BENNING TOES MARK FOR NEW SCHOOL YEAR

GERMAN ARMY OFFICER IS AT BENNING TO TAKE THE ADVANCED COURSE

Capt. von Schell, With Extensive War Service, Now at The Infantry School

The Advanced Class of the Infantry School will number among its members this year, Capt. Adolph Von Schell of the German Army. Capt von Schell has been detailed for a year's duty with the American Army, in an exchange arrangement which brings at the same time, American offi-cers to the German military schools. Capt. von Schell, an infantry officer, has been for several years on duty with the Operations Section of the German Ministry of War. He was commissioned a lieutenant in 1913 and served through-out the entire war, first as a platoon, later as a company and battalion commander, and in staff positions. He was mander, and in stan positions. He was wounded four times. Among the battles and campaigns in which he participated were: 1914, Liege, St. Quentin, the Marne, the Aisne; 1915: the winter battle of Mazurian Lakes and the German summer offensive against Russia; 1916: the German defensive the German summer offensive against Russia; 1916: the German defensive against the Brussiloff offensive and the Roumanian campaign; 1917: Cambrai and the Chemin des Dames; 1918: the German offensive in the Ukraine, the Crimea and the Caucasus.

TEAM IN FINE SHAPE FOR TUSKEGEE GAME

The 24th Infantry is all set for the Tuskegee game Saturday. The team has gone through a hard week of prelimi-nary training, which culminated Saturday in an hour and a half scrimmage. The men showed up well all through, and except for a fumble here and there, and a little hesitancy in a tackle, there is little to criticize. The team will pol-ish up its new plays this week and be in fine fettle for the Tuskegee affair. Much enthusiasm is being evinced by the regiment and the local fans of football, in the first game. Many are out to see the practice and scrimmage work, and a large turn-out is anticipated. Following is the lineup:

Fort Benning received its official des-ignation as "Fort Benning" in February, 1922

Fort Benning was named in honor of Brig. Gen. Henry L. Benning, of the Confederate States Army, whose home was in Columbus, Ga.

The Fort Benning Print Shop possesses a linotype that was carried by Pres-ident Wilson to Versailles in 1918 and used to set the type for the peace treaty.

The Signal Corps office and telephone exchange, which cost $21,000, has an es-timated contract value of $40,000.

CO. "G" SECTION TANKS OBSERVE 12th BIRTHDAY WINS IN TEST 2d Platoon of Company H of St. Mihiel "Baptism of Fize" 29th Takes Machine Recalled in Organizati Gun Competition Day Ceremonies

By making the "mostest hits on the nostest targets," Sergeant Sherman of mostest targets," Sergeant Sherman of Company "G," 29th Infantry, demon-strated to the satisfaction of all members of the regiment Tuesday that his rifle section is entitled to be considered the most deadly rifle section in the regiment.

In competition with five other selected sections, Sergeant Sherman and his section went through the regimental commander's test in musketry like veterans. Two hundred prone silhouette targets in indistinct positions were pointed out to each section leader and the section target outlined by two red flags for a certain period of time, after which the flags were withdrawn. The section lead-er then brought up his section and gave his fire orders.

In like manner, the 2nd platoon of Company "H," commanded by Lieuten-ant Dudley G. Strickler, 29th Inf., demant Dudley G. Strickler, 29th Int., dem-onstrated that they can hit any target anywhere (even if blindfolded). This platoon competed with a selected pla-toon from Company "D," Wednesday. Two other competitions have been scheduled for Thursday and Friday, respectively. Prizes will be presented at the regi-mental review of the 29th Infantry

Saturday morning.

Capt. Frank M. Lee, V. C., has been announced as the new Station Veterin-arian, The Infantry School. Capt. Charles H. Owens, Inf., has announced as Assistant Recreation Officer, The Infantry School. 1st Lieut. Francis H. Lanahan, Jr.

S. C., has been announced as Signal Officer, The Infantry School. Major Homer L. Conner, M. C., has been announced as Medical Inspector, The Infantry School.

Post Headquarters

The Second Battalion of the First Tank Regiment celebrated its twelfth birthday at Fort Benning, last Friday,

Sept. 12th. The program for the day's celebration began with the Battalion being as-sembled and marched in a body to the Doughboy Stadium. Arriving at the Stadium, the members of the organization were seated on benches about the fight ring, that had been changed to a speaker's platform. Ropes and ring posts were decorated in the Tank colors, while on the table beside the platform the many silver trophies, emblems of Tanker victories on the field of athletics, were proudly displayed. In the absence of Brigadier General Campbell King, commandant of the In-fantry School, Colonel George F. Baltzell, the acting commandant, delivered the principal address. In his talk, he commended the members of the Battalion for their work during the year and also eulogized those warriors who re-ceived their "baptism of fire" at St. Mihiel on the morning of September 12, 1918.

Major Allen F. Kingman, commanding officer of the 2nd Tank Battalion, 1st Tank Regt. (Light), gave a brief history of the progress of the Tanks, since their introduction to the service during the past war. Major Kingman was a Tank officer during the war and took part in the St. Mihiel and Argonne offensive. He related many interesting experiences of the first all-American offensive in which the Tanks were one of the outstanding factors in the success of the American arms.

Next on the program was a comical stunt contest entertainment consisting of a leap frog race, monkey and crab race, nail driving contest, centipede race, blindfold race and sack race. Just when the program was getting well under way and every one was having bushels fun, J. Pluvius raised the flood gates and sent down a deluge that sent every one scampering to cover.

The rain spoiled the games but was powerless to affect the heavily laden tables of chicken, dressings, cake, ice cream and numerous other good things that went to make up the menu for the Tankers' Organization Day dinner. The afternoon was one of rest and pleasure with the Tankers enjoying card games, war stories and other indoor sports, while clouds of blue smoke from the tasty Chesterfield cigarettes that were served with dinner, drifted towards the ceiling in lazy, holiday spirals.

OPENING EXERCISES WILL BE WEDNESDAY IN THE MAIN THEATER

New Organization of Infantry Will be Taught Here This Year

Approximately two hundred and thirteen student-officers will assemble Wednesday morning, September 24, at 9:45 A. M. at the Main Theatre to hear the opening exercises, which will take place at that time. The program includes an address by the Commandant, Brigadier General Campbell King, and an address by the Mayor of Columbus, Honorable J. Homer Dimon.

J. Homer Dimon. Monday, September 22, and Tuesday, September 23, will be devoted to the organization of classes by respective company supervisors. The Advanced Class with eighty-eight members will be organized as Company "A" under Major McCunniff, and the Company Officers' Class with one hundred and twenty-five

"B" under Major Peabody. Thursday morning the work of the student-officers will begin in all serious-ness. Both classes will listen to a lecture by Lieut. Col. Stayer, M. C. on "Physical Fitness" and a lecture by Major Lange on "Mechanism of Instruc-tion." Having thus been oriented each Having thus been oriented, each class will go its separate way; the ad-vanced class to its work in equitation, and the company officers' class to its work in rifle marksmanship.

The new organization of infantry will be taught in the Infantry School this vear.

COLONEL KNIGHT RETURNS FROM LEAVE

Colonel Harry E. Knight, Executive Officer, The Infantry School, returned to duty Tuesday, September 16th. Col-onel and Mrs. Knight spent a month's leave visiting in the East.

CAPT. SCHMIDT RELIEVED AS SIGNAL OFFICER

Capt. Feodor O. Schmidt, 24th Inf., was relieved from special duty as Act-ing Signal Officer, The Infantry School, effective September 9, and has taken up his duties editing in the Fourth Section.

LIEUT MORAN BACK TO 29TH

Lieut. Thomas J. Moran, 29th Inf., was relieved from special duty as As-sistant Prison and Police Officer, effective September 10, and ordered back to the 29th Infantry for duty.

FISH STORY

"Weary Willie" Ptomey tells this one. Four soldiers were out in Harris county one night and became so full of the juice of corn that no one was able to drive. Finally one of the soldiers lit a cigar and announced that he would drive. The driver got the car under way and mistaking the light on the end of his cigar for the tail light on another car, was making fair progress another car, was making fair progress along the road. Things went well until he threw his cigar away. Then, accord-ing to "Weary Willie," the driver thought that the car in front had made a sharp turn and in his attempt to follow he ended up fifty yards from the highway in a farmer's corn field.

HUBBARDMEN AND KELLYS CLASH AT GOLDEN PARK SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Saturday afternoon at Golden Park, Columbus, Ga., the Kellys of the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry and the Hubbard Hardwaremen of Columbus will play the deciding game to decide the amateur baseball championship of Columbus and Fort Benning for the season of 1930.

At the present time, the teams have played two games and stand even with one victory each. The Tinware outfit defeated the Doughboys in the opening game at Golden Park, last Saturday afternoon by the score of 8 to 6. Sunday the soldiers met the Hubbard-

Sunday the soldiers met the Hubbardmen in the second game at Gowdy Field, and reversed the decision of the first game by winning 8 to 6. Both games have been fast and hard fought affairs. The deciding game Saturday will probably see Shoestring Trippe of the Kellys, facing Giglio, Hubbard ace, on the mound.

Both teams are working hard to be in shape for the deciding game and fans will no doubt witness a hurler's duel between two of the leading amateur hurlers in this section of the country.

TWENTY-NINTH INFANTRY Office of the Regimental Commander Fort Benning, Georgia, September 12, 1930.

Staff Sergeant William C. Kjelstrom, Hdqrs. Co., 2nd Bn., 29th Infantry, Fort Benning, Georgia.

My dear Sergeant Kjelstrom:

I would be very derelict in my duty as Regimental Commander if I failed to write you a personal letter of com-mendation for your outstanding work as captain of the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry, Baseball Team during the season of 1930.

I am sure that both your officers and the members of your team will agree with me when I say that the success of the team was very largely due to your unfailing leadership.

I have watched your playing during all the games of the second series in-cluding the championship series and make no hesitation in saying that you possess to a very high degree all those qualities which go to make up the high-est type of soldier—leadership, determi-nation, and the will to win—qualities which up increased of the method. you inspired in the members of which your team and which alone can bring victory.

DUNCAN K. MAJOR, Jr. Colonel, 29th Infantry, Commanding.

In the opening game of the Tanker-Kelly championship baseball series a few weeks ago, the Tankers scored one run in the opening half of the first in-ning. In the Kellys' turn at Bat, a runner reached first base on a fielder's choice after forcing the man ahead of him at second for the second out. The runner stole second on the first pitch. While the pitcher still held the ball, the runner dashed for third and so unex-pected and daring was the play that the pitcher heaved wildly to third and the runner came home to even the count. The runner was "Kelly" Kjelstrom, team captain of the Kellys, and the play just mentioned was a sample of Kelly Just mentioned was a sample of Kelly strategy. He put fight and spirit into his team, sent his hurler to the mound in the second inning on even terms with the other team and also upset the op-posing hurler in the opening inning of the game, which was won by the Kellys, \vec{v} to \vec{v} 7 to 4.

Kjelstrom demonstrates to perfection K jelstrom demonstrates to perfection the natural quality of leadership, that thing which develops team work and gets results, and brings people right along with him. The men of the or-ganization look up to him, his words are respected and his example followed. He holds the friendship, respect and confi-dence of the Second Battalion of the 29th Infantry, gained through his un-29th Infantry, gained through his un-tiring efforts in bringing victory to the colors of the Demonstration Regiment on the field of sports or in military competition.

For five years now, Kjelstrom has been with Headquarters Co. of the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry, but he has kept right on qualifying annually as an expert rifleman with that surely of the ordination and comments of site of co-ordination and accuracy of sight that makes him such a dangerous shot on the basket ball court and a terror to opposing hurlers.

Kelly is a versatile athlete. A catcher gets hurt, Kelly comes in, dons mit and mask and plays the position as if he belonged there. During the past sea-son the Second Bats were crippled by the loss of their short stop; Kelly came in from his regular position at center and led the Benning league in fielding at the short field. On one occasion a hurler was batted to the showers and the Kells were short a twirler; Kelly went to the mound, stopped the slaughter and turned in a victory.

At basket ball he has starred as a member of the Benning Musketeers and has led the attack of the Second Battalion basketeers to six successive garrison championships.

His name is history in army football. He played a dependable and stellar position during the reign of the Rolling Blue Tide, three times he was one of the picked army players who breasted the tide of the Quantico Marines' charge, in the President's Cup Games in Wash-ington. OUR EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY

Eight years ago there appeared on the horizon of modern journalism a very modest sheet known as the "Fort Benning News." Believing that it was better to start in a modest way and grow rather than to start on a large scale and suddenly collapse, the "News" first started on its journalistic career as a miniature newspaper. The first effort was, therefore, an eight-page edition printed on letter-sized paper with but a limited circulation.

With the growth of the Infantry School, the News has endeavored to keep pace, until today, the present Infantry School News reaches practically every Infantry regiment in the army, practically every Army post, as well as numerous individual subscribers throughout the world.

The News has considerably enlarged the scope of its activities from its first announced policy of "fostering athletics and recreational activities generally" to the present day policy of "fostering all of The Infantry School activities, as well as welding together into one great harmonious family all the various individuals and units of all branches of service that go to make up the complex garrison stationed at Fort Benning."

The News takes this opportunity for thanking its numerous friends, who have so loyally and cordially cooperated with us during the past year, and we also give our unstinted heartfelt thanks to our liberal advertisers, but for whose generous aid there might not have been an "Infantry School News" today.

With the continued interest of all, we hope to meet your every expectation and to continue our steady growth during the coming year.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR EDGAR ERSKINE HUME, Medical Inspector NOTES FOR NEWLY ARRIVED PERSONNEL

The following notes are published for he information of newly arriving offi-ers and other members of the com-post avoid the use of unpasteurized the information of newly arriving offi-cers and other members of the com-mand, those who live in Columbus as well as those who have quarters on the post.

WATER SUPPLY: The post water supply is satisfactory from a health standpoint and the new plant, now completed, insures an adequate amount. Water from other than the post supply should not be drunk unless it has been examined at the laboratory and found potable. The city water supply of Co-lumbus is excellent. It is free from disease producing organisms and is very oft soft.

FOODS: All food products of ani-mal origin sold at the commissary and Post Exchange are examined by the Veterinarian. The dairy products sold on the post are from inspected sources and are believed to be safe. All per-sons are advisd not to use products from other sources without definite from other sources without definite knowledge as to their quality. MILK: Only Pasteurized milk is per-

than pasteurized milk and cream should not be used and only such ice cream is authorized to be sold on the post.

VACCINATION: All vaccination and other protective immunizations are done by the Attending Surgeon. a. Smallpox. Smallpox occurs fairly frequently in this vicinity. Vaccination therefore is mighty important. All persons should be re-vaccinated as soon as practicable after arrival here unless vaccinated within the past twelve months.

b. Typhoid Fever: Typhoid fever is of common occurrence in this locality. All persons between the ages of 2 to 45 should receive the prophylactic treat-ment. Two courses of treatment within three years intervening are required of those in the military service and recommended for all others. (Continued on page 7.)

BOTANICAL ATROCITY

Biblical students are, of course, familiar with the story of the gourd that Yahweh made to grow in a night to keep the burning rays of the Mesopotamian sun from the head of the prophet Jonah (vide Jonah IV-6).

Now let the Blunderbuss tell one. Major and Mrs. Turner arrived at Fort Benning on a Saturday night and Mrs. Turner parked her open suitcase on the floor by one of the and Mrs. Turner parked her open suitcase on the floor by one of the bedroom windows to which a struggling vine had just extended its top-most shoots. Blissfully unaware of the marvels of the Benning climate or the botanical miracles which Major Charles Burbank Steele performs in the course of his daily routine, it did not occur to either Major or Mrs. Turner to inspect the suitcase until Monday morning. When they did look, they discovered to their amazement that the vine had extended inward and downward and taken strange liberties with Mrs. Turner's intimate comments enturing itself increation around the linguing and intimate garments, entwining itself ingratiatingly around the lingerie and started runs in two pairs of chiffon hose. Mrs. Strayer, who gave us the item, herself a botanist, of considerable reputation, offers no explanation of this most unusual escapade of a hitherto respected member of the Fort Benning flora. Constabule Tuttle, the genial Provost Marshal, who was promptly interviewed by an enter-prising Blunderbuss reporter, stated that his jurisdiction in such matters extended no further than the exercise of reasonable precaution to insure extended no further than the exercise of reasonable precaution to insure ladies' boudoirs from being invaded by bachelor lieutenants and that the vagaries of plant life were not within his province. Colonel Walter Reed admits that it looks like a matter for inquiry, but is uncertain as to whether he should investigate it in his official capac-ity as Post Inspector or in his private capacity as a leading botanical authority. Meanwhile, Major Steel vigorously denies that he personally trained this new and interesting species and objects strenuously to hav-ing it officially named for him. And lastly the Blunderbuss hastens to explain that, in its reference herewith to the Jonah gourd episode, it had no idea whatsoever of implying that Major Turner and the venerable no idea whatsoever of implying that Major Turner and the venerable Prophet of antiquity had anything in common other than a somewhat similar experience with horticultural phenomena.

Tacticians and Tact

With the confidence born of nonchalantly tossing Red and Blue regi-ments and battalions hither and yon from Harmony Church to Bradley Ldg., and masterfully plucking out of the ether fool proof approved solu-tions, the Tacticians of Block 14 tackled the calling proposition.

The idea was to do it in a big, generous way. A Plan was drawn up, circulated, and one by one Colonels and Majors registered approval thereon.

Col. Reed demurred to the extent of proposing an alternate plan, Major Rose voted no (just like an Assistant Executive Officer) and Major Rhett's policy was dictated to and for him. Otherwise, there was initialing on the dotted line.

But in the estimate of the situation one vital factor had been ignored. It seems that few, if any, had the brilliant idea of asking the real Head of the House about the matter. Eventually a whisper that all was not well reached the devoted help-mates of Block 14's Master Minds. Mobilization of wives was effected in 5 minutes at the sacrifice of three bridge games and two general discus-sion conferences. A piecemeal attack was determined upon, and thereafter each wife marched without delay upon her respective spouse with a view of snatching out of his head such hair, if any, there remaining.

The husbands in their dazed condition could not determine whether the wives did not like the plan itself, or did not like not being told about it.

When charged with the offense, the defendants, like the drunk who was asked by the judge next morning why he threw the brick through the plate glass window, could only reply: "At the time it seemed an appro-priate thing to do."

PS—After a rapid retirement, we thought to start this article: "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread,"

But remembering the language used by our and other wives in regard to the calling plan, we changed our minds.

The angel part did not seem to fit.

Neigh, Neigh!

Lloyd Lewis, writing on "Taps For the Cavalry" in the American Mer-cury, advances the idea that perhaps Confederates might have won the Civil War if only they had not had so much cavalry.

From his description of the "Battle of Kilpatrick's Pants," one gathers the impression that horses are not the fondest thing he is of. In fact the tenor of his article is to the effect (Continued on page 7.)

that some soldiers ride horses and others win wars. And he remarks: "But human nature seems to have decreed, long ago, that a man cannot get on a horse without making a fool of himself."

Some riders do give one that impression. Perhaps Mr. Lewis ought to take a course at the Infantry School for what ails him.

At the end thereof, we guarantee that he would be, if not horse-minded, at least horse-conscious. And that would be a horse on him.

New Blood

Several recent graduates of the first two year course at the Command and General Staff School will be on duty at Benning this year. Major Al-len Kingman will command the Tank Kraft, Fagg and Gilchrist and Cap-tain Neil Johnson will bolster up the Faculty of the Infantry School. Cap-tain Bell will apply his knowledge of the supply of large units to the exacting duties of assistant to the Post Exchange Officer.

In spite of the fact that these highly educated officers know more map room strategy and marked problem terminology than Napoleon and Von Maltke combined, they appear to be quite human and, to, date, have shown no disposition to high-hat their form-er associates who know practically er associates who know practically nothing about maneuvering groups of armies. Hansom's Batting in Last Game Is Feature—Grantham Plays Well

During the past "Little World's Ser-s," between the Kellys and Tankers, ies," between the Kellys and Tankers, there were several upsets among the players that had much to do with the turning of the tide. Among the most unexpected was the phenomenal stick work of "Knute" Hansom, Kelly right fielder, in the final and deciding game. "Knute" had been kept out of the line-up in the third game owing to his weak up in the third game owing to his weak batting. In the final game, he went to bat just five times and was credited with a pair of triples and two singles, and "Knute" was hitting with runners on the path.

Fielding honors in the outer garden during the series go to Tanks Grantham, Tanker center fielder. Several drives that looked like sure hits were gathered in by the speedy Tanker in spectacular fashion and at no time did a hard hit drive through the infield get past him for extra bases.

Evans, of the Kellys, played a whale of a game at the hot corner and led the way with the willow, getting nine safe bingles out of seventeen times at bat. He is one of the most promising youngsters to show at Benning during the baseball season.

"Brute" Kiker, Tanker outfielder, was kept out of the series until the final game owing to his weak hitting. In the last game, he went in and relieved Nobles in left field. Besides making two pretty running catches, Kiker was at bat three times and collected two hits. Mitchell of the Kells and "Cueball" Smith of the Tanks, played big league baseball around the keystone sack with honors even. Kelly played a great game at short but was woefully weak with the willow.

Hodges, Tanker veteran, went in at third on several occasions and held the hot corner down in nice style, his fielding and throwing was perfect although he was not hitting. Cobb got away to a bad start in the opening game but played good ball during the remainder of the series.

McLane, of the Tanks and McAllister of the Kells, played good ball around the initial hassock, but each suffered several mental lapses. McLane was away out in front with the willow, fin-ishing the series with a batting average well over the four hundred mark.

well over the four hundred mark. The two outstanding players of the series were "Shoestring" Trippe, Kelly hurler, and "Red" Miller, Tanker re-ceiver. The long, lank doughboy was simple a complete puzzle to the Tanker batters. His mixture of benders, zipbatters. His mixture of benders, zip-pers and slow balls kept the Tanker sluggers guessing. When not twirling, Trippe was in the outfield where he played errorless ball. His hitting and played errorless ball. His hitting and base running also added several markers to the Kelly score sheet.

"Red" Miller, Tanker receiver, fought from the first pitch until the final out in the final game. His fighting spirit High up over the Doughboy Stadium a dark sphere rises high in the air and spirals gracefully down end over end to spirals gracefully down end over end to drop into the waiting arms of a brown clad runner who sweeps down the field with the pig skin tucked snugly under his arm. To the spectator he is the pic-ture of grace and speed but from some where on the field a rasping voice sings out, "get those knees up higher, show some speed." And then from some = the true a tackle while a cross the runsome speed." And then from some-where a tackle whips across the run-ner's path and clips him just above the shoe tops, fast hard tackle. But again that cold steel voice rasps out, "What-o-you birds think this is, a petting party Get in there and stop-em, hit-um and hit-um hard."

BENNING ATHLETES BUSY THE YEAR ROUND

BASEBALL, FOOTBALL, BASKETBALL AND BOXING OFFERED TO FANS

In the field of amateur athletics, the Infantry School has stood out boldly in the spotlight of Dixie sportdom during the past year and has also carved a high niche among the ring professionals with a stable of fighters that shows an over-whelming number of victories against a small scattering of losses. In army ath-letics, Fort Benning stands out head and shoulders above all competition.

Baseball

King baseball has reigned supreme at Benning during the past summer months. Fans have enjoyed a season featured by close competition, bitterly fought and well-played games.

The early spring months saw the Infantry School baseball team sweep to victories over teams like Mercer Uni-versity, Michigan State, Notre D am e and other prominent collegiate and pro-fessional teams. The strength of the Infantry School team of 1930, was dem-onstructed in the appendix grame when the onstrated in the opening game when the strong Hubbard team of Columbus was let down without a hit or run. Three let down without a hit or run. Three Benning pitchers twirled three innings each in this game and each twirler was invincible. The "Fighting Irish" from South Bend, Ind., went down to two defeats before the Doughboys. The same f at e befell the "Wolverines," from Michigan, and the Mercer "Bears" of Macon, suffered the same results. Only one team broke even with the driving Doughboys, and that was the Auburn "Tigers." Four games were played be-tween the two teams with each team winning a pair. winning a pair.

Winning a pair. After the close of the Infantry School baseball season, it was decided to have an "A" and "B" league for the Intra-Mural baseball season. The class "A" league was composed of players that were unable to break into the major loop or class "B" league and was also for the purpose of giving the smaller units a chance to enter baseball teams in competition with each other.

The minor league proved to be a big success in every way. Many youngsters developed into splendid first-string material for the next season. In fact, dur-ing the past season many of the youngsters were pulled out of the little league and shoved into a position on the first string in the thick of the pennant fight. The first half of the class "A" series ended in a three-way tie for first place. The final half proved to be a nip-and-tuck affair with the Medicos nosing out in front in a last half featured by close competition

Det., and Quartermaster Det., won. The Outlaws and Medicos fought it out for the pennant in a three-game series, with Medicos winning the third and dethe ciding game. The series was featured by two shut-out games. The Medicos took the opener 2 to 0. On the follow-ing day, the Outlaws applied the white-wash brush, 3 to 0. The Medicos took the final game 6 to 4, in a hectic strug-gle that lasted until darkness had settled over the field.

The major loop fight was a gruelling affair in the first half with the "Ter-rible Tankers" breaking the tape. The final half saw the "Kellys" hit their stride and ride to first place with no defeats.

The "Little World Series," between the Tankers and Kellys was a five-game series with the team winning the best three out of five. The Kellys won three out of four in one of the bitterest-fought championship series ever witnessed at Gowdy Field. Each day the stands Gowdy Field. Each day the stands were packed and each day they were treated to trills and thrills and diamond duels that will go down in Benning baseball history as the hardest-fought of all times. The past baseball season at Fort Benning has been a tremendous success from every viewpoint and fans are hoping that the season of 1931 will are hoping that the season of 1931 will duplicate. The "Happy Hearts" of the 24th In-fantry enjoyed one of their biggest sea-sons in baseball. The Brooklyn Cuban "Giants," Birmingham "Black Barons" and other strong colored professional and college baseball teams fell before them during the past season. The Hap-py Hearts suffered the loss of several of their star players during the season of their star players during the season when they were signed by professional organizations to play professional ball. The Company league series in the 24th Infantry was a hard fought affair. The final series was played between the "House of David," of Co. "G," and the "Muleskinners" from the Service com-pany. It was a big day for the Mule-skinners, who took the final game 22 to 3.

Football

Saturday afternoon, September 20th, football will come into its own at Benrootball will come into its own at Ben-ning and reign supreme for several months. Two games will be played. The Happy Hearts, of the 24th In-fantry, will clash with the Tuskegee "Tigers" at the Doughboy Stadium. Tuskegee is one of the few colored foot-hall teams to held a vistory over the ball teams to hold a victory over the 24th Infantrymen and the Happy Hearts are out this year to wipe the slate clean.

The Terrible Tanker company foot-ball series will open on the Tank grid-iron with Headquarters and "D" com-panies clashing in the initial game. Company teams in the 29th Infantry and battery teams in the 83rd Field Artillery, are priming for their respec-tive series and the play is expected to be close in all quarters.

With the company series over, the fans will get ready to enjoy the real war that will break when the Intra-Mural series opens. The title of the Mural series opens. The title of the Tankers, three years champions, is ser-iously threatened this season. The "Gal-loping Gunners" boast a wealth of football material to build from and will have for their coach, Capt. F. H. Gas-ton, one of the greatest football players that the University of Pennsylvania ever produced.

Over in the Tank area the talk of losing the title is considered just so much "huey," besides their champion-ship team of last season the Tankers have been reinforced by several youngsters that show speed, power and brawn in addition to a thorough knowledge of the game under high school coaching. Unless something unforeseen happens it looks now as if the Tankers are going to be close at hand when the laurel wreath is handed out at the and of the wreath is handed out at the end of the struggle.

By Capt. C. H. Owens, Inf.

Few people realize the facilities of the Post Service Club No. 1. When you charged. pass the club with its beautiful grounds remember that its name is "Service Club." The staff of the Club endeavor to live up to that name and to do everything possible to make your stay in Fort Benning enjoyable.

The Club has a splendid hardwood dance floor. Dances are held every other Thursday night and during the winter months as often as attendance justifies. Music for the dances is furnished by a seven-piece jazz orchestra from the 24th Infantry. Girls are in-vited by invitation from the Hostess, assuring the right kind of a crowd. The Post Exchange operates a rest-aurant in the south wing, which is open from 7:00 a. m. to 9:00 p. m.

The Club has three pool tables; a small fee of $2\frac{1}{2}c$ per cue for rotation or 15c for fifty points straight pool is

There are checker tables, cards, cominoes, chess and various other games on hand which are placed at your disposal without charge.

The upstairs of the Club has nine rooms fitted up for transient guests and are available for officers and men and their families at the small charge of 50c per person. These rooms are reserved for the use of transients only.

The Service Club Hostess, Mrs. Inez Allen, devotes her time to the welfare of the soldiers. She actively carries out the duties of a hostess for all dances and endeavors in every way to further the best interests of the members of the Garrison. If you have relatives or friends visit you, she will see that they are taken care of.

country's cagesters. Fans will long remember the Franz to Kammerer to Roosma to basket, or Strickler to Franz to Stamper to basket combinations and they were lightning fast. This year Strickler, Franz and Stamper will be wearing foreign colors. We still have Roosma and Kammerer left of the old guard, and in basketball these two names mean much, but they have got to build up a new aggregation. Quite a few youngsters looked good last season, many more have arrived at benning since that time and no doubt there will be a large number of candidates out to answer the first call.

The coming season's schedule has not been completed but already the names of several prominent colleges and other amateur teams have been listed and when completed the schedule will prob-ably call for thirty or more games with visiting teams.

Boxing

Three years ago Capt. Charles Mab-butt, at that time boxing instructor at Fort Benning, attracted the interest of Fort Benning, attracted the interest of Benning youngsters by putting on an elimination boxing tournament. With the assistance of Cpl. William (Red) Keenan, he began to teach these young-sters the art of jabbing, blocking, and hooking. The young bloods of Benning took to boxing like ducks to water. With two main-go fighters, "Red" Keenan, bantamweight, and Battling J. D. Peaks, 24th Infantry, heavyweight, Capt. Mabbutt began to stage fight shows at Benning with Peaks or Kennan featuring in the main bout against visiting fighters and also putting on at least half dozen three round bouts between the young amateur fighters as an added attraction.

The harvest reaped from the young-The harvest reaped from the young-sters that first began fighting three round bouts under Capt. Mabbutt are still being reaped at Benning today. Of the old school we have Walker "Cy-clone" Smith, who fought his first fight at the Doughboy Stadium Arena, in a three round curtain raiser. "Seldom Heard 24th Infantry heavyweight is at the Doughboy Stadium Arena, in a three round curtain raiser. "Seldom Heard, 24th Infantry heavyweight, is another of these beginners. "Blondy" Parker, "Pinkey" Phillips, "Babe" Asher and others of the first class are ranking among the best boys in their weight in civilian life.

"Corn" Griffin, "Saginaw" Seeley, "Ghost" Ghastly, "Jack" Doyle and other promising youngsters are products of Benning's amateur boxing school. In fact with one of the leading fight stables in the country, ony two fighters of the Benning stable came to Benning, finished fighters, and those are "Gunner" DePratt and Willie Ptomey. At the present time, Benning is well rep-resented in the fistic world and with the coming bunch of youngsters on hand it appears as if for the next few years the present high standing will be firmly upheld.

GLEE CLUB PLANS BIGGEST SEASON IN ITS HISTORY

It was just a few weeks before Christmas in 1923, that a few of Fort Christmas in 1923, that a few of Fort B enning's music-loving enthusiasts formed a small group to revive the old English custom of singing carols on Christmas Eve. So favorable was the reception accorded to the carolers that year that it was decided to form a permanent organization, and have regu-lar supervised practice of choral music of various kinds. After considerable or various kinds. After constrained preparation and many rehearsals, an in-vitation concert was given. This proved so successful and attracted so much fav-orable comment that in a short while the Infantry School Glee Club became a regularly established institution.

From singing carols to producing opr rom singing carols to producing op-erettas was but a step for the new or-ganization; and in May, 1924, we find the Glee Club staging its first operatta, "The Nautical Knot," in the old "cow barn," which at that time served as the Conving Theater During its first Garrison Theater. During its first year, the Glee Club also put on an after-noon concert for the Woman's Club, and each year since that time, it has provided some part of an afternoon's program for that organization.

For three years in succession begin-ning in 1924, the Glee Club took over as one of its main duties the staging of the Armistice Day Pageant. The pageants, however, were discontinued in 1927.

Cabarets, dinners and stunt nights also afforded Glee Club members many opportunities for free expression of individual talent.

Each year the Glee Club productions grow more and more pretentious as new talent is discovered and developed. To date the Glee Club productions are as follows:

"The Nautical Knot," May, 1924; December, 1924. "El Bandido," May, 1925; February,

"Pinafore," May, 1926. "Sinbad the Sailor," December, 1926. "The Pirates of Penzance," March, 1927

"Trial by Jury," January, 1928.
"Lelawala," April, 1928.
"Mikado," March, 1929.
"Prince of Pilsen," February, 1930.

The 1929-1930 season was a notable one in the history of the Glee Club. Under the expert leadership of Colonel Walter L. Reed as president, the club reached its highest musical fame. Over eighty members were in the cast and chorus of the "Prince of Pilsen," and it took a great deal of work on the Colonel's part to produce such a mammoth production as the "Prince of Pilsen." Aiding the colonel were his musical and dramatic directors, chief among whom were Professor Erwin H. Vonderau, of Columbus, Captain Raymond Sherman, Captain David Washburn and Mrs. Isobel Chance.

The forecoming season promises to be even better than last. Committees ap-pointed by the new president, Lieuten-ant Colonel Thorne Strayer, have been hard at work since the close of last season, and it has been decided that the Glee Club, this year, will give two pro-ductions. The first one to be given will be "The Bachelors," a musical fancy in two acts. It will be cast from old mem-bers of the Glee Club with known talent, and will be given December 19th and 20th. This plan permits the Glee Club to get started at once on something definite. While the rehearsals on this show are in progress, search will be made for talent among the new ar-rivals on the post. By having the Glee Club a going concern early in the school year, more real talent will be attracted thereby, and these together with old thereby, and these, together with old members, will be cast into the second musical production, which will be given some time in the spring. For the sec-ond production, it is planned to have a musical comedy of even greater mag-nitude than the "Prince of Pilsen"

First Lieut. Dwight L. Adams, 29th Infantry, has been selected as a mem-ber of the team this year. Adams has attended several matches here and has competed in many of the important events on the program.

Sergeant Arthur Dahlstrom, Benning soldier, has been selected as a team member. Dahlstrom was on the team in 1927 and is a distinguished marksman.

Sergeant Scott Bradford, 24th Infantry, a distinguished marksman, who was on last year's winning team, has been picked as a member of the squad this year, according to the announcement made several days ago.

The Infantry team has been selected from all Infantry organizations of the regular army. The selection of this team was made after weeks of tryouts, in which many crack riflemen of the doughboys competed for the high honor of representing their branch of service in the big matches at Camp Perry. Only riflemen of superior ability are able to win a place on a service team.

The most important event in which the Infantry team is particularly inter-ested in the National Rifle Team Match. This is the last event on the program. This match was won last year by the Infantry team, with the Engineers and Marines finishing second and third, respectively.

Mr. Al Durden,

Sports Editor,

The Infantry School News, Fort Benning, Georgia.

Dear Durden:

Dear Durden: No doubt you will be surprised to get news from this section, and from an un-known source, nevertheless here comes a few lines in regards to the past and present, nothwithstanding the fact that we are not acquainted. I though it pos-sible that a few of the old-timers there would appreciate a line on a couple of their former athletes, who are going great in this section, especially Jimmie Hicks & Company. For instance: Walter "Bill" Swantic, formerly of the 15th Tank Battalion, now a member of the 35th Infantry. Bill was a sensation in the past baseball season; he turned in three shutout vic-tories, allowing a total of eight hits in tories, allowing a total of eight hits in the mentioned contests. He also led the league in home runs as he held down an outfield berth when not doing slab duty. Bill was a member of the Ben-ning football team that took the Presi-dents cup in 1924.

"Big Bertha" Bertleman, also a form-er member of Benning's sensational eleven of the past is now a member of this command. It was merely a homecoming for Bertie, as his first glimpse of this wicked world occurred in this neck of the woods something like thirty years ago. Both these boys are in foot-ball togs daily, and they look as good as ever.

I was at one time an humble contrib-utor to the columns of the News, back when she was a mere infant. Due to the kindness of the powers that be, I am at present carried on the pay-roll of the Honolulu Star-Bulletin, as Scho-field correspondent. Laboring under the impression that the above info could be used to an advantage by you, and at the same time remind your readers (should it be used) that Benning did have a victory snatching eleven at one time, and it is possible for her to get in the football limelight again, is my excuse for writing. Trusting that all your copy will be scoops, I am, I was at one time an humble contrib-

BENNING THEATRES RUN A NEW TALKIE EACH NIGHT IN THE WEEK

By Capt. C. H. Owens, Inf.

Particularly fortunate is the theatre goer of Fort Benning. Two well equipped theatres for either stage or picture presentation are provided on the Post.

The 24th Infantry Theatre, located in the 24th Infantry area, is capable of ac-commodating 350 patrons. It is equipped with a stage, scenery, stage lighting and a picture screen. The most modern pic-ture projection and sound reproduction equipment has been installed. The the equipment has been installed. The the-atre is air cooled by a 42-inch blower fan set on concrete so that no disturbing noise interrupts sound reception. The theatre is run entirely for the pleasure of the members of the 24th Infantry and their friends.

The Main Theatre, located on Inger-soll Avenue just north of the Gymnasium, is a huge concrete and steel building with a seating capacity of 1480. It is provided with comfortable theatre lobby and rest rooms. The entire the-atre is tastefully decorated.

The sound and picture equipment is the same as that of the 24th Infantry Theatre—both being Radio Corporation of America products. Every inch of film that is shown in either theatre is carefully checked over before it is pre-sented for your entertainment. This precaution is taken so as to insure a smooth running performance with no stoppages.

An endeavor is made to present pic-tures that will satisfy all theatre goers. With this in mind pictures are booked that cover the range of dramatics and picture themes. Westerns with their picture themes. Westerns with their spirit of adventure and breath of the open spaces; comedies with amusing sit-uations and gag lines; light musical comedies and operas with their gorgeous costumes, scenery and bevies of beauti-ful girls; the drama with its portrayal of human nature; all of these have their followers and so all must be shown. To meet this varied demand a new picture is shown every night of the year. This means that 365 featured pictures must be secured, not to mention the short be secured, not to mention the short subjects such as news reels, short comedies, singing numbers and comedy car-toons. Truly the picture fan of Fort Benning is indeed fortunate; especially so when one considers the admission charge of only 25c for adults and 10c for children for children.

A complete set of stage scenery with all the equip-

mirrors, running hot and cold water are available for the players. Now for the stage lighting. It is with a feeling of justifiable pride that the dramatic lover and follower of Fort Benning speaks of his stage. Inere is no better lighting equipment anywhere than that provided by the switchboard of the Main Theatre. Every possible lighting effect can be obtained and is obtained by a competent force of stage men. The Ward Leonard Electric Company's Controlite was installed in the past year, and it is with real an-ticipation that the theatre goer can look forward to a most successful year of forward to a most successful year of stage dramatics.

FOOTBALL YELLS READY

The 24th Infantrymen are practicing their songs and yells to turn loose on Tuskegee Saturday. Mimeographed Tuskegee Saturday. He is stopping over here en route to his new station, and expressed a desire to hear his old friends sing again. They did so with vim and volume enough to please the most exacting. The Colonel was well satisfied as were all others present. The harmony and rhythm of the negro spir-ituals was never better in evidence than ituals was never better in evidence than on this occasion. Col. Johnson made a few remarks expressing his pleasure at renewing contacts with his old regiment, and Col. Caffey made a short talk also.

The Service Company, 24th Infantry gave a most delightful picnic party last Friday to friends of the company. The r riday to friends of the company. The company was celebrating its baseball victory, and also the recent completion of the horse-show ring pavilion. An excellent picnic lunch was furnished, and good music for dancing was dis-pensed by the band. The officers and their ladies were not neglected, and en-ioyed the occasion with the company. joyed the occasion with the company.

A new gallery range is being con-structed by the 24th Infantry. A new firing point shelter is being built of pine slabs, which will give a rustic ex-terior appearance to the structure. The target butts are also being rebuilt and reenforced reenforced.

A volleyball tournament is in pros-pect for the 24th Infantry this fall. As facilities for basketball make it diffi-cult to carry on a basketball schedule, it has been decided to try out the voi-leyball tournament. Schedules and op-ponents will be announced soon. Games with Chattanooga, Atlanta, Talladega, Tuskegee and several Y. M. C. A. teams are assured.

The 24th Infantry N. C. O. Club is planning a golf tournament to initiate the opening of the Miniature Golf Course in the regimental area. The course will be completed by Sept. 26th.

Major Coates: "Sgt. Jones, don't you think we should excuse football players from all other duties?" Sgt. Jones: "No, Sir! If we did that, the whole regiment would want to play football."

Sgt. Jones, Co. "G": "The House of David still stands. One of the corner pillows was a little shaky the other day, but the old house still stands."

Seldom Heard (makes himself heard at the Flynn-Parker card last week): "Say! When does the fight start? I did-n't pay to see a hugging match."

Pvt. James (when asked why he was sitting down so much on his grasscut-ting job) replied: "I don't know, Cap-tain, unless it's because you wear rub-ber heels."

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

This column has been suspended for several weeks due, as are so many ir-regularities, to the weather. The heat has been so intense that our disposi-tion, induced thereby, has made our pen a most dangerous weapon. It was con-sidered to be advisable to stop opera-tions pending the return of a calm spirit on the wings of a cool autumnal breeze—if any.

X X X Golf and polo are the order of the day, in a recreational way. Even "Jack" Brackinridge is playing golf—a "South-paw." If there is anything in the pos-ture line that's more contortionesque than a left handed hearing when is it than a left-handed beginner, what is it?

The "Little Doctor" in contradistinction to his bigger but younger brother, refuses to play golf, which he disdain-fully refers to as 'Ockey at the 'at.

INFANTRY SCHOOL HUNT HOLDS A MEETING TWICE EACH WEEK

By M. F. H.

A cordial welcome is extended to all who have arrived at The Infantry School since the close of the hunting season last spring. May they join us in our sport this winter, as we feel sure they will enjoy it as much as so many have in the past.

many have in the past. The best advice to a newcomer to Benning is to enter into as many ac-tivities as possible, because it makes life much more interesting and, inci-dentally, instructive. Nowhere else in the Infantry can the Doughboy find it so convenient to learn something of hunting and to follow the hounds. Here the Officers' Club maintains a large pack of hounds and holds a meeting twice a week for all members, their families and guests. Along with horse back riding, fox hunting is experiencing a revival throughout the world, the two being so closely allied. There are in America alone some 87 recognized hunts America alone some 87 recognized hunts and goodness only knows how many which have not been registered.

Old timers need no introduction to the sport but newcomers may like a few words of advice and suggestion at the start. There are fewer "rules" in this sport than any other and these are this sport than any other and these are the outcome of plain common sense, fair play, and courteousness. As the hunt is really a hound party, give them room to work. A safe rule is to not pass the master. If a slow hound is over-taken, he should be given a wide berth and not trampled; remember hounds are often expensive. Another rule is not to crowd a fellow hunter. Few things can test a friendship more than to be crowded at a jump, not to menthings can test a friendship more than to be crowded at a jump, not to men-tion the possibility of an accident. The matter of dress is often a prominent question in the minds of us all, whether it be for a golf game, dance, or a fox hunt. Good comfortable riding clothes are always correct. The hunt staff al-ways wear the traditional "Pink" coat, but should any gentlemen of the field but should any gentlemen of the field desire to appear also in the "Pink" the Master has authorized the velvet hunt-Master has authorized the velvet nunt-ing cap for all. Of course no lady ever wears the "Pink" unless she is a mem-ber of the staff. Just one more sug-gestion: be prompt at the published time of the meet, as the Master always starts the hunts on time. Along about the shank end of Oc-tober, the season starts with a controlled drag bunt. Assembling at the Polo and drag hunt. Assembling at the Polo and Hunt Club for doughnuts and coffee, the field leaves at 8:00 o'clock. When the field leaves at 8500 o'clock. When outside of the post, the Master sounds his horn and the Huntsman casts the hounds. Picking up the scent they are off, to the tune of the excited music of the hounds. When a sufficient distance has been gained, the Master gives the field a nod and moves off. Soon all are gaily cantering across the hill-side, and the chase is on. A thrill runs up the spine, we are riding to hounds! Our grandfathers had nothing on us. What grandfathers had nothing on us. What can be finer; a galloping horse; a run-ning hound; and a true friend beside! Topping the next hill the Master sig-nals a check and dismounts. Thank heavens, we came through that first cast with only a labored breathing! By George, we soften up during the sum-mer, no wind at all. But wasn't it thrilling and wasn't the sight of the hounds beautiful!

After a short blow, the Master mounts and another cast is made. Off the hounds go, with the field again in hot pursuit. A slow hound is overtaken and, with cries of "ware hound," is passed. with cries of "ware hound," is passed. Down a hill, through a patch of pines and over a ditch to another check. The Master stops and then lights a cigar-ette, as the weather is so warm the hounds want a breathing spell. From all around come the comments: "Isn't this a great day?" "Say, did you see that chap cut across in front of me?" "Who said this plug was a hunter, I call him a puller." So it goes to a final check at the end of an eight mile run. At the finish, the hounds are gathered At the finish, the hounds are gathered in and a "kill" is simulated, great hunks of raw meat are tossed into the air, to be devoured by the hounds with noisy growls.

The field straighten up their hats and ties and move off at a jog to the Polo and Hunt Club for a delicious break-fast of sausage and grits. The thought flashes through our minds of how good ti is to have an empty stomach and to know it will soon be filled. Turning the horses over to the ever working grooms, the field start com-paring notes of the hunt what a good, or noor horse was selected, how high paring notes of the hunt what a good, or poor, horse was selected, how high were the jumps (they grow by the hour) After breakfast, the red covered song books, originated by Pleas Rogers, are opened to that old favorite, "Drink, Puppy, Drink." Is there a man with soul so dead," who can't join in the chorus? There is not. As all things must, the meet is at an end, and, the grathering, gradually heads end and the gathering, gradually heads for home. But deep in the minds of each is the resolution to be present at the next hunt, as it's rumored to be a "live hunt."

RECREATION CENTER BOARD

That Fort Benning is undergoing a marked improvement is quite obvious, but the fact that the Recreation Center Board holds an important and distinct place in accomplishing improvements must not be overlooxed, for we must consider our wonderful Memorial Stadium and Towers, Gowdy Field, Hand Ball Courts, Russ Pool, the New Theatre which was turned over to that activity before the project was completed, and many other minor projects too numerous to mention, that have been put into existence by that organization.

The construction of a modern school building has been approved by the War Department, and the Recreation Center Board has been designated as the agen cy to construct this building. "The need for such a school at this large garrison is indeed very urgent. There are at Fort Benning one hundred and sixty officers' children, ten warrant officers children and one hundred and sixteen enlisted men's children who attend school in the grades below those of high school. Eighty-six of this number go back and forth by commercial bus and atten d school in Columbus, ten miles away. The balance, two hundred and nineteen children ,attend the school provided at Fort Benning. The sum of $8,000 was appro-Benning. The sum of $8,000 was appro-priated from receipts from motion picture shows, receipts from boxing shows, and Post Exchange revenues, for the same was selected on the corner of Wold Avenue and Lumpkin Road. In estimating the cost of construction of this building, however, the following economies were considered: The Quartermaster operates a saw mill from which may be obtained a portion of the timber required for its construction; the Recreation Center Board sand and gravel plant will be able to furnish the materials needed for the concrete work, plastering and stucco; property con-sisting of building tile, slate shingles and floor tile has been obtained from Muscle Shoals and may be used for this muscle broken purpose. The Recreation Center Board will utilize soldier labor wherever pos-sible, thereby reducing the labor costs considerably. It is therefore believed that an attractive, up-to-date building can be erected with the appropriated sum. Work on this project will start about the 24th of this month.

The War Department has also approved a new officers' club building, which will be erected by the Recreation Center Board, and will be of reinforced concret, hollow tile and brick with roof of slat or roofing tile. The design will be such as to harmonize with other permanent buildings of the post. Its location will be south of the site of the proposed Academic Building, in the vicinity of "Malone Lake" This building when completed will be one of the most attractive of its kind in the country. Work on this project, however, will not start until the Children's School Building has been completed.

The Recreation Center Board is at present engaged in the operation of a sand and gravel plant and improving the 24th Infantry Swimming Pool. This project, a reservoir dam above the 24th Infantry Swimming Pool, has been under way since June 1st, and was completed September 15th. The dam is 150 feet in length and is 19 feet high. It has a capacity of 1,200,000 gallons. An elaborate spillway and tower and valve system are now being constructed, which will take care of all overflows and furnish adequate safety and c on st an t change of water for the swimming pool below. Four carloads of cement have been used on this job, and from twenty to forty men were employed constantly, all of whom are soldiers. The gravel and sand plant, which is located on Randall Creek, some 18 miles from the post proper, was erected by the Recreation Center Board, assisted by the Quartermaster, at a cost of approximately $1450.00. It has an average daily output of 70 yards of gravel and a con-

18 HOLES AVAILABLE YEAR ROUND

Fort Benning offers to the golf enthusiast an excellent 18-hole golf course available for play the year round.

The course is in excellent condition and while not quite of championship length, will give the average golfer a considerable struggle to break par.

Eventually, the present first nine holes will be abandoned in favor of an extensive building program. This probably will not take place for a number of years, but the eventuality has been foreseen and steps taken to meet it.

What promises to be one of the finest golf courses in the entire South has been laid out and practically completed under the able direction of our Golf Director, Lieut.-Col. H. A. Wells, assisted by Mr. S. E. Clarke.

Laid out over rolling country and of championship length, it will include part of the present upper nine holes. It is estimated that within two years time this course will be ready for play—perhaps sooner, depending on weather conditions and funds available.

The Club is fortunate in having the services of Mr. S. E. Clarke as golf professional. He is in a position to serve your needs both in the matter of instruction and equipment at very reasonable rates. He has recently formed a children's class—group instruction—at a very nominal charge and has shown marked results with his instruction.

More than 150 officers and over 70 ladies are listed as active players which places golf far ahead of any other sport in the number of active participants.

The Club Championship is determined in the spring of each year. This gives the new incoming officers an opportunity to learn the course, get back on their game and observe the play of others.

Other tournaments of a handicap nature for both men and women are arranged at least once a week. Suitable prizes are awarded for each of these events and the competition is keen.

The Corps Area tournament is usually held at Fort Benning and brings to Fort Benning most of the outstanding players in the Corps Area who compete for places on the Corps Area Team entered in the Army Tournament. In the Corps Area Tournament just finished Fort Benning took all the major honors, Lieut.-Col. H. A. Wells was medalist, Capt. K. J. Fielder the runner

FORT BENNING PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

With the opening of the Fort Benning Children's School on the 22nd of this month, the interests of the parents will naturally be awakened as to the educational facilities that are available within the Garrison.

On January 21, 1930 the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers Association was organized with Mrs. B. G. Ferris as the first president. The present officers are Mrs. O. N. Bradley as president; Mrs. H. R. Bull, 1st vice-president; Mrs. H. C. Peterson, 2nd vice-president and Mrs. Sidney Negrotto, secretary. Within six months the membership has grown to more than a hundred members.

The object of this Association is to promote child welfare in the home, school and community; to bring the home and school into closer relationship up. The Fort Benning team, composed of Maj. O. N. Bradley, Capt. A. S. Nevins, Capt. K. J. Fielder and Capt. A. K. Robinson, won an easy victory over ten other team entries Fort Benning qualified thirteen out of the sixteen in the first flight and finally emerged with the Corps Area champion in the person of Capt. K. J. Fielder, with Col. H. A. Wells the runner up. Of the six members of the Corps Area Team, five are listed from Fort Benning.

Golf at Fort Benning is an activity of the Officers' Club and all fees are included in the monthly dues. It can be played here more reasonably than any other place known to the writer, considering the quality of the course and its facilities. If however, you insist on a class A caddy, a new ball each round and the very latest in equipment, these, too, can be supplied to meet the most exacting demands.

A cordial welcome is extended to all golfers with the hope that they will take full advantage of the facilities offered for the benefit and pleasure derived from ye ancient and honorable game.

and to promote cooperation between the parents and teachers in the intelligent training of the child. In addition to the above object, the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers Association is conscientiously working for the betterment of all conditions surrounding school life.

It was through this association that the Woman's Exchange was organized and will be opened shortly in its spacious room in The Book Shop. The proceeds from the sales in this Exchange will be expended in the interests of the children of the garrison. The Woman's Exchange will have for sale a variety of articles suitable for bridge prizes and Christmas gifts, wearing apparel, fancy bric-a-brac and other things made by the clever hands of Fort Benning ladies. The Exchange wishes it to be known that every lady of the Post is free to present articles for sale through this agency. In this way you can not only help the Exchange but make money for yourself as well. See Mrs. Starnes for information.

The annual dues to the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers Association are one dollar.

Packing and crating household goods and effects of officers leaving Fort Benning each year costs in the neighborhood of $36,000.

JUBILEE SINGERS WILL BEGIN PRACTICE FOR FALL ENTERTAINMENTS SOON

The 24th Infantry, known as the "Singing Regiment," will soon unlimber their voices and prepare for some real Fall entertainment for the Post. They will specialize on the negro folk songs and spirituals, though popular songs of the moment will by no means be neglected.

In the "spirituals," the Negro has given to America not only its only folk-songs, but a mass of noble music. One never thinks of this music but is struck with the wonder, the miracle of its production. How did the people who orig-inated these songs manage to do it? The sentiments are easily accounted for; they are for the most part, taken from the Bible. But the melodies, where did they come from? Some of them so weirdly Take for instance, "Go down, Moses"; is there a stronger theme in the whole musical literature of the world? It is to be noted that whereas the chief charto be noted that whereas the chief char-acteristic of ragtime is rhythm, the chief characteristic of the "spirituals" is melody. The melodies of "Steal Away To Jesus," "Swing Low," "Nobody Knows De Trouble I See," "Deep Riv-and many others of these songs poser," and many others of these songs pos-sess a beauty that is poignant. In the sess a beauty that is poignant. riotous rhythms of ragtime, the negro expresses his irrepressible buoyancy, and sheer joy of living; in the spirituals he voices his sense of beauty and his deep beauty and his deep religious feeling. There is sunshine as well as sadness in the history of the negro race, and so we have songs which are gay as well as grave. The oldest of them are the most beautiful, and many of the most striking have never yet been recorded, partly because they contained elements, melodic as well as rhythmical, which baffled the early collectors.

Through the Negro this country is vocal with a folk-music intimate, complete and beautiful. It is the negro music with its byproduct of ragtime that today most widely influences the popular song life of America, and negro rhythms have indeed captivated the world at large. The irresistible music that wells up from this sunny people is hummed and whistled, danced to and marched to, laughed over and wept over, by high and low and rich and poor throughout the land. And in his song we hear a prophecy of the dignity and worth of Negro genius.

Out of the folk-song and spiritual grew ragtime. Then the "blues," a curious and intriguing variety of love song from the levees of the Mississippi, became popular and was spread abroad. Another side of Negro music was taken and developed, by means of its haunting themes and rippling melody, into popular songs and into high forms of modern music, until today the influence of the Negro reaches every part of American music, of many foreign masters like Dvofak;⁴ and certainly no program of concert music could be given in America without voicing Negro composers and Negro themes.

And so by fateful chance the Negro folk-song and the rhythmic spiritual stand today not simply as the sole American music, but as the most beautiful expression of human experience born this side of the seas. The real primitive beauty of this music has been persistently mistaken and misunderstood; but notwithstanding, it still remains as the singular spiritual heritage of the nation and the greatest gift of the Negro people.

The extra-mural activity at Fort Benning which boasts of the largest membership is the Dramatic Club. Some nine hundred members paid dues last year. Of course not all of these performed upon the stage—Heaven forbid! that would be too many amateur actors on one post—but the majority fulfilled a role equally as important as acting and without which no play is a play —the role of audience.

It goes without saying what the benefits of such an organization are to the post at large; it is a somewhat debatable question what the audience gets out of it, though they turn out in large numbers and are usually polite; but the benefits to the actors and the host of back-stage Deities are uncalculated and incalculable.

These benefits are of a peculiarly personal nature. Become an actor and you have an ever valid excuse for going out nights to ostensible rehearsals; you have a legitimate opportunity to give vent to your real temperament; to all those vague and suppressed desires you have been secretly cherishing for years don't deny it. Outwardly respectable ladies may enjoy the vicarious thrill of running away with the post sheik, or of dancing for a living in a Broadway night club. Middle-aged gentlemen have been known shamelessly to indulge their passion for exhibitionism by dressing up as pirates with red bandanas, ear rings and tatooed chests; and some of our commissioned personnel who are only able to sing off the post have been heard to burst into song in a play. Then at dinner parties the only successful way to silence the horse-partisans is to monopolize the conversation with dramatics.

As an example of what we can do for your entertainment and uplift we offer the list of long plays produced last year: "The Best People," "Torchbearers," "Broadway" and "Captain Applejack," besides three evenings of one-act plays. With the invincible Major Chynoweth as president and the unconquerable Major Harding as director, it was indeed a successful year.

The forthcoming year promises equal accomplishments under the expert leadership of Major P. E. Peabody as president. To assist him he has the following list of trained craftsmen, artists and business men:

business men:
Major W. F. Freehoff, vice-president;
Mrs. Isobel Chance, director; Major E.
D. Patrick, business manager; Captain
S. G. Saulnier, stage manager; Captain
E. L. Brine, property officer; Major E.
F. Harding, chairman of the play-reading committee; Mrs. Nellie May Patrick, member of the play-reading committee; Mrs. Rachel Wood, member of the play-reading committee.
Barring the artistic temperament and

The play-reading committee. Barring the artistic temperament and acts of God, the Club expects to put on six programs of plays this year with two consecutive performances for each program. The two consecutive performances for each program are a new departure calculated to insure the audience the best possible seats and to give the actors additional experience. There will be only one pay performance—the final spring play—; and your membership ticket, which costs one dollar and a half will admit you to the other five. The seats for all performances will also be reserved. The three long plays are not yet definitely decided but will probably be chosen from among the following: "Is Zat So?," "The Circle," "Ten Nights in a Bargoom," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "The Silver Cord," "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire? On October 17 and 18, the first bill of the season offers three short plays: "So This Is Paris Green," a rollicking burlesque; "Two Crooks and a Lady," a thrilling melodrama; and "The Angel Intruder," a satire on the malady of love. The succeeding programs will come as follows: November 14 and 15, December 5 and 6, February 6 and 7, March 20 and 21, and May 1 and 2.

Another new feature of an experimental nature will be the substitution of preliminary tests for try-outs. This means that instead of trying-out for particular plays, the aspiring actors will gather at a set date and place in the presence of the equally aspiring directors and will be put through a brief test for voice, diction, stage presence, pantomime and characterization. A record of these tests will then be kept under lock and key in an intricate card catalogue from which all future castings will be made.

We also expect to conduct a class in make-up early in the fall and thereby have a trained corps of make-up artists to call upon. Last year we were woefully short in this respect and two of our artists were kept so busy throughout the season that they couldn't attend a single dinner party on play nights.

For further information regarding the make-up class and the Dramatic Club in general, watch the Daily Bulletin and the Infantry School News.

There was a mistaken idea in former years that the library was intended sole-ly for the work of the student in mili-tary history. While a large part of the collection has been gathered to assist officers in original research in this field, there are a great number of works of general subjects which will gratify the most biographical collection, which is being constantly augmented.

Active cooperation is maintained with the Woman's Club and the Dramatic Club, the private collections of both of these organizations being housed in the library, while every effort is made to assist them in securing material for their

POST EXCHANGE A CITY IN ITSELF

It Can Fill Just About Any Want You Have, and Right Away

The Post Exchange at Fort Benning is one of the largest in the service, both in point of sales and in the number and diversity of activities operated. The personnel consists of one Major of Infantry (Exchange Officer), two Cap-tains of Infantry (Assistant Exchange Officers), eighty-one civilians and sixty-two enlisted men. There is a distinct saving to members of this garrison on practically all items sold by the Post Exchange. A list of the various departments, their locations and hours of business are to be found elsewhere in the News, and the following interesting data is given regarding these departments:

Grocery Department: For the protection of its patrons, the Exchange has recently installed the most modern elecers, and only "Western" government-in-spected meats and meat products are sold. An added protection to its pat-rons are the daily inspections of all meats by the Veterinary Officer. All persons who handle food in this depart-ment are approved "food handlers," so inspected as passed by the Medical De-partment. In season, the choicest seapartment. In addition to what one would naturally expect, you will find fancy box and bulk, and party candies, toys for the kiddles and numerous items of unusual interest. The Athletic Department has attractive displays of equipment for all sports, particularly Golf, Fishing, Tennis and Foot-Ball, and they make a specialty of stringing tennis rackets. Gift and Special Order Department: Special orders are handled for items not carried in stock in other departments. Gift items, electrical household servants, ladies' lingerie, and numerous unusual items are carried in stock. This is termed the "Ladies' Shop," but it has its fair share of patronage from the Tennis looks forward during 1930-1931 to another most satisfactory year. It is expected that five courts will be available for play, and the construction of two further courts is planned for this fall. A permanent covered stand is also contemplated and actual conchampions, Miss Dorothy Ross and Lt. David Hedekin, 29th Infantry, are still on hand, and the games of both players have markedly improved, due to their participation in summer tournaments. Miss Ross went to the semi-final round of the Alabama State tournament in East her first participation away from Fort Benning, while Lt. Hedekin was only defeated in the Army Championship finals after a five set match. The Ladies' Doubles post championship tournament will commence on October 15th, and singles handicap tourna-ments for both ladies and men are also scheduled for October and November. It is also probable that the Benning ladies' team will meet the ladies of the Columbus country club on the latter's courts late in October and possible that a return match be played with the Al-bany ladies about the same time. Vibbert Avenue has been paved from the round house to Jawbone Corner, and Lumpkin Road from Jawbone Corner to Outpost No. 1, at the Upatoi bridge. This paving was approximately a mile and a half and cost approximately $95,000.00.

Within the next sixty days, work will begin on additional paving, in accordance with plans and specifications now on file in the office of the Constructing Quartermaster. This paving will include the paving of Lumpkin Road from Wold Avenue to Jawbone Corner, and the roads in the new NCO area near the Main Theatre. About two

The erection of four field officers? quarters, twenty-two company officers quarters, and fifteen non-commissioned quarters, at an approximate total cost of $425,000.00, is rapidly nearing completion, being approximately eighty-five per cent completed. It was expected that the first buildings would be ready for occupancy some time during the lat-ter part of September, and that the last building would be completed by the end of November, but the occupancy of these quarters will be delayed for a few weeks on account of the bad weather which has prevented the completion of the sewer work servicing these quarters. It is now believed that some of the NCO quarters will be ready for occu-pancy about the middle of October, and that all of the above quarters will be ready for occupancy by the middle of December.

Within the next sixty days, work will begin on new grading, drainage, sidewalks, and utility extensions in these areas and in the colored NCO area in Bradley Area. The cost of this work will be approximately $40,000.

Another project which is progressing rapidly is the one consisting of nine company officers' quarters in Block 16, near the Main Theatre. About two and sixty-six non-commissioned officers' miles of pavement, with integral curves, quarters, (48 near Main Theatre and curbs, and catch basins will be laid, at 18 in Bradley Area). The officers' quarters are to cost approximately $120,000.00, and the NCO quarters, approximately $500,000.00. Within the next three months, plans

The funds for this construction are to be available after July 1, 1931. It is not known definitely, at this time, where these quarters will be erected. Additional barracks will also be erected from funds to be made avail-able after July 1, 1931. It is not known just where these barracks will be erect-ed, but it is probable that they will be somewhere in the block occupied by the Tank Barracks.

ALL BENNING 1ST SERGEANTS NOW ON GOOD BEHAVIOR

Many First Sergeants have had their share of night-mares and, no doubt, a few of them have had a few "pipe dreams" in their spare moments, but it is doubtful whether any have had their dreams come true, as related in the following story:

"Twenty years ago a West Pointer, quiet spoken and stern faced, completed a thorough job of 'cleaning up' his newly acquired command of regulars by summoning a slim, erect young soldier to the orderly room.

'Sergeant Boyle, you're the new first sergeant of this company," he announced tersely. 'You know the kind of an outfit I want. Carry on. I'll back you up.'

Then followed years of the strict Army routine that 'soldiering' to the hilt entails, first at Fort Porter, N. Y., and finally in Panama. When the World War came, higher posts called to each. Sheling hange with mutual respect war came, higher posts called to each. Shaking hands with mutual respect, Captain Charles H. Paine, commanding Company C, 29th U. S. Infantry, and First Sergeant Peter E. Boyle parted with the same unbending military formality that had invariably marked their relations as officer and enlisted man.

• But yesterday Boyle, now a master sergeant at Second Corps Area Headquarters on Governor's Island, had a visitor.

'Sergeant,' the elderly gentleman informed him, 'Colonel Paine, your old company commander, recently died. In his will he mentioned your faithful and loyal service. You have been left six thousand dollars.'

The caller was Mr. Paul Paine, a brother of Colonel Paine.

Sergeant Boyle, who is married and lives on Governor's Island, became a captain in the 354th Infantry, 89th Division, during the World War. He will retire from the Army on a life pension next year, after 30 years' service."—Wis. N. G. Review.

SON OF MARSHAL OYAMA. JAPAN'S 1904 WAR CHIEF. VISITS INFANTRY SCHOOL

Descendant of Manchurian Victor Pays High Compliment to Benning

Lieutenant Colonel Takeo Oyama, Imperial Japanese Army, son of Field Marshal Oyama, who commanded the Marshal Oyania, who commanded the victorious Japanese armies in the Russo-Japanese War, visited Fort Benning Monday and Tuesday. The visit was for the purpose of ob-serving the installations and activities of the Infantry School, and of the school troops.

Colonel Oyama is professor of the re-search staff of the Military College of Infantry at Chiba, Japan, and has been in the United States since June. He will return to Japan this fall.

Colonel Oyama, during his visit to the post, referred to Benning as the finest school in the world. During his visit, Capt. Martin D. McAllister, 29th Infantry, acted as his aide.

MINIATURE GOLF COURSE TO OPEN MONDAY

The 24th Infantry Miniature Golf Course will open Monday. A novel 18-hole course has been construcated with plenty of fancy frills and will be ready for the golf enthusiast and all searchers after the elusive "birdie." The course has more novel hazards and and in-triguing obstacles on its velvety fairways, than any other similar course.

General King visited the course dur-ing its construction, and forthwith demanded the right to play the first ball. The course will be formally opened at 2 p. m. Monday, with the Commanding General present to negotiate the first circuit. The 24th Infantry band will be present to cheer the golfers with effluent melody. Officers and their families may use the course from 2 to 4 p. m. daily. Enlisted men and their families, at all other hours. A playing charge of ten cents will be charged.

CPL. KERN LEADER OF CHIEF'S SQUAD ¥ Cups Presented at Regimental Review IST CANNON COMPANY PLATOON WINS

By "leading the way" in the typical "B" Company manner, Corporal Kern, Company "B," 29th Infantry, demon-strated last Thursday that his squad should be designated as the "Chief of Infantry's Combat Squad" for this year. Competition among the selected squads representing all the rifle com-panies of the regiment was so keen that Corporal Kern was compelled to push his squad to the limit. So pleased with the results of this particular compe-tition was Colonel Duncan K. Major, the tition was Colonel Duncan K. Major, the regimental commander of the 29th In-fantry, that he ordered special medals for each member of the winning squad in addition to the regular "Chief of In-fantry's Combat Squad" patch, which each man of the winning squad is en-

Swinging along like veterans on the fourth day of their 122-mile hike, the 29th Infantry, 1700 strong, commanded by Colonel Duncan K. Major, tonight, goes into camp in a large neld four miles west of Plains, a small village of about 600 in the county of Sumter, which is approximately twelve miles

After considerable preliminary work preparing the regiment for the hike, the "Demonstration Regiment" took to the long dusty trail bright and early on the morning of the twenty-third, and that night camped on "the old tenting ground" at Harmony Church. As the march was short and the weather excellent, there were no march casualties. On the morning of the twenty-fourth, the regiment began its march at seven a. m. Almost at once, the "rookiest rook" of the regiment discovered that there was considerable difference between marching on a dirt road and on a paved road. For ten weary miles of pavement

he put one foot in front of the other, and as he plodded along, he began to realize the importance of good feet to old "John Doughboy." As the morning wore along, he also realized that old "Sol" was making merry with him, and that it was greating botter and botter that it was getting hotter and hotter with each mile traversed. Soon Cussetta was left far behind, and after three miles of excellent dirt road, tired and hungry, all demonstrationists were in favor of demonstrating the "proper care

29TH IS MAKING

Another competition of unusual interest in the regiment was the competition between the platoons of the Cannon-Company. This competition was held last Friday in the vicinity of Davis Hill, and was won by the 1st Platoon, commanded by Sergeant "Tom" Tomp-kins. Both weapons of the platoons were fired, the 37-mm. gun and the mortar, at appropriate fixed and moving targets on Long and Green hills at ranges varying from 500 to 1400 yards. The 37-mm. gun commanders were Sgt. Bag-well and Corp. Hamer; and the mortar commanders were Sgt. Shaw and Corp. Brewer.

Saturday morning a regimental re-view was held on Gordon Field at which prizes were awarded in the form of handsome silver cups to the respective winners of the competitions held on September 16, 17, 18 and 19. Colonel Duncan K. Major personally presented and congratulated each commander of the winning squad, section or platoon.

FINEST COCKLE-BURR CROP IN BENNING'S HISTORY

The Fort Benning Department of Agriculture reports an unusually 1 a r g e crop of cockle-burrs on the reservation this year.

As a result of this announcement a large force of harvesters have appeared on the scene, in the form of golfers, student officers and others, and all are busily engaged in moving the crop to market.

The price per bushel is, as usual, far below the ten-year normal, but none of the Benning growers are in the least discouraged. Rather than be undersold, they will freely give away their entire crops. (Continued on page 2.)

INFANTRY WILL HOLD ITS OWN AGAINST NEW WEAPONS. HE DECLARES

Any Future Conflict to Differ Widely Tactically From World War

Opening exercises of The Infantry chool were held Wednesday in the School Main Theater.

In his address the Commandant, Brigadier General Campbell King, predicted that in case of any future war, operations would be dominated by considerations of speed, mobility, and greatly increased fire power, and would be as different from those of the World War, as the latter was from the American Civil War.

Among the distinguished visitors who attended the exercises and made short addresses were William J. Harris, senior United States Senator from Georgia, Congressman William Carter Wright, from the fourth district of Georgia, in which Benning is situated, and Mayor J. Homer Dimon of Columbus.

Gener'al King's address in part follows:

"Today marks the opening of the thirteenth academic year of The In-fantry School, and it is my great pleas-ure to welcome you to Benning. Many of you have been here before. "To those who pioneered here in the early days the changes must be somewhat startling. On every hand you see evidence of a vast construction program, which day by day is adding to the com-fort and efficiency of the garrison. One aspect of this work merits special attention.

"Much of what you see in the way of material improvements has not been accomplished by a policy of waiting for routine appropriations and the labor of paid contractors. In fact most of the advantages you will enjoy were brought about by the unstinted labor of individuals of the garrison, by their fore-thought and by their determination to secure for the personnel reasonable ad-vantages, despite the lack—in many cases, the complete absence—of funds, or hired labor. By sheer force and per-sistence and by the extraordinary generosity of the infantry officers of the army personally and the infantry regi-ments, we have what many of us believe to be the finest garrison in the United States Army."

Appreciation of Army Wife

General King then urged members of the new classes to participate actively in the social and recreational life of Fort Benning, and expressed his appre-ciation of the importance of the army

War's Lessons Often Lost

"The years of exhaustion which follow a great war and the economic restrictions which political expediency imposes have always prevented full advantage being taken from the lessons which the conflict offered. Officers become more and more immersed in the minor arts of the drill ground. "It is just this that The Infantry

School aims to prevent.

"Napoleon's estimate of the relation of moral factors to the physical is familiar to all: Recent history leads us to infer that this ratio will be even greater in the future. Perhaps in some of our map problems we have relegated moral factors to the rear; in war, however they are where Joab placed Uriah —in the forefront of battle.

"A new infantry organization will be introduced to you; undoubtedly there will be some difference between the teachings of last year and this. But this difference will relate only to the application of unchanging principle to a new organization.

The tactical methods in vogue at the start of a war rarely meet the existing situation. Those used at the start of the World War were rapidly revised.

Methods Would Be Different

"Nothing is more certain than that, if var comes again, the tactical methods employed will be as different from those of the World War as the latter were from those employed by the armies of Grant and Lee.

"Future operations will probably be dominated by considerations of speed, mobility and greatly increased fire power, with victory inclining to the side of superior elasticity of thought and or-ganization, to the side which first grasps the essential elements of the problem under the novel conditions of the day. We are sure that all of the Olympic prospects and hopefuls will be glad to hear that wagon loads of soft sand have been hauled into the Show Ring. It is now almost as soft as a Simmons mattress and all ready to welcome to its bosom all who suddenly, and involun-tarily, become tired of their horse and are in a hurry to dismount. For the use of the rest of the family, the grand stands are being enlarged so that they may sit in comfort while watching the horsey one gallop (there's seldom more than one horsey one in a family, for than one horsey one in a family, for some strange reason). But the piece de resistance of the ring and the apple of the stables is the Tea House, Road Side House, Chateaux, or what you wish to call it. One after-noon last spring the Assistant Com-mandant and Maj. Thompson were seen admiring the views around the Show Ring, making lots of gestures and nod-ding their heads. Lt. McKnight knew right away that something was up, so he called to the carpenters to sharpen their tools and get set.

tools and get set. The plans took form and as a result there now sits a very attractive house on the far side of the Ring. From its porches an excellent view of both Snow Rings can be held, while the view of both Snow Rings can be held, while the view of the Chattahoochee Valley lies just behind one's shoulder. It is going to be a most popular gathering place for all those who haunt the Stables.

Major Ross assisted in the formal opening of the Infantry School on the 24th. The students turned out in new uniforms, bright brass buckles and keen clear faces. It looks like a record class,

The Artillery and the Tanks are still cooperating along the same old line. This time we are running the main guard during the absence of the 29th Infantry.

It did our hearts good to see the 29th Infantry walking out the First Division Road the other day on the first leg of their ten day practice march. It is an unusual sight these days to see an in-fantryman out side of a truck. Ouch!

Our football team is progressing un-der the tutelage of Captain Gaston. They are going to Madison, Georgia, on Friday to play Madison A & M College. The Artillery Battalion is lining up for the fall demonstration. We trust for the fall demonstration. We trust that our past agreeable relations with the student officers and instructors will be continued this year. We had a welcome letter from our

Tankers Stage a War; Night Driving is Fine

Maneuvers Under Way Near Sulphur Springs Carried out in Mist and Rain

By Capt. James Taylor

By Capt. James Taylor On Monday, September 15, 1930, the Terrible Tanks took the field—this time in mimic warfare. The Battalion, op-erating under the control of the IX Corps had been attached to the 1st Division which was an interior division of the corps and had run up against strong opposition in the vicinity of the Sulphur Springs Road.

Springs Road. The Battalion was ordered to take up an intermediate position near Har-mony Church. The move was made the night of September 15th, leaving the tank park at dusk in three columns. Company "F" moved overland by truck on the paved road. Company "D," with their usual initiative, suggested using the narrow gauge railway. This sugtheir usual initiative, suggested using the narrow gauge railway. This sug-gestion was adopted and, thanks to the fine cooperation of the Quartermaster Corps, the move was made with great success on three trains of five tanks each. Company "E" made the run overland on its own power, arriving with only one casualty at 2:30 a. m. Mes-sage centers and Command Posts were established and operated with equipment loaned by The Infantry School.

On the morning of the 16th, orders were received to have the light compan-ies support the 1st and 2nd Brigades in their attack on the morning of the 17th, the Battalion less the two light companies remaining in Division reserve. The platoons were assigned by Brigade The platoons were assigned by Brigade Commanders of their units and the day was spent in reconnaissance and getting ready for the big show. At dusk the companies began their moves to their points of deployment.

Above the roar of low flying aircraft, machine gun barrages, and other battle noises, rose the clatter of tracks and the vibrating hum of thirty tanks motors moving up.

The country was very rough, visi-bility was poor but the tanks rumbled on through the rain and mist to their objectives east and west of the Cus-setta Road.

Throughout the day they were used intermittently to push forward or repel-counter attacks. Company "E" received orders that the 2nd Infantry had been driven back to the enemy's main line and was ordered to support its attack at 4:00 p. m. The heavies lumbered up in limited time and placed the Infantry on its objective.

On the night of the 17th, orders were received moving the Battalion to rail-head to move to another front. The move in was accomplished without a hitch, Company "E" leaving 2 platoons in division reserve by 4:00 p. m., September 18th.

Many lessons were learned by every-one. The night driving was of a superone. The night driving was of a super-ior quality and the mechanical opera-tion of model 1918 tanks satisfactory to a high degree. Only four major re-pair operations were necessary out of thirty-nine tanks used. The weather was abominable, mist or rain continu-ously but the old tankers' spirit never dropped drooped.

"THANKS"

The anniversary number of The Infantry School News was the subject of very kind editorial mention by the Ledger and by the Enquirer-Sun of Columbus.

Which reminds us of the fact that seldom does an issue of The News appear, that has not been materially assisted by generous cooperation in one form or another of these live and interesting dailies, who seem to have the interest of Fort Benning at heart as much as does The News.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector

MILK

Our most important food. It contains all the essentials of a balanced diet. It is rich in vitamins. It is readily digestible. Even at the present price, it is cheap. Of all foodstuffs, milk is probably the most difficult to obtain, handle, transport and deliver in a clean, fresh and satisfactory condition. Milk the most easily decomposed of all oods. Milk is an almost perfect culfoods. ture media; contamination and the resulting bacterial growth may produce disease. It is probably responsible for more sickness and deaths than all other foods combined. Food products made from milk are as dangerous as the milk itself.

Because of these facts, sanitary laws, rules and regulations have been made which govern all the steps in milk production, storage, handling and delivering..

Standards are necessary for the sat-factory control of milk. These standstandards are necessary for the sat-isfactory control of milk. These stand-ards represent the very lowest limits that the law permits for pure or normal milk. To judge milk, one must know its physical and chemical properties, its bacteriological content, and the conditions under which it is produced, transported and handled. Cow's milk should contain not less than 3.25 per cent butter fat, and not less than 12 per cent total solids.

The bacteriological content of grade A pasteurized milk, which is the only kind of milk allowed to be sold at Fort Benning, should not be more than 10,000 per cubic centimeter.

Milk of this grade comes from cows free from disease as determined by periodical examinations by veterinarians. It is produced and handled under safe under official supervision. Its bacter-iological content is less than 10,000 per years of operation

c. c., which is the best single index of its general sanitary safety. Don't forget that disease may be conveyed by milk even from a certified supply. As a rule, milk becomes infected from a human source, either at the from a numan source, either at the farm, or at the dairy, or during trans-portation, or in the household after de-livery. Sometimes milk is infected from animal sources. These facts constitute a strong indictment against the use of milk. No inspection service can be so perfect as to insure milk free from in-fection. Nevertheless, a good inspection service, plus adequate pasteurization makes a safe milk supply. Only "certified" milk can be regarded as reasonably safe without pasteuriza-tion. That it is not absolutely safe is shown by the occasional epidemic of sore throats traced to this sort of sup-ply. The only safe guard for even a certified milk is that it be pasteurized.

Pasteurization destroys the dangers that even the best inspection service can not see.

The milk supply at Fort Benning ,because of periodical inspections and weekly examinations for chemical and bacterial content, is cleaner and better than produced on the average dairy farm.

It is pasteurized and is therefore as safe a milk as can be expected from any but a certified supply.

RANDOM THOUGHTS ON THE OPENING OF SCHOOL

On Monday morning we observed numerous members of the Company On Monday morning we observed numerous members of the Company Officers Class moving about the Academic Area. Each carried a pair of new coveralls and a bale of training regulations. Soon the first step in education will be made by getting the students into the coveralls. The second step, which consists of getting the training regulations into the student, takes considerably longer and is generally conceded to be con-siderably more painful. The Monday morning scene reminded us some-how of a story we once heard concerning the Sultan of Turkey and a Bucolic subject who made him a gift of a cart load of pineapples, but we won't talk about that now. It might cause misgivings and create a false impression as to the instructional methods which prevail at The Infantry impression as to the instructional methods which prevail at The Infantry School.

School. The Blunderbus does not pretend to give advice as to what to do with training regulations, but it will depart from its rule long enough to warn the gentlemen of the incoming classes against an example set by a member of the Advanced Class of a few years back. This officer followed the usual procedure of drawing his bale of training regulations in September. When he turned it back in May, he was charged with six or seven pam-phlets which were missing. There is nothing unusual about that, but the strange thing about this case is that the officer had never untied the bundle. He paid the bill, however, without protest.

Season of the Great Wind

"The melancholy days are come-For the the saddest of the year." the saddest of the year." For the next two weeks or possibly longer, the Advanced Class will be under the impression that the primary purpose of The Infantry School is to reduce the Hump by talking it to death. The Blunderbuss hastens to assure you that the opening gas barrage has no such objective. It is designed for the purpose of reducing the norm-ally resistant minds of majors and senior captains to state of receptive-ness to new ideas. On the other hand, it would be unwise to fall into the error of thinking that The Infantry School has merely revised the old time Chautauqua. Practically everything said from the platform, now and here-Practically everything after, will be used against you at some time during the school year. It is the part of wisdom to absorb as much as possible of the much that you will hear. You can catch up with your lost sleep on week ends.

Once upon a time there lived two Once upon a time there lived two genteel Captains, one of pure Hibern-ian ancestry and the other of Cale-donian descent. The one, who was Master of the King's Horses, was popularly known as Mike; the other, who was the King's High Bail-iff was yclept "Wild Bill."

It came to pass on a certain rainy day that Mike debarked rather pre-cipitously from his chariot which he side of the street. Came to pass one of Wild Bill's henchmen who immediately attached a bright red "etiquette" to Mike's charbright red "etiquette" to Mike's char-iot. The court room scene in the High Bailiff's domain is not of record but t'is reported that Mike said to Wild Bill, "How come?" or words to that effect in Hibernian. Wild Bill's classical reply, was "Huh."

SCENE II

Came a time when Wild Bill be-sought Mike to aid him upon a techni-cal matter. Wild Bill's horses were cal matter. What birts holds, which in need of shoes. Could Mike, the Master of all the King's horses, at-tend to that little matter? "Huh," said Mike, "Can't see yuh for the mud that's in me eye. Come

SCENE III

So it came to pass that ye two cap-tains were haled before the Lord High Chamberlain who spake an ent the beauties of friendship, the brotherhood of arms and the necessity for cooperation.

So the two captains buried their broadswords and abode together in amity. Selah!

In addition to being the possessor of a fine military record, Colonel Grier is distinguished for having taught one of the Blun-derbuss co-conductors practically all that he knows about Military Law and as the father of Jimmy Grier, the well known actor and man about town. town.

Our attention was recently called an item from the Columbus press tò to an item from the Countries press which read as follows: "Major and Mrs. Emily Leard have recently re-turned from their summer vacation." The Blunderbuss investigator reports that the Major Emily Leard referred to is not a member of the Salvation Army nor yet the commander of some hitherto unheralded "Battalion of Death." The item actually refers to the chief beneficiary of the Thanatop-the chief benchciary of the Inanatop-sis Club, whose name (spelled some-what differently) is so familiar to the readers of this scintilating column. Captain Claudius M. Easley, dis-tinguished rifleman, prominent mem-ber of the Advanced Class of 1927-28, and recent graduate of the two year and recent graduate of the two year course of the Command and General Staff School, has reported for duty with the Third Section, where his knowledge of how to command groups of armies will have full scope in teaching the nomenclature of the rifle.

SPORTS PAGE STUFF

Uplift Movement Needed

We regret that the boxers appearing at Benning, in line with the latest modern puglistic thought, seem to display low impulses. In fact they are getting positively foul-minded.

Babe Ruth's ability to hit home runs is all due to his amazing basal runs is all due to his amazing basal metabolism, according to Professor Pitkin of Columbia University in his book, "The Psychology of Achieve-ment." And he goes on to talk about the Babe eating ten meals a day and how his radiant heat is so intense that he compet mean own the lightert of he cannot wear even the lightest of underwear on the coldest day of winter.

We agree that the Bambino is quite a warm Baby. But we did not realize that going without underwear was the yal road to knocking home runs. And if the eating part of the Professor's theory is true, Sgt. Booth and Pvt. Frateschi of the Infantry School Detachment are well on their way to become the Home Run Kings of the future.

The Principle of Security

Pooch Derrick's young brother (83d F. A.) must consider that football skull practice is hard on the old bean. He turned out for it the other day in a head gear.

The Principles of Baseball

We can't hand Brooklyn much on knowledge of the IMMORTAL PRINCIPLES.

Wild Bill Hallahan, Cardinal southbay, claims a Brooklyn rooter tried to cripple him by slamming a taxi door on his right hand. (Violation of Principle of the Objective). And Flint Rhem told a yarn of how two armed men kidnapped him from a Brooklyn hotel and forced (yes, that was the word used) him to drink large quantities of liquor. Thereby violating the Principle of Economy of Force.

COMPANY OFFICERS' NOTES

Dear Eddie: Well, the Company Officers' course started Monday, Eddie. Of course, the members had been moving in down town for the last month, and the 2nd Lt's. in block 16 have completely re-built their quarters in the "Alley" as they affectionately call it. But the first taste of school life came on Mon-day. Here we learned what Uniform day. "A" day. Here we learned what Uniform "A" was, on looking over the class for the first time it seemed to include every uniform except pajamas and mother hubbards. Maj. Peabody, noting the confusion, made a few pertinent re-marks, and at the next formation the class had on uniform "A," which is plenty hot on a hot day.

After being assigned to platoons and squads the class was taken into the assembly hall and assigned seats and isued property. So far we have drawn everything in the way of military supplies but a 14-inch naval gun. Every member of the class was issued a locker and the school had very kindly made Évery arrangements to sell us locks, for the same, through the book shop. We were also told to buy a suit of unionalls from the book shop. Having been warned that 'they shrank badly most of the class now look like the funny man in the ad for Michelin tires.

Tuesday was a free day, most of it being spent in last minute moves, or golf. Wednesday the class assembled at 9:30 and marched to the theatre where the class was welcomed by the Commandant, and addressed by the Mayor of the neighboring city of Columbus, which city by the way is in a fair position to become the greatest mother-in-law to the army of any city in the world. Congressman Wright and Senator Harris, of Georgia, also addressed the class. From their remarks every-thing at Benning seems to be on the up and up. All in all it was a very hot opening exercise. Tomorrow we start to work, rifle hot opening exercise. Tomorrow we start to work, rifle marksmanship, under the hot blazing Georgia sun. You should see the boys from Plattsburg melt. Well, Eddie, looks like we would have a great year. We have two nationally known celeb-nition in the along Cilmentin and Mar rities in the class. Gilmartin and Mor-gan have been pointed out, and talked about in whispers for months. So far they have disappointed me as they have not done a thing to write about. But we shall watch them closely.

24TH N. C. O.'s ENTERTAIN CADETS

The Tuskegee team, band and other visitors were entertained Saturday evening after the game with a dance at the Post Gymnasium. It was a notable affair. At least 140 couples were on the floor at a time, making a truly colorful picture as the uniforms of sol-diers and cadets blended with the brilliant costumes of the ladies. The band played in the boxing ring located in the center of the big floor, the dancers circling the "squared circle" in their course about the hall. The N. C. O. club sponsored the entertainment.

BLACK PRIMO GETS A BOXING LESSON

Batton Lands Decision Over Mason

KING STOPS TIGER THOMPSON IN 6TH

Black Primo Carnera, Florida colored super-heavyweight battler, took an awful beating along with a classy boxing lesson at the hands of Seldom Heard, 24th Infantry heavyweight, in the fea-ture ten round bout of the fight show staged at the gymnasium, last Friday staged at the gymnashin, last Friday night. The big "Army Mule" never looked better as he weaved, bobbed, jabbed and hooked his way to big lead over Carn-era. Time and again the big fellow threw punches that would have felled an ox, but he could not have touched Heard with a handful of bird shot. During the entire ten rounds Primo landed just three solid punches. And in the mean time Heard was either beating a tation on his mid-section or bouncing rights and lefts off his granite chin. Heard was never able to send the big fellow to the canvas but in the closing rounds his drum-fire to the stomach caused Carnera to go into his shell and refuse to come out and fight. The semi-final between Cotton Bat-

The semi-final between Cotton Bat-ton, 24th Infantry middleweight and Holmes Mason, Chattanooga's "Praying Deacon," really stole the show. Both fighters gave a wonderful exhibition of boxing and punching, combined with speed and skill. Batton took nine of the ten rounds, dropping Mason for short counts on two occasions. It was Mason's first defeat in one year and was the biggest upset of the card.

Walloping Walt King, of Americus, stopped Tiger Thompson in the sixth round. This fight was a fierce affair with both fighters battered and bruised at the finish. Tiger had King on the verge of a knockout in the second round but was robbed by the bell. King took the lead in the third round and held it until Tiger went down under an over-hand right to the button. The preliminaries were fast affairs. Cufflink Curry, of Phenix City, and Blue Lawes, of the 24th Infantry, fought three fast rounds to a draw. Home James was given the fight in the first round when he was fouled by cross to the chin. Lightning Lige, of the 24th Infantry, stopped Phenix Palmer of Columbus in the opening scrap. Both boys threw plenty of leather with Lige connecting with the sleep-producer early in the second stanza second stanza.

Captain Barrett refereed the opening bouts and Captain J. J. Wilson refereed the main event. For actual fighting the card was one of the best of the season and the fans were highly pleased with the card.

THE MECHANISM OF THE FULL SWING

By Clarke

Most instructors, in my opinion, stress too much the importance of the hips rather than the importance of the hips rather than the swing, that is, in regard to the hitting power of the stroke. Per-sonally, I think the hips should be for-gotten, except to use them in the pivot or in both the back stroke and the follow through. Remember that relaxation is 90% of the game. Pivot with the hips relaxed, both on the back stroke and the follow through and I think they can be forgotten from then on.

My great point in the game is using the wrists correctly; power of the swing does not come through the body but is put in by the use of the wrists. One of our players came to me yester-day and said his game had fallen from the 80's to over a hundred, and then he asked me to look him over . Every ball he bit he said had a terrific book ball he hit, he said, had a terrific hook, and was very low regardless of the club he used. I had him hit three balls, then went to work on his grip and wrist action and he was cured. He said that for months he had never hit balls like the ones he hit after being corrected. Just such a little thing like that of not turning he wrists correctly on the back stroke will ruin any stroke, other-wise good. Turn the wrists correctly on the back stroke and nine out of ten strokes will be correct on the down stroke without the pupil having to think about the wrists at all.

Happy Hearts fall before better drilled and conditioned team

The Tuskegee Tiger returned to his lair in the red hills of Alabama last lair in the red hills of Alabama last Saturday evening and he carried the bloody scalp of the Happy Heart foot-ball team. The Tiger was wild and wooly, and before his snarling charge the Happy Heart line crumpled to pieces and was trampled underfoot as the striped jungle lord dashed on to the last white line. The final gun found the Tiger licking his bloody chops on the large end of a 42 to 0 score. It was just another story of a well-

It was just another story of a well-drilled, well conditioned team against a team that has not yet rounded into condition or found its stride. Fans at-tended the game Saturday, expecting to see another of the bitter fought gridiron duels that featured the Happy Heart-Tiger game last season, but from the opening play it was apparent that the 24th Infantrymen were in no condition to face the well-drilled Tiger outfit.

Indications now point to another championship for the Tuskegee Tigers for 1930. Their team this year at this early period, looks even faster and stronger than the colored football col-logistic advantages of 1920. legiate champions of 1929.

Score Early and Late The Tigers scored a touchdown in the first three minutes of play. Stevenson kicked off for Tuskegee. Tillis took the kick and was downed on his 30 yard line. Happy Heart plays broke against the Tuskegee line like a wave on a rocky shore. Heard punted and it was Tus-kegee's ball in midfield. Harrison, Tiger halfback, ripped off 22 yards on straight plays through the line. Shank-ling whipped around right end and was stopped at the five yard mark. Harrison plunged over for a touchdown. Stevenson booted the extra point but the team was penalized and the point did not count. With Stevenson, Harrison and Shank-ling ripping the Happy Heart line at will the Tigers scored a second touch-down and Stevenson kicked goal. The quarter ended with the Tigers leading 13 to 0.

The Tiger steam rollers put over two touchdowns in the second quarter. The entire first string was taken out and the reserve players went in. The remainder of the second period and the third were exercises. The second studies 26 to 0. scoreless. The score standing 26 to 0.

With seven minutes to play in the final quarter, the Tiger first string took the field and cut loose with a rush that carried them to a pair of touchdowns and a safety before the final gun. The score ended, Tuskegee 42, Happy Hearts 0

Children's School on this Post, conceived the idea of starting a Woman's Exchange, which, of course, is interesting to all the women of the garrison. The profits of which, after running expenses are deducted, to be devoted to aiding the school. This idea was launched at the end of the school year and plans have been going forward all summer.

The Exchange will be installed in a very bright new addition to the Book Shop some time in the early part of October. Mrs. Wood will have her lovely oriental things for sale there and there will be a great variety of hand-made things besides some delicious homemade cakes and candies and after dinner mints. Orders will be filled for these parties. Th Woman's Exchange should be of great benefit to the women of Fort Benning—to those whose ar-ticles will be sold and to purchasers whose needs they fill.

Mrs. Starnes will be in charge and will be glad to receive articles for sale at the Book Shop addition when it is ready for occupancy. This date will be announced later.

A commission of 20% will be charged on all sales. Mark all articles with the price asked by the owner and the percentage will be added to make the selling price.

American that has appeared. Although a copy of this book, eventually, must be in every comprehensive library, it will never be generally popular. Its appeal is to the intellect rather than to the emotions. It tells what actually happened, not how the author felt. The descriptions are written calmly and with restraint, by a man, who is obviously carefully trained as a reporter. We are led up and down the Western battle front, we make contact with English and Americans; we see advance and retreat, campaigns started and abandoned. Sometimes the reader may become indignant, but the author never shows that he was disturbed.

Mr. Brooks was doing press work in Paris when war broke. Special service for France occupied him until we entered the war. Then he tried to speed his participation by joining up with the American Army in France.

29TH BACK AT BENNING ALL SLICKED UP AGAIN AFTER MILES OF MUD

Rolling Kitchens Turn Out Hot Meals 10 Minutes After Getting Into Camp

The Twenty-ninth tonight rests within its beloved Quadrangle at Fort Benning. Last night the "old camping ground" at Harmony Church looked like it never looked before; tonight, the little old QM bunk looks better than that, for it is "Home, Sweet Home," and Buddy, How!

Everything in the old demonstration outfit is rosy. From the colonel on down to the most recent recruit, everything is now "hotsy-totsy."

Last week at this time, the regiment was struggling into a camp four miles west of Plains. The weather which greeted the footsore and weary was not of the kind calculated to raise their morale. From a sun which burned down on them with a fierce intensity, the regiment escaped only to run the gauntlet of rain, rain, and "Georgia mud" on a newly-graded road, which turned out to be as slippery as a cake of soap, and which in other places was either under construction or badly in need of repair. Having survived this burst of unfavorable weather, the elements relented and showered the mud-caked footsloggers with heavenly weather from this point on.

Saturday, after scraping the mud off the backs of their necks and from behind their ears, all hiking demonstrationists, including muleskinners, chauffeurs, what-nots and spare-parts, began to buzz around with Blitz, soap and water, gasoline and oil, and soon "shine 'em up" became the order of the day, for when they marched into Americus that day, none of the enthusiastic residents of that place, witnessing the parading demonstrationists, even dreamed of what the regiment had been through just a short while before.

just a short while before. Sunday was in part a day of rest. The cleansing of equipment, rolling stock, and animals was rapidly completed. The camp was policed from one end to the other. Individual equipment, all vehicles, all armanent, and all specialties were proudly displayed to the visitors, who crowded into camp from miles around. At 4:30 p. m., Brigadier General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, was received at the camp by a guard of honor, and a salute was fired by the Cannon Company. General King was agreeably surprised with the splendid condition of the regiment, and expressed his pleasure to the regimental commander, Colonel Duncan K. Major.

onel Duncan K. Major. An example of the splendid elasticity of the supply functions of the regiment came that day also, when the advance party of the billeting detail reported back with the news that the next camp site at Ellaville was under water. The supply officer, Capt. Neal W. Richmond, was on the way in a very few minutes, and after looking over a couple (Continued on page 2.)

IMPROVED 24th TEAM IS READY

Happy Hearts Hope for Victory Over Morris Brown Saturday

The Happy Heart team has had tough football breaks to date. The opening games were against tough teams, Tuskegee Institute and Alabama State College. The team met them while yet new and unhardened.

The hardest games are now past and the team is in greatly improved condition. Saturday's game against Morris Brown should see a different team representing the 24th. The team has worked faithfully every day and has corrected its principal faults and weak points. It has developed a more aggressive action and an improved method of tackling. The Happy Hearts will be on hand with their band, to cheer the team. The first kick-off is slated for 2:00 p. m. at Doughboy Stadium.

FORT BENNING MUNCHINGLY CRITICIZES BIG SERIES

The Infantry School officially continued operations during Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, but the real business of all not on guard, kitchen police or haranguing student officers consisted of sitting in the Gowdy Field stands, getting the returns from the Word's Series, and between mouthfuls of Tom's peanuts, explaining to long-suffering neighbors how Connie Mack and Gabby Street should have done something else. Returns were shown on the play ograph which indicated the course of the ball on each play.

Benning fight fans will enjoy their next fight show at the Benning Arena, Oct. 14th. After the long rest, fans are promised one of the best shows of the season by the Athletic Association.

At the present time the main event is in doubt, but it looks as if Walker (Cyclone) Smith will be chosen from Benning's first string leather pushers to meet the best light heavy that can be brought here.

Infect the best fight heavy that can be brought here. A few weeks ago, Capt. J. J. Wilson was angling for "Battling Bozo" to meet Smith. But since the Slagtown Freak held Maxie Rosenbloom to a draw a few nights ago, Bozo jumped to the top of the class and is now in the big money. The indicator at the present time points to Bob Godwin, Florida lightheavy, who has a reputation of being one of the best boys in the game. In fact Godwin gave Bozo one of the few lacings he ever took.

At the present time it is too early to make predictions but fans may rest assured that they will be served with a choice fight morsel after their long fast, on the next fight menu.

GENERAL BOWLEY, G-1 OF WAR DEPARTMENT, VISITS FORT BENNING

Returns to Washington After Two Days Spent at The Infantry School

Brigadier General Albert J. Bowley, assistant chief of staff, G-1, War Department General Staff, Washington, D. C., made a two-day visit to Fort Benning, September 29 and 30, for the purpose of conferring with Brigadier General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School, and Lieutenant Colonel George C. Marshall, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

General Bowley arrived from Washington at 10:55 a. m., Monday and was met at the union station in Columous by General King and his aide, Lieut. C. H. Royce.

Monday afternoon, General Bowley made an informal inspection of the various Infantry School activities.

During his visit here, General Bowley was the guest of the commandant, General King. General Bowley returned to Washington at 2:45 p. m. Tuesday.

ALABAMA TEAM DEFEATS 24TH

Happy Hearts However Show Improvement and Put Up Fight

Op right

For the second successive Saturday, the 24th Infantry football eleven bowed to a stronger team when The Alabama State Teachers College defeated me Happy Hearts 32 to 0.

Although defeated, the soldier team looked much better than it did against The Tuskegee Tigers, who trounced the 24th 42 to 0 in the opening game of the season. They showed more spirit and gave more fight. Their tackling was much improved also.

The Happy Hearts were outclassed from the second quarter for the remainder of the game. When the soldier line tightened, the teachers resorted to a passing attack which accounted for long gains and several of their scores.

tightened, the teachers resorted to a passing attack which accounted for long gains and several of their scores. Frazier, Fields and Brown were the outstanding players for the A.abama team. Heard led the backfield attack for the local boys. Sloan Williams, popular soldier player, suffered a fractured ankle in the game.

SLOW TROT-HO! There's one thing in The Infantry School

That all the students know,

That all the students know, They hear its ring and feel its sting, It follows them wher'er they go. Oh! they hear it every time they ride In paddocks, Boop opp a-doop Every step or so, some bird will crow: "Four feat from head to encum"

"Four feet from head to croup."

Oh! they hear the same words every day Till they know them all by heart, With legs a-chafe they know they're safe,

As long as they're four feet apart. nd when they climb those golden And stairs,

Thru the pearly gates they'll troop, Just as sure as hell, Saint Peter'll yell: "Four feet from head to croup!"

There has been so much rain during the past week that the Advanced Class believe they should be issued boats in-stead of horses. A member of the class from the Marines was heard praying for a rudder with which to steer his hay burner. However, the weather man fin-ally changed his mind and came through ally changed his mind and came through with sunshine the latter part of the week, thus enabling the class to resume its riding.

its riding. Last Sunday was such a beautiful day that it seemed that half the post and their families were out for a canter. Some enjoyed it so much they forgot all about lunch, both for themselves and for their horses. The hours for Pleas-ure Riding are from 7:00 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. If the horses are not returned to the stables by 11:30 a. m., it means that both the horse and the groom are late for their dinner, if not the rider, and we all like our chow too well to enjoy being late for it. The Pleasure Riding List is posted in the office of the Stable Commander at 1:00 p. m. each Wednesday. After that hour, hors-es may be reserved for the following each Wednesday. After that hour, hors-es may be reserved for the following Saturday or Sunday morning, by either going to the stables in person or by telephoning number 67. Horses must be walked for the first five minutes after hor the first five minutes five leaving the stables and for the last five minutes when returning. Riders should never indulge in racing as it is hard on the horses and may be dangerous for the riders. the riders.

Now is the time to get the full bene-fits of riding. Investigate trails and ter-rain in the most pleasant way possible. Give your wives a chance to get out and enjoy the autumn foliage. Show them future battle grounds; maybe they will appreciate your call for a bigger and better lunch pail when they see all of the hills to be climbed. Let the horse prove what a pleasant friend he can be.

Major Thompson is planning on placing the recent shipment of remounts up for sale soon. These horses are all three-year-old half-thoroughbreds with excel-lent dispositions. Now is the time for officers to purchase a good young horse and train it himself. Notice of the draw-ings and sale will be published in the Daily Bulletin.

Nowadays the army officer is station-ed all over the country and comes into contact with horsemen everywhere. With this comes the opportunity of joining various saddle clubs and exhibiting in many shows which formerly were not possible.

possible. Among sportsmen and sportswomen correct riding apparel is as rigidly ad-hered to as is the regulation for the uniform. All ladies interested in rid-ing would enjoy reading Ivy Madison's book, "Riding Astride for Girls," and Lida Fleitman's "Comments on Hacks and Hunters." Both of these books have interesting chapters on the correct have interesting chapters on the correct dress, but really deal withh the subject a little too formally for our general use. From time to time this column will make suggestions on riding clothes, not from the desire to dictate what to wear but rather to prevent needless expendi-ture for inappropriate clothing. For informal general use we would suggest a coat of brown tweed; a harmonizing shirt and tie, with a close-fitting nar-row-brimmed felt hat make a nice ap-pearance. The coat should be cut fairly high in front so as to protect the chest while riding. The bottom should be at the waist or else the coat is liable to the waist of else the coat is habe to bunch up in front. The skirts of the coat should not be so long that they flap in the breeze. Incidentally a long skirt rubs against the horse's flanks and collects sweat. To protect the cloth the coat skirts should be lined with oiled cilk or rubber a sheeting. At present silk or rubber a sheeting. At present the most popular breeches are made of the same material as officers' breeches. Bedford cord is believed to be a little too heavy and consequently the elas-tique cloth is more popular. Breeches must be carefully fitted to insure comfort while mounted as well as presenting a neat appearance. To wear with this a neat appearance. To wear with this brownish ensemble brown boots are usually worn. These should be well cut on military lines with a broad heel. Spurs are seldom worn by ladies, although they do give the boot a dressier look

The main thing in ladies' riding clothing is to avoid frills and fancy gadgets. By custom riding clothes should be as mannish as possible. To carry this further, the use of hair ribbons, rouge and similar feminine touches have no place in the paddock. The hair should be drawn back from the face and done up in back in as small and neat a knot as can be arranged.

To break the color of the ensemble, a man's white shirt with collar attached is both comfortable and neat The collar and sleeves should not be too large or long. Ladies often wear the white linen hunting stocks and are considered quite smart. Colored stocks do not go with formal clothes and their cut would hardly be appropriate with informal ones. When a stock is worn it should be neatly and properly tied and pinned with a gold pin of not too gaudy a type. Ladies often expend quite a bit of money on an evening dress to be worn a few times for a season or two and hesitate to buy a suitable riding outfit which will last for years and will always look well.

GALLERY RANGE REBUILT

Th 24th Infantry Gallery Range has been completely rebuilt. The range house has been replaced—this new con-struction being of pin slab of rustic type. The butts have been rebuilt on the same rustic pattern and offer a higher and safer front.

of alternate camp sites, made the nec-essary arrangements to camp the regi-ment in a hay field, which turned out to be the best camp-site during the entire hike.

Subsistance supplies for the regiment for a period of six days were purchased locally on the hike. It was found that prices compared favorably with those charged at the commissary, and in some cases, were actually below those of the commissary. All subsistance supplies were let out on bids to the lowest bid-der several days in advance of the arrival of the troops, and were on hand the day contracted for.

An ancient prejudice, fondly fostered by mess sergeants and cooks from the year 1, was overcome, firmly, once and for all; and that was that cooking in rolling kitchens on the march is an im-possibility. Kitchen personnel were giv-en the choice of conforming to the standard required, having a hot meal ready immediately upon arrival in camp, or being cited as the "worst-fed company" in the regiment. Strange to say, all companies from thence on could count on a hot meal ten minutes after arrival into camp.

Camps were made at Ellaville, Buena Vista and RJ Buena Vista-Cussetta road, on Monday, Tuesday and Wed-nesday nights, respectively. Original plans contemplated a three-day lay-over at McBride's Ford, but last-minute changes favored Harmony Church as the camp-site for Thursday night, rather than McBride's Ford.

The last seven miles in from Harmony Church were made in a blaze of glory, such as has not been witnessed in the old Demonstration Outfit in over a decade.

VOLLEY BALL TOURNAMENT

Arrangements are being made for a volley ball tournament among the 24th Infantry companies. Y. M. C. A. offi-cials are also interested in getting outside teams to play on the soldier sche-dule. A lively schedule of games is in prospect.

DRAMATIC CLUB PICKS SIX DATES Will Open With One-Act Plays FIRST PERFORMANCES OCTOBER 17-18

Six dates should be set aside during the coming school year by those inter-ested in seeing real theatrical perform-ences as a change (and we venture to ested in seeing real theatrical perform-ances as a change (and we venture to say a delightful one) from the excel-lent but mechanical talkies offered nightly by the post theater. These dates are those on which the Infantry School Dramatic Club will present for the ap-proval and enjoyment of the garrison its selected repettore for the coming year selected repertoire for the coming year.

To go into too much detail as to the plots of the plays to be presented would be to destroy that zest which all enjoy from experiencing the pleasurable un-known; so at this time only a brief foretaste of what is to be offered on the first dates, October 17-18, will be sketched. Three delightful and different types of one-act plays have been select-ed for the first presentation. These are: "So This is Paris Green" —a burlesque on the French Apache play—dir rected by Major Forrest Harding; "Two Crooks and a Lady"—directed by Mrs. Rachel Wood — a melodrama in which a paralytic old lady outwits two ruthless crooks: and "The Angel In-trudes," a satirical fantasy, under the direction of Mrs. Zola Freehoff.

The casting of the personnel for each play has been completed and rehearsals are under way. Time has not been available to gather and present informa-tion as to the personnel composing the casts but this will be published in later iscues issues.

During the World Series and the football games which will hold thou-sands enthralled this autumn; the bulk of the applause and enthusiasm will be given to the performances of the indi-vidual players. The same condition ob-tains in the plays presented by the Dramatic Club; the individual actors will receive their well-earned need of appreciation from the audiences and press for their hard work and resultpress for their hard work and result-ant fine portrayals of the parts they have taken. In the baseball or football game, or the play, we are apt to forget the manager, coach, or directors whose years of study and hard work has en-abled them to bring out to the best ad-vantage the genius of the individuals and to mould into a smooth-running, brilliant, team the sometimes tempera-mental material presented for their use. The directors just mentioned need no introduction, but for the benefit of the introduction, but for the benefit of the new comers to the garrison and our well wishers and supporters in Colum-bus, the following interesting records of past achievements and successes are past achi furnished:

Mrs. Zola Freehoff directed "Poor Aubrey" in 1929 and was the co-director of last season's outstanding success, "Captain Applejack."

Major Forrest Harding took the lead-ing role in "Captain Applejack" and di-rected "The Best Peopl,e" an amusing comedy presented last year.

Mrs. Rachel Wood has directed plays at Camp Kechuwa, Michigan, and at versity, Ohio. She has also organized and staged vaudeville and minstrel shows while traveling on commercial liners and army transports.

When the directors selected for the When the directors selected for the various plays are confronted with prob-lems that perplex them or seem unusual-ly difficult of solution they appeal to Mrs. Isobel Chance, the Dramatic Club Director. Mrs. Chance's wide experience and study especially fit her for the im-portant position that she holds. She has taken special courses in dramatic art the American Academy in New York at the American Academy in New York City, the University of California, and summer school courses at Notre Dame and Lehigh universities. She has been closely associated with dramatic clubs at this and other posts, both in lead-ing roles and as director.

The Dramatic Club wishes to extend a cordial invitation to non-members both of the garrison and the city of Colum-bus to avail themselves of the guest-ticket privilege whereby they may attend performances (except the pay show to be held in the late spring) for a nominal cost of fifty cents. There are no reserved seats, except that the first two rows are held for those who have an impediment in hearing.

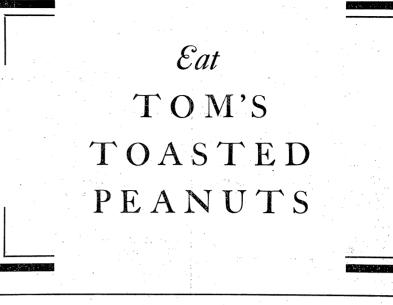

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

One afternoon this week Major Ross and staff cancelled their game of golf and awaited, with colors displayed, the heralded visit of two distinguished offi-cers who desired to inspect the area. Along toward evening it was discovered that the inspection party had entered the area via the back door, had looked over our plant and departed.

The football team, with Captain Gaston in charge, journeyed to Madison, Georgia, last Saturday and played the A. & M. College situated there. The team did very well, as usual. The score will be confided to any interested friends of the battalion on application.

Licutenant W. H. Bartlett returned to duty a few days ago from a leave of three months. It is good to see him in harness again. As soon as he has finished complaining about the heat, we will be pleased to hear about his vacational experiences. As a matter of fact since his return we have had the only cool weather of the season.

Lieutenant McConnell insists that he "still wants to go on leave." It seems that "Mack's" delay in availing himself of his well earned vacation can be ex-plained by the fact that about six months ago, in the course of his evoluwrapped himself in the skin of a "bear" instead of a "bull." (This information instead of a "bull." (This information is "not guaranteed but was gleaned from sources believed to be reliable.") We note by the local papers that our friends, the 29th Infantry, have left their palatial quarters and are appar-ently taking a little walk down the road towards Albany. A detailed account can be read in almost any paper. The Artillery battalion has lived under nearfield conditions for almost ten years and we are glad to see that our neighbors

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector DIPHTHERIA IMMUNIZATION

Anti-diphtheria campaigns of recent years have already produced a very not-able lowering of the diphtheria death rate in some communities.

However, despite this remarkable progress reported from these certain places where the disease is so success-fully fought, diphtheria as a cause of death in children between the ages of 3-9 still ranks first.

Many who survive it have weakened Many who survive it have weakened hearts or other physical defect. In the United States, 4,000 to 8,000 children each year die as the result of diphtheria. The number of children who survive with lasting disabilities can not be esti-mated. Science has given us a method by which diphtheria can be prevented and eradicated. The responsibility for the continued toll of child life from this disease depends on parents, teachers and the continued toll of child life from this disease depends on parents, teachers and community leaders. On parents espec-ially this responsibility rests. Diphtheria can not be eradicated if the use of toxin-antitoxin, which is used to produce immunity, is limited merely to school children. Every infant after the age of nine months is at the most favorable period for immunization. At tavorable period for immunization. At this age the child responds most readily to treatment. At this age also is the time when the child is most susceptible to diphtheria and the time when death from this disease is most likely to occur. Parents are therefore advised to have Parents are therefore advised to have their children immunized against diph-theria before the school age. This treatment is harmless. It does and should produce a temperature reaction. should produce a temperature reaction. This reaction is necessary to produce immunization. As a rule, the younger the child, the less the knockout from temperature. Practically all children under the age of five years are sus-ceptible to diphtheria. It is not nec-essary to give the Schick Test to such antitoxin treatment. The immunity pro-duced by this treatment may not be a lasting one. In some children, immunity lasts only for a few weeks. It is there-fore of the utmost importance to have the children tested by a Schick Test at least once each year. If this test be positive toxin-antitoxin should again be given. given.

ESSAY ON NOISE

The Infantry School News is in receipt of an unsigned communication Ine infantry School News is in receipt of an unsigned communication from an irate resident of our model military tenement, known as Block 23. He (or she) wants us to join in an anti-noise crusade—with particular reference to midnight blooming radios and the use of auto horns as door-bells. The writer also requests us to do what we can to stop "air minded Romeos from zooming over the chimney tops just as we get Junior off to dreamland." dreamland."

With its customary thoroughness, the Blunderbuss began its investiga-With its customary thoroughness, the Blunderbuss began its investiga-tion by looking up the authorities on noise. We consulted Schopenhauer and discovered him to be almost as violent on the subject as our nerve wracked correspondent. He speaks feelingly of the great ideas that have gone haywire because of noise, with the resulting inestimable loss to man-kind. His special aversions in this line are the "Cackling of women, the crying of babies, and the cracking of whips." If the philocopher were living in Block 23 under the conditions implied crying of babies, and the cracking of whips." If the philosopher were living in Block 23 under the conditions implied by our correspondent, it is certain that his reputation as the Great Pessi-mist of all times would be even greater than it is. Also, his list of the most objectionable noises would have to be revised to include radios, auto-mobile horns and low-flying aircraft. Whether or not he would have let the "Cackling of women and the crying of babies" stand is open to dis-pute, but we suspect that he would, inasmuch as his name has become almost a synonym for women hater and since he advocated the extinction of the human race by the simple and effective device of universal refusal to have offspring. to have offspring.

to have offspring. The flat dwellers of Block 23 have our fullest sympathy but, frankly, we haven't any constructive relief program to offer. It is possible that some substitute could be devised for the violent tooting of an auto horn to inform the lord or lady of the upstairs apartment that the carriage awaits without, but we believe that a good loud radio is an essential piece of the defence mechanism of every well equipped household in the Block. We understand that cautious tenants advise turning on the radio when every of family secret is discussed. And when it comes to drowning out We understand that cautious tenants advise turning on the family when ever a family secret is discussed. And when it comes to drowning out the reverberations of a first class domestic war, there is nothing like a stentorian loud speaker. In other words, there can be no restriction as to hours for use of radios, since it is usually after returning home from a social function that one's wife has something to say about not finessing the queen or launches a major offensive over her husband's conduct at the dance.

As for imposing any restrictions on an air-minded Romeo, who ever heard of such an outrage?

We may get it later, but at the present writing it is being operated under the Benign pat-ronage of Captain Bill Chapman, the well-known Book Shop magnate. THE INFANTRY SCHOOL HUNT

By M. F. H. The latest word from Fort Leaven-worth tells of what a fine pack they have and of the appointment of Capt. Mallan as Assistant Master of Fox Hounds. We are all delighted to learn of this appointment and wish our former master every bit of good luck with the new hunt.

Benning and Leavenworth seem to be doing a bit of trading of hunt officials as Capt. Neal C. Johnson is now an inhabitant of Benning after serving as a Whipper-in of the Leavenworth Hunt. We hope that the change of climate will but increase his interest in the hounds and that he will soon become an "oldtimer" here.

We awoke early Sunday morning to find it a day cool enough to wear a coat, and what a relief it was. Taking advantage of the change of temperature, the Hunt staff took the Drag Pack out for a bit of road work and a couple of casts. The manner in which the hounds behaved made the Huntsman just as proud as a peacock. He cantered along the trails in the midst of a running pack that looked fine. So well did he have them in hand that there was but little for the new Whippers in to do but canter alongside.

On every hand members are inquir-ing for the date of the first hunt meeting. If, and so much depends upon that little word, if the weather is cool enough we should have our first meeting on Sunday, October 19. This will be al-most a month since the Advanced Class started equitation and over two weeks after the ladies' class begins. All of them should by then be well shaken down in the saddle and ready for a short run with the hounds.

The hunts will start promptly at the advertised hour from the place of asadvertised hour from the place of as-sembly. All members going on the hunt are cautioned to be on time. Coffee and doughnuts are served at the place of assembly prior to the start. It's a wise hunter who arrives in time to get his, or her, coffee. Especially is this so of or her, conee. Especially is this so of the cat hunts as it is usually several hours before breakfast. Of course those on a reducing diet may not want this extra food, but it's been noticed that every one usually takes at least one cup of the Java.

The Hunt List (red) is posted at the Steward's desk in the lobby of the Officers' Club at noon on the Thursday preceding the Sunday hunt and will be removed at 4:00 p. m. on Friday. Sign-ning up on this list obligates paying the groom fee of 25 cents and the cater-

Nation's heart is right

Kansas City Chortles

The Blunderbuss is capable of out-ranging even the famous German gun which bombarded Paris, a perusal of Kansas City newspapers discloses. The Kansas City Times publishes the adventures of Sheriff Tuttle and Major Harding, and evinces that warm glow of contentment that fills the heart of the proletarlat when some of the right-thinking element rag the gendarmes a bit (particularly that species which wears an M. P. on its arm).

The article follows:

The heart of every World War vet-eran will be warmed by this welcome news of reprisals on the military police. Regardless of Captain Tuttle's personal character, which possibly is of the most amiable, an "M. P." is an "M. P." and deserves the Spanish inquisition. It also will occur to these veterans that it was just like an "M. P." to do what "Sheriff" Tuttle did upon Major Harding's return to the home balliwick. He arranged with the Columbus, Ga., police to have Harding arrested and lodged in the city bastile on suspicion of impersonating an officer until Tuttle arrived to identify him.—Kansas City Times."

MINIATURE GOLF COURSE OF 24TH INFANTRY OPENS

The 24th Infantry Miniature Golf Course opened Wednesday at 3:00 p.m. The band was present and played during the opening hour. A large crowd of interested fans were on hand and things moved with a bang from the start. Many of the regimental officers had already tried out the course and rated it very highly for all-around at-tractiveness. No one as yet has attained for the government of a constituent for par for the course, and competition for that distinction is high. A jack-pot is on hand for all who desire to try for

Say you saw it in The News.

Dear Eddie:

Dear Eddie: Here we are, Eddie, in the second week of the Company Officers' course at the Infantry School, and the members of the class are still walking around each other a little stiff legged like a couple of strange dogs. However, there is a slight break in the atmosphere, the thaw is well under way and by the end of next week the class should get down to the serious purpose of the school and begin to enjoy themselves. So far there has been none of the practical joking that I heard so much about, as being the best part of the course, but Isaacs and a few of the more jovial members of the class have started to wise crack sotto voice at every slip in instruction. Oh yes, we have had considerable instruction, already. One course by Maj. Lange, in Methods of Instruction, has provided the class with a gauge by which to judge all other instructors. The class has not been slow to take advantage of this. No member of the class missed the point in Maj. Lange's oration in which he stated "Of course, if you were giving instruction outdoors you would not place the class where they were sitting on sand burrs, nor would you let the sun shine in their eyes." So far for every lecture in rifle marksmanship we have sat on s and burrs, and have had the sun in our eyes. Perhaps there should be better cooperation in the school. Maj. Lange gave a fine course of lectures. His gestures are generally subdued and excel-lent except in his first lecture where he had a chart on the wall and had the had a chart on the wall and had the various inscriptions on the chart cov-ered with papers held in place with thumb tacks. Upon arriving at that point in his lecture at which he wished to expose a certain part of the chart to the earnest gaze of the students, the Maj. would seize the end of the paper in a firm grasp between the thumb and forefinger of his strong right hand and forefinger of his strong right hand and then with a most prodigious gesture tear the paper from the chart and spray tear the paper from the chart and spray the first rows of the class with thumb tacks. Later on when he had the plat-form well sprinkled with tacks he ex-perienced some difficulty in removing several of them from the soles of his boots where they had become lodged during his perambulations about the platform in fact he spont cheut fire platform. In fact, he spent about five minutes industriously scraping the sole of one boot over the edge of the plat-form in an endeavour to remove a most reluctant tack.

Col. Stayer with his course on hygiene and sanitation has provided excellent weapons for the married men in stating that every member of the class should relax and rest for at least thirty minutes a day. However his advocacy of the morning cold shower does not seem to have met with a very hot reseem to have met with a very hot re-ception. In fact, I might say that it has been given the cold shoulder in many cases.

Well, Eddie, we have encountered the first grippe of the year and in spite of much mumbling and grumbling seem to have survived.

We have started to fire on the range but so far have not done enough firing to start the alibi artists to work. More of this next week. Will have to sign off now and get ready for the first work in military sketching, which of course at present appears to be the only bugaboo on the schedule.

"WEARY" WILLIE PTOMEY BATTLES TO DECISION OVER CARDWELL AT McPHERSON

Outslugging and outboxing his op-ponent from beginning to end, Weary Willie Ptomey, Benning middleweight, defeated Marshall Cardwell, LaGrange flash, at the Fort McPherson fight arena last Thursday night in the feature ten-round bout of the show.

Blocking every punch Cardwell threw at him with a glove or elbow, Ptomey never gave the LaGrange fighter a moments rest but kept boring in from bell to bell with Cardwell on the defenone" began to batter Cardwell on the deren-sive. In the closing round the "Weary One" began to batter Cardwell with an assortment of body punches that had him groggy and holding on in the final round.

Trained down to a fighting edge, Ptomey proved to be an altogether different fighter from the battler that dropped a decision to Cardwell in LaGrange a few months ago. Out of shape and untrained, Ptomey was given a bad beating by Cardwell in their first meeting, but last Thursday night the "Weary One" was in shape and showed Cardwell every assortment of jab and hook known to fightdom.

Grumpy Gordy came back into the spotlight of Benning fightdom when he fought his way to a decision over Ghost Ghastly in a fierce four rounder. Ghastly and Grumpy will probably be rematched at Benning on the next card.

CHILDREN'S SCHOOL TO BE HELD OCTOBER 10TH

The Children's School Benefit Dance, one of the feature social events of the season, will be held at the Fort Benning gymnasium on the night of October 10th.

Besides providing funds that go to the improvement of the children's school of Fort Benning, the affair is a source of pleasure to the hundreds of guests who attend.

The spacious hall of the gymnasium is being prepared for the occasion and when completed will be a veritable fairy land. Colored spangles and streamers will decorate the walls and ceilings, colored lights will nestle among the decorations to blend their mellow glow with the mixture of colors.

Owing to the capacity of the hall, there will be dances to please every one. Those who do not care for the round dance may join in doing the figures of the old "Virginia Reel." Two orches-tras will be kept busy until the hour of midnight when ghost and witches come back from the land of shadows and send the merry makers scurrying homeward.

In addition to the young folks of Fort Benning, invitations have been forward-ed to a host of Columbus young ladies who have gladly consented to attend, but who do not want to be disappointed by the scarcity of dancing partners as has been the case on former occasions.

There will be no alibi for any of the Benning youngsters not attending. Tick-ets to the dance will be issued through the orderly rooms and with each ticket goes an evening of pleasure for the owner and a better school for Benning's youngsters.

MAYOR OF AMERICUS, GA., PRAISES 29TH INFANTRY

A letter very much appreciated by the officers and men of the regiment was the one quoted below received by Col. Duncan K. Major from the Mayor of Americus. The letter is as follows: JAMES A. FORT Attorney and Counselor at Law Americus Conresion

October 1, 1930. Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr.,

Coloner Duncan K. Major, Jr., Commanding 29th Infantry, Fort Benning, Georgia. My dear Colonel Major: Permit me to say that the 29th In-fantry is a fine and disciplined organi-zation. Your regiment spent a day and a half in the City of Americus and the men had the run of the town yet there was not a single instance of improper or unsoldierly conduct on the part of your men. The bearing and behavior of the men was such that it has attracted the most favorable attention and com-ment, and I express the wishes of the people of Americus when I say that I hope the 29th Infantry will visit us again. With kindest regards, I am Sir

FREIBURG PASSION PLAY TO OPEN 4-DAY RUN IN COLUMBUS OCT. 15

Surrounded by the traditions of cen-turies, since the first presentation of the historic drama was given in Freiburg Baden, Germany, the ancestors of Adolf Fassnacht, the present owner and Chris-tus, have contributed generously to the list of pairogene dependence in the aris list of principal characters in the orig-

The name of Fassnacht has held the leading roles of the play for seven gen-erations, one of the reasons why these humble and reverent players, trained since early childhood in all of the traditions and superstitions of the centuries attach and superstitions of the centuries attach so much importance to this presentation. It is so regulated by the council of Freiburg, Baden, Germany, that as soon as the players do not continue the play with the reverence and importance due it they lose the right of continuing it.

In 1264, the inhabitants of Freiburg, (Baden) Germany, first presented the Passion Play. They have given it per-iodically in Freiburg since that time, as well as in nearly every city in Europe. Regardless of religion, sect, or creed, this dynamic story's appeal is as wide as human nature. The Columbus engagement that begins

There is considerable dissatisfaction in the Advanced Class over what is regarded as the deceit practiced by the school authorities in the first course. They were warned of and expected a series of conferences and an examina-tion in map reading. Instead, though they got the conferences, the course closed with a superb demonstration of the strategic retreat, staged by Cap-tain Stonewall Jackson, the instructor. Now that the smoke of battle has cleared away and the U's and near-U's are on their way, Captain Jackson calmly returns, probably after picking his way through the contour-strewn wilds of Bouton Hill.

Tentative organization of the Fort Benning Debating Club was effected in the class on Monday. This club is not now, nor does it intend to become affiliated with the Thanatopsis and other similar semi-charitable organizations, al-though a tentative offer of a local chapter has been received from the leading beneficiary of the Thanatopsis society. It's just too bad for Captain Mike Halloran that the prayers of the wicked avail nothing, for the countless bless-ings that have been called down upon his head by members of the advanced class for his assiduous attention to the duty of keeping them posted during the equitation class on the standing of the day's world series game. Jones has request-ed that the announcement be made that applications for membership in the Prince of Wales Club, one of the old-est (but not most exclusive) of Benning's organizations, are of no avail. Captain Jones' own remarkable achievethe current school year was almost en-tirely a matter of luck (not good). He was obeying instructions to lean for-ward when going down a slide, and he did so not wisely, but too well. If one is to attain this coveted (stet) honor one will be informed of it at the proper time.

In addition to having the honor (if any) of being the first and only first lieutenant to be detailed for the ad-vanced class, Lieutenant Frank H. Cur-tis received an even more signal honor on Monday when he was chosen temp-orary secretary of the Debating Society. He discharged his duties, to use his own words, with aplomb and savoir faire—at least, it must have been some-thing like that thing like that.

On Tuesday the school renewed the attack on the already helpless students. This time Capt. Stonewall Jackson was the Referee, Coach and Master of Ceremonies combined. He explained the many beauties of sketching to the class, and invited them into the cool, brisk air, to listen to the birds sing, and the brooks babble, and at the same time and, to list to the bit is sing, and the brooks babble, and at the same time make an area sketch, showing hills and valleys, roads and brooks. Now I saw the hills, and the valleys, but, while there may have been birds singing and brooks babbling, I was unable to hear them because of the strong and earnest exhortations offered up in the name of sketching. You know, Eddie, from the language used I might have believed that I was on a golf course, if I had not been so busy myself talking to a clinometer that registered hills where my eyes could see a valley. I don't know why but I don't think that this course in sketching is very popular with the class. For after all, as one officer so aptly put it after losing his clinom-eter, going up the wrong road for a so apply put it after losing his clinom-eter, going up the wrong road for a mile, and figuring all his elevations in percent when his clinometer read de-grees, "What in the —— are the Engin-ora for "" eers for?'

What a rude awakening it was when the instructor announced, "Gentle-men, get your equipment and make a road sketch of the road from the corner Just one more thing and I must close. The class initiated Chief Heap Much Danceum Horner into the sacred tribe road sketch of the road from the corner of the 29th Infantry Barracks to the Airplane hangars." As they used to say in the dime novels, "consternation reigned supreme." Most of the class after great deliberation was able to get together enough of the various tools necessary to start the sketch. How-ever the Foreign Legion and the Marine Corns were thrown for a decided loss of the Watch-Your Back-Pockets. Chief Horner put on one of the best dances ever put on, on the shores of the Upatoi. Having read history, or perhaps True Stories, Chief Horner ended his dance in his B. V. D.'s, and right on the range, too. It was a hot dance, and don't doubt that. When the fire began ever the Foreign Legion and the Marine Corps were thrown for a decided loss at this stage of the game and were to burn the seat of his underclothes-

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector INSECTICIDES

Practically all germicidal agents are poisonous than chloroform. of value in killing insects. Petroleum, kerosene or co

Insects differ markedly in their pow er to resist these agents. Those with hard body coverings (bed-bug), cock-roach) are more difficult to kill than dian dian are more difficult to kill than dian dian are more difficult to kill than a film which destroys larvæ and pupæ flies, fleas, and mosquitoes.

Some insecticides are used in liquid form or in solution; some in powder;

form or in solution; some in powder; some as a gas; others are mixed with food to act as a poison. Sulphur—One of the most valuable insecticides. It is used either as a gas— Sulphur dioxide, or in its powder form. The gas is destructive to all forms of life. It will kill all kinds of vermin and insects but can not be depended and insects but can not be depended upon to kill their eggs. The odds against its use are: that it has feeble penetrating power, that it requires expensive apparatus and much labor; that there is some risk of fire; that it tarnishes metals, rots fabrics, and bleaches color. The powder (flowers of sulphur) is not effective against bedbugs, fleas, ants and roaches. Its best use is against certain ticks, mites and rust. For the treatment of the human it is used in the form of an ointment; for the animal it is used in combination with lime and water as a dip. For plants it is used as a spray.

It does not destroy eggs, so treatment must be repeated at 10 day intervals.

Formaldehyde is a feeble insecticide. Pyrethrum is much used. It is not poisonous to man. It is cheap; unfortuntely its action is feeble. It stuns rather in kills. It is not a dependable in-ticide. It is necessary to sweep up burn insects after its use.

Phenol-camphor: forms dense fumes en heated, stuns mosquitoes, is of lative high cost. It is used as a subitute for sulphur.

Hydrocyanic acid gas: extremely pois-pous to all forms of life. It is not ife to use in the household.

Carbon bisulphid is a very powerful secticide but is dangerous to use be-use it is highly inflammable and exosive. It quickly kills all insects and so rats, mice and squirrels. It is a lorless liquid, more inflammable than er and evaporates quickly. Rooms which it is used must be thoroughly red before human use to prevent isoning. Carbon tetrachlorid may be used in place of the bisulphid. It is not inbe place of the bisulphid. It is not in-pmable nor explosive, but is more ment General Staff.

Petroleum, kerosene or coal oil—about s valuable a remedy as we have for a film which destroys larvæ and pupæ of the mosquito and also the female when she lays her eggs. Petroleum, either as the oil or an emulsion, is use-ful by direct application, or as a spray against roaches, bedbugs, fleas, lice and other vermin.

A home-made "Flytox" can be made as follows: Pyrethrum powder, half a pound; Kerosene, one gallon—mix; let stand 48 to 72 hours; filter, then add one ounce of oil pennyroyal. Gasoline, naptha and benzine are much used in delousing campaigns.

Arsenic: The arsenic compounds have replaced all other substances as a food poison for biting insects. The two most commonly used are arsenate of lead and paris green. They are applied either as a spray, or a dusting powder, or as a poisoned bait. It must be remembered that arsenic is very poisonous. The common use of these poisonous compounds in spraying vegetables, fruit and berries must never be forgotten. Always wash thoroughly before serving as a food.

Boiling hot water and live steam wherever they can be used are the best and safest agents to kill insects.

WAR COLLEGE THESIS PUBLISHED

An interesting article in the latest is-An interesting article in the latest is-sue of the Field Artillery Journal is one entitled "Infantry Artillery Liai-son in Combat," by Major Lloyd E. Jones, F. A., formerly commanding offi-cer of the 1st Battalion, 83d F. A. The article is a reprint of the thesis written by Major Jones while a stu-dent at the Army War College last year. The subject is one which is of par-dent at the Army War College last year. The subject is one which is of par-ticular interest to all combat officers. Major Jones is extraordinarily well qualified to write on the subject, which he has done in a thorough and inter-esting manner. He was the Artillery instructor at the Infantry School for the three year period ending in June, 1927 after which he commanded the 1st 1927, after which he commanded the 1st Battalion, 83d F. A., at this station for two years. At the present time Major Jones is a member of the War Depart-

Conducted by E. F. H. and R. G. T.

SMALL WARS

A marauding expedition, which had for its objective the sacking of a bee tree is the outstanding historical event of the week. Major Omar Bradley, a leading exponent of the doctrine of fright-fulness, commanded the raiding force which consisted of Major Bennie Ferris, the Tactician, and Sergeant Tweed, the keeper of the Imperial Bloodhounds. All of these gentlemen are better known in military than in apiarian circles.

Great secrecy was maintained prior to the expedition and still greater subsequent to its return. Late Monday morning the Blunderbuss reporter interviewed an officer alleged to be Major Ferris and who did indeed bear some remote resemblance to the debonair expert on Convoys. The Major admitted that he had functioned as the assault wave in the attack on the apian citadel and that he had been repulsed with heavy casualties. Sergeant Tweed, who constituted the reserve, was reported to be convalescing and Generalissimmo Bradley was doing as well as could be expected.

In spite of the reviews of Monday the old Infantry Spirit could not be downed and on Tuesday the three musketeers renewed the campaign and brought it to a successful conclusion.

The booty amounted to ten pounds of more or less edible wild honey -about one pound per sting.

the porch all winter. It's good for you, healthy and "Yes, sir," said Mamie. But the last few days, it has been a bit cooler. By Monday the Spartan determination had weakened. "Mamie, you can take my bed upstairs now."

Major Williams Puts Out

The many friends of Major Roger M. F. H. Williams are congratulating him for his recent elevation to the exalted grade of field officer. Huntsman Williams' long merited promotion was the cause of general rejoicing among the officers of the 1st Section who got in on the cigars which the new Major passed out a lavishness hardly warranted by the increased pay. Mamie and Moon however have lost all interest in Army promotion legis-lation. All that the two popular stenographers of the 1st Section got out of it was a five cent Hershey bar.

Maimie expressed herself to the ef-fect that it is high time that someone in the 1st Section endowed a Stenographers' Chewing Gum Fund, thus relieving herself and Moon of the nec-essity of resorting to gold digging tactics in order to keep supplied.

Mulhall Goes Literary

The versatile Mulhall, whose phrase making proclivities have been given some prominence in this column, has suddenly become fired with a consum-ing ambition to write. Like the tiger who has once tasted human blood as the shy and retiring member of the Dramatic Club, who appears just once in the middle of the third act and successfully delivers himself of a single line, "My lord, the carriage waits," the damage is done. The tiger becomes a confirmed maneater and the stage but-ler begins to have visions of Broadway and Hollywood. Mulhall's first effusion appears in another part of this paper. We es-pecially commend it to those faithful readers of "The Blunderbuss' who are beginning to think that our stuff is getting too tame.

certain amount of persuasion by mem-bers of the editorial staff of The News.

It should be understood once for all that failure on the part of certain tennis players to enter will automatic-ally result in a little polite black-mail in The Blunderbuss column. It is a vital matter that sufficient of the lesser tennis lights enroll, so that the Blunderbuss racqueteers will have an outside chance of beating someone.

Money Doesn't Mean Everything But Everything Means Money

For feeding one soldier for one day -36 cents plus. That's the way it stands at present. What with lower-ing cost of food the so-called 50-cent ration right now has shrunk to a perfect 36.

Imagine the wail that would go up from a civilian housekeeper at being allowed 36 cents a day per month for chow, and being expected to feed the empty caverns in the style to which Benning units have become accustomed. But what we would like to know is this. Here are being the Out

"MIDNIGHT MYSTERY," set against the background of an isolated island off the surf-beaten Maine coast in the black of night, with a terrific storm raging outside, creates an atmosphere of nerve-tingling mystery that is guaranteed to thrill the most j ad ed theatre-goer. It describes the tragic consequences of a "dummy" murder that takes on a gruesome realism, and the takes on a gruesome realism, and the solving of the mystery by the quick wit of a girl who is a member of a house party on this island. You'll surely like this exciting picture with Betty Comp-son and Hugh Trevor. "Voice of Hollywood." "Slow Beau." prazy Kat. Universal Talking News No. 78.

SATURDAY OCT. 11

"CAPTAIN OF THE GUARD" is one of the most appealing romances ever told. It is the picture that brings to you the golden voice of John Boles, whom you will see in his strongest and most colorful role. See him as the dashing Captain who falls in love with the daughter of the lowly innkeeper. See Laura LaPlante as the meek little girl who becomes the fiery center of a nation gone mad.

MULHALL MUSINGS HE GRUNTS AND GROWLS

All you old Benningites remember me. face about the M. P.'s. They give you I was the official joker here for years a red ticket for tipping your hat or I was the onlear joker here for years until Coolidge ordered the Army to make its own soap in order to save money. The competition in the joke field then became so great that I re-tired from the amusement field to lead the quiet life of a bachelor with three children.

My tame life has led me to sarcasm My tame life has led me to sarcasm and made me so sour that even my best friends advise listerine and life buoy soap. Of course I blame it on Benning and its dullness. Nothing seems to be run right, and if it is, it is right at the wrong time. Every time I go swim-ming the sun goes down; when I want to ride, the horses are all sick or have to ride, the horses are all sick or have been sent out to eat up the grass be-cause the lawn mower is busted. Sure I am a sorehead! Maybe I have been rolled about and aged in the wood too long. Anyway I decided to roam forth in the civilian sphere and see how the in the civinan sphere and see how the rest of the world starves and amuses itself. But first I must tell you of my Benning grunts. The post has provided everything that a human could desire. Even a millionaire couldn't live in a better Paradise because he would be worried about his money, and we of the army never have anything like that to worry about.

Here are a few things that give me prickly heat when I think of them. Take the Post Exchange for example. Take the Post Exchange for example Major McCants, the bandit, sells iish on Tuesdays instead of Fridays. You could really go fishing yourself and catch them cheaper than he sells them. The Glee Club picks a singer I like and when I get used to her Colonel Reed gets poison ivy and shifts to a loud speaker in an opera cloak. Maybe he read in a book that a cerise opera cloak read in a book that a cerise opera cloak was necessary to every operetta. The Dramatic Club charges me $1.50 for five plays and when they put on a play where the lines of the actresses are better than the spoken ones, the business manager gives me a rear seat. Col. Kingman was given a seat in the second It beats h- how life takes such funny twists.

Then there is my irritation caused by the gallant huntsmen. You know this "a hunting we will go" business of being an aristocrat on $200 per. The scene is great,—horses and dogs dash-ing over the greensward with tails moving in the air. You can easily distin-guish the huntsmen by their red coats and their tails not waving in the air be-cause they don't ride that fast. Great sport, but it's funny how a red coat can hake a hot volunteer fireman out of a make a not volunteer inferian out of a plumber, and a high hat can take the grin away from a laughing hyena. Im griped on the hunt because last year the huntsmen cliqued together and highhatted everyone who did not own a red all the bum horses and made the rt funnier than the huntsmen, hudtogether at the hunt breakfast and e too cowed to even sing. While we on the subject of horses, I am reon the subject of horses, I am re-ided of the story about the equitation cer who got sick and they called in veterinary. If that procedure was lowed at parties of the horsey crowd, medical gang at the hospital would re more rest than they now get. That's enough for the horsey people, let's proceed to autos,—and you can-say auto without getting red in the a red ticket for tipping your hat or driving with one hand. A poor Loot, doing necking calisthenics with his best girl, was given a flock of tickets and had to furnish the Provo with a list of his best telephone numbers. Our present Provo won't require that as he says he has a good list of his own. Last Xmas they gave me,—Mulhall, the renowned, —a red ticket every day and I thought they were Xmas cards and filed them. Then Policeman Black, the cheap yegg, wrote me a letter and told me to bring them back to his office as he had more friends he wanted to give them to. This auto business can't be passed up with-out a crack at the PX. They sell gas over there at 11 and 15c a gallon and it ruined a fifty-dollar Ford. I know it's the fault of the gas because the man who sold me the car told me so. They wash and grease your car for about a dollar and you could do it yourself at the expense of a dry cleaning bill and three hours of labor. No wonder it costs a lot of money to live at Benning.

The Infantry School News with its irritating ink. I don't approve of knocking people or things. They always take a crack at our explorer McCunniff because he got lost in a swamp, yet I know for a fact that one of the Blunderfuss twins got lost going to his own home. He went in three wrong houses before he landed where he wanted to go, and even then he wasn't in his own home. (Ed. Note-There must be some mistake about this.)

We must not forget the ladies, The hand that rocks the cradle surely can throw stones at a lot of glass houses. Did you ever hear them at the corner grocery? There is a lot comes off those shelves that Sam never knew was there, and once dished out, just try and shelve it again. They tell how the post is run while they await their turn for a hunk of round steak, and you can get all the "who's who and what for" from the litwho's who and what for" from the lit-tile lady who thinks she should be Com-mandant because she made a father out of a Lieutenant P. D. Q. Yes, she who rocks the cradle rules the roost but that don't gather the eggs. The men still run the post proper, even if they don't have anything to say about making calls run the post proper, even if they don't have anything to say about making calls and dinner parties. While we are on this social subject, let's take a crack at the post dances, slated for dancing at nine and which never get started 'till ten or later. If you don't eat, you are too sleepy to dance when they do start. I blame this on the women, but a dance would look funny without a few of them around. Personally, I don't care much about the dancing but I do like to see the field officers waddling about with unhappy faces and sweating like they make us sweat when we follow training regulations instead of verbal instructions.

Now you know what I think of this place, so get an earful of what hap-pened to me on leave. When I crossed the bridge on my way to freedom I turned and thumbed my nose at the guardian angels and everything in gen-post roads are, many roads outside are worse. The only way to get the car out was to catch and harness a pair of mules who were playing tag in a near-by field. I tried every trick taught by the "bit and spur" men of the Upatoi, from biding the harmony behind we bed hiding the harness behind my back like an M. P. with a quart, on up to being a horse's neck and making a noise like an oat. Nothing worked. I finally used man-power and rope instead of mule power. The other day when I reported my failure with the mules to Major Thompson he said the difficulty was that mules had not been to The Infantry School. He says they have reports of such failures all the time, but if they on sending animals here they will keep soon have them all educated. I didn't know then whether he meant horses or I didn't men.

men. Let's proceed with the trip. Instead of 11c and 15c per gallon for gas, I paid 25 cents. The natives told me that the six cents was a tax for building roads, but they sure never built roads near where I bought gasoline. In less than a hundred miles I realized Benning had a few grad waits had a few good points.

While we are on this auto business and gas, did you ever get stuck with your car on a New York city bridge? The cop treats you worse than an M. P. ever could. He'll walk up to you and say, "God! What are you hanging around here for?" You reply, "My car broke," and he'll say, "Well, next time you try to bring the twelve apostles to act as pall hearers.—move on," and you act as pall bearers,—move on," and you pay $5.00 to be towed over and $3.00 for and end with the comment, "Me for the Upatoi Bridge and the PX and the M. P.'s." a man to fix a battery or something, and end with the comment, "Me for

If you read this far you read my com-ment on the Dramatic Club. Here is a revised estimate. I paid $6.60 to see only one rotten show written by a Greek banana peddler in an age before actors acted. He had a hunch that acting was just a flock of women running around in nightgowns and yelling about sleep ing alone. The play wasn't natural or sensible, yet people explained my dis-like for it by my lack of background. I sat in front of a sewer disposal plant an hour thinking over the show and still came to the conclusion that it was rot-ten and also that our dramatic shows are better and certainly worth for each play the $1.50 they charge for a season's ticket. One must go out into the world to learn things.

ADMISSION TO THEATRE AND SEATING ARRANGEMENTS

The Executive Committee of the Infantry School Dramatic Club announces the following policies with respect to admission tickets and seating arrangements at the regular club performances during the season 1930-31.

Of the six productions to be presented Of the six productions to be presented during the season the first five are regu-lar productions. The policies announced herein apply to these only. Information regarding admission tickets and seating arrangements for the last (special) pro-duction scheduled for May 1 and 2, 1931, will be published at a later date.

Admission to all regular performances will be by membership ticket or single admission ticket. All club members are issued membership cards which include five detachable coupons, each of which admits a member to a regular performance. Members are urged to bring their tea on Monday membership cards to all regular per-formances. Ticket takers at the theatre Woman's Club.

door will admit no one without a ticket. In case a member fails to bring his ticket he will be required to apply at the box office for admission. Upon iden-tification as a member he will be issued a temporary member' ticket. This same rule will apply to members who wish to attend both performances of any one production. At the second performance they may apply at the box office for temporary member's ticket. Persons who are not members of the

Infantry School Dramatic Club m a y gain admission to any regular perform-ance by single admission tickets which may be purchased at the box office on performance night. (The usual price is fifty cents.)

In general, seats will not be reserved In general, seats will not be reserved at regular performances. Exceptions to this are seats for the players' families and club members who have a marked impediment in hearing. Applications for reservations of this kind should be sent to the business manager, Major Detride Academic Department prior to Patrick, Academic Department, prior to 4:00 p. m. on the date of the performance.

THE INFANTRY SCHOOL WOMAN'S CLUB OPENING TEA TO BE HELD OCT. 20

Of outstanding interest to the ladies of the garrison is the announcement of the opening tea of the Infantry School Woman's Club which will be held Mon-day, October 20th from 3 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the Polo Club and to which every lady of the command is cordially invited.

This tea is an annual affair and officially opens the club year. Many Co-lumbus and Fort Benning ladies are present and it is a splendid opportunity for the new-comers to meet them and for the old members to re-new friendships. The club itself is a worth while, intel lectual and social organization. It holds its meetings the first and third Mondays of each month and at these meetings an of each month and at these meetings an interesting program is presented, fol-lowed by a delightful tea hour. On alternate Mondays, the Literary Section, a branch of the main club, meets. At these meetings, the time is devoted to the study of the outstanding books of the year and of the lives of the authors of these books authors of these books.

Mrs. Daniel Berry, the president of the club, extends a welcome to all the new members of the garrison and a cordial invitation to all the ladies of the maning to be present at the oppring garrison to be present at the opening tea on Monday, October 20th, and to become members of the Infantry School

Fighting Jack McDonald of London, ticket office. Grumpy Gordy, the one England, will be the first foreign fighter to show his wares at Fort Benning, when he mixes with Walker "Cyclone" Smith, gordy and Louie are two of the best pride of the army light heavies in the known athletes in Fort Benning. Their fortune heat of Theorem and the first fights of the best for the base of the base best for the base of the base base of the base for the base of the base base base of the base base of the base base base of the base base of the base base base of the base base base of the base of the base base of the base base base of the bas England, will be the first foreign fighter to show his wares at Fort Benning, when he mixes with Walker "Cyclone" Smith, pride of the army light heavies in the feature bout of Tuesday night's fight show at the Benning arena. McDonald is a far different type of fighter from the famous Phalling Phil Scott, who left such an awful taste in the mouth of American fightdom. McDonald has fought the best light heavies in the country, including two battles with Young W. L. Stribling. He has re-cently turned in victories over Alec Simms, Tony Tedesco, Billy Bryant and Simms, Tony Tedesco, Billy Bryant and Styles Attaway. According to advance reports McDonald is a slashing fighter that carries dynamite in either hand. Walker "Clclone" Smith needs no in-troduction. He is one of the outstandtroduction. He is one of the outstand-ing light heavies of the south and one of the hardest hitters in his weight. Only one southern light heavy is rated above Smith and that is Battling Bozo of Birmingham. No doubt fans will later see a show down between Smith and Bozo for the southern title. The Cyclone is in great form for Tuesday and Bozo for the southern title. The Cyclone is in great form for Tuesday night's battle. He has been a roaring terror to his sparring mates while train-ing and his mates will breathe a sigh of relief when the mittens are laid away Sunday afternoon.

Ptomey Will Show in Semifinal

The eight round semifinal is just another bout over the eight round route. Weary Willie Ptomey, holder of the a r m y middleweight championship, is fighting Carl Knowles, one of the fastngnung Carl Knowles, one of the fast-est, hardest hitting youngsters in the game. Ptomey needs no introduction to Benning Fans. If he is back in his old time form this Knowles person is in for a very rough evening. (And the Ben-ning fighters agree that "Weary Willie" is in top shape.) Knowles has a record that any fighter

Knowles has a record that any fighter would well be proud of. Forty-eight fights in the professional ring, thirtyfour he has won by knockouts, six on decisions, one on a foul, six draws and was kayoed once himself. Bill Cather stopped Knowles in three rounds but in a return match Knowles turned the tables and stopped Cathers in the third round. From advance dope it looks as if the eight round scrap is going to be little short of a hurricane. Cotton Batton, sensational H a p p y Heart middleweight, will meet K. O. Tom, Atlanta colored fighter in the six round bout. Little is known of K. O. Tom, except that he is coming here with the avowed intention of stopping the rise of Batton among the colored mid-dleweights. To date, Batton has put the skids under Texas Tanner, Henry John-son and Holmes Mason. All of these forthere were alegaed as headlinger until fighters were classed as headliners until they wilted before Batton's smashing punches. This will be Batton's eighth professional fight, and he is out to make it his fifth kayo. The preliminary and is a tract with fight will be one of the high lights of the card and both will be ably supthe card and both will be ably sup-ported from the ringside. Phenix Four-roux, the left handed Artilleryman, will meet Ritzy Wright of the Demonstra-tion regiment. For actual slugging and haymakers, these boys will produce tons. Ching Johnson will meet a giant in Lulu Laurence of Atlanta. Lulu is just six feet and six inches in height. Weight unknown. Punch when given proper leverage is estimated at two tons. Let's go.

MORRIS BROWN DEFEATS 24TH

Morris Brown Institute of Atlanta, took a bitterly fought gridiron duel from the Happy Hearts of the 24th In-fantry at the Doughboy Stadium last Saturday afternoon, 13 to 7. A bad second quarter gave the visitors their two touchdowns and the game. The second half of the game saw the Happy Hearts on the offensive and driving, but Hearts on the offensive and driving, but unable to overcome the visitors' lead.

In the final quarter the Happy Hearts opened up a counter attack that put the visitors on the defensive. White at right end and Tillis at left half for the Happy Hearts, tore through the opposing line and broke up plays before they were well under way. Early in the fourth quarter, Seldom Heard passed 40 yards to Collins, who sidesteeped across the to Collins, who sidesteeped across the goal line for a touchdown. Williams kicked goal from placement.

Six points behind, the Happy Hearts forced the visitors in the shadow of their own goal post on two occasions, but failed each time. Heard hurled a pass 35 yards to Baugh, who was downed on the 10-yard strip. The visitors held for downs and kicked out of danger. With Harris, Heard and Williams battering The preliminary card is a treat with-in itself. Fans, who know, will look over the program and hurry to the when the final whistle blew.

Company "E" We are all back from the practice march safe and sound.

Co. E was considered very efficient on this 122-mile hike. Our longest march on the hike was from this side of Buena Vista to Harmony Church, about 18 miles on one cup of coffee. Some of our boys were unfortunate and were overcome by heat on the second day out, but they're O. K. now and good for many more miles. We all had a very good time at the various little towns that we visited. The people always ex-tended a warm welcome to us.

If you see Corp. Dutton and Sgt. H. Matthews, ask them how far it is from this side of Buena Vista to Harmony Church.

Several of the men were caught running for their mess kits on the first meal served in Fort Benning after their return from the hike. Gets to be a habit after a while.

THREE ARTS LEAGUE

Fort Benning patrons, who are inter-ested in good music, dancing and drama, and who want to hear the artists in person are missing a real treat if they fail to join "The Three Arts League," of Columbus, Georgia, this year. A campaign for members, who are to form the real so for a perment conform the nucleus of a permanent con-cert audience, was launched September 25th, and already the results have been very gratifying, according to Mrs. Eva Friedlaender, treasurer of the Finance Committee.

Much splendid assistance has been given "The Three Arts League" by sev-eral Fort Benning organizations, such as the Woman's Club, the Glee Club and the Dramatic Club, in calling to the at-tention of Fort Benning patrons the splendid program sponsored by this splendid program sponsored by league. Mrs. Daniel G. Their cam-paign closes October 11th. After that date, no more members will be accepted." Mrs. Ernest S. Barker, Benning's well-known soprano and leading lady in several Glee Club productions says, "I haven't missed being a member of the league since coming to Benning several years ago, and I wouldn't miss it for the world this year."

A brief description of the program for this year might not be out of place. It will include the following attractions: Barrere Little Symphony with George Barrere in solo numbers.

Mrs. Rose was nominated and elected treasurer of the Association. Capt. Owens, the recreation officer, explained the many problems involved in running the Fort Benning School and the plans for the building of the new school house which are under way. It is expected that the various activities outlined for the present year will greatly augment the funds now available for the new school. It is proavailable for the new school. It is pro-posed to have several benefit dances, baseball games and entertainments by Miss Dozier's dancing pupils. At present it is "Lyman to Thompson to Arnold"—Ly-man for strategy, Thompson for team play and horses, and Arnold for stick work. Sunday may see this turned into "three to two to one to goal."

In line with the policy of developing fast polo, it was decided to start the actual play as early as possible, conditioning horses and players gradually, until the games are speeded up to mid-season form. While Sunday's games will be slow polo, they will be slow only in comparison with pre-tournament polo of last year.

COLONEL MARSHALL IS MARRIED IN BALTIMORE: A SURPRISE TO BENNING

Mrs. Katherine Tupper Brown Bride of Assistant Commandant

GENERAL AND MRS. KING ENTERTAIN FOR COUPLE

Colonel and Mrs. Marshall returned to Fort Benning Thursday after-noon and in the evening General and Mrs. Campbell King held a reception for the officers and ladies of the gar-rison at the Commandant's quarters in their honor.

On Tuesday morning Colonel Marshall put over a most striking demonstration of the application of the Principle of Surprise, perfect staff work, a delicate adjustment of time and space factors, and subset the other military principles adjustment of time and space factors, and all of the other military principles, when he left the post for Baltimore, Maryland at the same hour that the Enquirer-Sun, containing an announce-ment of his forthcoming marriage, ap-peared upon the garrison breakfast tables. We now know that a few mem-hore of the corrigon wave in on the bers of the garrison were in on the secret, but for once there was no leak -even the usually highly effective Grapevine Intelligence Service failed to function.

The announcement that appeared in the Columbus paper was as follows: A wedding which holds an unusual degree of interest for Fort Benning and Columbus took place on Wednesday afternoon in Baltimore, Md., when Mrs. Katherine Tupper Brown of that city and Col. George C. Marshall, Jr., assist-

Mrs. Brown is well known in Colum-bus social circles and has many friend-ships here, the outgrowth of her school associations in Virginia, which were strengthened by frequent visits to Co-lumbus. She has often visited Mrs. W. B. Blanchard Last spring she was her R. Blanchard. Last spring she was her guest for a week at the time of the presentation by the Little Theatre of "The Creaking Chair," the London suc-cess of Alleen Tupper, Mrs. Brown's sister.

SERVICE COMPANY, 24TH INFANTRY, IS COMMENDED

THE INFANTRY SCHOOL Office of the Assistant Commandant Fort Benning, Georgia October 6, 1930.

Commanding Officer,

24th Infantry, Fort Benning, Georgia. My dear Colonel Caffey:

My dear Colonel Caffey: 1 desire to commend the officers and men of the Service Company, 24th In-fantry, for their work in the Infantry School Stables during the past summer. I wish especially to commend Corporal Thomas Simmons, the carpenter in charge of construction. During the summer a new wave and

During the summer a new wagon shed and a tea house were built. To secure material for this construction it was necessary to wreck several old buildings and salvage the useable lumber. This work, in addition to the regular duty of caring for the horses at the Infantry School Stables, required long hours and steady application. I understand that, in addition to the above, time was found to qualify a very high percentage of the company on the range and to win the regimental baseball championship.

The officers and men of this company have set a fine example of efficiency for the garrison. They have made a definite contribution to the standards of the Academic Department.

Faithfully yours, G. C. MARSHALL, Jr., Assistant Commandant. LWC:SR 330.13 1st Ind. (10-6-30)

The one big feature that appeals to the novice is that there is a big chance of winning a prize, even if regular tourna-ment players are playing. All players are free to choose their own handicaps, so as to place their score anywhere be-tween 51 and 61. The very good player must take a plus handicap; while the novice player, of course, takes a minus handicap. Then in the blind bogey drawing, it might be anyone who may win.

The results of the tournament were as follows: For the lowest number of putts, first prize goes to Mrs. H. W. Brimmer, while second prize goes to Mrs. C. L. Steel; in the blind bogey, first prize goes to Mrs. M. Stayer, while second prize goes to Mrs. J. E. Ray-mond; and Mrs. T. Strayer tied with Mrs. V. G. Huskea for medalist, both with a score of 47.

The next tournament will be a flag tournament and will begin promptly at

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector HOW TO KEEP FROM HAVING COLDS

This, the beginning of the house clean-1 rooms. A temperature of 68 degrees F. ing-up season, with its artificial heat and poor ventilation, is also the beginning of the season for common colds.

Colds, influenza and pneumonia are more or less distinct conditions. They are caused or made worse by some things. They may be prevented to some extent.

There are two kinds of common colds -the cold which you catch from other people, and the cold which you take even though no one around you has one. People who have adenoids, or diseased tonsils, or are run down are likely to have either kind.

The cold which you catch is caused by a germ which enters your nose or throat from the air where an infected person talks, coughs, or sneezes. may catch cold by using an unwashed glass, spoon or fork, which has been used by someone with a cold. The germs may be on your hands because you touched something which had been handled by the person with a cold.

People who take cold without catching it from others are most often those with poor circulation, or who have a local infection of ears, nose or throat. They may be exposed to dust or other irritants. They very likely do not live according to certain rules of cleanliness and hygiene.

To keep from taking colds:— (1), Stay away from people with olds. Don't be part of a crowd in oorly ventilated rooms or meeting colds. poorly places.

Keep your body built up. Eat (2)nourishing food; sleep eight hours; ex-ercise in sunshine every day; drink six glasses of water daily.

(3). Train your skin to stand changes in temperature. The morning cold bath, or at least a chest and neck sponge fol-lowed by a brisk rub is an excellent thing.

Of late the writer has been exceedingly pained to note several foul, das-tardly and wholly uncalled for attacks on Block Twenty-three.

The burden of the complaints has been noise, lack of privacy, late and loud radios et cetera ad infinitum.

The persons who complain are without doubt sincere, but how lacking they must be in the finer sensibilities!

Who but one so unendowed would who but one so unencoved would have classed the glad cries of little ones gamboling (be sure to see the "o") in the innocence of the morning of their lives as releas of their lives as noise?

Who, but one completely bereft of the gregarious instinct would have called the close neighborliness and intimate chumminess lack of privacy? None but one devoid of all artistic appreciation would chafe at the glorious abundance of art from the many radios, and none but the most inconsiderate would, if he could not appre-ciate these things himself, begrudge them to those who could. If in Twenty-three, you had spent hours of joy and hours of sorrow; hours of gladness and hours of sad-ness; if life had brought brightness and darkness to you there; would you want to leave it, even for a nice brick quarters with many rooms, lots of space and all that that implies?

You bet your life you would! (Ed. ote. This anonymous communication note. came through the mails. Evidently from an inmate, eh Watson!

FASHION NOTE

The subject of "What the Well Dressed Horsewoman Will Wear" is The subject of "What the Well Dressed Horsewoman Will Wear" is receiving a lot of attention in local equestrian circles. Now that the pink coat for Ladies Whipper In or Lady Whippers In on Lady Whipper Ins, whichever the correct form may be, has been authorized by the American Hunt Association and sanctioned by the Methodist Board of Prohibition and Public Morals, Captain Jared Wood, the arbiter elegantarium of the Paddocks, has taken up the matter of modish and appropriate apparel for ladies riding classes. Reference: Principle of Security

The Chief of the Great Fourth Section on Friday night seized an opportunity to demonstrate to the Tacticians of the First Section how the Immortal and Immutable Principles may be applied to Social Life; and thereby assured himself of a reputation for alertness and receptivity of doctrine.

It appears that Colonel Stilwell threw a dinner and ball for the chivalry and beauty of his aggregation of philatelists, fox and bee hunters. To this he invited the chiefs of the other sections that they might gaze and marvel that so much might be encompassed by so few. (?). The hour of the attack was designated as 7:00 P. M. with the Polo Club as the line of departure.

With the arrival of H-hour the victuals had been disposed in battle With the arrival of H-hour the victuals had been disposed in battle array, but Major E. Forrest Harding, confidently relied upon as a shock unit and spear-head of the attack was AWOL. Could it be that finally worn down by the leering jibes of recent Leavenworth arrivals as to his ignorance in maneuvering groups of armies, his self-assurance had become shaken and like Achilles he cowered in sullen anger in his tent? The attack was postponed until 7:30 but at that time even the airy persiflage of Colonel Stilwell was unable to cope with the ravening horde and the assault was delivered with consumate success. Promptly at 9:30 appeared our hero under the gentle guidance of his wife.

The ensuing critique disclosed the fact that although the maid's "day off" was being celebrated in the Harding menage, the astute Chief of the Fourth Section had insisted that he be fed a hot meal (prior to the dinner); thereby carrying out the tenets of the Second Section and dem-onstrating how the applicatory system may be used in illustrating the

In second line would come the Woman's Club, The Rod and Gun Club, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, The Cubs and the Brownies, and the several subdivisions of the Officers Club, which pertain to sports, such as the Tennis Fiends, the Golf Nuts, the Polo Aristocrats, the Gun Cranks, etc. Philanthropic enterprises like the fam-

Quarters and Better Halves

Benning's Great Moving Day (or Days) approacheth. It seems that a general shifting of Lares and Penates is predicted by the Oracles. Our situ-ation differs from the civil life setup which is well decided by the adage "It is cheaper to move than to pay rent." With us, the rent we pay is automatic and is based, not on the guarters we have but on those we quarters we have, but on those we ought to have. Therefore, given some brand new quarters which cost no more, what could be more natural than a revolv-

"Now if Col. Wells and Col. Stray-er don't move, that will put us just one down and maybe— "Well John says he wouldn't move if they gave him the General's house.

We've moved six times in seven years and he's fed up." "Well_my dear, perhaps you're right. Those garages are going to be a fright to get into and out of, and I don't know about the cellars draining." The tactics called for by the house situation are involved. Those viewing the matter from the distant aloofness of officers who have no chance to get the new quarters seem to think the quarters fair enough. Those who may move if they wish are more critical. Those who may move if a few officers just above them decide not to move are faced with a dilemma. They must knock the new quarters just enough to deter a few senior officers from moving hereinto, but not enough to make themselves seem vacillating when they jump at the chance to take one if it comes their way.

Elsewhere in this issue we herald the cementing of the bonds of brother-hood of the members of the Fox-Shooters Association.

It seems that the Casus Belli or Overt Act which precipitated this re-bellion from the bonds of custom was a conversation by Major Roger M. F. H. Williams.

Encountering Explorer Chance, the well-known disciple of Nimrod and Ike Walton, Major Williams inquired as to his plans for a certain time. "I think I'll go hunting," was the reply. "Hunting? Hunting—Why I never knew you-oh! now I understand. You mean shooting, of course." Two hours later the object of Maj. Williams' erudite criticism was sound-ing the clarion call to brother officers to rally under the slogan: "Riding to hounds is going to the dogs."

Major Williams, interviewed in regard to the affair by a representative of The Blunderbuss, announced: I am not worried by this so-called competition but if any of Bob Chance's gangsters assassinate a fox the gentlemen and ladies of the Infantry School Hunt will cuss him off of their social register and proclaim him an outlaw."

Pressing the Attack

A glimpse of possible developments of Warfare of the Future is afforded by dispatches from Brazil. We see there Captain Juarez Tazora, Com-manding the Northern Revolutionary Armies, breaking into print and writ-ing his own publicity.

Apart from the innovation of hav-Apart from the innovation of hav-ing Captains command armies, this would seem to establish the principle that "The pen is mightier than the sword." The erudite Fourth Section is prepared to subscribe to this doc-trine but the rough and unlettered field soldiers of the First Section might demur might demur. However Captain Tazora's army has been slightly outclaimed to date, so the Army Commander may have felt it necessary to inspire his shock troops by personal example. The dispatches are silent concerning the insignia worn by the revolutionary Army Commander. We suggest crossed typewriters.

Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.

Weighed down by his new cares and responsibilities, and two shiny new gold leaves adorning his shoul-ders, Major Roger (M.F.H.) Williams on his very first day as a Field Offi-cer, caused the Advanced Class to chortle with ill-concealed glee and the Infantry School Hunt to hang its head in shame. It happened thus, Major Williams

It happened thus: Major Williams, resplendent in new insignia, was rid-ing behind the advanced class. Suddenly a dirt-besmirched figure, far different from the dashing Major, cantered wildly to the head of the column. The unknown looked as if column. The unknown looked as if he had been doing a very efficient job of wallowing in the corrals.

Somehow there was a vague resem-blance to a familiar figure. Yes, but— no, that was impossible. Roger Wil-liams could not have fallen off his horse. Still-

As suspicion became certainty and obstinate doubt yielded to the unmis-takeable evidence, Major Williams offered his alibi:

"My horse fell. Look at the mud on his nose." This gallant effort might have re-trieved the situation, but unfortunately for the Major, several officers (whose veracity is beyond question) (mose veracity is beyond question) immediately offered gratuitous testi-mony that the Major had been seen furtively throwing mud at his own mount."

Beginning last Monday morning, the Howard Bus line began handling the delivery of mail between the Benning postoffice and the main office in Columbus.

With the morning mail being sent down on the 10:45 o'clock bus, letters mailed at Fort Benning will get away from Columbus on the noon train and arrive at their destination several hours arrive at their destination several hours earlier than previously. Local letters are now distributed in the evening mail at Columbus. Before this change letters mailed at Fort Benning in the morning left Columbus on the evening trains and local mail was not distributed until the following morning. From Columbus, parcels mailed at the post office by twelve o'clock arrive at Benning in the one-thirty distribution. This is a big help to Columbus mer-chants and Benning shoppers. Many Fort Benning residents buy parcels in Columbus during the morning and re-

"Two Crooks and a Lady," which will be the first of the three plays presented October 17th and 18th, directed by Rachel Wood, has been described in last week's issue.

The second presentation of the evening is Floyd Dell's charming satirical fantasy, "The Angel Intrudes," directed by Mrs. Zola Freehoff. Captain W. B. Tuttle, who plays the part of Jimmie Pendleton, needs no introduction to the Fort Benning garri-son, but for those newcomers who know him only as the dispenser of red trafficfame as an actor might almost be said to girdle the globe, for it runs from Pek-ing, China, to the Chattahoochee. His greatest role is that of Henry, the chauffeur, in "The Best People," a part which he played before the ex-Emperor of China and repeated last year at Fort Benning.

"Anna Belle" is played by Margaret Sladen, who will be remembered for her clever and charming portrayal of "Poppy" in "Captain Applejack" last year. Mrs. Sladen brings to her part valuable experience and technique gain-ed from her work with the Easton Players of Easton, Eastern Sho', Mary-land land.

"The Angel," who is Major Paul C. Every year the Infantry School Dramatic Club uncovers a few shy, retiring, and hither-to respectable army officers, and makes matines idols of them Maior Harding matinee idols of them. Major Harding, the director of "So This is Paris Green," believes that he has such a find in Donald Brann. He states that he first be-came suspicious of Lieutenant Brann's latent talent for the drama when he heard him recite "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star" at a Sunday School picnic. Lieutenant Brann is a member of the Company Officers' Class and takes the part of Bobo.

GROWING FOX NUISANCE; THREATENS BENNING HOMES

Gun Club to Cooperate With Hunt Club

By Foxy Grandpa In riding (not on a horse, or even on a mule) around the country side the writer of this article has received num-erous and bitter complaints from the farmers of the depredations committed by foxes that are laired on the Fort Benning reservation. For several years the Hunt Club has nobly attempt-ed to reduce this nuisance, and have spent, it is felt, a totally disproportionate amount of money, time, and effort to the results obtained. The members of the Hunt Club have arisen early in the morning, and followed the trail of wily Reynard to the melodious baying of the faithful hounds, and still no ap-preciable reduction in the tribe Urycon cinereoargentatus has been accomplished. This condition is affecting not only the local farmers, but the patient and long-suffering husbands (non-riders) of lady whips and members of the Hunt. The lack of the wife's cheerful presence at the Sunday morning breakfast table has created a condition that demands drastic and immediate action.

Moreover, in the light of modern ef-ficiency as expounded by The Infantry School, fox hunting in its present form is totally ineffective, archaic and, so far, absolutely impervious to change. The fact that for over a thousand years this sport has not progressed one jot or tittle has of late caused wonder and consternation among the more en-lightened and progressive sportsmen of the post.

Four years ago (this is hearsay only) the Hunt Club caught an old, tottering purblind fox. Since that time not a single fox has been exterminated. It is no longer safe for our children to is no longer safe for our children to roam afield in search of nuts—they are only too apt to find the hunt riding madly hither and yon. In the interest of greater efficiency and with the hope of saving the little that is left of army homelife, a Fox Shooting Club is being organized under the auspices of the Fort Benning Gun Club. The following organization has been tentatively decided on: First Section: The Christie Tank, armed with the 37 mm, shooting a scat-ter load, will be tolerated. The master of the shoot will conduct the hunt from

of the shoot will conduct the hunt from this vehicle.

Second Section: Fort Benning Puddle Jumpers; machine guns will be mounted on radiators. The Department of Ex-periment is helping to devise a suitable mount.

Third Section: Mounted on old and reliable mules; weapon, shot guns. The rather involved tactics of this provisional organization are being work-ed out by the First Section. Road ed out by the First Section. Road spaces are also being figured as it is expected that the F. S. C. will occupy a unique and prominent place in the a unique Pageant.

The uniform will be coveralls as a protest against the age-old delusion that foxes can only be exterminated efficiently by persons garbed in red coats. No organization is complete without a slogan, the Fox Shooters Club has adopted this inspiring sentiment: "A Brush for Every Member."

THE REAL WAR A True History of the World War

By B. H. Liddell Hart The present volume, within the modest limit of 500 pages, affords what is un-doubtedly the best and most reliable di-gest of the war that has yet been pub-lished. The reader may, perhaps, expect orme accession disclosures: there is in lished. The reader may, perhaps, expect some sensation disclosures; there is, in fact, nothing spectacular of this sort in the book. But it has the rare virtue of providing material with which to form a reliable verdict, and the author has, most wisely and courageously refrained from committing the common fault of official publications, unwillingness to criticize failure because the leader who was responsible for the failure is still living. living.

Chapter I deals with "The Origins of the War," Chapter II with "The Op-posing Forces and Plans," and following chapters deal with each super the posing rorces and Flans," and following chapters deal with each year of the war in succession. The events of each year are related in general outline, and each "outline" chapter is followed by a series "scenes," in which the more important operations are described. The story of the landing on Galli-poli makes sad reading, and the failure poin makes sad reading, and the failure to follow up God-given opportunities is almost unbelievable. If, as we believe, the lesson of the Dardanelles and the need for the fullest co-operation be-tween Navy and Army has not yet been fully taken to heart, this book will help immeasurably to drive these lessons home. Throughout all this difficult per-iod the brain-nower and percention of ione. Incoughout an tris difficult per-iod the brain-power and perception of one man stands out pre-eminently, viz.: Sir Maurice Hankey. co-ordination. An interesting sidelight is thrown on Passchendæle. "The legend has been fostered that these ill-famed 'swamps of Passchndæele' were a piece of ill-luck Passchndæele' were a piece of ill-luck due to the heavy rain, a natural and therefore unavoidable hindrance that could not be foreseen. In reality, be-fore the battle began, a memorandum was sent by Tank Corps Headquarters to General Headquarters pointing out that if the Ypres area and its drainage were destroyed by bombardment, the battlefield would become a swamp. This memorandum was the result of informa-tion from the Belgian Ponts et Chaustion from the Belgian Ponts et Chaussees, and local investigation—though it would seem that such vital facts might would seem that such vital facts might have been known and appreciated long before . . . In the disregard of this warning is epitomized the main and in-evitable cause of the barren results of the 'Passchendæle offensive.'" Capt. By Donald Barr Chidsey The biography of the greatest Brit-ish general who has ever lived should at all times be noteworthy. Coming from a foreign source it is always en-titled to respect. Mr. Chidsey, with the enthusiasm of his race, and his twenty-eight years, loves his subject. As all good biographers should, he had ob-viously lived and felt with the great Duke of Marlborough long before he put pen to paper, otherwise he could never have produced what he modestly calls "the portrait of a conquerer" such vivid and fascinating colours. Let it be said at once that Mr. Chidsey's life of Marlborough is good. It is written with sympathy, with origin-ality and with wit. It is assured of a place in Marlborough bibliography. That it is hardly history in the official bio-graphical sense of the word is all to the good. To the pleasure of the reader, but scarcely to the benefit of the student, historical accuracy is too frequently sacrificed for American slickness of bhrase, and his continued references to 'Jack Churchill," as though the Duke of Marlborough was his old college chum, is irritating. And why must the King of France who enjoyed the rather Ring of France who enjoyed the latter euphonious name of Louis be perpetu-ally referred to as the "Sun King." Still, when the last page is reached one forgives the author his undue pert-

It was Jack and Sarah Churchill, the strangest couple in the world, still as much in love with each other as on the day they were married." —Reviewed by Baring Pemberton.

Dear Eddie:

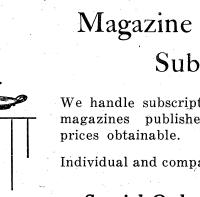

In my last letter, I told you that we were shooting for record with the rifle. Well, we have finished that, and there is not a member of the class that is not completely satisfied. Now don't mistake me, what I mean is satisfied to be fin-ished; but with the results of the shootished; but with the results of the shoot-ing I have yet to find a single officer who is satisfied. I will qualify that statement for the one exception, Whist-ling Stuart. Stuart was credited with a ricotchet 2, via phone, some 5 minutes after he had fired his last rang, giving him a grand total of 241. As for the him a grand total of 241. rest of the class, honestly Eddie, I have heard what I thought was first-class rest of the Class, honestly Eddle, I have heard what I thought was first-class gripeing in my time, but nothing to com-pare with what went on after the com-pletion of the range firing. Take my own case, first, I lost a chance to make expert by shooting a 33 at 600 slow, then on the last range I whifted sharp-shooter by making a 22 at 500 rapid. Now there must be something wrong in this, you know you can't shoot like that and expect to get anywhere. And take the sad, sad case of Smiling E d di e Walsh. He had tough luck all the way through, he used the wrong windage, fired on the wrong target (a perfect bull's eye too, what a howl he raised when the next shot on his own target was a three), used somebody else's rifie at one range, broke the second clip at rapid fire, in fact, as he said himself, he pulled every recruit trick going except rapid fire, in fact, as he said himself, he pulled every recruit trick going except when acting as scorer to enter the score in the wrong place. 'Tain't right, 'tain't right. And look at what happened to the big shots of the class like Gunn, Kammerer, Gilbreth, Epps, Morgan, Gil-martin Isaacs, Brady and Daniel Boone. Pitiful I calls it. Why some of them only got 320, and some of them only got 250. Of course, you must realize that they

Of course, you must realize that they do things differently here at the school. This being the fountain head of all Infantry knowledge they know just how, when, and what to do. Now back in the regiment, we would never think of trying to check in a deivice think of trying to shoot in a driving rain, but here—well, I guess it would never do to confess that a little thing like rain could interfere with the teachings of the Deformer School New School New School Infantry School. Now such tactics may be all right for the school, but to take a bunch of officers that have not been here long enough to be imbued with the spir-it of The Infantry School, and expect them to shoot their best in a cloud-burst, long enough to be imbued with the spir-it of The Infantry School, and expect them to shoot their best in a cloud-burst, in my opinion is asking a lot. Now I know how feeble the written word is Eddie, and following the teachings of Maj. Lange, I am enclosing a picture of conditions as they actually were. Study the picture carefully, and you too, may understand some of the weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth that went on.

And now I come to that part in my experiences which is really difficult to relate, I refer to the course in sketchrelate, I refer to the course in sketch-ing, or the capturing of the ever elusive coutour. Like the Carpenter, I pause here to shed a tear. Eight hours has the class spent tracking down coutours. Stealthily trying to creep upon them, by ones, twos, and by mass action, have we endeavoured to transplant them to our sketches. Some even lay in wait for hours, underneath a bush, in the warm sunlight, hoping that at least a single unwary one might pass by within reach of a ready alidade, but nary a one was caught. If the average officer's plight is sad, how folorn is that of the Foreign Legion and the Marines. Hav-ing always considered the coutour as a legendary animal, to be set on their trail, with no description of their native habits and haurts, will I fear turn their we endeavoured to transplant them to habits and haunts, will I fear turn their hair gray. However at the completion of the last hunt, spying a group of fig-ures on a bare hill top, I wended my way thither, and lo, it was they, in earnest consultation with the head huntsman, Capt. Stonewall Jackson. It is to be hoped that they were able to drink copknow, Eddie, I thought that we came to school to learn things, but as far as this sketching goes it seems that we are here to let the school know just how little we do know. "You learn to sketch by sketching," says Capt. Jackson. Wouldn't I like to turn him loose in a

Wouldn't I like to turn him loose in a boiler factory and say, "Here is lots of steel, and nuts and bolts, make me a steam engine." Hot dog. Now don't get the idea that all here is grief far from it; there are many pleasant movements. Every course, no matter how dry and unteresting has its ten-minute break, and you have no real concention of what a ten minute break conception of what a ten-minute break can mean until you have enjoyed one here at the school. They have been es-pecially welcome during pistol instruc-tion. You can squeeze a pistol trigger just so long, and you can accidentally knock the black off your sights just so many times and take time out to reblacken them, but there comes time when even these pursuits pall. rope. It's a great act, Eddie; I only hope you are fortunate to come under the sway of his golden voice. He has made a big hit with the class on every appearance, but the act he put on, Tues-day, in conjunction with Maj. Smith, was a knockout. The essence of the act is very simple, evidently modeled on the once popular monologue illustrated with once popular monologue illustrated with sterioptican slides. Immediately follow-ing the Major's appearance on the stage an orderly comes up and hands him three glasses of water. Ho, ho! Thought I, here's a chance for a few wise cracks, but I'll be darned if he did not find a use for every glass, besides the trite one of a polite sip when becoming slightly hoarse — he washed his paint brushes in them. Now do not get the idea that this is a kindergarten. I as-sure you that Maj. Lange absolutely did not cut out paper dolls on the stage, in spite of the fact that he performed many other innocent childhood tricks.

Many other innocent childhood tricks. In introducing Maj. Smith to the class, Maj. Lange stated that it was easier to use Maj. Smith than a step ladder. That was to my mind a grave injustice, he used Maj. Smith for a foil all through the act, a sort of Hamlet be big Typeheterer But the to his Touchstone, as it were. But the really unfair part about it was the way he would start to do something to the illustration they were making, and then taking advantage of one of the laws of distraction, which he told us about last week, he would move about the stage or go and fiddle with his tools, and lo, and behold! When the class would look back at the work Maj. Smith would have it all finished.

All in all, it was one of the best mon-ologues that I ever heard, nor was our appreciation lessened a bit by the fact that we were having two field officers work for us and when I say work I mean that Maj. Lange actually talked himself into a real sweat. Well, Eddie, I'll have to quit now and try and think up something to do with the hours from eight to eleven tomorrow morning, which the school was un-able to fit into the schedule of pistol marksmanship.

Y'rs Tr'ly, BONAPART HENNESY, 3D. P. S. Have just heard that Maj. Lange has been offered Will Rogers' old place in the Follies at $10,000 a week. Think of being paid to be in the Follies. B. H. 3D.

GEORGIA-AUBURN GAME ON OCT. 25 Columbus to See College

Teams in Action Soon-Rivalry Keen

By B. B. Swayze As has been the custom for years past, with the exception of last year, pandemonium will break loose in Columbus on the night of the Georgia-Auburn day. We learn by the announcements that the 25th day of this month has been set as the day, that day falling on Saturday.

There has always been keen rivalry between the two teams, and this year promises to give the football fans the treat of a century. No matter how weak the Auburn team has been in the past years, nor how strong the Georgia ag-gregation, the games played in Colum-bus have been packed with thrills galore.

Auburn has a strong defensive team this year, as was exemplified by their holding the Florida 'Gators to a lone touchdown and a point for kicking goal. As all the leading sports writers put it, this truly gave Auburn a moral victory. On the other hand, Georgia will be virtually fresh from their triumph over Yale last Saturday. There is bound to Yale last Saturday. There is bound to be a fight on that field Saturday after next, and now is the time to start plan-ning that good time we have waited two years for.

Just remember this: when Georgia turns loose her Bull Dogs, and Auburn her Tigers out there in Memorial Stad-ium, there is going to be hide, fur and blood scattered all over this neck of the woods.

SPAREPARTS LOOM AS DARK HORSE IN BENNING FOOTBALL

When the opening whistle sends the Benning Intra-Mural football season on its way at Doughboy Stadium, Oct. 27. there will be a new team in the race and the newcomer looms as a dark horse on the horizon.

For several seasons the Special Units of the 29th Infantry have been talking of entering a team, but for some reason the team was never organized. Early this season the Special Units began to talk football? When the Athletic Coun-cil held their meeting the Spareparts were well represented and their team the nod. Ritzy Wright, fast stepping doughboy, and Phenix Fouroux, Artillery south-paw, put up a fast four-round battle with Wright taking the decision. Ritzy

Another prominent member of the Hunt breakfast crowd was the first to sign the book this year. It seems that and his horse and a slide were involved in a controversy and the slide won but there were too many witnesses present to permit of any application of dirt to the horse's face, hence the entry in the back in the book.

The members of the Advanced Class are rapidly regaining their seats and are aspiring to be classed as horsemen. Rebe a gentlemen's class instead of a class for "bronco peelers." The other day one of the instructors asked his day one of the instructors asked his class if anyone wished to go down a slide. After a long pause Captain Helsley was heard to weakly say, "Yes, sir." From the looks on the faces of several of his classmates one would be led to believe that Captain Helsley's ambitious statement was an individual rather than a general one. However, one instructor was induced to set up an rather than a general one. However, one instructor was induced to set up an 18-inch hurdle and to permit his class to try their hand at jumping. The course of instruction planned for the Advanced Class included a course in firing the tank weapons and a course in tank driving, and will continue dur-ing the remainder of this month, after which a short course is planned for cer-tain instructors. tain instructors.

The firing course includes the firing of both tank weapons, the Browning Tank Machine Gun and the Tank 37-mm gun over a prescribed course on Turner Hill.

The driving course includes the driv-ing of light tanks from Bench Mark 26 along the new Hunt course and out as far as the adventurous souls dare go.

All necessary precautions to prevent accidents have been taken, and for those who survive, coffee and doughnuts win be served.

FREIBURG PASSION PLAY WINS PRAISE IN COLUMBUS

One of the finest examples of the dramatic art is being offered this week dramatic art is being offered this week to the people of Columbus and Fort Benning in the four-day run or the presentation of the "Passion Play" by the Freiburg players at the Springer Opera House in Columbus. The play is by the word famous Frei-burg (Baden) players ,whose splendid portrayal of the sacred Biblical story at once appeals to those who really ad-more and enjoy the higher things of life.

more and enjoy the higher things of life. For centuries, since 1264, the Frei-burg players have presented their play periodically in nearly every city of Europe, and only within the last two years have the people of America been given the opportunity of seeing the play. Except for the prologue, the spoken lines are in German throughout, but for those who know the Bible story of Christ's life from Palm Sunday to Eas-ter Sunday, the play is remarkably easy ter Sunday, the play is remarkably easy to follow.

So splendid were the acting and scenic effects that the effect produced upon one in the audience was that of actually being present and living a part during the time portrayed by the "Play Sublime."

Ed Gets All Fixed Up Gasps in Gratefulness Big Banquet For QM

"Give the devil his dues" is a well known catch phrase that applies partic ularly to the story in hand; only w will first make it known that we mean no offense when we say "devil," eithe to the devil himself or to the Quarter master, about whom this little skit i being written.

After all our crabbing, back-biting and all the beautiful remarks we, fre tenants of some of Uncle Sam's beaut ful quarters, have the habit of passin out in our neighborly gossip, we wer simply overwhelmed with attention from simply overwhelmed with attention from the quartermaster corps one day early this week. Here it what happened: The painting shop force took possession o the house and decided to paint ever little nook and cranny in the house; the electrician came over and measured u. for a brand-new electric stove with clock on it; the glazier came over and fixed the window pane that had been broken for over a year; the fuel yard man came over, and instead of heaping insult upon injury, really heaped a tor or two of coal in our half-filled coal bo or two of coal in our nan-miled coal bo-and on top of that heaped a load o wood slabs for our kindling, and maybe we will get that load of compost today and maybe we won't. If the quarter and maybe we won't. If the quarter master had grass cutting to do we are sure that he would have done that also, for the detail did that very nicely this week also.

Yes, thank you, we are doing rather nicely.

FIRST HUNT WILL BE HELD SUNDAY; GRAND OPENING ON NOVEMBER 2

By M. F. H.

The first hunt of the year will be held on next Sunday, October 19th. The neid on next Sunday, October 19th. The Field will leave the Polo and Hunt Club promptly at 8:00 A. M. Coffee and doughnuts will be served between 7:30 and 8:00 A. M., but woe to the member who is late for he will be "left at the gate," or at the coffee pot, as the case might be.

The Hunt will be an informal instructional one, everyone wearing their "catcatcher" coat and number two boots. The object of this hunt meet is to familiarize the field with the drag course, to see the new jumps, and to permit the newcomers to catch onto our system of not passing the Master. All the oid stagers should help instruct the new ones about riding to hounds, as much by example as by dissertation.

While this informal hunt is prelimin-ary to the "grand opening"—as we say in China—there appears to be great enthusiasm for it among the members. All of the old favorite horses have been signed up and many new ones are being tried out.

The aforementioned "grand opening" The aforementioned "grand opening" will be a Drag Hunt on November 2d, followed by a hunt breakfast. All of those who expect to go should look up their calendars and make the proper entries. Everyone will be there to see and hear, if not to ride. The familiar song books will once more make their appearance and the old Club House will ring with: Drink, Puppy, drink!

In spite of the popular belief of the presence of snakes on the reservation, Sergeant Tweed went coon hunting last Saturday night and brought home two nice-sized young coons. This is particu-larly pleasing as he used only five young hounds which he raised himself. These youngsters worked fairly well and give promise of much at a later day. They need the mance of an older and more experienced hound, however, and efforts are being made to obtain just the right kind. Young hounds are prone to overrun the scent and fail to mark the tree in which the coon has taken refuge. If any members of the Hunt know of an experienced and reliable coon hound the Master would greatly appreciate the information. For the information of the Hunt the following hounds are considered that

The Brief Case

One of the many laudable aims of this department is to be helpful and obliging, so we take this method of reminding the members of the advanced class of something they may have over-looked. That is, that each member is to looked. That is, that each member is to complete a monograph on some military historical subject prior to November 3. Of course, a few of the more thoughtful and responsible members of the class, such as Captains Bill Bent, Dick Lus-sier and Earl Paynter undoubtedly had the matter in mind, but the hint will certainly prove a valuable reminder to the vast majority. the vast majority.

Speaking of monographs—as some are doing these days—we hope that the As-sistant Commandant was not trying to sistant Commandant was not trying to instill confidence into us when he re-marked that the man who "caved in" from nervousness under the slight stress of giving his monograph, would un-doubtedly do so on other occasions. It would be very painful to all of us to have to credit such a distinguished offi-cer with one of his very few failures to attain his objective. Brief Case acknowledges receipt of attan his objective. Brief Case acknowledges receipt of its first communication. Ignoring its advertising and somewhat boastful character, it is reproduced for what it may be worth, as follows: Dear, Brief Case:-I brief Case:-

I hate to boast, but I must break down and confess, but I must break down and confess, that, in six suc-cessive matches, Corporal Hagan and I have thoroughly trounced Eagles and Jensen at golf. He suffered almost as much as we did, and for his comfort we will state that some of the best minds of the class con-curred in his solution of the marked problem. We might also state from personal knowledge, that some others of the best minds did not,—thus displaying, rather, a gallant and piquant originality, almost reaching to the point of the innovation made so famous by Orator Lange.

Who is this Henry D. Bagnall, any way? He looks on with tolerant amusement while the common run of us -and even Tige Phillips-struggle with the English language on our feet. Then this Bagnall boy rises up and spills metaphors and oratory and what-not all over the class as though public speak-ing was his dish. Captain W. B. Tuttle, the debonnaire Captain W. B. Tuttle, the debonnaire provost marshal, is always in the news of the day. This week he wins a place on the front page by qualifying for membership in the exclusive Hole in One Club. Promptly upon receipt of this information of Captain Tuttle's achievement a special reporter for the Infantry School News was dispatched post haste to interview him. He found the Captain receiving the congratula-tions of a delegation of prominent golf-ers and ordering cigars on the house. we give you the story just as Captain Tuttle modestly related it to the interviewer.

"It was a beautiful autumn day and the warm sun and crisp air sent the red blood coursing through my veins as T set forth with Lieutenant Privett for a tour of the fairways and putting greens of the lovely Fort Benning Golf Course.

"As we were starting out Lieutenant Course. "As we were starting out Lieutenant Privett jokingly remarked, 'Pil show you how to make a hole in one' to which I replied 'If anyone makes a hole in one to day it will be l'—not thinking, of course, that I would really make a hole in one, but realizing at the same time that for any good golfer a hole in one is always a possibility. On my drive from the first tee a slight breeze twist-ed my club in my hand and I sliced in-to the rough. However, I—" (at this point the reporter left for half an hour, returning just in time to get the finsh of the story)—"It was on the fifth hole that I rose to my great effort. GEN. JOHN L. DEWITT VISITS FORT BENNING, INSPECTS ACTIVITIES

Quartermaster General Pleased With Progress of Construction

Major General John L. DeWitt, the Quartermaster General of the Army, made an official inspection of The In-fantry School and all its activities last Monday morning. After receiving the major-general's salute fired by Battery "A," 83d Field Artillery, 1st Lieut. H. D. Baker, commanding, at 8:15 a. m., the General met all: the personnel of the quartermaster corps on duty at The In-fantry School. Following this, the Gen-eral made a general inspection of the eral made a general inspection of the garrison with particular reference to construction and other quartermaster corps activities.

corps activities. He was particularly pleased with the progress of all the construction projects which have either been com-pleted or are about to be completed. He likewise indicated his support of all future projects now in the planning stage. All activities of the Post Quar-termaster received detailed individual attention, and the general indicated his pleasure at the high state of efficiency shown by these activities.

General DeWitt arrived in Columbus at 9:45 p. m. Sunday, and immediately came out to the post, where he was the guest of Brigadier General Campbell King, commandant of The Infantry School.

On Inspection Tour

On Inspection Tour Since October 13, General De Witt has been on an official inspection tour covering several posts in the Fourth Corps Area. He has already visited Fort McPherson, Ga., Fort McClellan, Ala., New Orleans, La., and Maxwell Field, Ala., before coming to Fort Ben-ning. From here, the General goes to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., via Birmingham and Muscle Shoals, arriving in Wash-ington the latter part of this week. General DeWitt's career is an inter-esting one. General DeWitt's career is an inter-esting one. Entering the army as a sec-ond lieutenant of infantry in 1898, he has performed the usual company du-ties falling to the lot of an infantry officer. However, early in his career, he showed those rare qualities which must be possessed by supply officers, for in 1901, we find him performing the duties of Quartermaster at Candon, Illo-cos Sur, P. I. Thus introduced to one of the most important branches of the of the most important branches of the service, we find him alternating duty in the infantry with duty in the Quardetails in the office of the Quartermaster General. In Sept. 1917, he became Chief Quartermaster, 42nd Division, and in October of that year was ordered to France.

BENNING POOLS TO GET $6500

Post Exchange Council Votes Money to Improve Swimming Conditions

At a meeting of the Post Exchange Council held last Monday afternoon, it was voted that the council would ap-propriate $6500 to be used for the improvement of the two Fort Benning swimming pools. The work is to be done by the Recreation Center Board, under the direct supervision of Major William M. Hoge, Jr., Corps of Engineers.

Although Fort Benning has two of the finest swimming pools in the United States, it has been felt for some time past by the post authorities that the sanitary conditions were not the very best.

Immediately after the close of the past swimming season, plans were in-itiated for the complete elimination of all objectionable insanitary conditions by the building of certain improvements. These plans include improvements for Russ Pool, which is the Main Swimming Pool for the garrison, and the as-yet-unnamed 24th Infantry Swimming Pool. At each pool, a bath house of generous proportions with lockers, toilets, and warm showers will be erected. The entrance to these bath houses will be the entrance to the pools, both of which will be surrounded by large decorative fences. Before bathers will be allowed to enter the pool, all will be required to pass through the showers, where plenty of warm water and soap will be provided. Bathers with skin infections and colds may be stopped from entering the pool by a guard stationed there for the purpose. The bottom of Russ for the purpose. The bottom of Russ Pool will be concreted throughout, and the cleansing of the pool will be aided by means of a fire hose connected to a water main yet to be installed, while at the 24th Infantry Pool, certain walls and walks will be built.

A SKOOLBOY'S DAIRY

(C. N. S. Ballou, 21-170)

Okt. 1st. Well, this here is one uv them dairy things that a feller is sposed to rite in ever day. I wuz agoin to do that, but this bein a skoolboy agin takes up so much uv my time that I hain't never got round to it before. Enyhow, bout week er so ago this instituotion opened her doors to all uv us aspirin stoo-dents. They takes us all into a big room full uv tables an chairs an give each an ever one uy us a rifle gun an a lot o other junk. I dident no what was all that other junk fer at the time, but I hev lerned, brother, I hev lerned.

Then a dokter feller gets up and talks to us about how we should never work to much. He sez as how we do not rest enuf and I sez to myself, "That is a big joke on you, doc, because I am alway, resting." Then he sez we do not know resting." Then he sez we do not know how to relacks, an before he gets thru I has lerned a lot of new ways about I has terned a line doing nothing. I can see rite on 1 and going to like this place. Well them next few days was jest wood them trouble. We wood them full uv sorrer an trouble. We wood march out on the drill field an then Captin Gilbert wood tell us to sit down while he was talking. I thought thet was rite friendly uv him the ferst time, but rite after thet I found out that he did it so's he could see how high we wood jump when we sat on all them sand and cockle burs. Sense then I have been setting down very careful, but generly not half careful enuf.

Okt. 15st. This is a world full uv pain and sorrow. A feller asks mé in class one day what wood I do if a genral come an give me a thousand recroots an tells me that they have got to go into the trench-es at eight o'clock that very nite. I sez I don't unkerstand an he sez well, what would you teach them 1st? What is yure idee uv what they had most ought to no? An then I sez I wood teech them how to pray. He see se will give me a U fer that and at 1st I am happy be-cause I thinks that U stands for Uneckselled, but sense then I hev found out that it stands fer sumthing altogether diffrunt.

Then we goes out on the riffle range and shots for sevral days. The first day I done perty good an the next day too. Then Captin Gilbert sez that them days does not count an that we have all got to shoot over fer record. Sumthing to do with a foneygraft I thinks but it It is lying in a puddle of water ain't. while it rains on yure back an trying to shoot. I done all them things but it was not so good. When I got done was not a markshooter but some other thing that Mister Gilbreth sez is called a sharpspert. He is one uv them things 2. I gess then ain't so much or I wouldn't be one. I am not a verry good shooter. They is one feller in the class is so good that his ma named him after his gun.

They are a lot uv pepple round here called fackulties. They are awful dum becawze sum of them has been here fer yeers an yet we have to keep rite on explaining things to them ever day. But explaining things to them ever day. But one of them is a very famus man i hey red about him in manistorry book. He wuz in the war that, ey calls the civvil war up north an the war between the states down here. It is means the same war. He don't look near so old as I thot he wood. His name is Stonewall lackson an his idea up a good time is Jackson an his idea uv a good time is to go fer a long walk with a wagon load uv red flags. Then he comes bac and we get to hunt fer all them flags.

He generly fergets where he left the flags so ever time he does that he makes carry all our truck out there an draw a map so as he can tell just where he has been. Beleeve me if I ever got the habit of leavin flags around like he does an left them in the places he does my wife would get a divorse or else send me to one of them places to take a cure. I cud never make her veleeve that a man wood go to all them places unless he had ferst bin soaked with mountin due. But this feller seems to do it jest fer fun. He sez makin them maps uv where he has bin is a artistik exersize. He is rite about the exersize. But when I hev carried a table and pensil an a lot of other things fer a few miles and have tried to draw a map while I way busy keepin frum getting lost, and the swet haz run off of my chin on to my map, they isn't verry much that is artistick when I get back. The only sattisfackshun I get is showing that the fel-ler that made this here Far Controll Map uv this place wuz a bum. Ever day when I get threw I look at my map an then I look at his'n an it makes me feel good when I see how many mistakes he has made and how many places my map is diffrunt from hisn. They isn't much more to rite in this dairy tonite. I have bin so buzy look-ing for where Captin Jackson has went and trying to recoleckt all the things that Captin Duff has sed about the inerds of this here ottomatick rifle an holdin my breth and squeezin my trig-gger for Captin Vermette that I aint had much time fer ritin. My wife thinks I am ded becawze I don't rite her no let-ters an she hopes she is rite. Well, i hope she isnt, but som of these evenins i am afraid she is. So here ends this day except to note that i am verry full sand burrs and cant sit down in no kind of cumfert atall.

ALL ABOUT CAP RICHMOND AND HIS LOUD AUTOMOBILE

Now that there is a lull in the news about South American revolutions, the news censors have at last permitted some news about the Fort Benning revolution to trickle out. We refer to the revolution broke out weeks ago in the "Ancient and More Honorable and Most Reput-Society of Repainted Horseless able Vehicles," when two warring factions attempted to elect their own candidates to the presidency of the society.

The most important development of this vociferous revolution has been the introduction of another candidate for the presidency in the person of a hitherto unknown, who styles himself El capitaine Neapoleno Washingtonio de la Richmondo y Habla No Espanol, and who says it with a Don Quixotic flourish accompanied by a large volume of dust.

This candidate is out to grab off the presidency with a vengeance. While the other warring factions have been carrying on a most honorable warfare, entirely bloodless, and which seemed on the verge of peaceful settlement in ac-cordance with the most recent dictates or peace tribunals, this hitherto entirely unknown crosses the Rubicon over from the country of the society of "Ye An-cient and Honorable Society of Horse-less Vehickles" in a gaily bedecked Whippet, which recently barely held to-rether large enucles a galox mile gether long enough to make an 8000-mile transcontinental tour during the past summer, and in a few well-prepared or-ations to the impressionable "peoples" ations to the impressionable announces his desire to save the country. El capitano Richmondo declares that chance.

With the First Division Road as the With the First Division road as the "jump off line," the 29th Infantry, with the 1st Battalion, 83d F. A., and the 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regt. (Lt.) on its right and left flanks respectively, has moved in a generally southeasterly direction for over fifteen hundred vards direction for over fifteen hundred yards overcoming all hostile resistance offered. Scrub-oak and scrub-pine have been mowed down with mathematical precision, so that the "battlefield" now closely resembles a plat of deforested land in a lumber camp. Not all land is being denuded however, for the old standbys, such as "the woods on Davidson Hill," 39th Infantry Woods, and the 58th Infantry Woods and a few others, have been spared in their entirety.

Zones of action have been assigned to companies, and great is the competition to see which can do the most work. (That's the way the copy read, anyhow.) When axes and saws become dull, they are brought back to the busy grindstones at company headquarters.

Another Unlimited Attack?

Thus far, the troops have just barely reached their "first objective." The final objective is not definitely marked just vet, but is presumably somewhere north of the Yankee road and somewhere west of the Buckeye road. All the roads within the area; the Lumpkin, Yankee, Buckeye, Keystone and Ohio roads are to be improved. Where necessary, culverts and bridges will be built on these roads by the 1st platoon, Co. "A," 7th Engineers. Work along the above lines has been scheduled until November 1st, when the Academic Department will have a piece of terrain upon which school problems can be solved without all perforce com-ing under the heading of "Combat in Woods "

BENNING RECRUITING SERGEANT WINS PRAISE

Sergeant J. K. White, allocated from the 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regiment (Light), of the Hattiesburg, Miss., Re-cruiting Sub-station, a part of the New Orleans Recruiting District, recently received an excellent commendation for his work at the Pine Burr Area Council Camp, Boy Scouts of America, August 30th to September 9th. Mr. Hamilton Crawford, Chairman of the Council, praised the work of Sergeant White as follows:

"You made a distinct contribution toward the excellent camp which was held by the Boy Scouts of this Area during the early part of September. It is my pleasure as Chairman of the Area Camping Committee to express to you the sincere gratitude of every member officially connected with Scouting in South Mississippi.

The official report of the Camp also refers to the instruction given the Boy Scouts by Sergeant White: "Sergeant J. K. White, U. S. Army, was in camp every day and had charge of the rifle range. While no Scouts of the rifle range. While no Scouts qualified for the Marksmanship Merit Badge, the Scouts know more about rifles and the correct way to shoot as a result of his instruction. 780 rounds of caliber .22 ammunition were fired on the range."

Sergeant White is a member of the 2nd Battalion 1st Tank Regt. (light), and has been allocated recruiter in the New Orleans District since May, 1927, with station at Hattiesburg, Miss.

GENERAL MACARTHUR BACK IN U. S. HOPES TO VISIT FORT BENNING SOON

Army's Newly Appointed Chief of Staff Favors Pay Increase

By Master Sergeant E. W. Hunting Class of 1928, National Guard Enlisted Specialists

In an interview for The Infantry School News, upon his arrival in San Francisco aboard the Dollar Steamship Liner President Jackson, October 15th, Major General Douglas MacArthur, Commanding General of the Ninth-Corps Commanding General of the Nanth-Corps Area, and newly appointed Chief of Staff of the United States Army, effec-tive November 21st, expressed his views upon the fight being waged for increased pay for persons in the military service. "I am unqualifiedly in favor of the movement for higher pay, and will give my entire support to that end," the newly appointed Chief of Staff stated.

"You may tell my friends at Fort Benning that I am anxious to see now the post and the school have developed during my absence from the United States, and will try to arrange to include Fort Benning in my itinerary during my tour before taking over my new duties November 21st.

"With regard to the familiar question of 'How are things going in the Philip-pines?", I will just say that things are fine out there and the Philippine situation is the best since the United States first stationed troops there."

Accompanying Major General Mac-Arthur were Lt. Col. C. H. Patterson, Major J. J. Reddy and Captain T. J. Davis. He was met at the dock by Major General Malin Craig, who will succeed him as Commanding General of the Ninth Corps Area on November 21st, and the Chief of Staff of the Ninth Corps Area.

Major General MacArthur will succeed General Charles P. Summerall, with the rank of General, in accordance with the recent Act of Congress, giving this highest rank to the Chief of Staff of the United States Army.

Major-General MacArthur is the son of the late Lieutenant-General Arthur MacArthur and was born in Little Rock, Ark., January 26, 1880, and was graduated at the head of his class from the United States Military Academy in 1903, with the rank of second lieutenant of Engineers.

His colorful career includes a large number of field commands as well as special duties. Probably his most noted command was that of Chief of Staff of the famous 42d (Rainbow) Division, la-ter becoming Division Commander in the latter part of 1918.

On January 17, 1925, Major General MacArthur received his commission as Major-General, which rank he now holds, and will hold until his appoint-ment becomes effective, November 21st.

Major General MacArthur was awarded the Distinguished Cross with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Distinguished Ser-vice Medal, in addition to his foreign decorations: The Commander of the Legion of Honor (French); The Croix de Guerre with two palms and a Gold Star (French); The Italian War Cross (Italian); Commander of the Belgian Order of the Crown (Belgian); and Of-ficer of the Order of Leopold (Belgian).

After taking over his command as Commanding General of the Ninth Corps Area, succeeding Major General Hines, Major General Douglas MacArthur will probably spend most of his time, until Nov. 21st, visiting the various Army posts in the United States, to better acquaint himself with military conditions over the entire country.

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

Major Ross and Captain Gaston motored to Atlanta last Saturday to see the Auburn-Tech battle.

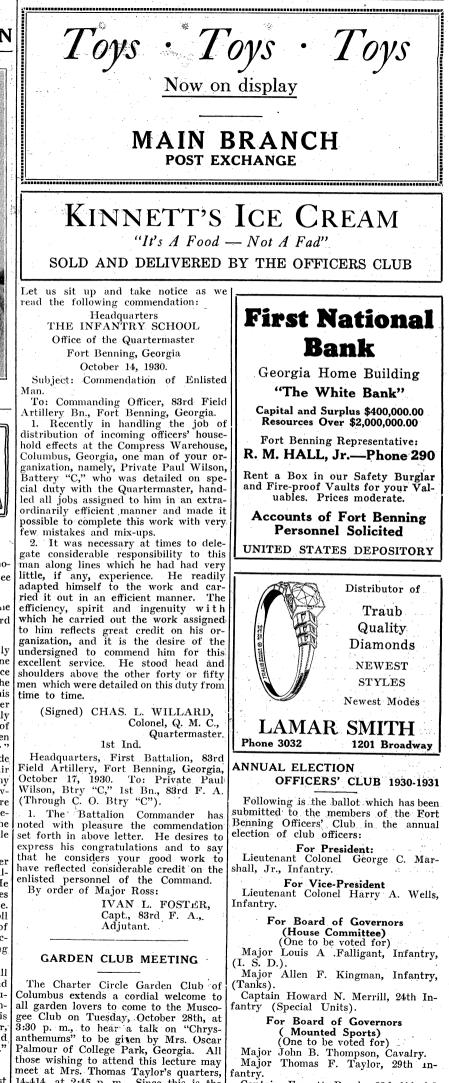

On Wednesday evening, the 22nd, the officers of the Battalion held a card party at the Club.

"Little Doc" Baker was beautifully "Little Doc" Baker was beautifully policed by our capricious polo pony, one Grey Goose, during a recent practice period. On making inquiry as to the reason for the delay in getting out his invitations for the party, Lieut. Baker is reported to have said, "While I fully intend to observe this sacred custom of the service which has not been broken the service, which has not been broken as far as I know since "Gunner" Moore's horse ran away during a parade at Fort Sheridan, I consider it only fair to me to be permitted to delay my party until Herchel throws one for having been policed by the same pony more than a year ago." Now that is some-thing new. It just shows that even the "Big Doctor" cannot fool all the people all the time. "Murder will out."

This week brought a welcome letter from an old Tanker friend, Captain Al-thaus, now at Fort Leavenworth. He mentioned such good old Benning names as McClure, Mallan, Doll and Beebe. The letter intimated that Captain Doll now rides a horse and all that sort of thing. This higher education can ac-complisch much in the way of "finishing off an officer."

Our entire enlisted personnel is still engaged in clearing off the hinterland of the reservation. They will be occu-pied with this work until after November 1st. In the meantime training is conspicuous by its absence. However, we can now recommend Smith Hill and Craig Hill as "safe for student officers."

Commendations come thick and fast for those who wear stars, bars and stripes, but when he who wears the in-signia of the seventh grade gets a com-mendation, it is usually well-deserved. Ideal to the post. In the star and the

FORT BENNING LADIES TENNIS TEAM TENNIS MATCHES ARE HARD-FOUGHT TO PLAY MATCH AT ALBANY NOV. 1

Mrs. Gaston, Miss N. Ross Advance

SMITH AND LANGE STAGE AN UPSET

Captains Trechter and Phillips, Newcomers to Benning, Playing Nice Game

The fall tennis tournament is under way with a large coterie of earnest lobbers, smashers and putters battling for glory, exercise and cups. Ladies first.

Ladies' Novice Singles

Mrs. Gaston and Miss Nancy Ross have won their way to the semi-finals in their respective brackets. Mrs. Gas-ton, who drew a bye in the first round, defeated Miss Berry 6-0, 6-2. Miss Berry won her first round match with Mrs. Sherburne 6-1, 6-3. In the lower bracket Miss Ross defeated Mrs. Barlow 6-1, 6-0, and went into the semifinals by defeating Mrs. Truman Smith 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 in a hard three-set match. Mrs. Smith won her first match with Mrs. Vernon 6-4, 4-6, 6-0.

Mrs. Chester defeated Miss Barbara King in a three set affair 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, and Mrs. Moseley defeated Mrs. Lange 6-4, 7-5.

This makes the semi finalists consist of Mrs. Gaston, Miss Nancy Ross, Mrs. Chester and Mrs. Moseley. Other first round matches resulted as follows: Miss King defeated Mrs. Luse 6-3,

6-2. Mrs. Chester defeated Mrs. Marshall

7-5, 8-6. Mrs. Mosely defeated Miss Atkins

6-3, 6-3. Mrs. Lange defeated Miss Jackson

6-2, 6-3.

Ladies' Doubles

Mrs. Brimmer and Miss Dorothy Ross, heavy favorites to win the post champ-ionship, have not yet played and will not display their 1930 doubles technique until the semi-finals. Mrs. Lange and Mrs. Marshall de feated Mrs. Chester and Mrs. Luse 6-4, 6-2.

Mrs. Gaston and Miss Nancy Ross, expected to furnish the stiffest compe-tition for Mrs. Brimmer and Miss Dorothy Ross, came through in a hard three-set match against Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Knight, after losing the first set 3-6. They rallied and took the last two 6-2 and 7-5. Mrs. Vernon and Miss Atkins defeated Mrs. Mosely and Mrs. Smith, 6-1, 8-6. Mrs. Gaston and Miss Ross defeated

Mrs. Vernon and Miss Atkins 6-3, 6-3 in a second round match.

Men's Novice Singles

No startling upsets have appeared so far. Lt. Alderman, Major Smith, Capt. Collins, Lt. Cralle and Captains Trech-ter, Phillips and Johnson seem to have been playing the most impressive tennis to date.

Lieut, Alderman, Major Lange, Lt. Cralle and Capt. Trechter have gone into the third round. First round results follow: Alderman defeated Gaston 6-1, 6-2.

Lewis defeated Lussier 6-4, 6-0. Applegate defeated Wilson 6-0, 6-4. Phillips defeated Hulett 6-0, 6-2. Smith defeated Remmington 6-0, 6-1.

Hoge defeated Macklin, 6-3, 7-5. Johnson defeated Bodine 6-3, 6-2.

Thiebaud defeated Cullen 6-4, 8-6 in a hard fought match which brought out some pretty tennis. Capt. von Schell defeated Shaeffer 6-3, 6-1.

-3, 6-1. Lange defeated Murphy 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. Cralle defeated Brown 6-0, 6-1. Brady defeated Schmidt 2-6, 6-4, 6-2 Trechter defeated Pierson 6-2, 7-5.

Second Round Matches

Lt. Alderman, playing a steady game, defeated Hajor Lewis 6-1, 6-2.

Major Lange defeated Capt. von Schell, 6-0, 6-0. Capt. von Schell did not play nearly as well as usual. Perhaps he was intrigued or puzzled by Major Lange's constant flow of German conversation throughout the match.

conversation throughout the match. Lt. Cralle defeated Major Tindall 6-3, 9-11, 6-4. Major Tindall employed an effective change of pace, using a soft ball, a softer one, and then one softer than that. Lt. Cralle, who plays a smashing game, was somewhat off form and for a time it looked as if poor tenpic might come out on top of a far tennis might come out on top of a far better game. However with Major Tindall leading 3 to 0 on the third set, Lt. Cralle hit his stride and it was soon a case of slow music, six guys and a box for the Major. Trechter defeated Brady 6-4, 6-0.

Men's Doubles

The feature of the play in the doubles was the defeat of Capt. Collins and Lt. Cralle by Majors Smith and Lange, providing the first major upset (no pun intended).

Smith and Lange got off to a com-fortable lead in the first set and then Collins and Cralle blasted them out of the courts with drives and smashes to take the set 7-5. But this one spurt was all. Collins and Cralle thereafter were unfortunate in their drives and smashes, netting and driving out for many errors and Smith and Lange took last two sets 6-1 and 6-2.

Majors Smith and Lange, somewhat elated, incurred a lot of grief in their match with Hoge and Murphy soon afmatch with Hoge and Murphy soon af-terward. They swept the first set 6-2 very easily, and then something hap-pened. They lost the first five games of the second set. However they seized the moment of being five games down to start an offensive, and pulled up on even terms. Our reporter did not see the entire match as he left after the first three hours to play bridge. It is first three hours to play bridge. It is reported on good authority however that Smith and Lange finally staggered off with a 13-11 victory in the second set. Capt. Von Schell and Captain Wil-son defeated Majors Tucker and Lewis 10-8, 2-6 6-4. This match was long-10-8, 2-6 6-4. This match drawn out and hard fought.

Alderman and Applegate, who distinguished themselves last spring by tak-ing a set from the post champions, Hedekin and Bassett, defeated Daugherty and Brimmer, 6-1, 6-4.

Majors Bull and Sherburne went into Majors Bull and Sherburne went into the second round, defeating the Stayer and Stayer combination 8-6, 6-0. The Colonel and his son put up a hard fight but the conversation of Major Bull upset them at critical moments.

Bull and Sherburne playing a greatly improved game, forced Alderman and Applegate to go three sets to win their second round match. Scores were 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 and for a while the younger pair were on the run.

Trechter and Phillips disposed of Harding and Tindall 6-2, 6-3 without much difficulty. (For alibi see Blunderbus column).

Hoge and Murphy defeated Brown and St. John 6-1, 6-3. Hedekin and Bassett have not played yet. Their principal competition is expected to come from Lynch and Grier. yet. Trechter and Phillips and Alderman and Applegate are likely to prove troublesome as may Majors Smith anl Lange, if they continue playing as they did when they eliminated Collins and did Cralle.

IT WAS THE RADIO, BALLOU SAID AND HE STICKS TO IT

This is the tale of a young bachelor officer who knows his Garrison Regu-lations even better than the minions of Constabule Tuttle himself, especially that paragraph which recites specifically that "the visiting of ladies in the numbered buildings (in Block 21), referred to herein is prohibited after 11:00 p. m."

It seems, as the story goes, that one Charlie Ballou, former editor of "The Bullet" of Nogales, Arizona, and at present an inmate of that great institu-tion better known as "The Home for Old Bachelors and Part-Time Hus-bards", aided and abetted by his old bands," aided and abetted by his old cronies were enjoying the soothing music which was coming in over the radio, when suidenly, the program changed to a noisy burleque chatter between a male comedian and a high-pitched chorine.

A moment or two later, the door at the far end of the hall flew open, and our young hero, better known as George Lightcap demanded in no uncertain terms, "Who let that woman in?"

As if she herself had heard the derogatory insinuation, the very next line spoken by the radio chorine was the classic reply, "Who wants to know?" So convinced was George that someone was trying to infringe upon his custodianship of the public morals that he immediately hotfooted it down to Charlie's door ready to declare hostilities. It was several minutes before George was convincd that it really was the radio.

GASOLINE KITCHEN PRAISED

The letter below speaks volumes for the mechanical ability of Staff Sergeant Villines of Company "E" 1st Tank Regiment.

The gasoline burning kitchen referred to is the brain child of the Sergeant who, single handed from spare parts mostly salvaged, built this high type of kitchen.

Headquarters

TWENTY-NINTH INFANTRY Office of The Regimental Commander Fort Benning, Georgia,

October 10, 1930 Major A. F. Kingman, 1st Tank Regiment (Light).

Dear Major Kingman: Desire to express to you and your battalion my appreciation for the courtesies extended to the 29th Infantry on our recent practice march.

The trailer kitchen, loaned to the officers mess, added greatly to the comfort and convenience of all the officers.

Upon arrival in camp each day we found our noon meal already prepared by means of this quick cooking device. All meals well cooked and served hot.

In my opinion the gasoline burning kitchen is far superior to the wood burning type, and I believe it could be advantageously used by all motorized organizations. DUNCAN K. MAJOR, Jr.,

Colonel, 29th Infantry, Commanding.

POST EXCHANGES

Dear Eddie:

We are now playing a new game here at the school. Perhaps you have indulged in the game of "Treasure Hunt." You know the one where the host and hostess lay out a hunt course, and provide each guest with a clue, usually written in had poetry, which will allow him to get to the next clue and so on until they all get tired and come back. The beauty of the game is that the host and hostess can sit quietly at home while the guests tear madly over the country side. With a few slight altera-tions the class is now "Treasure Hunttions the class is now "Treasure Hunt-ing," the treasure being contours. The game is played thusly. Capt. Jackson, as host, gives the class, in a few brief words, a hint as to where the treasure may be found. Entering gaily into the spirit of the game the class grabs a sketching board, and a pencil and in cars of every make and vintage goes tearing out into the wilds of the reser-vation. Copious notes, which more than likely blow out of the car, are made, and the speedometer is watched far and the speedometer is watched far more carefully than it ever is when crossing the local Styx. Finally wearying of the game and with hair, eyes and teeth full of nice Georgia sand and clay, they return to the class room. Here a few cryptic remarks are made on papers which are handed in to Capt. Jackson. It has been noted that many members of the class have found it advisable to explain most volubly, to the ever patient Captain, just exactly what the marks on their maps mean. It's a great game, with the class easily making up for any frugality of words by Capt. Jackson. However I do not rec-ommend it to those with ministerial leanings

However from the way she ducked each time that he made a swing at her, I sus-picion that he must have miscalculated once during rehearsal. Anyhow, I don't blame her for not taking any chances. Now the really queer part about it all is that both of our actors got killed off before the curtain was allowed to drop. Personally I did not think that they were so bad as all that.

The Singing Marines

Speaking of thespians reminds me of some other talented members of the class. The Marines have signed up for the Glee Club, en toto, as it were. Be-lieve me, they know their music; Lt. Bell can go from bass, to baritone, to tenor all in one measure, and once, I distinctly heard him sincing with the source of heard him singing with the sopranos. I once saw Lon Chaney, or someone in a picture about the Marines, in which they burst into song at every opportunity. I thought it was a lot of bunk at the time, but from the way Brooks, Curtis and Bell sing I can see that they must have had lots of practice "From the halls of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli."

This is a great class, Eddie, in addition to actors and opera stars, we have an inventor. Lt. March, after a deep study of Rube Goldberg, now offers to the public gaze the first and only "Liz-zie" contour chaser. Disregarding the lowly contour "dogs," with which most members of the class are content to chase the wily and elusive contours, Lt. March has converted his Lizzie into a juggernaut, which at terrific speeds chases the countours about over hill and dale, until with heaving flanks and drooping tails they are brought to bay.

It is then but a simple matter to transfer the thoroughly worn out con-tours to the sketch. It is to be hoped that inventor March will now turn his great genius into channels really worthy of his talanta and are talents and seek some means of of his "Duke" Gubreth. Armed with this device such stering characters as "Dry Run Seebach," Smiling Eddie Walsh, and yours truly, could simply burn up the ranges. "Dry Run Seebach" has the all time record at the School for not having a single "dry" shot out of the bull's eve with any upper ag not find. Unfortunately have weapon as yet fired. Unfortunately he broke a record of 9 years pistol shoot-ing without missing a bobber, when he missed three (3) the first string fired here at the School. Too bad, but age must bow to youth.

Great Pistol Shots

While I am on the subject of pistol shooting I wish to recommend to your attention two of the greatest, Brother Gilmartin, and Professor B-Food. Brother Gil had managed to hit eleven bob-bers during one string, but under the strain of a two-bit bet with the Prostrain of a two-bit bet with the Pro-fessor he completely went to pieces and was able to garner but 7 hits, being surpassed handily by B-Food with 8. Brother Gil however had the best distribution having hit his bobber, and the L targets on both sides of it, and the ground directly in front of him twice. Daniel Boone has maintained the con-servative gait set with the Springfield, the with a lucky break he won two-bits from me, Ed. We have now finished all of our practice shooting so they are giving us a week's lay-off in order that we can get in good shape for record firing; with lots of dry shooting at home. Yesterday for pistol shooting we had a decided change in temperature. A cold wind, provided only in Georgia, the land of sunshine, peaches, roses and other vegetable crops, was blowing across the range. The class fell in with every type of outer garment, except a bathrobe, that could be reasonably expected to that could be reasonably expected to keep out the cold. However, by noon, the powers that be had the situation well in hand and order was issued specifying just what type of clothing could be worn. Unfortunately, Capt. Gilbreth, evidently did not see the order and came out Wednesday for auto-rife firing in what appeared to be a new leather windbreaker. Whether he was leather windbreaker. Whether he was embarrassed by the distinctiveness of his costume, or for some other cogent rea-son, nevertheless it asson disappeared and once more the entire assemblage was more or less regulation. Now, Eddie, I've told you how big this place was, 97,000 acres, and yet for firing the auto-rifle at 1000 inches they picked out a place that had more sticker burs to the square inch than a houn' dog has fleas. It is very difficult to conas an Apache gutter rat. Brann was neat device would be one that would centrate on trigger squeeze when lying magnificent, if he had ever hit Anne provide each and every officer with a Vermette—well, I hate to think of it. permanent trigger squeeze. This device burrs. Strange I calls it.

However after we left the burrs there and went to the burrs on Shelton range, things were not so bad. In fact I think that our firing of the auto-rifle has pro-vided more laughs than anything we have done so far. Having somewhat qualified as experts on gas engines, the quanted as experts on gas engines, the class was eager to operate them. Per-sonally the blooming thing performed a neat operation on the bridge of my nose. "Keep your eye up close to the sight," says Capt. Duff. I did. The Crescent Limited rumbled down the tracks of the Grand Central Station— Bong. Something slammed me on the nose, and as they say in fighting circles, claret ran freely. But I was not the only one, far from it. Brother Gilmartin, among others, carries a decided scar. As for the firing, it's hard to talk about it. All of the talent seemed to be bunched in the first squad and the rest of us straggled along bringing up the rear. Lt. Breckenridge, applying rules of fire distribution learned in the 29th In-fantry, was able to bring down three targets with his first shot, slow fire. Lt. Bowen practically finished up the entire magazine trying to squeeze one off. It was not until we got to rapid fire however that things began to hum. Doctor Coates was complimented on the excel-Coates was complimented on the excel-lence of his group; unfortunately, the Doctor had not fired his second maga-zine. HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector INSPECTION OF SCHOOL CHILDREN

The object of inspection of schools is | She is the "followup" of social service not the detection or treatment of disnot the detection or treatment of dis-ease but rather its prevention. It seeks to secure for every child that normal development of mind and body which is its due. The early recognition of de-fects of hearing and seeing, body mal-formations, obstructions to breathing in the mouth or nose, and chronic infec-tions are of the greatest importance. In this country, inspection of schools

In this country, inspection of schools was organized to control the spread of infectious diseases. It is more or less of a failure in checking the prevalence of measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough, mumps, etc.

Inspection of school children began in Belgium in 1874. Spread to France by 1884 and to America in 1894.

Inspection is to determine the fitness of children to enter school; to recog-nize mental and nervous defectives; to nize mental and nervous detectives; to detect and prevent the spread of com-municable diseases; to supervise vaccin-ations; to teach personal hygiene; to teach sanitation and cleanliness of the school building and its surroundings; to advise as to the amounts of mental and physical work, etc.

Nowhere is this work receiving the careful thorough supervision and attention it deserves.

Under present conditions, inspection of schools is only one of a multitude of health conservation problems which may prolong and benefit human life.

may prolong and benefit human life. In any system of school inspection, the teacher is by far the most important link in the chain. The teacher is the foster mother of the child. She fre-quently knows that child better than its mother. She is able to detect and report children who show any of the following symptoms: loss of weight, pal-lor, puffiness of the face, shortness of breath general lassitude, growing pains, tor, puriness of the face, shortness of breath, general lassitude, growing pains, flushing of the face, eruptions of any sort, cold in the head, running eyes, dis-charge from the nose, cough, vomiting, fever, or frequent requests to go to the toilet.

The school nurse, the next most im-portant link, can detect and treat many of the simple ailments. She establishes communication between the school and communication between the school and the home. She secures cooperation of the parents. She often gains the confi-dence of both child and parent when the medical inspector fails. She assists in carrying out the details of treatment. which is very excellent bowling.

Medical inspectors investigate and report defects but do not treat them. De-fects concern not only the child but also its surroundings. Heating, lighting, ventilation, cleanliness, toilets, seating ar-rangements and general conditions in vicinity which may affect the health the the vicinity which may affect the heart of the pupils. Each year regular physi-cal examinations should be made of every pupil to establish its fitness for entering school and that he can do the work without mental or physical injury. These examinations should include special tests of eyes, ears, nose, throat, teeth, heart, lungs, weight, growth and nutrition.

Parents often think of a school as a regular pest house for the spread of measles, whooping cough, chicken pox, scarlet fever, sore throat and common colds.

The spread of these diseases has not been conquered by medical inspection. Environment outside the school perhaps is of greater importance and one that seems uncontrollable.

It is the concensus of opinion that the successful control of epidemic dis-ease in school children requires that the school be kept open. Then careful daily inspection, the exclusion of cases and contacts, and home visitation offers the est solution for its control.

The diseases for which children should be excluded from school are: small pox, scarlet fever, measles, german measles, chicken pox, diphtheria, tonsilitis, whooping cough, mumps, influenza, tu-berculosis, venereal disease, scabies, pediculosis, ringworm, trachoma, impedigo. Common colds should be added to this list.

The annual physical examination of the children in the Fort Benning Schools will be given in November.

THE BLUNDERBUSS RIDES TO HOUNDS

Despite a constitutional distate for early rising on Sunday morning, and unmindful of the sneers and jokes of Explorer Chance and his fox shooting, fox trapping, fox poisoning cohorts, one half of the Blunderbuss team arrayed itself in his nondescript, camphor-smelling riding togs and turned out for the first drag hunt of the season. We frankly confess to ulterior motives. In the first place it was rumored that Captain Jared Wood was scheduled to deliver an oration at every check and our usually unerring reportorial instinct told us that there would be some good blunderbuss copy in Huntsman Wood's remarks. there would be some good blunderbuss copy in Huntsman Wood's remarks. Again we were inspired by a determination to show the cock-eyed world in general and certain high dignitaries of The Infantry School in particu-lar that it doesn't necessarily take a War Department order to get us on a horse. We have never been an accredited member, in good standing, of any horsey set, but for years it has been our practice to qualify as a social hanger-on with the minimum of personal inconveniences. Third, and lastly, the pulchritude of the field, as indicated by the sign-up list, was a factor in our momentous decision any horsey set, but for years it has been our practice to qualify as a social hanger-on with the minimum of personal inconveniences. Third, and lastly, the pulchritude of the field, as indicated by the sign-up list, was a factor in our momentous decision. Russ Pool is closed for the season, Venus gives place to Diana, and Mars (as represented by his prototype, Commissar St. John) transfers his headquarters from the springboard to the saddle! Not being personally acquainted with the horses which belong to the Infantry School Stables. we were constrained to rely upon the advice of others in making our choice of a mount. Not trusting any of the horse enthusiasts, whose testimony is too apt to be colored by enlightened selfishness, we took Sergeant Benton's recommendation on the theory that his long and honorable service must have included at least one hitch in the cavarly. Our choice was an Irish mount named Mickey. We lay no claim to infallibility when it comes to spotting the breed of a horse but Mickey certainly sounds Irish and we assume that Major Thompson or whoever named him knew what he was doing. Be that as it may, the next time we go a hunting tra la la, tra la la, tra la la, we shall pick a horse named MacGregor or McAndrew. Mickey is a nice jumper and we have no fault to find with his gaits but he needs an ex-stroke oar of a winning intercollegiate crew to hold him down. For the benefit of those benighted individuals who know nothing about drag, fox, cat, and pig hunting, a word of explanation is in order. As every illiterate English squire knows, the observance of hunting etil-quett is the paramount object of the sport. Only a hopeless barbarian ever lets himself get ahead of the Master of the Hunt. That is why Mickey caused us such great distres. We were out to make as good an impression as possible and Mickey was determined to ride over the Huntsman, the M. F. H. the Lady Whippers In and the hounds. Mickey was obsessed with the idea of making us one. He came close to achieving his ambition, too, for amateur news nawk looking for a story on what a lady number should do for a perfect 38. We do not feel that the morning was wholly wasted, however. We are confident that we made a little face where it may do us some good, we collected one or two items for the Blunderbuss and we got four hours exercise in two hours and fifteen minutes.

As for the probability of future appearances we make no promises. As regards hunting, we have always been, and still are, able to take it or leave it alone. We look upon it rather as a diversion than a profession. We shall meet again, Sir Roger, but not every Sunday moving.

Malefactors of Great Rank

Day by day the Tennis representa-tive of the Officers' Club is being placed in a more and more difficult position.

A believer in signs, Major Truman Smith has a large notice posted on the courts to the effect that heels on ten-nis shoes are verboten. But what boots it?

The courts are all cluttered up with heel prints and Major Smith and his minions spend their hours diplomatic-ally ejecting offenders.

The technique has been developed so that ordinary cases are handled with suave aplomb, savoir faire, and one might say dispatch. But Saturday morning a crisis con-fronted the Major. Miss Barbara King, daughter of the Commandant, came out on the courts, wearing heels.

The tennis committee, duly apprised, went into a huddle on the sidelines, and debated ways and means. This was no ordinary case, for in addition to being the Commandant's daughter, Miss King is an unusually pretty girl. Finally Major Smith, with confi-dence engendered by the remembrance Marshall off the courts for a similar offense, tucked in his shirt, said a prayer, and successfully accomplished his mission.

Having done so, he turned to a rep-resentative of The Blunderbuss and "If any more of these malefactors of great rank come out here in heeled shoes, you're going to have to do the chucking off." Hence these tears.

The Blunderbus entry in the ten-nis tournament executed a masterly withdrawal therefrom Saturday morning leaving its opponents, Captains Phillips and Trechter, thoroughly Phillips puzzled.

Play of the Blunderbuss pair was not up to its usual scintillating stan-dard, because of the fact that one member was present in the flesh but his spirit was with the Paris Apaches, and the other managed early to achieve the almost impossible perform-ance of wounding himself with his own tennis racket.

The Infantry School Hunt By M. F. H.

If the blessings of the weather can be taken as an accurate and good omen this winter of sport should prove an extra fine one.

Promptly at 8:00 o'clock last Sunday morning the largest field in the history of the Hunt mounted and left the Polo-Hunt Club. Some 115 officers and ladies gathered at the Club for coffee and doughnuts in front of a roaring pine knot fire, preparatory to a lively run with the fox hounds. The Master took one look at the size of the field, mentally blessed every old timer and welcoming each newcomer, then drawing a deep breath he attempted to condense into a few words the large code of ethics of riding to hounds.

Then with a blast (?) on his horn he moved off at the greatest array of chasers ever assembled in this part the country. Needless to say the fox of the country. Needless to say the size of the field brought a tingle of pride to the Hunt Staff—and just suspicion of apprehension. The size of the field was only limited by the number of available horses.

The field moved down the Lumpkin Road to just south of the Bois d'Etrayes where the first cast was made. Finding the scent off the hounds went in full view across the hillside. Giving the pack sufficient start the field followed at a nice hunting pace. Up we went onto Maxey ridge and turning north checked on the edge of the Bois des Tanks. Looking about only about half the field was seen but finally to the relief of all the remainder were seen afar off fol-lowing one of the Whips across Bouton Hill. They had been wiser and instead of following behind the hounds they cut across to a high hill from which they had a wonderful view of both hounds and the field.

View of Pack Gained

The second cast resulted in a short run along Cook Ridge toward the 4th Infantry Woods and thence back to the Ist Division Road. A long carry at a walk across rough country brought the combined field to the slopes of Singleton Hill where all had a beautiful view of the running pack against the valley of the Upatoi. Around the hill and through the Upatoi. Around the hill and through the 47th Infantry Woods brought us to a log jump of three feet followed by a chicken coop and we were out on Davis Hill. Here a long check was called while the hounds were whipped in and given a lap of water. Again crossing the 1st Division Road the field had another view of the hounds from the slopes of Reynolds Hill. Here we entered the area recently cleared by the 29th Infantry and the hounds were con-stantly in view to the "kill" on the Ohio Trail.

After this the field split and cantered toward BM No. 26 from where all walked their horses back to the Club like good horsemen, horsewomen and sportsmen.

Everyone that started was present at the finish and even more, as several riders were picked up en route. Not one single casualty in the hunt. We cannot help comparing this with the report just received from Leaven-worth. In their first hunt they "only had four casualties and a broken arm." We didn't even have a single hound stepped on.

As a result hunting with hounds may be said to be well launched. One charm-ing member of the fair sex exclaimed as she jumped from her horse, "I'll never miss another hunt-watch for me next Sunday!"

Pig Hunt Next

Next Sunday there will be a wild pig hunt and all are advised to wear their old clothes. This is a new departure in the annals of the Hunt, although indi-vidual members of the garrison have had

It was the nicest, best behaved hun dred or more children ever collected. But well it might have been, for each was to start his riding lesson. Really we shouldn't call it a lesson for it was so much more fun than the three R's, even if the latter are taught by such charming teachers. The children each paid their fee of fifty cents (for non-military expenses) and were assigned to Platoon Paddocks for instruction. Lieut. OVERHEARD IN THE PADDOCKS

Last Saturday morning there were Class are 9:00 to 10:30 a. m. every Saturday. Everyone must be there on the dot so when the whistle blows there won't be any absentees.

Pleasure Riding For those equestrians who prefer a quiet ride on Sunday morning to a run with the hounds the following is of interest

All of the available horses will be included on the Hunt List posted at the Steward's Desk in the lobby of the Officers' Club at noon Wednesday. Members desiring to reserve a horse for Pleasure Riding will draw for horses the same as those going on the hunt. This gives everyone an equal and fair chance at the better horses. Those who do not intend to go on the hunt are requested to mark a big "P" along with their signature.

Horses being different from men in that they aren't born equal, the Horse committee will recommend horses not suitable for hunting with a large "P" before the horse's name. By no means does this indicate the horse so marked isn't a good one. Just the opposite is meant as many of those so marked are extra quiet horses of perfect dispositions for Pleasure Riding. As we all know there are horses that go beautifully alone on the trails but become excited when taken in fast company on a hunt. This action is being taken in an effort to satisfy everyone and to give all a fair chance at the horse of their choice.

DRAMATIC CLUB ACTORS SCORE IN VARIED ASSORTMENT OF PLAYS

THE ANGEL INTRUDES

William B. Tuttle as Jimmy Pendleton, Charles P. Stivers as "The Angel," and Margaret Sladen as Anna Belle.

By Captain Wayne Archer Little more is expected of the opening performance of any amateur the-atrical organization than an indication of latent possibilities, giving promise of more and more successful and finished performances as the season progresses. Those who attended either or both of the initial triple offering of the Fort Benning Dramatic Club at the Main Theater on Friday and Saturday with this idea in mind came away not only satisfied, but astonished. Those who, on the other hand, went with the expectation of an evening of entertainment, and who were prepared to make no allowances likewise should find little, if any, ground for criticism. The three selections were well chosen, excellently staged and directed, and the members of the various casts, practically without exception, performed with a naturalness and self-restraint which a levated the en-tire offering to a level at which one hesitates to apply the title "amateur."

Possibly with the intention of assur-Possibly with the intention of assur-ing such a result, those responsible for the selection of plays and the casting were particularly careful. Not until the last play of the evening did anyone ap-pear who has not already proved his or her worth to Benning audiences. If the garrison contains other unknown talent of similar caliber, however, the casting directors need have no fear of offering directors need have no fear of offering it. And the order of staging of last week's plays doesn't indicate any timid-ity or uncertainty, for the most diffi-cult and complicated of the three was boldly assigned to the opening spot on the program.

Melodrama? Yes? No? Melodrama hardly seems the right word to describe this offering, "Two Crooks and a Lady," ably directed by Rachel Wood, for its varied emotional appeals are made so delicately and in-sinuatingly that the blood-and-thunder productions of the old stock company days to which the same classifying apdays to which the same classifying ap-pellation was applied, can hardly dare claim any blood kin with it. The leadpellation was applied, can hardly dare claim any blood kin with it. The lead-ing and most difficult part, that of Mrs. stow honors for "The Angel Intrudes,"

Sims-Vane, a paralytic, was delightfully interpreted by Charlotte Strayer. The ease and technical perfection with which she imposed upon her audience the feel-ing of her almost ruthless strength of will one operator way all the will and character was all the more re-markable because of the necessity for doing so over the twin obstacles of the of the invalid, obstacles which she never "forgot to remember." The characters of Miller, the Hawk, and Lucille, his accomplice, were capably handled by Joseph Gilbreth and Margaret Busch. There were times when Gilbreth, in his scrupulous attention to the careless and slightly slurred diction of the professional crook, was somewhat difficult to understand, though this may have been caused partly, also, by an unexpected musical accompaniment from the theatre radiators, which was an unfortunate annoy-ance during the beginning of the per-formance. Ethel Halloran as Miss formance. Ethel Halloran as Miss Jones, the be-spectacled companion of Mrs. Sims-Vane upheld the reputation she has gained in a long line of suc-cessful performances at Fort Benning for evaluate costuming and characterifor excellent costuming and characteri-zation. Ira Black, naturally, appeared entirely at home in the role of police inspector, while Stonewall Jackson, as Garrity, the policeman, who assisted him in taking the two crooks into custody after their complete defeat by the craft of Mrs. Sims-Vane handled the captive Lucille in the same ruthless manner that he handles azimuths and contours in his he handles azimuths and contours in his more familiar occupation of instructing in map-reading and sketching. The opening scene of this play was featured by one of the most effective bits of lighting that marked the evening. The settings and arrangement by Mrs. Stone-wall lagleon warranget effective and the wall Jackson were most effective and the rare old furniture loaned by her fur-nished a very appropriate atmosphere. An added and extremely artistic touch was the copy of an old family portrait made by Captain Howard N. Merrill expressly for this scene.

so it must be that Zola Freehoff was | either singularly fortunate in her selection of a cast or that her well-known tact stood her in good stead in their training. Dennis McCunniff didn't take the part of a policeman—he was a po-liceman. How he obtained his technique in swinging a club might bear looking into. Some there may be who might also be induced to say that Charles Stivers was an angel in his part, but we refuse to go that far. We know him. However, a sweet young thing in our vicinity who looked as though she might know about such matters, was heard to whisper at one point that he "really did make love like an angel," and Margaret Sladen as Annabelle gave no evidence of not agreeing with that verdict. Those who don't know her un-doubtedly came away from the theater convinced that, if she is not fickle, flir-tatious and adorable, she is an excellent attrast. A hotter scheduling for the form actress. A better selection for the femihave been made. And finally, there is to be considered William Tuttle as Jimmy Pendleton, the unsuccessful rival of the Angel for Annabelle's affections. Those who are familiar with the bluff and boisterous Bill had difficulty in and boisterous Bill had difficulty in identifying the suave and cynical lady-killer before them. The express-train speed of his normal delivery was slowed down to a point that made the reading of his lines beyond reproach and his effects carefully and quictly obtained effects carefully and quietly obtained.

The artistic setting for this play caused much favorable comment. The credit for the addition of these beautiful aids to the scenic effect and to the Dramatic Club properties is due entirely to Kay Smith who personally prepared and designed the draperies used.

The program carefully and wisely refrained from attempting to classify the final offering, "So This is Paris Green." It was undoubtedly a tragedy, for there was the lifeless body of Bobo, the Apache husband to prove it. It was equally surely a comedy and no less certainly a romantic drama. Whatever may be said about it, this much will be denied by no one who saw it-it emerged from the skilful directing hand of For-rest Harding an entirely delightful bit of burlesque, especially enjoyable to those members of the Benning audience who, last year, saw "The Apache."

Brann Makes Fine Start

The press-agent-or, possibly it would be more apropos to refer to him or her as the publicity director—of the Dra-matic Club, vouches for the fact that Donald Brann's appearance as Bobo is his first upon any stage. That sounds his first upon any stage. That sounds like press-agent stuff, but if it is true it certainly should not be his last. If he experienced any trepidation, he cer-tainly kept it well concealed, and he outlined his character with the broad brush and free stroke that the part called for. To praise the pretty and piquant Anne Vermette to Benning theater-goers is almost a waste of time, theater-goers is almost a waste of time, so well was her artistry demonstrated during the 1929-30 season of the Dra-matic Club. Suffice it to say (as the fourth section so often says), that she fitted into her tumuluous part as the model for a silk stocking advertisement fits into her hosiery, and cracked the whip of her vehicle's final quip over her audience in a way that brought pages audience in a way that brought roars of laughter. Herbert Perrin as Pierre, her lover, handled his part easily and convincingly. His characterization strongly indicated previous experience and the reviewer was not surprised to discover that this modest youth is an ex-member of the famous Princeton Tri-angle Club.

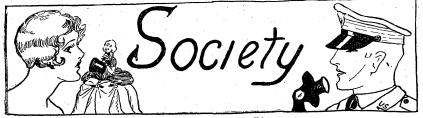

The efficiency of the three prompt-ers—Betty McAllister, Harrison Sher-burne and Robert Chance, in the order in which the plays were given—is prob-ably best attested by the fact that none thought of them, and their presence would not have been realized except for the presence of their names on the program.

That program, by the way, was worthy of remark. We commend to the indefatigable seekers after literary tal-ent who infest the Fourth Section that they get on the track of some of those who wrote the advertisements contained therein.

The make-ups of the actors were done by recent graduates of Isobel Chance's school. The make-ups were excellent and those responsible for them—Mrs. A. T. Knight, Mrs. H. B. Beavers and Mrs. M. E. Halloran—can now feel that they have earned their diplomas (if any). The short time consumed in the changing of scenery was especially pleasing to the audience and Captains Brine and McFadyen are to be congratulated on this important improvement. All in all, the Dramatic Club's first offering for the year furnished convincing proof to the fortunate ones who at-tended that they were eminently wise in their selection of this particular one of Benning's many entertainment féatures.

Until he was kayoed, Griffin was leading the fight. Instead of losing confidence, Griffin has been begging for a return match as soon as he was able to shake the cobwebs off. Failing to get a return with Tunney, the Tanker was matched with Leslie Beard at Panama City, Fla, and stopped Beard in the third round. The rugged Joe King of New Orleans was matched with Griffin and lasted only seven rounds. Ralph Taylor was battered helpless by Griffin in seven rounds. Al Fortenberry was stopped by Griffin at Benning in the second round. His last fight was with Texas Ranger, heavyweight, at the Atlanta fight club a few weeks ago. CO. "D" RETAINS TANKER FOOTBALL CHAMPIONSHIP WITH WIN OVER CO. "F"

Two fighting Tanker company football elevens tore into each other at the Doughboy stadium Monday afternoon, and when the smoke of battle had drifted off the field at the end of the contest, the Company "D" Tankers still held the 2nd Tank Battalion company football championship by virtue of a 6-to-0 victory over the Company "F" Bulldogs.

Although a company game, the contest was one of the bitterest fought ever witnessed at the Stadium. The fever of excitement spread to the side lines and stands and several times it looked as if several black eyes and bruised faces were in the making.

Penalties came thick and fast as the game progressed. In their eagerness to gain the top hand, both teams were guilty of holding, slugging and other football mistakes. But with the true army spirit when the final/whistle blew the teams formed on the field, marched in perfect formation to the north side of the field, where Major Allen Kingman, commanding officer of the Second Tank Battalion, presented the winning team with the championship trophy, a beautiful silver cub. The winners and losers were cheered lustily and praised highly; apologies were offered and accepted by all and the Tankers wended their way homeward in perfect harmony.

The teams were well balanced and fought on even terms during most of the game, although the Tigers seemed to hold a slight advantage. The first three quarters were scoreless with both teams threatening on several occasions. In the final quarter the Tigers started a drive from their forty yard line on an intercepted pass. Baggett went off tackle for nine yards. On the next play he went through center for four yards and a first down. McKnight skirted right end for seven yards. A pass, Bridges to Cawthorne, gave the Tigers a first down on the Bulldog's 28-yard line Two plays at the line failed and a 15yard penalty put the Tigers back on the 40-yard strip. Bridges threw a long pass to Cawthorne who nailed it and swept across the Bulldogs' last white marker for the only score of the game. The kick for goal was blocked. The final three minutes of play saw the Bulldogs fill the air with a flurry of passes, but the alert Tigers refused to be caught napping, either knocking down or blocking all passes. An intercepted pass by McKnight almost gave the Tigers a second touchdown. McKnight was stopped on the four yard strip and the game ended as the teams lined up for the next play.

TANKERS LOSE HARD GAME TO THE AUBURN FRESHMEN

In a bitterly contested game the Battalion team lost to the Auburn Fresh-men, 25-0. Up until the end of the third quarter the Tankers fought hard and the score was 6-0. During the fourth quarter a powerful fresh team of "Tigers" scored three touchdowns in the last five minutes of play. The "Tigers" made ten first downs to the Tankers' eight. The touchdown in the second quarter was made by a 25-yard forward pass to one of the Auburn backs. The try for extra point failed. It looked like the Tankers were going to score first. After making three straight first downs one of the Auburn backs was tackled so hard that he dropped the ball and "Spike" McKel-vey picked it up and ran around his own right end for 80 yards to a touch-down but the ball was called back on account of the new ruling on fumbles. third quarter the Tankers fought hard

Sgt. Dezotell never said a word. He just took a better grip on that famous pipe of his and rolled a 299. The record score on the alley is now 299—just one point under a possible. These columns have recently heralded the promotions of two well deserving officers of this post by copious mention and comment, but not a single editor or reporter seems to have noted the wonderful merited advancement of one genial lieutenant, who is known to his comrades as "Benny," and whose import-ance to The Infantry School is of such a nature that he is automatically car-ried as one of the commanding officers of demonstration troops. Though his command is but a platoon, Though his command is but a platoon, and Benny "was" only a second lieu-tenant, we of "The News" apologize most sincerely.

A second lieutenant for over five years, "Benny" has yet to learn how to rub mud on his horse's nose, and how to pass out "good but rather small" to pass out "good but rather small" cigars gracefully. "Cheerio, Benny, here's mud in your eye," as the good old doughboy saying goes. "Now that you are a first looie, remember that the first twelve years are the hardest."

AN AD IN THE NEWS IS AN AD IN THE ARMY Page Fourteen

This week finds the 29th Infantry busy putting on demonstrations for Academic Department as well as deforesting a large section of the reservation for the use of the troops and the students in their exercises to be held in the future.

Possibly another reason for deforest-ing of so large an area was to assist those of us who have to make sketches, in finding and fixing the well known elusive contour. Another possible reason for this great undertaking is to make that portion of the reservation, now being remodeled, conform to the look at the map and find an ideal lo-cation for machine guns and other weapons and then go there and find that the spot you selected on the map instead of being cleaned ground is so dense that it is impossible to maneuver in, and your whole plans are shot.

The regiment is quite busy getting ready to enter three football teams in the Post League which opens next Wednesday, the 29th of October. This first clash will be between the 1st and 2nd Battalions. The next game November Ist finds the team from the Special Units engaging the strong team from the S3rd Field Artillery. We are most fortunate that the Quartermaster has decided to screen the 2648 windows in our barracks, some un-dertaking, but it is hoped that it will be completed in the near future.

Company "E"

Most of the men in the company are carrying blisters around in their hands from swinging axes and pulling saws in the woods on the reservation. They are preparing drill fields in the woods for the demonstrations of the Infantry School that are to come off in the near future. The recent hike and the work the men are doing at present should fix them up fine for the coming cold win-ter. Our Colonel and Company Commander are highly pleased with the satsfactory work the men have done. Sgt. Henry Mathews proved to be a hero in the log dragging in the Fort Benning woods, in the clearing of drill spaces, last week, on Riley Ridge. It honnened like there, a certain enlisted spaces, last week, on Kiley Kildge. It happened like this: a certain enlisted man from Co. "H" while resting, de-cided to hitch his mule to his feet by tying a noose in the end of the rope and slipping the noose over his feet. The mule decided to take off and the more the how should the faster the more the boy shouted the faster the mule ran. Sgt. Mathews being on the spot, cut loose with one of his military commands and the mule stopped after dragging his victim for some yards over the logs.

Company "G" The members of the company gave a farewell smoker in honor of the former Company Commander, Captain John R. Deane, who was recently assigned to the staff of Colonel Brandt. The party saturday evening was the best arranged of its kind ever put on at Fort Benning, was the opinion of every one present. Sgt. "Warset" Simpson was master of coremonies of the excellent program ceremonies of the excellent program which was held in the Company Mess Hall. The doors of the hall were thrown open at 6:00 p. m., and from that time until 10:00 p. m., the occasion was one of fun and good fellowship. Songs and musical numbers were ren-

Mr. Sgt. James Baxter

November 1, 1930, Master Sergeant James Baxter of the 72nd Ordnance Co., Fort Benning, will retire from the army after thirty years of honorable and faithful service.

Sgt. Baxter was born at Murfrees-boro, Tenn., July 10, 1879. At the age of twenty, he enlisted in the service at Mashville, Tenn., and became a member of the Coast Artillery at Fort Barran-cas, Florida. Seventeen years of his army life was spent at the coast defense of the southern peninsula.

In 1917, he left the Cosmoline Slingers and became a member of the 2nd Ammunition Train of the Second Division. He went across with this organiza tion and served with it during the en tire war. Those that know the history of the Second Division during the World War know that this soldier saw his share of action. After twenty-one months of overseas duty, he returned to the United States with the Second Di-vision and was stationed at Fort Sam Horeton Tayos until he was trans-

Bingham, the all-star player of headquarters football team seemed to have gotten bruised up in the last game with Company "E." He says this football is a tough man's job.

Todd says when a fellow shakes the hall tree and then feels around on the floor for apples-he's drunk.

We notice lots of the boys going around with arms tied up, eyes black, limping on first one foot and then the other; so it must have been a great game. However, none seem to be knock-ed out as they are doing duty as if nothing ever happened, such as the war that was witnessed at Doughboy Stadium last Monday afternoon.

Company "F" is still engaged in the field, instructing the Advanced Class of the Infantry School in the firing and driving of the tank. No casualties as yet..

We are glad to hear that "Jew" is improving and will soon be out of the hospital. His many friend will welcome him back to the company.

Lussier also got over—both the jumps and the sad-dle. Molly trotted sedately down the paddock, with Lussier sitting earnestly astride her neck, his feet still in the stirrups. About this time Lussier evidently decided something was wrong, and that he needed more familiar support, so, with his arms, which had been more or less useless to him for some time, he reached for and caught a fence post. Molly was familiar with the fence and familiar with being ridden, but she hadn't seen feet sticking out in front of hadn't seen feet sticking out in from or her muzzle before very often, and she couldn't remember sharing any rider with any fence before. So she moved away from the fence. When she did, away from the fence. When she did, Lussier couldn't. So for nearly a min-ute (Lussier timed himself at thirty-nine minutes) he made a Hackenschmidt bridge from Molly's back to the fence. Major Thompson is still trying to find what aids he used to entice Molly back to the fence, but entice her back he did and sedately reseated himself in the saddle and resumed operations. "Nobody can say I fell off," he boasted, after the applause had subsided. x x x

You just can't please some of these instructors. "Be brief," urged Major Durward Wilson in his first "dry run" on the estimate of the situation. We were! Absolutely. And then instead of praising our brevity, he launches into criticism of the things we left out.

The nucleus of a new committee for the second section (we may start capi-talizing them after we finish equitation) is in the making in this class. Its subject will be bridge-having nothing to do with Major Lange's friends, the engineers—and Kells and Miller, antici-pating a call for their services as instructors, have been practicing by try-ing to teach some of the fundamentals to various students during the noon half-hour. We might suggest that when they have imparted what they know, they invite Norris and Phillips for a lesson. Unless those two have lost some of their cunning in recent years, some-one should be able to learn something in that game.

x x́x Far be it from us to suggest any nicknames, but if anyone can see Kells riding that mount of his and not think of Sancho Panza, then they just aren't familiar with their Cervantes.

That careworn expression on the face of Major Adler, our long-suffering company commander, is caused by his efforts keep the other eighty-five members of the class reminded that they are due back in Kriz Hall at 12:50 p. m. daily. Later: He gave it up!

x x xThe equitation instructors explained the control stations and that those who checked in early would lose one point per minute, and those who checked in late would lose two points per minute at each station. "How many points can you lose?" inquired Marine Marshall. "Two for each minute you are late, or

We note with interest the appoint-ment of Major Leard as Army Relief collector for the Academic department. We wonder whether it will be some more refined method of holdup.

 $\mathbf{x} \mathbf{x} \mathbf{x}$ We were about to insert an advertisement announcing the loss of 86 perfect papers on map reading, but Stonewall Jackson beat us to it and we now know that there weren't 86 correct cnes, anyway. There were a few with-out a scratch, though Gillis' having received the most effective publicity. There was also at least one "U" just to break the ice, but since the proud recipient of this honor failed to follow the time-honored tradition of posting it on the class bulletin board, we shan't give him any advertising for it. Mike Halloran, presiding gracefully and graciously over a team of harnessed mules at the recent stable management debacle, tells the following:

"One of those mules had a collar on so tight that his tongue was sticking out a foot. Here came a crowd of critics. 'How do you spell collar?' one of them asked me. I told him. Then of them asked me. I told him. Then another joker says 'How do you spell "small"?" 'Look here? I asked them, 'Who's taking this examination?"

X X X We must admit that Albert Helsley deftly removed the forensic hide of Bill Hutson in a demonstration debate on the value of the bayonet as an infantry weapon. Bill, probably by virtue of his position as bayonet instructor at the World's greatest Infantry school last year, defended that sacred weapon. The thing we couldn't get over about the whole affair was the shocking heresy of permitting any infantry officer to stand on a platform at this school and get away with the things Helsey got away with in talking about the bayonet. The trick about it all was that we voted his way, both on the merits of the question, and on the performance of the debaters x x x Everyone took out insurance against being drawn to make the debate on the jury system—and Reiner and Robinson needed it. Reiner won out, but it may have been because, in the course of the debate, Robinson exposed his own police-court record. They weren't really so very unfortunate in being drawn, after all. It isn't long now to Christmas.

x x Quite a bit depends on who does a thing. For instance, when Major Thompson was demonstrating the whys Two for each minute you are face, or one for each minute you are early at a station," was the patient answer. "I mean how many altogether," he insisted. "Not over 100," someone answered him. "Then they'll have to get a new system when Milan happened to catch his eye list, effective October 31.

of scoring," was Marshall's quiet and and be called down to perform on the same horse, somehow, it didn't look the same. And then, Phillips, caught laughit didn't look the ing, also performed. But even he didn't do it quite like Major Thompson.

 $\mathbf{x} \mathbf{x} \mathbf{x}$ Now that equitation is just about over and stable management a thing of the past except for the nervous waiting for that paper to come back, Bevan and Rodwell will probably lose a lot of prestige. We are determined to transfer to one of those mounted branches before we take equitation at this school again. We made that resolution once before, but this time we're going to keep it.

X X X This week's question: "Have you fin-ished your monograph?"

Next week's answer: "No."

As we progress toward the deadline we learn that Lussier on Monday staged another exhibition with Molly. Asa special service to our many readers we promise to endeavor to obtain and an-nounce in advance all future dates for these performances.

X X X When that Paul boy used to get us so dizzy with his speed in logistics confer-ences he wasn't bluffing at all. We did-n't hope he'd get some of those papers untangled before Thanksgiving, and, lo and behold, here they came back to us on Monday. Now some there be who wish he never had gotten them untangled.

X X X The man of mystery is a man of mys-tery no longer. Stanley Saulnier drift-ed in this week with more publicity than the last major-general. He can² take a nice long rest now. Nothing to do but write a monograph, catch up on a few subjects that he has missed, re-hearse for some dramatica and do a hearse for some dramatics, and do a little of the more laborious forms of writing to take part of the burden off the overworked literati of the command.

The hunt last Sunday was a joyous ad friendly affair. The hunts "woand friendly affair. The hunts "wo-men" were only distinguished by their good looks and caps. At the coffee and doughnut period everyone was sufficiently acquainted to inquire, "are you wear-ing your long drawers?" and at the first check after a fierce ride, everyone arrived in pants.

There is a great lack of space on this 97,000 acre reservation. Everyone com-ments about building the houses so close ments about building the houses so close together, so I asked the Construction Quartermaster the why, and he replied that it was necessary to keep the bath roms close together. There may be something in that, but just what, is be-yond my understanding. While on the subject of space, I might mention that I heard Major Lange curse the size of the tennis courts. He seemed to think that since they had so much land they could build them large enough so that he could keep the ball inside the white lines. Major Hoge told him the new courts would be laid out with Engineer Charity Tape,—it gives

Observed among the sportsmen who take their games seriously were: (1) Gene Brine, clubman, going home to get his golf clothes so he could play minia-ture golf; (2) Omar Bradley rubbing "Mary Garden" perfume on his sniff hound so he will keep the scent; (3) Lyman building handle bars on his sad-dle so he can stay on his horse at "the hounds party"; (4) P. Modern culture consists largely in a refined method of finding fault. Your superiority is expressed by criticizing the actions of others in doing things you don't dare even attempt yourself. you don't dare even attempt yourself. She told me that the next time she observes you eating with your knife she observes you cat elbow so you will cut your mouth. In future remember Wordsworth's retort to the critic, "It is hard if they who are lame will not let you limp."

The other night while on a Yom Kippur party with a soda jerking Greek, I was told that the Greek word for school is translated "leisure." The Greek's knew their stuff when it came to making up the English language.

43 WOMEN IN GOLF TOURNEY

Forty-three women teed off in the weekly golf tournament which was played on the Fort Benning Golf Course last Wednesder Forther the term prayed on the Fort Benning Golf Course last Wednesday. Each week the tour-nament takes on a different form. "Va-riety being the spice of life" as the ladies love to say, they chose to have Flag Tournament this week. Briefly, in this form of tournament each player in this form of tournament, each player chooses her own score for the day. If she expects to play top-notch golf that day, she may choose a 45, or if she day, she may choose a 45, of 1 she just knows that she isn't going to play well at all, she may choose—well, we are not giving away any secrets, are we, Watson? At the end of the day's play, Mrs. Allen Kingman's flag waved her 1st prize for advancing the greatest dis-tance. Mrs. "Johnnie" Roosma carried away 2nd prize; while 3rd, 4th and 5th went to Mrs. Winfred Skelton, Mrs. Truman Smith and Mrs. John Meagher, respectively. Each prize was good for a stated amount of golf mer-chandise to be selected by the winners.

Although receiving no prize, the honor for being medalist goes to Mrs. George Kraft, who turned in a score of 41 for nine holes.

Next Wednesday morning, the ladies are planning a two-ball foursome. Those who expect to enter are requested to get their names in early, preferably by Mondav noon.

FORT BENNING, GA., OCTOBER 31, 1930

DEMONSTRATION NOV. 13 WILL JUST STOP SHORT OF BEING A REAL WAR

Benning Preparing Exercise in Which Artillery, Tanks and C. W. S. Assist Attack

Rivaling in extent and scope the famous Kelley problem of by-gone days, The Infantry School will on November 13 put on its "Battalion in Attack" problem, under the direction of Major Norman Randolph.

The problem will be in the nature of a huge demonstration, utilizing all branches of the service available at The Infantry School. The troops to be used will include a battalion of the 29th Infantry, a platoon from the Cannon Company, 29th Infantry, a platoon from the 1st Tank Regiment, a battery of field artillery, medical and chemical warfare detachments, and a squadron of airplanes.

The purpose of this demonstration is to illustrate an attack by a battalion of infantry with a cannon platoon and a platoon of light tanks attached, and supported by artillery and chemical troops. The demonstration will include the issuance of orders for the attack; the preparation fires by artillery and 4-inch mortars (chemical-warfare weapons); the approach march; the fire of machine advance of assault units; the assault; a hostile counterattack against a flank company; the action of the other assault company preceded by tanks to regain the objective; the continuation of the attack; utilizing the reserve to replace a disorganized company. The problem will take place on Hook Range, where the student classes and spectators will have an unexcelled view of the battlefield. The "enemy" will hold Rivet Ridge. The attack of the bat-talion will be directed to the east against Rivet Ridge. The problem is scheduled to last from

The problem is scheduled to last from 8:00 A. M. to 12:00 noon. In the afternoon, the Air Corps with approximately fifteen planes from Lang-ley Field, Va., under the direction of Major Ira A. Rader, A. C., will dem-onstrate how easy it is to "strafe" the lowly doughboy. Bombs will be dropped, smoke curtains will be spread, and a lovely time will be had. Live ammunition will be used in both Live ammunition will be used in both demonstrations and it is imperative that all observers remain within the roped inclosure on Humphreys Hill. Because of safety requirements, accompanying fires will be omitted.

Tomorrow by Schedule of Festivities

The 24th U. S. Infantry will celebrate its sixty-first birthday tomorrow. The occasion will be fittingly observed by all members of the regiment in an allday schedule of festivities. The Companies will assemble at the Service Club at 8:30 A. M., where a schedule of exercises appro-priate to the oc-casion will be con-ducted. The band will play the regimental song and other selections. Talks will be made by the regimental commander, Col. Caffey, and by the oldest soldier and youngest recruit of the regiment. A brief, resume of the his-tory of the regiment will be given by the Recreation officer. Trophics, ath-letic awards and marksmanship medals won during the season will be presented. Upon completion of the above exer-cises, the regiment will be marched to the athletic field where athletic and military competitions will complete the morning schedule. The band will play during the competitions. A banquet will be served in each mess for the enlisted personnel and their families and guests. A dance at the

Three Sets Required to Decide Finals-Capt. Trechter Wins Over Cralle

MRS. GRUBBS WINS TENNIS TOURNEY AT FORT SILL

Word comes from Fort Sill that Mrs. Hayden Grubbs, formerly Miss Sue Brandt of Fort Benning, won the ladies' singles event in the tennis tournament held at the Field Artillery School.

Miss Nancy Ross won the Ladies' No-vice Singles in the Fall Tennis Tournament at Fort Benning by defeating Mrs. Gaston in a hard three-set final match.

Miss Ross in the first set seemed due Miss Ross in the first set seemed due to win without trouble, taking the opener 6-0. But there was where the real battle started. Mrs. Gaston ral-lied, and tied up the match by taking the second set 6-4. The third and de-ciding set went to Miss Ross 7-5. Mrs. Gaston went into the finals oy defeating Mrs. Chester 6-1 and 6-4. Miss Ross won her semi-final match over Mrs.

Ross won her semi-final match over Mrs. Moseley 6-0, 6-3.

Ladies' Doubles

In the ladies' doubles Miss Berry and Miss King defeated Mrs. Lange and Mrs. Marshall 6-2, 6-2. Mrs. Gaston and Miss Ross defeat[^]d

Mrs. Vernon and Miss Atkins 6-3, C-3, and apparently will provide the chief opposition for Miss Dorothy Ross and Mrs. Brimmer, who are favored to win.

Men's Singles

Capt. Trechter, playing steady tennis, defeated Lt. Cralle 6-4 and 7-5 to go into the semi-finals.

Capt. Johnson defeated Major Hoge 6-1, 6-0, and the tennis he has been displaying indicated that he will dis-tribute a lot of grief about the courts before the tournament is over. Collins finally disposed of Thiebaud 6-1, 4-6, 8-6 in a hard match.

Major Smith defeated Major Harding 7-5, 3-6, 6-4. There were no matches played in the men's doubles during the week.

Boys' Tournament William Stayer and Junior Beatry have gone into the semi-finals, Stayer as the result of defeating Jack Wilson 6-0, 6-1, and Beatry by winning over Leroy Wescott 6-0, 6-0. Incidentally if any boy has taken a set in the last year or so at Banning

CHAPEL GUILD

Don't forget the Chapel Guild meeting Monday, the 3rd, at ten o'clock, at the Protestant Chapel. All old mem-bers are urged to attend and bring some of the new members with them. The drive for membership is progres-sing satisfactorily. The total enrollment is approaching the two hundred mark. However, it is believed that there are many other ladies of the garrison who will want to join such a worthy organizaion.

The November meeting of the Par-ent-Teachers Association will be held in the Polo Club on the sixth at two fif-teen, p. m. Following the regular busi-ness session, there is to be some delightful music and tea will be some defight-ful music and tea will be served. Mrs. John Martin, Jr., well known to Fort Benning people, will serve re-freshments, demonstrating "Pleezing Declarate" Products."

All mothers, whose children attend the Fort Benning School, are cordially invited.

This will be an excellent opporunity to join the association and the treasurer will be prepared to receive membership dues.

LADIES' TENNIS TEAM PLAYS ALBANY MATCH TOMORROW

The first of the annual matches with the Albany ladies team will take place at Albany, Saturday afternoon. The rivalry between our neighbors to the south and our ladies dates back only from last spring but has become already an intense one to both teams. Both team matches last year were won by Albany, the first one by the score of 6-3, the second one 5-4, after it seemed 6-3, the second one 5-4, after it seemed that the victory had been safely stowed away by Benning. This fall both teams appear somewhat weaker than last spring. Mrs. Lippet, the No. 1 player of Albany has been ill, so that she can-not play and Fort Benning will miss Miss Brandt, Miss O'Connell and Miss Green of last year's team. No double matches will be played this

"500" CLUB DANCE

An attractive dance was given Monday night at the service club of the 24th Infantry. Special decorations were installed, consisting of Hallowe'en and barnyard motifs. Bales of hay, and pumpkins were used to good effect: Most of the dancers were in costume, many of them in pierrette and pajama outfits.

ORGANIZATION DAY DANCE

November 1st, being Organization Day of the 24th Infantry, the occasion will be celebrated by a dance from 3 to 6 P. M., at the post gymnasium. The or-chestra will play from the boxing ring in the center of the hall. Special refreshments are being planned.

IT IS NOW MAJOR MORDECAI

The promotion of Captain Alfred Mordecai, Medical Corps, to the grade of Major, with rank from October 23, 1930, has just been announced by the War Department.

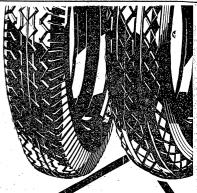

LT. McLAMORE GOES TO HAWAII

First Lieut. Roy T. McLamore, 1st Tank Regt., has just received orders relieving him from assignment and duty at Fort Benning, and assigning him to duty in the Hawaiian Department. He will sail on the February 17th trans-port from New York. Lient. McLamore has been on duty at Fort Benning since September, 1927.

GUNNERS AND SPAREPARTS WILL CLASH TOMORROW

Saturday afternoon the Spareparts and Gunners will clash at the Doughboy Stadium, in a game of football that is attracting wide interest at Fort Benattracting wide interest at Fort Ben-ning. It will be the first appearance of the Spareparts team.

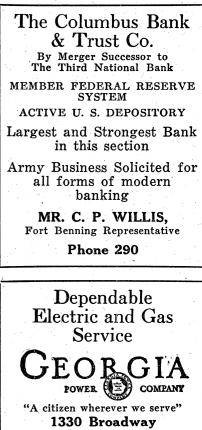

Both teams have quite a few veterans in their ranks and also a generous sprinkling of young high school stars, playing their first army football. The Spareparts are playing their first sea-son in the Intra-Mural league. With the veteran Dutch Berrish at center. the veteran Dutch Berrish at center, and the all-army star, Larry Mitzen in the backfield, the Spareparts have two pivot men that know and play the game. The Gunners have been rebuilt since last season. Derrick, former backfield star of 1927, has returned. The Gunner line has been remodeled and looks to be able to cope with any line in the garrison.

One fact settles all questions

What tires take the safest hold on roads? What tires last longest? What tires stand the most bumps? What tires satisfy the most people on price? One word answers all questions: GOODYEAR. One fact explains why: More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind. They must use them because they like them best.

Game Being Made of Golf and Polo Our Headline Goes Both Ways; If You Are Puzzled, Read Scribe's Outpourings

One of our volunteer deputy assistant reporters, out for a Sunday stroll about the Benning Estates, during his wanderings ran into a new game, and waxed enthusiastic thereabout to the extent of a coupe of pages of copy. The yarn had us a bit puzzled, and at times the enthusiasm seemed a trifle forced; not genuine if you know what

However being neither poloers or golfists, and feeling sure that regard-less of who was insulting whom, if any, that the story would interest both class-es, we decided to run it just as it sprang from our scribe's wrinkled brow and pecking fingertips. Here it is:

It is a game which should probably be called Gigantic Tom Trumb Golf. It resembles golf in some ways, being played with the instruments and utensils used by such experts as Bobby Jones, Col. Wells and Bill Tuttle, Chief of Police. But there are no hampering rules, no troublesome cups to roll the balls into, or anything like that.

The game may be played anywhere but so far the Polo Field seems to be the most popular place. All that is necessary is to get a golf tool and a ball and some hot looking clothes and repair to the Polo Field. Here you may knock the ball in any direction you choose.

If a Polo Game is in progress, it need not interfere with your game because the Polo Field is a big place and there should be plenty of room for players of different kinds.

Of course the older, more conserva-tive followers of the Ancient Scottish Pastime prefer to use the golf course. This course is now several years old This course is now several years old and after you've been around it twice, scenery. An then, everybody on the course is going in the same direction, and with the same object in view. This procedure doubtless palls on a man of spirit and he gives way to man of spirit and he gives way to a natural impulse to get out where there is nothing in the way of tees, greens and golf etiquette to restrain his fancy. We commend this newly discovered manifestation of behaviorism to Col. Stayer, Capt. Schmidt and the other Stayer, Capt. Schmidt and the other psychology experts for study and report. Whatever their answer however, the new golf is a handy and convenient way of keeping golf accoutrements from getting rusty. Moreover it has certain special advantages during a period of business depression in that it is not necessary to belong to the it is not necessary to belong to the Officers' Club in order to play it.

24TH INFANTRY VOLLEY BALL

The 24th Infantry Volley Ball teams are progressing rapidly toward tourna-ment condition. GENERAL KING RETURNS

General Campbell King, commandant, The Infantry School, returned to Fort Benning last Tuesday, after spending a short leave in Washington, D. C., at-tending the First Division Reunion in that air that city. During his absence from the post, Colonel George F. Baltzell, Inf., was in command.

By Capt. Waine Archer

We feel terribly retiring and modest since the all-wise and all-powerful editor last week robbed us of our concealing robe of anonymity. Also, we feel a tendency to caution in what we say from now on. And we are a little uncertain whether to consider it a compli-ment or a sort of disclaimer on his part. ххх

Just to get even we are going to embarras our revered contemporary, The Blunderbuss, and inquire whether "Lady Whippers In" is the proper plural. Per-sonally we have less information on the subject than Jared Wood probably has on some of the subjects that he is re-puted to advise in—but we think Blunderbuss is in a similar state uncertainty. X X X

We, too, are in danger of getting these Stonewall Jacksons all mixed up. One of them gave us a lot of trouble just after the school opened, and now another one (we think) is giving us even more. At the time of writing this, after a long "free" Saturday night spent in fighting our more or less (probably less) esteemed monograph, we think one of them is dead and we are glad both of them aren't if one dead can cause this much grief.

We make it a rule to try to arrive at the fundamental object of the many things that are done to us here. We have about concluded that this monohave about concluded that this mono-graph thing is really to teach us the principle of the objective. We have carefully observed the antics of Stu-dents Lyons, Byers and Jones, all of whom carry on their operations in our immediate vicinity and they seem to be troubled with the same complaint that we are, viz., that of starting out to check up on some statement, picking up the required reference volume and fifthe required reference volume and fif-teen minutes later waking up to the fact that we have forgotten what we were looking for. Not that it makes any difference — we probably couldn't find it is up how find it if we knew.

хх An unprejudiced observer comment-An impregnated observer comment-ed on the newly acquired ease and grace of Corporal Hagan on a horse, shortly before the close of the late lamented course in equitation. "His horse has probably taught him to ride," opined Daughtry, thoughtfully. Which sounds Daughtry, thoughtfully. W bit rough on Jake Moon.

x x xWe have learned one thing about equitation coures though—that the way to bring them to a close is to begin to eniov them.

"I guess this must be 'the fog of war" that they talk about so much," re-marked our efficient platoon guide, Ritchel, as he blinked and yawned after a morning in the library.

Somebody certainly put Louis Mad-dox in a tough spot when they detailed him for a four-hour afternoon period with this bunch of monograph hounds = Wednesday with the dead-line creepon Wednesday with the dead-line creeping up. This is written before the event, but we couldn't be any more cer-tain if we had seen it, that minds like those of Backman, Munteau, Tow and Tom Knight can't be bothered with the details of musketry when they are wrest-ling with the mighty problems of Stone-wall Jackson, Ludendorff — or whom have you?

This system of preparing monograph notes on separate cards is the goods. The theory is that you get yourself a hundred or so cards—just another dime The theory is that you get yourself a hundred or so cards—just another dime —and read your references. When you strike an interesting or important bit, you jot it down on a card together with the page of the reference and then, when you want it, there it is. Here's how it works: You get yourself your first hundred cards and work for four hours -the end of a day or two, every time you finish working—or rather, quit—you gather up hurriedly the snowstorm of cards you have scattered about you, shove them indiscriminately into the old brief-case and hurry home. That night you sit down at your typewriter or your you sit down at your typewriter or your pencil, as the case may be, and gloating-ly reach for your cards. "I'll start this," you think, happily, "with that fine little bit I found in Whosit—or was it Whatsis? I can't remember,"—mean-while you are shuffling busily—"but I can get that dope off the card." The shuffling now becomes a little bit more hurried. "Where is the darned thing?" you mutter angrily. The shuffling now you mutter angrily. The shuffling now becomes frenzied. Cards fly in every direction. Four fall into the waste-basket, which you impatiently kick over; three others, full, you are sure, of juicy notes, drop into the fire, which, for the first time that evening is hot enough to burn them immediately. "I'll swear I had that card,' 'you say-and this time your epithet isn't "darned." You lean back disgustedly, and this brings into your field of vision a nice obscure spot card. You pounce on it before it can card. You pounce on it before it can slip away again and turn it over eager-ly. Eureka! You have found it. But then comes a puzzled frown. You are having trouble reading your own hand-writing. But, finally, you get it all figured out and read the card through from first to last. Then you rise, tear it into as many pieces as possible and hurl them frenziedly into the fire. You have forgotten to note which book it was from! Yes, this absolutely the works. Yes, this card system is

But the real sufferers from all this monograph business aren't the students. How Herbert Perrin manages to keep any assistants in his library beats us. But, not only does he keep them; they are always, at least ostensibly, anxious to help. And how these bachelors and near-bachelors (we omit the mention of the married men for diplomatic reasons) call on Miss Tastula for help. That, however makes it a little easier on Sergeants Glenn and Prudhomme.

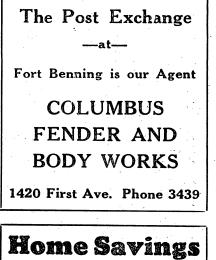

Veterans of the Fort Benning cam-paign of 1926-7 such as James, Daugh-try, Curren, Hutson, Bain, Finney, et al., as well as those of even more an-cient vintage like Shaw, Tom Knight and Munteanu are impressed with the changed conditions from those days when students were students and assemwhen students were students and assem-bly-halls were sieves. In those days you had to get inside your locker to find room to take off your coat; if you needed a map, you knew where you could get an almost new one for only ten or fiften cents; your desk, if any, was a field table confermine there are in was a field table conforming to no speci-fications except that it had to have one at us! We even have nice little baby blue ash-trays.

when foolish people start the engines of their automobiles in closed garages and then proceed to change a tire or do some other tinkering. This provides excitement for the nearest fire company or business for the hospital or under-taker. Every year, in New York City, about one thousand people die from carbon monoxide poisoning. Untold hundreds of thousands are more or less severely poisoned but recover.

Repeated warnings to the public con-stitute the only means of prevention for the "closed-garage-running engine" type of carbon monoxide poisoning. In many cases, this prophylactic does not "take"; thoughlessness, foolishness, and plain downright idiocy allow the grim reaper to take his toll.

GIRL SCOUT GOSSIP

By Emily Brown

Since their first meeting this fall, September 31, the Girl Scouts have made progress. Although we have had only five meetings, we are well organized, and have "swell" plans for the year.

Mrs. Matchett, the new Girl Scout Captain, is being assisted by a Girl Scout Council, consisting of twenty mothers of Scouts.

Finding the girls worked more congenially in smaller groups, Mrs. Matchett has divided them into two troops. The High School girls who meet on Tuesdays, number nineteen, and those from the grade schools, twenty-five. Patrol leaders have been elected as follows: Eleanor Harding of the Card-ingl Patrol Amon Parama Silver Para follows: Eleanor Harding of the Card-inal Patrol, Anne Brown, Silver Fox Patrol, and Ruth O'Neill, of the Mus-keteers; of the younger girls, Mary Jane Davidson, Madelaine Matchett and Kathryn Steel have been chosen. THIRD SECTION TREASURE HUNT (As Prepared by Major (M. F. H.) Williams)

Ever mindful of the safety of lady and gentlemen riders, the horses they ride and the foxes they pursue, and considering that repeated cries of "Ware Duds" failed to definitely eliminate a deadly menace on the sacred drag hunt course, Major (M. F. H.) Williams dashed in to the office of the Safety Officer and demanded action.

The Safety Officer was informed in no uncertain terms of the appall-ing conditions, and was furnished an overlay showing the location of two piles of duds.

No less a person than the Chief of the Third Section, Major Omar N. Bradley, with an expert group of advisers (Capt. C. R. Crim, Mr. Sgt. Magoni and Sgt. White) received the overlay and left post haste for the scene of the near tragedies.

The wanderings of the experts in their efforts to locate the duds by means of Major Williams' description are vividly portrayed in the sketch.

Contours and Detours

Application for membership in the Chattahoochee Valley Geographical and Explorers Society has been sub-mitted on behalf of Major Ira L. Geographical Rader, Air Corps, as the result of his peregrinations during a recent ride ride. Forty-eight of the Beauty and Chiv-alry of Benning, duly equipped with horse and aero mosaic, set forth to locate four stations which were mark-ed on the mosaic with a pencil and on the ground with flags, and then to rendezvous at the Infantry School Stablec Choteau with a view of push-Stables Chateau with a view of push-ing a bit of breakfast into the indi-vidual face.

quested an explanation as to how it was possible for an expert on air mosaics to so misinterpret these documents as to become lost for an hour on the Benning reservation.

Alibi of Major Rader: I was not really lost except in admiration of my charming companion, and tempus fugited, etc., etc. (The Mjor's highly diplomatic explanation was received in silence and cum grano solio.)

Alibi of Mrs. Halloran: The coup-les were numbered and we were No. 13. My companion is air-minded but perhaps the fact that he was on a horse prevented him from reading the measure with his usual perspicacity. mosaic with his usual perspicacity.

Despite the Major's modest diffidence, friends consider that his exploit warrants recognition and the neces-sary affidavits are being prepared for the inspection of Professor McCunniff, Explorers' Society President.

Sir Roger (M. F. H.) Williams resentfully: "Why doesn't your Infan-try School nuisance lay off us horse-men and take an occasional crack at the Dramatic Club?" Mrs. Chance's husband with ill-con-cealed malice aforethought: "Good Lord, man, dramatics on this post is serious business."

Sing ho for the Captain

Capt. J. J. Wilson, Fight Promoter, Humorist, Press Agent, Blah Dispen-ser and Referee, Tuesday night had several difficult decisions to make. But Capt. Wilson has "taken the course" and he knows all about mak-ing decisions. Of course he doesn't ing decisions. Of course he doesn't include the "why" part until a couple of weeks later in his snappy Blah comments, but then that's a mere detail.

But we started to commend Benning's Tex Rickard and we shall try to get side tracked. not

In the very first bout of the even-ing one Krusty somebody was com-mitting murder, malignant maltreatment and mayhem on the person of one Shifty Schroeder. As Shifty arose in the second round for the fourth or in the second round for the fourth or fifth time, preventing the Captain from completing his prostrate arith-metic, even the hardened proletariat suggested verbally, we mean orally, that the proceedings cease, lest it have to turn out for a funeral. Did the Captain yield? Was his judgment swayed ? We did not notice it. And he was right.

it. And he was right. Someone must have given Schroeder what Amos and Andy would call ac-robatic spirits of pneumonia during the intermission (or something equally potent) because he brusquely aban-doned the role of the Corpus Delecti, for that of Pernetrator. He pernefor that of Perpetrator. He perpe-trated to advantage the remainder of the bout and got a draw out of the fracas. Score one for the Captain's judgment.

And then a little later the Captain intervened at an appropriate moment to prevent further and unnecessary atrocities on the person of one Jesse James at the hands of Saginaw Seeley. Public sentiment in these enlightened days does not favor capital punish-ment, even for a Jesse James. This again met with the crowd's approbation.

But where the Captain really scored was in the Doyle-McSomebody esthetic dance, when he threw the performers out of the ring.

A referee is supposed to be booed (that's part of a free-born American's civic rights) but Tuesday night Old Vox Populi stood up on its hind legs and actually applauded the Captain's action action.

All in all, the Captain was having a lot of hard, troublesome decisions to make, and getting away with them It is a well established fact that referees usually give a crowd of peanut purveyors, minor puglists and am-ateur critics a pain in the neck, and that their life is one of grief, woe and brickbats.

So on this auspicious occasion it gives us great pleasure to hand the Captain a bouquet of figurative roses. Note—Nothing that we have said here is to be construed as preventing us, at some later date, from suggest-ing lilies ing lilies.

Close Shave for Comrade St. John

Commissar St. John was recently placed in a most delicate position while fording a small stream on horseback.

Whether the horse considered that water is good for commissars, or whe-ther he desired to prove that his rider was all wet is uncertain; at any rate the gallant steed reclined in the stream and rolled over.

St. John, at the sacrifice of some dignity, escaped the horse but not the bath.

Wilson Awaits Overt Act

Capt. Wilson of the Fourth Section Capt. Wilson of the routh Section is perplexed, to put it mildly. The largest wood pussy the Captain ever saw has recently been observed going under his quarters. After estimating the situation, the Captain decided that the enemy was superior in strength; and consequently he has been averse and consequently he has been averse to bringing on a decisive engagement, or even making a reconnaissance in force. Outside of adopting stringent security measures, Wilson is still vacillating.

Some mild criticism was heard prior to October 17 about "The Angel Intrudes," but be it to the credit of said critics that they were quick to Angel intrudes, but be it to the other of said critics that they were quick to join their sincere praise to that of the audience for this act that proved to be the hit of the evening. The position of the play-reading committee is similar to that of the football coach; the interested appendix advergesses, and public demands continuous successes, and the alibis, let them be ever so good, in case of an "off day" find a cool, not to say hostile, reception.

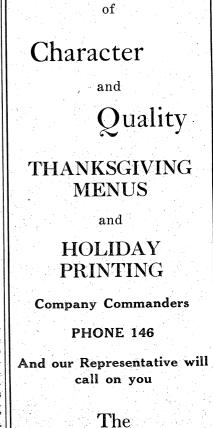

Anton Tchekoff was one of those able Russian dramatists who flourished in the latter part of the nineteenth century, a period which in many ways is analagous to the half-century preceding the French Revolution. Of his works Bernard Shaw remarked: "Every time I see a play by Chekhov I want to chuck all my own stuff in the fire." "The Boor," or "The Bear" may be taken as a good example of the sort of humor admired by the Russians of that period. The study of the psychology of a recently bereaved widow and a hardened bachelor, while it is especially applicable to the Slav temperament, does not miss of a gen-eral application to all races very much. Friday of last week. We sketched. A short phrase but what a world of grief it carries for those serving in "Jack-son's Brigade."

Thursday's sketch probably would not have been so bad had not Capt. Jackson announced that there was a closed coutour in the area. Really from the coutour in the area. Really from the way the class went looking for that closed contour you would have thought that it was some rare specimen that would bring fame and fortune to its finder. But the pitiful thing about it all was the places that students were able to find it. Why Brother Gilmartin was sure that he had it cornered in the bottom of a deep draw and L know was sure that he had it cornered in the bottom of a deep draw, and I know that there was not a single rise in the ground that was not favoured by at least one student, as its resting place. Of course I had no trouble in locating it mucht it myself. On Friday we started out on a sketch

On Friday we started out on a sketch that was to go for record, if it rained on Tuesday, if not we would have to do another one on Tuesday. For Fri-day's sketch the 29th went out of its way to clear the worst area a poor be-wildered student ever cast an eye over. To quote the words of the immortal Morgan, "It was a Lulu." Ridge lines, thousands of them. running clockwise. Morgan, "It was a Lulu." Ridge lines, thousands of them, running clockwise, counter clockwise, and in circles. And a stream that half way from the bot-tom to the top, and at a quarter to five in the evening suddenly changed its mind and started to flow up hill.

Monday was another busy day. In the morning we had two exams, one on the auto-rifle and one on the pistol. Prac-

Dear Eddie: I hardly know where to start, this has been such a busy week, so falling back on the old rule of simplicity I will start at the beginning of where I left off last time, if you get me. Ah, yes, it does not take much prodding of the old memory to remember Thursday and on functioning. on functioning.

Then in the afternoon we went out to shoot the pistol for record. Brann, who was injured playing polo, was seriously handicapped by having to shoot on crutches. Due to this difficulty he was able to make only 97 percent. Profes-sor B-Food, after some sterling work on Saturday morning, tumbled from the heights' amidet eloquent word partects on Saturday morning, tumbled from the heights; amidst eloquent vocal protesta-tions. Eddie Walsh performed just as was expected of him. Noble work, Smil-ing Eddie! "Dry Run" Seebach missed his usual bobber. Oh, yes, you'de be surprised at the number of officers who turned out, voluntarily; on Saturday morning to shoot. If they had been orsurprised at the number of officers who turned out, voluntarily; on Saturday morning to shoot. If they had been or-dered out you would probably hear them growling yet. For once the first squad was not the high squad. Brann was crippled and then Breckenridge is quite an anchor for any squad. Unofficially I think that the tenth squad was high, in spite of being sorely handicapped by George Lightcap. I should like to de-scribe to you the shooting of Brother Gilmartin, but my vocabulary will not allow me to do it full justice. In spite of a deep and sound sleep after every range, Brother Gil was anything but a model for amature students of Jesse James. But the class prize goes to Cralle. This sterling exponent of the art of pistol shooting needed 8 bobbers in order to qualify, and by gum he got them, all 8, exactly 8 and no more.

Since it rained Tuesday Jackson's Brigade held its last meeting indoors doing what is called sketching from notes, some other names I heard it called cannot be printed. Upon being questioned, from the back of the room, as to why it was necessary to do it, Capt. Jackson very candidly replied that that he was darned if he knew why. When I finished my sketch I was worse off than the Captain, I not only did not know why it seemed necessary to make the sketch, but I was darned if I knew what I had made. And so farewell to sketching, though when we get our sketches back it is quite probable that there will be weeping and wailing in camp. Since it rained Tuesday Jackson's camp.

hands of Tunney. The big army battler scored to Tun-ney's head and face with a rapier-like left during the opening rounds. Fans were held in suspense as Tunney let drive his bone crushing right in the opening rounds, but sat back with a sigh of relief as Griffin ducked or neatly blocked these smashes. As the fight progressed and the Tanker continued to keep Tunney missing, while he scored with straight lefts and short body punches at close quarters, the crowd be-gan to warm up and urge the Tanker on.

on. In the seventh round Griffin switched his attack to the body and began shoot-ing his right hand, which had been idle most of the night, smashes to the body in the final rounds had Tunney in a bad way at the finish. During the en-tire fight the Birmingham threat never landed his much famed right on but two occasions, a right to the jaw in the third and a smashing right to Griffin's stomach in the sixth frame. In the meantime the Tanker reached Tunney's face at will with his left jab and bat-tered him with a right hook to the head and body in the final rounds. It was Griffin's fight by a mile and no argu-ments. ments.

Both boys are fast and clever, in fact their speed and clev-erness after a couple of slugging matches made their bout look a little slow. Grumpy Gordy won over Ghost Ghastly by a kayo in the fourth round. This contest was a rough and tumble affair with the referee doing quite a bit of work breaking the fighters. An un-

Kline, Columbus southpaw and Shifty Schroeder of the 29th In-fantry, really stole the show. Kline rushed Schroeder in the opening round and almost had him out with a volley of punches that took the army fighter by surprise. After getting his bearings Schroeder waded in and met Kline half way and fans roared as they battled toe to toe for three fierce and furious rounds. A draw was popular and the bout was one of the best of the season. Kayo Currin and Battling Johnson of the 24th Infantry, put on a three round duel that was little short of murder. Both fighters threw science to the wind and ripped punches into each other with and ripped punches into each other with pile driving force. Currin was given the nod at the end. BOWLING NEWS

Sergeant Glenn of The Infantry School Detachment has had a little advantage over other would-be bowlers of vantage over other would-be bowlers of late and that may be the reason he won the free tickets for the best bowling this past week. Sergeant Glenn works in the Academic Department Library and has conditioned his bowling muscles by pushing large volumes of military refer-ences into the anxious arms of student officers of the Advinced Class. The bowling hall only weighs sixteen pounds. bowling ball only weighs sixteen pounds, whereas some of the monographers are alleged to have received anywhere from 85 to 120 pounds of history to peruse.

Kellys Come From Behind in Final Quarter; Score 13-6

A driving attack, led by Kjelstrom and Tommie Thompson, in the final quarter of Wednesday's opening football game at the Doughboy Stadium, gave the Kellys of the Second Bn., 29th Inf., a 13 to 6 victory over their family rivals, the First Bn., 29th Infantry. The game was played in rain and mud.

Many moons have passed since the green shirted Irish of the First Bats have been able to meet the Kellys on even terms.

The Irish scored in the first quarter. Line plunges and a sweeping end run by Harper carried the ball to the Kellys' 30-yard strip. On the next play, Stevens threw a long pass that was caught by Smith across the Kelly goal line.

The second and third quarters were scoreless. In the second quarter the Irish held on their one-foot line and Stevens punted out of danger.

With the score 6 to 0 against them and six minutes to play in the final quarter, Tinsley recovered an Irish fumble on the 50 yard strip. Kelly gained 15 yards on a wide end run. Thompson skirted left end for 25 yards but the skirted left end for 25 yards but the play was called back and a five yard penalty handed the blue team. Tinsley went off tackle for 5 yards, and then Kelly took a long pass from Thompson on the Irish goal line for a touchdown. Thompson skirted left end for the extra point.

Kelly then crossed the Irish up with an on-side kick that was recovered by Tinsley. A drive from the Irish 40 yard strip with Kelly and Thompson carrying the ball, ended when Thompson, behind perfect interference went over for a touchdown. The kick for goal was blocked.

Harper and Blackstone in the Irish backfield often smeared Kelly plays before they were underway. Stepp, blond headed Irish end, was the outstanding star. His tackling was deadly. Pat Stevens accounted for long gains against the Kells and also recovered three fumbles.

For the Kellys, Kjelstrom was the outstanding star. Tommie Thompson was also a leading factor with his elus-ive broken field running and punting. Tinsley also played well.

The Battalion has discovered a low ball artist in the great game of minia-ture golf when Major Kingman, playing his first game of tiny golf received two golf balls as a prize for lowest score in the recent contest between a selected team of officers from the 24th Infantry and a team from the Tanks. This may qualify Major Kingman for the All-Benning team.

24TH FOOTBALL TEAM READY FOR PANTHER GAME SUNDAY

The Happy Heart team leaves at 7:00 The Happy Heart team leaves at 7:00 A. M. tomorrow for Atlanta according to Coach Ellison, where it will see the game between Clark University and Wil-berforce. The team will then proceed to Chattanooga, where it will play the Chattanooga Panthers on Sunday after-noon. The team has worked faithfully and great improvement is charmed. and great improvement is observed in blocking and tackling. Lt. Saffarons has been assisting Lt. Ellison in the coaching work.

At 4:30 last Sunday morning there assembled one of the largest groups of real sportsmen, sportswomen and sports-children ever collected at that early hour. Counting the family of Major Arnold, there were ninety-eight hunters. that rode out of the Infantry School that rode out of the Infantry School stables. From Major Thompson's steeplechaser "Woolflower" down to the hardy little "Black Beauty" of Arch Arnold all of the "hunters" were out. And don't think that "Black Beauty" conceded a thing to "Woolflower." With his rider he took everything in front of him him.

Moving down Lumpkin Road the field trotted over the new "Cushman Boulevard," crossed Gilbert Creek and came up "Villaret Drive" to the Yankee Road. Here the hounds were cast in search of the quarry, Mr. Porker. After a short hunt the trail was found and the chase was on. The field moved slowly across fields behind the Master, over a ditch, back to the Yankee Road and then off at a canter through the tall pines. While going along at a nice pace one enthusiastic member of the field was unable to decide on which side to pass a big pine tree. He started to the left, then to the right, and too late decided to pass on the left. The horse then took charge of the matter and successfully dodged the tree. Unfortunately, the rider didn't agree with the horse, with a fall as the result. The question now in order is "Did he sign the Book?"

Hunt Staff Gets Busy

The field closed up to where the hounds had Mr. Porker cornered in a brier patch. The Hunt Staff immediately got into action on foot, to catch and tie the game. If anyone wants a thrill we can heartily recommend a scramble in a brier patch with a 300-pound wild hog possessed of two-inch tusks. After nog possessed of two-inch tusks. After three attempts (to the accompaniment of much advice and merry persiflage) the pig was finally downed and hog-tied. Next came the question of who would guard the pig until the wagon ouriged arrived.

A 24th Infantryman spoke up and volunteered for the job, admitting knowing all about pigs. As an after-thought he was told that if the pig worked free he must sit on it. This was a different matter and it took much persuading to get him to rehearse his part when the pig suddenly snapped at his foot. He almost ended the party right

Leaving the soldier warily watching the pig, under Mrs. Hoge's supervision, the field moved off in search of another the field moved off in search of another, wild pig. Soon the hounds were heard in full cry after a pig down in the swamps of McMurrin Creek. The hunts-men and whips rushed in, forced their horses across the creek and all but cornered the second pig. This pig was quicker than his brother and soon charged his enemies. With a snort be charged his enemies. With a snort he

The Master then gathered the field and set out on a long way around to the heights beyond the Keystone Road. Like a good strategist the pig took advantage of the delay and made good his escape. In spite of all that the hard riding whips could do, the hounds con-tinued after the pig through the swamp. right winps could do, the hounds con-tinued after the pig through the swamp. An hour later the whips returned with great tales of having followed through swamps, of pushing their horses down steep slides, and of how cold the water was. They had crossed Weems Bottom.

Arnolds Good Munchers With the loss of the hounds the field gradually disintegrated and dwindled to some thirty optimistics who hopeds for the recovery of the hounds. Meanwhile apples and other eatables began to appear as though by magic. It fairly made one's mouth water to look at the Arnold family munching apples. Toward midday all hope of recovering the hounds was abandoned and what remained of the field moved off for home.

This account of Sunday's hunt would be incomplete without a word of the work being done by the 29th Infantry. The roads are rapidly reclaiming the name of "road" and fields are losing their growth of pines and brush. The Hunt wishes to thank the 29th for the repairs to the many bridges along the Yankee Road. We all hope the few bridges on the Keystone Road will soon be repaired, thus reopening a large terri-tory below Harps Pond.

The Hunt will formally open the hunting season next Sunday, November 2d, with a Drag Hunt. It will start from the Polo-Hunt Club at 8:00 A. M. Cofthe Polo-Hunt Club at $300 A. M. Col-fee and doughnuts will be served be-tween 7:30 and 8:00 A. M. Ine hunt will be followed by a hunt breakfast served by the Officers' Club. Reserva-tions may be made with the Steward of the Club. MINIATURE GOLF

The impetus given to Miniature Golf Tournaments by the tournament last week with the Tanks, and the tourna-ment this week in Headquarters Company, has resulted in nearly all the companies announcing tournaments, for the near future. The course has been very successful during the first four weeks of its existence. It has defrayed weeks of its existence. It has defrayed half the cost of its installation, and bids fair to pay it all in another month.

To stimulate excellency in musketry Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr., the regimental commander, has donated a very handsome cup, known as "The Colonel's Cup," to be competed for annually by a section from each rifle company. The winning organization will retain posses-sion of this cup until won by some other organization.

The test this year was conducted by Colonel Major and consisted of a problem involving range estimation, target designation, fire distribution and fire control. All sections fired the same problem. The section from Company "G" made the highest score and won the cup.

The Regimental Cup for proficiency in Machine Gun Marksmanship was won by the 2nd Platoon, Company "H," who will retain possession of it until won by some other platoon. The test this year to determine the winner consisted of overhead fire at indirect targets and direct fire at indistinct targets. In all firing the targets were invisible to the gunner. The section making the mostest hits on the mostest targets was determined the winner.

Another cup competed for annually is the Regimental Cup for proficiency in the Cannon Company weapons, the com-

The opening game, October 29th, finds the teams representing the 1st Battalion and the 2nd Battalion fighting it out, and all indications point to a close, hard fought battle. Saturday, November 1st, the team from the Special Units Battalion will meet the team from the 83rd Field Artillery Battalion. This should be a very hard fought game full of spectacular plays. Wednesday, No-vember 5th, the 1st Battalion will meet the Tank team who won the champion-ship last year. This merge charled the the second ship last year. This game should be one of the best of the season as the 1st Battalion is determined to revenge their defeat by the Tankers last year.

Company "E"

Every one is looking forward to the new competition inspection system which will be instituted the first of November. We believe most of the men will appre-ciate it after they see the results of this competition inspection. The Colonel is the judge and the company that has the highest percentage will carry the pennant during the month for all forma-tions until the next monthly inspection. OPENING EXERCISES FOR REFRESHER CLASS; COURSE LASTS MONTH

Senior Field Officers Hear Address By Commandant in Jiggs Hall

Fifteen members of the Refresher Course began their course of instruction at The Infantry School Wednesday, when the commandant, Brigadier Gen-eral Campbell King, delivered a welcom-ing address to them in Jiggs Hall. Following the opening exercises, the class attended a Garrison Review on Gordon Field at 11:00 o'clock, participated in by all the combat troops of The Infantry School.

The class this week will take up the organization of foreign armies, gren-ade and bayonet training, characteristics and theory of combat, selection of de-fensive positions, characteristics of field artillery, signal communication, musket-ry, and duties of the Infantry Board and Department of Experiment. The course will last approximately one month.

BENNING PAGEANT NOV. 14

All Benning organizations are pre-pared to perform their "specialty acts" in the annual Pageant which is to be given November 14.

Staged in the natural ampitheater near the water tanks on Ebbert Hill, the event is one of the most colorful of the whole academic year. Spectators will witness the red-coated Infantry School Hunt Club riding to hounds, masterful equestrians and fair equestriennes "dominating 'em," dramatic club players in costume performing, glee club and 24th Infantry chorus' singing, and so on, and so on.

Truly the pageant depicts the activi-ties of The Infantry School,

More Experienced Opponents Win Permanent Possession of Challenge Cup

On Saturday, November 1, the Fort Benning ladies' tennis team traveled to Albany, Georgia, and was there defeat-ed by our old nemesis, the team of Albany ladies by a score of 7 to 2. Albany, therefore, gained possession of the first challenge cup, which had to be won three times to become the nerma won three times to become the perma-nent possession of either team. The Albany courts were in splendid condi-tion for the matches, although the wood-en tapes somewhat handicapped our

The outstanding event of the match from the Benning viewpoint was the playing of Mrs. Brimmer, who showed undoubtedly the finest brand of tennis Her opponent in the singles, Mrs. Brown, was a hard determined player with a very powerful forehand. Mrs. Brimmer, however, was never flustered, and played with determination to win from the very first point. Nearly all rallies were long, but it was generally Mrs. Brown who each time weakened, by netting the ball.

Girls' Tournament

Mary Whitney Strayer won the girls' tournament, dereating Eleanor Bishop in the finals by a score of 6-3, 8-6. Superior steadiness was the deciding factor.

The victor went into the finals as a result of defeating Emily Brown 6-0, 6-2. Eleanor Bishop went into the finals result of winning over Katherine Steel 9-7, 6-3 in their semi-final match.

in taking a set from her opponent, forc-ing the match to three sets. Mrs. Truman Smith and Mrs. Mose-ley also bowed to players of greater experience, but each forced their op-ponents to play their best to win. In the No. 3 doubles match, these two Bennin gplayers, who have only recently taken up tennis, put up an especially determined fight which took the first set from their opponents by the convincing escore of 6 to 2.

Mrs. Moseley's sharp net play was the feature of this match, while Mrs. Smith's steadiness was also in evidence throughout. Both our players tired, however, in the second set, which they lost by the close score of 6 to 4. In the third set Albany superiority was very marked, and they took the set easily by the score of 6 to 1.

Following the matches the Benning guests were entertained at a cabaret dinner at the Radium Springs Country Club, and prior to the matches, a buffet lunch was served at the home of one of the Albany ladies. The team returned to Benning on Sunday morning.

6-1, 6-1. They next face Alderman and Applegate who it will be remembered, took a set from them in the spring tournament. However, conditions are reversed this time. Last spring Lt. Hedekin had suffered a recent injury at polo and in the words of the First Section, his mobility was restricted. Now Lt. Applegate has an injured hand, and while a hard match can be expected, it is probable that Hedekin and Båssett will win in straight sets.

Various causes have kept Benning's No 2 doubles team, Lynch and Grier from playing so far in the tournament.

Boys' Tournament

William Stayer will meet Junior Beatty in the finals of the boys' curna-ment. Both boys have improved their game recently, and should show nice tennis.

William Stayer defeated Buddy Haraing 6-0, 6-2 in his semi-final match after Buddy Harding had beaten B. Coates.

Junior Beatty rallied to win his semifinal match with Dick Tindall after los-ing the first set 1-6. He took the last sets 6-3 and 6-4 by superior two steadiness.

PEST & VERMIN ERADICATOR CO. Broken Bow 3, Mo.

November 5, 1930 Editor, Infantry School News,

Fort Benning, Georgia.

Dear Sir:

In recent numbers of your publication I have seen considerable space de-voted to methods of clearing the reser-vation of Fort Benning of foxes. I am accordingly writing to you with the hope that you may bring the attention of the proper authority to our concern in their attempts to solve this problem. The Pest and Vermin Eracicator Company has been in operation since 1920 but during that time has built up a remarkable reputation. It was founded by a former major in the regular army, a native of Kentucky, which state is overrun with these pests, and who had noted the great annoyance caused to the army by bed bugs, rats and roaches in old army cantonments. At that time we took several government contracts which were completed to the satisfaction of all. Subsequently we have successfully completed contracts for freeing cargo ships of rats.

Foxes, as is well known, are a specie of rodent and susceptible to the same methods of eradication. We can guar-antee to clear your reservation of these vermin in a week's time, either by pois-oning or, in two weeks' time, by trap-In the former case the hides will ping. be capable of commercial use while in the latter a small remuneration may be obtained from the pelt.

We shall be glad to send a representative to confer with you and know you will be delighted with our attractive proposition to relieve you of these ut-terly noxious and disease bearing parasites.

Very truly yours, Pest and Vermin Eradicator Co. Per F. L. M.

We have served Fort Benning Continuously since May 1927

LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY. 3d

Dear Eddie:

Having learned how to make maps we are now endeavouring to learn how to read one. My only hope is that they do not make us attempt to read any of the maps made by the members of the class in the previous course. You know, Eddie, I had forgotten that map reading was such a complicated subject. For the last 4 years I have just been using them to find where I was on the ground, to issue orders from, or even at times fire a barrage from, and it had slipped my mind completely that there were such things as the agonic line, and zones in the grid system of the country, nor had I experienced any great difficulty just because my idea of gisement was rather fuzzy. But now all is changed; such things have been shown in their true light. No more will I walk in darkness.

The class is indeed indebted to Capt. Jackson, first for his masterly presentation of the subject of the grid system of the United States. It was magnificent both for its brevity and for its pro-foundity. But the Capt. really showed foundity. But the Capt. really showed the stern stuff of which he is made, when, under a barrage of questions from the class, he stated flatly and finally, don't know, it was not in the book." What! Our worthy Captain at a loss for words. It could not be so. Ah! Haleston, like a doughty knight of old, hurled himself into the breach, and in an eloquent oration completely silenced all hecklers.

In the second place, not only the class but the entire scientific world is indebted to our worthy instructor . It can only be a question of time before the Nation al Geographic society will take cognizance of the great feat of Capt. Jackson, the discovery of a stream that runs down one hill and up the next. Upon the discovery of this awe-inspiring stream upon the approved solution of an area sketch handed out by Capt. Jackson, a stunned silence fell over the assembly hall, and then an ever increasing buzz of excited wonderment filled the building. There are still a few skeptics in the class who refuse to believe the discovery genuine, but for my part I intend to have the sketch framed and if, ever in the future, some one and II, ever in the future, some one comes up and says, "Hennesy, no stream in the world can flow up a hill," I will just give them a cold look, and say, "Brother, I am a graduate of the In-fantry School, at Fort Benning, Geor-gia, and I learned there that a stream can flow up a bill and if you don't he can flow up a hill, and if you don't be-lieve it here's the 'approved solution.'"

I guess that'll stop them. The towed target firing on Hook range was a most pleasant experience for class and instructors. Pleasant for the instructors who can think how well they put over such a difficult subject in such a short time. Pleasant for the class in that they beat a picked platoon from the 29th Infantry hands down, 15 hits and 11 hits to the 5 hits made by the 29th platoon. Pleasant for the First Platoon in that they beat the Sec-ond Platoon. Pleasant for every individual in the class in that down in his secret heart he knows that he made most of the hits himself. Take "Dry-Run" Seebach, once he got the correct lead he called every shot in. And who could say him nay. Smiling Eddie. Walsh nearly burned the sleeve up with his tracers. Brothers Morgan and Gilmartin not content with simply hitting the target, devised a system whereby it was necessary to make the bullets ricochet from the tow line. Most gratifying. We only hope that the plane pilot was duly impressed.

As I explained last week we are now equitators (that word looks funny, but seems to convey our meaning so we will let it ride). The course consists of the anatomy of the "orse," his housing, joined are urged to do so.

feeding, shoeing and last but not least mounting one and trying to ride it. Capt. Lee presented the anatomy in very much the same terms and names for the parts as was shown us in our movie last week. There were a few dif-ferences, but after all it's the horse that we are most interested in. And, speaking of charts, he had the most de-lightful chart of the interior decorations of a horse we have ever beheld. tions of a horse we nave ever benefit. Capt. Wood, fashion adviser to equi-tators, has explained the housing and feeding of the horse. "Just common sense, feed him like you would yourself, only the more times a day the better." S'allvicht but personally we don't eat S'allright, but personally we don't eat oats and hay. The main difficulty with the horse seems to be too many and too small stomachs. Perhaps the Department of Experiment could be called in on the problem.

Now, Eddie, I have watched the ladies' riding classes here for many moons, and I have also listened to the comments passed on them by many offi-cers, but I give you my word that I never saw a ladies' class that bounced on horseback much more than some of our officer classes.

Some seem to prefer to ride on the neck, some on the croup, and some have gotten it down to a system where they hit the saddle every other stride, the alternate strides being spent, first on the neck and then on the croup. The members of the advanced platoon have been issued green remounts and no in-struction. The powers that be must have come to the conclusion that Lt. Bell, of the Horse-Marines, had been born on the back of a bucking bronk. So far we have had but two casualties. gotten it down to a system where they we have had but two casualties. So far Lt. McKnight, instructor of the ad-vanced platoon went off the very first However his horse fell down day out after throwing him, thus saving him from signing in the book. Reed Graves picked a plowed corn field to pull his dive in. It seems that Reed's horse shied at a bag of cement (now who ever heard of a bag of cement in a corn field) and when he shied, Reed, who was thinking about gisement, inadvertently kicked him in the head. Result, the breeches which Reed had just had patched at the tailor's had to go back again for a bigger and better patch.

Y'rs Tr'ly, BONAPART HENNESY, 3_D. P. S. The earthquake reported last week end was probably only Gilmartin introducing Montgomery to the "Long Corps Yell."

AHA, FISHERMEN'S SECRET EXPOSED: SCRIBE LEARNS WHERE TO GET 'EM

Sgt. St. Clair and Catch

By Al Durden

During the past summer months a number of Benning's rod and reel artists have been stealing away in the wee worning hours and returning home with catches of black bass that far surpassed the dreams and imagination of the ordinary fisherman. The big question was, "where is this wonderful fishing ground?"

The secret is now a secret no longer. The members of this select circle so far forgot themselves as to invite "ye scribe" to spend the week end in these magic waters and the story is too good to keep.

Master Sergeant William St. Clair, high kleagle of the mystery fishing club, picked me up at the post gymnasium last Friday evening at three o'clock, and with the back seat of his car loaded with tackle, groceries and bedding, we headed due south. At Dawson, Ga., we stopped for sandwiches and coffee, and then continued on our way. Just as the sun be-gan to hide itself behind the western banks and dusk began to settle, we turned off the main road, crossed a wide dark stream that I later learned was the Chickasaw Hatchee creek. The fishing lodge is situated about two hundred yards further up the road from the creek. At one time a stately country home, the building is now a bit run down but is in excellent condition for its present use. By the time we had unloaded and carried our luggage inside, darkness had settled and we used a lantern to get wood for a fire. Wood is plentiful and it was only a few minis plentiful and it was only a few min-utes before a roaring fire was going in the big fireplace in the kitchen. Fif-teen minutes later, Sgt. Pop Heckert and Sam Fuller, who had left Benning during the morning and had been fish-ing during the afternoon, arrived with a splendid catch of bass and speckled nerch. perch.

Fast One by Sgt. St. Clair

Sgt. St. Clair took first honors with a story of a minnow that he revived by rubbing with a few drops of bootleg liquor. He said that the little fellow was hardly able to swim until the rub down; he then put him on his hook and cast out into the lake; a moment later cast out into the lake; a moment later his float went down with a "bang." When he heaped in his line he found that the little minnow had seized a three pound bass back of the neck and held on until the bass was safely in the boat.

At the break of day, the following morning we were on our way to the lake and a day's fishing. I expected to see a lake but not an inland ocean. Sgts. Heckert and Fuller were using live minnows and went still fishing. Sgt. St. Clair had engaged a boy to row for him to cast but when the boy did not show up, I volunteered to act as boatman.

After bumping numerous stumps and floating logs, we finally arrived on the edge of the lake where the Nochaway creek joins its dark waters with that crystal clear Chickasaw Hatchee. of the Several casts brought no results and Sgt. St. Clair changed his rainbow minnow for a jointed pike. His first cast fell near the trunk of an old cypress stump, the next moment there came a splash as a mighty old "mossback" bass struck as top speed. "Hold the boat," should Sgt. St. Clair. That holding the boat was new to me. A moment later the wiry old bass, aided by the drifting boat, reached and entangled himself in one of the numerous refer of limba one of the numerous rafts of limbs and logs that are to be found in the lake. Needless to say the bass went free and I listened to a few words of advice

At ten o'clock in the morning we pulled for the shore with a fine catch of bass and several large jack. Another surprise greeted me at the boat land-ing. I found that this fish haven was known to several more Benning fisher-men. Capt. Helsley and Lt. "Jake" men. Capt. Helsley and Lt. "Jake" Moon had just arrived and pushed off for the fishing grounds as we came in. A few minutes later a party of fisher-men landed and came up with another men landed and came up with another fine morning's catch. In this party was Capt. Evans, Capt. Nevins, Capt. West-cott and Capt. Chance. Their catch con-sisted mostly of bass, with several jack and two large perch. The large speckled perch will strike a small minnow the same as a bass.

INFANTRY SCHOOL NEWS

The Brief Case

By Capt. Waine Archer We had hoped to dismiss, unlovingly and without regret, the subject of the written monograph from this column with the last issue. But some things re-quire recording, and even with that record, we fear the end is not yet. x x x

There was the case of Ernest Jones. We don't believe it could happen, even though he, in person, confirmed the re-port as received. Ernest strove, man-fully and laboriously all one afternoon and finally leaned back and heaved a sigh of satisfaction. He had achieved a well-night perfect map. Unfortun-ately, however, no part of the area dealt with in his monograph was on that map. There was the case of Ernest Jones. with in his monograph was on that map. He had transferred the wrong one. x x

Then, there was Gillis. (And if you want to make a friend of him, don't want to make a friend of him, dont pronounce his name as you spell it.) He is by way of being quite an engin-eer and was going to turn out a map that anyone might view with pride. He did. But he didn't leave enough time after its completion to write his mono-graph without considerable hustling. ххх

And finally. Being essentially modest, and shrinking visibly at any thought of intruding a personal reference into the white light of publicity that beats upon while light of publicity that beats upon this column, we feel, nevertheless, that a bit of advice given us by one of the learned members of the revered Fourth Section deserves even this medium of transmission to posterity.

We drew, for our monograph subject, the very important Second Battle of Bull Run. At least, it has been important to us since October 11 and will continue to be for some days yet. Laboring indefatigably, day and night (we were afraid the Fourth Section wouldn't know unless we told them) we finally started putting our burning thoughts into cold type—and they ran into considerable type.

"I'm afraid," we ventured, to one of these fortunate gentlemen who know all about how monographs should be written -and why, "that my monograph is go-ing to run too long."

"What's your subject?" condescend-ingly inquired this Olympian.

"The Second Battle of Bull Run," we faltered.

"Let it!" he said, quickly and with cruel meaning. It didn't make us angry then; but when we figured it out, it did.

Frank Curtis is authority for this bit, demonstrating that you can put a good automobile driver astride a horse, but you can't, thereby make her but you can't, thereby make her equine-minded. The lady in question, whose name was withheld from us, is not yet a good rider (that eliminates quite a few) but is a good driver. She was sitting astride a horse at the top of the hill near the children's school. Some friends were passing in a car, and desiring to attract their attention, she leaned forward and pressed gently on the horse's withers twice with her thumb -and then looked surprised when no -and then looked surprised when no "honks" came out. We know one lady to whom this might very well have hap-pened, but we refuse to take the risk of making a guess.

KEEN INTEREST IN MARCO POLO PLAN

Roger Williams Reaches Decision

CONCLUSIONS OF INFANTRY BOARD

The proposal to dedicate the Benning opment of the Infantry School is most Polo Club to Marco Polo continues to interest Benning horsemen, historians responsibility for its success. A citation and others.

As indicated in the last issue of t.e News, a study has been made by mem-bers of The Infantry Board, and an informal memorandum prepared on the subject. The memorandum follows:

> THE INFANTRY BOARD Fort Benning, Ga.

Memo for Maj. Thompson.

The members of the Infantry

1. The members of the Infantry Board have consulted informally, on the subject of dedicating the Polo Club to the memory of Marco Polo. 2. These officers have expressed themselves as seeing no objection to do-ing this. Already we have establishel a precedent. We have Jiggs Hall, we have a monument to Calculator, the dog mathematician and we have a horse mathematician, and we have a horse named Jake Moon.

named Jake Moon. 3. As far as the Polo Club is con-cerned we may as well name it for Mar-co Polo as for any one else. Marco has been dead a long time and can't object. And we have nothing else around here named for him. What is more, the ennamed for him. What is more, the en-phony of his name attracts. Consider how well it would sound to name one of our fields the Marco Field. When spoken of as the Marco Polo Field a complete picture is presented. The gal-loping horses, the flashing helmets and the cheering throngs of gaily-decked spectators are immediately brought be-fore us. And in the same breath we do honor to Marco himself.

4. This conservation of language, a merger of description and eulogy,—is a most desirable thing,—especially in the hard times following the Stock Market crash, and it is recommended. 5. We have ascovered a peculiarly interacting thing about Market interesting thing about Marco. He was born in 1254. His father had gone off on an official trip to Cathay in 1249 and did not return until 1269, so that Marco was offered as a surprise to the old man on his return. In short, his origin is somewhat shrouded in mystery.

6. In a like manner we find that the origin of the Polo Club is lurking behind a smoke screen,—that is to say the building itself. Whereas, ordinarily a building is conceived here and manner. building itself. Whereas, ordinarily a building is conceived, born and razed under the jealous eye of the War De-partment, the Polo Club appeared, as it were, overnight, fashioned of bits of cord wood, logging camp scrap and other flotsam and jetsam. The War Department was no doubt as surprised as Marco's old map when it found a as Marco's old man when it found a new child in the lap of Fort Benning.

7. The similarity of origin in the cases of the Club and Marco lend a rather romantic touch to the proposed name.

8. As for the mural plaque—the sug-gestion is excellent. I have no idea as to what would satisfy the artistic reto what would satisfy the artistic re-quirements. But I can conceive of Marco standing at the bow of one of his ships, a Chinaman on one side of him and an Ethiopian on the other. In one hand he holds a telescope through which he is looking at the Pacific Ocean, and in the other he has a polo mallet. The China-man holds three polo balls and the Ethiopian is rolling dice. In the dis-tance, in the direct line with Marco's scope is the Fort Benning Polo Club scope is the Fort Benning Polo Club. 9. Over the top is a scroll bearing the legend, "Polo, Polaris, Polish," which freely translated, "Over the Alps lies Italy"

10. Festooned about the lower edge of the plaque are 37-mm. guns, rifles, bayonets and hand grenades, tastefully arranged, and below all the motto, "Follow Me." Follow Me." 11. The interest shown in the devel- Area have been detailed as students to Say you saw it in The News.

The publication of the details of the proposal in the News has resulted in considerable discussion and several suggestions.

One suggestion was that it would be appropriate to obtain an autographed portrait or photograph of Marco to hang in the club. The following memorandum by Major Freehoff is one of the most pertinent on the subject.

the subject:

A few days ago there came to my desk a communication requesting the purchase for the Polo Club of a por-trait of Marco Polo who was alleged by aforementioned communication to be the founder of the game of shinney on horseback horseback.

There seems to be some difficulty on the part of the Property Officer in ob-taining a likeness of the distinguished Venetian. My suggestion is that if the desired portrait cannot be secured, a photograph of Pola Negri be substituted.

tuted. In view of the official designation of this building as the Polo-Hunt Club, it is suggested that pictures of Coionels Charles A. and Elvid Hunt be secured to adorn the walls of this interesting and useful edifice. These pictures should be hung on each side of that of Polo Negri which would thus be en-hanced by the proximity of stern charhanced by the proximity of stern char-acterial fibre.

There might also be displayed like-ness of others who have distinguished themselves by conspicuous gallantry upon the field of refreshments. In this category the immortal Mulhall should be given a place commensurate with his

far-reaching adventures. W. F. FREEHOFF, Major, Infantry

After a long and exhaustive search with the Encyclopedia Brittanica and other musty records, Sir Roger Williams regretfully came to a definite conclusion which he announced in the following terms:

"Oh, hell, polo was played before the birth of Christ."

THE WOMAN'S EXCHANGE

The Woman's Exchange, although only a little over a month old, is a thriving infant industry. The line of cars outside of the Book Shop indicates that an ever increasing percentage of the garrison is finding it advantageous to patronize this well managed business concern.

A large share of the small margin of profit which the Woman's Exchange makes on the articles it sells goes to the Children's School and, as an enterprise designed to aid an essential garrison activity, it is deserving of support. It is not public spirit, however, so much as private interest which is responsible for the steady growth of the volume of business which is being done by the Exchange. The attractiveness of the stop with its variety of articles on sale and the excellent bargains to be found there are drawing the patronage. You can buy or sell anything from an imported evening wrap to a home-made apple pie.

In spite of world wide depression, sellers are finding a market and buyers are discovering just what they have been looking for in the little cooperative store that the ladies have established in the new addition to Captain Chapman's Book Shop.

To those of you who don't know the Woman's Exchange, we suggest a window shopping expedition. We frankly confess that the suggestion is merely a trick to boost the business. We know that if you go to look, you will almost certainly stay to buy. The only safe thing to do, if you hope to break even on such an expedition, is to take something along to sell. By adopting this course, you may acquire that table runner that you need and get rid of that cigarette box of your husband's that you never cared for anyway. The exchange will satisfy you, please someone else and incidentally benefit the dear little bridge, golf, dancing, riding class and dramatic club orphans who regularly turn in disappointing report cards on the first of every month.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector BEWARE OF MOLLIE

All summer Mollie Cotton Tail has been having a glorious time. Food has been plentiful and Mollie and her children have waxed fat and sassy.

Now with the cool weather, the hunter gets down his gun, calls his dog and sets forth. He starts out loaded down with ammunition with the avowed intention of bringing back the legal limit of birds but usually returns with a rabbit or two if nothing else. Until recent years the rabbit meat industry has been of considerable importance; justly so, for well prepared rabbit meat is not to be scorned. However, for the past 2 or 3 years wild rabbit meat has greatly declined in popular use. This is due to the increasing prevalence of a disease among rabbits which is highly infectious for human beings. This disease is called tularemia, or rabbit fever.

It spreads among rabbits by direct contact or by means of ticks or lice. Man gets infected by handling the sick rabbit.

Hunters, market men, housewives and cooks are most apt to get it. Once me meat is cooked it is no longer dangerous. Strange to say, domestic or tame rabbits have never been found infected. The disease in man is very dangerous, often fatal.

The infection starts through a small, even unrecognizable break in the skin. If blood from the rabbit spatters into an eye a serious form of the disease results. Even breathing hair or dust coming from the body of a diseased rabbit may cause human infection.

That mortified look on the usually dynamic visages of the First Section Tacticians is all due to their overhearing a telephone conversation in which Major Ira Rader completely failed to make a clear-cut decision but endeavored in the most ignominious fashion to pass the buck to his wife.

to his wife. "Now, dear," they heard him say. "We have a chance to move into one of the new quarters. But you know we are pretty well fixed where we are; we have a lot of friends there and would have to make new ones in Fourteen, we have a nice lawn, and there is no grass around the new quarters, then we are more convenient here to the golf links, and I don't know about those garages. But I want you to decide. Don't let me influence you in the least."

onward. The ladies, tense with excitement, pursued en auto. Ever and anon the quarry stopped in the road, allowed the ladies to approach, and then dashed onward.

While the quarry finally escapes, the ladies were thrilled over the afternoon's sport, and their enthusiasm even survived the grumbling complaints of Lieut. Golightly about their having needlessly endangered the Golightly means of getting from Hither to Yon. "I can see only one advantage in this so-called sport," he said. "There is no danger of losing the scent."

Can Such Things Be?

Be of good cheer, brothers. There still is hope. The spirit of '76 still lives. The old rugged, stalwart character emerges triumphant from the artificial veneer of conventionality.

Infantry School Introduces Robot

Constantly alert to the many mechanical devices which are appearing to simplify human existence the efficient Horse Committee of the second section has made another forward step in securing a robot to close the doors of the Infantry School Stables, at least this is what we gather from the final sentence of Captain Jared Wood's announcement of the Fall Horse Show, which reads: "The door of the office (i. e., stable) will be closed promptly at 4:15 P. M., by the Western Union electric clock in the office."

Wedding Gift Committee Exonerated

The faculty's wedding present to Col. and Mrs. George C. Marshall, Jr., was on display at the office of the secretary for several hours on Wednesday morning. The Blunderbuss wishes to be among the first to assure the popular bride and groom that no uncomplimentary significance should be attached to the fact that the gift committee's selection fell upon a beautiful chered subar narpherry how

SHRAPNEL BURSTS

Look! Listen! Coach Gaston's gallopbook! Listen! Coach Gaston's gallop-ping redlegs won a football game last Saturday by defeating the Special Units 29th Infantry with a score of 20 to 7. We believe that our flare of exultation is both justifiable and pardonable as this is the first football victory that has follow to the Artillary battalion for four fallen to the Artillery battalion for four years—"believe it or not."

We received a welcome from Captain Mallett during the past week. He is building monuments on the battlefields, building monuments on the battlenelds, and one for the Navy at Brest. Affairs are shaping up so that we think we might get in a few hours train-ing during the next ten days. The closing of our gunners' examina-tions is a relief to all of us. Our sat-isfaction came from the knowledge that the work had been well done. The Battalion is deeply appreciative of the co-operation of the 29th Infantry and the Tank Battalion in allowing us to use their towers as observation posts for the expert tests. It is a fine feeling to know that one has such good neighbors.

Hunting has become one of the chief topics discussed around the orderly room during leisure hours. Major Faligant will no doubt be among the first in the field when the season opens, as he is one of Benning's foremost huntsmen.

Fatso Williams, former Greencord slum scorcher, quit the service during the past August and returned to his Delat home, to go into the saw mill "bizness." The summer was okay but "bizness." The summer was okay but with the first chill of winter our old friend caught a Benning bound train. He arrived Monday and requested that he be permitted to take on another stack, as the sawmill had blown up. It seems that Pfc. Jack York was a prize find for the Children's School. Jack keeps everything about the place in top shape. Besides this he is a great fav-

Pvt. Cochran: "Them ain't my feet Them is Corp. Wise's feet in the rear rank."

Reports for pay day are about the same. Spanner Wrench Benniefield lost another thousand. Snappy Bennett took the pledge again. Jazz Magoni has fully recovered from an operation for haliwhazus. Ashe turned down contract with Buffalo. Tienstin Wright went on the air pay day night. Baldy Ewell is still in first place among the "Big Shots."

Consequently, no detail is overlooked in presenting a subject to a class. We have been imbued with this doctrine. Also, been imbued with this doctrine. Also, we once met some very nice people who told us that some years ago while in New York they did not go to see "The Gold Diggers" and that they did not in-tend to see "All Quiet on the Western Front," as they did not care for West-ern plays or pictures. All this is pre-paratory and apologetic to stating that "The Twelve Pound Look" refers to Eng-lish pounds sterling and not avoirdupois. The Infantry School Hunt By M. F. H.

The first formal hunt of the season was not scheduled to start until eight o'clock last Sunday morning but there were many alarm clocks ringing around reveille. The hunting enthusiasts were breaking out new equipment. Thanks to the prayers of Mesdames Hoge and Knight, the day was perfect,—cool and snappy, with lots of sunshine. For the first time in the history of the Infantry School Hunt its two lady whips appeared in the regulation "hunting pink." They were a distinct addition to the looks of the hunt as well as a decided help in handling the hounds. Our hats are off to both of them for the workmanlike manner in which they whipped in stray hounds. Even the dashing DeWare would have been put to shame by their efficiency to shame by their efficiency. After a run of two hours the hounds After a run of two hours the hounds reached the end of the scent to find an enormous piece of meat awaiting them as a reward for an almost perfect run. After they had breakfasted with vigorous appreciation the field was quite ready to head back to the Polo-Hunt Club for the deservedly famous hunt breakfast of eggs, sausage, grits and coffee.

coffee. Later, with Mrs. Villeret at the piano, the assembled field made the rafters ring with such old hunting tunes as "John Peel" and "Drink, Puppy Drink." Next Sunday there will be a Wild Cat Hunt. The field will leave the crossing of Gilbert Creek and Lump-in Road at 5:30 A M. November 9

The first two competitions in the Officers' Bowling League were played on Monday between the Company Officers' team and the Advanced Class and the other between Headquarters, The In-fantry School and the Instructors of the Academic Department.

The team of the Advanced Class, Team C, was weakened by the absence of some of its best bowlers such as Capt. Fielder and Capt. Don Hilton. Infan-try School Headquarters and the In-structors both presented very strong structors both presented very strong teams. The second game between these two teams resulted in a tie and it was necessary to bowl an extra frame to decide the winner. In this extra frame, after bowling out the spares and strikes, the Instructors scored a total of 81 to a total of 75 for Headquarters. The cap-tains of both these teams led their team-mates in high scores. Major Lewis maxtams of both these teams led their team-mates in high scores, Major Lewis man-ing a total of 552 and Major Stivers making the exceptionally fine total of 602. TANKERS DEFEAT IRISH. 20 TO 0 IN HARD GAME: LONG PASS IS A FEATURE

The Second Tank Battalion battered its way to a 20 to 0 victory over the stubborn defense of the Fighting Irish-men at the Doughboy Stadium Wednesday afternoon.

"Knubb" Bennett, Tanker fullback, who smashed and battered at the Irish who smashed and battered at the Irish line for many gains, and Jack Harper, Irish quarterback, who met the Tanker charge on the line of scrimmage on the defense and hurled accurate passes on the offense were the outstanding per-formers. Stepp, Irish right end, and Gares at center came in for a big share credit, along with Blackstone, Irish fullback.

fullback. The two Tanker veterans; "Sully" Sullivan, and "Knub" Bennett, were the high lights of the Tank offense. A long pass, Knub to Sully, in the second quarter was one of the outstanding plays of the game. Sullivan took the pass and galloped 40 yards to a touch-down. Vallery played a heady game at quarterback but had a bad day on fumbles. Two of his fumbles came with the Tankers within the shadow of the Irish goal post, and each time an Irish player recovered. Lt. Roberts started the Tanker second Lt. Roberts started the Tanker second Lt. Roberts started the Tanker second string in the opening quarter. Punts were exchanged and both teams battled on even terms throughout the period. The Tanker first string took the field near the end of the quarter. The Tankers opened the second quar-ter with the ball in their possession on their 40 ward string Bennett hit center.

their 40 yard strip. Bennett hit center for six yards and Joris made it a first down on a sweeping end run. Sullivan bounced off-tackle for 12 yards and a first down on the Irish 27-yard strip. Vallery fumbled and the Irish kicked out of danger, but line smashes by Sulli-van and Bennett and a 15-yard end run by Vallery carried the ball to the 20-yard strip. Joris whipped around right end for 13 yards, and a first down on the 7 yard strip. Bennett ploughed through the line for a touch-gown. Joris was wide with his kick for goal. Score 6-0.

After an exchange of punts, it was the Tankers' ball on the 50-yard line. Joris gained 7 yards around left end. On the next play, Sullivan cut down the field, took Bennett's pass on the 40-yard mark and galloped across for a touch-down. Bennett kicked a field goal. Score 13 to 0.

Score 13 to 0. The third quarter was scoreless with the Irish holding stubbornly. In the fourth and last period, with Bennett leading the attack, the Tankers forced the Irish back to their three yard line and then Bennett drove through for a touchdown. Joris Kicked goal. Score 20 to 0.

With only two minutes left to play, Harper turned loose a flurry of passes with fairly good success. The final gun went with Bennett racing toward the Irish goal line with an intercepted pass. He was stopped by Reeves on the three yard strip.

ARTILLERY WINS OVER SPAREPARTS IN FIERCE GRIDIRON DUEL

The black jersied "Pirates" of the Special Units, 29th Infantry, met defeat at the hands of the "Crimson Tide" of the 83rd Field Artillery, at the Doughboy Stadium, last Saturday, in their first appearance in the Benning Intra-Mural football league, 20 to 7. The game was featured by deadly tackling and clean, fast football.

The first quarter looked like a Pirate victory. On the first play after the kickoff, Abrams, Pirate fullback, got loose and clicked off thirty yards before he was stopped on the Tide's 20 yard strip. After two plays at the line failed to gain, Mitzen passed to Barton, who went over for the first touchdown. Jimmie Hayes Kicked goal for the extra point. Score 7 to 0.

The Pirates kicked and West recovered when Pike fumbled the punt on his 30 yard line. Three plays at the Tide line failed and Mitzen tried a pass. Swayze, Tide back, raced in and inter-cepted the pass and was stopped by Mitzen on the Pirate 40 yard strip. Pinton swept around right end for 11 yards. Swayze went to the Pirate's 12 yard line on an off tackle play. The Pirates held and the ball went over on their 10 yard strip. Hayes kicked and it was the Tide's ball on the 50 yard strip. Pinton hit center for 7 yards. Derrick slipped around left end for 8 yards and a first down. A pass, Derrick to Swayze, gained 20 yards. It was the Tide's ball on the Pirates 25 yard strip at end end of the quarter.

Line plunges by Derrick and Pinton carried the ball to the Pirates 10 yard strip, early in the second quarter. La-Bonte recovered on a Tide fumble. Hayes kicked to Derrick, who was stopped by Mitzen on the Pirates 40 yard line vard line.

Derrick got away around right end for 16 yards. Three plays at the line put the ball on the Pirates 12 yard strip. On a fake pass, Pike went around left end for a touchdown. Der-rick carried the ball over for the extra

A fumble paved the way for the extra point. Score 7 to 7. A fumble paved the way for the sec-ond Gunner touchdown. Derrick recov-ered on his own 45 yard line. The Tide gained around the Pirate ends at will. They marched down the field with Der-rick and Pinton comving the cell. Dirrick and Pinton carrying the call. Pin-ton made the final dash from the 8 yard line. Derrick drop kicked goal. The third and final score came a few minutes later when Pinton took a long pass with a clear field and galloped 60 yards to a touchdown. The Pirates broke through and blocked the kick for goal.

Both teams fought fiercely in the final minutes of play but there were no more scores.

Mitzen, Abrams, Hayes and Berrish were the outstanding stars for the los-ers. Pooch Derrick, Swayze and Pin-ton tied for honors with the Tide. One of the outstanding features of the game was the work of the Tide's backfield. Springing a new brand of backfield. Springing a new brand of play with a trick shift, the Gunners gained most of their yardage on twisting end runs that puzzled the young Pirates who had never been coached against the play the play.

POLO SPEEDS UP NOW

Sunday's polo gave fans their first thrill of fast polo as Major Lyman, Post Polo Representative, informed all team captains that slow polo was over and that the horses could run.

that the horses could run. Taking advantage of this, the 29th In-fantry put up a winning combination of players and horses, and had little difficulty with teamwork, scoring at will. Their opponents, the 83d Field Artillery, still searching for combina-tions, rotated players from position to position and did not attempt other than instructional teamwork for the new instructional teamwork for the new players.

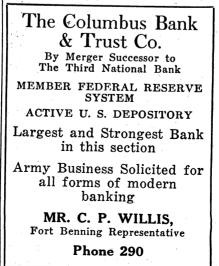

In the last game of the afternoon, the 'Blues" or Students played the "Yelows," those spectacular, hard-luck, Freebooters of last year. It is hard to fore-cast the final lineups of these teams. The enormous squad of the Blues, 26 players, places a hard task on the team captain. The Yellows, with 17 players, captain. The reliows, with 17 players, are trying to divide into two teams as early as possible. Sideboard birds ex-pect to see the three Majors riding in column with keen competition for the other position. When directly question-ed, Major Lyman could not be pinnea down to a decive statement as to his down to a decisive statement as to his lineup. "You may quote me as follows: I believe that my final team will consist yellow colors. They will be required to ride horses during the game. Beyond that, my lineup is tentative."

Company "B" played Company "C" two games of volley ball on Wednesday afternoon, winning them both. The first game was 15 to 9; the second 15 to 12. The following named teams are ready for games and will play Sunday: Com-panies "B," "C," "G," "F" and "E."

RANGE GUARDS' OUARTERS IMPROVED SGT. THOMPSON AN EXPERT HUNTER

Sergeant Thompson's Quarters

Editor's Note: Fort Benning Mili-tary Reservation, with its 97,000 acres of varied terrain, is so large that many Benning people have not had the opportunity to learn of its many interesting features. By taking each hunting area in turn each week, the News plans to acquaint its readers with the wonders of the reservation.

During the early days of Fort Benning, forest fires were frequent occur-rences. No respect for the fish and game season was shown by poachers on the reservation and much damage was done by these thoughtless trespassers.

Today an even dozen men patrol the reservation, protecting the fish and game from would-be poachers, always on the lookout for any indications of a forest fire and keeping a sharp lookout for trespassers.

trespassers. In the past eight years, the results have been remarkable. The woodlands now abound with wild game, such as wild turkey, wild hogs, coons, opos-sums, rabbits, squirrels, snipe, woodcock, quail, duck and wild geese in season. Stocking the ponds and streams of the reservation from covernment batcheries Stocking the ponds and streams of the reservation from government hatcheries has given Benning fishermen a summer paracise for this sport. The wood fires that once were so devastating, are al-most a thing of the past. With the first indication of fire, the range guard who discovers it gets in touch with the garrison. In less time than it takes to fell trucks loaded with men and fire tell, trucks loaded with men and fire fighting apparatus are on the scene and the fires are smothered before serious damage is done. Until recently, the range guards have been living quietly with their families in their respective areas, carrying on their work of watchfulness while the rest of the garrison hardly realizes that the range guards exist. A few weeks ago it was brought to the attention of Post Headquarters that twelve range guards were living with their families in quarters that were once the old plantation homes of the southern planters of the Chattahoochee Valley. Colonel W. L. Reed, post inspector, ac-companied by Capt. W. B. Tuttle, provost marshal, went on a tour of inspecton The once stately old mansions were found to be sadly in need of repairs; though comfortable for the summer months they were absolutely unfit, for the bitter winds of winter. A few days later, the Post Quarter-master was on the job to see what could be done. The result was a complete over-hauling of every set of quarters. New wood work, new windows, new roofs, and new coats of paint have changed these quarters from tumble down shacks, into warm, comfortable quarters on the interior, and with all of their former appearance of state and grandeur on the exterior. As stated before, there are twelve

The reservation is divided into eleven areas with a range guard in charge of each area. Sergeant Thompson has no area of his own but his duties consist of inspecting each range guard in much the same manner as an officer of the guard inspects his guard.

During his fifteen years service in the army, Sergeant Thompson has spent a good deal of this time in the wide, wide open spaces. In fact, one soon learns that he is a lover of outdoor life, and an expert woodsman. His hunting stories would, fill a large-sized volume and would make interesting reading. He has not only bagged the prize wild game of the United States, but also a 1600-pound. tapir, two jaguars, a monkey eagle, and numerous deer, while stationed in Panama, in 1915. Sergeant Thompson was a member of the 29th Infantry in Panama and while stationed there saw the famous big slide at Culebra Cut in 1918. He returned to the United States with that regiment, when it went to Camp Bureaugard, La.

In 1919 he came to Camp Benning, Ga., with the 29th Infantry, but later re-enlisted in the Infantry School Detachment.

Sergeant and Mrs. Thompson live at Sergeant and Mrs. Thompson live at the "Old Gaffney Place," on the Ben-ning reservation, ten miles out on the Cusseta road. Quite a bit of rivalry is shown between the pets belonging to Sergeant and Mrs. Thompson. Sport, Speedy and Rip are a trio of expert bird dogs. Speedy seems to take it for granted that he is a "big shot," due to the fact that in the field he has never found a peer. Speedy was a favorite found a peer. His ears are torn by briars and be probably never earent two rabbits he probably never caught two rabbits in his life but get the gun and whistle to "Fly," and the old boy will almost talk to you in his joy and eagerness to get going. Sgt. Courtney left on a ninety-day re-enlistment furlough the other day. The cold breezes reminded him that he had important business down in Florida.

Company "A" Sgt. Sheriff and Pfc. Riffey decided to take on another three year meal ticket as their old ones ran out last week. Our Company Runner and Guidon Bearer, Pvt. Buckingham has a short discharge to re-enlist for the Panama Canal Zone; he says he wants to learn the latest steps to the tango. Pfc. Lake H. for a short while but he has made a host of friends among the officers and men of the organization and is held in the highest esteem by every one.

50-cent ration hit 39 cents a couple of inonths ago, Sergeant Vines simply add-ed more water to the coffee, sliced the bread thinner, and growled louder at the guy that hollered for seconds. Last month, when the ration stood at 36 cents, the strain began to show on the big shot of the kitchen. Now, at the moment this line is being written, comes the word that the ration for November will be 34 cents. Here's where Sergeant Vines shows his skill—he beats a stra-tegic retreat on the back of a 90-day re-enlistment furlough. That's real genius!

Last week, while the company was cutting out the pine and scrub oak south of Oliver Hill, Private Tucker got too near one of Mechanic Watson's pet cross-cut saws, which was riding shoulders of one of the other men. Not liking Turner's looks, the saw skinned back its teeth and whanged Turner smack over the left eye. Watson says that with a lot of careful filing the saw will be as good as it ever was

The 24th Infantry observed November Ist as the 61st anniversary of its or-ganization. The day was devoted to military competitions and festivities fit-ting to the occasion. At the service club Colonel Caffey made a talk on the experiences of the regiment at Siboney, Cuba during the Namish American Cuba, during the Spanish American War. The history of the regiment was outlined by Captain W. S. Barrett. The oldest and newest soldiers of the regi-ment, namely—Sgt. McCauley and Pvt. Fortson made short takes of their solutions. Fortson, made short talks on their service experiences and hopes. Athletic trophies were awarded, and musical se-lections were rendered by the band. Chaplain Thomas made an appropriate invocation for the occasion.

Following the service club exercises, the regiment was assembled on the athletic field for military and athletic competitions. Results were:

"We will be the last to leave and the first to come in." Thus spake Captain Stonewall Jackson, the aerial map read-er of last year's winning Flag Race combination, Hoge and Jackson. "Bet on us," advises Captain "Joe" Sweet, also a team member, "and if Stonewall loses his map, Mrs. Hoge will guide us safely in."

Says Major Lyman, the genial Free-booter, "Pay no attention to the Hoge-Jackson team. They're all wet. We, Freebooters, will win handily, taking the course at an easy jaunty pace."

The annual Flag Day Race on November 19th starts from the judges' stand in the center of Horse Show Ring stand in the center of Horse Show King No. 1 at 1:30 p. m., and will end at the same place. Teams will be started at three minute intervals over an unknown course approximately fiften miles in length. During the race, the relative standing of each team will be posted on a man in the normal desired. on a map in the newly designated "Horse Show Cabin." There will be music and light refreshments to beguile the supporters of each team, while the more enthusiastic will be given an op-portunity to "stand up for their con-victions" in a more or less substantial way.

SOLDIER HELD AFTER SHOOTING

29th Infantry Restricted To Barracks While Search Is Being Made

The entire Twenty-ninth Infantry was restricted to barracks for a short time Tuesday morning, while a search was being conducted for a soldier, who had shot and injured another.

As a result of the investigation, con-ducted by Colonel Walter L. Reed, Inf., special inspector, Private Benny B. Ray, Company "F," 29th Infantry, has been confined to the Post Stockade, been confined to the Post Stockade, pending charges of shooting Sergeant Earl Buras, Q. M. C., who is on duty at the Fuel Office. The sergeant was wounded in the neck, both by the bul-let and by a piece of flying glass, but his condition is not serious. He was at his desk Wednesday morning doing full duty duty.

According to a civilian truck driver, his truck, carrying six persons, four of whom were white and two, negroes, was held up somewhere in the Bradley Area at the point of a pistol by a soldier, unknown to him. The soldier appeared to be under the influence of liquor, and his demand was that he be given a ride on the truck to his barracks, about a mile away. Complying with the soldier's demand, the driver allowed him to board the truck and proceeded on his way. In the vicinity of the newly-built non-com-mission d harracks, the soldier took a pot-shot at a nearby sedan, driven by Sergeant Buras. The shot passed through the back window of the sedan, creasing the sergeant's neck, inflicting a painful wound. As the truck reached the vicinity of the 29th Infantry, the soldier jumped off the truck and raced into the barracks.

into the barracks. Following the report made by the civ-ilian employees, Colonel Reed was in-structed to make a complete investiga-tion. The entire 29th Infantry was then restricted to barracks and a detailed search for the man made. When Com-pany "F" was lined up, Private Ray's absence was noted, and a search of bar-racks made for him. He was found peacefully sleeping on another man's bunk. On his person was discovered a bottle of intoxicating liquor and a calibre .32 pistol. Private Ray was positively 32 pistol. Private Ray was positively identified by the civilian employees and by Sergeant Buras as the man, who had held them up and who had fired the pistol as alleged.

Ray's company officers are at a loss to understand his actions, for hitherto, during seventeen month's previous ser-vice, Private Ray has had no courts-martial, and no company punishment of any kind.

The Brief Case By Capt. Waine Archer

This is formally calling the attention of the Fourth Section to the noncha-lance with which Colonel Stayer un-covered and developed oodles of dracovered and developed oodles or ara-matic talent for his demonstration to the class on Ebbert and adjoining hills. Hard-hearted as we have become, the groans of some of the wounded almost brought tears to our eyes. All in all it was a very convincing show, the air of versimiltude being aided by the blase portion of the audience, typified in George Read. x x x

Until the returns are in on our own efforts, the class reserves all comment on the demonstration efforts of Majors Harding and Smith beyond the strictly noncommittal statement that we feel encouraged. X X X x x x That the class has learned the proper application of the principle of coopera-tion was shown by the way they helped Mmes. Dean and Chapman in the poppy sale recently, to corral and decorate modest members. In spite of it all, Johnson slipped by without being caught.

The aptness and ease with which Major Lange dropped into French on a recent occasion causes us, ignoring the occasion, to recall some of the tales we have heard about how easily and pleas-antly French could be learned some twelve years ago.

With Gibson leading an aggresive minority of one, the class has chosen its officers for the year, Major Adler as president, Frank Curtis secretary, and Major Tyler as treasurer. The selection of the last-named was by acclamation, most of them probably figuring the ar most of them probably figuring they could outrun or outride Major Tyler, in spite of his newly acquired certifi-cate of proficiency in equitation. x = x = x

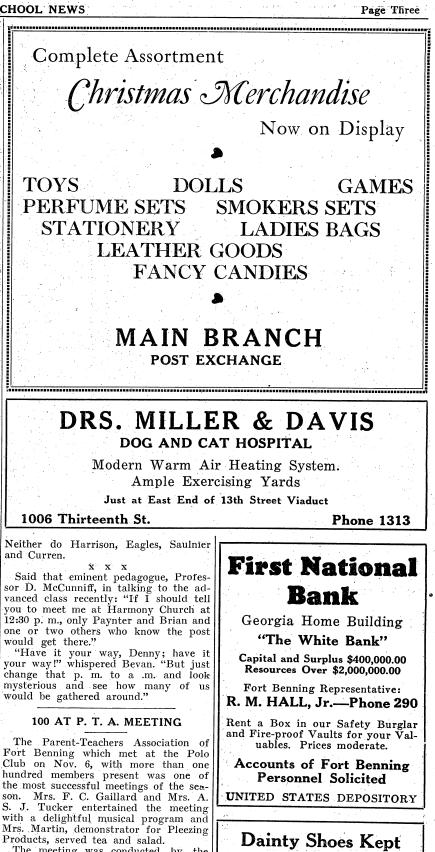

A few of the master minds of the class, including Wright, Bulger and our-selves, being unwilling to confine the valuable results of our recent researches to the few members of the advanced class, are preparing to offer to permit publication of our monographs in the Intantry School News or any other selected medium, instead of delivering it in person. The establishment of such a precedent should solve the copy situa-tion for some time to come.

xxx We are having some difficulty in re-conciling various bits of related informa-tion and instruction that we get. For instance, the fashion hints in under-wear, as delivered by Colonel Stayer and Captain Wood-both, by the way, from the Second Section. $x \ x \ x$ "I hope," murmured Shaw, somewhat gleefully, "that all instructors always cone out for demonstrations like this without their overcoats." xxx

x x x Earl Paynter, earning his new sobri-quet of "Bridge-builder" applied per-fectly the well-known principle contain-ed in the old wheeze relating to the fact that two pigs under a gate make more noise than one of the same pigs under the same gate. A reused caddonly, by the same gate. Aroused suddenly by the calling of his name, but not having heard the question, which was this: "What would you use to effect a river-crossing besides foot-bridges?" Earn, having heard the last word and his name, blinked, and then said confidently and brightly: "How about a foot-bridge?"

Rats, mice, squirrels, and other rodents have become a serious problem in preventive medicine.

Plague is primarily a disease of rats. The control of this disease resolves itself into a war on rodents. Rats are also the reservoir for trich-inosis. They transmit "rat bite fever" and infectious jaundice. Rats are subject to leprosy, cancer, and other diseases some of which con-cern man. Rats and mice are also carriers of an organism which, placed in their feces, contaminates food products and causes food poisoning in man.

Few people have any conception of the enormous numbers of rats. Their number is only limited by the food supply and opportunity to nest. The immigration of rats is often recorded. Every one is familiar with the sudden invasion of buildings or other structures by these pests which cause considerable economic loss. The great variety of food which they eat explains the ease with which they maintain life under almost any circumstance.

Rat Borne Diseases

Infectious jaundice occurs a mon g troops, in sewer workers, or among agricultural laborers working in a wet soil; also among people who handle food.

Many cases occurred in the World War. Primarily it is a disease of rats. About 10% of wild rats harbor the spirochetes which cause the disease. These spirochetes live in the kidney and are passed in the urine. They are also found in the blood, other organs, and the mouth.

Just how the disease is transmitted to man is not entirely clear. Urine con-tamination of soil or food product is the probable explanation.

Prevention consists in warfare on rats, the protection of food supplies, the protection of men working in wet earth, the cooking of all food, cleanliness.

Trichinosis is very common in rats who become infected by eating swine offal. In turn, swine are infected through eating raw pork. Do not eat uncooked meat.

Food Infection. This is often caused by rats and mice. These animals harbor the organisms which cause the disease. They contaminate food products dependents, as available and a Tape worm, the dwarf kind, may Daily Bulletin.

come from rats. It is not infrequent. Amoebic dysentery similar to that in man is found in rats. The rat, there-fore, may spread this disease to man. Rats also drag typhoid fever from ewers to our food.

Rats have both acute and chronic ague. The rat flea is responsible for plague. most cases of the bubonic type of this disease in the human.

The destruction of food, merchandise and property by rats amounts to a money loss of many millions of dollars each year.

Even though they were not the cause of disease to man this economic loss justifies active measures of suppression. The extermination of the rat seems impossible. It is honeless. Killing off impossible. It is hopeless. Killing off large numbers gives the survivors an easier living. Millions have been killed in plague centers without making a seeming reduction in the numbers remaining.

The measures for repression and destruction of rats are: rat-proof buildings, protection of food, natural enemies, poisons, domestic animals, shoottraps ing, fumigation and bacterial viruses.

The use of any or all these measures should be encouraged. They will cut the cost of living. They may prevent disease.

MORE QUARTERS NOW AVAILABLE FOR PERMANENT PERSONNEL

Indications are that the quarters sit-uation in the near future will be such as to permit the assignment of quarters on the post to the permanent of quarters and to a number of student officers, it was announced by Headquarters The Infantry School, last Thursday.

The Commandant desires, so far as practicable for the permanent person-nel to live on the reservation and to that end their applications will be given precedence over those of student officers.

In view of the above the officers mentiond may apply for quarters, giving their rank, pay period, and number of dependents, as the quarters become available and are so announced in the Daily Bullation THE BLUNDERBUS

SECOND SECTION BEHAVIORISM

The hard-working second section collectively and individually felt that Monday morning was no time for rising and shining. It being, as they conceived as a result of certain mental processes which we shall not discuss, a holiday, they decided to employ the applicatory system of bunk fatigue.

The unanimity of thought and action displayed by members of the section speaks well for the coordination of Col. Stayer's Miscellany (all but the Colonel).

When the boss of the horsemen, chow purveyors, communicators and training managers arrived Monday morning he just couldn't find his sec-tion. With almost unanimous enthusiasm the members had put the holiday roster into effect (Capt. Jackson on the job) and settled themselves to improve their loafing technique.

Improve their loating technique. The Colonel's usual equanimous poise was ruffled because his psycho-logical attempt at psychic control by suggestion of exemplary professional and official rectitude had been so ignominiously ignored by the recalci-trants that he hastily thumbed his volume of Overstreet's "Influencing" Human Behavior."

Here now was a test case for applied psychology. The problem, how to curb these insidious tendencies and still not palpably affect the high degree of initiative of such a select group, required delicate finesse.

Suddenly like Euclid (or some other old soak) in the bathtub his face lit up. Eureka! He had found the solution. A modified form of direct indirection (or indirect direction, we are not sure which) was the solution adopted.

Calendar in one hand and alarm clock in the other, the Colonel wrought order of chaos.

Note-Later investigation discloses that the situation was created in large part by the initiative of the secretary, Capt. Gaillard, who originated the holiday idea, and made the necessary announcements and holiday roster details.

Methods of Instruction

The shackles of customary peda-gogic procedure are gradually being loosed. No longer does cold formalism cast its malignant shadow on demonstrations of Command Post Procedure. Life, human interest, the personal equation, an intriguing plot, in fact everything but sex appeal, enter into the Adventures of General A on the Road to Bonneauville, as now pre-sented by The Infantry School Players for the instruction of student officers. The presentation was so well received by a critical audience that more of a similar nature is contemplated. Of course final emancipation will come only when the entire program of the school is taken over by the Dramatic Club.

Recent callers on Col. Major found the head of the 29th receiving on the sidewalk in front of his new quarters He had managed to lock himself out of his new home and couldn't get in.

Believe It Or Not

Emil Leard did not invent poker. Moses did not fool around with Faro. Tom Thumb was not a golfer. Marco Polo did not invent Polo.

Now cometh that time of year when Benning ladies bedeck themselves so that they feel cold but look hot.

Self-camouflaging Ford

Truly this is the age of experimen-tation. Simple ideas produce revolu-tionary effects. This is well exempli-fied by recent improvements effected on Capt. McAllister's motor mount. By the simple expedient of removing By the simple expedient of removing rear fenders the Captain is enabled to create the illusion of a mud typhoon in the minds and on the persons of spectators.

It is suggested that the Infantry Board might well study the matter thoroughly as this, to our knowledge at least, is the first example (and rather a perfect one at that) of a self-camouflaging automobile.

A few millions heard this one

Kansas University students have selected (and hereaded to the world) the "most affectionate co-ed." We are in-formed that the contest for this honor was neck and neck.

Shooting Exploit

Murder will out. After 11 years an outstanding hunting performance by one of Benning's prominent Nim-rods, Major Louis Falligant, Grand Master of the I. S. D., has been exposed.

It seems that Major Falligant went hunting or shooting, if you please, in the mountains in Germany, with the intention of killing a wild boar. He was accompanied by a Burgomaster, and suitable beaters.

Major Falligant installed in a cache, and keyed to the minute, heard a rus-tle From the bushes there burst into view an animal. Like a flash Falligant fired.

When the smoke and shouting had cleared away it was seen that the Major's aim had been true. He had killed the only dog in the

RUSSIAN COMEDY BY DRAMATIC CLUB "THE BOOR" AT BENNING NOV. 14-15

Mabel Billingslea as Popova and Lieut. Julian E. Raymond as Luka

Russia has been and is to-day to the majority of us a land of mystery. We all know in a vague way that there were such people as Peter the Great, Catherine the Great; and, to become more modern, Rasputin and Lenin. We usually think hazily of the Russian as exotic, passionate, gloomy, and on the whole rather dangerous; but, as one pos-session a sense of humon never While sessing a sense of humor, never. While indubitably the living and political con-ditions in Russia have never encouraged a light attitude towards life, neverthe-less, humor has existed and does exist

"The Boor" by Anton Chekov, to be presented by the Dramatic Club on the evenings of November 14th and 15th, is an example of that type of humor ap-preciated by the Russians during the latter half of the nineteenth century. The audience need not look for tragedy in this play which is ranked as one of the best of Russian comedies, written by one of her greatest dramatists.

Anyway, the material furnished was entirely irrevelant to "The Boor,' which

The Infantry School Hunt ^{By M. F. H.}

The Hunt met in the fork of Gilbert Trail and Lumpkin Road last Sunday morning for a 5:30 o'clock start after the elusive wild cat.

In the half light of daybreak a field of eighty-five mounted and moved south across Gilbert Creek. Just south of the Yankee Road the hounds were cast, only to draw a blank. A light rain began to fall, making trailing more difficult. Crossing McMurrin and Harp's Creeks the hounds were cast again but immediately went deep into the swamps along Oswichee Creek. The field patiently waited on the high ground a round Goodhope Church (now a lone chinney) but were disappointed to hear the pack split. One or two hounds found the trail of a wild cat and ran back toward the river. The rest, being distrustful, continued to hunt along the Oswichee. After a while they found the cold trail of another wild cat and started up the creek toward the east.

cold trail of another wild cat and started up the creek toward the east. The field rode along the edge of the swamps, forcing its way through brier patches and bamboo thickets. A hound does not hesitate at such obstacles, so the pack rapidly outdistanced the slower moving field. After following the sound of the hounds for several miles (and several swamps) it was decided that further pursuit was futile and all headed back to their respective firesides.

This was the first time in over a year that the field had gone into the swampy Weem's Bottom. This section of the reservation is famous for its deep swamps, tangled underbrush and softbottomed streams. Incidentally it is equally famous for its quail, wild pig and wild cat. Even a few of the old timers were hesitant to claim that they knew exactly where they were.

where they where they were. We still had our young enthusiast, Arch Arnold, with us at the end of the hunt. He sat his pony just as gleefully after four hours in the saddle as he did at the start.

There will be a Drag Hunt followed by breakfast at the Polo-Hunt Club, next Sunday, Nov. 16th. The breakfast will be served at about 10:00 o'clock. All are reminded that reservations must be made with and tickets obtained from the steward before noon Saturday. Breakfast reservations may be made by members of the club who do not ride on the hunt.

For Troop Schools Post Headquarters Issues Instructions For Officers' Instruction

Course Is Announced

Under instructions recently issued by Headquarters, The Infantry School, courses for officers in the Troop Schools have been announced.

In the Basic Course, unit instruction for certain officers will be conducted during the period November 1, 1930 to May, 1931, under the supervision of organization commanders; whereas, school instruction will be conducted by means of class room recitation, conferences, and practical exercises under the supervision of Headquarters, The Infantry School.

School. School instruction will include the following subjects: (1) Care of Animals, a ten-hour course, with Captain Jared I. Wood, Inf., as instructor; (2) National Defense Act, as amended, a three-hour course, with Major George L. Kraft, Inf., as instructor; (3) Use of Federal Troops in Civil Disturbances, and in Relief Work, a five-hour course, with Major John S. Jenkins, Inf., as instructor, and (5) Training Methods and Principles of Teaching, a five-hour course, with Major Truman Smith, Inf., as instructor.

Course in First Aid to Animals

A course in "Prevention and First Aid Treatment of Diseases and Injuries of Animals" will be conducted by Lieutenant Colonel Burton A. Seeley, V. C., assisted by Captain Frank M. Lee, V. C., for all officers of Field Artillery, below the grade of Major, at least one officer from each company of Infantry that has animals assigned according to the Tables of Organization, and such other officers as organization commanders may desire to enroll.

Instruction in this course will begin December 1. During a portion of this course, the students will be required to attend the daily Veterinary Clinic for a total time of a minimum of four hours to observe the treatment of sick and injured animals.

Course in Mess Management

A thirty-hour course in Mess Management will be conducted during the period January 5 to February 13. All officers of the arms below the grade of Major, with the following exceptions, will attend this course; officers who are graduates of the School for Bakers and Cooks; officers who hold a certificate, having qualified in a Mess Management Course; officers scheduled to attend the School for Bakers and Cooks during January, February, March and April, 1931; officers on duty with the Academic Department and Department of Experiment, and officers of less than one year's commissioned service.

Course in Horseshoeing

A course in Horseshoeing will be conducted by Major John B. Thompson, Cav., assisted by 1st Lieut. Jacob π . Moon, Inf., during the period March 2 to 13, inclusive. The following officers will be required to take this course: All officers of Field Artillery below the grade of Major, and fifty percent in each organization of all Infantry Officers below the grade of Major. The following officers of Infantry and Field Artillery are exempt from this course: All officers who hold a certificate of proficiency from a horseshoeing course; officers of the Academic Department and Department of Experiment; officers with less than one year's course fifty percent in each organization of Infantry officers.

Everybody enjoyed a fine dinner Armistice Day. It would do most anybouy good to hear some of the fine comments after they had finished eating. Private Moon of Company "F" seemed to be most jolly of all. All it takes to make him happy is a square meal and a place to sleep. We don't have to tell you that he is usually in a wonderful frame of mind.

"Hog-mouth John says that on the farm when it rains it means more rest but in the Army it's another story. "More rain, more work."

Private Waits of Headquarters Company is about to realize his life's am-bition; he is an expert with the Tank weapons and now he lacks only one thing. Anyone desiring further infor-mation see him at his office from 6:00 p. m. to 6:30 a. m.

"Nub" Bennett says if it's a detail you wan't to know about, see me. If you don't believe it just ask him where he was last Saturday morning. It seems as if he has done a little sailing in his many travels too. What about it "Nub?"

Louie sure does believe in pepping things up. It's a pity that he can't be one of our cheer leaders along with his football playing. At the Artillery and Second Bat game, he seems to be mak-ing more fuss than anyone.

During the demonstration last Monday, one of the Student Officers asked another one, "Gracious goodness, how many sixth class ratings has this outfit got?" And someone made the remark: "You would be surprised." It looks like the Tanks have become a proteine place for the surprised with the meeting place for the men that did their first soldiering at Fort Bragg. About half of the new men coming in of late say they are from there. This is a fine place, boys and we hope you will like it as well as we do.

"THE SEA WOLF" PICTURE PROCEEDS FOR ARMY RELIEF

The War Department has donated the "Sea Wolf," showing Sunday, Novem-ber 23rd, for the benefit of Army Relief.

Milton Sills and Jane Keath will ap-pear in Jack London's greatest story, "The Sea Wolf." Wolf Larsen, Milton Sills, king of his floating kingdom, is a merciless brute. A young girl, a pas-senger on the ship, and a young man shanghaied on board run afoul of this ruthless killer. A sea battle, an escape in a small boat, the brutal handling of his crew by Wolf Larsen—all combine to make this exciting. Tickets will be on sale in all orderly rooms, exchanges and clubs. The price is the regular admission of 25c. One price to all. No reserved seats. Tick-ets good for either show. Ticket sale starts Monday, Nov. 17.

SPIKE WEBB KAYOS PARKER IN 5TH; SAGINAW AND DOWNS FIGHT DRAW

Cotton Batton Finds "Rough" Glover Just What His Name Says He Is

After outboxing Spike Webb for four rounds, Blondy Parker, former Benning welterweight, became careless in the fifth round of their scheduled ten round fight Wednesday night, and let Spike land his sleep producer on the old butland his sleep producer on the old but-ton for a clean kayo. For the first four rounds the fast stepping youngster had kept Webb off balance with a tantalizing left jab and had also rocked him with smashing right crosses to the head. Webb seemed to be biding his time. In the third round he worked Parker into

Near the end of the fourth round Webb staggered Parker with an-other right that landed high. It was the right that turned the trick in the fifth. Both boys were sparring for an opening. Webb stepped inside with a snappy left to the stomach and followed with a right cross that caught Parker. with a right cross that caught Parker fair on the point of the chin. Parker was out for a couple of minutes. Saginaw Seely found Bulldog Downs to be a clever boxer as well as a tough to be a clever boxer as well as a tough slugger in the eight-round semifinal. For the first three rounds it looked as if the visitor would take the nod over the Medico, but in the fourth round Seely began to solve Downs' style and clip him with stinging wallops to the body and head. Seely had all the better of the final rounds but found Downs ready and willing to mix. The verdict was a draw. diaw.

Cotton Batton found Rough House Glover a tough proposition. Glover showed a bag full of tricks, combined with speed that made him a tough opponent. Batton got the decision. He landed many solid punches that hurt against Glover's short stabs and jabs. Owing to Glover's ability to keep mov-ing, Batton was never able to land one of his kayo wallops. Glover's aggress siveness pleased the crowd, which thought he should have had a draw. which Grumpy Gordy won over Ritzy Wright of the 29th Infantry. This leaves Grumpy in possession of the middle-weight championship among the four round boys of Benning. Either Gabby Gale or Fuzzy Douglas will be his next opponent.

Watta Guy will have to take on a few more beans and get in better shape. He lost to Waldon of Columbus. His timing was bad.

Shifty Schröder settled the argument with Krafty Kline of Columbus. Schrö-der hit Kline with everything but the ring post and Kline left the ring a badly beaten fighter.

The next show will probably give fans the opportunity of seeing the finish of the Bud Calloway-Dapper Doyle feud. These little bantams have waged war in a Benning ring on two occasions with honors even. Both boys are anxious to fight off the tie.

While this is true of every brand of soldiering, it is especially true of war administration, which is an art impos-tible to prosting in page time. App sible to practice in peace time. Any book, therefore, which helps to keep alive in the minds of soldiers the vastness of the maintenance problems which modern war involves is of the greatest value, and deserves the widest study. The author takes us with him through the whole of his career, from the Frontier to the Chinese Border, and back to the Frontier; to the Boer War and to India again; thence to the War Office and the comparison of the Chinese Office and the campaigns of the Great War, and finally to India.

The defensive work of Johnson, J., at right end, Bolds at right guard and Johnson, A., at center was largely responsible for holding the Knoxville team scoreless. About the middle of the third quarter, after the home team had marched to within 10 yards of the doughboy goal, and lost yards of the doughboy goal, and lost the ball on downs, Harris, the soldier quarterback, called a short forward pass. The pass, from Heard to Harris, only went five yards over the center of the line, then in a beautiful exhibition of broken field running, aided by splen-did intefering. Horvic correct the belt did intefering, Harris carried the ball to midifield. Harris tried it again and was stopped on Knoxville's five yard line. Heard on an off-tackle play scored. LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY, 3d

Dear Eddie:

Dear Eddie: We have now gone into the second phase in the development of the student at the Infantry School. No longer do the students walk around rather stiff-legged, and formal, far from it. This second phase can be easily recognized, by those who have made any study of the subject, through certain very defii-nite signs. First and foremost of these signs is the commencement of horse-play, and from now on the Lord help signs is the commencement of horse-play, and from now on the Lord help those who guard not their back pockets. Another sign is the appearance of the "Red Apple" expert. A third is the de-velopment of the student into a quick change artist of the first water.

Now Eddie when I say that we are in this second phase I mean that we are definitely in, not just on the border of it, or about to commence to enter it, but that we have actually entered. Any formation that is held within a mile of a piece of rope is bound to break up a piece of rope is bound to break up with two or more of the class tied to trees, or together. Last Thursday's class in musketry provided some of the best rope that has ever fallen into the hands of a class. Nice rope, long rope but not too trong rope. You know little Tommy Walls Sonta dissified hands of a class. Nice rope, long rope but not too trong rope. You know little Tommy Wells. Sorta dignified chap. Well he lost his dignity, in fact it was completely scraped from him by a tour on the end of a rope and I be-lieve we hight have scraped most of his clothes off if the rope had not broken. Most surprising when that rope broke, Eddie. Somehow I had the rope in my hands and somehow I happened to be pulling on it and when it broke I went over backwards and rolled up on my head for a perfect head stand. I'm still trying to get the sticker burrs out back. Now Eddie I am a firm believer in this horse-play stuff, but this "Red Apple" business is a horse with a dif-ferent kind of tail feathers. Several members of the class have made more or less gestures in this direction, as Gil-martin, in buying new unionalls when his first set got a little dirty, but after all they have not been serious. How-ever when a student begins to hold mysever when a student begins to hold mysever when a student begins to hold mys-terious, whispered conferences with the instructors, why that is too much like trying to make a business of it. Why one morning Shaffer forget his "Red Apple," and rather than come to class without it he took a "late" check against his name and then tried to make up for it by buying the biggest apple in the Post Exchange. We shall have to keep our eyes on them and make known their nefarious dealings. nefarious dealings.

nefarious dealings. Friday morning, we had some more map reading under Maj. Hoge. Capt. Jackson did not appear, and I went over to the library to get an atlas; it was out, so maybe the Captain took the morning off to look for the Equator. Be that as it may, Maj. Hoge gave the class, for a dry run, the examination that had been given the Advanced Class. Most of the class thought that it was very easy and only hope that our own examination will not be more difficut. Perhaps I should not mention it but really the conventional signs furnished the class by Brother Gilmartin were cer-tainly unique; he appeared to have we that knows its gisement." Friday afternoon we watched Sgt. O'-Blennis shoe a horse for "Jake" Moon. What we really wanted was to to see "Jake" shoe the horse himself. Such a nice gentle horse they gave the Sgt. to shoe, there were only two men holding the horse horse horseshoer and by the horse besides the horseshoer, and by main strength they were able to keep it in sight of the class for most of the demonstration, and out of the forge. Somehow that horse seemed to be fascinated by the forge; he tried to kick it over and several times I thought that he was going to sit in it. However he was never successful in anything except in stepping in the water bucket and spilling all the water. Following this display of skill on the part of "Jake" and his staff the class was given two hours of equitation. The slow trot with-stirrups certainly separates the men from the boys, and also the flesh from the bones. The fearless, hard-riding Pro-fessor B-Food spent the week-end walk-ing like a bow-legged heron. When I was never successful in anything except ing like a bow-legged heron. When I asked him Monday if he was stiff from riding, I thought at first that he was going to bite me, and then I heard him ing made by Lt. Floyd,

Our Monday, holiday before Armistice Day was, well it was quite a day. It was raining in the morning so Capt. Wharton was forced to attempt to give 4 hours of instruction on the machine gun indoors. A lovely task to set be-fore the king or anyone else. The first break was the usual ten minute break, the went and was for twenty minutes and the next one was for twenty minutes and the last one was for almost an hour. In spite of the unfavorable elements the Captain put out a lot of instruction. When he tried to get it back from the students by asking questions, he was not quite as successful. In the afternoon, we witnessed a Tank demonstration. They are a very spoony outfit, these Tankers, everything nicely painted, in fact some of it was so newly painted that several members of the class absolutely undetected to make away with large quantities of Tank paint on their hands on clothes. Originally scheduled for November 13, the demonstrations were postponed, awaiting the arrival of the Langley Field planes, which had been forced to stop at Augusta, Ga., on November 11, and remain there a whole week on ac-count of the poor flying weather. The Infantry School demonstration, "Battalion in Attack," directed by Ma-jor Norman Randolph, Inf., was staged on Hook Range last Friday for the benefit of the student officers of The Infantry School, and again repeated on Wednesday morning for the Langley Field visitors. Accidental Discharge of Pistol Military Policeman Who Shot Results in Death of Veteran Soldier

As a result of an accidental discharge of his service pistol, Sergeant DeWitt T. Phonosdall, Company "B" 24th Infantry, was fatally injured by a gunshot wound in the head, from which he died five hours later, last Sunday night.

Sergeant Phonosdall shot himself about five o'clock Sunday afternoon as he was cleaning his service pistol preparatory to going on guard duty at mid-night Sunday. He was immediately taken to the station hospital, dying about ten o'clock. It was stated that the bul-let entered the soldier's right temple,

The charges were in connection with the death of Private Jim Chaney, Company "E," 24th Infan-try, who was fatally shot by Corporal Ferrell about 8:00 p. m., on the night of November 1 November 1.

According to evidence introduced at the trial, Private Chaney died as a re-sult of a gunshot wound, after Corporal Ferrell fired at a fleeing man halted by him. Corporal Ferrell fired down at the ground of a range estimated variously ground at a range estimated variously to be between 150 and 200 yards. The bullet evidently ricocheted and struck Private Chaney in the neck, severing his jugular vein.

MACARTHUR SUCCEEDS SUMMERALL AS NEW ARMY CHIEF OF STAFF

Farewell Statement is Issued By General As He Relinquishes Office

General Douglas MacArthur, today, succeeds General C. P. Summerall, as Chief of Staff of the Army. In a touching farewell to the Army, General Summerall has the following to say: "Relinquishment of office as Chief of Staff anticipates by only a few months my definite separation from the Army's active list. I have been privileged to see the Army develop in my lifetime from a cloistered and little-understood profession into a national agency, in in-timate contact with the republic which it serves. Never before has America appreciated national defense so fully in the light of a civic obligation. Within and without the military service it is generally realized that in the soldier we find the fundamental virtues of the citi-zen. The National Guard, The Officers' Reserve Corps, the Reserve Officers' Staff anticipates by only a few months Reserve Corps, the Reserve Officers' Training Corps in the Schools and Colleges and the Citizens' Military Colleges and the Citizens' Military Training Camps represent the highest form of patriotic service. The earnest and enthusiastic response which they make to their country's requirements for defense constitutes an unimpeacnable testimony to the soundness of America's moral fibre. The various components which work so locally understandingly moral fibre. The various components which work so loyally, understandingly and effectively to form the Army of the United States are in very truth one co-hesive whole because they possess the common denominator of citizenship.

"Our officers, as a class, are men of "Our officers, as a class, are men or superior intelligence, comprehensive ed-ucation, and high professional attain-ments. Most of them are experienced in war and possess tried qualities of lead-ership. Our enlisted men represent the best elements of American manhood. As a result of careful selection enlistments are generally confined to young men of good character and habits. They re-spond to the offer of a career that apspond to the offer of a career that ap-peals to the virile, the courageous and the ambitious. Many have spent years in the service and many have gone through war. Their loyalty and devo-tion to duty are beyond question. Their pride and soldierly spirit are manifested by their bearing and conduct and their response to every requirement.

"It has been my fortune to encounter everywhere, from the highest commander to the men in the ranks, an earnest de-sire to measure up to their responsibilities. In this connection it is only fitting that mention should be made of the work that mention should be made of the work of the War Department General Staff, which during my incumbency has been characterized by loyalty, industry, har-mony and mature judgment that are worthy of the highest praise. The work of preparation was arduous, due to the wea-ther, and the demonstration was pre-sented in a spirited and highly commendable fashion."

Antiaircraft Firing Demonstration

Wednesday afternoon, The Infantry School demonstrated antiaircraft methods. Captain James E. Wharton, Inf., ods. Captain James E. Wharton, Inf., Second Section, was in charge. The course prescribed by Tentative 1 ranning Regulations 300-5, as modified by ex-perimental courses developed by Captain Sidney H. Carney, thrilled the crowd with the speed with which the platoon went into action. Out of a total of 645 rounds fired, it was ascertained that there were three hits on the sleeve target, giving the platoon a percentage of .48.

A rifle platoon from Company "B" 29th Inf., 2nd Lt. Marshall H. Hurt, Jr., commanding, next demonstrated the accuracy of the American rifleman. Fir-ing 793 rounds, this platoon got nine hits, giving it a percentage of 1.1.

The platoons next fired a combined fire problem. This resulted in thirteen hits out of 1532 rounds fired, giving them a percentage of .085.

Selected non-commissioned officers from the Infantry School Detachment, including the famous Sergeant McNulty, "who, gentlemen, is only fifty years old," "who, gentlemen, is only fifty years old," next demonstrated the powerful caliber .50 machine guns, with both ground and truck mounts. Firing 798 rounds, three hits were made, giving the "old war horses" a percentage of .7. The Review Dramatic By MULHALL X99 CER.

Reviewing amateur play productions is a lowly chore. The reviewer is com-parable only to the man who wears a ragged overcoat to a dinner party and walks home with the host's new one.

To catch the true value of stage work To catch the true value of stage work one must use the audience as a barom-eter, recording mass impressions as they flutter across the foot-lights. The great difficulty is in locating any instrument which can register with adroitness the quizzical point of view on any army group watching their likes and dislikes strut about like marionettes in an effort to amuse. In one group is recorded sato amuse. In one group is recorded sa-tire that is over cynical, in another rebukes that are not corrective and in a third blundering stupidity covered by laughter, or, we might say, subdued mirth.

But in spite of all the extravagant praise we hear when we mix with the rhapsodizing relatives and friends of the producers and players, and in spite of the conflicting temperamental impresthe conflicting temperamental impres-sions of alleged actors and actresses who think they could have done better, I came away from last Friday's enter-tainment with the feeling that I had spent a very interesting and amusing evening. Moreover, for once I was in the majority, for the audience recorded its appreciation in thunderous applause on the close of each play.

Some Mulhall Philosophy

The reactions of the audience to "The Twelve Pound Look" as a play were neutral, to say the least. Some of it was selected to show the superior strength of the female element in th play-read-ing committee To me however the ing committee. To me, however, the play clearly portrayed that some men are born foolish while others just preserve their old loves.

Having been drafted to review the plays, I was in no pleasant frame of mind when the curtain went up, but a few minutes later with Margaret Wheel-er on the stage put me in a better humor. As the self-possessed, independent, com-petent Kate, she gave a highly finished performance. My only criticism of it is that it left no opening for a few mean cracks at her dramatic ability. If the Dramatic Club wants real criticism from Mulhall let it toot out a few of its real Mulhall, let it trot out a few of its real hams and leave its attractive and experienced actresses on the side lines.

My old friend, Lieutenant R. V. Mur-Sir Harry. To be honest, I didn't think he had it in him. His dramatic tech-nique was excellent and the sublime self-conceit of the successful male was so well portrayed that I suspect him of be-ing somewhat like that in real life. His strutting and sputtering delighted the female hearts of those who visualized in his acting the traits of their husbands. Naturally the most enthusiastic applause came from the women.

Ruth Phillips was a beautiful and ef-fective Lady Sims. She was convincing, all right, as the submissive, browbeaten wife, but there was something about the way she inquired about the cost of a typewriter that makes me think it was art, not character, that was responsible for her eminently satisfactory perform-ance. I'd like to see her as "Catherine ance. I'd like to see her as the Great," or "Lysistrata."

Captain William Tow "buttled" like a real butler in real life, and, much to our relief, departed from the standardized stage movements usually prescribed for butlers. Most stage butlers look as if butters. Most stage butters look as in they were either about to poke you in the ribs with their thumbs or butt you out of the way with their stomachs. Captain Tow had only a small part but he played is in a very creditable manner.

Something Didn't Click

In order to justify my position as a dramatic critic I might say that the fixting together of the several characters portrayed in "The Twelve Pound Look" was not all that I thought it might have been, if you get what I mean. I can't exactly describe it except to say that the blend didn't altogether suit me-Iike too much ginger ale in the gin but since I can't put my finger on the fault, maybe it didn't exist. Certainly the play was well acted and well directed, and Mrs. Roberta Knight, the director, and her entire cast have my hearty, if valueless, indorsement.

We now come to the acted story of that bearded Russian bill collector who stamps and shouts like a general and gulps liquor like a private soldier. The audience recognized Paul Peabody at once in spite of the whiskers. He cer-tainly was Smirnov and there was not the slightest doubt about what he rep-resented on the stage, but at the same time he was Peabody and acted in that professional manner that has marked all his performances in each and every characterization handed him in the past. He can, without great effort, carry any play to success, but in "The Boor" he was so ably supported by Mabel Bil-lingslea that it is a question in my mind as to whom should go the chief laurels for this truly outstanding dramatic pro-duction. I thought that Miss Billingslea struck a high note in "Captain Apple-jack" last year, but as Popova, the tra-gic Russian widow, she surpassed Anna Valeska, the scheming Russian adventur-An emotional actress of unusual ess. ability, this young lady has established a reputation that makes her the logical Lady McBeth, should our ambitious Dra-

Lieutenant J. E. Raymond, as Luka, deserves acclaim and since he received his theatrical training in a pageant, I'm for the pageant from now on. He was good in speech and movement and never usurped the spot-light glare that was meant for the principals in the drama. He did, however, shine very brightly in his own particular sector of the picture. But we must have criticism or the critic becomes the bombastic reconciler. We must note that the intrepid Paul was a little hadicapped by his whis-kers, particularly at first, and when he strutted and turned. His love-making, as judged by the Mulhall standard, was not rough enough to be in keeping with his manner and lines. A man who has been jilted nine times should be able to squeeze something out of a widow beside "crocodile tears." You were a tough lover in other other plays and you did not need to save Miss Billingslea as she was thrown all over the stage last year and liked it.

Miss Billingslea shot across the footlights in her charming and graceful manner and the audience reacted at once to her presentation of Popova's charac-ter, but the finer and more emotional quiet parts sometimes failed to get be-yond the eighth row. They may have been swamped by the vociferous Boor, but her voice is naturally soft and its projection will have to be watched.

Costuming Well Done

The costuming of both plays merits special mention in a review of this character. I don't pretend to be an authority on the garb of the Russian land-owner and servant classes, but Miss Landon Reed, who designed the gar-ments worn by Smirnor and Luka, is an expert in such matters. While she the well dressed Esquimaux medicine man ought to wear to a walrus fry. Cer-tainly Peabody and Raymond looked Russian enough for anybody. When it comes to ladies' wearing ap-arel, I feel more at home and I want to pause a moment in my mad reviewing carer to mention the gowns worn by the ladies in the two productions now under free. The gorgeous presentation grown worn by Mrs. Phillips and the attractive street attire of Miss Wheeler came from Kayser-Lilenthal.

Miss Billingslea's gown was the type that creates automobile wrecks and to see a girl sheathed as she, emoting for a lost love was enough to make a man lose more than control of an automobile. I am told that Miss Billingslea and Mrs. Chance designed this body covering. If so, let's hope that the firm of Billingslea and Chance doesn't set up a local dress designing establishment for it is hard enough a it is for a handsome bachelor like myself to keep out of trouble.

MULHALL. * * *

Ed. note-It is not to be expected that Mulhall, who paints his colorful word picture with broad and sweeping strokes, would think of everybody who had a hand in the successful production of Friday and Saturday last. As a mat-ter of fact he did remarkably well in this respect—that is for Mulhall—but he did leave out of his picture certain un-seen functionaries whose work and tal-ent contributed materially to the success of both plays. There was Miriam Beavers who had charge of properties and was prompter in "The Twelve Pound Look," and Margaret Busch, who made up the cast. In "The Boor" Mrs. W. H. Brecken-

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector CONSTIPATION

When food waste remains too long bread, oatmeal whole wheat; apples, in the large intestine it decays. The cherries, cranberries, figs, grapes, grape blocking up of these waste products alin the large intestine it decays. The blocking up of these waste products al-lows absorption by the blood which gives a depressed feeling. If this condition occurs frequently more serious affections may result; sick headaches, dyspepsia, chronic inflamination of the intestine.

If the condition continues for a period of years, rheumatism, gall bladder dis-ease, kidney disease, and other diseases associated with old age, may develope.

Constipation is perhaps one of the most important factors in making people old before their time.

These dangers are recognized by most of us, and as a result, the taking of laxatives has become almost an univer-sal habit. This is just too bad. Lâxa-tives do not cure constipation. In fact the final result is to make the condition worse.

Constipation can be cured. Most peo-ple can escape its immediate effects and therefore escape illness which is caused thereby. In babies and animals a full meal causes a reflex stimulation of the entire digestive tract which is followed shortly by a normal impulse of the bowels to move.

This is a natural habit and should be cultivated. For most people a thorough movement once a day is likely to prove sufficient.

Rules for the prevention of constipation: 1. Do not take laxatives.

2. Be regular. Do not be careless; visit the toilet at least once each day. 3. Drink water. Six-eight glasses of water, between meals, has cured many cases of constipation. It is a good habit. Stick to it.

4. Diet. Modern foods supply energy and satisfy hunger but do not meet the requirements of good health. Take for instance the usual breakfast, orange juice, egg, white bread and coffee; it satisfies; it stimulates; but is almost without residue. It is the residue from foods which distends the intestine and produces the call for a howel action. roughage some of the following should be included in our diets — asparagus, match beets, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, let-tuce, onion, parsnip, spinach, tomato and turnip; bran, corn meal, graham noon.

Right eating may cure constipation. 5. Exercise. One who leads an inactive life must expect a flabby body A suitable diet and proper exercise will usually relieve the most obstinate case of constipation. They will banish that tired feeling and finally give the vim and energy which makes ones really feel like living. Getting the abdominal muscles and the abdominal organs into condition is the first step to renewed health. Special exercises for this purpose can be pre-scribed. In addition to these special exercises get out of doors. Walk every day for at least an hour.

stitute mere man's share in the transportation division, as arranged by the families of Fort Benning. The Blunderbuss investigated and discovered that the Professor's asthmatic but faithful T-model Ford had gone the way of all junk. The day that the new Lincoln arrived, the venerable Ford refused to run. Dr. Austell, the famous specialist, who was promptly called into consul-tation, took one look under the hood and sadly informed the grief stricken Professor that the case was hopeless. String and wires might hold the body together as of yore, but Lizzie's internal workin's had gone com-pletely blooie. The autopsy showed that she died of a broken heart. The distinguished Professor is now reduced to living off the country as regards transportation as well as cigarettes.

as regards transportation as well as cigarettes.

Defense Against Air Attack

Much has been said and written about infantry defense against air at-tack, and the reorganization of the regiment and battalion to keep abreast of modern scientific developments.

Recent events at Benning have caused several profound thinkers to suggest a scheme, beautiful in its simplicity, to render aviators impotent against the Queen of Battles.

The plan consists of the addition to the Infantry Regiment of a Rain Makers Company, it having been con-clusively proved in regard to the air-plane, that rain takes the plane from

The Company would be composed of three platoons organized as follows: Tom-Tom Platoon: 4 Medicine

- Men, 20 Tom-tommers and 2 saxophinists.
- Boom-Boom Platoon: 1 Chief Exploder, 18 Demolitionists, and 2 well shooters.
- Come-Come Platoon: 12 Supplicators, 8 crap shooters, and 6 Missouri National Whistlers.

Tactics and technique of this or-ganization would of course be a sub-ject for study by The Infantry Board. Opponents of the plan having point-

- ed out: (1) That a Rain Makers' Company does not seem to be needed at
 - Benning. That the organization and suc-(2)cessful operation of this unit would make the entire Infantry all wet.

The originators of the scheme insist that at least it be given a dry run.

Army Housing Idea

Colonel Elvid Hunt at a recent informal discussion of the quarters sit-uation gave it is his fixed opinion that the attractive new bungalows were too small for any but unmarried couples. If Colonel Hunt's companionate marriage suggestion goes through, the Blunderbuss has the headline all ready: "Quartermaster Corps Provides Love Nests."

A HORSE! A HORSE!

At a recent signing-up-for-horses function at the Officers' Club, Mrs. Robert Chance, the prominent actress consort of Explorer Chance, rushed excitedly up to Colonel Hocker with the remark, "Oh! Sergeant Benton, has anybody signed up for Weed?"

AVIATION ITEM

The protracted bad weather of last week which held the air demonstration force in Augusta was a source of great embarrrassment to Major Ira Rader, who was compelled to withstand repeated heavy attacks from ground troops during the period of the delay. The crowning insult came when some number of the mechanical when some member of the mechanicalminded Third Section spread a rumor to the effect that Major Rader had received an air mail letter which explained in full why the army ships couldn't get here.

DEPRESSION ON THE WANE

Mrs. E. T. Jones Places Large Order

We have heard of numerous embarrassing moments springing from get-ting the wrong number on the telephone, but the recent experience of Mrs. Ernest T. Jones gets the Blun-derbuss prize for the month.

It appears that Mrs. Jones, who is practicing simplified housekeeping in a small apartment in Columbus, sometimes patronizes the corner delicates sen to supplement the culinary out-put of the blue and white kitchenette. One evening last week she called 290, which is the delicatessen number and the following conversation took place:

Mrs. Jones: "This is Mrs. E. T. Jones. Please send a quart of soup to No. 314, 15th Street. Gruff voice: "What did you say you

Mrs. Jones: "One quart of soup." Gruff voice: "Where did you say to send it?"

Mrs. Jones: "No. 314, 15th Street." Gruff voice: "Sorry, lady, we don't sell it by the quart. We only sell it by the case. Maybe you got the wrong number. This is 29—Police Station." For the next three hours Mrs. Jones went into a state of hysteria every time an automobile horn sounded with-in two blocks of the Jones' residence.

LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY, 3d

Dear Eddie: Well, Eddie, we had a little rain here since I last wrote you. Of course since you have never been to Georgia you can have no proper conception of what that means. It has only rained for ten days, and the river did not rise up over the bridge, so you see they call it a little rain. From all I can learn it has to rain at least thirty days before it becomes a big rain.

Nevertheless, big rain or small rain, it sure played hob with the scheduled work for the week. When rain can interfere with the best schedule the master minds of the Infantry School could devise, even you must be able to guess that it rained a little. Can you believe it, Eddie, things got so wound up that they had to let us off for two whole afternoons. Honest, I guess the instructors in machine guns were almost as glad of the holidays guns were almost as glad of the holdays as we were. It was a hard week on them. Teaching stripping (pardon, dis-assembling) and assembling for two hours is bad enough, but to have to teach it for a whole week, it was awful! Of course it gave the "red apple' boys a grand opportunity, and Schaffer and Baker never missed a chance to button-hole either Capt. Nevins or Capt.

hole either Capt. Nevrits of Capt. Maloney. On Thursday, we were scheduled to see the demonstration of the "Centuries." It rained as usual, and the demonstra-tion was postponed. Thursday after-noon the school was unable to conjure up a single thing to teach us and we got our first afternoon off. On Friday morning, we went out and peered at the got our first afternoon off. On Friday morning, we went out and peered at the somewhat rain bedraggled demonstra-tion, through a misty haze. It was a good demonstration for being put on in the rain. The artillery looked all right, if you did not know where the target was, nor that shrapnel is supposed to burst above the ground. The machine guns got away with their part of the show fine. You could hear them fine, but the ground was so wet that you could not tell if they were on the target or not. Then the doughboys started forward, right through the mud as usual. Flop on the ground they would go, and bong on the ground in front of them would go their steel helmets. Amidst the cries of the wounded, the aid men rushed around, probably offering C. C. pills and iodine, when I know that what the wounded really would have liked to the wounded really would have liked to see, would have been a St. Bernard dog with his little keg. The cold does not penetrate 'so' in the sunny south. Ah! Here they come. The tanks! The tanks! A hoarse shout arose from the retreat-ing men of Company "A." And by the way, that was a great retreat. Re-minded me of the old war poster, "The Flight from Antwerp." To get back to the Tanks, they came out of the woods, and they were on time. I sup-pose to expect anything more than that from them is asking too much, for sad to the Tanks, they came out of the woods, and they were on time. I suppose to expect anything more than that from them is asking too much, for sad that they mach to relate, they got off their course, and unless I read the problem wrong, shot the daylights out of the 1st Battalion. Following one of our usual weekends, spent at playing crads, or playing with the children, depending on whether the particular member of the class was married or not, we assembled once more on Monday. A real blue Monday; it was still raining, as I told you, we had a still raining as I told you, we had as the machine gunners, once again. We had two hours inside instruction, and then they took us over to Gowdy field and we tried to operate the aiming circle; you tried to again, well, Mrs. O. C. Kovarik, Mrs. Mrs. H. B. Lewis, Mrs. He range finder (?); I put a question mark after range finder for the correct ranges they gave us on to capacity of the base that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the best that they can do with a range is the part of the case is the part the part of the case is the part of the part of the part of the case is the part of the part of finder I don't think so much of them. Why I did not estimate a single range the way the range finder said it was, and the way the range inder said it was, and worse, I lost two nickle bets with Van Mosley, who simply must have been in cahoots with someone higher up. Well, let that go, I'll make my money back from Moseley before the year is up. Well, well, Eddie, I can hardly be-lieve it, the sun came out on Tuesday. was certainly glad to see it. 1 hope on't take away its class "A" pass they don't take away its class "A" pass for some time to come. With the coming for some time to come. With the coming of the sun, came a lot of things, not on-ly the delayed Air Corps, but grenades; the bayonet, and musketry. I'll bet that the school machine gun instructors were glad to see the sun. They got rid of us a good half hour before it appeared. Though, due to the heavy fog in the morning, which I believe they thought to be rain, they were forced to give us to be rain, they were forced to give us two hours of instruction. It consisted only of knuckle skinning exercises with the tripod and gun. Believe it or not Eddie, I still have one knuckle intact. I have learned by patient practice to fold it backwards at the approach of a machine gun.

The grenades went off very well. Capt. Easley, beg pardon I did see those brand new oak leaves Major Easley, let the Sgt. throw some live grenades for the edification of the class. Says the Major, "The Mark, something or other has a bursting radius of thirty yards." The Sgt. must have had a new type for he went at least 200 yards away to throw three of them.

Well, Eddie, I'll have to stop now and get my nine uniforms together. I went out for bayonet practice this morning without any bayonet, and completely out of uniform. If Doc Coates gets a letter for being just one minute late to the horse foot-inspecting class, I don't know just what they will write me for the way I was this morning, probably book.

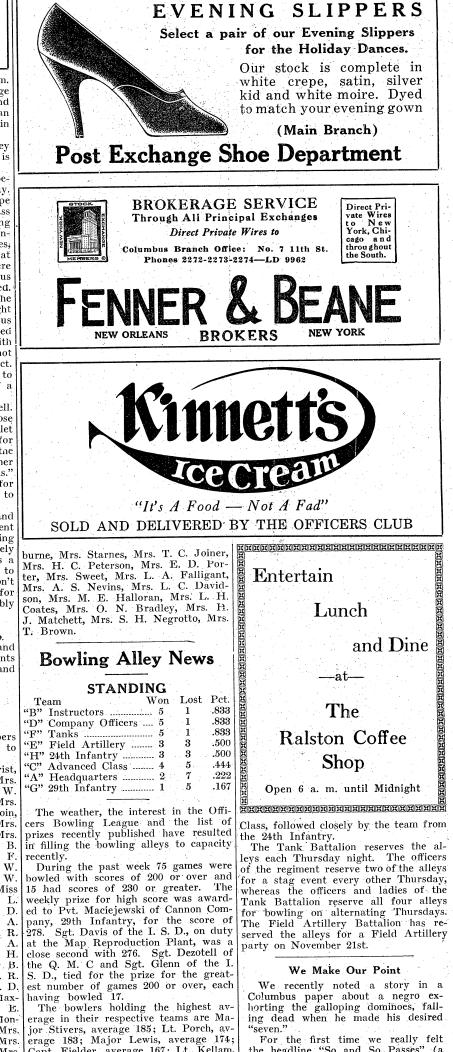

Y'rs Tr'ly, BONAPART HENNESY, 3D. P. S. I understand that Schaffer and Baker have interviewed Maj. McCants on having the P. X. furnish bigger and better "RED APPLES."

The old Schley's Hill and home place was named for Mr. Thomas B. Schley, who was among the first settlers of this section of the country. He built the old home place there in 1840. At that time the Cussetta Road was little more than a trail through the forest. Later he ran a ferry across the Upatoi Creek, and also kept a team of mules ready at all times to pull wagons over the hill dur-ing bad weather.

For twenty years, the Schley family lived and prospered on the fertile lands of the plantation. In 1860, the war be-tween the states broke out and Mr. Thomas Schley took up the cause of the South U South. He was commissioned a captain in Lee's army. He was killed in action at Petersburg, Va., in 1864. The Schley plantation remained in the posession of the Schley formity with the purchase of the Schley family until the purchase of the present Benning Reservation. At the present time, Dr. Frank B. Schley, great grandson of Thomas B. Schley is one of the most widely known physicians of Columbus, Georgia.

A few years after the close of the A few years after the close of the Civil War, an old wooden bridge was built across the Upatoi Creek, where the present concrete bridge now stands. The old bridge was a covered affair. During the early 90's it seems that a band of highwaymen were operating in the vicinity of the bridge and travelers gave the place a wide berth at night.

Since those days there have been many changes. The old muddy clay road has given way to a smooth paved highway. The old wooden bridge is no more and a modern concrete structure stands in its place. The old home place is now the quarters of Sergeant and Mrs. P. G. Gannon and their two children, Ray-mond and Betty.

Sgt. Gannon is Range Guard No. 3, and his range takes in the wide scope of territory north of the Upatoi Creek and extending back toward Cussetta. A fire tower has been erected on the high hill and from this lofty position, Sgr. Gannon, with the use of field glasses, can pick up the faintest wisp of smoke on any point of the reservation. His area also includes the finest wild turkey range in the reservation.

Sgt. Gannon, known to everyone as "Pip," is widely known at Fort Benning for his good nature and his ability to stop the rush of a driving fullback on an opposing football team. Before tak-ing over the duties of range guard he was one of the main cogs in the Gallop-ing Gunners' football machine.

Owing to the improvements and repairs being made at the indoor fight arena, the Infantry School Athletic As-sociation will not hold another fight show until the 9th of December. Among the improvements being made is an improved lighting system, a new in an improved highling system, a new ring, and the installing of more seats to enlarge the capacity of the arena. Large heaters are also being installed to keep the arena comfortable for the fans during the winter.

As yet, it is not known who will fea-ture the opening fight show. There are many guesses and suggestions. Many of the fans have handed in the following requests: Smith vs. Battling Bozo, Smith vs. Joe Knight, Griffin vs. Glenn Chancey, Seely vs. Jimmie Spivey, Willie Ptomey vs. Spike Webb, and several have suggested Griffin and Bozo. No matter who Captain Miller decides to match, any of the above mentioned pairs will give the fans an evening's enter-tainment.

Advanced Class Gunmen Outshoot Instructors

Major Steel High Man in Contest—Faculty Issue Return Match Challenge

The spirit of competition and the nearness of the approaching hunting season resulted in the largest attendance of the year at the Gun Club on Nov. 9th. The event of the day was the fourman team match between the Instructors and the Advanced Class which resulted in a close victory for the advanced class. This defeat was accepted with good grace by the faculty who immediately issued a challenge for a . return match. A shake up in the faculty team may result by virtue of their defeat, as the loss of prestige is keenly felt. The superiority of mere students over any faculty group is not to be countenanced.

Maj. C. H. Steel had high gun for the day, breaking 22 out of a possible 25 birds. Maj. C. H. Hodges was a close second with the score of 21. Major O. N. Bradley suffered a reverse of form from his usual splendid performance over the trap but is expected to place higher in the next event.

In addition to the team match some twenty-five other shooters participated in the usual events. The ever popular and exciting snipe shoot was won by Capt. J. N. Johnson of the advanced class with the excellent score of 21 out of a possible 25 birds. Master Sgt. J. W. St. Clair was a close second in this event with a fine 20.

In all, over 1200 targets were thrown which constitutes a record day for the gun club.

With the advent of the hunting season the Gun Club should be very popular on Sunday mornings. With the feathered variety escaping over the hills and far away on Saturday it offers a splendid opportunity to correct your deficiences. The instructors and the advanced class are anxious to arrange fiveman team matches with other teams at an early date.

REAL HORSEMANSHIP DISPLAYED AT SHOW; 100 RIDERS COMPETE

Major Lyman Wins Handy Hunter Event With Capt. Von Schell Second

By Lieut. Jacob R. Moon, Inf. The Informal Horse Show for 1930 was held Saturday afternoon, beginning promptly at 1:30 p. m. This show is held each year as a forerunner to the Formal Show in the following spring, having as its purpose the encouragement of novice riders, to develop experienced riders and to provide recreation for spectators.

Since this show caters especially to novice and the less experienced riders, the policy of not having any prelimi-nary eliminations is enforced. Every rider who makes an entry actually has rider who makes an entry actually has an opportunity to show his horse on the day of the show. Under this policy, the novice rider gets real horseshow exper-ience without the possibility of being eliminated in the preliminaries. It is be-lieved that this policy is well worth the sacrifice of time because of the large number of entries number of entries.

High Scores Required to Place

Due to the large number of entries in the jumping classes, scores less than 95 rarely placed among the winner. The long hours of work spent in training has shown results in the development of new horses and the improvement of the older ones.

Handy Hunter Class Calls for Real Horsemanship

The Handy Hunter course with its thirty-one entries proved to be a true test of both riders and horses. The course consisted of three outside jumps and five inside. The inside jumps were all either staggered or pig-pen types. For negotiating this difficult course, both the rider and horse were ousy ev-ery second. Many of the best riders fell by the wayside when they reached the stile-jump. The winners of this class were: 1st, Maj. Lyman, Inf.; 2d, Capt. Von Schell, German Army; 3rd, Lt. Monroe, Inf.; 4th, Lt. Mood, Inf.

Major Newgord Makes Hole in One

And Then He Doesn't Even Say "Ah"

IN an interval between swabbing out throats, calling on victims to say "Ah," puncturing ear drums and prescribing for incipient cases of the sniffles, Major Julius G. Newgord, Medical Corps, found time on Novem-ber 18 to enter the Hall of Fame with a running jump.

He made a hole in one.

It was on the 15th hole, and the Major can prove it by Sgt. Leonard Estes who was right there. Yes, sir. The Major used a No. 5 iron and smote the perverse little pellet right lustily. It cleared the trap, hit on the green and rolled in.

Major Newgord didn't believe it, but Sergeant Estes dashed forward and verified things. Now comes the part that is hard to believe. Ac-cording to Sgt. Estes, the Major just couldn't get excited at first, and not until Clarke, the Pro, came along, could he enthuse in the manner befitting a man who has just made a hole in one. (Attention Col. Stayer, example of peculiar behavioarce) example of peculiar behaviorism).

Not long ago Sheriff Tuttle made page one by a similar exploit. Looks like an epidemic. So we thought we would ask Major Newgord, if he thought the benificent effects of the bracing Benning climate might have anything to do with the matter.

But on sober second thought, we decided it was safer not to.

Helsley finished the race in good time, but upon arrival at the Infantry School Stables at the finish of the race, had to be carried to the ambulance by two men.

Majors Sutherland, Randolph and Easley appeared for the first time and put up an excellent period and put up an excellent performance.

The ladies have recently evidenced a keen interest in the sport and have organized a tyro class of twelve under the direction and coaching of Maj. Hodges and Major Bradley. With the advent of the ladies the

with the advent of the fadies the noticeable change in masculine attire is quite striking. The old days when a man could come out in hunting trous-ers, O. D. shirt (sans tie) and smelling strongly of dog have passed. The sar-torial referements now way the same torial refinements now run the gamut from golf knickers with sport coats to complete riding attire of the latest mode. The gun club is now all dressed up.

In the regular shoot of the day, Maj. Hodges was high gun with a tine 23. Maj: Bradley and Capt. Miller divided second place honors with 20s.

The instructors managed to avenge class by themselves on the advanced winning their team match with a mar-gin of 12 birds in spite of Maj. P. Stivers. Each group could muster but gin of four men for the team event, which would be far more interesting with a greater number. Majors Ferris, Bull, Lange and Hoge were conspicuous by their absence, while the advanced class undoubtdly suffered through the absence of such excellent shots as Captains Paynter, Helsley and Daughtry. The faculty team has issued a standing chal-lenge to any team representing any group or organization on the post to be fired on Sunday mornings.

With the increasing number of shooters it has been suggested that an earlier starting time be put into effect. This will be discussed at the next meeting of the club. However, any move toward the adoption of a constitution with numerous by-laws will be frowned upon.

THANKSGIVING AT BENNING DAY OF SPORTS AND EATING

(Continued from page 1.) The view within caused the hours to grow to years and ages. Frosted cakes were lined up in column of squads on one of the large tables. Tasty pies of different vintage were wedged in mass formation on an adjoining table. From the kitchen came a savory smell that tickled the nostrils and finally found its way to the ends of one's toes and nngers leaving a sensation of hunger and expectancy.

Came twelve o'clock and the ever welcome "mess call," and for once there was nobody absent. Five thousand soldiers filed through the doors of Fort Benning mess halls, looked with yearn-ing upon tables that groaned under loads of turkey, cakes, pies, dressing and all of the other trimmings that make a Thanksgiving Dinner, and then suffered through a two minute talk by the C. O., before the final order came to begin serving."

There were no favorites in the mess halls. Each soldier will tell you that their outfit served the finest dinner of the day. "Sure Pop Martin served the finest chow of any mess sergeant in Fort Benning," a Greenhat will say.

"Where do ya get that stuff? Say, John Falk is the only mess sergeant in this post that knows how to prepare a Thanksgiving dinner," comes back a Doughboy, and that's the way it goes, with everybody happy.

In spite of the countless times I have lead the student officers into impossible tactical situations because of my crafty way of drawing wrong conclusions you have not yet learned and it's wrong to start shaving until you grow whiskers." "But, General, you said-"

"No, no," interrupted His Nibs, "I dn't say anything. I've been in the didn't say anything. I'v Army too long for that.

"Nobody asked me to help design nese quarters you speak of. I'm not these quarters you speak of. I'm not responsible. I don't know who designed them. But I do know this. The genius who engineered those bungalows evi-dently had a hobby of raising mountain goats.

"But, General," we interrupted, we don't see the point."

"No," the general agreed, "You generally don't. But stop to consider. A mountain goat is renowned in song and story for his ability to leap from crag to crag, and to climb precipitous slopes with an almost fly-like security.

"What could be better than a mountain goat or two for each bungalow. These goats could be relied upon to pilot members of the household who felt A young goat could be trained to be gentle enough to carry the children on his back."

"General," we said, "Your ingenuity is marvellous."

"Nothing of the kind," said the general, "let me finish. You have assumed, due to my use of the masculine pronoun, that I speak of Billy mountain goats. But actually I recommend Nanny mountain goats. For every one ny mountain goats. For every one knows that goat's milk is good for chil-dren. Therefore the designer of the bungalows is to be congratulated, may-be even cited, for rare forethought. Not only will the garage design force the occupant of the house to aid an infant industry, raising goats, but, with the bold stroke, a requirement has been transformed into an asset. The archi-tect has forced the housholder to help himself by making him provide goat's milk for his children."

The General looked impressed with what he had just said, but we hastened what he had just said, but we hastened to interrupt again. "General," we shouted at him, "It can't be done. Anyone with children can't live in a bungalow. There isn't room."

"My young friend," said the general very calmly, "That is aside from the question. I am not trying to prescribe the method of filing the children in bed. I am merely giving you the benefit of my Army Training,—my long experience in making an asset out of a liability, my practise in gilding the silver lining and my habit of cutting my own throat, and liking it."

Truly in its days of bygone splendor this old home would truly have been classed as a mansion, with its wide veranda, reaching across the entire front of the reaching across the entire front of the building. The wide front doors with their glass front, open into a hall that divides the six spacious rooms, three on each side. The kitchen and dining room adjoined the big house but they have been removed by Father Time. Thanks to the Post Quartermaster, the old home is today in excellent condi-tion. At the time the McLendon plan-tation was added to the Benning reser-vation, the old home was in a tumblevation, the old home was in a tumblevation, the old home was in a tumble-down shape and threatened to soon fol-low the way of the other wooden build-ings that had formerly stood on the old home site. Carpenters from the Quartermaster repaired and remodeled the building and it was used as quar-ters for the range guard in that area. The McLendon plantation covered an area of eighteen thousand acres of land. The old homestead dates hack to the area of eighteen thousand acres of land. The old homestead dates back to the first settlement in this sction of the country by our forefathers. Traces of bygone splendor are still to be found. The remnants of the old coach house can still be seen. In those days, the family coach was enjoyed only by the most prominent planters and many are the stories of the splendour of the coaches, horses, and driver in the fore-most social gatherings of those days. Tombstones, worn until the inscrip-tions are unreadable, and several sunk-en graves midst an old cedar grove near the old homestead, mark the old family

Sgt. Hugh Huffenberger, Infantry School Detachment, and his family are now living at the old McLendon home. Sgt. Huffenberger is on duty as range guard over the area that was once the old plantation. Like the old homestead, the Sergeant has a record that is highly interesting as a soldier and adventurer. He first enlisted in the army back in 1900, as a member of Battery "D," 1st Field Ar-tillery. He was discharged in 1903, and reenlisted as a member of Co. "B," 3rd Infantry, which at that time was sta-tioned at Fort Thomas, Kentucky. He later went with the organization to Alaska, and was there during the gold tribe in 100° strike in 1905.

He was discharged at Nome, Alaska, in 1905, and with the gold rush on, he quit the service and turned prospector. In 1908, he and his partner made a strike on their claim. They sold the claim for sixteen thousand dollars. His partner took his share of the money and returned to the States. Sgt. Huffenberger remained in Alaska, to turn his small fortune into a larger one. In 1913, he showed up at Camp Davis, Alaska, broke and ready to don the Say you saw it in The News.

NEW BUNGALOW QUARTERS FOR BENNING OFFICERS

THREE TITANS

By Emil Ludwig Emil Ludwig has developed an excellent method for compiling biographies of great men, although so far he has not had the temerity to apply it to a great woman. Yet this method would seem admirably fitted for that end, since it is largely a selection of details, often in themselves insignificant, which reveal character or illuminate a situation. Thus in his new book, Three Titans: Michelangelo, Rembrandt, Beethoven, we are told that when Michelangelo was away from his house in Rome "The cats missed him very much, though they did not want for food"; or we are reminded that he said, 'Every painter ought to do sculpture along with painting, every sculptor painting along with sculpture'; or ,summing up his life in Rome, "If I did serve the Popes, it was because I had to"; or the profound precept which might stand as his artistic credo, "Tal.e infinite pains, and make something that looks effortless.'

Ludwig is also a stickler for dates. He prefaces his book with on outline which records the significant years of his three Titans; it is evidently condensed from a much fuller sketch which served as the basis of his work.

Of the three Titans, Michelangelo receives the fullest and most satisfying treatment; so good is this biography that one wishes it had filled the whole book, expanded and enriched, somewhat as Merezhkovski has given us the life of Leonardo, but without the inventions of the Russian novelist. Not that Ludwig falls short in imaginative creation; he is a true interpreter, as in the first pages where he paints the life of Lorenzo the Magnificent, statesman, Platonist, and lover of art, showing convincingly the influence of those early years on the whole life of the great sculptor. But it was hardly necessary to stress the possible moods of jealousy among the immortals by a subtle depreciation of Raphael and Leonardo, in order to make Michelangelo stand out supreme. One finds the same tendency to cast a shadow on Rubens, in the study of Rembrandt, but one finds also the same fine imaginative interpretation; especially sensitive is the picture of Rembrandt's first work in his father's mill, where the whirling wings outside the window made a magical succession of light and shade, which fascinated the young painter and dominated all his later work. But one is inclined to think that Ludwig is too sentimental in his record of the many miseries which Rembrandt brought upon himself and those he loved, through sheer inability to keep accounts. One is inclined to believe that, on the whole, the Dutch master was supremely happy in his work; that, even in his last period of dependence, he was "as having nothing, yet possessing all things," in virtue of his ceaseless power of creation.

Sentimentalism is also some what marked in the story of Beethoven, which is nevertheless sensitively recorded. But, while one does gain the feeling of Michelangelo's immense life work, and in nearly equal degree of Rembrandt's, this is less true of the great musician; perhaps because Ludwig has adopted the jargon of some art critics, who, in describing music, mix up the names of the instruments, the sounds they produce, and the emotions to be conveyed by these sounds, as who should say "Bassoons, blare, bravado!" instead of describing the successive emotions, and moods of color which the musician is laboring to express. But after all, the one true description of music is the music itself. — Reviewed by Charles Johnston.

THE GREAT CRUSADE

By J. C. Wise

This may be rated as one of America's great books of the War. Its absorbing interest grips the reader's imagination in a personal participation with the actors in the events which made history. Gifted with a fine literary style, a memory for day-by-day details of men preparing for the supreme sacrifice, a keen sense of the dramatic amidst tragic sur-roundings, and not lacking in the comedy of the trenches which was nature's safety-valve, Colonel Wise, has with fine discrimination, painted a vivid word pic-ture of modern war. His trenchant com-ments on America's many mistakes of omission and commission are pertinent and straight from the shoulder of one who has suffered such errors, altho', if the book has a fault, it is in seeing so $f \in w$ wonderful accomplishments in B and B and B are the second America's going to war. But the author's wish to point a moral as well as to adorn a thrilling tale, is most commendable; and the mistakes of G. H. Q in not profiting by French and pritish experience, the disappointments of our replacement system for battle-scarred units, as well as the iniquities of promotion to higher grades, are handled with-out gloves. Several caustic references the so-called "regulars" in rance however, lose sight of the fact that there were no regulars; the old regular organizations were swallowed up by the waves of emergency officers and drafted men, and in original personnel for battleganizations training, one American division had lit-the advantage over another. Colonel Wise's book is most readable, and should occupy a high place in the bibliography of the Great War, which, though a source of patriotic exultation to the average man in the street, was to the American doughboy not without its grievious errors, tragic mistakes, and bitter injustices, which left in the hearts of many, a sense of misgiving for the future. America's memory for repeated war-blunders, is unhappily short. —C. D. Rhodes.

COMPANY OFFICERS CLASS - M. G. Test.

Dear Eddie: Dear Eddie: Take it from me, Eddie, considerable water has flowed under the bridge since I last wrote to you. Believe it if you want to, but it rained until last Sunday, practically two solid weeks of rain, al-most a big rain, only lacked being a big rain by two weeks. Also, considerable school work went under the bridge. Capt. Maddox finally wound up his course in musketry, and the machine gun instructors were finally able to complete instructors were finally able to complete elementary training. We have been test-ed in both subjects and, with great relief to all concerned, are ready to set forth into greener fields.

Remember I told you last week about the air corps being delayed in getting here for a demonstration. Well they finally came, and only a week late. Not bad at all. Anyhow, when they arrived, the powers that be put on the old re-liable demonstration of a battalion in attack. It went off quite well I under-stand. Having seen it once the students were spared from having to see it a second time. In the afternoon everybody on the post turned out to see the fire works. It proved to be a regular contest between the air-corps and the doughboys to see could impress the other fellow the most. The doughboys fired at towed targets, and hit them too, not many hits perhaps, but hits and every time, boy and those 50 calibers sure did sound hearty and hale. Well, after the infantry had strutted its stuff and puffed out its chest, the air-corps start-ed in. First they sent a flock of planes down on corporate heattering of inforter down on a poor battalion of infantry and proceeded to shoot them up with machine guns. Very pretty it was too, with the planes flying about ten feet off the ground so as to be sure and not get off the target. Then some planes came over and dropped "bumps." This time they had to fly way up in the air so as not to get hurt themselves. Then an-other plane came along and put down smoke. It was a good smoke too, thick like the smoke from a good 5 cent "see-gar." Whereupon the air-corps stuck out its chest and did a little crowing. So everybody was happy and all puffed up bout how good they were, and when you come right down to it, that's the

you come right down to it, that's the way they were before the demonstra-tion started. The only thing that makes me wonder is why they did not count the hits made by the air-corps, and if they did count them why did they not announce them.

Serious Business

But to get down to the serious part of the school, which is what you are most interested in, as I said at first we finally completed musketry, and a time we had too, what with the rain; and Horner, and Gilmartin, and Isaacs dumping people over backwards, and lighting fires it was as much as your life was worth almost to even look at a demwas worth almost to even look at a dem-onstration. The only place you were safe was on the firing line with a rifle in your hands. However we did some noble work, and after long and serious thought the class selected a squad to represent the class as the Chief of Infantry's Combat Squad. It's a lulu. The absolute pick of the class. I'll bet there is not another squad like it in the army. I hope not, anyway. When I tell you that the corporal of the squad was you that the corporal of the squad was Wheeler, well you know just what kind of a squad it was. Here's the line up so that you can judge for yourself: Wheeler-Corporal-Noted for his ap-plication of the rule of concealment to target designation. Haleston-scout-Famous for miscel-laneous micleading misinformation and laneous, misleading, misinformation on all subjects.

Caperton-scout-Even more so than Haleston and slightly more impressive, if possible. Both have records showing them to have been the Boy Scouts.

Pughe-A. R.-He is even better with this weapon than Gilmartin was with the pistol.

Blakely—A. R.—Just a big hearted wise cracker, keeps his rifle in a good humor by telling it jokes. Askerman and Ballou—Asst. A. R.s.— No doubt that the A. R.s need assistants, the only bad feature is that there can't be assistants to the assist.

Huelett-rifleman, general utility, water boy or what do you need-Working for the first time in fast company, did well; a few more seasons in the minors and a good shave should do wonders for him.

Oh, yes! Col. Catalan got in a quar-ter pitching game with Horner and Gil-martin, and Paul Porch. The good Col. lost three quarters on his first three pitches. Somewhat puzzled the Col. withdrew from the game and going off to one side set up a stake and started to do some intensive practicing. Just as he finished some excellent practice shots and was all set to go back to the game and recoup, Capt. Maddox dismissed the class.

Guessing Contest

We are certainly getting some first hand information of horses. First "Jake" Moon had some "guess what's wrong with this horse's feet" classes. Nearly all the horses had thrush, you know the all the horses had thrush, you know the "odor you can't forget" stuff. I thought that that was enough to have wrong with any horse but it seems that there were other things. With so many things wrong if they did not tell us all the time what a swell stable they have at the school I might think that things were not so good. Capt. Lee has given us some very interesting dope on the colors of hay and oats. Personally I'm pretty "green" at that stuff yet. However in his last lecture, under the skillful ques-tioning of Horner he certainly held the tioning of Horner he certainly held the tooling of Horner he certainly held the attention of the class. It's funny how no matter what you start talking about sooner or later the conversation swings into the old, well-worn channel. My, my, Eddie, we certainly have some very conscientious members in our class. Adams, R. E., Bell, Doidge, Par-ham, Gilbreth, Thorpe, all having quali-fied as havonet experts in the last two fied as bayonet experts in the last two years, first wished to be excused from bayonet practice. In fact these officers even signed the bulletin board to that effect. However I have learned, that upon giving the matter more careful thought, they have decided that to do so would injure their professional standing and are going to go right along with the rest of the class and run the course. And you know, Eddie, the only reason that more members of the class did not have to change their minds was because Ross limited his notice to two years.

Really you'd never think of the num-ber of things that you can learn in a course in "horses" at the Infantry School. Today we learned the only prac-tical use that I have ever heard of for castor oil, use it for oiling your shoes. And penmanship, who would ever as-sociate penmanship with equitation, but lots of the boys are getting practice signing the "book" down at the stables. signing the "book" down at the stables. Mosely, Newman, and yours truly all joined the charmed circle today. Mose-ly can't deny his because the tree that he hit took plenty of hide off his face. Newman can't get by with any alibi be-cause the entire advanced platoon held its collective breath while he described a most gracful parabola. As for mine, just between the two of us, I simply dismounted to pick up a stirrup.

dismounted to pick up a stirrup. And now for just a word of warning, Eddie, when you come to the school look out for Col. Stayer and his "nut test." Believe me if the class had had to take it in order to get in the school we might have had a lot of vacancies. Johnnie Doidge is the only one in the class who can admit, without blushing furiously, that he completed all the questions. Honest, I'm glad that they let me sign the thing before and not after, as after I finished it was some hours before I was sure of anything, my name included. Every time I see a circle or triangle now I have an irresistable impulse to rush now I have an irresistable impulse to rush over and put a dot in the middle of it. I thought that I was pretty skillful with figuring, from trying to live on my pay, but after getting all tangled up in the problems and figures as dished out by Col. Stayer, I know that I'll never be able to get out of debt. So beware, if you have any illusions of granduer, just you have any illusions of granduer, just come down here and Col. Stayer and his "nut test" will prove that they are his "nut test" will prove that they are only illusions. Well, Eddie, I'll have to stop now and go out and pick some roses, and peaches and then take out the ashes and bring in the coal. It's a great life but it sure weakens you if you don't take the proper preceditions take the proper precautions. Y'rs Tr'ly,

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector FIRST AID IN THE HOME

In every home there should be certain first aid materials and medicines. These should be carefully selected, carefully labelled, and kept in a cabinet made for the purpose. This cabinet must be placed well out of reach of children. In some homes are to be found shelves crowded with drugs with which members of the family dose themselves and one another without the doctor's advice.

Some of these medicines were pre scribed by a doctor at a previous ill-ness; some are of the patent variety bought because of the glowing promise of an advertisement or by advise of a friend or even casual acquaintance. Such a collection of medicine is not only exa collection of medicine is not only ex-pensive, but often without effect. It may be dangerous.

Most minor illnesses are better treated Most minor illnesses are better treated without drugs. Drugs when needed had better be prescribed by a doctor. Do not try to doctor yourself or any one else; it is both dangerous and unjust. You cannot rely on patent medicine. While it may make you feel better for the time, the delay in consulting a doctor may result in a serious condition that can not be cured.

Call the doctor immediately in case of any serious accident, unconsciousness, severe pain in head or abdomen, sore throat, a rash with fever. The first aid materials which should

2. Earache—Always consult the doc-tor for earache or for a discharging ear. Deafness may result if you neglect this. Hot cloths or a hot water bottle on the ear may give temporary relief. ... o not put anything in the ear.

8. Nosebleed—This may be due to a slight injury, or in children from no in-jury at all. Slight nosebleed does not harm; is not a cause for alarm; requires no treatment.

It may be difficult to stop severe bleeding, though this is not usually the case. Put the patient in a chair with the head hanging back. Loosen the col-lar and apply cold applications to the back of the neck. Pinching the soft part of the nose may help. If bleedpart of the nose may help. If bleed-ing continues call the doctor. HINTS FOR ORDERLY BUCKERS

As the twig is bent, so is the tree inclined, or words to that effect. Neatness and smartness of appearance, one of the outward and visible signs of an inward and spiritual grace, once inculcated, become instinctive. A snappy soldier is sure to make his mark. As a historical example, we refer to the earlier military career of Capt. Gene Brine, the debonair functionary of the Officers' Club, noted for courtesy and military bearing.

Club, noted for courtesy and military bearing. Backward, turn backward, oh time, in thy flight! Gentle reader, recall the stirring days when Pancho Villa played tag with the U. S. Army and the National Guard went to the border. Among the mobilizees was our own Gene Brine. To assist you in visualizing the situa-tion, we present herewith a photograph of Gene taken just after he had successfully bucked for orderly.

bucked for orderly. Assidious in our efforts to further the applicatory system of instruction we en-croach upon the Second Section's training management prerogatives and bespeak es-pecial attention to the rakishness of the campaign hat, the jauntiness of the pistol belt, the individuality which must express itself in the manner of magazine pockets, and we pause in admiration at the meticullous forethought which has disposed his apples, tobacco and other articles of Equipment D throughout the capacious pockets of the trim khaki breeches against the weary hours of cooling his heels in the colonel's ante-room.

Ah, Gene, dilletante of the grill room, gracious and suave compradore to the host-esses of Benning, you, today, are reaping the reward of attention to nicety of personal adornment so beautifully depicted in this glimpse of your radiant and flaming youth.

Although the new quarters in Blocks 14 and 16 have been occupied but a short while, keen observers have already noted a tendency toward high hat on the part of the new occupants. They don't always get away with it, however, versatile Second Section, at a recent dinner party took occasion to refer to the red clay composte strewn desert surrounding her residence as a "lawn."

Colonel Stilwell, director of the great First Section and Debunker in chief pedantic tactical doctrine, politely inquired if she had refer-ence to her "corral." We suspect that his pointed remark completely spoiled Mrs. Stayer's whole evening but it had the desired effect of forestalling any attempt to create the impression that the popular Stayer family had just moved into a restored 16th Century French Chateau.

Kells and the Kjels

Captain C. H. Kells, Advanced Class, since the beginning of the foot-ball season in which the exploits of the 2d Battalion 29th Infantry, fre-quently referred to as the Kellys or the Kells, has been busy explaining that he is no football magnate, that he was not named for the team or the team for him, and that he has no crown of victory or laurel hanging about his ears, having merely to do (Continued on page 7.)

Well, Captain, frankly, we don't know just how the 2d Battalion team got to being called the Kells, but we suspect it was named for a chap named Kjelstrom.

And even to accommodate an old friend, we decline to inflict on print-ers, proof-readers and public the task of spelling and attempting to pro-nounce the words, "The Kjells."

The proposal to have busses call for instructors and take them to work in ness. They are lords and masters of their transportation anyhow.

Wives have received the plan with open arms. (They can have the car and need not rise and shine merely to take the meal ticket to work). Married instructors admit it would be convenient in some respects, but fail to see any outstanding advantages in the wife having the use of the family car in the morning to do the marketing and facilitate housekeeping. Does anyone in this day of female domination remain under the delusion that wives occupy themselves very extensively with housekeeping, they rise to inquire.

Dramatic Club Stages Lively Meeting

At the regular quorumless meeting of the Dramatic Club on Monday night the usual business was transacted.

Thirteen members, mostly club officials, were present. President Pea-body was in the chair and controlled the rough element with his customary eclat, sang froid, savoir faire and aplomb.

Treasurer Diller read a financial report which was objected to by Com-rade St. John on the grounds that the ushers were being paid while the ac-tors got nothing but glory. (Comrade St. John was a member of the cast of "The Torchbearers," one of last season's successes).

President Peabody then took up the matter of putting on a special "Boys and Girls Activities" benefit perform-ance of "Is Zat So." He called for suggestions as to ways and means of advertising the performance, where-upon the representative of The Infantry School News who had attended the meeting under the impression that it had a purpose, offered to sell the Dramatic Club advertising space at the usual rates.

Williams, prominent Roger horseman, promptly counterd with an offer to contribute his space in the columns of the News to the cause. He further declared that he had Arbiter

Wood's proxy to do as much for him. President Peabody next spoke of Major Truman Smith's proposal to send "The Boor" to New York to compete in the Little Theater's contest for the Belasco Cup. Everybody was enthusiastic. Mrs. Chance thought that it would be a good idea for the club to send someone, preferably the club director, to New York to see how the work of the other Little Theater organizations compared to ours. This idea was approved. Then some prac-tical minded killjoy figured out that it would cost a thousand dollars to send "The Boor" to the competition. After that interest in the project

Arter that interest in the project waned appreciably. Comrade St. John, apropos of noth-ing, announced that if the club pro-duced "Ten Nigths in a Barroom," he intended to try out for the part of the face on the barroom floor. The general concensus of unexpressed princip was that he would get the opinion was that he would get the part.

There being no further important business to dispose of, the meeting adjourned.

It Can Be Done

Actual test of the much-discussed arages in the new quarters has prov-ed the practicability of getting an automobile in and out thereof. In fact sneering predictions that cars could not be started up the incline have been ritigated the real different have been vitiated; the real difficulty being not in the getting up, but in the stopping thereafter.

One of our under cover men, check-ing up on the activities of Benning's police force, reports that Col. Church-hill, coming out of his garage, went all the way across the street to bump into the car of none other than Lt. Diller, the assistant to the Sheriff Himself. Thus the car-housing problem has been solved at the expense of com-plicating the parking situation.

The subject announced by Capt. G. S. Wear of the 29th Infantry for the Nov. 21 meeting of the Reserve Offi-cers was "Monograph and Combat In-telligence." We always did think there were several kinds.

Does the Major Come From Chicago?

Major Adler delivering monograph n War of 1812 stated, "It must be on War of 1812 stated, "It must be remembered that England at this time was engaged in a minor war against Napoleon Bonaparte."

We have received an explanation of that eerie noise that sweeps Fort Ben-ning and Columbus at odd hours. Those who attributed the low mumbling interspersed with shrieks (sounding like an untuned amorous tomcat or a saxophonist in distress), to activities of a mob or radio fans lynching the suspected author of the Benning Buzz, were mistaken.

We have it on good authority that the whole thing is caused by countless student officers practicing their mono-graphs on their helpless wives.

GUESS WHO WROTE THIS?

The old home-town newspaper again hits a responsive chord in the heart of an old "ex-Benningite," away from home for the first time in eight years. His suggestion that we establish a column for ex-Benningites will be acted upon, and only depends upon the amount of material received from ex-Benningites themselves. We cannot answer all the questions asked in the following letter, but may do so later: Here is the letter:

THURSDAY, DEC. 4 "QUEEN HIGH" is an amazing story of two partners in a novelty clothing business whose ideas clash so frequently that they decide to dissolve partnership. But their lawyer suggests what he calls a "better way," a game of poker to dea "better way," a game of poker to de-cide which shall become the butler for the other—Frank Morgan draws a pair of sixes — Charles Ruggles, the other partner, has a mere "queen high." "The Rube." Jimmie Barry.

Might I suggest a column for those ex-Benningites containing news and gos-sip that may be apparent to you there but would interest us? For instance, has the road to Block 23 ever been dragged? You announce Post Office has the tool of dragged? You announce Post Once Schedule, "Window service 7:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m." Does this still mean that to 4:30 p. m." Does this still mean that with luck you can remain in line that long and hope to be waited upon? How's the supply of red tags? Is P— still in business? Does the P. Ex. still raise vegetables and sell them at California prices? After 8 years helping Benning out of the mud I long for the old "growls."

Particularly here I look back on many pleasant years. One does not know how splendid Benning is until they leave. Best stay while you can. And, if you come here, know Spanish! With one I. P., over 100 pages of text on Field Engineering, an hour's Spanish, a marked problem and a free lecture staring me in the face tomorrow I shall staring me in the have to get busy. Yours for Benning,

The Brief Case

By Capt. Waine Archer

The nerve-shattering Fourth Section warns us very carefully against interest-distracting factors — and then sta-tions the bland and busy Lange with nis shaded pad and pencil where our audi-ence can see his reaction when we say "dee-tail" or "dat-ta." ххх

We haven't figured out yet just what sort of a rise Schmidt was trying to get out of us when, in instructing us regard-ing the intelligence test, he said, "Do not begin to start until I say 'Go'." xxx

The smiling J. L. Bradley was just beginning to convince the class. "This boy," whispered Harrison, "not only acts like he knows what he is talking about, but acts like he knows damn well he knows." But, alas! He spoke too soon, for if ever an instructor was dumfounded and at sea, Bradley was a few min-utes later when Reiner demanded an elucidation of the fundamental principles of the "funnel attack."

xxx

At that, we must give Bradley credit for shedding as many historical exam-ples as a mangy dog sheds fleas. He stole the meat out of everybody's monograph.

x x And, while in this expansive mood, we should remark that Truman Smith's "Battle of Lodz" was a real show. Some of us are still unable to figure, though, why he needed any help—even from the First Section. хх

Milan certainly demonstrated the prin-ciple of economy of force in his monograph. Chief Inquisitor Harding intro-duced him with the remark that he had never heard him say three sentences in a row. Milan strung out his pearls for fully 25 minutes, and if it hadn't been for the buzzer, appeared equal to that many hours.

ххх Hoping that the personally vain members of our esteemed faculty, if any, won't consider this a reflection on our forensic ability, we quote one of the class at the close of the young-and-inno-cent-looking Joe Collins' maiden effort before us: "He's the first man I ever saw who looked like a million dollars and could talk like more than thirty cents." (Adv.)

x x x This new scheme of the Fourth Sec-tion assigning the monographer the name of some fellow-sufferer for his question, is simply not so hot. Since it went into effect we have noted, sadly, a marked falling off in the knowledge of affairs military, as evidenced by the answers. Then, too, Hagan stole half of Eddie Curren's monograph time trying to answer his question.

The boys are becoming picayunish. R. S. Miller, for instance, lodges a com-plaint because one instructor tells us never to take up a defensive position in woods, and in the next period, another tells us, in detail, what do do in cleartens us, in detail, what do do in clear-ing 50,000 square yards of brush and timber from the immediate front of our defensive position. Boy, you don't know nothin'. Just wait until the First Section really opens up on us. $x \times x$

Fortunately, none of us was injured in the rush which took place after the field fortifications demonstration, when Major Hoge offered us the opportunity to take a little of our own time in inspecting the effects of his demolition ef-forts. Paynter and Rodwell attempted to take advantage of the offer, but were restrained by the united efforts of the remainder of the class.

x x x Speaking confidently for 95 per cent the papers.

DRAMATIC CLUB WILL PRESENT "IS ZAT SO" DECEMBER 5TH AND 6TH

Prize Fighter and Manager Are Principal Characters in Three Act Play

Taber, wrote the sensational three-act comedy hit, "Is Zat So," which is the next offering of the Dramatic Club, credits his experiences during the World War for his knowledge of slang. The two principal characters of "Is Zat So" are a prize fighter and his manager. From the moment the curtain ris-es until the final line these two converse in the jargon of the ring-side, to their own perfect understanding and the com-plete confusion of a family of socially elect New Yorkers into whose home they have been welcomed.

There is a laugh in every line of "Is Zat So"; there is high-tension drama and suspense in the underlying plot; and there is a winsome, appealing, romantic element floating lightly through the whole delightful theme.

The co-directors of this comedy-dra-ma are Lallie Lewis and Stanley G. Saulnier and a more hard-boiled, harder working pair it would be difficult to find. They have the members of the cast under perfect control, even to the ex- announcements later.

QUICK-FREEZING PROCESS PERFECTED VARIED WINTER MENUS NOW POSSIBLE

the emergence of a new industry which should prove of great importance to the country's economic future. Reference is had to the successful application of the quick freezing process to fresh fruits for year-round consumption; an undertaking that contains promise of revolutionary changes in agriculture, the preservation and distribution of food, and the nation's diet.

Early last summer the first freezing plant of its kind in the world was put in operation at Montezuma, Georgia, in the heart of the Georgia Peach belt, by the neart of the Georgia Peach belt, by a man born and bred in the South, and who in the South has risen to promi-nence as one of the most progressive of our younger generation of business leaders. The plant has now finished a sea-son spent in the quick freezing of fresh Georgia peaches, which will be available throughout the winter with all their original freshness, color and flavor. The successful outcome of the initial season's operation marks the first time in son's operation marks the first time in history that the quick freezing process has been applied with entire success to fresh fruit. This step, foreshadows the rapid expansion of the process to include other fruits and vegetables.

The man back of the enterprise is Tom Huston, born in Texas, now a resi-dent of Columbus, and widely known as the "Peanut King." Starting with a tiny capital and a small stock of peanuts in 1925, in five years Mr. Huston has built up a business whose annual sales of pea-nut confections amount today to two and a half million dollars. While retaining his interest in his peanut business Mr. Huston is planning to expand his operations to include additional fruit products.

Essentially, the problem that has been solved in the Georgia plant is that of freezing vegetable matter in a manner of the class, we hereby formally offer this proposition regarding the course in field fortifications: We'll all take B's and save him the trouble of correcting

The South has a special interest in that will prevent the cellular contents from escaping through a breaking down of the delicate walls of the cells. Such an escape is inevitable in ordinary, cold

The quick freezing process freezes so rapidly that the liquid of the cells is frozen in tiny particles which cause little damage in passing through the walls, and are re-absorbed upon defrosting. The result is a product that will keep indefinitely so long as it remains frozen, and is unimpaired in either nutritive value or flavor. The basic of all food preservation is to stabilize production and markets, hold over surplus supplies for use between seasons of production and rescue huge quantities of seasonal foods that would otherwise go to waste or be sold at a loss. Quick freezing promises the far-mer a wider, non-seasonal, and more profitable market for many of his crops.

Foods formerly available only during their comparatively short season will add their comparatively short season will add variety and enjoyment to our Winter menus. Lack of fresh, vitamin-bearing foods during the Winter—a situation to which many human ills are traceable which many human fils are traceaste-will be remedied by an abundance of frozen products retaining all of their health-giving qualities. Tom Huston's Fresh Georgia Peaches are on sale at the Post Exchange Soda Fountain and at the Post Exchange Grocery.

The 24th Infantry Volleyball League had a busy week-end. Nearly all teams in the league played two or more games, and some fine volleyball was exhibited. Most of the teams are in shape for tournament work, and an intercompany tournament will be announced soon. The following games were played over the week-end, with the respective scores set after them:

after them: Co. "C" vs. Co. "A," 21-17, 22-20, 21-13; Co. "G" vs. Co. "A," 21-6, 21-10; Co. "G" vs. Co. "F," 21-2, 21-7; Co. "G" vs. Co. "C," 21-3, 21-6; Co. "B" vs. Co. "A," 21-13, 21-8; Co. "G" vs. Co. "A," 21-14, 21-6; Co. "G" vs. Co. "B," 21-3, 21-14.

The Officers and ladies of the Twenty-ninth Infantry enjoyed their monthly dance Saturday evening at the Polo Club. The Clubhouse was attractively decorat-ed with autumn leaves and flowers. Receiving with Col. Duncan Major were Lieut. and Mrs. Charley Eastburn, whose marriage was a recent event. Mrs. Eastburn was most attractive in a cos-tume of white satin, made with becoming long lines. The Twenty-ninth Infantry Orchestra furnished the music.

Gunners Threaten In Closing Plays

BLACKSTONE'S LONG RUN IS FEATURE

A looping pass from Jack Harper's for holding. Harper intercepted a Gun-hands into the waiting arms of Black-stone, Irish fullback, and then a whirl-ing, twisting thirty-yard run across the Gunner goal line, gave the Irishmen a 12 to 7 victory over the Galloping Gun-ners at the Doughboy Stadium, last Sat-urday afternoon. urday afternoon.

The teams were evenly matched and the game was one of the best-played, ever witnessed at the Stadium. The Gunners won the toss and kicked. Pin-Gunners won the toss and kicked. The ton kicked to Harper, who was downed on his 15 yard line. Two plays at the line failed. Blackstone skirted left end for 12 yards and a first down. The Gun-ner, line held and forced the Irish to kick. Derrick ran the kick back to the midlaway work where he was stonged by midway mark where he was stopped by Pendergrast. The Gunners crossed up the Irish and kicked on the first play. Harper was nailed on his 12 yard line. Harper was nailed on his 12 yard line. Stevens punted out of danger and it was the Gunners' ball on their own 30-yard line. Pike got away around right end for 18 yards. Ferrier broke through and threw Derrick for a loss on an attempt-ed end run. Ferrier was in every play. Derrick kicked and the Irish took the ball on their 20-yard line. The quarter ended with the teams battling in mid-field and the score standing 0 to 0.

Second Quarter

Second Quarter The Irish threatened early in the sec-ond quarter. Harper kicked to Pinton, who fumbled and Stepp recovered for the Irish on the Gunners' 10-yard line. Four plunges at the line failed and the ball went over. Derrick fooled the Irish again by calling for a delayed line buck, instead of kicking. Pinton tore through center for 7 yards. Swayze went around left end for 6 yards and a first down. The Irish held on the Gunner 35 yard line and Derrick kicked. Blackstone fumbled and Cherry recovered on the Irish 15-yard line. Three plunges at th line failed. A pass fell incomplete across the goal line and it was the Irish-men's ball on their 20-yard strip. A 15-yard penalty for holding sent

A 15-yard penalty for holding sent the Irish to their 35-yard line. Harper went off tackle and was stopped on the midway mark. Blackstone hit center for four yards. Stevens crashed over for 6 yards and a first down on the Gunner yards and a first down on the Gunner 40-yard mark. On a fake pass, Black-stone got loose, reversed his field and with one of the prettiest exhibitions of broken field running ever witnessed at the Stadium, galloped 40 yards to a touchdown. The Gunners broke through and blocked the kick for the extra point. Score 6-0.

During the remainder of the quarter the Gunners staged a counter attack that on two occasions carried them deep into Irish territory, but each time the green line braced and held in the shadow of their own goal posts. The half end-ed with the Irish leading, 6 to 0.

Third Ouarter

Stevenson kicked off to Cherry who was stopped by Rhodes on the Gunner 40 yard mark. The Gunners were forced to kick. The Irish fumbled on the first 40 yard mark. The Gunners were forced to kick. The Irish fumbled on the first play and Pike recovered for the Gunners on the Irish 30 yard line. On the first play, Derrick gained 7 yards on a quar-terback sneak, but the play was called back and the Gunners penalized 15 yards

A pass that was knocked down behind the goal line, gave the Gunners the ball on their 20 yard line.

Fourth Quarter

Punts were exchanged at the begin-ning of the final quarter. The Irish be-gan a drive from midfield. Stevens and a drive from midfield. Stevens gained 6 yards around right end. Har-per got loose on a quarterback sneak and was pulled down on the Gunner 35 yard strip. A pass fell incomplete. Harper came back with another pass on the next play and it fell into the arms of Blackstone, who whipped around the Gunner safety man to go for a touch-down. There was a bit of argument over, the play. The referee's whistle sounded at the play got under way. Several of the Gunners stopped and came back to the point of play. The referee de-cided that the touchdown was legal as the penalty was against the Gunners. Stevens failed to kick goal for the extra point.

the penalty was against the Gunners. Stevens failed to kick goal for the extra point. Score Irish 12, Gupnners 7. The Gunners came back with a coun-ter drive that threatened to turn the tide of victory. Swayze took Derrick's pass and galloped to the Irish 30 yard line. Pike slipped around right end for 11 yards and a first down. A pass, Derrick to Cole, put the Gunners on the Irish 10 yard line. Pinton hit center for three yards. Derrick gained a yard on a sneak. Pinton went to the Irish 2-yard strip on the third down but the play was called back and the Gunners penalized 5 yards. The Fighting Irish-men smothered Derrick's pass across the goal line and the ball went back to the goal line and the ball went back to the Irish 20-yard line. Another Gunner aerial attack fell short when Turner, Irish back, slapped down a long pass to Cherry on the Irish goal line. The game was fast and well played and the players of both teams showed a never die fighting spirit and clean sportsmanship throughout the game

Due to the recent rains and conse-

Due to the recent rains and conse-quent high water in swamps the wild cat hunt scheduled for last Sunday was changed to a paper chase. Assembling at the Polo-Hunt Club the field gave the "hare" a fifteen min-ute start while coffee and doughnuts were enjoyed bfore a roaring fire of pine logs. At 8:15 Major Williams led the field to the vicinity of the beginning of the paper trail. With a whoop evof the paper trail. With a whoop ev-eryone started off, all in a bunch, but on the wrong trail. Two or three ou-timers, scratched their heads and held their horses back. They hunted around and finding the real trail started off at a slow canter. Mr. Aesop said a long time ago that it isn't always the first to get away that wins the race. With many a blind alley and back tracking the trail led around Ebbert Hill to Reynolds Hill, past the Old Treenh Area up on to Holliday Hill. Here many of the field believed they knew best and headed south toward Harp's Pond But they encoded they the Pond. But they guessed wrong; the trail went east instead to the Ivy Road and then started back toward home on the Santa Fe Road. A false trail was laid along Brown Ridge where the field found themselves checked at the ceme-tery. The lone trail continued west along the Marne Road, doubling back to the south through the Boise de Foret, across Cook Ridge and ending at the Range Office.

A few minutes behind the "Hare" came Peggy Arnold with her father. Like a good sport, however, Peggy an-nounced that she had not followed the trail all the way so she was ruled out. Soon Capt. Brooks trotted up, but with the same story. Soon another couple were seen racing over Cook Ridge and thundering down the road to the finish. To gain a little softer footing Capt. Horan moved his horse off the road and thereby lost the race to Lt. Pickhardt by a length. Reassembling at the Polo-Hunt Club the field enjoyed a delicious breakfast and an hour of song. During breakfast Lt. Pickhardt was presented a yellow hunting yest as the prize of the Paper

Chase. On Thanksgiving morning a Drag Hunt was held, meeting at the Polo-Hunt Club for the customary coffee and doughnuts. Promptly at 8:00 o'clock a large field followed the Master out the First Division Road, where the first cast was made. From there on the field fol-lowed the hounds across country for a thrilling run. The course covered about seven miles, just enough for everyone to work, up a fine appetite for their big Thanksgiving dinner. On Sunday, Nov. 30th, a wild cat hunt will be held; the field leaving Lumpkin Road and Gilbert Trail at 5:30 a. m. Coffee and doughnuts will be served at 5:00 a.m.

TO HELP CHILDREN'S SCHOOL

A benefit dance for the Children's School of Fort Benning will be held at the Garrison gymnasium on the night of December 11th. The dance will be spon-sored by the Second Battalion of the First Tank Regiment. Plans are now underway to make this dance one of the out-standing social events of the year. The 24th Infantry Syncopated Symphony Six Orchestra will furnish music for the occasion. There will be square dancing for the older set, while the youngsters will also be able to enjoy all of the latest dips and glides of the round dance.

The dance committee is made up of the Four Musketeers of the Terrible Tankers, First Sgts. Guthrie, Hunt, Faulk and Lindsey. The ladies of the battalion will attend to the serving of

"The Bachelors" in Two Acts To Be Surprise To Certain Benningites

When a few dozen of Benning's most prominent bachelors get comfortably seated in the Main Theatre for the first showing of the 1930-1931 Glee Club proshowing of the 1930-1931 Give Child pito-duction on the evening of December 19th, they are due for the biggest sur-prise of their lives. Instead of being the liberty-loving type of bachelors, they thought they were, leading care-free lives as they best see fit, they will find lives as they best see fit, they will find that they really may have nothing at all to say in the matter. Their con-ception of the inalienable rights of back-elorhood, viz, "life, liberty and the pur-suit of happiness," will certainly suffer a rude collapse. "It can't be so! It's all wrong!" they will say as they suf-fer along with Prince Robert and his happy-go-lucky crew in "The Bachelors." With Prince Robert, Lord John, sir Edgar, and Artie, and several other With Prince Robert, Lord John, sir Edgar, and Artie, and several of the r companions, they will take the solemn oath of eternal Bachelorhood, and with them they will leave "merrie England" to hunt out a safe retreat on a beauti-ful island in the Mediterranean Sea, where woman's foot has never trod. But this self-imposed isolation cannot last too long from a huntlast too long, for returning from a hunt-ing trip, the bachelors suffer a rude shock when they behold a bevy of pretty girls in possession of their camp. The girls, led by Princess Lucille, are determined hunters in search of hus-bands, and they vow to break up the bands, and they vow to break up the bachelors' isolated retreat. As part of their program, the girls force the men to sign an agreement to visit the Island of Cumino, which is their home. The bachelors are to be guests of Princess Lucille for a month. If at the end of that time, the men still desire to return to their beloved bachelor retreat, they will be at liberty to do so will be at liberty to do so.

Accepting this ultimatum under dur-ess, the bachelors agree. After landing at the Island of Cumino, the bachelors one by one, forget their vows of bachelorhood, and all proceed to make them-selves agreeable to the ladies. The la-dies aren't a bit backward about reciprocity, and all succeed in making a wholesale conquest of the men, who now lose all desire to return to their bachelor island. In order that the girls' con-quest may not appear too easy, Prince Robert announces that while he will re-turn to his former home to which the other men agree. Meanwhile, each man secretly expects to be the one who "misses the boat" and therefore be the one to remain on the island with the girls. But 'tis not to be! The girls overhear the plot and refuse to have anything to do with the men until the Prince explains that it was a joke.

Prince explains that it was a joke. The play is a musical fancy in two acts, with melodious music and plenty of sparkling comedy. The book is by D. Delmore and F. C. Payne, while the music is by E. L. Darling. The show will be given on Friday, and Saturday evenings, December 19th and 20th at the Main Theatre.

PIRATES LOSE BUT FIGHT ON

Special Units Team Has Made Good Showing Under Difficulties

The first football season for the Buc-caneers of the Special Units of the 29th Infantry has been over a very rough road that has been featured by many hard knocks and spills. Still as the Fort Benning Intra-Mural football sea-con parts the end the black-iersied son nears the end, the black-jersied team from the Special Units rank second to none in pure grit and fighting spirit.

From beginning to end, the team has been a success. Under the conditions that the team entered the league, it has done exceptionally well. To begin with there were probably five men among the candidates that turned out to practice, that actually could play the game. The remaining candidates, nineteen in all, hardly knew what a football was, but hardly knew what a football was, but they were out to learn. With only a few weeks training, this team took the field against teams that were composed of veteran players. They failed to win a victory but in every game the Black Pirates battled their way across their opponents' goal line. Their line was ripped and battered while the hackfield came in for its share of the the backfield came in for its share of the battering, but always the black-jersied fighters met the foe unflinchingly.

To the entire team goes credit for the team's showing, but to Larry Mitzen, quarterback and team captain, goes the lion's share of the honors. Quite often,

Among the picturesque old homes of lieved Sgt. Weaver as range guard in that area.

Although nearing the century mark in years, the old building is still in excel-lent condition. Carpenters from the Quartermaster have made repairs on the Quartermaster nave made repairs on the old building, and today it is as strong and durable as ever. In fact with its new coat of paint and fancy trimmings it probably looks better than ever before. Half dozen large shady elm trees stand in the front yard. These trees were planted there many years ago by the former owner of the old place. The large fields where once large harvest of farm products were raised, are now the feeding grounds of large coveys or quail and doves. Numerous rabbit and squirrel are to be found by hunters in the swamp lands of the old place.

Mitzen saw his forward wall collapse before the drive of an experienced foe and he was walked on by the calked feet of the opposing tackles as his interference was swept away, but each time he scrambled to his feet, called his warriors into a huddle, gave them their signal for the next play and fought valiantly to stem the tide.

valiantly to stem the tide. Mitzen, a former All-Army star, and today one of the fleetest-footed quickest-thinking quarterbacks in the garrison, has found the going tough this season, but he has never grumbled. His motto has been, "Don't worry. We will have a team next season and we will pay them off in full." And they will! Give the Black Pirates time and they will be a threat in Benning football.

Dear Eddie:

INFANT GRENADES

My, how time has flown since I last rote to you. We have had a Thanks-My, how time has flown since I last wrote to you. We have had a Thanks-giving holiday, and it was a real one. The best things that they put on here at the school are the holidays. This one started on Wednesday noon and contin-ued with uninterrupted joy, glee, and hilarity until Monday morning. There were a few cases of azoturia, no doubt due to diet following the lay off but due to diet, following the lay off, but these soon cleared up under the chilling winds sweeping across the stadium on Monday morning. The holiday started off with a bang, and those of us who were lucky enough and those of us who were lucky enough to win places on the flag race teams were banged on both knees by trees and various and sundry objects. My, but it was inspiring, Eddie, as I and my team mates swept out of the arena, to hear the stands shouting vociferously, "Three cents on Hennesy, to win." It's knowing that the crowd's in back of you that makes you could be and hence knowing that the crowd's in back of you that makes you go out and bring in the bacon. Unfortunately I took the wrong road and went a few miles out of the way or I would certainly have paid my backers handsomely. In fact, Eddie, my team had hard luck all the way round, and when the other half of our team was penalized 100 points for picking our numbers instead of their own, well, you know how it is, you just can²t' win with the breaks against you. Since good things must end some time Since good things must end some time, Monday found us back in school. And what a cold gray morning it was. Thru the kindly offices of the machine gun section the class was admitted into the Doubbey stadium free of charge how. section the class was admitted into the Doughboy stadium free of charge, how-ever charter members were not allowed to use their boxes. Under the auspices of Capt. Reynolds we were initiated into the secret society of "Two Mil Tappers."

The class having suffered a devastat-ing defeat in musketry has now rallied, and with renewed vigor, launched an attack on combat practice. The course to date seems to be divided into three phases, two supplied by the school and a third by the students. The school puts forth the tactical walk and practical work, the students, under the influence of Maj. Easley and the prevalence of pine cones, have introduced grenade practice. The tactical walk is really very pleasant. You walk along down the road and the fellow next to you says, "Why I know a place out in the country—," and then somebody says, "How did you come out in the game last night, Gil?", and someone pipes up, "Well I have a friend in town and he told me—." And back along the road further some one chirps up, "Yeah, we had to fire her, she did not want to stay on nights." And if you listen carefully you can hear Carter telling about the $40,000 stoppage against his pay, and what the board will probably do. About this time the class usually stops. The

this time the class usually stops. The instructor manipulates the Reds and Blues. Asks for a decision. Someone in the front row answers. The class mutters a little, and off you go again. Delightful.

The practical work is much the same except that two of the squads in the platoon have to carry rifles and fire a few shots. The rest of the class tags along and kids Ken March when his A. R. fires a long burst and brother Isaacs, who gets a stoppage so that he won't have to fire and J. Hoople Lamwon't have to fire and J. Hoople Lam-berton who looks on with a pair of field glasses bouncing up and down on his stomach. Splendid stuff. Really very interesting. We now have learned an infallible method of subduing a hostile machine gun. It depends on the situa-tion and the terrain just how you should go about it, and if you can have your grenadier drop a grenade on it why grenadier drop a grenade on it why you are that much ahead of the game. And says Capt. Lindroth, if it takes a whole squad, why it takes a whole squad. We have also learned, what is to me at least, a new duty for the point of the advance guard. It seems that of the advance guard. It seems that one of the principal duties of the point is to prevent the uninterrupted march of the main body. It must be so for Capt. Lindroth stressed the point sev-eral times.

We not only had grenades on Tues-day we got right down to brass tacks and actually threw live grenades. Maj. Easley, after a few pertinent remarks as to what to do in case you dropped a grenade and a few details as to what they would do if they went off in your hand, turned the class loose. Some of

Toothache: Go to the dentist as soon as possible. A toothache may be a sign that the hard part of the tooth has de-cayed, leaving the nerve exposed. If it is not treated destruction of the tooth will continue, the tooth and its nerve will die, and the tooth become a focus will will die, and the tooth become a locus for bacteria which may poison the whole body. A drop of oil of cloves on a bit of cotton placed in the cavity may give temporary relief from pain, but will not cure. See your dentist at least once a year even though your teeth seem all right.

Colds: If you feel a cold coming on you may sometimes be able to head it off in the following manner: If you are constipated, take a cathartic, such as castor oil or Epsom salts. Take a hot bath and a hot drink, such as lemonade, and go immediately to bed. The result-ing sweat may check the cold. Do not ing sweat may check the cold. Do not allow the skin to get chilled while per-spiring. This treatment is especially good at the very onset of the cold. Take a glass of water every hour. Eat little or nothing. Stay abed for twenty-four hours. If you have fever, sore throat, severe cough, or disconfort in the chest, or if the cold does not clear up in a week, consult the doctor at once. A sore week, consult the doctor at once. A sore throat or persistent cough should never should be seen by the doctor at once. Croup is often a sign of diphtheria.

Upset Stomach: If the pain is not severe, a hot water bottle on the abdo-men will help. Eat nothing. Don't take a cathartic. If you have repeated at-tacks, or if the pain is severe, consult the doctor before taking medicine.

Diarrhoea: This is due to irritation of the intestine. If the diarrhoea persists consult the doctor. Constipation: Constipation can, in the majority of cases, be cured if you will faithfully follow these directions:

1. Do not take cathartics or enemas. 2. Have a regular time for your bowel movement every day. 3. Drink six to eight glasses of water every_day.

4. Restrict, or for the time being at least, stop the use of tea, boiled milk, cocca, and cheese. Eat plenty of foods which have some bulk, such as coarse wirded. Heartburn: This is a name for a burning sensation in the chest which comes on a short time after taking food. It has nothing to do with the heart, but is due to a disturbance of the digestive juices of the stomach. It may be re-lieved by a half teaspoonful of soda bicarbonate (baking soda) dissolved in water. Excessive use of tea, coffee and spices aggravate this condition. If you have heartburn frequently, consult the doctor.

Dysmenorrhoea: It is not normal to have severe pain. If you do, consult me doctor. The best home treatment is a hot bath, rest in bed, and a hot water bag applied to the abdomen. Do not take drugs. Excessive bleeding or irregularity, especially at the menopause, call for a thorough examination. Next week — Home Treatment of

BENEFIT DANCE FOR CHILDREN'S SCHOOL

The Benefit Dance for the Fort Benning Children's School, which will be sponsored by the Second Battalion of the First Tank Regiment, will be held at the Fort Benning Gymnasium, De-cember 11th. The dance committee, composed of First Sergeants Lindsey, Guth-rie, Hunt and Faulk of the Tank Battalion, are leaving nothing undone in their efforts to make the affair a complete success.

Although sponsored by the Tankers, the 29th Infantry is also lending a help-ing hand and will be well represented. Tickets are being sold through the or-derly rooms of the organization and the advance sale of tickets show indications of a record-breaking crowd.

While the dance committee is busy with the financial affairs and other ar-rangements, the hostesses, Mrs. Bobby Brown and Mrs. Horace Lindsey are busy arranging for the presence of num-erous young ladies from Columbus and Fort Benning. Approximately two hundred invitations have already been for-warded. The ladies of the Terrible dant to apply the pride, pomp, and circumstances of glorious war to the vicissitudes of the great game of golf. On Saturday last golfers witnessed a strange procession moving from the No. 4 green to the No. 5 tee. In the van, arranged in faultless golf attire and carrying a set of matched clubs, marched Colonel Marshall while six paces behind and echeloned the regulation distance to the right came Mrs. Marshall, carrying the No. 4 marker held aloft in the approved manner of a veteran guidon bearer.

Major Jenkins, who was following the Marshalls became quite agi-tated, but hesitated to interfere in what had all of the outward appearance of a military ceremony. Other golfers were in a quandry as to whether to remove the head covering as the procession came by or merely stand at attention and solute at attention and salute.

at attention and salute. The tense situation was relieved when Colonel Marshall turned around to see what the excitement was about. Upon recovering his equi-librium, he graciously relieved Mrs. Marshall of her burden and counter-marched with it back to the No. 4 green. Interviewed by the Blunderbuss war correspondent, Mrs. Marshall stated that she had merely walked off absentmindedly with the flag after holding it for the Colonel to putt. She emphatically denies any intent on her part to inaugurate an adaption of parade ground formations on the Benning fairways. Benning fairways.

Handle With Care

"Explosive" is a big fine mule but he was no use to the 83rd Field Ar-tillery. For some unknown reason his temperamental muleship seemed to have it in for the "wagon soldiers." Among the red legs he had the repu-tation of being a balker, a biter, a kicker and an outlaw generally. Finally they put him on the I. & I. report and summoned Colonel Reed, the well known Impresario and Post Inspector to condemn him. The Colonel appeared at the stable

These precautions seemed quite unnec-assant however for the ricitious and essary, however, for the vicious and uncontrollable animal described in the world like Mary's little lamb. Inspector Reed was loath to order the execution of such a fine upstanding animal and he was equally reluctant to order it sold into slavery for a paltry ten or twelve pieces of silver. He, therefore, withheld his decision pending further study. Later in the morning he strolled into the 24th Infantry Stable for a conference with the Stable Sergeant Stevenson.

"The 83d Arillery has a mule they want me to condemn, Sergeant." "I know dat mule, Colonel, I'd like to have him," replied the Sergeant. Two days later "Explosive" was ob-served placidly pulling his share of served placidly pulling his share of the police wagon on its round of gar-bage collecting. Armageddon has been purchased by a great American university. Of course it was Chicago. Could it be a case of professional jealousy?

Our interest in Chicago, we hasten to state, is merely the camaraderie of arms which one garrison should feel for another; the spiritual, bond be-tween the home of the peanut (adv.) and the home of the pineapple (M VIII).

Mulhall just can't make up his mind whether to get along with or without women.

DRAG FOR ATLANTIANS

At the invitation of the Officers' Club, At the invitation of the Officers' Club, Fort McPherson, Georgia, the Infantry School Hunt Staff journeyed to Atlanta last Friday morning and conducted a Drag Hunt in the vicinity of Fort Mc-Pherson. At 2:30 p. m., a field of some 75 assembled on the parade ground in front of General McCoy's quarters for the first Drag Hunt ever staged at Fort McPherson. The pink coats of the Hunt Staff and the baying hounds grouped in front of the field made a most at-tractive picture as the hounds were pretractive picture as the hounds were pre-sented to General McCoy.

hound overrun by a horse out of hand. Immediately following the kill, the spectators and the field assembled on a hillside where General and Mrs. McCoy served tea, coffee, doughnuts and sand-wiches, al fresco in a beautiful grove of pine trees.

In the evening the Hunt Staff was en-tertained at dinner by General and Mrs. McCoy and General and Mrs. Fiske at their respective quarters. After din-ner the parties gathered at the Officers' Hop Room and enjoyed dancing and re-freshments as the guests of the Officers' Club of Fort McPherson.

Infantry School Hunt By M. F. H. The past week was one of the bus-iest periods of the School Hunt for Hunt_for some time. Thanksgiving Day, a Drag Hunt was conducted from the Polo-Hunt Club at 8:00 o'clock. There were 65 riders in the field. Moving out the First Division Road the field halted near the gravel pit and had a beautiful view of the hounds coming down a hill-side in full tongue, followed by the huntsmen and whippers-in. From there the chase followed the hounds to the vicinity of Bench Mark 26, and thence along the old drag course. The checks were varied so that 26, and thence along the old drag course. The checks were varied so that the field hardly recognized the familiar drag course. From checks to runs to kill the field followed the hounds back to the top of Cook Ridge. Here they halted for the huntsmen to take the hounds back to the kennels. The field then hacked back to the Polo Club where the horses were turned over to then hacked back to the Polo Club where the horses were turned over to the grooms and everyone headed for their respective homes and Thanksgiv-ing dinners with ravenous appetites. DRAMATIC CLUB TO PRESENT "IS ZAT SO?" THIS WEEK; PRIZE FIGHTER AND MANAGER ARE PRINCIPALS IN PLAY

Major H. B. Lewis as Hap, Lt. T. J. Wells as Chick, and Lt. J. R. Pierce at Clint

Major H. B. Lewis as Hap and Lt. T. J. Wells as Chick "IS ZAT SO" has been stigmatized by some of the more erudite members of the Dramatic Club as a hopelessly low-brow play. It was only after a bitter battle and long arguments that the members who championed it won. The directors feel that this opposition is a good omen as the original production was received with much skep-ticism by the big producers of Broadway. The authors, however, had faith and finally the Shuberts were finally induced to take a chance. The engagingly amusing experiences of a dumb prize-fighter and his slangy manager, thrown suddenly into a turmoil of delicate, mysterious situations in the home of a Fifth Avenue millionaire is the theme of this three-act comedy. How they blunder through to the ultimate benefit of all concerned has furnished laughs and thrills for all who Company "B" If war is ever declared, "B" Com-pany should "lead the way," because we are certainly getting lots of practice. Say, we had a pea-eating contest in the Mess Hall the other night. Cpls. Johnson, J. C., Nichols, Blackston, Gares, Wilkerson, and Pfc. Morgan were the contestants. They were aided by the undying efforts of "K. P." Rid, who tried his best to keep them supplied with peas by means of a little bowl. However, he soon gave this up and brought out the whole pot of peas and set them handy for everyone concerned. The contest ended, with all of them still going strong, and only because the peas going strong, and only because the peas gave out. Better luck next time, fel-lows, maybe we will have an extra can of peas.

But to the losing Pirates went a big share of the fans' admiration. Outclassed in every stage of the game, with a bad-ly crippled team, the black jersied team refused to acknowledge defeat. Al-though four of their regulars were out, the battered Pirates took every charge gamely and limped back into formation more determined than ever. In the more determined than ever. In the third period the Pirates carried the ball to the Kelly 5-yard strip on a long end run by Mitzen and a completed for-ward pass. Bowling Alley News

Until the closing hours of the Bowling Alleys, November 30th, the leading bowlers of the bowling flights remained in the allays attempting to better their scores. As no games of the Officers Bowling league were scheduled, individual bowlers concentrated on bet-tering their scores for monthly prizes for November.

Sgt. Dezotell of the Quartermaster Corps, won the monthly prize, ($5.00 cre-dit at the Book Shop) for the highest average of five high games with a score of 250.2. He had established this high average about a week before the close of the month's bowling and was followed in turn by Sgt. E. C. Davis of the In-fantry School Detachment and Sgt. Glenn of the Infantry School Detach-ment. Sgt. Glenn attempted to over-take Dezotell's fine score right up to the closing of the alleys and ended up just one pin behind Sgt. Dezotell with an average score of 250.0. Sgt. Davis' high average was 248.8. Sgt. Glenn won both weekly prizes—10 tickets for holdboth weekly prizes—10 tickets for hold-ing the highest score for the week which was 267 and 10 tickets for bowling the greatest number of games with scores of 200 or more. Major Brooke Dodson, Medical Corps, who has been serving as attending surgeon in Columbus, for the past few months, died at the Station Hospital, Fort Benning, Saturday morning at 7:15 o'clock, after an illness of only one week.

Major Dodson was born in West Virginia, August 24, 1887. He was graduated from the University of Louisville and received his appointment to the Medical Corps from West Virginia. He served in the Officers' Reserve Corps from December 1917, until September, 1920.

He received his commission in the regular army Medical Corps in July, 1920, and was made a captain in January, 1921. He received his commission as a major in January, 1930. Major Dodson has been on duty with the Station Hospital at Fort Benning for eight months, having been detailed for eight months, having been detailed to duty here April 3, 1930. He was assigned as attending surgeon in Columbus, June 12, and made his home at 1343 Third avenue.

Surviving him are his wife; his mo-ther, Mrs. E. H. Dodson, Spencer, West Va.; two brothers, Senator Raymond Dodson, Owens, W. Va.; Dr. Ross Dod-son, Charleston, W. Va.; and three sisson, Charleston, W. Va.; and three sis-ters, Mrs. Laurentz Hamilton, Grants-ville, W. Va.; Mrs. Clyde Porter, Hunt-ington, W. Va.; and Miss Edna Dodson, Charleston, W. Va. 29TH POLO TEAM WILL FLY TO MONTGOMERY FOR GAME

When Maxwell Field at Montgomery, Alabama, wishes to "put any-thing over," they like to do it in "a large way," as witness their method of aiding the cause of the Army Relief Society.

On Sunday afternoon, the airmen plan to buckle on their rusty spurs and show the little town of Montgomery that they can ride buck-ing broncs and wild-eyed polo ponies as well as any "doughboy" from the Twenty-ninth Infantry. They have challenged the officers of the "Leading Infantry Regiment of the Army" to a polo game, and their challenge has been accented challenge has been accepted.

challenge has been accepted. As part of the contract, the airmen have specified that the dough-boys must be "taken for a ride" in an airplane, prior to the game. This looks like "dirty work's afoot," but the doughboys are trusting "inno-cents abroad." Four airplanes will "ferry" the following players from Benning to Montgomery: Major T. F. Taylor, Lieut. B. R. Jacobs, Lieut. W. G. Skelton, and Lieut. D. G. Strickler. Lieut. J. F. Trent, for once in his life, doesn't mind being "ranked out." He will contentedly take charge of the five enlisted men and the ten ponies and make the move by truck.

TAYLOR POLO REPRESENTATIVE

The new polo representative, press agent and spokesman is Major "Tommy" Taylor, a hard-riding gentlemen from the 29th Infantry, and he promises to be a "good dictator." Being Post Polo Representative is nothing new in "Tommy" Taylor's young life, for he claims the distinc-tion of being the first polo representative Fort Benning ever had. He held this honor during the years 1919-20. Unlike Mussolini, however, the new "dictator" is subject to the control of a committee, the Polo Committee composed of Majors Mc-Cunniff, Hoge and St. John. The presence on this committee of Com-missar St. John insures that the rights of the proletariat will be well guarded.

GEORGIA REAL ESTATE DEALERS TO VISIT INFANTRY SCHOOL TODAY

Approximately fifty members of the Georgia Real Estate Dealers Association, now in session in Columbus at their annual convention, will visit The Infantry Scool today at 2:30 p. m.

Accompanied by a reception committee from the office of the assistant com-mandant of the school, the real estate men will be conducted to the Tank Park, where selected drivers from the Tank battalion will give a demonstra-ninth tion of tank driving. Those visitors de-siring a ride will be given an oppor-p. m.

Fort Benning personnel, present and prospective, will cheer vociferously when they hear that at last Fort Benning is connected with the outside world by an all-weather paved road. It will soon be possible to go from Fort Benning, via Hamilton, Atlanta, to Detroit, Chicago, and "all points north." The cause of this happy uproar is due to announcement that the last con-

HEDEKIN AND BASSETT WIN IN TENNIS FINAL: RETAIN CHAMPIONSHIP

Collins Wins Singles Tourney. Defeating Philips in 3-Set Match

The tennis doubles situation in the post is normal.

Except when Hedekin and Bassett are crippled, there does not seem to be a crippied, there does not seem to be a pair that can take a set from them. They lost a couple of sets last year when Hedekin was hobbling around as result of an injury—but this year things are different.

different. Capt. Bassett and Lt. Hedekin easily retained the doubles championship of Fort Benning in the finals of the fall tennis tournament when they defeated Captains Philips and Trechter, 6-0, 6-4. Bassett and Hedekin hit their stride and the net game of Philips and Trechter which had upset other opponents could not get going. Despite some nice volleying by Philips, Hedekin and Bas-sett passed their opponents several times, and the result was not in doubt long.

Collins Wins Novice Singles

Collins Wins Novice Singles Capt, J. L. Collins won the Novice Singles Tennis Tournament Thursday afternoon by defeating Capt. Philips in a hard three-set match, 3-6, 6-4, 8-6. Capt. Collins' game got stronger to-ward the end. With Philips leading 6-5 on the deciding set, Collins got going at top speed and took the last three games. Collins' service was particularly strong toward the end.

toward the end. Philips' volleying was excellent, as has been the case throughout the tourna-ment. Collins' ground strokes were perhaps stronger.

Recognized tournament players and members of the Benning team were excluded from the tournament.

Capt. Philips went into the singles finals as a result of defeating Major Smith, 8-6, 6-1.

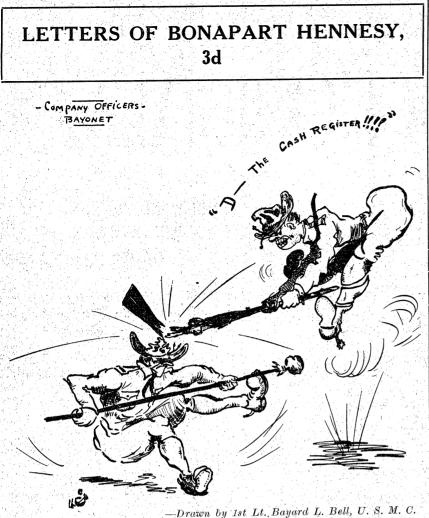

GENERAL FISKE IS INJURED

Despatches from Atlanta state that Brigadier General Harold B. Fiske, commander of the Sixth Coast Artillery Distract, was injured when his horse fell Tuesday. Dear Eddie:

You remember me telling you a long time ago about Morgan and how I was expecting great things from him in the expecting great things from him in the way of news. Well, he sure has come through in great style. Imagine if you can, the pride of New York and all points. North, South, East and West has at last weakened and is going to be married. When I say that the members of the class greeted this announcement first in stunned silence and then with first in stunned silence and then with loud and vociferous comment, I am as loud and vociferous comment, I am as usual tied down through lack of facility in handling the English language to ex-press fully the terrific storm which swept the ranks of the class. Earthquakes, floods, cyclones may sweep the earth but they are but commonplace in the face of such a stupendous, unlooked for, unprecedented event as the fact that for, unprecedented event as the latt that Morgan is to be married. However I must say that Morgan seems to be standing up under the strain nobly. When I talked to him last he was still able to produce one of his usual brand of smoking car stories, and only today I heard him break into song. Sing, sing, sing while you are still able. For-sooth your singing days are numbered, 'twill not be long ere your carefree days will soon be over, and perennial gloom becomes your lot.

Nor is that all, Eddie. Another sterl-ing member of the class has decided to take the most perilous step known to take the most periods step known to man. Pickhardt succumbed at last, at-ter many valiant attempts to stem the sweeping tide of victory. He, too, does not seem to realize whilst he goes and is seen the live long day, with cherubic smiles of happy contemplation.

Can Such Things Be?

And now to more cheerful subjects. From the view point of one who is ra-ther near-sighted, it appears that a few members of our class are taking Col. ther near-sighted, it appears that a few members of our class are taking Col. Stayer's admonition on the daily cold shower rather too seriously. Of course, there are members of the class, who like Carter, simply could not be coaxed into a cold shower if they could get out of bayonet training by doing so. On the other hand, we have two members in the class who have gone the Col. one step the class who have gone the Col. one step the class of a long thrust, and was entirely too slow in withdrawing to make any stery afoot in the class. What deep secret has Ohr- too first training by doing so. On the other hand, we have two members in the class of th farther and have evidently become cold bath and naturefadists, I speak of Har-per and Stevens, B. G., both of whom are charter members of the "Swim the Upatoi Society." It seems that at present there is some confusion as to Upatoi Society." It seems that at present, there is some confusion as to the laws and procedure of the society. Harper contends that to become a bona the laws and procedure of the society. Harper contends that to become a bona fide member it is necessary to remove all clothing before taking the plunge. He therefore contends that Stevens, since he only fell in the river trying to retrieve a goose, and since his cold bath was only the result of a misstep that he, Stevens, cannot claim the full rites due a member in good standing of the society. Stevens, while admitting that his plunge was not premeditated, and in fact was entirely unexpected, claims that his splashings after finding himself in the water surely entitle him to full membership. Whatever the club standing of the two may be, I must ad-mit that while I can understand the reasoning in back of the historical per-formance of Leander; I can hardiy see that a mere goose is in the same cate-gory with a "chicken."

Speaking of the association of ideas, even if we were not, that's a good and way to start this one off, Bob Cullen certainly experienced a first hand demon-stration of the theory. It seems that stration of the theory. It seems that Cullen went dove shooting Saturday. The doves not being plentiful, and the labor somewhat fatiguing the hunting party proceeded to park in a likely lo-cation. After being in the sitting posi-tion for some time Cullen 'gradually slumped to the full recline. Time passes. A voice calls out, "Here they come, Cul-len." Springing to his feet with a mighty bound, and grasping his trusty shotgun in the proper position of "guard," Cul-len rushed at the doves circling over-head. Unfortunately he made a short thrust instead of a long thrust, and was thrust instead of a long thrust, and was entirely too slow in withdrawing to make

Brann Performeth

Now lest you think that life at Ben-ning is all skittles and beer, I will tell of the things that we have been vou forced to undergo at the hands of the faculty. We have completed our course in grenades. We are now qualified, that it a very few of us are qualified as grenade experts. And few means very few in this case. Of course things were simplified by the fact that each of us simplified by the fact that each of us was given 6 points, or the possible total for the rifle grenades that we did not fire. Personally as I went over the hand grenade course I thought for a time that those 6 points would be the only ones that I would get. The trouble with most of the class as I look at it is that those who threw the grenades as we were shown that they should be thrown couldn't do it, and those who realized that they couldn't throw them that way and simply threw them like baseballs and simply threw them like baseballs came out on top. However hats off to came out on top. However has one of our star performer once again. Don Brann, not in the least fazed by no practice, went ahead and accumulated 37 points out of a possible 40. He is one member of the class that will be Don hard to beat at no matter what he turns his hand to. We also have had some bayonet work. We learned how to take a bayonet away from a charging opponent. What it does to your hands is almost as bad as hav-ing the bayonet hit you. I have a much better method. Run like H—. We are also running the assault courts. Lots of fun. I broke two rifle stocks doing it Tuesday. If other members of the We learned how to take a bayonet away it Tuesday. If other members of the class could only follow suit we would soon do away with the course. What, no Hum, no place to put the bay-Ain't that lovely? No bayonet rifles? onet. practice.

We are also shooting the machine gun. "Dry Run" Seebach developed a run away gun. He must have called his shots too fast. It was quite exciting tho with lots of people talking all at once, and Capt. Evans, in somewhat the man-ner of a doctor discovering a new dis-ease, delightedly confessed that he had never seen one before in 11 years with machine guns. Believe me, Eddie, this

No sir, it has to be a terrible storm before the so-called "horsey crowd" will come up to our nice warm lecture hall. Well, Jake Moon put on another horseshoe inspection tour, but it had been so long since he told us about the "foolish virgins," that it was quite startling the number of things that some members of the class were able to find wrong with his exhibits. And then just as we were about to mount up for the as we were about to mount up for the afternoon's agony, it rained. If Judge B. Lindsay read history books, he would not think his try-out system for selecting matrimonial wrest-lers was a new idea. "Bundling" * * * lers was a new idea. "Bundling" may have been a shady transaction in New England in 1760, but you should read what they did before the days of the safety pin. And liquor! I smelled it in every printed work. And dirt! actions and through an error on the li-brarian's part I studied the private life of the leaders. The leaders on the battlefields were sure bums in their own home towns; the bird that got covered home towns; the bird that got covered with medals in conflict was covered with soot in private life. No matter how much a loving penman tried to whitewash the misdeeds, the smudge showed up like a dirty neck through talcum powder. Take old Nap Bonypart with his greasy yest. He was A. W. O. L. through all his early service, he refused to serve where he was put, and he sassed his boss and was always disrespectful. Women to him were like fleas to a bird dog, and he never was particular bird dog, and he never was particular where they lit. He ran up and down back stairs more than a bar-tender in a speakeasy. His social record would sound like the actions of a South Sea Island wiggler reforming Hollywood. With our present Class-B system which investigates everyone's private life, old Nap would have held his commission just long enough to get his laundry back from the Quartermaster and then some wowzer would "have selected him out" by Act of Congress. We urge the study in detail of every-thing he did in battle and advise the students to imitate his methods, whereas everyone knows we could not retain that type of officer in our army. We surely are strong on habitual morality even if short on ethics and tactics.

Third: Is he in a place where life is still being endangered? If so, he must be moved.

To make your examination you may have to remove clothing. Cut it off if necessary, but do not let the skin get chilled.

If breathing has stopped; if there is severe hemorrhage; if there is shock; begin treatment at once and at the same time send some one to get the doctor.

1. Artificial Respiration: The most common causes of stoppage of breathig in a living person are drowning, gas poisoning and electric shock. What-ever the cause, treatment is the same. Not a moment's time should be lost before starting artificial respiration.

Feel in the victim's mouth and throat and remove any obstruction such as to-bacco or false teeth. If the mouth is tightly locked do not make this attempt until later.

Don't waste time. Artificial respira-tion consists in forcing the patient's chest to imitate the movements of or-dinary breathing. Keep the patient warm. Continue artificial respiration without interruption until n at u r al breathing is restired, even for four hours or longer, or until a doctor declares death death.

As soon as artificial respiration has been started have some one loosen any tight clothing about victim's neck, chest and waist. Do not give any liquids by meuth until he is fully conscious. Do not allow patient to sit up or stand up after revival.

Watch the patient—keep him warm. Sometimes breathing stops again and artificial respiration has to be again started. If an oxygen-carbon dioxide inhaling apparatus arrives do not stop the artificial respiration. This apparatus does not make the patient breathe. Even with the inhaler in place artificial resunkept (unkempt), and almost all of piration must be continued until natural

Treatment of emergencies until the breathing is restored and permanent. A stimulant given after return of consciousness is beneficial. 2. Dangerous Bleeding: Many wounds give serious bleeding. Hemorrhage must be stopped. Where it is only an oozing it will stop from the pressure of a dress-ing. Hemorrhage from large veins and arteries causes the loss of much blood in a short time. The flow from veins is steady; that from arteries is in spurts. No time is to be lost. Place your fingers at once on the bleeding point. Sena for the doctor. Keep up the pressure with your fingers until he arrives. If with your ingers until he arrives. If this can not be kept up, stuff gauze, cotton, or a piece of cloth into the wound and again apply finger pressure. The only veins which it will be difficult to stop bleeding are those in the neck and the enlarged (called varicose veins) ones of the lerg ones of the leg. Bleeding from an artery is the most serious. The amount of blood lost de-pends on the size of the artery and the extent of the injury. If the stream of blood is a fine one pressure of a dressblood is a fine one pressure of a dress-ing will stop it. In large arteries this plan will not work. So one is justified in forgetting about infection and places his finger directly on the bleeding point, after which he replaces it with a dress-ing and maintain pressure. Arteries or ing and maintain pressure. Arteries are like a hose; pressure on a hose or artery nearer the source of supply, or the heart, will stop the flow.

Press the artery against bone with your fingers. They tire quickly and must be replaced by a tourniquet. A tourniquet is easily made from any piece of rope or cloth that will encircle the limb. Place a small pad on the artery and make pressure by twisting the rope with a stick until hemorrhage stops. Don't make pressure too great nor leave the tourniquet on too long. Loosen the tourniquet every 15-20 minutes otherwise it may stop circulation and cause gangrene.

Get the doctor or take the patient to the hospital as soon as possible. Don't give stimulants for they increase the flow of blood.

KITCHENER By C. R. Ballard

General Ballard gives in a single vol-ume a very readable account of the affairs in which Lord Kitchener played a leading part. But it is the skilfully accomplished portrait of the Man which makes this biography so acceptable. The public loves a mystery, and there was always something mysterious about "K." He undoubtedly caught the imagination of the people of our Empire, and their confidence in his power was an immeasurable asset when war came in 1914. From his earliest days, his environment was very different from that of the ordinary soldier. He seemed to live a life apart, a man of of few words and with great power of concentration on any ork in hand. The circumstances surwork in hand. rounding his work up to the finale of the reconquest of the Sudan led him to do everything himself, leaving as little as he could for others except within the narrow limits he laid down. General Ballard does not attempt to hide the defects which became engrained in a character formed under such conditions.

Space forbids comment on the author's account of Kitchener's services in South Africa and India, and we pass on to the War to which nearly half the book is devoted. In the public mind, perhaps, Kitchener's greatest service seemed to be the creation of New Armies. It will always be a matter of argument whether we lost or gained by their formation in preference to the expansion of the Ter-ritorial Army. It was one of the defects of his qualities to be indifferent to other men's plans. His experiences in South Africa and India had, strangely enough, failed to bring home to him that no amount of driving power can compensate for lack of organization; conse-quently he had little understathding of the value of a trained General Staff. The service which General Ballard puts in the forefront — and it was hidden from the public-was Kitchener's pre-servation, at all costs, of the alliance with France. It explains much that is otherwise hard to understand. As the author says, "he rushed to Paris to save the entente, he allowed Joffre to override his military judgment of the Saloni ka expedition in order to maintain good will with the French, he lost his life in a mission to Russia."

There is much interest in the book on the probable reasons why Kitchener did not press for compulsory service. Finally, the author shows that the facts of the tragic loss of the "Hampshire con-trovert all mythical stories of betrayal.

Colonel (to youngster just out Öf bed): "Now what are you crying about?" Youngster: "I wanta drink." Colonel: "So do I. Go to sleep."—

Capt. Liston: "Why so?" Sgt. White: "Well, it's been Satur-day or Sunday every time you've been on guard so far. And you go on today."

HAPPY HEART JOKES

Sgt. White: "It must be Saturday or Sunday today."

Speaking of names, the Sergeant Ma-jor was asked if a man named Williams was in the regiment. "Oh, yes," said the sergeant, "which one was it you wanted to see? We have Albert, Sloan, Fin-dall, George, Ben, Elly, Ulysses, James, Lewis, Andrew, Esaw, Clifford, Rufus, John, Harold, Herbert, Fred, Major and Valentine. Also several others." Valentine. Also several others.

Hurrah! The Miniature Golf Course has paid for itself already. Laugh that off.

"How do you fellows get to town from the Logging Camp?" "Oh, we catch a bus, or else walk or maybe hitch-hike."

Sgt. Manuel (in court as witness): "Cpl. Winston is the only man out here allowed to carry fire-arms. That is, allowed to carry fire-arms. That he's the only one cept'in the Captain.

Fred Williams (being pulled down the winning pool hill by an overloaded wheelbarrow): "By gravy, I done started off wrong."

Cpl. Brown (in charge): "Yeh! And youse goin' to finish up wrong, too." Note: He did—at the bottom.

Did you know that Findall Williams was an angel? Yes, in deed. He wore a crown and carried a harp in the play "Heaven Bound" last Friday. And he showed an angelic profile too.

NEW STYLE MAILING LIST

The Academic Department, The Infantry School, is receiving numerous let-ters in praise of the Innovation which the Infantry School Mailing List con-templates for the current year. The 1930-31 Mailing List will be changed both as regards form and content. It will come out in two volumes, bound either in heavy paper or buckram, in-stead of in several consignments of loose pamphlets as heretofore. Instead of pampnets as neretotore. Instead of consisting largely of selected problems of the preceding year it will contain selected problems of the current school year and specially written discussions which embody the latest up-to-the-min-ute thought on infantw taction These ute thought on infantry tactics. These problems and discussion will deal with the new infantry organization and the first volume of the mailing list will con-tain tables of organization of the infantry regiment as prescribed by the reorganization project. 54 SINGERS IN GLEE CLUB PLAY, TO BE GIVEN DECEMBER 19 AND 29

Capt. McFayden and Mrs. Barker and the Patricks have leading roles

"A Deroin-Directed Play" would certainly be the flaming sign in electric lights at the Main Theatre, Fort Benand 20th, heralding the coming of "The Bachelors," if the Main Theatre had the equipment to put up catchy signs.

Captain Frank Deroin, 24th Infantry, Captain Frank Deroin, 24th Infantry, fresh from Hawaii, has had considerable professional experience, but Fort Ben-ning best remembers him as the man who gave the Infantry School Dramatic Club its flying start back in 1925. This is Mr. Von-derau's third year with the Glee Club, and his work with the choruses of the "Mikado" and "The Prince of Pilsen" are well known

In addition to these there are nine small parts. The chorus is made up of eighteen ladies and eighteen bachelors. Captain Bernice McFadyen has the leading tenor part. Well known to Glee Club members for his fine singing in the tenor section in the "Mikado" and "The Prince of Pilsen," "Mac" admitted that this was his first offense against the sensitively-tuned ears of Fort Benning pat-rons, but, if we just did have to put something down on his service record, that he would like to be known as "Al Johnson," a black-faced monologuist of no mean ability. We said we would.

Mrs. Barker Has Lead

Mrs. Barker Has Lead Mrs. Hazel Barker has the leading soprano part. Mrs. Barker is a singer of wide experience. She played "Ange-lina" in "Trial By Jury,' took the lead-ing part in "Lelawala," played "Yum-Yum" in the "Mikado," and last year she was "Sidonie" in "The Prince of Pilsen" she was Pilsen."

Major Edwin Patrick, who in his spare time between Glee Club rehearsals also assists the Dramatic Club as Busi-ness Manager, (yeah — the man who passes out "deaf and dumb tickets"), takes the part of Lord John, who be-comes enmeshed in the charms of a gay ingenue contralto, Lady Annette, played

Major Patrick took the part of "Lar-ry" in "White Elephants," was a pillar of strength in the bass section in "The Prince of Pilsen"; while Nellie May won hosts of friends with her "Mrs. Crocker" in "The Prince of Pilsen," "Miss Isit" in "Shall We Join the Ladies," and "Millie Montgomery," the chorine, in "The Best People."

Major George L. Kraft plays the part of Sir Edgar, Prince Robert's treasurer. Major Kraft's rich baritone voice easily won him a place on the cast. He plays opposite Mrs. C. F. Gee, a soubrette mezzo, who plays the part of Lady Dora. Gee has had much Dramatic and Brown Ridge. A long check was made Club experience, having played for everyone to catch their wind. Diller Has Comedy Part

The laugh provocateur mantle falls to Lieut. LeGrande Diller, who takes the comedy tenor part of "Artie," a jolly good fellow, "don't cher know." If any-one doesn't happen to know who Diller one doesn't happen to know who Diller is, he or she must be recent arrivals, for who doesn't remember "Tommy Atkins, Junior," in "Pigs," and "Joe, the Wait-er" in "Broadway"! Diller has been one of the main supports in the tenor sec-tion in the choruses of the "Mikado" and "The Prince of Pilsen." He plays or and the Society Reed, who takes the opposite Miss Daisy Reed, who takes the opposite Miss Daisy Reed, who takes the part of Lady Florence. Miss Reed played the part of the "Duchess of Martigny" in "L'Apache," and "Sis" m "The Black Suitcase." She also played in the chorus in "The Prince of Plisca. Other parts and other players are in the chorus in "The Prince of Pilsen. Other parts and other players are: Miss Billingslea as "Lady Pauline," Mrs. Vernon as "Lady Irene," Mrs. Macklin as "Lady Eunice," and Mrs. H. J. P. Harding as "Lady Agnes." The Infantry School Hunt By M. F. H.

Leaving the clubhouse at 8:00 o'clock the Field moved along the First Divis-ion Road, where the first cast was made. The hounds started off in full cry, approximately following the course of the last Drag Hunt until reaching the Trench Area. Here a new territory was tried.

Just north of the Trench Area the hounds were cast and followed up over Longwell Ridge to the western slopes of Strickland Ridge. The scent then of Strickland Ridge. The scent then turned north toward the Upatoi. Through the Bois de Romagne and over Thompson Hill the hounds went until they hit the old Sante Fe Trail. Here they doubled back to the southwest along Davis Hill to the "kill" the scent fol-lowed the course of previous Drag Hunts.

Mrs. Seeley Injured We regret to report two accidents. Mrs. Burton A. Seeley's horse stepped in a hole and went down, throwing Mrs. Seeley for a bad fall in which she broke her collar bone. She is very provoked as the doctors tell her she won't be able to ride on another hunt until a ft er Christmas.

The other accident occurred early in the day. Captain John A. Shaw came a the day. Captain John A. Shaw came a cropper when his horse slipped in a muddy place. It was first rumored that he had lost two teeth. Investigation proved thus to be but partly true. Both patients were given first aid by Col. Stayer and Miss Merback, while Lt. Applegate and Lt. McKnight galloped home for motor tranportation in which the patients were rushed to the Station Hospital.

After a kill near Bench Mark 26 the Field hacked to the Polo-Hunt Club where a delightful breakfast was en-joyed. Following the breakfast everyone gathered around the piano when Mrs. Chance started playing, "Drink, Puppy Drink."

The M. F. H. takes pleasure in announcing the appointment of two addi-tional whippers-in on the Hunt Staff; Major Archibald V. Arnold, F. A., and Major Thomas F. Taylor, 29th Infantry. Both of these gentlemen are enthusiastic sportsmen and have had considerable experience with other Hunts. We consider ourselves very fortunate in obtaining their assistance and experience.

Hounds Tree Possum

Hounds Iree Possum On Wednesday night, December 3rd, a Coon Hunt was held. Shortly after the hounds were cast they "treed" a pos-sum under an old log near the Ohio Road. Having bagged the game the hounds were gathered in and "carried" to McMurrin Creek where a cast was made. No sooner had they been cast than they found a coon trail and started than they found a coon trail and started in hot pursuit. The coon headed west and treed along Gilbert Creek near Mary's Falls. A Field of thirty-six members followed the hounds on foot and in cars. It was a beautiful moonlight night and everyone thoroughly enjoyed the sport. Friday night the Huntsmen had the hounds out for a little work and bagged four coons along Gilbert Creek. Sunday night the Wild Cat Pack trailed a wild cat for over two hours and finally made a kill near King's pond. Dec. 14th, a Wild Cat Hunt will be held. The Field will leave the water tanks on Ebbert Hill at 5:30 a. m. Coffee and doughnuts will be served at the assembly point at 5:00 a. m.

THE BRIEF CASE By CAPT. WAINE ARCHER

No. wall. On the contrary. Last week he gave us horses and an aerial mosaic and gave us norses and an aerial mosaic and told us to go places and do things. We went places, all right, but not always the right places. And we did things; but, judging from the way the boys eased into and out of their chairs for the next two or three days, not the right things, except our cavalyman Bodwell things—except our cavalryman, Rodwell. He had the judgement to do his riding on automobile-back, and, as a re-sult, could sit down with ease and abandon.

xxx Leon Norris is the latest user of the "ran-into-a-door" story. He, however, was original enough to provide himself with witnesses.

XXX Since we have seen the enterprise of the esteemed News in obtaining photo-graphs of the militarily great and near-great as exemplified in the dapper and debonair delineation of Gene Brine, we are quivering in eager anticipation of seeing in the near future a life-like rep-resentation of Brigadier General A. We resentation of Brigadier General A. We have always believed he has side-burns and walrus-like mustaches — and the more we try to read his mind, the firmer becomes that conviction. We'll also bet he's still wearing a high-collar blouse with the white collar showing an cicht with the white collar showing an eighth of an inch above it.

With tolerant amusement we suggest to these First Section gents who have to these First Section gents who have been trying to impress upon us the nec-essity for making full use of the time available, that they come over some day when our class is dismissed at 12:01 p. m. and watch the Kells-Jensen-Mc-Kinley-Miller bridge game start bidding at 12:01:03.

x x x These E. P. U. problems (acknowl-edging our debt to Joe Collins for the name) certainly are developing the spirit of the offensive. Fielder's solution of one situation evoked the usual murmur of "Noes." He glared around aggres-sively for a moment and then thundered, "Yes!"

X X X Donovan, too, argued heatedly with the instructor, as follows: "Well, what's the use of arguing over that?"

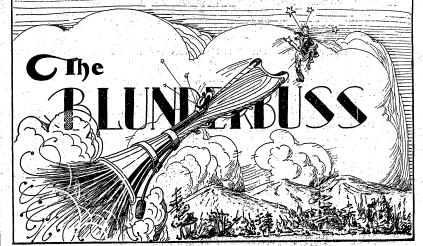

x x xColonel Bond's famous dictum to the effect that a slide-rule in the hands of an infantryman is a dangerous weapon, may well be adapted this year to that confounded class-room bell. Saulnier kicked it with his knee during his monograph, thereby bringing on a brief but severe heart-attack. A day or so later severe heart-attack. A day or so later Eddie Curren, arguing conscientiously with the instructor at the beginning of a ten-minute break, pressed his knee earnestly against it, shocking everyone with the fear that the sacred ten min-utes had been cut to three.

x x x We were informed that our afternoon spent in transferring the air mosaic to a road map was intended to teach us two things. It taught us that many, all right, but we greatly fear they weren't the right things.

We refuse to record the names of the immortal fourteen who almost "maxed" the military history questions. They are fully qualified to take care of their own publicity. Besides, we weren't included --by a considerable margin.

DOWNFALL

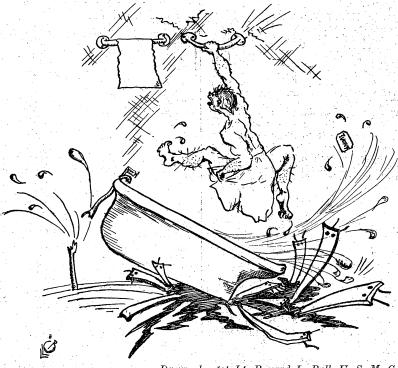

Like most of the ladies of Fort Benning, Mrs. Gene Brine likes her house 15 degrees warmer on the average than does her husband (estimated).

Like most of the husbands of Benning Capt. Gene Brine does a bit of plain and fancy complaining about the undue heat, at times (to his wife only). Such a conversation ensued not many days ago in the Brine menage.

The discussion waxed warm as Gene said the house was. Finally Benning's maitre-chef, the Oscar of our own Waldorf-Astoria (the club), reached a decision.

decision. "Well in any case, I'm going to take a hot bath to cool off a bit," he announced, and forthwith retired to his boudoir. We next find our hero (we recently depicted in the News glimpses of his early life and adventures as orderly bucker on the Mexican border when his perfectly-groomed tout ensemble even then was the despair of all competitors) seated in the bathtub, blending mutterings with ablutions. Mrs. Brine throughout remained as cool as she said the house was. Suddaply agree, a crash! Followed screams accompanied by a rend-

Mrs. Brine throughout remained as cool as she said the house was. Suddenly came a crash! Followed screams, accompanied by a rend-ing, bumping noise, and the splashing of water. Mrs. Brine dashed to the rescue. Entering the bathroom, she saw, where the bathtub had been, a gaping hole in the floor. From this cavern protruded a hand, grasping or attempting to grasp, a cake of green soap. The floor had given way and Gene, bathtub, soap, and water had been precipitated to the ground. The Second Section has a mystery. Major Kraft, who delves into the intricacies of Training Management, has one of those re-volving screw-chairs. Each night he Unwinding Mystery justed to his personality.

Each morning he arrives to find the chair has been revolved so that it is mounted in the lowest position, as the Third Section Machine Gunners might describe it. Members of the Section and the janitor have proclaimed their inno-cence. Traps have been laid. All to no avail.

Finally Major Kraft appealed to the Blunderbuss to give publicity to this mystery so that all Benning might know that he wants his chair left alone and so that all concerned may be on the qui vive to apprehend any miscreant tampering therewith. We comply, and likewise voice our refusal to adhere to a theory advanced by some members of the Second Section (doubtless annoyed by false accusations) to the effect that Training Management is such a dizzy subject that it even gets chairs all wound up.

Recruiting Note We were informed originally that Lt. Killpack of the 29th took his box-ers to Warm Springs for the purpose of giving a boxing exhibition. Later reports however are to the effect that Lt. Killpack went there on recruiting duty-for the Army Nurse Corps.

Who's Who at Fort Benning

The following prominent citizens, now members of the garrison at Fort Benning, are listed in the recenuy published volume, "Who's Who in overnment":

Brigadier General Campbell King, Lt. Colonel Elvid Hunt, merely the Dramatic Club trying their talents out "on the dog" before giving them their parts. If so, we can assure the Dramatic Club that "the dog" ate it up.

Lt. Colonel Thomas J. Leary, Lt. Colonel Morrison Clay Stayer, Major Norman Randolph.

The Blunderbuss concede that this is a fairly representative group and readily concedes to each one mention-ed an undisputed place in any "Who's Who." We could wish, however, that the list of Fort Benning celebrities might have been somewhat more inclusive. Without such celebrated names as Comrade St. John, Professor McCunniff, Sir Roger Williams, Sheriff Tuttle and Mulhall, the volume can hardly be said to be complete.

Near Scandal in the Suburbs

Late one evening, not so long ago, the Chief of the Great First Section invaded the castle of Major Sam White, his next door neighbor, without knocking, ringing, or otherwise herald-

Ing his entry. Interviewed by the Blunderbuss, Colonel Stilwell submitted the following oral explanation: "The offense was unintentional; in a moment of mental abstraction induced by long hours in close communion with the God of War, wandered into Major White's domi-cile under the impression that I was going home. The wind was blowing and I did the best I could." As Colonel Stilwell is an officer of high moral characterial fiber, we accept without question an explanation which, coming from another, might be regarded as an insult to our intelligence.

Mrs. William M. Hoge, famous Benning Horsewoman, appeared at the Refresher Class Tea Dance Cave wearing a nifty surgical dressing over her left eye. Mrs. Hoge's explanation Man was that her spirited hunter threw his head in such a manner as to bring his poll (we believe this to be the correct technical term) in violent contact with forehead.

Be that as it may, ever since Mrs. Hoge acquired the damaged optic, Major Hoge has been agreeably surprised at the signs of marked deference shown him by Jeanne, the capable Hoge cook. He gets waffles and honey for breakfast three times a week and nothing is too good for him. It is evident that William is enjoying what is probably an undeserved reputation as a woman tamer.

Majors Lange and Smith had just completed their famous vaudeville act, 'Preparation of Illustrations," for the benefit of the refresher class. "Fine," was the comment of one Refresher. "Just like Amos and Andy."

We are frankly enthusiastic over the Infantry School Dramatic Club presentation of "Is Zat So," so if you expect severe panning of your actor and actress friends and acquaintances there is no use to read further. We despise these Dramatic Club review assignments and someday we intend to dip our poison pen into the vitriol of venomous criticism and forever disqualify ourself as a reviewer of amateur dramatic offerings, but we can't be so low as to bite the hand that fed us entertainment of the quality of that supplied by the cast of "Is Zat So."

As one of the proponents of "Is Zat So" for the December vehicle of the Dramatic Club, it goes without saying that we liked the play. Granted that James Gleason and Richard Tabor aren't Shakespeare or Shaw or even Schnitzler, we concede to their great box office success the merit of being real entertainment. It may be being real entertainment. It may be hopelessly low brow, as some contend, but personally we like that sort of thing, if it be well done, and in this we had plenty of company on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights. The antics of Hap Hurley and Chick Cow-an as interpreted by Harry Lewis and Tom Wells struck us as being exceed-Tom Wells struck us as being exceed-ingly funny. We attended all three performances and got as much of a kick out of the Lewis and Wells team on the last night as we did on the first

We have seen Harry Lewis in three We have seen Harry Lewis in three-big parts, in all of which he excelled, but as "HAP" Hurley he made the biggest hit of his long amateur dra-matic career. As the tough, slangy, rough-neck manager of a dumb prize-fighter he quite surpassed himself. Never for a moment was he out of character. His every gesture, facial expression, and intonation fitted the part and the occasion. For three hours he lived before his audience as "HAP" Hurley and he made the pic-ture so vivid that we deem it important to inform those who do not know him intimately that he is not at all like that in real life.

Ince that in real life. Unquestionably one of the finest pieces of character-acting ever seen upon the Fort Benning, or any other amateur stage" was the verdict of one not always gentle critic of our per-formances, and in this we heartily concur concur.

Last year, about this time, Major Lewis made his debut before the Ben-ning audience in the role of "Bron-son Lenox" in "The Best People." Those who saw both his fine portray-al of the dignified aristocratic New York willionciae and the autistanding York millionaire and the outstanding performance of the past week-end need no further evidence to convince them that the professional stage lost a great actor when "Monk" Lewis de-cided to follow the military traditions of his family.

Beautiful But Dumb Look

Tom Wells as "Chick" Cowan was a fine foil for "HAP" Hurley. The beautiful but dumb look that Lieubeautiful but dumb look that tenant Wells wore throughout the play is best described by that essentially feminine adjective "priceless." This blundering awkwardness of the pro-fessional gladiator out of his element had just the right amount of restraint in it to make it comedy rather than broad burlesque. In our humble opinion his love making scene was his best, but at all times he played up to the requirements of a difficult part in a manner that adds new laurels to the reputation he acquired last year as Mr. Twiller in "Torchbearers."

James R. Pierce made his bow to the Fort Benning theatre-going pub-lic as C. Clinton Blackburn, the like able but dissipated youth whom asso-ciation with a couple of leather punch-ers reformed. This was Pierce's first appearance on any stage and he got away with it beautifully. His work, while it did not have the same even quality of that of the veterans, Lewis and Wells, was of high order and establishes him as a rising young inter-preter of he-man roles. The always difficult intoxication scene was espec-ially well done.

Huh?

The natural assumption would be that Lieutenant Pierce was experienced in such matters but he happens to be one of the few teetotaers of our acquaintance. It might be remarked, in passing, that Pierce's intimate friends resent his modest statement that whatever merit this particular scene had is due entirely to their example.

Kathryn Gaillard as Susan Parker handled the female lead most credit-ably. She has fine presence, good looks, and an exceptionally pleasing looks, and an exceptionally pleasing voice. Her enunciation, which is re-markably clear and distinct, impressed us as being too studied, but it re-sulted in every line being easily under-stood — even in the alleged dead spaces. Her interpretation of certain spaces. Her interpretation of certain of Susan Parker's more impulsive moments was too reserved for our quasi-Latin temperament, but this was more than compensated for in other scenes, particularly towards the last of the play, when Mrs. Gaillard warmed up to her work and shook herself free of what might be termed an ex-cess of Fifth Avenue formality. Everett Busch, another veteran trouper, gave one of the best per-formances of a stage Englishman that we have ever seen. We have, in times gone by, associated with limeys and have observed their characteristics unhave observed their characteristics un-der various conditions. Captain Busch's handling of the part of Major Fitz-Stanley in no way offended our idea of how a real Englishman talks, thinks, and acts. In a part which might have been easily spoiled by overdoing it, Captain Busch scored in a most effective manner.

Cleveland Good Stage Villain

Orestes Cleveland might well be referred to as a professional amateur production villain. His Steve Cran-dall of last year's "Broadway" made him the logical selection for the part of "Robert Par-KER" and we hearti-ly approve the choice of the casting committee. Lieutenant Cleveland makes such a thoroughly despicable stage villain that for several days after one of his appearances we are half afraid to be seen in his company. In Burtram Pierce, who took the part of Marie Mestretti the Infantry School Dramatic Club has uncovered School Dramatic Club has uncovered a young actress who can do something more than play her own part well. Her performance indicates that she possesses to an unusual degree the quality of inspiring a male thespian in his later youth with the ability to put over love scenes with all the impassioned enthusiasm of callow adolescence. Our idea of the ultimate in the way of an agreeable part in an amateur production would be to play Romeo to Mrs. Pierce's Juliet.

Adele Hall as Florence, the maid, ave a fine demonstration of what a talented actress can do with a secondary role. Her portrayal was one of the outstanding hits of character-act-ing which made "Is Zat So" the finished performance that it was. Florence had quite a lot to do and say and Mrs. Hall did it and said it extremely well.

Frances Tindall, as Grace Hobart afforded another example of a minor role well taken. Perfectly self-possessed at all times, Mrs. Tindall gave (Continued on page 9.)

By R. G. T. The style of listing by name on the program the lady members of the cast uch as Mrs. John K. Smith instead of Lolita Smith), made a hit with the audience and a blank with the cast.

J. J. Wilson's fight ads, this marks the first time we have ever discov-ered anything interesting in a theater program.

Capt. F. H. Wilson, who, in addi-tion to following the lowest of known professions (that of press agent), by force of circumstances beyond his con-trol, found himself acting as an actor, though it would be only in accord-ance with the Principle of Security to avail himself of a claque.

avail himself of a claque. True, he expected that the principal hostile fire would be concentrated against the shock troops of "Is Zat So?" but the Captain knew the im-portance of maintaining high morale, and felt that he could act with more dash and vigor if he could feel assured that at least someone somewhere in the audience maintained a sympathetic audience maintained a sympathetic attitude.

Consequently, acting in his capacity as press agent, Wilson obtained sev-eral tickets, which he distributed to eral tickets, which he distributed to the popular and efficient stenograph-ers of the Fourth Section, with the expectation that they would greet his appearance as an actor on the stage with suitable applause. After the shows, Mrs. Hill, one of those thus bribed, was giving Captain Wilson her impression

Confidential Curtain Call

In accordance with tradition, as well as the experience of their first two nights' run, the cast of "Is Zat So?" at the end of the benefit performance Sunday night filed out on the stage for a curtain call.

Up went the curtain and down went the faces of the smiling actors and actorines.

From the loud and hearty laughs which had greeted their quips and sallies during the play they expected to smile into the upturned faces of an enthusiastic multitude. Their gaze fell on tier upon tier of abandoned seats. The show was over and all the soldiers were headed for their little beas. Scarcely a one knew that there was a curtain call. The call part being sub-tracted, there remained nothing but the curtain.

Sock in the Nose Becomes Shock in the Pants

Capt. J. J. Wilson (Duffy) in administering his surprise Kayo to Chick in Act II of "Is Zat So?" swung with such vigor that after his blow had cleverly grazed the chin of the victim, Capt. Wilson spun around, fell over a chair and the water bucket with a resounding clang, and sat down upon (Continued on page 9.)

a performance which was marked by ease of manner and a sense of dramatic values which are indicative of more talent than she had an op--portunity to disclose.

Lots of Wilsons

The cast contained a plethora of Wilsons but not too many in view of their respective performances. Francis H., in spite of his contention that he is merely a member of the dra-matics-afflicted Fourth Section and not an actor, gave an excellent ac-count of himself as Fred Hobard, the woozy, alcohol-steeped drawing-room fight promoter. "J. J.", the Old Master himself, looked and acted the part of the fighting chauffeur from the gas-house district to a degree which left nothing to be desired. His intimate knowledge of the fighting game gave him the background for putting over the most realistic streaming for the fight her the most realistic stage prize fight that we have ever seen. After several weeks of rehearsals and three smash-ing performances we commend him to the attention of the Post Surgeon.

With all due respect to the elder Wilsons, however, it is to young noward, son of Francis H., that we award the palm. Child actors don't appeal to us as a general rule. Even in our early youth, which harks back to the good old days when Marks the Lawyer came down in the audience to sell pictures of Little Eva after her ascent to heaven, we were able to resist the temptations to buy and many of our recollections of child actors are ac-conclusion that we think rather well of the way "Is Zat So" was put on. In every department it showed evi-dence of competent and careful direc-tion with all of that most painstaking attention to detail which eness to make attention to detail which goes to make a finished producion. The smoothness of the performance and the effective handling of the climaxe's bespoke truly professional skill in the drilling of the cast and the handling of the situa-tions. All of those telltale little crudi-tion which since density of the situato the word "amateur" seemed to nave been eliminated. The faults which a carping critic might point out were those which can be found in any but the most perfect of professional pro-duction and which reflect rather the personal taste of the critic than the true merit of the performance.

Critic Waxes Real Enthusiastic

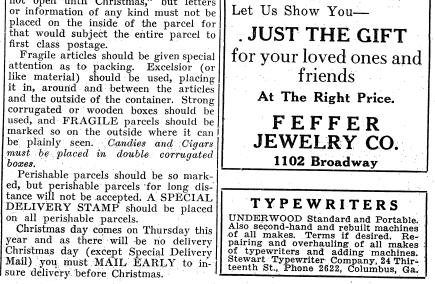

Three years ago in San Francisco we saw "Is Zat So" presented by a number one road company. It was well done and we didn't begrudge the $9.90 that we paid for three seats but, even after making a proper allowance for civic pride we can truthfully car for civic pride, we can truthfully say that we think that the Lewis and Saulnier presentation was the better of the two. We don't say that in all respects the latter was superior, but a comparison of the best and worst features of the two performances war-rants the heretical opinion herein expressed.

In concluding this review we must In concluding this review we must add a word of praise for the sets de-signed by Captain H. N. Merrill, the stage manager, the excellent makeup which the program tells us is to be at-tributed to Captain Saulnier and Mes-dames Wood, Freehoff and Watkins and the effectiveness of the stage properties which Mrs. E. G. Sher-burne and Captain E. L. Brine assem-bled for the production. We also bled for the production. We also have it on the good authority of the directors that Lieutenants C. S. N. Ballou and A. A. Horner are the most conscientious prompters that ever helped whip a cast into literal per-touchdown. The kick for point was wide. On the kickoff, Derrick, Gunner quarterback, took the ball on his two-yard line, eluded the entire Tanker team with a beautiful exhibition of broken field running, and with a clear field, galloped 80 yards, only to be hauled down from behind by Costello, fleet footed Tanker. The Gunners' last hope went fleeting when the referee's gun ended the battle after the first play.

DePratt and Ptomey renew their feud for the fifty-fourth time.

FIRST BATTALION WINS, 21 TO 6, OVER SPECIAL UNITS OF 29TH

The Fighting Irishmen from the First Battalion of the 29th Infantry, fought their way to a 21 to 6, victory over the Black Pirates of the Special Units, 29th Infantry, at the Doughboy Stadium, Tuesday afternoon. The game was well played and hard fought from beginning to end with the Tuesday atternoon. The game was well played and hard fought from beginning to end, with the Irishmen showing the stronger team all the way. The Irishmen scored in one first quarter when Pendergrast twisted away from a pair of Pirate tackles and galloped 16 yards to a touchdown. Har-per kicked goal for the extra point. Pendergrast got away again near the end of the period and galloped 30 yards for another touchdown, but the Irish for another touchdown, but the Irish were penalized and the score did not count.

In the second period, Blackstone, Irish fullback, went off tackle on his 40-yard strip, cut back, reversed his field and went 60 yards to a touchdown. Blackstone kicked goal for the extra point. Score 14 to 6. Again in the third per-iod, Blackstone battered his way across the opposing line from the five-yard second quarter. Dutch Berrish broke through and smothered an Irish punt on their 20-yard line. McNeil took a short pass and was downed on the 17-yard strip. Barlow gained 7 yards and a first down around right end. Mitzen shot a bullet pass to Berrish, who twisted his way across the last white strip Strip. The final gun found the Irish driving down the field in a steady march that wooked like another touchdown. The only resistance the Pirates had left was their determined fighting spirit. Tuesday's game ended football at Benning, until the feature gridiron classic of the year, the championship battle between the "Terrible Tankers" and the Second Battalion "Kellys," that will be played at the Doughboy Stadium, December 20th.

POST EXCHANGE FILLING STATION Fort Benning, Georgia

2nd Bn. Hdqrs. Co.

The "Second Bat" football squad is undergoing a strenuous period of practice preparatory to taking the Terrible Tankers on for the Post Football Championship on December 20. This will be one of the best games played in this vicinity in some time due to the fighting spirit of both teams. The teams are equally balanced with the exception of the Tankers holding the edge on re-serves. But the line-battering Tinsley hitting the line and Thompson and Saunders skirting the ends, not to mention the wild runs over and through the whole line of the Tankers by the one and only "Kelly"; it is hoped and believed that the Second Bats will take the Tankers for a ride.

Did you see the writeup in the ke-cruiting News about Kelly? It is an honor that few can boast of to be picked honor that few can boast of to be picked as the outstanding athlete in the entire Army. Such honor was bestowed on Sergeant William C. Kjelstrom, or "Kelly" as he is known throughout the service. Congratulations, Kell. Gee, oh my, I'd sure dislike to be a quail or rabbit or snipe or what have you (2) on this man's recorvation!. The

It seems that the way one captures a hog or pig is to tackle him and hold him (or her or it, as the case, may be) until the rest of the hunt-ers overpower him and thus you have the captured hog, or pig, as the case may be. Sounds nice but the company has decided that the lieutenant must demonstrate this method before they can fully comprehend the fundamentals of this sort of sport. Well, we won the small bore rifle

Benning basketball fans will see a high speed, smooth running basketball machine in action when the Musketeers open up in their first game of the seaopen up in their first game of the sea-son against the Langdale A. C at the garrison gymnasium, next Monday night. Many fans are curious to know what the Musketeers have got this year. They have a team that will uphold the past performances of the Infantry School basketeers, of that there is no doubt. Mal Kammerer will be back at his old position at guard and he going good old position at guard and he going good this season. He will have either Wilson or Haynie as a running mate. Johnnie Roosma is back at forward and the Musketeer sharpshooter still has the steady hand and eagle eye. In fact it looks as if Johnnie is going to be bet-ter than ever this season. Draper and Saffarans will probably alternate oppo-site Rocsma. Draper was a member of the team last season and showed well. Saffarans is fast and knows the game. Company "G"

"G" easily defeated Com-in basketball Tuesday after-Company any "F" i pany noon and it happened to be our first game of the year.

The score was 28 to 12. The first half ended 14 to 6 and the second half also ended 14 to 6, total being 28 to 12. Corporal Latham was high scorer for "G" Company, making 5 goals. He was closely followed by Red "Rusty" Wilson.

Company "H"

Pfc. Evans liked "Is Zat So" so well he wants to see it again.

Cpls. Barnett and Tayler have re-turned from furlough, and stated they enjoyed running around in the mud of Louisiana.

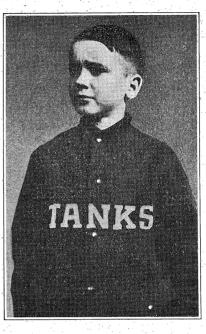

Watch out for bells that may ring around the Company. Cpl. Coleman is back again from Furlough.

The Company is pulling for the "Gunner" to repeat his one punch K. O. over gether in the Philippine Islands. Friends of Sgt. Karpinski, formerly think he can do it.

Billy Howland Given Sweater by Tankers

Major Kingman Makes Presentation to Son of Headquarters Co. Captain

Outstanding among the fighting men of the Terrible Tankers of the Second Battalion, First Tank Regiment (Light) is Master Billy Howland, son of Cap-tain William Howland, of Headquarters Company, 2nd Tank Battalion.

True enough, Billy has not distin-guished himself in a rain of steel on the battle front or wiped out any enemy machine gun nests under the caterpillar tread of a rolling tank, but no doubt these honors await him in the days to come for Billy is a fighter from the tips of his toes to the top of towseled head. During the past summer when the Tanker baseball team was in the thick Tanker baseball team was in the thick of the pennant fight, it was Billy that was one of the biggest factors in hold-ing up the old fighting spirit in the darkest moments. His confidence and fighting spirit sent Tanker batters to the platter with a determination to hit when a bit meant a run in fact his utter when a hit meant a run, in fact his utter faith and confidence in the Tankers, caused them to fight all the harder to keep that faith unbroken. When the Tankers galloped home in front in the first half of the Intra-Mural baseball season, he was happy but not surprised. His confidence in the Tankers had never been shaken.

An idea of his loyalty was fully dem-onstrated when he turned down a visit to Columbus to a circus during the past September, to be with the team in one or the deciding games of the season. Prob-ably most of us remember what a cirably most of us remember what a cir-cus means to a boy of ten years of age. Baseball is not his only interest. No matter what it is, football, baseball, bas-ketball or military competition, if the Tankers are entered, Billy will be found somewhere among the tri-colors of the Tankers with his never-die fighting ensist spirit.

A short time ago, members of the Second Tank Battalion presented Billy with a beautiful blue sweater, with the word "Tanks' in yellow letters across the front. No doubt Billy was was one of the happiest boys in the land as he marched up to receive the sweater from Major Allen Kingman, commanding officer of the Second Tank Battalion.

In a short address, Major Kingman commended Billy for his true sports-manship and fine fighting spirit and asked him to accept the sweater as an emblem of the friendship and admiration of the members of the Second Battalion, First Tank Regiment.

Whistler and His Dog Almost Cause Small Riot

Being regularly detailed as Officer of, the Day in accordance with orders pub-lished from these Headquarters, and as such receiving a lawful order from the battalion commander to inspect sometime during the night all squad rooms, said Whistler dutifully proceeded with his task. Hardly had Whistler stepped in-to "F" Company's main squad room when a racket was heard that savored of a riot. One practically ensued. With much effort and sterness on the part of Whistler and others peace finally reigned. An investigation followed and it was determined that the "poor little cute dog" had been stepped on. The dog was released on his own recognizance.

Lieut. Joe Gutkowski returned from a ten days leave of absence last Tues-day night. He is now ready to take up his arduous but pleasant duties as edi-tor of the Fun-Fun section of the Bat-talion Weekly News. Much is expected "Joe" was the unanimous choice of the editorial staff of the paper. May our wise cracks be funnier and funnier.

To date the Galloping Cannoneers still leave their imprint on the Tankers who engaged them in football last Sat-urday. If we should be so fortunate as to win the Post Championship it will not be because of them, but in spite of them them

We take great pleasure in announcing the following recent promotions to the grade of Corporal: John H. Vann, Co. "D"; Earl L. Coates, Co. "E"; Elmer C. Boutwell and Vernor R. Tew of Co. "F." These boys are well known throughout the battalion and well deserve their promotion.

We are very glad to see Louie Joris back with us again after a week's lay up in the hospital. Louie said: "It almost keel me out of my soul because I wasn't able to play feetsball with the team when they played the Gunners. I vell be in the next game if my arm is broke plumb off at my hellbow." We are going to count on that, Louie. It's a joyful time in Companies "D" and "E." Both of their First Sergeants were discharged during the past week. After due consideration they both took on another stack which was good news to the battalion. Sergeant Hunt went a short furlough to Boaz, Alabama. on a short furlough to Boaz, Alabama. During his absence Sergeant Dennis is doing the role of Top Kick. Sergeant Faulk of "D" says he isn't ready to take his furlough yet. Congratulations are his furlough yet. Congratulations are in order for both of these men and we are sure that the men of both companies will enjoy another three years under them.

We were very lucky to have the fastest man in the post on our football team. "Pooch," you may run a mile per min-ute, but don't try to run off and leave Spike" McKelvey. We see "Wild Bill" Lomansey breezing around these days with the same old carefree quotation, "Is everybody hap-py?" To look at "Smiling Bill" you would seem to think he is.

SGT. McCORKLE GUARDS RANGE No. 5: POST EXCHANGE HAS FARM THERE

Editor's Note: Fort Benning Mili-tary Reservation, with its 97,000 acres of varied terrain, is so large that many Benning people have not had the opportunity to learn of its many interesting features. By tak-ing each hunting area in turn each week, the News plans to acquaint its readers with the wonders of the reservation.

The spreading acres of Range No. 5 are under the care and supervision of Sergeant George O. McCorkle, of the Second Battalion, 1st Tank Regiment. Besides an abundance of swamp lands, this range is farmed extensively by colored farmers who go on raising cotton and corn, as in former days, prior to military control.

On this range also, the Post Exchange has a large farm under cultivation, and most of the pecans sold at the Post Ex-change are gathered from the large or-chard on this range. This orchard was planted by a former owner many years prior to the purchase of the reserva-tion. The Post Exchange has continued to purple and cultivate this large or to prune and cultivate this large orchard until now the annual yield of paper hull pecans probably amounts to many hundreds of pounds. The orchard covers an area of approximately one hundred and fifty acres of land.

The quarters occupied by Sergeant and Mrs. McCorkle, was formerly the home

SINGING BY 24TH INFANTRY

The 24th Infantry is singing regularly two and three times each week. Be-sides the negro spirituals, the men are getting adept at singing the latest popu-lar music, and also such old favorites as "Old Black Joe" and "Carry Me Back To Old Virginny."

The Logging Camp has become interested in forming a glee club. As a re-sult, it has been decided to take part of the regimental glee club out to the Logging Camp periodically. Dr. M. L. Taylor, colored physician and choir leader, gives valuable assistance in the perfecting of the spiritual singing.

The 24th Infantry Community Chest Dance will be held at the Muscogee Club in Columbus tonight, instead of at the Polo Club as originally announced.

24TH ELKS' CLUB DANCE

The 24th Infantry Elks' Club Dance on the 8th was a great success. It was given as a benefit for the Christmas Tree Fund.

of Mr. Chas A. Rudolph, who came here from North Carolina, in 1910, and built a turpentine still at the little station of Hurley, on the Seaboard Airline rairoad. The signs of the turpentine boxes are still visible on the pine trees out in that section of the reservation. Remains of the old still are still to be found but the vats and boilers have rusted and fallen to pieces.

The large fields of corn and peas have caused an abundance of wild game, especially turkey, quail, and doves to be found in this area. At the present time, most of the area is restricted to hunters except the swamp lands between the Central and Seaboard railroads and from the Seaboard back to the fork of the Ochillee and Upatoi creeks. Squir-rels and rabbits are plentiful throughout this area.

BENNING CONSTRUCTION TOTALING $178,000 TO BEGIN IN FEW WEEKS

Projects Include Much Paving And Walks in 29th and Tank Areas

Construction projects at Fort Benning totaling approved by $178,000 have re-cently been approved by the Quarter-master General, and will be begun within a few weeks, it was announced by Captain Wallace M. Allison, the Con-structing Quartermaster yesterday.

Approximately $170,000 is now available, and it is hoped that savings can be effected sufficiently to cover the difthe funds available. These projects will be completed as far as funds allow. It is estimated by the Constructing Quar-termaster that the greater portion will be possible with the balances now on hand.

The Constructing Quartermaster will start certain utility extension work in the new building areas of Fort Benning at once. This will be done by the purchase and hire method.

As soon as specifications can be pre-pared and bids secured, work will start on the paving of certain streets in the vicinity of the 29th Infantry and Tank Barracks.

Streets To Be Paved

The streets designated for paving are Wold Avenue, Edwards and Gillespie Streets. Wold Avenue will be paved from New Dilboy Street to Gillespie. It will be 32 feet wide. Both Edwards and Gillespie will be paved from Weld Ave Gillespie will be paved from Wold Ave-nue to Upton Avenue. They will be 26 feet wide.

All external and internal sidewalks will be completed in the 29th Infantry Area.. In the center of the Quadrangle, will be erected a handsome bandstand, similar to the one at the Station Hos-pital. In front of the Tanks Barracks, a main walk will be laid the entire length of the block on Wold Avenue.

The project also includes paving of all roads and all front walks in the new NCO area in Block 12. The main stem road will be 32 feet wide. The main stem double road will be 26 feet wide, while all branch roads will be 18 feet wide.

Included also will be a road and new walks for the four new sets of field officers quarters.

Walks For New Quarters

Blocks 14 and 16 will receive walks for all new quarters erected therein.

The new project includes sanitation and storm sewers in the new NCO area in Block 12 and also in Bradley area. Electric service extensions will be put in the new quarters in Block 12, 16 and Bradley area. Water extensions and connections will be put into the new quarters in Block 12 and Bradley area. The office of the constructing quar-termaster has already begun the drawing up of the specifications on all the above-mentioned work. Much prelimi-nary work has already been done.

By Bernard B. Swayze

Saturday brings to a close one of the most colorful football seasons Fort Ben-ning has ever witnessed, in that all the games have been warmly contested morrow the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry (Kells) meet the Second Battalion, First Tank Regiment (Tankers), to decide who is the King of the Grid. As always, the game will be the best of the year, with neither team being able to claim supremacy until the final whistle blows. These two teams are both strong and fleet, aggressive and form a formidable wall of defense.

The Kells have a powerful backfield, combined with fleetness. In the mighty Kell himself, they have the combination of what goes to make up a complete backfield. His powers of thought alone will aid many times to stem the tide of the Tankers' onrushes and will again put his team in the winning light. He is the one asset that will make substitute backs, if the necessity arises, work as His passing and line plunging will bring the stands to their feet time and again. A practically new man to the Kell backfield this year is Saunders. He has not made much showing in that position until the game with the Special Units. It was then that he proved that he was a threat off-tackle and around ends, and in addition a water-tight defense man. Tinsley at left half, will plunge through that line for some good gains, and when that boy gets in the open he is hard to catch. Tommie Thompson, known for his long runs, will be in there most of the game for the Kells, and we are looking for him to turn in some of his best against his arch-enemies, the Terrible Tankers.

Hole-in-One For Hagen Has Three Witnesses Rivals Tuttle, Newgord

Captain Hagen added much to the fame of the Advanced Class over the week end when he negotiated No. 15 hole on the Benning course in the cov-eted single stroke. The methods by which he attained this perfect solution of the situation confronting him are in dispute. According to Hagen's own story, the shot that went down was a beautifully Jensen and Lussier, however, who were his more or less credible witnesses, unite in affirming that he never has been able to carry the necessary 145 yards with his five iron, and that, instead, he putted from the tee, hit the railroad track, then a tree, bounced back onto the green and rolled in. Whatever the method employed, he is now busily engaged in trying to cash in on the feat.

Tank Line Has Edge As for the line, the Tankers have a slight edge on the Kells, and that slight edge may mean the margin of victory. A backfield is a backfield, but a line is the whole game.

Marque of the Kells is a good steady end, having none of the attributes that go to make up a star, but is always there with his full six feet, making it hard for the opposition to come his way. He has improved wonderfully his this year.

SURPRISED 29TH MOVES TO HARMONY CHURCH IN A HURRY FOR A BIVOUAC

Col. Major Suddenly Orders Out Regiment For a Day's Field Service

At 8 a.m. Thursday all was peaceful in the 29th Infantry.

At 8:01 a.m. things were far from oeaceful.

Col. Major suddenly ordered the regi-ment out for a day's field service. It came as a big surprise to the regiment.

A few hours intensive scurrying fol-lowed but at 11:45 a. m. the 2d Battalion, followed closely by the 1st, moved out for Harmony Church.

One day's rations and blank cart-ridges were taken. It was planned to have a tactical problem en route and bivouac at Harmony Church.

It is said the movement was a sur-prise even to Post Headquarters. It certainly was to the 29th.

MUSKETEERS BEAT LANGDALE, 65-25

Benning Basketball Team Wins First Game—Roosma

Stars as Uusal

Langdale Athletic club fell before the Fort Benning Musketeer quintet Tues-day night in the Benning gymnasium, the score being 65 to 25. It was Benning's first game of the season.

Johnny Roosma is still with the sol-dier basketeers and this means that Benning is going to give anyone they play a good fight, yet this year's Musketeer a good hight, yet this year's Musketeer aggregation isn't as flashy as past bas-ketball teams representing the fort. Per-haps all the new players on this year's Benning team are like Draper, forward running mate of Roosma, in that they become more impressive as you watch them play.

Draper was in there all during the first half but it was not until well in the second half of the game that one could really appreciate his fine playing. He ended up the night's work by ac-counting for 20 of the Benning pointsseven field goals and six foul.

Johnny Roosma, of course, was high man. The veteran star annexed 11 field man. The veteran star annexed 11 field goals and one foul for a total of 23 points. Mal Kammerer, playing at guard, shot 13 points for Benning. I. S. D. NOC's ELECT OFFICERS

The Noncommissioned officers club of the Infantry School Detachment held their regular monthly meeting Friday, December 12, election of officers being held. The following named noncommis-sioned officers were elected:

December 19, 1930

We awoke early last Sunday morning to find the sky clear and full of bright stars and the grass covered witn a light frost. It was a perfect early morning. We just knew it would be a good hunt and were so impatient to get started that between excitement and cold we could hardly pull on our boots.

Assembling at the water tanks on Ebbert Hill for a cup of coffee beneath a basket of blazing lightwood, some 67 enthusiasts soon mounted and moved south along the Ohio Trail. By the time day broke the field were well down on the Keystone Road toward Harp's Pond, where the hounds were cast.

Almost immediately the scent or a Atmost immediately the scent of a grey fox was found and the chase was on, the hounds following up Harp's Creek for about half a mile and then crossing over to Mill Creek. Just south-west of the new fish pond the fox was overtaken and killed. To the disap-pointment of everyone the swamp here was too thick for the field to get in at the kill. While scouting for some way the kill. While scouting for some way in, the hunt staff turned up a big old boar. Not having a pig hound along the staff attempted to herd the boar back to where the field could have some sport catching it.

Mrs. Hoge Has Narrow Escape

Everything was going along nicely when suddenly Mr. Boar gave a grunt and charged.

Mrs. Hoge's horse gave a frightened squeal and jumped five feet straight into the air. Not to be outdone by her horse, Mrs. Hoge let out a louder squeal and jumped into the air. Luck was alsowith her, however, as she and her horse came down to earth together with Mrs. Hoge on top. Taking advantage of the confusion and laughter, Mr. Boar gave for an old wild cat known to range in the vicinity of the new fish pond. Sgt. Swegger was overjoyed at this decision as he had unsuccessfully hunted this particular cat for a year. Time after time the hounds had trailed him for an hour or so but only to lose him in some "found" and started in pursuit. The cat tried all of his tricks and soon was driven across the Cussetta Road near the Logging Camp. From here the hounds carried him along the creeks toward Sul-phur Springs. Reaching the railroad the cat doubled back into the swamps and attempted to circle for a while But attempted to circle for a while. But when the hounds pressed him close he suddenly turned east and crossed the railroad to Ochillee Creek.

The Main Theatre at The Infantry School, Fort Benning, has now the most School, Fort Benning, has now the most brilliantly lighted screen that can be obtained. This was made possible by the the approval of the Army Motion Pic-ture Service of the installation of a new system of arc lighting. This system produces the best brilliance possible As produces the best brilliance possible. As a comparison, the old incandescent lamps consume about 900 watts, while the new arcs consume 5950 watts. The civilian citizen classes the army with the leisure group and hote army and nave civilian citizen classes the army with the leisure group and botn army and navy family life has been attacked lately in current literature. In order to obtain first-hand information on the topic, I corralled Colonel Reed and Major Mc-Cants at the club here one day and fed them the dope. Those two know more about "Behaviorism" than Will Durant, even if they don't write books. After a short talk with them I realized that ethically and morally army people were ethically and morally army people were top notchers. Just think, there have been hundreds of officers and families stationed at this post during the past three years and out of that group there have only been two divorces (neither one scandalous), and ten officer trials, — eight of these for minor offenses, for getting drunk and such, for which in civil life the judge usually says: "Five dollars, --next time save a few swallows for me." And for the double-harness group during all these three years, only two women werc put back in circulation and the splitting up blast in neither case was caused by scandal powder. In addition we live a life all jammed up, one on the other, some under good conditions and some under bad but we do stay honorable and decent. If a man does take a drink, ninety-nine times out of a hundred he keeps both his feet and head and remembers that he is an officer and a gentleman, even if it is by act of Congress. PARENT-TEACHERS MEET

The Parent-Teachers Asociation of Fort Benning met on December 4th at 2:15 p. m. at the Post Chapel.

The president, Mrs. Bradley, told of the many things needed for the new school which is under construction and appointed a committee to take care of these needs.

Mrs. E. D. Patrick has offered to put on vaudeville shows with the children the different grades and charge a small amount for admission and the proceeds to go to the Children's School Fund.

Miss Judith Wragg of Columbus, Ga., gave a very interesting talk on edu-cational art and is desirious of organizing art classes for the children in the school. It was voted that a course in art be put in the school.

Miss Grimes, who attended summer school at Asheville, N. C., gave an in-teresting talk on the splendid work be-ing done there and the valuable train-

THE BRIEF CASE By CAPT. WAINE ARCHER

The two Marshalls—"M. C." and "C. pending upon the point of view—the W. S."—furnished the class with an in-pame of his quesionee, had the class spiring example of courtesy the other day. Major Tucker called on "Captain Marshall," and with great self-denial each one resisted his desire to answer the call until Major Tucker concluded Which reminds us Backman unineach one resisted his desire to answer the call until Major Tucker concluded there was no one of the name, and poor Rich had to suffer. Those who can remember as far back as the days of Alphonse and Gaston smiled reminis-cently—and audibly.

cently—and audibly. x x xSpeaking of Alphonse and Gaston, how many can remember "Foxy Grand-pa?" If you feel you have forgotten the jovial coutrous of his physiognomy and anatomy, you may refresh your memory by taking a look at Dick Lussier Lussier.

x x x Some of our new field officers certainly are becoming inquisitive. We are able to explain Majors Tyler's and Col-lins' thirst for information about radios on the theory that the family one-tube needs help, but we haven't yet doped out why Major Dollarhide was so worried about whether demonstration mes-sages were sent — especially while the Commandant was on hand.

x x x Speaking of the communications demonstration, Patrick and his cohorts cer-tainly turned out the latest novelty in training-to hear some of the class tell it. It was a pigeon that sarted off with a message and then came back to check up on his destination.

 $\mathbf{x} \mathbf{x} \mathbf{x}$ Until recently we have been wasting our sympathy on the wives of prospective monographers, but here toward the fag end of the course we learn who the real sufferer is. Corporal Morgan, guardian of Kriz Hall, has to be bothguardian of Kriz Hall, has to be both-ered by them all. Last week—the day before Lussier, Rodwell, McLendon, et al sounded off—Morgan, so the story goes, finally ventured into the hall at 4 a. m., and plaintively asked that he be permitted to get just an hour or two of sleep before reveille.

It is suggested to the firm of Hard-ing, Lange, Smith & Co., that they have an excellent opportuniy to point the well-known precept that every new wea-pon gives birth to an effective defense. For a few days the new scheme of pass-ing out to the torturee—or torturer, de-

Shaw emerged from a period of—er— (shall we say deep concentration?)— and just then heard someone say, "I thank you"—the formal and accepted method of closing a monograph. Our hero clapped frenziedly several times before he realized it was merely an inbefore he realized it was merely an ineffort of someone to solve a situation. We think that must have happened during an afternoon conference.

x x x If opportunity knocks but once, Hag-erty is just out of luck. Adrian Brian called on him to solve a situation in which the real life solution was that the ххх principal actor killed himself-and Hagerty muffed it cold.

x x xIt is with reluctance that we waste the valuable space of this publication in talking about instructors, but the Yan-nigan or Scrub Dramatic club, put on a nigan or Scrub Dramatic club, put on a little C. P. skit for us last week which simply wrings a few lines from our unwilling typewriter. The high light of the performance unquestionably was the faithful presentation by Major Tucker of the all-too familiar characteristics of our friend, Brigadier General First Brigade. His rare artistry lifted this secondary part into the limelight and completely stole the show from the hero of the play as written—Lieutenant Col-onal Fir availability denicted by Magor onel Ex, excellently depicted by Major Wilson. The supporting cast was most excellent. The fact that Major McCunexcellent. The financial depression about which we have been hearing, is being brought home to Benning's rich clubmen. Of course mere captains and lieutenants may have muttered, and a few husbands snarled unkind remarks about the size of the Post Exchange bill, but the opulent members of the Thanatopsis Club rose superior to such bagatelles, as the mere cost of living. What really concerned the members of the Thanatopsis Club was the amount of the weekly contribution to Brother Emil Leard. The charitable and evangelical donations to Brother Emil each week began to assume a serious aspect, especially as the beneficiary suggested that the amounts be increased in algebraic progression. Many plans were discussed by the clubmen to relieve the pressure. (Our informant distinctly heard the merits of whipsawing vs. mayhem ardently debated.) Whatever secret plan of action finally was decided upon, we know ardently debated.) Whatever secret plan of action finally was decided upon, we know not, but the results speak for themselves. Major Leard has received no contributions to speak of at the last seven meetings of the club; in fact he has been unable to lay up a cent. In fact rumors prevail that Brother Emil has seen the error of his way and has definitely abandoned the role of beneficiary for that of benefactor. This, however, we scarcely deem worthy of credence. Brother Leard's Army Relief contributions, while recently very regular, have hardly been large enough to be called generous. Be that as it may, we have noted Brother Emil's actions on several occasions recently. occasions recently.

BULLS AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

The Army has been accused at times of shooting the bull but it re-mained for the Navy to mortify it. Our authority for the following inci-dent over which the nation is chuckling is the magazine "Time." It seems that Capt. Waldo Evans, retired (U. S. Navy) is the boss of the Virgin Islands. Craving to assist the dairy industry there, he shot this message to the Navy Department: WOULD BE GLAD TO HAVE FOR ST. THERE IS IN PRINCE GEORGE COUNTY MD A BULL WITH A TENOR BELLOW BUT IT DOES NOT GIVE MILK. IN ANNE. ARUNDEL COUNTY A MILCH COW OF VERY COMBATIVE DISPOSITION. WOULD EITHER OF THESE DO? Having achieved this unique feat did the Sheriff slink off home and go into deep mourning in accordance with correct sporting behavior? He did not.

Charging down the field in his best beau sabeur manner, he brought" his steed to a full stop opposite the center of the line of spectators' cars and, after a couple of Buffalo Bill flourishes, announced that his remark-able shot had been made in order to insure at least one goal for the 83d Field Artillery.

Pink or Green Coats?

Imbued with the spirit of becoming day by day in every way, better and better, the Infantry School Hunt is contemplating an addition to its staff. The Blunderbuss learns that the Joint M. F. H. Roger Williams and Jared Wood have submitted a proposal that Col. Stayer be appointed Hunt Surgeon and included on the Hunt Staff.

The duties would be to render professional advice to the master and to render medical assistance to members of the Field.

A study of the matter was made by the Joint M. F. H. and it was dis-covered that such a step has ample precedent inasmuch as many leading Outstanding among the historical points of interest upon the Fort Benning reservation is Torch Hill, situated on Range No. 1, and under the watchful eye of Sgt. W. H. Corn of the Infantry School Detachment.

At the present time, no one seems to know where a copy of this in-formation can be found, but the story is well known to the people that once owned these lands. For several years, members of the Military Police have remembers of the Military Police have re-ported seeing a large object resembling a horse and rider, cross the road in front of their motorcycle, at the exact spot where the road leading off Torch Hill crosses the Fort Benning Road. At first it was considered as a joke by all who heard it but men on duty continwho heard it, but men on duty contin-ued to report seeing the big dark object that sped noiselessly through the night to diappear like a shadow among the trees along the road side. Motorcycle riders on patrol duty along this part of the highway continue to see the Phantom Rider. It is always when traveling to-ward Columbus, that the dark object will suddenly flash across the road in front of the startled rider. Since hearwho heard it, but men on duty continfront of the startled rider. Since hear-ing the story of the British Colonel, the military policemen have decided that the dance committee.

Phantom Rider is none other than the Colonel, making the rounds of his our-post, or looking for his regiment.

Many years ago a poet named Griffin built a home on Torch Hill and lived there for several years. There are sevthere for several years. There are sev-eral of his poems in print today, but it is not known if there is one dedicated this particular place.

When the reservation was purchased the place was owned by a Mr. John T. Davis, and consisted of six hundred acres of land. Mr. Davis died several years ago but several members of his family, including Mrs. Davis, still live in Columbus.

Sgt. Corn, has been on duty on this range for the past five years. He first came to Fort Benning eight years ago. During his first three years he was a member of the Military Police. The sergeant has quite a reputation as a fisherman. His catching of two fish on one hook was one of the biggest fish stories of the past season. Besides his ability as a fisherman and range guard, he is also familiar with the use of the army pistol. pistol. He has been high point man among the Range Guards and Military Police for the past two years.

This range is open to hunting but rab-bits are about the only game to be found. A few covey of quail are scattered about and an occasional squirrel is found but on a whole it is one of the poorest ranges for hunting.

TANK BENEFIT DANCE IS HUGE SUCCESS

The Benefit Dance sponsored by the Second Battalion of the First Tank Regiment at the garrison gymnasium, on the night of December 11, proved to be a success both socially and financially. One of the largest crowds of the season attended the affair and the evening was one of fun and merry making. After all expenses had been deducted, the committee announcd that one hundred and thirty dollars profit had been realized and would go to the Fort Ben-ning Children's School fund.

The entire program went over big. The guests who did not care for the round dance, were able to shake a foot in the old fashioned square dance. Music for the square dances was furnished by Ballard's string band. After each square dance, Sciopo's Syncopated Symphony Six rendered classical selections for those that preferred the round dance. Mrs. Horace Lindsey and Mrs. Bobbie Brown were the hostesses for the occasion. Master Sergeant Guthrie, 1st Sergeant Horace Lindsey, 1st Sergeant

As I told you before, things are get-ting quite mixed up. We are taking so many different subjects now, that when you have a written test in combat pracyou have a written test in combat prac-tice, if you are not very careful you will answer in terms of horseshoeing. Which very neatly brings me to the sub-ject in mind. Horseshoeing. Yes, Ed-die, all the officers have to shoe a horse. Yeah, a real horse. Can you tie that. The funny thing about the course to me is that while Jake Moon has given some very excellent instruction honest some very excellent instruction, honest, Eddie, he hasn't done any more towards shoeing a horse himself, than to pick up a foot now and then and squint at it. It's gotten so that some of the members of the class have sorta lost confidence in "Jake" and don't believe that he CAN shoe a horse. I don't know, myself, but it does look queer. Be that as it may, we, the officers of the Company Officers' Class, are now shoeing horses. Not only shoeing them, but actually making the shoes. It is another matter that I believe the Department of Experimen could do some good work on, that is the de-velopment of horses with standard size feet so that all one had to do was run the horse in the garage and slap a standard shoe on his standard foot and send him on his way. As it is now, first you have to squint at the horse's foot, get a picture of it in your mind, take an issue shoe, heat it, bang it, sock it, pound it and still the d— thing won't fit. Then you take the horse's foot (if he will let you), clean it, scrape it, cut it, file it, polish it and still the blooming shoe won't fit. Then you start all over again at the beginning, and pray that you will get one that you can "fudge" on in some way or another. But I will say one thing, Eddie, when it comes to using the prichule this class is simply the ber-ries. Believe me we handle a mean prichule and don't you doubt it. And the way some of the boys can manicure a horse's foot; why any lady, in the very have to squint at the horse's foot, get a a horse's foot; why any lady, in the very highest society, would be pleased to have them for manicurists, so gentle, so cautious, so careful of the horse's finer sen-sibilities, and SO soft. Boy, it's a treat to behold. I'll write you in a few months and tell you all about my first shoe— when I get it on.

when I get it on. And, Eddie, we are driving tanks. Lots of fun. Pull with the right hand and you go to the right, usually so far that you have to yank back with the left hand and then again with the right hand and so on till the tank gets tired and goes on around the course. Our tanks are 12 wears old (now around the tanks are 12 years old (very ancient for tanks) and they know a lot more about it than they let on, which is a very good thing for student drivers, the I was told thing for student univers, the 1 may con-confidentially that when the advanced class drove that they refused to listen to their tanks and as a consequence stripped seven transmissions. Not a single casualty in our class so far. And just a hint, Eddle, if you have an old car that sounds like a thrashing machine, and you think that you can't run it another day, why just go out and drive-a tank for a while and I'll guarantee that your old bus will sound like a new Singer sewing machine. Why I was just on the point of calling wy car and why I have a sweet running little car that will do me for years to come. Try it some time Eddie, it will save you money.

And now, Eddie, for a little grief. Just remember, if you ever come to school here that when ever a holiday is announced look out for trouble for they will try and give you so many exams before the holiday that it will take you the entire period, that should be devoted to lighter pursuits, to rest up from your arduous labors. With Christmas holidays but a week away and with every one in a receptive mood to quit work, the to keep the entire class up every night burning the midnight oil, preparing in subjects that had better been left to die where they lay. And all this in contra-diction to what we were told at the be-ginning of the year, and all of Col. Stayer's advice about keeping late hours. It's pitiful what things you can study the night before an exam that are not asked and the things that you can skip over that are asked. Oh, well, such is the life of a study the life of a student.

"Twas the night before Christmas And all through the house Not-a. creature was stirring,

Not even a mouse;

For Students were studying. With might and main, And the slightest of noises

Would bring forth H-l's flame.

The deluge started on Monday morning with record fring of the machine gun. A record I'll bet it was. There were even a few experts in the class. "Dry Run" Sebach was the star performer; he managed to corral a total of 354, which to my mind is an outstand-ing performance. Cpl. wave the flag twice: Grenadier Walsh, however, had tough luck and could not quite squeeze over the charmed line. Still the come over the charmed line. Still the same old smile though. There were a few members of the class who admitted that members of the class who admitted that they were responsible for their own downfall, but the majority of the class still blames it on the gun. I know that it was the gun which caused me to drop so low. Why I never fired that badly before. I can't be as bad as the score that I made. At least I hope not, Ed-die. I started off on this course with a few badges but as we have progressed along I have lost them one by one. It must be the school, it can't be me. I seem to be giving you much advice about how to go through this course. I only hope that you heed it, Eddie. If you do, it will save you hours of grief. Just a little point I want to bring out. No man is big enough to buck the class, or even a small part of the class. If you can't get a gang together to help or even a small part of the class. If you can't get a gang together to help you pull something, take my advice and don't pull it. And a gang ain't two or three; it's plenty. You see it's this way. Today we went out to see the artillery fire a problem. The advanced class was going out too, and as usual they were late so we company officers sat on the railroad siding and waited. Well a few (very few, far too few) decided that it would be a good idea to wire the doors would be a good idea to wire the doors of the cars that most of the class was riding in together with some telephone wire that was laying around loose. We proceeded to do so, that is to all out one car. At this car my pardner Stevone car. At this car my pardner Stev-ens, was slow and they yanked me in-side the car and warmed my "sit down" for me considerably. That was not so bad, as it was a cold day. However an arch traitor, by name Blakely, undid the wires in one car before the train reached it destination and before Stev-ens and L could seek cover we were the wires in one car before the train reached it destination and before Stev-ens and I could seek cover we were mobbed. Now, Eddie, one Canadian Mountie may quell a mob, but I'm not a Mountie. What that mob did to Steve and me was a plenty. I did not mind when they took off my boots but when they threw them on the other side of a stickerburr patch, well I may get all the burrs out by next week. Besides my boots are weak and getting my socks all wet certainly did not help a bit in getting them on again. But poor Steve, he lost a garter. S'terrible predicament for a modest man to be in. Next time I'm going to get my gang to help me and them other fellows better watch out. We warned Blakely and he ain't gonna bother us none, and the rest of them better beware. The artillery demonstration was po-

PARKER AND SEELEY FIGHT DRAW: PTOMEY DEFEATS CARL KNOWLES

By Al Durden Four hundred fight fans attending the Charity Benefit Fight show in Columbus Wednesday night saw Blondy Parker, Columbus welter, and Saginaw Seeley, Benning favorite, fight ten fast rounds to a draw in the feature bout. Both boys were in wonderful shape and their fight was a beautiful exhibition of speed and skill, mixed with plenty of terrific punches. punches.

Young Carl Knowles came over from Rome, Ga., and dropped a fast decision to the veteran Willie Ptomey in eight slashing rounds.

Grumpy Gordy, continued his winning stride with a victory over Phenix Fourroux of Benning. Gordy has improved far above the four-round class and is now becoming a threat to the middle-weights in the upper division.

The amateur bouts were equally as good as the professional bouts. Maxie Bridges took a lacing at the hands of Jackie Myers in the opener. Red Davis and Speed Ball Gilbert, Medicos, trav-eled three fast rounds to a draw. Jack Screws, of the Industrial High, left

BENNING AMATEUR WRESTLERS DEFEAT COLUMBUS "Y" MATMEN

By Bernard B. Swayze

By Bernard B. Swayze Fort Benning's amateur wrestlers gave a good accounting of themselves Decem-ber 12th, when they handed the Colum-bus Y. M. C. A. team a trouncing on their own mat before a crowd of about two hundred spectators. The show was arranged for the benefit of charity. Fort Benning was well represented at the matches. The matches were hotly contested right up to the final whistle. The majority ended in draws, it having been agreed that each contest would go been agreed that each contest would go to either one fall or a time limit of ten minutes, and no decision. The entire show was featured by the clean sports-manship of both teams and of the thorough appreciation of that fact by the stands. No contestant was warned over once for illegal holds, it having been agreed that no punishing holds would be allowed.

Hugh Bentley, of the "Y" team, and incidentally its coach, opened the show by introducing the members of the entire "Y" wrestling class, consisting of two "Y" wrestling class, consisting of twenty members. During his introductory re-marks, he dedicated the show to Chief of Police M. D. Gill, of the Columbus Department.

Possibly the feature should be the exhibition match between two young boys weighing between 40 and 45 pounds each. They were Spud Wray of Phenix City and Howard Bentley of Columbus. These tots wrestled like veterans, and used the many holds of the amateur game with good effect, and breaking them with the ease of a seasoned matman. The match ended in no decision.

The results follow:

In the next bout, Hugh Bentley, Co-lumbus and Jack Overby, of Benning, worked ten fast minutes without either gaining a fall. Skippy McLendon of Benning, proved fashioned square to be too fast for John Tom Harris of Columbus and flattened Harris with a half nelson after six minutes and fifty-five seconds of action.

Ed Powers of Columbus evened mat-ters in the next bout. Matched with Zagromski of Benning, Ed was having his hands full until the soldier began clowning. They went to the floor and Zagromski rested his head on Ed's back and pretended to sleep but forgot to keep his shoulders off the mat. He was a bit surprised when he was awakened and told he had lost.

James Harris and LaBlance of Ben-

James Harris and LaBlance of Ben-ning fought it out to a draw without either gaining an advantage. In the battle of giants, Cuterer of Benning gained a fall over Big Boy Jones of Phenix City in eight minutes. This was a great bout. Cuterer weighed 234 pounds while Jones came in at 223. Krewson of Benning and Billenglea of Columbus wrestled a fast draw. Henry Adams of Columbus did his best to even matters in the final bout, but he found Coach Jones of the Ben-ning team too fast to be floored. This match ended in a draw.

BIG DAY AT 24TH THEATRE

Sunday, December 21st will be a big day at the 24th Infantry Theatre. At 3:15 p. m., the Negro religious play, "Heaven Bound" will be shown to Fort Benning folks, and a rare treat it will been enthusiastic in their praise. In several performances of this play in Co-lumbus, as many white people were at-tracted as colored, and this meant packed houses. Members of the 24th Infantry Glee Club are included in the cast as well as the best singing talent assembled from all colored churches of Columbus. Dr. M. L. Taylor, talented choir leader, has directed the play, and is credited with producing a gem. I'he costuming and stage settings are unique and add to the picturesque beauty of the

At 6:45 p. m., the scheduled movie show, featuring Jack Oakie in "Let's Go Native," will be shown. Following the movie attraction, an all-colored cast vaudeville show will be presented Charles Davenport, composer presented. Charles Davenport, composer of "Cow-Cow Blues" and singer of num-erous OKEH record features, will pre-sent DAVENPORT and SMITH in a medley of singing, dancing and novelty acts. This vaudeville performance inacts. This vaudeville performance m-cludes a cast of twenty-one talented players.

PROGRESS AT THE DAM

The site at the 24th Infantry swimming pool and retaining pool, presents ming pool and retaining pool, presents the aspect of a major engineering pro-ject. Since the completion of the re-taining pool dam, a great deal of im-provement work has been done, and more is in progress. The retaining pool dam has been heavily banked and rein-forced on both sides. The retaining pool basin has been cleaned out, much excavation work done a bridge placed excavation work done, a bridge placed from the dam to the valve tower, and many stumps and miscellaneous debris removed from the environs. The lower or swimming pool basin has been cleaned out preparatory to concreting the basin. Narrow gauge rails have been laid to the site and roads built, in order that and sand roads built, in order that sand, gravel, cement and other mater-ials may be brought to the job. Work on the concrete basin will start soon after the holidays. The pool is expected to open for use upon arrival of warm weather.

24TH INFANTRY HOLDS DANCE AT THE MUSCOGEE CLUB

The 24th Infantry Community Chest Dance scheduled to be held at the Polo Club last Friday evening, was held at the Muscogee Club in Columbus. A most enjoyable affair resulted. The entire membership turned out, and many visitors also, making an outstanding success of the occasion. The club was attractively decorated with ferns and ev-ergreens. The 24th Infantry orchestra furnished the music, which was made still more interesting by the singing ac-companiment to most dance numbers. Most of the musicians are also members of the regimental glee club, and their singing was greatly appreciated.

singing was greatly appreciated. Among those present were Colonel and Mrs. Caffey, Major and Mrs. Coates, Captain and Mrs. Wilson, Captain and Mrs. Rogers, Captain and Mrs. Hill, Captain and Mrs. Murphy, Captain and Mrs. Deroin, Capt. and Mrs. Reming-ton, Captain and Mrs. Halloran, Cap-tain and Mrs. Baker, Major and Mrs. Freehoff, Lt. and Mrs. Saffarans, Lt and Mrs. Hoy, Capt. Fry and Capt Barrett.

Cappell and Moody, tackles, are strong and willing. "Spud" McCoy is a veteran at guard, having given the Kells some six or sev-en years of his service. He smears lots of plays. "Spud's" running mate, Cruson, weighs only 140 pounds, but when he hits the defense or tackles, it seems as though he weighs a top.

he weighs a ton. Carlin, at center, has played a good steady game throughout the year.

Vallery Is Injured Vallery, versatile quarterback and captain of the Tanker team, was in-jured in the game with the Artillery, and will in all probability be unable to enter the fracas, which is quite a loss to the team. Even so, they have two good running backs, Carver and Smith, A., who can fill the position and give good account.

The Tankers might tell you that they are going to use Gilley at center, but the writer picks Red Lindsey, and will bet a couple of buttons that they have him in there. Gilley's passing is not as good as Lindsey's. Another good back that has not been seen much in action this year is Moore. If you were crazy enough to spot either team more than one point and then bet good hard iron men on your judgment, then you had better stay at home and save a little anguish for the time when you hear the score.

What a game, fast and furious all the way. Last Sunday morning "A" Com-pany and "B" Company engaged in what promised, at the start, to be a real football game, but which later developed into a rout for "B" Company. The final score was 44 to 0 in favor of Company "B." "Bloody" Blackstone, Company "B." "Bloody" Blackstone, "Buddy" Gares, "Galloping" Red Black (alias Red Grange), "Blondy" Fontan-ella and "Grumy Gordy, the second," were the outstanding stars. The "A" Company boys displayed fine sportsmanship, playing good clean football, al-though it was heard from the side lines that Ching Ching Johnson, the Galloping Blonde fullback for "A" Company did not play Fontanella fair, as he stiffarmed him. Also that Grumpy Gordon was "yellow" as every time he got the ball he ran from all the "A" Company boys. Anyhow, we all had lots of fun and "A" Company has challenged "B" for a return game which will be played soon.

It has been rumored that Sgt. Barr and Cpl. Helton have lost their happy homes in Columbus. We regret to hear this, boys, and trust that it is not true. Corporal Neely recently returned from a 60-day furlough and the poor boy looked real bad. He had not eaten in so long that he was out of the habit. He could not eat or work for several days, but think he is O. K. now. He turned in a few days early and it is rumored that a certain "bare-foot" girl way out in Oklahoma had something to do with it. What about it, Neely?

It is not safe to diagnose an injury as a sprain until X-ray demonstrates that no bone is broken.

The treatment of a sprain consists in raising the injured point so it will get less blood; then apply cold water with frequent changes. Prevent motion in the joint.

Tanker and Second Battalion elevens battled furiously for 60 minutes in Doughboy stadium Saturday afternoon in an effort to settle the dispute over the Fort Benning football championship, but to the end were no nearer to the solu-tion than when they started. So, like true sportsmen, the captains shook hands and agreed to divide the honor in view of the 7-7 tie score which had ensued.

It was the toe of "Buck" Tinsley which was the factor in producing the tie score. While the 4,000 fans in the tie score. While the 4,000 fans in the stands held their breaths in suspense "Buck" drew back his foot and sent the oval spinning between the goal posts in a beautiful loop. The kick dead-locked the score, as a climax to a belated aerial attack, which had netted a Second Bat touchdown while there were less than five minutes of the melee to be played.

that they would turn the trick which they had manipulated so often in recent years, but the infantrymen had not thrown down their guns. Between the time when Sullivan trekked across the Second Bat goal and the time when Thompson catapulted around right end for a touchdown and then kicked the tying point the elevens then kicked the tying point, the elevens battled doggedly. While the Tankers had held an edge, mainly because the breaks went against the Infantrymen, neither was able to put over a touchdown.

As the third quarter was waning, ine Tankers staged another great drive for the Second Battalion goal. But after marching down the field from the Second Battalion 40-yard line to their nine-yard line, the Tankers made three futile thrusts for the goal line. The quarter then ended and the teams reversed the field in time for Tinsley to knock down Vallery's pass over the goal line. The failure seems to take the heart out of the weary Tankers, while it served to buoy the hopes of the Kellys.

Air Raid Brings Tie

From that time on, the Second Battalion held the whip hand, but had to wait until the final minutes before they could march over the goal line. Taking the ball on their 20, the Second Bats attempted an air raid to no avail. Then the Tankers took the ball on the Kelly 33 yard line and the Infantrymen cata-pulted through their defense and smeared several plays, forcing a punt. The same thing happened three times before the Infantry air attack began to click. Many an Army star twinkled brilliantly as the 22 men went about their work. TERRIBLE SWEDES BEAT BENNING MUSKETEERS 29-23 IN ROUGH GAME

Basketball Scheduled But Football Was Order of the Evening

Olson's Terrible Swedes, lived well hand shot while Wapp held him by up to their name last Saturday night, in their 29 to 23 win over the Benning Musketeers. The Swedes didn't bother much about the rules and regulations and injected a little football into pro-ceedings. Unfortunately the Musketeers ware not bitting the helet from the foul were not hitting the basket from the foul line.

During the opening half, the Musket-eers were smothered by a brand of play they were not used to. Holding and riding was the system. The Musketeers were far the faster of the two teams, but with the Swedes getting ing away with every trick used in the professional game, it was just too bad! On several occasions the Musketeer players were forced to shoot with swede holding on. In fact near the end of the game Mal Kammerer loop-ed a basket with a beautiful back Tolle.

GLEE CLUB'S PRESENTATION OF "THE BACHELORS" PLEASING

Mary S. Tucker Reviews Production and Gives Praise to Chorus and Principals

The privilege of reviewing the per-formance of the Infantry School Glee Club having been intrusted this ama-teur scribe it must be confessed that teur scribe, it must be confessed that she sat on the edge of her front row seat with pencil in hand and a determined expression on her face in so obvious a manner that her husband mentioned words of caution:

"Don't look like that when the curtain goes up-you will frighten the actors."

The advice was not needed, for once the curtain went up, the scribe relaxed, the pencil rolled down in the orchestra pit, and criticism floated out of the consciousness of said scribe altogether.

For she saw and heard melody, color, and that pleasant spectacle of ones' friends and acquaintances back of foot lights, walking about ever so unfamiliarly, strayed out of their customary aspects and personalities "into a world of phantasy and make-believe. There was a mingling of pride and a warm sentimental glow over these friends and neightal glow over these rhends and heigh-bors, that they should offer so unsel-fishly their time and energy for the benefit of us duller mortals. But, to get down to the business of reviewing this musical production, we enjoyed "The Bachelors" no end.

Chorus Is Commended

The chorus was commendable in its attack and secure infonation. That pit-fall of most amateur choral work, a waivering and uncertain pitch, was successfully avoided. Especially enjoyable were the "Lullaby," the rythmic "Ladies, Ladies," and the swaggering guardsmen who so valiantly drove away the dogs and cats.

Princess Lucille, the leading feminine role, was enacted with grace and poise Mrs. Barker, whose soprano voice was sweet and round even in its upper reaches. Mrs. Gee was a coquettish Lady Dora, and her solo with the cigarette girls was most attractive. Mrs. Patrick put zest and humorous charm into her role of the adventurous Lady Annette and her duet with Lady Dora was spon taneous and full of verve.

The aristocratic bachelor leads were brave in polished boots and so capably played one fancies their portrayers prac-ticed these celibate theories d one fancies their points very suc-these celibate theories very successfully in by-gone shavetail days. Prince Robert, who in everyday clothes answers to the name of McFadyen, dis-played a profile so Gary Cooperish that the fate of Princess Lucille was foreordained. Major Kraft made his initial bow before Benning audiences in a finished style, showing stage presence, and giving the role of Sir Edgar a decidedly "gay dog" elan. Major Patrick contributed perhaps the most difficult role, Lord John. His "legend" told to musical accompaniment, and a later soliloquy were done with genuine dramatic artist-ry; more of Major Patrick please.

As to the Honorable Artie, it is to be assumed that his favorite motto is inevitably "Be nonchalant." His was a genuine characterization and I anticipate with pleasure the opportunity of seeing Lt. Diller in a big part. A glimpse of Lt, Kovarik as the cook made one's mouth water with the suggestion of Lucullan feasts. Colonel Reed came on for a brief moment with an auro of omen and portent, bringing a message and departing with awful dignity. Judging from the applause greeting this appearance,

And Done on Umpty-nine Cents

The costumes were delightful to the eye and the maidens in the second act, delicious in pastel organdies, were an example of clever ingenuity. Back stage secrets are not to be revealed here, but Paquin or Chanel might look to their laurels and feminine shoppers meditate on the folly of hundred dollar gowns when a creation of organdy for umpty-nine cents can be so ravishing. We sa-lute Mrs. Strayer! We also salute Mrs. Fagg, who herself made eight of the beautiful shawls worn by the maidens!

Scenic effects were exceptionally good, becoming amber light thrown from each side of the stage believing make-ups and protecting front seat addicts from their customary close-ups of mascara and eye shadow. We hope this ingenious device is used henceforth. Captain Bell sponsored these able stage effects. Captain Barker was the indefatigable collector and custodian of properties.

We express great admiration for the the musical director, Mr. Vonderou, and his assistant, Mrs. Pearson. This is perhaps the dominant feature of this production. The music was not easy, full ci changes of rhythm and extremes of pitch. The sopranos managed their high notes and the basses encompassed their low notes with good tone color.

Direction is Well Done

The direction and staging evinced a master control by a director thoroughly skilled and competent. To Benning au-diences of several years ago this would have been expected when Captain Deroin's name was entered on the program as director in chief. To those of as director in chief. us who had only heard of his reputa-tion as a splendid director, we needed no more than the harmony and com-pleteness of all details of "The Backeto be assumed his reputation is lors" founded on thorough capacity for such work. The results he attained are not arrived at without strenuous drill and hard work, not only by the director, but by the entire cast.

In fact, if a reviewer may moralize very briefly, we might all dwell on the fact a bit more than we are apt to, that these affairs are immensely difficult. A seasoned trouper, trained in stage routine after years of work, who signs on for a Zeigfield or a Dillinghouse production, knows and expects grilling, tedious weeks and even months of rehearsal. Nearly always a musical produc-tion "tries out" for a week or so in smaller towns, stumbling and halting through the first few performances, and the actors and choruses are scolded and harangued by stage directors, them-selves harrassed and goaded by impa-tient producers. I think, since these Glee Club performances were so excellent in many respects, we should reflect on these things a bit.

things a bit. The Glee Club is an organization of amateurs, entertaining an audience largeof personal friends or acquaintances. Having seen them accomplish this re-cent splendid piece of work, we hope they will do another one for us. (We are glad to say "congratulations" and please try again ! Mary S. Tucker.

SINCE THEN

By Philip Gibbs Since the close of the World War, Sir Philip Gibbs has gone on many journalistic travels through Europe, with side excursions into the Near East and America. One may say of him what Homer said of another great traveler: "Many were the men whose cities he saw and whose mind he learned, aye, and many the woes he suffered in his heart." The results of Sir Philip's travels, measured in personal observation, interviews with personages of high rank and persons of no importance, reflection and interpretation, are here presented under the legend: "The Disturbing Story of the World at Peace."

The story begins with that first Armistice Day twelve years ago and the high hopes then entertained for the world that was again to have peace after four and a half years of war. Before peace that was again to have peace after four and a half years of war. Before peace descends, upon the battlefront revolu-tion is at work in Germany. It is a changed Germany the first correspon-dents with the allied armies discover. The scene shifts to Paris where the treaty-makers' are at work and then to Russia for a glimpse of the White armies in their futile struggle to overthrow the still-enduring Bolshevist power. The martyrdom of Hungary under Bela Kun and the Rumanians is the next tragic The Greeks add their bit or pisode. disaster in Asia Minor.

Such recuperative forces as have since been manifested in Europe begin to make their appearance. Italy throws over her democratic government and em-braces fascism. Germany having touched bottom during the Ruhr occupation begins to climb back on the ladder of new and sound money. Austria is rescued by the League of Nations. Poland, by a last-minute victory over the Soviet armies, saves her newly won freedom. Out of this post-war confusion France emerges with the leadership of the Continent. Great Britain barely holds her own. The League of Nations is a sur-prising success amid so many failures.

These journeys of Sir Philip Gibbs, viewed now in retrospect, make interpretive and background articles on the state of the nations. After making a name (and adding a "Sir") by his eyewit-ness account of battles on the west front all during the war, he turns now to what we know in America as Sunday journal-ism as distinct from the daily kind. He looks at things from the standpoint of the Liberal Englishman—an almost ideal standpoint, "au-dessus la melee" and yet close to events. His understanding of national psychology is highly developed, his analysis of the "unponderabless' of international relations particularly keen Any one may test his knowledge of other nations by reading his impressions of his visits to America which will be found both shrewd and fair.

The weakness that appears in this record of the post-war world is the very personal quality which made Gibbs' war correspondence especially remarked. After all, no correspondent can see ev-erything or always the most important things. "Since Then," despite many brilliant pages, seems at times a too casual and too meager account, with reminiscences of perhaps unimportant encounters taking the place of solid matter that might be got by "digging."

For instance, in the era of Theodore Roosevelt no man who had served a corporation could hope to reach the presidency. At least, that is sup-posed to have been an obstacle to the candidacy of Elihu Root, whose corpor-ate connections would be thought mild at the present day. Then railroads were considered offenders against the law, the age of rebates and free passes being age of rebates and free pass still fresh in public memory. Students of economics may see in this the final attack of the country on the railroads, which possessed the power to build cities, move crops, develop farm lands. In minor fashion, smoking by women was still telegraphic news in 1908. At least, the manager of the Waldorf As-toria in New York City declared that perhaps once in six months an Englishwoman would light a cigarette in the corridors of that hotel, but when told that she was breaking the rules she would apologize at once. —H. LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY, 3d

Dear Eddie:

By the time you get this letter, the class will be enjoying the delights of a stomach ache from eating too much turkey, with the curse taken off by the fact that we will have 10 days in which to recover from our Christmas debauch. We sure need this holiday, the last weak was a touch one. Just the last week was a tough one. Just one exam after another. Machine guns, grenades, the bayonet and a lib-eral sprinkling of the use of the coal shovel and coal skuttle.

The grenade exam provided some very trick questions involving the tactical use of most infantry weapons. I made a bad guess. Seeing that it was an exam on grenades, I threw gre-nades at everything in sight. Who would ever think that the grenade instructor would ever countenance the use of the rifle and bayonet. Now, Eddie, I ask you what would you use, a rifle or a grenade, on an enemy sol-dier sitting on a soap box, at the bottom of a well reading the Sat. Eve. Post, at a range of 9 miles. S'a very difficult problem.

The bayonet exam provided a great deal of innocent merriment for the class. It was held in the form of a county fair with the weapons instruc-tors illustrating some of the more com-mon errors in handling the bayonet. The instructors were very careful to announce that they were making only so many intentional errors, however, in spite of that warning it was quite difficult in the case of Capt. Gilbert, to tell just which of the many errors was the intentional one. Capt. Lindroth, on the other hand put his on in such an exaggerated form that the class had a hard time answering the question for laughing at the exhibition. In fact, I thought that it was so funny In fact, I thought that it was so funny that I failed to pick out one of the most obvious of the intentional errors. That's the way things go. No matter how simple the questoins, Eddie, I can always tie one up, and I am not the only one in the class that does it, from some of the groups that I have been some of the groans that I have heard at the "bull" session that immediately follows the completion of a question. Oh, no, I'm not the only one.

The machine gun marksmanship exam was one of the best that we have had this year. Very simple if you knew your oats, but very tricky-for the boys that did not look over the text. And just a word of caution. Count your shots. I'm surprised that Count your shots. I'm surprised that you did not hear the heart rendering groans of those, who after they had handed in their papers, suddenly real-ized that they had failed to count the hits. It was worse than being at an Irish wake. And some of the scores that the class gave on the target we had to score. Everything from 135 to 148. I wish that I had had brother Isaacs score my record targets, he ar-rived at a score of 148, when all I gave the man (the correct score) was 142. But what I really would like to know is what decision you should come too in record practice if, after the gunner has been firing for say thirty seconds, the gun blows up, the ground under the gun turns out to be a well, the target catches on fire and a red hot shell goes down inside the gunners boot. Does he get a new gun? Does he have to fill in the well? Or can he finish the score with a shot gun? Just a minor point that was not covered, and I am a little curious. Speaking of shot guns (for hunting purposed spluy) we have a most intro purposes only) we have a most intre-pid hunter in the class. A huntsman supreme. Eagle-eyed, stealthy, cun-ning, and with a vast fund of knowl-edge concerning the habits, looks and peculiar actions of all kinds of game. Now on a Saturday morning this bold Say you saw it in The News. Bain turns out to be a bolster to the team.

hunter took, with two companions, a trip down the broiling, frothing Upatoi, in a canvas boat. They shot 7 ducks, the due to circumstances which ducks, tho due to circumstances which I was not able to understand clearly, they had been able to secure but one of the 7 dead ducks. That in itself is queer, Eddie, if you stop to think about it. But shush! Careful men. Thar be ducks ahead on that sand bar. So slowly and cautiously the boat is pulled to the shore and our hunter lands. Following stealthly the trail, our intrepid hunter, exercising all the art that he has learned in many years art that he has learned in many years art that he has learned in many years in the great open spaces, creeps along the river bank down upon the unsus-pecting ducks. Three hundred yards away and all is well, 200, the ducks are still there, 100, not a duck has moved, 50, ah! little do they suspect who is upon them. BANG ''' at the first shot the stricken duck rolled over on its side. BANG ''' the duck is shaken violently from stem to stern shaken violently from stem to stern. And then, much raucous laughter from two hunters in a blind.

But the things that Lt. Christian said when he found that he had shot and when he found that he had shot up a wooden decoy duck. Well, Eddie, children might see this paper and such language is not för tender ears. I certainly have to hand it to Christian for preseverence tho, Eddie, I can by a far stretch of the immagination see how a man might shoot a wooden duck once but to shoot the same one twice, brother you better see The Doc and get some specs. Y'rs tr'ly,

WOFFORD COLLEGE FIVE MEET MUSKEETEERS HERE SATURDAY

The Benning Musketeers will meet one of the strongest basketball fives in the south when they clash with the Wofford College cagesters at the garrison gym-nasium, Saturday night.

The visitors are reported to be a fast, well coached organization and are ex-pected to give the Musketeers a fast battle. They will arrive at Fort Ben-ning from Spartanburg, S. C., sometime Saturday.

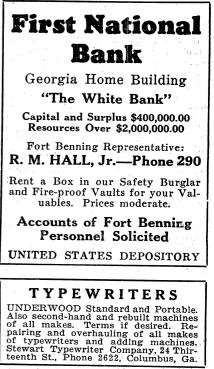

Fans may rest assured that they will not witness a riding, holding affair as that demonstrated by Olson's Swedes. The college athletes are coached and taught to play fast and clean, and basketball demonstrates this coaching to the highest extent.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector FIRST AID IN THE HOME

A wound debroken skin is a wound. notes two dangers, hemorrhage and in-fection. In most wounds hemorrhage is slight; in every wound, even the slight-est scratch, there is the possibility of infection.

In larger wounds, especially if they are deep, or if they have bits of cloth-ing, pieces of wood, or dirt in them, in-fection is more likely to occur. An in-fected wound in a few hours may get red, swollen and painful. If blood pois-oning develops, the patient may have chills and fever and be very sick.

Infection: Germs cause infection. Germs are everywhere. They live on our skin, especially on the skin of the hands, on clothing, in dirt, and in water. Some germs are deadly, but usually they do little harm unless they are brought in Inthe harm unless they are brought in contact with a wound. Germs gain en-trance into the body through every wound but the white cells of the blood usually make a successful fight against them. Our chief object in treating wounds is to prevent the entrance of more germs.

Do not let anything which may have germs on it touch the wound.

Do not touch it with your fingers. Nothing should touch a wound except sterilized cloth. Sterilizing means killing of germs. It is usually accomplished by prolonged heating. Every home should have sterilized dressings on hand. However, if none are to be had, a temporary substitute can be made by boiling a piece substitute can be made by boiling a piece of clean cloth for 10 minutes, or by the use of a hot iron which will slightly burn the cloth. The ordinary small cuts and scratches can be treated with tinc-ture of Iodine or Mucurochrome and then have the sterile dressing applied. Wounds which are deeper and which contain dirt, clothing or other foreign material should be treated by the doc-tor. This is especially true of those small deep wounds caused by a rusty small deep wounds caused by a rusty nail, wire, or splinter. No matter how nail, wire, or splinter. SHRAPNEL BURSTS

We are filled with the Christmas spirit and extend to all comrades-in-arms the highest compliments of the season. xxx

Well, now that we have seen, rather than heard, the "Bachelors," having been so unfortunate as to sit in one of the theatre's dead angles, we are beginning to favor the suggestion of a local wit to return to the "silent drama." x x x

Major Ross, accompanied by Mrs. Ross and their daughters, Misses Nancy and Dorothy are spending the holidays in Atlanta as guests of Major General and Mrs. McCoy. xxx

The citation of the week goes to "Litthe Doc" Baker without a dissenting vote. To state the cause without any decorations, he failed to turn over the sheet of examination questions covering Veterinarian Lee's course in canker, thrush and colic, to discover that there were five more to be answered. On emerging from the examination room he is reported to have said that the test was "surprisingly brief." ххх

Our admiration is extended to Captain Lee, V. C., for putting across a course in animal first aid in a manner most ef-ficient and pleasing. Of course the class made it easy by being highly attentive and respectful. x x x

Th other evening we chatted at length with a recently arrived officer who ex-panded at length on the fine class of soldiers who make up the garrison at Fort Benning. Having served here for well nigh four years we cannot find it in our hearts to disagree. x x x To one and all we extend our wishes

Some people certainly are dense. For-instance, the other morning, with a mounted terrain exercise scheduled, Instructor McCunniff strode into Kriz Hall after a last look at the lowering sky. He threw back the overcoat, leather jacket, sweater and muffler with which he had been vainly trying to keep out the wintry blasts, and as he did so was greeted with a storm of consumptive coughing. In spite of his position and responsibilities in loco parentis—or words to that effect—he utterly ignored or failed to recognize the imminent danger to the health of his company and hard-heartedly re-marked—"Gentlemen, your horses are outside."

Hagen is by way of becoming the Hagen is by way of becoming the class equestrain extraordinary, not only by virtue of the certificate in equitation which they can't take away from him, but by reason of his ad-vanced dressing. He turned out for the last mounted formation with trou-sers, and we shouldn't be at all surprised to see him sporting a pink or green coat any Sunday morning now. The powers that be in our esteemed demonstration regiment are recovering slowly from a severe shock. The story goes that Colonel Major was among those present when Rodwell de-livered his more or less famous monograph. Much impressed with the ag-gressive and alert manner of the speaker, it is said the pilot of the 29th immediately started laying crafty schemes to grab him for his own. Some say he even consulted the class astrologer, Col. Stayer with regard to the probabilities, and was deliberately encouraged. The truth finally leaked out, however, that Rodwell belongs to that atavistic military branch, the cavalry, and the romance was ended.

x x xTo those instructors who crave pop-ularity with the class, we recommend ularity with the class, we recommend a little mannerism adopted by one of those who has made a study of the situation. He always starts his ques-tions with "would you," and gives a correct solution after that interroga-tory preface. When the happy student confesses modestly that he would, this instructor is not content with the nor-mal and non-committal "thank you," but always, with pleased surprise ex-claims "Absolutely sound!" The net result of all this is most flattering to the struggling student. We know. the struggling student.

x x xWe note with dismay cancellation We note with dismay cancentation of the period that Secretary Leard was scheduled to have with us early this week (namely, a marked problem) and hope that he may be restored to us under much more auspicious cir-cumstances—they can't be less so.

THE TALE OF A WILDCAT'S HEAD

After the Infantry School Hunt had killed a wildcat and presented the head to Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, there remained just one thing to do. Some one had to skin the cat, and that someone was none other than Stonewall himself.

Stonewall nimsett. As a cat-skinner, our hero is a good map-reader. Nevertheless he went at it bravely, having hung the cat up by the tail. The afternoon wore along and still the Captain strove mightily. Skinning even a defunct wildcat is a messy job, and this one got messier and messier. We omit the lurid details.

Late that afternoon his wife's voice reached the toiler's ears:

"Remember, we are invited out to dinner." The job unfinished, Stonewall retired to the vicinity of the family bathtub and 30 minutes later looked his old debonair self. Appearances are deceiving. Somehow Stonewall just didn't feel like eating any dinner.

eating any dinner. The next morning our hero resumed his labor of love. Things went a bit better than the night before, barring a contretemps or so, as for example that exasperating moment when Stonewall, a trifle piqued at the whole affair, yanked lustily on the cat's tail and thereby inadvertently slapped himself in the face with some of the deceased's spare parts. The ordeal finally ended, and his efforts crowned with success, the remains were wrapped up and left on the back steps while the Captain went to work went to work. On his return he was thoroughly admonished by Mrs. Jackson for messing up the back steps. Stonewall estimated the situation, and decided to rewrap the remains and leave same on the back porch. Having been bawled out (two hours later) for messing up the back porch, Captain Jackson made a neat package, and addressed same to a taxidermist, so that he could mount the head. To the Post Office went Stonewall firmly clutching the cause of his recent woes, and shoved it in at the window. "What's this?" demanded the clerk. Stonewall hummed and hesitated. "What is it?" again asked the clerk.

"What is it?" again asked the clerk: "It's a wildcat," Jackson admitted.

"It's a whideat," Jackson admitted. After looking up a regulation or two, the clerk announced: "Wildcats can't be sent by mail." "But this is a dead wildcat," shouted Jackson, as he pushed Wild mas' remains through the window and fled. Unless the Post Office has had a heart, the assorted pieces of wildcat Thomas' triumphs in "The Bachelors" in which he took a leading part, the Major took home a suitcase containing his cos-tumes and make-up aids to beauty. It seems that Mrs. Patrick, who also took a leading role in "The Bachelors" also had a suitcase of theatrical im-pedimenta. After the show the suit-cases were brought home, and the Thespians being fatigued by their vo-cal and interpretative efforts, dropped cal and interpretative efforts, dropped in the middle of the floor, while the Patricks sought repose. At 3:00 a. m. the Patrick baby ut-tered certain syllables which were in-

"I want a drink of water and I want it now."

The Major wearily arose in the dark. Wham! "Ow!"

When the lights were turned on, the Major was discovered seated in the middle of the room tenderly clutching his foot. He had stumbled over the theatrical impedimenta. (Whose? Aha, that's the question). We next see the Major, limping about the post and being congratulated by admiring friends, and rubbing his right arm.

It is getting tired of being held aloft while the Major says slowly and impressively, "Never again."

With customary zeal and energy the Sheriff proceeded to organize a Jun-ior Order to take care of the over-flow and applied for a charter from the parent organization. Pending the drafting of this formidable document, an informal meeting was held to which an installation team consisting of four members in good standing of the members in good standing of the parent body was invited for the purpose of initiating the neophytes into the Thanatopsian mysteries.

The restrained behavior of the members of this installation team was favorably commented upon. Only by the glitter in their starved eyes at the sight of the asemblage of fresh meat could the veterans of a hundred "thumpings" be distinguished from the novitiates. novitiates.

The meeting was devoted to a dem-onstration in technique which was greatly enjoyed by the demonstrators. Immediately following adjournment several members of the installation team collected the autographs of the more promising of the prospective members of the Junior League and all went home feeling that the new organization was a noble addition to the social life of the garrison. Two days later, however, Sheriff Tuttle confided to the Blunderbuss reporter that his little group of prom-ising benefactors was exhibiting all of the characteristics of a flock of wild turkeys that had been shot into.

Invitations to the next meeting are out but to date no regular member of the original Thanatopsis Club has been honored with one.

The handicap committee has assured those interested that the winners of the last event will be given a new rating— the generous attitude of the committee in this connection will not be changed.

Forty-nine entrants were registered for the shoot and contested for live in number. Numerous turkeys—four wives were on hand to lend their respective husbands moral support and expert advice in their attempt to bring home a turkey. Maj. and Mrs. Steel went into a huddle on several occasions to decide such burning questions as what gun to use and why Mrs. Steel got so many right angle birds. These efforts bore fruit as Maj. Steel finally emerged with a turkey won by a safe margin. Capt. Lovett who caused all the em-barrassment of the handicap committee, won high honors for the day without being extended. Everyone conceded him a turkey after he had fired his first string. No less than seven men approached the committee and addressed them at some length on the subject of handicapping.

Capt. Champeny with a substantial handicap did much better shooting than he was expected to do-refused to crack when under pressure and secured a nice fat turkey.

Capt. Cleance (laboring under a very stiff handicap) made the tactical error of breaking 24 out of 25 birds. On the shoot off he faltered somewhat and effected a tie with Capt. Miller for the last turkey. The toss of a coin was the deciding factor and Capt. Cleance was lucky enough to win the coveted bird.

Another turkey shoot will be arranged in the near future if the demand warrants it. The demand for bigger and better handicaps is becoming more and more insistent, but as the committee must have some time to smooth out its ruffled feelings after each event some interval of time must lapse betwen turkey shoots. The turn out was the largest of the year and extended the facilities of the gun club to the limit.

The bon fire was a happy thought as was the steaming hot coffee so kindly donated by the Officers' Club. Both were appreciated to the full with the hope that both may be a regular addition to each event.

Maj. O. N. Bradley and other members of the committee are to be congratulated on the success of the entire program.

The next regular shoot has been sche duled for Sunday, Dec. 28th—for a tur-key?—Maybe yes—maybe no—it will depend on the crowd.

CHRISTMAS TREES AND LEGENDS

INFANTRY SCHOOL NEWS

CONSERVATION OF NATIVE GREENS

Ruth Hunt

We, the people of the United States, are accustomed to thinking of our celebration as one originating with the birth of Christ, and of our Christmas tree with its star and candle as symbolic of man's aspirations reaching toward the Guiding Star of the East, lighted on the way by candles of the altars of the Church.

Church. Such a conception is reasonable enough but not quite true. It ignores the foun-dations upon which we have built a beautiful structure. In reality we owe our Christmas tree of today to a com-posite, made up of bits of Druid wor-bin Swian swingerstition Greek Mythship, Syrian superstition, Greek Mythology, and Roman rites of the Saturn-alia To the Druids, we are indebted for the decorated fir; to the Romans, our habit of giving gifts and the laying adise of differences between employer and employee for a short period each year and also for the celebration of a period of peace and good will, free from labor and care; to the Syrians and the and glittering Greeks, for the tinsel ornaments which so delight the shining eyes of childhood. In short, we, today are in reality making use of various pagan customs, which in form have attracted us, but of which we have deliberately changed the significance to suit our Christian beliefs.

There are many different legends concerning the origin of the first Chrst-mas tree. Each year sees published charming stories in which myth and fact are fascinatingly blended. Perhaps the best liked legend is the one dealing with Saint Boniface and the fir tree. The story runs something like this: To the story runs sometning like this: 10 the Druid priests as they were assembled beneath their sacred oak, preparing to propitiate their tree gods by their an-nual sacrifice of a living child, Saint boniface appeared, clad all in white and hearing a cross in his hands (Dickly) bearing a cross in his hands. Quickly interposing the cross between the child and the oak, he stayed the sacrifice while he told the priests of a strange and new religion—the story of Christ. As he finished the earth was covered with a mist, and a bolt of lightning, accompanied by the noise of heavy thunder, struck the oak, destroying it. Then as the mist quickly melted away, the Druids saw standing where their very sacred oak had been, a slim and beautiful fir tree pointing straight upwards toward the shining stars of Heaven. Convinced against their will by the miracle of the oak, the Druids accepted the new doctrine and adopted the fir tree as symbol of their conversion.

Oak Used as Altar

These tree worshipers had used their sacred oak as an altar, and upon that sacred oak as an altar, and upon that altar had placed yearly many symbols of sacrifice. They continued their cus-tom of hanging like objects on the newly accepted fir, changing the meaning of each offering to suit their new belief. And so the old symbols of sacrifice pe-mendacementary past came decorations with a legendary past and a present significance of joyful joyful giving.

Most of us have forgotten the legend-ary past. While we place on every Christmas tree some of the same signi-ficant objects that the tree worshippers of old placed on their oak, we have almost entirely forgotten their meaning. The star and the candles, of course, have for each of us, a special meaning, but aside from these, we decorate thought-lessly, trying only to make each year's tree more beautiful than the last.

Now every Christma stree, to be true to its tradition must have on it, the following things: at the top, a glittering star which to the Pagan was a symbol of peace and to the Christian is a re-minder of the Star of the East. Beneath it are placed one or more lighted can-dles which represented to the Pagan the of doors where it seems to find a natural light on his altar and to the Christian, a candle from the altar of the Church; next a cross, which signified to the Pa-gan the cross shaped limbs of his sacred oak, and to the Christion, the crucifizion. Lower still should be hung a dove, a symbol of reproductive nature to the Pagan, and of the dove of peace to the Christian.

Drums, horns, and trumpets did not formerly express mere joyful sound but were the offerings of musicians to their tree gods. Masks and false faces sig-nifid the heads of condemned criminals nifid the heads of condemned criminal presented as offerings. England still uses the masks and false faces for her mummers parade. We call the red and gilt bell that decorate not only the tree but th house as well, bells of joy or bells of Heaven. Before the time of Christ they were used to indicate thanks Christ they were used to indicate thanks to Bacchus for the yearly yield of the vine. Flowers were used to indicate thanks for spring and autumn harvests. Dolls were used as symbols of early child sacrifice as Abraham used a lamb in place of his son Isaac. Our decora-tive cornucopea, filled with nuts and candies was their cup of libation, and our yards of tinsel were sympolic to them of the ancient gold and silver sacrifices of the year. A sprig of mistletoe and one of holly to insure good will and good luck completes the list.

National Institution

While most of us have forgotten these legends, and spend little time recalling them, we do spend much time and care in selecting our yearly Christmas tree. is a National institution and we all take care to shop (or chop) early for the best. The fir tree is the National favorite. In the past it has been easy to get. In fact the fir family comprises a large part of all true conifers. One might choose a white fir, a silver fir, a hemlock, a blue spruce, a Norway spruce or a silver tipped spruce with its wealth of mysterious shadows. Better yet, there were the balsams, with their fragrant needles, always carefully gathered to make the sleep inducing pillows which keep their sweetness for many a year. Firs used to be plentiful but we have We have indulged in been thoughtless. that species of vandalism which seems to come with plenty, until we have so seriously depleted our forests of the fir tree that we have been obliged to turn to the pines and cedars for help. While not quite as symmetrical as the firs and foliage not quite so thick, they with still were resinous and fragrant, breathing out the very spirit of Christmas. There are sections of the country where these trees were not always avail-able. Parts of New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas have used the sturdy little mesquite, and certain sections of the South, with its love of myth and legend have made use of the holly.

In Hawaii, where poinsettias grow in-to trees and where palmettoes are to trees and where painettoes are shapely and strong, these have served when fir, pine, cedar, holly and mesquite have not been available. In the Philip-pines when unable to obtain a scraggly pine from the mountains of Baguio we have substituted most any sort of bush. In fact an individual tree is almost a necessity in every home. It is a poor home indeed that does not procure a Christmas tree of some variety.

Tree Conservation Committees During the last few years, tree con-servation committees have appeared. We have been told that even the pines, the cedars and the hollys are giving out. The price of trees has been going up. Groups have been stressing the danger of the use of candles indoors and generally suggesting a more effective use of Christmas trees. Responding to these ideas, Cleveland, Ohio came to the front

HEAVEN-BOUND SCORES SUCCESS AT 24TH THEATER

The much heralded Negro Religious Play, "Heaven Bound" played to a capacity house Sunday at the 24th Infantry Theatre, reservations being made for officers and their families. One hundred and sixty persons attended besides virtually the entire 24th Infantry. It is estimated that 700 witnessed the performance.

The cast consisted of seventy-five people, chosen from all the colored church choirs of Columbus. Dr. M. L. Taylor assembled the cast and directed the play. The songs were mostly of the religious and spiritual type. The quaint costumes and stage settings made the play decidedly picturesque. The play portrayed Negro characters seen in every day life, in their respective efforts to attain Heaven, and admission at the pearly gates. The weak and lowly, the crippled, the aged, young children, the over-burdened, the rich, the

The play portrayed Negro characters seen in every day life, in their respective efforts to attain Heaven, and admission at the pearly gates. The weak and lowly, the crippled, the aged, young children, the over-burdened, the rich, the sinful, all endeavor through their songs and pantomime, to get the coveted approval of Saint Peter and access to Heaven. On their way hither tuey encounter the wiles of Satan, and some fall by the wayside. Others are aided in their progress by the resistance to temptation, some are borne by angels, and one individual is rescued in the nick of time by the "life line." As the last pilgrim passes through the gates of Heaven, the Heavenly chorus, now crowned and befinged, bursts into a marvelous rendition of "All Hail, Emmanuel."

The singing was excellently done. The humor was fresh and spontaneous, the pathos real and affecting. A distinguished gathering, including General King and the Commanding Officer of the 24th Infantry and several prominent citizens of Columbus, saw the play with appreciation. Block 21. There are other passages which are controversial to say the least. For example page 273, "Parents are to be pitied and shot" and "Home sweet home is a comedy of errors." I read the latter aloud to Mrs. Mulligan who showed a complete lack of sympathy. I am somewhat put out with Hennesy for ever introducing that book. My life is now governed by pages and I am very unhappy. Little Mulligan short-circuited the radio ruining a complete set of tubes for which the Book Shop still holds my chit. Page 43 which discusses the "Sadistic Tendencies of Parents" prohibits sternness so I smiled a sickly smile and mentally cancelled my order for a new Stetson. However, should I enjoy playing with the little fellow it is indicative of something so much worse that I am in a quandry.

While at home I no longer dare to be really "chez moi" because of page 365 and upward dealing with Domesticity. Ashes on the Chinese rugs and mud on the QM floor are now the least of my worries. The hound on the corner still bounds joyously out for his matutinal play but somewhere in that confounded book there is something about that so I ignore my canine friend and trudge sorrowfully on.

sorrowfully on. Yesterday I found Mrs. Mulligan reading the book and now each time she looks at me I am sure it has something to do with page umpsteen and I am utterly humiliated.

For consolation and safe reading I turned to Basic Manual No. 2 and thus far have not found one single anthropometric measurement or aim-inhibited manner. I recommend it to all literati.

CHRISTMAS TREE LEGENDS; CONSERVATION OF GREENS

Seattle has gone in for group displays and has given over one of its parks for a huge pageant of the Nativity. Columbus, Georgia has recognized the possibilities of an electrical illumination that makes Christmas shopping a gay affair. As an immediate result of the movement for community trees there came an increase in the demand for Christmas greens. Wreath, garlands, winter fruits and flowers became of more importance than trees and glistening ornaments. The mistletoe with its wealth of legend, its tradition of fun and kisses, its credited power of overcoming the most violent poison, its love of inducing power when used as Cupid's Arrow came into great demand. Then along came holly. How we love its secret meanings and its by gone uses. It is still considered unlucky to bring it into the house before Christmas. We still use it to decorate our Christmas packages because holiy brings good luck, especially good if the sprig bears berries. We love to note whether the crop this year is prickly, (we call it the "he" holly) or smooth (the "she" holly), for by these traits tradition says we are able to judge whether in general man or woman will whether in general man or woman will rule the home for the coming year. Hung over the outside door, it protects the in mates from the lightning. Before the Christian era it was called the holy tree and was not used for decoration, but to ward off all evil spirits and to invite into the home the woodland elves of good luck, happiness, and laughter.

Laurel Emblem of Success

Then there was the laurel too, with its wealth of shiny leaves and its tradition of success. No Christmas seems complete without it. Yards and yards we used to wind on bannisters and festoon over the doors. There seemed to be such quantities of it. So we yanked it up by the roots and we carelessly broke the holly. We tore down whole laurel trees in our haste to get our supply.

We were reckless in our lavishness until once more the conservationists rose up, this time in wrath, and forced us to listen. We learned that for many years to come we must use our holly, groundpine, and laurels most sparingly. We were urged not to use them at all. In some States were were ordered, not urged. In this crisis, various horticultural societies came to our aid and promised that by judicious planting for commercial purposes, by careful pruning, and by placing restraint upon our desires, we might again enjoy these nicest of greens in the not too distant future.

Again Cleveland, Ohio came to the front. As early as 1907 she decided that the best way to conserve Christmas greens and still have decorations was to use something that was otherwise useless. She hit upon the idea of using weeds. Just common weels: peppergrass, pampas grass, wildweed, goldenrod, lotus pods. It took some time to convince skeptical jeerers and suspicious farmers, but it was done, and now we are all familiar with the gilded and shellacked baskets of cones, grasses and lotus pods that have become so popular in the last few years. So called Della Robbia baskets filled with treated gourds, nuts, and flowers quickly followed. Wreaths made of slender willow whips bound with pine tips, and wreaths made of wild huckleberry have in many localities become almost as popular as made of wild huckleberry nave in many localities become almost as popular as the holly and ground pine creations. Since 1923 the conservation campaign has progressed rapidly. Each year, magazines, newspapers and lecturers conduct vigorous campaigns. This year committees have broadcasted lists of the substitute greens available and the places where they may be found. More than on anything else, emphasis is laid on the planting and growing of native greens in every yard in the United States. The Northern States are urged to use the winterberry and the less known varieties of the holly family. To Oregon the grape is recommended; to Dakota, the bearberry; to California, the live oak and toyon (fruitless holly). The Central Atlantic group has quantities of inkberry, and a large area of the South (South Carolina, Georgia and Florida) has the moonseed vine, the cherry laurel, the dahoon, the box and the rosemary. There is the firethorn, and the evergreen huckleberry for the North Pacific. There is boyberry, barberry, pines, yews, cedars and laurels and dozens of varieties of ivy for most other sections.

The South seems especially rich in the choice that it has, and Fort Benning with acres and acres of woods seem to abount in holly and laurel. With the aid an advice of the Steeles, patron saints of Fort Benning's yards and gardens, next Christmas should find the Post with a living Christmas tree and a native supply of greens in every yard. Better yet would it be if a living tree were planted for each member of the family. What a chance for a 1931 Christmas carnival of lights and trees and native wreaths for all the world to see.

Just as nothing succeeds like success, so nothing qualifies like quality. Quality is baked right into our bread and rolls.

Vallery and Bennett were the shining lights in the Tanker backfield for gains time after time. Joris comes in for praise for his kicking, his educated toe giving his team an advantage until he was taken out of the fray because of an injury.

Marquis, left end, who snagged passes Marquis, left end, who shagged passes and smeared Tanker plays; Chappell, tackle and Krewson, little guard, did great work in the line for the Kells. Lindsey, center; Hull, left end; Stewart, right guard and Costello, right tackle, worked hard and well for the Tanks.

King Presents Cup

King Presents Cup Following the game, the teams march-ed before the box of Brigadier General Campbell King, Fort Benning comman-dant, where they were commended by the general for their hard and sports-man-like play. Then it was announced that the teams had decided not to play of the tig and General King presented cup which is symbolic of the Fort Benning gridiron championship. It was an-nounced that the trophy would be kept in the gymnisaum until a duplicate can be ordered, when each team will be given custody of one.

Company "A" Corporal Cato, Company Clerk was discharged on the 19th and took on another stack.

Company "B" It happened on the night of the 18th. Two men out of Company "B," namely Privates 1st Class Morgan and Morton, were patrolling an area some where out in "no man's land," when suddenly they found themselves staring into the end of a .45 automatic leveled by one of the 1st Battalion officers. These boys, being quick of mind and on the alert, also had the Lieutenant covered with their the Lieutenant covered with their Springfields. The Lieutenant interrogated them as to whether their rifles were loaded and they replied, "No. Is that automatic?" It so happened that neither of the guns were dangerous, and it all of the guns were dangerous, and it and turned out to be a friendly war. Hey fellows, look who's back! None other than "Cajan' 'Oneillion, the all Fort Benning football payer.

Company "C" Our one and only Walker (Cyclone Louisiana Bull) Smith, with permission of a few days leave motored down to St. Petersburg, Fla., and there took on one of the roughest customers in the pugilistic circles of the Sunny South by the name of Bailey, taking a wide decision in a ten round bout full of pep and leather pushing.

Taken by surprise on last Thursday morning receiving orders to be ready to take the field in one hour's time, Com-pany "C" came through one hundred per cent. A little bit cool during the wee hours of the morning but not mindful of that, and with plenty of hot coffee of that, and with plenty of hot coffee through the graciousnes of our Mess Sergeant, nobody suffered for want of anything but sleep, which was enjoyed by all when dismissed by the C. O. with orders that no formation would be held orders that no formation would be held until Saturday noon, when the regiment would be marched to the football game. Is "C" Co. on the map?—Absolutely. You ask what reason we have for mak-ing that daring assertion? Well, who won the streamer for the best all-around rifle company in the regiment Just cast your gaze at the "C" Co. guidon and watch that bit of white stay there next month too.

Speaking of basketball, we are not so slow along that line either. When that first string combination starts down the floor they have to run in a substitute for the scorer-that's how fast the goals pile up.

Company "E"

Co. "E" took part in the surprise march of the 2nd Battalion to Ochillee Thursday morning. The Company was so used to stopping at Harmony Church that Private Gause fainted when it did

"Bog" Miller enjoyed the problem the best in the company. He had the whole on the march there and back. Pvt. Gause and Houlthouser were sent out on a night patrol and soon ran into a mounted patrol. They got down on their hands and knees to estimate the enemy's strength. They came back and made a report that they had seen men and backed backet turned out to be and heard horses. It turned out to be the Battalion's own mounted patrol. Co. "E" furnished the Commandant's orderly for the third consecutive time last week. Pvt. Roy S. Bass won it last week and Pvt. Borders and McCoy the two previous times.

Company "F"

Our 1st Lieutenant, M. S. Curtis, left on a 19-day leave of absence December 22nd.

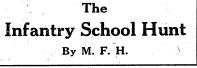

Pfc. Worley C. Adams was discharged per E. T. S., the 20th. He decided to give civilian life a try.

Company "G"

Sergeant Taylor was picked by the Company Commander for the 29th In-fantry Small Bore Rifle Team. Company "G" won first place in the Battalion test.

Pvts. Davis, H. Q. and McElveen have been recently assigned to the company. Pfc. Holland and Pvt. Thomas, J. W., returned from furlough last week.

INFANTRY SCHOOL NEWS

The paper chase on December 27, the Live Hunt on December 31, and the Controlled Ride to the Academic Camp on January 2 will start from the Infan-try School Stables. The Drag Hunt on December 28 will start at the Polo-Hunt Club. A hunt breakfast will be served after each.

Last Sunday, December 21, the field assembled at the Water Tanks at 5:30 and moved south along the Ohio Trail to the swamps along Harp's Creek. In spite of a heavy frost the hounds found the scent of a wild cat and trailed it upstream for about an hour. The cat escaped in the swamps.

The hounds were then gathered in and moved to the headwaters of Hamel Creek and there cast again but were unable to strike a trail.

It being then about 10:30 in the morn-ning the field returned to its assembly point. So, in the words of Samuel Pepys, "To home and breakfast."

Fools Rush In_Anyhow Here's All-Benning Team

By Al Durden

"Many are called, but few chosen." The past Intra-Mural Football season of 1930 has been featured by hard playing and well-balanced football teams. So even have the teams been that the fight for this year's gridiron supremacy ended in a tie between the "Kellys" of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry and the "Tankers" of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regiment.

The selection of an All-Benning Football team for 1930 is therefore quite a difficult task, and any announcement made will no doubt cause somewhat of a furore among those whose favorites did not happen to win a place. But we expect it, come what may!

Knowing all this beforehand, ye scribe will arise over some of the selections. Some have already asked why Skipper was picked over Lindsey and Berrish at center. Benning never produced a greater center than the veteran "Red" Lindsey, but mark you, he played in only one game this season. "Dutch" Berrish is another star at the pivot position and is, no doubt, an equal of Lindsey, but during the past season Berrich played during the past season Berrish played a greater part of the season in the Special Unit backfield. Skipper held the pivot position for the "Gunners," (1st Bn., 83rd F. A) during every game. Be-sides being at his position, the husky Gunner was playing a whale of a game at all times and is well entitled to the honors bestowed.

The tackles are unanimous favorites. Costello and Moody are veterans that know and play the game. Both men carry plenty of tonnage, and it is pure bone and brawn, topped off with plenty of football strategy. Convell of of football strategy. Cappell of the "Kellys" was third choice in case of a substitute.

At the guard position the veteran Stewart of the "Tankers" was elected by a big majority. Out of a scramble of names including Krewson, Pressiy, Elmore and Rhodes, the name of Rhodes was finally selected. Fans will prob-ably remember the husky Irish guard that met every play head on and played with one determination, "They shall not pass."

Tanks; Derrick, Gunners; Harper, Irish. Substitutes — Thompson, Kellys; Mit-zen, Special Units. No doubt, quite a storm of protest ond place by a split second, for sub-stitution.

Any questions, Posts!

MASTER SERGEANT WALTER RAY, I. S. D., RETIRES AFTER 30 YEARS

Master Sergeant Walter Ray, Infantry School Detachment, retired from the service January 29, 1930, after serving thirty years. As a soldier he was efficient and dependable and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. Twenty-six years ago Walter Ray, tired of the every day life of the little town of Roddy, Tenn., and fared forth from his mountain home to seek fame and fortune in the great world beyond the Cumberland. His quest was short. At Helmwood, Tenn., he saw his first soldier and this proved to be a sergeant on recruiting duty.

The boy from the mountains was broke and friendless; he was surprised ievond words when the big sergeant came up and spoke to him in a friendly way. The result of the conversation beway. The result of the conversation be-tween the sergeant and the lonely moun-taineer was a trip to the office, an ex-amination and a long ride on the train that ended with Pvt. Walter Ray a full-fledged soldier in the U. S. Army, at the Columbus Barracks, Columbus, Ohio.

A few weeks training at the Recruit Camp, and then another long ride on the train. This time Pvt. Ray found himself in Brownsville, Texas, a member of Company "L" 26th Infantry. One bitch in the 26th Infantry and Pvt. Ray took on another three years, this time with the 16th Infantry.

with the loth infantry. The years of 1907-8-9 were spent in the Philippine Islands. In 1910, he left the tropics and went to Fort Seward, Alaska, as a member of Co. "F" 16th Infantry. He spent three years in Alaska, part of this time being spent at Fort Egbert, at Eagles, Alaska, at that time the fartherest northern point of our army defense. our army defense.

Came the Mexican Border trouble and Pancho Villa. Again the 16th Infantry was rushed to the front. Down into Mexico with the Pershing Expedition went Sgt. Walter Ray and the 16th In-fantry. Mexico, bandits, sand and miles of hiking and the outfit came back to El Paso, Texas, for a rest in the winter of 1916 of 1916.

The big war came and finally the United States was drawn in. It was the First Division with the 16th Infantry that was first on the Western Front, and from up above the Cumberland. The record of the First Division during the World War holds one of the highest places of honor in American history. The 16th Infantry was one of nistory. The form infantry was one of the leading factors in gaining this honor and Sgt. Ray was with the 16th Infan-try from the beginning until the end. The war over and back in the States again, he left the Infantry and took on with the Ordnance. He later tried one bitch in the Medicos but as he confiwith the Ordnance. He later tried one hitch in the Medicos, but as he confi-dently states today, "his love was with the Infantry." Two years ago he came to Fort Benning, as a member of the Infantry School Detachment. He has made a host of friends at Fort Benning, that join in wishing him a long and prosperous life when he returns to the civilian ranks again. civilian ranks again. There is no question as to what his

JEB STEWART

By John W. Thomason, Jr.

Other hands have attempted to relate the story of Jeb Stuart, bright sun in the galaxy of cavalry stars developed by the war between the states, but no other writer has succeeded half so well as has this captain of United States Marines.

Against a background of Civil War and a tottering civilization, splashed in with Turneresque colors and broad brush strokes Captain Thomason has drawn a vivid and gallant hero-a man who had a strange mixture of qualities. He shows us Jeb Stuart as he was known and loved by the Confederacy, and J. E. B. as he was known and feared by the Union. We see a many-sided Stuart-a Stuart of Stuarts. One moment he is praying fervently, the next he is joining praying fervently, the next he is joining in, if not leading, a chorus accompanied by his own private banjo player. Swee-ney, ex-actor and strolling minstrel. In his stern religion he would have fitted well in a roster of Cromwell's Ironsides. In his love of music and dancing he would have been a good companion for the Cavaliers, who followed Prince Ru-pert and melted their family plate for the cause of the King. There was in him an utter devotion to duty, at all costs, and running with it a sense of humor that urged him on to poke good-natured fun at even Stonewall Jackson. Captain Thomason neglects none of the little touches that so clearly reveal art. At the same time he retells, in unforgettable language, the story of the Confederate cavalry's part in the fight-ing done by the Army of Northern Virginia. the human and lovable side of Jeb Stu-

Few men, even in that company of marvel workers under Robert E. Lee, accomplished as much for the cause as did Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, and no other gave to his accomplishment the air of gallantry, of dash and reckless bravado that went so far to make his name a Washington. These marvels Captain Thomason records with the loving care and brilliant insight of a skilled crafts-man. There are whole pages that leave man. There are whole pages that leave one gasping at the sheer audacity of this debonair southern leader of cavalry.

But, brilliant as such passages are, the average reader is more apt to be enthralled by the pictures Captain Thomason gives of the human side of Stuart.

LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY, 3d

Dear Eddie:

The merry yuletide has come and gone, and soon the new year will be upon us with its bills, bills and more bills. Hark the merry Christmas spirit, but how it flies away on the first of January! But what a wonderful Christmas it was! It what a wonderful Christmas it was! It is all so different down here, no snow, no sleigh rides, no jingling bells on fur covered pungs. Ah no, we celebrate Christmas here with fire crackers. It seems a bit queer at first, but you know the old saying, "when in Rome shoot Roman candles." There are also some componentions you have fresh peaches compensations, you have fresh peaches. Uh, huh! Fresh peaches! at the Officers Club, "Tom's Frozen," very good too. So warm down here, no need for fires, no bother hauling in coal and taking out the ashes. Oh, NO!

However, it has been a swell holiday. I have been so busy hunting that I have not seen many members of the class. In fact, the class has disintegrated like a covey of quail that has been flushed. Al Morgan went to Atlanta, and got him-self a ball and chain. Welcome to the gang Al, its a great life. Yeah, you should get married Eddie, it is a great institution institution.

Oh, Eddie, I almost forgot to tell you Harber, Gibson and myself went w turkey shooting before Christmas. We were all set long before daylight. As the sun came up, the turkeys flew off weit an set long before taging its its the sun came up, the turkeys flew off the roost and began strutting around in front of us. Nine of them; it was a wonderful sight. "Pick your turkey, let 'em have it." Bang! Bang! Bang! A turkey apiece? Well, Eddie, I know that you won't believe it, but we all three of us shot the same poor little turkey. We played poker to see who would get it. I won; that is I won the remains, for when I picked the turkey up it was just about shot to pieces. I really should not have to count that as my turkey for the year. Huntsman Christian also went turkey hunting. A hen turkey came up to his blind, but not a gobbler did he see, and you know, Ed-die, you can't shoot hens. Don't the fedie, you can't shoot hens. Don't the fe-males get an awful break wherever you find them.

Of course, that would be one way of satisfying the innate longings that stir the heart's strings of jumping enthusiasts to win a cup in a Benning horse show. Vigorously kicking her horse in the ribs, Miss Peggy Arnold separated her-self from the remainder of the field and succeeded in crossing the finish line in succeeded in crossing the finish line in front of Mrs. Applegate, by a nose length, in Saturday's paper chase. It was a brilliant finish. We marvel at Miss Peggy's horsemanship. Especially so when we learned that she was mount-ed on Wede. Wede has the general reputation among some of the 1 a dy equestrians of being one of those "to be trusted" souls who likes his oats but doesn't like to be disturbed unduly. We doesn't like to be disturbed unduly. We know from experience that it takes some pretty husky flank blows with the spurs -sturdier we feel than this young rider could be expected to produce—ever to get him to take the lead. Our knowledge of this quadruped and his habits forces upon us the conclusion that this speed was not from kicks burst of against his flanks but rather from some dormant sense of fair play. In some mysterious way he must have felt the quick beating of the proud little heart, whose sturdy legs were so energetically urging him on. Behind Miss Peggy were a good por-tion of the remainder of the field, all of whom had been conducted from the School. Stables to the railroad crossing over the Lumpkin Road by Colonel Stayer and there given the trail. With false leads going to the east and the west, the main paper was laid down the Lumpkin Road across Gilbert Creek, back tracking over the Sexton Ridge Trail as far as the Ohio. Along the Ohio the main trail led to the Keystone and down the Keystone to Harp's Pond where breakfast was to be served.

The run was made in record time. In fact the majority reached Harp's Pond before the breakfast truck which was delayed in starting. Ordinarily, waiting around on a cool December morning damper one's enthusiasm for p aper chases but on this occasion the situation was saved by the resourcefulness of one individual. With apologies to Vanity Fair, we nominate for THE HALL OF FAME, Major A. V. Arnold: because he is the father of Peggy; because he is an artilleryman; because he is a poly ploymer, and part because he is a polo player; and par-ticularly because he instigates children's games for grown-ups to play and thus keep warm while waiting for breakfast. On Sunday, the day following the paper chase, the Hunt conducted a Drag which left the Polo-Hunt Club at eight o'clock, according to the usual practice. In the absence of the joint M. F. H's, those in charge were particularly anxious that everything should go off well. The expected happened. We hadn't gone more than a quarter of a mile on the first run before we found our-selves on the wrong ground. Reaching the first check we found that the hounds had not checked. This would never do. The field was checked to investigate the mystery. All we could learn was that the duly appointed and carefully in-structed carrier of the drag had disappeared somewhere in the woods. Our predicament was recognized and our predicament was recognized and action was promptly initiated. We nominate for THE HALL OF FAME, Major W. M. Hoge, Jr.: be-cause he is an Engineer; because he is the husband of Mrs. Hoge; because he cements the sides of swimming pools; because he builds children's scholar and because he builds children's schools; and particularly because he can lay a grag on a moment's notice. Upon reaching the Club after the kill, and incidentally a most successful hunt, we learned that our duly appointed drag had inadvertently been mounted on Ar-tillery. Artillery wanted to go and did go, together with his rider. Where and how Major Hoge managed to ketch up with him is still a secret.

BURBACH-GRIER

A wedding impressive in its dignity and beauty was that of Miss Dorothy Margaret Grier, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Harry Surgisson Grier, and Lieut. Mrs. Harry Surgisson Gher, and Licut. Claude Franklin Burbach, son of Mr. Henry J. Burbach, which took place Friday, December 26th at four o'clock in the afternoon at the Trinity Episco-pal Church, Rev. Wragg, officiating.

The church was beautifully decorated. Against a background of smilax, ferns and palms, floor baskets of white roses and chrysanthemums were placed. Tall ivory cathedral candles burning in brass candelabras cast a soft glow over the scene. The reserved seats were indicated by clusters of white roses and white satin ribbon.

Prior to the entrance of the bridal party Mrs. Ernest Barker sweetly sang appropriate bridal music. The bride chose for her wedding song "Oh Promise Me," the same song which was used at her parents' marriage.

Now that Christmas is over it is to be hoped that Captain Hagan's spirit of generosity will be slightly dulled. For well. the few days before Christmas he was making daily contributions of coffee to a number of his needy class-mates, includ-ing Lussier, Norris, Phillips, McDonald, Steel, Gillis, et al. x x x

Kells tried to turn Christmas into Thanksgiving over the knowledge that, having delivered his monograph, he was "out of the trenches by Christmas," but the Fourth Section snatched it away by informing him that he had been se-lected to deliver his monograph to the company officers' class also. $\mathbf{x} \times \mathbf{x}$

We have been saving up for this dull week the suggestion that, with the ap-proaching close of the monograph sea-son, a few expressions that have served long and faithfully be given at least a brief holiday. A few of these expres-sions with the names of their most recent sponsors are given below:

Starting at the top with Major Harding: "An empire crashing about his ears." Next the versatile Tige Phillips, with his "Fruits of victory." Then most of the class and all of the instructors: "Piecemeal attack." Next, quite a few, with Eagles and Brian the most recent users: "Many lessons may be learned."

sons may be learned." Then comes the favorite of quite a few, with McLendon included, with "Vacillating leadership." The next, while not so popular, makes up in futility for any lack of that sort. It is Cahill's "It is useless to attempt—" The cavalry must not be overlooked, and Rodwell comes in with "Units were hopelessly intermingled."

hopelessly intermingled." And then, in the sharp accents of Ira

Black, "One of the most momentous periods in the world's history."

And we close this cannery list with the Fourth Section's favorite son, last called upon by Champeny, "Time does not permit."

We never will believe the advertisements any more. Kells and Andy Payn-ter were well ballyhooed in the class as ter were well ballynooed in the class as promising much amusement when they delivered their monographs. Neither paid any attention to what was expected of him, however, but seemed to be, for some strange reason, more intent upon

X X X Our title this week might very fitting-ly be changed to "The Very Brief Case."

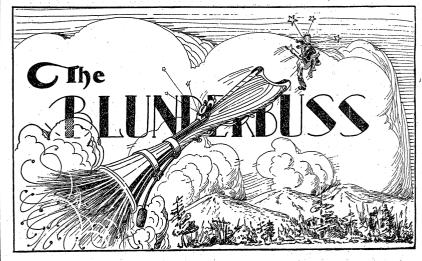

Members of the Infantry School Detachment enjoyed a turkey dinner on Christmas Day. Besides the members of the organization, the officers and married members of the command were guests for dinner.

A menu consisting of roast turkey, oyster dressing, giblet gravy, candied yams, mashed potatoes, salads, celery hearts, olives, pickles, mince pie, pump-kin pie, fruit cake, hot rolls, butter, fruit, candy and cigars, was served. Un-der the supervision of "Pop" Martin, mess sergeant, and his capable staff of cooks, the entire course was the last word in the culinary art, it was excel-word in the culturary art, it was excer-lently cooked, perfectly flavored and well served. As for the partaking, there is no explanation necessary. The mess hall was decorated in Christmas trimmings of green holly and colored streamers. Printed menus in as-colored streamers. Printed menus in as-sorted colors, carrying the names of members of the organization, were plac-ed at each plate. The dinner was high-ly enjoyed by every one. Among the officers and their families present were Colonel Daniel G. Berry, commanding officer of the Special Units, and daughter, Miss Mary E. Berry, Ma-jor Louis Falligant, detachment com-mander, and Mrs. Louis Falligant, Cap-tain William B. Tuttle, Provost Mar-shal, and Mrs. W. M. Tuttle, Captain and Mrs. Joseph A. Stuart, Captain B. and Mrs. Joseph A. Stuart, Captain B. W. Bain and Lieut. and Mrs. Edward C. Applegate.

Nothing extenuate Nor set down aught in malice. -Othello

Colonel Thorne Strayer, well known operatic entrepreneur, just before Christmas received a note from the Postmaster that a letter for him was being held for two cents postage. The Colonel, hopefully visualizing a check, proceeded at once to the post office and paid over the necessary amount. Upon opening the unstamped missive with trembling fingers it was found to contain an attractive greeting card from Major and Mrs. Emil Leard.

Emil Leard. Constant readers of the Blunderbuss being thoroughly familiar with what Brother Leard does with his Thanatopsis Club receipts know that in good times a considerable part of his income from this source goes to add to his extensive and valuable stamp collection. It was a foregone conclusion that the recent suspension of Leard benefit dividend would result in a sudden and severe blow to the stamp exchange which Brother Leard patronizes but that the far reaching effects of the current depression would so effect Brother Leard's stamp purchas-ing power as to throw upon the recipients the burden of paving the pos-of the current depression would so enect Diother Deard's stamp patients ing power as to throw upon the recipients the burden of paying the pos-tage on his Christmas cards was not anticipated. When Colonel Strayer related his story to the assembled members of the Thanatopsis Club they were so deeply affected by the vivid picture of Brother Leard's destitution that they promptly resumed their former liberal donations.

Editorial activities in the offices of "The Infantry School News" were suddenly suspended for a short per-iod, last Monday morning, when it was learned there that the younger,

Unsolved Mysteries

Just what is that barrel doing on Major Sherburne's front porch?

Atrocity

It seems that Lt. Rothwell Brown, in addition to wielding a mean type-writer, solving the dilemnas of "Cap-tain Company A," and ducking the Chief of Infantry in Russ Pool, is addicted to hunting-again we beg pardon-shooting. At any rate he proceeded by his usual noiseless methods of getting from hither to yon to a locality supposed to be frequented by ducks with dire designs on the latter. Imbued with designs on the latter. Imbued with Jackson's phrase about mystifying and deceiving the enemy, he carried in his combat train a supply of decoys. These he placed at various points and retired to a strategic position, in the expectation that live ducks would see his decoys and come down to say "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year" to them. Brown intended to interrupt these amenities most abruptly.

Also forming part of the expedition was Christian, armed with double-barreled shotgun. Ducks, real ones, were approaching. Brown waited were approaching. Brown waited tensely. Thoughts of a big dinner and brown gravy flitted through his head. Bang! went Christian's gun. And then again, Bang! Christian's aim was true. Both bar-rels took effect — on Brown's best decoy.

Gold Digger

During the holidays Miss Daisy Reed took a job in Columbus. "But I don't see how you make any-thing out of 'it," said Lt. Royce to Miss Reed. "By the time you pay for transportation down and back, and buy your lunch all the profit will be gone your lunch, all the profit will be gone. You are just working hard for nothing."

It's not as bad as that," said Miss Reed. "In fact, some one has always given me a free ride to and from Columbus. And so far I have been taken out to lunch every day. So you see."

Ere the new year is many weeks old, the Post Gym will be echoing and reechoing with the shouts and cheers of the backers of their favorite basketball team. 'Tis true that before that time there will be many games played there by the Musketeer quint. The real interest of the organizations will come when the Battalion leagues and the Intra-Mural league start their fracas. The Artillery will be well represented in both classes this season. Their teams have been working hard for the past three weeks, and are rounding into good shape.

The boxing team is showing vast improvements over last week. Some of the youngsters have advanced to that stage where they can pary and counter-punch with accuracy that will be surprising to some. The lighter weights look the best so far, but the heavies will no doubt show them what can be done about it.

I have followed the bridle paths of the garrison on this quest for drama I have browsed through the Academic Library, in all modesty can say I have been everywhere and seen everything and I know that the drama is not passing. It is being played all around us daily.

For example, who, having attended a picnic at the Academic or Tank camps would dare to say without fear of contradiction that drama, yea, melodrama and even lyric romance is not to be found there. And at Mary's Falls on a warm summer afternoon when the soft breezes murmur through the pines ,the little birds murmur from their nests, tragedy!

At certain of the local clubs, drama in plural quantities may be found by those who thirstily search for it. Terpsichore in modern form is represented by the fair sex both on the floor and off. dance? The more artistic side of our life is indeed secure. Yes. Regardless of the possible de-cline of the professional drama, I am convinced that the drama is safe in the hands of our contemporaries. It does indeed surround us completely. The Lord High Constable provides enough drama to satisfy the most exacting but what little he misses is made up for by the activities of his minions. Witness the ever-recurring drama at Biglerville when the beautiful date turns out to be a hopeless dancer. And the gallant array of scarlet coats scampering over hill and dale or perhaps dale and hill under the watchful eye of the suave Sir Roger.

Drama? Who can say nay? Christmas have came and went. The bills are in. What drama! What

All burns which are very deep or which cover a good deal of surface, or in which shock is severe require the doctor. First of all treat shock if it is present. Then try to stop pain by protecting the burn from the air.

Quite a few of the men took advan-tage of this season of the year to go home and visit the folks. From those we have heard from, it seems that they are having a "huge" time.

It seems that Doug LaPine, who was formerly formerly a member of Headquarters Battery has taken Christmas in the fantastic manner this year, judging from the comic Christmas Greeting Card we received from him. More power to him and may we hear from him more often.

These are two distinct and different conditions which require different treatment.

Heat exhaustion — the patient feels weak and faint. His pulse is feeble and rapid. He breathes rapidly and per-spires. Usually he does not become un-conscious. His temperature is only slightly above normal or subnormal. The skin is cool and down skin is cool and damp. Treatment: Usually rest in a cool place is sufficient. A little hot coffee or half a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a little water may be given.

If the temperature is below normal, 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit, keep the patient warm with hot water bottles and tient warm with not water bottles and blankets. If the patient does not re-cover rapidly send for the doctor. Heat stroke (Sun stroke): In this condition you have headache, dizziness, and nausea before the attack. Sometimes even without these symptoms the victim suddenly becomes unconscious. His face is flushed, the skin is dry and the temperature is high. Wild delirium is not uncommon.

Treatment: This must be prompt and often heroic. Loosen the tight clothing and move to a cool place. Cold sponges, cold sprays, ice water baths, or ice packs may be necessary to reduce the tempera-ture. In this condition treatment by a doctor is needed at once.

CHRISTMAS DANCES PLEASE

Mrs. Inez Allen, Benning hostess, en-tertained at Service Club No. 1, with two dances on Christmas Day. Begin-Beginning at two-thiry in the afternoon, the young people enjoyed a round dance that ended at seven o'clock. Music for this dance was furnished by the Scillio Miti orchestra of the 29h Infantry, and their first appearance was a tremendous success.

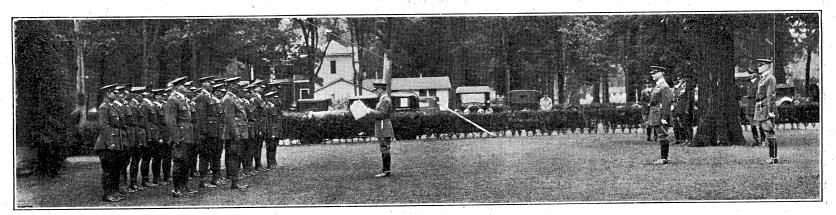

At eight-thirty in the evening, a string band composed of army talent, rendered such well known numbers as "Cotton-Eyed Joe," "Billy in the Lowlands" and other popular old time selections. With a boy from back up in the hills of north Georgia calling the figures, the merry makers enjoyed an old fashioned square dance until the midnight hour. Both dances were a huge success and every one enjoyed an evening of pleasure. Thanks to Mrs. Allen and the musicians.

BENNING IN 1930 THE YEAR OF SPORTS AT TANK SWIMMING TEAM

The past season of sports, outdoor and indoor at Fort Benning, has been one featured by quality, quantity and that one thing that is the greatest of all achievements, success. From an obsolete army camp of ten years are Fort Ber achievements, success. From an obsolete army camp of ten years ago, Fort Ben-ning stands out today as the world's greatest Infantry school and the most modernized army post in the United States Army. Sports here have kept pace with other advancements and today there is no doubt that Fort Benning has an undisputed claim to first place in an undisputed claim to first place in practically every branch of army sports.

Polo

Polo Fort Benning officers riding a r m y mounts, have made polo history for Fort Benning during the past two years, and in the mean time have ridden to victory over the leading civilian and army polo-ists in the country. With one of the strongest aggrega-tions ever produced in the south, the Fort Benning Malletmen of 1929-30, swept through four tournaments to championships and then startled the polo world by fighting their way to the semiworld by fighting their way to the semi-finals in the open Twelve Goal Tourna-ment held at Chicago.

ment held at Chicago. At Washington during the past June, the Benning Malletmen fought their way to the finals in the Infantry Association Polo Tournament, but were defeated for the championship by the 'Third Cavalry in a fast game, 5 to 4. Prior to their defeat in Washington, the Fart Banning policits had won the

Prior to their defeat in Washington, the Fort Benning poloists had won the Regular Army Championship of the Fourth Corps Area and the Corps Area Championship, held at Atlanta. The hard riding "Galloping Gunners", 83d Field Artillery, fought their way to the Fort Benning championship in the Intra-Mural play during the past sea-son. During the Intra-Mural season, Benning and Columbus polo fans are able to witness two fast games of polo, each Sunday afternoon. With the fast able to witness two fast games of polo, each Sunday afternoon. With the fast brand of polo that is displayed by the Fort Benning riders, polo, a hitherto unknown game in this section of the country, is now one of the most popular sports at the Infantry School.

Football

The spectacular championship football battle between "Terrible Tankers" of the Second Battalion, 1st Tank Regt. and the "Kellys" of the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry, at the Doughboy Stadium, Dec. 17, 1930, drew the curtain on one of the hardest-counterted Dec. 17, 1930, drew the curtain on one of the hardest-fought, closest-contested series ever witnessed in the Fort Ben-ning Intra-Mural league. Every game was a fierce battle that lasted from the opening whistle until the final gun. The Black Pirates of the Special Units

The Black Pirates of the Special Units made their initial entry into the league, and although green and unexperienced, the black jersied Pirates showed a fight-ing spirit that gained them the admira-tion of fans and opponents, and al-though they failed to win a game, they carried the oval across the goal line of every team in the league. The "Galloping Gunners", 83d F. A., and "Fighting Irishmen", 1st Bn., 29th Inf., were represented by hard hitting teams that were only nosed out of pen-nant honors after a hard and fiercely fought games.

nant honors after a hard and hercely fought games. "The "Happy Hearts" of the 24th Infantry got away to a bad start in their opening game and dropped games to the strong Tuskegee Institute, Morris Brown and Clarke University. They began to hit their stride near mid-season and turned in victories over Knoxville Col-lege and the Chattanooga Panthers.

Boxing

Boxing Fighters from the Fort Benning box-ing stable stand out head and shoulders above the leading professional fighters in the south. Today the light heavy-weight championship of the south is open for argument between two men and these are "Corn' Griffin of the second Battalion, and Walker (Cyclone) Smith of the First Battalion, 29th Infantry. Staff Sergt. "Kelly" Kjelstrom, 2nd Bn., Hdq. Co., 29th Infantry, has been one of the outstanding factors in the tremendous success of the Second Bats of the 29th Infantry on the field of ath-letics for the past seven years. His popularity is demonstrated by the fact that baseball and football teams of the Second Bats are known as the Kellys.

The boxing fever has spread like wild fire at Fort Benning in recent years and at the present time there are very few neuroscience that do not be on the breach youngsters that do not know the knack of handling gloves. The interest in box-ing has been a big factor in developing and conditioning many of the youngsters, for once they begin attending the box-ing classes at the gymnasium most of them continue to take a big interest in the work.

the work. Baseball Old King Baseball still rules supreme. True enough Fort Benning fans are in-terested in every branch of clean sports, but baseball is the favorite. During the long summer months the Benning fan may witness two games of baseball at Gowdy Field each afternoon, except when it rains. The Intra-Mural league is composed of battalion teams, represented by play-ers that know and play the game. The Baby League is composed of the smaller units and second teams from the battal-ions. so close that the season ended in a three cornered tie between the Medicos, Baby Tankers and Engineers. The Medicos took the rag after a spectacular series. In the Intra-Mural league, the Tank-ers took the first half in a walk. The "Kellys" came back strong and took the lost half. In the not season series the last half. In the post season series the "Kellys" took three out of five for the championship.

The Happy Hearts of the 24th Infan-try upheld their past reputation with victories over the Birmingham Black Barons, Brooklyn Cuban Giants, Atlanta Grey Socks, Tuskegee Institute, Morris Brown College, Clarke University and other colored teams.

A regimental company league also fur-nished interest and excitement in the 24th Infantry during the past season. Com-pany "A" took first honors after a sea-son that was replete with hard hitting and fast playing. Soccer Soccer is still in its infancy at Fort

Benning. Five teams competed last sea-son with the Bridgebuilders from the 7th Engineers, taking first honors. This season there have been nine teams enter-ed and there will probably be one game each day at the Doughboy Stadium when the season gets under way. No doubt soccer will come into its own

He will no doubt lead the Tanker drive in many more games .

WILLIE PTOMEY IS HURT WHEN TRUCK HITS TEAM; FIGHT CARD CALLED OFF

Motor Stops With Boxer's Leg Under Wheels; Crash Near Post Exchange

Private "Willie" Ptomey, Headquar-ters Battery, 83rd F. A., well-known Benning light heavyweight boxer, suf-fered severe lacerations and shock, and possibly a fractured leg in an accident Thursday morning about 8:05 a. m., on Hall street near the Post Exchange Grocery Grocery Ptomey, driving an escort wagon, was about to cross the railroad tracks, when his horses became frightened at an ap-proaching railroad derrick. Ptomey, jumping down from the driver's seat, stood by his horses' heads to quiet them, when a civilian truck, belonging to J. L. Miller and driven by Charlie Yates, suddenly cut around from the rear of Ptomey's wagon and crashed into Ptom-Ptomey's wagon and crashed into Ptom-Ptomey's wagon and crashed into Ptom-ey and the horse he was holding, knock-ing Ptomey to the ground, and frighten-ing the animals, causing them to run away. Ptomey was pinned to the ground, his lower right leg having been caught under the wheel of the truck. Having accidentally killed his engine, the truck driven had to start un his engine again driver had to start up his engine again before he could free Ptomey. Ptomey was rushed to the Station

Hospital.

Ptomey had been scheduled to meet Gunner DePratt in the main event of a fight card Tuesday night. As a result of the accident, it was decided to hold the finals of the Ben-ning amateur tournament Tuesday night instead of the scheduled bouts.

MRS. STEEL GETS HER TURKEY AGAIN The Major Scores at Same Time SHOT AT 30 YARDS IS SUCCESSFUL

10.0 M (C)

Mrs. Charles L. Steel got her turkey again!

She is the only lady who has accomp-lished this feat at Benning and this is the third year she has done it.

Incidentally, Major Steel got his tur-key at the same time. It all happened on December 30 beyond Ochiliee. For six or seven days, the Major and Mrs. Steel had gone out in the morning, tak-ing lunches and spending the day in a blind. Nothing, absolutely nothing happened.

On December 30 about 4 p. m., Major and Mrs. Steel were just about ready to call turkey-shooting an obsolete form of amusement, and were preparing to return to Benning; whereupon appeared three turkeys strolling toward the blind. They ambled nonchalantly to just outaway. For 200 yards, they moved in the wrong direction— and then turned back toward the blind.

When they were within 30 yards, Ma-jor Steel told Mrs. Steel to fire. She shot, breaking her turkey's wings, and as it started to run, fired again, thus getting her quota of turkey. Major Steel dropped his turkey as it took to the air. third flew straight over the blind. The

Mrs. Steel's prize was a 19-pounder. The Major's weighed 18 pounds. In 1928, Mrs. Steel got a 19-pound turkey and in 1929 a 20-pounder.

For proof see accompanying illustration.

Honoring Mrs. O. N. Johnson and Miss Ella-Keene Johnson of Terrynan, Miss Ella-Keene Johnson of Terrynan, Maryland, Major and Mrs. Charles L. Steel are tonight giving a wild turkey dinner at their quarters, at which the piece de resistance will be a nineteen pound gobbler shot by the hostess, Mrs. Steel, herself. Attractive miniature pic-tures of the Steels bringing in their two turkeys, each picture gaily decorated with a turkey quill feather, will mark the places of the guests who are: Gen-eral and Mrs. Campbell King. In the first series of games of the 1931 polo season the Freebooters and the 29th Musketeers played an exciting game to a 3-3 tie, Sunday afternoon at French Field.

French Field. Although the Freebooter "big four" was in the saddle it was unable to romp away to victory. "Lil" Lyman was heard to say that he had played his darnedest or words to that effect but the Jacobs, Carmouche, Skelton, Strickler, Trent combination matched Freebooter plays of every turn of the game at every turn of the game. Major Arnold, although riding under Freebooter colors, proved to be the best player the Musketeers had. By two inopportune fouls he gave two free shots for goal to the 29th which were scored by Jacobs and Carmouche respectively. Strickler drove the willow pellet through the goal posts to tie the score in the 6th particle period.

Major Lyman netted two and Major Arnold one goal for the Freebooters, who were represented on the field by Lyman, Arnold, Thompson, Sweet and Lockett.

In the second game of the afternoon, the nonchalant scoring of the students against the crack 83d Field Artillery team made everyone wonder what had team made everyone wonder what had happened to the cannoneer four until closer examination of their lineup re-vealed the absence of the Baker gold dust twins. The final score of this game was: Students, 9; 83rd F. A., 2. The Students scored as follows: Marine Corps Brooks (1), Dulaney (4), Pierce (1), Newman (2) and Artillery Bevan (1). Draper and McNair counted one each for the connoneers. Two games will be played Sunday af-

WHY BENNING LEAVES HOME TO EAT; MRS. BRINE GETS THANKS OF OFFICERS' CLUB

The smooth functioning and smoother cooking noted at the Officers' C.I.u.b grill and club suppers at the Polo Club has been explained by a recent resolu-tion of the Board of Governors of the Club.

For quite a while credit was given to Capt. Eugene L. Brine by the thought-less but now it all come out. Mrs. Eugene L. Brine has given of her personal time daily in actual cooking and super-vising. No wonder. The resolution which was sent to Mrs. Brine accompanied by an evidence of material appreciation was as follows:

Brine accompanied by an evidence of material appreciation, was as follows: "Resolved that the voluntary services of Mrs. Eugene L. Brine in connection with the Club Grill and the catering service of the Club, have contributed in an important manner to the success of these activities and one deeply appreciat these activities and are deeply appreciat-ed by the Board of Governors."

Dear Eddie:

My, my, the happy vacation is over, and all the little school boys are back in school again. Just between you and and all the little school boys are back in school again. Just between you and me, Eddie, I am darn glad to be back and get away from all the hauling of ashes and coal. In fact, Eddie, it's real-ly a great relief to get back to the serious pursuits of life, such as I wit-nessed Tuesday afternoon when the 29th Infantry demonstrated some extended order formations of a machine gun pla-toon for us. Gee, it was great to see the boys all serious and intent on the work at hand. Brother Gilmartin had a jam jar with a green snake inside. Really we had more fun letting people open up the jam jar. Out would pop the snake. Sister Burgess nearly jumped 9 feet in the air. And brother Brady, what fun we had putting grass in his coat, unfortunately he got wise just as Van Moseley was about to really deco-rate him. This is sure a great school, for our intense inattention the class was rewarded by being let off a half hour early. We have also had another lecture

We have also had another lecture from the erudite Medico, Col. Stayer. We have progressed from the medical detachment to the Medical Regiment. Very complex, very complete, very con-cise it takes up 2 and a half miles of cise, it takes up 2 and a half miles of road space, that is it would, but the Coi explained that it was never held together as ົa_unit∵

Following the demonstration on Tuesday a few convivial souls gathered to-gether to celebrate the coming of the Easter holiday. Somewhere in the course of the evening the following poem, en-tirely inspired by the lectures of Col. Stayer, was evolved. The author being a modest soul, I take great pleasure in presenting and dedicating to Col. Morrison Stayer:

The Medico's Dream

The medical regiment doesn't exist. It can't be found on the army list. But when the nation engages in strife, And the boys march out to the shrill of the fife; Then the melical regiment comes to life And I'll be Division Surgeon.

The escort wagons two by two,

The horse-drawn ambulances too. The Vet takes post at a highway junction, If you have a sick mule, he'll begin to function, De Lawd help him if he lacks gumption. When I am Division Surgeon.

I'll give the wounded a tetanus shot, And a tag for those who've begun to rot.

We'll locate water for the troops to drink,

On the C. G.'s Staff I'll be a big "Gink." And nothing had better go on the blink

When I am Division Surgeon.

What I want is evacuation,

That's what's going to save the nation. A dressing station of a thousand beas, Can be quickly set up in a few old sheds;

To care for the wounded Blues and Reds.

When I am Division Surgeon.

The walking wounded will be no bother They can get to the rear some way or other.

What I want are surgical cases, Withbroken arms and scarred up faces. Simple, I'll send them back to the hos-pital bases.

rary club (that is really dedicated to the pursuit of literature) and get my let-ter to you written without thumping a single key on the typewriter.

The Marines are sure bragging about Lt. Bell. Mother and child are doing fine, but what they are proud of is the way the father stood the ordeal. The hospital has very kindheartedly decided not to make Bell buy the strip of lin-oleum that he paced up and down on. Shortly after the ceremony Bell con-fessed to his bosom friends that in his opinion the baby was anything but a beauty, in fact that he thought that it beauty, in fact that he thought that it was quite homely. Just then a nurse-rushed up, "Oh, Lt. Bell, your baby is certainly a striking image of you." Eddie, you should have been here Tuesday morning. We were undergoing instruction in the mysteries of overhead fire safety rules from Capt. Wharton, when in comes none other than Col. Marshall. Uh. Uh. It seems that the faculty were in a hole, they were mak-ing out the schedule for next year, and they did not know whether to devote a they did not know whether to devote 5 hours or simply 15 minutes to the teachhours or simply 15 minutes to the teach-ing of the rules for safety in overhead fire. The Col. needed expert advice, so he put it right up to the members of the class. There was only one hitch in the proceedings, and that was that the experts in the class could not agree. Some was for and some was agin. Ohr-bom, he thought 15 minutes was way too little: he'd spent the entire Christmas little; he'd spent the entire Christmas holidays studying the rules and still couldn't understand them. You know, Eddie, in the first place I would not admit that I'd studied on a holiday, and I know I'd never admit that I still couldn't understand the subject, if I had. Wayne Smith thought that 15 minutes was enough, he couldn't understand lectures anyway, and had to get it out of the book by the sweat of his brow. Capt. Chrisman in a very dramatic speech plead for the longer period,

"Anybody can ride a horse, if you have to pull a Sheridan, get on a horse and go. Anyone can throw a grenade, just like a baseball, they don't have to try the approved solution to know that, but a lot of us don't come from Chicago and have never seen a machine gun." Vesey have never seen a machine gun." Vesey delivered a phillipic. In ringing tones he stated his case. On and on he went. Rounded periodics tumbled one after the other and still he was going strong. The Col. tried to interrupt on several occasions, but Vesey had gotten into his stride and was not to be stopped. At last he was finished he sat cown his stride and was not to be stopped. At last he was finished, he sat down. Col. Marshall said a few words. Vesey was back on his feet again. I'll bet he has flat feet by now. Anyway it was a great session. I got up to make a few remarks myself, but met myself sitting down. The words would not come. The Colonel asked members of the class who had any ideas on the school to come in and see him in his office. The next afand see him in his office. The next af-ternoon we have equitation will probably find most of the class there. If the Col. really wants to know what's wrong with the school I'll tip him off. It's either this delightful party.

During the Christmas holidays the Infantry School Hunt held four meetings —a Paper Chase and a Drag Hunt (reported on last week), a Cat Hunt and a Controlled Ride, not to mention a very snappy bridge party (see below). This varied program proved most popular, bringing out more than 160 members.

By the light of pine torches thirty-eight officers and ladies found the Horse Show Cabin at 4:30 a. m., on the last day of the old year. Fortified by coffee and doughnuts they mounted up and left the show ring long before dawn.

Not until the swamps along Trestrail Creek were reached did the field pause, while the Huntsman cast the twenty-two hounds of the live pack. The heavy frost made hunting difficult and the pack was called in and moved to McMurrin Creek where another cast was made. Here the trail of a large cat was quickly picked James Grier and Lieut. Thomas Drake. Seated together at a "dutch treat" table were: Maj. and Mrs. Edwin Hard-ing, Maj. and Mrs. Henry B. Lewis, Maj. and Mrs. Dennis McCunniff, Maj. and Mrs. Casper Rucker, Capt. and Mrs. William Tuttle, Capt. and Mrs. Arthur Nevins, Capt. and Mrs. Walter C. Phil-ips, Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Pierce, Lieut. and Mrs. Eugene Ridings, Lieut. and Mrs. Harvey Golightly, Lieut. and Mrs. Thomas Timberman, Lieut. and Mrs. Donald Brann and Mrs. Fiske. * * * up.

The field tried to follow but were un able to cross the creek and keep up with the pack. Besides the sun was high and the thought of the breakfast to be served at Mary's Falls was becoming paramount in most minds. And none too soon did those who had ridden twenty miles for breakfast arrive, as a large "Clan-destine Field," trotting directly from Stables to Sausages joined the hungry hunters, just as the coffee boiled.

We announce with pride that our sturdy Huntsman was not seduced by sausages but kept on with the chase until 4 p. m., when he was rewarded by getting a large cat at almost the exact spot where the field had quit the trail.

On January 2nd, 36 officers and ladies looked out upon a frosty morning and nothing daunted were on their way from the stables shortly after 8 o'clock for a the stables shortly after 8 o'clock for a "controlled ride" to the Academic Camp. The field moved in two groups along the First Division Road to Harmony Church, thence to the high ground east of Ochillee and to McBride's Ford on the Upatoi. The Pathe News missed a a good picture at this point. Major Williams might have been seen trying to force his mount across the stream. He is nonchalantly passed by Captain to force his mount across the stream. He is nonchalantly passed by Captain Horan on his latest favorite, "Import." Captain Hutson's horse, willing as a water rat, steps into a hole in mid-stream and his rider takes a sudden, chilly bath. Meanwhile Captain Wood stands upon the shore, waving the lift line and shouting advice but no one in the picture seems to be heeding him.

Arriving at the Academic Camp the field found fires burning and a sweet aroma of coffee blended with the smell of the piney woods. The return trip was or the piney woods. The return trip was made without any unwelcome surprises, except for the order that all dismount and lead their horses for 10 minutes. As Mrs. Bodine remarked, that was the longest 10 minutes of the day. Her guests on this occasion were: Mrs. Morrison Stayer, Mrs. Wright Brown, Mrs. Harry Wells, Mrs. George Reed, Mrs. Ernest Jones, Mrs. Will McKee, Mrs. Robert Smith, Mrs. Dudley Spain, Mrs. Foster Harley, Mrs. Marshall Well-born, Mrs. Willis Battle, Mrs. Claude Scarborough, Mrs. Andrew Prather, Mrs. Abbott Turner, Mrs. Elliott Waddell, Mrs. E. But all is not beer and skittles with the Infantry School Hunt. A call was A call was issued for volunteers to build a bridge on January 4th, thereby opening up new country to the south of the reservation country to the south of the reservation for future hunts. So instead of enjoy-ing a snappy Sunday morning Drag Hunt, some twenty officers, augmented by all the junior members of the Arnold family, met at the corner of Yankee Road and the Keystone Trail. With much talking and expressing of opinions the necessary trees were felled.

opinions the necessary trees were felled, laid across the Oswichee Creek and soon the bridge was completed. Each of the officers might well be nominated for the Hall of Fame for the work done that morning but we particularly wish to nominate Major Hoge; not because he is the husband of anyone, nor that he can lay a drag course, nor build chil-dren's schools, but because when it comes to bridge parties, he is the hardest worker of them all.

GARAGE OUTRAGE EXPOSED

The Officers' Club Octopus, that many tentacled monster which reaches into the pockets of the commissioned masses to the tune of three large smackers a month and gives back nothing in return except golf, tennis, trap shooting, polo, hunts, hops, etc. in addition to the customary club features, has abandoned the lucrative garage business. No more will the downtrodden proletariat of Blocks 14 and 15 dig down in its jeans every month to pay for stabling the family Lincolns, Buicks, Packards and Super Fords in a manner befitting their elegant appointments. No more will the financially harassed defenders of the nation stand monthly on the verge of mutiny because of the garage rental item on the club bill. Henceforth all garages from the tumbledown shacks in Block 23 to the subterranean Chute-the-Chute flivver kennels of the new quarters are free, for on January 1st the Officers Club turned over-its seventy odd garages to the Quartermaster and formally retired from the thankless enterprise upon which it embarked seven years ago.

With a view to exposing the grasping nature of the Officers' Club, we decided to make an investigation of the matter and publish to the world the tale of enormous profits which have been derived from the garage racket. We have always understood that the garages had been paid for five times over and that the profits were being used to buy pink coats for the Infantry School Hunt Club officials. We therefore gave our trained corps of expert accountants and our most efficient fact-finding sleuths CARTE BLANCHE and told them to go to it.

We print below the damning results of our investigation.

The sum total of the garage rent charged during the period of operation by the Officers Club comes to the astounding total of $17,074.72.

The initial cost of the garages, plus upkeep and interest on the investment comes to a miserable $17,031.43.

The profit of the Club reaches the staggering figure of $43.29, which represents an annual profit of $6.18.

True, the Club in putting up the garages rendered a fine service to the community, but we see no reason for extolling this purely selfish act. As everybody knows, any right thinking Commandant would have been glad to encourage officers living in the brick quarters to construct, from scrap lumber and salvage tin, garages which, by expressing the unique artistic ideas of the individual builders, would add greatly to the beauty of the post.

Moreover, whatever service the Club performed in erecting the garages has been more than repaid by the appreciative remarks made by the outraged brick quarters dwellers every time they paid the garage rent item on the Club bill. This conclusion is fully substantiated by the refusal of the Club to accede to a petition to build garages in Blocks 21 and 23. The Board of Governors, knowing from bitter experience how deeply subsequent occupants appreciate such a service, sternly refused to run the risk of being overwhelmed with gratitude.

Besides, as everybody knows, our government—which is well aware that we live in a motor car age-would have taken care of the matter if the Officers' Club had not stepped in. By 1980, every set of quarters would have had its garage.

This expose' of the garage rent heldup convinces us that the other profiteering charges which have been made against the Officers' Club can be equally well substantiated. For the moment, we have exhausted our supply of editorial invective but we have not yet said our say as regards the other Club activities. Our next attack, when and if made, will show how the Officers' Club charges the outrageous sum of thirty-six dollars a year for very little more than a thrifty millionaire enjoys for a paltry five hundred.

HOLIDAY SPIRIT

"Do your Christmas kissing early"—Mulhall. Mistletoe was much in evidence during the holidays and the Blunder-buss heartily indorses its use as a motif for Christmas decoration. It is a great boon to timid souls, like the co-conductors of this column, whose inhibitions compel them to keep their kissing within conventional bounds. Like Spin the Pan, Post Office, New Year's Eve, and kissing the bride at a wedding, it constitutes a thoroughly conventional excuse for obeying a perfectly normal impulse which, if allowed to run riot, might upset estab-lished custom and unloose more joy in the world than our self-appointed censors of other people's morals are prepared to approve. Bold, free spirits need no mistletoe but the average common or garden

Bold, free spirits need no mistletoe but the average common or garden variety of the genus homo sapiens requires something of the sort to start him. Once started he may go far. Witness the performance of the dis-tinguished Explorer, Professor McCunniff, at the Grier-Burbach wedding. Kissing being in the air, the Professor became inspired and kissed the Rissing being in the air, the Professor became inspired and Rissed the entire bridal party, except the ushers and Colonel Grier. In his enthus-iasm he almost kissed the photographer who was getting the camera ready to take the flash light picture. The Professor's feat was unquestionably one of the outstanding kissing achievements of the season but we are compelled to withhold our citation until we get the consolidated reports on Mulhall's activities at the New Year's Eve party at the Country Club.

Slide Rules and Shovels

Once upon a time Colonel Bond, au-thor of the phrase "A slide rule in the hands of infantry is a dangerous weapon," wrote upon a paper submit-ted by a student at the Infantry School School:

"Slide rules for engineers - shovels for infantry.

The infantry mind has always re-sented this attitude and occasionally gets something concrete to bolster up its own opinion of itself. As for example:

The Hunt was doing a bit of bridging-not auction or contract, you un-derstand but engineering kind of bridging. So of course Major Hoge was there.

And the time came when in the course of human events it became desirable to throw a timber hitch around a piece of timber and move it from here to there. Up stepped Major Hoge and applied the knot exactly as per Engineer Field Manual (or some other learned Engineering document). instructions.

Unfortunately when the rope was pulled, the log remained in place, and the rope slipped. Major Hoge tried again with the same result. Maj. Hoge scratched his head.

scratched his head. Then out stepped Major Taylor. "I don't know much about Engin-eer timber hitches," he said, "but here's a doughboy hitch." And he made a turn or two about the log, stepped back and said, "When do we eat?" and the log came rolling right along. right along. Colonel Bond, please note.

Another Unsolved Mystery

When Comrade St. John replaced the broken windshield after his acci-dent last fall it was to be expected that he would insall shatter proof glass.

The dashing Commisar did even better than that, however, for the glass installed was not only shatter but bullet proof. The Blunderbuts, not wishing to spoil what looked likt a front-page story for some later issue did not pub-lish the fact at the time. Three months have elapsed, however, and nothing has developed to confirm our suspicion that Comrade St. John's unusual precaution was a safety-first measure adopted in anticipation of some contemplated home wrecking en-terprise. We therefore list the Com-missar's bullet proof windshield in our growing catalog of unsolved mysteries.

ADDITIONAL 24TH NOTES

PROGRESS AT 24TH POOL

Work has been resumed at the 24th Infantry swimming pool following the holiday layoff. The road for conveying gravel and other materials to the job, has been completed, as has the narrow gauge railroad. The concrete nixer is being put in position for use beginning next week. Excavation of the under-pass flume from storage reservoir to the The bottom gate in the tower has been cut lower to accomodate the under pass flow. A difficult item in the supply of materials is gravel. This item must be hauled by trucks from gravel deposits located far from the post, and consti-tutes one of the most difficul problems to date. It is planned to push the work in order to open by warm weather.

Capt. and Mrs. Remington entertained Monday evening with a bridge party for the newer arrivals among the officer personnel of the 24th Infantry. Their quarters were attractively decorated, and arrangments made to accomodate four tables of bridge. Refreshments were served.

The holidays certainly did rest up the Tankers for the events of the coming year if Monday night's performance is an indicator. The Tank Officers' Bowling Team stepped out into fame again by safely putting the high team score twenty-five pins higher than the previous high score. The team held the Post record a month ago with a 914. Two weeks later the I. S. D. raised that score 22 points. Not to be outdone by them, and completely rested after the holidays, the Tankers put the high team score up to 961 where it is expected to remain for some time. Major Kingremain for some time. HARD BOUTS IN AMATEUR TOURNEY; TEAM WILL FLY TO FLORIDA LATER

Benning Amateur Boxing Tournament proved to be fierce and furious affairs. The finals will be fought Tuesday night.

Knockouts have come thick and fast. Quite a few of the bouts have ended in the first round, others have been so close that it was necessary for an extra round to bring a verdict.

The tournament has brought out a group of young leather pushers who show promise of breaking into the pro-fessional ranks after finishing the amateur season. The winners will form the Infantry

School Amateur Boxing Team that will represent Fort Benning in the South-eastern Amateur Boxing Tournament in Atlanta in March, and also meet college

Arianta in March, and also incer conege and other amateur teams. Plans have already been arranged for the team to go to Miami, Fla., to par-ticipate in bouts. This trip will be made by aeroplane and the famous "Question Mark," of record-breaking fame, will carry, the fem carry the team. Results of the first three nights are:

ENGINEERS WIN AT SOCCER; TANKERS AND CO. "H" TIE

Two games of soccer football were played at the Doughboy Stadium Wed-nesday afternoon. In the opening game the Engineers ran wild and easily de-fcated the Company "D" Tankers 4 to 0. Elliot was the outstanding star, three of the Engineer goals being scored by him.

The night-cap between the Machine Gunners of Company "H," 29th Infan-try and Company "E" of the Tankers, proved to be one of the greatest games of socrer football ever witnessed at the Stadium. The game ended in a 4-4 tie after an extra ten minute period had been played.

KELLYS HOLD FINAL SCRIMMAGE OF SEASON

Members of the Second Battalion, 29th Members of the Second Battalion, 29th Infantry football team of 1930 went into a final huddle last Friday night in the mess hall of Company "E," 29th Infan-try, but instead of facing a snarling Tanker line, the "Kellys" charged into a line of tables of fried chicken, Vir-rinia tham and other teatr mercals that ginia ham and other tasty morsels that went to complete the menu of the ban-quet given by Company "E," 29th In-fantry to the members of the Kelly football squad.

ALBANY BLUES WILL MEET MUSKETEERS TOMORROW

The Fort Benning Musketeers meet an old rival at the garrison gymnasium tomorrow night when they clash with the Albany Blue cagesters. These two teams have battled for the past seven years with honors fairly even. Last season the Musketeers took both games played. The game in Albany was a tor-rid 'affair with the Musketeers nosing out a victory by a one point margin. With Don Isham and Slim Schoell both playing well at center the Musketeers seem almost unbeatable at present. Johnny Roosma and Phil Draper will be at the forward positions with Mal Kammerer and Moonshine McAllister on duty at guard.

MULESKINNERS AND BABY TANKERS VICTORS IN MONDAY'S SOCCER GAMES

The "Muleskinners" of Co. "D," 29th Infantry and the "Baby Tankers" of Headquarters Co., 2nd Bn., First Tank Regiment, were the victors in Monday afternoon's soccer games at the Dough-boy Stadium boy Stadium. In the opening game, the Muleskinners took a thrilling contest from the "E" Company Tankers, by a 1 to 0 score. During the first, half, the two teams battled on even terms with both threat-ening on several occasions. No doubt the brilliant playing of Pendergrast, Muleskinner goal keeper, checked a Tanker score on several occasions.

In the final ten minutes of play, the Muleskinners worked the ball down the field to score on a beautiful series of cribbles and passes.

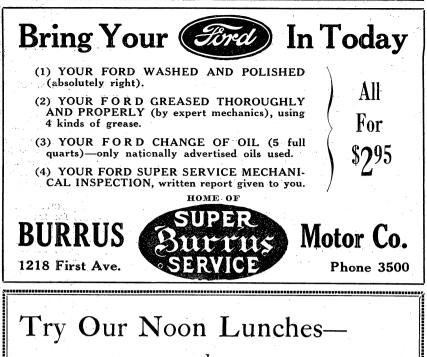

In the night-cap, the Baby Tankers went down to a 2 to 0 defeat at the hands of the Heavy Tankers of Com-pany "F," after a bitter struggle.

Both teams put up a great fight but experience told in favor of the Heavy Tankers. On several occasions, the Baby Tankers went into scoring position but could never break through the final line of defense.

THE HORSE SHOW CABIN

Inspired by the need of a place where the most informal of parties may be held and where the spectators at the many "horsey events" might have refresh-ments, the Horse Show Cabin was built at the Infantry School Stables.

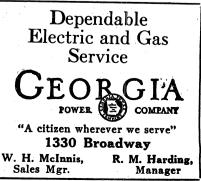

From the south porches of the Cabin good view is had of both Show Rings, while from the north porches a beautiful panorama is had of the valley of the Chattahoochee River. Built on the top of a ridge and partially screened by the surrounding trees, the Cabin is ideally situated.

Inside the Cabin the furnishings center around the large brick fireplace, fianked by built-in settees with dark red which are by built-in settless with dark red upholstering. At the other end of the main room is a completely equipped kitchen, with pots and pans, silver and china, everything for a party of as many as fifty people. Strange to say there are few rules for the use of this cabin; just few rules for the use of this cabin; just bring your food, get the key from the stable office and have your party. When you leave, wash the dishes, put out the fire and leave the key at the office. The Stable Commander will always have plenty of fire wood handy during the cool weather and see that the lights are on after dark on after dark.

The Cabin is just the place for the end of a mounted treasure hunt or an end of a mounted treasure hunt or an informal Sunday night supper. Refresh-ments are served during the Weekly Jumping Competitions and during the horse shows. It's just the thing Ben-ning has needed, a halfway place, be-tween an out-of-doors picnic at Jeff's Hole or a more formal party at the Polo-Hunt Club.

Upon completion of their tour of foreign service, the following officers are to report to Fort Benning for assign-ment to organizations here for duty until the opening of he Infantry School: 2nd Lt. John A. Dabney, Inf., and 2nd Lt. Earle L. Ringler, Inf.

2nd Lt. Thomas H. James, Inf., has been assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regt., Fort Benning, to take ef-fect upon the completion of his present tour of foreign service.

program at the Woman's Club Monday was an especially good one. Mrs. Bass Lewis, of Columbus, sang. Mrs. Lewis was accompanied by Mrs. B. C. Bennett, also of Columbus. The Fort Benning Woman's Club greatly ap-preciates the willingness of the women of Columbus to assist with its programs.

Mrs. Charlton Hudson of Columbus spoke on lyric poetry.

Mrs. Hudson in speaking of the test for real poetry, said that to her mind the only test was the desire it produced on the reader to familiarize herself with on the reader to familiarize herself with it, to commit it to memory, to make it part of herself, its suitability to repeat to one's self during a sleepless night and gain pleasure therefrom. Major Truman Smith gave a talk on "The Development of Post-War Germ-any." He spoke of the fear in France of Germany's rising again to power and of Germany's rising again to power and explained very thoroughly the overnight change in the whole fabric of German government just two days before the armistice.

Major Smith mentioned the extraor-dinary change, not only in the form of government, but also the change of pow-er from one governing class to another and the fearful results thus produced. A change of government is rarely a change of the whole fabric of the State but in Germany it was and in 1918 there but in Germany it was and in 1918 there went into power people of no exper-ience in politics, foreign relations, fi-nance and other essentials. The result was the tragic conditions of 1919—the inflation of the currency, etc. Germany has the United States and Mr. Dawes in part to thank for her present sta-bility as well as for the more rational a mount of the reparations now demanded. demanded.

demanded. Major Smith mentioned the fact that there were three things which rankled sorely in the German mind: (1) the loss of upper Silesia with its wealth of coal and steel; (2) the loss of Danzig and surrounding territory which has cut the German nation in two and has left East Prussia, agriculturally its richest district, with no connection with the rest district, with no connection with the rest of the country; (3) German belief in a desire among some of the allies to keep Germany a secondary power. Major Smith said the Opal automo-bile works were practically a subsidiary of General Motors, that the A. E. G (electrical plants) was financially 40 per cent American and the German Steel Trust 35 per cent. He also spoke of Streseman's negotiations with Briand and of the former's unfortunate death and of the former's unfortunate death before the completion of his aim which was peaceful cooperation with France. As things now stand Germany demands that France should drop her alliance with Poland, who must be made to re-turn Danzig and Silesia, and Czecho-Slovakia, if she is to enter one with Germany, and France has refused.

In order to return to power Germany must have allies, economically. The United States is an economic ally at present, and Russia is close to her de-spite Communism which Germany spite abhors.

History of the 2d Infantry, U. S. Army

By Frederick B. Shaw

The scope of this book, according to the author, is an attempt to cover every event worth recording in the history of the 2d Infantry, of which the facts could be discovered, and in such a manner that it would give a real picture of the superit would give a real picture of the events themselves and of the times in which they were enacted.

In his effort to give a picture of the times, the author digresses far from the history of the 2d Infantry. He traces instory of the 2d Infantry. He traces in considerable detail the early develop-ment of our Army; he gives intensely interesting pictures of the frontier life as our pioneers pushed westward, and vivid accounts of the resulting conflicts' with the Indians; he discusses the cause of our various wars up to the World of our various wars up to the World War.

War. The book is largely a compilation from the writings of others, but represents extensive independent research. The author attempts to link the present 2d Infantry with the 2d Infantry organized in 1791. This is not in accordance with the facts as they have been established by the War Department. In the reorby the War Department. In the reor-ganization of the Army in 1815, the 2d Infantry of 1791 was consolidated with three other regiments to form the pres-ent 1st Infantry. The present 2d In-fantry was formed at that time by the consolidation of four other regiments, the oldest of which dates back to 1808, and this date is therefore the earliest date to which the present 2d Infantry can trace its existence. The book is instructive and entertaining and should be a big factor in maintaining the esprit de corps of the 2d Infantry.

WESTWARD, THE ROMANCE OF THE AMERICAN FRONTIER

By E. Douglas Branch

A comprehensive account of the westward march of exploration and development from colonial days, when Massa-chuestts was West, to 1889 — the last skirmishes of the conquest. The book deals with the men who did the actual work, fighting, and settlement of the West West.

The author, however, dismisse the part played by the Army as a whole with a few sentences such as: "Between 1816 and 1819 the War Department linked the northern frontiers with a chain of five forts from Fort Smith, on the Arkansas River to Fort Snelling . . . Other gar-risons were established to keep belated pace with the movement of emigrants across the far rontier. Interrupted by Indian uprisings here and there, and by occasional reconnaissances into the wilderness, the little armies in the frontier posts went on with their discipline and training, day by day . . . The Civil War marked a period of Indian outbreaks throughout the West; and the frontier formulated a specific grievance against the Army. "The Indians weren't being killed off."

Major E. B. Allen, American Red Cross, reported to Fort Benning, on January 8, 1931. for permanent station in connection with American Red Cross activities, vice Major Frank Green, A. R. C., who recently terminated his connection with that organization.

Major Allen, who has had over twelve years service with the Red Cross comes to Fort Benning from Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, where he has been on duty for several years. He is a na-tive of Indiana, and has a married son living in Indianapolis.

Major and Mrs. Allen have been as-signed quarters in Block 40.

Major Allen is quite enthusiastic over Fort Benning. It is much larger than he expected, and the scope of Red Cross work at Benning presents unlimited possibilities for doing good work.

Major Green had been at Benning ten vears.

Fort Benning tank officers, who have read the recent reports of tests undergone by the New Christie Tank at Lin-den, N. J., January 9, have expressed themselves as being very much pleased,

According to reports appearing in the "New York Times" and the other daily papers, the new Christie war tank pow-

"The 24th Can Groom Explosive Now" CUSSED AND DISCUSSED MULE EXITS

"WE TOLD YOU SO" CHORTLES THE 83D

By Bernard B. Swayze

(Co-Conductors of "Blunder Bus-t" Please Note)

"A fool's a fool, but a mule's a mule until he dies," so the old plantation help used to tell me all the time. Every day I would find material proof of the last part of that old saying. Now that I am in the Army, I still find that both parts of that old adage prevail.

both parts of that old adage prevail. Some time ago, The Blunderbus carried a yarn about a gray mule, name of EXPLOSIVE, that the 83rd Field Artillery COULDN'T handle, same be-ing turned over to the 24th Infantry to see what they could do about it. Well, they have done good and plenty, I am here to tell you, and if you don't be-lieve it, just give the Vet. a ring, and he will tell you in no uncertain num-bers how it all came about. It was said that the Artillery could not groom said bundle of EXPLO-SUVES, which etatement went without dispute. It was further attact that SIVES, which statement went without dispute. It was further stated that said EXPLOSIVE had been hitched to an escort wagon, and was a well-be-haved, gentlemanly mule, of which latter there was never any such animal.

Let us tell you something. There might have been heaven in that mule's eyes, but there was nothing but pure, unadulterated H—l in his heart all the while. The 24th Infantry said they would groom that mule and have him as gentle as a lamb within a few weeks. Well, today, just two weeks since they procured him, said mule is gentler than a whole barn full of lambs, kids, cats, or what have you.

At this point, I just have to break into verse.

certain mule, Explosive, To us Gunners is corrosive With memories of kicks and bites and paws He caused us much hard labor

With the Battery he lost favor As he kicked us on the shins and pants and jaws.

Well, anyhow, they sent him over to the 24th, where they were to tame and otherwise handle him, and make him a useful citizen. Well—they couldn't clean his feet and pretty soon one of them was about twice as large as the rest.

Touching his feet they thought all wet

So they sent him to the Vet To have his feet refixed-up quite correctly

But Explosive had his notions

As to iodine and lotions And began negotiating right directly

And when I say negotiating, I mean tion. He kicked and bit and bucked, action. and broke the halter shank, headstall-and his own leg. Many things hap pened fast, in fact, as any Artilleryman could have told you.

As they took him off to rest He kicked a soldier in the chest

(Hospital case; remarks not Sunday School)

So the Vet took out his gun

And he plugged Explosive one Now the 24th can groom that pesky mule.

BENNING WEST POINT CANDIDATES ALL PASS IN FIRST EXAMINATION

Infantry School Representatives Top List in Fort McPherson Test

Word has been received that the ten candidates for West Point from Fort Benning have all successfully passed their examinations at Fort McPherson and will be retained in the Corps Area School until March 1st, when they will compete with the rest of the army for appointment to West Point.

This is the first time that every man nt from Fort Benning has successfully passed the December examinations and been kept at the Corps Area School. These men were selected by the Commandant from the leading candidates who attended a special coach-ing course conducted at this post during the past summer by Lt. Frederick Pearson, 29th Inf., Lt. L. P. Leone, Ist Tanks, and Lt. R. C. Cullen, Inf. (Stu-dent C. C. Course).

In the competition at Fort McPherson, there were twenty-nine candidates competing from the entire corps area. sixteen of whom were retained to take the final examination in March.

First, second, third, fourth, sixth and seventh places were won in the Corps Area School by candidates from Fort Benning, name, organization and standing of Fort Benning candidates at Fort McPherson are as follows: Pvt. Smith, G. R., Co. "G", 29th

Inf. Pvt. Austin, L. W., Co. "C", 29th

Pvt. Schumacher, G. F., Co. "C",

29th Inf. Pvt. Gunn, J. R., R. M. G. Co., 29th

Inf. Pvt. McGehee, J. L., Co. "E", 29th

Inf. Pvt. Foreman, A. H., Co. "E", 29th

Inf. Pvt. Yarborough, W. P., Hq. Co.,

Tanks. Pvt. Greer, A. J. jr., Hq. Co., Tanks. Pvt. Macy, W. E., Can. Co., 29th

Pvt. Bache, B. A., Co. "E", 29th Inf.

During the past two years thirtythree eligible men besides the above ten have availed themselves of the opportunity offered by the Commandant, The Infantry School, to attend the special coaching school conducted at this post each summer. Of this num-ber fifteen have won appointments to West Point, two to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, one to Annapolis, and one to Kelly Field as a flying cadet. It is believed the excellent record es-tablished by students from Fort Benautomated by students from Fort Ben-ning during the past two years will be equalled if not surpassed by the can-didates this year. There will be ap-proximately twenty-five vacancies for the regular army this year.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE MONOGRAPH ON BRIDGE GIVEN BY MAJ. JENKINS

Interesting Contractical Lessons Drawn by Ambitious Slam Bidder

Benning Contractors were busy over the week-end and we glean the following details of a bridge battle from Major John L. Jenkins.

Major Jenkins remarks that the situa-tions in which a grand slam can be bid with mathematical certainty are as rare as holes-in-one at golf, and further-more that a truly great defensive player can accomplish the impossible. Major can accomplish the impossible. Jenkins herewith presents another illus-tration of the fact that of the three courses open to the enemy, he always takes the fourth.

HENNESY RISES IN REBUTTAL

Editor,

The Infantry School News, Who Doesn't Know Where,

Dear and Honored Sir:

I have for some time been a contributor to your most excellent paper. Dur-ing the course of my pertinent remarks it chanced that I once mentioned the name of Mulligan. 'I'ruly an honored name in the "ould" country, but I fear one that has gone to seed under the pernicious influences of the generation which has come into being since the war (the civil war). But this Mulligan comes out in the

But this Mulligan comes out in the public print in your paper and issues an appeal for help for the last of the Hennesy's. The last of a family, that refused the rope for help in the past generation. As for my taking "umbrage," well he'll have a hard time proving it. "Twas my great grand-father that did that. Personally I've never been there. I may have scintillated through the literary firmament of the garrison, though I'll deny it in court, but just the though I'll deny it in court, but just the same I don't need any Mulligan to get back to that state of mind or being. As for the suggestion that Mulligan read "Tom Jones" it was made with his best interests at heart. Knowing that the "New Generation" was too deep for the "New Generation" was too deep for him, I wished to give Mulligan some-thing juvenile that he could set his teeth in and gnaw on for a while before pro-ceeding to such profound (for him) books as the one he has quoted so fre-quently.

As for the aspersions cast at my ability to go through the company officers course at the Infantry School, let him think back to the time when I used to tell him not to worry about things at he school so much. That after the instructors got all through tieing things up for him, that a small time with me would make them all straight. As for the three stars connected with my name, why they were good stars, not like the stars so many see nowadays, after a short time. As for the rest of his "baloney" why the Hennesy's have always helped them-selves, even the one that's in jail for pig seeves, stealing. Y'rs Tr'ly, BONAPART HENNESY, 3d.

The Bidding

Mrs. Jenkins, using the Vanderbilt system, bid one club, meaning three quick tricks and a reserve suit bid. Lt. Haleston, with admirable self-possession, managed to restrain himself. Major Jenkins thereupon bid one heart, thereby informing his partner that he had two or more quick tricks.

Lt. Gould felt no urge at all to bid. Mrs. Jenkins thereupon said, "Three hearts," and Lt. Haleston passed again. Major Jenkins cogitated.

"She has the ace of spades, the ace of clubs and the king and queen of dia-monds, he reasoned. "She made a forcing bid in hearts rather than no trumps. She must have the King of Hearts and more than normal sertngth in hearts. This locks propitious. Let me count. Five tricks in hearts with three in spades, three in diamonds and two in clubs. That makes thirteen. Yes, I'll do it."

"Seven hearts," bid Major Jenkins.

The Play

Lieut. Gould led a diamond * * * * * Major Jenkins officially nomiates him for oblivion.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, BUT-1ST LT. BENNY FOWLKES IS A REGIMENTAL COMMANDER

"Believe it or not," but 1st Lieut. "Benny" Fowlkes is a regimental com-mander, being in command of the 7th Engineers, or more exactly what's left of them. "Feeling his oats" the other day, "Benny" noticed that he has a new second lieutenant in the "regiment." He also had a hunch that he might make a good property officer, so the order went also had a hunch that he might make a good property officer, so the order went forth that 2nd Lieut. W. K. BENNING HUNTERS HEAD SOUTH

Colonel George F. Baltzell, Inf., and Lieut. Col. Jos. A. Atkins, Inf., headed south for a three-day hunting trip near Marianna, Florida, last Monday. Close on their heels went Lieut. Le-Counde A. Diller, the Assistant Pro-

Grande A. Diller, the Assistant Pro-vost Marshall, who thought the hunt-ing would be better around Blakely, Georgia.

FORT McPHERSON'S NECLEUS IS UP AND AT 'EM AGAIN

The following notice from Fort Mc-Pherson, where members of the Benning Hunt recently put on a hunt, and turned over a hound or so, in order to start things there a la Benning, may be of in-terest to the members of the Benning.

Hunt: " * * * I hope that he will be a nu-cleus for a drag-pack of your own. * *" So writes the MFH, Fort Benning.

On Sunday, the Meat Hound, appar-ntly conscious for the first time of this everyhelming responsibility, acted as one transformed. Blood will tell. He started fast and strong, and all went well until the first cemetery, when, showing acute distress, and laying his head on a convenient grave-stone, Old Nucleus, the hope of Fort McPherson, went out like a light. The Field continued on a delightful circuit, and on returning was relieved to learn that the Hound had duly recovered and taken the shortest path home. WM. S. BIDDLE, MMH, Master Meat Hounds.

pins. The refinishing of all four alleys has been completed and special pins have been authorized for the bowling of all 537 match games.

Among the areas of the Fort Benning reservation, there is probably none that has a more interesting story than Area No. 6, which is now patrolled by Sgt. Charlie Turner of the Infantry School Detachment.

The quarters now occupied by Sgt. Turner and family, was once known as the "Old Pauly Home." At the time that the picture shown here was taken, Sgt. John Davis was on duty as range guard on this area and the picture shows Sgt. Davis and family. Since that time for the picture shows the provide the an Sgt. rocks. The mill is situated on Wolf creek. The only wild deer that is known to exist on the reservation, makes its home in the wilds of Wolf creek swamp. Many In the wilds of Wolf creek swamp. Many people have seen the deer, which is a doe. Sgt. John Davis, formerly on duty on this area as range guard, saw the deer a couple of times during the past year. Former residents of the resrva-tion say that a small herd of wild deer wave to be found in this swamp but the were to be found in this swamp but that hunters gradually killed them off until they were thought to be none left. The lone doe is probably the last of the herd.

This area furnishes excellent hunting during the season. Numerous rabbits, squirrels and quail are found within its boundaries and several flock of wild turkey feed along the creek lands, but the wary turkey is perfectly safe in tanglewood and undrgrowth of the low lands.

Sgt. Turner, range guard, is a mem-ber of the Infantry School Detachment. With his family, Mrs. Turner and two children, he is comfortably quartered in the old Pauly home. The Quartermas-ter has repaired the building until it is as good as new. A flock of chickens, including numerous friers, scratch and cackle around the yard and barn, two large porkers grunt in comfort and ease in their pen and get fatter every day; some cold morning the piggies will meet an awful fate and their hams and shoulders will hang in the old fashion-ed smoke house and season in a hickory smoke. Which goes to show that besides keeping out poachers and watching for forest fires, the range guard does not lead such a tough life after all.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH By MAJOR HOMER L. CONNER, Medical Inspector FIRST AID IN THE HOME

Poisoning from Animals - Snakebite: the doctor treat the wound as soon as Work quickly; do not delay. Get at the wound. Cut off the clothing. Tie the limb between the wound and the heart. This tourniquet can be made of any strip of cloth and should be just tight enough to prevent return of the blood in the veins. Then get the pa-tient to a doctor as soon as possible. Where an hour or more must elapse before a doctor can treat it will be best that you take a clean knift and slash the wound. Enlarge the wound; make it bleed freely. This helps to wash out the poison. Under these conditions, and provided you have no sores in your mouth nor cracks on your lips, it is a great help for you to suck the wound. Do not cauterize the wound. Do not apply drugs to the wound. Get the doctor. The sooner he can give the the better. Practically all who receive this anti-serum within twenty-four hours are saved. Many recover even after longer delay or even without antivenins provided the first aid treatment has delayed absorption of the poison by the tourniquet and free bleeding has washed out most of the poison. Remember that tourniquets must be slightly loosened every twenty minutes to prevent gangrene of the limb. There are three varieties of rattlesnake and two varieties of moccasin on this reservation.

Dog Bite: If hydrophobia is suspected, treat the wound in the same way as for snake-bite, but do not suck. Have

A delightful event of last week-end was the tea dance with which the offi-cers and ladies of the Eighty-third Field Artillery entertained at the Polo Club. The Club was attractively decorated with smilax and branches of pine. The tea table was overlaid with a lace cloth and centered with a silver bowl sur-rounded with red tapers which burned in silver candlesticks. possible. Hydrophobia is the most serious danger from dog bites. It is quite common in the state of Georgia. It is very important to get the dog. Have it followed until caught. Do not kill it followed until caught. Do not kill the dog but have it turned over to the veterinarian for observation. If the dog is killed it may be impossible to find out whether or not he has hydrophobia. The dog should be observed for four-teen days; if he remains well he is probably not mad and there is no danger from the bite other than ordinary infec-tion. If he proves to be mad, Pasteur treatment should be given to the persons bitten. Always, in case the dog has been killed, save the head, pack it in ice, and send it to the laboratory for examination.

Bites from other animals should be treated the same as other wounds. Insect Stings: If you can see the sting in the flesh, pull it out. Ammonia water is the best treatment.

Ivy poisoning, poison oak, poison sum-ack: These are all similar in action. Most of us are more or less susceptible to this poison. The poison sumack is very common in this vicinity and each spring many victims report for treat-ment. Home treatment consists of first washing off with soap and water, then with alcohol. Then apply a dressing kept soaked in cold soda bicarbonate so-lution. This should be bandaged on. It will relieve pain and itching and help prevent the spread to other parts of the body. Bad cases should consult the doctor.

The Club was attractively decorated with southern smilax and Spanish moss. The punch table was overlaid with a lace cloth and the punch bowl was banked with pink begonias. Tall pink tapers were placed at either end of the table.

Mrs. Brook received her guests wearing a becoming gown of coral crepe embroidered with gold and Miss Slo-comb wore a lovely beige lace dress. The Twenty-fourth Infantry orchestra furnished the music for dancing. Approximately two hundred and fifty guests were invited to meet Miss Slocomo.

Lieut. and Mrs. W. L. Bell and their daughter, Senta, have returned to their quarters in Block Sixteen from Brookyn, where they have been visiting Mirs. Bell's mother, Mrs. Herman Reitzell. Returning with Lieut. and Mrs. Bell was Lieut. Bell's sister, Miss Margart Beli, of Atlanta. Miss Bell will remain at Benning for a visit.

The members of the Girl Scout Com-mittee met last Tuesday at Mrs. Henry Matchett's quarters. During the morning various reports were made and plans for the scout work to be done were discussed. A list of names was read of the officers and ladies who have kindly consented to aid the girls in the passing of the tests for their merit badges. A complete list of these officers and ladies will appear at a later date.

Mrs. Charles Meals and Mrs. R. A W. Pearson shared honors at a beautiful bridge luncheon given Saturday by Mrs. Casper Rucker. Covers were laid for eight. Seated there were Mrs. Meals, Mrs. Pearson, Mrs. Campbell King, Mrs. Rose and her mother, Mrs. Ponting, of Berkley, California, and Mrs. Benjamin Ferris.

After nearly five years' observation, coupled with some-but not too muchcoupled with some—but not too much— effort, we note with concern that the first insructor ever to back up by a spe-cific citation in class that old bromide, "your solution is as good as ours," is named Bull. In view of that, we wait, without holding our breath, to see fur-ther support for this great principle on some solution of a marked problem that differs from THE (until we do see it) approved solution. approved solution.

x x xThere may be bigger and better mark-ed problems than the one on estimate of the situation, presided over so charming-ly last week by Minehost Leard, but they don't make bigger and better thrills (as a part of the school course, at least) than it gave the class. Hagerty, alone, laughed racously when the meat of the decision was announced—and a laugh at decision was announced—and a laugh at such a time is begging for ostracism. The unconvinced majority proudly published their disgrace to the world, while the correct but timid minority shrunk nervously from hither to yon and refused, except under duress, to confess their shame in having minds that worked in the same channel with that of the doddering old Colonel A.

McKinley, who timed his attack to start at the exact time that the enemy force reached a strength just about twice his own, thought he was in trouble until he heard about Harrison, and then he cheered up.

Here's what Harrison did. He stated the approved solution almost in the language of the school, and then dismissed

"This plan, being wholly impracticable and, tactically, entirely unsound, need not be considered."

"But," explains Ednie, in the manner "But," explains Ednie, in the manner of one whistling as he passes a grave-yard at midnight, "it was purely a mat-ter of technique, and the nature of your decision is immaterial provided it is correctly and logically arrived at.' $\cdot \mathbf{X}$

As a soothing lotion for the wounds of that campaign, however, we received our little confidential letters over the weekend. A few of our more modest mem-bers profess to be unsatisfied, but a ma-jority of us know that there really is a Santa Claus.

This strenuous outdoor stuff in the afternoon—e. g., the famous Ferris pin-wheel terrain exercise of last week—isn't at all good for the boys. It gets them all feverish and restless—or, in the ver-nacular, hot and bothered. Even the in the act of asking a question with the witching hour of 5 o'clock just barely around the corner.

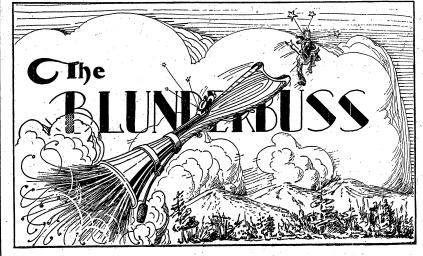

хх x x x We don't know where George Kraft snared all his erudition, but he furnished us one pearl of great price from which all except Rodwell and Conner are de-riving much glee. This was the informa-tion that had; in the days when cavalry x tion that, back in the days when cavalry tion that, back in the days when cavary was a combatant arm, a cornet was a sort of third lieutenant of cavalry. The information arrived just in time to put our two aggressive horsemen strictly on the defensive.

We had always inclined to the belief that Vic McLaglen overdid that hard-boiled stuff a bit—until we heard Bill Marshall apostrophising his golf ball. ххх

And, speaking of golf — it seems a shame for this class to pick on these other outfits. With Fielder, Ednie, Rob-inson, Hudson, Paynter, Hagen and Eagles roaring for blood, the poor lambs from the faculty and the company offi-cers' class had better take cover. With-out intending to give aid and comfort to the enemy, we suggest that they offer to change this proposed athletic compe-tion to change tion to chess. x x x

George Read has earned so many citations in this Palladium of student rights that he has to use a skeleton key and crowbar to pry his way in now. But he did both last week. George gave vent to a loud and (apparently) derisive snort when someone put the kitchens in snort of the variation of the developed snort when someone put the kitchens in rear of the regiment. It developed though, in that the final "t" of the snort must have been an "e," for when called on, George, with all the bright and self-gratulatory confidence of a Paynter building another footbridge, confessed that he would have the same trains in rear of the same regiment—and looked rear of the same regiment—and looked pained when he learned laughter instead of applause.

ment for the dwellers of Block 14. Our statistical department, exhausted after its profound researches into the Officers Club finances, has not felt strong enough to go into the matter thoroughly, but according to the best readily available figure, there have been nine fires in officers' quarters so far this winter, a fair percentage of which have been in Block 14. As we live in Block 14 we have taken the trouble to investigate the causes of these fires. We find that invariably they start in the maid's room. This statement, dawning as it may appear at first glance, is not to be construed as a reflection on the moral character of the Smart Set Club, which, as everyone knows, is the social organization of Block 14 servants. The fundamental cause of these numerous fires dates further back to the time of the construction of the quarters. The ingenious ar-chitect who designed the steep snow shed roofs which make these quar-ters ideal for warm weather, also contrived a short hot air line from the furnace to the maid's room and kitchen, which runs so close to inflamable material that any fire which keeps the house warm enough to suit the average army wife is almost certain to start a conflagration. There is an interesting field for the psychological studies of Colonel Stayer and Herr Schmidt in the behavior of people, particularly women, during a fire. We recall quite distinctly the fire which we had in Fort Missoula, Montana, during our early married life. When the flames broke out, our wife and the mother of our one and only child (at that time) rushed madly to the rescue of a $2.75 hat which she had bought at a recent sale and called to the firemen to save the child. In the recent Block 14 holocaust some different but equally interesting reactions were noted. When the fire broke out in Professor McCunniff's quarters, Mrs. McCunniff's thorough military training asserted itself. She at once instituted a hurried search for the red card which gives explicit instructions as to what is to be done in case of fire. Not f

Instructions as to what is to be done in case of ince. Not inding it above the telephone or in any of the other places where one might expect to find such instructions for use in emergency, she called up the Professor at his office. Fortunately, he was able to be reached and, with his cus-tomary presence of mind, was able to inform his somewhat distraught wife as to the drawer of the desk in which the red card had been filed for safe keeping. Mrs McCunniff promptly due it out from the midst of a tomary presence of mind, was able to inform his somewhat distraught wife as to the drawer of the desk in which the red card had been filed for safe keeping. Mrs. McCunniff promptly dug it out from the midst of a pile of mimeographed conferences on Combat Orders and gave the alarm strictly according to regulations. In the meantime, however, the neighbors had reported the fire and the fire department was on the scene before the switchboard operator could get the right number. The early morning fire which broke out in the quarters of Adjutant General Lewis caught this prominent Royal Family of Fort Benning (this inference will be clear after the March production of the Dramatic Club) in Deshabile. Adjutant General Lewis promptly sent in the alarm while Mrs. Lewis made a hurried morning call on Major and Mrs. Newgord. Mrs. Lewis was appropriately attired for the occasion in a beautiful refuge ensemble consisting of a robe de nuit of crepe de chine trimmed with real lace, surmounted by a coat of white rabbit fur. In lieu of a bouquet she carried in her hand a hastily assembled wardrobe sufficient (in the event of the destruction of her other clothes) to outfit her com-pletely as a follies girl in a well warmed theatre. Questioned later as to the reason why she did not seek refuge in the house next door, which is the residence of one of the co-conductors of this column, her reply was, "I looked so funny that I was afraid I would get written up in the Blunderbuss." We leave the above studies in fire psychology to the experts. As re-gards a solution for reducing the Block 14 fire hazard, we offer the follow-ing suggestion: Let every officer be his own striker and tend his own fur-nace. As a countermeasure to combat the current world wide depression, we have been doing this for three months and our more critical half assures nace. As a countermeasure to combat the current world wide depression, we have been doing this for three months and our more critical half assures us that there is no more danger of our house catching fire from the furnace than there is from the ice box.

NEW 24TH BOWLING TALENT

The 24th Infantry Bowling team has herited some new talent. The recent inherited some new talent. The recent arrival of Captain Bain, Captain Fry, Lieut. Hoy and Captain Berry, gives the team some much needed assistance in its efforts to rise in the post tournament.

24TH BOXING TOURNEY IS TO START IN APRIL

The 24th Infantry will hold an ama teur boxing tournament early in April. There is much talent in the regiment, and plenty of interested prospects for fistic action.

24TH TRACK MEET PROPOSED

A Field and Track Meet has been proposed for the 24th Infantry. If nothing prevents, a meet will be held during May, at which time the best talent win be selectd for later joint meets with Tuskegee and other school teams.

24TH DANCE TONIGHT

The 24th Infantry. Community Chest Dance for January is being held this ev-ening at the Polo Club. All members of the officer personnel and their families and friends are cordially invited. The 24th Infantry orchestra will play.

JOKE COLUMN

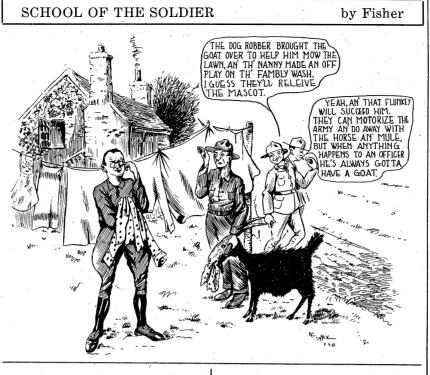

Rabbits in the 24th Infantry garden area had better change their habitat. Permission has been obtained to shoot all rabbits infesting the garden area, and a number of them have already been shot. The damage done to growing crops has made this action necessary.

Wild hogs are an important item on the Happy Hearts menu these days. Nearly every company has brought in several of the wild porkers lately, and they make fine barbecue.

The toughest job in the 24th Infantry is getting Home James away from hom long enough at a time, to do a little duty.

2D BATTALION OF 29TH WINS IN AMATEUR BOXING TOURNEY

1500 Fans See Hard Bouts With Much Speed and Action in Finals

Fifteen hundred fight fans filled the rincen nunared ngnt tans filled the gymnasium last Tuesday night to wit-ness the final bouts of the Fort Ben-ning Amateur Boxing Tournament. The entire program was featured by speed and action and the fans were highly pleased pleased.

The Second Battalion, 29th Infantry, took first honors, four men of that team-winning championships. The First Bat-talion, 29th Infantry were second with two winners. The Tankers, Artillery-men and Medicos were tied for third place with one winner from each team.

After the final bout the ring ropes were let down and the table bearing the trophies and medals was placed in the center of the ring. General Campbell King, Commandant of the Infantry School, then presented the boxers with their medals and prizes. Before the presentation the Commandant delivered a short address in which he highly commended the boxers and the team coach-es on their wonderful display of fighting spirit and true sportsmanship. Genera King further stressed the fine points of the boxing game as a clean sport that is a big factor in developing the high-est type of soldier. A game that de-velops the mind as well as the body.

The winners were presented with white sweaters, while the runner-ups re-ceived bronze medals. Lt. J. L. Grier, coach of the Second Battalion team, recoach of the Second Battalion team, re-ceived the team trophy. Owing to the fact that the judges could not decide who the outstanding boxer of the tourn-ament was, the winner of this trophy was not selected.

The entire show was carried on fast and smoothly. Captain Fred Miller, "Benning's Fight Boss," had the regular fight detail on duty, including tick-et sellers, ushers and announcer. Regu-lar fight tickets were issued and there was no trouble or worry over the seating arrangements. Lt. "Jazz" Harmony refarrangements. Lt. "Jazz" Harmony ref-erecd, and fans would like to see him officiate on the regular fight show programs.

The tournament winners will compose the Fort Benning Amateur Boxing team that will represent Fort Benning in the Southern Amateur Boxing Tournament et Atlanta this year. The team will also at Atlanta this year. The team will also meet other amateur teams. Their first opponent will be the Miami University boxing team. The Fort Benning team, under Lt. J. L. Grier, coach, will leave for the "Land of Flowers," in the near future for their first battle.

'MUSKETEERS DROP CLOSE CAGE DUEL TO ALBANY BLUES

The Albany Blues threw a cog into the winning streak of the Musketeer cagesters at Fort Benning last Satur-day night, winning a close, fast game of basketball, 38 to 34.

The opening half looked like a walk away for the Fort Benning five and they were leading 25 to 14 at the half.

The basketeers from Nutville came out strong in the final half. In the first minute of play, they scored six points without a return from the Musketeers. without a return from the Musketeers. Van at center and Gremmer at guard for the visitors, began looping the bas-ket from all angles and quickly over-came the lead enjoyed by the soldiers in the opening half. In the mean time, Isham, Benning center, was banished from the game and this also weakened the Musketeer combination. In the clos-ing minutes of play, the visitors drew the Musketeer combination. In the clos-ing minutes of play, the visitors drew away to a four point lead and held it until the final gun. Phil Draper led the Musketeer scorers with a total of 16 points. The soldiers were minus the services of Johnny Roos-men who was oficial time the Auburn ma, who was officiating the the Auburn University basket ball game. The Birmingham Y. M. C. A. basket-ball team will play the Musketeers at Fort Benning Saturday night.

Dear Eddie:

Time flies apace, Eddie, and here we all are, Officers in the Army of the United States and qualified horseshoers to boot. Yes, we are all horseshoers, that is with the help of the Lord and a good horseshoer to assist us. Person-illy, I think Reed Graves and myself. turned out a shoe that anyone would be proud to have on his foot. Reed trimmed the foot, lucky Reed, the horse did not have any shoes on in the first place so that made his job much less complicated. Why Van Mosely spent hours and hours trying to level the foot of his horse. Reed and I used a better method; we made the shoe fit the horse's foot in all dirctions. I made the shoe for our horse, that is all but the few last finishing touches, and I nailed the shoe on the foot; that is all but the first three nails. Anyway the three of us made a good job of it. The few nails that were a little high we filed off level. Jake Moon looked at it and passed it as alright. It is sad, Eddie, but we went through the entire course and never, not even once did Jake Moon attempt to shoe a horse. He'd petter pass us. to shoe a horse. He a percer part at I don't think he can do any better him-self. Blakely has the honor of making the best shoes in the class. "Of course," says Pvt. Hennery, to Blakely, "That shoe an't quite level, and it's a little mite too open at the toe, and a little bit too closed at he heels, but Lt., them is sure mighty fine nail holes.'

We have been double crossed by the school once again. Believe me, Eddie, you can fool some of the people some-times, but this school can fool you all the time. They send you your grades for the work that has gone before (very confidential stuff, or 1'd tell you how 1 made out). You look them over and decide that you had better study some. You do for almost the first time dur-ing the course. Then the machine gun-ners give their exams in direct laying and you find that you would have been better off if you had not filled your head with a lot of facts and figures from the with a lot of facts and figures from the pamphlet they gave you. It was a fine example of applied psychology, you know, lead them on and then hit them where they ain't looking. My, my! How I did tie that exam up! And from the growls that I heard I don't feel that I'll be the only one to get a first "U." Well, I guess that it had to come sooner or later, and now that the suspense of waiting is over maybe we can breathe easier. easier.

S'funny thing, Eddie, but now that S'funny thing, Eddie, but now that the grades are out I have not run into a single officer who did not have at least 10 "A's," but who at the same time was not very glib in explaining that he did not think that examinations were a very good test of ability in the first place, and that in the second place he really knew a lat more about the subreally knew a lot more about the subject than his grades would indicate, and ject than his grades would indicate, and besides he was positive that he knew more now about the subject than the rest of the class who had probably crammed for the exam, and then promptly forgotten all about it. It is a very queer line of reasoning. Just be-tween you and me, Eddie, I really do know lots more than my marks show. Eddie, when you come down here you will find that the 29th Infantry is here. It is the famous demonstration regiment

It is the famous demonstration regiment that you have been hearing about for years. Now it is a very choice detail. The officers are a favoured lot, not much work to do and lots of time for polo, golf, tennis and other pleasant recrea-tions. Naturally most of the officers in with the class are very anxious to be detailed with the 29th Infantry. Oh, yes! Since the first of the year the red apple boys have been busy trying to secure advan-tageous places on the waiting list.

dance and invited all the bachelor officers in the class to attend (the quar-ters situation is not very good here yet, so I guess that they hesitated to ask married officers to stay here). It is pre-sumed that at the dance the social quanties of the officers were scrutinized very carefully.

It remained for Brother Gilmartin, expert dietician, to crash the pearly gates in a big way. Brother Gil's repu-tation at Plattsburg as a food handler followed him to Benning. Brother Gil not only has a reputation as a mess officer but he looks the part completely, big, beefy and well fed. A hard man to compete with in his line. Gil was called into conference, at 29th Hq., the results of which I will have to tell you at a of which I will have to tell you at a later day. I do not believe for a mom-ent that the rumor, that Gil's exper-ience in the kitchen enabled him to pick a particularly fine and juicy "Red Ap-ple," has a single roundation of truth. We are still equitating. Like a night-mare, it seems, to some, to go on .or-ever. The advanced platoon is taking up jumping. It is well worth watching? Professor B-Food on a horse, jumping a hurdle, is worth going miles to see. Cow-Professor B-Food on a horse, jumping a hurdle, is worth going miles to see. Cow-boy Bill, cutting out a steer from the herd has nothing on the Professor for grace, spirit and that indefinable quali-ty, elan (French for "It"). Up goes the horse. Back goes the professor. Down come the fore legs. Forward comes the professor. Down come the hind quar-ters. Bong! Down comes the professor. They teach you a very trick seat for jumping down here. You sorta crouch up on the horse, short stirrups, ben forward at the hips, and "Pary." Very easy for a short-legged man who has to easy for a short-legged man who has to easy for a short-legged man who has to ride that way anyhow, but very hard on the long-legged boys. Pierce and Baker have a most difficult time. Paul Porch, well of course he does have a very hard horse to jump. And as for your truly, every time I try and squeeze the horse my knees come loose. I lose my arin and feal like a sock of notatee my grip and feel like a sack of potatoes in a rough storm at sea.

The other platoons are working hard, too. Three hour rides are becoming as almost no time on a horse. In fact a few members of the class are becoming so nonchalant on a horse that they do not deign to dismount in the usual way anymore but fling themselves off the horse at a full gallop. When it comes to dominating a horse thought I have to hand it to Carter. Carter wanted to go one way. The horse wanted to go another. Carter could not make the horse go the way he (Carter) wanted him to go, so rather than let the horse dominate him, Carter went right on off in the direction that he intedded to go. Stern stuff the lad is made of, it made no difference to him that he lit on his no unerence to him that he lit on his head in the proper path. I haven't in-terviewed the horse so am unable to give you his side of the story. Lt. Vernon, who has been limping give you his side of the story. Lt. Vernon, who has been limping around class lately, claims that he in-jured himself trying to fix the radiator in his quarters. "The hot steam burned me," says Vernon. Rumor has it that Mrs. Vernon poured hot water on him trying to wake him up in time for class one morning. Y're Tr'ly

Short Notice Move For the 29th Again

Company "F" Is First To Be Ready When Short Notice Call Comes

Around the 29th Infantry area, one Around the 29th infantry area, one speaks softly and in gentle whispers when talking of "taking the field on short notice," for to be in "the know" is worth many "points"; and "points" right now notice, for to be a "points" right now aren't being passed around very freely. Consequently, since the initial surprise of some weeks ago, prognostications were being freely aired that another "short notice" was about due.

But when? Ah! That was the ques-tion! Some really believed it, and some really didn't. Those that did, didn't cosmoline their kitchen tinware; and those that didn't, did. Even the bache-love of the 20th Light Pact foregoleware. lors of the 29th Light Foot forsook valued dates in Columbus in order to be on hand when the call came . . "by bugle, by verbal notice, by telephone, or by all." . . . (Memo No. 7).

The call came by verbal notice Mon-day morning at 8:10 a. m., while the regiment was loosening up its stiff joints at calesthenics in Doughboy Stadium. Said Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr., com-manding officer, to his battalion com-manders, "The regiment takes the field immediately," and from there on the chain of command functioned perfectly. Company "F," Captain John R. Hor-an commanding, reported exactly thirty-eight minutes later (running time) that his company was ready to march, all packs packed, wagons and rolling kitch-ens properly loaded. The leading bat-talion moved out at 10:15 a .m. The Service Company, Captain George S. Beatty commanding, contributed in Said Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr., com-

VON SCHELL MONOGRAPH PROVES QUITE AN EVENT. SOCIAL AND OTHERWISE

German Officer is Thanked by Commandant After Instructive Talk

It wasn't just like a monograph. It wasn't a social event (although it looked like one). It wasn't merely the inter-esting and skillful statement of some profound and well-founded views on training. It was all of these and more in one.

When it became known that Captain Much it became known that Captann Adolf von Schell of the German Army was to deliver a personal experience monograph, Friday, half of Benning tried to get into Kriz Hall. Now Kriz Hall isn't that big. There was the Com-mondart: there was the Assistant Commandant; there was the Com-mandant; there was the Assistant Com-mandant. There were the officers of the 29th, of the 24th, of the Tankers and Artillery. There were the members or the National Council and Bacama Field the National Guard and Reserve Field Officers Class. There were all the in-structors who could get away from their duties. There were flocks of ladies, and there were some civilians. All were eager to hear a monograph from the other side to the conclusions drawn by Capt. von Schell from a con-sideration of his interesting subject, the operations of the 14th German Division during the First Battle of the Marne.

Chairs Passed in Windows

Chairs were passed in windows, and placed in aisles, accomodating members of the advanced class in some cases shared seats with visitors — after ten minutes of scurrying and maneuvering for place, Kriz Hall seemed to be as full as it could get, with spectators look-ing in at the windows. So Capt. von Schell started.

After a brief orientation on the situation on September 5, 1914 of the western grouping of the German Armies, Capt. von Schell took his hearers to the 14th Von Scheil took his hearers to the 14th Division in which he at the time was a company commander. This division was in army reserve of the Second Army, and Capt. von Schell depicted graphic-ally the marches and counter marches of the division during the first days of the Marne the Marne.

He took up the effect on the men of the apparently aimless movements, and then took his auditors to the Army Headquarters, and showed how each move of the division corresponded to the view of the situation held at a particular time at Army Headquarters, and was a reasonable part of this large picture.

Such Things to be Expected

He drew the conclusion that while higher commanders should be exceeding-ly careful not to march and counter march their reserves excessively, that the troops on their part must be prepared mentally for such incidents; that junior officers should, instead of by remarks or actions, fostering the belief among the troops that the higher command does not k n o w its own mind, should make the troops see that such movements are (Continued on page 2.)

The allega-tion was later discovered to belong in the "important if true" class. The story was a fabrication.

As originally reported to the Musco-gee county police by the civilian, J. C. Brewer, of Columbus, he picked up two soldiers and gave them a ride in his car,

Brewer was injured severely. He lost his right eye. Fort Benning authorities directed that an investigation be made, and that every soldier be lined up. All injuries were viewed with deep suspicion, with the result that several explanations had to be made.

The mystery was finally cleared up when the county police announced that they had learned that Brewer was in-jured in a brawl at a resort on the Hamilton road, and that the assailant was another civilian. Brewer admitted that no soldiers were concerned in the when suddenly they turned on him, de-manded his car, and upon his refusal, badly beat him. Brewer claimed that one of the soldiers had received a bad fighting of his unit, when is was placed in line, and the crossing of the St. Gond Marshes. He emphasized the lack of accurate information in war of movement, and gave as an example the attack order he received in this fight. The order contained almost no information of the enemy or of own supporting troops. Captain von Schell expressed the view that if units habitually get complete in-formation in maneuvers and in problems, that they will tend to await better information in war instead of acting, or will be bewildered by novel conditions. H_e suggested that comparatively little detailed information of the enemy be included in training problems and exercises.

Captain von Schell, after taking his hearers with him through the fighting of the 14th Division, up to the time when it received an order to withdraw although it felt it was victorious, then showed the general situation on Septem-ber 9 which led to the withdrawal of the German Armies on the right flank. Captain von Schell was thanked and congratulated by General King upon the conclusion of his monograph.

It seems to me that my interest in Hennesy has been misinterpreted. If two Hibernians can't engage in a bit of friendly verbal abuse without some outsider misconstruing it as an evidence of bad feeling, the world has come to a sorry pass. STRICKLAND'S FATHER DIES

Friends of Sgt. S. E. Strickland of the Infantry School Detachment will re-gret to learn of the death of his father, Isaac Strickland, at Savannah, Ga., January 16. Mr. Strickland was for the tral of Georgia police force. He was a member of the Fraternal Order of Eag-les and of the Woodmen of the World. (Life).

In my article last week I made an ap-peal for suggestions as to what should be done about Bonapart Hennesy 'the 3rd and I am highly gratified with the flood of suggestions I have received, even though we do so by request. I There were suggestions I have received, even though we do so by request. I them upon a long-suffering Garrison-even though we do so by request. I sob with mortification. I am sure that Hennesy is prostrated with grief. If he and I cannot engage in a little harmless persifiage, mutual recrimina-tion or repartee without being misun-derstood, I shall be compelled to make a downward revision of my opinion of some of the so called intellects of the Garrison. In the words of the Koran, "Praise be to Allah, the merciful and compassionate, for thrice damned is he who relisheth not the joy of life that dawns within his brother's soul."

To those mournful individuals whose bucolic countenances and super-serious manner indicates the atrophied state of their funny bone, I recommend the words of Beaumarchais who said, "Je m'em-presse de rire de tout, de peur si j'en pense, je serai oblige en pleurer."

There has also been some rather caustic criticism of the slighting manner in which I spoke of Hennesy's tender years. I hasten to add that mine own exceed his by few indeed. Yet within the span of those few years, one fact stands out clearly in my mind and it is that those who take themselves so serjously do so because none others will. Praise be, the sun dawns every day whether we see it or not but happy warriors such as Hennesy feel its warmth and blossom forth joyously. And if just for one day Hennesy's nonsense shall have contributed but one smile to some one peron, then his contribution to life ex-ceeds a thousand fold that of those dour souls whose funereal aspect stultifies the atmosphere of an otherwise happy hour. TRACTABILITY MOTIVATOR TESTS ARE BEING CONDUCTED

Among the important tests being con-ducted by the Department of Experi-ment is one of the P-M Tractability Motivator

The letter referring the motivator to the department reads: 1. Attached hereto is the P-M Tractability Motivator. It is desired that the usual tests be conducted.

2. The philosophy underlying the mo-tivator is as follows: Should the steed be loath to assume his responsibilities, or indicate a patent or ostensible future deviation from the normal by a rotary circumvolution of the retina or a characteristic disturbance of the auditory projections, a downward movement of the motivator so that it impinges upon that part of the ana-tomical structure yclept the rump tends to induce the steed to mentally consider the innocuousness of controlled forward motion versus the cataclysmic conse-quences of total or partial abstention from perambulaion.

Bouyancy may be imparted to the spirit of the steed by periodical slight or surreptitious inclinations of the motivator once the steed has associated the impinging movement with the operator's desire for tranquil forward displacement.

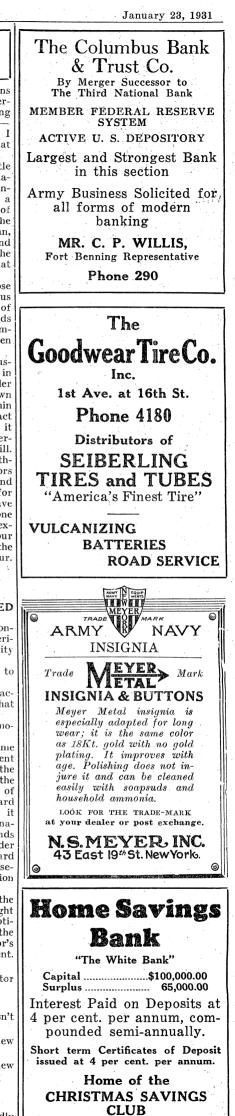

To the uneducated eye, the motivator greatly resembles a riding crop.

Interest Grows Each Week The weekly jumping competitions for the year 1930-31 are becoming even more the year 1930-31 are becoming even more popular than those of last year. The number of competitors has jumped from twenty-one last year to thirty-two for this year. This increase in the number of contestants shows just how keen the Benningites are for an opportunity to participate in clean and healthful sports. Much interest is being shown by specta-tors as well as contestants. The num-ber of people attending the competitions has increased from about thirty-five on the first day to over one hundred on the the first day to over one hundred on the third.

Jumping Days Changed

Due to the duty hours of the student and organization entries, the days for and organization entries, the days for the jumping competitions have been changed to Saturday mornings at 10:00 instead of 3:30 p. m. on Thursdays. With weather permitting they will be held every Saturday. In case of inclem-ent weather the jumping will be post-poned to a date that will be announced each time in the Deily Bulletin each time in the Daily Bulletin.

All Organizations Represented

Being open to all officers and ladies of the post, these events have repre-sentatives from practically every organi-zation. The 29th Infantry, 83rd Field Artillery, Tanks, Engineers, Advanced Class, Company Officers Class, Academ-ic Department, and Motor Transport all have their representatives on data such have their representatives on days sche-duled for jumping.

Handicaps Are Proving Correct For this year the contestants have been handicapped in combination with the horse drawn. Judging by the win-ners to date the handicaps have been made with exceptional accuracy. The made with exceptional accuracy. The three winners have been divided as fol-lows: one 3' 9" handicap, one 3' 6" han-dicap, and one 3' 4" handicap. Among the "jump offs" for these first places there have been tie scores by 3', 3' 4", 3' 6" and 3' 9" handicaps. Based on this actual performance it seems conclusive that the bornea and riders have been that the horses and riders have been placed just about where they belong.

Tea Served After Each Contest Immediately after the award of the prizes to winners, coffee and doughnuts are served in the Horseshow Cabin. This service is without cost to spectators, and all are cordially invited to make free use of the Cabin.

Winners To Date The prize for first place is a sterling silver goblet, and for second place a hunting bit. The winners for the first three weeks are: 1st week, Lt. D. D. Hedekin, 1st place, Mrs. Applegate, 2nd place; 2d week, Mrs. L. E. Toole, 1st place, Maj. Roger Williams, 2d place; 3d week, Lt. W. G. Skelton, 1st place, Lt. W. H. Bartlett, 2d place.

Children's Riding Class The serving of hot chocolate and cookies to members of the children's riding class has proven very popular. The rally around the dispenser of refresh-ments reminds one of the college days when student bodies rushed theatres.

Gymkhana to be Held A gymkhana, under supervision of the Academic Department, will be held at the Polo-Hunt Club at 1:30 p. m., January 31. Events in the order in which run, with conditions and eligibility rules, are as follows:

"HAM" KELLEY GETS HIS OLD JOB BACK

1st Lieut. Harold S. Kelley, 24th In-fantry, who recently arrived from foreign service, has been assigned to duty as Assistant Post Exchange Officer, vice Captain Virgil Bell, who has been de-tailed on special duty with the Depart-ment of Experiment.

The regular meeting of the Infantry School Woman's Club was held Monday, January 19th, at the Polo Club, Mrs. Daniel Berry, President, presiding. There was the largest attendance that the Club has ever had, due to the keen interest felt in the talk on India, by Major Samuel A. White, which was the feature of the program.

Maj. White was selected to be a dele-gate to the annual Far Eastern Medical Conference, held in India in 1922 during which time he was an honored guest the Indian government, and was able to see the country as no mere sightseer could hope to. Perhaps his most interesting experience was when he attended a beautiful play, given by the pupils of Rabindranath Tagore, in Tagore's magnificent palace. The program opened with two appro-priate selections, sung by Mrs. Fred Gaillard and accompanied by Mrs. Ray-Gailard and accompanied by Mrs. Ray-mond Pearson on the piano and Mr. Mueller on the violin. The obligato was arranged by Mr. Mueller. The first song was "Less Than Dust," by A m y Woodford-Finden, followed by "Pale song was "Less Than Dust," by Amy Woodford-Finden, followed by "Pale Hands I Loved." Mr. Mueller then played "Song of India" and "Oriental." He was ably accompanied by Mrs. Pearson. The musical part of the program was con-cluded with two more songs, "You Are cluded with two more songs, "You Are All That is Lovely," and "Tempie Bells," which were charmingly sung by Mrs. Gaillard.

Mrs. Barker then introduced Major White, who spoke on "Mother India," illustrating his remarks with slides, White, who spoke on motion likes, illustrating his remarks with slides, showing all phases of East Indian life, and giving his audience a glimpse of the exquisite architecture for which they are famous. mendous undertaking it is for the Brit-ish government to try to weld them into a united and peaceful nation. Members of the garrison had kindly. contributed an interesting display of Indian works of art, ranging from bras-ses and exquisitely carved techwood to ses and exquisitely carved teakwood to shawls and prints of all kinds. This unusual exhibit added a delightful at-mosphere to Maj. White's brilliant lecture.

At the conclusion of the program, tea was served. The table beautiful with a handsome Canton embroidered table cloth. Pale yellow candles and a cenadded a touch of spring. Mrs. Homer L. Conner and Mrs. D. S. Wilson were hostesses for the afternoon. Mrs. George Baltzell and Mrs. C. J. Manly poured tea.

LADIES GOLF TOURNAMENT

In spite of the low morning tempera tures, a few hardy lady golfers still manage to get out to their weekly golf tournaments. This week so few members were out that it looked as if each would cop a prize. This week's tourna-ment held Wednesday morning was a regular Flag Tournament. The winners were; Mrs. Privett, 1st prize; Mrs. Archer, 2nd prize; and Mrs. J. J. Wilson, 3rd prize. The other four ladies didn't get any prizes.

ONE-ACT PLAYS ON FEB. 6 AND 7 Dramatic Club To Present

"Farewell Supper" and "Man of Destiny"

On February 6th and 7th the Dramat-"The Farewell Supper," by Arthur Schnitzler and "The Man of Destiny," by Bernard Shaw.

As far as the selection of authors is concerned the highbrows must again be credited with a win. But after reading the plays, I can assure those who are members of the other faction and those who, perhaps, occupy a middle, or neu-tral, position that the plays selected are not only unusual but enteraining. "The Farewell Supper" is one of the episodes in the play "Anatol." 'The episodes in the play "Anatol." The theme deals with the love adventures of a rich young Viennese. This dramatic sketch is one of Schnitzler's first productions (1893) and is still considered as most characteristic of his work. The humor is light and never exaggerated, and the gift of characterization revealed is second to none.

The director of this play is Katherine Cleveland, who has had professional ex-perience both as an actress and as a director. She will be best rememebered by Benning audiences as Mrs. Redding in "Half an Hour," and as the director of last season's hit, "Captain Applejack."

Bernard Shaw's fame as an author and dramatist is world-wide. The range of subjects of his plays varies from those dealing with the exposure of social wrongs, to philosophical disquisitions, metabiological prophecies and drama-tized historical chronicles. The play be-ing presented deals with Napoleon at age of twenty-six.

The director of the play is Truman Smith who directed "Ile" and "L'Apache" in 1929 and took parts in productions at the post in 1930.

Captain Joe L. Ostrander, Inf., now on duty in the Philippine Department, has been assigned to duty as student, The Infantry School at Fort Benning, effective upon completion of his present tour of foreign service.

THE BRIEF CASE By CAPT. WAINE ARCHER

We are seriously disappointed in the ourth Section. After completely ac-Fourth Section. After completely ac-complishing its mission of making us read that Genghis Khan monograph by two weeks of intensive propaganda, the section wasted our time and its effort by actually asking some questions about Genghis.

x x x The day of that "surprise," by the way, was a lucky day for everyone. Those who maxed or nearly maxed it (note Ralph Lovett as one of these) were lucky in their guesses. The rest of us were lucky when it was announced that it was only a "dry run."

x x x x x x The supply oracles, Bull and Peabody, really got "home free" on their stunt of giving a veterinary aid station to a regi-ment entirely without animals. How-ever, it's too good to keep, even though the class did fail to hop on it.

x x x Publication of standing of the contestants in our class question-asking contest is postponed to permit the settlement by the committee of certain technical questions, such as the number of points to be credited on a question asked merely to display the question asked more edge, extra credit for questions asked when the ten-minute break is due ,etc. Kells, Stark and Hamilton constitute the committee, though Stark's eligibility has been questioned on the ground that he is in the race.

x x x Kells has just explained Stark's nick-name of "Moose." It seems, so the story goes, that Stark went to the Philip-pines imbued with the idea of getting some big game hunting. He brought down his first moose without getting buck fever, but later paid eighty pesos for a carabao which sneaked up and died where he shot the moose. Discourand died where he shot the moose. Discour-aged by this, Stark then gave up his effort to find a polar bear. x x xThe infantry displayed rare judg-ment by waiting until the last mono-graph (Rich's) to take dirty digs at both the cavalry and the marines, there-by offering no opportunity for retribu-tion in kind. Rich also seized the oppor-tunity to put a definite period at the end of the course by breaking the long-suffering pointer, which has been in such suffering pointer, which has been in such grave danger so often in the past.

With absolutely no feeling of personal pride we record the fact that the ad-vanced class defeated the company offithe score of 14 points to 4. Further, deponent saith not.

 $\mathbf{x} \quad \mathbf{x} \quad \mathbf{x}$ Getting back to the subject of ques-tions, we have two suggestions which tions, we have two suggestions which are anonymous but which sound very much like products of Lussier's mighty brain, and both of them appeal to us. One is the suggestion that the question-ers take the course by electrical tran-scription. The other is the following analysis: "They think (?) aloud, misun-derstand themselves, and then a r g u e about the misunderstanding." about the misunderstanding.'

x x x As a companion to Kells' hunting about Stark, there is the one that Jim Lyons is telling on Champeny. Champ-eny went turkey hunting last week, and after his unsuccessful effort related the story to Jim about as follows:

"I went out into No. 5 area and right atter I got there I drove my car right up into a big drove of tame turkey. Pretty nearly ran over one of them, too. Finally I shooed them away and went on and got to my blind. Well, do you know, I waited in that blind all day long and never did see a wild turkey?" after I got there I drove my car right

There was a long pause, and then Jim sighed and delivered himself of the following:

There may be a tame turkey on the Benning reservation; but I don't think there is. And I know there isn't a tame one in the No. 5 area. Boy, you shooed away all the wild turkey in Georgia." x x x

Stark obligingly rushed up to us dur-ing Monitor McCunniff's markd problem and informed us that Adrian Brian had brought out his clinometer instead of his compass. And then, absent-mindedly, Stark drew a clinometer from his own pocket.

Explaining why eight points weight to the supply problem of yesterday we quote the following scintillating bit of repartee (only a little bit of it imag-inary, between Major Bull and Reiner during one of our recent problems in supply: Reiner: "Isn't that how?"

Bull: "When is how?" Reiner: "What is when?" Bull: "Why?"

PRICES SLASHED

Great Ordnance Department Sale

On Monday last the Ordnance Department put on a clearance sale of 22 calibre rifles, which proved that the male of the species is just as keen a bargain hound as his wife.

The rifles were an obsolete issue, but many of them were new and in perfect condition. The price was right, being $1.50 for a rifle which—so successful purchasers contend—would cost from $20 to $30 at Sears Roebuck. The sale was not advertised through any of the usual agencies such as the daily bulletin or the Infantry School News. The word that there were bargains in 22 calibre rifles to be had at the Ordnance Store House was merely whispered among the gun nuts of the 3d Section. Thence it spread by word of mouth and with the speed of light throughout the gar-rison. From West and East and North and South columns of male barrison. From West and East and North and South columns of male bar-gain hunters converged on Mr. Floyd demanding rifles. Officers with male offspring used that circumstances as their excuse. Boys still in the bassinette stage and sons at West Point were proclaimed in justification of father's zeal to acquire another fire arm for which mother could see no earthly need. Subterfuge and chicanery were em-ployed without shame in the effort to secure a favored position on the list of first comers. Mr. Floyd, accustomed through long years to the methodical and orderly transaction of public business through the medium of receiving shares and solver the secure of survey and the like of first comers. Mr. Floyd, accustomed through long years to the methodical and orderly transaction of public business through the medium of requisitions, receipts, shipping tickets, boards of survey and the like was almost overwhelmed by the churning mass of gun crazy humanity, but in spite of the confusion rifles were transferred at the rate of one every ten minutes. It was a big day for the Ordnance Department. In all, 99 rifles went into the service of the big and little boy scouts of Fort Benning. Fathers of sons from 10 to 15 who did not get in on the sale are being given a very low rating by same. On the other hand, those who were on the job and got rifles are in poor standing with the mothers. It is just another one of those cases of being damned if you do and damned if you don't. In general, the rifles are highly satisfactory, but in some instances rear sights and other useful adjuncts to good shooting were absent. The cry that has gone up from those whose rifles were incomplete bodes ill for Major MacGregor, the genial and accommodating ordnance expert on The Infantry Board. Sportsmen Peabody and Bull declare that unless they are supplied forthwith with the missing peep sights which their rifles should—yea must—have, they will report the facts to General Bricker when he arrives to inspect the Ordnance situation at Fort Benning. Mean-while, Engineer Hoge, who came off with a complete and perfect specimen of the gun makers art, is greatly amused by the fact that the two Dough-boys whose desks adjoin his both came away from the bargain counter with defective armament. with defective armament.

SECURITY AND MILITARY COURTESY

For some time past Captain Richard Bassett has been exceedingly For some time past Captain Richard Bassett has been exceedingly irritated by the attention which he has been receiving from the M. P. traf-fic cops. The limit of his restraint was reached when one of Sheriff Tut-tle's minions of the law handed him a red card for parking in forbidden zone. Unmindful of the present and future risk involved in taking excep-tion to anything which a member of the police force does or says, the bold captain elected to criticize the manner in which the M. P. delivered his unwelcome missive.

captain elected to tructize the manner in which the M. T. derivered his unwelcome missive. To an officer of the Crack Demonstration Regiment the spectacle of an M. P. straddling a motorcycle and making notes in a book while dis-cussing law enforcement with an officer appeared most inappropriate. Captain Bassett proceeded to deliver himself of a rebuke and an extended lecture on military courtesy. The M. P., in compliance with Captain Bas-sett's instructions, pushed his motorcycle off the road, put his notebook in his pocket and approached the captain with a snappy salute. Greatly pleased with having taught the guardian of the highway a lesson, Captain Bassett started his car and moved off, keeping his eyes meanwhile on the M. P. to make sure that he held the salute for the full regulation distance. Just as the car was getting well underway came the clash of steel on steel. In his concern to insure the M. P.'s proper com-pliance with the requirements of military etiquette, the Captain had neg-lected to watch the road to his front and had run head on into a car ap-proaching from the other direction. Captain Bassett states that in future he will confine his instruction in military courtesy to the 29th Infantry area. (Con. on page 7.)

The design of the light tanks was based upon their use in combat rather than for ease and grace in entering them. For that reason, it is therefore suggested that all ladies desiring a ride in them wear riding clothes.

Riding Instructors' Wives Win Com-mendation for Husbands

The Blunderbuss is in receipt of a copy of a letter of commendation signed by Major Emily Leard, of Thanatopsis Club fame, to Captain Halloran and Lieutenants Monroe and Lockett. The occasion fcr this out-burst of appreciation by Amanuensis Leard was a recent series of demon-strations of the difficult parabolic dis-mount which were staged by the wives of the three talented instructors in equitation named in the letter.

Bond has noted, as he endeavors to note all the interesting "goin's-on" at Benning, where he spent four of the happiest years of his life—with the Doughboys. During my tour at Benning the In-fantry often had me in a much tighter place than it now appears to have my esteemed successor (Maj. Hoge). Us-ually I was able to squirm out, by exer-cising the dexterity which one acquires during a long service in "the only one Corps that's perfect" (according to Kip-ling). Sometimes it was even possible to turn such an episode to distinct ad-vantage by starting a vigorous counter-offensive. I have no doubt that Maj. Hoge can do the same, if given a chance. But if not we may fall back on the old adage that is the occasional exception which proves a rule. And as this is evidently the only exception that it is claimed has occurred during Maj. Hoge's tour at Benning, it is certainly not more than "occasional." A little gentle humor and satire has been deliberately introduced into the

Dear Eddie:

Hennesy is now firing on an azimuth of 2730, range 1400, AS, minus 13, AE, plus 96.1, Q. E. 54.899. You must ex-cuse me if all that seems a bit garbled but honest, Eddie, we have been doing so much work lately in indirect fire problems that my ear is filled with AS's AE's, QE's and so forth First you plot problems that my ear is filled with AS's AE's, QE's and so forth. First you plot them on paper, then you figure them out. Then when you think that you have the battery chart O. K., you find that you do not agree with the chap on your right, nor with the one on your left, in fact you can't find anyone who agrees with you. So you begin to check back, and generally find that somewhere along the line you have made 5 and 2 equal 9

The course is not really difficult, in spite of the fact that we are having to do considerable work at home, and that in spite of this extra home work, some members of the class asked that Capt. Nevins to hold night school. Yep, Eddie, they are going to have a class on Wednesday night and Capt. Nevins says that he will hold more if necessary. There is a moral to this tale, Eddie, nev-er become an instructor in indirect fire and have to hold classes at night.

Besides the subject matter this course has really produced a great strain on some of the members of the class, that of listening carefully to Capt. Nevins' explanation of some obtruse point and then have Ohrbom arise, strike a majes-tic pose, and in well chosen sentences ask for an explanation of the matter ask for an explanation of the matter which hau just been covered. There is also another difficulty, that of determining which of the many solutions to the problem to accept as the valid solution. There is the school solution, but it may be prejudiced due to the formation of complexes in its childhood training. There is also the "Hoople" solution. Students are warned that they use usis at their own risk. Furthermore, we have the "Ballou," he uses it, if no one else will. Life is so complicated, Eddie.

More and more equitating, but the end is in sight. How quiet it will seem to the students, how they will miss the daily lectures of Squire Wood, who lectures to lectures of Squire Wood, who lectures to one class but is heard by all. Some officers complain that they are awakened at night by a galloping specter, bellow-ing, "NOW GENTLEMEN . . ." At other times this weird figures appears and commands, "SLow TROT — HO," and then disappears, leaving his poor victim to slow trot himself to death, till dawn breaks dawn breaks.

dawn breaks. We have also gone rather deeply into the "Balance Equilibrium." That is a very flossy name for a trick riding seat that will enable you to jump well (if the horse can jump), it is also an ex-cellent position if you need kinks in your back and knots in your legs in a big way in a hurry. Maj. Thompson de-livered a most interesting lecture on this position. Then the staff demonstrated. They certainly put on some demonstra-tion. Five horses, five officers, and five They certainly put on some demonstra-tion. Five horses, five officers, and five different ways of doing it. Take your pick, gentlemen. I don't know yet whe-ther Maj. Thompson had the officers stand in their stirrups, to make them uniform, or to bring out the point that one of them could get into position with-out doing so. out doing so.

Nevertheless, it's been a grand course, especially in Lt. McKnight's platoon, where they have ridden at will most of where they have ridden at will most of the year. The final windup of the course is to be a 17-mile ride. My, my, you should have seen the smiles with which Carter and San Diego greeted this an-nouncement. Just like receiving a de-layed Christmas check in the middle of the month says Carter. The route of nouncement. Just like receiving a de-layed Christmas check in the middle of the month, says Carter. The route of the ride was announced, and from the way the officers have been riding around gence. Very good dope it is too. The

it to become familiar with it, by the time the ride comes off the trails will have been so worn down that it will This should be a big help and prevent anyone from getting lost. Jake Moon, anyone from getting lost. Jake Moon, our expert horseshoer (who never shoes a horse) outlined the couse to us. Jake had a little trouble telling East from West on his map. He finally solved the problem by holding the map upside down. Better stick to horseshoes, Jake. Speaking of horses, and who isn't these days when the auto is King, the youngest of the three Rowboat Boys came a cropper the other day. Now a fall from the hurricane deck of a rowcame a cropper the other day. Now a fall from the hurricane deck of a row-boat is not so bad, but a fall from the deck of a horse is another kind of ice cream. Young Bayard Gireme Row-boat has been training a green jumper. The only thing the matter with the horse is that he can't jump. Not in the least daunted by this fact our young hero rides his horse into the ring mid the fan-fare of trumpets, the shooting of fire-works, and the praise and adulation of all ladies present. "He's off !" bel-lowed the starter. "He's off his horse," moaned the crowd. Sad but true. Gal-lant to the last, our hero, when une lant to the last, our hero, when the horse could not take the jump, tried to carry the horse over himself, but alas, he tripped on the top bar and fell; with the horse atop of him. Women wept, and but alas, the horse atop of him. Women wept, and men wiped away a tear or two unasham-ed. To die so young were such a shame. But such was not for our hero. Tho slightly winded, and suffering excrusiat-ing pain from a corn on the toe that he stubbed, our hero dragged himself off. Eddie, now that I have broken into what presses for postru with what passes for poetry with me, may I pause for a minute and recite a few verses most feelingly dedicated to the:

INFANTRY SCHOOL STAFF It's not the walk or the canter we care about. Or the trot down the tree-shaded trail,

It's the slow trot, the slow trot, the slow trot,

That really brings out our wail.

It's not the stirrups or saddle, tho they gall us, Or the short underwear, 'stead the long, But the slow trot, the slow trot, the slow trot, It's making our backbones all wrong.

It's not the gait of the horses we ride,

Or the hours, from one until four, It's the slow trot, the slow trot, the slow trot,

That's making our bump-bumps so sore.

It's not the jumping of hurdles that gets

Be they brush, bar, or four in-andouts.

It's the slow trot, the slow trot, the slow trot, That really has put us to rout.

t's not the lectures we've had in the open-air, When the wind was whistling around, it's the slow trot, the slow trot, the slow trot, That's the reason we can't sit down.

Now the life of a student is pleasant, But happier all would be

If, the slow trot, the slow trot, the slow trot.

Should be lost on a ship at sea . . .

Now Eddie, lest you think that I am at the Cavalry school, I will progress to some Griffin will meet Mike Firpo in the main event Tuesday night.

As a result of his fight with Battling Finch at Tampa, Florida, last Tuesday night, "Cyclone" Smith will be unable to meet "Corn" Griffin, it was definitely announced by Captain Miller, Fort Ben-ning's Fight Promoter. Wednesday morning, Smith's left hand started to swell, and an X-ray examination shows definitely a clean break at the base of Smith's thumb. Major Maxwell, medical corps, says that Smith will be unable to do any fighting for the next three months. In spite of his broken hand, Smith is insisting on going through with the fight with Griffin.

This however is impracticable, accord-ing to the Medical officers.

Capt. Miller, Athletic Officer, immediately got in touch with the manager of Mike Firpo of Tampa, Fla., Peter Bun-gardtz to arrange for Firpo to appear in place of Smith.

It is likely that "Mike" Firpo, weighing 178 pounds may be the man. He is a terrific hitter and well known throughout the south. His record includes a draw and a decision with "Battling" Finch, a knockout in two rounds over Paul Maul, a draw with Joe Knight, a knockout over "Jeff" Carrol, a win by knockout over "Jeff" Carrol, a win by decision and one lost by decision with "Young Jack" Tunney. Firpo recently created quite a flurry in Florida boxing circles when he held Mike Maurer, Pa Stribling's German heavyweight, to a draw in a furious ten round mill at Wast Palm Baceh Florida Firmo also West Palm Beach, Florida. Firpo also fought and won in the semi final bout of the Jack Sharkey-Phil Scott fight at Miami, last year. Should there be any mishap in bring-ing Firpo here for Griffin, it has been arranged to get K. O. King of Cleve-land, Ohio to meet Griffin. King has been nghting in Florida during the win-ter and is a good boy. He has fought such boys as Joe King, Buster Newberry

Bob Godwin, Joe Knight and others. The semifinal of eight rounds will also be a real first string event. "Saginaw" Seeley, Battling Medico, will meet Carl East, flashy Atlanta welterweight. East East, flashy Atlanta welterweight. East is booked as a knockout artist and is coming here to stop Seeley. The Medico has been training for the past two weeks and is in top shape; he has recently been working to develop a kayo punch. With his super boxing skill, Seeley can needs a sleep producer to take his place among the top notchers. Danny Davis, old Benning favorite.

among the top notchers. Danny Davis, old Benning favorite, will swing back into action. "Danny" has been booked to meet "Peanut" How-ard of LaGrange, in his return bout. This will be a six round affair. Willie ("Red") Keenan, former army bantamweight champion, will don the gloves again after a long lay off. Keen-an is booked to meet Call Martin, of At-lanta. Martin is a youngster who has been going good for the past year and is expected to make Keenan step out.

rounds rounds "Ghost" Ghastly, doughboy middle-weight, and "Phenix" Fourroux, of the Galloping Gunners, will meet in the fea-ture four rounder. Both of these young-sters carry a wallop and are willing

The bouts will begin at 8:00 p.m. There will be a band concert beginning at 7:30 p.m., for those who arrive early. Capt. K. L. Berry probably will referee.

MEDICO CAGESTERS TRIM BIBB CITY QUINT, 27 TO 17

The Medico basketball team took a fast game from the Bibb City cage-sters at Columbus, last Tuesday night, by the score of 27 to 17. The Medicos flashed a fast passing offensive that completely smothered their opponents during the final half of the game.

Gilbert at center for the Medicos was high point man with a total of 13 mark-ers to his credit. Several of his shots were made at long range and he was given a big hand by the crowd. Tuesday night's victory gave the Medi-cos their fourth win in as many starts. They have lost only one game this sea-son, a close affair to the Columbus Advertisers.

Don Isham played a fine game at center for the soldiers.

Another feature of the game was the clean sportsmanship exhibited by the teams. Only one foul was called on the visiting team, while the Musketeers were guilty on three occasions.

MESS HALL GOSSIB ABOUT THE POST

Gunner DePratt is handling the chow line at Co. "H," 29th Infantry again. The Gunner is noted for his ability to put over the old kayo and satisfy the inner man of hungry doughboys.

When Sgt. J. Horace Vines of Com-pany "D," 29th Infantry returns from furlough soon, he probably will find the going a little rough on the present Iow rations. He is considered one of the best-feeding chow handlers in Fore Benning.

Mess Sgt. John Falk. Regt. Hdqrs. Co., 29th Infantry, is keeping the Trouble Shooters smiling. Sgt. Falk is blessed with a staff of excellent cooks.

"Hot" Taylor, former "D" Company slum burner, is making good as mess sergeant in the Regimental Machine Gun Company. The men are well pleased with the chow and say that "Ole Hot" is keeping his accounts balancing nicery. Attaboy, Hot.

MUSKETEERS TAKE GAME FROM STRONG MACON "Y" FIVE BY SCORE OF 45 TO 31

The Benning Musketeers took a fast game of basketball from the strong Ma-con "Y" five Wednesday night, 45 to 31. Flashing a surprising attack in the first half, the Musketeers were leading at the half, 28 to 18. The Musketeer second string played almost the entire half. In the last half the visitors rallied and came within three points of tieing the score. Roosma, Draper and Kammerer went into action and smothered the rally. The shooting of Haynie and Roosma was outstanding for the Musketeers.

The Infantry School Hunt By M. F. H.

All Saturday afternoon it rained and rained, until at last by midnight the skies had cried themselves dry and the ditches ran full with the tears. Through it all the Hunt Staff witched, with anxious eyes, for the silver lining which is supposedly in every cloud. Early Sun-day morning, the ditches had emptied themselves into Malone Lake and the skies serene—everything set for a nice hunt. At six o'clock the telephone oper-ator was told that "there surely would be a hunt" and requested that he pass on this information to any "doubting Thomases."

When the coffee and doughnut man arrived at the Polo-Hunt Club, he found the four latest recruits to the sport patiently sitting and impatiently await-ing their coffee. In spite of the threatsembled and made ready for the chase. Some had asked the telephone operator, and some just knew there would be a hunt.

hunt. With a small field of some forty en-thusiasts the Master left the Club and moved down the Lumpkin Road for the first cast. The air and ground were so full of moisture that the hounds could run with noses high in the air. (It would have been a wonderful morning for a cat hunt!) Away the pack start-ed, with such speed that the whins could ed, with such speed that the whips could hardly check them on top of Maxey Ridge.

So it went, over hill and dell, across swampy places and creeks. Everyone on his, and her, toes and having a glorious run through the fog. Someone remarked that it was a perfect English morning, so full of hounds, horses, moisture and good sportsmanship. From check to check, the field followed the hounds to

The state in which food is swallowed plays its part in normal digestion. An unripe banana will resist digestion because its starch can not be converted to sugar; a ripe banana may be just as hard to digest if it be swallowed in great chunks for then the digestive juice can not do its work except on the out-side of the chunk. Candy is often blamed for acute digestive upsets. Tolplamed for acute digestive upsets. 101-erance for sugar varies in different in-dividuals. Capacity to use up fats also varies. Just because a small amount of orange juice daily is a wise thing to take, it does not follow that a pint of orange juice a day is a better practice. Most persons have a definite idea as to the article of food which causes their sick article of food which causes their sick stomach. They are most always wrong. Illness is usually hitched upto some ar-ticle of food taken at the last meal. The real cause is usually some food taken 6, 12 or 24 hours before. A healthy gastric juice can overcome much of the trouble from spoiled foods, much of the trouble from sponed looks, but in the hot summer, just when we need it most, is the very time when the stomach acid is deficient. Paintful ab-dominal upsets are often laid to the eating of fish, lobster, oysters, or shrimp. Sometimes these foods are spoiled when bought, but more often it is found that they are harmful because of a peculiar inability of certain persons to eat such foods without being poisoned. 500 HEAR TALK BY COL. CHAFFEE

Mechanized Force is Subject of War Department General Staff Officer

Approximately five hundred Fort Benning officers were present at the Main Theatre last Monday morning, to hear a lecture by Lieutenant Colonel Adna R. Chaffee of the G-3 Section, War De-partment General Staff, on mechanized forces.

Colonel Chaffee was introduced by the commandant of the Infantry School, Brigadier General Campbell King, who took this opportunity to pay tribute to Colonel Chaffee's distinguished father, the late Lieutenant General Adna R. Chaffee, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army, 1904-06, and in introducing the colonel, General King called attention to Colonel Chaffee's splendid World War record. Col. Chaffee's father commanded the American troops in the Chinese expedi-tion at the time of the Boxer uprising. The subject of Colonel Chaffee's lec-ture was the "Composition, Objectives, and Doctrines of the Machanized Force" and Doctrines of the Mechanized Force." The subject is of timely professional in-terest to all officers, on account of experiments now going on at Fort Eustis, Va., with the newly organized mechanized force. Col. Chaffee discussed the purpose, organization and probable use of a mech-anized force. He brought out the diffi-culties surrounding the organization of the present force at Eustis.

Organization of a mechanized force on anything but a small scale, he showed, was impracticable, largely for financial reasons.

SERGEANT LAYER TO NIAGARA Staff Sergeant Harland W. Layer, Medical Dept., has been relieved from further duty at this station and will proceed t) Fort Niagara, N. Y., for duty.

The Hour

The Officers' Club has decided to add Wednesday evening at the main club building. Music will be furnished by a four-piece orchestra and will start about 8:30 p. m.

A special supper will be served at 8:00 p. m., and the total cost^o for this supper and the music will be approxi-mately sixty cents a person.

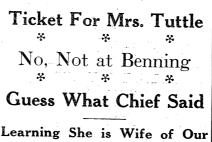

The Club officer has made arrange-ments with the Post Theatre for feature pictures on the following dates on which the night-club program will be on at the Club:

Feb. 4th, "East is West," featuring Lupe Velez, Lewis Ayres and Edward G. Robinson.

Feb. 11th, "Big Trail," epic picture of the West.

Feb. 18th, "Holiday," all star cast. Feb. 25th, "Morocco," Gary Cooper, Marlene Dietrich.

The management suggests that officers attend the early show on these nights and enjoy the supper and dancing af-terwards at the Club.

Miss Reed Will Have One of Leading Roles in "Farewell Supper"

Maj. Lange and Lt. Baughman Have Important Parts in This Play

Post dramatics will suffer a real loss when Daisy Reed makes her last ap-pearance as Mimi in Schnitzler's "Farewell Supper" on February 6th and 7th. Daisy's charm and vivacity have given a real touch to many of the plays pre-sented in recent years. One of her outsented in recent years, One of her out-standing successes was the Duchess Martigny in "L'Apache" last year. Her Benning audiences will hope that as Mrs. Royce she will help in the uplift of Chinese drama, and that upon her return to the States she will again be stationed here. Lieutenant Richard L. Baughman, who plays the part, of Anatole, is a new-comer to post dramatics, but has had experience at other posts. He played the lead in "Nothing But The Truth" in Hawaii two years ago. Major Otto Lange who takes the part of Max, is the Chief of the Historical Department of the Fourth Section. This establishes at once his place in any dramatic production. However, it may be added gratuitously that he directed "The Florist Shop" and took the part of Sir Joseph in "Shall We Join The Ladies?" last year.

Lieutenant Lynn E. Brady, who is the waiter, has had parts at other stations, but is making his initial bow here.

The other play to be presented is Shaw's "Man of Destiny" about which as much detailed information as the director permits will appear in the next issue.

THE FATE OF WEARY WILLIE

Benning Witching Stick Triumphs Over Science Raucous Mirth Fades Suddenly Jabelonsky and Sheriff Tuttle Converted

By Al Durden

"Uncle" Frank Smith, colored tenant living on his little farm out near the eastern boundary of the Fort Benning reservation, probably never heard of the word science, and if he did he never had the least idea what it was all about. In fact for the past three score years and ten, he has probably never travelled far-ther north than Columbus and further south than the little village of Cussetta. Aside from his ability to raise corn, cotton and yellow yams on his little farm, "Uncle Frank" is also noted throughout the country side for his ability as a 'possum hunter and a "Water Witch."

In the fall of the year when the frost has fallen and the persimmons hang ripe and sweet, the 'possum grows fat and tender and 'tis then that the finest dish in the world is "'possum and taters." "Uncle" Frank knows the feeding ground of every opossum from the headwaters of the Upatoi to the darkest tangles of Camel swamp. When he calls "Buck" and "Nigger," his dogs, to heel and heads for the woodland on a winter night, he never fails to return with one or more of the grinning "Georgia 'possums."

Last but not least is "Uncle" Frank's ability to locate a vein of water at the shallowest possible depth, and thereby hangs our story. For years the farming people throughout this section of the country have depended upon wells for their water supply. A farmer building a new home is always interested in finding water as shallow as possible. In fact quite often a well will be dug one hunquite often a went will be dug one hun-dred feet deep and no water found, when probably thirty feet away a vein of water would have been found at a depth of forty feet. By means of his "water stock" Uncle Frank is able to locate the hidden vein of water. He merely takes the stick, which is a forked willow branch, grasping each of the prongs, he holds the stick above his head and begins walking. When he comes to the point where a vein of water is run-ning near the surface the stick will twist downward towned the meaned. The twist downward toward the ground. The twist is not slight, in fact it is next to impossible to hold it in an upright position. Captain "Wild Bill" Tuttle, provost Captain "Wild Bill" Tuttle, provost marshal of Fort Benning, heard the story of the "witching stick" from one of the range guards. The Captain took the matter as a joke and advised the guard not to believe any such funny stories. The guard insisted that Captain Tuttle ar out ord for for himself Tuttle go out and see for himself. A drive of several miles brought them to "Uncle Frank's" cabin. The witching stick was brought out and Captain Tut-tle was shown how to hold the stick by the old man. After receiving his in the old man. After receiving his in-structions on how to hold the stick, Cap-tain Tuttle began walking, holding the stick in the prescribed position. Just when he was about to turn back in dissomething happened, gust, an unseen hand seemed to reach out and grasp the top of the stick and began to twist it slowly in and down. Three times the slowly in and down. Three times the Captain tried and each time at this particular spot an unseen force would grasp and twist the stick.

Back to Fort Benning came Captain Tuttle to tell his story. Long and loud were the laughs of his friends. It seems that Captain Carl H. Jabelonsky of the laughed longest Quartermaster Corps, and loudest, and 'twas him that Captain Tuttle picked to make a believer. He gladly consented to go out to the "Wa-ter Witch's" house and be shown. "Uncle Frank" was only too glad to let the Captain try out his water stick. Truly this was a competition between world's leading engineering universities The idea that an unseen power that would attract a dead willow stick and make it twist in one's hand was unheard of. Holding the stick as directed, the Captain began walking, five, ten and probably twenty steps, and then some-thing happened. Captain Tuttle de-describes the scene thusly: "for a moment the Captain's eyes opened wide in surprise and astonishment, then as the stick continued to twist in and down be compared big down he found his voice. "Look, it is turn-ing, it is turning," muttered Captain Jabelonsky, as witchcraft triumphed over science.

The above means of locating water is a common custom throughout the south-land, especially throughout the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida and Alabama. Natur ally the custom is fast disappearing in our modern age, but the small farmers that dig their wells with pick and shovel and haul the dirt out by means of a windlass, rope and wooden bucket, always sink their wells where the water Ways sink their wells where the water stick points to the ground. Editor's note: We were somewhat skeptical when we first read copy on this story, and were about to consign it to "oblivion," i. e., to the W. B., when our eves caucht certain bacdlings in our eyes caught certain headlines in a recent issue of our esteemed contempo-rary, The New York Times.

DICK KING STARS AS BLACK PRINCE

Qualifies for Prince of Wales Club in No Undecided

Fashion

One of the most enthusiastic members of the younger horsey set is Dick King, the twin brother of Miss Barbara King, who holds the unofficial automobile speed record between Columbus and Fort Benning.

On Sunday, last, Dick functioned as special aide to Colonel Chaffee on the cat hunt. Colonel Chaffee being a grad-uate of Saumur, Riley, and all other foreign and domestic equitation schools and prospective head ring master of the great Riley Circus, Dick was out to make an impression. No jump was too high or too wide for him to tackle and soft take offs and uncertain landing fields were mere incidentals in the life of the decking reserve and the life of the dashing young cavalier. All went well until the field found itself confronted with a ten foot water hazard with marshy banks and boggy bottom. Even Squire Wood and his pink costumed crew adopted safe and sane crossing tactics, but not so, Dick. Rid-ing headlong to the brick headlorted ing headlong to the brink, he elected the bolder course of taking it at one jump. There was a mighty splash as horse and rider landed fairly in midstream.

For some three minutes thereafter members of the field arriving on the scene of the disaster thought they had discovered a mud geyser on the Benning reservation. Great columns of primeval ooze spurted high in air as an indis-tinguishable central mass rose and fell through a veil of muddy spray. Finally the mass separated and crawled to shore in two parts. The larger one proved to be the horse and a little sympathetic excavation revealed the smaller one to be the formerly debonnaire Dick. On Monday morning Dick's entire riding outfit went to the cleaners but since Dick's head is firmly attached to his shoulders it may be some days before the last vestiges of Dixie swamp land can be entirely eradicated from scalp and ears.

Although the hounds killed no cat, it is reported that Colonel Chaffee enjoyed the hunt.

LT. DREWRY GETS TURKEY IN HOUR

29th Infantry Officers Claims Speed Record Among Benning Hunters

Lieutenant Flag A. Drewry, 29th In-fantry, claims the Benning speed record getting turkey gobblers. It took him exactly one hour (lacking a second or exactly one hour (lacking a second or two) to get the gobbler. "Shucks," said Drewry, after reading about the remarkable record made by the Steels in getting their turkeys, "Shucks, it took 'em six or seven days to get their turkeys. I got mine in an hour, and I didn't sit in a blind either. I was right out in the open" I was right out in the open." Last Wednesday, Lieutenant and Mrs.

Drewry felt the need of replenishing the Drewry feit the need of replensing the family larder, and so started on a tur-key hunt. They headed for Area Num-ber 4, and started combing the brush along the Upatoi. There just ahead of them about thirty-five or forty yards away were three beautiful wild turkeys fooding a hear scorted by two gobblers away were three beautinin wild tinkeys feeding; a hen escorted by two gobblers. Drewry got his gobbler on the first shot. It weighed nineteen pounds and two ounces. Mrs. Drewry being armed with a 410 shot gun did not fire, so conse-quently, was denied the pleasure of getting her gobbler. That the above was not just a pure accident, Drewry points to last year's record, "Yes, sir, last year I got my turkey in an hour and a half." In Texas, back in 1923, he managed to get thir-teen turkeys in one day. That is his biggest day's bag. During a six year period on the "border," he has also brought down on both sides of the Rio Grande a grand total of thirty-two deer.

As curtain rises one instructor is at phone calling 67.

Instr.: Is this the Infantry stables? Voice: Yas, suh!

Instr.: Is there an officer to whom I can speak?

Can speak:
 Voice: No sah, they's all down at the bull ring getting ready to jump.
 Instr.: Well, I want to arrange for some mounts for next Monday afternoon to make a reconnaissance. Voice: Yas suh, Major, where you wants them hosses and when? Instr: On Davis Hill, 1:15 p. m. Monday. Voice: Yas suh, you shorely will have 'em, and an orderly too. Our hosses know the water tank area, but I ain't sho' they knows where Davis Hill is.

Instr.: Hello, this is Major speaking.

Voice: Major, we have a request here for mounts for reconnaissance on Mon-day afternoon. I am sorry, but your request must come through the secretary f the Second Section. Instr.: You mean that I must call the secretary of the Second Section and ask him for a horse? Voice: Yes, sir, that's the way. (Instr. hangs up receiver and then calls secretary of the Second Section.) Instr.: Hello, is this the secretary?

Voice: No, sir, this is the orderly, the secretary is not here. Instr.: Well, I am trying to get a horse on which to make a reconnaissance Monday afternoon. Is there any one Voice: Yes, sir, just a minute. Female voice: Hello, the orderly said ou wanted to speak to me. I am the stenographer.

Instr.: Yes, maybe you can help me. I want to arrange for a mount for Mon-day, etc., etc., and I was informed at the stables that the the stables that the request must come the stables that the request must come through the secretary of your section. Female Voice: Well, the secretary is in Columbus and won't be back until Monday morning. Infantry stables again) Hello, this is ----- speaking. I called up Major some time ago about a mount for reconnaissance Monday afternoon.

Voice: Yas suh! You will have to wait 'till the Cap'n comes in and talk to him. They's jumpin' out in the bull ring now. No sah! Hold the 'phone a minute, here comes Cap'n Halloran now. Captain H's voice: Hello, Major, this is Captain Halloran. I was talking to you earlier this morning. You want a mount for Monday afternoon. Well, maybe I didn't make myself clear. The request for your mount must come through the secretary of the Second Section, or we can't consider it. Strict orders, don't you know! Instr.: But I called up the Second Section. The secretary is gone and won't be back until Monday morning. The orderly and the stenographer have both indicated their approval of my re-quest and Major Patrick, who is now in the office, says it will be all right for me to get the mount. Voice: Major Patrick! Were you asking for field telephones or mounts? Ma-jor Patrick might give you a phone, but he can't say whether or not you may have a mount. That authority lies with the secretary of the Second Section. Can't you see, Major, what we are in-terested in, is getting your horse to you, when you want it and where you want it. That's why you must call the secretary. Of course, we know in this instance where you want the horse and when you want him, but suppose every-body called down here and we happened to get any one time and place mixed, why, it would be just too bad, that's all. You understand—that's simple? Instr.: Yes, I'm simple! That is, I'll call the secretary Monday and ask for a mount.

Scene IV

Scene: Instructor's Quarters. Time: 6:30 a. m., Sunday morning. Telephone rings and Instructor, bareboted and clad in somewhat tattered but still serviceable pajamas, descends the stairs to answer it. His facial expression is that of a man who is expecting a margin call.

29TH POLO TEAM BEATS ARTILLERY

Col. Chaffee Helps Freebooters Defeat Students—Games Very Fast

Delightful Palm Beach weather and top speed polo was enjoyed by a large gallery that saw the double header polo gallery that saw the double header polo game at French Field Sunday after-noon, when the 29th Musketeers defeat-ed the 83d Red Shirts 9 to 1 and the Freebooters, aided by Lieutenant Col-onel Adna R. Chaffee, Army Polo Rep-resentative, trounced the Students 11 to 1.

Carmouche, Strickler, Jacobs and Skelton, in the first game of the afternoon, against Draper, Herbert Baker, Bartlett and Grubbs uncorked a brand of speed and team action far in advance of speed and team action far in advance of their previous efforts this season. They allowed the Red Shirts 'only one goal which was scored by Bartlett on a free shot for goal from the 60 yard line. Carmouche, playing in excellent form, was high scorer and his stick work was at time, wacany. He scored the was at times uncanny. He scored the first goal of the game with a difficult near side backhand save and in the last chukker deflected a shot while it was in the air, just enough to wedge it through the goal posts. Tallying by the Mus-keteers was as follows: Carmouche 4, Strickland, Jacobs 3, Skelton 1. The Freebooters highpowered lineup, consisting of Colonel Chaffee, Lockett, Arnold, Lyman, Thompson and Sweet, proved baffling to the two Student teams composed of Brann, Dulaney, Cauld and Newman acting as the first Gould and Newman, acting as the first team, and Bevans, Mood, Pierce and Williams, constituting the second team. General King received the salute of the starting lineups. Although the score was lopsided, 11 to 1, the Student teams played strenuous polo and the game was full of flash and dash from start to finish.

Each of the Freebooter players were up four chukkers. Majors Thompson, Lyman and Arnold each made thrilling Lyman and Arnold each made thrilling dashes from the center throwin and scored unassisted. Dulancy scored the single counter for the Students. Scor-ing by the Freebooters was as follows: Colonel Chaffee 1, Lockett 3, Arnold 2, Lyman 8, Thompson 2, Sweet 1. For mid-season polo these two games were the fastest we have ever seen, both were the fastest we have ever seen, both as to speed, team-play and stick work. Colonel Chaffee, the Army Polo Rep-resentative was highly enthusiastic and remembering the defeat that the Ben-ning team handed the War Department Team last year was a bit inquisitive concerning the composition of the All-Ben-ning team this season.

The Infantry School Hunt

By M. F. H.

Gentle trebles and booming basses of "Oh, how we hate to get up in the morning" were apparently dead to M. F. H. ears. At least, either to prove that a M. F. H. can be a Christian gentheman, or to prove that it is the early bird that catches the cat, the Daily Bulletin carried the astounding an-nouncement that a live hunt would start from the Stables at half after seven, Sunday morning, January 25th.

With the thermometer at a lukewarm 32 degrees, and with most of the rise taken out of the sun, the M. F. H. trotted the first echelon of a field of $\upsilon 0$ out to the kennels. Followed by the new pink-coated hunt surgeon, Col. Stayer, commanding the Peabody pla-toon for the first time. Followed by the post rear echelon, those pitiful cases to whom an alarm clock is only an to whom an alarm clock is only an alarm clock, go it off at 4:30 or 6:30. At the kennels the irreconcilable early risers were somewhat mollified by having their moving pictures taken by Ma-jor and Mrs. Edward Sherburne, a watchwhile bequest to posterity that could not be accomplished in the shady dawn. It was disheartening to learn the next day that the Sherburnes dis-covered they had squandered 40 feet of defective film on the hunters. What price late rising!

It was a fine spring morning by the It was a fine spring morning by the time the hounds were released. The huntsman carried the pack along the southern edge of Fiske Range to Sew-elson Creek where the first cast was made. The hounds hunted hungrily, but drew a blank.

A second cast was made just south of Gilbert Creek with the pack hunting eastward to Harp's Creek, where they turned south. The field rambled down Keystone Road and across the Oswichee by the "field" hands. Here was virgin country never before disturbed by hunters to hounds. The intrepid hunters and explorers were nearly bogged down in a branch of the Oswichee, but all the horses eventually pulled through very much muddied.

Little Black Beauty, a tidy pony, used the first grassy hillside he came to for a bath towel. The field was startled by the piercing screams of young Arch-Arnold: "get up. Black Beauty, get up." It was a relief to everyone to see young Arch Arnold vigorously kicking the young pony in the slats and realize the screams were an expression of anger rather than terror.

Everyone was happy when the hounds picked up a trail of a cat, running it from the Oswichee to the Chattahoochee, and thence south below Mill Creek. It may still be running, as some of the hounds are not in yet.

The Field, too, was very much re-duced when it fetched up at one o'clock, with 23 of the original 60. But it is believed all were present and accounted for when the Sunday dinner gong sounded.

MILITARY POLICEMEN HAVE FAST CAGE AGGREGATION

With a record of nine victories and two defeats for the season, Constable "Wild Bill" Tuttle's Policemen show being a big threat in Fort Benning basketball competition. Not content with lambasting the "daylights" out of several of the garrison cage teams, the Policemen have also booked several games with outside teams. Their second defeat of the season came from the hands of the Salem, Alabame high school quintet last Monday night at Salem. The game was a fast played affair and the final score stood 34-32. The teams will meet in a return in the Benning minor cage loop.

game at the garrison gymnasium Sun-day afternoon. The Policemen are confident of reversing the score on their home court.

Lt. Johnny Roosma has been coaching the Military Police cagesters in the fine points of the game and this coaching has been one of the big factors of uneir success this season.

"Beaverboard" Boudreaux, at forward, has led the Policemen in scoring with a high average of 17 points per game. Besides his ability to loop the game. Besides his ability to loop the hoop, he is also a fast man on defensive as well as offensive. Wilcox at forward has been running a close second to Boudreaux. His dribbling and passing have accounted for numerous markers.

THE BRIEF CASE By CAPT. WAINE ARCHER

Frankly, we get so few opportunities statement regarding the capture of that this year to convince anyone what slaves famous prisoner.

we are of this heartless academic Jug-gernaut, that, with proof in black (or as near black as the overworked mimeoas near black as the overworked mimeo-graph can accomplish) and white, we can't resist. Here, then, is book, chap-ter and verse. The official schedule for Thursday, January 22, prescribed ap-proximately 28,500 words of study ref-erences. But, as that stupendous fact shudders its way home, don't spoil the effect by looking at the schedule for the two days preceding. x = x = x

Speaking of the mimeograph, Kraft explained to us last week that one reason the army was so anxious for the selective service law to pass in 1917 was in order that 200,000,000 blank forms might be used. Munteanu's quick mind caught that one. We were too busy listening to that—and other—explana-tions. And how! xxx

Dominie McCunniff was crude enough to ask Paynter and Bulger at the be-ginning of a period last week for the subject of the scheduled conference. We noted with approval, however, that he was wise enough not to ask that same question at the close.

The committee of judges in the class question-asking contest recommended last week that the entire back row in the class room be moved up into third position. This was in the interest of fairness to a number of the leading contestants, but Jensen, who by the move was relegated to the rear, immed-iately demonstrated that position is uniately demonstrated that position is un-important by scoring twenty points (of-ficial scorers figures) off Peabody with a question which the latter welcomed as the perfect one, in that it brought out all the points that could be wrong. X X XLussier has prepared as a motto to be engraved upon the fur-lined vessel to be awarded the winner of this great con-test, the following:

"Be sure you are trite; then go ahead."

Out of revenge we now suggest to his Immediate Su-perior that she called for an itemized dolph, 2nd Lt. James O. Wade, from the Panama Canal Department; and 2nd Lt. William W. O'Connor, from the Hawaiian Department. She: "What's your name?" He: "Juan." She: "Aw, go wan yourself."—(Notre Dame Juggler.)

The latest initiate to the Foobridge Club, founded by Captain Paynter, is Gibson. He was elected by acclamation during Joe Collins' terrain exercise last week when he repeated, absolutely with-out error, a question which had just been answered. xxx

During the same exercise George Read was awarded the Croix de Query with palm for downright honesty for the fol-lowing effort at 3:10 p. m.: Collins: "Are there any questions? Read: "Yes. How many more situa-tions?"

x x x We wish some of these lucky bums would quit gumming up their marked problems. On the few occasions when we hit something right, they tie it up and then their luck starts working, with the result that the whole thing is thrown out and we remain consistent, if not distinguished. x x x x x x On his trick machine gun problem last week Joe Collins gave a wonderful demonstration of the elastic defense. Successively we struck these lines: 1. Don't throw any rocks when 1 an-nounce this decision." 2. "We don't really care whether you agree or not—" or words to that effect. 3. The 1st Battalion advanced on the bridge from the southwest, and it came to pass that it felt the need of a little flank protection. Lt. Ohme and one squad was it.

Unmindful of the fame about to descend on him, Lieutenant Ohme nonchalantly picked out Company "B's" pet squad, the Chief of Infantry's very own, and just an nonchalantly started north on his tour through the jungles of the Bossois Bois.

For the first thousand yards of jungleland all went well, straight north by the light of the waning north star. Then the going became more and more difficult. Descending into a network of swampy streams, the north star was no longer to be seen . . . and didn't the orders say to rejoin the column at the bridge where the Santa Fe Trail crossed Heriot Creek. Well our hero having achieved a 90-degree loss of direction, found himself on Rossell Ridge where the "enemy" in large numbers drove the gallant leader and his equally gallant squad back to the mire of Heriot Creek, thus unwit-tingly causing them to continue in the right direction. Some more enemy patrols in the vicinity of the trysting place on the bridge, now caused our hero to re-estimate the situation, with the con-clusion that the First Battalion's right flank patrol, as such, was plumb S. O. L. Being senior officer on the spot, Lt. Ohme, after a few en-circling maneuvers which did not give decisive results, promptly assigned his patrol an independent mission. Continuing on the march, therefore the patrol progressed, leaving Heriot Creek behind it. Now it happened that the "enemy" guarding Heriot Creek, was some-what bewildered by the rapid appearance everywhere of hostile patrols. The reserve company was posted on Brown Hill. Lt. Ohme's braves came suddenly on this company. Believing all was lost when it saw white armbands advancing from an unsuspected avenue of approach, this reserve company faltered before the aggressive advance of Lt. So in the spirit of the song "Show me the way to go home," and not desiring to add further laurels for one episode, our hero nonchalantly inquired of Corporal Kern: "What's the best way back, corporal?" "Follow me," said the corporal, and he unerringly led the Chief of Infantry's prize squad back to First Sergeant John D. Brown's tender care.

- Maj. Bradley: No, but a lot more will be coming along shortly. We usually have a pretty good turn out for our turkey shoots

Maj. Harding: (feigning surprise): Oh! You're having a turkey shoot this morning. I didn't know that. I knew that you had been having a hard time getting people to turn out regularly for the weekly shoots so I thought I'd turn out and do my bit to keep things going. It's a great sport and you two deserve a lot of credit for keeping it alive, so I always turn out whenever I can for— Capt. Chance: For the turkey shoots,

Major? Maj. Harding: No, certainly not: With the way you two have things fixed up I haven't had a Chinaman's chance of ever winning anything. Why listen! I haven't done any shooting to speak of for

Maj. Bradley: Yes Forrest, I know all about that and more. At West Point you

Maj. Harding (interrupting): At West Point, yes—I was younger in those days and besides I was shooting a 12 gauge gun. I only have this little 20 gauge now and you know that's a great big handicap in itself. With the handi-cap you two have figured out I might just as well not shoot. As I said be-fore, it's only because I want to help you out that I shoot at all.

Maj. Bradley: We're mighty glad to have you turn out Forrest, and what you say about your 20 is true to a certain extent, but we have figured it out Maj. Harding: Bob shoots a 20 and

Maj. Harding: Bob shoots a 20 and he'll tell you that there is about a 4 bird difference between that and a 12, he said so the other day in the office. Capt. Chance: I said, Major, that— Maj. The handicap committee by this time has been surrounded by an interested group of contestants, eagerly awaiting the decision of that august body in connection with the case at hand. The committee has softened visibly, as they go into executive council.

Maj. Bradley: We have decided to in crease your present handicap of 5 birds by two, making a total of seven. It's two birds too many and you know it, but-

Maj. Harding: What! Only a total of seven? Good Lord, you two are the biggest tightwads I ever saw. I ought to go home and save money.

Maj. Bradley: First order up!

(Other contestants approach the committee with eager faces in the hope that they also may profit by a change of heart. However, the spell has been broken and the other suppliants are turned away.)

1st Contestant: Did you hear all that? I have never broken over 12 in my life and they hand me a rating of six. And

Flags are displayed from a pole and the color of the flag indicates what the well dressed warrior will wear. An excellent innovation.

Benning leads in all things therefore we cannot adopt that method regardless of its excellence. True, we have a flag pole like any well regulated garrison, and it would always be possible to dis-play uniform A, B, or C therefrom. It is a bit^{}unorthodox however. If athletic clothing were the order of the day, I can see possibilities of complication. At least one member of this garrison made an inglorious exodus from one of our most revered institutions of learning because there was proudly displayed from the flag staff of that school an article of apparel which, at a distance, resembled part of a suit of athletic clothing, but was not. No — painful memories compel me to advise against puch a system such a system.

The idea of a clothing display is bas-ically sound. Flags might be misinterpreted but clothing, never. Also we have an ideal place for such a display. Where Wold Ave. collides with the First Division Road there is a circle and a circle within a circle and rising therefrom a Trap Boy: Gee! Major Harding is certainly smacking 'em, isn't he? Handicap Committee: And how!

Trap Boy: I always liked the way he says "pull"—good and loud—he has a lot of confidence, hasn't he? Capt. Chance: He ought to have with that handicap. Maj. Bradley: He lost three birds out of twenty—if he misses all the rest we've got him—but he won't, and we're sunk again.

Trap Boy: You know, Major, the way he stands up there to shoot he reminds me of Napoleon — sort of proud like, you know!

Maj. Bradley: Looks are very deceiving — he impresses me as a man who would be mean to little children and dumb animals.

Contestants (in chorus): Harding wins! Harding wins!

(The indisposed chief of the fourth gauge gun, and with seven year old ammunition broke 21 out of 25 birds. This with his meager handicap of 7 results in a net total of 28 birds, 5 above his nearest competitor.)

Handicap Committee: We, who are about to die, salute you. (or) Ave Harding! T_e morituri salutant.

Maj. Harding: Congratulate me boys, never thought that I could do it. Handicap Committee: Oh, yeah?

Lady Spectator: Oh, Captain Chance! I did enjoy the shooting so much. Major Harding was just wonderful wasn't he? He's one of the best shots out here, isn't he? He wasn't even the least bit nervous, either. I do so wish that I could shoot that way.

Capt. Chance: Come out for the next shoot and we'll give you a nice, big, fat handicap. We're very generous that way. 3d Contestant: Maj. Bradley, I want-ed to talk to you about my handicap, you see I never have-

A recent issue of one of the service concrete shaft with four arms holding upright lamps, lights or beacons symbolical of the light of learning so typical of — (here you may insert the name of your favorite school, such as Bakers and Cooks). Supporting each arm are certain rolls, scrolls or metal contortions which make a most tempting place to suspend a coathanger. Picture Maj. Ducrot or Lieut. Dumb-

At the abovementioned circle Uniform A is proudly flung to the breeze, its wind-tossed arms frantically calling attention to the ap-proved raiment for the day. With unslackened speed, our hero makes the circuit of this monumental light and returns to quarters to correct the error of his ways. Here is an idea that will gain the support of every student. Consider the stadium. Until the noc-

Consider the stadium. Until the noc-turnal prowlers of the 24th made certain unauthorized uses of it, it served no purpose. Shall this light find itself in the same position?

My suggestion can be made to pay dividends. A little advertising space above the uniform solves the problem and we might see-UNIFORM A

Nikolas Papapadopulopopos & Co., Inc. (Nick the Greek)

Prices: from so much up. Terms: from now on.

The income from such advertising might be used for a number of purposes. We might finance more lights. We might give it to the Post Exchange. Since the stock market debacle many civilians have accepted employment in that activity until their stocks and bonds again bring in the income necessary to support them in the style to which they are unaccustomed. A little additional revenue would help take on more of them. Above all, what we need at Ben-ning are bigger and better lights.

BASEBALL PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT AS FORMER STARS RETURN TO FORT BENNING

Only a few more short weeks and the baseball season will open again at Fort Benning. Already arrangements are be-ing made. Games are being scheduled, Gowdy Field is being repaired and last Sunday the warm sunshine brought out several early birds with ball and glove to toss the old pellet around and feel out the old soup bone. Prospects for the Infantry School Doughboys are bright for the season of 1931, with most of last year's veterans back this season, they will also be reinforced by the return of a couple of former stars.

"Lefty" Carnes, portside hurler, left the Demonstration outfit last season and took on with the Air Service. His twirling arm was sorely missed and fans will learn with pleasure that "Lefty" will be on the hillock for Fort Benning when the 1931 season opens. He is now a member of Company "G," 29th Infantry.

Even at this early date a strong line Even at this early date a strong line up of veteran players is assured. Mickey McCarthy, Tommie Thompson and Red Miller will take their regular turns back of the platter. Tolle, Carnes, Roosma, Holloway, Stevens, Pinton, Tripp and Lindsey form a bevy of hurlers that will deliver the goods. The infielders would form a nifty squad in Mitchell, Hyland, Reddock, Sheriff, Martin, Stuart, Mor-ris, Wyrick, Heckert and Hull. There are numerous other capable players not are numerous other capable players not mentioned that will be out for the infield squad. The outfield will be well represented in a nifty bunch of ball hawks. McAllister, Grantham, Haynie, Ryan, Smith, Thompson, Jordan, Ashe, Derrick, Easley and Potter.

It is quite a while yet before training begins, but already it looks as if this will be a big season for Fort Benning.

LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY. 3d

Dear Eddie:

Spring has come, tra la, tra la! Spring has come, yes maybe not! I know this climate too well now to have any faith in it. Warm weather will come and hang in it. Warm weather will come and hang around for a while, and as soon as it sees that every one has let their fires go out, why, pouff, down will come the rain-swept, freezing blasts, and laugh and laugh at you. However as long as you don't get fooled, it is really very pleasant. The class room resembles a beehive on a warm summer's afternoon. beehive on a warm summer's afternoon, not much activity, just a faint internal buzzing can be heard to tell that some are sleeping and some are getting that way. A few of the more active members of the class get their daily exercise, dur-ing the ten minute breaks, by playing a very strenuous game of "horseshoes." Capérton sure flings a wicked horseshoe, if he is not careful he will throw one diversion of the series of the series of the series of the series windshield. George O'Neill plays the game more in the manner of bowling. However, there is this to say for the game. It is the first kind of physical exercise that I have seen that the series of the ser Maynard Carter undergo, that he was not forced into.

not forced into. Carter my a magnificent coup d'etat managed to bring to fruition a dream which has obsessed him since the begin-ning of equitation, that of getting out of a riding class. Others had accompof a riding class. Others had accomp-lished the feat, with apparent ease it seemed to Carter, but he was never quite able to bring it off himself. Once to be sure he was about to realize his fondest hopes, but it rained and no one had to ride, so that there was no great satis-faction in it. But on Monday of this week when the class turned out for equitation, armed with compass map and pencil Carter was all set with an order pencil, Carter was all set with an order to report to the hospital for an x-ray. With so few classes in riding left, and only two days in this week in which to operate, great care had to be exercised lest he get excused from the wrong class. Carter, following the teachings of the School, made a correct estimate of the situation, the maneuver was a com-plete success. (I wonder if he really vas x-rayed?)

Well, Eddie, we are now getting down to the meat of the course. We have started on map problems.

Sometimes we are S-2 of a brigade, and sometimes we are the S-2 of a lowly battalion. You know the S-2 is the fairhaired boy who knows all that's going on in the neighbor's back yard. When the C. O. is up a tree he simply turns to his S-2. "I say, S-2, do you think there is anyone over there who would like to make a sixth at 'black jack' or do your reports show that they would be liable to have a Queen and an Ace up their sleeves?" Any S-2, though es-pecially one from the Infantry School would immediately reply, "My observers report that there is a strong enemy concentration at R. J. 625432, their blackjack champion has been observed skulking around in a most suspicious manner. There are three courses open to them. They can play off in their own camp, they can come over in force and try and inveigle the C. O. into a game too steep for him to play in. My decision is that you take up your marbles and find some-nicer boys to play with." Whereupon General "A," harkening to the words of wisdom of 2nd Lt. "B," immediately puts his advice into execution. Oh, yeah!

There are, however, other and more serious difficulties to these map problems. Not the least of which is the profusion of maps which the student is issued. I have been issued to date, lems. enough maps to get lost in almost any part of the world. It is also a bit confusing at times to try and work out a problem on sheet 3 Fort Benning Fire Control, and find, half way through the class, that it was laid out on sheet 347 Gettysburg Unionsuit map. Senior Rav-elo, of the Foreign Legion, experienced another of the great tribulations of map problems, when after trying for some time to make sheet 349 stick to sheet 347, it was discovered that he was using Griffin Lotion Cream in the place of glue.

Col. Stayer put on a demonstration of the evacuation of the sick and wounded last week. The soldiers from the 29th Infantry had a fine time of it. Rushing forward to the attack and then falling in grotesque heaps, groaning for water. One man decided that he had had enough of fighting, and the best way that he figured to get out of it was to play sick. He and Maj. Meagher put on a sick. He and Maj. Meagner put on a swell act. Maj. Lange should get hold of that bird and sign him up for next. year for the Big Act. The Medico was. a most excellent foil for the comedy part Notwithstanding that in played. the rush and hurly-burly of putting on the demonstration he had inadvertently put his spurs on upside down on the wrong feet. After all spurs are not necessary in order to read the tag on a dead man.

We have been having so much in-direct fire work lately that if you come up on any member of the class suddenly and whisper in his ear, "What is it?" He will reply without hesitation, "Q. E. 93, base angle left 208, base lines on task 'C.'" In fact it has gotten so bad lately that one morning I started to class clad only in a protractor and B. V. D.'s. This is a grand school, Eddie, first you have map reading, then you take up equitation, then not satisfied they give you map reading combined with equita-tion. The class was divided into two parts, one part had to make a recon-naissance of an area, on horseback, the other half was split up into pairs, each pair was given an azimuth and told to pair was given an azimuth and told to find the mysterious Mr. X. It might have worked out better, if it had been Ma-dame X. As for the map reading end of the problem it was hard to tell just how much of a success it was. The how much of a success it was not configure equitation end of the problem was no end of a success, as there were students riding all over the country side for hours and hours. Van Moseley, poet laureate of the class, never did find his proper station. As for me, Eddie, I'm all for some more of those problems. That one netted me a dollar, when Cpl. Wheeler thought that he knew how to follow an azimuth, just because he could follow pool will the Green Line in a N. Y. subway. Cpl. expected.

Seeley Puts Carl East Away Quickly After Two Rounds of Tapping

John ('Corn") Griffin, Tanker light heavy, exploded a surprise bomb in southern fistic circles when he battered his way to a technical knockout over "Mike" Firpo, tough Cuban fighter, at "Mike" Firpo, tough Cuban fighter, at the Fort Benning area last Tuesday night, in the feature bout of the show

Firpo, a veteran fighter, and considered by sport scribes as one of the leading light heavies in the south, was a big favorite to win over the army battler, but to the surprise of the large crowd of fans, Griffin took every round except the first, by a large margin and had Firpo groggy and helpless when the fight was stopped by the referee in the eighth round.

eighth round. The opening round looked like an un-happy ending for Griffin. They came from their corners at the bell and sparred for a moment in the center of the ring. Griffin started a left jab that Firpo blocked and then countered with a left swing that caught Griffin high on the side of his head. Griffin went down like a ton of brick and for a moment fans thought the fight was over. At the count of three Griffin came to one knee count of three Griffin came to one knee but waited until the count of seven be-fore coming up. The Cuban came out slugging in the third round but Griffin boxed rings around him and his punches only cut the air; in the mean time the Tanker kept up a steady drumfire of lefts to Mike's face and smashed short punches to the body at close quarters. Firpo took a terrible beating during the fourth, fifth and sixth rounds and

He felt Carl East, Atlanta kayo king, out for two rounds and then stepped in with a "one, two" in the third round that stopped East cold as a kippered herring. There is no getting away from the fact that Saginaw can hit, he is as tickled over his ability to have the old have punch his ability to hang the old kayo punch to an opponent as a dealer with a straight flush. And the fans are tickled also; they have always been for the Saginaw, but fans do like to see their fav-orite cross the old right to the button and then listen to the referee as he tolls and then listen to the referee as he tons the mournful ten. Saginaw has arrived and he is going to be hard to stop. If he meets Blondy Parker, he may turn the trick quicker and neater than many of the fans can dream of. Willie "Red" Keenan, showed fans that he is a long way from being through Keenan met one of the best boys to show here in many moons when he mixed with "Call" Martin. It was a great fight all the way but the blond topped doughboy won.

Danny Davis was winning handily ov-er Peanut Howard of LaGrange until he smashed his right hand and was forcl to quit. Ghost Ghastly and Phenix Fourroux put on a great war for four rounds with the scale of victory hanging in the bal-ance. The Gunner took the nod by a final spurt in the last round but was a great fight and both boys deserve credit. great fight and both boys deserve credit. Lightning Lige upheld the honor of the Happy Heart regiment by taking a hairline decision over Young Wills in a fast and furious three round mill. Both boys mixed freely and quite a few fans would like to see them matched again over a longer route.

The entire card was a crowd pleaser and every one went home highly satisfied with the show. Captain Raymond McDonald did a good job of refereeing and fans hope to see him in action again.

Calling Down and Going "Boo" Saturday's basketball game with the Atlanta Jaycees was a mixture of cheers and jeers. When Benning was leading, the crowd cheered the team; when Benning was behind, the crowd jeered the referee.

Perhaps, as one or two basketball cognoscenti explained afterward, the ref did fail to call fouls on Atlanta for sticking elbows and sundry hands and feet into Isham's tummy on the jump. But it wasn't this which caused the rousing demonstrations.

The populace got up on its hind legs and denounced the ref every time he called a foul on Benning. An efficient way of preventing an opponent from scoring undoubtedly is to push him in the back as he shoots (or a hacking motion at his face, arms or hands often will do wonders). Un-fortunately these maneuvers are contrary to the modern effete rules. And even under the old unregenerate in-tercollegiate Marquis of Queensbury system, clutching an opponent by the tonsils was verboten. Benning players once or twice, and obviously inadver-tently, did some of these things, and the consequent calling of fouls stirred the prolatoriat the proletariat.

The thought occurred at the time that an interesting evening would have been had by all, if one Mr. Quigley of National League baseball, and Nationfame, had been the official. Mr. Quigley has a reputation for tried without effect. Maybe so, but we still suspect that they would get tired before Monday at reveille of seeing visiting players shoot from the foul line.

Mr. Quigley has a replication for curing crowds of booing by the simple expedient of calling fouls on them. To this it was replied that Benning crowds didn't mind having fouls called on them, that up to five had been tried without effect.

The inalienable right of all freeborn Americans to boo officials is not to be interfered with; our only suggestion is that discretion be used.

One should not do one's booing when a Benning player pulls one that even a blind man (less dog) could see. But when a technical foul is called, the reason for which (in one's present state of familiarity with the rules) one does not understand, then should one's booing proclivities be given full scope. Let the welkin ring with denuncia-tion—if the referee will let you get away with it.

MUSKETEERS TAKE THRILLING CAGE DUEL FROM ATLANTA JAYCEES

In one of the fastest cage games of the season, the Musketeers took a close decision over the Atlanta "Jaycees" last Saturday night, 34 to 29.

With both Kammerer and Roosma, Benning aces, out of the lineup, Phil Draper led the Musketeers to a thrilling braper led the Musketeers to a timining victory that held the large crowd in suspense on many occasions and brought them to their feet in thunderous ap-plause as the speed of the Musketeer passing attack overcame the visitors' lead and left them defeated and demoralized et the finish of the sume at the finish of the game.

at the finish of the game. In the opening half, the Musketeers were wild with their shooting and missed several opportunities to score; in the meantime the visitors broke through the Musketeer guard with an offensive at-tack that was puzzling. English, visit-ing forward, looped shots from long range during the early minutes of play and put the visitors out in front. A desperate Musketeer rally near the end of the half carried them up within four points of their opponents but the half ended with the Jaycees leading 17 to 13. In the final half, Draper and McAllis-

In the final half, Draper and McAllis-In the final half, Draper and McAllis-ter opened up a passing combination that took the play away from the visit-ors. Isham began to get the jump on Bass at center and Draper picked the nugget on the fly. With McAllister, Haynie and Tullos forming a lightning passing trio the visitors were hardly aware of what was happening until Draper was in position and the ball would be snapped to him for a ride through the hoop. Hdqrs. Co., 1st Bn. Since the First Battalion's last pub-lication, the boys in the Company have acquired various new nicknames, such as "Pa," "Tipper," "Snake Brains," (the second), etc. Incidentally, while I am thinking about it, I heard a certain fel-low care that my entries in the Infantry thinking about it, I heard a certain fel-low say that my entries in the Infantry School News would make good topics for Ripley's famous "Believe It or Not" but I was a volunteer and now I have to make the best of it. But nevertheless I will try and make these notes inter-esting. Will that help any? We have not had any more arrivals or departures from furlaugh since our last edition. from furlough since our last edition. But you would have known the same thing without me telling you. Oh, by the way, I have a startling revelation to make to all concerned: Company "A" didn't have any ice cream for Sunday dinner a couple of weeks ago. Just think of the wonderful record that they have established: We (1st Bn., Hq. Co.) have been eating there over a year now and this is the first Sunday that we have ever missed having ice cream for dinner; and as "Uncle Amos" says, "Dat 1s sumpin'."

Oh, before I forget it, we still have a little challenge to make to any company interested in the well known recreation, volleyball. We have one of best sextets volleyball. We have one of best sextets in the post and we bellow forth our challenge to any team in the post. So step right up, "You're the next victim." FACULTY TROUNCES ADVANCED CLASS BENNING RIDERS SHOW This Time It's on Golf Links INSTRUCTORS MAINTAIN SUPREMACY

On January 30th the instructors accepted the challenge of the advanced class for a decisive engagement on the golf course. Having formerly conclus-ively proven their mental superiority (see results of phychology tests) the faculty was more than willing to demonstrate its athletic superiority over any group of mere students.

That the advanced class had the temerity to challenge the pre-eminent po-sition held by the faculty in all lines of endeavor (and porticularly in golf) speaks well for their aggressive spirit and high ambitions. It is to be hoped that the crushing defeat administered by the faculty upon this occasion will not kill that fine and courageous spirit with which they sought almost certain defeat. The faculty is unanimous in their praise of their pupils gameness and sportsmanship in spite of several ugly rumors of alleged pre-match sharp practice. It was bruited about that there were class and that they had selected this number to represent them. This comparatively small team of the advanced class would naturally exclude many of the faculty's best players from participating in the match, so it was suggested that a larger team be named in order that a more truly representative group might play. It is alleged that the ad-vanced class declined to increase its team membership on the ground that there were only twelve men who had

Congressman James Visits Fort Benning

Chairman of Military Affairs Committee Inspects Activities

The Hon. W. Frank James, of Michigan, who is chairman of House Committee on Military Affairs of the Seventyfirst Congress, arrived at Fort Benning yesterday morning on a visit of inspec-tion in connection with the Army Ap-propriations Bill.

He was received informally by Brigadier General Campbell King, comman-dant of the Infantry School, who accompanied Mr. James on the inspection of the activities of the Infantry School. Mr. James left Washington on a tour of inspection about two weeks ago trav elling by air. His itinerary includes the following places: Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio; Indianapolis, Indiana; Chanute Field, Rantoul, Illinois; Scott Field, Belleville, Illinois; Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; Post Field, Fort Sill, Oklahoma; Randolph Field, San Antonio, Texas; Shreveport, Louisiana; Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Alabama; Fort Ben-ning, Georgia; Fort Bragg, North Carolina; Langley Field, Hampton, Virginia.

ever played golf. It remained for the astute faculty, however, to discover the fact that twenty-seven members of the advanced class did play golf as evidenced by their monthly physical exercise reports.

The golf committee of the advanced class gracefully removed itself from the honors of a dilemma as it turned out not 7 but 30 players; not that it feared the whispers of the garrison relative to false official statements, but from the tandpoint of true sportsmanship alone.

The match resulted in a 28 to 17 vic-tory for the instructors. The method of scoring used for this event awarded one point for each two ball match won, and one point for the best ball in a four ball match. Each foursome consisted of two two-ball matches and a four-ball match played concurrently.

Mrs. Thompson Takes The Chair

Fort Benning riders staged a comedy horse show, known to Turfdom as a gymkhana, at French Field last Sat-urday afternoon. The entire program was one of continued mirth for the large crowd of spectators and contestants and it could safely be said that there must have been several "horse laughs," es-pecially in the Ladies' Musical Chair and Water Carrying events. There were also demonstrations of grace and skill that brought roars of applause from the crowd crowd.

The Musical Chair class for the la-The Musical Char class for the la-dies was the outstanding feature of a high class program. It began with 24 ladies and 23 chairs. As the band played the ladies rode around the cir-cle of chairs in cadence to the music, then when the music ceased it was dis-mount cill belging the brief are sign mount, still holding the bridle rein, and get a chair. Some one always got left. In the first wild scramble, a lady's horse stood solemnly looking on while she stood in a few feet of a vacant chair and pulled. After each rush, the lucky ones remounted and continued the march, each time a couple of chairs were removed. Finally when only Mrs. J. B. Thompson and Mrs. H. W. Brim-mer were left to fill one chair the crowd waited expectantly. Mrs. Thompson got the break and sat down a winner.

INFANTRY SCHOOL NEWS

Major Ross has admirably succeeded, after many months of research and ex-perimentation, in producing a red cover for the saddle blanket for ceremonial purposes. As far as we know this is the most satisfactory red cover that has been devised for the Field Artillery. Much credit is due the Major, if we may say so, for his discriminating patience in procuring this cover.

Battery "A" turned out in the red covers last Monday for the first time to fire a salute for Brigadier General Estes. The value of these flashy new additions became readily apparent when it was observed that the inspecting party completely failed to notice that the off swing of the second section caisson team had a spot of extraneous matter on the inside of his right hind leg just above the coronary band and that the section chief of the fourth section had a hole the size of a lead pencil in the middle finger of his off hand glove.

Lieut. "Big Doc" Baker felt highly honored for his Battery to have the privilege of firing a salute for General Estes, the General being a brother "Tom Estes, the General being a brother "Tom Tit" as the result of an initiation con-ducted by Lieut. Baker while on a trip with the polo team at Fort McPherson last Spring. It is not known to what order the General belongs but we are a "Tom Tit" of the 3rd order. * * * *

We flew to Maxwell Field last Sunday for the purpose of delivering some lectures on the broad subject of Field Artillery. We never have liked to fly and became further prejudiced when, on Monday, we allowed ourself to be per-suaded to go up and fly around in for-mation for an hour or so. We zigzagged We zigzagged back and forth for a while, sometimes at 1000 feet and in another instant at 2000 The result was inevitable. MUTTERINGS OF MULLIGAN MULLIGAN DISCUSSES DRILL turns to fears of maneuvers and the recent burst of springlike weather led me far afield in search of some obscure me far afield in search of some obscure corner of the reservation in which to exhaust Mulligan's Brigade in the an-nual annihilation of the Reds. I found it. Upon my return, I decided to see what else the 29th Foot could do to convince the garrison that the war was not over so I passed by Gordon Field. To my amazement, a large group of field officers was scattered all over the ter-rain observing the activity of one little rain observing the activity of one little platoon. Very unusual! A platoon may offend or delight the hypercritical eye of a sergeant or even a lieutenant but when a large group of field officers becomes engrossed in its antics, that is indeed news!

I disembarked near the dispensary and, in passing, noticed that Major Patterson was still dispensing Castor Oil to the lame, the halt, and the blind. All seemed quite normal.

To get back to drill.

I back to drill. I have only one criticism to offer of the procedure followed. I see no rea-son why high salaried field officers should be called upon to devote their attention to such minutiæ as dril.. In the English service, one would call in the R. S. M. and say, "Sergeant Major, let us have something simple in the way of drill," and the matter would be set-In our own case, why not have a tled. bit of the good old American efficiency bit of the good old American efficiency we hear so much of? Why not corre-spond with such masters of drill and training as Flo Ziegfeld or Knute Rock-ne and get a system that is guaranteed to work? Ziegfeld's shows are successes and why? Take one look at his well deilled

Take one look at his well drilled whv? choruses and then ask me. Training, that's the answer. Of course, the Quartermaster issue of so-called riding breeches and leggings would ruin the ap-pearance of even a Follies chorus but what of it? The training is the thing. Forget the clothes. Ziegfeld does. Keep your mind on the drill. If the Ziegfeld idea seems a hit effeminate for our case idea seems a bit effeminate for our case hardened doughboys, try Rockne's sys tem. Any man that can make the press of the country hail Wyzanskis and Corrideos as Fighting Irish certainly has the habit of success. As long as the Infantry had gone modernistic, I decided to try out a few innovations with Mulligan's Brigade. I got a copy of Rockne's book, studied it carefully and worked out a few forma-tions which I felt sure would give me a snappy outfit. Hopefully, I tried them out. Our first experiment was—Line shove off. I'm an old salt shaker.

In the spring, a soldier's fancy dully irns to fears of maneuvers and the scent burst of springlike weather led the far afield in search of some obscure orner of the reservation in which to burst At a prearranged signal the Brigade went in-to action. The First Sergeant got tackled and Pyt. Blank got a black eye. That was all so obviously wrong that we immediately abandonad the iden that we immediately abandoned the idea of signals and went into a huddle. We came out of it smartly and went into action again. Quite evidently there was some misunderstanding as the Brigade executed a beautiful end run but kept on going and that was the last I saw of them until reveille the next morning.

AN AD IN THE NEWS IS AN AD IN THE ARMY Page Four

The hunt on Feb. 1 was attended by an unusually large field, so large that many were wondering what the cause was. The answer may be summed up in a few words: beautiful weather, rumors a lew words: beautiful weather, rumors of fast runs with big obstacles, the pho-tographer, and a breakfast at Mary's Falls. Anyone of these can always be counted upon to turn out a field of at least fifty.

Leaving the coffee pots in the Horse Show Cabin at 7:30 o'clock the field hacked to the kennels, where the first obstacle was encountered in the form of the photographer, perched on top of the monument on Fiske Range. Thinking him satisfied, the field moved into the Artillery Pasture, where the first cast Artillery Pasture, where the first cast was made. Unbeknown to the field the hunt almost ended here. A large skunk decided to join the Hunt Staff and be-come an "Honorary Whipper-in." Very composedly Mr. Skunk trotted himself alongside of first Whipper-in Hoge and then Huntsman Tweed. Spuring their horses they and around the slude their then Huntsman Tweed. Spurring their horses they endeavored to elude their new acquaintance but to no avail. It was, only after a gallop of almost a mile that the scented friend decided the pace was too fast and quit the hunt. Needless to say the first cast was not a howling success.

Second Cast Made

The second cast was made south of Bench Mark No 222 on the Dixie Road. After a little hunting the hounds found the scent and started across the flat country in full cry. Making a couple of sharp turns the field headed south toward the Old Experimental Range. Here was the opportunity for a run that all had been waiting for, two and a half miles of flat country with a few obstac-les and scattered trees. Most of the field took the jumps as they came but a few conservative members were more cautious and rode for the gaps. A much smaller minority were undecided as to which course to follow, with the usual result of a "straddle" as expressed by the members of the First Section. Any through without mishap. Toward the end of the run some of the field experienced the thrill of taking a broad hedge jump over a thick briar patch. Then, through a gap in the fence into the Hunt's corn farm. There wasn't a horse or a rider but was panting and excited when the field was checked so that the hound could be wa-tered in Sewelson Creek.

Miss O'Connell Gets Fall. On the next run Miss O'Connell's horse stepped into a hole, giving her a rather nasty fall. Good sport that she is, she came up with a laugh and hated to obey the Hunt Surgeon's orders to drop out of the field. While all of this was going on the hounds became impatient and decided to raid the breakfast table. Only the most determined efforts of the chef and his helpers saved the breakfast for the hun-gry field. Still the photographer wasn't satisfied, but must have a picture of ev-eryone eating their sausage and hominy, from General King down to Arch General King down to Arch from

Hunt Attendance

The hunt meetings have proven exceedingly popular this season. In fact the attendance has been limited by the number of horses available rather than by the number of enthusiasts. More than 250 different members have been on the hunts, up to January 26. Many inquiries are being received from members requesting information as to the number of hunts they have attended. The following have participated in 60 percent or more of the hunts including January 25:

CAPTAIN COLE RETIRED

Capt. James E. Cole, Jr., Inf., hav-ing been found by an Army retiring board incapacitated for active service on account of disability incident there-to, has been notified of his retirement effective January 31, 1931.

There goes old Father Time, the flatfooted degenerate. If you look quickly you will see him just limping down be-hind that hill of days, like a fading sun hind that hill of days, like a failing suff sinking down behind a mountain after a day of drizzle. And the old boy car-ries a big pack of trouble away on his bent shoulders, and his scythe is twisted He was a good old boy while he lasted but some of this doings resemble the fumblings of fate.

Look at all those auto accidents on the Benning road, with the concrete strewn with glass (from windshields), and an eye by an eye and a tooth by a tooth (quoted from the Bible).

The old man carried in the drought that is the weather one) and the un-employment situation.

Looking through the old man's records we find that lots of babies were born in our hospital and properly named.

That more opposite sexes on our post were tied up than split up.

That four wildcats were caught in the field and one at a Country Club dance. That the banks opened with prayer each morning and the Bulls and Bears did their animal act each day in Wall Street. (Even being an Elk did not save you last year). That the "Hams across the Sea" group tried to curtail war and succeeded only in giving the Infantry School a new defensive organization.

That the Air Corps visited us after one month of flying effort to reach here from a base three hundred miles away. That's a good record, even for a duck.

That crooked legged men played golf in short pants, and beautiful legged women played other games in long skirts. Both were bad, but do you know that every time I look at women with short hair it makes me realize how bad I would look in petticoats? However, I noticed at the last dance of the year that wo-men wore more hair and less clothes. Hope this year does not bring them a change in ideas. While we are on this reminiscent trend and dogging the rubber heels of Old Man Time, many visions of hazy obser-vations paraded before my mind's eye. I will give them to you in a critical pysicolophical summation.

Third—On one or two lively parties I noted individual demonstrations of whoopee on the floor which got the raised eyebrows and thumbs down signal from the dowagers who lined the arena. Those of us who know our way about also know that, in so-called respectable social circles, real downright wickedness doesn't advertise; people who lead sheldoesn't advertise; people who lead shel-tered lives, however, don't appreciate this fundamental truth. men only and shall be entitled, "Shall the Army Wife be tolerated officially."

CHILDREN'S SCHOOL CLOSES SUCCESSFUL TERM

The Fort Benning Children's School has just completed a successful term. The mid year was closed with a series The mid year was closed with a series of examinations that tested the teachers as well as the publis. The examination questions were sent from the office of the Superintendent of Schools of Co-lumbus in a sealed envelope and were not opened until the day of the exami-nation nation.

The results were most gratifying, for the average mark required for each grade was passed with a comfortable margin. Especially interesting were the results in the Arithmetic test for the sixth and seventh grades. The median required was 41, and the seventh grade made 50 (these marks are not percentages). The median for the sixth grade was 34, and the class made 44. In the first grade a recognition test produced a median of 23. A bright class is rated 17, which placed our first grade well ahead of an average bright class.

These tests were valuable in that they acted as a check on the ability of the teachers to put across to the pupils the subjects covered and, also, that all the work scheduled was covered.

The second semester began with an enrollment of 267 pupils, by far the largest enrollment the school has ever had. All classes are now completely filled except in the fourth and fifth

The playground equipment has been augmented by the addition of a basketball court. Judging from the patronage it is being received most favorably.

GARDEN CLUB TO SPONSOR THE PLANTING OF TREES

That they may be living monuments to a great man, some ten million trees are to be planted this year in our country in preparation for the bicentennial anniversary of George Washington's anniversary of birth, next year.

About thirty members of the Fort Benning Garden Club are going to plant Georgia cutleaf pines along the new hospital road next Tuesday morning.

Beginning of The Upatoi Station

By Sgt. Walter Reynolds

On January 31, 1931, the retirement of Master Sergeant John H. Wagner, of the Detachment, Quartermaster Corps, Fort Benning, Ga., was announced by Special Orders War Department. Sgt. Wagner, better known as "Johnny Bull? to his host of friends of the Serwice, has been a member of the per-sonnel of the garrison since the begin-ning of the Upatoi Station. Besides his ability as "Top Kick" of ability and effi-ciency, he was a red hot baseball and fight fan and few fistic carnivals or base-ball games were staged without the ser-cent baing mesont geant being present. Master Sergeant Wagner has an in-teresting as well as colorful record as a soldier. He began his army career as a member of the 4th Missouri N. G., back in 1896. In 1902, he took the big plunge and took on with the regular army as a member of the 19th Infantry Band. Two hitches with the 19th Infantry and then he changed to Co. "C," 27th Infantry. In 1909, he took on with the 23rd Rct. Co., G. S. I., three years with this or-ganization and then "Johnny Bull" found the proper unit, he took on with the Q'Emmers. This was in 1912. Since that time he has served with none other. He did leave the service on one occasion and declare himself a civilian but a couple of years later he returned to don the uniform and remain with the Quartermaster.

Sgt. Wagner was born in the "Show Me" state, up near St. Joseph, this event occurring back in 1874. He en-listed with the 4th Missouri Infantry with the intention of going down to Cuba and fighting the Spaniards. Al-though he pager want to Cuba with this

The part that protein poisoning plays in asthma, hives and certain skin dis-eases is often not recognized. Cereals, fruits, vegetables, meats, and even cow's milk may be poisonous. Usually only one or two foods are at fault. Often they are articles of daily diet and therefore not suspected as the cause of di-gestive trouble. Simple tests can detect these causes.

Pain is pressure on nerves. rain is felt when a nerve is injured. Belly-ache is a complicated affair which is seldom due to direct violence.

The digestive canal is a chemical apparatus, some 30 feet long. Anything put into the stomach starts activity in the intestine as in the Stomach. Regular movements of the digestive tube which churn the contents and gradually move them onward are necessary to a complete digestion.

Digestive juices in right amounts must be introduced at the proper time. A complicated arrangement of nerves control muscles in and about the entire digestive tube. Contact of food with nerve endings in the lining of the stom-ach calls these muscles into action. Sight or smell of food may produce this reaction. Then, too, we have the sense of hunger simply because it is the regular customary time to eat. It it a well known fact that digestion is upset in a person with methodical habits lock with those which govern other body functions. A disease of the heart may cause indigestion. Mental upset, worry, anger or other emotion may give a di-arrhœa. Nausea is often produced by eye strain. A belly ache is not always due to something eaten. It may be a pain al-right, but it is outside the digestion tract. For instance something like a renal colic (stone in the kidney). Renal colic is on the increase. The cause of this condition is easily traced to medical advice. Recent years have seen much "touting" of a diet of spinach and milk. This is a bad combination of foods which is very likely to produce pain in the kidney from stone formation. If milk is taken in excess there results a surplus of lime which combines with the oxalic acid from spinach to form an oxalate of lime which is cast off by the kidneys as crystals. These crystals are easily detected in the urine. Children or others on such a diet, so often pre-scribed for ænemic conditions, should have weekly urine examinations that this crystal formation may be prevented by change in diet.

THE BRIEF CASE By CAPT. WAINE ARCHER

As the end of the supply course draws not near but nearer, we feel it to be due to the industry and patience of the firm of Bull and Peabody to reward them with a few bits of information regarding things the class has learned.

Bagnall, for instance, no longer tries to bivouc the ration cycle with the motor elements of the quartermaster train, and he now knows that a tire tool is not necessary to change it.

We must regretfully chronicle, however, the fact that, in Lussier's mind, the plebion B ration is rigidly excluded from all social contact with the aristocratic Class I supplies.

cratic Class I supplies. We have also grasped the fact that trains are "reasonably safe" from the accommodating Red artillery fire in those positions where "An Approved Solution" places them regardless of range, circumstances and the terrain.

 $\mathbf{x} = \mathbf{x} - \mathbf{x}$ Cochran has eased his unobtrusive way along for five months without making this column, but he burst into it with a bang during last week's marked problem bang during last week's marked preserved in supply. "Indicate on your maps." instructed Bull, "your solution of those require-ments marked with a hickey." (He did-n't call them hickeys, but that name will serve till we learn what they are.) "Shall we turn in the maps?" queried Cochrap blandly and trustingly. Cochran, blandly and trustingly.

ххх Lussier was embarrassed last week by receiving the first orders (to the militia bureau). By the end of the week he had decided to take the attitude of being surprised but still was not certain whether to register pleasure or chagrin.

ther to register pleasure or chagrin. $x x \bar{x} \bar{x} \bar{x} \bar{x}$ Knowing the nefarious and sinister control exercised by the faculty over other departments of the News, we feel it entirely unnecessary to record herein the results of last week's golf tourna-ment between this class and the instruc-tors. We shall be sportsmanlike enough. tors. We shall be sportsmanlike enough, however, to explain the result that we fail to chronicle. None of us had looked upon Major Davidson as a real threat to our success in golf, but he won the match for the enemy. On the afternoon before the match he took us out to Davidson Hill, and impervious to all stage whispers regarding the passage of time, kept us until 4:15 on a scheduled 1:00 to 4:00 day. He even had the temerity to remark, at 3:55, with no relief in sight-"Notice how long it takes them to move. "We do!" responded a vociferous chorus.

And when we drove madly in we dis-covered the entire faculty—, less Davidson-busily engaged in practice. xxx

And then, on the day of the match, the wily J. L. Bradley called on his prospective opponent, Eagles, three times in class. We joyfully record the fact that Eagles not only maxed the answers, but in the afternoon turned out a next but in the afternoon turned out a neat 80, thereby confounding and upsetting that plot.

xxx Delicacy and consideration for our classmates forbids that we record any further details of the match.

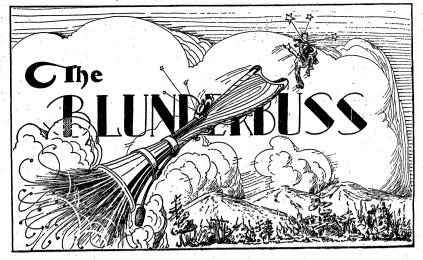

x x x We hereby serve notice on sensitive instructors that there are some barbed tongues in this class. For instance: "I haven't learned a thing during this

"Don't blame the instructor. He has told you all he knows," was the answer.

We have just learned where and how Kells obtained his stranglehold on the subject of supply. While on duty with the national guard, Kells offended an enlisted man of one of his units. This man waited craftily, and then, one day when the unit was preparing for inspec-tion, gave "Colonel" Kells a most military salute and informed him that hethe soldier—knew a place where he could get all the stirrups and harness buckles could be nickle-plated without cost. The enthusiastic Kells personally helped him gather them all into a sack and the soldier immediately took them all and threw them into the river. This explains the convulsive twitch that Kells' ears the convulsive twitch that Kells' ears used to give each time one of our 'orsey instructors mentioned stirrups.

x x x We don't know whether to appreciate the humor or resent the irony of a re-quirement by our esteemed company su-pervisor that each member of this class submit at least ten questions. The average has long since passed that number. "There are not that many things about tactics that I don't know," remarked one erudite member the morning of the

GAME OBSERVATION SUGGESTION LADIES TARRY-STAGS VANISH

The Faculty Dance on Wednesday night qualified as an enjoyable evening of what Explorer Chance calls sedate whoopee. There was a fair sprinkling of extra men and those self sacrificing spirits who still do duty dances were able to heed the call without undue risk of creating an impression that they were beaping stored.

do duty dances were able to heed the call without undue risk of creating an impression that they were keeping steady company. The dear ladies, however, missed the chance of their lives to be tagged, cut in on, and whirled about like flappers at a prep school assembly. It was their own fault, too. At 9:00 P. M., the hour that the dance was scheduled to start, there was a large and ravenous looking stag line, eager for worlds to conquer and rarin' to go. The ladies, however, had not ap-peared and one by one the stags became discouraged and forsook the approaching the stage to return to their Spartan abodes for com-peared and one by one the stags became discouraged and forsook the apparently reluctant Teraichore to return to their Spartan abodes for com-munion with Mars or Morpheus as the case might be. The women are credited with being more keen on their dancing parties than the men, but in this instance, the unattached males were on hand when the music struck up the first dance, while the ladies and their escorts drifted in at an hour which might be euphoniously termed ultra fashion-able. Perhaps their escorts were hard to move, mayhap the dinners were a little late or perchance the ladies have discovered some new place of entertainment to fill the interim between the scheduled hour for the dance to begin and the time it actually warms up. If the last hypothesis be correct, we humbly suggest that the ladies should broadcast the informa-tion, so that the rare and noble stags may join them there and thus be preserved for the useful function which they stand ready to perform later in the evening. in the evening.

DICK COMES ANOTHER CROPPER

Dick King, not content with merely joining the Prince of Wales Club, has definitely adopted the popular young heir presumption as a model— at least to the extent of featuring once a week in the hunt casualty list. By executing another involuntary dismount last Sunday, Dick established his position of leading contender for the title. One more demonstration and the Blunderbus will cooperate by printing each week a rumor of his engagement to some local debutante.

On Behalf of The Ladies to our complete satisfaction, we will launch our offensive.

Hunters Hunted

Several ladies, prominent members of the horsey set, have requested the Blunderbuss to denounce higher authority for not coordinating the mounted terrain exercises, final rides, etc., which constitute an important feature of this week's schedules with the requirements for mounts for the ladies equitation classes. It appears that the cause of woman's rights at Fort Benning has suffered a severe blow and we have been urged to use the power of the press to arouse pub-lic sentiment against the outrage.

It goes without saying that the Blunderbuss stands ready at all times to break a lance with (perhaps we should say fire a broadside at) higher should say here a broadside at) higher authority or anyone else on behalf of the ladies. We are ready to dedicate our column and ourselves to their cause. If desired, we will constitute an advisory committee of one to any militant group which desires to take militant group which desires to take the matter up with the Assistant Commandant in person. Before becoming embroiled however, we feel that we are entitled to know why any lady (or gentleman either) wants to ride a horse more often than once a week. a When this question has been answered

LITERARY SECTION

The February meeting of the Literary Section of the Infantry School Woman's Club will be devoted to French Literature with Lt. John Haleston as the speaker.

Lt. Haleston holds a diploma from the University of Paris and was granted his master's degree from Columbia in 1926. For five years before coming to Fort Benning he was instructor in French at the Military Academy. The meeting will be held in the Polo Club Monday, February 9th at 2:15.

MORE STUDENTS FOR THE INFANTRY SCHOOL

Three more officers now on foreign service have received orders during the past week to report as student-officers at the Infantry School at the opening of the next school year. They are Major Robert B. Moore, Inf., and Capt. Alter L. Mitchell, Inf., from the Philippine Department; and 2nd Lt. George W. Hickman, Jr., from the Hawaiian Department.

BARGAIN SALE

We have several uniforms and portions of uniforms that we will sell at reductions of from ten percent (10%) to fifty percent off of the regular prices. Included in this lot are many woolens and some khakis. An Officer who can get a fit in any of these garments can get a real bargain.

him, out of his great wisdom, to en-lighten thee concerning this matter." So the faithful servant went to the Second Section and asked: "Where is Major Bull?"

And Major Bull answered: "I am he; speak whatever it is that is upon thy mind." Whereupon the servant unburdened himself. Now Major Bull, a learned man in such matters, likewise was possessed of much discretion, and he was loath to speak on matters on which he doubted, so he spake unto the servant and said:

"There are wiser than I in this matter; go thou unto Major Hodges of the Infantry Board."

So the servant went unto Major Hodges and when he had told him Hodges and when he had told him what he sought, Major Hodges was perturbed and grieved in spirit, for he knew not all the things which the servant wished to know. So he told him to go even unto the Department of Experiment.

So the servant did as he was told and when he had come to the Department of Experiment, there spake one unto him saying: "In matters of this sort, there is a very wise man, and doubtless he will enlighten thee. Go to the Third Section, and when thou art there, speak boldly and ask for Major Omar Bradley.

And the servant departed but his spirit was not in peace.

Mulhall Will Be There!

Inspired by the criticism that the Dramatic Club bill for February was to be essentially highbrow and would have no appeal to the masses, Mulhall breaks into verse. It goes without say-ing that the distinguished critic's "painful untiring researches" go no fur-ther than a reading of the titles of the plays and the names of the authors. "To do more,' he remarked ,"would be taking unfair advantage of all other pre-performance dramatic club criti-cs." Mulhall states that he intends to take in the show on the theory that it is worth thirty cents of anybody's money to see a ham actor depict "The Man of Destiny."

Painful untiring researches On Shakespeare and Schnitzler and

Shaw Have proved that these birds were all highbrows

And should be abolished by law.

Further and deeper researches Have incontrovertibly shown

That such plays as they gave in December

Are enjoyed by the lowbrows alone.

Why don't they do down at Benning The way that they do on Broadway, And charge you five-fifty admission, So that all will enthuse on the play?

What's in a Couple of Names

The Minute Men of the 29th Infantry attribute their recent aching mus-cles to the fact that they have Wear cles to the fact that they have wear and Taylor as their plans-and-train-ing officers. Say it quickly and it sounds like Wear and Tear. The pun is the lowest form of humor but this one is no joke in the famous demon-stration Regiment.

Speaking of puns, we may as well include the one coming from the Ad-vanced Class. In a recent supply problem at which Major "Pink" Bull presided the following extract from a solution was noted.

Orders to S-4: "I want my men to have fresh beef. Get it even if you have to shoot a Bull for it."

Alibi No. 6742

Lieutenant Damon Gunn, expert rifleman for excellence and member of last year's Infantry Team, was ambi-tious to achieve the distinction of shooting a wild turkey. Guided by a couple of past masters in the art of turkey assassination, mighty hunters before the Lord, who had already slain their annual bird, he took his stand in a turkey invested area. His friends, skilled in the art of stalking the wily bird, finally lo-cated one sitting on a limb.

Cautiously the modern Leatherstock-ing moved to a favorable firing position.

The turkey was less than 30 feet away. The near distinguished marks-man took careful aim and fired. Away flew the turkey, leaving Damon dis-consolate and his friends disgusted. "What is the matter with you?" exclaimed the friends in unison. "I don't know for sure," replied Da-mon ruefully, "but I so accustomed to taking a six o'clock aim that I must have shot under it."

LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY. 3d

Dear Eddie:

At last we are over the final hurdle in indirect firing. Following the exam-ination I find that the class is about equally divided, only a half of the class forgetting to add the height of the trees to the elevation of the friendly troops, to the elevation of the friendly troops, and thus shooting into them. There were a few who joined with Brother-Gilmartin, and measured the battery an-gle of a parallax for the battery front, but just a few. The main difficulty that I experienced was that after half past ten I found I had forgotten how to multiply and divide. Well haddie we are almost through to multiply and divide. Well, Eddie, we are almost through the weapons part of the course, only a little more in machine guns, the 37-mm. and the mortar are left. Already the new trend is discernible. There is no doubt that we have been "gassed?' con-siderably in the past months, but from present indications, we ain't had nothin' vet.

We have had the first of many to come gas barrages in tactics, laid down come gas barrages in tactics, laid down by Maj. Sherburne. It remained, how-ever for Maj. St. John, of the Chemical Warfare Service, to add insult to in-jury. It is one thing to be gassed vo-caliy, and quite another to be "tear gassed." Following a half hour in the lecture hall which left us all but stupe-fied we were told to report to Norton lecture hall which left us all but stupe-fied, we were told to report to Norton Court. We did. There a Sgt. showed us the intricacies of how to put on and take off a gas mask. Following this interesting sport the class was intro-duced to tear gas. If they thought that they were putting something over on us when they had us take off our masks they are mistaken, for my mask and most of the others leaked so badly that it was of the others leaked so badly that it was a relief to get it off. I told you some time ago that I was going to organize a literary society to help out with my weekly effusion. Mosely contributed one poem, spring or some-thing similar inspired me to try my hand at the same form and now a third member of the class has felt the faint stir-rings of poetic endeavour within his breast. These Giremes are a hard lot to beat. They can sail boats, ride hors-es, sing like a trio of meadow larks, and es, sing like a trio of meadow larks, and now the youngest demonstrates that he can not only draw funny pictures (or at least he used to), but furthermore that he is a poet of the very first water (Upatoi). And so ladies and gents, I take great pleasure in presenting for your evening's entertainment:

The Saga of Hennesy the 3d

- or -Not One Cent for Tribute, But Millions for Defense

By Bayard Gireme Rowboat There is a young Booster,

A cocky young rooster, It seems;

Who views with derision

Equestrian precision Of Marines.

The vertical attitude, Held with exactitude, He expounds-Presupposing, of course That the seat's on the horse—

Not the ground!! In a NEWSY edition, He condemned to perdition,

A lad; Whose horse jumped a somersault-No doubt a grievous fault-Too bad!!

The Gireme stayed on, But was under when down----And out! Hennesy greeted with clamor This sea-going parabola From a mount.

Young Bonapart's pen, Cast ridicule when, This occurred. But Neptune was listening And a retributive christening He inferred.

Pure folly.

Filled with hot air and pride, Then up mounted our scribe, On Bay Dolly. He dashed down the by-ways, Searched for Grids on the highways-

He was hotly pursued By gallant "B-Food"— Slightly tuckered! But gazing pridefully around They did not note the ground— Neptune chuckled!

In Brief: A hole in the ground! Dolly's foot sunk way down! A cropper for Brown!!! "B-Food" did the same-The pile read, (so they claim), "B-Food"! Horses!! Brown!!

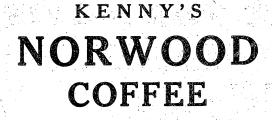

This pathetic refrain Is about to abstain So stand easy. One factor remains Which Giremes want explained By Hennesy.

No ROWBOAT GIREME, Has developed a scene Like this next wail!!!! In hushed voice be it spoken-Hennesy found he had broken DOLLY'S TAIL!!!!

Moral: Is to fend Off temptation with pen And the gaff! It's humiliation extreme To hear from a Gireme; A HORSE-LAUGH!

That was a pretty nice poem, don't you think so, Eddie? Perhaps I shall organize a poet's corner. Sed nunc non erat hic locus. To business. Oh, Eddie, you should have been here this after-noon when Capt. Reynolds set off the nice sky-rocket. The first 3 rockets would not go off, but the 4th one was a regular old whizbang. Swish, blooie, up it went for all of two feet, then down to earth. For a moment nobody said up it went for all of two feet, then down to earth. For a moment nobody said a word. "They are thirteen years old, gentlemen," says Capt. Reynolds. Old enough to know better, Says I. Oh, yes. we fired a barrage problem Tuesday af-ternoon. Unfortunately all the figuring that had been done beforehand by the class we get to be beforehand by the class was out, not because of any error on the part of feeble Infantry minds, but because of an error in measuring a distance of less than 500 yards by the great Engineers. As Capt. Reynolds so quaintly put it. "To H— with the En-gineers and their mathematics." It was a grand problem. This is the best class they have had here this year. Your own bettow was on the tayest every time:

they have had here this year. Your own battery was on the target every time; if some of the others were a little off, why errors will creep in. We sure had a funny thing happen last week, Eddie, we had been out to Hook Range watching the C. W. S. lay down smoke, and fire their weapons. When the class came back to the assembly hall, it seems that someone lit a smoke candle in the locker room of the smoke candle in the locker room of the class. Cpl. Quinn got quite excited, the smoke got quite thick, Quinn left. The smoke then proceeded into the assembly hall (this is all hearsay so I may be wrong), but anyhow there were some bridge games going on. They got ex-cited. They left. That afternoon, Class Provost Marshal Seebach, and few dep-vise seized into the person of one Baluties, seized upon the person of one Bal-lou, relieved him of boots, socks and breeches. Shameful. Such lack of mod- fans are warned.—(Birmingham News). Say you saw it in The News.

VARIED GAME IN RANGE AREA No. 7: SGT. JOHN DAVIS IS GUARD HERE

Range area No. 7 covers approximately seven thousand acres of Fort Benning's finest timber land. Several large bodies of the fast disappearing but much sought after original Georgia long leaf pine are situated within this area.

pine are situated within this area. The range is under the care of Sgt. John Davis of the 29th Infantry. Be-sides his ability to keep a sharp lookout for forest fires or poachers, the ser-geant specializes in several of the good things of life. Around the yard and barn there is rather a nifty flock of chickens. During the past year he raised three hogs that totalled six hun-dred pounds of bacon when "hog kill-ing time" rolled around. His garden is one of the finest in the country and he specializes in several varieties of vegetables.

he specializes in several varieties of vegetables. Several years ago, the Fort Benning National Forest was under the protec-tion of Forest Rangers, and at that time the quarters, now occupied by Sgt. Davis, was the Rangers' headquarters. Another interesting feature of the timber land is the presence of numerous fox squirrels. The fox squirrel and the original long leaf pine have much in common. During the early days, large forests of this timber abounded here; found.

its lumber value made it much sought after. It became necessary for the Forestry Department to take steps to-ward the protection of this timber. The fox squirrel was once found plentiful among the pine forests. The mast that is found in the pine burrs furnished food, while the pine needles made warm soft nests in the lofty branches. As the soft nests in the lofty branches. As the country gradually became more settled, the pine forests began to disappear; and the fox squirrels disappeared also. Large and clumsy as compared to the gray squirrel, the big fellows were easy victims for all hunters. The state of Georgia finally passed a law forbidding any one to shoot a fox squirrel. Dur-ing the past few years hunters have re-ported seeing big brown squirrels out in the pine groves. Unmolested by hunt-ers, the fox squirrels have again become plentiful on the reservation. Numerous other wild game are also found on this range. Cotton tail rab-bits thrive and multiply in the safe fields and the persimmon groves furnish food for gray opossums and raccoons. BABY IRISHMEN WHITEWASH 7TH ENGINEERS IN SOCCER

The Bridgebuilders of the 7th Engin-The Bridgebuilders of the 7th Engin-eers received their first defeat in two years when they were whitewashed by the "Baby Irishmen" of St. Joseph's School, in a fast game of soccer foot-ball at the Doughboy Stadium last rri-day afternoon. The visitors won 3 to 0. The visiting team gave Fort Benning fans an exhibition of team work and speed that far surpasses any former soc-cer exhibitions here. The little fellows, ranging from fourteen to sixteen years cer exhibitions here. The little lensures, ranging from fourteen to sixteen years in age, passed and dribbled rings around the Bridgebuilders and kept them on the defensive during most of the game. The defensive during most of the game. The defeat is no black mark against the Red Diamond outfit, but it simply shows that the soldier teams are still in the rough and have yet to learn the fine points of the game. Games with teams of this type will be one of the biggest factors in developing the play of the soldier teams.

It is to be regretted that one mishap marred the game. In a fast scrimmage near the end of the first half, Owens, of the visitors suffered a broken wrist. It was unintentional and could not be helped. The youngster is getting along splendidly, his arm being treated at the Post Hospital immediately after the accident accident.

GUNNERS BEAT GREENCORDS

The Fort Benning Intra-Mural bas ketball season opened at the garrison gymnasium last Monday night when the Gunners bashed a powerful offensive combination that landslided the Green-cords to at 42 to 16 defeat.

Cotteny and Marcum, Gunner for-wards, led the scoring with 11 points each. The Gunners look like possible contenders for championship honors.

There is no doubt that Lieutenant "Johnny" Roosma is one of the greatest basketball players the army has ever produced. He was an outstanding star as a youngster on the Passaic, N. During his days at West Point, he was picked as one of the forwards of the All-Amer-ican basketball team two years in sucas one of the forwards of the All-Amer-ican basketball team two years in suc-cession. Since coming to Fort Benning he has been the main cog in the Mus-keteer machine and has been an out-standing factor in bringing the present Musketeer team to its high standing among southern basketball teams. He among southern basketball teams. He has nt only played but he has spent as much of his time as possible away from other duties, coaching the young play-ers and showing them the fine points of the game. The result is a basketball team that today ranks second to none and one which the personnel of Fort Benning admire and support. But Fort Benning fans, some of then, are forgetting one thing. Roosma will not be here always. This is probably his last season at Fort Benning. As stated before, Johnny will not be here always, the Mun-keteers must learn to play without him. True enough, his absence prob-ably lost the game to Albany, but if fans have noticed since that time the team has here clicking nerfectly Roos. tans have noticed since that time the team has been clicking perfectly. Roos-ma is due credit for the work he has done. His absence from the lineup has caused the players to regain confidence by finding that they can win without him. IRISH SWAMP SPARTPARTS

With Shepherd, Irish forward, shoot-ing goals from all angles, the Irishmen swamped the Sparepart basketeers 55 to 15, in their first game of the season Tuesday night.

Shepherd scored 30 points, hanging up a new garrison high score record.

Staging a dazzling passing, accurate shooting attack that ripped the defense of the Victor "Y" cagesters to pieces, the Fort Benning Musketeers continued their stride toward southern amateur basketball honors with a sweeping vic-tory over last season's Y. M. C. A. bas-ketball champions, 41 to 22, at the garrison gymnasium last Saturday night.

There was no question as to the out-come of the contest after the first five minutes of play. Don Isham at center for the Musketeers took the ball on the jump and either Draper, Wilson or Mc-Allister were in position to take the tip. This put the visitors on the defensive This put the visitors on the defensive and the fast, flashy passing of the entire Benning team left them helpless. Haynie, playing opposite Draper, was one of the highlights of the game, his dribbling and passing putting the ball in scoring posi-tion on numerous occasions. McAllister and Wilson played a great game at the forward positions and their team work was perfect. They also added sixteen points to the Musketeer score column during the contest. Phil Draper was at the helm during

"MEMOIRS OF AN INFANTRY OFFICER"

By Siegfried Sassoon

Most readers, it may be assumed, have read the delightful "Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man," in which the author, at first anonymous but later self-confessed as Mr. Siegfried Sassoon, described under a thinly-veiled alias his life before and during the first few months of the war. This volume carries on the tale to the time when "Sherston" conceived it his duty to publish to the world a protest against the continuance of the War, which he stated to have "become one of agression and conquest and a sacrifice to the fighting men to political errors and insincerities." This act assuredly was one of rare but somewhat unwise courage, on a par with those displays which had won Mr. Sas-"Mad Jack"; but it did not end the war, nor, curiously enough, the writer's mili-

Hattie White, Miss Mary Merrick and Mrs. Gerald Gabriel. * * *

Mrs. Sloan Coleman, of Asheville, Morth Carolina, will be the week-end guest of Miss Daisy Reed. Mrs. Coleman is the daughter of Col.

and Mrs. Charles F. Humphrey, who are now stationed in Washington.

The Girl Scout Committee held an interesting meeting on Monday at Mrs. Matchett's quarters.

Mrs. Edward Rose made a report on the progress of the curtains and cushions for the scout cabin. Colonel Charles Willard has donated the material and the Post Laundry is now dying and the Post Laundry is now dying them, after which Mrs. Rose and her mother, Mrs. Ponting, will complete them. The Scouts, and those connected with the Scouts, wish to express their appreciation for their kindness. Mrs. Harold Bull has also done "her-bit" by donating two chairs to add to the comfort and attractiveness of the cabin cabin.

Mrs. Neal Johnson told of the hike which was recently enjoyed by the girls. Mrs. Matchett outlined the activities that are to be taken up immediately. A mounted troop will be organized and Mrs. William Hoge and Mrs. Harold Bull will be in charge. Both have been councilors at girls' camps and they will do splendid work with the scouts.

Col. Manly is going to give a course of first aid to the girls. These will be given in a course of five lessons, one a week, on Thursday afternoons at four o'clock.

Capt. J. J. Wilson has the use of the gymnasium from 4-6 o'clock on Saturday afternoons, for the use of the girls of the post. A girl scout leader will be there at that time to chaperone and supervise.

The Girl Scout work is progressing of those working with the girls, their own effort and to the friendly atmosphere and help that they have everywhere encountered on the post.

Maj. and Mrs. George Kraft entertained at a beautifully appointed dinner party at the Officers' Club Sunday evening, later taking their guests to the movies at the Post Theatre.

Their guests on this occasion were Col. and Mrs. George Marshall and their guest, Mrs. Allene Tupper Wilkes, Maj. Legge, Maj. and Mrs. William Freehoff, Maj. and Mrs. John Rhett, Maj. and Mrs. William Lee, Maj. and Mrs. Allen Kingman, Maj. and Mrs. John Maxwell, Maj. and Mrs. Samuel White, Capt. and Mrs. Fred Gaillard and Capt. and Mrs. George Munteanu.

tary career; for the authorities, aided and abetted by "Sherston's" friend "Cromlech"—another thin disguise for Mr. Robert Graves, himself the author of a somewhat famous war autobiog-raphy "Good-bye to all That"-persuaded him to accept a medical board and go into hospital for a rest cure for shell-shock. With this the volume ends.

From this tale, and from a recollection of Mr. Sassoon's war poems, full of violent diatribes against politicians, generals, war and chorus girls one might expect to find in this book merely another raving outburst against war and anything remotely connected with it. But is is nothing of the kind. It is a vivid yet restrained, almost subdued, narrative of the life of an infantry officer in the line and out of it in the middle period of trench warfare in France; and the figure of the author, as the tail of the formation of the formation of the tail of tail taking himself too seriously; his pen is that of a poet, but it is never let run away with him or with his story. Author and book are both likeable in the extreme, so that one finds this second part of "Sherston's" life just as good and readable as the first—and this is high praise.

COLOSSAL BLUNDERS OF THE WAR

By William Seaver Woods

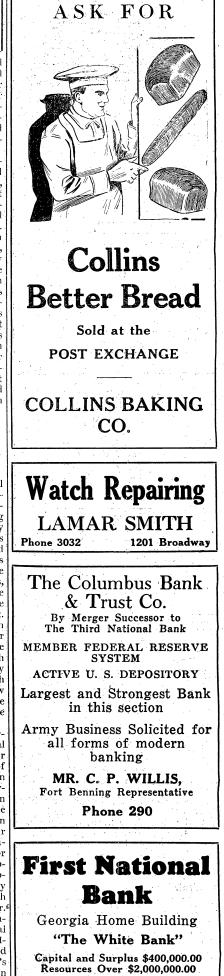

"In bringing forth these colossal blunders of America, Germany, the Al-lies, and Russia, Mr. Woods is not presenting propaganda. He is not urging militarism or armament. He is simply pointing out how lack of intelligence was the cause of hideous loss of life, and 'now is the time to bring these facts out into the light of day, while the events of the war are fresh in our minds, to prevent their repetition in any future conflict, if there should unhappily be one," say the publishers of this book. Whatever part it plays, big or little, in keeping the lessons of the World War before those responsible for the welfare of our country will make it well worth while. The astounding facts are boldly presented and ably discussed. With many of the countries of the world now in a state of upheaval and unrest, the appearance of this book at this time seems most opportune. The author selects the failure of Ger-many correctly to forecast the final alignment of the various nations for or against her as the greatest blunder of the war. Which raises the question whether or not one can now read correctly the news in print and between the lines and calculate with any degree of accuracy the conduct of nations in the near future. With ecenomy 0111 watchword, at the expense of the nawatchword, at the expense of the na-tional defense, well may the author raise the question, "Are we tending to-wards one of our extravagant catastro-phies?" An understanding by every American citizen of the situations both diplomatic and military which Mr.⁶ Woods has chosen to discuss would in-sure a more secure building for national defense and domestic welfare. Considdefense and domestiv welfare. Consid-erable space is devoted to Russia, good use being made of Maurice Paleolugue's Memoirs, but perhaps not too much in view of the interest which that nation's struggles are now demanding.

The brief account of the writer's early youth in Louisiana in the period immed-iately following the Civil War is an ar-resting story of the tragic era of the Southland that is rapidly fading from our national consciousness. The many episodes in the active life of a Marine, episodes in the active life of a Marine, serving under the American flag in Samoa, Cuba, Porto Rico, Panama, the Philippine Islands, Mexico, France, Ger-many, Haiti, Santo Domingo, and Nicar-agua, are told in an unassuming man-ner, but never fail to hold the interest of the reader. Particularly dramatic is the account of the wreck of the U. S. S. Vandalia at Apia, in which the author almost lost his life. The frequent personal allusions to his

The frequent personal allusions to his numerous relatives, which are scattered throughout the book, while revealing his strong, clannish trend and a deep sense of kinship, detract somewhat from its literary merit.

Although the book was written for the general public, real gems for the military student will be found in the chapters dealing with the Battle of Saint Mihiel, the Battle of Blanc Mont Ridge, the 2nd Division in the Meuse-Argonne, the March to Germany, and the occupation of the Rhineland. Not only are they historically accurate but they cover these actions from the viewpoint of a division commander who pre-sents some of the actual problems con-fronting a commander in battle, and in-dicate his successful solution of these problems.

Any military student of American participation in the World War will suffer a real loss if he fails to read the four chapters covering the period in General Lejeune's career during which he commanded the 2nd Division in action.

LITTLE AMERICA

By Richard Evelyn Byrd

It is so easy and natural to use superlatives in writing about the Byrd expedition that one has to steel himself against the habit. Admiral Byrd has set an excellent example of restraint and simplicity in his book, "Little America," which describes his aerial explorations in the Antarctic and the memorable flight to the South Pole.

In his record of the South Pole flight, iter speaking of the "few seconds" after speaking of the "few seconds" when the plane stood 11,000 feet above the spot where Amundsen and Scott had stood in 1911 and 1912 and remarking that the flags of those intrepid ex-plorers were again carried over the Pole, Pole, Byrd says:

"There was nothing now to mark that scene; only a white desolation and solitude disturbed by the sound of our engines. The Pole lay in the center of a limitless plain. No mountains were visthere, as some geologists believe, they were concealed and we had no hint of them.

It is only when writing about his men, their exploits, and their loyalty that the chief's pen is in danger of running away with him. Nothing is too good to say about those men. Perhaps if the tables were turned and the men were writing about their leader it would be the same.

history. We could not have a better example of the intelligent combination and cooperation of scientific history and bi-ography than is offered in Dr. Nathaniel Wright Stephenson's Nelson W. Aldrich, wright Stephenson's Nelson W. Alarich, a Leader in American Politics. Here the skillful and sagacious use of unpub-lished materials reveals long-hidden secrets and makes plain many a hither-to obscure chapter in the politics of the last two decades of the nineteenth cen-tury and the first two of the twentieth tury and the first two of the twentieth. Mr. Aldrich, who represented Rhode Island in the United States Senate from 1883 to 1913, was a statesman of recog-nized abilities whose fate it was to be distrusted by a large element of his own party. If that did not greatly disturb him in the days of his power, it was not, as was commonly thought, because he held a public-be-damned attitude, but rather because he honestly believed that the great public was an overgrown child truly unable to take care of itself with-out a guardian's watchful aid. Those who knew Theodore Roosevelt only after he had left the White House may be ne had left the white House may be more or less surprised by Dr. Stephen-son's revelations of the long-continued intimacy between Roosevelt and Ald-rich. Then, too, "the Four" in the Sen-ate—Aldrich, Allison, Platt of Connect-icut, and Spooner — formed a sort of bodyguard for Roosevelt in the early. years of his administration, as this book shows. That wise old Connecticut Yan-kee, Orville H. Platt, was an impressive wisely chosen and the writing based on a thorough study of correspondence and other original sources. If such a pro-ject were ever carried through the re-sult would be something quite different from what now passes as our political broke in the Republican party. All is clearly told in this admirable biography, which closes with an excellent account of Aldrich's part in laying the founda-tions of the Federal Reserve System in American banking.

will draw in the next ten years. (who wants a lady's pocketbook anyway?) We have several short timers in the battalion at the present time. To hear some of them talk about the swell jobs that are waiting for them on the outside would almost make a long timer wish that he had not stayed with the old army life. However it is believed that these very short timers will soon have as much time to do as our newest recruits as two little words ("I will") mean three years, and none of them are tongue tied.

"Squeek" Rowe says, "I believe in hav-ing a good time, and a good time is what I'm going to have." So do we, Squeek, but still we don't see what that has to do with brick walls.

CPL. LANTZ IS GRADUATED

After fifteen weeks of strenuous study After fifteen weeks of strenuous study in the United States Army Finance School at Washington, D. C., Warren Lantz, Corp. Finance Dept., Fort Ben-ning, Ga., now a soldier in the Finance Department, U. S. Army, stationed at Fort Benning, Georgia, was graduated with flying colors in an impressive cere-mony on January 26, 1931, as one of the 25 students who attended the school. The courses of instruction included correspondence and films, and mechani-correspondence and filing, and mechanical office appliances; records and re-ports, general instruction pertaining to the accounting and disbursements of public funds; property accounting and prop-erty auditing. Corporal Lantz was selected by Major General Roderick L. Carmichael, the Chief of Finance, to attend the school, upon the recommendation of his comupon the recommendation of his com-

CHARITY CARNIVAL

At the meeting of the Guild on Monday morning plans were perfected for a Charity Carnival to be held in April. Mrs. L. C. Davidson appointed chair-men for the different committees.

Mrs. Harry Knight will have charge of the raffles; Mrs. Frank Ross, danc-ing; Mrs. Thomas Taylor, orchestra; Mrs. LeGrande Diller, concessions; Ma-jor L. C. Davidson and E. Sherburne, sideshows; Mrs. W. K. Wilson and Mrs. James Wharton, a cake and candy booth; Mrs. Harry Wells, coffee and hot dog stand; Mrs. W. T. Brock, tents and lights; Mrs. W. F. Freehoff, donations; Mrs. Ollie Reed, publicity.

BENNING MEDICAL DETACHMENT TAKES PRIDE IN BEING SOLDIERS

By Lieut. Paul E. Zuver

In the piping times of peace the Army is prone to look upon the Medical De-tachment as a not-too-hard-working organization of recruits with little military ganization of recruits with little military training and less military bearing. This is an unfair judgment of the Medical Department as a whole and particularly of the personnel of the Station Hospital, The Infantry School. A brief study of the records of the personnel office and an examination of its training programs show this organization in its true colors as anything but a unit of untrained as anything but a unit of untrained recruits.

Twenty-seven states, England, France, Germany, Russia and Austria are re-corded as the birth places of its men. Members of this organization have serv-ed in the armies of England, Canada, France and Cermany and in our own ed in the armies of England, Canada, France and Germany and in our own service in the Infantry, Artillery, Cav-alry, Tanks, Engineers, Chemical War-fare Service, Coast Artillery, Quarter-master Corps, Ordnance Department, the Navy, and Marine Corps. Fifty-four percent of its men are prior service men and of these thirty one are veterans of and of these, thirty-one are veterans of the World War. Two of the old timers are Spanish War veterans. Among the commissioned personnel are officers who have served in the ranks and there are enlisted men who have been commissioned. In brief, it is a typical unit of the American Regular Army.

Occasionally it happens that some soldier with a year or two of service in the line will talk down to some inoffensive "Pill Roller" who is supposed to know nothing of the problems of the "fighting troops." This is disconcerting when the Pill Roller is found to be an ex-line non-com who hasn't forgotten how to bend a recruit's ears back. If the Pill Roller knows his stuff, he may further instruct the recruit that excepting the Infantry, the Medical Department in the combat zone during the late lamented fracas in France, had a higher percent-

As for pep, I guess the Canary Troop has us beat. Not content to wait until noon, they rose at five-thirty the morn-ing of January 31st, hiked and cooked breakfast! and everyone of them was on time for widing class too

That reminds me—at last our long-promised mounted patrol has material-ized. We're to ride as many Saturday afternoons as possible, with Mrs. Hoge and Mrs. Bull in charge. Drills, rides and picnics are in the offing. Eventu-ally we are going to have a natty uni-form too

You know what all work and no play does; but that's not the case with the age of casualties than any other oranch of service. This statement includes the Air Corps and the M. P.'s, both of whom are supposed to have won the war single handed. The Medical Department may not carry arms but it does get shot up.

The Infantry School sets a high standard and is continually striving for im-provement. To comply with the require-ments of the Academic Department, the Hospital is constantly revising its train-ing programs. In order to give the pering programs. In order to give the per-sonnel a more perfect understanding of the functioning of Infantry companies and battalions, the Hospital Detachment has been organized into a three platoon rifle company, armed and equipped like any line organization. Its platoon com-manders are sergeants who are thus re-ceiving the initial instruction in a school for training for Beserve Commissions for training for Reserve Commissions now in process of organization.

LARGE CROWD AT POLO GAMES AS FREEBOOTERS AND GUNNER TEAMS WIN

Baker Twins Back and Artillery Gets Range of The Goal Posts

Sunday's polo game was so well at-tended that it filled the contending mal-letmen with delight. They had been anxious once again to exhibit their prowess before a large audience and when the many Columbus cars loaded with polo fans began to rim the field, the play-ers yearned to do their stuff.

Professor McCunniff acting in the role of "Advance Agent Extraordinary" was responsible for the large attendance. On Saturday afternoon, he painted the town red-posting large carmine placards in all the prominent business windows down in Columbus announcing the game and then thoroughly warmed up to the pub-licity job he muscled into the offices of the local newspaper and turned loose his full persuasive oratory and personality, with the result that there was not only an article on the sports page but even an editorial. Although this col-umn is not ordinarily used for the pur-pose we are going to issue the citation of the week to Polo Director McCunniff.

With what qualms the 29th Musketeers, consisting of Sweeney No. 1, Carmouche No. 2, Trent No. 3 and Strickler No. 4, entered the game can only be guessed. That the inferiority complex was dominant, however, is inferred from the score nied un against the Doughboys in score piled up against the Doughboys in the first half. The Freebooters booted the willow pill all-over the field and sent it scurrying between the goal posts nine times before the Doughboys recovered their self-reliance. The absence of Skeldifference. Jacobs is in the hospital suf-fering from a badly pulled leg-muscle, the result of slamming into an opponent last Sunday.

In the second half of the game the neophyte Musketeer replacements recov-ered sufficiently from their surprise to coordinate with Carmouche and Strickler and they held the savage attack of the Freebooters to only 4 goals while they themselves scored once.

When we consider that the 29th team has no handicap and that the Freeboot-ers opposed to them have a total of 9 goals handicap, the final score of 13 to 1 in favor of the latter does not seem overwhelming .

The Academic Department is all set for the Benning Sextathlon.

There are to be six events, golf, tennis, bowling, handball, bridge (choose your kind) and horseshoe pitching. From now until April pairs of entrants compete within their own group; after April the champs and runners-up in each group meet the high score artists of the other groups.

Pairs are to arrange their own times for the matches. Among the entrants are the following:

Faculty — Vermette and Gilbert, Sti-vers and Collins, Wilson and Schmidt, Nevins and Chapman, Duff and Reynolds.

Advanced Class—Eagles and Norris, Fielder and Ednie, Phillips and Marshall.

Company Officers-Lewis and Moore, Smith and Merchant, Roosma and Kammerer.

BOXING TEAM TO ATLANTA

The Infantry School Boxing Team is now in Atlanta, Georgia, attending the Southeastern Amateur Boxing Tourna-ment, which will close with the final bouts Saturday night.

The Infantry School team has held the Southeastern amateur boxing championship for the past two years and is a top heavy favorite to retain its title for 1931. Many fight fans from Fort Benning will motor over to Atlanta to witness the final bouts tomorrow night.

The final ride had as an object the training of officers in traveling mounted at different rates of march. The rates of march between stations varied from 4 miles per hour to 8 miles per hour. Two officers were present at each station to check each pair as it came through. There was no time out for this check, the check-in and check-out being made at the same instant. Four pairs were checked out at a time, each pair visiting the station in a different order. The pairs worked as a team and not as individuals.

Based on the time required to cover the distance between two stations at a specified rate of march, pairs were penalized as follows:

1 point for each minute under time. 2 points for each minute or fraction over time.

2 points for each minute held by judge because of horse in distress. 20 points for visiting a station in wrong order.

TRAINING CAMP DATES SELECTED Benning To Have R. O. T. C. and Organized Reserves This Summer

The dates for the summer training camps, which will be held at stations in the Fourth Corps Area during the summer of 1931, have been announced by Headquarters Fourth Corps Area.

According to these instructions, the following camps will be held at Fort Benning: R. O. T. C., June 8 to July 19; Organized Reserves, July 19 to August 1.

It is expected that approximately two the Fort Benning R. O. T. C. camp. Of these, 143 students will take the Field Artillery course; 96 will take the En-gineer course; and 23 will take the Signal Corps course. Approximately one hundred Engineer reserve officers and fifty-five chemical warfare reserve officers are expected to attend the camp for reserve officers.

Capt. Vermette during the week bowled a score of 277 to break the officers' record.

The best bowling to date in competi-tion play was exhibited when the in-structors of the academic department won their match from the 24th Infantry team last week. Each game was con-siderably over 900 and the majority of the bowlers on both teams bowled scores of over 500 for their three games. The most notable score was the new record of 277 established by Capt. Vermette of the instructors team and the 237 bowled by Lt. Saffarans, representing the 24th

Infantry team. The results of the Officers Bowling League follow:

LARGE CROWD SEES GUNNERS AND FREEBOOTERS RUN WILD

In the second game the inevitable happened but not really until the second period. The furious cannoneers humbled period. The furious cannoncers humbled the Students 10 to 2. We say the m-evitable since the Baker twins were again in the Artillery line-up. For the first three periods, however, the schoor-boys held their own. They scored two goals against the three made by the red-chirts shirts.

This may be accounted for in two ways. Heretofore the Students have been playing two complete teams, a so-called first and second team, each playing three periods. But during the past week they separated the men from the boys and their revamped line-up Sun-day showed only one team consisting of Bevans No. 1, Dulaney No. 2, Pierce No. 3, and Newman No. 4.

Now It Comes Out

The other reason for the close score at the end of the first half is only conjecture. Herschel Baker, artillery ace, having been cavorting about in a plane for the past several weeks, had to become accustomed to the back of a horse again and he did not hit his stride until the second half.

In the second half the Redshirts, with Herschel leading the attack, scored seven times and did not allow a single counter times and did not allow a single counter to the schoolboys. The Students claim a 5-goal handicap with the players they used, while the Artillery line-up of Her-bert Baker No. 1, Herschel Baker No. 2, Bartlett No. 3, and Grubbs No. 4, is accredited with a 6-goal handicap. Scoring was effected by the following: Herschel Baker 5, Bartlett 3, Herbert Baker 2, Dulaney 2.

The time—and patience— he is giving is much appreciated. The four lectures to follow, with practical demonstrations, we look forward to. Last Thursday, after the talk, the fol-

"Oh, sure," seconded her friend. "He's a good egg." New and renewed interest has shown

. The beautiful weather we have been having for the past two or three weeks has some drawbacks. It was with some hesitancy that a wild cat hunt was sched-uled for last Sunday morning. This apprehension must have been communicated to the field as the smallest number of the year turned out for the customary coffee and doughnuts at the Water Tanks. To take advantage of every bit of dampness, with the chances of picking up a trail, the hounds were first cast at the headwaters of Gilbert Creek. Drawing a blank the pack was moved to McMurrin Creek and again cast, but again a blank was drawn. From here the pack was moved to Harp's Creek below the former Harp's Pond. To the delivit of both hounds and field the delight of both hounds and field, the pack picked up the trail of a cat in the vicinity of Harp's and Oswichee Creeks. Handicapped by the dryness of the ground the pack slowly trailed the cat toward the east. Every now and then the cat would attempt to lose the hounds by leaving the swamps and taking to the high dry fields.

Field Gets View of Hounds At one check the field was afforded an opportunity of seeing how the hounds follow a trail. With much music the pack came out of the swamp and headed straight for the hill top where the field was enjoying a breathing spell. In and out among the horses the hounds fol-lowed the scent of the cat—with noses upon the ground, sterns high in the air and tails wagging in great excitement. After every time the trail was all but lost, the pack would find again and continue to the east. Picking the ground the field followed, first along the Yankee Road, then across a couple of creeks, back to the Yankee Road, then across country, and finally again on the Yan-kee Road. About a mile short of the Cussetta Road the field encountered a wild pig. Mr. Porker deliberately trot-ted along the trail right up to the as-sembled field. With much excitement and shouted advice, a few officers and ladies dismounted to have a try at the pig. Breything was going nicely until Capt. Black decided to rush the quarry. Im-mediately the pig assumed the offensive. With a quick charge, it turned on Capt. Black, who headed for a small sapling. However, he wasn't fast enough to avoid receiving a torn pair of breches. Not liking the sample, Mr. Pig gave a grunt of disgust and headed into a briar patch. Capt. Rodwell and Lt. Moon then tried the teachings of the cavalry and made a mounted attack. When the and made a mounted attack. When the pig again assumed the offensive, Capt. Rodwell's horse, Tom Finley, took mat-ters into his own hands, or feet. He gave a tremendous jump over the pig having the disease, or from a carrier, usually by coughing and sneezing. A carrier is a person who is able to give a disease to someone else, but who is not himself sick. Anyone might be a carrier.

How May Influenza Be Avoided?

Avoid crowds when the disease is Avoid crowds when the disease is prevalent. Walk to work as much as you can. Get all the sunlight you can. Keep fit. Go to bed early. Don't get over-tired. Be sure the room where you are is always well ventilated. Drink plenty of water. Don't let your system get clogged up. Exercise out of doors. Keep away from all persons who are coughing and sneezing. Don't let them sneeze, cough, or talk in your face. Keep away from persons who have coughs or colds. Wash your hands frequently and always before eating. Be sure dishes and glasses are washed in boiling water. Avoid the common drinking cup and towel.

and in landing let fly with his heels. The blow landed squarely on the pig's flank and bowled him over.

Pig Executes Withdrawal

Thereupon Mr. Pig decided that dis-cretion was the better part of valor and took to the tall timber at a fast clip. Meanwhile the hounds had continued their trailing all unconscious of the excitement in their wake. At 10 o'clock the scent suddenly and completely disappeared. Mr. Cat had just vanished into thin air.

Deciding that there had been enough sport for the day the field turned their horses' heads toward home. In spite of a poor forecast the hunt had been interesting and the trailing good.

Washington's Birthday

As Monday, Feb. 23rd, will be a holi-day, a drag hunt has been scheduled for that afternoon. The field will leave the Polo-Hunt Club at 2:00 p. m. for a run of about two hung and actuments to the of about two hours and returning to the club at about 4:00 p. m., where tea and coffee will be served while the less tired have a few dances. The Dramatic Club's Two One-Act Plays Are Reviewed

DIFFERENT "MAN OF DESTINY" IS SEEN Miss Daisy Reed's Farewell Performance in "Farewell Supper" is Fine Bit of Acting Adroit Presentation of Difficult Play

MRS. WHITELAW CHARMS AUDIENCE

It must be admitted that I suppressed a groan when rumors spread that Shaw's "Man of Destiny' was to be a forth-coming vehicle for our redoubtable Thespians. It had been years since I'd read the play, and I had never seen it produced. It seemed, as I recollected produced. it, and ev it, and even after rereading it, a com-plete catalogue of dramatic faults. A threadbare and creaking plot, the Great man, lonely adventuress, stolen papers, and one-or more appropriately brainless victims of the Great Man's wrath; lard this well with Shaw's favorites "cliches," flavor with loose grammar and endless verbosity and what have you?—Only by the grace of extremely enlightened and sophisticated directing, some really fine acting and the genius of Shaw, if you like, a splendid entertainment. It may be, after all, that genius like royalty, can do no wrong.

It is strange that our imaginations are still so captive to the legend of Napol-eon. The majority of us turn and focus our wandering attention at the mention of his name. This, perhaps, explains the underlying reason for the Dramatic Club's success with the play. This play epitomizes Napoleon as a great adapter, epitomizes Napoleon as a great adapter, rather than the scheming, patient, Mach-iavelian Man of Destiny. A lonely man he was at the end of his life, but lonelier still at this period, just after his fantastic marriage to Josephine. Alone in a buffeting, conjecturing world where he tried protects to going where he tried, not to dominate, to con-trol, but merely to seize fleeting foot-holds in his upward climb. A victory here, and opportunity there. A seem-ingly blank and hostile precipice did not down thin for close increasion wavely daunt him, for close inspection usually yielded up cracks and crevices for his toes and fingers and up he went, on his way, seizing hungrily at crumbs of hu-man sympathy, while trying to present to the public gaze a man devoia of sentiment.

It is obvious that Mr. Shaw did not intend this view of him, but by good for-tune we had Major Harding in the title role and this was his interpretation. It role and this was his interpretation. It was so valid, so appealing and plausible that I would not presume to quarrel with his portrayal of the character. There was not the brooding, inscrutable Napoleon we see in the illustrated biog-markies but a communication of alert raphies but a nervous, abrupt and alert personality. Careful study went into the preparation of this part and it was, in itself, a subtle achievement, for Shaw was preoccupied with the ironies of his situations, and Major Harding produced a portrait with no sacrifice of irony.

Schmidt as an Italian

Schmidt as an Italian Captain Feodor Schmidt gave a thoughtful and consistent portrayal of the Landlord. (The Italian inn keeper is beyond doubt the world's chestiest in-dividual. He is an independent good-natured despot, in the rural inns, satis-fied that his wines, his ravioli, are the best in the entire peninsula, while in the Savoy Palaces and Imperial Hotels he is a Grand Ducal personage before whom one walks softly.) So, then, Captain Schmidt had a part calling for a nice adjustment of the proper respect for his distinguished guest and his own ir-repressible self-satisfaction. I should have enjoyed a shade less subservience in have enjoyed a shade less subservience in his manner, but then circumstances were unusual, times were changing, and this little General had a queer look about him. Even Italian inn keepers like their bread buttered and Guiseppe probably knew best.

"The Lady", Marv E Whitelaw as and Forrest Harding as "Bonaparte.

The Lieutenant was happily cast in the person of young Billy Breckenridge. A fine, slim aristocrat he was, in a handsome uniform, perfectly at ease, unawed some uniform, perfectly at ease, unawed by his brusque commanding general, fir-ing off broadsides of shockingly disre-spectful remarks, impervious, insensitive, and Oh! Lord, how dumb! A refined clown, of course, carefully manufactured for the exigencies of the plot, but demanding capable acting and Lieutenant Breckenridge gave us a lieutenant to chuckle over for some time. It seems a pity the horse, the true conqueror of Lodi, could not come to the garden wall for his share of applause.

Mrs. Whitelaw Scores

Mrs. Whitelaw was an unforgettable picture as the Lady. There is danger of my throwing off restraint and becoming rhapsodic, now that I reach this portrait in the gallery. She was lovely to the eye in every pose. Her voice was pro-(Continued on page 5.)

Lieut. Baughman, Major Lange and Lieut. Brady Fill Their Roles Excellently

The Dramatic Club, this week, depart-d somewhat from its usual type of play nd was rather more daring in that it ried something of an experiment. Both lays were verging on the 'risque', being lever, subtle, satired. For instance, The Farewell Supper" by Schnitzler, rought out very amusingly how easily ed somewhat from its usual type of play and was rather more daring in that it tried something of an experiment. Both plays were verging on the 'risque', being clever, subtle, satired. For instance, "The Farewell Supper" by Schnitzler, brought out very amusingly how easily and quickly the male ego is touched.

It seems that Anatol had made an agreement with Mimi that when their agreement with Mimi that when their love grew cold and they tired of each other, all they had to do was to speak up and say so. Eventually, of course, Anatol becomes bored and tired of Mimi and finds another charmer, and makes up his mind to tell her so that very evening at supper, but when Mimi gets in her word ahead of him and tells him that she is in how with another man that she is in love with another man, he is greatly surprised and chagrined and, of course, very furious at such perfidy. The audience seemed to approve and enjoy the experiment, however, if applause and delighted chuckles are any proof. But who could help the chuckles and applause over anything so well done?

Can anyone forget Daisy Reed's fare-well performance? As Mimi she was most alluring and fascinating. She seemed to throw herself into that role completely and with her whole heart, and made it one of the best bits of act ing that she has ever done. We all knew she would be good—she is always first class in whatever she at tempts on the stage—(as witness her success in "Apache" last year) but as Mimi she scored even more decisively than she did as the Duchess. She gave it everything she had. She might have slightly over done her tipsy walk and manner the first night—considering the small amount of wine and champagne she really consumed. I noticed she was more restrained on Saturday night-and I liked it better, but she was always the adorable Mimi.

Baughman Fills Role Well

Lieutenant Baughman as Anatol was certainly the nervous, distraught, har-rassed lover who had the unpleasant task of undoubtedly breaking Mimi's heart! Yet, with the soft, langorous waltz music off stage which lent just the right touch and atmosphere, Anatol be-ficult role extremely well. Was there a certain lack of 'camaraderie' there— Was there But his facial expressions were good and his laughter—one of the hardest things to acquire—was very natural.

to acquire—was very natural. Lieutenant Brady, as the waiter, look-ed his part—a good stolid fellow who knew his wine and beer—especially his beer—and he had just the proper amount of servility and obsequiousness—yes, a decidedly good waiter

Altogether the play showed most care-ful and painstaking directing by Mrs. Cleveland, who is not only an exper-ienced director but an actress as well.

Lighting Is Effective

The lighting was most effective. The spot light from the top shining directly on the table was something of an inno-vation, and very successful. Why not try more of that and less use of the foot lights?

The makeups were excellent. Giving Anatol hair—and such natural, lifelike hair—was nothing short of a work of art. The stage settings also deserve honorable mention. The dark brown walls and beautifully-done panelling. gave it a warmth quite unique and set off the blue plates around the wall most effectively, as well as giving a very natural and homelike touch. Lieutenant Lloyd deserves a great deal of credit for this and his untiring energy. Also, because the food was real food! And the wine real wine, wasn't it? Anyway, the bottles had real labels on them and at least the food must have them and, at least the food must have been good, judging from the way Daisy devoured her wine and oysters, and the way she insistently repeated the line-"No more wine, no more oysters, no more champagne" — one might suppose that she wasn't on the very eve of leav-ing arid America for the sparkling oasis of China.

it was infinitely satisfying. The im-perfections of plot and sledge-hammer satires of Mæstro Shaw could be for-gotten under the spell of her charm. No hoyden was this, but an aristocrat of the first water. Neither Napoleon nor any other man was a match for her!

Another point spilled over on our genial G. B. S. In fact, my dear friends of the Dramatic Club, it may be apparent that I do not admire that energetic play-wright half so much as I marvel at what you can do with him.

Truman Smith gave an adroit presen-tation of a difficult play. We are in-debted to him for his choice of a cast, also for the cutting of some of Mæestro Shaw's windier passages and the empha-sizing and pointing up of what remained till the play drew the breath of life.

By means of color, the arched spaces and strong lights from the rear, some remarkably attractive silhouettes of pose and action were attained and several times I found myself thrilled at groupings of the characters which were wor-ings of the characters which were wor-thy of a Reinhardt. The electrician, however, encountered a difficult problem in the fading away of the late afternoon sunlight which took place with somewhat spasmodic sudden-ness at the end. Without doubt one or two more rehearsals would have obviated this not very damaging criticism of what this not very damaging criticism of what the most artistic stage setting that has distinguished any Dramatic Club pro-cuction of the current season. The arched openings at the rear and the effects of the midsummer glare without, and the cool shades within were very good. The Alps were somewhat close at hand, per haps, but a creditable effect of depth was achieved and the wall with ivy and the old wagon wheel leaning against it was so realistic that I momentarily expected flocks of pigeons to fly down and light upon it. The costumes were appropriate, well

The costumes were appropriate, well fitting and were historically correct to a satisfying degree. The blue satin gown worn by Mrs. Whitelaw, in partcular, was most becoming and harmonized nice-ly with the blue gray walls and dark blue columns.

To produce so difficult a play as "The Man of Destiny" in a manner which leaves so little to criticize as regards direction, acting, and setting, is an achieve-ment of which the Infantry School Dramatic Club may well be proud. —Mary S. Tucker.

DAUGHTERS OF U.S. ARMY

The Daughters of the United States Army met at the Polo Club on Tuesday, February 10th at two o'clock.

The main feature of this meeting was a presentation of a tentative plan or reorganization. A committee headed by Mrs. A. V. Arnold was entrusted with the revision of the constitution and by-laws. This committee will report at the March meeting.

Heretofore, the Army Daughters has been a social organization only. The members now desire to participate in other garrison activities. With this in view a committee was appointed to of-fer to Mrs. Davidson, President of the Changi Guild the activities of the mem Chapel Guild, the services of the mem-bers of the Army Daughters to help with the coming carnival in April.

Acting upon a suggestion that the society contribute a feature to the Annual Pageant, Mrs. J. B. Thompson was made chairman of a committee to take this matter under consideration.

THE BRIEF CASE By CAPT. WAINE ARCHER

There's nothing quite like a little prior | gized Johnson, hastily-which completely technical experience to grease the wheels of progress for the hard-worked and down-trodden student. James, for in-stance, has had considerable service with the United States Geological Survey, so, during our late lamented six-marked-problem week, when U. S. G. S. maps were prescribed, he settled himself at his desk and matched up a couple of them in a manner that was carefree and confident-not to say speedy. Thirty min-utes later his left-hand desk neighbor (Adler) noticing a constantly growing pile of James' raven locks on the desk beside him, inquired solicitously:

"What's wrong?" "Where in Tophet (or words to that effect) is Littlestown?" inquired James. Adler quietly pointed it out on his (Adler's) maps. James looked—then looked at his own.

Looked again at Adler's—and then fur-tively tore from his Gettysburg sheet a sheet which belonged about four wide counties away.

X X X Speaking of maps, Bull and Peabody, in their brief and justly famous supply act, are standing well out in front in the competition among the instructors to see which can furnish the most in-tricate and amusing map forms. They drew a merited round of applause early in their convection on fine of drew a merited round of applause early in their course by connecting up five of them in a sort of Z shape which wan-dered happily over three or four neigh-boring desks, but their last marked problem, in which they hooked up three maps in series in a simple but highly baffling roller-towel effect, unquestion-ably furnished a maximum of entertain-ment and exercise. Several of the hows ably furnished a maximum of entertain-ment and exercise. Several of the boys were late the next morning and the rumor spread that they all had dislo-cated necks from trying to look at both ends of three maps, each twenty inches long, pasted together and draped over 28 inch deck. The rumor proced to be a 28-inch desk. The rumor proved to be both untrue and unjust. None of them had tried to look at even one end.

Neal Johnson had a narrow escape the other day from deeply offending some members of the class. "Look out for duds," he warned. "There are lots of them out here." "Whaddya mean, duds?" demanded McKinley, with characteristic Irish bel-licerence ligerence. "Oh! I mean the other kind," apolo-satisfied Mac. x x x

Johnson pulled a low nasty one on the G-2 boys that day. The dope had gone forth that the last of the three terrain pads would be featured by the use of the support platoon, which must, under no circumstances, be used earlier, As an effective manner of counter-es-pionage, he only gave us two situations, leaving one terrain pad, and (in some cases, one platoon) sticking out in the air like a sore thumb.

ххх At that, we must say that particular terrain exercise encouraged us more than has any other to believe that our months ing them something. The approved so-lution was almost correct. True, we had to get down to platoon tactics to do it. Yet we are encouraged.

x x x We noted with amusement in last week's News the expression of a belief that the faculty had demonstrated its mental superiority over the students. The mere possession of such a belief is, to the normal mind a sufficient commen-tary upon the intelligence (?) which harbors it. We refuse to tell the name of the instructor who, after conference with Colonel Stayer regarding his mark in the test, met a friend with the question:

"What is a moron?"

ххх Speaking of morons, Frank McCoy's neighbors refuse to sympathize with him any more. Frank always sheds clothes and cuss-words promiscuously and in-discriminately while he's working with a marked problem; writes three or four solutions furiously while everyone else is struggling to finish one; grabs up a few loose sheets from his various efforts, ap-parently at random just in time to get in under the wire—and smacks out an "A." It has happened too often to call it luck, so he's just having to get along now without sympathy.

x x x Gilchrist pulled an innovation the other day which was so revolutionary that we hope it was inadvertent and won't be repeated. "Are there any important questions?"

"OH, THE MINSTRELS SING OF AN ENGLISH KING"

Company Officer, NOT a Member of the Prince of Wales Club, Commits Grave Indiscretion

Capt. Jerry Wood (M. F. H.) was discoursing on and demonstrating stable management to the Company Officers. "We will now go to the tack room," he said. "What's the tack room?" inquired an ambitious seeker after knowledge.

Capt. Wood explained that the British refer to riding equipment as tackle, and thus the custom had arisen of referring to the room in which miscellany was kept as the tack room, for short.

"You mean the Derby, Captain?" inquired a Middle /Westerner. "The correct pronunciation is Darby," maintained the Captain. "That's what the English call it."

what the English call it."
Whereupon from the ranks came the voice of some bold spirit, undeterred by the experience of General Butler's reference to Mussolini:
"To hell with the British crown."
As if we didn't have enough international complications already.

THE PROFESSOR GOES LITERARY

The ubiquitous Blunderbuss snooper happened in at the Officers' Club Grill last Tuesday afternoon just in time to hear Professor McCunniff in the act of delivering himself of a lecture on literature. The erudite Dr. Perrin and the scholarly Dr. Freehoff constituted the audience and the Professor was expounding upon the advantages of an occasional bit of serious reading in the classics

'Do you think it can compare with Scott's Emulsion?" interposed Dr.

Freehoff at this juncture. "I haven't read it," the Professor hastened to admit, "but as I was saying-

At this point the embarrassed reporter hurriedly signed for his fivecent cigar and departed, not without noting, however, the look of what, for want of a better term, might be called the look of wrapt admiration on the faces of the distinguished explorer's entranced listeners.

The Infantry Mind Again

Major Hoge, like his illustrious predecessor, Colonel Bond, occasionally refers to "the Infantry Mind." A few days ago in demonstrating how long it would take how many men to dig how long a trench in what kind of soil, he made the calculations on the blackboard. Something went amiss. Major Bill had made an error in addition.

From the back of the room rose Nemesis.

"The Infantry Mind caught that one," came the words accompanied by an accusing finger. "Four and three do not make eight in the Infantry."

Stonewall Brigade Surpasses Light Brigade

Map in hand, mounted on their trusty steeds, the Company Officers nonchantly rode from placarded tree to placarded bush, spotting command posts. The situation was normal, i. e., the officers were merrily playing or plotting practical jokes on one an-other. Morale was high. A wise-cracking group started to-ward a CP somewhat apart from the rest. All was peace and quiet in the sylvan glades. Suddenly—Tac-a-tactac-tac-tac. "Omigosh" and "Wow" and "Ma-chine gun fire" ejaculated the fun-loving crew.

Equitation instructors, had they been present, would have felt repaid for weary hours spent in calling out "Dominate him" and "Kick him, Mr. Dumjohn." For the Company Ocicers group forthwith proceed to surpass the famed Charge of the Light Bri-gade. (The Light Brigade stopped and went back). and went back). Eventually they were rallied. What had happened was no mystery; it was obvious they had entered a firing area, which was closed. But why? One version is that they were lost. But the popular version current among the Company Officers is that Stonewall Jackson, mapping instruc-tor, winner of aeromap-horseback competitions, night rider de luxe and lord of road junctions and bench marks, had gummed up his coordinates.

Major Hoge may have felt that Stonewall, his partner in airmap-riding victories, was about to get in a little (Continued on page 7.)

So with admirable camaraderie and esprit de corps, the Major got into hot water himself. Only he did it in the bathroom. Slipping, he clutch-ed at the hot water faucet, it turned, down, almost parboiling the Major. This undoubtedly is carrying friendship rather far.

But Wars Are Such Messy Things

In these days of pacifist propagan-da and pussy-footing protagonists of preparedness, it is refreshing to hear from a humorous Philistine who is bold enough to give utterance to a plea for war as a relief from ennui. An un-known contributor who signs himself C. T. L. submits the following.

A Soldier Speaks His Mind God of the soldier! Hear us! Lord of the blood red star! It isn't much that we're asking . . . All that we want is a war.

Lord, we're sick of the drilling, Sick of the blanks and the fake; It's little enough that we're asking . . . All that we want is a break.

Lord, if you knew the sameness Day after lousy day, The bugler's lungs would be bursting Getting us up and away.

Lord, we don't ask many favors, Never a one before,

But now, Lord, straight from the shoulder, How 'bout a first class war?

We used to feel that way too; sometimes, when we were younger. Yes my dear Watson, C. T. L. is young (or at least retains young ideas) and is probably a member of the 24th In-fantry. We suggest that he join the Marines or the Glee Club. Meanwhile we shall be glad to receive other con-tributions from his pen.

Those Fuel Cards

Have you gotten your little fuel card from the QM yet re fuel consumption?

Many Benning officers have Many Benning officers have: Reaction of officers, upon learning that they are "over," vary. Major Rhett, thinking he had enough coal, told the driver trying to give him some more, to give it to some one else. Col. Wells, being of a practical turn of mind, weighed his load of fuel, and the figures he got were several hun-dred pounds different from the weights which the OM assumed the wagon which the QM assumed the wagon carried.

Other officers merely swore.

Other officers merely swore. The most interesting reaction is that of Major Harding, who to date nas not been informed that he is over. "If I got one of those things, 1 would wave it in triumph," averred the Major. "Each day my wife tells me I keep the house too cold."

The M. F. J. and the M. P.

Capt. Jerry Wood (M. F. H.), driving his car, came to the stop sign south of the Service Club. He stopped.

Just as he started forward, an MP on a motorcycle came from behind, passed on his left, did not stop, but made a right turn just in front of the Contailing and work on Captain's car, and went on.

The near-accident made such an impression on the Captain's mind, that he dashed to the telephone and teleph ned Sheriff Tuttle. The Sheriff was not there but Capt. Wood got the Ser-

the Sergeant explained. "Well his status might have been duty just then," Captain Wood admit-ted, "but he missed being marked hos-pital by about half an inch."

And he left the phone mumbling something about the duties, if any, of an MP, if any, in Heaven.

And This Little Pig-

(Even with its wide beaten zone, the Blunderbuss requires the cooperation of other weapons to hit all Benning. And the following contribution by X arrived just as the situation was growing acute. Here it is.)

Bob Chance's bean-shooting hoofers can enjoy a merry giggle over the an-tics of the galloping meadow firemen on last Sunday's hunt. The sequence of events was about as follows but things happened so fast that this report may not be as accurate as a slow motion picture. However I guess you can visualize the idea portrayed. The snif hounds (dogs to me) fol-lowed the meanderings of a pole kitty from 5 a. m. till about 9. I know it from 5 a. m. till about 9. I know it was a pole kitty because they could not keep the scent of any other kind of animal and also because the animal ran in circles.

Anyway at 9 a. m. the Field (that means people on horses) were resting at a check (that means a halt where you get off to rest your horse and get you get off to rest your horse and get all tired out yourself). Well a big black wild pig rushed the Field dur-ing the peaceful check. I don't know what made the pig wild or why he should dash among the hunters but there he was in his pig-eich way abaging avayone from their gish way, chasing everyone from their resting places. That made the Field angry and they started chasing the pig, keeping the women as horsepig, ke holders.

M. P. Black was close to the ani-mal and was just removing his kid gloves to grap the pig in the ortnodox manner, when piggy changed di-rection and rushed the ex-military policeman, who at once turned tail and fell over his own Peel Boots (made for riding and not for running) As Black hit the turf the pig jumped over his middle section and a grunt came from both of them simutaneously. In the meantime St. John who had been up all night, was leaping from behind trees playing hide and seek with the pig, while Broom and Shovel Wood, in a red coat, was shouting instructions from a long way back. He carried wire cutters and Bobby Knight's club, which thus left the feminine whippers-in completely defense-less. Everyone knows a powder puff is useless against a pig. Then up rushes Hunt Surgeon Stay-er with a thermometer and a blood pressure instrument. At a later in-terview he stated that he had the instruments for the huntsmen and not for the pig. Finally the pig ambled peacefully down the road and left the Field to discuss the battle. Everyone told why he did not dash in and throw the side but my belief is that it was the pig, but my belief is that it was the odor of the pig that kept everyone at a distance.

You see a pig is much faster than a snif hound, and particularly when a sint hound, and particularly when something makes a pig wild, it travels. This pig had outdistanced the hounds, killed the pole kitty, and covered it-self with glory and other things. When the Field got back to its hounds—they were all sitting in a cir-

Range Area No. 1 is under the care | in the direction of the river. of Sergeant Thomas Tweed, of the In-fantry School Detachment. This area contains the finest hunting grounds on the reservation. The southern boundary takes in the marshes and swamp lands of the Chattahoochee valley, where wild hogs, wild turkey, 'coons and wild cats are found. The large sage fields on the hill side furnish excellent quail shooting.

The quarters now occupied by Sgt. Tweed and family, was once the "big house" of the Rutherford plantation, one of the few remaining ante-bellum homes. Although many changes have taken place on the old plantation in the last half century, the large oak grove surround-ing the building and the building itself, which has recently been repaired by the Quartermaster, is in excellent condition.

The space where once stood the large The space where once stood the large barn and stables, is today the home of of the Infantry School Kennels. In-stead of mules and horses, several packs of the finest hounds in the country are quartered there. Sergeant Tweed is in charge of the Kennels and is an expert in raising and training hounds for the hunt pack. His ability in this work is thoroughly demonstrated by the Infan-try School hunt pack, considered one of the best in the South. Although the pointer and setter dogs the best in the South. Although the pointer and setter dogs are considered far above the peaceful and carefree hound in dog intelligence by many hunters, Sergeant Tweed claims that he will match the wits and intelli-gence of the pack leaders with any breed, stock, or type of four-footed ani-mal in the world. His care for his dogs does not cease with mere words. He still carries an ugly scar on his right shoulcarries an ugly scar on his right shoul-der, received when he climbed into an old well to rescue one of his dogs from a big wild cat. The cat had taken re-fuge in the well and the leader of the pack had plunged into the well, which was about ten feet deep, with the water within about four feet of the surface. The cat was having all the better of the argument and had the hound just about drowned when Sgt. Tweed arrived. He lost no time in rescuing the dog, regard-less of the cat's teeth and claws.

less of the cat's teeth and claws. Another interesting legend of the range patrolled by Sgt. Tweed is the story of the haunted marsh. It seems that long years ago a runaway slave was hiding in a small lagoon or marsh near the Chattahoochee river. When his pur-suers located his hiding place, he fied to mard the river and plunged in and was toward the river and plunged in and was drowned. A few months later, so the drowned. A few months later, so the story goes, a crowd of huntsmen heard their pack open in full cry near the head of this marsh. The chase led toward the river and the hunters hurried after the hounds, for it seemed that it was a sight race. As the pack neared the river in full cry, the hunters suddenly heard a loud scream and then a splash as if a person had dived from the high bank into the river. The dogs came sulking to heel, with tails tucked and bristles raised while casting fearful glances back in the direction of the river. The nume was over for the night. For years after-ward, the colored people of the planta-tion gave this spot a wide berth and even until this day many of the old time folks of the Rutherford plantation will tell you of the haunt that stalks at mic-icable to you before the hounds to the night to run before the hounds to the banks of the muddy Chattahoochee.

banks of the muddy Chattahoochee. Sgt. Tweed is familiar with every acre of land on this large reservation. Like Sgt. Pete Thompson, no hunting party is complete without him. He knows the haunts of the turkey and wild hogs, and he can almost call the spot where the pack will pick up the scent of fox or wild cat when the hunt is with the pack and in the saddle. A great hunter, Sgt. Tweed is also a great protector of game life. During

CAPT. J. E. COLE RETIRED; WILL LIVE IN COLUMBUS

Of especial interest to the commissioned personnel of Fort Benning is the War Department despatch of January 31, anouncing the retirement of Cap-tain James E. Cole, Jr., Infantry, U.S.A. Captain Cole was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry on August 15, 1917. He joined the 61st Infantry in the late fall of 1917 and served continuously with this regiment until the 5th Division was demobolized in 1920, being successively promoted to the grades of first lieutenant and captain.

In General Orders of the 5th Division, October 18, 1918, Major General Hanson E. Ely cited Captain Cole as follows: "He led his company through hostile machine-gun fire in the Bois-des-Rappes near Cunel, France, reaching his objective on the north edge of the woods and entrenched while exposed to hostile ma-chine-gun fire from both flanks and menchine-gun fire from both flanks and men-aced from the rear by snipers and ma-chine gunners who had infiltrated into the thick underbrush. He was an ex-ample of rare courage and coolness in disposing of his men so as to save loss of life and hold his position." He was also cited by Brigadier Gen-eral Joseph C. Castner, commanding the 9th Infantry Brigade in the following terms: "As senior officer it developed upon Lieutenant Cole to assume a large

At all times he was cool and competent in his bearing and his decisions were made quickly and without hesitation. His bravery under fire was demonstrated when, with utter disregard for his own life, he led his men against the emplacement of enemy machine guns and was an inspiration alike to officers and men. He was in command of this detachment September 15-17, 1918.

Following the war Captain Cole was detailed as Professor of Military Science detailed as Professor of Minitary Schece was universe calle studenty upon a wag-and Tactics at Marion Institute, Ala-bama, and later as instructor at The Infantry School. PARENT-TEACHERS MEETING

The Parent-Teachers Association of Fort Benning held their February meet-ing at the Post Chapel on February 5, with the President, Mrs. O. N. Bradley in the chair.

After conducting the usual business, Mrs. Raymond Pearson rendered two de-lightful musical numbers and Mrs. Hen-Matchett gave a most interesting talk on Girl Scout Organization. Tom Brown and Alec Falligant made their first public appearance by rendering several pop-ular musical selection on their ukeleles. Mrs. Bradley appointed several committees to take care of the many recre-ational and financial needs of the Children's School and to stimulate renewed interest and efforts of the parents in these matters.

The sale of tin foil and old magazines which, in the past, has been a source of income to the fund has fallen off considerably during the past few months, and in order to stimulate these donations and sales a committee consisting of Mrs. R. B. Cole and Mrs. J. L. Bradlev was appointed.

Recognizing that appropriate motion pictures for our children are of the ut-most importance in developing proper habits and clean thinking, a committee eonsisting of Mrs. Edward. Sherburne and Mrs. Andrew T. Knight was ap-pointed to make selections of pictures and to cooperate with the recreational officer in these matters.

To make arrangements for the annual Laster Egg Hunt, Mrs. Thomas Tay-lor and Mrs. H. B. Lewis were ap-pointed. Mrs. B. G. Ferris has offered to donate all of the easter eggs for this hunt.

Miss Grimes read a letter from the Linwood School expresing appreciation and thanks for the toys sent to their children by the Fort Benning School at Christmas time.

BATTON IS KNOCKED OUT BY GLOVER

A record crowd of fight fans saw A record crowd of fight fans saw "Blondy" Parker, Columbus welter-weight, and "Saginaw" Seeley, pride of Fort Benning, fight ten rounds to a draw in the féature bout of last Tuesday night's fight show. The crowd was also given one of the biggest upsets of the year when "Cotton" Batton, Happy Heart middleweight, was stopped in the fifth round of his fight with "Rough-house" Glover, of Americus, This was Batton's first defeat since he began fightine. fighting.

"Rip" Tetherton, latest addition to the Benning fight stable, ripped "Ike" Clif-ton, the LaGrange blacksmith, to shreds in short order, stopping him in the first round.

"Seaweed" Wilson, flashy little doughboy feather weight, broke into the kayo column with a knockout over his old rival, "Krafty" Kline of Columbus. "Tiger" Thompson of the 24th Infantry, was also a kayo victim for the second time at the hands of Walloping Walt King of Americus. The main-go was a fast, clever box ing exhibition, plentifully sprinkled with flurries of punches. Parker scored in the first round with several hard lefts the first round with several hard lefts to Seeley's midsection while the Saginaw contented himself with peppering Par-ker's face with a flicking left. The Blond had his big chance in the second round when he caught Seeley high on the head with a terrific right cross. The Saginaw hit the canvas and spun around from the force of the punch. The bell ended the round as he scrambled to his feet. The minute's rest cleared the cobwebs and Seeley came out for the third as and Seeley came out for the third as fresh as ever. The remainder of the fight saw Seeley scoring continually with a left to Parker's face while the Blond carried his attack to the body. Seeley scored several times with a hard right to the head but was never able to slow Parker down. As before mentioned, Parker sank the harder punches but the Saginaw was the better boxer. The decision was popular. "Cotton" Batton lost his head for once in his life and the result was a kayo. It should be a lesson to the H ap y Heart fighter. He boxed rings around Glover for three rounds and was doing damage with his counter punching to the body. For some unknown reason, he went in to slug with Glover in the fourth round. Batton picked the one game that Glover is unbeatable at. He went down Glover is unbeatable at. He went down from a right haymaker to the chin. Batton came up wild and but for the bell would have never weathered the round. In the fifth round he came out to slug again and made the mistake of leading with his right while his left dangled at his side, Glover measured the distance to his open chin and let go. The Tetherton-Clifton affair caused quite a flurry of excitement. There was some hard socking right away and Teth-erton had the better of it. As the ref-eree had the men break from a clinch, man. Walt King stopped Tiger after the soldier had been down three times. It was a good fight and Tiger showed that he was game and willing but not a match for King. "Grumpy" Gordy and "Tanks" Waldo put on a gory four round affair with Waldo taking the bout. It was a tough break for Grumpy, who had scored two knockdowns in the opening round. Wal-do however had the last two rounds by a large margin. This war resembled nothing so much as the Meuse-Argonne or the Marne. "Wild Bill" Tuttle's Military Police-

"Wild Bill" Tuttle's Military Police-men continue to leave a path of destruc-tion among the basketball teams of Fort Benning. The M. During the past week, they have turned in victories over the Ordnance cagesters and the Red Diamond outfit. The Ordnance Police battle was a hard fought affair with the Police winning 28 to 25. SEARS, ROEBUCK PLAN SCHOOL OF COOKING

A new kind of cooking school at which the relatively new technique of the pres-sure cooker will be explained and dem-onstrations will be held every day this week at the Sears, Roebuck and Co., store. Hours will be 10 o'clock in the morning, 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and 7 o'clock Saturday evening. The talks and demonstrations will be given by A. Jensen, noted dietician and specialist in home economics. Cooking will be done before each audience and each detail of the process minutely ex-plained after which the food will be plained after which the food will be served to the audience. There will also be a question and answer period, at which time any points about the cooker not made clear will be fully explained. Every woman is cordially invited to attend. This method of cooking has been in-dorsed by colleges, universities, doctors and dietetic clinics; it was recommended by the U.S. Department of Agriculture as the only safe method for cold pace

Say you saw it in The News.

Hdqrs. Co., 1st Bn.

Well, well, back again with the old I didn't see any "Entries" from News. the 29th at all last week. Here's hoping that these notes find a wee space in the "Column" inasmuch as the last week has been rather mild, without many excit-ing adventures or the like—my entry isn't going to be so lengthy. But putting away all of this nonsensical "boloney". and getting down to facts, here's the low-down:

Pfc. Johnson has departed on an emergency furlough for his home in Cor-dele, Ga. I'm sorry, Johnny, to hear of your misfortune and the gang is earnestly hoping for your folks' speedy re-covery. Pvt. Archie D. Alton has also departed for his home in Greenville, S. C. He is in the same predicament that Johnson is in and of course all of us extend the same sympathetic courtesies to him

Sgts. Freeman and Bagley have also vacated the ranks for a few days. But their's is mostly a well deserved rest (to hear them tell it). Pfc. A. O. (Kinky) Brown is another one of our "vacationers" and is enjoying 25 days at his home in Mississippi.

I have a little surprise for the men of Phenix City fame. Today we had a visitor from the wilds—and that visitor was none other than "Pop Horse" Na-than P. Lemay. I guess that a lot of you boys would be surprised to see him, wouldn't you?

wouldn't you: At last I have found out just what this Company needs. We need approxi-mately 50 radio sets so that every one can get their personal station on the air any time of the night, day or what have you. This seems to be the only way out of this predicament. There may be only one more way out of this. If be only one more way out of this: If you get tired of hearing some else's pro-gram on the air, just merely walk down-stairs two flights and listen to the famous program sponsored, conducted and acted by Cpl. Robert D. Savage on his famous banjo. Upon tiring of this one may listen to the melodious voice of Pfc. may listen to the melodious voice of Ffc. Henderson singing "Waitin' for a 'Irain" or the "Blue Yodel" No. 8899776. I think that Pfc. Dura V. Kilpatrick is also taking up the manly art of voice culture. Keep it up "Kil," you may be a second Caruso some day.

We now have a new addition to our We now have a new addition to but Company day-room, Pvt. Wallace C. Gallman. He makes a very ornamental figure with his carcass parked on the radiator. Gallman said that he wasn't feeling very good the other day, water tasted wet in his mouth. In fact, I be lieve that he has acquired that much dreaded disease known among soldiers as "Ganicey"; He can eat and sleep O. K., but he has absolutely no desire to work. He sure is in a bad shape, isn't work. He suche? Well, well.

Mack L. Steinwinder has been ap-pointed Corporal. We are hoping there will be no more transfers or short dis-charges on this enlistment as we think Corporal Steinwinder will stay in the 1st Platoon until his retirement some-time in 1947.

One of the company buglers stated that their bugler chief, Eddie J. Camp-bell, must be bucking for the extra first sergeant grade, in case our first ser-geant dies. The First Sergeant told Campbell the other day, "Not to be so hard on the buglers. You were a bug-ler yourself, Sergeant."

Welcome to our fold, Corporal Vines Welcome to our fold, Corporal Vines, we hope that you like this company as well as the boys like you. Here is wish-ing you all the success in the world while in this company. Corporal Vines is our new Mess Sergeant and a good one too. Just ask the men of the company and they will tell you how much they think of him. Here is a little scene from the bayonet course Saturday morning: Private Raymond Carter is in the trench awaiting the signal to go. The signal is given and out comes Private Carter and dashes madly down the course, thrusting and jabbing. When finally coming out of the last hole he walks towards Lieut. Curtis to find out his score. Lieut. Curtis asks for scores and then the fun: "six oq," "six off," "six off," and so on "six oq," "six off," "six off," and so on down the line to the last hole. Private Carter comes strolling towards the group gathered around the trernch with a smile on his face and here is what he said, "Didn't I tell you I would make a hundred points, and didn't you hear them calling off that score of mine?" Yes, Haymond, old dear, you mine?" Yes, Haymond, old dear, you made a hundred points—backwards! Pfc. Wilkinson has decided to reduce.

He says that the men are beginning to take him for a pillow. Why only the other day out on the bayonet course he was used as such. We were all lined up about a hundred yards from one of the trenches when the order was given to ground rifles and run to the trench and jump in. We all did so including Pfc. Wilkinson and Pfc. Stokely. Upon arriving at the trench, we jumped in but Wilkinson was too tired to jump so he fell in and Pfc. Stokely not wanting to land on a hard spot picked him out to fall on. How does it feel to be used

In furtherance of our program to develop a winning golf team, a oattalion tournament is underway first to determine who's who in golf in the battalion, and sec-ond, who will weaken when under pres-sure of competition. Sunday morning Captain Stewart defeated our golf "ex officio," Lieut, Kellam, three up. Cap-tain Taylor outputted his opponent on the 18th hole. Lieut. Cobb gained 2 1-2 points for his team defeating Lieut. Me-Master, both playing their first tourna-ment game in this ancient sport.

Lieut. A. A. Goodwyn has returned to the battalion after a very instructive two weeks spent at Maxwell Field. He at least learned when a ship noses over to inform the pilot to cut his switches off promptly. A practical demonstration of this was given just prior to leav-ing Maxwell Field. Lieut. Lietner, Air Corps Reserve, is with us for two weeks and is at present learning the intricacies of light tank warfare under the careful tutelage of Cantain Johnson.

On last Tuesday a large bet was made between Master Sergeant Lanham and First Sergeant Hunt. The bet was who could throw the javelin the farthest. Sergeant Lanham won by several feet. We now believe he can beat Private We now believe he can beat Trivac Wiley who holds the world's record, 198 feet. (Note: That shows the effect of having a few old teeth pulled out). Corporal McCullough of Company "E" still says that the "Sea Cow" milk is the best on the market. Mac can also tell you just about how fast a fire engine will run.

Ha, the mystery of the disappearing trash cans has been solved. Upon look-ing into our radio and victrola the other day we found the poor cans, battered and mutiliated. Shorty must think he is fixing a Ford. While lounging around the recreation room the other day this scribe found a new speed demon, no other than our little Recreation Room other than our little Recreation Room Orderly, Pfc. Parker. He is so fast on a typewriter that he has to have a pail of water handy at all times in case he happens to set the type on fire. By the way, Pfc. Parker uses the touch system. And then came the turn of Capt. Ol-lie Reed, likewise of the 29th Regiment of Infantry. The aviators here are a merry fun-loving crowd (much like the Company Officers Class at Benning) by the time Capt. LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY, 3d

Dear Eddie: My, my, this has been a busy week. Not only has the nice summer weather departed, and the cold chilling breezes descended on us again, those things are but mere trifles in the life of the stu-dent; the thing that really has the class in an uproar is the course in combat practice of the M. G. gun platoon, and sometimes even the company is men-tioned. I hardly know just what to tell you about the course. Since there are no so-called "electives" at the school when you come down here you will un-doubtedly have to undergo the same things that have been wished off on us. This has been a great course, combat practice. How well it has been named. It has taken the utmost skill to prevent yourself from being beaned by a clod of broom sage just at the moment when you were trying to decide what to do that evening. Once the class stopped by a piece of wire which same provided Jack Horner with a great deal of innocent that evening. Once the class stopped by a piece of wire which same provided Jack Horner with a great deal of innocent merriment. So far the class appears to have a hundred percent record in do-ing the wrong thing at the wrong time, in all of the problems. I tied up a problem in indirect fire so badly that first we were to the right of the torrect first we were to the right of the target and then to the left. After making a perfect bracket the ammunition gave out, so was unable to get the fire on the target. Perhaps the most satisfying sight of the year was when Brother Isaacs made a forced march from Bou-ton Hill to the woods on Cook Ridge. Even Cpl. Wheeler failed to function perfective.

Even Cpl. Wheeler failed to runction perfectly. For the most part the course con-sisted of being assigned to some duty in a platoon of machine guns and told to do something with them while the rest look on-maybe. Generally speaking we have been unable to guess just what the instructor desired, or in just what man-ner he wanted it performed. It is pretty hard, Eddie, to suddenly find yourself platoon commander of a platoon, all platoon commander of a platoon, all set for an attack by an imaginary enemy, from an unknown point on the termy, from an unknown point on the ter-rain, with unknown quantities as sub-ordinate commanders. It is even more difficult when, after you have made what is to you a perfect disposition, to find that the instructor had not put the targets where you could fire on them, from where you are. The mere fact that there are clock of dirt flying through the from where you are. The mere fact that there are clods of dirt flying through the air, really adds a most realistic touch of actual battle conditions to the entire affair. Just one word of advice. Don't Light Fires! Naughty, naughty! Just the same, Eddie, I think that most of the class has gotten a lot more than they realize out of the course. Re-member you learn from your mistakes.

member you learn from your mistakes, and from the mistakes of others. There are very few members of the class who do not realize that early in the year we received very valuable instruction from Maj. Smith, Capt. Schmidt, and others on "Practical Psychology." Yeah, veri-ly, I say unto you, we learn divers things from divers people in diverse ways. Enough, enough. I will desist. You really have to take the course to have a true appreciation of it. What little 1 could say has already been said by so many members of the class that 1 am sure I can add nothing to their statements. I have just one more remark to make and then I will quit. Believe me, this is sure one model class.

this is sure one model class. Let us away on the wings of joy to more pleasant subjects. The "Horsey" crowd broke loose lately and entertained the class at two informal teas. The first was in the nature of a guessing game contest, with "Spin the Plate" left out. Held in the open air, with the fragrant odors of the stables softly breeze-borne; minds jaded from efforts in the indirect fire test, were whipped to in the indirect fire test, were whipped to a keen edge. Under such lovely condi-tions and in such a swell environment, tions and in such a swell environment, the class went through the ceremony with all the dignity of calves at play in a green pasture. What matters it if watering troughs, which are m a y b ecleaned once a year, were graded as being cleaned every day. What matters it if Gus Mood thought the horse did not need new shoes, all because Jake Moon forgot the story of the "Foolish Virgins" that he so carefully told us at the beginning of the year. If things Virgins" that he so carefully told us at the beginning of the year. If things were not that way, there would be no sense to holding guessing games. As for myself, Eddie, I still maintain that the horse was high on the outside. For its second effort to make the life of the student more pleasant the "Hor-sey" crowd really outdid itself. After much deliberation as to just what would

hit upon the idea of a final ride of only 17 miles. When you stop to think that there are 97,000 acres to this place, I think that you will realize at once (?) Eddie, just how conservative they really were. For the winning pair in the "snails" race, they, or perhaps someone else, donated a set of hunting bits. Always "horsey." Why not an electric toaster. It is the wives that have to manipulate the linawives that have to manipulate the linament following one of those rides. Well, anyway we rode, and we rode. That is anyway we rode, and we rode. That is all of us but the chosen few who were able to cripple themselves the day be-fore. They were made to drive to the various stations in their cars. Such hardship. Such fortitude. Stewart, Vernon, (beware of hot water, Eddie), blakely, (terrible lame for the day of the ride only), and Lewis (I think that he had the flu). The rest of us tried to figure just what to do with a horse with a two-mile walk, a 10-mile trot, and a figure just what to do with a horse with a two-mile walk, a 10-mile trot, and a dead run home. The prizes offered were first won by "Happy" Baker and "Ar-tillery" Studebaker. At a later confer-ence, this was found to be a false alarm and Jake Moon had the prizes presented to Hedekin and Kammerer. Then some math shark got after Jake's figures and Dave and Mal had to turn the bits over to Newman and Brann. About twelve more changes and I think About twelve more changes and I think About twelve more changes and 1 think that Reed Graves and yours truly would have been able to puff our chests out at home and tell the women folks "How we won the big race." Now lest you think that is all the use of horses that they have been able to provide at the Infantry School, 1 will immediately set your mind at rest. One of the best things that they do around here is put Infantry officers on around here is put Infantry officers on cavalry chargers. When the equitation runs out they confer with the map section of the school and put on mounted map problems. We have had two lately, on aerial mosiacs. In the first problem, Capt. Jackson was called away suddenly and the dirty work was left up to Maj.

was sent by the master map reader of the school into a close area, due too, I really blush to mention the matter, and when you consider that it was done by the master map reader, this is really painful, but I must; he gave us the wrong coordinates. There is one thing, when ever they talk of Sheridan's ride, I will always have a mental picture, perhaps a little faster than the original ride, and perhaps more like the "Charge of the Light Brigade," but nevertheless a picture.

In spite of this small error, by the master map reader, the rides were very enjoyable. Practically every member of the class scared up wild turkeys (in the restricted area). Brother Isaacs bogged his horse in quick-sand. Being in the feather-weight class, Brother Isaacs was somewhat surprised to find his horse sinking under him. In fact he refused to believe that it was so, until the tail of his horse was afloat. Of course an aversion to wet feet may have had something to do with the fact that he did not dismount until compelled to do so by the exhortation of his companions. Contrary to common belief Merritt did not get his car stuck in the hole made by Brother Isaacs. In fact it was qu...c some distance away. In spite of this he very gracefully put his car in so deeply that it was necessary to call on the P. X. for assistance. It is nice to be crippled and be able to ride in your car, but after all, the horses belong to the government.

It remained, as usual, for the Giremes to provide the real heart interest in the play. Capt. Brooks certainly led our Company Commander a merry chase. "We will go across country, and strike the Lumpkin Road and come in that way," says the Capt. They did. But they did not find any of the trails that the Gireme claimed were "just ahead," however they almost ran into a machine gun problem. Having gotten by that safely they were ambling along when suddenly they were encompassed by a cloud. Senor Ravelo, the third member of the party, heeding the instruction of Maj. St. John, shouted "Gas," and set spur to his horse. Gassed they were. Tear gas. Unfortunately, Capt. Brooks had picked a route in line with the winddrift from Norton Court, where they were having "gas drill." He claims that they simply closed in boot to boot and charged home, but eye-witnesses claim that it looked like the tail end of bull Run arriving at Washington. Of course, we have had a few other

Of course, we have had a few other things besides. Maj. St. John appeared before us, nicely shaven for once, and gave us a talk on "Reconnaissance." I don't remember much about the lecture, but the Major actually was shaved. Also Maj. Rhett has continued his course in how to put old stories across and at the same time has imparted a great deal of knowledge about training schedules and programs. I don't know just how he does it but darned if you don't learn something, Then too, we have had Maj. Arnold, who explained something or other about the organization of artillery. Most interesting, unfortunately most of the class had forgotten to bring the prescribed reference, which curbed the efforts of the Artillery instructor somewhat. It must have been a hard lecture to give, 'cause Maj. Arnold sure did work up a good sweat over it. Or perhaps it was just that the room was too hot.

In fact, Eddie, we have been getting lectures thick and fast lately. Major Stivers gave one on the theory of entry into combat. Maj. Smith gave one, or I should say another, on "Psychology." No one should miss those lectures. And Maj. McCunniff gave a lecture on Combat Orders. I want to tell you right now, Eddie, that in spite of what you

Winners in Competitive Tests Honored at Review Held in Doughboy Stadium

Guidon streamers for excellency in the competitive tests for January were presented to the winning companies by the regimental commander, Colonel Duncan K. Major, Jr., at the regimental review held in Doughboy Stadium by the 29th Infantry, February 5.

The winning companies were: Company "F," Regimental Machine Gun Company, and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion.

Battalions were formed in mass in column of companies with forty inches distance between companies. Companies were formed as platoons with file closers in ranks. Headquarters companies were massed behind the band under the senior officer present. Companies "D" and "H" were formed with the Special Units Battalion. Guidons were massed behind the colors. Turkey for Mrs. Drewry Husband takes credit Much Crawling is Done Chapter II.

As reported in our issue of January As reported in our issue of January 30th, under the head of "Lieut. Drewry Gets Turkey in Hour," Mrs. Drewry, who accompanied him, was denied the pleasure of getting her turkey at that time—reason: lack of fire power. Sne was packing a .410 shotgun.

However, proper coaching can be guaranteed to accomplish much. After five afternoons given over to instruc-tion by that military Nimrod, her husband, she decided that she had absorbed sufficient wilderness lore to make her a match for the wiliest of Gobblers. So, on last Wednesday afternoon, she and Lieutenant Drewry drove into Area No. 7, the Diana of the family intent on a, the Diana of the family much of securing a noble specimen of Meleagris Galopavo (just a Turkey), while the male portion of the party divided his attention between the gyrating muzzle of his companion's weapon and possible turkers turkeys.

They had hardly entered the area when Mr. Nimrod's observant eve spotted a flock of turkeys on the opposite side of a corn and pea field—great excitement on the part of Mrs. Nimrod, Having subdued this momentary disturbance the Lieutenant thereupon concentrated use results of several years of military training on the working out of a plan of campaign. He decided to back the car into the woods, abandon it, and exe-cute a flank attack around the edge of the woods. The plan was immediately put into execution and after divers detours, ex-plorations of ditch bottoms and much travelling in the manner ordinarily comtravelling in the manner ordinarily com-mon only to the serpent tribe, the doughty Diana and her coach arrived within 35 or 40 yards of the unsuspect-ing Gobblers. SECOND BATTALION BEATS GREENHATS; TANKERS LEAD

During the past week there has been little activity among the cage teams of the Intra-Mural basketball league. The Second Bats played their first game and showed strength and power with a one-sided defeat of the Greenhats. The Tankers are at the top with two wins and no losses. The Greenhats took their only victory over the Special Units. It appears now that the race will be a three cornered affair between the Tankers, Gunners and Second Bats.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, COM-MANDER IN CHIEF

By T. G. Frothingham

The preparations for 'the bicentennial celebration of Washington's birth have awakened a new interest in the great life and accomplishments of our first commander in chief. It is, therefore, op-portune and fitting that Captain Frothingham, a student of military affairs, has prepared this book on the military record of General Washington. Among the many biogenetics of our resolution the many biographies of our revolution-ary commander in chief this work is unique, in that it is written from the military point of view, with the actual military operations as the guiding theme. The author conscientionsly presents the The author conscientiously presents the military events in the career of Washington and thus impressively reveals to the reader a vivid and strong picture of the admirable leader and his character. The book has the Macaulay method of general annotation which readily permits the researcher to locate cited items in any of the several existing compilations any of the several existing complations of Washington's letters and papers. The book is a valuable addition to the al-ready extensive Washington shelf and will serve to counteract the distorted and sometimes erroneous impressions made by some Washington biographers who have presented too many petty argu-ments and too much insignificant and personal color. The reading public will enjoy the book, and military readers will find it valuable, instructive and enwill find it valuable, instructive and en-tertaining. Many facts, little known, ev-en to the military reader, will be read with interest; for example, "Washing-ton's Six Rules of War," some, if not all of which appear later in more or less the same form, in Napoleon's MaxIms. The author has performed a patriotic service in his worthy effort to give an accurate, pleasing measure of Washing-ton's truly great military genius. The ton's truly great military genius. The reader will finish the book with a deeper appreciation, of and a greater reverence for Washington.

THE INTIMATE LETTERS OF ARCHIE BUTT - TAFT AND ROOSEVELT

An unfriendly critic might call Archie Butt the Ward McAllister of the White Butt the Ward McAllister of the White House. He was never quite free from the foppishness of the dandy whose per-sonal superiority is a matter of convic-tion. But, part dude as he was, Butt was more than half a hero, and it is this odd conglomerate which gives especial interest to his unusual character. A large element of the feminine was in him; the rest was purely masculine. Pepys and Creevey, combined, could not beat Butt for news. He was bursting beat Butt for news. He was bursting with it, and the reader feels that the buttons would have jumped off his coat ex-cept for the deflation from those almost daily letters to his brother's wife, with whom he was on terms of intimate and confident affection.

confident affection. Jealous of his rivals, and a very un-friendly critic of the President's secre-tary, Charles Norton, who threatened to divide his Chief's affections, Butt was the incarnation of loyalty to his Chief's affections. Butt was the incarnation of loyalty to his antithetical masters. Roos-evelt he adored; Taft he revered. When the cataclysm which splintered the most famous friendship in our modern history came, Butt clump passionately to his di-vided loyalties. It is written that a man cannot serve two masters. Major Butt gallantly and honorably struggled against an immutable law of human nature. He fought till happiness was gone, and health after it. Then a fate which nd health after it. remarkable volumes, no critic must omit the incontestable fact that the little garrulous happenings of day to day gradu-ally build into a figure of living blood and tissue—the genial, lazy, big-limbed, big-hearted, and not unheroic figure or Mr. Taft. Cruelly miscast for a part he never wished to play, and for which he was utterly unfit, he did his country discourse for user the big for the was disservice, forever thinking that he was following his duty. What an unspeak-able comfort it would have been to him in those harassed days to know that for ten years he would ultimately have an opportunity to serve his country to the utmost of his mind and strength in the place of places for which Nature had intended him from the start. —Ellery Sedgwick.

THE INFANTRY SCHOOL HUNT

By M. F. H.

When the hounds met last Sunday there seemed nearly as many children in the field as grown-ups. Perhaps they moved about so fast we counted one

The field of sixty mounted at the Polo-Hunt Club and moved to Range Polo-Hunt Club and moved to Range House No. 1, where the first cast was made. Racing over Cook Ridge in a wide sweep the hounds headed south toward the 18th Infantry Woods. The field spread out behind them 'till the Orion Trail was reached, where it be-came necessary to string out in single file for half a mile, as the swamps on either side were impossible — a sharp either side were impossible — a sharp turn to the left and Sewelson Creek was crossed, with open country ahead to the north. The field pushed on over a couple of dry streams, around Smith Hill and up on to Elliott Hill for a check and a beautiful view of all the surrounding country.

Several Join Wales Club

Away to the south the tail end of the field came trailing over the horizon. So far it had been a glorious run for all but a few who had hurriedly (and in-voluntarily) dismounted. But the ground was soft and no one had "The Book" in the field so they came up smiling. From Elliott Hill a long carry was made to the end of Riley Ridge for the next cast. Skirting the 7th Infantry Woods the pack again headed north and checked just beyond the 39th Infantry Woods. Here was waiting one of the fond mamas, all set to get a moving picture of the younger generation. Up trotted the fond papa, but alas! Behind him trotted only a riderless pony! In a few minutes Sumner Ferris trotted into the picture on foot. A mile back the saddle girth had broken, so Sumner and the pony discarded the of-fending impedimenta. Sumner for a while continued bareback, but the wet, shiny flanks of a pony are too slippery to grip and ere long "another warrior bit the dust."

Right here we wish to nominate Sum-Ferris for the Hall of Fame-not ner because he can make lead soldiers or ride a bicycle, but because when he "Get that quarterback!"

started on his first hunt he gave everything he had to try to finish it.

The hounds were cast again and made a nice run around Langwell Ridge to the Santa Fe Trail and back to Brown Ridge. Thence they led a pretty chase to the "pageant grounds" for the kill.

New Director Finds Large Field for Activities

Mr. Allen, the new Field Director or Mr. Allen, the new Field Director of the American Red Cross, has passed his first month of service in his new assignment and has been very busy re-organizing and readjusting himself to the new office and the office to him. He finds a large field for activities; says it is his great ambition to serve the personnel of the post in the most satis-factory and beneficial manner, assuring one and all of his desire to help, how-ever, it will require the hearty cooperation of officers and men, which he feels sure he will have.

sure he will have. Army Regulations 850-75, Section 2 sets forth the general outline covering Red Cross activities with the members of this command. We quote here a few of the activities as shown in paragraph 4-850-75. 4-850-75:

"To arrange for furnishing relief in distress among families of soldiers. Assist in locating families of soldiers. Locating men in the service for their families.

Arrange and urge communication with soldiers' families. To make loans to soldiers to return home on account of distress, sickness, or death in the immediate family when a soldier or family is without sufficient funds; such loans made only upon rec-ommendation of commanding officer and after verification has been made. Investigating home conditions at the request of proper officers for confiden-tial report in reference to discharge or furlough."

ties. Many years ago at Camp Knox, it be-came the duty of the Field Director to give especial attention to the patient personnel of the Station Hospital. This fell to Mr. Allen in 1920, who estab-lished a system of daily visits among the patients, furnishing them with read-ing and writing materials, cigarettes, matches, playing cards and miscellan-eous comfort articles; since that time the Adjutant General issued a memo-randum advising that the giving of cigrandum advising that the giving of cig-arettes was no longer a necessity. This particular part of the service has been changed. Daily visits have been made ever since.

29TH IN MANEUVER HIKES 23 MILES

Deeming themselves past masters at old-timer, "I'd rather run from Indians, the game of taking the field upon short any day." notice, the Twenty-ninth Infantry, dem-onstration regiment of The Infantry School, felt almost insulted by having several days' notice that the regiment would take the field for Regimental Maneuvers, on February 17 and 18.

But just the same all were totally unprepared, and very much taken by sur-prise by what happened to them in the "campaign of February 17-18, 1931."

The campaign began prosaically enough. The Reds and Blues were at war, as usual, and the Reds were rep-resented by the First Battalion, while the Blues were represented by the Sec-ond Battalion. They always are! Even the weather was its usual weepy self, and all were prepared for a nice, cold, damp night.

At 7:30 a. m., the Second Battalion, At 7:30 a. m., the Second Battalion, with one platoon, Regimental Machine Gun Company, one platoon, Cannon Company, and battery of field artillery attached, began its march out the First Division Road to an assembly position at No. 93, B. M. 305 on the Yankee Road. This Blue battalion had been defeated in Alabama the day before by superior red forces and had retreated under cover of darkness across the Chattahoochee at Bradley's Landing during the night.

At 8:30 a. m., the First Battalion, with attached troops, began its march out the First Division Road, and just as it reached Davis Hill, it encountered a Blue delaying force, which the Reds managed to brush out of the way, continuing their mission "to pursue the enemy releatlessly and destroy him before he can escape across the Upatoi at Mc-Bride's Ford."

With the Reds and Blues now marching on divergent roads, and in no dan-ger of bumping into each other, it was now the Air Corps' turn to have a little fun with them.

Three attack planes belonging to the recently formed Infantry School air force attacked each column indiscriminately in turn, harrassing the demonstra-tionists until their tongues hung out. At the first warning that enemy planes were about to zoom down on them, all riflemen would scatter right and left on each side of the road, while the ma-chine gunners would go into a ction against the air raiders. Following the brief action, the battalion would assemble on the road again and continue the march, only to have the air raiders back on their necks in a short while. "Bradon their necks in a short while. "Brad-dock's retreat was a cinch," said one

Total. Taking up a position in the vicinity of Sweet Home Church, the Reds com-pletely blocked the Blues. The shades of night were drawing nigh, when the forces gained contact. Imbued with the impetuous Infantry doctrine that they could always advance one more step and for one more shot there was no bolding fire one more shot, there was no holding back the frenzied fighters. In fact, there were so many "dog fights" started by individuals on outpost, that the um-pires were compelled time and again to prices were compelled time and again to go out into "no man's land" and un-scramble the high contracting parties. Toward midnight, the Reds silently folded their tents (?) and stealthily withdrew to the north. Their withdraw-al, however, was detected by the alert Physic sectors of outport duty and the Blue sentries on outpost duty and the Blues again began their pursuit. Contact was again gained in the vicin-ity of Holliday Hill about four a. m. At daybreak, the Blues again attacked the Reds, who were fighting a delaying action. Another surprise, even for the commander of the Reds, was the unannounced attachment of a platoon of light tanks to his command about 3:30 a.m. The tanks were used successfully in a counter-attack, which succeeded in de-laying the Blues.

Detaching a company, the Blue commander ordered this company to make a wide encircling movement across country to the Ohio Road to a position on Ebbert Hill, completely blocking the retreat of the Red rear guard.

At this point the war was ended by an armistice, and all headed for home, and a few hours of rest and sleep. From which it can be gathered that in less than 24 hours, one battalion, the Second, had marched more than twentythree miles, and had participated in three engagements, while the other, the First, had marched more than nineteen miles, and had also participated in three en-gagements. There was no rest and there was no sleep!

LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY. 3d

Dear Eddie:

I can see right now that this is going to be a hard letter to write. Josephine Bonapart Hennesy arrived home today, and as a consequence things are some what in an uproar. Anyhow here goes. What have we been doing? Not much, most of it has been done to us. We have had lectures, it seems, on almost every-thing except the early development of Sanskrit, that may come later in the course. Chief among the lecturers has been Maj. Arnold, with interesting dis-courses on Field Artillery. Give Maj. Arnold a box of chalk and after an hour lecture there will be chalk all over the blackboard, all over the floor, all over the first three rows of students, and all over the Major himself. Maj. Arnold's motto appears to be, one lecture —one box of chalk. There is one little point, though, it is quite all right to use a box of chalk, but when the Major scrapes his fingers across the board you can see every head of hair in the room stand on end. The first three or four times, it is not so bad but at the end of an hour, I personally feel as if 1 had been nicely sandpapered all over.

We also saw a demonstration by the crack artillery battalion on the post, the famous 88d Field. Sure look swank with their red saddle cloths. By the time all artillery units have them we will have a war, and won't the artillery make nice I. A. P.'s? The best horses in the army are in this outfit according to Maj. Arnold. We conceded that without any question. But when he said that the horses on one of the C. P. wagons were white, it caused quite a little comment. The "horsey" group most emphatically told us that there were no white horses on the post. Better get more coordina-tion between the different branches of experts. It was a very fine demonstra-tion. There was only one michan tion. There was only one mishap. A machine gun mounted for anti-aircraft protection, toppled off the limber rounding a turn. Later one battery went into action, and fired on a simulated target. Then we went and looked over the guns. Following Col. Marshall's questioning everyone counted the number of rounds of ammunition carried. Let me see, 35, no 37, let's see now—Oh, well, as Maj. Arnold told us in class, "It's all in the book.'

Maj. Rhett concluded his course in Training Inspections and Standards with a visit to the 29th Infantry. The classes were met outside the barracks by Col. Major, the Regimental Commander, and told to come over at any time, that the Regiment was at the service of the school at all times. Brother Gilmartin was observed in rapt attention at this remark as were some of the other officers, who are very anxious to serve with the 29th Foot, Baker, Pierce, Hulett, Harmony, Isaacs. Don't be bashful, boys, if you want something go right after it. The inspection of the barracks provided many officers with the opportunity of stating audibly, "Why back in the ump ty-umpth we couldn't have gotten away with anything like that," and "of course, in a regiment like this you have such _" or "Say, I big company funds thatthought this was an infantry outfit, but from all the brass it looks more like the navy." By far, the most interesting ex-hibit which the members of the class, tal Hq. which showed the area in which the class was to undergo its test in machine gun combat practice. Unfortun ately, the examination was rained out. but many thanks just the same, Maj. Rhett, for the advance information.

On Tuesday afternoon, we had our final examination (wt. 5) in Training Programs and Schedules. It turned out be a kind of glorified cross-word zle, only instead of a four-letter to puzzle, word meaning "swizzlebaum," you were constantly on the lookout for a place to put a 2-hour period in field fortifications. Some wound up the schedule 2 over and some were two hours Now that is easy. I came out hours short. three hours short and not a three-hour period showing on the schedule. I'll ad-mit that all you needed to know was addition and subtraction, but by 4:30 p. m. I could get 5 different answers to any one column of figures. A few of the "red apple" boys tried to put over a fast one when they got extra copies of the problem and made nice neat smudgeless copies. If I had not been so busy smudging up my copy, I'd give you their names. When I left, "Smilling" Eddie Walsh was still trying to find a lost wash was still trying to hind a lost hygiene lecture or something. After a talk with the Monitor, he eventually gave up in disgust and started on a new one. To Comrade Pickhardt goes the prize for the best question asked the Monitor. Leaning confidentially over the desk, he asked, "Does this program contemplate actual firing of the marksmanship course, and the combat prob-lems?" "Nothing but low explosives, my lad," was the answer.

We are still undergoing the prelimi-naries in the course of tactics. This consists of a barrage of lectures on tactics of the defense, the attack, the staff and the commander. About all that I have gotten out of the lectures so far is that the idea of tactics inspires much more fear than any of the lectures to date seem to warrant giving the tures to date seem to warrant giving the subject. However, this is said before we have even started to think about writs. Professor McCunniff delivered the second of his series of lectures on Tuesday. Evidently, the Major has been listening to Floyd Gibbons over the radio, for once he was well under way in his description of an attack against defensive position, his words poured out over the class with all the zip and snap of a machine gun barrage. When he got to the point where three staff offi-cers were killed, the class, quite carried away on the flood of oratory, burst into cheers. This, in spite of Maj. Jenkins' attempt to tell the class that staff offi-cers were supposed to help the troops as well as the commander. I guess that's one of those high ideals that you read one of those high ideals that you read about in the highbrow magazines. Maj. Jenkins certainly did ask some most embarrassing questions during his lec-ture. I still believe however that it would be a good thing to have a "Field Officers' Staff Manual."

They are going rather deeply into the defense at present. It is based on the same old factors that we have always used, the situation and the terrain. The defense should be mobile, it should be elastic, they say. Believe me, it sure has got to be all of that and then some, with a battalion covering 1600 yards. It appears at present that a good way to overcome some of the commander s difficulties might be to mount the troops on motorcycles. If it is to be mobile,] insist that there be no half-way measures, make it really mobile, and give the staff some real problems in distances and time to go goofy over. If this is not practicable, perhaps in highly stabi-lized situations it might be excellent to install moving roadways, somewhat on the order of escalators. And think what an army that you could have if every man was equipped with a regulation St. of the Bernard dog! We are also beginning to work with Course.

We are becoming the least bit pessi-mistic about this army since the recent maneuver in which certain troops of the maneuver in which certain troops of the Twenty-ninth Infantry were turned over to our tender mercies. When last we served with troops their sotto voce remarks on such an occasion were far superior in conception and vitriolic content to those which reached our ears (quite without the intention of the speakers, of course) last week.

It was too bad that those linguistically ambitious boys couldn't have been in hearing distance of this serious-minded and dignified class on the following afternoon, when, for a blissful period of optional physical exercise there was substituted one of Stonewall Jackson's

"Don't hop on me," snapped Stone-wall, to one of the captious; "I'm just as sore as you are." "If that's the case," was the answer,

"I'm going to take distance, because you're bigger, too."

x x xIt is rumored that Communist agents in the class, unsuccessful heretofore, are making considerable progress in their recruiting work since that sudden and unexplained change in the schedule.

 $\mathbf{x} \mathbf{x} \mathbf{x}$ Andrews went through one of the recent exercises in complete disguise. In addition to carrying the temporary title and duties of a lieutenant colonel of infantry, he was wearing Cochran's over-coat and Tom Knight's cap. Cochran caught up with him during the problem and identified the overcoat, but, instead of recovering it, made Andrews continue to wear it, as it was a warm day.

x x xThe rumor about that first estimate of the situation problem turned out to be correct. It was thrown out, much to the discomfiture of the proud few who happened to hit it. Those who took com-fort from it, however, needed more and better comfort when Colonel Stilwell got through with his remarks about the solutions.

x x x Anyway, the class can console itself with the thought that it actually did de-feat that "weak infantry regiment" that it attacked so energetically. We even received from Ferris last week a clue were mentioned so frequently in one of the Ferris problems. Then, too, Frank Curtis suggests that there may be a moral factor involved, as it could count on support only from the Red light ar-tillery, "and I am sure," remarks Curtillery, "and I am sure, remain tillery, "that such artillery must be morally, decidedly inferior." x x

We do love consistency. All instruc-tors of all sections join in telling us that the use of forces "piecemeal" is never forgiveable—and the approved solution of a marked problem immediately calls for just that action. Then Joe Collins tells us that machine guns in the de-fense are "always dimeand in durity fense are "always disposed in deptn-and the next day Gilchrist gives us a marked terrain exercise in which the machine guns in the defense are all in the front line—in the approved solution only. Maybe, the reason the marked problems present the exceptional situa-tion is in order that we may solve our feelings with the thought that, if the situation hadn't been abnormal we'd have hit it.

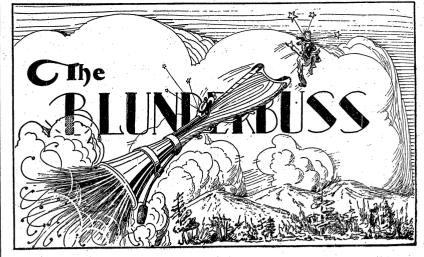

x x x The agony of waiting for bulletins from the bedside of our oral mono-graphs was ended on Monday. It is now supplanted, for some of us, at least, by the thought of what the bulletin contained.

After five month's intensive study in the most advanced regular course given by the world's greatest infantry schoo, Artilleryman Bevan demonstrated for us

Artifieryman Bevan demonstrated for us last week the extent to which he has mastered the subject. "Who commands the headquarters company?" he was asked. He thought deeply and then replied, carefully but confidently: "The summerder."

"The company commander."

After St. John's dry run on the sub-ject of poison gas, the Reeking Pipe brigade, including in its number Bag-nall, Bulger, Curtis and Rich, concluded that pragmatic mastery of the subject gave them no advantage theoretically.

the scene about its little corner of the Book Shop would constitute a very fair imitation of a French revolution mob raiding the bread shops of Paris. In this instance, however, it was not bread but bargains that started the riot. The news that there were spring dresses, hats, stockings and lingerie to be had started at the meat counter of the Post Exchange at 8:10 A. M.—Monday, and by nine o'clock, every woman on the post knew about it and was either on hand or on her way. That there were no cas-ualties incident to the rush is nothing short of remarkable. What interests the Blunderbuss is how the newly installed modern sales recording system stands the strain. There was a time, not so long ago, when each separate article sold resulted in four sale slips—one for the Exchange record, one for the Book Shop, one for the party supplying the article, and one for the customer. Thus a customer purchasing a dozen rolls, a pound of fruit cake, and a lace handkerchief would initiate a paper transaction involving twelve sale slips and twenty minutes of acute agony on the part of the intellgient, willing, but inexperienced volunteer clerk who had to manipulate a quadruplicating pad with its multifarious sheets of carbon paper.

clerk who had to manipulate a quadruplicating pad with its multifarious sheets of carbon paper. We are convinced that the old system would never have stood the test of a bargain day rush. We are uncertain, however, as to whom should go the glory for putting into effect the greatly simplified system now in vogue. We are informed that Colonel Marshall had a hand in it but we reject this. We cheerfully acknowledge Colonel Marshall's ability to run a first class war, but we doubt if he could run a Woman's Exchange. Be that as it may, however, the Woman's Exchange has greatly im-proved its sales technique and Mrs. Starnes is to be congratulated upon the steady growth and development of the flourishing enterprise which she started.

Geographical Society Activities

Lieut. Lowry of the 29th has been recommended for admission to the Exalted Order of Explorers, with the rating of Explorer First Class, and Lieut. Curtis likewise of the 29th Foot, is a candidate for honors as Explorer Second Class.

Thus the 29th maneuvers, in addition to furthering the military train-ing of the regiment, are rapidly increasing the membership of Benning's once exclusive organization. It seems that Lieut. Lowry scouting around at night near Kisseck's pond concluded that he had located the command post of the "enemy" which was to the north of Lt. Lowry's forces. Returning to his own forces, he demanded troops for the purpose of executing a coup de grab and cap-

so eloquently did he speak, that he was entrusted with a company, commanded by Lieut. Curtis, which he was to guide in the night march. He was Church, and the plan was to move in the dark to the narrow gauge railroad, the dark to the narrow gauge railroad, there turn to the right and follow it. Lieut. Lowry, filled with enthusiasm, did the guiding; the railroad was reached, and the company moved silently and stealthily along it. After what seemed about an hour, Lieut. Curtis, peering about himself in the dark, asserted himself.

"Say, you are heading for Florida; that's the logging camp there. I'm taking charge of this guiding now."

By the simple expedient of turning left on reaching the railroad insteat of light, Lieut. Lowry had achieved a possible, a 180 degree loss of direct on.

Lieut. Curtis, who then took charge, fare I somewhat better. He set out to accomplish the mission and after anothe: hour with a few encircling movements had at any rate gotten closer to Hisseck's pond than the logging camp. When found, he was 200 yards camp. When found, he was 200 yards from the point at which the expedition had set out.

So the next result was that the company returned with two qualified explore s, but without the enemy com-mander and likewise without supper.

First Grade

Of course we had a Valentine box Friday and lots of fun. On Abraham Lincoln's birthday we drew a log cabin, and it recalled the little boy last year who made a log house and asked the teacher to please put Maj. Ham Lin-coln's" name on it. We are doing our arithmetic exercises in two minutes now and hope it will not be long before every one will finish theirs and make perfect scores. Bobby Steele brought us a tiny plant, and we are going to water it and watch it grow.

Second Grade

The following people have made a star in spelling all this week: Billy Bartlett, Dorothy Ann Raymond, Ed-ward Brittain, Jacqueline Brimmer.

We have a pretty bowl of goldfish and we are very proud of them. Kathleen Cushman, Elizabeth Cushman, Jack Murphy and Irene Seely have been ab-sent all this week. We hope they will come back soon. We have a Valentine box and we are excited to see how many we get. Happy Valentine to you!

At school I learn to read and write And all my lessons to recite, But in the pool I swim and wade And even dive, I'm not afraid.

Fourth Grade

We are very sorry to know that Billy Hildreth had such a serious accident Thursday afternoon and we hope he will soon recover. We have had a good at-tendance this week and next week we hope no one will have to be absent.

Richard Johnson has entered our grade. We are looking forward to hav-ing our Valentine box this afternoon. To us St. Valentine's Day is one of the best days of the year.

Fifth Grade

During the past week two fifth grade pupils, Eva Culpepper and Betty Busch, have moved away.

The B Section of the fifth grade had a most interesting time making maps or the New England States out of salt and flour Thursday. Several pupils have been out on ac-count of sickness. They are improving and we hope they will be with us next and we hope they will be with us next week. Sixth Grade We are having a swell time getting ready for our play (The Stolen Prince). We all seem to be satisfied with our parts. We like to watch our arithmetic work book score climb. Maybe some day we might make a score of ten, which means 100 and that is mighty hard to get in these books. Our Valentine box was lots of fun, and another thing, be-lieve it or not, we were able to eat

We have several uniforms and portions of uniforms that we will sell at reductions of from ten percent (10%) to fifty percent off of the regular prices. Included in this lot are many woolens and some khakis. An Officer who can get a fit in any of these garments can get a real bargain.

You should have been with us Friday, Valentine Day! In the morning we did-n't have such a good time but the party in the afternoon was great. Everybody was laughing and enjoying their Valen-tines when Miss Wells passed around the candy. It was fun to eat in school. After school most everyone went to see the matinee "Tom Sawyer."

Speaking of plays, we hope some day we may be able to put on a play like the Sixth Grade. We know theirs will be good. We have missed Bill Starnes all week and of the best times to come back, he picked it in the afternoon of our Valentine Party.

The Sixth and Seventh Grades have appointed a committee to act with Mrs. Reed, our room mother to decide what to buy with the $2.00 we won at the Parent-Teachers' Association.

caused by germs. These germs are in the nose or throat of most people. When you have a cold or bronchitis these germs are more dangerous to other persons.

Pneumonia is spread by coughing, sneezing, spitting, or handling articles that have been soiled by the discharges from the nose and throat.

Pneumonia germs live a long time in the dark on furniture, clothing, rugs, dust, etc., and may cause the disease if they reach the nose or mouth.

Pneumonia sometimes follows measles, whooping cough, influenza, dust or chem-ical fumes, severe injuries and operaical tumes, severe injuries and opera-tions. Overwork, loss of sleep, lack of exercise, excessive smoking, exposure, sudden changes in the ways of living, breathing bad air are important factors to make a person more likely to con-tract disease. Pneumonia comes when a person is run down. It often follows a neglected cold.

This is the pneumonia season. Pneu- had been given to the disease when it monia is an inflammation of the lungs, first started. The neglected cold is a very common beginning for a fatal pneumonia. The prevention of many cases of pneumonia therefore depends on the proper care and treatment of a common cold.

It is estimated that at least 25 percent of our pneumonia cases could be prevented if the victim of a common cold would at its very start go to bed and take treatment under the advice of the doctor.

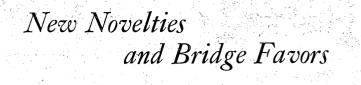

Pneumonia usually starts with a chill, and perhaps pain in the chest and is followed in a few hours by bloody spit. Any of these symptoms call for im-mediate going to bed and the calling of the doctor. Do not neglect a cold; Keep fit. Pro-forget and arrive at eight o'clock and find that the game is over. A glance over the past basketball sea-son will show that the Musketeers romp-ed through the first half of their sched-ule to drop only two games out of a possible fourteen. During the final half the team has been found on the short end of the majority of the score sheets. During the first of the season the work of Roosma, Kammener, Draper, McAllister, Strickler and Isham was the backbone of the Musketeer drive. Roosma and Kammerer are both bril-liant floor men and their basket shoot-ing is extremely accurate. In fact, either of this pair seldom fail when the shot is at close quarters, not to mention their ability to loop the hoop from long range. Working with this pair of stars, McAllister and D raper worked smoothy and actually rivalled worked smoothly and actually rivalled them in shooting. Realizing that a team would have to be developed for next season when both Roosma and Kammerer would be absent, the final half of the season has been spent developing young material and whipping a team into shape to build a Musketeer machine for next season. The results of our last games have been losses due to the inability of the team to shoot. Their passing and dribbling has carried them through their oppon-ents' defense into scoring position but Phil Draper is the only player th at could really hit the loop. No doubt by next season the shooting of the Muske-teers will be perfected and then with their team work, passing and dribbling sent, the final half of the season has been their team work, passing and dribbling they will be a powerful cage com-bination.

POLICEMEN TAKE EXTRA PERIOD GAME FROM SALEM

The Military Policemen basketeers continued their winning streak against outside opponents during the past week with a hard fought 26 to 24 victory over the Salem cagesters at Salem, Ala., last Thursday night.

The game went into an extra five minthe period as the teams were deadlocked 24 to 24 at the end of the game. Boud-reaux tossed in the winning goal just ten seconds before the end of the extra period.

Score: Salem: Eckles, f, 5; Chadwick, g, 2; Trotter, c, 11; Maye, g, 1; Pea-cock, g, 5. Military Police: Boudreaux, f,8; Brooks, f, 8; Bonds, c, 4; Bean c and g, 1; Holden, g; Harguer, g,3; Wil-cox g cox, g.

NORWOOD LEGIONNAIRES SWAMP MUSKETEERS 50 TO 33

Breaking through the Musketeer defense with monotonous regularity the Norwood Legionnaires of Cincinnatti, coasted to an easy victory over the Fort Benning Musketeers last Saturday night

Benning Musketeers last Saturday night at the garrison gymnasium. The Musketeers played a fine game of passing and dribbling but just could not find the basket. If their shooting had been as good as their ability to pass and dribble into scoring position they would have given the visitors a tough battle. Phil Draper finally found his eye in the final half and rang up thirteen points. Kjelstrom was second high point man for the Musketeers with a total of 7. The Legionnaires boasted a pair of Cyclone Smith, pride of the army battlers, is fast rounding into shape again after a long lay off with a broken hand. The "Cyclone" is back on the hand. The "Cyclone" is back on the big bag at the gymnasium each after-noon and he is throwing his punches with the power of a pile driver. He eased over to Atlanta last Tuesday night and watched Max Schmelling do his stuff. The "Cyclone" also issued a challenge to all light heavies, after be-ing introduced from the ring.

"Corn" Griffin, stablemate and rival of the "Cyclone," is also rounding back into shape after taking the count from an attack of "flu," that kept him in the hospital for a couple of weeks. This hospital for a couple of weeks. This part of the army is looking forward to a Smith-Griffin battle in the first outdoor show of the season.

It is with regret that we announce that Willie Ptomey will never fight again. Ptomey was injured several weeks ago when a team of horses ran away with him. The muscles of his right leg were badly torn and although Ptomey will probably be okay for duty in another month, it is not likely that he will ever be able to take part in active ring duty. The passing of Ptomey from the ring is the loss of one of the most colorful fighters the army ever produced. His record shows a list of three hundred and record shows a list of three hundred and twenty ring battles. During this time he fought the best boys in the game. Four of his fights were top bouts in Madison Square Garden. He had twen-ty-seven top bouts in New York City. In 1927, he won the All-Service middle-weight championship in the All-Service Tournament held at the Sesqui-Centen-nial in Philadelphia.

When questioned about the matter Ptomey said, "Well I just kind of took a notion that I wanted to get back to the old bunch so I caught a train." And the old bunch so I caught a train." And that has been Willie all the way. His love for the army and the old bunch of "buddies," probably kept him from being one of the big shots of the prize ring. But "Weary Willie" has certainly given the army fight fans many a mo-ment's thrill and joy. No matter if he never dons another glove, he will live long in the memory of the fight fans as one of the gamest, "fightenest" boxers the Army ever produced.

BENNING MATMEN TO GIVE EXHIBITION TUESDAY NIGHT

Fort Benning fight fans will probably get a change of menu next Tuesday night. Instead of the regular fight show, the Fort Benning matmen are going to give fans an exhibition in the art of wrestling. So interested have fans been in boxing that they have almost forgot-ten that Fort Benning also boasts a wrestling team composed of mat artists that know the game. There is no doubt that at the present time the Fort Benning team is one of the strongest amateur teams in the south. They have been entered in the wrestling tournament in Atlanta, on Feb. 29th and are favorites.

Tuesday night's matches will probably bring out the pick of Fort Benning and Columbus wrestlers.

One of the features will be the match between "Foots" Cutere, 220-pound Ar-tilleryman, and "Big Boy" Jones, of Cohave met twice previously with Cutere winning the first bout and the second match ending in a draw. There will be no admission charges for 14

Tuesday night's show. The following men will compose the team that will represent Fort Benning 56 in the Atlanta tournament: Cuterer, wt. 220; Bannatta, wt. 160, Krewson, wt. 60 150; Jones, coach, wt. 140; Overby, wt. 130; McLendon, wt. 126.

Madam (to Chinese man-servant): "After this, when you enter my bed room, please knock; I might be un-dressing."

Chinaman: "Me no need knock. Al-lays look in keyhole first."—(Washington 4 Dirge).

Hq. Co., 1st Bn. Attention, all of you Infantry School News readers, this is 1st Bn. Headquarters Co. "sounding off" again; I am in practically the same predicament that I was in last week, (lack something to write about) but nevertheless here goes with all of the current events: Pvt. Archie D. Alton has returned from his home in S. C. on emergency furlough and, of course, we are all glad to see him back in the "fold" once more.

Our little troupe of hunters went Our little troupe of hunters went "gaming" again the other day and from what I hear their luck was fine. The "troupe" consisted of the "Top," Cpl. Savage, Pfc. Lee O. Beard, and Pvt. L. L. Spurr, the luck being all in the favor of Cpl. Savage and Pvt. Spurr. 1 think that the "Top" is losing his expert shooting eye. From the details I gather that A. Groves missed several fine shots that A. Groves, missed several fine shots at rabbits from an excellent range. But nevertheless, they bagged four of the furry creatures. Honors were divided equally between Robert Savage and equally between Robert Savage and Leonard Spurr. Two and Two. But enough about hunting for the time being. Our Post Radio School is now in full Leading army surgeons are baffled in the cases of Privates who simply can't go through with infantry drill because their feet are killing them. If allowed to go outside the Post, these cases snow marked improvement and the patients are able to pursue and overtake the first blonde that happens by. It has been estimated that if Sergeants were dance hall girls, the Company "B" Friday, the thirteenth, unlucky? Why, you're foolish. Weren't we all praying for rain or something to turn up Friday afternoon and sure enough it did? Well, I call that pretty lucky. Well, well, a couple more guys got hungry and decided it was time to hunt up the old Mess Hall again. Brookshire and Blackston arrived Sunday, and I believe they arrived in time for dinner Well, times are hard and a fellow can't keep hitting the soup lines consistently, 'cause they soon get hep to you and cut your rations short.

Believe me. we are going to have a real track team this year. We have plenty of good material to pick from, if we can only get them to come out every day they possibly can, and for a coach, we have the best in the post, I believe. None other than Lieut. Baughman, and believe me, he knows his track. How about it fellows? Dig in, you runners, we're all behind you. Pvt. Carlo Palia, confessed that he always longed to be a spaghetti bender, and he never has been able to find out and he never has been able to find out out just why he gave himself to Uncle Sam for three yars. Pvts. Guillory, Bel-gard, Henson, Hinton and perhaps many more, also confessed that, they should have stayed with old Beck, and let her lead them around instead of coming to Dist. Burning to be the N.C. O's lead Fort Benning to let the N. C. O.'s lead them over these hills on the reservation. Oh, yes, one more: W. C. honest, loyal and faithful service: Private Gause to Private, first class. Private, first class Hawkins to specialist 6th class.

Private, first class W. E. Joiner, to specialist 6th class.

Private, first class Shackelford has been made one of the 2nd cooks in the company and rated specialist 5th class

They can all talk about our friend Private first class Tidmore being slow but he is lightning when he hits the bayonet court for he qualified 100 percent in 43 seconds.

Private Campbell, E. A., transferred to Co. E from Co. B. We are glad to have you Campbell. Private, first class J. A. Borders has reenlisted for Company E.

The following named enlistel men have been assigned to Co. E. Their former service was in Panama. They are Privates O'Kelly, Kelly and Williams, S. A.

The following named enlisted men will be discharged during the week and we hope will reenlist for the Company. They are: Wright, Theodore, Stanley, Derrell and Powers, H. I.

About fifteen men out of the company have commenced training for the battalion track meet which comes off in the next week. Co. E had a man, Corporal Duke Marquis, who won the individual trophy in the post meet last year. We are expecting him to do as well this year.

We have two good men training for the five mile race on March 1 and we hope to win. They are Corp. Dutton and Pvt. Bender. Pvt. 1cl. H. T. Freeman went hunting last Saturday and had a bad day. He finally ran across a wild turkey sitting on the river bank behind a small bush. He said he thought it was a tame one at first but finally decided he would take a shot at the turkey and got down on his knees and started to draw the bead, just then 6 turkeys walked across the road near him and it paralyzed him so he just stopped and looked at them.

Company "F"

Practically every man in the company who has had bayonet training ran the course this week. Four-fifths of them qualified, now if the rest of the company can do as well as this first bunch, we'll be right up there on top for the white ribbon this month.

This organization ran off with first honors during the month of January and was presented with the White Pennant at a Retreat Parade two weeks ago. Watch this company for we have a way watch time company for we have a Way of coming out on top in spite of what the rest of the companies do to try and beat us out of it. If they work hard, we work harder and from the look of things they will have to get up reat early to put anything over on us.

Two new track stars have been discovered in this organization. The other day while taking names of men who wished to enter the Battalion Track and Field Meet, Shorty Wilkinson and Pop Stokely applied for a berth on the 220yard dash team and for the 5-mile marathon . We are just wondering whether Shorty Wilkinson would like to enter the 120-yard high hurdles. We think he could win it if they invented flying wings for men before the meet. This scribe approached Pvt. Hambone Stroud the other day and asked him if he had ever participated in a track and field meet. Hambone said he had, that he was a policeman on the relay team. "And may I ask what a policeman doe; on a relay team?" "Why," said Ham-bone, "he chases the rest of them in."

Happy Hines, our well known little hoxer has decided to retire from the "Why the boys around here are not good enough for me, I can block any of their punches." (Yes, with his chin.) Strolling into the canteen the other day in a sort of nonchalant way I noticed that they were doing an immense business in playing cards. It being only business in playing cards. Small Bore Matches

The 24th Infantry won the small bore matches of last week against the 12th and 13th Infantry teams. The match against the 11th Infantry was lost by a narrow margin, and the results of the 25th Infantry match have not yet been received.

The 11th Infantry defeated the 24th by one point only, the scores being 3683 and 3682.

The scores in the 13th Infantry match vere 3502 and 3682. This was a slow and rapid fire match. This week the 24th Infantry will fire matches against the 16th, 38th and 30th Infantry teams, using a ten-man team, and firing slow and rapid fire.

Basketball

The 24th Infantry basketball team will play the Columbus High School a tournament game Saturday at the post gyni-nasium. The tournament games thus far, hav been played at the Army Y. M. C. A. in Columbus. The game at the gymnasium Saturday, will give the regimental fans a chance to see their team work. The Happy Heart team has won six games in the tournament, and lost none.

A regimental smoker was held at the service club Thursday afternoon, at which the Volleyball trophy was presented to Company G, the winning team.

Rapid progress continues in the contruction work at the swimming pool. The east wall of the pool is nearly com-plete. Last Friday, (the 13th), turned out to be a Jonah for concrete work. A heavy rain started after concrete work was well under way, and the soft-ened ground allowed the form braces to spread on part of the wall work. This resulted in a large batch of concrete going to waste. The lost work was quickly caught up the following day however.

Golf Tournament

Another Officers' Golf Tournament was played over last week-end by the regimental officers. The affair was a "blind-bogey" in which each player chose his own handicap, but had to have his score come between certain limits in order to be eligible for the prizes. Captain Fry won first prize.

Area Pennant

The 24th Infantry Area Competition Pennant has been replaced with a new and handsomer banner on which the words "Area Competition, won by Com-pany "—" are embroidered. The new pennant has been turned over to Company G, the present holder, and now flies triumphantly at the head of the company street.

Officers of the 24th Infantry have their monthly Community Chest dance tonight at the Polo Club.

The 24th Infantry Ladies' Bridge Club met Thursday afternoon at the Officers Mess building. Mrs. Ives was hostess.

Children's School

Several entertainments are being carried out for the benefit of the 24th In-fantry children's school. Last week, an entertainment was given by the schoor children's orchestra, at the service club. Another entertainment is planned tor the near future, in which the orchestra, glee club, quartette, and several comedy acts are on the program. "Heaven Bound" also will appear again for this cause.

Headquarters Battery We take this opportunity to thank the Tank Reg't for sending us one of their best football players—Nobody else but the famed Anthony himself—the crack center of the "Tankers" for the last few wars when emperative this years much years. We appreciate this very much "Tankers."

We would also like to mention that our Liaison Section was very highly complimented for their fine work in the "Review" held a short time ago. Our File Clerk at Headquarters has returned from his winter vacation in returned from his winter vacation in Sunny Florida and seems to be very glad to be back. The orange diet that he was on while vacationing in the South was fine and all that but it is noticed that he does his share at the old "Slum Table" which may mean nothing at all, but you can never tell.

Personnel Section Our Personnel Chief is now a 2nd Lt. in the Field Artillery Reserve. Congratulations!

The Personnel Section would be lost if it was not for a certain efficiency ex-pert in the Battalion making corrections for us (charges made out wrong, names misspelled and a few other errors). A certain First sergeant in the bat-talion should learn how to sign the ray Roll right in case he wants to give some Recruit extra duty for not signing it as he should.

A certain Battery Clerk in this Head quarters who seems to have his ups and downs one way or the other had better stay out of town and sleep some as he has to pry his eyes open to keep from going to sleep. Look out, Tatum, it will get the best of you. One of our new Battery clerks seems to have his troubles as he is looking over all the old retained copies of men who deserted the service. What seems to be the trouble, Boettcher, have you a man who deserted you here lately?

"You can fool some of the people all of the time, and you can fool all of the of the time, and you can fool all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all the time!" Nothing brings this fact home more forcibly than a little incident that, hap-pened in this Battery the other day. Now Sergeant Arthur S. Sweger has had us all fooled for the past few years regarding certain facts. The fact of the whole matter is that we all thought he would never fall victim to cupid's mystic would never fall victim to cupid's mystic dart, but list while we narrate on this certain incident.

Sweger was Charge of Quarters, and a few members of the "Open Eye Detec-tive Agency" were present when the mail arrived. The Sergeant was handed a letter, that somehow looked suspicious, but he opened it with all the confidence in the world. He was heard to mutter, as he observed the contents of the envelope, "Well I'll be a so-and-so." It was then that we all observed that the old seasoned hunter and follower of the hounds had received the daintiest of dainty valentines. Wonder who the lucky one is, Sergeant!!

The Open Eye Detective Agency has been assigned the problem of finding what made Corp. "Squirrel" McCallum have to fix his saddle the other day when the command was given to gallop without the stirrups.

There comes to us, through the Grape vine Telegraph, a morsel of news that sets our wits on end. It seems by this dispatch, that two of our number at least are going into the minors this year

The Cub told us that "Rat' Walters February 20, 1931 and "Hoolihan" Holloway have received training schedule).

Lay-deez and gen'lmen, in this corner we have Ole Rusty Bore, champion Lay-deez and gen imen, in this corner we have Ole Rusty Bore, champion heavyweight bull-slinger of the army, unprincipled prevaricator and ex-literary convict, thrice convicted of cold blooded murder of his mother tongue. His opponent has not yet appeared, but we can assure you that after the first two or three rounds of shadow boxing he will have opponents galore. ...Sufficient it is to say that he is blessed with an entire lack of conscience, no principles whatever and a thick skin. It is an open challenge—use anything but the axe. The Editor The Editor.

Weep, Friends, Truth Is No More

While the savants of the world pursuc their musty way, seeking after Truth, let us, having been privileged to listen to the co-conductors of the Blunderbuss, the the erudite observations of him who pens the "Brief Case" and to the mental peregrinations of that proud father, B. Hennesy 3d, admit without reservation that Truth is dead. No long-er shall we confine ourselves to the chaf-ing restrictions of a long outworn coning restrictions of a long outworn con-Ing restrictions of a long outworn con-science; let us rather join in the fratri-cidal fray, adding to the litter of com-missioned reputations, ruined by the press, that strew the journalistic byways of Benning, those of such enlisted men as may fall within our clutches!

All of which preamble means that Ol' Rusty Bore craves gossip—any and all sorts, so long as it is calculated to make the victim squirm when given due prom-inence in this column. Dig up those long dormant grievances—here's your chance to get even! Address all dope to the Infantry School News, "Sez You" Column Let's go!

Old Man Jinx Takes A Holiday

Ever since Eve ate the thirteenth apple, thereby getting acute indigestion and the bum's rush, along with Adam, out of the Garden of Eden, we transients in this vale of tears have looked askance at that unfortunate numeral, classifying it with other well known jinxes such as three lights off a match, marrying two women simultaneously and having a cross-eyed company commander. But-the jinx is now obsolete; witness: On Friday, February 13th, Sergt. Walter Reynolds with a detail of thir-teen truck drivers, journeyed to Fort Mc-Pherson (thirteen letters there!) and re-turned with a fleet of thirteen GMC trucks and-believe it or not !- they suffered not a single mishap, not even a blowout!

And, while we're on the subject, there is Master Sgt. McNulty of the I. S. D., who, for some reason or other, has ac-their contracts to get into the "Dirty Shirt" league this spring. It is reported that they will sign up with the White Laundry team for the year.

These two up and down players have not yet received their outright releases from Manager Tommie, and it may be that the whole thing will yet come up before Judge Kennesaw Mountain Lan-dis before the ruling is completely settled.

Rat and Hoolihan are both a couple of chips off the same baseball button, and it is thought that they will prove a valuable addition to the "Dirties." Joe S— is reported to be their legal advisor.

Battery "A"

Battery "A" Battery "A," better known as the Casualty Battery, is back on the normal grind, Lt. H. D. Baker having returned from Maxwell Field and resumed com-mand. Injury boards were on the zero column. Battery "A" will endeavor to help Hq. Btry. and CT., hold Post Review in the Battery Area Friday, February 20, 1931 (as per their weekly training schedule).

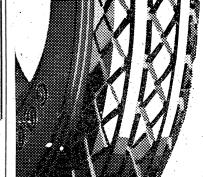

quired the reputation of being one of the luckiest men in the service, but: He first enlisted in the 13th Infantry on June 13th, 1913; he was assigned to squad No. 13 and given equipment No. 13; at the present time he is No. 13 on the I. S. D. payroll and the first two numerals of his equipment number are one and three; finally, he is in charge of machine gun No. 13. Beat that if you can!

Last but not least we have—Sergt. Al Durden, who is far from needing an introduction. Born on the 13th of March, he was christened "Al" on the 13th of April-that would seem to be enough grief, but listen: he had exactly thirteen cents when he joined the Army on the 13th of the month; has been married thirteen times, has thirteen children and thirteen friends who owe him a dollar each. Ask Al.

One Soldier—And Too Much Mule Kipling once remarked, appropos of women, "that you never can tell 'till you've tried 'em." Staff Sergeant Dodd of the 83rd F. A. has decided that the same remark would apply equally well to mules. Born amidst the sagebrush of Arizona, the Sergeant harbored the be-Arizona, the Sergeant harbored the be-

Arizona, the Sergeant harbored the be-lief that he could ride anything that had hair on it, from Pike's Peak to a Pickle, and including the Battalion Mascot, Bill the Goat. But — Last Sunday Sgt. Dodd visited a friend living on a farm up in Harris county and while there was given an introduction to Maude the Mule, and the tale that Maude was poison so far as being ridden was concerned. Sergeant being ridden was concerned: Sergeant Dodd didn't believe it, doffed his coat and grabbed a handful of mane. So far Maude exhibited no symptoms of trouble so the Sergeant seized his courage in the other hand and leaped astride of that hitherto placid back. Approximately three ond one-half seconds later he was midway in a combination nose dive and tail spin that set a new altitude and a new non-stop flight record for South-Western Georgia, followed by forced landing in a convenient brush heap. Aflanding in a convenient brush heap. Af-ter relieving himself of several assorted varieties of splinters and considerable profanity the Sergeant was treated to the spectacle of Maude going on with her meal without even deigning a back-ward glance at the vanquished Artillery-man. We presume that there is a moral to be derived from the story, but it eludes us eludes us.

Philosophy A La Mule And, while we are on the subject of mules, did it ever occur to you that you can hardly blame 'em for being irascible and bad tempered? With the possibility of no pride whatever in their parentage and no hope for postcriby there are hope and no hope for posterity, they are born to face a future that would breed a don't-care-a-whoop attitude in a far more cheerful being than the mule. If they are lucky they may draw a berth in the Army with a rank somewhere ap-proximating that of a student bugler; the less fortunate ones would seem to be shipped to Columbus to pull delivery wagons. All of which makes we lowly bucks view the shipwrecked pay bill with less regret—after all it is only due to the caprice of fate that we weren't born with lower ears with longer ears.

Company "G"

We had 1st Lt. Whitelaw assigned to the company last week and are sure glad to have the lieutenant with us.

Well, we have been getting plenty of exercise the last two weeks out at Nor-ton Court. We hope to get over strong this year.

We are glad to see old Dad Richard-son around the company again. Cpl. Culver was promoted to Sergeant and Pfc. Holland was also made a small officer. Fine work, Corporal. Pvt. Walinski is marked light duty.

Alex had a little hard luck. He has bone fever. Just take things easy. Bugler Hutson is taking suit case drill. It won't be long now. We are sorry to see you go old timer. Hutson is hard to beat as a bugler.

We have a new Ford. Johnnie Gould-man is the only man that drives it, and how. It's a dandy little car, so let's take good care of it.

GUNNERS WIN AT POLO, 8 TO 4 OVER CAVALRY; HERSCHEL BAKER HURT Freebooters Will Meet Invaders Sunday Afternoon At

Two O'clock

The 83d Field Artillery fired the opening salvo in the Benning-Oglethorpe Polo Tournament and registered an 8 to 4 victory against the Sixth Cavalry team, lead by the "Terrible Terry."

It was one of the flashiest battles ever staged on the local field and the large gallery of spectators cheered madly, the numerous sallies, boot to boot, as the players thundered up and down the field. Mallets were broken in every chukker, so hard was the hitting and playing by both teams. It was a great game in any polo tournament and the Cannoneers consisting of Herbert Baker at one, Herschel Baker at two, Bartlett at three and Grubbs at four deserve great praise for the greatlett bergenerghing and me for the excellent horsemanship and mallet-skill displayed.

The Sixth Cavaliers with Moore at one, Allen at two, Herren at three and Gibbs at four certainly treated the fans to some beautiful team play and stick-work and we can expect to see them redeem their defeat in the succeeding games.

1st Chukker

After the toss-in by General King to start the game, scrimmage took place with the Sixth Cavalry driving hard toward their goal. The Red-shirts fouled but the visitors were unable to score on the free-shot for goal. Bartlett saved and rushed the ball to a set-up which Herbert Baker wedged through the goal posts for the first counter of the game. The Cannoneers now took the offensive and slashed viciously down the field. Bartlett scored with a difficult underbelly stroke.

2d Chukker

The second chukker was nip and tuck and resulted in a stalemate, neither side scoring. The visitors were awarded a free-shot for goal on a penalty three foul by the red-shirts but missed. Mallets were broken in profusion during this period.

3d Chukker

Play started with a free-shot for goal on a penalty number three against the arullery. Capt. Herren drove the ball 60 yards for a counter, registering the visitors' first marker. Then they fol-lowed with a terrible rush from center throwin and parrowly missed coal by throw-in and narrowly missed goal by inches. The artillery now snatched the ball from scrimmage and raced toward their goal. Herbert Baker missed a difficult shot from dead territory. At the $6 \, 1-2 \, \text{minute}$ bell Herschel got the ball in mid-field and ran it to a set-up which was scored by his brother. The half ended with the score 6 to 1 in favor of the red-shirts.

The Cavalry spotted the Cannoneers 3 goals at the beginning of the game to even the handicap difference between the two teams.

New Red Ticket Alibi Wood Pussy is Blamed Johnson's Plea Fails

Purr . . rr . . put . . putt came an M. P. motorcyclist into the overpopu-lated section of Fort Benning commonly called "Block 23."

As he made his unduly noisy way through the block, heads peered out of windows, wondering who the next vic-tim would be to get the red ticket.

Cross the way, gaped a wide-open gar-age, and to this locality went our M. P., post-haste. Out came his little note book; scribble or two, and he was off again.

Came the day when Captain Richard W. Johnson, of the "Terrible Tankers," received an official communication from the Provost Marshal, a billet-doux from Sheriff Tuttle, in person, to the effect that any future violation of Garrison Regulations would warrant putting a padlock on said garage door. Right back with a sizzling reply came the answer penned as follows: "Your valued communication of the umpety-steenth received and contents duly noted. As for the garage door being open on above date, beg to inform you that a wood-pussy very unkindly chose to make its home in my garage. Request authority to leave my garage door open until said garage has been duly venti-lated"

And the unkindest cut of all came with the simple notation, well known to military personnel, "Disapproved."

SOLDIER, ON LEAVE, KILLED IN ACCIDENT

James E. Goodwyn, 2d, Company D, Twenty-ninth Infantry, died Wednesday in Columbia, S. C., of injuries suffered in an automobile accident near that city, according to advices received here. The soldier was on a furlough and was visiting at his home at Swansea, S. C.

At the time Goodwyn, who was driving, was injured, his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Rast, also of Swansea, were slightly hurt. They were passen-gers and were riding in the back seat of the automobile.

The accident occurred when the auto mobile was sideswiped by another car. Mr. and Mrs. Rast stated that the car continued on its way. They were unable to give a description of it. Mr. Goodwyn had been stationed at Fort Benning for 11 months. Surviving him are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. and a brother, George Goodwyn, all of Swansea. Goodwyn, a sister, Mrs. Beatrice Mack

MANEUVER DATES CHANGED

Instructions recently issued by Headquarters Fourth Corps Area, Fort Mcquarters Fourth Corps Area, Fort Mc-Pherson, Ga., requiring regular troops from seven stations in the Corps Area to move by marching, by truck, and by air so as to arrive at Fort Benning, Georgia, not later than April 6, 1931, have been changed to read "not later than April 3, 1931." The maneuvers will end on May 2, instead of May 7.

Another Hole-in-One J. J. Wilson Does It Takes it Very Calmly

Capt. J. J. Wilson, famed as a fight Capt. J. J. Wilson, famed as a fight promoter, and dramatic star, proceeded last week to place his name still more indelibly in Benning's Hall of Fame. Hole in one on the 5th hole of Ben-ning's golf links, so they say, and it seems to be true.

The doughty Captain bore his new honors with nonchalance and entirely re-fused to grow excited.

LINDROTH'S SECRET REVEALED; HE MADE A HOLE-IN-ONE TOO

Just why Capt. Lindroth kept it such a secret about the hole-in-one he made some two weeks ago, we haven't found out. Maybe he is just naturally bash-ful for he popped no buttons off his plouse; neither did he sound off a single peep.

But he did confide in his wife and she happened to mention the matter to some-one else and here we are broadcasting it to Benning and the world.

AIR ATTACK ON GROUND TROOPS IS BEING STUDIED

By Captain Negrotto

The advent of the airplane as weapon of warfare and the rapidity with which it attacks ground troops has failed so far to sweep the ancient doughboy from the modern battle field as was demonstrated in a spectacular as was demonstrated in a spectacular Infantry-Aircraft maneuver on Feb. 17th, 1931, when the 29th Infantry was attacked by three airplanes from Maxwell Field. The attack took place on the First Division Road as it was marching to a bivouac east of the Cusseta Road. The time and place of attack was left to the discretion of the air commander, who selected a point and time calcu-lated to inflict the maximum damage on the column. Upon being warned of the approach of the attack, the col-amn took up a deployed formation and when the planes came in range accurate rifle and machine gun fire was opened on all three planes. Blank ammunition was fired.

The maneuver was to test and further develop the defensive measures to be taken by an Infantry column against hostile air attacks. A mass of data was taken and is now being studied. The results of this test have not been announced.

LT. DILLER TO HAWAII

First Lieutenant LeGrande A. Diller, Infantry School Detachment, has been relieved from further duty with that organization, and from further duty at Fort Benning and will proceed im-mediately to New York City, and sail, on or about April 3rd, for Honlulu, where he will report to the commanding general for assignment to duty with the Infantry.

SCHMELING MAY VISIT

BENNING ON MARCH 3 BEFORE HIS EXHIBITION

German Boxer, Heavyweight Champ; Will Be in Columbus on That Date

According to a story in the Columbus Enquirer-Sun Thursday, Max Schmeling, heavyweight boxing champion, may visit Fort Benning March 3 on the occasion of his exhibition bout in Columbus on that date.

Schmeling has been invited to attend a dinner at the Polo Club, according to the story. Captain Adolf von Schell of the German Army, is a member of the Advanced Class at Benning, and for this reason it was believed that Schmeling would be particularly interested in seeing the sights of The Infantry School.

According to the story, no reply to a wire sent Schmeling by Dick White in regard to the Benning visit, had been received.

Definite arrangements in regard to the suggested visit and dinner have not been made.

MRS. PATCH AND MRS. LANDIS WIN AT MYER HORSE SHOW

According to a recent article in the Washington Post ladies formerly at Benning took honors in the Fort Myer Horse Show.

Mrs. J. D. Patch on Bally-Forest won first place in the ladies saddle class and 1st in the open saddle class. The Washington Post stated that her

Mrs. J. S. Landis won first place in the ladies' hunters class on one of Maj. George's horses and also on her own mount, Harlequin, took second place in the open jumping.

ORDERS FOR STUDENTS

War Department orders, just re-ceived, announce the relief of Captains John W. Bulger and Stanley G. Back-man from duty as students at The Infantry School upon completion of their courses. Captain Bulger is detailed with the Organized Reserves of the Fifth Corps Area, with station at Vincennes, Indiana, while Captain Backman is as-signed to duty at the University of South Dakota.

NEW OFFICERS TO BENNING

The following officers have been as-signed to duty at Fort Benning until the opening of the Infantry School: From the Philippines: Captains Paul T. Baker, Arthur E. Burnap and Walter B. Smith; First Lieutenant Armistead D. Mead and Second Lieut. James D. O'Brien, Furm Borte Disc. Market O'Brien; From Porto Rico: Major Charles W. Jones and Captain Mose K. Pigman.

First Lieutenant Malin Craig, Jr., has been relieved from assignment to the 10th Field Artillery, Fort Lewis, Washington and from duty at Hq. 9th Corps Area, and assigned to duty at Fort Bening.

DEFEAT CAVALRY INVADERS

February 27, 1931

The Infantry School Hunt By M. F. H.

Early to bed and early to rise do a lot for some men but a later schea lot for some men but a later sche-dule seems to be a great help to Fort Benning hunters. When the trumpets played "a hunting we will go" from the steps of the Polo Hunt Club last Monday afternoon more than 400 horses feet trotted across the greensward.

First came the hard riding thrusters First came the hard riding thrusters ready for any kind of country at any place, followed by Major Peabody's Echelon—Then came the new "Light Brigade," twelve children and a few proud (if apprehensive) parents led by Mrs. Knight. If any group hesi-tated to tackle a ditch it was not the "Light Brigade," as the afternoon paped proved.

They rode at jumps that looked as tall as their ponies, with all the aban-don of veteran thrusters. We missed the dashing pair of Tweed youngsters, who had been told they could not go on hunts until their ponies gained more weight. They made superlative efforts to overfeed their mounts the last few dare but also without success.

days but, alas, without success. The hounds were first cast in the woods south of the kennels, and were worried, as usual, by the scent of the same old pole-cat (we wish the threatened green-coated skunk hunters would take action). After getting down on the flats the going was faster and faster until reaching the corn farm where everyone had to pull up on account of the wet footing. It was a good run! The hounds were "pack-ed in" and "carried" to just north of the I. S. D. farm and again cast, head-ing east toward the Orion Trail. Giving the pack a long start. the field trotted ened green-coated skunk hunters would the pack a long start, the field trotted across the Engineer Bridge before re-suming the gallop along the trail as far as the Lumpkin road.

as the Lumpkin road. From here the trail lead headed eastward to Elliott Hill for a short check. Having counted up the new "Prince of Walers" the field "carried" to Davidson Hill for a long winding run toward the Trench Area. With a "slow down" and a check we all suddenly discovered ourselves headed straight for the club house with the masters yelling "Don't ride on the Polo field."

To the surprise of everyone the hounds were reluctant to devour the "kill." They seemed too winded to eat or perhaps it was because this was the first time their meat had been brought right up to the steps of the club house and they were overawed by the crowd on the porch. Before all of the riders had washed the dust of the chase from their faces the orchestra struck up an inviting tune and the tea dance was on. Having prepared reservations for one hun-dred the steward was a little taken dred the steward was a little taken aback at the large crowd which sud-denly filled the club. However, with customary coolness he sent for addi-tional china and all went well.

tional china and all went well. On Friday the Hunt staff left for Atlanta for another hunt, the Atlanta Horse Show Association having ex-tended an invitation to hold a hunt on the large estate of Mr. Walter Cand-ier, just north of the city. Through the courtesy of headquarters 4th Corps Area the staff will be mounted on horses from Fort McPherson. Next Sunday falling on the first of the month, the usual Drag Hunt has been scheduled to start from the Polo Hunt Club at 8:00 A. M.

The artillerymen grabbed the ball from center throw-in and were rushing to goal with Herschel Baker carrying to goal with Herschel Baker carrying the ball. The goal-threat was stopped by the referee's whistle. Captain Her-ren, turning his pony too short had spilled in front of the goal posts. On resumption of play the red-shirts laid a barrage of shots at the goal posts but were unable to register. The visitors, barrage of shots at the goal posts but were unable to register. The visitors, from a knock-in, raced the ball down the field. At mid-field Herschel Baker checked his pony and turned, but did not clear the players thundering at break-neck speed behind him. Herbert Baker's pony crashed into the haunches of Herschel's mount and Herschel and big nony spilled. Herschel appeared to his pony spilled. Herschel appeared to be seriously injured but after several tense minutes he recovered consciousness and insisted on resuming play. His teammates however mounted up Draper to finish the chukker in his stead. The Artillery tried to score a free shot for goal but missed and the cavalry recov-ering the ball carried it the full length of the field. Moore scored the visitors' second counter of the game.

5th Chukker

Herschel Baker having recovered from his dazed condition reentered the game. As he rode out on the field the spec-tators gave him a tremendous hand. Herbert and Herschel paired into beau-tiful teamplay and Herschel ran the ball tiful teamplay and Herschel ran the ball from a centerfield pass by Herbert, and scored single-handed. The Cavalry fouled by crossing and the red-shirts failed to make the free-shot good. In the ensuing scrimmage Herschel Baker fouled but the cavaliers failed at the free try for goal. The Cannoneers now uncorked a vicious attack. Bartlett got the ball at mid-field, dribbled to about the 60 yard line and then lofted a hard high shot between the goal posts

6th Chukker

Captain Herren hustled hard by the Baker twins, ran the ball to within shooting distance and scored a difficult acute-angle shot from dead territory that brought a wild cheer from the grandstands. Both teams now turned granustanus. Boin teams now turned ponies and mallets loose in one wild final foray about the field. It was as spec-tacular as ever seen here. Finally Major Allen pulled the ball out of a melee and slapped it 80 yards for the final score of the same.

were up each three periods at one, Arn-old at two, Lyman at three and Thomp-son at four for the Freebooters. The 29th lined-up: Carmouche at one, Strick-ler at two, Jacobs at three and Skelton at four.

Scoring--Freebooters: Lockett 1, Gam-mon 3, Arnold 2, Lyman 2, Thompson 1; 29th Infantry: Carmouche 1, Jacobs 1, Skelton 1.

On Sunday afternoon the Freebooters will try their luck against the Sixth Cavalry and this should be a very hotly contested game. Play will start at 2:00 p. m.

"Moon" Matheney and Abner Jordan of Hq. Battery, 83rd F. A., wish to announce that the payments on old sec-ond-hand furniture are just as hard to meet as those on brand-new pieces. It seems that these two lads took it upon themselves to go into the house-

upon themselves to go into the house-keeping business in a sort of "plumin-unt" manner, to use the words of Pri-vate Smith, and somehow, the Open Eye

Detective Agency got wind of it. Then again, we stop and smile every time we think of "Moon" writing those letters to some dame, and bringing the draft of same to the Orderly Room for Tate to type out. It seems that "Moon" is trying to string some innocent along, to the Open Eye Detectives, and by this time next week, we hope to be able to time next week, we hope to be able to give the readers more of the "Low Down" on these two "Military Shieks." x x x x "Dog Face" Anthony's telephone conversations are something to talk about, for there is little talking he does when his "weak moment" gives him a ring. The following is an exrecpt, and almost a reproduction of his model conversa-

Sgt. Swiggert Loses Breeches in Eluding An Angry Wild Boar

He Tries To Climb Same Tree As Pvt. Carr Just As The Pig Arrives

Five mighty hunters, headed by Captain Clough Gee, world's champion tur-key hunter, went wild boar hunting last Saturday into the wilderness beyond Gilbert and Oswitchee Creeks.

After a couple of hours spent in tracking and back tracking several cold trails of the wily denizens of the thickets, they finally pounced upon an un-suspecting old fellow, who evidently had never had a brand or mark placed on him in all his long and glorious service at Fort Benning.

The was a powerful brute, with tusks three inches long, and he was as mean as he was wicked looking. It was de-cided to mark him and let him go.

"Swiggert, you hold him by the ears; Carr, you sit in the middle; Smith, you hold his hind legs."

When Sgt. Tweed had finished, Capt. Gee, gave the command, "Take distance, HIKE," and in the mad scramble, Sgt. Swiggert and Pvt. Carr made for the same tree, Tweed fell into a mud hole, Capt. Gee's tree bent over double, and Smith kept on running. The sad, sad sequel to this story is that Sgt. Swiggert had to put in for a new pair of breeches next day ,because Carr was the better tree climber of the two, and the boar wasn't so slow either.

24TH JOKE COLUMN

Hotstream: "What you wearin' that old sweater for? Ain't you got no shirts?"

Brown: "Sho, I've got lots of shirts, but dey is both in the laundry."

Sgt. Warfield: "How much do you make on this golf job?" Wilson: "Oh, they pays me what I'm worth.'

Sgt. Warfield: "Well, that's one way to keep down the overhead."

Cpl. Brooks: "I hear you only plant your potatoes during the 'dark of the moon' days. Why is that?" Sgt. Williams: "Yeh. That's right. That's so we can raise potatoes."

Sgt. Williams: "Go bring that old mule here for this cultivating job." Lee: "Why the old one, Sergeant?" Sgt. Williams: "My motto is to al-ways wear out the old ones first. That's why."

Lee: "Then you go get him here your-self, sergeant."

Mrs. Tucker Pleases in Columbus Concert

Difficult Program Undertaken For Benefit of The Three Arts League

Last Sunday afternoon at three-thirty Mrs. Albert Sydney Johnson Tucker asssited by Mis Cozart, violinist, gave a concert for the benefit of the Three Arts League of Columbus. It took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Illges in Wynnton, a very charming house in a pretty piece of woodland, but not at all suited to a concert, at least to one given as developed an artist as Mrs. Tucker. The rooms are small and the doorways between them narrow; this prevents the sound from reaching those seated in the further seated in the further room. Nor could the tone develop properly, even in the main room. The piano was excellent and Mrs. Tucker in excellent form.

I do not think I have ever heard her perform better. She had undertaken a very difficult program, opening with a Bach Preamble. Anyone who has played Bach at all knows how difficult it is like trying to rub your stomach one way and pat your head at the same time-to give a very simple explanation.

Next the Harmonious Blacksmith of Handel, followed by The Turkish Pa-trol from the Ruins of Athens by Beethoven. The effect in this is entirely obtained by the control of tone, which Mrs. Tucker has to perfection.

The second portion of the program was a Sonata in A Major, by Brahms for the violin and piano. In this I did not think Miss Cozart's tone as clear not think Miss Cozart's tone as clear as when I heard her play before. Again, that may have been due to the rooms. The third was a very difficult group, including a Prelude of Proko-kieff, Bells by Hendricks, the Little White Donkey by Ibert, and Etude Tableaux by Rachmanninoff. Of these, the Bells, by Hendricks, who, incidentally, is one of the few American composers of note, was the most interesting to me. The clashing and discord of the bells is brought out in a truly modern manner.

The fourth was a group for the violin; Intrada, by Natchez, Romanze by Gran-dos and Sicilianne by Francoeur-Kreis-ler. Of these I thought best the Intrada. Miss Cozart was more at home with the feeling of this selection and played it charmingly. In the last I did not feel charmingly. In the last I did not feel the swing of the dance sufficiently. The last group by Mrs. Tucker was composed of a Concert Etude by Von Sternberg, Londonderry Air by Grain-ger and a. Caprice Espagnolle by Moskowski.

The first of these was the most popularly received of any played by Mrs. Tucker. The rich chords in the second part of the Etude, have a most haunting melody. The Londonderry Air, for those who do not know, is the oldest music known to the English race. Mrs. Tucker set herself a hard task which she carried off with flying colors and pernaps the best remark to make of the whole was one meda h as centleman the whole was one made b ya gentleman in leaving: "Les, Mary sure can tickle the ivories."

MASTER SGT. STRATTON TO RETIRE; Flying Artilleryman, HAS BEEN WITH I. S. D. FOR 8 YEARS

War Department orders for the re-tirement of Master Sergeant William Stratton of the Infantry School Detachstration of the finantry School Detach-ment, February 28, 1931, from active service to the retired list, have been received at Headquarters, Infantry School., It is a fitting reward for a long, honorable and meritorious career in the service of his country.

Sergeant Stratton was born at Louisville, France, August 30, 1882. At the age of twelve, he sailed for America with his parents, who founded their new home in the capitol city, Washing-ton, D. C. Young "Bill" Stratton proved to be a bit of a disappointment when he failed to take an interest in arts he failed to take an interest in arts and paintings and study to become an artist. It seems that the youngster's ambition was to build houses and railroads.

After graduating from Tufts College with high honors, it looked very much as if our hero would develop into a civil engineer and assist in the building of railroads and other big things, but Dame Fortune had other ideas. A pretty girl, few wild parties and then one day a lew wild parties and then one day William Stratton became a full-fledged member of the United States Navy. This happened in March, 1901, and it probably spoiled the career of a future builder of railroads.

One hitch on the floating fighting craft and "Bill" still craved action but preferred dry land for his fighting. In 1904, we find him accepted as a member of the United States Army.

Then came the big struggle in Europe. When the United States took a hand "Bill" went over as a member of the "Bill" went over as a member of the famous Sixth Engineers. On Dec. 3, 1917, he sailed with the outfit abord the transport "George Washington." Sev-enteen days later the convoy steamed in-to the outer harbor of Brest, France, and the little French boy was back to the land of his birth.

If Sergeant Stratton had craved action during his past army career, the records show that he found action galore in the next few months. Some of our readers may be of the opinion that the Engineers were the boys that tooted the whistles on the transformer whistles on the troop trains, miles be-hind the lines. True enough, there were engineers at the throttle of those steel horses, and they did gallant work, but the Engineers of whom we write were the boys that went under shell fire to repair roads and bridges that the everdriving Doughboy could keep moving and that supplies might be kept going forward.

Sergeant Stratton was present and an active member of the Sixth Engineers when that organization was attached to the Fifth British Army in March, 1918. During the German offensive of this period, it looked as if the Germans were going to break through the English lines east of the French town of Viller-Brettoneux. The Engineers were issued rifles and rushed into the front line rmes and rushed into the front line trenches. Did they stop the drive? This question is answered best with a few lines of that war-time poem, "With Stop-Gap Carey," written by an English "Tommv."

"Tommy." Oh! Yankee Engineers,

A handful O! those bridgemen, 'Umming' some old college song, Was fixing up a causeway, When our pick-ups rushed along. They sensed what was a-doin'! Their Lieutenant yelled "Hey Bo" If you let us in this picture, We'll kick-in this movie show. Can you swap some rifles for shovels? Never mind, fall in there, boys! Following is a copy of the citation awarded Master Sergeant Stratton for bravery in action: Master Engineer, Junior Grade William Stratton, 6th U. S. Engineers. While brigaded with the French Division, his company was or-dered on August 18, 1918, to construct a trestle over the Andres River at Cour-a blank file in it that needs filling.

Mr. Sgt. William Stratton

ville. With courage and skill, he direct-ed the work of his platoon, remaining at his post in spite of heavy casualties due to the severe shell fire of the enedue to the severe shell fire of the ene-my. This bridge furnished the main ar-my. Arcise my. This bridge turnshed the main ar-tery for the French advance from Arcis-lePonsart north to Fismes. In spite of wounds, received while engaged in this work Master Engineer Stratton continued until completion."

For the past eight years, Master Ser geant Stratton has been a member of the Infantry School Detachment and has been on duty with the Recreation Cen-ter Board. Many monuments to his memory will stand long after his de-parture from Fort Benning. He was a big factor in the building of the Doughboy Stadium, Gowdy Field, the Main Theatre and the Fort Benning swimming pool. His good nature and generous disposition has made him one of the widest known and best-liked enlisted men of the garrison and he num-bers his friends of the Service as a bers his friends of the Service as a legion. His discharges all show char-acter "excellent" and efficiency rating "above average." He is held in the high-est testeem by the officers and enlisted men of the organization.

A beautifully engraved gold watch will be presented to Master Sergeant Stratton by members of the Infantry School Detachment, as a token of their best wishes and lasting friendship.

Lt. Bartlett Advocates Hair and Stirrups for Maxwell Field Contraption

The air-ground radio net established by the communication personnel of the 83d Field Artillery with the planes from 83d Field Artillery with the planes from Maxwell Field was working splendidly last Saturday, even with the slowest of operators on the job, and everyone was highly pleased with the day's perform-ance, even that eminent radio technician, Lieutenant "Bill" Bartlett, who was charged with the success of the demon-stration.

Toward the end of the demonstration, one of the planes landed to find out how its signals were being received. "Fine!" averred Bill. "They couldn't be coming in any better even if I were doing the sending." "Want to try a little sending, Bill?"

asked the aviator. "We won't have time.

. and really I have to look after things on the ground, you know . . . you know how it is?" answered Bill.

"Better have a try, Bill," urged one of Bill's superior officers.

So Bill was hustled into the plane, but not before he had locked his spurs in a tricky part of the plane. Before leaving the ground, Bill tested the sending set, and it buzzed beautifully. In a minute, off buzzed the plane with Bill, and ear pieces on the ground sets were carefully adjusted to receive any messages Bill might care to send.

The plane sailed majestically back and forth over the course, and all Artillery forth over the course, and all Arthery ears were straining to catch some soul-stirring message out of the ether, such as "They shall not pass," or "Close sta-tion," but not a buzz, not a buzz! After several beautifully executed spirals and loop-de-loops, the plane rolled to rest on the ground, and Bill's friends crowded around the cock-pit to inquire the cause of the non-transmission inquire the cause of the non-transmission of messages.

At first, Bill couldn't be found, but finally someone caught sight of him, hugging the floor, endeavoring to free spurs from a mess of wires tangled his around his boots.

After Bill's return to normalcy, he was overheard to say, "Put some hair and stirrups on that d—— contraption, and I'll ride 'er, by gad!"

FORT BENNING CHILDREN'S SCHOOL

By Betty Bishop

First Grade

We have decided that each Friday shall be "Tin-foil Day." If any one wishes to help us save tin-foil, it will make us very happy.

Second Grade

The following people in the Second grade have made a star for a week in spelling: Elizabeth Bradley, Katchen Smith, Walter Kent, Edward Brittain, Jean Lange, Jacqueline Brimmer, Billy Bartlett and John Crandall.

Third Grade

We are very sorry that so many of the members of our grade are absent.

Miss Kennon has offered a bowl of gold fish to the room, when every member of the class makes above 75 on our weekly Arithmetic test. We are get-ting nearer and nearer the prize, as only a very few made below this mark last week.

We are planning to make a doll house. Everything in it is to be made by the third grade. When it is fin-ished, we shall invite all our mothers and fathers to see it.

Fourth Grade

Our grade continues to grow. This week Felix Porter became a member of our class. We have been busy this week writing compositions. Next week we hope to have some to publish. We have been talking about George Washington for the last few days. Several pupils brought pictures of him and we have them on the board, also several brought some interesting stories about him which have been read to us.

Fifth Grade

February 22 being George Washing-ton's birthday, many interesting pic-tures have been brought to class. Betty Negrotto and Jessie Dale MacGregor brought pictures of Washington. Bobby Sweet brought a picture, Birthplace of our Nation's Flag, which he got when he was in Philadelphia a few summers ago and visited Betsy Ross's home. Betty Baker brought a book about Washington, D. C. Ruth Elizabeth Deroin brought an article on Washington which she cut from the Atlanta Constitution.

Sixth and Seventh Grade

With the two dollars won as a P. Γ . A. attendance prize we bought a beautiful book "Washington, D. C." beautiful book 'n asing son, 'by Frances Margaret Fox. We observed Washington's birthday with a program in our room on Friday afternoon. The program was planned by Virginia Tucker. Those who took part were Farrar Gee, Jack Wilson, Norma Mae Tuttle, Jane Kraft and Betty Bishop.

On Friday we marched over to look through the new school. We were de-lighted with everything and can hardly wait for the time to come when we can move in.

We too, have a poet in our room.

Washington

Washington was a man of truth, He has proved that in his youth, He chopped down a tree, And said, "It was me." "I did it with my little axe, With only a couple of hacks." He killed his mother's horse Which was very bad of course, But the horse was wild, And he was a child. He was also very brave, About this he did not rave He is called a patriot Which is a lot, And now the end of my poem has come Which I hope you think not bum.

food for the human as any one article of diet possibly can, but unfortunately it is also a perfect food for germs.

How to make milk safe is a vital problem whose importance has been of increasing interest these past 25 years.

All civilized communities now recognize the value of guarding the milk sup-ply and to greater or less extent govern its production and sale by regulations.

The stiffness and severity of these regulations together with their enforcelightened or advanced the community is in matters which concern the public well being.

Milk is safe for human consumption only when it is clean. It must be kept clean from its beginning at the cow to its entry into your mouth. At any point between production and delivery to the consumer it is possible for harmful germs to enter milk. Milk so polluted is unsafe.

The milk route: First is the cow, which The milk route: First is the cow, which must be healthy and free from disease, properly fed and protected, and kept clean. At any one of these ten points milk may become contaminated and it is only by most careful, painstaking methods and routine that it is prevented. The best index of cleanliness now known is the bacteriological count. The very slightest mistake or carelessness in milk handling will produce an increase, sometimes enormous, in the bacterial count. An increased bacterial count is therefore an indication of a possible polluted and unsafe milk. It calls for an immediate inspection and check up polluted and unsafe milk. It calls for an immediate inspection and check up of the entire milk route. At Fort Benning we have a safe milk supply. The cost to the consumer is a secondary consideration. Most people judge a milk by its cream line which is a serious mistake. The cream line does not indicate safety to the consumer nor not indicate safety to the consumer, nor in pasteurized milk does it indicate the actual amount of butter fat present. During the past two years our milk has been tested each week for its bacterial and butter fat content. The bacterial counts have averaged below 10,000 per cubic centimeter; the butter fat has always been over 4 percent.

This is a better milk than can be bought from any other dealer in this vicinity and from both quality and safe-ty standpoints it well worth a price of 20 cents a quart.

The Medical Inspector requests com-plaints about the quality or appearance of milk or cream as it is delivered to you. Many times they may be justified. Even the best run certified milk produc-

THE BRIEF CASE By CAPT. WAINE ARCHER

The hitherto guileless and trusting temporaries of the company officers' class, we announce with much pleasure and more pride the arrival last week of Stark is on the verge of becoming a scoffer and a cynic. After accepting the guidance of his own hesitant mind to a most satisfactory solution of Arnold's artillery terrain exercise, he showed it to Kells, who laughed him to scorn and told him, emphatically and in detail, wherein he had erred. Crestfallen and submissive, Stark erased and substituted as per instructions. When the approved solution was announced, Kells was caresolution was announced, Kens was care-ful to put considerable interval between himself and his irate disciple. A couple of days later, Stark was seen solving Gilchrist's marked puzzle with a terrain pad in one hand and a sizeable rock in the other.

"How come?" he was asked. "Insurance against Kells," he replied, grimly.

This supply business is bad. When the firm of Bull and Peabody both turned up missing on account of sickness, it was all right with the class (nothing ofwas all right with the class (nothing of-fensive intended), but when, convales-cent, they reappear and state that their flu was "normal," like their own beloved supply; we consider that they are over-doing their technique.

x x xWe don't know whether to blame them or Paul, who substituted for them, or whether to blame, instead of either, the malign influence of the dread First Section, but the approved solution of the illustrative problem which Paul presented for our consideration (and disap-proval) placed the trains in wonderful position for an envelopment of the enemy right.

x x x x xFishing blindly for a mission for those ever-present Reds, Marshall of the Marines finally hazarded a guess as to what that mission might be.

"And why," patiently inquired the un-ruffled Sherburne (who had the approv-ed solution before him), "do you ascribe

Anne Slocum Ritter. Bill's convalescence is progressing nicely. x x x

Bill Marshall drew one bad horse in last week's exercise on Green Hill. This animal bucked and reared and generally raised Cain, hoping to get Bill off. We think Bill's hopes were traveling close think Bill's hopes were traveling along think Bill's nopes were traveling along similar lines, but we give him credit for parting company with the steed volun-tarily. He got down to see what was the matter, but he never saw, for when he left the saddle the horse left those parts to check in at the stables unassisted.

Major Arnold will learn not to fish for compliments from these downright infantrymen.

"How about artillery with the advance guard?" he asked Paynter. "Does it help much?"

"Not much," replied Paynter, noncha-lantly and somewhat contemptuously, thereby putting the laugh where it be-longs at the Infantry school. Bain drew a horse named Sandwich for the Green Hill exercise. "If we have to ride very far I think I'll be the ham," he remarked, sadly. $x \ x \ x$ At least one instructor has finally begun to see things in the correct light. "If you don't answer properly, it's my fault," Sherburne told the class.

A visitor to Kriz Hall, seeking Major Stivers, asked one of the inmates where he could be found.

"He's up front there, talking to Hagerty," was the reply. "That's impossible," said Adrian Brian, positively. "If Hagerty's there he's doing the talking."

STUDENTS RECEIVE ORDERS

"And why," patiently inquired the un-ruffled Sherburne (who had the approv-ed solution before him), "do you ascribe to them that mission?" "Well," said the desperate Bill, who hadn't figured on any whys, "that looks like the worst mission they could have." "It probably is," chortled a heartless and anonymous classmate. FORCED LANDING

Although the science of aviation has developed to a point where flying has lost most of its perils, an Infantry Officer detailed to Maxwell Field for the course in air observation still faces grave dangers which few of his compatriots appreciate. While the Officers detailed for the course do not actually fly ships, they are promptly put on the guard roster and, in connection with this duty, they run risks, comparable to looping the loop and other typical aviator pastimes.

The Officer of the Day, it appears, is furnished with a bicycle to make full of the Day, it appends, is infinite with a brief of the mark his rounds. Now, as anyone who has ever tried it will realize, there is quite a trick to riding a bicycle while equipped with a 32-inch sabre. Furthermore when the operation is complicated by mud, darkness and long unfamiliarity with cycling as a means of locomotion, it endangers not only life and limb, but dignity—that essential attribute of every serious minded officer and gentleman.

During his recent term at Maxwell Field, Captain Ollie Reed barely escaped a watery grave as a result of his initial midnight solo flight on the escaped a watery grave as a result of his initial midnight solo flight on the ancient two-wheeled relic furnished by the Q. M. Setting forth to inspect his guard with his sabre dangling bravely at his side, Captain Reed, who hadn't ridden a bicycle in seventeen years, suddenly found himself plough-ing along a lonely road flanked by water filled ditches. This mental hazard, great as it was, would not have sufficed to unhorse the Captain had not his shining Excaliber become entangled in the running gear of his unfam-iliar transportation. When this happened, however, the Captain went into a combination nose dive and tail spin which plunged him headlong into one of the ditches while his riderless bicycle landed in the other. It is authoritatively stated that, as a result of this episode, Captain Reed has made formal application for two weeks back flying pay and membership in the exclusive Caterpillar Club. He stoutly denies, however, that he demanded a parachute for subsequent guard tours.

CAPTAIN DUFF-AERIAL ARTIST

Another new story which came from Maxwell Field concerns Infan-tryman Duff, a prominent member of the Mechanical Minded Third Section.

It appears that Captain Duff, was designated to take an aerial photo-

It appears that Captain Duff, was designated to take an aerial photo-graph of a specified area. Captain Duff duly went aloft, flew over the area and snapped enough pictures to make as unintelligible an air mosaic as ever confused a student at a Service School. Upon returning to the field, the film was developed. Instead of a beautifully coordinated series of birds-eye-views it registered a perfect blank. Captain Duff, forgetting perhaps that the camera does not work along the same line as the Browning Heavy Machine Gun, had neglected to manipulate the gadget which opens the shutter. On the following day the Air Corps people, disgusted, perhaps, with Gunner Duff's failure to reduce the 1st position stoppage which had re-sulted in the useless expenditure of gasoline and film, sent the air-minded Infantryman up to map the main terrain features of the area with a pen-cil and paper. Captain Duff attacked his task with vigor and enthusiasm, but an air bump or something caused him to drop his pencil overboard. Since he had not taken the precaution to provide against this unforeseen Since he had not taken the precaution to provide against this unforeseen contingency, there was nothing to do but request the pilot to return him to the field to the held. The Blunderbuss, having wired the details of Captain Duff's air map-ping adventures to Colonel Bond is in receipt of the following radio from that well remembered expert on Infantry psychology: 'The Infantry mind functions at its best only when the Infantryman's feet are on the ground." Ed. Note: The above announcement is not to be construed as a reflection upon the local horsey set.

A Sweet Idea

Capt. Helsley on February 20 was Capt. Helsley on reornary 20 was confronted with a situation. There were three days, all holidays, ap-proaching. Obviously a decision was called for. That of Capt. Helsley was to go fishing with a few congenial ensitie spirits.

His mission called on him to provide food for one man for three days. So to the commissary went our hero and invested $6.50 in some of the Quarter-master's loudest-labeled tins. $6.50 means a lot of tin cans.

over the supplies. Mrs. Helsley sniffed a bit and wondered more at the selection made by this veteran, well-trained hunter of many years experience. But in order not to start an argument, she said nothing in regard to matters of opinion.

"But you have no sugar," she remarked.

So Helsley dashed for the nearest and came back triumphantly store bearing a package of sugar (individu-ally wrapped cubes at 30 cents a

Mrs. Helsley gave one look, and could restrain herself no longer. "Take that back and get a small sack of granulated sugar," she said. "The idea, after all these years, of your not knowing better. You deserve to be written up in The Blunderbuss." We are only too happy to oblige.

Faulty Reconnaissance Again

Capt. Wescott, Capt. Helsley, Jake Moon, Mr. Willis and Explorer Chance, feeling the call of the wild, dashed off to spend their holiday period in Baker county fishing. The natives received them cordially, sold them various supplies and every-thing was fine, all but the fish. Here what seemed to be an idea! bass in ' rendezvous, no fish appeared. The fish-ers fished assidously the first day. No results.

More care and attention to detail and technique the second day. Re-sults: same as first day. The third sults: same as first day. The third day, reenforced by St. St. Clair, the fishers fished mightily. Situation un-changed. This seemed almost incomprehensible to our Waltons for sonal reconnaissance previously had determined the existence of very aggressive and numerous fish here. A very interested native had been watching operations for three days. Finally he volunteered some information.

"Youall ain't having much luck, are you?" he said. "I didn't much think you would." "Why not?" the eager fisherman cried in chorus.

"Well you see, where youall are fishing was dry land two weeks ago. Used to be a lot of fish here, but they drained the lake a couple weeks ago. Most everybody in the county came along and got all the fish they could Caught 'em with their hands, carry carry. Caught 'em with their hands, and those that didn't get caught died. Then they filled the lake up again. I was purty sure you wouldn't catch nothing. There ain't any fish there to nothing. catch."

Maybe They Have No Red Coats

Ever since the 6th Cavalry poloists have been in our midst, horse-minded doughboys have been trying, with com-paratively small success, to get them to go on the hunts. Capt. Gibbs, explaining this appar-rent repugnance to participate in this equestrian sport, mumbled something about it being like a postman taking his recreation out in walking for a cavalryman to take his on a horse.

And then Mrs. Gibbs rather spoiled this ingenious excuse. "And they say you have to get up at 4:30 a. m., she said. "Don't you think that is a bit early?"

Mrs. Harding was riding to Columbus in the car of Major C. B. Rucker. She noted the sign on the back of the Rucker transportation and proceeded to obtain information.

"I thought you had a Ford," she marked pleasantly. "When did remarked pleasantly. you get a Burrus?"

NATIONAL GUARD NCO CLASS

ications. The men are getting into the swing of the school routine and, from all indications the home stations may expect as good results this year as have ever been obtained in the past.

Thought has been given to the elec-tion of Class Officers, but as yet nothing definite has been done. The Class First Sergeant has been selected though, selected in the person of 1st Sgt. Clyde R. Smith of the California National While there are many good men Guard. in the outfit it is felt that Sgt. Smith is the man for First Sergeant. He is the senior man, having three years ser-vice in the Guard and twelve years in the Regular Army. He saw eight months service in Mexico and then went to France. While over there he served with French troops for some ten months and with our own troops for another eight months. He took part in the battle of Verdun and in several other engagements. During his battle service he was twice wounded and received two citations. He also holds the State of California 100 percent duty medal. All in all, a soldier — Happy Reveilles, Clyde!

Our Top Kick is not the only yar veteran in our class however, there are several others including Stf. Sgt. Gunnoe who has also been cited. There are quite a few men who have been rated as 100 percent duty men in their respective organizations, not to mention several distinguished riflemen. Too bad we can't put a rifle team into competition.

One week has passed since the be-ginning of the National Guard Non-commissioned Officers Class in Commun-but—" of our instructor in Basic Signal Communication, the course at Benning promises to be not only instructive but interesting and far from dry.

The officers of the school have been most solicitious of the welfare of the men of this class and have bent their every effort to obtain for us every com-S. D., and of the whole post have done all in their power to make things as congenial and homelike as possible.

It is the hope of the men that they may prove to be the equal of any others graduated from this school, and that they will be a source of pride and satisfaction to not only their own organizations but also to their instructors.

Junior League Accepts The Challenge of Thanatopsis Club For a Decathlon

Answer to Defi, Couched in Vigorous Language, Suggests Change in Proposed Events

The Junior League has issued its reply the challenge of the Thanatopsis tø Club.

It proposes to expand the proposed competition and likewise suggests a change in some of the proposed events The reply to the challenge follows: Gentlemen!

Out of your own mouths you have condemned yourselves already; whereas, the labored style and composition of the challenge issued by "The Thanatopsis Club" is confirming evidence of the slow, lumbering mental and physical processes of the many superannuated members composing it, the virile and energetic band of "The Junior League," not only accepts the challenge to a decathlon, but hands you our card as it were and thus makes it mandatory that you match physi-cal prowess and mental agility with us for well do we realize that Alexander had conquered the world and Napoleon builded an empire ere your "Adjutant" had muscled into the Infantry School Staff, or Forrest Harding had become a pencil-pusher for the local clarion. It is only the hierarchy of the Army that curbs our progress by placing men fair(?), fat and forty in the path of our merited advancement, and now we welcome, yea, hail with wild huzzas, the opportunity which you so unwittingly offer, to demonstrate that a man past the "noonday" of life is inferior both in physical and mental acumen to us young fellows, and lest there be any doubt con cerning the validity of such tests of physical prowess as you propose, we herewith amend the events listed to the following:

For event No. 1-Mounted Wrestling (5 man team, bareback, costume op tional).

For event No. 2-Polo (6 chukkers). For event No. 2—Polo (6 chukkers). For event No. 4—Tug of war (entire Club-contest to be decided when entire team has been pulled across line).

CHANGE IN T R TAKES US BACK TO DAYS OF OLD

Joshua was a modest chap; he only made the sun stand still in the heavens. The latest change in T. R. 135-15 empowers the commanding officers of the Army to make it move backwards-

"At the discretion of commanding officers, sentinels may be required to call the hours between the time when challenging begins and reveille, they will call successively in the numerical order of their posts, beginning at the guardhouse, each one giving the number of his post, repeating the hour of the night, then adding "All's well." Thus: "No. 2, Eleven o'clock, All's Thus: well."

Shades of our New England ancestors and their town criers—or was the "Watch"? Anyway, we predi the "Watch"? Anyway, we predict dire complications. That is, save for that redeeming phrase "At the discretion of commanding officers." We feel sure that about the third yodel underneath some commanding officers' window in the wee sma' hours of the night would result in the immediate exercise of large quantities of the discretion referred to.

Anyway, if we must revert to the customs of our ancestors, why not let everyone join in the game? Think of the ecstatic sensations of Captain "Z" upon answering the telephone at three o'clock in the morning, when he hears We have been very fortunate in the interesting event and prove a thriller the dulcet voice of the post's junior 2d interesting event and prove a thriller Lieutenant say "Quarters No. 13-3 o'clock, and All's well."

For event No. 5-Chinning the bar (1-man team. Note: This means chinning the horizontal bar, and not chinning at the bar at which "The Senior League" has had more practice, due to age). For event No. 7—Basketball (a regular he-man game, 10-minute halves). For event No. 9—Musical chair (entire Club to compete. "Yea, verily, 'tis a bold flea that would breakfast on the lip of a lion." However, due to the fact that scouts of "The Junior League" have discovered dissension within the ranks of "The Thanatopsis Club" and further that individual members have approached "Head-Man Tuttle" with the announcement that no matter what the conditions made by Ma-jor Lewis, self-styled "Spokesman," may be, they individually disclaim any responsibility or culpability in the throwsponsibility or curpability in the throw-ing of the gauntlet into the faces of "The Junior League" and as a bar to their participation. Therefore, be it re-solved, That "The Junior League" indi-vidually and severally, demands a prompt apology on the part of Major Lewis or approximation of this dalor Lewis or an acceptance of this chal-lenge, as amended, by the entire "Thanatopsis Club."

LETTERS OF BONAPART HENNESY, 3d

Dear Eddie:

When I promised at the beginning of when I promised at the beginning of the year to write to you each week little did I suspect the long hours ahead of me pounding on a typewriter. Being able to use but two fingers, believe me I pound, in fact I have pounded one ribbon to pieces and am now sporting I pound, in fact I have pounded one ribbon to pieces, and am now sporting a new one that prints in red as well as black. If you were a girl, and I was not married, and the printer could print in red, what a letter I could write. All of which does not mean much, but at least, Eddie, it gets this letter started.

least, Eddie, it gets this letter started. We have finally had the works in ma-chine gun combat practice. It was an elegant problem. Everybody knew just what it was all about and just what to do in each and every situation. Unfor-tunately the school is all wrong, because it did not do most of the things the way we did. It is a shame, Eddie. Well, my Alma Mater. right or wrong, she'll my Alma Mater, right or wrong, she'll always be. Anyhow I got the idea at last, even if a little too late to be of any help. The ideal machine gun position is back as far as you can get it, prefer-ably near a road, and if it is a red clay road, why so much the better. There is one thing though, when ever you see three or more students talking together, you can walk right up and say, "Well you can walk right up and say, "Well I il be darned (?) if I put my guns back there," and know that you haven't in-troduced any extraneous matter. Enough, the old Romans had the idea, and the Pullman cars now sport their favor..e motto: "Quiet for those that have been laid to rest." Just one more point and I will cease forever on this subject. Learn to walk on stills. Yeah—stills! You might be able to see something from stills. With the whole class herded into or onto about 20 square feet I got into or onto about 20 square feet I got a fine picture of either fat legs, skinny legs, and one guy with his boots shined, or up above I saw the kind of hats the well-dressed officer does not wear. Just what a little feller like Hocker was able to see I can't guess. Boy, but it was a swell day to have been playing golf.

We have started a new course. It is called Basic Signal Communication. It is the best named course we have had so far, only it is not Basic enough. They really should ask us to wear "didies" to class. Boy, you sure start right at the bottom. We have learned how to tie a square knot, make a splice, use lineman's tape, how to turn the screws on a phone to put wire on it, how to talk over a phone. Yes, the class has the voice with We also went outside and they a smile. actually let us hook two telephones up actually let us hook two telephones up together and talk to each other. Such fun, Eddie. One of the bright boys in the člass also learned how to use the generator in a phone and nearly knocked my head off. It's a great little trick, Eddie, you hook up the phone with a short piece of wire, place the bare ends against the opponent's neck and turn the crank. I'll never suffer from rheumatics again. We have also had something or other about Ohme's law— E equals I times R. I know one better than that. I don't know just its exact than that. I don't know just its exact name, but Three Letters from the Pro-vost Marshall equal No Car. That's a good law too.

Well I'll tell you, Eddie, it's pretty discouraging, here we been going to school all year and learning things and then along comes Capt. Collins and tells then along comes Capt. Collins and tells us that before long things ain't going to be like they is. What's the use of changing things in peace times when ev-erybody knows that there are not going to be any more wars and even if there should be a war, that very fact would change everything anyhow. Well, it change everything anyhow. Well, it seems to Capt. Collins that all our formseems to Capt. Collins that all our form-ations are wrong, close order, extended order, everything. over again in a new way. We now have a British uniform, the French 75-mm., a German organization, can't we find something to adopt from the army of Somolioland.

We have also been initiated into the mysteries of the Unit Journal and the Unit Report. One again we find many conflicting statements. The Unit Journal is kept at all times except when you are too husy to keen it. It should you are too busy to keep it. It should contain certain information, depending upon just what the "Skipper" wants put in writing. It is kept by the Adjutant of the forward echelon, but the Adj. is not with the forward echelon and you generally have some enlisted man in the organization to keep it. The Unit Re-port is submitted to higher command, upon demand only, and contains data from the unit journal. When in doubt let your conscience be your guide.

We have also continued our work with the 37mm. The best class that we have had in it so far was when we went out nation it so far was when we went out and fired sub-calibre on the range. What matters it if the blooming French sight does work backwards. The sun was warm, and the sand in front of the em-placements was warm and soft—so soft. Major Bishop Tests New Style Headgear For Social Purposes

Newly arrived personnel at Fort Ben-ning often stop suddenly in their tracks to contemplate some individual wearing a peculiar hat, an exceptional raincoat, a peculiar hat, an exceptional rancoat, or some queer piece of equipment, and gasp to their nearest neighbor, "Who or what is that? and is it quite all right for him to be about?", only to be re-assured by the Benning old-timer that everything is quite all right and that the particular individual, who caused all this compation is merely a member of this commotion is merely a member of The Infantry School's Department of Experiment, innocently testing a new style hat, raincoat, or what have you. To Major Bishop of the Medicat Corps, this is an old story, but his friends have been seeking an explanation for a runor which gained consid-erable headway during the past week, as result of a certain visit by the Major to the Main Theater, that he is contemplat-ing the organization of a Medical Corps Department of Experiment at the Station Hospital to test the feasibility, practicability, or advisability of wearing brown derbies with the blue uniform at social gatherings, or to the movies.

Whenever confronted by insurmountable Difficulties; His solution would always be to

I. S. D. CELEBRATES 24TH ANNIVERSARY WITH SUPPER

Members of the Greencord organiza-tion celebrated their 24th anniversary last Friday night with a theatrical per-formance followed by a "Dutch Supper." The event was held at the 29th Infantry Theatre, and the entire program was one of merriment and pleasure for the Greencords and their guests.

Major Louis Falligant, commanding officer of the Infantry School Detachment, opened the ceremonies with a short address of welcome to the visiting guests and words of commendation to the men of the organization for the high stand-ard of efficiency upheld during the past year.

Colonel Daniel G. Berry, commanding officer of the Special Units, gave a very interesting talk on the proper cress and courteous manners of the soldier. He also ended his talk with a highly humorous story that brought forth a storm of laughter and applause.

Master Sergeant William Stratton, who retires March 1, 1931, was called upon for a farewell speech. To begin upon for a farewell speech. To begin with, Sgt. Stratton explained that this was his first attempt at oration and probably his last. He was a bit shy in beginning but as he began to talk of past days in the service, he warmed to his subject and at the close he sat down widet hearty applause from all present

The entire program of the show was interesting and amusing. The performance was featured by dancing, singing, and aching wise cracks and there were many sides and damp eyes at the finish. Last but by no means least was the "Dutch Supper." Mess Sgt. Pop Martin and his capable staff of cooks, prepared loads and heaps of sandwiches of every description, and to further add to the pleasure, casks of ice cold near beer were on tap and foaming schooners were quaffed along with the tasty sandwiches. After every one had satisfied the inner man, cigars and cigarettes were distributed.

KELLYS DEFEAT IRISH BASKETEERS; THREE TEAMS HAVE GOOD RECORD

The feature game of the week was the closely contested duel between the Irishmen and Kellys last Monday night. The Kellys came through with a 38 to 34 victory by virtue of a last minute rally that scored six points.

Tullos and Chamberlin played a fast game at forward for the Kellys, while Kjelstrom starred in the score column with a total of 16 points. For the losers Hampshire was the out-

For the losers Hampshire was the out-standing star, scoring 13 points and playing a great defensive game. Ray and Morris guard positions kept the Kelly offensive well broken up and played great defensive ball. In the "Baby" Loop, the Medicos con-tinued their winning streak by landslid-ing the Red Diamond outfit 43 to 17. Those Medicos are just too good for the little league. MEDICAL DET. LEADS BASKETBALL LEAGUE WITH FIVE VICTORIES

The Medical Detachment continues the fast pace it set during the bast pasket-ball season by leading the Company League by the margin of two full games. The Military Police team was defeated on February 16 in what was probably on February 16 in what was probably the most important game on the sched-ule by the decisive score of 47-16. Fri-day night they defeated the Engineer team, 43-16. The last game was played without the services of the team's best player—Gilbert, about whom the team's offense is built. He is, without doubt, one of the best centers in this section of the acountry, playing a hard fast game of the country, playing a hard, fast game of the country, playing a hard, fast game all the time. Other members of the team are New-man and Seeley, forwards and Massey and Argerion, guards. Seeley, while ra-mous for his puglistic skill, is also very adept at handling a basket ball and possesses a keen eye for the basket. Massey, at running guard, plays a con-sistently good game and is especially good on long shots. Newman, the other forward like Seeley, is low in stature forward, like Seeley, is low in stature but plays the floor well and showed his but plays the floor well and showed his ability in the last game by looping six-teen points from all angles of the court. Argerion plays standing guard. He is unusually fast and while not sporting the stature ordinarily seen in a stand-ing guard makes up for this in his ability to fight hard every minute he is in the game. McCloud, Adams, Allison and Taylor are the other members of the team. the team.

COLUMBUS Y WRESTLERS DEFEAT BENNING IN A SPEEDY SHOW

The Fort Benning amateur wrestling team met defeat at the hands of the Columbus "Y" grapplers at the garrison gymnasium last Monday night. A large crowd was out to witness the first wrestling show of the season here, and they were treated to a show that was

Has Witness and Everything So He Lays Claim Now to Championship

Chapter IV. Ever since The Infantry School News came out with the story labeled "Lieut. Drewry Gets Turkey in Hour," other Benning turkey hunters have been heard going about muttering to themselves. Some, for instance the Steels, say that the turkey is a wily bird, and that much craftsmanship must be displayed in snaring the bird, even if it takes seven days to do so. Some, for instance, Maj. Tommy Taylor, say feed 'em plenty of corn, get 'em tame, gobble back at 'em, and then get 'em when they aren't looking.

Among Benning turkey hunters, who have pooh-poohed the above story is one have pooh-poohed the above story is one Captain Clough F. Gee, Q. M. C., trans-portation magnate of Benning's official trucking business. Captain Gee, up un-til his last turkey hunt, sided with the Steels, but now, ..., and it has to come out sometime, ... he now, not only lays claim to the Benning speed record, but also the world's championship. He got his turkey in fifteen minutes! And he has a witness too. His witness, it appears, is none other than the impec-cable Sergeant Tweed, hunter extraor-cable Sergeant Tweed, hunter extraor-dinary himself, in addition to his duties as Huntsman of The Infantry School Hunt.

Sergeant Tweed vouches that this hunt

Sergeant Tweed vouches that this hunt took place about two weeks ago, in Hunting Area No. 5, in the vicinity of King's Pond. Sergeant Tweed led the way to the first blind, which showed no signs of turkey. At the second blind, some re-pairs had to be made, and even before these were quite finished, but hushsh, ... sh"... said the quick-eared about-to-become a world's champion turkey hunter . . . "sh . . . I hear tur-kevs approaching." turkey hunter . . . "sh . . . I hear tur-keys approaching." Quietly, behind their incomplete blind lay the waiting hunters, as a proud gobbler gobbled his way into view at the head of a harem of eleven hens.

In fifteen minutes, the hunters were back in Captain Gee's car with a sixteen-pound gobbler headed for the post. Next!

MAJ. HEARN TO BE INSTRUCTOR

Special Orders No. 38, W. D., an-nounce the detail of Major Thomas G. Hearn, General Staff Corps, (Infantry) as instructor at The Infantry School, upon completion of his tour of foreign service in Hawaii. Vannatta, of the Fort Benning team, showed skill and power by flattening Billingslea of Columbus, in 5 minutes. This match was fast and furious and the crowd was in an uproar of excitement as the boys blocked, bridged and fought for holds.

Osteen, of Columbus, used a thirteenpound weight advantage to throw Krew-son of Fort Benning in 3 minutes. Krewson was out of shape and failed to make his usual fine showing.

Foots Cutrer, Fort Benning giant, was sadly off form and failed to show anysadly off form and failed to show any-thing against Paul Jones, Columbus heavyweight. Cuterer was on the de-fensive at all times and was completely winded after the first three minutes. Jones won in 5 minutes and 30 seconds. Wrestling is a great sport and Fort Benning fans will support a winning team. Many youngsters here would prob-ably develop into star matmen if they could be induced to visit the post gym-nasium and train. nasium and train.

The Fort Benning wrestling team will leave for Atlanta today where they will be entered in the state wrestling tournament.

In addition to being a fighting and hiking organization with good baseball, track and football teams the Regiment has turned its attention to the stage and each battalion has agreed to furnish an act for the coming Minstrel Show to be given for the benefit of the Children's School. These without a doubt will be good and will be worth the price.

Headquarters Co., 1st Battalion

Headquarters Co., 1st Battalion Cpl. Clyde A. Betz is back with us again after visiting in New Orleans. We have been trying to get a little volley-hall competition. We have en-tered this challenge several times and just can't seem to get any reply, so here it is again: We, (1st Bn. Hq. Co) chal-lenge any team in the Post. We have lenge any team in the Post. We have played many games with teams that thought they were good but only turned out to be "flops," so now we are striv-ing for some real competition. Won't someone answer our call? A game may be arranged by calling 604 and asking for the First Sergeant, as he is one of the head men in our little show.

We are hearing a lot of talk about this "Bonus" situation of late and what this "Bonus" situation of late and what I mean it is getting monotonous as far as Ike E. Freeman is concerned: Ike has his 50 percent of the bonus money spent already: A new car and oodles of other things. I sure hope that he gets his share real "pronto" like. Then life will be worth living again.

Company "E" The maneuver of February 17th, the night of February 17th and February 18th, 1931, with excellent weather, proved to be a success from every angle. The only complaint was that the night was very dark and no one was allowed to use any lights due to the operation of the aircraft. The darkness caused some of the men to run into mud puddles and get thoroughly saturated with red and get thoroughly saturated with red mud. Rivalry, competition and enthusmud. Rivairy, competition and entities iasm were so high that it would not take much to get all concerned to have it over on their own time. The ammuni-tion train was busy all during the night brining up ammunition. It seemed to be a draw from a view behind the roll-ing bitchess. Our men were birdly coming kitchens. Our men were highly com-mended by the C .O. 29th Infantry and our Company Commander for their in-itiative and hard work during the maneuver.

The efficient air service kept the men on the alert at all times expecting an attack. They attacked the wagon train once during the maneuver and swooped down so low that they almost clipped down so low that they almost clipped th ear off one of our mules. The rolling kitchens did most excel-lent work on the maneuver by supply-ing the men on the battle front with good meals which kept the men in fight-ing spirit. These meals were prepared about two miles behind the front lines and sent up to the front in containers from the rolling kitchens. The battle front extended from Harmony Church to Sulphur Springs. Pvt. 1cl. Cliett has just returned from a 90-days furlough in Savannah.

Corp. Duke Marquis, the Company E one-man track team, did his stuff in the 2nd Battalion track meet February 20, winning the most individual points. His score was 28. With his 28 points, Co. E was able to tie Co. G for second place. Corp. Marquis won five first places and one second place. He was the high in-dividual in all post track meets last year, Post, Regiment and Battalion.

Company "F" On the bayonet course we are doing a most excellent work. The men are go-ing to it with lots of pep and hard (Continued on page 15.)

To The Men With the Hose

No, friends, it's not a dissertation on silk socks; the following effusion, penned by some one of our fair and feminine inhabitants, who shall re-main nameless, is forwarded to us with the notation that it is dedicated in particular to the members of the post Fire Department. We scent a story and would appreciate it if the lady would furnish us further details:

Along the street there comes

No soldier, flag, nor drums But some dame, any dame It makes no difference what her name

So long as she wears a skirt And has the appearance of a flirt

The minute she is spied soldier has already cried:

A soldier has already c "Windows up, heads out, A skirt is passing by!" Then on a window

They make their seat

And sing that song of "Aint she sweet!"

Ole Rusty Bore has no comments to make on either the quality of the verse or the enterprise of the gallant lads in the fire department. He would, however, crave permission to remind the lady, reference the fifth line of her verse, that the results would probably be even more spectacular if she came out without one.

It seems that some few weeks past Corporal Paul took unto himself a brand new outfit of civvies, plus the hat in question. Thus arrayed in fes-tive attire and with the latest thing in geraniums in his buttonhole he repair-ed to the most exclusive of Columbus d to the most exclusive of Columbus studios and had recorded upon sundry pieces of cardboard the ravishing vis-ion. After a fond farewell our hero boarded his train and rushing to the nearest window thrust out his head for a last look—and Fate yields place to Tragedy. For, caught in the toils of a vagrant breeze, the immaculate derby was freed from the outward pressure of his two ears and whirled to destruction beneath the wheels of the moving train—to the gargantuan the moving train—to the gargantuan amusement, it is rumored, of the as-sembled populace.

Three days later came the woeful tidings that The Girl had married another man.

And now—there is happiness in the And now—there is nappiness in the camp of the Fighting Irish. Paul (Bloody) Blackstone, bone-crushing Irish Quarterback, has banished ambi-tion, forsworn fame, renounced matrimony. To the Army, his first love, will he continue to cling—and even more heartfelt is his oath that never again (Sic transit gloria mundi). —(Discourtesy of Al & Joe).

Chivalry

"Ah, ze chivalry of France ees not ead! Lady—"—but you all remem-er that one. Anyway, chivalry is dead! ber that one. Anyway, chivalry is most emphatically not dead—the flower of Knight Errantry we have in mind being none other than one Corporal Nelson, Hq. Company, 2nd Battalion, 1st Tanks.

Our enterprising reporter was un-able to get any very detailed informa-tion from the Corporal himself—chi-valry is always modest! But, the tale is this:

Last Sunday afternoon our knightly non-com (sans peur et sans repro-che) was summoned to the telephone; che) was summoned to the telephone; upon his placing to his ear the appro-priate portion of the instrument he was greeted with the following, voiced in the dulcet tones of a fair lady in distress: "Corporal dear, I'd just love for you to do Sergeant Gause's charge of quarters for him today." To which the scion of Trafalgar answered "Cer-tainly, madame—but why?" Promptly came the answer "Dear, let me explain. While the poor dear was scrubbing our floor yesterday he stumbled over the perambulator and fell in the bath tub and is wearing my bath robe until his uniform gets dry. I've told him over and over again that he looks far more natural in the robe than in this uniform but he just won't go to quarters in it. So, Please, Corporal Dear, won't you do it for him?"

And, in the hours when his more fortunate, if less gallant companions were dreaming of rubber-tired tanks our Corporal was heard lowering windows and delivering himself of sundry commands re mosquito bars. We repeat-"-have one on me."

SHORTS AND OVERS

A letter from our late Executive Captain Busch, indicates excellent pro-gress toward the East Coast.

Lieut. H. D. Baker gave us the thrill of our lives last Sunday. Those who did not attend the Polo game missed real event.

Lieut. Toulmin of the Air Corps is with us. He will be allowed to solo a draft-horse next week.

Hq. Battery and Combat Train As far as polo is concerned it looks like this organization is very well rep-resented. If you don't believe it just turn over to the sports section and see what it says about Sunday's game. Lt. Bartlett and Lt. H. E. Baker were very much in the game, but then, they are only showing their true form, so this really isn't news at all.

this really isn't news at all. As long as we are on sports we might say something about the boys who have been out there throwing the old pill around in their spare time— tho, the baseball season is a long ways off they are talking it over and are showing a lot more pep and spirit than in former years. It may be well for the other teams in the league to watch the Artillery this season. the Artillery this season.

work. On the overnight problem this company took the prize and did itself proud. When orders were issued us to maneuver around the enemy, we went right ahead and did it in a manner that would make anyone sit up and look twice. The Battalion Commander per-sonally complimented the officers and men for the very good work they did that night.

In the Battalion Track and Field Meet, the company came out in front with points to spare. This company feels proud and wants the boys who were entered in the different events to know that we appreciate the clean sports-manlike way in which they won. Please remember that we only had one day's practice. Cpl. Costello took first place in the shot put, discus, and second place in the javelin and runninb broad jump. Pfc. By the way this scribe finally took a bath and way ahead of time too. While marching down the Ohio road during the demonstration of February 17 and 18th, he decided to take a plunge and did so in a very effective manner, but to his sorrow the water was very muddy. I shall see to it that all mud holes are refilled with fresh water before all hikes. "Never fall asleep, while on a hike," song sung by the Sleepy Three, Pvts. Snawadzki, Blalock and Andrews. The song is as true as its words, if you don't believe me ask the three that sing it.

Saturday morning at nine o'clock the entire battalion assembled in rear of barracks, and witnessed the presentation of athletic awards by Major Allen F. Kingman to the various winners and participants of all sports for the year 1930. The following named men were awarded basket-ball coats: Corporal Haynie, and McKelvey. Privates Car-ter, Schoell, Williams, and Hill. Next in line came the awards of Tank Swim-ming suits for breaking Post records. Pvt. Tannerhill and Yarborough. The following men were point winners in the Post Swimming meet and were awarded jerseys with letter "T." Pvts. Cason, Williams, Covington, Jones, Mc-Carthy, Tannerhill and Yarborough. For boxing awards Private Neal Milan was awarded a miniature boxing glove for having won his bout in the Post Tournament. The following named men were awarded jerseys with letter "T" for reaching the finals in the Post Tournament: Corporal Fuller, Private Fretwell and Milan. Sergeant Willing-ham was awarded a football sweater with letter "T." Prior to the presen-tation, Major Kingman spoke of the position this battalion maintained in all athletic contests during the past year, and his desire to maintain that standing during the present year.

Not to be outdone by Company F's successful track meet last Thursday afternoon in which the company ascertained the amount and quality of the available material for the coming battalion track meet. Headquarters Comtalion track meet, Headquarters Com-pany plans to hold their track meet Thursday afternoon and "D" Company Friday afternoon. The battalion track meet has been postponed to Friday March 6. Any new material that may be in the battalion will certainly be brought out in this meet for competi-tion is keen as to who will win this meet. All this is not a threat to other organizations but a notice that the Tankers are out to hold the Track Championship of the Post.

Corporal Boutwell of Company "F" has left on a 60-day furlough to visit in New Orleans, Louisiana. We hope he has a good time, and know he will be glad when the time rolls around when he will be back with us.

CAVALRY POLO TEAM DEFEATS FREEBOOTERS AFTER LOSING TO 29TH

Students Go Down Before Hard Riding of Visiting Malleteers

The 6th Cavalry Polo Team defeated the Freebooters 11 to 6 Thursday afternoon.

The third game in the Benning-Og-lethorpe series ended with the Sixth Cavalry team on the losing end by the score of 9 to 4. ,The cavalry team spotted the 29th Infantry four goals at the start and the Infantrymen promptly ran up five more.

For the Cavalry team the lineup was as follows: Lt. Moore, No. 1; Major Allen, No. 2; Capt. Herring, No. 3 and Capt. Gibbs, No. 4. For the Infantry: Lieut. Westlund, No. 1; Lieut. Strickland, No. 2: Lieut. Jacobs, No. 3 and Lieut. Skelton, No. 4. Lieut. Skelton was rendered hors de combat by a fall in the fifth chukker and his place was taken by Lieut. Sweeney. The Lieutenant was not seriously injured.

Cavalry Defeat Students

The Sixth Cavalry malletmen de-feated the Student Four Friday afternoon in a fast game at French Field, 10 to 6.

The Students matched a four goal handicap, team against the visitors ten goal team and were therefore five goals ahead at the beginning of the six chukker game.

Under the colors of the Students, Mood was at one, Pierce at two, Du-laney at three and Newman at four. The visitors lined up with Moore at one, Allen at two, Herring at three the regiment since the last organization day were formed in a body facing the sallyport. The colors and guidons were massed in the center. Around these were grouped the three battalions formand Gibbs at four.

The Cavalrymen were at the top of their form and their drives were ac-curate and carried distance. As usual the Yellow Cords rode as though born in the saddle.

The visitors overcame the five goal handicap and at the end of the first half the score was deadlocked at 5-5. In the final half of the game the Students scored their lone marker when Newman came through with a beauti-ful drive from the charity strip. The visitors scored an additional five markers to finish the game on the large end of a 10 to 6 score.

AUGUSTA HORSE SHOW TEAM

The Commandant has accepted the invitation of the Augusta Horse Show As-sociation to send a horse show team to the Augusta Horse Show, March 26, 27 and 28.

John B. Thompson, Cavalry, Major Academic Department, has been desig-nated as team captain to select the personnell and mounts for the team.

WE SUSPEND

As explained elsewhere in this issue, recent legislation has placed the Infantry School News in an embarrassing position. To be perfectly frank with our subscribers and our advertisers, we don't know just where we stand.

Without question, the disabling clause in the army appropriation Denied the support of the majority of our advertisers, we cannot con-tinue the paper in its present form and size. It may be that we can-not continue at all. In brief, we face Hamlet's dilemma of "To be or "To be or not to be."

Pending the receipt of opinion and rulings from Washington, the commandant has directed that the Infantry School News suspend pub-lication after this issue. It is hoped that this suspension will be for one issue only and that we may then be able to resume publication on a reduced scale, but this is a matter for future determination. We prom-ise, however, not to go out of business without at least one more broad-side from the Blunderbus.

In view of the uncertainty of the situation and the unlikelihood that In view of the uncertainty of the situation and the university of that the Infantry School News can be continued as a twelve or sixteen page weekly, we take this occasion to offer to our subscribers the opportunity to receive a cash reimbursement for the unexpired part of their subscripto receive a cash reimbursement for the unexpired part of their subscrip-tions. THE 29TH INFANTRY CELEBRATES 30TH ANNIVERSARY OF REGIMENT

Colonel Major Compliments Personnel for Splendid Esprit de Corps

The Twenty-ninth Infantry celebrated its thirtieth anniversary of its organi-zation by appropriate Organization Day exercises, March 3. The colonel's address was followed by a salute to the Colors, with the band

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK; AFTER THAT PERHAPS: IT'S A MONEY MATTER

Wording Preclues Publishing of Advertisements of Firms Dealing with Government

The situation has been estimated. The decision is to suspend publica-tion with this issue for one week and maybe more, until the situation becomes clearer.

Something is about to happen to the Infantry School News. Just what that something will be has not been decided definitely, however.

But the recent pay bill, passed by Congress includes the following:

No appropriation for the pay of the Army shall be available for the pay of any officer or enlisted man on the active list of the Army who is engaged in any manner with any publication which is or may be issued by or for any branch or organization of the Army or military associ-ation in which officers or enlisted men have membership and which carries paid advertising of firms doing business with the government; Provided however that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit officers from writing or dis-seminating articles in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary of War.

This seems likely to cramp our style materially. It's this way. Many of our advertisers, in fact probably a majority, do business with the government in one way or another. So to put it mildly, it looks as if our advertising were likely to be largely reduced. Of course there are quite a few doubtful cases, but no great anxiety to figure in a test case has been noted on the part of the editorial staff. The advertising solicitors in fact haven't the slightest desire to have their pay stopped, let alone the idea of stepping into the limelight by getting the Com-mandant's pay stopped.

Mandant's pay stopped. And newspapers don't thrive so well without advertising. In fact when the advertising goes, newspapers go broke. The News is not eager to go broke any more than it is to hear somebody say, "Computediar do your duty" "Comptroller, do your duty." So there is going to be a change; we may publish a much smaller paper for may publish a much smaller paper for a while until we learn just what we can do; we may do one of several things. At present it looks as if we needed two or three Philadelphia lawyers, an angel, or a clear ruling by the Comp-troller—on somebody else's case. Meanwhile we aren't accepting money from a good many advertisers who ad-vertised in our last issue, because the (Continued on page 2.)

The Congress of the United States on bebruary 2nd, 1901, authorized the War cepartment to organize the Twenty-men and officers to form the regiment February 2nd, 1901, authorized the War Department to organize the Twenty-ninth Infantry. This authority was carried into effect by publishing General-Order Number 9, War Department, Washington, D. C., dated February 2, 1901.

HISTORY OF THE 29th INFANTRY

(Continued from page 1.) This regiment fought through the War of 1812 against the invading Eng-lish forces. After the close of that war, as was the case after the close of the World War, there was too large an army, so several regiments were com-bined forming a single regiment. Among one of these groups was the 29th Infantry, which was reorganized as part of the 6th Infantry.

During the Civil War, the 29th In-fantry was again organized, but at the close of this war, it was again combined with several other regiments to form the present 11th Infantry.

From the brief history of the earlier organizations of the 29th Infantry one can readily imagine the very fine history and record of this regiment. These regiments were really the forefathers of our present regiment, and the records established by these fine old regiments have been instilled into the spirit of the present Twenty-ninth. Unfor-tunately the War Department does not permit the regiment to take official credit for the deeds of the old Twentyto make the history of our country. However we can claim relationship, and point with pride to the OLD TWENTY-NINTH.

Colonel W. M. Van Horn was the first Regimental Commander. During the year 1901 the regiment was stationed at year 1901 the regiment was stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill., and Columbus Bar-racks, Ohio. Only routine duties were performed during this period. In February, 1902, the 29th Infantry left its stations at Fort Sheridan and Columbus Barracks to go to the Philip-pine Islands, traveling to San Francisco by train, and there, after a short stay, embarked on the Army Transport "Sher-idan" sailing from that port April 1. idan" sailing from that port April I, 1902. canal, and to meet new people of an-other land. The quarters at Camp Gaillard were greatly improved by the 29th and a most enjoyable three years were spent there.

During the period of the World War, until 1918, the regiment with other American forces in the Canal Zone, performed the very arduous and important duty of guarding the great canal, con-stant and untiring vigilance was neces-sary to protect its docks and locks. In 1918 the regiment was ordered to Camp Beauregard, in Louisiana. Here the 29th Infantry was split to form the 84th Infantry and was made a part of the 17th Division. All this took place in the fall of 1918.

In the ran of 1918. The outbreak of influenza which caused so many deaths delayed the regiment's departure for France with the result that the 29th Infantry never saw ser-vice in Europe.

March 1919 the regiment moved to Camp Shelby, Mississippi, where it as-sisted in the large task of demobilizing the returned units from France. Upon completion of this work the 29th Infantry was moved to Fort Benning, Ga. Since October 1919, the regiment has been the demonstration regiment of The Infantry School. This means that, through the student officers who witness the demonstrations and then, after graduation, return to their respective sta-tions for duty, the 29th Infantry spreads throughout the Regular Army, National Guard, Organized Reserve, R O T C, and C M T C, the very latest methods of infantry organization, technique and tactics. Thus it is that "We Lead the W ay."

The 29th Infantry is the only infantry regiment in the U.S. Army that is authorized to keep its companies at full war strength. Even though the 3rd battalion is inactive, the authorized strength is 82 officers and 2083 enlisted men, al-most twice as many men as are in any other regiment.

other regiment. This is a brief history of the Twen-ty-ninth Infantry, the demonstration regiment for The Infantry School. The regiment has always had a high standing in the opinion of its command-ers — it shoots among the best — it is splendidly trained—its men are all gen-erally above the average—its athletics are prominent and in every way the are prominent and in every way the regiment stands out as a fine body of men.

POOH, POOH FOR THE SHERIFF, SAYS THE ADJUTANT IN THE THANATOPSIS CLUB'S LATEST TO JUNIOR LEAGUE

What is Desired is More Personal, Not Team Competition, According to Afternoons' Renewed Challenge

League contest so far has been carried on with nimble typewriters and in the columns of the Infantry School News. Just how it will end cannot be predicted but in the meantime here is the Thanatopsis Club's reply to the Junior League's reply:

Repeated Insult and Challenge

"Whereas The Adjutant did on Feb-ruary 16th issue to The Sheriff a chal-lenge, the said Sheriff to select one member of the Junior League and to meet The Adjutant and one member of the Thanatopsis Club in a decathlon, and

"Whereas, some two weeks later, a crude composition was received from the Sheriff which purported to be an answer to the challenge but which ac-cepted, on behalf of the Junior Lea-gue, the challenge of the Thanatopsis Club, and

"Whereas no such challenge was issued, but

"Whereas such an interpretation of plain English might be expected from such immature minds as are possessed by the Sheriff and his youngster asso-ciates in The Junior League, and,

"Whereas, this is a personal matter between The Sheriff and The Adjutant although given publicity by The Sheriff through the medium of a local publi-cation, and "Whereas The Sheriff saw fit to change certain of the suggested deca-thion events which was his right but, "Whereas the substituted events call for four-men, five-men and nine-men teams, and

"Whereas the challenge was for twomen teams, one member of such team to be The Sheriff and The Adjutant respectively, and

Nix on Horses

"Whereas most of the substituted events are dependent upon the per-formance of a noble animal, to wit, the horse, and,

"Whereas The Adjutant issued this challenge to prove his contention that the mental and physical agility and provess of the afternooners of life are superior to those of the forenooners of life and, "Whereas The Adjutant, therefore, believes that the events finally select-ed looking to the determination above outlined should be such as to be de-cided by the performance of the indi-vidual, humans only and not be dependent, in any degree, upon the per-formance of a motorboat, an automo-bile, a dog, a horse, or a wife, now "Therefore be it known by these presents that the amendments contained in the alleged answer to the chal-lenge can not be accepted by the chal-lenger as not coming within the pro-visions of the challenge, but, "Further be it known that The Adjutant is willing to have The Sheriff substitute for events objected to, any other events coming within the provisions outlined above except those in which the difference in size and weight between the Sheriff and The Adjutant. would prove an obstacle to a fair com-petition. The following additional events are suggested for substitution in, or addition to, the original ten:

Trap shooting, Endurance march, Marathon, Intelligence test,

Fencing,

Most of this Thanatopsis Club-Junior | the answer to the first; the swimming season will be well advanced), Firing the rifle, Firing the pistol, Broad jump.

Lots of Events

Lots of Events "With the above suggested additional events, there are a total of twenty events for The Sheriff to select from. Let the Sheriff know that the chal-lenger and his partner are willing un-der the provisions of the challenge, to meet him and his partner in any ten, twelve, fifteen or twenty of the events named, and "Further be it known that the Sheriff is privileged, if he desires, to select from the membership of the Junior League, different pardners for differ-ent events, provided the Adjutant is likewise privileged, and "Further be it damned well under-stood that The Adjutant considers this a personal matter between himself and the Sheriff and is willing to eliminate the Sheriff and is willing to eliminate all reference to partners, teams, etc., and is willing and anxious, yea eager, to meet him, The Sheriff, alone in all twenty of the events named except those which require a partner.

Now, therefore, pooh pooh for the Sheriff and let him try to talk or write himself out of meeting The Adjutant in this demand for satisfaction for the Ariginal insult! Hereinafter is affixed my signature and amended seal."

H. B. Lewis, Major, A. G. D., Adjutant.

The seal is not reproduced but is exactly twice as insulting as the former seal used.

LETTER FROM MAJOR HERRING

The attached letter was received from a former member of the 24th Infantry who had been requested for a photo-graph of himself for the regimental al-bum. It speaks for itself.

161 Falls St., Toccoa, Ga., Feb. 26th, 1931.

Lochlin W. Caffey, Colonel, 24th Infantry, Commanding, Fort, Benning, Ga.

Fort, Benning, Ga. My dear Colonel: I am in receipt of your considerate letter expressing a desire for a likeness of me to be placed in your album. Permit me to say that of such honor scarcely do I feel myself a worthy re-cipient. But in consideration of you and your valuable undertaking, am en-elasing one under separate cover, which closing one under separate cover, which, it is hoped, will be useful if not orna-mental. The subject hath not fame, fortune or looks ,and considers himself the least of all in your esteemed book.

On seeing that your letter was from the 24th Infantry, pleasant memories arose and I was almost overcome by emotion. It reminds me how affecting it is that we are powerless to keep our comrades together when the times comes for calling them away. That at length I bethought me to say, oh time, oh time, turn back and make me an active officer once more.

Far renowned was the 24th Infantry for its battles many and victories great, and famous was its band, having no other care than dispensing charming music to men and officers. Kindly and off do I recall the 24th Infantry enrap-tured, hailed with hilarious joy to meet Pool, Swimming (if the answer to this re-peated challenge is deferred as long as At one time are officers seen active,

MUTTERINGS OF MULLIGAN LAFAYETTE MULLIGAN DISCUSSES STREAMERS

From time immemorial, it has been the custom to adorn the military pro-fession with badges, ribbons and gad-gets calculated to increase its prestige. Gold leaf and gold braid have been ap-plied in profusion. Shoulder knots fouragerres, chevrons, and medals have been distributed in abundance. When comdistributed in abundance. When com-pared with the breast of medals worn by some hardened veterans, Joseph's coat becomes a conservatively drab garment.

Competition threatens. Every bus driver, cop and ticket puncher now girds his frame with a Sam Browne belt. Hotel doormen glitter with the ornliancy of a Brigadier of Marines and the corps of ushers of a motion picture palace of the first water resembles a group of Navy files dressed for mess. Clad in the sombre OD habiliments inflicted upon us, how can we compete? Obviously, we can't.

In one respect at least, we can achieve distinction and that is in the decoration of colors and guidons. Here we have already made a beginning and opened up a held of unlimited possibilities for glorification and adornment.

Since the obvious intent is to decorate those few ungarnished appurtenances of the service, let us enter into the spirit of the thing whole-heartedly. Why not or the thing whole-heartenty. Why hot get a maximum of results in a minimum of time Let each guidon be decorated with a streamer for each man in the organization. When a man falls from grace, withdraw one streamer and have a weekly ceremony of the Counting of the Streamers. An additional streamer could be awarded for the best performance of that ceremony. If properly approached, the WCTU might be induced to donate a suitable streamer (black, for example) or a miniature camel to be attached to the guidon of the most arid unit. The Anti-Cigarette League could advance their cause by giving a streamer for the elimination of the smoke nuisance. Perhaps the Anti-Race Suicide Society give one to signalize outstanding fecundity. In such a case, a white streamer would denote the arrival of a blond, a black one, a brunette; and the glory of a Titian-haired arrival proclaimed by a a rutan-naired arrival proclaimed by a crimson ribbon. Some slight confusion might arise should the Hospital claim partial credit upon such occasions but, since decoration is the intent, compro-mise and give them one, too.

If these suggestions seem a bit ex-treme at first, there is historical prece-dent for all of them. In the days of the greater glory of Rome, its legions carried standards which displayed the SEOR of world lenow to all who have SPQR so well known to all who have been afflicted with Latin. We might We might substitute appropriate letters to denote the occasion for which the award is given. For example—the winning unit for Paint and Polish Week would cus-play the device PAPW and Be Kind to Animals Week would be signified by BKTAW. Mystifying to the uninitiated at first but readily understood by those so signally honored. It is all very simple. Very. The unit having the best kitchen might attach a dishrag to its guidon, for the best polished unit, suspend a can of polish; organization nav-ing the best groomed mule, display a mule's tail on the pike—here allowance should be made for the possibility of ribald comment.

As previously stated, the possibilities are unlimited, but space prohibits elabo-ration. If we decide to go in for this, however, why not achieve the ultimate at one full swoop and issue all organizations a May Pole? De gustibus non est disputandum.

Biggest Turkey Shot Sgt. St. Clair Gets It A Speed Record Also

Chapter V.

During the past hunting season the News staff has had an opportunity to do everything in connection with turkeys, except eat one. Anyway, here's the latest—Master Sergeant St. Clair claims the record for the largest turkey of the season—and for having obtained it in the shortest time, despite Captain Gee's claim for the world's championship. On the afternoon of February 27th, at 1:00 p. m., he left the Post Exchange to go turkey hunting; at 1:30 p. m. he was back at the Post Exchange with a gobbler that tipped the scales at twentytwo pounds.

The Sergeant was going hunting out near Pugh Lake. When yet a mile from his destination he saw a big turkey run across the road ahead of the car. He stopped the machine and followed the turkey into a ravine a couple of hundred yards away. As the Sergeant entered the thick underbrush the big bird took wing about thirty yards dis-tant. A snap -shot thirty the thick undergrowth brought down Mr. Turkey. Brother nimrods pronounced the turin Weight" Never shall it be said that the all too unworthy conductor of this column ever failed to render unto Cæsar that which is Cæsar's — or to render unto the Greencords, their full allotment of praise. The occasion for this peroration being the discovery in that organization excellent of a hitherto unsung hero — excellent material for publicity — one Sergeant John Yurick.

The story runs thus (I quote one of his closest friends): It would seem that some months past the Hon. Sergeant, realizing that while yet comparatively youthful, middle age was approaching apace along with contemporaneous evils such as high blood pressure and an ex-cessively generous waist line, his oppor-tunity for romance was also fading-love, to date, had passed him by. It was perhaps this latter realization that led him to dally with one of those intrigung him to dally with one of those intriguing little papers issued by a matrimonial agency. Being a person of decision, he acted with promptitude, with the result that some three weeks past our Sergeant had paid this seven-fifty and was in the midst of a red-hot romance, with wed-ding bells in the offing. So far, everything was excellent, and due arrange-ments were made for the arrival of the, then, fiancee-one Miss White, by name. The scheduled day of arrival our Ser-geant, with his hat in one hand, his nerve in the other and his heart in his throat, met her at the train. And—he our companions, we are only young once met her, but-we'll spare you the har-rowing details. Sufficient it is to say that our John, as he returned all alone from the station, was overheard muttering in anguished accents, "What's in_a_name?" Exit romance.

In The Spring a Young Man's Fancy

The writer, who of a necessity spends nost of his time around the office dodging all the labor possible, has to report that Spring is upon us. The signs are unmistakable, as they are exhibited by divers and sundry members of the staff. Of course, a certain portion fell victims to the affliction aforetime and are, therefore, immune for the time being, but the temporarily unattached are be-ing attacked, almost without exception. The more prominent symptoms manifest themselves by a hitherto unprecedented interest in sartorial adornment, coupled with a peculiar interest in hair cuts, shoeshines and like matters. An Another important and unmistakable sign is the almost feverish interest in each ring of the office telephone-on occas ion no less than four members have been known to start a stampede over a single ring, generally resulting in considerable confusion and the elicitation of the in-formation that the operator called the

Dear Eddie:

My, my, such news as I have got. Yous'l never believe it when I tell youse. I almost hate to tell you. It is the same old story of a good man gone wrong, only this story is so much worse because I thought that he, above all men, was strong enough to resist, and clever enough to escape.

Ah, me, ah, me soon there will be only 17 bachelor Captains left in the Marine corps. The best and the finest has at last been conquered. The queer part about it is that the victim seems to be supremely happy. Neither dreadful forebodings from your truly, nor the gloomy picture painted by Comrade Pickhardt, could dull in the least the happy smile which the dazed hero wore. Up the aisle he swept while the class chanted the wedding march. Replying gracefully with a few well chosen words and a very red face to the insistent cries of "Speech, speech," he sat down, but alas, his mind was in such a turmoil that he forgot to get the reports from his squad leaders.

You know, Eddie, all these Marines are fine guys. Take B. Bell for example. You remember how good they were. Well, he stopped, and because I realized that the first addition to the family kinda upset the normal course of events, did not bether him But when I I did not bother him. But when I thought a reasonable time had elapsed, I asked him for another picture, he promised that he would give me one. That went on week after week, for sev-eral months. Finally I bought a pen and some India ink and said, "Now looka here, Bell, I want a funny pic-ture. "O. K," says he. Yeah, these Mar-ines are great guys. I got no picture, and Bell spilled all my India ink all over a swell pair of breeches.

Loss of Breeches Speaking of breeches, Dick Chase is in the market for a new pair. Whereupon we break forth with: A DITCH IN TIME

Or, Saving Nine Stitches Oh a bold, gay blade was Dick So a hunting he would go. O'er field, or ridge or crick With a stop now and then for a blow

Over a hill swept the hunt, And down to the valley below To jump the ditch was no stunt Then on with a loud Heigh Ho!

Like a gay cavalier of old, Up thundered Dick to the ditch. Up, up, goes our hero so bold, Pray, pray for the tailor's stitch.

On, on, like the wind, the steed Gallops with gait carefree. Alas, alas, pray heed Like a plum Dick hangs from a tree.

By the slack of his breeches he swung Poised for a moment on high. Twas thus that our hero hung

Till the cloth gave way with a sigh.

Not a Murad in sight to save him, And the breakfast still to come. What a pity the light is not dim. Oh, show me the way to go "hum."

L'Envoi

When embarrassed by disaster, Without unseemly haste Your coat from off your shoulders You can fasten 'round your waist.

Well, Eddie, the great B-Food vs. Walsh feud is still going strong. Ever since Eddie ruined B-Food's best hat (Gee was it not great to see the Profesproper uniform. But they can't fool the boy with the smile. Not much. Eddie just relieved Cpl. Quinn of his hat and die and his little pal were sounding off about one of our most popular instruc-tors. Up walks Capt. Collins and takes post in rear of Marron. After a particularly vitrolic outburst Eddie pipes up, "Better be careful what you say to a man to his face." Slightly purple B-Food turns around. Eddie disappears. The Professor stutteringly tries to explain to Capt. Collins that he was not talking about him at all. I just want to assure the Capt. that he really was

It's a Handy Tree We are still having work with the 37-mm. It may be the accurate gun that Capt. Crim says that it is, but many members of the class experienced great difficulty when we had our test in ac-tual firing. I can know of no worse sensation than I experienced when my first round fell so far beyond the target, and behind a hill that the smoke did not appear for what seemed to me to be one hour. Jack Horner however to be one hour. Jack Horner however is a faster thinker than I; I took mine with my Adam's apple running up and down my throat. Jack, on the other hand, turned to the judge, "I forgot to say ONE ROUND, so that does not count." The class has certainly turned out some neat target designation. If some one should report at night

If some one should go out at night and chop down the big bushy tree on Hook Range, there would never be an-other shot fired. When that tree can't other shot fired. When that tree can't be used the general formula for desig-nation runs, "To your front, line of trees, biggest tree." It sure takes plenty of imagination to figure it all out. The best order issued to date must be an un-known (to me) soldier. Reed Graves now speaking. ' "Te your iront, big bushy tree, at a closer range, bullrushes. Voice from rear, "And at a much closer range, MOSES." We had one session out on the parade ground. The closer range, MOSES." We had one session out on the parade ground. The class started in at 1:30 p. m. in the vicinity of Malone Pond; by three-thirty, the guns were almost to the squad-room and not a dapalation patch laft. room, and not a dandelion patch left, room, and not a dandelion patch left, that had not been up rooted and thrown at someone. I hope that the N. G. class across the way from us did not get a false impression of the serious attitude with which this class attacks all its urableme problems.

Well, Eddie ,they tell me that some congressman has been reading these ar-ticles and that it will be necessary to suspend publication of the paper, so this may be the last letter that I will write you. Don't let them fool you; this is a great school. You'll never know how much you know or how much there is to unlearn and re-learn, until you come here to school. And you will never know. just how smart you really are till you see your pet ideas come back with "U's" stamped on them.

Y'rs tr'ly, BONAPART HENNESY, 3d. P. S. I have to laugh every time I think of how Capt. Brooks was telling P. S. about how he had seen too many officers miss too many boats, and suddenly find themselves married.

THE BRIEF CASE

By CAPT. WAINE ARCHER

A composite class estimate, based up- culiar thrill of Charlie Steel, who openon honest confession, averted glances, hasty folding of returned papers, sickly grins, and other similar symptoms, is that fifty-nine of our immortal eighty-six members have crossed the academic Rubicon and collected at least one "U."

x x x And how narrowly some of the rest have escaped! Take Norris, for instance, for so long our star pupil. Stivers' cut-ting comment, along with a presumably reluctant "Satisfactory," on the famous piecenieal attack decision was: "You have arrived at a correct decision through an entirely unwarranted and incorrect assumption." The main thing, of course, is that he did arrive.

 $\mathbf{x} \times \mathbf{x}$ Then, there was one solution that we saw of the defensive terrain exercise on Frey Ridge. We incline to the belief that the only reason they didn't use the "Unsatisfactory" stamp on that was be-cause, when Gilchrist finished putting his comments on it, there wasn't room left for those two extra letters.

X X X And, lastly, delving back into some-what ancient history, there was George Daughtry's solution of the machine gun defense out near Harmony Church. George couldn't figure where certain spots on the ground belonged on the map, so he stuck his guns in more or less at random—so he says. "If I had put them, on the map, where I intended to put them on the ground," he confessed, "it would have been just too bad." So he got a satisfactory, by mistake. x x x x x xAfter thinking it all over, we believe that it would be in the interest of economy if they would change the system here. The faculty might issue us the solutions and let us comment on them. On second thought, we don't believe any economy would be effected, for we have economy would be effected, for we have yet to see a student's solution of any-thing as severely man-handled as the faculty's solution of—well, anything! We would like to give the names of the twenty-seven virgins ("Oh! Is that what they call them?" queries Adrian Brian; "then I hate to think what I am!") and record their individual down-falls as they come—but some of the boys falls as they come—but some of the boys might be sensitive, even about that. We might mention, however, the pe-

ed one of his papers to see a big ed one of his papers to see a big "U" shining up. Looking it over more care-fully he found the notation "An Ex-cellent solution." In trying to recon-cile these two, he found that the "U" was given as a result of a clerical error. He is keeping the paper, however, as evidence of the only excellent U that has ever been put out at this school, or, as far as is known, at any other. as far as is known, at any other. ххх

X X X We got two stories this week about Backman, which don't quite tally. One of them was to the effect that, using his road roller on the little one-inch map, he figured the motor transport prob-lem's sixty miles to be sixteen and solv-ed the problem accordingly. The other was that, thoroughly imbued with sup-ply principles and what-not, he issued six cooked lunches to the troops which were moving. were moving.

x x xWe were introduced to an entirely new form of entertainment last week in the shape of Captain Gee's acrobatic motor. We still don't know very much about it, except that it's a darb as a trapeze artist. The feature of his sec-ond day's act last Monday, aside from ond day's act last Monday, asde Hom a few simple chemical formulas and laws of physics with which, of course, we were all familiar, was his dubbing Ma-jor Kraft as "Major Graft"—one of the few points of the performance which no member of the class overlooked.

X X X All of Victor McLaglen' propaganda has been rendered null and void in this section of the world, for, on Monday, Bill Marshall of the Marines addressed the Fort Benning Woman's Club and told them all about our gentle, sea-going brothers. Well, maybe not quite all.

X X X Another incautious instructor called on Corporal Hagan last week. It was only for a little simple plan of a patrol leader, and the instructor probably felt that the answer couldn't be stretched out for very long. But he didn't know Hagan. His answer included everything but a harrier, line and the disposition Hagan. His answer included everything but a barrier line and the disposition of stragglers, and would probably be running yet if the noon whistle hadn't blown. We think he is wasting his tal-ents anywhere but in the Fourth Section Section.

The recent announcement of Miss Mabel Billingslea's engagement, The recent announcement of Miss Mabel Billingslea's engagement, following close upon that of Miss Daisy Reed, is a definite boost for the Dramatic Club. Of course, it may be only a coincidence but the Fort Benning debutantes all say that there must be something in it. We refer, of course, to the fact that both of these charming young ladies have ap-peared in local productions as leading lady with Paul Peabody. It is all the same whether I kiss them or strangle them. As you know, there is nothing more attractive than a woman who has lived and, in our little sheltered community, an appearance on the stage with me is, I suppose, practically equivalent to a real fling on the broader stage of life."

Indeed, it is rumored that the Jacksons would have moved also had there been any quarters available on the day following the battle. Colonel Marshall's reaction in the event of a resumption of hostilities will be of interest. Comrade St. John is of the opinion that an effective chemical warfare demonstration right under the Colonel's nose, as it were, would result in more time being allotted to his specialty.

Flaming Youth American youth is generally cred-ited with being pretty speedy these days, but from tales that occasionally come to our discreet ears, we are convinced that some of the boys are convinced that some of the boys are just as slow as we were in the pre-jazz age. With the average male movie fan, Fifi D'Orsay's scantily clothed fig-ure generally so rivets the attention that her other less obvious attrac-tions may be overlooked. The zeal-ous specialist, however, cannot be distracted by any mere display of the human form divine. We cite the following as evidence: Lieutenants Grier, Gabriel, and Straub were leaving the Main Thea-tre after seeing "Those Three French Girls."

Connoisseur Grier who, it will be Connoisseur Grier who, it will be remembered, was a star in the local production of Broadway last year, was commenting upon the charms of the shapely Fifi. "Right you are," echoed Straub, "I never saw a more perfect set of molars in my life." For those who do not know, Lieu-tenant Straub is the new dentist.

The Infantry School Hunt By M. F. H.

With the intermittent rains Friday and Saturday, the prospects for a drag hunt Sunday morning looked rather poor, but early Sunday morning old Sol came out to greet the field of seventy riders.

The field was a little slow in showing up for doughnuts and coffee, but when the time to mount up arrived a good field was ready to go.

Hunt Staff in Atlanta Upon the invitation of the Atlanta Horseshow Association, Major Peabody, Major Roger Williams, Capt. Wood, Mrs. Knight and Sgt. Tweed left the post Friday with six couples of hounds to hold a drag hunt Saturday for the Atlanta and Ft. McPherson riders.

In a slow rain the field met at 2:00. . m. on the beautiful estate of Mr. p. m. on the beautiful estate of the bad Walter T. Candler. In spite of the bad weather a field of sixty or seventy riders turned out. When the field reached the last check it appeared that they had engaged in a free-for-all mud battle. However, everybody was happy and declared the hunt a great success.

Back to Benning Promptly at 8:00 a. m., the Infantry School Hunt mounted up and moved out the First Division Road towards BM 26. Lt. Moon and Mrs. Hoge, with the hounds, Majors Arnold and Taylor with the first echelon, and Col. Hayes with the second echelon.

The field was led to the crest of Riley From this elevated position the hounds were in full run until they crossed Sing-leton Ridge; the field following the hounds within hearing distance were able to enjoy another good view of the hounds as they ran from Singleton Ridge to the west edge of Davis Hill where the first short check was called.

The first check was held for only about five minutes when the hounds were again cast for a short run to a point just north of the Trench Area. The field was then led across the railroad to

The third cast was made from the knoll just south of Reynolds Hill. Both echelons of the field had full view of the pack as it ran for the most part of this entire run. The third check was called shortly after crossing the Ohio Road and the field led to the south slope of Bouton Hill.

Capt. Betts Breaks Collar Bone During the third run Capt. Betts' horse slipped into a hole and fell. Upon examination by Col. Stayer it was found that Captain Betts had suffered a broken collar bone. He was taken to the post hospital.

The runs down thru the steep ravines proved a little too much for some of the younger contingent. The ponies just seemed to "oozé" out from under them, leaving them to drift lightly to the "lap of nature."

The fourth run was made from Bouton Hill to the Lumpkin Road from where the field was led north to the west slope of f Maxey Ridge. The final run was made up over Maxey Ridge and ended at the Range house. The hounds were tired and had to take a breathing spell before they entered into the spirit of the kill with the usual enthusiasm.

Forty-six riders were signed up for breakfast at the Polo-Hunt Club. The sausage, grits, scrambled eggs and coffee were sandwiched in with a number of hunting songs, were thoroughly en-joyed by the riders whose appetites had been whetted by a two hours ride in the great open spaces.

The excellent cuisine of the Officers'

And then as a re-sult of a resolution of the Board of Governors thanking her, it came out that Mrs. Brine was responsible. That one was the Brine cook. Recently she declared herself. "There is too much work around However the Blunderbuss is confi-dent that Capt. and Mrs. Brine will solve the situation to the taste of all concerned.

FORT BENNING CHILDREN'S SCHOOL

By Jane Kraft

First Grade We had a wonderful treat last Friday We marched over to see that new school of ours. We think it is beautiful and hope it will not be long before we can move in. Wont we be happy and we think it is time to move because one day last week Jake Moon, Jr. drove up to our school with his mother and guess what he said? "Is this the stables? Think of that! However, we will admit that we have many thoroughbreds.

Second Grade The Second A has had a perfect health score for three mornings of this week. Martha Jane Rooks has made "excellent" on her writing for the entire week.

The following people have made a star on spelling for the week. Jack Murphy, John Crandall, Billy Austell, Molly Negrotto, Fritz Sewaney, Walter Kent and Jean Lange.

We have learned the poem "The Duel" this week. Ann Sweet wore a Dutch costume to school and reminded us of "The Little Dutch Tulip Girl" a book ve have just read.

Third Grade Those people making the spelling honor roll this week were: Marie Cody, spelling Charles Maddox, Mary Rose; Albert Tucker, Peggy Dean, Rosa Rutchkoff, Eugene Wiggins, Jane Cleveland, Lydia Killpack, Richard Joiner, Robert Cannon and Billy Benly. We are proud of Lydia Pillpack who still holds the honor of being the only one in our room to be on both spelling and arithmetic honor roll every week.

Fourth Grade

This has been a very busy week, for we have had tests to stand and we also had to make up the time we lost Monday. We have been divided into Reds and Blues and are going to work to see who will get the highest score at the end of the week.

week on account of sickness. We hope they will soon be able to return. Fifth Grade

For the past few weeks the A section of the fifth grade has been studying Europe.

It has been interesting to compare Europe with our country as its size, cli-mate, and products. Betty Negrotto, Mate, and products. Betty Negrotto, Natasha Carney, Harry Reeder and Harry Killpack made maps of Europe and the British Isles. Betty's was color-ed beautifully with water colors. The others were made of flour and salt. This week ends another month. We all feel we have made some progress and resolve to do better next month.

Sixth and Seventh Grades

We all breathe a sigh of relief, our monthly tests for February are over but the sigh may change on Monday and when we receive our report cards.

The sixth grade are working hard on heir play "The Stolen Prince" which their play "The Stolen Prince" which they expect to produce soon. Bill Starnes and Alex Falligant, both BILLINGSLEA-BROOKS Col. and Mrs. Clarence J. Manly have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mabel Billingslea, to Capt. Charles Thomas Brooks, U. S. M. C., the wedding to take place in June. Miss Billingslea was hostess at a luncheon Tuesday at which time she told of her engagement. At each place were miniature corsages of sweet peas and freesias on which was a card bearing the names of Miss Billingslea and Capt. Brooks. The invitation list included a group of intimate friends of the bride-elect who were Mrs. Beyard Bell, Mrs. Eugene Vernon, the Misses: Barbara King, Daisy Reed, Landon Reed, Bess Berry, Mollie Brown, Celeste Broach, Harriotte Atkins, Nancy Ross, ~orothy Ross and Lola O'Connell.

Miss Billingslea is a graduate of the University of Chicago and is a girl of charm and accomplishment. She has been a popular member of the young set at Benning during the time she has been here.

Capt. Brooks is the son of Mrs. K. B. Frasser, of California and is a graduate of the University of California. He has made many friends here during his station at Benning as a student at the Infantry School.

The Scout Organizations of Fort Denning wish to express their thanks to the members of the organizations who at-tended the Scout Benefit performance of "Is Zat So" and to the officers of those organizations who handled the funds.

To the members of the cast who so generously gave their time for the extra performance are renewed thanks and also to the Infantry School News for canceling the bill covering the ad for the benefit performance. Total receipts to date from the Dra-matic Club play for Scout Benefit is $283.40 From that was subtracted $38.90, for the expenses incurred by the Dramatic Club for the extra performance, leaving a balance of $144.50, which will be used to further scout work of the post. There was a meeting of the Girl Scout Committee Tuesday at Mrs. Matchett's quarters. During the meeting scout work was discussed and then Mrs. Matchett announced that Miss Catherine rarks, a regional director, of Atlanta, would be in Columbus from March 30th to April 3rd and would give a course in training for those who would care to learn scout leadership. the fastest welterweights in this section of the country and that will also show several new faces will be presented fight fans at the Fort Benning arena next Tuesday night.

Jimmie Neal, former 10th Infantry-man, will meet Rufus Miles of Charles-ton, S. C., in the main bout of ten rounds. Both of these fighters have fine records and they are also coming young-sters instead of going veterans.

Jimmie Neal has shown here on two former occasions and each time the fight former occasions and each time the light fans were highly pleased with the ex-hibition given by the Cincinnati fighter. In his first appearance he took a de-cision over Joe "Kid" Peck in a whirl-wind affair. In his next appearance here Jimmie punched Boots Antley in a free slugging affair that had the fans on their feet throughout the mill. Fans are pleased over the opportunity of seeare pleased over the opportunity of see-ing Neal in action here again.

Rufus Miles is no stranger to the fight fans here. He is a fast, stylish fighter who has been leaving a trail of kayoed mit artists behind him for the past two years. He is an even match for Neal in any stage of the game and it should be one of the best fights of the year.

In the semi-final of eight rounds our newest ring sensation, "Rip" Tetherton, will get his first actual baptism of fire. Rip will swap punches with Ginger Jernigan, the "Leather Man." Besides being a bard puncher Jernigan is as newest ring sensation, "hip rediction, will be ther first showing at Fort will get his first actual baptism of fire. Benning. Jernigan, the "Leather Man." Judge: "What is the charge, officer?"

29th Coat of Arms

By a Twenty-ninth Infantryman The Coat of Arms is to the regiment, what the flag is to the nation. It is an honored privilege to wear the Coat of Arms of the 29th Infantry, a privilege that is accorded only to a 29th Infantryman.

The wearer is a marked man, because of the fame attained by "The Demon-stration Regiment of the Infantry School." This fame has been spread the length and breadth of the Army by the students from the Regular Army, Re-serve Corps and the National Guard. Also by distinguished officers and civil-ians who have witnessed the demonstrations.

Every member of the regiment should strive by his actions and deeds to add to the glory of our Coat of Arms and should ever be on the alert to guard against any act which if committed by himself or others, might tend to reflect discredit on the regiment and lessen the rignity and prestige of its coat of arms. Detailed Description — The coat of arms is composed of three principal parts, viz: (a) the crest, (b) the shield and (c) the motto. Each symbol and color alludes to some historical event in color alludes to some historical event in the life of the regiment as will be seen in the following detailed description: Crest: Lamp—The lamp represents the "Lamp of Knowledge,"—a symbol that is universally used to denote education or teaching. It is thus explained,—as light dispels darkness, so does education dispel ignorance. We have adopted the Lamp of Knowledge as part of our coat of arms because as the Demonstration Regiment of The Infantry School we Regiment of The Infantry School we materially assist in imparting to the In-fantry of the Regular Army, National Guard and Reserve Corps the approved Infantry doctrine, methods and standards.

Wreath-The twisted wreath bears the colors of the Twenty-ninth Infantry. Shield: Tree—The tree represents the Mango tree which is common to the Fhilippine Islands. It signifies the regi-ment's service in the Philippine Islands. Crossed Bayonet and Bolo-The bolo is a weapon used by the Philippine Insurrectos. Bayonet and bolo crossed indicates combat. The weapon on the right is the victorious weapon. Thus, the crossed bayonet and bolo signifies the regiment's victorious engagements with regiment's victorious and the Insurrectos. White Background—The white back-ground is distinctive of our spotless his-tory and signifies that the regiment stands ready to win future glory. Blue Background—Blue is the color of "The Infantry," — The queen of Battles.

Motto—The motto of the regiment is, "WE LEAD THE WAY." This was adopted because we as The Demonstra-tion Regiment of The Infontry School lead the way for all the other Infastry of the United States Army.

VITA AMERICANA

By Irene di Robilant The sneers that are commonly directed at books on the United States written by visiting foreigners are certainly not deserved by this one. It is an extremely deserved by this one. It is an extending intelligent and well-informed study of American life. Dr. di Robilant came here with open eyes, and she remained long enough to see a lot. Nor was she content with the superficial aspect of things; she also gave her attention to American hittory and put in a great things; she also gave her attention to American history, and put in a great deal of time reading American books, new and old. Her book is comprehen-sive in scope, and marked by extraor-dinary good sense. Beginning with an account of the first settlers, she pro-ceeds to brief but excellent summaries of the bittories of the different national of the histories of the different national religions. Then she presents chapters on the American attitude toward religion, on the dominant American philoso-phies and political doctrines, on education both public and private, on such agencies of illumination as the newspapers and magazines, on American music, painting, sculpture, drama and litera-ture, on the movies, on the situation of the American Jews and Negroes, on the the American Jews and Negroes, on the part that Italian immigrants play in American life, and on the American family. Though the sweep of her inves-tigation is very wide, there is still room for odd and amusing detail. In every way her book deserves high praise.

Company "E" Company E has fired the first Na tional Rifle Association match, small bore, last week. The five highest on the company team were 1st Sgt. E. C. Davis, first; Cpl. Clyde Johnson, second; Cpl. Clements, third; Sgt. Arevalo, fourth and Sgt. Dalby, fifth. We hope that we can win some prizes as the average score for the first five men was 663 out of 700.

First Sergeant E. C. Davis is leading the way in everything these days even in the art of hunting wild turkeys. Cook Shackelford ran the bayonet course in 38 seconds and missed all the spotters and later redeemed himself by making expert last week.

making expert last week. Corp. Henry T. Gurley, the well-built infantry soldier of Co. E ran the bay-onet course in 46 seconds, but John Chanka beat him, making the course in 45 seconds. It is regretted that Corp. Steinwinder and Corp. Gurley did not enter the five-mile race last week held here in the post.

Co. E is glad that their flu epidemic is over, the men are coming back from the hospital. We had 31 men with the flu last week. Most all of the men were from the first platoon. The charge of quarters was the busiest man in the of quarters was the busiest man in the company, turning in the men's property before going to the hospital. All the Co. E world war veterans are figuring on getting their certificates cashed at once or as soon as possible in order that they can get their 50 percent of their certificates. Some would take any amount that they could get on it. Two more men have been assigned to Co. E from Panama. They are William E. Comer and Albin P. Howell. Glad to have you in the Co. boys. Private Jazz Culpepper has reenlisted in Co. E after staying out two or three days. He says he is glad to get back.

Company "F"

Another month gone, and memories of honors received by this organization during its twenty-eight days. Let's look through the pages of February and see what this company has done.

Ah, the first thing we come to is the company's record on night maneuvers. The company officers and men did themselves proud during the problems and were complimented by the Battalion (Continued on page 15.)

24th Infantry Concert The 7th Annual Concert will be given by the 24th Infantry in the near future, at the Main Theatre. The concert will consist of selections by the regimental orchestra, songs by the quartette and glee club, and mass singing of the negro spirituals.

Small Bore Matches During the past week, the 24th Infan-try fired small bore matches with the 9th Infantry, 18th Infantry and 34th Infantry. It defeated the 9th Infantry, 3726 to 3707. The 24th was defeated, however, by the 18th Infantry, 4016 to 2955 A score of 2064 was recorded 3955. A score of 2964 was recorded against the 34th Infantry, but the latter's score has not yet been received. In the 9th Infantry match Sergeant Bradford made 387 out of 400, shooting as follows: 99 prone, 98 sitting, 96 kneel-ing, and 94 standing. Private Oliver was second with a score of 379.

The 24th fires against the 7th Infantry this week. All regiments of the army are eligible to fire in the 7th Infantry Match, and most of them will probably participate. The 15 inch bull's eye tarparticipate. The .15 inch get is used in this match.

Road Race The 24th Infantry made a good show-ing last Sunday in the annual race. The 24th Infantry had nineteen entries to start. First place for the Happy Heart runners was won by W. C. Jenkins, Ser-vice Company. Second place was won by W. Johnson, Company A. Third place was won by E. Rogers, Co. A. The place was won by E. Rogers, Co. A. The time made by first place was 38 min-utes, 22 2-5 seconds. The best time made by other organizations was 34 min-utes, 11 3-5 seconds, made by Maitland, of 29th Infantry. Col. Stillwell ran the course and fin-ished in gread there for the bart ished in good shape. Capt. Barrett ran the course later in the day, finishing in 41 minutes, 29 1-5 seconds.

Volleyball The 24th Infantry Volleyball team, as-sembled from the best players of the inter-company league, will go to Atlanta tomorrow. There, a game will be played against the Atlanta High School. Other games with outside teams will be played games with outside teams will be played early in April when the Southeastern Volleyball Tournament gets under way. (Continued from page 14.) Commander in person. And here is something else, at the Battalion Track and Field Meet the company ran away with first honors. That's something: Look at this page, bayonet work. Com-pany qualified 87.06 percent and we are mighty proud. At the inspection by the Company Officers' Class the company stood out as the one among many, for the month of February. And in the Post Road Race, this organization had one man entered, but that one was as good as ten, no one else but our little eld Iron Man, Jim Maitland. At the finish of the five-mile marathon, Pfc. Maitland was at least five hundred yards ahead of his nearest competitor. This makes the third consecutive year that Pfc. Maitland has won this race.

After watching some of the boys coming in with those large boxes from Sears and Roebuck, we should think that corp and theorem would open a branch office here in the Post. Such going on in that Head-quarters squad room, tooting and strumming and what not. Now that Pfc. Hanson and Stolier have received their ukes there will be no rest for the weary. Sh. we think that Pfc. Steele is going to join the Boy Scouts, for he has just bought a pathfinder knifie for Boy Scouts only

DON'T BELIEVE IT

After consulting all men in the company we have come to a conclusion that they do not want any more furloughs. On the tenth of last month when word was passed out that canteen checks would be issued within ten minutes, not a soul came down to draw them.

A canvass of this company has brought out just how the men in this company feel about the Bonus Bill being passed. They do not want to draw any money on their Certificates. (No, not much).

NOW IT'S CORPORAL PEARCE

Stripes (Vertical)

Virtue may be its own reward, but if you're short on virtue it's tremen-dously comforting to receive something more substantial in the way of recompense. Wherefore, our own Advertising Manager deluxe, late Private Pearce, is, receiving the plaudits of the multitude and the congratulations of his creditors on his recent promotion to the exalted grade of Corporal. Coming in the course of a long and astinguished career, the promotion is particularly opportune and fitting. Cor-poral Pearce first squawked on July 14, poral Pearce first squawked on July 14, 1909, in the flourishing hamlet of Bel-cher, Louisiana. To silence the squawk they handed him a bottle, thereby start-ing something that isn't finished yet. Fifteen minutes after he was busily gurgling to the tune of the "Marseil-laise," thus denoting an early knowledge of world polities. of world politics.

At the age of ten, he was busily earn-ing his own living, three years of this operation resulting in such a tremendous loss of weight that he was unable to enter the Army until August 10, 1928, at New Orleans. And now look at him—not totally erroneous is the boast of the recruiting posters that the Army builds men! And he's a Corporal.

Jokes

Lt. Lynch (an official of the road race, watching the runners go past his station): "Say! What company is that sergeant in? He looks familiar." Capt. Miller: "That's Colonel Stil-well. Don't you know him?"

Tankers Slowly Going Horsey

As if the acquisition of two mules was not sufficient evidence that we are in the Battalion had to be further im-pressed of the usefulness of horses by mounting our battalion commander, Major Allen F. Kingman, on a 'orse and thereby tearing him away from his easy riding, soft-cushioned Dodge automobile.

There he sat as the whole command passed by in review wondering perhaps, where he could stable enough horses in the Tank Park for his staff, which, certainly, ought to be close at hand. Needless to say this calls for a decision from the Comptroller General as to who and how much clothing allowance should be allowed for the "Terrible Tankers." No No desertions have been reported during the past week, but several new pairs of boots have been seen around the Battalion. It may be that "When in Rome do as Romans do" holds for Fort Benning. The first of the month called for The first of the month called for quite a change in the Tanker's line-up for the coming month. Our S-4, Cap-tain Chester, is to spend a month at Captain O'Connell's school for Better Chow, and Lieut. "Bill" Smith is bat-ting in his stead. Lieut. Cobb still pe-wase the bisher wash of watering and ruses the higher realm of proteins and calories and reports a normal gain of weight.

Pardi, of Headquarters Company, dis-tinguished himself last Saturday night at the Tank Officers' Dance by serving spaghetti a la Neapolitan that would make a native Italian burst himself with the Artillery, Lieut. Herschel Baker, turned native for five dishes worth, but the spaghetti ran out. Captain Richard Johnson, authority on polecats, reports the presence of an-other skunk close to his garage. Just what action that will call for or what part the military police will probably be required to take will be received in further communications between the two parties. MAYBE. We claim a long distance record for famed Louie Joris. During last Monday night's football dinner, he was not heard night's rootoan dinner, he was not heard from for fifteen minutes. It sure was good chicken, wasn't it, Louie? Or is it the sadness from having to leave Eu-faula after a short three day pass? If anyone wants to win any argument

If anyone wants to win any argument with our famed Sergeant Major, now is the time to try it. With all teeth out he cannot say three audible words a minute, and by fast, loud talking you can beat him down in no time. This offer only holds good for about two more weeks. It will take at least that to get a new set. Old "TOP" is doing more reading at present. more reading at present. Here is one for the Sez You Column.

It does not necessarily prove because one is a "terrible" "die-hard" Tanker that one should look the part, so the leaser of the famed football team, Staff leader of the famed football team, Staff Sergeant Vallery, intends to show us the way. Of prime importance is one's fin-gernails. Even if "Andy" did get into a heap of trouble by letting Madame Queen" give him a "mananicure," that is no reason why he should. So if we are going to play "Follow the leader" we had better get the polishing instrument out.

The Battalion track meet will be definitely held Friday and Saturday after-noons at the Stadium. All four com-panies feel confident of a victory, and we predict the closest meet ever.
