and fast hard drivers.

The matches will start about three-thirty P. M. and refreshments will be served by the Officers Club.

BADGER AND DOG BATTLE TO DEATH AT LOGGING CAMP

The biggest sporting event in Sojourners circles in years was staged last Monday evening at the Logging Camp when the local chapter of the National Sojourners held their annual "bobec", which consists of an old fashioned barbecue and the age old badger fight, between a dog and a wild badger.

Under the direction of President L. R. Boyd this yearly affair brought out over two hundred fans.

Captain Irwin E. Farrington of the 184th Infantry, California National Guard was the hero of the occasion, to him being accorded the honor of pulling the fighting badger from the box and starting the mix up.

Captain C. C. Griffin procured from Harris County, Alabama, "Alexix" a full grown, 2-year-old, male swamp badger, which he claimed could overcome any dog in the Fort Benning kennels.

It didn't take Captain W. A. Collier long to take up Captain Griffin's defi, and he backed his dog "Bimbo" to the extent of $150.00. Bimbo had won a similar battle at Fort Benning a year ago, when he won the Oriental championship in three chuckees.

The board of governors of the Sojourners approved the fight as a sporting event after the first umpire, Col. George V. Strong was relieved owing to favoritism shown in judging at the recent horse show. Put to a popular vote the result was the election of Major Henry A. Bootz and Captain Ben M. Smith of Birmingham, Alabama, the latter having judged a series of such contests while touring Australia on behalf of the "Better Badger League." The actual fight was delayed for some time, owing to an altercation between Captains Collier and Griffin as to just where the dog should stand. This was finally settled by the stern directions of Judge Smith to have the dog secure the proper footage from the badger's box. Another serious delay occurred when Lieut. Charles McK. Robinson sought to prevent the combat on the grounds of cruelty to animals. The lieutenant was seconded by Major Roy A. Hill, the defense expert, who took the position that a badger could not withstand the severe onslaught of his opponent unless his position was over three miles to the rear, but the matter was finally settled by Major E. E. Lewis, the arbitrator of the occasion.

Some objection was made to Captain Collier as caretaker of the dog "Bimbo" by Captain Dahlquist who claimed that Captain Collier had placed a bet on the badger. Betting was heavy before the start of the gory conflict, Captain Ambrose as usual holding the money as stakeholder.

The spectators finally gathered around the ring with the dog in the center and with the badger in a large box. Judge Smith announced the rules of the combat which was to consist of 4 rounds of 2 chuckees each. Officers were warned against throwing anything into the fighting pit while the animals were engaged. It was also agreed that in the event the badger should be about to kill the dog, the badger should be wounded with a soft-drink bottle in order to save the dog. As a precaution against the badger jumping out of the ring and biting any onlooker several officers were armed with clubs, while a medical corps man was in attendance.

The fight was brief but furious. To start the combat Captain Farrington grasped the rope and at the signal from Judge Smith, he pulled.

It was all over in a minute. Bimbo is still the undisputed champion. The scene following Captain Farrington's pull of the rope beggars description and was, in fact, too horrible to be related. The floor of the pit, which a moment before had been spotless, was instantly befouled and in a flash all to be seen was the victorious dog and a few remnants. Despite the cruelty of the exhibition the officers seemed to enjoy the spectacle, save perhaps Captain Farrington, who, as caretaker of the badger, felt that the event was a trifle too cruel.

The 24th Infantry Band gave an excellent concert prior to the fight and during the serving of the barbecue, which Captain Stanley G. Saulnier had charge of.

GOLF GOSSIP

By V. G. H.

In the last week-end tournament 51 "braves" ventured forth to battle the elements on the garrison fairways, and —lo and behold if 33 of them didn't "fall by the wayside" when the battle casualties were checked up! This, in spite of the fact that 12 extra strokes were allowed besides the club handicap allowance; so, due to the small number who "got in under the wire," all were included in the "prize money."

We note, with great pleasure, the return of one of our most worthy exponents of niblick technique, Lt. Harold S. Kelley, from leave of absence; and observing a nonchalant grace in his drives and approaches, we are inclined to suspect that he has been hobnobbing with some of the ultra-modern pro's of the northern links, and has absorbed some secret knowledge highly unbecoming to a sociable game of golf. (Waine Archer, you are hereby duly warned to take full cognizance of this and avoid dire possibilities.)

MRS. EMMA FRANCES KELLER

On Monday evening, May 20, at 10:15 Mrs. Emma Frances Keller passed away at the station hospital after an illness of several weeks. Though she was 75 years of age, she had lost none of her interest in life, and since her coming several months ago to visit her son and daughter, Major and Mrs. Morrison C. Stayer, she had entered into the spirit of their activities and made many friends who were devoted to her. She was gentle, loving, kind and considerate.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Stayer of Fort Benning and Mrs. Marshall of Huntington, West Virginia, and one son, Mr. George Keller, of Easton, Pa. The remains were carried to Easton, Pa., for funeral and interment.

Who makes a perfect swimming suit?

WE have found that Spalding does! And you will, too, once you swim in one.

For a Spalding fits with true athletic snugness—it sets off your figure beautifully—yet gives you perfect freedom in the water. Made so well, too! Armholes never sag or pucker—shoulder straps never curl up—there are no lumpy seams to show—and a Spalding never grows baggy with age.

The new shorter trunks don't ever have to be pulled up—they stay up. And the suits themselves are as smart as their name. Imagine, too, the most popular models are only $5 and $6.

GENERAL KING HONORED BY CLUB

Brigadier General Campbell King, commandant of the Infantry School, became a member of the Columbus Kiwanis club Tuesday night. In celebration of the event, the Kiwanians arranged a ladies' night, and with ladies and guests motored to Fort Benning, where dinner was served at Biglerville.

A special program, arranged by Dr. F. L. Rosenthal and committee, assisted by Captain L. C. Beebe, was enjoyed after dinner. Hon. Rhodes Browne made the speech of welcome to General and Mrs. King. Mr. Browne, expressed pleasure at being permitted to introduce the new member to Kiwanis. He spoke of the cordial feeling Columbus has for the Infantry School; of the pleasant relationship that has always existed between the people of the city and Fort Benning, and he expressed the hope that General King's association with Kiwanians might be as pleasant for him as it would surely be for the members of the club.

General King, in his reply to the speech of welcome, spoke of the pleasure it gave him to meet the people of the city; of the satisfaction it had given him to be asked to become a member of Kiwanis; of the arduous duties which had taken all of his time since coming to Benning, and of his appreciation that had been shown in his coming by the people of Columbus.

The Kiwanis creed was read by Kiwanian Frank B. Schley and repeated by the new member according to the custom of the club.

A delightful feature of the evening was the excellent musical program arranged by Captain Beebe, in which the members of the Infantry School Glee club and the Twenty-ninth infantry orchestra took part. Solos by Mrs. L. R. Boyd, Mrs. E. S. Barker and Captain C. L. Rutledge, the singing of a double quartette and a quartette were particularly pleasing.

expressed the hope that the desire for peace would not cause the ship of state to deviate from the true course in which it is now laid. General Fuqua then presented the diplomas to the graduates.

After the graduation exercises, General Fuqua spent some time in inspecting the Academic Department.

In the afternoon a tea and reception was given in honor of General Fuqua at the Polo Club, and he was entertained later at the Commandant's quarters.

General Fuqua devoted today to inspections of the post and its various activities. This evening he will be the honor guest at a dinner given by Mayor Homer Dimon, of Columbus. Later in the evening General Fuqua will attend the dance given by the advanced officers' class at the Country Club.

On Saturday he will visit the headquarters of the 29th Infantry, 24th Infantry and 15th Tank Battalion, and will hold conferences with the infantry board, department of experiment and the infantry rifle team.

No program has been outlined for General Fuqua for Sunday. It is expected that the general will devote at least part of Monday to brief inspections before his departure later in the day.

Captain Irwin E. Farington, the California Land Speaker, sprung the badger at the Sojourners party at the 24th Infantry logging camp Monday night. Captain Farington, who is said to have thrown more bull than any toreador, has hunted all sorts of big game in his time, including an anise seed bag that threw him last February, had never hunted the festive badger before. He expressed himself as delighted with the sport, and hopes to introduce it in his native wilds.

Lieutenant James Keith, the class secretary, scion of a prominent old Louisiana carpet bagger family, is understood to be planning a trip to South America to catch parrots. Keith's plan is to talk the parrots into unconsciousness, and nobody who has heard him at a class meeting will doubt his ability to do so.

Some of us went home with class rings and some with diplomas, and a few just went home. Still and all, it was a grand war.

Bye-Bye-Baby

Forgotten you? Well, not completely.
I still owe a florist or two,
And the sight of a restaurant table
Brings back vivid visions of you,
Your appetite always seemed hearty
Before dancing, after, between,
There was never a taxi to windward
For which you were not rather keen,
And I dare say that you will forget me,
But I am of sturdier stuff;
I'll never forget you, Beloved.
I've written your name on my cuff.

General Summerall Inspecting at Infantry School

MANEUVERS COMPLETE STUDENTS' SCHOOL YEAR

Approximately 275 officers of the advanced and company officers' classes and of the faculty of the Infantry School are this week engaged in the annual command post terrain exercises which conclude the work of the school year 1928-29. The command post exercises began last Tuesday and will continue until 4 p. m. June 6. The actual work of the classes will be completed at that time, although the school year will not be officially ended until June 11, when the graduation exercises will take place.

The students and instructors are encamped at Camp Leonard Wood, near Harmony Church on the Cusseta road. Their camp, which was prepared by the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, under command of Lieutenant Colonel Walter L. Reed, is a model of military neatness and order. The accuracy of its lines, its conveniences, cleanliness and its freedom from dust, have been the source of much favorable comment by the officers who are camping there.

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, less Company C, is also encamped at Camp Leonard Wood. Three miles southeast on the Cusseta road, near Sulphur Springs, Company C and Howitzer Company, 29th Infantry, are encamped at Camp Liscum. Both maneuver camps are commanded by Colonel Harris Pendleton, Jr.

The series of problems in which the students are engaged comprise three major problems, each divided into two phases and extending over six days, and several smaller problems.

The first of the major problems deals with peace strength organizations. The first phase, the defense of a river line, is in charge of Major B. G. Ferris. The second phase, a withdrawal from the river defense, is under the direction of Major S. F. Brett.

The second major problem, also divided into two phases, comprises the actions of an advance guard in a meeting engagement and an attack in an obscure situation involving the crossing of a stream as an obstacle. Major C. P. Titus is in charge of the first phase, and Major Norman Randolph is in charge of the second phase of this problem.

The third major problem consists of an attack against a zone defense which is initiated by a jump-off from a stabilized position. Major R. A. Hill directs this phase of the problem. Its second phase, which approximates open warfare, is in charge of Major C. W. Ryder.

The six other problems are being directed by Major W. L. Roberts, Major G. R. Cook, Major C. W. Ryder, Major E. G. Sherburne and Major C. P. Stivers.

The two problems directed by Majors Sherburne and Stivers are being conducted as an experimental two-sided terrain exercise. Twenty officers, all mounted, participate in these problems.

Colonel R. G. Kingman is chief umpire for all the maneuvers.

POLO TEAM GOES TO WASHINGTON NEXT WEEK

It is now an assured fact that the Fort Benning Polo team will go to Washington next week to take part in the War Department Tournament. Players and horses will depart in time to play in the tournament beginning June 10, after which other teams will be met, principally those which were not encountered in tournament play.

The teams which probably will play Benning are as follows: Fort Humphreys, 3rd Cavalry, 16th Field Artillery, War Department, Middleburg and Fort Myer. These teams have, in general, total handicaps of from 8 to 10 goals.

During the past week or ten days Major Lyman, who will captain the team, has been busy trying out various combinations of players in order to assemble the strongest aggregation. The usual difficulties have come up in reaching a decision. Handicaps carried as well as playing ability must be considered in the cases of the individual play-

CHIEF OF CHAPLAINS VISITS FORT BENNING

Col. Edmond P. Easterbrook, Chief of Chaplains, is visiting Fort Benning this week. Col. Easterbrook is making a tour of inspection of chapels and chaplains activities at army posts in southern states.

CHIEF OF STAFF MAKING BRIEF VISIT HERE

Will Observe Maneuvers

General Charles P. Summerall, Chief of Staff of the Army, arrived at the Infantry School today for a two day visit. He was met at the railroad station in Columbus upon his arrival this morning at 10:55, by Brigadier General Campbell King, commandant of the Infantry School, and Lieutenant Colonel Charles A. Hunt, who will act as aide to General Summerall during his stay at Fort Benning.

A detail of city and county motorcycle police escorted General Summerall and his party through Columbus and to the gates of Fort Benning where a detail of military motorcycle police was waiting to lead the party through the reservation to the Upatoi Bridge where the official welcoming ceremony took place.

Battery A 83d Field Artillery, Captain S. F. Clark, and a composite company and the band of the 29th Infantry, commanded by Captain Ralph B. Lovett, were in formation near the bridge awaiting the general's arrival. As the automobile carrying General Summerall reached the south side of the Upatoi Bridge, Battery A fired the salute of seventeen guns prescribed for a general, and the 29th Infantry band and field music sounded the ruffles and played the general's march, while the escort company stood at present arms. An inspection of the battery and the escort by General Summerall and the presentation of staff officers of the Infantry School, completed the ceremony at this point.

The escort then took position in the road and headed the procession to the commandant's quarters, where General Summerall will be a guest during his visit to Fort Benning.

After luncheon with General King, General Summerall spent a portion of the afternoon in making an inspection of the new construction and developments of the post which have taken place since his last visit to Fort Benning. He was accompanied during this inspection by General King, Lieutenant Colonel Hunt and Major Henry A. Bootz, assistant executive officer.

At five o'clock this afternoon, the garrison will give an outdoor reception for General Summerall in the natural amphitheatre in the vicinity of the water tanks on Ebbert Hill. Here General Summerall and a party of distinguished guests will witness a pageant depicting the outdoor social and recreational life of Fort Benning. This spectacle will be similar to that given during the reception to General King upon his arrival here a few weeks ago. During the pageant, former members of the 1st Division, which General Summerall commanded in France during the World War, will be given an opportunity to meet their former commander.

A brief address by General Summerall will conclude the program, which will be followed by "Retreat" and "The APPOINTED REGIMENTAL SGT. MAJOR 29TH INF.

First Sergeant Clyde Heldreth, Co. D. 29th Infantry has been transferred to Headquarters Co. and designed as Regimental Sergeant Major. His service record shows that his recent promotion to the first grade of enlisted man has been well earned by his long and exceptionally meritorious service.

Sergeant Heldreth's first enlistment was with Company I of the 28th Infantry, from which organization he was discharged as a corporal in 1912. His next enlistment was with the 7th infantry and his rating on discharge was sergeant. He served with the 60th Infantry and participated in the following engagements; Anould Sector, Voges, France, June 14 to July 16 1918, St. Mihiel Offensive, France, Sept. 12 to 16, 1918, Meuse-Argonne Offensive, France, Oct. 12 to 22, 1918. Sergeant Heldreth was wounded while serving in France and has been awarded the silver-star citation, 9th Brig., 5th Div.

HARPS POND DAM COMPLETED

After five weeks work the dam and new spillway at Harps Pond have been completed and water was spilling over both spillways Tuesday morning. It had been estimated that it would require 10 days to fill the pond but due to the recent heavy rains it filled in six days. Although called a pond, there is actually a considerable storage of water in it. One hundred thousand tons of water are held back by the dam.

The teams from Service Company, 29th Infantry made many a trip from the borrow pit to the dam. One team which was on the job twenty-four working days made over one thousand trips, it is said. The amount of earth necessary to build the new dam was much larger than most persons estimated as when the old dam gave way last April the terrific rush of the water dug many deep holes which had to be filled. Nearly 3,000 cubic yards of earth had to be moved to rebuild the dam. The weight of this amount of earth is more than 6,000,000 lbs. At the bottom, the new section of the dam is 70 feet wide.

ers. At one moment it may seem advisable to include a less experienced player whose handicap is smaller than his ability would indicate, and at the next the only solution appears to be to make up the team entirely of the strongest and most experienced players regardless of their handicaps.

What the result of the Washington trip may be can not be foretold in games won and lost. It can not help but bring, however, the progress of polo at Fort Benning into favorable and more widespread notice than ever before. The trip may well result in the future consideration of Bennng polo and poloists in nationai polo affairs.

At seven-fifteen this evening, General Summerall will be a guest for dinner at Camp Leonard Wood, where the student officers and the 1st Battalion of the 29th Infantry are encamped and where the annual command post terrain exercises for the student officers' classes are being held. Several city and county officials will also be entertained at this dinner.

Early Saturday morning, General Summerall will proceed to the maneuver area and will observe the work of the students in the command post exercises until about 10:45 a. m. At 11:15 Saturday morning, several enlisted men whose services have been so outstanding as to warrant commendation, will be formed at Headquarters and presented to General Summerall and will receive official citations from him.

General Summerall is expected to depart from Fort Benning at about 12:45 p. m. Saturday and will be accompanied to the Upatoi Bridge by an escort, and tendered the customary honors of his rank upon his departure. AT THE MOVIES

FRIDAY, MAY 31,

"CAUGHT IN THE FOG," starring Mae MacAvoy and Conrad Nagel in an amusing mystery comedy. The locale is a millionaire's palatial yacht off the Florida Coast. A lady and sheik bandit come aboard with the intention of stealing a string of pearls —they encounter the owner who summarily beats up the bandit and forgive the girl, and makes up his mind to gain possession of her. All of them are thrown headlong into an onslaught of crooks and cops. Combine mystery with comedy and you have an ideal picture which not only holds your attention in a vise-like grip, but, also relieves the nervous strain by shaking loose the laughter ducts of your tear producers.

"Flying Hoofs.' Fables.

"Pathe News No. 43."

SATURDAY, JUNE 1,

"CAPTAIN CARELESS," — Cannibals, aeroplane thrills and the sea, feature in this new type of story starring Bob Steele. A yacht is foundered in the South Seas near islands infested with savages. A girl aboard the ship is captured by the wild island natives and Captain Carless launches on a non-stop flight from the Pacific Coast to the far-off isles to effect a rescue. This narative is gripping throughout. It possesses adventure, feats of human prowess and strength with thrill after thrill.

"Taxi Beauties." Jack Cooper.

SUNDAY, JUNE 2,

"BELLAMY TRIAL," starring Leatrice Joy with Betty Bronson in a gripping murder mystery. A beautiful woman—another's husband—a knife thrust in the dark—the grinding wheels of justice and their oppression—are the elements about which this plot is wound. It most realistically portrays sordid and fascinating scenes of the court room, and depicts the human emotions of the defendant, the attorneys, the judge, the jury and the vast audience stirred by the tense action of the principal figures. The plot progresses in such a manner that observers are kept in a constant strain guessing who committed the murder, and not until the final role is the true culprit revealed.

"Spanking Age." Our Gang.

"M. G. M. News No. 81."

MONDAY, JUNE 3

"RED WINE," starring Conrad Nagel in a sparkling comedy with a kick worthy of the title. It concerns man who leaves the safe and sane precincts of happy married routine to blossom out into a regular "he-devil" in society. He blooms but rises for a beautiful fall. Nagel plays the part of the settled husband who becomes naughty, June Collyer that of the trusting wife, Sharon Lynn that of the vamping vamp, and Arthur Stone, comedian, livens up the party by "egging" on the husband and causing ludicrous situations.

"Mystery Rider No. 6."

TUESDAY, JUNE 4

"THE YOUNGER GENERATION," starring Jean Hersholt with Lina Basquette and Ricardo Cortez in a tense human interest drama of love, sacrifices and devotion in which sudden riches wreck the happiness of the home and blast future hope. This story is an adaptation of the stage play "It is to Laugh," and the story "The Golden Fish." The plot starts in the poverty stricken settlement of New York's East-side and progresses to the exclusive establishments on Madison Avenue and a palatial home on Riverside Drive. A poor youth falls in love with a daughter of wealth. He becomes the innocent victim of a jewel robbery and is sentenced to a prison term, but before giving himself up he marries the girl, who is driven from home by her parents. A number of complications set in which aright themselves only after bitter hardships are endured by all concerned. The sad trend of the story is enlightened by deft touches of comedy. Jean Hersholt is said to have displayed his best talent in this picture.

"Getting Together." Sport.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5

"GIRLS GONE WILD," featuring Sue Carol and Nick Stewart in a story involving a score of pretty girls, youthful cut-ups, a sinister bootlegger and a jazz mad daughter of wealth. The highlights are Tony's "dance of death" with a girl clasped in his arms as he attempts to escape the avenging pistols of three desparate gunmen, the kidnapping of the girl, an officer's splendid struggle, a thrilling motorcycle ride, and stark drama in a gangster's cabin for the life and honor of a charming girl. The story is purported to be clever and thrilling.

"Pathe Review."

THURSDAY, JUNE 6

"THE GODLESS GIRL," by the author of "The King of Kings," starring Lina Basquette and Marie Prevost with a splendid cast. It is a grim story of brutality behind the walls of a juvenile reformatory and presents a most poignantly bitter denunciation of conditions claimed by the producer to exist in penal institutions. Thus, it is a picture with a purpose. Among the most thrilling of the scenes is the complete destruction by fire of a five story building and the havoc wrought when high brick walls fall among a multitude of fleeing children and fire fighters in the campus of the institution. This film posses thrills enjoyable comedy, love, hate and wild passions.

FRIDAY, JUNE 7

"THE SHAKEDOWN," featuring James Murray with Barbara Kent in a stirring story of the oil fields and the prize ring. The plot revolves about the evil machinations of crooked fight promoters. The fake fight game with the "ace in the hole" for ring racketeers forms the basis of the plot. The inner workings of the crooked prize machine are most interestingly depicted. The story has suspense, surprise, and romance angles.

Young-Hedekin Engagement Announced

Major and Mrs. Lawrence W. Young announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen McFarland, to Lieutenant David Drew Hedekin, the wedding to take place in the autumn.

The above announcement will be read with unusual interest for it concerns two of Fort Benning's most popular young people. Miss Young is a dainty blonde of exceptional charm, whose capability has wide versatility. She made a brilliant scholastic record at St. Mary's in Raleigh, N. C. and at Converse College in Spartanburg, S. C., and since her graduation has taken a prominent place in the sporting and social activities of her station. She is recognized an an equestrienne of marked ability, having ridden very creditably at many horseshows throughout the South and Middle West.

Lt. Hedekin is the son of Col. Hedekin, Cavalry, Retired, of Washington, D. C., and is a graduate of the United States Military Academy, Class '27. He is Post tennis champion and an excellent rider. Since his coming to Fort Benning he has served very efficiently with the 29th Infantry.

General and Mrs. Campbell King have very graciously opened their quarters to callers on Tuesday afternoons when they are "at home" from four to six.

Honoring General and Mrs. Campbell King and their guest Major-General Stephen O. Fuqua, of Washington, D. C., Mayor J. Homer Dimon entertained at a very beautiful tea at his summer home "Countryside" on Friday afternoon.

The handsome home was most attractively filled with flowers from the luxuriant garden of the estate, and the spacious lawn was dotted with small tables centered with bowls of garden flowers where friends gathered for informal greetings.

Several hundred friends in both Army and civilian circles called between five and seven.

One of the most brilliant affairs of the entire year was the dinner dance at which the advanced class of the Infantry School entertained at the Country club on Friday evening. They honored on this occasion, Maj.-Gen. Stephen O. Fuqua, Gen. and Mrs. Campbell King, and those instructors and their wives with whom the class has come in contact with during the past school year.

Maps, problems, monographs and flags were interestingly used for decoration and the tables were laid with problem maps, examination code numbers being used for place cards. During the dinner, clever skits were given by different officers. They were take-offs of various outstandingly troublesome school requirements—chief among them "The Killing of the Monograph." Class Medals were presented to certain instructors, Capt. Hones making the presentation speeches while the medals were pinned on by Gen. Fuqua, Chief of Infantry. There were two hundred and fifty guests for dinner and later in the evening they were joined by the officers and ladies of the garrison for dancing.

There were many delightful dinner parties. Among those entertaining were: Col. Tarbutton, Col. and Mrs. Strong, Col. and Mrs. Cheston, Maj. and Mrs. Van Fleet, Maj. and Mrs. Connolly, Capt. Lueking, Capt. Rustemeyer, Capt. and Mrs. Dark, Capt. and Mrs. Baldwin, Capt. and Mrs. Bishop, Capt. and Mrs. Glasgow, Capt. and Mrs. Dahlquist, Capt. and Mrs. Kneubel, Lt. and Mrs. Robinson.

Complimenting Miss Barbara King, beautiful debutante daughter of Gen. and Mrs. King, Miss Alice Torrey entertained at dinner at Biglerville before the dance given on Saturday evening by Maj. and Mrs. Phelps. The table had for its centerpiece a low bowl of pink snapdragons and around it burned tall pink tapers in silver holders. Covers were laid for Miss King, her guest, Miss Jane Crosley, of Washington, Miss Harriett Wells, Maj. and Mrs. Phelps, Lt. Wiley, Lt. Diller, Lt. Cornog, Lt. Jeter, Lt. Griffith.

On Saturday evening, May 25th, Major and Mrs. Frederick C. Phelps entertained at a lovely dance honoring Miss Alice Torrey and Lt. Welborn B. Griffith whose marriage will be the outstanding social event of June. The Polo club was most attractively decorated. Lattice work enclosing the orchestra pit was entwined with southern smilax and graceful baskets filled with beautiful dephinium, corn flower, daisies, zinnias and various garden flowers were artistically placed at the entrances, on the walls, and on tables. The punch table had for its centerpiece a tall brass vase filled with exquisite yellow roses. As each couple went down the receiving line the gentleman was given a card. At various intermissions a certain card was called for, and the lucky officer and his partner received a gift. The first card called was the Ace of Hearts and the groom-elect chanced (?) to hold it. He and his bride-to-be were given a piece of sterling-Kirk bon-bon spoon. The second card called was the "one-eyed King" and was held by Lt. W. E. Donegan. He and Mrs. Donegan received a dress tie and an evening handkerchief respectively. Later the "one-eyed Jack" was called, and Lt. N. J. Wiley holding the lucky card, received with Mrs. Campbell King, his dancing partner, gifts similar to Lt. and Mrs. Donegan. About two hundred guests enjoyed this delightful dance.

On Monday afternoon Miss Verna Perry complimented Miss Alice Torrey with a delightful bridge party. The house was decorated with Shasta daisies and nasturtiums. Progressive bridge was played and Mrs. Malcolm R. Kammerer won first prize, a double deck of Modernistic cards, Miss Torrey second, a box of tapers. As guest of honor she was given a novelty ice-mallet and ice bag. The invitations were limited to close friends of the honoree.

THEY MARCH ON

Sixty-odd years ago, an armed conflict which had raged for four years between Americans of the North and the South, came to a close.

A year after the close of the war, a southern woman conceived the idea of designating a day on which to honor the memory of the fallen heroes of the South by appropriate memorial exercises and decoration of soldiers' graves.

The idea caught the popular fancy and quickly grew into a custom which became general throughout the nation.

One of the features of Memorial Day exercises is the reunion of the survivors of the Civil War and of other wars who assemble to do honor to the memory of their comrades who have preceded them into the Great Beyond.

Last month, the South saw the few remaining members of its gray-clad armies assemble again to pay the annual honors to their departed comrades.

Yesterday, the North saw the remnants of the blue ranks of its Grand Army assembled again, striving valiantly to march with the same vigor of sixty years ago.

Time has taken its toll of their bodies but their spirit is as vigorous as in the days of '61.

A BUDDY IN NEED

Among his many admirable qualities, generosity and loyalty to his buddy are two outstanding characteristics of the American soldier.

The ties of affection and loyalty that bind together in undying friendship those who have served together as buddies in peace or war transcend in enduring quality those attachments which are the outcome of associations in other environments. The sharing of hardship and peril brings men into closer understanding than does any other experience. The soldier will share his last crust with his buddy; he will risk his own life to drag his buddy out of danger; he will divide his worldly goods, down to the last nickel, with his buddy.

Those who served in the World War remember the welfare organizations whose devoted members endeavored to replace, in some measure, the comforts which the soldier had left behind when he joined the colors. The soldier always found a welcome in these little centers of good cheer and he learned to regard the good people who conducted them as buddies, even if they did not actually stand shoulder to shoulder with him in the trenches.

Among these auxiliary organizations, there was none which enjoyed greater popularity than the Salvation Army, whose winsome lassies distributed coffee and doughnuts and cheery smiles to weary soldiers.

Today, this war-time buddy of the army is in distress. Today is pay day. And a soldier never forgets his buddy!

COLUMBUS CLOSE-UPS

By LeRoy Yarborough

PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER

IN FRONT of a store on the lower end of one of the principal business streets of Columbus, a curious wooden figure stands on the sidewalk.

It is weatherworn and cracked; and it is chipped and scarred by rough handling and the pocketknives of small boys and idlers. Traces of paint can be seen in some of the deeper niches and grooves which have afforded a slight protection from the ravages of the elements and the vandalism which have marred its former beauty.

It must have been, in its time, a beautiful example of the product of a craftsmanship which no longer flourishes, but which, like the figure itself, belongs to a past and well-nigh forgotten age. Despite its scars and mutilations, it is still a thing of beauty, for it represents the figure of a beautiful woman. Without in the least resembling it, the figure reminds one of the mutilated, but still beautiful, Venus de Milo. One regrets, upon looking at it, that the fine carving was not executed in stone rather than the wood, which, no doubt hard and close-grained at one time, now gapes in innumerable cracks and crevices.

The once pretty face is marred by a deep crack and a broken nose, but the delicate tracery of the rather full lips and the rounded lines of a well-shaped chin remain. Delicately carved eyebrows arch gracefully over the eyes, which once may have been blue, and whose gaze, in the present position of the figure, now is directed skyward. What, at first glance, appears to be a wreath, but which closer examination reveals as a carven coil of braided hair, adorns the head, which is inclined backward on the rather thick, but not ungraceful, neck. The full bust appears to be encased in a snugly fitting, buttoned-to-the-throat bodice, whose unseen whalebone stays constrict the waist into the wasp-like shape which was considered fashionable for the female form in generations past. A long skirt, hanging in flowing folds, conceals the rest of the woman's figure, including her feet, and probably represents the acme of propriety in woman's dress in the period when ladies' legs were limbs and were neither seen nor mentioned in polite society. There are many other details fashioned by the observant artist, such as the daintily carved nails on the shapely hands which protrude from the long sleeves of the bodice, the little reticule which the lady carries in one hand, the watch suspended at her waist, the necklace of beads and a queer little tie which encircles her neck, the buttons on her garments.

At first sight of the wooden figure, I had recognized it as a figurehead of a deep sea sailing ship, for during my boyhood I lived in a seaport city and, while cherishing an adolescent ambition to become a seafaring man, I had made a study of the construction and management of sailing ships. But why the figurehead of a deep sea ship should be standing on the hot sidewalk of an inland city puzzled me.

So, when a pleasant faced man whom I presumed to be the proprietor, appeared in the doorway, I asked him to tell me something about the figurehead.

"Do you know much about the Bible?" was his response to my question.

"Well, not as much as I should," I admitted, somewhat taken aback by his unexpected query.

"You're an honest man," he said, "I'll tell you about that wooden woman. She's been in my family for more than a hundred years. She was given to me by my father whose grandfather had given her to him years and years ago. My great grandfather lived on the coast of Florida and a ship was once wrecked near where he lived. That wooden woman came off of that ship.

"Somehow, as she was passed down through the generations of my family, the name of the ship that she had come from had been forgotten. My father told me that it was the same as that of Pharaoh's daughter, she who found Moses in the bullrushes. Do you remember her."

I acknowledged having a slight recollection of the story but confessed that I did not recall ever having heard the name of the lady in the legend.

"You're an honest man. Well, I didn't know her name either. I asked several of my friends and none of them knew. One day a friend advised me to ask a Baptist minister,who, he said, was quite an authority on such things. If this Baptist minister couldn't tell me her name, nobody could, he said.

"Well, I am a Methodist, myself, but I thought that I would give this Baptist a chance to show what he knew, so I asked him. 'That's easy; if you Methodists want to know anything about the Bible just ask us Baptists,' he said. He couldn't think of her name just then, he said, but he would go home and look it up and let me know. When I saw him a couple of weeks later, he said that he had looked in every book that he had and couldn't find her name. Maybe she didn't have any name; maybe, being the king's daughter, she didn't need any name, he thought.

"I asked the Methodist minister next. 'You did right to come to me and not waste any more time fooling around with those Baptists,' he said. He couldn't think of her name just then, either, so he promised to look it up when he got home and let me know. He told me a couple of weeks later that all he had found out was that Pharaoh had had several daughters and that he was not sure which this one was, so he couldn't tell me her name.

"I asked a priest next but he couldn't tell me her name, either.

"Did you ever see that little man with the big beard who passes here quite often? He's a rabbi, I think, and smart as a whip, so I asked him.

"He said he thought he could tell me and would let me know as soon as he found out. I didn't think that he would but he came in a few days later to tell me. I happened to be out at the time, so he wrote the name on a piece of paper and left it on my desk. I couldn't read it, because it was written in Hebrew, but I finally got somebody to translate it for me and I knew then what her name was.

"Just to make sure that the little rabbi was not kidding me, I wrote to the collector of the port for the district where the old ship was wrecked and sent him the name that the rabbi had given me.

"A few days later, I received a letter from the official which gave a description of the ship, its tonnage, its port of registry, the trade it was engaged in and the date and place it was wrecked. It tallied in every detail with the story passed down by my great grandfather. The rabbi was right."

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

BY CAPTAIN M. P. RUDOLPH, Medical Corps, Medical Inspector

TYPHOID FEVER

Thirty years ago, which is well within the memory of many of us, typhoid fever, "summer diarrheas," and kindred ailments were looked upon as something to be expected, and one was lucky if one escaped; the urban and the rural resident had little choice as to safety from these conditions, while the traveler had less than an even chance in the gamble. At the present time these conditions occur so infrequently in well regulated communities that a member of such a community is apt to give little or no thought to the possibilities of acquiring such an infection, for an infection it is, which may be communicated from one person to another.

The disease kown as typhoid fever is caused by a definite germ, the typhoid bacillus, and summer diarrheas are principally caused by germs similar to and belonging to the same family as the typhoid bacillus. They belong to the group of so-called water-borne diseases. They are transmitted by water, food, milk, flies, dust, filth, soiled hands, and carriers. Every case of typhoid fever comes from some other case by indirect contact; the excretions of typhoid fever patients and carriers are loaded with typhoid germs; these germs must reach the mouth of the healthy person in order to cause the disease. The same thing is largely true of summer diarrheas. Heretofore these diseases have been widely prevalent in all climates, especially so in the tropics, and in temperate climates during the summer and autumn months.

At the present time the disease has been practically eliminated from the more thickly settled communities, due to the great strides made in community sanitation during the last thirty years, and to some extent by the extensive use of the direct method of prophylaxis; in the military service vaccination against the disease is also used and the only cases of typhoid fever seen are those that have acquired their infection prior to their entrance into military service.

Typhoid fever is still found in rural communities and where the more primitive conditions prevail. Individuals traveling across country, and those vacationing away from large, well regulated communities should bear this in mind and be particularly careful about drinking water from unknown sources and taking meals at places that are not kept up to a high standard of sanitation. The same care should be exercised in selecting a place to camp for the night as would be in selecting a place to spend a vacation, or taking up a residence.

The fact that an individual has been vaccinated against typhoid fever and its allied diseases is not a gilt-edged guarantee that such individual cannot acquire a typhoid infection, but it is so effective that individuals so vaccinated very rarely acquire the infection and when they do the course of the disease and its effects are so mild that the vaccination is more than well worth while. Coupled with modern practices in the individual and community sanitation, there is no scheme of disease prevention more effective than vaccination against typhoid fever.

The diagnosis and treatment of the disease should be left entirely to the physician.

WE WONDER

When Earth's last paper is printed and the pages folded and dried,
When the forms are twisted and broken, and the type is scrambled and pied;
We shall rest, and Faith, we shall need it, for the road has been weary and long,
And oft have we heard that chestnut: "Young man, you have quoted me wrong."

When the last of society's matrons has gone to that land far away,
Where roses forever are blooming and fountains are ever at play,
Shall we hear, as the organ is playing her favorite anthem or song:
"My dear, you must make a correction, for surely you've spelled my name wrong."

When Gabriel toots on his trumpet to call us to come to that land
Of music and flowers and sunshine, and angels make jazz with their band;
Shall we hear, as we enter the portals, his voice above all of the throng,
"Young man, you must make a correction—your sheet has quoted me wrong."

The 15th Tank Battalion manages to put some of the best athletes on the field during every athletic encounter. Their efforts are always combined for one purpose, the glory of the Fifteenth Tank Battalion. The "Terrible Tankers" have that thing known as organization spirit down to the nth degree, and they strive to keep it that way.

Their duties, though not the same as other organizations, are as hard as any, taking just as much time to carry them out. Months before the track meet had even been announced, the road and area would be crowded each night with men in various and sundry uniforms, going through the regular routine training of organized track teams. Now there were no coaches there to tell them what to do, but they had the desire to perfect themselves so that they could fit into any machine that they were needed for. This was manifested in the team races during the track meet. Nothing could ever be better than their team work.

Then along came Lt. Roosma, who always takes an interest in any kind of athletics, and he proceeded to coach and train the finest track team that Fort Benning has ever seen. He taught them that no matter how tired anyone ever got to be, there was always room for a little more steam until the engine fell from the track. This was proved when Ornoff dropped in the half mile run. He had the lead from the start, and kept packing on steam all the way, while he knew that he was not physically fit to ever enter the race. He had only twenty-five more yards to run, but fell from exhaustion before he could reach the goal. His efforts were just a sample of the determination of the Fifteenth Tank Battalion to win that meet—which they did decisively.

TANKERS STAR TRACK ATHLETE

Pvt. 1cl. A. B. Thomas, Hq. Co., 15th Tank Bn., who was second high point winner in the annual garrison track meet and high point winner for the 15th Tank Battalion. Thomas took two first places and one second place, making a total of twelve points.

29TH INF.

Headquarters Co.

Ex.-pfc. "Spud" Murphy is really in the Army now. He writes that he arrived in Kentucky on Monday and was married Monday night. He must be a bear for punishment, having completed three years of would-be-war, he now takes on a life hitch of real war. His training should be of use, for instance when he is doing guard at night, carrying a son instead of a gun, it might be handy to remember his guard orders, especially the ninth! It would certainly be a treat to see "Spud" then.

Life is not just. Last week, in speaking of Asher going to West Point, I meant to refer to West Point as the "lieutenant garden" (I should explain this for the benefit of the English) but the eagle eye of the proof reader spotted an error and corrected it to read the "Captain's garden." Wurra, wurra.

29th Infantry Band

The initial appearance of this column should necessarily include a brief sketch of the band, its duties and personnel, so lend me your ears and I will do the honors.

Just now we are entering our concert season, spending a lot of time playing to the squirrels on the general's lawn, and taking sightseeing tours to the maneuver camps on the Fort Benning Twentieth Century Limited. We really enjoy those concerts though, for we play near the mess tent in each camp.

Besides the band proper, we boast of four orchestras; the concert orchestra, the dance orchestra, the Main Theatre orchestra, and the 29th Theatre Little Symphony Orchestra, all under the direction of Sgt. Wright. This versatile pianist claims to be the hardest worked man in the army, but he never tried to act as news writer for the Infantry School News.

Hdqrs. Co., 1st. Bn.

Pfc. Chapman made good at the Prep School at Fort McPherson, got a furlough, and now he's corporal. That's what hard work applied in the correct manner will bring you. We are all proud of Corporal Chapman and wish him the best of luck when he gets to West Point, and after too.

The boys out at Camp Leonard Wood think that the boys here at the Barracks are having an easy time; and we in here think the same of them. Now the question is, who is right. I can't say, as I am prejudiced, and have my own personal opinion.

Seems that there is quite a rushing business being done at Camp Leonard Wood by one of our corporals who has a car. This car is being used as a conveyance to the old swimming hole. The other day the gang all piled in, but the car balked and could not be persuaded to do its stuff, so those wishing to swim that day were compelled to walk.

Company "C"

This organization did not hold the space alloted it in the NEWS last week, due to the fact that the writer was very busy fighting mosquitoes at maneuver camp. The war, in general, can be discontinued long enough to write news notes, but the war on mosquitoes can not be stopped for an odd job of so little importance.

Sgt. Hayes, our beloved supply sergeant, was heard to make the following statement, after having read the account of Robbin's and Kelly's endurance flight in the morning paper. "If Robbins and Kelly could have sat behind the wheel of the company truck for about ten trips from Benning to Sulphur Springs, they could have stayed in the air for thirty days."

Corporal Bennett returned from furlough last week and joined the company "out in the sticks" immediately.

Hdqrs. and Hdqrs. Co., 2nd Bn.

First of all we must congratulate Private First Class Terrell J. Gordon. He has two stripes instead of one. What I am trying to tell you is, that he is our baby corporal now. He is also in charge of the 2nd Battalion stables. Our former stable manager, Sgt. Terry, is now student supply sergeant. You folks know why we have to have a student supply sergeant because we have already mentioned the fact that Sgt. Stragand will soon be on a three months re-enlistment furlough. He has only three weeks to do now, but soon it will be three years. ffl Ex-cook Benjamin W. Agee has left our kitchen and is now on SD with the band. A musician he will be.

Company "E"

Company "E" baseball team won their first game of the season in the Battalion League from the 2nd Bn. Hq. Co. on May 20. Score 7 to 1 The galloping Swede, Oikari, was the leading hitter of the game. He got three hits out of four times up. One of them was a homer with the bases filled. This game was won from Lefty Carnes, one of the best pitchers in the Post.

The second game of the league between Co. E and F was played on Gowdy field Sunday, May 26. This is the most exciting game of the league so far. It was won by Co. E by the score of 3 to 2. Before the game started, Corp. Oikari, Co E's first baseman, was hit by a ball thrown by McAllister. The ball hit him on the right knee and Pvt. Cooper, our 2nd baseman, ran up all excited to give him first aid and started to work his left knee by pulling on his left leg.

Company "G"

The company is very busy preparing for the range and we hope to come through strong, like we did last year. Don't forget the old saying, "Hold them and squeeze them."

Willie Simpson, drill set, just transferred from Company "F," 2nd platoon. We sure were lucky in getting him; a good fellow and a happy-go-lucky guy.

A certain fellow in the 1st platoon missed reveille and his squad leader told him to go to the hospital and get some reveille pills. Craig hasn't missed reveille since. The squad leader sure knows his stuff.

We are sorry to hear of Pvt. Gergely losing his mother. Gergely is on furlough up at New York City.

Company "H"

Sgt. Lowe and Cpl. Brunner are residing in the Station Hospital at present; influenza.

General Fuqua, Chief of Infantry, inspected the company's quarters Saturday. The company was also inspected by all the national guard classes.

We are rapidly preparing for range and can hardly wait for the preliminary work to start. Everyone is looking forward to trying for expert gunner this year, and from all indications, the present custodians of the Clarke trophy better prepare to turn it over.

"A" Battery

Puffed Rice is a very delectable dish. This may be verified if you ask some of the boys in our outfit. Especially a certain Louisianian. We noticed Private Folse slipping some of the exploded globules into his pocket the other morning, and when asked what he contemplated doing with them, he replied, "I'm sending them home for seeds. The folks don't grow this new fangled rice down there yet."

Private Ourso wishes to enter a new name in the competitors list of the Next National Bunion Race. We are informed that the boy is very fleet of foot and will stand a fair chance of coming home with the bacon. No, Ulysses isn't the man—he wishes us to put in a word for Major Hoover, beg pardon, the Major Hoople Neely.

Private Harvey dropped a nickle in a down town pay telephone station, and the operator asked sweetly, "Number, please." to which Harvey replied, "Number, nothing. You give me my chewing gum!"

Private Lindsey is with us again this week. Only this time, so he informs us, will be a sort of flying visit. Lindy dotes on the old adage, that, "You can't keep a good man down." We understand that he has requested the battery poet to compose a bit of rhyme somewhat on these lines: "Soaring, soaring, soaring, over the dark terrain."

Private Williams leaned against a huge concrete post the other day and dozed. When he woke, it was night, and everything about him was dark and black. He deftly felt the object of his support with nimble fingers, patted it with his hands, and began walking around it, always rubbing its rough surface. After two or three successive rounds, he sank down to the pavement, and in desperation, said, "My gosh, I'm walled in!"

We are all watching with interest the progress that nature is making with the new Bermuda that is planted about the battery area. In a few weeks it will equal in beauty the lawn that we like so well.

Last night Private Parks said, "I'm so sleepy." "Then, why don't you go to bed?" asked Private Glenn. "Oh, the bugler hasn't blown "lights out" yet," he answered.

Private Samuel Sampson was born in Liberia, Africa. He is a good painter and carpenter. An expert rifle shot. Hobby, playing pool. Religious faith, Methodist.

Company "B"

We wish some one would explain to Pvt. "Spud" Murphy that he must get permission to speak to the Company Commander.

Pfc. "Light-Horse" Williamson and Pvt. Armistead are some "bunkies" now. We wonder what one would do if the other should go away.

We were sorry to lose Capt. McGill as Company Commander. Capt. Mansfield is now commanding.

"Pap" Rhone wins the marathon endurance record for pool playing; he was seen in the hall Sunday morning at 5:30. Keep it up "Pap," you'll be a shark some day.

Cpl. "Sack" Fuller is manager of the Company baseball team. We lost a tight game Sunday to "A" Co., 12 to 11. They scored the winning run when Gibson misjudged and let drop a ball that should have been an easy out. Our next game is for Saturday; just watch us then.

DE PRATT—ATTAWAY HEAD POLO BENEFIT CARD

Gisemont Gulley	vs	Tut Tut Taylor	3 Rounds
Phizz Costello	vs	Grumpy Gordy	4 Rounds
Eddie Brault	vs	Jack Pritchard	4 Rounds
Doubtin' Thomas	vs	Jim Spivey	6 Rounds
Ginger Jernigan	vs	Danny Davis	8 Rounds
Styles Attaway	vs	Gunner DePratt	10 Rounds

Look over the above list of scraps. Analyze the pros and cons, the ifs and ands, the possibilities and probabilities, and if the array of talent offered for the big polo card for this coming Monday night is not worth one long green, then keep away from Doughboy Stadium on June 3rd.

At this writing every male and female within a radius of fifty miles of Benning is cognizant of the fact that the coming fight bill is being sponsored by the Polo Association of the Post. If you have not been approached to subscribe for a ticket for the fight, be assured that you will. The big feature connected with the ballyhoo is to reach the once-in-awhile fight fan and have him at the ringside on Monday night. There is no question about the regular fan. One look at the bill and his order for tickets was doubled.

In Washington, the nation's capital, the city of oil investigations, the wet homes of the embassies, the pulse of the nation, there will gather, during June, the pick of the army polo teams. The cavalry, infantry, engineers and all the rest will be represented in a tournament to decide, at least for this year, just who is the cream of the army polo world.

Here at Benning we have a real polo four. Matched with teams in this section of the country they proved that they stand in a class by themselves. It follows then, that to try their skill and daring against the army's best, is their one big desire. Money is needed to carry out this ambition. Washington is the goal. From Lumpkin Road to Pennsylvania Avenue is a long, long walk.

On Monday night in Doughboy Stadium there is a fight bill arranged that is worth five dollars of anybody's money, providing of course one likes that kind of diversion. In this connection show me one army file that will turn his head when two kids are scrapping and it will be an easy matter to produce hundreds who will break their necks to get on the inner fringe of the circle to get a close-up of the hooks, wild swings, and knockdowns. Therefore, when the question came up to send that crack polo team of ours to Washington, it is not surprising that some one remarked, "Let's run a fight."

To run a real fight takes plenty of the filthy lucre. Run a cheap card and you have a cheap crowd; put on a couple of real bruisers and the stands won't hold them. For a long time the promoter has been trying to get two men together who possess that something which draws the luke-warm fan away from his pipe, slippers, and radio. On Monday night these two will be presented as the main attraction of the evening. They are none other than Gunner DePratt, 29th Infantry's own socker extraordinary, and Styles Attaway of Gainesville, Ga., twice victor over Willie Ptomey, a three round knockout over the veteran Tommy Billards, a six round knockout over Tillie Kid Herman, and a record of 53 wins against 3 losses.. Both boxers are of the type that stand up and swing, a style that makes history. This, and there is nothing to prove that it will not, ought to be the scrap of the year. Therefore, the poloist who suggested the fight can sit back and watch the shekels roll in. After the boxers have been paid off, the odds and ends cleared up, every dime that is over will be placed in the hands of the polo squad to help defray the terrific expense of transporting horses, equipment, personnel, etc., from Benning to the Farm Relief City.

The wind-up of course carries the big noise on the coming bill, but all the fight of the evening will not be confined in that session. Look at the eight rounder between Danny Davis and Ginger Jernigan. Again you have two hitters who know little about the game of covering up. Hark back to that fight between Davis and Blondy Parker. Danny was out on his feet in the third round. His only defense was his unprotected jaw. Then visualize Davis in the eighth, ninth and tenth round sending everything he had at Blondy to earn a draw. You have seen Jernigan do the same thing. Eight rounds of action is the promise for this one.

Go right through the bill and every bout except possibly the opener of three rounds reeks with boys who sling leather. Doubtin' Thomas in a six rounder means that Jim Spivey, despite the big league reputation Spivey carries, will see a lot of dark leather coming his way. Thomas has been busy the past month and looks better than ever.

Wonders never cease. Fans who watched Eddie Brault make a show of the famous Big Bill Thompson know that little Brault packs a load of concrete in that left arm. Nevertheless the promoter's office is busy turning away applicants who desire to test the sting of Eddie's punches. Not wishing the coroner to step in, the promoter has turned down a score of youngsters; however, one Jack Pritchard, impressed the matchmaker so much that he was booked for a four rounder. Pritchard did KO Battling Sam in his only appearance at the Post. He might come through, and then it might be through the ropes.

Yes Gordy is on the bill with Phizz Costello. Grumpy has the polo bug. in the market for a quiet, gentle musin the market for a juiet, gentle mustang. He can be reached Monday night in the second bout of the evening. Tut Tut Taylor and Gisemont Gulley oblige with a five minute act entitled "Love isn't all that they say it is."

Get that ticket now. The prices are the same as any other fight. The bleachers are yours for four bits, the last two rows ringside six bits, and there are 1800 seats at $1.00 per person per seat. Reach down for the roll, peel one thin green one off. It will entitle you to a five buck fight, and it will help immeasurably to send our polo team to the White House.

GOLF GOSSIP
By V. G. H.

We note, with considerable relief, that our 1928 Champion, Capt. "Bob" Chance of the Academic Department, is improving in health, and joining "our gang" again. (A lot of of "competish" out this year, Bob; better get that ol' left arm limbered up).

We are wondering:

(a) why so much extra practice on the part of our Pro? (isn't a 67 good enough for him?

(b) who suggested that the post engineer officer be consulted on the advisability of including a few wall-building accessories of that branch, such as hurdles, gabions, fascines, etc., to really make our traps compare to the famous Hindenburg Line? (Say, fellah, are you trying to start another war?)

(c) what hrrmp.....()..4....means when brother Liston slices off into the rough? (ask Col. Wells, friends, they play together a lot; at least the Colonel said that they are supposed to play together).

RED JONES TURNS PRO.

Nearly all of the Fort Benning baseball fans will remember the "Red Head," from seing him working behind the plate, as the tenth man. Jones started out umpiring the company baseball games that were held from time to time.

He went from there to umpiring in the intra-mural league, becoming popular there with both the players and fans. He gained the reputation of having the ability to call a close play fast and accurately—seldom ever getting a growl from the players. His pep and enthusiasm served to speed up the games, and naturally the managers of each team were willing and anxious forhim to take the senior position in the games.

When the mill teams of Columbus entered their league, "Red" Jones was one of the first of the local umpires asked to work behind the backstopper. Red graciously accepted the position, and could be seen there at each game, giving the fans what they wanted, an even break for either team. For all these games, he received only a slight remuneration, but he could see that he was working himself into one of the best umpires of this section.

The local Foxes took an interest in the future of this Mr. Jones, and resulting from this, Jones has been offered a position with the South Atlantic League, with quite a handsome salary attached. He is at Greensboro, N. C., now, trying out for a permanent berth with the league, and it is reported that he will probably stick.

Red is always followed by popularity, having that quality called "it" in a pronounced form. He always has a good word for all that he meets, and a smile on his face. When Red leaves the party, everyone puts on a sour expression, knowing that seventy-five per cent of the fun has left. We are all rooting for him down here at Benning, and believe that he will make good.

ODE TO A STUDENT

There is a scribe in our class,
We'll call him 'arry Gwynn,
If you want some one in Benning panned,
You have but to ask him.
He wields a wicked poison pen,
It really is a sin;
Just ask 'arry if he can pan "that bird"
And he will say, "I kin."

At night our 'arry is a gay old owl;
His eyesight improves after dark,
But on day maneuvers he raves and howls
About bunion derbys in Benning park.
His keen delight (when at home) at night,
Is to write caustic impressions.
"Poor us, they made us hike like H——
In the pay problem operations."

On a daylight attack, this decrepit old lance
Got lost in the hills, so they say,
He staggered away from the blue advance
And missed most of the problem that day.
Later, much later, he tottered in,
After detouring far and wide.
"I was lost in the brush sir, and caught on a limb."
The instructor replied, "get a guide."

"Get a guide, old man, get a guide,
Or get an old horse you can ride,
So you can go out and back
Without getting off the track;
And if you don't know where you're going
Get a guide."

THE STUDENT—(By H. M. G.)

"The tumult and the shouting dies, the hosts depart," and the distinguished speakers arrive. An unmistakable symptom that we are about to hear those things that mother always knew we were and we shall sit in serged rows and when names are called we shall receive pieces of paper. And thus the long trail is ended.

Nine months ago we started rising with the dawn with a strange person in the kitchen who afterwards turned out to be the wife. Nine months ago we ate our first peanut butter sandwich, and so on "ad infinitum," through sighting bars, gisements, school solutions, U's, double apron fences, derbies, hands on hips, rubbers on head, and minds open to the extent of porosity.

Yesterday we classed it all among the order German milk by-products; today we are sorry to go, and tomorrow it will be "auld lange syne." It's been fine, all of it—the friendships, the joyous associations; and you will remember that when you are out on some detached detail and are as lonesome as a light-house keeper's daughter.

To the corps of instructors who thanked us, even when we said we didn't know, we return thanks and say, "Auf Wiedersehen."

To Col. Marshall, whose teachings and character will find their imprint wherever Benning graduates are stationed, we wish continued success.

Next week we hope to review the year's work so that company officers may have a ready reference of the names of the subjects that they have studied. The threat is predicated upon the present war at Harmony church and the personal activities of certain other Reds who seem to be an integral part of the aforementioned affair.

CHIEF OF STAFF VIEWS OUTDOOR PAGEANT

Scene at outdoor reception given for General Summerall during his visit to Fort Benning last week.

General Charles P. Summerall, Chief of Staff of the Army, made a brief visit to Fort Benning last week The general arrived at The Infantry School Friday shortly before noon and departed shortly after noon Saturday. He devoted most of his time at Fort Benning to inspecting the construction work now going on and observing the work of the student officers in the annual command post and terrain exercises which concluded the academic year of The Infantry School. Although General Summerall's visit was of short duration, time was found in the prearranged official program for a reception by the garrison in his honor.

The reception was an outdoor affair and took place in the hollow just below the water tanks on Ebbert Hill. Here a colorful pageant representative of the recreational life of Fort Benning was presented in a beautiful natural setting and gave the general a comprehensive view of the non-military activities of the garrison. The little natural amphitheater afforded a perfect stage setting for the spectacle which was composed of groups garbed in the costumes of devotees of the sports and hobbies which they represented.

The stage, a little clearing in the natural bowl, carpeted by a thick brown layer of long-fallen pine needles, with here and there an outcropping of green grass; the background of giant Georgia pines silhouetted in dark green against the setting sun; the variegation of the hillsides by the gaily colored summer frocks and hats of the women, offset by the somber shade of the khaki of the men in the throng of spectators, blended into an ensemble of impressive beauty.

An installation of microphones and loud-speakers assured perfect acoustics and made the voices of those taking part in the program clearly audible to the farthermost edges of the crowd.

Major Harold E. Marr acted as master of ceremonies and made the welcoming address to General Summerall and introduced the groups as they appeared successively in the pageant. Major Marr's greeting to General Summerall was as follows:

"General Summerall: Only on occasions all too infrequent, does it fall to our lot here at Fort Benning to welcome you to our garrison. Having that opportunity and privilege today, and knowing, as we do know, how sincerely you take to heart the personal welfare of everyone of us, it is our desire to depict for you now a side of our lives other than the purely military and official. It is our hope, thereby, that you feel for us a closer acquaintance than could otherwise be attained on your brief visit and at the same time to assure you of the genuine warmth of our welcome.

"While we realize what the future holds in store for us in the upbuilding of our post, we also feel that we, here, have been most bountifully provided for by nature itself—no post in the army has more actual "out-doors" (including our present domiciles at Harmony Church) or a more beneficent all-year-round climate than has this one right here at Benning. It follows, then, that our recreational and social activities are largely those which best take advantage of our natural resources. It seems to us especially fitting that as a garrison, we should extend to the Chief of Staff of the Army the welcome we all want to express, in an element and a setting, and in a manner, which perhaps typifies, better than anything else, the community of which we're all proud and happy to be members.

"This military reservation comprises about 97,000 acres. Of these 97,000 acres, approximately 7,000 are sufficiently cleared to be usable for military training and other important projects. To the major portion of this cleared tract,

ADVANCED CLASS INFANTRY SCHOOL

By Major C. A. Willoughby, Inf.

With the echos of Problem 3-b fading into the woods around Ochillee, midnight of June 7th saw the passing of the University on the Upatoi. De mortuis nil nisi bonum—let us not speak ill of the dead! There have been occasional ripples on the smooth current of a quiet academic year, an occasional swirling of troubled waters, but on the whole, the class has agreed that it was a good course.

As we reflect upon the panorama behind us, there are certain landmarks, that will long be remembered. That memorable gathering of the novices, in the main theatre, on a drab September Day, to gaze upon the rostrum with its semi-circle of municipal and local dignitaries, when the Honorable Mayor of Columbus clasped the incoming classes to the bosom—figuratively—of a hospitable city. That first glimpse of one of an endless chain of mimeographs to-wit: the first weekly schedule! The stentorian voice of a famous horseman reverberating through the dust of the paddock "dominate him" give and take! And the first marked problem, with a lavish display of map-tacks, colored pencils, slide-rules and other paraphernalia of learning; Now it can be told! That class was unmistakably brow-beaten and it took ...m some weeks to gather the reins. However, they went in like lambs and came out like roaring lions.

The first U, of course, came in the nature of a nervous shock; gradually, the victms became immunized by frequent repetitions. The monograph over, the esprit, or words to that effect, became slightly more assertive if not ebullient. Certain fool-hardy individuals went so far as to harangue the instructors in pointless arguments. Reclamas flourished only to be returned with a suave but non-commital indorsement. Strange flowers began to blossom, in the academic field, the earnest boy, with shell-rimmed glasses, who always stayed till 12 noon and that pest, presumably in search of knowledge, who timed his questions exactly in the break between hours, a practice which makes me shudder in retrospect!

While growling occasionally, the hypnotic effect of the course slowly gripped the students; technique improved; uniformity of language emerged; standardization or was it canalization? set in, sub-consciously, and the boys soon manipulated Lt. Col. A in approved solutions.

This is perhaps the principal achievment of this course, to establish uniform modes of thinking amongst a group of officers which will soon be flung into distant garrisons from Panama to Alaska, but who talk the same language and operate with identical ideas and conceptions.

The general structure of the course is sound; the correlation of offensive and defensive action are thoroughly digested; the functions of auxiliary arms are brought out, in sufficient details for the needs of the infantryman, to round up the course harmoniously; I doubt, if tbere is a single individual who will not admit, tacitly, that he has benefited by this instruction, if only to the extent of refreshing his memory.

The attitude of the instructors was sympathetic and helpful, although their patience must have become strained, occasionally. Pleasant relations were soon established; there was no incident to disturb the atmosphere of camaraderie within the student body; while the heavy schedule and the distance from the Post did not encourage social contacts, the associations formed here probably will survive and Fort Benning will have become a pleasant memory to all of us. Ave atque vale!

RESUME OF THE COMPANY OFFICERS' COURSE FOR THE YEAR 1928-1929

By Capt. H. W. Gwynn, Infantry

The company officers course of 1928-1929 was officially opened on Sept. 27, 1928, at the Post Theater, with words.

For those who have not worked in large factories, I might say that the routine at Benning is similar. You have a time clock, you wear overalls and you carry lunch in a tin pail, and as soon as the whistle blows at noon you can knock off work and eat.

The first job we got was rifle marksmanship. Venable, gang foreman. Do you remember the heat and the old joints that were outraged by the sitting and prone positions, and the tree where we got a little shade, and now there is no tree and the same holds good for the shade; and we all thought we must be slated individually for the infantry rifle team, considering the time and space consumed? And then on the day of record a hurricane came up out of the north and we had a little nautical practice with small arms.

The next job was pistol marksmanship under that bon vivant, Curtis de Ware. Do you remember the chanties, "Ready on the right, ready on the left, ready on the firing line" that were sung hour after hour under the dripping cement walls of the stadium while the winds came out of the north? And I don't have to ask you if you remember trigger squeeze. Try and forget it.

Then came that repository of sears, extractors, gas cylinder tubes, gadgets and whoseits the automatic rifle. Stripping, assembling and functioning done to music, blindfolded, to the wife, in your sleep, with one finger, without the finger, etc. Browning invented this instrument, but Jones seemed to know more about it.

About this time, which is late October, the telephone girls left us. This subcourse in signal communication, under the well-versed Sweet, was offered in lieu of bayonet and grenade. The threat seemed to be sufficient, for the course was well attended. They are at present performing at Benning's best summer camp.

Now comes bayonet, under the debonair Hutson. A great deal was forgiven this return to the dark ages by Hutson's story of the hen, the egg; breakfast food to some, and otherwise to the hen. (This is an English translation) Do you remember the qualification course with its trenches that you had to leap agilely out of and didn't, and the dummies that you charged and did, much to every one's amazement? Really a remarkable course.

Then Maddox, of the genial personality, had us throw grenades at little white lines and into little black holes. And this was another remarkable course.

Followed musketry, under Hilton, with the first of Benning's several guessing courses. This one was called range, estimation. Then target designation, skirmish runs (where age told, but told on you.) fire distribution, discipline, control (all good words) and finally, the small problems. The small problems began with action and ended with debate. It was during this course that B and C companies decided to introduce that exclusive American pastime of horseplay. From now on the spirit of youth prevailed and the air was filled with pine cones, heavy tufts of grass weighed with dirt, fires in the neighborhood of pink breeches, trains uncoupled, shoes thrown off of trains, baths in watering troughs, hanging by the heels from a picket line, rubber disks flying through the air and the gassing of C Company. Its not clear how all this started but the stopping of it is quite definite. It might be a factor in this personal equation that there is a certain rigidity to a student's life at Benning for which there is offered no adequate compensating factor. Whether Einstein and I are right or not, at least

AT THE MOVIES

JUNE 7 TO JUNE 14, INCL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 7

"THE SHAKEDOWN," featuring James Murray with Barbara Kent in a stirring story of the oil fields and the prize ring. The plot revolves about the evil machinations of crooked fight promoters. The faked fight game, with the "ace in the hole" for ring racketeers, forms the basis of the plot. The inner-workings of the crooked prize machine are most interestingly depicted. The story has suspense, surprise and romance angles.

Pathe News No. 45.

SATURDAY, JUNE 8

"SMILIN' GUNS," starring Hoot Gibson in a stirring drama containing rib-tickling comedy and romantic appeal. Think of it, a cow puncher with manicured nails. He was the softest spoken, best dressed, and most polite cow boy in the west, but when danger threatened the girl he loved, he became a fighting demon who didn't know the meaning of "quit." While this is purely a western picture, it possesses an angle of gentility which becomes pleasing to the most sophisticated audience.

SUNDAY, JUNE 9

"SUNRISE," starring Janet Gaynor with George O'Brien in a powerful drama containing romance, humor, passion, pathos, adventure, revenge, and remorse. This picture is a dramatic conflict of temptations enacted against a background of stupendous spectacles. It is a story of today, typical of our times, but of no particular place. Its characters are human beings, but nameless because they are identified with no particular nationality. Part of the locale is the center of a big city. 7,500 extras were required to people it; 1,500 automobiles were assembled to fill its streets. There is a storm scene at sea, so realistic that thousands of dollars of equipment was lost overboard, and several men barely saved from drowning. In short, the story concerns a farmer who is tempted to murder his wife because he is in the toils of a voluptuous city siren. He agrees to a plan by which he will upset a boat with his wife in it and save himself, but at the critical moment his conscience reasserts itself, and an enthralling sequence follows. This is considered one of the strong pictures of the year.

Topics of the Day.

MONDAY, JUNE 10

"GREYHOUND LIMITED," starring Monte Blue in a thundering railroad story. This fast moving melodrama portrays upon the screen all the strange fascinations of railroading. It crashes quickly from one climax to another. It is the story of a man who was weak, and another who thought he was strong—of true love and villainy—of a girl whose worth was revealed under fire—of the wreck of a life, and the wreck of a train—and over all the shadow of the gallows.

"The Mystery Rider No. 7."

TUESDAY, JUNE 11

"BLOCKADE," featuring Anna Q. Nilsson in a colossal story of the sea, portraying the pirate empire of 12-miles-out. The story concerns, in a most spectacular manner, the war being fought among rum runners and liquor pirates off the Florida coast, with the government forces playing a third hand. Miss Nilsson is seen as the daring commander of a pirate boat, who lures the rum fleet into a trap set by revenue ships. The climax comes in a blazing battle with United States planes blasting to de struction the combined forces of the rum barons and the pirates. It is a gripping and thrilling story from start to finish. If excitement jars your nerves, stay away from this picture.

"Spartan Diet." Sport.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12

"THE SKY SKIDDER," starring Al Wilson, the dare-devil aviator, in a gripping romance among the clouds, and on the land. It contains daring rescues in the air, parachute jumps, and thrilling aerial feats. A captivating romance ties the threads of the plot.

M. G. M. News No. 84.

"The Burglar." Sennett.

THURSDAY, JUNE 13

"DESERT NIGHTS," starring John Gilbert in a most unusual love theme laid in the African wastes. Gilbert plays the role as manager of a South African diamond mine, who is taken prisoner along with a fortune of gems. The story is one of terrible revenge laid in primitive wilds amid diamond mines manned by hundreds of dark skinned natives, and the dazzling whiteness of miles of countless sand dunes. Intrigue, mystery, romance, and bravado, are the basic elements about which this gripping story is wound.

ERNEST TORRENCE, MARY NOLAN and JOHN GILBERT in "DESERT NIGHTS"

"Love and Sand." Arthur Lake.

FRIDAY, JUNE 14

"RESTLESS YOUTH," featuring Marceline Day with Ralph Forbes and Norman Trevor, in a story concerning the wild love adventures of a reckles college girl. The story is laid against the colorful background of college life, business, and the criminal courts. This attractive girl causes a terrible breach between father and son; both of whom fight relentlessly over her. It winds through college scenes, wild parties in a hotel room, and many other alluring scenes, into the nerve-racking grip of the murder court, where a smashing but pleasing climax is reached. This is considered a dynamic drama.

"Land O' Cotton." Fables.

ARMY MOTION PICTURE OFFICIAL VISITS BENNING

Thomas H. Martell, director of motion picture bookings for the entire United States army, spent Thursday and Friday of last week studying the motion picture situation at the Infantry school.

Mr. Martell attended shows at the Main Theatre, and the 29th Infantry, and the 24th Infantry theatres, and observed the detailed operation of these show houses. He expressed himself as being highly pleased with the manner in which pictures were projected and the methods used in handling audiences.

When asked the question, "When may we expect sound pictures at Fort Benning?" Mr. Martell replied that the matter was being given careful study by the Army Motion Picture Service, and that sound pictures would be supplied, but not until thoroughly efficient apparatus for projection could be installed.

While the majority of motion pictures are made on the Pacific coast, their distribution is controlled in the financial hub of the United States, New York, where Mr. Martell's offices are located. It is here that all motion pictures used throughout the army are selected and contracted for.

Mr. Martell has been in the theatrical business for years, and possesses a thorough insight into the intricacies of the profession.

Morale in war is the measure of the will to do cheerfully and the courage to carry out unfalteringly whatever tasks may be assigned.

INFANTRY LEADERS

On Tuesday next, more than two hundred officer graduates of the Infantry School will receive their diplomas from the hands of the commandant and will depart from Fort Benning to take up new duties.

Some have been assigned to duty with troops in garrisons in the United States and its colonial possessions; others have been assigned to duty with the national guard and reserves; and some will take up new duties with the youngsters of the R. O. T. C. units at various schools and colleges. A few will report to other service schools to continue their military studies.

Here, for the past nine months, they have pursued an intensive course of study in infantry training and tactics and the technique of infantry arms.

Here they have seen the development of new infantry weapons, and they have studied new methods which the infantry is adopting to protect itself as the improvement of war machines and weapons advances.

They have learned that improved war equipment has introduced new problems to the infantry, which the infantry must meet and solve. They have learned, however, that machines and mechanization have not obviated the necessity for leadership.

They know, many of them from personal experience, that, while in modern warfare there are many spectacular side shows, the real conflict centers around the infantry.

They know that the infantry is the strength of an army; that battles are decided by the infantry; and that the infantry which is under trained leadership will have a decided advantage over its adversary.

Through the graduates of the Infantry School, its doctrines and methods are being disseminated throughout the three components of the army of the United States and are thereby materially strengthening our national defense establishment.

Wherever they may go, these graduates will be accorded recognition as authorities on the training and tactical methods which have been developed at the Infantry School.

Their graduation from the Infantry School has greatly enhanced their value to the service and is evidence that they have acquired the professional qualifications which must accompany those personal qualities which characterize the successful infantry leader.

Peruse again and again the campaigns of Alexander, Hannibal, Caesar, Gustavus Adolphus, Turenne, Eugene, and Frederick. Model yourself upon them. This is the only means of becoming a great captain, and of acquiring the secret of the art of war. Your own genius will be enlightened and improved by this study, and you will learn to reject all maxims foreign to the principles of these great commanders. Napoleon's 78th Maxim.

Command and leadership are inseparable. The qualities of leadership are indispensable to a commander. Whether the command be large or small, and whether the exercise of the functions of command be complex or simple, the commander must be the controlling head, his must be the master mind, and from him must flow the energy and the impulse which are to animate all under him.

Infantry is essentially the arm of close combat. This role rather than the nature of its armament distinguishes the infantry as a combatant arm. The armament of infantry is adapted to the execution of its mission as the arm of close combat.

Infantry fighting power rests upon the basis of morale. Superior morale furnishes the impulse that carries the infantry forward in attack and the staying power that holds it to positions in defense.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

BY CAPTAIN M. P. RUDOLPH, Medical Corps, Medical Inspector

SWIMMING POOLS

Swimming is one of the best and most exhilirating forms of exercise. It is especially suitable for the tropics, subtropics, and the hotter portions of the temperate climates. It is one of the few forms of violent exercise that can be practiced in hot weather without danger of overheating the body. It has the added hygienic advantage of promoting cleanliness.

Modern swimming pools are, or should be, constructed and maintained in such a manner as to conform to high sanitary standards. In such pools the water should have an initial purity equal to that of a safe drinking water. The bathers constantly introduce pollution and occasionally infection. The water should be kept fairly clean by filtration, chlorination, or similar effective means. Clear water is essential not only for aesthetic reasons, but also to reduce the hazard of drowning.

Swimming pools are nothing more or less than large common bathtubs. They can and sometimes do transmit diseases. The diseases most commonly transmitted are infections of the upper respiratory tract, eyes and ears; skin diseases, venereal diseases, and intestinal infections.

The infections of the upper respiratory tract that may be acquired from a contaminated swimming pool include practically everything from a simple rhinitis, or head cold, to severe sinus infections. The eye infections are principally the various forms of conjunctivitis. The principal ear infections are those of the middle ear, such as running ear, and those of the external canal of the ear. Many skin diseases have been thought to have been transmitted by swimming pools; those most commonly transmitted by such an agency are ringworm in its many forms and manifestations, impetigo, ecthyma, and furunculosis; in fact any skin disease caused by germs or parasites. The intestinal infections most commonly transmitted are those of the summer diarrhea type, but it is possible to acquire the more serious types of intestinal infections such as typhoid fever or dysentery.

The source of infection comes in almost all instances from the persons using the pool; by their bodies or apparel they contaminate the water, which, in turn, transmits the infection to healthy persons.

In the prevention of swimming pool infections stringent regulations should be in force to prevent use of the pool by persons suffering with skin diseases, running ears, ulcers, sore eyes, signs of inflammation of the upper respiratory tract, and venereal diseases. One of the first essentials in accomplishing this is to require every person to take a cleansing shower bath with the liberal use of soap before entering the pool; at the same time every person should have a careful examination to determine his freedom from the above mentioned diseases; this should be done by competent pool attendants, or, in proper cases, by some other responsible person such as the head of a household. If every precaution is to be taken, not only from the aesthetic but also from the hygienic standpoint, a cleansing bath will be taken after leaving the pool.

In the preliminary shower, especial attention should be given to the armpits, crotch, and other parts of the body that are apt to be sweaty or to harbor germs. When water strikes the human body there is a natural tendency to rid it of certain excretions; this should occur not later than in the shower, and never in the pool.

The habit of expectorating in a swimming pool can be largely overcome by the exercise of self restraint. This habit is, of course, one of the prolific sources of pool contamination.

If all persons bathing in swimming pools will remember that the pool is a large common bathtub and protect the pool from contamination as they would protect their private tub bath there need be little fear of contracting diseases from properly supervised swimming pools.

RESUME OF THE COMPANY OFFICERS COURSE

more officers stayed awake during the rubber throwing period than when this pastime was revoked.

To return to school. The next subject was topography under Stonewall Jackson. You remember the opening day when he stood like a stone wall while he hunted for the origin of the grid. Then the marathon exam with station five ever beyond. That was the day the famous battle cry of the class was first heard, as the thunderous cry of "gisement" rolled over the dusty plains. But Stonewall threw in his reserves on the last days, and with his own battle yell of "alidade" he swept us before him.

We come now to the machine gun. We heard of this instrument first on November 27th, but I haven't the remotest idea when we will hear the last of it. For this subject the school provided a plethora of instructors. We had for example, the precise Ambrose, the military Nevins, the staccato Wharton, pine-cone Collins and the formal Collins. And believe me, they were well versed in this other Browning affair. Do you remember elementary gun drill as interpreted by the olive drab romper boys in the stadium? Them were the days when men, were men. "Fall out one! Up!" In addition to the mechanical training there was marksmanship on the 1000 inch range where we beat a two mil tap; the field range, that place of surprising results, then direct laying at what you could see, and indirect at what you didn't see and sometimes that wasn't all. The antiaircraft firing at little things on tracks, combat practice where we won wars with machine guns, and finally a barrage which hit the target, and everybody said that was quite remarkable.

Sandwiched in with the machine gun course were various shorter affairs such as that imposing and inclusive title "Command, Staff and Logistics," meaning for us combat orders, intelligence, and staff maps. The high light of this course was Lt. Col. Hoop. You know, a lot of people move their jaws all day, but unlike the cow, they have nothing to show for it by evening. I am not quite sure now how to get back to Col. Hoop, but since we are involved in this pastoral scene we will express the opinion that the colonel is the berries.

Animal management was another snappy affair put on at this time by Messrs. Smith, Rodgers, McClure, Brian and Mallan. The horse certainly had some clever advocates. Not much was said in favor of the mule, in fact, he was dismissed with the rather dubious statement that he had too much sense to be easily handled.

The last of the sandwich courses at this time was "Training, Inspection, and Standards," by Maj. Rhett. I am confident that the major can sell upright pianos, which is my idea of the ultimate in salesmanship.

Along about this time (which expression is just as useful to me as "it depends on the situation" is to you), at any rate about this time, the rainy season began. Remember how it rained and how we hoped it would rain some more and how it did, (due to our influence), and how we got a holiday out of it and how we used to go down to the bridge, and then we would go home and tell the wife how to run her house, and she would pray that the rain would stop, which must have caused a lot of uncertainty up above.

Speaking of wives, there ought to be inscribed somewhere a tablet commending these pioneer women of the army who kept the home fires burning for the 1928-29 class. And the home fires consisted of two-by-one grates that burned soft coal with frequency. The day's routine for the pioneers began at five-thirty with a dab of water in the face, then some eggs, bacon and toast

THREE MONTHS AT THE INFANTRY SCHOOL

By Capt. Edward R. Schauffler Infantry Reserve

Three months at the Infantry School draws to a close for some 150 national guard and reserve officers, members of the company officers' rifle and machine gun and howitzer courses.

What have we got out of it?

That is a question which each of us must ask himself. Perhaps the Infantry School and the War Department are as much interested in the answer as we are. Our answers, doubtless, will vary somewhat with the individual; some of us got more out of it than others did; some of us were better equipped by reason of past training and back-ground to absorb what the Infantry School had to offer.

But none of us could help being impressed with what the school is doing, and the exceedingly practical nature of its teaching methods. It isn't possible to go through a course at Fort Benning and learn only the theoretical side of training for war. It's valuable and interesting to know the theory of indirect laying for machine guns, but it is equally valuable to know how heavy a machine gun, tripod, ammunition boxes and this and that get when you move them forward by manpower, and that we all learned one steamy afternoon out on Cook Ridge when we went off carts several hundred yards before it actually was necessary. When you know, by your own gasping lungs and pouring perspiration glands just how much work it is to move a section of machine guns forward by hand, you are less likely to wear your company out needlessly that way, either in training or actual combat. And that's worth just as much as knowing the theory of indirect laying.

The same thing was true of all the different weapons studied in the two courses offered reserve and national guard officers. We learned the possibilities of the infantry's "tools," as well as their limitations and their application.

Everybody who has finished the course at Benning must feel he knows something more about what is at least a part time profession for him; the profession of troop leading.

For many of us the business of going to school came as something of a novelty. It has been a good many years since some of us had gone to school. Certainly the Infantry School contrasts glowingly with those hurried courses which the World War officer remembers still with something of a shudder. There were so many of them, they were of necessity so hurried, so often based upon insufficient knowledge and incomplete premises, and perforce taught by instructors who, through no fault of their own, knew very little more than their pupils and therefore were not able to be very enlightening.

There is not a man in the national guard and reserve oficers class at Benning this year who has not been quick to recognize the excellent preparation of the instructors, and to appreciate their unfailing courtesy, patience and resourcefulness in getting their subjects across.

In addition to everything else we have had to learn, it has been interesting to note the teaching methods of the Infantry School instructors. Frankly, not all their subjects have been engrossing. But it has been most instructive to note how many instructors managed to make apparently dull subjects live and interesting by the manner of their presentation. This is something for all of us to chew over in our minds, for inevitably when we get back home, we are going to be called upon for a certain amount of instruction. It is possible to have learned a good deal in the three months course at the Infantry Schol, and still be rather lost when it comes to teaching it to the other fellow. And that, of course, is what we ought to do, if we are going to give the fullest measure of value for our three months at Benning.

Not all our problems, either as national guard or reserve officers, are going to be solved by the possession of the coveted diplomas from the Infantry School. It will be well for us to remember that. However much we have gained as individuals, we are going to be forced to struggle with some of the same old problems, not all of which are fully answerable.

The reserve officer, for instance, is confronted by the preponderance of theoretical and the dearth of practical instruction in his fifty weeks of inactive duty training. As yet, too, he still faces the problem of how reserve officers are to be trained in actual troop leading. Some reserve units are to be sent to C. M. T. camps this summer to act as instructors; others will go to encampments with national guard units. The question still is in the experimental stage, and neither the Infantry School nor the War Department can be expected to hand down an "approved solution" just yet: most noticeable in our three months at the Infantry School has been the unfailing spirit of cooperation and courtesy on the part of the Regular Army officers toward us, their brethren of the two civilian components of the army.

All of us have heard a lot about the "three in one army." The regulars at the Infantry School have offered us a splendid working demonstratinn of what that means, which ought to go far toward setting an example for guardsmen and reservists in their attitude toward the Regular Army and toward one another.

The play hours at Fort Benning have been delightful to everyone who delights in the out-of-doors, in the sportsmanship of the athletic field, in the pleasantly informal good fellowship and camaraderie for which the Army long has been justly noted. We are going to remember the afternoon hours on the golf links, the long rides through winding piny trails on Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sunday mornings; the dances at Biglerville and the baseball and polo games, to say nothing of Captain Wilson's excellent boxing cards.

It has been a real privilege and education to get a glimpse of some of the latest developments in infantry methods before they have been generally made known to the service; to see the new machine gun carts, adjusters for anti-aircraft firing, the new howitzers; and so on.

It is a source of regret to a good many of us that this year's schedule did not provide for our attendance at the annual maneuvers, which must necessarily have been of very considerable value to us in working out our own summer training programs. Probably, also, some of our classes were too large for the best possible individual results. Here again you had a case of survival of the fittest; the chap who wanted to slack had ample opportunity to do so, and nobody but he himself was the loser by it.

Some of us, we hope, may return to Fort Benning a few years from now for further training. Most of us probably will not. Nevertheless, we depart, carrying with us not only the memories of a wonderfully pleasant and interesting three months, but with a more practical knowledge of troop leading, a confidence in what we do know and a realization of how much more there is for us to learn; some idea of what our tasks ought to be in our own units, and of how we may carry to our associates the latest developments of the ancient and honorable profession of arms, as taught at the Infantry School.

FIRST SECTION, ACADEMIC DEPARTMENT

By Capt. Charles L. Bolte, Infantry

To the casual observer, and even to many who are more intimately acquainted with the organization and operation of the academic department, the work of the First section in tactical instruction appears to play a predominant part in the functioning of the Infantry School agencies. Although this is not wholly true, there is a large measure of justification for such an impression.

Over one-third of the instructional hours in the total of all commissioned classes are devoted to tactics; almost one-third of the faculty is engaged in this general class. The necessity for this is at once apparent to the military student, inasmuch as tactics, consisting as it does of the art of leading troops into and in battle, combines practically all of the elements of military knowledge and involves constant consideration of the many administrative and technical factors taught by other agencies of the academic department. In fact, it is proper to conceive of the instruction promulgated by the academic department as a unit, in which no clear-cut dividing line can be drawn between tactics and technique, between supply, administration, and troop-leading, or between weapons and the tactical employment of those weapons.

As a matter of practical operation, however, it is necessary to classify the instructional subjects and to allot to the various agencies or sections certain of the general groups into which those subjects naturally fall. It then becomes imperative for the several sections so to cooperate and to interlink their instructional processes that there will result a well rounded course. The mission of the academic department is of a dual character in that it has in view both the training of commanders and staff officers for the infantry units up to include the reinforced brigade, and also the preparation of competent instructors who can in turn conduct that training for individuals and units in the three components of the army. In no instance is the character and manner of accomplishment of that mission more clearly illustrated than in the conduct of the command-post terrain exercises which occupy the closing days of the academic year. Although the preparation and supervision of these exercises are essentially functions of the First section inasmuch as their foundation is tactical in character, the problems themselves involve the application of practically all the subject matter taught in the various courses throughout the school year.

To enumerate in detail the various types and subjects of instruction conducted by the First section would be a lengthy and tedious process; a brief survey of the topics considered will, however, be illuminating. These topics include: General discussion of offensive and defensive combat; reconnaissance; security; active defense; turning movements; artillery; air corps; tanks; cavalry; mechanized warfare; solution and preparation of problems; estimate of the situation; marches; delaying action; withdrawal from action; patrolling; outposts; pursuit; anti-aircraft protection; combat in woods; convoys; chemical warfare; counter-attack; night operation; relief of front-line units; attack and defense of river-line defiles, and coast-line; small wars; advance, flank, and rear guards; brigade, regiment, battalion, company, and machine gun and howitzer units in attack and defense. A reorganization of the academic department has now enlarged the scope of the First section instruction, with the addition of several instructors, to include: command and staff; combat orders, unit journal; organization, and troop movements by rail and motor.

The treatment of all these subjects by the First section is invariably con-

SECOND SECTION, ACADEMIC DEPARTMENT

Capt. B. F. Caffey, Infantry

The second section is charged with the mission of teaching the technique of infantry units and associated arms and branches in campaign.

Before the World War, in the days of our small, scattered army, little attention was paid to this important subject. The war taught our military leaders how necessary knowledge of technique is; how futile it is to teach tactics, even minor tactics, unless the infantry officer knows the tools with which he is working. Thus, soon after the establishment of The Infantry School at Fort Benning, courses in the technique of infantry uits in campaign, were introduced into the curriculum of the school. It was early discovered that in order to be a good infantryman, an officer must know in general how the arms associated with the infantry function. So, there are now courses in field artillery, air corps, cavalry, chemical warfare, signal corps, and medical corps technique taught at The Infantry School. Not all of these courses are assigned to the Second Section, some belonging to the First Section, and others belonging to the Third and Fourth Sections.

In order to accomplish its mission, the courses of the Second Section must be, and are, closely coordinated with the work of the other sections, especially the First Section. It is only through the cooperation of all concerned that this coordination is obtained.

The age of mechanization and motorization has given technique an added importance. When movement on and off the battle field is increased five and even ten fold, so must our methods of technique be quickened. While this subject is still in its infancy, nevertheless the Second Section is alive to its importance and is watching its development closely.

The Second Section, also, cooperates with the Infantry Board and the Department of Experiment, in the initiation and development of many of their propects. This is especially true in regard to the development of and the experimentation with the ever improving infantry signal communication material.

A valuable adjunct of the Second Section is the academic department medical officer, who not only teaches subjects relating to the medical corps, but also maintains a dispensary in the academic area for the faculty and student personnel. The dispensary is a great convenience especially for students as it permits them to get medical attention without making the long trip to the garrison hospital.

The Section is divided into three committees: Committees D, E, and F.

Committee D is charged with the following subjects:

a. Command, staff, and logistics. (It is not nearly so bad as it sounds.) It includes: combat orders, combat intelligence, staff maps, command and staff, command posts, troop movements, the supply of infantry units in campaign, and marches and shelter.

b. Organization. (This course includes demonstrations of both peace and war strength units.)

c. Medical service.

Committee E handles:

a. Topography. (Topography includes courses in both map reading and sketching.)

c. Aerial Photographs.

Committee F has the important subject of signal communication. In addition to the instruction of the regular course, this committee has developed a course to produce trained infantry signal communications officers. Committee F is also charged with the instruction of some fifty national guard noncommissioned officers, who take a three months course in signal communications. This latter course is considered especially important in in indoctrinating the national

THIRD SECTION ACADEMIC DEPARTMENT

By Capt. J. E. Wharton, Infantry

The third section of the Academic Department is charged with the instruction in the technique of infantry small arms. This comprises instruction in the use of the rifle, machine-gun, and howitzer company weapons. One chief of section and fourteen instructors constitute the commissioned personnel of the section. The instructors are divided into two committees: one of eight officers for rifle-company weapons and the other of six members for machine-gun and howitzer-company armament.

In general the student's work with the third section is exceedingly practical in nature. Sufficient theory only for a proper understanding of the subject forms the foundation on which the practical structure is built. Whenever there is a possible choice between class-room instruction and outdoor practical work, the latter obtains. This feature will be more evident with the mention of individual subjects.

The member of the company officers' class—and the third section is most concerned with this group of students—begins his instruction in the rifle almost as soon as he can change from his class "A" uniform to coveralls following the commandant's address opening the school year. After thorough preliminary training he goes to the rifle range where he either engages in instruction firing preparatory to firing for record or takes charge of a group of unqualified men of the 29th Infantry and carries them through the course. Courses in automatic rifle and pistol are handled in a similar manner, except the enlisted men of the 29th Infantry are absent. The fundamentals of antiaircraft fire are then presented, with demonstrations of the various classes of fire with rifles and automatic rifles against moving targets. During the school year 1929-30, it is contemplated that officers of the class will be given an opportunity to fire on such targets. Firing against aircraft is again studied in connection with the instruction in machine guns. Courses in grenades and bayonet follow, during which members of the class may qualify for record.

Following the instruction in the technique of the rifle-company weapons, a thorough course in musketry is given, ending with fire superiority problems fired by various groups of the class. Combat practice completes the first phase of the subject and leads to the subject of machine guns.

The course in machine-gunnery is quite complete, beginning with stripping and assembling and ending with the firing of an organized barrage by the student officers. Mechanical training and drill open the study of the subject, both being almost entirely practical work. A thorough course in markmanship follows, which is calculated to train officers to pilot a machine gun company successfully through its firing season. Lack of time prevents the class firing for record.

Direct laying follows. After a few short conferences in the class room, the class proceeds to the range where it puts into practice with actual firing the methods just taught. Indirect laying is the next step, which also is largely practical work. Starting with a single gun and a single target, the student is taught how to take the data from the ground with his machine-gun fire-control instruments and then to compute the firing data. The same methods are then extended to the battery and to several targets. Obtaining the data from the map for a single gun first and then for the battery is next mastered. The firing data for several problems are calculated and actually fired. Finally, as an ap-

FOURTH SECTION ACADEMIC DEPARTMENT

By Capt. W. R. Graham, Infantry

The work of the fourth section was presented in substantially the same form during the year to the several refresher classes, the advanced class, the company officers class, and the national guard and reserve officers classes.

Under planning, the students were given a thorough explanation of Training Regulations 10-5, military training, basic. All of the subsequent lectures and work were based entirely on this training regulation.
